Bush May Send More U.S. Troops To Panama

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PANAMA CITY, Panama — Soldiers took to the streets today after the government nullified the presidential election. Opposition candidates, beaten by supporters of Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, apparently went into hiding. International condemnation of Noriega intensified following the attacks on presidential candidate Guillermo Endara and his two running mates by bat- and pipe-wielding thugs. U.S. officials said one opposition bodyguard was killed.

President Bush was considering sending several thousand U.S. combat troops to protect American dependents in Panama.

Panamanian soldiers did not interfere during the beatings Wednesday, which broke out after troops halted an opposition demonstration to protest what international observers have called the government's theft of Sunday's elections.

Opponents had hoped to rally international opinion against Noriega and prevent the proclamation of his hand-picked candidate, Carlos Duque, as president.

U.S. Ambassador Arthur Davis condemned the attacks and called the nullification, announced late Wednesday, a "cowardly act."

Davis said dependents of the 12,000 military and diplomatic personnel in Panama who live off-base would be moved today to military bases to ensure their safety. U.S. personnel were told to stay out of public places unless on official business, and then to appear only in civilian clothes.

Pentagon officials told The Associated Press the Defense Department had been notified that Bush "is leaning toward" deployment of 2,000 to 2,500 combat troops in Panama to reinforce the American military presence. They spoke on condition of anonymity.

"It looks like its going to go that way; sending down some more troops," the source said. "But there is nothing definite and we're not saddling up the entire 82nd Airborne."

The sources said that if Bush ordered an additional deployment, it would probably be handled as a similar movement in Honduras last year when small units were drawn from both Fort Bragg in North Carolina and Fort Ord in California.

One official called the plan "a show of force that is being orchestrated at the White House. We're not sure about the goals from a military standpoint besides our continuing concern about American dependents."

Washington has been trying more than a year to oust Noriega, the country's de facto leader since 1983 and the chief of the Defense Forces.

Legislators Agree On Road Funding

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Legislative negotiators today agreed on control of a $20 million urban road projects fund that sparked a partisan squabble earlier this week, paving the way for consideration of the state's $7 billion budget next week.

The disagreement centered on whether Republican Lt. Gov. Jim Gardner would be allowed to designate how $2 million of the annual fund is spent, a privilege accorded his predecessor, Democrat Bob Jordan.

Democratic leaders in the Senate had proposed letting Senate President Pro Tem Henson Barnes, a Democrat, award the money instead of Gardner. Gardner said Tuesday the proposal was a "blatant partisan move."

But today, a House-Senate conference committee agreed to the change and Sen. Marc Basnight, D-Dare, said Gardner concurred "once he had an opportunity to get a look at the reasoning."

Basnight, chairman of the Senate conferees, said that cleared the last hurdle for House and Senate consideration of the compromise next week.

The agreement will return the legislature to a policy that was in effect between 1975, when the fund was established, and 1985, when the distribution formula was revised.

Under the 1975-85 formula, $14 million was divided equally among the state's 14 highway districts to pay for small-town projects such as traffic light installation and street improvements. The state transportation secretary disbursed the remaining $6 million for projects he considered most worthy.

In 1985, the policy was changed so that the transportation secretary, House speaker and lieutenant governor would all control $2 million.

The $20 million road fund, which the Senate left out of its budget bill and the House voted to keep intact, was the main issue unsettled prior to today's meeting.

Basnight said the main concession in keeping the fund intact was an assurance by the Department of Transportation to keep lawmakers better informed of where the money would be spent.

Rep. Dave Diamont, D-Surry, who chaired the House delegation on the budget, said he was very comfortable with the compromise and with the openness of the process.

"It's historical in the sense that both parties are sitting down here in front of the TV cameras with the sunshine shining in and we've reached some conclusions without a whole lot of blood on the floor," he said.

Pitt Jury Clears Physician In Death Of Woman Who Had Spotted Fever

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A Pitt County jury has found that an Ayden physician was not negligent in failing to diagnose a case of Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever that killed an Ayden woman in 1985.

After deliberating nearly four hours Wednesday, a jury of eight women and four men cleared Dr. James M. Galloway of charges that his actions were a proximate cause in the death of Betty Evans, who died Sept. 2, 1985, at the age of 46.

An autopsy revealed Mrs. Evans died from Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever, and her husband sued the doctor for $1 million.

"I want to thank the jury for their conscientious deliberations in what I'm sure was a difficult task," Galloway said after the clerk read the verdict and individually polled each juror. "Being a family physician, I still have the greatest sympathy and heartfelt concern for the Evans family."

In the wake of the lawsuit and an eight-day trial, Galloway said he was anxious to get back to treating patients.

"I think the best thing for me to do is to get back in the office and start seeing and putting my hands on sick folks," he said.

Several jurors said after the trial that they felt sympathy for the Evans family, but there was not enough evidence to prove that Galloway's actions caused Mrs. Evans' death.

"By the greater weight of the evidence, we feel confident in our decision," said jury foreman John A. Caporizzo.

Henry T. Evans, 53, of Ayden, Mrs. Evans' husband and the administrator of her estate, filed a civil lawsuit against Galloway and Pitt Family Physicians of Ayden in August 1987 in Pitt County Superior Court. Evans' suit claimed his wife visited Galloway on Aug. 16, Aug. 23 and Aug. 29 in 1985, and the doctor failed to correctly diagnose her sickness.

Mrs. Evans entered Pitt County Memorial Hospital on Sept. 1, 1985, and died the next day at 8:15 a.m., according to court records. The suit alleged Galloway's negligence caused Mrs. Evans' death.

However, Galloway's attorney, E.C. Bryson Jr. of Durham, argued to the jury that medical records show Mrs. Evans did not have a fever on her second and third visit to Galloway's office. Records indicate Mrs. Evans did not have a fever until entering the hospital Sept. 1, 1985, when she registered a temperature of 101 degrees, Bryson said.

Without a fever, Bryson argued, it would be impossible for Galloway to diagnose the illness as Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever.

Bryson also denied claims by Evans that his wife was already suffering from a rash on her legs, feet and ankles by Aug. 23, 1985. Evans' attorneys said Galloway failed to notice the rash, which is one of the symptoms of Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever.

However, Bryson countered with records that indicated Mrs. Evans told hospital officials her rash broke out the day before she entered the

Murphrey Named Small Business Leader Of Year

By Lane Dunn
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Edgar Murphrey Jr., president of Copypro Inc. in Greenville, was named Pitt County Small Business Leader of the Year at an awards banquet sponsored by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

"Before me are a lot of people who have done extremely good jobs in business," Murphrey said at Wednesday night's Small Business Leaders Awards banquet in Greenville. "I am honored to be mentioned in those circles."

Murphrey told the gathering that he has had many good experiences in business. "Tonight is certainly one of those high times," he said.

The top award was presented by Chris McCoy, Chamber of Commerce chairman of the board.

In addition to the overall award, Small Business Leader awards were presented to businessmen from five Pitt County towns. Each award was presented by the town's mayor.

Murphrey was a double winner Wednesday as Ed Carter also presented him the award as Greenville's small business leader.

Marvin Baldree presented the Ayden award to Marvin Hathaway of Prime Printers, while Harvey Lewis of E.R. Lewis Construction Co. received the Bethel business award from Frank Hemingway.

Joe Kue of Kue's Pharmacy won the Farmville business award, but was not able to attend the banquet. Edna Earl Baker presented the award to Kue's daughter, Melanie Kue Jones.

Don Casey of Grifton Plumbing & Heating received the Grifton business leader award from Dr. William Rasberry.

Chamber President Ed Walker, the banquet speaker, talked about "A Million Dollars Worth of Assets," discussing the things that money can't buy. Walker said those things include a good name, clear conscience and self-respect.

Walker said the million dollars comes from "intangible assets" on which a dollar figure cannot be easily placed. He said those assets include a good sense of humor, character, which Walker called the world's greatest asset, an optimistic spirit, friends and the power of choice.

Louise Downing, director of the chamber's Small Business Center, presented several Executive Development Series Awards. They went to people who attended all eight meetings of the series.

Gene Brown, vice chairman of the Small Business Council, presented the Half Century Club awards and the Century Club award. Several businesses received Half Century awards, presented to new members who have been in business for 50 years or more.

The town of Farmville was the only recipient of the Century award. Mrs. Baker accepted the award on behalf of the town.

Levine Resigns As Art School Dean To Accept Post At MIT

ECU NEWS BUREAU

Dr. Edward Levine has resigned as dean of the school of art at East Carolina University and will take a new position in the school of architecture at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Levine, who has headed the school of art for the past six years, has been asked to develop a new program in visual arts at MIT, his colleagues said.

He came to ECU in 1983 after a national search for an art school dean. A sculptor, art educator and former dean of the faculty and professor of fine arts at Minneapolis College of Art and Design, he "has served East Carolina University well for the past six years," said Dr. William A. Bloodworth, acting vice chancellor for academic affairs. "I know he leaves the School of Art with its programs and reputation in extraordinarily good standing."

Bloodworth announced that Dr. Erwin Hester, professor of English and former chairman of the English department, will serve as acting dean of the school of art while a national search is conducted.

ERWIN HESTER

EDWARD LEVINE

Bloodworth announced Levine's resignation and Hester's appointment to the art school faculty. Both are effective June 1.

He said Hester, who served 14 years as English department chairman, "will bring to the position a great deal of administrative experience and ability. I am certain that he will serve the school and the university extraordinarily well until the search is complete for a new dean."

Hester will continue to teach on a half-time basis in the English department where he is a specialist in Victorian literature, especially the Victorian novel.

Dr. Ernest B. Uhr, dean of the school of business, will chair the search committee for Levine's successor. Serving on the panel will be art professors Paul Hartley, Craig Malmrose, Elizabeth Ross, John Satterfield and Donald Sexauer, and Dr. Dori Finley, chairman of the department of food, nutrition and institution management in the ECU School of Home Economics.

Bloodworth said he hoped that a new art dean might be named by the beginning of the spring semester, Jan. 3, 1990.

Scholarships Are Awarded

North Pitt High School students Jeffrey Wayne Bell and Christy Oakley have been named recipients of the Walter C. Latham and Daisy Lee Carson Latham scholarships.

Bell, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Bell of Bethel, has been awarded a $1,000 scholarship, and he plans to major in physics and mathematics at East Carolina University.

Miss Oakley, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Oakley of Greenville, has been awarded a $500 scholarship, which was designed to benefit an applicant who plans to be a teacher — the profession of Walter and Daisy Latham. Miss Oakley plans to major in mathematics and education at ECU with aspirations of teaching on the high school level.

OAKLEY

BELL

Both scholarships are renewable for three years on evidence of continued good academic achievement.

Dr. and Mrs. Bryan Latham of Coral Gables, Fla., established the scholarships in 1984 in honor of Latham's parents. The scholarships are awarded to seniors at North Pitt each spring to reward and encourage academic excellence, school and community leadership, physical vigor, and high moral character.

Jones Says Women Major Health Users

Medical World News, published in San Francisco, quotes Dr. James Jones of Greenville, the president of the American Academy of Family Physicians, as saying that women are the major purchasers of health care in this country.

And that's why family physicians and internists are actively competing with obstetrician-gynecologists for this segment of the patient market, the publication reported in the article.

Federal statistics, generated at MWN's request, show that women accounted for 387 million of 636 million visits to physicians in 1985, the latest data available.

The AAFP has concentrated its advertising in women's magazines in recent years, Jones is quoted as saying. Jones, chairman of the department of family medicine of the East Carolina University School of Medicine, said that many family doctors are gearing their office hours for the convenience of working women.

The American Society of Internal Medicine has also launched an ad campaign targeting women.

One impetus for medicine's greater interest in women is their changing health care demands — and medicine's new awareness of some of their needs, said Dr. Donald Keith, a Seattle family physician and AAFP board member. "For instance, a number of years ago we were lulled by the idea that men get heart attacks," Keith said.

But physicians are increasingly evaluating women's risk of heart disease, including the ordering of procedures like cardiac catheterization.

Women also face emotional health hazards, said Dr. Sandra Fryhofer, an Atlanta internist. "Working women's stress is very real, with women assuming double roles and working in an essentially male-dominated work place."

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Panama Voting It Becomes Clear Election Rigged

Even as the whole world watched it becomes apparent Panamanian elections, which were supposed to show the tiny central American country is a democracy, were rigged.

The reports are coming in to the White House of phony voting in Panama and President Bush is said to be taking them very seriously.

Well the president should. The United States' goal should be to promote free and democratic elections everywhere ... and our spokesmen should be particularly vocal about democracy in the western hemisphere.

Above all, however, we have a huge security stake in good government in Panama. We have agreed to return the Panama Canal zone to Panama. Nevertheless the canal is still under U.S. control and thousands of military personnel and their families are stationed in the area. When we give up the canal it is vital that it be kept open as an international waterway ... that U.S. ships be free to navigate it.

In the hands of a dictator the Panama Canal can be a weapon. The constant threat of its closing can be held over the U.S. That would be an intolerable situation for our commercial shipping. Paralyzing the movement of U.S. Naval vessels in time of crisis would be unacceptable.

Thus relations are tense between the U.S. and its tiny neighboring country of Panama. It is not a people to people problem; rather it is the age old frustration of a leader who will not allow the will of his people to be carried out.

The situation is a serious one for the people of Panama as well as all the nations of the Western Hemisphere. The United States cannot overreact, but we must always uphold the principles of democracy.

A Lost Bomb

Accidents Are A Chilling Possibility

The revelation was chilling. An American hydrogen bomb was lost at sea near Okinawa when an aircraft slid off an aircraft carrier.

Though the incident occurred in 1965 and was finally revealed in 1981 there was no indication that the bomb was lost near inhabited islands.

Needless to say Okinawans are incensed over the knowledge that the bomb may still be in the ocean depths off their shores. The Japanese, who know the horror of nuclear bombs as the only nation ever attacked with them, are up in arms about the disclosure. They don't know for certain whether the bomb is still in the ocean and what the effects of time will be on such a bomb deep in the sea.

It starkly reminds us that as long as nuclear bombs and nuclear tipped missiles are maintained by nations there is the danger of accidents.

Accidents don't respect specific areas. They can happen anywhere.

This nuclear bomb was lost almost 25 years ago, but the effect of learning it was lost so near Okinawa is to send shock waves through Japan and its government.

The only sure way to eliminate accidents with nuclear weapons will be to eliminate the weapons. The super powers are taking small steps in that direction, but we have far, far to go.

The Latest Medical Advice: Lighten Up

WASHINGTON — A doctor has published evidence that hostility is hard on the heart. I hate that doctor.

In the 1970s, research identified certain personality traits as significant risk factors in heart disease. Specifically, Type A people were said to be especially prone to heart attacks.

Type A people are the kind who do not stop to smell the roses (or even at stop signs). They are list-making, clock-watching workaholics who think about and do several things simultaneously (such as jogging while listening to taped lessons in Japanese). They play to win even against children, measure success quantitatively (sales made, patients seen, cases argued, columns written) and generally charge headlong through long days, from 5 a.m. aerobics through tutorials with Ted Koppel, then to sleep, perchance to dream, but dream efficiently.

I took such 1970s research to (so to speak) heart. I tried to become an Olympic-class rose-smeller, a disciplined smeller of a complete array of roses: more smelled today than yesterday, more tomorrow than ever. Now Dr. Redford Williams, director of Duke University's Behavioral Medicine Research Center, has published "The Trusting Heart: Great News About Type A Behavior." What he calls great news is heartbreaking.

George Will

It is that "only the hostility and anger associated with Type A behavior actually contribute to heart disease." The problem is not workaholicism or competitiveness or even perpetual impatience. Rather it is a quickness to anger that derives from a hostile outlook and cynical mistrust of people.

It is infuriating. They have taken from us dry martinis, marbled steaks, ham-and-eggs and most other pleasures, and now, not content with multiplying our reasons for being angry, they are proscribing anger. However, to be fair (this is especially enraging), Williams' fascinating book is a persuasive account of research regarding the biological consequences — the toxicity — of anger.

Since the 19th-century advancement of the germ theory of disease, medicine has emphasized the search for specific, often single, causes of particular diseases. The "one disease, one cause" approach has,

Williams says, often been fruitful, as with the conquest of pneumonia by penicillin and of smallpox and polio by vaccines.

The search for a technological silver bullet is suited to the American spirit. However, it is less successful when the problem is not contagious diseases but the more complex diseases that now account for most of today's staggering health costs.

The search for multiple factors in heart disease has led to scrutiny of what Williams calls "negative mind-body interactions." Research has moved "from anecdote to epidemiology" regarding increased risks of illness as a result of the impact of states of mind on the body. New learning about the physiology of stress (brain activities stimulated, bodily chemicals released) points Williams to old religious teachings about living.

Be more tranquil, less worldly. "If yours is a hostile heart, you need to change it into a more trusting heart," trusting that people are essentially good and generally trying to be fair.

Heart disease is the major cause of death in the United States and other industrial societies. Perhaps that is because such societies place high value on striving, efficiency and other potentially stressful behaviors. Williams believes that especially since the 1960s there has been an evolution of cultural norms that are, strictly speaking, unhealthy: a lonely individualism of restless enslavement to appetites.

His moral precepts would be banal were they not backed by interesting science. I have vowed to try to heed them when provoked to hostility by, for example, the outrage of improperly used turn signals.

Imagine this: You are in a hurry to get home to see the evening news. (No, not the network newscasts — SportsCenter on ESPN.) You are driving on a four-lane street, in the left lane. As you approach a red light, drumming your fingers on the steering wheel, you think: Should I get into the right lane — is the car in front of me going to turn left? No, its turn signal is not blinking.

