City Says 'No' To Downtown Halloween Fete

By Greg Laudick
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Greenville City Council has unanimously approved a committee's recommendation to not allow further Halloween celebrations in the streets of downtown Greenville.

Council members were informed at Monday's workshop session that downtown restaurant and nightclub owners have voluntarily agreed to keep their establishments closed during this year's Halloween night.

"This is the right step from what I perceive as the university's standpoint, the right thing for the city and I think, in terms of safety and security, the right thing for citizens, students and visitors as well," said council and committee member Inez Fridley.

"It won't stop Halloween, but I do think it will stop what we have experienced in the past couple of years downtown," Ms. Fridley said.

Monday's council decision followed the presentation of a report of findings of the Halloween Activities Review Committee, a broadly-based panel formed by the council immediately after the chaotic Halloween festivities of 1988. Over 50 arrests were recorded at the celebration, along with numerous injuries and an undetermined amount of property damage.

Greg Brown, the city's public information officer, told the council that the committee concluded that Halloween celebration in downtown Greenville must be brought to a halt. In addition, he said the committee agrees that an alternative event sponsored by the city or East Carolina University was not desirable and that a year or two should lapse before even considering such a possibility.

One of the actions that the committee recommended be taken is to immediately begin an informational campaign advising students that no more Halloween celebrations will be allowed in the downtown streets.

That campaign is recommended to begin before ECU classes end in May and continue into fall semester. The committee also recommends that "university administrators, student government officials and campus fraternities and sororities should write letters to their counterparts on other campuses asking them to keep students from coming to the city on Halloween night."

George Saieed, president of the Greenville Nightclub Association, informed the council that several restaurants have agreed to close by 9 p.m. and nightclubs have agreed not to open at all.

Among the establishments participating in the voluntary shut-down are

Burroughs Wellcome Protesters Arrested

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. — Four AIDS activists were arrested today after they sealed themselves into an office at the headquarters of Burroughs Wellcome Inc. to protest the price of an AIDS drug.

"We've been trying to deal with this company for two years," said Peter Staley, one of the activists, as the four men were led in shackles from the drug company building.

They were put in sheriff's department cars about 10:45 a.m.

Jay Blotcher, spokesman for the group said from a Durham motel, that Staley, 28, has AIDS Related Complex, or ARC, and is a former Wall Street bond trader.

Blotcher identified the others as Lee Arsenault, 41, a clothing importer from New York City who suffers from AIDS; James McGrath, 32, a dance club owner from Providence, R.I.; and Blane Mosley, 24, a clothing designer from New York City.

All four were members of the New York-based group Aids Committee to Unleash Power, or ACTUP.

"We're non-violent. We have no weapons," Staley said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press minutes after the 10 a.m. takeover. "But we are not going to come out until Burroughs Wellcome meets our demands."

No official company statement on the arrest was immediately available. But Blotcher, who communicated by cellular phone with the activists, said he understood company guards broke down a wall to get the protesters.

Staley had said the protesters had sealed themselves into an office of the guarded headquarters building "with high power drills. ... and we ain't coming out."

The group had demanded a 25 percent reduction in the price of AZT, the only government approved drug for treatment of AIDS. The drug, which is manufactured in Greenville, costs $8,000 to $10,000 a year for an individual treatment, the firm has said.

Staley said said activists had been planning the takeover for about two months.

"We had a meeting with them (company officials) Jan. 23 to discuss our demands, none of which have been met," Staley said. "We've been planning this for a couple of months."

AZT, or azidothymidine, has been trademarked by Burroughs Wellcome under the name Retrovir. Tests on AZT show that it can stop the AIDS virus from replicating, but does not cure patients. An estimated 8 percent of AIDS patients being tested died while on the drug, compared with 40 percent who died while taking a placebo during a nine-month test period.

Earthquake

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A strong earthquake shook Mexico City and its suburbs this morning for about 30 seconds, cracking buildings, breaking windows and sending frightened people into the streets.

The U.S. National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo., said preliminary readings indicated the quake registered 6.8 on the Richter scale.

The tremor cut off power to the nation's largest television network for a few minutes, knocking it off the air.

Japanese Minister Accepts Blame For Scandal, Submits Resignation

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — Linked to an influence-peddling scandal and immensely unpopular, Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita announced his resignation today but left his successor and the timing of his departure unclear.

The Recruit scandal has bedeviled Japanese politics for half of Takeshita's 18-month tenure, and it appeared possible an elder politician might become interim prime minister until the situation is sorted out.

The candidate mentioned in many news reports was former Foreign Minister Masayoshi Ito, an elder statesman untouched by the Recruit scandal. But his health was in question — he is a diabetic.

"I think it should be a young person. It's time for a young person to be in charge," said Ito, 75-year-old chairman of the executive council of the governing Liberal Democratic Party.

Other powerful figures in the party that has governed Japan since 1955 are as tainted by money from the Recruit Co. as Takeshita, including his rival and party secretary general, former Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe.

"The Recruit question has caused a grave crisis for the nation's parliamentary democracy," Takeshita, 65, said in a nationwide television broadcast after telling the Cabinet of his intention to resign.

"I have decided to pull out in order to retrieve the public's trust in politics," he said. "As the chief executive of government and president of the ruling party, I deeply apologize."

Asked about the succession, he declined to comment, saying "it is not the place of one resigning to express such opinions."

Once Takeshita resigns, governing party members would choose their next party president, who would become prime minister due to the Liberal Democrats' majority in both houses of parliament.

His resignation would also mean his entire Cabinet would leave office. The party leadership also would be expected to resign, news reports said.

Prices on the Tokyo Stock Exchange surged after the announcement. The Nikkei Stock Average rose 1.34 percent, the year's third largest one-day gain.

Newspapers rushed out single-sheet extra editions with the news. The tabloid Fuji daily headlined "Takeshita Finally Resigns."

Takeshita's approval rating in a recent poll by Kyodo News Service slumped to 3.9 percent, making him Japan's most unpopular postwar prime minister.

Cheney Outlines Defense Cuts

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary Dick Cheney today outlined $10 billion in Pentagon budget cuts and said the "hard choices" included reductions in dozens of weapons systems and a $1 billion slash in Star Wars research money.

Cheney, making his first appearance as defense secretary before his former colleagues in the House, told the Armed Services Committee that only the Marine Corps had been spared manpower cuts.

"No program was excluded from consideration during the budget adjustment process," Cheney told the House panel at the start of what was expected to be a day-long hearing.

"But my top priorities are quality people, forward strategy, readiness and sustainability, efficient procurement and strategic modernization. The adjustments we made to the budget were implemented within this context."

Under the budget agreement reached earlier this spring between the Bush administration and Congress, the Pentagon is required to cut future spending plans by $10 billion for the next fiscal year.

Funding for "Star Wars" research has been cut by $1 billion to a new total of $4.6 billion for fiscal 1990, Cheney said.

He said the Navy would retire or transfer to the reserves one aircraft carrier, seven destroyers and 10 frigates, and that the Air Force would lose its new F-15E ground-attack jet and delay production of the new B-2 stealth bomber.

The Army has been told to cancel production of AH-64 Apache helicopters after fiscal 1991. The Marine Corps has been told to scrap development of its new V-22 transport aircraft.

Bush Skirts NAACP, Taps Lucas

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush today announced his intention to nominate William Lucas, a black Republican critic of affirmative action, as the Justice Department's civil rights chief, setting up a potentially bruising Senate confirmation fight.

The previously announced opposition to Lucas by the NAACP, the nation's largest civil rights group, could energize liberal opposition to the nominee.

Benjamin Hooks, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said in a statement Monday that Lucas is not qualified to be the government's chief enforcer of civil rights laws.

The White House formally announced Lucas' selection as assistant attorney general in charge of the Justice Department's civil rights division in a one-sentence statement issued in San Jose, Calif., where Bush had spent the night.

Lucas had been pushed for the job by Attorney General Dick Thornburgh.

"There are many positions for which Mr. Lucas is eminently qualified in this administration," Hooks said. But the civil rights job "is one of the most sensitive positions in government, as it relates to minorities, and we do not believe Mr. Lucas is the person for this post."

Hooks said the NAACP "feels duty-bound to strive for the best qualified appointee for this most important position."

People for the American Way, a well-financed liberal lobbying group, also expressed reservations about Lucas.

Lucas "is someone with no track records and a lot of question marks," the group's president, Arthur J. Kropp, said.

"The questions will have to be resolved before the civil rights community can support him," said Kropp, who heads a 270,000-member organization that helped defeat Robert Bork's nomination to the Supreme Court in 1987.

Hooks said Lucas lacks expertise to be the Justice Department's civil rights chief.

"Each and every day this official must make crucial decisions of a highly technical and critical nature that demand specialized knowledge, based upon experience and background in this area," Hooks said.

Justice Department spokeswoman Deborah Burston-Wade said the NAACP's announcement "doesn't change a thing for us."

"We're just disappointed that they chose to ignore not only his more than 35 years of public service but also his commitment to enforcing the civil rights laws of the country," she said.

Thornburgh's "support for Bill Lucas has been unwavering since the announcement of his recommendation to the president." She said Thornburgh's "friendship and admiration for Bill Lucas spans a number of years."

Lucas has been criticized by some civil rights leaders since Thornburgh revealed in February that he had urged Bush to nominate him for the position.

Chairpersons Named

The state chapter of the Leukemia Society of America has named Jessie and Glen Mills as chairpersons of the 1989 spring bike-a-thon for Winterville.

The event is scheduled for May 27 and will be sponsored by the Youth Governing Council of Reed Branch Free Will Baptist Church. The council consists of Keith Fisher, Gwen Tyndall, Nicole Stocks, Doug Davenport and Michael Tucker.

Proceeds from the Bike-a-thon will support the North Carolina Chapter's programs of research and patient-aid. Currently, the chapter is funding $1.8 million in research projects in the state at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Duke University and Wake Forest University. The Leukemia Society of America is also providing financial assistance to 500 patients in North Carolina.

For more information, contact Jessie or Glen Mills at 746-6924.

Health Activities

The Greenville Athletic Club will host numerous health-related activities in May to raise funds for the Pitt County Unit of the American Cancer Society.

The program, "Commit to Get Fit," encourages adults to make physical activity a part of their daily lives.

The club will be hosting seminars on nutrition, cardiovascular fitness, benefits of aerobic exercise, healthy living and offer blood pressure checks, cholesterol screening and fitness evaluations.

Both the fitness program and the fitness evaluation are free and open to the public.

For further information and a schedule of the events, call 756-9175 or stop by the Greenville Athletic Club, 140 Oakmont Drive.

Students Honored

Kimberly Anderson and Julie Jones each recently won a certificate from Shoney's in recognition of an outstanding grade average during the third marking period. Both girls are 7th graders at A.G. Cox School in Winterville.

Dance Presentation

Patricia Pertalion of the East Carolina University Department of Theater Arts dance faculty recently appeared on the program at a national meeting in Boston.

Her presentation, "A West African Dance Safari," was given at an international dance panel at the annual meeting of the American Alliance for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance. It was based on research in the field of traditional African dances and folk rituals undertaken by Ms. Pertalion during a tour of Africa two years ago.

Ms. Pertalion, president of the N. C. Dance Alliance, represented that organization at the statewide Arts Congress in Raleigh earlier this month. The congress, organized by the N. C. Association of Arts Councils and sponsored by Hardee's, enabled officers of arts organizations to meet with Gov. James B. Martin and members of the General Assembly.

Harpist Performs For Pitt Children

Mrs. Blake Lewis of Washington, N.C., harpist, performed today for elementary children at Sadie Sautter and Wintergreen schools as part of a Belk art and humanities endowment.

Mrs. Lewis, a musician in piano, organ and harp, has two music degrees in performance and education. She has given concerts and special seasonal programs throughout eastern North Carolina.

In celebration of the Belk centennial in 1988, Belk of Greenville and Farmville pledged a total gift of $15,000 to the Pitt County Educational Foundation.

The income from the Belk gift is being used for annual presentations in the arts and humanities area for the children in Pitt County schools.

In 1988 all senior and junior art students in Pitt County were provided a tour of the N.C. Museum of Art.

Students Recognized

An award for outstanding senior and recognition to other East Carolina University students majoring in geography and planning were presented at the spring banquet of the ECU Student Planning Association Network.

Jane Daughtridge of Belhaven was the recipient of the outstanding senior award for planning. She was vice president of SPAN during the 1987-88 academic year. She graduated summa cum laude in December and is employed as a land-use planner with the Mideast Commission in Washington, N.C.

Dave Serra of New Bern was the recipient of the John C. Ralph and S.M. Hankins Scholarships. Serra was also recognized as the recipient of the Outstanding ECU Planning Student Award for 1988-89 presented last month by the North Carolina Chapter of the American Planning Association.

Four Awarded

Four graduate students in the East Carolina University Department of Library and Information Studies have received annual awards from the department.

All are candidates for the master of library science degree at ECU.

Patti Allen and Lois Yoder, both residents of Rocky Mount, were honored as recipients of the 1988-89 outstanding graduate student awards. The award recognizes outstanding scholarship and progress toward the master's degree.

Ms. Allen is media coordinator at West Edgcombe School in Rocky Mount and an ECU graduate. Ms. Yoder, an alumna of Eastern Mennonite College in Harrisonburg, Va., is a full-time student.

Social Services Considers Child Abuse Prevention Center

By Carol Tyer
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Pitt County Department of Social Services is considering entering into an agreement with the Eastern Carolina Exchange Club to support the work of an Exchange Child Abuse Prevention Center Inc.

Peggy Chandler of the DSS told the Social Services board Monday that the Exchange Club would like to establish a center to work with self-referred and DSS-referred parents of children deemed to be in need of child protective services. The program would be administered initially by Catholic Social Services.

Ms. Chandler said that if the agreement is authorized volunteers will perform such tasks as lay therapy at the center. She said, though, that the ultimate responsibility under law for protecting children will remain with the Pitt County DSS.

Similar programs in Lenoir County and Winston-Salem are successfully under way, Ms. Chandler said she understands.

DSS board members said the program sounds as if it could be worthwhile, but they will not proceed with its establishment until the board's legal counsel can be asked about its liability, especially related to information sharing.

Approval was given for the amendment of the department's appeals process policy and procedures. The amendment grievance procedure states that appeals must be filed with the Office of Administrative Hearing in Raleigh within 30 days after an alleged incident.

A policy was adopted that will allow food stamp program participants living outside the Greenville telephone exchange to call the DSS collect if they need to report changes or get food stamp information. The policy meets a requirement of the Hunger Prevention Act of 1988. The collect call policy was viewed as being less expensive than establishing a toll-free number.

Ed Garrison, DSS director, told of several upcoming audits and reviews of various aspects of the department's work. Among those are a Child Support Enforcement Agency review May 8 and May 9, and monitoring of the department's compliance with purchase of service policy and local use of the state abortion fund program.

A presentation was given on the department's Community Alternatives Program, which allows many physician-certified Medicaid recipients to live outside of nursing homes once they require intermediate or skilled nursing care.

Sallie Williamson, who directs the local CAP program, said Pitt is one of the few counties that has a CAP screening team inside a hospital — Pitt Memorial. She said local families have the option of making arrangements for loved ones' care there or at the DSS.

In the CAP program various in-home medical care equipment and medication can be purchased and plans of care can be worked out which include both paid health care workers and family members. Ms. Williamson was assisted in making the presentation by Marita McCarty, Linda Rice and Marthelyn Hudson, all of whom work in the program in various capacities.

