Koop Will Leave Job In July

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Dr. C. Everett Koop, whose campaigns against smoking and AIDS marked an often-controversial eight years as surgeon general, told President Bush today he will leave office in July.

Koop, in a brief letter to the White House, said he had told Bush in February that he would not serve out his full second term, which ends in November. The surgeon general said he will leave July 13.

Koop, 72, was appointed the government's top health officer by President Reagan, and was sworn into office in January 1982.

Koop said James Mason, assistant secretary for health at the Department of Health and Human Services where the surgeon general heads the Public Health Service, will name an acting surgeon general after he leaves.

In a statement, Mason praised Koop as "an outstanding leader on major health issues."

"All of us in the Public Health Service and the medical profession are proud of what he has accomplished. He has made impressive contributions to public health," Mason said.

Koop did not say in the letter what his plans are after he leave government. He has said in interviews that he would like to write books and work in television on health issues.

Under Koop's leadership, the office of the surgeon general, in the Department of Health and Human Services, became an active and often controversial office.

As head of the Public Health Service, Koop maintained a vigilant campaign against smoking, calling for a smokeless society by the year 2000 and worked actively on education campaigns aimed at helping to stop the spread of AIDS — acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

The holder of the position also oversees the activities of the Public Health Service's 6,000-member Commissioned Corps.

Jacobs Enters Guilty Plea To 14 Kidnapping Charges

By David Droschak
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LUMBERTON, N.C. — Timothy Jacobs pleaded guilty today to 14 counts of second-degree kidnapping stemming from the hostage siege last year at The Robesonian newspaper.

Jacobs, 20, agreed to a plea bargain that called for him to serve six years in prison followed by a six-year suspended sentence with supervised probation.

"He wants to get on with his life and do something with himself," said his mother, Eleanor Jacobs, after the court appearance. "It was his decision (to plea bargain). I didn't talk him into anything."

Jacobs was whisked away by deputies after posting bond so that he could sign out of the Cumberland County Jail. Asked what he would do during the 30-day leave, he said, "Enjoy myself... Sign a movie contract."

Jacobs, who had sought refuge from the state charges by fleeing to a Madison County, N.Y., reservation, was ordered held under $100,000 bond after he dropped an appeal of a New York extradition order. He has been held in the Cumberland County Jail since he was returned to North Carolina in March.

Jacobs and Eddie Hatcher held up to 20 people hostage in the newspaper's newsroom for 10 hours on Feb. 1, 1988. They carried shotguns when they entered and chained the newspaper's front door shut. They said they took over the newspaper to draw attention to allegations of official corruption and drug trafficking in the county. A state task force appointed by Gov. Jim Martin found no evidence to support the allegations.

Superior Court Judge Anthony Brannon ruled that if any books or movies are produced about the takeover, any money earned by Jacobs will be forfeited to the victims of the takeover. Court documents list 14 Robesonian employees as the people detained, but authorities said the night of the siege that up to 20 had been held at various times.

The judge also allowed Jacobs to be free for 30 days on $20,000 secured bond despite objections from District Attorney Richard Townsend. Jacobs wants time to get his personal affairs in order and get married, said his attorney, Jim Parrish of Fayetteville.

"I am strongly opposed to the 30-day leave to take care of personal business," Townsend said. "I object to him having a honeymoon."

Jacobs sat quietly through the hearing, saying nothing in court except to confer with his attorney.

Jacobs also asked that he not be restricted on where he could live when he gets out of prison. The judge agreed, but said that Robeson County was "one of the best places to live in North Carolina."

Hatcher, 31, is being held in the San Francisco, Calif., jail under $1 million bond and has an extradition hearing scheduled for Friday. Hatcher had fled the county after Jacobs following the 1988 state indictments and sought refuge on an Idaho reservation.

Rain Clouds Threaten Launch

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — NASA counted on sea breezes to clear away rain clouds today in time for a second attempt to launch Atlantis and start the robot craft Magellan on its 806-million-mile journey to Venus.

The space shuttle was to lift off at 1:48 p.m. EDT, with a "launch window" stretching for 64 minutes. Air Force weather forecasters said this morning there was a 40 percent chance that rain or crosswinds at the Kennedy Space Center emergency landing site would prevent the launch.

"The weather here is changing and it still has to change quite a bit before we get to launch time," NASA commentator Hugh Harris said as the five astronauts were driven to the winged spacecraft three hours before the scheduled liftoff. Technicians earlier had pumped a half-million gallons of liquid hydrogen and oxygen into the shuttle's tanks.

The crew members for the mission, the fourth since the Challenger disaster, are commander David M. Walker, pilot Ronald Grabe, and mission specialists Norman Thagard, Mary Cleave and Mark Lee.

Six hours after launch, Cleave and Lee were to operate remote controls to eject the $550 million Magellan — America's first deep space probe in 11 years — from the shuttle's cargo bay.

Magellan then was to rocket itself out of Earth orbit and start a 15-month voyage that would carry it 1½ times around the sun before reaching Venus.

The crew would spend the remainder of its four-day flight orbiting 184 miles above Earth, conducting scientific experiments.

Light rain fell on the launch pad in the early morning, and dark clouds approached from the west. But forecasters said they believed there was a good chance of clear skies and calm winds by launch time.

"Basically we still have 40 percent chance overall that weather could be a problem, but we don't expect it to be," said Capt. Ken Warren, the Air Force weather officer. "We expect a sea breeze to clear out what weather we have by launch time."

The final launch preparations followed a frenzied effort by engineers to correct problems that on Friday stopped the countdown just 31 seconds from liftoff. A flawed pump and a suspicious hydrogen line were replaced.

"A real problem stopped us," shuttle chief Richard Truly said. "We've fixed that. We are ready to fly again."

Today's launch opportunity, determined by the path Magellan must follow to reach Earth's mysterious neighbor, was to end at 2:52 p.m.

Teachers To Study Pay Plan

By Cherie Evans
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Pitt County chapter of the North Carolina Association of Educators will meet today to finalize plans for a lobby day scheduled for Tuesday and to discuss a new salary plan proposed by the state Board of Education.

Julia Kron, president-elect of the state NCAE, will speak to the county group today at 7 p.m. in Wahl-Coates School, said Jackie Wooten, president of District 16 of the NCAE and a teacher at Bethel Elementary School.

The salary plan approved by the state board includes 21 steps that would give teachers 2 percent annual pay increases for the first four years, a 2.5 percent annual increase for years five through nine, a 3 percent annual raise for years 10 through 14, and a 3.5 percent annual raise for years 15-20.

Starting teachers in the state would earn $20,500 and 20-year veterans would earn $35,870.

The state board eliminated a 4 percent pay increase for teachers who work three years and earn tenure that was part of the original

Hart Letter Says He's 'Embarrassed' By Arrest Of Two Coaches For DWI

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

In a written reply to the president of the Pitt Chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Driving, East Carolina University Athletic Director Dave Hart said he is embarrassed and angry that two ECU assistant coaches were arrested last month for driving while impaired, and he has met with the entire coaching staff to discuss the incidents.

"I share your feelings and concerns. I am embarrassed and angry about what has taken place, and I have spoken to that point in an appropriate fashion," Hart said in an April 28 letter to Debbie Svensson of Greenville, president of the Pitt MADD chapter.

Hart's letter, which was written on ECU athletics letterhead, came in response to an April 26 letter from Mrs. Svensson, in which she expressed her concern over the two DWI arrests and the effect they could have on the coaches' leadership roles.

Hart has declined to make any public comment on the April 2 arrest of assistant football Coach Timothy Alvin Kelly, 34, or the April 21 arrest of assistant basketball Coach Chris David Benetti, 31, but he told Mrs. Svensson in the letter that he has met with all ECU coaches to discuss the seriousness of the DWIs.

"I want you to know that I did meet with all of our coaches, prior to receiving your letter, to discuss the very serious nature of these incidents. I remain extremely disappointed and embarrassed about these arrests and the inherent damage to the image of our program and university.

"I accept ultimate accountability for the total athletic program at ECU. In that same vein, I believe we have made every effort to address, and correct, this inexcusable, poor judgment," Hart said.

The athletic office said today Hart was out of town and could not be reached by phone.

Mrs. Svensson said she has had no other correspondence with Hart concerning the arrests, and he did not reveal details of any disciplinary action against the coaches. If this is the first problem with both coaches, Mrs. Svensson said she does not believe the two men should be fired, but there should be some disciplinary action taken.

"I hope they have been disciplined well," she said. "These guys are in a leadership position. That's what bothers me most. They're supposed to be setting examples for the athletes they train and the whole student body."

"Personally, I feel like if it happens again to those same people, they should lose their jobs. Everybody deserves a second chance. Of course, somebody else could lose their life the next time. Of course, I hope it never happens again," Mrs. Svensson said.

Mrs. Svensson expressed similar concerns in her two-page cor-

Former State Official Dies

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Claude Pope, former secretary of the North Carolina Department of Commerce, died Wednesday of cancer. He was 54.

"Claude Pope was devoted to North Carolina and took great pleasure in the economic progress that his efforts helped to generate, especially in the smaller cities like his native hometown of Dunn," Gov. Jim Martin said.

"It was a great inspiration to me to see how he faced his illness over the last several years with a determination to make his time count for the benefit of the working families of our state."

Martin appointed Pope as commerce secretary in Jan. 1987 and resigned this January, said Ken Rabb, a spokesman for the department.

"It was a tribute to his leadership of the new partnership between the Commerce Department and the local government and business leaders that North Carolina led the nation in major new factory investments in both 1987 and 1988," Martin said. "It was a team effort and he made the team work."

Evangelist Cited In Florida Case

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Indictments filed in Polk County, Fla., name Greenville televangelist Jim Whittington as an unindicted co-conspirator in the case of a live-in nurse accused of swindling more than $800,000 and a home from a paralyzed 71-year-old woman.

Florida authorities arrested Barbara Stevens, 54, of Polk County, Fla., on April 6. The 31-count indictment filed last week against her includes 24 counts of grand theft, four counts of forgery, one count of uttering a forged instrument, one count of kidnapping and one count of conspiracy, said Chip Thullbery, administrative assistant with the state attorney's office in Bartow, Fla.

Ms. Stevens is being held under $500,000 bond and is scheduled to enter a plea at her arraignment Monday or Tuesday, Thullbery said.

The indictment was filed in Florida's 10th Judicial Circuit by state attorneys, not by a grand jury. Under Florida law, only first-degree murder cases must go to a grand jury. The crimes allegedly occurred from late 1986 through early 1988, when Ms. Stevens worked as a live-in nurse for Valeria Lust of Lakeland, Fla.

In duping Mrs. Lust, the charges allege that Ms. Stevens conspired with Whittington, founder of Fountain of Life Inc. ministries; Riley Ferguson, a minister who sometimes worked with Fountain of Life; Daniel Atwood, a Florida minister, and Caludette Collier, Atwood's assistant.

Atwood began serving a prison sentence of eight to 16 years in Erie, Pa., on April 20. He pleaded guilty to fraud, perjury and grand theft.

Whittington has also been named as a defendant in a civil lawsuit filed by Mrs. Lust. He has repeatedly claimed that neither he nor Fountain of Life has committed any civil or criminal wrongdoing.

"I haven't done anything wrong and Fountain of Life hasn't done anything wrong," Whittington said today. "I don't foresee any (problem) event if they do indict me. I haven't done anything. I have peace about this."

So far, no criminal charges have been filed against Whittington. Thullbery would not comment, saying only the investigation is not over.

"Ms. Stevens has been charged, and an investigation is continuing into the case," he said.

The Lakeland Ledger, with a daily circulation of about 100,000, has had two reporters covering the story. The Florida newspaper has reported that the first charges filed against Ms. Stevens claimed she allegedly drugged Mrs. Lust with prescription medication to sedate her, thus making it easier to obtain Mrs. Lust's signature on the checks. ## State Funds Released

Some $800,000 was given back to East Carolina University this week as part of a release of $24 million in state budget allocations by the administration of Gov. Jim Martin.

ECU officials said approximately $500,000 of the money will go to the university's academic affairs division, while another $300,000 will be provided to health affairs which includes the School of Medicine.

The state budget office was to begin today distributing the money to the University of North Carolina system and other agencies that had been affected by a recent 5 percent cut in allocations.

The withholding of funds was done in light of concern over a slowdown in state revenues, Martin aides said, and was put back as preliminary tax-collection figures for April showed collections ahead of expectations. Agencies were notified of the decision Wednesday.

The money is welcome, said C.G. Moore, vice chancellor for business affairs at ECU. He said the funds can be used for travel, supplies, equipment, motor vehicles and the like. Hiring at the university is still frozen, he said.

"In fact, all our vacant positions were abolished as of March 30. This was done by the General Assembly and affected all state agencies, not just universities."

Moore said the cutbacks have brought no major reductions in the types or extent of services offered by the university.

ECU Endowment Will Support Study Of Church, Missionaries

ECU NEWS BUREAU

An endowment to support the study of church history and Christian missionary activities in foreign countries has been established at East Carolina University in memory of the late Elizabeth Price Crockford of Charlotte.

The fund was originated on behalf of the family by Dr. Charles L. Price of Greenville, professor emeritus of history and a founder of the East Carolina Manuscript Collection. It will support the acquisition and preservation of documentary sources pertaining to missionary work and church history in general, Price said.

"It is designed to enhance preservation and research in this area by financially supporting the solicitation and acquisition of letters, diaries, photographs and other materials," Price said. It will also support the preparation of oral history resources and promote research and writing utilizing missionary and church sources, according to Price.

The EC Manuscript Collection is recognized among scholars for its extensive holdings of missionary materials on Africa, the Orient and Latin America and for its records on the religious history of North Carolina.

Mrs. Crockford was a native of the Steele Creek community of Mecklenburg County and a longtime resident of Charlotte. She was active in the Steele Creek Presbyterian Church and later with the Wilmore Presbyterian Church, now merged with Christ Presbyterian Church. Her husband is a retired engineer.

Price is also a native of Mecklenburg County. A graduate of Davidson College, he taught North Carolina history at ECU and specialized in research on the post-Civil War reconstruction period and in economic and railroad history.

For more information about the endowment, contact Micah D. Ball, Office on Institutional Advancement at ECU, (919) 757-6686, or Donald R. Lennon, director, EC Manuscript Collection, Joyner Library, ECU, (919) 757-6671.

Cypress Group Receives Grant

By Lane Dunn
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Greenville Cypress Group of the Sierra Club has secured a $700 grant to educate the public on the proposed Roanoke River National Wildlife Refuge.

According to Bion Schulken, chairman of the Cypress Group, the grant was presented to the group by Seattle-based Recreational Equipment Inc., which sets aside a portion of its profits each year to donate to various environmental groups.

The money will be used by the Cypress Group, in conjunction with the North Carolina Nature Conservancy, to produce an educational slide show about the refuge area.

The refuge has been proposed by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, which wants to acquire the land as a natural habitat for migratory birds. The proposal calls for the purchase of 30,000 acres, located in Halifax, Bertie and Martin counties.

Schulken said that inland wetlands such as those found in the proposed refuge area are not protected under federal or state legislation, but giving them refuge status would provide a safeguard from environmental threats.

The group spokesman said that research has shown the area contains one of the largest continuous bottomland hardwood forests in the region. Bottomlands are swampy areas that are suitable to many forms of wildlife, he said.

Schulken said that Georgia-Pacific Corp. owns about two-thirds of the land and the remainder is privately owned. Georgia-Pacific has shown interest in striking a deal, he said.

Schulken said that the private land would be purchased on a "willing buyer, willing seller, basis."

According to Schulken, the refuge is in the next-to-last step of approval and Gov. Jim Martin is reviewing the proposal. Schulken said that Martin is expected to approve the proposal based on the recommendation of the Fish and Wildlife Service.

According to Schulken, REI approved the grant because it considered the Cypress Group's public education program on the proposed Roanoke Refuge a worthy project. "They said that they felt they were getting more for their money with us than with any other group."

The Sierra Club is a national environmental advocacy organization. The Cypress Group's membership, which totals over 800 persons, covers most of northeastern North Carolina.

Conference On Aging Under Way

A conference on "Aging and Developmental Disabilities: A New Challenge," is under way at the Ramada Inn in Greenville. It will run to about 8 p.m. today, and continue from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Friday.

Mary Heckrotte of the Eastern Area Health Education Center said the conference is designed to work with professionals from the fields of aging and developmental disabilities to discuss how to deal with the segment of the population that falls under both categories.

"The purpose of the conference is to define aging as it relates to developmental disability," she said.

She said that because of medical breakthroughs that are increasing lifespans, the number of people who are both elderly and developmentally disabled is increasing. It is a new field that service providers have not had to deal with before, she said.

"There are very few experts in this field," she said.

It is estimated that there are 19,000 elderly people in North Carolina with developmental disabilities. She said that by the year 2,000 that figure will probably reach 22,000.

Ms. Heckrotte said that about 115 people from across the state were expected to attend the sessions. Professionals from across the nation are speaking at the conference.

Book Fair

A.G. Cox Middle School will have a book fair May 12-18 in the media center. The fair will be open during school hours.

She said it is hoped that recommendations will come out of the conference to tie in with a state task force that is looking at aging and developmental disabilities.

Sponsors are Caswell Center, Eastern Area Health Education Center, East Carolina University and the Eastern Region Division of Mental Health. A grant was provided the N.C. Council on Developmental Disabilities.

School Event

Manolita Buck, a professor at East Carolina University, recently presented slides and authentic bullfighting items to seventh-graders at A.G. Cox School. The presentation was part of a culture unit the students have been studying on Spain.

The Front

Where The War Is Won Or Lost

Everyone shouts about drug and alcohol abuse. There are wars waged against its effects on society by police, communities and courts. The media likes to shout about the impact of these illnesses and display them prominently on the front page and the television screen — children killed by drunk drivers, murders committed over a bag of white powder, wives abused by drunken spouses.

But when the human struggle against chemical dependency is waged, that fight is less visible. The battlefield is often a setting like the state-funded Walter B. Jones Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center in Greenville. There, and in two other state Alcohol Rehabilitation Centers, poly-drug abusers, alcoholics and mixed substance abusers get the live-saving help they need from highly qualified doctors.

To detoxify, these abusers need serious medical care. To shake the physical effects of dependency they need specialized health care. To recover, they need psychological counseling and rehabilitation. They get all of these at the state's ARC's — with expertise and compassion.

'While tangible progress in the fight against alcohol and drug abuse is made on the legal front, the attack cannot be successful without adequate resources on the human front.'

A proposal by Ed Renfrow, state auditor, would eliminate the medical help that is so essential to the recovery process. Renfrow suggested that the medical personnel that serve these centers should be phased out and the responsibility switched to local mental health centers or privately contracted — a move he claims would save $2.5 million. He also suggested the centers be eventually phased out and their services replaced by programs run by mental health centers in each county.

Neither proposal is a good idea. In an era when drug and alcohol abuse is escalating and treatment facilities are at a premium, it doesn't make sense to cut services that have a proven track record and both effectiveness and efficiency.

Nearly 3,000 patients come to the state's three centers each year for a 28-day detox and rehabilitation program. Uncounted committed patients are served. All bring with them physical ailments requiring doctors' attention. The suggestion to refer them to local mental health centers is flawed. Many hospitals won't take them. Most agencies don't have proper facilities and most of these patients can't afford private clinics. The state ARCs are their only alternative for help.

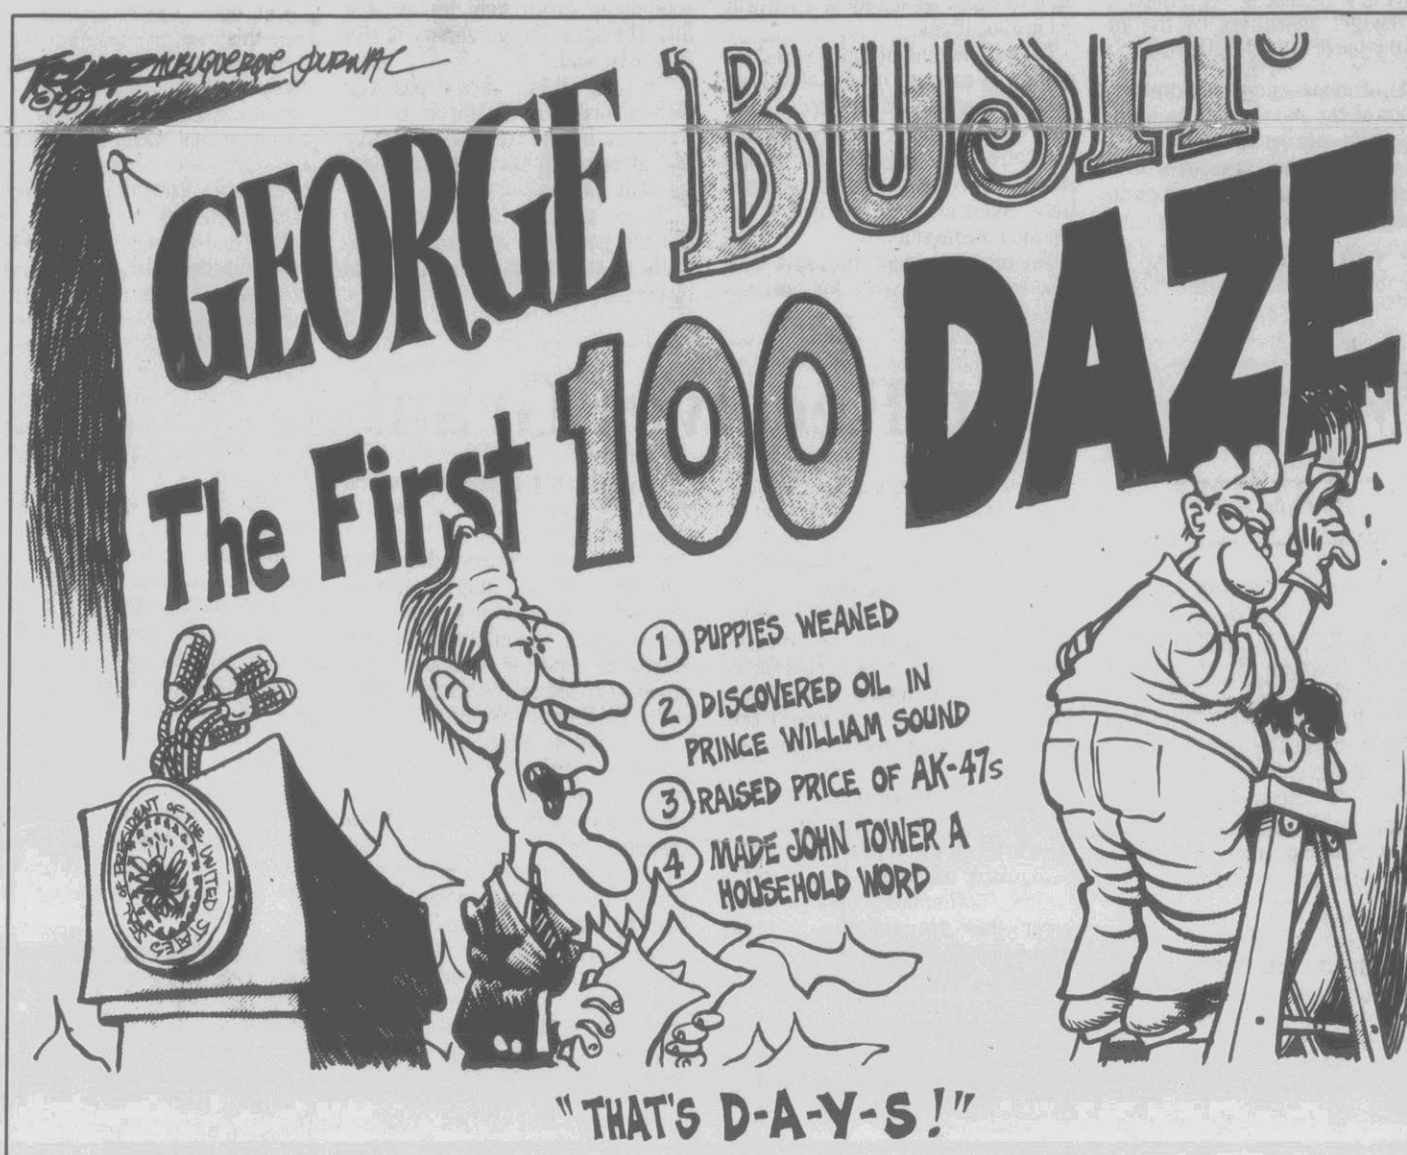

In Pitt County, for example, where better-than-average facilities are offered, a detoxification center run by the Mental Health Department is at capacity nearly every night. If there were more beds, they too would stay full.

According to Dr. Stephen Creech, Pitt Mental Health director, many chemically dependent patients served by this detox unit, as well as those at the Walter B. Jones ARC, are difficult to manage physically and emotionally. "They need physicians there," he said. "It is obvious these patients need medical attention."

Absorbing the ARC program into a community program would be premature, he suggested, and not in the best interest of patients. He's right. Renfrow has shown no evidence the local centers can provide the same level of service the ARCs currently do. Neither did his data demonstrate that in the long run community-based programs would be cheaper. After all, it will take more personnel — and more facilities — to effectively operate a detoxification and rehabilitation program in each mental health center.

The joint state House-Senate Human Resources Appropriations Committee apparently agrees that to deprive patients of medical help at the ARCs would deliver a sentence of illness or death. In response to Renfrow's proposal, its members asked only for a comprehensive state plan for substance abusers and a redefinition of the role of the ARCs by 1991. That's a fair request. Hastily removing the medical personnel, simply to snip some dollars in a tight budget year, would be foolhardy.

While tangible progress in the fight against alcohol and drug abuse is made on the legal front, the attack cannot be successful without adequate resources on the human front. That, in the end, is the where the war is won or lost.

A Miracle In Prince William Sound

Art Buchwald

According to Time magazine, White House Chief of Staff John Sununu has complained that news coverage of the Exxon oil spill was slanted. Instead of concentrating on the 240,000 barrels of crude that escaped the tanker, the real story was how Exxon and the government saved another one million barrels from escaping into the sea. Sununu is quoted in Time as saying, "Three-quarters of it was contained within the ship. There's been very little reporting on that."

It so happens that Sununu is right. I wrote that story soon after the Exxon Valdez hit the rocks but nobody would print it.

So here it is again: There was a miracle in Prince William Sound yesterday when one of the largest oil tankers in the world went aground and ruptured on the rocks near the port of Valdez. Only 240,000 barrels of crude oil escaped from its tanks before valiant Exxon damage-control people managed to pump oil into another tanker.

An oil spill expert said that barely 800 miles of shoreline would be affected by the spill, as opposed to the entire West Coast of the United States, if everyone had not been so on the ball.

He told reporters, "You have here an example of how the combination of seamanship and teamwork was able to turn what could have been a major disaster into a piddling incident. All credit goes to the captain of the Exxon Valdez. Even though he had been in his cabin, he decided to go out on deck after the accident and save his ship. A grateful nation owes him a debt for salvaging one million barrels of much-needed fuel."

When asked if anyone was to blame for the spill, the expert replied, "Only if the press insists on writing stories about the oil lost to the sea instead of what is now safely inside the tanker. If the media want to be fair they should focus on how many birds and otters are still alive because one million barrels of oil were (ital) not (unital) spilled. As long as the TV cameras keep filming oil-soaked geese, the true story of the heroic Valdez will never be told."

One TV reporter said, "What about the oil on the beaches? Is it all right to concentrate on that?"

"Why don't you show pictures of the black gold that was pumped off the Exxon Valdez? You don't help people feel any better by always illustrating the downside of what happens when a tanker runs aground. Everybody makes mistakes, but there is absolutely no reason to draw attention to them with pictures of workers wiping off rocks with damp towels."

According to the expert, no one is sure how long it will take for the oil spill carnage to be cleaned up. However, everyone is pleased with the smoothness of the operation, especially when compared with how long it would have taken if all the oil on board had leaked.

"It's no good dwelling on incidents such as oil spills. You have to look at a grounded tanker as you do a glass of water, and ask yourself if it's half full or half empty. That's what oil spills are all about."

