Report Alleges Ethics Violations By Wright

By Steven Komarow
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The House ethics committee charged today that House Speaker Jim Wright violated official rules of conduct 69 times by not disclosing thousands of dollars in alleged gifts and by skirting rules on speaking fees through bulk book sales.

The committee — six Democrats and six Republicans — unanimously approved the statement of alleged violations, announced the chairman, Rep. Julian Dixon, D-Calif.

The charges, divided into five counts, and an accompanying report by Richard Phelan, the attorney who conducted the committee's investigation, could jeopardize Wright's future as speaker.

The statement "represents a determination by the committee that in 69 instances, there is reason to believe that Rep. Wright violated the code of official conduct and other House rules which apply to him as a member of Congress," Dixon said.

He emphasized that the committee's action is similar to an indictment — based on a comparatively low standard of proof — and not a conviction.

"The speaker of the House has not been found guilty of any violations but from a review of the evidence the committee has found a reason to believe" violations may have occurred, Dixon said.

"We have not reached any final conclusions on the matters that are still under investigation," he said, telling reporters that, for further proceedings, the standard will be "clear and convincing evidence."

The committee, under its rules, will next allow Wright to respond within 21 days — a period the speaker has indicated he would like to abbreviate.

After that, the committee has 30 days to decide whether to hold a "disciplinary hearing" on whether Wright indeed violated rules and what punishment, if any, it should recommend to the full House.

The panel cleared Wright of several accusations filed against him last year when the inquiry began, including alleged use of a staff member to write the book, improper use of campaign funds and improper lobbying on behalf of constituents.

Dixon said the committee was continuing its investigation into another allegation surrounding the investment in an oil and gas well by Wright and Mallick. The committee has issued subpoenas in that case, he said.

"I am prepared to appear as early as Monday afternoon, but certainly the committee should be able to schedule a hearing within seven days," Wright said in a letter sent to the committee Sunday night.

"I continue to believe that I have not violated any House rules, and I am absolutely certain that I have never knowingly or intentionally done so," Wright said in the letter Sunday.

But Dixon told a news conference the committee had just received the letter and did not know when Wright would appear.

20 Taken To PCMH After School Bus, Car Collide

By Carol Tyer
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Twenty persons involved in a 8 a.m. school bus-automobile collision on State Road 1551 about two north of Stokes were being observed and/or treated at Pitt County Memorial Hospital this morning.

The car driver, the bus driver and one of the 18 children aboard Pitt County schools Bus 145 were taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital by Bethel and Pactolus rescue squads. The other 17 students of the kindergarten-fifth grade school also went to the hospital emergency department aboard another county school bus.

At press time today, hospital officials said that the car driver identified as Stencil Howell, 23, of Williamston was to be admitted for injuries sustained in the accident. His vehicle, traveling south, reportedly ran into the rear of the bus. He reportedly sustained serious facial injuries.

North Carolina Highway Patrol Trooper Merton Cox said Howell told him he went to sleep at the wheel. Howell reportedly told Cox he had worked until 6 a.m. and was on his way to Greenville. Cox said Howell is being charged with failure to reduce speed to avoid an accident.

Cox identified the bus driver as Rosa Ebron, 40, of Route 1, Bethel. Stokes School principal Roscoe Locke went to the scene and accompanied the children to the hospital emergency department. He said that Ms. Ebron, fourth-grader Reeshan Outlaw and fifth-grader Lestina Andrews were being X-rayed.

At about 9:45 a.m., he said emergency department officials had indicated that all involved in the accident, except the driver of the car, would be sent home today. Each was to be released only to a parent or guardian.

In the meantime, according to Bill Grau, senior nurse supervisor, hospital staffers were in the emergency

Post Office Sets Up Tax Boxes

Greenville area residents who take their income tax returns to the post office after 6 p.m. today should go to Greenville's main post office and use special receptacles set up in the lobby. One has been set up for state returns, the other for federal.

Greenville Postmaster Charles Caulk said taxpayers mailing forms after 6 p.m. will not have their returns postmarked April 17 unless they put the forms into the special receptacles at the main post office. All others will be postmarked April 18.

Caulk said late filers were plentiful at local post offices all weekend, and that many were expected today — hopefully most before 6 p.m.

Bush Announces Aid Package For Poland

By Tom Raum
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HAMTRAMCH, Mich. — President Bush today announced new U.S. economic help for Poland, praising the Warsaw government's move toward reform and saying "we can and must answer this call to freedom."

Bush traveled to the Polish-American enclave of Hamtramck here to extoll the communist government's agreement to reinstate the Solidarity trade union movement and to hold the first free elections in Poland since 1946.

While the president announced a series of steps aimed at helping Poland restore its battered economy, Bush said continued aid would depend on consistent moves by the communist government toward reform.

"We will not act unconditionally," he said. "We will not offer aid without requiring sound economic practices in return. We must remember that Poland is still a member of the Warsaw Pact. We must take no steps that compromise the security of the West."

The concessions could open the way for a flow to Poland of up to $1 billion in new loans, loan rescheduling and trade and investment relief, according to administration and international monetary sources.

Administration officials, who declined to be identified, also said Bush may travel to Poland in July, immediately before or after the seven-nation economic summit in Paris.

The trip would underscore U.S. support for Warsaw's landmark April 5 steps restoring the legal status of the union Solidarity and scheduling the first open elections in the communist-run country since 1948.

Bush said the new agreements by the Polish government with the Solidarity movement that it banned in 1981 should help Warsaw arrange new loans from multinational lending organizations such as the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund.

The sources said in advance of Bush's speech that could amount to rescheduling up to $700 million in ex-

Bomb Injures 2 At Police House

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WIESBADEN, West Germany — A bomb exploded today at the federal police headquarters while experts were trying to disarm it, seriously injuring two people, police reported.

"It was an accident that occurred while they were trying to disarm an explosive device," said Willy Testiege, a spokesman for the federal police bureau, the Bundeskriminalamt.

He said the explosion occurred in a basement room of the federal police facility in Wiesbaden, and that two people were seriously injured.

Asked where the explosive device came from, Testiege said: "At the moment we don't know where it came from or what it was in because it was completely destroyed."

"Many explosive devices are turned over to us by local authorities to defuse when they can't do it themselves. So disarming is often done here. This was just an accident that happened during such a process," he said.

He declined to comment on a report by a Hesse state Interior Ministry official who said the bomb was hidden in a radio.

Federal authorities last fall captured a cache of weapons and explosives during a raid on an apartment occupied by suspected terrorists. The seizure included a radio packed with plastic explosives and an air pressure-sensitive detonator. A similar device is believed to have been used by terrorists to blow up Pan Am Flight 103 over Scotland on Dec. 21.

Testiege said he would not speculate on whether the bomb that exploded at the Bundeskriminalamt facility was in any way connected with the investigations into terrorist acts.

Mexican Police Find 2 Bodies

By Holden Lewis
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MATAMOROS, Mexico — Two men found buried one atop the other on a communal farm were killed by the same cult of drug smugglers that sacrificed 13 people and buried the mutilated corpses at a ranch nearby, authorities said.

The two bodies found Sunday were in an orchard two miles from Rancho Santa Elena, where the other corpses were dug up last week.

The 72-year-old father of one of the two victims led police to the bodies. He said some children had told him last fall they had seen people burying a body, but he discounted the story until the 13 corpses were dug up, authorities said.

Police believe Rancho Santa Elena, about 20 miles west of Matamoros, was where a cult performed sacrifices and other rites to protect their drug smuggling from police and rivals. The bodies found last week had been dismembered, and their hearts, brains and other organs removed for use in rituals, police said.

The bodies found at the communal farm Sunday had not been dismembered, said Martin Elias Salazar, a federal judicial police group chief who supervised Sunday's exhumations. A sheriff's deputy in Brownsville, a Texas city across the Rio Grande from Matamoros, said the deaths apparently were drug related.

Salazar said police had long suspected the two men of selling drugs. That suspicion, plus the proximity of the grave to the ranch, led Salazar to believe they had done business with the cult before it turned to committing human sacrifices.

Four men being held in Matamoros in the 13 other slayings had not been questioned about the newly found bodies, Salazar said. He added they were to be interrogated after a court appearance today.

Salazar said police then would determine whether to search for more bodies.

Serafin Hernandez Garcia, Elio Hernandez Rivera, Sergio Martinez and David Serna Valdez were to be formally charged today with murder, kidnapping and drug and weapons possession, authorities said.

The cult's leaders, Adolfo de Jesus Constanzo, 26, and Sara Maria Aldrete, 24, were still being sought, police said. Constanzo allegedly ran a marijuana-smuggling ring that

Soviet Officials Unveil New Tax Structure

By Mark J. Porubcansky
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union has unveiled a new, progressive income tax with rates as high as 50 percent for workers who earn more than seven times the average wage.

Finance Minister Boris I. Gostev said today in an interview with the Communist Party newspaper Pravda that the tax structure that will go into effect in January makes the first changes in 46 years.

The tax structure, in the form of a draft law, was published in Pravda on Sunday. The draft must be approved by the government before it becomes law.

Soviets now pay a flat 10 percent of their income in taxes if they make less than 200 rubles (the equivalent of $320) a month, and the rate increases a few percentage points for higher incomes.

The average industrial worker makes 217 rubles ($347) a month.

Most taxes are withheld at the workplace, and workers do not need to file annual tax returns.

The new tax structure sets a tax rate of 12.2 percent for incomes of 700 rubles ($1,120) a month up to 50 percent for incomes in excess of 1,500 rubles ($2,400) a month.

Gostev said only 3.4 percent of Soviet workers make more than 500 rubles ($800) a month, and that most Soviets will not be affected by the new tax structure.

The finance minister said that co-operatives, individuals who have struck out on their own to produce goods and services and other reforms fostered by President Mikhail S. Gorbachev "have raised the level of material security of Soviet citizens and at the same time raised the differentiation of the population's income."

A new tax structure is necessary to reflect those changes, he said.

The structure calls for elimination of taxes for those making less than 80 rubles ($130) a month. Government officials consider an income slightly less than that to be the minimum necessary to get by in Soviet society.

It also calls for reduction in the tax rate for those who make between 80 and 100 rubles ($160), with officials determining later how big the reduction should be.

Wage-earners with four or more dependents would be eligible for a tax cut of 30 percent from the new rates, according to the published report.

Soviet taxpayers who earn money from several difference sources now must pay separately on each of the sources. But Gostev said the new law would unify all income sources and require taxpayers to pay on their total income.

It also would include stiff penalties for trying to avoid taxes, he said.

In October several Soviet economists said that an overhaul of the tax structure was essential to distribute income more equitably

Baptists To Take Chance On Vegas

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Southern Baptists, who will travel to Las Vegas this summer for their annual convention, may have their work cut out for them in the glitzy city, but many of them welcome the opportunity to do the job they say God has given them.

"I really think it's a wonderful opportunity for a witness," said the Rev. M.O. Owens of Gastonia, a patriarch among North Carolina fundamentalists. "If any place in the country needs a witness, it is Las Vegas."

"I'm sure there'll be a few people who maybe cross over the line once in a while — to go in the gambling places," Owens said. "There may be some who go out of curiosity. That's just one of the risks that we take."

Las Vegas will be host to about 25,000 Baptists June 13-15 for the annual Southern Baptist Convention, well-known for its adamant opposition to gambling.

"We are a family community," said Mark Smith, president of the Las Vegas Chamber of Commerce. "Many Baptists, I think, will be enlightened by what they see."

"Obviously, every city has some things that Baptists should not participate in," said Al Shackelford, vice president for public relations of the convention's executive committee. "Our going does not condone everything that goes on in any city."

But to counter gambling influences, several thousand Baptists are planning a citywide, door-to-door evangelism campaign, The Greensboro News & Record reported.

The Rev. Mike Moore, pastor of Greensboro's Friendly Avenue Baptist Church in Greensboro, said Las Vegas is not the most savory site, but neither is it the most corrupt.

"My stars, we met in New Orleans," Moore said. "You can't get in any more sinful place than that. I've asked for my travel advance in quarters."

The Rev. Enoch Booth, pastor of Greensboro's Guilford Baptist Church, also sees no conflict in the Las Vegas choice.

"I don't see our endorsing gambling by meeting in Las Vegas," he said. "We met in San Antonio. We met in Los Angeles. These are not holy meccas."

Logistics are part of the reason for choosing Las Vegas, Shackelford said. It is one of about 15 cities equipped to accommodate the Southern Baptist Convention, whose attendance has burgeoned during the past 10 years as moderates and fundamentalists struggle for control of the denomination.

Farm Scene

By Mitch Smith

PITT EXTENSION DIRECTOR

The excessive moisture of the early spring ensures Pitt County farmers that much of our corn will be planted late in 1989. But what is late in terms of planting? According to yields, late is defined in terms of the mid-summer rainfall patterns.

Available research data suggests that corn yields decrease about one bushel per acre, per day after April 15 in most areas of North Carolina. This rate of decrease increases significantly after May 1. Moreover, corn planted after May 1 is much more likely to experience insect damage, low grain test weights and lodging.

The last practical day for planting corn in the coastal plain region of North Carolina is May 10. After May 1, it is advisable to switch to earlier-maturing varieties. For example, the grower who planned to use Pioneer 3165 should switch to 3378, 3389 or 3320. Dekalb 789 growers should alter their choices to T 1100, DK 636 or DK 689. After May 1, the 110 to 115 day hybrids should perform best. Only if someone is forced to plant corn after May 10 should he switch to the "extra" early corns in the 105-day relative maturity range. It should also be remembered that late-planted corn grows taller and usually has weaker stalks. Accordingly, growers planting corn "late" should generally plant about 10 percent fewer kernels than they would at optional planting dates.

Since only about 30,000 acres of corn will be produced in Pitt County for 1989, growers should select proper hybrids to increase their chances of good yields.

MULTIPLE SUGAR DANGER

It is common knowledge that sugar adversely affects dental health. It is also a common misconception that only white and brown refined sugar (sucrose) is the only dentally harmful sugar.

All types of sugars can promote tooth decay. These sugars include sucrose, fructose (fruit sugar), glucose, lactose (milk sugar), and maltose (grain sugar). As an example, it is common to see infants whose front teeth are severely decayed as a result of propping nursing bottles of milk or juice in their mouths during nap time. This is called nursing bottle syndrome.

Eating foods that contain sugars allows the bacteria in plaque (a thin film of bacteria that forms on everyone's teeth), to produce acids that attack teeth and cause tooth decay.

It would be difficult to eliminate all foods containing sugar from your diet. The trick is to eat less retentive (or sticky, candy-type) sugars less frequently. Its adhesiveness gives the bacteria too much time to do its destructive work.

We welcome new patients,
both children and adults.

Bush Announces Plans For U.S. Economic Assistance To Poland

isting loans in an effort to help Poland make a dent in its $39 billion international debt.

Bush's package also called for a lowering of tariffs on selected Polish imports through the Generalized System of Preferences, a move that requires congressional approval.

This system of preferential tariffs traditionally is used by the U.S. government to assist less-developed nations.

Bush also announced that he will seek congressional approval for a program of U.S.-guaranteed loans, through the Overseas Private Investment Corp., to stimulate private investment in Poland. He also said he would propose negotiations that could lead to joint ventures between U.S. and Polish businesses.

Sources said that some of the proposed inducements would be linked to future steps by Poland to liberalize its markets and make changes in its long-troubled economy.