ECU Alumni Meeting

The Tidewater chapter of the East Carolina University Alumni Association will host a pig pickin' at 6 p.m. May 19 at the Kempsville Ruritan Clubhouse, located on the corner of Witchduck and Princess Anne Road in Virginia Beach, Va.

Special guests will be incoming ECU freshmen and rising sophomores from the Tidewater area. Dr. Al Matthews, vice chancellor for student life, and several ECU ambassadors also plan to attend.

All ECU alumni and friends planning to attend should respond by May 12 to B.J. and Sarah Whitehurst, 536 Clearfield Ave., Chesapeake, Va., 23320, or call (home) (804) 547-3840 or (work) 804-547-2990; or contact Rick Conway, 5328 Tuza Lane, Virginia Beach, Va., 23464, or call (804) 479-2192 after 5 p.m.

Auction Planned

The Pitt County chapter of the East Carolina Alumni Association will host its fifth annual silent auction May 18 from 6:30 p.m. until 8:30 p.m. in Gray Art Gallery, located on the East Carolina University campus in the Jenkins Fine Arts Center.

Proceeds will benefit the Pitt County Alumni Chapter Scholarship and the ECU Foundation.

More than 80 items have been donated for the auction, including a symphonic compact disc player, a tailgating table and a watercolor by ECU graduate Emmy Whitehead.

Correction

Based on incorrect information given to the newspaper, The Daily Reflector erroneously reported Sunday that Meta M. Downes of the East Carolina University Speech-Language and Auditory Pathology faculty is retiring from the faculty. Mrs. Downes is not retiring. She was presented an engraved plaque in recognition of her service to the speech-language and auditory pathology professions and her service to the SHARE organization.

Heavy hors d'oeuvres, wine and punch will be served. For more information, contact Page Aman at 756-3272.

Nurses to be Honored

The School of Nursing Professional Society of the East Carolina University Alumni Association will honor local area alumni next week with purple and gold corsages. The corsages are to be worn in observance of Nurses Week which begins May 1.

"We are targeting local alumni, primarily those employed by Pitt County Memorial Hospital," said Dr. Sylvia T. Brown, president of the School of Nursing Professional Society. PCMH employs more than 300 ECU School of Nursing graduates in a variety of nursing positions, she said.

Life Sentence

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — A 21-year-old Randleman man pleaded guilty to reduced charges of second-degree murder and armed robbery Monday, nearly two years after he was charged with stabbing his great aunt to death with a steak knife.

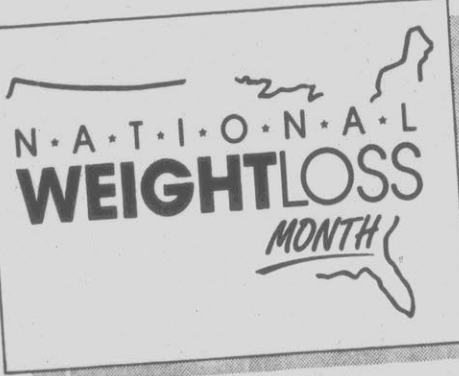

Alonzo Dale Baines was sentenced to life in prison and 40 years for the death and robbery of Lula B. Brown, his 74-year-old great aunt. Police found Ms. Brown's body in her Randleman home in June 1987. She had been stabbed twice in the throat and beaten. Some money and a television set were taken from her home.

An unemployed furniture worker who was on parole when Ms. Brown was murdered, Baines was charged with first degree murder and was facing a possible death sentence. His trial was scheduled to begin May 8.

10,000 Nutri/System® professionals help 750,000 Americans control their weight.

Science has taken the guesswork out of weight control. And it's becoming clear that information—not guilt nor deprivation—is our best weapon against being overweight. If you have tried to lose weight by counting calories, gulping pills, or following "miracle" fad diets, you probably know they provide a one-dimensional approach to a very complex problem.

The International Congress on Obesity (ICO) and the Council on Scientific Affairs of the American Medical Association (AMA) concur: A comprehensive weight loss plan is needed for long-term weight control.

Nutri/System® Comprehensive Weight Loss Program

The Council on Scientific Affairs of the AMA recommends three essential elements for long-term weight loss and maintenance:

1. Nutritionally-balanced diet
2. Behavior modification
3. Exercise

"These three elements are interdependent and mutually supportive. A program that incorporates all three is more likely to lead to long-term weight control," the AMA concludes.

The Nutri/System® Weight Loss Program, founded in 1971, is a comprehensive weight loss program that embraces all of the elements recommended by the AMA. The Nutri/System Weight Loss Program includes:

- Nutrition and Behavior Counseling to provide encouragement and support and to help understand weight control problems with our exclusive Personalized Weight Loss Profile™ questionnaire and Behavior Breakthrough™ classes.

- Delicious, low-calorie meals that are nutritionally balanced, low in fat, portion-controlled, and meet the high flavor and texture standards of our Flavor Set-Point™ Meal Plan.

- Light Exercise designed for people not used to exercising regularly.

- Weight Maintenance to help keep those pounds off and begin a healthy new life confident of permanent weight control.

1,100 Nutri/System® Centers for Support

In the month of April—as we recognize National Weight Loss Month and join in the "War on Obesity"—the 1,100 Nutri/System Centers stand ready to support your personal battle to lose weight. With more than 10,000 Nutri/System professionals throughout North America, we can help you get started on your way to a longer, happier and healthier life.

Nutri/System Centers provide 750,000 individuals every year with the proven tools to lose weight effectively and safely. And losing weight helps our clients lower their risk of cancer, heart disease, strokes, diabetes, and other major health risks linked to being overweight.

National Weight Loss Month

The 1,100 Nutri/System® Weight Loss Centers salute all efforts to inform the American public of the dangers of obesity. And we applaud the 43 million adults who are currently waging their own personal "War on Obesity" by actively attempting to lose weight and control their weight.

Nutri/System supports the designation of April as National Weight Loss Month, to raise public awareness and concern for the number one national health threat—Obesity. Nutri/System welcomes all other responsible members of the weight loss community to join in the "War on Obesity."

"War on Obesity"

If you are concerned with your health—and the health of your family—join in the national effort to recognize obesity as the number one public health threat it is.

What can you do?

1. Make sure you are not part of the problem. See your family physician and determine if you are counted among the 68 million overweight Americans*.
2. Take control of your own life. If you are overweight actively seek help through a comprehensive program for weight loss and weight control.
3. Enlist others in the "War on Obesity." Talk to your family, friends, and neighbors about this important national problem and join the thousands of Americans who will observe National Weight Loss Month during April.
4. Call for a national health policy on obesity. Write or call your Congressman today to join the "War on Obesity" and let's lick this national health threat.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Seriously

To Be Rather Than To Seem

If you're a newcomer to North Carolina, you may be confused by the complexity of the issues confronting state lawmakers.

Elected officials are hard at work in Raleigh, addressing the state's problems. They are swimming in hazardous waste, driving down the road to higher taxes and locking horns on locking up criminals.

Democrats are extra busy getting after their Republican governor. They've switched his legs for threatening to take a bite out of teachers' salaries and sat him in the corner for proposing a career ladder for educators. They've vetoed his attempt to implement a gubernatorial veto. It's a wondrous and awesome politic that inhabits the state house.

Most North Carolinians, whether freshly Tarheeled or native species, can discern the import of these down-to-earth issues.

You bet your pothole the state needs massive highway construction. That's worth a few pennies per gallon more for gas.

Toxic wastes should be recycled, burned or properly stored, not tossed in the ditch — or in the neighbor's ditch either.

Lawbreakers (not to be confused with lawmakers) should be punished or rehabilitated, not placed on a schedule that whirls them in and out of jail like a carousel.

And as for partisan grandstanding, Democrats will be Democrats and Republicans just love to get them going. That's the same everywhere.

No, making over these issues seems reasonable. Even intelligent. What's a mite inscrutable is what name tags, a hound dog, pine straw and bumper stickers have to do with highways, prisons and waste. That's what's got the newcomers' eyebrows furrowed.

Within the past month, lawmakers have considered a bill designating the Plott Hound the state dog. They've discussed measures to require newspaper reporters to wear name tags in the legislative building. They've tried to make it illegal to haul unregistered pine straw and have dirty words or pictures on the bumper of your car.

Now most old timers understand the seriousness and significance of these gyrations.

The hound dog is sacred to North Carolina's heritage. After all, the state's greatness wasn't built by mere a human mind.

Everyone should be required to wear name badges, especially legislators. That way they'll know who they are and so will their constituents who come to visit in Raleigh.

Stealing pine straw is worse than stealing horses — and everyone knows what happens to horse thieves. A little neck abrasion puts them in their place.

And as for those profane bumper stickers that display messages about sex, anatomy or bodily functions, they belong on the legislative floor, not on cars where innocent people riding to work on U.S. 264 can read them.

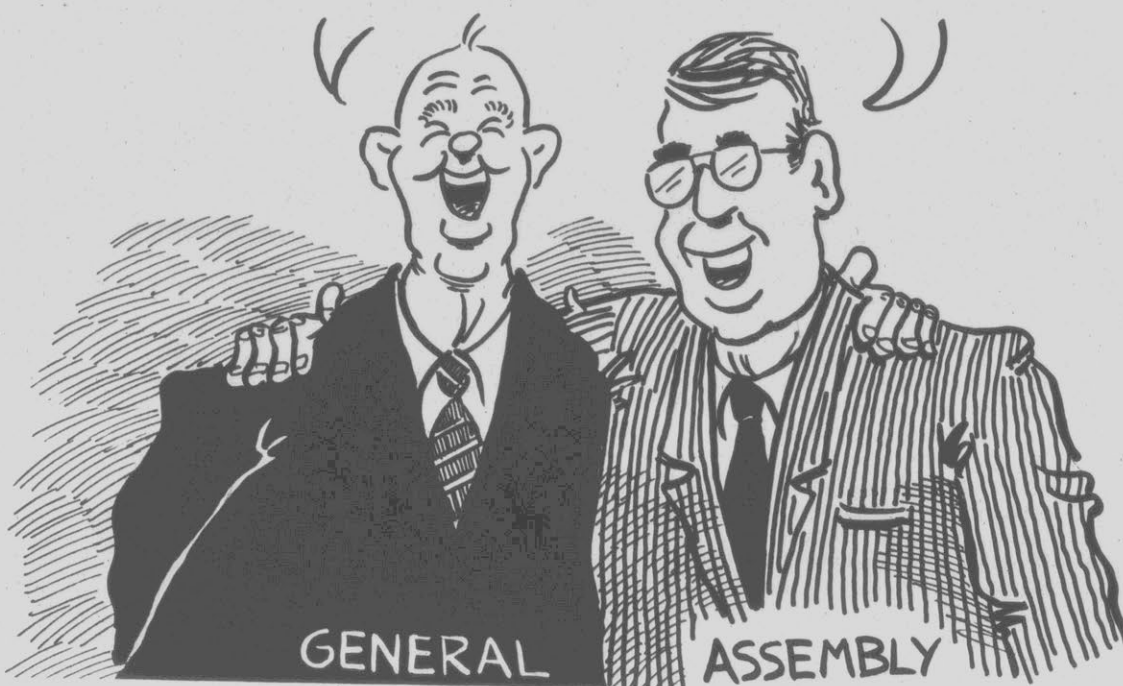

While neophytes might still have trouble understanding what all this ado has to do with highway construction, prison space and hazardous waste, it's no mystery to the old timers. They know lawmakers are busy guarding the integrity of the state motto, Esse Quam Videri — to be rather than to seem. No frivolous task, that.

So if you see a pickup truck hauling a hound dog and pine straw down a highway rutted with potholes (sounds like half the drivers on the road, doesn't it?) and sporting a bumper sticker that says something about sex or excrement, check to make sure both dog and driver have name tags. If they don't, call the law. In North Carolina, that could be a crime — actually, that may be two or three crimes. Where does hazardous waste fit in? Well, think about the hound dog. He's likely left his contribution in the truck. That might be another wrongdoing. North Carolina doesn't have enough jail space to put these odious offenders behind bars, but it will soon have the laws to prosecute them.

Ah, to be rather than to seem.

'What's a mite inscrutable is what name tags, a hound dog, pine straw and bumper stickers have to do with highways, prisons and waste.'

Fear Of Packing, Not Flying

WASHINGTON — It is the night before an airplane trip. I am feeling anxious. I go to bed, but cannot sleep, then rise, eat some ice cream, and return to bed. Still, I cannot sleep. Fear of flying, I hear you say. Nothing of the sort. Fear of packing, instead.

Yes, Fear of Packing (FOP) — a phobia affecting the air traveler in increasing numbers. As the chances of losing luggage increases, those of us who fly attempt to take all our bags on the plane. Limited to just two bags, we have to choose our clothing carefully.

Will the weather change? Will we be going into a warm climate and then into a cold one? Shall I take the raincoat or the overcoat? The wool blazer or the cotton one? And what single tie (okay, two) will suffice? Shoes are another concern. Have to take one for walking (do a lot of walking) and another for the dinner party to which I have not yet been invited.

These choices swirl through my head like little squalls. They kick up fears of being underdressed or overdressed, of taking — as I have in the past — one shoe from two different pairs. Shall I pack at night?, in which case I am not likely to find my toothbrush in the morning. Or shall I pack in the morning?, in which case I will hurry and take the wrong items.

The airlines know about FOP. They have underwritten grants to the University of Northern North Dakota (UNND) to study it. For the airlines, FOP accounts for loss of business. (UNND determined that 4.6 million people choose to drive rather than fly just so they can throw anything they need in the trunk.)

A recent study estimates that 6.4 million Americans suffer from FOP. These people are invariably late for planes and account for 22.4 percent of delayed takeoffs, for a cost to the airlines (domestic only) of $1.3 billion annually. When aboard, they are most likely to be disgruntled passengers, most likely to complain just because 7 of 9 headphone channels are out of order.

More surprisingly, FOP has been implicated in a growing number of spousal abuse cases. Fights over what to take and who gets to decide have been cited in a growing number of court cases. Three homicides have been attributed to arguments about which spouse gets more luggage space (all the victims were men) and six more murders were caused by what psychologists call Post-Packing Syndrome — the discovery upon arrival that something essential has been forgotten. (The last words the victim hears is "I thought you packed it!")

At a recent meeting of the American Psychological Association, FOP was rejected narrowly as a mental disease, although it is just a matter of time until it is accepted. But FOP, in conjunction with an intake of junk food (Twinkies and the like) was accepted, as was a combination of Pre-Menstrual Syndrome and Post-Packing Syndrome (PMS-PPS), especially if it is preceded by FOP. In the words of the association (ASA), FOP followed by PMS in conjunction with PPS can make a person "cross." Rest assured UNND is studying everything.

Studies show that the greatest amount of FOP occurs before trips to Los Angeles. Victims have been heard to obsessively repeat the phrase, "But it usually never rains this time of year." One study, though, suggests a slight reduction of FOP among stylish women. In fact, FOP is cited for the recent popularity of the color black.

'FOP seizes me the night before I travel. I envision rain in the desert and cold in the tropics. Should I take my bush jacket so I'll look like a reporter?'

The luggage industry knows about FOP and markets its product accordingly. Of the 2.7 billion pieces of luggage sold annually in the United States, an estimated 70 percent are what the industry considers redundant. "People are looking for the perfect bag," said George Wiley of the American Luggage Association in Samsonite, Ga. "And we keep telling them we have it."

