ECU Ranks Second In Giving Contributions To School Increase Despite National Slowdown

ECU NEWS BUREAU

East Carolina University ranked second in the nation among 154 public comprehensive universities last year in private financial support of academics, medicine and athletics, a national group reports.

Private contributions totaling $5.9 million represented a 10 percent increase over the previous year, 1986-87, and total giving to ECU also had increased in the two prior years by 5 percent and 19 percent, respectively.

"This counters the reported national trend," said James L. Lanier Jr., ECU vice chancellor for institutional advancement.

The reporting group, the Council for Aid to Education of New York, said overall contributions to the nation's college and universities dropped last year for the first time in 13 years with total giving down nationally by 3.5 percent.

In its report, CFAE ranked the University of Minnesota first among public research-doctoral institutions, Stanford first among private research-doctoral institutions, Loyola Marymount first and Wake Forest second among private comprehensive universities and California State University-San Diego first and East Carolina University second among public comprehensive institutions in total dollar amount of private support.

Lanier said that the national ranking meant that "through the efforts of our volunteers and donors, the university has reached another milestone.

"This type of recognition, based on comparison with similar institutions across the country, is evidence of the level and intensity of commitment that our donors feel for East Carolina University."

Vincent Lowe of Wilson, reporting for the Development Committee of the ECU Board of Trustees, said the CFAE report shows East Carolina University "compares quite favorably to other comprehensive universities across the nation. We ranked second out of 154 universities reporting data last year.

"We have enjoyed a steady growth in recent years," Lowe told the trustees. "Our volunteers and staff members in the three foundations have certainly helped raise the prestige of the university.

"It is nice to be compared in the national press with other second place schools like Harvard, Wake Forest and the University of Wisconsin."

Lowe said the $5.9 million total giving to ECU in 1987-88 included $3,372,556 for academic programs and academic enrichment including scholarships, $1,569,000 to medicine (the ECU School of Medicine) and $1,016,639 to athletics.

Dr. Richard R. Eakin, ECU chancellor, said "we're delighted with the council's report. It confirms what I have felt in my contacts with East Carolina supporters. They possess a fierce loyalty and desire to see us move the institution to higher levels of quality and service."

Eakin expressed appreciation to the staffs of the ECU Foundation, Medical Foundation and the ECU Educational Foundation, board members and other volunteers "for their work in making this possible."

Greenville Snake Goes To Raleigh

By Lane Dunn
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A Greenville resident will donate a successor to George, the 16-foot python that died recently after being on display at the North Carolina Museum of Natural Sciences for 25 years.

Nannse Babcock said today that she will turn her 5-year-old, 15-foot Burmese python, Hapi, over to the Raleigh museum.

Mrs. Babcock said it was the idea of her husband, Richard, to make the presentation. When they heard about the death of George on April 27, Babcock persuaded her to call the museum.

"At first they weren't sure if they wanted her," Mrs. Babcock said. "They said they would have to think about it and they called us back later and said they would take her."

Mrs. Babcock has owned Hapi for five years and she says the two are very close. "She's like a child," she said that she would not try to find another snake like Hapi. "She's irreplaceable," she said.

Mrs. Babcock said she used to carry Hapi to schools and show her to the children. But the snake has grown too large to be handled by one person so she leaves it at home. She said that now the children can see Hapi again, at the museum.

Hapi will be delivered to the museum May 15 so she can get used to the environment before International Museum Day on May 18. The 110-pound snake will be housed in the hexagonal, climate-controlled python cage during Museum Day, an annual event that takes place from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m.

The museum will not call Hapi by her name, according to Mrs. Babcock, since it has a policy against using first names for animals.

After donating Hapi, Mrs. Babcock will have only four snakes left, she said. She lost several snakes and other animals in a fire in December.

Teachers Confer With Legislators

By Cherie Evans
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt County teachers visited committee meetings of the state Legislature and met with area legislators during lobby day activities Tuesday in Raleigh.

An estimated 200 teachers from Pitt and also teachers from Martin and Greene counties traveled to the state capital to lobby legislators for a salary increase this year in the activity sponsored by the Pitt chapter of the North Carolina Association of Educators.

"I was just pleased with the turnout of the Pitt County teachers," said Jackie Wooten, president of District 15 of the NCAE and a teacher at Bethel Elementary School.

"It's been a long time since we've had that kind of support," she said.

Ruby Jackson, president of the Pitt unit of NCAE, said that upon arrival in Raleigh on Tuesday morning some teachers visited the state NCAE center where they were briefed on the various committee meetings scheduled during the day. Others watched members of the Subcommittee on Public Employees discuss the three bills that include a revamped salary schedule for teachers.

Washington Warehouse Destroyed

By Carol Tyer
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Despite the efforts of seven Beaufort County fire departments, Washington's Bright Belt Warehouse burned to the ground Tuesday night and several adjacent structures were damaged.

Capt. Raymond Williams of the Washington Fire Department said the structure at West Fourth Street and Hackney Avenue, often referred to in the Beaufort County town as Sermons Warehouse, was already fully involved in fire when his department arrived at 8:11 p.m.

Williams said more than 100 fire personnel fought the blaze and worked to protect nearby homes and businesses.

Utility lines in the area were damaged, Williams said, and electrical power was interrupted for several hours. Several homes across the street from the warehouse also were "minimally damaged," according to the spokesman.

Williams said that the fire was under control by about midnight, but firefighters stayed on the scene until this morning. Four pumers, one snorkel unit and two rescue vehicles were used, he said. Fire departments taking part other than Washington were Bath, Bunyon, Chocowinity, Clark's Neck, Old Ford and Sydney.

Williams said that while local police and the State Bureau of Investigation are looking into the incident, the probe does not mean that arson is suspected. "Any fire this size calls for a full-scale investigation," he said.

Williams estimated the size of the building at 50,000 square feet.

Pitt Schools Recognize Service By Volunteers

By Cherie Evans
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Approximately 48,000 hours of service to the community and to the schools were recognized Tuesday evening during the Pitt County schools' annual Volunteer Appreciation Reception and Community Schools' Celebration.

More than 100 people gathered in Wahl-Coates School for the event designed to show gratitude to those who volunteer their time and expertise to the schools and to mark the 10th anniversary of the Community Schools program with the theme, "Community plus Schools equals a Decade of Cooperation."

Wearing buttons that featured clasped hands and the slogan, "I make a difference," the honorees were told they truly do make a difference.

Volunteers have four major characteristics, Carol-Ann Tucker, director of the Regional Training Center at East Carolina University, said as the speaker of the event.

First, "you believe in yourself," she said. "You have talents to offer and what makes you so special is because you offer them."

Second, "you give of yourself in many different ways" through time, money and service, Ms. Tucker said.

Third, "you think big and you think positive," she said. "You do have those plans and dreams and schemes. You're giving because you want to, because you do have that love within you."

And fourth, "you believe in tomorrow," Ms. Tucker said. "You realize that every day may not be your best day. Life is a series of peaks and valleys, and not every day is a peak and not every day is a valley."

"With all those things, certainly you count, certainly you make a difference," she said.

Before speaking, Ms. Tucker entertained the group by singing "Sunny Side of the Street," and she concluded by singing the theme song for Senior Games, "It's not where you start, it's where you finish."

Pitt school Superintendent Eddie West expressed gratitude to the volunteers for their interest in the county schools.

"Thank you for coming together as a people united to make programs happen in the Pitt County schools," he said.

West also commended Alice Keene, the coordinator of the Community Schools program.

"Alice started this program 10 years ago," West said. "She practices what she preaches" in volunteering her time.

Pitt's Board of Education chairman, George Williams, saluted the volunteers for their commitment. "You truly make a difference," he said.

Eugene James, chairman of the Pitt County Board of Education and a member of the Community Schools advisory council, said, "This is one program that we never have any problem funding."

He noted how the money that has been allocated by the county commissioners for the Community Schools program had been matched in funds, time and skills.

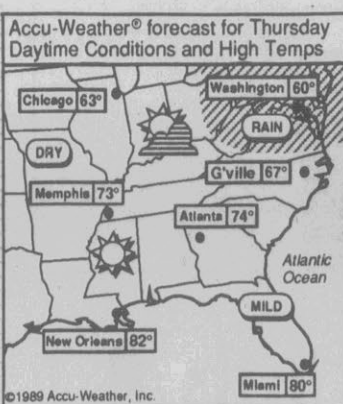

"You show your love for the students, and that's so important," James said.

GUC Cites Savings On Wholesale Costs

By Stuart Savage
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Load management operations by the Greenville Utilities Commission saved $166,252 in wholesale power costs during the month of April, the GUC board was told Tuesday night.

Roger Jones, director of electric systems for the GUC, reported that the commission's load management system was in full operation between 7 a.m. and 8 a.m. on April 12, the time of Carolina Power & Light Company's system peak, and reduced GUC's demand for power by 11.24 megawatts.

Jones' report said $82,824 of the savings resulted from radio controlled Beat-the-Peak switches on water heaters, while $72,323 in billing reductions resulted from voltage adjustments. Operation of generators at GUC's water treatment plant, Procter & Gamble Paper Products and at Fred Webb Inc. grain elevator accounted for another $8,813 in savings.

Since January 1985, GUC's load management program has saved more than $7.2 million in wholesale power costs that otherwise would have been passed on to electric customers.

The GUC also saved $11,916 in wholesale costs by purchasing wellhead natural gas during the month of March, Jim Anderson, director of the commission's gas system, reported.

The commission began purchasing wellhead gas — when available — a year ago. Anderson said the 11,261 decatherms purchased in March illustrates the savings that can result.

RALEIGH (AP) — One third of North Carolina's largest surface drinking-water systems are tainted with toxic pollutants that the state doesn't regulate, a public-interest environmental group said.

The Clean Water Fund of North Carolina Inc. said Tuesday that 26 of the state's 79 largest public-water systems contain some of 20 chemicals that the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency lists as priority pollutants.

State officials said the levels of most pollutants do not appear to pose an imminent threat.

manager, reported that the commission, which recently began a program to provide street lighting service to non-annexed residential developments, will now offer a more decorative lighting fixture for installation in annexed and non-annexed subdivisions.

The alternate fixture — a post top "lantern look" fixture mounted on a black fiberglass pole — will be available to developers who wish to pay the additional $309 per fixture cost, Green said.

According to Green, two developers that had planned to install their own fixtures have already ordered 45 of the new fixtures from GUC.

In other business, the board awarded bids to: E&R Inc. for $99,050 to install underground electric cable throughout the GUC system; HESCO Inc. for $10,672 for one padmount transformer; National Transformer Sales Inc. for $43,500 for 100 distribution transformers, and to Westinghouse Electric Supply Co. for $11,770 for two padmount transformers.

Airport Board Rejects Bid Increase By Architects On Terminal Project

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Pitt-Greenville Airport Authority has rejected a billing increase from the architectural firm handling the airport's terminal expansion project.

At its regular monthly meeting Tuesday, the board voted unanimously to limit the construction administration fee paid to the LPA Group Inc. to $31,786, which is the fee estimate the authority had been given months ago, airport Manager Jim Turcotte said. It is also the fee on which the authority based its grant request to the Federal Aviation Administration, he said.

Architects planning the airport's new $1.3 million terminal building notified Turcotte on Monday that the projected fee had been increased about 10 percent, to $34,927.

But several board members said they were concerned that the architects could arbitrarily raise the fee, and the authority will have no idea of the final cost. All other contractors involved in the expansion project have some type of set fee or ceiling to their fee, board members said, and the architects should have the same restrictions.

"They should give us a flat fee for what they are going to do the work for. They have been milking this thing ...," board member Jack Farrior said. "We are requiring every other contractor to do that (present a set fee), and they should have to do it also."

Although the $31,786 fee had been budgeted throughout the design process, architects noted in the budget that construction administration fees are only estimates. The actual fee will depend on how many hours the architects work. The authority will receive a monthly bill for the services; the fee presented Monday is an estimate of what the total cost will be. Monday's notice also said fees are still subject to change.

The authority understood that the figures presented were estimates, Turcotte said, and the 10 percent increase was not unexpected. But the board was wary to approve it because there is no limit set as to how high the cost may eventually rise.

"The board came back and said we want a ceiling. We want to know this is a limit," Turcotte said. "I think (the authority members) want to ... know where they stand, and they're very prudent with the funding they've received. We're not going to give anybody a carte blanche."

Turcotte said he planned to contact the architects today to inform them of the board's decision. If an LPA Group representative attends an authority meeting and provides detailed justification for the projected fee increase, the board would probably approve the measure, Turcotte said.

Also, the FAA must approve any fee. Even if the board had approved the increase Tuesday, it would have been contingent upon federal approval, Turcotte said.

The LPA Group Inc. is an architectural firm based in Columbia, S.C., with an office in Raleigh. Architects from the firm have designed the terminal expansion project, which will add a departure lounge, ticket offices and a new baggage claim area. It will more than double the size of the existing terminal.

Construction could begin as early as next week, Turcotte said. The authority has scheduled a groundbreaking ceremony for May 19 at 10:15 a.m.

Construction administration services include all basic functions performed after the awarding of the contracts. This includes advising the authority, representing the authority at preconstruction conferences, periodic inspections and reports, preparing and negotiating change orders and determining the amount owed to contractors.

The FAA has granted $822,230 for the expansion project, and the Pitt County Board of Commissioners and the authority have approved the grant offer. The Greenville City Council is scheduled to address the issue Thursday. State and local governments have granted nearly $500,000 for the project.

Program Set For Caregivers

ECU NEWS BUREAU

Responsibility for the care of frail parents and other relatives often rests on the shoulders of younger family members, and is sometimes undertaken without advance preparation.

A special day-long program Saturday at the Creative Living Center will teach family caregivers more about how to care for their loved ones. The program, which begins at 9 a.m., will include a film depicting four common circumstances surrounding the care of the elderly and workshops on an array of topics such as understanding the normal aging process and diseases common in the elderly.

"The day-to-day care of a patient is quite a responsibility," said Connie Kuenzi, director of the Creative Living Center, a supervised day care center for the elderly. "Caregivers can often feel unsure. Our program's aim is to help them feel more confident about their responsibility by teaching them about normal aging and signs of diseases such as Alzheimer's Disease, in addition to tips on how to properly handle and transfer patients.

According to Ms. Kuenzi, many people are unaware of the various community agencies that provide services for geriatric patients. The program will also cover topics such as will preparation, procedures for nursing home placement, and Medicare and Medicaid assistance.

Program speakers will be Dr. Frank Hargett, ECU School of Medicine's Department of Family Medicine; Jane Wilson, a nurse at Pitt County Memorial Hospital; Susan Redding, a nurse at the Creative Living Center; Margy Maira, a physical therapist, and Dr. Kathryn Kolasa, a nutritionist at the ECU School of Medicine; Wanda Naylor, a Greenville attorney; Sandra Gaskins, a medicare representative at the Social Security Administration; Marsha Edwards, social worker at Pitt County Department of Social Services; Freda Cross, social worker at Pitt County Memorial Hospital; Frances Wadsworth, social worker at the Creative Living Center, and Terry Fuller, a representative for Greenville Villa, an area nursing home.

Small Airports

Commuters Now Connect To The World

Small city airports were once considered dinosaurs — doomed by the age of jet aircraft which would require large airports and relatively long flights to be profitable.

Residents of communities such as Greenville, Rocky Mount, Wilson and New Bern faced the prospect of driving to large regional airports where the jets would provide centralized service.

Indeed, a Greenville-Pitt County sponsored movement to establish a regional airport — Toddy was the potential site — came within a hair of receiving Civil Aeronautics Board approval.

The picture changed, however, with air service deregulation and the establishment of the hub system of air service at selected major airports.

The hubs, operated by major airlines, call for jet flights in close proximity meeting at certain airports and fanning out to new destinations with the passengers who have collected there.

Piedmont operates a hub at Charlotte and American Airlines has a hub at Raleigh-Durham.

That system gave a tremendous boost to the commuter airlines because the passengers had to have means of getting to the hubs. Thus air service was rejuvenated at Pitt-Greenville, Rocky Mount-Wilson, New Bern and other locations.

The commuters, which are affiliated with major airlines or owned by them, provide service into the major hubs. From Pitt-Greenville the flights go daily to Charlotte and Raleigh-Durham. From there a change can take passengers to locations throughout the nation, and also to international destinations such as London and Paris.

It has meant that development representatives for smaller cities and counties can now say they have convenient air service. Sometimes it is even more convenient than traveling by vehicle to the major airports since passengers and baggage are checked in at the smaller airports.

The success stories abound for the smaller airports. At Pitt-Greenville work is set to begin on a major terminal expansion to handle the growing passenger load.

Local air service is providing more convenient travel for area residents. It is, as much as anything, responsible for economic development in the east since industries and businesses must have dependable air travel wherever they locate.

Obviously local airports will be striving for better facilities and dependable air service. Without that the communities will lose an important competitive edge.

Lessons From The Thatcher Decade

LONDON — A reporter arriving in Britain last week found himself in the midst of a ceremony the likes of which the United States has seen only once — and probably never again: the 10th anniversary of the election of the head of government.

A proper anniversary celebration involves lots of music, parades and fireworks. Mrs. T. apparently wanted none of those. Instead, the Brits were drowned in a torrent of commentary and polls measuring their reaction to every aspect of Thatcherism. As The Guardian newspaper rather churlishly remarked, "Forests have died, these past few weeks, to make the Thatcher Decade possible."

I am too recently arrived on these shores to venture an opinion on how Thatcher has done, but two things are evident. One is that she dominates this nation's politics and consciousness in a way that not even the strongest American President can hope to do at home. And the other is that, long as she has been in control and much as she has changed things, there has been no "conservative revolution" in British thinking.

Those two facts, in conjunction, serve as a warning to students of

David Broder

American politics of how difficult it is to wrench a society out of its ingrained ways. Political realignments just don't come easily, even when a leader as forceful as Margaret Thatcher is in power as long as she has been.

The journalistic consensus is that Thatcher has energized the British economy, shaken up somnolent private and public bureaucracies and asserted Britain's voice in world affairs in a striking fashion. She has done so, despite the fact that her party received only 43 percent of the vote in the last two elections, by exploiting the weakness of a divided political opposition and the power an assertive leader can exercise over the Cabinet and the rank-and-file legislators of her party in a parliamentary system.

A theme of this past week's punditry is that she may be riding for a fall. A Labor victory in a parliamentary by-election in Wales sent opposition hopes soaring and unleashed new mutterings from Thatcher's intra-party critics that she is pushing things too far, too fast.

But she has heard this talk before, has ignored it and has gone on to see her political judgment vindicated. Coming from a Washington where President Bush has only a modest program in mind and must compromise almost every point to get it past Congress, Thatcher seems the embodiment of strength and purposefulness.

But the clear message of the surveys marking her anniversary is that the people she rules are not yet ruled by the ideas that guide her. Nor do her constituents feel that she has made Britain a "kinder, gentler" nation.

Basic economic measures, such as the return of many state-owned enterprises to private ownership and the shift from income taxes to consumption taxes, are disapproved by the majority — even though the pundits describe them as policies any future government might find it hard to reverse.

A MORI poll for The Independent newspaper gave further evidence that the egalitarian strain she despises has survived the Thatcher years. Of a dozen liberal and conservative policy statements tested, the highest agreement, over 70 percent, came on the propositions that "trade unions are essential to protect workers' interests" and "I personally would be willing to pay more in tax in order to pay for better public services, such as hospitals and schools."

By a 5-3 margin, these voters said Britain under Thatcher "is heading in the wrong direction and major changes are needed." Ten years after she came to power, her Conservative Party is still regarded as "my party" by only one-third of the electorate — the same as in 1979.

That she could have done so much, while underlying social attitudes remained so unchanged, is both a tribute to her and a caution to those who talk glibly of "revolutions" engineered by the durable politicians of this decade, whether named Thatcher or Ronald Reagan.

Mars: The Last Epochal Triumph

Paul Akers

Despite the past week's good news — the launch of the Magellan Venus probe and the successful completion of the latest space shuttle mission — America has let things get to the point where only a heroic effort, a mighty mustering of popular and political resolve, will permit it to be first on the planet Mars. The Soviets are solidly on track for a manned mission to Mars shortly after the year 2000.

Before malfunctioning in late March, the Soviet Union's Phobos 2 probe closely surveyed the Martian surface, seeking a landing site for a Mars expedition. Through 1998 Moscow plans to launch four more robot scouting missions to Mars of increasing sophistication.

A manned Mars spacecraft — laden with fuel, equipment, eight to 10 crew members and their sustenance for a 20-month journey — would need to be assembled in low-Earth orbit (boosting such a colossus from Earth's surface would require a lake of propellant). The Soviets already have potential spaceship "factories" in their Salyut and Mir space stations. Aboard these satellites cosmonauts have lived and worked for up to 12 straight months, solving many of the physical and emotional problems that would confront Mars-bound humans. Some technologies must be refined before the Russians are off to Mars, but there are no more stumblers. Meanwhile, the United States has launched no Mars probes since Vikings 1 and 2 in 1975. (A modest climate surveyor is slated for 1993 liftoff.) Funded in dribs and drabs, NASA sputters along with no heroic purposes, but continues to send aloft space shuttles on esoteric missions that excite the public only when they go awry. Now the Congressional Budget Office advocates scrapping plans for the long overdue U.S. manned space station. Truly, as The New Republic notes, America is lost in space.

Why should America race the Russians to Mars? NASA mission controller James E. Oberg has identified three great space "firsts" — a manned lunar landing, a manned landing on another planet and a manned landing on a planet in another solar system. Apollo 11 took care of number one. As for number three, astronauts have positively found no other planetary stars in the Milky Way, and the next nearest galaxy, Andromeda, lies 2 million light years away.

The upshot is that sending a human to Mars will be the last great space milestone of this and countless generations to come. Will we simply concede this epochal triumph to the Soviets?

America should vie for the Martian prize for other reasons:

1) Americans live in a historically great nation. When not engaged in large enterprises, however, Americans, a diverse people, tend to dwell on and enlarge their differences. The Apollo program was the last of these "great enterprises." Neil Armstrong's boots sank into moon dust in 1969, near the peak of the Vietnam War. Riven by the war and other issues, Americans nonetheless paused a moment to acknowledge their transcendent national achievement.

2) If scientific education were a beach, American school children would be its 98-pound weaklings. A recent National Science Foundation-Department of Education survey of science and math skills revealed that U.S. kids trail not only the Japanese but also their peers in South Korea, Spain, Ireland and French Canada. Such findings are dismally familiar. A national crusade to be first on Mars could inspire youngsters and young teachers already enchanted by Luke Skywalker and the Enterprise crew to excel in the hard subjects that would put them or their children into space.

3) Last summer, four U.S. scientists, including ex-astronaut Brian T. O'Leary, released amazing computer-enhanced photographs shot in 1976 by Viking 1. The photos show, rising from Mars' cratered Cydonia region, what soberly can be construed as the architecture of a long-dead civilization: a five-sided pyramid, a rocky fortress, and, most astonishing, a giant humanlike face complete with brow, eye socket, nose and mouth. Suddenly, many people's long love affair with the idea of life on Mars (even if that life were eons extinct) flamed anew.

Until now Mars has been a tease. The "canals" viewed by 19th century astronomers, thought to be Martian-made waterways, turned out to be chance geological formations. Even the oxygen coaxed from Martian soil in Viking lander experiments, most scientists now think, came from inorganic chemical reactions — not biological ones. We haven't even found microbes, much less men, on Mars. Yet the Cydonia photos send the imagination bubbling.

The chief objection to a solo U.S. program to put people on Mars first is expense. But as a percentage of gross national product, Oberg says, a Mars expedition would be 0.6 percent, compared to 2.8 percent for Apollo. Going to Mars would be cheaper in real terms than the old lunar program because most of the necessary hardware has been developed under other space programs. Moreover, if America's federal deficit is more than twice that of the Soviet Union, so is our GNP.

Nor is it sensible to avoid the grand challenges while awaiting the advent of the perfect economy. Reeling from the Great Depression, America after Pearl Harbor fought and won a global war. FDR did not say that defeating Hitler and Tojo was not in his budget. The war actually rejuvenated the U.S. economy. A strong space program, spearheaded by a manned Mars flight, might be comparable healing.

A Dead Giveaway

Art Buchwald

Not one but two juries brought in a verdict on Ollie North last week. One was composed of 12 men and women in Judge Gesell's courtroom. The other consisted of millions of people sequestered in their living rooms, who judged Col. North based on what they saw and heard in a tough TV docudrama called "Guts and Glory."

"I don't know how Gesell's jury reached its decision — but this is how I reached mine. Like most Americans, I assumed that everything depicted in the docudrama was factual. I was all set to buy the whole package, until the second episode when I saw a scene that I couldn't believe. Ollie parked his car on Pennsylvania Avenue in front of the White House — locked it, walked into the Executive Office Building and left the car there all day.

"No way," I yelled at my wife. "I don't care how much national security was involved, Ollie could never have had permission to park in front of 1600 Pennsylvania Ave."

"Docudrama people don't make things up. Maybe Bill Casey told him to leave his car there," my wife suggested.

"Not Bill Casey," I told her. "He was no fool. If Ollie had left his automobile in that location in real life, they'd have towed it away, and then everyone in the D.C. impoundment lot would have known about the arms swap in Iran."

My wife, who has read up on every aspect of Irangate, said, "Suppose that Casey told Ollie it was OK for him to park in front of the White House, but if the cops caught him, he'd be the fall guy and be forced to take the hit."

"It's possible," I admitted. "However, in order for Ollie to use the parking spot, a lot more people must have been in on it. For example, if North got a ticket, wouldn't Gen. Secord have paid it?"

"Not necessarily. If Ollie was caught, he could say that he knew leaving his car in a No Parking space was wrong, but he didn't know it was illegal."

I added, "There is another scenario. Instead of Ollie showing up in traffic court, he could have given the parking ticket to Fawn Hall and told her to shred it. Fawn admitted that she'd do anything for him."

"I don't like the way Fawn keeps touching Ollie all the time in the miniseries," my wife said.

"Neither do I," I agreed. "On the other hand, you can't have someone like Fawn in the movie and have her do (ital) nothing (unital)."

"If we accept the basic premise of the docudrama, who else besides Casey, Poindexter, McFarlane and Fawn knew that Ollie illegally parked his car in front of the White House?"

"George Bush," I told her. "How did he know?"

"Bush's main task as vice president was to keep track of everything that happened on Pennsylvania Avenue."

"Did President Reagan know?" she asked.

"I'm sure he did, but he had to say that he would never approve of any illegal parking unless the driver was delivering dresses to Nancy in the White House."

Scientists' Response To Cold Fusion Reaction Is Cooling

Thomas Maugh II

On March 23, two elated chemists — B. Stanley Pons and Martin Fleischmann — stood before reporters at a Salt Lake City news conference, proudly explaining how their discovery of nuclear fusion in a flask would lead to a worldwide abundance of cheap, clean energy. Afterward, they autographed press releases for colleagues and showed off their suddenly famous laboratory to visiting members of the news media.

