

Smaller Airports Thriving Under Airline Hubs

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Since the airlines were deregulated in 1978, regional airports in North Carolina have posted whopping increases in airline passengers, thanks in part to the development of the nation's hub-and-spoke system.

"If you told me 10 years ago that Pitt-Greenville would have 100,000 passengers in a year, you could have knocked me over with a feather," said Bruce E. Matthews, state manager of aviation development.

"The nation as a whole is getting into flying, and we're seeing that trickle down to the smaller communities," Matthews said.

When the federal government stopped regulating air fares and routes, some worried that smaller airports would lose their airline service and its economic benefits.

They did suffer — but not for long. Pitt-Greenville Airport's number of airline passengers has climbed by almost 800 percent, and Jacksonville's Albert J. Ellis Airport has seen a 117 percent rise.

Thanks in part to the development of the nation's hub-and-spoke system, in which airlines fly passengers from smaller "feeder airports" to central airports that offer scores of destinations, North Carolina's smaller airports have been part of a 1980s boom in air travel.

And Paris and London are just one stop away, thanks to commuter connections to Raleigh-Durham and Charlotte Douglas international airports.

For passengers headed from rural areas to major cities, service is faster and more direct. For airlines, the smaller airports bring passengers to major hubs.

For communities, adequate air service is a key factor in attracting industry and boosting economic growth, state aviation and local airport officials say.

At the state's 13 airports with scheduled airline service, nearly 13 million passengers boarded planes in 1988. That's an average increase of 26.2 percent in each of the previous 10 years.

More than 2 million caught their flights at airports besides Charlotte and RDU, hubs for Piedmont and American airlines.

Airports at Jacksonville, Rocky Mount-Wilson, Greenville, New Bern and Kinston are a far cry from the old barnstorming days. Each features up-to-date terminal facilities with X-ray baggage screening machines, scheduled airline departures throughout the day and busting business by private and corporate planes.

Jacksonville and Kinston have some jetliner service by Piedmont, and commuter carriers serve the rest. Other airports with scheduled service around the state are located in Wilmington, Fayetteville, Hickory, Asheville, Greensboro-High Point and Winston-Salem.

Piedmont spokesman David Shipley said the small feeder airports were "extremely important" to the airline.

"The traffic generated by these small cities and flown in on commuters or jets is what makes up the payloads on the jets from the hubs to other cities," he said.

As an example, Shipley said there were nine commuter airlines affiliated with USAir Group, which this summer will complete its merger with Piedmont. Last year, 6 million passengers boarded those commuter airlines and 60 percent of them transferred to connecting USAir or Piedmont jetliner flights.

American spokesman Al Becker said American Eagle commuters carried 4 million passengers nationwide last year. "It's a critical feed and allows us to reach into smaller communities and plug those communities into the American Airlines system," he said.

With total employees ranging from 50 to more than 150, the airports constitute small industries in themselves. Local leaders say the benefits from their airports also extend to the economic well-being of their communities.

"Airline service is what the people see," said J. Reese Bailey, chairman of the Rocky Mount-Wilson Airport Authority. "They don't realize without the airport, Firestone wouldn't be in Wilson, Consolidated Diesel and Abbott Labs wouldn't be in Rocky Mount and Sara Lee wouldn't be building a plant in Tarboro."

Most of Rocky Mount-Wilson's air traffic is business-related. There were 70,000 landings and takeoffs a year at the airport last year, but only 5,100 were by airliners, Bailey said.

"The real impact is industrial," he said.

Becker said company officials were considering upgrading the Eagle fleet with newer and larger planes.

"Over the next several weeks, American Airlines will be in position to announce we will be making a substantial investment in a significant number of aircraft for Eagle," he said.

IN THE STATE

Jury Selection

SHELBY, N.C. (AP) — Visitors passed through metal detectors and an undercover agent took photographs of visitors as jury selection began in the trial of a former White Patriot Party member charged with slaying three men and wounding two others at an adult bookstore.

But the extra security appeared unwarranted Monday as few spectators attended the opening session. There was no evidence of any public protest on behalf of defendant Douglas Sheets, a former member of the White Patriots Party.

Sheets, 40, a native of Oklahoma, was indicted by a Cleveland County grand jury along with Robert Eugene Jackson for the Jan. 17, 1987, attack at the Shelby III bookstore. Jackson's trial is scheduled to begin June 5.

Sheets is charged with 16 criminal counts — six counts of murder, two of felonious assault, five kidnappings, one robbery with a dangerous weapon, one arson and one conspiracy.

Terms Approved

RALEIGH (AP) — Less than a decade after North Carolinians rejected a proposal to extend legislators' terms from two to four years, the state Senate has asked voters to reconsider.

The Senate gave final approval

Monday 33-14 to a proposed constitutional amendment to lengthen the terms of senators and House members and have legislative elections in even-numbered, non-presidential election years. If approved by the House, the measure would be submitted to a referendum this fall or next spring.

The House is considering a package of constitutional changes that would include the four-year term.

Conservation

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina should scale back projected highway construction in favor of better public transportation to help protect the environment, the Conservation Council of North Carolina said Monday.

John Runkle, conservation council spokesman, said in a prepared statement that "North Carolina is at a crossroads. The General Assembly can continue to throw billions of dollars into highway construction and can 'Los Angelesize' our state, or the General Assembly can begin to invest in public transportation and conservation and can preserve our quality of life."

The council and the Clean Water Fund of North Carolina called for abandoning proposed urban outer loops contained in an $8.6 billion road-improvement package and dedicating a half cent of a proposed 5 1/4-cent gasoline tax increase to public transportation.

The Conservation Council also supports a $200 "gas-guzzler fee" on the purchase of cars that get less than 20 miles to a gallon of gas and expansion of the state's pollution control programs.

Center Calls For Tax Overhaul To Make Levy More Equitable

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH (AP) — When the North Carolina income tax was adapted in 1921, it was so progressive that even the governor didn't earn enough money to owe taxes. But with no major changes in the tax code, the tax burden for people at the federal poverty line has jumped 710 percent between 1970 and 1987.

"Our state is among the nation's harshest when it comes to taxing the income of the poor," said Mike McLaughlin, associate editor of North Carolina Insight, the quarterly magazine of the N.C. Center for Public Policy Research.

In a report issued Monday, the public-policy center said North Carolina tax laws are placing a disproportionate burden on the state's poor and need to be changed.

"Why should we be taking dollars out of poor people's pockets?" McLaughlin said. "The legislature should carefully examine the package of tax changes proposed by its study commission with an eye toward restoring fairness."

Tax rates, brackets, exemptions and the standard deduction have remained almost unchanged for 70 years. As a result, inflation has forced a state income tax liability on citizens earning less than half the federal poverty level of $11,612.

A study by the National Conference of State Legislatures found that in 1988, North Carolina had the nation's second highest income tax bite at $252 for a two-parent family of four with $10,000 in household income.

The center added its endorsement to a bill by the Tax Fairness Study Commission that would adopt the federal definitions of taxable income, taxing the poor less and simplifying tax returns for everyone.

"Theoretically, what we did here is super because we are starting to get away from the regressive features of the North Carolina tax system," said Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, co-chairman of the commission. "The North Carolina system has too much of a burden on low- and middle-income citizens."

The new system would have a 5 percent tax rate for lower-income people and 8 percent for higher-income taxpayers. The Legislature's Fiscal Research Division estimates taxpayers with a household income of $45,000 or less would see taxes decline while working married couples making more than $57,500 would pay about 7 percent more and those earning more than $118,000 would pay 12 percent more.

The higher tax threshold would remove as many as 500,000 people from the North Carolina tax rolls.

Hospitals Blame Bills On Charity

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DURHAM — Twenty-one cents of every dollar of an average hospital bill in North Carolina goes to pay for someone else's health care, according to figures released by the North Carolina Hospital Association.

The major cause of hospital rate increases is to make up for losses from charity, bad debts and treating Medicare and Medicaid patients, the association said Monday. Hospitals shift the cost of uncompensated care to patients who can pay and their insurance companies.

"Most hospitals in the state would have to close or drastically curtail care to uninsured patients without the cost shift," said C. Edward McCauley, president of the hospital association.

The cost shift added $786 million to the bills of North Carolina hospitals, according to the association.

McCauley said the problem of shifting costs to paying patients could be eased if more of North Carolina's poor were covered by Medicaid and if Congress stopped cutting Medicare, a federal health-care program for the elderly and disabled.

North Carolina's hospitals are being reimbursed for 59 percent of a Medicaid patient's bill, according to the association.

Roscoe L. King was re-elected chairman of the Greenville Housing Authority at the board's annual elections Monday.

King, who is vice president of Home Federal Savings and Loan, has served nine years on the authority, the past three years as chairman.

GHA commissioners also re-elected John Bell as vice chairman. Bell, assistant vice chancellor for business at East Carolina University, has served on the authority since 1985 and has been vice chairman for the past year.

In other matters Monday, GHA Executive Director Kenneth Noland told commissioners that construction on the new authority development west of Pitt County Memorial Hospital has been delayed because of poor weather.

"Construction commenced in April but not much has been done because of all the rain we have received," Noland said.

The project, located off State Road 1204, south of N.C. 43 and east of Rountree and Westhills Townhomes, will consist of 32 additional housing units.

In other matters, Anne Duffus was elected to serve as president of the Greenville Housing Development Corp., an entity whose purpose is to permit private developers to obtain funds and bonding services from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Ex-Chief Draws 3-Year Term

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A former Williamston police chief has been sentenced to three years in prison for firing a high-powered rifle into an occupied home on Christmas Eve 1988.

Superior Court Judge William Griffin Jr. of Williamston sentenced James David Thompson, 42, on Monday after Thompson pleaded guilty to the felony of shooting into an occupied dwelling. He could have been sentenced to a maximum of 10 years in prison.

Thompson was arrested on the charge Feb. 3 and immediately stepped down from his job. He had served as police chief for the town for eight years.

Capt. J.C. Roberson, acting chief, said the Williamston Board of Commissioners met Monday but did not name a new chief. The announcement will probably come later this month, he said.

Williamston City Attorney Daniel Manning said the board has not set a timetable to name a new chief, and there was no mention of Thompson's sentencing at the meeting Monday.

A long-running dispute over property lines between land owned by Thompson's family and a farm owned by Charlie and Mavis Whitaker in the Church's Crossroads community of Martin County sparked the shooting into the Whitaker's home, Martin Sheriff Willie Rogers has said.

Two other men charged with aiding and abetting Thompson also pleaded guilty Monday.

Griffin sentenced Johnny Smithwick, 41, to two years in prison. A former prison guard for the state Department of Corrections, Smithwick allegedly drove the truck from which Thompson fired the shots.

Griffin sentenced Gene Bennett, 53, to 15 weekends in the Bertie-Martin Jail and ordered him to remain on supervised probation for three years. Clerks said Bennett has retired from his post with the DOC.

No one in the Whitaker family was injured by the shots, which ripped through a picture window about 10:30 p.m. Christmas Eve, but Mrs. Whitaker said her husband had just walked past the window. Whitaker told investigators he found nine places on his house that were hit by bullets and 15 empty cartridges on the road. He estimated the damage to his house and nearby automobiles at over $16,000.

Jacobs Earns 2nd Straight CAA Honor

RICHMOND — Jake Jacobs of East Carolina has earned co-Player of the Week honors for the second straight week in the Colonial Athletic Association.

Jacobs and E.H. Kennedy of North Carolina-Wilmington shared the honor for this week.

Jacobs, a senior from Mount Olive, N.C., pitched his second consecutive no-hitter in a 2-0 shutout of Mount Olive, striking out seven and walking five in seven innings of work. Jacobs is currently 7-1 with a 2.60 ERA and leads the CAA with 1.04 strikeouts per inning pitched.

Jacobs was also the co-player of the week last week, sharing the honor with Tommy Adams, also of UNC-Wilmington. Jacobs was accorded that honor for his no-hitter over Atlantic Christian.

The two no-hitters mark the first time a Pirate hurler has pitched two no-hitters consecutively, or in one season.

Kennedy, a left-handed junior from Wilmington, N.C., struck out a career-high 10 batters and walked three in a no-hitter against Campbell. Kennedy's ERA dropped to 0.81 for the season as the Seahawks won 3-0.

Adam Geyer of William & Mary was also nominated.

Havelock's Chris Mills was low for the round with a 72.

Conley and the other Coastal teams are scheduled to play the league tournament today at Silver Creek Country Club near Swansboro.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Former University of Tennessee quarterback Tony Robinson is back in jail after being charged with violating the terms of his probation from felony cocaine charges.

Robinson, 24, was being held without bond at Knox County Jail after surrendering to authorities on Monday.

A warrant charges Robinson with breaking numerous probation rules, including using cocaine and marijuana, changing residence and jobs without permission and failing to follow instructions from a probation officer.

In addition, the warrant says Robinson violated his probation by failing to make "full and truthful reports" about his activities, failing to work in lawful employment and failing to pay monthly probation fees.

No hearing date has been set.

Rose Misses Game Due To The Flu

MONTREAL (AP) — Cincinnati manager Pete Rose, stricken by the flu, remained at his hotel room Monday night when the Reds played the Montreal Expos.

Rose was examined by Dr. Robert Broderick, the Expos team physician, who determined that he had chest congestion and a high fever. He recommended rest for Rose, who turned the team over to coach Tommy Helms.

Prior to the announcement that Rose was ill, at least a dozen reporters awaited Rose outside his office. It is a familiar scene in every city Rose visits, as the investigation continues by the commissioner's office into allegations that he bet on baseball games.

Mariners' Griffey Earns Weekly Honor

NEW YORK (AP) — Rookie Ken Griffey Jr. of the Seattle Mariners was named American League Player of the Week after he hit .600 for the period ending April 30.

Griffey, 19, was a unanimous choice for the award after hitting safely in all six games. He tied a club record with eight consecutive hits and another club mark with 11 hits in four games.

Morris Falls To 0-6 As Tigers Fall

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The winningest pitcher of the 1980's can't get a win in 1989.