But it should have been blinking. As the light turns green, the incompetent driver, who should be horsewhipped, pulls into the intersection, stops, and only then turns on his turn signal, thereby telling you what you already know. Next to you, in the right lane, the Type B rose-smeller is moving and you are not. Oh, to be driving a tank, for the savage pleasure of squishing the turn-signal criminal in front of you.

You are shouting inside: Move or I'll kill you. Williams is whispering: Lighten up or you'll kill you.

Undoing Noriega's Grip On Panama

John Goshko

WASHINGTON — As President Bush ponders new steps to end Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega's control of Panama, U.S. officials privately acknowledge that he has the unenviable task of choosing between actions that are likely either to be ineffective or to pose significant risks for U.S. interests in Latin America.

Many members of Congress, including some who observed Noriega's apparent rigging of his country's presidential election Sunday, are calling for tough measures, such as abrogating the 1977 Panama Canal treaties or even invading Panama.

But, U.S. officials warn, such moves could have consequences much more damaging for the United States than Noriega's taunts.

Anything resembling an invasion could impel the Panamanians to sabotage that would close the canal indefinitely, cause incalculable damage to commercial shipping and impede the U.S. Navy's ability to move ships freely between the Atlantic and Pacific.

As the United States learned from its intervention in the Dominican Republic in 1965 and Grenada in 1983, the use of force would also deal a massive blow to U.S.-Latin American relations. While most Latin Americans dislike Noriega, they passionately hate the idea of the United States intervening in the internal affairs of any country in this hemisphere.

The canal is such a powerful symbol of Latin American nationalism that any move away from the U.S. commitment to give Panama control of the waterway at the end of the century could enable Noriega to recover significantly from the fear and loathing that he now inspires among his countrymen.

Backpedaling by Washington on the canal's transfer times would bolster Noriega's charge that the United States is plotting to keep the canal. U.S. officials fear that could transform Noriega from a despised dictator into a nationalist hero.

Even though control of the canal is not supposed to pass to Panama until noon on Dec. 31, 1999, Bush does not have the luxury of a decade to resolve the Noriega problem. At the beginning of next year, the U.S. administrator of the canal is due to be replaced by a Panamanian. But it seems certain that the Senate, whose approval is required, would reject any candidate put forward by a Noriega-controlled government.

U.S. officials say that if that happens, it will not necessarily mean that the United States has abrogated the treaties. But if Noriega still holds power, his propaganda apparatus undoubtedly would seek to create a different perception.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater responded Tuesday to questions about how Bush intends to deal with Noriega's latest actions by declaring: "We have been considering options that range from the use of military force to various economic and commercial moves."

have been unable to free Panama from the grip of Noriega and his 15,000-member Panamanian Defense Forces.

Economic pressures have brought the Panamanian economy to the brink of ruin but have had no apparent effect on Noriega and his lieutenants, who allegedly have salted away millions of dollars from their drug dealings. While U.S. officials say the financial screws can be tightened further, they admit that the likely effect would be to subject the Panamanian people to more economic pain without hurting Noriega.

The officials say that over the long haul, the measures being considered — an augmented embargo on Panama's trade and international financial dealings and taking money out of the Panamanian economy by removing U.S. dependents and moving U.S. personnel onto U.S. military bases — could fuel unrest to the point where the Defense Forces would decide Noriega would have to go.

But the officials also said there is no guarantee that this would happen. And, they also are aware that such a long-range campaign of attrition is unlikely to satisfy the growing demand in Congress for more drastic action.

However, the officials stress that military action, beyond a limited show of force such as sending more troops and planes to the bases in Panama, is very unlikely unless there is a serious threat to American lives or to the canal. The need to protect Americans was the reason cited for intervening in the Dominican Republic and Grenada, but Noriega is regarded as too clever to give Bush a similar pretext in Panama.

The United States came out of the Grenada experience with minimal damage to its hemispheric relations because it was dealing with a tiny, English-speaking island nation whose neighbors supported action against an extremist government that had lost popular support. The U.S. government also made the case that Americans attending medical school on Grenada were endangered by strife between rival governmental factions struggling for power.

But, in 1965, when then-President Lyndon B. Johnson poured 25,000 Marines and paratroopers into the Dominican Republic to block alleged leftists from winning a bloody civil war, he violated Latin America's attachment to nonintervention in a manner that still rankles the region.

The high hopes for a new era in U.S.-Latin relations that Johnson's predecessor, John F. Kennedy, had launched with the Alliance for Progress gave way to more than a decade of suspicion and recrimination that helped to fuel the region's instability.

In fact, it was not until 1977, when then-President Jimmy Carter negotiated the Panama Canal treaties, that the damage began to be repaired. Now, frustration over inability to get rid of Noriega has raised the threat that the pendulum could be swinging back in the other direction.

ANJI KATARIA

Students Compete

Anji Kataria, a senior at J.H. Rose High School, recently won first place in the Lincoln-Douglas Debate at the state tournament of the Tarheel Forensics League held in Fayetteville.

The topic debated was "Resolved: That Duty to Others Ought to Take Precedence Over Self." Participants in the debate are prepared to argue both the affirmative and negative cases for the resolution.

Miss Kataria finished the five preliminary rounds and three final rounds undefeated with a perfect score.

Martel Walker, also a student at Rose, competed in the dramatic interpretation. Both students have been instrumental in establishing the forensics program at Rose.

Two members of the East Carolina University Forensics Team, Mary Harrison and Michael Harvey, are the Rose coaches, and its sponsor is Nancy Mann, assisted by Nancy Wynne.

Other team members who have competed this year are Teresa Lambe, Katie Raab, Maricelina Caro, Nairobi Morgan, Laura Silverman, Jonathan Li, Rolf Sundwall, Susie Ambert, Laura Guy, Ken Wu, Chris Hele and Geoff Clayton.

Academic Boosters

The J.H. Rose High School Academic Boosters recently honored Rose teachers with an appreciation luncheon at the school.

Parents and local merchants contributed money and goods for the luncheon, which was directed by Joanne Newton. Every teacher was presented with a flower corsage.

The boosters held a breakfast today to honor students named to the honor roll and principal's list for the fifth grading period.

CHRISTY LEAHY

Student Selected

Christy Leahy of Greenville has been selected as a recipient of the B.J. and R.J. Carine Scholarship in Marine Science for the 1989-90 academic year from the University of South Carolina, Columbia.

Recipients are selected on the basis of academic achievements. In addition to the scholarship stipend, the recipient qualifies for in-state tuition for a total scholarship of $3,000.

A student at J.H. Rose High School, Miss Leahy participates in the precollege program in French at East Carolina University. She is a candidate to the North Carolina Scholars program and is a member of the St. Timothy's Youth Group. She is a member of the school track team.

Miss Leahy is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Edward P. Leahy.

Delay Sought In Hearing On Park

By Jerry Raynor
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Greenville Recreation and Parks commissioners voted Wednesday night to ask the City Council to postpone until a later date tonight's scheduled public hearing at city hall on the proposed Little League Ball Park in Eastwood subdivision.

The public hearing was originally predicated on the council's receiving today a plan recommended by the Recreation and Parks Commission for operation of the ball park.

However, commissioners agreed that they could not approve a nine-point list of recommendations presented to commissioners by a four-person committee representing the residents of Eastwood subdivision.

Principal objections to proposed agreement factors drawn up by the Eastwood panel were to provisions "that there be no permanent lighting on the fields but security light" and "that the fields be used during daylight hours only."

Those items, commissioners agreed, are not feasible or valid considerations. Commissioners said they could not feel justified in recommending such restrictions to the City Council and furthermore, city ordinances in effect govern decisions by the council for rules and regulations applicable to city property.

Commissioners also cited the possibility that in the future Little League teams might wish to schedule night games or that the fields could conceivably be needed for other night usage.

Another of the nine points proposed by the Eastwood committee called for "Windsor Drive to remain closed as ingress/egress to the Little League ball fields." This proposal, commissioners maintain, is another factor they are not authorized to deal with.

In light of these factors, commissioners directed Executive Director Boyd Lee to have the Eastwood group in an effort to draw up a proposal that can be recommended to the City Council as basis for a public hearing. If this cannot be accomplished by Lee, then he is to schedule a meeting by the Eastwood committee with commissioners at their June meeting.

Physician Cleared hospital, which would have been Aug. 31, 1985, two days after her last visit to Galloway.

"You have got to have the fever, and you have got to have the rash (to diagnose Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever), and there are so many inconsistencies," Bryson, who represents Medical Mutual Insurance Co. of North Carolina, said in his closing argument.

Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever can be difficult to detect, he said, but its symptoms include severe headaches, muscle and joint aches, a red or purple rash and a fever. The infectious disease causes inflammation in the veins and other complications.

North Carolina regularly leads the nation in the number of reported cases of Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever, attorneys said.

Physicians treat the disease with two different antibiotics, but Galloway treated Mrs. Evans with pain medication, Evans' attorney, Joe McLeod of Fayetteville, argued to the jury.

McLeod claimed Galloway's record keeping was poor, and he was negligent in changing Mrs. Evans' medication four times in a 13-day span when he should have conducted a physical examination. Galloway did not examine Mrs. Evans on her final visit; he made an appointment for her to see a specialist, McLeod said.

Bryson said that Galloway did not examine her on the final visit to save her some money. Galloway had conducted tests and had seen no evidence of Rocky Mountain Spotted fever, Bryson said.

As for the record keeping, Bryson said it is easy to hold physicians to a high standard in hindsight. Once any doctor is sued, he will always wish his records were better, Bryson said.

"If every doctor has to think lawsuit when a patient comes in, we're in a bad state," he said.

After deliberating nearly two hours, the jury returned to the courtroom to ask Judge David E. Reid Jr. of Greenville to explain once again what actions constitute negligence and proximate cause. One juror said they "just wanted to be sure" they understood the specifics of the law.

According to law, a doctor must exercise his best judgment; use reasonable care in applying knowledge and skill and use a standard of care required by law, Reid said.

The standard does not require that a doctor be infallible or possess the utmost skill and learning known only to a few in the profession. The law requires that a physician conform to a standard of care for a doctor with comparable experience in the same community.

If the jury found that Galloway violated any one of the standards, Reid said it could find Galloway negligent. If so, the jury had to decide whether the negligence was one of the causes of Mrs. Evans' death, Reid said.

educator, serving as president of both the American Board of Pediatrics and the American Board of Medical Specialties. In 1987 he received The Order of the Long Leaf Pine for outstanding service to the state of North Carolina.

"I'm kind of overwhelmed. I think it's great and it gives me a special feeling because of the nature of our beginnings and the distance we have come in the accomplishment of mutual goals, like improving health care in eastern North Carolina through the medium of higher public educational institutions," Laupus said of the award.

But the former dean said, "I personally believe the award is for the accomplishments of a talented team of colleagues which now numbers in the hundreds and I accept the award as reward to our partnership over the past 14 years."

Of the 53 Gardner awards presented in past years, UNC-Chapel Hill faculty members have received 17.

recognized as a teacher, literary critic and publisher.

The awards, given annually since 1949, were established by the will of former Gov. O. Max Gardner to recognize faculty who have "made the greatest contributions to the welfare of the human race." They are the only honor for which all faculty members of the 16 UNC system campuses are eligible.

The 1989 awards include a citation and $4,500 cash prize.

A pediatrician, Laupus became the first dean of the fledgling ECU School of Medicine in 1975, and nurtured it into a major medical center.

The board's citation reads in part: "Blessed with uncommon wisdom, sensitivity and patience, Dr. Laupus quietly harnessed the energy of the proud eastern region of North Carolina and directed that energy toward excellence in medical education, research and service. Guided by his single-minded dedication, the School of Medicine successfully addressed each of its mandates: to increase the supply of primary care physicians for our state, to enhance the opportunities for minority students to obtain a medical education, and to raise the standard of health care available to the people of eastern North Carolina."

According to the citation, "It is difficult to conceive that the school would have achieved its remarkable record without the unique contributions of its founding dean."

Born in Seymour, Ind., Laupus earned his medical degree from the Yale University School of Medicine in 1945 and has served in academic and professional posts at New York Hospital, Cornell Medical Center, the Medical College of Georgia and Wayne University School of Medicine. For 12 years prior to joining the ECU Medical School, he was chairman of the department of pediatrics at the Medical College of Virginia in Richmond.

Laupus was named vice chancellor and dean at ECU in 1982 and held both titles until 1987 when he relinquished the deanship.

Laupus is the author of various textbooks, articles and research papers on pediatric education, childhood respiratory diseases, infant child care and physician evaluation. He has earned a national reputation as a physician and

House OKs Bill Denying Driver's Licenses To Youths With Drug, Alcohol Convictions

RALEIGH (AP) — A 16-year-old seeking his driver's license would first have to take an oath that he has not been convicted of any crime involving drugs or alcohol under a bill approved by the House.

Rep. Don Beard, D-Cumberland, said young students might not know their legislator or the mayor of their home town, but they all know race car driver Richard Petty.

"It's about wheels," said Beard, whose measure would make any teen-ager convicted of drug and alcohol crimes wait until he was 18 to get a license. "That's what's important to young people."

Beard, in explaining his bill on the floor, addressed his comments to a school group seated in the House gallery.

"You're not looking for drugs and alcohol. Drugs and alcohol are looking for you," Beard said. "This bill will give you some more ammunition to resist that temptation."

Beard's original bill called for clerks of court in any counties where a young person had lived to certify that a student had no drug or alcohol convictions.

"If you're military kid, you have a real problem," said Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange. "This is a procedural nightmare."

Hackney said he agreed with the sentiment of Beard's bill, but that the measure was not in shape to accomplish its intent.

Hackney said it would not involve students who already have a license, would not cover younger teen-agers who have had their criminal records cleared through a legal process and would create massive paperwork for clerks of court.

"This represents our frustrations of trying to deal with a problem in a short-cut way," said Rep. George Miller, D-Durham. "We think we're going to pass a piece of paper up here and that's going to make it right. I wish it was that simple."

Miller said the bill would not cover someone who was convicted while on a trip to the beach since the conviction would not show up in the records of his home county.

And Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, wondered why someone who drinks a beer should be denied a license, when others who had been convicted of larceny, breaking and entering or other crimes would be able to get one.

Rep. Roy Cooper, D-Nash, proposed an amendment that would make those seeking a driver's license and their parents sign an oath that the student had not been convicted of any crime involving drugs or alcohol.

That amendment, which was approved 96-0, would eliminate searches of juvenile records by clerks of court, Cooper said.

With the amendment, the bill was approved 90-6 and sent to the Senate.

GOP Takes Over

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — House Minority Leader Johnathan Rhyne, who helped House Speaker Joe Mavretic unseat incumbent Liston Ramsey, has become the first Republican to preside over the House in nearly a century.

Mavretic Wednesday turned the gavel over to the Lincoln County Republican for 50 minutes while he left the chamber.

"It really felt good," said Rhyne, who received congratulations and pats on the back from his fellow Republicans after leaving the dais. "It was a tremendous thrill. It's a different perspective."

A few hours later, the second Republican this century took the gavel when Rep. Charles Cromer of Davidson County presided.

The state Division of Archives and History said the last Republican House Speaker was Zebulon Vance Walsler, who presided in 1895.

There was barely a ripple in the House when Rhyne took over, but as news of Rhyne's ascent circulated through the Legislative Building, a stream of senators, lobbyists and reporters came to see for themselves.

Sen. Fountain Odom, D-Mecklenburg, literally ran from the Senate chamber across the rotunda to peer inside the House doors.

"It's true!" he said as he returned to the Senate.

Mavretic Tuesday turned the gavel over to Rep. Toby Fitch, D-Wilson, making Fitch the first black legislator this century, and possibly the first in state history, to preside over the chamber.

Cursing On School Property Could Produce Fine And Jail For Adults

By Dennis Patterson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Teachers, students and other school employees are exempted from a House-approved bill that would levy a $50 fine and 30 days in jail on any adult who uses profanity in the presence of a minor while on school grounds.

"We felt that the school administration itself can deal with its own employees, but does not have any way to deal with outsiders," Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, said Wednesday in explaining the exemption.

"With apologies to Rep. (Dave) Diamont, I thought the reason teachers and students were exempted was so we wouldn't be prosecuting coaches," said Rep. Sharon Thompson, D-Durham, drawing a peal of laughter from House members.

"You're trying to solve a problem, an obvious problem, we have, but this is not the way," said Diamont, D-Surry, a high school football coach. "This is like using a shotgun to kill a fly."

He said his players and coaches run four laps for using profanity, and the solution lies with school officials and school boards which must make it clear bad language will not be tolerated.

"What we need to solve this problem is some pure-T leadership," Diamont said.

Diamont asked if the bill would apply to volunteer coaches who are not employees of the school system, but give their time to coach high school sports. Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, a lawyer, said he believed it would.

Diamont, in answer to a question, said he did not know of a single teacher that has ever been fired or reprimanded by school authorities for their language.

"So what you have here is a situation where a parent or some other adult on school grounds will be looking at a $50 fine or 30 days in jail, while a teacher might end up with a reprimand, if that," said Rep. Mickey Michaux, D-Durham. "Is that equitable?"

"I find it very difficult to support a bill as discriminatory as I find this to be," said Rep. Betty Wiser, D-Wake.

Lilley said the bill grew out of a disturbance in his district, where school officials found there was no law under which a parent using profanity at school could be charged.

He said the state has made it illegal to curse over the telephone, on a train or in other places, but not schools.

Rep. Michael Decker, R-Forsyth, urged members to support the bill to "send a message" that profanity would not be tolerated on school grounds.

The bill won final approval on a 78-26 vote and was sent to the Senate.

Senate Sends Leaf Assessment Plan For Promotion To House

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

One of two bills calling for farmers to vote in a tobacco assessment referendum has been approved by the state Senate, and is on its way to the House for consideration.

