Pro-Choice Units Claim A Majority On Abortion

By Dinna Cassata
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Abortion rights activists lobbied on Capitol Hill today as their leaders predicted that the massive turnout for their march will leave a strong impression on the Supreme Court.

"Nobody in public office isn't affected by a huge outpouring," said Molly Yard, president of the National Organization for Women.

Hundreds of activists who took part in Sunday's march got some quick lessons in congressional lobbying and then made their way to the offices of their local representative or senator to press their case.

Wearing buttons with the words, "Be a Voice for Choice" or "Catholics for a Free Choice," activists thanked the 140 lawmakers who had signed a friend-of-the-court brief in the Missouri case now pending before the Supreme Court and urged others to support abortion-rights legislation.

"The notion is for as many people as possible to see senators or congressmen," Bill Hamilton, a Washington, D.C., lobbyist for Planned Parenthood, told activists from New York and Rhode Island.

Although the matter is up to the court, Yard defended the congressional lobbying effort, noting that members of Congress and the Bush administration speak to the nine justices on the court.

The "March for Women's Equality, Women's Lives" attracted hundreds of thousands of men and women, Democrats and Republicans, Hollywood stars and everyday people who converged on the Capitol for speeches, songs and declarations that women will never again return to the days of illegal abortions in back alleys.

While law enforcement authorities estimated the rally crowd at 300,000, Eleanor Smeal, president of the Fund for the Feminist Majority, said the turnout was more than 600,000.

Eastern Unions, Ueberroth Group Reach Agreements

By John King
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Unions at Eastern Airlines and a management group headed by former baseball commissioner Peter Ueberroth have reached tentative agreements that would remove a major obstacle to the sale of the strikebound carrier, a labor source said today.

The source, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said a formal announcement would be made later today before U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Burton Lifland in New York. Lifland must approve any sale of the airline.

Ueberroth and his group have been seeking more than $200 million in concessions from three unions and Eastern's non-contract employees, but there was no immediate word on what, if any, givebacks were contained in the tentative accords.

The source declined to discuss the agreements further.

The tentative agreement followed a weekend of secret talks in Washington between the unions and representatives of Ueberroth, who last week reached agreement to buy Eastern from Texas Air Corp. for $464 million. Ueberroth could have called off the deal if agreements were not reached with the unions by midnight Tuesday.

Ueberroth has said he will go ahead with plans to sell the lucrative Eastern Shuttle to New York developer Donald Trump for $365 million.

The unions involved are the International Association of Machinists, the Air Line Pilots Association and the Transport Workers Union.

The IAM struck Eastern on March 4 after refusing to accept more than $120 million in wage and other concessions demanded by Texas Air, Eastern's parent company. The other unions have accepted concessions in the past, but honored IAM's picket lines.

The unions brought Eastern operations to a virtual halt, and the airline filed for protection under the

Soldiers Battle Georgian Nationalists

By Ann Imse

MOSCOW — Soldiers today fired into the air to break up a rally at a university in Soviet Georgia, witnesses said, one day after a battle between troops and pro-independence protesters claimed a reported 18 lives.

A general strike shut down some stores, factories and mass transit, and residents of the southern republic donned black ribbons in a sign of mourning and protest, residents said.

Protests went on despite official calls for calm, a ban on public gatherings, the imposition of a curfew and patrols by soldiers and tanks in the Georgian capital of Tbilisi.

The ruling Politburo sent Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze, a Georgian who once was Communist Party leader in the republic, and party personnel chief Georgy P. Razumovsky to Tbilisi to oversee efforts to restore calm, Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady I. Gerasimov said.

About 1,000 people ignored the ban on public gatherings and met at Tbilisi State University at midday to "to inform each other about what was going on and decide what to do next," Zurab Zhankarashvili, a member of the Helsinki Watch group, said by telephone.

"The military stood there with their tanks and frightened the people off. They shot in the air," said

Zhankarashvili, who was at the gathering.

He said soldiers beat two university students.

Sergei Dandurov, an activist who also attended the meeting, confirmed that troops fired into the air and said the gathering lasted about 30 minutes.

On Sunday, club-swinging troops charged a crowd of about 10,000 people that jammed Lenin Square and protesters used flagpoles, stones and other objects to defend themselves, witnesses said.

Official reports said 16 were killed and more than 100 injured Sunday. Nurse Nana Byelovami of the Central Republic Hospital today reported two more deaths: A 23-year-old pregnant woman who was beaten and a 50-year-old woman who inhaled tear gas.

Gerasimov said today 16 civilians — 10 women and six men — were killed, and that all had been trampled. Tuesday was declared an official day of mourning, he said.

However, Zhankarashvili said 50 people were killed on Sunday and 560 injured. His report could not be confirmed independently.

Tension has been building in Georgia since Tuesday, when thou-

Drug Lord, Police Force Arrested In Crackdown

By Richard Herzfelder
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MEXICO CITY — The reputed mastermind of Mexico's vast drug pipeline to the United States was in custody today after a huge sweep that included the arrest of his hometown's entire police force, authorities said.

Miguel Angel Felix Gallardo, thought to head a ring that shipped up to two tons of cocaine monthly into the United States, had been sought for years but was protected by corrupt Mexican officials, according to U.S. drug agents.

Authorities believe Felix Gallardo may have been involved in the 1985 slaying of U.S. drug agent Enrique Camarena Salazar.

Felix Gallardo was arrested Saturday night in Guadalajara.

"It was clean work, without a single gunshot," said Rene Hernandez, a spokesman for the federal attorney general. He said the reputed drug lord was flown to Mexico city and was being questioned at a heavily guarded compound.

In a statement, the attorney general's office said the raid by Federal Judicial Police agents was the result of President Carlos Salinas de Gortari's vow to clean up drug dealing and corruption in Mexico.

U.S. authorities welcomed the news of Felix Gallardo's arrest. "We're delighted to hear that. This is most interesting," William Graves, a U.S. embassy spokesman, said Sunday night.

While Felix Gallardo was being seized in the western state of Jalisco, Mexican army troops were used to swoop down on his hometown of Culiacan, the capital of the northwestern state of Sinaloa, and arrested every police officer on the force.

North: Reagan Knew

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Oliver North testified at his trial today that former President Reagan and then-Attorney General Edwin Meese III concealed U.S. involvement in a possibly illegal 1985 arms shipment to Iran.

The former White House aide said that in a meeting on Nov. 12, 1986, "clearly the president ... had made a decision not to disclose" the November 1985 shipment of Hawk missiles from Israel to Iran.

At a news conference on Nov. 19 — a week after that meeting — Reagan said "there were no other shipments which the United States condoned" besides the ones in 1986.

North recalled that in a Nov. 23, 1986 meeting with Meese, he supplied details about the 1985 shipment, which was assisted by the CIA. Reagan in December 1985 signed a presidential finding approving the U.S. role after the fact. North said he told Meese that "we ought to stand up and acknowledge this" shipment.

Two days after North met with Meese, the attorney general told a nationally televised news conference that the Israelis had made the 1985 shipment without U.S. involvement.

Meese gave "a whole series of answers" that were "inconsistent with what I had told him" two days previously, said North.

Ayden firemen inspect inside of rescue truck from Duplin County that wrecked Sunday night

Ambulance Transporting Injured Man Strikes Car

AYDEN — A Greenville man — Charles A. Davis Jr., 52, of 314 Prince Road — injured in a traffic collision in Duplin County about 7 p.m. Sunday — survived his second accident of the day when the ambulance bringing him to Pitt County Memorial Hospital in Greenville collided with a car and overturned at the intersection of N.C. 11 and N.C. 102 about 11:10 p.m.

Highway Patrol Trooper Ron Mills said the collision of the rescue truck driven by John William Tyndall Jr., 20, of Warsaw and the car driven by Vernon Woodrow Warren, 70, of Ayden caused the rescue truck to overturn.

▲ Mills, who said the ambulance was headed north on N.C. 11, while the car was traveling east on N.C. 102, said Tyndall, a nurse riding in the ambulance and Davis, as well as Warren, were taken to PCMH for treatment following the mishap.

But Terry Payne, assistant fire marshal for Pitt County, said, "I don't think anybody was really injured" in the Ayden wreck. "I think they all were just shaken up" and all but Davis were released.

According to Payne, Davis suffered a broken femur, a broken pelvis and internal injuries in the Duplin County collision.

Mills, who investigated the collision at Ayden for the Highway Patrol, charged Tyndall with failing to stop for a red light.

A patrol spokesman said this morning that even though the rescue truck's red lights and siren were operating, drivers of emergency vehicles must see their way clear before running red traffic lights.

Mills set damage to the ambulance at $10,000 and estimated damage to the Warren car at $15,000.

Davis is employed as a supervisor at Fieldcrest Cannon Inc. on Staton Boulevard.

Davis was one of five Fieldcrest Cannon employees that were injured in the 7 p.m. collision on N.C. 41, 3.5 miles east of Wallace. A company spokesman said the five were returning from a golfing weekend at Myr-

Weekend Thefts

Greenville police said three thefts were reported to the department over the weekend.

Officer E.M. Haddock said an undetermined amount of cash was taken from a cash register at the Val-U-Shop at the intersection of Third Street and Memorial Drive in an incident Saturday at 7:43 p.m. The man reportedly reached across the counter and took the money from the cash register.

Haddock said a similar incident occurred at the Quality Mart, 3000 E. 10th St., in an incident about 9:27 p.m. Saturday.

Officer P.K. Burrows said a video cassette recorder and two television sets were taken from 3055 Dartmouth Drive in a break-in reported at 12:52 p.m. Sunday.

Theft Charges

Six people were arrested on theft charges by Greenville police on Sunday.

Officer W.E. Davis said five men were arrested in connection with the theft of four cases of beer from the Fresh Way Food Store on Airport Road about 1:07 a.m. on Sunday.

Officer Davis said Montel Lamont Grice, 19, of 200-B Independence Blvd., Clarence Jones Jr., 22, of 113 Woodside Drive and Hashim Rashid Davis, 16, of 105-B Phillips Circle were arrested on larceny charges, while Officer M.E. Hayes said Mitchell Demetrius Nelson, 17, of 106 Greenfield Blvd. and Michael Anthony Hollis, 17, of 115A Phillips Circle were also arrested on larceny charges in connection with the incident.

Officer K.C. Hadnott said a juvenile was arrested about 3:44 p.m. in connection with the theft of a pair of sunglasses from Southern Eyes at The Plaza. Hadnott said the youth was also charged in connection with the theft of a can of scented spray from Rose's at The Plaza.

ECU School Of Music Receives $10,000 Donation From Friends

Presentation of a check for $10,000 from The Friends of the School of Music, East Carolina University, to Charles Stevens, dean of the ECU School of Music, was the highlight of a business meeting held Sunday.

The check was presented to Stevens by Barbara White, outgoing Friends president.

The donation to the school will be used to provide funds for scholarships to music students during the 1989-1990 school year.

The business meeting of the Friends was held following a scholarship recital performance at the home of Chancellor and Mrs. Richard Eakin.

Officers elected during the business meeting to fill vacancies for the coming year are: Katie Strickland, president; Myra Cain, vice president, newsletter; Pat Carter, vice president, publicity; Jeff Glenn, corresponding secretary, and Charles Bath, faculty adviser.

Persons remaining on the board of the Friends are: Herbert Carter, vice president, programs; Sam White, vice president, membership; Carolyn Powell, vice president, social events; Berchie Bullock, treasurer; Earl Travathan, parliamentarian; Patsy Drake, recording secretary, and advisers JoAnn Eakin, Brad Foley, Marilyn Lucht and Charles Stevens.

Recital Planned

Treva Lee Tankard of Bath, a student at East Carolina University School of Music, will present her junior voice recital Tuesday at 7 p.m. at the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall.

Ms. Tankard will be accompanied by Alisa Wetherington and Katherine and Dr. John O'Brien. The program is free and open to the public.

Parks Commission

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Commission will meet at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in the auditorium of the administrative building, 2000 Cedar Lane.

Scheduled to be discussed are renovations to Guy Smith Stadium; the status of a request by Carolina Power and Light to remove trees at River Park North; a status of Greenville Little League, and a report on greenways planning.

Students Invited

Twenty-five Pitt County students are among the approximately 720 students who have been invited to participate in the 1989 Institute for Summer Ventures in Science and Mathematics, the nation's largest research-oriented summer program.

Summer Ventures is beginning its fifth year as a cost-free, residential summer program in science and mathematics. Students from 87 counties in the state are expected to participate this year.

Offered by the University of North Carolina and administered by the Durham-based N.C. School of Science and Mathematics, Summer Ventures is held from June to August for rising juniors and seniors with talent or special interest in science and mathematics. The program consists of five-week programs held at six campus sites.

Pitt County students invited to participate are Carla Joyner, Susan Koon, Allyson Norris and Robert Smith from Ayden-Grifton High School; Amy Allen, Amanda Hines, Jennifer Joyner, Patrick Lee, Lenora Lilley, Mary McMurray, Valerie Mills, Maria Smith, Rae Troiano, William Wainwright and Patrick Winstead from D.H. Conley; Derek Brown and Tracy Lawrence from Farmville Central; Maricelina Caro, Demetrius Carter, Felecia Cherry, Teresa Lambe, Dora Parsley, Rachel Raab and David Schwartz from J.H. United States Attorney Margaret Person Curran has announced that Kieran J. Shanahan, assistant U.S. attorney, has been named one of the nation's top arson prosecutors.

The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms presented the ATF Director's Award to Shanahan last week. The award is the bureau's most prestigious honor given to someone from outside the agency. Special ATF Agent Paul J. Lyon said Shanahan has indicted and successfully prosecuted all arson cases recommended by ATF agents over the last three years.

Shanahan prosecuted two Greenville men this year for the 1986 Liberty Tobacco Warehouse fire in Wilson. A federal jury convicted J.T. "Tommy" Worthington Jr. of over 50 counts of arson and fraud while his father, J.T. Worthington Sr., was convicted on one count of fraud relating to the incident.

Drug Lord Arrested In Mexico

All but six of about 80 officers were released, but those still held included the police chief and the chief of the Sinaloa state police, a federal official said. Culiacan is a city of 1.3 million people.

"We regret that people who have a responsibility to society have become involved in these events," said Sinaloa Gov. Francisco Labastida Ochoa.

Delia S.A. de C.V., one of Gallardo's numerous businesses, was surrounded by soldiers, and truckloads of soldiers patrolled Culiacan's streets all day Sunday.

An unidentified Honduran woman who was with Felix Gallardo also was arrested, as were several other suspects. All had been or would be flown to Mexico City, Hernandez said. A number of high-powered weapons also were seized.

Felix Gallardo, 43, was thought to run one of the largest cocaine trafficking operations in the world.

He was known as the godfather and czar of Mexico's drug trade because he reputedly pioneered an alliance with Colombian druglords of the notorious Medellin cartel to move cocaine through Mexico to the United States.

American officials investigating killing of Camarena, who had been kidnapped outside the U.S. consulate in Guadalajara, said Felix Gallardo was able to build up an immense operation with protection from high Mexican officials, including a state governor.

The flow of drugs has long been a matter of intense dispute between the United States and Mexico, and the raids come as the Congress faces a late April deadline for certifying that Mexico is doing its best to combat drug trafficking and so deserves continued U.S. aid.

Some U.S. congressmen, including Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., have accused Mexico of widespread official corruption and maintain that certification should be denied.

Felix Gallardo had such good official connections that U.S. drug agents said Mexican agents were afraid to find him, according to the recently published book "Desperados" by Elaine Shannon.

DEA agents suspected Felix Gallardo of involvement in the Camarena slaying, but were unable to locate him, the book said.

Camarena was investigating the drug smuggling empire of reputed kingpin Rafael Caro Quintero, one of Felix Gallardo's associates, when the agent and his Mexican pilot were kidnapped, tortured and killed in March 1985.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Basics

Equal Education Is Important

Ask a rural county what North Carolina's Basic Education Program has done and you'll get a two-sided answer. It is creating space and resource predicaments, they'll say, but it is also bringing equal education within the reach of every schoolchild.

The first part of that answer is a perpetual problem. No school system in any county in North Carolina has enough room or enough teachers. While that dilemma must continuously be addressed, it is the second part of the reply that's most important.

The Basic Education Program is equalizing education across North Carolina. That may not sound like much in Raleigh, but to kids in Greene County, for example, who may have never had an opportunity to learn about drama, dance or chemistry, the sound of that opportunity is literally music to their ears. The BEP is enabling students in poor school systems to have the same education students in wealthy systems receive. That's why its implementation should be kept on track.

