Tar Expected To Crest Today

Several Points Post Record Low Temperatures This Morning

By Jerry Raynor
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Tar River was expected to crest today as excessive ground moisture continues to pose problems for Pitt County farmers.

Bud Greer, chief operator at Greenville Utilities' Water Plant, reported that at 8 a.m. this morning the river water level stood at 16.47 feet above sea level, 3.47 feet above flood level.

"The National Weather Service has informed us that the high crest should be reached today and unless there is heavy rainfall soon, the level will begin to drop," Greer said.

Greer reported a high reading of 59 degrees on Sunday, with a low of 43, and a very cool low early this morning at 39 degrees. "The 39 reading is lower than normal for early May," Greer said, "but it is not a record low for this time of year."

At least four cities across North Carolina broke low readings for today, the Associated Press reported.

In Charlotte, the mercury dropped to 38 degrees at 2:20 a.m., breaking a record low of 41 set in 1967, while Asheville hit a record low of 28.

At the Piedmont Triad International Airport, the weather service reported a low of 32 degrees at 5:00 a.m., breaking the old record of 38 set in 1947. In addition, 32 degrees ties the all-time low for the month of May. The low temperature record for this month was set on May 2, 1963.

The low temperature today at Raleigh-Durham International Airport was 36 degrees, breaking the previous record low of 40 set in 1981.

And in Wilmington, the previous record low for today of 43 degrees set in 1981 was shattered by a reading of 38 at 5 a.m.

Over the weekend in Yancey County, 2 inches of snow accumulated on 6,600-foot Mount Mitchell from Saturday to Sunday. In Ashe County, Jefferson officials reported an inch of snow. Flurries were reported in Boone, but no accumulation.

Sam Uzzell of the Pitt County Agriculture Extension Service said he does not believe "the current conditions are going to be exceptionally adverse to farmers. However, the combination of excessive moisture in the soil and cool days and nights are interfering with planting peanuts and soybeans.

"With the soil temperature lowered, this is also affecting the growth of tobacco and corn and is causing some discoloration in young plants."

Uzzell noted that, "in the event of frost, this will be very harmful to the strawberry crop and will cause peaches, apples and some vegetables to suffer."

The recent heavy rains have already "cut short the strawberry season," Uzzell said. "The moisture has also been the cause of a gray mold that hits ripening strawberries, resulting in some loss at ripening stage. Any who want to buy or pick strawberries," he said, "should do do now. There's still a fair abundance of the berries, but the season will very likely run shorter than in recent years."

One of the things Uzzell said all homeowners should be aware of is the importance of ventilation in buildings. "All house and building vents should be kept open now in order to give buildings the capability of breathing air. With the excessive moisture in the earth, buildings need this. In fact, in this area, vents should be kept open all year except in January and February."

Noriega Soldiers Reportedly Seize Election Tallies

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PANAMA CITY, Panama — Opposition leaders called for a massive march today to protest a presidential election they claim was stolen by Gen. Antonio Manuel Noriega, whose soldiers reportedly seized vote tallies at gunpoint from precinct workers.

Sixteen hours after polls closed, the official tabulation board said it had not received a single vote to count. Witnesses said soldiers stole ballots nationwide, and shots were fired in at least two instances when opposition members objected. There were no reports of injuries.

Both opposition and government-backed parties claimed victory in Sunday's largely peaceful voting, a contest that was seen as a referendum on Noriega's de facto rule and U.S. involvement in Panamanian affairs.

Turnout was high and many people had to wait in line several hours to cast ballots for president, two vice presidents and the National Assembly.

The opposition claimed that Noriega's 15,000-member Defense Forces rigged the voting, with soldiers voting more than once and some ballots cast in the name of dead voters.

"Despite all the irregularities, the opposition has triumphed," opposition presidential candidate Guillermo Endara told a news conference Sunday night. He claimed to have won by a 2-to-1 margin over Noriega's hand-picked candidate, Carlos Duque.

Witnesses, speaking on condition of anonymity, said final tallies of precinct votes were seized by soldiers in Panama City, its suburb of San Migulito and the Atlantic port city of Colon.

At the Venezuela School in Panama City, witnesses said a government representatives offered to take the vote tallies to the central counting place. When the opposition objected, the lights went out and shooting began, and when the lights went back on the ballots were gone, they said.

Witnesses reported similar thefts elsewhere, but the extent of the fraud was uncertain.

In San Miguelito, neighbors said soldiers entered the Orlando Winter gymnasium, a ballot collection point, at about 3 a.m. and began firing rifles and shotguns. The witnesses said people waiting for the tallies to come in from various precincts fled over fences and into private homes.

Vote tallies left behind showed the government losing badly, witnesses said. Witnesses said people were beaten and at least one arrested.

In a statement read over National Radio this morning, Diomedes Rosa, president of the National Tabulation Junta, said it had no precinct reports from local vote collection points to tabulate as of 8:50 a.m., almost 16 hours after voting ended.

Storm-Hit Areas May Get Help

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Federal damage-assessment teams moved into North Carolina today to begin determining if storm-ravaged sections in 17 counties are entitled to federal disaster aid.

Officials said it could be several days before thousands of Forsyth County residents get their electricity restored. About 30,000 households were still without power Sunday.

"We're hoping to get all the main lines back up Monday, but a lot of folks have the wire from the pole to their house torn down," said Gary VonCannon, a division marketing manager for Duke Power Co. in Winston-Salem.

"It doesn't do any good to put that back up until we have the main lines back up," he said.

About 75,000 residents lost power Friday night after tornado-force winds ripped through the county. Five people were killed in the storms, which ravaged parts of Lincoln, Forsyth, Durham and Union counties.

Gov. Jim Martin inspected the destruction on Sunday, telling residents of Lincoln County that the wreckage was "the most intense, most ferocious storm damage" he had seen.

He said experts expected damages to exceed $50 million, and he has asked the Federal Emergency Management Administration to declare the region a disaster area. He expects that decision "within a few days."

Such a classification would entitle residents and businesses in the rav-

Japanese Upset As U.S. Confirms Loss Of Bomb

Hydrogen Bomb Lost Overboard In Pacific In 1965

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — A U.S. military official confirmed today that a hydrogen bomb was lost in the Pacific Ocean near Okinawa when a jet fell off an aircraft carrier in 1965. Many Japanese expressed outrage at the disclosure.

The report was the top story in most Japanese newspapers and was featured on the television news. Japan, the only nation ever attacked with nuclear weapons, remains very sensitive about nuclear arms questions.

The report was disclosed over the weekend in a report from Washington in the current edition of Newsweek magazine.

Asked about the report, a U.S. military spokesman in Tokyo said a nuclear weapon was lost in the Pacific in 1965 when an A-4 Skyhawk plane fell from a U.S. carrier in international waters about 80 miles from the closest point of the Okinawa island chain. The spokesman demanded anonymity.

The Newsweek article said the aircraft and bomb were lost in waters with a depth of 16,200 feet.

The Japanese government does not know the present location and condition of the bomb, and there have been no discussions with the United States about how to deal with it, said a Foreign Ministry official who requested anonymity.

He said his government had no plans to investigate the accident or possible dangers posed by the bomb.

The loss of the one-megaton bomb, which has a force of 1 million tons of TNT, was kept secret at the time, Newsweek said, quoting a report by the Institute for Policy Studies in Washington.

The pilot was killed when the plane carrying the bomb accidentally rolled off the aircraft carrier Ticonderoga, which was on its way from Vietnam to the Japanese port of Yokosuka, said the report.

When the loss of the bomb was reported in a 1981 U.S. Department of Defense listing of nuclear weapons accidents, there was no indication that it occurred near inhabited islands, another Foreign Ministry official said.

"The report said only that it happened 500 miles from the Asian mainland," said the official, who also insisted on anonymity.

In Okinawa prefecture, a string of islands stretching 570 miles south of Japan's main islands, citizens expressed anger, Masaji Shinzato, a reporter for the Okinawa Times, told The Associated Press.

"Shock is running through Okinawa. This seems to represent how Okinawa was used freely by the American military in those days," he said.

There already was a great deal of bitterness over the continuing presence of 35,000 U.S. troops, whose facilities occupy much of Okinawa's territory, he said. At the time of the accident, Okinawa was under U.S. control. It was returned to Japan in 1972, 27 years after Japan's defeat in World War II.

The report said the bomb was lost not far from one of Okinawa's smaller islands, about 200 miles from heavily populated Okinawa Island.

Okinawan leaders of anti-war and anti-nuclear groups and opponents of the U.S. military presence on the island immediately issued denunciations of the way the accident apparently had been handled, local press reports said.

Japan's Socialist and Communist parties, both strongly anti-nuclear, sharply criticized Japan's government and the United States.

"The government must demand that the U.S. government take responsibility for the accident," said Tsuruo Yamaguchi, secre-

Astronauts Swap Balky Computer

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SPACE CENTER, Houston — Atlantis streaked toward a landing in the California desert today after the astronauts stayed up past bedtime replacing a computer that quit during the mission's last full day in space.

The problem posed no threat to the four-day flight — the shuttle has four computers, a backup and a spare — but ground controllers decided to take no chances and had the crew cut short their experiments and install a new one.

"We just don't have the confidence to run with it for entry," said flight director Ron Dittemore.

After the repair job, the five astronauts began stowing their gear for the fiery dash through the Earth's atmosphere and 3:43 p.m. landing at Edwards Air Force Base in the the Mojave Desert. The forecast called for favorable weather.

The computer problem was the only glitch reported on the mission, during which the shuttle sent the $550 million Magellan probe on a 15-month, 800 million-mile voyage to Venus to map its surface with super-sharp radar.

The astronauts' wake-up call this morning consisted of a barking dog and the Beatles' song "A Hard Day's Night," a reference to the repair work the night before.

"Good morning. It's time to come home," Mission Control communicator Ken Cameron told the crew.

A relatively small crowd of 100,000 was expected at the landing site because it is on a weekday, NASA spokeswoman Nancy Lovato said. An estimated 460,000 people watched Discovery's landing March 18, a Saturday.

Flight director Bill Reeves said this morning that the forecast at Edwards was for winds between 9.2 mph and 15.4 mph, meaning Atlantis probably would land on a dry lake bed to test its crosswind handling.

He said if winds dropped below 9.2 mph, the shuttle would probably land on a concrete runway. If the landing takes place on the lake bed, commander David Walker will test the nose-wheel steering by driving off the center line and back at 161 mph.

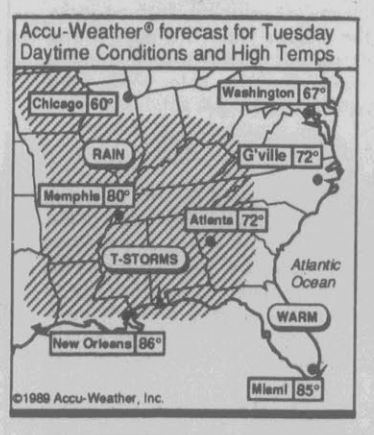

"It's been a nice, clean flight — a good vehicle and good crew," Reeves said. "We're looking forward to a good landing."

The other crew members are pilot Ronald Grabe and mission specialists Norman Thagard, Mark Lee and Mary Cleave.

Sunday's failure occurred in one of four computers that actually fly the shuttle most of the time. The shuttle could land with only one computer.

Walker, who reported the problem, got the computer working again, but ground engineers determined there was a hardware problem and ordered up the spare. The crew took 4½ hours to install the computer and went to sleep an hour late, getting about seven hours of rest.

ECU Creating Regional Cancer Center

ECU NEWS BUREAU

East Carolina University officials have announced plans to establish a regional cancer center which will integrate all activities related to cancer at the ECU School of Medicine and Pitt County Memorial Hospital. The move is expected to yield gains in improved patient care and increased convenience to patients and their families.

The proposal to establish the center was presented to the ECU Board of Trustees at its meeting Friday by Chancellor Richard R. Eakin and medical school Dean James A. Hallock. Pending board approval, Hallock said, the cancer center concept will be implemented immediately under the interim direction of Dr. Albert L. Wiley Jr., professor and chairman of the department of radiation oncology.

Hallock said the center will not entail any major new buildings on the medical campus. However, planning will begin for the inclusion of clinics and offices in a second floor addition to the ECU Radiation Oncology Center.

What the center will provide is a framework to facilitate the interaction of oncology (cancer) services at the medical center, including the activities of approximately 20 clinical faculty members in radiation oncology, medical and pediatric oncology, surgery, and gynecology. Their work in patient care and clinical research will be coordinated with the efforts of a half-dozen basic scientists who devote all their time to cancer research and at least 15 others whose work relates to cancer in some way.

Hallock sees the initiative as a natural step in the fulfillment of the medical school's mission.

"One of our missions is to provide the best care we can to the people of eastern North Carolina," he said. "In terms of the quality of our faculty and facilities, we have reached a critical mass in our ability to deliver rather complete cancer care. A cancer center will pull all this capacity together, enhancing our ability to provide care that is as current and effective as possible."

With respect to patient care, that improvement should come primarily from a more integrated use of the three basic tools that cancer specialists now have at their disposal.

Home Fired On

Police also said a gun was fired into an occupied dwelling at Lot 9, Azalea Gardens Mobile Home Park, in an incident reported at 10 a.m. Saturday.

Police said a bullet that entered through the rear of the mobile home lodged in a bathroom. No injuries were reported in the incident.

Car Wreck

A Bethel man was injured and trapped in his car by hot electric lines Saturday about 1:40 a.m. after his car hit a utility pole on U.S. 13, four miles south of Bethel.

Rescuers spent approximately two hours removing Kevin Cornell Staton, 24, from his car after it collided and tore down a utility pole. Eastcare Air Ambulance Service was called to the scene of the one-car accident and the utility company serving the area cut off power to the area so rescuers could safely enter the vehicle.

N.C. State Highway Patrol Officer D.R. Taylor reported that Staton, of 644 Church St., Bethel, said he attempted to miss a small animal crossing the highway and lost control of the car, running off the road into a ditch and into the utility pole.

Officials at Pitt County Memorial Hospital listed Staton in fair condition this morning.

Damage to Staton's car was estimated at $9,500; damage to the utility pole and lines, $2,500. No charges have been filed, Taylor said.

Regional ECU Cancer Center Is Proposed

"Most of the successes with cancer have come about from multidisciplinary approaches involving a combination of surgery, chemotherapy and radiation therapy," said Wiley, the interim director. "We recognize that no one specialist has all the answers. Each modality has its own forte, but it also has its limitations, so we have to work hand-in-hand."

Wiley said the multidisciplinary approach may be enhanced through the use of "combined" clinics in which patients are seen by not one physician but three — one from each of the specialties. This team concept in the center will be further nurtured through more frequent joint conferences involving a whole range of cancer specialists involved in both patient care and research.

Bringing researchers closer to the physicians who actually deliver patient care is also a key ingredient to the cancer center concept. It assures prompt delivery of new and better methods of diagnosis, treatment and prevention of cancer to the region, said Hallock. A "secondary gain" will be to make ECU more competitive for research grants from major funding sources, which increasingly favor applicants whose projects bridge the gap between laboratory and applied research.

"About two-thirds of all federal cancer research funds go to cancer centers," said Wiley. "If you're an individual investigator you're less likely to get serious attention unless you're working within an integrated center framework."

The other dividend that Hallock expects from the cancer center should be realized by patients and their families in the form of increased convenience and comfort. In the near future, telephone access to all cancer services will be available through a single 800 number staffed by an experienced oncology nurse.

Moreover, the host of hospital and medical school social workers, nurse specialists, clergy, child life specialists and other support personnel who work closely with cancer patients and their families will be organized as a single medical center team in order to minimize confusion and preserve an atmosphere of sensitivity.

Eakin and Hallock believe the development of the new center is especially important for eastern North Carolina, where cancer is not necessarily more common than elsewhere but, according to data, it is diagnosed at a later stage. When treatment for cancer is delayed, the disease is frequently more difficult or impossible to cure.

To strengthen screening and preventive oncology programs, ECU may work through its extensive network of family physician contacts throughout eastern North Carolina. Said Wiley: "We have a big job to do here."

aged counties to apply for federal relief — low-interest loans and grants.

The federal assessment teams will spend today and most of Tuesday surveying damage in Lincoln, Cleveland, Catawba, Union, Durham and Forsyth counties. The damage in Lincoln — the hardest hit of 17 counties affected by Friday's storms and tornadoes — was worse than that left behind when tornadoes raked Raleigh in November, Martin and other state officials said.

"What we saw there was, really, unprecedented," he said. "I've never seen anything like it. There was a swath about 10 miles long, about a half a mile wide with practically every tree torn down.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

The North Trial

More Revelations Ahead

The trial of former marine Oliver L. North has ended with his conviction on three counts. The legal procedures and the debate, however will continue for decades.

North, then a colonel in the U.S. Marines, was at the center of maneuverings to provide arms to Nicaraguan Contras. He faced 12 counts and the jury, chosen as those who knew nothing about the much publicized affair, found him guilty on three counts.

North will be sentenced on the convictions but faces much less punishment than he could have received if he had been convicted on other charges. He had maintained throughout that he was a good soldier who was only following orders.

'...the trial of others awaits and the nation may yet learn more of what went on in the White House during this curious episode of foreign policy.'

His supporters saw the trial's end as a victory of sorts, but the prosecutors believed justice had been served and the legal point made that no one is above the law, not even a marine officer working for the White House.

Thus ends one of the nation's most celebrated trials. The tremendous publicity which surrounded the Iran-Contra affair raised questions about whether a trial of Oliver North was even possible. The selection of a jury which knew nothing about the case even though North had appeared at televised U.S. Senate hearings prompted doubts by some that a fair trial could be held.

It was held and there was a conviction on some counts.

What's more, the trial of others awaits and the nation may yet learn more of what went on in the White House during this curious episode of foreign policy.

The Good News And The Bad News

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — In the normal course of events, most of us would be happy with an extra $159 million in the paycheck — and the legislature's fiscal leadership certainly looked happy when they announced that last year's sale of RJR-Nabisco is expected to generate that kind of tax windfall for the state.

But beneath the smiles, there was concern. And for taxpayers, that concern shold be real. It's nice to get an extra $159 million now and then, but the size of the windfall means that the state may be in greater fiscal trouble than previously has been thought.

Some background. State agencies are operating at five percent below budget this quarter because of an unexpected drop in 1989 tax collections. Gov. Jim Martin has said that he ordered the spending reductions because he is unsure of the severity of the shortfalls. They may be just a quirk, and collections could surge ahead this month. Or, they may indicate economic troubles, even though unemployment is low and inflation is up, two factors which usually spur tax collections.

On top of that bad news comes the good news, provided to legislative leaders by RJR-Nabisco analysts, that capital gains taxes on the sale of stock owned by North Carolinians will reap $159 million for the state over two tax years.

The question which no one can answer — not the budget office, the revenue department nor the RJR analysts — is when that tax will be paid.

One would assume that those who sold big blocks of RJR stock in late 1988 would owe the state money when filed their 1988 income tax returns. One would also assume that they would not pay the state until the April 15 deadline. If those two assumptions can be made, then the state would appear to be in good shape. The revenue report due out any day now should show an influx of payments for capital gains on RJR stock.

But what if the second assumption is not true, and money from RJR's sale has already begun flowing into the treasury? That is one-time money, money which cannot be wisely used to pay for operating expenses, money which cannot be used to compute the revenues which will pay for the budget the legislature is currently writing for the next two years.

Therefore, if the money is already coming in, it means that the state's economy must be even worse that indicated by the collection records for the first three months of the year. It would mean that the unexpected money from RJR stock is disguising some serious problems with the economy.

If legislators seek to be extremely cautious, they will estimate RJR's influence on the budget on the high side. That is, they will estimate that the money has begun to flow in large amounts, and conversely, that other sources of revenue — which can be used to pay for the continuing operation of state government — are running on the low side. Such an approach would mean that the assembly would have to cut either its current operating budget or its plans to expand the operating budget — pay raises, for example.

NATO's Spat Hits a Nerve

Gregory Treverton

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization is in its umpteenth postwar "crisis." This time, familiarly, it's Washington and London against Bonn and the rest, more or less. We want to replace NATO's short-range Lance nuclear missiles based in West Germany, while Bonn wants to throw the Lance into arms control with Moscow soon.

So, what's new? We've seen this all before. As usual, there is less than meets the eye to this crisis. But for the first time there is also more.

There is less because the row is, for the United States, partly self-inflicted. The U.S.-Soviet treaty on intermediate-range nuclear forces was distinctly popular, reflecting the success of Ronald Reagan's 1981 zero-option proposal. Yet that line of policy, and the treaty, left in Europe only those nuclear weapons least palatable to Germans — those with ranges so short as to incinerate German territory. As the conservative's foreign policy spokesman Volker Ruehe put it, "The shorter the range, the deader the German."

A West German consensus against the weapons thus came as little surprise. The latest turn of domestic politics made the consensus into policy. A failing government in Bonn, that of conservative Chancellor Helmut Kohl, clutches for straws of support. His is the urgency of the desperate. It is desperation in the context of a coalition government in which Kohl's junior partner on the left, Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher and his Free Democratic Party, champions the Soviet leadership of Mikhail S. Gorbachev as a historic opportunity to overcome the division of Europe.

The transatlantic bickering is more than it seems, because publicly breaking with the United States is deemed good politics across all the parties in the Federal Republic. Manfred Woerner, NATO's current secretary-general and a West German, is fond of quoting one of his early predecessors, Lord Ismay, on the purposes of NATO — to keep "the Russians out, the Americans in and the Germans down."

Now, for the first time since the end of World War II, there are real questions, not quite framed, about the future shape of Europe and Germany's role in it. Whether he means to or not, Gorbachev is unfreezing a status quo in Europe that, for all the armament and sadness in Eastern Europe, has brought a stability that the Continent has rarely known.

How to respond to Gorbachev's initiatives, especially in arms control, can be thought of along four lines: Much good can come from it; only good can come from it; no good can come from it, and some bad can come from it.

The first line is Genscher's. For him, Gorbachev may or may not survive, but he's the best Soviet leader we've had to deal with. Therefore, we should help him if we can, but in any case, use this opportunity.

The second is that of centrist Atlanticists in the United States. For them, the military confrontation in Europe is swollen beyond reason, onerous for Europeans and expensive for both the United States and the Soviet Union. It can and should be built down.

The third is heard at the edges of the Bush administration. So far, Gorbachev has been mostly talk, with no proof yet that the words aren't just tactics, designed to affect Western public opinion and divide NATO.

The fourth is implicit, only barely beginning to be heard. Gorbachev may be what he seems. But unfreezing the status quo in Europe is a momentous step, not to be done lightly and surely not without some idea of what is to replace it.

Genscher at least has some vision of that unfreezing process. It seems to be one of concentric circles — the European Community after 1992 as a platform for increasing German links eastward, with NATO as a kind of European lever on American dealings with the Soviet Union.

At its center the vision is fuzzier, and has to be — not reunification between the two Germanys but forms of "reassociation" with an East Germany that is, after all, already a de facto member of the European Community through its ties to the Federal Republic.

No comparable vision guides American approaches. The caution of the third and fourth lines is fair, but without some vision, it looks like nay-saying. The second line amounts to counting beans first, deferring the politics for later and hoping for the best.

Imagine a new Yalta, a U.S.-Soviet deal to reshape Europe. The idea, mentioned by Henry A. Kissinger and others, is fool's play, for Moscow and Washington cannot impose their blueprints on Europe, and our allies in particular would be deeply offended if we tried.

Revisiting The Radicals

M.G. Lord

I can't say I was a pal of Abbie Hoffman's, but I can say that I knew him. Indeed, in 1984, I spent New Year's Eve with him — along with a couple busloads of American fellow travelers on a high school playground in Managua, Nicaragua. I'll never forget Abbie or that trip: 10 days that very nearly shook me into becoming a Republican.

Try to remember, if you will, 1984. It was the height of the radical chic romance with the Sandinistas: You couldn't pick up an op-ed page or go to a dinner party without some lefty extolling the beauty of the Matagalpan countryside or the efficacy of the Nicaraguan literacy campaign.

Abbie Hoffman, at the time, had big plans for Nicaragua. And for Abbie Hoffman: He wanted to found, finance and run a "People's Peace Corps" that would ship hundreds of college students into the coffee fields and construction sites of the fun-filled, sun-filled revolutionary utopia to the south. But despite all of Abbie's personal charisma — and he was, in fact, a funny, charismatic man — the People's Peace Corps never took off. It's hard to say exactly what caused the project to spontaneously abort, but after spending time with Abbie's traveling circus, I had a few ideas.

One problem was the Sandinistas themselves — a rough bunch of, well, Marxists in desperate need of a Dale Carnegie course. Mikhail Gorbachev, that sly media manipulator, would have been appalled by their utter indifference to public relations. I certainly was — whatever burgeoning sympathy I might have for the Contras began when I heard Nicaraguan Education Minister Fernando Cardenal's response to an innocuous question about U.S. aggression. "Our orders are kill, kill, kill," he said, "Kill the U.S. soldiers. Kill them with knives, kill them with machetes, kill them with stones, kill them with your hands ..."

"Kill them with the water," Abbie blurted when he saw the tense looks on the faces of his dysentery-ridden charges. His wit, however, wasn't needed to put his troops at ease with the glaring inadequacies of the Sandinistas. Even when confronted with the gross, totalitarian shutdown of the opposition newspaper, they refused to see anything but mice and ducks in a revolutionary Disneyland. (Or perhaps small happy coffee harvesters singing, "Hi-ho, hi-ho, it's off to work we go.")

'...their tale is one of destruction without vision, of revolution without a plan and of pathetic 'middle-aged activists with gray sideburns and sagging bellies' '

I thought of that incident when I read about Abbie's death — the tragic waste of his irony and intelligence on a pack of humorless ideologues. Curiously, I learned of his suicide while reading about another suicide, that of Fay Stender, the radical lawyer who defended Black Panther George Jackson and, years later, was nearly killed in an unprovoked handgun assault by one of Jackson's followers. Maimed, despondent and in chronic pain, Stender took her own life in 1980.

I read about Stender in Peter Collier's and David Horowitz's new book, "Destructive Generation — Second Thoughts About the Sixties," a critical reassessment of the radical left by two former editors of Ramparts magazine. Told in deliberately provocative language — Collier and Horowitz appear to enjoy flaunting their born-again Reaganism — their tale is one of destruction without vision, of revolution without a plan and of pathetic "middle-aged activists with gray sideburns and sagging bellies now agitating for a new anti-Americanism despite the change in what we had once call the 'objective conditions' of global power." It is also the story of what Collier and Horowitz call — with a touch of paranoia — America's Fifth Column: the activities of certain leftists, many of them journalists, in support of America's totalitarian enemies.

Perhaps Collier and Horowitz are a little too sanctimonious, too quick to condemn their onetime fellow revolutionaries and to brand Tom Hayden and Jane Fonda the "Mork and Mindy of California politics." But Abbie Hoffman's grim and sad end — an act evocative of despair and failure — tends to underscore rather than undermine Collier's and Horowitz's points.

I've found myself thinking a lot lately about the activists of the '60s: as I watched those Chinese students rioting on television, as I read yet another article about Gorbachev's reforms and, last week, as I walked past Revolution Books, a shop near Union Square. Perhaps that experience best served to focus my thoughts: In the store's window was a sign — "Outcasts, Downcasts, Slaves, Illegals ... It's Right to Rebel" — and, on the surrounding brick: "Shut Down Wall Street May 1." The glass door, however, was emblazoned with totems of an altogether different sort: Visa, American Express, the Discover Card and Check Welcome.

Ride Stuck

NEW YORK (AP) — A carnival ride malfunctioned Saturday, trapping eight people upside down 60 feet off the ground for 2½ hours, police said.

Two people were hospitalized for treatment of hypothermia, said Sgt. Richard Calabro of the 100th precinct.

The riders were stuck in a "loop-the-loop" ride, which is about six stories high, Calabro said.

Authorities were called about 9:45 p.m. and worked until 12:15 a.m. Sunday to free the riders. Police initially reported 20 people were trapped.

Fitness Challenge

The English and physical education departments at Farmville Middle School are participating in the Great Raisin' Fitness Challenge, designed to promote fitness and good nutrition in students.

The students first had to take the Presidential Physical Fitness Test. Then they had to write an essay responding to the question, "Why is keeping physically fit and eating right important to my future?"

Ninety-two percent of the students wrote essays. The eighth grade led with only one student not participating.

Walk Scheduled

The Community Awareness Association and the Farmville Middle School "Just Say No Club" are holding a "Just Say No Walk" Friday at 4 p.m.

Group Project

Tom Irons, Jeff Likosar and Aaron Tschetter, all of J.H. Rose High School, recently placed second in group projects in the state History Day competition in Winston-Salem. Their project was on Madame Curie.

Drug-Test Rules Face New Challenge In Senate

By Dennis Patterson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A bill that would set rules for drug testing of employees is one piece of legislation that could die a slow death this week if it gets hung up in committee past Thursday, the deadline for bills that do not require state funding.

For more than a year, Sen. Frank Block has maneuvered the drug-testing bill through a study commission, a Senate committee and onto the Senate floor.

But it could all come to nothing this week if the bill stalls in the Senate Manufacturing and Labor Committee. That committee won't have to vote to kill it, just hold it past Thursday.

Any bill which has not passed the House or Senate by Thursday and does not require state funding, cannot be enacted this year and might be kept from consideration next year, depending on the wording of the legislature's adjournment resolution.

"That's definitely a concern," Block said of the Thursday deadline.

Rep. George Daniel, D-Caswell, said he wanted the bill sent to his committee because it concerned the workplace and his committee deals with those issues. Block said he did not doubt Daniel's statement that he did not want the bill sent to the panel to kill it.

"He may not want it killed, but there are others on that committee who do," said Block, who also is a member of the committee. "That's what concerns me."

Last Thursday Block, D-New Hanover, unsuccessfully fought a move by Daniel to have the measure removed from the Senate floor and sent to his committee.

"The bill, in my judgment, is much, much weaker now," Block said then. "My judgment is that everything that can be said about that bill has been heard. I imagine there are still some who oppose any bill at all and they are the ones who want to get the bill someplace where it can be further weakened."

The bill finally approved by the Senate Judiciary III Committee last week would allow employers to test job applicants or current employees for drug use as long as there are written policies for the testing program, a certified laboratory conducts the tests and employees may explain positive results and pay for a re-testing.

Workers could be tested if company officials have a reasonable suspicion of drug use based on work performance or other factors. Officials would be barred from watching an employee or job applicant obtain a specimen unless there was evidence the worker intended to tamper with the specimen or substitute another urine sample for his own.

Random testing would be allowed only for workers in high-risk or safety-related jobs, and test results could be circulated only to a small group of company officials.

Engineers Want States To Share Cost Of Canal

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHESAPEAKE, Va. — The Army Corps of Engineers is asking both Virginia and North Carolina to help foot the bill for the maintenance on the Dismal Swamp Canal connecting Chesapeake's Deep Creek with Elizabeth City, N.C.

"They've been saying they're going to close it ever since I started," said William Brickhouse, who has tended the South Mills Bridge on the North Carolina side of the canal for 27 years. "They say they don't have enough money."

Traffic on the canal has dropped from 2,518 vessels in 1960 to 1,072 in 1988 with the majority of boat traffic using the deeper and wider Chesapeake and Albemarle Canal to travel from Chesapeake Bay to the Albemarle Sound. Only 6 percent of the bay-to-sound traffic used the Dismal Swamp Canal in 1987, according to corps figures. Most of that traffic was pleasure boats.

Given those figures, the corps this year asked both states to help pay the $500,000 annual cost of operating the Dismal Swamp Canal. Now the corps is waiting for the states' reactions.

"They could both come to the meeting, say no, and go home," said Karl Kuhlman, planner for the corps' Norfolk district, of a planned meeting with state officials within the next few months. "Then we throw it to the wolves and see where she lands."

Kuhlmann hopes North Carolina and Virginia will pay 20 percent of the cost of running the canal. "We're not talking about a lot of money. But it would put the canal in a better light for operating funds when we throw it into the federal pie," he said

The canal was first proposed in 1728 by Virginia historian William Bryd. In 1793, slaves began construction of the 22-mile link between the bay and the sound, digging it by hand. It was finished in 1805.

The canal owes its continued existence to the neighboring Great Dismal Swamp National Wildlife Refuge. It began losing traffic to the Chesapeake and Albemarle waterway immediately after that canal was finished in 1859. But in 1974 with the creation of the wildlife refuge, Congress required the canal remain open as an aid to preserving the swamp; operating it as a transportation link was given lesser priority.

That policy has closed the canal in recent dry years for as long as six months a year to preserve water in the swamp.

As part of budget cutting this year, the corps halted dredging on waterways carrying less 25,000 tons of commerce annually.

"The canal doesn't have one ton of commerce a year, much less 25,000 tons," Kuhlmann said. He said that policy is still being reviewed.

Boaters who use the old canal praise its peace and beauty.

"It's a gorgeous, gorgeous trip," said Don Caster, a Californian who motored up the canal last week in a sailboat going from the Bahamas to Maine. "We came this way because of the historical value of the canal. We think it's the prettiest part of the intracoastal waterway."

"You can hear the birds here," said Charlene Tompkins, aboard a sailboat headed for New York.

Elizabeth City residents strongly support the old canal, which made that city a major transportation center until the Chesapeake and Albemarle Canal finally asserted its dominance in the early part of the century.

The city has redeveloped its waterfront, provided free boat slips for visiting boats, and even bought bicycles for visiting boaters. A 1987 survey found that the average boater passing through the city on the old canal spent $127.

"There's been a huge outcry over this," said Yates Barber, chairman of an Elizabeth City committee that studies issues relating to the Dismal Swamp Canal. "But I think we make a good case for keeping it open."

I-85 Wreck

SALISBURY, N.C. (AP) — Members of the Charlotte Fire Department's hazardous materials unit was called to the scene of an accident today along Interstate 85 in Rowan County after a tractor-trailer rig involved in an accident leaked an unidentified chemical, officials said.

The truck driver was killed in the accident, which occurred about 4:30 a.m. between Salisbury and China Grove, while drivers were injured in two other cars, authorities said. The name of the truck driver or company that owns the rig haven't been released.

Traffic was backed up along the interstate for several miles in both directions, according to a spokeswoman for the state Highway Patrol.

Lawnmower Accident

CAMERON, N.C. (AP) — A 25-year-old Cameron man who was mowing grass on a riding lawnmower was killed Saturday when a car drove into the yard and hit him, officials said.

Daniel Kim McDaniel of Cameron, was pronounced dead at the scene, said R.D. Ivey, communications operator with the North Carolina Highway Patrol.

The accident occurred at 4:52 p.m. Saturday on a secondary road about 19 miles west of Lillington near the Harnett County-Lee County line, Ivey said.

McDaniel was operating a riding lawnmover when a car drove into the yard and struck him, Ivey said.

Ivey said the driver, whose name was not released Saturday night, was charged with driving while impaired.

Jumper Injured

MOUNT RUSHMORE NATIONAL MEMORIAL, S.D. (AP) — A member of the U.S. Army's elite Golden Knights parachuting team based at Fort Bragg, N.C., was injured when he landed on the roof of the Mount Rushmore Visitors Center following a stunt.

Sgt. Gary Salmans, 26, had just broken off from a "tri-plane" maneuver Saturday morning when the accident occurred, said Staff Sgt. Dave Hebercorn, a member of the Golden Knights.

During the stunt three members of the team are stacked, one atop the other, by holding on to the parachute below with their feet. When the three broke away prior to landing, Salmans apparently attempted to avoid people in the Rushmore parking lot and ended up landing on the building, the Army said.

Salmans, of Dodge City, Kan. suffered a puncture wound in his thigh and was taken by helicopter to Ellsworth Air Force Base where he was listed in stable condition Saturday night before being transferred to Fitzsimons Army Medical Center in Aurora, Colo.

He remained in stable condition Sunday, said Maj. Baxter Ennis, a Fort Bragg spokesman said. Ennis said Salmans probably will remain in the hospital several days "for observation."

Shooting Death

ASHEVILLE (AP) — The owner of an Asheville cab company was shot and killed early Sunday, police say.

Amos Miller, 65, was killed by a single shotgun blast as he worked at a cab stand, police said.

Miller, who was wounded in the chest, managed to call police before collapsing, said Det. Lee Roy Lunsford. Paramedics responding to the scene took Miller to Memorial Mission Hospital, where he died there at 3:34 a.m., according to a police department release.

"We don't know if it was a robbery or not — right now it's under investigation," Lunsford said.

No arrests have been made.

Waste Protest

SALISBURY, N.C. (AP) — About 150 environmentalists held a rally Sunday and urged that North Carolina pull out of the Southeast Low-Level Radioactive Waste Management Compact.

The environmentalists sang folk songs about radioactive waste and held a mock trial, finding the state of North Carolina guilty of neglecting the public's interest.

"That's really what we're all here about today — to present a unified voice," said rally organizer Lisa Finaldi of the Blue Ridge Environmental Defense league.

The rally at the Catawba College gymnasium was billed as an answer to a recent string of 26 meetings across the state held by the N.C.

Charlotte Fire

CHARLOTTE (AP) — An infant died and his brother and sister were injured when fire swept the living room of their Charlotte home, authorities said.

Several people at the scene said the children were alone when fire broke out shortly after 1 p.m. Sunday.

Icy Weather Greets Mars Hill Graduates

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Sleet and snow greeted Mars Hill College's class of 1989 at its commencement exercises, but the unseasonable weather didn't keep friends and families away.

Max Lennon, president of Clemson University and a Mars Hill alumnus, told 208 graduates at a baccalaureate service Sunday that an increasingly complex world requires high ethical standards that are taken for granted by Christians.

"This new world is thirsty for your leadership," Lennon said.

At the afternoon graduation ceremony, J. Wesley Grayson of Laguna Hills, Calif., who funds a scholarship program that assists over 100 students a year, urged students to use Christian ideals in life.

"All of us need to renew our resolve each morning to start out right," Grayson said, advising students to "keep your cool, learn to listen and be eager to work."

At N.C. A&T State University, New York Rep. Edolphus Towns told more than 980 graduates to use their education to improve the conditions around them.

"You must use your education to build a better place to live," Towns said. "You must come up with a plan to turn things around. You must find solutions and you are compelled to make a change."

Towns, a native of Chadbourn and a 1956 graduate of A&T, urged the graduates to work hard to find their place in society.

"There are no shortcuts," Towns said. "If the elevator is broken, you must use the stairs. You and only you can change the current conditions in America. You can find home for the homelss, jobs for the jobless and peace where there is war."

Richard Leaman, president of Scott Worldwide and director of Scott Paper Co., told 148 graduates of Catawba College in Salisbury there is a five-quality formula for leadership.

Leaman said self-confidence would help develop the qualities of vision, practicality, communication, persevereance and good judgement. It also helps leaders to remember their goals.

"If you've got all those qualities, then forget about then if you can remember the one quality that guarantees all the others — self confidence," Leaman said. "You must stay with your game plan instead of going off course."

Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C., presented the keynote address at commencement exercises for 148 graduates at Methodist College in Fayetteville. Sanford is on the school's board of trustees.

Victims' Mothers Lead Walk

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HILLSBOROUGH, N.C. — Led by the mothers of two men slain in 1987, about 75 people marched past the Orange County jail to protest the scheduled release of the man who confessed to the killings.

Robert Gravette confessed in February 1987 to fatally shooting Curtis Ray Whicker Jr. and William Melton, but has not been tried. After being found mentally incompetent to stand trial, he was ordered to be released April 7.

He has remained in the Orange County jail, however, because of custody problems.

Dot Whicker, Whicker's mother, said Sunday she wanted Gravette to stand trial for the killings.

"He killed my son two years ago then called the Sheriff's Department and confessed," she said. "If he's let out, I'm afraid for myself. I'm scared of him.

"All we want is justice," she said. "He ought to pay for what he's done. Nobody knows what we've lost but us."

