Education Secretary Says U.S. Schools Failing To Move Ahead

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — American education is stagnating by nearly every measure in a new comparison of school performance across the country, Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos said today in releasing the discouraging report card.

The sixth annual State Education Performance Chart shows a decline in the national high school graduation rate and falling scores on college entrance exams in half the states.

"We must do better. We must revitalize education in America" by setting targets for improvement, Cavazos said in a statement accompanying the report.

"We have not made any progress in the last three years," Cavazos elaborated in an interview on NBC's "Today" program. "It's hard to say why. I still believe that we have not focused on the fundamental issues of trying to get everybody involved in the education of children. It's not a matter of dollars."

"I'm going to write to every governor, to every school board president, I'm going to communicate with the leaders, the superintendents and all the people out there and say we must issue a challenge" to improve the schools, Cavazos said.

Performance targets include boosting high school graduation rates to 90 percent and cutting ir half the number of children who fail a grade.

"Today about 3,600 students will drop out of school ... I think it's a disaster that we must turn around," Cavazos said.

The performance chart, known as the "wall chart," shows a general lack of progress despite the continuing spate of reform efforts and ever-rising education spending — up to $3,977 per student on this year's chart compared to $3,756 last year.

National scores on the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) fell from 906 to 904 (on a scale of 400 to 1,600) from 1987 to 1988. Fully 14 of the 22 states in which the SAT is the dominant college entrance exam registered declines.

Most Pitt Customers Get Water

By Stuart Savage
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A water and sewer study commissioned by the Pitt County Board of Commissioners in 1988 says that 88 percent of the potential customers in the county now receive water from one of the water systems presently operating in the county.

But the report, presented to the board at a workshop meeting Tuesday, says only 57.4 percent of the potential sanitary sewer customers in the county receive service from the five existing wastewater systems.

The study, designed as a planning tool, was completed by Rivers and Associates of Greenville, and suggests that it might be an expensive undertaking to supply water and sewer service to those not now being served.

Gilbert Alligood of the Rivers firm, saying the report projects water and sewer needs for two five-year periods (1989-1994 or Phase I and 1994-1999 or Phase II), said there are approximately 34,856 potential water customers in Pitt County, including residential, commercial, institutional and industrial users. The 11 water systems and 14 private water systems, Alligood said, serve about 30,836 or 88 percent of the potential customers.

And the report says at least three water systems — GUC, Eastern Pines Water Corp. and Bell Arthur Water Corp. — plan to add 73.5 miles of water line to serve some 1,039 existing customers within the next five years.

That will leave about 2,981 unserved potential customers in the county, according to Alligood.

But that 8.6 percent of the total water customers in the county, Alligood said, is generally spread along rural, sparsely populated roads.

The report suggests a Phase I project to provide service along roads having 17 or more customers per

EPA Calls For Stronger Rules For Public Water

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Thousands of public water systems across the country will have to improve their purification equipment to reduce chemical contamination and comply with new Environmental Protection Agency standards.

The EPA on Tuesday proposed federally required ceilings on the maximum amounts of 38 types of cancer-causing chemicals and other pollutants allowed in drinking water.

Michael Cook, director of the EPA office which deals with drinking water contaminants, said most public water systems already meet the proposed requirements, but additional purification equipment will probably be needed in about 2,500 public systems, serving about 2 million people, mostly in rural areas.

In some cases households will be paying higher water bills — anywhere from $10 to $460 more a year — as a result, officials said, although the new requirements in many cases are unlikely to go into effect until 1991.

EPA said the size of consumer cost increases will depend on the size of the water system and the contaminant and treatment technology involved.

Affected systems account for about 3 percent of all the public water systems in the country, according to the EPA. Private well water is not covered by the regulations.

In addition, officials operating about 80,000 water systems likely will have to increase monitoring activities to comply with the new rules.

The new regulations require that local water officials regularly monitor the level of pollutants and make public whenever the levels exceed the federal standard.

Nuclear Pollution Released Into Air

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Radioactive releases from a government uranium processing plant in Ohio likely have been two to six times greater than estimated, and internal documents reveal a history of deceptive recordkeeping and inadequate pollution monitoring, a consultant reported today.

The findings involve a 1,050-acre Energy Department plant at Fernald, Ohio, 18 miles northwest of Cincinnati, where federal officials have acknowledged that significant amounts of uranium particles over the years have been released into the air.

The government has estimated that as much as 552,000 pounds of radioactive uranium dust may have escaped into the air from the plant, which has been producing uranium for nuclear weapons use for nearly four decades.

But the report by an engineering consulting firm indicates the releases could be as great as 3.1 million pounds over 37 years, and in any case was higher than the government's worst-case scenario.

The report was prepared for lawyers pressing the $300 million lawsuit against National Lead of Ohio Inc., which operated the plant until 1985, on behalf of 14,000 people who live nearby.

Nichols To Close Greenville Store

Nichols Discount City department store on Greenville Boulevard will be one of five Nichols stores in the state to be closed within two to three months, The Associated Press reported today.

Joseph Keller, executive vice president of S.E. Nichols Inc., told the news service that closing sales will begin in a couple of weeks.

Efforts by The Daily Reflector to contact Keller today were unsuccessful. A spokesman at the company's New York headquarters said other Nichols executives were also unavailable to comment on the closing plans.

Other North Carolina stores that will close are in New Bern, Gastonia, Goldsboro and Lumberton. One store in Ohio and another in Virginia will also close, Keller told the AP.

The decision to close the stores is part of the company's marketing strategy, Keller said, and came after reviewing how the stores performed in the last several years.

The Greenville store, opened about 17 years ago, currently employs about 65 people.

In a corporate press release, S.E. Nichols President Kenneth A. Davis said the company's fourth quarter operations were adversely affected

Boy Scouts Present Annual Citizen Award To Whichard

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

With a Tuesday night banquet full of roasting and toasting, the Pitt District Boy Scouts named David J. Whichard II of Greenville as the recipient of the group's third annual Distinguished Citizen Award.

"I'm deeply touched and overwhelmed and overcome by your generosity in being here and the whole occasion," Whichard said to a crowd of more than 200 people gathered for the event at the Greenville Country Club.

"Those of us who were involved in Scouting can now look back through mature eyes to see the positive effect it had on our lives," he said. "I appreciate this evidence of your support (for me) and your support for the Boy Scouts."

Whichard, president and co-publisher of The Daily Reflector, gave special thanks to his wife, Judy, his children, his brother and business partner, Jack, and his father, David, whose father founded the newspaper over 100 years ago.

The Boy Scouts presented Whichard a plaque, and Greenville artist Bob Pittman gave Whichard a

Athletes' Advocate Says Silence Routine

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

East Carolina University's silence over two assistant coaches charged with driving while impaired is typical of how universities across the nation handle situations that may generate negative publicity, the founder of an advocacy group for college athletes says.

"I have a general resentment for the process," said Dick DeVenzio of Charlotte, a former Duke University basketball player who is now an author and the founder of the College Player's Association, an organization that provides educational material to collegiate athletes.

"It has been my experience that anything that can be withheld will be withheld," he said. "The mission of a university should be to uphold integrity and promote the open exchange of ideas and information.

"I think this whole thing is a lot worse (than some other things universities are accused of). It goes against the very concept of what a university seems to be based on," DeVenzio said.

In separate incidents in April, assistant football Coach Timothy Alvin Kelly, 34, and assistant basketball Coach Chris David Benetti, 31, were charged with driving while impaired. ECU Athletic Director Dave Hart has said the matter is being handled internally, and he has declined to comment on any disciplinary action or the coaches' status.

ECU Chancellor Richard R. Eakin said such incidents are handled through each department at the university, and any discipline would come from the employee's supervisor.

When Kelly was arrested, he was in a 1989 Chevrolet with a dealer license tag, the police report said. Dunn car dealer Glyn Collins said he donated the car to the university through the Pirate Big Wheel Club. An officer found Kelly asleep in the car with the engine running and the lights on at 1:55 a.m. April 2. He blew a .19 and a .20 on the Breathalyzer. The legal limit for impairment is .10.

First-year Coach Bill Lewis hired Kelly as an assistant earlier this year. He is set to appear in court June 6.

Benetti, 31, has served as an assistant under Coach Mike Steele for two years. He was arrested at 12:53 a.m. April 21 after an officer observed him nearly run off the road and cross the center line, the police report said. The report said he was driving a 1988 Chevrolet with a personal license plate, but Department of Motor Vehicle records indicate the car is owned by Phelps Chevrolet Inc. of Greenville.

Huggins Gets Teaching Award

Lloyd F. Huggins has been named the 1989 recipient of the Joseph E. Downing Award for Excellence in Teaching at Pitt Community College.

The award was presented Tuesday at a campus faculty and staff meeting conducted by Dr. Charles Russell, PCC president.

Huggins has served as department chairman and instructor of the legal science programs at PCC since 1968. The legal science programs include police science, paralegal technology, corrections and the Basic Law Enforcement Training Academy.

"For more than 20 years Lloyd Huggins has devoted most of his life to Pitt Community College and the students of the legal sciences," Russell said. "This division is now considered by many people throughout the state as a model for other training institutions to follow."

The annual award was established as a memorial to Joseph E. Downing, former associate dean of instruction for curricular programs at PCC. It is a method for rewarding excellence in teaching at the college based upon peer recognition.

The recipient is awarded a plaque and $150 and is nominated by PCC for the statewide state Board of Community Colleges-First Union Awards for Excellence in Teaching.

Huggins graduated from Jones Central High School in Trenton and received a bachelor's degree in chemistry at East Carolina University in 1962. Prior to joining the PCC faculty, he worked for five years as an analytical chemist with the State Bureau of Investigation.

Huggins lives near Winterville, is married and has two children.

Electronic Items Reported Stolen

Investigators said 10 thefts, ranging from meat and electronics items to a bicycle, motorcycle and trailer, were reported to Greenville police on Tuesday.

Officer K.L. Hadnott said $1,840 worth of property, including two television sets, a video cassette recorder, a microwave oven and tape recorder, was taken from Industrial Park Day Care at 1933 N. Memorial Drive in a break-in reported at 8:19 a.m., while a carton of cigarettes was taken from the Foodland store at The Buyers Market, West End Circle, in an incident reported at 11:59 a.m.

Hadnott also said a radio was taken from a vehicle at Quality Tire Service at 1798 N. Greene St. in an incident reported at 1:19 p.m., while Officer M.A. Jordan said a bicycle was taken from 1904B E. Fourth St. in an incident reported at 10:22 a.m.

Officer S.A. Person said 10 cartons of cigarettes were taken from the Happy Store on Greenville Boulevard in an incident reported at 12:13 p.m., while Officer P.K. Burrows said a 4 1/2-by-8-foot trailer valued at $3,000 was taken from a construction site at 705 John Hopkins Drive in an incident reported at 12:59 p.m.

Officer C.A. Elks said a gold chain was taken from 105A Ridge Place in an incident reported at 4:05 p.m., while Officer P.E. Cherry said batteries were taken from four vehicles at Quality Millwright & Welding in an incident reported at 4:12 p.m.

Officer R.J. Brewington said a 1985 model motorcycle was taken from 101A Bryton Hills Apartments, and recovered later, in an incident reported at 5:01 p.m., while Officer C.G. Alphin said two men took about $55 worth of meat, cheese and eggs from the Fresh Way Food Store on Airport Road in an incident reported at 9:05 p.m. Alphin the telephone line to the store was cut in the incident.

Regional Landfill Proposed

By Stuart Savage
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Representatives of American Refuse Systems and Waste Management of North America met with members of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners on Tuesday to propose a possible solution to the county's future solid waste landfill needs.

Under present regulations, Pitt must find a new landfill site by February 1993, and the county's solid waste task force has been developing criteria to use in selecting a new site.

But Tuesday, Jim Heustess of American Refuse Systems and Greg Rosser of Waste Management proposed a regional landfill to serve Pitt, Lenoir, Beaufort, Martin, Bertie and Hertford counties.

The men said the state-of-the-art landfill would be developed and operated by the partnership, with the counties contracting, at $15 per ton, to dispose of their solid waste in the facility.

Heustess, who said recycling would play an integral part of the operation, characterized Pitt as "head and shoulders above other counties," in its effort to reduce the amount of waste disposed of in its landfill.

Heustess, who said there would be "no upfront costs to any county," if the proposed project becomes a reality, said if the six counties agree, the landfill could be operational "18 to 24 months after site selection."

Emphasizing that no site for the 500- to 800-acre facility has been chosen, Heustess said the $15 per ton charge for using the landfill would be adjusted over the 20-year contract period based on the consumer price index.

County Engineer Phil Dickerson told commissioners that at present about 200 tons of trash a day enter the present landfill, at a cost of about $7.50 a ton.

But in the past, Dickerson has said that the county's $840,000 a year landfill operation will rise in cost from $2 million to $7 million a year, depending on the management technology used in a new landfill.

The regional landfill proposed by the firms on Tuesday would handle an estimated 550 tons of trash a day and would be large enough to last about 40 years.

Commissioners, who expressed an interest in exploring the concept, were asked for a commitment by June 30.

Meeting Set

The May meeting of the Carolina Association for Passenger Trains will be held Saturday on the fourth floor of the Belk-Hudson store, 319 Fayetteville St., in Raleigh.

Lunch is planned for 11:30 a.m., followed by the CAPT business meeting.

One of the scheduled agenda items is a report on recommendations of the Governor's Rail Passenger Service Task Force and restarting Charlotte to Raleigh train service.

Drug Charges

Pitt County sheriff's investigators arrested two Pitt County men Tuesday night on charges of trafficking in marijuana.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said deputies arrested Nicki Alton Taylor, 19, and Timothy A. Morris, 20, both of Stokes, at 9:15 p.m. on Old River Road. Both men have been released on $19,000 bond.

Tyson said deputies seized 15 pounds of marijuana, a 1980 Chevrolet Z-28 and a 1985 Ford Mustang GT. The investigation was conducted in cooperation with the State Bureau of Investigation and the Greenville Police, Tyson said.

Embezzlement Charges

Greenville police arrested Lawrence Linwood Arthur Jr., 22, of Winterville on embezzlement charges Monday.

Detective W.A. Reid said Arthur was arrested on three counts of embezzlement in connection with incidents at Reed's Jewelers at Carolina East Mall that were reported to the department on April 28.

Farmville Names Street For Longtime Public Works Director

By Carol Tyer
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

FARMVILLE — Town commissioners Tuesday night honored a deceased town employee by renaming Booker Street as Freuler Drive.

The new name honors the memory of longtime director of public works, the late E.P. Freuler.

In other business, commissioners set a public hearing for June 6 at 7:30 p.m. on whether to annex the Guardian Care Nursing Home property and the adjacent state right of way. The nursing home owner, Hillhaven Corp., requested the annexation. The N.C. Department of Transportation has also asked for the annexation of the right of way of U.S. 358 adjacent to the nursing home.

The board heard a report from Bob Paciocco, director of the Mid-East Commission, on activities being conducted by the Mid-East and future plans. The report to member municipalities is an annual practice of the Mid-East Commission. Paciocco was to make a similar report to the Falkland town board meeting.

There was no citizen comment during a public hearing conducted by Mike Barnette, Community Development administrator, on a new CD grant the town is seeking. The areas that are being considered for housing improvement assistance are on Barrett and Pine streets and on West Perry and South George streets. The maximum grant allowance under CD Block Grant regulation is now $600,000 with $90,000 of that amount being used for local option.

Commissioner Marvin Speight said he believes that owners assisted in renovating their property should at least pay for their own building permits. Barnette said this stipulation can be written into the new grant application.

The board approved the purchase of eight aerators for the waste water treatment plant. The equipment will be bought from Aqua-Aerobic at a cost of $52,720 and is expected to be delivered in about 10 weeks.

A resolution ratifying the action of the town attorney in settling a suit brought against the town by Pitt & Greene Electric Membership Corp. was approved.

The attorney signed on behalf of the town a consent judgment that would allow Pitt & Greene to supply power to warning lights at the U.S. 264-eastern loop T-intersection east of Farmville and would have the town supply power to the Signion property to be developed at the intersection of the eastern loop and old U.S. 264 southeast of Farmville. It was stipulated that other property owners in the area wishing to have electric service would be able to choose whether to be served by Farmville or Pitt & Greene. The consent judgment was ordered and approved by Judge David Reid on April 13.

A budget amendment was adopted authorizing the spending of $1,075 for additions to materials for the Farmville Public Library. Videotapes will be bought with a $575 video grant from the state of North Carolina and other materials will be bought with a $500 special local allocation from the General Assembly.

The board approved a budget amendment authorizing the use of funds for recreation department equipment and donations to senior citizens' programs. The department will use $500 to buy basketball goals, tennis court nets and a flip-top basketball scoreboard, while $150 will be put into the Senior Citizens Nutrition Program. Also, $200 will go to Benevolent Ministries and $150 will go to the Golden Age Club.

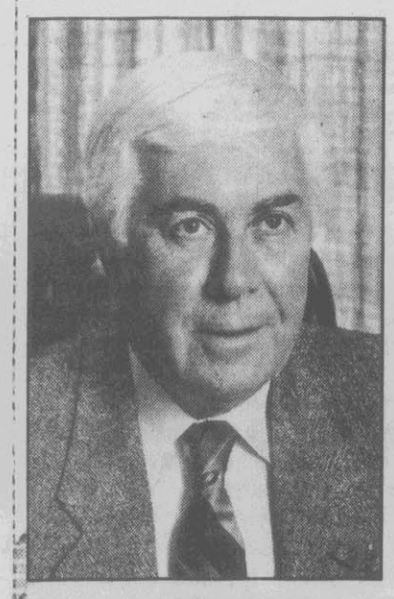
Delano Wilson of Winterville, chairman of the social studies department at Ayden-Grifton High School, was one of 14 people appointed by Gov. Jim Martin to the N.C. Textbook Commission.

The commission evaluates all textbooks offered for adoption in the elementary and high school grades. Wilson's commission term extends until April 1, 1993.

Noted Cardiologist To Speak At ECU

Dr. Jeremy Swan, a cardiologist, will be the featured speaker Friday at the ninth East Carolina University School of Medicine convocation.

The ceremony will begin at 1:30 p.m. in Wright Auditorium on the ECU campus and 67 medical students will graduate.



DR. JEREMY SWAN

Swan, author of more than 300 books, is a professor of medicine at UCLA. He is best known for his role in the development of the Swan-Ganz catheter, a cardiac monitoring device used in intensive care units. His fields of research include coronary artery disease, congenital heart disease and cardiovascular physiology.

Swan serves on the editorial board of several professional publications and is the host of "Cardiology Update," a cable television program.

He is one of five people to receive the title of Master of Cardiology from the American College of Cardiology.

This is Swan's second visit to ECU. In February he was the speaker at the ECU History of Medicine Club annual banquet.

Realtors Observing Home Week Events

The Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors is continuing its observance of American Home Week with several activities planned, including a golf tournament with proceeds targeted for a local program for the homeless.

Dennis Biggs, chairman of the American Home Week project, said the annual golf tournament is set for Thursday at Greenville Country Club with a shotgun tee-off at 1:30 p.m. The four-man "superball" tournament will be followed by a cocktail party and cookout, Biggs said. Funds from the event will benefit the Greenville Homeless Shelter.

Poster and essay contests involving Pitt schools end on Friday and a panel of judges will announce winners and award prizes.

The weeklong observance ends Saturday with an information booth at Carolina East Mall, where the posters will be displayed and information on home ownership will be available.

The Board of Realtors held a prayer breakfast this week with proceeds going to the homeless shelter, and home buying/fair housing and home selling seminars were conducted.

In addition, Jason Michael Baker, the son of John and Brenda Baker, was recognized by the Board of Realtors as the first child born during the home ownership and private property rights celebration. The board said honoring the first born is symbolic of the responsibility to pass on the national heritage of private property ownership to future generations.

American Home Week is a nationwide celebration of home ownership and private property rights sponsored by the National Association of Realtors. The local organization is one of 1,860 state associations and local boards sponsoring activities to benefit their communities.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Reckoning

The Bullets Have Dwindled

In the confused years following the merger of Pitt and Greenville schools, money from the School Pilot Finance Project was like a cache of bullets for the new school system. It served as protection from the unexpected and from local funding shortfalls. When money was spread too thin, shots could be fired.

But the project wasn't supposed to work that way. While the concept of the project might have sounded, to the average taxpayer, like a complex task, it really wasn't. It was simply about more local control over state education dollars.

'The $4 million that poured into Pitt from the project over three years turned into an exercise in need-juggling, not autonomy.'

The way it was used in Pitt County, however, turned those additional unrestricted state dollars into a nest egg that lured the school board and the county commissioners into a sense of false security about how well local coffers were stocked. The finance project dollars were used by both boards as a buffer against escalating expenses. The school board used the money to make up shortfalls in local funding. The county commission relied on those "extra" dollars to avoid an uncomfortable tax increase. Now, with the project — and money — terminating June 30, the taxpayer will get the bill unless the services are cut back. Witness the schools newly-approved $13.4 million budget for 1989-90 which includes a request for the funds the pilot project provided.

Don't misunderstand, there's little doubt Pitt's schools reaped benefits from the money that poured in from the School Pilot Finance Project. For the most part, they were applied, correctly, in areas where local funding fell short and needs were sharp. The unrestricted state dollars were spent to equalize programs in the city and county school systems after consolidation. They were used to give county employees a 4.5 percent pay raise mandated by the state that the county chose not to fund. In addition, the funds paid utility bills that were larger than expected — again, when county appropriations wavered. These are all worthy and necessary expenditures. The county should provide, through sound and realistic fiscal planning, the money to meet these needs.

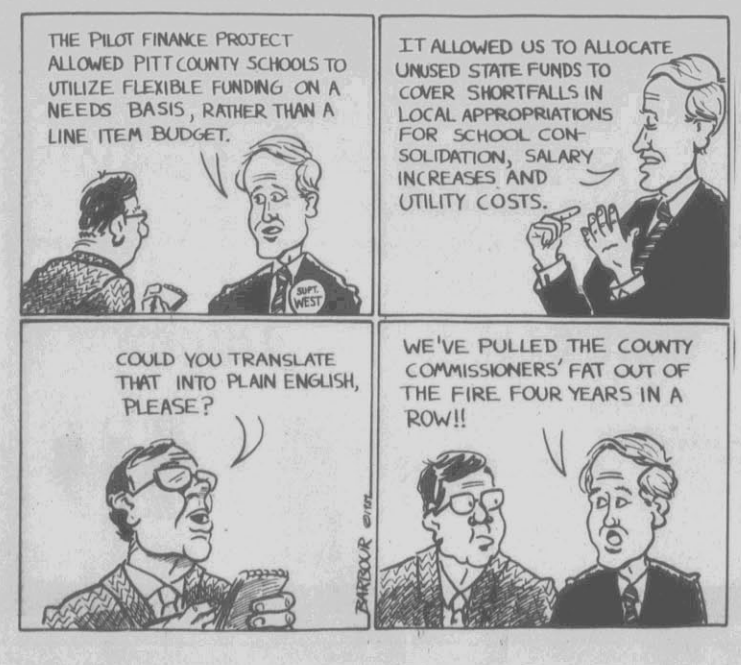
The finance project was supposed to be an experiment to see if giving local school systems more freedom in spending state dollars would improve school funding.

Instead, the $4 million that poured into Pitt from the project over four years turned into an exercise in need-juggling, not autonomy. Deficits in funding were delayed, not addressed. Now the bill for these needs will come, all at once, to the taxpayer.

At the end of this pilot project an evaluation of the results was expected to determine whether it worked and how it could be applied to the entire state. There are no such conclusions from Pitt's experience.

What is obvious, however, is that postponing tough funding decisions isn't the correct way to run a school system or a county. For the commissioners, the 1989-90 fiscal year is set to be a budget of reckoning. A jail, school construction, a new landfill, burgeoning human service needs ... these items have already been delayed too long. Add to that list the items the School Pilot Finance Project funded — now integrated into the school system.

The bullets in the stash have dwindled. It's time for Pitt County to reload — adequately — then draw and take accurate aim at its needs.



Stay Home And See America

Richard Cohen

ST. LOUIS — "That's our train station over there," my host says as we drive past Union Station in St. Louis. "Too bad we don't have time to see it." Yes, too bad. But then I think, I've already seen it.

I've seen it in Washington, where there is another Union Station, and in Akron and San Francisco, Baltimore and New York — just about any city you can name, cities that don't even have a Union Station, that don't even have a train station, but that have everything that now goes into one:

A B. Dalton bookstore. A pizza parlor. A McDonald's or Burger King or Wendy's. A Brookstone store for gadgets you'll never need. An Ann Taylor, a Bombay Company and a BananaRepublic — to outfit you not for Kenya, mind you, but for something like Lion Country Safari. There, the ersatz can meet the ersatz.

A store that sells Scottish tartans (to whom?), a place that sells linens, a store for china and coffee mugs, an Athlete's Foot, and seven stores selling offensive T-shirts for people too dim to invent their own insults.

Later, my host and I whiz through downtown. "Too bad you don't have time to see downtown," my host says. "It's not what it used to be." Of course not. Once it had its own character.

It just so happens this is my return trip to St. Louis. Aside from a quick campaign stop with Jimmy Carter, I was last there in 1964, when I was stationed some hours away at Fort Leonard Wood. Twenty-five years later, I am peering through the car window, looking for something — a building, a store — that will jog my memory.

But what overwhelms me is how much the St. Louis suburbs are like those of Washington or any other city. Housing subdivisions have the same pretentious mock-Tudor names — Forest this, Glen that.

What's happened to America? It's gone. The country has been franchised. The stores are branches of chains. The football team is composed of players who played elsewhere last season — and live somewhere else anyway. The local anchorman speaks without a regional accent and looks like the guy in the next town. Besides, he worked elsewhere two years ago — and is negotiating to work somewhere else a year from now. Meanwhile, he says, "How about our Redskins...Cardinals...Pirates ...Giants!"

Travel is supposed to broaden, but more and more it seems that your environment has been sent on ahead and is at your destination when you arrive. It's not that the television set in my hotel room brings me Chicago and Atlanta. It's not that the newsstand sells the New York Times, the Wall Street Journal and USA Today. It's that almost any place you go looks like the place you just left.

I could, I bet, take you, dear reader, to Baltimore's Harborplace, New York's South Street Seaport, San Francisco's Ghiradelli Square, Washington's Old Post Office Pavillion, Boston's Faneuil Hall or Akron's former Quaker Oats factory and you would not know which one you were in. Once, these places were devoted to some activity — shipping, commerce, manufacturing — that marked them, that gave them a purpose. Breakfast cereal and tires once were really made in Akron. Now, no tires are made there, and the old Quaker Oats factory is one vast boutique.

Why go to these places? Why not stay home? Our cities, especially our downtowns, have become museums of their former selves. Old warehouses are now condominiums, former manufacturing facilities are office buildings. What was once messy and vibrant is now neat and sterile.

Easterners wear cowboy boots, and everyone wears jeans. Cajun food is the rage in New York, and kosher pickles come from North Carolina. Each shopping mall is like any other — the same stores, the same snacks, the same kids wearing the same clothes (tattered jeans, for the moment), the same Top 40 tunes playing and the same climate inside.

For this summer, I have some advice for you: Stay home and see America.

The Going May Get Tougher

David Broder

WASHINGTON — As President Bush picked up a set of mostly mediocre evaluation grades on his first 100 days in office, news came of a development which strongly implies he may have to lift the level of his game. The disclosure that Jesse L. Jackson is seriously thinking of taking a sabbatical from Democratic presidential politics and, instead, running for mayor in the District of Columbia next year means that Bush could face an unexpectedly tough political challenge in 1992.

A prominent Republican politician called the development "a godsend" for the Democrats, a chance for them to change the script from the divisive internal battles that have hobbled their nominees in every year since 1976.

It is far from a done deal. Jackson has made it absolutely clear he will not run against embattled and scandal-scarred D.C. Mayor Marion Barry (D), an old ally. Barry, in Jackson's words, "deserves dignity and options," and there are people trying to arrange a graceful exit for the much-investigated mayor. Even if Barry does decide against seeking a fourth term, Jackson still would have to convince himself to forgo his globe-trotting, issue-hopping ways and settle into the discipline of his first-ever elective office.

But as one senior Democratic official said, "It's a deal where everyone wins — Jesse wins, the city wins and the party wins." There's little exaggeration in that estimate.

For Jackson, the potential benefits begin with the fact that this is one race he could win. He's swept the District presidential primary twice, is well-known here and leads by a wide margin in all public and private mayoral polls — including those where Barry's name remains an option.

If elected, he would finally have a chance to answer those critics who have told him, "You give great speeches, Reverend, but you have no experience in government." The mayoralty would test his administrative abilities in a $4-billion-a-year, 48,000-employee government, and would give him an opportunity to apply his ideas on combating drugs, improving housing and expanding economic opportunity.

Yet, because of its location at the center of national government and international news, Washington, D.C., would offer Jackson an unrivaled platform for his views. In conversations with advisers, he has envisaged the home he plans to modernize here as a regular stop for visiting world leaders.

Jackson could fail in office, of course. But he has limitless energy and likely could attract talented people from around the nation to join his administration. His ability to reach and motivate young people, particularly, might be a unique resource in the city's fight against crime and drugs.

For the Democratic Party, the shift of role for Jackson from active presidential contender to influential local leader would offer a fresh opportunity to reconstruct on the national level the biracial coalition that is the key to its victories in most states.

Clearly, Jackson would continue to be a force in the party. As Bruce Lightner, his 1988 North Carolina manager, said, the two-time candidate "one way or another, will be in it," backing and advising someone in 1992 while gaining credentials in the mayoralty for another and possibly more credible bid for a place on the national ticket in 1996 or 2000.