"If Poland's experiment succeeds, other countries may follow," Bush said in the speech prepared for delivery at Hamtramck City Hall. "While we must still differentiate among the nations of Eastern Europe, Poland offers two lessons for all."

"First, there can be no progress without significant political and economic liberalization," he said. "Second, help from the West will come in concert with liberalization. Our friends and European allies share this philosophy."

"The United States has never accepted the legitimacy of Europe's division," Bush said. "We accept no spheres of influence that deny the sovereign rights of nations."

Yet, the president said, "the winds of change shaping a new European destiny."

"The Congress, the Polish-

American community, the American labor movement, our allies and international financial institutions, must work in concert if Polish democracy is to take root anew and sustain itself," he said. "We can and must answer this call to freedom."

The April 5 agreement called for free elections in June, and for creation of a two-house parliament.

The newly created 100-member Senate would be the Eastern bloc's first freely elected legislative chamber. The government also promised to make 35 percent of the seats of the existing 460-member Sejm elective. An elective post of president would become available in six years.

The government also conferred full legal status on the Roman Catholic Church in Poland.

Bush's package further eases U.S. economic sanctions imposed against Poland in 1981 and 1982 following declaration of martial law and the outlawing of Solidarity. Some of the original sanctions were lifted in 1987 after the Polish government moved toward reconciliation with the union.

U.S. officials reacted positively to Poland's steps to grant its citizens more freedom.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater called the Polish movement toward new liberties "a historic step" and "a great day for the Polish people."

Still, administration officials have voiced caution.

"Poland has taken a step away from totalitarianism, although democracy is far from having been achieved," Secretary of State James A. Baker III said Friday.

Bush visited Poland as vice president in September 1987 during a nine-nation European tour.

Poll: Ban Won't Stop Abortions

By Gary Langer
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Americans overwhelmingly believe that outlawing abortion would do little to curtail it, and half want the operation to remain legal and unrestricted in early pregnancies, a poll has found.

Up to 65 percent of the 1,108 adults questioned in the Media General-Associated Press poll supported legalized abortion in other contexts.

The poll also found broad opposition to Operation Rescue, whose members have been blocking entrances to abortion clinics around the country.

With the U.S. Supreme Court poised to reconsider its 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision that legalized abortion during the first three months of pregnancy, 53 percent in the random-sample survey said they favored that landmark ruling.

Moreover, if the court were to reverse itself and let each state make its own abortion laws, 57 percent said they would want abortion legal in their state. Thirty-seven percent would want it illegal and 7 percent were unsure.

The poll posed the issue in a variety of ways because the wording of questions on a sensitive issue can affect the results.

The findings on basic attitudes toward abortion were similar in other recent polls. But in a new finding, large majorities said outlawing abortion would fail to prevent it.

Abortion proponents argue that many women would have unsafe illegal abortions if the procedure were banned.

The poll asked: "If abortion were illegal in your state, do you think that would stop most women there who want abortions from having them, or would most of them go to another state where it was legal?" Eighty-seven percent said the women would go to another state.

The poll then asked whether banning abortions nationwide would stop most women from having them, or if those women would have illegal abortions or go to a country where abortion is legal. Seventy-three percent said women would find a way to have abortions.

The survey found its closest split on the question of a constitutional amendment to make abortions illegal except in cases of rape, incest or to save the life of the mother. Fifty percent were opposed and 44 percent in favor, a division within the poll's 3-point error margin.

No such amendment is before Congress, but those are the terms President Bush has said he would support.

In another question on conditions under which abortion may be permitted, the poll asked: "Should abortion be legal as it is now; legal only in such cases as rape, incest, or to save the life of the mother; or should it not be permitted at all?" Fifty percent said legal as now; 39 percent said only in certain cases; 7 percent wanted it banned outright and the rest were unsure.

That question has been asked since 1985 by the CBS News-New York Times poll, which has found a slight increase in support for current law. Depending on the questions, however, other polls have found slight declines in support for abortion, and others still have found no movement.

In a question outside the legal context, the Media General-AP poll asked: "If a woman wants to have an abortion and her doctor agrees to it, should she be allowed to have an abortion, or not?" Sixty-five percent said yes, 25 percent said no and the remaining 10 percent had no opinion. The CBS-Times poll has found a similar and steady response to that question since 1980.

Opposition to abortion was greatest among older, less wealthy and less educated respondents, and Republicans and conservatives. There was no significant division in opinions between men and women.

The federal Centers for Disease Control say 1.3 million abortions are performed annually in the United States, making it one of the nation's most common surgical procedures. The Supreme Court next week is to hear a case that could enable it to review its 1973 ruling legalizing abortion.

The Media General-AP survey also found:

—Sixty-seven percent were opposed to demonstrations by Operation Rescue.

—Narrow opposition to use of federal funds to help poor women with their medical bills if they want an abortion. Forty-nine percent were opposed to such spending, 41 percent in favor. The rest did not answer.

—Support for legalization in the United States of a new pill, RU 486, which halts a pregnancy by cutting off a hormone necessary to keep an egg implanted in the uterus.

Anti-abortion activists call the drug an abortion pill, and have threatened boycotts against its producers. Supporters of the pill, which is available in France, call it simpler and safer than surgical abortion. In the poll, 51 percent said it should be legal here; 24 percent said it should not; 25 percent were unsure.

The poll was conducted March 6-15 by the AP and Media General Inc., a communications company based in Richmond, Va.

Copter Crashes Inside Prison

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — A helicopter crashed inside a federal prison holding many of Florida's top drug traffickers today in a possible escape attempt, authorities said.

Deputy U.S. Marshal Darryl Williams said he did not know the extent of any injuries. The helicopter went down about 10 a.m. at the Metropolitan Correctional Center, said Metro-Dade police spokeswoman Lucy Fitts.

"We are investigating an attempted escape or a possible escape," Williams said. "That's all we know."

MCC is the major prison for drug traffickers and others arrested for federal crimes in South Florida.

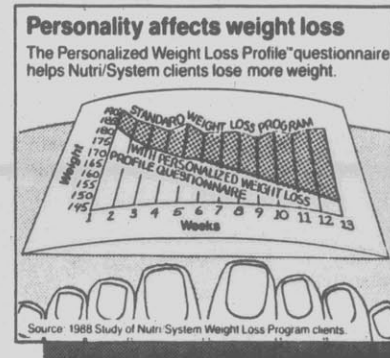

Among the inmates are Miami policemen convicted of running a drug ripoff ring and others convicted of large-scale cocaine and marijuana trafficking.

Nutri/System research shows personality can prevent weight loss success.

At any given time, some 43 million Americans are making a serious diet attempt. Losing weight is hard, more complicated than simply cutting back on calories or certain food. And keeping the weight off is even more difficult.

Thousands of people lose weight every year, but many are back where they started within a year. But there is hope. Studies conducted at the University of Pennsylvania show that people who follow a weight loss program that includes behavior modification lose more weight and maintain their weight longer.

Behavior Modification Aids Weight Loss

A number of personal factors can interfere with any person's ability to lose weight. For example, a person under stress at work may have a difficult time losing weight. Most of these people have a great deal of determination to succeed when they start a diet. But sooner or later, coping with workplace struggles is going to become more important than sticking to a diet. The best way to lose weight and keep it off for this type of individual, then, is to find new ways of coping with job stress.

The International Congress on Obesity (ICO) recommends that behavior therapy or modification be included in any safe and credible approach to weight loss. One guideline recommended by the ICO is to assess—prior to starting a weight loss attempt—the psychological and social factors which can prevent a person from losing weight.

The Personalized Weight Loss Profile™ Questionnaire

Nutri/System has developed such a tool: The Personalized Weight Loss Profile™ questionnaire.

Years of research at the University of Rochester have identified eight personality characteristics that are most likely to interfere with an individual's ability to lose weight. These personal factors have been incorporated into the Personalized Weight Loss Profile questionnaire.

*68 million adult Americans are above their desirable body weight as defined by the 1959 Metropolitan Life Insurance Company Height and Weight Tables.

Used exclusively in the The Nutri/System®

Weight Loss Program, this questionnaire pinpoints the attitudes and behaviors which prevent people from reaching their ideal weight. Every client completes a Personalized Weight Loss Profile questionnaire when entering the Program. The answers help Nutri/System Behavior Breakthrough™ Counselors identify and intervene in any obstacles to permanent weight control.

In a recent study, clients in Nutri/System Centers achieved nearly three times as much weight loss when the Personalized Weight Loss Profile questionnaire was used to assist in resolving their individual weight loss problems.

Nutri/System: Comprehensive Weight Loss Program

The Council on Scientific Affairs of the American Medical Association recommends three elements for successful weight control:

1. Nutritionally-balanced diet
2. Behavior modification
3. Exercise

"A program that incorporates all three (elements) is more likely to lead to long-term weight control," the AMA concludes.

The Nutri/System Weight Loss Program, founded in 1971, is a comprehensive weight loss program that embraces all of the elements recommended by the AMA. The Nutri/System Weight Loss Program includes:

- Nutrition and Behavior Counseling to provide encouragement and support and to help understand weight control problems with our exclusive Personalized Weight Loss Profile™ Questionnaire and Behavior Breakthrough™ classes.
- Delicious, low-calorie meals that are nutritionally balanced, low in fat, portion-controlled, and meet the high flavor and texture standards of our Flavor Set-Point™ Meal Plan.
- Light Exercise designed for people not used to exercising regularly.
- Weight Maintenance to help keep those pounds off and begin a healthy new life confident of permanent weight control.

Where Now?

More Turbulence For Eastern

Where now for Eastern Airlines?

The $464 million deal with Peter V. Ueberroth has fallen through and the airline is back to square one.

Texas Air Chairman Frank A. Lorenzo is still Eastern's owner and the giant airline is still crippled by a strike with only a fraction of the former flights currently scheduled.

Now the big airline hopes to train new pilots and operate on a level about half the size of the pre-strike. The problems abound for the respected but unprofitable airline, one of the nation's oldest.

Even as its planes sit idle other airlines are adding flights along old Eastern routes to handle the passengers which Eastern once carried. Those passengers may never come back to Eastern even if its management is able to get a substantial number of flights under way again. And Eastern will have to offer discount fares to lure passengers back. With its money problems discount fares mean even less revenues.

The feelings are bitter between labor and management in the Eastern situation and because of that one of the nation's oldest airlines is in danger of losing out in the competitive air travel market.

If Eastern doesn't make it back, in the end the air travelers will be the losers because there will be one less competitor for their business.

What comes next? It's anybody's guess. Perhaps Eastern management will succeed in resuming a significant number of flights. And perhaps a new offer to buy the company will materialize and be acceptable to the employees.

It is a certainty that it will be to everyone's advantage if the Eastern Airline problems can be amicably solved and flights resumed with regular pilots, crews and machinists.

Mirrors

A Budget Reduction Trick

It had to be done with mirrors — the administration's and Congress' agreement on a budget for 1990 which supposedly reduces the federal deficit to a figure under $100 billion.

The budget, if it stands as compromised, won't raise taxes ... which allows President Bush another year of proclaiming no new taxes.

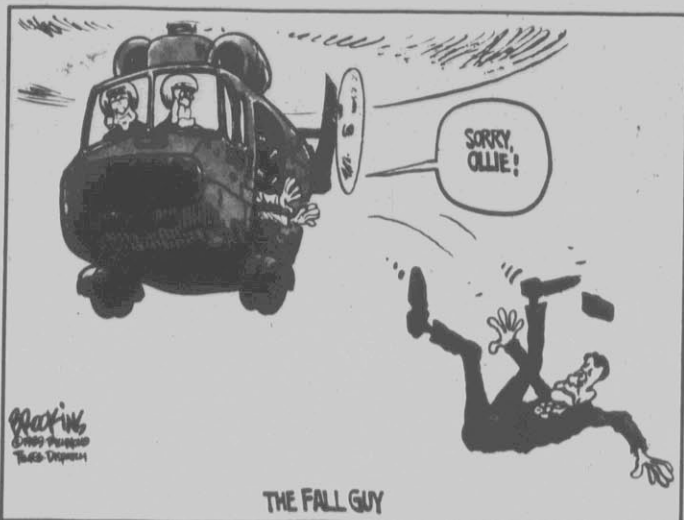

The trouble is the budget doesn't face up to most of the federal government's financial problems. Some Congressional leaders say it can only lead to a tax increase next year.

The budget compromise meets the Gramm-Rudman budget balancing requirements but it still leaves a price to be paid in the future.

Budget making in Washington has become an illusion. Former President Reagan didn't want to raise taxes in his last years in office and President Bush doesn't want to take action in his first year of office. But a budget has to be made, so Congress and the president come up with one to limp on through 1990.

Leadership, however, calls for hard decisions no matter how unpopular. The President and Congress will eventually have to bite the bullet. They will have to decide either to cut spending or fund new revenues. For government new revenues usually mean new taxes.

The hard decisions won't be made this year, just as they were not last year. Monsterlike, they will be out there waiting, however. The federal government must eventually get its financial house in order.

In The Shadow Of The GOP

Paul O'Connor

WINSTON-SALEM — David Price is seen by many Democrats as the prototype of the candidate they must field in the future. The 4th district congressman from Chapel Hill enjoys support from the party's current base of liberals and blacks, but he also runs well in the mostly white, totally affluent, suburban precincts around Raleigh.

At a time when the Democratic Party is tearing itself apart at nearly every seam, then, it was quite fortunate for the N.C. Editorial Writers Conference that Price was the invited speaker on the party's future.

Price says that the Democrats must move in two directions. First, the party must secure its base of liberals and blacks. Second, the party must reach out to those it has been losing in recent elections: middle class voters, both male and female, of all religions, and white males in general.

It's not an impossible formula, Price says. By working on consumer issues, on home ownership and education, the Democratic Party would be speaking to both its base and the middle class voters who have preferred the Republican Party in recent years.

But as Price spoke, the Democratic Party was doing just the opposite. Its leadership was attacking the party's base — and two of the biggest elements of the base were striking back — while it was doing little to go after the middle class voters.

In early April, the Democratic Party leadership was blasted by a group of active, liberal Democratic women. They feel that the party, in its efforts to woo more conservative male voters, has forgotten them. They want more Democratic women running for higher office, and they want the party leadership's help in that endeavor. They also want the party to support its own platform, especially on the abortion issue. Alienation of these women is a very serious matter for the Democratic Party in that many of them are the party's most active workers.

At the same time, black legislators were furious that the General Assembly's leadership had agreed to hold a legislative session on a Fayetteville site which had once been used to sell slaves. Black legislators were also finding little help from the assembly's Democratic leadership in the promotion of the bill to end second primaries. To the contrary, Republicans were helping black Democrats in this effort.

The party isn't doing much better on Price's second suggested front. Republican Gov. Jim Martin may have floundered around earlier this year looking for an education platform, but he eventually found one. Legislative Democrats, to the contrary, has just floundered around. The result is that in North Carolina today the governor appears to be the leader on education.

Nor are Democrats making any big splash on consumer issues. Several key Senate Democrats are siding with the banks, against consumers, in proposing a bill to eliminate interest rate caps on installment credit. And the party's chairman, Lawrence Davis of Raleigh, continuously shows up on the side of big business in his work as a lobbyist. Davis, who last year lobbied for the rent-to-own industry, is now representing furniture manufacturers in their bid to stop a bill that would encourage furniture discounting in the state.

David Price has won back voters who'd deserted to Republican ranks without alienating his base constituency. Price's formula gives 4th district voters a choice between two different parties. The leadership of the Democratic Party, contrary to Price's example, must feel that it has to abandon its base of support and create a shadow Republican Party if it is to bring the Democratic Party back to its position of glory.