Beverly Burch, Melton's mother, said she hoped the march would make people more aware of state laws requiring Gravette's release since he was found incompetent to stand trial but not to be a danger to himself or others.

"I hope to bring it to the attention of the public about laws we have that are so unjust," she said. "We have to get these laws changed, and we have to stick together to do it."

"If they are declared incompetent, they should be held until they are competent," she said. "We know this man is dangerous."

Psychiatrists for the state have testified that Gravette is not a threat to himself or the public, but the decision has drawn criticism from those who opposed the decision to release him, including Orange County Sheriff Lindy Pendergrass.

Charlotte Hospital Will Pay $3 Million In Malpractice Suit

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — In one of the largest settlements in a North Carolina medical malpractice case, Charlotte Memorial Hospital has agreed to pay $3 million to the family of a 32-year-old man who has been in a coma since May 1986.

Malpractice settlements by hospitals are fairly common, lawyers say, but this one is unusual because, unlike most settlements, the amount of the payment was not kept confidential. Documents are on file in Mecklenburg County Superior Court.

Court records show the hospital's insurer, St. Paul Fire & Marine Insurance Co., agreed to pay the parents of Phillip Wesley Plyler Jr. of Charlotte $1,891,159 plus monthly payments of $12,500 for the rest of their son's life. The monthly payments will be generated by a $1,108,841 annuity purchased by the insurance company.

The settlement was reached in February, and the suit was dismissed last month.

Plyler's parents claimed their son suffered irreversible brain damage because emergency room doctors and nurses failed to diagnose internal bleeding from his ruptured spleen.

Plyler, who is single, is living at Wesley Nursing Center in Charlotte and is expected to be in a coma for the rest of his life, said the parents' attorney, Kent Brown.

He was brought by ambulance to Memorial's emergency room May 3, 1986, at 3:04 a.m. after he was injured in a traffic collision.

In addition to a ruptured spleen, Plyler had a broken left leg and knee, a collapsed lung, a broken nose and extensive cuts and fractures on his face, according to the court-approved settlement.

The settlement said emergency room doctors and nurses treated Plyler's other injuries, but the spleen continued to bleed undiscovered for nine hours. Then, about noon, Plyler had a heart attack and went into a coma. Doctors performed emergency surgery, discovered the ruptured spleen and removed it.

Plyler's parents claimed hospital employees should have discovered the spleen injury earlier.

The hospital, despite the settlement, denied that its employees were negligent. The settlement says hospital officials claimed "the existence of the injury to the spleen remained hidden without fault on their part."

Stunt Pilot Injured In Crash

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A Wake County stunt pilot was injured when his plane stalled and crashed near a small Fuquay-Varina airport Sunday, but he escpaed before the aircraft caught fire, authorities say.

Bobby Cox, 59, of Apex, was flying his Pitts S1 single-engine stunt plane at 4:30 p.m. when it went down in woody swampland about one mile east of the Triple-W Airport in Fuquay-Varina, said Capt. D.B. Perry of the Wake County Sheriff's Department.

Cox was in fair condition with chest injuries at Wake Medical Center Sunday evening, a spokesman said.

"His engine stalled out and he went down," Perry said. He said the plane caught fire five minutes after the crash, but that by then Cox had crawled 30 feet from the wreck.

About 20 sheriff's officials, rescue workers, firefighters and volunteers waded through muddy woods and stretches of chest-deep swamp water to reach the pilot.

"He wouldn't let them cut his flight jacket off, so he's OK," said Wendy Jo Turlington, an employee of Aircraft Services of Raleigh who saw the plane go down.

Ms. Turlington said Cox was flying the plane, which he called the "Sassy Brat," upside down when it lost forward motion and dropped into the woods.

"He was just doing some maneuvers on the east side of the field ... and he couldn't pull out of a flat spin," she said. "He was just too far down."

Cox owns and operates an airstrip on N.C. 64 in Apex, Ms. Turlington said.

Cult Leader Orders Own Death To Avoid Capture

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MEXICO CITY — Surrounded by police, the leader of a drug-smuggling cult accused of the ritual mutilation-slayings of 15 people along the U.S. border ordered a subordinate to kill him or suffer in the afterlife.

"He said to kill him because if I didn't it was going to go very badly for me in hell," Alvaro de Leon Valdez, 22, told a news conference Sunday.

De Leon killed cult leader Adolfo de Jesus Constanzo and the ringleader's right-hand man with a machine gun as police closed in on the Mexico City apartment where the gang was hiding, the Attorney General's office said.

"He went crazy, crazy", de Leon Valdez said.

De Leon Valdez, along with four other people including 24-year-old Sara Maria Aldrete Villarreal, described by authorities as the "witch" of the cult, were arrested after Saturday's shootout.

The Attorney General's office presented the five to reporters on Sunday. They stood behind a table covered with cult items found in the apartment, including two swords, black candles, a skull apparently made of white wax and a blindfolded doll holding another doll.

Authorities have said they believe Constanzo, 26, and Ms. Aldrete directed human sacrifices, mutilations and the boiling of brains and other organs in rituals to bring occult protection to their ring, which dealt mostly in marijuna.

The bodies of the victims, including a University of Texas student, were found buried on a ranch in Matamoros near the U.S. border beginning April 11.

Ms. Aldrete, who referred to Constanzo as el Padrino, or Godfather, said she had nothing to do with the slayings and learned about them in television reports.

"I couldn't believe it. It was amazing," said the former honor student at Texas Southmost College in Brownsville, Texas.

Asked who killed Kilroy, Ms. Aldrete said: "Adolfo."

De Leon Valdez said he was present when the young American was killed with a machete chop to the head. Kilroy's spinal column was removed for a necklace, he said.

"I feel sorry because when he disappeared I was trying to help the (Kilroy) family," Ms. Aldrete said in response to reporters' questions. She did not elaborate.

Ms. Aldrete said that shortly before Constanzo was killed he was shouting that he and close associate Martin Quintana Rodriguez should be "killed since everything was finished for them."

"He was telling him 'do it, do it. If you don't do it, you're going to pay with circumstances in hell.'"

Their bodies were found slumped together inside a tiny closet of the apartment.

Ms. Aldrete told authorities Constanzo had invited her to join "Christian Santeria" and asked her to use voodoo to help people with problems, Abraham Polo Uscanga, deputy city attorney general, said.

She said Constanzo initiated her into the cult in 1988.

Asked if she was in love with Constanzo, a Cuban-American who grew up in suburban Miami, Ms. Aldrete said, "No, but I followed him."

Santeria is a blend of Catholicism and old African beliefs that includes animal sacrifices and is an offshoot of voodoo.

The murders were carried out in a "little temple," a small building on the ranch, and body parts were put in a cauldron, De Leon Valdez said.

Bodies exhumed on the ranch had brains, hearts, sexual organs and other parts removed.

De Leon Valdez said Constanzo told them the people were killed "so that it would go better for us on the road, in the future."

Neighbors said the group had been living for about two weeks in the fourth-floor apartment of the rust-colored apartment building in a quiet neighborhood of the capital.

On Sunday, police armed with machine guns sat in a truck outside the apartment building, saying there were there to ensure no one tampered with evidence.

Police sealed off the apartment. Seen through a keyhole, the place was a shambles. A chair and bed were turned sideways and litter was strewn about the floor.

The others arrested were Maria del Rocio Cuevas Guerra, 43, of Mexico City; Omar Francisco Orea, 23, a journalism student at the National University who met Constanzo six years ago when he invited him to take part in black magic; and Maria de Lourdes Guero Lopez, 29, whose connection to the case was not clear.

They were were being held in Mexico on charges of homicide, criminal association, wounding a police agent in the arrest, and damage to property, Polo Uscanga said.

Protester Conducts Seven-Year Vigil In Front Of White House

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — When Concepcion Picciotto immigrated to the United States from Spain in the early 1960s, she saw America as a place to be anything she wanted.

And for a while, it was. Ms. Picciotto says she settled in New York City, got a job as an interpreter for an office of the Spanish Embassy, married, gave birth to a daughter and lived out the classic American dream.

But somewhere along the way, that dream fell apart. Now, she lives in Lafayette Park across the street from the White House where she protests injustices in the American political system.

"I never dreamed to be a protester in my life," she said. "I found out that the United States is not an ideal country."

Flanked by large signs decrying nuclear arms, Ms. Picciotto spends her days painting rocks with doves and messages of peace, and passing out anti-nuclear literature to tourists and passersby.

"We have to assure that we have a world. We are on the brink of having a nuclear holocaust," she said. "All they (government officials) care about is just building weapons."

Along with her partner William Thomas, Ms. Picciotto has been in Lafayette Park since 1981. She claims to have kept up the longest vigil of any demonstrator in the park.

To comply with park rules which prohibit camping, Ms. Picciotto gets by with the bare minimum. Local charities give her food. Tourists give her donations for her rocks. Ms. Picciotto said she leaves her post only for an infrequent shower or to use a bathroom.

Her bed is an afghan-covered box next to a sign where she perches at night, lest a passing policeman find her asleep and accuse her of camping.

She is required to stay within three feet of her demonstration signs or else risk a $50 citation. She keeps up on current events with second-hand newspapers from trash cans.

"You have to learn how to survive," Piocciotto said.

Jumbo Jet Swerves To Miss Small Plane

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — An Air New Zealand jumbo jet with 350 people aboard was forced to swerve to avoid hitting a small aircraft off the California coast, an airline official said.

One passenger and one crew member aboard the Boeing 747 jet suffered minor arm injuries as a result of the near-collision about 5:30 p.m. Sunday, said an airline spokesman. The incident happend 26 miles offshore near Santa Catalina Island.

Air New Zealand Flight TE6 from Auckland to Los Angeles was at about 7,000 feet when it had to bank sharply to avoid a twin-engine plane believed to be a Cessna, said the spokesman, who declined to be identified.

The smaller plane swerved to the opposite side, he said. It was not immediately known how far the two planes were apart.

Ambulances met the jet when it landed at Los Angeles International Airport.

The crew member was taken to a hospital where he was treated for bruises and released, while the passenger was treated by paramedics at the airport, the spokesman said.

Federal Aviation Administration and National Transportation Safety Board officials spoke with the crew of the jet and were supplied with the plane's flight data recorder and cockpit voice recorder.

An FAA duty officer who declined to be identified said a near collision occurs when a pilot believes another plane is closer to his craft than it should be.

Bennett Suggests Drug 'Boot Camp'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal drug czar William Bennett says sending persons convicted of casual drug use to "boot camps" instead of jail would cost the government less money but still be a strong deterrent.

Bennett, interviewed Sunday on CBS' "Face the Nation," said he was considering such a plan as part of the overall anti-drug strategy he is preparing for the Bush administration.

"You don't put them all in jail, but you can fine every one of them, you can take their cars away, you can send people to boot camp," Bennett said.

"We are looking into this boot camp thing, which we've seen in several states, which looks to be a very productive kind of thing."

In such a boot camp, he said, the drug offender "gets up at 4:30 in the morning, he does push-ups, he runs a good bit and doesn't watch soap operas or TV, as many people do in jail.

"It's inexpensive, it teaches good lessons, and the recidivism rate is very, very low because it is so grueling and so unpleasant people don't want to go back to it," he said.

Panel Rejects School Bus Belts

By David Briscoe
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A federal committee today rejected the idea of requiring seat belts on the nation's more than 300,000 larger school buses, concluding that it would cost $40 million and save an average of just one life a year.

"The overall potential benefits of requiring seat belts in school buses is insufficient to justify a federal standard mandating installation," said a committee of the National Research Council after an 18-month study. The NRC was set up by the National Academy of Sciences.

The committee said, however, that some steps should be taken to improve what transportation officials say already is one of the safest public conveyances, including raised seat backs and programs to prevent accidents while children are getting on and off the buses.

The group estimated that if all school buses were equipped with seat belts for each passengers and half the students used them, it might save one life and prevent several dozen serious injuries a year. It would cost $40 million a year to equip and maintain all larger school buses with passenger seat belts, the study said.

Raising seat-back heights from a minimum of 20 inches to 24 inches could save two to three lives, prevent up to 95 serious injuries and cost about $6 million a year, the report said.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration does not require seat belts in buses rated at more than 10,000 pounds gross weight that typically carry more than 16 passengers. Smaller, van-like buses must have belts, however.

The study, ordered by Congress and funded by the Department of Transportation, recommended 'that all states prohibit children from standing on school buses when they are in motion. Some states allow school buses to carry more children than there are seats.

The committee, which included a wide range of safety and transportation experts, also recommended that states, local school districts and private contractors stop operating school buses made before 1977 because they do not comply with current safety standards.

Buses built after 1977 have extra padding in seats, protected fuel tanks and other modifications to make them less deadly in crashes.

The recommendation on older buses followed a similar conclusion from the National Transportation Safety Board five weeks ago after an investigation into the head-on collision between a pickup truck and an older school bus used by a church group in Kentucky in May 1988 that killed 24 children and three adults.

Although that crash was blamed on the allegedly drunken driver of the pickup truck, who is to face trial in November on 27 murder charges, the safety board said design of the bus contributed to the severity of the accident. The bus's unprotected fuel tank burst into flames that spread fire and smoke through the bus.

Baker Will Steer Clear Of Talk About Summit

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — On his first Soviet trip, Secretary of State James A. Baker III will ask for cooperation in the Middle East, Central America and other trouble spots — and steer clear of preparations for a superpower summit meeting until the results are in.

Despite several steps by Mikhail S. Gorbachev to lower tensions, Baker set out today on his first visit to Moscow, skeptical that the Soviet leader's actions are in line with Gorbachev's "new thinking."

Baker has publicly questioned, for instance, whether reductions in troops and defense spending announced by Gorbachev have done much to offset Warsaw Pact edges in some military categories in Europe.

Two of Baker's closest aides, briefing reporters before his takeoff for Finland, said he would discuss a summit meeting with Gorbachev and Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze only if they raised the subject.

"If there are reasons to have such a summit, then we would certainly be pleased to have one," said one aide, speaking on condition of anonymity.

But prospects for a meeting between President Bush and Gorbachev depend on progress in several areas, the U.S. officials said.

They said Baker wants Soviet cooperation in Central America and the Middle East, in combating terrorism and in slowing the proliferation of ballistic missiles. The officials left unclear how much had to be accomplished before Bush would consent to a superpower summit.

"The president's past position is that one should not meet just for the sake of meeting, but rather one should have particular topics that are ripe for heads of government to engage in," a Baker aide said.

Gorbachev took exactly that position on summitry after rising to power in 1985. But he then went on to hold five meetings with former President Reagan, concluding a treaty to abolish medium-range nuclear missiles and easing tensions in Afghanistan and on a number of other fronts.

But the Bush administration says that is not enough.

In Central America, the administration wants the Soviets to sharply reduce military aid to Nicaragua. It amounted to $500 million last year. U.S.-supported rebels are trying to overthrow the Marxist government.

In the Middle East, the administration wants the Soviets to muffle their calls for an international peace conference and join Bush in pushing for direct negotiations between Israel and Palestinians.

Also, Baker would like the Soviets to stop providing Syria with missiles that add to Israel's military concerns.

"I think that that's a very potentially important topic that the United States has not engaged the Soviet Union in depth on in the past," an official said.

Baker, who has never been on Soviet soil either in private or government life, is stopping first in Helsinki to catch his breath before going on to Moscow Wednesday morning. He also will meet with Finnish leaders whose country is Western in outlook and has a neutral foreign policy.

Baker will see Shevardnadze on Wednesday morning and again on Thursday morning and Gorbachev for two hours Thursday afternoon.

U.S. officials said he would propose that U.S. and Soviet negotiators resume their work in Geneva the third week of June on a treaty to reduce long-range bombers, missiles and submarines by 30 to 50 percent.

Baker will suggest that the talks basically pick up where they left off in November, when they were recessed with about 90 percent of the work completed.

But he does not intend to outline to Gorbachev and Shevardnadze the position the United States will take on specific issues at the bargaining table, said the officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

"Essentially, we are looking for continuity and keeping arms control on a fast track," an official said.

The negotiations had been tentatively scheduled to resume in mid-February. But Bush, after taking office in January, ordered an indefinite postponement while the administration reviewed U.S. arms control and weapons policies.

U.S. and Soviet negotiators have some tough problems to resolve. These include whether to try to restrict mobile missiles and how to verify such elusive weapons as cruise missiles fired from airplanes and submarines.

Meanwhile, a senior aide to Baker said the administration had ruled out any deal with the Soviets to impose a coalition government in Afghanistan.

The official said the United States had neither the inclination nor the power to persuade the Afghan rebels to strike a deal with President Najibullah.

Calling for the Soviet-backed leader's ouster, the official said, "We do not believe we will have peace in Afghanistan" as long as Najibullah is in power.

Bush To Speak At Small Black College

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LORMAN, Miss. — The president of Alcorn State University has asked every president since Lyndon Johnson to speak at the black college's commencement. He was a bit surprised when one accepted.

Alcorn State, one of the smallest of Mississippi's eight public universities, hasn't had a lot of limelight over the years. "Roots" author Alex Haley — who never graduated — is by far its best known student. It also has produced some pro football players.

Getting President Bush to address Saturday's commencement was quite a coup, and some are hailing the visit as a historic sign of racial progress.

When Bush arrives, he will be "in the boondocks," said school President Walter Washington, who proudly adds that the president will tour an important place in black history. Nestled in the rural hills of southwestern Mississippi, the campus is seven miles west of "downtown" Lorman — an unincorporated hamlet consisting of a post office, two service stations, an old-time general store and a few houses.

The campus originally was Oakland College, a Presbyterian school founded in 1830 to educate white males.

However, that school never reopened after the Civil War, and during Reconstruction, the state purchased the land for a black college. Hiram R. Revels, the first black to serve in the U.S. Senate, was Alcorn's first president.

The school, renamed Alcorn Agricultural and Mechanical College, became the first black land-grant college in the United States, Washington said. That was in 1878.

Today, the 2,757-student campus is overwhelmingly black and Democratic.

Bush's visit "speaks well of him," said James McDonald, 21-year-old leader of Alcorn State's 100-member chapter of the Young Democrats.

The school is not without Republicans. A dozen students belong to Alcon State's College Republicans, a group formed just last semester. Member Keith Washington, 21, said he expects the group to boom over the next few years.

The Republican president also will travel Saturday to much larger Mississippi State University in Starkville to give another graduation speech. The predominantly white school has about 12,000 students.

Several Alcorn State students said they were overjoyed to have a president visit — no matter what his party affiliation.

Others said they just hope Bush actually comes — unlike former Democratic presidential candidate Jesse Jackson, who scratched Alcorn State from his campaign itinerary at the last minute.

"We were standing around outside waiting for Jesse Jackson for a couple of hours," said 20-year-old Lutrenda Smith of Greenwood. "We got excited for nothing. I'll believe Bush is here when I see him."

Old-Time Whaler Lives With His Memories Of Sea

By Charles Hillinger
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

CLEVELAND — Eighty-six-year-old Ernest Johnson has spent 26 years at sea on freighters, tankers and passenger ships, sailing to most of the major seaports in the world. He worked as a chef for some of the finest New England resorts for 20 years after leaving his nautical life.

Now he spends his twilight years in a modest apartment on Cleveland's east side, where, "I live with my memories."

But for the superb storyteller whose recall is crystal clear, the most exciting time in his life occurred in 1917 when he was a teen-ager who ran away from home and went to sea as a whaler on the 80-foot, four-masted schooner, the A.M. Nicholson.

It was one of the last of America's old-time whaling ships. Operating under sail, it pursued the leviathans as man had for centuries. It sailed in the Caribbean and in the Atlantic 300-400 miles off Cape Hatteras chasing the giant creatures of the sea.

"One day, I got up enough nerve and went aboard the A.M. Nicholson and asked the captain if he needed a cabin boy," he said. "He said he did but I would have to have written permission from my mother or father.

'When I spotted the spouts, I would yell 'Thar she blows!' and the whale boats would sail in the direction of the spouts as fast as the wind would take them.'

—Ernest Johnson

"I told him I was an orphan and lived with my aunt. 'Get a letter from your aunt!' the captain told me," the old man said, as the excitement mounted in his voice as his story unraveled.

He said he lied. He did have parents. But he faked the letter, which was accepted by the captain and by the U.S. Customs House official, a requirement at the time.

He went into a drawer and pulled out a photograph of his whaling ship, pulled out his faded shipping papers from the A.M. Nicholson with the skipper's name heading the list, John J. Gonsalves and Johnson's name at the bottom.

The papers showed that the captain was to receive a share of whale oil "as per agreement," the first mate, 1-16th of the cargo's value, the second mate 1-25th and so on down to the cabin boy, 1-175th share.

"We sailed Feb. 5, 1917, headed for the Caribbean," he said. "A couple of days out, and we ran into a god-awful storm. Men were lashed to the wheel it was so bad. I was so sea sick I couldn't get out of bed. When the seas calmed the captain picked me up in his arms, carried me to a chair on the deck and had the cook throw a bucket over the side to haul up salt water, which he had me drink. That cured me of my sea sickness. I have never been sea sick again."

The old whaler continued, both laughing and grimacing about the memory of his first days at sea.

Off the island of Dominica in the West Indies, the ship caught its first whale but the beasts were few in number and the ship sailed into the Atlantic, 400 miles off North Carolina where whales were plentiful.

"There were four whaling boats on the schooner. Each boat had a crew of six. My job was to look for the whales from up in the crow's nest. When I spotted the spouts I would yell 'Thar she blows!' and the whale boats would sail in the direction of the spouts as fast as the wind would take them.

"The only ones aboard ship when the men and the boats were out were the cook, the steward, the captain and myself," he said. "I would be in the crow's nest or at the wheel. The ship would sail in the wake of the smaller whaling boats."

He told how the steerer at the bow harpooned the whale, which then "would take off. If the whale stayed on the surface running with the harpoon and the line attached to it, we would call that a 'Nantucket sleigh ride.' Sometimes a whale would sound and go under. The line would run out and the whale men would sail to the wounded whale weakened by blood pouring from the harpoon hole."

When the boat neared the wounded whale, the mate hurled a razor sharp lance shaped like a man's heart into the beast to kill it, said Johnson. Then the whale boat retrieved the line and pulled the whale alongside the schooner for rendering.

"We butchered the whale as it lay in the water next to the ship," he said noting the animal's head was cut open with an ax to remove the white, waxy spermaceti. Huge chunks of blubber were cut and lifted aboard for melting in fire pots on the deck. The hot oil was scooped in huge ladles into tanks and into wooden casks.

"While we butchered the whale," he recalled, "sharks would come alongside and bite off big chunks of meat. The cook brought whale meat aboard for stew.

"One time, one of the men jumped off the ship into the whale's guts yelling at the top of his voice 'Ambergris, ambergris!'

" 'What's that?' I asked one of my shipmates. I thought the guy who jumped in the whale had gone wacko. I learned that ambergris is used to make perfume, that it was worth its weight in gold."

Johnson recounted the whaler's superstitions, including one that a stay for an hour or more in the still-warm animal's corpse would ensure a man never would suffer arthritis or rheumatism. "I tried it. It's worked for me so far," he said.

Husband's Boorishness Appalling

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Dear Abby: What do you think of a man (my husband) who, in my presence, informs his 16-year-old son from a previous marriage that although certain body parts of mine have deteriorated and become less attractive due to childbirth and aging, he would still (not unlike a martyr) rather have sex with me than a younger, firmer woman with whom he would run the risk of contracting AIDS?

The message I received was that I was no longer attractive to him, and that he just "puts up with me." Since then, I don't enjoy sex with him as much as I used to. Also, I feel that my privacy has been invaded.

My husband's defense was that he was just being "honest and open" in trying to set an example for his son to be a faithful husband when he marries.

Am I too sensitive? — Feeling Belittled

Dear Belittled: Too sensitive? Certainly not. Your husband's lack of respect for your privacy, plus his boorishness and cruelty (however inadvertent), are appalling.

All attempts to educate this incredibly ignorant man may be useless, but do let him know that his references to your sex life and deteriorating body parts are gross and demeaning, so he'd better find another way to stress the importance of fidelity in marriage to reduce the risk of contracting AIDS, or any other sexually transmitted disease.

Dear Abby: I am a single parent trying to raise an 11-year-old son without a father. "Kevin" lost his father when he was 8 years old.

Abby, this boy has started to ask me questions about sex (gulp) that really startle me. I had no idea he was even thinking about such things at his age. He says all the kids at school talk about it.

Some time ago you advertised a booklet on how to talk to teen-agers about sex. Do you think it would be appropriate for Kevin? I don't want him to know too much at his age, but I want him to know enough to satisfy his curiosity and keep him safe from trouble.

If you think he's not too young for your booklet, please tell me how to order it. — Single Parent, Athens, Ga.

Dear Parent: Correct information — at any age — can do no harm. Ignorance can. "What Every Teenager Ought to Know" has been very well-received. It has been purchased in large quantities for use at both Baptist and Catholic summer camps for children and young adults.

To order, send your name and address, plus check or money order for $3.50 to: Dear Abby's Teen Booklet, P.O. 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included in the cost.)

Dear Abby: I am an adopted child and know how you champion the causes of this group of people. My adoptive mother's family can be traced directly back from Ohio to the founding of Hartford and Saybrook, Conn., in the 1640s, and then back to England and William the Conqueror, and before that time to Normandy. They were prominent in the American Revolution.

When my mother died, she left two "Spinning Wheel" pins from an all-female historical society for her two granddaughters. However, when I approached the group for membership for the granddaughters, I was told that they were excluded since I was an adopted child. It seems that you can adopt the name, but not the heritage that goes with it. Mother was the last of her line. Can you help? — Zanesville, Ohio

Dear Zanesville: Help? If you mean help your daughters to gain membership in a society that would discriminate between birth children and adopted children, I would urge you to consider adopting the attitude of the late Groucho Marx, who facetiously said, "I wouldn't want to be a member of any club that would have me."

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA. 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Actor Greg Itzen scores in ShowBiz Softball League

Heaviest Hitters In Hollywood Take To The Softball Diamond

By Jeff Meyers
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

HOLLYWOOD — The mention of a star's big hit, a producer's newfound clout or a writer's wild pitch does not necessarily mean Hollywood heavy hitters are discussing the latest industry buzz. They may just be talking about the ShowBiz Softball League.

"I once went into Lee Gabler's office to discuss packaging a TV series," said Leslie Greif, an executive producer at Orion Television. But Gabler, head of television at International Creative Management at the time (he is now with Creative Artists), had softball on his mind. "He pulls out photos of his game against William Morris," Greif said, "and for the next 15 minutes, all we talked about was big plays and batting averages."

Like the film of the same name, it happens every spring. Thoughts turn from box office to box score and some Hollywood stars (Michael Keaton, Tony Danza, Mark Harmon, Billy Crystal) and executives (NBC Entertainment President Brandon Tartikoff, "thirtysomething" executive producer Ed Zwick) trade in their Guccis for Nikes to play on softball teams sponsored by the some of the industry's most powerful companies.

With 43 teams — among them NBC, Warner Bros., 20th Century Fox — paying a $1,650 entry fee, the ShowBiz League is one of the largest, and certainly most expensive, industrial softball leagues in the nation. For eight months beginning in March, about 700 players — roughly 20 of them "well-known celebrities" according to Greif — play a good brand of modified fast-pitch softball at Balboa Park in Los Angeles' San Fernando Valley.

Not surprisingly given the participants, softball is not the only game on the diamonds. The league provides the right climate for a Hollywood chemical reaction, a venue where contacts can be made. Third to second to first. Producer to director to writer. In sports, it is called around-the-horn; in Hollywood, it is networking.

"When a guy runs to first, you practically see resumes flying out his back pocket," said Bob Logan, a writer-director who has played eight years for a team called Ten Guys. Logan got his first TV writing assignment, on "Laugh Trax" in 1982, when his teammates — who happened to be the show's head writers — found themselves laughing at his jokes and asked him to "punch up a script," he said.

Greif, executive producer of HBO's "Glory! Glory!" miniseries and most recently a member of the league's Harry Gold Stars, admits that the league exists, in part, to further careers. Ten years ago, when he was 23 and a page at NBC, "I didn't know anybody in the business." Which was one of the reasons Greif, along with seven others including Tito Jackson of the Jackson 5, started the league.

What show business is done is usually done tastefully, the players say. "Guys don't want to be hustled," Logan said. "Nobody comes up and says, 'Hey, I got a script. Can you read it in the car?' "

But according to Logan and others, most of the players have a simpler reason for showing up every weekend in Balboa Park. "The deal-making is certainly in the back of your mind," Logan said, "but that's not why you're here. Show business is such a tough business, you want to get out and be a boy again."

On a typical Saturday at Balboa Park, the league plays about 20 games, beginning at 9 a.m. and ending well past 6 p.m. Greif, who says he may not play regularly this year because of other commitments, takes frequent inspection tours around the perimeter of the softball complex, where eight teams are playing on four diamonds. He walks with Puglisi, the mustachioed owner of MVP Athletics, a sporting goods store. Puglisi sees part of his job as being the "protector" of the players, particularly the celebrities, who get approached not only by fans but by strangers with unsolicited screenplays.

Greif and Puglisi stop at the diamond where Michael Keaton, star of the current hit movie "The Dream Team" and the upcoming "Batman," is playing the outfield for Ten Guys. A talented athlete who also plays ice hockey, Keaton has been known to work out on the road with major league baseball teams.

"When I'm in Toronto I'll play with the Blue Jays and in Seattle with the Mariners," he said behind the backstop, waiting his turn to hit. "But when I'm in L.A., I look forward to every Saturday here."

New Method Helps Families Ease Bed-Wetting Problems

By Mary Jo Kochakian
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Because bed-wetting is often a vexatious problem, the search goes on for an effective treatment.

"A child who wets the bed often creates an enormous amount of anxiety" in a family, says Dr. Stuart L. Kaplan, a child psychiatrist. Not all children should be treated for bed-wetting, Kaplan says, but for those who need it, he and several colleagues have devised a new treatment that expands upon an old one.

For many children the standard practices don't work. Among them are restricting fluids in the evening, waking the child to go to the bathroom during the night, giving the medication imipramine and using a "bell and pad" device that awakens the child when he wets the bed.

Kaplan's method expands upon the bell and pad, which is considered the most effective behavioral approach. A study comparing his plan with the bell and pad and one other treatment, published in the March issue of the Journal of the American Academy of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry, suggests it is more effective.

In the study, 98 children, most of whom had been unsuccessfully treated before, were divided into three groups. They used the bell and pad method, an elaborate treatment called "dry-bed" that has shown impressive results in some studies, and Kaplan's new approach, called "tangible rewards with fading."

With the bell and pad method, the child is awakened by the sound of the bell after wetting the bed and is responsible for changing bedding and pajamas. The parents are told to praise for dry nights and show mild disapproval for wet nights.

The bell and pad were used in the other two treatments, with additional techniques. In both, the child was responsible for cleaning up after wetting.

The dry-bed method begins with an "intensive training" night. The child drinks a large amount of fluid before bed, and then all-night hourly awakenings begin. Each time, the child practices going to the bathroom 20 times — getting out of bed, walking to the toilet, pulling down pajamas, sitting on or standing before the toilet and then returning to bed. Then the child is given more to drink. If the child wets the bed between awakenings, he cleans up and practices the routine an additional 20 times before going back to bed.

On following nights, if the child wets the bed, he would have to practice and clean up as before — as well as have another round of practice at bedtime the night after an accident.

In the "tangible rewards" method, parents and children agree upon rewards and penalties for dry and wet nights. Commonly chosen rewards include a later bedtime, small toys, and special playtime with a parent. Penalties include earlier bedtimes and doing without sweets or television.

Parents were told to praise for dry nights and be only mildly disapproving about wet nights, such as saying, "I see you wet the bed; that's a shame. I hope things go better tonight," Kaplan says.

Once the child has 14 consecutive dry nights, the bell and pad are removed and the "fading" procedure begins — the child earns a day off the program (no rewards, no penalties) for each dry week.

With Kaplan's method, 85 percent of the children achieved the 14-day dryness criterion, compared with 67 percent of the bell and pad group and 80 percent of the dry-bed group. The relapse rate was 37 percent for the tangible rewards group, 67 percent for the bell and pad group and 50 percent for the dry-bed group.

Children younger than 6 should not be treated for bed-wetting because the condition often disappears by itself as children mature, says Kaplan, who is associate clinical professor of psychiatry at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University and executive director of Rockland Children's Psychiatric Center in Orangeburg, N.Y., a facility of the New York State Office of Mental Health.

But often, bed-wetting interferes with a child's life. For example, it can make camp or sleep-over visits difficult or impossible.

"Where there's a lot of anxiety, where it interferes with socialization, it should be treated," Kaplan says.

Insured Savings Are The Safest

BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS

Whatever the ultimate cost of the S&L bailout to the public, Better Homes and Gardens magazine advises that individual funds should be secure, provided people stay within the Federal Deposit Insurance limits. The government simply isn't going to renege on its promise to cover insured funds.

Still, Federal Deposit Insurance works only if the rules are followed correctly. Furthermore, it's possible a bank failure could cause delays in getting the insured's money back. So, tracking an institution's financial state could help one avoid hassles or at least sleep better.

Here's advice on both counts.

The Federal Deposit Insurance ceiling of $100,000 may seem like a lot of money. But many families keep more than that in several types of cash accounts, yet like to deal with a single institution. If that's the case, follow these rules:

— Federal insurance (FDIC, FSLIC, or NCUSIF) covers most, but not all, banks, S&Ls, and credit unions, even state-chartered.

— Four categories of accounts can be separately insured for up to $100,000 each at the same institution — individual, or single ownership, accounts; joint accounts; testamentary-revocable trusts; irrevocable trust accounts.

— Accounts must be set up properly to be protected. Check with a banker and possibly a lawyer who is an expert on federal insurance regulations.

IICUC CERTIFIED MASTER CLEANER

A DIRTY MIND?...

When does it pay to be dirt-minded?... When you're a professional cleaner, of course! That's because if you don't know how dirt (let's call it "soil") gets into carpet, you're hardly in position to know how to get it out!

Procter and Gamble Labs did the carpet cleaning industry a great service a few years ago when they analyzed soiled carpet samples from throughout the U.S. The average sample consisted of 55% particle soil (sand, quartz, clay, carbon, gypsum, limestone), which has an abrasive effect on delicate carpet fibers. This tracked soil collects in entry areas and must—repeat, must!—receive special attention during cleaning; otherwise, your carpet investment's life is cut in half...literally! Next, 12% of the carpet soil sample consisted of animal fiber. An interesting fact gleaned from dermatologists suggests that the average person sheds about 300 hairs per day. If not removed frequently, this soil can produce a "harried" situation (I couldn't resist!) for the homeowner. Another 12% of the sample consisted of cellulosic matter; not only in the form of tracked-in grass and leaf fragments from outside, but also cellulosic fiber shed from clothing, fabric furnishings, newspapers, magazines, etc.

"Well," you say, "I'll just buy a good vacuum and eliminate the need for cleaning!..." Hang on a minute; we're not quite through...

Six percent of the sample consisted of gummy soils (sugars, starches, salts), which bind themselves and some of the particle soil to fiber surfaces. Ten percent consists of oils and tar-like substances, which also bind themselves and particle soils to fibers. If not routinely removed, these soils create a yellowed, dingy appearance in traffic areas and, due to the abrasive particle soil they hold to the fiber, carpet life is halved.

The more the professional cleaner knows about dirt, the better a job he can do for his customers. In doing so, he adds years of life and increased beauty to their carpet investment.

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 65.75 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2½ to 3 pounds birds. One hundred percent of the loads offered have been confirmed with a final weighted average of 67.72 cents. The market is about steady and the live supply is adequate for a mostly good demand. Average weights are desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina 2,147,00, compared to 2,109,000 last Monday.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn 3-5 cents higher at mostly $2.85-$2.95 in the East; mostly $3.03-$3.14 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans 6-9 cents higher at mostly $7.54-$7.72½ in the East; mostly $7.37-$7.421in the Piedmont; wheat mostly $4.13-$4.18; new crop corn $2.44-2.69; new crop soybeans $6.88-7.18; new crop wheat $3.59-3.92. Exchange rates for P.I.K. certificates were steady and ranged from 98 to 100 percent of face value.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was down 7.33 points at 2,374.63 at 10 a.m. EDT, a half-hour after trading began.

Declining issues outnumbered advancers by about 11 to 5 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 659 issues up, 294 down and 467 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 18.85 million shares.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks was down 0.58 to 171.56.

On Friday the Dow Jones industrial average, up more than 20 points in early trading, closed with a 2.94 loss at 2,381.96.

That left the average with a loss of 36.84 points.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by nearly 4 to 3 on the NYSE, with 795 up, 608 down and 543 unchanged.

Opposition Calls For Major Protest March

The government promised results by this evening and declared today a holiday. The opposition called for an afternoon protest march and threatened a general strike.

For more than a year, the United States has been trying to oust Noriega, who was indicted on federal drug trafficking charges in Florida. The United States imposed economic sanctions, supported anti-government leaders and reportedly gave $10 million to the opposition election campaign.

Noriega, campaigning on behalf of his hand-picked candidate, said a vote for the opposition would ensure suffocating U.S. influence over Panamanian affairs. He also claimed that Washington was preparing to renege on the 1977 treaty giving Panama sole control of the Panama Canal in 1999.

The Bush administration said last week that it expected Noriega to rig the elections and that it was prepared to look for other ways, including freezing Noriega's foreign assets, to oust the military ruler.

At his news conference, Duque called opposition talk of fraud "childish." A late-night communique from the pro-government coalition said, "We can affirm that our triumph is decisive, just, honest and perfectly clear."

Government candidates have been holding "victory dinners" for the past week.

The government coalition released an exit poll of 18,136 voters that it said showed Duque winning by a margin of 50.9 percent to 44.7 percent.

The opposition released an exit poll of 1,022 voters showing Endara leading Duque 55.1 percent to 39.5 percent.

Polls closed at 5 p.m. Sunday, and poll workers then burned the ballots after official results were verified at each precinct, a political tradition aimed at ending recount demands.

Opposition leaders said the electoral register included about 100,000 extra names, including people who have died or left the country and that many pro-government voters were given more than one identity card.

Official figures list the country of 2.3 million people as having 1.18 million registered voters.

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., part of a 13-member uninvited delegation sent by President Bush, said Sunday: "We've seen many irregularities, but it is difficult to judge the extent of the irregularities."

Endara charged true democracy was not possible in Panama with Noriega as head of the military and vowed to fire the general.

Former President Jimmy Carter said he saw no evidence of fraud during visits to several precincts.

He was greeted by enthusiastic crowds shouting "Viva Jimmy." In 1977, Carter signed the treaties that are to cede control of the canal to Panama.

Noriega took over the Defense Forces in 1983 and consolidated his power in February 1988 when he orchestrated the ouster of President Eric Delvalle, who tried to fire him.

Duque and acting President Manuel Solis Palma received a mixture of boos and cheers when they voted Sunday. Endara was cheered heartily.

Duque, 59, is a long-time Noriega business partner. Endara, 52, is a lawyer, former law professor and long-time opposition leader.

Cities, Counties Outstrip Revenue

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — America's cities and counties, like many of their residents, are increasing their spending faster than their income, according to a pair of new Census Bureau reports.

Total city and county income still exceed spending, but the gap is narrowing, and local governments are increasingly unable to turn to Uncle Sam for help because federal aid is declining, said the studies released Sunday.

Spending by the nation's cities was 7.9 percent higher in the 1986-87 fiscal year than the year before, according to the reports. During the same period revenues rose 6.9 percent.

The result was spending totaling $164.1 billion by the cities, compared with revenues of $169.8 billion.

That left cities $5.7 billion in the black for 1986-87, although that marked a reduction from surpluses of $6.6 billion the year before and $7.7 billion in 1984-85.

For counties, spending rose 11.2 percent while income climbed 9.3 percent between 1985-86 and 1986-87, the Census Bureau said.