That was less than seven weeks ago. On Monday night, a starkly contrasting scene unfolded as the two mumbled through presentations before a throng of fellow chemists at the Bonaventure Hotel in Los Angeles, ducked sharp questions and then slipped quickly away after failing to defend their supposed breakthrough.

The Pons-Fleischmann saga is beginning to raise troubling questions about the lure of patents and prizes in scientific discovery, about institutional and governmental pressures to attract recognition and money, and about the adverse effects of competition on scientific credibility.

Suddenly, there is no more talk of a Nobel Prize. The two chemists are besieged by critics. They are castigated for their inability to explain their experiment, their failure to disclose full details of the research and their decision to circumvent the normal rules of science by announcing their results in a press conference before reporting them at a meeting or publishing them in a scientific journal.

"I guess we've all been guilty of eagerness," James J. Brophy, the university's vice president for research and development, conceded Tuesday.

Meanwhile, people around the world, tantalized by the idea of an energy miracle, are left wondering: Is fusion in a flask real or simply the delusion of two scientists carried away by their own misguided enthusiasm?

If the Utah researchers have not found cold fusion, what have they found? One possibility is a previously undiscerned chemical reaction. If that is the case, they may have found a new way to make batteries, but no solution to energy problems.

The other, most likely possibility is that they simply made a mistake.

The final answer may not come for weeks or months, until Pons and Fleischmann have had more time to refine their experiments and share their data with other researchers.

One hope for resolving the quandary is a joint project with the Los Alamos National Laboratory. Two weeks ago, Pons said that a fusion flask would be set up in Salt Lake City in cooperation with Los Alamos researchers, and then moved to Los Alamos where researchers can use sophisticated equipment to look for signs of a nuclear reaction.

Pons said Monday, however, that the project could not be started until necessary paper work had been completed.

Meanwhile, the governor of Utah has created a nine-member panel that will oversee a $5 million fund for fusion research created by the state Legislature. Those funds cannot be disbursed until Pons and Fleischmann's claims have been corroborated. The University of Utah's Brophy said Tuesday that the panel would be given access to all of the researchers' data — the first time that anyone outside the university will have seen it.

It is hoped the panel will complete its evaluation before within two weeks.

Pons and Fleischmann's apparatus is simple, small palladium and platinum electrodes immersed in heavy water — water in which each of the hydrogen atoms has an extra neutron. Applying a small voltage to the electrodes, they said, creates an electric field that forces high concentrations of deuterium ions into the palladium electrode. At those high concentrations, the deuterium ions fuse to form helium, releasing large quantities of energy.

They convinced themselves that their apparatus was producing more energy than they were putting into it and that they were observing radioactive debris in the reaction vessel that could only have arisen from a nuclear fusion reaction.

The pair spent 5½ years and $100,000 of their own money researching the phenomenon.

Earlier this year, they found out that physicist Steven Jones of Brigham Young University in Provo and his colleagues were working on the same technique. Jones was also seeing radioactive debris, but he did not observe significant heat production and did not believe that the process could be used for large-scale energy production.

The two groups met early in March and ultimately agreed to publish their findings simultaneously. Pons and Fleischmann said that it would take them another 18 months before they were ready to publish, but Jones objected that an abstract of his work was already being circulated among scientists and he planned to present the results soon.

It was agreed that the two groups would each submit a paper to the British journal Nature March 24. But without warning Jones, Pons and Fleischmann announced their findings on March 23, simultaneously filing patent applications. Jones' paper was published two weeks ago; Pons and Fleischmann withdrew theirs when the journal asked for more experimental details.

They did write a brief explanation of their results, which appeared in a Dutch journal, and they gave cursory descriptions at a meeting of the American Chemical Society and other meetings. But most of their experimental details remained obscure.

Many researchers, already angered by the lack of detail, were further incensed two weeks ago when the pair, accompanied by university officials, went before a U.S. Senate committee to ask for $25 million for a fusion research center in Salt Lake City. That money would join the $5 million already appropriated by the Utah Legislature and an additional $70 million the University of Utah hoped to raise from industry.

A Problem With Counting

Theo Lippman Jr.

Jimmy Carter went to Panama to watch for voting fraud. On election day, he said of the voting, "It's OK. It's the counting that's the problem."

Right. Some votes that are legitimately cast don't get counted. Some votes that aren't actually cast do get counted.

That's the way it is in banana republics.

Take Georgia. When Carter ran for the state senate there in 1962, he lost by 139 votes out of about 6,000 cast. But the results from one precinct Carter lost looked suspicious. He got a newspaper to list the names of voters at that precinct — many of whom claimed they never voted at all. When the ballot box was opened in court, the ballots were missing. So a judge threw the results there out and Carter won by 85 votes.

The rest is history. He may never have become president if the phony counters had their way. You can only say "may" because:

Take Texas. A politician there lost an election to ballot box stuffers and later became president. Lyndon Johnson ran for the U.S. Senate in 1941. He apparently won by about 5,000 votes, but then "late returns" from his opponent's stronghold came in. They were wholly illogical in numbers and distribution — but they counted. LBJ lost.

He ran again in 1948. This time he won, by 87 votes out of nearly a million cast, after his "late returns," notably a precinct which he won 202-1, came in.

Take the United States. Richard Nixon overcame losing a presidential election by vote fraud and later became president. Or so he and his supporters believe.

He lost the 1960 election to John Kennedy, 303-219 electoral votes. He lost Texas by 46,000 votes out of more than 2 million cast, and he lost

Illinois by 9,000 out of more than 4.5 million. In rural Texas and Chicago there were Democratic precincts in which many more votes were counted than there were registered voters. Had Nixon carried those two states the electoral outcome would have been Nixon 270, Kennedy 252.

(Nixon may not have won that year even if that fraud had been exposed. There may have been off-setting Republican fraud, as Democrats claimed but did not bother to document because they won.)

Last Sunday, a Panamanian opponent of the regime went to the polls only to find that she was not registered, but many of her dead relatives were. She couldn't vote, but they could. Probably did.

TEEN POWER STRUGGLES
Establishing individual autonomy is the major theme of the teenage years. This commonly puts adolescents in conflict with parents and other authority figures in their lives. The pressures this kind of growth puts on a family can feel unbearable. As parents try to reassert their own control, the situation escalates until the original issues get lost and all parties slide into a hopeless battle.

At this point both parties are covering over their feelings of helplessness with increasingly rigid positions, thus producing an impasse in which the stakes can be high. The earlier you can establish a desire for understanding and compromise, the less desperate the struggle will be.

Many parents have found consultation with an experienced marriage and family counselor helpful in talking about fears, clarifying expectations, and reestablishing a working dialogue among family members. Generally, all parties are fearful of letting things go too far, and this provides a common basis for working together.

Chapter Awarded

The East Carolina University student chapter of the American Marketing Association is the recipient of a national award for outstanding programming of chapter activities.

The American Marketing Association presented its National Activities Award to the ECU chapter at the 11th Annual Collegiate AMA Conference held recently in New Orleans. The award is based on competitive judging of the chapter's performance.

Dr. Sid C. Dudley, a professor of marketing in the School of Business and the faculty advisor to the student AMA chapter, said ECU was one of 41 collegiate student chapters receiving the award. There are 350 colleges with AMA chapters in the U.S.

For the competition, Dudley said AMA chapters submitted a written plan of action last fall and compiled a follow-up report this spring. Independent judges evaluated the collegiate chapters and their performance based on the submitted reports.

"This award brings national recognition to ECU's School of Business and it attests to the professionalism of our AMA members," Dudley said.

In addition to the Activities Award, the ECU chapter also received Efficiency and Achievement Awards recognizing the planning and administration of its activities.

Council Meets Thursday

Two separate orders to demolish two houses within the city limits will be among the items considered by the Greenville City Council at its monthly meeting Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the council chambers of City Hall.

The council will consider whether the two structures, at 436 W. Third St. and at 1022 Fleming St., should be destroyed as being dangerous to the public health and safety of the city.

City Attorney Mac McCarley said if the council approves the demolition orders, it would be the first time the city has used the broad health and safety nuisance statute to order the demolition of a house.

"State law allows the council to remedy serious health and safety problems inside the city limits," McCarley said. "The staff is proposing that the City Council use that authority to demolish these two houses. We have exhausted all the other dilapidated housing remedies and have not solved the problem at these two locations."

In a report of findings and recommendations, Chief Building Inspector Jim Kaufman documented that the house at 436 W. Third St. has a roof that is weak and dangerous, floors that are rotted and weak, and that area residents have been entering the building and removing lumber and firewood, exposing themselves to serious injury in the event of collapse.

Kaufman reported the interior ceilings of the house at 1022 Fleming St. are cracking and falling out, 90 percent of the windows are cracked, broken or missing and the complete structure is deteriorated.

Kaufman also said empty beer and wine bottles provide evidence that the house serves as a gathering place for street people and that several fires, apparently caused by vagrants, have occurred at the site during the past several years.

Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce Salutes Small Business Week May 8th - May 13th, 1989

Business of Small Entrepreneurs
 "A Management Assistance Program for Chamber Members"

"SMALL BUSINESS LEADERS OF THE YEAR TO BE ANNOUNCED"

The Chamber's Outstanding Small Business Leaders of the Year Award is presented each year to five small business leaders and a Pitt County Small Business Leader (selected from these five) who have met the following criteria for nomination:
 • Owner, partner or major shareholder of the business and active in its day-to-day management;
 • Established locally in the same business for at least three years;
 • Grossing less than $5 million annual revenue for all business enterprises;
 • Participates in community affairs and activities contributing his/her personal resources, time and efforts;
 • Practicing exemplary business conduct, including the use of quality products and/or services; and
 • The business shall not employ more than 100 persons (full-time).

The five area small business leaders to be recognized at the Small Business Awards Banquet on Wednesday, May 10 - 6:30 p.m. at the Ramada Inn are: Ayden - Marvin Hathaway (Prime Printers); Bethel - Harvey R. Lewis (E. R. Lewis Construction Co.); Farmville - Joe Kue (Kue's Pharmacy); Greenville - Edgar Murphrey, Jr. (CopyPro, Inc.); and Grifton - Don Casey, Jr. (Grifton Plumbing & Heating, Inc./ACE Hardware). The Pitt County leader to be announced at the banquet is Jack Edwards, Les Garner, Parker Overton, Durward Harris, Ross Persinger, Ramon Latham, Eli Joyner, Ric Miller and Ed Casey. Eli Joyner was named the first Pitt County Small Business Leader of the Year.
 Another highlight of the small business banquet is the recognition for Half Century Club members. Thirty-two businesses from throughout Pitt County will be recognized for being in business for fifty years or longer.

Small Business Is America's Future.

"What is a Small Business?"

Volunteers have learned it is about as difficult to define small business as it is to meet any of the other challenges they have faced in establishing the Chamber's Small Business Program for Smaller Entrepreneurs. While federal guidelines sometimes define small businesses as any firm with fewer than 500 employees and/or less than $100 million per year in sales, it is obvious that Pitt County's needs for specific programming are in areas far smaller than those definitions recognized by Washington, D.C.'s bureaucracy.

On the other hand, the Chamber of Commerce feels Pitt County boasts many small businesses, ranging from "mom and pop" operations on up, which make a significant contribution not only to the community, but to the entire commonwealth. The Small Business Council has initially used 100 employees as the base for its initial programming, including the Small Business of the Year Awards competition and its new BOSE Program (20 employees or less), which will provide ongoing review of the small business issues as its programs and activities expand.

In its preliminary investigation of how the Chamber might better serve its members, it has been clear that the biggest challenge facing smaller businesses, regardless of their size, is a lack of that all-important commodity-time. Companies without staff positions specifically assigned to areas such as personnel, purchasing, advertising and marketing, computers and long-range planning are the very firms the Small Business Council wants to serve, whether they have two employees or twenty or one hundred.

Recognizing that many small businesses require virtual full-time participation by the owner, Chamber programs like business improvement seminars have been scheduled in the early morning so that businesses might be able to participate. The Chamber also recognizes that time to participate in programs is very limited and, in response, its communications efforts are being expanded.

Another program that is provided by the Small Business Council is the "Small Business Hotline" which provides the small business owner a confidential consultation, up to thirty minutes with each type of resource, free of charge.

For additional information on any of the Chamber's small business programs, contact staff manager Gary Clay at 752-4101 or the Small Business Hotline - 752-1000.

A PROCLAMATION BY THE CHAIRMAN OF THE PITT COUNTY BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS

WHEREAS, the character and greatness of our county rest in great part on freedom of choice and competition - the basic elements of our free enterprise system. Americans have always been an ingenious and courageous people who accept the challenges of competition and cling tenaciously to their independence, and

WHEREAS, the small business men and women of Pitt County work hard to retain that independence and are rewarded with success and pride in ownership. It is their dedication and their efforts in the marketplace which provide us with a healthy, vital economy, free of excessive government intervention, and

WHEREAS, our small business men and women also ensure that quality goods are provided to meet consumer needs. Providing quality goods for consumers strengthens confidence in the marketplace and preserves consumer initiative and freedom of choice within the economic system.

NOW, THEREFORE, I, EUGENE JAMES, Chairman of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners, do hereby proclaim the week of May 8 through May 13, 1989, as "Small Business Week" in Pitt County, and urge all our citizens to recognize and commend the efforts of our small business men and women in preserving the freedom, initiative, and stability of our economy.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the Seal of the County of Pitt this first day of May in the year nineteen hundred and eighty-nine.

"CHAMBER ESTABLISHES PROGRAM FOR SMALL ENTREPRENEURS"

Small businesses, with 20 or fewer employees, represent 80 percent of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce membership; therefore, the Small Business Council of the Chamber is increasing concentration on small businesses in what Vice-Chairman of the Small Business Council, Gene Brown, calls "a much needed step that will serve our entire membership well". Brown notes that the PGCC's broadened focus, as highlighted in the recent establishment of the BOSE (Business of Small Entrepreneurs) Program, serves a large population of the Chamber as well as the community. "Pitt County is only as strong as its smaller businesses," Brown said.

The organization of the Chamber's smaller member firms into BOSE was inaugurated in April. "After looking at literally hundreds of small business programs," points out Chamber staff manager, Gary Clay, "we selected the BOSE format in which an 'organization within an organization' allows us to use the strengths and resources of the Chamber, while also concentrating our efforts on those members who either are small businesses themselves or who work closely with small businesses."

The BOSE program, at least for the time being, determined that firms with 20 or fewer employees can best be banded together for the purposes of this new Chamber interest group.

What is BOSE? It is a program that offers small business owners or managers an opportunity to exchange ideas and solve problems. This structured form of Networking is an effective way of analyzing your business and obtaining ideas for your business more efficiently and profitably.

This program provides an opportunity to network with a diversity of small business people and to share their challenges and successes. BOSE will allow small business owners to build new customer relationships and broaden their management skills through topics shared by experts on issues such as Improving Customer Service or How to Keep Your Clients Coming Back; Hiring Right - Firing Right; How to get Low Cost - No Cost - Advertising; Essentials of Successful Marketing; Cash Flow Management; Developing Your Executive Leadership; IRS Section 891, or many other topics. BOSE provides a means whereby the advice and counsel of small business people can be exchanged and information needed can be obtained.

BOSE members meet for a buffet breakfast meeting on the second Wednesday of each month at 7:02 a.m. at the Holiday Inn. How can I be a part of the Chamber's new, exciting program - BOSE? Contact Gary Clay at 752-4101.

It's a fact....

small businesses are the backbone of North Carolina's economy!

- There are more than 126,900 small businesses in North Carolina!
- More than 97 percent of all North Carolina businesses employ less than 100 people!
- More than 80 percent employ 20 workers or less!
- By the year 2000, small businesses are expected to generate an additional 900,000 jobs in North Carolina!

The Small Business Center at Pitt Community College and the PGCC is designed to respond to the training needs of the area's small business owners, managers, personnel, and others in business as well as those who plan to start a small business.

Coastal Delegation Calls For Action To Halt Pollution

By Dennis Patterson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A legislator from the North Carolina coast says he thought 1989 would be the year for environmental legislation, but it has not worked out that way.

"Everybody who was running for office last year was an environmentalist," said Rep. Bruce Etheridge, D-Onslow.

But when bills produced by a study commission began to be considered, "Lo and behold, these environmentalists started talking about how they would shut down development in their districts" Etheridge told a crowd of about 100 people gathered at the Legislative Building for Coastal Awareness Day.

Sen. Bill Barker, D-Pamlico, said he was introducing a bill that would set up a study commission on economic incentives to save wetlands and bar corporate draining of swamps and saltwater marshes until the study was completed. A second bill would put an excise tax on discharge dumped into the sounds and use the revenues to clean up coastal waters.

"We will take money from polluters and use it to clean up pollution," Barker said. "I don't know what could be fairer than that."

Derb Carter, a lobbyist for the Coastal Federation, said there was "a rising tide of public concern about our delicate coastal region, and today that tide has reached Raleigh."

Carter outlined concerns about waterfowl populations, dioxin, crab diseases, fish kills and severe decreases in fish landings this decade.

"If action isn't taken, and taken soon, I believe we may be witnessing the dismantling of the goose that laid the golden egg," Carter said.

Onslow County shell fisherman Lena Ritter told the group she brought a bright yellow pollution sign used to close shellfish beds to Raleigh so legislators "could see what is decorating our wetlands and sounds."

"Enough is enough," said Ms. Ritter, who led the successful battle to limit development on Permuda Island in Stump Sound. "It's time to do something."

"I am ashamed my generation has sat on our butts and let this happen," she told the crowd. "They've bargained away our precious resources for money, greed. It's your heritage as well as mine that has been bargained away."

Etheridge urged the crowd to lobby their legislators to support two bills before the Legislature. One bill would change appointments to the Coastal Resources Commission to curtail the influence of developers, and the other would create areas of "environmental concern" around the state's most pristine coastal waters.

Both measures were later approved by the House, with the bill banning people who work in the development, real estate or construction industries from certain slots on the 15-member Coastal Resources Commission drew the most debate.

Etheridge told House members that measure would keep those with development interests from filling positions set aside for local government, sports fishing interests and commercial fishing interests.

The bill won tentative approval on a 71-32 vote and final approval on a split voice vote.

House Turns Back Jones Effort To Limit Lobbying

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A bill that would have required state lawmakers to wait two years after leaving office before becoming paid lobbyists was defeated after critics said it unfairly implied that lawmakers are improperly influenced by ex-colleagues who become lobbyists.

"I don't know what we're trying to achieve by this bill," said Rep. George Miller, D-Durham. "I think it's demeaning to say that we have to have a fence built around us."

The state House voted 56-45 on Tuesday to kill the measure.

The measure was sponsored by Rep. Walter Jones, D-Pitt, who said the bill is needed to bolster public confidence in the Legislature at a time of widespread allegations of ethical abuses on the federal level.

"This bill is not intended to point to anyone or anything that has happened in the past," he said. "It's extremely important that we should be allowed to set standards that maybe will help to reinforce the public's support of its elected officials."

Five other states require similar "cooling-off periods" for their legislators-turned-lobbyists, he said.

The bill would have taken effect in 1991, exempting the current General Assembly, a provision Jones described as a concession to generate support.

The fact that so many of the most successful lobbyists in Raleigh are former legislators might lead some citizens to suspect that special interests represented by those lobbyists get special consideration, he said.

"We all know that we build friendships down here," Jones said.

"Someone that's had the privilege to serve here is going to have a little more influence than someone that doesn't."

The two-year interval would require that at least one election take place between the time a lawmaker leaves the General Assembly and the beginning of his lobbying career, which offers the opportunity for turnover, he said.

Although the bill failed by only 11 votes, no one spoke in its behalf except Jones. Opponents were more vocal.

Rep. Vernon Abernethy, R-Gaston, said the measure would give the current lobbying corps an unfair advantage by reducing the number of potential competitors.

Calling out the names of some of the better-known lobbyists who are former legislators, he said, "These gentlemen do not need job protection in the lobby industry. But I guarantee you these are the people that if you ask them if this is a good bill ... (they) would say by all means it is."

Rep. David Redwine, D-Brunswick, said there was no reason to change a system that has not been abused. "North Carolina does have a reputation of being a good-government state," he said. "I think this is an honorable body. Everybody in here I've met ... I would trust in any situation ... I'd go to war with (them)."

Fitch Takes The Speaker's Gavel

RALEIGH (AP) — Rep. Toby Fitch, D-Wilson, Tuesday became the first black this century, and possibly the first in state history, to take the speaker's gavel as he presided over the state House of Representatives during a brief absence by House Speaker Joe Mavretic.

"This is a historic moment," Tim Kent, Mavretic's executive assistant, said as Mavretic asked Fitch to preside over the House while he left the chamber. "That makes him the first black speaker in state history."

Fitch, the House majority whip, chaired the House for more than hour before Mavretic returned.

Senate Tentatively Approves Six-Year Term For Governor

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The state Senate drew closer to adding another piece to a complicated constitutional puzzle, tentatively approving a proposal that could make North Carolina the only state whose governor serves a single six-year term.

Republicans offered all the objections during Tuesday's debate, saying Democrats were hoping to find a way to reverse losses they had suffered to the GOP in recent years.

Sen. Paul Smith, R-Rowan, had the strongest partisan criticisms, accusing Democrats of being poor sports.

"I officiated football for 25 years," he said, adding that he had often seen that "a team gets beat several times and the first thing they want to do is change the rules."

"If we lose next time and you win, then I guess everything will be fine until we win again and then you'll want to change the rules again," Smith said.

The 35-14 vote, largely along party lines, came after the Senate defeated a Republican-backed amendment that would have let Gov. Jim Martin and Lt. Gov. Jim Gardner be the first to use six-year terms, effectively extending their current ones.

Sen. Jim Johnson, R-Cabarrus, said the Senate was sending a bad message to the people, especially in light of other proposed constitutional amendments to lengthen legislative terms to four years and have the governor and lieutenant governor run as a ticket. All could be construed as attempts by Democrats to distance themselves from presidential politics, he said.

"It looks like we're manipulating to get these things in line so it's good for us ..." Johnson said. "We're sending them a mixed message and, you know what they're gonna send us back? Thumbs down."

Sen. Bill Goldston, D-Rockingham, defended Democrats, saying many had opposed gubernatorial succession in 1977.

"I don't think we're changing the rules, because a lot of us didn't like it back then," he said.

Sen. George Daniel, D-Caswell, said his only reasons for sponsoring the bill were practical. He said it takes two years for a governor to learn his office. With succession, he spends the next two years getting ready for re-election and the public ends up getting only four good years, Daniel said.

Johnson, however, said proposed constitutional amendments were becoming confusing, particularly ones to give four-year terms to legislators and shift elections to non-presidential years.

"It is one hodgepodge," he said. "I think the people of North Carolina would like to have some continuity as we've had in the past."

The bill calls for a statewide referendum in November 1990. If approved, the new system would begin in 1992, when the present lieutenant governor could seek re-election. But that wasn't soon enough for Sen. Larry Cobb, R-ecklenburg, Senate minority leader.

New Superintendent

SANFORD, N.C. (AP) — Donny Hunter, personnel director for Lee County schools, was elected the new superintendent of county schools effective June 1 at Monday night's board of education meeting.

Hunter, a Lee County native, will succeed William R. Johnson, who resigned Feb. 14 to assume the position of superintendent with the Robeson County schools.

Panel Wants Helmet Law Expanded

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A House committee balked at a bill to repeal North Carolina's mandatory motorcycle helmet law, voting instead to expand the law to cover moped drivers, but agreeing to reduce the penalty for violators.

State Health Director Dr. Ron Levine endorsed covering mopeds as a blow to convicted drunken drivers.

"Many of these people riding these mopeds ... are people whose drivers licenses have been taken away for another practice and you all know what it is," he said.

Rep. Theresa Esposito, R-Forsyth, who offered the amendment to include mopeds, said reducing the penalty from a misdemeanor to a $25 infraction would encourage more violations. And she said motorcycle riders caught riding without helmets might switch to mopeds to get around the law.

The committee voted favorably after hearing Division of Health Statistics figures indicating 401 people were injured on mopeds in 1988, with 10 fatalities. One-quarter of the injuries were to the head.

Gardner, Senate Democrats Tangle Over Funds For Small-Town Roads

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A spat over control of money for small-town road projects has erupted between Republican Lt. Gov. Jim Gardner and Democratic leaders in the state Senate, throwing another kink into negotiations over an omnibus budget bill.

With a joint conference committee at loggerheads over the future of the $20 million road fund — one of two unresolved issues delaying enactment of the $7 billion spending package — Sen. Kenneth Royall proposed on Tuesday a new formula for distributing the money that drew protests from Gardner.

The fund was created in 1975 to cover small-town needs that have trouble getting into the regular highway budget, such as widening streets and installing traffic lights.

Currently, $1 million is earmarked for projects in each of the state's 14 highway districts. The State Board of Transportation, dominated by gubernatorial appointees, decides which projects the fund will pay for.

direction of fairness and doing the will of the people," Gardner said.

Barnes defended the proposal, saying the $2 million should be controlled by the Senate's majority party. Senate Democrats have designated the lieutenant governor to control the money in the past because he was their leader, he said.

"Whether it goes to the pro tem's office or some other office, I would support the fact that it should be (controlled by) the Senate," Barnes said. "If not, the House would have some control over the discretionary funds, the governor's office would have some control ... and the Senate would pass its control back to the executive branch."

The lieutenant governor is officially a member of the executive branch although he is the Senate's presiding officer.

Gardner, who saw the Democrat-dominated Senate drastically weaken the office of lieutenant governor after his election last November, criticized Royall's plan as a "blatant political move."

Vote Delayed

RALEIGH (AP) — A state senator wants to limit the scope of a hotly contested bill that would allow developers to block local governments from rezoning their property for three years.

Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, proposed amending the bill on Tuesday, shortly before the Senate voted to postpone action on the measure until today. The delay was needed to fix numerous drafting errors.

Sen. Jim Johnson, R-Cabarrus, a foe of the bill, blamed the holdup on Thursday's deadline for getting most bills through at least one chamber to keep them eligible for further consideration, which he said is taxing the legislative staff beyond endurance.

"That bill has got 26 errors and three contradictions," Johnson told reporters.

Census Suit

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A federal judge has dismissed a lawsuit by 42 congressmen and three states, including North Carolina, seeking to block the counting of illegal aliens in the 1990 census.

The suit was thrown out in part because the congressmen could not prove they will lose seats in Congress by reapportionment.

The plaintiffs said they feared states with more illegal aliens would get a disproportionate number of House seats and electoral votes, thus diminishing the political power of states with fewer illegal aliens.

The Census Bureau argued it is constitutionally obligated to count everyone, including illegal aliens, for congressional apportionment and has done so since the first census in 1790. House seats are redistributed every 10 years to reflect population changes.

Driver Charged

SALISBURY, N.C. (AP) — The 21-year-old driver of a car that collided with a tractor-trailer in Rowan County, killing the truck driver and injuring eight other people, has been charged with driving while impaired, officials said.