Jack Morris became the first Detroit pitcher in 36 years to start the season 0-6 as the Seattle Mariners beat the Tigers 5-3 Monday night.

Alvin Davis' sacrifice fly snapped a seventh-inning tie and Jeffrey Leonard followed with an RBI single.

Morris never had lost more than four straight decisions before this year. He allowed 10 hits, struck out seven and walked none in 6 2-3 innings.

Morris wouldn't talk to reporters after the game. However, his manager thinks he's still pitching well.

"His only luck has been bad," Sparky Anderson said.

The last Detroit pitcher to lose his first six decisions was Ted Gray, who began the 1953 season 0-9.

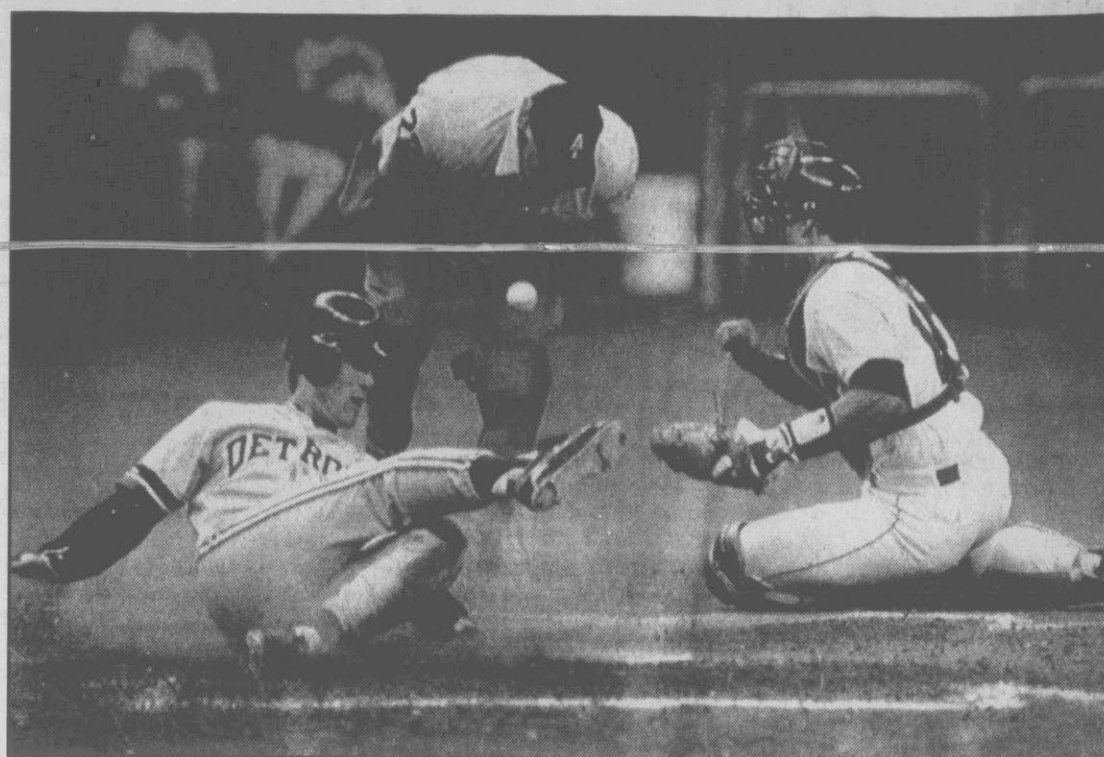

Morris worked out of several jams. His teammates gave him a lead for the first time this season, but the 34-year-old right-hander was his own worst enemy.

Leading 3-1 in the sixth, he threw a wild pitch over the head of catcher Matt Nokes, allowing Omar Vizquel to score.

He mishandled Vizquel's sacrifice bunt in the seventh when Seattle scored three runs, two unearned.

"For a guy, 0-5, he's tough, especially with men on base," Seattle manager Jim Lefebvre said after the Mariners added another loss.

Dennis Powell, 1-0, pitched two hitless innings and Mike Schooler finished with two-hit relief for his third save.

Detroit is 1-5 on its eight-game road trip.

White Sox 6, Brewers 0

Jerry Reuss pitched a four-hitter for his 39th shutout and Ron Kittle hit a three-run homer as Milwaukee lost its fourth straight in Teddy Higuera's first start of the season. The Brewers are scoreless in 26 innings.

Higuera, 16-9 last season, had surgery on Jan. 20 for a herniated disc. He made 77 pitches, gave up five runs and seven hits, walked four and struck out one.

Reuss, 3-2, struck out three and walked none. It was his first shutout since June 21, 1987, against Kansas City when he was with California.

"It reminded me of my best years in the early '80s," the 39-year-old Reuss said. "I was very consistent. I concentrated on keeping the ball down."

Red Sox 13, Twins 6

Boston scored seven runs in the first inning as Jim Rice hit a two-run double, Dwight Evans a two-run triple and Wade Boggs a two-run double.

After Boggs struck out to open the game, seven straight Red Sox reached base against Allan Anderson. Boggs drove in five runs and Boston had 15 hits, the 14th time in 19 games the Red Sox have had 10 or more.

Dennis Boyd, 2-1, allowed four runs over seven innings for his sixth straight victory against Minnesota. He gave up seven hits, struck out two and walked one.

Anderson, 4-2, who entered the game with a 2.03 earned-run average, lasted just one-third of an inning, allowing seven earned runs. It was the first time since June 5, 1987, a span of 35 starts, that he allowed more than four earned runs.

Indians 11, Rangers 1

Jerry Browne, a former Ranger, drove in four runs and Rich Yett and Keith Atherton combined on a six-hitter as Texas lost for only the sixth time in 23 games.

Yett, 2-2, allowed one run and four hits in 5 1-3 innings before Atherton pitched 2 2-3 innings for his second save.

Bobby Witt, 3-1, allowed six hits and six runs in six innings, walking four and striking out three.

Cleveland took the lead in the second on Brook Jacoby's RBI triple. The Indians added two more runs in the third, assisted by first baseman Rafael Palmiero's error. Browne drove in one on a groundout and Joe Carter followed with an RBI double.

Browne hit a sacrifice fly in the seventh, an RBI double in the eighth and a run-scoring single in the ninth.

Reminder: Pitt Has A Lot To Offer

North Carolina Commerce Secretary Jim Broyhill had nice things to say about Greenville and Pitt County on a visit here related to a tour by international press representatives. His praise was well-placed, and instead of shrugging it off, it's a good time to reflect on the community's assets and potential.

"People here have sold their community, pure and simple," Broyhill said. "They've gone to work to put great effort in this community, and gone to work to build on the assets they have and gone to work to try and correct some of the liabilities they have."

Eastern North Carolina is seen favorably by industry because of education, medical care, recreation and leisure opportunities and a reasonable cost of living, he said.

"All of this adds together to make this an attractive place for business to locate, to grow and to expand."

The visiting reporters should have found much to impress them. Pitt County does have incalculable assets; a balance between education, industry, medicine and agriculture, good community relations. All residents would like to feel that their community, along with what it has to offer, has been sold. And while the press tour was a step in the right direction, there is still a feeling that the community hasn't done all it can in that area.

Visitors are impressed with the industrial base, the burgeoning medical complex in Greenville and the educational facilities. Those who have not visited, however, don't always know what the area offers. It is still a message that needs to get out to those seeking retirement homes and to blue chip industries seeking eager workers and a relatively uncrowded location.

The community is not without liabilities — it has more crime than is desired, traffic problems and the never-ending task of improving the level of education schools offer. These are problems that must be pursued and the area must set goals for progress.

Addressing these difficulties is an ongoing process. An aggressive court and law enforcement system must keep chipping away at crime. The East must continue to get its fair share of roadbuilding. Schools — from kindergarten to university level have to set the sites on excellence and not waver from this commitment.

The East, especially Pitt County, has a great deal to offer and, armed with that, the region has a lot to sell.

'Pitt County does have incalculable assets; a balance between education, industry, medicine and agriculture, good community relations.'

A Whiff Of Racism In Washington

WASHINGTON — As a young reporter for United Press International in New York, I wrote an item about a rape in Central Park and sent it to local news organizations only. When my boss noticed, I was chastised: Central Park rapes get national distribution.

Now Washington is getting the Central Park treatment. This is to be expected. Next to New York, Washington is probably the city most Americans love to hate. Like New York, Washington is a media center: Journalism, like carnivals, often gives the public what it wants. Television has made Washington crime a media staple. Little wonder it is widely believed to be the most dangerous city in the United States.

But it isn't. Atlanta is. Newly released FBI statistics show Atlanta with the highest rate of violent crime. Atlanta is followed by some cities that, for some reason, rarely make it on the nightly news: Fort Worth, Dallas, Seattle. To find Washington, you have to pass 15 other cities — and even then you haven't come to the usual suspects: New York and Chicago. They are 17th and 18th respectively. As for Atlanta, last year it had 18.2 violent crimes for every 100 residents. The rate for Washington was 9.2.

Of course, Atlanta and, you can bet, other cities have explanations galore for these figures. Atlanta officials say that rape in Washington is underreported. That's possible. They say Atlanta's crime figures are distorted because they're based on the city's population, not on the total number of people who both live and work in the city — commuters, for instance. (Do they think no one commutes to Washington?) They say, in short, that Atlanta is getting a bad rap.

Washingtonians, a sensitive bunch, are moved to tears. Washington may not be the crime capital it is supposed to be, but it is certainly the bad-rap capital, supplanting even New York. To a certain extent, it has become the victim of its own success. As New York has shown, media centers tend to devour themselves.

Washington's problem, and an appalling one it is, is homicide — 369 of them last year. The city has the highest murder rate in the country. But a fair share of those victims were drug dealers and a fair share of the murders amounted to assassinations. In other words, one drug dealer set out to kill another. As they say in Mafia movies, "Just business — nothing personal."

That point has been made repeatedly by Mayor Marion Barry. Unfortunately, Barry's credibility with the press is as bad as the local crime story is good. The result is that many people here, as well as those in other places, think Washington is an exceedingly dangerous place. That's true if you happen to be a drug dealer. But if for some unaccountable reason, you happen to be otherwise employed, you can vastly increase the chance of becoming a crime victim simply by moving to Atlanta. Housing is cheaper, too.

Washington is not helped, of course, by congressional practitioners of the cheap shot. Representing suburban cul-de-sacs, auto parks and shopping malls, they are quick to denounce the city's government and elected leaders and offer advice. One senator, Mark O. Hatfield (R-Ore.), admitted he had witnessed a shooting but had failed to report it to the police. What's the use?, he seemed to be saying and then explained his shirking of a civic obligation: "Washington is different." Yes, 15 other cities are worse.

If, as the Levi bread company used to say, you don't have to be Jewish to love rye bread, then you don't have to be black to detect the whiff of racism in the way Washington is being cuffed around. After all, Washington is a majority-black city and its political leadership reflects that demographic fact.

A certain Texas congressman once told me he moved out of Washington when it — and here he made a face — "became a jungle." His state boasts six cities with higher crime rates than

*'If, as the Levi bread company used to say, you don't have to be Jewish to love rye bread, then you don't have to be black to detect the whiff of racism in the way Washington is being cuffed around. Washington — Ft. Worth, Dallas, Austin, San Antonio, Houston and El Paso. Washington needs no instruction from Texas. The "stars at night" turn out to be the ones Texans see when they get bopped on the head.

So welcome Detroit, Boston, Cleveland, Oklahoma City, Jacksonville and 10 other cities. You all have higher violent crime rates than Washington. We can assume that congressmen will suggest these cities be nationalized, that their police departments be placed under federal control, that any TV station with a satellite dish will arrive to do vivid reports (don't forget to show the blood, fellas), that crime will go unreported (What's the use?), that their politicians will be ridiculed and that their residents will do the prudent thing: Pack up and move to Washington. After all, it's a lot safer here.

A Formula: Opportunity Without Exertion Produces Failure

WASHINGTON — "They were consumed with desire for schools. The uprising of the black man, and the pouring of himself into organized effort for education, in those years between 1861 and 1871, was one of the marvelous occurrences of the modern world; almost without parallel in the history of civilization...."

"Free, then, with a desire for land and a frenzy for schools, the Negro lurched into the new day." — W.E.B. Du Bois

The passage, a favorite from Du Bois' "Black Reconstruction in America," is the pride and chagrin of NAACP chief, Roscoe Nix, of Montgomery County, Md.

Here were former slaves suddenly on their own, with few resources beyond their tenuous freedom. And yet their focus was not on what was denied them but on what they could, at last, hope to obtain: land and learning.

They took what slavery had taught them — farming — and used it as a step toward economic independence. If they could obtain their own small plots, working the land for themselves, they could perhaps acquire bigger plots and greater freedom.

"Then, in addition to that, they wanted to know; they wanted to be able to interpret the cabalistic letters and figures which were the key to more," Du Bois wrote. "They were consumed with curiosity at the meaning of the world. First and foremost, just what was this that had recently happened to them — this upturning of the universe and revolution of the whole social fabric? And what was its relation to their own dimly remembered past of the West Indies and Africa, Virginia and Kentucky?"

That is Nix's pride: that black men and women, penniless, ignorant and without obvious resources, could not only dream of partaking of the American dream but also work toward that goal, acquiring land and building schools to educate themselves and their children.

And here is the chagrin: that children for whom economic bondage is a chapter in a history book can declare themselves bored with learning — that parents, many of whom have lived through tough times, can take so little active interest in their children's education.

The immediate occasion for Nix's re-reading of Du Bois was the news last week that black children in the Montgomery County schools have, after seven straight gap-closing years, started to slip further behind their white classmates. It was enough to change entirely the tenor of his remarks at a recent NAACP Freedom Fund dinner.

He called on his audience of mostly well-off blacks to join in planning for a "festival of academic achievement" to honor outstanding students, not merely in college prep courses but also in vocational and technical subjects.

"Our community would be retrieving an old African American value — the placing of education second only to our religion and our God," he told them. "It will only be when our community reasserts this value, and it becomes a part of our children's lives, that we will achieve the education progress we want, expect and need."