This opportunity is pertinent now because state lawmakers are talking about delaying one phase of funding for the BEP for one year to help fund pay raises for teachers. Sen. Henson Barnes, president pro-tem of the N.C. Senate, suggested last week the state postpone the non-teaching positions set to be added to North Carolina's schools in 1988-89. That would eliminate hiring of 1,450 counselors, psychologists, nurses, lab assistants and assistant superintendents.

Sen. Barnes is on the right track. He is trying to find the money for teacher pay raises without increasing the state's sales tax, as Gov. Jim Martin has suggested. Lawmakers are obliged to do some snipping before taxpayers are asked to dig deeper in their pockets.

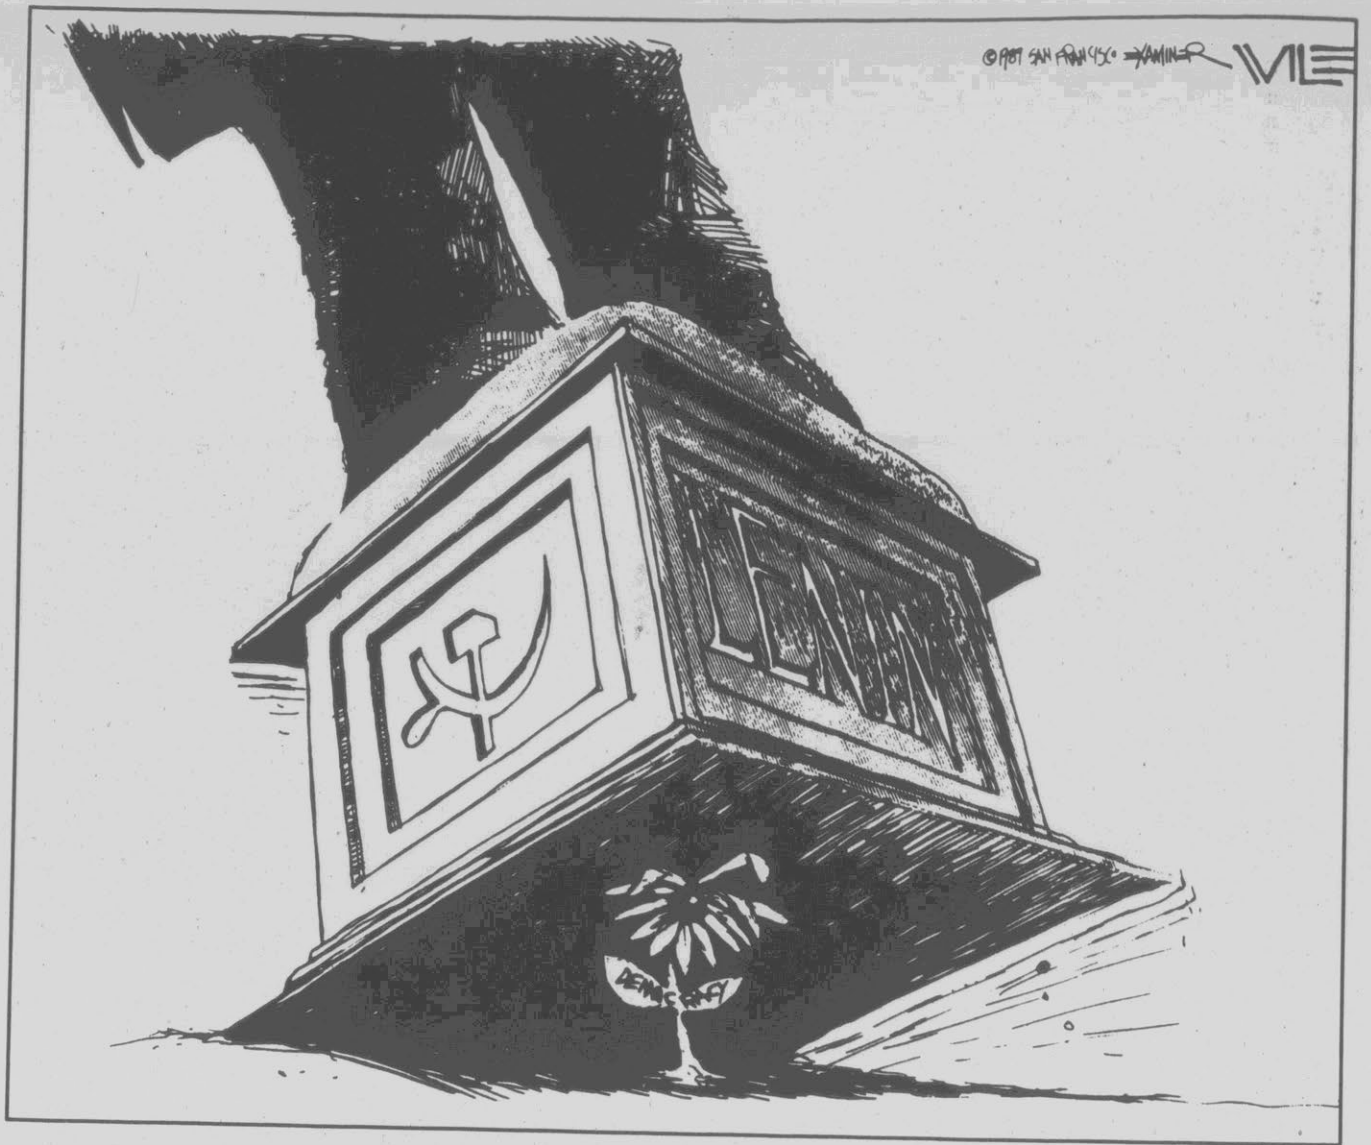

But part of the beauty of the BEP is the fact it is designed to give teachers time to teach. It provides schools with manpower — assistants, counselors, etc., that perform duties otherwise placed on teachers. These people give students hands-on help, as well as allow teachers more hours in the classroom helping students learn.

Some of the positions affected by Sen. Barnes' proposal aren't these type of hands-on jobs and can be postponed without undue worry — associate and assistant superintendents, for example. But some can't. Counselors and lab assistants, for example, play a significant one-on-one role with students. Increasing guidance personnel in schools is an important part of the BEP. Good counseling leads to better recognition of learning or emotional problems and to strong development of leadership skills. Haven't these improvements been suggested at every education summit in the past decade?

Before these positions are labeled non-essential and delayed, they should be closely examined. Giving schools more support personnel can help teachers help students.

Helping students — that's what the BEP is designed to do. Any easing of that commitment will do the opposite.

'Part of the beauty of the BEP is the fact it is designed to give teachers time to teach. It provides schools with manpower ...'

Advice From Lawyers: Stay Away

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — Had my father lived to see my 21st birthday, I'm sure that he'd have sent me into the adult world with advice something along these lines: "Whenever you can avoid lawyers, do it."

As hard as it may be to believe, the North Carolina Bar Association is giving the same kind of advice this year. The bar association is recommending that a pilot program of mandated mediation become part of the state judicial system. Such a move would mean that opponents in minor lawsuits — those up to $15,000 in civil court — could avoid hiring attorneys, go to an arbitrator, and have their dispute settled quickly.

For the past two years, three judicial districts in North Carolina have experimented with mandatory court-ordered arbitration. Under this program, a litigant need not hire an attorney. Instead, he prepares his own arguments and goes before a court-appointed arbitrator. The hearing is short and the rules of evidence are less stringent. There are no costly depositions to pay for. The arbitrator, a local lawyer, is paid only $75. Once the arbitrator's decision is announced, either side still retains the right to go to court, but only a small number of litigants in the pilot project counties did so.

The bar association reports that the program reduced considerably the amount of time it took to complete action on lawsuits, and that legal fees were reduced also. The program did not reduce the percentage of cases which had to be settled out of court. The significance there is that it cost far less to arbitrate a case than to prepare it for trial, and then settle out of court.

To this point, the program has operated without state funding. But the bar association now wants the state to begin paying the bills. The association cannot prove it, but in their report they make an educated guess that court-ordered arbitration will cut court costs enough to pay for itself. The association report says that in one district the caseload was reduced enough to cancel several weeks of court, and that has to mean a savings to the state.

The report, along with its endorsement by Chief Justice James Exum of the N.C. Supreme Court, now puts the issue before the General Assembly. Legislators will have a number of decisions to make if they decide the program is worthy of being incorporated officially into the judicial system.

The program is now operating in only three districts. Should it be expanded into more, and if so, how quickly?

What should the dollar limits be? By capping the program at something higher than $15,000, more litigants could benefit from arbitration.

The association reports that many of the lawyers who took part in the program think $25,000 or $50,000 would be more appropriate. In other states, the limit is as high as $250,000.

Should the types of cases be expanded? The current program does not include several types of cases, like family law, real estate and estate matters. Expansion in these areas could save ordinary citizens the expense and anxiety of dealing with the judicial system.

Finally, should the time one has to request a trial, after an arbitrator has ruled, be reduced? Currently it is 30 days. The association found considerable sympathy for a 10-day period.

For many people, dealing with the courts spawns high anxiety and higher legal fees. But funneling more people into arbitration, especially for minor lawsuits, and court system would probably serve us all much better.

So What If It Is So?

WASHINGTON — Next to George Washington and the cherry tree, the most enduring American fable was formed 70 years ago. That's when the tear-stained boy is supposed to have waited for his hero outside the ballpark, stepped forward as the star player came into sight and sobbed the immortal, "Say it ain't so, Joe."

It was so. "Shoeless" Joe Jackson, the greatest right-hand hitter in baseball history and star of the American League champion Chicago White Sox, had been involved in the gambling scandal that nearly wrecked baseball. He and several teammates were banished from baseball for life for betting on games and throwing the 1919 World Series. The good-guy White Sox passed into sporting history as the infamous "Black Sox." The tearful youth who sought reassurance from a fallen idol became a metaphor for lost innocence and betrayal.

I've always been skeptical about whether that disillusioned youth-false hero incident happened, having heard first-hand from some of those involved about fakery employed by noted sports writers in that ballyhoo era. Nonetheless, the story is accepted as fact.

So here we are this week, on Opening Day 70 years later, the fans are cheering themselves hoarse for their hero, the great player-turned-manager, Pete Rose. Signs of support are everywhere at Cincinnati's Riverside Stadium. "Free Pete," one homemade banner reads.

Wait a minute. What's going on here? Pete Rose isn't at the center of national controversy because reporters have published defamatory rumors about him. He's in trouble because, two weeks earlier, the office of then-major league baseball commissioner Peter Ueberroth had announced that "serious allegations" about Rose were being investigated.

Question: In expressing their strong support for Rose, were the fans clinging to the old-fashioned "say it ain't so" kind of hope that their hero had not committed the alleged offense? Or were they echoing what appears to be the more cynical prevailing American value? Were they shouting their approval for the public celebrity who breaks the rules and thumbs his nose at the suckers who don't?

Similarly, last week, a federal grand jury handed down a long-expected criminal indictment of Michael Milken, the young "junk-bond" genius who raised untold billions of dollars to finance a wave of hostile business takeovers that transformed American corporate life in the 1980s. After investigating Milken's extraordinary activities for more than two years as part of the most extensive "insider-trading" scandal ever, the government charged Milken with 98 instances of fraud, racketeering and illegal insider-stock trading. It seeks payment of $1.85 billion in penalties from him.

Among the wealth of damning information assembled by the grand jury about Milken, one fact leaped out. The government reported that, in just one year, Milken had been paid $550 million in salary and bonuses from his Wall Street firm, Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc.

No sooner had such evidence of the rewards of alleged criminal insider dealing and greed been announced than prominent friends of Milken rushed to his public defense. "Mike Milken, We Believe in You," said the bold headline over nationwide newspaper advertisements.

To the sponsors of those ads, as to supporters of Pete Rose and the indicted Oliver L. North, Milken was a hero, worthy of public adulation and emulation.

"Say it's so," they proclaim, in effect, as they cheer their hero. And to critics who wonder about declining national standards of values, they add: "So what?"

'Just Say No' To Peppercorns

Art Buchwald

It wasn't a serious problem before, but it has now become a crisis. No restaurant worth its salt will let you put pepper on your own food. One of the reasons for this is that waiters in the United States cannot be licensed to serve a meal unless they are able to operate a nine-foot pepper grinder.

In order to handle the demand for qualified grinders, pepper schools are springing up all across the land. Their function is to teach students the art of using a pepper mill in a public place. This includes spraying everything from salads to smoked salmon. A great deal of the curriculum is also devoted to safety.

Pierre au Poivre, the Isaac Stern of pepper grinders, told me, "You have to have nerves of steel to be in this business."

"Most accidents in restaurants are caused when an incompetent person using a pepper mill misses the salad and hits the diner in the nose or on the head. In the wrong hands a pepper mill is considered a lethal weapon, and we need all the guidelines we can get to prevent serious injury."

"Probably the most important point to remember when holding a pepper grinder is to keep it at a 45-degree angle. If you raise it any higher, you could shoot the pepper into someone's eyes. If you hold it any lower, the pepper will fall onto the customer's shoes. Next comes — 'twisting the mill.' The twist of the wrist is what distinguishes the great grinders from the mediocre ones."

"Is that all there is to it?" I asked.

"You must also practice. I devote five hours a day to my art. My wife makes 34 pounds of Caesar salad every morning for me to train on. But it has all been worth it."

Pierre said that there are many waiters aspiring to be pepper grinders who just don't have it.

"Why is that?" I wanted to know.

"Because they close their eyes when they are putting the pepper on the salad. We call it 'Fear of Sprinkling.'"

"I know this is a silly question, but what are the advantages of having a waiter do your pepper grinding for you?"

"It's a once-in-a-lifetime gastronomic experience. We live in a very frenetic world, and most people do not have the time to put pepper on their food. If you're dining at a restaurant which provides such a service, you know that you're in a classy joint, even if the food tastes like bicycle tires."

Pierre felt that everything in pepper grinding is timing.

"My favorite maneuver is to hide behind a palm tree. I wait until someone starts to tell a story and just when he gets to the punch line, I jump out with my mill at the ready and yell 'PEPPER.'"

"It takes a real pro to ruin someone's joke."

"I also like to grind pepper just as a man is proposing marriage to a girl or when a couple is breaking up. It makes me feel that what I'm doing has some value."

He continued, "Recently, however, I have observed that people are starting to grind their own pepper. They have no class and are the same ones who insist on putting gas in their own tanks. Nevertheless, restaurants are no longer ignoring them and are setting aside a special section for do-it-yourself pepper grinding, and another one where waiters provide the service."

The biggest criticism heard about self-grinders is that they are inexperienced and badly trained. Many hold the grinders upside down and wind up shooting peppercorn dust at everyone in the room.

I asked Pierre if he owned his own pepper grinder.

"Every great waiter does," he replied. "Mine was crafted by Antonio Stradivari, the celebrated pepper-mill maker from Cremona."

"Why is it so valuable?"

"Because of the pure sound it makes when the pepper hits the lettuce."

Washington Insiders Like Tax Reform, But The Public Doesn't

Kevin Phillips

WASHINGTON — April, when the Internal Revenue Service is most on the public mind, is also the month when the federal income tax — and the far-reaching modifications made in 1986 — commands greatest attention in the print and broadcast media. Yet most discussions have ignored a potentially explosive aspect: While academic, political and journalistic elites cherish the 1986 income tax overhaul, which reduced rates by curbing deductions and credits, the public considers it a turkey.

It is not an abstract disagreement. An aroused electorate could become a force for rescripting federal tax policy during the 1990s. Succinctly put: Public opinion appears to favor re-establishing tax-bracket progressivity, which is the principle of significantly higher rates for higher income groups so much eroded during the 1980s. Doubters should recall that such a turnabout has happened once before — when the top income tax rate fell to 25 percent during the 1920s, but then climbed back to 65 percent, and then 75 percent, during the 1930s.

Today's critical gap in public vs.

True — but also false. Of course, the electorate doesn't want taxes in the broad, middle-class sense raised — and why should they? Today's burden is high enough, voters believe. Studies by the Congressional Budget Office show that when all federal taxes are combined, the average American's effective federal tax rate is roughly the same now as it was back in 1977. Increases in Social Security levies have counterbalanced small net reductions in income taxes.

Only among the top 10 percent, 5 percent or, especially, 1 percent of Americans has the overall effective federal tax rate dropped. Indeed, for the fortunate top 1 percent of Americans, the three-stage reduction of capital gains and income tax rates that took place in 1978, 1981 and 1986 has had the effect of dropping their net effective federal tax rate from 31 percent in 1978 to just 25 percent in 1988 — a considerable benefit. That is what critics cite when they describe the net effect of combined federal tax changes over the last decade as helping upper-income groups but doing little for those in the middle.

So popular disillusionment is understandable. Whatever Reagan might have intended to deliver, most average Americans never got it. In soaring to 82 percent from last May's 64 percent. Part of the uptick mirrored growing concern over national economic polarization — an unexpected 58 percent to 30 percent majority agreed that the gap between rich and poor was getting wider, "shocking" Gallup President Andrew Kohut. That, too, could hint at an emerging issue of the 1990s.