A New & Uncomfortable Importance

WASHINGTON — The century will end as it began, and as it was in much of its middle part: wary about Germany. Suddenly "das Land der Mitte" is back in the middle of Western worries.

The government of Helmut Kohl, its political support evaporating, has panicked and pandered to anti-nuclear and pro-Gorbachev sentiment by falling away from a NATO decision to modernize short-range nuclear forces. But much more is at stake than those weapons.

The supposed utility of those weapons is three-fold. By being there, those weapons would prevent the Soviet Union from concentrating conventional forces for the blitzkrieg NATO fears most. Because any ban on short-range weapons would be utterly unverifiable, NATO must assume the Soviets will retain such weapons, so NATO weapons are needed to deter Soviet use of them. And in an extreme situation, NATO could use such weapon — the lowest rung on the escalation ladder — to alter the nature of a conflict. Small nuclear weapons are linked to larger ones.

However, all arguments establishing the utility of battlefield nuclear weapons may be refuted by this question: Could an alliance that is paralyzed and sundered by the prospect of modernizing those weapons ever agree to use them? In March, a NATO military exercise was aborted when German and Turkish participants objected to a U.S. proposal for hypothetical use of battlefield weapons against aggressor forces on German and Turkish soil.

Nuclear-weapons systems decay, so the alternative to modernization is obsolescence — unilateral disarmament in this category of weapons by the mid-1990s. If modernization is deemed inconsistent with the latest detente, then solicitude for Gorbachev means giving him a veto over any changes, other than unilateral reductions, in NATO's military dispositions.

But if he really wants to lighten Soviet defense burdens so that there can be a great leap forward in living standards (forward to the standards of, say, Portugal in 1930), he can reduce the burden on his own. If he feels menaced by battlefield weapons that would reach only battlefields west of the Soviet Union, and primarily in das Land der Mitte, his policy is not defensive.

U.S. policy has already conceded too much to Kohl by agreeing to delay modernization until after German elections next year. Kohl's additional demand, for immediate negotiations with the Soviets about such weapons, raises this question for U.S. policymakers: Why sustain Kohl with concessions so that he can implement policies not substantially different than those of the German opposition parties?

U.S. policy is to delay negotiations on nuclear forces in Europe until there are negotiated reductions of the enormous Soviet conventional-force advantages that made deployment of NATO's nuclear forces necessary. (Strategic nuclear negotiations also are relevant.) And it is U.S. policy that, even with conventional-force reductions, nuclear weapons must be components of deterrence in Europe for the foreseeable future.

Kohl says he only seeks equal ceilings on short-range nuclear systems, not elimination of them. But there are only 88 short-range Lance missiles (the focus of modernization) in Europe. There is no military logic to any particular level between 88 and zero.

Aside from the Lances, there is a large NATO inventory of nuclear artillery and other nuclear weapons. The political pull of zero — not just zero Lances but the longstanding Soviet goal of a denuclearized Europe — might be irresistible.

There is in Europe a crystallizing conviction that nuclear deterrence is now incompatible with detente. U.S. policy has fed anti-nuclear thinking.

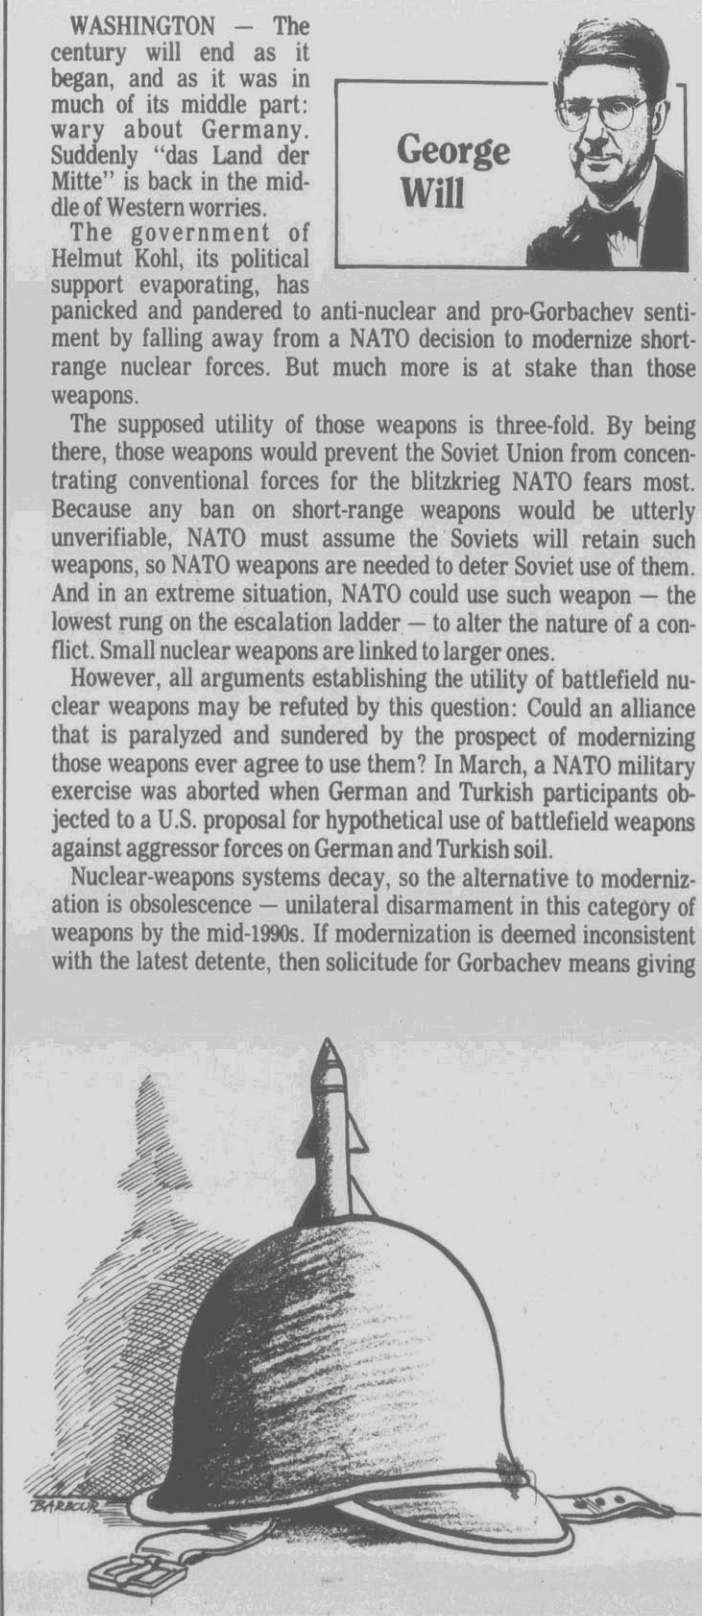

At the Reykjavik summit, only Gorbachev's overreaching rescued us from our improvident agreement to get rid of nuclear weapons. Ronald Reagan defined SDI as a program for getting rid of nuclear weapons. Reagan and candidate George Bush celebrated the INF treaty with triumphalist rhetoric implying that any elimination of "an entire category" of nuclear weapons is wonderful.

One rationale for the INF treaty was that it was homeopathic medicine, treating a disease (arms-control fever caused by the anti-nuclear virus) with small doses of the disease. It may have worked briefly, but intervals between bouts of the fever are becoming shorter.

"The Germans," said one of the greatest of them, Goethe, "make everything difficult, both for themselves and for everyone else." History's worst calamity began in August, 1914, when Germany went to war. It has been truly said that if in July, 1914, the Kaiser had been given a blank page on which to describe the world as he wanted it, he would have been hard put to list significant changes.

Germany wanted to be important, but had no clear idea of what that meant. Today Germany is acquiring new importance — as the agent of disintegration of the security system that has kept the peace.

A Chance To Try Out The Career Ladder First Hand

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — North Carolina universities have world renowned scholars on their faculties and private industry in the state employs some of the best computer talent on the planet. Even in the Governor's Mansion, there's a pretty well-educated doctor of chemistry. But under current North Carolina law, most of these people could not teach in the state's public schools, if they chose to do so, because they have not taken the education courses required of teachers.

A bill now before the state House would change that. It would allow holders of masters and doctoral degrees to teach in their areas of expertise in grades seven through 12 without education certification.

The bill's sponsor, Rep. Skip Stam, R-Wake, said the bill could help school districts fill some areas of critical faculty needs. Math, science and foreign language instructors are in short supply in some areas. If someone comes to a community with advanced training in one of those disciplines, it seems wise to put his or her talent to work in the schools.

Stam said he could see several scenarios where such people would want to get into teaching. In the Research Triangle area, for example, many scientists are transferred in from other areas of the world.

Analysis

Their spouses might have similar training, but no job. In the east, many military officers come here for a year or two, and their spouses need work, also.

It's also likely that some people with advanced degrees would like to get into teaching as a change of pace. Stam said a scientist might decide that he needs a year or two out of the laboratory to clear his head.

North Carolina currently allows professional people to enter teaching without education certificates. But under this "lateral entry" program they are required to begin work on certification by taking college level education courses. They must gain the certification within five years.

In remote areas of the state, that requirement can make lateral entry difficult, Stam said. There isn't a college close enough to take the courses. Also, the extra course requirements inhibit those who want to teach only for a year or two, and those, like military spouses, who may only be in the state for several years.

Tom Husted, executive director of the N.C. Association of Educators, generally supports the bill but says he worries that without education training some very smart and well-educated people may be unable to communicate adequately with high energy middle-schoolers.

Stam said that there is an escape clause for schools in those cases. Teachers hired without certification would not be eligible for tenure. If they couldn't teach, they wouldn't be rehired.

After a number of questions were raised in a House subcommittee, Stam agreed to several amendments to his bill. Under the first, non-certified teachers could use this bill on ly in geographic areas where there are shortages of teachers, or in disciplines where schools are having trouble finding teachers. The State Board of Education would write the guidelines. The second would prohibit the hiring of a non-certified teacher if a qualified certified applicant was available for that job. Finally, the bill would expire in two years, unless renewed by the 1991 assembly.

This bill isn't likely to swell public schools with non-certified teachers. More likely, it will help schools fill selected shortages. And, for a former Davidson College chemistry professor who may be out of work in 1993, it offers the opportunity to try out the Career Ladder first hand.

Good Cop, Bad Cop, But No Speculation On Soviet Reform

Walter Mears

WASHINGTON — It's a tactic familiar to anyone who watches television crime shows — the bad cop is menacing, the good cop is calm and reassuring, and they're both out for the same thing.

That's hardly a surprising observation for the man assigned to steer the Pentagon budget through Congress. Nor is it a new one. Cheney speculated 10 days ago that Gorbachev might eventually be forced to change to a more conservative course or to yield power.

And Cheney is not the only skeptic in the new administration. The menacing missiles of past May Day parades. Cheney's question is whether that can last.

Even the humor shows signs of the times. Bush joked in a speech Monday that the ministry of economic planning had its own unit in the Moscow parade, "200 economists marching along yelling 'Mayday, mayday.'" After the laughter, he added, "but today that's beginning to change."

The Cheney comments that stirred all this into a weekend controversy were made in an April 29 interview with columnists Rowland Evans and Robert Novak on Cable News Network. In it, the defense secretary said "until we know that Gorbachev is for real and that the changes he wants to bring about are irreversible," it would be a mistake for the United States to cut its NATO forces.

Then came the impolitic comment that led to the flap:

"I think you have to distinguish between what he's trying to do and whether or not he's actually going to be able to do it. And I think the bottom line is that if I had to guess today, I would guess that he would ultimately fail. That is to say that he will not be able to reform the Soviet economy to turn it into an efficient, modern society, and when that happens, he's likely to be replaced by somebody who will be far more hostile than he's been in terms of his attitude toward the West."

Later in the interview, Cheney said he thinks Gorbachev has set an impossible task by seeking fundamental reform of the Soviet system within a relatively short time.

Gorbachev's future. The president said he wants the economic reforms of perestroika to succeed, and that he'd told Gorbachev so when they met in New York, prior to his inauguration.

"Whenever in the world there is economic reform, the United States should be hoping that reform succeeds," he told the U.S. Chamber of Commerce on Monday. "Economic reform, with its emphasis on incentives and market economics, leads to more freedom."

The White House spokesman said

Bush, Baker and Cheney all want the Gorbachev reforms to succeed. "We all agree that glasnost and perestroika should be encouraged," said Marlin Fitzwater.

And does the administration believe the reforms will succeed?

"The administration chooses not to speculate on that matter."

Walter R. Mears, vice president and columnist for The Associated Press, has reported on Washington and national politics for more than 25 years.

'Cheney never said he didn't want perestroika to succeed. What he said was that he didn't like the odds and that the United States shouldn't make wholesale defense cuts on the assumption that the new look in Moscow will be permanent. That's hardly a surprising observation for the man assigned to steer the Pentagon budget through Congress.'

By design or by accident, Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney is cast as the bad cop in the flap over his forecast of failure for Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's efforts to change the society he leads.

President Bush and Secretary of State James A. Baker III are the good guys, cheering on the economic and political reforms Gorbachev has undertaken. They venture no guesses on the outcome.

Cheney never said he didn't want perestroika to succeed. What he said was that he didn't like the odds and that the United States shouldn't make wholesale defense cuts on the assumption that the new look in Moscow will be permanent.

course has been one of caution while policies are reviewed and Washington tries to determine how solid the changes in Moscow may prove to be.

"Looking around the world today, in the developing countries and even in the communist bloc, we see the triumph of two great ideas — the idea of free government and the idea of free enterprise," Bush said Tuesday.

But there is no sign of haste to overhaul U.S. defense policies because of the changes in Moscow, including Gorbachev's multiple target peace campaign. In Red Square last Monday, flowers and peace banners supplanted the

Whittington Cited In Florida Case

Stevens also forged a document to gain power of attorney over Mrs. Lust's estate, the newspaper has reported.

Because Mrs. Lust is paralyzed, she cannot move about or take care of herself. The kidnaping charge stems from allegations that Mrs. Stevens illegally imprisoned Mrs.

Lust in her own home by removing walking aids and a telephone, investigators said.

Whittington said he has no reason to believe he has ever been involved in any plan to steal from Mrs. Lust.

"Of course I don't like the fact that they would indict me as a co-conspirator. This is kind of an unusual situation, where they would name me as a co-conspirator and wouldn't indict me," he said.

He said Ferguson is also a minister, and he has worked on and off for Fountain of Life for about 10 years. Currently, Ferguson is not working with Whittington, who said he is being wrongly accused just as Christians have been persecuted throughout history for their beliefs.

"There is an all-out attack against ministers. If my name wasn't in that lawsuit, it wouldn't get out of Polk County, much less Florida," he said.

New Bern lawyer, Robert D. Wheeler, attorney for Whittington, said he was not aware that his client had been named as a co-conspirator in Ms. Steven's case. Lakeland, Fla., attorney Craig Massey, who also represents Whittington, was not available for comment.

Whittington denied there was ever any scam to bilk money from Mrs. Lust. He said the money she donated to his ministry — about $700,000 — was in the form of personal checks, and his attorneys are confident Mrs. Lust actually signed the checks. She also gave a home to the ministry, he said, but it was returned.

He said he has known Ms. Stevens for seven or eight years through Florida crusades, and he does not believe she committed any crime. Even if someone did steal money from Mrs. Lust, he said he is confident none of that money reached his ministry.

Host Families

The International Education Forum is seeking host families for teen-age English-speaking students from Europe and Asia who will arrive in the United States in August and will attend an American high school for five or 10 months.

The students, ages 15 to 18, will return to their homes in late June 1990. They have been screened by their local school representatives and have their own pocket money, medical and liability insurance.

The IEF coordinator will assist in matching the host family with a student and is responsible as a local contact during the year for any problems or questions.

The IEF is also looking for American students who are interested in spending five to 10 months in Australia and for one month during the summer in France or Spain.

For more information, contact Nancy Gaines, P.O. Box 1193, Tarboro, N.C., 27886, or call 641-0978.

State Board Backs Competitive Teacher Pay Plan

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A competitive salary plan for teachers should include merit pay along with a revamped pay schedule, says Howard Haworth, chairman of the state board of education.

Under a revised pay plan released Wednesday that the board will urge the General Assembly to phase in over three years, starting teachers in North Carolina would earn $20,500 and 20-year veterans would receive $35,870.

Board members made only one change before endorsing a 21-step pay plan forged by the Department of Public Instruction from salary schedules proposed by education groups.

The board eliminated a proposed 4-percent pay increase for teachers who work three years and reach tenure. Members decided that money, estimated by school officials at $75 million to $80 million, should be used for expanding the career ladder, a merit-pay plan that rewards teachers for superior performance.

Board members feared that without the change, the salary schedule would jeopardize pending legislative proposals to expand the career ladder.

"My concern is that it would take away the prospect of implementing merit pay, because of dollars," said state Treasurer Harlan Boyles, a member of the board.

The current salary schedule for teachers has become inequitable through a series of salary freezes. A teacher with three years of experience earns $18,330, the same as a beginning teacher. A 20-year veteran earns $27,650.

The original plan presented by the Department of Public Instruction would raise salaries by an average of 9.8 percent next year and 10.1 percent the following year, at a combined cost of about $378 million.

But with the board's change, those increases will drop by about 1½ percent a year. Still, a teacher with 10 years experience would see a salary increase of about 37 percent over the next three years.

The salary schedule rewards teachers for staying in the profession by giving them larger annual pay increases as they advance to higher steps.

The plan would give teachers 2-percent annual pay increases for the first four years, a 2.5-percent annual increase for years five through nine, a 3-percent annual raise for years 10 through 14 and a 3.5-percent annual raise for years 15 through 20.

Any across-the-board pay raises from the legislature would be on top of the salary increases built into the schedule. A teacher also could get a 5-percent increase for earning a master's degree and another 5-percent raise for getting a doctorate.

The salary plan was developed at the request of the board by a task force appointed by state Superintendent Bobby R. Etheridge and composed of representatives from various education groups. The board hopes those groups will join forces to push for the salary plan in the legislature.

State education officials want teacher salaries to become the highest in the Southeast. But just to keep its standing behind Virginia, Georgia and Tennessee, North Carolina will have to increase salaries by 6.4 percent a year. The state would have to raise salaries 10 percent a year for the next four years to catch up with Virginia and Georgia.

Thomas Husted, executive director of the N.C. Association of Educators, the state's largest teachers group, said removing the 4-percent salary increase for teachers reaching tenure significantly diminished the competitiveness of the schedule.

The task force had included the 4-percent boost in an attempt to incorporate the first level of the state's career ladder into its schedule. The evaluation process teachers go through to reach tenure is about the same as the process they go through to reach the first level of the career ladder.

The salary plan endorsed by the board includes a 21-step salary schedule for administrators, which would result in average increases of about 4.5 percent next year and 3 percent in 1990-91. It also recommends giving a 6-percent increase next year to non-certified school workers and taking steps to equate their salaries with other school employees over the next several years.

The legislature would have to spend $381 million in the next two years to provide the proposed salary schedules for all school employees approved by the board.

Senate Approves Vote On Judiciary

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — North Carolinians would be allowed to vote on whether to have appellate judges appointed instead of elected under a proposal given tentative Senate approval.

The 34-14 vote Wednesday came after a sometimes sarcastic speech against the proposed constitutional amendment from Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe. He said the Senate is tampering too much with a constitution he compared to the Bible and the 10 Commandments.

"Who do we want to run our state?" Swain asked at one point, saying lawmakers might as well let the governor appoint them as well as judges.

"Why don't we just do that and take the people plum out of the process?" he said.

Swain wondered at the motives behind other proposed constitutional amendments, including giving the governor the veto.

"I don't know whether we're just seeing some shadows behind us or like the little boy walking through the graveyard and whistling just to keep the spooks away," he said.

Before passing the measure, the Senate voted 43-1 for an amendment to leave lower court elections unchanged. Winner said the bill would have been impossible to pass without the change. Sen. Russell Walker, D-Randolph, cast the only dissenting vote.

Challengers Of Insanity Law Agree To Await Study Findings

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Supporters of revising North Carolina's insanity law in the wake of Michael Hayes' acquittal have agreed to a legislative study of the issue amid questions about possible ramifications of establishing a verdict of guilty but mentally ill.

Rep. Frank Rhodes, R-Foryth, said Wednesday he was withdrawing a bill to create the new verdict, which would give juries another alternative in cases where a criminal defendant pleads innocent by reason of insanity.

Rhodes introduced the bill last month after the acquittal of Hayes, who killed four people and wounded five others in a Winston-Salem shooting spree last year. But during two House subcommittee hearings, legal experts said the bill could result in fewer death sentences in murder cases.

"I will bow to the desires of the people so closely involved that have had dear ones lost because of this tragedy," Rhodes told the Judiciary Subcommittee on Corrections.

"We don't want it to happen again, but if it should, we want the perpetrator to be punished to the full extent of the law and we want that law to be the very best," Rhodes said.

Linda Cantrell, whose daughter was slain by Hayes, told the subcommittee she hoped the study would produce a strong bill.

"I want murderers to be put where they're supposed to be put and done with what's supposed to be done with them," she said. "If it takes a study commission to look at this ... so that nobody will have to go through this again, that's what I want."

Before withdrawing his bill, Rhodes presented a modified version that would have retained the existing innocent-by-reason-of-insanity verdict. The original bill called for abolishing the verdict, but the state Department of Justice said that would be unconstitutional.

People found innocent by reason of insanity are hospitalized for treatment but can be set free if a subsequent hearing determines they are no longer insane.

Those found guilty but mentally ill would be sentenced the same way as for a regular guilty verdict. The defendant would be hospitalized, but if later cured he would begin serving his sentence instead of being freed.

Mike Carpenter, special deputy attorney general, told the subcommittee the Rhodes bill was well-intentioned but should be held until the U.S. Supreme Court rules on a Texas case that raises the question of whether mentally retarded people can be executed.

If the nation's highest court strikes down the Texas law, which allows capital punishment in such cases, the guilty-but-mentally-ill verdict could reduce the number of death sentences in North Carolina, Carpenter said.

Dredging Citation Scheduled

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WILMINGTON — Prompted by controversy about the Southport marina one of his bosses is developing, state coastal management Director George Everett says the state must do a better job of enforcing coastal dredging laws.

Everett said he will cite developer Kent Mitchell, a member of the N.C. Coastal Resources Commission, for improperly dredging the channel and boat basin at the marina he is building at Indigo Plantation in Southport. And he said he has talked to his staff about cracking down on other offenders.

Environmentalists criticized the Division of Coastal Management last week for its failure to monitor the depths of man-made basins and channels. The division issues development permits that limit those depths, but officials said last week that they lack the equipment and manpower to verify whether developers abide by the limits.

"We need to build that capability," Everett said Wednesday. "It doesn't make any sense to require things in a permit if we're not going to follow up on it."

House Panel Holds Up Vote On Bill Changing Insurance

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Questions of fairness vied with financial issues as a House committee debated a bill to help accident victims win compensation, but the panel postponed a vote on the controversial measure.

The bill would repeal North Carolina's contributory negligence system, under which a jury may bar compensation to a victim who contributes to his own injury. Under the new comparative fault system, juries could award damages based on the percentage of fault, as long as the victim was not more than 50 percent to blame for the accident. For example, a victim could receive 80 percent compensation if he were 20 percent at fault.

Rep. John Kerr, D-Wayne, said the bill would spark more litigation and higher insurance costs, something he said happened in other states making the change.

"Who will pay for this 15 percent increase in premiums?" he asked.

But Rep. Sharon Thompson, D-Durham, the bill's sponsor, said the new system could have the opposite effect.

"Under comparative (fault) you might settle cases more because it's not a win all or lose situation," she said.

Ms. Thompson said juries would have no problem making such decisions and would produce more equitable results.

Several committee members then began pushing for an amendment to change another law that allows a victim to sue each responsible party for full damages. That law, called joint and several liability, is just as unfair to some parties as contributory negligence is to victims, said Rep. George Miller, D-Durham.

"If we're going to deal with the issue, let's deal with it on both sides in this bill," he said. The amendment also would prevent damages from going to someone who was more to blame than any other party — for example, a victim 40 percent at fault while three defendants each was assessed 20 percent blame.

But opponents of the amendment said it could leave a big loophole where such things as hazardous waste spills are concerned while encouraging litigation by businesses.

"You simply cannot just cavalierly pass a law dealing with joint and several liability without looking at the effect it has on hazardous waste," said Rep. Alex Hall, D-New Hanover.

Time expired before the committee could vote on the bill, but supporters said after the meeting they had the votes to defeat the amendment and send the bill to the full House. A vote was expected Thursday.

Balloon Suit

BURLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A Burlington man is taking the city to court for denying him permission to put up rooftop advertising balloons.

Charlie Wilson, owner of the Wilson Advertising Agency and Rooftop Balloons, was granted a temporary restraining order Monday by Superior Court Judge J.B. Allen. The order prevents the city from enforcing its sign ordinance against Wilson until May 10.

Debate Heats Up

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Two Democratic representatives had to be restrained by their colleagues during a heated argument on the floor of the House after Wednesday's House session.

Rep. Charles Beall, D-Haywood, and Rep. Milton "Toby" Fitch, D-Wilson, were arguing over Fitch's vote on a bill to set up non-partisan elections in the Cherokee County town of Andrews.

The bill — requested by the town's Democratic mayor and all-Democrat town board — passed the House on split votes and will be sent to the Senate.

Beall asked the House to defeat the measure, saying the chairman of the Cherokee County Democratic Party opposed it. Fitch — who is House Democratic whip, the second highest party official among Democratic representatives — didn't vote.

Beall approached Fitch after the House adjourned, apparently to criticize his lack of opposition for the bill.

The two began arguing heatedly, trading obscene taunts, The Asheville Citizen reported.

Fitch at one point took off his glasses and walked toward Beall, saying, "We'll work this ... out right now." Other legislators still in the chamber then separated the two.

Beall said afterward he was upset because "the Democratic whip didn't support a Democratic ... vote." Fitch couldn't be reached for comment.

The argument provided stronger debate than House consideration of the bill, sponsored by Rep. Marty Kimsey, R-Macon. The bill passed on a 66-30 vote on second reading and a 75-24 vote on third reading.

Panel Backs Long Trailers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — With relatively little debate, the House Infrastructure Committee Wednesday approved a bill to let truckers haul longer trailers on North Carolina highways.

Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, said increasing the limit on trailers from 48 feet to 53 feet would pose no additional threat.

"There was absolutely no concrete evidence whatsoever ... to say, yes, 53 feet does create additional hazards," he said.

Lilley emphasized the importance of trucking to bringing industry to North Carolina, noting 37 states have agreed to allow 53-foot trailers on selected roads.

"We cannot afford to be an island unto ourselves and say to literally thousands of trucks, you can't haul anything in North Carolina," he said.

By providing 10 percent more space, longer trailers will cut down on the number of trucks on the roads, Lilley said. And, because most of the cargo is more bulk that weight, the change would not result in increased wear on the highways, he said.

Chris Scott of the state AFL-CIO said professional truck drivers find the longer rigs unwieldy.

"There is no question in our minds that this is going to make for more accidents," he said.

In addition, giving in to industry will result in more demands, Scott said.

"We'll have 57-foot (trailers)," he said. "We'll be seeing federal pre-emption of your right to say 53-footers can't go on certain roads."

Before approving the bill, which now goes to the full House, the committee voted down an amendment by Rep. John McLaughlin, D-Mecklenburg, to limit the overall length of tractor-trailers to 68 feet and to keep the rigs off two-lane roads.

Piedmont Merger With USAir Ends Era In N.C. History

By Paul Nowell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — High above the clouds, an era is about to pass in North Carolina.

Later this summer, Piedmont Airlines, the Par Heel State's homegrown airline — will disappear when it is gobbled up by USAir in a $1.6 billion acquisition that began more than two years ago.

On Aug. 5, the airline that started off as a "puddle-jumper" and eventually became one of the nation's most profitable regional carriers, will become part of USAir in the largest airline merger in U.S. history.

"I've got real mixed emotions," said Tom Davis, who founded Piedmont Airlines in Winston-Salem in 1940.

"On one hand I hate to see the Piedmont colors come down off the planes," Davis said. "On the other hand, I recognize the airline industry has gone through some major changes in the last 10 years."