But in Jackson's absence, other candidates will have room and incentive to start campaigning for black votes from the beginning of the primary season. That could encourage candidates from the party's liberal wing, but equally it could be a boon to white Southern contenders.

The Dixie and Border State Democratic governors and senators have gained office in large part through their ability to woo and win black votes. If Jackson is on the sideline, they could seek to repeat the formula Jimmy Carter used in 1976, when he enlisted crucial black support from the start. Carter's early and durable biracial coalition was the key to the last Democratic victory for the White House.

A Jackson sabbatical would also permit the emergence of other blacks. Although few complained publicly, prominent black Democrats have noted the irony that Jackson's repeated national campaigns have had the effect of roadblocking their ambitions. Half-a-dozen mayors, including Los Angeles' Tom Bradley and Atlanta's Andrew Young, and several members of Congress, most notably House Democratic Caucus chairman William H. Gray III (D-Pa.), would be freed to consider national politics if Jackson stepped aside temporarily.

None of them is as dynamic a figure as Jackson. But none is as likely to provoke the kind of controversy tha makes it difficult for the Democrats to get their act together for the general election.

The hardest thing to remember about Jesse Jackson is that he is still three years shy of 50 — a very young man to have run twice for President. A decision to defer the third race for a few years while acquiring the governmental credential he needs, in a job where the whole world would be watching, would be the best gift this talented figure could give himself and his party.

Record Raises Doubts

Analysis

& Wolfgang Panofsky

The United States and the Soviet Union signed the Threshold Test Ban Treaty in 1974, but no American president has ever submitted the treaty, which restricts underground nuclear explosions to a yield below 150 kilotons, to the Senate for ratification.

This record has raised doubts about the U.S. role, and even motives, as a negotiating partner in arms control. It stands in sharp contrast to recent Soviet flexibility and initiatives, and we face a challenge to action if we are not to lose to them the moral high ground in arms control.

The Bush administration now has an opportunity to review the reasons for procrastination given by its predecessors. The ostensible reason for non-ratification given repeatedly by the Reagan administration was that we could not measure the treaty's 150-kiloton threshold very accurately — thus constituting an unacceptable risk.

'The issue is the integrity of the United States as a negotiating partner in arms control and the responsibility of the U.S. government to inform its own citizens on technical facts we are sharing ...'

But this makes no sense. When President Nixon signed the treaty, seismologists had concluded that the 150-kiloton threshold could be measured by existing U.S. instruments outside the Soviet Union to "within a factor of two." This means that if the Soviets attempted to cheat by releasing nuclear blasts at 300 kilotons, the United States would detect a violation 95 percent of the time. They might get away with cheating by a much smaller amount, but not one of military or technical significance to either the United States or the Soviet Union. (The 150-kiloton limit, observed by both countries despite the lack of ratification, was established to satisfy the weapons designers; explosions can be detected and identified at yields 10 to 20 times smaller.)

Thus Nixon agreed that verification technology in 1974 was adequate to remove any risk to U.S. security from Soviet cheating. Since 1974, seismologists have improved their instruments and methods of analysis. The "factor of two" uncertainty of 1974 has been reduced to less than a factor of 1.5. Even so, the Reagan administration insisted that this was not good enough, and that further, more intrusive observations were necessary.

In response, the Soviets gave in and agreed to talks on improving verification. Initially the Soviets wanted to talk both about laying the technical groundwork for reducing the allowed yields below the 150-kiloton threshold and about more precise measurements of the treaty's limit. We insisted on talking only about use of the so-called CORRTEX method of verification, proposing it as a "direct" yield measurement. The Soviets maintained that CORRTEX, which measures the yield of an explosion by determining the speed at which the shock arrives at a nearby test hole, was no better than the less-intrusive seismic observation, but gave in by agreeing to the joint verification experiments to be carried out, using both the seismic and CORRTEX methods, in Siberia and Nevada.

These tests have now been concluded, in itself a remarkable exhibition of the new cooperation between Washington and Moscow. But now, according to published reports, the United States is refusing to release the data obtained from the joint tests even though the Soviets have proposed to do so.

- We are refusing, giving patently invalid and contrived reasons, to ratify a treaty signed by a U.S. president 15 years ago.
- We are refusing technical information to the American people that we are sharing with the Soviets.
- We seem to find it difficult to accept "yes" for an answer when negotiating with the Soviets.

In the early '70s, the situation was reversed. The Soviets were intransigent negotiators, obsessed with secrecy. Now, in the view of many world observers, particularly in Europe, the United States is in the role of the heavy in the arms control process.

Why is all this occurring? Do the results of the joint experiments contradict the U.S. positions? Could the data show that indeed, CORRTEX is not enough more precise than more-remote seismic measurements to warrant its greatly increased intrusiveness? Do some of the signals from U.S. explosions exceed the allowed limit by a small amount in the same way as some Soviet tests led President Reagan to charge that they were "likely to have violated the treaty?"

The issue we are discussing here is not whether or when the permitted explosions should be lowered in size or stopped altogether. The issue is the integrity of the United States as a negotiating partner in arms control and the responsibility of the U.S. government to inform its own citizens on technical facts we are sharing with the Soviets.

Frank Gaffney, Reagan's deputy assistant secretary of defense, has written: "The more time wasted on discussions and experimentation of (yield) monitoring techniques irrelevant to ... complete prohibition of legal nuclear tests, the easier it will be to stave off demands for the more constraining comprehensive test ban." Does the Bush administration wish to continue the pursuit of arms control in this spirit?

We suggest that the president immediately release the data on the Nevada-Siberia experiments, whether they do or do not support past positions; submit the Threshold Test Ban Treaty to the Senate for consent to ratification, and continue the joint verification experiments to calibrate the seismic methods with CORRTEX, looking forward to measurements of lower-yield explosions.

These steps will recapture some of the moral ground in arms control that have been lost to the Soviets in view of the unfortunate record of the Threshold Test Ban Treaty cited here.

Average N.C. College Salary Below National Level

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The average faculty salary at a cross section of North Carolina colleges and universities is more than than $3,000 below the national average, figures show.

Data supplied by the American Association of University Professors show that faculty nationwide earned an average of $39,410 in 1988-89 compared with an average of $36,357 at 14 selected colleges and universities in the state.

In addition, AAUP figures confirm that this year's faculty pay in the University of North Carolina system failed to keep pace with the national average.

But that comes as no surprise.

When the 1988 General Assembly approved a 4.5 percent pay raise for state employees, including university faculty, UNC officials said they expected to lose ground to other institutions across the country.

"It looks like that's what happened," said Raymond Dawson, senior vice president for the UNC system.

AAUP figures released recently show that faculty salaries across the nation increased by an average of 5.8 percent, more than a full percentage point higher than the UNC increase.

"The arithmetic of that takes you in just one direction," Dawson said. "It means that ... your salaries are going to be less competitive."

For more than a year, administrators in the UNC system have complained that they were losing some of their best faculty members to institutions that offer higher salaries.

The latest AAUP figures and the economic uncertainty facing the state are likely to add to those concerns.

"This is really going to hurt," said Fred Hinson, chairman of the UNC Faculty Assembly, which represents faculty throughout the university system.

"Unless something happens about salaries, the UNC system is going to lose faculty and not be able to attract (others)."

To help make salaries more competitive, the UNC Board of Governors has asked the General Assembly for a 20 percent pay hike during the next two years — 12 percent in 1989-90 and 8 percent in 1990-91.

"If we get 6 percent we will be very lucky," Hinson said. "What I am really looking for is 5."

If next year's raise isn't at least that large, "we'll lose big ground," Hinson said.

According to AAUP data, here's how ground is being lost at UNC-Chapel Hill.

The average faculty pay at the UNC system's flagship campus in 1988-89 was $46,100, which is $8,000 below the average faculty salary at Duke University.

In 1987-88, the difference was $6,800. But Duke increased its faculty pay an average of 6 percent in 1988-89.

The extent of the salary problems in the UNC system can be seen in the decline several universities showed in the AAUP's salary rating system.

The AAUP divides colleges and universities into five categories, such as doctoral, comprehensive and baccalaureate.

For each faculty rank — professor, associate professor, assistant professor and instructor — the AAUP rates each institution on a five-place scale ranging from 1+ to 4, 1+ being the best rating a school can receive.

The lower the rating the lower the pay provided for a particular faculty rank.

In 1987-88, UNC-Chapel Hill placed in rank 2 in pay for professors and associate professors and in rank 1 for assistant professors and instructors.

In 1988-89, pay at the university fell to rank 2 in all faculty categories.

This means that pay in all faculty ranks fell between the 60th percen tile and the 79th percentile nationally.

Last year, a Board of Visitors Task Force at UNC-Chapel Hill recommended that the UNC Board of Governors commit to maintaining an AAUP ranking of at least 1 for all faculty categories.

That would place pay at UNC-Chapel Hill in the 80th to 94th percentile. Ranking 1+ goes from 95th percentile to the 100th percentile.

But the problem of falling AAUP ratings is not unique to UNC-Chapel Hill.

During 1988-89, North Carolina State University, the University of North Carolina at Greensboro and N.C. A&T State University showed rating drops in at least one faculty category, according to AAUP data.

Tax Amnesty Proposal Gains Backing

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — With the General Assembly facing a tight budget, momentum is growing behind a bill to give North Carolinians three months to make good on back taxes.

"The good thing about this bill is we're not levying any new taxes, we're just collecting delinquent taxes," Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, told the House Finance Committee on Tuesday. After the bill was approved, Miller said it had been held up by lawmakers worried about being soft on tax evasion.

"The perceived problem was that we would be providing relief from criminal laws to those who would have been prosecuted," said Miller, D-Durham, who sponsored the bill. "But the offset is that we get the violators to pay up and we increase the penalties on future violations. Plus there is a significant benefit to the state. I think that's a fair trade-off."

The bill had languished in the committee for several months while Miller answered the objections and paved the way for Senate approval down the road. The bill now goes to the Appropriations Committee.

"The Senate has indicated substantial support for it," he said.

In addition to letting taxpayers repay back taxes from September to December 1989 without penalty, the bill would increase penalties for tax evasion after Jan. 1, 1990 and would beef up the Revenue Department to improve enforcement.

Revenue Secretary Helen Powers said the $5 million a year provided to her department would help realize revenue gains of $65 million a year on top of the $20 million expected during the amnesty period.

Miller said publicity surrounding the bill has already prompted some taxpayers to call for information about amnesty.

"What this means is that even with the limited exposure that we've had to date, it appears the program has attracted attention," he said.

Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, expressed the only strong reservations about the bill, saying it was not fair to provide amnesty to some people when others have been prosecuted.

Rep. Vernon Abernethy, R-Gaston, said his main concern was to make sure professional tax preparers would not be held liable for errors that might be made in generating delinquent returns.

His amendment to insulate preparers from the law during the amnesty period was approved 17-15.

Rep. John Kerr, D-Wayne, raised one last objection, asking why the amnesty period wasn't during the tax season.

"Wouldn't it be better to do this when when people have taxes on their minds rather than having Christmas on their minds?" he asked.

Ms. Powers said her staff would be overloaded if it had to deal with normal returns as well as those under the amnesty plan.

Panel Softens DWI Proposal

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A scaled-down bill designed to strengthen the 1983 Safe Roads Act does not include two of the provisions most sought by advocates of a tougher drunken driving law.

The legislation, unveiled Tuesday in a state Senate subcommittee, does not contain a ban on open containers of alcohol beverages in vehicles' passenger sections and a reduced threshold for classifying a non-commercial driver as intoxicated.

A legislative study commission called for lowering the threshold from a blood-alcohol content of 0.10 to 0.08.

Sen. George Daniel, D-Caswell, chairman of the subcommittee, said the panel approved the slimmed-down bill after exhaustive hearings in which strong objections were raised to some of the tougher proposals.

"It may look like more of (the original bill) was left out than was included," Daniel acknowledged. But he said some "good tightening provisions" were left intact.

The subcommittee presented its revised bill to the Senate Judiciary I Committee, which discussed it but took no action. The panel is expected to vote Thursday, when the subcommittee will present a second bill dealing with commercial drivers. The latter bill will recommend reducing the DWI threshold for commercial drivers from 0.10 to 0.04.

Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland, sponsor of the bill, voiced disappointment that the open-container and 0.08 provisions were deleted, but said he would continue supporting the measure.

"It's better than not having a bill, put it that way," Harris said.

He noted that the study commission bill is pending in the House. If the open-container and 0.08 threshold provisions survive there, they might be restored by a joint conference committee, he said.

Most of the remaining provisions in the subcommittee bill are designed to close technical loopholes in the 1983 law. For example:

— If a person suspected of drunken driving refuses to take a second chemical breath test as provided for in the Safe Roads Act, evidence from the single test may be used to establish probable cause but could not be used in court to establish the defendant's blood-alcohol content.

— A teen-age "provisional licensee" caught driving drunk would lose his driving privileges for one year instead of for 45 days or when he turns 18 as under the current law.

PARENTS AS SCAPEGOATS

An issue often heard in marriage counseling is that a husband or wife's parents have too much influence in the marriage. In the course of treatment, this frequently proves to be a smoke-screen for a power struggle between the spouses.
Rather than address personal differences directly, parental pressure is magnified and distorted as a way to manipulate the marital power struggle. A spouse who frequently invokes the parental image may see this as a safer way to prove a point than engaging in personal confrontation, but the results can be devastating: the appearance of weakness or immaturity for the avoidant spouse, a generation of dislike for the in-law who is so frequently invoked, and a lack of clarity on a one-to-one basis.
By the time a couple recognizes this as a pattern, they are generally too entrenched in it to make changes without counseling. Sorting out the real issues requires professional assistance, differentiating between genuine and imagined parental pressure, identifying personal needs and desires that are being masked by the excuse of parental pressure, deciding together how to respond to outside forces, and learning to communicate without third-party influence.

Disappearance

GREENSBORO (AP) — Authorities say they are treating the disappearance of a baby as a missing-person case, rather than as a kidnapping, because his mother allowed a stranger to take the 7-month-old infant on a shopping trip.

"It's not a kidnapping because she let the woman take her child," said Police Captain B.J. Norris. ""It's very unusual to have children turned over without knowing the identity of the woman."

Police say Susan Tarlton handed over blond-haired, blue-eyed, 16-pound Larry Wayne Tarlton to a woman she met near Moses Cone Memorial Hospital in Greensboro on Friday after she had taken her baby to a medical clinic.

Ms. Tarlton, 25, allowed the woman to take the infant on Friday but the woman returned him Saturday morning, police said. Ms. Tarlton then allowed the woman, whose name she does not know, to take her baby shopping Saturday afternoon. They never returned.

Officer Arrested

HENDERSON, N.C. (AP) — A Henderson police officer has been arrested by the Vance County Sheriff's Department on a charge of second-degree rape.

Ronnie Yarborough, 26, of Route 1, Kittrell, was arrested and placed in the Granville County Jail on $10,000 bond. He later posted bond and was released.

A Vance County woman reported to Deputy G.S. Grissom that she had been raped in a suspect's personal car about 5 a.m. Saturday.

Embezzling Charge

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — The wife of a former state director of mental health has been charged with embezzling more than $140,000 from a government-funded mental health facility in Robeson County.

A Robeson County grand jury handed down 44 indictments against Joyce Douglas of Lumberton. They charged that she had embezzled funds and had forged checks from the Southeastern Regional Mental Health Center in Lumberton, where she worked from 1982 to 1986.

Mrs. Douglas is the wife of Dr. Eugene Douglas, a staff psychiatrist and director of the clinic who was appointed state director of mental health in 1982.

Drowning Feared

ENFIELD, N.C. (AP) — Law enforcement officials in Halifax County say they fear two Rocky Mount men involved in a boating accident Sunday have drowned.

The search for Jeff Jones and Jeff Turner continued Tuesday. The two have been missing since late Sunday afternoon when their canoe capsized in the Bellamy Mill Pond near the Nash-Halifax county line.

Volunteers began dragging the river again about 8 a.m. Tuesday, but officials said the swollen river, caused by heavy rains, has hampered the search.

Officials saud the two men were on a canoe trip with two other men when both canoes struck a dam and overturned. Sheriff M.L. Stallings, the other men, Tim Dutton of Nashville and Jeffrey Viverette of Rocky Mount, were closer to the bank and managed to swim to safety.

Alcohol Vote

TABOR CITY, N.C. (AP) — Tabor City voters have approved a proposal to allow beer and fortified wine sales in restaurants and stores.

Before the referendum Tuesday, the only alcohol sold in the town was liquor from ABC stores and unfortified wine. Liquor is not sold by the drink in restaurants or stores.

To sell beer, the vote was 484 in favor and 393 against. To sell wine, the vote was 466 for and 398 against.

Protection Sought For Burial Grounds

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Vandalism of unmarked graves and trafficking in Indian remains are worsening problems in North Carolina, officials of the state Department of Cultural Resources say.

"The Indian community is totally outraged at the desecration of our remains," said Bruce Jones, executive director of the state Commission on Indian Affairs.

On Tuesday, a proposed crackdown on raids of Indian burial grounds cleared a House subcommittee Tuesday. The measure was approved by the Judiciary Subcommittee on Justice and Public Safety, and it now goes to the full Judiciary Committee.

But historical preservationists say the bill is so strict that it could make picking up an arrowhead a felony.

Reginald Cook, a member of the Triangle Area Historic Preservation Association, said his group welcomes protection of genuine archaeological sites, but that the current law is strong enough. It already is a felony to molest unmarked graves and sell materials from them, he said.

The bill "would include a lot of material that has nothing to do with disturbance of things in graves," he said. "It would, if this is taken literally ... mean that anyone who uses a metal detector at the beach would be guilty of felony. Anyone that picks up an arrowhead along the shores of a state-owned lake would be guilty of a felony."

The bill would broaden the definition of a protected site, making it "the surface or subsurface location of artifacts, man-made features and other archaeological materials which reflect past human conditions or activities."

It would strengthen the punishment for violating a 1981 law that protects unmarked graves from a misdemeanor to a felony if the value of the archaeological resources exceeds $500. The law sets strict guidelines for excavating areas found to contain human skeletal remains, particularly those believed to be Indian.

The bill also would require that anyone violating the law forfeit vehicles and equipment used in illegally desecrating a burial site.

Another section that drew criticism would make it a crime to salvage artifacts valued at more than $500 from state-owned historic shipwrecks or other underwater archaeological sites.

Helms Fails To Block King Funds

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., couldn't stop the Senate from approving federal spending for the Martin Luther King Federal Holiday Commission, but he did win one concession from the commission's supporters.

If the bill that the Senate passed Tuesday becomes law, the commission will no longer be allowed to train students in the techniques of social protests or civil disobedience.

King's widow, Coretta Scott King, said she was especially pleased that the Senate voted to give the commission $300,000 a year for five years. But she was not so pleased about the restrictions tacked onto the bill at Helms' request.

"I object to the fact that there would be someone sort of standing over us, telling us what to do," she said.

A smiling Helms said after the votes that he had not expected to stop the bill. But he accomplished about 25 percent of what he set out to do, he said, and "25 percent is more than you win some other times."

He also put his opponents' support for the commission on the record, which he said could hurt them back home.

The bill was sent to the House, which passed a different version last month. The House's version would give the commission a $500,000 annual subsidy and make the commission permanent, while the Senate's version extends the commission's life for only five years.

Helms, who has opposed the King holiday since its inception, led the opposition to the bill and particularly the proposed subsidy. No other federal holiday has a commission spending tax dollars every year to promote it, he said.

School Abandoned

THOMASVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Good-bye Denton High.

The Davidson County Board of Education gave the go-ahead Monday to tear down the dilapidated school within 45 days. The asbestos removal, demolition, grading and sowing grass will cost $26,000.

Board Chairman Jack Briggs acknowledged public sentiment about preserving the builing, which was built in 1929 and has housed three generations of Davidson County school children.

"I believe in preserving buildings of historical significance when feasible. In my opinion, because of the asbestos problem, the space problem and the fire hazard this building presents to the other buildings adjacent to it, I support the demolition," Briggs said. "Hopefully, the people in the Denton community can recognize these factors. I know they hate to see it come down, but it's in the best interest."

Senate Backs Team Ticket Proposition

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A proposal to have the governor and lieutenant governor run on a "team ticket" won tentative Senate approval after its sponsor called the change a reflection of North Carolina's status as a two-party state.

A final vote was scheduled for today as the Senate continues to approve fundamental changes in the structure of state government, having previously approved veto power for the governor and four-year terms for legislators.

The team-ticket vote Tuesday was 47-2. Sens. Frank Ballance, D-Warren, and Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland, cast the dissenting votes.

A similar measure is pending in the House. If approved, the proposed amendment would be submitted to a statewide referendum.

Under the amendment, proposed by Sen. George Daniel, D-Caswell, candidates for governor and lieutenant governor would be nominated by their respective parties in primary elections as under the current system.

But once the Democratic and Republican nominees were chosen, they would run as a team. In the general election, North Carolinians would cast a single vote for either party's candidates as is done now in the election of the president and vice-president of the United States.

The proposed change is in keeping with the changing political landscape in North Carolina, Daniel told the Senate.

As the Republican Party grows increasingly competitive, he said, the likelihood has increased that the governor and lieutenant governor will be of different parties.

When Jim Holshouser became the first Republican governor of the century in 1972, Democrat Jim Hunt was elected lieutenant governor. During Republican Gov. Jim Martin's first term, Democrat Bob Jordan was lieutenant governor.

The current lieutenant governor, Jim Gardner, is the first Republican to hold the office since 1901.

If a governor left office before his term expired and was succeeded by a lieutenant governor of a different party, "North Carolina could very well be in a state of chaos," Daniel said.

There would be pressure on the lieutenant governor to continue his predecessor's policies and retain the Cabinet officers and other high-ranking policymakers from the former governor's administration, Daniel said. But any new governor — and particularly one of a different party than his predecessor — would want to implement new programs and appoint his own team.

Of the 42 states that have lieutenant governors, 20 select the governor and lieutenant governor separately and 22 select them as a team, he said.

No one spoke against the proposal. Harris said in an interview he voted against it out of fear that it would hurt the Democratic Party.

Before Gardner's election last year, the office of lieutenant governor had provided Democrats with executive-branch leadership when the Governor was a Republican, Harris said. The team ticket would increase prospects for having Republicans hold both offices at once, he said.

"I just think the way things are turning out, the state's been pretty well going Republican in these statewide elections," Harris said. "I'm just an old-line Democrat and I'm trying to protect my party, I guess."

House-Senate Conferees Agree On Minimum Wage Package

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The first domestic-policy showdown between President Bush and Congress looms closer following a speedy agreement between House and Senate negotiators on a final version of legislation to raise the minimum wage.

It took less than an hour Tuesday for the conferees to complete their work, thanks in large part to staff negotiations conducted during last week's congressional recess.

Also contributing to the speedy resolution was that the major elements of the House and Senate bills were the same; each called for raising the hourly minimum wage from $3.35 to $4.55 by October 1991 and allowed employers to pay some new workers a subminimum training wage for two months.

The $4.55 target and timetable for its implementation were identical in the bills, leaving differing language on the subminimum as the major issue before the conferees.

The final product contains language very close to the Senate version, allowing employers to pay new hires 85 percent of the minimum wage if they have not held a job for more than 60 days. Once an individual held a job for 60 days, he or she would never again be eligible to be paid the training wage.

The legislation, which could reach the White House within two weeks, fails to meet Bush's standards on two fronts. The president has said $4.25 an hour is as big an increase as he will support, and that any support hinges on a six-month subminimum that could be paid to all new hires regardless of past job experience.

But Democrats sponsoring the legislation said they were prepared to confront Bush with the measure and would attempt to override his expected veto, although they concede Bush currently has more than enough votes to stymie an override effort.

Both sides in the fight appear eager for the showdown, with administration officials saying Bush must prove he cannot be bullied into supporting an expansive Democratic domestic agenda while Democrats believe they can gain a political issue if Bush vetoes legislation that polls show enjoys overwhelming public support.

"We are hard-pressed to offer any further compromise," said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, even tried to strip the two-month training wage Democrats reluctantly added to their bill.

"Unless we can work out a compromise with the White House we ought to dump the training wage," Metzenbaum said.

He withdrew the attempt after House Democrats told him the provision was essential to maintain support among moderate Democrats and a small number of Republicans who voted for the original House bill. But Metzenbaum said he might ask the conference committee to reconvene and consider his motion if Bush makes no attempt to reach a compromise.

There were 18 areas in which the language of House and Senate bills differed. Fourteen concerned minor amendments related to the minimum wage and were resolved by representatives of the Labor committees.

The Senate conferees then met with representatives of the House Ways and Means Committee and, without discussion, stripped from the final bill four tax-related Senate amendments, including a proposal to raise the amount of outside income a Social Security recipient can earn before losing some benefits.

Dancing Mom Files Suit After Police Arrested Her

PALM SPRINGS, Fla. (AP) — A woman who rushed out of the shower to dance to a Gladys Knight video didn't know neighbors were peering through her window and she ended up getting jailed and losing her two girls to the state for two days.

So now Darleen Scott is suing the Palm Springs Public Safety Department for false arrest, harassment and false imprisonment in the January 1988 incident.

"I was treated like a murderer, like I was no good," the 31-year-old nurse's aide said Tuesday. "I was in my own house minding my own business."

She said she had asked her daughters to call her out of the shower if the music video of "Love Overboard" by Gladys Knight and the Pips appeared on television.

Neighbors looking through a window into her third-floor apartment thought she was nude as she danced, and filed a child abuse report with the police. She later told officers she was wearing a towel.

She was arrested on three counts of lewd and lascivious behavior in the presence of a child — her two daughters and a 14-year-old girl looking through the window, said attorney W. Trent Steele, who is representing Ms. Scott on behalf of the American Civil Liberties Union.

She spent a night in the Palm Beach County Stockade, and her daughters, then ages 3 and 10, spent two days in separate foster homes.

Shuttle Count Moving

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — The countdown advanced smoothly today toward Thursday's scheduled launch of Atlantis with five astronauts and a robot probe to Venus.

"This time we're going to see if we can get it right," astronaut David Walker, who will command the flight, said Tuesday. Four days earlier, a launch attempt was called off just 31 seconds before the planned liftoff.

"Looks like the vehicle's been turned around real well," Walker told reporters. "We're extremely pleased the folks here at the cape were able to do such a good and quick job getting it ready to go again."

The other crew members are pilot Ronald Grabe and mission specialists Mary Cleave, Mark Lee and Norman Thagard.

Liftoff is scheduled for 1:48 p.m. Thursday.

"There are no major issues in sight," Robert Crippen, NASA's deputy director of operations, said after a mission management meeting Tuesday. "We're pressing on."

Shuttle weather forecasters said there was a 70 percent chance conditions would be favorable.

Boycott Of Exxon Products Gets Mixed Response Across Country

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The one-day boycott of Exxon products around the country is the start of a "war of words and actions" against the nation's largest oil company over its huge Alaskan spill, environmentalists and politicians say.

The campaign Tuesday met with mixed results in scattered cities and dissents from independent service stations who say they're victims of the spill, too.

"I just think the end result is not going to be to hurt the people who are responsible," said Evan Jaeger, who manages an Exxon station in Elmwood Park, N.J. "It's going to hurt the little guy trying to make a living."

Exxon issued a statement calling the boycott unjust, and a company executive defended the cleanup of the spill.

"We cannot undo what happened," said Exxon U.S.A. President William D. Stevens in Houston. "However, we can, and we are, taking every possible action to limit the damage, clean up the mess, and otherwise mitigate the impacts."

But consumer activist Ralph Nader said Exxon "should not be allowed to forget" the nation's worst oil spill and that a boycott was the way to send a message to the oil giant.

Nader joined representatives from several environmental and consumer groups in accusing Exxon of failing to be prepared for the spill and not rapidly responding to the accident that has fouled hundreds of miles of Alaska's coast.

"Americans can take action now by voting with their steering wheel and dollars against all Exxon products," Nader said in Washington.

Exxon spokeswoman Sarah Johnson said 10,000 credit cards out of 7 million have been returned to the company since the March 24th spill.

Exxon said it had received no reports from dealers of a loss in volume of gasoline sold as a result of the credit-card return or from boycotts.

Only about 5 percent, or 620, of the 12,400 Exxon brand stations in the United States are owned and operated by the company. The rest are independent.

J. Edward Surette Jr., executive director of the Bay State Gasoline Retailers Association in Billerica, Mass., said his group did a statewide survey of dealers Tuesday but it was too early to assess the impact of the boycott.

"The Exxon dealer had no more to do with that oil spill than the barber who last cut your hair," said Surette, saying it was unfair for consumers to vent their anger at dealers.

Rallies supporting the boycott were held in Portland, Ore., Boston and Anchorage, where about 400 chanting and sign-waving protesters rallied in front of Exxon's Alaska headquarters.

"We are beginning the war of words and actions against any oil company that doesn't understand its responsibility to protect the environment," declared state Sen. Carol Amick, lead organizer of the boycott movement in Massachusetts.

In Portland, more than 100 people rallied in the shadow of Alaskan oil tankers being repaired at the shipyard where the ruptured Exxon Valdez is scheduled to be inspected next month.

In Eugene, Ore., three dozen protesters picketed an Exxon gasoline station, chanting such things as "Cut the card, save the Earth."

"We need to show Exxon that massive environmental destruction is more than just bad public relations: It is bad business," Marc Osten, of the State Public Interest Research Group, said in Portland. "We must boycott them until the Gulf of Alaska is clean, until innocent victims are compensated and until we are assured that this will never happen again."

The Alaskan spill and an explosion at a North Sea oil rig have heightened concerns over gasoline supplies for the summer's peak driving season. Crude oil prices have risen more than $7 a barrel since January.