A Deeper Danger In Washington

Haynes Johnson

WASHINGTON — "What about Washington these days?" asked the reporter who had been assigned by his Midwestern newspaper to come here to prepare an article about the nation's capital. "How do people feel? And what about the John Tower business? Is there more of 'that' kind of thing going on these days than before?"

He really wanted to know, of course, what the locals thought about living in Murder Capital U.S.A. Was it safe to walk outdoors without the protection of a posse, or the reassuring presence of your very own Russian, Chinese or Israeli-made semiautomatic weapon? And had the capital of the free world become Sin City, where public figures who exude respectability in daylight working hours became boozing, womanizing rakes when the sun goes down over the yardarm?

The answers to his two general questions are:

1. Yes, it's safe to walk the streets, visit the galleries, tour the public buildings, sniff the blossoms, inspect the shrines of democracy and watch government in action. Just don't venture at night into the deplorable public housing projects of the Anacostia section of Southeast Washington, where for more than a generation the cycle of poverty and hopelessness has produced a continuing, and worsening, climate of fear and violence.

Don't go as well into the central city open-air drug markets that are doing a land office business, thanks to demand from those with ample money to spend.

2. No, Washington has not become Babylon on the Potomac. If anything, in recent years the capital has become more sober and self-important — a driven, work-obsessed city that tends to take itself with utmost seriousness, if not pomposity.

Good old-fashioned, two-fisted branch-and-bourbon-and-pour-it-on-please boozing has long since been replaced by a preference for Perrier and polite conversation. The raucous political capital of legend, if it ever existed, has become tame. As for carousing and the like from our public officials, we haven't had a good laugh since Wilbur Mills jumped into the Tidal Basin with the self-styled Argentine "firecracker" and stripper, Fanne Foxe.

However frivolous or superficial many of the questions being raised about Washington may be, they do express something serious. The capital, in the cliché, should be a model for the nation. At the moment, it is not a good one.

That similar problems exist in other major cities — and smaller ones, too — does not make Washington's situation any easier. Drugs are a danger, and a symptom of deeper, underlying problems for the nation. They will not be resolved by public relations gimmicks and talk of total "war" against drugs and drug dealers — especially when the war is not a war, the commitment of resources is not total and the greater problems of finding ways to deal with an ill-educated, ill-housed, ill-prepared underclass of society are not even addressed.

There is a greater public danger than drugs emanating from Washington. It is the impression that the political capital, and all of its works, is either corrupt or not functioning properly.

Disclosures coming from the Oliver North trial raise serious new questions about the believability of Ronald Reagan and his presidential successor, George Bush.

So, too, on Capitol Hill the problems stemming from the House ethics committee investigation of Speaker Jim Wright are certain to increase already widespread skepticism about behavior of high public officials.

The danger is creation of an even more cynical society in which no one believes anyone and nothing gets accomplished in the common good. That's the greater story from Washington.

Is Bush Being Too Careful?

Stephen Rosenfeld

WASHINGTON — The early signs are that the Bush administration's big global policy review is going to be a long climb for a short slide. It will say the Earth is moving in the Communist part of the world, and the United States should be very careful and prudent in responding to it.

To be sure, there is a strong argument for this sort of prudence. Two arguments, in fact. One is that you are spared exposure to taunts of silliness and naivete — heavy charges still in the context of American political debate and Washington reputations. George Bush came to the White House emanating vibrations of caution meant to set him off not only from his inexperienced Democratic challenger but also from a Ronald Reagan who, it was murmured, had gone giddy in his pursuit of de'tente with Mikhail Gorbachev.

The further case for prudence is that it's, well, prudent. There is enough history of premature euphoria, and there are enough unknowns in the current equation, to make sure we are not jumping off the deep end. Whether a certain response to Gorbachev takes one year or five is not so important as long as momentum is maintained toward a thoughtfully selected end.

If the Bush review comes out just in this conventional, safe and sound fashion, however, it risks a degree of instant irrelevancy. It may help protect the Bush administration from political attack on its right flank, but it may not serve usefully as a guide to wise policy.

The basic thing is that while people differ on how to respond, almost everyone agrees that stunning changes are in train in Moscow and elsewhere. For the American government to say, yes, but it's not all nailed down for all time and therefore the United States must stay faithful to what it has done for the last 40 years, is to put tactics over strategy, daily business over deeper insight. It is to fail to realize that, to cite Dean Acheson's memoir on the American rebuilding of the international order after World War II, we are "present at the creation" once again.

George Bush is right to observe that the Soviet Union still grinds out masses of tanks and keeps deadly missiles on station. That's important. Not everyone is prepared to accept the sanguine judgment of, for one, historian George Kennan that the Soviet Union no longer poses a military threat.

But to keep credibility as a serious person on either side of the Atlantic as in the fading Communist East, Bush is going to have to demonstrate an awareness of the broad sweep of global change. He must have a compass, and he must show he has a compass.

Specifically, Bush is going to have to come to terms with Kennan's persuasive perception of the "breakup of much, if not all, of the system of power by which (the Soviet Union) has been held together and governed since 1917." The change is most notable, Kennan suggests, precisely where it counts most in the West: in the remission of revolutionary ideology and internal oppression alike.

By coming to terms with this perception, I mean that Bush must show he can address the question with some empathy and resonance, that he can devise a diplomatic program, a political dialogue, a military budget and a manner of speaking to test this tremendous opportunity that may be opening in front of the West.

Late Filers Flirt With Midnight Tax Deadline

By Jim Luther
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — IRS employees put in overtime, post offices set up special mail drops and demonstrators made their cases as the nation prepared to end another federal tax return filing season at midnight tonight.

Internal Revenue Service spokesman Frank Keith said the IRS had no way of knowing how many taxpayers were waiting until the last minute to file. But the agency expects to receive 18 million returns this week, including those filed over the weekend, he said.

The deadline is one day later in New England and most of upstate New York because today is Patriot's Day, a legal holiday, in Massachusetts, site of the IRS center which processes returns from taxpayers in those states.

The IRS expects to receive more than 109 million returns this year, many of which will come in well after the deadline.

About 6 million couples and individuals are expected to get an extra four months to file — but not to pay any taxes due — by mailing Form 4868 before midnight. Many of the 650,000 Americans who live and work abroad are likely to take an automatic two-month extension. And, as usual, some taxpayers simply will miss the deadline and face a late-filing penalty.

In many IRS offices, employees planned to continue offering advice tonight as long as taxpayers were asking for it.

The Postal Service was doing its part by setting up booths at ballparks, selling stamps by the curb, and cooperating with radio stations and civic groups that were offering refreshments around post offices in an effort to make this a little easier for procrastinators.

Around the nation, the Jobs for Peace Campaign sent demonstrators into the streets to protest military spending. They planned to pass out "Build Homes — Not Bombs" stickers for taxpayers to attach to the envelopes containing their tax returns.

The campaign is urging support for a bill to finance more housing by cutting military spending. The group calculates that 52 cents of every tax dollar goes for military spending, retirement and interest on money borrowed to finance weapons. By government figuring, the military will take 27 percent of next year's budget, not including interest or pensions.

In Washington, Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., repeated a tax-day act he has performed for 10 years: introducing a bill that would allow conscientious objectors to pay their taxes into a fund that would be spent for non-military purposes.

"We recognize conscientious objection in time of war," Hatfield said in a statement. "It is now time to recognize it in time of peace."

The National Treasury Employees Union, which represents most IRS employees, issued a statement accusing the Bush administration of failing to budget enough money to finance the tax-collection agency. Employee travel and training have been cut and technicians have been pressed into clerical work because of the tight budget, said Robert M. Tobias, president of the union.

By its actions, he said, the administration "effectively declared

April 17 a national holiday for tax cheaters."

The Church of Scientology used the filing deadline as a way of reminding taxpayers of a new law designed to protect them when they have disputes with the IRS. The church, which has had its share of scraps with the agency, announced it has published a free guidebook to the "Taxpayer Bill of Rights."

Van Gogh Painting Returned

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OTTERLO, Netherlands — Thieves have returned one of three Vincent van Gogh paintings they stole from a museum in hopes of obtaining a $2.5 million ransom, police said today.

No ransom was paid for "The Loom," which was taken from the Kroeller-Mueller National Museum in December and recovered unharmed April 6 from the trunk of a car parked near the home of the museum's director, police spokesman Theo Reus said.

The return of the painting and dealings with the thieves had been kept secret but police decided to publicize the events today because a newspaper learned of the negotiations, Reus said.

The thieves returned "The Loom" to prove they were possessed the other two stolen art works, "Wilted Sunflowers" and an early version of "The Potato Eaters."

He said no ransom has been paid and the whereabouts of the remaining two paintings is unknown. The total value of the three works has been estimated at $100 million to $125 million.

On Dec. 12 the thieves smashed a museum window and stole the paintings.

The three works were not insured by the state because of the high premiums that would be required. Police and art experts have said it would be nearly impossible to sell the paintings because they are so well known.

Fire Hits Art District

CHICAGO (AP) — Authorities were investigating the cause of a suspicious fire that swept through a historic, century-old loft building, destroying millions of dollars worth of art and at least eight galleries.

All that remained today of the six-story, block-square warehouse designed by the noted Chicago architect Louis Sullivan was a brick shell.

Witnesses said Saturday's fire began in at least two spots, "and very seldom do two fires break out simultaneously," said Fire Department spokesman Tom Sheppard.

Gallery owners said the River North art district should recover quickly from the fire.

Chemical Spill

Aiken County firefighters approach a truck which crashed Sunday at mill marker No. 7 on Interstate 20 near Belvedere, S.C. Authorities said the truck was carrying various chemicals, including the toxic chemical, Ethylene Diamine. Residents within a half mile radius of the crash site were evacuated from their homes following the accident.

Oil Firms Outline Spill Response Plans

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Federal officials say there is almost no chance that oil spilled from wells off the North Carolina coast would foul Tar Heel beaches, but state officials question the accuracy of the computer models used to come up with that conclusion.

"We contended that the model was not accounting for the Gulf Stream spinoff eddies and therefore the projections that the spill would go out into the Atlantic were wrong," said Donna Moffitt, who heads Gov. Jim Martin's task force on offshore drilling.

Eight oil companies have leased about 120,000 acres on the edge of the continental shelf off the Outer Banks. They plan to drill their first exploratory well next spring on a tract leased by Mobil Oil Corp., which was picked to direct the drilling.

In the meantime, the companies are outlining plans for their response in the event of a spill.

A boat with equipment for containing and cleaning up spills will be moored at the drilling site, which will be 38 miles from the nearest land, said oil companies hoping to search for oil and gas off the state's coast.

Other equipment will be kept at Morehead City, they said. In the event of a major spill, more equipment would be brought in from out of state.

Quayle In Charlotte To Meet With Group Of Conservatives

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Vice President Dan Quayle has said he doesn't want to be a "spear carrier" for the right wing, but his trip today to Charlotte will give a shot in the arm to one of the area's most conservative groups.

Quayle will be guest of honor at the fifth annual banquet of Concerned Charlotteans. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., arranged the visit.

Led by the Rev. Joseph Chambers, the conservative citizens' group has stirred controversy with its attacks against abortion, homosexuality, pornography, AIDS education and a state lottery.

A Quayle aide said the visit wasn't part of any special appeal to the right.

"This is an administration of inclusion," said David Beckwith, Quayle's press secretary. "Quayle is a conservative, and his political base is in the conservative side of the Republican Party. But there are no grand strategic implications in this speaking appearance."

Quayle will also visit Charlotte's First Ward Elementary School for minutes this afternoon. He will speak at an assembly, go to a sixth-grade science class and meet privately with faculty members, administrators and parents.

Quayle initiated the visit, Beckwith said. He was attracted to the school because it is an integrated inner-city school that was one of 287 schools named outstanding schools last year by the U.S. Education Department.

Beckwith said Quayle will also meet with editors of The Charlotte Observer, showing that he is interested in hearing all viewpoints. "I've heard that your newspaper is a little bit to the left of center for Charlotte," Beckwith told the newspaper.

Getting Quayle to come to their banquet is a coup for Concerned Charlotteans.

Beckwith said Quayle agreed to attend the Concerned Charlotteans banquet after getting an invitation from Helms, who is scheduled to introduce Quayle at the dinner.

The $20-a-person banquet at the Charlotte Convention Center will cap a day of workshops and seminars on promoting family issues through political involvement.

Helms was a "key mover" in getting Quayle to come, agreed Chambers, the group's president and pastor of the Paw Creek Church of God.

Chambers said North Carolina is having a "conservative renaissance" in the battle against pornography and other problems.

"We're making as much progress, or more, than the rest of the nation," he said, "so we felt like that at this point it would be a good experience" for all involved.

But moderate Republicans are concerned Quayle's appearance will strengthen the conservative, anti-abortion movement in the local GOP's bitter intraparty battle over that issue.

"I don't have any objection to him appearing in front of them," said Republican Brenda Campbell, "but I really am concerned about the influence that groups like this have with a lot of political leaders. His appearance gives them more credibility than they probably should have."

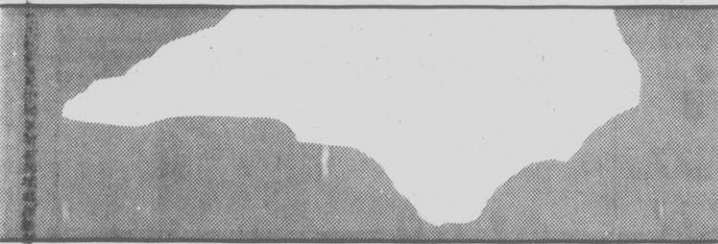

Campbell, president-elect of the Charlotte Women's Political Caucus said Concerned Charlotteans is well organized through its churches, but is not entirely effective at bringing voters to the polls.

Chambers said he didn't think his group was beyond the mainstream.

"We are not a group of extreme right-wing people," he said. "Everything we've done we try to do without alienating people." He said the group is nonpartisan and consistently invites Democrats and Republicans to its events.

Gov. Jim Martin plans to attend the banquet, and so does Charlotte Mayor Sue Myrick. Rep. Alex McMillan, R-N.C., has business in Washington and will not attend, though he has attended the group's activities in the past, an aide said.

Student Injured

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A University of North Carolina at Wilmington student remained in critical condition Sunday after being shot in the neck at an outdoor party just minutes after partygoers had pelted a passing car with beer bottles.

Kurt David Lindstrom, 19, from Eatontown, N.J., a sophomore marine biology student, was shot with a small-caliber handgun around 1 a.m. Saturday, police and witnesses said.

Lindstrom was in critical condition at New Hanover Memorial Hospital's intensive care unit Sunday, a nursing supervisor said.

Police have made no arrests.

Lindstrom was part of a crowd of 150 to 300 people who gathered Friday night for a street party that grew from several small impromptu parties south of the university, students and police said.

Detective Pat Prigden of the Wilmington Police Department said cans and bottles struck one of two cars that passed through the crowd, and a man in one of the cars stood up through the open sunroof and fired.

Bomb Threats

ASHEVILLE (AP) — A pair of bomb threats Sunday kept Jackson County officials on the run, the second time in five days bomb threats plagued the county.

Cullowhee Quik Stop owner Douglas Murajda called the sheriff's department Sunday after an employee received a call at 10:10 a.m. saying two bombs had been planted at the store.