"As a community, we should enlarge our partnership with the public schools, and we should continue our support of the programs that seek to enhance the academic achievement of our youth."

It was the right message, delivered at the right time — with parental attention already focused on the educational shortcomings of black students.

Not once did he mention racism as the culprit, though as one of the more militant NAACP executives in the country, he knows — and continues to fight against — the racism that still abounds.

His stress was on what black Americans need to do for themselves. His message was that the descendants of slaves, like the freedmen of Du Bois' account — indeed, like the newly arrived immigrants from Asia — must learn to shift their focus from the undeniable hardships to the opportunity that does exist; that opportunity without exertion can produce only failure.

A Du Bois, looking at the resources of the parents in Nix's audience, might have wondered why such an admonition would be necessary. A Frederick Douglass, who thought emancipation was the only key necessary to unlock black America's potential, would be aghast to see the self-inflicted wounds that are retarding our progress.

Roscoe Nix is aghast, too. But he is optimistic. He believes that we can reawaken the post-Emancipation "frenzy for schooling" and, once again, "lurch into a new day."

Scientists Refute Claim Of Fusion

BALTIMORE (AP) — Utah scientists who captured worldwide attention with their claim to have achieved cold nuclear fusion were probably fooled by faulty calculations, researchers from two of the nation's most prominent science institutes say.

Researchers from both the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and the California Institute of Technology are challenging the cold fusion claim made at the University of Utah.

Nathan Lewis said Monday that he and other Caltech researchers conducted the most precise effort yet to duplicate the Utah experiment and found that no fusion took place. He said the Utah scientists calculated a gain in heat, but that precise measurements at Caltech showed no such gain.

Papers prepared by MIT researchers for presentation today at the American Physical Society meeting also reported that verification experiments conducted over a five-week period failed to detect any fusion reaction.

Richard Petrasso of MIT's Plasma Fusion Center said the amount of neutrons, another fusion byproduct, emitted by the Utah experiment was probably much lower than the Utah scientists thought. He said the claimed flow was "inconsistent" with other data reported from the Utah experiment.

"We're asserting that their neutron emission was below what they thought it was, including the possibility that it could have been none at all," Ronald R. Parker, director of MIT's Plasma Fusion Center, said in a telephone interview Monday.

The international physics community has spent millions of dollars over the last quarter century attempting to achieve fusion using massive machines filled with plasma heated to temperatures of up to 100 million degrees.

University of Utah chemist B. Stanley Pons and his collaborator, Martin Fleischmann of England's University of Southampton, sent shock waves through the scientific world March 23 when they said they had achieved nuclear fusion using a simple electrochemical cell at room temperature.

Pons and Fleischmann said the cell used an electrode of palladium and one of platinum that were immersed in a flask of deuterium oxide, or heavy water. The researchers claimed that when an electrical current was applied to the electrodes, deuterium nuclei were jammed into the crystal lattice of the palladium until the nuclei fused.

When the fusion occurred, Pons and Fleischmann said, the device produced four times more heat than was required to operate the experiment. They later said the ratio of heat produced to heat expended could be up to 8-1.

Countdown Starts Again For Shuttle

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Electricity flowed into Atlantis today, beginning a new countdown toward a Thursday afternoon blastoff after crews fixed fuel system problems that caused a last-minute launch postponement.

The shuttle is to carry into space five astronauts who are to propel a robot spacecraft to explore the planet Venus.

The countdown began on time at 8 a.m. when a test director summoned the launch team to work stations.

NASA said the new launch plan was "optimistic," but officials were confident enough to move ahead.

Liftoff was scheduled for 1:48 p.m. Thursday, with the 64-minute launch opportunity extending until 2:52 p.m.

The countdown, which normally lasts more than three days, is being compressed by 24 hours this time by eliminating some work done in the first count that need not be repeated.

The astronauts, who had returned to their training base in Houston after the scrub, were to fly back here late today after a practice session in a shuttle simulator.

Commanding the mission is David Walker. The pilot is Ron Grabe and the mission specialists are Mary Cleave, Mark Lee and Norman Thagard. Lee is the only one who has not flown a previous shuttle flight.

Scientists monitoring the Magellan spacecraft in Atlantis' cargo bay reported it was healthy. The astronauts are to release the $550 million probe toward Venus to map the planet's cloud-veiled surface.

The two bad parts that forced Friday's postponement were a hydrogen fuel pump that short-circuted and a 4-inch-diameter fuel line that sprung a small leak. Small metal particles found in the pump may have caused the short-circuit, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said.

The speedy fashion in which the parts were replaced prompted the agency to set a Thursday launch date. Officials had said Sunday they did not expect to be able to try again before Friday.

Warren Wiley, deputy director of engineering at the Kennedy Space Center, credited the repair crew.

"This is a very dedicated team here," he said. "When the chips are down they really get out and hustle. They did a bang-up job."

The delay meant a loss of valuable days in starting Magellan on its voyage. Because of the shifting positions of Earth and Venus, there is only a 32-day period when the spacecraft can be launched toward Earth's sister planet.

If the shuttle can't get off the ground by May 28, the mission would have to be put off two years, at a cost of more than $100 million, until the two planets are again properly aligned.

'Killer Bees' Found On African Freighter

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — A swarm of about 500 Africanized honeybees, popularly known as "killer bees," has been destroyed at Miami's port, state officials said.

The bees, hitchhiking on the outside of a container brought in from Suriname aboard the freighter Werner, were discovered April 21 by workers at the Omni Terminal in downtown Miami, Agriculture Commissioner Doyle Conner said Monday.

The bees were destroyed that day by a state inspector, but as a precaution additional bait hives have been placed in the port and surrounding area.

It is the fifth swarm of the highly aggressive bees that has been discovered and destroyed in Florida in the last four years.

Last May, a swarm of about 10,000 was found at Fort Lauderdale aboard a freighter carrying fruit and vegetables from Guatemala.

Truck Carrying Explosives Flips

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SWEETWATER, Texas — A truck loaded with military explosives overturned on Interstate 20 just outside this West Texas town, causing officials to close the highway and consider evacuations.

Local authorities said the truck carried 48 rocket pods containing 644 M-77 grenades and a quantity of rocket fuel, but there was no explosion and no fire.

Military authorities ordered helicopters to be flown to Sweetwater from bases in Texas and Oklahoma to haul the explosives from the scene, said Police Chief Jim Kelly.

Kelly said the helicopters were en route from Fort Hood, Fort Bliss and Fort Sam Houston, Texas, and from Fort Sill, Okla. Sweetwater is about 40 miles west of Abilene and 170 miles west of Fort Worth.

The police chief said he was told the airlift would not begin for several hours.

Military officers at the scene were not immediately available for comment.

Lt. Randy Wilks of the Texas Department of Public Safety said the truck overturned early today on the outskirts of this town of almost 13,000 people, about two miles from downtown. City and state officials were meeting to consider evacuations, he said.

best contract. In order of desirability, the preferred game contracts are four of a major if an eight-card fit exists; three no trump if there is no major fit; and five of a minor, or possibly four of a major on a seven-card fit, only if neither of the first two options is viable.

However, that does not mean you should follow this dictum slavishly. There are some hands that call for judgment. Study this hand from a recent rubber-bridge game at New York's Cavendish Club.

South might have jumped to two no trump at his first turn, but he introduced his major suit in case his partner held four spades and an unbalanced hand. Once the 4-4 fit was located, South showed his strength and balanced distribution by jumping to three no trump, and North corrected to four spades, wrongly in our opinion.

North also has a balanced hand, a host of secondary values and a stopper in every suit. Since South almost surely has the ace of hearts, declarer will not need a heart ruff in dummy. There is no reason why North should presume that the major-suit game will be superior.

The punishment exceeded the crime. West led a club to his partner's ace. A diamond was returned to the ace, and the defenders proceeded to collect two ruffs in each minor, for down three!

Three no trump would have been easy. To reinforce our bidding point, change any two side-suit queens in the North hand for a minor-suit ace, and see how easy a contract four spades is now.

Deputies Take To The Streets In Search Of Jurors

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Sue Wilson of Greenville said she thought she might have won a jackpot when a Pitt County Sheriff's deputy put on his flashing blue light and stopped her car Monday afternoon on Greene Street.

Instead, all she won was a five-day term of jury duty. Pitt deputies took to the streets Monday, rounding up Ms. Wilson and more than two dozen other unsuspecting citizens for emergency jury duty.

"I thought I'd won the lottery ... This is bizarre," Ms. Wilson said as she phoned a friend to say she could not make a scheduled meeting.

Though she said she has plans to be out of town Friday, the last-minute call for jury duty was not upsetting.

"I really enjoyed jury duty the last times I was on it (in Charleston, S.C.)," she said.

There was a shortage of jurors this week because just 48 of 140 people summoned for jury duty reported to the courthouse. There is a heavy caseload, with both a civil and a criminal session of Superior Court operating this week. On top of that, 18 jurors had to be selected Monday to serve on the grand jury.

With the grand jurors chosen, just 30 jurors remained for the two courts in session.

"That's not enough," said Superior Court Clerk Susan Clark. "We tried to get 30 off the street during the lunch break."

Sheriff's Deputy Robert Hudson, Superior Court bailiff, said once or twice a year the jury pool runs dry and deputies may have to hit the streets to find new jurors.

On Monday, deputies presented individuals with an order signed by Judge Sam Currin of Raleigh, who is presiding over the criminal session this week in Greenville. The order called for the people to report immediately for jury duty.

Usually, people come willingly, Hudson said. Anyone who refuses could face a contempt charge for refusing to obey a judge's order.

Soggy Fields Delay Planting

Six-Day Rainfall Tops 6 Inches

By Carol Tyer
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Eastern North Carolina farmers and all the helpers they could get were digging ditches this morning, trying to keep already planted crops from drowning and to drain fields as quickly as possible so much-delayed planting can be resumed.

This morning's sunshine brought opportunity for outdoor work to farmers and others in the community. And with it came the prospect of a chilly but fair night. This break in inclement weather comes on the heels of 2.39 inches of rain for the area since Monday at 7 a.m. and 6.22 inches since Thursday at 7 a.m.

The Tar River by this morning at 7 a.m. was at 13.2 feet above sea level, having risen from nine feet recorded Saturday.

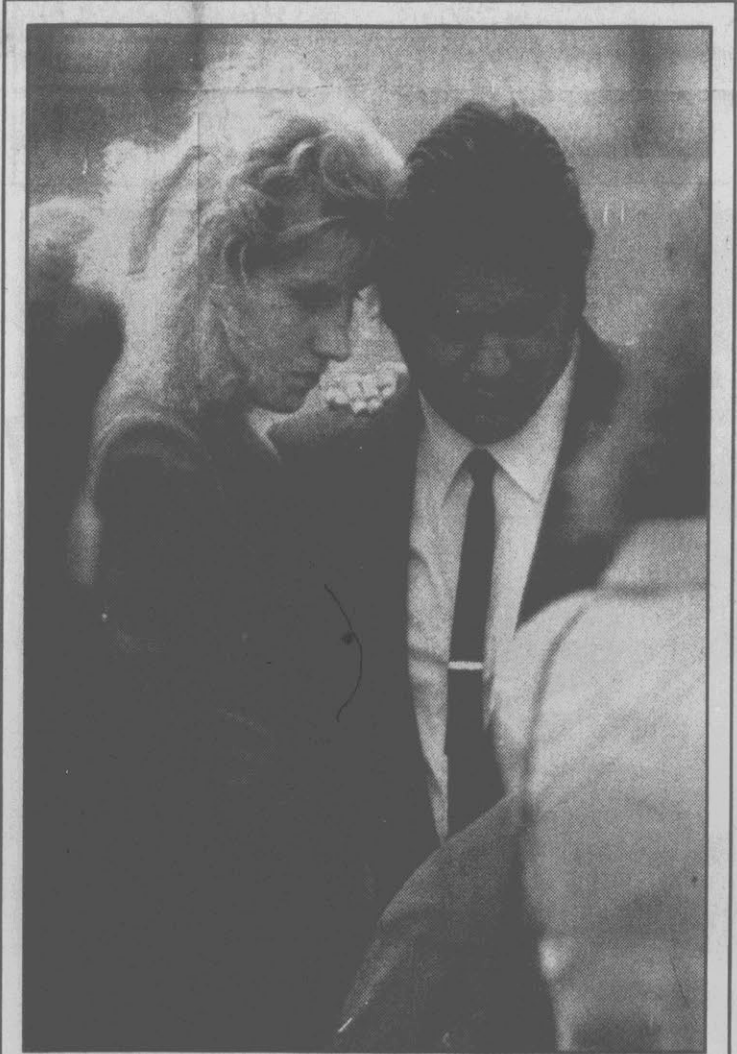

"I would classify the present farming situation as very, very critical," said Mitch Smith, Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service director. "By this week of the 1988 season, we were concluding our transplanting of tobacco from plant beds to fields. As of right now, we probably have less than one-third of our tobacco planted. We are probably two, maybe even three weeks behind."

"What this means for growers is that things are really going to get complicated over the next two weeks. May 10 is the last practical

Public Outcries Over Spill Increase

Exxon Wants To Skirt Laws So It Can Burn Or Bury Recovered Sludge

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

VALDEZ, Alaska — Exxon wants to burn or bury the sludge recovered in cleaning up the nation's worst oil spill, and says environmental laws may have to be bypassed to allow the disposal.

Only hours before a deadline expired, the giant oil company submitted its cleanup and disposal strategy Monday to the Coast Guard and state officials.

The plan also was unveiled as Exxon faced protests in at least three states. Consumer groups in Alaska and New York state asked for boycotts of Exxon products today. In Oregon, demonstrations were planned at the port of Portland, where the crippled tanker Exxon Valdez is to be repaired.

Exxon's proposal immediately drew the scrutiny of Alaskan environmental officials, who contend that Exxon failed to act quickly to clean up the more than 10 million gallons of oil spilled when the tanker hit a reef March 24 in Prince William Sound.