In various cities, FOP support groups have formed. Members ("packers," they are called) are encouraged to pack and check into a local hotel. There, they unpack to determine if they have everything they need. Satisfied, they then return home where they leave the bag untouched. "Packers" are also encouraged to call other members of the group the night before a trip. All together, these groups have accounted for 18 marriages and 36 brief affairs. (But 11 of the marriages ended on account of fights about what to take on a trip.)

FOP seizes me the night before I travel. I envision rain in the desert and cold in the tropics. Where's my passport? Should I take my bush jacket so I'll look like a reporter? In the long night, I toss and turn, filling an imaginary steamer trunk with just the barest of essentials.

In the morning, I'm off, lugging two bags through the airport like a human mule — and always setting off the airport security alarm. It's my fault, I know. But I just can't travel without my coffee maker.

The Answer Is Yes & No

WASHINGTON — It has long been my view that on most public controversies, most people believe both "yes" and "no." The position we take depends on which of our contradictory views is coaxed to the fore.

For evidence, you need look no further than the question of abortion, which the Supreme Court will re-examine this week (April 25). Surveys, opinion polls, conversations with friends and my own conflicted thoughts lead me to conclude that the typical American is a pro-choice right-to-lifer.

It all depends on how the question is asked.

Ask us (as a recent Media General-Associated Press poll did) whether a woman should be allowed to have an abortion if she wants it and her doctor agrees, and most of us will say yes. Ask us if we think unrestricted access to abortion for any reason whatever is a good idea, and we're likely to say no.

We answer one way if the focus is on a woman's right to control her body; another way if the focus is on the unborn child.

As Jason DeParle puts in the current issue of The Washington Monthly:

"It's hard to hold these two images — the dismembered body of the fetus and the enveloping body of the mother, each begging the allegiance of our conscience — in mind at the same time." One of the overriding difficulties with the abortion debate is that we rarely try, preferring at least in our public utterances to deal in one-dimensional thinking: "To one side, visions only of women in crisis, terrified and imperiled by an invasive growth; to the other, only legions of innocent children, chased by the steely needle."

William Raspberry

The burden of DeParle's piece — he is pro-choice — is that the militants on his side of the debate refuse to acknowledge the moral (as opposed to the merely legalistic) implications of their position.

"The declaration of a legal right to an abortion doesn't end the discussion of what our attitude toward it should be," he asserts. "It merely begins it." The need, he says (quoting moral philosopher Daniel Callahan) is to preserve the "moral tension" implicit in an unwanted pregnancy. "This is something that too few members of the pro-choice movement are willing to do."

The other side will insist that even a newly fertilized egg is a human being, deserving of the full protection of the law.

Both sides will stand firm even when their positions are pushed to absurd limits: one arguing that a newborn baby was, a few minutes ago, mere tissue; the other insisting that an ovum fertilized in vitro is a human being entitled to the full panoply of rights.

In one sense, DeParle's own position is absurd. He argues both for the humanity of a fetus and for the mother's right to abort it. He insists only that we recognize a moral dilemma that goes beyond legal right. ("Of course, having the legal right to do something doesn't tell us whether it's a desirable thing to do. Women have the legal right to smoke and drink heavily during pregnancy, but few of us would hesitate to dissuade them from doing so. Why don't more feminists take the same view toward abortion — defending the right, but urging women to incline against it whenever possible?")

Supporters of Roe v. Wade can be excused for concluding that DeParle only wants to lay a guilt trip on any woman who opts for abortion. His argument finally is against what he calls "abortion-without-qualm," against the contention that a fetus isn't human unless we want it to be, and that our moral obligations to it don't exist unless we want them to.

His position will win him no friends among the activists on either side of the abortion question. But many in the conflicted majority may find themselves nodding in agreement.

Changing The Character Of High School Football Practice

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — Veteran legislators know that once laws go on books they often have totally unforeseen and undesirable consequences. One veteran legislator foresaw one of those possible consequences recently before it forced major changes in the way that high school football practices are conducted.

Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, has filed a bill that would make it illegal to curse on school grounds. The bill is aimed at adults who come onto a campus and are abusive.

Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, a lawyer and chairman of the judiciary subcommittee reviewing the bill, at first joked that the bill's main impact might be on high school football coaches. "There's probably not a high school football coach in the state who would be in the clear about this."

The quip got a few laughs, and then got the subcommittee to thinking. The bill really would cover, and thus make illegal, the usual ranting and ravings of a football coach.

For those who have never had the pleasure of a high school football practice, Hackney recalled that there is often little difference between a coach's language and the vocabulary of a marine drill segeant.

Hackney said the bill could be rewritten to exempt students and school personnel from the ban on cursing. But Rep. Skip Stam, R-Wake, said he didn't know it he'd go for that. "I don't think even our coaches should be engaging in ... obscene language," he said. There had been testimony that many children are subjected to this kind of language in their homes, and that they repeat it at school. Stam said, "Even the child who hears profanity all day at home should know that he won't hear it from adults at school."

Hackney and other members of the committee agreed, but said that a foul mouthed coach was best disciplined by school regulations, not the courts. Lilley's bill wasn't designed to instill purity of language at school, but only to give school authorities some legal recourse when an abusive outsider came onto campus.

The subcommittee put the issue aside while amendments were drafter to exempt students and coaches. One legislator who is not on the subcommittee will be watching. Rep. David Diamont, D-Surry, is the football coach at East Surry High. "I'm going to have to have that bill close scrutiny," he said.

The day earlier the same subcommittee had been asked to give U.S. District Court Judge James McMillan of Charlotte authority to marry a couple. Hackney didn't think that the bill, as written, was constitutional so he suggested that it be rewritten.

"I wouldn't want a couple getting married under a cloud of unconstitutionality," he said.

North Carolina legislators will have to work hard to top the Minnesota legislature for wacky idea of the year. A bill in Minnesota would provide a quarter of a million dollars on an underwater park in Lake Superior.

During late fall, winter and early spring, the biggest of the Great Lakes is frozen solid. Even on the hottest August days, the lake's waters are too cold for swimmers, or even toe-testing.

But some hearty Minnesotans want the underwater park for scuba diving. Newsweek's correspondent, in reporting the item, left the impression that the bill is in trouble.

GOP Holding Its Fire For Now

Walter Mears

WASHINGTON — Politicians have an uncanny knack for stepping on their own lines and speaking when silence would serve them best. It's a gold mine for consultants, who charge big fees for telling their candidates to be quiet.

Republicans, at least most of them, figured it out for themselves when House Speaker Jim Wright was hauled up on ethics charges. With the nation's top Democratic office holder facing 69 charges of violating House rules, no comment could improve upon the issue for the GOP.

Wright's Democratic defenders argue the whole case is a matter of partisan politics, even though the charges came from an ethics committee evenly divided between the parties, six members apiece. Since that is a central message of the defense, Republican attempts to capitalize on the Wright case right now would be counterproductive.

So the GOP theme has been judicious righteousness, leaving the Democrats to stew over their own problems. The minority leader, Rep. Bob Michel of Illinois, counseled his colleagues to exercise "extraordinary restraint and patience until final action is taken."

President Bush has been careful to avoid the Wright case. "The last thing I want to do is involve myself in any way," he has said.

One school of political thought has it that Republicans will use the Wright ethics case to retaliate against Democrats for Senate rejection of the Bush's nomination of John G. Tower to be secretary of defense. Bush doesn't like that thought: "I simply wouldn't condone that at all, and I would condemn it."

Even Rep. Newt Gingrich of Georgia, the new Republican whip, kept his profile and voice uncharacteristically low for a while, avoiding public comment when the Ethics Committee charges were announced.

That couldn't last, and didn't. Gingrich, who lodged the accusations that led to the Wright investigation, spoke up last week, repeating that he believes the speaker will be out by summer.

"I don't see how the guy survives," Gingrich said at luncheon with reporters. He said he doubted the charges ever would reach the House floor, suggesting that Democratic leaders would press Wright to resign as speaker in return for some lesser punishment.

Gingrich then insisted Republicans are carefully avoiding any intrusion on the ethics committee process.

"We have been saying this ought to be done in a careful and judicious way, and Jack Brooks and Charlie Wilson have been running around publicly threatening members of the ethics committee," he said.

Brooks and Wilson are Texas Democrats and leaders in the Wright defense.

Rep. Vin Weber of Minnesota, an activist conservative of the Gingrich school, claimed the Democrats have made "a nonpartisan issue into a political firestorm."

In commentary he wrote for The New York Times, Weber said "while most Republicans have been waiting to judge the case on the facts, virtually all prominent Democrats have declared the speaker innocent — before hearing the evidence."

"We Republicans are not attacking the gentleman from Texas," Rep. Dan Burton of Indiana told the House. "We are taking a wait-and-see attitude until all the facts are out, until we all read the report, until it is brought before the House."

Well, sort of. Gingrich praised the ethics committee findings as solid and remarkably thorough, although he acknowledged he had only skimmed the documents. He said he'd lived with the Wright case long enough to know serious work when he sees it.

Republicans can afford political piety on this one because they assume that Wright is on a hook he cannot get off — and the Democratic majority that made him speaker will ultimately have to figure out what to do about it.

Gingrich suggested a way out short of an embarrassing showdown on Wright, although he insisted he wasn't offering a deal. He said Democrats could cut their losses if Wright were to resign as speaker and Majority Leader Thomas S. Foley of Washington succeeded him.

"There would be a very large effort on both sides of the aisle, I think, to have a period of bipartisanship if you had Foley as speaker, and to try to heal some of the wounds," Gingrich said.

Walter R. Mears, vice president and columnist for The Associated Press, has reported on Washington and national politics for more than 25 years.

NCNB Drops Bid To Take Over Atlanta Bank

By Paul Nowell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — Rather than wage a bitter battle with Citizens & Southern Corp., NCNB Corp. has withdrawn its $2.4 billion takeover attempt, scuttling what would have been the largest merger in U.S. banking history.

"I recommended to our board of directors that we terminate the offer," said NCNB chairman Hugh McColl.

"I did so because, as was evident in our proposal and throughout subsequent communications, we were committed to a friendly merger," he said. "The management and directors of C&S, for reasons satisfactory to themselves, have decided not to accept our offer. I see no benefit in continuing it."

The announcement was made Monday after the close of trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

NCNB had risen 25 cents a share to $36.37½ and Citizens & Southern had fallen 62½ cents a share to $34.

The merger would have created the nation's sixth-largest banking company, but the Atlanta bank refused to discuss the proposal.

C&S chairman Bennett Brown said he "believed from the beginning that this offer was not in the best interests of our shareholders, customers, employees and communities, and that it would meet significant regulatory difficulties and public policy concern."

"Both these fine institutions can now get back to the business of banking and serving their communities," Brown said.

One analyst said he wasn't surprised by McColl's decision to drop the bid for C&S because NCNB wanted an expansion that would help its future growth.

"I think NCNB was trying to effect a merger and it needed it to be a friendly merger," said Dennis Shea, who watches NCNB and C&S for Morgan Stanley Co., a New York investment firm. "They wanted to retain the management strengths of C&S."

The NCNB decision came the same week as its 1989 annual meeting, which is scheduled for Wednesday. NCNB has more than $50 billion in assets.

Just four months ago, NCNB effectively doubled its size when it was selected by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. to acquire the largest bank in Texas, First RepublicBank Corp. Since 1982, NCNB has expanded aggressively into new markets in Florida, South Carolina, Georgia and Tennessee. The First RepublicBank move was the biggest until the C&S offer.

Tony Davis, a bank stock analyst with the Wheat First Securities brokerage firm in Richmond, Va., said NCNB could not go ahead with the takeover bid without the support of C&S's top management.

"I think you have to take them at their word," he said. "They said they wanted a friendly merger. It was important as they approached the Georgia market that they had the endorsement of the folks at C&S."

A hostile takeover attempt was not something NCNB wanted, he said, so when C&S refused to discuss the proposal, they were forced to withdraw the bid.

Chris Davis, who is not related to Tony Davis, works for Wheat First Securities in the firm's Charlotte office.

"They (NCNB) really needed the support of top management," he said. "They have a full plate in Texas."

Chris Davis also agreed that NCNB didn't want to become involved in an unfriendly takeover attempt of the Georgia bank.

"You don't enter a beauty contest with a black eye," he said.

Shea said NCNB was going after a respected bank with a strong management team that could have offered the Charlotte bank considerable help down the road in its expansion into Texas and Florida.

"If C&S continued to refuse to negotiate, NCNB was not going to pull off a friendly merger," he said. "I think NCNB realized that it could not negotiate in a vacuum. They couldn't just keep upping the price."

Shea also suggested that NCNB may have underestimated C&S's unwillingness to participate in the deal.

NCNB made the offer, which would have created the nation's sixth largest banking company with assets of $76 billion, on March 30, and on April 3, the C&S board rejected the offer. At the time, C&S called the offer "inadequate," and said C&S' present management was better able to serve the bank's customers, shareholders and communities than NCNB.

NCNB continued to court C&S, asking for face-to-face meetings, and adding different elements to the proposals, including a plan to move the firm's southeastern banking headquarters to Atlanta, where C&S is based.

On April 13, McColl visited Atlanta and vowed to continue to pursue to the offer, though he did not meet with any C&S officials. Five days later, C&S Chairman Bennett Brown urged shareholders to support the C&S board in its rejection of the NCNB offer.

"Let me put it bluntly," Brown said at the time. "NCNB cannot afford C&S."

Last week, McColl announced that his bank would increase its bid if C&S officials agreed to meet with NCNB executives. McColl did not indicate how high the offer would go.

Odom Submits Bill Calling For Higher Tax On Tobacco

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Ignoring warnings of political retaliation, Sen. Fountain Odom has filed a bill that would increase the state excise tax on cigarettes by 4 cents per pack and tax manufacturers for each pack produced in North Carolina.

"The tax proposed here I do not consider to be onerous, or oppressive," Odom said Monday night. "I think it is a matter of fairness."

North Carolina's 2-cents-per-pack excise tax is the lowest in the nation. Under Odom's legislation, the tax would increase to 6 cents per pack.

His proposed tax on the manufacture of cigarettes would levy a half-cent tax on each pack produced in North Carolina.

The excise tax would generate an additional $32 million a year in revenues, while the manufacturing tax would produce $45 million.

The excise-tax increase would go into effect July 1 if approved by the legislature. The manufacturer's tax would not go into effect until the first day of the month after Virginia and Kentucky, which also have large cigarette manufacturing plants, enact similar taxes. If those states haven't acted by July 1, 1990, the North Carolina tax would go into effect.

Even before their formal introduction, the bills had generated controversy, with threats of retaliation against Odom, a freshman Democrat from Charlotte, by fellow legislators and tobacco interests.

One senator has threatened to sponsor a $5-per-seat tax on the Charlotte Coliseum. Another has drafted legislation that would impose a manufacturers' tax on North Carolina furniture companies. Tobacco lobbyists have pledged to work to defeat Mr. Odom in the 1990 election.

"Any manufacturing tax would be a dumb, fool mistake for this legislature to do," said V.B. "Hawk" Johnson, a lobbyist for Philip Morris U.S.A. "And I just don't think they will support that. ... You're really messing with a disincentive for bringing new industry into the state."

Students Filling Classrooms To Learn More About Vietnam

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — Today's college undergraduates "spent the Tet Offensive in diapers," but they are filling up classrooms to learn more about the Vietnam war, the longest war the United States has ever been involved in.

Their recollections, if any, are gauzy memories — television news clips of camouflaged U.S. soldiers, long-haired demonstrators. But many current students were affected by the war, often through a family member who fought there.