Emergency personnel made three searches of the store and found nothing. The store was evacuated and officials waited for the caller's 12:18 p.m. deadline to pass. It passed without incident and the store was reopened after 1 p.m.

Just after emergency personnel left the store they were called to a theater in Sylva after the sheriff's department received a call saying a bomb had been planted there.

A search of the theater failed to turn up anything.

Bodies Discovered

SOUTHERN PINES (AP) — The bodies of two men were found in a residence northwest of Southern Pines on Sunday, the Moore County Sheriff's Department said.

The bodies were found by Southern Pines police in the home of one of the victims after a woman reported the crime about 8:30 a.m., authorities said. The woman told police she witnessed the incident, authorities said.

The investigation was turned over to the Moore County Sheriff's Department because the crime apparently occurred outside the city limits, authorities said.

The woman told investigators that the men were killed about 4:30 a.m., but that she delayed calling police because her life had been threatened, authorities said.

Pope Holds Open House

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FAYETTEVILLE — Camouflage and khaki mixed with Bermuda shorts and Hawaiian shirts as about 225,000 people crowded the Pope Air Force Base "flight line" to watch military firepower and high-tech aerobatics during the annual base open house.

The attendance Sunday was the largest in the history of the open house, topping last year's estimate of 180,000, a spokesman said.

Displays of tanks, helicopters and airplanes — including the B1-B bomber — battled with paratroopers, simulated assaults and Fort Bragg's Golden Knights parachute team for spectator attention during the eight-hour event.

The show included a 30-minute precision flying performance from the U.S. Air Force Thunderbirds aerobatic team.

After discussing fiber characteristics previously and discovering that nylon is generally your best option, let's consider fiber-wear factors.

Originally, color, brightness and bulk attracted you to your "special" carpet. When new, the fiber's beauty was maximized by light reflected from its smooth, lustrous, colorful surface.

Unfortunately, due to traffic, children, pets and maintenance procedures, fibers inevitably become soiled; and a dull appearance results. Problem is, most homeowners wait years too long before serious soil removal begins. Meanwhile, the fiber experiences not only the build-up of hardened soils but also substantial abrasion, caused by particles of soil at the fiber's base (remember, it's the dirt you don't see that does the damage). This results in permanently dulled appearance — repeat, permanent and irreversible! It's sort of like taking a clear sheet of plastic and rubbing it with sandpaper. No matter how clean you get it, it still looks dull and dingy.

This condition is called "shading", and when finally cleaned, the shaded carpet never returns to the original brightness and beauty.

What's the solution? Really, it's a matter of common sense. You wouldn't use dishes daily without regular washing, would you....you wouldn't wear a garment for months without periodic cleaning, would you? Similarly, your carpet can only take so much wear and tear before it must be cleaned. Logical enough?....

If you'll give us a call, we'll see if we can recommend someone who can help solve your soil-removal problems! No charge, of course!....

Inquiry Into Soccer Stadium Disaster Begins

By Robert Barr
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SHEFFIELD, England — Lawmakers and sports officials demanded a ban on anti-riot barriers and standing-room sections in stadiums as the city of Liverpool mourned 94 soccer fans crushed to death behind a steel fence in Britain's worst sports disaster.

Most of the 24 victims so far publicly identified were under age 20. They included a 10-year-old boy who was trampled and two teen-age sisters who died before their father's eyes.

Of the 170 injured, 56 remained in hospital with 17 in intensive care, police said today.

Calling it "a disaster of immense proportions," Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said an inquiry would try to determine the cause of the human crush at Sheffield's Hillsborough stadium minutes into Saturday's cup semifinal between Liverpool and Nottingham Forest. Details of the probe were to be unveiled in Parliament this afternoon by Home Secretary Douglas Hurd.

Buckingham Palace said Prince Charles and Princess Diana would visit injured survivors in Sheffield later today.

Sixty-five miles away in Liverpool, mourners jammed the Roman Catholic cathedral Sunday for a requiem Mass for the victims — most of them residents of the north-western port city. The Anglican cathedral's bell tolled 94 times.

Lawmakers, sports officials and survivors on Sunday demanded changes in stadium designs, including the abolition of standing-room sections, known as terraces, and the anti-riot barriers around them.

"We have been saying for a long time that standing room must be converted into seating space," said Gerhard Aigner, general secretary of UEFA, Europe's soccer authority.

People "should have been able to escape off those terraces" and "were killed needlessly," said Liverpool's Liberal lawmaker, David Alton.

He said the fences should come down immediately, a demand echoed by Sheffield Labor lawmaker Joe Ashton, and Denis Howell, a former Labor sports minister.

Bert Millichip, president of the English Football Association, said regulations require fences, in part to prevent rowdiness. Police in Sheffield, whose crowd-control measures will be at the core of the inquiry, handed over a police investigation to the neighboring West Midlands police.

Authorities will likely want to determine why thousands of fans were still outside as the match began and why police decided to open a 16-foot-wide gate to allow many of them to surge en masse into one end of the stadium shortly after the kickoff.

The last-minute arrivals poured into a central standing-room-only section, pressing those already inside against the steel mesh fence.

Investigators also were expected to examine allegations that many entered the sold-out stadium, which has a capacity of 54,000, with forged tickets or without any tickets at all.

Grief-stricken survivors described watching children die and people hit each other in the frenzied fight to survive.

The sturdy 10-foot fence, angled in at the top to stop people from scaling it, prevented fans from escaping to the field. Some were crushed to death and others suffocated or were trampled trying to fight their way out of the crowd or when the barrier finally collapsed.

Businessman Trevor Hicks, 43, tried in vain to resuscitate his two daughters, Sarah, 19, and Victoria, 15, after they were pulled out of the crush of bodies.

"Football was the one thing we did as a family and now we are not a family anymore," he said.

South Yorkshire's chief constable, Peter Wright, said a senior officer decided to open the stadium gates "to save people's lives and to relieve the crush outside."

Survivor Stephen Dooling, 34, said police "had to open the door because the lads at the front were screaming. They would have died there at the turnstiles instead of in the ground."

The Sun newspaper quoted turnstile attendant Colin Milton as saying police ignored stewards' warnings not to open the gate. "They made a terrible mistake," he was quoted as saying.

It was the third major soccer tragedy in four years involving English teams, which have been barred from European soccer competition since a May 29, 1985, rampage by Liverpool fans at Heysel stadium in Brussels that killed 39 mostly Italian fans.

Soccer officials said the disaster could hurt British soccer clubs' chances for being readmitted to European competitions.

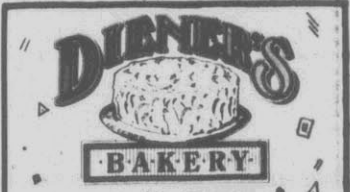

The UEFA, or Union of European Soccer Federations, last week lifted the ban on English clubs playing in Europe in the 1990-91 season, pending a review next April and good behavior by the fans.

Court Says Solidarity Legal Again

By John Daniszewski
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WARSAW, Poland — A court today ruled Solidarity legal again, officially ending a futile seven-year attempt by Communist authorities to eradicate the Soviet bloc's first independent workers' movement.

A three-judge panel in a Warsaw provincial court handed down the decision to register Solidarity in the same room where the union movement led by Lech Walesa had its original charter approved in November 1980.

There was thunderous applause when the court completed the about-face approved by Polish leader Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, who had tried to dissolve Solidarity in a December 1981 martial-law crackdown but now seeks the movement's help to pull Poland out of economic crisis.

Several Solidarity sources hinted that a meeting might take place between Jaruzelski and Walesa on Tuesday.

The last step in the long bid for restoration of the union movement followed intensive negotiations between authorities and the Solidarity-led opposition that ended April 5 with far-reaching accords.

The bargain grants Solidarity and other long-banned groups legalization in exchange for opposition participation in party-dominated parliament elections in June. It also creates the first freely elected legislative chamber in the Soviet bloc — a Senate which will have veto power over the current unicameral parliament, or Sejm, where authorities will maintain a majority.

As the court session ended, hundreds of hands lifted in the "V" for victory sign and chants of "Solidarnosc, Solidarnosc" filled the room. The Solidarity leaders beamed and the judges shook hands with the participants.

"I am happy that we've just returned on the road of democracy and freedom," Walesa said after hearing the decision at his home in Gdansk, where he is recovering from a bad cold.

Two long Solidarity banners were held up through the hearing before Presiding Judge Danuta Widawska, about a dozen key Solidarity activists and 300 spectators. Outside the courtroom another 100 supporters waited.

"Today means for me the restoration of justice," said Tadeusz Mazowiecki, the senior Solidarity adviser who led the delegation that submitted the application.

Mazowiecki, who was on hand for Solidarity's first legalization in 1980, added, "I hope I will not have to come here a third time."

The Rev. Henryk Jankowski, Walesa's close adviser, said he came from his Gdansk church to "verify" Walesa's words at the funeral of pro-Solidarity priest Jerzy Popieluszko, slain by the secret police: "You gave your life so Solidarity could live."

Solidarity had a stormy 16-month legal existence before it was suspended by Jaruzelski's martial-law decree of Dec. 13, 1981, which led to the internment thousands of activists and the 11-month detention of Walesa.

The union that once claimed the membership of one in three Poles officially was banned in October 1982 but never ceased to function — first as an underground organization and then more openly after a 1986 political amnesty took effect.

The Communist party says its decision to legalize Solidarity again results from changes in the political situation over the years that open the possibility for a more responsible union devoted to trade union issues and not politics.

Party and government officials also admit they hope that legalizing the union will encourage the West to reschedule Poland's massive foreign debt and ease the pressure on the struggling economy.

President Bush scheduled a speech today in the heavily Polish-American community of Hamtramck, Mich., to unveil new economic package for Poland.

Admiral Paul Yost heads to beach to see cleanup operations

Yost Reviews Cleanup Plan

By Paul Jenkins
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BLOCK ISLAND, Alaska — On this tiny piece of real estate in Prince William Sound, gooey crude oil from the nation's worst oil spill is puddled ankle-deep in some places.

Beaches are slathered with it, and a black line across rocky outcroppings marks the reach of high tide and the border between life and death.

With Alaska's brief summer approaching, Exxon is faced with the task of cleaning the shoreline here and in dozens of other places before mid-September and the first signs of winter.

The company must clean about 300 miles of remote and rugged beaches and shoreline within 150 days.

"It's going to be very, very tough," said Coast Guard Adm. Paul Yost, who is heading the operations at President Bush's direction.

Exxon this weekend handed Yost a shoreline cleanup plan he had demanded, and on Sunday the company assembled officials of state and federal agencies and the news media for a technological show and tell on a heavily oiled beach here.

For hours in a cold drizzle, Exxon displayed on 75 yards of gravel beach techniques for removing oil. They included things like vacuums and a $3,000 gun capable of spewing 2½ gallons of steaming hot water a minute, an environmentally risky method because it sterilizes the beach.

"Different combinations of these will be necessary in different situations," said Bob Castle, a San Francisco-based Exxon consultant.

Landing craft hauling heavy equipment butted up to greasy rocks on the normally quiet beach. A small skimmer slurped up oil in an area surrounded by bright yellow booms. Heavy clouds drooped almost to the water, obscuring nearby mountains.

As visitors trooped back and forth, a dead, oil-soaked bird was found lodged in sharp oily rocks.

About 60 oil-smeared workers in rain gear and hard hats wrestled with grimy firehoses, generators and other gear — stopping and starting with the arrival of new batches of visitors clad in bright orange float suits. Helicopters ferrying the crowds competed for space to land.

One technique used irrigation and fire hoses to rinse the beach with cold water. It removed more than half the oil in one spot during a brief demonstration and had to be halted occasionally so that late-arriving officials — Yost included — would get to see it in action.

Yost said he would meet with Exxon officials late today to discuss its shore cleanup plan. He said he was encouraged by what he saw, but added, "this is going to be a very, very difficult operation."

Details of Exxon's cleanup plan have not been made public. Ed Owens, an Exxon technology consultant, said the cost of cleaning Prince William Sound beaches could run to $200 a linear foot. When the work starts in perhaps two to three weeks, Exxon will field up to 30 crews, some with 50 or more workers, he said.

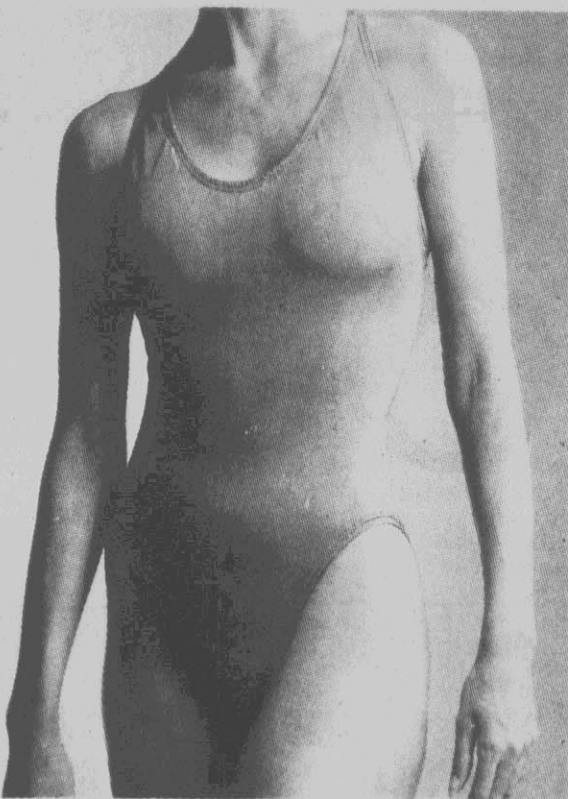

The 987-foot tanker Exxon Valdez dumped 10.1 million gallons of crude oil in the sound on March 24 after hitting Bligh Reef some 25 miles northeast of Block Island.

The company has picked up about 840,000 gallons from the sea. Shoreline cleanup has been nil, and Exxon has drawn increasing fire for its lack of response. Because of the criticism, Yost was put in charge of the effort.

Block Island actually is part of Ellinor Island. An uplifting of the sea floor joined the two during the 1964 Good Friday earthquake, 25 years to the day before the Exxon spill. Controlled by the U.S. Forest Service, it is home to Sitka black-tailed deer, land otters and various birds. It also contains at least one archaeological site.

Aquino Cool To Rebel Peace Offer

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MANILA, Philippines — President Corazon Aquino today brushed aside an offer by communist rebels to declare a cease-fire if she pledges to close U.S. military bases, and the U.S. ambassador called the proposal a bid to weaken her government.

The rebel National Democratic Front offered Sunday to declare a unilateral cease-fire in the 20-year insurgency and open peace talks if Mrs. Aquino vows to close the six U.S. bases when their lease expires in 1991.

"As I have said, if we want a cease-fire then let's have a cease-fire first without any conditions," said Mrs. Aquino, who has refused to say if she will support an extension of the lease.

Mrs. Aquino also raised doubts about who really was authorized to speak for the rebels: "Until we can find out once and for all who is the leader who can speak for all of them, it is really very difficult to sit down with anybody." The rebel statement, which was delivered to news organizations, was signed by Satur Ocampo, one of two rebel negotiators in short-lived peace talks in 1986. Ocampo made similar proposal in an interview last month.

Jose Maria Sison, founder of the banned Communist Party of the Philippines, also gave the same statement in a videotaped interview from Utrecht, the Netherlands, where he has sought asylum. Sison's interview was broadcast over local television two weeks ago.