In the air and on the ground, the approaching merger can be seen both symbolically and practically.

The rows of white Piedmont jets lined up at Charlotte-Douglas International Airport are gradually being replaced or repainted in USAir's silver color. The Charlotte airport, which is Piedmont's largest domestic hub, also is the site of a new $87 million USAir hangar scheduled for completion next year.

In an interview Wednesday, Davis said he was glad to see Piedmont merging with USAir, which is based in Arlington, Va., rather than with some other airline.

"One of the happy things about all of this is the fact that we're putting together two healthy airlines, not one healthy one and one weak one," he said.

In 1988, USAir Group, which included Piedmont as a wholly-owned subsidiary, had revenues of $5.7 billion and posted a profit of $165 million.

The numbers are staggering when compared with Piedmont's early days.

On Feb. 20, 1948, eight years after he founded Piedmont as an aircraft sales and service company, Davis boarded the airline's first passenger flight from Wilmington, N.C., to Cincinnati.

"I filed the application for that route in 1944 and didn't get the OK until 1947," he recalled.

In its first year, the young company showed a profit of $12,171, had 273 employees and flew almost 40,000 passengers.

"The airline was becoming known in the industry as the 'Puddle-jumper' — not inappropriately, considering that as of 1949 Piedmont had only 1,480 miles of unduplicated routes, and that of the 20-odd cities it served, only the airports at Cincinnati and Norfolk had instrument landing systems, while the runways at Fayetteville and Southern Pines were unpaved." J.A.C. Dunn wrote in the last issue of PACE, the airline's magazine.

By 1951, Piedmont almost nearly 190,000 passengers more than 93 million miles. One year later, the Civil Aeronautics Board renewed its certificate for an unprecedented seven years.

Davis cited that achievement and the airline's strong financial performance as two of the high points of his long career.

"We only had three loss years in the 40-something years I was with the company," he said.

By the end of 1969, Piedmont had nearly 3,200 employees and was serving 78 cities.

Piedmont entered the 1970s as the most profitable carrier among the small regional airlines, earning $7.7 million in profits in the 1960s. By comparison, USAir's forerunner, Allegheny Airlines, lost nearly $13 million during that period.

The roughest period came in the early 1970s, when the country was in a recession and fuel costs spiraled.

In 1971, Davis felt obliged to assure shareholders that the company was not bankrupt — despite $3.6 million in losses over the previous two years.

By 1978, Piedmont's 46 planes flew 4.6 million passengers 1.5 billion miles. The airline employed 4,300 people and earned profits of $5.6 million on revenues of $264 million.

In 1979, Piedmont's growth began to accelerate rapidly with the deregulation of the airline industry.

Two years later, it established its Charlotte hub, where it now controls more than 80 percent of the traffic. Hubs were also opened in Dayton, Syracuse and Baltimore-Washington.

In 1983, Davis retired as president of Piedmont Airlines and was succeeded by William Howard. The following year, Piedmont carried 13 million passengers and launched transcontinental service to San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Three years ago, Piedmont's 160 aircraft flew nearly 23 million passengers 10.2 billion miles. Employment topped 20,000 and profits were $72 million on revenues of $1.9 billion.

By the end of 1987, Piedmont had a fleet of 177 planes and was flying to 235 destinations, including Europe and the Bahamas.

Two months before the merger, Piedmont has about 200 aircraft and employs about 22,000 people. Its 1988 revenues were $2.4 billion with a profit of $150 million, according to its parent company.

In 1987, Piedmont also was one of the few unattached airlines in a rapidly consolidating industry. It had earned a reputation as one of the fastest-growing, best-run companies in the industry.

For several years, Davis had been predicting it would be the target of a takeover.

In January of that year, Norfolk Southern Corp., a Norfolk, Va., railroad company and Piedmont's largest shareholder, announced its interest to buy the airline. Other suitors followed, including USAir.

One month later, USAir, ranked eighth in size, agreed to pay $1.6 billion to acquire Piedmont, the nation's ninth-largest carrier.

With a combined fleet of 426 planes, the new airline will be the seventh-largest, carrying about 7 percent of the U.S. air traffic.

The merger will be culminated on Aug. 5. The night before, USAir employees will remove all Piedmont signs. Uniforms will be changed.

"The marriage of USAir and Piedmont makes the most possible sense in the world," said USAir spokesman David Shipley.

He acknowledged that the company still has to work out labor agreements with some of its unions. "But this won't impede the merger," he said.

For his part, Davis said the fact that it took two years to merge the companies should make for a smoother transition.

"I don't expect mass furloughs like earlier mergers," he said. "Certainly there will be some displacements and some workers' noses will get out of joint."

Davis said it won't be easy melding two work forces of about 20,000 employees without some difficulty.

"Fortunately, both companies have been growing so they are able to absorb a lot of people," he said.

Guides Set For Disposal Of Fetuses

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Abortion clinics in North Carolina are required to cremate, bury or incinerate fetal material that is not used for research under a bill that takes effect today.

House Speaker Joe Mavretic and Lt. Gov. Jim Gardner were to sign into law a bill prescribing methods of disposing of aborted fetuses. The bill cleared its final hurdle Wednesday, gaining approval of the House of Representatives 91-0 without debate.

The bill was recommended by Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland, a funeral director who said he had read about an abortion clinic sending 2,000 fetuses to an out-of-state cosmetic manufacturer for use as an ingredient in skin cream.

He said he could not recall which company received the shipment or other details, but found the alleged use of fetuses in cosmetics offensive.

"I'm in the funeral business and I've seen fetuses that to me are babies," Harris said. "They're a well-developed, beautiful piece of humanity, even though there's no life there."

The bill's disposal requirements do not apply to fetuses used for medical research and development of pharmaceuticals.

Sen. A.D. Guy, D-Onslow, sponsored the bill at Harris' request. Harris said it might be a conflict of interest for him to sponsor it, since he operates a funeral home.

When originally introduced, the bill called for "humane" disposal of abortion remains. The term drew criticism from legislators who are pro-choice on abortion. They said it implied that unborn fetuses are human.

"It bothered me to talk about any fetal remains as being humane when it has not been determined constitutionally that a fetus is human," said Sen. Helen Marvin, D-Gaston County.

Compromise Produces 2-Year Plan Protecting HIV Carriers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A compromise between AIDS victim advocates and business interests has yielded an anti-discrimination bill that would expire in two years, forcing the Legislature to reconsider the issue.

The measure, approved Wednesday by the Senate Human Resources Committee and referred to a judiciary panel for further study, would make it illegal to deny housing, employment or public services to people who carry the HIV virus but exhibit no symptoms of acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

It would expire July 1, 1991, unless extended by law, and would exempt the restaurant industry until that time. It also clarifies employer rights in dealing with employees who have AIDS.

The bill is needed to protect HIV carriers, who can lead productive lives for a decade or longer before AIDS manifests itself, said Sen. Helen Marvin, D-Gaston.

"These people need to be assured that they will be able to work, keep employment, live where they want to, partake of public accommodations without ... the threat of being isolated like lepers were in the past century, to be shunted off to some isolated place to die," Mrs. Marvin told reporters.

The version approved by the committee is the product of a compromise with business, which torpedoed an AIDS anti-discrimination bill in 1987. The expiration provisions were sought by Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland, the committee chairman.

"We've had doctors saying AIDS is caused one way and other doctors saying it's caused another way," Harris said. "I want to know more about it before we go to making definite statements about it."

Jerry Williams, lobbyist for the North Carolina Restaurant Association, told the panel that 40 percent of the participants in a survey commissioned by the NCRA's national affiliate said they would not eat in a restaurant where the cook had the AIDS virus.

Mrs. Marvin said all available evidence indicates AIDS is not transmitted through food contamination, but acknowledged the restaurant lobby had a legitimate concern. Some restaurants have reported losing business because of untrue rumors they employed people with AIDS, she said.

The two-year grace period will give the public more time to learn about how AIDS is transmitted and dispel some of the fears that could ruin businesses for no reason, she said.

"I think we've come a long way in the past two years with the limited funds that have been at our disposal" for AIDS education, Mrs. Marvin said. "Hopefully we will get more funds from the state and the feds are going to be doing a lot more, and hopefully there will be new medical advances in this area."

Harris warned that strong evidence would be needed in two years to convince him not to seek continuation of the restaurant exemption.

"What if a man (with HIV) that's making salad in the back cuts his fingers and bleeds into that salad?" he said. "It may not do a thing but you sure wouldn't want to eat that salad, would you?"

Critics were mollified further by an amendment listing employer rights, including the right to reassign or fire an employee who is HIV-infected and shows symptoms of AIDS that would endanger co-workers or the public or affect his job performance.

Bill supporters said the amendment merely restates powers that employers already have.

Aside from outlawing discrimination against HIV carriers in employment, housing, public accommodations and public transportation, the bill would disallow performing AIDS tests on anyone without his consent under most circumstances.

David Jones, spokesman for the AIDS Service Coalition, said his group opposed the restaurant exemption and two-year sunset provision, saying they "send the wrong message." But he said they were acceptable compromises.

"It's more important to get something on the books in this session than to get the perfect bill passed," Jones said.

Harrier Crash Kills Pilot

PARRIS ISLAND, S.C. — Officials with the U.S. Marine Corps say they will investigate the death of a pilot who ejected from a military jet moments before the plane went down.

First Lt. Arnold John Kozloski, a Marine Corps spokesman at Parris Island, and Gunnery Sgt. James Gladkowski, a spokesman at the Marine Corps Air Station at Cherry Point, N.C., said they didn't know the cause of the crash, adding that the accident was under investigation.

The single-seat AV-8 Harrier crashed at 9:03 a.m. Wednesday near a training airfield at the Marine Corps Recruiting Depot near Beaufort, Kozloski said.

WestPoint-Pepperell Sets $12 Million Expansion For Martin And Robeson

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — WestPoint-Pepperell will spend $12 million on capital improvements at two textile plants in Martin and Robeson counties, with the parent company's chairman saying that "you can't be the best in the world unless you invest to be the best in the world."

"The reasons you had a decline in the textile and apparel industry in America was because companies just weren't investing and other countries were catching up," said William Farley, chairman of Farley Industries, WestPoint-Pepperell's parent company.

"The American worker is the best worker in the world, but you have to provide them with the tools," Farley said.

Farley said the expansions in Hamilton in Martin County and Lumberton in Robeson County will create close to 500 new jobs by 1991.

"When I was growing up as a kid in Rhode Island, which was the original basis for the textile and apparel industry in America, I worked in a factory," said Farley, who spoke Wednesday at a news conference outside the Capitol along with Gov. Jim Martin and state Commerce Secretary Jim Broyhill.

"... One of the things that bothered me the most ... was the facilities just weren't up to date," he said.

Capital items to be purchased include new piece dyeing, finishing and support equipment in Lumberton and Hamilton, as well as additions to the Hamilton plant.

Farley said improvements will take production of fabric at the Alamac Division plants from 1.1 million pounds to 1.5 million pounds a week.

"This a growth company and we're going to make it a growth company," Farley said.

Farley Inc., which also owns Fruit of the Loom, recently acquired WestPoint-Pepperell, making it the largest textile and apparel manufacturer in the world.

Farley said reports that resources — including jobs — would be taken to North Carolina from WestPoint-Pepperell plants in Georgia or throughout the Southeast were untrue.

"This is total new expansion and investment here," he said. "It has nothing to do with closing a facility in Georgia to come here. Georgia is a great state to do business in ... and we intend to grow there also, frankly."

Farley Industries is the outgrowth of a sequence of leveraged acquisitions by Farley, who said he aggressively pursues companies with strong market and growth potential. The company was founded in 1977.

Two employees at the plants, Virginia Oxendine of Lumberton and Christopher Taylor of Hamilton, were presented with a $12 million check from Farley on Wednesday.

"You can't give people enthusiasm with no tools," Farley said. "The American worker and the American textile and apparel industry can be the best in the world, and I mean that sincerely. But you can't be the best in the world unless you invest to be the best in the world."

WestPoint Pepperell now employs 651 people in Hamilton and 1,059 in Lumberton. More than 2,500 are employed by the company in North Carolina.

"The commitment by William Farley is a significant step in building the traditional industries in North Carolina," Martin said. "We take great pride in the ongoing support of the industries that built the base for North Carolina's healthy economic climate, and these plans are indication that Mr. Farley and his organization hold those same beliefs and commitments."

Farley's announcement comes less than three weeks after Oxford University Press Inc. said it would build a $10 million warehouse and distribution center in Cary that expects to employ about 130.

Superfund Site

RALEIGH (AP) — Hevi-Duty Electric Co. in Goldsboro is among 10 sites nationwide proposed Wednesday for addition on the Environmental Protection Agency's national priorities list of most serious waste sites.

Hevi-Duty Electric Co., located off U.S. 117, manufactures dry and liquid power transformers. Several spills of PCB-containing oil have occurred at the site, contaminating groundwater and soil.

The NPL identifies abandoned or uncontrolled hazardous waste sites potentially posing the greatest long-term threat to health and the environment. EPA identifies and ranks NPL sites according to threats to nearby populations through actual or potential contamination of groundwater, surface water or air.

Sites on the NPL are eligible for long-term remedial action financed by the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act, commonly known as Superfund. Money from the fund pays the costs not assumed by responsible parties for cleaning up hazardous waste sites or emergencies that threaten public health, welfare or the environment.

WAYNESVILLE, N.C. — An estimated 38 bushels of raw and cooked ramps will be consumed Sunday at the annual Ramp Convention in Waynesville.

As ramp eaters down the pungent bulbs, they can also enjoy live entertainment from several country bands and seven clogging teams.

The convention will begin at noon, with a raw ramp-eating contest scheduled for 2 p.m. The self-proclaimed "king of the ramps," former N.C. Secretary of State Thad Eure, will be on hand for the event, said American Legion spokesman Dick Hefner.

Eure, 89, is a yearly supporter of the convention held the first Sunday in May when ramps are at their peak. The convention has been held at the American Legion grounds for about 24 years, Hefner said.

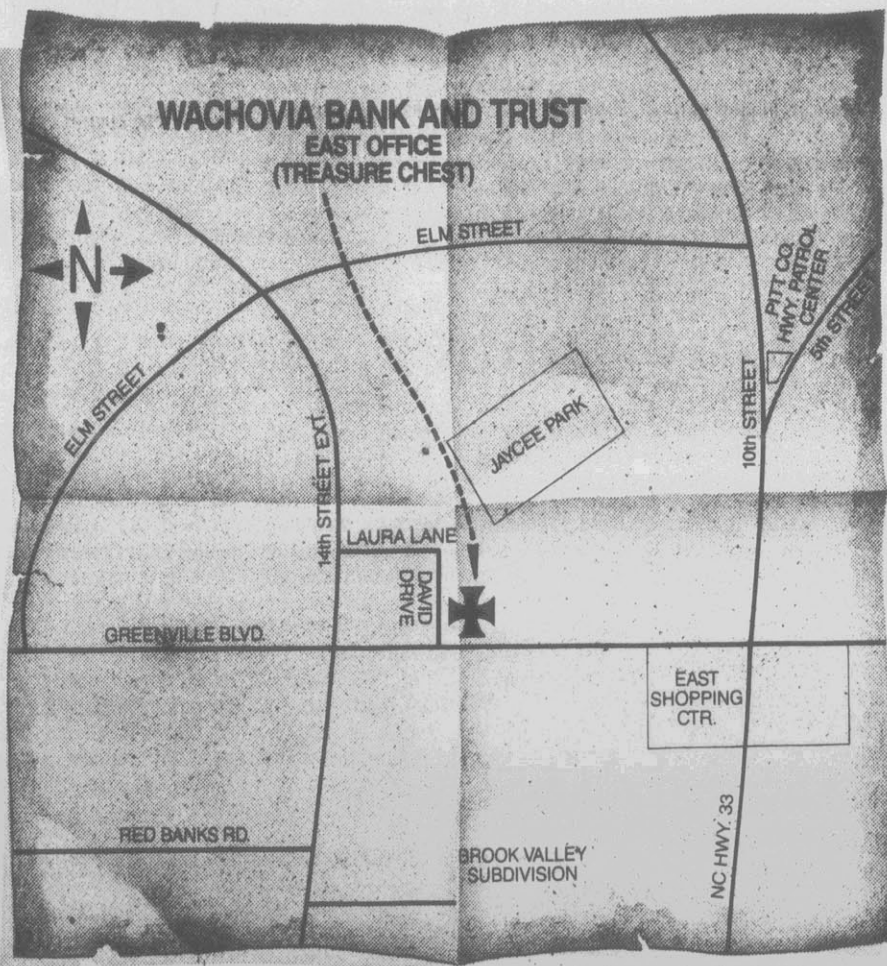

The ramps for the festivity are dug each year from the Waynesville Water Shed area. Hefner said it takes four to five diggings to come up with enough fresh ramps for the convention.

Also on the menu is barbecue chicken, ramp meatloaf, country ham, ramps and eggs, baked beans, corn bread and cole slaw.

Ex-Exxon Tanker Captain Faces Trial Next Month

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — The fired captain of the Exxon Valdez was ordered to stand trial next month on charges of being drunk while his vessel crashed into a reef and spilled more than 10 million gallons of oil.

Joseph Hazelwood, 42, pleaded innocent Wednesday before state District Court Judge David Stewart to three misdemeanor charges of operating a vessel while drunk, reckless endangerment and negligent discharge of oil. He faces two years, three months in prison and $11,000 in fines if convicted of all the counts.

Paulette Foster, a spokeswoman for the district attorney's office, also said a grand jury has begun an investigation to determine whether additional criminal charges should also be filed against Hazelwood, who was released on $50,000 bail. Hazelwood's attorneys said they will seek to have the trial, scheduled for June 20 in Valdez, moved because of extensive news coverage. He said an alternate location had not been selected.

Hazelwood is accused of turning over control of the 987-foot-long Exxon Valdez to an uncertified mate on March 24, when it rammed a charted reef outside shipping lanes and ripped its bottom, letting the Alaskan North Slope oil pour into Prince William Sound.

Authorities say Hazelwood, who has a history of alcohol-related driving arrests in New York, had a blood-alcohol level of 0.061 percent nine hours after the accident. The legal maritime limit for operating a vessel is 0.04 percent.

After the spill, Hazelwood went home to Huntington, N.Y., where he was arrested on a fugitive warrant. He returned voluntarily Wednesday and surrendered. He had been free on $25,000 bail in New York and a prosecutor said he would move to dismiss the fugitive charge and return the bail money.

Vice President Dan Quayle, meanwhile, was scheduled to tour the spill damage tonight at Cordova and the heavily tarred Smith Island. He was to be accompanied by his wife, Marilyn, Gov. Steve Cowper, federal Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner and Coast Guard Adm. Paul A. Yost.

At Smith Island beach, workers were constructing a wooden platform from which Quayle could view the pollution.

The state, responding to a request from Yost to evaluate Exxon's revised clean-up plan, rejected the Exxon proposal, saying it was inadequate and didn't provide for enough personnel to do the job.

According to state environmental conservation commissioner Dennis Kelso, Exxon is overly optimistic in projecting clean-up progress and does not address several needs, including double cleaning of some heavily oiled areas and removal of oil from the water. Exxon also exaggerated the number of beaches it identified to be cleaned only by waves, wind and rain, said Tom Ferguson, a state spokesman.

Exxon has recommended cleaning 364 miles of Alaska coastline by mid-September. But the company wants to leave untouched nearly 200 of those miles and let them be cleaned by nature. Exxon also wants permission to bypass environmental laws to dispose of the oil wastes.

Both provisions have been criticized by environmentalists.

"The test should not be whether the oiling is heavy or light; rather, cleaning should be done whenever the benefits to the environment exceed the impacts from cleaning," Kelso said.

On Wednesday, state authorities reported increasing damage on the Alaska Peninsula and at Katmai National Park.

"It's a very thick mousse-type stuff 6 to 8 inches thick" hitting in blotches, said Bill Lamoreaux, a state environmental official. "It's definitely a difficult type of clean-up operation. It's close to shore and rolling up on shore."

Deadly Virus Threatens Tobacco Crop In Georgia

By Elliott Minor
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TIFTON, Ga. — A deadly virus is threatening Georgia's flue-cured tobacco crop and could spread to the state's peanut crop later this summer, a scientist says.

The disease, known as tomato spotted wilt, has reached epidemic proportions in the state's flue-cured tobacco belt, said Albert Culbreath, a plant pathologist at the University of Georgia's Coastal Plain Experiment Station in Tifton.

Unlike many pests and plant diseases, there are no known controls or preventive measures for tomato spotted wilt.

"It's causing quite a bit of concern," Culbreath said Wednesday. "It has the potential to cause great damage in any one particular crop that's a host to it. But even more important than that, it has the potential to cause losses in several crops that are important to us, in particular tobacco and peanuts."

The disease can attack more than 250 plant varieties, including tobacco, peanuts, tomatoes and peppers, said Culbreath, one of about a dozen scientists in Georgia who are studying the disease.

Tomato spotted wilt is spread by tiny insects known as thrips that puncture plant leaves and feed on the sap.

In some fields, up to 20 percent of the tobacco plants are infected by the virus. Diseased plants are often stunted. Brown spots develop on their leaves, the veins in the leaves turn brown, then the plants wither and die.

"Tomato spotted wilt is one of the few viruses that actually kills its host," Culbreath said. "Most viruses are just parasites. They use their host for reproduction. They don't actually kill it."

Paul Bertrand, a plant pathologist with the Georgia Extension Service, said the incidence of virus-related problems is higher than normal this spring.

He believes Georgia's mild winter may have contributed to the problem by allowing thrips to survive in greater-than-usual numbers. Low levels of the virus were reported in more than 20 tobacco-producing counties last year.

Bertrand and other scientists are in the process of surveying fields in at least 16 counties this spring.

Tobacco growers, meantime, are applying insecticides to control bud worms. Some of the poisons are effective on thrips, but no one expects insecticides to stop the spread of the disease.

"There just isn't any straightforward way to control viruses," Bertrand said. "They're not like a fungus disease or a nematode where you can put out some sort of remedy."

Tomato spotted wilt occurs around the world and through the years has been reported in Georgia, but not on the scale of the current outbreak.

Culbreath said the virus damaged the peanut crop in Texas a few years ago and during the 1970s seriously disrupted tobacco production in Brazil.

Tift County farmer Harrison Brown owns one of the infected fields that scientists are studying.

"You don't like to put it out there ... and have something kill it," said Brown. "Anytime you start losing tobacco, it's a concern."

Brown said tobacco is an important cash crop for farmers lucky enough to have allotments.

"You do all right with peanuts, but tobacco pays the expenses," he said.

Court Rules For Gay Soldier

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — A homosexual allowed by a federal appeals court to re-enlist in the Army says the constitutionality of military bans on homosexuals will not be settled until more gay soldiers come out of the closet.

"It's an issue that's probably going to take a class action-type suit before a court makes that broad a ruling, 10 or 12 people in the military who are willing to stand up and say they're gay," Perry Watkins said after Wednesday's ruling.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals' decision that the Army erred when it denied him re-enlistment was a "wonderful ruling," said the 14-year veteran, who is now working as a U.S. Forest Service clerk in Seattle.

Civil rights lawyers who supported his case said the ruling was important despite its limited scope. "It is not a sweeping constitutional decision, but it is a first step that recognizes the value of the services of openly gay soldiers," said Nan Hunter of the American Civil Liberties Union's Lesbian and Gay Rights Project, which helped Watkins.

Lt. Col. Greg Rixon, an Army spokesman, declined to comment on the ruling, but said there had been several other cases that have supported the ban against homosexuals from military service. He said any decision concerning an appeal would be made by the solicitor general, the Justice Department's top litigator, who has not reviewed the ruling.

If the Army doesn't appeal Wednesday's ruling, Watkins said he would like to re-enlist.

The court ruled in Watkins' favor on narrow grounds, saying he was entitled to reinstatement because the Army was aware of his homosexuality when he had previously re-enlisted.

Watkins, of Tacoma, "has greatly benefited the Army, and therefore the country, by his military service," said Judge Harry Pregerson in the majority opinion.

But Judge Cynthia Holcomb Hall said the Army never promised Watkins an indefinite exemption from its ban. She also said a court ruling prohibiting a service branch from applying one of its regulations would have "a disruptive effect on military discipline."

Seven of the 11 judges voted in Watkins' favor, but only two addressed the constitutional issue that a smaller panel of the court had cited in a now-withdrawn February 1988 decision. That ruling was the first by any federal appeals court to declare that homosexuals, because of longstanding persecution and political powerlessness, were entitled to be protected against discrimination to the same degree as racial minorities. By sidestepping that issue Wednesday, the court left it unresolved.

In Wednesday's decision, the court said it would be unjust to allow the Army to enforce its anti-homosexual policy against Watkins because he said he was a homosexual when he was drafted in 1967 and had been drafted and allowed to re-enlist three times while the policy was in effect. After two tours of duty in Korea, he became supervisor of the Fort Lewis, Wash., personnel administration center.

Inspectors Find Cracks In Planes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Air Force inspectors have found cracks in the wings of more than one-third of subsonic, single-engine attack aircraft inspected since the problem was discovered last month, the Pentagon says.

As of late Wednesday, cracks had been discovered in 116 of 325 A-7D and K model aircraft inspected since the fleet was grounded, said Air Force spokeswoman Maj. Donna Pastor. She said inspections of the remaining 40 of the 365 planes were not yet completed.

The first cracks in the trailing edges of the wings were detected in mid-April during routine maintenance by the Air Force National Guard at Tucson, Ariz., International Airport, Pastor said.

"The Air Force Logistics Command has been doing sophisticated tests because many of the cracks can't be seen by the eye," said Pastor. "They're very minute. The concern is if a crack exists at take-off, it has the potential of ... increasing and potentially causing wing failure."

Aircraft with cracks will be repaired or modified by a team from the Air National Guard's Sacramento, Calif.-based Air Logistics Center, said Pastor. Those found to be clean have been promptly returned to service, said Pastor.

The A-7 Corsair II was originally designed for the U.S. Navy. The one-seat A-7D model of the aircraft, designed for the Air Force primarily for an air-to-surface attack role, has been in service since December 1968. Production ended in December 1976.

Silver-Haired Oldster Pleads Guilty To Sweet-Talk Crime

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — A 78-year-old man who police say spent the last decade sweet-talking women across the country, then taking their valuables and disappearing, has pleaded guilty to stealing from a widow.

Arthur Frankford also faces charges in Polk and Pinellas counties, and the FBI is looking into the possibility he was involved in bank robberies, said FBI agent Bob Neuman.

Frankford, whom police nicknamed "The Silver Fox," may have cheated scores of lonely women from Iowa to Florida, authorities said.

His undoing came when a former sister-in-law saw his case on NBC-TV's "Unsolved Mysteries" and called the program's hot line from the small coal mining town of Stearns, Ky., to say he was living nearby.

The case responsible for putting him on national television came from Palm Beach County. The program depicted him as a man who met the widow at a church singles dance, wine and dined her and moved in with her for a month. When he disappeared, he took her jewelry and a gun that belonged to her late husband.

"This guy is slick," Palm Beach County sheriff's Detective Dave

Hoyt said. "He could charm the socks off a dead guy."

A Kentucky state trooper watching the show also recognized Frankford as the man he had arrested on a drunken-driving charge the previous weekend.

Officers who went to Frankford's house to arrest him found he was masquerading as 56-year-old James Ferguson and that he was married to a 37-year-old woman.

Frankford was escorted Tuesday into a Palm Beach County courtroom in handcuffs, pleaded guilty to grand theft and agreed to pay $500 to the 62-year-old Lake Park widow who allowed him into her home, her heart and her safe in August.

When Frankford was arrested, he gave back most of the $4,000 worth of jewelry he had taken, but the victim may never get the money she is owed. Court records show the man, a former condominium maintenance worker who has a criminal record dating from 1945, cannot afford to pay his court costs.

Frankford, who has spent the past three months in the county jail, was sentenced to time served. He will be transferred to the Polk County Jail where he awaits trial on 12 charges of forgery and grand theft, said Assistant State Attorney Catherine Hall.