The bill passed Wednesday after Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., appeared before the Senate Finance Committee to support the measure. The bill calls for farmers to vote in a referendum to increase an assessment from 10 cents per 100 pounds of tobacco to 20 cents per 100 pounds. The money would go to Tobacco Associates to promote flue-cured leaf worldwide.

The initial bill called for the assessment to be 25 cents per 100 pounds, but it was amended.

A parliamentary maneuver essentially killed another bill that called for farmers to vote in a referendum to financially support Tobacco Growers Association of North Carolina and the Tobacco Foundation, which provides money for tobacco research at N.C. State University.

That bill died even though Sen. Jim Speed, D-Franklin, amended it to reduce the proposed assessment to 5 cents per 100 pounds, which would have been divided between the two groups.

"I told them that the farmers were paying enough," Rose said. "They are going to have to pay more this year for grading fees... new tobacco sheets, even though they don't own the fork-lift trucks that damage the sheet they are being asked to replace." Fuel, fertilizer and other expenses to produce the crop are going up, Rose said.

Tobacco Associates, which was formed in 1947, has a proven track record, he said. With help from the federal Targeted Export Assistance program, the group has recruited "a magnificent new customer in Turkey," which is using about 85 percent U.S. tobacco to produce a blended cigarette, Rose said. That project "may have ruffled a few feathers among a few cigarette companies and leaf dealers," he added.

Rose said he told the committee that competition and misunderstanding would cloud the issues if two referendums were held jointly.

IN THE STATE

AIDS Bill OK'd

RALEIGH (AP) — Supporters of a bill that would outlaw some forms of discrimination against carriers of the AIDS virus say they are hopeful the measure will pass, after some of its key provisions removed earlier this week were restored.

On Wednesday, the state voted 27-18 to tentatively approve the bill. Opponents delayed a final vote until today, when supporters will try to insert a revised version of anti-discrimination language stripped from the bill Monday before it was pulled from the floor.

One vote deleted from the bill the anti-discrimination provisions, including prohibitions on denying housing, employment, public transportation, accommodations or services to people because they have the AIDS virus.

The bill would not prevent employers from transferring or firing workers whose performance is impaired because they have AIDS. Bill supporters say it can take a decade or longer for the deadly virus to manifest itself and that infected people should be allowed to function normally until then.

CP&L Meeting

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Carolina Power & Light Co. stockholders overwhelmingly rejected a proposal that would have required the company to make detailed reports on accidents, government fines and rulings on nuclear power plant operations.

The issue, sponsored by the Catholic Missionary Society in Hyde Park, Mass., received 7 percent of proxies cast for the annual meeting. The order has some 200 shares of CP&L stock, said Wells Eddleman of Durham, who spoke for the issue.

The company has 85,000 shareholders who own about 80.4 million shares.

Company management, including Chairman Sherwood Smith, who supported the issue going to a vote, urged rejection because of increased reporting costs.

Zoning Bill Advances

RALEIGH (AP) — A bill that would let landowners block local governments from rezoning their property for two years has gained tentative Senate approval after a wild parliamentary sequence that at one point appeared to doom the measure.

The bill passed 26-20 on Wednesday, but opponents delayed a final vote until today.

Earlier, the legislation appeared in trouble after the Senate voted 24-23 — with Lt. Gov. Jim Gardner casting the tie-breaking vote — to return the bill to a committee. That would have dimmed the bill's prospects, since under legislative rules bills that have not cleared at least one chamber by Thursday will be ineligible for enactment this year.

Sen. Richard Conder, D-Richmond, the bill's sponsor, had the bill returned to the floor and tentatively approved in the waning moments of the day's session, as the Senate rushed to finish its calendar and depart for a social function in nearby Franklin County. Opponents unsuccessfully tried to forestall the move with a flurry of motions, including a call to adjourn that Gardner declined to recognize.

Marine Demoted

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — A Marine sergeant who pleaded guilty to failing to tell others he had tested positive for the AIDS virus was reduced in rank to corporal and ordered to forfeit $600 in pay Wednesday.

Sgt. John J. Roantes, 29, who had been scheduled to be discharged from the Marine Corps in January, may now leave the Marines after 12 years of service once his discharge papers are processed, Gunnery Sgt. Dennis Roby said.

Roantes was accused of exposing a female dental hygienist to the AIDS virus when she cleaned his teeth last year. He could have received up to 10 years in prison, a dishonorable discharge and forfeiture of all pay and allowances.

Saucer-Life Craft

Panel Wants Task Force Created To Study Science, Technical Needs

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A coalition aimed at improving the quality of science, math and technology education today recommended President Bush form a White House task force on those subjects to develop a national policy.

The non-profit Triangle Coalition for Science and Technology Education also said the federal government should spend an extra $304 million in fiscal 1990, rising to $465 million in 1993, to promote elementary science, math and technology education improvements.

The proposed presidential task force would develop a national policy, coordinate federal programs and plan a White House conference on "Science, Mathematics and Technology Education for the year 2000."

"We have made a special effort to emphasize programs that do not require significant new funds," said the report released by the coalition of 80 business, labor, science and education groups. "However, the very magnitude of the challenge the nation faces will call for some new programs and new resources."

The action plan, designed to help Congress and the president develop a national policy on science education, states that "increased investments in elementary education must be the nation's number one priority."

Specifically, it suggests that the government start a $50 million grant program to help elementary schools pay for new science equipment and earmark another $50 million to encourage innovative approaches to science teaching.

The group would also give the National Science Foundation an extra $50 million to expand its in-service and pre-service training programs for elementary teachers.

Other recommendations would require less money or none at all. Among them:

- Revamp the science curriculum to tailor it to students of different ages, interests and backgrounds, a project that should be led by the National Science Foundation

-Increase federal support for graduate training in the sciences and engineering, with special support to women and minorities.

-Give clear instructions to schools receiving money under federal school improvement programs, totaling more than $1 billion a year, that their first priority must be science, math and technology education activities.

-Establish new federal incentives to encourage better teacher training.

U.N. Wants Guards To Stand Tall

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

UNITED NATIONS — U.N. security guards have been ordered to quit slouching, get those hands out of those pockets and spit out the gum as part of a campaign to brighten their image.

A memorandum from Anthony O'Connell, chief of the U.N. Security and Safety Service, reminds his officers they work under the eyes of diplomats and countless tourists and must observe proper military decorum.

Among admonitions in his memorandum, obtained Wednesday:

- Smoking and chewing gum are forbidden while in uniform.

- Carrying of bags, packages or other items while in uniform does not create a good image and is not permitted.

- Leaning against walls or door frames — also out.

- Guards with hands in pockets or thumbs hooked in belts look either ridiculous or aggressive — or both. All members of the service must refrain from so doing.

Regarding saluting, O'Connell wrote: "There is an unacceptable lack of uniformity in this area. ... Members of the service at the rank of inspector and above will be saluted."

Guards routinely salute Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar as their commander, but respondents observed an outbreak of saluting since O'Connell's memo began circulating on Friday.

Political Scuffle

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A City Council candidate says he regrets bringing a matter into an opponent's name at a public forum after she called him a wife beater.

"It's something that on sober reflection I shouldn't have done," Frank Little said Wednesday.

"Under the circumstance, she's right, that's all I did."

The scuffle between Little and candidate Helen Hull occurred Tuesday at Homewood Carnegie Library.

After the water was thrown, Hull slapped Little as the two tangled briefly on the stage, witnesses said. Hull said Little tried to strike her.

As the fight unfolded, witnesses said, spectators on the stage and subdued Little while Hull's supporters led her away.

Hull, who was executive director of a shelter for battered women from 1981 to 1983, said she does not remember striking Little.

Doctor Says Bush In Excellent Health

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush has been declared in sound health and advised to keep up the exercise regimen his physician says helps keep him fit.

Although Bush emerged from Bethesda Naval Medical Center on Wednesday with an adhesive bandage on a finger, he was pronounced in "excellent health" by his personal physician, Dr. Burton Lee, after his first full-scale medical checkup as chief executive.

The bandage covered a cyst that was treated, and which Lee said is not a medical problem.

"President Bush is in extremely sound physical condition," Lee said in a statement issued by the White House. "He keeps fit through a number of physical activities, which we recommend he continue on a regular basis."

Lee led a team of physicians — including an ophthalmologist, a urologist, a dermatologist and two allergists — that conducted the three-hour examination.

The statement said a "sebaceous cyst" on Bush's middle right finger was drained. "The president is wearing a Band-Aid on the finger, which he can remove within the next few hours," Lee said. "This cyst has been present for many years and does not present a medical problem."

A sebaceous cyst is a benign growth on the skin that is often removed surgically.

Bush is an avid jogger, plays tennis, pitches horseshoes, occasionally swims and uses a stationary bicycle and indoor treadmill.

The White House statement said a chest X-ray, an electrocardiogram, blood samples and a urinalysis all showed normal results.

Other X-rays showed mild degenerative arthritis of the hip. That condition "has been present for several years," the statement said.

Bush has said the arthritis has forced him in recent years to cut down on his jogging.

Bush takes medication because of a severe allergy to bee stings and to control hay fever. Wednesday's medical statement said "allergy tests showed excellent protective antibody levels."

The White House did not make immediately available statistics from the examination, such as Bush's cholesterol count and blood pressure. However, deputy press secretary Stephen Hart said some additional data might be released later.

Hart said Wednesday's examination showed no major changes from the results of last year's tests, which showed Bush's cholesterol count at 192, considered in the desirable range by the American Heart Association. His blood pressure then was a normal 108/84.

More complete information was released from the May 1988 test, when Bush was a presidential candidate.

Bush himself displayed his pleasure with the results of the physical by grinning and flashing giving a double thumbs-up sign when asked how he felt as he arrived at the White House from the hospital.

Quayle's Job Plan May Be Revised

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The government's major jobs program that Vice President Dan Quayle helped create while a senator would be overhauled under a Bush administration proposal that calls for spending more on the poor and teen-agers.

"For years, the government has been distributing money to youth programs in a fragmented and piecemeal fashion, and sometimes without clear expectations of what these youths should achieve," Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole said today.

In testimony prepared for the Senate subcommittee on employment and productivity, Mrs. Dole also called on states to improve their efforts to curb youth unemployment.

Even though the proposed amendments would significantly change the Job Training Partnership Act, Mrs. Dole declined to criticize the program's creators, Sen.

Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Quayle, an Indiana senator at the time.

"But JTPA can be made even better," she told the subcommittee, which has jurisdiction over the act. "Funds do not always reach the individuals and areas who need help the most. In some communities it is felt that the program does not always result in good jobs and a higher standard of living."

The changes aim at ending a practice that has prompted criticism of JTPA and other training programs, the "creaming" of applicants with some marketable skills in order to place them quickly in jobs with little future.

They also would separate youth-training efforts from the various adult programs in which they are now found. And both the state and federal governments would be required to do a far better job coordinating training programs with education, counseling and other services provided by federal, state and local governments.

Most of the changes were recommended by an advisory panel named by former Labor Secretary Ann McLaughlin. Some also have been suggested by subcommittee members, including the panel's chairman, Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill.

Mrs. Dole dedicated most of her testimony to how the changes would improve training for teen-agers, something she has said would be among her highest priorities as secretary.

She said all youths and half the adults seeking enrollment in JTPA programs would need to overcome illiteracy, other basic skills deficiencies or a poor school record. Teen parents and the homeless also would be given preference.

The federal government allocated $2.4 billion for JTPA this year and Bush has requested stable funding for next year.

Ship To Get U.S. Name

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A nuclear aircraft carrier will be christened the USS United States, the first time a ship has borne that name since the War of 1812.

The name was one of 14 announced Wednesday by Navy Secretary William L. Ball for ships that have been approved for construction.

Ball, a Reagan administration appointee who is about to step down from office, said a nuclear-powered carrier that Congress authorized for construction last year would carry the designation CVN-75 and be named the USS United States "in honor of our nation."

Only one previous ship has borne the name — a sailing frigate that fought during the War of 1812. The Navy does have another carrier on active duty named America, however.

Ball said he had selected 13 other names for four Ticonderoga-class cruisers; four Arleigh Burke-class destroyers; four fleet oilers, and one fast combat support ship.

The names selected for the cruisers — all commemorating various battles — include Port Royal; Lake Erie; Cape St. George, and Vella Gulf.

The names selected for the Burke-class guided-missile destroyers — all honoring various individuals — include the Stout; McCain; Mitscher, and Laboon.

The names selected for the new oilers are Big Horn; Guadalupe; Yukon, and Rappahannock. And the fast combat support ship will be named the Paul Hamilton after a former secretary of the Navy.

Brothel Buyout

RENO, Nev. (AP) — An attempt to create America's first publicly held brothel has flopped for lack of interest, but the underwriter says he will try to restructure the sale of the Mustang Ranch.

Erie Walloga of American Wallstreet Securities Inc. said Wednesday his company had negotiated an extension of the sale until Oct. 31.

Meantime, buyers of shares in the bordello will get their money back, according to a statement from Walloga's company in Tampa, Fla.

Pentagon Stages Secret Space Launch

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — A Titan rocket packing a secret Pentagon payload streaked off on an apparently routine flight into orbit, but the fiery blastoff ignited brush fires that closed the launch area for more than an hour.

The $65 million Titan 34D lifted off at 3:47 p.m. Wednesday and appeared to be flying normally through a partly cloudy sky.

As with other military space flights, the Air Force did not announce the launch in advance. But with more than 20,000 employees working at Cape Canaveral and adacent Kennedy Space Center, it couldn't hide the fact that the 16-story-tall rocket was going to be launched.

Minutes before liftoff, hundreds of workers poured out of buildings to watch.

The Air Force issued a brief post-launch statement saying only that a Titan 34D had been launched successfully. It provided no information on the nature of the payload.

There was no damage to launch pad from brush fires triggered by the rocket's exhaust, officials said.

Lt. Gen. Aloysius Casey, retiring commander of the Air Force Space

Division, told a conference last year that the first Titan 34D launched in 1989 would carry up two communications satellites named DSCS — for Defense Satellite Communications System.

The satellites are built to provide secure voice and high data rate transmission for American military and diplomatic communications.

Sources close to the project who spoke on condition of anonymity said Wednesday the satellites were aboard the Titan 34D.

A Chalet satellite designed to monitor Soviet communications networks was aboard a Titan 34D launched last Sept. 2. An upper stage failure left that payload in the wrong orbit.

On Nov. 6, a Titan 34D successfully launched a payload believed to be a pair of satellites intended to monitor Soviet missile tests and electronic communications.

The Titan 34D remains in the Air Force inventory. It is scheduled for launch from Cape Canaveral later this year and will be replaced by the more powerful Titan 4.

The first Titan 4 is scheduled for launch here within a few weeks, carrying a satellite designed to provide instant warning of a hostile missile attack on the United States.

NASA Will Dub Shuttle 'Endeavour'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — NASA will go after some historical "colour" by naming its newest space shuttle, built to replace the destroyed Challenger, after a British sailing ship.

The space agency announced Wednesday that President Bush had selected the name "Endeavour" after it was the most popular name in a national name-the-shuttle competition among America's school children.

The Endeavour was the flagship used by 18th century English explorer James Cook.

Thirty-one of the 111 state-level winners in the competition chose the name Endeavour, although many of the entries used the American spelling of Endeavor. Second most popular among the state winners, with 12 selections, was Resolution.

The competition was in two divisions, kindergarten through grade 6, and grades 7 through 12. NASA selected a winning entry in each category.

The winning entry for kindergarten through grade 6 was from the fifth graders of Senatobia Middle School in Senatobia, Miss.

Winning in the other division was Tallulah Falls School, Tallulah Falls, Ga.

For their winning project, the Mississippi fifth graders created a space camp where younger children were taught about space.

The Tallulah Falls entry had two parts — a magazine called "Math Exploration with James Cook," and a play called "Where on Earth?" which compared Cook's explorations with the voyages of a space shuttle called Endeavour.

More than 6,100 teams, formed by 71,650 students, submitted research projects supporting the names selected. Panels from each of the state education agencies then sorted through the entries and picked state winners in the two divisions. From these state winners, Bush made his selection.

Endeavour was the name James Cook chose for the 98-foot vessel he used to explore the South Pacific from 1768 to 1772. He sailed southwest from Plymouth, England, around South America, then explored the coasts of New Zealand, Australia and New Guinea before returning to England by way of Africa's Cape of Good Hope, completing a circumnavigation of the Earth.

Cook chose the name Resolution for a ship he used in his second and third voyages exploring the Pacific Ocean. During those trips, Cook went as far north as the Arctic Ocean and as far south as the Antarctic Circle. He located and named the Sandwich Islands, later called Hawaii, and was killed there in 1779.

The second vessel in Cook's company during his final voyage was named Discovery, the same as that given to one of the current space shuttles.

Challenger was destroyed Jan. 28, 1986 in an explosion that killed seven astronauts. When Congress authorized money for a replacement shuttle, it directed that America's school children would name the new craft.

The new shuttle craft is now being built by Rockwell International in Downey, Calif. It is scheduled for completion in 1991 and will make its first space voyage in March 1992.

Ex-TV Newsmen Charged With Tapping Competition

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TAMPA, Fla. — Two former TV news managers have been charged with illegally tapping into phone lines and computers at another station to gain a news edge over their competitors.

Former news director Terry Cole and assistant news director Michael Shapiro at WTSP-TV were charged Wednesday with 17 counts of computer hacking and conspiracy in the theft of information through computer phone lines, authorities said. If convicted, each could face a maximum prison sentence of 85 years.

Circuit Judge Edward Ward scheduled their arraignments for May 19.

The two were accused of tapping the phone lines and computers of WTVT-TV.