Cammie Sifford of Granite Quarry was charged Tuesday with driving while impaired, said Sgt. J.E. Edwards of the Highway Patrol.

Meanwhile, a Rowan County emergency official said rescuers had no way to know they were walking into a cloud of chemicals when they responded to a wreck involving flammable hazardous waste.

The waste, which came from the Navy installation in Norfolk, spilled about 4:30 a.m. Monday when a tractor-trailer and a car collided between Salisbury and China Grove. The truck driver, John Wayne Johnson, 41, of Milford, Va., was killed, and all four people in the car were injured.

Missing Student

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — The body of a man identified as an Appalachian State University student was recovered Tuesday from a pond on campus.

Watauga County medical examiner Dr. Evan Ashby said he had positively identified the body of Herbert Henry Ruth Jr., 19, a freshman from Charlotte, from photographs on a driver's license and a student identification card. Ashby said Ruth apparently committed suicide and that there were no signs of foul play.

Ashby said no autopsy would be performed, but a toxicology test would be made from a blood sample sent to the chief medical examiner's office in Chapel Hill.

Child Rescued

WAYNESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A 23-month-old boy remained in critical condition at Memorial Mission Hospital after being found under the rushing water of a Maggie Valley creek.

Raymond Roberts Jr., son of Eileen Roberts of Morrow Trailer Park, was reported missing when his mother called authorities at 10:27 a.m. Tuesday. The child was seen by a bystander about 10:48 a.m. floating in the creek about a quarter-mile below his home.

A bystander on a low bridge saw the child and went off the bridge into the creek and got the child out. The boy had been snagged by brush on the bridge abutment.

AT&T Layoffs

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — About 480 hourly workers at an AT&T plant in Winston-Salem will be laid off in less than two months, company officials announced Tuesday.

Company spokeswoman Linda Jones said employees were notified Tuesday if they were laid off.

Earlier, the company announced plans to phase out operations at the Lexington Road plant. So far, more than 1,500 employees have lost their jobs, leaving 1,278 at that plant and a total of 2,100 at AT&T's two plants in Winston-Salem.

The Lexington Road plant, which manufactures switching components, had 3,750 workers when AT&T announced the phase-out plans last year.

Baby Death

GREENSBORO (AP) — Grady Wyatt, who insisted he was not the one who shook a 3-month-old child to death in 1987, pleaded guilty Tuesday to involuntary manslaughter to avoid the possibility of a harsh jury verdict.

Guilford Superior Court Judge William H. Freeman gave Wyatt, 24, a three-year suspended sentence for the death of Erica Cherrell King and placed him on five years supervised probation.

Wyatt had been charged with second-degree murder in King's Oct. 9, 1987, death. An autopsy showed that the child had been shaken so violently that her brain began to bleed.

Gardner's Reversal Breaks Tie On Bill

RALEIGH (AP) — For the second time on the same bill, Lt. Gov. Jim Gardner voted to break a tie, but his second stand was to kill the bill he saved the first time.

The bill would have waived physician-patient confidentiality so a doctor could inform the Division of Motor Vehicles of someone whose physical or mental condition makes it dangerous to operate a motor vehicle, said Sen. Bill Staton, D-Lee.

Supporters said the bill would help make highways safer, particularly by keeping known drunken drivers off the roads. But opponents said it would mainly affect the elderly.

Gardner said after the session that he had changed his mind about the bill after "some very legitimate concerns" were raised during debate.

"The bill had some ramifications that I frankly had not heard the other day," he said.

Sen. Bill Barker, D-Pamlico, said most people believe everything they tell a doctor is private. He said such a huge departure from the law should be heralded with warning signs in doctors' offices, but his amendment to accomplish that was killed on a 28-19 vote. Staton said it was the first time in 18 years he had moved to table anything.

The second time came quickly as Barker proposed an amendment to require patients be notified of a report to DMV so he could get a second opinion.

"The patient is gonna get blindsided," he said. "Let's make sure that we have some due process and fair play in this law."

Staton's motion to kill that amendment was defeated 28-19 and the amendment was adopted 31-17.

An emboldened Barker tried another amendment to hold physicians civilly liable if they knowingly submit false reports to DMV, saying a doctor "could intentionally knife you in the back and send in a false report." At that, Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe, moved to kill the amendment and the bill with it.

"It's sort of wallowing in an ocean of uncertainty," Swain said.

When the vote came up 24-24, the uncertainty swelled. Sen. Paul Smith, R-Rowan, asked to change his vote, a move that would take Gardner off the hook. Senate Majority Leader Ted Kaplan quickly offered to change his vote and put the lieutenant governor back on the fire.

Gardner eventually ruled both changes out of order and cast his vote to kill the bill.

Trooper Wounded

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROANOKE RAPIDS, N.C. — A state Highway Patrol trooper was wounded in the arm and a suspect who led officers on a high-speed chase through woods in Halifax County was killed, the patrol said.

Sgt. Maurice Chilton, 41, of Roanoke Rapids, was treated Tuesday at Halifax Memorial Hospital and then transferred by helicopter to Duke Medical Center in Durham, where he was in stable condition.

Highway patrol officials did not have the identity of the man killed.

Lt. J.E. Byrd said Chilton was shot in the right arm after he responded to a call for assistance by Trooper J.M. Harberson.

He said Harberson stopped a vehicle on Interstate 95 near N.C. 561 around noon for a motor vehicle violation. When Harberson stopped the car, a man jumped from the vehicle and ran.

The man fled the scene on foot into the woods and was pursued by Harberson, Byrd said. When the subject was caught, a struggle ensued. Chilton was shot as he approached the scene, officials said.

Byrd said the investigation is incomplete and he did not know who fired the fatal shot.

"I don't know how all this took place just yet," he said.

Byrd said the State Bureau of Investigation is looking into the shooting.

House Approves Bill Strengthening Law On Confinement Of Mentally Ill

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A bill that would make it harder to release a person from a psychiatric facility for at least five years if he is found innocent by reason of insanity is an improvement, but still is "just a Band-Aid," some supporters say.

"This is a good interim measure," said Rep. Trip Sizemore, R-Guilford. "It gives us something while the study commission is looking into the matter. I think it's a good amendment."

The bill, which would also make it more difficult to release a person from a psychiatric facility if he is found incompetent to stand trial in a murder case, was approved 102-1 by the House Tuesday.

The measure originally clarified some definitions of mental illness and added a definition of "severe and persistent mental illness" to state law.

"It's really just a Band-Aid, but I guess it's better than what we have," said Rep. Frank Rhodes, R-Forsyth, who submitted a bill to eliminate the verdict of innocent by reason of insanity after Michael Hayes was acquitted in a shooting spree last July that left four people dead and five injured.

Under current law, Hayes was sent to a state psychiatric hospital at Butner for treatment, but his case will receive regular court reviews. If a doctor tells the court that Hayes no longer is a danger to himself or others, he will be automatically released.

The amendment was proposed Monday by Reps. Joe Hackney and Anne Barnes, both Democrats from Orange County, where a man who admitted killing his stepson and a friend was ordered released from a state hospital less than two years after the slayings.

In another area, efforts to bar the death penalty for the mentally retarded died in a House committee amid objections that some criminals with normal intelligence might try to abuse the law.

Even the sponsor, Rep. Sidney Locks, D-Robeson, said, "I felt my flesh cringe at the thought of someone masquerading as such." But he said those fears were outweighed by his desire to help people who function at an intellectual level below that of a 12-year-old.

Colin Willoughby of the District Attorneys Association said his group opposed the bill because it would invite attempts to manipulate test results.

Dick Adams, who described himself as a "victim advocate" and the parent of a murder victim, said there are an "untold number of safeguards already" to avoid the death penalty.

The Judiciary Committee voted 16-11 against the bill.

After the committee action, Locks said he was pleased that the issue was aired. He said he would take no further action on the bill "unless some of them (committee members) have some strong reasons as to why we should try to resurrect it."

He said he was convinced the main objections to the bill centered on possible abuses. "Nobody has really argued we ought to give the death penalty to people who are mentally retarded," Locks said.

Minimum Wage Bill Advances

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — North Carolina's minimum wage, which has been $3.35 an hour since 1983, would rise to $3.65 on Jan. 1, 1990 and $3.95 on Jan. 1, 1991, under a bill tentatively approved by the House.

The measure was approved 61-38. Opponents, led by Republicans who challenged the wisdom of having any minimum wage, succeeded in delaying a final vote until Wednesday.

Rep. Alex Hall, D-New Hanover, said the minimum wage in his bill would take effect if the federal government fails to approve a higher wage. If the higher federal minimum is enacted, it would supersede the North Carolina law.

The $3.35 minimum is badly outdated because inflation has eroded the purchasing power of anyone earning that amount, he said.

"I don't see how it (a higher wage) could have any negative impact on the economy," he said.

State Leads U.S. In '89 Tornadoes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — North Carolina leads the nation in the number of tornadoes reported in 1989.

Fifty-one twister sightings this year have put the state ahead of Texas and Oklahoma, normally No. 1 and No. 2 in reports. Texas has logged 32 tornado reports this year; Oklahoma has received five.

The average twister count in North Carolina is 12 each year.

"The longer I'm in this business, the harder time I have knowing where Tornado Alley is," said Edward Ferguson, deputy director of the National Severe Storm Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo.

Tornado Alley is an oval-shaped area, whose axis runs from Dallas across central Oklahoma to East Kansas and through Western Iowa, where more tornadoes have struck than anywhere in the world, he said.

But in recent years, devastating twisters also have hit states such as North Carolina, Ohio and Pennsylvania, Ferguson said. "That's a long way from the Wizard of Oz area," he told The News and Observer of Raleigh.

Twenty-six tornadoes were reported in storms Friday that killed five people and caused up to $50 million in property damage in Western and central North Carolina. A tornado that hit Wake and eight other counties in November killed four people and caused $77 million in damage.

"Certainly it is unusual to have a tornado of the strength of the one that hit Union County" Friday, said Joe Pelissier, deputy meteorologist in charge at the National Weather Service office at Raleigh-Durham International Airport.

"It would be rare anywhere, but to have that one and the one that hit Raleigh in November, is unusual," Pelissier said.

Ferguson said the tornado count was preliminary "and will shrink as the final tally comes in."

"There is some duplication in the reporting, some cross-sightings ... and damage reported as done by tornadoes that later will be attributed to straight-line wind," he said.

Still, a higher-than-average number of confirmed twisters touched down in North Carolina in three of the past five years.

During the 39-year period from 1950 to 1988, an average of 12 tornadoes touched down in the state each year. But in 1988, 19 twisters were verified. North Carolina had 16 twisters in 1986; in 1984, the number was 24.

For the five-year period from 1984 to 1988, 71 twisters were reported, compared with 64 in the previous five years, according to the National Climatic Data Center in Asheville.

"I've been surprised at the outbreaks of severe weather we've had here," said Charles E. Anderson, professor of meteorology at N.C. State University. He said conditions similar to those that spawned the storms Friday also were responsible for deadly tornadoes in North Carolina in November and in 1984.

Headlights Vs. Wipers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The House tentatively approved a bill that would require drivers to turn on their headlights when they are operating their windshield wipers.

The 63-38 vote approving the bill came after lengthy debate from opponents who said the law was unnecessary and would cause many drivers to end up with dead batteries.

"Most of us have sense enough to turn them on, but we don't have sense enough to cut 'em off," said Rep. Ed Bowen, D-Sampson.

Rep. Bea Holt, D-Alamance, objected to a final vote on the measure, which was delayed until today.

Whiter Teeth?
Commonly asked questions and answers concerning this procedure.
Question: "How long does the procedure take?"
Answer: This procedure takes only 15 to 20 minutes to start and the patient completes the treatment at home and to their desired degree of whiteness; however, on your first visit, the dentist must prepare you for the procedure and usually a normal one-hour appointment is sufficient. The results are very predictable when the patient follows the instructions to the letter. Most cases can be completed within a two week period, more complicated cases may require a longer period of time. Patients who follow the instructions properly may see results within the first three days of treatment.
Question: "If this is such a new procedure, how can I be sure it's safe?"
Answer: Although it is a new product, it is based on the older bleaching techniques that have been in use on teeth for over twenty years. When used properly, these techniques have proven to be extremely safe but overpriced for most people. It is a much milder medication than anything ever used before for this purpose and is priced where every patient can now afford to look their very best with a totally different and easier procedure.
Question: "How long will the results last?"
Answer: The procedure can be permanent with occasional and proper maintenance.

Bush Plays Down Military Response

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush is calling on democratic allies to rally against Panama's Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, but U.S. officials are playing down talk of an American military response to what they call a fraudulent election in the Central American nation.

In considering the scope of measures, officials ranging from Panama's opposition candidate, Guillermo Endara, to Peru's President Alan Garcia and former President Jimmy Carter cautioned against U.S. troop involvement.

Bush and his advisers kept alive the prospect of military intervention Tuesday by saying all options were being considered. Administration officials said privately, however, that such a unilateral step was unlikely.

"I don't think it's necessary to take action immediately," Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., a senior member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said on NBC-TV's "Today" show this morning. "The opposition in Panama is counseling calm, and they're in the best position to know."

Bush would not say what actions he was considering in the wake of what he called a fraudulent election that nonetheless was won by anti-Noriega forces.

"The Panamanian people have spoken, and I call on General Noriega to respect the voice of the people, and I call on all foreign leaders to urge General Noriega to honor the clear results of the election," the president told reporters.

Bush was briefed Tuesday by two election observer groups including one headed by Carter, just back from Central America after monitoring Sunday's elections.

The observers said there was rampant fraud in voting and ballot counting. Bush embraced the conclusions of the observers and the Catholic Church in Panama that the Noriega opposition won a 3-1 victory.

"Despite massive irregularities at the polls, the opposition has won a clear-cut overwhelming victory," Bush told reporters in a brief Oval Office session. "There has been a statement for democracy so loud and so clear that perhaps even General Noriega will listen to it."

The president said that Venezuelan President Carlos Andres Perez was encouraging neighboring countries to issue a joint statement "against the fraud that is taking place and calling on Noriega to honor the results of this election."

The vote was considered a referendum on Noriega, chief of the 15,000-member Defense Forces, whom the United States has been trying to depose for more than a year.

Bush said he would not discuss what he might do until after the official vote results were announced. The Noriega-led government claimed that partial returns showed that its candidate, Carlos Duque, had defeated opposition candidate Endara. White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said Bush was considering options ranging from military force to economic sanctions against Panama, other officials minimized the military angle. They said the United States could decide to beef up U.S. forces to protect Americans living in Panama or help to move them out.

More stringent economic sanctions also were a possibility. The United States has been withholding operating fees for the Panama Canal from the Panamanian government, and has barred U.S. firms from paying any taxes or fees to the Panamanian government.

Fitzwater said U.S. military personnel in Panama had been harassed and were on a "very high state of alert."

Talking to reporters outside the White House, Carter cautioned against U.S. abrogation of the Panama Canal treaties, signed under his administration, and against military confrontation.

"Any sort of military involvement down there would immediately alienate the Panamanian people who respect their nation's sovereignty as do we," Carter said.

The Panama Canal treaties, under which the United States is to turn over the canal to Panamanian control at the end of this century, are a "sacred issue" with the Panamanians, Carter said. Breaking them would "play right into the hands of Noriega" and "alienate every other nation in this hemisphere."

Fitzwater earlier said there were no plans to break the treaties, but he hinted the administration might apply pressure through provisions on protection of U.S. citizens there and of the strategic canal itself.

One member of Bush's official observer team, Democratic Sen. Bob Graham of Florida, urged Bush to withdraw U.S. military dependents and citizens from Panama while beefing up the number of combatants among the 10,000 U.S. troops there.

Fitzwater said he did not think an evacuation of dependents was underway, but added, "That's not to say there isn't planning under way that would accommodate a number of movements of one kind or another."

Bush Sidesteps Pardon For North

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush says he wishes convicted felon Oliver North had been absolved of all crimes in the Iran-Contra affair but says, "I'm not going to argue with the courts."

Bush, who has the power to pardon North, said Tuesday he would not comment on the case further as North awaits the verdict. North was convicted last Thursday on three of 12 felony counts.

The president broke his silence on the North verdict during a brief question and answer session with reporters in the Oval Office.

On the subject of North, the White House has said that Bush has not discussed the possibility of a pardon.

North, a onetime aide on the White House National Security Council, is awaiting sentencing on his convictions of illegally destroying and altering government documents, accepting an illegal gratuity and aiding and abetting in obstruction of Congress' investigation of the Iran-Contra affair.

Asked his opinion of the verdict, Bush said, "As you know, I wanted all along to see him exonerated."

"The matter is now under appeal and thus I'll have nothing more to say about it while it is," said Bush, who has called North a hero.

Asked directly if he believed North was innocent, Bush said, "Well, I'm not going to argue with the courts. The process is being appealed."

"He's entitled to the right of appeal without a lot of editorial comment from me, although I've already given you some."

Bush was asked by a reporter, "You don't believe in shredding documents, do you?"

He scooped up some documents he'd left on his desk and jokingly said, "No, I believe in taking them with me."

Bush's meeting with reporters was hurriedly arranged to provide an opportunity for him to comment on the outcome of the presidential elections in Panama, which the United States says were rigged and stolen by military strongman Manuel Antonio Noriega.

U.S. Plans Computer 'Visa Lottery' For Immigrants

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The hopes and dreams of more than 3 million people seeking to enter the United States now rest with a computer designed to pluck the winners of a special "visa lottery" from their applications.

The State Department announced on Tuesday that some 20,000 nominees will be chosen at random by the computer, making them eligible for visas granting entry into the country in 1991 or 1992.

"The so-called 'visa lottery' is now over — 3.2 million people applied successfully" to enter the pool of potential winners, spokesman Richard Boucher told reporters.

Near-riots were touched off at U.S. embassies and diplomatic posts around the world after the State Department announced the special program, under which nearly anyone from 162 countries could apply. Telephones rang off the hook and embassy entryways were snarled at posts ranging from Cairo, Egypt, to Bucharest, Romania, as people lined up for information.

Rep. Howard Berman, D-Calif., the author of the legislation that made the new program possible, is slated to open the first few application envelopes selected by the computer and announce the nationalities of the nominees at a special ceremony on Monday.

"It gives people a little better shot than (betting on) the Pennsylvania lottery," Berman quipped in an interview.

Berman said he is pleased that his legislation has received such an enthusiastic response from around the world.

"Obviously, a lot of people want to come to America," he said.

The congressman said his program was designed as a "stop-gap measure," in an attempt to bring some diversity to the U.S. immigration flow.

Normally, an applicant for an immigrant visa has to have a close relative in the United States or work in a valued profession.

Berman said he believes that there must be a "fundamental reform" of the U.S. immigration law. He has introduced separate legislation designed to create an independent category for immigrants that would allow some 60,000 persons into the country yearly, based on criteria such as their education or job skills.

It will take some months for those who have applied to know whether or not their applications were successful, according to Frances Jones of the department's Consular Affairs Office.

Once the computer picks the applicants, the names of the nominees will be sent to the U.S. posts around the world, which will in turn contact the chosen individuals, she said.

"If they haven't heard by October, they should know they haven't been selected," Ms. Jones said.

She said she is still receiving some applications, even though they were accepted only during the month of March.

Winning the lottery doesn't automatically gain applicants entry — they must then meet the basic requirements for entry, such as good health and absence of criminal contacts.

Those who do win a visa and come to the United States could apply for citizenship later on if they meet the strict criteria for that status, Ms. Jones added.

The last lottery for visas was held in 1986. It was more restrictive than the current program and allowed only 10,000 visas, with some 1.4 million applicants losing out.

The countries excluded from the program were those that used more than 5,000 immigrant slots in fiscal 1988.

They were China, Colombia, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Guyana, Haiti, India, Jamaica, South Korea, Mexico, the Philippines and the United Kingdom.

Also excluded were natives of Taiwan, Anguilla, Bermuda, British Virgin Islands, Cayman Islands, Falkland Islands, Gibraltar, Hong Kong, Montserrat, Pitcairn, St. Helena, and the Turks and Caicos islands.

Mom Charged In Infant's Drug Death

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — A prosecutor's decision to charge a woman with manslaughter for the cocaine-induced death of her 2-day-old daughter could backfire and scare other pregnant drug abusers from seeking help, social workers say.

Some medical and legal professionals also disagree with Winnebago County State's Attorney Paul Logli's decision Monday to charge Melanie Green, who became the second Rockford woman in a week to be taken to court for exposing an unborn child to cocaine.

"It could very well drive these cocaine-abusing mothers underground," said spokesman Dave Schneidman of the state Department of Children and Family Services.

"You want to develop an atmosphere where they know (they) can come into the health-care system and not be penalized. A punitive approach is not going to benefit the children," said Dr. Ira J. Chasoff at Northwestern University Medical School, who has directed studies on the effects of prenatal cocaine use.

Early treatment for drug abuse works better, he said.

"The concern is that low-income women, who don't have access to educational and medical programs that middle-class women do ... might avoid the system altogether," said attorney Colleen Connell with the American Civil Liberties Union in Chicago.

The prosecutor defended his decision as a desire to protect children.

"The actions of this office reflect the concern, sometimes the outrage, of this community that children are born ... at risk, both at birth and for many years," Logli said in a telephone interview from Rockford, 85 miles northwest of Chicago.

"The aim is to protect children."

Ms. Green's baby, Bianca, died Feb. 4. An autopsy said the infant died of oxygen deprivation linked to cocaine exposure late in the pregnancy.

Ms. Green, 24, also was charged with delivery of a controlled substance to a minor, Logli said.

Involuntary manslaughter is a felony punishable by two to five years in prison. The prosecutor said Ms. Green could face a 14-year maximum penalty if she is convicted of the drug charge.

Infants exposed to cocaine tripled to 27 in Rockford during the past year, compared to the previous year, Logli said.

Prenatal exposure can cause numerous health problems including low birth weight, impaired motor ability, irritability that can hinder learning, strokes and seizures.

'Vo Picasso' brings second highest-price paid for art work

Picasso's Self-Portrait Sells For $47.8 Million At Auction

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Pablo Picasso would have gotten a kick out of seeing his self-portrait sell for $47.8 million to become the second most expensive art work ever auctioned, his daughter said.

"Yo Picasso," painted 88 years ago when the artist was 20, was last sold in 1961 for $5.5 million.

Its price Tuesday night at Sotheby's was more than twice its pre-sale estimate and was second only to Vincent Van Gogh's "Irises," which sold for $53.9 million in 1987.

The Picasso was one of 67 Impressionist, Post-Impressionist and Modern works that sold for a record total of $204.82 million. The previous mark for one auction was $117 million at Sotheby's in London in April.

The previous record sale for Picasso, who died in 1973, was $38.45 million paid last year for "Acrobate et Jeune Arlequin."

Paloma Picasso, who attended Tuesday's sale, said she thought her father "would get a kick out of it" if he knew how much his self-portrait had brought.

"It's in another stratosphere, but it's because there's a lot of cash around," she said. "It's better that these people use their money for these paintings rather than planes and bombs."

Two bidders made their offers by telephone, upping one another in increments of a million dollars once the price war got past $30 million. The standing-room-only audience oohed as each offer was announced and applauded the winning figure.

Neither bidder was identified. The loser also was the underbidder when the painting was last sold.

"Yo Picasso" was sold by Wendell Cherry of Louisville, Ky., who heads Humana Inc., the hospital management corporation.

Records were set Tuesday for 11 artists besides Picasso.

Paul Gauguin's "Mata Mua (In Olden Times)," a colorful Tahitian landscape, sold for $24.2 million. That broke a record set last month when Gauguin's "The Fare Hymenee" sold for $10.36 million.

A record $11.55 million for Paul Cezanne was set by his 1893-94 still life "Pichet et Fruits sur une Table." In 1988, his "La Cote du Galet, A Pontoise" sold for $9.24 million.

Heroin Is Surgically Removed From Man

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — A cab driver was in critical condition today after doctors surgically removed more than $71,000 worth of heroin from his body that he apparently swallowed before leaving his native Nigeria.

Doctors at Weiss Memorial Hospital on Tuesday removed 49 packets of heroin from the stomach and intestines of Kayode Olujare, said Sgt. John Hickey of the Chicago Police Department.

Olujare had passed another 32 packets through his bowels since he was hospitalized May 1, Hickey said.

A total of about 550 grams of heroin have been recovered, and doctors believe more than a dozen packets are still inside Olujare, Hickey said. Police believe he ingested the packets in Nigeria, he said.

"The packets are the size of half your thumb. They're plastic and covered with electrical tape," said Hickey.

"We're listing the value of the heroin at $71,175. But on the street you're getting stuff that's maybe 10 percent pure. This stuff is said to be more than 90 percent pure."

Olujare was listed in critical condition early this morning, hospital spokeswoman Henrini Cooper said.

The 33-year-old cabbie was charged with possession of a controlled substance and scheduled for a court hearing June 2, pending his recovery, Hickey said.

Olujare became sick after returning to Chicago April 30 from a visit to Lagos, Nigeria, Hickey said.

"Doctors suspected drug poisoning and X-rays confirmed it," he said. "Some of the packets opened and he got pure heroin into his system."

Sailors' Bodies Arrive In Philippines

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CLARK AIR BASE, Philippines — The bodies of six sailors killed in a fire aboard a U.S. Navy supply ship were flown today to Clark Air Base, and the senior U.S. Naval officer in the Philippines called their deaths an "irreplaceable loss for the American people."

The sailors were killed and five others injured when fire broke out Tuesday in the engine room of the USS White Plains as it was about 100 miles east of Hong Kong, heading back to Guam after supporting Persian Gulf operations.

The accident occurred three weeks after an explosion inside a gun turret on the battleship Iowa left 47 sailors dead off Puerto Rico.

About 100 people were on hand when the coffins, each draped in an American flag, were taken off a Navy C-2 transport plane at this American-run base 50 miles north of Manila.

"We mourn six brave Americans in this tragic accident," Rear Adm.

Roger Rich, commander of U.S. naval forces in the Philippines, said during the half-hour ceremony.

"This is an irreplaceable loss for our country. This is an irreplaceable loss for the American people," he added.

Crewmen aboard the White Plains, a food stores ship, battled the blaze for more than an hour before bringing it under control. The ship was in the South China Sea at the time.

U.S. officials said the White Plains was being towed today toward the American-run base at Subic Bay, 50 miles west of Manila. Navy spokesman Lt. Cmdr. Kevin Mukri said the vessel was expected to arrive by Sunday.

Mukri said a U.S. Navy team was being assembled to investigate what caused the blaze.

In Washington, Pentagon spokesman Dan Howard said the fire occurred "in the main engine spaces." A Navy source said it apparently involved a fuel leak in and around the ship's No. 3 boiler.

The 581-foot White Plains is based at the Pacific island of Guam and is crewed by a normal complement of 403 enlisted men and 25 officers.

Gunman Kills Ex-Wife, Then Uses Plane As 'Dive-Bomber'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — A gunman who killed his ex-wife was captured at Logan International Airport today after commandeering a plane, firing shots from the air and "dive-bombing" the control tower, authorities said.