Authorities trying to sort out Frankford's past found a February 1979 warrant based on a complaint from a Sarasota socialite who told police that Frankford, then known as Ferguson, met her at a church function, moved in and then stole her Mercedes-Benz.

A man matching Ferguson's description later moved to Lakeland, married a prominent woman and took nearly everything she had, authorities said.

"He was unbelievably smooth," one victim, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said after Frankford disappeared. "It was mixing, dining, dancing and trips. He mixed with the family, and he was a very giving guy who always paid for things. You would never have known."

Jorgensen as George in 1952, as Christine in 1953 and again in 1977, 25 years after operation

Christine Jorgensen, First Sex Change Patient, Dies At Age 62

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. — Christine Jorgensen, who told the world in 1952 she was a woman trapped in a man's body and shocked it by becoming the first person to undergo a sex change, is dead. She was 62.

Miss Jorgensen died of cancer at San Clemente Hospital on Wednesday, two days after she was admitted, said hospital spokeswoman Jami Pearson.

She fought a 2 1/2-year battle with the cancer, which began in her bladder. And a few weeks ago doctors found a brain tumor, according to Chris Costello, a friend, publicist and daughter of the late comedian Lou Costello.

"She was a wonderful, understanding woman who loved everyone," said actress Dorothy Lamour, who also was a friend of Miss Jorgensen. "She gave out so much love and was a God-loving woman; one of the finest women I have ever met," Miss Lamour said in a statement read by Ms. Costello.

Miss Jorgensen, a heavy smoker, said in an interview last year that when she learned she had cancer she told herself:

"This is cancer. I wanted to be upfront and not try to deny it. It's like anything else. I still joke and carry on. I see some of the patients who just shuffle in and out, and you just know that they aren't going to make it."

She voiced no regrets about the sex change and the ensuing international publicity.

"I am very proud now, looking back," she said. "It was the sexual revolution that was going to start with or without me. We may not have started it, but we gave it a good swift kick in the pants."

Her operation is much more commonplace today.

As of 1980, an estimates 3,000 to 6,000 adults in the United States had undergone hormonal and surgical sex changes, according to Harry Benjamin of the International Gender Dysphoria Association.

The association estimates that 30,000 to 60,000 people have considered themselves candidates for the surgery.

Miss Jorgensen said last year her operation "wouldn't get on the 95th page of the newspaper if it happened today."

She cherished her privacy and spent her final years as a homebody who stayed as much as she could out of the limelight.

Still, the transsexual pioneer remained unafraid of publicity and sued a Mission Viejo hospital for treatment of a cracked shoulder bone and several vertebrae after she fell in September 1987.

She had said the injury was partially responsible for her not taking the lead role in an Anaheim production of the musical "Mame."

Miss Jorgensen was born George Jorgensen Jr. on May 30, 1926, in New York City to parents of Danish descent.

At age 26, the handsome former soldier shocked the world when news of the sex-change operation was leaked by a family friend.

The willowy blonde who left the operating room in Copenhagen, Denmark, found that her new life made her an instant celebrity. Her notoriety sent her on the talk show, lecture and nightclub circuits. She met royalty and celebrities and ended up with enough money, jewels and furs to live a comfortable life.

She never married and had lived the last few years in San Clemente, a seaside community about 50 miles south of downtown Los Angeles. She had lived in California the last 20 years, Ms. Costello said.

Miss Jorgensen had been planning a sequel to her 1967 book "Christine Jorgensen: A Personal Biography," Ms. Costello said.

She also was working on finding a U.S. distributor for a documentary produced in Denmark on transsexuals, lesbians and female impersonators.

"Christine was the type of person who always had an iron in the fire even in the very end," Ms. Costello said.

Miss Jorgensen is survived by a sister and two nieces. A private memorial was planned.

INS Says Mexico Helping Curb Refugee Flow

By James Rowley
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The flood of Central American refugees trying to cross the U.S. border into Texas has slowed significantly thanks to help from Mexico, federal immigration authorities say.

Border security has been tightened in south Texas by the Immigration and Naturalization Service, INS officials say. In addition, the Mexican government has arrested 13,000 Central American refugees in the last six months, up from 12,000 during the previous year, INS says.

James L. Buck, deputy immigration commissioner, told reporters Wednesday that Mexico has reinstated checkpoints along that country's southern border and authorities are randomly stopping motorists to spot illegal aliens.

Buck noted that the number of border arrests of illegal aliens in south Texas has dropped from 200 to 300 a day to about 50 daily since a 400-member INS task force was assigned to Port Isabel, Texas, on Feb. 21.

The task force was set up to help stop the explosion of political asylum applications from Central Americans at the border. Between June and December of last year the INS was receiving an average of 5,000 asylum applications a month.

Most of the refugees were not eligible for political asylum because they couldn't satisfy the INS requirement that they demonstrate a well-based fear of persecution.

As many as 2,500 were detained at the Port Isabel facility, which now holds 1,500 aliens awaiting adjudication of their asylum claims. Another 1,700 have been deported, INS officials say.

The number of asylum applications submitted at the border has also dropped from 200 daily to only a handful, Buck said.

If current trends continue, "probably by the end of the summer, we will begin to see this entire task force sized down significantly," Buck said.

INS Commissioner Alan Nelson, meanwhile, credited the employer sanction provisions of the 1986 Immigration Reform and Control Act with helping to reduce the overall number of arrests along the 1,000-mile U.S.-Mexican border.

The INS has assessed $7 million in fines to employers accused of hiring illegal aliens and collected $1.6 million, Nelson said.

Nelson noted INS and Border Patrol agents arrested 1.6 million illegal aliens in 1988, the year before the immigration law was enacted. Since then the yearly totals have declined significantly, he said.

In the first six months of the 1989 fiscal year, arrests were down about a third from 1988, when the total for 12 months was 940,670, Nelson said.

The trend "continues to demonstrate that the law is working," Nelson said.

Under the one-year amnesty program for once-illegal aliens, the INS is gearing up to process nearly 3.1 million requests from foreigners to become permanent U.S. residents.

The application deadline for amnesty was a year ago today. Since then the INS has approved nearly 1.8 million applications for temporary residency, while denying about 70,000.

It continues to process the balance of the applications for temporary residence.

Aliens may apply for permanent residency 18 months after being given legal status. They must apply for permanent residency within a year of becoming eligible for face deportation.

Advocacy groups contend the INS isn't doing enough to spread the word about the impending deadlines.

But INS officials say 60 percent of those who are now eligible to apply have done so and they expect the application rate to reach 97 percent by the time the program ends.

Nelson said the agency has received 290,000 applications so far.

INS officials say computerized mailings make advertising campaigns unnecessary because "we are reaching out directly to these people," said Richard Norton, associate commissioner for examinations.

Cheney Says Japan Will Develop Fighter Anyway

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Japan will develop an advanced jet fighter regardless of whether the United States participates, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney told congressional critics of the FSX jet fighter.

"Disapproval of the FSX by the Congress would most likely result in Japan modifying an existing aircraft to meet the immediate military need, and then attempting to develop indigenously a follow-on aircraft, possibly with European assistance," Cheney told the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Cheney was one of three top administration officials who went Wednesday to Capitol Hill in an effort to put on a unified show of administration support of the FSX deal.

Also appearing were Commerce

Secretary Robert A. Mosbacher and Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence S. Eagleburger.

"I am confident that this agreement will not harm the economic security interests of the United States," Mosbacher told the panel. Mosbacher previously had voiced concern within the administration over economic implications of the $7 billion deal.

Under the agreement, St. Louis-based General Dynamics and Japan's Mitsubishi Heavy Industries would join forces to co-develop and co-produce the FSX, an advanced version of the U.S. F-16, for deployment by Japan in the late 1990s.

But Rep. Mel Levine, D-Calif., declared at the hearing that "I remain convinced that co-development of the FSX is not in America's national interest."

Levine has been joined by 36

House co-sponsors in introducing a draft resolution of disapproval aimed at halting the deal. A companion resolution has been introduced in the Senate.

Critics of the deal have called it a "giveaway" of valuable advanced technology that Japan may use to propel its own aircraft industry into head-to-head competition with the United States in the world market.

They have argued that Japan instead should buy "off the shelf" American-made F-16s, to bolster its military capability more quickly.

Indictment Of Friend Adds To D.C. Mayor's Problems

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Mayor Marion Barry's political problems are mounting with the indictment of one of his former closest advisers, who is charged with steering contracts to friends and routing money from the deals to Barry's re-election campaign.

A federal grand jury on Wednesday indicted two men, including former Barry adviser David E. Rivers, on charges they conspired to award $3 million in city health services contracts to friends.

Rivers and prominent city contractor John B. Clyburn were indicted after they allegedly worked to secure several city contracts for a company headed by undercover FBI agents, gave other contracts to friends and assigned still others to a company Clyburn owned.

Rivers also faces two counts of agreeing to accept a bribe, while Clyburn has been charged with helping to bribe him.

Barry, already under federal investigation for his ties to a drug suspect, said in a prepared statement, "My focus continues to be on managing the District of Columbia government."

Compounding Barry's difficulties are a growing drug-related crime wave and the possibility that Jesse Jackson, Barry's longtime civil rights ally, might move to the nation's capital and run for mayor in 1990.

Prosecutors provided no details on how money from the alleged contract steering ended up in Barry's 1986 reelection campaign fund, but a source familiar with Barry's 1986 campaign told The Associated Press that Rivers and Clyburn organized at least one fund-raiser for Barry's 1986 campaign.

The indictments come after a 21-month grand jury probe that followed a 17-month undercover FBI investigation into the city's contracting procedures.

If convicted of all charges, Rivers and Clyburn could each face maximum prison terms of 50 years.

"This indictment alleged a seamy web of corruption, of concealment, of manipulation and of self-dealing by one of the most senior officials in the District of Columbia government," said U.S. Attorney Jay B. Stephens.

Stephens alleged that both Clyburn and Rivers took "about 10 percent off the top" in kickbacks for the 20 contracts and contract extensions mentioned in the indictment.

Rivers was out of town Wednesday, said his attorney, John Mercer.

The 49-page indictment charges that the alleged contracting scheme took place from 1983 through May 1987.

Rivers took a leave of absence from his city job in August 1987 after he became a target of the investigation.

Fisherman Finds Body Of Infant

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WEST ALTON, Mo. — A fisherman found the body of a baby in a trash barrel but authorities wouldn't say if it was the infant whose parents have reported two child abductions in three years.

St. Charles County Sheriff Ed Uebinger refused to say if the body was that of 6-week-old Heather Sims of Alton, Ill., but said that there are no other reports of missing babies in the area.

An autopsy was planned today to determine the identity and cause of death.

The body was found Wednesday night at an old lock and dam on the Mississippi River north of St. Louis. The site is directly across the river from where the girl's parents, Robert and Paula Sims, live.

"A fisherman was in the area and saw an individual acting a little bit suspicious," Uebinger said at the site of the discovery. "He walked over to one of these trash barrels, looked inside and found the body."

The fisherman told investigators that when he moved toward the barrel, the person left, Uebinger said. No other information was released about the fisherman or the person seen at the barrel.

Heather's parents told police that a masked man approached Mrs. Sims while she was taking out the trash Saturday, forced her back into the home, knocked her unconscious and took the infant.

The circumstances of Heather's reported abduction were similar to the June 1986 disappearance of Loralee Sims, the couple's first child. The couple reported an armed intruder entered their home in Brighton, Ill., and took their 13-day-old infant.

A week later, the Loralee's remains were found near that home. The cause of death was not determined and no one was charged, although the parents were considered suspects. At the time, they denied any involvement in their daughter's disappearance and death.

St. Charles County deputies asked for a copy of Heather's footprint shortly after the body was found. Earlier Wednesday, Alton police used a search warrant to seize medical records of the child, her mother and father.

Sims called police saying he learned about the fisherman's discovery from a TV news report, said Alton Police Sgt. Billy Lawrence.

"He asked when someone (from the police department) was going to come and talk to him," Lawrence said.

The Simses have declined comment, citing advice from police. They also have a 15-month-old son who was sleeping at the time of the reported abduction.

Former Guard Executed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

STARKE, Fla. — A former prison guard who suffocated an 8-year-old girl and left her body in a plastic bag was executed today in Florida's electric chair for the youngster's death 11 years ago.

Attorneys for 31-year-old Aubrey Adams Jr. had conducted a whirlwind round of unsuccessful appeals Wednesday in hopes of finding a judge to block the execution at Florida State Prison near Starke.

The victim's mother joined 15 relatives and family friends in a pasture outside the prison before the execution.

"It's a decade too late but we finally got justice today. I just wish my husband was here today," said Ann Thornley of Reliance, Tenn., whose husband James died late last year of heart problems. "This killed him."

Seven capital punishment opponents kept a silent vigil nearby.

After he was strapped into the electric chair, Adams was asked if he had a final statement before the black hood was pulled over his head.

"My pastor will be making my last statement for me," he replied in a strong, clear voice. The pastor could not immediately be located for comment.

The electricity was turned on at 7:04 a.m. and Adams was pronounced dead five minutes later.

Adams was the second person executed in Florida this year, and the 21st in the state and 108th in the nation since the U.S. Supreme Court's 1976 ruling that restored capital punishment.

In January, confessed serial killer Ted Bundy was executed for the slaying of Kimberly Diane Leach, a Lake City schoolgirl.

The court late Wednesday voted 7-2 against an emergency request for a delay, and turned down a formal appeal for a review of the death sentence.

Adams was under his fourth death warrant for the Jan. 23, 1978, death of Trisa Gail Thornley, a third-grader last seen on her way home from school in Ocala in central Florida.

Her mutilated and naked body was found in a plastic bag about two months later by hunters in a remote area three miles from her home.

Airline Complaints Continue To Decline

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Passenger complaints against the nation's airlines continued to decline last month, according to the Department of Transportation.

The department, in its monthly Air Travel Consumer Report released Wednesday, listed the most complaints against Pan American, Trans World and Hawaiian airlines.

The department said Pan American World Airways received 7.58 complaints per 100,000 passengers in April, Trans World Airlines 6.91 and Hawaiian Airlines 6.53. All were well below last year's figures for each airline.

Overall, complaints received by the department against airlines declined from 970 in March to 933 in April. There were 2,100 in April 1988.

The most dissatisfaction a year ago was reported against Continental Airlines, with 14.94 per 100,000 passengers, and Eastern Airlines, with 12.48. Both airlines are owned by Texas Air Corp. Eastern, which has shut down most of its operations because of a strike, received 1.83 complaints per 100,000 passengers last month, and Continental 3.91.

The 12 largest carriers reported that 72.3 percent of their flights operated on time in March, the latest month for which statistics were available. The February figure was 72.4 percent. Eastern was not included in the latest report because of the strike, the department said.

Mishandled baggage reports filed against the carriers in March increased from 7.36 per 1,000 passengers in February to 7.53 in March, the report said.

Evacuations

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — About 130,000 civilians fled their homes in the countryside last year to escape fighting between the military and Communist guerrillas, the International Committee of the Red Cross says.

Thierry Triboulet, Red Cross relief department chief, said Wednesday that his organization helped 24,000 families in at least 12 of country's 73 provinces last year.

He said Mindanao, the archipelago nation's second largest island, accounted for about 100,000 evacuees, with the rest on Luzon and in the central Visayas island chain.

Power Lunches

TEMPLE CITY, Calif. (AP) — Ants, enjoying their own kind of power lunches, short-circuited street lights and traffic signals by munching on wire insulation.

"People think it's sort of a joke. It's really not," said Chris Peterson, public works director.

The insects' appetite for destruction has forced the city to spend $22,000 rewiring three traffic lights.

Two Mayors Turn To Faith Healers As Last Resort

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Sharing friendship and a fatal disease, the mayors of Pittsburgh and Erie turned to faith healers in a hotel room 17 months ago and joined hands to pray for a cure to save their lives.

"Christ has cured a lot of people and I said, 'What do we have to lose?'" Erie's Louis J. Tullio said Wednesday. "We're people, too, and he can touch anyone."

"Lou is still alive and I think this has something to do with it," said Jeanne Caliguri, widow of Pittsburgh Mayor Richard S. Caliguri.

Caliguri died at age 56 on May 6, five months after he and Tullio prayed with faith healers Charles and Frances Hunter.

The mayors were diagnosed in 1987 with amyloidosis, which infiltrates and destroys vital organs through excess protein.

"We were talking about the things of God," Mrs. Hunter said in a telephone interview Wednesday from Kingwood, Texas. "When we thought it was the right time, we just laid hands on them. You never know when the healing is going to connect."

Jack Grazier, a reporter for the Erie Daily Times, said he introduced the mayors to the Hunters on Dec. 12, 1987. Grazier and his wife, Debbie, also joined the prayer session. Grazier said he knew the Hunters from 1985, when the couple prayed for Grazier's wife to become pregnant.

The session was not publicized at the time. Grazier describes the meeting in detail in his book "The Power Beyond," to be published in June.

"Here were these guys wielding so much power in Pennsylvania's second- and third-largest cities going to a hotel room to meet with elderly faith healers in hopes of being cured of a fatal illness," Grazier said in a telephone interview Wednesday.

"To see them humbled like that was sort of a surreal experience. Here they were praying for their very lives," Grazier said. "We were right up against it."

Both mayors disclosed within weeks of each other that they suffered from amyloidosis, a rare disease that usually strikes men of Mediterranean descent.

Caliguri, Pittsburgh mayor for 11 years, died of heart failure resulting from the disease. The 72-year-old Tullio, Erie's mayor for 23 years, has battled fluid accumulations in his lungs for several months and was released from a hospital Saturday.

Tullio and Grazier said Caliguri was hesitant at first to join the session because of his Roman Catholic faith.

"I said prayers are prayers and we have to have the Lord cure us. Where it comes from is immaterial. I told him I thought it was a great idea," said Tullio, who is also a Roman Catholic.

"I know Dick did it because of Lou. They were very close," Mrs. Caliguri said. "I remember sitting around a table and holding hands with each other. They were both very inspirational to both Dick and I," she said of the Hunters.

According to Grazier, Caliguri described his illness in detail. Tullio added his own description of the disease but was impatient to pray as the group talked about faith healing, positive thinking, God and the devil.

Soon, they stood in prayer in a circle around the mayors, touching the mayors' arms, shoulders and backs as the Hunters prayed.

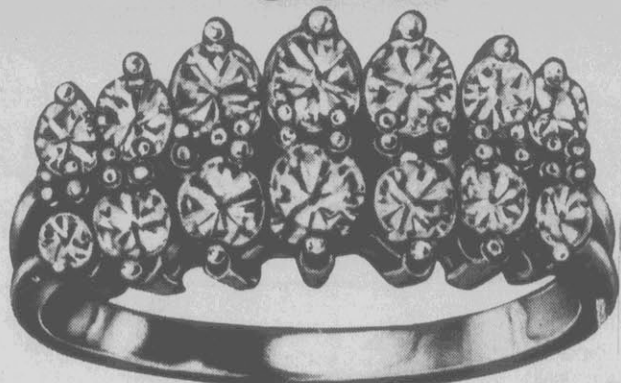

Caliguri said he was trying to "get this out of me by just concentrating because I've read books on how people have gotten better through their own tenacity ... and positive thinking," according to Grazier.

Tullio described the session as "wonderful."

"I have become more religious as a result of my sickness," Tullio said. "Asking the Lord to cure you and having everyone pray for you means a lot."

North Jurors In 12th Day As Media Press Fight For Secret Document

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The news media should ask the Pentagon rather than the judge to give them access to a classified document being used in Oliver North's trial even though jurors already have access to the material, the Justice Department says.

News organizations and the government were struggling over the document as the jury of nine women and three men began its 12th day of deliberations today on a dozen criminal charges against the former White House aide in the Iran-Contra affair.

The document being disputed, classified "top secret," summarizes highly sensitive intelligence intercepts of a November 1985 CIA-assisted shipment of Hawk missiles to Iran. The intercepts were collected by the National Security Agency, an arm of the Defense Department.

Other documents describing a secret deal between the U.S. and Honduras over aid to the Contras prompted a House subcommittee chairman to say he would hold up more than $700 million in foreign aid for Central America until the State Department answers questions about the arrangement.

"I don't expect to recommend any money for Central America until we have some questions answered," Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., chairman of the House Appropriations subcommittee on foreign operations, said Wednesday.

Those documents show that on Feb. 19, 1985, President Reagan approved a plan to give Honduras "incentives" to support the Contras after Congress stopped U.S. military assistance to the rebels. Major elements of the plan were carried out, documents show.

"The North documents would seem to lead to some very troubling conclusions about the use of foreign aid to persuade aid recipients to provide foreign aid to the Contras at a time when providing aid to the Contras was against official American government policy," Obey said.

The intercepts sought by news organizations provide information on which officials knew Hawk missiles were being shipped to Iran. North used the document — known as a stipulation — to show that late CIA Director William Casey and then-deputy national security adviser John Poindexter knew of the shipments. They hid that knowledge from Congress.

The Justice Department said in a court filing Wednesday that The Associated Press and nine other news organizations should try to obtain the document through the Defense Department.

"A trial judge simply does not possess the authority unilaterally to release such classified information to the public or to the media," the Justice Department said.

The department said a trial court is prevented from ruling on release of classified materials when regulations exist elsewhere for obtaining their release, in this case the Defense Department.

The 10 news organizations went to court April 21 seeking disclosure. U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell refused on April 22 to release the document publicly, saying it is classified. The news organizations took the case to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

At the appeals court's direction, Gesell is building a record spelling out the reasons for not disclosing the material and will rule on whether the news media has standing in the courts to seek access to it.

Mulroney Opens Embassy In D.C.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney opened his country's new, $76 million embassy — the first ever built on Pennsylvania Avenue — and pledged to "celebrate our kinship and respect our differences" with the United States.

The dedication of the modernistic, six-story building of Ontario limestone and unpolished aluminum was Mulroney's first task when he arrived late Wednesday from Boston for a two-day visit.

The prime minister had separate meetings scheduled today with President Bush and Senate leaders. Embassy officials said he will focus chiefly on Bush's legislative proposals to curb acid rain, a major, unresolved irritant in U.S.-Canadian relations during President Reagan's eight years in office.

The embassy was occupied in March, a year behind schedule, at a cost of $76 million, nearly double the original estimate. But its troubles were forgotten Wednesday evening as Mulroney and Secretary of State James A. Baker III paid tribute to the enduring friendship between their two countries.

"The maple leaf comes to Pennsylvania Avenue," Mulroney declared.

Baker said the new embassy "conveys the warmth and openness of the people of Canada" and promised to give U.S.-Canadian ties "the personal attention this friendship deserves."

With a smiling Baker at his elbow, Mulroney then took a pair of scissors and snipped a royal blue ribbon draped across the main entrance to the chancery building. Together, they went up to Ambassador Derek Burney's penthouse office suite to admire the view below.

Their audience of several hundred dignitaries included congressional leaders, Supreme Court Justice Harry A. Blackmun, CIA Director William Webster and Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan.

They feasted on shrimp, beef and salmon canapes and iced bottles of Canadian ale while kilted bagpipers and a military band from Ottawa performed on the courtyard outside.

The dramatic building, designed by Vancouver architect Arthur Erickson, is the only foreign embassy situated on Pennsylvania Avenue, the ceremonial route linking the Capitol and the White House.

Standing on a 1.2-acre plot opposite the National Gallery of Art and close to Capitol Hill, the embassy site was chosen to symbolize the close historic ties between the United States and Canada.

Bush Rules Out More Arms Talks

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Kenneth L. Adelman, who was the Reagan administration's arms control director, says the United States should never negotiate a reduction in short-range nuclear missiles with the Soviet Union.

"For two reasons," Adelman said Wednesday in an interview. "They have been an essential element in deterrence since the early 1960s. No. 2, there is no way to verify whether the missiles will have nuclear or conventional or chemical munitions."

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl has demanded that the United States negotiate reductions in the missiles with the Soviet Union. Kohl is also resisting U.S. and British efforts to more than triple the range of NATO's Lance missiles to about 250 miles.

But Bush on Wednesday ruled out negotiations with the Soviets on short-range nuclear missiles. The White House put the best face on the dispute by calling it a sign of NATO's vitality.

Adelman, who was the U.S. arms control director from 1983 to 1987, said the Bush administration should propose to Kohl that the missiles be modernized and then the U.S. arsenal of short-range weapons could be reduced by about 1,000 from its current level of 4,500.

But Adelman, who was an enthusiastic supporter of the 1987 treaty to ban U.S. and Soviet intermediate-range nuclear missiles, said the United States should never negotiate to reduce or — another Kohl goal — to eliminate the Lances.

"Never," Adelman said. "Never under any circumstance. It is unwise and it's unverifiable."

He said the United States would comply with a ban on short-range missiles. But, Adelman said, "we don't always know if the Soviets would comply" and it is impossible to distinguish between nuclear and non-nuclear tactical missiles.

Paul H. Nitze, a senior adviser on arms control in the Reagan administration, told The New York Times this week that President Bush was making a mistake in refusing to open talks with the Soviets on short-range nuclear missiles.

Nitze said such negotiations would provide an opportunity to eliminate a large Soviet advantage.

Adelman said he disagreed, but added "there is nothing wrong in his speaking out" on the subject.

Since leaving his post Adelman has been writing, teaching and serving as vice president of the Institute for Contemporary Studies, a public policy research group in San Francisco.

With Bush's summit meeting with 15 allied leaders looming at month's end, efforts by Norway and Canada to broker a compromise did not meet with immediate success. Through his spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater, the president insisted the Lance missiles must be upgraded to deter Soviet attack.

Bush told visiting Norwegian Prime Minister Gro Harlem Brundtland that "entering into arms control negotiations on short-range nuclear forces with the Soviet Union would be a mistake," Fitzwater said.

Having No Legs Hasn't Slowed Cathy Scruggs

By Debra Lester
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOILING SPRINGS, S.C. — Life has always been different for Cathy Scruggs.

Like the time at school in Havre de Grace, Md., when she fell and broke her leg. She went to the wood shop instead of the infirmary.

Or the fact that, for most of the first five years of her life, she lived in Johns Hopkins Hospital and didn't know she had a sister and brother.

Mrs. Scruggs is a double amputee at the knees. But it hasn't kept her down. "I've done things that people with legs haven't."

A Bette Midler look-alike, Mrs. Scruggs has the wisecracking enthusiasm of that singer-turned-actress.

She was born without tibias, the long bones in the legs. Her right leg was amputated when she was 2 years old, and her left leg was amputated when she was 5.

The condition is hereditary and, despite experimental surgeries, doctors are unsure of the cause.

Mrs. Scruggs' mother had the same condition, but in only one leg. She, too, underwent amputation at age 5. She was the only one of the four children in her family with the condition.

Mrs. Scruggs' brother did not inherit the problem, but her younger sister, Cindy, did. Cindy, too, has a wooden leg.

Mrs. Scruggs met Cindy by accident when their beds were rolled together at Johns Hopkins during a rearrangement by hospital personnel. Their mother came to visit and found the two girls playing together.

"It wasn't a conscious thing that we weren't told about each other. It was just, when I was home, Cindy was in the hospital. The doctors timed it that way for my mother," she recalls.

Mrs. Scruggs has a son who did not inherit the condition, but her daughter, Bambi Sue, did. "She's just like me, a double amputee," Mrs. Scruggs says.

Bambi, an 8-year-old whose photos display an impish smile, also is missing three fingers on her right hand. Bambi already was in school when her mother moved to Spartanburg, so she has remained in Maryland with her grandmother.

Mrs. Scruggs well remembers her first glimpse of Bambi in the delivery room. "For the first time in my life I had to look at her the way my mom looked at me. I pulled down the blanket and she was just like me. I cried, and was thrilled — I had so much I could teach her!"

She wanted to teach her daughter that she need not be "handicapped." Mrs. Scruggs water skis, dances and has traveled alone to Paris. She and her husband, Leslie, are planning a cruise to the Bahamas for their third wedding anniversary.

Leslie Scruggs, a native of Spartanburg County, was working in Havre de Grace when he met his future wife. He lived next door to her. "I knew her for two months before I found out she had wooden legs. It didn't matter to me."

Mrs. Scruggs says that she just assumes everybody knows about her legs.