Since the accident, gasoline prices have increased an average 10 percent nationally, while the Pacific Northwest saw surges as high as 25 percent in less than a month, said Marla Rae, executive assistant to Oregon Attorney General Dave Frohnmayer.

Dead Birds Line Beach

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

VALDEZ, Alaska — Thousands of dead birds, snared in a giant glob of sticky oil, line a beach 300 miles southwest of Valdez, victims of the spreading crude that has devastated Alaska's coast for weeks.

While enviromentalists, government and Exxon officials trade barbs over blame, the oil drifts inexorably, fouling the shoreline and leaving dead, dying or dirtied birds, fish, otters, seals and sea lions. Even Alaska's lumbering, powerful brown bears have been seen prowling on oil-caked beaches.

The oil is selective: It leap-frogs large stretches of coast, then hits others with contamination ranging from a light film to ankle-deep goo.

"We landed along a wide tidal basin, about six miles of beach," said Ray Bane, superintendent of Katmai National Park. "We found oil debris in large quantities throughout the tidal zone. We saw 2,000 to 3,000 dead birds. ... You can't really tell what they are. They're one big blob of oil."

Since March 24, when the tanker Exxon Valdez smashed into Bligh Reef in Prince William Sound and leaked 10.1 million gallons of crude through its shattered hull, the reports of destroyed wildlife have multiplied steadily.

The spill has reached Chignik, 525 miles southwest of Valdez, and residents there are fearful the oil may interfere with their salmon season, which begins next week.

painting of his boat, Ginjorkat, that depicts the vessel out at sea. The boat's name is a combination of the names of Whichard's children — Gina, Jordan and Kathryn.

Pittman and speakers R.W. "Wally" Howard and C.D. Spangler aimed jokes at Whichard throughout the evening.

Howard, former regional vice president for Wachovia, said he heard a boxer say recently he was going take his opponent and "bust him up bad," but they would be friends again after the fight. He hoped the same would be true with Whichard, he said.

Howard lamented how Whichard remained landlocked at the University of Mississippi during his hitch in the Navy during World War II and never got to sea on a battleship.

Howard also reeled of a list of Whichard's accomplishments and honors. A graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, he is a member of Wachovia's board of directors and the UNC Board of Governors, and he is a former member of the Board of Trustees at East Carolina University.

Whichard has served as president of the Greenville Jaycees and Rotary clubs, Howard said, and he was also named Citizen of the Year by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

"The things that I admire the most are the things he does for this community anonymously," Howard said, citing Whichard's charity fund-raising around Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Spangler, president of the 16-campus University of North Carolina system, said he once heard Whichard accurately described as a walking thermometer. He also praised Whichard for his contributions to the state's educational system through his work on the board of governors.

"Dave is completely honest and up front about what he thinks. He is without guile. You have no idea how valuable those qualities are to me as president of the UNC system." he said.

Spangler cited two specific examples of Whichard's work. One, he lead the way in creating a system-wide drug policy for faculty and staff, Spangler said. The policy took over a year to establish, and Spangler called the measure "a giant step for the university."

Two, he said Whichard co-chaired a committee that revamped how future teachers will be trained at state universities. Two-thirds of the committee's recommendations are currently being implemented, he said.

"He has made a difference in our state. Greenville, North Carolina, is fortunate to have such a distinguished citizen of our state," Spangler said.

Grady Mullis, Pitt District Scouting executive, said the annual award is designed to recognize an individual who has provided meritorious service to the community.

There are 1,500 Scouts and 400 adults involved in the Pitt Scouting program, Mullis said, and a special committee selects the award winner.

"It's a way to honor the citizen who really does a lot for the community," he said.

The two past winners are insurance executive W.M. "Booger" Scales and Harry Leslie, former manager of the Burroughs Wellcome operation in Greenville.

by lower sales during the Christmas selling season which eroded gross profit and increased general and administrative expenses.

Consolidated company revenues for the fiscal year ended Jan. 28 amounted to $326,378,000 compared with $340,145,000 for the year which ended Jan. 30, 1988, Davis said.

Total retail sales of $273,852,000 for the last fiscal year decreased 7.1 percent from the prior fiscal year. The company sustained a net loss for the fiscal year ended Jan. 28 of $3,452,000 (or a net loss of $.74 per share) compared with a net loss of $1,940,000 (or a net loss of $.42 per share) for the prior fiscal year ended Jan. 30, 1988, the president reported.

Escaped Hogs

WILMINGTON (AP) — A tractor-trailer carrying 184 hogs overturned Tuesday, killing 15 of the animals and leaving their squealing companions to be rounded up by Highway Patrol troopers and passersby.

The hogs were on the last leg of their journey from South Carolina to a slaughterhouse in Clinton when the wreck occurred around 8 a.m. on U.S. 76.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market hovered around Tuesday's closing levels today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials edged up .18 to 2,403.04 in the first half hour of trading.

Losers slightly outnumbered gainers in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 422 up, 459 down and 566 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 26.17 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

In economic news, the productivity of American workers in the nonfarm sector of the economy rose 0.5 percent in the first three months of 1989, up 0.2 percent from the first quarter of 1988, the Labor Department said today. Output in the nonfarm sector rose 3.6 percent during the first quarter while hours worked increased by 3.1 percent.

Eastman Kodak dropped ¼ to 43⅝ on top of a 3¼-point loss Tuesday, when the company reported a bigger-than-expected decline in its quarterly earnings.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .06 to 172.43. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .06 at 344.60.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 12.10 to 2,402.86.

Advancing issues ran about even with decliners, with 711 stocks up, 727 down and 519 unchanged on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 172.56 million shares, against 138.05 million in the previous session.

Athletes' Advocate Says Silence Routine

Benetti blew a .16 and a .15 on the Breathalyzer. He has declined to comment on any discipline taken against him. He is set to appear in court May 16.

Waverly Phelps, owner of the Phelps dealership, said he has been providing ECU with a car for 23 years, and he said he has never had a problem. Collins said he had been providing a car for about five years and never had a bad experience. Both men said the university pays for the automobile insurance, not the dealerships, and the arrests should not affect the arrangement.

With no public statement from the university or the athletic administration, it is not known whether the coaches face any disciplinary action or how severe any punishment may be.

Stan Lewter, an assistant basketball coach at ECU in 1986-87 and now a part-time assistant at North Carolina State University, said he was never aware of any basketball coaches or players having trouble with alcohol during his time at ECU. He said a coach should not be fired for one DWI conviction, but there should be an effort to determine whether the coach is abusing alcohol.

"I would talk to the coach, if I was a head coach and it was an assistant," Lewter said. "If it was me, I would sit down and re-evaluate my own self. A lot of things happen. The most important thing is to find out that that person had no abuse problem. If it continued to be a problem with the same person, there would be a discipline problem.

"There is a lot of pressure in coaching, more so than in a lot of jobs, and more so than many people realize. Sometimes you have to hit bottom before you can reach the top."

Though it may be a double standard, Lewter said a player probably should face disciplinary measures for a DWI.

"Whatever team policies are set forth by the coaches and the university, I think those are the policies they would try to adhere to," he said.

At ECU, Baker dismissed at least one athlete — Joseph Francis Molineaux, 23 — for being convicted of DWI. He declined to comment on how he would have handled a situation where a coach received a DWI, but he said the incident would have been taken seriously.

"The coaches would be held to a tougher standard (than the players) as far as I was concerned," he said.

However, DeVenzio said he believes athletes are usually held to a tougher standard when it comes to drugs and alcohol. There is a good chance an athlete who was arrested under circumstances similar to Kelly's and Benetti's would be let go from the team immediately to stem any possible negative publicity, he said.

"I don't think there's any question," he said. "I think certainly it's an interesting issue. I feel there's a different standard across the board (for athletes) versus administrators or employees, or whatever."

There are two examples at other North Carolina schools in which atheltes' DWIs were handled differently. University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill sophomore Deems May pleaded guilty to a DWI charge Tuesday. Tar Heel Coach Mack Brown has made no announcement regarding May's status with the team. May was allowed to participate in spring practice.

At North Carolina State University, Coach Dick Sheridan immediately suspended player Ray Frost earlier this year when Frost was arrested for DWI. Frost will not be allowed to join the team this fall, Sheridan said.

DeVenzio said he objects to immediately dropping players because universities claim they are primarily educational institutions, yet they continue to feed off the revenue and positive press generated by big time sports and popular athletes. But, when there is a problem with an athlete, universities often dismiss the individual from a team to disassociate the school from the person and any harmful publicity, he said.

On the other hand, if there is an internal incident — such as the coaches' DWIs — universities recoil from the media to avoid negative publicity, DeVenzio said.

"Most universities are reluctant to ever release anything," DeVinzio said. "It develops into a siege mentality (on the part of reporters). By them withholding information, it makes the story all the more interesting."

Molineaux, now a senior at ECU, said his situation is an example of an athlete being dropped from the team to avoid bad publicity. He played three years under Baker, until being let go from the squad in the summer of 1988 shortly before fall practice began. He said he was arrested for DWI in April 1988 and was convicted a month later.

He chose not to tell the coaches because he believed it was the only way to remain on the team, he said. Then, two weeks before fall practice was to begin, Molineaux said he received a letter from Baker informing him he would not be allowed to play because the coach had learned of the DWI.

Molineaux admitted he had previously missed curfew and was not in the best standing with Baker, but he said his suspension from the team appeared to be out of line with the university's policy for athletes.

All 450 athletes at ECU are tested at random every year for marijuana, cocaine and common street drugs, said Dr. James H. McCallum, team physician. Also, a DWI is considered a positive drug test, he said.

On the first positive test, McCallum said he has a conference with the athlete to discuss the health dangers of alcohol and drugs. With a second positive, the coach is informed. On a third positive test, the athlete is suspended from the team indefinitely, McCallum said.

In addition to those rules, coaches may suspend a player or take any other disciplinary action, he said. As director of Student Health Services, McCallum said he oversees only the health aspect of the testing procedure, not punishment.

"Ours is strictly a medical interest, attempting to convey to the student the harmful effects of drugs and alcohol," he said.

On top of McCallum's regulations, Molineaux said athletic officials had also told players they would be temporarily suspended from the team for a second positive test, and a letter would be sent home. Molineaux, who has since lost his scholarship, said the action taken against him was drastic.

"I screwed up. I shouldn't have been drinking," said Molineaux, who plans to remain at ECU next fall as a graduate student. "(But), I thought his (Baker's) punishment was a little harsh and showed prejudice."

Whether coaches would be disciplined for being involved for drugs or alcohol was a topic that was rarely mentioned during his days as an athlete, he said.

"Coaches were never brought up. In fact, they said they would submit to a drug test, but they never got called. I thought it was real ironic, because just a couple of weeks ago (the two coaches) got DWIs," he said. "With coaches, it goes a little bit further, because they set the rules."

Though the university's policy calls for athletes to receive counseling for the first DWI or positive drug test, Molineaux said he believes if ECU athletes had been arrested in situations similar to Kelly's and Benetti's, they would have been suspended from the team as he was.

"Are you kidding me?" he said. "The players wouldn't be allowed to play in the (Purple-Gold) game. They'd be lucky to still be on the team.

"It's clear that reprisals are made against players for any violation. In the past, coaches walked Scot-free. It goes back to the old double standard. It tears players apart.

"Dollars to doughnuts, I'm willing to bet it's the typical slap on the wrist when it comes to coaches. It's that way at East Carolina," Molineaux said.

Typically, the university does not intervene in off-campus DWIs or other incidents involving faculty members, said ECU Faculty Senate Chairman John Atkeson. Those are problems between the court system and the individuals, he said.

The actions by athletic officials against players who receive DWIs appear to be an effort to establish a positive public image, he said.

"They are trying to build an image here, I guess, like (N.C. State basketball coach and athletic director Jim) Valvano's trying to build at N.C. State," he said.

Reed Lose, a rising senior on the ECU basketball team, said only testing athletes holds that group to a higher standard.

"We're in the fishbowl, so they're going to do more to us. But, I don't have anything to worry about because I'm never going to test positive." he said.

Lose said he has no strong opinion either way on whether coaches should be drug tested just as athletes are, but he said it is a topic that is likely to receive more interest in the future.

"It's tough. There are so many things you have to think about with Coach Benetti and the football coach (Kelly)," Lose said. "That makes you think even more, maybe we should drug test coaches.

"If this stuff keeps up, maybe they're going to have to do something. But, if they're going to drug test coaches, you're going to have to drug test faculty."

ECU senior Larry Murphy, past president of the Student Government Association, was a member of last year's football coach selection committee along with Hart. While everyone at the university should be held to a high standard, he said he does not believe any group — coaches, faculty or students — should be suspended for a DWI conviction.

"I would think that the coaches and faculty should be held just as accountable as students," he said. "I also don't feel like any coaches or faculty should be relieved of their duties for DWI."

Scores on the American College Testing Program (ACT), on a scale of 1 to 36, showed a scant .1-point gain. And 11 of the 28 states in which the ACT dominates posted decreases.

Looking at trends since the first wall chart was issued in 1982, one bright note was a continuous rise in the percentage of students taking the Advanced Placement test qualifying them for college credit, from 5 to 11 percent. The department attributed the climb largely to doubled Hispanic involvement and an 83 percent increase in participation by blacks.

The high school graduation rate rose from 69.5 percent in the first chart to 71.7 percent in 1985. But it fell slightly in 1986 to 71.6 percent and dropped to 71.1 percent in 1987, the latest year for which statistics could be calculated.

Minnesota ranked first with a high school completion rate of 90.6 percent, while the District of Columbia was last at 55.5 percent. Wyoming showed the most improvement, zooming from 25th in 1982 to second in 1987; Michigan did the worst, falling from 28th to 48th.

The Council of Chief State School Officers took a relatively rosy view of the wall chart, saying the trend in the past few years has been positive. The group noted that 44 of the 50 states have made college entrance test gains since 1982 and 38 states have improved their high school completion rates since then.

But Gordon Ambach, executive director of the council, added that "the task ahead is gigantic," particularly in light of "the urgent needs of our nation's economically disadvantaged youth and those with limited proficiency in English."

The department noted that Alabama, Mississippi, South Carolina and the District, all with relatively high poverty rates, have registered some of the largest increases in college entrance test scores since 1982. It said this shows that states with large proportions of disadvantaged sudents can make great progress.

However, while South Carolina showed the most improvement of any state, with a 48-point gain in SAT scores since 1982, it still ranked dead last this year among the 22 states in which the SAT is the dominant test, with a score of 838. The District was second from the bottom despite healthy gains.

Alabama tied for the top in ACT improvement, up nine-tenths of a point since 1982, but was ranked 21st of the 28 states this year where most students take the ACT. Mississippi was came up 28th or last, with an average score of 16.2.

Mississippi also ranked last — this time among all the states — in per-pupil spending. The state spent $2,350 per student in 1988. Alaska was the highest at $8,010, followed by New York at $6,497.

The wall chart also compares states on teacher salaries, pupil-teacher ratios and education reform efforts. Alaskan teachers were paid the highest in 1988, $40,424, while South Dakotans were at the bottom with $19,758. The national average last year was $28,008, up from $19,274 in 1982.

Class size ranged from a low in Connecticut, with a student-teacher ratio of just over 13-1, to a high in Utah, which had 24.7 students for each teacher. The national average was 17.6.

On the reform front, the department found that 23 states have minimum competency testing for graduation and a dozen have tests for grade promotion. Eight states have authority to intervene in academically bankrupt districts. Forty-four states require or will soon require new teachers to take a certification exam and three require current teachers to take such a test.

mile — 414,900 feet of line to serve 1,027 customers — costing $7.02 million or $6,843 per customer. Phase II would follow — 251,000 feet of line to serve 434 customers — along roads with 12 or more potential customers at a cost of $3.42 million or $7,800 per customer.

The report suggests that after 10 years, roads having less than 12 customers per mile could be added to the system at a cost of some $15.29 million for 1.9 million feet of line or about $10,000 per customer.

The study also suggests the need for additional elevated storage tanks, and (because all the water systems in the county, with the exception of Greenville Utilities, now rely on ground water for their supply) if demand becomes great enough, impoundments along the Tar River to ensure an ample supply of treated water.

The study, which recommends that the county "encourage and assist existing utilities to extend lines," rather than form a new water system or create water or sanitary districts to provide service to potential customers, says that the existing systems are more able to secure low-cost financing for projects that the county would be.

The county's only source of funding for such projects — aside from taxes — would be through the Community Development Block Grant program, Community Development or Economic Development, Alligood said.

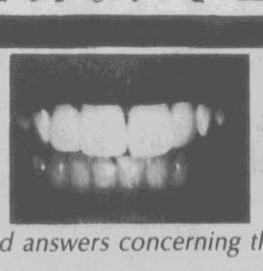
Whiter Teeth?


AFTER
Commonly asked questions and answers concerning this procedure.
Question: "How long does the procedure take?"
Answer: This procedure takes only 15 to 20 minutes to start and the patient completes the treatment at home and to their desired degree of whiteness; however, on your first visit, the dentist must prepare you for the procedure and usually a normal one-hour appointment is sufficient. The results are very predictable when the patient follows the instructions to the letter. Most cases can be completed within a two week period, more complicated cases may require a longer period of time. Patients who follow the instructions properly may see results within the first three days of treatment.
Question: "If this is such a new procedure, how can I be sure it's safe?"
Answer: Although it is a new product, it is based on the older bleaching techniques that have been in use on teeth for over twenty years. When used properly, these techniques have proven to be extremely safe but overpriced for most people. It is a much milder medication than anything ever used before for this purpose and is priced where every patient can now afford to look their very best with a totally different and easier procedure.
Question: "How long will the results last?"

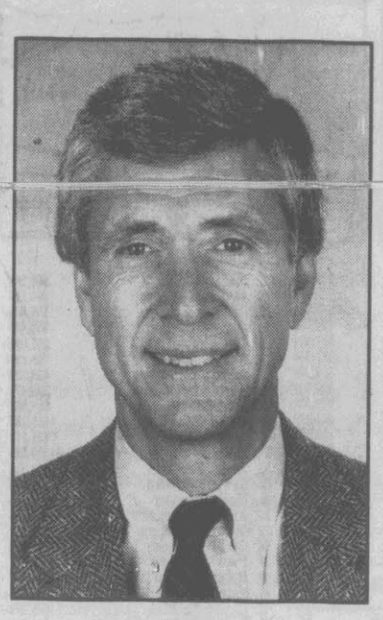
Holland To Look Before Signing



Terry Holland

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — Virginia basketball coach Terry Holland says it's unlikely he will take another job after 15 seasons with the Cavaliers, but he still wants to look around before signing a contract.

One of the head coaching jobs Holland is keeping his eyes on is at Kentucky.

"I've been under contract here since 1976 and I haven't investigated any other job opportunities, but before I make a commitment to another long-term contract I think I should take my head up out of the sand and see where I am," Holland said. "I should at least determine if this is where I want to be."

Holland, 47, is entering the final year of a five-year contract, which also includes a series of five, one-year extensions.

Holland said he has had informal discussions with Kentucky Athletic Director C.M. Newton about the head coaching job, but has not heard from Newton in more than a week.

Kentucky has been searching for a coach since Eddie Sutton resigned in March in the wake of an NCAA investigation into illegal recruiting practices.

Holland said in a taped interview put out by the school that he will not consider the Kentucky job until the investigation is complete and he knows what sanctions the Kentucky faces.

Kentucky expects to hear from the NCAA in two weeks about possible sanctions.

Holland's name surfaced Monday as a candidate for the head coaching job at Kentucky, hours after Seton Hall coach P.J. Carlesimo withdrew as a candidate for the position.

Holland has not been officially interviewed for the job and has not visited the Kentucky campus.

Newton told a group of Kentucky alumni group Monday night that he may put things on hold until the NCAA findings are announced, but that he had two or three candidates other than Holland that he is considering for the post. He would not divulge the names of those coaches.

"Until Kentucky knows where it stands, it's difficult to get beyond the basics," Holland said. "I'd be legitimately interested, but I'm also comfortable where I am."

Holland said the contract negotiations with Virginia were going well and said he is not using the Kentucky job as leverage.

But he added that he does want to make sure the Cavaliers' program has everything necessary to flourish.

"I would never leave Virginia because of money," Holland said. "I make a good living here."

Holland did say that he would like to see the university pay for improvements to 25-year-old University Hall, the smallest arena in the Atlantic Coast Conference and the ninth-largest basketball facility in the state.

Holland also said he believes a study due to be released this summer will reveal that Virginia needs a new arena.

Warriors Pull Surprise

Detroit, New York and Phoenix Also End Series

By Bill Barnard
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The networks aren't the only ones having a sweeps month in May.

Detroit, New York, Golden State and Phoenix completed 3-0 sweeps in their first-round, best-of-5 NBA playoffs Tuesday night, and two more series could end that way tonight.

The biggest shocker was Golden State, which finished eight games behind Utah in the Western Conference standings. The Warriors won 120-106 at home Tuesday night after winning twice at Salt Lake City over the favored Jazz.

Golden State coach Don Nelson, who had 42 playoff victories as a coach at Milwaukee, said this was his most satisfying win.

"One year we swept Boston. But I had a veteran team," he said. "This is a young team that grew together this year, and that's what makes it so special."

In other games Tuesday, the Pistons ended Boston's shortest playoff season in 33 years with a 100-85 victory; the Knicks won their third straight close game over Philadelphia with a 116-115 decision in overtime; Phoenix overcame a 23-point second-half deficit to sweep Denver 130-121; and Milwaukee took a 2-1 lead over Atlanta by winning 117-113 in overtime.

In tonight's games, it's Cleveland at Chicago, Seattle at Houston and the Los Angeles Lakers at Portland. The Lakers and Sonics lead 2-0 and the Cavaliers and Bulls are tied 1-1.

Chris Mullin scored 35 points, including nine during a game-breaking 25-5 run midway through the second half for the Warriors, who were 20-62 last season.

"A lot of people counted us out when we first started the season," Mullin said. "What people say doesn't matter, what we 12 players and the coaching staff do is what matters. To some people it's a miracle. To me it's a good series."

Rookie of the Year Mitch Richmond added 26 points and 11 rebounds for the Warriors, who play Phoenix in the Western Conference semifinals. Terry Teagle had 24 points and Rod Higgins grabbed 14 rebounds for Golden State.

John Stockton had a career playoff-high 34 points and 16 assists and Karl Malone had 33 points and 14 rebounds for Utah, which lost its sixth consecutive playoff game to Golden State dating to 1987.

"I take my hat off to them because they were underdogs and rose to the occasion," Stockton said. "It hurts. It hurts the same as losing to Detroit or L.A."

Golden State trailed 66-61 when it began the decisive 25-5 spurt on a follow shot by Teagle with 5:22 left in the third period. Winston Garland's basket and two free throws by Mullin extended the lead to 15 with 11:05 remaining.

Utah, behind Malone's 17 fourth-quarter points, closed the gap to 94-88 with 5:25 to go before 3-pointers by Bol and Higgins pushed the lead back to 11.

Pistons 100, Celtics 85

Detroit shut down Boston's offense in one quarter for the third straight game and got 25 points from Vinnie Johnson to hand the Celtics their first opening-round playoff loss since 1956.

The Pistons outscored Boston 27-8 in the last 9:17 and held the Celtics to 12 points in the final period after they led 73-71 entering the period. Boston had a 10-point quarter and a 13-point period earlier in the series.

Detroit allowed less than 100 points for the third straight game and limited the Celtics to 30 points after they led 55-51 at halftime.

Leading 77-73 with 9:42 left, Boston went scoreless for 4:18 until Reggie Lewis, who led Boston with 20 points, ended a 10-0 Detroit run with a three-point play that made the score 83-80.

Rose Left Off Poster

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Pete Rose's face may be a common sight on sports pages and nightly newscasts, but it doesn't rate a spot on a poster commemorating the 50th anniversary of a minor league.

Though he's one of the New York-Penn League's most famous alumni, Rose's image has been left off the Class A minor league's poster that includes 18 other former NY-P players who went on to fame in the majors.

There's Wade Boggs, Jim Rice, Maury Wills and Warren Spahn, but Rose is missing — and it's no oversight.

"The sponsor didn't want him on there," league president Leo Pinckney said.

A spokeswoman for Marine-Midland Bank, which sponsored the poster, said she didn't know why Rose was left off. Judith Nolan said baseball's investigation into its all-time hits leader for alleged gambling may have been a factor, but "I really can't say."

Charles Lynch, the league's lawyer, also declined to say why the

Brandt Knew End Was Coming Soon

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

IRVING, Texas — For days, Gil Brandt didn't want to hear the telephone ring because he knew owner Jerry Jones and Coach Jimmy Johnson were debating the fate of his Dallas Cowboys' scouting department.

"It's kind of like being staked out on an ant hill while somebody gave you Chinese water torture," said Brandt, 57. "Then in one call I went from being in the mansion to being in a pup tent."

The "turk" did call and the purge was complete of the men who built the Cowboys from an expansion team in the 1960s to Super Bowl champions.

Brandt was the last member of the original foursome who built the Cowboys from scratch.

"He told me finances was the reason, that he's losing $29,000 a day," Brandt said. "He'll probably fire four or five scouts including Bob Griffin.

"I told him I know I did as good a job as possible. I feel good about the 29 years I had with the Cowboys. But it's a bad way for it to end. He didn't even shake my hand. These guys are over their heads."

Jones said the Cowboys' 10-year drought in landing top talent wasn't the reason Brandt was let go.

"We just felt the way we wanted to go in the scouting department was without Gil," Jones said.

Johnson was more succinct.

"We had a difference in philosophy on how you go about drafting players," Johnson said. "Our coaches will play a large part in the evaluation and selection of players and we'll go with a smaller scouting department."

The Cowboys will be more active in picking up cuts from preseason rosters and not depend as heavily on free agents.

Johnson and Brandt were thought to be close friends, particularly since LOUISVILLE — First, Western Playboy gave his handlers "a big scare." Now, trainer Harvey Vanier is hoping his horse can do the same thing to a growing field in the Kentucky Derby on Saturday.

With the decision on Tuesday to start the D. Wayne Lukas-trained grass specialist, Shy Tom, a field that once was expected to top out at 10 or 12 reached a possible 16.

Vanier feels lucky that his horse will be among them. Western Playboy won the Blue Grass Stakes on April 15 after nearly being knocked sideways by Dispersal, and a week later, he came down with a mysterious infection in the hock on his left hind leg.

"I went over him with a fine tooth comb after the Blue Grass, and there wasn't a nick on him," Vanier said. "We're not sure how he got the infection, but I guess it must have been from the Blue Grass."

Western Playboy, to be ridden by Randy Romero, has been off antibiotics since Saturday, however. His blood count is normal, and the swelling has not returned.

"The only worries I've got now is if he's enough horse," Vanier said.

And if he doesn't have enough horse, he can blame only himself. The 65-year-old Vanier and his wife, Nancy, bred Western Playboy at their Fairberry Farm in Waterloo, Ill., and they own 75 percent of him. The Vaniers also owned the sire, Play Fellow, who finished sixth for Vanier in the 1983 Derby won by Sunny's Halo. Western Playboy's mother is Westward Hope, a mare also bred by the Vaniers.

"We raised him. We helped him suckle his mother," Vanier said of Western Playboy. "He's always been a forwardly horse. When he was a foal, he'd come right up to you.

"He's courageous and all heart," Vanier said. "There's no question about that. The only question is can he run fast enough."

That question was reinforced on Tuesday when Western Playboy worked a slow five-eighths in 1:03, and Vanier said he might blow him out Friday. By comparison, Derby longshots Wind Splitter worked 1:01 and Triple Buck 1:01 3-5.

"He was a little nonchalant," Vanier said of his horse "He's got to the point where he's not interested in doing fast morning workouts anymore. I'm satisfied with the way he did it ... My horse is fit, and he doesn't need to work. I thought he'd go 1:01, but he was loafing a little bit."

If he loafs on Saturday, Vanier won't be satisfied. Western Playboy figures to draw longer odds than only the entry of Derby favorite Easy Goer and stablemate Awe Inspiring; Sunday Silence, winner of the Santa Anita Derby by a record 11 lengths, and perhaps the new entry of Derby Trial winner Houston and Shy Tom, both trained by Lukas.

Sunday Silence galloped two miles on Tuesday "good and strong," trainer Charlie Whittingham said. "We're in good shape." Sunday Silence's rider, Patrick Valenzuela, arrived in Churchill Downs on Tuesday from California.

Shy Tom won the Grade III Forerunner on grass in his last start, and owner W.T. Young of Overbrook Farm decided Tuesday morning to enter him. He has won four of eight career starts.

"Mr. Young came by this morning and he said he wants to run the horse," Lukas said. "He's got a pretty solid little record and it was hard to say no."

Shy Tom will be ridden by Chris Antley, whose a 64-day winning streak ended Monday.

The field also is expected to include Dansil, Clever Trevor, Flying Continental, Northern Wolf, Hawkster, Irish Actor, Notation and Faultless Ensign.

Clever Trevor worked five-eighths in 1:01 1-5, while Notation went that distance in 1:02 4-5.

Rain Halts Area Baseball Games

Rain and wet grounds forced the postponment of several area baseball games scheduled for Tuesday.

Rose High School's Big East Conference game at Rocky Mount was washed out and has been rescheduled for Thursday at 7:30 p.m., again on the Gryphons' home field.

D.H. Conley's home contest with West Carteret has been rescheduled for tonight at 8 p.m. Farmville Central's game at South Lenoir was reset for May 17, and a scheduled game with Charles B. Aycock planned for Thursday has been moved to today at 4:30 p.m.

Ayden-Grifton's game with Aycock will now be played Thursday night at 7:30 p.m.