At the least, such sentiment jeopardizes inside-the-Beltway hope that the sharp bracket cuts of the 1980s have been set in concrete by the 1986 tax overhaul. Future historians may judge that America's agenda-setting elites took an unwise gamble in treating 1985-86 public apathy as genuine support for tax reform, and then ignoring the negative rumbles of 1987-89.

Opinion data suggests that the upper-income rate cuts of the last decade could be vulnerable on populist as well as deficit-reduction grounds. And if there is a latter-day liberal version of conservative tax revolt leaders like Alabama's George Wallace and California's Howard Jarvis even now polishing his rhetoric in some Oklahoma PTA hall or Midwest state legislature, the U.S. tax code could look a lot different by the mid-1990s.

'Opinion data suggests that the upper-income rate cuts of the last decade could be vulnerable on populist as well as deficit-reduction grounds. And if there is a latter-day liberal version of conservative tax revolt leaders like Alabama's George Wallace and California's Howard Jarvis even now polishing his rhetoric in some Oklahoma PTA hall or Midwest state legislature, the U.S. tax code could look a lot different by the mid-1990s.'

elite perceptions goes back to 1985-1986. That is when Washington's "inside-the-Beltway" economists, congressmen, journalists and lobbyists — not all for the same reasons — jumped on the bandwagon of reducing tax rates, eliminating deductions and simplifying the tax code — in the process overselling "reform" to audiences and constituencies alike. Moreover, those accolades were delivered even though the tax changes involved were "revenue neutral" — rates would be slashed to 28 percent, but nothing would be done taxwise to reduce the $200 billion federal budget deficit.

The catch, as serious chroniclers have acknowledged, is that the American people were never quite convinced. When President Reagan called it "the people's tax cut," the public yawned. Deputy Secretary of the Treasury Richard G. Darman said that it would realign national politics in favor of the Republicans; the electorate ignored him. And when Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, pledged the enthusiastic cooperation of congressional Democrats, grass-roots apathy continued.

Then, by 1988, as citizens began to file and pay taxes under the revised system, those public doubts started hardening into hostility. Much of what Washington politicians had promised was nowhere in evidence. One March 1988, ABC News survey found a 55 percent to 31 percent majority saying that reform had made the tax system worse, not better. A second, for the Cable News Network, found 67 percent describing the new law as more confusing than the prior one, while 60 percent thought it benefited the rich.

A visitor from Mars might have thought those findings represented a big story: an expose of public refusal to be flummoxed. Not so. Few journalists probed grass-roots skepticism, and Washington-worship of the 1986 tax reform act continued — as did White House and congressional unwillingness to tamper with the new rate structure, even on behalf of deficit reduction. Analysts continued to cite "polls" showing that the public opposes raising taxes to reduce the deficit.

the meantime, of course, John D. Public has been drawing his own cynical conclusions from the record number of BMWs and Mercedes on the highways and the record number of yachts off San Diego.

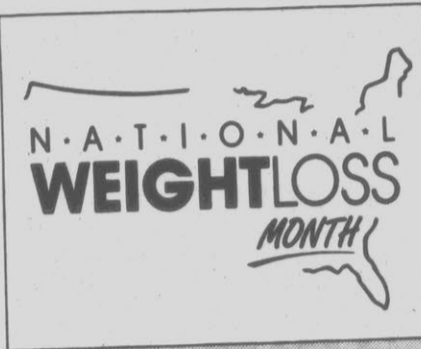

The upshot is that while voters oppose a broad tax increase, they do have definite preferences if more revenue is needed. Increasing alcohol and tobacco levies is one; raising income tax levies on corporations and upper-tier individuals is another.

Both sentiments, in fact, are quite lopsided. Higher taxes on alcohol and tobacco have a social and medical, as well as fiscal, incentive. As for higher taxes on the rich — popular motivations are ideological and cultural as well as fiscal. After all, Middle America never really signed off on the 1980s tax philosophy of eroding the progressivity of the U.S. tax system — by dropping the rates for highest-income Americans from 70 percent to 28 percent in just seven years. Citizens seem even less happy now. Just as recent opinion polls display public sourness over the clumsiness and bias of the 1986 tax "reform," they also suggest the electorate's apparent preference for rebuilding the progressive federal income tax during the 1990s.

Because the subject is so controversial, let me cite some data. Louis Harris polling in December found 62 percent to 35 percent support boosting the federal tax rate for high-income Americans from 28 percent to 38 percent. A survey taken by Gallup for the Times-Mirror Corporation in May 1988 charted 64 percent of the public support increasing income taxes for those making more than $80,000 a year. An autumn sampling by Money Magazine found 69 percent of those polled prefer a presidential candidate willing to raise taxes for people with incomes of $100,000 a year or more — casting doubt on the conventional wisdom that softness on tax increases has been fatal to Democratic presidential nominees.

Most recently, February's Gallup-Times-Mirror poll showed the percentage of Americans in favor of raising income taxes on those making more than $80,000

Nutri/System is fighting for your health.

The evidence is in. Science has taken the guesswork out of the importance of weight control. If you want to improve your health and live longer... chances are you need to shed a few pounds.

A study by the National Institutes of Health (NIH) finds that obesity* is a disease that afflicts 34 million American adults. And another 34 million are considered overweight — a total of 68 million adults!

The greatest risk from being overweight, says the NIH, is heart disease, the nation's leading killer claiming nearly one million victims yearly. Moreover, obesity increases other risk factors. These weight-related risk factors include hypertension, high-blood pressure, high-blood cholesterol levels, diabetes, and even cancer.

Risks of Overweight

- The evidence is overwhelming:
- High-blood pressure occurs about 3 times as often in the obese as in the non-overweight.
 - High-blood cholesterol levels occur 50 percent more frequently in those who are obese.
 - The frequency of diabetes is nearly 3 times as high in obese people as it is in others.
 - Overweight men—regardless of smoking habits—have higher rates of colon, rectal, and prostate cancer.
 - Overweight women stand a greater chance of death from cancer of the gallbladder, breast, ovaries, and uterus. (Cancer deaths in women amounted to 490,000 as compared to 495,000 in men, according to the latest figures available from the American Cancer Society.)
- The solution, according to an extensive study published by the Council on Scientific Affairs of the American Medical Association, has three simple elements:

1. Nutritionally-balanced diet
2. Behavior modification
3. Exercise

"These three elements are interdependent and mutually supportive. A program that incorporates all three is more likely to lead to long-term weight control," the AMA concludes.

National Weight Loss Month

The 1,100 Nutri/System Weight Loss Centers salute these efforts to inform the American public of the dangers of obesity. And we applaud the 43 million adults who are currently waging their own personal "War on Obesity" by actively attempting to lose weight and control their weight.

Nutri/System supports the designation of April as National Weight Loss Month, to raise public awareness and concern for the number one national health threat—Obesity. Nutri/System welcomes all other responsible members of the weight loss community to join in the "War on Obesity."

Nutri/System: Comprehensive Weight Loss Program

One program which features all of the elements recommended for a comprehensive weight loss program by the American Medical Association is the Nutri/System Weight Loss Program.

The Nutri/System Weight Loss Program provides 130,000 individuals each week with the proven tools to lose weight effectively and safely—and to live a longer, happier, and healthier life. The Nutri/System Weight Loss Program includes:

- Nutrition and Behavior Counseling to provide encouragement and support and to help understand weight control problems with our exclusive Personalized Weight Loss Profile™ questionnaire and Behavior Breakthrough™ classes.
- Delicious, low-calorie meals that are nutritionally balanced, low in fat, portion-controlled, and meet the high flavor and texture standards of our Flavor Set-Point™ Meal Plan.

• Light Exercise designed for people not used to exercising regularly.

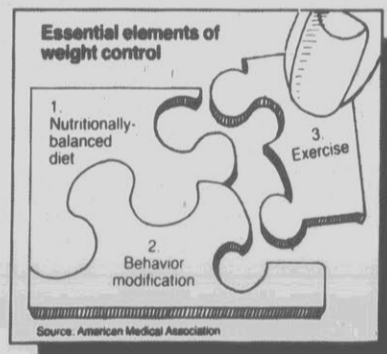

• Weight Maintenance to help keep those pounds off and begin a healthy new life confident of permanent weight control.

"War on Obesity"

If you are concerned with your health—and the health of your family—join in the national effort to recognize obesity as the number one public health threat it is.

What can you do?

1. Make sure you are not part of the problem. See your family physician and determine if you are counted among the 68 million overweight Americans.
2. Take control of your own life. If you are overweight actively seek help through a comprehensive program for weight loss and weight control.
3. Enlist others in the "War on Obesity". Talk to your family, friends, and neighbors about this important national problem and join the thousands of Americans who will observe National Weight Loss Month during April.
4. Call for a national health policy on obesity. Write or call your Congressman today to join the "War on Obesity" and let's lick this national health threat.

A message in the public interest from the 1,100 Nutri/System Weight Loss Centers throughout North America.

Insanity Defense Debate Goes On

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREENSBORO — Some defense attorneys would like to see North Carolina adopt a verdict of "guilty but mentally ill," saying it is almost impossible to prove insanity under current law, but prosecutors generally favor the status quo.

"Jurors are reluctant to find someone not guilty by reason of insanity for fear the person will be back on the streets again," said Wally Harrelson, who represented Brenda Joyce Nobles on charges that she abducted a newborn baby from a hospital maternity ward.

Ms. Nobles pleaded innocent by reason of insanity. But the 38-year-old High Point woman was convicted last week in Guilford Superior Court of felony child abduction and sentenced to 12 years in prison.

Defense witnesses testified that Ms. Nobles was psychotic. She insisted she was pregnant, although she previously had a hysterectomy. But prosecutors showed that Ms. Nobles had plotted to steal the baby and then tried to cover up her actions.

"I don't think there is a problem with the law," said Guilford County District Attorney Jim Kimel, who headed the prosecution of Ms. Nobles. "I think the problem is once these defendants have been found guilty and sent to prison. We need better mental health treatment within the prison system."

Assistant Attorney General Joan

Byers said the guilty but mentally ill verdict has its ups and downs.

"How do you define mental illness? You probably could find some mental illness in everyone" Ms. Byers said. "And at what point are you willing to excuse someone for their actions?"

On the other hand, she said, the state has an obligation to protect the general prison population from defendants who may be mentally ill and dangerous to others.

"But I don't see the need to change the system now," Ms. Byers said. "I think it works pretty well."

Ben Sendor of the Institute of Government in Chapel Hill said a guilty but mentally ill verdict would benefit those defendants, such as Ms. Nobles, who are convicted and sent to prison instead of a mental health treatment center. Under the new verdict, the first part of their sentence would be served in a psychiatric unit.

But the new verdict could hurt defendants who a jury might otherwise find innocent by reason of insanity.

"It gives the jury a moral compromise," he said.

In another highly publicized case, Michael Hayes, on trial on charges of killing four motorists and wounding five others during a shooting spree in Forsyth County, has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity.

Witnesses have testified that Hayes believed he was on a mission from God and was killing demons, not guilty by reason of insanity — of "guilty but mentally ill."

"Ever since the Hinckley case, insanity cases in North Carolina have been extremely difficult to win," said Charles Lloyd, past president of the Greensboro Criminal Defense Lawyers Association.

Statistics bear out that argument. State mental health officials estimated in 1984 that fewer than 20 defendants successfully used the insanity defense between 1974 and 1984. And most of those cases involved non-violent crimes.

Lloyd, Harrelson and other defense lawyers would like to see North Carolina adopt a guilty but mentally ill verdict. States that have adopted that verdict require criminal defendants to receive adequate psychiatric care as part of their prison sentence.

A state mental health study commission examined the guilty but mentally ill verdict in the aftermath of the Hinckley verdict.

Poultry Workers' Hand Pains Target Of Labor Agency Probe

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROBERSONVILLE — Some people say repetitive motion disorders in the hand and wrist have become the occupational affliction of the 1980s, showing up among those who work in textile mills and factories, at cash registers and video terminals.

"It is basically in every business sector in the country," said Mahmoud Ayoub, an ergonomist with N.C. State University's industrial engineering department. Ergonomics is the study of workers' interaction with their workplace.

Repetitive motion disorders are a group of related nerve ailments in the hand and wrist that plague many jobs in which hand motions are repeated at high speeds. The repeated motions strain muscles, tendons and nerves, causing swelling and numbness. The most advanced disorder, in which inflammation compresses the main hand nerve, is known as carpal tunnel syndrome.

Ayoub said the current nationwide rash of reported cases is a byproduct of the country's pursuit of higher productivity in the last decade.

"What we're seeing is we're wanting more and more from everybody," he said. "We're pushing people closer and closer to their limits."

Linda Buckholts suffers from carpal tunnel syndrome. She used to work at the Perdue plant in Robersonville, using a blade to strip the bone and gristle from nearly 1,000 chicken breasts a day.

Her job paid more than $5 an hour — better than most others in the Bertie and Martin county area. But after a few months, she would sometimes lose feeling in the fingertips. Then her hands started to throb.

She began to lose her grip on her fork or her brush without warning. When she started to miss her mark with her work knife, she took her sore, numb hands to a doctor.

There, she found out it was her work that was crippling her. Ms.

Buckholts, 30, was diagnosed as having the disorder. She carries a scar on one hand from corrective surgery, and long since has left Perdue.

"You think the money's good," she said. "After you get there, you find out it's not worth it."

Ms. Buckholts and other former Perdue workers in Bertie and Martin counties now accuse the company of doing little to prevent the known risk of such injuries.

Perdue, one of the region's largest employers, denies the accusations.

Michael Ragland, deputy commissioner for health and safety at the state labor department, says the agency is looking into the situation.

"We've very concerned about that issue," Ragland said.

Perdue has been cooperating with state investigators, Ragland said, but declined to provide further details.

Labor Commissioner John Brooks also refused to discuss the investigation.

Perdue, like other poultry companies, has built more plants and hired more workers to feed the growing demand for poultry.

It is that drive for profit, former workers like Ms. Buckholts say, that makes the company pressure workers to frantic speeds — until their wrists give out. Then Perdue shows them the door, they say, and hires new workers with fresh, fast hands.

Perdue gets away with it, they say, because most of the line workers at both plants are poor women with children to feed who are too desperate for work to complain to the management of the company, and too enveloped by the culture of poverty to complain until their hands are ruined.

"Jobs are hard to come by in eastern North Carolina," said Donna Bazemore, 30, a former Perdue worker who had surgery on one hand for carpal tunnel syndrome. "A lot of these women came off farms, from seasonal jobs like picking cucumbers or putting in tobacco. A year-round job is like a godsend to them."

Ms. Bazemore now works as a community organizer for the Center for Women's Economic Alternatives based in nearby Ahsokie. The center seeks out manufacturing workers to make sure they know their workplace rights and dangers.

James McCauley, Perdue's corporate director of safety and security for its 12,000 workers nationwide, dismisses the charges as absurd.

Aside from humanitarian concerns, McCauley said, Perdue has legal and economic stakes in treating its line workers fairly.

"If we look out for them, they're going to look out for us and do a good job," he said. "We are probably the most quality-conscious company there is. When we sell our chickens to Ms. Housewife out there, we're getting a premium price because of our quality. If we mistreat our employees, where is our quality?"

There is also, he said, the watchful eye of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration. OSHA recently slapped one of the nation's largest meat packers, John Morrell & Co. in Sioux Falls, S.D., with a record fine of $4.3 million for ignoring the dangers of similar injuries.

"A company the size of Perdue would be foolish to think it could put its head in the sand on this," he said.

McCauley said the company did all it could to shield workers. He said he served on a poultry industry task force on preventative measures and Perdue has implemented all of the measures recommended.

Foremost among them is job rotation, in which workers spend only part of their day on high-risk jobs, like deboning. Workers are also drilled in arm and hand exercises each shift, are given anti-inflammatory drugs and use supportive bandages or splints as preventative measures, he said.

Fire Chases Patients

GASTONIA (AP) — A fire on the second floor of the Gaston-Lincoln Mental Health forced the evacuation of 27 staff members and patients Sunday, officials say.

It was the fifth time firefighters have been called to the center since March 13, including two calls that came on Sunday. The first call, which came around 4:30 p.m., was a false alarm triggered by a faulty smoke alarm. Another alarm sounded at about 8 p.m., and the building, which houses a detoxification program on the second floor, was evacuated. The patients were sent home or to a nearby hotel.

"The fire was extensive and involved several rooms, but was confined to the second floor," Division Chief G.R. Cook said Sunday night after the fire was contained and 20 to 25 firefighters waited for the smoke to clear.

Mental Health Director James Melton said the fire started in the substance abuse outpatient area on the second floor.