The break-ins began in November but were not noticed until Jan. 12, when WTVT's morning news producer noticed that files were missing, authorities said. Computer experts determined that an intruder had rifled the files.

"It's no different than digging a tunnel under their office and coming up and rummaging through their desks," said assistant prosecutor Chris Hoyer. "It's high-tech burglary."

Shapiro knew WTVT's security system thoroughly, including passwords and identification numbers, because he had helped set it up while working there as an assignment manager, authorities said. He was hired away from WTVT in October.

Vincent Barresi, WTSP's general manager, said Shapiro and Cole were fired when the station learned of the alleged thefts.

Shapiro, 33, was arrested Feb. 7. After an investigation implicated the 32-year-old Cole, he surrendered April 11.

Hoyer said he was considering a civil lawsuit to seize WTSP's assets under the state's racketeering laws. He said his decision would depend on whether WTVT sued its competitor.

"They're the victims in this case and we're waiting to see what they do," Hoyer said.

WTVT's news director, Bob Franklin, said corporate executives and the station's lawyers were weighing the decision.

Baker Takes Bush Message To Soviets

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — Secretary of State James A. Baker III delivered a message from President Bush to Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev today during a lengthy meeting to discuss new missile-reduction talks and an improvement in superpower relations.

During a picture-taking session in the Kremlin's St. Catherine Room, the Soviet leader said officials also might have something to say later about prospects for a summit meeting with Bush.

"Everything will be on the right road," Gorbachev said in a brief exchange with reporters as he sat down with Baker.

There was no immediate word on what Bush said in his message to Gorbachev.

U.S. officials said the meeting lasted about 3½ hours, which was 90 minutes longer than scheduled. That and Gorbachev's remark suggested Baker's first visit to Moscow was producing progress in improving Soviet relations with the Bush administration.

After the meeting, Baker signed an agreement with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze on cooperation in combatting pollution in the Bering and Chukchi seas in emergencies.

Earlier, Baker and Shevardnadze held a second round of talks at the Foreign Ministry guest house focusing on arms control, the official Soviet news agency Tass reported.

Senior American and Soviet officials waited outside for Gorbachev and Baker to complete their private meeting. Alexander A. Bessmertnykh, the Soviet first deputy foreign minister, said they would discuss a Soviet proposal for cuts in short-range nuclear missiles.

Both sides said the officials made a good start Wednesday, when the new American secretary of state arrived for his first visit to Moscow.

"The overall tone was very good," said a U.S. administration official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Soviet First Deputy Foreign Minister Alexander A. Bessmertnykh told Tass the negotiations were held in "a businesslike, constructive, and, on the whole, good and calm atmosphere."

Foreign Ministry spokesman Genady I. Gerasimov announced that Baker and Shevardnadze agreed to resume talks on reducing stockpiles of nuclear arms. He told a news briefing the negotiations would resume June 12 or June 19.

Baker was expected to try to set a formal date for resuming the talks on a strategic arms reduction treaty when he made his first visit to the Kremlin to meet Gorbachev. The talks were recessed last November, and Bush's administration decided after taking office in January that U.S. arms control policies would be reviewed before discussions would resume.

Baker planned a news conference at the end of his meetings with Soviet officials, and was leaving Moscow today for Brussels, where he will brief NATO allies.

Retail Sales Up

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Retail sales, aided by a rebound in auto purchases, rose a modest 0.4 percent in April, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said sales climbed to a seasonally adjusted $139.9 billion last month after remaining flat in March and falling 0.4 percent in February.

The March figure was revised from an advance estimate of a 0.1 percent gain.

The April sales report was much weaker than expected by most economists, who anticipated a surge of between 1 percent and 2 percent after two slow months.

Retail spending accounts for about one-third of overall economic activity and is closely watched as a measure of overall economic growth.

Swedish Scientist Set Foundation For Cold Fusion Testing

By Helene Murdoch
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — A scientist claims to produce nuclear fusion in a jar at room temperature. But few believe him, and his application for a patent is rejected.

The story may sound familiar, but it happened in Sweden in 1927, more than a half-century before two researchers stunned the scientific world with a similar experiment in the United States.

John Tandberg's experiments "seemingly were very similar to the ones performed in Utah," said Bertil Wilner of the fusion research department at the Royal Institute of Technology.

"It's amazing that his findings have been completely forgotten for 60 years," said Wilner, whose father worked on the project and kept notes.

Tandberg began looking into cold fusion in 1927 when the 33-year-old chief scientist for the Electrolux Co. became intrigued with fusion experiments being conducted in Germany, Wilner said.

Two Berlin researchers who were trying to produce helium for airships said they fused hydrogen into helium using a palladium catalyst. But later they discovered errors that forced them to retract their claim of fusion.

"The German scientists weren't interested in producing energy, since the world's energy sources seemed inexhaustible at the time," Wilner said.

"But Tandberg immediately realized the energy aspect of the experiment and its potential importance," Wilner said in an interview.

The National Patent and Registration Office refused to accept Tandberg's application to record his experiment. "Their experts claimed it was impossible to release nuclear energy through cold fusion," Wilner said.

Soon afterward, Tandberg ended his fusion research and dedicated himself to other fields. He later left Electrolux, still one of the world's largest makers of home appliances, and became a professor at Stockholm University.

In March, B. Stanley Pons, chairman of the University of Utah's chemistry department, and Martin Fleischmann of the University of Southampton, England, announced they achieved cold fusion that produced up to 50 times the amount of energy they put into their experiment.

Their findings were met with incredulity.

If they are right, it could open the way to a cheap, inexhaustible way to create energy in the same way that the sun and stars produce heat and light. Fusion derives its energy from forcing atoms of deuterium or hydrogen together. The reaction produces an atom of helium, a burst of energy and a neutron.

The work of Pons and Fleischmann "bears a strong resemblance to the way Tandberg carried out his experiments, according to my father's notes," Wilner said. Wilner's father wrote a book on Tandberg describing the experiment.

"The book was never translated and was forgotten a long time ago," he said, which helped explain why the work stirred so little interest among contemporary scientists. Tandberg, who died in 1968, apparently never withdrew his claim of having produced cold fusion.

Like Pons and Fleischmann, Tandberg used palladium electrodes placed in deuterium-rich heavy water, Wilner said.

According to the notes, the experiment produced helium and energy. "But in those days it wasn't possible to record whether the reaction produced more energy than was used to initiate it," Wilner said.

There is no evidence that U.S.

researchers knew of the experiments in Germany and Sweden.

Johan Rafelski, working on a fusion research team at Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah, was in Sweden last month to report on the U.S. experiments. "He seemed amazed to find that cold fusion attempts were performed all those years ago," Wilner said.

Campbell Soup Settles Ad Spat

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAMDEN, N.J. — Campbell can say its soup is "Mm! Mm! Good" but can no longer tout it as promoting good health — unless it can prove it.

The nation's No. 1 soup company settled a year-old dispute Wednesday with nine states over advertised claims that its soups provide health benefits and may help prevent some types of cancer.

"Where we make a specific claim, it has to be true," said James H. Moran, a Campbell Soup Co. spokesman. "If we say something is promoting good health, we've got to be able to document that."

The agreement does not affect a complaint filed against Campbell in January by the Federal Trade Commission, which accused the company of overstating the health benefits of its chicken noodle soup.

Campbell advertisements misled consumers by failing to alert them of the soup's sodium content, the agency charged.

Campbell halted the ads challenged by the nine states a year ago, but Moran said the company plans to fight the FTC complaint.

"We're standing by the ad and we're going to court and prove our case," said Moran.

Camden-based Campbell sells about 5 billion cans of soup a year, garnering about 65 percent of the $2.2 billion retail soup market in the United States. It's advertising claims have come under heavy criticism from the Center for Science in the Public Interest.

Since 1983, the Washington-based consumer group has twice asked the FTC to review Campbell's advertising and sodium content claims.

"The amount of sodium and salt in the soups is a serious concern," said Charles Mitchell, a staff attorney for the group. "Most of their soups are so high in sodium that the increased risk of high blood pressure from the soups might outweigh any other positive benefits that are or are not in the soups."

The agreement announced Wednesday ended an 11-month-old dispute.

The states contended that Campbell's ads "generally mischaracterized the health effects of Campbell's soup products," said Wisconsin Attorney General Don Hanaway.

Among them, he said, were high fiber claims about products that were not high in fiber, calcium source claims about soups that are not a good source of calcium and claims that its bean and pea soups can prevent "some kinds of cancer."

Under the settlement, Campbell agreed to pay the states $35,000 each and to change certain advertising practices. The money will be used by each state for consumer education and aid.

"This settlement helps send the message to food marketers that they cannot claim falsely that a product is high in desirable nutrients," said Minnesota Attorney General Hubert Humphrey III.

Wisconsin also worked with attorneys general of California, Illinois, Iowa, Massachusetts, Missouri, New York and Texas in reaching the settlement.

"This type of action by this many states is unprecedented," said Mitchell. "It reinforces our belief that state governments will continue to be the most reliable watchdog for consumers."

In early 1988, Campbell voluntarily halted the advertising campaign that focused on the theme "Soup is Good Food," Moran said. The company resumed using the theme: "Mm! Mm! Good," which had not been used since the 60s, he said.

In 1986, Campbell spent more than $200 million on advertising, Moran said. Current figures were not available, he said.

Post-War Purges Turn Iran Into Killing Ground

By Ed Blanche
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Since its cease-fire with Iraq, Iran has become a killing ground of executions.

Hundreds of people — some say thousands — have been put to death in purges that reflect political turmoil inside Iran since the fighting stopped in the Persian Gulf in August.

It is the biggest wave of executions in Iran since 1980-81, when Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's loyalists turned on their leftist and secular allies who helped topple Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi in the 1979 Islamic revolution.

Fears mount that a growing outcry against "liberals" and the power struggle within the Tehran hierarchy indicate that more executions are likely.

The radical newspaper Jomhuri Islami said in a recent editorial: "The liberals are in conflict with the revolution."

"Why have they been left ... to infiltrate every place they want to carry out wicked acts? ... The snakes are in their holes and waiting to release their poison."

Among those executed were followers of Ayatollah Hussein Ali Montazeri, the most prominent of the so-called moderates, who was ousted in March as Khomeini's successor as Iran's spiritual leader. He had called for a halt to the executions, wider freedoms and openly criticized the shortcomings of the 1979 Islamic revolution.

Many who were executed were middle-ranking Islamic clerics, including Hojatoleslam Omid Najafabadi, a former revolutionary judge. They were described by Intelligence Minister Mohammad Rey-Shahri as "psuedoclergymen ... involved in various political, moral and corrupt offenses."

The purges appear aimed at eliminating dissident or outlawed factions opposed to Khomeini in the postwar era or deemed to be too liberal for the new radicalism.

The Iraqi-based Mujahedeen Khalq, or People's Holy Warriors who make up the main anti-Khomeini opposition movement, claim that more than 12,000 political prisoners have gone to their deaths at the hands of the state in the last six months. It has given out the names of 1,600 it says have been victims.

The United Nations, Amnesty International and the U.S. State Department estimate that about 1,000 political prisoners have been executed, although they acknowledge that the true figure is probably far higher.

Iranian officials deny the dissidents' claim. But the official media have reported that scores of "counterrevolutionaries" have been publicly executed since August.

The media have also reported nearly 550 alleged drug smugglers have been hanged from mobile cranes and expressway overpasses in a score of cities under a new anti-narcotics law that makes the death sentence mandatory for possession of even small amounts of drugs.

The Mujahedeen rebels claim Tehran has sought to mask the purge of dissidents by claiming that many of those executed without trial were drug smugglers.

The rebels alleged that 200 people it said were executed in the western city of Hamedan in recent weeks as smugglers were dissidents.

Reports persist of mass executions in Iranian prisons. Some dissident accounts claim that hundreds of prisoners, some of them held without trial for years, were blown up, while other groups were gassed.

Khomeini's supporters say that the deposed Montazeri was politically naive and allowed himself to become the mouthpiece for opponents of the regime.

But diplomats and other analysts believe Montazeri was reflecting growing uneasiness among many Iranians about the direction the Islamic revolution had taken.

With the radical resurgence, Interior Minister Ali Akbar Mohtashemi has called for a purge of "so-called liberals" and "the enemies of Islam" in Iran.

Tehran newspapers have been echoing the outcry against the "liberals," believed to include Mehdi Bazargan, the Islamic Republic's first prime minister.

He resigned in 1979 in protest of the storming of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran and the taking of its staff hostage. Since then he has led Iran's token opposition party despite constant harassment and was becoming increasingly close to Montazeri.

Iran's military has not escaped the purge. Senior Iranian officials claimed in April that several networks of U.S. spies had been smashed within the military.

They allegedly included senior figures in the navy and army, long distrusted because of their links with the shah, and even the Foreign Ministry, whose officials have been branded as too pro-Western.

Khamenei Says Iran's Demand That Rushdie Die Still Stands

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — Iranian President Ali Khamenei said today Iran still demands the execution of British author Salman Rushdie for his novel "The Satanic Verses," which some say insults Islam.

Khamenei, speaking at a news conference, also denied that Iran's parliament speaker, Hashemi Rafsanjani, had called for the murder of Westerners. He said Rafsanjani's words were distorted by the Western media.

Rafsanjani, previously regarded as a moderate who supported better ties with the West, is expected to succeed Khamenei when he finishes his term in office later this year.

"The decision made about Salman Rushdie is still valid," Khamenei said. "As I have already said, this is a bullet for which there is a target. It has been shot. It will one day sooner or later hit the target."

Rushdie, the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, in February said Rushdie must be killed for writing "The Satanic Verses," which contains passages many Muslims say are insulting to the Prophet Mohammed.

Rushdie has been in hiding since the death threat was issued.

Khamenei, on a six-day visit to China, also said Raf-sanjani "has not recommended anybody kill anybody."

The Iranian speaker, he said, was offering an analysis that U.S. policies toward "the oppressed people of Palestine would only lead to such a situation."

In a speech Friday, Rafsanjani reportedly called on Palestinians to kill five American, French or British citizens in retaliation for each Arab slain in the uprising in the Israeli-occupied territories.

He later denied that he supported the killing of Western civilians.

Earlier today, Khamenei met with China's senior leader, Deng Xiaoping, who expressed hope that Iran and Iraq, which have agreed to a cease-fire after their eight-year war, will live in peace.

"All the Third World countries should unite and refrain from wasting their strength on disputes," Deng was quoted by the official Xinhua News Agency as saying. "We also hope to see a stable Middle East."

Deng, 84, looking frail and meeting Khamenei for only 20 minutes, noted that China is also working for international stability.

Khamenei also has met Communist Party General Secretary Zhao Ziyang and Premier Li Peng for talks that have included China's participation in reconstruction of Iran's war-torn economy.

Khamenei leaves Friday for Xinjiang, China's far-western province which has a large Moslem minority.

Arab League Calls Truce

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Arab League envoys today declared a new truce in a 2-month-old bloodbath in Lebanon after rocket and artillery duels between Christian and Syrian gunners killed 20 people and wounded 62.

Gen. Michel Aoun, who commands 20,000 Christian soldiers fighting an alliance of Syrian and Druse Moslem forces, ordered his gunners to abide by the cease-fire, a spokesman said.

There was no immediate public reaction from his foes, but the Voice of Lebanon radio station, in Christian east Beirut, and the Moslem Voice of the Nation, the most popular broadcast in west Beirut, quoted "reliable sources" as saying the Arab mediators conveyed the cease-fire order to both sides.

It was the fifth cease-fire called by the Arab League in the current round of fighting, the most destructive of Lebanon's 14-year-old civil war. All others have collapsed.

Thursday's casualties raised the overall toll to 357 people killed and 1,385 wounded since the fighting broke out March 8, by police count.

The Arab emissaries, led by Lakhdar Ibrahim, an Algerian diplomat, braved shellfire and drove across the dividing Green Line to east Beirut for a meeting with Aoun at the bomb-scarred presidential palace in the Christian suburb of Baabda.

Aoun's spokesman, who refused to be further identified, said: "All roads to the palace were under Syrian shelling. A howitzer shell exploded very close to the palace as the Arab delegates were at the entrance. No one was hurt."

The mediators met earlier in west Beirut with acting Prime Minister Salim Hoss, who heads the Moslem Cabinet in Lebanon's dual government.

Ibrahimi told reporters after meeting with Hoss that they were seeking to "normalize the situation in Lebanon to allow the committee to pursue its efforts," a reference to a six-member Arab League panel entrusted with finding a settlement of the civil war.

Aoun's spokesman said Syrian gunners fired "126 shells, most of them 240mm mortars, into the palace before the Arab envoys' arrival."

Aoun, 53, a Maronite Catholic, had been staying in the bomb shelter of the palace with his wife and three daughters.

The Arab envoys arrived in Beirut on Wednesday after meetings in Damascus with Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk Sharaa and in the east Lebanon city of Baalbek with Lebanese Parliament Speaker Hussein Husseini, a Shiite Moslem.

Ibrahimi said the meetings Wednesday were "the first step" of the new mission.

Hoss and Aoun, who heads a Christian military Cabinet, agreed to a three-point plan declared by the Arab League on April 28.

It called for a cease-fire, lifting blockades of sea and air ports and the deployment of 321-man observer team drawn from six Arab countries.

But Syrian and Druse gunners kept on shelling the 310-square-mile Christian enclave, claiming they wanted to prevent three ships from unloading Iraqi weapons for Aoun. The truce collapsed over the weekend when Christian forces began returning fire.

Syria and Iraq have long been enemies and now are competing for influence in Lebanon.

Chinese Remain Wary As Soviet Relations Improve

By Jim Abrams
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev is coming to make history. The Chinese, ever wary of their northern neighbor, are determined that history will not be repeated.