The plan estimates that poor weather and logistical problems will force a slowdown in the cleanup through September, cutting by 50 percent the number of days the crews can actually spend on the beaches and water.

Exxon's two-part strategy on cleanup and disposal makes no provisions for continuing the operation beyond mid-September.

"It's our objective and we're convinced ... with the plan that we currently have that we'll get the major part of this spill cleaned up by the middle of September 1989, Lawrence Rawl, chairman and chief executive officer of Exxon, said in an interview on "CBS This Morning."

The plan also notes that 191 miles of moderately fouled coastline may be left untouched to be cleansed naturally by the environment.

Traces of the spill have been found 500 miles southwest of Valdez along the Alaska Peninsula.

"Lightly oiled areas might not require cleaning," the report said, "if environmental considerations indicate that allowing natural forces to operate produces a better result than the mechanical process."

"We are going to have to take a hard look at that," said Bill Lamoreaux, the ranking state environmental official monitoring the cleanup.

In Chignik, 525 miles southwest of Valdez, Pete Wuerpel of the state's Division of Emergency Services said the plan did not help newly fouled communities like his.

"I think there is an element of arrogance; I think there is an element of patronizing; I think there is an element of unwillingness to redress the injury," said Wuerpel, who is coordinating the efforts of the numerous state agencies involved in the cleanup.

Exxon's proposal, a revised version of an earlier plan that government authorities rejected as incomplete, divides 364 miles of Alaska's oil-tainted shores into four categories based on the amount of pollution.

It covers areas within Prince William Sound, as well as those outside the immediate spill zone, and calls for nearly 3,400 workers to participate in the cleanup. The cost was not disclosed, but Exxon reportedly is paying clean-up workers $16.67 an hour.

The worst areas — three miles of sludge-covered beaches of several small islands in the sound — would be targeted immediately, with the others scheduled for gradual cleansing through Sept. 15.

The recovered waste would be strained for usable oil that can be refined, and the oil-laced wastewater could be treated at the Alyeska Pipeline Service Co.'s disposal plant in Valdez.

The gunk and sludge that resists treatment or salvage will be burned or buried, Exxon proposed. Both methods likely will require exemptions from local environmental laws, which Exxon says may arouse opposition from environmentalists and others.

Tour Bus, Tractor Rig Collide

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KERNERSVILLE, N.C. — A commercial tour bus carrying as many as 30 children from Burlington collided with a tractor-trailer rig on Interstate 40 near the Forsyth-Guilford county line today, authorities said.

Three minor injuries were reported aboard the Triad Lines bus, according to the Guilford County Emergency Medical Services. The injured were taken to Wesley Long Hospital in Greensboro, officials said.

A spokeswoman at the hospital said two children and one adult were treated and released.

The accident occurred about 10 a.m. in the westbound lane of I-40, the state Highway Patrol said. Authorities would not comment on the cause of the crash.

The second-graders from Alexander Wilson Elementary School were en route to the Nature Science Center in Winston-Salem when the accident occurred, according to Carol Younger, the school's principal.

School Board Approves $13.4 Million Budget

By Cherie Evans
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Pitt County Board of Education will request $13.4 million from the county commissioners for the school system's 1989-90 current expense budget.

The education board approved the budget request during its monthly meeting Monday evening at A.G. Cox School in Winterville.

The budget request includes a base of $10 million the Pitt commissioners appropriated to the system for the 1988-89 year, plus $3.3 million in additional funds.

The additional funds cover mandated items, increased operational costs due to inflation, and expanded personnel, instructional and operational services.

Mandated items include paying for a 6 percent raise and fringe benefits, providing the money loss in the termination of the Pilot Finance Project, covering a possible deficit in the child nutrition program and restoring the system's fund balance for a total of $2.3 million.

About $315,000 has been requested to cover the increased cost of electricity, fuel and telephone service due to inflation.

Expanded personnel services include supplement increases for teachers, a supplement for teacher assistants, an employee assistance program and an employee drug testing program for a total of $345,268.

Expanded instructional items include an alcohol and drug education program, programs for students at risk for dropping out of school, materials for exceptional children and an expanded foreign language program for a total of $195,620.

Expanded operational services include overtime pay for employees who also drive school buses, security systems and an expanded soccer program for a total of $140,500.

In addition to the current expense budget request, the board also is requesting $4.2 million for the school system's capital outlay program which includes a payment on the Boy's Club property and funds needed for school buses and maintenance trucks.

In other matters, Enpuricon Inc. of Raleigh was approved for an asbestos abatement and ceiling replacement project at A.G. Cox School at $164,350.

The board also approved an application for federal funds for the 1989-90 year, revised personnel policies and personnel recommendations.

Ruby Jackson, president of the Pitt County Association of Educators, addressed the board about providing salary supplements equitably and about providing support for the board as it requests funds from the county commissioners.

Bob Lee and Sandra Hardison, both of Grifton, and Bruce Thompson of Greenville asked the board to provide funds for instruments for the school system's music programs.

The board requested information on the system's policy for providing instruments to students and its method for distributing instruments to the schools.

The board also requested information on the feasibility of offering courses during the summer to allow students to advance, in addition to offering the remedial courses in the summer for students.

County Board Accepts Airport Grant

By Stuart Savage
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners on Monday formally accepted a federal grant to help pay for improvements at Pitt-Greenville Airport and agreed to pay the expenses for a team of high school scholars to participate in an international competition in Colorado later this month.

Airport Manager Jim Turcotte said $222,000 of the Federal Aviation Administration grant would be used to help offset the cost of a $1.31 million project to more than double the size of the terminal building at the airport.

Turcotte told commissioners the remaining $121,000 in federal money will be used to help pay for a $135,000 automated weather station which will provide weather information for pilots. Turcotte said the weather station will also be able to provide weather information to area residents.

The board approved spending $3,850 to pay the expenses of the 16-member D.H. Conley High School Odyssey of the Mind team to travel to Boulder, Colo., for international competition set for May 24-27.

Harry Jones, the team's coach, described Odyssey of the Mind as "a creative problem solving activity." Jones said teams from 45 states and a number of foreign countries will participate in the Boulder competition.

The Conley team won regional and state championships earlier this spring, making it eligible to participate in the international event.

Commissioners also presented a resolution of appreciation to Dr. John Ball, chairman of the Pitt County Mental Health board, who received the 1989 Leadership Award from the N.C. Council for Mental Health, Mental Retardation and Substance Abuse last month as the outstanding area board member in North Carolina.

"I am most appreciative of this," Ball said, but he added, "You honor not only me, but the members of my board."

In other business, commissioners appointed Gerry Dail to the Pitt County Committee for Employment of the Handicapped, adopted a resolution recognizing Monday as the 75th anniversary of the Smith-Lever Act and the North Carolina Extension Service, and adopted a resolution designating Monday through May 13 as Small Business Week in Pitt County.

Pitt Jobless Rate At 2.4 Percent

Pitt County, with a 2.4 percent unemployment rate, was one of 30 counties throughout North Carolina that achieved an unemployment rate of 3 percent or less during the month of March, according to figures released by the Employment Security Commission of North Carolina.

Statistics compiled for March show that Pitt County currently has a labor force of 55,610, with 54,290 of that number employed, and 1,320 unemployed.

Rural Greene County led the state during the month in high employment with only 1.7 percent of its labor force unemployed. In contrast, Graham, a Piedmont industrial county, had North Carolina's highest unemployment rate of 15.2 percent.

The percentage of unemployed persons in counties bordering Pitt County varied from Martin County with 3 percent to Wilson with 6 percent. The rates for other counties bordering Pitt are: Beaufort, 4.5 percent; Craven, 2.9 percent; Edgecombe, 3.6 percent.

Charges Against Wright Twice As Long As His Book

Walter Mears

WASHINGTON — The book they're throwing at Jim Wright is more than twice as long as the one that got the speaker of the House in trouble in the first place.

It's a government-tan paperback with the uninviting title "Report of

The accusations the committee voted to pursue center on the book deal and on gifts and benefits Wright received from his friend and business associate, George Mallick, a Fort Worth businessman.

But some of the most striking sections of the Phelan report cover alleged violations the committee is not pressing, involving Wright's interventions with federal savings and loan regulators in behalf of Texas in-regulators about their dealings with a Texas S&L operator. Edwin Gray, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, was said to figure that the only way to get action on the bill was to do what Wright wanted. So he changed supervisors at an S&L that was under board control.

The Phelan report likened that to blackmail.

The S&L bill was stalled for a week. It passed the House, but didn't make it through the Senate before Congress adjourned. Legislation to replenish the insurance fund didn't become law until August 1987.

Wright also intervened in behalf of Thomas M. Gaubert, ousted by federal regulators as chairman of an insolvent S&L, and barred from getting back into the business under an agreement he had made with the bank board. Gaubert, who was treasurer of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, said he had been unfairly pressured into accepting the agreement, and wanted it rescinded.

Wright called Gray. Eventually, the bank board chairman named a special counsel to review handling of the Gaubert case, even though he told the ethics committee he had no reason to doubt the original handling. The bank board still didn't have its recapitalization bill.

"... We had to have passage of the legislation and I had ... Jim Wright making it clear that I was to talk to his friend, his buddy," Gray said.

Soon after that, in November, 1986, Gray got another call from Wright, this one to complain more generally about the way S&Ls were being treated in Texas. In that call, Gray testified, Wright said that a top Texas regulator for the bank board was a homosexual who "had established a ring of homosexual lawyers in Texas at various law firms" and was forcing people to deal with the Federal Home Loan Bank of Dallas through those lawyers.

Gray said Wright asked him to get rid of the man.

"And I said, 'No. I was the one who recruited him. I think very highly of him. He is doing what I want him to do.'"

While Phelan recommended that Wright be charged with rules violations in the S&L cases, a divided committee didn't do so.

That probably reflects legislators' sensitivity about their own, presumably more restrained interventions with executive agencies in behalf of constituents. It is part of the job.

And as Phelan noted, there is no House rule expressly defining undue influence.

Walter R. Mears, vice president and columnist for The Associated Press, has reported on Washington for more than 25 years.

'Wright says he never considered the book purchases to be speech payments. But the report recounts 11 cases in which the speaker, up against House limits on honoraria, made appearances before groups ranging from the fertilizer industry to cranberry growers who then bought books instead of paying speech fees.'

the Special Outside Counsel in the Matter of James C. Wright, Jr." and it runs 279 pages.

Wright's lucrative "Reflections of a Public Man" was 117 pages, a lightweight by comparison but a moneymaker. It made Wright $54,642.25 in what the House Ethics Committee charges were actually disguised honorarium payments that violated House limits.

Wright says he never considered the book purchases to be speech payments. But the report recounts 11 cases in which the speaker, up against House limits on honoraria, made appearances before groups ranging from the fertilizer industry to cranberry growers who then bought books instead of paying speech fees.

His so-called royalty was 55 percent, $3.25 a copy on a book that was priced at $5.95. According to the report, some of the interests that paid for books didn't bother to take any.

The speaker would have been better off if he'd quit the book business after one of his earlier works was published, even though it didn't do nearly as well financially. The title of that one: "Congress and Conscience."

Richard J. Phelan of Chicago, outside counsel to the ethics committee, put together the Wright report, accusing the speaker of 116 violations of House rules. The committee voted to charge Wright with 69 of them, shelving the other 47. The Phelan report covers them all.

terests, among friends and political fund-raisers.

That happened early in the savings and loan crisis that now carries a price tag estimated at $126 billion over the next decade. Wright's early involvement, in 1986, delayed action that might have started the government dealing with the process.

Republicans contend the cost of solving the S&L crisis would have been cut by half if the government had started closing down insolvent institutions and paying off insured depositors two years earlier. But the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. didn't have the money to do it.

Wright, then majority leader, delayed House action on a bill to provide it while he pressed S&L

Accidental Discovery May End Obesity

Blocks calorie absorption

SWEDEN—Medical researchers at the University of Kuopio, in Finland, have discovered (accidentally) a new weight-loss formula. The new discovery enables an overweight individual to lose pounds and fatty tissue without dieting or exercise.

Scientists made the discovery while searching for a formula to lower cholesterol. In a controlled study of a test group of people, cholesterol levels remained unchanged but the doctors were astounded to find that every patient who used the formula lost weight. The published report of this study stated, "A highly significant decrease in body weight was seen" in patients who received the formula.

The formula was then tested in Sweden at Sahlgren Hospital, University of Goteborg. Again, all patients lost a substantial amount of weight even though they did not change their eating habits.

The report detailing this study, published in the British Journal of Nutrition, stated: "Body weight was significantly reduced even though the patients were specifically asked not to alter their dietary habits". One patient in this study lost more than 30 pounds.

According to one informed source, the active ingredient comes from a 100% natural botanical source and contains no drugs or stimulants. When taken before mealtime it bonds with the food you eat and "ties up" calories, preventing their absorption.

A substantial portion of the calories ingested therefore pass through the digestive system unabsorbed. The body has to get energy to replace the lost calories, so it starts to burn stored fat. The result is rapid body weight loss. Extensive clinical tests have verified the safety of this formula for long-term use.

The formula is marketed in tablet form in the United States under the trade name Cal-Ban 3000. A firm located in Tampa, Florida, has exclusive North American distribution rights. A review of the customer files of this company revealed the names of hundreds of people who have lost as much as 20, 40 or 60 or more pounds overall with Cal-Ban 3000. This is a golden opportunity for people who are plagued by fat and cellulite that they can't seem to lose by conventional methods.

Cal-Ban 3000 is reasonably priced at $19.95 for a 3-week supply and $38.95 for a 6-week supply. Postage and handling is $3. To assure fastest service, orders are accepted by toll-free phone only. VISA, MasterCard, AMEX and C.O.D. orders are accepted. C.O.D.'s are $2.20 extra. Orders may be placed by calling Anderson Pharmaceuticals TOLL-FREE 1-800-228-2105. During this special phone order promotion purchasers of a six-week supply of Cal-Ban 3000 will receive, absolutely free, a beautiful 24" double strand necklace of sparkling Chinese Faux pearls.