"There's an intense interest in what all this grief's about," said Terry Frazier, who takes a film class on Vietnam at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte.

Frazier's 125 students make the class one of the school's largest.

"It's very clear, you teach Vietnam and the students are going to be at your doorstep," said Tim Lomperis, who teaches a graduate seminar for 18 students at Duke University. He turned away another 40 students.

Frazier augments his course with personal anecdotes and opinions as a paratrooper who lost both legs to a mine.

The class — dotted with students wearing ROTC uniforms and tie-dyed shirts — listened intently as Frazier described napalm. "If you can imagine glue on you on fire, that's what napalm was," he said.

Davidson College senior Mary Franche took history Professor David Shi's course because her father and two uncles served in Vietnam. "Nobody at home ever talked about it," she said.

Shi requires students to interview veterans. Ms. Franche, from Leavenworth, Kan., picked her father, a retired Army colonel. Then she persuaded him to speak to the class.

It was a tense moment for her.

"He's never talked about it, and so I didn't know what his reaction was going to be while he spoke, if he was going to get emotional about it."

"I found myself getting emotional during some of it. Knowing he took part in the liberation of Hue — one of the worst battles during the Tet Offensive. Then he spoke about one battle when he didn't think he was going to make it."

Ms. Franche said her class work helped her understand her father's involvement.

Labor Costs Stabilizing

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A rising price for the yen and an increase in wages have driven the cost of labor in Japanese industry to 95 percent of the U.S. cost last year, when reckoned in dollars, according to the latest figures from the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics.

The average cost per hour was $13.90 in the United States and $13.14 in Japan.

Low wages in Japan were often cited in the past as a reason for Japan's ability to sell its goods. In dollar terms, the average cost of a worker was only half the cost in the United States as recently as 1985. Since then, the price of the yen has risen fast: it took 238 yen to buy a dollar in 1985; last year the average price was only 128 yen.

The amounts Japanese employers pay for labor have been steadily increasing in Japanese terms as well, from an average of 904 yen an hour in 1975, then equal to only $3.05, to 1,685 yen last year or $13.14. This translates into even greater purchasing power for Japanese wage-earners, since Japanese price rises have been smaller than in any other big industrial country.

In West Germany, Norway and Switzerland labor costs were 30 percent to 40 percent higher last year than in the United States. They were 10 percent to 20 percent higher in Belgium, Denmark, Finland, the Netherlands and Sweden.

D.C. Police Chief Stepping Down As Crime Rate Rises

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Police Chief Maurice T. Turner is retiring amid growing notoriety of the District of Columbia as a drug and murder capital as well as continuing conflict with Mayor Marion S. Barry, published reports say.

Turner, a 32-year veteran of the force whom Barry had appointed chief in 1981, submitted his retirement papers and will step down July 31, The Washington Post and The Washington Times reported in today's editions.

"I've been thinking about it a while," Turner told the Times. "I guess you've got to go when the environment is right."

Turner declined to comment on reports that he may take a position with the office of national drug policy director William J. Bennett, the Times said. The Post reported that Assistant Chief Isaac Fulwood, the department's second-ranking official, will be named to succeed Turner in running the 3,990-member force.

The Times said Turner did not rule out the possibility he might run for mayor. "Well, I'm still playing it by ear," he said. "Some people are asking me (to run for mayor), but I just don't want to say publicly right now."

Turner had been increasingly at odds with Barry over the past few months, according to the reports.

The Times quoted a source close to Turner as saying the chief feared his years of service would be tarnished by controversy surrounding Barry.

One source of friction was Barry's attempt to call police officials to learn the results of an internal department inquiry into the handling of Barry's visit to a friend at a downtown hotel room, the Post said. The friend, Charles Lewis, has since been indicted on drug charges.

A police investigation of a drug complaint at the hotel room last December was abruptly halted when police learned that Barry was in the room, according to reports.

The two also feuded over increasing the size of the force, a move that Barry opposed, the Post said.

Dula's Advice

STATESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Before he was executed in Statesville in 1868, Tom Dula addressed a crowd of thousands from the gallows with an anti-drinking message.

More than 120 years later, city leaders say they might use the same theme to help revitalize a neighborhood near downtown Statesville.

"Tom ... told everybody to stay away from strong spirits and bad company," said Matthews historian Charlotte Barnes. "That is going to be our theme for South Center Street — the positive things that came across in his last speech."

The saga of Dula, who was executed for a love-triangle crime some say he didn't commit, was memorialized by the Kingston Trio in the late 1950s in the hit record "Tom Dooley," a ballad first written in 1867.

Indictments

DOBSON, N.C. (AP) — A Surry County grand jury indicted two men Monday in connection with the killing of a former Surry County sheriff's deputy and the wounding of his girlfriend during the robbery of the couple.

Jerry Dale Erlewine, 31, of Pilot Mountain, and Joseph Edward Lynch, 20, of Germantown, were each indicted on charges of murder; first-degree burglary; felonious larceny; possession of stolen goods; assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, inflicting serious injury; and two counts of armed robbery.

They are charged in the death of David Lee Carlisle, 42, and the wounding of Carlisle's girlfriend, Patricia Cox, on Oct. 26. The couple lived in a trailer in the Holly Springs community south of Mount Airy.

Body Found

ASHEVILLE (AP) — The body of a Madison County man was found Monday morning in a pickup truck in a shopping center parking lot, police say.

The body of Kevin Cordel, 30, was found behind the steering wheel of the truck around 3:45 a.m., according to Lt. Ed Edwards of the Asheville Police Department. He received a call from an employee of one of the businesses in the center.

The cause of death is unknown, Edwards said. He said an autopsy would be performed.

Museum Pact

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Museum of Art has reached a formal agreement with the National Museum of Poznan in Poznan, Poland, to organize jointly an exhibition of paintings from the Poznan museum.

Richard Schneiderman, director of the N.C. Museum of Art, announced the agreement Monday with Henryk Kondziela, director of the Poznan museum.

The exhibit, which will be held in the spring of 1992, will comprise 54 paintings from the late 19th and early 20th centuries by 21 Polish artists. This will be the first time many of these works of art have been exhibited outside of Poland, Schneiderman said.

Poznan, located in western Poland, is the country's fifth largest city with an estimated population of 670,000.

Wildlife

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin was given authority to replace members of the North Carolina Wildlife Commission as the Senate on Monday enacted into law a bill overhauling the 13-member panel.

The bill officially was to take effect today when signed by Lt. Gov. Jim Gardner and House Speaker Joe Mavretic. But it cleared its final hurdle when the Senate voted 42-4 to accept an amendment added by the House when it passed the bill last week.

Under the amendment, the wildlife commissioners will continue to be chosen from special wildlife districts. The Senate had voted to have commissioners chosen from the 11 U.S. House districts, with two additional members chosen at large.

Jail Escape

ROANOKE RAPIDS, N.C. (AP) — Two men escaped from the the Northampton County Jail at Jackson about 4 a.m. Monday by pulling a toilet away from the wall of their cell, authorities said.

The suspects, Dennis Wayne Bryant, 30, of Garysburg and Michael James Ponton, 34, of Weldon, had been arrested Sunday on grand larceny charges. They also face two charges each of felonious possession of stolen merchandise in Rocky Mount.

Authorities using tracking dogs from the Odom Correctional Center at Jackson were still searching for the men late Monday.

Floral Memorial

A square in front of a Georgian government building in Tbilisi, U.S.S.R., was covered in flowers Monday in memory of victims of the April 9 clash between protesters and soldiers. Soviet Georgia's Communist Party chief acknowledged Monday that some of the victims died from gas poisoning. The steps are covered with portraits of the victims.

Animal Activists Arrested

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BETHESDA, Md. — Police arrested 58 flag-waving, slogan-chanting animal rights activists after they blocked traffic in a busy intersection and forced open a door at the National Institutes of Health.

"This is the first step in voicing your opinion and letting it be known that people are opposed to this kind of cruelty to animals," said Zakki Jewad, 25, of Silver Spring, Md.

Organizers said the aim of the demonstration in this Washington D.C. suburb was to kick off a week of civil disobedience and rallies at research centers and universities nationwide.

"We're protesting the murders of millions of animals in research laboratories every year," said Lee Warren, 61, of Baltimore, who came to Monday's rally toting a sign and dressed in a full-length black cape and hood to represent death.

During the demonstration, about 200 activists gathered on NIH's grassy lawn for speeches and vegetarian lunches. NIH was targeted for the demonstration because it is the largest funding source for animal research, protesters said.

Police arrested 37 activists after they linked hands and blocked traffic on a busy street for about 30 minutes. Officers dragged many across the road to allow traffic to get by. They were charged with disobeying a police officer and were released at the scene, according to Montgomery County police.

Following the arrests, the protesters proceeded to NIH's main administration building where they began to pound on doors and windows of the facility. One of the doors broke open and police arrested 21 of the protesters and charged them with trespassing. Some also were charged with breaking and entering, according to NIH officials.

Suit Dropped

CARRBORO, N.C. (AP) — Eddie Hatcher, Timothy Jacobs and their supporters are dropping a lawsuit they filed 12 weeks ago accusing state and Robeson County officials of orchestrating a campaign of intimidation and harassment.

Lewis Pitts of Carrboro, a lawyer for the plaintiffs, said Monday the decision to have the suit dismissed "was really an allocation-of-resources question."

He said lawyers involved in the case had decided to ask a federal judge to dismiss the suit after the state Attorney General's Office "made it very clear that ... everything was going to be arms-length warfare."

Hatcher and Jacobs face state kidnapping charges for taking hostages at a Lumberton newspaper on February 1, 1988. They said they staged the armed takeover to spotlight alleged corruption in the county.

Amnesty Says Race Involved In Deaths

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — Amnesty International, which opposes capital punishment in all circumstances, said today that the use of the death penalty in the United States appears arbitrary and biased against blacks and Hispanics.

In a 268-page worldwide report titled "When the State Kills," the human rights group condemned the use of the death penalty as a "judicial lottery" that does not deter crime.

The United States and 99 other countries execute people for crimes.

"Despite a range of safeguards, the use of the death penalty in the USA appears to be arbitrary and racially biased," Amnesty International said in the report's introduction.

The London-based group, which won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1977, criticized America for executing convicts for crimes committed when they were juveniles.

In June 1988, 30 prisoners in 14 states were under sentence of death for crimes committed when they were under age 18. This is permitted by 25 states, the report said.

As of May 1988, 2,048 prisoners were under the death sentence in 35 states, according to the report. Ninety-eight prisoners were executed from 1977 to May 31, 1988, including three juveniles, two in Texas and one in South Carolina.

Amnesty said there are regional disparities in the numbers of death sentences. Four states — Florida, Georgia, Louisiana and Texas — have accounted for more than three-quarters of all executions since 1977, the report said.

"Jury selection procedures in most states allow prosecutors to exclude committed opponents of the death penalty from sitting as jurors. ... Studies have indicated that this practice has created 'death-prone' juries," according to the report.

It said black defendants, especially in Southern states, have often been convicted by all-white juries after prosecutors have excluded black prospective jurors.

Blacks comprise 12 percent of the national population but 41 percent of prisoners under sentence of death, the report said.

"The evidence suggests that race — especially that of the victim — has an important bearing on the likelihood of a death sentence being imposed, especially in the Southern states. Although blacks and whites are the victims of homicide in almost equal numbers, most offenders who are sentenced to death are convicted of murdering whites."

Chinese Soldiers Massing In Beijing

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — Officials ordered factories to keep their workers from striking in sympathy with Beijing students who are boycotting classes and today sent representatives into the streets to explain their pro-democracy campaign.

Students and residents of the district where most of the strike-bound universities are located reported troops from outlying counties had moved into the area in preparation for an eventual crackdown.

"They've moved into the hotels and empty buildings," said one youth. "They make so much noise it's hard to miss them."

Informed sources said more than 10,000 troops had been brought in.

The class boycott began Monday and students leaders at Beijing and Qinhua universities — two leading schools that together have more than 20,000 students — today met to resolve disagreements over strategy.

Students said some leaders favored holding more large rallies such as Friday's all-night sit-in by 100,000 students in central Tiananmen Square.

Others advised avoiding confrontations with police until May 4, the 70th anniversary of China's first pro-democracy student movement, when the students plan a major demonstration.

"The divisions are not serious," said one student leader. But poster boards at Beijing University were plastered with pleas for unity.

U.S.-Palestinian Youth Disappears

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KUFR MALIK, Occupied West Bank — Two Palestinians who are American citizens have become entangled in Israel's military justice system and one disappeared after answering a summons to an army headquarters.

Relatives of Jafer Hamayel, 25, said he complied with the army summons on April 13 and they have since been unable to locate him.

The other American, 16-year-old Mansour Abdallah, was accused of throwing stones and has been held for three months without bail and without appearing in court, his lawyer said.

Human rights activists say Hamayel and Abdallah are among thousands of Palestinians who are being denied basic legal rights under military justice in effect in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Army officials deny the allegations, saying the military has set up a special office to help lawyers find clients and that bail has been granted in hundreds of cases.

"We believe we have a liberal judicial system in the territories, but we should not be judged in the same context as Western countries that are not in a state of war," an army official said earlier this year.

In the cases of Hamayel and Abdallah, both of whom had lived in Puerto Rico, the army was unable to locate either one even after being given details three days earlier by The Associated Press.

An army official, who could not be identified under military regulations, said he could not locate them because he did not have Israeli-issued identification numbers for them.

Palestinian lawyer Jonathan Kuttab said Abdallah has only a U.S. passport and not an Israeli identity card. Hamayel's relatives said he had his Israeli card with him when he disappeared and they did not know the number.

Hamayel was born in Kufr Malik, a mountain village known for its resistance to Israeli occupation.

On a visit Monday to the village 15 miles north of Jerusalem, Palestine Liberation Organization slogans, Palestinian flags and a poster of PLO chief Yasser Arafat adorned the main square.

Hamayel left Kufr Malik in 1983 after being imprisoned for three months on charges of violating Israeli law by raising Palestinian flags, said his uncle, Ata Hamayel, 39.

Teen Mom Has A Busy Schedule

Dear Abby: I'm a 16-year-old single mom who is also working and going to school. I have a 3-month-old boy who is the joy of my life. I read your column a lot of the time, and there is never anything from single teen mothers. Other teens think that there are no problems and that it is so easy to take care of a baby. Well it is hard and stressful. I would like everybody to know what my normal schedule is:

5:00 a.m.: wake up.
5:15 a.m.: take shower and get ready for school.
6:00 a.m.: wake up and dress my son.
6:15 a.m.: take my son to day-care.
6:30 a.m.: go to school.
1:30 p.m.: pick up my son at day-care.
2:00 p.m.: give my son a bath.
2:30 p.m.: feed him.
3:00 p.m.: unpack his diaper bag and repack a new one.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

3:30 p.m.: play with my son.
4:00 p.m.: get ready for work.
5:00 p.m.: go to work.
9:15 p.m.: come home, feed my son and put him to bed.
9:30 p.m.: make formula for the next day.
10:00 p.m.: clean up the house (do laundry and homework).
11:00 p.m.: go to bed.

I'm not even counting getting up in the middle of the night if my son is restless or sick.

I am a busy person with no time just to be a 16-year-old girl having fun. I'm lucky because I live with my mom, stepdad and sister, who are usually very supportive and helpful — except when I need money. After I pay for day-care, I have $80 a month left for my son and me.