Expectations differ as Gorbachev and China's senior leader, Deng Xiaoping, meet for the first Chinese-Soviet summit since Mao gave Nikita Khrushchev the cold shoulder in Beijing in 1959.

Both sides agree that the May 15-18 summit will normalize political and party relations strained three decades ago when Beijing challenged Moscow's right to dominate the world Communist movement.

Both desire an easing of tensions so they can concentrate on their sputtering efforts to reform plodding, state-controlled economies. "Abnormal relations" along their 4,300-mile border "are not in the interest of the people of the two countries," Chinese Premier Li Peng recently said.

The summit will give impetus to growing trade relations, particularly across border outposts, and to joint efforts in the development of Siberia and northeast China.

It will mean more official contacts. The Soviet Union will be able to better study China's pioneer efforts in market-oriented reforms. China, now challenged by a pro-democracy student movement, will get a better look at the bold political reforms Gorbachev has initiated.

There will be more consultations on Korea, where both support the Communist north, and on Cambodia, where Soviet-backed Vietnam is battling Chinese-backed guerrillas.

But the Chinese have been decidedly cool to the idea that the summit is another triumph for Gorbachev's policies of international detente.

It remains to be seen, one Chinese scholar wrote in the official Beijing Review, "whether the Soviet Union can thoroughly correct its deep-rooted big-nation chauvinism and hegemonism under the guidance of Gorbachev's new thinking."

The Chinese say normalization of relations is important, but so is winning concessions from the Soviets, especially on Cambodia.

Chinese leaders insist that improved relations will not mean a return to the alliance of the 1950s, when Mao Tse-tung's fledgling Communist government was forced to bow to Moscow's ideological dictums.

Mao's disputes with Josef Stalin, and then with Khrushchev, led to an irrevocable split in 1960 when the Kremlin withdrew all its technicians from Chinese factories built with Soviet aid.

Soviet "revisionism" was reviled by the ultra-leftists of China's 1966-76 Cultural Revolution. After border clashes broke out in 1969, Mao asked the nation to prepare for all-out war.

War was averted, but prospects for better relations after the Cultural Revolution were quashed by Vietnam's invasion of Cambodia in late 1978 and by Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan at the end of 1979.

Political normalization talks were started in 1982, but went nowhere because of what China calls the "three obstacles" — Afghanistan, Cambodia and Soviet troops on the Chinese border.

Gorbachev has pushed hard for the summit. He finally started getting a positive response from the Chinese last year after announcing the Soviet withdrawal from Afghanistan, reducing Soviet troops on the border and agreeing to help get Vietnam out of Cambodia.

But as Foreign Minister Qian Qichen recently stressed, there is still "some way to go and some efforts to be made" before the three obstacles are eliminated.

Deng, 84 and semi-retired, apparently agreed to the summit because he wanted to cap his career with a diplomatic tour de force equal to his restoring diplomatic ties with the United States in 1979 and the 1984 agreement with Britain on returning Hong Kong to China.

The Chinese insist, however, that hard bargaining on Cambodia will take place at the summit. Already clashes reportedly have occurred over the joint communique to be issued at the end of the visit.

The Soviets want to lay down general principles on future relations. The Chinese are demanding Soviet commitments on Cambodia.

In a rare move apparently designed to head off rosy Soviet pronouncements on the summit, the Chinese are also setting up their own press center across town from the Soviet press room.

Sinologists and Sovietologists will be watching to see if Deng submits to a Russian hug and kiss from Gorbachev and whether the Chinese grant Gorbachev the same media coverage given President Bush during a visit in February.

Bush was the first foreign leader ever to give a live interview on Chinese television and was hailed as a man of the people when he stopped his motorcade on Tiananmen Square to greet the crowds.

Gorbachev is expected to meet Deng, Premier Li and Communist Party General Secretary Zhao Ziyang on May 16.

The next day he will meet representatives of Chinese society, may do a TV interview and will visit a factory. On May 18, his final day, he will make a quick visit to Shanghai for more touring.

Man Identified

RALEIGH (AP) — A Duplin County man has been identified as the person shot and killed during a shoot-out in which a state Highway Patrol trooper was wounded in the arm.

Johnnie Lee Williams, 27, of Warsaw was shooting at one trooper with another trooper's gun on Tuesday when he was killed, said Highway Patrol Maj. Walter Chapman.

Chapman said Williams had been shot at least twice during a struggle with officers in the woods off Interstate 95 in Halifax County.

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 70.75 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. Too few percent of the loads offered have been confirmed for a final weighted average. The market is firm and the live supply is adequate for a good to very good demand. Average weights are desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina 2,052,000, compared to 2,099,000 last Thursday.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn mostly 1 to 2 cents higher, at mostly $2.84-$2.94 in the East; mostly $3.00-$3.10 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans 4 to 5 cents lower at mostly $7.47-$7.63 1/2 in the East; mostly $7.28-$7.39 in the Piedmont; wheat mostly $4.09-$4.14; new crop corn $2.41-$2.82; new crop soybeans $6.77-$7.13; new crop wheat $3.60-$3.85. Exchange rates for P.I.K. certificates were steady to 1/2 percent lower and ranged from 97 to 98 to 99 1/2 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market opened higher today after the government reported a modest rise in April retail sales.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 5.50 points to 2,379.95 after a half-hour of trading at 10 a.m. EDT.

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by about 9 to 5 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 580 issues up, 329 down and 535 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 26.44 million shares.

Analysts said the market got a lift from bond prices, which firmed in response to a smaller-than-expected rise in retail sales.

The Commerce Department reported that retail sales rose a modest 0.4 percent last month.

CAA Tourney Set To Start Pirates Face George Mason In First Round Friday

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

"It's a whole new season. It starts all over again," East Carolina baseball coach Gary Overton said. "Now we have to play our best and do that which is required."

Overton and the Pirates will take to the field Friday night at 8 p.m. to face George Mason in the final game of the first day's play in the Colonial Athletic Association baseball tournament. The winner of that will go on to represent the league in the NCAA Playoffs.

"I've been proud of what our team has done to date. They've played the most consistent ball of any team I've had, but that's all by the boards."

The tournament, which was held at The Diamond in Richmond, Va., the last two years, has been moved to Brooks Field on the UNC-Wilmington campus. The Diamond was unavailable after some late schedule changes for the Richmond Braves, an Atlanta farm team.

The Seahawks, picked to finish far down in the conference, surprised everyone and won the regular season title and top-seeding in the tournament. They will face sixth-place William & Mary in the opening game of the tourney, at noon Friday.

Third-place James Madison will face number four Richmond in the second game of the day, scheduled for 3 p.m. East Carolina and George Mason will then collide in the final game, at 8 p.m.

The tournament will continue through Monday with a double elimination format. Should the Pirates bow to Mason, they will play the winner of the UNCW-W&M game at noon Saturday. If they win, they will play the winner of the JMU-UR game at 8 p.m. Saturday.

Pairings after that would be determined by the number of teams remaining.

The championship game is scheduled for 5 p.m. Monday, with another game, if needed, following a half-hour after the end of the first.

The Pirates, who finished second in the regular season, hold a 16-9 edge over Mason, including a 2-1 record against them in CAA tournament play. Last year, however, Mason dumped the Pirates, 10-2, en route to the winning the tournament.

The Pirates swept the Patriots in their in-season meeting this year. ECU won the opening game of a doubleheader, 4-3, rallying from a 3-2 deficit in the bottom of the seventh. John Gast hit a solo homer to tie it up and Mike Andrews scored on David Ritchie's single with the winning run.

Then, in the second game of the doubleheader, the Pirates took a 4-1 decision as Jake Jacobs scattered five hits. The next day, in the final game, ECU rolled to a 12-1 decision as Calvin Brown hit two homers, Tommy Eason hit a grand slam and John Thomas and John Adams each hit home runs.

But, Overton points out, the Patriots are a different team now.

"George Mason is playing better baseball and has beaten some good teams," he said. "They shut out Virginia Commonwealth right after our series with (VCU). They returned all their position players and were the defending champions. A lot of people were picking them to win it again. But their offense was low in the early season. Now their pitching has maintained its capabilities and the offense has come around."

Mason brings in a 21-23 record, but won 10 of their last 16 games,

Riley Points To Lakers' 'Want To'; Piston Wins

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Pat Riley believes there's a simple explanation for the Los Angeles Lakers' inspired play thus far in the NBA playoffs.

"When you watch the Lakers right now, what you see is that they still want to win," he said. "They want to win and move on."

The Lakers, thought by some critics to be on the decline after winning two consecutive NBA titles, suddenly look rejuvenated — and hungry.

After three lopsided wins over Portland to open the playoffs, the Lakers moved to a 2-0 lead in their second-round, best-of-7 series against Seattle with a 130-108 rout Wednesday night.

Los Angeles took the opener 113-102 last Sunday. The series now switches to Seattle for games Friday and Sunday.

"We've done what we wanted to do here (at the Forum)," Riley said. "Now we want to go up there and get one game."

James Worthy, who seems to peak in the playoffs and was the MVP of the league championship series last season, scored 30 points on 13-of-16 shooting in the Lakers' latest victory.

He was one of eight Lakers in double figures, as A.C. Green and Byron Scott had 16 points each, Orlando Woolridge had 13, and Magic Johnson and Mychal Thompson chipped in 12 points apiece.

Los Angeles almost completely controlled the game, scoring the first five points, then staying comfortably in front the rest of the way. Each time the Sonics would threaten, the Lakers would spurt away, including an 18-4 run to finish the third quarter after the Sonics pulled within 77-68.

"We controlled it," Johnson said. "We never let them get back into the game. The lead was always around 10 points and we never let them get the confidence they needed."

While they got a good scoring blend on offense, the Lakers also played fine defense. The Sonics' leading scorer was Xavier McDaniel, with just 17 points, and Dale Ellis had only 14.

Seattle coach Bernie Bickerstaff was duly impressed by the Lakers' performance.

"The Lakers played supremely," he said. "We tip our hats. They played like the champions they are."

There had been quite a bit of comment from both teams about the rough play following the first game, and Bickerstaff smiled and said of the second: "We talked, they talked, they played..."

The Sonics suffered a blow early in Wednesday's game when starting point guard Nate McMillan hobbled off with an ankle injury just six minutes into the game. Bickerstaff said that McMillan's status for the rest of the series will be determined later.

Worthy put the Lakers in command early, as he had 22 points in the first half to help Los Angeles take a 63-53 halftime lead.

"I think James is showing just how great a player he is," Riley said.

"This is the time we work for all year," Worthy said.

The Lakers dominated the Sonics in virtually every department, shooting 57.5 percent from the floor to Seattle's 47.2 percent, and outrebounding the Sonics 52-43.

Illustrating the Lakers' control of the flow, Johnson, usually at the hub of everything for his team, often watched from the backcourt as Worthy, Green and company pumped in the points.

The Sonics, meanwhile, were looking forward to returning home, where they went 2-1 against the Lakers during the season.

"We're still optimistic," said

Rookie Bounces Back After 1st Indy Wreck

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — Rookie Steve Butler won't allow a broken collarbone to end his hopes of driving in his first Indianapolis 500 on May 28.

Butler, 32, Wednesday became the first crash victim since practice opened at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway on Saturday. The injury occurred when he lost control of his car in the fourth turn and bounced off both the outside and inside retaining walls.

Butler was back at the track hours after the accident, his arm in a sling and encouraged by news that doctors thought he could be back in a race car by Friday.

But, replacing the car he wrecked could be a bigger hurdle. The low-budget Stoops team doesn't have a second car, although it does have another entry for the race.

"He's (owner Jeff Stoops) out shopping now," Butler told a news conference Wednesday after returning from Methodist Hospital. "I don't know what we can do. We were already over budget before the accident."

Butler, a three-time sprint car champion from Kokomo, Ind., looking to start his first Indy-car race, wasn't sure what caused the accident.

"There's not enough left of the race car to determine anything," he said. "The car was pushing and it's strange that it would have spun there. It sure did happen quick. It might have been something mechanical, but it could have been the wind."

Butler's crash halted practice for 24 minutes, but drivers had plenty of time to search for the speed they'll seek Saturday when time trials begin.

Brisk winds held down the speeds for most of the practice session. Four-time Indy 500 winner Al Unser had the day's quickest lap of 223.380 in his Penske PC-18 Chevrolet. Emerson Fittipaldi, who finished second to three-time champion Rick Mears last year, was close behind at 223.048 with the same combination. Mario Andretti was the third quickest at 222.551 in a Lola with Chevy power.

Jim Crawford, driving a 1987 Lola with a Buick V6 engine, had his fastest lap of the month at 221.948. Danny Sullivan and Mears, teammates of Unser who combined to give the Penske team a sweep of the front row starting positions last year, went above 220, along with Michael Andretti and Bobby Rahal.

Most of the fast times were recorded in the final hour of practice. The younger Andretti, teaming with his father this year and driving an identical Lola-Chevy combination, had a quick lap of 221.838. Sullivan, the defending CART-PPG champion, had a fast lap of 221.620. However, Mears, the defending Indy 500 champion who had the fastest unofficial lap in the history of the 2-1/2-mile oval of 225.733 on Monday, and Rahal both had laps of 220.588.

Butler was traveling about 213 mph when he lost control of his Cosworth-powered Lola. The car spun 380 feet before smashing into the outside wall, slid across the track some 520 feet, struck the inside wall and then did another half spin about 100 feet before coming to a stop at the entrance to pit road.

The decision on buying another car would be determined by Jeff Stoops and his wife, Terri, Butler said.

"Terri isn't sure she wants to do it. It's not a financial matter, however. It's more that she's concerned that if something else happens to me, she doesn't want to feel responsible. I'm going to have to work on her," he added.

"It will be quite a step for us financially," Butler said. "It's a real setback because we had come here and had such great success and then to have it disintegrate in just a few seconds."

"We hoped not to buy another car, but now I'll have to talk to my wife and Steve to make a decision on what we do," said Stoops.

Winds of around 15 mph slowed the cars, especially in the first and third turns.

Mears said that on his fast lap Wednesday, the wind nearly blew the front of the car off the ground in turn three.

During a session in which 49 cars took to the track, 29 recorded at least one lap at 210 mph or faster Wednesday. The group included Al Unser Jr., 219.881; Teo Fabi, 219.244; Kevin Cogan, 216.398; Raul Boesel, 218.128; John Andretti, 216.086; and four-time Indy 500 champion A.J. Foyt, 214.8.

Lady Pirates Sign All-State Guard

Gaynor O'Donnell, a 5-6 guard from Southern Wayne High School, has signed to play basketball for the East Carolina Lady Pirates next fall, head coach Pat Pierson announced today.

A native of Liverpool, England, O'Connor averaged 16 points, 15 assists and six rebounds per game under head coach Charlie Stevens.

O'Donnell was named Mid-Eastern 4-A Player of the Year as well as making the Greensboro News and Record's All-State team her senior year.

"Gaynor is one of the most talented recruits that I've ever signed," Pierson said. "She is an outstanding passer as well as a good shooter."

O'Donnell also considered the University of North Carolina, but expressed an interest in East Carolina's physical education program. She will play for the East squad in the North Carolina All-Star Game in July in Greensboro.

Chargers Upset Greene Central

SNOW HILL — Ayden-Grifton rallied for six runs in the fourth inning to top Greene Central, 8-4, and hand the Rams their first Eastern Plains Conference baseball defeat of the season Wednesday night.

The Rams were going to wrap up the 1989 championship, but now must wait another day to do it. Greene Central is now 8-1 and has a three game lead over the rest of the conference with three games left to play.

Ayden-Grifton pushed over two runs in the top of the first inning to take the initial lead. But Greene Central came back with one in the first and then tied it up with a Rob Davis home run in the second.

The Rams then took a 4-2 lead in the third when Walt McKeel hit a two-run homer.

But the lead did not last long as the Chargers rallied to score six times in the top of the fourth. Ryan Hardy and Johnny Moore both drew walks and Wayne Laurey was hit by a pitch. James Woodard doubled to drive in all three runners. John Tyndall walked and Jay Tripp singled in Woodard. Peterson followed with a hit to score Tripp. Peterson stole up and scored on a hit by Gary Eubanks.

Woodard and Peterson each had two hits for Ayden-Grifton while McKeel had a pair for the Rams.

Ayden-Grifton, now 6-4 in the EPC, improved its chances of making the playoffs with the win, and travels to Farmville Central on Friday. Ayden-Grifton is 9-10 overall. Greene Central will entertain Farmville Central tonight.

Conley, Rose Claim Junior Varsity Wins

D.H. Conley's JV baseball team recorded a 3-2 win over North Lenoir Tuesday night in Coastal 3-A Conference action.

Jay Kuykendall went the distance on the mound, giving up only three hits, to get the win for the Vikings.

Conley will return to action Friday on the road against Havelock.

Rose High School's junior varsity baseball team defeated Kinston, 8-3, on Tuesday, but it took nine innings.

Rose scored five times in the top of the ninth to pull out the win. Drew Johnson got the win in relief.

Matt Aldridge and Mike Williams led the hitting with three each.

Rose is now 8-0 and plays at home against Wilson Fike today.

C.B. Aycock Leads EPC Tennis

AYDEN — C.B. Aycock placed six players in the singles finals to take the early advantage in the Eastern Plains 2-A Conference tennis tournament Wednesday.

Farmville's John Wade and Carney Hedgepeth both advanced to the second round with wins.

Wade, competing at the number four spot, defeated Elizabeth Betts of Ayden-Grifton, 6-0, 6-0. In the second round, he defeated Howie Lee of Greene Central, 6-2, 6-2.

Hedgepeth, in the number-six spot, defeated Jill Bulow of Ayden-Grifton, 6-2, 6-0. He then upset Edmund Swenson of Rosewood, the number-two seed, 4-6, 6-2, 6-1.