Conley will also host West Carteret in a junior varsity game at 4 p.m. and a softball doubleheader at 4:30 p.m.

Rose Girls Capture Soccer Victory

Rose High School's girls soccer team gained a 4-1 victory over Eastern North Carolina School for the Deaf Tuesday in a Big East Conference match.

ENCSD scored first, getting a goal at the six minute mark by Godwin.

Rose came back to tie it up at the 10:30 mark when Tyler Hill kicked in a goal. Rose then took the lead at 43:23 when Valerie Vincent scored.

Rose added two more goals in the second half. Gloria Taft scored at 63:00 and Maggie Brown at 71:00.

Rose outshot ENCSD by 17-5. Rose goalie Susan Grimsley had four saves while Amy Tomlinson added one. ENCSD recorded seven saves.

Rose is now 3-6-1 on the year and will play at home to Fike today. Rose then travels to Fike for another match on Thursday.

Stoneham, Snyder Key Rose Win

ROCKY MOUNT — Jenny Stoneham and Amy Snyder both hit home runs and led Rose High School to a 21-9 softball victory over Rocky Mount Tuesday.

The Rampettes took the lead with a pair of runs in the second, then added four in the third, three of those on Stoneham's homer. Rocky Mount came back with two in the bottom of the inning to cut it to 6-2.

Then, in the fourth, Rose put it away with four more, taking a 10-2 lead. Leslie Murry singled and Jenny Stoneham reached on an error. Cammie Smith tripled both of them in, and scored on Julie Hallack's single. Heather Powell reached on an error and Jennifer Vore singled, scoring Hallack.

Rose added seven in the fifth, one of them on Snyder's homer, and got four more in the sixth. Rocky Mount scored one in the fourth, four in the fifth and two in the sixth.

Rose was led by Smith and Hallack with three hits each, while Murry, Stoneham and Powell each had two.

Rose, 4-5 in Big East play, will entertain Beddingfield on Thursday.

Edwards, Bridgers To Be Honored

Blue Edwards and Meredith Bridgers will be honored Thursday by the Wake County Chapter of the Pirate Club as East Carolina's male and female athletes of the year.

Edwards and Bridgers will be honored at a banquet at the Sheraton Imperial Hotel at Resarch Triangle Park.

Edwards, a 6-5 senior basketball player, was named the CAA Player of the Year He was the sixth leading scorer in the nation averaging 26.7 points a game He also averaged 6.9 rebounds per game and practically rewrote the ECU record books.

Bridagers, a Charlotte sophomore, became the first female swimmer in ECU history to qualify for the NCAA national championships.

Bridgers holds the ECU school record in the 100- and 200-meter breaststroke.

UNC Adds A 6-3 Guard To Signee List

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) — Scott Cherry, a 6-foot-3 guard, says he will attend North Carolina this fall on a basketball scholarship.

Cherry averaged nearly 20 points a game this year in leading Saratoga Catholic to a 25-1 record and a spot in the semifinals of the Class C state basketball tournament. He scored 1,116 points in three seasons at Saratoga Catholic, located about 40 miles north of Albany.

Cherry also averaged 5.5 assists a game and 4.9 steals a game this season.

Other Division I schools who recruited Cherry included Iona, St. Peter's, Holy Cross and Fairleigh Dickinson.

Valvano's Brother Heads To Catholic U.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bob Valvano, who spent last season coaching in the Swedish Pro League, on Tuesday was named head basketball coach at Catholic University, the school announced.

Valvano, 32, is the brother of North Carolina State coach Jim Valvano. He replaces Jack Bruen, who left the Division III school to take the head coaching job at Colgate University.

Fogler Completes Staff With Hiring

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Eddie Fogler, Vanderbilt's new head basketball coach, has completed his coaching staff by naming Neil Dougherty as an assistant coach and announcing that volunteer coach Mike Petrone will be retained.

Fogler had previously brought assistant coach Rick Callahan with him from Wichita State and retained Mark Elliott, who was an assistant on C.M. Newton's staff.

Two Ex-Terps Talk Of Steroid Use

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Two former University of Maryland football players said some of their teammates used steroids, The Washington Post reported today.

Tight end Dolph Tokarczk, who played at Maryland from 1984 to 1986 before transferring to the University of Pennsylvania, said he saw players using oral and injectable steroids and that some players "did amazing amounts of the stuff."

Quarterback Drew Komlo, at Maryland from 1984 to 1987 before transferring to Catholic University, said steroid use was "something you knew about, but you never said anything."

Anabolic steroids, derived from the male hormone testosterone, are used by athletes to build muscle strength, add bulk and increase speed. The drugs are believed to cause dangerous side effects and were banned by the NCAA in 1987.

Komlo, who said he never saw anyone at Maryland take steroids and had never seen steroids at Maryland, nevertheless estimated that "anywhere from 10 to 20 percent" of the 1986 team used them.

Tokarczyk estimated "20 to 25 percent" of the Terrapins used steroids during the 1985-86 school year.

"There were always guys on the team you could get them from, guys who would sell them to you if you wanted," Tokarczyk said.

Both football players said former head coach Bobby Ross and head coach Joe Krivak clearly opposed steroid use. But Tokarczyk said, "there were some assistants that turned the other cheek," and said some assistant coaches hinted that steroids could benefit him.

Krivak told the Post Tuesday, "There's never been any inference, insinuation or pressure to make our players believe that is the way to go. I've said, if I have to win that way, I don't want to."

Maryland's campus newspaper, The Diamondback, reported Monday that Dan Calvin, who runs the College Park campus' athletic drug testing program, said anabolic steroids had been detected in urine samples of Terrapins' football players.

N.Y. Prep Coach Turns Davidson Down

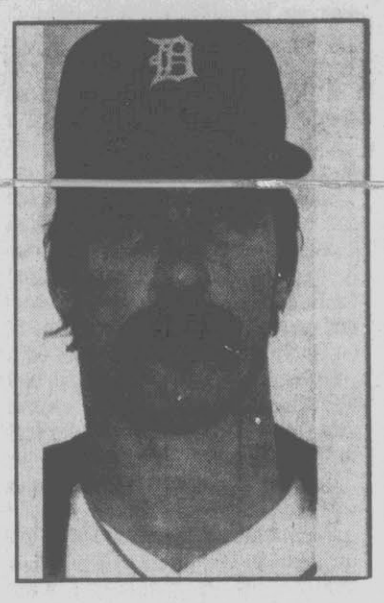
DAVIDSON, N.C. (AP) — Bob McKillop, a high school basketball coach from Long Island, N.Y., has rejected an offer to fill the vacant coaching position at Davidson, a newspaper reported Wednesday.

The Charlotte Observer quoted a source as saying that the job would be offered to Pat Dennis, who has been an assistant at Richmond for four years. The source also said Dennis will accept the job if it is offered to him.

Neither Dennis nor Davidson athletic director Kit Morris could be reached for comment.

Morris Struggling With 0-6 Record

'88's Winningest Pitcher Still Looking For 1st '89 Win



Jack Morris

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEATTLE — The '6' looks misplaced, like someone put it on the wrong side of the ledger opposite Jack Morris' name.

But, the only thing misplaced is Morris' ability to win. The winningest major league pitcher in the 1980s is still looking for his first victory of 1989.

Morris, 0-6, began the year with 156 wins in the decade. He is the only pitcher with at least 15 wins in each of the last seven seasons.

But this season has been a disaster.

"For Morris to be 0-6 is like a .300 hitter going 0 for 30," said Seattle's Alvin Davis, who drove in the winning run with a seventh-inning sacrifice fly as the Mariners defeated the Tigers 5-3 Monday night.

"Sometimes, you get a start like that."

Seattle had 10 hits off Morris in 6 2-3 innings and overcame a 3-1 deficit with one run in the fifth and three in the seventh.

Davis, who led Seattle with a single, double and game-winning RBI, has lost none of his respect for the veteran right-hander.

"He mixed his pitches well early and had good pop on his fastball. He showed us his forkball early, and that's what we got on later," Davis said.

Morris, who is off to the worst start in his career, became the first Tiger pitcher since Ted Gray in 1953 to lose his first six starts of the season

The Tigers had scored only seven runs in Morris' first five outings, but, they staked him to a two-run lead against the Mariners.

Morris couldn't hold it. His wild pitch scored a run in the fifth.

After Jim Presley's leadoff double in the seventh, Morris mishandled Omar Vizquel's bunt. The Seattle shortstop scored the winning run.

"His only luck this year has been bad," Detroit manager Sparky Anderson said.

Seattle manager Jim Lefebvre was impressed with Morris, who struck out seven before being relieved by Frank Williams.

"For a guy 0-5, he was tough. He was especially tough with men on base," Lefebvre said.

The Mariners loaded the bases with one out in the fifth. Morris struck out Davis on three pitches. Ahead in the count to Jeffrey Leonard, his wild pitch allowed Vizquel to score. He struck out Leonard on the next pitch.

The Tigers threatened in the eighth, but Ken Griffey Jr., the Mariners' rookie standout, took care of that. He robbed Fred Lynn of an extra-base hit with a fine running catch and threw out Lou Whitaker, who was trying to advance from second to third on the play.

Panthers, Rams In Wins

BAYBORO — Craig Willoughby drove in five runs with two home runs and led North Pitt to a 7-2 baseball victory over Pamlico High School Tuesday night.

The Panthers jumped into the lead for good in the top of the first inning. Reggie Daniels and Roosevelt Hines both drew two-out walks. Willoughby then provided the first of his blows, a three-run homer.

The Panthers picked up another run in the second, and added two more in the fourth as Willoughby again homered, with one man on. North Pitt picked up one more in the sixth.

Pamlico scored single runs in the third and sixth innings.

Willoughby was the only player in the game with more than one hit.

The victory boosts the Panthers to 6-6 overall and to 4-5 in the Eastern Plains Conference. They travel to South Lenoir on Thursday for their next outing.

SNOW HILL — Walt McKeel went 2-4 and keyed a five-run second inning with a three-run homer to key Greene Central past North Lenoir, 9-6, in a non-conference high school baseball game Tuesday.

The Rams, 11-4 overall and 6-0 in the EPC, scored two runs in the first to take an early lead. McKeel keved the five-run second with his three-run homer as Greene Central moved out to a 7-0 advantage.

North Lenoir pulled within 7-6 after scoring two runs in the top of the sixth, but the Rams scored two insurance runs in the bottom of the inning to build their advantage back up.

Conley Wins Coastal Golf

SWANSBORO — D.H. Conley's golfers captured the Coastal Conference championship meet Tuesday, held at Silver Creek Country Club near Swansboro.

Conley finished the afternoon with a 310 team total while West Carteret was second with a 317. Havelock took third with 325, followed by Washington at 356 and North Lenoir at 410.

Conley's Tran Dean was the individual medalist with a 76 while Ben Edwards took second place with a 77. Jason Adams tied for third with a 78, while Jason Wing was tied for sixth place with a 79.

The victory boosted Conley's record to 18-3 on the season. The Vikings will next compete in the 3-A Regionals, to be held Monday at the Washington Yacht and Country Club.

GRIFTON — Pat Hobbs recorded a low-round of 77 to lead Farmville to a Eastern Plains Tri-Match win over Ayden-Grifton and Pamlico County in golf action Tuesday.

Farmville had a team score of 320, followed by Ayden-Grifton at 327 and Pamlico County at 438.

Lance Parker added a 78 for Farmville while Allen Lewis had an 81 and Dave Baker had an 84.

For Ayden-Grifton, Chad Tulloch had a 78, Will Barnes had a 81, Mickey Adams had a 81 and Shaler Chewning added a 87.

Farmville moved to 9-1 in the EPC. Ayden-Grifton falls to 6-4.

The three teams play again Thursday at Indian Trails Country Club in Grifton.

"We're going to put him on a van and take him to Keeneland and do arthroscopic surgery on the knee," Tanner said. "You don't get this opportunity very often, but we have to do what's best for the horse."

If 16 start, the Derby will be worth $759,200 with $584,200 going to the winner.

"This year there's probably more horses at 100-1 than I've ever seen," Easy Goer's trainer, Shug McGaughey, said. "Take Shy Tom. At least Antley isn't going to make some stupid mistake, and because Lukas trains him, he won't do something like tear the gate down."

University officials have estimated that it would take three to five years for such a facility to be completed.

Holland said he understands the time necessary to raise funds and to build a new arena, but would like to see improvements made to University Hall in the meantime.

WCU Wins NCAA Berth

MONTREAT, N.C. (AP) — Western Carolina won both games Tuesday in the rain-shortened Southern Conference baseball tournament and earned the league's automatic bid to the NCAA tournament.

The Catamounts defeated Appalachian State 7-2 in the first game, and beat Marshall 4-2 in the final game of the day. They won the berth by posting the best combined regular season and tournament record at 14-5.

Hershiser Shuts Out Pirates

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Orel Hershiser changed his style. The result remained the same.

Hershiser, the 1988 Cy Young Award winner in the National League and a postseason hero for Los Angeles, pitched his first shutout of the year, a six-hitter in a 7-0 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates on Tuesday night. The Dodgers have a string of 21 shutout innings.

But he didn't do things normally, even if the outcome was familiar.

"This ball club is a club that attacks the ball," he said of the Pirates. "It's a fastball-hitting ballclub, they love to attack the ball, they're a good, young team that has a lot of good hitters, even though a lot of them are hurt.

"I had a tough time with them last year because of my approach. I was aggressive and went right after them, first-pitch fastball.

"Tonight, I changed my style because they roughed me up a bit last year. I wasn't going with the hard sinker right away.

"Barry Bonds, on the first pitch of the ball game, I threw a curveball and he hit it off the end of the bat for a base hit. When will you ever see me throw a curveball on the first pitch of a game?"

It was one of the rare pitches the Pirates could handle. Hershiser struck out six and didn't walk anyone in his first complete game of 1989. He led the National League last season with eight shutouts and tied Cincinnati's Danny Jackson for the league lead in complete games with 15.

Still, Hershiser felt he was beatable.

"When you throw under a hundred pitches you've done your job," he said. "I felt great warming up, and my arm felt almost too strong. My adrenalin was pushing me past my release point, and I was pitching out of sync. I found my groove around the fifth inning, and if they could have gotten to me early, they might have won."

Elsewhere, it was New York 7, Atlanta 1; San Diego 7, St. Louis 1; San Francisco 4, Chicago 0; Montreal 6, Cincinnati 4, and Houston 12, Philadelphia 4.

While the Pirates continued to struggle offensively — they have been held to one run or less in six of their last eight games, — Rick Dempsey hit a three-run homer in the fifth and Chris Gwynn had three hits for the Dodgers.

Mets 7, Braves 1

At Atlanta, Bob Ojeda pitched a five-hitter through eight innings for his first victory since nearly severing the tip of his left middle finger in a gardening accident last September.

It was the eighth victory in nine games for the Mets and the eighth consecutive loss for the Braves.

Ojeda, 1-3, almost severed the upper portion of the finger on his pitching hand with an electric hedgeclipper last Sept. 21. He got off to a rough start this season and had a 6.38 earned run average entering the game.

"He was outstanding," Mets manager Davey Johnson said of Ojeda. "He could have finished, but once he lost the shutout I wasn't going to push him. "He really needed a well-pitched game to dispel that lingering doubt."

Darryl Strawberry had a two-run homer.

Padres 7, Cardinals 1

Jack Clark, who left St. Louis as a free agent after the 1987 season to sign with the Yankees, got his first hit against his former team, a three-run homer to start a five-run third inning at San Diego.

Clark, traded to San Diego by New York in the offseason, drove a 2-2 pitch from Scott Terry over the center field wall as San Diego sent 10 batters to the plate in the inning.

"You can't go out there thinking, 'Boy, I'm just going out there and try to hit home runs to show them this or that,'" Clark said.

Ed Whitson pitched a six-hitter in breaking St. Louis' six-game winning streak. John Kruk had a two-run homer for the Padres and Pedro Guerrero homered for the Cardinals.

Giants 4, Cubs 0

At San Francisco, Rich Gossage got back at the Cubs, who released him just before the season.

In earning his first save as a Giant and the 303rd of his career, most of any active pitcher, Gossage came on for Rick Reuschel with the bases loaded and one out in the eighth. Gossage got Vance Law to pop out and Shawon Dunston to ground out.

In the ninth, Gossage fanned two.

Kevin Mitchell had a two-run homer in the sixth, following Will Clark's leadoff bunt single, making it 4-0.

The Cubs lost for only the second time in six games, while the Giants won for only the fourth time in 13 games.

Expos 6, Reds 4

At Montreal, Otis Nixon's two-out single in the eighth inning broke a 3-3 tie, then he scored from first base on Tim Raines' single.

Spike Owen doubled just inside the first base bag off reliever Kent Tekulve, 0-1, to start the winning rally. Nixon singled to right and scored on Raines' hit. Raines went to second on the throw home and came in on Tom Foley's single, making it 6-3.

"When I hit third base, the ball was still out in the field," Nixon said. "It would have taken a perfect throw to get me."

Astros 12, Phillies 4

At Philadelphia, the Astros had their biggest offensive output of the season with 17 hits. Glenn Davis hit a two-run homer and an RBI single, Kevin Bass was 4-for-5 and scored two runs, and Bill Doran had three hits and three RBIs. Davis leads the NL with eight home runs.

The loss was the Phillies' sixth in their last eight games, but they got a two-run homer and RBI single from Mike Schmidt.

Phillies manager Nick Leyva was disappointed with the performance of Floyd Youmans, who lasted only 1 2-3 innings.

"I know he can pitch better than that," Leyva said. "I won't be afraid to move him to the bullpen. I'm going to go with the best available pitchers."

Reuss Continues As Big Surprise

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — Jerry Reuss, the biggest find and surprise for the Chicago White Sox last year, has picked up right where he left off.

The 39-year-old lefthander pitched a four-hit, 6-0 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers Monday night for the 39th shutout of his career and his 214 victory.

Reuss, 3-2, has accounted for one-third of the White Sox victories this season after leading the staff in 1988 with a 13-9 record. Astounding, since he was considered washed up after the 1987 season.

Two years ago he was released by three different teams, the Los Angeles Dodgers, the Cincinnati Reds and finally the California Angels as he had a combined 4-10 record.

He was invited to the White Sox spring training camp for a tryout last year and he not only made the team but emerged as the ace of the staff. "I still felt I could pitch and win," said Reuss, who has rebounded several times from surgery. In 1984 he had bone spurs removed from both heels and in 1986 when he had spurs removed from his elbow.

Although he got off to a 2-2 start this year, Reuss was having problems with his velocity and went to work with pitching coach Sammy Ellis.

"He worked all spring trying to throw his sinker away and his cutter in," said Ellis. "As a result he lost his velocity. We confronted him with the fact of losing his velocity so he went to pitching with a two-seamer and it worked."

So much so that against the Brewers Monday night he had 18 ground ball outs, nine to shortstop Ozzie Guillen.

"It's easy to work when they give you six runs," Reuss said. "We had timely hitting, excellent defense and the pitcher threw strikes. You can't lose games with a combination like that."

Reuss needed only 90 pitches to put the Brewers away. He didn't walk a man and struck out three.

"With a six-run lead you throw the ball down the middle instead of trying to be too fine," said Reuss. "I was very consistent. I concentrated on keeping the ball down. I wanted to keep it in the strike zone and keep it in play."

Manager Jeff Torborg was especially pleased with Reuss' performance since the veteran agreed to changing his style.

Brandt Fired ...

Brandt helped Johnson get the head coaching job of the Miami Hurricanes.

"We have friendships, but sometimes business decisions have to be made," Johnson said. "It's best that we start from scratch in the scouting department."

Johnson said the Cowboys lost their edge in getting free agents when other clubs caught onto the game.

Brandt was a baby photographer who dabbled in evaluating professional football talent when he was hired by club president Tex Schramm.

Schramm, Brandt, owner Clint Murchison, and Coach Tom Landry built the team in 1960.

Murchison died several years ago, after selling the club to Bum Bright.

Jones, who bought the team from Bright on Feb. 25 for $140 million, fired Landry and Schramm resigned to become president of the International Football League.

Brandt's brainstorms included drafting track and basketball stars and using computers to analyze talent.

The three-way management team of Schramm, Landry and Brandt took the Cowboys to 20 consecutive winning seasons (1966-85), including five Super Bowl appearances and two victories.

Brandt said he had no immediate plans.

"I have no plans to join another NFL team," he said. "I have had an offer to write a book."

Brandt evaluated the talent for Landry, who made the calls. In the 1970s, the Cowboys were considered the sharpest organization in the NFL at judging talent.

In recent years, the formula didn't work. Of the last 15 players drafted in the first three rounds by Brandt, only four are now starters.

The Cowboys haven't had a winning season since 1985 and finished 3-13 last year, second worst in their history.

Only one player the Cowboys drafted in the 1980s, Herschel Walker, has appeared in a Pro Bowl.

Jones also has fired public relations director Doug Todd — a member of the front office staff since 1971 — Don Wilson, club treasurer for 18 years, Ann Lloyd, assistant ticket manager, and Bob Friedman, director of photographic services, who had been with the club 28 years.

Joe Bailey, Schramm's assistant since 1977, fled the purge to join Schramm in the IFL as did Suzanne Mitchell, director of the Cowboys' cheerleaders.

Jones' justified his employee-cutting binge by saying "I have to make the best decisions I can. We will turn off the lights. Sometimes you have to make hard decisions. You just have to put together the folks you want to go forward with."

Brandt served as a part-time scout for the Los Angeles Rams under Schramm in the 1950s. When Schramm took command of the expansion Cowboys, he immediately hired Brandt.

Brandt, a native of Milwaukee and a graduate of the University of Wisconsin, also was a super sleuth at finding free agent talent such as wide receiver Drew Pearson, and defensive backs Cliff Harris and Everson Walls.

Jones recently paid $11.2 million for quarterback Troy Aikman, a first-round draft pick.

On March 2, Brandt said Jones told the front office people in a meeting: "Let me put your minds at ease. You don't have a lifetime contract but if you do your jobs that's good enough for me."

Schramm said he hated to see all the people he hired "cast aside in a needless manner. It also hurts to see them described as 'fat.' They worked many long hours to make the Cowboys into what they are today. The manner in which this has happened has surprised me."

Brandt said Jones asked him: "Can I call on you from time to time to help us?"

Brandt said "I told him: No thanks."'

NBA Playoffs ...

With Detroit leading 88-83 with 3:27 to go, Johnson's basket started a 12-2 surge that ended the game.

Joe Dumars added 24 points for Detroit, while McHale Kevin had 17 for Boston.

Knicks 116, 76ers 115, OT

New York, which trailed late in all three games, beat Philadelphia on Gerald Wilkins' 18-foot jumper with six seconds left in overtime. The Knicks, who meet the winner of the Chicago-Cleveland series, trailed 115-114 when Wilkins scored over the Sixers' Maurice Cheeks for his 22nd point of the game.

Charles Barkley, who led Philadelphia with 29 points, got one more shot for the Sixers, but the ball clanged off the rim as time ran out.

Mark Jackson led the Knicks with 24 points, including three from 3-point range.

The 76ers went ahead 115-114 on a 3-point field goal by Gerald Henderson with 38 seconds to play.

Henderson had a chance to extend the lead when he was fouled by Trent Tucker with 12 seconds left, but the Sixers' guard missed both shots.

Suns 130, Nuggets 121

Phoenix outscored Denver 69-37 after falling behind by 23 points early in the third quarter.

Tom Chambers, 1-for-9 from the field with five points in the first half, scored 19 of his 32 points in the fourth quarter for the Suns.

The Suns trailed 72-54 at the half, and the Nuggets extended the lead to 84-61 early in the third quarter on Michael Adams' 3-pointer.

Phoenix whittled the deficit to 101-88 at the end of the period and then blew the Nuggets away in the final period, outscoring them 42-20. The Suns hit their first 13 shots and finished with 17-for-22 shooting in the period.

Denver, playing without injured starters Fat Lever and Danny Schayes, was paced by Walter Davis with 26 points. Alex English and Adams each had 22.

Bucks 117, Hawks 113, OT

Milwaukee grabbed a 2-1 lead over Atlanta as Ricky Pierce scored a career-high 35 points, including a go-ahead three-point play with 32 second left in overtime.

Pierce's three-point play gave Milwaukee a 112-109 lead before Reggie Theus scored for the Hawks with 19 seconds to go. Then Fred Roberts scored on his second three-point play of overtime, putting the Bucks up 115-111 with 13 seconds remaining.

Antoine Carr got a basket for the Hawks with five seconds left, but Sidney Moncrief iced the Bucks victory with two free throws with three seconds remaining.

McGwire Solves Henke Pitching Riddle

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Despite the circumstances, Mark McGwire wasn't about to become selective when he stepped to the plate with the Oakland Athletics a run down with one out separating them from a loss to the Toronto Blue Jays.

"I was sitting on anything," McGwire joked in explaining why he swung at a very high pitch against Toronto reliever Tom Henke. Once he hit it, there was little doubt the ball would find its way into the left field seats at Exhibition Stadium for a grand slam that gave the A's an 8-5 victory Tuesday night.

"He's just one of those pitchers who I've never been able to solve," McGwire said. "Tonight, I just got around on one."

McGwire said he could not remember ever having much success against Henke. And he said Henke knows it, too.

"I think every pitcher knows when he owns you," McGwire said. "I'm going up in that situation knowing I've struck out every time against him.

"I'm looking for anything to hit. Fortunately, I got a fastball I could handle and I hit it out of the ball park."

Despite his heroics, McGwire said teammates Luis Polonia and Dave Henderson deserved much of the credit. Reliever Duane Ward, 1-4, struck out the first two batters in the ninth and then allowed singles to Polonia and Henderson.

"If anyone won the ballgame, it was those two guys," McGuire said. "He (Ward) had Luis (Polonia) 0-2 and then he fouls off about five pitches then he gets a base hit. He had Henderson 0-2. He fouls off a couple pitches and then drops in a hit.

"But that's the way this club plays." McGwire added. "We're going to get those key hits when we need them."

Elsewhere in the American League, it was Kansas City 5, New York 3; Baltimore 4, California 3; Boston 4, Minnesota 2; Chicago 6, Milwaukee 1; Cleveland 8, Texas 3, and Seattle 7, Detroit 2.

With two outs in the bottom of the ninth at Toronto, reliever Gene Nelson hit George Bell with a pitch and both benches emptied as the players exchanged blows. Bell was ejected.

The Blue Jays have lost four straight games and eight of their last nine. Oakland has won 11 of its last 13 games.

Royals 5, Yankees 3

Luis de los Santos hit a two-run, go-ahead single in the seventh inning and Mark Gubicza pitched a six-hitter, leading Kansas City past New York for the Royals' fourth straight victory.

de los Santos, playing in his first game of the season since his weekend recall from the minors, singled to left after Tommy John, 2-4, loaded the bases. It snapped New York's four-game winning streak and gave the Royals their ninth victory in 11 games.

Gubicza, 2-2, struck out six and walked none in his second consecutive complete game, both against the Yankees.

Jesse Barfield went 1-for-4 in his New York debut, getting a single in the second. He was acquired Sunday from Toronto for left-hander Al Leiter.

Orioles 4, Angels 3

Jim Traber's sacrifice fly in the ninth inning gave Baltimore the victory over California, snapping the Angels' five-game winning streak.

Brady Anderson led off the ninth with a double off reliever Willie Fraser, 0-2. After Phil Bradley sacrificed Anderson to third, Joe Orsulak and Cal Ripken were intentionally walked to load the bases. Traber batted for Randy Milligan, and after fouling off several pitches, lifted a fly ball to the edge of the warning track in right field.

Red Sox 4, Twins 2

Ellis Burks hit a three-run homer in a four-run eighth inning for Boston, which handed Minnesota its ninth loss in 10 games.

Burks' homer off reliever Jeff Reardon negated a strong performance by starter Fred Toliver, who carried a no-hitter for 5 2-3 innings.

Wade Boggs, who broke up Toliver's no-hit bid with two out in the sixth, singled to score Barrett. Reardon relieved Gonzalez and retired Ed Romero on a grounder to first. Burks followed with his fifth homer.

White Sox 6, Brewers 1

Ron Kittle and Ivan Calderon hit two-run homers as Chicago ended Chris Bosio's four-game winning streak and handed the Brewers their fifth straight loss.

Bosio, who gave up 12 hits in 7 1-3 innings, remained winless lifetime against Chicago, falling to 0-5.

The victory enabled the White Sox to sweep the two-game series at Comiskey Park, where Chicago had not swept Milwaukee since 1981. The victory gave the White Sox back-to-back wins for the first time since April 7-8.

Eric King, 2-3, gave up five hits including a run-scoring single to Robin Yount in the first inning. The run ended a string of 25 straight scoreless innings for Milwaukee.

Mariners 7, Tigers 2

Seattle's Jeffrey Leonard hit a grand slam and Mike Dunne limited Detroit to six hits over seven innings for his first American League victory.

Leonard has two grand slams this season and is tied with Glenn Davis of Houston and Kansas City's Bo Jackson for the lead with eight homers.

After two-out singles by Harold Reynolds and Henry Cotto in the third, Alvin Davis walked on four straight pitches, setting up Leonard's sixth career slam, off Charles Hudson, 0-2.

Indians 8, Rangers 3

Cory Snyder hit a three-run homer and drove in four runs, and Greg Swindell pitched a strong 7 1-3 innings to lead Cleveland.

The Rangers led 2-1 in the sixth when Snyder hit his fifth homer of the season, off Jamie Moyer, 3-1.

Swindell, 3-0, allowed seven hits, struck out six and did not walk a batter as the Indians swept the two-game series.

Sportsworld scored early and rolled to a 10-2 victory over Bill Clark Construction Tuesday afternoon in the North State Little League.