Jurors

The quick fix produced some interesting results. Included in the new jury pool were two high school students and Al Nichols, director of the Pitt-Greenville Convention and Visitors Bureau, who was heading back to work from the post office when he was stopped by deputies. Though he said he would have liked to serve, he was excused because he must be out of town this week for a meeting.

Currin's order also called for Pitt County Data Processing to randomly select 50 additional names, and deputies summoned those individuals Monday afternoon and evening. With a jury now selected for a drug trial in Currin's court, the remaining prospective jurors were to be sent to civil court this morning for jury selection in a medical malpractice suit.

Sandra Gaskins, Pitt clerk of court, said Pitt County Data Processing goes over driver's license lists and voter registration lists to compile a jury pool. The list is updated every two years, she said, but there is enough movement among residents and transients to occasionally cause a low supply of jurors.

Of the 92 people that did not report Monday, 31 were categorized as "not found," meaning they had moved or left the county and could not be located by deputies at the address given by Data Processing. Eight persons called were not Pitt residents; two people called were dead, and one person had served on a jury within the last two years and was not eligible to serve.

When there are so many jurors unavailable, a judge may have to order deputies to round up more.

"I don't think that's the best way to do it, but it's up to the judge, and sometimes it's the only way to do it, when you need a jury," Ms. Gaskins said.

When there are two courts in session, a standing order from Resident Superior Court Judge David E. Reid Jr. of Greenville calls for 140 prospective jurors to be summoned. If there is one court, 110 are summoned; if there is a criminal session and a grand jury to be picked, 130 are summoned. With two courts and a grand jury Monday, the jury pool fell short, Mrs. Clark said.

Of the 92 no-shows, 16 were excused from duty prior to Monday. Eight of those were excused because they were over 65 years of age, two were excused by Ms. Gaskins, and two were excused by Chief District Court Judge E. Burt Aycock Jr. of Greenville, according to the jury printout. There was no reason given why four others were excused.

Fifteen no-shows had their jury duty deferred to another week of court later this year.

There was no information on 19 of the no-shows. The letter summoning them for jury duty was not returned to the Sheriff's Department, and Mrs. Clark said most of those would likely be categorized as "not found."

day for planting corn, and peanut planting season should be under way. We have so much that needs to be done that we're not going to have the labor and equipment and time to do all at one time," he said.

Smith said he believes that the tobacco already in the field has probably not experienced too many detrimental effects yet. It's the plants large enough to go to the field that haven't been transplanted that he's worried about.

"They're getting too big on the beds," he said. "We already had a shortage of plants because germination wasn't what it usually is because of wet weather earlier in the season. We really need the plants we've got now to survive."

Mayo Allen, public works director in Greenville, said several neighborhoods are flooded. He said virtually all public works staff from every division were working on cleaning out ditches this morning.

"And it works," he said. "We cleaned out a ditch in Baywood this morning and in 30 minutes the water level out there had dropped 12 inches."

City Manager Greg Knowles, who rode with Allen this morning inspecting flood conditions, appealed to citizens to refrain from placing tree branches, lawn clippings and other debris in ditches. He and Allen agreed that dumping of such debris in ditches during the recent ice storms apparently restricted water flow and contributed to the extensive flooding the city is experiencing now.

"We have a storm sewer system that is very adequate under normal conditions," Allen said. "But it's not up to this kind of rainfall, coupled with clogged ditches. We're cleaning out a lot now, hopefully preventing problems for the future."

"If we can get the citizens' cooperation, we should be in great shape," Knowles said.

State roads in Pitt County have been greatly affected by high water, said Fred Edwards, Department of Transportation maintenance engineer for Pitt.

Legal Advice

Pitt County lawyers will observe 1989 Law Week by giving the public free legal advice. Six to eight lawyers have volunteered to set up shop at The Plaza mall from 10 a.m. until 1 p.m., Saturday.

The Ask-A-Lawyer program is a goodwill gesture by members of the local bar, said Mark W. Owens III, local chairman of the project jointly sponsored by the Young Lawyers Section of the North Carolina Bar Association as well as the Pitt County Bar.

The lawyers will offer information about what the law says about a given problem, advise people accordingly, estimate possible cost of following through with the problem, and refer them to an appropriate referral service or public agency most qualified to tackle the problem.

Summer Program

MIT Study Says U.S. Productivity Growth Hinges On Change

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Restoring U.S. competitiveness demands grass-roots changes by companies, labor unions, schools and workers, concludes a two-year MIT study released today.

While government has a role to play, changes that come from the bottom up are essential to improving the nation's lagging rate of productivity growth, says the study by scientists, engineers and economists at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The report, called "Made In America," pegs weakness in American industry as the biggest threat to the nation's standard of living and security.

"To live well, a nation must produce well," said the study, which is being released as a 344-page hard-cover book.

Among the three principal authors is Robert Solow, who won the 1987 Nobel Memorial Prize in Economic Science and is vice chairman of MIT's Commission on Industrial Productivity.

The others are Michael L. Dertouzos, chairman of the commission and a professor of electrical engineering and computer science, and Richard K. Lester, executive director of the commission and an associate professor of nuclear engineering.

In an optimistic conclusion, the study says that if the right steps are taken, "this nation has every chance of entering the 21st century displaying the same dynamism that characterized its industrial performance throughout much of the present century."

The study differs from many others in that it does not focus on such economic issues as the high cost of capital in the United States and the shortage of national savings.

Instead, it focuses on what it calls an excessive concern with short-term profits; outdated corporate strategies that focus too much on mass production and the domestic American market, and lack of cooperation within and among U.S. companies.

It also blames neglect of people, technological failures in translating discoveries into products, and unwise public policies.

For industry, the main recommendation is to focus on steady, continuous improvements in the production process. That involves meeting customers' demands for higher quality, faster delivery and more custom-tailoring.

To hurry things along, companies should go to work on designing products and the processes for making them before the research and development is even complete, the study says.

Suppliers should be treated as allies rather than adversaries, the study says. Since the economy is becoming global, managers should know more about foreign cultures and ways of doing business, it says.

Companies should cultivate a work force that is more involved in the company's welfare, less specialized, and continuously learning, the study says.

Labor representatives should be accepted as "legitimate and valued partners in the innovation process," the report asserts.

But it also says traditional labor-union stands on work rules, job security and compensation "need to be revised to fit a world of changing technologies, international competition and a more educated work force."

For government, it recommends taking steps to raise private savings and cut the federal budget deficit; opening foreign markets; making labor laws more flexible; supporting research and development; and making military spending more efficient.

It also recommends using tax and credit legislation to make it harder and more expensive to raise large sums of money for corporate takeovers and buyouts.

On education, it says government should get schools to promote "technological literacy" and encourage companies to do more on-the-job education and training.

The study acknowledges that many companies are too small to do extensive education and training, while others are afraid that employees will quit and take their newly acquired skills elsewhere.

In contrast, the study says, West German and Japanese employers feel they have a stake in maintaining a national reservoir of skilled workers.

It is unlikely that American employers will ever feel that way, but incentives could be devised to bring about the same result, the study says.

The main thrust of the study is how to improve the output of American factories. Ford Motor Co. and Xerox Corp. are cited as examples of companies that snapped back in the 1980s in the face of stiff foreign competition.

"The United States, with a fourth of worldwide production and consumption, cannot live off its research alone," the study says.

German Police, Leftists Clash

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BERLIN — Up to 2,000 militant leftists left a May Day street festival in West Berlin and clashed with police into early today, smashing windows, overturning cars and leaving more than 320 officers injured, authorities said.

Hesse State radio called it the worst violence in West Berlin in the 1980s.

The young leftist protesters, many of them wearing black hoods to hide their identities, had broken off from the street festival in the Kreuzberg district to take part in the violence.

Several vehicles, including police vehicles, were turned over by the protesters and set afire, police said.

West Berlin police, in a statement to the news media, said 322 policemen were injured in the rampaging, at least 14 of them hospitalized for treatment. The statement said 16 people were arrested.

At least 120 police vehicles called in to quell the rioting were damaged by rocks or firebombs and windows and doors of more than 100 buildings were smashed in the melee, police said.

There was no immediate estimate of damage, and cleanup crews were still working this morning to clear Kreuzberg streets of rubble left behind by the rioting.

West Berlin's Kreuzberg district, which is home to many leftist and student groups, has often been the scene of disturbances over the years.

Holocaust Recalled

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM — Nazi Holocaust survivor Leah Zonershein choked back tears today as she read aloud the names of her parents, Chaim and Hannah, who perished in a World War II concentration camp.

She was one of hundreds of people who took part in memorials throughout the country at which names of the 6 million Jewish victims were being read on Israel's national day of mourning for the Holocaust.

Sirens sounded at 10 a.m. throughout the country. Thousands of Israelis paid tribute by halting traffic or stopping in their tracks and bowing their heads for the two-minute wail of the sirens.

Polish-born Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, who lost his family in the Holocaust, was expected to read names later today at Parliament in keeping with this year's theme of personal remembrance.

Names also were read aloud at army bases, schools and following prayers at Judaism's holiest shrine, the Western Wall, the remnant of the ancient Jewish temple in Jerusalem's walled Old City.

Rodriguez Elected

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ASUNCION, Paraguay — Gen. Andres Rodriguez, who ousted strongman Alfredo Stroessner three months ago, was elected president by an overwhelming margin and his party kept control of congress, unofficial returns showed today.

The leaders and presidential candidates of four opposition parties denounced what they said were "shameful irregularities" in Monday's voting and did not concede defeat.

Foreign observers and diplomats agreed that there were irregularities, but said the balloting was reasonably fair and that victory clearly belonged to Rodriguez, who had been Stroessner's No. 2 man.

"We promise our people that we will carry Paraguay on a bright path to its destiny of greatness and happiness," a grinning Rodriguez said in a champagne toast to party members late Monday at his chateau-style mansion.

His Colorado Party has ruled this landlocked country of 4 million people since 1947.

Domingo Laino, the presidential candidate of the Authentic Radical Liberal Party and a former exile, finished second.

In initial official returns released early today Rodriguez tallied 22,201 of the 29,293 votes for president, or 75.8 percent, and the Colorados garnered 19,883, or 68.4 percent, of 29,064 votes for congress.

The Colorados said their partial count showed that of 1,048,299 votes for president, Rodriguez received 778,479, or 74.3 percent. Official and unofficial tallies gave Laino about 20 percent of the vote.

The Colorados received 741,583 votes of 1,007,548 cast for congress, or 73.6 percent, according to the party's count.

Tallies by the Christian Democratic Party and a coalition of sociological research firms had lower totals, but also showed one-sided counts in favor of Rodriguez and the Colorados.

Give Children Contributing Role In The Family

By Raymond E. Webster

Competent families have several characteristics which lead to social adjustment and successful educational achievement in their children. These families have clearly defined values governing their lives, influencing their behavior and their decision-making.

There is also an attitude of emotional security and respect for each family member, especially from parent to child. Children are confident that their parents will be there for them during difficult times, as well as share with them during happy times.

These families also begin, early on, to teach that each child has an important, contributing role to the family. The children learn to become self-reliant, flexible, confident and responsible for their age.

There are a number of strategies parents can use to foster this kind of climate in the family.

Perhaps the most important strategy is to be sure that children know exactly what is expected in various social situations. Parents should be concrete when discussing their expectations.

Parents must also be sure that they're expecting behavior that is appropriate to a child's ability. In other words, it's reasonable for parents to expect children to keep their own rooms clean and neat, but a 3-year-old child would be expected to do this in a very different way from a 10-year-old.

The 3-year-old would be expected to put toys away, and will probably need some help and some modeling from his parent to do this successfully. The 10-year-old would be expected to have the same responsibility, but could clean his room with one directive from the parent.

In each case, the child is contributing to the overall operation of the family. How much the child contributes is based on his age.

Once parents set expectations, they must insist the expectations be met. And if they aren't, the child should face consequences which are predictable, consistent with the offense, and given close to the time the misbehavior occurs.

Punishing a child two or three days after a misbehavior can be confusing, and usually won't prevent the misbehavior from happening again. Shouting, name-calling and verbal threats won't work, either. Instead they leave a child with feelings of anger or rejection.

It is also important that the consequences be given each time the child

Your Mental Health

misbehaves. Not doing this confuses the child; he may interpret a parents' inconsistency to mean that it's sometimes acceptable to misbehave. And it is hard for the child to know when misbehavior will be punished and when it won't be punished.

Having consequences for misbehaviors is important, but it is even more important to give children clear, tangible expressions of love and acceptance when they do comply with parental expectations.

Many parents offer concrete rewards to their children, a practice which is appropriate, but does not take the place of personal attention, warmth and recognition. Everyone needs to develop intimate relationships with others and feel valued by them. The most important intimate relationship in their lives should be that with their parents.

Children require quality time in quantity. Spend time listening to their ideas and thoughts and praising and encouraging them. These kinds of interactions instill a basic sense of self-worth and personal value.

Finally, how parents talk to their children can effect the kind of relationship developed throughout their lives together.

When disciplining or correcting a child, try to use a calm voice. Don't use words which debase or abuse the child. Using obscene language, abusive names and shouting only show the child that a parent is out of control. It is often necessary to raise your voice to get a child's attention, but raising one's voice is quite different from screaming.

Once the child's attention is focused on the parent by making direct eye contact — or at least having his face turned toward the parent — the misbehavior should be explained clearly, briefly and with words the child can understand.

This should be followed by an explanation of the consequences and then by giving the child the consequences. The process should take no longer than 20 to 40 seconds, because if it goes longer, the child frequently is no longer listening — especially if he or she is younger than 10.

Raising a family is extremely difficult. It is complicated by economic, social and work pressures, and it becomes easy for adults to express their frustrations at children.

Having behavior management systems in place encourages children to assume active and meaningful roles in the family. It also fosters increased responsibility and gives parents and children a structure to deal quickly and concretely with misbehaviors. That can reduce added stress which ultimately could erode the integrity of the family.