That totaled out to $105.8 billion in revenues and $102.9 billion in expenditures, for a surplus of $2.9 billion. Counties were $4.2 billion in the black a year earlier and $4.6 billion in 1984-85.

The reports also showed that federal aid fell by 14.2 percent for cities and by 7.2 percent for counties between the 1985-86 and 1986-87 fiscal years.

Overall, cities raised 71.0 percent of the money they spent, while counties got 63.2 percent from their own sources. For both, the balance came primarily from federal and state assistance.

In spending, cities put more of their money into law enforcement, while for counties public welfare was the top expenditure. Education was the second largest expense for both units of government.

Police expenses accounted for $14.8 billion of city spending, up 8.8 percent from the year before. Education cost $13.4 billion, up 8.5 percent, while highway expenditures rose 8.0 percent to $10.1 billion.

Debt interest was the fastest-growing city expenses, climbing 14.9 percent to $9.3 billion. Spending on sewerage rose 11.4 percent to $9.1 billion.

Among counties, public welfare costs led spending at $14.3 billion, 8.3 percent more than a year earlier.

Bulls, Hawks Dispel Doubts

Playoff Victories Erase Memories Of Regular Season

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Chicago Bulls and Milwaukee Bucks have dispelled any doubt that the NBA playoffs are a new season.

After dropping all six regular-season games to Cleveland and Atlanta, the Bulls and Hawks eliminated their tormentors from the playoffs on Sunday — and they did it on the road in the final games of best-of-5 opening-round series.

At Richfield, Ohio, Michael Jordan drove past Craig Ehlo and hit a 15-foot jumper at the buzzer, giving the Bulls a 101-100 victory over the Cavaliers. In Atlanta, Ricky Pierce scored 25 points and Paul Mokeski and Jay Humphries hit key baskets down the stretch as Milwaukee overcame the absence of injured scoring leader Terry Cummings and beat the Hawks 96-92.

Meanwhile, the Los Angeles Lakers, seeking their third straight championship, opened their Western Conference semifinal series by defeating the Seattle SuperSonics 113-102 as Magic Johnson scored nine of his 21 points in the first five minutes of the fourth quarter.

On Tuesday night, Chicago visits New York to start the best-of-7 Eastern Conference semifinals while Golden State plays Game 2 of its Western Conerence semifinal at Phoenix. The Suns won the opener on Saturday 130-103.

Two more games are scheduled for Wednesday — Milwaukee at Detroit in the start of the other Eastern Conference semifinal and Seattle at Los Angeles for Game 2 of their series.

Jordan scored 30 of his 44 points in the second half, 17 in the fourth quarter. Ehlo scored 15 of his 24 in the final period, including three 3-pointers.

Scottie Pippen's 3-pointer gave the Bulls a 97-95 lead with 1:12 left, but Ehlo countered with a 3-pointer of his own to put Cleveland ahead 98-97 with 51 seconds left. Jordan made a 15-footer with six seconds to play for a one-point Chicago lead, but Ehlo gave Cleveland a 100-99 lead on a drive with three seconds to play.

After two timeouts, Jordan got the ball near the top of the circle, drove past Ehlo and leaped at the free-throw line. The winning shot barely touched the back of the rim as it went through.

"Everyone had been writing us off," Jordan said. "I was very disappointed after we lost Friday night. I was fighting off tears. But I had to get rid of that attitude today.

"Larry Nance did a good job of keeping me from going where I wanted (on the inbounds pass from Brad Sellers that led to his winning shot), so I had to pull off a fake just to get the ball. Once I got the ball, I penetrated a little and got set up a little. But Ehlo came over and had me covered. I had to hesitate and then I got the shot off. How it went in I don't know."

Mark Price had 23 points and Ron Harper 22 for Cleveland. Cartwright added 16 for the Bulls.

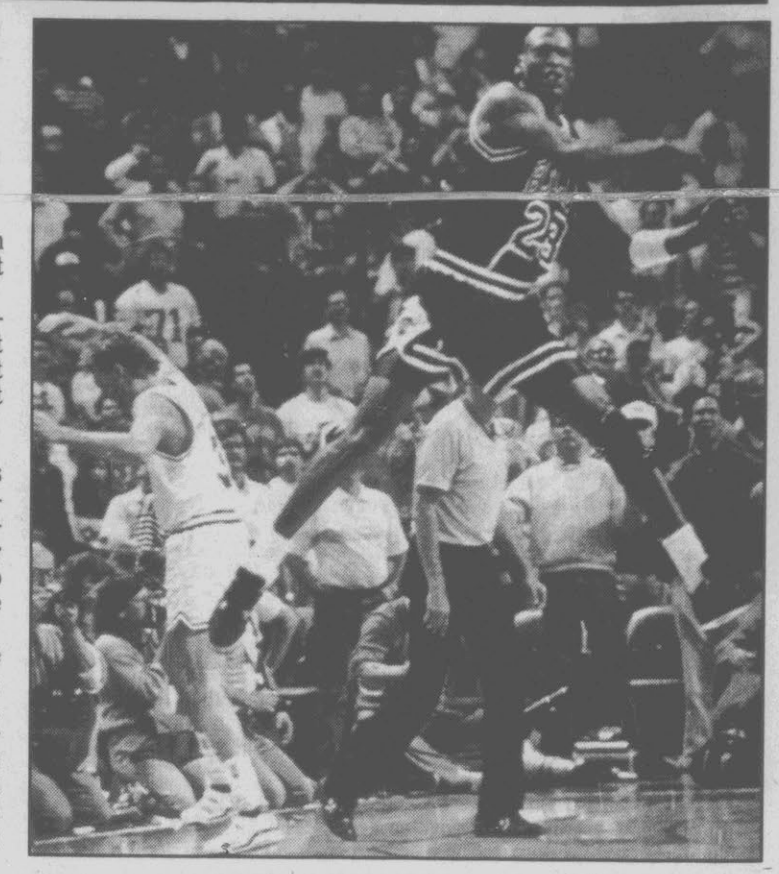

With Cleveland ahead 82-76, Jordan took over, hitting two straight 15-footers to start an 11-0 run that put the Bulls ahead 87-82 for the first time since the opening period.

Bucks 96, Hawks 92

Milwaukee coach Del Harris called Sunday's contest "as emotional a game as I have been involved in. I just have to praise our players for the courage it took to continue to overcome one obstacle after another."

Mokeski twice gave Milwaukee the lead on layups in the final 3½ minutes, the last with 2:51 to play, putting the Bucks ahead to stay 87-86. Fred Roberts made two free throws 30 seconds later, Pierce hit an 18-footer and Humphries scored on a breakaway layup, stretching the lead to 93-86.

UNC Suspends Kennard Martin

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A failure to attend class and study halls, and not just pending charges of textbook theft, resulted in the suspension of star tailback Kennard Martin, North Carolina football coach Mack Brown says.

Martin, who led the Atlantic Coast Conference in rushing last season, was suspended indefinitely from the Tar Heel team by Brown on April 27 soon after Martin's arrest by campus police.

Martin, a rising junior from Winston-Salem, was charged with breaking and entering and larceny — a felony — after the theft of eight textbooks valued at $335 from a UNC dormitory room. He was released on $400 bond and faces a hearing Wednesday in Orange County District Court.

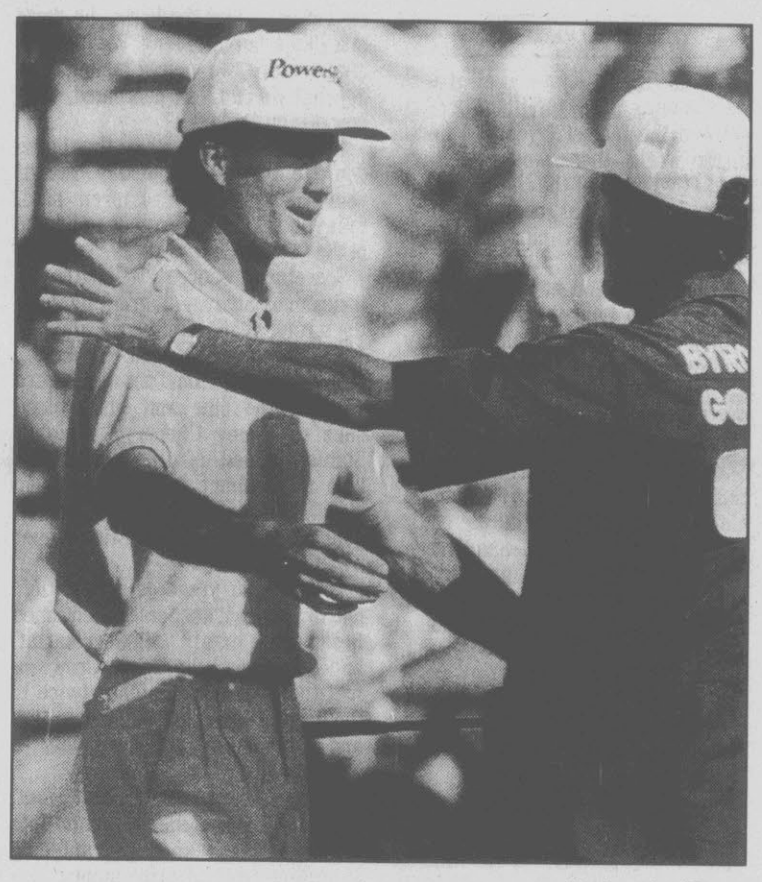

In a weekend telephone interview, Brown said that Martin's absences from class and mandatory study halls were as significant as the police charges in removing the player from the team.

"Discipline is the hardest part of a coach's job," Brown told The News and Observer of Raleigh. "But you must remember that only the head coach knows all the details.

"Kennard has not been found guilty ... and our philosophy is that we want to do everything in our power to keep them (players) a part of the program," Brown said. "Some will say 'You should handle it this way or you should do that,' and some also have questioned why we suspended Kennard since he has not been found guilty of anything.

"But there were his inconsistencies in the classroom and study hall. The combination of those inconsistencies and the charges resulted in the suspension."

Mudd Wins 2nd PGA Tour Event

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

IRVING, Texas — Jodie Mudd was another of those PGA millionaires who hadn't won many tournaments.

Until Sunday.

Mudd, 29, whose only previous Tour victory came last year at Memphis, doubled his lifetime total by beating Larry Nelson in a playoff to capture the Byron Nelson Classic.

The former Georgia Southern star made a 12-foot birdie putt on the first playoff hole, a 554-yard par-5 to beat Nelson, a former U.S. Open and PGA Championship winner.

"I've been here (on the tour) for 7½ years and I decided it was time to get my career going," Mudd said. "I decided it was time to take my shot and be more aggressive, to play for wins instead of a good tournament."

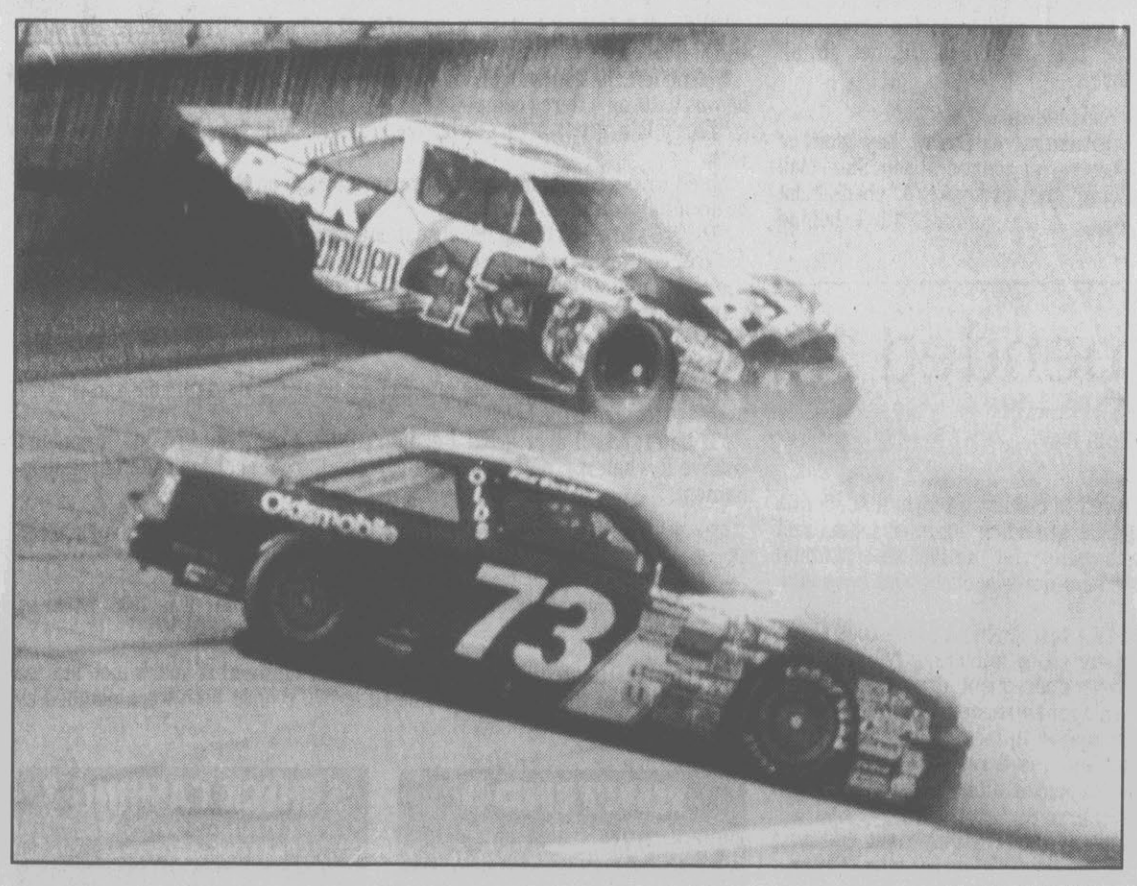

Mudd shot a final round 65 to tie Nelson, who had a 67, at 15-under-par 265 over the Tournament Players Course at the Four Seasons resort in Las Colinas.

It was the fourth playoff in five years at the Nelson Classic. Bruce Lietzke won last year.

The $180,000 first-place check increased Mudd's lifetime earnings to $1,356,494. It was Mudd's first playoff victory. He had lost to both Phil Blackmar and John Mahaffey in 1985.

Nelson, who is now 3-2 in playoffs, won $108,000. It was his first top 10 finish this year after suffering an ankle injury last November playing touch football with his son.

Winston 500 Triumph Snaps His 15-Race Dry Spell

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TALLADEGA, Ala. — He didn't do it blindfolded, but Davey Allison drove the last lap of his Winston 500 victory with hardly a glance at the familiar track in front of him.

His father and his uncle both have won on the 2.66-mile Talladega Superspeedway oval, and the 28-year-old Davey, also the 1987 Winston 500 winner, knows it like an old friend.

"I don't think I looked out the windshield the whole last lap," Allison said Sunday after taking the checkered flag for his fifth career victory, but his first win in 15 races, dating to Sept. 11, 1988 at Richmond, Va.

"I know this place pretty much by heart, so I figure I can pretty much run it looking out the mirror," he said.

Young Allison's attention was riveted on the Ford Thunderbirds of Terry Labonte and Mark Martin, who loomed large in his mirrors as he drove his Robert Yates-owned Ford around the 188th and final lap of the day.

Labonte started to make a move coming off the fourth turn, but a slower car in the bottom lane moved him back in line and the three Thunderbirds crossed the finish line nose-to-tail, Allison beating Labonte by just 0.22-seconds.

"I definitely didn't know for sure we had the power (to hold the other two off), but we did have priority on the line," Allison said.

"We just weren't strong enough," said Martin, who started from the pole, alongside Allison. "At the end, Terry and I were doing this and that (with hand signals), trying to get something set up. But, when the time came, we couldn't even get up to him. We couldn't even catch him."

Allison, who led nine times for 94 laps — exactly half the race — first had to dispose of Morgan Shepherd's Pontiac Grand Prix, which he did on lap 180.

Shepherd, who was ahead of Allison late in the race, appeared to have the only other car as strong as the eventual winner, but faded to fourth at the end.

"I didn't know if I could get by Morgan, but I knew I was gonna do everything I could short of crashing him to get by," Allison said. "When he looked in his mirror, he must have been saying, 'What in the world is he doing?' I was all over trying to make him go somewhere."

Asked how he finally got past Shepherd, dragging the other two Fords with him, Allison replied: "I don't know what happened to him. He moved over and gave me room.

"You have to take advantage of every break that comes along, especially with the restrictor plates. You can't be asleep out there."

Ford Speaks To Students About Dangers Of Drugs

By Cherie Evans
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

"That's Phil Ford!" said third graders at Bethel Elementary School when the former University of North Carolina basketball star appeared before their classroom door Friday afternoon.

Even though the students were not yet born when Ford played for the Tar Heels in the late 1970s, his reputation had crossed into their generation.

Currently an assistant basketball coach with the Carolina program, Ford was in Bethel on invitation from the school's Students Against Substance Abuse club.

Funded by a $1,000 grant from the Pitt County schools, the club of sixth through eighth grade students has participated in several activities this year to try to negate substance abuse, said Jackie Wooten, the club's advisor.

Ford was invited to visit students in the school to discuss his bout and control over his alcohol addiction, which cut short his professional career after seven seasons in the National Basketball Association.

"I don't care what anyone says," Ford told a group of fourth through eighth graders in the school's auditorium. "All mood-changing substances are addictive or can be habit-forming. It can happen to you. I really didn't think something like that could happen to me, but alcoholism is an equal-opportunity employer" affecting both sexes and all races, he said.

Eighty million people are abusers of alcohol, Ford said. About one in four, or 20 million people, will seek help for their problem, he said. "One in that four will stay sober the rest of their lives."

Ford said his control over the abuse of alcohol came with maturity.

"A sign of maturity is doing something sometimes that you don't want to do and do it well," he said, explaining that admitting he has a problem once was tough to do but now he's comfortable talking about it.

"I consider myself very lucky to have come through what I've come through with substance abuse," Ford said.

UNC Coach Dean Smith was instrumental in helping him turn his life around, Ford said.

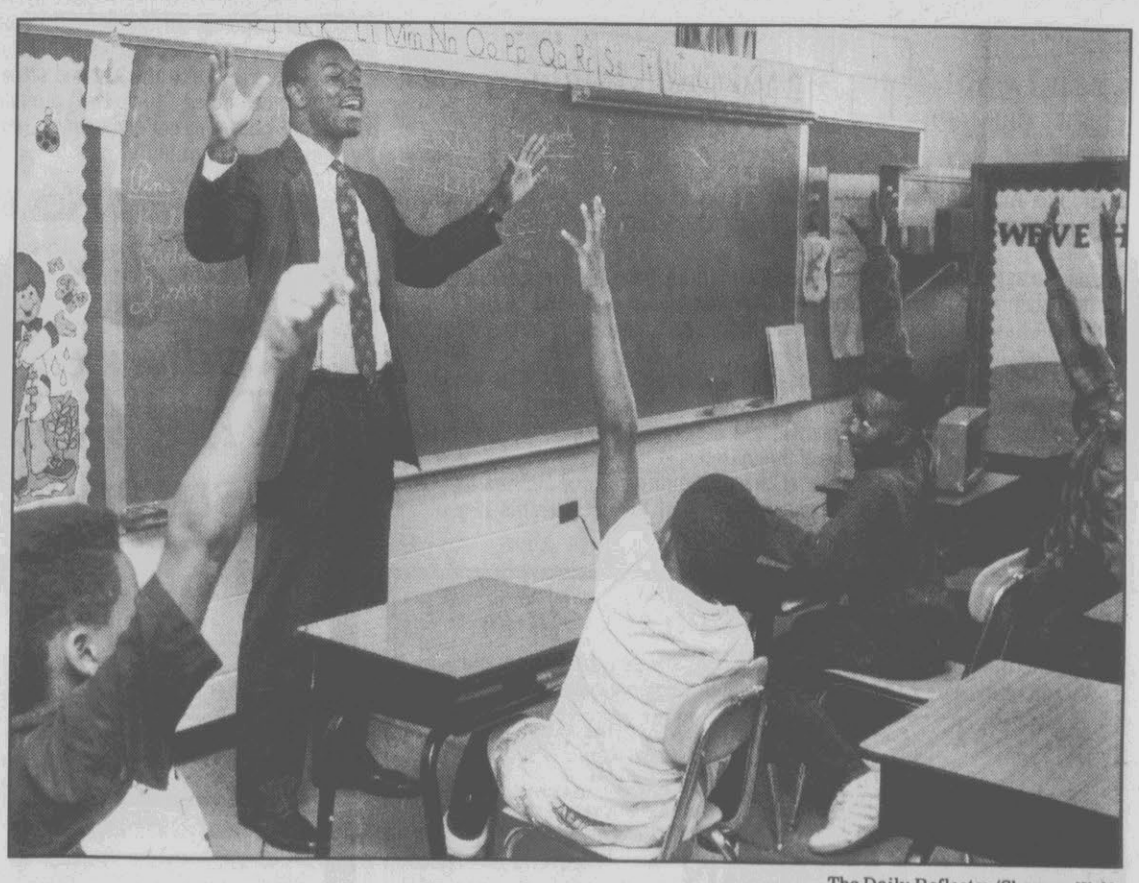

"Luckily, I had Dean Smith in my corner. We're part of his family," he said of the basketball players at Carolina.

"He has over 180 children with only four girls," Ford said.

Ford said he spent about a month in an alcoholic rehabilitation facility in Atlanta to better understand and confront his problem.

Ford also discussed the impor-

Pirate Tracksters Compete In Georgia

ATHENS, Ga. — East Carolina's 4 x 100 meter relay team placed first Saturday in the Spec Town's Relays in Athens, Ga.

The team of Ike Robinson, Brian Irvin, Eugene McNeill and John Lee took the blue ribbon with a time of 40.46.

in the 4 x 400 meter relay competition, ECU's team of Lee, Jeff Shumate, Brian Williams and Teddy Vernon took third place with a time of 3:16.06.

McNeill captured second place in the 200 meter run with a time of 20.76, while Irvin was third at 20.97 and Robinson sixth at 21.24.

Friendship Ends GCA Season

John Woods had three hits, two of them homers to lead Friendship Christian past Greenville Christian, 15-7, in a Eastern Regional playoff baseball game Friday.

GCA closes out the year at 7-9 overall.

John May and Chris Pace had two hits each for GCA.

UNC Hoop Program Nets $4 Million

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's basketball team regularly is listed in the Top 10, but UNC Athletic Director John Swofford says last year's team would also rank among the top schools in the amount of money it generated.

For the 1988-89 season, UNC basketball earned a net income of about $4 million after the program's budgeted expenses of $1,215,072 (which do not include scholarship costs) and NCAA Tournament expenses are subtracted.

Since 1978, North Carolina has earned almost $4.6 million in NCAA Tournament revenue, including $707,000 from the '89 tournament, according to Martina Ballen, the UNC director of athletic business and finance. That's just a portion of UNC basketball income, which reached nearly $5.3 million in gross revenues for the 1988-89 season.

Annually, men's basketball plays a major role in funding all of UNC's 24 non-revenue sports. It is a reliable cornerstone of the athletic department's total operating budget, which is $15,800,000 for 1988-89, Swofford said.

Swofford said the UNC athletic department now has more than $2 million in reserves, which has been built, for the most part, by the basketball team earning a national-record 15 consecutive NCAA Tournament bids.

The last five years combined, UNC has earned more than $3.2 million in NCAA revenue.

Mowry Claims RJR Senior Title

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Larry Mowry started his week as a tourist. He finished it as a winner.

"Instead of going to the course on Monday, my wife and I really got to see the city," Mowry said Sunday after winning the RJR at the Dominion Seniors Tournament. "We got to see the Riverwalk (a downtown tourist attraction) and I bought an authentic imitation John Wayne cowboy hat. "It got me more relaxed. I had always liked this course, but I never did well here. This makes it much nicer. Next year, we may come even earlier."

After finishing 15th and tied for 28th in two previous visits, Mowry calmly birdied the final hole Sunday for a one-shot victory over Gay Brewer in the $250,000 tournament.

Mowry's three-day total of 15-under-par 201 set a tournament record. The previous record of 202 was set by Bruce Crampton in 1986. Mowry finished with a 68 after shooting 66 and 67 in the first two rounds.

Brewer also shot a final-round 68. Miller Barber was third at 12-under 204.

Mowry earned $37,500 for the win, while Brewer picked up $21,500 for second. Barber pocketed $17,800 for third.

Defending champion Billy Casper finished fourth at 206, earning $14,800.

Despite making five birdies and just one bogey, Mowry had to fight his own nervousness with the putter to claim the win.

He managed to stay calm enough to make the 15-inch tap-in on the final hole for the win.

Sitting 56 yards from the pin on No. 18, Mowry played a perfect pitch-and-run and the ball settled just to the left of the flag.

Brewer's approach shot to the 18th green from 116 yards out failed to reach the green and landed in the rough in front of the green, 30 feet from the pin.

Brewer chipped to within about three feet of the flag but had to settle for par.

Mowry, the leader after the second round, recorded three birdies on the front nine Sunday, all on putts of 15 feet or less, then added another on the par-5 11th hole.

Mowry's lone bogey came on the No. 15, a 167-yard par 3. He missed a 6-foot par putt after chipping to the green from the left rough.

Inkster Successfully Defends Title

CHESAPEAKE, Va. (AP) — The hardest thing to do in sports is to repeat as champion. Juli Inkster is making it look easy.

Inkster's victory Sunday in the LPGA Crestar Classic was the 13th of her career. Of those 13, five were at events she had won in the past. Her Crestar victory also marked the second time she had successfully defended a title.

Inkster closed with a 3-under-par 69 for a 54-hole total of 210, six shots under par and five ahead of her closest pursuers on Greenbrier Country Club's 6,275-yard layout.

Inkster won the tournament last year at Sleepy Hole Golf Course, ending the event's eight-year run at the club in nearby Suffolk.

Neumann, the U.S. Open champion, birdied the 18th hole to salvage a 2-over 74. Daniel, a 14-time winner whose last victory came in 1985, kept pace with Inkster for seven holes but wound up with a 74.

Those three were the only ones to break par for the tournament, which was suspended twice by storms.

Inkster, one of 65 players who had to complete their rain-shortened second round early Sunday morning, built a three-shot lead midway through the final round and never led by less than two the rest of the way.

Inkster and Daniel began the final round at 3-under, one shot behind Jody Rosenthal and Cindy Figg-Currier.

Daniel sank a 5-foot birdie putt on the 509-yard first hole and parred the next six.

Inkster joined her at 4-under with an 8-foot birdie putt on the 372-yard fifth hole.

Ivan Lendl Tops Agassi Once Again

NEW YORK (AP) — Once again, Ivan the Conqueror cut Andre the Giant down to size.

Top-seeded Ivan Lendl ignored gusty winds and blew away defending champion Andre Agassi 6-2, 6-3 Sunday to reach the final of the Tournament of Champions. Lendl is now 4-0 against the talented teen-ager from Las Vegas.

Lendl was scheduled to play unseeded Jaime Yzaga of Peru today for the championship of the rain-delayed tournament. Yzaga beat eighth-seeded Michael Chang 6-4, 6-3 in the other semifinal on a windy day at the West Side Tennis Club in Forest Hills.

Lendl, who won the tournament in 1982 and 1985, had nine aces and eight service winners against Agassi.

Agassi had only two break points, and Lendl saved one of them with three straight aces in the fourth game of the match.

Ygaza, ranked 56th, made almost twice as many unforced errors as Chang but he hit 30 winners and was more effective at the net than his 17-year-old opponent.

Robinson, Mitchell Power Giants

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kevin Mitchell isn't the only one hitting home runs for the San Francisco Giants this season.

Pitcher Don Robinson did his part with a two-run homer and Mitchell hit his major league-leading 11th home run as the Giants beat St. Louis 5-1 Sunday.

Robinson, 2-3, scattered nine hits, walked none and struck out five. Both victories have come against St. Louis.

"I just try to throw strikes and let them hit the ball as much as they want," Robinson said. "I get paid for pitching, hitting is something I like to do."

"You like to have Robinson starting because he can help you so much with his bat," manager Roger Craig said.

Jose Uribe led off the second with a triple and came home on Robinson's 400-foot homer to left field to give the Giants a 3-0 lead. It was the right-hander's ninth career home run.

"It was all Don Robinson today," St. Louis manager Whitey Herzog said. "We had our chances but he was tough when he had to be."

Mitchell, who drove in the game's first run with a sacrifice fly, homered in the eighth and leads the majors with 36 RBIs.

"I've already done what I wanted to do at the halfway point," Mitchell said. "I wanted to hit 10 home runs by the All-Star break, but I'm not surprised. A lot of people told me I had the potential to be a good hitter."

Last season, Mitchell set career highs with 19 homers and 80 RBIs in 148 games for the Giants.

"I'm feeling real comfortable at the plate. I'm not feeling any pressure," Mitchell said. "I'm just going up there and seeing the ball and hitting. The big difference is that I have a lot of confidence in myself.

"People used to tell me I could be a good hitter, but I didn't believe them. I don't even look at my statistics. I make it a point not to read the stories. I just want to go out and keep producing."

Braves 7, Expos 1

Pete Smith allowed three hits in seven innings and hit a three-run triple to cap a six-run third inning as Atlanta beat visiting Montreal to complete a three-game sweep.

The victory extended the Braves' winning streak to five games, their longest since August, 1987. It was Montreal's fourth loss in a row and dropped the Expos' road record to 3-12.

Smith, 1-4, struck out eight and walked five for his first victory in seven starts this season.

Astros 5, Mets 0

Jim Deshaies pitched a five-hitter and Kevin Bass went 3-for-3 and tied a team record with four stolen bases, leading Houston over Dwight Gooden and New York at Shea Stadium.

Bass scored three runs, hit an RBI triple and singled to set up the Astros' other run. He had stolen only three bases in six tries this year before tying the club single-game mark of four steals set by Gerald Young on Sept. 14, 1987.

Gooden, 5-1, was trying to become the National League's first six-game winner. Instead, he slipped to 10-3 lifetime against Houston despite allowing just four hits in seven innings.

Phillies 5, Reds 0

Alex Madrid and two relievers combined on an eight-hitter as Philadelphia beat Cincinnati at Riverfront Stadium.

Madrid allowed five singles in 6 2-3 innings, Gordon Dillard got the final out in the seventh and Steve Bedrosian allowed three hits to complete the shutout.

Padres 3, Pirates 1

Roberto Alomar drove in three runs with a homer and two-run single and Ed Whitson scatttered 10 hits in 8 1-3 innings as San Diego beat visiting Pittsburgh.

Cubs 4, Dodgers 2

Damon Berryhill hit a go-ahead, two-run single in the sixth inning as Chicago beat Orel Hershiser and Los Angeles at Dodger Stadium.

Hershiser, 4-3, has lost twice to the Cubs this season.

Steve Wilson, 2-0, escaped a bases-loaded jam in the fourth inning and got the victory in relief of Greg Maddux. Mitch Williams pitched two innings for his 10th save.

Sunday Silence Seeks Triple Crown

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — If all it took were money, guts, top-flight personnel and the fastest 3-year-old horse in the world, there would be more than 11 winners of the three races in a single year that comprise thoroughbred racing's quixotic Triple Crown.

"Luck, don't forget luck. And timing," Lucien Lauren, trainer of the fabled Secretariat, said Sunday, traces of his French-Canadian heritage apparent over a telephone line from nearby Lexington.

It was less than 24 hours after Sunday Silence, the Charlie Whittingham-trained dark bay colt out of Halo, cleared the first hurdle of the three — the 1¼-mile Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs, and already the second — the 1 316-mile Preakness, contested May 20 at Pimlico Race Course — loomed large.

Should that fall into place, the most grueling — the 1½-mile Belmont Stakes — lurks June 10.

And Whittingham, at 76 the dean of the training fraternity and winner of more than 500 stakes races, didn't make things any easier for himself by predicting for all the world to hear that Sunday Silence was equal to the task.

"Charlie is one of the best horsemen ever, and you must respect that," Lauren continued. "But three such different and difficult races in such short time. It's a question if the horse is strong enough, ... but also necessary that he be at the very top of his form.

"Even Secretariat got beat a couple times ... and the horse, he don't talk like a human being. We take his temperature, we look at his legs, we do what we can," he continued, "but how do you explain it?

"Maybe it's just that the horse don't feel so good that day. And if your luck is bad," Lauren said, "maybe that day turns out to be one of the (Triple Crown) races."

Secretariat scored 2½-length victories over Sham — a great horse in the wrong year — in record times in both the 1973 Derby and Preakness. And then, with Ron Turcotte aboard wearing the blue and white block silks of Penny Chenery's Meadow Stable, ripped off a world-record 2:24 at Belmont before a frenzied New York crowd — an achievement generally considered the finest ever by a thoroughbred.

It came 25 years after Citation, one of the few racehorses mentioned in the same breath with Secretariat, had last turned the Triple Crown, a feat that would be matched twice in the decade — by Seattle Slew in 1977 and Affirmed the following year — and not since.

Surely cognizant of that fact, Chrysler Corp. etched its name into the crown last year by guaranteeing $5 million in total prize money to a single winner of its more formally monikered "Triple Crown Challenge" and, in the absence of a sweep, $1 million to the horse with the best combined finishes in all three.

Fittingly, a flashy bay son of Secretariat named Risen Star took home the carmaker's check last year. After running third behind Winning Colors and Forty Niner at the Derby, Risen Star upset the filly in the Preakness and went on to take the Belmont in the fastest time since his father won the race in 1973.

Woody Stephens and Jack Van Berg, contemporaries of Whittingham's and two of the shrewdest trainers in the game, figure Sunday Silence has a very good chance of doing as well. Both believe the colt's toughest obstacle to the bigger payday will be repeating Saturday's Derby victory over highly regarded Easy Goer at the Preakness — just 18 days from now.

"I think Shug (McGaughey, trainer of Easy Goer) learned something from this and I think he'll catch him back at the Preakness, then Charlie will get back over in the Belmont," said Stephens, a Hall of Famer who has saddled winners in all three — including an unprecedented five straight in the Belmont — but never in the same year.

"The wet track definitely took something away from Easy Goer, and the tight turns and hard surface at Pimlico might be a little better suited to his game."

"I don't think the turns are going to be the problem at the Preakness so much as a harder racetrack," said Van Berg, who brought Alysheba to the Belmont in 1987 with two of the jewels in his pocket and got beat by Bet Twice.

"Easy Goer is a big horse and he needs to get a hold of the track. If he gets that ... he might look more like the horse everybody figured him to be."

Sunday, apparently, was too early for Whittingham himself to start sweating the details. He was in fine fettle outside Barn 41 at Churchill Downs when reporters threw his prediction back to him in the crisp morning air.

"It's a prediction, but the one thing I do know," Whittingham said with a sweep of his arm, "is that he's only one from this group that can be a Triple Crown winner.

"Luck has a lot to do with it," he added, "and I always said I'd rather be born lucky than smart."

Martin Suspended ...

Brown said that, by law, he is not allowed to discuss a player's academic performance. But he said Martin would be attending summer school and that his status with the team and his availability for the 1989 season would not be determined until August, when the summer-school sessions have ended.

Martin also was suspended in October 1987 by then-head coach Dick Crum after failing a midseason drug test. Brown, citing university policy, would not comment when asked about Martin's subsequent drug tests, but a member of the UNC football staff said the player had tested drug-free.

Martin is the second Tar Heel football player to face police charges this year. On Jan. 29, quarterback Deems May was arrested by Chapel Hill police and charged with driving while impaired after registering a 0.13 blood-alcohol level on a breath test.

May, a rising sophomore from Lexington who will play tight end next season, was convicted on May 2 and had his driver's license revoked for a year. He also was placed on a year of unsupervised probation, fined $100, ordered to perform 24 hours of community service and attend a driving-and-alcohol education class.

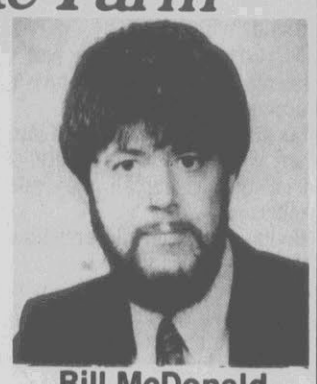

May was allowed to participate in spring practice before his court date.

"A lot depends on the person involved and depends on how many times that person has been in trouble," Brown said. "Deems is a good young man who made a mistake and learned some hard lessons."

May faces other "in-house" punishment for breaking team rules, Brown said, but he would not elaborate other than to say May would speak to youth groups in the community.

Mudd Wins ...

"It's a sad feeling to lose a playoff," Mudd said. "I've been on the other end of it twice."

Nelson left the course without discussing his round, but Mudd said he knew he was battling a fierce competitor.

"Larry is a great pressure player," Mudd said. "He's won all those majors."

Mudd said he thought he might have an edge on the playoff hole because he normally outdrives Nelson.

"Playoffs are petrifying because it can be over in one hole," Mudd said. "I did feel comfortable because I thought I had an edge in my length. I really wanted to make that putt because I didn't want it to go any farther. I didn't want to give Larry a chance to do something spectacular."

Mudd said his most spectacular shot during his regulation round came with mud on the ball.

He blasted his third shot out of a hazard on the par-4, 14th hole and it came to rest 40 feet from the hole.

"It had mud all over it but I couldn't take it off," Mudd said. "I couldn't believe it when my putt went in (for a par). That shot kept me in the tournament."

The 265 was the lowest score in the tournament since Sam Snead's 264 in 1957 when he won the Dallas Open at Glen Lakes Country Club.

Mudd has now won $263,113 this year. His best year was 1988, when he earned $422,022.

A crowd estimated at 58,000 fans watched the final round, which started late because of thunderstorms. The first two rounds both were plagued by bad weather.

Twins Fall To Cellar With Pair Of Losses

The Associated Press

Seattle's Alvin Davis belts one of three base hits Sunday

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

There's nowhere for the Minnesota Twins to go but up.

"I don't know what the problem is. I can't really say because I'm part of the problem," Kirby Puckett said Sunday after Minnesota lost a doubleader to Cleveland 5-4 and 12-1, dropping the Twins into the AL West cellar, nine games behind Oakland.

The Twins, who won 91 games last season, have lost 13 of their last 15 and are 11-18.

"Things are just a little of snych now," said Allan Anderson, who didn't get a decision in the opener. "All I can do as a pitcher is try and throw strikes and keep the defense in the game."

Dave Clark hit a pinch-homer leading off ninth inning of the first game after Minnesota had rallied for three runs in the top of the inning. Clark then a three-run homer in the fifth inning of the second game that gave the Indians a 6-0 lead.

"Sometimes you have to make your own breaks," Minnesota manager Tom Kelly said. "All we can do is keep plugging away and stay right with it."

By the end of the second game, the Twins were using outfielder Dan Gladden on the mound. He gave up two hits and one run in the eighth inning.

The sweep was Cleveland's first since last July 5 against Oakland and gave the Indians six victories in their last seven games.

Puckett was 0-for-9 in the doubleheader. He finished the first five years of his major-league career with 1,062 hits. Joe Medwick has the most hits in the first five years of his career, getting 1,064 from 1932-37.

"I would have liked to have broken the record," Puckett said. "It's kind of a wasted day. I should have stayed at home."

Rich Yett, 3-2, won the second game, allowing four hits and one run in 6 2-3 innings. Fred Toliver, 1-2, allowed three runs and five hits in 2 1-3 innings.

Doug Jones, 2-2, won the opener despite allowing a game-tying pinch-homer to Kent Hrbek. Francisco Oliveras, 0-1, gave up Clark's game-winner.

"We've got the guys to do the job," Puckett said. "You got to believe we'll come around."

Mariners 5, Orioles 3

Alvin Davis had three hits and drove in three runs as Seattle won its sixth straight and beat Baltimore for the third time in less than 24 hours.