The Scruggses share a small, cozy house in Boiling Springs with four cats, a tarantula and a squirrel named Tac. The house has had no special adaptations for her handicap, but Mrs. Scruggs' car has.

At 33, she has just learned to drive a car with hand controls. She never wanted to drive before, but not because of her legs. She'd seen "blood-on-the-highways" movies at age 12 and it killed her desire to drive, she says.

The South Carolina Department of Vocational Rehabilitation provided the hand controls for the car and helped Mrs. Scruggs get her job as receptionist at the Spartanburg Animal Shelter.

Un-TV Anushka, Alex And V-Slicer Push Camp To New Heights

By James Endrst
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

I've seen the best that prime time has to offer, and I've had it up to here with Bill Cosby.

It's time for some revolutionary television.

I want my Un-TV.

Maybe it seems a little crazy, watching program-length commercials as a form of entertainment — something analogous to the beginning of the end of TV civilization as we know it, the embodiment of our worst fears, the culmination of years of diminished expectations.

One could understand, perhaps, why hundreds of local television stations and cable outlets around the country would run 30-minute commercials hawking all manner of kitchen gadgets, get-rich-quick schemes and cures for baldness.

Advertisers pay them anywhere from a few hundred dollars to tens of thousands of dollars to do it, depending on the time of day (or night) and potential viewership.

But why would anyone in his right mind want to watch this stuff?

Just watch "Anushka" or "The V-Slicer" or "Learn To Play the Piano Overnight."

Now that's entertainment.

Really, don't make the mistake of selling paid programming short.

There is no forgetting the face (though his name escapes me) of the star of "V-Slicer," a show in which a Germanesque gigolo type slices and dices his way through our hearts with a miracle invention that, according to testimonials on the show, has people around the country giving their food processors the big heave-ho.

But two shows, more than any others, stand out as all-time camp classics in the Un-TV genre: "Learn To Play the Piano Overnight" and "Anushka: Straight Talk Cellulite Free."

"Learn To Play the Piano," like any piece of paid programming, has its resident star spokesman — in this case Alex Karras, who looks like he's under heavy sedation for much of the show. In reality, Karras plays the dual role of host and skeptic.

With arched eyebrow and the knowledge that his formidable reputation is on the line, Karras tells instructor Patty Carlson that he has his doubts about the program.

Carlson is not surprised. Others have doubted her and been convinced.

"But tell me," she says solemnly to Karras, "Do you really want to play?"

"With all my heart and soul," says Karras, that big, tender lug.

But before we get to the final scene in which Karras, pipe contemplatively clenched in teeth, noodles on the keys, we are offered a recital from one of Carlson's star pupils — Barbi Benton.

After some Hollywood kissy-kissy, Benton (Hugh Hefner's girlfriend of long ago who is billed here as a performer-composer) plays a cut from her album "Kinetic Voyage."

Later, Carlson's album gets some rave reviews from music legends such as Mac Davis, who wrote, "I was so excited after watching this video that I had my piano tuned, new strings and all!"

Sonny Bono simply called it "sensational."

It's quite a show.

But it's nothing compared with "Anushka: Straight Talk Cellulite Free."

It begins with Anushka herself, who exudes a regal disposition and a continental knowingness that takes your breath away.

"Straight Talk" is really a show within a show. Like many paid programs, the viewer is lulled into a sense of false TV security.

Erin Gray, known to TV audiences by her "It's like no other store in the world" pitches for Bloomingdale's, and for co-starring roles in "Buck Rogers in the 21st Century" and "Silver Spoons," is set up as a pseudo talk-show host where Anushka and her anti-cellulite program is the main topic of conversation.

Testimonials are a big part of the Anushka show, as they are on any paid program worth its money-back guarantee. And, like other shows, there is frequent mention of articles in major national publications that "mention" Anushka.

At times, it's a lot like watching CBN or paid religious broadcasts; everyone in the audience looks like a wide-eyed victim of insomnia. Each testimony from the audience drips with grateful thanks for the woman who made all those unsightly pre- and post-liposuction bumps disappear from hips, thighs and buttocks. (Many of which, unfortunately, we get to see in the flesh.)

When Anushka, her earrings and jewelry flashing, and carrying herself like royalty, appears, she is introduced as "the woman who wouldn't take no for an answer when people told her there was no way to get rid of cellulite."

After Gray gets the audience wild with applause, to settle down, she asks Anushka why she decided to fight the cellulite disbelievers.

"Really, I did it for myself," says Anushka, not that we ever doubted it, dahling.

Anushka, however, didn't forget the little people — the ones that can't afford the Anushka Institute in New York — so she put together a do-it-yourself kit for home use so, she titters knowingly, the rest of us "don't have to pay the high price of New York rent."

What Anushka does better than anyone else on paid programming, however, is sell confidence.

If you doubt Anushka, and there is no reason you can see that you should, there is Gray's breathless cheerleading. "Ummm, wow, well," she remarks after seeing a video.

"That was a really great explanation," she says after a doctor's explanation of how seaweed — a key ingredient — is used in the Anushka formula.

Even Gray, however, must seem like she needs to be sold, even though she smiles and oohs and ahhs without a break.

She wonders whether this is just run-of-the-mill seaweed.

Stifling a gasp, no doubt, Anushka responds, "Absolutely not. We use a very special seaweed...."

While other shows are heavy on the life-is-short-what-are-you-waiting-for pitch, Anushka is an artist. She goes for the soul.

"I am so certain that my anti-cellulite program will work for you," she says, and reminds all who will listen to remember, "You did absolutely nothing to make cellulite appear, but now you can make it disappear."

Do I need to do any more selling than that?

Tough Shoplifting Law Nabs The Innocent, Too

Dear Abby: Some time ago I saw a letter in your column from a mother who discovered that her daughter had shoplifted a garment while they were out shopping together. The mother immediately returned the garment to the store.

Here in Illinois, anyone who is found to be in possession of merchandise without proof of sale (a sales slip) can be prosecuted for stealing! I learned this the hard way: I bought a pair of slacks at a major department store. They did not fit properly, so I put them into a bag and took them back to the store. (I neglected to place the sales slip in the bag.) I gave the bag to a salesperson in that department while I went into the dressing room to try on some other slacks that were displayed on a rack.

Dear Abby

When I emerged from the dressing room, I was arrested — for shoplifting! The salesperson had looked into the bag, saw the slacks but no sales slip, and assumed that I had shoplifted them.

I was sentenced to a "theft deterrent" program. With me in the class was a young woman in her 30s who owned her own printing business, a matronly grandmother and a fireman. The young woman had tried on a jacket, then walked to the shoe department at the other end of the store to find some matching shoes. She was arrested in the shoe department for "attempting to leave the store" without paying for the jacket!

The grandmother had been grocery shopping. "Security" followed her home (she lived a block from the store) and arrested her for stealing the shopping cart. (She had carted her groceries home in this manner many times and had always returned the shopping carts, as she had intended to return this one.)

The fireman had gone into a hardware store to return a defective tire gauge. He placed the defective gauge on a shelf and helped himself to a new one because he did not want to stand in a long line at the register. He was arrested for stealing as he was leaving the store.

Abby, I am not a thief, and neither were the others who were arrested for stealing. Our only crime was ignorance of the law.

Another valuable bit of information: Most stores have hidden cameras, one-way mirrors and well-trained undercover security personnel who receive bonuses for turning in shoppers (and salespeople) who steal.

I hope a word to the wise is sufficient. — Busted In Illinois

Dear Busted: So do I. Thanks for an enlightening letter. However, because laws vary from state to state, everyone should be aware of the laws in his or her state.

Dear Abby: This may come as a shock to some people, but when a person comes home after putting in eight hours of work, maybe, just maybe, he or she needs to sit down and rest. Alone!

Company can be a welcome event occasionally, but not every afternoon. This is directed especially to those who do not work and who arrive at my door about 4 p.m. every day. You know who you are! — Kentucky Woman, Paducah

Dear Kentucky Woman: The problem is not them, it's you. People who lack the courage to say "Enough!" had better be prepared to be walked on. Because they will be.

Confidential To Disappointed In New Haven: If you pull a few wires while your children are growing up, you may not have to pull any strings to get them into a top-notch college. (Suggested wires to pull: television, stereo and telephone.)

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA. 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Living In Music's High-Decibel Age

One of the side effects of giving birth to three yuppies has been a ringing in the ears and an automatic "Huh?" to everything that is being said.

Parents tend to talk louder, have more headaches and are quite adept at reading lips. This is because we raised children in music's high-decibel age. "If your teeth don't hurt, man, it's not music."

I cannot think of a single parent who has not come out of this period with some physical damage to his hearing. I can still see President Reagan cupping his hand to his ear when a question was asked as he was preparing to leave on his helicopter. Not only could he not hear the question, he couldn't even hear the helicopter blades.

And why do you think President George Bush told a generation of voters, "Read my lips. No new taxes"? What else could they do? They, too, raised kids in the '60s, '70s and '80s.

The old line, "It's 11 o'clock. Do you know where your children are?" is wasted on me. Of course I know where they are. I always know. I start hearing the muffled bass from my son's car radio when he is four miles away. That is when I start to set the table. At two miles, I put food on the table, and by the time he hits our driveway, I am hanging onto the dishes to keep them from shattering.

Consequently, public sounds have had to be hiked up to compensate for our loss of hearing. Television commercials are booted up so you can hear them with the bathroom door closed. The sound in movie houses is increased. Emergency sirens sound like a missile being launched in order to compete with car radios. My smoke alarm would make a dead man get up and move to another room.

I remember the first time I ever saw a boom box. I was looking at a kid who probably wouldn't stoop to pick a dirty sock off the floor if it spoke to him, yet he was balancing a 20-pound radio on his shoulder complete with speakers, compact-disc player and dual tapes. Kids have been known to put them on wheels like luggage and drag them behind them.

I read that a young man from Maryland converted his Nissan into a "boom car" with no less than eight speakers. He cranks up his radio — usually on a crowded street — and the windows rattle, the roof shakes, and heads turn as the music blasts.

"With this car," he said, "I can start a party. I turn up the stereo and it draws the people." I'll just bet it does.

It was only a matter of time before a state passed a your-car-is-too-loud ordinance. California has such a law. The only problem is they would have to shoot off a cannon to get the driver's attention.

New Monitor Alerts Cardiologists If Patients Begin Having Problems

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PENSACOLA, Fla. — A briefcase-sized monitor that plugs into a telephone outlet will let doctors for the first time not only monitor but also treat heart patients even before an ambulance can arrive.

The first "MDphone," developed by MEDphone Inc. of Paramus, N.J., was installed recently in the home of a 72-year-old patient who had bypass surgery, said Dr. Edwin Rogers, director of cardiac care at Sacred Heart Hospital here.

Rogers said his patient will have the MDphone for 90 days.

"This is the kind of thing you hope would not be used on the patient," he said. "The first three months of a heart attack are critical because this is when a patient is at highest risk of having another cardiac episode."

The MDphone is plugged into a wall jack. If a problem arises, the patient or family member just opens the case and attaches electrode pads. The machine automatically dials the hospital emergency room, setting off alarms. The base unit in the hospital retrieves the patient's records and displays them on one computer screen while another shows the electrocardiogram.

If the patient develops a dangerously erratic heartbeat, known as cardiac arrhythmia, a doctor at Sacred Heart could immediately defibrillate the patient by signalling the device to deliver an electric shock.

Telemetry systems that give data on patients at remote locations have been around for years, but the MDphone is the first that allows treatment in this way, said MEDphone President S. Eric Wachtel.

Sacred Heart and two other hospitals, the Wilmington-Christiana Medical Center of Delaware and Jewish Hospital in St. Louis, cooperated in development of the MDphone, Wachtel said. The first installation in St. Louis is expected in about two weeks. Each home unit costs $7,500 and base units installed in hospital emergency rooms are $30,000 each.

Teachers Plan Meeting

proposal submitted by state Superintendent Bobby Etheridge. It decided that the $75 million to $80 million that would be needed to fund that pay increase should be used for expanding the career ladder program that has been proposed to reward teachers for superior performance.

Ms. Wooten said that "locally, we have not adopted a position" on the new salary proposal.

Initially, there was some concern over the 21-step plan as opposed to a 30-step plan, she said. But longevity benefits will begin after the 21st step and would carry teachers through until their retirement.

At the state level, NCAE sees the new salary schedule as a compromise with other education groups, Ms. Wooten said. But, "we will continue to back our own salary bill until this is formally introduced."

NCAE still rejects the career ladder program, Ms. Wooten said. It will consider legislation that would allow school districts to decide if they want the career ladder program, she said.

State Rep. Ed Warren said he needs to review the new salary plan before making a judgment on it.

"I was satisfied with it" in its original form, he said. But, "I understand there was a slight change. They're getting that bill to me today, and I need to look at it before I comment."

Hart

response to Hart, which was written on MADD letterhead.

"If the leadership of our youth cannot set good examples, in all aspects of life, how should we expect the youth to reciprocate," she said in the letter. "Secondly, the whole community is affected as well. High school students and their parents look at this as a reflection of the university. These students may be considering ECU as their institution for higher education, and these incidents could influence the decision they make."

"Also, younger students come in contact with these coaches through athletic camps; they come to respect and admire them, and when these unfortunate situations arise such as these arrests, they may come to the conclusion that it's OK to drink and drive."

"Lastly, these men broke the law! Instead of being responsible and allowing someone else to do the driving, they endangered the lives of themselves and innocent people. Thank God no accident occurred, and no one was hurt or killed — this time!" Mrs. Svensson said in the letter.

Mrs. Svensson said she sent copies of the letter to ECU basketball Coach Mike Steele, ECU football Coach Bill Lewis and ECU Chancellor Richard R. Eakin, who was out of town today according to his office and unavailable for comment. She said she has not received any response from them.

Mrs. Svensson took over as president of the Pitt MADD chapter in January, after serving as first vice president for two years. She said MADD would not reveal the number of dues-paying members in the county, but it was under 100. She said she has received 15 new members in the last two months.

There are about 500 contributors in the county, she said, but all of those are not formal members of MADD.

Kelly's court date was continued last month until June 6, and Mrs. Svensson said she will probably attend the trial. Benetti's first court appearance is set for May 16.

Both men were arrested after midnight, and both recorded blood-alcohol levels over the legal limit for impairment of .10. Kelly blew a .19 and a .20 on the Breathalyzer, and Benetti blew a .16 and a .15. At the time of their arrests, both men were also driving Chevrolet automobiles donated to the university by North Carolina car dealers.

Rhino Poachers

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Game wardens will patrol the Brahmaputra River in speedboats to thwart poachers who have killed 11 rhinoceroses at Kaziranga National Park so far this year, news reports today said.

United News of India also said 80 platforms had been built at the park to help wildlife escape from floods during the rainy season.

Last fall 1,050 deer, 44 rhinoceroses and two elephants drowned at the wildlife reserve when the Brahmaputra overran its banks.

Kaziranga is famous for its herd of about 1,000 rare one-horned rhinoceroses. The animal faced extinction before the sanctuary was established in 1926.

Five Die In Helicopter Crash

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DIGNE, France — A U.S. military helicopter making a night training flight clipped a high-tension power line and crashed in southern France, killing five Marines, officials said today.

The UH-1 Huey, from the amphibious assault ship Guadalcanal currently in port in Toulon, exploded when it hit a hillside at about 9:45 p.m. Wednesday near Rougon, a village 500 miles southeast of Paris.

A local resident saw the explosion and called firefighters.

Local police said all five men aboard were killed.

In Washington, the Marine Corps said the Huey was one of two conducting a navigation training exercise and that the lead helicopter crashed. The other aircraft was not involved in the accident, the corps said.

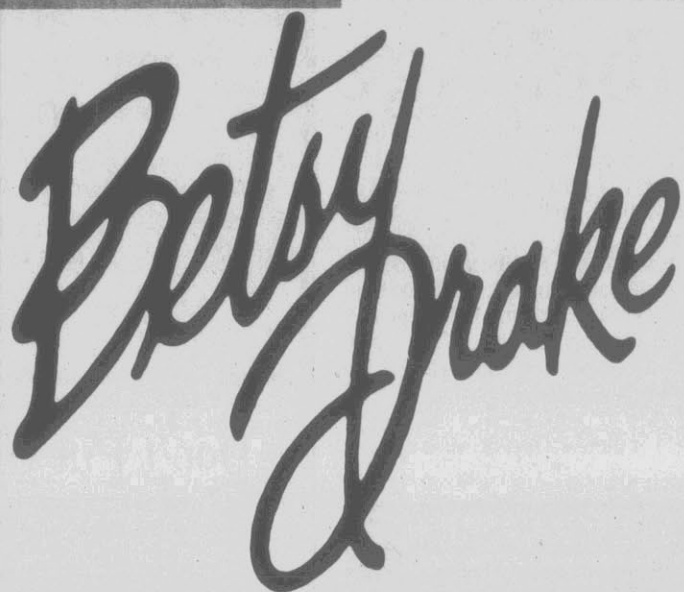

The corps said the pilots were using night-vision goggles but that there was no reason to suspect the goggles played a role in the accident.

However, a marine official in Washington said on condition of anonymity that the goggles do not permit pilots to see power lines. The Army recently ordered a safety inspection of its night-vision goggles after several crashes.

The helicopters involved in the exercise were assigned to Marine Medium Helicopter Squadron 162 based at the New River, N.C., Marine Corps Air Station.

The names of the victims were to be released in Washington once their relatives have been notified, the corps said.

The helicopter was one of 13 taking part in France-U.S. training exercises in southern France from April 29 to May 19, said Peter Antico, a spokesman for the U.S. Embassy in Paris. The exercises also involve 1,200 troops operating from the Canjuers military base.

Jabbar Ignites L.A. Rally

'Old Man' Scores 22 Points As Lakers Sweep Blazers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

For someone who has announced his impending retirement, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar seems determined to hang around as long as possible.

The 42-year-old center, in his 20th and final NBA season, scored 22 points and ignited a third-quarter Los Angeles rally as the Lakers beat the Portland Trail Blazers 116-108 to sweep their best-of-5 first-round playoff series. Los Angeles is 18-0 in the first round since the 16-team playoff format started in 1984.

"Our starting lineup was superb," Lakers coach Pat Riley said. "Kareem had one of the best games he's had in a long time."

In other Wednesday night playoff action, Chicago beat Cleveland 101-94 and Houston downed Seattle 126-107. After a day off today, the playoffs resume Friday night with Cleveland at Chicago, Seattle at Houston and Atlanta at Milwaukee. The Bucks lead that series 2-1. Byron Scott scored 25 points and James Worthy added 24 for the Lakers, who have won the last two NBA championships.

Abdul-Jabbar scored nine points in the third period after Portland took a 54-49 halftime lead. Magic Johnson added 17 points and seven assists for the Lakers. Terry Porter scored 24 of his 29 points in the first half for the Blazers, who were swept for the first time in the franchise's history. Clyde Drexler added 25 points.

"Kareem has been working on his shot during practice and it's paying off," Johnson said. "He really looked good. It helps the whole team to see, 'OK, he's here; he can give us this kind of game, especially on the road.'"

"That's the shot I've tried to take all my career," Abdul-Jabbar said. "I'm going to try to get back to that. Every time that they guarded me one-on-one, I tried to take the best shot I could."

Portland coach Rick Adelman praised the Lakers.

"The way they got ready for this series and the way they approached it, it just shows the kind of coach he (Riley) is and the kind of people they are," Adelman said.

Bulls 101, Cavaliers 94
Michael Jordan led Chicago with 44 points, including four clutch free throws in the final seconds, as the Bulls took a 2-1 lead over Cleveland. Jordan scored 15 points in the first seven minutes of the third quarter and the Bulls held leads of 22 points in the first half and 16 in the second half, then had to fight off a late surge by the Cavaliers.

John Williams kept Cleveland in the running by scoring 16 of his 22 points in the fourth quarter. The Cavaliers closed within 91-88 with 2:43 to play, but Jordan converted a three-point play, stole the ball and went in for a slam dunk that made it 96-88. Cleveland got within 97-94, but Jordan's four free throws in the last 21 seconds proved insurmountable.

Jordan opened the Bulls' second-half scoring with a three-point play and then connected on another with 1:53 remaining and Cleveland within three points of the lead.

"At the start of the third quarter, everyone was looking for something to happen," Jordan said. "When I got the three-point play it got us started. I asserted my leadership."

"The key to them getting back in the second half was offensive rebounding," Chicago coach Doug Collins said. "Our defense was great up to the second quarter when we had them down 45-23. I had to calm our guys down."

"But any time you have a big lead in this league, you know they're going to make a run at you."

Collins singled out Larry Nance for praise.

"Williams played great for them in the fourth quarter, but Larry Nance in the first half wouldn't let them slip out of the game," Collins said. "That shows great leadership."

Rockets 126, Sonics 107

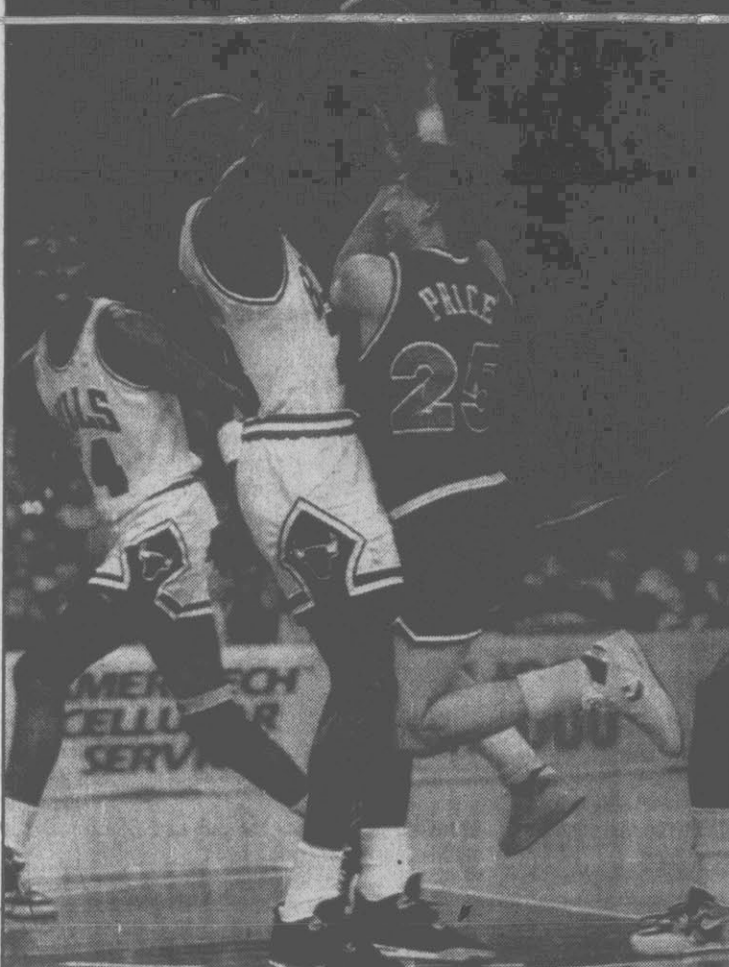

Sleepy Floyd, noted for his clutch playoff performances, scored 22 of his 28 points in the first half as Houston beat Seattle for the first time in three playoff games.

Floyd, who had six assists and hit a club playoff record three straight 3-point baskets, got the Rockets off to a fast start with 10 first-quarter points as Houston used an 11-0 spurt to take control. Dale Ellis, playing despite a broken nose that forced him to wear a protective brace, led Seattle with 26 points.

Akeem Olajuwon scored 19 points and led the Rockets with 18 rebounds. Otis Thorpe added 23 points.

Last season, Floyd scored 42 points in a first-round loss to the Dallas Mavericks and two years ago he hit 51 points as a Golden State Warrior against the Los Angeles Lakers.

"We never lost our confidence," Floyd said. "We almost won the first game, and we thought that we could win once we got home. I felt if we could get home and start rebounding, we could take advantage of the situation."

Rose Brews Recipe For Baseball Success

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

It takes a number of key ingredients to brew a top high school baseball team if you follow the Rose High recipe.

Start with a strong youth baseball program which stresses the fundamentals of the game and reinforces them along each step, from Little League to Prep League to Babe Ruth. Make sure you get the top athletes interested early, and keep them involved during the summer months.

Once the players get to the high school level, add in a healthy amount of pitching and defense from day one, and then sit back and reap the benefits.

Sound easier said than done? Probably so, but it's not a bad blueprint, according to Rose coach Ronald Vincent, who has guided the Rampants to a 15-0 mark and a number-five national ranking by the USA Today Super 25 High School Baseball Poll. Rose puts its ranking on the line today at Rocky Mount.

The Rampants, who were the state 4-A runnerup last year, are rolling through their second straight regular season undefeated, despite losing a number of key players off last year's team, such as standout pitcher/designated hitter Tom Moye, power-hitting first baseman Dave Daniels and catcher Axel Smith.

But Rose has hardly missed a beat this spring. Pitchers Walter "Pee Wee" Gatlin and Maurice Hines along with catcher Grant Harmon have stepped right up from the JV program into starting roles.

"The biggest thing is their summer recreation program is probably one of the best in the state," Northern Nash coach Rod Ramsey said. "In Greenville, it's one program. In other places, it's different. There are more (different) organizations."

"Defensively, they are stronger (this year). They don't hit as many home runs, but they have more base-hit power. They are fast, and they're aggressive. They know what it takes to win."

Only two teams — Northern Nash and D.H. Conley — have come close to knocking off Rose.

Northern Nash has lost twice to the Rampants, but gave them a scare the second time April 28 in a 6-3 loss. Conley, behind a key pitching performance by Brian Bullock, took Rose to extra-innings before losing, 5-4, in the Pitt County Easter Tournament March 29.

Other than that, Rose has rolled.

"You have three or four factors," said veteran Greene Central coach Jim Fulghum, whose team dropped a 9-4 decision to Rose early in the season. "They have a lot of returning players off last year's team. They don't miss the boys they lost that much. Defensively, they have the best team."

"Their infield and outfield are much stronger than anybody I've seen, and I've seen a lot of teams in eastern North Carolina and the Raleigh area play," Fulghum said. "That comes from experience from last year, and they have right many upper classmen."

Rose still boasts a lot of offensive power. Six of their players are hitting over .400, led by senior outfielders David Leisten (.492) and Timmy Moore (.473). Both Leisten and Moore will play baseball for East Carolina next year.

Vincent said one of the keys for Rose is the program attracts the best athletes on campus, kids that in other areas often end up playing sports other than baseball.

"The baseball programs in Greenville attract the good athletes, like Dave Daniels, Grant Harmon and Tim Moore," Vincent said. "In a lot of places, it would be just football and track."

To be sure, Rose doesn't have the pitching it had last year. The ace of the staff, though, is senior Jamie Brewington, 6-0 on the season. For his career, Brewington is 26-0.

He throws hard, and when he's in the strike zone, he's hard to hit. But he can also be erratic and at times pitches himself into jams. So far, though, Brewington has been able to pitch himself out of tight spots with timely strikeouts.

Gatlin and Hines are Rose's other main starters. They have been effective, but both are inexperienced. At catcher, Harmon and Clark have potential, but also lack experience.

"Their weaknesses are behind the plate and the consistency of the

Ranking Not Easy

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Would you believe only four teams in the entire United States have a better high school baseball team than Greenville Rose?

Well, that's the opinion of Dave Krider, the consulting high school editor for USA Today, who has the immense task of ranking the top 25 prep baseball teams in the country each week.

"It took two months to do this," he said. "I started first in January and talked to many of the top college scouts and pro scouts and came up with a list of states that played the best

Clemons, Vines Pace Conley Win, 7-0

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

With starting pitcher Travis Clemons shackling West Carteret offensively, D.H. Conley cleanup hitter Kervin Vines decided to take care of his own responsibilities and give his team some breathing room.

Vines cracked a two-run homer, only the second roundtripper by a Viking this year, to break the game open in the fifth inning and help the Vikings roll past the Patriots, 7-0, in a Coastal Conference baseball game Wednesday.

Conley held a 4-0 lead midway through the fifth, but Vines' home run provided the clincher.

"I've been in a slump lately," Vines said. "I've been in the number-four spot, but I haven't been coming through lately. I was overdue. I needed some confidence."