Alfred James Hunter III, whose targets included a parked jetliner, shot his ex-wife to death Tuesday night as their 5-year-old son watched, authorities said.

Logan officials said the small plane swooped and dived over runways, forcing them to close the airport for an hour. Twice, they evacuated the control tower because they feared he would smash into it.

Hunter's three-hour flight along the Massachusetts coastline took him over the Kenmore Square neighborhood, where thousands of Boston Red Sox fans were leaving Fenway Park after a baseball game. Police recovered two spent shell casings nearby. He flew under a bridge and buzzed the Post Office where he worked, authorities said.

"He kept dive-bombing it there," said Richard Serino, a deputy superintendent of Boston Emergency Medical Services. "The people were saying it looked like he was going to crash then he pulled up and did a couple of turns."

The 42-year-old licensed pilot was captured peacefully when he landed the plane at the airport shortly after 1 a.m., police said. The Cessna 152 Trainer had only five minutes worth of fuel left when it landed, said state Trooper Mark Lynch. No weapons were recovered.

Hunter was charged with murder, Lynch said. An arraignment was scheduled for today in Salem District Court.

The trouble began in Danvers, about 30 miles north of Boston, when Hunter shot his ex-wife, Elvira, three times with an automatic rifle, said Danvers Police Sgt. Richard Landers. Their son, Steven, saw the shooting, said Lynch.

When they arrived, they found Mrs. Hunter slumped dead in the hallway of her home with multiple gunshot wounds. Lynch said the couple, divorced two years, had appeared in court Tuesday, but declined to say why.

After the shooting, Hunter fled in his van, tried but failed to waive a car down with his gun two miles away, and then stole another car at gunpoint at a restaurant in nearby Peabody.

The car owner told police Hunter was carrying an assault rifle. Lynch said the casings recovered might have come from an AK-47 or another large-caliber weapon but an analysis was pending.

Hunter drove the stolen car to Beverly, where he commandeered the two seat plane from an airport employee at gunpoint, Landers said.

At one point, 10 rounds were fired at a Continental Airlines MD-80 jet that was on the ground at Logan, but missed the plane and a mechanic working underneath it, said Federal Aviation Administration special agent Stacy Grace.

Shots ricocheted off the runway and a nearby building, she said.

Deaf College Chief Wins Applause

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — I. King Jordan didn't hear the applause filling the Senate hearing room when he finished his impassioned plea for legislation to shield 43 million disabled Americans from discrimination.

But the deaf president of Gallaudet University could see it loud and clear.

Two "signers" had played Jordan's every word on their fingers during his testimony Tuesday.

When he finished, they were joined by dozens of others in the audience in an unmistakable visual display as they held their hands over their heads and wagged their fingers merrily in rhythm with the sound of those clapping their hands together.

It was an unusual hearing of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee.

The No. 3 House Democrat, Rep. Tony Coelho of California, started it off by describing how he felt "suicidal" after being thrown out of a seminary because of his epilepsy until entertainer Bob Hope convinced him to pursue his dreams of service by turning to politics.

Before the hearing was over, Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., pulled a hearing aid from his right ear and held it aloft while recounting in his booming baritone how an older colleague had approached him when his own hearing started to fail and asked about the stigma of wearing a hearing aid.

Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, lead author of the legislation introduced Tuesday, said he had not meant to wax personal. But after Jordan's testimony, Harkin was moved to talk about his own deaf brother who, when taken to a special school for the deaf many years ago, was told there were three areas of training open to him: cobbler, printer or baker.

"He became a baker," recalled Harkin.

The senator, who was chairing the hearing at the time, paused for a moment, clearly reflecting on his now-retired brother.

"He never wanted to be a baker," he said quietly.

Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, called his brother-in-law who was stricken by polio "one of the greatest heroes I know." He spoke cryptically but with quiet emotion of physically carrying the disabled man through a Mormon temple in Los Angeles and of "loving him as a brother."

Hatch was the only committee member who voiced any reservations about the bill, but he emphasized that his problems were not with its intent but with some details.

"I'm dedicated to working this out," said Hatch.

"There is not a disabled American alive today who has not experienced some form of discrimination," Jordan said at the outset of his testimony.

Speaking in a loud, clear voice full of passion, Jordan — who lost his hearing in a motorcycle accident when he was 21 — recounted how he became the first deaf president of the university for the deaf last year after the students rose up against appointment of another hearing president.

Jordan noted that legislation creating the Washington school was signed 125 years ago by President Abraham Lincoln.

"During the past 125 years, conditions of deaf and other disabled Americans have slowly improved but, I regret to state, we remain today far short of the American dream so eloquently proclaimed by Dr. Martin Luther King," Jordan said.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was lower in early trading today, with the market focused on day two of the Treasury's quarterly refunding.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was down 1.10 points to 2,370.23 a half-hour after trading at 10 a.m. EDT.

Declining issues outnumbered advancing ones by about 6 to 5 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 490 issues down, 409 up and 555 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 21.59 million shares.

On Tuesday, stock and bond prices nosedived in response to the government's sale of three-year notes. Analysts said investors were concerned that U.S. and foreign investors bought fewer of the notes than expected.

The final day of the sale is Thursday, when the government will auction 30-year bonds.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks had fallen 0.13 to 170.67.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 0.288 to 344.81.

On Tuesday, the Dow Jones industrial average fell 5.14 points to 2,371.33.

Declining issues outnumbered advancing ones by about 4 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 824 issues down, 623 up and 525 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 150.09 million shares, up from 135.13 in the previous session.

Pitt Teachers Join Lobby Day

Forum of North Carolina and Gov. Jim Martin.

Each of the bills would phase in a 30-step salary schedule over a period of three years and would pay beginning teachers about $20,000 and veterans from $35,000 to $46,000. Martin's and the forum's plans both include implementation of the career ladder program, a merit-based system for paying teachers that has been rejected by the NCAE in its present form.

State Sen. Tom Taft "met with a group of teachers in the morning for just about an hour, listening and answering questions about career ladder, longevity in some of these salary schedules and just feelings of teachers in general," Ms. Jackson said.

The teachers were well received, Taft said in a telephone interview.

"Their attitude was positive and constructive but they still made it clear that we must improve teacher pay and teacher morale if we're going to have a quality education system in North Carolina," Taft said.

"The Pitt legislative delegation is particularly interested and supportive of our teachers but their presence impressed us with their seriousness of purpose," Taft said.

In the afternoon, the Senate and House met. Ms. Jackson said. "Our teachers filled the galleys and listened and watched to see what kinds of things are going on in the general meeting."

Teachers also met with state Reps. Ed Warren, Walter Jones Jr. and Eugene Rogers and state Sens. Bob Martin and Taft for a question and answer session, Ms. Jackson said.

The teachers sang and gave a copy of a song to the legislators created by Anna Thomas, a teacher of Wintergreen Elementary School, she said. The song was to the tune of "The Saints Go Marching In" and addressed salaries, career ladder, smaller class size and a better health plan.

"I was delighted to see them and have the opportunity to exchange thoughts on this legislative session and how it relates to the pay raise," Jones said today.

He also said he regretted that a busy day in the Legislature kept him from spending a lot of time with the teachers.

Warren said, "Our teachers in Pitt and Greene counties were very professional and were well received. Several sat in on the Education Committee meeting with me yesterday.

"Of course I understand their concerns and will continue to do everything I can for teachers as well as administrators and non-certificated personnel," Warren said.

"Our teachers had a good opportunity to see the General Assembly in action and I think their day was for very educational," he said.

The group also talked with Karen Garr, the state NCAE president, and John Wilson, the state's candidate for president of the National Education Association, according to Ms. Jackson.

The teachers concluded their day with a walk to the Governor's Mansion, Ms. Jackson said. "We reminded him (Martin) that we need his support also by tying green ribbons to his gate front."

Mary-Anne Brannon and Elva Hales chaired the event for NCAE, Ms. Jackson said. Jane Laughinghouse helped handle some of the transportation of the teachers.

The Pitt County teachers' next major effort to get a salary increase this year will involve participation in the NCAE statewide rally, "10,000 teachers for 10 percent" on June 16, Ms. Jackson said.

Martin Supports Railroad Proposal

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Gov. Jim Martin told a task force on rail service today he agrees with their conclusions that passenger service is needed through the Piedmont and should begin as soon as possible.

"Rail service in this corridor is a long-term project, not just something we can turn on and off," Martin told the task force he appointed in March 1988. "I asked you to consider when was the right time for passenger service, and you have concluded that the earliest time is the right time."

The task force, in its interim report, has recommended that the state offer rail service between Charlotte and Rocky Mount, with stops in Kannapolis, Salisbury, High Point, Greensboro, Burlington, Durham, Raleigh, Selma and Wilson.

Passengers could connect with train service to the Northeast at Selma, Wilson and Rocky Mount. A second passenger train each day would run only between Charlotte and Raleigh.

The state subsidized a passenger train from October 1984 to September 1985 that ran from Charlotte to Raleigh and connected with trains for the Northeast at Richmond.

But the "Carolinian" was abandoned when it became apparent the state share of the costs would exceed a $500,000 appropriation set by the General Assembly.

David King, director of the Public Transportation Division of the Department of Transportation, said the experimental train carried over 115,000 passengers in its 10-month trial, showing there is good demand for rail service in the Piedmont crescent.

"We believe it would be good state policy to find an alternative to air and interstate travel in this densely populated corridor," King said.

He said it would cost the state $3 million to $5 million per year to finance the two passenger trains, as well as long-term financing to buy locomotives and cars that would be owned by the state. The trains would be operated by employees of Southern Railway under contract with the state, he said.

Martin said some funding could come from a new lease agreement between North Carolina Railroad, which is predominantly owned by the state, and Norfolk Southern Corp. for state-owned track. He said he would instruct Transportation Secretary James Harrington to search other sources of revenue that could support the train.

"We believe the state must act boldly and with a long view," King said, "and not treat this as a demonstration or experiment."

The second major recommendation of the task force's interim report is that the state take whatever action necessary to preserve rail corridors in the state.

Martin said he agreed the corridors are of "strategic importance to the economic future of the state."

He said he intends to extend the life of the task force, which was scheduled to end in December.

Entertainer Dies At 33

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Keith Whitley, a rising star of country music who followed the hard-living lifestyle he sang about in wrenching tunes chronicling pain and joy, has died of alcohol abuse. He was 33.

The body of the bearded, handsome performer was found in bed at his suburban home Tuesday afternoon.

An autopsy showed a blood alcohol content of 0.477, medical examiner Charles Harlan said. That's almost five times the 0.10 considered intoxicated for driving in Tennessee.

Traces of cocaine and Valium also were found in his system but alcohol overdose was cited as the direct cause of death, Harlan said.

Harlan said it was impossible to tell what kind of alcoholic beverages Whitley had consumed or over what period.

Whitley's body was found by his brother-in-law, Lane Palmer, who was concerned because the performer was not answering phone calls, said Lt. Harry Bell of the suburban Goodlettsville Police Department.

Whitley, a native of Sandy Hook, Ky., began singing at age 4.

Washington, which rented a portion of the building for storage, said this morning through its human resources manager, Keith Norwood, that corrugated paper boxes and cones were destroyed in the fire, along with "a small amount of yarn."

Norwood said no employees were at the storage site at the time of the blaze. He said assessment of the monetary loss had not been completed this morning.

The value of the structure has not been estimated, Williams said. The owner of the property is reported to be N. Tommy Cox of Washington.

There were no injuries among firefighters and no reason to believe there was anyone in the building when the fire began, Williams said.

Jordan, Bulls Defeat Knicks

Golden State Downs Phoenix Suns

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — With less than eight minutes to go, the New York Knicks looked unstoppable and Michael Jordan was going nowhere.

By the end of overtime, Jordan looked unstoppable and the Knicks were going nowhere as the Chicago Bulls won 120-109 in the opener of their best-of-7 Eastern Conference playoff series Tuesday night.

The Knicks outscored Chicago 35-16 for a 90-78 lead with 7:57 remaining. At that point, Jordan had 17 points, 23 below his postseason average of 39.8.

New York still led 103-95 with 3:42 left before the Bulls scored the last eight points of regulation and the last 11 of overtime, with Jordan scoring nine of his 34 points in the extra period.

"Overtime is the perfect time to kick it into overdrive and put everything on the line," Jordan said. "I have an uncanny talent to create."

Bulls coach Doug Collins said Jordan and Chicago's defense made the victory possible.

"Our defense really stiffened late in the game," Collins said. "When we were down 90-78, I told them we were a little bit too hyper. That's a little out of character for us, but we didn't fold." Jordan was limited to 12 shots in regulation time, 15 under his postseason average.

But he took over in the extra period, breaking 105-105 and 109-109 ties with jumpers before giving the Bulls a 114-109 advantage when he converted a three-point play with 1:16 left. Jordan also finished with 10 rebounds and 12 assists.

"I knew their game plan was to take the ball out of my hands," Jordan said. "To combat that I was hitting Craig Hodges and others to make the Knicks pay for the double-team."

With Jordan bottled up, the Bulls kept the game close with balanced scoring — a rarity for the Bulls — and strong rebounding. Bill Cartwright had 18 points and 14 rebounds, Horace Grant 19 points and nine rebounds, Hodges 24 points and Scottie Pippen 15.

The 76 points by that quartet was 31 more than its playoff average.

Collins said the Knicks might have concentrated too much on Jordan.

"They tried so hard to take Michael out of the game, it really bogged them down," he said.

Tar Heels Roll, Tops Bucs 14-4

ACC Champs Claim Easy Victory

CHAPEL HILL — North Carolina broke open a 4-4 tie and went on to take a 14-4 baseball victory over East Carolina Tuesday afternoon.

The Tar Heels, the regular season Atlantic Coast Conference champion, got outstanding pitching from starter John Thoden, named to the second team all-conference list Tuesday. Thoden scattered seven hits, allowed but two earned runs, and struck out six. He walked none.

Brad Woodall came on to hurl the seventh inning, after which the game, played in a steady rain, was called.

The Tar Heels took the lead in the game in the first inning, scoring four times. Dave Arendas walked and Jesse Levis doubled. Woodall then walked to load the bases. Tom Nevin followed with a fly to left that was missed when John Adams slipped and fell. Adams was charged with an error and Arendas scored on the play.

Todd Nichols then followed with a single, driving in Levis and Ryan Howison's hit brought in both Woodall and Nevin.

But the Pirates rallied to pick up four of their own in the top of the fourth, tying the game. Adams opened with a single and Tommy Eason got a hit. John Gast reached on an error, loading the bases. Steve Godin's double brought in both Adams and Eason and Gast scored when Kevin Riggs grounded out. Mike Andrews then laid down a bunt single to drive in Godin to tie it up.

But the tie was short-lived. North Carolina came back to score five times in the bottom of the inning.

Steve Estoff walked and Ron Maurer singled. Arendas walked to load the bases and Levis greeted reliever Brien Berckman with a single. That brought in both Estoff and Maurer. Arendas then scored on a wild pitch. Nevin walked and Darren Villani singled in Levis. An error on the relay allowed Nevin to score, giving the Tar Heels a 9-4 lead.

Rampants Defeat Kinston By 7-3

Hines Flirts With No-Hitter As Rose Ices Tie For First In Big East

By Woody Peele

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Maurice Hines flirted with a no-hitter for five innings as Rose High School's baseball Rampants clinched at least a tie for first place with a 7-3 win over Kinston Tuesday night.

With rain falling intermittently, the Rampants posted their 11th Big East Conference win of the season against the Vikings, bringing their overall record to 18-0. Only Wilson Hunt, which has lost three games, has a chance to catch the Rampants, who lowered their magic number to one. A victory against Wilson Fike on Friday, or a loss by Hunt, would wrap up another league title for the Rampants, ranked fifth in the nation by USA Today.

Hines went through the first five innings without allowing a hit, then gave up four in the sixth inning as Kinston scored its only runs of the evening. He once again shut them down in the seventh to preserve the victory.

Hines walked four and struck out

10 in getting the complete game for the Rampants.

"I'm amazed that we got the game in," Rose coach Ronald Vincent said. "Maurice pitched really well except for the sixth inning. And even then, there were a couple of close plays that could have changed things."

"But we hit the ball hard at times and manufactured some early runs," Vincent added. "Some baserunning mistakes, however, took us out of a couple of big innings."

Kinston's sixth was nearly a zero, but it became a matter of inches. Jeff McMahon led off the inning with a clear hit into right field, the first hit of the night for the Vikings. Frankie Swindell followed with another single, this one to left. Brian Lang then followed with a line drive that shortstop Chris Christopher leaped for but the ball went just off the top of his glove. Leftfielder John Bolen quickly got to the ball and threw to third to try and force McMahon, but his throw was just off target, allowing the runner to reach

Chargers Take Aim At Playoff Spot

By Tom Morris

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton took the first of three necessary steps toward a playoff spot with a 12-2 Eastern Plains 2-A Conference baseball victory Tuesday over Pamlico County.

The Chargers have four games remaining in the regular season, all against EPC foes, and coach Chris Ross said the team wants to win at least three of them.

"That's something we've set as a goal for ourselves," Ross said. "We know if we win three of the four, we'd go to the playoffs regardless.

"We wanted to control our own fate, and we got off on the right foot tonight. We don't want to have to depend on anybody else."

The Chargers got the perfect mix of hitting, pitching and defense against the Hurricanes, building an early lead en route to the win.

James Woodard opened the game with a solo-home run that sparked a five-run first inning.

With two outs, Ronnell Peterson singled and stole second. Gary Eubanks followed with a homer to make it 3-0. Gene Stancill came up and singled down the right line. Ryan Hardee reached off an error and Brian Haddock then drove in two runs with a single that was erred in the outfield.

"We just got in a hole early," Pamlico coach Jere Baldwin said. "We've had a rough season."

With a five-run lead, Haddock settled into a groove and had a no-hitter going through three innings before giving up a bloop single and a double in the fourth as Pamlico made its only real charge of the game.

"I think the first home run certainly gave us momentum in that we knew we could hit that boy (starting pitcher Jamie Ragan)," Ross said. "More than anything, though, we got good pitching. Haddock had a no-hitter going in the fourth. To be a sophomore and be 5-1 this year, I couldn't be more tickled."

In the fourth, though, Haddock gave up two hits. Charlie Lewis led off with a walk and stole second. Chris Warren followed with a bloop single to put runners on the corners. After one out, Lewis came home on a sacrifice fly by Jamie Ragan and Craig Mizelle followed with a double to score Warren. Kirk Holton then grounded out to the shortstop to end the inning.

"That was the only real chance," Baldwin said. "Then they came

Reid Opts For Pro Chances

By Tom Foreman Jr.
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHAPEL HILL — J.R. Reid says he can take a jump shot and hit it, and the North Carolina forward says that despite what the scouts think, he'll show them a thing or two.

"Here at Carolina, I didn't shoot the jump shot a whole lot," Reid said as he announced that he would give up his senior year as a Tar Heel to make himself available for the June draft.

"I hope maybe I'll surprise a few people this year. I hope they keep me as an underdog. I'll let them think I can't shoot the jumper or I can't put it on the floor and maybe I'll pleasantly surprise a couple of them."

Reid didn't often venture out beyond 10 feet from the basket in his three years at Chapel Hill. His offensive repertoire consisted mainly of a short jump hook and a one-handed jump shot in the lane. In his early days under Coach Dean Smith, he would attempt to lead the fast break, a habit he was broken of.

His offense in the 1988-89 season was hampered in the first month of the season because of a stress fracture of the left foot. Reid played in 27 games, starting 16, and averaged 15.9 points and 6.3 rebounds per game. He found himself having to adjust to reduced playing time, and that raised another rumor about his attitude.

"Everybody had to make sacrifices. I made sacrifices, Jeff Lebo made sacrifices, everybody had to give up something," Reid said. "No matter what the media has written or thinks, Coach Smith and I have a great relationship and I was happy with the way we were playing this year."

Smith said he also noted improvements in Reid's offensive and defensive talents that will help him respond to the skeptics.

"I think he'll be able to cover anybody out on the court in professional basketball, which is hard to find among big people. He has very quick feet and can play with them out there, and obviously he can bang inside," he said.

Reid said he didn't start thinking about going to the NBA until after the Tar Heels lost in the Southeast Regional semifinals to eventual national champion Michigan. Smith, who counsels his underclassmen on whether they should turn professional, reportedly spent several weeks trying to determine Reid's chances in the draft.

In previous years, Smith has said a high draft selection would translate into financial security. Now, he says, the NBA salary caps and expansion might ensure that same feeling at a lower pick.

"The salary cap is going up to $9 million ... So the way I've looked at it, there's no doubt in my mind that J.R. will demand a minimum of $3 million over a four-year period if he's drafted in the top 11," Smith said.

Reid, a member of the 1988 U.S. Olympic team, got a taste of pro ball when the team played a series against NBA players last summer. Now comes the main course.

"I'm a little nervous about it. It's a big step for me," Reid said. "Coach Smith told me it was a good idea."

Plus, said Reid, he had to sell his parents, especially his mother, on the decision to turn pro. Reid, after several meetings with Smith, made the decision after talking with his parents in the family car in the parking lot of the Smith Center on Sunday. Reid said he told Smith on Monday.

"I got my mom to go along with it after promising to come back and graduate, which I'm not too far from doing now," he said.

ECU Lands Four Players On All-CAA Team

RICHMOND — East Carolina landed a league-high four players on the 1989 Colonial Athletic Association All-Conference baseball team announced Wednesday.

ECU players named to the squad were freshman Tommy Eason, a former standout at Greene Central, who made the squad at catcher along with first baseman Calvin Brown, a junior from Battleboro; outfielder John Adams, a junior from Rocky Mount, along with pitcher Jonathan Jenkins, a junior from Culpeper, Va.

Tommy Eason

Eason hit .336 with eight homers and 37 RBI. Brown hit .362 with 11 homers and 43 RBI. Adams hit .396 with five homers and 24 RBI. Jenkins was 11-1 on the year with a 1.33 earned run average and 73 strikeouts.

Rounding out the selections were second baseman Steve Schwartz of James Madison; shortstop Trent Mongero of UNC-Wilmington; third baseman Sam Rose of James Madison; outfielder Kyle Settle of George Mason; outfielder Dave Ryan of William and Mary; pitcher Perry Currin of UNC-Wilmington; pitcher Dana Allison of James Madison and designated hitter Andy Molloy of Richmond.

Player of the year and coach of the year will be named Thursday night at the CAA Baseball Tournament Banquet.

With four guys, that matches a team record set in 1986 when ECU also landed four players on the initial CAA All-Conference team. In 1987, ECU landed only one player on the team, catcher Chris Cauble. Last year, ECU had no selections on the squad.

Suzanne Uzzell Awarded Scholarship

Suzanne Uzzell, a senior Physical Education major with a concentration in Sports Medicine, at East Carolina University, has been selected as the 1989 Larry C. Sutton Post-Graduate Scholarship Award recipient.

This scholarship is presented annually to a deserving member of the Mid-Atlantic Trainers Association in memory of Larry Sutton, an athletic trainer at Clemson, who was dedicated to the development of the athletic training profession.

Hunt Tops Rose Spikers, 2-0

Wilson Hunt stymied Rose High School's girls' soccer team offensively and recorded a 2-0 Big East Conference win Tuesday.

Stephanie Dew scored the first goal for the Lady Warriors at the 2:35 mark, while Betsy Appert added the second goal at the 43:20 mark.

The Ramettes were limited to only six shots on goal for the match, while Hunt had 22.

Rose goalie Susan Grimsley recorded 15 safes and Hunt goalie Elizabeth White had five.

Rose, now 3-9-1 for the year, will travel to Elizabeth City Thursday to face Northeastern.

Pamlico Sail Club Race Results

WASHINGTON — Wilson Smith of Bath and Harry Preddy of Cary took top honors in the spinnaker division of the Pamlico Sailing Club's latest races, held this past weekend.

Smith, sailing "Q.A.R.," finished first in the seventh race of the spring season. Second place went to Jon Phelps of Raleigh on "Jonathan" while Preddy, sailing "Dawn Treader," finished third.

In the non-spinnaker class, Bill Taylor of Washington finished first on "Siren," followed by John Smith of Raleigh on "Kickback" and Bill Farris of Farmville on "Alpha."

In the eighth race, Preddy won the spinnaker class, with Dennis O'Neal on "Green Machine," finishing second. Third went to Mike Horner of Washington on "Bodacious."

In the non-spinnaker class, Taylor took first again, while Mark Baldrige of Cary was second on "Twain," and Kenny Snow of Washington was third on "See-Bare."

Shrine Bowl Trying To Reshape Image

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Faced with sagging attendance and a less lustrous image of late, the Shrine Bowl has put on a corporate face with the hiring of Marshall Hester as the event's first full-time executive director.

Hester, 33, unofficially began work April 17 but was approved Tuesday by the Shrine Bowl Board of Governors. He has already taken up the task of selling the event.

Hester faces another problem in his new job — the change by the N.C. High School Athletic Association to hold its 2A and 4A football championship games on Dec. 9, the Shrine Bowl's date.

The NCHSAA intends to televise the 4A game but has not announced a time. Hester said his board of governors considers 1 to 5 p.m. on Dec. 9 to be Shrine Bowl time. Hester said three sponsors for that network are already in place for the 1989 game and three more are being sought.

Minor League Football Coming To State

CHARLOTTE (AP) — When Vic Gatto announced he was bringing minor-league football to Charlotte, he described three types of players he expected to see on his team.

Gatto spoke of college graduates who aren't ready for the NFL, of high school students who do not want to go to college but want to play football, and of people who just plain love football.

In the first list of signees for the Charlotte Barons, Gatto and general manager-coach Larry Story signed players from all three categories, several of them North Carolina natives.

Those signed Tuesday included Tim Newman, a graduate of Olympic High, Chuck Tabor of Independence, and Shelton Boyer of West Charlotte.

Newman, a 6-0, 225-pound running back, signed with the New York Jets in 1987 but was released. He played college football with Johnson C. Smith, where he is the third all-time leading rusher. He was also an All-CIAA player for three years. Newman hopes the exposure he will get with the Barons will give him another shot at the NFL.

Austin Roberts, 19, a junior at Bunker Hill, was the only high school player to sign. Roberts is not eligible for his senior year because of his age and will play with the Barons while he completes his high school education.

Other signees include Doug Beattie of Anderson, S.C.; Dan Cole of Whiteville; Greg Harris of Hampton, Va.; and Andrew Bellagamba of Springfield University.

Roanoke Rapids' Barnes Leads ACC Team

GREENSBORO (AP) — Brian Barnes, Clemson's record-setting left-hander from Roanoke Rapids, N.C., was named the Atlantic Coast Conference baseball player of the year and heads up the all-ACC team announced Tuesday.

Barnes, a 5-foot-9, 170-pound senior, struck out an ACC season record 157 batters this season en route to a 13-1 record. He allowed only 65 hits in 110 innings and holds the conference career victory record with 41.

Joining Barnes on the first team was teammate Henry Threadgill at second base. Wake Forest placed three players — shortstop Brian Shabosky, outfielder Jake Austin and relief pitcher Frank Humer — on the first team.