Seattle, which Saturday night swept its first doubleheader since 1981, had not won six straight since June 20-29, 1985, when the Mariners won a club- record eight straight.

Bill Swift, 1-0, allowed six hits in 5 2-3 innings. Dennis Powell, the third Seattle pitcher, finished the combined six-hitter for his first save.

Jose Bautista, 2-3, allowed seven hits and four runs in five innings as Baltimore lost its fourth straight.

Red Sox 9, Rangers 5

Jody Reed hit a two-run double in a five-run second inning and Wade Boggs and Nick Esasky homered as Boston completed a three-game sweep.

Texas opened the season with 16 victories in its first 20 games but has lost seven of its last nine, including four straight. Boston has won six of its last seven.

John Dopson, 4-1, allowed three hits and one unearned run in six innings. Lee Smith got the last out for his fourth save.

Jamie Moyer, 3-2, allowed five runs and four hits in 2 2-3 innings.

Athletics 5, Tigers 4

Mark McGwire's homer snapped a seventh-inning tie as Oakland won for the ninth time in 13 games. Detroit has lost five of its last six games and nine of 11.

Bob Welch, 4-2, gave up six hits in six innings, walking three and striking out four. Dennis Eckersley finished for his 10th save in 11 opportunities.

Brewers 8, Royals 2

Robin Yount and Glenn Braggs drove in three runs each as Milwaukee won its fourth straight.

Chris Bosio, 5-1, gave up four singles in five innings before leaving with tightness in his shoulder. Chuck Crim finished for his second save.

Charlie Leibrandt, 2-4, gave up eight hits and five runs in 2 1-3 innings, his shortest outing this season.

Yount, who had fluid drained from his left knee before the game, extended his hitting streak to nine games with three hits, including RBI doubles in the first and third and a run-scoring single in the fourth.

White Sox 6, Yankees 2

Harold Baines had three hits and drove in two runs, and Eric King, 3-3, allowed five hits in seven innings as Chicago won for the first time in six game against New York this season.

Bobby Thigpen pitched 1 1-3 innings for his fifth save, finishing the combined six-hitter.

Tommy John, 2-5, allowed 11 hits in 7 1-3 innings, walking four and striking out two.

Surgery May Push Canseco's Return Back Another Month

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. — Jose Canseco says surgery may be the only alternative for his ailing left hand.

That could push back the long-awaited comeback of the American League MVP at least another month.

Canseco reinjured his left wrist Sunday on the second day of his rehabilitation assignment with the Huntsville Stars, the Oakland Athletics' Class AA farm team.

"It's painful," he said after the game. "I'm getting a sharp pain and movement is minimal at best, so it's pretty bad."

Canseco, who was 1-for-4 Saturday night, grounded to second in his first at-bat Sunday and then reinjured the wrist when he singled in the third inning against Jacksonville. He was clearly in pain as he ran to first on the RBI single and said later that he thought the wrist was fractured.

"The next step is to have it operated on and have the bone taken out," said Canseco, who began the season on the disabled list with a stress fracture of the hamate bone in his left wrist.

He said the wrist was partially fractured before but that he now felt much more pain.

"It was a slight fracture and I couldn't determine if it was healing or not," he said. "That's what we were trying to find out."

Canseco said surgery probably would delay his return to Oakland at least another month.

"I've never had that type of operation before," he said. "I think I'm looking at three to five weeks. I really couldn't tell you."

Canseco said he was scheduled to return to Oakland today and would have X-rays taken Tuesday.

"The only thing that will determine anything will be X-rays," he said. "We're going to have to wait for the results."

Canseco obviously was discouraged by his latest setback, but tried to remain optimistic.

"I've had a cast on for one month," he said. "I been rehabing it for a week and a half. If it hasn't healed by then, obviously it's going to give me problems throughout the season.

"I'm just 24 years old and have a long career ahead of me. It is important to get these things out of the way early."

Canseco, who remained at the ballpark during the game and applied ice to the hand, said he felt some pain in his first at-bat.

"The pitcher threw a fastball in," he said. "The bat cracked and I felt the vibration in the hand quite strongly. I decided to take another at-bat. I hit a slider the second time up. On the last hit, I felt it snap.

"The pain was tremendous. I feel as though it could be fractured."

Canseco's absence has left a hole in the lineup of the defending American League champions. Last season, Canseco became the first player in baseball history to hit 40 homers and steal 40 bases in a season. He also batted .307 and drove in 124 runs.

Woody Peele

This past week, I learned a little bit about the strictness of the National Collegiate Athletic Association's rules, and can't help but wonder just who is in charge here.

During the week, Lynn Sullivan of our advertising department approached me asking about using a game action picture from an East Carolina game to illustrate a planned "house" ad promoting the Colonial Athletic Association baseball tournament and The Daily Reflector's plans for its coverage. That ad ran in Sunday's edition.

While the photo department was checking its files to come with something appropriate, Lynn also contacted the sports information office at East Carolina asking about photos which they might have available, too.

But she was informed that the use of any picture of an athlete in an ad would constitute a violation of the NCAA's rules and could result in the suspension or the loss of eligibility of any athlete who might appear in the ad.

She came back to me wondering what to do.

Now my first reaction was that it's our picture, made at a public event, and as the property of The Daily Reflector can be used in any way we see fit.

But, just to be on the safe side, I decided to give the NCAA office a ring, explaining the situation and getting the facts on the case.

As it was already Friday, haste became a factor to meet deadlines.

Since the NCAA office is in Mission, Kans., in the Central time zone, it was necessary to wait until 10 a.m. to have a chance to get up with anyone. So shortly after that time, I gave them a ring.

After explaining what I was after to the person who answered, I was transferred to another extension, where I again told my story. Sorry, I was told, everyone is in meetings, but if I would call back after 1 o'clock, I could talk with someone authorized to give me the true word.

Normally, since I had a night baseball game to cover, I would not come back to the office after lunch, but I made a special trip just to make the call.

After again going through the litany of explaining what I was after, I was again transferred. But this time, after again telling my story, I was told that, no, since I was calling from a newspaper, there was only one person who could talk with me, and that person wouldn't be in until 3 o'clock: call back.

Now why couldn't they have told me that the first time?

So, at any rate, once more, after running some personal errands, I returned to the office to try again. This time, I was told the person I needed to talk to was on another line, would I leave a message.

No way — I said I would hold on, and hold on I did for nearly 20 minutes until finally, finally, I got through.

I explained what we wanted and that the player in the picture would not be identified in the text, but, yes, under questioning, could be identified by those who knew the players' numbers. His face did not show in the photo.

No way, the NCAA told me. If a player appears in an ad, it constitutes an endorsement of a commercial product, in this case, The Daily Reflector, by the player, whether or not he even knows of the ad.

What if, in all innocence of the rule, we had run it without ECU's knowledge, I asked. It still could cause problems for the player, I was told.

I finally suggested that we paint out the player's number so that he could not be identified in any way and the NCAA rep finally agreed to that.

Our co-publisher Jack Whichard had said that he saw no difference in running a picture in an ad or with a story — in both instances, it's keyed to sell papers. The NCAA rep agreed with me, but said there was, in the NCAA's eyes at least, a difference.

Later on, I got to thinking how many ads have been run in newspapers, or on television, showing players, and promoting something the paper or station is doing. In each of these cases, the player is in jeopardy, despite the entire innocence of it all.

I've also learned this. If the NCAA were to hold a tournament in Greenville, it would be perfectly legal for players' pictures to appear in any ad which the NCAA might purchase to promote that tournament.

What is good for the goose then, is apparently not good for the gander after all.

caution flags for a total of 27 laps held Allison's average speed to 155.869 mph.

The lap Allison took his final lead on was caught at about 193 mph — one of the fastest of the afternoon and about 7 mph slower than the quickest laps in this race a year ago.

He earned a track record $98,675 and gave the partisan crowd, estimated at a Talladega record 140,000, a thrill.

The crowd included his father, Bobby Allison, a three-time Winston 500 winner who is recuperating from serious injuries suffered in a race crash last June 19 at Long Pond, Pa. Also on hand was Uncle Donnie, who won the 1971 Winston 500 and was here as crew chief for rookie Hut Stricklin.

"This is the first time since my dad began getting better that he was at a race where I won," the young driver said. "It really feels good to win at my home track, especially with dad and mom and so many of my friends and family here.

Darrell Waltrip finished fifth and Ken Schrader sixth in the debut of the new Chevrolet Luminas, and Waltrip, the Daytona 500 winner, and Allison are now the only drivers with a chance at winning the Winston Million.

That $1 million bonus goes to any driver who can win three of NASCAR's Big Four races — Daytona, the Winston 500, the Coca-Cola 600 at Charlotte and the Southern 500 at Darlington. A $100,000 bonus goes to any driver who wins two of those races.

"All I can say about the Winston Million is that there are two tracks that owe us one. One is Charlotte and the other is Darlington," Allison said.

The winner said Sunday's victory was a payoff for his hard-working team.

"It's been a trying first third of the season for us — real up and down. This was a real special day for us."

Dale Earnhardt, who finished eighth, remained in the Winston Cup lead by 77 points, 1,376-1,299, over Waltrip, who moved one point ahead of Geoff Bodine, Sunday's 12th-place finisher.

Allison moved up from eighth to sixth, trailing Earnhardt by 154 points.

There were no injuries and the only serious incident was a 10-car melee in the fourth turn on lap 171, ignited when Michael Waltrip and Larry Pearson came together. Seven cars were eliminated in the wreck.

NBA Playoff Roundup ...

Moses Malone, who led the Hawks with 25 points and 16 rebounds, got Atlanta within three points with a 3-point field goal but Humphries hit one of two free throws with eight seconds left.

Free throws were the difference. The Bucks, who led the NBA in free throw shooting, made their first 16 and finished with 26 of 29. Atlanta made only 22 of 35.

Lakers 113, SuperSonics 102

James Worthy had 28 points and 12 rebounds for the Lakers, who didn't go ahead for good until a jump shot by Johnson with 9:51 remaining gave them an 88-87 lead, starting a 16-4 spurt that made it 102-91 with 4:34 to go.

Byron Scott had 18 points and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Mychal Thompson added 16 points each for Los Angeles. Derrick McKey led Seattle with 23 points and Dale Ellis had 19, but only two in the fourth quarter. Xavier McDaniel scored 15 for the Sonics, only two in the second half.

It was the Lakers' ninth straight playoff victory over the Sonics dating back to April 1980.

Dale Ellis, the Sonics' leading scorer, had only two of his 19 points in the fourth quarter and McDaniel, Seattle's second-leading scorer, had just two of his 15 in the second half.

Suns 130, Warriors 103

Phoenix won Saturday's game against Golden State by outscoring the Warriors 41-22 in the third period as Tom Chambers scored 13 of his 25 points and rookie guard Dan Majerle had 10 of his 22.

Majerle's defense helped limit Golden State's Chris Mullin to 18 points and Rookie of the Year Mitch Richmond to 12. Mullin averaged 32.7 points and Richmond 25.7 in a first-round sweep of Utah.

tance of a good education with the Bethel students.

"Being a recruiter, I come across so many young men in my job from day-to-day that are great basketball players but don't have the grades," he said.

Universities admit students with good grades, and the National Collegiate Athletic Association's Proposition 48 rule requires that students admitted into university athletic programs get good grades, Ford said.

"Start right now in order to prepare yourselves if you do have the desire to further your education after high school," he said.

Ford told the students that he knows they don't always like school or like to go to school. But, "since you're here why not do the best you possibly can," he said. "It's real important for you to do well now."

In response to questions about if Carolina standout J.R. Reid is going to forego his last year to get an early start in the NBA, Ford said Coach Smith and Reid are still discussing the options.

"Whatever Coach Smith suggests for J.R. to do I think J.R. will do. Coach Smith hasn't steered anybody wrong in that decision. I think he should really follow the advice of Coach Smith," he said.

Rabbis Hope To Rebuild Ancient Jewish Temple

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM — Hoping to rebuild the ancient Jewish Temple where Islamic shrines now stand, a group of Israeli rabbis is compiling computerized lists of potential priests, weaving seamless linen robes and reproducing a gem-studded breastplate described in Exodus.

The plan would place the Temple altar on what some ultra-religious Jews believe is its historical site. The spot is where the gold-topped Dome of the Rock now stands, a Jerusalem landmark and one of the holiest sites of Islam.

The seemingly irreconcilable claim by Arabs and Jews to the area, known to Jews as the Temple Mount and to Arabs as Haram Al Sharif or "Noble Enclosure," is one of the most emotional issues of the Arab-Israeli conflict.

Any attempt by Israel to reclaim it would be certain to stir tensions throughout the Moslem world. The government does not support the rabbis' plan to rebuild the Temple.

"All Jewish history as far as we're concerned is one big parenthesis until the Temple is returned," said Rabbi Nahman Kahane of the Temple Institute.

"It isn't like Moslems who have to make the pilgrimage to Mecca only once in a lifetime. In Judaism, three times a year a person is mandated by the Torah to go to the Temple. Life without the Temple is not really living," said Kahane, who immigrated from New York City.

The Temple Institute's 50 rabbis and artisans have made Temple vessels and produced a computerized blueprint of the shrine in preparation for rebuilding it on the site where it stood until A.D. 70 when the Romans destroyed it.

More than $200,000 has been collected to finance the project, most of it from American Jews, according to institute director Rabbi Yisrael Ariel.

In the centuries since the Temple's destruction, the 35-acre rectangular platform has become a sacred Islamic site, marking the spot where the Prophet Mohammed is said to have ascended to heaven.

Tensions mounted last month when Israel began barring Moslems from worshiping at Al Aqsa after Arab rioters threw stones that landed on Jews praying at the adjacent Western Wall.

The restrictions prompted accusations that Israel had reneged on a pledge to maintain freedom of worship at Moslem holy sites. Adherence to the policy had been a source of pride since Israel seized the Old City and its shrines from Jordan in the 1967 Middle East war.

"This is an ugly action and a serious matter not acceptable by religion or by law," said Sheikh Mohammed Al Jamal, deputy director of the Moslem trust that controls Islamic properties. "Moslems have the right to express themselves politically within the mosque."

Jewish militants have disputed Israeli measures that, in an effort to prevent sectarian conflict, bar them from praying freely on the Temple Mount.

"The Moslems built the mosques against the feelings of the Jews and this must be changed," said Gershon Salomon of the Temple Mount Faithful, a group dedicated to regaining Israel control of the site.

Asked what he would do about the mosques, he replies, "I honor Moslem feelings about Mecca, so we shall help them to take the two mosques to Mecca and rebuild them there."

Kahane rejects such ideas as "crazy."

"There is no amount of money that would induce the Moslems to move those mosques. But nothing could compel us to give up the Temple either," said Kahane, brother of Rabbi Meir Kahane, the founder of the anti-Arab Kach Party.

"It is up to God to decide," said the grey-bearded Kahane, who says he is confident the Temple will be restored in his lifetime.

To speed the process, Kahane has computerized a list of about 1,000 Israeli descendents of the biblical high priests, called "kohanim" in Hebrew, and recorded their addresses and professions.

"This way, when the Messiah comes, I can say, 'Here, Mr. Messiah, here's your data base,'" said Kahane, whose own name appears on the list.

To show what his dream might look like, Kahane's cramped office contains a photomontage of Jerusalem with a replica of the Second Temple superimposed on the Temple Mount. The Dome of the Rock and Al Aqsa have been eliminated.

On display at the institute's museum are reproductions of 30 of the 93 items required for daily Temple worship, including the copper wash basin used by priests to wash their hands and feet, their seamless linen garments and the high priest's golden crown.

Currently under construction are a six-foot high menorah ornately worked in silver and the high priest's breastplate set with 12 gemstones representing the tribes of Israel.

The items are described in Exodus, the chapter of the Bible's Old Testament that chronicles the religious history of the Jews' flight from Egypt.

Israelis Disperse Rioters With Gas

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM — Police fired tear gas today to disperse crowds of Israeli rioters who blocked streets with burning tires to protest the slaying of a soldier that has been blamed on Palestinian guerrillas.

The violence occurred in Ashdod, hometown of soldier Avi Sassportaz, whose body was found buried in a field near the occupied Gaza Strip on Sunday. He disappeared 81 days ago while hitchhiking home from his army base.

The body of Sassportaz, 21, was found as more than 1,000 troops fanned out near Gaza in search of a second missing trooper, Ilan Saadon, 18. He was last seen Wednesday hitchhiking in southern Israel.

Israel radio said preliminary findings showed Sassportaz was shot in the head several hours after he was picked up at the Hodiyya intersection, 20 miles southwest of Jerusalem. Police said they believe Palestinians were involved in the disappearances of Sassportaz and Saadon.

Industry Minister Ariel Sharon was quoted by the Hadashot daily as telling Israelis in southern Dimona that these cases were the result of a "serious national blunder" in handling the 17-month-old Arab rebellion, in which 465 Palestinians and 21 Israelis have died. He did not elaborate.

In the Gaza Strip today, the army maintained curfews on more than 240,000 Palestinians in refugee camps in an effort to contain violent outbreaks. At least 158 Arabs were wounded by gunfire in weekend clashes with soldiers, according to U.N. figures. Saturday's wounded toll, by U.N. count, was the highest daily figure since the start of the uprising Dec. 8, 1987. The army put the number of wounded Saturday at 77.

Army curfews also were maintained on eight towns or refugee camps in the West Bank that are home to about 200,000 Palestinians.

Sunday night and early today, more than 200 Israeli youths took to the streets of southern Ashdod shouting "Death to the Arabs" and burning tires, Israel radio and the Itim news agency reported.

A police spokesman, Eli Elimelech, said there were two violent outbreaks in the town of 75,000, in which tear gas was fired.

In one case, 150 people rioted during a march toward the police, Elimelech said. Later, 300 people burned tires on a main street corner, he said.

National Police Commissioner David Kraus issued an appeal for restraint.

"I think it is worth urging the public to demonstrate responsibility and restraint and not to force the police to turn forces from its main task" of anti-guerrilla patrols, Kraus said on Army radio.

Newspaper editorials reflected the frustration felt by many in a country where all men serve in the army and where soldiers rely heavily on hitching rides to get to and from their bases.

U.S. Waging Fight To Block PLO Entry Into U.N. Agency

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The United States is waging an uphill fight to prevent the Palestine Liberation Organization from being admitted to full membership in the World Health Organization.

A U.S. delegation flew to Switzerland over the weekend to wage a last-minute campaign against PLO admission to the U.N. agency.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III threatened last week to strip the international health organization of U.S. funds if it votes to admit the PLO.

The U.N. agency, meeting in Geneva, could take up the PLO request for membership as early as today.

The United States contributes about one-quarter of the WHO budget — about $71 million this year — and $73.8 million has been requested for fiscal year 1990.

U.S. officials are working feverishly to convince other nations in the 166-member organization that the PLO request should be withdrawn, deferred, or as a last defense, voted down.

Sources in Geneva reported Sunday that WHO Director General Dr. Hiroshi Nakajima, who has warned that a cutoff of the U.S. funds would "destroy" the agency, made an unpublicized trip to Tunis on Saturday in a last-minute attempt to get PLO Leader Yasser Arafat to change his mind about pressing for membership.

Reports from Tunis suggested, however, that the PLO leader remained unconvinced and ruled out any compromise.

His envoy to the U.N. Office in Geneva called on all WHO member countries Friday to "oppose any proposal or procedural action aimed at deferring consideration of the (PLO's membership) application."

The New York Times reported that Nakajima — who consulted with U.S. officials in Washington last week — is pushing a compromise under which the WHO would offer more medical aid to Palestinians in the occupied territories but defer consideration of the PLO's application until next year.

The compromise would keep the United States from cutting off aid to WHO.

Arafat last year declared a Palestinian state on Israeli-held land and about 100 of the 166 WHO members have already recognized the "State of Palestine" or at least acknowledged its proclamation of statehood.

However, the Dec. 15 U.N. General Assembly resolution that changed the Palestine Liberation Organization's nameplates in the U.N. system to "Palestine" stressed that this did not change its status as a nonvoting observer to the United Nations.

In the WHO, a simple majority is all that would be required for PLO admission.

"I think it's an uphill struggle for us, I really do," said John Bolton, the assistant secretary of state-designate in charge of international organizations.

Bolton, in charge of the State Department's effort to head off the PLO entry, is the No. 2 man in the U.S. delegation headed by Secretary of Health and Human Services Louis Sullivan.

In an interview on the eve of his departure Saturday, Bolton said U.S. ambassadors around the world have been contacting WHO member governments over the past week to bolster Baker's arguments. U.S. officials also have been meeting with ambassadors in Washington to make their case.

"We will do the same when we get there (in Geneva)," Bolton said of the U.S. campaign.

Baker, Bolton and other U.S. officials argue their case on legal and foreign policy grounds: that the PLO should not be admitted because it does not meet the criteria for a state under international law.

Crash In Sweden Kills 16 People

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OSKARSHAMN, Sweden — A small passenger plane on a domestic flight crashed as it landed at this coastal city's airport today, killing everyone on board, police said.

Fourteen passengers and two crewmen were listed on the flight by the twin-engine Beachcraft 99 plane when it left Stockholm's Arlanda airport, said duty officer Sigurd Gustafsson.

He could not confirm that all the listed passengers were aboard the flight.

"No one survived the crash," Gustafsson said.

The cause of the crash was not immediately known. A rescue official said on the national radio that eyewitnesses reported seeing the plane rock sharply before landing and go down on its nose. It immediately caught fire and exploded, the rescue worker said.

Gustafsson said the weather was sunny and there were no strong winds when the accident occurred at Virkvarns airport north of Oskarshamn, on the southeastern coast.

The propeller-driven aircraft belonged to the regional airline Holmstrom Flyg, a family company that has seven small planes.

Horoscope — From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY May 9

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): This is not a good day to handle family matters. Analyze a situation by looking into the past. Don't try to force a change in attitude.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): You find yourself inadequately prepared to handle a career project. Don't take on more than you can control. Pay attention to details.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Communications and sharing ideas are important. Stay with the status quo at present. Others seek your opinion.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): You may take it personally when you offer someone help and he refuses. Get plenty of rest to renew energy.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Make a sincere commitment to a business plan that will bear fruit. Your ideas and opinions are stimulating to associates.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Your solid ideas can be put forward. Romantic and inspired friendships are worth the investment of your time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Self-improvement and specialized training can help to elevate your position. A period of emotional growth gives you confidence.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): A lazy attitude—not your usual style—can keep you locked into the status quo. A break from basic boredom is necessary.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Petty issues can sidetrack your forward momentum. Be available to your family members. Cultivate the traits you admire in others.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Rely on your reservoir of tolerance when others aggravate you. Gossip is an invasion of personal privacy. Nighttime dreams can come true.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Take a second look at a new project before you get fully involved. A back door romance would not serve any useful purpose.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Transient feelings will put you through many gentle mood swings throughout the day. The current cycle favors creative writing.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

♠K7 ♡KJ9 ◇AQ105 ♣J986
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	2 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—What's the problem? Surely with four-card support for partner's suit, a raise to three clubs is obvious. But if ever there was an exception to that rule, this hand is it. A nine-trick contract seems more feasible than an 11-trick one, and a rebid of two no trump will have the added benefit of protecting your tenaces from a lead through.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K983 ♡AJ72 ◇83 ♣762
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Partner's three hearts is a game try, and does not necessarily promise a real suit. Nevertheless, since you are going to game anyway you might as well offer a choice of contracts. Bid four hearts. Should partner have four hearts, the 4-4 fit could play better than the 5-4—he might be able to discard one of your losers on his fifth spade.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K983 ♡AJ72 ◇63 ♣Q87
Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?
A.—Unless you're playing limit raises, you are not strong enough for a jump raise to three hearts, but too strong for a simple raise to two hearts. The solution is to make a temporizing bid of one spade, then bid hearts at the three-level next. That secondary jump, if necessary, is considered invitational, not forcing.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠75 ♡762 ◇942 ♣AKJ107
Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What do you respond?
A.—If you consider only point count, your 8 points qualify for an invitational raise to two no trump. However, this hand rates to produce five tricks for partner, making it a much better hand than one with, say, some random collection of secondary high cards. Bid three no trump.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ1095 ♡86 ◇QJ3 ♣KJ7
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—You have two choices: a raise to three hearts, or a bid of two no trump. (A rebid of two spades would show at least a six-card suit and less outside strength.) With tenaces and soft values, we feel the latter bid is more descriptive.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q753 ♡J82 ◇Q9652 ♣6
Partner opens the bidding with two no trump. What do you respond?
A.—With your unbalanced hand, you would prefer a suit contract if one was available. Bid three clubs, a request for partner to show a four-card major. If he bids spades, raise to game. Over anything else, settle for three no trump.

TV Executives Join Forces To Form Production Firm

By Kathryn Baker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Will PKE become the MTM of the future?

The new production venture is a product of the unlikely partnership of Tom Patchett, creator of NBC's wise-cracking puppet star "ALF," and Ken Kaufman, producer of such serious, made-for-television fare as "The Attic: The Hiding of Anne Frank" and "In the Line of Duty: The FBI Murders."

The "PKE" in PKE Productions stands for Patchett-Kaufman Entertainment.

MTM Productions, named for co-founder Mary Tyler Moore, is the company that became legendary for such high-quality hits as "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," "Hill Street Blues" and "St. Elsewhere." Patchett worked there with partner Jay Tarses on several series, including "The Bob Newhart Show."

Patchett and Kaufman met when they teamed up a few years ago on "Washingtoon," a short-lived, political-satire cable series. They remained in touch, though their paths diverged. Kaufman recalled that on the day he got approval for "Anastasia," a two-part movie for NBC, Patchett got the go-ahead for "ALF."

Patchett has independently produced "ALF" since its premiere three seasons ago, but with success under his belt, he began to think big.

"I asked Ken, how do you run a company?" Patchett said in an interview in Kaufman's office at their new company headquarters in suburban Culver City. "The best company I ever worked for was MTM when Grant Tinker was there, and we just had a wonderful creative bunch of people and there were five, six shows going at one time, and it was really wonderful. But you've got to be a manager to do that at the top someplace. I knew Ken could run a company, and I asked him for his advice, and sort of couched in that was the invitation to sort of go in together."

In March, PKE was still a chain of sparsely furnished offices in a non-descript building.

"When I came in here Jan. 3, there was me and the answering machine," Kaufman said. "On the answering machine, it said, 'Hello, this is Patchett-Kaufman Entertainment. We're not here right now. Could you please leave a message?' And the first message I got was him (Patchett) calling, saying, 'Hello. Kaufman's not there? Well, I'm Patchett, and I'm not there. You guys must be doing very well.'"

But Kaufman proudly showed off the stadium-sized warehouse soon to be filled with soundstages and dressing rooms and the bustle of work on new projects ranging from a fact-based movie about the Howard Beach, N.Y., racial attack to "Working Girl," a new NBC sitcom based on the hit movie of the same name.

Kaufman, who recently moved to Los Angeles from New York, had made a name producing Important-with-a-capital-I movies with his late partner, Michael Lepiner.

Patchett had a string of critical if not ratings successes with Tarses, including NBC's "Buffalo Bill." The strain of the series split up the partnership.

Tarses went on to create the offbeat dramedies "The Days and Nights of Molly Dodd" and "The 'Slap' Maxwell Story." Patchett went on to "ALF," his first bona fide ratings hit. The show has spawned an industry of stuffed toys, lunch boxes and other "ALF" paraphernalia.

No one, apparently, was more surprised by its almost instantaneous success than was Patchett:

"The scary part is the responsibility that comes with a hit like that. ... When you get phone calls that, you know, a husband is dying and he's in a coma and the only thing he responds to is ALF ... and somebody dies and they bury the kid with an ALF doll or cap ... you gotta be careful. It's very — you begin to feel what humanity is all about, because you have such power."

PKE's logo is a house, which Kaufman describes as symbolizing a protective roof over the heads of the creative types he and Patchett hope to attract. It's to some extent the house that "ALF" built.

"'ALF' is affording this venture," said Patchett. "It's not bankrolling it, but it's certainly made it possible for me to do something that I hadn't thought of being able to do before."

PBS Will Feature Moyers Look-Back

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

NEW YORK — Beginning on PBS Monday night, Bill Moyers will spend 13 weeks looking back at some of his previous documentaries for CBS and PBS. But fans need not worry: He has not retired to a rocking chair to ponder things that once were. Moyers will return in the fall with two new series and a special for PBS.

The retrospective, "Moyers: A Second Look," consists of three of his "CBS Reports" and 10 of the various shows he has done for PBS, spanning 18 years of his work. He will update each with what's-happened-since-then commentary.

First up is "Marshall, Texas; Marshall, Texas," his 1984 look at the eastern Texas town in which he grew up and how time and circumstance had changed it. The last, airing July 31, is "The Vanishing Family: Crisis in Black America," one of the last CBS documentaries he did before ending his second tour with CBS News in November 1986 to begin his third in public television.

The series "sort of fills the gap between our most recent broadcasts and the new material coming in the fall," Moyers said.

Moyers, whose production offices are at public-TV station WNET here, said the idea for the spring-summer retrospective came from the station's president, William Baker.

Baker, he said, "noted that a lot of people have grown up in the last 10 years who were in high school and younger" when the programs first aired. And, buoyed by the success of two recent Moyers' series, "Joseph Campbell and the Power of Myth" and "World of Ideas," Baker thought it would be good to give the thirtysomething crowd a chance to see the works of yesteryear.

For many, Moyers reckons, "it'll be new to them, and (it will) give older viewers a chance to see the shows again. A good documentary is more than just a moment, anyway. It's a slice of time that, like a good photograph, you can look at later and see things in it you didn't see the first time."

Moyers' two upcoming series are the five-part "The Power of the Word," slated for September, and "The Public Mind," a four-part November entry.

The first series, he said, "is about contemporary American poets, the people who are really the carriers of language, the couriers of spirit today."

Moyers describes "The Public Mind" as a look at what Americans know about their problems and those of the nation, and how they deal with them.

High-Definition TV Grabs Spotlight At Broadcasters' Annual Convention

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — High-definition television was the undisputed star of this year's National Association of Broadcasters' convention, dominating conversations around hotel lobbies, at restaurants and in numerous technical and policy sessions.

A dozen companies laid out advanced television displays, covering 22,000 square feet, as they tried to convince TV station owners and engineers that crisper, wide-screen TV images and compact disc-quality sound will be worth the large investment in new equipment.

Some estimates have put the cost at $3 million to $18 million to convert a TV station to full HDTV capability.

At the same time, no one knows if TV viewers will pay the $3,000-$4,000 that HDTV sets are expected to cost when they first appear in this country, probably by 1995.

But no matter how HDTV develops, many members of Congress want to make sure it's an American show. Those congressional proponents see HDTV, which is expected to be a $50 billion business in 20 years, as a means of revitalizing a U.S. electronics industry that was decimated by competition from low-cost Asian imports in the 1970s.

"American industrial competitiveness in advanced electronics, especially consumer advanced electronics, is not what it should be, is not what it could be ... and high-definition television does offer a vehicle to combat" that loss of competitiveness, Rep. Don Ritter, R-Pa., told an NAB session.

Ritter has introduced a bill to pump at least $100 million a year in federal grants or loans into HDTV research, as well as revising antitrust and trade laws to spur a U.S. HDTV industry.

And he said the Japanese have no right to criticize this "Team America" approach.

"I don't think it's appropriate to be lectured to by the Japanese on how to deal with important technological advance when it comes to one's own national interests," he said to an appreciative audience of broadcasters.

Although it will be at least two years before the Federal Communications Commission decides on standards for over-the-air HDTV broadcasts, companies such as NBC, Zenith, Japan's NHK broadcasting network and others are beating the drums for their competing approaches to advanced television.

The FCC has said a U.S. HDTV system must not make the nation's existing 160 million TV sets obsolete. That means manufacturers must find ways to give viewers both the standard signal, called NTSC, and the new HDTV signal for those who have special TV sets to receive them.

HDTV signals typically pack seven times as much information as do NTSC signals.

No one has yet demonstrated a way to fit that much information into current TV channels without causing interference with neighboring channels.

HDTV probably will need more space, and it will be up to the FCC to decide whether to give HDTV a bigger chunk of the already crowded airwaves.

Some are proposing that stations broadcast two signals — the standard NTSC signal, and then a second high-definition signal on a channel that isn't being used currently.

Older sets would receive the NTSC signal, while new HDTV sets could receive both the old and new signals.

Others want stations to send a standard NTSC signal that when combined with another signal on an adjacent channel would create HDTV.

Others, such as NBC, are taking a more cautious approach. Its Advanced Compatible Television system provides an "enhanced" TV image that NBC is promoting as a low-cost interim step towards true HDTV.

The ACTV system, which is being developed by NBC, RCA and the David Sarnoff Research Center, was demonstrated at the NAB meeting.

NBC also demonstrated computer simulations of the proposed second generation of ACTV, which would provide double the clarity of existing TV displays and very high-quality sound — considered true HDTV.

Zenith officials at NAB claimed they had found a way to fit their Spectrum Compatible HDTV signal into the amount of space — six megahertz — that TV stations need for each channel, without causing interference with adjacent channels.

Zenith doesn't have such a system yet, but it proposes to transmit its signal on the so-called taboo channels that aren't being used on the TV dial.

Pravda Says Stalin Knew About German Invasion But Ignored It

MOSCOW (AP) — Pravda told Soviet readers today that dictator Josef Stalin had detailed information about Nazi Germany's plans to invade the country but ignored the warnings and failed to prepare for war.

The full-page article in the Communist Party newspaper, the most detailed look yet at what Soviet spies knew about Adolf Hitler's plans, came on the eve of the 44th anniversary of the Soviet victory in World War II.

The report also contrasted with a jovial mood in Moscow, which was festooned with red banners for Tuesday's holiday. On Red Square a large banner stated simply, "1941-1945," the years of the war in which 20 million Soviets were killed.

Western historians have written extensively about how Stalin ignored intelligence reports about Hitler's plans, but little has come out in the Soviet Union. Stalin traditionally had been portrayed as a brilliant wartime leader.

But under President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's policy of glasnost, or greater openness, many Soviet writers and historians have recently condemned Stalin's political repression of millions of his people and re-examined his wartime role.

Last summer, Pravda published a chapter of a new book about Stalin that denounced him for signing a friendship treaty with Nazi Germany, purging the Red Army when the nation was on the brink of war, and ignoring warnings that war was imminent.

Today's article further rewrote an embarrasing page in Soviet history.

Pravda said the article's author, history professor A. Baidakov, gleaned the accounts from classified state security archives.

He said the state security agencies managed to infiltrate the Gestapo secret police, Germany's aviation ministry and its coding service.

According to Baidakov, security officials promptly forwarded information to Soviet political leaders about Hitler's invasion plans as early as November 1940. German forces invaded June 21, 1941.

But, the historian said:

"The leadership of the U.S.S.R. people's commissariats (ministries) of state security and defense did not, in my view, do everything to convince Stalin and the country's other leaders of the inevitability of an imminent confrontation with the Germans."

Then, he added, "But the main blame for miscalculating the time of the start of the war, for the country not being turned into an armed camp in time, for not being brought into a state of full military preparedness, lies with the U.S.S.R. political leadership of that period."

Baidakov revealed a series of intelligence reports forwarded to Stalin and his foreign minister, Vyacheslav M. Molotov. In April 1941, for example, the two were told that Hitler had revealed to a Yugoslav prince that an invasion of the Soviet Union was planned for June.

On June 16, this urgent message was delivered to Stalin and Molotov: "All military operations of Germany on preparation of a military aggression against the U.S.S.R. have been completely stopped, and a blow can be expected at any time."

The next day, Baidakov wrote, Stalin asked intelligence officials whether the sources who wrote the message were reliable. Before the information could be rechecked, the Germans invaded.

Chinese Government Refuses To Talk With College Group

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — Government officials refused today to begin talks with an independent group of university students formed after weeks of unprecedented pro-democracy demonstrations, the students said.

A group of journalists working for state-controlled media but inspired by the protests for freedom planned to seek their own talks with propaganda and publishing officials to push for an easing of press restrictions.

Pro-democracy activists say a dialogue with China's communist leadership is a major goal of their movement, which seeks greater freedom and clean government.

The students had organized several mass demonstrations involving tens of thousands of people and a citywide class boycott by university students to press their demands, but such activity has largely ended.

Communist Party chief Zhao Ziyang responded today by saying students were acting with more reason.

"The situation has been prevented from becoming acute because the party and government have all along adopted a very tolerant and restrained attitude and because most students have acted with increasing reason," the official Xinhua News Agency quoted him as saying.

Zhao repeated comments he made Thursday that Chinese authorities are tackling the problems raised by students, but the Xinhua report did not mention Zhao repeating his earlier call for dialogue with students.

Officials have refused to meet with the independent student union that organized the three weeks of protests.

A second organization, the Student Dialogue Representative Group, was formed last week with members from more than two dozen Beijing universities to renew the appeal for talks. They dropped several earlier demands, including that the government representative be at least a vice premier. Four group members met for nearly an hour with officials at the government Receiving Department today. Shen Tong, one of the student leaders, said after the meeting that "we still have to further talk things over."

Another student leader, Xiang Xiaoji, said the officials "did not rule out" conducting a dialogue with the group, but he refused to clarify the government's position.

Government officials are not hesitating to talk with students of their own choosing, however. The Communist Party paper People's Daily said Agriculture Minister He Kang and five vice ministers of the Ministry of Machine Buiding and Electronics met with two small groups of university students Sunday.

Topics included inadequate financing of education and official corruption, the report said.

Differences Will Carry Over As Top Chinese, Soviet Leaders Assemble

By Kathy Wilhelm
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — China and the Soviet Union were brothers in communism, but the first summit since they fell out nearly 30 years ago will not be a family reunion.

The Chinese, determined to show independence from their one-time tutor in revolution, have forced the Soviets to make the overtures and concessions toward normal relations.

When Mikhail S. Gorbachev comes to Beijing on May 15, it will be Deng Xiaoping, the 84-year-old Chinese leader, who plays big brother, because of both age and his pioneering of economic reforms the Soviets are just beginning.

During the past year, Gorbachev pulled Soviet troops out of Afghanistan, announced unilateral troop withdrawals from the Chinese border and put pressure on the Soviet ally Vietnam to withdraw from Cambodia after more than a decade of occupation. Vietnam has said it will do so by Sept. 30.

Those actions met China's three conditions for a summit with the Soviet leader and moved closer to Gorbachev's own goal of reducing international tension so he can focus on domestic economic problems.

China agreed to the summit almost grudgingly.

When Eduard A. Shevardnadze, the Soviet foreign minister, announced the date during a visit to Beijing in February, the Chinese initially denied it and then issued a confirmation two days later.

Ties between the two nations in trade, foreign policy and cultural exchange have become close in the past decade, but Chinese leaders say they have no intention of resuming the alliance.

The main immediate value of the summit for China, which is wary of an expansionist Vietnam, has been the concessions on Cambodia.

Diplomatic sources said the Chinese were trying to extract new pledges even in the final weeks before Gorbachev's arrival.

Vietnam's withdrawal plan does not include a U.N. peacekeeping force or establishment of an interim government to oversee elections. China is said to want both endorsed in the summit communique.

Moscow seeks a general statement of principles guiding the relationship, like the Shanghai Communique signed by President Richard M. Nixon on his 1972 visit to China.

"It's not obligatory" to mention Cambodia in the communique, said V.V. Duhin, cultural counsellor at the Soviet Embassy. "This document is designed for many years, and Cambodia is a problem of this year and next year."

Igor Rogachev, Soviet deputy foreign minister, slipped into Beijing quietly in late April, hoping to resolve the matter. A Western diplomat described it as a "game of chicken."

Animosity and disagreement between the two countries have a long history. From the 17th century to the early 20th, China and Russia contended for influence in the vast Asian interior.

Soviet agents helped organize the Chinese Communist Party in 1921 and gave it assistance, but also tried to dictate strategy in a way that irked the revolutionaries, especially Mao Tse-tung.