Fire-Safe Furniture

HIGH POINT (AP) — Tobacco companies must take some responsibility in the issue of fire-safe furniture, says a Boston congressman who has been sponsoring bills for 10 years to set fire safety standards for cigarettes.

"We should not have to rely on furniture manufacturers to make the world fire-safe," Rep. Joseph Moakley, D-Mass., said during the Southern Furniture Market.

"I think cigarette manufacturers have an obligation," he said.

Moakley became interested in the issue after a devastating fire in his congressional district that was caused by a cigarette that ignited a piece of furniture.

FIBER FACTS

What homeowner hasn't shopped a favorite carpet retailer and been bewildered at the array of colors, styles, textures and fibers. The problem's compounded by glowing descriptions hailing the advantages of one type carpet over another.

I won't pretend to provide information on matters of personal preference. Fibers, however, I do know something about, since I deal with them daily...long after the sale.

So, what's the best fiber? That question is best answered with a quick examination of the types available.

Wool—Though not very lustrous, wool wears well and hides soil even better. The chief drawback is that it stains easily and is expensive—not a wise choice for the average home with youngsters and pets!

Polyester—The miracle fiber of the 70s, polyester, is hard to stain and wears well. However, traffic changes its texture (crimp-loss) so that entry areas look worn very quickly.

Acrylic—Promoted as "the synthetic substitute for wool", acrylic looks like wool but is highly stain-resistant. Drawbacks are twofold: first, nap-reversal causes traffic areas to stand out vividly. Second, due to non-resiliency, furniture on acrylic creates permanent impressions... Disaster!

Olefin (Astro-Turf, etc.)—Olefin resists staining and cleans easily. Like acrylic, however, there are problems with nap-reversal in traffic areas and impressions under furniture.

Nylon—Last year, 81.5% of carpet fiber was nylon. I could close with that, but let's look at the reasons why. First, nylon wears better than any fiber, including wool. Second, nylon cleans well and is stained only by certain dyes. A three-year-old with a cup of Kool-Aid can quickly spot-dye most nylon carpet—coffee, tea, soft drinks, grease—no problem. Finally, nylon bounces back even after being crushed for years i.e., it really holds its original appearance for quite some time.

Still have questions? A reputable retailer has more information to make your final decision yield dividends for years to come!

Fishermen Improvise To Trap Oil

By Tad Bartimus
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEWARD, Alaska — Survivors of one of the world's worst earthquakes and veterans of typhoons, floods, and shipwrecks, the resilient people of the small fishing villages along Alaska's central coast recognize catastrophe quickly.

Which is why, days before millions of gallons of drifting crude oil from the grounded tanker Exxon Valdez began threatening salmon spawning grounds, recreational beaches, and pristine national park, the people who live here didn't wait for help from Exxon or government bureaucrats.

They helped themselves. Up and down the coast, from Kodiak Island to Cordova, fishermen and town leaders improvised ways to catch oil with nets and protect bays with trees — and proved to be more successful than expensive and elaborate machinery.

"The bright spot on this whole spill is the spirit we've seen from the fishermen," said Jim Hayden, the state's cleanup coordinator. "They're naturals on the water. They've seined for salmon and they've seined for herring and now they're seining for oil."

In the battle to protect Sawmill Bay hatcheries, fishermen used seining nets to corral it and bring it over to barges, where they had super suction trucks normally used on drilling mud at North Slope oil fields.

At Kodiak, the nation's richest fishing port last year, fishermen used logs and nets to form a protective curtain around bays. Fishermen even used television to display boom-making techniques.

"It's all experimental," said Bud Cassidy, coordinator of the boom project.

At Seward, a combination of lucky breaks, old friends, good credit, fair weather, and a willingness to take risks allowed residents to protect their own coastal back yard.

Seward's port manager, Chris Gates, tapped old contacts and in the middle of the night during the first week of the spill found Joe Santamaria and 20,000 feet of containment boom by phone in Bristol, N.H.

"We keep 20,000 feet of boom on the East Coast for spills so when Seward said it wanted it, I had it," said Santamaria, general manager of JPS-Oiltrol, Inc. "Chris got Exxon to OK the purchase, we got it on a DC-9 out of Boston, and by Saturday I was training fishermen to lay boom."

In a stroke of good fortune, the adjacent Kenai Fjords National Park had completed its oil spill contingency plan only one week before the tanker accident, a measure required for all coastal national parks last year.

As city council was declaring an emergency, park superintendent Anne Castellina was asking for, and getting, a federal disaster team and an account number to charge supplies.

Within hours, the park service and city had teamed up.

"We knew we needed each other," said Ms. Castellina. "They had the political clout and we had the resource information. Neither of us could go it alone."

Meanwhile, Seward fishermen who'd spent weeks preparing for herring season only to have it canceled by the state because of the spill, were standing by to help.

"Nobody had ever worked with oil booms before so we had no idea how to operate them," said Mark Clemens. "But we soon figured out that booms are essentially like operating a seine net because they float and they close off an area. We hooked 'em up like we were fishing for salmon."

Santamaria, who flew back to New Hampshire on Saturday to oversee production of more boom, had high praise for his Alaskan recruits.

"These fishermen worked out terrific. I wish I could take them back East with me."

Alaskan Oil Spill Hikes Gas Prices

By Richard De Atley
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Gasoline prices jumped more than 10 cents in the wake of the nation's worst oil spill, an analyst said.

"It can be said it was the quickest as well as the greatest wholesale price hike in the history of the U.S. gasoline market," said Tribby Lundberg, who surveys prices at 17,000 U.S. gasoline stations.

"Without factoring in inflation, this also was the fastest and greatest rise for retail."

She did not say what the greatest price hike was.

For the 22 days that ended Friday, the average retail price of a gallon of gasoline rose to $1.1063, up from $1.0037, Ms. Lundberg said Sunday.

The hike in wholesale prices was a tenth of a cent greater than the retail increase.

The average price includes all taxes, grades of gasoline and self-service and full-service pump prices.

The price surge followed the brief shutoff of crude oil shipments after the crash of an Exxon tanker in Alaska's Prince William Sound. The ensuing spill temporarily closed the Port of Valdez. It has since reopened, and Lundberg said prices already were beginning to fall by Sunday.

However, some distributors who sell to retailers accused independent refineries of taking advantage of the spill, which briefly cut off 40 percent of California's crude supply, the Los Angeles Times reported Sunday.

"When the news got out, the refiners were all of a sudden saying they're out of gasoline," said Bill Wright, owner of Wright Oil Co. of Santee. "They raised prices as high as they could to stop the demand for their gasoline, because every gallon they sold that day was a gallon they wouldn't be able to sell the next week for a lot more money."

Lundberg said the refiners' price rises were justified.

"It was a price response ... stemming from actual cutbacks in crude oil and refined product, and a preventive mechanism by which the refiners did not want to run out," she said.

She said refiners faced a dilemma during the past three weeks.

"You have your choice of supplying to whoever comes quick and takes all you've got," she said. "Or you raise your price and make sure all your accounts get some, and you don't have panic buying among accounts and consumers. The refiners, at large, chose that tactic."

While no data have been gathered, Lundberg said recent informal reports indicated that "prices are already slipping back, both for wholesale and on the street."

Lundberg also cautioned that prices had been rising before the March 24 spill.

Biaggi rests in Dallas airport on the way to federal prison

Biaggi Set To Begin Term For Bribery

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GRAPEVINE, Texas — Former U.S. Rep. Mario Biaggi has arrived here to begin serving a 2½-year prison sentence for accepting bribes.

Biaggi, 71, arrived at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport late Sunday, but did not indicate what time he would report to the U.S. Correctional Facility today to begin serving his sentence.

As Biaggi left the plane, he declined to comment because he had held a news conference before boarding a plane in Newark, N.J.

The 10-term Democratic congressman was convicted of bribery charges in federal court in New York City in September 1987 for accepting a Florida spa vacation from former New York City Democratic boss Meade Esposito.

He was later convicted in the Wedtech scandal and sentenced to eight years.

At the New Jersey airport, Biaggi said he had served his constituents well and would return "to pick up where we left off."

Flanked by family members, he told reporters he went to church earlier in the day. He also said he visited his wife, Marie Wassil Biaggi, who is hospitalized with Hodgkin's disease.

"I have loving grandchildren and loving children," he said. "They'll be here when I get back."

The former congressman maintained he accepted the Florida vacation as a friend of Esposito.

"I find myself going to a federal facility today because a friend of some 35 years was generous to me," said Biaggi.

About 30 friends gathered at a posh New York City restaurant Saturday for a combination farewell party for him and birthday party for the daughter of a long-time friend.

"They gave me a great honor," said Biaggi. "I believe I served them well. I tried with all of my might. I'm leaving, but I'll be back and we'll pick it up where we left off."

Gulf & Western To Sell Financial Services Unit

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Gulf & Western Inc. will sell its last major non-media business and adopt a new name that emphasizes its entertainment and publishing foundations — Paramount Communications Inc.

The company, the parent of Paramount Pictures, said Sunday it would change its name after selling The Associates, its consumer and commercial lending unit.

The move caps a six-year transformation of Gulf & Western, which had been one of America's premier conglomerates with such far-flung interests as building products, cigars, sugar, automotive parts, apparel and bedding.

"The sale of The Associates represents another phase in our strategic development," Martin S. Davis, the company's chairman and chief executive, said in a statement.

Davis said the finance business wasn't compatible with Gulf & Western's media operations, which include the publishing house Simon and Schuster.

Proceeds from the sale would be used to develop new products and make acquisitions in entertainment and publishing, the company said.

Gulf & Western also said it would continue to buy back some of its stock.

Spokesman Jerry Sherman declined to say what price the company expects to fetch for the financial services division or what it might seek to acquire.

Financial analyst Mark Manson of Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette Inc. said the restructuring was a good move that would boost the company's stock price. He estimated The Associates is worth more than $3.2 billion.

Associates First Capital Corp., as it is formally called, offers mortgages, retail loans and other personal financing through 520 retail branches in 42 states and Puerto Rico. It also has 95 offices in Japan and 45 in the United Kingdom.

The Associates also operates a bank in California, a credit card business and is a major lender to the trucking industry in the United States and Canada, Sherman said.

Tass: Sub Had Torpedoes With Nuclear Warheads

By Andrew Katell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — Two torpedoes armed with nuclear warheads were aboard the Soviet nuclear-powered submarine that sank in the Norwegian Sea but there is no threat of radiation contamination, Tass reported. The official Soviet news agency also disclosed Sunday that 42 of the 69 sailors aboard the vessel were killed when it caught fire and sank on Friday. It said the vessel's reactor was shut down during the accident.

The Soviet navy today questioned survivors about the accident, Tass said. It also said that the captain of the unidentified submarine, E. Vanin, was among the dead.

Norwegian officials said the vessel did not release radiation before or after it sank more than 4,500 feet in international waters about 310 miles west of Tromsøe on Norway's northern coast.

Norwegian scientists gathered deep-water samples Sunday and placed equipment near the submarine that will monitor radiation levels for years.

Tass said the design of the nuclear warheads on the torpedoes "completely rules out" the threat of radiation leaks even under the great pressure of deep water.

"To ensure radiation safety, the nuclear-powered engine was stopped and the power unit was effectively" turned off during the accident, the agency added in a dispatch from the Soviet Northern Fleet headquarters in Murmansk.

President Bush's national security adviser, Brent Scowcroft, said on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press" that there was no indication of radiation contamination.

U.S. officials have said the vessel, one of the Soviets' most advanced, was capable of carrying more than a dozen long-range missiles in addition to the torpedoes.

The submarine was on its way home from a long voyage when fire broke out in a compartment, the military newspaper Red Star reported Sunday.

Tass said Soviet investigators found no fault with the effort to extinguish the submarine fire.

"According to the opinion of the government commission created to investigate this tragic event, the crew of the submarine acted bravely and intelligently," Tass said.

"The sailors fought for the life of the ship until the last minute, and when the end came they managed to shut down the reactor and guarantee full radioactive safety," it said.

The closest rescue ship was the fishing vessel Alexei Khlobystov, which "picked up rafts with frozen, but still living submariners. On board, they were given initial medical help. Then they were transferred to a military ship, which took them to the hospital," Tass said.

Members of the government commission have been allowed to see the survivors in their Murmansk hospital beds, Tass said.

The Soviets officially informed Norway of the accident nearly nine hours after the vessel went down. The Norwegian news agency NTB claimed Norwegian rescue helicopters could have reached the ship several hours before Soviet fishing vessels if the Soviets had promptly asked for help.

Soviet officials were criticized for not providing accurate and timely information after the 1986 explosion and fire at the Chernobyl nuclear power plant. That incident sent a cloud of radiation into the atmosphere that contaminated crops and livestock in Europe.

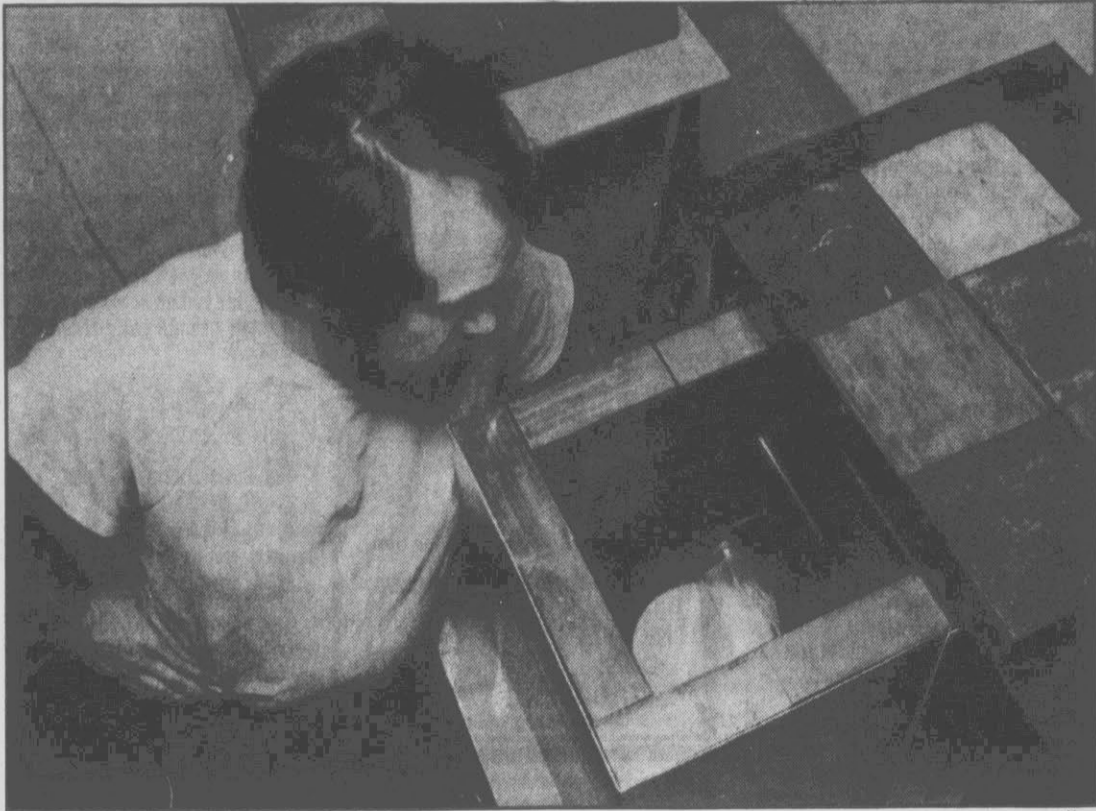

In Oslo, Norway, Defense Ministry spokesman Erik Senstad told a news conference the Soviets declined help from helicopters at a Norwegian rescue base 370 miles away. He refused to say if more sailors could have been saved had the Soviets accepted the offer.

Friday's sinking came five months after a reported near-meltdown in a nuclear reactor aboard a Soviet icebreaker in Murmansk. According to the newspaper Vodyny Transport, a worker drained vital cooling water from an operating reactor rather than one that was shut down for repairs.

Had the water drained 30 minutes longer, a meltdown releasing radiation into the air over the city of 440,000 would have occurred, the newspaper said. The "situation was liquidated" in four minutes, the newspaper said.

In October 1986, three sailors died in a fire and explosion aboard a nuclear-powered submarine in the Atlantic Ocean. That vessel was armed with ballistic missiles.

Forces Trade Artillery Fire

By Rima Salameh
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Christian gunners traded sporadic artillery fire with Syrian forces and Druse allies around Beirut today, and an official said a lack of fuel could halt all electric service to the capital.

Police said there were no casualty reports from the bombardment, which defied a cease-fire called Wednesday by the Arab League to halt the worst civil war fighting in four years.