I'm trying hard to be a good mom, a good daughter, a good employee and a good student. It's not easy.

I hope you think this is worth space in your column. — Single Teen Mom

Dear Single Teen Mom: Your letter was well worth the space. I thank you for writing, and wish you and your son well.

Dear Abby: I would like to address my remarks to "Wish I'd Been Adopted."

I am truly sorry you suffered as a child, but please don't use your experience to dictate your conscience to me. I am an adult adoptee who has just begun to search for my birth parents. Please let me tell you something about grown adoptees.

When we were born, "illegitimacy" was considered such an unspeakable social horror that single pregnant women were pressured by parents, adoption agencies, schools and employers to give up their children. Unwed mothers were expelled from college or high school until well into the '60s, and were often refused jobs.

The majority of such women did not simply "decide" to surrender their children for adoption. They had no other options.

Well, Ms. "Wish I'd Been Adopted," you suggest that I leave well enough alone, and call my adoptive parents my "real" parents. "Real"? Do you mean that my birth parents are "unreal," "imaginary" or "fake"? I have four "real" parents — two who created me, and two who raised me. I am now searching for my birth parents to show them what a wonderful job my adoptive parents did in raising their child, and to show them I am alive and well and feel no ill will toward them.

Miss Dixon Is Wed To Mr. Foell Sunday

The wedding ceremony of Shelia Annette Dixon and Russell Scott Foell took place Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The Rev. Bobby Williams conducted the double-ring ceremony in Sheldermine Pentecostal Holiness Church. Wedding music was presented by Mr. and Mrs. Rick Langley.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rick Langley, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Foell, all of Greenville.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a chapel-length gown of white taffeta designed with a sweetheart neckline. The fitted bodice was beaded with sequins and pearls. The long puffed sleeves extended to a point at the wrist. The A-line skirt had a taffeta bow in back.

She wore a halo of silk flowers with a two-tier illusion veil accented with appliques. She carried a cascade bouquet of white and peach sweetheart roses, stephanotis and baby's breath accented with peach picot satin ribbons.

Debra Coward of Greenville was maid of honor. She wore a coral satin tea-length gown. It had a rounded neckline edged in a double ruffle, puffed sleeves and basque waistline accented with a back bow.

Jennifer Adams of Greenville was matron of honor. Bridesmaids included Teresa Kellum, Kimberly Perry and Tammy Stocks, all of Greenville. They were dressed like the honor attendant. Each carried a single white long-stemmed rose accented with greenery, baby's breath and a peach satin ribbon.

Danielle Spain of Greenville, cousin of the bride, was flower girl. She was dressed like the other attendants and carried a garden basket with flowers.

Ruel Stancill was best man for his nephew. Groomsmen included Brent Dixon of Winterville, brother of the bride; Andrew Glasgow of Wilson, cousin of the bridegroom, and Kenny Evans and Michael Reel, both of Greenville. Scott Foell of Greenville was ring bearer. He is nephew of the bridegroom.

Verna Carrow, Maybelle Dixon and Martha Paramore, grandmothers of the bride couple, were remembered with corsages of white carnations.

Sherry Spain of Greenville directed the wedding. Lori Ann Dixon of Winterville, sister-in-law of the bride, presided at the register. Programs were distributed by Sandra Dawson of Winterville.

MRS. FOELL

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall.

An after-rehearsal pig picking was given by the parents of the bride and the couple was given several showers prior to the wedding.

After a wedding trip to the Outer Banks the couple will live in Greenville.

The bride is a graduate of D.H. Conley High School and is employed by the Clerk of Superior Courts Office in Greenville. The bridegroom is a graduate of Farmville Central High School and is employed by Little's Nursery in Greenville.

Families Like Hers Will Say It In Writing

Psychologists are always telling us that the family structure is eroding because we don't communicate. We communicate, all right. We just do it in subtle ways, using T-shirts, bumper stickers and refrigerator doors.

Recently after one of the kids borrowed our car, he complained that the four doors and automatic shift were klutzy, the sun shades on the windows dorky, and the stupid litter bag dangling from the radio dial downright AARP-ish. The next day my husband slapped a bumper sticker on the car reading, "Don't Laugh. It's Paid For."

My son retaliated by covering it with a new bumper sticker, "My Other Car is A Porche."

At Wits End

Erma Bombeck

Sensing the friction between them, I posted a story on the refrigerator door about the bitterness in the Pete Rose family and scribbled across it, "Does this sound like anyone we know?"

It's incredible how we have abandoned verbal skills and let someone else do the talking. Somehow, I've always felt Hallmark, Dear Abby, Ann Landers and refrigerator door magnets express themselves better than I do.

The moment the family sees a magnet reading, "We've Got To Stop Eating Like This," they know before they open the refrigerator door that I'm dieting again and there is going to be nothing but celery stalks and bean sprouts in there.

Every time a kid at college gets a letter from home, a packet of clippings falls out warning him of sexual disease and a new theory that living together without benefit of marriage causes skin disorders. Mothers are about as subtle as people who forget their door keys and use demolition balls to open the doors.

We've had some real confrontations between the T-shirts, bumper stickers and the refrigerator doors. It can get pretty ugly. We were planning a trip back East a few months ago when a T-shirt appeared at the table, "I'd Rather Be Skiing."

"What kind of a crack is that?" asked my husband.

"She's telling us she doesn't want to go with us back East," I said.

It was time for the refrigerator to bring reason and good will to the family. I had a clipping of an ungrateful girl whose parents had died without her ever getting to say how much she loved them, and a sweet story about how well the Martin Sheen family got along even with the pressures of stardom. The "ungrateful girl" story was a real gem that I could use for something major later on, so I went with the Sheens.

No sense "talking" them to death.

Stock And Market Reports

By The Associated Press
HOGS: Market 25 to 75 cents higher at N.C. buying stations. Kinston, Spivey's Corner, Murfreesboro, Robersonville, Siler City 36.00; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Chadbourne, Ayden, Laurinburg and Benson 36.00; Wilson 36.50; sows: (500 pounds up) Fayetteville no quote; Wallace 29.00; Spivey's Corner 30.00; Rowland 30.00.

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 60.00 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. Final weighted average of 61.25 cents. The market tone for next week's trading is steady to firm and the live supply is moderate for a good demand. Average weights are desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina 2,134,000, compared to 2,122,000 last Tuesday.

HENS: N.C. hen market was steady. Supplies short for a good demand. Prices paid per pound, day of negotiation, generally for slaughter the following week, heavy types, 7 pounds and up, 28 cents at farm buyer loading.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn mostly 6 cents lower, at mostly $2.74-$2.89 in the East; mostly $2.94-$2.99 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans 15-16 cents lower at mostly $7.35-$7.49 1/2 in the East; mostly $7.29-$7.35 in the Piedmont; wheat mostly $3.91-$4.02; new crop corn $2.54-$2.64; new crop soybeans $6.82-$7.02; new crop wheat $3.49-$3.77. Exchange rates for P.I.K. certificates were steady and ranged from 98 to 101 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices rose today in a rebound from a selloff in the previous session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 5.31 points to 2,407.99 in the first 30 minutes of trading.

Gainers outnumbered losers about 3 to 2 with 557 up, 337 down and 584 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 26.31 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Analysts said trading was encouraged by a resilient response in Tokyo to Japan Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita's earlier announced resignation amid a financial scandal. The market in Japan closed higher today.

Street Parties Nixed

Grog's, Attic, Elbo Room, Rafters, Pantana Bob's, Rockefeller's, Chicos, Fizz and Omars. Also agreeing to the one-night closing are Sharky's, Sports Pad, Susie's Tree House, Wrong Way Corrigans and Cubbies.

"We hope that by closing this year, our city will no longer suffer the violence and property damage of the previous Halloween," Saieed said in his memo to the council.

The Halloween Activities Review Committee encompassed a broad representation, including members of the City Council, Greenville police, ECU administration, ECU student government and the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

"I feel we chose a very good committee," said panel chairman and City Councilman Bill Hadden. "We sat down and were in complete agreement that the Halloween celebration had to be canceled and that we didn't have to have a substitute for it any place on the university or any place else."

Jennifer Vanderburg, vice president of ECU's Student Government Association, said she believes most of the student populace will readily accept the council's decision.

"I don't think anyone was really having that much fun anymore going downtown because things were getting so out of hand with all the people coming in from out of town," she said. "I think most of the students will make other arrangements to celebrate Halloween like going to parties with their friends."

Parachute Accident

RAEFORD, N.C. (AP) — A Fort Bragg soldier was killed in a parachute accident near the Raeford-Hoke Airport in Hoke County last weekend, authorities said.

Pfc. Mark A. Goehring was jumping with the Green Beret Sports Parachute Club at the time of the accident, according to Sgt. 1st Class Debra Arden of the Fort Bragg Public Affairs Office.

Card of Thanks

The family of the late Archie Lee Oakley, Sr. wishes to thank the rescue squad, emergency personnel and the police for all their help.

Many thanks to all our family, friends, and business associates for their support. Thanks to everyone for their visits, calls, flowers and food.

But most of all to everyone for their prayers and comfort after the loss of our beloved husband, father and grandfather.

Lewis Looking For Veteran Leadership

Grant Lowe

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Bill Lewis, the new head football coach at East Carolina University, said that his earliest effort with the program was to change some attitudes.

At a Monday press conference to review his first spring practice, Lewis feels that he and his staff have taken a big step along the way.

"This program was not at rock bottom, but we wanted to raise it to a higher level," Lewis said. "We wanted to create the attitude of having the expectation of winning every time this football team steps on the field. That doesn't happen ever night."

Lewis used his defensive unit as an example. "We believe in playing defense extremely aggressively. The key is not the scheme but in getting 11 who want to play aggressively, who can play with emotion and enthusiasm."

"We spent three weeks trying to establish this. As we got into our fourth week, we started to sense that they were getting the idea."

Lewis said that these changes in attitude were emphasized "over and over and over again. That will be our thrust in the fall."

Lewis said that he will be the most disappointed man in the country if, on Sept. 9 when the Pirates open the season, there is not a standing room only crowd in Ficklen Stadium. "Then, it will be our job to bring them back in two weeks (for the next home game). I'm not talking winning but showing effort and playing hard, being an exciting team to watch."

Lewis said that when practice started, he didn't know what to expect from the team, but that it had put forth a total commitment to what he and his staff were trying to do.

"We didn't accomplish all we set out to do," he said, "but I don't know of many teams that do. But there's nothing that can't be picked up in the fall and installed before our first game."

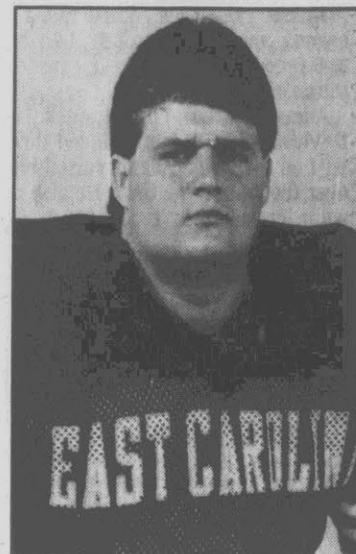

Lewis said that the offensive line was perhaps the area that progressed the fastest, citing the experience of the group and the fact that it was the only area that didn't undergo a coaching change. Steve Shankweiler, who coached the position under former coach Art Baker, remains on the Lewis' staff as the offensive line coach.

Lewis said that returning veterans Grant Lowe and Todd Drugac at tackles and Stewart Southall at guard gives the line good leadership. Billy Maxwell at guard and Chad Martin at center also have a good amount of experience to draw on.

"They know who to block, how to get a hat on the right guy and get movement in the line," Lewis said.

However, work is still needed in pass protection, he added.

Lewis calls the tight end position one of the crucial areas in his I-formation offense. Charles Freeman "has the capability of being a big time tight end," Lewis said. "But he has to work to be consistent and to know the importance

Fenner Is Drafted Despite Controversy

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KIRKLAND, Wash. — The Seattle Seahawks on Monday defended the controversial selection of 10th-round draft choice Derrick Fenner, a North Carolina running back with a troubled past.

Fenner, who said he was the victim of a December nightclub shooting in Washington, D.C., after earlier problems with the law, has not played the past two seasons.

"We are well aware of his background and the problems that he's faced," said Tom Flores, the Seahawks' president and general manager. "We are well aware that those are all behind him. The National Football League gave him clearance."

"We feel everybody deserves another chance," Flores added. "If we felt there was any danger or there were any problems that still existed, obviously we might have gone a different direction. But we feel he deserves another chance. He certainly was an outstanding player at one time. We hope that he still can give us that kind of ability and we're willing to give him a chance."

Fenner, 22, led the Atlantic Coast Conference in rushing with 1,250 yards on 200 carries as a sophomore in 1986, scoring six touchdowns.

Then his problems began.

Fenner was arrested in June 1987 in the fatal shooting of Marcellus Leach, 19, in what Maryland police called a "turf war" between rival drug factions.

He was charged with first-degree murder but the charge was dropped on Nov. 30, 1987, because of "insufficient evidence," Prince George's County Assistant State's Attorney Mary Scherstrom said.

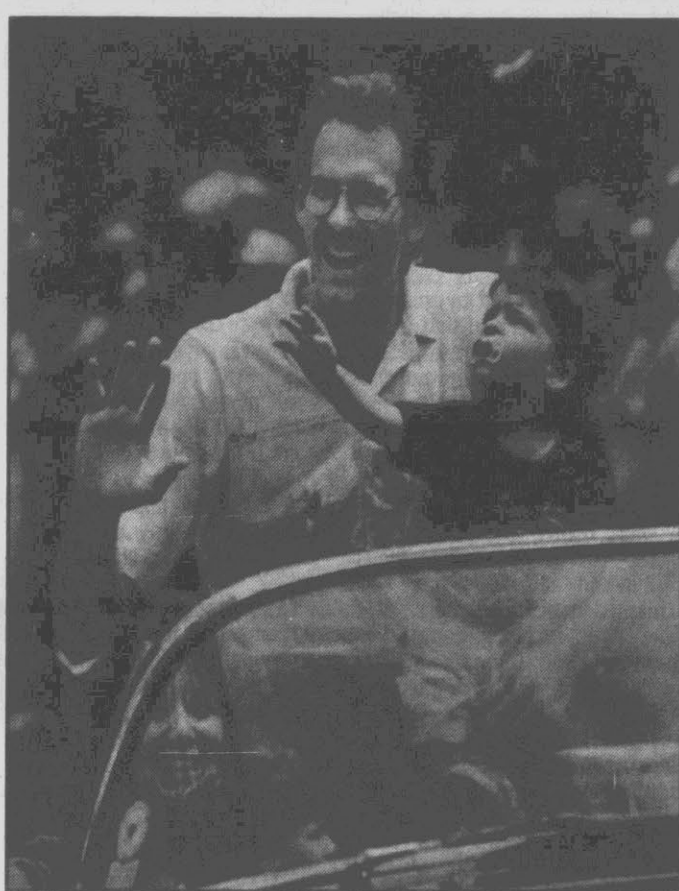

In April 1987, Fenner was arrested and charged with transporting a handgun and possessing cocaine after police found a revolver and 25 vials of cocaine in a truck Fenner was driving.

Fenner pleaded guilty to one count of cocaine possession in January 1988 and had the weapons charge dropped as part of a plea bargain.

He was sentenced to three years probation and ordered to pay a $1,000 fine by Prince George's County Circuit Court Judge Jacob Levin.

After Fenner was placed on probation, University of North Carolina officials announced he would not be allowed back in school.