U.S. Ambassador Nicholas Platt said today that the rebel offer was aimed at undermining U.S.-Philippine relations and weakening the Aquino government.

"They realize that these bases and these facilities perform a very important economic role, and they want to do anything they can to weaken the government," Platt said in an interview with radio station DZRH.

"And so they are working hard to try and arrange for this relationship to end," he added. Platt said the United States would close the bases if the Philippine government wants them out.

The United States maintains Clark Air Base and Subic Bay Naval Base, two of its largest facilities overseas, and four smaller installations in the Philippines. More than 60,000 Filipinos are employed at the bases, where about 40,000 U.S. troops and their dependents are stationed.

The rebel statement said that if the Aquino government were to close the bases by 1991 and promise no further agreements for U.S. bases, "the National Democratic Front would not hesitate to immediately declare a unilateral cease-fire and enter into negotiations for a comprehensive political settlement and a peaceful end to the civil war."

But if the government refuses, the rebels said they were determined "to make U.S. imperialism pay dearly for the continued stay of its bases and its increasing intervention in our people's affairs."

Doctors Should Watch Body Language

By Randolph Picht
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — Physicians need to "listen" with their eyes, according to a doctor who believes patients sometimes say "yes" while their bodies are really saying "no, no, no" to treatment.

The doctor who understands that body language can deal with the conflict and try to help instead of sending the patients away unhappy, said Dr. Cecile Carson, chief of behavioral and psychosocial medicine at Genesee Hospital.

"It's not what we say, but how we say it and how a patient hears it, that makes a difference," agreed Dr. Robert E. McAfee of Portland, Me., a member of the American Medical Association Board of Trustees. "It goes to the question of who you want for your doctor. If you come to me and keep coming back to me, it's probably because I, quote, tend to hit off with you, unquote."

Carson, supported by a grant from the National Fund for Medical Education, has adapted non-verbal communication theories — shrugs, folded arms and glances — and is teaching medical students and lecturing around the country.

Suppose a doctor believes her patient should change medication to lower his blood pressure. The doctor notes all the potential benefits, explains why she thinks it would be a good idea and then asks her patient what he thinks.

The patient crosses his arms, raises his shoulders slightly and leans back in the chair. His eyes get noticeably wider and he holds his breath as he says, "It sounds like a good idea to me." The mouth said yes, the body said no.

"The important thing is to notice that you're getting a mixed message. Then I ask, 'Which message do you think would predict that patient's behavior.' The answer is the non-verbal one and you have to know that," Carson said.

"You may not have time to work it all out at that visit but you need to note it so you're not frustrated or angry when they come back and say they haven't taken it," she said.

To better read body language, a doctor must "calibrate" the patient by asking particular questions and watching the physical response. The doctor also should be aware that sitting behind a desk to give a prognosis can be perceived as uncaring and distant and that standing over a patient in a hospital bed and talking can make a patient feel weak and unsafe, Carson said.

She also emphasizes "pacing" — adjusting body movements to a patient's movements in order to make a patient feel more comfortable. "So if a patient has her arms crossed, the doctor might want to cross his arms. If the patient is leaning forward, the doctor might want to lean forward."

Carson believes that non-verbal communication is a skill that can be acquired with practice, and that even people who recognize and respond to many non-verbal actions need to be taught. "Some people are sort of innately better at this, but they may not be doing this consciously. People who do this as a matter of style, even they hit snags."

Generally, when the doctor-patient interaction falls apart, she said, the first the doctors say is that they've got a hostile or an uncooperative patient on their hands.

"They don't ask if there's something they can do."

Two Are Wed Saturday

AYDEN — Lela Carol Dawson and Ricky Dale Moore were united in marriage Saturday at 3 p.m. in a double-ring wedding.

The Rev. Frank Flowers conducted the ceremony in Little Creek Free Will Baptist Church. Pianist Terry McLawhorn and vocalists Brenda Heath and Eddie Davenport presented wedding music.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her parents are Edna W. Dawson of Route 3, Greenville, and Jake W. Dawson of Greenville. Mr. and Mrs. Rodrick Moore of Route 3, Grifton, are parents of the bridegroom.

Sandra Denis Dawson of Route 3, Winterville, was maid of honor for her sister, Lisa Leggett and Teresa Kellum, both of Greenville, were bridesmaids.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Leslie Moore of Ayden and Paul McLawhorn of Greenville were ushers.

The bride wore a satin silk and Venice lace formal gown. It was designed with a sweetheart neckline and long tapered organza sleeves with lace. The bodice was accented with silk Venice motifs, pearls and sequins and had a basque waistline. Scalloped lace enhanced the hemline, and the semi-cathedral train was detailed with cut-outs. Her veil was designed with side sprays and pearls with silk flowers. She carried a cascade bouquet of stephanotis, spring flowers, pearls and love knots.

The mother of the bride wore a tea-length dress of pink silk and the bridegroom's mother wore a tea-length dress of lavender silk.

Earlene Smith directed the ceremony.

The maid of honor and bridesmaids wore identical tea-length gowns of satin fuchsia styled with sweetheart necklines, bows on the sleeves and princess bodices. The basque waistlines were accented with charmeuse sashes. Each carried a bouquet of spring flowers with love knots.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall. Assisting were Mr. and Mrs. Johnnie Warlick, Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Moore, Rita Mize and Stephanie Warlick.

An after-rehearsal dinner was given by the parents of the bridegroom. A miscellaneous shower was also given for the couple.

After a wedding trip to the coast, the couple will live near Grifton.

The bride is a graduate of North Pitt High School and is employed by Pitt County Memorial Hospital. The bridegroom is a graduate of Greene

There Will Always Be Some Risk

Dear Abby: I commend you for addressing the topic of genital herpes in your column. However, you recently provided some advice that is incorrect and potentially dangerous. You stated that "if there are no symptoms, sores or active lesions, your partner is not infectious." This is clearly not true, and heeding this advice could result in couples disregarding precautions necessary to avoid transmission of genital herpes to the uninfected partner.

While asymptomatic intervals carry a decreased risk of transmission, infected persons are still capable of transmitting the virus. In fact, more than half of the infected sex partners discussed in one journal article denied having symptoms they recognized as herpes at the time they transmitted infection.

When symptoms or sores are present, sexual contact with the involved area should be avoided completely. Because of the risk of asymptomatic transmission, condoms should be used with each sexual act. Bluntly put: There is always some risk, although condoms will serve to decrease this risk. — Willard Cates Jr., M.D., M.P.H., Director, Division of Sexually Transmitted Diseases, Centers for Disease Control

Dear Dr. Cates: Thank you for your timely and enlightening article. The professional medical experts who advised me on this issue obviously had a different opinion. I'm sure I'll hear from other experts on this topic. Readers: Stay tuned.

Dear Abby: This is a message from the land of the Ocklewha band of Seminole Indians.

On behalf of the principal chief, Little Dove Ghigar Buford, her husband, Principal Sub-Chief Running Buck Buford, her daughter, Princess Flaming Star, and her son-in-law, Soaring Eagle DeLong, the parents of Singing Spirit DeLong and the rest of our tribe, we wish to thank you for putting in your column the name of the wonderful organization that makes possible corrective surgery for children with birth defects.

Because you let us know about the National Craniofacial Foundation, little Singing Spirit is now on her way to Dallas with her mother, to begin her series of many operations.

"Wan Dan" (thank you), Abby. May "Yowa" (God) walk with you in youroccasins down the trail of life. — Chief Three Buffalo Willson, Cox-Osceola Indian Reservation, Orange Springs, Fla.

Dear Chief: Wan Dan (thank you) for letting me know that little Singing Spirit will soon reap the benefits of this fine organization. May Yowa

(God) bless her. I wish her well.

Readers: The National Craniofacial Foundation is a non-profit organization that exists to provide corrective surgery for those who were born with birth defects. For information, write to it at: 3100 Carlisle, Suite 215, Dallas, Texas 75204, and enclose a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope. Or telephone the toll-free number: (800) 535-3643.

Dear Abby: I was surprised at your answer to "Mr. Clean Plate," who asked if it was considered bad manners to eat everything on the plate. You said, "It's bad manners to mop up every drop of gravy with a piece of bread, but to deliberately leave edible food on one's plate for the sake of 'appearances' is both wasteful and foolish."

Abby, my grandmother (a very gracious lady) taught me that to leave a bit of food on my plate is a compliment to the hostess — implying that the meal was delicious, the amount served was adequate, and the guest could not possibly have eaten another bite.

"We must remember," she would say, "never to eat the tip end of a banana, or the bottom tip of an ice cream cone. Nor should one drink the last swallow from a glass or cup." — Remembering Granny In Coronado, Calif.

Dear Remembering: Obviously your grandmother and mine went to different schools. My grandmother (and my mother, too) would remind us of the "starving Armenians" if we wasted food.

I agree, it's bad manners to voraciously devour every edible morsel, but to throw away the tip of an ice cream cone for appearance's sake is a ridiculous affectation.

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 6940, Los Angeles, CA. 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

ECU, UNCW Split; Title Game Tonight

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

With the Colonial Athletic Association's regular season baseball title at stake, East Carolina and UNC-Wilmington played 16 innings Sunday afternoon and decided nothing.

The Seahawks, who came into the doubleheader unbeaten in 12 previous CAA games, quelled an East Carolina rally in the ninth inning of the opener to take a 5-3 victory.

But the Pirates, now fighting for their lives, came back with a 9-0 win on the strong arm of Jonathan Jenkins to force one final game for the "title."

Actually, the league's championship and its NCAA bid will be decided a month from now in the CAA tournament, which will be played at Wilmington starting May 12.

UNCW still holds a game lead on the Pirates with a 13-1 record while ECU is now 12-2. However, an ECU victory in Monday night's game, set for 7 p.m. at Harrington Field, would knot the two for the regular season title — and the Pirates would get top seeding in the tournament. Of course, if UNCW wins the game, it would take the top seeding.

"Sure, it means something," Seahawk coach Bobby Guthrie said. "Anytime you can win first place, you want to win it. And anytime you can win something that takes four or five weeks to accomplish, you want it, even if the tournament will decide who goes to the NCAA."

"And I think Gary (Overton, ECU coach) would agree," Guthrie added.

Agree Overton did.

"That's what the regular season is for — to see you gets the top seeding," he said.

In the first game, the Pirates led on a couple of occasions, but never could seem to find the key to getting the victory.

"Wilmington had a lot to do with that," Overton said. "Their pitchers didn't walk anybody (actually, two, one less than the Pirate pitchers) and they made no errors (again, three, one more than the Pirates). Anytime a team does that, you have to get a number of hits at opportune times. We got a number of hits (11) but they didn't come at the right times."

UNCW got only eight hits, but they came at opportune times as only three of their five runs were earned.

"We wanted to play better than we did in the second game," Guthrie said, "but I think we put so much into the first game that we had no intensity left for the second. We worked so hard in that first game to get the win against a super baseball team. To come in here and sweep them after they haven't been beaten here all year would have been an unbelievable feat."

Overton said he thought his team had a lot of intensity in both games, but that Jonathan Jenkins' pitching in the second game made a huge difference.

Jenkins allowed a hit in the first inning, but had that man erased in a double play. Through five and two-thirds innings, he had faced only the minimum amount of batters. Joe Catalano's single to right snapped that string, but Jenkins was able to hang on and preserve the shutout.

He can also thank a tree limb for that. In the seventh, with one out, Tom Heitler slapped a ball deep to left, but it fell into the playing field and bounced out of the glove of John Adams.

"I guess I got an error on that one," Adams said afterwards. "It hit a tree limb coming down."

Jenkins admitted that he tired late in the game after pitching the final two innings of the first game in relief. In that game, he suffered his first collegiate loss, but the second game victory boosted him to 9-1 on the year and 14-1 overall. Jenkins allowed but three hits, struck out five and walked none.

"I knew it (a loss) would come," Jenkins said philosophically, "but if we couldn't get a sweep, I'm glad they had to win the first one. They were sure that they were going to win the second one, too, but I think the momentum is back on our side now."

In the opening game, UNCW struck for the lead in the first inning. Mark Chamberlain singled and stole second. He scored on a hit by Ed Stoudenmire.

The Pirates tied it up on the bottom of the frame. With two outs, Tommy Eason doubled to left and courtesy runner David Daniels

Stewart Easily Wins Heritage

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. — Payne Stewart, who skipped the Heritage Classic for four straight seasons before coming back this year, plans to be back next year.

After all, he'll be the defending champion.

"Oh yeah, I'll be back," he said. "It's a great thing about winning; you always want to come back and defend your title because you are only the only defending champion that week."

Stewart, who either led or shared the lead through all four rounds, won the Heritage going away with a 16-under-par 268, which broke the tournament record of 270 set by Tom Watson in 1979 and matched by Nick Faldo in 1984.

Stewart pocketed $144,000 for the victory on Sunday, his fourth in his PGA career that began in 1981. It was also his first victory since the 1987 Bay Hill Classic.

"I don't know what to say," Stewart told reporters after his victory. "I feel great. It's a feeling I haven't had since Bay Hill."

"I played some of the best golf I can remember playing for 72 holes. I drove the ball well and I played within myself."

The 32-year-old Stewart maintained at least a 3-stroke lead throughout the final round at the Harbour Town Golf Links. But he never let up, and he virtually clinched the victory with a 25-foot birdie putt on the 15th hole. That gave him a 5-shot lead with three holes to play.

Stewart, whose bad back bothered him throughout the final round, said he never considered playing it safe as the holes dwindled and his lead held.

"I've watched some leads disappear in my time," he said. "So I was going to try to run away and hide. ... That makes walking down the 18th hole a whole lot of fun."

Kenny Perry, who had never finished higher than fourth in his three-year PGA career, was second at 273 after shooting a final-round, even-par 71 on the 6,657-yard course. Perry won $86,400. Fred Couples, with a 65 on Sunday, tied Bernhard Langer for third at 277. Langer, a former Heritage champion, had a final-round 71.

Three players tied for fifth at 278 — Lanny Wadkins, Craig Stadler and Kenny Knox. Knox did not really get close to winning but set an all-time PGA Tour putting record. He used only 93 putts on Harbour Town's tiny greens, eclipsing by one stroke the record for 72 holes, set by George Archer on this course in 1980.

Stewart, now eighth on the money-winning list with $306,710, shared the lead with Perry over the first two rounds, then pulled away to a 3-stroke advantage when third-round play was halted by darkness Saturday night after a 3½-hour rain delay.

Stewart and Perry were among the 18 players who returned Sunday morning to complete third-round play. Stewart came in at 67 and retained that 3-shot lead when Perry slipped to a 70.

Gioiosa Facing Charges Today

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — Thomas Gioiosa, a former housemate of Cincinnati Reds manager Pete Rose, faced a court appearance today on charges of tax evasion and conspiracy to distribute cocaine.

Gioiosa, 31, was indicted April 6 by a federal grand jury in Cincinnati. He was scheduled to appear for arraignment today in U.S. District Court. If convicted, Gioiosa could face maximum penalties of 38 years in prison and $2 million in fines.

Gioiosa was released from prison in Boston the day after his indictment and arrest. His parents used their house in New Bedford, Mass., to raise the $20,000 bond, and Gioiosa was ordered to limit his travels to Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Ohio.

The five-count federal indictment accuses Gioiosa of income-tax evasion for the years 1985-86, and charges that he conspired with others to arrange cocaine deliveries from Florida to Cincinnati between January 1985 and January 1987.