Sportsworld scored five times in the first inning and added another five in the second. Clark got single runs in the fifth and sixth frames.

Matt Davis tossed the win, striking out eight, walking four and allowing just two hits in going the distance. Scott Selby was the loser.

Kevin Smith had two hits to lead the Sportsworld hitting, scoring two runs and driving in two. Davis also drove in two while Mike Worthington scored two runs.

Selby and Nabeel Barakat had the only hits for Clark.

Pepsi-Cola.....9
Wellcome.....2

Pepsi-Cola spotted the early lead to Wellcome, then came back to take a 9-2 Tar Heel Little League baseball victory Tuesday.

Wellcome got a run in the first, but Pepsi came back with one in the second to tie it up. Pepsi then added two each in the third and fourth and got four more in the sixth. Wellcome added one more in the fourth.

Damion Phillips led the Pepsi hitting with three hits and also scored three runs. Geof Stallings had a pair of hits and also scored three times. Todd MacKenzie had a pair of hits and drove in two runs, while Chuck Keel had a three run double in the sixth inning.

Kevin Paramore and Jeremy Simo drove in the two Wellcome runs.

Phillips tossed the win for Pepsi, allowing four hits, striking out eight and walking two. Paramore was the loser.

Lietzke Faces Adjustments

Byron Nelson Champion In Some New Surroundings

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DALLAS — It's a new and very different situation for Bruce Lietzke, who will defend his title this week in the $1 million Byron Nelson Golf Classic.

The title defense is not new, of course. That's happened with some frequency to the 37-year-old veteran who has collected 11 victories in a 15-year PGA Tour career.

"I don't have that motel room to get geared up in," Lietzke said before a practice round at the TPC at Las Colinas.

He's at home, a new home, one he moved into a few months after winning this tournament last year.

"This is different. I've never before played a tournament at home. It's very different," Lietzke said.

"I'm having to work at it to get my game face on.

"I'm not used to getting up and putting on golf clothes at home, and then driving to the golf course.

"At home I don't play golf. I work on my cars (his hobby) or fish or play with the kids. I don't play golf at home. I play golf on the road.

But Lietzke, who moved here from tiny Jay, Okla., now is only 20 minutes away from the course where the tournament begins Thursday.

Not that he's complaining.

"It's nice to be home. That's the best there is. Sleeping in your own bed, eating home cooking, having your family with you.

"It's just that it's a different feeling than I've ever had before. I'll have to work harder to get my game face on."

Lietzke, a two-time winner of this event, said he is starting a three-week period that serves as the highlight of his schedule.

In addition to the Nelson, they are the Memorial in Dublin, Ohio, and the Colonial National Invitational in nearby Fort Worth, Texas.

"Those three are as high on my list of priorioties as anything in golf," he said.

Pete Rose Snubbed ...

Cincinnati Reds' manager wasn't on the poster. But he did acknowledge Rose's absence was no oversight. He said Rose was initially among those considered for the poster.

"There were a lot of people considered for inclusion on the poster, some of whom were not included in the final product," he said. "Pete Rose was among those individuals."

Rose played 85 games for Geneva of the New York-Penn League in 1960, batting .277 with 43 RBIs and 18 stolen bases.

"We're happy a guy of Pete Rose's stature began his career in the New York-Penn League and we're sorry for the problems he's having," Lynch said.

Rose is under investigation by the commissioner's office for "serious allegations" of gambling improprieties, but neither the league nor the bank sponsoring the poster would say if that is why he didn't make the poster.

Both Nolan and Lynch said the decision to exclude Rose was one made by both the bank and the league.

"We're the sponsor, but when we sponsor anything, any decisions are always joint decisions," Nolan said. "We do take our lead from the agency involved."

She denied a report in Monday's USA Today that quoted Pinckney as saying it was the bank's decision not to have Rose on the poster.

Nolan said she talked with Pinckney after the story was published and he denied saying that. Pinckney referred all inquiries to Lynch.

Reds spokesman Jim Ferguson said he would ask for Rose's comment but no response was immediately forthcoming.

Korean Radicals Set Fire To Six Troopers During Rescue Attempt

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEOUL, South Korea — Six riot troopers were killed and 10 critically injured when they were set on fire by radical students today while trying to rescue five police officers being held hostage at a college, police said.

The militants had set fire to a barricade drenched with paint thinner as the troopers were climbing over it, police said. Several officers, wrapped in flames, leaped out of windows while others were burned or asphyxiated, said police officials, who declined to be identified.

The troopers were killed during a dawn raid on Dongui University in the southern port of Pusan as they attempted to break into a room on the seventh floor of the school library to free the hostages, the officials said.

National police headquarters in Seoul said it was the worst loss of police life in recent years; officers were unable to recall any comparable incident.

Police said more riot troopers were expected to die. One student was critically injured and about 10 troopers and students received minor wounds, officials said.

All the hostages were later released unharmed after professors at the private college pleaded with the students, police said, adding that 88 students were arrested and held for questioning.

National Police Chief Jo Jong-suk resigned to accept responsibility for the deaths. In Korea, senior officials traditionally resign to atone for a disaster even if it is not their fault.

President Roh Tae-woo and top ministers condemned the incident at an emergency meeting and warned they would crack down on militants to halt a wave of violent protests that has hit South Korea in recent weeks.

Opposition parties also denounced the deaths today and called for an end to political violence.

"Radical student demonstrations have reached the stage of armed struggle in which murder and arson are committed to achieve their goal of revolution," the government said in a statement.

Roh was to go on national television Wednesday night to announce new measures to try and halt violent protests.

Hundreds of radical students calling for Roh's overthrow battled riot police around at least two campuses today in Seoul. Protesters cheered at Sungkyunkwan University when several troopers were set ablaze by firebombs, but other police quickly doused the flames and the officers were not hurt.

Protests in South Korea rarely result in deaths in spite of the intense violence of street clashes in which protesters pelt riot police with firebombs and rocks. Riot police are normally armed only with tear gas and batons.

Government prosecutors said students implicated in today's deaths would face charges of arson, which can carry a maximum penalty of death. Officials said no suspects had been charged.

Stunned riot troopers wept as the dead and injured were taken away. About 150 police officers staged a sit-down protest at Pusan police headquarters to complain that senior officers mishandled the attack, the South Korean news agency Yonhap reported.

Police officials said about 700 riot police raided the private college after negotiations failed to free the hostages.

Students had seized the five police officers Tuesday after staging a violent demonstration to protest the firing of warning shots by police at attackers who menaced a police station on Monday, police said. The students demanded police exchange the hostages for a student held by authorities.

Arafat Repeats PLO Charter Is Outdated

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PARIS — PLO chairman Yasser Arafat today repeated his disavowal of the organization's charter calling for elimination of Israel, and government leaders indicated they were convinced of his sincerity.

Israel dismissed Arafat's statements as "rhetorical juggling," and hardline PLO leaders expressed anger at the PLO chief's comments.

Arafat, in a radio interview, said the 1964 charter has been "superseded," presumably by the PLO's November declarations that renounced terrorism and implicitly recognized Israel's right to exist.

Asked why he did not simply say the charter was abrogated, Arafat said, "It's not up to me to say that. It's a decision that must come from the Palestine National Council." The council is the Palestine Liberation Organization's parliament-in-exile.

During a 90-minute meeting Tuesday, President Francois Mitterrand pointed out the contradiction between the November declarations and the charter, said presidential spokesman Hubert Vedrine.

In a television interview Tuesday evening, Arafat used the French word "caduc" to refer to the PLO charter. "Caduc" means outdated, or null and void.

Government spokesman Louis Le Pensec, briefing reporters on today's regular Cabinet meeting, said Mitterrand told his ministers he had "noted that we are seeing a beginning of this clarification" sought in Tuesday's talks.

Premier Michel Rocard, who met today with Arafat, agreed, saying Arafat's statements constitute "a positive clarification moving toward peace."

The two sides discussed "the perspectives of a process of negotiation that could lead to peace, of an international conference on the Middle East, as well as solutions and guarantees which could come from the diverse parties involved," Rocard said.

China Rejects Students' Recognition, Sets Stage For Another Mass Protest

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — China's Communist leaders today rejected student protesters' ultimatum for recognition of their new independent unions, prompting students to promise yet another pro-democracy demonstration for Thursday.

The government also claimed unidentified non-students who oppose Communist rule have been advising student protesters from behind the scenes and suggested leading dissident Fang Lizhi might be one of them.

The accusation seemed to herald government action against liberal thinkers admired by the students, similar to the attacks on Fang and other leading independent intellectuals that followed student protests in 1987.

"Our protest tomorrow will show that Chinese democracy has arrived at a new stage," said student leader Wu'er Kaixi of the Beijing Normal College.

About 60 journalists for state-run newspapers announced plans for their own protest Thursday to express anger over press censorship, especially tight controls over what they have been allowed to say about student protests that began April 15 and are the biggest in 40 years of Communist rule.

The journalists said they would gather outside the official Xinhua News Agency. Most papers have been limited to printing only brief, understated Xinhua reports on the student protests.

Tens of thousands of Beijing students have joined in marches, sit-ins, pamphleteering and a class boycott to press their demands. Students in a half-dozen other cities have held smaller marches; some students in Tianjin and Shanghai have boycotted class.

Students said they had not finalized plans for their protest on Thursday, the 70th anniversary of China's first pro-democracy student protest.

"Tomorrow we shall carry out a great protest with the support of the people," Wu'er said. "May Fourth is a people's holiday."

Police said they would close central Tiananmen Square on Thursday, apparently in an effort to head off another demonstration there.

Last Thursday, about 150,000 students and their supporters broke through police lines into the square, China's symbolic seat of power.

Students from several other cities also said they planned marches Thursday in solidarity with the Beijing students' demands for a free press, an end to official corruption and other reforms.

Government spokesman Yuan Mu told a news conference that he hoped the students would not march, but that if they do "I hope and sincerely trust ... Those students will take precautions to ensure public order."

He refused to say exactly what the government would do if a march begins. Wu'er said the students would try to avoid a confrontation but would be prepared for one.

Yuan rejected the students ultimatum, delivered Tuesday, to hold a march unless the government recognized their new independent student association, the United Association of Beijing Universities, and agreed to talks with it.

He said the association and student unions set up on individual campuses are illegal.

"Behind the students are a very few people ... Trying to create social disturbances," Yuan said. "They try to accomplish during disturbances goals that they cannot attain in circumstances of political stability."

He stopped short of directly accusing Fang, an internationally renowned astrophysicist, of advising the protesters but he questioned Fang's patriotism:

"The role Mr. Fang wants to play in the current disturbances will be decided by his words and deeds."

Fang, who previously has called Marxism a failure and called for multi-party democracy, denied any involvement in the protests.

Yuan "knows I have never been to Tiananmen Square, never been to Beijing University in the last few weeks," he said in a telephone interview.

Yuan said he "cannot discount the possibility" that some students also will be accused of illegal actions. However, he said the government believes most of the students are patriotic and "fully understands" their enthusiasm.

"At present the good and the bad are mixed together," he said. To make arrests now "would be too stupid."

"I believe that its the Chinese people who are 'manipulating' us and the Chinese people who are 'using' us," a student representative who met with officials to receive their response said sarcastically.

Yuan and other officials have held several meetings in recent days with small groups of invited students, but most have been members of official student unions that the majority of students have rejected.

The United Association has demanded a dialogue between the government and democratically elected student representatives, and has said both sides in the talks should be equal, with give and take.

Yuan called their demands "naive and impulsive."

Ozone Protection Backed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HELSINKI, Finland — Nearly 90 countries have announced their support for a ban on ozone-destroying chemicals by the year 2000 and are calling for an international fund to help Third World countries join in the effort.

The resolution adopted Tuesday at the U.N.-sponsored conference stepped up the timetable of the 1987 Montreal Protocol, which requires industrial nations to halve production of the chemicals by the end of the century.

The draft declaration says developing countries should be helped in finding and financing alternatives to the most damaging such chemicals — chloroflourocarbons.

CFCs are used in refrigerators, air-conditioners, food containers, foam insulation and padding, aerosol cans and other industrial products.

The declaration by 86 countries calls for agreement to phase out the gases listed in the Montreal Protocol "as soon as possible, but not later than year 2000, and for that purpose to tighten the timetable of the Montreal Protocol."

Scientists say the destruction of the ozone layer is causing increased skin cancer and eye damage and poses a danger to the world's food chain.

Palestinian Fatally Stabs Two Israelis In Jerusalem

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM — A Palestinian shouting "God is great" stabbed to death two elderly Israelis waiting at a bus stop in downtown Jerusalem today, police said. Three other Israelis were seriously injured in the attack.

Dozens of angry passers-by chased the short, stocky assailant about 30 yards and caught him after a brief struggle. Police pinned the Arab to the ground in a nearby flower shop to protect him from the crowd.

Police said the man, a 25-year-old resident of the West Bank town of Ramallah, acted alone. Israel radio said the attacker was a former member of a Moslem fundamentalist group, and police said he had been questioned about unspecified "terrorist activities" in the past.

The attack came one day after PLO leader Yasser Arafat disavowed the 25-year-old PLO charter, which calls for the destruction of Israel. His announcement in Paris prompted protests from radical Palestinian factions.

The stabbings further escalated Arab-Jewish tensions in Jerusalem, already at a breaking point after 17 months of Palestinian rebellion against Israeli rule in the occupied lands. Nearly 460 Palestinians and 20 Israelis have been killed since the uprising began in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

The stabbings occurred around 11 a.m. across from Jerusalem's main post office on Jaffa Road, the main shopping street in Jewish west Jerusalem.

Police reinforcements, including mounted horse patrols, rushed to the scene to control groups of angry Israelis who shouted "Death to the terrorists!" and "Death to the Arabs!"

About three hours after the stabbing, police fired tear gas to disperse dozens of followers of Rabbi Meir Kahane's anti-Arab Kach Party who shouted "revenge, revenge." The group was en route to the Western Wall, Judaism's holiest site, to stage a protest when it was halted by police.

Kahane, who is from Brooklyn, N.Y., and who founded the Jewish Defense League in the United States, was arrested along with six of his followers. They were charged with disturbing public order.

Police Minister Chaim Bar-Lev urged restraint. "I hope it won't prompt extremists from our side to react because that could bring about a vicious cycle," Bar-Lev said on Israel radio.

Romi Shimon, who was sitting in a Jaffa Road restaurant, said the assailant was shouting "God is Great" when he attacked five Israelis at the bus stop, four of them elderly. "He was going crazy and started stabbing people. We caught him at the end of the street," Shimon told Israel radio.

Sima Ozer, an employee in the Newman Flower Shop across from the post office on Jaffa Road, said the short, stocky Arab was carrying a blood-covered eight-inch knife as he was being chased.

"Then a policeman came and stopped the crowd from lynching him," she said. "Police threw him on the floor of the flower shop ... while people outside were shouting 'kill him, kill him, death to the Arabs.'"

At one point during the chase, she said she heard a gun shot. A reporter saw blood on the floor of the flower shop.

Minutes later, the crowd chased a Palestinian teen-ager wearing a white kaffiyeh headdress. Two policemen whisked him away to safety.

Vardi Kalman, 60, was taken to a nearby souvenir shop where he later died of his wounds. Hundreds of onlookers crowded the shop entrance, and the body, wrapped in a white sheet, was carried to an ambulance.

Nissim Levy, 91, died of wounds at Hadassah Hospital which was also treating a woman in her 90s. Bikur Holim Hospital reported treating two men, one 64 and the other a 25-year-old Jewish seminary student, for stab wounds in the stomach and chest.

Police Commissioner David Krauss said the assailant appeared to have no accomplices.

Police spokesman Uzi Sandori said the assailant had spent the night praying at Jerusalem's Al Aqsa mosque to mark Leilat al Kadr, the night the Moslem holy book Koran was received by the Prophet Mohammed. He said the man had a record of being detained and questioned about anti-Israeli acts in the past.

Police did not say if the attacker operated under orders from a group or initiated the attack on his own.

The army sealed the assailant's hometown, Ramallah, setting up roadblocks on main roads, Arab reporters said. Troops detained dozens of Palestinian youths after ordering them off buses and taxis, they said.

Arafat's announcement in Paris on Tuesday prompted immediate protests from radical Palestinians, including the Marxist Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine of George Habash.

Environmental Row Ousts Netherlands' Ruling Coalition

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

THE HAGUE, Netherlands — Disagreement over a multibillion-dollar plan to clean up the country's environment has brought down the 7-year-old center-right government of Prime Minister Ruud Lubbers.

The Christian Democrat on Tuesday announced the resignation of his Cabinet after a right-wing junior partner objected to his proposal to end $325 million in income tax deductions for people who drive their cars to work.

Political observers predicted Lubbers would form a coalition with the Dutch Labor Party, second only to the Christian Democrats in the number of parliamentary seats it holds.

Lubbers' action headed off a possible motion of no confidence threatened by the junior coalition partner, the People's Party for Freedom and Democracy.

"Environmental policy certainly needs to be paid for, but why just by those who live at some distance from their jobs?" said Joris Voorhoeve, the right-wing party's leader in the 150-seat Parliament.

Lubbers' announcement came at the end of a tense 7½-hour parliamentary debate on a $3.65 billion government plan to cut pollution of the country's atmosphere to 30 percent of current levels by the year 2010.

"If only we could motivate one in ten (car-driving commuters) to change their habits ... that would have a very large effect on the congestion, on mobility, on the environment," Lubbers said.

The crisis also reflected years of irritation among Voorhoeve's party at steadily losing decision-making power to the charismatic Lubbers, who enjoys immense popularity in this nation of 14.6 million people.

The 49-year-old prime minister said he planned to meet with Queen Beatrix today "to offer the resignation of all the ministers" in the Cabinet.

In Dutch constitutional practice, the government will continue in office with caretaker status until early elections later this year. After the elections, it can take several months until a new government is formed.

Parliamentary elections had been scheduled for May 1990.

The Christian Democrats have been in virtually every postwar Dutch government and are likely to be the centerpiece of the next one.

Never in postwar Dutch history has a political party garnered sufficient votes to govern alone.

The 8-year-old Lubbers government has aimed to cut the $13 billion budget deficit and 11 percent unemployment rate.

In recent months, the People's Party has accused Lubbers' party of backing off from a pledge to cut corporate and private taxes and slash social security, education and health care outlays.

But the issue that prompted the government's resignation was a Lubbers proposal to end the tax break for car-driving commuters in a bid to reduce car exhaust fumes and highway congestion by forcing motorists to take mass transit. Voorhoeve also objected to a proposed $270 million increase in the tax on diesel fuel that would mainly hit the trucking industry, one of the mainstays of the Dutch economy.

Under the anti-pollution plan, farmers also would have to pay toward cleaning up deposits of manure produced by their livestock, deposits that contribute to acid rain.

The plan would set levies for polluting industries and contain proposals for cleaning up hundreds of toxic waste dumps.

Voorhoeve's move to topple the government had the support of the 52-seat Labor Party opposition, and the 54 Christian Democrats would not have been able to hold off a no-confidence vote.

The People's Party has 27 seats in Parliament, while 12 seats are held by three opposition parties and five seats by three right-wing parties that are generally supportive of the government.

U.S. Military Can Party With Soviets

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary Dick Cheney has quietly rescinded a nine-year-old ban on U.S. military personnel attending Soviet functions celebrating May Day and other occasions.

The decision, disclosed Tuesday by defense sources and confirmed by the Pentagon's chief spokesman, was announced in a memorandum dated April 27 that was distributed throughout the U.S. military.

The memo states Cheney had lifted "restrictions on attendance by Department of Defense personnel at Soviet receptions or other functions in the United States to mark May Day or Victory in Europe Day, imposed after the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan" in December 1979.

Dan Howard, the Pentagon's chief spokesman, said the decision simply reflected the Soviet Union's recent withdrawal of troops from Afghanistan and nothing more.

A similar restriction on high-level State Department personnel was lifted in mid-February, according to administration sources. That was why U.S. Ambassador Jack Matlock viewed the May Day festivities in Moscow on Monday from the official diplomatic review stand — the first time that has been done in 10 years, the sources said.

According to Cmdr. Mel Sundin, another Pentagon spokesman, active-duty and civilian defense officials were specifically barred in early 1980 from accepting invitations to functions tied to four key Soviet military observances — Soviet National Day in November; Armed Forces Day in February; May Day on May 1; and Victory in Europe Day on May 9.

The ban was imposed by the Carter administration just after the invasion and has been "rigidly enforced ever since," said one defense official who requested anonymity.

The first change in that enforcement occurred last November when some restrictions were relaxed governing Soviet National Day and Armed Forces Day observances, Sundin said. At the time, the Soviets had agreed under United Nations auspices to withdraw their troops from Afghanistan.

Now that the withdrawal is complete, "Cheney has lifted all the restrictions," Sundin added.

Cheney's decision was disclosed just a few days after he made headlines by predicting Kremlin chief Mikhail S. Gorbachev's efforts to overhaul the Soviet economy would fail.

Gorbachev, who got the Russian troops out of Afghanistan, is likely to fail with his restructuring efforts and be replaced by a leader "far more hostile" to the West, Cheney said in a TV interview broadcast last Saturday.

Japan Takes Weeklong Spring Break

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — Japan has closed down for its annual weeklong series of spring holidays, including one created by the government this year just to encourage the industrious workforce to let its reputation slide a bit.

For many, the annual "Golden Week" started Friday, giving them the rare opportunity to take up to nine days off in a row. For others, time off began today, the first of three consecutive official national holidays.

April 29, which fell on Friday, has been a holiday for more than 60 years, marking the birthday of the late Emperor Hirohito. After his death Jan. 7, its name was changed to Greenery Day.

Constitution Day falls on May 3 and Children's Day on May 5. This year, the government has made May 4 a national holiday also, to encourage more people to take consecutive days off.

"It's different from foreign countries. Japanese generally can't take several days of vacation at one time," said Reiko Tomizawa of the Japan Travel Bureau, the country's largest travel agency.

"People even used to work every other day during Golden Week until the government made May 4 a holiday this year," Ms. Tomizawa said. "It's just the national character of the Japanese to work hard without vacations."

But government officials believe the Japanese should devote more time to leisure activities and spend more money on both them and imports in order to reduce the nation's huge trade surplus.

Earlier this year, the government instituted a shortened five-day work week every other week for government employees. It is enouraging private business to follow suit.

A record 17.7 million Japanese, or 14.7 percent of the population, are going on trips of more than one night this week, and an all-time high of 365,000 are taking advantage of the high value of the yen to go overseas, according to a survey by the Japan Travel Bureau.

The most popular family destinations this year are Hawaii, Guam and Hong Kong, the bureau said.

Young, single "office ladies" are turning toward Canada and Europe, the agency said. They usually save money by living at their parents' home, and they have a reputation for being big holiday spenders.

Japanese are spending an average $2,107 on travel abroad, up 8.7 percent, and $394, up 8.9 percent, for domestic travel, according to the agency's study.

Bush To Spell Out Foreign Policy Proposals

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush will spell out the conclusions of his wide-ranging foreign policy review in the next few weeks in a series of commencement addresses dealing with East-West relations, the Soviet Union and NATO, the White House says.

"Basically it will point out the Bush view of the world and the United States' role in it and our attitude toward other countries," White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said Tuesday.

"There will be some differences with existing policy although the general thrust will not be too different," Fitzwater said.

"It's not clear to me there will ever be any written reports" about the review, Fitzwater said. "These speeches may in effect be the most definitive enunciation of the results of that review." Bush is scheduled to give five commencement speeches this month, beginning with a May 12 address at Texas A&M University. Fitzwater said the topic of that speech will be foreign policy, although it is not clear what the focus will be.

A May 21 speech at Boston University will spell out Bush's view of East-West relations and U.S. strategy for dealing with the Soviet Union, the spokesman said.

Then, Bush will use a May 24 speech at the U.S. Coast Guard Academy in New London, Conn., to discuss the strength of NATO and the future of the 16-nation Western Alliance.

Two days later, Bush will fly to Rome on the first leg of a four-nation trip and a full NATO summit May 29-30. In recent days, NATO has been shaken by a dispute over modernization of short-range nuclear weapons stationed in West Germany.

Bush's speeches will follow on the heels of next week's trip to Moscow by Secretary of State James A. Baker III for talks with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev and Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

N.C. ENVIRONMENTAL MANAGEMENT COMMISSION NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING TO RECLASSIFY THE TAR-PAMLICO RIVER BASIN (FROM SOURCE TO A LINE ACROSS PAMLICO RIVER FROM ROSS POINT TO PERSIMMON TREE POINT) AS NUTRIENT SENSITIVE WATERS (NSW)

Notice is hereby given of a public hearing to be held by the N.C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development on behalf of the Environmental Management Commission (EMC) concerning the modification of stream classification as follows:

PURPOSE: The proposal is to supplementally classify the portions of the Tar-Pamlico River Basin from the source to a line across Pamlico River from Ross Point to Persimmon Tree Point as "Nutrient Sensitive Waters" (NSW) according to the provisions of 15 NCAC 2B .0214. Nutrient Sensitive Waters are defined as those waters which are so designated (NSW) in the classification schedule in order to limit the discharge of nutrients (usually nitrogen and phosphorus). This proposal is based on Division of Environmental Management (DEM) technical evaluations indicating that the Tar-Pamlico River is subject to excessive, nuisance growth of algae and that nutrient inputs from both wastewater discharges and runoff contribute to this problem. This classification action could result in limitations on nutrients from wastewater discharges in NPDES permits. Implementation options for nutrient removal requirements will be discussed in the information Package for this hearing and at the public hearing. Comments on the economic and social costs/benefits of the proposed classification as NSW and on the implementation options are solicited. The proposed effective date for this proposal is January 1, 1990 which is proposed to be listed in 15 NCAC 2B .0316(c)(9).

DATE/LOCATION: June 15, 1989 @ 7:00 PM,
Jenkins Auditorium,
Jenkins Fine Arts Center,
East Carolina University,
Greenville, North Carolina

COMMENT PROCEDURE: All persons interested in this matter are invited to attend. Comments, statements, data and other information may be submitted in writing prior to, during or within thirty (30) days after the hearing, or may be presented orally at the hearing. So that all persons desiring to speak may do so, oral statements may be limited to three (3) minutes at the discretion of the hearing officer. Submittal of written copies of oral statements is encouraged.

AUTHORITY: N.C. General Statutes 143-214.1, 143-215.3(A)(1), Amendments to the Schedule of Classifications and Water Quality Standards for the Tar-Pamlico River Basin as referenced in Title 15 N.C. Administrative Code 2B .0316.

Sisters Turning In Their Badges

By Constance Ward
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

What are the nicest aspects of the Pitt County Sheriff's Department?

If you ask Pitt County Sheriff Ralph Tyson, he'll tell you about sisters Sarah Jones, 65, and Thelma Dodds, 72. They have been working for the sheriff's department for 43 years and 27 years respectively.

Miss Jones is the chief office deputy sheriff and Mrs. Dodds is a deputy sheriff. And after working as office secretaries for a combined 70 years at the department, they have decided to retire.

Miss Jones and Mrs. Dodds came by their interest in law enforcement naturally. Their father, Lester Jones, was a former chief of police in Greenville, and he gave them a healthy respect for the profession.

"We believe in fair, honest, impartial, strictly enforced law enforcement," Miss Jones said. "We got that from him."

Jones, who was also police chief in Washington, N.C., joined the N.C. Highway Patrol when it was formed and remained as a member until his death in 1950.

The sisters agreed that their family background was what made them decide to work for the department. First, however, they went to college.

Mrs. Dodds earned a bachelor of arts degree in mathematics and history from East Carolina Teachers' College. She turned down a teaching job in Southport to join the sheriff's department in 1940.

She left the department in 1944 after marrying Thorton Dobbs, and was a homemaker, raising two children, until her husband's death in 1958. For about year after his death, Mrs. Dobbs helped her sister at the department without pay whenever she could.

Miss Jones said keeping busy helped her sister get along. In 1965, Mrs. Dodds returned to the department, where she stayed until her retirement.

Miss Jones has a bachelor's degree in business education and social science from ECTC.

She became involved in the sheriff's department because of her sister. She had filled in for Mrs. Dobbs one summer, and been given an opportunity to stop school and work for the county full time.

But Miss Jones insisted on finishing school first — so she did. She joined the department in 1946.

Through the years, the two sisters have seem major changes at the courthouse. Miss Jones remembers that there were just two deputies serving the sheriff during the '40s. They wore their own clothes and drove their own cars.

They had no radios. "I don't know how we got along," she said, "but we did."

Miss Jones said she wanted to quit when the department began using car radios around 1949. They scared her. But, she said, her father insisted she stay, saying that the radios meant progress. So she did.

Daily district court has replaced recorder's court, held on Tuesdays only in the original courthouse building.

The sisters have enjoyed their jobs. Miss Jones said they "hate to leave because they treat us like queens."

The feeling is mutual. Courthouse co-workers are like family, Miss Jones said, adding that she worries about deputies as though they were her sons.

"I've been fortunate to have had three great bosses — Ruel Tyson, Duke Andrews and Ralph Tyson," she said.

But both agree that the time has come for retirement. "I figured when you've worked until you're 72, it's time to quit," Mrs. Dodds said.

The sisters decided to retire together, she said, because they both want to do other things beside work.

"It'll be nice to not hear the alarm at 5:45 a.m. anymore," Miss Jones said.

Mrs. Dodds said plans to spend her retirement traveling to see family, taking a bus tour to Nashville, Tenn. and catching up on some reading.

Miss Jones plans some traveling, too, and she's also looking forward to catching up on housecleaning, enjoying some hobbies and playing the piano again.

The sheriff's department held a party for the two sisters at the third floor courtroom of the Pitt County Courthouse, attracting about 200 friends, guests and fellow employees.