The clashes, which broke out March 8, have killed 178 people and wounded 604, by police count. The fighting also has devastated power plants, fuel reserve tanks and water pipelines.

The confrontation exacerbated a political crisis that created competing Christian and Moslem governments and further split the army on sectarian lines.

Gen. Michel Aoun leads the Christian government in addition to commanding the 20,000-strong Christian army. The Christian forces are battling an alliance of 7,000 Druse militiamen and Syrian soldiers. Syria has 40,000 troops in Lebanon, most of them in the eastern Bekaa Valley.

Despite the cease-fire, both sides have maintained intermittent firing and air, sea and land blockades.

The main power plant at east Beirut's Christian suburb of Zouk has run out of oil and could stop generating electricity for greater Beirut "within hours," said Mitri Nammur, director-general of the Beirut Electricity Authority.

Syrian and Druse rockets and mortars have hit Zouk beach, preventing fuel tankers from docking. Power has been cut back to one hour a day.

Lebanon's latest political crisis began Sept. 22, when Parliament could not agree on a successor to President Amin Gemayel at the end of his six-year term and Gemayel named Aoun to head an interim government.

Moslems rejected the appointment and swore allegiance to Salim Hoss, the Sunni Moslem premier who led the government during Gemayel's administration.

Under an unwritten national covenant dating to independence from France in 1943, Lebanon's president is a Christian, the premier a Sunni Moslem and the Parliament speaker a Shiite Moslem.

Dead Korean Student Mourned

By Kelly Tunney
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEOUL, South Korea — Friends and family paid homage today to a student who died after setting himself on fire and shouting "Yankees go home!" to protest the U.S. presence in South Korea.

About 800 classmates humming a funeral dirge and wearing black ribbons followed the grieving family of Nam Tae-hyun in a funeral cadence across the campus of Seoul National Teacher's College in southern Seoul.

As the family sobbed, eight student pallbearers carried the coffin to a lecture room for a ceremony in advance of Wednesday's funeral.

Nam, a 24-year-old senior majoring in ethics, died Saturday from burns after he doused himself with paint thinner and gasoline.

Choe Song-ho, 24, said he was on his way to a student rally when he heard a voice shouting from a classroom "Yankee go home!" "Drive out U.S. imperialists!" and "Peaceful unification!"

He said he found Nam in flames. The student died at a hospital a few hours later.

Students who accompanied him to the hospital said they asked why he burned himself and he replied, "For independence of the fatherland. For peace. For unification (with North Korea)."

"Let's inherit the patriot's will," said a statement released at a rally today. "He took his own life to protest suppression of democracy and the desire by the masses for unification. Drive out the Yankees!"

Anti-American sentiment is high among students and dissidents who claim the 43,000 U.S. troops stationed in South Korea under a mutual defense pact hamper talks on unifying the peninsula, divided since 1945.

Police said Nam left a suicide note that said "Fellow students, rise up for independence, democracy and unification of the fatherland."

Of about three dozen student and dissident suicides since 1980, about half have been by self-immolation.

The Seoul Student Federation, a radical group, says three students committed suicide last year, one by self-immolation.

In the previous two years, when students were pressing for democratic elections to end the oppressive rule of Chun Doo-hwan, 12 students burned themselves to death.

He Eschews Brimstone, Eats Fire

By Greg Smith
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CLARENCE, Iowa — The Rev. Tom Biatek says he doesn't preach fire and brimstone sermons. But he does enjoy eating fire.

"I don't fit the stereotype of a minister, and I'm very pleased about that," Biatek said. "I guess I'm just a non-traditional person in a very traditional role."

Biatek, of the United Methodist Church of Clarence, learned how to be a fire-eater three years ago at the Pacific School of Religion seminary in Berkeley, Calif.

Fire-eating was part of a class offered that also included juggling and story-telling. The story-telling he finds useful in his sermons, particularly to children, but "I never got the hang of juggling."

Biatek, 26, minister at the Clarence church since graduating from the Theological Center seminary in San Anselmo, Calif., has yet to perform his specialty before his congregation of 193 people.

"I've done it for the youth group and the 4-H and for the Christmas carolers last Christmas, but I haven't done it in church. I guess I'm afraid that something would go wrong. If something did go wrong, that would kind of upset the worship service a bit," he said.

But with Pentecost Sunday coming up May 14, Biatek may change his mind.

"I might do it then. It's the most appropriate day. It would be a good thing because that's when Jesus appeared to the disciples and put the tongues of fire over each of them," he said.

Along with fire-eating, Biatek learned how to do a "Dragon's Breath," which is exactly what is sounds like: breathing the fire in from a torch and spitting the flames back out.

"I love cheap magic tricks," he said, laughing. "People know me and they know I've got a good sense of humor. I like to laugh and I joke around in the worship service."

"This is one way of celebrating life and doing something unusual," he said. "No, I'm not a fire and brimstone preacher — that's too guilt-laden. I look at worship in church and what I preach and the Bible as celebrating life."

In college, Biatek said, he took one course per semester "that I could just have fun in." His transcripts include courses in astronomy, harmonica playing and white-water rafting.

"I want to parachute this year, but my wife is against it, although I think she's giving in," Biatek said. "My dream is to be on the Johnny Carson show or to meet David Letterman."

Biatek admits fire-eating is "just one of those odd things."

"But you know what? There were 12 others in my class at that seminary school who learned how to eat fire. So if they'll just come forward now."

'Arty' Furniture Steps Into Popularity

By Barbara Mayer
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

When it went out of fashion in the 1920s, bulky "arts and crafts" furniture of quarter-sawn oak was relegated to the attic.

Now it is coming out of the attic and showing up in antique stores and auction houses.

At the April furniture market in North Carolina, arts and crafts furniture takes another step to mainstream popularity. Reproductions of Gustav and Leopold Stickley's arts and crafts originals are being introduced by Alfred Audi, who owns the Stickley company. The 30-piece collection should reach retail stores by fall.

Stickley's widow in 1974. Audi says a dining chair reproduction will be $900, compared with $23,000 recently paid for an original. "We will sell a china cabinet for $4,600; an original went for about $18,000," he says.

Other pieces include a bed, a grandfather clock, dining and occasional tables, a settee and a Morris chair. All will be available in a dark finish typical of Gustav's early pieces and a lighter finish favored later by Leopold and Gustav.

A record price of $363,000 for a piece of arts and crafts furniture was paid at Christie's in New York last December when Barbra Streisand topped the bidding for a hotly contested sideboard designed by Gustav Stickley.

Previous record prices were in the $85,000 range, and Christie's presale estimate for the sideboard was $70,000 to $90,000.

Nancy A. McClelland, vice president of 19th- and 20th-century decorative arts for Christie's, says Stickley has been one of the hottest names in American furniture for at least five years, and the full range of decorative arts of the period is popular among the country's well-heeled collectors. Christie's is among several auction houses with regular sales in the category.

Beth Cathers, co-author of "Treasures of The American Arts and Crafts Movement," says there are several reasons for interest in the style: It is coming of age because it's almost 100 years old, and it still costs far less than top-level pieces of comparable quality from earlier periods.

"People can enjoy collecting at a high level for prices that are relatively reasonable compared to other top quality-material," she says.

Another reason for its popularity, Cathers believes, is because the designs are more appealing to a modern sensibility than the ornate pieces of the late Victorian period.

There were five Stickley brothers, all in the furniture business over the years either on their own or with various family members. According to McClelland, furniture bearing the L. & J.G. Stickley or Gustav Stickley name is by far the most collectible.

"On the whole, most people would prefer Gustav," she says. "The most interesting period for L. & J.G. was from 1908 to 1920. For Gustav Stickley, the greatest emphasis is on work from 1900 to 1905."

Gustav's role as the most influential person in the American arts and crafts movement and as originator of the Craftsman magazine makes his the more important name.

Memory Of Beloved Dog Inspires Prayer For Care

Dear Abby: I cannot tell you how thrilled I was when I read your column in The Desert Sun (Palm Springs, Calif.) and saw the piece titled "In Memory of Beau." It must have been sent to you by one of your readers without the name of the author — me! Abby, I wrote that piece in 1948. The story behind it:

I held my beloved pet in my arms while the vet gave her a merciful needle. I made an awful fool of myself in the vet's office, but it was the last service I could provide a pet so dear to my heart. I had picked her up at a sad time in my life during a Reno snowstorm in 1935. For the next 13 years she was my constant companion, until she became so sick and feeble I could not bear to see her suffer for another day.

After she was put to sleep, the dog's prayer almost wrote itself. And in the show business tradition,

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

God gave me the strength to do my Sunday evening TV show on NBC.

By the way, my dog's name was Skippy, but somewhere along the way, someone titled my piece "In Memory of Beau." I purposely did not use Skippy's name because I wanted this to be a dog's prayer — anybody's dog. And whether I receive credit or not doesn't matter; it gives me more satisfaction than I can express to imagine how many readers of your column may be helped by my words.

The version you published is quite good — I have no complaints — but I am enclosing the original piece, just for you, Abby, exactly as I wrote it. — Beth Harris, Palm Springs, Calif.

Dear Beth: I was delighted to receive your letter, and very much appreciated receiving the original version of your piece. But it's not just for me. It deserves to be published for everyone, exactly as you wrote it. And here it is:

A Dog's Prayer
by Beth Norman Harris

Treat me kindly, my beloved master, for no heart in all the world is more grateful for kindness than the loving heart of me.

Do not break my spirit with a stick, for though I should lick your hand between the blows, your patience and understanding will more quickly teach me the things you would have me do.

Speak to me often, for your voice is the world's sweetest music, as you must know by the fierce wagging of my tail when your footstep falls upon my waiting ear.

When it is cold and wet, please take me inside ... for I am now a domesticated animal, no longer used to bitter elements ... and I ask no greater glory than the privilege of sitting at your feet beside the hearth ... though had you no home, I would rather follow you through ice and snow than rest upon the softest pillow in the warmest home in all the land ... for you are my god ... and I am your devoted worshiper.

Keep my pan filled with fresh water, for although I should not reproach you were it dry, I cannot tell you when I suffer thirst. Feed me clean food, that I may stay well, to romp and play and do your bidding, to walk by your side, and stand ready, willing and able to protect you with my life, should your life be in danger.

And, beloved master, should the Great Master see fit to deprive me of my health or sight, do not turn me away from you. Rather hold me gently in your arms as skilled hands grant me the merciful boon of eternal rest ... and I will leave you knowing with the last breath I drew, my fate was ever safest in your hands.

Dear Readers: Apropos placing one's severely retarded child in a "home," read "Rough Road Home" by Melissa Mather. (The book, published in paperback, is available for $9.95, plus $1 for postage and handling, from Paul S. Ericksson, Middlebury, Vt. 05753.) It's a true and truly moving story of one woman's courage under adversity. I read it twice and loved it.

Abortion Rights Activists Lobby In D.C.

 Either way, the turnout was higher than the 90,000 people who gathered for a March 1986 abortion rights rally in Washington and the numbers that the rally's organizers had predicted.
 "It's a turning point. It's a totally new ball game," Smeal said. "It's given us the confidence that we are the majority."
 Claiming newfound political clout, abortion rights activists are meeting today with members of Congress to lobby aggressively for support of the 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision.
 Their main focus, however, is the Supreme Court, which will hear arguments April 26 in a Missouri case that pro-choice and anti-abortion forces agree could significantly alter the ruling that gave women the right to an abortion.
 "I don't think they can miss this huge outpouring," Yard said of the court.

 College students by the busloads, mothers with babies in tow, members of Congress and even activists from as far away as Australia marched down Constitution Avenue, chanting "Choice, Choice, Choice," or "Not the church, not the state, women must decide our fate."
 They carried purple, white and yellow banners — colors of the women's suffrage movement — that said "Members of Congress for Choice," "Brooklyn Women's Political Caucus," and the names of various other groups in attendance.
 Emerging from anonymity was Norma McCorvey, better known as the Jane Roe of the Roe vs. Wade decision. The Texas woman, who only recently has given speeches to small audiences and was visibly shaken by reporters' questions, said she attended the rally because "our law's in jeopardy."

 Some of the marchers wore coat hangers on their clothing or their heads, a reference to the often deadly self-abortion technique used before the procedure was legalized.
 "We said people would turn out if they thought anything could happen to Roe vs. Wade. And they did," Yard said.
 At the start of the march, the abortion rights activists exchanged taunts with about 200 to 300 anti-abortion demonstrators along the march route. The group was held back by police on horseback.
 The anti-abortion activists set up a symbolic "Cemetery of the Innocents" on the Washington Mall containing 4,400 white wooden crosses and Stars of David. According to organizers, the number represents the unborn children killed daily since the Supreme Court legalized abortion. Participants in the abortion rights rally said they were there because they fear a reversal of Roe vs. Wade.

 "We're scared," said Ellen Davidson, a Yale University junior from Hewlett, N.Y., because "we're coming to the realization that the thing we've taken for granted can be taken away."
 Gloria Steinem, a pioneer in the women's rights movement, likened the "fundamental question of reproductive freedom" to freedom of speech.
 "If we go back before where we were in 1973, it's exactly like saying freedom of speech is up to state legislatures," Steinem said.

Agreements OK'd

 bankruptcy laws March 9, five days after the walkout began.
 Eastern since the strike has been seeking court orders requiring the pilots to return to work. A federal district judge in Miami was scheduled to issue a ruling on the request today, but his office said the judge had granted a request from Eastern and the pilots union that he not issue the decision today.
 The weekend talks were held under the guidance of attorney David Shapiro, who is serving as court-appointed examiner of the airline under an order issued by the bankruptcy court.
 While union officials said they believed they could come to terms with the Ueberroth group, they expressed concerns about its plans for the carrier.
 Union officials also questioned statements by Texas Air Chairman Frank Lorenzo that Eastern could be operating within 24 hours of completion of the sale to Ueberroth.
 Eastern has been flying a skeleton schedule since the IAM walkout.
 Officials from two of the unions, noting that the majority of Eastern's planes have been grounded for more than a month, said it would take some time to inspect them.

 They also said it would be foolish and costly to restore a full schedule immediately because Eastern, already carrying a heavy debt, would have few passengers in the days immediately following resumption of service.
 In a related matter, Texas Air said it filed suit Friday against Trans World Airlines Inc., charging that the rival carrier and its owner, takeover expert Carl Icahn, had interfered illegally in the talks between Ueberroth and the unions.
 TWA and Icahn responded in a statement Sunday that the suit was "frivolous."
 "The contacts I had with Eastern unions were initiated by their request that I become involved," Icahn said. "I did not realize that I needed permission from (Texas Air Chairman) Frank Lorenzo to take phone calls from people I consider my friends."
 Icahn also said he did not make any competing offer to the unions or a creditors committee, which must approve any sale of the airline, and that he would not do so unless Ueberroth's offer falls through.

 The Walker and Hall cars both ran off the roadway on the right, according to Sinclair. The Walker car swerved back across the highway and struck the van, while the Hall car swerved back onto the highway and struck the Walker car.
 Sinclair said Campbell swerved his pickup truck off the roadway to avoid the collision in front of him and struck a mail box.
 According to Sinclair, Walker and a passenger in his car, as well as Hall and a passenger in the Hall car were injured, as were Davis and the four other Greenville Residents — James Vincent, 48, of Pittman Drive, Mark Angle, 33, of Upton Court, Ernest Ray Loftin, 23, of Route 13, Greenville, and William Barnes Ellington Jr., 32, of Jennifer Place.
 Vincent, Angel and Ellington were still confined to the Duplin County Hospital in Kenansville this morning.
 Sinclair, who said Hall was charged with reckless driving and driving left of center, estimated damage to the Davis van at $10,000, set damage to the Walker car at $9,000, estimated damage to the Hall car at $12,000 and placed damage to the Campbell truck at $200.
 Sinclair's supervisor, 1st Sgt. W.M. Autry, said charges would also be brought against Walker, who was taken to the U.S. Naval Hospital at Camp Lejeune for treatment.

trooper T.A. Sinclair said a van driven by Davis, and a truck operated by Raymond Scott Campbell of Route 1, Beulaville, were traveling north on N.C. 41, while cars driven by Robert Walker of Camp Lejeune and Sherman E. Hall of Camp Lejeune, were headed south on the highway at a high rate of speed.

Azalea Festival

WILMINGTON (AP) — A crowd estimated at 50,000 came Sunday to see activities at the 1989 Azalea Festival, including air stunts featuring the Air Force's precision flying team, the Thunderbirds.
 An Air Force KC-10 aerial refueling plane and a Coast Guard C-130 search and rescue aircraft attracted long lines of people anxious for a tour. Radio-controlled model airplanes buzzed the sky with their own sophisticated maneuvers.
 Arriving precisely at 11:30 a.m., the Thunderbirds arrived in their F-16 Fighting Falcons, giving a brief display of rolls and precision formations. Eyes turned skyward as the team performed about 30 minutes of loops, inverted passes, rolls and other precisely timed moves. One of the more spectacular stunts involved four of the planes flying toward one another, crossing paths just in front of the audience.
 The Army 82nd Airborne parachute team, the Golden Knights, also performed, with six jumpers aiming for an X marking the chosen target.
 Some World War II aircraft did formation flying and stunt work to some popular 1940s tunes.