Airplanes Now U-Hauls Of The Skies

Air travel has inspired a new slogan of the '80s: "Home — Don't Leave Home Without It." Airplanes are the new U-Hauls of the skies. Anything you can stuff in bags, jam in a box, hold together with string or put on wheels and drag finds its way into the passenger cabin. I've seen people bring computers, vacuum sweepers, sombreros the size of a wading pool, surfboards, cartons of live lobster, strollers, spears and wedding cakes. It's probably my imagination, but I can almost hear Neil Diamond in the background singing "America."

Another slogan airline travel has inspired is, "One suitcase worn next to your body is worth three that have been checked through." I see it all the time: people struggling desperately to hang onto their luggage as if they're fighting for custody of their children.

The airlines are fighting a losing battle. No longer do passengers buy the old blocking-the-aisle routine. Face it: a pregnant woman, a beverage cart, a chewing gum wrapper could block the aisle. They can no longer threaten us, because we have been born again. We have seen the light. We have stood at the carousels watching the last bag being spewed up from the conveyer belt and it is not ours. We have slept in Buffalo in February in our underwear too many times. The innocence is gone.

Every time I check in and an agent grabs my luggage and says, "We can check this to your final destination." I laugh that bitter little laugh and say, "Don't toy with me."

I know I'm a voice crying out in the wilderness, but wise up, airlines. Take out those stupid flotation pillows that don't float anyway and let us sit on our luggage. Or open up the belly of the plane, call it a lower level, put in a few windows, and let us sit down there with our pets and our bags. Who knows, we might all get there together.

Full-Time Father Raises His Children On His Own

Dear Abby: I've been writing this letter off and on for two years — and I'm finally sending it. Many times I've read about women who have been left to raise their children alone. What about men whose wives have deserted them? I'm the third one I know of in my town. Is this a new trend?

My wife left me with four children to raise. I would like to have companionship, but when a woman hears that I have four children, she says, "four children — you must pay a lot of child support!"

I say, "No, I have custody." Then she says, "That's too much for me to handle. Goodbye."

Abby, I love my children, and if it means giving them up in order to date, I'll stay single. I wonder how many other men out there are in the same boat? — Full-Time Father in Columbus, Ohio

Dear Father: Have you never heard of Parents Without Partners? There must be some single mothers in your area who wouldn't mind joining forces with you.

To locate the PWP group nearest you, send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Parents Without Partners, 8807 Colesville Road, Silver Spring, Md. 20910.

Then get a sitter and go to those PWP meetings. You sound like a high-quality man. Don't be discouraged. A woman who would count you out because you have children probably would have been a poor mother for your motherless quartet. Keep looking.

Confidential To Whom It May Concern — Which Means All Of Us: Federal spending on the elderly has nearly doubled since 1960. In 1986, $270 billion (or 26 percent of the federal budget) was of direct benefit to older Americans. About 81 percent of this amount was for Social Security, Medicare or Medicaid benefits.

DeLeon Gets 2nd Shutout By Blanking Padres, 6-0

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Despite pitching his second shutout in his last three starts, Jose DeLeon had very little to say — about himself that is.

But he was plenty talkative about his St. Louis Cardinals teammates.

"I've never played on a team like this one," DeLeon said after pitching a six-hitter Monday night in a 6-0 victory over the San Diego Padres. "This is a good team. If you keep the ball inside the ballpark and it's not in the gap, somebody is going to catch it."

DeLeon, 5-1, allowed six hits, struck out eight and walked one in his 50th career victory.

"I got a little bit tired," said DeLeon, who threw 131 pitches. "I threw a lot of pitches at the beginning of the game and I thought I wasn't going to last that long, but this is great weather to pitch in."

The weather didn't help San Diego starter Bruce Hurst, however.

"I just didn't feel like I had anything tonight," said Hurst, 3-2, who allowed six runs on 10 hits over seven innings. "I couldn't get the ball down in the strike zone. I was making bad pitch after bad pitch."

The Cardinals scored five runs on six hits to pull away in the sixth, just in the nick of time as DeLeon saw it.

DeLeon was nursing a 1-0 lead going into the bottom of the fifth when the Padres loaded the bases with one out.

He helped create the jam when he threw away Hurst's sacrifice bunt for the first Cardinal error in 60 innings. But DeLeon saved himself and possibly the game when he got Roberto Alomar to ground to shortstop Ozzie Smith for an easy double play.

Then came the top of the sixth, when the Cardinals scored five times en route to their sixth straight victory.

"There is no doubt about it, that was the key right there," DeLeon said. "They came right back and scored five runs for me the next inning."

Terry Pendleton started the rally when he reached on a fielder's choice, moved to second on Pedro Guerrero's single and came home on a single by Tom Brunansky.

Jose Oquendo then singled to load the bases and Milt Thompson walked to force in a run. Tony Pena followed with a two-run single and Thompson scored on right fielder John Kruk's error.

Thompson led off the third with a single, moved to second on a sacrifice and scored on Vince Coleman's single.

In his last 35 1-3 innings, DeLeon has allowed just four earned runs. He lowered his earned run average to 1.61.

Reds 19, Expos 6

Chris Sabo had four hits and four RBIs, Paul O'Neill drove in five runs and Jeff Reed had five hits as Cincinnati amassed the most runs ever scored against Montreal.

The Reds had 21 hits, the most they have managed since 1980. It was the most runs for the Reds since Sept. 15, 1987, when they beat Atlanta 21-6. The 19 runs eclipsed Montreal's record of allowing 17, set in a 1972 loss to Houston.

Second baseman Tom Foley was Montreal's fourth pitcher. He relieved Joe Hesketh, who gave up nine runs and six hits in 1 1-3 innings, and allowed a two-run homer to Reed in the eighth. Foley then got Ron Oester to ground out to end the inning.

Barry Larkin and O'Neill had three hits each for the Reds, who were without Manager Pete Rose. He remained in his Montreal hotel with the flu. Coach Tommy Helms managed the team.

Mets 3, Braves 1

Dwight Gooden raised his record to 5-0 by allowing six hits in seven innings as New York handed Atlanta its seventh straight loss.

Gooden struck out two and walked two as he upped his lifetime record to 96-35, a .733 winning percentage.

Gooden slightly turned his left ankle in the seventh inning while trying to field a slow roller, causing a slight delay while he had it taped in the dugout.

It was the seventh victory in eight games for the Mets, who had a six-game winning streak snapped at Houston on Sunday.

Roger McDowell pitched the last two innings for his fourth save.

The Mets took a 1-0 lead in the third on Howard Johnson's RBI double. Johnson has hit in eight straight games, going 14-for-33.

Dodgers 1, Pirates 0

Pinch hitter Mickey Hatcher scored Mike Davis with a bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the ninth inning as Los Angeles ended a four-game losing streak.

Davis, who earlier broke out of a 2-for-17 drought with a pair of singles, drew a leadoff walk against starter Doug Drabek, 1-3. After Eddie Murray's second single of the game put runners at first and third, Mike Scioscia was intentionally walked.

Drabek, who surrendered only four hits while going the distance for the second time this year, struck out John Shelby. But Hatcher, batting for Jeff Hamilton, lifted a fly ball to center field, and Davis easily beat the off-line throw by R.J. Reynolds.

The victory went to reliever Jay Howell, 2-1, who escaped a bases-loaded, no-out jam in the top of the ninth.

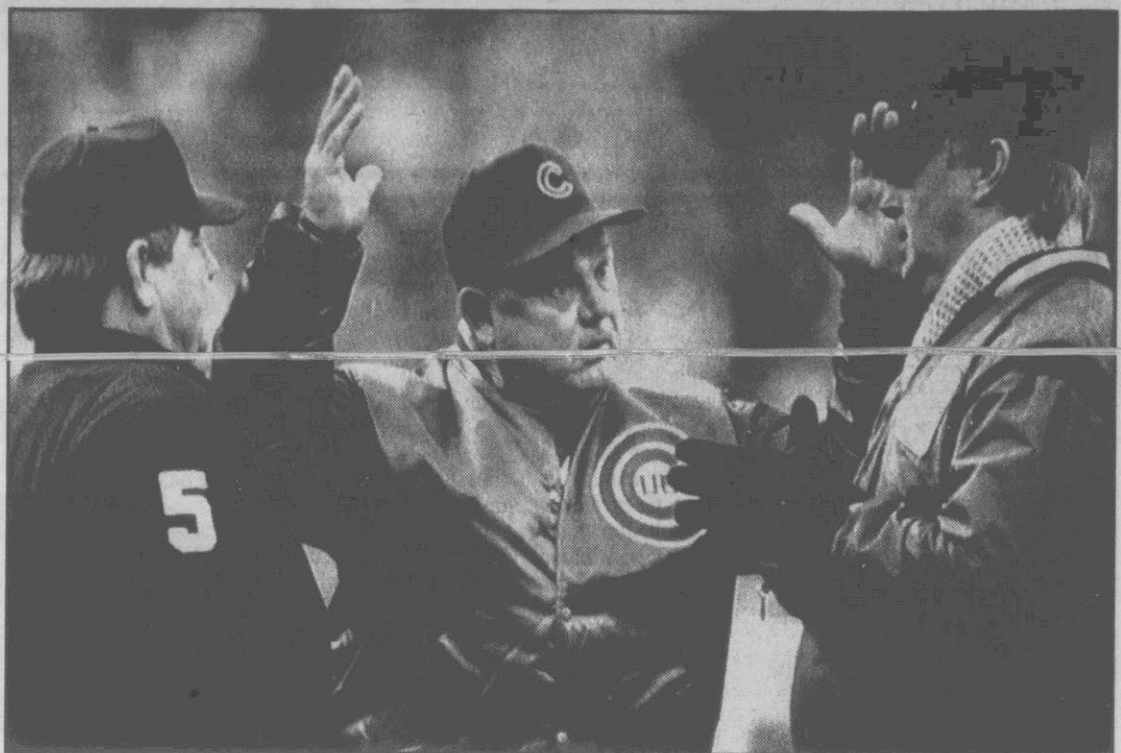

Mike Morgan pitched eight shutout innings for Los Angeles, allowing five hits, striking out seven, walking none and lowering his league-leading earned run average to 0.82.

Cubs 4, Giants 3

Damon Berryhill, just off the disabled list, led off the 12th inning for Chicago with a home run.

Mike LaCoss, 1-2, gave up the homer on a 2-1 pitch. Jeff Pico, 1-0, pitched three hitless innings for the victory and Calvin Schiraldi retired the Giants in the bottom of the 12th for his second save.

Berryhill was playing in his first game since he was recalled from the Cubs' Class AAA Iowa affiliate following a rehabilitation assignment.

Big South Needs More Schools To Qualify For An NCAA Bid

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. — NCAA executive director Dick Schultz says the Big South Conference should look to Division I schools for added membership if it wants a shot at an automatic bid for the association's 64-team field tournament.

Schultz and the 14-member Executive Committee of the National Collegiate Athletic Association are meeting at Kingston Plantation through today to discuss financial and championship matters, including the use of smokeless tobacco by athletes at NCAA championships, and the organization's drug-testing program and related team-eligibility sanctions.

Recent NCAA legislation has extended the length of time conferences joining Division I must wait before becoming eligible for automatic berths into the tournament's 64-team field.

The NCAA's executive committee last year approved an eight-year waiting period for a conference joining Division I to become eligible for an automatic bid to the NCAA basketball championships, Schultz said.

However, the committee would not comment Monday on actions taken during the nine-hour meetings, which adjourned at 5 p.m.

"Until the committee is officially adjourned," Schultz said, "we don't release or make any comments on the actions."

Schultz did, however, comment on automatic bids for the NCAA basketball tournament and how they might affect the seven Big South Conference schools. The tournament has 30 automatic bids, but will expand to 31 bids in 1991 and 32 the following season, Schultz said.

"An automatic bid after 1991 won't mean the same thing as it did before because there are only 30 conferences and 30 automatic bids," he said. "The whole automatic bid thing is changing because in 1991, it will be the first year that we will have more than 30 conferences eligible for automatic bids."

Conferences such as the Big South, which joined Division I before 1988, and the Trans America Athletic have a five-year waiting period before they can become eligible for an automatic bid to the NCAA basketball tournament. The Big South became a Division I member in 1986, which means it could receive an automatic bid to the NCAA tournament as early as 1991.

Davidson College, a Division I independent school in basketball, and the College of Charleston, a member of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA), have expressed interest in joining the Big South. The possibility of Davidson joining the league has lost some steam in recent months, with the Wildcat basketball program searching for a new head coach to replace Bobby Hussey, who resigned in April.

However, for the conference to remain on track for 1991 automatic-bid eligibility, the College of Charleston could not join.

"As long as the schools that make up that conference are all Division I, they would not fall into that (eight-year waiting period)," Schultz said. "If they allowed the College of Charleston to come in, that could throw that whole conference under the eight-year program."

The eight-year period would begin when the new school joins the conference, regardless of when the conference gained Division I status.

Schultz also discussed, briefly, the NCAA's stance on drug testing and steroid use. Those topics have become well-publicized nationally and statewide by the recent allegations of steroid use at the University of South Carolina.

Current sanctions for drug use are only against the individual. But the sanctions might be extended to the team soon.

"We test thousands of athletes each year, and about one percent have been declared ineligible," Schultz said. "We're into a voluntary, off-season testing program now to see if people are taking steroids and the results of that have been very good."

"One of the things the executive committee will be considering is whether or not the sanctions should be team sanctions. There are no team sanctions now, but unless the Executive Committee presents something, there would automatically be team sanctions in January."

"There are some concerns about the fairness of that and whether the whole team should be penalized for the indiscretions of the individual."

Carlesimo... Debut For Lumina Monte Carlo SS To Be Replaced

that P.J. feels comfortable knowing that he can stay here and achieve at a high level."

Newton said Virginia coach Terry Holland had been granted permission to talk to Kentucky officials, but Newton refused to name any other coaches being considered.

"P.J.'s withdrawal as a candidate was a disappointment to me because I think he possesses so many of the things we're looking for," Newton said.