Sheriff Tyson and Chief Deputy Brooks Oakley presented Miss Jones and Mrs. Dodds with badges and service revolvers.

Fantasy Auction Planned By UPC

By Rosalie Trotman
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Wish upon a star — select a fantasy. Fantasies can become real.

A gala fantasy auction will be held Saturday in Greenville to benefit United Cerebral Palsy's programs for physically disabled pre-school children.

"A fantasy auction is a once a year opportunity to bid on unusual and exciting packages — things you only get at such an event. Ordinary happenings are made extraordinary through special arrangements with our fantasy donors," said Sybil Shirley, UPC fundraising coordinator.

The Greenville Advisory Council United Cerebral Palsy of North Carolina in association with the Morning Rotary Club and Greenville Pitt Homebuilders Association are sponsoring the event.

The auction will take place in the grand ballroom of the Ramada Inn. Auction items can be previewed at starting at 6:30 p.m. followed by a social hour at 7 o'clock with bidding at 8 o'clock.

Some of the fantasies are VIP tours of Washington, autographed ACC basketballs, Lamborghini ride for 10 children, Redskin football outing, day's sail on the Pamlico, Hilton getaway weekend, hot air balloon ride, Florida vacation and Nascar race tickets.

"Charlotte was the scene of the first fantasy auction six years ago. Two similar auctions have been held in Greensboro. The UCP of N.C. decided that fast-growing Greenville could support such a fund-raising event," said Mrs. Shirley.

The state UPC provides a variety of services to physically disabled children and adults. An early intervention program and developmental day care program is operated in Greenville. The Early Intervention Program provides in-home terapy to infants between biryh and age 3 who are at risk for developmental disabilities. Therapists work in the home providing developmental programming to the infant, and support and training top the families. This program serves approximately 33 families in Pitt and Lenoir counties.

Eighteen preschool children from Pitt, Greene, Martin, Halifax and Edgecombe counties attend the UPC Developmental Center in the educational building of Hooker Memorial Christian Church in Greenville.

"Agency fund raising and private donations are the major sources of funding for these programs," said Sybil Shirley.

Author: Gender Differences Superficial

CYNTHIA EPSTEIN

By Connie Koenenn
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LOS ANGELES — It was an unusual move for Sisterhood Bookstore in Los Angeles to invite sociologist Cynthia Fuchs Epstein to be a recent guest author. Bookstore guests usually promote popular fiction or major biographies.

But Epstein is an academic, and her new book, Deceptive Distinctions: Sex, Gender and the Social Order (Yale University Press), is a heavy-duty look at the last two decades of research on the changing roles of men and women in American society.

With its sweep of disciplines from anthropology to sociobiology and 48 pages of scholarly references, the book is hardly a candidate for beach reading. Explained Sisterhood's Simone Wallace: "It is unusual to focus on an academic book, but she is very well-known in the studies of women's roles. ... Furthermore, this subject just won't go away."

For one thing, Wallace said, gender studies raise major questions about how men and women live, work and relate to each other. "Are there innate differences between the sexes? Cultural differences? Should we accentuate them? Should we all be the same, or try to be different? How do we develop ourselves fully? It's all very confusing right now."

Epstein, 55, a professor at the Graduate Center of the City University of New York, is not confused. Quite the contrary. After a career of academic writing and teaching, and an intensive five years of research as a resident scholar at New York's Russell Sage Foundation, she has arrived at a clear conclusion.

"The basic differences between men and women are far more superficial than we have been led to think," she says. "Most differences are created and kept in place by social forces, not by biological design. I think that is big news, it's striking news."

Yale University Press, which is publishing the book, also thinks it is big news, and expects the book to be an academic best seller.

"The book is unusual in that she is looking over the entire field," said Yale's Jane Levey. "She immersed herself in research from many different disciplines. She has done an exhaustive overview of the research. You will find the name of everybody who is relevant."

"Everybody should care about gender research," Epstein said in a recent interview here. "A lot of people think that sex segregation — all these divisions of labor in the work place and in the household — is the natural way. This is not just a male viewpoint. I think most women, too, believe that the way the social order is mapped out is inevitable."

But we are surrounded by contradictory evidence, she said.

"On one hand, we still have a lot of Victorian notions. On the other hand, a lot of women and men are doing non-traditional things, especially women, doing things they thought they couldn't do. Women are surgeons and litigators in law firms and computer programmers. They go into coal mines and they are handling supervisory and managerial roles. There are even anchor people on television — remember the days when no one would listen to women's voices on radio because they were not considered authoritative enough?"

A Stronger Christina Ferrare Puts The Hard Times Behind

By Dianne Klein
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LOS ANGELES — "All of that unpleasantness," Cristina Ferrare pronounces, "is behind me."

She is sprawling across an upholstered sofa in the study of her Bel-Air home, a stunning 39-year-old woman wearing a big cotton sweater that saw her through her latest pregnancy.

Her daughter, Arianna, born less than three weeks earlier, is tucked inside a frilly bassinet, alternating between sleeping and cooing.

Cluttering the bookshelves are framed photographs of Ferrare's husband, producer Tony Thomopoulos, herself and the children — counting all the his and hers and theirs, a total of seven.

Signs of "all that unpleasantness" are nowhere in sight:

"I purposefully kept a low profile over the last few years and purposefully shied away from any publicity, just, you know, doing my thing, doing my job, taking care of my family," Ferrare says.

"And now, you know, with everything that is happening and all of these positive things, I feel more at ease and comfortable talking about everything."

The everything is understood. It means the arrest and trial of her husband of 12 years, former auto maker John Z. DeLorean, who was acquitted in 1984 of conspiring to smuggle $24 million worth of cocaine into the United States.

It means her role as the glamorous model-turned-wife-and-mother who stood by her man only to leave him within three weeks of the not-guilty verdict.

It means her marriage, two weeks after the divorce to DeLorean was final, to Thomopoulos, then head of the ABC Broadcast Group.

And it means her career as a television personality, which despite scandal and motherhood, is hotter than ever.

Viewers, it seems, want to know this woman. They idolize and they criticize, and then they keep watching to see what she will do next. For a brief time earlier this year, ABC featured Ferrare in three time slots.

She has for five years been co-host, with Steve Edwards, of "A.M. Los Angeles," a morning talk show in Los Angeles — a job she negotiated during the DeLorean trial. Then with John Davidson she co-hosted "Incredible Sunday," since canceled, and in January she joined Robb Weller as co-host of the nationally syndicated "Home Show." After a recent five-week maternity leave from "Home Show," Ferrare has decided not to return to the program in order to spend more time with her new child.

Currently, she is mulling over the possibility of making room for a television series, written for and starring herself.

"One of the shows is going to have to go," she says. "And I'm so ... I love what I'm doing. I love doing 'A.M.,' and I really, really enjoy doing the 'Home Show.' I'm in a personal dilemma. ... I'm in a transition period. I don't know what I am going to do yet."

A quiet happiness spreads across Ferrare's face. These days it seems to be an abundance of good fortune, opened doors and yet-to-be-tested opportunities that occupy her time.

Criticism still hurts, she says, but it does not cripple. Even when it comes from DeLorean, a man who since their divorce has publicly accused her of selfishness, treachery and stupidity.

"I don't care anymore. My husband loves me. I love him. We're happy. I don't care what people think."

With that, Ferrare makes a loud, taunting noise with her lips. Brrrrrr.

It is addressed to her detractors, the former friends, the hypocrites, the National Enquirer, the millions of Americans who wanted to know, "How dare she?"

Cynthia Cristina Ferrare was an international supermodel, a 23-year-old pulling down $3,500 for a shoot, when she married John DeLorean, flashy and brash and 24 years her senior.

It was her second marriage — a three-year union with personal manager Nick Thomas had ended in divorce — and DeLorean's third. The date was May 8, 1973, three weeks after he submitted his resignation to General Motors with plans to manufacture his own luxury sports car.

DeLorean brought his 14-month-old son, Zachary, into the marriage, and six years later, Ferrare gave birth to the couple's daughter, Kathryn.

"We were like the golden couple," Ferrare says. "We were living the high life. We were living in New York. We were invited everywhere and did things and then we fell from

Farmville Ceremony Joins Pair

FARMVILLE — Tammy Clemons Loveless of Route 1, Farmville and Jeffery Lee Harrison of Route 2, Walstonburg were married April 23 at Marlboro Free Will Baptist Church. The Rev. Scott Sowers officiated the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Ruth Clemons of Route 1, Farmville and the late Thurman Clemons. The bridegroom is the son of Helen Harrison of Route 2, Walstonburg and Dalton Harrison of Kinston.

Wedding music was presented by Janie Sowers, pianist; Phil Hansley, trumpeteer, and soloists Beth Grant, Carol Carawan and Beth Meeks, sister of the bridegroom.

Given in marriage by her mother and escorted by her brother, Ted Clemons, the bride wore a formal gown of ivory crystalline organza and European lace. The fitted bodice was accented with triple strands of pearl drops, a Queen Anne neckline, long illusion sleeves with lace pouffs at the shoulder and a dropped waistline. The full flowing skirt was accented with crystalline organza ruffles cascading down the flounce and cathedral train.

Bridesmaids were Alicia Purifoy of New Bern; Beth Harrison Meeks of Farmville, sister of the groom; Dawn Garner of Farmville, a cousin of the bride, and Vicky Clemons of

MRS. HARRISON

Wake Forest, sister-in-law of the bride. Their attire and flowers were identical to those of the maid of honor.

Lauren Brock of Farmville was flower girl.

The father of the groom was best man. Ushers were John Murray of Snow Hill; Eddie Meeks, brother-in-law of the groom, and Wesley Craft, both of Farmville, and Linne Fulcher of New Bern.

Eric Baker of Farmville was ring bearer.

A reception was held in the church fellowship wing. A rehearsal dinner, given by the parents of the bridegroom, was held at the church. Several showers were given for the couple prior to the wedding.

The bride attended New Bern Senior High School and is employed by Quadrangle Medical Specialists in Greenville. The groom attended Greene Central High School and Mount Olive College; he is employed by Hardee's in Farmville.

After a wedding trip to Orlando, Fla., the couple will live in Farmville.

Causey-Wooten Couple Married

SNOW HILL — Donna Wooten and Les Causey were united in marriage Saturday at 3 p.m. in Grimsley Free Will Baptist Church.

The Rev. Donald Fader of Kinston conducted the double-ring ceremony. Lisa Elmore and Loretta Cox of Hookerton, Beth Dail and Bryan Beaman of Snow Hill presented nuptial music.

The bride is the daughter of Eva D. Bailey of Snow Hill, and the late James B. Bailey. Blanche G. Causey of Greenville, and the late Herbert L. Causey Sr. are parents of the bridegroom.

Eva B. Cook of Snow Hill, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids included Betty Jo Causey of Winterville, sister of the bridegroom, and Dianne J. Jenkins of Snow Hill. The junior bridesmaid was Amanda M. Wooten of Snow Hill, daughter of the bride.

Woodie Wilson of Greenville was best man. Ushers included Doug Britton of Snow Hill and Tom Carawan of Greenville. The junior usher was Michael P. McCoy of Snow Hill, nephew of the bride.

The bride, escorted by the bridegroom, wore a floor-length gown of ivory satin with a lace overlay. The gown featured an open neckline and three-quarter length sleeves. Pearls accented the neckline and sleeves. Her ivory illusion veil was accented with a rose. She carried a bouquet of miniature silk roses and spring flowers accented with satin streamers.

The honor attendant wore a tea-length blue satin dress and carried a cascade of mauve miniature roses and baby breath tied with blue satin ribbon. Bridesmaids wore tea-length mauve satin dresses and carried cascades of blue and mauve flowers tied with satin.

The couple will live in Snow Hill

MRS. CAUSEY

after a wedding trip to the coast.

The bride is a graduate of Greene Central High School and is employed by the department of social services. The bridegroom graduated from J.H. Rose High School in Greenville and is employed by the N.C. Division of Motor Vehicles.

The parents of the bridegroom gave an after-rehearsal party. Several showers were given for the couple before their wedding.

Miss Williams, Mr. Wolfe Exchange Vows On Sunday

The wedding ceremony of Pattie Elizabeth Williams and Rodney Dewayne Wolfe took place Sunday at 3 p.m.

The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce M. Williams. The Rev. James Lupton conducted the double-ring ceremony. Music was presented by organist Lois Jane Stocks and vocalist Lisa Sexton, both of Greenville.

Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Donald Richard Wolfe of St. Petersburg, Fla.

Lisa Ann Wright of Leland was maid of honor. Bridesmaids included Debbie Evans, sister of the bride, Denise Hewitt McCoy and Trudy Barber, all of Greenville, and Debbie Lewis of Stokes. Azzure Marie Chappell of Greenville was flower girl.

Jeffery Wayne Hardee of Greenville was best man. Ushers included Dennis Tatum of Ayden, cousin of the bridegroom; Richard Williams, brother of the bride, Roy Warren and Bruce Hardee, all of Greenville.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father. She wore a tea-length of white cluny lace over satin. The gown had a high neckline and long lace sleeves. The dropped V-waistline was accented by a satin side bow. She wore a matching headpiece of white silk flowers interspersed with floating pearls. The bride's mother designed her lace-trimmed fingertip veil. She carried a cascade bouquet of white miniature roses, stephanotis, lily of the valley and greenery interspersed with floating pearl sprays tied with matching ribbon.

The attendants wore tea-length dresses in pink linen and carried nosegays of pink rosebuds and daisies interspersed with greenery tied with streamers of white and pink lace ribbon. The maid of honor's bouquet was similar to that of the bride.

The flower girl wore a white lace dress and carried a basket filled with pink and white dogwood.

The mother of the bride wore a tea-length dress of sea foam green and the mother of the bridegroom wore a tea-length dress of pink. Both were given corsages of white cymbidium orchids. Grandmothers were given white carnation corsages.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the bridegroom's family. A miscellaneous shower and pig picking were also given for the couple.

MRS. WOLFE

The couple will live in Greenville.

The bride attended D.H. Conley High School, Hardbarger Junior College in Raleigh and Mitchell's Hair Styling Academy. The bridegroom attended high school in Florida and is employed by Cannon's Pavement Marking of Greenville. She is employed by Hair Tropics of Greenville.

Pair Wed Saturday Evening

MRS. BROWN

The wedding of Evelyn Victoria Lineback and David Gregory Brown was Saturday at Saint Paul's Episcopal Church. The Rev. Middleton L. Wootten III officiated the 6 p.m., double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jackson Eugene Lineback of Clayton. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. John Stancill William Brown of Greenville.

Escorted by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown with a cathedral train of silk finished taffeta with beaded re-embroidered alencon lace. The fitted bodice featured a victorian neckline with an illusion yoke, leg o'mutton sleeves and basque waist.The floor-length skirt extended into a cathedral train appliqued by beaded alencon lace motifs. Garlands of scalloped alencon lace etched with pearls and sequins bordered the hemline of the skirt and train.

For her headpeice, the bride chose a shoulder-length veil of illusion, with hand-rolled edge accented with scattered pearls. She carried a cascading bouquet of cattleya orchids, white lilies, red tea roses and a few blue delphinium florets with greenery and ribbon.

Laura Gaither of Greenville was maid of honor. She carried a single white lily stem with a red rose, baby's breath, and plumosa greenery tied with a white satin bow and streamers.

Bridesmaids were Dawn Jarman of Maury and Jennifer Walker of Durham. They carried a single white lily stem, baby's breath and plumosa greenery tied with a white satin bow and streamers.

Bill Brown was his brother's best man. Ushers were John Brown, brother of the bridegroom, of Route 1, Grimesland, and Tom Butler of Huntsville, Ala.

The mother of the bride wore a formal, mauve crepe evening gown with a lavender Japhet orchid on her wrist. The bridegroom's mother chose a formal jade crepe evening gown with a white Japhet orchid corsage.

Flowers Adorn Sleeves, Shoulders Of Sweater

Pat's Pointers
By PAT TREXLER

Spring means flowers, and flowers we have — gracing the bottom, one sleeve and one shoulder of this stunning cotton knit. Cotton sport yarn is used in two contrasting colors to fashion this design. An unusual "knot stitch" is used in the body of the garment, while the flowers are worked from an easy-to-follow graph. The sleeves are elbow length, and the neck is softly rounded, edges in a crocheted picot stitch.

The gauge is 5½ stitches to the inch, and the simple directions are written for small, medium and large sizes with finished bust measurements of 35, 37, and 39 inches respectively.

To obtain directions for making the Spring Flowers Sweaters, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-043089 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, "The Daily Reflector," P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. K-043089 by sending a check or money order for $19.95 to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and yarn in your choice of peach, lavender or aqua.

The knot stitch used in today's featured design gives an interesting texture whenever it is used. In the following directions, whenever you are told to make a knot stitch, work it as follows: Purl 3 stitches together and leave them on the left needle; knit the same 3 stitches together, again leaving them on the needle, them purl the same 3 stitches together, this time slipping them from the left needle.

Row 3: Step 1 — knit 1; Step 2 — work a knot stitch over the next 3 stitches, knit 3. Repeat Step 2 across to end of row until 2 stitches remain, ending with a knot stitch and knit 1.

Repeat these 8 rows in sequence over and over for desired length.

Any time you plan to use this stitch, you will need to have a multiple of 6 stitches plus 5 more. In other words, cast on any number of stitches that can be evenly divided by 6 and then cast on 5 more stitches.

There are many different ways to add a crocheted picot edging to a knit or crochet piece. Here is one that is easy and pretty. First work a row of single crochet along are around the edge to be trimmed.

Around the neck adge of a pullover, you would join the last single crochet to the first single crochet with a slip stitch, chain 1 and work round. Along a straight edge, just chain 1 and turn, working the next row in same manner as given for Round 2.

Round 2: Step 1 — work a single crochet in each of the next 4 single crochets. Step 2 — chain 4 and work a single crochet in the next crochet. Repeat Steps 1 and 2 across to send. Fasten off.

Complaining Son Should Unplug It

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Dear Abby: I am a divorced woman living on a very low disability income. My grown son lives with me. I try to conserve on everything I can, but he uses water and gas to heat the water for the 20-minute shower he takes every morning. He works 40 hours a week, goes to the YMCA to work out, and he's with his girlfriend the rest of the time. He eats all his meals out, but he comes home to sleep. The minute he gets home, he turns the TV on, and leaves it on while he sleeps! He often falls asleep with the lights on.

He runs up my electric bill with his radio, electric hair blower and his electric shaver. And he can't take a drink of water without letting the water run for five minutes. He's too lazy to look up telephone numbers, so he calls information, which is charged to my bill. (Can't he add?)

He gives me a lousy $20 a week out of the $160 take-home pay he gets, and he complains yet. I think he's getting a good deal. If you agree with me, please print this so I can show it to my son. — Fed Up

Dear Fed Up: Here's your letter. Clip it and pin it on your son's pillow. Or tape it to his shower curtain, his hair blower, his television set, his light switch or his telephone. Your son should not complain. You should. I think you're entitled to more.

Dear Abby: My wife and I have a disagreement that perhaps you can resolve.

Our disagreement comes about because when we are watching TV, I regularly use the mute button to tune out the commercials. My wife says this is wrong — that if I watch the programs, I ought to listen to the sponsor's commercials.

My attitude is that the companies that control television programming abuse the airwaves by using an inordinate number of commercials, most of which are inherently deceptive, and that I am under no obligation to listen to this trash.

Which one of us is right? — "The Clicker" In Palm Springs

Dear Clicker: Whether or not one chooses to listen to the TV commercials is a personal decision. You are entitled to your opinion and your wife is entitled to hers. And if this is the most serious disagreement you ever have, count yourselves lucky.

Dear Abby: My wife and I agreed to chip in with a group of friends to buy a 50th wedding anniversary gift for a couple we have known for many years. The group giving this gift consists of eight married couples and one widow.

One member of our group — not the widow — adamantly insists that the cost of the gift should be divided by 17. We think it should be divided by nine.

What do you think? — In Doubt In Arizona

Dear In Doubt: Is the widow's deceased husband going to be at the anniversary party? Of course not. Therefore the cost of the gift should be divided by 17 — each couple paying two shares, leaving the widow with one.

Dear Abby: I was the "pen pal czar" for Operation Dear Abby while I was command chaplain for USS Coral Sea, and I shall always remember with fondness the excitement created by the thousands of letters we received daily after you launched your letter-writing campaign in 1987. What a terrific morale booster that was!

Numerous servicemen (and women) developed romances through those letters that ended in marriage. May 6 will mark nearly one and a half years since John Frakes answered a letter from Kathy McQuiston of New Castle, Pa. And by the time you read this, they will be married. Keep up the good work, Abby! — Michael D. Halley, Command Chaplain

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA. 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Boat Show In Beaufort

BEAUFORT — This year's Traditional Wooden Boat Show will take place on Saturday and Sunday at the downtown waterfront. The 15th annual show, conducted by the North Carolina Maritime Museum in Beaufort, continues its emphasis on the "small" boat.

The exhibition of boats, along with lectures, demonstrations and videos will be given on the waterfront and in the nearby museum.

Boats will arrive for registration between 9 a.m. and 11 a.m. Saturday. The sailing regatta begins at 2:30 p.m., and the row and paddle races start at 3:30 p.m.

This year, the museum will host the Wooden Canoe Heritage Association. Those interested in this organization should attend the meeting at 7:30 p.m. Friday in the museum. New or restored canoes should be on hand for the weekend.

All events are free. For more details, call the museum at 728-7317.

'Pet Sematary' Is Tops Again

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOLLYWOOD — Stephen King's terrifying "Pet Sematary" remained moviegoers' favorite for the second-straight weekend, and the comedy "K-9" made its debut in second place.

"Pet Sematary" earned $8.3 million last weekend and has brought in more than $24 million in its two weeks of release.

"K-9," which stars Jim Belushi as a narcotics detective teamed with a hot shot German shepherd, sold $7.4 million worth of tickets.

"Major League" was in third place with $4.1 million.

In fourth place was the debut of "Criminal Law," starring Gary Oldman as a criminal defense attorney who gets client Kevin Bacon off the hook, then has second thoughts. The movie earned $2.6 million.

"Dream Team" from Universal was in fifth place with $2.3 million, just ahead of "Say Anything," which also earned $2.3 million.

Here are the top movies for the weekend as tallied by Exhibitor Relations Co., with distributor, weekend gross, number of theater screens, average per screen, total gross and number of weeks in release.

1. "Pet Sematary," Paramount, $8.3 million, 1,585 screens, $5,287 per screen, $24.4 million, two weeks.
2. "K-9," Universal, $7.4 million, 1,677 screens, $4,455 per screen, $7.4 million, one week.
3. "Major League," Paramount, $4.1 million, 1,615 screens, $2,555 per screen, $31.2 million, four weeks.
4. "Criminal Law," Hemdale, $2.6 million, 1,170 screens, $2,253 per screen, $2.6 million, one week.
5. "The Dream Team," Universal, $2.293 million, 1,365 screens, $1,680 per screen, $19.1 million, four weeks.
6. "Say Anything," 20th Century Fox, $2.291 million, 1,056 screens, $2,170 per screen, $12.1 million, three weeks.

Atlantic Ocean Topic Of Series

By Kathryn Baker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — To most of us, it's an innocuous strip of blue that separates the United States and Europe on the world map, or that tedious nothingness that takes hours to go by outside the window of an airplane.

But the Atlantic Ocean, a shifting, churning, life-giving, living character, is the star of an ambitious new, three-part series, "Atlantic Realm," beginning tonight on PBS.

The first episode, "Island Arks," examines the origins of the ocean, from its beginnings some 165 million years ago as little more than a river separating two continents before they began to drift apart.

The series offers scientific and historical data on the evolution of the ocean, but is thankfully taken up more with superb photography of wildlife the ocean has spawned than by maps and charts. One of the highlights of the first episode is the birth of a litter of lemon sharks in the shallows near the Bahamas, an event never before photographed in the wild.

Life above the sea is featured in the first episode, especially the myriad sea birds that live on islands off the coast of Africa where the delicate ebb and flow of the ecology is easily observed — such as the environmental upheaval caused when mariners introduced domesticated cats to one small island.

The series is engrossing and lovely to watch, despite occasionally overwrought narrative, such this sample from a segment on Iceland: "Solidified lava is one of the raw materials of the Earth. Forged in fire, it's stern but ready to accept the life that pioneers its surface. Below, the Atlantic marine organisms would exploit this new territory, but here, laid bare to the winds of the air, lichens, mosses and herbs have taken hold along this broad and rolling swath of the salt that is part of the mid-Atlantic ridge."

Phew. Narrator Marty Robinson manages to read such passages with aplomb if not a breath.

The series, a joint production of WTTW in Chicago and the BBC, was created by Rod Redfern, who wrote the book "The Making of a Continent" on which a previous, six-part PBS television series was based.

"I was looking for something to follow 'The Making of a Continent,'" said Redfern in a statement about "Atlantic Realm," "and the obvious thing was the making of an ocean." Redfern's book on the Atlantic is due out soon.

Next week's episode, "Ocean of Light," focuses on the effects of the winds that brush the top of ocean and the life forms that live near the surface, including whales. The cameras go the Antarctic for first-time pictures of the underwater ballet of Weddell seals. Later, they capture the flow of translucent animals that drift along the surface of the open ocean.

Christina Ferrare Putting Hard Times And Low Profile Behind

grace. I mean, we were a scandal."

Ferrare's friends found the DeLorean affair unseemly. There were scenes straight out of Tom Wolfe's novel, "The Bonfire of the Vanities."

"A lot of them, in the first few days after the arrest, they all wanted to be in the know," Ferrare says. "So they all rallied around and then, once we got into it — you know, it dragged on for two years before it went to court — slowly, I would say 90 percent of the people we knew in New York, we never heard from again."

Margaret Weitzman, Ferrare's best friend and the wife of the attorney who defended DeLorean, recalls a trip to an exclusive spa during that time.

"I remember we went to the spa," Weitzman says, "and there were women who literally stayed on the other side of the swimming pool because they didn't want to deal with Cristina."

But the real world, the world outside of New York high society, could not hear or read enough about the DeLoreans. Newspapers and television stations assigned reporters to chronicle Ferrare's apparent dress-for-acquittal strategy being played out on the fifth floor of the federal courthouse in Los Angeles.

Would her new, more conservative hair style win favor with the jurors? The serious yet striking look was in.

"Wasn't that stupid?" Ferrare asks, mildly annoyed. "I mean, my husband is arrested on a serious crime. My whole life falls apart, and all they could care about was writing about what I was wearing and what I looked like. Nobody ever cared about how it affected the children and how it affected me, how it affected John, our life, our marriage. No one cared about that."

And as for DeLorean, she says: "I staunchly believed in his innocence.

"To this day, even though there is no love lost between either of us, I can say that John neither conspired nor talked about buying or selling cocaine. They just got him on the wrong deal."

(DeLorean was later acquitted on the drug charges, as well as separate charges of fraud, racketeering and income-tax evasion in a federal case in Detroit and is still embroiled in legal disputes stemming from his defunct DeLorean Motor Co. of Northern Ireland.)

But Ferrare says the evidence presented in the Los Angeles trial, tapes of her husband meeting with undercover FBI agents and informants, showed his private lies.

"I remember going to dinner with these people," she says. "These people were undercover agents — we had no idea — and this, this drug dealer, people who carry guns. And I felt betrayed (later). ... He involves me in this whole thing with people that I didn't know who they were or what they were doing.

"He put me in a situation where my life could have been in danger, or implicated me, or involved me in some way. I didn't like that."

And it was toward the end of the trial, Ferrare says, "when I realized that my marriage was a sham, our relationship was not what I had thought it was and that basically he lied to me for 12 years. And I guess the hardest thing that I had to deal with was that I really don't believe that he loved me when we married."

Ferrare pauses, and then her voice takes on an even more determined edge.

"I believe that John is a sociopath," she says. "John used me, and used his own flesh and blood to be able to attain or to get what he wanted. And he didn't hesitate to use any of us in any way for his own personal gain. It was a very hard thing for me to admit.

"I honestly don't think to this day that John has any idea how it affected me and how it psychologically affected the children. He doesn't understand it. He doesn't see it. And I think it's because he's incapable of seeing it."

The words stop. Ferrare's shoulders rise slightly as she takes a deep breath. Later she says it felt good, cathartic almost. "I haven't talked about all this in a long time.

"I'm a strong person," she says. "I have a great constitution. I love to laugh. Laughter and humor are great healers. That helps.

"And Tony has been a great healer for me because I have him to fall back on and he is there for me. ... I have emerged a whole new person, with a better attitude about life. And I'm not even mad at John anymore. He can't push my buttons anymore."

DeLorean, who describes himself as a born-again Christian who spends most of his time with other Christians, was reached by telephone at his 430-acre New Jersey estate (He got the real estate; she got the kids).

He blamed the pressures of his trial for the break-up of his marriage to Ferrare and wondered about the suddenness of her marriage to Thomopoulos.

"You don't leave somebody one day and then the new guy moves in the next day and not know that person," DeLorean said. "But that doesn't bother me. I understand.

"The fact is, and Pat Robertson has said this, when I was in the middle of that government frame-up, that it is normal for couples to break up when they are going through such a stressful situation.

"For some reason, she has become hostile to me," DeLorean said of the woman he has described as "a painting who was hanging on my wall."

"What I don't understand is why."

When the producers of "A.M. Los Angeles" and the "Home Show" try to put their finger on Ferrare's viewer appeal, they tend to fall back on what she is not.

She is not, they say, Barbara Walters, or Joan Lunden and certainly not Diane Sawyer.