"Any individual under a probationary status for drug involvement will not represent the university on its athletic teams," UNC Athletic Director John Swofford said at the time

Carter Fined $15,000 For Signing Early

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — A judge punished Cris Carter of the Philadelphia Eagles for signing a representation contract while still at Ohio State, but said the wide receiver was badgered by two agents who acted like "pimps."

Carter must pay a $15,000 fine and perform 600 hours of community service work for dealing with sports agents before his college eligibility expired.

U.S. District Judge Brian Duff said Carter had committed serious crimes by lying to federal agents about the money he accepted from sports agents while still playing for the Buckeyes. He saved the venom, though, for the agents.

"I'm aware that you were 18 or 19 years old when these pimps attempted to seduce you," Duff said Monday.

Carter, who has been with the Eagles for two seasons, pleaded guilty in September to mail fraud and obstruction of justice. He also agreed to cooperate with prosecutors investigating illegal payments from sports agents to college athletes.

He told a grand jury he took $5,000 from agents Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom in May 1986, while he was a junior at Ohio State, but concealed the $5,000 he subsequently accepted from agent David Lueddeke in October of that year.

Two weeks ago, a federal jury in Chicago convicted Walters and Bloom of defrauding two universities by luring college athletes into signing improper representation contracts, and of threatening to harm clients at other schools if they tried to renege.

Both Walters and Bloom said they would appeal their racketeering, conspiracy, racketeering conspiracy and mail fraud convictions.

Sentencing for Walters and Bloom is scheduled the week of May 22.

Lueddeke of Calabasas, Calif., pleaded guilty in November to perjury and obstruction of justice, and is scheduled to be sentenced Friday by U.S. District Judge Ann Williams, her clerk said.

"I understand that I am responsible now," Carter told Duff. "Have mercy upon me. I am in your hands."

He had faced a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison and $500,000 in fines.

Peete's Father Has Some Questions

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREEN BAY, Wis. — Willie Peete thinks Rodney Peete was the best quarterback to come out in the 1989 National Football League draft.

That's a father talking — but also a backfield coach in the National Football League with the Green Bay Packers.

Then why was Rodney Peete, the Heisman Trophy runner-up, the Pac-10 offensive player of the year from Southern Cal, not taken for the first five rounds?

Willie Peete wasn't sure either Monday after his son was finally taken in the sixth round by the Detroit Lions.

"I have some questions. I have some real hard questions that I don't know if anyone can answer," said Willie Peete.

He suggested that for some mysterious reason many NFL teams hesitate to draft a coach's son, maybe because coaches "are the worst people at trying to keep secrets from everyone."

Willie Peete acknowledged that his son might also have been hurt by his potential to play professional baseball — even though the younger Peete passed up baseball this year because he didn't want to give football scouts the wrong impression.

"The closer you get to the draft there are more negatives that come out that hurt people," said Willie Peete. "There are some that came out on Rodney."

Among those, he said, were reports that his son was 6-foot, even though he'd been listed at 6-2 prior to the season. Willie Peete says his son is really 6-1.

Another factor is that Rodney Peete has been labeled a sprint-out passer, even though his father says he's primarily a dropback passer.

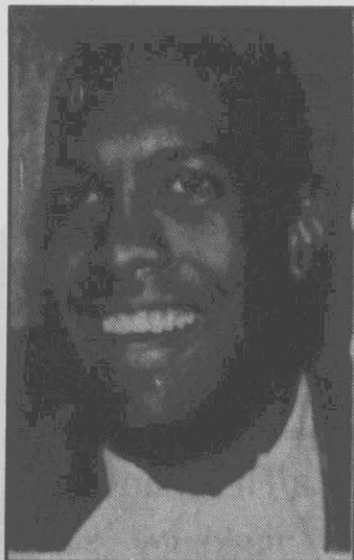

"The thing that sets Rodney apart from all these other guys, all the other so-called black quarterbacks or option type quarterbacks, quarterbacks who everyone puts in a position because they can run, (is that) Rodney is a thrower who can run. That's the difference," Willie Peete said.

Willie Peete was asked if racial bias played a part in teams' hesitancy to draft his son?

"I hope not, not in 1989. If there is, it's too bad," he said. "We're in real bad trouble."

Willie Peete said he personally evaluated every quarterback in the

Celts Needed Last Day To Make Playoffs

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Boston Celtics, an Eastern Conference finalist a year ago, needed the final day of the 1988-89 season just to make the NBA playoffs Sunday.

The Celtics earned the final berth in the East by defeating Charlotte 120-110, a victory keyed by Kevin Gamble, who started the season in the Continental Basketball Association.

In the West, Portland needed overtime to subdue Sacramento 126-120 and capture the final spot in the first round of the playoffs.

The Celtics went into the final day needing a victory, or a loss by Washington, to clinch the final spot. The Bullets lost 115-106 to Philadelphia in a game that ended at about the same time as Boston's.

Gamble scored 23 of his career-high 31 points in the second half of his sixth career NBA start. He is averaging 22.8 in those six starts.

"He's paid his dues for so long this season," Boston coach Jimmy Rodgers said. "Then, to ask him to play a big role in your drive to the playoffs, he's done a tremendous job."

The Celtics, who broke a three-game losing streak, play at Detroit Friday night in the opener of a best-of-five first-round series.

Elsewhere in the Eastern Conference, Philadelphia is at New York and Milwaukee at Atlanta on Thursday night and Chicago is at Cleveland on Friday.

The Western Conference pairings were incomplete until the final game on the schedule — Sacramento at Portland.

Dallas, which would earn the final berth if Portland lost, beat Denver 113-96 to stay alive briefly.

Portland will play the Los Angeles Lakers in the first round starting on Thursday, when Utah plays host to Golden State. On Friday, Denver is at Phoenix and Houston is at Seattle.

Boston was 14-1 in its last 15 home games, but was the only team in the NBA that didn't beat a winning team on the road all season. The Pistons have the league's best record.

The Celtics were plagued all season by injuries to key players, including Larry Bird, who was put on the official playoff roster although he is not yet fully recovered from foot surgery.

"This team has faced a lot of difficulty," Rodgers said. "They never quit."

The Celtics, who last missed the playoffs in 1979, got 28 points from Kevin McHale and 17 from Reggie Lewis. Charlotte, which ended its first NBA season with a 20-62 record, was led by Kelly Tripucka with 28 points, Rex Chapman with 21 and Dell Curry with 20.

Charles Barkley had 31 points, 16 rebounds and 11 assists as Philadelphia ended Washington's playoff hopes. The 76ers led 42-22 early in the second quarter before the Bullets rallied, but never pulled ahead.

"It wasn't in our hands to get into the playoffs. It was in the hands of Boston also," Washington coach Wes Unseld said.

At Denver, Roy Tarpley had 20 points and 20 rebounds as Dallas kept alive its hopes for making the playoffs and snapped the Nuggets' 19-game home winning streak.

The Nuggets played without three injured players — starters Danny Schayes and Michael Adams and reserve Elston Turner — and then lost starting center Wayne Cooper with two technical fouls early in the second quarter after a brief fight with Tarpley.

The Nuggets got no closer than seven points after falling behind by 23.

Elsewhere on the NBA's final day, Michael Jordan became the sixth player to win three consecutive scoring titles. He had 25 points in Chicago's final game against Cleveland and averaged 32.5. Karl Malone of Utah was second at 29.1

Houston's Akeem Olajuwon won the rebound title with a 13.5 average and also became the first center to have 200 steals in a season with 213.

Jacobs Named Co-Player Of The Week

East Carolina senior pitcher Jake Jacobs, who tossed a no-hitter in defeating Atlantic Christian Sunday, joins Tommy Adams of UNC-Wilmington as the co-player of the week in the Colonial Athletic Association, it was announced today.

Jacobs, a right-hander from Mt. Olive, struck out eight and walked none en route to ECU's 6-0 victory over Atlantic Christian Sunday. Jacobs is the first Pirate hurler to throw a no-hitter since April 18, 1987.

Jacobs raised his record to 6-1 on the year Sunday, while lowering his earned run average to 2.91, fourth lowest in the CAA. Jacobs, who owns a 23-5 record in his four-year career, has struck out 61 batters in 58 and two-thirds innings.

Adams batted .455 last week (10-22) and hurled a seven-hit shutout at Davidson. His 10 hits included three home runs and a double as well as 14 RBI on the week. Adams raised his batting average 49 points to .400 to take over the lead in the CAA. He also notched UNCW's first shutout of the year, while improving his record to 8-2.

Ayden Romps Past Chicod, 12-1

AYDEN — Ayden Middle School rolled past Chicod, 12-1, in a junior high baseball game Monday.

The winning pitcher was Thomas Hemby while the leading hitters were Troy Williams, Jay Rogers, Robert Moye and Orlando Peterson had two hits apiece.

The win moved Ayden to 7-0 on the year.

In the girls' game, Ayden took a 8-5 win over Chicod, moving its record to 7-0.

E.B. Aycock defeated Bethel, 6-4, in another junior high game Monday.

Aycock was led by Shea Harper, Jonathan Friley with two hits each. Germaine Reed was the winning pitcher.

Farmville Rolls Past Pamlico County

FARMVILLE — Troy Puryear limited Pamlico to a one hit to lead Farmville Central to a 8-0 win in Eastern Plains Conference baseball action.

Jeff Tyson walked and stole second. George Burnette singled and an error on the play allowed Tyson to score. Mitchell Moore reached on an error that scored Burnette for a 2-0 lead.

In the third, Moore singled in Tyson for a 3-0 lead and the Jaguars added five runs in the sixth to put the game away, keyed by a two-run homer by George Burnette.

Burnette had two hits and three RBI to lead Farmville. Tyson and Eddie Little each had two hits for the Jaguars, 7-5 overall and 4-1 in the EPC. Farmville returns to action tonight at 7:30 p.m. at Ayden-Grifton.

NCAA Saw Player In Coach's Cars

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — NCAA investigators, conducting a preliminary inquiry into violations at Maryland, have been told that members of the 1987-88 team were seen driving cars belonging to coaches, including coach Bob Wade, The (Baltimore) Sun reported today.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association began a preliminary inquiry in February after Wade admitted that members of his staff provided transportation for former Terrapins guard Rudy Archer while Archer was a student last fall at Prince George's Community College.

Wade has denied participating in or authorizing the transportation, a recruiting violation under NCAA rules.

The NCAA prohibits a coach from providing transport to a recruit or prospective recruit, which Archer was considered at the time of admitted violation, or to a scholarship player.

But, four current or former players who were interviewed as part of the ongoing inquiry, said members of last season's team were seen driving the coaches' cars around campus.

"Everyone in College Park knew about it," one player said.

Wade, who has declined comment since the probe began, could not be reached for comment by the Sun. Maryland athletic director Lew Perkins refused to comment.

Other aspects of the investigation include alleged use of frequent flyer cards by Maryland players, during the past few years which is an NCAA violation, according to the newspaper.

Third Time Is A Charm For Abbott

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

This time, Jim Abbott got some runs and his first major-league victory.

Abbott had lost his first two major-league starts, allowing 15 hits and 10 runs in 10 2-3 innings. But California had been shut out — 7-0 by Seattle and 5-0 by Oakland.

Some said he was being rushed and did not belong in the major leagues.

On Monday night, he proved he did. Abbott pitched six strong innings as the Angels beat the Baltimore Orioles 3-2.

"I didn't feel like I was earning my keep. I felt I was coming to the park, getting a free ride," Abbott said.

Abbott, the 1988 Olympic hero for the gold medal-winning American team, allowed the Orioles two runs on four hits. He walked three and struck out one.

Abbott, born without a right hand, is only the 16th player in the draft era to go directly from amateur ball to the majors.

"Sometimes you begin to feel like you don't belong," said Abbott, a star at Michigan. "That's why this win is very special."

Greg Minton replaced Abbott, who had thrown 97 pitches, to start the seventh inning and Bryan Harvey finished for his third save.

"We were finally able to help him out some," Angels manager Doug Rader said. "When we got a run in the first inning, he probably looked up (at the scoreboard) and wondered what that was."

"He looked very good," Orioles manager Frank Robinson said of Abbott. "He had an excellent slider and kept the ball in on the right-handed hitters. I was just hoping we'd get enough runs to beat him, and we didn't."

A solo homer by Lance Parrish and a run-scoring grounder by Johnny Ray rallied the Angels from a 2-1 deficit in the fifth inning against Dave Schmidt, 1-2.

Athletics 5, Blue Jays 4

Tony Phillips' two-run double with one out in the ninth inning rallied Oakland past visiting Toronto and extended the Athletics' winning streak to six games. The winning streak has come without injured sluggers Jose Canseco and Mark McGwire.

The Athletics were trailing 4-3 when Toronto relief ace Tom Henke, 1-2, replaced starter Jimmy Key to open the ninth.

Pinch-hitter Luis Polonia led off with a double and pinch-hitter Stan Javier walked. Henke got Walt Weiss on a fly to center field, but Phillips hit a 1-2 pitch up the right-center field alley to score Polonia and Javier.

Gene Nelson, making his first appearance since coming off the disabled list, pitched the ninth inning for his first victory.

Fred McGriff hit a two-run homer in the third and added an RBI single in the seventh for the Blue Jays.

Brewers 5, Twins 4

Rob Deer hit a two-run homer with two outs in the ninth inning off Jeff Reardon to lift Milwaukee over Minnesota at County Stadium.

The Twins had taken a 4-3 lead in the top of the ninth when Dan Gladden homered and Kent Hrbek hit a sacrifice fly off reliever Dan Plesac, 1-0.

With one out in the bottom of the ninth, Gary Sheffield singled and moved to second on Robin Yount's grounder to short. Deer, who had struck out three times in four previous at-bats, fouled off four pitches before hitting his fifth home run of the season.

Minnesota's Frank Viola is winless in five starts.

Yankees 6, Indians 3
Rickey Henderson drove in two runs with a bases-loaded single during a four-run fourth inning as visiting New York beat Cleveland.

Dave LaPoint, 2-1, got the victory, the Yankees' seventh in 10 games since they ended a seven-game losing streak. They split the four-game series in Cleveland after losing three straight to the Indians in New York for the first weekend of the season.

LaPoint allowed three runs on five hits in six-plus innings. Lee Gueterman pitched 2 1-3 innings and Dave Righetti got the last two outs for his second save.

Bud Black, 1-3, took the loss, the Indians' eighth in 10 games.

Tigers 1, Mariners 0

Doyle Alexander pitched a seven-hitter for his 18th career shutout and Torey Lovullo hit a sacrifice fly as Detroit edged Seattle at Tiger Stadium.

Alexander, 3-0, who is unbeaten and 6-0 in his last nine starts dating back to last season, walked five and struck out none.

"I don't feel like I was in control," Alexander said. "I feel like I struggled for nine innings. But I was always aware of making the big pitch."

Mark Langston, 2-3, gave up five hits, walked three and struck out four in seven innings.

No Rooms Left For Ticketholders

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BARCELONA, Spain — Last year, Seoul hosted 9,417 athletes for the summer Olympics. When the next Games are held here in 1992, that number will be topped by guests of corporate sponsors, and that is part of the reason why average ticketholders will face long commutes to see events.

As the International Olympic Committee's executive board opened four days of meetings Monday, Barcelona organizers said that — 3½ years before the opening ceremonies — all of the rooms in the city's 3-, 4- and 5-star hotels have been earmarked for official visitors.