The indictment also alleges that Gioiosa falsely claimed $47,646 in gambling winnings from the winning ticket on a Jan. 16, 1987, horse race at Turfway Park in Florence, Ky., and falsely listed it as income on his federal tax return for 1987.

The indictment says that Gioiosa claimed the entire amount as income and offset a portion of that with gambling losses which would otherwise be non-deductible.

Gioiosa also is accused of conspiring with others to prevent the Internal Revenue Service from determining whom to assess income tax against for the winning ticket. The indictment said Gioiosa conspired with others to conceal the true identity of the winning ticket holder, who wasn't identified.

Gioiosa was on a community college baseball team when he met Rose in 1978 in Florida during spring training. Rose said Gioiosa was invited to live with his family by his former wife, Karolyn, and was a housemate for about five years.

Rose distanced himself from Gioiosa after the indictment, saying he hadn't kept in close contact with him.

Rose is under investigation by the commissioner's office for his alleged gambling. If he's found to have bet on baseball games, he would be suspended for a year. If it is found to have bet on Reds' games, he would be suspended for life.

Rose, with his team in San Diego over the weekend, said he's not worried about how he'll emerge from baseball's inquiry.

"When you're not doing nothing, why worry?" he said. "People who do something worry. People that worry jump off bridges. I can walk across any bridge in the world."

Dale Earnhardt gives the thumbs up sign after win

Earnhardt Snaps Winless Streak

Goodyear's Experimental Radial Tire Helps Win First Union 400 Race

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NORTH WILKESBORO — Dale Earnhardt returned to victory lane and the top of the NASCAR Winston Cup standings Sunday by winning the First Union 400, and he said it was about time.

"It's been frustrating not to have won lately because we've been close," said Earnhardt, who leads Geoff Bodine by three points and Alan Kulwicki by nine in the points standings.

Earnhardt won for the first time in 16 NASCAR Winston Cup races, pulling away from Kulwicki in the final four laps. It was Earnhardt's first victory since Bristol last August.

Kulwicki, making a bid for his second career victory, was on Earnhardt's bumper through much of the final 10 laps. He failed in his effort to pass on lap 394, and his hopes ended with four laps left when he slid to the high side of the second turn on his final attempt.

"Alan had caught me after I punished my tires a bit racing against my old friend Rusty (Wallace)," said Earnhardt, who led 296 of the race's 400 laps and won $51,225. "Alan punished his too after he spun out and I was able to pull away."

Kulwicki said brake problems on his Ford hampered his effort.

"We had problems with the brakes all day and I was trying to pump them there at the end....With about four laps to go, there was nothing I could save, so I gave it all I had and just came up short. It might have been a different finish if I'd had some brakes."

Earnhardt, who started third in a Chevrolet, finished about 25 car lengths ahead of Kulwicki, who nipped third-place Mark Martin at the finish. Dick Trickle finished fourth and Terry Labonte, who had won three of the last four Winston Cup events at North Wilkesboro, finished fifth.

Rounding out the top 10 were Ricky Rudd, Geoff Bodine, Darrell Waltrip, pole-winner Rusty Wallace and Ernie Ivan.

Goodyear, as did Earnhardt, claimed victory Sunday. The company reintroduced the radial after pulling it from competition in February at Daytona.

Fifteen drivers began the race on Hoosier tires but, by lap 110, all the teams had switched to Goodyear's radials.

"We tested here on (the radials) and based on what we'd seen ... we felt the tires were safe and consistent," said Earnhardt, who was one of 17 to start the race with Goodyear tires. "We knew we were in fat city with them. All the cars on Hoosiers dropped a couple of laps and I'm just glad they qualified on them."

"I've got to hand it to Goodyear in coming back with the radials and proving themselves. They were real consistent. All day long we could bank on what the tires would do."

Wallace, who set a track record in qualifying with a time of 117.524 mph on the .625-mile track, began the race on Hoosier tires and had fallen to 10th by the 30th lap and was ahead of all other drivers on Hoosiers at that point.

Wallace won the last race at North Wilkesboro and had won seven of the last 11 Winston Cup races entering Sunday's event.

"I guess by starting out on those Hoosiers, I outfoxed myself," said Wallace, who has won three Winston Cup events this season. "The reason we got down early was because of the radials and they didn't give up. Then, too, it was a long while before we got the first yellow flag and could change tires. You couldn't hang 'em out with the radials, but the Hoosiers gave up terribly."

Earnhardt led most of the way after the 128th lap and fended off charges by Bodine, Trickle, Waltrip and Kulwicki.

After the race's eighth of 10 caution flags on lap 335, Trickle and Waltrip opted not to pit and went ahead of Earnhardt briefly. On the restart, Earnhardt charged to the front and led the rest of the way.

Waltrip, who spun and lost some ground just before the eighth caution, dropped off the pace.

Bodine, who started second in a Chevrolet, pulled away along with Earnhardt in the early stages and opened a quarter-track lead on Wallace's Pontiac.

Greg Sacks was the first of 15 drivers to switch from Hoosiers to Goodyears and he did so on a routine pit stop in the 60th lap. The other drivers using Hoosiers soon followed suit.

Sports Notes

Lewis Pleased With Sunday's Scrimmage

East Carolina head football coach Bill Lewis normally doesn't like to practice on Sunday afternoon. That's usually a day to settle down after a big game. But if this Sunday's practice was any indication, Lewis could have the Pirates back in pads in the near future.

Saturday's scrimmage was postponed until Sunday due to the rainy conditions.

Drawing biggest raves from Lewis were the quarterbacks, especially rising senior Travis Hunter and rising junior Chad Grier.

Hunter completed five of 11 passes for 57 yards and had eight rushing attempts 79 yards. Grier completed 12 of 23 passes for 149 yards with three touchdowns and two interceptions.

As a team, the Pirates had 84 rushing plays for 340 yards and had 69 passing attempts for 407 yards. The squad averaged 4.88 yards per attempt total offense and had 10 touchdowns against a various group of Pirate defenders.

The 2½ hour, 153-play scrimmage saw the Pirate offense in various situations — down and distance, first and goal and short yardage drives.

Hunter Gallimore had a fine day catching the football, with five grabs for 77 yards. Willie Lewis had six catches for 62 yards and also had 19 carries for 70 yards.

On the defensive side of the ball, Chris Hall had two pass deflections, one fumble recovery and an interception. Tim Wolter had two interceptions and Joe Holmes had two tackles for losses of 27 yards including a 25-yard sack.

The Pirates will concentrate on conditioning Monday and practice in shorts Tuesday before a major scrimmage Wednesday. That scrimmage will be closed to the public.

Pirate Golfers Second In CAA Tourney

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — Richmond, led by John Kirkoran and Rob Shawger, took a nine-stroke lead over defending champion East Carolina at the end of Sunday's second round of the three-day, 54-hole Colonial Athletic Association championship.

The Spiders toured Homestead's par-70, 6,566-yard Cascade course in 309 for a 614 total with Kirkoran scoring 73 and Shawger adding a 76. The other two scorers for Richmond were Andy Brock at 77 and Dave Renzulli's 83.

East Carolina, conference winners the past two years, shot a 310 Sunday for a 623 total with Francis Vaughn setting the pace with a 73. Simon Moye posted a 78, John McGinness 79, and Tee Davies 80.

In 1988, Richmond had the same nine-stroke edge after 36 holes before folding in the final nine holes and losing the title to East Carolina by 13 shots.

William & Mary at 633 is in third place followed by Navy 644, James Madison 646, North Carolina-Wilmington 646, George Mason 651, and American 673.

In race for medalist honors, Kirkoran and Vaughn are tied at 8-over par 148, with Shawger at 150, and Moye at 151. Doug Hillman and Charlie Fox, both from William & Mary, along with Chad Bales of James Madison follow at 155.

Lady Tribe Sweeps CAA Championship

NEWPORT NEWS, Va. (AP) — William & Mary swept all nine titles Saturday to win its fourth straight Colonial Athletic Association women's tennis championship.

Richmond placed second with 32 points, well behind the Indians' 54. James Madison was third with 16, followed by George Mason 14, American 4, North Carolina-Wilmington 2, and East Carolina 0.

In the singles matches Danielle Webster, Cynthia Mitchell, and Kristen Caister all won their second straight titles, as did the doubles team of Julie Kaczmarek and Danielle Durak.

Mitchell and Webster combined to win the second doubles, and Caister and Herring the third doubles.

The other three singles winners were Kaczmarek, Durak, and Lindsay Whipple.

The Indians lost only two sets in the championship round.

Wake Forest Snares ACC Golf Title

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP) — Tim Straub of Wake Forest shot a 1-over-par 216 to clinch the individual title in the Atlantic Coast conference men's golf tournament on Sunday, and Wake Forest came from behind to win the team title.

The teams played two rounds on Sunday after rain washed out the second round of the 54-hole event on Saturday.

Straub, who was two strokes off the pace going into Sunday's rounds, shot a 71 and a 73 on Sunday to win the individual title by one stroke over Mike Clark of Georgia Tech.

Joel Hartwell, of North Carolina State and Tee Burton, of North Carolina, were tied for third at 218.

Todd Gleaton, of North Carolina State, who shot a 70 on Friday to lead the tournament, shot a seven-over par 79 and a 1-over-par 73 on Sunday and finished in a five-way tie for 15th at 222.

Wake Forest placed four golfers in the top 15 to claim its 18th ACC tournament title with a 870, four strokes ahead of first-round leader Georgia Tech. The Deamon Deacons won the tournament ten consecutive times between 1967 and 1976.

All-American Barry Fabyan, of Wake Forest, shot a 219 and Tony Mollica added a 220 to aid the Deamon Deacon cause. Len Mattiace shot a 221.

Two-time defending champion Clemson, the preseason No. 1 pick in the country, was tied for last place, 17 strokes off the pace after Friday's first round. The Tigers came back to finish fifth at 891.

North Carolina finished third with an 879 and North Carolina State was fourth with an 882. After Clemson came Duke with a 897, Virginia with 898 and Maryland with 919.

Sabatini Tops Graf For Title

AMELIA ISLAND, Fla. (AP) — Steffi Graf's 31-match winning streak ended in a most uncharacteristic fashion — the world's top ranked woman player drove her usually lethal forehead volley into the net.

On the other side of the net, it was also a rare day for Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina, who achieved only her third career victory over Graf to win the $300,000 Bausch & Lomb Championships on Sunday.

"I started using my mind more," said third-ranked Sabatini, 19, who picked up $60,000 for the 3-6, 6-3, 7-5 victory. "She started making mistakes. My game was bothering her... This is a very emotional moment for me."

Sabatini changed tactics after the first set and used deep top-spin groundstrokes to keep Graf pinned deep in the clay court during much of the 2½-hour match.

"I was definitely not playing well," said Graf, who made 60 unforced errors. "My serve was terrible."

It was Graf's first defeat since Nov. 19, 1988, when she was beaten 6-3, 7-6 by Pam Shriver in the Virginia Slims Championships in New York to end a 46-match winning streak.

Jabbar Turns 42 As Lakers Roll

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar celebrated his 42nd birthday and the Miami Heat still couldn't hold a candle to the Los Angeles Lakers.

In the first three meetings between the expansion Heat and the Lakers, Los Angeles won by 47, 32 and 40 points. On Sunday night, the Lakers won 121-108 and took a one-game edge over Phoenix for the Pacific Division and Western Conference lead with four games to play.

Abdul-Jabbar, the oldest player in the history of the NBA and its all-time leading scorer, was received with a standing ovation from a sellout crowd at the Forum when his birthday was acknowledged by the public address announcer in the first period. He played only 16 minutes, making six of seven shots for 12 points.

Abdul-Jabbar said that when he joined the NBA in 1969 with the Milwaukee Bucks, the idea of playing this long "was an entirely alien concept to me. I don't know how I did it, but here I am."

Magic Johnson scored 18 of his 24 points in the second half and Byron Scott added 21 points for the Lakers, who have won seven consecutive division titles.

The Heat, losers of 12 straight road games and 38 of their first 40, got 27 points from Kevin Edwards and 15 each from Grant Long and Hastings. Miami's only two road victories have come against the Los Angeles Clippers.

The Lakers broke the game open in the fourth quarter, outscoring Miami 19-9 in the first 6½ minutes of the period to build a 104-89 cushion.

Despite their 53 victories, the Lakers have made a habit recently of playing poorly in the third quarter, including Sunday when the Heat outscored them 35-26 in the period.

Pistons 104, Bulls 98

Detroit completed a sweep of its five-game series with Washington and pulled within one victory or one Cleveland loss of clinching the best record in the NBA.

Mark Aguirre scored four of his 19 points during a 9-0 third-quarter run that put the Pistons in position to win their 18th consecutive home game.

Steve Colter scored 17 of his season-high 27 points during the fourth quarter for Washington, which trailed 65-51 early in the second half before a 12-4 fourth-quarter run made it 97-95 with 1:29 left.

Cavaliers 111, Bulls 92

Cleveland handed Chicago its sixth consecutive defeat as Larry Nance scored 10 of his 26 points during a decisive 12-2 run at the end of the first half.

The Cavaliers, 5-0 this season against the Bulls, will face Chicago in the first round of the playoffs if the current standings remain the same in the final week. Chicago beat Cleveland three games to two in the first round last year.

Cleveland led only 43-42 when Michael Jordan, who finished with 22 points for the Bulls, scored six straight and Charles Davis hit a short jumper midway through the second quarter.

Nance, however, started the 12-2 run with a 12-foot baseline jumper and the Cavaliers led 55-44 at the half.

76ers 115, Knicks 112

Philadelphia won its season series with New York 4-2 behind Mike Gminski's 25 points and Charles Barkley's 22.

The 76ers led by as many as 26 points in the first half, but fell behind 112-111 on a 15-foot jumper by Patrick Ewing with 10 seconds left. Barkley then made two free throws and Gminski made two more.

Hersey Hawkins scored 21 points for Philadelphia, while Mark Jackson and Ewing led the Knicks with 16 each although Ewing missed most of the second half with a sore right knee.

Rockets 114, Mavericks 112, OT

Houston put Dallas on the verge of elimination as Akeem Olajuwon had 34 points and 19 rebounds.

The loss means the Mavericks must win their last three games and Portland must lose its last four for Dallas to gain the eighth and final Western Conference spot.

Otis Thorpe's basket with 1:34 left in overtime completed the Rockets' comeback from a 22-point deficit after Olajuwon tied the game at 104 on a basket with 35 seconds left in regulation. Dallas' chance to send the game into a second overtime failed when Brad Davis hit the rim on a layup at the buzzer.

Bucks 100, Nets 96

Milwaukee pulled within a game of Atlanta in the race for fourth place in the Eastern Conference by beating New Jersey.

Ricky Pierce scored 22 points and Sidney Moncrief 19 for the Bucks, who will enjoy a homecourt advantage in the first round of the playoffs if they can catch the Hawks.

Faltering Pirates Continue Skid

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

For most of last season, people wondered if the Pittsburgh Pirates were for real. This year, one might ask if these are the real Pittsburgh Pirates.

Forget the 4-7 record, including Sunday's 5-4 11-inning loss to Montreal, that has Pittsburgh flirting with last place in the National League East. Look instead at the Pirates' lineup, which was missing center fielder Andy Van Slyke (officially day-to-day with a pulled rib cage muscle but probably out for at least a week, according to Manager Jim Leyland), first baseman Sid Bream (disabled list after injuring his right knee Saturday) and bullpen ace Jim Gott (disabled list since April 7 with a stretched ligament in his right elbow).