On the air, Ferrare talks about her children, her marriage, her indigestion and her sex life. She laughs, a lot, and sometimes she even cries. Not long ago, she was so offended by Michael Edwards, who wrote "Priscilla, Elvis & Me: In the Shadow of the King," that she walked off the set of "A.M. Los Angeles."

"She'll be sitting there, and all of a sudden she is talking about how she sometimes shaves her upper lip because hair grows there," says Steve Edwards, Ferrare's "A.M." co-host and friend. "Now, I don't think Barbara Walters would ever talk about that. ...

"She is salt of the earth. People relate to her. ... In a way, it's like she represents them. She is as they would be if they were as beautiful, if they were as talented. I think that she has a special kind of magnetism. I think she has lived a bit of a soap opera in public. But more than that, she seems very accessible in terms of her life. She is very, exceedingly honest on the air."

And Ferrare says it is that very openness that can get her into trouble.

"There are some people who are truly annoyed with it," she says. "I get negative mail. 'I'm pushy. I'm too loud. I should keep my opinions to myself. I'm stupid. I don't know what I'm saying.'

"But I'm sure Phil Donahue gets the same thing, although I'm sure they don't say he's stupid."

Ferrare laughs at that one, but not too heartily. Yes, she says, the idea that she is a jet-setting bimbo, all show and no substance, still bothers her.

"I can get 100 letters just, 'I love you. Terrific. You're funny. You make my day. You cure my allergies. I can walk again.' I mean, all kinds of things. And then I get one letter saying that you should get her off the air, she interrupts too much, she's got a loud mouth. I don't like her. She's too fat, all kinds of things.

"And this one letter used to destroy me. It doesn't anymore."

Author Believes Gender Differences Superficial

In short, she said, we are not typecast by sex, even though it still might be more comfortable to believe that we are. And the "news" of her book, that men and women share far more characteristics than the stereotypes suggest is particularly important right now, she thinks. After two decades of making progress toward equality, women seem to be losing momentum, to have reached a stage increasingly described as a "plateau."

This is not surprising, Epstein said. "I think people are very cautious and upset: A lot of things have happened in a short amount of time, and they have been disruptive. The more power women have taken hold of, the more anxious men are about it. Women are anxious too. I think they are afraid they will be punished, that people won't like them."

This anxiety, she said, is reinforced at institutional levels. In the mass media, for instance, we are seeing more stories about women returning to "traditional values."

"I think there are people in positions of power who are fostering these ideas," she said, "like the publishers of Good Housekeeping with their New Traditionalist campaign, or The New York Times, which boxed a report on the relationship between women's hormone cycles and their ability to achieve."

Even the way all public opinion polls are broken down by men and women's responses, she said, contributes to the "difference model" that shapes our perceptions of ourselves.

"I see in the press quite a lot of attention to the problems women are facing coming into positions of power and effective careers, but not many devoted to successes.

"The message seems to be that women have bitten off more than they can chew. ... It's really quite undermining, and I think it has an impact on society. Instead of being cheered on, women now are being discouraged," she said.

She attributed this partly to "a sort of amnesia about the very recent past, and how tough it was before we had laws that made it illegal to discriminate on the basis of sex. People have forgotten how recent it was that women couldn't get into professional schools."

Equally unhelpful, she said, are the schools of gender research that emphasize differences between men and women. Various approaches, such as sociobiology or psychoanalysis, analyze women's difference in terms of basic moral reasoning, or Freudian instincts, or evolutionary factors, or endocrine function. Even more radical is the attitude — to be found both in the ranks of right-wing fundamentalists and radical feminists — that women are not only different but, with their special qualities of nurturing and connectedness, superior to men in every way.

The contention that women are "special," which is emphasized in such psychologies of caring and nurturing, is like "packaging old wine in new bottles," Epstein said. Such theories, she said, "will be used to create and perpetuate sexism and inequality."

Epstein, whose previous books include "Women in Law" (Basic Books) and "Woman's Place" (University of California Press), has served on a Presidential Commission on the Status of Women, advisory groups on affirmative action and has held a Guggenheim fellowship. The privately endowed Russell Sage Foundation, which is devoted to research in the social sciences, selected her "because her specialty has been gender roles in the work place," according to the foundation's director of publications, Priscilla Lewis.

"The foundation has been interested in exploring gender and institutions, the idea being to probe how changing definitions of gender roles have affected American institutions; for example, the home, the church, the family, the work place," Lewis said. "We wanted to see how those things have intersected."

In Lewis' opinion, the book is a benchmark because it pulls together current thinking and writing on gender from a large collection of sources.

"It looks at a body of research that has grown hugely and without much overall assessment over the past 20 years," she said. "It's time to pause for minute and see how it stands up, what it suggests when it's all put together."

When it is all put together, said Epstein, the evidence shows that, despite intense webs of law and social customs to keep women in their place, they can change. "We saw that happen in the women's movement—give them just a little chance and they go to law school, medical school, business school — do all the things they were socialized not to do."

In other words, biological and social differences can be separated, she said, although she acknowledged that current research presents a mass of contradictions, and that her book will provoke controversy. "There are lots of people committed to the notion that there are basic differences between men and women.

"My book argues that, of course, there are some unchangeable differences, in terms of sexual make-up, but they are minimal in terms of what men and women are able to achieve. Why? I've looked at 1,000 studies, including studies of studies. I've considered the whole array."

Her advice for women, or men, who aren't sure how to proceed:

"Look to your personal history. If it feels comfortable to be straightforward and forceful, be that way. If it feels comfortable to be nurturing and caring, be that way. We are not monolithic. We all have many traits and they are activated in many ways, if we can see the possibilities."

A Calmer Tombstone Remembers The Past

By David Lamb
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

TOMBSTONE, Ariz. — "Well," the marshal of Tombstone observed, "you could safely say the town's a lot more calm than it used to be." He reached down to pick up a discarded scrap of paper from the wooden sidewalk. Allen Street was filled with the shadows of a quiet afternoon and, believing the peace to be secure, Marshal Ed Schnautz headed back toward his office behind the O.K. Corral.

Schnautz, 60, a retired Phoenix, Ariz., policeman, cuts an impressive image in his tan Stetson, black boots and leather vest, walking the same route that Marshal Virgil Earp trod 108 years ago. Schnautz earns $2,108 a month and figures a marshal should not frequent bars in his own jurisdiction. Earp earned $25 a month and, with his brother Wyatt, had financial interests in some of Tombstone's finest drinking and gambling establishments.

Back when Tombstone was the West's wildest mining town, 110 saloons operating around the clock spread out from Allen Street, and Boot Hill cemetery held 250 corpses, none of which had been the victim of old age. Sheriff Scott White used to send out invitations to hangings — seven men were taken from his 16-cell jail and hanged one March day in 1884 — and John Heath, who had robbed a Bisbee, Ariz., store owned by the great-uncle of former Sen. Barry Goldwater, became something of a local legend by telling a mob before his lynching: "Promise me not to shoot into my body when I'm strangling and give me a decent burial. I'm ready."

As Schnautz passed the Lucky Cuss, where Nettie Fernley, 93 — "America's oldest professional pianist" — plays briefly at 5:15 p.m. each day, he said: "If I was young, I wouldn't stay here a minute. But as it is, if you're a 40-hour man, this is a good, quiet town to be in. Sure there's history here, but there's history everywhere. I just try to look at the town for what it is."

Tombstone's population, which reached 12,000 in the boom years, has leveled off at 1,600, and many of its residents now are ex-Californians and retirees. There are five saloons left, including the Crystal Palace, which still mixes its own sarsaparilla but has raised the price of a shot of whiskey from 12 cents to $2 in the last hundred years. Drunkenness is no longer much of a problem in town and Schnautz' two holding cells are almost always empty. Drugs coming up Highway 80 from Mexico are of more concern to the marshal than alcohol.

Paradoxically, what has saved Tombstone from the fate of other Western towns whose mines ran out is its very heritage of violence — particularly the gunfight on Oct. 26, 1881, when the three Earp brothers and Doc Holliday (then dying of tuberculosis) fought the Clanton gang at the O.K. Corral.

At least nine movies and two books have celebrated the shoot-out, and tourists who pour in here from throughout the world find a town that seems remarkably unchanged. Most of the buildings are original. Old men still gather on the benches in front of the Crystal Palace at noontime. In an age of electronic journalism, The Tombstone Epitaph is still set by Linotype.

Although Tombstone has been tamed, the town may soon be in for a jolt — and another boom. A group of investors, including the Epitaph's editor, Wallace Clayton, hope by year's end to have a steam train operating daily on a 110-mile loop from Tombstone to Bisbee. Preliminary studies indicate that 300,000 visitors a year would ride the sightseeing train, and that has stirred considerable debate in town.

"Nothing's going to be spoiled," Clayton said. "We have a historical commission that protects the integrity of Tombstone. No original building can be altered. There's been extensive planning. The increased number of visitors will bring a lot of prosperity to the town. To me, that's controlled progress."

Not everyone is so sure. "I don't think the people want to see a big boom like Orlando (Fla.) or Orange County (Calif.)," said City Councilman Bill Brett. He is a retired lieutenant colonel from nearby Fort Huachuca, an Army post for military intelligence that once was the home of the 6th Cavalry, which conquered Geronimo and the Apaches.

"Things could get out of control," Brett said. "This is one of the few Old West towns that hasn't been turned into an amusement park and we have an obligation to protect it. There's a good quality of life here, and I think we have to ask: What will the cost of growth be?"

Spiritual Enclave Loses Tranquility Amid Controversy

By Brian Murphy
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CASSADAGA, Fla. — In a tiny eight-sided hut, spiritual healer Gladys Reid turns on a cassette of soothing melodies. With a brush of her hand, she claims to whisk away tension and negative energy.

It won't be so easy to rid Cassadaga of its woes, say many residents of the backwoods enclave of more than 100 Spiritualists who attest to psychic or prophetic powers and the ability to communicate with the deceased.

The friction of controversy and fear of change cling to this 95-year-old community like the Spanish moss draping from the tree limbs. In the ephemeral realm of Spiritualism, very material issues such as politics, stock ownership and lawsuits jangle the village's almost surreal tranquillity.

"If you look close you can feel the tension in the air," said Ron E. Heriff, a professional medium who was among a five-candidate slate that lost a bitter campaign March 25 to control the non-profit board that runs Cassadaga Spiritualist Camp, which governs most psychic practitioners in town.

At least three of the five have been threatened with loss of their single share of camp stock for their alleged dissident acts, and a legal challenge in Volusia Circuit Court is expected to be heard sometime this spring on a plan that turned the camp from a shareholder to membership group.

Leaders say the move was to protect against unqualified psychics using the camp's name. Others claim it was an attempt to stifle new ideas and force nonconformists from low-cost camp homes.

Meanwhile, at the newly reopened Cassadaga Hotel — a musty, quaint 62-year-old structure — owner Joseph Stupar has filed suit against the camp board alleging harassment because he rents space to some of the two dozen Spiritualists who operate outside the camp's sanction.

"All this bickering and lawsuits have drained the positive energy from this place," said Marilyn Awtry-Smith, who lost her camp stock in December for forming a rival group in 1986.

"The tension is very, very high," Heriff said. "I'm not joking, we may be witnessing the undoing of Cassadaga."

Premonitions are just one ingredient in the metaphysical montage of Cassadaga. There are those who ackrowledge the healing powers of certain stones and crystals. Others comb the Zodiac for insights and guidance. Auras are read and past lives are examined.

But the basic tenet of Spiritualism remains the ability to speak with the "so-called dead." The contact with the spirit side is critical to demonstrate that death is not the end; the messages from the afterlife can be anything from a subtle feeling to words scripted through the air by light-emitting trumpets.

"Look at it this way," said medium and board member Darleen Misskelley. "You can't see television or radio waves in the air, but you see an image or hear a voice on the radio. Well, a medium is just like a television or radio. We pick up the higher vibrations from the spirit side and translate it back to something we can understand."

Cassadaga is a mecca for mediums. Signs hang from most of the wood-frame houses offering different doors into the spirit world: Psychic Counselors, Past-life Regressions, Astral Therapy. On Gala Days and Medium's Nights during the year, the compound is abuzz with visitors seeking 15-minute seances.

Yet not all in the village are believers. One camp shareholder rents to her sons, who playfully erected a "Ghostbusters" movie logo.

"We're not a circus or a sideshow," said Misskelley, the daughter of a Presbyterian deacon. "But some people can't appreciate that. Everyone mocked Nancy Reagan for seeking the advice of an astrologer when they know nothing about it."

The foundations of Spiritualism in America began after the Revolution, when metaphysics and superstition often intertwined with everyday life. One of the largest communities, now known as Lily Dale, was established in southwestern New York in 1879. At the same time, George Colby was homesteading here to establish a winter retreat for the northern Cassadaga village.

None of Colby's descendants are alive and vandals have burned and damaged his cabin. Yet his portrait is displayed like an icon. There are also numerous pictures of Jesus, whom Spiritualists regard as just one of the great healers and mediums. Followers are hunting for suitable pictures of other prophets, including Mohammed and Buddha.

Today, all members of the camp compound must be approved by the board. About a third of the 300 shareholders live in Cassadaga, where home prices are kept low — most are less than $50,000 — and some of the longtime residents pay only $5 a year for a lease. Most make their living off readings, averaging about $35 per session.

But in a community of avowed free-thinkers, it's different ideas and approaches that have caused the rifts.

Camp leaders are worried that non-affilated readers and mediums operating at the hotel and on county land across the street will turn the town into a carnival and soil its repuation. The outsiders say there should be no constraints on what is practiced in town.

"It's just growing pains," said Bonnie Bemis, who holds weekly services at the Universal Spiritualist Center across the street. "It's like a pot-bound plant straining to grow and flourish. Put us all in the same room and we believe the same thing.

"There are just some people who are resistant to change."

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY May 4

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): A cerebral friend has more advice than you can use. Talk is cheap and could prove to be expensive. Deal with the situation—yourself!

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): When you don't feel talented give your creative projects the day off. Focus on romance, communications and future travel plans.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Forces are scattered, but others are mystified at the speed at which you become magnetic and pull everything together.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Progress is made through hard work. Temper responses are fed by a "let's throw everything away and start over" attitude.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Worry over finances occurs when your security is at stake. Rashness, waste and excesses are bitter pills, but are lessons in learning.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Have confidence as you aim for the top. Don't put all of your irons in one fire. Diversify your financial projects.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Here you sit, waiting for the golden goose. Why not concentrate on being productive and caring for your own needs? Don't depend on others.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Your devotion to another is kept secret. Love is blooming. Retreat to a quiet spot and think things over. Stay on schedule.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): You can be lulled into a day-by-day complacency that leads to boredom. Be certain to keep routines and fun projects active.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Be ready for future vacation plans. There is harmony at home. Avoid thinking about an irritation from the past.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Old pals can be stimulating and helpful. Turn on the charm for a visiting VIP. Financial projects move along faster than expected.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Find a new format for your psychic and intuitive abilities. The immediate future is filled with Piscean charm and lucky, social contacts.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 ♣	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Seven of ♣

By his very nature, man tends to cling to his assets. But once in a while a timely divestiture can bring huge returns.

South's bidding showed a balanced 23-24 points, so North had just enough to raise to game—had his king been a queen, pass would probably have been in order. West led his fourth-best club. You correctly inserted dummy's nine to see if that would fetch the queen, and East rose with the ace. Before you commit yourself at trick one, consider how you would tackle the hand.

First, count your tricks. With the ace of clubs gone, there are seven. The two more you need will have to come from the diamond suit. Since the diamond finesse must work if you're going to succeed (allow West to gain the lead with the king of diamonds and he is going to be able to run his clubs), you will need either a second diamond finesse or a 3-3 split.

Obviously, a second finesse would be the better proposition. However, there seems to be only one entry to dummy—the king of spades. Is there a way around that impasse?

Jettison the king of clubs under the ace! If West's lead was fourth-best, the Rule of 11 tells you that East started with only one card higher than the seven, and he just played it. Therefore, dummy's club jack will be a sure entry.

Whether East returns a club or not, you are in control. You use your two black-suit entries to dummy for two diamond finesses. If the cards lie as in the diagram, that will net you three tricks in diamonds for a total of nine—all you contracted for!

Spottie, My Pet

By Lee Gillin

My dog, Spottie, is gray and brown. I call him Spottie because he has brown spots all over his body. Spottie has a red collar around his neck. Spottie's tail is shorter than my thumb. Spottie can't walk because he's stuffed with cotton. My dog has a black nose at the end of his muzzle. He's squeezable and he is fluffy. Can you guess what kind of dog he is?

My Heart Is Broken

By Tuanya Cox

I really thought that I could trust you but it doesn't seem so.

I really loved you and come to find out you took advantage of me.

My heart is broken by someone I loved and trusted. And now I must never fall in love again. I didn't really expect to fall in love with you but as things occurred, it was impossible not to.

You told me many times that you loved me and I've told you the same, but now it doesn't seem real.

As someone said before, I shouldn't have fallen in love with you. Now I wish that I had listened to them. Then maybe I would end up happy instead of lost.

They also said that you were like the rest but I didn't listen. And now I'm broken hearted by someone who I thought I could trust.

To find out that you're really like this, it makes me want to cry. But crying won't bring you back so I'll hold back my tears.

I still love you and always will. So I want to wish the best of luck to your next love. Maybe she will love you as much as I did.

Tuanya Cox, 15, a student at D.H. Conley High School receives special mention.

A Windy Day

By Karmee Stephenson

One windy day a boy named Billy went outside. The wind blew his hat off. He didn't see where it went so he started to look for it. He looked in the bushes and around the house. He did not see it. Billy told his mom that he couldn't find his hat. He went back outside to look again. The wind began to blow again. It blew his hat back on his head. Billy was happy about his hat. He went in his house.

George Washington Carver

By Melinda Barrow

George Washington Carver was a slave during the Civil War and he became free. His mother was a slave. He learned how to keep plants growing.

Soon he became friends with a white doctor, the doctor told him where a black college was. He made his money from washing laundry. When he got out of college he was 30 years old.

One day he found 300 ways to use peanuts. He had many things to do with them. He became an artist, he played the piano and became a musician. He was also a good scientist. He helped farmers rotate crops. He made peanut butter just like today.

Melinda Barrow, 8, a student at Third Street School receives special mention.

Federal Facts

Federal Government Agencies

Fifty-eight independent agencies or corporations are a part of the federal government. Perhaps the best known of these agencies are the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), the Federal Communications Commission (FCC), the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC), the Tennessee Valley Authority (TVA), the Peace Corps, the Consumer Products Safety Commission and the Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC).

In 1947 the CIA was established to gather information on foreign nations and to spy in any country. In addition, the Central Intelligence Agency works to prevent spying in the United States by foreign powers.

The FCC, established in 1934, controls and regulates radio, TV, telephone, telegraph, cable TV, CB radios and satellite communications. The Emergency Broadcast System (EBS) which is a part of the Federal Communications Commission helps the nation prepare for emergencies and/or national defense.

The FDIC which is a government corporation insures a depositor's money which has been put in a member bank. A depositor's money is insured up to 100,000 in savings and commercial banks which join the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. This corporation was started after The Great Depression to help restore confidence in the nation's banks.

Congress in 1933 established the TVA to provide water power, shipping, flood control and recreation in the Tennessee Valley. Additionally, the Tennessee Valley Authority was to control, conserve and develop the natural resources in the valley at the same time.

One of the earlier independent agencies was the ICC which deals with transportation. It was established in 1887. The Interstate Commerce Commission controls the transportation of both passengers and property across state lines. the ICC oversees the charging of fair rates and sees that adequate and efficient services are offered.

Other agencies or corporations which are a part of the federal government include The Appalachian Regional Commission, the U.S. Postal Service, the Veterans Administration, and the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC). These are only a small portion of the 58 independent government agencies. Many of the directors or members of these agencies are appointed by the president and serve with the Senate's approval.

International Day

Enjoy A 'World Class Affair' With Food, Fun And Exhibits

By Cherie Evans
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

"A World Class Affair" will be held Saturday as Greenville presents its first International Day.

Activities include dining and dancing during the festival that will bring the foods, clothing and culture of various countries together in the Carolina East Mall from noon to 9 p.m.

The idea for the event stemmed from the Leadership Institute of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, said Bo Norling, a participant in the institute and production manager of SAB Nife, Inc. of Greenville.

"It started off at the Chamber of Commerce," he said. "They have what is called the Leadership Institute, and we wanted to see if it was feasible for us to have an international day."

Those in the international community were contacted about the idea, Norling said. "We found that there was quite a lot of interest."

India, Japan, Sweden, Greece, Italy, the Arab world, Africa and China will be represented during the festival.

Each group "will put their own show together" that will include dances, singing, playing instruments and other performances, he said.

"We have ordered booths for them to display things in and we're arranging for a stage," Norling said.

Usha Gulati of Greenville who has been working with the Indian group said the groups will display clothing and various arts and crafts from their countries.

Samples of traditional foods, like those in the accompanying recipes, also will be available at the festival, Norling said.

The festival is being sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce, the city of Greenville, Greenville Utilities, Burroughs Wellcome, SAB Nife and East Carolina University.

Dine And Dance Around The World At New Festival

Members of Greenville's international community have come together with the East Carolina University International Studies Group to bring the "Dine and Dance Around the World" festival.

The festival, to be held Saturday from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. at Carolina East Mall, will present international foods, traditional costumes and dances and also teach information about other cultures.

The festival is sponsored by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, City of Greenville, Greenville Utilities, Burroughs Wellcome, SAB Nife Inc. and East Carolina University.

GRAVAD LAX

Fillet about 1½ kg. (3 lb.) salmon from the middle part of the fish. Remove all small bones but not the skin. Mix 4 tbsp. sugar, 4 tbsp. salt and 2 tsp. crushed white peppercorns. Rub the salmon with most of this mixture.

Place a layer of dill at the botton of a shallow dish and then one salmon fillet with the skin downwards. Cover with a generous layer of dill. Sprinkle with the remainder of the spice mixture. Place the other salmon fillet on top, skinside upwards, and so that the thin part rests on the thick part of the lower piece. Cover with a generous layer of dill and, finally, place a very light weight on top (the juice must not be pressed out of the salmon). Refridgerate the salmon for 1 or 2 days. Turn the salmon over when half of this time has passed.

Scrape off all the spices when the salmon is to be served. Cut it into slices. Serve with cold gravlax sauce, lemon wedges and boiled potatoes or with potatoes cooked in white dill sauce.

CREPES COLETTE

French recipe for six. Two crepes per person. Serve with a salad, cheese and a dessert.

Preparation Of Crepes

1 cup flour
3 eggs
1 tbsp. oil
1 tbsp. rum or cognac (optional)
2¼ cups of milk

In a bowl, put the flour making a well in the middle. Add the eggs and salt. Mix together. Slowly add the milk. When the dough is well mixed, add the oil, then the rum (or cognac). Let sit for two hours in the refridgerator, stirring from time to time.

Heat a little butter or margarine in a pan. Pour a ladelful of mixture in the pan, covering the bottom of the pan with a thin layer. Cook until golden, turn over and cook other side.

Preparation of the filling

½ lb. of ham, finely chopped
½ lb. lb. mushrooms, finely chopped
8 oz. of swiss cheese or grated gruyere

In a pan, melt a pat of butter. Add salt, pepper and nutmeg. Mix ham and mushroom mixture.

Put 3 to 4 tsp. of mixture in each crepe. Roll up and cover with sauce. Sprinkle grated cheese on top. Heat in oven for 15 minutes. Serve immediately.

HUMMUS BI-TAHINI
GARBANZO-BEAN DIP
(Arab World)

1 (1 lb.) can garbanzo beans, drained
2 tbsp. sesame seed paste, (tahini paste)
2 garlic cloves, minced
Juice of one lemon (3 tbsp.)
Salt to taste
1 tbsp. vegetable oil
1 or 2 parsley sprigs or paprika

Place garbonzo beans in blender or food processor and process until smooth. Add sesame seed paste, garlic, lemon juice, salt. Stir to blend. Shape mixture into mound on a flat plate. Make indentation in center of mound of mound. Drizzle on oil, decorate with parsley or paprika.

Serve with pita bread as a dip.

GOMOKU SUSHI
(Japan)

Sushi Rice

Wash 5 cups Japanese short grain rice until clear. Soak in 5½ cup water for 15 minutes. Bring to boil, lower heat to simmer. Cover and cook 15 minutes. Take rice off heat and let sit for 10 minutes.

Tranfer rice to large nonmetallic platter or tray. Immediately pour vinegar dressing over rice and fluff with a fork. Cool to room temperature.

Vinegar Dressing

1½ cups rice vinegar
1 tbsp. salt
2 tbsp. sugar
Boil to dissolve

Gomoku Sushi

Prepare one large or two medium carrots and 1½ cups of fresh snap green beans by cutting into long, thin pieces.

Soak Shiitake (black mushrooms) for 2 to 3 hours, drain and cut into strips. Soak Kanpyo (shredded gourd) for 2 to 3 hours, drain.

⅔ cup soup stock
1½ cup soy sauce
1/6 cup sugar
1 tbsp. Murin (sweet rice wine)

Cool to room temperature. Mix vegetables well with room temperature sushi rice. Garnish with thin slivers of a two egg omelette, ¼ cup ginger pickle and one sheet nore (seaweed) shredded.

An attractive garnish in the spring is to arrange cherry blossoms on the dish.

FRIED DUMPLING
(Chinese)

2½ cup wheat flour (all purpose)
⅔ cup boiling water
⅓ cup cold water
¾ lb. ground pork (not too lean)
4 oz. shrimp shelled
3 dried black mushrooms (soaked)
10 oz. cabbage or spinach
1 tbsp. chopped green onion
1 tsp. chopped ginger
2 tbsp. soysauce
2 tsp. salt
2 tbsp. lard or sesame oil
3 tbsp. oil

Place pork in bowl, add shrimp (cut into small pieces), mushrooms (cut into small pieces), green onion, ginger and soysauce, salt, sesame oil. Mix thoroughly until thickened.

Remove the dough to floured board, knead again until smooth. Divide the dough into 40 pieces. Flatten each piece with hand and roll into 2½" round thin pancake, put 1 tbsp. of filling in center then fold over to make a half circle and pinch edges together. Stretch a little longer, carefully.

Heat a flat frying pan until very hot, add 2 tbsp. oil. When oil is hot add enough dumplings to cover the bottom of the pan without overlapping (approximately 20 to an 10" pan). Place into an attractive flower shape. Fry until bottom is golden, (about 1 min.) add ⅔ cup water, cover and cook until water has evaporated.

Add 1 tbsp. oil to side of pan and fry another half minute. Place a serving plat over the frying pan and invert the pan quickly. Now prepare the remaining portions. These may be kept warm by covering in oven.

STEAMED DUMPLINGS
(Chinese)

2½ Cup wheat flour
⅔ cup boiling water
⅓ cup cold water
10 oz. pork (ground or chopped)
4 oz. shrimp (shelled)
5 dried mushrooms (soaked)
½ chopped bamboo shoots (or cabbage)
1 tbsp. chopped green onion
1 tsp. chopped ginger
2 tbsp. soysauce
2 tsp. salt
1 tbsp. sesame oil

Place flour in a large bowl, add boiling water and mix well. Add cold water, knead dough with hand until thoroughly mixed. Cover and let sit for at least 15 minutes.

Place ground or chopped pork in bowl. Add the shrimp (cut into small cubes) and mushrooms (after soaking, cut into small cubes), bamboo shoot (cooked and chopped). Mix well, add green onion, ginger, soysauce, salt, lard, continue to mix a moment

Knead dough on lightly floured pastry board. Cut or pinch off into 1" pieces (about 40) flatten with hand and roll out thin to about 2½" round (like a pancake). Place on palm and put 1 tbsp. mixture (stuffing) in center of pancake and fold into a half circle. Pinch the edges together forming twist only on the back half of the dumpling.

Crafts like this Indian hard-carved screen displayed by Usha Gulati will be at the festival

Arrange on cloth in steamer in ring and place over boiling water. Cover and steam for 10 to 15 minutes over high heat. Remove from steamer and arrange attractively on plate to serve.

Note: If steamer is attractive it may be brought directly to the table for service.

POLLO ALL ABRUZZESE

1 small onion, chopped
salt and pepper
1 lb. ripe tomatoes, peeled, seeded and chopped
2 large sweet peppers

Chop the chicken into serving pieces. Heat the oil in a heatproof casserole and saute the onion until golden. Add the pieces of chicken and continue to saute gently, turning them to brown them all over.

Season to taste with salt and pepper and add the tomatoes (a can of Italian peeled tomatoes may be used instead of fresh ones.) Cover the casserole and simmer gently for ½ hour.

In the meantime, char the peppers over a high flame or put them under the broiler as near to the source of heat as possible, until their skins blacken and blister all over. Peel off their thin outer skins and cut the peppers into strips, discarding cores and seeds. Add the pepper strips to the casserole with the chicken and continue to simmer gently for 15 minutes longer, or until the chicken and peppers are soft. Serves 4

Cruise Ship Flavors Abound

By Carleton Jones
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

"I wanted to put in things that you are able to do in your own home," says the young chef, in an accent as heavily coated with Viennese charm as as a Dobosch torte. "Something for people who can't afford a cruise but who can buy the book and enjoy it."

Maritime chef Rudolph Sodamin is talking about "The Cruise Ship Cookbook," in which he puts you in the galley of a Cunard liner and shows you how to cook food fit for a gala cruise.

While modern-day fare may not rival the opulence of the golden age of dining aboard the Queen Mary, the Normandie, the France or the Conte di Savoia, there is plenty of awesome stuff still being served on the big liners.

A mere 30 years old, Sodamin is executive chef of largest ocean liner in service, the Queen Elizabeth 2.