Vines hit his homer off relief pitcher John Cress, who had just come on in relief of starter Brinkley Willis.

"The pitcher before him struck me out and I was sitting in the dug-out thinking about it," he said. "I knew I had to come back and prove something to myself."

The shot came off a 3-2 pitch and easily cleared the leftfield fence.

Conley went ahead early in the game, 2-0, courtesy of two unearned runs. Gray Mills reached on an error in the bottom of the first. Brian Bullock followed with a single before Mills scored off a fielder's choice by Clemons. Bullock then scored off an error for a 2-0 Conley lead.

"That's been happening to us all year long," said West Carteret coach Mark Cockrell, a former ECU baseball player and assistant coach at Rose. "It isn't like it's the first time. You go out and get in a hole and it takes you out of your game plan. Then you have to play catch up."

And that was too much for the Patriots to do as Clemons scattered three hits over six innings with six strikeouts to pick up the win.

"I thought early in the ball game, they could have hurt him some," Wilson said. "They had a runner on second, but he didn't really give up many hits."

The Patriots had their chances. In the second, they had men on second and third with two outs, but failed to take advantage. Then in the third, they had a man on second with one out, but Clemons fanned the next two batters to end the threat.

"We were in position to get back in the game," Cockrell said. "We just couldn't get the big hit."

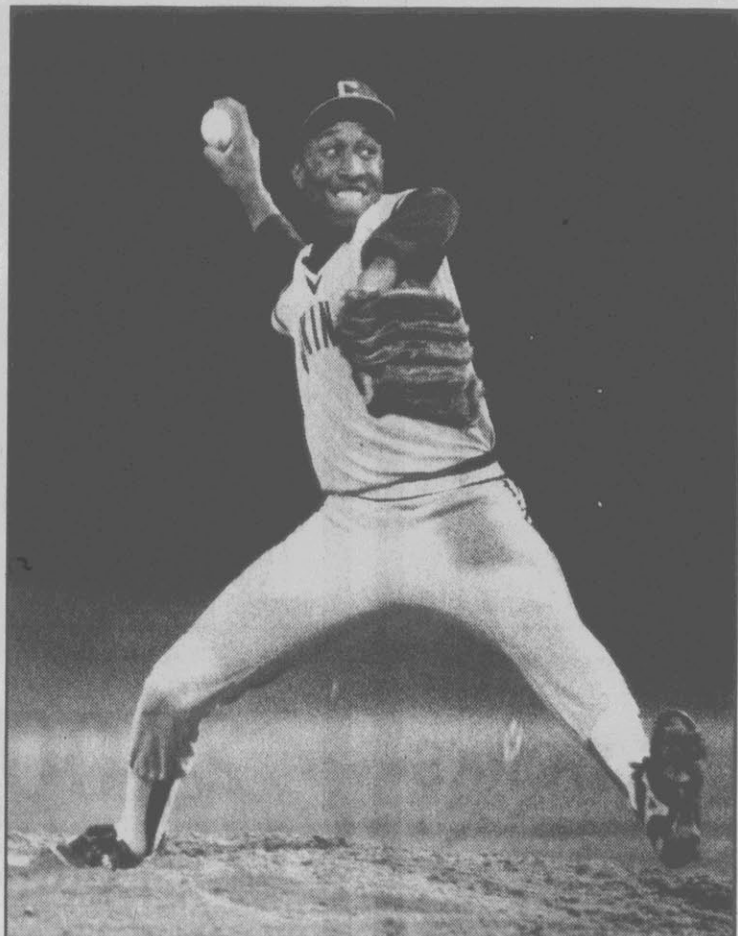

Those two innings turned out to be West Carteret's only real threats. After allowing the man to reach second in the third, Clemons retired eight straight batters before a runner reached off an error in the sixth. He then retired three in a row in the before giving way to Hal Conger, who pitched one-hit relief in the seventh to close out the game.

Conley, meanwhile, increased its advantage in the fourth when Clemons singled, went to second on an error and scored off a fielder's choice to make it 3-0. Mills opened the fifth with a reach off an error, stole second, went to third on a passed ball and scored when the shortstop misplayed a short shot into left centerfield.

Vines then added his two-run homer to decide the issue.

"He poked it too," Wilson said. "Believe it or not, this year, that's only our second home run. Three years ago, we hit 30. It's crazy."

Conley moved to 9-4 overall and 5-2 in the conference.

Mariners Continue Upward Climb

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEATTLE — Even skeptics of the Seattle Mariners are becoming "Lefebvre Believers" as the team approaches the .500 mark.

The rookie manager, Jim Lefebvre, is solely responsible for bringing in 33-year-old Jeffrey Leonard, who is hitting .310 with a club-leading eight homers and 24 RBI.

With Leonard and other new Mariners Ken Griffey Jr. and Erik Hanson leading the way, Seattle is only one game under .500. It has never finished a season at .500 or above.

Griffey is hitting .313, and Hanson has a 3-2 record with a 2.31 earned run average. Hanson was the winning pitcher Wednesday against Detroit.

"I think right now we're really starting to see the team jell," Lefebvre said in an interview Wednesday.

"We're kind of settling into the season. Everyone is kind of settling into what we're capable of doing and that is to become a very good ballclub," he added.

Intense and emotional, Lefebvre is enjoying showing a skeptical media it was wrong about the Mariners, a team that wound up 35½ games behind first-place Oakland last season in the American League West.

"They (writers) have the right to say whatever they want," Lefebvre said. "This club has never won in the history of the franchise. We haven't really put a good product on the field. But right now we're playing really good and maybe some day the skeptics will say, 'You know what, this was a heckuva ballclub.'"

At Lefebvre's urging, General Manager Woody Woodward signed Leonard at $800,000 for two years guaranteed. That's big money for Mariners' owner George Argyros, who has a reputation of being one of big league baseball's most frugal owners.

"We brought in Jeffrey because he can still play," Lefebvre said. "I'm really happy for Jeffrey because he's off to a real flying start. He's the talk of the baseball world right now."

Griffey, the Mariners' regular center fielder, is the son of Ken Griffey of the Cincinnati Reds. The young Griffey is an outstanding defensive player with what some say is superstar potential.

"He (Griffey) shows you he can do anything," Lefebvre said of the nation's No. 1 draft choice two years ago. Griffey was AL Player of the Week last week.

In the spring, Lefebvre's enthusiasm seemed unrealistic. He took over last November as manager of a team that lost 93 games and finished in last place last season.

With Wednesday's victory, the Mariners completed a three-game series sweep over the Tigers and a 6-2 homestand. They open a six-game road trip Friday night in Baltimore with a 14-15 record.

They're 14-11 after losing all four games of their season-opening series in Oakland.

"We got roughed up earlier, but the guys kept working hard and kept believing they could compete and be competitive," Lefebvre said.

"That's why playing .500 is so important. Because then you know when you go out there, you have a chance to win today. It leads up to such a good feeling for everybody. You look forward to going to the ballpark."

Local interest in the Mariners has been slow to pick up, though. The fans are still waiting to see how much the Mariners have improved.

In their first two homestands, going into Wednesday's game, the Mariners were averaging 13,252 fans.

Holdovers Mark Langston, Alvin Davis and Harold Reynolds are off to solid starts. Langston was 3-3 with a 3.45 ERA. Davis was hitting .355 with two homers and 18 RBI, and Reynolds, a two-time All-Star, was hitting .292.

The Mariners, who have had 12 consecutive losing seasons, have been a graveyard for managers. Argyros has fired Maury Wills, Rene Lachemann, Del Crandall, Chuck Cottier, Dick Williams and Jim Snyder since buying the franchise in 1981. Williams and Snyder managed the Mariners last season.

Lefebvre, 47, came to Seattle after coaching third base for Oakland last season. He was the Athletics' hitting instructor. His previous managerial experience consisted of three years in the minor leagues, two at Triple A Phoenix of the Pacific Coast League.

"We have a lot of young talent," Lefebvre said. "We're going to be a team that is going to gain more confidence as we start to win more. We have a lot of talent to carry us a long way."

"For example, we have a lot of speed on the club that people don't really know about. We've got some power. We've got multi-dimensional guys. I didn't want guys around who could do one thing and one thing only. This ballclub has a lot of ways to beat you now."

Davenport Keys Conley Wins

Williamston Takes NEAC Victory Over Roanoke, 7-1

HOLLYWOOD — Charlene Davenport tossed a pair of shutout games as D.H. Conley swept a doubleheader from West Carteret in Coastal Conference softball action Wednesday.

Conley won the opening game, 3-0, then pounded the Lady Patriots, 22-0, in the second.

In the opening game, Conley pushed over the winning run in the second inning. With two outs, Angie Jones singled and Tracy Stancil followed with another hit. An error on the play allowed Jones to score.

Nikki Adams then hit a two-run double in the third to account for the remaining runs.

Davenport allowed only one hit in the opener, then held the Pats to just two in the second game.

Conley got all it needed in that one in the first. Tracy Sumrell singled and Adams walked. Stephanie Haddock then tripled in both runners. Lori Boyd reached on an error, scoring Haddock. Glenda Hardy and Stancil both reached on errors, allowing Boyd to score.

Conley added four more in the second, three in the fourth, seven in the fifth and fourth in the sixth. Haddock hit a three-run homer to highlight the fifth inning.

Conley is now 10-4 overall and 5-2 in Coastal play. The Valkyries travel to Washington on Friday at 7:30 p.m.

baseball, and I tried to check with anybody in general in the states who knew baseball.

"Rose was recommended by somebody. I don't even remember who," he added. "It was a college person. Once they got in the poll, they kept winning so they moved up."

The poll, which runs every Tuesday, also includes an ageate section of teams to watch. Among the 25 teams in the poll and the 12 squads to watch, Rose, 15-0 on the year, is the only team from North Carolina.

Krider said he spends an average of $500 a month in phone bills accumulating information for the poll, talking to a wide network of scouts, coaches and media correspondents.

When he began compiling information for the poll, part of the criteria was how many Division I prospects a team had, how many returning starters there were, the quality of pitching and the level of competition a team faces.

Teams that play out-of-state competition offer a pretty good gauge of competition. If a team doesn't play out of state, the best indication of talent comes from the level of competition within a team's particular state. Krider said North Carolina was among the top 20 states for high school baseball in the country.

Krider has also compiled a prep football poll for all seven years of USA Today's existence and has also done a national prep basketball ranking for 14 years.

Williamston added one in the third and two each in the fifth and sixth. Roanoke's only run came in the fifth.

Coltrain and Karen Biggs each had three hits to lead Williamston while Barber added two. Donna Curtis had two hits to pace Roanoke.

Williamston is now 8-1 overall and 7-1 in the NEAC. The Tigers entertain Plymouth on Friday.

pitching staff," Fulghum said.

Losing is getting to be a foreign term to the Rampants, but Vincent is quick to realize that a defeat is often only one game away.

"We're very capable of being beat," he said. "It can happen. Everybody is beatable. Baseball is a crazy game."

So what will it take to beat Rose this year? Even Vincent isn't sure.

"I don't know," he said. "You're going to have to have a pretty good pitcher who's got good stuff and finesse. I don't think anybody is going to be able to blow it by us for seven innings. You have to be very sound defensively. The big thing is the other team has got to score (a lot of) runs."

Both Fulghum and Ramsey agree pitching is probably the main question mark for Rose as far as the playoffs are concerned.

"You have to play good defense and get good pitching," Fulghum said. "In the playoffs, Rose's pitching is going to have to be consistent.

Elliott Giving Strange Speed Charts

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TALLADEGA, Ala. — Ernie Elliott, the crew chief and engineer-builder for brother Bill Elliott, is handing out strange looking Talladega Superspeedway speed charts this week.

The printed charts, as usual, list lap times in seconds in the left-hand column and miles per hour on the right.

These particular charts range from 56.9 seconds and 168.295 mph to 45.0 and 212.800 — just a tick below Bill Elliott's all-time stock car qualifying record of 212.809, set on Talladega's 2.66-mile, high-banked oval in 1987.

But, on Ernie Elliott's altered charts, silver racer's tape covers all the times and speeds down to "50.0 ... 191.520."

He says that's all anybody is likely to need to figure out the pole-winning speed today for Sunday's Winston 500.

"I don't believe it (the pole speed) is gonna be much more than that," brother Bill said. "Really, though, the whole thing is kind of a mystery and I can't see in no crystal ball."

In a continuing effort to slow the stock cars down in the interest of safety for drivers and spectators alike, NASCAR has given the drivers a more restrictive carburetor plate for the races here and at Daytona International Speedway — the two fastest tracks on the Winston Cup circuit.

Two years ago, after Elliott set his speed record, Bobby Allison crashed four days later, losing control at about 210 mph and nearly sailing his car into the packed grandstand.

NASCAR almost immediately mandated a smaller carburetor for the July races at Talladega and Daytona. That got the speeds down some, with Elliott winning the pole at 203.187 and race speeds dropping into the high 190s.

Then, in 1988, NASCAR went to a carburetor restrictor plate with one-inch holes.

The smaller the holes in the plates, the less air reaches the carburetor and the less horsepower is generated.

A year ago, Davey Allison won the pole position for the Winston 500 at 198.969 and race speeds were in the mid 190s. In the heat of July, Darrell Waltrip won the pole for the Talladega 500 at 196.274 and race speeds dropped accordingly.

Now, NASCAR has ruled openings of 15-16ths of an inch for the plates.

"You wouldn't think that 1-16th would make such a difference, but that's about 50 horsepower," Rusty Wallace said. "So, we're going to see speeds well off the 196 that Darrell ran last July in winning the pole."

Elliott, the defending Winston Cup champion, has struggled to get back in the groove since breaking his left wrist in a crash during practice in February for the season-opening Daytona 500.

But his Ford Thunderbird was among the fastest cars Wednesday in the opening day of practice, turning several laps unofficially at 191.310.

"It's really no different than what it was before, just slower," Elliott said with a helpless shrug.

"What we're doing out there, that's what we've got," he added. "Whatever is in the motor is it. I just don't know what else to do. That's it, and I think a lot of guys in that garage feel the same way."

Driver forecasts for the speed that will win the pole have ranged from 187 to 193.

In a random survey of practice speeds Wednesday, Mark Martin was quick at 192.046 in a Ford, followed by Morgan Shepherd's Pontiac at 191.412 and the 191.306 of Geoff Bodine in one of Chevrolet's brand new Lumina's, a model being introduced in this race as the replacement for the highly successful Monte Carlo.

Drinking Law No Stumbling Block

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A South Carolina law prohibiting beer sales on Sunday isn't critical right now to plans by two groups seeking to bring an National Football League franchise to the Carolinas, a spokesman for the groups said.

Under South Carolina law, no stadium can serve alcohol on Sunday. Restaurants, hotels and special events such as county fairs may serve alcohol on Sundays, but only with one of three special permits.

No such permits are available for a stadium, said Nick Sipe, executive director of the South Carolina Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission.

"It's not a critical issue on our site selection, and it's an issue that could change with time," Mark Richardson said. Richardson is a member of a group headed by his father, Jerry, pursuing an expansion franchise.

"We're not basing our selection on whether or not South Carolina can sell beer," he said.

Davis pitched 17 2-3 innings for San Diego, allowed 13 hits and four earned runs, struck out 17 and walked five. The last Padres' pitcher to win the award was Andy Hawkins in May 1985.

Smoltz Hurls, Swings Braves To 6-3 Win

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The standings may not show it, but the last-place Atlanta Braves are getting better. Because any time there's good young pitching, there's hope.

Rookie John Smoltz single-handedly stopped the Braves' eight-game losing streak Wednesday night, pitching a six-hitter and hitting his first career home run in a 6-3 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

"He could become one of the best impact pitchers in the league," Braves manager Russ Nixon said. "He certainly has what it takes."

Smoltz, 4-2, struck out nine and walked two in his first complete game. His two-run homer, a 428-foot shot, put Atlanta ahead 3-1 in the fifth inning.

"He looked like Babe Ruth to me out there tonight, throwing smoke and hitting home runs," Phillies manager Nick Leyva said.

In other games, Los Angeles got past St. Louis 4-3, Pittsburgh beat San Francisco 5-3, Chicago downed San Diego 5-4, Cincinnati stopped New York 6-4 and Montreal defeated Houston 6-5.

The Braves were the worst team in the National League last season, going 54-106. They are at the bottom of the NL West at 11-17 this year, although a young rotation that includes Smoltz, Tom Glavine and Derek Lilliquist gives reason for optimism.

Smoltz said pitching all nine innings meant more to him than going 2-for-3.

"It was the complete game, by far," he said. "It's always great to get that first one."

Not that his home run and single weren't worth bragging about.

"I don't know how to explain that," he said. "I felt good in batting practice, but I never dreamed I'd hit a home run. I haven't hit one since my last at-bat in high school."

Smoltz started poorly, giving up Juan Samuel's home run to open the game. But he didn't give up another hit until the sixth inning.

Von Hayes, leading the league with a .366 average, went 0-for-4 against the right-hander.

"Let's put it this way: If I have a team to manage, he can pitch for it," Hayes said.

Dale Murphy hit his fifth home run and Jeff Blauser hit his first, each connecting against Don Carman, 1-4.

Reds 6, Mets 4
Chris Sabo and Barry Larkin hit consecutive sacrifice flies, breaking a seventh-inning tie and leading Cincinnati over New York.

The visiting Reds played their third straight game without Manager Pete Rose, who has bronchitis and is not expected back until Friday. Coach Tommy Helms has won twice in Rose's absence.

Jose Rijo, 2-0, gave up four runs in six innings. John Franco worked the final inning, striking out Len Dykstra to end the game with two runners on base for his ninth save.

Dykstra opened the bottom of the first with the eighth leadoff home run of his career. Darryl Strawberry had an inside-the-park homer, his seventh home run of the season.

Sid Fernandez, 3-1, took the loss in the Mets' third defeat in the last 13 games.

Pinch hitter Rick Dempsey singled home the winning run with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning and Los Angeles beat St. Louis for its third straight victory.

Pinch hitter Mickey Hatcher doubled with one out and Jeff Hamilton was intentionally walked before Dempsey singled off Ken Dayley, 0-1.

Ray Searage, 1-2, pitched 1 1-3 innings for the victory.

Pedro Guerrero of the Cardinals left the game with a sprained ankle. He hurt himself with an awkward slide in the second inning.

Expos 6, Astros 5
Spike Owen hit a two-run homer in the bottom of the 11th inning, rallying Montreal past Houston.

The Astros went ahead 5-4 in the top of the 11th on Ken Caminiti's run-scoring single. But Nelson Santovenia singled with one out for the Expos and Owen hit his second homer of the season.

Tim Burke, 3-1, was the winner and Juan Agosto, the sixth Houston pitcher, lost his first decision.

Andres Galarraga and Hubie Brooks hit home runs leading off the Montreal eighth, tying the score at 4.

Cubs 5, Padres 4
Andre Dawson hit a go-ahead triple in the sixth inning and a two-run homer as Chicago won at San Diego.

With the score tied at 3, Ryne Sandberg was hit by a pitch with two outs in the sixth. Dawson followed with a triple off Mark Grant, 0-1, and scored on a single by Mark Grace.

Dawson's third home run of the season and 301st of his career came in the fourth against Dennis Rasmussen. Dawson is 7-for-12 lifetime against Rasmussen.

Paul Kilgus, 2-2, left in the sixth inning and Calvin Schiraldi finished for his third save.

Tony Gwynn hit a two-run triple in the Padres' fifth and scored on a single by Carmelo Martinez to make it 3-0.

Pirates 5, Giants 3
Barry Bonds hit a leadoff home run in the first inning for the 17th time in his career and Pittsburgh's John Smiley beat San Francisco for the second time in five days.

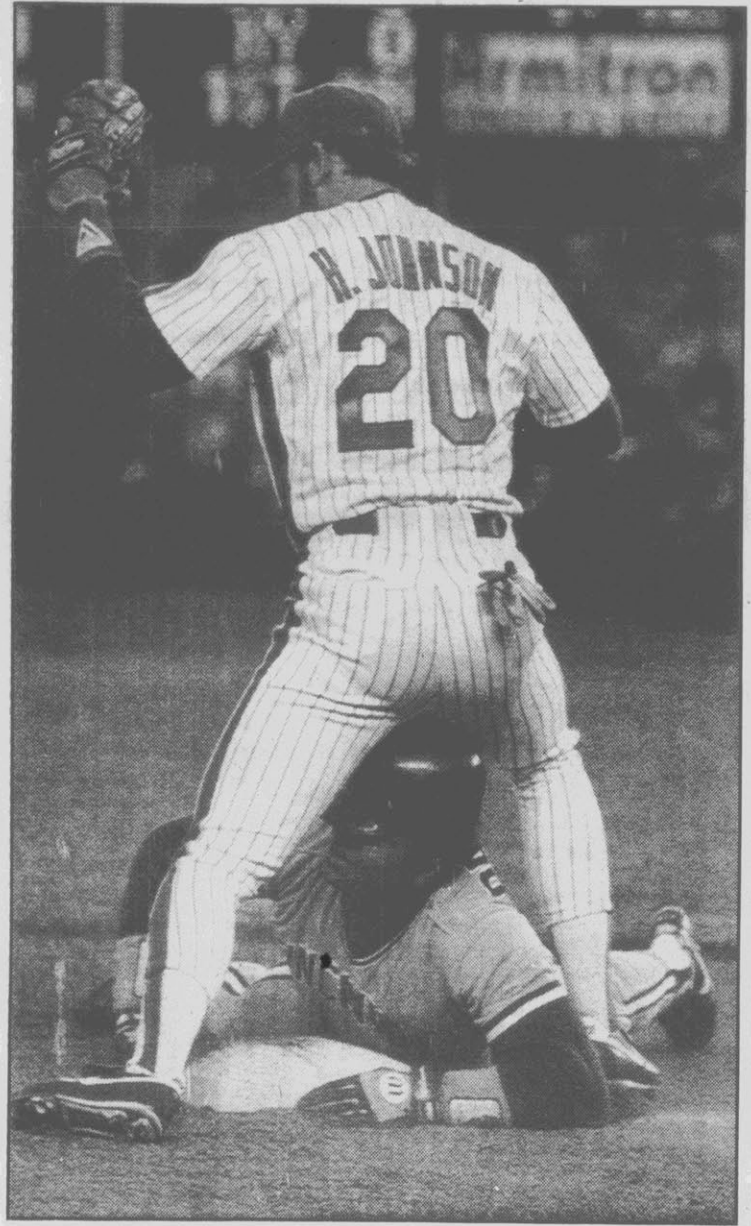

Kevin Mitchell hit two home runs for the host Giants. He leads the majors with nine homers and 88 RBI.

Pittsburgh had been shut out in the past two days before Bonds opened the game with his fourth home run. Rey Quinones and Tom Prince drove in two runs apiece for the Pirates.

Smiley, 3-1, gave up five hits in 8 1-3 innings. He is 4-0 lifetime against the Giants, including a four-hit shutout four days ago.

Mitchell, who hit a two-run homer in the fourth, hit a solo shot in the ninth. Logan Easley relieved for his first save.

Don Robinson, 1-3, gave up five runs in 5 1-3 innings. The Giants have lost 10 of their last 14 games.

Lee Set For Senior Tour

DALLAS (AP) — Lee Trevino is in an in-between stage right now. One career has ended. Another is about to begin.

Trevino closed the book on his five-year stint as a television golf commentator last week in the Legends of Golf.

Now, with his 50th birthday approaching, he's gearing up for the Seniors tour.

But there's more than just practice and preparation on his mind this week in the $1 million Byron Nelson Classic that got under way today at the TPC at Las Colinas.

"This is what I want to do. This is what I love. I'd rather do this than eat," Trevino said while pounding balls on the practice range.

And Trevino, a part-time performer during his stint with a television network, is now back at his first love on a full-time basis.

"There's a lot of things I want to do," said the man who has collected two British Open titles, two U.S. Open crowns and was 44 years old when he won his second PGA title, the last of his 27 American tour triumphs.

Ken Griffey Jr. safely steals second base after Mike Brumley fails to handle the throw

Brown Hurls Two-Hitter To Lead Rangers To Win

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kevin Brown gave the New York Yankees that sinking feeling from the start.

Brown pitched a two-hitter and got 17 ground-ball outs as the Texas Rangers beat New York 4-1 Wednesday night.

"The big thing was that I was in the strike zone more," Brown said. "I made a mechanical adjustment from my two previous starts. I was overthrowing. I decided to go for the middle of the plate."

Mike Pagliarulo's second-inning single was New York's only hit until Rickey Henderson doubled in the sixth.

"Brown had good stuff," Yankees manager Dallas Green said. "He had an outstanding breaking ball early. That's where he was getting most of his outs. Later, he was effective with his sinker."

Brown, 2-1, entered the game having allowed 20 hits and 12 earned runs in 23 innings for a 4.70 earned run average.

"I really felt I've had better stuff, but the key is making do with what you have," Brown said. "It's one of my best games in the majors."

Elsewhere in the American League it was Seattle 3, Detroit 2; California 2, Baltimore 0; Cleveland 6, Kansas City 2; Toronto 2, Oakland 0; Boston 8, Chicago 4, and Milwaukee 7, Minnesota 2.

Brown was the Rangers' No. 1 pick in the June 1986 amateur draft and was 1-1 in four starts last year with a 4.24 ERA.

"He just threw like he's capable of," Texas manager Bobby Valentine said. "I knew he could do it. He knows he can do it. And soon others will, too."

Brown pitched three years at Georgia Tech with a combined record of 28-13.

Andy Hawkins, 3-3, had his three-game winning streak snapped. He pitched six innings and allowed nine hits.

"Hawkins pitched good enough to win, but we just didn't hit for him," Green said. "That's the way it's been all year. We're just not playing good offensive ball."

The Rangers got three straight hits off Hawkins in the third to take a 2-0 lead. Rafael Palmeiro's two-out double to right field scored Scott Fletcher from first base and Ruben Sierra followed with a single.

Mariners 3, Tigers 2
Jim Presley hit his first home run in 207 at-bats as Seattle edged Detroit at the Kingdome to complete a three-game sweep.

The last time the Mariners swept a three-game series from the Tigers was May 30-June 1, 1986, also in the Kingdome. Detroit has lost seven of its last eight games.

Eric Hanson, 3-2, allowed two runs before Dennis Powell relieved with the bases loaded in the seventh. Powell struck out pinch-hitter Gary Ward to end the inning and Mike Schooler pitched the final 1-3 innings for his fourth save.

Angels 2, Orioles 0
Jack Howell homered on Bob Milacki's first pitch of the ninth inning to snap a scoreless tie and lift visiting California over Baltimore.

After Howell's homer, Kent Anderson walked, went to second on Wally Joyner's grounder and scored on Johnny Ray's single off reliever Mark Williamson.

Rich Monteleone, recalled from Class AAA Edmonton on Monday, pitched two innings of one-hit relief for his first major-league victory.

Indians 6, Royals 2

Shortstop Kurt Stillwell dropped Joe Carter's two-out pop fly, allowing two runs score during a three-run fourth inning, as Cleveland beat Kansas City and snapped the Royals' four-game winning streak.

Tom Candiotti, 3-1, pitched a seven-hitter for his second complete game, striking out six and walking one to give the Indians their fifth victory in their last six games.

Blue Jays 2, Athletics 0

Mike Flanagan pitched a four-hitter for his 19th career shutout as Toronto beat Oakland 2-0 at Exhibition Stadium. The Blue Jays entered the game having lost four straight games and eight of their last nine.

The Blue Jays scored twice in the fifth inning on run-scoring singles by Tony Fernandez and George Bell.

Red Sox 8, White Sox 4

Rick Cerone drove in three runs with a two-run homer and a squeeze bunt to lead Boston past Chicago at Comiskey Park.

Mike Boddicker, 2-2, pitched 6 2-3 innings, allowing seven hits in going past the sixth inning for the first time in six starts this season. Bob Stanley pitched 2 1-3 innings for his third save.

Cerone, inserted into the lineup for slumping catcher Rich Gedman, broke a 3-3 tie in the sixth inning with a two-run homer off Shawn Hillegas, 0-4.

Dwight Evans drove in two runs and scored two for Boston. He had a sacrifice fly in the ninth for the 1,200th RBI of his career.