The total includes some 2,000 reporters, 3,250 Olympic officials and 9,750 sponsors and their entourages, the Barcelona Olympic Organizing Committee, or COOB, said. Corporate sponsors are expected to pump some $150 million into the Olympic movement over the next four years.

The athletes and team officials, expected to number 15,000, will be housed in a spectacular high-rise complex on the Barcelona waterfront. An additional 8,000 journalists will live in two apartment-like press villages close to venues.

For Joe and Mary Fan, however, it will be a commute of up to one hour from accommodations ranging from campsites to private apartments, according to the organizers.

"Barcelona will be exclusively for the Olympic family, and other visitors will have to stay outside of the city, in the surrounding countryside," said Pedro Palasios, COOB press officer.

COOB's chairman, Barcelona Mayor Pasqual Maragall, and its chief operating officer, Miquel Abad, spent more than three hours before the IOC board and accommodations were covered in depth.

"The major problem is accommodation," IOC spokeswoman Michele Verdier said. "But everyone — including COOB — knows this, and it is not impossible to deal with. There was no discussion as such, but we had a lengthy presentation. COOB did not make any promises. They just said, 'This is what we can control.'"

The organizers recently signed agreements with the city's hotels reserving 80 percent of their rooms, some 15,000 beds, for the Games. All of those will be taken by official visitors and, with space at a premium, it's expected that the remaining 20 percent will go quickly, the organizers said.

Plans call for at least five and as many as 13 new hotels to be built, adding between 3,000-10,000 rooms. Organizers said, however, that they were using the lower figure until building proposals were firmed up.

Palasios said the coastal resorts east and west of Barcelona had room for 750,000 visitors during the Games. In Seoul, the Olympics attracted an estimated 250,000 out-of-towners.

"This is all within 100 kilometers, about an hour's drive," he said.

Seoul conducted a massive program to increase its hotel, apartment and other housing stock for the Games. Maragall emphasized the Barcelona was a different case.

"We are not a centralized country," he said. "We are not Korea or the Soviet Union or the United States. But we try to avoid tensions."

Other problems discussed in the meeting included concern about expanding and modernizing the Barcelona airport and constructing more expressways to move traffic, according to Maragall and Abad. With events spread throughout the region, the '92 Games will be more on the lines of the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles than Seoul, where most events were held in two neighboring complexes of stadiums and arenas.

Maragall also said organizers planned to have the men's marathon finish in the main stadium on Montjuic just before the closing ceremonies, even though that would mean runners facing the final part of the race up the mountain's steep slopes.

"We are looking for an easier access — a smoother, softer, less-steep access, to the stadium," the mayor said.

Peete's Consolation; A Chance To Start

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Rodney Peete has one consolation for being ignored until the sixth round of the NFL draft. He's probably the first quarterback taken that late who's been told by his coach that he has a chance to become an immediate starter.

The Southern California quarterback and Heisman Trophy runner-up, rated by many coaches and scouts behind only Troy Aikman at his position in the draft, didn't go until Detroit chose him as the second pick of the sixth round, which was also the second pick made Monday, the draft's second day.

But even as the pick was made, Peete was getting a call from Wayne Fontes, the coach of the Lions, telling him he was starting even with the team because Detroit is installing a run-and-shoot offense. In fact, that might give the mobile Peete an edge over Detroit's three current quarterbacks — Chuck Long, Eric Hipple and Rusty Hilger.

"It's the perfect situation for me," said Peete, who said he went from "devastated" on the first day of the draft to "disappointed" at being the ninth quarterback taken.

"I talked to Coach Fontes and he said we're all starting from scratch."

But despite Peete's elation, there was a touch of bitterness tinted with racial overtones to his late selection. He is black, as is quarterback Terrence Jones of Tulane, who was chosen by San Diego with the final pick of the seventh round.

Peete's agent, Leonard Armato, said 15 teams had told him he would be gone by the second round. And his father Willie, an assistant coach with Green Bay, said, "I have some questions, I have some real hard questions that I don't know if anyone can answer."

Asked if there might be racial reasons for the late pick, Willie Peete replied:

"I hope not. Not in 1989. If there is, it's too bad. We're in really bad trouble."

The rest of the second-day picks were the usual mixture of kickers and projects of various kinds — like running backs from Harvard (Tony Hinz) and Slippery Rock (Greg Paterra). Paterra went to Atlanta on the 11th round; Hinz to New England eight picks later.

Indianapolis used its 12th-round selection on Nebraska quarterback Steve Taylor, who may play in Canada, and the Pittsburgh Steelers took a wrestling champion, defensive end Carlton Haselrig of Pittsburgh, in the same round.

The Chicago Bears, hoping bloodlines count, went on the 10th round for running back Byron Sanders of Northwestern, the older brother of Barry Sanders, the Heisman Trophy winner from Oklahoma State who was the third pick of the draft by Detroit.

"I think it was a good draft," said Bears coach Mike Ditka Monday as he was leaving Halas Hall at the Bears' Lake Forest training complex.

"We filled our needs. I'll tell you something, some of those offensive linemen we got are tough. Only time will tell, but wait and see."

Ditka also said he had high expectations for linebacker John Roper of Texas A&M, the third player the Bears selected in the draft and their first pick in the second round.

"Roper will be as good a find as Otis Wilson," said Ditka as he ran off.

Wilson missed the entire 1988 season because of a knee injury and was left unprotected. He eventually signed with the Los Angeles Raiders.

The Seattle Seahawks, apparently believing that to forgive is divine, drafted Derrick Fenner of North Carolina, who led the Atlantic Coast Conference in rushing in 1986, then was charged in 1987 with a drug-related murder in Maryland. The murder charges were dropped and Fenner eventually pleaded guilty to one count of cocaine possession in a plea bargaining agreement.

And Detroit, hoping it had a man to fit the run-and-shoot, used its 10th-round pick on wide receiver Jason Phillips of Houston, who led the nation with 108 catches in a similar offense.

The last player, who was taken by Minnesota when the draft ended at 5:17 p.m. EDT after 16 hours, 56 minutes of selecting over two days, was wide receiver Everett Ross of Ohio State who was academically ineligible last year.

He will be the guest of honor at the annual "Irrelevant Week" festivities at Newport Beach, Calif. honoring the last choice in the draft.

There was also a bit of nepotism of sorts.

Jimmy Johnson, the new coach of the Dallas Cowboys, used his 10th- and 11th-round picks on two linebackers who played for him at the University of Miami. Johnson chose Rod Carter and then Randy Shannon for the small Hurricane reunion at Cowboys training camp.

Overall, as with any draft, it was tough to assess what teams did well.

But based on pre-draft scouting reports, Miami and Chicago seemed to do well — the Dolphins by getting running back Sammie Smith and safety Louis Oliver on the first round; the Bears with the first-round picks of defensive end Trace Armstrong and cornerback Cornell Woolford and the second-round choice of linebacker John Roper. All could be immediate starters.

If Peete turns out to be of first-round value rather than sixth, Detroit could also fare well once it gets used to the run-and-shoot.

The Lions, a slow, plodding team for years, improved dramatically on defense last year and added speed this year in Sanders and second-round pick John Ford, a wide receiver from Virginia.

Dallas, 3-13 last season, may also have improved itself considerably, although Aikman, the top pick overall, will probably need time to adjust to the NFL. The Cowboys' second-round pick, Syracuse fullback Daryl Johnston, could be one of the best in the draft — a strong, straight-ahead runner and a good blocker and receiver. Johnston could be the perfect complement to Herschel Walker.

Rose and Conley Remain Unbeaten

WILSON — Rose, led by Derrick Daniels' low round of 73, moved to 27-0 overall with a Big East Conference golf match victory Monday.

Brooks Honeycutt shot a 74 for the Rampants, while Lee Watson had a 75 and Rob Thomas had an 80.

Rose returns to action Thursday at Walnut Creek in Goldsboro against Eastern Wayne and D.H. Conley.

Washington was led by Wesley Jones' 83. Matt Davis added a 85, while Brad Horton shot 94 and Cam Anderson 97.

Conley will be back in action Thursday in Goldsboro against Eastern Wayne and J.H. Rose.

MINNESOTA BEACH — Farmville Central's Lance Parker carded a 76, earning medalist honors to lead his team to victory in a three-team golf match Monday over Ayden-Grifton and Pamlico County.

Farmville totaled 315, with Dave Baker shooting 78, Pat Hobbs 80 and Allen Lewis 81.

Ayden-Grifton, with 364, was led by Chad Tulloch's 93, Will Barnes' 85, Shaler Cheung's 89 and Mickey Adams' 97.

Pamlico County totaled 417. Farmville moves to 7-1 in the EPC and 12-4 overall. The Jaguars' next match is at Ayden Tuesday.

AYDEN — D.H. Conley's golf team improved to 14-0 for the year by sweeping a tri-match Monday at Ayden Country Club.

The Vikings posted a team score of 304 to take the win. Hertford County finished second at 337, followed by Washington at 359.

Hertford's Joel White took medalist honors with a round of 72.

Ben Edwards and Tran Dean led Conley with 75's, while Gentry Pinner fired a 76 and Jason a 78.

of holing onto the football." Freeman made several fine runs in the spring game but fumbled it twice.

John Allen and Luke Fisher are young players who were seeking a position and finally settled in at tight end, the coach said, and this is a positive for the tight end slot.

"Collectively (the wide receivers) are a group that can be productive," Lewis said. "Wilson is a big time player who can make the big plays." Al Whiting and BoJack Davenport are also players who can make things happen while Hunter Gallimore and Charlie Tyson also add potential to the position, Lewis said.

"Right now we need to work on the little things, the length of the route, the timing of the route, when to release at the line of scrimmage," Lewis said.

With the I-formation, the backfield had a lot of adjusting to do, but the coach said that Willie Lewis and Denell Harper "distinguished themselves above all the others." He added that Eric Booker and Ernest Pendleton both had their best outings in the spring game, but that Lewis and Harper did it day-in-and-day-out.

"We don't have a great tailback, but I don't think we have to find one. We have to find two or maybe three or even four. We will rotate them and do what they do best to keep fresh legs on the field."

Lewis said that a couple of incoming freshman could — perhaps — and he emphasized that, work their way into the picture in the fall.

Much the same is true of the fullback position. In the run-and-shoot, the fullback was the lone setback, who primarily carried the ball. In the I, the fullback is a blocker first and a ball carrier and receiver second.

"Michael Rhett has made steady progress. David Daniels spent all but five days with the baseball team, so his progress was limited. But he did play in the scrimmages Wednesday and Saturday and did some positive things."

Travis Hunter will go into the fall as the number one quarterback. "The reason for this is that for 19 days (Hunter did not play in the Purple-Gold game) he was our number one quarterback. He came out of each day's practice and each scrimmage as our number one," Lewis said, adding that it was a clear-cut differential.

Once fall workouts begin, however, it will be up to Hunter to hold on. "There comes a time in the fall when you have to say this is our starting unit for our first game. Then, barring an injury or some guy coming on strong or someone checking out, they'll work together as a unit."

However, Lewis said that there will be a plan on action to rest the number of quarterback — as it will be with all positions — so that he will be fresh in the final period. "Too, if he's struggling, or if we want to change the tempo, or to let him gather his composure, we'll go with the number two or three quarterback."

Turning to the defense, Lewis said that the line could use some more size and some depth, but that generally, he was pleased with their play. "Joe Holmes got the idea (of what we wanted) right away. He played hard every play, every day. (Nose guard) Greg Gardill is the same kind of player. They're undersized and that's a concern."

Mike Applewhite, the other tackle, has the talent, Lewis said, but must play up to his potential.

At the ends, Lewis feels the potential is there for solid play. "But they must play up to the level they are capable of," Lewis said. James Singletary and Anthony Thompson, who was switched from an inside linebacker position during the spring, look to be the chief players here.

At the inside linebacker spots, Robert Jones appears to be the leader, but he had a nagging ankle injury throughout the spring. Ken Burnette, Compton McCurry and Adrian Barnhill all "have to work extremely hard," Lewis added.

The coach said he was pleased with the progress made in the secondary.

"Like the receivers, there's a lot of timing involved that must be refined."

He said Ricky Torain (cornerback), Chris Hall (cornerback) and Junior Robinson (free safety) all had good springs.

"The strong safety position is up in the air because of inconsistent play," Lewis said. Brian McPhatter could do an outstanding job "if he goes all out," Lewis said. Derrick Fields is another possibility.

The kicking game looks to be in good shape from the punting standpoint with John Jett returning.

But the field goal and placement kicking is very inconsistent, causing a lot of concern by Lewis.

draft as objectively as he could through game films.

He concluded that his son was the best of all the quarterbacks.

"That includes (Troy) Aikman," he said referring to the No. 1 pick in the draft. "The only thing I see Aikman has over Rodney is that they list him at 6-3."

But the Packers were one of the many teams to bypass Rodney Peete. Coach Lindy Infante said he was shocked when Rodney Peete was still available after five rounds.

Green Bay did take a quarterback in the third round, Duke's Anthony Dilweg, whom they rated higher. And the Packers are hoping to get a quarterback in this summer's supplemental draft, either Miami's Steve Walsh or Timm Rosenbach of Washington State.

"Rodney is better than either one of them," Willie Peete said.

Why, then, didn't the Packers go after their own coach's son and would it have worked?

"It wasn't a question if he would fit with our scheme. Lindy probably felt the other guys would fit the scheme better," said Willie Peete.

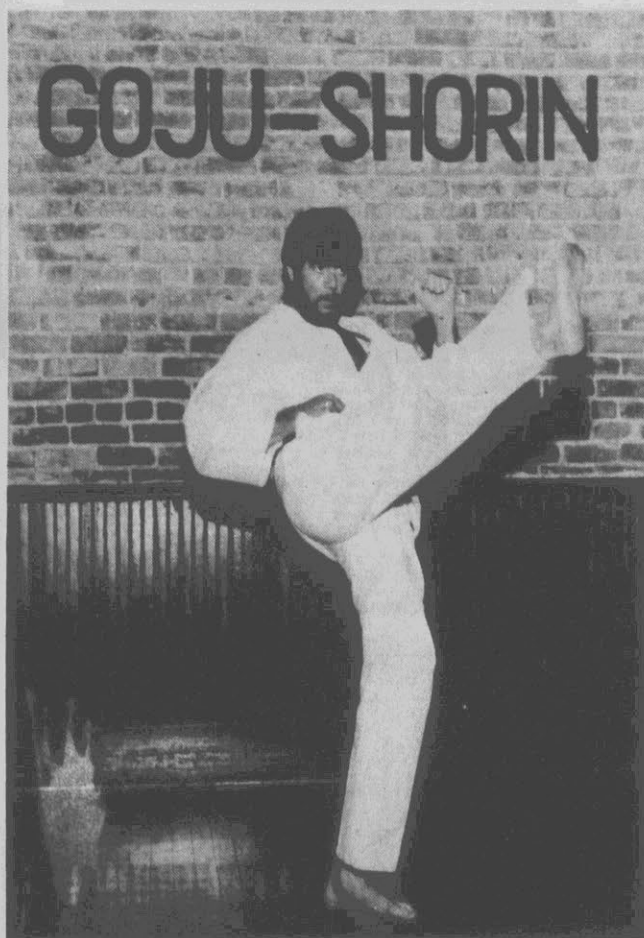

And he admitted having his son on the team might have been awkward.

"I said all along it would be a tough situation for Rodney to play here," said Willie Peete.

"It would not be a problem between Rodney and myself. The biggest problem would have been with the coaching staff being able to truly give their true evaluation when we sit down and talk about players."