Now, add catcher Mike LaValiere, who suffered an injury to his left knee that will sideline him for at least three weeks. Welcome to the DL, Mike.

Cubs 5, Phillies 3

Rick Sutcliffe won his third straight game and drove in two runs with a bases-loaded single as Chicago won its seventh straight, its longest winning streak since June 1985. Sutcliffe allowed six hits in 8 1-3 innings and Mitch Williams got his sixth save in as many opportunities despite allowing RBI singles to Tom Herr and Chris James.

The Cubs snapped a 1-1 tie in the fourth on Jerome Walton's sacrifice fly. In the fifth, Ryne Sandberg and Mark Grace singled off loser Floyd Youmans, Vance Law doubled for one run and Sutcliffe singled for the decisive runs.

Cardinals 5, Mets 3

Ozzie Smith had three singles and drove in two runs, Tom Brunansky homered and Jose DeLeon pitched a four-hitter as St. Louis handed New York its seventh loss in 10 games. Two of the Mets' hits were solo homers by Darryl Strawberry.

The Cardinals fell behind 2-0 but scored in the third on Smith's RBI single, tied it in the fourth on Brunansky's homer and took a 3-2 lead against Bob Ojeda in the fifth on Terry Pendleton's RBI single.

Reds 5, Padres 0

Herm Winningham and Jeff Reed hit consecutive homers in a five-run first inning and Rick Mahler pitched his first shutout in more than two years for his first victory with Cincinnati. Mahler scattered six hits, walked one, struck out two and retired 13 straight batters in one stretch.

The Reds pounded Ed Whitson, who began the game by hitting Barry Larkin with a pitch, giving up a single to Chris Sabo and walking Eric Davis to load the bases. Kai Daniels followed with a two-run single and two outs later Winningham hit his first home run since Sept. 2, 1987. Two pitches later, Reed connected.

Dodgers 2, Astros 1

Tim Learly pitched a five-hitter and Mike Marshall extended his hitting streak to nine games with his third home run in four days. Learly took a two-hit shutout into the ninth but yielded a run on singles by Ken Caminiti, Rafael Ramirez and Billy Hatcher.

Marshall started the scoring with his fourth homer of the season on Jim Deshaies' first pitch of the fourth inning. Mickey Hatcher tripped with two out and scored on Jeff Hamilton's double.

Braves 7-1, Giants 2-6

In the first game, Atlanta's Gerald Perry drove in four runs with a three-run homer and a single and Tommy Gregg added three RBI with a single and sacrifice fly. In the nightcap, San Francisco's Kevin Mitchell drove in three runs with a pair of doubles. Mitchell, who hit a two-run homer in the opener, leads the majors with five homers and 19 RBI.

Joe Price pitched the first five innings in the nightcap for his first victory since last July 27. Craig Leferts retired six straight batters, extending his streak to 25 in a row, and Mike LaCoss pitched the final two innings.

Toronto Sparked By Gruber's Cycle

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Toronto Blue Jays rode to victory on Kelly Gruber's cycle.

Gruber became the first player in Toronto's 13-year history to hit for the cycle Sunday, driving in six runs as the Blue Jays rallied from a six-run deficit to beat the Kansas City Royals 15-8.

Gruber homered in the first, doubled in the second, tripled in the seventh and singled in the eighth.

The Royals scored six runs in the first inning off Dave Stieb, who had thrown one-hitters in three of his previous four starts. The Blue Jays bounced back to take a 9-7 lead in the fourth on Jesse Barfield's three-run homer.

Kansas City sent 11 batters to the plate in the first inning, scoring on Bo Jackson's two-run double, Brad Wellman's two-run single and RBI singles by George Brett and Bill Buckner.

Twins 9, Yankees 4

Minnesota's Gary Gaetti drove in six runs with two homers and a single.

Gaetti hit a three-run homer in the third inning, singled home a run in the fifth and hit a two-run shot in the seventh.

Allan Anderson, 3-0, gave up one earned run on seven hits in seven innings. Anderson, who led the AL in earned run average last season, has allowed three earned runs in 21 innings this year. The Twins have scored 34 runs in his three starts.

Athletics 3, White Sox 2

Walt Weiss, returning to the lineup

after missing three starts because of the flu, singled in the tie-breaking run in the ninth inning.

Terry Steinbach singled with one out in the ninth and pinch-runner Lance Blankenship went to third on a single by Stan Javier before Weiss greeted reliever Donn Pall with a run-scoring single to right.

Brewers 4, Indians 3

Glenn Braggs' bases-loaded single in the 10th inning gave the Brewers a three-game sweep of the Indians.

B.J.Surhoff led off the bottom of the ninth with a single off Keith Atherton, 0-1. After Gary Sheffield popped out to shortstop, Robin Yount doubled, sending sending pinch-runner Mike Felder to third.

Angels 10, Mariners 0

Bert Blyleven pitched a four-hitter for his 56th career shutout and Mark McLemore had three hits, including a two-run single.

Blyleven, 2-1, allowed four hits, struck out six, walked none and allowed just two runners to second base.

Rangers 9, Tigers 6

Pete Incaviglia, Rafael Palmeiro and Steve Buechele homered as Texas extended its winning streak to eight games. The streak matches the club record set in 1976 and tied in 1979 and 1988.

The game lasted 4 hours and 7 minutes, the longest nine-inning contest in both teams' history.

94 Killed In European Stadium Disaster

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — Give an English soccer fan a stadium seat and he is likely to stand on it. That kind of old habit and tradition is being examined as one of the factors in Europe's worst soccer disaster.

Overcrowding in the standing-room area of a 90-year-old stadium on Saturday killed 94 people, the latest fatalities linked to soccer in England, where the national game has acquired a deadly reputation.

Sports fans in America would never expect to stand through a major-league event in a stadium described in their souvenir program as the "perfect venue," as Hillsborough Stadium in Sheffield was.

But here, the standing-room spots — or terraces — are prime territory, closest to the field and right behind the goals, where most of the action takes place. They go first, as they have for generations, and the fans would have it no other way, soccer officials said Sunday.

"Clubs have tried to change the way fans watch matches by eliminating terraces and making their stadiums all-seating. But the public in England demands the right to stand," said Jill Smith, an administrator for the English Football Association.

Coventry, one of the country's biggest soccer clubs, tried an all-seat plan a few years ago. It was a flop, Smith recalled.

"People wound up standing on the seats," she said. "It's a very traditional thing, a terribly emotive issue."

Likewise, proposals for new stadiums to replace the dark, damp facilities that were built around the turn of the century pop up occasionally but quickly die. If it was good enough for my father and grandfather, today's fan says, it's good enough for me.

"This is a very, very big part of it, and again it is a tremendously emotional factor," Smith said. "Some have been proposed but then plans were suddenly shut down. Sometimes it was lack of money, sometimes the council has not given approval, but the fans have never gotten behind the new stadiums. They have an emotional attachment to the old ones."

The standing-room tradition was attacked Sunday by Sepp Blatter, general secretary of the international soccer federation FIFA, and Gerhard Aigner, his counterpart with UEFA, Europe's soccer governing body.

And Art Modell, owner of the Cleveland Browns, said that when the NFL expands to Europe — perhaps as early as next spring — all stadiums will have seats.

"We'll play in smaller stadiums," said Modell, who recently returned from London, where his team will play the Philadelphia Eagles in the fourth annual American Bowl at Wembley Stadium next August.

"We can't go into large, soccer-style stadiums. No way are we going to have standing room like they have in soccer. That's an invitation to disaster."

Similar calls came from closer to the scene of the tragedy. John Stalker, a former top police official in England's Midlands, called for all-seat stadiums, and FA chief executive Graham Kelly and Richard Faulkner, deputy director of the Football Trust, agreed that the days of the terraces were numbered.

"We have got to get our football clubs to get to their supporters and say, 'Are you sure that in this day and age you want to go through turnstiles and a tunnel and stand in a place like that?' There has to be a fundamental re-think about this issue," Kelly said.

Faulkner, whose group gives grants to clubs for safety work, said there was more tension and pressure in standing areas.

"If you do put in seats there is a reasonable expectation that you would not need perimeter safety fences, which contributed so much to the loss of life at Hillsborough," he said.

The victims were crushed when a surge of late-arriving fans pushed those at the front of the terrace against the 10-foot-high metal fence, which was installed years ago to stop rowdy fans from running onto the field.

These fences, present at just about every stadium in England's Division 1, give the standing areas the feel of cages. Fans, who pay about seven dollars for the right to stand for two hours, must peer around steel I-beams and through heavy-gauge wire grids to see the action.

The terraces and fences are part of a general scene at English soccer that stuns those used to the sparkle and comfort of American sports arenas.

Not one of the stadiums used by the 20 Division 1 teams was built after 1935, with 10 constructed in the 1890s; Hillsborough was opened in 1899.

Andy Williamson, spokesman for the Football League, said all of the stadiums had undergone major renovations since World War II and that standing areas had been reduced in favor of more seats.

But Williamson acknowledged that efforts to get English fans to follow safer habits, begun after the riots between Liverpool and Juventus of Turin supporters at Belgium's Heysel Stadium in May 1985 that left 39 dead and the 56 deaths in a grandstand fire at Bradford, England, that same month, had been largely unsuccessful.

He noted that the league had tried luring fans to the stadiums early by offering pre-game entertainment at big games. If it worked, it would eliminate the kind of late rush that resulted in Saturday's catastrophe, he said.

The fans still showed up at the last minute.

"The public have been seen to be un-excited by any of the entertainment that might be offered," he said. "They find their own form of entertainment, whether that's going to a pub or whatever."

Williamson said the fan would be the one to decide whether such traditions die, no matter how much politicians and sports officials push for reform.

"The public determines whether they like a new development or not," he said. "The clubs have come to the conclusion that they do not."

Kentucky Admits Money Was In Package

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LEXINGTON, Ky. — The University of Kentucky will agree with the NCAA that $1,000 was placed inside a package to a recruit from the school's basketball office, but will not concede that the source of the cash was an assistant coach, according to a published report.

The Lexington Herald-Leader quoted a source in Sunday's editions as saying university officials agree with the NCAA that the package left the basketball office with the money inside.

However, the university says the evidence is inconclusive as to whether then-assistant coach Dwane Casey put the $1,000 in the Emery Air Freight package, the source told the newspaper.

"I'm not concerned," Casey's attorney, Joe Bill Campbell, told WKYT-TV Sunday night. "They (NCAA) don't have any evidence. They're going to have a tough time winning that one before the Infractions Committee."

Kentucky officials will meet with NCAA enforcement staff members Saturday for a hearing on 18 allegations of wrongdoing lodged against the school's basketball program.

The NCAA's judicial body, the Committee on Infractions, is expected to make a judgment and possibly impose sanctions sometime next month.

The investigation began last year when an Emery package sent to Claud Mills, father of then-recruit Chris Mills, popped open in transit. Emery workers said $1,000 was in the package, which was sent by Casey.

Casey denied sending the money and the Millses denied receiving it.

The newspaper's source said the NCAA contends Casey placed the money in the package, as stated in the first allegation against the program. But the university, the newspaper said, takes the position that evidence regarding Casey and the source of the money is inconclusive.

Still, the NCAA and the university will agree on at least two other serious violations, according to the newspaper's source.

Both parties agree that academic fraud was committed when Eric Manuel took a college entrance exam at Lexington Lafayette High School, the source said.

In Allegation No. 10, the NCAA charges Manuel with copying answers from another student who sat next to him. The NCAA cited a comparison of answer sheets that it said showed that 211 of 219 responses were identical.

The source told the newspaper that both sides also agree on Allegation No. 11, which charges Manuel, Sean Sutton and Casey with providing false and misleading information to NCAA investigators about how the two players were transported to the test site referred to in Allegation No. 10.

However, WKYT reported Sunday night that an NCAA case summary on the investigation says the university will not agree on Allegation No. 11.

Sutton, a point guard for the Wildcats, is the son of former Kentucky coach Eddie Sutton, who resigned last month after four years on the job.

Three other allegations have been judged to be unfounded by both the NCAA and Kentucky, the newspaper's source said, and will not be part of Saturday's proceedings.

Former Umpire Conlan Dies At 89

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — Jocko Conlan knew no one cheers for umpires.

Jocko Conlan

"Right or wrong, the umpire's always the villain," Conlan, who died Sunday at 89, once said in summing up his role on the field.

"That's the way it's been for 100 years and you learn to take it. Ballplayers do dumb things. Day in, day out, they throw to the wrong base. Nobody boos. We call a close one and 40,000 scream."

Conlan, a National League umpire for 24 years, died at a local hospital. The cause of death was not announced.

He was just 5-feet-7 and weighed 160 pounds. But, despite his stature, he was an umpiring giant and in 1974 became the fifth arbirer inducted into the Hall of Fame.

Conlan once got into a celebrated kicking match with Leo Durocher. Upon news of Conlan's death, Durocher remembered the umpire fondly.

"We had our battles on the field but we were good friends off the field. That's where it counts," Durocher said Sunday night. "He was a fine umpire and a fine man."

Conlan umpired in five World Series and six All-Star Games before retiring after the 1964 season. Before umpiring, he was a player for 14 seasons, but made it up to the major leagues for only two years, playing for the Chicago White Sox in 1934 and 1935.

"You've got to have a thick skin and a strong heart," he said in a 1954 interview. "You've got to have and command respect. Without them, you're nothing."

"You've got to be fair and firm. You don't alibi or admit you missed one. Sure, sometimes after a close play, you realize in your own heart you called it wrong. What do you do then? You just try to call the next one right. You don't try to 'even up' on the next call. That would be making two mistakes instead of one."

By almost all accounts, Conlan was one of the best.

"He was fiesty son of the sod who took no extra lip from anyone. He took the brunt of legitimate beefs but one uss word and the offender was gone," Paul MacFarlane wrote in a profile contained in the book "Daguerreotypes."

"He was a master psychologist in the charged-up world of the baseball diamond, knowing when to cajole, when to rebuff and when to ignore. He knew the rules as well as any umpire, but he also used the feel of the rules as they applied to plays and players. He was a vocal defender of the umpire's integrity and he lived that integrity to the hilt all the years of his career."

John Betrand Conlan was born on Dec. 6, 1899, in Chicago. He was an amateur boxer as a youth and had his nose broken several times. He began his minor-league playing career in 1920 and finally made it up as an outfielder with the White Sox.

He batted .249 in his first season and .286 in his second, playing in a total of 128 games. He drove in 33 runs and never hit a big league homer.

Pirates Earn Split ...

scored on a single to right by Calvin Brown.

The Pirates took a 2-1 lead in the second as Steve Godin led off with a home run to right, his third of the year.

UNCW tied it up with one in the third. With one down, Chamberlain beat out an infield roller and moved to second then Trent Mongero's sacrifice bunt was errored. Stoudenmire walked to load the bases and Randy Fennell's grounder off reliever John White scored Chamberlain for a 2-2 tie.

ECU regained the lead, 3-2, with a run in the fifth. John Thomas singled and stole second. He was sacrificed to third and scored on Eason's sacrifice fly to deep center.

But once again the Seahawks rallied, tying it in the sixth. Fennell, the designated hitter, doubled and Tommie Adams, the pitcher, took over on the base paths. Heitler singled and moved him to third. Tim Hooks then grounded out, allowing Adams to score.