Soldiers Break Rally

 sands of hunger strikers and protesters began pressing demands for independence. Georgian nationalists contend the Russian-dominated Kremlin has encroached on their culture, language, politics and economy.
 Others rallied to protest calls by some residents of a region in Georgia, Abkhazia, to secede from the republic because of alleged discrimination by Georgians against ethnic Abkhazians.
 Taking advantage of President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's policy of openness, several of the country's more than 100 ethnic groups are venting pent-up complaints of discrimination and official insensitivity to local needs.
 In an attempt to prevent future unrest, the central government on Saturday issued a decree making insulting or discrediting the government punishable by up to three years and fines.
 The official Tass news agency said the decree also prohibits appeals to kindling ethnic tensions and racial hostility and appeals to commit treason.
 Georgia is the third southern Soviet republic where authorities have in the past year used troops to quell ethnic disturbances. In November, troops and tanks were sent to Armenia and Azerbaijan, where more than 90 people had died in ethnic violence.
 Independence activists called a general strike today to protest Sunday's killings, but it was unclear if there was full compliance in Tbilisi, a city of 1.2 million people about 1,100 miles southeast of Moscow.

 "No one is going to work," said Nokri Dzhangarashvili, a student.
 "Everyone but doctors and breadmakers are on strike," said a visitor at the central hospital who refused to give his name. "There is no transport. All stores are closed except food stores. Factories are closed."
 Gerasimov said most businesses were working but that some opened late because young people disrupted public transport and delayed people going to work. He confirmed that colleges were closed because of the strike.
 Police arrested at least six prominent Georgian activists during the weekend and had a list of 30 others they were seeking, said Nanuli Gogua, whose daughter Irina Sarishvili was among those taken into custody by the KGB.
 The Foreign Ministry said that Tbilisi was closed to foreign correspondents as well as any Soviets reporting for Western news organizations.
 Authorities imposed an 11 p.m.-6 a.m. curfew on Sunday after the violence.
 Tass said the soldiers followed orders not to use their weapons Sunday but that "extremists" resisted with rocks, sticks and pieces of metal and that "their actions caused a crush in the crowd and as a result, 16 people died."
 Tass said the 100 people injured included 75 soldiers and policemen.

Tough Going At Masters

By Hal Bock
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUGUSTA, Ga. — For four days, the finest golfers in the world battled merciless conditions, chasing the cherished green jacket emblematic of the Masters champion.

And in the end, they won. Not only Nick Faldo, who took the championship from Scott Hoch in a two-hole playoff, but all of them.

It started with wind, gusts up to 25 mph blowing first this way and then that. One moment they'd be in your face, demanding your attention. The next moment they'd be at your back, seeming to shove you along.

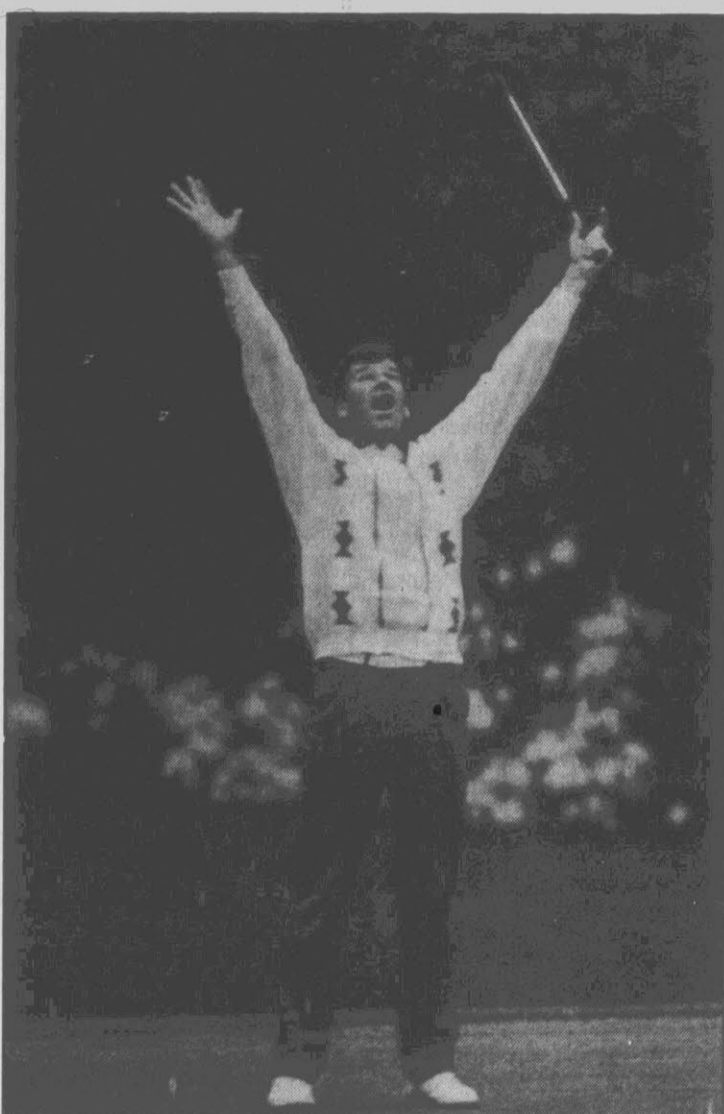

They whistled through the pine trees that line the fairways at Augusta National, playing havoc with almost every shot.

That was Friday. Then it progressed to rain, a cold, mean drizzle at first and then a full-fledged lightning and thunder storm that forced play to be halted.

That was Saturday. Then it turned into an old-fashioned downpour, the kind of rain they call a gully-washer, that turned the course into one big water hazard.

And that was Sunday. There was casual water, standing water, any kind of water you might want in this lush setting. It was great for a swimming meet but not exactly ideal for the Masters.

Faldo Captures Masters

Long Putt On Second Playoff Hole Claims Victory

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUGUSTA, Ga. — It was the greatest road victory in Nick Faldo's life.

"To come and win in America, to be honest, is a little bit harder," Faldo said. "I'm a foreigner. I play an away game every week."

Fighting an emotional battle with himself on a rain-soaked Sunday at Augusta National, Faldo sank a 25-foot putt in the dark on the second hole of a sudden-death playoff to beat luckless Scott Hoch and capture the 53rd Masters championship.

The 31-year-old from Surrey, England, overcame a five-shot deficit in the final round, shooting a 7-under-par 65 that put him in the clubhouse at 5-under 283 about an hour before Hoch closed with a 69.

Hoch missed two opportunities to make this the first major championship of his life.

He missed winning outright in regulation when he bogeyed the 17th hole.

He had the coveted title in his grasp on the first playoff hole, No. 10, when he faced a two-foot putt for a par.

"I said, this is for the marbles," Hoch said. "I wasn't nervous over it. I felt at ease all day long. I thought this must be my time."

It wasn't. The little two-foot putt curled away at the last second. He made the four-footer coming back to match Faldo's bogey.

"It was something I just could not believe," he said. "It was just a poor effort on my part. Between my brain and my hand, it didn't get the message. It got criss-crossed."

"You just stand there and watch," Faldo said of Hoch's putt. "I thought, he's opened the door for me."

It did, enabling Faldo to erase the memory of losing an 18-hole playoff to Curtis Strange in last year's U.S. Open.

He finished second in seven other tournaments worldwide last year, including playoff losses in the Barcelona Open and the Benson and Hedges International.

Faldo said his playoff experience was to his advantage. Hoch had never made a playoff. Two years ago Hoch had a six-footer to win the PGA, but three-putted and didn't even make the playoff.

"I felt relaxed," Faldo said. "I've been here. I've had this situation before. I can handle it. I've experienced the pressure of the majors, and the pressure of playoffs in majors."

The victory, his 18th worldwide, was worth $200,000. It gave him a second major title. He won the British Open two years ago.

Faldo's 25-foot winning putt on the 11th green ended another dramatic Masters finish and a round of exceptional golf in horrid conditions.

Six different players led or shared the lead in the final 18 holes — Ben Crenshaw, Mike Reid, Seve Ballesteros, Greg Norman and the two playoff competitors.

Crenshaw, who led the rain-delayed third round that was completed earlier Sunday, could have made it a three-way playoff, but bogeyed the 72nd hole and finished at 71-284.

Reid had a one-shot lead after 13, then saw his game collapse with a bogey on 14, double bogey on 15 and another bogey on 18 to finish with a 72, dropping him into sixth place at 286.

Norman, finishing much earlier than the others, put together consecutive birdies on 15, 16 and 17 to share the lead, then bogeyed the final hole for a 67 to share third with Crenshaw and miss the playoff by one shot.

Ballesteros, a two-time Masters winner, was tied for the lead at the turn. He bogeyed No. 10. Later he caught the water on No. 16 for a double bogey-5 that ended his hopes of becoming only the third player in Masters history to win three titles in a decade.

Pirates Sweep 2 From Spiders

RICHMOND — East Carolina kept hopes alive to win the regular season championship in the Colonial Athletic Association by sweeping a pair of games from Richmond Sunday.

The Pirates had to go extra innings in the first game before taking a 5-4 win. In the second game, ECU jumped out to an early lead and won 5-1.

The Pirates, 25-2 overall and 11-1 in the CAA have now tied a school record with 15 consecutive wins. Richmond is now 11-18 and 4-8.

The last time the Pirates won 15 straight was in 1986 when the team won its opening 15 games. ECU will have a chance to break the record Wednesday on the road against Virginia.

By sweeping the Richmond series, the Pirates three-game series with league-leading UNC-Wilmington this weekend will determine the regular season champion. The Pirates and Seahawks will play a doubleheader Saturday beginning at 6 p.m. and a single game on Sunday at 1 p.m.

In the first game Sunday, Richmond jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the third inning. Dan Paule doubled to lead off the inning. Robert Reid then walked setting up a Steve Burton single that scored Paule and moved Reid to third. Reid then scored on a Jordan Matter sacrifice fly.

ECU came back with a big fifth inning to take a 4-2 lead. David Ritchie walked to start off the inning.

Price Fouls Hornets Out

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RICHFIELD, Ohio — Mark Price figured he was doing his job as long as the whistle kept blowing.

"I penetrated a lot today and I was able to get a lot of fouls that way. I'll take those freebies any time I can get them," Price said Sunday after he made all 18 of his free throws and scored 35 points in the Cleveland Cavaliers' 122-116 victory over the Charlotte Hornets.

Price set a Cleveland record for most free throws made in a game and was one shy of the NBA record for most free throws in a game without a miss. Bob Pettit, Bill Cartwright and Adrian Dantley share the record at 19-for-19.

The Cavaliers outscored the Hornets 42-19 at the line. All five Charlotte starters had at least four fouls at the end.

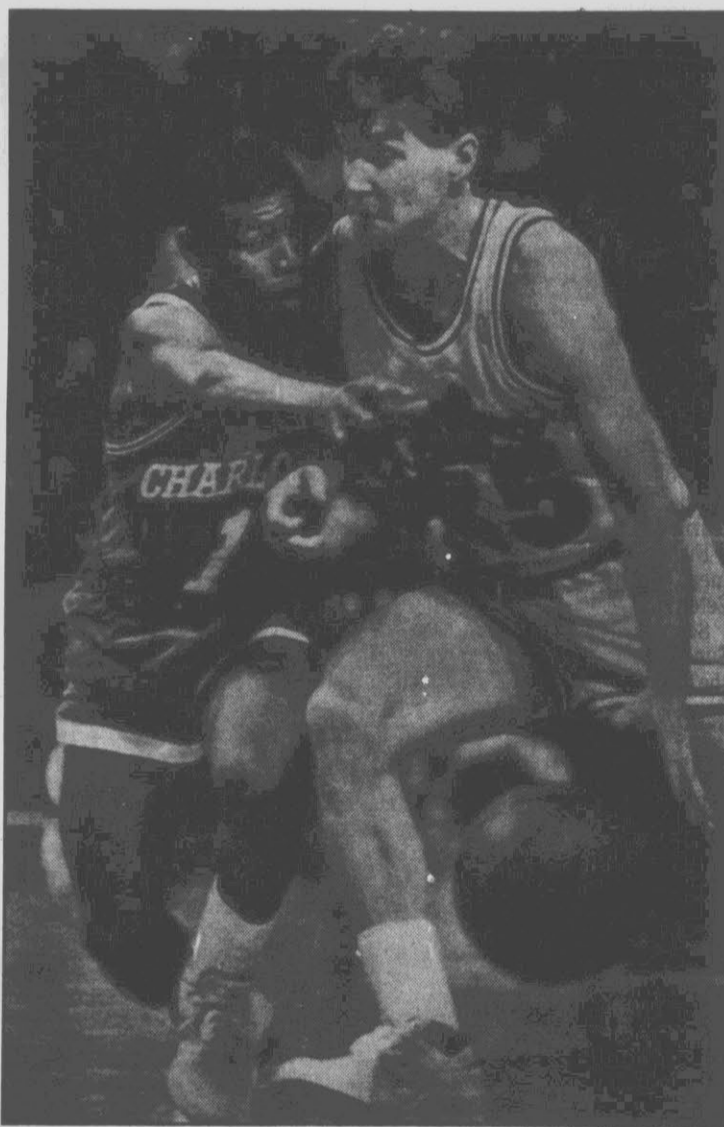

"They were calling it real tight and we got into some foul trouble," Charlotte's Rex Chapman said. "We played well, though, despite the foul trouble, but we just couldn't get the breaks down the stretch."

The Hornets, who led 70-61 at the half, trailed 95-91 after the Cavaliers outshot them 16-2 at the foul line in the third quarter. Cleveland took 22 foul shots during the period, to Charlotte's four.

Cleveland didn't put the game away, however, until Price drew two defenders to himself and then passed to Brad Daugherty, whose dunk and free throw put the Cavaliers ahead 120-114 with 15 seconds left.

Daugherty had 22 points and 15 rebounds and Ron Harper scored 21 for Cleveland. Kelly Tripucka

Blue Increases Stock At Portsmouth Event

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

East Carolina's Blue Edwards brought home high marks from his first test in front of National Basketball Association scouts this past week at the Portsmouth Invitational Tournament.

The PIT, a four-day event that showcases some of the top seniors in college basketball, afforded Edwards, the Colonial Athletic Association Player Of The Year, an opportunity to play in the backcourt against top competition.

His team, which included Duke's John Smith, DePaul's Stanley Brundy and South Alabama's Jeff Hodge, lost in the Consolation finals, but Edwards totaled 44 points in three games, an average of just under 14 points a game.

The tournament was a chance for Edwards to concentrate solely on playing the two-guard position. He spent the majority of his career at ECU in the front court, but at 6-5, his future in the professional ranks is in the backcourt.

"I like it," he said of the big-guard position. "I was able to take advantage of some of the guys, like Scott Haffner of Evansville in the last game. I played better when John Smith was in there setting screens."

"I felt like it was a solid performance. Going in, I didn't feel like I had to score 30 points a game. I just wanted to show them I could blend in well with talent, play defense and handle the ball," he added.

In past years, the PIT has afforded players like Edwards, who scored 26 points a game this past season, an opportunity to make a name for themselves in preparation for the NBA draft. Unlike many of the All-Star games shown on TV, this event invites players from all levels of college basketball.

Last year, Dan Majerle of Central Michigan came in as an unknown quantity, but ended up leading his team to the championship by scoring 68 points in three games. Majerle went on to earn a berth on the United States Olympic team and was a first-round selection of the Phoenix Suns.

Buc Seniors Honored At Awards Banquet

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Three seniors for the East Carolina basketball team were honored for leading the Pirates to their first winning season in six years at the ECU 1989 Basketball Awards Banquet Sunday.

Blue Edwards, Jeff Kelly and Kenny Murphy, the cornerstones of the Bucs' 15-14 squad this past year, were praised by their coaches for their accomplishments.

Edwards, who was the Colonial Athletic Association Player of the Year, was selected as the Most Valuable Player, Offensive Player of the Year and Outstanding Rebounder.

"I don't think it's a big secret who gets these awards," assistant coach Chris Benetti said when announcing Edwards' three honors.

"I think we all know what Theodore 'Blue' Edwards means to the program. He went through a lot of tough times. He sure came out of it about the best he could ever come out of it. Blue did everything we asked and more."

Murphy, a former walk-on, was named the Outstanding Freethrow Shooter and Defensive Player of the Year.