Singles play concludes today and doubles play and consolation play will follow.

Greenville Swim Club Places Three

GOLDSBORO — The Greenville Swim Club came up with three place winners at the Spring Fling Swim Meet this past weekend.

Probable Cause Found For Martin Trial

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — An Orange County District Court judge has ruled that there is probable cause for a charge that University of North Carolina football star Kennard Martin stole textbooks from another student in April.

The case against Martin, charged with feloniously breaking and entering a UNC-CH dormitory room and taking nine textbooks April 25, will be taken to a grand jury May 30. If the grand jury indicts him, the case will be referred to Orange County Superior Court for trial, said Assistant District Attorney William Massengale.

Pirates...

including an 8-3 decision over Virginia and a 2-0 win over VCU, two teams that beat ECU during the regular season. They also beat Maryland, 12-2.

The leading hitter for the Patriots is Pete Adams, who is hitting .462 but only in 18 games. Kevin Kobylinski, the first baseman, has a .387 average in 33 games while Michael Hall has a .370 mark in 21 contests. Kyle Settle, with 44 games under his belt, has a .342 average, while Dayton Moore and Chris Jenkins both are hitting .311.

Chris Lawrence leads the Pats in homers with eight, while Kobylinski is tops in doubles with 12.

The leading pitcher, in terms of wins and losses is Brian Nelson, 5-2. He's given up 51 hits in 51 2/3 innings and has a 4.88 earned run average. He did not face the Pirates in the regular season.

As a team, the Pats are hitting .300 and have a team ERA of 5.21.

But regular season results are at best a moot point now.

Pitching becomes a much stronger factor in the tournament than in regular season. Playing four or five or six games in a short period of time takes its toll on the staff, and the team that gets the most quality mound time usually ends up in the championship game, if not taking it.

"We are as capable as the other teams in the league. The strength of the league has been pitching," Overton said. "The top three or four from each team is comparable to each other. In terms of depth, we're pretty much the same."

ECU's Jonathan Jenkins is one of the top pitchers in the league, however, with an 11-1 record and a 2.32 earned run average. John White, 7-1 with a 1.68 ERA is also up there, as is Jake Jacobs, 8-1 with a 2.32 ERA.

Overall, the Pirates lead the league in pitching with a 2.91

ERA and are high in hitting with a .294 average.

The fourth Pirate starter, Tim Langdon, has struggled recently, and hasn't gone past three innings in his last four outings.

Overton said that Jenkins would get the nod in the opener against Mason and Jacobs would start the second game "win or lose."

The Pirates will be without one of their regular position players in the tournament. Calvin Brown, who suffered a torn cartilage his knee two weeks ago, will not play in the field.

"He's questionable as our designated hitter," Overton said. Brown had been hitting .362 before he was injured and he leads the team in home runs with 11.

"If he can hit for us, his baserunning will be affected. He will be a station-to-station runner. That means that he won't be going from first to third or from second to home on a single.

"I'm still hopeful that he will be able to play. He doesn't have quite the power that he had before he was hurt, but it's only slightly less," the coach said.

Meanwhile, freshman Tommy Eason will be playing first base much of the time, but not all. At times he will take a turn behind the plate, his regular position and Mike Andrews will move over from second base. Kevin Riggs will then move into the lineup as the DH.

The Pirates will be seeking to repeat their triumph in the 1987 tournament, when they won the title and represented the league in the NCAA Regionals.

"Certainly you have to favor Wilmington in this," Overton said. "They won the regular season and they are playing on their home field."

But, he didn't have to say, it might be recalled that the top seeded team has never won the tournament.

Whether tradition holds or will be broken will be learned Monday night.

Tigers Rally For Win Over Angels

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

California manager Doug Rader did what Detroit could not do. He got Kirk McCaskill out of the game and gave the Tigers a chance.

The Tigers, shut out for eight innings by McCaskill, rallied for three runs in the ninth against Bryan Harvey and beat California 3-2 Wednesday night, ending the Angels' six-game winning streak.

"That's going to happen," Rader said. "(Harvey) is one of the league's best in relief."

McCaskill leads the American League with an 0.87 earned run average. Despite losing his chance at a victory, he wasn't upset.

"I had no qualms about being taken out," McCaskill said. "He could have taken me out in the fifth inning. I wasn't sharp tonight."

Matt Nokes's two-run double with one out tied the game and Keith Moreland followed with an RBI single that won it.

Detroit, 10-21 and off to its worst start since 1953, stopped a three-game losing streak.

"I don't care how long as we won the game," Manager Sparky Anderson said.

In other games, Toronto also rallied for three runs in the ninth inning and beat Seattle 3-2, Chicago routed Milwaukee 12-2 and Kansas City defeated Cleveland 3-2. The Texas at New York, Oakland at Baltimore and Minnesota at Boston games were rained out.

California had won six straight, all on the road. The Angels were trying for their first three-game sweep at Tiger Stadium since 1977, but instead lost for only the second time in 13 games.

McCaskill limited Detroit to five hits. He struck out four and walked two before Harvey took over.

Gary Ward opened the ninth with a single and one-out walks to Alan Trammell and Fred Lynn loaded the bases. Nokes tied it and Moreland singled over California's drawn-in outfield for the game-winner.

"I felt good, but I wasn't throwing strikes," Harvey said. "I was getting myself into a hole, and when they're waiting for a fastball they are going to hit it."

Moreland has played sparingly this season. But he always could hit a fastball.

"It's nice to come back and win. But it's nice to get any win the way we've been playing," he said. "Just getting a chance to get some swings helps you hit the ball better."

Guillermo Hernandez, 1-0, pitched one inning for the victory. Harvey, 1-1, took the loss.

Blue Jays 3, Mariners 2

Mark Langston held Toronto hitless for eight innings before the Blue Jays rallied for three runs to beat Seattle.

Tom Lawless opened the ninth inning with a pinch-single, the third time this season Toronto has spoiled a no-hit bid in the ninth inning. Bob Brenly's RBI double and Junior Felix's tying single finished Langston, 4-4, and George Bell singled home the winner against Mike Schooler.

Jimmy Key, 3-2, gave up nine hits in a complete game.

Royals 3, Indians 2

Willie Wilson and Kurt Stillwell got out of slumps with consecutive singles that hit Cleveland pitcher John Farrell, producing Kansas City's tiebreaking run in the seventh inning at Royals Stadium.

With the score 2-2, Bob Boone opened the seventh with a walk and pinch runner Rey Palacios advanced when Stillwell, batting .208, singled off Farrell's glove. Wilson, in a 3-for-31 slump, hit a single off Farrell's leg for the go-ahead run.

Jeff Montgomery, 4-1, went two innings for the victory and Steve Farr got his seventh save. Farrell, 2-2, took the loss.

White Sox 12, Brewers 2

Ron Karkovics hit a three-run homer, Harold Baines got four hits and Chicago roughed up Ted Higuera in Milwaukee.

The White Sox have won all four games against the Brewers this season by a combined score of 34-4. Chicago got a season-high 16 hits against Higuera and four relievers.

Melido Perez, 2-3, ended a three-game losing streak.

Hernandez Warming Up

Two-Hit Inning Leads Mets To 11-4 Win Over Reds

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Keith Hernandez is starting to feel good about his offense, not surprising considering a two-hit inning.

Pete Rose would like to feel the same way about his defense, but after a three-error inning, there wasn't any way.

"I can remember making two outs in one inning more often than making two hits," Hernandez said after he and the porous Cincinnati defense provided the main ingredients in a six-run sixth inning Wednesday night that gave the New York Mets an 11-4 victory over the Reds.

"You've got to catch the ball, you've got to throw it straight. If you don't, you won't beat the Rhode Island Reds," Cincinnati manager Rose said after the Reds' errors led to six unearned runs.

Shortstop Barry Larkin's throwing error enabled Hernandez to score, breaking a 3-3 tie in the decisive sixth.

Larkin's sixth error of the season, on a potential inning-ending double-play grounder by pitcher Ron Darling, opened the way. The Mets sent 11 batters to the plate.

"It was embarrassing," second baseman Ron Oester, who was not able to catch Larkin's high throw, said of the error-filled sixth.

Third baseman Chris Sabo followed Larkin's miscue by booting a grounder hit by Mookie Wilson for his eighth error of the season to bring in another New York run.

"The next ball hit at Sabo was a double-play ball, too," Rose said.

Kevin McReynolds singled home two runs with the bases loaded for a 7-3 lead. Reliever Tim Birtsas also had an errant pickoff throw in the inning, which was capped by Hernandez's two-run single — his second hit of the inning and third of the game.

Elsewhere, it was St. Louis 3, San Diego 1; San Francisco 4, Chicago 3, and Montreal 10, Houston 1.

Los Angeles at Pittsburgh and Atlanta at Philadelphia were postponed by rain. The rainout was the second in as many nights in Pittsburgh, necessitating a six-game series between the Dodgers and the Pirates in July.

"It's something to build on," Hernandez said of his performance. "I've been so inconsistent this year. I feel good one day. The next day I come to the park and feel terrible."

"When Keith's hitting, it doesn't matter where he's hitting," Mets manager Davey Johnson said of his first baseman, 4-for-8 with three RBIs since being dropped to the sixth position in the batting order for the last two games.

Howard Johnson's two-run homer in the seventh inning, his seventh, gave New York its 10th and 11th runs — the most scored this season by the Mets and the most allowed by the Reds.

Darling, 2-3, yielded seven hits and struck out a season-high eight in six innings. The right-hander also fanned seven Reds in his last start, a no-decision in New York on May 4.

The Mets tied the score 2-2 in the second inning off Tom Browning, 3-3, on Hernandez's RBI single and a run-scoring double by Kevin Elster.

Cardinals 3, Padres 1

Joe Magrane limited San Diego to two hits in 8 2-3 innings and Tom Brunansky hit a two-run homer for St. Louis.

Magrane had a no-hitter for 6 2-3 innings, losing it on a one-out double to left field by Carmelo Martinez. It drove in Tony Gwynn, who had reached on an error, to tie the score 1-1.

"I was aware of it going into the seventh, but I was thinking more about not letting somebody like Jack Clark or Tony Gwynn beat me than I was a no-hitter," Magrane said.

Brunansky hit the first pitch from Walt Terrell, 3-4, over the left field wall in the bottom of the seventh. Brunansky's fourth homer of the season came after Milt Thompson had singled.

Magrane, 3-2, had a career-high eight strikeouts and walked five. He was helped by four double plays. Reliever Todd Worrell came on for his sixth save by striking out pinch hitter Marvell Wynne after Clark singled and pinch hitter Mark Parent walked with two out in the ninth.

Giants 4, Cubs 3

A disputed balk by reliever Mitch Williams scored Donnell Nixon after Will Clark singled in the tying run in the eighth inning.

Williams, 0-2, came on looking for his 11th save in 13 opportunities after Ed Jurak started the eighth with a single off Mike Bielecki. Brett Butler beat out a bunt between the mound and first, but Jurak was forced at third on Nixon's attempted sacrifice. Clark's single scored Butler and sent Nixon to third.

Williams and Cubs manager Don Zimmer felt Eric Gregg, the first base umpire, incorrectly called the balk.

"They said he (Williams) brought his right leg behind the rubber, which is a balk," Zimmer said. "But, he's picked maybe seven men off with the same move and tonight they called a balk on him."

Williams called the ruling "absurd ... I pick a guy (Clark) off (first base) ... they call a balk."

Chicago's Jerome Walton sustained a hamstring injury when he stumbled heading toward third base as the tying run with two out in the ninth. He was tagged out, but the Cubs were more concerned that he may miss considerable playing time.

Expos 10, Astros 1

Montreal's Tom Foley had four hits and drove in three runs to lead a 15-hit attack in a game marred by a bench-clearing brawl.

Bryn Smith, 3-1, gave up just three hits and walked one in seven innings as the Expos swept the three-game series. The Expos, who have swept their last two series at Houston, have now won seven straight in the Astrodome.

Montreal scored eight runs in the second inning, Foley driving in two with one of his three doubles.

The game was interrupted for 15 minutes in the sixth by a brawl. The incident began when Houston reliever Larry Andersen threw high and inside, striking Spike Owen's bat as he avoided the pitch.

"He was throwing at me," Owen said. "It was obvious, the pitch was right at my head. It's the first time I've ever done that (charged the mound), but I'm not ashamed of it."

"If he thinks I was throwing at him, he's not as smart as I think he is," said Andersen, who wound up with a cut over his nose.

Houston coach Ed Ott, Owen, Tim Raines and Wallace Johnson were ejected from the game.

Taylor Acquitted Of DWI

Acute Food Poisoning Caused LT To Pull Off Road

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SADDLE BROOK, N.J. — New York Giants linebacker Lawrence Taylor says he's happy to be acquitted of drunken driving charges and just wants to concentrate on doing what he does best — play football.

"The justice system works and I'm happy for myself," the eight-time All-Pro linebacker said Wednesday, shortly after he was found innocent of the charges against him. "My lawyers did a great job."

"I just want to get back to playing football," he said. "Drunk driving is a strong offense and you don't want to get involved with that. I'm just happy that I had enough sense to know when I was sick to pull over."

Municipal Court Judge John Conte found Taylor innocent based on testimony from two doctors who said the NFL star suffered from acute food poisoning in March, when he was arrested on the Garden State Parkway.

Authorities said they found Taylor was asleep behind the wheel of his Jeep at 3:30 a.m. March 24. The vehicle was parked on the shoulder of the roadway.

Taylor was subsequently charged with drunken driving despite two blood alcohol level readings of .09 percent. Under New Jersey law, .09 percent is considered legally drunk.

But food poisoning, and not alcohol, was the reason the NFL star felt ill, said two physicians called by Taylor's attorney as expert witnesses.

Dr. Alan Lupinacci of West Paterson said Taylor became sick from an organism contained in poorly prepared fettucine Alfredo eaten on a flight from Atlanta to Newark the day before his arrest.

"It is medically known that this type of organism is found in cream sauces and can make a person present those symptoms," Lupinacci said.

Taylor said he arrived at Newark International Airport March 23 about 5:30 p.m. and went out for a dinner of pork chops and gravy before going home. He went to a bowling alley about 9 p.m., returned home about 11 p.m. and argued with his wife.

He still had not consumed any alcohol at this point, Taylor said.

He said he went out to a tavern, but only stayed long enough to make a telephone call, and went to another bar in Clifton, where he drank three rum drinks known as Mai Tais.

He said he felt fine until he got to the Parkway, where he said he began to feel ill and pulled over after paying the toll.

"I just wanted to lay there and try to get myself together," Taylor said.

Dr. Bernard Eisenstein of Englewood, the other expert witness, testified that a 245-pound person like Taylor could not become legally drunk by consuming three Mai Tais.

Eisenstein also testified that Taylor's decision to pull himself off the road indicated he most likely was not intoxicated, since judgement is usually impaired when a person has had too much to drink.

Reid's Departure Will Impact On Tar Heels' Returning Vets

By Tom Foreman Jr.
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHAPEL HILL — J.R. Reid has said goodbye to his North Carolina teammates, but one of them isn't waving farewell to the team's hopes for success in the 1989-90 season.

Reid's departure may leave a sizeable gap in the Tar Heel front line, if only because the junior is taking his 6-foot-9, 256-pound frame to the NBA. But when last season got underway and North Carolina was without Reid for the first month, the team managed fine without him.

Kevin Madden was at the news conference at which Reid announced his intention to forego his senior year to become eligible for the June draft. He was besieged by reporters after the session, all wanting to know if there would be life after J.R.

"It could work in my favor. It could work against me, but that's not my concern," said Madden, whose scoring soared during Reid's absence due to a stress fracture in his left foot.

"You don't have to worry about it. You can't make a statement now because you don't know how the guys are going to respond come August or September," he says. "Right now, we just have to live with what his decision is. If he decides to come back by Friday, we'd be glad to take him back, but we're happy for him and hopefully he can continue to do well and have a long career in the pros."

Madden, center Scott Williams and guard King Rice are at the nucleus of the returning players for next year. In addition, just as some were beginning to write off Coach Dean Smith and his recruiting abilities, he brought in six high school prospects to prepare for the upcoming season and beyond.

Who will take up the slack for Reid's absence? Everyone, says Madden.

"We have to do what we have to do, and that's go on without J.R. We have to prepare for next season without J.R.," Madden said. "We have to go out and do it as a team. It's not a one-man show."

"I'm going to give it all I've got next year because I have to show senior leadership to the freshmen coming in and we all have to come together," he said. "Hopefully, we can play well and have an excellent season."

Smith has been through this before, having watching Robert McAdoo, James Worthy and Michael Jordan give up their final years for big money. He jokes about the times when, after those players had left, the team ran into a little trouble.

"In '73, I wish we'd had Mac against N.C. State and (David) Thompson," he said. "Next year, if we start losing, I'll be saying 'J.R., where are you?'"

And, in typical Smith fashion, he rattled off his predictions for the new season, which for North Carolina will be a new era.

"Everybody should be improved except North Carolina, and perhaps Duke," he says.

Ex-CBS Producer Bashes Co-Workers

By Ronal Blum
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CBS Sports commentators Pat Summerall and Tom Brookshier drank alcohol in the broadcast booth during NFL telecasts, according to a new book by Terry O'Neil, the new executive producer of NBC Sports.

O'Neil, the former CBS Sports executive producer hired Tuesday by NBC, calls Brent Musburger "marginally abrasive" and an "anchor-monster." He wrote Brookshier spoke "gibberish" and didn't prepare for games, and accused former CBS Sports president Peter Lund as being ineffectual and lacking leadership.