First baseman Steve Shepherd and outfielder Brian Bark of North Carolina State, third baseman Andy Bruce and designated hitter Anthony Maisano of Georgia Tech, outfielder Chris Kughn of Virginia and catcher Jesse Levis of North Carolina round out the first team.

North Carolina's Mike Roberts was named the coach of the year after guiding the Tar Heels to a first-place finish in the regular season.

Harter's Future To Be Discussed

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Dick Harter's future as the Charlotte Hornets' coach could be on the line this week when he meets with General Manager Carl Scheer and owner George Shinn in what Scheer calls a "season-in-review session."

Scheer says that the purpose of the meeting is "just to talk things over, see where we stand."

The Knicks blamed their offense down the stretch, not Jordan, for the loss.

"We did the job on him. I don't think we could've played a better defensive game than we did," said Gerald Wilkins, who had the primary defensive assignment against Jordan. "We were up 12 and we should have put it away down the stretch."

"We quit taking the shots we wanted and turned the ball over down the stretch," said Johnny Newman, who led the Knicks with 27 points. "They got all the loose balls."

"They showed they're not just Michael Jordan," Knicks coach Rick Pitino said. "Give that whole team credit for this win. But this is just one game. We know it takes four. We have to go get them on Thursday and then head to their building over the weekend."

Chicago trailed 103-95 on a basket by Patrick Ewing with 3:42 left in regulation, but the Bulls scored eight straight points and tied the score on two free throws by Jordan with 1:15 remaining.

With the score tied, Chicago had two apparent breakaways in the final minute of regulation, but Trent Tucker and Ewing came from behind to knock the ball away, giving New York possession each time.

The Bulls got the ball again with two seconds left in regulation, but Mark Jackson stole the inbound pass and missed a 40-footer as time expired.

Newman scored 11 points in the last 7:35 of the third period as the Knicks turned a 62-55 deficit into a 75-74 lead.

Then New York started the fourth period with an 11-2 run for its largest lead, 90-78, with 7:57 remaining. In a span of less than 12 minutes, the Knicks outscored the Bulls 35-16.

Ewing had 22 points and 10 rebounds for New York.

Jordan took only five shots in the first half and didn't score in the second quarter until there were 19 seconds left, when his two free throws gave the Bulls a 47-46 halftime lead.

Jordan, Hodges and Pippen had 3-pointers during a 13-4 run that gave Chicago a 15-9 lead, but the Knicks responded with a 10-2 streak for a two-point edge. It was 27-27 after one period.

Warriors.....127
Suns.....122

PHOENIX — Golden State coach Don Nelson stuck with his small lineup and Chris Mullin, Mitch Richmond, Terry Teagle, Rod Higgins and Winston Garland didn't let the Warriors get stuck in an 0-2 hole.

Mullin scored 37 points, Teagle 29, Richmond 25 and Higgins 21 while Garland had five of his 11 in a decisive 7-0 run late in the fourth quarter as Golden State beat the Phoenix Suns 127-122 Tuesday night to even their Western Conference semifinal playoff series.

The best-of-7 series, tied at 1-1, now shifts to Oakland, Calif., for Game 3 Thursday night and Game 4 Saturday afternoon.

"We're right back in it," Mullin said. "This was an important game. We came in focused and did the job. Coach Nelson is a real genius. He got us ready."

After Golden State was out-rebounded 66-49 in a 130-103 loss here in Game 1 Saturday, Nelson hinted he might scrap the small starting lineup he has used since Dec. 30.

But when the Warriors took the floor, 6-8 Larry Smith remained at center with the 6-7 Higgins and 6-7

Mullin at forward, the 6-5 Richmond and the 6-2 Garland in the starting backcourt and 6-5 Teagle as the sixth man.

For the fourth time in five playoff games, 7-4 center Ralph Sampson stayed on the bench.

"It's my responsibility to put the team I feel best represents us. I thought the one I had out there the first game was the best and I came back with it again. This particular time, it paid dividends," Nelson said. "I didn't have to get this team up. They were never down."

"But I said coming into the game that if we were going to win that we'd have to play exceptional. Phoenix probably played an average game and we played sensational. I don't think we can play much better than we did."

"They were aggressive and got every shot they needed. We could not stop them," Suns coach Cotton Fitzsimmons said. "I thought we controlled the tempo all night and battled, but time ran out."

Phoenix, which set an NBA playoff record by making all 28 of its free throws, used a 9-3 run to take a 120-116 lead with 3:24 remaining.

Garland had a three-point play with 3:12 left, then hit a short jumper in the lane to put Golden State ahead to stay at 121-120 with 2:52 remaining.

Richmond sank two free throws with eight seconds showing to give the Warriors a 125-122 lead.

Kevin Johnson's 3-point field goal attempt for the Suns bounced off the back of the rim with five seconds remaining.

Mullin grabbed the rebound, was fouled and converted two free throws with no time showing for the final score.

Mullin had 23 points by halftime and Teagle 17 for a 65-64 lead before Higgins scored 12 in the third quarter to make it 100-98.

"We expect Mullin to get his points. We expect Richmond to get his. Higgins and Teagle were the difference," Fitzsimmons said. "We can't afford to give Teagle 29 points and Higgins 21, even with Mullin getting 37. We can give Mullin 47 if we can hold Teagle to 16 and Higgins 14."

Mullin was held to 18 points in Game 1 and many in the media started predicting a Suns' sweep.

"I don't know who's calling us underdogs. I don't know who those people are. I hope they're not trying to feed their families making predictions," said Mullin, who played all 48 minutes in Game 2 and hit 14 of his 24 shots from the floor. "When we lost Saturday, everybody was asking what we did wrong."

Reid To Pros...

Reid is the fourth of Smith's players to forego a senior year for the NBA. Before Reid, Robert McAdoo, James Worthy and Michael Jordan opted for the pros after their junior seasons.

"I had a lot of fun here. I've gone to the final eight twice and the final 16 this season," Reid said of his NCAA experiences, none of which will include a national championship. "I did everything I expected at North Carolina and more."

The Chargers rallied for three runs in the bottom of the fourth and four more in the fifth to put the game away.

Eubanks and Stancill had three hits and three RBI apiece while Peterson and Tripp had two hits each.

Smoltz Has Braves Smiling

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

If John Smoltz keeps pitching like this, baseball fans may stop laughing at the Braves. Smoltz pitched a six-hitter for his second straight complete game, leading Atlanta past Philadelphia 7-2 Tuesday night. The Braves have won six straight for the first time since May 16-22, 1986.

Smoltz says he's a lot better than he was last year. He said he has command of four pitches — fastball, curve, slider and changeup.

"Now, if the curve isn't working, the slider is, or vice versa," he said. "You need that because everybody catches up with your fastball."

Braves manager Russ Nixon sure sounds impressed. "After a shaky year last year, he came to spring training a mature young man. He went about his work and continued it into the regular season," Nixon said.

Smoltz, 5-2, struck out six and walked one. He had not pitched a complete game before this season and now he has two.

"I had nothing to lose, so I learned a lot of valuable lessons on how to be a better pitcher," Smoltz said of his off-season. "I learned not to get too high or too low. Last year I got too low."

With the score tied at 2, the Braves scored four runs in the eighth on RBI singles by Jeff Treadway, Dion James and Jeff Blauser and an error by Von Hayes in right field. Dale Murphy added a run-scoring double in the ninth.

Don Carman, 1-5, gave up two hits and three runs in 7 1-3 innings, striking out seven and walking five.

Mets 3, Reds 1
New York snapped a 27-inning scoreless streak with three fifth-inning runs off Danny Jackson and Sid Fernandez allowed five hits in 7 2-3 innings.

New York sent eight batters to the plate in the fifth with Kevin Elster, Mookie Wilso and Howard Johnson hitting RBI singles. The Mets' had been shut out in their previous two games, their first consecutive shutouts in two years.

Fernandez, 4-1, struck out a season-high six in 7 2-3 innings and lost his shutout when Todd Benzing homered with one out in the seventh. Fernandez didn't get his fourth win last season until June 28.

Roger McDowell pitched an inning and Randy Myers finished the six-hitter for his sixth save.

Expos 4, Astros 2

Wallace Johnson hit his first home run in two years and Dennis Martinez allowed five hits in 8 1-3 innings.

Martinez, 2-1, struck out four and walked four before Tim Burke got the final two outs for his seventh save, allowing a sacrifice fly to Alan Ashby. Kevin Bass had ended the shutout earlier in the ninth inning with an RBI double.

Mike Scott, 4-2, gave up all three runs and seven hits in eight innings, striking out three and walking one. It was his fewest strikeouts in seven starts this season.

Johnson had not homered since May 1, 1987, when he hit one in Shea Stadium against the Mets.

Cardinals 4, Padres 3

Tony Pena's seventh-inning homer off Greg Harris snapped a 3-3 tie. Pena's homer, on an 0-1 pitch, was his second this season. Harris, 0-1, relieved Dennis Rasmussen to start the inning.

Ken Dayley, 1-1, allowed two hits and no runs in 1 1-3 innings. Todd Worrell pitched the ninth inning for his fifth save, getting Randy Ready to fly out with the bases loaded to end the game.

Jack Clark went 1-for-3 with a sacrifice fly in his first game in St. Louis since 1987. He signed with the New York Yankees as a free agent after that season and was traded to San Diego after the 1988 season.

Giants 4, Cubs 2

Mike Krukow and Craig Lefferts combined for a four-hitter and Will Clark and Robby Thompson drove in a run each as San Francisco won its third straight.

Krukow, 2-0, allowed three hits, all singles, in seven innings. Lefferts allowed one hit over the final two innings for his fifth save.

Krukow gave up Ryne Sandberg's line single off third baseman Ed Jurak's glove with two outs in the first inning and didn't allow another runner until Sandberg singled in the seventh, retiring 17 in a row. Sandberg also doubled in the ninth with one out, giving him three of Chicago's four hits.

Paul Kilgus, 3-3, allowed five hits and four runs in six innings.

Canseco's Wrist Needs Surgery

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — American League MVP Jose Canseco, hoping to put an end to problems with his left wrist, faces surgery to remove part of a small bone that has kept him out of the Oakland Athletics' lineup this season.

Canseco, who injured his wrist during spring training, wasted no time after an examination Tuesday confirmed a fracture of the hamate bone. Surgery was planned for today.

The A's and Canseco, who last year became the first player to hit 40 homers and steal 40 bases in a season, had hoped that six weeks of rest and treatment would strengthen the three-quarter-inch bone. But while batting for the Huntsville Stars on Sunday, Canseco felt a sharp pain in his wrist and flew back to the San Francisco Bay area to consult with his doctors.

Although Canseco could be out for two months after the operation, A's general manager Sandy Alderson was relieved a decision finally had been made.

"Even with this type of problem, certainty is better than uncertainty," he said. "Now we have a definite time limit on it. If he had come back from Huntsville, we might have been worrying if he was going to hurt it again."

The surgery at Children's Hospital will remove the hook at the top of the hamate. It was to be performed by Dr. Bill Green, assisted by team orthopedist Rick Bost — the same team that performed an identical operation on Jose's identical twin brother, Ozzie.

Jose suffered a fracture of the hamate a few days after Ozzie broke the same bone.

Rehabilitation would begin after about six weeks, and Canseco should be ready to play after the All-Star break, Alderson said.

Viola, Blyleven End Loss Streaks

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Frank Viola hadn't won all year. Bert Blyleven hadn't won in Detroit in a dozen years.

Scratch two losing streaks.

Viola, the 1988 American League Cy Young Award winner, was 0-5 with a 4.84 earned run average entering Tuesday night's game at Boston. But the Red Sox were the right tonic for Minnesota's left-handed ace, who beat them 6-2, allowing seven hits in 8 1-3 innings.

Blyleven was on an even worse slide — he hadn't won at Tiger Stadium since May 3, 1977. But the Angels' right-hander continued his superb pitching, giving up seven hits in seven innings as California won its sixth straight, 5-1 over the skidding Tigers.

In other games, it was New York 5, Texas 3; Seattle 4, Toronto 3; Chicago 10, Milwaukee 1, and Kansas City 3, Cleveland 1. The Oakland-Baltimore game was postponed by rain with the Athletics ahead 3-0 in the bottom of the fifth inning.

Twins 6, Red Sox 2

Viola continued his mastery of Boston. Now 10-8 against the Red Sox, he has beaten them four straight.

"I wanted this game," said Viola, 24-7 last season. "Just getting number one takes a load off. Of my seven previous starts, we didn't win a game and that's what bothered me the most.

"Tonight I kept them off balance and when I needed the big pitch I was able to come up with it. I threw about 40 percent changeups, but it seemed like my fastball was getting better as the game went on."

Red Sox manager Joe Morgan agreed.

"Viola straight changed us to death," Morgan said. "He must have thrown 50 (of 126 pitches) of those things. But if we can't hit them, he might as well keep throwing them."

Boston suffered another blow to its starting pitching when Wes Gardner left after throwing just 20 pitches because of a strained muscle in his right elbow.

Angels 5, Tigers 1

At Detroit, Devon White and Dante Bichette had RBI doubles in California's four-run fifth inning. That was all Blyleven needed, leading the Angels to their 16th win in 21 games.

"I swear I didn't know," Blyleven said of his streak of futility in Michigan. "I'm glad nobody told me or I would have gone out and gotten my tail kicked."

The Tigers, with the worst record in the major leagues, have dropped 11 of their last 13. Detroit's 9-21 mark is its worst start since 1953.

"This is the part that's no fun," Detroit manager Sparky Anderson said. "This is the part that will humble you."

Yankees 5, Rangers 3

At New York, two of the newer Yankees were instrumental in the victory. Dave LaPoint, signed as a free agent in the offseason, won his fifth straight start. Jesse Barfield, acquired from Toronto last week, hit his first home run for New York.

LaPoint, 5-1, defeated Charlie Hough for the second time in six days. Hough, 2-4, tied a team record with a career-high nine walks, including two with the bases loaded in 4 1-3 innings. He has issued the most walks in the majors during the past two years and has walked 27 batters in 36 1-3 innings this season, his 20th in the majors.

Hough lost his fourth consecutive start and has dropped eight of his last nine decisions against New York.

Barfield had been 2-for-23 with the Yankees before his two-run homer tied it 2-2 in the third inning.

Texas designated hitter Rick Leach was on the bench in uniform after missing Monday night's game without notifying the team. It was the second time Leach, who was finally in contact with the team Tuesday afternoon after a missing persons report had been filed, had missed a game without permission in two years.

Mariners 4, Blue Jays 3

At Toronto, rookie Erik Hanson allowed three hits in seven innings and Mike Schooler got his seventh save in as many chances. Seattle has won seven of its last eight.

Hanson, 4-2, struck out six and walked one. Dennis Powell pitched the eighth, yielding one hit, then Schooler came on for the save, pitching a perfect ninth.

Seattle took the lead for good in the fifth. Henry Cotto's one-out double scored Harold Reynolds from first and Jeffrey Leonard drove in Cotto with a single for a 4-2 lead. Reynolds reached with a one-out single, extending his hitting streak to a career-high 14 games.

Fred McGriff hit a two-run homer for Toronto.

White Sox 10, Brewers 1

At Milwaukee, Shawn Hillegas allowed four hits in seven-plus innings for his first victory and Ron Kittle hit his third homer against Milwaukee in as many games this season. Hillegas, 1-4, entered the game with a 5.52 ERA. He gave up a single to Robin Yount in the first that extended Yount's hitting streak to 10 games. Rob Deer then tripled home Yount and the Brewers didn't get another hit until the eighth.

Paul Molitor led off the eighth with a single and Gary Sheffield also singled, knocking out Hillegas for Tom McCarthy. He pitched two innings of one-hit relief.

Kittle hit a towering three-run homer to left in the fourth, his sixth of the season and the main part of a 15-hit attack.

Royals 3, Indians 1

At Kansas City, Danny Tartabull walked with the bases loaded in the eighth to snap a tie, then Pat Tabler hit a sacrifice fly.

Bret Saberhagen, 3-3, pitched a five-hitter, striking out seven and walking two in his major-league leading fifth complete game.

With the score tied 1-1, Kurt Stillwell led off the eighth with a single off Tom Candiotti, 3-2, Willie Wilson sacrificed, Candiotti threw a wild pitch and Kevin Seitzer was intentionally walked, loading the bases.

Candiotti walked Tartabull on four straight pitches and Tabler hit his sacrifice fly. Tabler is 38-for-67 in his career with the bases loaded with 91 runs batted in.

Rains Wash Out Practice Runs For Indianapolis 500

INDIANAPOLIS — The steady rain that washed out practice for the Indianapolis 500 gave drivers and crews plenty of time to contemplate the impressive speeds already turned in by Penske teammates Rick Mears and Al Unser.

Mears, the defending Indianapolis 500 winner, then Unser, then Mears again, shattered the unofficial track record on Monday. Some pit-side clocks showed Mears above 226 mph, although the Speedway's electronic timer caught him at 225.733.

Unser, a four-time winner, had a fast lap of 224.831.

Only speeds recorded in qualifications, which begin Saturday, or the race are considered official. Mears' unofficial all-time best last year was 222.827.

"Obviously, the Penske cars are very fast," said Mario Andretti, always among the speed leaders himself but only seventh-fastest starting today's scheduled practice with a top lap on Monday at 222.606.

"We still have a lot of things to try yet, though," the 1969 Indy winner said as the rain Tuesday. "By no means are we ready to throw in the towel."

Andretti sat on the pole in 1987 and was fourth-fastest qualifier last year. This year, like Mears and Unser, he is using a Chevy Indy V8 engine but with a Lola chassis instead of a Penske.

Mears set the official qualification records last year of 220.453 for one lap and 219.198 for four.

Daily practice is scheduled through Friday and again briefly Saturday morning before the start of the first of the two weekends of qualifications.

Tuesday's rain put rookie driver Didier Theys another day behind schedule.

"We missed a big part of the day yesterday (Monday) because we had an engine problem," Theys said. "It was impossible to start the engine. We had to take it out and when we got started, it was very late. We got only about 15 laps.

"They can work on the car in the garage, but for me, it's a little bit frustrating," he said of the rain.

"We have a lot to do on the car, and I can't test (drive) in the garage."

He said he was not surprised by Mears' strong performance so far in practice.

"I felt last week, when I was here for the Rookie Orientation Program, that it (225 mph) was possible. If the track stays in good condition, I think 228 will take the pole. To get in the race, I think 214 at least, 215 maybe. There already are a lot of cars between 218 and 225."

The last rookie driver to win the 500 was Graham Hill in 1966, and Theys wasn't about to make a prediction of victory this year.

Fralic Claims Steroid Use Widespread

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Steroid use "is rampant within the National Football League," with perhaps three-fourths of linemen, linebackers and tight ends using them in a desperate effort to stay competitive, according to All-Pro guard Bill Fralic.

"Steroid use in football represents a vicious cycle," the Atlanta Falcons lineman told a Senate committee Tuesday. "I know there are many players in high school, college and the NFL who want to stop using steroids, but they can't or won't because they don't believe they can be competitive without them."

The Senate Judiciary Committee also heard an estimate from former Pittsburgh Steeler Steve Courson that at least half of pro players at so-called line-of-scrimmage positions use steroids.

The estimates made by the two players, however, were disputed by two head coaches — Marty Schottenheimer of the Kansas City Chiefs and Chuck Noll of the Steelers — who also appeared as witnesses.

It was the committee's second hearing this year on the muscle-building substances, initially used by body builders and power lifters, which were introduced into the NFL in the 1960s when weight training became commonplace.

A bill to ban steroids from the mail and designate them a controlled substance like narcotic drugs has been introduced by senate committee chairman Joseph Biden, D-Del., and Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C.

Witnesses could not agree on how widespread the problem is.

NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle cited an official league estimate that 6 percent to 7 percent of players use steroids, but conceded that figure might not be accurate.

"I thought that's a low figure ... I thought it might be higher," Rozelle said.

Biden asked Schottenheimer and Noll to comment on estimates that 50 percent to 70 percent of NFL players use steroids.

"I would have difficulty, Senator, in imagining that it would be that high," Schottenheimer said.

"I can't imagine that figure as being completely accurate," Noll said.

But Fralic estimated that "exclusive of quarterbacks, running backs and wide receivers, it's probably 75 percent." He said steroid use is far more prevalent among offensive linemen, defensive linemen, linebackers and tight ends.

"I may not be 100 percent accurate, but I'm close," Fralic said.

Courson also said the positions requiring bulk and muscle along the line of scrimmage are the ones with the most steroid users — at least 50 percent among linemen.

"NFL owners can't grasp this problem," Fralic said. "They haven't been living in the middle of the steroid madness. They haven't seen their friends affected by it."

He also said that "coaches at every level turn their back to the steroids situation."

"High school coaches are trying to build an impressive record for their resume or to build their status within a community," Fralic said. "College coaches face tremendous pressure to win. And pro coaches are judged on only one basis, their win-loss record. The cycle keeps repeating itself and a monster problem is growing."

Noll expressed doubts that steroids actually benefit players.

"We must have good, solid people — good football players, who are mentally, physically and emotionally solid," he said. He said strength at lifting weights is not the same as strength on the field.

But both players, as well as coaches Joe Paterno of Penn State and Bo Schembechler of Michigan, told the committee that steroids, whatever their evils, do enhance performance.

"I could not tell you for sure that we do not have kids taking steroids," Paterno said, despite the presence of a university testing program.

Paterno also said Penn State is exploring the idea of inserting a steroid clause into its game contracts with other schools in an effort to avoid placing the Nittany Lions in competition with teams with an unfair chemical advantage.

In other testimony, Gene Upshaw, executive director of the National Football League Players Association, told the panel a poll of players indicated that 75 percent of the union opposes random testing for steroid use.

Fralic, however, said his own poll of the Falcons showed 80 percent of the players would go along with random testing. He said the 20 percent who opposed such testing feared how management might respond to positive tests.

Clemons Hurls Vikings Past North Lenoir, 13-3

LAGRANGE — Travis Clemons pitched four innings of no-hit baseball and improved his record to 5-1 as D.H. Conley took a 13-3 win over North Lenoir in baseball action from the Coastal 3-A Conference Tuesday.

Clemons struck out six and walked one before giving way to Hal Conger in the fifth.

Conley got ahead early, scoring one run in the first as William Crandall walked and was sacrificed to second. Brian Bullock walked and moved up on a fielder's choice by Vines before an error allowed Crandall to score.

Conley added four runs in the second, keyed by an RBI single by Bill Jenkins and an error that allowed two other runs to score.

Crandall and Kervin Vines had two hits each for Conley.

Conley, 11-4 overall and 7-2 in the Coastal, returns to action tomorrow at Williamston.

BELHAVEN — Ernie Gardner and Kent Dickerson drove in three runs apiece to lead Jamesville to a 14-0 shutout win over Belhaven in Tobacco Belt 1-A Conference baseball action Tuesday.

John Asby got the win for Jamesville, striking out six and walking two.

The Bullets pushed across six runs in the first. Gardner, Rusty Lee, Asby, Gardner and Dickerson drove in runs to key the inning.

Jamesville added three runs in the third and fourth to put the game out of reach.

Jamesville, 12-6 overall and 11-3 in the TBC, returns to action at North Edgecombe Thursday.

Cubs' Dawson To Undergo Surgery

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — No sooner had Andre Dawson found his hitting rhythm than the Chicago Cubs lost the services of their slugging outfielder.

Dawson, the National League's Most Valuable Player two years ago, will undergo arthroscopic surgery on his right knee Thursday morning and will be out for at least a month, possibly longer.

"I was just starting to get my rhythm, starting to get where I wanted to be," said Dawson, who broke a nagging slump recently to share Player-of-the-Week honors with San Francisco's Kevin Mitchell.

Dawson had eight straight hits in one stretch and boosted his average to .305 with a club-leading five home runs and 19 runs batted in.

"I can't recall when it happened," said Dawson, indicating the knee problem developed gradually. "I had the knee drained for stiffness earlier in the season and then it kept building up. It came to a head on a stolen base attempt in Los Angeles" last weekend.

Dawson was placed on the 21-day disabled list and the Cubs recalled outfielder Phil Stephenson from their Iowa club.

Dawson has had knee problems in the past, but those mainly involved his left knee. He once had a bone chip removed from the right knee.

"The left knee has been the history of my problems in the past," Dawson said.

As for his absence, Dawson said "The team will have to pull together. We can still win. We've got good pitching."

Dawson's cleanup spot goes to first baseman Mark Grace, who is hitting .321 with two home runs and 17 RBIs.

"This can do two things to us," Grace said. "It can devastate us beyond help, or it can be a shot in the arm for us to go out and do everything possible to keep winning."

"We're going to have to play extra hard," Grace added. "We've lost our security blanket. We'll have to play the games of our lives for the next month. The damage is done. We have to find the will to win."

Chances of the Cubs picking up slugging help are slim considering that General Manager Jim Frey has been trying to get a long-ball hitter all year to bat behind Dawson.

"We'll have to try to see what's out there," Frey said.

"The message is we have to continue playing as we have been playing. For a year or two, we have been building our pitching staff to the point where we don't need six or seven runs to win. "Who knows, we might have a couple of guys who get hot. It's not like we can go to Triple-A and find an Andre Dawson," Frey said. "There's nothing we can do. It's no good to put."

Dawson's big fear is that arthroscopic surgery might reveal more than cartilage damage that could lead to more complicated surgery.

"Then you'd be talking maybe two months," he said.

Manager Don Zimmer shifted Mitch Webster to right field in place of Dawson and will have Dwight Smith in left field and Jerome Walton in center.

"It's something you have to fight through," Zimmer said. "Everybody has problems with injuries. We can still win games if we continue to pitch the way we have been pitching. When you pitch that way, you always have a chance."

On Tuesday, Webster dropped a fly ball that let in two unearned runs in the sixth inning, giving the San Francisco Giants their winning margin in a 4-2 victory over the Cubs at Wrigley Field.

Zimmer refused to blame Webster, who he said would take extra heat because he was replacing Dawson.

"We have the toughest right field in the National League," Zimmer said. "And when you have sun and wind, it's almost impossible. But somebody has to play there."

Collins speaks for first time since 1972 accident

Man Regains Voice After Hitting Door

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ALBERTVILLE, Ala. — A man who spent half his life communicating by sign language and computer regained his voice after he fell into a glass door.

"I feel wonderful," said a very hoarse Lynn Ray Collins, 33, who was hospitalized and recovering from last week's fall.

Dr. Raymond Ufford, Collins' doctor of several years, said he does not know why the accident had such a dramatic effect. But he said the loss of more than three pints of blood may be a factor.

"The only thing that points to some explanation is the excessive loss of blood," Ufford said. "That is a lot of blood to lose and watching that happen, I think he realized he wants to live so he is trying to speak."

Collins lost his voice in 1972 when he was struck by a car, an accident that caused brain damage and left him in a coma for 11 weeks.

Last Wednesday, his head struck the glass of a door at an Albertville store. As blood flowed from the 9-inch cut, Collins began trying to verbally answer paramedics' questions.