"He's big in his heart," assistant coach Scott Lewis said while honoring Murphy. "This gentleman has come along so far. He was an intramural legend, and we gave him a scholarship."

"When we saw him, we said Kenny was too skinny, he had an ugly shot and big feet for a guy with his frame. We were quick to say that we were wrong in that decision."

Junior Reed Lose was the winner of the coach's award.

"It's a special award," graduate assistant Griff Mills said of the award to Lose. "It goes to a person who gets things done on the floor, that does a lot of the dirty work that needs to be done. The person who gets this award this year had to play guard, forward and center and he did a great job. The 1989 coaches award goes to Reed Lose."

The Pirates went 8-20 two seasons ago with a team that included no seniors. But the Pirates improved vastly this year and

ECU Softball Team Falls In Finals

COLUMBIA — South Carolina used a strong third-inning push to key a 4-0 shutout win over East Carolina in the finals of the South Carolina Invitational Softball Tournament Sunday.

The Lady Gamecocks pushed across three runs in the bottom of the third to break a scoreless tie. They added another run in the sixth to complete the scoring.

ECU won two games in the event, topping Georgia Southern and Georgia State in the tournament and fell to the Lady Gamecocks twice.

In the first win over Georgia Southern Saturday, ECU took a 14-0 victory by scoring 13 runs in the second inning. Chris Byrne had a three-run homer and Donna Weller and Mickey Ford each added a double to key the inning.

ECU then fell to USC, 5-1, before coming back Sunday with a 5-4 win over Georgia State. ECU then defeated Georgia State, 3-1, to advance to the finals.

ECU Finishes 11th In Tar Heel Event

CHAPEL HILL — East Carolina's golf team finished 11th at the Tar Heel Invitational Sunday with a two-day total of 781.

Duke, led by medalist John Karcher's 137 total, won the event with a team total of 729, followed by UNC (739), Virginia Commonwealth (750) and East Tennessee State (751).

ECU was led by John Maginnes' 152. Tee Davies, Greg Powell and Frances Vaughn all totaled 158. John Chapman had a 159 and Simon Moye added a 160.

ECU returns to action April 15-17 at the Colonial Athletic Association Championship. The Pirates have won the event the last two years.

Blount Catches TD Pass In Scrimmage

CHAPEL HILL — Aaron Staples ran for 114 yards and Jonathan Hall passed for 133 yards and a touchdown to Eric Blount to highlight the action in North Carolina's spring football scrimmage.

Staples, a senior, carried the ball 20 times and scored once Saturday on a two-yard run. Hall, also a senior, completed 12 of 20 passes and hit Blount, a former standout at Ayden-Grifton, on a 35-yard touchdown play. Michael Benefield scored on a pair of short touchdown runs and Cannon Watson kicked a 40-yard field goal.

Graf Rolls To Family Circle Win

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Top-seeded Steffi Graf rolled over fourth-seeded Natalia Zvereva 6-1, 6-1 Sunday to win her third Family Circle Magazine Cup tennis tournament.

The world's No. 1 player, who defeated Zvereva 6-0, 6-0 in the French Open final last year, had nearly as easy a day Sunday, needing less than an hour to claim the first prize of $60,000 on the clay courts at Sea Pines Racquet Club. Zvereva, of the Soviet Union, earned $24,000.

PCC Falls To Surry Community College

BURLINGTON — Surry Community College broke open a tight game with six runs in the third en route to a 9-3 college softball win over Pitt Community College Sunday.

PCC went ahead 2-0 after the top of the first when Kim Bridges singled in Jolie Harrell. Donna Beacham then singled in Bridges.

But Surry came back with a run in the first and two in the second to tie the game, 3-3. The six-run third then allowed Surry to take the win.

Fisher To Be Named Michigan Coach

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Steve Fisher, who in 20 remarkable days guided Michigan to the NCAA basketball championship, will be named coach of the Wolverines at a news conference Monday, The Associated Press learned Sunday.

Fisher, who took over for Bill Frieder on the eve of the NCAA Tournament, guided his team to the national title with a 80-79 overtime victory over Seton Hall.

Sources close to the team, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, said Sunday that Fisher was the only candidate interviewed by Bo Schembechler, the football coach who also is athletic director.

Rizzo Claims Inamori Classic Title

POWAY, Calif. (AP) — Patti Rizzo overcame three bogeys with five birdies for a 69 Sunday and a victory by two strokes in the $300,000 LPGA Inamori Classic.

Rizzo, who earned $45,000 in her fourth victory in seven years on the women's tour, had a 7-under-par 277 total on the StoneRidge Country Club course.

USA Cup Team Sweeps Past France

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Andre Agassi and John McEnroe scored straight-set victories Sunday to complete a United States sweep over France in the Davis Cup World Group quarterfinals.

Agassi beat Yannick Noah 6-3, 7-6 (9-7) and McEnroe downed Henri Leconte 6-3, 6-1 to give the United States a 5-0 victory.

The victory moved the United States into the semifinals against defending champion West Germany, which beat Czechoslovakia 3-2. West Germany will host the semifinal series in Dortmund July 21-23.

Triple Play Aids Padres' 5-4 Win

By Jim Donaghy
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Runners on first and second, nobody out in the bottom of the eighth inning. Easy, pitcher Eric Show thought; just get a triple play, guys.

And that's just what the San Diego Padres did Sunday to hold on to a 5-4 victory over the Houston Astros.

"We called the triple play," said Show, who had been relieved by Mark Davis to start the inning. "At first I said nothing funky please. But I was talking to Greg Booker, (Dennis) Rasmussen and (Bruce) Hurst, and they said think positive, so I said you're right, and then I said 5-u (unassisted), 4-3, and then we all started to chant 5u-4-3."

With Kevin Bass on second and Greg Gross on first, Ken Caminiti hit a grounder to third baseman Luis Salazar who threw to Alomar at second, forcing Gross. Alomar threw to Jack Clark at first to get Caminiti for the second out.

Bass then broke for home and Clark threw to catcher Mark Parent, who tagged out the Houston outfielder.

"The triple play didn't exactly happen that way, but who cares? It was close enough..." Show said.

"I knew he (Bass) was coming so I just dove to cover the plate," Parent said. "I had looked to see if Jack saw him. I was looking at Jack, and when he threw to me, I knew he was coming."

"It looked like he was running and he didn't know how many outs there were. It may have been the ugliest triple play of the year. I had the ball in my bare hand, and he (Bass) slid into my hand."

Mets 2, Expos 1
Kevin Elster doubled home the tie-breaking run with one out in the ninth inning and Dwight Gooden allowed three hits over eight at Olympic Stadium.

Andy McGaffigan, who had just entered the game in relief of Dennis Martinez, walked Gary Carter to open the ninth. Len Dykstra, pinch running, was sacrificed to second and Elster hit a drive into center field.

Gooden, 2-0, has a 15-2 record in 21 career starts in April. Randy Myers struck out the side in the ninth for his first save.

Giants 9, Reds 1
Matt Williams hit a grand slam for his first hit of the season, snapping an 0-for-14 slump, as San Francisco beat Cincinnati at Riverfront Stadium.

Will Clark singled with two out in the first and Kevin Mitchell hit an apparent inning-ending fly to left-center field. But outfielders Eric Davis and Kal Daniels let the ball fall between them. It bounced over the wall for a ground-rule double, with Clark stopping at third.

Cardinals 15, Phillies 3
Pedro Guerrero and Jose Oquendo drove in four runs each to pace a 19-hit attack as St. Louis routed Philadelphia at Veterans Stadium.

St. Louis had not scored as many runs since a 15-5 victory over Montreal on June 27, 1987. It was the most runs against the Phillies since a 15-6 loss to Los Angeles on Aug. 21, 1985.

Cubs 8, Pirates 3
Rick Sutcliffe pitched a seven-hitter and fanned 11 as Chicago completed a three-game sweep over Pittsburgh at Wrigley Field.

Dodgers 4, Braves 2
Pinch-hitter Mickey Hatcher and Willie Randolph each hit a sacrifice fly in the 12th inning to lift visiting Los Angeles over Atlanta.

John Shelby and Jeff Hamilton hit consecutive singles to open the 12th off reliever Mark Eichhorn, 0-1. Shelby took third on Hamilton's hit and scored on Hatcher's fly to right. Mike Scioscia followed with a single, sending Hamilton to third, before Randolph hit his sacrifice fly to right.

American League

After his first week of games, what's Dallas Green's evaluation of the New York Yankees?

"We stink," he said Saturday night. "What else do you want to know about us?"

New York didn't improve Sunday, losing to Cleveland 4-3. The Indians swept a three-game series at Yankee Stadium for the first time in 23 years.

"We're playing dumb baseball, trying to hit 10-run home runs when you need a base hit," Green said Saturday following an 11-1 loss. "And we pitched like Little Leaguers. You put that all together and you stink."

New York has lost five straight after a season-opening victory at Minnesota and is in last place, 3½ games out. The Yankees have scored just 13 runs in six games.

On Sunday, Tom Candiotti allowed four hits in seven innings and Pete O'Brien hit his first homer of the season.

Orioles 8, Twins 1
Frank Viola, 14-2 in the Metrodome last year, gave up a three-run homer to Randy Milligan and a two-run homer to Cal Ripken and fell to 0-2 in the Metrodome this year.

Viola, last year's American League Cy Young Award winner, earlier this week rejected a three-year $7.9 million contract extension, asking for $8.1 million and threatening to become a free agent after the season. He was greeted warmly when introduced before the game but was booed after allowing the home runs.

He allowed five hits, struck out seven and walked one in six innings. Jeff Ballard pitched a seven-hitter for Baltimore in his first appearance of the season, striking out one and walking none.

Baltimore ended an eight-game road losing streak dating back to a 2-0 victory over Detroit last Sept. 19 and snapped Minnesota's four-game winning streak.

Red Sox 8, Royals 6
Ellis Burks tripled in three runs in a six-run seventh inning and Wade Boggs had four hits as Boston won for the first time this season after four losses.

Rangers 3, Blue Jays 2
Reuben Sierra hit a two-run homer off Tom Henke with one out in the ninth.

Rafael Palmeiro doubled with one out off rookie Tony Castillo, who had relieved John Cerutti in the eighth. Henke, 0-1, came in and Sierra hit his 1-2 pitch into the right field seats.

Athletics 4, White Sox 2
Dave Stewart struck out nine and increased his April record to 8-0 over the last two years. Mark McGwire drove in two runs.

Stewart, 2-0, allowed eight hits, struck out nine and walked one. He has won his last three starts against the White Sox, allowing four earned runs in 28 innings. Dennis Eckersley got the last two outs for his second save.

Angels 13, Mariners 5
Tony Armas and Dante Bichette each hit two-run homers in the first inning and the Angels scored two runs in the second and seven in the third.

The 13 runs exceeded California's total of 12 in its first five games this season.

Wet Masters ...

Consider some of the performances Sunday under conditions more suited for the traditionally wet and windy British Open than the usually peaceful and pastoral Masters.

Six players either led or shared the lead at various times during the final round. Between them, they produced 34 birdies, nearly six each in weather that invited bogeys.

Playing in a rainstorm that rarely let up over the final three hours of the round, the field of 52 golfers averaged a fraction under par, 71.673 for the par-72 course.

Seve Ballesteros had birdies on seven of the first 10 holes he played to take the lead for a while.

Mike Reid surged from 2-under-par to 6-under and nudged to the top of the leader board, too.

Both dropped back when they suffered double bogeys after putting shots in the water. Where else would they have wound up on this wet day?

Appropriately named Jody Mudd started the round at 5-over-par and finished at 1-under, shooting a magnificent 66, the best score of a most difficult day.

Greg Norman started at 1-over and finished at 4-under, coaxing a 67 through the rain.

Ben Crenshaw, who started the day four strokes ahead, staged a dramatic late comeback that nearly caught Faldo and Scott Hoch to force a three-man playoff. He missed it when he bogeyed the 18th hole for a most peculiar reason.

"We battled the weather all week," Crenshaw said, a towel draped around his shoulders.

Edwards Competes At PIT ...

Another player who attracted the notice of scouts last year was Grant Long, a forward from Eastern Michigan who is now a starter for the Miami Heat of the NBA.

"My agents were there and they said I raised my stock," Edwards said. "The opinion I got from the scouts there like Marty Blake was they liked my athletic ability. They said I had a good chance of getting drafted."

And that's saying something because there will be only two rounds in this year's NBA draft.

Edwards scored six points in his first game which his squad lost to a team that included North Carolina's Jeff Lebo and Texas-El Paso's Tim Hardaway.

"We didn't have a chance to practice (beforehand) so it was just pretty much free lance," Edwards said. "I was just trying to show the scouts that I could shoot off a screen. I didn't get the ball with a lot of scoring opportunities. I just tried to make good passes and play good defense. Although I didn't get my shots, Coach Steele said I blended well with the talent. He just said I wasn't aggressive enough."

In the second game, he came back and scored 22 points in a win over a team that included South Carolina's John Hudson, North Carolina's Steve Bucknall and Chris Cheeks of Virginia Commonwealth.

"I missed my first two shots, but I was able to run my man off screens more and hit a couple of perimeter shots," he said. "Duke's John Smith set some good screens for me and he also fed me with some good passes after I knocked it into him. After that, the guys just started to look for me. Overall, I was just more aggressive."

In the third game, Edwards scored 16 points in a loss in the consolation finals to a team that included 7-foot Grady Mateen of Ohio State and Mike Vreeswyk of Temple.

"The way I (had) shot the ball from the outside, guys were getting right up on me, but my teammates were really setting me up and I shot the ball well," Edwards said.

Edwards said Blake informed him that he would probably get invited to the NBA's pre-draft camp in the first week of June.

Regardless, Edwards' agents, William Diamond and William Pollak of Professional Management, said they were sure he would be playing somewhere professionally next year. If not in the NBA, then Europe.

Seniors Honored At ECU Banquet ...

head basketball coach Mike Steele points to the development of his first three seniors at ECU as the reason.

"Every year, there are things you go through, and they either make it a successful season or an unsuccessful season," he said. "This year, after the Radford game, which was a terrible game and we lost at home, we went to Winthrop and won. Our seniors finally found out what we expected from them and how hard they had to work. It was hard for Jeff, Murph and Blue. They were on their own. That was a critical point for us."

"The next critical point was when we went to (George) Mason and really struggled," the coach added. "I got up with the seniors and talked about what we had to do to be successful the rest of the way."

"We went to James Madison and practiced hard the day before the game. We lost, but we played hard. And we went on into the tournament and played extremely well."

The Pirates got hot at the end of the season, winning five of their final seven games and downing American University for their first CAA tournament win ever. The Bucs then fell to eventual champion George Mason.

But Steele said the ending offered hope for the future.

"It's not a pipe dream," he said. "It's a reality. To finish as strong as we did makes me realize we're headed in the right direction."

The three seniors were presented with individual plaques as well as a framed poster-size color picture of themselves in action from earlier this season.

All three seniors took the stand and spoke to the crowd of about 300.

Edwards, after thanking virtually everyone in the room, praised his teammates.

"Offensively, they gave up a lot of themselves for my benefit and they never complained, except for Reed," he joked. "This is the closest team I've ever been on."

Steele credited Jeff Kelly, who broke the season and career assist marks this past year, with hard work and improved play in his final season.

"Last year, you can summarize Jeff's season (when) he went to Richmond and forgot his trunks and went to Navy and forgot his top," he said. "He drove me absolutely nuts."

"(But) Jeff worked as hard as he possibly could over the summer to become as good as he could become to try and help us get a winning season. It's not easy to play point guard for me, and we expect a lot. It was really tough for Jeff, but I've got to give him credit. He really worked hard."

In his time at the podium, Kelly offered an explanation of the missing uniform parts.

"Game time, I'm always thinking about other things," he said. "It really surprised me when I showed up and didn't have my shorts on. I've never been so surprised in my entire life."

"I'll never forget at Navy when I forgot my jersey. I went into the locker room, and I ran into Pete Herrmann, the head coach at Navy. I said: 'He's going to kill me.' He said: 'Who's going to kill you?' And I said: 'Coach Steele's going to kill me. I don't have my jersey.' Needless to say, I didn't play too well that night."

Gold Rush Town Eyes Return To Prosperity With Gambling

By Chet Brokaw
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DEADWOOD, S.D. — Leaders of the Black Hills gold rush town where Wild Bill Hickok was gunned down in an 1876 poker game are betting a little gambling will restore the local economy by reviving the spirit of the Old West.

Voters decide Tuesday whether to allow poker, blackjack and slot machines in their community of 2,000, known a century ago as the wildest, wickedest town on the Western frontier.

At the 85-year-old Franklin Hotel on Main Street, owner Bill Walsh talked about how Deadwood might secure its future by promoting its past, particularly the story of Wild Bill, whose bronzed bust guards the hotel lobby.