While at sea, Sodamin and his staff use more than 2,000 recipes a month on the Cunard line's seven ships. The chef says that the line regularly stocks "about 300" vintage wines, with stores replenished from a warehouse in Southampton, England, the line's supply headquarters. Such efforts have gotten the QE2's Princess Grill of the (one of four restaurants aboard the liner) and other major Cunard dining salons rave reviews by travelers in search of food that matches the best of France, Italy and the Orient.

The Cruise Ship Cookbook (Little Brown & Co.; $29.95, 1988) was first published in Germany several years ago. It catalogs and displays with sumptuous photographs the dinners, buffets, snacks and menus presented on the cruises. The result is a sort of "Love Boat" extravaganza in color that is surprisingly straightforward, down to earth and often quite simple in the way recipes are presented.

Sodamin keeps "thousands and thousands" of recipes of Austrian dishes on file and dips into them occasionally for inspiration. But he also works with recipes from lands the cruise ships visit. Their constant ocean travel feeds him ideas for highlighting a special cruise event, formulating a captain's dinner or celebrating a last-night occasion.

Camp Offers Fun To Diabetic Young

Kathy Kolasa

Ph.D., ECU Dept. Family Medicine

Dear Readers: There are many people in eastern North Carolina who have a chronic disease like hypertension or heart disease. Many could control their disease better if they followed special diets. These adults and children with diabetes can really affect their well-being if they don't carefully control their food intake. For several years, Nancy Gray in pediatrics and other nutritionists, along with other ECU health care providers, have helped teach diabetic kids at a special camp about food needs. I've asked the folks who run Camp Needles in the Pines to tell you about the experience.

Camp Needles In The Pines

Diabetes is not fun. It requires shots 2-3 times per day, careful attention to food intake and fingersticks 2-4 times per day for blood sugar reading. Often children with this disease are not allowed away from parents overnight, much less for a week at camp!

In 1984, Camp Needles in the Pines was established to help turn this around. Children from eastern North Carolina ages 8-16 were invited to spend a week at camp to learn how to have fun, despite their diabetes. Since then Camp Needles in the Pines has met yearly in Swansboro to teach children with diabetes that when it comes to fun, the only difference between them and other children is that they are "just a little bit sweeter!"

The children at Camp Needles in the Pines do what all kids do at camp: swim, make crafts, sail, canoe, camp out, go to the beach and bug their counselors. Some of them have never seen the ocean before!

In addition, they learn how to give an insulin injection, check blood sugars and manage their diets. They learn quickly that activity will bring their blood down too low if they don't eat enough food and take less insulin.

Low blood sugars can cause dizziness, disorientation and blackouts and are a main reason why these children are usually very sheltered. The juggling of food, activity and insulin taught at camp is a skill that, when learned well, can give children with diabetes independence for life.

This year, Camp Needles in the Pine will meet from June 18-24. If you know a child who would like to go, or it you would like to sponosr a child (donations make it possible for many of these kids to go to camp who otherwise would not have the money), please contact the Diabetes Section, Department of Pediatrics, ECU School of Medicine, Greenville, N.C. 27858-4354, phone, 551-2516. The camp is staffed by volunteers from all walks of life — nurses, dietitians, doctors, students in many fields and even the Marines lend a helping hand. It is a week of challenge and new adventures for all involved.

Microwave Oven Makes It Faster To Clean Up When Having Rice

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Although regular rice doesn't cook much faster in the microwave than in a saucepan, cooking in the microwave makes serving and cleanup easier. You can cook the vegetables and rice in the same casserole and take it right to the table at serving time.

MUSHROOM RICE PILAF

2 green onions, sliced
1 tbsp. margarine or butter
⅔ cup water
⅓ cup long grain rice
¼ of a medium sweet red and-or green pepper, cut into thin strips 1-inch long
¼ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. dried sage, crushed
2 tsps. snipped parsley

In a 1-qt. microwave-safe casserole combine mushrooms, onions and margarine. Cook, uncovered, on 100 percent power (high) for 1½ to 2½ minutes or until vegetables are tender. Stir water, uncooked rice, red or green pepper, salt and sage into vegetable mixture. Cover. Cook on high for 2 to 3 minutes or until boiling. Stir mixture and cook, covered, on 50 percent power (medium) 14 to 16 minutes or until rice is tender and liquid is absorbed, stirring once. Stir in parsley and let stand, covered, for 5 minutes. Makes 2 servings.

Colorful, Delicious Flavors Abound Aboard Ocean's Cruise Ships

For the sauce, mix egg yolks and sugar in the top of a double boiler. Whisk until thick. Add white wine and whisk over simmering — not boiling — water until foamy and thickened. Beat in liqueurs.

To finish, heat broiler to high. Place a large scoop of very firm vanilla ice cream in the center of the fruit arrangement. Coat the fruit plate thickly with the sabayon and glaze quickly under the broiler. Sprinkle with slivered almonds and pistachio nuts and serve immediately. Serves four.

CHOCOLATE ALMOND PUDDING

2 oz. unsweetened chocolate
3 tbsps. butter
3 tbsps. confectioners' sugar
3 eggs, separated
1 cup ground almonds
2 tbsps. granulated sugar
1 cup heavy cream, whipped, for garnish
Chocolate sauce (recipe follows)

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Butter a 1-quart mold and sprinkle with confectioner's sugar. Melt chocolate over simmering water; let cool. In a medium bowl, cream butter and confectioner's sugar until fluffy. Beat in egg yolks, 1 at a time. Add chocolate and nuts.

In another bowl, beat egg whites until soft peaks form. Add granulated sugar slowly and continue to beat until stiff peaks form. Gently fold into chocolate mixture and blend until no white streaks remain. Spoon into prepared mold. Place mold in a larger pan and add boiling water to halfway up sides of mold. Bake for 40 minutes or until set. Remove from the water and cool for 5 minutes. Invert mold on a platter and turn out. Serve warm. Pour chocolate sauce over and top with unsweetened whipped cream. Serves four.

Chocolate Sauce

1 cup sugar
1 cup milk
8 oz. unsweetened chocolate, chopped

Mix sugar, milk and chocolate in a heavy-bottomed pan. Cook over low heat, stirring often, for 7 to 10 minutes, until smooth and thickened.

FLAMED CREAM OF TOMATO SOUP

½ cup chopped shallots
½ cup of gin
5 tomatoes, peeled, seeded and diced
8 cups tomato juice
Pinch each of chopped fresh thyme, tarragon and chervil
1 clove garlic, minced
Salt and freshly ground pepper
½ cup heavy cream
2 tbsps. butter
Whipped cream for garnish
Chopped chives

In a large saucepan, saute bacon until limp. Add shallots and cook and stir until browned. Add gin. When liquid returns to simmer, cautiously flame the mixture by removing a small amount with a heatproof spoon, igniting with a kitchen match and pouring back into the saucepan. Be careful to roll up long sleeves and keep flammable materials away from the stove.

When the flames die, add tomatoes, tomato juice, herbs and garlic. Simmer uncovered for 20 minutes. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Add half the heavy cream and simmer 15 minutes longer. Remove from heat and stir in remaining cream and butter. Pour into heated soup bowls and garnish with a dollop of whipped cream. Sprinkle with chopped chives. Serves six to eight.

EGGS POACHED IN RED WINE WITH GLAZED MUSHROOMS

4 slices bread, crusts removed
4 tbsps. unsalted butter, divided
2½ cups dry red wine
8 fresh eggs
4 slices lean bacon, cut into thin strips
½ cup pearl onions, blanched
½ lb. mushroom caps
Minced fresh parsley

In a skillet, heat red wine to a gentle simmer and poach eggs in it. Remove cooked eggs with a slotted spoon and set aside. When all are done, cook wine until it is reduced by half.

In another skillet, cook bacon strips until crisp. Add pearl onions and mushroom caps and cook and stir until brown and glazed. Add reduced wine, stir in remaining butter, and season to taste with salt and pepper. Place poached eggs on toast slices and top with mushroom sauce. Sprinkle with minced parsley. Serves four.

SACHER TORTE

Butter for coating pans
8 oz. bittersweet chocolate
1 cup butter
1¼ cups confectioners' sugar
10 eggs, separated
1 tsp. vanilla extract
½ cup granulated sugar
Pinch of salt
1½ cups all-purpose flour, sifted
12-oz. jar apricot preserves
Chocolate Glaze:
4 egg whites
½ cup unsweeted cocoa
1 lb. confectioners' sugar

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Lightly coat two 9-inch, round cake pans with melted or softened butter. Line bottoms with parchment paper.

In a medium bowl, beat egg yolks lightly. Add yolks and vanilla to chocolate mixture, beating well.

Sprinkle flour over chocolate mixture and blend well. Add beaten egg whites and fold gently until no white streaks remain. Transfer batter to cake pans and bake in the middle of the oven for 25 to 30 minutes or until a cake tester inserted in the middle comes out clean. Cool cake in pans for 10 to 15 minutes. Loosen sides of the layers by running a sharp knife around them. Turn them out on a wire rack to cool completely. Peel off paper.

For the chocolate glaze, mix egg whites, cocoa powder and confectioners' sugar until smooth. Spread half the apricot preserves over a cake layer and cover with second layer. Heat remaining apricot preserves and force through a strainer. Spread strained liquid over top and sides of cake. Coat top and sides of cake with chocolate glaze and let harden before serving. Cut cake with a warmed knife. Traditionally, the Sacher torte is not decorated further. Serves eight to 10.

VICHYSSOISE

2 tbsps. butter
1 lb. leeks, white part only, finely chopped
1 medium onion, chopped
1½ lbs. potatoes, peeled and sliced
1½ qts. chicken broth
1 cup heavy cream
Salt and white pepper
Chopped chives

In a large, heavy-bottomed saucepan, heat butter and saute leeks and onions until soft but not brown. Add potatoes and chicken broth, cover pot and cook until potatoes are tender, 35 to 40 minutes. Pour through a strainer and push vegetables through once or twice to crush them (Or use a food mill). Add cream, salt and white pepper to taste. Refrigerate until completely chilled. To serve, stir well and pour into soup bowls. Sprinkle with chopped chives. Serves four to six.

FILLETS OF SOLE WITH BROCCOLI AND CHAMPAGNE SAUCE

8 large broccoli clusters
8 fillets of sole (about 2 pounds)
Salt and freshly ground pepper
2 tbsps. lemon juice
1 large red bell pepper, cut into thin strips
2 cups dry white wine
1 cup champagne sauce (recipe follows)

Rinse and drain broccoli. Peel stems, leaving 3 to 4 inches. Cook in boiling salted water until crisp-tender, 8 to 10 minutes. Rinse immediately under cold running water to set color. Drain. Wrap each broccoli cluster in a fish fillet. Secure with a toothpick, if needed. Sprinkle lightly with salt and pepper and place close together in a large, greased, enamel-lined or stainless steel skillet. Sprinkle with lemon juice. Garnish with lightly blanched strips of red pepper. Add white wine. Cover pan and simmer over low heat for about 10 minutes, or until fish loses its translucency. Serve on warmed plates with champagne sauce poured over fish.

Variation: Chop broccoli. Lay fillets flat and cover with chopped broccoli; roll up and secure with toothpick. To serve, slice fillets on plate and pour sauce over. Serves four.

Champagne Sauce

1½ tbsps. butter
¼ cup chopped onions
1½ tbsps. flour
1 cups fish stock
½ cup heavy cream
Salt and white pepper
½ cup reduced fish stock, or bottled clam juice
½ cup champagne
2 egg yolks
1 cup heavy cream
1 tsp. butter

In a heavy-bottomed saucepan, heat butter and saute onions until limp and transparent, but not brown. Add flour and cook and stir until it foams and bubbles. Add stock. Whisk vigorously to avoid lumps. Reduce heat and cook, stirring, for 10 minutes, until sauce is thickened and smooth. Add cream and cook 10 minutes longer. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Strain through a fine strainer.

Take 1 cup of resulting sauce (remainder can be saved and used on another occasion), add reduced fish stock or bottled clam juice and champagne. Cook until sauce is thick. Beat egg yolks with 1 cup cream and slowly stir into sauce. Swirl in butter. Taste and correct seasoning. If necessary, strain sauce again. Makes about 3 cups.

Shoppers Are Urged To Choose Healthy Foods

By Charlyne Varkonyi
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

"Eat less fat and sodium, more complex carbohydrates and fiber" could be considered the health chant of the 1980s.

It sounds simple enough, but putting the eating plan into action has not been easy. Consumers have had to sift through misleading labeling claims on processed foods. They have been forced to read the fine print of nutrition labels and gain a dietitian's knowledge of what to avoid at the meat counter.

But now a supermarket chain, Giant Food Inc., has attempted to make it easier to shop for healthy foods with a program that officials at the National Cancer Institute hope will be a model for the nation's supermarkets.

Recently, the National Cancer Institute and Giant announced the expansion of their "Eat for Health" program — a nutrition education effort that serves as a road map to the foods scientists believe can lower risk of cancer. The institute estimates that about 35 percent of all cancers, particularly those of the gastrointestinal tract and of the breast, ovary and prostate, are related to diet.

Institute recommendations include: reducing fat intake to 30 percent of calories, increasing fiber to 20-30 grams daily, increasing consumption of fresh fruit and vegetables, drinking alcoholic beverages in moderation, and minimizing consumption of smoked, salt-cured and salt-pickled foods.

Eat for Health includes a monthly bulletin, shelf labels listing foods low in fat and sodium or high in fiber, a Food Guide providing nutrition information for 2,500 products, signs in the produce department as well as recipe cards, signs, package labels and brochures in the meat department.

The match between the National Cancer Institute and Giant was engineered through the nutrition committee of the Food Marketing Institute, a trade association of supermarket chains.

Consumers say much of the nutrition information they have been getting is either confusing or impractical, according to Odonna Mathews, vice president of consumer affairs for Giant. Members of focus groups said they were more likely to make changes in their diets if recommendations came from credible sources, are easy to understand and can fit easily into their lifestyles.

"They want practical ideas on how to change their diet," Ms. Mathews said. "In response to these needs, Eat for Health provides quick and easy recipes, checklists of foods to choose more often, tips on snacking and eating."

Bonnie Liebman, director of nutrition for the Center for Science in the Public Interest, agrees that finding healthy foods isn't easy, noting that the government agencies have failed to improve product labeling. The agency is a non-profit consumer advocacy group and Ms. Liebman served as an observer of Eat for Health's 11-member advisory board.

"It is partly because of inadequate food labeling that we need this kind of supermarket labeling program," she says.

"I think it is a good idea and I wish we could have more programs like this in other supermarkets across the country. I am not saying it's perfect. I think if I were to design my own supermarket labeling program, I would probably be a bit bolder in pointing out the bad foods. But I think this is a good program."

National Cancer Institute officials think that it is such a good program that it plans to distribute the materials to other supermarket chains when Giant's exclusive right to the program ends in 1991.

"It is a model for a nationwide program," says J. Paul Van Nevel, associate director for cancer communications of the institute. "Certainly consumer reaction has been terrific and people seem to really like it."

Ms. Mathews agrees that this kind of program is good for supermarkets because it promotes increased consumer confidence.

"We know that consumers are concerned about nutrition," she says. "If we can provide a practical way to help them at the point of purchase to find products lower in fat, customers are more likely to shop at Giant."

Guide Helps Shoppers Choose The Right Foods

By Charlene Varkonyi
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

It is no news that we can help to prevent cancer with our forks, but the Giant-National Cancer Institute program is trying to make it easier by putting the what-to-buy and cooking suggestions right where we shop.

One of the major ways to get their message across is through a simple list of what to choose more of and what to choose less of.

Choose More:

Vegetables
Fruits
Whole-wheat and bran breads and cereals
Low-fat dairy products
Lean meats; turkey and chicken without skin
Fish
Cooked dry peas and beans (lentils, split peas, kidney, navy, black and pinto beans)
Potatoes
Low-fat cooking methods (broiling and steaming)

Choose Less:

High-calorie bakery and snack foods
Whole milk dairy products
Higher fat meats; turkey and chicken with skin; duck and goose
Frying and fried foods
Fats and oils (margarine, butter, mayonnaise, salad dressings
Alcohol

No Skills, No Talent Required For Salad

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — You don't have to be a culinary expert to make a salad that is both appealing to the eye and the palate. A variety of ingredients make salads fun and easy to prepare, any time of the year.

Modern transportation methods have made it possible for growers and suppliers to provide many fresh vegetables year-round. Be sure to choose only the freshest, most crisp and colorful greens and vegetables available at the market.

Blanchard & Blanchard, maker of all-natural salad dressings and other products from Vermont, says it's easy to create your own best-dressed salads — whether it's a pasta salad, chef salad or bean salad.

Unpeeled cucumber and zucchini can provide a "two-toned look" to your salad. Vegetables with pale shades include artichoke hearts, avocado, cabbage, cauliflower, celery, chick peas, endive, mushrooms, onion, potatoes and sprouts.

You can also experiment with different textures and appearances by using different shapes and sizes. Slice vegetables thick or thin, or grate, chop or dice them.

— Rinse all greens and vegetables thoroughly. To enjoy full flavor, rinse greens in cold water, wrap in paper towels, and store in the refrigerator until ready to use.

— Vegetables should be rinsed, dried and stored in the coolest part of the refrigerator.

— Don't chop off asparagus ends. Bend each spear gently until it snaps in two. It will break at just the right place to separate the tender tops from the tougher ends.

Marinated vegetables make easy salads when served alone or in combination with others. Take leftover vegetables and put them in a bowl with a light vinaigrette. Cover and refrigerate until you need them. They also make a healthy snack.

Mushrooms absorb a marinade fairly quickly. Try marinating some raw slices of mushroom in your favorite dressing for just a short time while preparing dinner, then toss them into your green salad.

Marinated chick peas make a good addition to a green salad. Take a can of chick peas, rinse with cold water, drain well, marinate in dressing and store covered in the refrigerator. They will keep about 10 days.

Mozzarella cheese is popular on salads, but fresh mozzarella is very different from the packaged variety. Fresh mozzarella is soft and tender and stored in water. You will find it in a gourmet shop or an Italian delicatessen.

No Time? It Takes Just 20 Minutes For This Meal

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

You might consider Marian Burros as much a missionary as a food writer.

Put away those TV dinners, those nitrite-laden hot dogs, those fast-food burgers and fries, she preaches. No need to run for Chinese take-out or call for pizza delivery.

Thirty minutes is too much of a commitment to cooking a meal? She is willing to show converts the path to healthy meals from scratch in less time than it takes to be served a first course in a fancy restaurant.

Her latest book, 20 Minute Menus (Simon and Schuster; $19.95), provides guides to dinners that she claims will be on the table in 20 minutes or less.

Why 20 minutes? Wasn't her last book, Keep It Simple: 30-Minute Meals from Scratch, fast enough? After all, she sliced the "60-Minute Gourmet" time in half.

"Surveys have found that most people prefer saving time to saving money," says Burros, a food writer for The New York Times. "Time has become so valuable because society has simply speeded up."

This hectic pace of life in the 1980s has made after-work cooks more impatient. An interview with Doreen Mott, associate director for consumer services at the Good Housekeeping Institute, was the catalyst for Ms. Burros' new time limits.

"We used to feature a 30-minute dish," Ms. Mott told her. "Now it's a 30-minute menu and readers keep writing to ask, 'Could you get it down to 20 minutes?' "

After three years of testing, Ms. Burros created 100 menus that she can do in 20 minutes. But her methods leave no room for clean-as-you-go cooks, no time-outs to casually sip a glass of wine. This is beat-the-clock cooking for skilled cooks.

You can't think about starting one dish before going on to another, she says. You may have to use the same pots and pans for different things. And there is no time for painstaking measuring or mulling over presentation. A food processor is standard equipment.

Even the introduction provides a disclaimer: "Cooking dinner in 20 minutes is not for people who have never used a stove. It isn't that the techniques used are complicated — it's just that in order to be efficient in the kitchen you have to know your way around. The novice can certainly cook these meals. It will just take longer."

Not only did the recipes have to meet the time restrictions, but in keeping with Ms. Burros' philosophy, they had to be healthy. She has cut portions of meat to no more than 6 ounces, and many menus are meatless. Fat is avoided wherever possible. Instead of sauteing in oil, she uses wine, vermouth or broth. No salt is added; herbs and spices are used instead.

She has not used salt in her cooking for he past decade, but says that her fat evolution was a different story.

"I hadn't been cooking with salt for a long time so I knew my alternatives were hot and spicy, or lots and lots of herbs, or lots and lots of spices, lemon juice or vinegar," she says. "But I wasn't sure exactly what the ways around fat were."

"One of the most interesting things I learned is you can steam something and add the smallest amount of butter at the end of the cooking and you get the butter flavor without having cooked the thing in butter," she says. "You take one tablespoon of butter and put it into a half a pound or pound of broccoli and you get the butter flavor at very little fat cost."

But probably the most startling discovery came when she went to interview Gilbert LeCoze at Le Bernardin, New York City's trendy seafood-only restaurant, and found non-stick pans everywhere. She always thought that non-stick pans were for people who did not know how to cook. But LeCoze told her that he loved the non-stick pans because they allow you to cook with only half the fat you would use in a regular pan. The cookbook adopts this philosophy and tells the reader to use one to two tablespoons of fat, depending on the pan.

One of her most pleasing fat-cutting discoveries was the result of mixing equal parts of low-fat or non-fat yogurt or ricotta with low-fat or non-fat cottage cheese in a blender or food processor. If you want a lighter sauce, add more yogurt. The ricotta or cottage cheese mellows the yogurt's sour edge.

"You get the mouth-feel of cream," she says. "You get a rich taste and texture and have practically no fat."

Ms. Burros got the following idea for a main dish from a restaurant menu, which she says she would happily credit if she could remember which one it was.

Game Plan:

Heat broiler.
Marinate tuna.
Prepare snow peas.
Broil tuna.
Cook noodles.
Saute snow peas.

MARINATED TUNA OVER SNOW PEAS

1 tbsp. coarsely grated fresh ginger
1 tbsp. reduced-sodium soy sauce
2 tuna steaks (6 oz. each), see note
4 oz. snow peas
1 tsp. plus 1 tbsp. corn, safflower or canola oil

Heat broiler. Cover broiler pan with double thickness of aluminum foil for faster cleanup. Peel and grate ginger. Mix with soy sauce in dish large enough to hold tuna. Wash tuna, dry and coat with marinade.

Remove tuna from marinade. Rub ½ teaspoon of oil on each side and broil 2 inches from heat source for about 4 minutes. Turn and broil on second side about 2 minutes longer. (If your tuna steak is about ¾-inch thick or thicker, it will take longer. Watch it carefully.)

Heat 1 teaspoon of oil in the skillet and saute snow peas for 2 minutes, until slightly softened but still firm. Arrange peas on two dinner plates and place tuna steaks on top. Serves two.

Note: If tuna is not available, substitute swordfish, shark or salmon.

NOODLES WITH GINGER-SESAME SAUCE

1 large scallion or 3 small scallions, white parts only
1 tbsp. coarsely grated ginger
1 tsp. reduced-sodium soy sauce
2 tsps. Chinese black vinegar or red wine vinegar
½ tsp. sugar
2 tsps. Oriental sesame oil
4 oz. fresh thin Chinese noodles or fresh angel hair pasta

Bring water to boil in a covered pot.

Meatless Soup Tastes Great

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

This full-flavored meatless soup puts together a legume and a grain — lentils and barley — to make a nutritious combo that tastes great.

LENTIL-BARLEY SOUP

¾ cup chopped celery
1 clove garlic, minced
¼ cup margarine or butter
6 cups water
One 28-oz. can tomatoes, cut up
¾ cup dry lentils, rinsed and drained
¾ cup pearl barley
6 vegetarian bouillon cubes
½ tsp. dried rosemary, crushed
½ tsp. dried oregano, crushed
¼ tsp. pepper
1 cup thinly sliced carrots
1 cup shredded Swiss cheese

In a 4-quart Dutch oven cook onion, celery and garlic in hot margarine until tender. Add water, undrained tomatoes, lentils, barley, bouillon cubes, rosemary, oregano and pepper. Bring to boiling; reduce heat. Cover and simmer 45 minutes. Add carrots and simmer for 15 minutes more or just until carrots are tender. Ladle into soup bowls and top with cheese. Makes 5 servings.

Lentils Can Fill High-Fiber Role In Healthful Diet

By Toni Tipton
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Thanks to the scientific connection between high-soluble fiber intake and reduced blood cholesterol, most Americans today are eating more foods that are rich in fiber, especially oat bran. One health enthusiast has even admitted to swallowing tablespoonfuls of the grain along with water to boost his intake.

But there are many other equally nutritious and less radical means of achieving the recommended 25 to 30 grams per day of total fiber (both the insoluble and soluble forms). Adding one half to one cup of legumes to the daily diet is one of them.

Legumes (pronounced leg-yooms) offer a hefty dose of soluble fiber per serving. They add about eight grams total fiber to the diet per each one-half cup serving of garbanzo, kidney or canned baked beans and each one-cup portion of dried peas, lentils and lima beans. This is significant compared to about two grams fiber per portion of the following: a small apple, a slice of whole-wheat bread, one-half large biscuit, shredded wheat cereal, a teaspoon of wheat bran, two teaspoons of oat bran, 1½ cups popped corn, one-half cup cooked broccoli or two cups lettuce.

In the body, fiber is an important component in meeting the body's daily need for carbohydrates — the most efficient fuel for most body functions, according to nutrition experts. Fiber can be a dieter's friend as well, since it swells in the intestines and promotes feelings of fullness, therefore reducing overeating. It also aids in laxation.

Legumes in general, and lentils in particular, can be prepared using a variety of low-fat methods. And, because they are quicker to cook than some other forms of legumes, such as dried beans, lentils are an excellent addition to quick salads and soups. Mix with ground turkey in hamburgers, or puree and use to stuff ravioli or tacos.

To prepare, rinse and drain lentils but do not soak. Cover with water using two parts water to one part lentils. Bring to boil, then cover and simmer 15 minutes for salads, 30 minutes for vegetables and main dish recipes, 45 minutes for soups and an hour for purees. Drain lentils for use in salad recipes.

LENTIL-PUMPKIN SOUP ALMONDINE

1 cup chopped onions
½ cup chopped celery
1 tsp. curry powder
1 (16-oz.) can pumpkin
1 (14½-oz.) can chicken broth
2 cups water
½ cup dry lentils, rinsed
1 tbsp. lemon juice
1 cup low-fat milk
1 tbsp. honey
½ cup plain low-fat yogurt

Spread almonds in single layer in microwave-safe dish. Microwave on HIGH 3 minutes, stirring halfway through. Or, spread in single layer on baking sheet and bake at 350 degrees 9 to 11 minutes, stirring occasionally, until golden brown. Cool.

Remove 1-3 cup toasted almonds and chop finely in food processor or blender. Set aside.

Combine onions, celery and curry powder in large microwave-safe bowl. Cover with wax paper and microwave on HIGH 5 minutes. Remove from oven and stir in pumpkin, chicken broth, water, lentils and lemon juice. Cover and microwave on HIGH 20 minutes, stirring every 5 minutes. Remove from oven and stir in reserved chopped almonds, milk and honey. Ladle soup into serving bowls.

Note: To prepare soup using conventional method, increase water to 3 cups. Bring pumpkin, broth and lentil mixture to boil. Reduce heat and simmer 25 minutes, stirring frequently, until lentils are tender.

LENTIL SALAD PROVENCE

1 cup dry lentils, rinsed
2 cups water
3 to 4 cloves garlic, minced
½ cup chopped onion
1 cup chopped, seeded tomatoes
1 cup chopped, seeded cucumber
¼ cup chopped parsley
2 tbsps. olive oil
2 tbsps. chopped fresh oregano leaves or 1 teaspoon dried
¼ lb. feta cheese, crumbled
Lettuce leaves or pita bread

Place lentils in medium saucepan with water, garlic and onion. Heat to boiling. Reduce heat and simmer, covered, 10 to 12 minutes or just until lentils are barely tender. Drain if necessary.

Toss lentils with tomatoes, cucumber, parsley, olive oil, oregano and cheese. Cover and chill several hours to blend flavors. Serve on lettuce leaves or in pita bread. Makes 4 servings.

BROCCOLI-LENTIL SALAD

1 cup dry lentils, rinsed
2 cups water
Salt, pepper
½ cup reduced-calorie ranch-style dressing
1 cup chopped celery
½ cup chopped green onions
1 cup chopped jicama, optional
2 cups chopped broccoli, blanched

Bring lentils and water to boil in medium saucepan. Cover and simmer 15 minutes. Drain. Season while still hot with salt and pepper to taste and dressing. Refrigerate until chilled, then add celery, onions, jicama and broccoli. Makes 10 (¾ cup) servings.

LENTIL CONFETTI SALAD

1½ cups water
1 cup cooked rice
1 tsp. salt
1 cup reduced-calorie Italian dressing
1 small tomato, diced
¼ cup chopped green pepper
¼ cup chopped onion
2 tbsps. chopped celery
2 tbsps. sliced pimiento-stuffed green olives

Bring rinsed lentils and water to boil in saucepan. Reduce heat and simmer, covered 20 minutes, or until tender. Drain.

LENTIL PILAF

1 to 2 cloves garlic, minced
¼ cup wild rice, rinsed
½ cup long grain rice, rinsed
1 cup lentils, rinsed
¼ cup margarine
2 tbsps. slivered almonds
2¾ cups chicken broth
½ tsp. dried thyme leaves, crushed
½ tsp. salt
Dash black pepper

Saute onions, garlic, wild and long grain rice and lentils in margarine until onion is tender, 3 to 4 minutes. Add almonds, broth, thyme, salt and pepper and bring to boil. Reduce heat and simmer, covered 30 minutes or until all liquid is absorbed. Makes 6 servings.