"I understand P.J.'s reasoning. I had a good visit with him the last couple of weeks and knew when it got down to making a move, the family ties, the extreme loyalty he developed at Seton Hall because of their hanging with him through some tough times — you know, I understand that exactly. I had the same feeling when I was at Alabama. Those were the kinds of qualities that made him a good candidate," Newton said.

Carlesimo, 107-112 in seven years at Seton Hall, guided the Pirates within one point of a national championship last month, losing to Michigan 80-79 in overtime. The 31-7 season was their best since 1952-53, and Carlesimo earned his second straight Big East Coach of the Year award.

The turnaround in the Seton Hall program came a little more than a year after the school's student government called for Carlesimo's ouster. However, Keating stood by the embattled coach and the Pirates finished the 1987-88 season with a rush, ending at 22-13 and making the NCAA tournament for the first time ever.

TALLADEGA, Ala. — The Chevrolet Lumina will be eligible for their first race in Sunday's Winston 500, and the handful of drivers with the new cars will be among those going after a record purse.

The Lumina, the first model in NASCAR history to gain midseason eligibility, will replace the Monte Carlo SS, used since 1983.

Dale Earnhardt, Dave Allison, Darrell Waltrip, Geoff Bodine, Ken Schrader and Dave Marcis have switched to Lumina. Other Chevrolet users are sticking with the Monte Carlo until they can get the necessary parts to convert to Lumina.

With qualifying rounds Thursday and Friday, 50 drivers will be going after the 40 starting spots in Sunday's race at Talladega Superspeedway.

The awards for the race total $757,197, the most since the track opened in 1969. However, to collect $53,200 of that, a driver would have to win the pole position and the race itself.

Waltrip, Bodine and Earnhardt tested the Lumina at Talladega in April.

"It is the most comfortable car I've ever driven," Waltrip said. "It is a much more stable car than the Monte Carlo."

Bodine had a test lap of 189.136 mph, followed by 188.541 by Earnhardt and 188.385 by Waltrip.

"You have to understand that these are brand new cars, that there is still an awful lot of work to be done on them, a lot of little tricks to make them a little bit faster," Waltrip said.

Earnhardt predicted that the Lumina "are going to win a lot of races."

Waltrip has an extra incentive Sunday. A victory would give him an additional $100,000 for being the first driver to win two legs of the four-race Winston million. As the winner of the Daytona 500 in a Monte Carlo, he is the only driver eligible for the bonus. The other two races in the competition are the Coca Cola 600 at Charlotte and the Southern 500 at Darlington. If any driver wins three of the four, he gets $1 million.

Race week at Talladega starts Wednesday with practice rounds for an ARCA race Saturday and the Winston 500. Qualifying for both races will take place Thursday and Friday.

Phil Parsons won last year's Winston 500, which brought him $86,850, and will have his Oldsmobile on hand to try for a repeat victory.

Actress Apologizes, Asks Nurses To Help Save Show

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

UNION, N.J. — The dessert and hot topic was cheesecake. "Nightingales" star Suzanne Pleshette ate it as real-life nurses told her how not to portray them as the confection.

Miss Pleshette also apologized for the NBC-TV series' portrayal of nurses as doctor-chasing airheads, and asked for their help: Save Our Show.

"You're looking at a hit show that's about to be canceled as a result of the controversy," the actress said. "Unfortunately, now the nurses are in a position to undo what they've done. They have to save us."

"Unless every nurse who wrote a letter before can fax a letter to NBC in the next two days, we may be over and out," said Miss Pleshette, who portrays the "den mother" to a group of sex-kitten nurses.

Miss Pleshette and co-producer Douglas Cramer met with nurses at Union Hospital on Monday to discuss how the program could portray nurses more realistically.

"We want the show kept on the air and to reflect nursing and health care as it could be," said Patricia Lynch, nursing administrator at the 201-bed hospital in this town 30 miles west of New York City.

The program, which premiered in January and is broadcast on Wednesday nights, has been criticized for demeaning the nursing profession in particular and women generally by portraying five student nurses as lusty bimbos. The program often shows them in racy lingerie, bouncy aerobic workouts and locker-room disrobing sessions.

The 189,000-member American

Nurses Association organized a massive letter-writing protest, and sponsors including Chrysler Corp. and Sears, Roebuck and Co. have withdrawn advertisements from the show.

NBC is expected to decide whether to renew the show within two weeks.

Last week, executive producer Aaron Spelling said the series would show less skin and more nurses working in uniform if NBC brings it back next season. He also said he would hire a nursing adviser to help the show depict more realistic situations.

Barbara Wright, executive director of the New Jersey State Nurses Association, which has joined in the protest against the show, said the group has been encouraged by the response to their complaints.

"We would certainly want to consider any ways that things could be modified and create a positive image," she said in a telephone interview.

Ms. Lynch said she invited Miss Pleshette and Cramer to Union Hospital because she believed the staff could provide constructive criticism. They talked over a private lunch of shrimp cocktail, followed by cheesecake.

"We consider a show in its first season a work in progress," Miss Pleshette said at a news conference.

"We do not deny and we never deny that we made some mistakes."

After the show's initial episodes, Miss Pleshette said, she objected to the garter belts and bras the actresses wore and ordered "appropriate" undergarments.

Changes were made but did not appear on television for about four episodes, and well after the protests began, because of the lag in airing prime-time programs, she said.

Panel Says 'Trash' Shows Touch Issues

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — The "Morton Downey Jr." show and other interview programs with a bent for the weird and rowdy have a place in television because they put viewers in touch with issues, defenders of so-called "Trash TV" say.

And even if they're just plain bizarre, shows like "Crime Time" that feature ex-felons singing, dancing or cooking also deserve to be aired in a free society, a panel of producers, journalists and advertisers said Monday during a lively discussion of television from "MASH" to "Trash" at the National Association of Broadcasters convention.

In a session that at times threatened to veer into a "Downey"-brook, Morton Downey's producer, Bill Boggs, crossed swords with outraged audience members who said Downey was lowering TV standards.

"We're not yelling and hollering about transvestites and mud wrestling," Boggs said. "We're dealing with issues."

"We're raising our voice about things that are on the front page of the L.A. Times, the New York Times and Washington Post."

He said the issues Downey treats, such as gun control, politics and the Ku Klux Klan, would generate heated arguments in many homes.

As for Downey's style, he said in a loud voice, "What is wrong with people raising their voice?"

David Crook, a TV writer for the Los Angeles Times, said there is a big difference between talk shows of the 1960s and Geraldo Rivera's show on Monday, which visited Nevada's notorious Mustang Ranch house of prostitution.

Crook said Downey and Geraldo were providing "an interesting counter" to traditional journalism and were getting "people on the street" to discuss issues.

Boggs agreed, saying, "Our guy has broken the mold of the polite host who's being neutral."

Federal analyst Vladimir Ekzarkhov will make his debut in Broadway-style musical

Bureaucrat Turns Opera Singer At Night

By Robert M. Andrews
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — He's a federal bureaucrat by day, an opera singer by night and soon to be making his debut in a Broadway-style musical.

"I understand how Clark Kent feels," says Vladimir Ekzarkhov.

After he leaves his 8 to 5 job as a mild-mannered government financial analyst, Ekzarkhov ducks into a dressing room and emerges as a theatrical version of Superman, playing dual roles as a Brooklyn dockhand and a New York cop in Arena Stage's recreation of "On the Town."

The hit 1944 musical created by the best in show business — music by Leonard Bernstein, book and lyrics by Betty Comden and Adolph Green, and choreography by Jerome Robbins — is the story of three sailors on 24-hour shore leave in New York City during World War II.

The Arena Stage production, which opens Thursday and will run through June 4, will be the first major revival of "On the Town" since 1971, at New York's City Center, and the first ever presented at a theater in the round. This production was underwritten by American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

Arena Stage has no orchestra pit, so musical director William Huckabay installed his 18 musicians under the stage and will conduct while peeking up at the actors and dancers through a manhole in the floor.

Ekzarkhov shows off his booming bass voice in the opening number, "I Feel Like I'm Not Out of Bed Yet," as a workman at the Brooklyn Navy Yard. At 6 feet 3 inches and 235 pounds, he's physically right for the part.

"It's a wonderful piece," he says. "The only bone I have to pick with Bernstein is that he didn't write at least 10 more pages."

Ekzarkhov, 42, is the son of Russian emigres who fled their homeland after the 1917 revolution and met in Austria, where they were married and Ekzarkhov was born. He was 5 when he and his parents moved to the United States and settled in Erie, Pa., home of a large Russian and Polish community.

"It was a comfortable place to grow up in," said Ekzarkhov. A high school pal was Fred Biletnikoff, who later earned fame as a star pass receiver for the Oakland Raiders.

Ekzarkhov learned to sing in the local Russian Orthodox church choir under the direction of his steelworker father. "They really like their basses to sing very low," he said.

He met his wife, Dusia, the daughter of Soviet emigres, at a New Year's Eve party in 1969 in Washington while he was on shore leave from the Navy. They still prefer to speak Russian at home after nearly 20 years of marriage.

The couple and their two young children spent 2½ satisfying years in the central Volga region of the Soviet Union, where Ekzarkhov was office manager for an Occidental Petroleum chemical plant, then returned to Washington and its Russian-speaking community for good.

Ekzarkhov recalls. "The people there looked exactly like the people I grew up with in Erie. In a way, we came home. Yet as Americans, we couldn't help noticing that our point of reference was America."

With a family to support and a mortgage to pay, Ekzarkhov took a job at the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, where he specializes in gas transmission rate cases.

"I'm not knocking my job," he says, "but it's not what I want on my tombstone."

Ekzarkhov discovered his true passion — singing — when he landed a job in the chorus of a local amateur opera production of Verdi's "Aida" 10 years ago. Encouraged by friends, voice teachers and auditions, including Soviet-born conductor Mstislav Rostropovich, he has sung with the Washington Opera, the Summer Opera Theater at Catholic University, the Opera Orchestra of New York, Opera Bel Canto and local oratorio societies.

"I'm right up against reality now," Ekzarkhov adds. "I'm at the point where I need an agent. You can't do anything in opera without an agent. I guess I never followed through because it would mean living out of a suitcase at very reduced pay."

He's clearly ready to take the plunge, though, whenever his persistent round of recitals, choral work, stage appearances and auditions finally pays off, either in opera or musical comedy.

"I've spent many lonely hours singing at the piano," says Ekzarkhov. "I keep saying to myself, 'What am I doing here? Who am I kidding?'"

"But then there's the ecstasy of being on stage and performing at this level. What's important is that the audience have this look on their faces. If you can get the audience to get a little wet in the eyes, you've gotten them. That's it!"

Ed Murrow, Bill Cosby Named To Hall Of Fame

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RADNOR, Pa. — Edward R. Murrow and Bill Cosby have been named by a TV Guide panel to the magazine's "TV Hall of Fame" for their lasting contributions to television.

The four-member panel, formed to honor broadcast and entertainment stars on television's 50th anniversary, gave Cosby and Murrow four votes each. Seven others also were voted in, the magazine said this week.

They were: Lucille Ball, Milton Berle and Carroll O'Connor each with three votes; and Walter Cronkite, Barbara Walters, Howard Cosell and Ted Koppel each with two.

Others receiving one vote and listed as honorable mentions by the magazine, were Bishop Fulton J. Sheen; Dr. Martin Luther King;

Joseph Welch, the lawyer who denounced Sen. Joseph McCarthy; Mike Wallace; Bill Moyers; Steve Allen; Bob Hope; James Garner; Dick Van Dyke; and Mary Tyler Moore.

The panel members were Fred Friendly, former CBS News president; Elton Rule, former president and chief executive officer of ABC Inc. and now president of the American Academy of Television Arts and Sciences Foundation; Fred Silverman, former NBC president who is now an executive producer; and producer David Wolper, who was responsible for such miniseries as "Roots" and "The Thorn Birds."

Murrow was at the top of the list because he "still is the benchmark by which all broadcast journalists are measured," said Friendly, who was Murrow's producer on CBS's "See It Now" program.

Jury Says Doctor Has Privacy Right

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
 CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas — Nine anti-abortion activists have been ordered to pay more than $800,000 in damages to a doctor who said he and his family suffered mental anguish because of demonstrations outside their home.
 "I believe in the right to picket, and I am an advocate of the First Amendment to the Constitution," Dr. Eduardo Aquino said after Monday's 10-2 jury verdict. "But anyone who abuses those rights should be penalized."
 Cliff Zarsky, one of two lawyers who represented the nine defendants without a fee, said he will move for a new trial, and if that fails, he will appeal the verdict.

 Jurors ruled that the peaceful protests caused mental anguish to Aquino, his wife, Mercedes, and their four children.
 The damages included $140,000 in past and future suffering of the couple and $170,000 in past and future suffering of the four children. A half million dollars in punitive damages was awarded for gross negligence in picketing the family home.
 State District Judge Jack Hunter scheduled a hearing today on whether to issue a permanent injunction against future picketing by the defendants.

Sunday Silence May Be Noisy

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Sunday Silence: The best of the rest, or better?

That's one question being asked as the countdown continues for Saturday's Kentucky Derby, a race that many feel will be the first step toward Triple Crown glory for the favored Easy Goer.

"I think my horse is just as good," said 76-year-old Charlie Whittingham, trainer of Sunday Silence. "One went West, the other East. I don't know which is the toughest, but I don't think the races out here may be as tough."

Whittingham, who has trained more than 500 stakes winners, an unprecedented feat, has his stable at Santa Anita Park in Arcadia, Calif., where Sunday Silence won the Santa Anita Derby on April 8 by a record 11 lengths.

Easy Goer made his mark in the East, winning the one-mile Gotham at Aqueduct in 1:32 2-5, one-fifth of a second off Dr.

Fager's 1966 world record, and the Wood over the same track two weeks later.

Neither horse has been overworked coming into the Derby. Easy Goer did not make his 3-year-old debut until March 4 in the Swale, winning by 10 lengths. Sunday Silence had his first 1989 outing on March 2 at Santa Anita and, like Easy Goer, has raced just three times as a 3-year-old.