Brewers 7, Twins 2

Gary Sheffield and Rob Deer hit two-run homers during a five-run third inning as Milwaukee beat Minnesota at the Metrodome, snapping a five-game losing streak.

The Brewers sent the tumbling Twins to their 10th loss in their last 11 games. Prior to their losing streak, the Brewers had swept a three-game series against the Twins in Milwaukee, outscoring Minnesota 27-8.

Johnson Suffered Side Effects

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TORONTO — Ben Johnson suffered breast enlargement and insomnia as side-effects associated with steroid use 19 months ago, according to his family doctor, who said he was baffled by the sprinter's tremendous muscle development.

Dr. Jack Sussman, referred to medical charts throughout his testimony before a Canadian inquiry into drugs and sports. Sussman said he suspected Johnson was on muscle-building drugs — banned in international sports — in October 1987 when the sprinter's left breast grew unnaturally large.

The condition, known as gynecomastia, is one of the less serious side-effects of steroids, which have been linked to cancer, sterility and heart disease. Sussman said that when he asked Johnson, the runner denied he was on steroids, the drug that cost him a gold medal and a world record at the Seoul Olympics.

moved ahead for good with three more in the second. Adams hit a two-run homer to highlight that inning. After another run in the fourth, MacKenzie exploded for eight in the fifth. Adams had a two-run double, as did Chris Ball. Jay Ward and Brandon Moye, who had driven in runs earlier in the game, also added rbi in the fifth.

MacKenzie closed out its scoring with two in the sixth while First Federal got one in the bottom of the sixth.

Adams finished with four hits in five trips for MacKenzie, scoring three runs. Moye had three hits in four appearances while Ward and Monte Rountree each were 2-5. Rountree scored four runs in the game.

Casey McCall went 2-4 for First Federal to lead its hitting.

Mark Moye got the win in relief while Scott Quinn took the loss.

Scott Briley slapped a home run and drove in two runs to lead the Lions to a 5-3 victory over the Kiwanis in the North State Little League Wednesday.

The Lions took the lead in the first, scoring two runs, but the Kiwanis came back with single runs in the first and second to tie it up. The Lions then took the lead again on Briley's solo shot in the third. Then, in the fifth, runs by Jack McDonald and Daryl Cherry provided the Lions with a 5-2 lead.

The Kiwanis tried to rally in the sixth as Charles Humphrey scored and men were on second and third with one out, but Cherry's pitching did the job as he struck out the last two batters.

Cherry gave up four hits, struck out eight and walked three in getting the win. Tutu Moye was the loser, despite allowing only two hits and striking out 15 batters. He walked eight.

Briley had both of the hits for the Lions, while Corey Hutcherson had two hits for the Kiwanis.

Kephart Enduring A Trying Time

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBIA, S.C. — The last two weeks have been a trying time for Keith Kephart, one of four ex-South Carolina coaches indicted April 19 in connection with a probe of the use and distribution of steroids across the state.

"I won't have a comment until after everything is concluded because it would not be up to my best interests until everything is settled," Kephart said during a telephone interview. "Obviously, it's been trying. That's why I'm anxious to get it settled."

Kephart and his fellow ex-Gamecock coaches — along with a Maryland man — were to be arraigned today on charges stemming from the alleged use of steroids by former Gamecock football players and coaches.

The five men were indicted April 19 by a federal grand jury investigating the alleged use and distribution of the muscle-building drugs across the state.

Ex-Gamecock coaches Jim Washburn, Tom Gadd and Tom

Kurucz were indicted by the grand jury for "conspiring to conduct a program of illegal steroid use by members of the athletic community ... particularly by members of the university's football team."

They also were charged with importing steroids into the state and dispensing the drugs without a prescription. Kurucz also is charged with lying to the grand jury.

Kephart was charged with conspiring with others in the "USC athletic community" to bring steroids into the state and dispense them without prescriptions.

John L. Carter of Bethesda, Md., was indicted on charges he distributed steroids to four former Gamecock players, including Tommy Chaikin. It was Chaikin's article in Sports Illustrated on Oct. 24 detailing alleged steroid and drug use by some ex-football players that prompted the grand jury probe.

A trial date has tentatively been set for June 6, although that may change if motions are filed by attorneys, said Nancy Rumchak, deputy clerk of the U.S. District Court. Columbia attorney Ed "Punky"

Holler said Wednesday that Washburn and Kurucz will plead innocent, but he declined to discuss the specifics of the case.

He also said he was unsure if there would be an attempt to settle the case out of court.

"I got a lot of speculation, but I don't know what their evidence is and who's going to testify for the government and all that," Holler said. "As soon as I find that out and see what they're saying, then I analyze everything and evaluate their evidence."

Gadd will plead innocent, said Joel Collins, one of two Columbia attorneys representing the former Gamecock coach. But Collins doesn't expect any plea bargain agreement.

"It's impossible for me to speculate about what's going to happen way down the road," Collins said. "We are in the early stages of learning about the case ... As far as our intentions to plea bargain, there will be none of that."

He said the indictments have left him with "many, many questions." All grand jury proceedings are confidential, but Collins said he will be seeking copies of the testimony heard by the grand jury. He said such testimony is frequently made available to attorneys.

"We are very interested in reading the testimony, the statements" given before the grand jury, he said. "The U.S. attorney's office can — and we think should — adopt an open file policy where we are able to see all of the evidence. We think that's the fair way to proceed."

Wilander Mired In Serious Slump

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — How low can he go?

That's the question tennis fans are asking about Mats Wilander, who continued his downhill slide Wednesday with a lopsided loss to unheralded Francesco Cancellotti in the second round of the Tournament of Champions.

Cancellotti, ranked 86th in the world, eliminated the second-ranked Swede 6-1, 6-3 in less than an hour at the West Side Tennis Club.

"The Wilander I beat today is not the number two player in the world. He's a completely different player than last year," Cancellotti said.

"It looks like it doesn't make a difference whether he wins or loses ... I played a good match today, but he's not fighting anymore. Maybe he can't find the right motivation."

"You should ask him what's going on in his mind."

Wilander wasn't talking, though. He skipped the postmatch news conference, apparently tired of explaining the slump that started after he seized the No. 1 ranking from Ivan Lendl at the U.S. Open last September.

Wilander held the top spot for just four months, falling to second with an early loss at the Australian Open in January. Since then, he has lost six of 11 matches, including two embarrassing defeats against Austria in the Davis Cup quarterfinals.

"To see Wilander on the court like this is not a good thing for tennis," Cancellotti said.

But it was good for Cancellotti, who had to play Wilander just hours after winning his opening match. Some players had to play twice

Wednesday to ease a backlog caused by rain.

Lendl and defending champion Andre Agassi advanced to the third round of the clay-court event, but fifth-seeded Yannick Noah quit in the middle of his match because of a foot injury.

Lendl beat Martin Wostenholme of Canada 6-2, 6-3, but wasn't happy with his performance.

"I'm making silly errors, I'm not putting the balls away and I'm missing too much," Lendl said.

Agassi, who has struggled this year after a sensational 1988 season, took control in the third set to beat Fernando Luna of Spain 6-4, 4-6, 6-0 on a chilly night.

"The balls were so hard because of the weather that it took away my biggest strength — pounding the ball," Agassi said. "He was able to keep chipping back, but I started playing better in the third and I think he got tired."

Noah injured his right foot while rushing the net against Jaime Yzaga of Peru. The Frenchman had lost the first set 6-2 and was serving at 2-all in the second when pulled up lame and fell to the ground. He was helped to his feet, but walked off under his own power.

Trainer Todd Snyder said Noah aggravated a sore tendon that has been bothering him for five weeks. "He felt something pop," Snyder said. "The tissue might be torn. We don't know yet."

Snyder said he didn't know whether Noah would be able to play the Italian Open, which starts May 15. The injury also could keep Noah out of the French Open later this month.

"We will get him to a doctor tomorrow to determine the extent of the injury," Snyder said.

Easy Goer Hopes 13 Proves To Be Lucky

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOUISVILLE — The number on Easy Goer's stall is unlucky "13." But that's OK, says Shug McGaughey, who trains the Kentucky Derby favorite. He's only a little superstitious.

"Everything has gone perfect so far," he said. "Knock on wood."

Anyway, Shug's wife Mary Jane, who is pregnant with their second child, found a lucky four-leaf clover the other day before Easy Goer could eat it. It didn't go in the baby book. She pressed it in her Kentucky Derby book, on the page with Secretariat's 1973 victory.

With a big field of 16 expected to enter the Derby today, racing luck will play its part when the 115th Run for the Roses goes off Saturday afternoon. It's not that Easy Goer needs to be lucky; he just can't be too unlucky.

"If Easy Goer is lucky enough to run his race Saturday, they will have a hard time beating him," McGaughey said. "I'm not saying they can't beat him, but they'll have a hard time."

Only a month ago, experts predicted as few as 10 in the Derby because of Easy Goer's big victories in the Swale, Gotham and Wood this year following his 2-year-old championship campaign. But, before the withdrawal of Majesty's Imp, the probable field actually grew to 17, three short of the maximum.

"There's somebody out there drinking coffee and reading the Racing Form and saying, 'There's three spots still open. Let's go,'" McGaughey said. "It could be somebody who just won their maiden race."

"I don't think I've ever seen more horses at 100-1 ... If I had a horse that was 150-1, I don't think I'd want anybody to know about it."

The main starting gate at Churchill Downs will accommodate 14. Any horse with a post position beyond 14 will start in an auxiliary gate, and McGaughey did not like the prospect of being one of them.

"I really don't care how many are in there as long as we run out of one gate," McGaughey said. "I don't want to have to worry about getting stuck in the auxiliary gate."

Even so, he says: "I'm having a good time. I'm not waking up in the middle of the night in a cold sweat or anything like that, although sometimes when I get up in the morning, he's sitting at the end of my bed."

Easy Goer, running as an entry with stablemate Awe Inspiring, is bound to go off as the odds-on favorite, with the Charlie Whittingham-trained Sunday Silence and D. Wayne Lukas' entry of Houston and Shy Tom next. The last time there was an odds-on favorite, it was Spectacular Bid in 1979, and the field was 10.

"It's like the Super Bowl," Lukas said. "Imagine what would happen if the Super Bowl said anybody who wants to can play. An awful lot of people would show up. They wouldn't win, but they'd show up."

While many have compared Easy Goer with Secretariat, McGaughey still believes the 1973 Triple Crown winner was the best colt he has ever seen.

"He was a 2-year-old champion. He was fast. He was a good 3-year-old. He won the Triple Crown. He could race the classic distances, and later on, he was able to carry weight and win," McGaughey said. "He was very versatile."

Pat Day will ride Easy Goer, and he too stops just short of declaring Easy Goer the next Secretariat.

"He's a class act, and he's got a tremendous amount of talent," Day said. "I think he could have a couple of breaks not go his way and still get the job done."

"I'm not one for handing out praise easily, but he's deserving of everything I said about him. He's the best horse I've ever had a chance to ride, and possibly the best I've ever seen," said Day, who rode Forty Niner to a second-place finish in last year's Derby.

"I'm not saying this horse is the next Secretariat, but he's the best I've ever seen."

Hoch Answers All Doubts With Las Vegas Triumph

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — After missing a 2-foot putt on the first hole of a playoff in the Masters, many had to wonder whether Scott Hoch would ever be quite the same. But his victory in the Las Vegas Invitational answered all doubts.

"There's a sense of relief, like a big burden has been taken off me," said Hoch, a Raleigh native. "To win at Augusta would have meant a lot, but to win now, to come back like this, makes this victory even more special."

But Hoch earned a lot more than a rich payday for his victory Sunday.

After rolling in an 8-footer for a winning birdie and the $225,000 top prize, Hoch did what longtime friends have rarely if ever witnessed: he stood on a golf course with his wife, Sally, choking back tears.

"That's definitely not me," he told The News and Observer of Raleigh. "I'm not the emotional type. Sally said I haven't teared up since we've been married."

Not only was Hoch able to capture his first PGA Tour title since 1984, but he also was able to make an announcement he had been holding back for 2½ years.

In November 1986, 2-year-old Cameron Hoch developed what doctors feared might be bone cancer. He was taken to a hospital in Orlando, Fla., that is associated with the Arnold Palmer Children's Hospital, and was given treatments that arrested the disease and cured him.

In the weeks and months since his son's illness, Scott Hoch has wanted to give a sizable donation to the hospital. But he decided to wait. He wanted to do it as a winner.

That special day, at long last, came Sunday. The hospital will receive $100,000 of his Vegas winnings. Hoch, in return, probably will receive a lot more.

"If I can put a smile on a kid's face, or help someone get well, then it's all worthwhile," he said.

"Some people have asked me why I picked that amount. Well, it was about the difference between first and second place (actually $90,000), and I decided Saturday night that's what it would be.

"I guess the man upstairs was looking out for me."

Divine intervention. For years, Hoch and his family had to wonder whether it would ever come — in Scott's favor.

In the 1978 U.S. Amateur, John Cook holed one improbable putt after another in besting Hoch in the match-play final. The next year, Jay Sigel did the same to him in the British Amateur, once skulling a shot that almost rolled into the cup.

In the 1987 PGA, Hoch needed only a par at the final hole to make a playoff. He three-putted and bogeyed. And then, of course, there was the Masters.

Yacht Club Seeking Reversal Of Ruling

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The San Diego Yacht Club, calling a court ruling that stripped it of the America's Cup "drastic and unfair," has asked a state appeals court to reverse the order and restore its prize.

The lower court "completely disregarded the rules of the sport governing the determination of protests" when it awarded the cup to a New Zealand boating club, the San Diegans argued in court papers Wednesday.

State Supreme Court Justice Carmen Ciparick ruled March 28 that the San Diego club "violated the spirit" of the race by using a 60-foot catamaran to defend the cup against the Mercury Bay Boating Club's single-hulled yacht, which is about 90 feet long at the waterline.

The judge called the September contest, which the San Diegans won easily, "a gross mismatch" and ordered the 138-year-old silver cup forfeited.

Since World War II, all America's Cup races had been conducted in 12-meter yachts, which are about 45 feet long at the waterline. The San Diego club said it planned to follow this custom until New Zealand challenged with a boat twice as big. San Diego then defended itself in the catamaran.

In their appeal, the San Diegans pointed to Ciparick's ruling that the boats should be "somewhat evenly matched." They said there was no such provision in the Deed of Gift, the document governing America's Cup races.

The club said the Deed of Gift provides that races are to be sailed under rules of the club holding the cup. The San Diego club operates under rules of the International Yacht Racing Union.

Under those rules, a referee from the union decides all protests, the club said. It said Mercury Bay never protested the eligibility of the catamaran, Stars and Stripes, to the yacht union's International Jury.

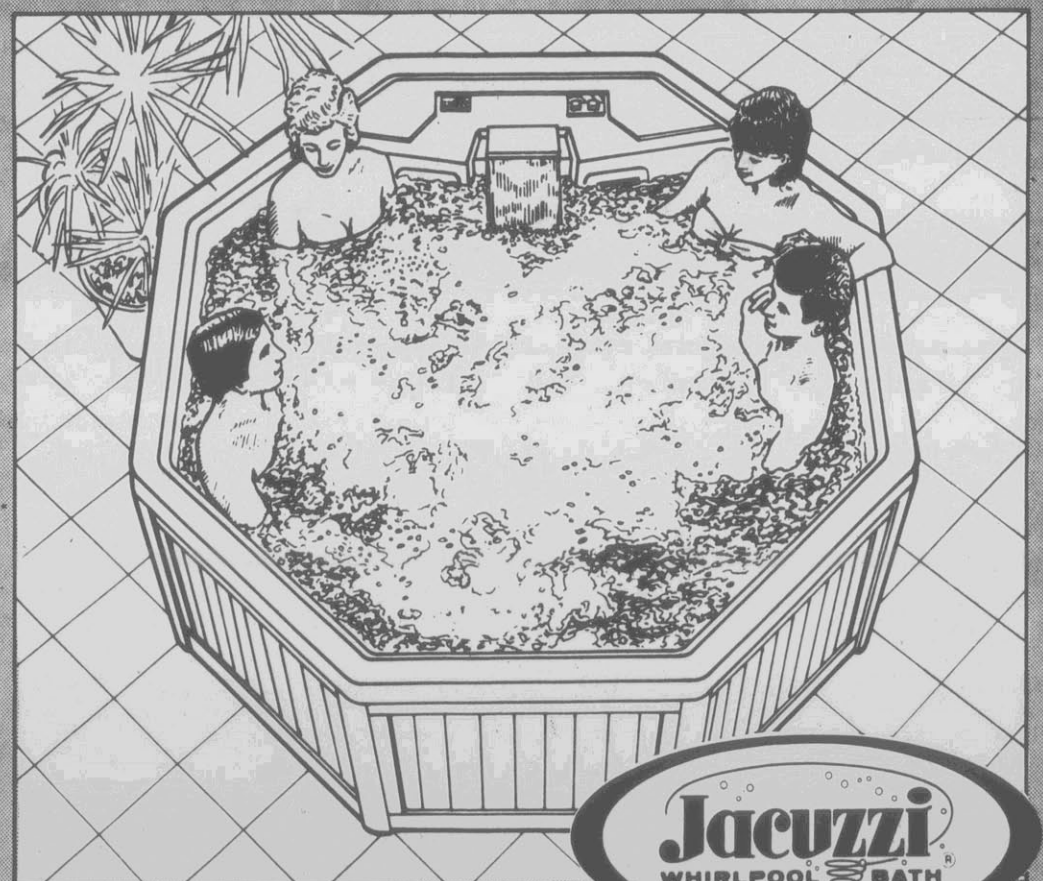

"The court below nevertheless arrogated to itself the role of the International Jury, completely disregarding the rules of the sport governing the determination of protests, waited for the races to be run and then overturned the results of a sporting competition conducted in complete accordance with the rules of the sport," the club said.

If Ciparick's decision stands, it said, "The courts of this state can expect routine application to determine the winners of future America's Cup matches, and to decide specialized and technical matters under the yacht racing rules and indeed under the rules of other sports as well."

Oral arguments before the state Supreme Court's appeals division will be held after the Mercury Bay club files a response to the San Diegans' appeal.

Cold Fusion Issue Keeps Simmering

By Paul Raeburn
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Don't sell your palladium futures just yet. Cold fusion is not dead.

Physicists nearly succeeded this week in sending cold fusion from the laboratory to the library (file under: science fiction).

At an American Physical Society meeting in Baltimore, they announced in a chorus that they had failed to confirm the University of Utah's claims of fusion in a jar.

The Utah chemists had misinterpreted their data, the physicists said. That was putting it charitably.

To which University of Utah Vice President John Brophy responded: What about the positive results from Stanford, Texas A&M and Case Western Reserve universities?

Researchers at those institutions said Wednesday they are still getting positive results. Something is going on. They are hesitant to call it fusion. But they can't make it go away.

"There are plenty of positive results to talk about," said Charles Martin of Texas A&M.

"We stand convinced," said Robert Huggins at Stanford. "We don't see anything wrong with our experiments. And we would be glad to have other people replicate it under identical circumstances."

At Case Western, Uziel Landau revised his figures slightly, but his results remain positive. On Friday, he said his device was producing 8 percent to 30 percent more energy than was going into it. Wednesday he said the energy output was 10 percent over the input.

The Utah scientists' claim is far more extravagant. They say they are getting 10 times as much energy out as they are putting in, according to Brophy.

Some of the strongest of this week's attacks on the Utah research came from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Yet a lone physicist there is holding on tight to his theory explaining how fusion is possible in the Utah experiment.

"I'm not withdrawing my theory," Peter Hagelstein said Wednesday through a spokesman.

"He put forth his theory on the basis that the Pons-Fleischmann experiment had some validity," said the spokesman, Eugene Mallove.

The chemists' chance to make their case comes Monday night, at a meeting in Los Angeles of the Electrochemical Society. The Stanford and Texas A&M groups will be there. That could be make-it-or-break-it for cold fusion.

Stanley Pons of the University of Utah and Martin Fleischmann of the University of Southampton in England, who kicked off the fusion sweepstakes with a press conference on March 23, will be there.

They claim to generate energy with palladium and platinum electrodes dipped in a beaker of so-called heavy water. It is made of oxygen and deuterium, a form of hydrogen with a neutron in the nucleus.

Unlike the meeting of the physicists, the electrochemists' meeting will be closed to the press, according to tradition, said V.H. Branneky, the executive director of the Electrochemical Society.

All the confusion could be erased if Pons and Fleischmann would reveal the details of their experiment, which they have not done.

"In terms of the original experiment, there's no reason not to release all the information they know," said Brophy. "If there were confirmation, they wouldn't be taking all this guff."

On the other hand, they probably will not write up details of their work until June, Brophy said. "Their choice at this time is to get additional data."

The worldwide swell of excitement over cold fusion recalls the recent excitement over high-temperature superconductivity, with one important difference.

All of the important findings in the superconductivity scramble were confirmed within days at laboratories around the world. That has not been the case with cold fusion.

Science magazine this week recalled a 1972 incident in which three University of Utah scientists claimed to have invented an X-ray laser. Most other labs that tried couldn't reproduce the results. But a few did.

Ultimately, said Science, the Utah researchers were proven wrong. The disproven results were referred to as the "Utah effect."

"If cold fusion fizzles," said Science, "the Utah effect will have struck again."

Physical Activity May Be Trigger To 24-Hour Clock

By Malcolm Ritter
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Physical activity may play an unexpected role in keeping mammals synchronized to the 24-hour day, researchers reported today.

Their findings question the conventional view that in most mammals, the brain sets the 24-hour biological clock chiefly by monitoring light and darkness in the environment.

The circadian clock governs many body processes, and in humans, disruptions lead to such conditions as jet lag and some cases of insomnia.

In today's issue of the British journal Nature, researchers said they found that onset of darkness failed to exert its usual clock-setting effect in hamsters if the animals were immobilized.

So the real clock-setting mechanism may be the physical activity that darkness usually causes in hamsters, suggested Fred Turek of Northwestern University and O. Van Reeth of the Free University of Brussels in Belgium.

The paper "is going to generate considerable controversy over the next year," commented Dale Edgar, director of the chronobiology and behavioral pharmacology laboratory at the Sleep Research Center of the Stanford University School of Medicine.

But he said its relevance to humans was not clear. The experiment has only been done in hamsters, he stressed. He also said that in humans, social interaction and the scheduling of meals strongly influence the setting of the clock.

He said previous research, including his own, has shown that the scheduling of physical activity can reset the clock in animals. Nobody knows whether that strategy can affect the human clock, he said.

In the Nature paper, Turek and van Reeth reported that unrestrained hamsters showed the usual changes in their 24-hour activity schedules in response to darkness or injections of the sleeping-pill drug triazolam.

In contrast to its effect in humans, triazolam increases physical activity in hamsters, as does darkness. Either treatment can advance or delay the clock setting, depending on the time in the 24-hour cycle at which it is given, researchers said.

But when animals were immobilized, the effect of darkness was eliminated and the impact of triazolam was largely absent, they reported. Hamsters were immobilized by placing them in a transparent tube.

Edgar said it is not clear whether the clock is affected by the physical activity itself, or the heightened wakefulness that accompanies the activity.

EPA Report Indicates Indoor Threat May Rival Known Outdoor Pollution

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Pesticides, radon, asbestos, tobacco smoke, bacteria and mold that Americans inhale inside poorly ventilated offices and homes may threaten their health as much as outdoor pollution, according to a draft federal report.

The Environmental Protection Agency report on indoor air pollution was made public at a hearing Wednesday by Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J.

EPA was to have submitted its report to Congress by last October, but an aide to Lautenberg said it has been delayed because the Office of Management and Budget had not completed a review. The senator's office had received the draft copy from EPA in January on condition it be held until the budget office finished going over the document.

"The administration apparently is not ready to address the problem of indoor air pollution," Lautenberg said as he broke the embargo on the document, which calls for nearly $100 million to expand research over the next five years.

The report also attributes more than $1 billion in medical costs from cancer and heart disease to eight indoor pollutants.

It recommends training and education programs for the public and government and endorses establishment of indoor pollution guidelines.

"It is unacceptable for the administration not to have completed or to have made available this report seven months after the law required it to be completed and made available," said Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine. He blamed OMB for delaying the release.

"Yes, it is still here and is actively under review," said OMB spokeswoman Barbara Clay, whose agency received the report in late January from EPA.

EPA spokesman Chris Rice did not return a reporter's phone call.

"We decided to release it because we've given them every opportunity," said Steve Schlein, press secretary to Lautenberg, who heads the Senate Superfund, ocean and water protection subcommittee.

Mitchell introduced legislation in March requiring EPA to establish a $49.5 million plan for indoor air quality, Schlein said.

At the hearing, a federal worker sickened by fungi and chemicals at EPA headquarters and a Congressional Research Service worker who became ill working at the Library of Congress recounted years of frustra-

One witness said his wife had joined a growing legion of "environmental refugees" isolated in their homes or even on the streets because of sensitivity to pollutants and chemicals trapped indoors.

"Our government is devoting tremendous resources in maintaining healthful outdoor air. However, since Americans spend 90 percent of their day indoors, and since some populations including the very young, the elderly, and the chronically ill spend 100 percent of their day indoors, government agencies must devote commensurate attention to the problems of indoor air," said Charles Lamielle of Voorhees, N.J., on behalf of his housebound wife Mary.

Indoor pollution from radon, as well as molds and fungi that cling to moist surfaces pose special problems.

"Because indoor pollutants are not as easily dispersed or diluted as outdoor pollutants, concentrations indoors may be much greater than those outdoors," said Erich Bretthauer, acting administrator in the Office of Research and Development of EPA.

Responding to accusations of bureaucratic foot-dragging, Bretthauer said EPA's indoor air research program since 1983 "has made significant contributions to our understanding of indoor air exposures and methods to reduce those exposures."

He said the 1990 budget proposed quadrupling the funds for the indoor air program office.

Potassium May Help Lower Blood Pressure

BOSTON (AP) — Potassium in the diet may play an important role in helping the body excrete salt and ward off high blood pressure, suggests research published today.

The research, when combined with evidence from epidemiological surveys of large population groups, strengthens the belief that too little potassium could be a cause of hypertension.

In the latest study, doctors compared the blood pressures of 10 healthy people on very low-potassium diets and diets with normal amounts of this nutrient.

"When these people ate diets low in potassium, their blood pressures went up. One of the main reasons seems to be related to sodium excretion. When not eating enough potassium, they could not get rid of enough sodium," said Dr. G. Gopal Krishna.

Krishna, a researcher at Temple University in Philadelphia, directed the study published in the New England Journal of Medicine.

During 10 days on the low-sodium diets, the volunteers' blood pressures rose from a mean of 119 over 77 to 126 over 81.

AIDS Risk In Blood Is Slight

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

BALTIMORE — Johns Hopkins researchers released results Wednesday of a study suggesting that the chances of getting the AIDS virus through a blood transfusion — while minuscule — may be somewhat higher than previously thought.

In a study of 4,100 cardiac patients in Baltimore and Texas, the researchers measured the risk of getting the virus from a transfusion at one out of 36,000 for every unit of blood received.

The federal Centers for Disease Control have been putting the risk at one of 100,000 — a figure officials there have always acknowledged was merely a "best guess." The study by researchers at the Hopkins School of Public Health is believed to be the first to actually measure the chances of getting the virus. Its results are reported in Thursday's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

"What this should say to the public is that the risk of infection (from a blood transfusion) is very, very small," said Dr. Noah Cohen, one of the study's authors. "Our blood supply is quite safe."

How They Voted

WASHINGTON — Here's how area House members were recorded on major roll call votes in the week ending April 28. The Senate was not in session.

BUDGET BATTLE — By a vote of 172 for and 252 against, the House defeated an amendment sponsored by the Democratic leadership in hopes of getting Republicans, Democrats, conservatives, liberals and moderates to agree on budget priorities.

This occurred during debate on a bill (HR 2072) providing $4.7 billion in supplemental appropriations for domestic programs in the remaining five months of fiscal 1989. It caused Democratic leaders to abruptly pull the bill from the floor.

The bill's pricetag is $2.6 billion more than sought by the Bush Administration, as a result of the Democratic-led Appropriations Committee adding money for housing, homeless, veterans, anti-drug and other domestic programs. At issue was how to cut the overall federal budget to make room for the additional spending.