Ufford said it still takes "a great effort" to understand Collins. "But he is trying very hard to articulate."

"He's talking and pretty soon everyone will hear him. I praise God," said his mother, Myrtice Collins. "He just wants to talk and talk."

She said he previously would get depressed and refuse to communicate at all, even with the computer or sign language.

Medical personnel did not know Collins couldn't talk when he was taken to the hospital on May 10.

Mrs. Collins and her daughter arrived, heard Collins talk and began yelling, crying, laughing and hugging.

"I guess the doctor must've thought we were crazy, laughing and carrying on over someone with a hole knocked in their head," Mrs. Collins said.

"I just can't believe it," she said. "We thought we were going to lose him after the first accident and now to have another accident cure him. Someone out there must be looking out for us."

Cleanup Ship Sinks Off Valdez

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

VALDEZ, Alaska — A 50-foot landing craft involved in the Prince William Sound oil spill cleanup sank in Valdez Arm. The three people aboard were rescued uninjured, the Coast Guard said.

The Hummer, based in Seward, went down quickly Tuesday night 4 miles west of Galena Bay, spokesman Dave Haulbrook said. He said the three crew members were able to board a life raft, and were picked up by a passing tugboat.

Haulbrook said the crew members were taken to the Alyeska marine tanker terminal in Valdez. The Coast Guard's Marine Safety Office is investigating the accident, Haulbrook said.

The Hummer was under contract to Exxon to help clean up the nation's worst oil spill. It was one of more than 600 vessels working for Exxon on the spill.

A spokeswoman at Exxon's 24-hour command post in Valdez said early today she had no information on the accident, and didn't know who did.

But Exxon sources said the vessel went down so quickly the crewmen only had time to radio a distress call and abandon ship. The sources spoke on condition of anonymity, saying they feared they would be fired if they were identified because only designated spokesmen are permitted to speak with reporters.

They said the landing craft was being used to shuttle supplies from Valdez to support ships around the sound.

The Hummer was en route to Green Island with a load of absorbent material, pumps and tools, they said.

The boat recently had work done on its hull, they said.

It was the second serious accident during the seven-week cleanup effort. Last week, two men escaped injury when their helicopter crashed near Anchorage while on a flight to ferry workers to Valdez.

Bill Rainey, Exxon's operation manager, said Monday the most serious injury to date has been a broken ankle sustained by a woman who fell on an oily beach.

Research Group Claims Boys Have Unfair Edge In Merit Scholarships

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — High school boys have an unfair edge over girls in winning lucrative National Merit Scholarships, a new report claims.

Nearly 63 percent of the 15,000 semifinalists competing for this year's 6,000 merit scholarships are boys, said the report by FairTest, a Cambridge, Mass.-based research group critical of standardized tests.

The report said more scholarships go to boys because the National Merit Scholarship Corporation, of Evanston, Ill., uses the standardized Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test as the sole criterion for determining semifinalists.

The non-profit corporation distributes some $24 million in scholarships a year, ranging from $500 to $8,000 each.

Critics, including FairTest, contend that the PSAT, a multiple choice exam similar to the Scholastic Aptitude Test, is biased against females.

Thirty-one percent of this year's semifinalists are girls, according to the state-by-state analysis that examined the first names of winners. The genders of the remaining 6 percent couldn't be determined from their names.

In previous surveys, FairTest found 60.1 percent of merit scholars were boys in 1987-88, and 61 percent were males in 1986-87.

Marianne Roderick, the scholarship corporation's executive vice president, termed the report misleading and challenged the bias charge. She said that while the PSAT is used to determine semifinalists, actual scholarship winners are chosen on their academic record, leadership potential and other personal qualities.

"In 34 years, we have never based our scholarship decisions solely on a test," she said.

The College Board sponsors the PSAT, taken annually by more than 1 million students, mostly high school juniors. The Educational Testing Service administers the exam.

Test critics claimed a victory in February when a federal judge ruled that New York state scholarship programs discriminated against women because winners were selected solely on the basis of SAT scores.

"There's no excuse for National Merit's continued reliance on a biased test when a federal court has ruled that using similar exams to select scholarship winners constitutes sex discrimination," said Cynthia Schuman, FairTest's executive director.

She said it was too soon to confirm FairTest's figures for 1989 since scholarship winners won't be announced until later this month.

In the "Achievement Program" aimed at awarding 700 merit scholarships to black students, women outnumbered male winners by 58-42 percent, said Roderick. That competition requires information about high school coursework, leadership qualities and other criteria.

The dispute over whether standardized tests like the SAT and PSAT are biased against female students has heated up lately.

Following the New York State court victory by the American Civil Liberties Union, a report last month by the Center for Women Policy Studies identified 23 test questions used in a 1987 SAT exam in which one sex outperformed the other by at least 10 percent. In all but two of those questions, boys bested girls.

The College Board and ETS have issued repeated statements lately denying the charge of test bias. The testmakers contend that women are less likely than men to take advanced math, science and other college prep courses in high school.

Forensic Expert To Study Old Tale Of Cannibalism

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — To prove that old bones can still tell tales, plans are afoot to open a Colorado grave and establish whether five prospectors were eaten by the legendary Alferd G. Packer, or someone else, or not at all.

James Starrs, professor of law and forensic science at George Washington University's National Law Center, plans to lead an expedition for evidence that cannibalism was committed during that awful April in 1874.

Packer, a Union Army veteran, has stood accused in verse and mirth of killing the victims and eating their flesh. Packer said he killed one prospector, in self-defense, and he denied eating anyone.

So famous is the case that a cafeteria at the University of Colorado, and the one in the Department of Agriculture here, are named in Packer's honor, a mocking commentary on their culinary qualities.

Starrs, one of the nation's forensic experts, insists his purpose is scientific: to show how anthropology — the study of man, his customs, culture, and social relationships — can combine with archeology and pathology in solving crimes.

Even after 115 years, he said, the bones will tell if cannibalism occurred. "Any scraping of tissue of flesh should leave evidence on the bone," he said. The examination may even show whether the starving prospectors ate their shoeleather, as alleged.

The search will start July 17 at a grave at the foothills of the San Juan Mountains near Lake City, Colo.

The undertaking has a critic in Ervan F. Kushner, 74, an amateur historian and Packer defender. He calls Starrs' plans "macabre" and says, "I don't see the point of it."

Kushner, a retired judge and prosecutor from Paterson, N.J., is author of "Alferd G. Packer: Cannibal! Victim?"

"Mr. Starrs is a well-known forensics expert," Kushner said, "but what possible proof can there be found in the bones as to motive? If he enjoys digging in that beautiful scenery, that's a great place to dig, but how will it establish who struck the first blow?"

Some facts are known. Packer admitted killing Shannon Wilson

Bell, one of the prospectors, but he said he acted out of self-defense, and claimed Bell had killed and cannibalized their fellow miners.

But Starrs, a 30-year student of the case, said Packer "was a concerted and deliberate and long-term liar throughout the trial. His five-hour narration is filled with inconsistency and glaring falsehoods."

Oil Reserves Decline

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The nation's emergency stockpile of oil is losing its value as a shield against an energy crisis, former energy secretary James Schlesinger told Congress.

Schlesinger told a House Banking subcommittee Tuesday that the Strategic Petroleum Reserve was being undermined by the nation's growing appetite for imported oil.

"As a protective device it offers less and less protection," Schlesinger said.

Although the government is continuing to fill the oil reserve, imports are growing even faster. As a result, the reserves would not stretch as far in an emergency as they would have just a few years ago, he said.

Dissident Airmen, Soldiers Lead Unsuccessful Attack In Guatemala

By Richard Boudreaux
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

GUATEMALA CITY, Guatemala — Dissident soldiers backed by three combat aircraft marched toward strategic points of the capital in a pre-dawn uprising Tuesday but were stopped by troops loyal to civilian President Vinicio Cerezo Arevalo, his government reported.

Guatemalan officials said the two-hour coup attempt was staged by 300 army and air force men and led by 12 active or retired officers harboring a mixture of grievances. They said 10 of the plotters were arrested and not a shot was fired.

"Today there was an attempt to break the constitutional order of the country, but at this moment the situation is under the government's and the army's control," Cerezo told reporters at the National Palace. He was flanked by Gen. Hector Gramajo Morales, the most powerful military figure in the country.

Although both men tried to play down the revolt, it seemed to underscore the fragility of Cerezo's tenure after three years in office and his dependence on the armed forces to finish his constitutional term in 1991. Guatemala has never sustained a modern democratic government for long. This was the second uprising in the past year.

Gramajo said one immediate aim of the revolt was to oust him as defense minister. The general's support for the government foiled the previous coup attempt, when troops backed by rightist businessmen and landowners marched on the capital last May 11.

Four army officers cashiered for their involvement in that revolt were among those arrested Tuesday, the defense minister said.

One arrested navy officer, Capt. Romeo Guevara Reyes, was fired from his job as national police chief last week by Interior Minister Roberto Valle Valdizan after a dispute between the two men. Guevara's spokesman had accused the minister of trying to turn the police into an instrument of Cerezo's Christian Democratic Party in the next presidential campaign.

Col. Juan Galvez, one of the others arrested, was under investigation in a scandal over the resale of parts acquired for the air force.

"The movement was not ideologically or politically motivated," the defense minister said. "It was a very small group of officers. They did not present any concrete petitions."

Cerezo, 46, said his government was "bound to suffer this type of problem occasionally" and emphasized that the bulk of the military remained behind him.

"We are heartened that the military as an institution has rejected the attempt of some elements to overthrow the government and is continuing its support for constitutional civilian-led democracy in Guatemala," U.S. State Department spokesman Richard Boucher said in Washington.

Gramajo gave this account: At 5 a.m., Col. Galvez and other co-conspirators flew over the capital in two A-37 Dragonfly bombers and a helicopter gunship. Meanwhile, 150 rebel air force troops marched from their unit at Guatemala's international airport, which they temporarily closed, to the Pacific coastal highway and to Gramajo's home.

The other 150 rebels were sent from the city's main army base to the Atlantic coast highway and downtown to the government telecommunications company, national radio and police headquarters.

Superior numbers of loyalist troops rushed to those targets and protected them with light tanks, the minister said, while soldiers from the country's Honor Guard restored order in the rebel units.

However, unofficial reports said the rebels took over the police station and the government-owned radio. At 5 a.m. an unidentified voice on the radio shouted "Attention! Attention! People of Guatemala!" but did not follow with a message. The station then broadcast only martial or marimba music until loyalist troops regained control of the city about 7 a.m.

Guatemala, Central America's most populous country with 8.7 million people, was under military rule almost continuously from 1954 until Cerezo took office in 1986.

Baker, Soviet Pledge 'Good Results'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — Secretary of State James A. Baker III held his first round of talks today with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze as they joined in a pledge to produce "good results" for superpower relations.

The two-hour and 45-minute session at a Soviet Foreign Ministry mansion established goals and ground rules for four working groups that opened discussions on arms control, human rights, regional problems and direct U.S.-Soviet relations.

Baker, who had never been in the Soviet Union before, attended a meeting with several members of the Congress of People's Deputies parliament, a new body elected as President Mikhail S. Gorbachev gives greater powers to the legislative arm of government.

In his two-day visit, which will be capped by a meeting Thursday afternoon with Gorbachev, the U.S. secretary of state is playing down arms control and soliciting Soviet help in accelerating the fledgling U.S. drive for Arab-Israeli negotiations.

The U.S. approach to the Middle East represents a shift in diplomatic gears from two decades of trying to fence out both the Soviet Union and the Palestine Liberation Organization as apt to undermine American peace-making.

Baker flew in from Helsinki, Finland, and was whisked immediately to the Soviet Foreign Ministry guest house to see Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze.

In a brief exchange with reporters as he waited for the new U.S. secretary of state, Shevardnadze was asked whether the dispute over short-range nuclear missiles that is straining the North Atlantic Treaty Organization would be discussed. "Probably," he said, but declined to say whether he would raise the subject.

Baker and Shevardnadze conferred privately for 45 minutes with only Dennis Ross, the policy planning director of the U.S. State Department, and American and Russian interpreters present.

Soviet First Deputy Foreign Minister Alexander Bessmertnykh told the Tass news agency that Baker and Shevardnadze were holding a general discussion of U.S.-Soviet relations and setting the schedule for meetings of experts Wednesday and Thursday in Moscow.

"In other words, intensive negotiations will be started," Bessmertnykh told Tass.

If the Soviets push the missile issue they could widen the fissures between the United States and West Germany over NATO's nuclear arsenal.

The Bush administration, supported mostly by Britain, wants to enhance the range of the 88 Lance launchers and their 700 or so missiles, most of which are in West Germany, while Chancellor Helmut Kohl, backed by a majority of the alliance, is resisting and calling for U.S.-Soviet negotiations on such weapons in Europe.

After their initial conversation, Baker and Shevardnadze moved into a white marble hall to join their delegations.

This is the first time Baker and Robert Gates, the deputy director of the Central Intelligence Agency, who is a prominent member of the U.S. delegation, have been to Moscow.

Amnesty Charges Mubarak Tortures, Abuses Opponents

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — President Hosni Mubarak's government has engaged in a persistent pattern of torture, whipping, sexually abusing and hanging political prisoners by their wrists, Amnesty International charged today.

Evidence of torture comes from interviews with victims detained from 1986 to 1988 and more than 100 medical reports by the Egyptian Justice Ministry's forensic medicine department, a spokeswoman for the human rights group said.

At least 3,000 political opponents, many of them members of Islamic groups, have been arrested arbitrarily under state of emergency laws since 1986, Amnesty spokeswoman Carline Windall said. Many were held incommunicado for weeks or months before being formally charged, she said.

Egypt's Interior Ministry today denied that the country has any political prisoners and said it was "absolutely untrue that there is torture of any kind."

The ministry in a statement said, "Government prosecutors and the courts are in charge of detainees and investigate any complaints the detainees have. ... Until now, there has been no proof that any torture exists."

The London-based group said in its 40-page report, "The torture testimony has been consistent and prompts the conclusion that there is a pattern of torture in Egypt and that there are insufficient safeguards to protect detainees from torture."

Emergency laws allow virtually indefinite detention without charge. Egypt has been under an almost continuous state of emergency since 1967.

Mubarak came to power on Oct. 6, 1981 after Moslem fundamentalists assassinated President Anwar Sadat.

Amnesty's report said torture usually occurs during the first days of detention. It cited the case of a 22-year-old student, Mahmoud Agami Mehelhil, who was arrested in February 1987, held incommunicado for 37 days, and allegedly stripped, blindfolded and whipped all over his body.

The report says Mehelhil still bears the physical marks of torture and believes he was released from Mazra'at Tora Prison south of Cairo without trial so that the court would not see his injuries.

The document also cites reports by Moslem activists of beatings with cables and whips, burnings with cigarettes, and other forms of torture.

It said many torture victims were among the thousands of political suspects arrested after the attempted assassinations in May and August 1987 of former Interior Ministers Maj. Gen. Hassan Abu Basha and Maj. Gen. Nabawi Ismail and of magazine editor Makram Muhammed Ahmed.

The report said at least 1,500 Moslems were detained across the country after a demonstration in a mosque in the southern city of Fayoum on April 7.

Fundamentalist Moslems are demanding enactment of Sharia, Islam's legal and social code with harsh criminal penalties like limb amputation and flogging.

The government contends 90 percent of Egyptian laws already conform to Sharia, but they do not include the Islamic code's corporal punishments.

Amnesty's report called on the Egyptian government to provide political detainees access to lawyers, relatives and doctors.

Egypt was among the first six countries in 1986 to sign a U.N. convention against torture.

German Executive Faces Charge

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Authorities today arrested the former head of a West Germany company at the center of a scandal involving a suspected chemical weapons plant in Libya, a prosecutor said.

West German and U.S. authorities alleged that the company, Imhausen-Chemie, was the key supplier of material for the plant in the Libyan city of Rabta. Libya claimed the plant was for making pharmaceuticals, but U.S. and West German officials claim it was intended to manufacture chemical weapons.

Chinese Students Take To Bikes To Press Protest

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — Thousands of students bicycled to major media and government offices today to protest censorship, and officials announced their first policy change in response to demands made in nearly a month of pro-democracy protests.

The Ministry of Supervision said today that it will allow more open news reporting of corruption cases, saying the move was "prompted by the recent demands of Beijing university students to crack down on corruption."

Today's protest by more than 5,000 students came a day after a petition signed by more than 1,000 Chinese journalists seeking press freedom in this Communist nation was delivered to government officials.

"We're riding bicycles today because we're too tired to walk," said a history student who was a veteran of four recent protest marches along the 10-mile route to the nation's top schools to Tiananmen Square downtown.

"The road to democracy is very long," said a Tibetan student from the Nationalities Institute. "We are riding on bicycles to get there faster."

About 1,000 protesters pedaled out of Beijing University, the country's most prestigious, and were joined by students from about six other schools.

Protesters filled all six lanes of the street in front of their first stop, China Central Television headquarters, and shouted slogans critical of the government-controlled media.

"The People's Daily cheats the people!" they chanted, referring to the ruling Communist Party's official newspaper. "The press must speak the truth!" they yelled.

Many cyclists wore green, yellow and red headbands that read, "Democracy, Freedom and Beijing University."

As the colorful procession passed major intersections lined with workers, several students would raise both hands to flash the "V" for victory sign.

Police, who in previous demonstrations tried to block protesters, helped clear the way for the bicyclists as traffic backed up for several miles. Some students distributed leaflets on buses that urged, "Liberate the press."

After the rally outside the TV headquarters, the protesters moved to the main office of state-run Xinhua News Agency and later to police headquarters, where they chanted: "Thank you police, for working for the people."

On its way to the People's Daily, the party mouthpiece, the procession's loose organization gave way to some disorder when it ran into rush-hour traffic.

At the People's Daily, several thousand people gathered outside and cheered as the students inched by. A group of about 50 writers and poets also joined the protest march. By evening, the students were on their way home.

Cyclists carried a statement protesting "government delays toward the students request for a dialogue" and demanding "that as soon as possible the government hold a true, open dialogue that will resolve problems of concern to the broad masses of people."

The government has refused to meet with independent student groups established over the past month.

At the front of the leisurely paced procession were students traveling by three-wheel pedicab who held high a banner that said, "The press must speak the truth."

A free press is a major demand of university students who since mid-April have staged the largest demonstrations in Communist China's 40-year history. "Early this week we were tired, but now we are ready to fight again," said one history student from Beijing University, a campus of more than 10,000.

The last mass march was Thursday, when tens of thousands of people poured into Tiananmen Square — the country's symbolic seat of power — to celebrate the 70th anniversary of China's first student movement.

The bicycle procession was organized by Beijing University, where sentiment to maintain the pro-democracy movement is strongest.

When other schools decided to end a two-week class boycott over the weekend, Beijing University students immediately voted to continue the strike to apply pressure on the government to respond to their demands.

Activists at Beijing Normal University resumed their class boycott today and one student estimated that perhaps two-thirds or more of his classmates stayed away from class.

The journalists' petition delivered Tuesday was a rare expression of discontent by China's reporters, many of whom are members of the ruling Communist Party.

"Restrictions of every kind have prevented full, objective and fair reporting" on the recent student protests, the appeal said.

The petition said there was "a need" for party propaganda officials to hold talks with reporters on censorship.

U.S. Closes Its Center In Korea

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEOUL, South Korea — The U.S. Cultural Center in the southern provincial city of Kwangju, a frequent target of violent attacks by radical students, was closed today, American officials said.

The center had been a target by radicals who oppose the presence of 43,000 U.S. troops based in the country under a mutual defense treaty.

A notice was posted on the front gate saying the center would be closed temporarily while a new site is chosen, the U.S. embassy said.

It was the first closure of a U.S. cultural center in 40 years and the embassy played down the event, saying it was temporary for an office move.

The closure precedes the anniversary May 18 of the bloody 1980 Kwangju civil uprising in which 200 people were killed and 1,000 injured.

Anti-American sentiment is strong in Kwangju; residents blame U.S. officials for doing nothing during the crackdown.

Elsewhere, farmers protesting imports of U.S. agricultural products staged a sit-in outside the U.S. ambassador's residence today. Police said 26 were arrested.

The sit-in was brief and peaceful, witnesses said. The residence, on a narrow street near downtown, has been uninhabited since the last ambassador left in January. A new ambassador has yet to arrive.

"U.S. trade pressure is endangering our life and South Korea's agriculture industry," said leaflets distributed by the farmers.

Yonhap, the South Korean news agency, said U.S. officials tried to move the cultural center to an outlying center of Kwangju, 160 miles from Seoul, but that residents of the area complained and a new site has not been found.

The center has been attacked repeatedly since 1980 by students wielding firebombs and yelling anti-American slogans. The U.S. State Department said last January that the center would be moved if the attacks continued or if there was concern for safety of the staff.

Dissidents and radical students welcomed the closure, claiming the center should remain closed permanently. Newspapers in Seoul called the closure a measure to avoid possible trouble during the Kwangju anniversary.

Critics Say FSX Deal Bad For U.S.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Congressional critics of the FSX warplane deal told a Senate panel today that the United States would get the worst of the bargain in sharing with Japan technology used for America's F-16 fighter.

"The evidence before us is that we're really not getting anything in return," Sen. Alan J. Dixon, D-Ill., said in testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Advocates of the FSX agreement, which involves co-producing an advance version of the F-16, have said the United States would gain access to Japanese composite wing construction and phased array radar technologies.

But Dixon said a study by the General Accounting Office, an investigative arm of Congress, has found that U.S. companies already have such technologies.

Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., called the arguments on the technology flowback from Japan "total nonsense and a facade to cover up the shortcomings of this deal."

The FSX deal was strongly defended at the hearing by a panel of senior Bush administration officials, including Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee and three House Foreign Affairs subcommittees scheduled additional hearings today.

President Bush last month approved a $7 billion agreement under which the United States and Japan would co-produce an advanced version of the F-16 fighter.

U.S. Asks Europe To Hold Up Aid To Ortega Regime

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration is exhorting European countries to withhold economic aid to Nicaragua as a means of pressuring President Daniel Ortega to hold the free elections he has said will take place in February.

"Our position on assistance to the Nicaraguans is well-known," deputy State Department spokesman Richard Boucher told reporters Tuesday. "We believe that economic assistance should be closely linked to Sandinista compliance with their promises to hold free, fair and honest elections."

Boucher's statement came as a privately financed panel, the Commission on Free and Fair Elections in Nicaragua, heard skeptical testimony about prospects that the elections will result in establishment of a freely elected government in Nicaragua.

Paul Reichler, a Washington attorney representing Nicaragua's Marxist-led Sandinista regime, was scheduled to testify today. A commission spokesman said a representative of the National Security Council would also appear.

Ortega is on a tour of European capitals to seek additional aid for his country's troubled economy. He is urging government officials to attend a conference in Stockholm at the end of this week, at which Managua will present its case for increased assistance.

The Nicaraguan president signed an accord in February with El Salvador, Guatemala, Costa Rica and Honduras in which he promised electoral and other legal reforms to ensure fair general elections. Last week, his government rejected an opposition demand to negotiate further reforms.

At Tuesday's opening session of the commission hearings, Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole said he hopes for free elections, "but, candidly, I am not very optimistic."

"The record so far — as manifest, for example, in the sham of a new election law recently promulgated by the comandantes — is hardly encouraging," the Kansas Republican said.

John Silber, president of Boston University and a member of the Kissinger Commission that studied U.S. Central American policy in 1983, told the panel, "I do not see anything in the upcoming elections but an opportunity to delude ourselves. I believe we are in a corner, waiting for the paint to dry." Danilo Jimenez, Costa Rican ambassador to the United States, testified, "It has been now recognized I think by most reasonable people that the measures undertaken by the Sandinista regime have been insufficient to guarantee that the electoral process which should have started now will be a fair and just process that will culminate in free elections and in handing over the government to those who win the free elections."

Allen Weinstein, president of the Center for Democracy, a Washington-based study group that has been invited by both government and opposition parties in Nicaragua to observe preparations for the election, was somewhat more optimistic.

"An absolute prerequisite for the conduct of free and fair elections in a country whose history has been characterized by recent civil strife is basic agreement between the contending groups on the underlying ground rules," Weinstein said.

"Although such agreement has not been reached in Nicaragua to date, it is apparent that the government recognizes the intense concern and pressure to achieve such fully acceptable ground rules, pressure which has come from recent observer groups to Nicaragua from Venezuela, Costa Rica, the United States and Europe."

The commission, established by the conservative World Freedom Foundation, is chaired by former Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., and Curtin Winsor Jr., ambassador to Costa Rica in the Reagan administration.

Other members are Sergio Bendixen, president of a Democratic political consulting firm in Washington; Alan Keyes, a scholar at the American Enterprise Institute and a former assistant secretary of state in the Reagan administration; Elaine Kamarck, a Democratic political strategist; and Victor Gold, a longtime adviser to Republican politicians.

One For All...

Many dealerships boast about their "extensive selections" of quality previously-owned automobiles. In most cases, however, their selection is "extensively" spread out over dealerships all across North Carolina. But at World Classics by Toyota East, we've got the the best selection of previously-owned luxury cars at any one location in the state!

Each and every automobile on our lot is thoroughly examined for quality by Mr. Ed Sigmon. If it doesn't meet his high standards, we don't sell it. Whatever your automotive tastes, we've got one for all, and all for you. Best of all, it's all in one place—World Classics by Toyota East.

Pitt Phlebotomist Dispenses Humor To Hospitalized Children And Adults

By Rosalie Trotman
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

With her barnyard stroll and her barnyard strut, both of which she taught herself by recalling her grandmother's chickenyard, Greenville resident Judge Rembert brings her irrepressible good humor to the patients of Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

On her own time, and just for the fun of it, the hospital employee dons her eight-foot yellow chicken costume she bought herself and becomes "Funny Feathers," bringing relaxation and fun to children and adults undergoing the stress of being hospitalized.

"Humor has always been an important part of survival in my life," Ms. Rembert said. "My family has always enjoyed laughter. We laugh at ourselves and at each other."

"There is so much going on in a hospital and stress is a constant companion to every health care provider, patient, visitor or family member. A little humor can make stress manageable," she said.

Last year when she started working at Pitt County Memorial Hospital in the Specimen Acquisitions Department as a phlebotomist, the South Carolina native carried "Peanut" her love for humor with her.

JUDGE REMBERT AND 'PEANUT'

"A relaxed patient is much easier to work with," she said. "Often a little humor helps relax people."

"As I traveled the hospital halls meeting patients, I began wanting to do something special for each one I met. So I found some small smiley face stickers and each time I drew blood, I placed a sticker on the patient's hospital identification bracelet. I would tell them it was their smile for the day," she said. "It made me happy and the patients seemed to like them."

Ms. Rembert's next self-generated patient project was "We Care" posters.

"I started noticing," she said, "that some patients didn't have as many cards and flowers as others and I began making my posters, which are white sheets of paper covered with flowers and the words, 'You Are Special and We Care.' I put them up in the room so visitors and staff can sign them and the patient can take them home as a souvenir."