He also wrote that an NFL coach told him that his team had wiretapped the room of a player and caught the player with $30,000 that was intended for drug purchases. O'Neil does not name the coach, the player or the team.

The book, "The Game Behind the Game," is due for publication next Wednesday. It covers O'Neil's early career at ABC and focuses on 1981-1986, his years at CBS.

O'Neil decries CBS Sports as "several hundred light-years" behind the other networks when he arrived.

"Alcohol was the lifeblood of the old CBS Sports," he wrote. "Summerall and Brookshier regularly drank their way through the 4 p.m. football telecasts. After all, it was cocktail hour."

He writes that CBS would be best off not having Musburger anchor the 1992 Winter Olympics.

"Somebody at CBS should be responsible and courageous enough to insist on a 'likability' study of the top anchors in sports. This audience survey would probably reveal that CBS should pursue ABC's Al Michaels or NBC's Dick Enberg, not Musburger, as its lead Olympic personality. After 20 years of taking its Games from Jim McKay — kindly, soothing, even grandfatherly in his later years — America is not prepared to invite someone marginally abrasive into its living rooms four hours per night for 16 nights."

The 39-year-old O'Neil says that differences with Musburger — whom, according to O'Neil, refers to himself as "The Big Dog" — led to O'Neil's firing at CBS.

"Given our differing backgrounds, I don't think Musburger and I were destined to coexist much longer on the same transmission circuit," O'Neil wrote.

O'Neil wrote Brookshier spoke on broadcasts with "the worst jumble of cliches known to contemporary broadcasting. ... All this gibberish, of course, was filler for an analyst who had done no homework whatsoever."

He wrote that Chuck Milton, CBS's senior producer "used to drive me wild — a walking, breathing blooper, able to undo an entire staff's good work on any given weekend. Every time I watched his tapes, it gave me a crisis of confidence."

O'Neil credits himself and Beano Cook for increasing CBS's NFL ratings by reworking the regions of the country that games were televised to, which he calls the map. O'Neil says that shortly after taking over, he was asked why the ratings had gone up.

"What could I say?" he wrote, "that we had two dummies in vice presidential offices who would've done better maps with darts?"

He describes Lund as a bumbler. "Peter Lund wasn't just stationed in the neutral corner. He was asleep there, curled up in the fetal position. ... His weak to non-existent leadership was not simply ineffectual, it was downright dangerous, leaving a vacuum that everybody wanted to fill with his own self-interest."

O'Neil describes instituting meetings between NFL coaches and CBS crews on days before games.

"One told us that many of his players had been sleeping with the same woman — 17 of them had herpes," O'Neil wrote, without identifying the team or the coach. "Another coach said his club had wiretapped the hotel room of a player during a road trip. They caught him with $30,000 cash in a briefcase, ready to buy drugs at cheap out-of-town prices."

He also describes the dilemma facing television sports reporters in covering events their employer had paid to broadcast. Discussing a special on the death of Bob Vorhies, a football player at Virginia Tech, O'Neil wrote: "At ABC Sports, executive row swelled only slightly when 'Death of a Football Player' was nominated for an Alfred I. du Pont Award, Columbia's prize for excellence in broadcast journalism. Mostly, however, our leaders seemed relieved that the NCAA took no offense."

He quotes Jim Spence, former executive producer at ABC Sports, as saying a preseason program was an "NCAA promotional vehicle."

After doing a piece on Chuck Sullivan of the New England Patriots and agent Howard Slusher, O'Neil wrote that he called both to talk about it. "Sullivan was my primary concern, given ABC's relationship with the league."

But describing his CBS football experience, he wrote that "at the yearly NFL meetings, I told club p.r. directors that we were going to report all the stories, good and bad. That was our function. They shouldn't take it as a hostile act."

He also decries the cynical side of television. Discussing a 1977 college football special, O'Neil wrote about his attempts to do a feature on Oklahoma's alleged recruiting violations. He said he also "plotted the normal quota of touchdown runs and cheerleader wiggles."

Indy Drivers Balk At New Rule

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — A nearly unanimous outpouring of sentiment by drivers against a new rule imposed for the Indianapolis 500 is bringing a quick change by race officials.

Tom Binford, longtime chief steward at Indy, said that after consultation with drivers, race officials and representatives of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway management, he is modifying the application of the rule dealing with the white line that circles the 2½-mile oval.

Reparing over the winter turned the track apron from an uninviting, rough path for slow-moving cars to warm up or stay out of trouble into about 15 extra feet of smooth racing surface.

Anticipating that the drivers would use the apron area on their hot laps, Binford announced Tuesday that the U.S. Auto Club, which sanctions the race, was designating the lower part of the track — delineated by a white line — as a warmup and safety lane.

"It's to be used in an emergency and not for racing," Binford said.

He warned of stop-and-go or one-lap penalties against any car running at speed with its right-side wheels under the white line "unless forced there to avoid an accident."

Veteran drivers warned that enforcing the rule in a fair manner could be troublesome.

"I'd hate to have my race ruined because somebody thought I had all four wheels below the white line," 1985 Indy 500 winner Bobby Rahal said.

Rick Mears, the defending champion and the leader so far this week with an unofficial fast lap of 225.733 mph, said, "It doesn't matter to me because I ran all my (fast) laps above the white line. But I think it might be a very difficult situation."

In a statement following the close of practice Wednesday, Binford said, "Drivers are expected to recognize that the white line designates the separation of race track and safety apron. Racing should be confined to the track above the white line and continuous driving with four wheels beneath the line may result in a one-lap or black flag penalty."

"Occasional crossing of the line in response to track conditions, including overtaking a car, will not be penalized."

However, USAC observers will still be on the alert for violators, particularly during the four days of time trials for the May 28 race, which begin Saturday.

"During qualification runs, cars must have at least two wheels above the line. A violation of this rule will result in the car being charged with an incomplete attempt," Binford said.

Prior to Wednesday's statement, the drivers, almost to a man, were furious.

"They call it a safety lane and that's exactly what it is," Rahal said. "It gives you an extra 15 feet of track to make the corner and keep from hitting the wall. You certainly need as much room as you can get during this race."

Michael Andretti was more vehement, saying, "How can a line dictate where you race? If they don't want us to run below the line, why don't they put a wall there?"

Tom Sneva, the 1983 Indy winner, said, "It's really tough to be that precise at 220 miles an hour. You point it (the car) in there and you're committed. It's going to backfire if it's a safety reason."

"Somebody's going to get hurt real bad trying to hold their car above the white line."

Binford said that during the thousands of laps driven since practice opened on Saturday, there have been very few violations of the rule.

"Really, I've been kind of pleased and surprised that more of the drivers have not been testing that ace, new pavement down there," he said.

Binford's announcement calmed things down and he noted, "Since this thing has been reported so well and everybody knows about it, I wouldn't be surprised if there were no infractions called."

All-Star Return?

Canseco Looks To Return By Break

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — Jose Canseco won't be playing in the All-Star Game this year, but the date still looms as significant in his season of frustration.

Doctors say Canseco can be back in Oakland's lineup by then, and possibly sooner, if he recovers as fast as expected from Wednesday's surgery on his left wrist.

The Athletics' team physician, Dr. Allan Pont, said the outfielder could resume playing in six to eight weeks. Since he's expected to be sent to Class AA Huntsville to tune his batting stroke at the end of his rehabilitation, that sets mid-July as a rough target date for his first major league at-bats of the season.

"That's about the All-Star break — that's perfect," said teammate Mark McGwire after learning how long the other half of Oakland's powerful home run-hitting duo would be sidelined. "Ready to go for the second half. He'll probably end up with 100 RBIs."

Canseco originally injured the wrist while striking out against California rookie Jim Abbott in a March 7 spring training game in Phoenix. Pont speculated it was caused by the tremendous force generated by his swing, although doctors don't know for sure. He said the injury is relatively rare among ballplayers but shouldn't have any lingering effects.

"Although no operation is 100 percent successful and although no operation is as successful as surgeons have you believe, we are very hopeful that Jose will have a complete and full recovery," Pont said at a news conference at Children's Hospital of San Francisco.

Two orthopedic surgeons associated with the A's, Drs. Frederick Bost and William Green, took one hour and 45 minutes to remove the hook portion of the three-quarter inch hamate bone in Canseco's wrist. The 1988 American League MVP was resting comfortably afterward and was expected to be discharged today.

Pont, who also is chairman of the hospital's medical staff, said Canseco woke up briefly about two hours after the operation and spoke with him. His wife, Esther, spent the day with Canseco at the hospital.

was over, he was happy it didn't take long, and he was very happy to be going back to sleep," Pont said.

The 24-year-old right fielder's forearm will be in a splint or cast for two to three weeks and other protective devices for another two to three weeks, Pont said. If his recovery is proceeding well, he will then swing off a batting tee, take batting practice and then play briefly for the Huntsville Stars before returning to Oakland.

Canseco, plagued by a series of arrests for speeding, traffic violations and illegal gun possession in the offseason, saw action only in the opening week of spring training before injuring himself. A few days before that injury, his twin brother, Ozzie, who plays for Huntsville, injured the same bone.

While Ozzie underwent surgery, Jose tried to rest his wrist to see if it would heal. However, he injured it again on March 22. Once again, he and the A's opted for rest instead of surgery and Jose sat out until he gave the wrist another chance last weekend in Huntsville.

Meanwhile, Ozzie recovered after 50 days and was back playing, this time with his brother on the team for a couple of games.

Jose hurt his wrist a third time in his second game with Huntsville, on Sunday, when he swung and knew then he probably would need surgery. X-rays and a talk with the doctors in San Francisco on Tuesday confirmed the need for an operation.

Oakland general manager Sandy Alderson defended the A's handling of Canseco's injury and said the club does not second-guess itself despite the eight-week delay before surgery.

"Looking back at all the facts, I think the answer is no," he said in Baltimore, where the A's are on a road trip. "When he first had his hand injured, there was no fracture revealed. When the technology, the diagnostic tests, tell you there's probably no fracture, you don't go in and look. That's just not standard procedure."

"We're using the best physicians available with the most experience. We're backing them up with more than one opinion. So I don't have any qualms about it."

Despite the absence of Canseco, who last year became the first player ever to hit 42 homers and steal 40 bases in one season, Oakland's 22-10 record is the best in baseball.

Explorers From 6 Countries Plan Antarctica Trek

By Marjorie Anders
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

On the untouched expanse of the Arctic icecap it seemed a mirage — preposterous, incredible: ski tracks.

Will Steger, leading the first unsupported dogsled trek to the North Pole since Adm. Robert Peary's, saw the unmistakable evidence of cross-country skis. He knew they could only be those of Jean-Louis Etienne, a Frenchman who was about to become the first man to ski alone to the pole.

It was in April 1986, in a tent on the monotonous frozen landscape, that the two adventurers sipped tea and dreamed of their next quest: a multinational trek across Antarctica. After reaching their destination, they began planning the Trans-Antarctica Expedition, which is to begin Aug. 1.

Their previous exploits were for the sheer joy of pitting man against nature. This one would do that and more: draw attention to threats against nature and to the need for international cooperation in protecting Antarctica.

Steger and Etienne enlisted scientists and explorers from the Soviet Union, China, Japan and Great Britain for a seven-month, 4,000-mile trip. Others have crossed Antarctica on snowmobiles and giant snow tractors, but this will be the first unmechanized attempt.

Victor Boyarsky of the Soviet Arctic and Antarctic Research Institute, a popular explorer and veteran of polar travel, is a co-leader. The other members of the team are glaciologist Qin Dahe of China; Geoff Somers, who has spent 42 months in Antarctica with the British Antarctic Survey; and Keizo Funatsu of Japan, a former economist, who turned to dog-sledging and adventure.

Somers will plot the trek's course; Funatsu is in charge of the dogs.

Steger, who in the past has picked his own teams, says he is honored that the Soviet Union and China will be sending official representatives. The four members from Western nations are not formally backed by their governments.

Steger recalled that when he asked if Boyarsky spoke English, a Soviet official replied: "In one year, he will speak English very well."

"A real interesting diplomatic challenge," Steger called it.

Other international support includes the use of China's Great Wall Station on King George Island as a staging point. New Zealanders stationed at the Scott McArdle base donated 12 dogs whose lineage can be traced to dogs owned by polar explorer Richard Byrd. The Soviet Union provided an icebreaker to transport 15 tons of food for the men and 36 dogs; the provisions were cached on the route in November. The USSR also plans to send a military cargo plane to pick up the team from its rendezvous at Steger's Minnesota camp; the U.S. State Department, while not officially sanctioning the trek, is expected to let the plane land.

After refueling in Cuba, the team will fly to the Great Wall Base, about 600 miles south of the tip of South America. The expedition, which will set out in the middle of the Austral winter, will at first follow known landmarks.

"We'll have maps for the first 1,500 miles. The last 2,500 miles there is virtually nothing. It's flat. There's nothing to map," Steger said.

They'll cross the Ellsworth Mountains and skirt Mt. Vinson, the continent's highest spot at 16,860 feet. They'll visit three American bases — Palmer, Siple and Amundsen-Scott at the South Pole, where they plan to celebrate Christmas.

The next dot of civilization they'll aim for is the Soviet base at Vostok, near the magnetic, south pole. Vostok, the coldest place on Earth, will serve as a base for a French documentary film crew that will travel with the expedition for three weeks, and for the team's pilot.

By March, the trekkers should reach the Soviet base of Mirnyy on the east coast, also known as Queen Mary Coast, ending the longest possible traverse.

They'll be picked up by the expedition ship, built in France with a special aluminum hull designed to pop up and settle intact on top of the ice rather than be trapped and crushed.

So far, about 45 nations have signed television contracts with the expedition. ABC has bought exclusive U.S. TV rights. "We want the world to know much, much more about Antarctica after our expedition than it did before we set out," Steger said.

The continent is roughly the shape of a bottle cap. It rises sharply at the perimeter, then flattens out in a vast, high plateau at an average elevation of 9,500 feet. Antarctica's 5.4 million square miles is more than China and India combined. It has no indigenous people, and wildlife is confined to the coast.

A treaty signed in 1959 by a dozen nations, with additional signatories in subsequent years, "put" all territorial claims of Antarctica on hold, banned military activity and established freedom of scientific inquiry.

But many countries now have designs on the land for strategic, political and even economic reasons — some expect to find oil, coal and mineral deposits under the ice. Some want to see the continent cut into pie-shaped wedges, but Steger wants the people of the world to demand that it be protected, intact.

"It sounds like a very lofty goal, but Antarctica is going to play a very important role in the future of the planet," he said.

Planetary warming of just a few degrees could melt the polar ice caps, raising sea level and flooding coastal areas, but Steger said it's simplistic to worry about submerged cities. With 85 percent of the planet's fresh water stored in the snow and ice of Antarctica, a thaw would reduce the salinity of the oceans, change ocean currents and wreak havoc with weather patterns.

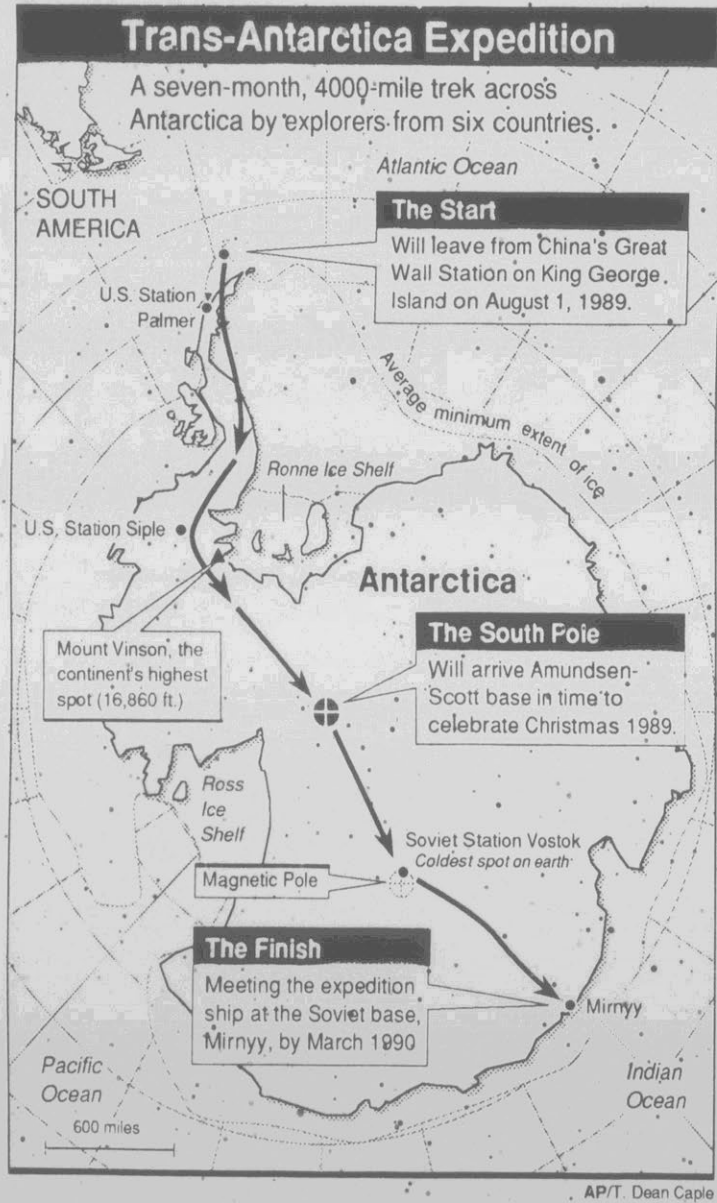

The other environmental nightmare awakening interest in Antarctica is the discovery of a giant hole in the ozone layer directly over the continent. Ozone screens the planet from excess ultraviolet radiation.