The plan rejected by this vote called for across-the-board cuts affecting most discretionary spending programs in the remainder of fiscal 1989 and totalling nearly 2.6 billion. Because defense as well as social programs were seen as being impaired, conservatives and liberals joined to provide the wide margin of defeat.

Sponsor Tom Foley, D-Wash., the House majority leader, said the amendment offers members "the first opportunity we will have this year to indicate whether we are going to live within the budget restraints...."

Objecting to defense cuts, Joseph McDade, R-Pa., called the measure "management by meat cleaver."
 Members voting yes supported the Democratic leadership's budget plan.

North Carolina voting yes: Walter Jones, D-1, David Price, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Charles Rose, D-7, James Clarke, D-11.

Voting no: Tim Valentine, D-2, Martin Lancaster, D-3, Howard Coble, R-6, W.G. Hefner, D-8, Alex McMillan, R-9, Cass Ballenger, R-10.
 Not voting: none.

TO WAIVE BUDGET ACT — The House agreed, 223 for and 198 against, to debate the supplemental appropriations bill (above) under a rule waiving the fiscal restraint of the Congressional Budget Act. This cleared the way for floor consideration of the measure (HR 2072).

The waiver was needed because the bill's $4.7 billion pricetag exceeded legal spending limits Congress imposed on itself for 1989 under the budget act. The House and Senate often grant such waivers so they can spend more than they previously allowed themselves.

Opponent Bob Michel, R-Ill., the minority leader, said the regular granting of budget waivers "explains in part why the deficit is still where it is."

Members voting yes wanted to exempt the supplemental appropriations bill from statutory spending limits.

 North Carolina Voting yes: Walter Jones, Valentine, Lancaster, Price, Neal, Rose, Hefner, Clarke.
 Voting no: Coble, McMillan, Ballenger.

Letter-Writing Mom Forms Group To Fight Television Violence, Sex

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Terry Rakolta, the Michigan woman who captured attention with a letter-writing campaign to advertisers on a network show she found offensive, on Wednesday announced a campaign to put more family programs on prime-time television.

"Our emphasis ... will be to promote private, voluntary efforts by the advertisers and the networks to raise the standards on network television," Mrs. Rakolta said of her new organization, Americans for Responsible Television.

She said the group's first goal would be the renewal of family viewing time, which she described as at least two hours of nightly prime-time entertainment suitable for children and adults.

"I haven't met anyone who said they want more sex or violence on TV," Mrs. Rakolta told a news conference. "The violence today is so good technically that you're almost a participant in it."

She said her fight against programs she views as inappropriate for children began last year, when her 8-year-old daughter became upset after watching an afternoon talk show that dealt with women who had sex with dogs. But the "straw that broke the camel's back" was a segment of Fox Television's "Married ... With Children."

She lobbied the advertisers with a letter-writing campaign to complain about sexual innuendo and the treatment of women in the popular comedy about a blue-collar family.

The advertisers later pulled their commercials from the show, with Procter & Gamble Co., McDonald's Corp., Tambrands Inc., and Kimberly Clark Corp. telling their advertising agencies not to buy time on the show.

In March, two advertisers — Ralston Purina Co. and General Mills Inc. — canceled plans to run commercials on NBC's "Saturday Night Live" after complaints from the Rev. Donald Wildmon's American Family Association of Tupelo, Miss. The Christian group has campaigned for more than a decade against what Wildmon sees as pornography and excessive violence in magazines, on television and in the movies.

TERRY RAKOLTA

Mrs. Rakolta told reporters that "First Amendment rights extend beyond simply turning off the television or turning the channel. "They include the right to voice our objections to the advertisers about the sex and violence being dumped into our homes every night."

She said she planned to mail letters to 5,000 potential supporters for her group to ask that they ask advertisers not to sponsor shows the letter writers consider objectionable.

"A boycott (of products) is always a tool; it's a tool of last resort," Mrs. Rakolta said. "Networks and sponsors can work it out."

Mrs. Rakolta said that, "when the set is on, children are usually being exposed to programming that is inappropriate and potentially harmful."

The publicity around Mrs. Rakolta's attacks against the Fox show netted 832 letters, most in sympathy, to her Bloomfield Hills home. She said she hoped to use those supporters as the base for her group.

ABC Cancels Second 'Reality' Television Program This Week

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — For the second time in a week, ABC has canceled the scheduled broadcast of a reality-based television show, pulling "Scandals II" from its primetime lineup.

The one-hour sampler of famous scandals was to have been broadcast Saturday night, the network said Wednesday.

The "Scandals II" announcement came one day after ABC said it had removed its "Crimes of Passion II" from its schedule last Saturday after the crime reenactment program failed to generate any paid advertising.

In a statement on the "Scandals II" move, ABC Entertainment President Robert Iger said the network was not bowing to "outside pressure groups, lack of advertiser support or complaints by the persons featured in the program."

Rather, Iger said, "We are currently considering the appropriate role for reality-based programming on our schedule. In the interim we will consider each program on a case-by-case basis."

The program replacing "Scandals II" probably will be a one-hour drama, said ABC spokesman Jim Brochu. The first "Scandals" program was one of several fact-based shows created in the wake of last year's crippling scriptwriters strike. While some of the shows produced healthy ratings, many were attacked for lurid content.

The original "Scandals," broadcast Oct. 29, produced an unspectacular rating of 8.0, which means that 8 percent of the nation's homes with television watched the show. But the rating was good enough to prompt a sequel.

When it was unable to sell any advertising for "Crimes of Passion II," ABC was forced to fill the time period with the lackluster comedy pilots "Livin' Large" and "Heart and Soul." A show that runs without paid advertising would be rated by the A.C. Nielsen company as zero. A zero would hurt the network's overall rating during the crucial May sweeps, one of four periods when ratings are used to determine a local affiliate's advertising rates.

The network attributed the lack of advertiser interest in "Crimes of Passion II" to increased sensitivity about the depiction of graphic violence and sex on television.

In recent weeks, advertisers have pulled their commercials from NBC's "Saturday Night Live" and "Nightingales" and the Fox Broadcasting Corp.'s "Married ... With Children." All three shows have been criticized by viewers and advocacy groups for their frank language and sexual situations.

Johnson Will Have To Pay Tax

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MONTPELIER, Vt. — Don Johnson is back on the hook for a Vermont income tax bill of more than $50,000 — at least for now.

The state Senate's Finance Committee on Wednesday killed a provision of a new tax law that would exempt entertainers from state income tax, retroactive to Jan. 1, 1986, and applying to Johnson.

The committee approved the exemption Tuesday, but 24 hours and dozens of telephone calls from angry constituents later, the panel reversed itself.

"We realized we had been rather hasty in this matter," committee Chairwoman Mary Just Skinner told her colleagues Wednesday.

The state had billed Johnson for money he earned in Vermont while making the 1987 film "Sweetheart's Dance." The movie and television actor is best known for his starring role on television's "Miami Vice."

Johnson's press agent, Elliott Mintz, said Johnson was vacationing Wednesday and could not be reached.

Tax officials had asked for quick action on the exemption, saying Johnson had appealed his tax bill and threatened to spread the word in Hollywood that Vermont was a bad place to make movies if he were forced to pay it.

Backers of the exemption, including Gov. Madeleine Kunin, said it would make moviemakers more welcome in Vermont.

Vermont's income tax is figured as 25 percent of a person's federal tax liability.

Song Writer

FLORENCE, Ariz. (AP) — Gary Busey, who sang on film as Buddy Holly, says he's been writing songs for a band he's forming for a concert this summer.

"I'm putting together a musical situation," said the 44-year-old Busey, who was a drummer and singer before becoming an actor. "I've been writing songs with Robbie Robertson and Rick Danko (both formerly of The Band) for a performance this summer in L.A. We're going to play rock 'n' roll — straight rock 'n' roll, country rock 'n' roll and gospel rock 'n' roll. And I'm going to do 15 minutes of Buddy Holly in the middle."

Johnny Cash Hospitalized

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Country music superstar Johnny Cash entered a hospital in France because of a pulled ligament, his sister says.

Cash, 57, was admitted Wednesday to American Hospital in Paris but his injury apparently was minor and he was expected to be released today, said Reba Hancock, his sister and spokeswoman.

"He's fine. He did his show last night," Hancock said.

Cash, his wife, June Carter Cash, and an entourage left the United States about 10 days ago and are expected to return May 17, Hancock said.

The injury was unrelated to Cash's heart problems, she said.

Cash underwent double bypass heart surgery in December at Nashville's Baptist Hospital and was released after a few weeks.

Cash, a member of the Country Music Hall of Fame, is known for hits such as "I Walk the Line," "Folsom Prison Blues" and "Ring of Fire."

Kristofferson Has Role As Journalist

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Singer-actor Kris Kristofferson is playing a North American journalist in a movie about Augusto Cesar Sandino, the Nicaraguan revolutionary who fended off the U.S. Marines in the 1930s.

The movie began shooting this week in Sandino's dusty boyhood home of Pio XII, 30 miles east of Managua. Wednesday's edition of the Sandinista government's official newspaper Barricada said the filming had brought daily life in the town to a virtual standstill.

Monroe Charged

County entertainer Bill Monroe, the "father of bluegrass music," has been charged by an ex-girlfriend with assault and battery. Wanda Huff, 52, of Birmingham, Ala., alleged the 77-year-old entertainer hit her with a Bible, knocked her down and then kicked her.

Creator Of TV 'Golden Girls' Says There's More To Come

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Susan Harris says "The Golden Girls" began with a suggestion that she write about a group of older women in Miami.

But when the "suggestion" comes from Brandon Tartikoff, president of NBC Entertainment, it's a little hard to dismiss.

"I hadn't wanted to do any more television," said Ms. Harris, who had created "Soap" and "Benson."

But that appealed to me. I like writing about older people. They have more to say. They've led rich lives. That's really how it started. After that I came up with the concept and the characters. We got the stars we wanted."

The 100th episode of "The Golden Girls" airs Saturday. The Emmy-winning series just completed its third season. It was fifth in the Nielsen ratings for the season. Another Harris creation, "Empty Nest," a spinoff of "The Golden Girls," was in ninth place.

"The Golden Girls" are four women living in retirement in the same house in Miami. Bea Arthur plays Dorothy Zbornak, a no-nonsense former schoolteacher whose husband left her for a younger woman; Betty White is Rose Nylund, a naive, widowed grief counselor; Rue McClanahan plays Blanche Devereaux, an aging Southern coquette; and Estelle Getty is Dorothy's mother, Sophia Petrillo, whose uncontrollable bluntness was caused by a stroke.

"Estelle Getty was the only unknown when we started casting," said Ms. Harris. "She came in, read the part and in two minutes we said, 'That's it.'"

The cast of the pilot also included a gay houseboy, but he was reluctantly dropped when the roles of the four women proved to be much richer than expected.

"The contrast between the four women breeds the conflict," said Ms. Harris. "We had to make them quite different or you'd end up with 30 minutes of 'nice.' Dorothy comes from Queens. She's the most outspoken, the sharpest, the strongest character. She's a survivor. Rose is not quite in the world. She's been protected all her life, so there's a bit of the ingenue about her. She's an innocent, a bit like Jessica in 'Soap.'"

"Blanche is a throwback to the Old South. She's antebellum. She's Scarlett O'Hara. She thinks she's hot stuff, but she's growing older and is having a tough time. Sophia is an Italian mother who spent a lot of time in New York. She's a tough cookie. We gave her a small stroke that wiped out her brain censor so she could say what everyone else would like to say but doesn't."

Ms. Harris said she believes there's lots of life left in the "Girls" and that the award-winning show can go on for many more years.

Ms. Harris confines her writing these days to motion pictures. "My husband calls me the creator-deserter," she said. After "Soap," she married Paul Witt of Witt-Thomas Productions, makers of "The Golden Girls" and "Empty Nest."

She no longer writes episodic TV because for four years she wrote every script for "Soap."

"I will never, ever do that again," she said. "I had to give up my life to do that. It was a nightmare. I never stopped working. I couldn't get sick."

The Associated Press

Susan Harris likes 'writing about older people'

I worked day and night. I'll never do that again. My son was 9 or 10 at the time, and I didn't get to see much of him.

"It's a tradeoff. Before 'Soap' I lived in a tiny house in the Valley. I discussed it with my son. I said this was a way to buy a house. So when he was 14, he had a nice house with a swimming pool. I don't regret it. It gave me a chance to be more creative than I'd ever been."

Ms. Harris said she now works slowly. She also takes plenty of time out to spend with her family, which now includes a new baby.

Before she began writing she was a housewife who held a number of different jobs.

"I began writing the way a lot of people do," she said. "I was watching TV one night and it was such garbage. I said I could write better than that. I got a copy of a teleplay and used it as a guide. I sold the first thing I wrote, a script for 'Then Came Bronson.'"

After that she wrote for "All in the Family," "Maude" and other comedies, then created "Fay."

Ms. Harris is still angry about the fate of "Soap." She said it was the victim of misinformation.

Jill Ireland Fights New Round Against Body-Crippling Cancer

By Bob Thomas
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — It started again, Jill Ireland recalls ruefully, just two months before the five-year milestone when she would finally be considered free of cancer.

In 1984, the blond, English-born actress-producer underwent surgery for removal of her right breast and eight lymph nodes under her right arm. During the six months of chemotherapy she wrote a book about her ordeal, "Life Wish," which became a best seller.

She and her husband, tough-guy actor Charles Bronson, resumed their lives, and she co-produced his film, "Murphy's Law," and co-starred with him in "Assassination." Then in April 1988, she felt pain just above her collarbone. It was treated with local radiation.

"After that, my whole shoulder began to be excruciatingly painful and would swell up," she recounted from her hotel room in Arlington, Tex., where she is undergoing intense treatment. "I began losing the use of my right arm."

"I kept being told by the doctors that it was the result of radiation. It got very bad, and I developed a bad cough. They discovered I had cancer in my lungs. Then they discovered I had cancer in my femur, my hip and my thyroid."

"I had been given the Betty Ford Award here two years ago by the Komen Foundation. I came back last year, even though I didn't feel very well, because Nancy Reagan was receiving it. When I was here, I met a doctor, George Blumenshein, who said, 'I hear you've had a recurrence of cancer; what are you doing about it. I said radiation. He didn't say very much, but silence can say quite a lot.'"

Her condition worsened, and she recalled meeting the doctor from the Arlington Cancer Center. She called ting 9-inch metal skewers into her shoulder and heating them to 160 degrees in an attempt to burn the tumors. She also is undergoing radiation and chemotherapy.

Miss Ireland said laughingly that she hoped her renewed illness wouldn't upstage her new book. Among other things, "Life Lines" deals with another painful subject: her ordeal with her adopted son, Jason, who fell victim to drug and alcohol abuse. He is one of Miss Ireland's seven children.

"I started writing right after 'Life Wish,'" she said. "I knew I wanted to write about Jason, about adoption, about DNA (deoxyribonucleic acid — the material of which genes are made)."

"When you adopt a child, the birth mother is never out of the picture. I thought I had adopted the child of a married architect and a young Irish girl. Instead I had adopted a drug addict's child."

"It's sad because he's a wonderful person. He's strong, but he had all these problems. I grew up in the school of thought that environment counted. Now of course I've switched right around. I believe that DNA is what counts. ... Poor Jason, he's gone through the torture of the damned."

She added that Jason was proud of her book and said, "If it can help one kid, it's worth it."

him, and was on the jet to Dallas the next day. "He X-rayed everything and showed me where everything was," Miss Ireland continued. "He suggested putting a catheter into a valve going into my heart, and he started very, very heavy doses of chemotherapy. "Unfortunately, it didn't work, so I came back. What they're doing now is hyperthermia. It's an all-day thing; I go to the hospital at 9 in the morning, and I'm there until 7 in the evening." The hyperthermia involves injec-

 Percentage plays are the mark of a skilled player. However, when you know the distribution required for such a line to succeed cannot exist, you must consider an alternative. North's two clubs over West's 16-18 point no trump was the Landy Convention. Vulnerable, it promised at least 10 cards in the major suits and a reasonable hand. South's jump to three hearts was invitational. With his holding, the major suits alone could produce 10 tricks, so the king of clubs was a "kicker." North's raise to game was faultless.

West led the king of diamonds on which East dropped the queen. Since that guaranteed possession of the jack or a singleton, West continued with a low diamond. In with the ten, East shifted to the jack of clubs. There was no point in covering, so declarer played low and ruffed the second club in dummy.

Since the defenders had their book, declarer had to bring in the trump suit without loss. Normally, the best line would be to cash one high trump. If an honor drops from East, declarer should then cross to the closed hand and finesse West for the other honor.

However, South had done his arithmetic. His side's combined assets were 20 points, and East had shown 4. Therefore, West had to have both heart honors for his 16 points. So declarer came to hand with the ten of spades and led the nine of hearts, running it when West followed low. Had West split his honors, declarer would have returned to hand with the ace of spades to finesse for the other honor. Either way, the contract was safe.

Thousands Of Chinese Students Stage Protest

By John Pomfret
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — Their independent unions spurned by Communist leaders, tens of thousands of students pushed through police lines today into central Tiananmen Square on the 70th anniversary of China's first student movement.

Thousands also demonstrated in Shanghai and Nanjing for democracy and press freedom while several hundred took to the streets in Changsha. Three hundred journalists from the state-run press joined the march in Beijing.

Students plowed into Tiananmen — China's symbolic seat of power — throughout the day.

By mid-afternoon, more than 70,000 people, about half of them students, packed the 100-acre expanse in a collage of chanting, flag-waving and singing.

Red and white banners calling for freedoms unheard of in China since the Communists came to power 40 years ago flapped in the wind.

Bystanders, lining the streets by the thousands, had applauded and cheered the demonstrators as they marched along the 10-mile route to the square.

It was the sixth time in three weeks that students have made the pilgrimage to demand fundamental reforms of China's autocratic political system.

"If this continues, China has hope," said one onlooker.

Thousands of workers ignored government warnings that they would be fired if they attended the march, said one government employee.

"This is the first time in 40 years such a big movement for democracy has occurred. I'll just show up at work tomorrow and see what happens," he said.

About an hour before the protest ended and students left the square, their leaders announced that students' two-week old class boycott would end Friday.

At least 55 schools participated in today's march, including small delegations from more than 10 schools outside Beijing including Hong Kong's Chinese University.

In a statement read at the square, student leaders reiterated their demands for a dialogue with the government. They had called today's march after authorities on Wednesday refused to recognize their newly formed union and open up a dialogue with democratically elected student representatives.

The government has called the student demands "naive and impulsive" and called the students' United Association of Beijing Universities illegal.

Police today put up far less resistance than during last Thursday's protest, when 150,000 students and supporters marched to the square in Communist China's biggest demonstration ever.

But outside Beijing Normal University, thousands of students came up against a wall of several hundred police and there was much pushing and shoving during which police grabbed protesters' hair before the students broke through.

Students and 1,000 police collided again in front of the Beijing Hotel when protesters from colleges in the eastern part of the city moved toward the square. After several tries, they too plowed through police lines.

Students walked hand-in-hand down Beijing's broad boulevards. Some wore red headbands reading, "Mom, I'm not wrong."

"Rise ye who refuse to be slaves," a group of students bellowed, singing the Chinese national anthem, as they passed the Communist Party headquarters at Zhongnanhai.

"Down with bureaucracy," others chanted.

The headquarters was the scene of a dramatic stand-off between students and hundreds of police two weeks ago. Thursday, only four guards stood at the gates.

By early afternoon, police presence had all but vanished from Tiananmen. A banner reading, "The world is for all," was hung over a huge portrait of Sun Yat-sen, who led China's first revolution in 1911. The portrait was erected earlier this week in the square for annual May Day celebrations.

"Every country demands democracy," said a teacher from the Central Academy of Industrial Arts. "Democracy is developing here, too."

Three hundred journalists from the state press held an unprecedented protest at the official Xinhua News Agency, calling for a free press. Some said they had been locked inside their offices and had to sneak out to take part.

The group later joined the student march, carrying banners supporting Qin Benli, the editor of a liberal Shanghai newspaper, the World Economic Herald. Qin was sacked last week after his paper was critical of the government.

"Our mouths cannot say what we want them to," said one banner.

As the protest ended, student leader Wu'er Kaixi urged students to continue their efforts to inform citizens about their movement.

Students gathered contributions from the crowds and gave out pamphlets explaining their movement.

"We need the support of the people!" yelled one young man as bystanders stuffed bills into his box. "Without the people, we can do nothing."

In Shanghai, about 7,000 students gathered near Communist Party offices with banners calling for democracy. Witnesses said onlookers were kept from the protest. In Nanjing, about 1,000 university students marched to the provincial government headquarters, another witness said.

And in Changsha, capital of Hunan province, about 300 students marched in sympathy of the Beijing rally, an American teacher said.

In contrast to last week's march, when students were angered by the government's opposition to their demands for democracy and freedom, today's march had an air of defiant celebration.

"Today is a holiday, and we are here to remember May 4th," said one student.

On May 4, 1919, Beijing University students launched a campaign for science and democracy, showing intellectuals for the first time their power to lead the masses and affect policy.

Opposition Predicts Victory Or Bloodshed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PANAMA CITY, Panama — The opposition closed its presidential campaign with some supporters predicting victory in Sunday's vote over the handpicked candidate of Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega — or bloodshed.

"Count the votes or count the dead," read one of the opposition coalition's signs Wednesday at a rally attended by 100,000 flag-waving people on Via Espana in downtown Panama City.

President Bush, opposition candidates and others predict that Noriega, the Defense Forces chief and Panama's de facto ruler, will steal the elections. The government promises clean elections.

Opposition presidential candidate Guillermo Endara said that if the public will is denied through vote-rigging, "Panamanians will march in defense of liberty."

Never again, Endara said in reference to Noriega, "will the will of one man be above the will of the Panamanian people."

The opposition candidates say there is no hope of democracy in Panama as long as Noriega, indicted in Florida last year on charges of drug smuggling and money laundering, remains in power. Noriega has denied the charges.

Opposition supporters snake-danced through the crowd Wednesday night with a black coffin pasted with a smiling picture of Noriega and a pineapple attached atop. "Pineapple face," a derogatory name the opposition uses for Noriega, refers to his rough complexion.

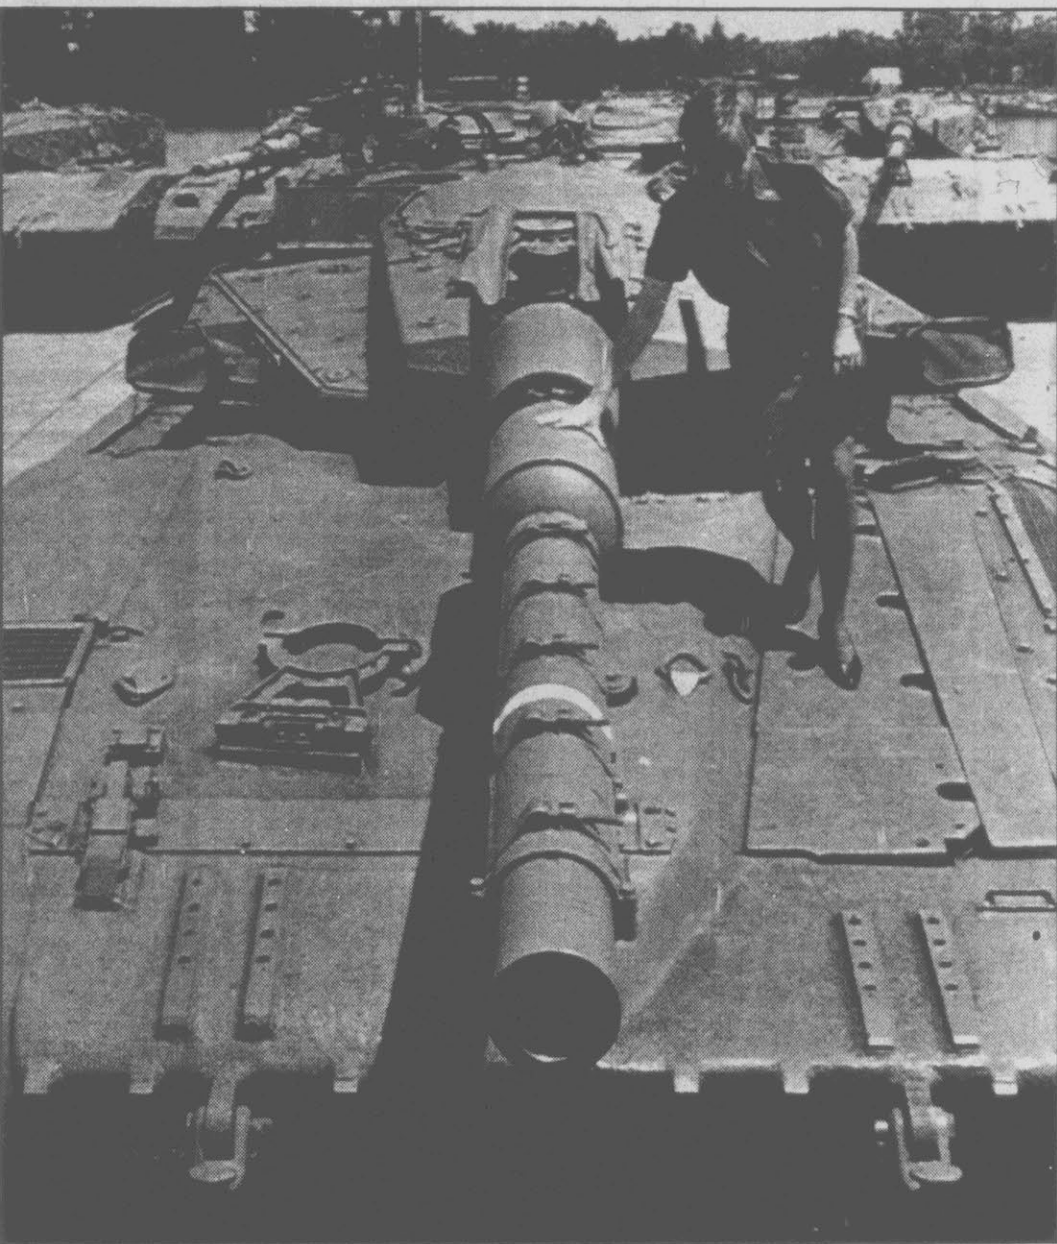

The pro-government coalition closes its presidential campaign tonight with a rally. Its ticket is headed by Carlos Duque Jaen, a close business associate of Noriega.

The central issue of the campaign has been Noriega, and not Panama's protracted economic and social problems.

The opposition contends government workers, representing about 20 percent of the labor force, are being pressured by Noriega forces to attend the rally tonight and that the government will truck thousands into the capital to swell the ranks.

On Sunday, voters will choose a president, two vice presidents, 67 national legislators and 510 precinct representatives.

Panama has about 2.2 million people and about 1.2 million registered voters. At a news conference Wednesday, second opposition vice presidential candidate Guillermo Ford said Sunday's vote "is the last peaceful opportunity for change."

Soviets May Grant Right To Strike

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — Labor unions will gain the right to strike in new legislation designed to free them from decades of meek subservience to the Communist Party and government, a leading Soviet union official said.

Unions "must have the right to stop work at enterprises, in organizations and institutions as a means of pressure on the administration for speeding up the resolution of labor disputes," Stepan A. Shalaev told the labor newspaper Trud in an interview published Wednesday.

But Shalaev made clear that the Central Council of Trade Unions that he chairs does not expect strikes to become as common as they are elsewhere.

"The decision to stop work at an enterprise — this is an extreme measure to be taken only in extreme circumstances," he said.

Shalaev said the draft law, published Saturday, would be discussed by unions for three months. It must eventually be approved by the new Supreme Soviet Parliament, which is considered likely.

Giving unions a limited right to strike appeared to be an effort to prevent labor unrest from taking on the dimension that led to the formation of the Solidarity free trade union movement in Poland.

Solidarity was crushed in a 1981 military crackdown and not reinstated until last month.

Under current Soviet law, unions are not permitted to strike. Instead, they are quiet partners with management and the ruling Communist Party.