But her favorite way to share by strutting and strolling the halls of the hospital in her free time as Funny Feathers. "Funny Feathers is a very sexy chicken and loves visiting patients," she said.

Ms. Rembert laughs as she describes how she conceived her barnyard strut.

"When I started thinking chickens, I visualized chickens walking around in my grandmother's backyard," she said. "They walk with their feet turned outward, knees locked and are bent slightly forward; and of course, I had to add in a little wiggle action."

"Funny Feathers' feathers are unbelievably hot, but when I see the smiles on faces and hear the laughter in the halls, I completely forget the discomfort."

"When little arms reach out and hug Funny, there is a love that is given that is open, free and 100 percent pure," she said. "A child doesn't hold back when he loves. Funny Feathers has a rare opportunity to be a small part in some of the miracles that take place at PCMH."

"She gets back far more than she gives."

Even the trip to get the Funny Feathers costume is a pleasant memory for Ms. Rembert. She said she and her friend Susan Spain left Greenville one morning at 3:15 to go to Charlotte to buy and bring back her chicken suit.

During weekend working hours, Ms. Rembert trades her chicken motif for some help from her monkey puppet Peanut.

"Peanut applied for a job as my assistant and wanted learn to draw blood," she said. "We found that the sight of a needle made him sick. He still travels with me but he hides his face while I work."

"On days when Peanut stays away, I have Huff 'N' Puff and Woff-Woff, my bright yellow dogs, with me."

Ms. Rembert has named her group Smiles Unlimited. She and all her assistants are available to help health-related organizations. Funny Feathers plans to be at the annual PCMH Neonatal Party at 3 p.m. Saturday, and she will take part in the local portion of the Children's Miracle Network Telethon, June 3-4 in the Brody Building Auditorium.

So why does such a good-humored person have such a seemingly humorless name as Judge? "I was a very solemn baby, and by the time I was 2 months old, my father commented that it was like having a judge in the house," she said. "My mother started calling me 'The Judge.' Later when my parents tried to call me by my given name, I refused to give up the name Judge."

"I've now legally had Judge put on my birth certificate," she said. "It is official."

Revolting Toys Hold Slimy Grip On Market

By Beverly Beyette
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Welcome to the contemporary kingdom of "Toy land, toy land, little girl and boy land..."

Where, in an "evil pit of gruesome ooze ... horrible goop turns trapped warriors into Slime monsters" (Slime included).

Where, with the Mad Scientist Dissect-An-Alien kit with plastic scalpel, youngsters can "yank out alien organs dripping with flowing alien blood!" (Warning: Alien blood sticks to fabrics and hair and is impervious to dry cleaning).

Where, with a Nintendo and a Millipede game, boys and girls can get "lost in a dark, perilous and enchanted forest (where) dark dangerous mushrooms push up through the squishy forest floor, snaring you on every side..."

Where, taking aim with their Gloopster Game gun, children can "fire globs of oozing, slimy goop up to 25 feet!" (Goop comes in easy-to-load cartridges).

Where, by depressing the plunger on Gooper Ghost's backpack — which comes with twin Nutrona Blasters — youngsters can make him ooze purple Ecto-Plazm kisses.

And they can do it all while munching Boogers, a gummy green candy that has spawned its own cult humor, as in: "What's the difference between school books and boogers? You put your school books on top of the table."

Guns have peaked, ditto high-priced talking dolls and animals. Barbie, who just turned 30, was never more popular, with Mattel expecting 1989 sales to surpass 1988's 40 million worldwide. And gross, it seems, is always good in the selling of toys.

"The more the parents scream, the more the kids want it," said Tom Berquist, a Connecticut-based idea man who brought "Boogers" to Con-fex candy company in New Jersey.

"I wouldn't call it a trend," said

LAT-WP News Service

Slimer figurine, Boogers candy and Soggy Boglius Slobster join other gross toys on shelves

Bruce Apar, editor of Toy and Hobby World in New York, of the proliferation of gross on toy shelves. Because the toy business is a low entry-level business, he explained, it is easy for someone struck by inspiration to market something that is "either tasteless or totally inappropriate" as a new toy.

For the most part, he noted, these come from companies that "come out of obscurity and usually go back in, and justifiably so." Many, he added, never make their way into stores.

From his "Hall of Shame" folder Apar culled a sampling: A "Brat on Board" doll, face contorted, designed to look as though it's hanging out a car window. Marty Toy Co.'s genuine replica of Freddy's Glove from "A Nightmare on Elm Street," complete with plastic blades extending from the fingers.

There is nothing inherently unwholesome in ooey, goeey, slimy toys, said Dr. Jerome Karasic, a psychiatrist specializing in children and adolescents and a clinical associate psychiatry professor at the University of Southern California.

"There is a fondness for the dirty, the ugly, or whatever, the detestable, in the very young infant," he said. "As the infant matures, he learns that it's not acceptable and gives up his fondness. The slimy, ooey, goeey toys are like a bad joke, or maybe a good joke. If it helps a child to express something inside, what could be wrong with it?"

Grown-ups, recognizing the necessity for acceptable and hygienic behavior, react to a child's fondness for the dirty by saying, "Ugh! Yuck!" and the children quickly adopt those attitudes," Karasic said. Nevertheless, he observed, adults' own childhood attachments are not easily shaken: "Grown-ups sometimes like to go out in the garden and get mud on their hands."

"Threatening" toys are another matter, Karasic said. He includes in that category Freddy's Glove: "I don't think that glove has any place. I think it's a sadistic toy."

The real trend from this year's Toy Fair, Apar said, was that "there were no trends, and there haven't been for a couple of years now. ... There's nothing really distinguishing itself from the rest of the pack."

The exception: Nintendo, which in 1988 sold 7 million playing machines and 32.5 million video games.

But, look for: "Trump, The Game," coming in May from Milton Bradley, in competition with the Monopoly people. The object is to be the player with the most money, a la New York real estate magnate Donald Trump. More Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles action figures. Electronic baseball cards where the players talk to you.

And a generous dollop of slime and ooze and blood and monsters.

The Garbage Pail Kids craze, which started in 1985, is "pretty much finished" in the United States, said Norman Liss of Topps, its New York-based manufacturer. Now they are in Holland, the United Kingdom, Germany, Israel and in France, where they are being marketed as "Les Crados."

But, Liss said, Topps is bringing back Garbage Candy, which he described as "a miniature pail filled with pieces of candy in the shape of things you'd find in the garbage — fish heads, old shoes..."

Noting that toy land trends tend to be cyclical, with four years a "real long life" for most new toys, Liss said, "We have a product now called Dinosaurs Attack, in which dinosaurs go wild and attack people and eat them up ... years ago we did Mars Attacks. Very similar."

As for gross, he said, "Gross has always been in with kids ... I think gross will continue, yeah."

The Verdict On NBC's Drama 'Roe Vs. Wade:' It's As Good As TV Gets

By Kathryn Baker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — "Roe vs. Wade" is bound to start a lot of living-room debates, but one fact is inarguable — this is as good as television drama gets.

NBC's story of the legalization of abortion, airing Monday, is graced by Emmy-worthy performances down to the smallest supporting role and a courageous script that takes a stand without talking down to the other side.

Holly Hunter ("Broadcast News") stars as Ellen Russell, a penniless drifter who has left an abusive husband and been forced to give her daughter to her mother to raise. Unmarried and pregnant again, she faces the prospect of having to give up another baby for adoption.

Hardly the most sympathetic case imaginable — "You have the morals of a cat," snipes her mother — she is nevertheless the only woman willing to allow two young female lawyers to use her case as a test of Texas' stringent anti-abortion law.

The character of Ellen is based on Norma McCorvey, the real-life, then-anonymous "Jane Roe" who sued Dallas District Attorney Henry Wade for enforcing the law. Her case led to the 1973 U.S. Supreme Court decision legalizing abortion. The Supreme Court recently heard arguments on a Missouri case, and the justices' ruling this summer could effect the 1973 decision.

Producers used pseudonyms for McCorvey, her relatives and friends to protect their privacy. Since work on the script began three years ago, however, McCorvey has become a public critic of efforts to overturn the abortion decision.

Other characters' real names are used. Amy Madigan ("Field of Dreams") is excellent as Sarah Weddington, the neophyte lawyer who successfully argues the case, first before a panel of federal judges in Texas. They find the anti-abortion law unconstitutionally vague but refuse to grant an injunction, leaving the law on the books until the decision can be appealed and forcing Ellen to continue with the pregnancy.

"You might explain to me how it is you won and I lost," says a distraught Ellen when Weddington calls to explain the decision to her.

The movie follows the dual struggles of Russell as she is refused job after job because she is pregnant, and Weddington, who finds plenty of support but scant actual help preparing the complex case for the high court. Her partner, Linda Coffey (Annabella Price), has to virtually drop out because of the demands of other legal work.

By the time Weddington argues the case before the Supreme Court in 1973, Ellen has long since had her baby and given it up for adoption, the only solution the state offers. In the movie's most powerful scene, Ellen vainly tugs at the delivery table restraints trying to get a glimpse of the baby as it is carried away. She doesn't even know if it's a boy or a girl.

Ultimately, because the movie tells the story of the women who won the case, it cannot avoid being pro-choice. "If you can't take care of a baby or aren't ready to, it shouldn't matter what the reasons are," Weddington argues at one point. "You shouldn't have to bear a child and give it up for adoption just because the state of Texas says so."

But the other side is treated sympathetically through Terry O'Quinn's eloquently understated portrayal of Jay Floyd, the assistant attorney general assigned the task of defending the Texas law. Floyd, like Weddington, has never argued before the Supreme Court. The bachelor begins receiving mail from women's groups on Weddington's side. One letter suggests he might understand the issue better if he had a uterus transplant.

"I thought I'd write back that I may not have a uterus, but I was definitely a baby," Floyd tells a colleague.

Placemats Give Touch Of Class

Houndstooth checks with a monogram — what a touch of class! Four pre-cut plastic canvas ovals and worsted-weight yarns are the basis for this personalized set of placemats. After you make a set for yourself, we're betting you will want to make more for gifts — and summer is the perfect time to get a head start on holiday gifts.

The monogram is worked first, from a simple graph chart, and then the easy check design is done in vertical rows, one color at a time. Once the pattern is established it's a snap to complete the place mat. A narrow border outlines the oval shape.

To obtain directions for making the Personalized Place Mat Set, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-050789 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order your kit No. N-050789 by sending a check or money order for $16.95 to the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions, needle, canvas and yarn in your choice of the following colors: green tones, blue tones or earth tones.

Dear Pat: I am a needlepointer from way back, but only recently tried a plastic canvas project. I loved the results, but found that I could not use my usual "one motion" stitching method with this type of canvas. I found the "up in one hole, down in the other" two-step motion much slower. I think it would be a good idea if you would warn others of this. Sally W., Birmingham, Ala.

Dear Sally: I, too, initially worked all needlepoint with what I refer to as "surface stitching," putting the needle down in one hole and up in another in a single motion. However, long before the introduction of plastic canvas, I learned that by using a frame and the "stab" technique, which is, as you say, two-step motion, I could avoid the bias distortion that previously made it necessary to do extensive blocking to straighten the piece out.

Therefore, I never thought of this as being a problem with plastic canvas. And truly, when you become accustomed to "stab-stitching," I think you will find it almost as fast.

If you once try it on a traditional fiber canvas with a needlepoint-working frame and see the difference it makes on the finished work, you may never go back to the surface stitching method.

And with plastic canvas, absolutely no blocking is needed and the finishing techniques are so much quicker and easier than any time lost in using the stab-stitching technique is really made up.

Monogrammed houndstooth placemats make great gifts

Since today's project is suitable for the beginner, this seems a good time for a pointer of two. Most beginners make the mistake of using a very long length yarn in the needle. But with each pull of the yarn through the hole, the yarn thins slightly, resulting in uneven stitches. Generally 18 to 22 inches is about right, unless each stitch crosses several canvas meshes. In that case, longer lengths are satisfactory.

In any type of needlepoint, the yarn tends to twist as you work. A little spin of the needle held between your thumb and forefinger after every few stitches will usually take the twist out. Or, if it is quite twisted, hold up the canvas and let the needle dangle below it and the twist will automatically come out.

Threading the needle can be a problem for a beginner. Moistening the end and sticking it through the needle just doesn't work as it does with sewing threads. Special needle threaders are available in most stores selling needlepoint supplies. If you don't have one, cut a narrow strip from the folded edge of an envelope, slip the yarn into the fold and insert the strip into the eye of a large-eyed tapestry needle.

Or try this: fold the yarn over the eye and pinch needle and yarn between your thumb and forefinger. Then, pull out the needle and, pinching firmly on the fold, press the eye against the fold of the yarn. The yarn will then just pop into the eye. This takes a bit of practice, but once learned, it works great. Good luck!

Telephone Sales Invade Privacy

Dear Abby: As a former telephone salesperson (six years), I agree with you, Abby. Most people consider these calls an invasion of their privacy. Three out of four calls are likely to come at an inconvenient time for the person called — they are either sick, napping, outside cutting the grass, changing the baby or just walking out the door for an appointment.

The arguments against telephone sales far outnumber the arguments for. Someone living in a high-rise apartment building can be called by an aluminum siding salesperson. And a person who is in bed with two broken legs from a skiing accident can be called by someone selling dancing lessons!

Keep right on campaigning against telemarketing, Abby. Anything that comes in the mail can be thrown away. Junk mail is what keeps the post office busy these days. So keep Uncle Sam's employees busy and let the home be the one place of privacy where nobody can intrude and bother you. Because I value my privacy, sign me... Anonymous

Dear Abby: Count me among those who resent being solicited for business on my home telephone.

One day last week I received a telephone call from someone who was trying to sell me a carpet-cleaning service. I politely said, "I'm unable to talk to you right now. Will you please give me your home telephone number?"

His response: "I'm sorry, but I do not conduct business from my home."

I replied: "Well, neither do I. Have a nice day." — Had Enough In Cedar Rapids, Iowa

Dear Abby: I am a commercial airline pilot. Often I get up at 2 a.m. for a flight. Conversely, I am often in bed by 6 p.m. I take my sleep seriously, as my safety and the safety of more than 100 passengers and my crew depend on my making alert, intelligent decisions.

I frequently get calls from telephone solicitors at 8 p.m. and later. Asking that my name be removed from their lists has done no good. I have even tried an unlisted number — to no avail.

Let me decide when I need new encyclopedias, family portraits, kitchen remodeling or dance lessons. Then I will shop around, make my own choices and contact the appropriate company. In the meantime, I consider telephone solicitations a violation of my privacy as well as jeopardizing 100 passengers and a $30 million aircraft. — Irate Pilot In O'Fallon, Ill.

Dear Abby: In response to your column about telemarketing, I have a suggestion for your readers that may be helpful: Get an answering machine.

Then, to prevent missing important calls from friends, relatives, etc. use a message similar to the one we use at home: "Hello. If you are selling something or taking a survey, please hang up now. Otherwise, please leave your message at the sound of the beep."

It worked for us. — Fighting Back In St. Louis

Money, Level Of Stress Are Linked

By Catherine Dressler
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PITTSBURGH — Money may not buy happiness, but a study suggests that it certainly can reduce stress.

Sheldon Cohen, a psychology professor at Carnegie Mellon University, analyzed the results of a Louis Harris and Associates Inc. telephone survey of 960 men and 1,427 women aged 18 or older. The Harris pollsters used a Perceived Stress Scale developed by Cohen and colleagues.

They found that stress tends to decrease as age and household income increase, Cohen said. "There's a nice relationship between income and stress level. Generally, the lower your income, the higher your stress level. The more money you make, the less stress you report... The people who seem to be best off are in the $45,000 to $50,000 a year range."

Cohen's scale measures how much stress people feel based on their answers to multiple choice questions about how often they experience certain thoughts and feelings. One key question asks: "In the last month, how often have you felt difficulties were piling up so high that you could not overcome them?"

"The scale makes some assumptions about what stress really is," Cohen said. "Stress is when you're overloaded and you feel you can't deal with the demands in your life. What you think and feel is really what matters."

Harris used Cohen's scale to conduct the survey for the U.S. Office of Disease Prevention and Health Promotion in 1983. Harris gave Cohen access to the data about two years later, and he analyzed the results for nearly three years.

He found that women tend to feel more stress than men; professionals and managers report less stress than blue-collar workers; the more educated people are, the less stress they report; white people report less stress than blacks; People who are married or living with a mate and those whose spouse died are less stressed than those who are single, divorced or separated.

Those who reported more stress in the study also reported more symptoms of illness and went to the doctor and smoked more often, Cohen said. Married people tended to be healthier than non-married people.

Test Will Reveal Your Level Of Stress

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PITTSBURGH — Here's a test that can help determine how much stress you feel in your life.

The four questions are part of Carnegie Mellon psychology professor Sheldon Cohen's Perceived Stress Scale. Answer by choosing one of the five responses listed below the questions:

1. In the last month, how often have you felt that you were unable to control the important things in your life?

2. In the last month, how often have you felt confident about your ability to handle your personal problems?

3. In the last month, how often have you felt things were going your way?

4. In the last month, how often have you felt difficulties were piling up so high you could not overcome them?

Answers:
A. Never
B. Almost Never
C. Sometimes
D. Fairly Often
E. Very Often

For questions 1 and 4, give yourself no points for choosing answer A, one point for B, two points for C, three points for D and four points for E. For 2 and 3, give yourself four points for A, three points for B, two for C, one for D and no points for E. Add your points.

Your score is not a diagnosis, but Cohen said it can help you determine how stressful your life is in comparison to other people's lives.

In his national study, the average score was 4.5 points. Women on average scored 4.7 points and men 4.2.

Overton-Smith Couple Married

MOORESVILLE — Donna Charlene Smith and Glenn Cotten Overton were married at 1 p.m. Saturday at the First Presbyterian Church. Edwin Lewis officiated the double-ring ceremony.

The daughter of Charles and Harriet Smith of Mooresville, the bride was escorted by her father. The parents of the bridegroom are Pete and Claudia Overton of Charlotte.

The bride wore a gown of white satin with an appliqued cathedral train. The gown featured a wedding band collar, pointed sleeves, a basque waistline and satin bows on each shoulder.

Peggy Smith of Charlotte was her sister's maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Valerie Overton of Charlotte, the bridegroom's sister; Lisa Denning of Smithfield; Tammy Dupree and Nicole Farmer of Greenville; Laurel Hawkins of Raleigh and Karen Molyneux of Denver, Colo. Megan Poole of Charlotte, the bride's cousin, was flower girl.

The attendants wore tea-length gowns of teal satin and chantilly lace. Each wore a comb adorned with teal and white flowers and pearls. They carried bouquets of spring flowers.

The flower girl wore a gown of white satin and carried a basket filled with rose petals.

The groom's father was best man. Ushers were David Smith of Wilmington, the bride's brother; Allen Overton of Greenville, the bridegroom's brother; John Bardwell of Manassas, Va.; Robert Moore of Greenville, and John Harris and John Varol both of Charlotte.

A reception was held at Vail Commons in Davidson. A rehearsal dinner was given by the parents of the bridegroom at the home of Joyce and Jerry Dellinger. Several other parties were given for the couple prior to the wedding.

The bride is employed by the Pitt County schools. The groom is a graduate student at East Carolina University.

Folk Singer Pete Seeger Still Performs Same Tunes

By Mary Foster
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW ORLEANS — Tall and thin, Pete Seeger stood in front of the microphone in his blue jeans and flowered shirt, hat pushed back on his head, and picked out the cords on his banjo.

He's still singing the same tunes, and has changed little since the glory days of folk music two decades ago.

Thousands of those jammed into and around the big tent at the New Orleans Jazz and Heritage Festival knew the words. They stood and sang without prompting.

"Deep in my heart. I do believe. We shall overcome, someday."

Abbie Hoffman is dead, Jerry Rubin is part of the establishment, Jane Fonda is selling exercise tapes, and other activists of the 1960s have either popped out, burned out or dropped out. But the 70-year-old folk singer from Benton, N.Y., is still at it.

Seeger's songs are the songs he sang for civil rights, to ban the bomb, to cry out against the war in Vietnam and poverty and to fight for human rights throughout the world: "We Shall Overcome," "This Land Is Your Land."

The audience was made up of those who marched to his tunes during the turbulent '60s and who think of that era as history.

"My records have never sold very well. A thousand copies here, 1,000 copies there. But, probably every elementary school system in the country has at least one teacher who has at least one of them and so kids grow up knowing my work," Seeger said of his continued popularity.

He continues to perform once or twice a week. "I usually sing to small groups — 100, 200 people. I still have things to tell them. Nobody in this world knows all the answers. All we can do is encourage people to hope. I try to do that," he said.

His values, once the trendy slogans of a generation, have held up for him. He lists his heroes as those who suffered on the front lines to bring civil rights to the South and peace to Southeast Asia.

Seeger said he's thoroughly respectable now, disgracefully so. That wasn't always true. At the height of the McCarthy era he was held in contempt of Congress and banned from television. In 1949, while marching with the actor, author and singer Paul Robeson, Seeger was attacked by members of the Ku Klux Klan.

Would he rather be remembered for his music or his politics? Seeger said it doesn't matter. What matters, he said, is what he can do now:

"I've always said that my epitaph will be 'He done his damndest.'"

Seeger's second book, "Everybody Say Freedom," written with Robert Reser, is due out this year. He and Arlo Guthrie may do a concert together later this year. He is devoted to the Clearwater project, an effort he organized years ago to help clean up the polluted Hudson River in New York-New Jersey. He also is working for world disarmament.

"It's one of the most important issues there is," he said.

The '60s may not get a curtain call, but Seeger's not the only one carrying on that tradition.

"There are still people who care," he said, "still people who think they can make things better. As long as that is true in this country, we're OK. There's an old saying, 'Hope is the opiate of the masses.' I guess I'm still singing about hope. Who knows, if people listen long enough, it may make them think about more than the music. Who knows?"

Los Angeles Begins Inking Mass Transit Lines On Map

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — This symbol of urban sprawl and America's car addiction, is at long last inking a few mass transit lines on its tangled road map.

They're ripping up the downtown streets to put in the first 4.4 miles of a subway, and trolley-like light rail lines are being built between downtown and Long Beach, and across a patchwork of south side neighborhoods.

That's a dramatic departure from tradition for a city that stands alone among major U.S. metropolises in having no rail transit whatsoever.

Here's a look at the projects under construction:

—Metro Rail: A 4.4-mile, $1.2 billion, subway scheduled to open in 1993 will start at Union Station in the northeast, pass under the civic center and financial district and terminate near MacArthur Park. A 13-mile extension into the San Fernando Valley suburbs is tentatively scheduled to be done in 1998. It will be financed 55 percent from the federal government, 17 percent from the state, 14 percent from a sales tax surcharge, 11 percent from merchant assessments and 3 percent from the city.

—Long Beach-Los Angeles light rail: A $752 million, 21.5-mile trolley style line mostly on existing tracks and powered by overhead wires is meant for both commuters and as a local train for those in largely low-income neighborhoods. It will be funded through sales tax.

—Norwalk-El Segundo light rail: A $400 million, 19.5-mile east-west trolley will follow the Century Freeway, which is being built at the same time. At the west end is Los Angeles International Airport and aircraft factories. Funding comes from the sales tax.

Students Simulate Flight Of The Atlantis

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JEFFERSON, N.C. — Touchdown for five student astronauts simulating the flight of Space Shuttle Atlantis Monday was as simple as opening the door and walking into the next room.

The students at the Ashe County Career Center met a welcoming committee of teachers, parents and sweethearts with a sigh of relief and weariness after spending four days in a classroom converted into a mock-up of a shuttle cabin named Victoria.

The industrial-technology students — complete with backup astronauts and a ground crew — became the first such group ever to simulate a complete shuttle mission. The students also built a mockup of the shuttle cargo bay and mission control and connected it all with video and computer linkups.

Monitoring the Atlantis astronauts by satellite TV, the students ate, slept and spacewalked when their counterparts did.

Alisa Greer, a student payroll specialist, said the biggest problem was that $100 worth of microwave food ran out Monday.

"We had to capture a food satellite," she said.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Too much of a good thing can be boring. You erect boundaries that smother your need for a more festive and exciting life. LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Focus on companions, good company and hobnobbing. Make every hour your own "happy hour." Good spirits need an outlet. VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Continue to ignore the rumor mill, and preserve your dignity. Accept an invitation for a reunion. A romantic potential has you ecstatic. LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Continue to devote time, money and effort toward helping a friend in need. You sparkle when involved in creative adventures. SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): You cut an especially confident and charismatic figure today. It may be frustrating, but leave technical/mechanical matters to the experts. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): It is difficult to sidestep a friend who wants you to handle a blind date. Be earnest about establishing a side career. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Staying home may be as exciting as going out. Those whom you are dating may find more stimulation watching a plant grow. AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): While the current romance waxes and wanes, someone new is waiting for the nod. Put shopping for stylish fashion on your agenda. PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): You fear that you may be sinking financially, but the problem is not that deep and, shortly, you will be back sailing smoothly. (c) 1989, The McNaught Syndicate Inc.

North-South vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding: South West North East 1 ♦ 2 ♦ 3 NT Pass 4 ♣ Pass 5 ♦ Pass 6 ♦ Pass Pass Pass Opening lead: Jack of ♥ It is not too difficult to spot the extra chance available on this hand.

Yet an experienced player went wrong. North had a problem over West's Michaels cue-bid of two diamonds, which showed a major two-suiter. We can't quarrel with three no trump. He had an equally hard decision over four clubs. Since it was unlikely that South was going to need discards in the North hand, North chose to play in South's first-bid suit, and he showed his double fit by jumping to five diamonds. Not surprisingly, South contracted for slam. The opening lead of the jack of hearts was covered by the queen and king and won by the ace. Now declarer had no chance. Eventually, he was forced to concede two heart tricks for down one. It might seem that declarer's only hope was to find the king of hearts with West. Actually, he could have improved considerably on his chances. Declarer should have played low from dummy to the first trick. He must try to arrange an endplay in case East holds a doubleton king of hearts, so declarer must use two trump entries to dummy to ruff spades while drawing the enemy trumps. A club to the queen is the entry to ruff the last spade. After cashing out the clubs, ending in the closed hand, declarer leads a heart and, if West plays low, he shoots in with dummy's queen. His first chance comes to naught when that loses to the king. However, East is down to nothing but black cards. No matter which suit he returns, declarer will be able to discard his heart loser while ruffing in dummy. So he loses only one heart trick.  You're there when I'm happy and sad.

 And repeatedly told me what not to do.
 I just want to tell you, my Forever I will always love you.

The Marshmallow Trail

By Neil Cohen

Once upon a time there was a little dragon and he went out in the dark night for a walk.

He got to a dead end and he went past the dead end. Then he was lost and he didn't know his way home. Something said, "Go that way! Go that way!" Then he saw there were marshmallows on the ground. He was carrying a bag of marshmallows because he might get hungry on his walk. There was a hole in the bag. And the marshmallows made a marshmallow trail.