After both teams blew scoring opportunities in the eighth, UNCW struck for two in the ninth. Jenkins hit Al Catucci and Joe Catalano's grounder was errored in the attempt to get Catucci. Chamberlain was expected to bunt with no one out, but he surprised everyone with a slap down the right field line that was just beyond the glove of the diving Steve Godin. Catucci scored on the play and Catalano scored on Mongero's sacrifice fly for a 5-3 lead.

Amazingly enough, the Pirates came back to load the bases with one out, but pinch-hitter Chris Cauble's grounder to third was turned into a double play, ending the game.

In the second game, the Pirates scored in every inning on the way to the 9-0 win that forced one final game.

Thomas opened the first with a walk and moved around on hits by Adams and Eason.

In the second, two crossed. Cauble doubled to left and Daniels, running for him, scored on a single up the middle by David Ritchie. Ritchie stole up and scored on a double by Thomas, who was thrown out trying to stretch it into a triple.

Brown hit his 10th home run of the season in the third inning to make it 4-0.

Cauble walked and Daniels again ran for him, moving to third on a double by Mike Andrews. Ritchie missed on a suicide squeeze bunt but Daniels slid in safely under the tag to score. Adams then singled in Andrews for a 6-0 lead.

The Pirates made it 7-0 with another in the fifth. John Gast reached on a fielder's choice and stole up, taking third on a hit by Godin. The two worked the double steal with Gast scoring.

The final two came in the sixth. Ritchie opened with a single and advanced on a wild pitch. Adams brought him in with a double to right center. Brown singled Adams in with the final run of the game.

Tonight, ECU will send Jake Jacobs (5-0) to the mound while UNCW will counter with Tony Tillman (1-3). "Tony has been throwing well lately after a slow start," Guthrie said. "He has the potential to do a good job for us."

For both teams, the previous 14 games in the conference now mean nothing. It's all down to this one last game to decide it all.

FDA Urged To Ban Over-Counter Cold Drug Sales

By Deborah Mesce
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A public interest research group today urged the Food and Drug Administration to reverse its decision to allow non-prescription sales of a cold-relief drug that has been linked to sudden infant death syndrome.

In a letter to the FDA, Public Citizen Health Research Group said over-the-counter sales of the drug, sold under the trade name Phenergan, would increase the risk that it could be given to infants.

"Over-the-counter availability implies FDA designation of a margin of safety which, in this case, is not justified," said the letter signed by Andrew Holmes and Sidney Wolfe, physicians with the health research group.

The FDA decided last December that the drug's manufacturer, Wyeth-Ayerst Laboratories, could market drugs containing promethazine hydrochloride, including Phenergan, over the counter. Non-prescription doses of the drug are scheduled to reach pharmacy shelves in June, the research group said.

The drug is a phenothiazine, a class of major tranquilizers, with antihistamine properties that offer some relief from cold symptoms by drying the upper airways.

Although Phenergan is not recommended for children under 2 years old, doctors wrote 175,000 prescriptions for the drug for that age group in 1985, the health group said. It is often prescribed for children with colic, Holmes said.

A study in Belgium, where the drug is available without a prescription, linked use with sudden infant death syndrome, or SIDS, and found that it can cause obstruction of infants' breathing passages during sleep, the health group said. The study found that children who died of SIDS were 10 times more likely to have been given Phenergan or a related drug recently than children in a control group.

About 5,000 infants die of SIDS each year in the United States. Its cause is unknown, but Phenergan is believed to be a contributing factor, the research group said.

"Even if only a small percentage of the U.S. SIDS deaths are caused by prescription Phenergan, the increase in such deaths expected with OTC (over-the-counter) availability adds up to a senseless and avoidable tragedy," the letter said.

Wyeth-Ayerst Laboratories spokeswoman Audrey Ashby said,

"The FDA carefully reviewed all data" before making its decision and "was satisfied the products are suitable for over the counter sales." She added that "in their 35 years of marketing, these syrups have been remarkably problem-free."

The health research group said it filed a petition with the FDA four months ago to block nonprescription sales of the drug, but the agency has not responded. Six SIDS experts also wrote to the FDA supporting the petition.

An FDA spokeswoman said the agency has 180 days to review such petitions.

Dr. Richard L. Naeye, chairman of the pathology department at the Pennsylvania State University College of Medicine, has done extensive research on SIDS and is one of the six experts supporting the petition. He said that while studies have not proven a connection between SIDS and Phenergan they have found an association between the two that needs more study.

"It's an unresolved issue, but I don't think it's good to resolve it by putting it on the market over the counter," he said.

Naeye said that while he generally endorses the FDA's push to make more drugs available without prescription, "in this case, it's not prudent."

Bullet Barrier Built To Protect Students

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONG BEACH, Calif. — A 10-foot-high bullet barrier is being built alongside a schoolyard to protect teachers and students from frequent street gunfire.

Construction of the 300-foot-long concrete wall at Lindbergh Junior High School begins this week, its $160,000 cost financed by the school district and Los Angeles County.

"It's really sad that something like this has to be done. But it's needed in today's society," said Principal Max Fraley.

One side of the school, where the recreation areas about the 713-unit Carmelitos Housing Project, has been vulnerable to gunfire. Physical education teachers say the wall is long overdue.

When it is completed, teacher Trish Ryan said, she will celebrate by hanging a sign reading: "The Great Wall of Lindbergh."

Judy Wade, another physical education teacher, said she has seen beer bottles and even bicycle handlebars tossed at students during her 25 years at the school. But, she added, "now, it's not what they're throwing but what they're shooting."

Last week, students were evacuated from the recreation fields twice because of gunfire. Two years ago, in the only shooting in which someone was hurt, a student playing basketball after school was hit in the chest by a bullet and seriously hurt.

"We got angry. This is ridiculous. This is enough, we said. We're taking our classes out there and we have to convince the kids that it's OK, when we are not sure it's OK," Ryan said.

"Anything for the safety of the kids, but I think that $160,000 in law enforcement would do more to ease crime," said Carmelitos resident Ray Fox, 28.

Describing the North Long Beach projects, police Sgt. Bob Gillissie said, "We're there all the time" because of drugs and gang-related activities.

Wesley C. Mitchell, chief of police for the Los Angeles Unified School District, said the wall was "a novel idea, but I don't know if it is the solution to the problem."

Landmark Renovation

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Moviegoers remember its destruction by Martian invaders in "War of the Worlds" and TV viewers knew it as the Daily Planet in the "Superman" series.

But for millions, the city's most recognizable landmark, the Byzantine-style City Hall tower, has been the center of government in the nation's second largest city.

The 27-story building, the area's tallest structure through the 1950s but now dwarfed by skyscrapers twice its size, is about to get a facelift.

Built in 1928 at $5 million, City Hall will soon undergo a $6 million makeover that includes illuminating the building at night.

The renovation also includes a museum to display hundreds of gifts that the city has received, many from visiting dignitaries.

Project Restore, a nonprofit organization of business and civic leaders, has raised about $1.5 million toward the project.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠6 ♥AQJ6 ♦AK85 ♣AQ102
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ 1 ♣ Pass Pass
Dbl Pass 2 ♥ Pass
What action do you take?
A.—You have an enormous hand, but it's not quite good enough to drive the hand to game—after all, partner might have a yarrowburgh with four low hearts. To advise partner of your powerhouse in support of hearts, cue-bid two spades and leave the driving to him.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J6 ♥AKQ73 ♦93 ♣AQ105
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♥ Pass 1 ♣ Pass
2 ♣ Pass 2 ♦ Pass
What do you bid now?
A.—In the modern style, two diamonds does not promise a stopper, let alone a suit. However, it does guarantee another bid, so you need do no more than bid two hearts to see how partner reacts. If you still play that two diamonds is natural, jump to three no trump to show your power.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠83 ♥AJ76 ♦A82 ♣AJ92
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
2 ♣ Pass 3 ♥ Pass
3 ♣ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—We hope you didn't bid three no trump. Partner had the opportunity to do so with a diamond stopper, but he did not take it. However, he must have at least a six-card suit, more likely even a seven-bagger. Bid four spades.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠873 ♥AJ9 ♦104 ♣KQJ92
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
2 NT Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Although partner rates to have solid stoppers in the unbid suits, you do have a ruffing value and good three-card support for his first-bid suit. It is your duty to offer a choice of contracts. Bid three hearts.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠6 ♥653 ♦KJ9 ♣AK10542
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
2 ♥ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—If you made any club rebid, we suggest you go to the bookshelf and pull out the book on basic bidding. Indeed, if you made any bid other than four hearts, it might pay you to peruse the whole volume! You have an unbalanced hand, a combined eight-card trump fit and enough for game, so bid it.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠72 ♥K87 ♦A10 ♣AKJ1052
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♣ 1 ♣ 1 NT Pass
What do you bid now?
A.—In theory, partner should have some 8-10 points for his response, but after an overall in spades, he could be a point or so light. However, this is not a hand for point-counters. Bid three no trump. At best, it will be laydown; at worst, it could depend on finding the queen of clubs.

Chaplin Centennial Celebrated

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Few film stars were as internationally acclaimed as Charlie Chaplin, and the anniversary of his 100th birthday was commemorated by those who still cherish his memory and his art with events around the world.

"Charlot's Year" has begun at the wine-growing village of Corsier-Sur-Vecve, Switzerland, as honors the Little Tramp with a string of festivities.

"Charlot" is the name French-speaking fans gave the world-famous comedian, who died on Christmas Day in 1977, after spending a quarter of a century at Corsier.

Festivities officially began in Vevey, the Lake Geneva town just below hillside Corsier, on Sunday (April 16), the day Chaplin was born in London in 1889.

Swiss President Jean-Pascal Delamuraz was scheduled to attend a ceremony naming a "Square Chaplin," which already features an almost lifesize statue of the Little Tramp, his movie character with the bowler hat, mustache and walking stick.

Chaplin, who was knighted by Queen Elizabeth II in 1975, and his wife, Oona, often strolled along the nearby lake after buying English-language newspapers. Most people did not recognize them.

Jean-Charles Kollros, a spokesman for the ceremony, said Sophia Loren was expected at the event. She starred in Chaplin's last movie in 1967, "A Countess From Hong Kong."

Kollros also said that Lady Oona is not in good health. She continues to reside at the Manoir de Ban, the 18th-century manor above Corsier that Chaplin purchased in 1953.

After the square-naming ceremony, some 1,000 people, mostly children, marched in a festive parade from Vevey to Corsier, where more celebrations took place under a huge circus tent holding 2,500 people. The tent was set up on "Place Chaplin," a sprawling meadow between Corsier's 18th-century chateau and the village hall.

Meanwhile, in London, the Museum of the Moving Image presented "The Worlds of Charlie Chaplin," an exhibit of photographs, documents and artifacts in honor of "Lambeth's Favorite Son." The National Film Theater is presenting a series of Chaplin's major works along with movies depicting world events at the time.

On his birthday, "City Lights" — the story of a tramp who befriends a millionaire and falls in love with a blind girl — was shown at London's Dominion Theatre, the site of its original premiere in 1931. A live orchestra performed Chaplin's own score for the silent movie.

In Hollywood, there were a special screening and party at the Chaplin Stage of the former Charles Chaplin Studios. The Walk of Fame presented a plaque to his son, Sydney, during a ceremony rededicating Chaplin's star on Hollywood Boulevard.

The Museum of Modern Art in New York presented, "Chaplin: A Centennial Celebration," which included a gallery exhibit and a two-week film retrospective.

In Frankfurt, Germany, the Old Opera House screened "The Circus" — a 1928 movie about a tramp who takes refuge from the police in a circus — and a retrospective of his work was to be shown in Munich. An international conference was held in Paris, during which Chaplin's daughter, Geraldine, received a decoration from the French Minister of Culture.

"A Woman of Paris," which Chaplin directed in 1923, was screened with "How to Make Movies" (an unfinished film he made around 1918) at the Cinematheque in Portugal. Japanese television had a musical tribute on Sunday.

New Cable Channel Debuts

The National Broadcasting Co., operator of the top-rated prime-time television network, takes its boldest step yet into cable television with today's debut of a consumer-oriented business news channel called Consumer News and Business Channel. Former Cable News Network anchors Dave Walker and Lois Hart pose on the set of CNBC's Studio 1, where they will anchor "CNBC Morning."

Disney Channel Bringing Back 'Mickey Mouse Club'

By Ike Flores

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. — Annette Funicello is gone, and so are Sherry, Cubby, Darlene and Bobby.

But Chase Hampton knocks 'em dead with a calypso song-and-dance number. And Josh, Tiffini, Lindsey, Albert and the gang get the studio jumping with a rap-and-disco blend of M-I-C-K-E-Y-M-O-U-S-E.

The "Mickey Mouse Club" is back. And although its style has been updated, the people at Walt Disney say it's just as good and relevant as the original television show was when it began 34 years ago.

"We had a lot of skepticism about doing the 'Mickey Mouse Club' in the 1990s," said Steve Fields, senior vice president of the Disney Channel, which will carry the show. "But so many elements (of the old show) were terrific, and kids still relate to kids."

Just like its predecessor, the new show is for and by kids from about ages 8 to 12 and features music, dancing, comedy skits, celebrity guests and the Mickey Mouse Club movie. The comedy skits are often geared to preteens' problems: dating, sibling rivalry, messy rooms, homework.

"It's trying to say: 'Hey, it's not easy being a kid. ... We're going to make you laugh and reduce some of the stress,'" said Steve Clements, executive producer.

The show is designed to provide "education through entertainment," but the accent is clearly on the latter, Clements says.

"It's all great fun. There are no messages that are knocked into people's heads, no public service announcements about drugs or anything like that," he said.

"This is my dream job," said head writer Alan Silberberg, who has a master's degree in education from Harvard University. "We take entertainment and use it to educate about kids issues. ... The show gives them a sense that they're not alone out there."

There's one big difference from the 1950s show — cartoons have been replaced by music videos. One of the early episodes features a jazzy song-and-dance number on a New York City street set.

Another innovation is a segment in which club members from around the country are selected to spend a day with their special heroes. Among the celebrities taped so far are Los Angeles Dodgers pitcher Orel Hershisser, model Christie Brinkley and New York developer Donald Trump.

In one segment, 13-year-old Tom

Minnelli Ailing

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Entertainer Liza Minnelli had to cancel a scheduled appearance Sunday in Helsinki, Finland with Frank Sinatra and Sammy Davis Jr. because of a severe ear infection, a spokeswoman said.

Dr. Bjorn Petruson told Ms. Minnelli in Sweden on Saturday that she cannot use an airplane for 10 days because of the infection in her right ear, publicist Susan Reynolds said in a statement from Los Angeles.

The three singers are on tour together in Europe.

Woods goes to New York's Trump Plaza to talk with the developer about his business life and disciplinary problems that caused him to be sent to a military academy. Dressed in a suit and tie and calling himself a "winner," the teen-ager asks for advice about investing $250 he has saved. Trump tells him to put it in a bank until he is older.

At the end, Tom presents Trump with a pair of Mickey Mouse ears, which he adjusts over his carefully combed locks.

The show is being taped before audiences at the new Disney-MGM Studios complex in central Florida and will be televised exclusively on the Disney Channel, which has about 4 million subscribers. Fields said this will give Disney more control without having to worry about ratings.

Talent scouts held auditions for about 5,000 kids around the country before selecting the lucky dozen featured on the show.

The not-so-grown-up hosts are Fred Newman, an actor, writer and comedian, and Mowava Pryor, a former camp counselor with theater experience who has appeared in dozens of television commercials.

The Mickey Mouse Club makes its debut April 24. The half-hour show will be shown weekday afternoons.