Some trainers suggest that Shug McGaughey has trained Easy Goer too lightly going into the Derby. Ron McAnally, a California trainer who brought Hawkster here, said Easy Goer "beat nothing, a claiming horse," in the Wood.

"Our competition in California is much stiffer than New York," he said.

Asked the same question, McGaughey said Monday: "We got enough out of him in each of his races to move forward. He followed the plan I laid out for him."

Sunday Silence, meanwhile, remains the enigma of the field, which is expected to reach 14 or more. While Easy Goer is being touted as the next Secretariat, Sunday Silence has labored in the shadows.

Easy Goer went off a 1-9 favorite or better in the Wood, which was run in fractions of 48 3-5 for the half-mile and 1:13 2-5 for six furlongs. He wound up beating Rock Point by three lengths in 1:50 3-5 under a casual ride by Pat Day, and McGaughey said he was happy to see Easy Goer save something for the Derby.

Fractions for the Santa Anita Derby were 45 2-5 and 1:09 3-5 with Sunday Silence laying just off the lead. He beat Flying Continental by 11 lengths under Patrick Valenzuela in 1:47 3-5.

Whittingham says he sees a lot of similarities in the horses.

"When he's won, he's won very easily. Is Easy Goer a super horse? I don't know. The press thinks he is," Whittingham said.

Carlesimo Says No To Wildcats

Loyalty Key To His Decision

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SOUTH ORANGE, N.J. — Kentucky had everything to offer P.J. Carlesimo: money, a tradition-rich basketball program, a 23,000-seat arena and television and radio exposure unimaginable by a college basketball coach in the New York metropolitan area.

All Seton Hall could offer in return was loyalty. That was more than enough for Carlesimo.

Carlesimo, 39, completed days of soul-searching Monday by ending talks with the University of Kentucky and deciding to remain as the head basketball coach at Seton Hall, the school he took to the brink of a national championship just one year after students asked that he be fired.

Carlesimo said that neither money nor anticipated NCAA sanctions against Kentucky for alleged recruiting violations played a part in his decision.

"The factor was Seton Hall," Carlesimo said in an impromptu news conference as he walked to his car. "I really like it here. I've been treated well. Kentucky is the kind of a situation you have to look at. It never got as far as people speculated it did."

Both Kentucky athletic director C.M. Newton and Carlesimo said the job was never offered to Carlesimo during his visit to Lexington last week. Both agreed they talked about the job.

Carlesimo had been mulling a possible move to Kentucky since visiting the Lexington campus April 24 for more than a day of interviews.

The Associated Press initially quoted two unidentified sources that day as saying Carlesimo would accept the Kentucky job, but not until he talked to Seton Hall officials.

On Friday, however, one of the sources quoted in the original report said Carlesimo seemed to be having second thoughts about the job.

The same source also said Carlesimo never definitely accepted the job and it was never formally offered to him.

"I'm sure it's a tough decision for him to turn it down," Newton said in London, Ky., where he was attending an alumni gathering. "I admire him and I'm very appreciative that he didn't string us along. I think he had, and probably still does have, a very strong interest in Kentucky. But he's made his decision to stay where he is."

Carlesimo announced his decision after a locker room meeting with six returning players that lasted for three minutes.

"He sat down and evaluated his priorities and I guess his priorities are here," said Anthony Avent, who should be the Pirates' starting center next season. "All the money in the world can't make you happy."

The Kentucky job reportedly carries a $600,000 salary, more than twice the amount Carlesimo made at Seton Hall last season. The Wildcats' home court also is about 10 times bigger than the Pirates' Walsh Arena on the South Orange campus. Kentucky is the big game in town, as opposed to Seton Hall, which needed to go to the Final Four to get the total attention of the New York area media.

Those thoughts and the prestige of the Kentucky job made Carlesimo consider it seriously after his visit early last week.

Kentucky is trying to replace Eddie Sutton, who resigned under pressure in the wake of an NCAA investigation.

"I didn't know what I was going to do," said Carlesimo, who did not say anything to the media in the week after his meetings at Kentucky. "I didn't have anything to say that would be of substance."

Seton Hall athletic director Larry Keating said that school officials never offered Carlesimo more money to stay. They had talked about increasing his reported $250,000 salary after the Final Four appearance, but before Kentucky asked to speak with Carlesimo, Keating said.

"It was a very legitimate inquiry and a very difficult decision for him to make," Keating said. "I honestly believe that when he came back (from Kentucky) it was a 50-50 situation. Kentucky is one of the top three jobs in the country and they will be back to where they were. That's what made the decision so difficult."

Keating said he expects other schools to make overtures to Carlesimo in the future, but he added the decision to stay is a positive message.

"What I am happiest about is the statement this makes about Seton Hall," Keating said. "It reinforces that Seton Hall is a major college program in a big-time league, and

Four Teams Aim To End Series

Golden State, Detroit, New York, Phoenix All Seeking Third Victory

Four teams are set to close out their NBA first-round series, and some are wary of the possibility.

"Obviously, we are in good position ... but it takes three to win the series," said Golden State coach Don Nelson, whose Warriors are home to the Utah Jazz.

"You never know in that joint," Detroit's John Salley said of Boston Garden where the Pistons meet the Celtics. "We're going in there playing as if we're two down instead of two up."

Like Detroit, the New York Knicks and Phoenix Suns also won their first two games, but they all did it at home and now take to the road seeking a second-round berth. The Warriors, on the other hand, won their first two games on Utah's court.

Tonight, the Knicks will be at Philadelphia to battle the 76ers, the Pistons at Boston and the Suns at Denver. In tonight's other matchup, the Milwaukee Bucks will be at home against the Atlanta Hawks after the teams split their two games at Atlanta.

"I don't think the homecourt means anything. We went to their place and won," Milwaukee guard Ricky Pierce said.

On Wednesday, Cleveland will be at Chicago, Seattle at Houston and the Los Angeles Lakers at Portland, Seattle and the Lakers hold 2-0 leads, while Cleveland and Chicago split their first two games.

"We're not out of the fire yet," Golden State's Terry Teague said. "We got a break, and now we have a chance to go home. But they've been a great team all year. They have a chance to catch fire, too."

Utah's cause was hurt when John Stockton suddenly went cold, missing six straight shots in Game 2. And when Karl Malone was held scoreless in the final quarter, finishing with 37 points and 22 rebounds, Golden State prevailed 99-91.

"Usually, that's two points," Golden State's Winston Garland said of Stockton's jump shot. "He doesn't miss them too often, so we basically just lucked out."

Utah lost both visits to the Oakland Coliseum Arena during the regular season.

"We had the awards ceremony and everybody was putting us in the finals with Detroit," Malone said. "Who says Detroit's going to be there? And we definitely got our work cut out for us."

The Denver Nuggets, 35-6 at home during the regular season, will be without Fat Lever, out with a deep thigh bruise suffered late in the first quarter of Sunday night's game at Phoenix. Nuggets center Danny Schayes also aggravated his badly sprained ankle.

"We lost our morale for a while when Fat went down," Denver coach Doug Moe said. "Fat and Danny are O-U-T out for a while. If we can somehow or another get some small miracle and get it to a fifth game, they might be back for that."

Although Larry Bird has not played for Boston, the Pistons are still worried about the Celtics.

"We're still nervous about them," Detroit forward Bill Laimbeer said. "They're an outstanding club. They have great mental toughness."

The Pistons posted the NBA's best road record, 26-15, this season, including a split in Boston.

"We have everything on the line," Boston forward Reggie Lewis said. "We don't have anything to lose."

The Bucks are 31-10 at Milwaukee's Bradley Center this season, but they have lost three times to the Hawks.

"We've got to go up there and force the issue," Atlanta guard Glenn Rivers said. "It's disappointing. It weighs on my mind as a missed opportunity. We have to go to Milwaukee and play confidently, and hopefully we'll win the two there."

It was the way New York defeated Philadelphia, edging the 76ers with last-minute heroics.

"Right now, the way I feel I cannot put it in words," Charles Barkley said after the 76ers' last loss, when they blew a 10-point lead in the final 2:12. "We feel kind of empty. I can't tell you we're not devastated to lose like that."

The Knicks are thinking sweep.

"They can't play any harder than they did," Gerald Wilkins said. "Being up 2-0 feels good to us. Now we just need one to put it away."

Warriors' Richmond Is Top Rookie

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OAKLAND, Calif. — Don Nelson didn't figure Mitch Richmond would earn a lot of playing time in his first year in the NBA. It's about as wrong as the Golden State coach has been during the Warriors' surprising season.

Richmond, capitalizing on a preseason start he got partly by default on a team coming off a 20-62 year, started early and never left the lineup en route to averaging 22 points — 16th best in the league — 5.9 rebounds and 4.2 assists. On Monday, he was a near-unanimous choice as NBA Rookie of the Year.

Nelson maintained at a news conference at the Oakland Coliseum Arena that he still "hates" rookies. But in Richmond's case he decided to make an exception.

"I warned him that I bring rookies along very slowly, normally," Nelson said. "Fortunately, I didn't have to abide by the old rule."

He called the Warriors' first-round draft choice from Kansas State "as good as anybody I've ever coached" — high praise indeed from a man who had All-NBA players Marques Johnson and Sidney Moncrief during 11 years as coach of the Milwaukee Bucks.

Golden State's guard received 80 of 85 votes from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters in balloting for the Eddie Gottlieb Trophy.

Willie Anderson of the San Antonio Spurs received four votes and Chris Morris of the New Jersey Nets drew one from the media panel, composed of three from each league city and 10 representatives of the national media.

"I'm surprised that things happened so early for me," Richmond said. "This (award) is something very special to me, something I'll cherish."

The 6-foot-5, 225-pound Richmond, a member of the 1988 U.S. Olympic team, started all 79 games he played as the Warriors improved their record by 23 games. He helped the Warriors bounce back from a 20-62 record a year ago to a 43-39 mark and their second playoff berth in 12 years.

"He's got no weaknesses," said the Warriors' Chris Mullin. Mullin, who teamed with Richmond to form the league's highest-scoring duo this season at 48.6 points a game, calls Richmond "Rock" as in rock-solid.

"He plays both ends of the court — I think that says a lot about him. He's not just an offensive player, not just a guy who goes for the glory. He does all the dirty work."

Last summer, after the Warriors made him the fifth player taken in the draft, Richmond had an off-night when the Olympians were playing an NBA All-Star team coached by Nelson in Las Vegas. Worried about that and about Nelson's reputation as being hard-nosed with rookies, he approached him afterward and asked if he was still happy having picked him.

"He was questioning his own ability," Nelson recalled. "I tried to give him some confidence by saying, 'Absolutely. If you have a bad game or two where you're not playing consistently, don't worry about it. You're still going to be terrific.'"

Richmond started the season in a bit of a shooting slump, but finished as the league's 19th best 3-point shooter (37 percent) while earning a reputation as a strong all-around player.

An outstanding defensive player in college, he made a big impact on Nov. 29 when he guarded Chicago's Michael Jordan and outscored the NBA's two-time scoring champion 27 points to 26. He held Jordan to no field goals in the fourth quarter of a 109-99 Golden State victory.

"I felt pretty good after that game," he recalled. "I think my confidence level rose a little bit after that."

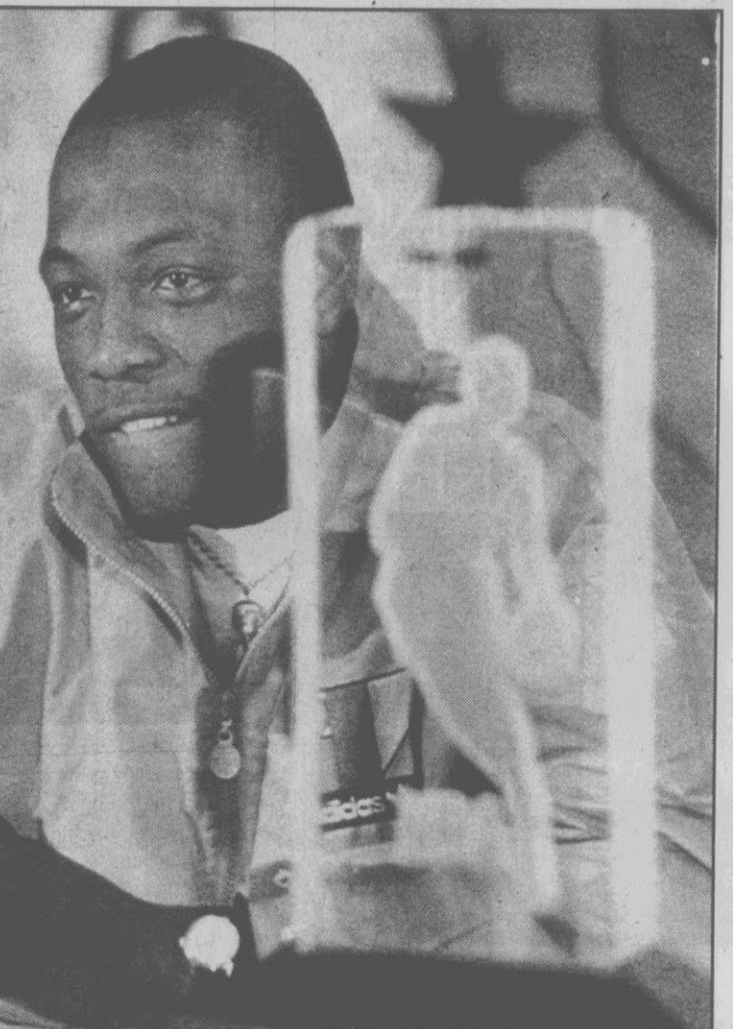

He had some of his best games in March.

In one week, he had 38 points and nine rebounds in a 120-114 victory over Cleveland, and a season-high 47 points in a 155-143 win over Sacramento.

On March 17 against Atlanta, he overcame a fourth-quarter back injury to score 16 of his team-high 36 in the final period and the first three in overtime of a 127-118 victory.

Two weeks later, in Golden State's most impressive road showing of the season, he scored 37 points in a stunning 134-114 win over the Knicks in New York.