The U.S. marshal and frontiersman was shot in the back of the head during a poker game at a saloon called No. 10 on Aug. 2, 1876. Legend has it he was clutching a pair each of aces and eights, ever-after known by card players as the "dead man's hand."

"I think that Deadwood's identity, as far as a tourism type of destination area, has always been tied to Wild Bill Hickok and that shooting," Walsh said. "When people come to Deadwood, they expect the Old West."

A bit of a betting boom might stop the town's decade-long economic decline by creating jobs to draw young people back, supporting services for the elderly and helping to make Deadwood a center for the arts, he said. Mayor Tom Blair estimated gaming might generate $500,000 a year for historic restoration.

"We want to give that impression of an old Western mining town in 1889," Walsh said. "While we're trying to go forward economically, we're going to the past to give us that boost."

But some Deadwood residents oppose the gambling plan, which they doubt will provide much of an economic boost.

"There is opposition here in town, and it's basically on moral grounds," said the Rev. Don Hadrick of the United Methodist Church, adding that opponents have been too intimidated by the overwhelming support to make much noise. "It's not popular to be in the minority on issues such as this."

Blair predicted the gambling, limited to $5 bets and 15 games for each establishment, would attract at least another 200,000 tourists to Deadwood each year, mostly vacationing families interested in Black Hills recreation.

"If you want the glitz and glitter of Atlantic City or the glamorous entertainment of Las Vegas, you've come to the wrong place," Blair said. "We want the gambling to augment what we are year 'round: a beautiful part of South Dakota with lots of things for people to do both summer and winter."

Until last year, South Dakota's Constitution forbade all games of chance except the state lottery and games for charitable, religious, educational or public-spirited purposes.

The Deadwood You Bet Committee, made up mostly of local officials and business owners, has been trying since 1985 to start limited gambling. The effort paid off in November, when voters statewide approved a constitutional amendment allowing the Legislature to authorize limited gambling in Deadwood.

Lawmakers gave the go-ahead a month ago, but gambling can only begin if 60 percent of Deadwood voters approve it Tuesday. About 70 percent favored the constitutional amendment in November, and a recent telephone survey of 900 of Deadwood's 1,200 registered voters confirmed widespread support, Blair said.

Deadwood was founded on a desire for wealth and adventure: an 1876 gold strike in Deadwood Gulch brought 7,000 people to the area in seven months. As Deadwood grew, so did its reputation as the rowdiest mining town of them all.

'Tattinger's Returning

NEW YORK (AP) — "Tattinger's," the hour-long NBC comedy-drama about a trendy New York restaurant that premiered to lukewarm critical and viewer response last fall, is coming back as a half-hour on April 20.

It's now called "Nick & Hillary," after the two main characters, the ex-husband-and-wife team played by Stephen Collins and Blythe Danner.

Chris Elliott of NBC's "Late Night With David Letterman" joins the cast as Spin, the restaurant manager. Jerry Stiller, Mary Beth Hurt, Roderick Cook and Patrice Colihan return in their roles from the hour series.

'Nearly Departed' May Be Doomed

By Kathryn Baker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — At one point in NBC's new comedy, "Nearly Departed," the ghost of snotty, recently deceased British professor

Grant Pritchard ponders, "I wonder if there's small-talk after death?"

Only in sitcom purgatory, where dwelleth "Nearly Departed."

A moderately amusing half-hour, it premieres tonight for a spring tryout through May 15.

The show is in something of a comedy twilight zone. It goes far enough that it will no doubt prove distasteful to some viewers, yet it doesn't have the wicked edge that should be expected of a comedy about death — especially one starring Eric Idle, former member of "Monty Python's Flying Circus."

The writers do their best — "We're dead, and we'll just have to live with it" — and Idle is delightful, but there's not much of anywhere to go with this tired, easily tasteless premise.

It seems the professor and his wife, Claire (Caroline McWilliams of "Soap"), were killed in a rock slide on a mountain road. How they ever hooked up is a mystery, along with many of the other plot twists. She's sweet-natured and charitable. He's a testy elitist.

"You always look on the dark side of things," she says soothingly.

"Death IS the dark side of things," he complains.

Unable to go on to the afterlife for unexplained reasons, they return to their beloved bookish and well-appointed home in the Chicago suburbs so Grant can be constantly perturbed by its boorish new blue-collar residents, a plumber named Mike Dooley (Stuart Pankin of "Not Necessarily the News"), his wife (Wendy Schaal) and their teen-age son (Jay Lambert).

In the pilot, Grant is at first incensed at being dead, but begins to adjust when he realizes he is capable of such antics as climbing into the shower to gaze undetected at naked Mrs. Dooley.

Having Grant and Claire standing around making comments about the unaware Dooleys is fun for about a nanosecond. So, we soon meet Grampa (Henderson Forsythe), who inexplicably can see and hear the Pritchards, but, of course, hides this from his daughter and son-in-law lest they think he's bonkers.

In the weak subplot that drives Act 2, it seems Grampa has lost his driver's license and delivery job and fears he will lose his independence if he doesn't get his license renewed. Claire wants to help out of a sense of philanthropy. Grant's assistance is motivated by his desire to rid the house of at least one inhabitant — if Pops can drive he can live somewhere else.

Then follows a nicely executed but basically free-standing sketch, a turn on the well-used driver's license bureau scene (the classic being the "Taxi" episode when Jim had to get take the written test: "What's a yellow light mean?" "Go slow." "What's ... a ... yellow ... light ... mean?") It's pretty funny, though it illustrates the series' reliance on Idle, hilarious as he acts out the letters of the eye chart to help Gramps pass the test. Check out "R."

Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY April 11

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Stick with basic and routine activities. You may be dealing with stubborn attitudes that are selfish. Keep your own best interests in mind.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Current focus is curiously intellectual and more communicative than usual. You enjoy expanded personal relationships and short trips.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): It may be hard to keep dual interests separated, especially with relationships. You can lose it all when you play too many angles at once.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): The current cycle is magnetic, creative and stylish. A friend shows appreciation. Your judgment can be uncanny.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Planning for travel will help satisfy thoughts of wanderlust and distant places. Pass up a tacky cohort who wants to crash your social scene.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Renegotiate a recent agreement if you are unhappy with the results. Nail down the facts—get it in writing if there are any doubts left.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): You run out of time when diversified activities are cut into too many small pieces. Transportation is a problem. Finances influence your choices.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Lunar aspects can have you daydreaming of romantic places. A family member may be unwilling to listen.

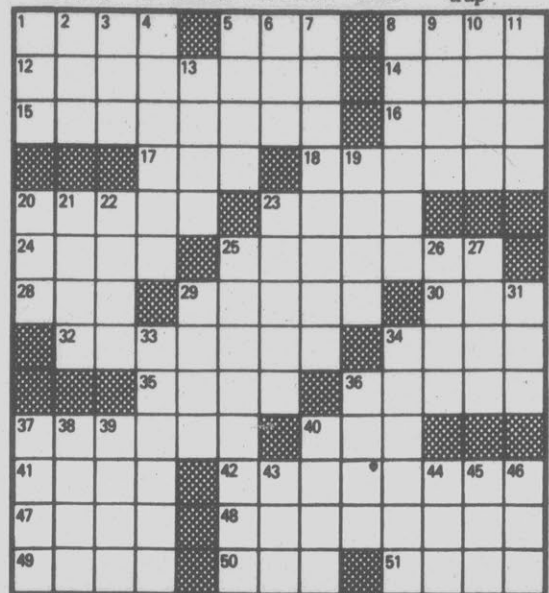

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Participation in a recent project has your prestige soaring. Your opposite would enjoy candlelight and music. Originality will make points.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Your style of performance gets the attention of VIP's. No rewards appear as yet, but you accumulate points for the future.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Creativity is strangled and originality stays dormant when you try to meet other people's standards.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): The financial picture brightens as well as your love for the dramatic. Someone takes special privileges at your expense.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AK762 ♥93 ♦854 ♣1043
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1♥ 2♣ ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—There's nothing you can do for the moment. A bid of two spades would be forcing, and could propel the auction to too high a level on a hand where you might have neither the strength nor the fit for a three-level contract. Pass.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠Q76 ♥Q103 ♦Q873 ♣Q52
 Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What action do you take?
 A.—In theory, with 8-9 points opposite partner's no trump opening, you should invite game by raising. However, we have remarked before that queens are overvalued in the point count, and here you have neither a long suit nor good intermediates to compensate. Pass.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠KJ652 ♥J62 ♦72 ♣865
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1♦ Pass 1♠ Pass
 3♣ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—No doubt you are sorry you ever said a word, but the one thing you can't do is pass. Your only option in this awkward situation is to take a false preference to three diamonds. If partner's jump shift is based on spade support, he will show it at his next turn and you will be able to bail out at four spades.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠762 ♥Q10954 ♦AK8 ♣63
 The bidding has proceeded:
 West North East South
 1♠ Dbl Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—With the equivalent of 10 points, you should jump in your best suit when responding to a take-

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠8 ♥1065 ♦832 ♣AQ10943
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1♠ Dbl ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Even if you play that jumps after a takeout double are preemptive, you should bid only two clubs with this holding. Your ace-queen of clubs behind the doubler is a significant defensive asset, and a preemptive bid tends to deny that much in the way of defense. A typical hand for a jump to three clubs would be six to the K Q J and out.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠6 ♥AQJ6 ♦AK85 ♣AQ102
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1♣ 1♠ Pass Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—Don't try to guess what suit partner has. He could have no more than length in spades. The correct action is to double. Since partner has not bid, that is for takeout, but he has the right to convert to penalties if he deems that action to be correct (highly unlikely here because of your powerhouse).

Fraud Case Set For Closing Arguments

By John Mower
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — A federal judge instructed attorneys to fashion their closing arguments today in the case of three California business executives charged in the Pentagon corruption scandal.

The defense concluded its case Friday, paving the way for closing arguments and jury deliberations in the court of U.S. District Judge Richard Williams.

The three defendants, all former executives of Teledyne Electronics of Newbury Park, Calif., took the stand last to defend their company's action in hiring William Parkin, a private consultant who paid bribes to a Navy engineer for information about a $24 million contract that Teledyne won.

The businessmen, Dale Schnittjer, Eugene Sullivan and George Kaub, once executive vice presidents of Teledyne Electronics, said they had no idea that Parkin was involved in a conspiracy to bribe a government official.

The defendants are charged with bribery, conspiracy and wire fraud.

NOTICE OF ELECTION IN THE TOWN OF FARMVILLE
ON THE ISSUE OF WHETHER THE TOWN WILL USE THE MAYOR-COUNCIL OR COUNCIL-MAN FORM OF GOVERNMENT.
A special election will be held in the Town of Farmville, North Carolina, on the 13th day of April, 1989, on the issue of whether the town will use the mayor-council or council-manager form of government. The polls will be open for voting on that day from 6:30 a.m. to 7:30 p.m.
All residents of the Town of Farmville who are registered to vote with the Pitt County Board of Elections are eligible to vote in this election. The election will be held in the Farmville Precinct Polling Place located in the Farmville Community Center on Main Street in Farmville, Pitt County, North Carolina.
Voters who are already registered do not have to re-register to vote in this election.
Persons who are not already registered to vote must register on or before Monday, May 15, 1989, to be eligible to vote in this election.
All voters who have moved since the last election must notify the Board of Elections by the 10th day of the date. A person may register to vote at the Board of Elections Office at 201 East Second Street, Greenville, North Carolina, on the following dates:
8:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, also by appointment with Farmville Precinct Registrar, Judges of Elections, at any branch of county library or ECU Library, at Farmville Fire-inspection Office, or at Farmville Central High School.
Any voter who will be out of the county the entire time the polls are open on election day, or who will be unable to go to the polls because of sickness or physical disability, may vote by absentee ballot. This voter may apply for an absentee ballot beginning April 24, 1989. Applications must be made by the voter in person, by a near relative of the voter, or by written request signed by the voter. The deadline for applying for an absentee ballot to be mailed is Tuesday, before noon on the day prior to the election at 5:00 p.m. The one-stop absentee process permits a qualified voter to appear at the elections office 30 days prior to but not later than 5:00 p.m. on Friday before election day, complete the absentee application, receive the ballot and vote while he is in the office. If you become ill after 5:00 p.m. on Tuesday before the election you may send a near relative before noon on the day prior to the election to make application, take it to your doctor for signature and return it to the elections office on Friday before election day. Questions concerning registration, location of polling place, absentee ballots, or other election matters should be directed to the Elections Office by calling 830-4121.

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA COUNTY OF PITT
FILE NO. 89 SP 44
PITM
IN THE GENERAL COURT OF JUSTICE
SUPERIOR COURT DIVISION
NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE OF REAL ESTATE
IN THE MATTER OF THE DEED OF TRUST OF REBA HARRISON, Grantor,
TO STEPHEN F. HORNE, II, Trustee,
As recorded in Book 150 at Page 320 of the Pitt County Public Registry.
Under and by virtue of the power and authority contained in that certain Deed of Trust executed and delivered by Reba Harrison, dated September 29, 1987, and recorded in the Office of the Register of Deeds of Pitt County, North Carolina, Book 150 at Page 320 and because of default in the payment of the indebtedness thereby secured and pursuant to the demand of the owner and holder of the indebtedness secured by said Deed of Trust, and pursuant to the Order of the Clerk of Superior Court for Pitt County, North Carolina, entered in this foreclosure proceeding, the undersigned, Stephen F. Horne, II, Trustee, will expose for sale by public auction on the 19th day of April, 1989, at 12:00 P.M. on the steps of the Pitt County Courthouse, Greenville, North Carolina, the following described real property:
Being all of Lot No. 1, Block "B" of Singletree Farm Subdivision, Section 1, Greenville, North Carolina, as shown on map entitled "Singletree Farm Subdivision, Section 1, Greenville, North Carolina", prepared by Rivers

001 Public Notices
and Associates, Inc., dated March 25, 1978, and recorded in Book 25, pages 74 and 74A, of the Pitt County Registry.
Property Address: 99 Lancaster Street, Greenville, North Carolina 27834.
The sale will be made subject to all prior liens, unpaid taxes, red up to and including $1,000 of record and assessments, if any.
The record owner of the above-described real property as reflected on the records in the Pitt County Register of Deeds not more than ten (10) days prior to the posting of this Notice is Reba Harrison.
Pursuant to North Carolina General Statute 545-21.10(b), and the terms of the Deed of Trust, any successful bidder may be required to deposit with the Trustee immediately upon conclusion of the sale a cash deposit of ten (10%) percent of the bid up to and including $1,000 plus five (5%) percent of any excess over $1,000. Any successful bidder shall be required to tender the full balance purchase price so bid in cash or certified check at the time the Trustee tenders to him a deed for the property or attempts to tender such deed, and should said successful bidder fail to pay the full balance purchase price so bid at that time, he shall remain liable on his bid as provided for in North Carolina General Statutes 545-21.30(d) and (e).
This sale will be held on the 10th day for upset bids as required by law.

You've Applauded The Performers. Come Behind The Scenes And Meet The Directors.

The Executive Committee.

A STRONGER PERFORMANCE THAN EVER.

As First Federal continues to deliver an enviable financial performance, some of our most important people stay backstage.

But they're not strangers to the citizens of Pitt County. Our list of directors reads like an honor roll of community leaders.

First Federal is guided by high achievers, not high rollers. We've chosen the area's most respected and experienced professionals to help guide Pitt County's community bank.

And it shows. Our balance sheet reads strong and solid. Our employees are proud and positive. And our customers tell us themselves every day: our performance is outstanding.

THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE: MAKING SURE EVERY DOLLAR HAS A PITT COUNTY ADDRESS.

They set First Federal's goals, always keeping in mind the goals and dreams of Pitt County's families. So they take great pride in paying higher rates to depositors, and in investing those deposits in loans within Pitt County.

THE AUDIT COMMITTEE: THEY CAN BE OUR FIVE TOUGHEST CUSTOMERS.

With sound judgment, an eye for detail and a dedication to the highest standards, they strengthen our resolve as a financial institution. They never let us forget that in a strong community bank, the savings come first.

THE LOAN COMMITTEE: FIVE RESPECTED SIGNATURES UNDER EVERY LOAN WE MAKE.

They have the sixth sense of successful businessmen and the cautious optimism of natural leaders. They ensure that every single loan meets our commitment to financial strength, local investment, prudent lending and competitive rates.

LOCAL CONTROL, LOCAL COMMITMENT, LOCAL PRIDE: VALUES CLOSE TO HOME.

These are the leaders of First Federal—experienced businessmen and local professionals steering a steady course into the future. What these confident leaders bring to First Federal is what we, in turn, give back to our local community—a winning spirit.

A spirit that, like First Federal, is now stronger than ever.

The Audit Committee.