"It would be hard for the other players to really accept Rodney because they would probably feel, 'If we say anything, it will probably go back to his dad.'"

Martinez Keys Padres To Win

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — Carmelo Martinez skipped batting practice, and as it turned out, he didn't need it.

The San Diego Padres' outfielder sat out batting practice before Monday night's game and then broke out of a slump with three hits, including a homer, as the Padres beat the Atlanta Braves 5-2.

"I decided to take no batting practice to see what happens," said Martinez, who entered the game with only one hit in his last 28 at-bats.

"I was more relaxed. My concentration was better. I told myself it would never get any worse. I guess I left all my hits in spring training. I was trying to take all those things out of my mind," Martinez said.

Martinez said his absence from the batting cage was temporary. "Tomorrow, I will take batting practice. He (Manager Jack McKeon) wouldn't like it if I did it again. I didn't tell him today that I was going to do it because I was afraid he wouldn't have liked it."

After Martinez and Luis Salazar led off the second with singles off Derek Lilliquist, 1-1, Martinez moved to third on a fly ball but was caught in a rundown and tagged out as pitcher Walt Terrell bounced to first.

Salazar scored when first baseman Gerald Perry dropped Roberto Alomar's pop fly. Terrell, who went to third on the error, then scored on Randy Ready's single to make it 2-0.

San Diego added a run in the third on consecutive singles by Martinez, Salazar and Garry Templeton.

Phillies 8, Braves 4

Tommy Herr went 3-for-5 and scored three runs and Ricky Jordan drove in two runs as Philadelphia beat Houston at the Astrodome.

With the score tied 1-1, the Phillies scored three runs in the third inning. Juan Samuel led off with a walk and moved to third on Herr's single and scored when reliever Bob Forsch, 1-1, balked. Mike Schmidt singled in Herr, and after a single by Ricky Jordan, Darren Daulton singled in another run.

Ex-IU Star Charged With Battery

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Beleaguered former Indiana University basketball player Jay Edwards was charged Monday with two preliminary misdemeanor battery charges for an alleged attack on a woman at a Bloomington apartment.

Beth Ann Irish, 20, of Indianapolis, told Bloomington police Edwards slapped her twice and punched her at a party Saturday night. A doctor's report said Irish suffered a bruised forehead.

Edwards admitted slapping Irish once, but said she had rushed him.

"It's going to hurt me, more bad publicity," Edwards said. "I'm going to get out of Indiana, period."

Edwards was named in an arrest warrant issued Monday by Monroe Superior Court Judge Douglas Bridges. Bond was set at $500.

Edwards, contacted in Marion at the home of his mother, said he first met Irish on Saturday at the apartment of Indiana teammate Lyndon Jones.

"I don't know if she was drunk or something, but she rushed me. I just slapped her once and that was it. They pulled her off of me, and that was it. The next thing you know, I come home and it's all over TV," he said.

"I had told him what they had threatened to do to him in Bloomington," Mrs. Edwards said. "I think we'll get it all cleared up."

In a statement to police, Irish said she tried to make small talk with Edwards about 11:15 p.m. Saturday by asking if she had seen him in a local restaurant. Edwards replied, "Yeah baby, I was with you," according to Irish.

Rose Takes Track Wins; Vikes Fall In Coastal Meet

Rose's boys' and girls swept a pair of track wins from Wilson Beddingfield Monday while D.H. Conley's teams came up short in a Coastal Conference meet.

In the boys' meet, Mike Moore, Malcom Wilson and Johnny Ebron were all double-winners Monday, leading Rose to a 127-11 win over Wilson Beddingfield.

Moore won the shot and the discus. Wilson won the triple jump and the 400 meters while Ebron won the 100 and the 200.

Rose moves to 8-2 overall and returns to action against Northeastern and Rocky Mount at home Wednesday.

Ericka Hill and Jennifer Ramsdell were both double winners as they led Rose to a 124-3 win over Wilson Beddingfield in a Big East girls' track meet.

Hill came in first in the 100 and the 200 meters while Ramsdell was first in the 1,600 and 3,200 meter events.

At Morehead City, West Carteret took honors at home Monday in a Coastal 3-A Conference girls track meet.

West Carteret totaled a team score of 78 to defeat Washington's score of 61 and D.H. Conley's mark of 17.

The Valkyries' track squad is now 3-6 for the year and will be back in action Wednesday at East Carteret.

In the boys' meet, Washington totaled 129 points, West Craven 60, West Carteret 59 while Conley totaled 34.

Conley's lone winner was Adrian McLawhorn took first in the 100 meters and was part of the winning 1,600 meter relay team for Conley.

Conley falls to 1-2 and returns to action Thursday at East Carteret.

Rosemary Edwards said she planned to hire an attorney and that she and her son would return to Bloomington to "clear this up."

"It's all a frame-up," Mrs. Edwards said. "They were doing nothing in Lyndon's apartment. There was five boys there. They're all witnesses."

Edwards said Jones would corroborate his story. There was no answer at Jones' apartment Monday afternoon.

Monroe County Prosecutor Robert T. Miller said Edwards was expected to surrender Monday afternoon.

Edwards' friends separated the two and Irish told Edwards he shouldn't have quit school and that he wouldn't be wanted in the NBA, she told police.

Edwards reached over his friends and punched Irish in the forehead, she said.

Dr. Owen Slaughter, who treated Irish at the Bloomington Hospital emergency room, stated in a report that she had a bruise on her forehead and tenderness of facial bones.

Coach Bob Knight suspended Edwards from the team early in his freshman season for academic problems. After clearing up those problems, Edwards went on to become Big Ten Freshman of the Year.

Last July, Knight announced he was withdrawing Edwards' athletic scholarship for academic and disciplinary reasons. Edwards agreed to pay his own way to remain at Indiana.

He tested positive in a university-administered drug test last September and underwent a 10-day rehabilitation program in Indianapolis.

Edwards recovered by averaging 20 points for Indiana last season and helped lead the Hoosiers to the Big Ten championship.

We Make Loans For Smiles, Hugs And Cheers.

At NCNB, we realize when you borrow money, you're making as much an emotional investment as a financial one.

So when we loan you money for braces, we see it as helping to create a priceless smile. We understand that the long-term reward of a college education can't be measured in dollars and cents. And that the investment you make in a marriage will continue long after the wedding bills have been paid. You see, it's all in the way you choose to look at things.

NCNB National Bank of North Carolina Equal Housing Lender. Member FDIC. ©1989 NCNB Corporation.

And at NCNB, we'll really make an extra effort to see things your way. We'll work to come up with a monthly payment schedule that suits your terms, not ours. And to give you an interest rate that is competitively low.

So whatever your borrowing needs may be, just stop by the NCNB office nearest you and talk them over with one of our loan specialists. Because at NCNB, we'd really like to loan you the money for things you can't put a price on.

"Oh boy! I like hot-boiled eggs!"

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY April 16

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): You can be quick to fight, and to forget, without holding a grudge. Remember, some people hold grudges habitually.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Express your love of music and art. Your own talents are in a good cycle. A loving and interesting situation is approaching.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): A lunch companion has interesting ideas. You may lack your usual flexibility today. Use your versatile skills.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): You may be clinging to a relationship that needs stimulation and modification. You may have over-committed yourself.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): The social atmosphere is revealing. It is a better time to plan, than to do. Anger and arrogance are a devastating combination.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): A misunderstanding results in confusion. A change in schedule will improve matters. Disorganization is frustrating and causes delays.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Start important projects. Over-confidence and complacency can cause opportunities to pass by unnoticed.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Too many compliments can give you a swelled head, even though you have earned the praise. Social matters are stimulating.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): You may suffer from a general lack of interest. Coasting along with the tides of fate may serve your purpose best.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Go for it, do it, and don't waste any time getting started. Your ideas bear fruit with your present take-charge attitude.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): You pride yourself on fairness and humanitarian understanding. Avoid someone who has disappointed you in the past.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Set the record straight with the person who asks for help but rejects good advice. Jealousy can destroy a good friendship.

There's a saying in the Old Country: "If you drink the water you die, and if you don't drink the water you die." Here's a hand that bears out the wisdom of that adage.

North had his bidding boots on. First, he cue-bid in support of spades on a hand that might not even be worth its full 16 count, then he raised South's invitational bid to slam. Fortunately, South had the skill to take advantage of a lucky distribution.

Declarer won the opening lead in hand and drew two more rounds of trumps as East discarded two diamonds. Next came a low club, and West had to swallow a poisoned pill. If he rose with the ace of clubs, declarer would have three high cards in dummy on which to discard his losing hearts—two clubs and a diamond. So West followed low, but that turned out to be no better.

Dummy's queen of clubs won.

and declarer cashed out the diamonds, sluffing the jack of clubs from hand. Next, he ran the queen of hearts to West's king, and that defender was faced with a pill even more noxious.

If West returned a club, he would set up the queen of clubs as a trick with a heart ruff as the entry. If, instead, he selected a heart, he would be leading into declarer's A 10 tenace.

His actual choice of a diamond was equally futile. Declarer ruffed in dummy and discarded a heart from hand. A successful finesse of the ten of hearts produced the 12th trick for a most fortuitous result.

(P.S. We know South should have used Stayman.)

The Who Schedules N. American Tour

By Mary Campbell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The Who just can't stop talking about their generation.

The legendary British rock group plans to celebrate their founding 25 years ago with their first tour in more than six years.

"We felt like we weren't trying to resurrect the band. This is a celebration of the music we created, after all these years," lead singer Roger Daltrey said Monday.

Daltrey joined composer-guitarist Peter Townshend and bassist John Entwistle in announcing the planned tour of 25 North American cities this summer. It will be their first since a "Farewell Tour" of 1982-83.

The band rode to fame a generation ago with the hit "My Generation," a teen-protest song that included the line, "Hope I die before I get old."

They're now in their 40s, with Townshend acknowledging he has impaired hearing. And they haven't played together since a brief, rusty appearance at Live Aid in 1985.

Does the band's chemistry still exist?

"We don't know whether it's still there or what it is or where it comes from. We're going to get in the rehearsal studio and see what happens," Townshend said.

Drummer Simon Phillips will join the group, and there also will be a keyboardist, horn player, percussion section and backup singers. The original Who drummer, Keith Moon, died in 1978.

The tour will include two full-length performances of the rock opera "Tommy," with guest stars, in New York City and Los Angeles. The latter concert will be videotaped. Proceeds from those concerts and the video will benefit the Nordoff-Robbins Music Therapy Foundation for autistic children.

The band last performed "Tommy," by Townshend, in its entirety 17 years ago in Chicago.

The Who will play concerts with an intermission for the first time. "I don't know if that says anything about age," said Townshend, 43. The band will play at least three hours, performing music from the group's albums as well as the artists' solo efforts.

Daltrey said they had decided against making an album to be released while they're touring.

"One of the reasons we stopped is we were on that album-tour-album-tour rat race of the rock 'n' roll industry. To come back and do all that again we thought was a mistake," he said.

Of his hearing problem, Townshend said: "It's a ringing in the ears at the kind of frequencies at which I play the guitar. ... If I expose myself to loud electric guitar, particularly my own, my hearing suffers."

Networks Prepare Pilots In Search Of New Series

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Producer-creator Steven Bochco's first series for ABC under his new multiseries contract is a medical show. But, wait, the Bochco twist is in there.

The half-hour comedy's called "Doogie Howser, M.D.," and centers on the life of a young intern. Did we say young? Doogie's voice probably hasn't changed yet. He's 15 years old.

Bochco, co-creator of "Hill Street Blues" and "Hooperman," generally puts an unusual spin on his stories that makes them different.

Doogie's graduated from medical school. He doesn't have to worry about house calls, since he hasn't learned to drive yet. Intellectually, he's a genius. Emotionally, he's still a kid.

"Doogie Howser, M.D." has a series commitment, but dozens of other comedies and dramas are being considered by the three networks for the fall season. The new schedules will be announced in mid-May.

The networks are lining up plenty of stars for the fall. Besides that, NBC has Alan Alda committed to a one-hour drama for mid-season next year.

NBC's lineup of series possibilities includes: Tim Matheson as an American bachelor who falls in love with a beautiful Russian woman (Irena Ferris) in "Nikki & Alexander"; Harvey Korman and Cloris Leachman as hotel keepers in "The Nutt House"; Ann Jillian as a widowed mother seeking a new life in California in "The Ann Jillian Show"; Robert Mitchum as a homeless man who becomes grandfather to four foster kids in "One Man's Family."

CBS's star schedule: Gregory Harrison as a fashion photographer who gets custody of his two sons in "The Gregory Harrison Show"; Dweezil and Moon Zappa as brother and sister in an unusual family in "Norman Life"; James Farentino and Lindsay Crouse in a drama about a newspaper columnist and his politico wife in "American Nuclear"; Lindsay Wagner as the manager of a zoo in "A Peaceable Kingdom"; Tim Reid and Daphne Reid as a stylish Washington couple who keep getting mixed up in solving crimes in "Snoops"; Lee Majors as a man of the road who teams up with a columnist (Ellen Greene) in "Travellin'."

ABC's stars include: Jackie Mason as a man forced into early retirement who works with inner city youths in an untitled series commitment; Howie Mandel as a man who keeps flashing back to different periods in his life in "Past Imperfect."

As in previous years, the three networks are looking at more comedy pilots than dramatic shows.

Show business themes figure in a number of pilots. For instance: Jack Warden and Mason Adams star as feuding radio partners who team up again in NBC's "Knight and Daye." Robert Hays works for a public radio station in NBC's "FM." Jon Cryer is a kid in the mail room who suddenly becomes a super talent agent in CBS' "The Famous Teddy Z." Ricki Lake is an aspiring actress in CBS' "Starting Now." A group of friends in Kansas are making a horror film in CBS' "Curse of the Corn People." ABC's "Morning Glory" is about a morning TV show. ABC's "Elvis: Good Rockin' Tonight" is about the King himself.

Lucille Ball's Worry Now Is About Hairdo

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Comedian Lucille Ball's first words to her daughter after last week's emergency heart surgery was about her hairdresser's appointment, actress Lucie Arnaz says.

"I went to mom's bedside where she was all tied to tubes and things and I told her, 'Hello mom, I love you,'" Miss Arnaz told 150 people Monday at the Beverly Hills Hotel for the Eastman Kodak Second Century Award ceremony.

"She mumbled something under the oxygen mask, but I said I couldn't hear her. Finally I asked the nurse if I could lift the mask a little to hear what she was saying. So I did, and mom said, 'Wouldn't you know — this is the day I was going to get my hair done.'"

Miss Ball was honored for her work in helping young people in the entertainment field. Miss Arnaz accepted the award on her mother's behalf.

The 77-year-old actress was in serious condition and improving daily, said Ron Wise of Cedars-Sinai Medical Center.

"The outlook is very encouraging," he said. "Her doctors have her in the chair for longer periods each day. Her spirits are good and she's cracking jokes."

She was moved Monday from the cardiac surgical intensive care unit to a step-down unit, "technically another intensive care unit," said Wise. "She should be in her own room toward the end of the week."

At the luncheon, Miss Arnaz said she was glad the award wasn't postponed after her mother's heart attack "because it means very, very much to her at this time."

Presenting the award, comedian Carol Burnett told of being visited by Miss Ball on the second night of her New York show, "Once Upon a Mattress."

"She came backstage to visit us all and she spent 30 to 35 minutes in my dressing room answering my questions," Miss Burnett said.