Josef Stalin thought little of Mao's plan for revolution in the countryside. The Soviet dictator continued recognizing the Nationalist Chinese government even as Mao's peasant guerrilla army was sweeping to victory.

Friction continued after the Stalin-Mao alliance of 1950. The Soviets insisted on special rights to ports and railways in northeastern China in return for military and technological aid, embarrassing Chinese leaders who claimed to have ended foreign control.

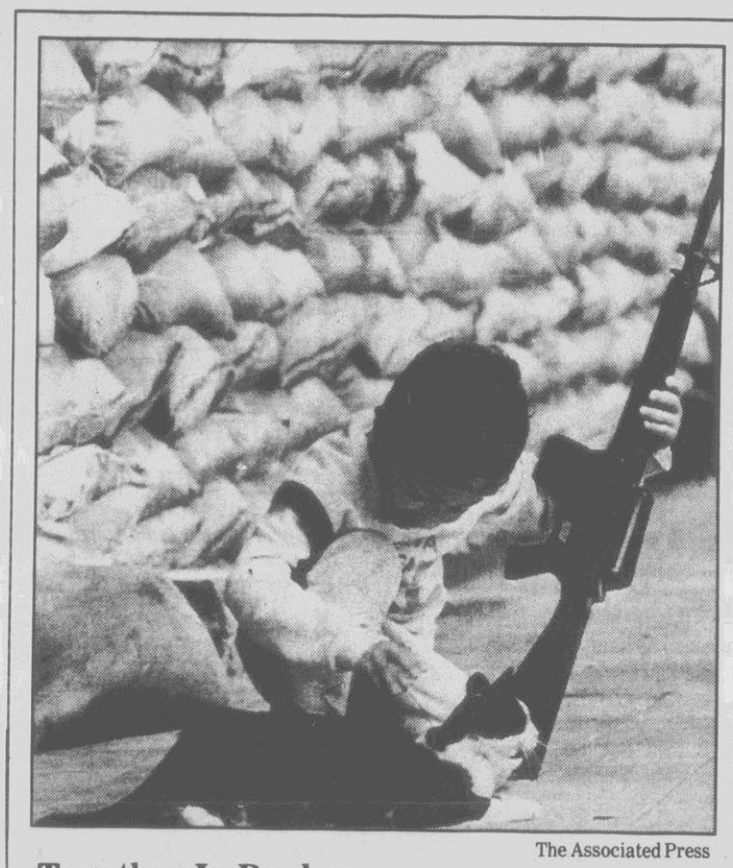

The split came in the early 1960s, after the Soviets refused to back China in its 1959 border conflict with India, would not help recapture Taiwan from the Nationalists and scrubbed an agreement to help the Chinese build a nuclear bomb.

A border dispute led to a brief but bloody clash in 1969.

Pragmatism took precedence over ideology under Deng, and China resumed trade and other non-political exchanges with the Soviet Union.

Both Gorbachev and Deng like to be seen as international peacemakers, and both have serious economic and political problems at home.

Restless nationalist groups in the Soviet Union have been demanding autonomy or independence. University students in Beijing have demonstrated for democracy on an unprecedented scale.

ADVERTISEMENT OF TAX LIENS ON REAL PROPERTY

Under and by virtue of the authority vested in me by Section 105-369 of the North Carolina General Statutes and pursuant to an order of the Board of Commissioners of the Town of Bethel, dated May 2, 1989, I am advertising tax liens for the year 1988 upon the real estate described below. The amount advertised will be increased by interest and costs, and the omission of interest and costs from the amount advertised will not constitute a waiver of the taxing unit's claim for these items. The name of the person to whom the property is listed for taxes, and the principal amount of the taxes are set out below. If the taxes remain unpaid, the lien will be foreclosed by the taxing unit and the property sold to satisfy the taxing unit's claim for taxes.

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

BONN — West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher added his voice Sunday to those proclaiming that the Cold War, which has dominated superpower politics for more than four decades, was over.

Genscher made his statement while opening the 35th meeting of the West German-American Friendship Week in Stuttgart at a time when the Bonn government is at odds with its U.S. and British allies over nuclear weapons policy.

"The Cold War is at an end," declared Genscher, who is also deputy federal chancellor. "The Iron Curtain is getting brittle. It's crumbling."

This is the historic moment in which we're making policy."

Genscher, a leader of the Free Democratic party, a ruling coalition partner, has been in the forefront of Western leaders who have applauded Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's offers to reduce armaments in Europe.

However, Genscher has pushed the West German government into going a long step further than London and Washington by calling for "early" talks with Moscow to reduce short-range nuclear forces based in Europe.

The West German position has caused a serious rift within the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, which is worried that the controversy may disrupt the scheduled meeting of NATO chiefs of state in Brussels May 29-30 in Brussels.

In Washington Sunday, Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney again stressed the Bush administration's insistence that reductions in Warsaw Pact conventional arms precede any talks about reducing short-range nuclear weapons in Europe.

Interviewed on the ABC program "This Week with David Brinkley," Cheney hinted at a withdrawal of American troops from Europe if they were to be left without a short-range nuclear shield.

But House Armed Forces Committee Chairman Les Aspin, D-Wis., and Paul Nitze, senior arms control negotiator for the Reagan administration, urged the administration to compromise to mend the alliance split. Nitze and Aspin appeared on another segment of the same program.

Cheney declared, "We do not foresee a set of circumstances in which you would have U.S. troops deployed in Western Europe, where you would not also have as a significant component of deterrence nuclear weapons — short-range nuclear forces."

However, he avoided directly advocating withdrawal of U.S. troops if short-range nuclear weapons were to be taken out of Western Europe. "That's a strictly hypothetical situation I wouldn't get into," he told a questioner.

Nitze warned that forcing West Germany to agree to modernization of the obsolescent Lance missiles that are now a part of NATO's arsenal and at the same time vetoing short-range nuclear talks with Moscow "is apt to pull Germany apart and NATO apart." He suggested that Washington agree to Chancellor Helmut Kohl's proposal that a decision on modernization be put off until talks take place with the Kremlin on short-range nuclear arms cuts.

Aspin conceded that congressional impatience at a refusal by West Germany to go along with modernizing the Lance missiles could result in pressure for pulling American troops out of Europe.

"If there is a sentiment to (eliminate) all nuclear weapons, I think the issue of 'no nukes, no troops' could start to get into the forefront," Aspin said. "It's not this year, but I could see it down the line, yes."

Genscher predicted in his speech that the NATO summit meeting would agree on a "joint political strategy toward the East and on a concept that provides more security for East and West, which therefore excludes no kind of weapons from disarmament."

The United States and Britain oppose negotiations on the short-range nuclear forces until serious progress has been made in the conventional arms reduction talks now under way in Vienna between NATO and the Warsaw Pact.

They are also opposed to eliminating all short-range nuclear arms in Europe because they believe a local nuclear deterrent is needed to counter Soviet conventional strength.

They also fear that West German public opinion would exert enormous pressure on any such talks for the banning of all ground-based nuclear missiles in Europe.

Black Farmers Struggle Against Odds To Survive

By Strat Douthat
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREENVILLE, Ala. — Spring has kissed central Alabama, and L.C. Crosby once again is busy planting corn, peas, butter beans and okra. He's also hoping for a bumper watermelon crop this summer.

"I've got a plan," he says as he leans against his old Ford tractor. "If it works out, I'm going to get my watermelons on the market two or three weeks earlier than anybody else and I'll clean up."

Crosby, a friendly man with a wiry build, becomes excited as he talks about his crops and the 43-acre "dream farm" where he and his family once worked as field hands. However, this could be the last spring for his dream, and for a lot of other dreams like his.

At 33, L.C. Crosby is a young, black farmer. And, as such he's twice as likely to lose his land as his white counterpart.

In 1910, the nation's 950,000 black farmers comprised 14 percent of all farmers in this country. Now, the remaining 35,000 make up just 1.6 percent of the 2.3 million farmers in the United States.

According to the U.S. Census Bureau, the number of black farms declined by 42 percent between 1978 and 1982. White farms fell by only 2.4 percent during the same period.

"Unless this trend is reversed, there will be no more black farmers in America by the year 2,000." This dire prediction is contained in the U.S. Civil Rights Commission's 1982 report on the "Decline of Black Farmers in America."

Yet, while there's just a relative handful of young, black farmers still operating — the current, median age for U.S. black farmers is 60 — the federal government is trying to force L.C. Crosby off his land.

"The FHA (Farmer's Home Administration) has given him notice to vacate the premises because he's behind on his loan. But we're telling him to stay put and fight," says George Paris, Jr., a field coordinator for the private, non-profit Federation of Southern Cooperatives.

Crosby bought his farm, which includes a large pond and five-acre pecan orchard, at an FHA auction in 1985. He bid $36,500, borrowing $31,000 from the government.

"My annual payment is $3,800," he said. "I fell behind the second year. Now, I've got the money to make the payment but the FHA wants the whole $30,000."

Paris said he's heard that a wealthy white landowner, whose bid was $10,000 lower than Crosby's, covets the property.

"It's the same old story," he said. "The FHA is slowly changing but basically, at the local level, quite often its still a bunch of good ol' white boys who look after each other."

Paris' father, who worked for the FHA for nearly 30 years and was one of the first black men ever to serve as an assistant county supervisor, agrees with this assessment.

"It was tragic. Blacks always got the last and the least," said the elder Paris, adding that he saw hundreds of black Alabamians lose their farms during the 30 years he workd for the FHA.

"I remember one time back, in the '60s, I was told, outright, by a white FHA committee member in Bullock County, Ala., that a black farmer had been denied a loan because he was 'shooting off his mouth about civil rights.'"

Under the FHA's loan procedure, a county supervisor makes a recommendation to a three-member county loan committee, which then either approves or denies the loan. Fred Bennett, a 73-year-old farmer in the Mt. Zion community, near Greenville, was the first black ever to serve on an FHA county committee.

In this country, the average black-owned farm contains fewer than 100 acres, compared with an average of 440 acres for all U.S. farms. Bennett and his wife Lena own 500 acres, which they slowly acquired over the past 40 years, parcel by parcel.

"My grandfather came to this area at age 12, shortly after he was freed from slavery," Bennett said. "He never owned land, being a cash renter, but I've found that, for a black man in this country, there is no greater security, nor better avenue to independence, than farming."

Bennett, who said he and his four brothers pooled their resources and "pulled together toward a common objective," acknowledged he is worried and saddened that this generation of young blacks isn't going into agriculture.

"After the Civil War, the federal government promised the freed blacks 40 acres and a mule but hardly any of them got it," he said. "Our people should realize by now that they've got to help themselves; nobody's going to do it for them.

"I'm very concerned that young blacks are turning their backs on farming, at a time when life in the cities is getting worse every day."

The United Farmers Organization, a non-profit advocacy group based in Charlotte, N.C., estimates there now are fewer than 200 full-time black farmers, aged 25 or under, in the entire country.

Officials at North Carolina A&T State University, who say they are getting 25 percent fewer agriculture students than they did 20 years ago, blame farming's poor image and the enormous difficulty young blacks face in amassing capital.

The continuing phenomenon of black land loss was the topic at a recent meeting sponsored by the university and the United Church of Christ.

"Greed and institutional racism" are the major reasons blacks have been forced out of farming said the Rev. Charles Shelby Rooks, director of the church's Board of Homeland Ministries, in his keynote address at the conference in Greensboro, N.C.

In its report, the U.S. Civil Rights Commission found that blacks were being ill-served by the FHA, the U.S. Department of Agriculture's agency designed specifically to help poor farmers.

The commission, noting that black farmers — 90 percent of whom are in the South — often are unable to deal with the ever more complex federal loan programs. The commission called for serious government intervention.

Last July, as part of an omnibus farm bill passed by Congress in 1987, the FHA launched its "Socially Disadvantaged Outreach Farm Ownership Program."

"So far," said FHA spokesman Nolan Kegley, "we have made 58 loans to minority farmers under the program." He said the loans, totalling $4.6 million, are to finance farm purchases for poor blacks and other minorities.

"We recognize the problems of the past and we're working on them at all levels," Kegley said. "Since 1984 the percentage of FHA loans to blacks has been steadily increasing."

He acknowledged, when asked, however, that only 91 of the FHA's 1,849 county supervisors are black. In Mississippi, the state with the most black farmers, eight of the 82 county supervisors are black. In North Carolina, it's only three of 79.

PITT COUNTY DRAINAGE DISTRICT NO. 2
ADVERTISEMENT FOR BID
TO: Contractors owning mowing equipment
Pitt County Drainage District No. 11 is now seeking price quotations for maintenance mowing of certain channel and travel ways within the Grindle Creek watershed.
The channel to be mowed is Grindle Creek Main Canal from Tar River to NC 11 (16.3 miles).
Equipment needed includes bush hog and side boy or boom-type mower with a reach adequate to mow channel side slopes and travel ways.
Work will include:
1. Mowing of travel ways and channel side slopes on one side to edge of water.
2. Removal of debris from inlet side of all pipes installed under travel way.
3. Removal by hand or other means of woody growth on channel side slopes not reached by power equipment for removal of all trees and limbs from channel and any tree which appears to be in imminent danger of falling into channel. Such debris may be removed behind a travel weigher or spoil pile on either side of canal.
Mowing may commence anytime during the month of May and needs to be completed not later than October 1, 1989.
Price quotations are to be submitted for cost per mile (including pipe and channel clean out).
Successful contractor must furnish the District with either:
1. A comprehensive liability insurance policy issued by an insurance company authorized to do business in North Carolina; or
2. Evidence of qualification of "self insurer" which complies with the regulations of the North Carolina insurance department in an amount of not less than $100,000.00.
A 10% performance bond will be required.
Those wishing to see the project will assemble at Davenport's Store in Pactolus on US 264 between Greenville and Washington at 9:00 a.m., Tuesday, May 9, 1989.
Sealed bids for performing work described herein will be received until 2:30 p.m. on May 16, 1989 at:
Browning, Sams, Poole, Hill & Hilburn
P.O. Box 859 (200 E. Fourth St.)
Greenville, NC 27835-0859
The Drainage District reserves the right to reject any and all proposals.
Signed: Curtis Martin,
Chairman

AMENDMENT TO NOTICE OF RESALE OF REAL PROPERTY
Paul Funeral Home, Inc.
Plaintiff.
VERSUS Ashley Alonza Williams, III and the Estate of Ashley Alonza Williams, Jr.,
Defendant.
As directed by order of Writ of Attachment dated the 28th day of April, 1988, and Judgement and Order to sell dated July 5, 1988, in the above entitled action, after due and legal notice, the undersigned Sheriff of Pitt County will on the 22nd day of May, 1989 at 11:00 AM at the door of the Pitt County Courthouse in Greenville, North Carolina offer for sale at public auction all right, title, and interest that Ashley Alonza Williams, Jr. had and all right, title, and interest that Ashley Alonza Williams, III has or at any time at or after the levy of the Order of Attachment in and to the following described property lying in Pactolus Township, Pitt County, North Carolina, more particularly described as follows:
BEING all of Lot No. One (1) of that property entitled "Property of Vernon Weatherington" as shown on a map dated July 7, 1976, made by Dickerson-Adams & Associates, a copy of which is attached to that deed of record in Book X-45, Page 592, of the Pitt County Registry, with reference to said map and deed for a more complete and detailed description.
This property is being sold subject to any and all prior liens, encumbrances, and unpaid taxes pending against the property. This is a resale of the above described property, a previous sale having been held and an upset bid having been duly filed within the time allowed by law. Bidding will begin at $4,690.78. The last and highest bidder at the sale will be required to pay cash for said property.
This the twenty-fourth day of April, 1989.

Pitt Teachers Join NCAE Trek To Legislature

By Cherie Evans
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Teachers from Pitt County are in Raleigh today lobbying state legislators for a salary increase this year.

Sponsored by the Pitt County chapter of the North Carolina Association of Educators, the day "is just another effort on the part of the teachers in Pitt County to remind our legislators that 6 percent will not get North Carolina to that national average," said Jackie Wooten, president of District 15 of the NCAE and a teacher at Bethel Elementary School.

The salary schedule proposed by the state NCAE would put North Carolina teachers at the national average in three years, Ms. Wooten said.

The state average salary for teachers is about $25,000 compared to the $29,000 average nationally, Ms. Wooten said.

"We dropped to 36 in the nation this year," she said. The state had been ranked about 29th.

"We're not keeping up," Ms. Wooten said.

Teachers participating the event during the day have to take a personal leave day from school, said Barry Gaskins, public information officer with the Pitt County schools.

When teachers take a personal leave day, either $35, $45 or $52 is subtracted from their salary to pay for a substitute. The amount needed for the substitute is dependent upon the substitute's qualifications.

About 400 people have been approved as substitutes for the Pitt schools.

There are no daily records kept at the county level on the number of teachers taking a personal day, Gaskins said. "It would be impossible to determine how many teachers have gone without checking each individual school," he said. "But, I would approximate that about 200 teachers are going."

Random calling to area schools this morning shows that a significant number of Pitt teachers are participating in the lobby day.

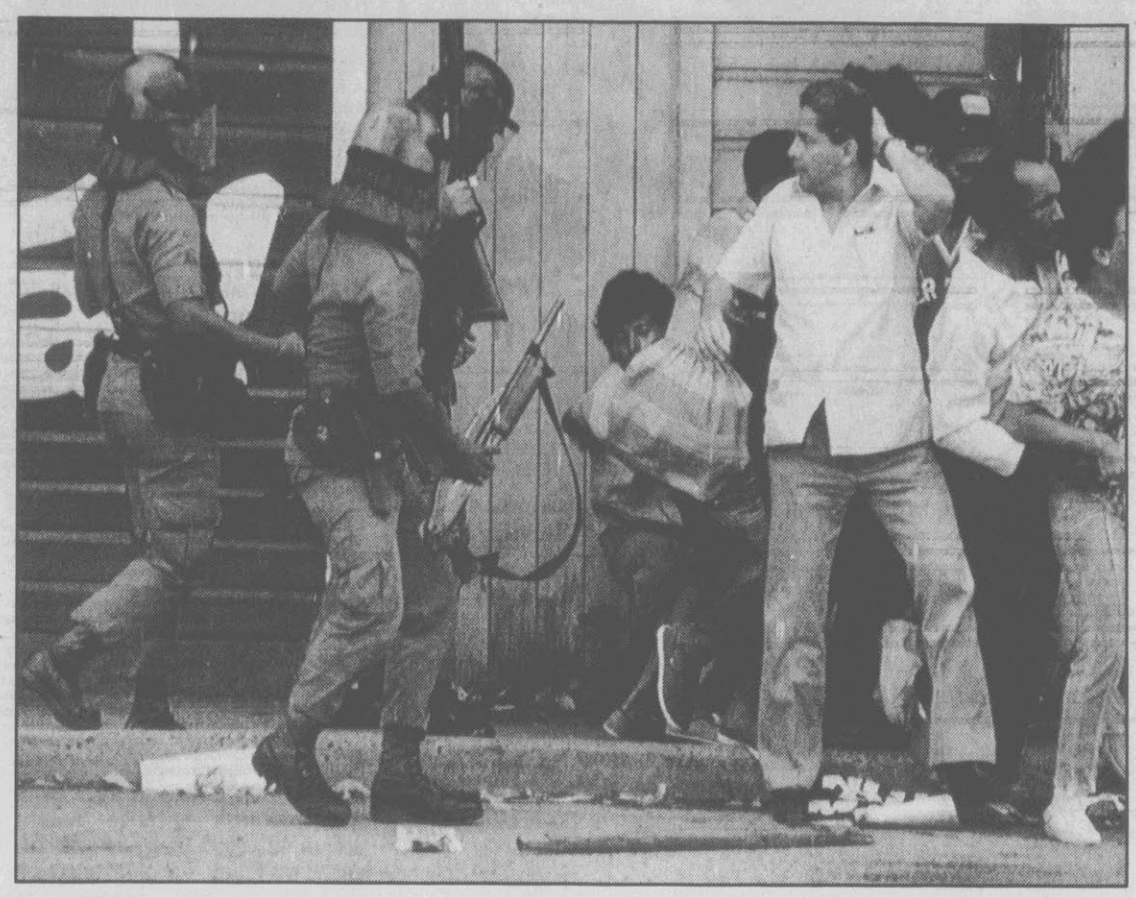

Ayden-Grifton High School has 17 teachers participating during the day, said Sue Butler, a secretary at the school. "We also have four that are leaving after lunch, she said.

"We have a professional staff of about 77," Pat Austin, principal at J.H. Rose High School, said. "They sent four from this faculty during the day. Others will be joining that group and will be leaving Greenville at the conclusion of the workday today," he said.

D.H. Conley High School has two teachers out on personal leave, but as teachers are not required to list a reason for their absence, Julia Groet, a school secretary, said she was not sure why they were out.

Linda Bryant, a secretary at Farmville Central High School, said nine teachers were participating in the lobby event, while Pat Brown at Pac-

White House Considers Military Force In Panama

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush is looking at Panama with a "sense of urgency" and ruling out no options on his response to what U.S. officials dubbed an election rigged by Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, said observers today who represented Bush at the Sunday election.

"He didn't leave anything out of the discussion. Every conceivable range of options was discussed," said Rep. John Murtha, D-Pa., who headed a delegation of official observers named by Bush. The observer team met with the president this morning at the White House to offer recommendations and report widespread fraud in the ballotting.

The advice of the observers included the possibility of military action in the Latin American nation, where the United States has military bases and a hefty troop presence.

"There's a lot more support for that option today than there was say six months or a year ago," said Sen. Connie Mack, R-Fla., another

Six U.S. Sailors Perish In Fire

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Six sailors were killed and five were injured today when fire broke out aboard a U.S. Navy supply ship in the South China Sea, a Navy spokeswoman said.

"It appeared to be a fuel leak," the spokeswoman said, declining to be further identified. The ship was identified as the USS White Plains, which normally carries a crew of about 403 enlisted men and 25 officers.

The White Plains is a food stores ship and is part of the battle group assigned to the aircraft carrier Constellation. That group is sailing home after duty in the northern Arabian Sea supporting the naval task force in the Persian Gulf.

According to a Navy source who asked not to be named, the White Plains and other ships of the battle group left Hong Kong on Monday after a port call. The ship was only about 100 miles off the coast when the fire broke out, the source said.

The spokeswoman said the fire broke out at 2 a.m. EDT in the main engine spaces "while conducting operations" in the South China Sea. She said the five injured, who suffered burns and smoke inhalation, were evacuated by helicopter to the USS Sacramento.

In the Philippines, U.S. U.S. Air Force Capt. Donna Eggleston said the injured then were flown to a hospital at Clark Air Base 50 miles northwest of Manila. "My latest information is that all five are in stable condition," she said in a telephone interview.

"The fire is out and the ship is under tow by the ... Sioux," the Navy said in a written statement. The Constellation, the cruiser Fox and the frigate Ouellet all assisted in the firefighting effort, it said.

"An investigation will be conducted to determine the cause of the fire. Identifications of those killed is being withheld pending notification of next-of-kin," the statement added.

A Navy official who asked not to be identified said preliminary information suggested the fire involved "a fuel leak in the boiler manifold intake on the No. 3 boiler."

The source said it was unclear at this point whether the failure involved human error or an equipment failure but added the resulting fuel fire was so hot that sailors were limited to just five-minute stints in fighting the blaze.

The source said it took the crew about an hour to knock down the fire.

The White Plains is based at the Pacific island of Guam. According to the Navy, the vessel is 581 feet long, 79 feet wide and displaces 16,000 tons when fully loaded.

The ship is said to be capable of steaming at 20 knots and is powered by three boilers which drive steam turbines. The power plant, which turns a single propeller, is said to be capable of developing 22,000 shaft horsepower.

Atlantis Returns Home In Good Shape

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SPACE CENTER, Houston — A robot probe was flying right on target to Venus and Atlantis' astronauts landed here after a successful four-day space shuttle mission that put U.S. planetary exploration back on track.

At Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., initial inspections of the shuttle showed little damage to the thermal tiles, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said.

"The vehicle looks as clean as any one that I've ever seen," said Navy Rear Adm. Richard Truly, NASA's acting associate administrator for space flight.

Commander David Walker, pilot Ronald Grabe, and mission specialists Mary Cleave, Mark Lee and Norman Thagard were greeted at Ellington Field late Monday by 200 relatives, friends, co-workers and even a few of the family dogs.

"It's really nice to have the mission finished and we couldn't have done it without you," said Ms. Cleave, who helped deploy the Magellan probe.

She said the astronauts had a great time and it was good to be back knowing that there's a spacecraft en route to Venus and "we were all a part of it."

After returning to work today, the crew planned to view photographs taken during their 1.68-million-mile journey, Johnson Space Center officials said.

On Wednesday, the astronauts will begin briefing officials.

The 97-ton Atlantis glided to a smooth landing as scheduled at 3:43 p.m. EDT Monday afternoon.

Twelve minutes before touchdown, the crew was ordered to land on a concrete runway rather than a hard-packed clay runway because crosswinds on the runway were too high.

"Obviously this mission was an outstanding success," NASA science chief Lennard Fisk told reporters at Edwards Air Force Base.

"Magellan is on its way to Venus. The deployment was very successful. The trajectory is about as accurate as you can get. The spacecraft is working without any difficulties whatsoever."

Truly praised the performances of the crew, the shuttle and the Magellan.

"With all these things coming together, it's really hard not to have a big grin on your face and be proud of what we're doing," Truly said.

About 27,500 spectators, the smallest crowd ever to attend a shuttle landing, withstood the 90-degree heat to watch. The smallest previous crowd was 35,000, in 1985. An estimated 460,000 were here for Discovery's landing March 18.

The $550-million Magellan mission is the first U.S. planetary probe launched in 11 years and the first ever from a shuttle. In October, another Atlantis crew is to start the Galileo on its way to Jupiter.

Gunman Wounds 3 Members Of Family

By Carol Tyer
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Three members of the family of Santa Rosa County, Fla., Sheriff's Maj. Garland "Boats" Weathersbee were hospitalized with gunshot wounds Sunday while Weathersbee was in Greenville for his sister's funeral, authorities said.

Santa Rosa County Sheriff Mauriece Coffman said Weathersbee, a Milton, Fla., resident, was in the Pitt-Martin County area during the weekend visiting his extended family and to attend the funeral Monday of his sister, Annie Manning of Greenville, who died Friday, Coffman said.

Coffman said Weathersbee returned to Florida on Sunday immediately after he learned that his wife Peggy, his daughter Ramona Raines and his grandson Adam Raines had been shot shortly after midnight.

Mrs. Weathersbee and Mrs. Raines were in critical condition today in West Florida Hospital in Pensacola. Two-year-old Adam is in good condition in Sacred Heart Children's Hospital, also in Pensacola.

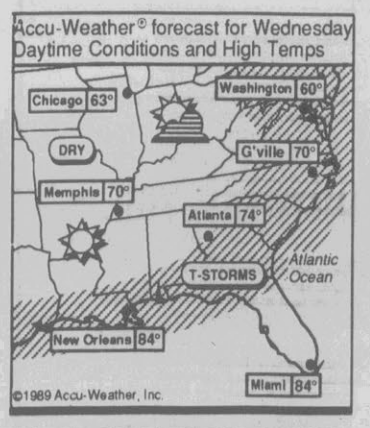

The shooting allegedly occurred at the home of Larry Raines, Mrs. Raines estranged husband, near Milton, a town 12 miles from Pensacola. Coffman said he understood the child had been staying with his father for the weekend and that the two women were called to the home by Raines, who said his son was ill.

Raines was arrested Sunday less than three miles from the house, Coffman said. He said Raines was being held without bond in the Escambia County Jail in Pensacola. He is charged with three counts of attempted murder and three counts of commission of a felony with a firearm, Coffman said.

The sheriff said Weathersbee, a Greenville-area native, has been with the Santa Rosa County Sheriff Department for the past 15 years having previously served 30 years in the U.S. Navy.

Judge Grants Convict Right To Expert Witness

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A Superior Court judge has ruled that a Bethel man on death row since 1984 should receive the aid of an expert witness in preparing his case against the Pitt County district attorney, who is accused of using racial discrimination in picking the jury that sentenced the man to death.

After meeting in private for more than an hour Monday with Harvey Lee Green Jr., 28, and his attorneys, Judge Thomas S. Watts of Elizabeth City agreed to appoint an expert to assist Green in preparing his case against Tom Haigwood.

Green, who pleaded guilty in 1984 to killing two people during a robbery in Bethel and was sentenced to death, claims Haigwood was racially motivated in selecting the jurors for the trial.

Despite objections from Special Deputy Attorney General Joan H. Byers, Watts agreed Monday to allow Green, who is black, to apply for an expert witness in an ex parte hearing, or closed hearing. Only Watts, Green, his two attorneys, a court reporter and two deputies were present during the hearing, and Watts agreed to a motion to seal the transcript until he or the defendant orders it be made public. Watts said the court officers were sworn to secrecy.

Green's attorneys — Malcolm Ray Hunter Jr. of the appellate defender's office and Robert S. Mahler, director of the Death Penalty Resource Center — also asked Watts to seal the order appointing the expert, thus preventing the state from knowing the identity of the witness. But Watts denied that motion, saying he would reveal the name and address of the witness.

After the private hearing, Watts said Dr. David West Peterson had been appointed, but he said he did not know Peterson's address, and he refused to comment any further. Watts said Peterson's address would be included in his formal order, which should be prepared within two days. Both Hunter and Mahler refused to reveal Peterson's address.

Prosecutors said a statistician named Dr. David West Peterson, 49, of Sevier St., Durham, who is an adjunct professor at Duke University's Fuqua School of Business and Duke's Statistics Institute, is the defense's expert witness.

In a telephone interview, Peterson said he heads PRI Associates of Durham, a private firm which handles statistical litigation support. Peterson said he has worked with Hunter and Mahler on other cases, and he has experience in working with juries. The Green case would be his first death penalty case, he said.

"What we usually try to do, and probably what will be done in this case, is examine various instances in which decisions were made with peremptory challenges, and examine what the alternatives were at the time those challenges were issued and see if we can discern a pattern of choice that is correlated with the race of the defendant, or perhaps the race of the victim," Peterson said.

Peterson said this morning, however, that defense attorneys had not yet notified him that he has been appointed.

In a 1987 motion, Watts said defense attorneys indicated they planned to investigate allegations of racially motivated activities and hiring practices on the part of Haigwood. They also planned to interview area attorneys who have experience in defending felony cases prosecuted by Haigwood, Watts said.

Watts scheduled the next hearing for Green on July 24, at which time Green will be allowed to present evidence that the jury that sentenced him to death was intentionally stacked with whites. There was one black on the 12-person jury and one black alternate.

Ms. Byers said an assistant district attorney and an administrative assistant, who is black, helped Haigwood pick the Green jury. There is no evidence — with the Green case or in any other instance — that Haigwood has

Museum Docent, Volunteer Honored

Members of the Guild of Docents and Volunteers of the Greenville Museum of Art on Monday honored Barbara W. Hall as volunteer of the year and Pat Norris as the outstanding docent of the year.

The basic purpose of the guild is to introduce and interpret the museum's changing exhibits and the exhibitions of permanent collections to the public.

Services provided by the guild range from manning the reception desk to guiding tours in the museum. An important activity entailed in the guild's work is that of taking the educational collection of art works to all the 34 fifth-grade classes in the county, an activity designed to help school children have a better understanding of art.

Two Rose Students Are Listed On All-USA Academic Squads

USA Today announced that Jonathan Li, a senior at J.H. Rose High School, has been named to the second team of the paper's 1989 All-USA Academic squads.

The paper said that Anjali Kataria, also a senior at Rose, received an honorable mention for the honor.

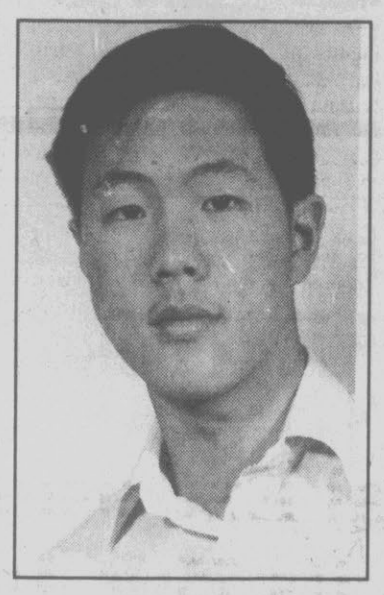

The USA Today academic teams were selected from among 873 students nominated by their schools. They honor the creativity, initiative, leadership and academic talent of the nation's high school students.

A panel of nine judges for the honor represented all levels of education from university dean to classroom teacher.

Li, the son of Dr. and Mrs. Chia-Yu Li of Greenville, was recognized by the judges for his research into the effect of chlorofluorocarbons in depleting the earth's ozone layer. He also was recognized for having a 4.0 grade point average and a score of 1,190 on the Scholastic Aptitude Test.

At Rose, Li was a marshal, vice president of the Math Club, president and vice president of the Science Club, parliamentarian of the Forensic Team and a member of the Student Government Association.

He is vice president of the National Honor Society, was a nominee for the Morehead Scholarship, was named among the top 300 students in Westinghouse Science Talent Search, attended Governor's School and Boys State, won first place in the N.C. Student Academy of Science competition, won first place in N.C. Science Fair and the N.C. Junior Science and Humanities Symposium.

JONATHAN LI

Li was invited to attend the Congressional Youth Leadership Conference and attended Presidential Classroom in Washington, D.C.

Miss Kataria is the daughter of Drs. Yash and Sudesh Kataria of Greenville. She was selected as a finalist for the Morehead Scholarship and has been awarded the Benjamin Duke Scholarship at Duke University.

She is president of the Debate, French and Science clubs at Rose. She also serves as a Student Government Association representative and is a participant in the Honors Medical Science Program.

A member of the national and local Nu Alpha Theta honor societies, Miss Kataria is a class marshal, a state finalist for the U.S. Youth Senate program and a news teen.

City Hall's Power System To Get A Patch

By Greg Laudick
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Electrical power outages at City Hall during the hot summer months will likely be eliminated as a result of action approved by the Greenville City Council.

But the short-term solution approved by the city's governing board at Monday's workshop session will not likely put an end to the electrical problems facing the 50-year-old structure, said City Manager Greg Knowles.

The council on Monday agreed to spend $300 to rearrange two electrical panels which will distribute the electrical load throughout City Hall more evenly. That action was taken after the council listened to the report of an electrical consultant called in to study and make recommendations of the building's electrical system.

The study was precipitated by two electrical power failures in the building which occurred last August.

Ron Pledger, representing the consulting firm of Dibble & Associates, presented to the council several technical, long-term solutions in reworking the troubled electrical system, ranging in cost up to $145,068.

But after discussing several of the long-term options and methods by which to pay for the capital improvements, the council voted to implement the consultant's recommended short-term remedy which will allow the council time for more discussion regarding overall solutions.

Knowles said many of the building's electric problems have arisen because there is only one electrical feed coming into the facility when three are needed.

He said the electrical problems surface most often during the summer months when the air conditioning demands on the building further strain the antiquated electrical system.

"As technology has increased, more items have become electric — items such as highly technical calculators, typewriters and computers," Knowles said. "All these items demand more power from the system," he said.

Knowles said that relocating departments within the building has helped improve electrical load factors. However, he said the council will likely need to consider one of the long-term solutions as proposed by the electrical consultant.

Knowles said it would take from six to eight months to implement one of the proposed long-range solutions.

Physician Defends His Action In Death Of Woman

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

An Ayden physician charged with a $1 million wrongful death suit presented a second day of evidence today in Pitt County Civil Superior Court.

Henry T. Evans, 53, of Ayden, husband and administrator of the estate of the late Betty Evans, is suing Dr. James M. Galloway of Ayden for $1 million, claiming Galloway failed to properly diagnose and treat Mrs. Evans for Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever.

After visiting Galloway three times in August 1985, Mrs. Evans checked into Pitt County Memorial Hospital on Sept. 1, 1985, and died at 8:15 a.m. the next day, court records said. An autopsy revealed she died of Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever.

The Galloway trial is in its second week at the Pitt County Courthouse, and attorneys for Evans have presented expert testimony in an attempt to show that Galloway failed to provide health care in accordance with the standards of practice expected of an experienced physician in the Pitt County area.

Evans' attorneys, Joe McLeod and William L. Senter, both of Fayetteville, presented the jury with expert testimony from three internists whose subspecialties are in infectious diseases. One doctor is on the faculty at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and another at the University of Iowa. The third, Dr. Bosko Postic, is chief of medical services at Dorn Veterans Hospital in Columbia, S.C.

The suit, filed Aug. 6, 1987, alleges that Mrs. Evans became sick Aug. 16, 1985, and visited Galloway. He allegedly placed her on a diuretic and pain medication, court records said.

Her condition worsened, and she visited Galloway again Aug. 23, 1985, the suit alleged. Attorneys for Evans claim his wife was suffering from a rash on her legs, feet and ankles at the time of the second visit, but Galloway's attorney has denied she had a rash. At that visit, he allegedly conducted tests.

On her third and final visit to Galloway on Aug. 29, 1985, Evans' attorneys claim Galloway did not see Mrs. Evans, but he arranged for her to see a rheumatologist six days later.

Galloway's attorney, E.C. Bryson Jr. of Durham, admitted that his client saw Mrs. Evans three times in August 1985, but court records show he denied allegations that she called Galloway's office numerous times with complaints that her condition was worsening.

In his response to the suit, Bryson also admitted Mrs. Evans experienced pain and swelling in her feet and legs, but he denied the allegations she suffered from the rash when she visited Galloway. The rash could have been a symptom of Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever, court officials said.

Bryson also denied any negligence on the part of Galloway and denied allegations that Mrs. Evans told Galloway she was suffering from a fever, nausea, a cough and labored breathing.

In the suit, Evans claims Galloway should have taken his wife's complaints and condition more seriously and should have at least considered a diagnosis of Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever. The suit charges Galloway, a staff physician at Pitt Family Physicians in Ayden, with several instances of negligence in handling the case.

Evans' attorneys are asking the jury to award expenses for Mrs. Evans' medical treatment, her funeral and compensation for pain and suffering. The suit requests compensation for the present monetary value of Mrs. Evans to her husband and children, including her net income, services, care and assistance.

A second physician, Dr. Wilton C. Gay Jr. of Ayden, was also named in the original suit. The complaint alleged Gay treated Mrs. Evans at the hospital and was negligent in his diagnosis and care, but the case against Gay was dismissed prior to the trial.

Agricultural Extension Service Celebrates Its 75th Anniversary

By Constance Ward
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

On May 8, 1914, Dr. Seamon Knapps, former president of Iowa Agricultural College, was given funds by the U.S. government to come up with a plan to help Texas farmers fight a boll weevil outbreak.

The efforts of Knapps, himself a farmer, went so well in Texas that his ideas spread and his work led to the passage of the Smith-Lever Act of 1914 to develop state agricultural or cooperative extension services nationwide.

The government decided to fund these services, in cooperation with state and local agencies, and the resulting organization became the Agricultural Extension Service.

To celebrate the 75th anniversary of the organization, the Pitt County Extension office held a reception Monday for past workers of the AES and people who work with the service today.

Among the former Pitt County employees attending were Leroy James, Sam Weeks, Francis Cobb and Ethel Winchester. Also attending was Joan Warren, wife of state Sen. Ed Warren and members of the Extension Service's advisory council.

Pitt County's present extension director, Mitch Smith, said the philosophy of the system is to "help people help themselves" by making the Extension Service the "university of the people."

Smith said, "Today, extension stands on the threshold of a new beginning; while we can look behind us and feel proud over the accomplishments that we have been a part of, it's important to look ahead to the issues that are presently imparting the quality of life of in Pitt County."

James, a former Pitt extension chairman, said the county has had an extension office since 1932. The service is now located in the County Office Building on West Fifth Street.