He went home, ate his marshmallows and went to bed.

Wind

By Glen Dudley

Winter
 Wind, wind, how it shall blow,
 Out in the east, the west may get snow.
 When will it stop, will I ever know?
 It may not have started,
 Blow, wind, blow.

Summer
 In summer
 Winds may never blow.
 If they do,
 I won't know.
 You'll just be a gentle breeze,
 Blowing just hard enough,
 To sway the trees.

And outside it's still light.
Fall
 In fall
 The wind blows pretty bad,
 Some people say it's getting mad.
 They don't pay attention
 To the poor old trees
 With the strong wind blowing
 Off all of the leaves.

Spring
 The wind in spring is worse than fall,
 It blows and blows the worst of all.
 When you go to the park,
 You'll see such a sight.
 It's seven o'clock

Federal Facts The Great Seal

Symbols are important. Married people wear wedding rings as signs or symbols of their marriage. Scouts wear patches as symbols of the badges which they have earned. Police officers proudly wear a badge as the sign of their profession. Nations have symbols, too.

The Great Seal of the United States is a sign of the freedom found in the nation. In 1782 the seal was adopted to be placed on all official government documents. It also shows that the papers are real or authentic and are not forged.

Two men designed the seal. The front was done by the Secretary of Congress Charles Thompson. The reverse side was designed by William Barton who was a specialist in heraldry. Heraldry was used in the Middle Ages to distinguish coats-of-arms.

The front side is the one seen on official documents and is the side most often seen by the public. On the front is drawn the American eagle with a shield--this stands for the nation being able to stand alone. On the shield, 13 stripes are placed vertically, these came from the 1777 flag. The blue "chief" or area above the stripes are the symbol of all the branches of government.

In the right talon the eagle holds an olive branch with 13 leaves and 13 olives in the left talon it holds 13 arrows. The number 13 represents the original states and the olive branch stands for peace. The arrows mean that we can go to war, if necessary. The head of the eagle faces toward the branches of peace and some say that in the time of war, the head faces the other direction.

In the eagle's beak is found a scroll with the nation's motto-E pluribus unum. This is the Latin for "one out of many" which means that our one nation was made of the many smaller states. Above the head of the eagle is located a new constellation of 13 stars (again the original states). The constellation is surrounded by a golden glow which is breaking through a cloud.

The reverse or back of The Great Seal is not used on official papers but is usually seen on the back of the one dollar bill. On the reverse of the seal is found a pyramid which is 13 bricks or courses high. This again represents the original states. At the top of the pyramid is located the "eye of providence" or God. This eye is supposed to be watching over the nation. There are two mottos found her. The lower one in Latin in Novus ordo seclorum which translates to mean "new order of the ages". In Roman numerals on the bottom of the first course of bricks is the date 1776. The upper motto in Latin is Annuit coeptis which translates to "He (God) has favored our undertaking".

The State Department and the Secretary of State are the caretakers of The Great Seal. In 1904 the last die was cut for the seal and that one is still in use.

Breakfast In Bed, Without The Dread

By Cherie Evans
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

When the little ones pop out of bed and head for the kitchen on Mother's Day, it's often a mixed blessing. How sweet, Mom thinks, to have breakfast served in bed. How cute, she responds, to have lunch on a silver platter.

How frightening, she screams, when she looks at the kitchen!

Well, it doesn't have to be. Cute, sweet and loving in the kitchen don't necessarily lead to nightmares, especially if the youngsters know some of the simpler recipes available to make Mom's day special.

Linda Walker, nutritionist with the East Carolina University Department of Family Medicine, says there are several easy recipes children can use, and they have an added bonus. They're nutritious.

One simple menu she suggested includes dry cereal or bran cereal served with bananas or strawberries, whole-wheat toast with margarine and low-fat milk, she said.

Or a child could make a bagel or rice cake with peanut butter or apple butter. Serving rye bread and low-fat cheese, orange juice and fresh apple are also alternatives suggested by Ms. Walker.

Fresh strawberries or cantaloupe with vanilla yogurt and toast, or oatmeal with raisins, low-fat milk, an English muffin, low-fat cottage cheese and apple sauce, are great too, she said.

And if youngsters want to get more elaborate, they might try turning to their best alternative yet: Dad, or even an older brother or sister.

Elaine Georgalis, wellness program nutritionist with the Pitt County Health Department, also provided some accompanying recipes children can prepare.

"Some require a little parental guidance," she said, "but most are quick and easy and nutritious for kids to prepare."

Microwaving also is a good method children as young as age 6 may use to cook the surprise meal. It also makes cleanup easy.

Children using the microwave should be aware of some safety measures.

They should know how to program the microwave correctly — for 10 seconds, for example, rather than 10 minutes. Dad, brother or sister can cover for correct programming.

Children also need to know not to turn on an empty oven and to use microwave-safe cookware. It's best to mark those items and keep them in a certain place.

Potholders to remove things from the oven should be handy so no one gets burned, and the children should be careful to avoid escaping steam.

Get children in the habit of cooling foods a minute or two before eating or serving so that they and mom won't burn their mouths.

BANANA O-J

Orange juice

Slice 4-5 pieces of banana into juice glass. Pour orange juice over bananas and serve with a spoon.

VERY EASY FRUIT SALAD

1 can (15 oz.) fruit cocktail
1 small can mandarin oranges (drained)
1 miniature box raisins (2-3 tbsps.)
¾ cup miniature marshmallows
½ cup sour cream

Mix everything in a bowl and place in refrigerator for 2 hours.

Serve the salad on lettuce or in dessert dishes with whipped toppings.

MINI PIZZAS

1 package English muffins
1 package thinly sliced Mozzarella cheese
1 can (4 oz.) tomato paste
1 tsp. oregano
½ tsp. garlic salt
(Optional: pepperoni slices, onion slices, mushrooms, green pepper)

Spread tomato paste on each half of the English muffins. Place on baking sheet.

Sprinkle oregano and garlic salt on each. Place pepperoni, onion, or other optional items on muffins.

Place cheese on muffin and broil until cheese bubbles.

PINEAPPLE CRANBERRYADE

1 ice cube tray

Ginger ale
1 cup crushed pineapple
Cranberry juice (1 jar or can)

Freeze ginger ale in an ice cube tray several hours ahead. Mix pineapple and cranberry juice in a pitcher. Serve with ginger ale cubes.

EASY CHOCOLATE PIE

1 package (3½ oz.) instant chocolate pudding mix
4-5 graham crackers
Whipped topping

Add 1¾ cups milk to pudding mix and stir until smooth. Stir in ¾ cup whipped topping mixing well.

Break graham crackers to fit in bottom of a pie plate. Pour mixture over crackers and refrigerate 1 hour.

Spoon 1 cup topping over pie and chill again until time to serve.

GRAPEFRUIT DELIGHT

½ grapefruit per person
Brown sugar
Marachino cherries or strawberries

Sprinkle brown sugar on grapefruit. Place cherry or strawberry in center. Turn oven to broil. Put grapefruit halves on baking sheet and place in oven. Broil until sugar bubbles.

FRENCH TOAST

1 tbsp. sugar
½ cup milk
¼ tsp. cinnamon
5 to 6 slices bread
1 tbsp. margarine

Break eggs in bowl. Add sugar, milk and cinnamon. Mix with fork.

Melt margarine in frying pan at medium heat. Dip bread in egg mixture. Place in frying pan and brown on both sides. Serve with pancake syrup or top with powdered sugar.

GREEN EGGS

Simple eggs florentine

4 eggs
1 (9-oz.) pouch frozen creamed spinach
2 English muffins, toasted

Lightly butter inside of 4 (6-oz.) custard cups. Crack an egg into each one. Use a fork to pierce egg yolk two times. Cover each cup tightly with plastic wrap.

Arrange cups in a circle in oven. Microwave on medium power 6 to 8 minutes, or until egg is thoroughly cooked. Turn each cup halfway around after 4 minutes. Set aside.

Use scissors to cut large "X" through bottom layer of frozen vegetable pouch. Place pouch cut-side down in a small microwave dish. Microwave on high 5 to 6 minutes. Lift pouch so cooked contents empty into dish. Place an egg on each toasted muffin half. Spoon creamed spinach on top. Serves 4.

DUTCH APPLESAUCE PANCAKES

1 cup applesauce
½ tsp. ground cinnamon
4 frozen microwave pancakes

Put applesauce and cinnamon in a glass measuring cup. Microwave on high 30 seconds, stir. Microwave on high 30 seconds more or until hot.

Microwave pancakes according to package directions. Spoon applesauce over pancakes.

NUTTY BANANAS

2 tbsps. chunky peanut butter
1 tbsp. orange juice
2 tbsps. brown sugar
2 bananas, peeled

Put peanut butter, orange juice and brown sugar in a 9-inch pie plate. Mix with a fork. Microwave on high 1 minute. Mix again with fork.

Cut bananas in half and cut halves into 2 lengthwise pieces. Roll them in peanut butter mixture and arrange with cut sides down in pie plate.

Microwave on high 1 minute. Let stand 1 minute before serving. May be topped with a scoop of vanilla ice cream.

It May Be 'Fake,' But It's Still Good For You

Dear Readers: I found no questions in my box this week so I thought I would report on some food and nutrition conversations I've heard. Mary Ann Barnes wondered if you could successfully freeze oat bran muffins. She proved it to herself and also the folks who enjoyed 100 of her muffins at a church dinner. Yes, you can freeze oat bran muffins and they retain all of their good properties.

A little birdie told me that a group of men including my husband, Pat Kelly, Mac Green and Bill Blount were wondering out loud if "fake crab meat" is good for you. Yes again. Products like Seastix and Sea Legs may look like shrimp or crab, but they are made from surimi. Surimi is washed, minced, low fat, high protein fish flesh. It is combined with flavors, spices, coloring agents and thickening agents like starch to make crab or shrimp or lobster-like food products. They are less expensive than the real thing.

Kathy Kolasa

Ph.D., ECU Dept. Family Medicine

Surimi has been used in Japan for centuries. They think of it as Surimi, not as a fake food. However, our labeling laws require the processors to call them "imitation." There is a processing plant in the Raleigh area. The surimi paste is extruded into shellfish shapes. The only negative nutrition aspect is for people with high blood pressure who are "salt sensitive." There is quite a bit of sodium in these products. Right now, the sodium is an important part of the process, it is not added merely for flavor. So, it will be awhile before the sodium can be reduced. So, Pat, Mac and Bill, for most people these "Food Analogs" or imitation shellfish, are okay to enjoy regularly.

I was in a local ice cream store and was encouraged by the clerk to taste their new product, Vitari. It did taste good and refreshing. It's a soft serve made from fruit and/or juice, flavoring and some stabilizers. A four fluid ounce serving has 80 calories but no fat. If you're cutting back on fat, you might enjoy this treat.

Someone left an empty carton of Farm Rich's non-dairy breakfast creamer on my desk. It is a low saturated fat alternative to other coffee whiteners and claims to be free of coconut or palm oil. I overheard someone at the store say it's good. Remember, though, skim milk is still a better choice to whiten your coffee if you are limiting your fat.

I saw an article in this month's "Cooking Light" reporting on a January 1989 Gallup Poll. Unfortunately, 48 percent of those surveyed thought cholesterol was the major dietary problem we have. Only 17 percent of those surveyed were correct and identified the major dietary problem as fat.

It is confusing, I know. My folks and cousins just visited us. I overheard the men selecting a food because it had no cholesterol. I long ago convinced Mom and Sophia it was the fat we needed to cut back on. I guess it's time to start working on Dad! It's the fat, not the cholesterol in food, that affects your blood cholesterol the most. Ignore those TV food commercials that brag "No Cholesterol." Read labels to find saturated fat. We need to eat less total fat and less saturated fat.

We were so glad to see many of you at our Bethel Heart Healthy Days.

It's Time To Break Out The Barbecue Grill

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — During the summer, the outdoor fun starts early and the sun sets late. What better way to enjoy a summer day than with a festive barbecue?

The following suggestions will help you plan a barbecue that will be remembered long after you've packed away your summer outfits:

• Test your barbecue grill before the summer season starts to be sure that everything is working properly. Don't forget to clean the grill thoroughly.

• Take inventory and stock up on supplies you'll use throughout the season, including napkins, plastic forks and knives, paper cups and paper tablecloths.

• Plan your menu several days before the big event. Buffet style is easiest to plan and prepare.

• Don't forget the bug repellent spray. Citronella candles are available in a variety of shapes and sizes and help create ambiance. They will also help keep annoying insects away.

• To prevent foods from sticking and to avoid direct contact with the heat source, use heavy-duty aluminum foil to line the grill. Delicate fish fillets especially benefit from this cooking style.

• Salt food when it is done (salt draws out the juices), and don't salt it over the grill because the salt will corrode the metal.

• To prevent burning, soak your wooden or bamboo skewers in water for at least 1 hour prior to cooking.

• If you're using skewers, it's best to parboil some vegetables, like beans, peppers, potatoes and small whole onions, before cooking with meat so that all foods are done at the same time.

dried hot red peppers before grilling.

Most vegetables cook quickly on the grill. Many can be grilled over medium-hot heat directly on an oiled grid or in a foil pan. Some, like endives, green beans and squash, are best cooked covered.

For a light dinner, cook an assortment of fresh vegetables brushed with freshly squeezed lemon juice, olive oil and herbs. Sprinkle the vegetables with freshly grated Parmesan cheese for extra zest. You can also brush tomato-based barbecue sauce over the vegetables during the cooking process. When the vegetables are done, toss with grated Cheddar or Swiss cheese.

Cooking With Foil

Davis says cooking with foil adds a new dimension to backyard barbecues. Foods cook quickly and thoroughly, yet remain moist. "Best of all," he adds, "cleanup is a breeze."

There are two methods for foil cooking on the grill when foods need to be completely covered.

Davis says the "drugstore wrap" is best for foods such as sliced vegetables or meats that need to be turned. Place the food in the center of a large piece of foil. Bring the edges up over the food and fold a few times, allowing some air space. Then fold the ends tightly a few times to avoid leaks.

The "bundle wrap" is for foods like cauliflower or apples that don't need to be turned. The food is centered on a generous piece of foil, and the four corners of the foil are brought together and folded tightly, allowing some air space for steam.

Iced Beverages

Iced tea is a favorite beverage to quench summer thirsts. Blanchard & Blanchard, makers of food products from Vermont, says you can create a unique iced tea by combining several of your favorite types of tea, such as orange, lemon or mint, and letting the mixture brew in the sun on your windowsill.

Another flavorful idea: make iced tea with bottled or sparkling water, for an all-natural, caffeine-free beverage.

Microwave Iced Tea

The following method for making iced tea in the microwave, suggested by the makers of Celestial Seasonings herb tea, offers the taste of brewed iced tea with the convenience of instant. Just be sure the tea bags do not contain staples, which can cause arcing or sparks in the microwave.

Place 1 cup hot water and 4 tea bags in a microwave-safe container. Cook on high for 2 minutes. Remove tea bags from hot tea. Sweeten while hot, if desired. Place 3 cups cold water in a 1-quart pitcher. Add hot tea to pitcher of cold water. Pour over ice to serve.

You'll find information on equipment and techniques, serving suggestions, and ideas for using leftover grilled fish. Charts with buying tips and cooking times are included. More than 90 recipes are featured, including appetizers, side dishes and desserts.

The Complete Book of Outdoor Cookery by James Beard and Helen Evans Brown, written in 1955, has now been released in paperback by Harper & Row ($8.95). From the grill, fire and fuel to recipes for all food groups, this cookbook covers it all. You can select from grilling, broiling, roasting, deep fat frying, smoking or skewer cooking.

Barbecue Recipes: Indoors and Out is a free booklet with barbecue tips and recipes by the makers of K.C. Masterpiece barbecue sauce. For your copy, send your name and address with 50 cents for postage and handling to: K.C. Masterpiece Barbecue Sauce, Department CC, Box 24305, Oakland, CA 94623.

Here are some recipes to get you started.

TERIYAKI FILLETS

1 1/2 lbs. cod, haddock or halibut fillets, about 1-in. thick
1/4 cup lemon juice
2 tbsps. soy sauce
1 tbsp. vegetable oil
2 cloves garlic, crushed

If fish fillets are large, cut into 8 serving pieces. Mix all ingredients except fish. Pour over fish. Cover and refrigerate at least 1 hour.

Remove fish, reserving marinade. Cover and grill fish about 4 inches from medium coals, turning once and brushing occasionally with reserved marinade, until fish flakes easily with a fork, 12 to 20 minutes.

Garnish with lemon wedges and parsley sprigs if desired. Makes 8 servings.

K.C.'S BARBECUED CHICKEN

2 tbsps. olive or vegetable oil
2 cloves garlic, pressed
Salt and pepper to taste
1/2 cup barbecue sauce
One 3- to 3 1/2-lb. chicken, cut into serving pieces

Combine oil, garlic, salt and pepper; rub evenly over chicken pieces. Place a drip pan in the bottom of the grill and arrange hot briquets around drip pan (about 30 per side). Place dark meat over drip pan; cover grill and barbecue 15 minutes, turning once and basting with barbecue sauce. Add white meat; barbecue 15 minutes longer, turning and basting with sauce. Reposition chicken pieces on grid directly over coals. Grill, uncovered, about 10 minutes longer, turning once or twice and basting with sauce, until skin is lightly crisped. Chicken should be moist and tender. Heat additional barbecue sauce to serve with chicken. Makes 4 servings.

Note: If using chicken quarters, extend barbecue time 5 to 10 minutes as needed.

COGNAC BEANS

1 lb. dried white beans
Water
1 clove garlic
1 onion
2 cloves
Bay leaf
Thyme
1 small onion, chopped
1/4 cup butter
2 cups tomato puree
1/4 cup minced parsley
2 tpsps. salt
1/2 cup Cognac

Soak beans in water to cover. Add garlic, the onion stuck with cloves, bay leaf and a sprig or pinch of thyme. Simmer until beans are tender, drain and reserve the liquid.

Saute the small onion in butter until colored, add tomato puree, parsley, salt, Cognac and 1 cup of the bean liquid. Simmer this mixture 30 minutes, mix with the beans, correct seasoning and reheat in a casserole before serving. Serves 8 or more.

HONEY-MUSTARD POTATO SALAD

3 lbs. potatoes, well scrubbed (small, red new potatoes are best)
1/2 cup celery, diced
1 large, red bell pepper, diced
1 cup Blanchard & Blanchard

Honey-Mustard Dressing
Salt and freshly ground pepper
1 head leafy greens, well rinsed

Bring a large pot of salted water to boil. Cook potatoes until tender but firm. Drain well and allow to cool to room temperature. If using red new potatoes, do not peel. Other varieties should be peeled at this point. Slice potatoes thickly and then cut into chunks.

In a large bowl, gently toss the potatoes, celery, pepper and dressing. Use a little more dressing if needed to coat well. Add salt and pepper to taste. Serve on a bed of leafy greens. Yield: 6 servings.

(Blanchard & Blanchard, makers of salad dressings and other products from Vermont)

ORANGE ZINGER SORBET

4 Orange Zinger Herb Tea bags
2 cups boiling water
1/2 cup sugar
2 cups ice cubes
1 orange, chopped
1/2 tsp. orange rind

In medium bowl, pour 2 cups boiling water over tea bags. Steep 4 minutes, then remove tea bags. Add sugar, then ice cubes. Stir until ice dissolves. Add orange pieces and rind to tea. Stir well.

Pour into a 9-inch square pan and freeze until heavy slush forms. Whisk slush until foamy. Freeze until almost solid, then scoop into serving dishes. Serves 6.

For saltless ice cream makers: pour mixture into frozen ice cream mixer. Stir until frozen.

ZINGER PLEASER

8 Zinger (Red, Orange or Lemon) Herb Tea bags
2 cups boiling water
1/2 cup honey (or sweetener to taste)
4 cups ice cubes
3 cups grapefruit juice
1 qt. sparkling spring water

Pour boiling water over tea bags and steep for 5 minutes. Remove tea bags. Sweeten to taste. Stir in ice, grapefruit juice and sparkling water. Serve over ice. Serves 11 to 14.

Freeze Muffin Dough For Use Later

By Nancy Byal

BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS

Not all bran muffins are created equal. Many commercially baked muffins contain high amounts of saturated fat and cholesterol, erasing the benefits of the fiber in the bran.

These muffins have no cholesterol and little saturated fat. You get the benefits of both insoluble fiber from bran flakes and soluble fiber from the apples.

You can have a muffin for breakfast any morning by baking a batch ahead and freezing them. To defrost muffins in the microwave, cook one muffin, uncovered, on 100 percent power (high) for 30 to 45 seconds, 2 muffins for 45 seconds to one minute.

APPLE-BRAN STREUSEL MUFFINS

1 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
1 cup bran flakes
1/3 cup packed brown sugar
1 tsp. baking powder
3/4 tsp. ground allspice
1/8 tsp. salt
2 slightly beaten egg whites
1/2 cup skim milk
1/3 cup cooking oil
1 1/2 cups chopped peeled tart apples

Streusel Topping (recipe follows)

In a large bowl combine flour, cereal, sugar, baking powder, allspice and salt. In a small bowl combine egg whites, milk and oil. Add to flour mixture and stir just until moistened. Fold in apples. Spoon into 12 greased muffin cups. Sprinkle with Streusel Topping. Bake in 400-degree F oven about 20 minutes. Let stand 5 minutes. Serve warm. Makes 12 muffins.

Streusel Topping: In a small bowl combine 1/2 cup bran flakes, lightly crushed, and 2 tablespoons brown sugar. Drizzle 1 tablespoon cooking oil over mixture; stir with fork until crumbly.

'Souffles' A Sweet, Savory Tome About Treats

By Jonathan Susskind
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Time was when Ann Amernick thought souffles were "garbage."

She pronounces the word with a Gallic guttural gargle, to mimic — as she loves to do and does so well — all the male French chefs she has ever known and worked with. "Gah-rhrh-bage." Ordinarily followed by, "Who would eat that stuff anyway?"

It was certainly the last thing that she would ever want to eat, much less prepare in a restaurant or at home for a dinner party, and much, much less write a book about.

Ah, the irony of it all. Meet Ann Amernick: pastry chef to presidents, and current co-author, with fellow pastry chef Richard Chirol, of a pretty little book titled Souffles ($9.95; Clarkson N. Potter).

In its 120 pages are recipes for 40 different souffles — sweet, savory, baked and frozen — employing a preparation method that, while not revolutionary or even new, should quell much of the intimidation associated with the ethereally light and elegant creations.

These souffles, which Ms. Amernick and Chirol created based on recipes culled from years of restaurant experience, are not at all the souffles she despised. Those were time-consuming, quirky dishes made with a thickened custard of flour, milk and egg yolks, called bouilli. These are quicker, because they are made without the bouilli, not as rich and more foolproof.

Guess what? Now Ms. Amernick likes souffles.

"They seem like magic," Ms. Amernick says as she pulls browned puffballs of smoked salmon and cream cheese souffle from the oven. "Anything with egg white that comes up like that, it is magical, and it's exciting and that's the charm of souffles. You look in there and you can actually watch them rise. You almost can't go wrong — that's the thing people don't realize."

Watching her bustle about the cramped kitchen and dining room work area of her condo in Washington, D.C., one finds it hard to think she ever abhorred souffles.

OK, well, a little. But more to the point, like so many other people, she was scared of them.

The year is 1980. Jimmy Carter is in the White House, as president. Ms. Amernick is there too, as assistant pastry chef. But the recently divorced mother with two sons needs more money, so she takes a second job at Maison Blanche, a swank eatery across the street from the White House, working 16 hour days at least six days a week.

Guess what was the house specialty? Uh-huh — "gah-rhrh-bage."

"I was sick to my stomach at the thought of making a souffle," she says, "because it was the kind of thing that always intimidated me, so I never did it and it never interested me. ... The way I always respond to that sort of thing, if I don't know how to make something and I'm really unsure and intimidated, is I say, 'This is garbage! Ugh, that's so boring, you know!'"

So, of course, she did make the souffle — two, actually, because the quality-minded head chef always wanted a taste of any souffle. And, of course, it was fabulous. The chef said it was the best he had ever had anywhere.

HOT BERRY SOUFFLE

1 pint fresh raspberries, about 1/2 lb. (or 1 10-oz. container frozen raspberries (preferably not in sugar syrup), thawed
3 egg yolks
4 egg whites
1/3 cup sugar
2 ripe peaches, peeled and sliced (optional)
Raspberry Coulis

Heat oven to 375 degrees. Butter and sugar 6 individual souffle molds and refrigerate until ready to use.

Puree the raspberries in a blender or food processor, then press through a sieve to remove seeds.

In a large bowl, beat the egg yolks until very thick and light in color.

In another large bowl, beat the egg whites until foamy, then add the sugar gradually while continuing to beat until whites are firm but still glossy.

Stir the berry puree into the yolks, then fold in the whites. Spoon the mixture into the mold and bake for 8 minutes, or until puffy and browned on top.

Serve with the sliced peaches on the side and a spoonful of Raspberry Coulis on top (You may poke a hole the top of the souffle and pour in the coulis if desired). Serves six.

Raspberry Coulis

2 cartons (about 1 pint) fresh raspberries or 1 10-oz. box frozen raspberries (preferably without sugar), thawed
Sugar
Lemon juice

Puree the raspberries in a food processor, then put through a sieve to remove the seeds. Add the sugar and lemon juice to taste and stir to blend. Chill before serving. Makes about 1 cup.

CREAM CHEESE AND SMOKED SALMON SOUFFLE
2 tbsps. minced onions, or 1 tbsp. chopped chives
1 tsp. unsalted butter
2 egg yolks
3 oz. cream cheese at room temperature
1 tbsp. sour cream
1 tsp. Dijon or Pommery mustard, or a mixture of them
2 oz. smoked salmon, finely chopped

4 egg whites
A few drops lemon juice

Heat the oven to 400 degrees. Butter the insides of four individual souffle molds and refrigerate.

If using onions, saute in the butter until soft. Chives needn't be sauteed.

In a medium bowl, beat the egg yolks until very thick and light in color. Beat in the cream cheese, sour cream, mustard and smoked salmon.

In another medium bowl, beat the egg whites with the lemon juice until firm but still glossy. Fold into the yolk mixture. Spoon into prepared souffle molds and bake for 8 to 10 minutes, until puffed and brown on top. Serves four.

blackberry jam
1 tbsp. maple syrup
2 egg whites
A few drops lemon juice
1 tbsp. sugar

Heat the oven to 350 degrees. Butter and sugar three individual souffle molds and refrigerate until ready to use.

Using a fork, blender or food processor, combine the cottage cheese with 1 tbsp. of the yogurt until smooth. Place in a medium bowl and beat in the remaining yogurt, jam and maple syrup until smooth.

In a small bowl, beat the egg whites with the lemon juice until foamy, then gradually add the sugar while continuing to beat until the whites are firm but still glossy. Fold into the yogurt mixture.

Spoon or pipe the batter into the molds and bake for 15 to 20 minutes, or until puffy and browned on top. Serves three.