James, who worked for the extension service for 31 years from 1978 to 1988, said when he joined the office, the work of the agency was "across the board — general." There were no special areas of help for people.

According to James, the service also had "a dual system for blacks and whites" and James was in charge of the black division. He said that in 1964 the two divisions merged and became one department.

Other areas of progress involved the development of specializing in tobacco, corn, soybeans, small grains and swine. James said, "There are specialized agents that work in special farms like hog farms or peanut farms."

James said four main areas the extension service now work with are agriculture, home economics, 4-H and the Community Resource Development.

"The extension has been in existence for 75 years and it'll be existing another 75."

We Make Loans For Smiles, Hugs And Cheers.

At NCNB, we realize when you borrow money, you're making as much an emotional investment as a financial one.

So when we loan you money for braces, we see it as helping to create a priceless smile. We understand that the long-term reward of a college education can't be measured in dollars and cents. And that the investment you make in a marriage will continue long after the wedding bills have been paid.

You see, it's all in the way you choose to look at things.

And at NCNB, we'll really make an extra effort to see things your way.

We'll work to come up with a monthly payment schedule that suits your terms, not ours. And to give you an interest rate that is competitively low.

So whatever your borrowing needs may be, just stop by the NCNB office nearest you and talk them over with one of our loan specialists. Because at NCNB, we'd really like to loan you the money for things you can't put a price on.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

U.S. Education

Study Prompts Frustration And Concern

United States Secretary of Education Lauro Cavazos was pessimistic on the public schools' situation in comments on school performance last week.

He said U.S. education is stagnating. The comment was based on a comparison of school performance nationwide.

We fell in most areas. There was a decline in the high school graduation rate; college entrance exam scores fell in half the states. Cavazos said the nation has to do better and suggested targets for improvements.

Cavazos said he plans to communicate with all education leaders and tell them we have to issue a challenge. Goals should include 90 percent graduation rates and cutting by half the number of students who fail a grade.

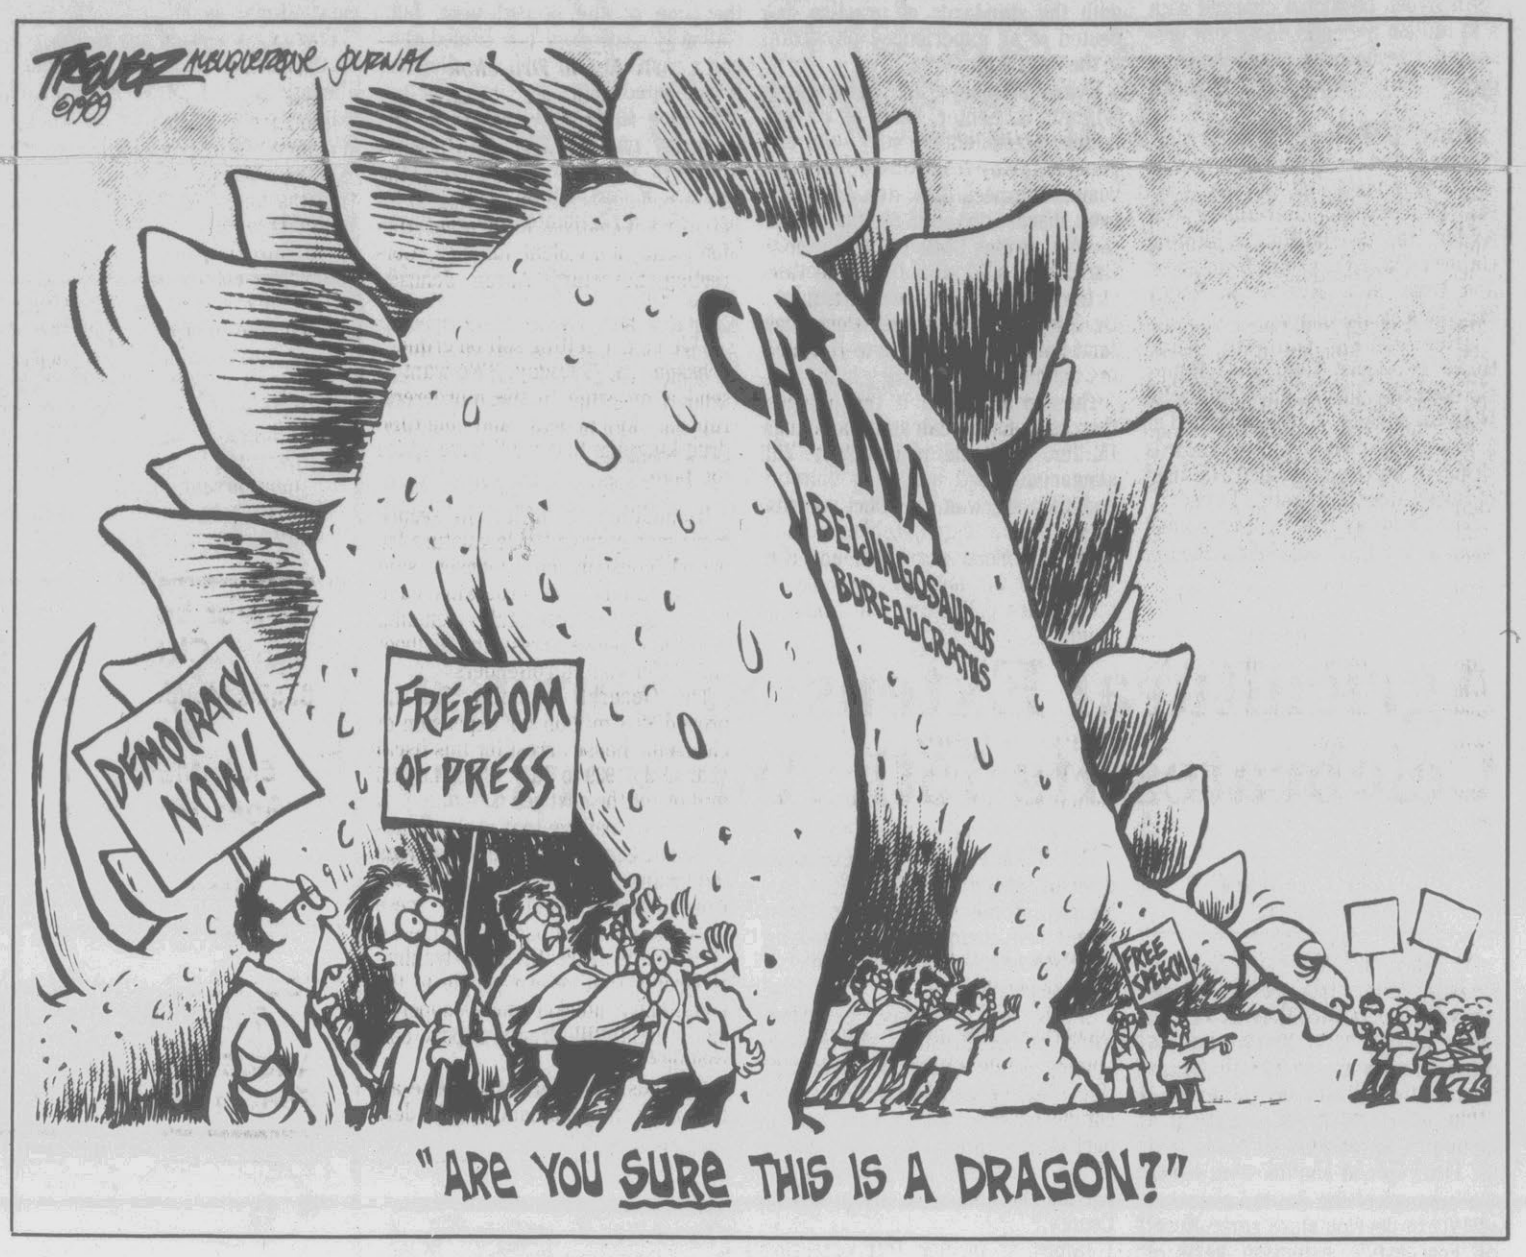

Education involves us all and it also foreshadows the future of this nation. The leaders of tomorrow are in today's classroom, and if they are not getting the best possible education then we are selling our nation's future short.

Despite all the concerns the nation's public school systems are not failures. There are dedicated teachers and administrators out there. Most important there are dedicated students and the upcoming graduations will tell us of the high achievements of many.

Too large a group is not being challenged, however. They are drifting through school, not receiving the training they will need for future careers and often simply dropping out. It is a frustrating dilemma which concerns school boards, administrators, parents and all who understand the value of education. Quick fixes seem to elude us.

Education has long been seen as a way out of poverty, a ticket out of the ghetto. It is, but young people have to be convinced of this.

Public education is not failing society but it is not delivering all that it could. The frustration is evident in the comments of Secretary of Education Cavazos. It is a frustration we should all feel and it should drive us to create the finest system of education in the world.

Trying To Keep Up With The Family

Ellen Goodman

BOSTON — A parent was arrested in Los Angeles last week. It happens every day, but not quite like this. Gloria Williams, you see, was arrested for being a parent.

More precisely, the 37-year-old mother of three became the very first person accused under a new California law that holds parents responsible when their kids go bad. She is charged with "failing to exercise reasonable care, supervision, protection and control" of a child.

The child in question is 17 years old and an alleged member of street gang called the Crips. This son is accused of being among those who raped a 12-year-old girl.

Mind you, if the police are right, Mrs. Williams is no candidate for the Mother's Day Hall of Fame. When they entered her apartment to talk about her son, they found walls covered with gang graffiti instead of rock posters. The photo albums showed members of the family pointing guns. The birthday cake for the 8-year-old was decorated with the gang name.

To this day the mother, who works for an electronics firm not far from home, insists that her son is no gang member. Perhaps she is blind or blindly loyal or chooses to believe that the Crips are a local Boy Scout troop and the guns are merit badges on the way to becoming an Eagle Scout. Perhaps she does condone her son's gang membership, as the city attorney charges.

But the crime she is accused of is a lack of parental control. Let me put it this way: It's 10 o'clock at night. Do you know where your 17-year-old son is? Sure about that?

The California law was created and passed in the current desperate mood about street gangs and youth, about violence and drugs. In the sociological search for a cause of all these woes, Americans buy one generic label these days. We blame it all on "the breakdown of the family."

If the cause is the breakdown of family, then surely the cure is the repair of the family. Our search for a fix has taken us to many different family mechanics. The favorites these days are the ones who believe that the breakdown is caused by a loss of parental authority. Their special low-cost repair would put parents back in the driver's seat. Those who won't take the wheel must be forced into it.

This is the fix-it behind the law that threatens California parents of kids involved in criminal activities with a year in jail and a $2,500 fine. It's the thinking as well behind a Wisconsin law that makes parents financially responsible for the offspring of their teen-age children. And it is, in part as well, the support for laws that require parental consent for abortion.

We are now seeing various attempts to put parents in charge, to shore up authority, to foster at least the image and maybe the reality of a traditional family unit. They are, mostly, efforts to control the behaviors that worry society the most: teen-age violence and teen-age sex, the yin and yang, the male and female of dangers.

I find this a notable pattern. After all, parents have always been held responsible for the care of their children. They've been held liable for child neglect, for child abuse, for child support. We have always drawn connections between behavior and background. Where did they, we, go wrong?

But this current society that knows little about how to restore relationships, that has done ess to help parents trying to raise their children in safety and health, has now turned to punishing the failures.

More and more responsibility is passed to parents, even as we worry about their willingness to exercise it. We allow violence on the screen and tell parents to control the dial. We allow drugs on the streets and tell parents to monitor usage. We offer few alternatives to street life and expect parents to keep their kids indoors. We remove communal supports and tell parents to make up the difference.

I don't know about Mrs. Williams' culpability, although if they arrested the mother for her "failure to exercise supervision," why not the absent father? But for every Fagan figure of a parent, there is another who hasn't given up but, rather, has lost control of a teen-ager. For everyone who is truly irresponsible, there is another who is overwhelmed, a third who is afraid for her child, a fourth who is afraid OF her child. Is that parent now a criminal?

They say that California is the leading edge, the social trend-setter. Now the Golden State has turned the Bible on its head. They've decided that the sins of the sons shall be visited upon their parents.

Farm Problems

We All Have A Stake In Farmers' Woes

It is a rare growing season that area farmers don't face some kind of weather crisis — and this year the crisis came even before the crops could be planted.

The problem is that, due to heavy rains, the farmers haven't been able to get into the fields to prepare them for planting.

After a dry year in 1988 — one in which the tobacco crop was barely saved by timely rains — the precipitation has been heavy this year. Unpredictable weather fronts created thunderstorms which flooded fields. Particularly recently did the rainfall cause problems.

Now the planting situation is critical, according to the farm agent's office. Tobacco transplanting should be completed by now; instead it is far behind. Corn and peanut planting should be well under way. The work requires machinery and labor which will be in short supply with so little time to work.

Pitt County's economy has undergone a great transformation in recent decades with industry, medicine, education and business providing thousands of jobs and pumping millions into the economy.

It should not be forgotten, however, that farming is basic to our economy. If farmers don't have a profitable year, area businesses feel it. In addition, a general slump in crop production translates eventually into higher food prices for everyone.

Thus we all have a stake in the farmers' weather problems ... and we can hope that, as with most years, the extra effort farmers will exert over the coming days will still result in a satisfactory harvest.

The Wonder Is That Anyone Learns

William Raspberry

WASHINGTON — What's wrong with America's public schools? Commissions of various sorts have been asking and answering that question for the past several years, and virtually every school district in the country is in the midst of some "educational reform" or another.

We've had teacher pay raises, curriculum reform, competency tests for both students and teachers--all in an attempt to fix what is wrong with the schools.

And what do we get? More disastrous news. More of our children are dropping out of school, according to the State Education Performance Chart released this week by the Department of Education, and those who stay through high-school graduation are scoring lower on college entrance exams.

What is wrong?

Maybe it's the question itself. Some schools and school districts — and not just the affluent ones — have managed to keep the overwhelming majority of their students in school while raising their performance levels above national norms.

Maybe it's time to stop studying the unsuccessful schools to discover what has gone wrong, and take a hard look at the unexpectedly successful ones to see what is going right.

And what would we find? My guess: that outlays and reform have very little to do with it; that the good schools are marked by principals who believe (and are able to infect their faculties with the belief) that their children can learn if they work at it).

One problem with America's schools, I suspect, is that too many of our children aren't working very hard. The children won't say that. Perhaps they don't even know it. But the amount of work required by some of our schools is so small that the wonder is that anybody is learning very much.

I suspect, too, that our efforts to cure poor performance and our attempts to reduce dropout rates are at cross purposes. We want higher test scores, but we also want to avoid discouraging children by giving them the low grades they sometimes earn. We are torn between introducing new course work and trying to make things easier, or more fun, lest the academically weak drop out.

Well, where is it written that school work should be fun and games?

Some who have (mis)read my recent columns urging that high-school math requirements be pegged at the math that "educated and successful professionals actually use" will be surprised to hear me say that we should insist that our children work harder in school.

They shouldn't be. I never argued that we should make classwork easy to keep children from dropping out of school. My argument was that it makes less sense to require that all children study simultaneous equations, polynomials and imaginary numbers (which few of them will ever use outside a classroom) than to insist that they all learn arithemetic and elementary algebra (which will serve them in whatever careers they eventually choose and perhaps keep more of them in school).

I'd go even further: Seeing to it that all of our children become proficient at arithmetic (including percentages, statistics, elementary logic, estimating, etc.) and first-order algebraic equations would (1) make it possible to attract more of them to higher levels of math and (2) provide those who don't go on to trigonometry and mathematical regressions with the basis for learning whatever math they later need.

I'd rather have all of our children learn the mathematics they will have to use than force the uninterested to suffer through poorly taught number theory; I'd rather have them learn to read, write, speak and appreciate good English than require poor readers to play at analyzing Elizabethan sonnets.

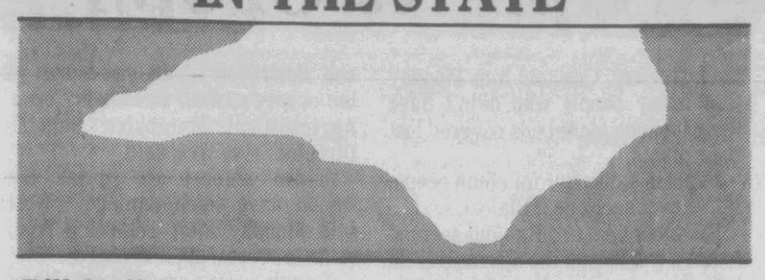

Requiring our children to work hard at their present curriculum will do more good than more "reforms" of the sort that gave us "new math," "whole-child" education and open-space classrooms.

The "reform" that will improve our children's school performance is not to make the subject matter harder than it now is but to make them work harder at what we're already trying to teach.

It would require more work by teachers, more supervision and involvement on the part of parents, and, for a time, perhaps more resentment from students. But I have no doubt that the results would be worth it.

IN THE STATE

Bill Stalls

RALEIGH (AP) — A bill to regulate drug testing in the workplace appeared to be faltering in its journey to win Senate passage by the Thursday deadline.

Several members of the Senate Manufacturing and Labor Committee objected Monday to considering such far-reaching legislation quickly, even though the bill has already been approved by another Senate panel. Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, went so far as to propose sending the measure to a subcommittee until May 15 — a move that would prevent consideration this year. But the committee adjourned to forestall a vote on his motion.

Sen. Frank Block, D-New Hanover, told the committee he had tried to address all of the concerns expressed by manufacturers who want free rein in drug testing.

Among provisions removed was one to require that employers offer employee assistance programs to workers who test positive for drug use.

Abortion Fund

RALEIGH (AP) — A joint conference committee has rejected a deep cut in the state abortion fund that was sought by the House, but the fund will still be cut by more than half under the Senate plan, which conferees approved.

The House delegation to the panel voted 8-6 Monday to trim the state-paid abortion fund for poor women from $924,500 to $424,000 and to retain the current eligibility criteria. A budget bill that cleared the House last month called for reducing the fund to $200,000 and tightening the eligibility standards

The vote came as the conference committee settled more differences between the House and Senate versions of a $7 billion spending measure for continuing state programs and operations in 1989-91.

Bill Softened

RALEIGH (AP) — Supporters of a bill designed to prevent discrimination against carriers of the AIDS virus say they will regroup and try to reverse close Senate votes that gutted its major provisions.

"I think we have a good 50-50 chance of turning it around," Sen. Helen Marvin, D-Gaston, said Monday night after the bill was pulled from the Senate floor.

"The way it is now, it would do more harm than good," Mrs. Marvin said after the Senate voted 28-19 to postpone a decision on the bill until Wednesday.

The Senate rjected 29-19 a motion by Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland, to kill the bill. But it approved an amendment offered by Sen. Dan Simpson, R-Burke, which deletes the section of the bill containing all the anti-discrimination provisions, including a prohibition against firing an employee because he tests positive for AIDS.

Truck Wreck

SALISBURY, N.C. (AP) — Three Rowan County sheriff's deputies were hospitalized after responding to a wreck on I-85 that killed a truck driver, injured several other people and dumped 85 barrels of potentially explosive waste onto the road and into a swamp.

The three deputies were the most seriously affected among as many as 10 workers who were treated for inhalation of chemical vapors from the wreck at 4:30 a.m. Monday between Salisbury and China Grove. The wreck and cleanup closed 5 miles of I-85's southbound lanes for almost 11 hours.

The N.C. Highway Patrol had not released the name of the truck driver Monday evening, pending notification of his family.

Shooting Death

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Asheville police arrested three men Monday on charges of killing taxi stand owner Amos Miller — a man neighbors said would provide rides free if patrons were too poor to pay.

Kenya Lee, 19, Curtis Porter, 20, and Larry Greenlee, 21, were charged with armed robbery and first-degree murder. All three live just blocks from the cab stand and knew Miller, Asheville police Capt. Will Annarino said.

Miller, 64, was shot once at close range with a 12-gauge shotgun about 2:30 a.m. Sunday . He managed to telephone for help but was nearly dead when police arrived, Annarino said.

Stevens Center

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A judge has declined to stop the Forsyth County tax collector's plans to sell the contents of the Stevens Center for the Performing Arts to reclaim $244,915 in back and current taxes.

Judge Lester P. Martin Jr. of Forsyth Superior Court denied a motion Monday from the state attorney general's office for a preliminary injunction, which would have extended a temporary restraining order issued earlier.

Prisons' Chief Says There Is Still Room To House State's Criminals

By David Droschak
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Faced with prisons that are bursting at the seams, the state penal system is starting to increase alternatives to incarceration for some non-violent inmates, Correction Secretary Aaron Johnson says.

"We've not getting soft on crime," Johnson said Tuesday. "We want to send a message to the murderers, rapists, kidnappers and big-time drug kingpins that we'll have space for them."

In addition to trying to secure more money from the legislature for prison construction, Johnson said several alternative programs have been highly successful, including electronic house arrest and a "boot camp" for youthful offenders.

The General Assembly has approved $2.3 million for expansion of electronic house arrest for this fiscal year, July 1989 to June 1990, and $1.5 million for the next year.

"I really believe that in the future in North Carolina as well as across the county ... you are going to see a trend toward what I call these 'quick-dip' programs — high-intensity, short-term treatment or training programs that return people to the community quicker under supervision," said Bill Crews, deputy correction secretary.

Officials said electronic house arrest for misdemeanor offenders costs about $5 a day, compared to $35 in prison.

Last year, the average stay in prison for a misdemeanor offender in North Carolina was three months and 17 days, compared to four months and 18 days in 1986, prison officials said.

To illustrate their point of overcrowding, correction officials showed members of the media Central Prison dormitories filled two to three times their intended capacity.

"There has been a lot of concern in the state about the direction of our correction system and whether or not there will be a federal takeover ...," Johnson said.

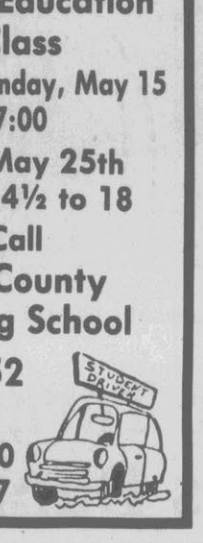

Several major inmate lawsuits were filed during the past four years concerning prison overcrowding in North Carolina, Johnson said.

The Emergency Prison Population Stabilization Act, also known as the prison cap, was amended in January 1989 by the General Assembly in an effort to give the N.C. Parole Commission more flexibility in its effort to ease the state's prison overcrowding. But the prison cap of 17,460 was reached six times through March 1.

"We have no choice but to accept people into the prison system," Crews said. "Every time somebody comes in the front door you have to let somebody out the back door. It is somewhat like a Holiday Inn ... except they can turn people away."

Led by Warden Gary Dixon, members of the media saw some of the worst crowding conditions in the state in a tour of Central Prison dorms "K" and "O."

Local Aid Pours In For Tornado Victims As U.S. Studies Damage

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It will probably be a couple of days before federal officials decide whether to assist North Carolina storm victims, but local assistance is already pouring in.

"It has been fantastic," said American Red Cross disaster services Chairwoman Mildred Blanton.

"We're meeting their immediate needs right now," Mrs. Blanton said.

Thousands of dollars in donations began pouring in Monday to the Red Cross make-shift headquarters in Cooksville. A Burke County church presented a check for $2,724 that was collected Sunday among its 88-member congregation.

Those whose vehicles were destroyed are being given rides to and from work. Nurses also provided medical care.

In one corner, an 8-inch-tall doll with red overalls and brown pony-tails peered out of a bag, waiting for her new mommy.

"A little girl donated her doll. She said she wanted to give that doll to somebody that lost theirs," said volunteer firefighter R.J. Whisnant.

Tina Leonhardt and her boyfriend, Bobby Tallent, picked up food from the center Monday and said the Red Cross had also provided them clothing.

Later, strangers walked up to Leonhardt with offers of help as she stood amid the wreckage of her home at Miller's Trailer Park on N.C. 10.

One man stopped and placed a $20 bill in her hand.

"Everybody's been asking if we need anything," said Leonhardt, still walking stiffly after she was discharged from a hospital Monday. She and her two children are staying at a relative's home in Hickory.

Meanwhile, as federal officials toured six North Carolina counties to investigate the damage, three Lincoln County residents were buried Monday.

More than 200 mourners packed Carpenters Grove Baptist Church to pay respects to Dock and Betty McNeely, killed when the storm destroyed their house in Toluca Friday night.

Jacob Bert Sain, who lived less than a quarter-mile from the McNeelys, was also killed when the storm demolished his house. More than 200 people attended his funeral at St. Peter's United Methodist Church.

"This is the worst tragedy I've ever seen in my life," said the Rev. Archie Chapman, pastor of Carpenters Grove Baptist Church.

The funeral for another victim, 6-year-old Alicia DePuy of Union County, was scheduled for today.

Five people were killed in the storms Friday night, and state officials they expected federal help soon for the millions of dollars in damages.

Cold Snap Nips At Crops

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A cold snap brought record low temperatures to North Carolina damaged some inland tobacco fields and also hurt apple and strawberry crops in the west, officials say.

"It's getting a little late in the year for this kind of nonsense," said Al Hinn, chief meteorologist with the National Weather Service in Wilmington.

A 41-degree reading Sunday just before midnight in that coastal city tied the 1891 record for May 7, and a low of 38 degrees Monday morning broke the record of 43 degrees set May 8, 1981, he said.

Asheville shivered at 28 degrees Sunday night, 10 degrees lower than its 1974 record for the date. That was also an all-time low for the month of May, breaking Asheville's old May record of 29.

Raleigh hit 36 degrees, breaking the 1981 record of 40. Wilmington checked in with 38 degrees, breaking its record of 43 in 1981. Greensboro reported 32, shattering a 1923 record of 38, and Charlotte nipped 6 degrees off its 1967 record of 41.

The lowest recorded temperature in the region Monday morning was 23 degrees at Grandfather Mountain.

Snow and sleet were reported in Buncombe, Yancey, Watauga, Avery and several other counties Sunday, with accumulations of 2 inches at Mount Mitchell and an inch at Grandfather Mountain, officials said. Only traces were reported at other locations.

Carlton Blalock, executive vice president of the Tobacco Growers Association of North Carolina, said the cold snap was a blow to some inland growers. One told him Monday that many people who didn't have their tobacco plant beds covered lost their plants.

Producers east of Raleigh seemed to have weathered the storms a little better.

Frost coated roofs, but not the ground, at the Border Belt Tobacco Research Station about seven miles north of Whiteville. The low was 36 Monday morning, but there was no damage to plants, said Ty Marshall, superintendent of the station.

In Bladen County, frost may have burned some young tobacco plants just set Friday and Saturday in fields in the northern portion of the county, said Curtis Barwick, a county extension agent. Some watermelon plants also were hurt by frost, he said. But it is too early to tell the extent of the damage.

In Haywood County, temperatures that dipped to 25 degrees did "fairly significant" damage to apple trees and destroyed about one-fourth of the county's small strawberry crop, Agricultural Extension Service Director Steve West said.

"I don't think it's a wipeout, but we do have some damage," West said Monday after returning from visits to several apple orchards.

Though apple growers won't know damage estimates until late this week, West said strawberry farmers on about 20 acres suffered losses from 25 percent to 30 percent.

In Henderson County, apple grower Ronald Lamb said his Rome and Golden Delicious varieties probably suffered the most damage from temperatures that stayed below 30 degrees from midnight to 6 a.m.

Japan Seeks Explanation Of Lost H-Bomb Incident

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — Japan has formally asked the United States to explain a 1965 accident in which a U.S. carrier lost a hydrogen bomb in the Pacific near a Japanese island while bound for a Japanese port, officials said today.

"This happened in international waters so we have no right to make a loud demand," said a senior Foreign Ministry official who declined to be named. "We are just asking the United States to give us an explanation."

Japanese opposition politicians and citizens' groups claim the U.S. government covered up the accident. Japan is the only country ever attacked with nuclear weapons, and popular sentiment is strongly against nuclear arms.

The bomb was aboard an A-4 Skyhawk jet that fell off the carrier Ticonderoga about 80 miles from a small island in Japan's Ryukyu chain and 200 miles east of the heavily populated island of Okinawa, a U.S. military spokesman in Japan said.

The carrier was on its way from Vietnam to the Japanese port of Yokosuka and the plane's pilot was killed in the accident.

After a report in the current issue of Newsweek magazine raised the issue, Japan asked Monday for a U.S. explanation.

"We are interested and concerned (about the details)," the Foreign Ministry official said.

Other officials said Japan's government does not know the location and condition of the B-43 bomb, and there had been no discussions with the United States about how to deal with it.

The magazine report, quoting nuclear expert William Arkin of the Washington-based Institute for Policy Studies, said the U.S. Navy kept the incident secret until a 1981 Pentagon report that listed accidents involving nuclear weapons.

But at the time of the 1981 report, the United States "did not bring it to our attention," said the Foreign Ministry official. The report said only that the accident occurred 500 miles from the Asian mainland.

Arkin said there was scant danger the bomb would detonate, although the 33 pounds of plutonium in the bomb could threaten the environment as it deteriorates.

The Ticonderoga was on a mission that included readiness to launch a nuclear strike, a declassified U.S. Navy document released by Arkin and the environmental group Greenpeace said.

The disclosure raised the possibility that the carrier entered Yokosuka with nuclear arms, despite Japan's ban on nuclear weapons.

"There is no doubt in my mind that U.S. ships still transit Japan with nuclear weapons aboard," Arkin said in Washington on Monday.

The Navy declined comment on Arkin's findings.

Opposition parties and citizens have charged that Navy ships routinely visit Japanese ports carrying nuclear bombs with the tacit agreement of the Japanese government.

Japan has said the United States is not permitted to bring in nuclear weapons without prior consultations, and there have been no such consultations.

The United States refuses to confirm or deny the presence of nuclear weapons in specific locations.

The lost one-megaton hydrogen bomb was about 70 times as powerful as the bomb that fell on the port city of Hiroshima in August 1945 in the closing days of World War II, Kyodo News Service reported.

Disclosure of the 1965 accident has stirred the ire of citizens on Okinawa, the site of one of the bloodiest battles in World War II, and the continued presence of some 35,000 U.S. troops has led to tensions and frequent protests over such problems as target range accidents.

Leaders of Okinawan citizens groups protesting nuclear arms denounced the way the incident has been handled, news reports said.

Researcher Says U.S. Still Has Nukes On Ships

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. naval vessels are transporting nuclear weapons across Japanese territorial waters even though Japan forbids "introduction" of such loads, a researcher says.

"There is no doubt in my mind that U.S. ships still transit Japan with nuclear weapons aboard," researcher William Arkin of the liberal Institute for Policy Studies said Monday in an interview.

Arkin made the comment after releasing evidence about a 1965 accident in which the Navy lost a bomb-bearing aircraft and its pilot 80 miles off Japan's Okinawa island chain.

Japan on Monday formally requested an explanation from Washington about the 1965 accident.

The research Arkin did with the environmentalist Greenpeace group concluded that the United States and Soviet Union have littered the ocean floor with at least 48 nuclear weapons and 11 nuclear reactors.

Two days after the airplane fell off the elevator of the USS Ticonderoga, the aircraft carrier docked at the Japanese port of Yokosuka, Arkin said.

Judge Orders VA To Reopen Agent Orange Health Claims

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — A judge ordered the U.S. government to reconsider the Agent Orange health claims of more than 31,000 veterans because existing rules "sharply tipped the scales" against those exposed to the toxic defoliant.

U.S. District Judge Thelton Henderson struck down the Department of Veterans Affairs' regulations that denied Agent Orange service-related benefits for cancers and all other diseases except one nonfatal skin condition.

In a ruling on a nationwide lawsuit brought on behalf of Agent Orange claimants, Henderson said the department was wrong to require direct proof that the dioxin-containing herbicide caused various diseases.

The department, formerly known as the Veterans Administration, should give claimants the benefit of the doubt, he said.

Veterans' advocates praised the decision, which was made public Monday.

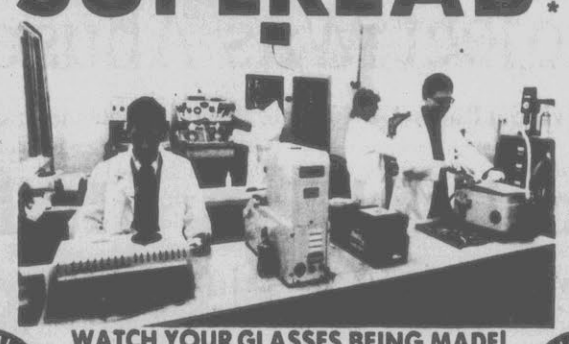

"This is a major victory with far-reaching implications," said Mary Sout, president of Vietnam Veterans of America.

"The ruling validates what Vietnam veterans have been saying for years, that the VA has failed to give Agent Orange victims a fair hearing. ... I am optimistic that Congress will now act quickly to resolve this most painful legacy of the Vietnam War."

Exxon Says It Has Spent $95 Million After Oil Spill

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

VALDEZ, Alaska — Exxon says it has spent more than $95 million to clean up the Alaska oil spill and could have contained much of the crude if authorities hadn't blocked the early use of chemical dispersants.

A top state official, however, accused Exxon of spreading a "fabrication," and said the oil giant had not sought to employ dispersants.

Also Monday, Gov. Steve Cowper signed a bill raising state taxes on the nation's two largest oil fields, both on Alaska's North Slope. He said the spill had helped make the hike possible.

Exxon executives disclosed their cleanup costs at the end of a stormy two-day congressional subcommittee hearing in Valdez. The $95 million figure doesn't include the cost of government operations or fishermen's losses.

The executives told the five-member subcommittee of the House Interior Committee that they could have contained perhaps half of the spill had they been allowed to use powerful chemical dispersants soon after the accident.

They said the Coast Guard and the state's Department of Environmental Conservation rejected their requests to use the chemicals widely.

"We came to Alaska to use dispersants," Exxon Shipping Co. President Frank Iarossi said. "I was pleading on my part to begin dispersal use ... we were very aggressive."

"We're confident that had we obtained prompt permission to use the dispersant, the environmental damage would have been mitigated," Exxon USA President Bill Stevens said.

Dennis Kelso, commissioner of the Alaska Department of Environmental Conservation, called Exxon's account a "fabrication." He said the state had pre-approved the use of dispersants in parts of Prince William Sound before the March 24 spill.

"Dispersants were not used extensively in the three days following the tanker accident because the winds and seas were too calm to provide the turbulence necessary to mix them with oil," Kelso said in a statement.

The day before, Kelso told the subcommittee that Exxon and Alyeska, which operates the trans-Alaska pipeline, spread "disinformation" by contending they sought to use dispersants. Kelso testified that Exxon did not request permission to use the chemicals.

Vice Adm. Clyde Robbins, the Coast Guard's No. 2 man in the spill zone, said Exxon and Alyeska did not urge the use of dispersants. Small-scale tests of the chemicals proved inconclusive.

"Neither of them had the equipment on site to deal with it, either through mechanical means or chemical means," he added.

He also said a contingency plan at Alyeska was inadequate to deal with a major spill, but Stevens said the state earlier had endorsed the plan.

Panel Says Housing Project Was Abused

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Members of a House subcommittee Monday criticized a controversial HUD low-income subsidy program for being ridden with abuse, favoritism and "influence peddling."

But they also expressed frustration that HUD Inspector General Paul A. Adams' investigation into the moderate rehabilitation program, while describing numerous instances of lax management and potential overspending, stopped short of citing criminal wrongdoing.

"We have a situation where everything stinks, but no regulations were broken; no laws were broken," said Rep. Christopher Shays, R-Conn. "But in fact, a lot of stuff happened that just wasn't right."

The moderate rehabilitation program, which awarded $225 million in contracts during the five years covered in the inspector general's audit, has been the target of longstanding complaints from local public housing officials.

The report describes the successful attempts of former high-ranking HUD officials and well-known Republican consultants to win contracts from aides to then HUD Secretary Samuel R. Pierce Jr.

"Consultants received mind-bogglingly exorbitant fees for fleeting services of dubious legality," said Rep. Tom Lantos, D-Calif., chairman of the House Government Operations Committee's employment and housing panel.

"Within this environment of influence peddling, it appears that for a period of several years, the system at HUD for judging and selecting the projects to receive subsidies had all the objectivity of a South Korean Olympic boxing judge," Lantos said.

Former Federal Housing Commissioner Thomas T. Demery, whose performance as the head of the program was sharply criticized by the report, insisted that none of the former HUD officials cited by Adams ever contacted him about access to the "mod rehab" program, as it is known.

Under questioning, however, Demery confirmed that an entry in his old HUD appointment book indicated he planned to meet with former HUD deputy general counsel Gerald Kisner "re: mod rehab." He also said that while he was at HUD, he met with former acting housing commissioner Silvio J. Debartolomeis and gave him a copy of redrafted regulations the day they were signed.

Kisner, according to HUD documents, worked on three "mod rehab" projects as a consultant and earned $282,500 in the five years covered by the audit. After he left HUD, Debartolomeis worked for Philip Winn, another former housing commissioner, in a Colorado development firm that lobbied for and won moderate rehabilitation contracts.

But Demery said that funding decisions on three-quarters of the projects cited in the HUD report were made before he arrived at the agency in 1986.

"It raises questions about why this report was written with such personal bias directed toward me," said Demery. He said that the resulting allegations of potential abuse were the result of "malice, negligence, a cover-up or a combination of the three."

Demery said that it was at his urging that many of the discretionary aspects of the program awards were tightened in 1988: "I questioned it myself," he said.

"The Inspector General should not obfuscate the issue by implying bad intentions on the part of responsible public officials," Demery said.

There's Been A Dramatic Increase In The Cost Of Living.

There's been an explosion of medical technology recently. And it's saving and prolonging lives. But the cost of living, of staying alive, is high. Because technology doesn't come cheap. Organ transplants, CAT scans, heart/lung machines, cardiac catheterizations, lithotripsy, neonatal care, all carry huge price tags. And they're driving up your company's cost of health coverage.

Our job, our responsibility, is to hold down those coverage costs as much as possible. We do that by offering a variety of group plans that allows you and your company to choose the type of coverage that meets your needs in the most cost effective manner. These coverages include traditional group, two HMO's, preferred provider and flex benefits.

And you don't have to make your choice alone. We have vast data banks containing health care profiles of millions of subscribers in thousands of occupations. By comparing those profiles with the makeup of your company and its people, we can help you find the plan or plans that work for you. We can even make refinements within those plans to meet particular health needs or cost considerations.

Medical technology is a wonderful thing, and we should all be grateful for what it does. But somebody has to pay for it. And we don't want you or your company paying any more than you have to. Ask your employer to get in touch with us. And let's see if, together, we can do something about the high cost of living.

Learning Disability Is Not A Sign Of Low Intelligence

By Raymond E. Webster

Statistics indicate that somewhere between 10 and 20 percent of school-age youngsters have some kind of learning disability which interferes with school achievement and progress.

During the past 10 years, researchers have clarified that most learning disabilities result from a child having difficulty processing, storing and retaining information in short-term memory and long-term memory. Children who are learning disabled are of average intellectual ability, with many often functioning in the above average to superior ranges of intelligence. In fact, some of these children are actually involved in academically gifted programs in school, despite having a learning disability. In no way should a learning disability be seen as indicating below normal intelligence.

Although a learning disability may be limited to a particular kind of academic area, such as mathematics or written language expression, it is most often found to affect the child's success in reading. Because reading is usually essential to success in all other school subjects, the reading-related learning disability can have a substantial impact on a child's overall social-emotional development as well as educational success.

The effects on school performance typically are seen in the child gradually and consistently falling behind peers. Initially, the lag is usually seen in acquiring basic reading skills and is often observable as early as the beginning of second grade.

As the child begins to meet with increasing problems in reading, achievement in other subjects requiring reading, such as mathematics and language arts, gradually becomes affected. Because many youngsters are not identified as having a learning disability until late in third grade, or even toward the end of fourth grade, the gap between the child's achievement level and that of his classmates shows a consistent and steady increase.

The child begins to have trouble keeping pace with classwork, may have difficulty understanding classroom lectures and written assignments, or works with greater intensity to keep up with classwork so that parents and/or teachers are not disappointed.

Homework assignments may not be understood so the child is confused about how to do the work. Eventually, homework is not turned in at all. Because the child is bright, adults often attribute the poor school achievement to lack of motivation. Parents and teachers may use words like "lazy" or "unmotivated" to explain the child's poor school performance.

As the workload gradually becomes heavier in the upper grades, usually starting at about the end of third grade, the child may begin to experience increasing psychological pressures. Some of this pressure comes from the negative feedback from adults coupled with grades that are frequently unacceptable to parents and even in the failing range.

Additional pressures are internally produced by the child who may feel and believe that he is defective in some way because of the learning problems.

Feelings of inadequacy, inferiority, lack of self-confidence and anxiety may arise. The child may see himself as different from classmates and unacceptable to them because of the inability to be successful in school. Feelings of alienation, loneliness, anger and psychological isolation may also emerge.

Many males begin to act out their personal frustrations by not complying with school or parental rules as a way to prevent themselves from being put into a school setting where they expect to meet with failure. It is more than mere coincidence that most behavior problems in boys start around the middle of third grade and that learning disabilities often become readily identifiable around this time. The impact of these emotional characteristics can be profound and have long-term implications for the child.

Fortunately, early identification and treatment for a learning disability can minimize many of these problems from occurring. Appropriate modification of teaching strategies and the educational curriculum along with sensitivity to the emotional feelings that may accompany a learning disability are critical.

Support, reassurance, respect and an educated approach involving appropriate remedial teaching procedures have been shown to be effective in reducing negative emotional side-effects and in improving educational achievement.

Concert A Replay Of Sheffield

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Dear Abby: "Help!" "God, I can't breathe!" "Get them to stop pushing!" "This is insane!" were the cries heard in Sheffield, England, on Saturday, April 15, when 93 people were killed and more than 200 injured by an unruly mob at a soccer game. These were also the cries heard by me at a rock concert at the Santa Monica Civic Auditorium that same day when hundreds of unruly fans rushed the stage. One story made headlines, but the other easily could have.

The auditorium was overflowing with what must have been a double-capacity crowd. Some fans were seated comfortably at the rear of the hall, but hundreds were pressed forward against the stage by throngs of enthusiastic fans in the back, hell-bent on getting closer to the performers. Speaking as an unfortunate member of that audience, I can tell you that it was an unnerving ordeal. Bodies were pressed so tightly together that breathing was difficult and it was stiflingly hot. Crazed kids (either stoned or high) began pushing others around them, thus sparking off a potentially lethal chain reaction — not unlike the one in Sheffield. Only when you have been caught in such a churning riptide of humanity can you understand it.

Appeals to security personnel at the auditorium to do something about the situation produced no results; neither did a call to the fire department. There should have been far fewer tickets sold, and far more security people present to control the crowd. It is true that no one died in Santa Monica that night. The floodgates may have held this time, but they may not always. And while the concert promoters in Santa Monica count their dollars, in Sheffield they count their dead. — Tyler Foshe, Sherman Oaks, Calif.

Dear Tyler: Thanks for your letter. It answered the questions that occurred to many: How could this bizarre tragedy have occurred? And what can we do to prevent it from happening again?

Dear Abby: I'm a different drummer, marching to the same beat as "Losing Patience," who resented questions from strangers wanting to know why her infant daughter was wearing eyeglasses. Strangers noticed my baby, too. But I felt blessed.

My son was born with club feet. We were living in Brazil, but were told that a doctor in New York was "the best" in this field, so I took my baby to New York. For nine months we rode the commuter train from Chappaqua to New York City twice a week for treatments.

I had heard how "cold" New Yorkers were, but no one had better say that around me. Abby, in the nine months I was there, not once did I have to open a door when I had my baby in my arms. Total strangers gave up their cabs for me during the rush hour; businessmen I had never seen before juggled their briefcases to carry my baby up a flight of stairs. Those small favors and words of encouragement to a stranger alone gave me beautiful memories of a trying time.

To all who patted his curly blond hair: He's 31 now, and a remarkable athlete. So, to all you warmhearted New Yorkers, thanks for caring! — Jane Waller, Conroe, Texas

Dear Jane: Thanks for sharing your positive experience in New York City. If you can make it there, you can make it anywhere. Congratulations.

Dear Abby: In response to "Losing Patience": When my son was 2½ years old, he had to wear a patch over one eye temporarily to strengthen the other eye. One day while pushing him in a cart through a grocery store, a man with a bushy moustache stopped us and asked, "What's wrong with that boy's eye?" I explained, and we went our separate ways.

When we were out of earshot of the man, my son asked, "Mama, what's wrong with that man's mouth?" (He had never seen a moustache before.) — Been There

There's No Shortage Of Adoptive Homes For Healthy, White Infants

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREENSBORO — Ruth McCracken has all kinds of problems to solve in her job as executive director of the Children's Home Society of North Carolina. A surplus of unwanted infants isn't one of them.

"For the normal healthy, white infant, we have a very, very wide choice of homes," Miss McCracken said. "We are having to turn away an awful lot of nice young people who want to be parents."

Nationally, anti-abortion proponents push adoption as the best alternative to abortion. They point to a burgeoning numbers of couples who can't have children of their own who would gladly adopt unwanted infants.

Pro-choice proponents say adoption cannot be the solution to the problem of unwanted infants because the numbers — were access to abortion to become more limited — would simply be too overwhelming.

North Carolina's largest adoption agency is the Children's Home Society, which has offices in eight cities.

If abortion were severely restricted in North Carolina and more infants born, Miss McCracken believes, the demand still would outweigh the supply of adoptive infants.

In 1987, more than 30,000 abortions were performed in the state. Of those, 59.6 percent of the women were white; 36.4 percent were black; 2.4 percent were American Indian and other races; and race of the remainder was unknown, according to the N.C. Center for Health Statistics.

"I know we would hear from a lot more couples than we do now," she said of those wanting to adopt a child. "It's pretty clear the number of children available for adoption is limited."

Last year, the Children's Home Society statewide received about 3,400 inquiries and 1,000 formal applications from prospective parents. The organization placed 185 babies.

On any given day, the agency has a list of between 125 and 140 approved couples waiting for healthy, white babies. The waiting list for black infants is shorter.

"The number of families applying for the white infant is quite higher than for the minority child," McCracken said. "We are actively recruiting black homes."

The baby shortage also makes it easier to place handicapped infants.

At Wits End

Erma Bombeck

Mention the word "vacation" and most people think of Kathie Lee Gifford bopping around a cruise ship throwing confetti over a group of people who could die from terminal happiness. Advertising would have you believe that confirmed reservations protect you from all evils. Wrong.

Let us take one moment to honor the poor souls who, minutes after arriving at their destination, become sick. These are the people no one ever talks about: the fun-seeker in Hawaii who paid $300 a day to throw up in a sink shaped like a shell ... the woman who packed three new bathing suits for her trip to Acapulco and pulled the draperies in her room because the sun on the white sand hurt her eyes ... the vacationer who lived only to eat eight meals a day on a cruise ship and was reduced to eating crackers and gelatin in his bunk.

There is nothing more miserable in the world than to arrive in paradise and look like your passport picture.

Joann, from Vienna, Va., got the flu on a western vacation recently and longed for her own bed, her own medicine chest and her own thermometer. In her words, "I wanted to go home and die, not in some strange place where maids kept interrupting me."

Her husband said, "We can't go home. The airline charges $75 per ticket to change a reservation, and you don't want to know what it takes to return a two-week rental car before its time."

"It's sad to know that $150 was standing in the way of dying in my own bed," she said. "I told my husband if he was this sick he'd have his room quarantined and they'd air-evac him home."

He replied, "Honey, that's because I get sicker than you."

My heart goes out to all those people on organized tours who are scheduled to see eight countries in 12 days and end up saying, "Where's your bathroom?" in eight languages.

Maybe it's the excitement or the water or the food or the change, but our vacations read like a medical report. What memories I have of Italy ... watching everyone go to the ruins while from my bed I viewed Mr. Ed on TV talking in Italian.

I made the trip to Machu Picchu, but my husband was back in Cuzco inhaling oxygen and trying to think of the Spanish phrase for "codicil for my will."

I don't have a solution to this problem. But what we're really talking about isn't so much the discomfort and the disappointment of not seeing anything, but the money. All those bucks to sit there and look at ugly wallpaper. The least they could do is reduce the hotel rates.

White House Studies Options In Panama

member of the observer team.

The observer team members also said much would depend on the Panamanian people and how they react to the official election results.

Murtha said the president listened intently but gave no indication as to what he might do.

"It seemed a sense of urgency in the room. I felt that the president feels that this is something he can't let sit ... There's a real sense of urgency that something has to be done," said Murtha.

Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla., said he was recommending a three-part course of action: "internationalize" the issue by getting Latin American allies to join in denunciations of Noriega; develop a bipartisan consense on U.S. action; and prepare the "stricter options" the United States might take.

"Time is of the essence. There's a very brief period in which world opinion will give us the environment in which we can take the kind of action necessary to remove Noriega," said Graham.

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., suggested beefing up the U.S. bases in Panama with more combatants, and not ruling out any military action. He said military dependents should be moved out of the area, and U.S. citizens there shoudl be warned there could be problems for them.

Earlier, administration officials talked about the possibility of economic and military action as viable options, as Bush huddled with top advisers Monday night to weigh the options.

"We are deeply concerned by evidence pouring in of electoral fraud on the part of the pro-Noriega forces," the State Department said Monday night, joining members of Congress in criticizing the elections.

Bush brushed aside reporters' questions today as he sat down with his observer team to get a firsthand report on what they saw during and after Sunday's ballotting.

Some 10,000 U.S. military personnel are based in Panama at military installations which remain under U.S. control despite the decade-old treaty that cedes control of the Panama Canal to that Central American country at the end of the century.

Also under consideration, in addition to beefing up the U.S. military presence, are further economic sanctions, the official said.

The State Department quoted Rep. John Murtha, D-Pa., head of the U.S. election observer delegation in Panama, that he saw Panamanian authorities resort to "fraud and manipulation" to ensure victory for the pro-Noriega presidential candidate, Carlos Duque.

The official statement, issued 24 hours after the polls closed in Panama, appeared to lay the groundwork for an official announcement that the United States was not prepared to recognize the outcome of the election if the process was perceived to be rigged in Duque's favor.

President Bush indicated last week he would pursue that policy rather than move toward a more normal relationship with the Panamanian regime.

U.S. officials expected that Panamanian authorities at some point will declare Duque the winner but some wondered whether Noriega will be able to survive what they regard as an obvious embarrassment for him.

In addition to the allegations of fraud, the election day scenes indicated strong backing for the opposition slate.

Murtha's charges were backed up by Sen. Connie Mack, R-Fla., who said he witnessed "overwhelming support for the opposition" during his weekend visit to Panama as an election observer.

He said members of the Noriega-led Defense Forces were allowed to vote multiple times because, unlike other Panamanians, they were not assigned to a specific voting station.

"People who were dead (were) all of a sudden reappearing on rolls, when they had been dropped off," said Rep. Larry Smith, D-Fla. "So dead people could vote, but live people couldn't."

Sen. Richard Lugar, ranking minority member of the Foreign Relations Committee, said the opposition appeared to be winning a huge majority even though many of Noriega's supporters voted more than once.

Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., said the United States should join with other hemispheric countries in applying diplomatic pressure on Panama if the election outcome is based on fraud.

Teachers Lobbying

tolus Elementary School said three teachers will be participating after school.

Janie Manning, principal at Bethel Elementary School, also said nine of her teachers are participating after school.

"I don't have any going during the school day. I do have a group leaving this afternoon," she said.

Seven teachers at North Pitt were out today, said Valeria Rawls, a school secretary. "We've got some that are going after school," she said.

Robin Dailey, vice principal at E.B. Aycock Junior High School, said "the teachers at Aycock are in support of the increased pay for teachers," but she would not say how many Aycock teachers were taking a personal leave day today.

Two teachers at South Greenville and some of the assistants are attending the event, said Helen Peterson, a clerical assistant. One teacher from Falkland Elementary School is participating, said Patricia Dail, the school secretary.

Lobby day activities include attending committee meetings in the Legislative Building, discussing concerns with area legislators and walking to the Governor's Mansion.

Closed Hearing Held

discriminated against blacks, she said. At a hearing in 1987, Haigwood also explained his reasons for dismissing black jurors, and Watts ruled that no racial discrimination occurred.

"I'm absolutely confident the reasons (Haigwood) gave were valid, non-racial reasons," Ms. Byers said in an interview after the hearing. "I'm still confident, no matter what this expert comes up with, the truth will win out. Tom Haigwood did not (pick) this jury on the basis of race."

In a death case, both the prosecution and defense may excuse up to 14 jurors with peremptory challenges. Traditionally, they do not have to state any reason for the dismissals. However. in 1986 the U.S. Supreme Court ruled in Batson vs. Kentucky that prosecutors may not use race as a basis for peremptory challenges.

The state Supreme Court said that the Batson ruling applied to all cases currently on appeal; therefore, the state requested a Batson hearing in 1987 to allow Haigwood to explain his peremptory challenges for the record. This was needed to allow the Supreme Court to rule on the case, Ms. Byers said.

At the 1987 hearing, Haigwood explained his reasons for exercising the peremptory challenges, and Watts ruled that the challenges were racially neutral and denied Green's motion for a new trial.

In an opinion handed down March 2, however, the Supreme Court sent the case back for a second Batson hearing.

The Supreme Court did not affirm or reverse the jury's death sentence, and it did not address most of Green's claims of error. The Supreme Court also did not question Watts' ruling on Haigwood's explanation for the peremptory challenges, but it ordered a new Batson hearing because it said Watts erred by not allowing Green to introduce evidence to demonstrate discrimination occurred.

In barring Green from presenting evidence, Ms. Byers said Watts ruled in line with case law that existed at the time.

Watts said he is concerned for Green, the families of the victims and the taxpayers that the appeals process has taken nearly five years, and he asked attorneys for both sides to avoid "playing lawyer games and get on with the business at hand."

Zoning Approved

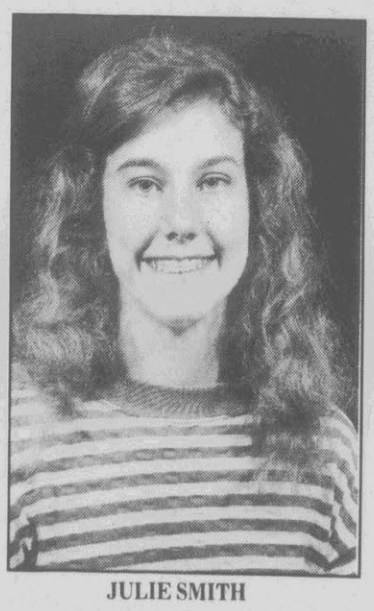

The Ayden Town Board has approved a rezoning plan for a tract of land on East Third Street adjacent to College Street and Edge Road.

Developer Don Speight requested the zoning change at the board's regular monthly meeting Monday night to construct approximately 10 duplexes and 32 apartments, some one-bedroom units and some two-bedroom units. The living development should serve about 90 people.

Several residents expressed concern about the type of people that would be renting the dwellings and how the construction would affect water runoff in the area, but the board unanimously approved the zoning change.

The board also reappointed Warren Kinlaw, Burt Tripp and J.R. Lowry to the town's Municipal Board of Elections.

The board approved a plan recommended by ElectriCities in which Asplundh Tree Expert Co. will provide tree trimming services for the town.

J.R. Reid

Reid's NBA Decision Expected Today

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — North Carolina forward J.R. Reid is expected to announce today whether he will leave school a year early for the NBA, a newspaper says.

When asked Monday night whether he would turn pro, Reid was noncommittal. But he told The Charlotte Observer, "Rick (Brewer, North Carolina sports information director) will be calling you guys tomorrow."

Several NBA coaches told The News and Observer of Raleigh that they expect Reid to bypass his senior year and make an early entrance into the pros.

"From everything I've been hearing, J.R. is going," one NBA head coach told the Raleigh newspaper. "I think there has just been too much inquiring going on in the last couple of weeks for him not to."

The same coach said Smith had contacted him about Reid's prospects, even though his NBA team will not have a selection until midway through the first round of the draft.

Another NBA official, whose team has a lottery pick — one of the first nine — was even more succinct about Reid.

"The kid's coming out this year," he said. "If he doesn't, I'll be very, very surprised."

NBA coaches and officials can be fined by the league for talking about college underclassmen or assessing their pro potential, and many requested anonymity when contacted by newspaper.

Smith, contacted at his office Monday, said he had conferred with 11 NBA teams about Reid. But he offered no further comment on Reid's future.

"There's nothing I can say about J.R.'s status," Smith said.

Some NBA officials said Reid should wait.

Red Auerbach, president of the Boston Celtics, said Reid would be a lottery pick — this year or next. He also said Reid would benefit from another year at North Carolina, noting that he had given the same advice to Pittsburgh center Charles Smith two years ago.

Smith stayed at Pitt, enjoyed a strong senior season, and was a high draft pick by the Los Angeles Clippers.

"I'm definitely against 95 percent of the kids who come out early," Auerbach said. "If a kid's unhappy or doesn't belong at a school, OK, come on out. But most should stay put.

"I'm sure J.R. has a lot of confidence in Dean Smith, and I'm sure Dean will tell him if he needs another year. Dean's not going to do what's best for Dean, but what's best for the kid."

Some NBA officials say Reid's pro stock has dipped in the last year.

A consensus All-America as a sophomore, Reid did not make the All-Atlantic Coast Conference team last season. After missing the Tar Heels' first nine games because of surgery to repair a foot fracture, he averaged 15.9 points and 6.3 rebounds, did not start every game

Mears Has Near-Perfect Lap

Veteran Turns In An Amazing Time Of 225.733 MPH

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — Rick Mears, the defending Indianapolis 500 winner, claims he has never had a perfect race setup for his car or a perfect lap on a race track.

But, would he recognize perfection if it ever crossed his path?

"If it's perfect, you aren't leaning on it hard enough. You never know what perfection feels like," said the three-time Indy winner, who shattered his own unofficial track record on Monday with a once-unthinkable lap of 225.733 mph.

Mears' teammate, Al Unser, was right behind at 224.831, and Michael Andretti and Emerson Fittipaldi also topped 224. The former unofficial record was 222.827, set by Mears in practice last year. Only speeds recorded during qualifications or the race are considered official.

"It was a good lap, but the car is still not right," Mears said of his new Chevy V8-powered Penske race car. "Hopefully, there's a little more. We're sneaking up on it."

In Mears' mind, however, perfection is never attainable on a race track.

"There's no such thing. You can call it perfection if you have everybody else covered," he said.

Mears did not practice on Saturday, the opening day of testing for the May 28 race. On Sunday, he had his car up to 218.023, but that was more than 3 mph slower than Fittipaldi. On Monday, moving in and out of the pits as his crew did its meticulous fine-tuning, Mears continued building speed through the afternoon.

By mid-afternoon he was up to 223.658, and later he raised that to 224.103 before Unser, driving an identical car, was clocked at 224.831. Mears then improved his own speed to 224.215, then to 224.663 before topping Unser with a lap at 225.507 with under a half-hour left in the day's practice. Minutes later, Mears raised his best effort to 225.733.

The new car, he said, was a refinement of last year's Penske model, one in which he won two races, pocketed a record $1.4 million for the Penske team and pushed his career earnings to almost $6 million. He won the season opener this year at Phoenix and was fifth at Long Beach last month.

"They've just refined what we had, made the car a little better all the way around," he said of the 1989 Penske. "It's nothing large, just an attention to detail."

Mears set the official track records of 220.453 mph for one lap and 219.198 for four laps during qualifications last year, starting from the pole for a record-tying fourth time and winning the race for a third time.

Danny Sullivan, the third Penske driver, raised his best lap Monday to 223.236.

"They're all working well," Mears said of the new Penskes. "They've

Lendl Sculptures A Clay Masterpiece

Ivan Lendl

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Only sculptors work better with clay than Ivan Lendl.

The world's top-ranked tennis player has won 51 of 54 matches on the surface in the last 3½ years. The latest victory was a 6-2, 6-1 rout of unseeded Jaime Yzaga in Monday's final of the Tournament of Champions.

"I prefer hardcourts," Lendl said. "I feel my game is cleaner on hardcourts because you get a lot of mishits and bad bounces on clay. On hardcourts, you either hit it well or you don't."

Lendl hit it well at the TOC, sweeping through five matches without losing a set. It took him only 70 minutes to beat Yzaga on a cold, windy day at the West Side Tennis Club.

"I was moving very well and I felt strong," Lendl said. "Whatever was happening on the court, I felt comfortable."

After winning his fourth tournament of the year, Lendl hurried to catch a flight to West Germany, where he will play a French Open warm-up in Hamburg.

"The most important part is to keep fit, improve a little, play some matches and enjoy myself," he said. "If I do that, I'll come into the French in a good frame of mind."

Lendl wore sweatpants during the final to keep warm, but he hardly broke a sweat in winning his third TOC title. "It was very cold and unpleasant," he said. "I don't enjoy wearing sweatpants because it's uncomfortable, but today it was necessary.

"I don't think he liked the conditions any better than I did. I was just able to overpower him."

Brisk winds and temperatures in the low 50s made it seem more like winter than spring, but Lendl recalled playing under worse conditions.

Rose Investigation Is Nearing Culmination

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Baseball's investigation of Cincinnati Reds manager Pete Rose appears to be coming to an end.

John M. Dowd, the lawyer heading the inquiry, said Monday that his work will be all but finished when he presents his report later this week to Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti.

"It's a substantial report that the commissioner can read and study," Dowd said Monday in a telephone interview from his Washington office.

Dowd did not know when this week he would turn in the report and a spokesman for the commissioner's office confirmed it had not yet been received.

Three of Rose's lawyers released a statement last week that questioned whether Dowd's investigation was, in fact, complete.

Dowd, hired by the commissioner's office to investigate charges that Rose bet on baseball, said he did not think there would be further reports after he submits his.

Dowd would not say how many people worked on the investigation or how much time had been spent on it. However, he did say, "We have worked around the clock since mid-February."

If Giamatti determines Rose has bet on baseball, the Cincinnati manager would be suspended for one year. If he finds he had bet on the Reds, Rose would be banned for life.

New Task For Bulls

Jordan Says Confidence Is Key

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The opponent has changed. The approach remains the same.

The Chicago Bulls, fresh from upsetting Cleveland in the first round of the NBA playoffs, are in New York tonight to open a best-of-7 series with the Knicks. New team, old challenge.

"Against the Knicks, we have to be very enthused and motivated, like we were for Cleveland," said Michael Jordan, who averaged 39.8 points against the Cavaliers.

"I think the playoffs have brought a different atmosphere to this team. I don't think we were as prepared as we should have been throughout the season. We didn't believe in ourselves."

But Jordan believed and even predicted the Bulls — 0-6 against Cleveland during the season — would win the opening round in four games. It took five, partly because Jordan missed a key free throw late in Game 4 and Cleveland came back to win in overtime.

"I knew that prediction would get back to Cleveland," he said. "But I wanted to instill belief in my teammates that we could beat this team. You have to believe it before you do it."

As for the Knicks, Jordan said he is "retiring as a predictor. I did that to get my teammates involved. But I might do it again if I see there's a need to inspire them."

The other NBA playoff game tonight has Phoenix at home against Golden State and holding a 1-0 lead in the series.

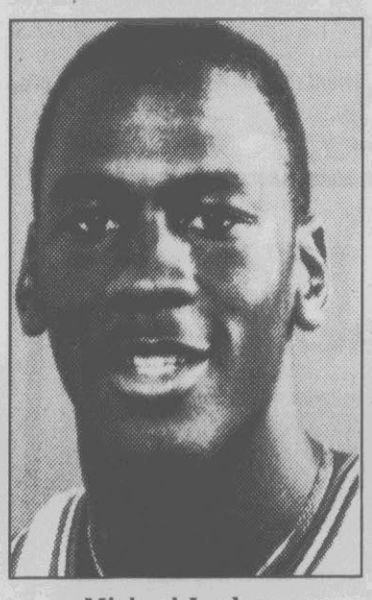

Wednesday night, it will be Milwaukee at Detroit in Game 1 and the Los Angeles Lakers playing host to Seattle, whom they beat Sunday in their opening game.

"If he gets his and we hold everyone else down," Knicks guard Gerald Wilkins said, "we'll be OK. If Michael gets his and everyone else gets theirs, we'll be in trouble."

The Knicks had trouble in their first-round series, even though they swept the 76ers. All three games were tight to the finish.

Johnson Liked Role

Suns' 6th Man Named NBA's Best

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHOENIX — Eddie Johnson never cringed when Phoenix Suns coach Cotton Fitzsimmons switched him to sixth man this season.

And Monday, when he was named the winner of the NBA's Sixth Man Award, Johnson knew who to thank first.

"Cotton is the best coach I've ever had. He knows Eddie Johnson is a basketball player and he designed a role for me," the forward said. "The main goal is to win. It took me a few years to recognize that.

"You have to not listen to your ego and do what's best for the team. From player one through 12, everybody has a role and that's what you do. If that means coming off the bench for me, I do it and I want to be the best at it."

The 6-foot-7, 215-pound Johnson was the NBA's 19th-leading scorer during the regular season and tops among non-starters with a 21.5 average.

He ranked sixth in the league in 3-point goal percentage at .413, making 71 of 172, including a club-record six in a March 31 game here against Milwaukee.

Johnson, who had averaged 18.9 points in his seven previous seasons, helped Phoenix notch the third-best turnaround in league history — going from 28-54 in 1987-88 to 55-27 this year.

"It's been a great year, by far my best as an NBA player," said Johnson, who celebrated his 30th birthday on May 1. "We won 55 games this year, my wife (Joy) is pregnant with our first child. She's due in August and it better be a boy. I just got a new contract (extension) from the Suns. And we're in the second round of the playoffs. It's really been a great year."

The Suns qualified for the playoffs for the first time since 1984-85, swept Denver in three games in the first round and currently own a 1-0 lead over Golden State in the best-of-7 Western Conference semifinal series.

Johnson will be presented his Sixth Man Award prior to Game 2 tonight.

In voting by a nationwide panel of 85 media members who regularly cover the NBA — three from each of the 25 teams and 10 representatives of the national media — Johnson received 33 votes.

Angels Turn Up Heat, Top Tigers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

How hot are the California Angels?

So hot that they failed to get a hit for three innings, then scored nine runs in the fourth on route to a 9-2 victory Monday night over the Detroit Tigers.

So hot that their dugout became uncomfortable.

"You know, they had the heater on in the dugout and all the guys were moving out to the dugout step because we were getting too hot," said Wally Joyner, who had a double and triple in the big inning. "I guess that shows were in a pretty good streak."

The Angels have a five-game winning streak and are 20-11 on the season. Last year, they didn't win their 20th game until June 5.

Despite's California's big inning, Manager Doug Rader said he is "still waiting for our offense to come around. We were opportunistic and things just worked out well.

"Don't get me wrong, I'm glad to see nine runs. But whatever I say about this game is going to sound greedy and I want this to be in context."

Detroit's Doyle Alexander didn't allow a hit through the first three innings, but Joyner started the fourth with a double and scored on a one-out single by Devon White.

Chili Davis singled and Lance Parrish walked to load the bases. Dante Bichette grounded to third, but Al Pedrique's throw home hit White in the back for an error, allowing White and Davis to score.

Jack Howell was intentionally walked to load the bases and Dick Schofield walked to force Parrish home. Brian Downing's triple cleared the bases and made it 7-0. Ramon Pena relieved and the Angels scored their final two runs on Joyner's triple and Johnny Ray's single.

Meanwhile, Chuck Finley scattered seven hits. California starters have pitched into the seventh inning or later in 23 of 30 games.

Rangers 13, Yankees 2

Jeff Stone, a late replacement for the missing Rick Leach, drove in four runs and Kevin Brown beat New York for the second time in a week.

Stone keyed a seven-run fifth inning with a three-run triple and added an RBI double in a four-run sixth. Stone was not in the original lineup but was inserted as the designated hitter when Leach did not show up at Yankee Stadium.

Loser Andy Hawkins allowed nine hits and nine runs in 4 2-3 innings. In the fourth, Sierra had an RBI double, Stone's triple made it 6-0 and Pete Incaviglia, who doubled home the game's first run in the third inning, hit his fifth home run.

Twins 4, Red Sox 2

Kirby Puckett ended an 0-for-15 slump with a run-scoring double and Shane Rawley scattered eight hits in 7 2-3 innings. Rawley ended a personal four-game losing streak with his first victory since his Minnesota debut April 6.

With just their third victory in 16 games, the Twins handed AL East leader Boston only its second loss in eight games. Minnesota also spoiled Mike Boddicker's 200th career start while providing Manager Tom Kelly his 200th major-league victory.

Al Newman began the game with a walk and stole second as Dan Gladden struck out. Puckett then snapped his slump with an RBI double off the wall. The Twins added two unearned runs without a hit as Boston's defense collapsed in the fifth and singles by Kent Hrbek, Gary Gaetti and Randy Bush made it 4-0 in the sixth.

Athletics 6, Orioles 1

Mike Moore allowed four hits in seven innings and Terry Steinbach extended his hitting streak to 15 games, longest in the majors this season, as Oakland handed Baltimore its fifth straight loss. Craig Worthington spoiled Moore's shutout bid with a home run in the seventh inning, his second of the season.

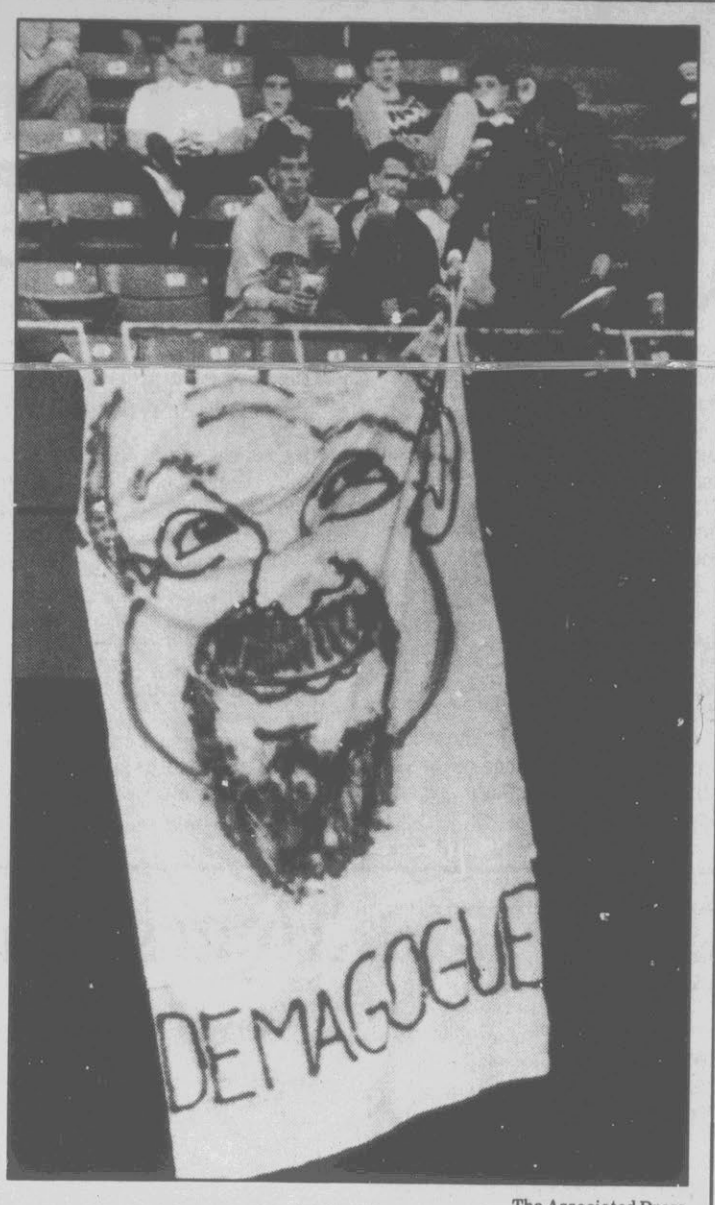

Steinbach and Walt Weiss had three hits each, with Weiss driving in two of Oakland's four runs in the eighth inning with a single following Stan Javier's two-run double.

Blue Jays 10, Mariners 1

Dave Stieb scattered six hits over eight innings and Tony Fernandez, Fred McGriff and Junior Felix drove in three runs apiece as Toronto snapped a three-game losing streak and ended Seattle's six-game winning streak. Loser Mike Dunne yielded six runs and six hits in 3 1-3 innings while walking six.

Fernandez started the scoring with a single in the first inning and McGriff's RBI grounder made it 2-0 in the third.

The Blue Jays scored four times and chased Dunne in the fourth. With one out, Nelson Liriano tripled and Rob Ducey walked. Felix hit an RBI single and Kelly Gruber's single loaded the bases. Steve Trout relieved and walked Fernandez to force in Toronto's fourth run and McGriff's two-run single made it 6-0.

Fans' Feelings

Cincinnati police officers remove a banner calling baseball commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti a "demagogue" from the outfield in Riverfront Stadium Monday night. The reference was to Giamatti's investigation into alleged gambling charges against Reds' manager Pete Rose.

Abbott To Miss Detroit Debut

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DETROIT — Jim Abbott tried to answer the barrage of questions with the poise of a veteran, but the sparkle in his eyes told the reporters surrounding him that he was elated to be home.

Monday night's game between the California Angels and Detroit Tigers marked the first time Abbott had visited his home state since the one-handed pitcher made the Angels' this spring.

"It's the first time I haven't been a paying customer at Tiger Stadium," Abbott said as he stepped out of the dugout and surveyed the field. "It's different looking at it from this perspective ... It's a place I've always loved to come to and I kind of hoped that I'd someday play here."

Rijo Is Getting Pitching Lessons

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — Jose Rijo is pitching more like a Hall of Famer, and it's not just coincidence.

Rijo, an erratic thrower for years in the Oakland organization, has been taking lessons on the art of pitching from his father-in-law, Hall of Famer Juan Marichal. The Cincinnati Reds are enjoying the spectacular results.

Rijo, 3-0, allowed just two hits over seven innings Monday night to help the Reds blank the struggling New York Mets 3-0 on a combined four-hitter. He struck out nine batters — the most by a Cincinnati pitcher this season — and walked three as he sent the Mets to their second consecutive shutout.

The right-hander has won his last three starts after four no-decisions, has lowered his earned run average to 1.43, and improved his career statistics against the Mets to 4-0 in seven starts with a 1.84 earned run average since he came to Cincinnati before the 1988 season.

"He's got nasty stuff," Manager Pete Rose said. "He's got some of the best heat in the league when he wants to reach back. He blew (Howard) Johnson and (Darryl) Strawberry away in that one inning."

Rose attributes the turnaround to Rijo's pitching lessons from Marichal the last two years.

"He (Marichal) is the best pitcher I ever faced," said Rose, baseball's all-time hits leader with 4,256. "He has listened to him. I'd listen to him, too, if he was talking about pitching.

"Marichal didn't throw as hard as Rijo, but he knew how to pitch. He's gotten Rijo turned around mentally."

In the only other National League game, Kevin Gross pitched a five-hitter and Tim Raines hit a two-run homer as the Montreal Expos snapped a four-game losing streak by defeating the Houston Astros 4-1.

The Reds got themselves turned around Monday with a little patience. After wasting eight singles in a 5-0 loss Sunday to Philadelphia, Rose criticized his team for swinging at bad pitches and failing to take walks.

They got another chance Monday against Bob Ojeda, 1-4, who allowed just three hits in seven innings but walked six. His deliberate motion to the plate also allowed the Reds to steal a season-high five bases, one day after Houston's Kevin Bass stole four on the Mets.

"We played just the opposite today as yesterday," Rose said. "The guy wanted to walk us tonight, and we let him walk us."

Ojeda wasn't too disturbed about the walks, considering them a matter of near-misses rather than big control problems.

"It was a small plate, a coffee saucer," he said of home plate. "I was around the plate. I was very close all night.

"When I'm that close to the plate, we're talking just missing all night long. I'm happy with that. It means I'm where I want to be, with my control."

The walks gave the Reds opportunities, the steals gave them runners in scoring position, and a groundout by Barry Larkin and two sacrifice flies by Todd Benzinger produced the three runs.

"We're doing our jobs, getting guys in from third base with less than two out," Benzinger said. "If we're going to have a great year this year, we're going to have to have a lot of games like that, where we're not hitting and we've got to scratch for runs."

The Mets would gladly take just one run at the moment. They've been shut out their last two games — the first time that's happened since May 3-5, 1987, against Montreal and Cincinnati. Their shutout Monday also extended another streak — a team has been shut out in the major leagues every day for the last 29.

Expos 4, Astros 1

Gross pitched Montreal's first complete game of the season as the Expos became the last team in the majors to have a pitcher go the route. Loser Bob Knepper gave up four runs and five hits in 3 2-3 innings.

Montreal took a 2-0 lead in the first on Raines' first home run of the season following Otis Nixon's one-out single.

The Expos made it 4-0 in the fourth after loading the bases on a two-out walk to Wallace Johnson, Spike Owen's double and a walk to Gross. Johnson scored on Knepper's wild pitch and Rex Hudler's infield hit brought Owen home.

Houston scored in the bottom of the fourth on Bill Doran's third homer of the season.

NBA Playoff Matchups ...

If the games with Chicago are that close, the Knicks know what Chicago will be trying.

"Magic Johnson is a great basketball player," Knicks coach Rick Pitino said. "Larry Bird is outstanding. You have Dominique Wilkins and all the rest. But Jordan is just something else in those last seconds."

Warriors-Suns

Golden State might try something old and new after being routed by Phoenix in the series opener. The old is former starting and star center, 7-foot-4 Ralph Sampson. The new is teaming him with 7-7 Manute Bol to form the "Thin Towers."

Sampson has been buried on the Warriors' bench and didn't play at all in the first-round sweep of Utah. He got onto the court in Phoenix's 130-103 victory, scoring six points, grabbing two rebounds and making one steal in 10 minutes. But the Suns were way ahead when he got in.

"I tried to be an inspiration or boost for the guys," Sampson said. "I have no control over when I play. I have no idea what's going on."

Coach Don Nelson does, but isn't saying.

"I'm not going to go over strategies," he said. "I don't discuss changes in theory or practicality. What coaches are supposed to do is give your team the best shot at winning. Whatever I decide to do, it will be toward that goal."

Nelson needs more than the 18 points Chris Mullin scored in Game 1. And more from Rookie of the Year Mitch Richmond, who had 12.

The Suns, who swept Denver in the first round, made 50 of 98 shots against Golden State.

Phoenix doesn't seem to care whether Golden State turns to Sampson.

"That will slow the pace down, make it a half-court game. That's fine with us. We've been adjusting all year," said Eddie Johnson, named Monday as the NBA's best sixth man. "We're a good perimeter-shooting team and we're a good running team and we match up well. Maybe Golden State won't change lineups. They might think, 'We swept Utah, why change?'"

SuperSonics-Lakers

Maybe the Lakers should practice with tackling dummies for the rest of this series.

"We've got to flip the switch from a finesse team to one that's going to be playing in the trenches," Coach Pat Riley said after the two-time defending champions won the opener 113-102. "They are one of the most aggressive teams in the league. They fight and compete for everything."

The Sonics committed 31 fouls to only 16 for the Lakers in Game 1. Los Angeles made 37 of 46 free throws, while Seattle was 18-for-25. The Sonics actually had more field goals, 41-38.

"They never let you drive the lane, they'll always foul you," Magic Johnson said. "I just wish I had some shoulder pads."

"They'd rather foul you than let you shoot a layup," added Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who had 16 points but no rebounds Sunday. "They play physical inside and use as many bodies as they can."

One of those bodies, power forward Michael Cage, thinks Seattle can be more physical.

"I don't think we were fresh," he said. "Give us a couple days to prepare and I think we can play four full quarters. The fourth quarter, we were just standing around."

Bucks-Pistons

Milwaukee is banged-up physically but riding an emotional high after beating Atlanta in five games. Detroit will have an eight-day layoff between games.

done a tremendous job. The cars, along with the new tires, the new track surface, and the weather ... all of these have made it just faster."

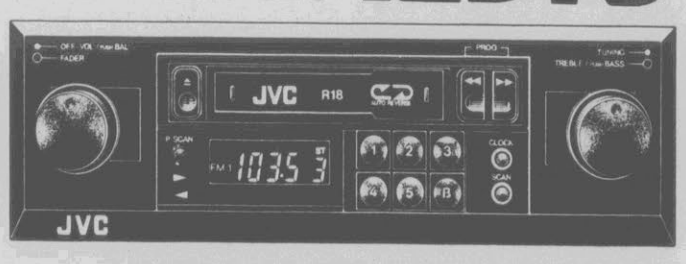

Michael Andretti burned a lap at 224.382 mph, Emerson Fittipaldi had a lap at 224.047, Al Unser Jr. had a fast lap at 223.103, and Mario Andretti, Michael's father, was clocked at 222.606. Former winner Bobby Rahal was at 222.102, and Scotland's Jim Crawford had a lap at 221.511.

How much faster can the cars go?

Italy's Teo Fabi, a former track record holder as a rookie six years ago, had a fast lap at 219.191 but brought out the yellow caution light when his Porsche engine blew a connecting rod and scattered pieces of metal over the track.

One piece put a fist-sized hole in the front wing of rookie Buddy Lazier's race car, but the 21-year-old Lazier — the youngest entrant this year — had the wing replaced and was back on the track later in the afternoon.

Canseco May Need Surgery On His Wrist

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Jose Canseco is having his troublesome left wrist examined, and if surgery is necessary it will have it done as soon as possible, Oakland Athletics general manager Sandy Alderson says.

"There is no reason to do it beyond Friday, and I hope sooner than that," Alderson said Monday.

If Canseco and the team, after hearing the doctors' report today, decide on surgery to repair a cracked hamate bone, the A's right fielder could remain out of the lineup for two months.

Canseco

"Jose would be out six weeks, begin rehabilitation and be ready to play in eight weeks. The All-Star break is another way of looking at it," Alderson said.

Meanwhile, Canseco, who reinjured his wrist Sunday, is looking to his twin brother, Ozzie, for comfort. Ozzie, who had the same surgery two months ago, is playing again with the Huntsville Stars.

"They remove the broken bone and you're out of there. It's very simple," Ozzie Canseco said of the one-hour procedure.

His brother, the American League Most Valuable Player in 1988, hasn't played for the A's this season because of a stress fracture he suffered and reinjured during spring training. He was in the Huntsville lineup Sunday to begin rehabilitation when suffered a painful snap when he took a swing.

Bullets Rally For Win Over Lakers

MATTAMUSKEET — Jamesville used a late-inning rally to hand Mattamuskeet a 7-6 defeat Monday in Tobacco Belt 1-A Conference baseball action.

Jamesville broke a 1-1 tie with four runs in the fifth as the Bullets had five hits, keyed by a RBI double by Kent Dickerson.

Mattamuskeet came back with three runs in the bottom of the inning to make it 5-4 and then scored two in the bottom of the sixth for a 6-5 lead.

In the seventh, Jamesville rallied as Ernie Gardner doubled and moved to third on a passed ball. John Asby walked and stole second. David Gardner hit into a fielder's choice, forcing Gardner at home. Casey Wells then reached off an error that allowed the two runs to score and give Jamesville the win.

The Bullets, 11-6 in the TBC and 10-3 overall, returns to action at Belhaven today.

Sexton Leads Jamesville To Win

MATTAMUSKEET — Nikkie Sexton had four hits to lead Jamesville to a 13-1 romp over Mattamuskeet in high school softball action Monday from the Tobacco Belt 1-A Conference.

The Lady Bullets scored one run in the first and second as Candy Bembridge and Rickie Jo Lee picked up RBI, respectively.

Jamesville took control with three runs in the third and two more in the fifth for a 7-1 lead.

Sherry Blanton and Bembridge had three hits each for Jamesville while Karen Styons had a three-run homer in the seventh.

ECU Games In CAA Tourney To Be Aired

East Carolina University's games in the Colonial Athletic Association baseball tournament, which begins Friday, will be broadcast locally over WGHB, 1250-AM.

Jeff Charles, the Voice of the Pirates, will handle the play-by-play and will follow the Pirates through the tournament. The first game, Friday night, sends the Pirates against George Mason and will air with the pre-game show at 7:45 p.m. Game times for additional games in the double elimination tournament will be announced at the conclusion of each day's play.

The game will also be carried over WELS, 1010-AM, will also carry the games.

The tournament winner will advance to the NCAA Regionals.

Correction

Betty Mallory and Ann Sayetta finished in second place in the first flight of the Brook Valley Member-Guest Tennis Tournament.

Second place was incorrectly listed as another team in Sunday's edition.

Ayden, Aycock Post Junior Wins

AYDEN — Ayden Middle School rolled to a 13-1 win over Chicod in junior high baseball action Monday.

Brian Booth tossed a no hitter and struck out seven. Troy Williams, Tollis Hemby, Robert Moye and Ben Quick had two hits apiece for Ayden, which moves to 10-1 on the year and returns to action at Grifton Thursday.

Jermaine Reed tossed a two-hitter at Farmville and also picked up two hits in four trips to the plate. Ritchie Grimsley was 2-2 and Cole Yarborough and Will Pleasants were 2-3 for Aycock, now 7-1 on the season.

Aycock will entertain G.R. Whitfield on Thursday.

Earnhardt Maintains Points Advantage

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Dale Earnhardt finished eighth but maintained a slight lead in the latest NASCAR Winston Cup stock car points standings compiled after Sunday's Winston 500 race at Talladega Superspeedway.

Earnhardt, a three-time Winston Cup champion, has 1376 points through the first nine races of the 29-event season. He leads second-place Darrell Waltrip, also a three-time Winston Cup champion, by 77 points. Waltrip has 1299.

Rangers Don't Know Where Leach Is

NEW YORK (AP) — Officials and players on the Texas Rangers say they are very concerned about the whereabouts of Rick Leach.

Leach did not show up for Monday night's game against New York at Yankee Stadium, and the Rangers still did not know where he was after the game.

Texas general manager Tom Grieve said the club had notified authorities that Leach was missing.

"It's scary," teammate Steve Buechele said. "He's always the first one at the park. Some of the guys said they saw him earlier in the day and nothing was wrong."

Leach, was listed as batting sixth in the Texas lineup as the designated hitter, but the Rangers announced shortly before the game started that he did not appear at the park.

He was a star quarterback at Michigan, and selected No. 1 by the Tigers in the June 1979 draft.

Fleisher Praised By Contemporaries

NEW YORK (AP) — Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., speaking at the funeral of Larry Fleisher, founder and longtime head of the NBA players association, called his old friend, the most successful union leader of the 20th century.

"In 1967, my first year, the average salary was $9,400," Bradley said Monday. "Next year, it will be over $600,000, all because of Larry Fleisher. He conceived a strategy and held the players together in collective bargaining. He built a monument to honesty, common sense, persistence and the power of solidarity."

Rampants Win Big East Golf Title

Conley Linksters Capture Eastern 3-A Regional Golf Championship

Rose High School completed its sweep of the Big East Conference Monday, taking first place in the final league match and winning the conference title again.

Rose finished the round, played at the Brook Valley Country Club, with a 310 score, 11 shots ahead of second place Northern Nash at 321. Kinston was third with a 333, followed by Wilson Hunt at 340, Wilson Fike at 360, Rocky Mount at 378, Wilson Beddingfield at 381, and Northeastern at 489.

Mark Honeycutt of Rose led the field with a 76. Other Rose scorers included Derick Daniels at 77, Brooks Honeycutt at 78 and Chris Warren with a 79.

Rose's aggregate score of 1,227 for the four league matches won the conference championship, 71 strokes ahead of the second place Knights of Northern Nash.

Nash was second with a 1,298, followed by Kinston at 1,308, Hunt at 1,367, Fike at 1,402, Beddingfield at 1,461, Rocky Mount at 1,534 and Northeastern at 1,600.

In the individual competition, golfers counted their three low scores, and the top seven were named all-conference. They included, in order, Daniels 223; Mike Dunn of Fike 225, Brooks Honeycutt 227, Lee Watson of Rose 232, John Grady of Northern Nash 233, Rob Cato of Kinston and Warren, 234, and Mark Honeycutt, 235.

Vikes Win Regional

WASHINGTON — D.H. Conley's Ben Edwards carded a low-round of 74 to lead the Vikings to the Eastern 3-A Regional golf title Monday.

Conley, at 315, finished one stroke ahead of Coastal Conference foe West Carteret, which had 316. SouthWest Edgecombe was third with 319. All three teams qualified for the state finals May 15-16 in Chapel Hill.

Gentry Pinner and Jason Wing both broke 80 for the Vikings as Pinner shot a 78 and Wing had a 79. Tran Dean also shot 84 for Conley. A fifth Conley golfer, Jason Adams, will also compete next week in Chapel Hill, and carded a 87.

Don Howard had a 76 to be low for West Carteret.

Rose Girls Win Track Title; Boys Third

RED OAK — Rose High School's girls track team won only one individual competition, but still walked away with the Big East Conference Track and Field Championships at Northern Nash on Monday.

The Rose girls finished the day with 143 points while Kinston was second with 118. Northeastern took third with 95, followed by Northern Nash with 79, Wilson Fike with 42, Wilson Hunt with 32, Wilson Beddingfield with six and Rocky Mount with five.

Anna Wirth was the lone Rose individual winner, winning the long jump with a leap of 15 feet, 10¼ inches. She also led the 800-meter relay team to a first place finish. The 400-meter relay team also took first, while the 3,200-meter and 1,600-meter relays finished second.

First and second place finishers in the meet were awarded all-conference honors, and, for Rose, that went to Wirth, Tiffany Williams, Ericka Hill, Cnythia Scott, Donna Bivens, Candace Garrett, Carreta Ellis, Chanelle Williams, Jennifer Ramsdell, Laura Howell, Renee Lao, Tyner Hill and Tina Smith.

Several members of the team have qualified for the regionals, to be held at Northern Durham on Saturday. They include Ramsdell in the 1,600-meter run; Ericka Hill in the 100-meter dash, Tiffany Williams in the 100-meter hurdles and the 400-, 800-, 1,600- and 3,200-meter relay teams.

Fike was second among the boys with 142 points while Rose had 114. Kinston took fourth place with 67½ points followed by Northeastern with 33½. Rocky Mount was next with 29 while Hunt had 15.

Malcom Wilson won the triple jump with a leap of 46.8½. Carlester Crumpler Jr. was first in the high hurdles with a time of 15.63. Rose also won the 400 meter relay.

Other Rose qualifiers include Mike Moore in the shot and discus; Harold Little in the high jump; Eric Morris in the long jump and the 400 and 800 meter relay teams.

Rose, FC Win

STANTONSBURG — Rose High School romped past Wilson Beddingfield in a Big East Conference tennis match Monday, 9-0.

The Rampants had little mercy on the Bruins, losing no more than two games in any one set until the number six singles. Beddingfield won only 26 games through the entire nine match day.

Rose is now 9-3 and plays host to Kinston today.

Singles: Joseph Taft (R) d. Chris Williford, 6-1, 6-1; Stephen Simpson (R) d. Kelly Batten, 6-1, 6-1; Neal Creech (R) d. Shatel Patel, 6-1, 6-2; Jeff Pittman (R) d. Jonathan Zimmer, 6-0, 6-0; Chris Bland (R) d. Scott Batchelor, 6-1, 6-1; Tommy Turner (R) d. Andy Evans, 6-4, 7-5.

Farmville C.....6
Greene Central.....3

SNOW HILL — Farmville Central defeated Greene Central, 6-3, in an Eastern Carolina Conference tennis match Monday, winding up the regular season for both teams.

Farmville won four of the six singles matches to get a leg up in the match, then took two of the three doubles in the hard fought match.

Farmville ends the year with an 8-7 overall and 7-3 EPC record, good enough for second place. Greene Central finished 6-14, 3-7, in fifth place.

The EPC's tennis tournament will begin Wednesday at Ayden-Grifton.

Singles: Chris Wade (FC) d. Todd Murphrey, 6-0, 6-0; Tommy Murphy (FC) d. Johnny Rouse, 6-4, 6-7 (7-0), 6-4; Britt Hardy (GC) d. Matt Mills, 6-3, 6-0; John Wade (FC) d. Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY May 10

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Maintain a sense of humor, avoid speculation and poorly thought out policy. Buy necessities, but avoid frivolous spending.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Fulfillment of a major dream draws closer as profit margins increase. Make lists and purchase necessary items for home projects.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Remember what happens when the cat is away. Siblings need close supervision. Do your fair share of the work.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Make a fresh start on a tangled up personal matter. Others will not keep a secret better than you. Contact older relatives.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): An overactive sweet tooth and the midnight munchies frustrate the battle of the bulge. An emotional issue eases and may solve itself.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): You could make a mountain out of a molehill over an issue that others deem unimportant. Let irritations pass.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): You are exhilarated; thus, you want to break from normal routines. Try on apparel before you buy, and avoid uncomfortable items.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Morning affairs bring a sober reminder of just where you stand with another. Rely on your intuition to show the way.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): There is a possibility of judging a situation before you have all the facts. Don't rely on gossip or hearsay. Dig up your own truth.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): The current cycle accents career, money and success. You get bummed-out when what you buy falls apart. Use quality as a criteria.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Focus on the balance between debts and income. Spending habits are reflected in your checkbook. Financial independence is important.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Sit out a confusing day and wait until the atmosphere "feels right." Make future travel plans. Pleasure comes in the evening.

Opening lead: Ace of ♣

In 1988 the U.S. won the only world title that had so far eluded it—the World Team Olympiad. In the final, played after two weeks of grueling preliminary rounds, the U.S defeated Austria in a match that produced less than error-free bridge.

Austria reached the terrible contract of six spades after the above auction. West was informed that the sequence showed six spades and five clubs. Since North surely had at least two clubs for his no trump opening bid, that meant that East could not have more than one club.

West, therefore, led the ace of clubs and another, expecting his partner to ruff. When declarer won that trick with the jack, the contract could now have been made. Since West will show out on the second heart, the ruffing finesse against East becomes marked and declarer can dispose of his diamond loser.

Declarer started off well enough with a heart to the ace and a heart back, but with a 5-to-1 shot of ruffing with the right card, he selected the three of trumps! That was just low enough for West to be able to overruff with the four for down one.

In the other room, the Americans were less aggressive. They played quietly in four spades, a contract that needed no special skill to be brought home. As a result, the U.S. gained substantially on this board.

Guatemala's Loyal Troops Put Down Military Rebels

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GUATEMALA CITY — The civilian government of President Vinicio Cerezo said it thwarted a coup attempt today by air force officers and soldiers.

Government spokesman Carlos Alleu said troops loyal to Cerezo arrested an undetermined number of air force personnel who participated in the coup attempt, which lasted about two hours.

"Everything is under control," Alleu said.

The attempt was led by retired air force officers, Alleu said. He did not identify them. The coup attempt was crushed when soldiers loyal to the government entered the city in tanks and helicopters, the spokesman said.

About 6:30 a.m. troops and soldiers, many wearing the blue handerkerchiefs that are a sign of loyalists, surrounded the home of the defense minister, Gen. Alejandro Gramajo. Military planes and helicopters flew overhead and tanks were parked strategically nearby. There were no sounds of shooting.

In May 1988, a military coup attempt failed when Gramajo refused to join it and backed the civilian government.

By 8:30 a.m., most of the troops had returned to their barracks and the aircraft returned to their bases. Morning rush-hour activity had returned to normal in the capital. Radio stations played military music during the attempt, then returned to normal programming.

In Washington, a State Department official said reports from the U.S. Embassy and from Guatemalans also indicated the coup attempt was unsuccessful. The official said the coup attempt may have been aimed not at Cerezo, whose whereabouts were unknown, but at Granajo or other cabinet ministers.

Cerezo took office in January 1986, heading the first elected civilian administration in 16 years. He had been under attack from the right wing for opening talks with the leftist insurgency, the Revolutionary Union, which has been conducting a guerrilla war for 30 years.

During the attempted coup by army officers on May 11, 1988, two columns of troops marched on the capital to seize power. But their attempt was quashed without a shot being fired. Six officers were arrested.

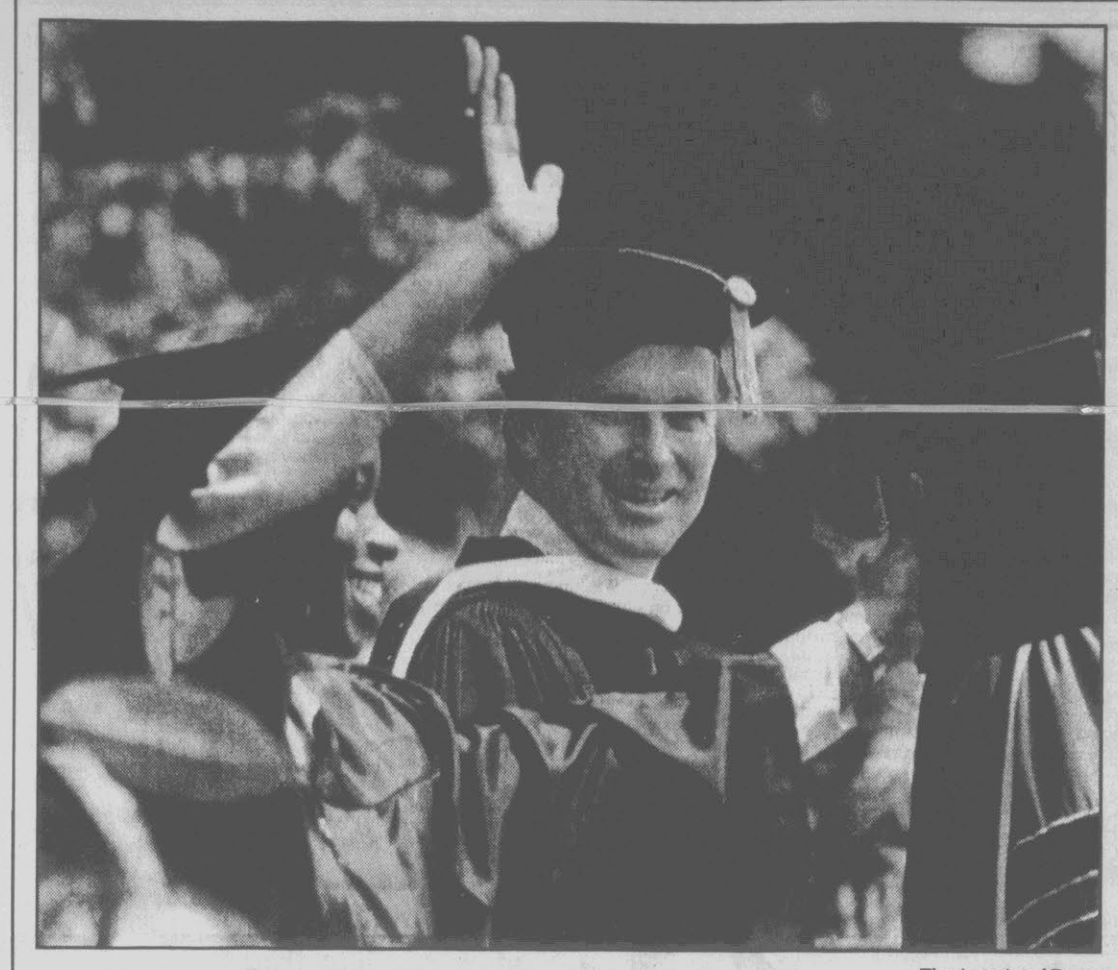

On April 16, Cerezo blamed rightist paramilitary groups for a growing wave of violence and said they threatened the nation's democracy. "Democracy is being put in danger by the recklessness of some groups and people who constantly violate the law," he said in a nationally broadcast address.

The president blamed the right-wing groups for the death of Irma Esquivel de Lara, 37, a criminal court judge who was gunned down on a street in the capital earlier in April.

"There exist some groups traditionally of the extreme right that aren't happy with democracy. They don't like it that we are satisfied with a democratic government," Cerezo said at the time.

Poll Shows Most Support North Pardon

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

A clear majority of Americans — 57 percent — say Oliver L. North should be pardoned for his crimes in the Iran-Contra scandal, while only about a third believe he should be punished, according to a new poll by The Gallup Organization.

Public sentiment favoring the former Marine lieutenant colonel ran high in the poll, although a slight majority — 51 percent — said the jury made the right decision in convicting him of three felony charges relating to his preparing false testimony for Congress, shredding documents and illegally accepting a security fence for his home from a key figure in the affair.

North was acquitted of nine other charges, and only 8 percent of those surveyed in the poll said that he should have been convicted of more than the three charges. Another 28 percent said he should have been acquitted of all charges.

More than two-thirds of those surveyed — 69 percent — said they felt that North was "well-meaning, but misguided," while 14 percent said he was "a hero and a patriot," and 11 percent said he was "a liar and a criminal."

"What seems to have kept most of the public on North's side is the belief that, even though he may have violated the law on occasion while serving in the Reagan White House, he was trying to do what he thought was right," Gallup President Andrew Kohut said.

The trial convictions seemed to sway public opinion in North's favor. A Gallup poll taken in September 1987 found 51 percent saying he should be pardoned and 41 percent saying he should be punished, compared with the current poll that found 57 percent saying he should be pardoned and 35 percent saying he should be punished.

Overall, 59 percent gave North a favorable rating, compared with 57 percent in a recent Times Mirror poll. Twenty-eight percent gave him an unfavorable rating in the Gallup poll, compared with 34 percent in the Times Mirror survey.

The survey was based on telephone interviews May 4-7 with 1,239 adults nationwide. The poll's margin of error is plus or minus 4 percentage points.

Wright's Defense Team Seeks Dismissal Of Major Charges

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — House Speaker Jim Wright's new legal defense team today prepared motions asking that the two primary charges against him be dismissed on grounds that the ethics committee's special counsel has misread House rules.

A source familiar with the defense said Wright's lawyers believe they have a good chance of thinning the 69 formal counts of alleged rules violations before Wright faces a trial-like disciplinary hearing before the ethics panel.

But the legal maneuvering appeared likely to further delay that hearing, pushing it into June rather than late this month.

Wright is charged with evading House limits on outside earned income through bulk sales of a book he wrote, and with improperly accepting some $145,000 in gifts from Fort Worth real estate developer George Mallick, who has been deemed by the committee as having a direct interest in legislation before Congress.

But Wright's lawyers will argue that a strict reading of the rules permits unlimited book royalties to be collected by a House member. They also will try to make the case that Mallick helped Wright not because of any interest in legislation, but because of the longtime friendship between the two, and that such relationships are protected by the rules.

They will argue that the special counsel, Richard J. Phelan, misread the history behind the rules and brought charges when none were warranted. Phelan's charges amount to a rewriting of the rules, the defense lawyers contend.

In addition, the attorneys will seek to formally isolate Phelan from the ethics panel that employed him by arguing he now takes on the role of prosecutor and the committee should limit its private contact with him to maintain objectivity.

The hard-line approach reflects the toughness of Wright's new legal team, which now includes Houston trial lawyer Stephen Susman; former defense secretary and Democratic patriarch Clark Clifford; Rep. Robert Torricelli, D-N.J.; Robert Altman, a Washington attorney and associate of Clifford; and Neal S. Manne, a former counsel to the Senate Judiciary Committee who is a member of Susman's firm.

William C. Oldaker, who has handled the case for Wright thus far, will continue to map out Wright's overall legal strategy, along with co-counsels Lyn Utrecht and Eric Kleinfeld.

While the legal wrangling in Washington protracted, reports of questionable financial dealings by Wright proliferated.

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported today that Wright's wife, Betty, did little or nothing to earn her $36,000 yearly salary at the Seattle-based Pacific Institute, a firm which sells motivational programs, primarily to corporate clients.

"As far as I'm concerned, Betty Wright, during my tenure here, did nothing," said U.S. "Tony" French, a retired Army general who was the institute's chief operating officer from November 1987 to May 1988.

"I am not comfortable with anybody in Pacific Institute telling me they think she did a fair day's work. I'm not buying that."

An institute spokesman earlier had said Mrs. Wright did "follow-up" work with corporate clients, but was unable to offer specific examples of her work.

Some of the ethics counts against Wright are based on Mrs. Wright's earlier receipt of an $18,000-a-year salary from Mallick for which the special counsel could find little evidence that any work was done.

Scientist Reports Testimony Altered

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration faces "the congressional equivalent of World War III" if it retaliates against a top NASA scientist who said the Office of Management and Budget doctored his testimony on global warming, a Senate panel chairman says.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, meantime, called the practice of alterations routine and said changes were made by a budget official "four or five levels down from the top."

Dr. James Hansen on Monday told senators that OMB forced him to contradict within his own prepared statement his finding that a buildup of "greenhouse effect" gases would increase the likelihood of drought.

Sen. Albert Gore Jr. praised Hansen for speaking out at the Senate hearing and warned that if administration officials "attempt any kind of retribution in return for candor, they will have on their hands the congressional equivalent of World War III."

But Fitzwater said the National Aeronautics and Space Administration scientist was free to express his own views in answering committee questions.

In testimony before Gore's science subcommittee of the Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee, Hansen said he wouldn't object to a policy review by OMB. But he added: "I don't believe the scientific aspects in testimony should be altered. I did try to get them to compromise. ... I was not successful."

Fitzwater said scientists inside and outside the government disagree on the global warming issue. He complained that Hansen's original testimony gave the appearance that "there was unanimity within the government on this matter. We simply wanted to point out that there wasn't.

"We thought we were commenting on policy, not scientific evidence," Fitzwater said.

Hansen complained about the alterations during his response to Gore's questions about the changes following submission of the toned-down written statement.

In the document, Hansen said it was unlikely scientists would alter the conclusions of computer models that greenhouse gases would increase drought in low and middle latitudes. But the statement also contradicted the conclusion by saying — in language inserted by OMB — that the computer models were not reliable.

Hansen said officials also added a sentence that said it was unknown whether the buildup of greenhouse gases was from natural forces or from human activities. Hansen and others at the hearing said humans were primarily responsible by burning fossil fuel, cutting down tropical rain forests and other actions.

"Every scientist that testified here today ... and every reputable scientist in the field supports your conclusion this is primarily a human cause. It's not an act of God. OMB forced you to say it may ... be just the forces of nature," Gore said.

TOWN OF WINTERVILLE ADVERTISEMENT OF TAX LIENS ON REAL PROPERTY

Under and by virtue of the authority vested in me by Section 105-369 of the North Carolina General Statutes and pursuant to an order of the Board of Aldermen of the Town of Winterville, dated March 13, 1989, I am advertising tax liens for the year 1988 upon the real estate described below. The amount advertised will be increased by interest and cost, and the omission of interest and costs from the amount advertised will not constitute a waiver of the taxing unit's claim for those items. The name of the person to whom the property is listed for taxes, and the principal amount of the taxes are set out below. If the taxes remain unpaid, the lien will be foreclosed by the taxing unit and property sold to satisfy the taxing unit's claim for taxes.

This 9th day of May, 1989.

Thousands Of Lucy's Fans Attend Memorial Services

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Thousands of Lucille Ball's fans shed tears for the woman who made them laugh, as three cities held memorial services in which the redheaded comedian was remembered with prayers and applause.

"She was a whole package. There never will be another one like her. I love her," said a tearful Carol Burnett following a memorial Mass in suburban Santa Monica.

More than a thousand people who packed the St. Monica's Catholic Church rose to their feet and clapped for several minutes after television minister the Rev. Robert Schuller asked them to "applaud the Lord for Lucille Ball."

About 1,000 people also crowded a church in New York and 200 gathered in a Chicago church. All three memorial Masses began at 8 p.m. Monday, the time Miss Ball's three most popular programs were often broadcast.

The 77-year-old comedian who starred in one of television's biggest all-time hits, "I Love Lucy," died here April 26 of a ruptured aorta, a major blood vessel, eight days after emergency open-heart surgery.

Miss Ball, known for her honed comedic timing, wide-mouthed expressions and wacky antics, was popular among generations of fans who watched "I Love Lucy" as a first-run show in the '50s and in three decades of reruns.

"She showed her love in the only way she knew how, by making you laugh," the Rev. James Fox told those gathered for the Roman Catholic Mass at St. Ignatius Loyola in New York.

In Chicago, the Rev. Jack Wall told people at Old St. Patrick Church that God gave the world talents like Miss Ball "to show us life is not a tragedy, but a comedy with a happy ending."

"She taught us that if we could love Lucy, we could love ourselves," Wall said.

In announcing the services, Miss Ball's family said: "Monday night was the time when most of the nation was used to being with Lucy."

Two of the three long-running comedy shows in which Miss Ball starred, "The Lucy Show" and "Here's Lucy," aired Monday nights. "I Love Lucy" had starting times on Mondays and other days.

Gary Morton, Miss Ball's husband for more than two decades, attended a private service for his wife last month. The actress' remains were buried at Forest Lawn Memorial Park in Hollywood Hills.

Musical Revues Dominate Choices

By Michael Kuchwara
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Two musicals revues — "Jerome Robbins' Broadway" and "Black and Blue" — dominated the 1989 Tony nominations even though musical categories for book and score were eliminated this year.

Each show received 10 nominations Monday, including nods for best musical. They will compete against "Starmites," a campy space-age musical that received six nominations.

The 1988-89 Broadway season was the poorest in terms of quantity and quality for musicals in several years. Only seven new musicals opened, compared with 14 a year ago. And several of this season's shows, particularly "Carrie" and "Legs Diamond," were well-publicized flops.

The decision by the nominating committee to eliminate the two categories was unusual but not unprecedented. In 1985, nominations for actor and actress in a musical and for choreography were dropped. "Black and Blue" and "Jerome Robbins' Broadway" use old songs and have no book.

"Lend Me a Tenor," a farce by Ken Ludwig about an indisposed opera star and the nebbish who replaces him, garnered seven nominations, including for best play. Its best-play competition includes Wendy Wasserstein's "The Heidi Chronicles," winner of the 1989 Pulitzer Prize; "Shirley Valentine," Willy Russell's comedy about an unfulfilled English housewife, and "Largely New York," Bill Irwin's play without dialogue that picked up four other nominations.

Irwin also was nominated for best acting in the play, for direction and for choreography, which he did with Kimi Okada.

Other best actor nominations went to dance superstar Mikhail Baryshnikov for his portrayal of man who turns into a dung beetle in "Metamorphosis," and to Philip Bosco and Victor Garber for "Lend Me a Tenor."

"Jerome Robbins' Broadway" picked up multiple nominations in two categories. Jason Alexander and Robert La Fosse were nominated for best actor in a musical and Jane Lanier, Faith Prince and Debbie Shapiro were chosen in the featured actress in a musical category.

Besides Robbins' nod for best director of a musical, the show, which features numbers from some of his greatest works, also got nominations for Charlotte d'Amboise (actress in a musical), Scott Wise (featured actor in a musical), Jennifer Tipton (lighting design).

"Black and Blue," a tap dancing and blues revue, received nominations for its stars, Ruth Brown and Linda Hopkins (actress in a musical), for two of its featured performers, Bunny Briggs and Savion Glover; its lighting design, Neil Peter Jampolis and Jane Reisman, and its choreography, by Cholly Atkins, Henry LeTang, Frankie Manning and Fayard Nicholas. The producers of "Black and Blue" — Claudio Segovia and Hector Orezzoli — were nominated for two other awards — lighting and direction of a musical.

The nominees for best actress in a play were Joan Allen, "The Heidi Chronicles"; Pauline Collins, "Shirley Valentine"; Madeline Kahn, "Born Yesterday"; and Kate Nelligan, "Spoils of War."

Irwin's competition for best director of a play includes Gregory Mosher, "Our Town"; Daniel Sullivan, "The Heidi Chronicles," and Jerry Zaks, "Lend Me a Tenor."

Best revival nominations went to "Ah, Wilderness!", "Ain't Misbehavin'," "Cafe Crown" and "Our Town."

A special Tony Award will be given to the Hartford Stage Company, which was picked by the American Theater Critics Association for the Tony for outstanding regional theater.

Winners will be announced June 4 during a ceremony broadcast on CBS-TV from the Gershwin Theater.

'Moonlighting' Era Will End On Sunday

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — The sizzle in "Moonlighting" has fizzled, forcing ABC to cancel its once popular hit after the tongue-in-cheek detective series landed in the ratings basement.

"Moonlighting," an instant hit for ABC when it debuted four years ago with the zany antics of detectives David Addison and Maddie Hayes, will have its last original episode broadcast this Sunday, the network said Monday.

The show made a star of Bruce Willis, who played the free-spirited David, and was the comeback vehicle for Cybill Shepherd as the straight-laced Maddie. The bickering romance between the mismatched couple sparked sexual electricity.

"TV, by its very nature, is cyclical and it would be foolish to expect 'Moonlighting' to continue indefinitely," Willis said Monday.

"When the show was at its height, it was very much like playing a brand new song that had never been played before," he said. "Some people might not have liked the song, we may not have always played it exactly to fit people's taste, but when we were 'on,' we hit some notes that will never be played again."

Producer-creator Glenn Caron's witty dialogue and sometimes daring stories also were credited with wooing the audience. He left the show after a creative dispute with Miss Shepherd.

In recent years, the show also suffered production problems. It began as one of the brightest spots on Tuesday night, but this season was pulled from the schedule and returned on Sunday nights. It was the seventh lowest-rated show in last week's A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings.

"We feel the show has reached a creative conclusion and that this is the appropriate time to end the series," ABC's statement said. "We are quite proud of the innovation which 'Moonlighting' brought to television during the past four years."

Caron spofed the film noir of the 1940s with a black and white episode called "The Dream Sequence Always Rings Twice." Another episode was a sendup of Shakespeare's "Taming of the Shrew."

The production schedule of "Moonlighting" was at best chaotic. Caron often didn't complete a script before filming started. The show fell behind schedule and frequently went into reruns.

The turning point came when Miss Shepherd became pregnant. When the producers also chose to have Maddie become pregnant, the show went into a creative decline. An old flame showed up for a whirlwind romance. She also finally went to bed with David, and David, as well as the audience, was left to guess who the father was.

The series also was forced to rely heavily on its secondary stars, Allyce Beasley and Curtis Armstrong, during Miss Shepherd's absence. When she returned, the audience was further alienated by Maddie's quickie marriage to a man she met on a train. The marriage was later annulled and in this season's first episode, Maddie had a miscarriage.

"It's a sad time for all of us," said executive producer Jay Daniel, who succeeded Caron. "We've all loved doing the show. On the wrap shot I told the crew, when they write the book on 'Moonlighting' it will begin: 'It was the best of times, the worst of times.'"

BBC Staff On Strike

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — Television and radio newscasts by the British Broadcasting Corp. were severely disrupted today as thousands of news and production employees began a 48-hour strike for higher pay.

The National Union of Journalists said in a statement shortly before the walkout began at midnight Monday that BBC management faced a "long hot summer" of worker unrest unless it increased its pay offer.

The union predicted that more than half of the BBC's 25,000 employees would join the strike.

Among programs affected was BBC radio's flagship news and current affairs program "Today." Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher says she listens to it every morning.

"Today" normally runs from 6:30 a.m. to 8:35 a.m. Today, it was cut to news bulletins of two to five minutes every half hour.

One bulletin reported details of the strike and said the unions are demanding a 16 percent pay increase while the BBC is offering 7 percent.

The BBC broadcast recorded current affairs features to fill the time between news bulletins.

Ten-minute news bulletins broadcast each hour on the BBC's English language World Service were cut to two minutes. The 24-hour service claims a worldwide audience of 120 million.

The strike followed a 24-hour walkout on April 24, the first at the BBC since 1985.

Hank Jr. Says Someone Must Have Slipped Him Some Drugs

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Country music singer Hank Williams Jr. thinks someone slipped him some drugs before a weekend concert in which he cursed, failed to finish a song and stumbled offstage, his publicist said.

Williams, who was back at his farm in the Tennessee town of Paris, told his Nashville publicist he had several alcoholic beverages before Saturday night's performance in Baton Rouge, La.

Williams recalled feeling fine when he went to the Centroplex arena several hours before the show for a sound check, spokesman Kent Arwood said.

"What Hank told me is that, 'Really, after that, I don't remember much of anything until I woke up Sunday morning,'" said Arwood. "He said, 'I wasn't drunk on stage. I know what it's like to be drunk, and I wasn't drunk.'

"Hank said, 'I know for a fact someone slipped me some drugs or something. I had a problem with drugs years ago and I know that feeling. That's obviously what happened,'" Arwood said, who spoke to Williams on Monday for the first time since the concert.

Angry fans in the audience of about 7,000 threw beer bottles and burned souvenir T-shirts, but there were no arrests or injuries, police said.

Williams, 39, who is known for his songs about hard drinking and rowdy living, agreed to pay $65,000 to Centroplex to cover the arena's losses, said Michael M. Pierce, director of the arena.

Arwood said Williams has offered to do another concert at his own expense on May 23 at the arena.

Williams, voted entertainer of the year three times by the Academy of Country Music, stormed offstage 40 minutes into a concert April 2 in Bristol. A spokesman for the singer cited the flu, but the city's Viking Hall has banned Williams because of his behavior.

Williams' father, the country singer-songwriter Hank Williams Sr., died in 1953 at age 29 from the effects of alcohol abuse.

ACT Cites TV Shows For Kids

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — ABC shows won two of 20 citations from Action for Children's Television, an advocacy group that honored children's shows for creative excellence.

ACT, in keeping with its theme of using television to encourage children to read, gave its "Stop, Look & Listen" award to "Daddy Can't Read," an ABC Afterschool special that confronted adult illiteracy "in a solution-oriented story for children and families," the 10,000-member organization said.

ABC on Monday also won a commercial broadcast award for "The New Adventures of Winnie the Pooh." Boston's WNEV also received a commercial broadcast award for "Ready to Go!," a morning program that combines news, weather and games for children.

Other winning programs that were based on children's literature include "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow," produced by Sony Video Software, and Lancit Media's "Ramona."

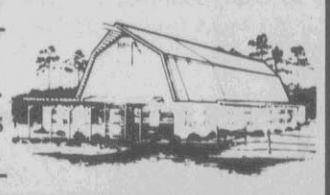

Home Sought

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) Bluesman B.B. King, who has traveled the world with his guitar "Lucille," is looking for a home in Memphis and plans to open a club in the Beale Street entertainment district next year, his manager says.

10% Low Price Guarantee Policy:

Lowe's guarantees our everyday low prices. If you find an identical advertised item at any retail competitor currently priced lower than ours, simply bring us written proof of that price. We'll match that price PLUS give you an additional 10% of the difference between the two prices when you buy from us. It must be an identical in-stock item. Closeout, discontinued and other clearance type sale items are excluded from this offer.

Satisfaction Guarantee Policy:

Lowe's guarantees that you will be satisfied with your purchase. If you are not completely happy with your purchase, simply return it along with your original sales receipt to any Lowe's store. We'll repair it, replace it, or refund your money.

Lowe's Raincheck Policy:

If an advertised item is temporarily out-of-stock, we will gladly issue a raincheck (except for items marked limited quantities, discontinued or closeout). When we restock you will be notified so you can buy at the previously advertised price. Some stores may not stock all advertised items; however, every item shown can be ordered for you.