Scientists predict continued ozone depletion will increase skin cancer, but such thinking is "myopic," Steger said. Most significantly, increased solar radiation could disrupt the reproduction cycles of plankton, the microscopic oceanic plants and animals that are the basis of the global food chain.

These ominous changes are most apparent in Antarctica, making it like a canary in a mine," Steger said.

Remote Antarctica

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Here are some facts about Antarctica, the coldest place on Earth:

— Antarctica is so remote that the great explorers missed it altogether during the Age of Discovery. Neither the Russian Thaddeus von Bellinhausen, who discovered two coastal islands in 1819-20, nor American Nathaniel Palmer, who discovered what is now called Palmer Peninsula in 1820, realized they were on the verge of a new continent. In 1840, American Charles Wilkes sailed along 1,500 miles of coast and realized that he had found the seventh continent.

— In 1911, Norwegian Roald Amundsen was the first to reach the South Pole. Eighteen years later, aviator Richard Byrd was the first fly over it. British scientists led by Sir Vivian Ernest Fuchs made the first land traverse of the continent in 1957-58 in huge snow tractors.

— Six thousand meteorites have been discovered on Antarctica, more than those discovered in all the rest of the world.

— The continent's human population averages 2,000 in the summer, dwindling to about 800 in the winter. Only one other warm-blooded animal remains during the winter, the emperor penguin. The female emperor penguin lays one egg and returns to the warm sea for the winter. The male stands with the egg between its feet for nine weeks without food. During this time, it loses half its weight while maintaining a body temperature of 100 degrees.

— Even the penguins venture no farther inland than half a mile, which leaves the fifth largest continent with 5.4 million square miles and 10 percent of the world's land mass virtually uninhabited.

— The Soviet base at Vostok recorded the world's lowest temperature — minus 129.3 degrees Fahrenheit — in July 1983.

— During storms, Antarctic winds reach 200 mph. When it's summer in the northern hemisphere, the temperature in Antarctica averages minus 45 degrees. In austral summer, it warms up to just below freezing.

— All but 2 percent of the continent is covered by ice, which is three miles thick in places. This icecap holds about 90 percent of the world's fresh water and if it melted, scientists predict it would raise the level of the world's oceans by 160 to 200 feet.

— Despite all the ice, the continent receives less than two inches of precipitation a year. Boreholes in the Antarctic ice yield samples that date back 200,000 years. The continent also contains a desert, known as the Dry Valleys, that is the driest place on earth.

French 'Abortion' Pill May Outdate Pro-Life Debate

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — The availability of safe, early abortions for pregnant American women may depend less on the Supreme Court, the Bush administration or the relative political muscle of activists on either side of the issue than on the future of a tiny French pill.

While the morality and legality of abortion has provoked an intense public debate, the struggle over whether the so-called French "abortion pill" will be sold here has been a quiet, behind-the-scenes battle. Officials of U.S. drug companies and the federal regulatory agencies prefer not to comment publicly on the issue.

But in the long run, the outcome of this fight may prove more significant than any other aspect of the abortion issue.

Medical experts and women's rights activists are confident that the abortion pill cannot be bottled up in France once it has been used safely there by tens of thousands of women. Within 10 years, they predict, American women who want to end an early pregnancy will be able to do so in the privacy of their own homes, thanks to the French pill or a similar off-shoot drug.

They are equally certain that the availability of a safe abortion pill will do much to quell the volatile debate over abortion. For abortion rights advocates, fearful that the Supreme Court soon may limit the right to end pregnancy, the development of the French pill has been the silver lining in a darkening cloud.

"This will totally change the politics of abortion," said Sharon Camp, vice president of the Population Crisis Committee, a Washington-based group that promotes population control in underdeveloped nations. "This pill blurs the distinction between contraception and abortion. Most Americans, even if they are concerned about the surgical abortion of a fetus that looks like a miniature baby are not so troubled by the idea of a woman taking a pill at home when the embryo is the size of a pea."

The developer of the French pill, Dr. E.E. Baulieu, says that release later this year of research results on the first 10,000 women to use it in France will spark support for bringing it to the United States. The pill will be available here "sooner than most people expect," he said in an interview in New York. "I am fully confident in the power of medicine when it is good."

But as confident as backers of the abortion pill sound when discussing its eventual arrival in the United States, they are far less certain of how it will happen or when. Anti-abortion activists have pledged to fight any move to make the pill available here, regardless of whether it is shown to be entirely safe.

In its early tests, RU-486 induced abortions in 85 percent of women who took the pill during the first seven weeks of pregnancy. Then the fetus is less than half an inch in length, about the size of a fingernail. After seven weeks, however, the pill is generally ineffective and not recommended.

Doctors later discovered that when taken in combination with a drug that causes contractions of the uterus, RU-486 is 95 percent effective. For the remaining 5 percent, surgery is the only method of abortion that will work.

N.C. Study Hints Aspirin Substitutes May Increase Risk Of Kidney Damage

BOSTON (AP) — Some doctors are warning that long-term, daily use of a common aspirin substitute may triple the usual risk of kidney damage, but the maker of Tylenol disputed the finding.

"I don't want people to panic and say, 'My kids shouldn't have Tylenol,'" said Dr. Saulo Klahr, president of the National Kidney Foundation. "But at the same time, it's important for people not to take this drug daily."

Klahr said acetaminophen, the main ingredient in Tylenol, Anacin-3, Datril and other brands, may accumulate in the kidneys and cause chemical damage. A related painkiller, called phenacetin, was taken off the market six years ago because of concern about kidney damage and bladder cancer.

Some experts also have worried that prolonged daily use of ibuprofen, another common painkiller, may harm the kidneys. The drug was released for non-prescription sales in 1985 and was not included in the study of acetaminophen.

The study, published in today's New England Journal of Medicine, found no sign that aspirin is bad for the kidneys. However, it can cause stomach irritation and bleeding and perhaps a rare childhood disorder called Reye's syndrome.

The new research found that acetaminophen is safe when used occasionally. And while it raises the possibility that overuse harms the kidneys, it does not prove this.

"Acetaminophen is not necessarily risk free," said Dr. Dale P. Sandler, who directed the National Institute of Environmental Health Science study.

"This study does not demonstrate any effect for acetaminophen when taken as directed, which is when needed for symptoms, but when symptoms persist, you should seek medical advice."

In a Journal editorial, Drs. William M. Bennett of Oregon Health Sciences University and Marc E. DeBroe of the University of Antwerp in Belgium cautioned that "this finding should be considered tentative until it is confirmed by other studies."

Dr. Vardamen M. Buckalew Jr. of Bowman Gray School of Medicine, a co-author of the study, commented: "I would be swayed toward believing there is a cause and effect relationship between heavy acetaminophen ingestion and renal (kidney) disease. But I would agree with anyone who says we need to do more work."

The study compared 554 people in North Carolina who had newly diagnosed kidney disease with 516 randomly chosen adults. It found that the people who took the medicine daily for an extended period had three times the risk of kidney disease than occasional users.

Acetaminophen accounts for 37 percent of the nation's $2.5 billion annual over-the-counter sales of pain pills, according to the consulting firm Kline & Co. Aspirin represents about 43 percent and ibuprofen 20 percent.

According to Kline, 71 percent of the acetaminophen sold in the United States is Tylenol, which is made by Johnson & Johnson.

A spokesman for the company said the study was flawed, in part because it often relied on relations of kidney patients to determine their use of acetaminophen and other painkillers.

"The study in question provides no basis to suggest that the use of acetaminophen is associated with kidney disease," spokesman Edwin C. Watson said in a statement.

At Whitehall Laboratories, which makes Anacin-3, spokeswoman Carol Emerling said, "The article says it deserves further scrutiny from the scientific community, and we will be interested in following the results of that further scrutiny."

High blood pressure and diabetes are major underlying causes of kidney disease. Sandler said that even if acetaminophen does prove harmful, it is probably less significant than those causes.

"How much kidney disease is explained by this?" Sandler said. "A small but not inconsequential amount. The importance is knowing that there is a risk that is preventable, whereas there is not much we can do about kidney disease associated with diabetes."

Frozen Embryos Raising Questions

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — The recently acquired ability to freeze human embryos has produced more than 150 babies for previously infertile couples, but it is posing difficult questions for prospective parents, a psychiatrist says.

Before having embryos frozen, couples should legally document their wishes on such questions as what to do with the embryos if the parents divorce or die during the process, said Dr. Michael Vergare.

Other issues include what should happen to stored embryos if the woman enters menopause and can no longer be implanted with them, said Vergare, associate chairman of the psychiatry department at the Albert Einstein Medical Center in Philadelphia.

Vergare spoke at a news conference and in an interview Wednesday at the annual meeting of the American Psychiatric Association.

Such ethical questions are beginning to appear in the nation's courtrooms.

A Los Angeles-area couple on Wednesday sued a Norfolk, Va., in-vitro fertilization center for refusing to release an embryo that was frozen 23 months ago.

The couple want to remove their embryo from the Jones Institute for Reproductive Medicine so that a California doctor can attempt to implant it in the woman.

In another case, the divorce of a Tennessee couple has turned into a battle over custody of seven of the woman's eggs that are fertilized with her husband's sperm and kept in frozen storage. A Knoxville court has scheduled a hearing in July to determine if the embryos are "joint property" of Mary Sue Davis and Junior Lewis Davis, or subjects for a custody decision.

Good embryo-freezing programs provide legal documents that deal with such issues, as well as others such as what to do with embryos if the organization that is storing them goes out of business, Vergare said.

At his institution, couples are required to ponder the issues before proceeding with the freezing, he said.

Virtually every major city now offers programs with embryo-freezing, said Vergare.

Singer Is Cleared Of Assault Charge

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GALLATIN, Tenn. — A judge who dismissed a charge against Grand Ole Opry star Bill Monroe for allegedly hitting a woman in the face with a Bible also ordered the woman to stay away from the bluegrass pioneer.

Sumner County Judge Jane Wheatcraft dismissed the assault and battery charge on Wednesday and expressed her sympathy for Monroe.

"I know this warrant has been an embarrassment to you," the judge told Monroe.

"I'm so happy," he said outside the courtroom. "It's been difficult with people bothering me. I'm glad it's over."

When Wanda Huff arrived Wednesday for the hearing, Sheriff Richard Sutton confiscated a loaded .25-caliber pistol from her pickup truck.

How They Voted

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes in the week ending May 5.

House

Free-Mail Issue — By a vote of 174 for and 231 against, the House defeated legislation (HR 1149) allowing members of Congress to mail copies of the Constitution bearing their name to all households back home. The bill sought to ease franking, or free-mail, rules to permit the one-time mass mailing at a projected cost of $10 million.

Supporter Lindy Boggs, D-La., said the mailing would be "a great service to all people of the United States" in this bicentennial year of the Congress.

Opponent Bill Frenzel, R-Minn., called the bill "another congressional boondoggle....another chance to make ourselves look good at our constituents' expense."

Members voting yes supported the bill.

Yes: Walter Jones, D-1; Stephen Neal, D-5, and Charles Rose, D-7.

No: Tim Valentine, D-2; Martin Lancaster, D-3; David Price, D-4; Howard Coble, R-6; W.G. Hefner, D-8; Alex McMillan, R-9; Cass Ballenger, R-10, James Clarke, D-11.

Not voting: none.

The 1990 Budget — By a vote of 263 for and 157 against, the House approved a fiscal 1990 congressional budget resolution that envisions $1.17 trillion in spending, $1.07 trillion in revenues and a deficit of about $99.7 billion.

The measure (HR 106) will guide House and Senate action on individual spending bills for the year beginning October 1, and prod Congress toward Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit reduction goals. It also states congressional and presidential priorities for defense, foreign and domestic programs.

Lacking major tax increases or spending cuts, the House budget was widely viewed as a status quo plan that repeats the congressional pattern of pushing tough fiscal decisions into the next year.

Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., voiced support of the measure even though "we lacked the political will on both sides of the aisle to bite the bullet."

Opponent Bill Schuette, R-Mich., called the plan "a cover-up for inaction, postponing for tomorrow ... real deficit reduction."

Members voting yes supported the fiscal 1990 budget plan.

Yes: Walter Jones, Valentine, Price, Neal, Coble, Rose, Hefner, McMillan, Ballenger, Clarke.

No: Lancaster.

Not voting: none.

Budget Freeze — By a vote of 30 for and 393 against, the House rejected a budget substitute seeking greater deficit reduction primarily at the expense of domestic programs.

The amendment by Rep. John Kasich, R-Ohio, sought a 1990 deficit of $91.1 billion rather than the $97.7 billion targeted by the congressional budget resolution (above). It sought to curb Medicare outlays and block inflation-adjusted increases in certain non-entitlement domestic programs, and reaffirmed the defense spending freeze already a part of the resolution.

Members voting yes supported the substitute.

Yes: Ballenger.

No: Valentine, Lancaster, Price, Neal, Coble, Rose, Hefner, McMillan, Clarke.

Not voting: Walter Jones.

Oil Import Fee — The House voted 49 for and 373 against to reject an alternative fiscal 1990 budget, proposed by Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., that sought to increase federal revenue by $9 billion annually by levying a fee on imported oil. About $3.2 billion of the yield was to have been applied to deficit reduction and the remainder to domestic initiatives such as anti-drug and anti-poverty programs.

Members voting yes supported a federal fee on imported oil.

Yes: None.

No: Walter Jones, Valentine, Lancaster, Price, Neal, Coble, Rose, Hefner, McMillan, Ballenger, Clarke.

Not voting: none.

Senate

King Holiday Panel — By a vote of 90 for and 7 against, the Senate sent to conference with the House a bill (HR 1385) to begin federal funding of the Martin Luther King Jr. Federal Holiday Commission and keep the panel alive until 1994.

The bill authorizes $300,000 annually for the panel's job of promoting the national holiday honoring the slain civil rights leader. The commission has been operating since 1984 on private contributions.

Supporter Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said the rewards to society of spreading King's legacy are "worth $300,000 a year. In fact, far more."

Opponent Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said "it is so easy (for senators) to spend somebody else's money, you can make it so virtuous."

Senators voting yes wanted to begin federal funding of the King Holiday Commission.

No: Jesse Helms.

1990 Budget: By a vote of 68 for and 31 against the Senate passed a version of the fiscal 1990 congressional budget resolution (HR 106) and sent the measure to conference with the House. The Senate plan is similar to the House's fiscal blueprint (above) for the year beginning October 1. Both would spend $1.17 trillion, freeze defense outlays at the 1989 level of $299 billion, slightly raise domestic spending, protect entitlement programs, incorporate President Bush's campaign vow of no new taxes and project an annual deficit of nearly $100 billion.

The Senate budget also resembled the House's in using bookkeeping gimmicks, unrealistic assumptions of high economic growth and low interest rates, and imaginary spending cuts to comply with the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit-reduction law, senators from both parties acknowledged.

Senators voting yes supported the 1990 congressional budget resolution.

Yes: Sanford.

No: Helms.

Budget Substitute — The Senate rejected, 18 for and 82 against, an amendment to the fiscal 1990 budget resolution (above) that sought to freeze most discretionary defense and domestic spending at 1989 levels and lower the annual deficit to about $80 billion.

Supporters hailed the proposal by Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., as a bold attack on deficit spending, while opponents called it a politically impractical measure that would upset the 1990 budget pact between Congress and the White House.

Senators voting yes supported the substitute.

Yes: Helms.

No: Sanford.

Relationship

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher will have as close or closer a political relationship with President Bush than with his predecessor Ronald Reagan, Henry Kissinger predicted.

The former U.S. secretary of state made the remarks Wednesday night in an interview with Britain's Sky Television.

Nagy Reburial

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Hungarian television will broadcast live the reburial of Imre Nagy, who was executed and interred in an unmarked grave after leading the country's 1956 anti-Soviet uprising, a newspaper reported.

The remains of Nagy and his revolutionary associates were exhumed last month from the unmarked graves where they were buried in 1958.

They are to be reburied on June 16.

The plan underscores the current Communist leadership's willingness to acknowledge repressions that followed the popular uprising, which was crushed by Soviet forces.

Attendants On United Flight Receive Awards, But Most Are Unable To Work

WASHINGTON (AP) — Only three of the 16 flight attendants aboard United Flight 811, whose side ripped open Feb. 24 and pulled nine passengers to their deaths, have regained their composure enough to return to work.

Most of the attendants who worked to protect the remaining 327 passengers in the howling horror of the plane's darkened cabin have not been able to return to work either because of physical or psychological problems, according to their supervisor.

The Boeing 747 landed safely in Honolulu after aborting a flight to New Zealand.

Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner gave the plane's pilots and other crew members the Secretary's Heroism Award in ceremonies Wednesday, saying the flight attendants overcame "the deafening, hurricane-like winds that swept through the cabin" as they helped passengers deal with the crisis over the Pacific.

Skinner said that despite increased concern, air travel remains one of the safest forms of transportation. He blamed news headlines for sometimes creating the impression that aviation is unsafe.

But several flight attendants interviewed after the ceremonies were critical of the state of aviation safety and accused United Airlines of cutting back in training and safety equipment.

The company denied the criticism, saying it meets or exceeds all Federal Aviation Administration regulations and industry standards.

The National Transportation Safety Board is continuing its investigation into the incident following a hearing in Seattle last month. Investigators have focused on a possible malfunction in the locking mechanism of the cargo door that blew off with a large section of the fuselage.

Skinner handed out awards to Capt. David Cronin of Incline Village, Nev.; 1st Officer Gregory Slader of Langley, Wash.; 2nd Officer Randal Thomas of Albany, Ind.; and 13 flight attendants.

In a separate meeting, the Airline Pilots Association gave Superior Airmanship Awards to the pilot and copilots.

Three other flight attendants did not attend the program but were to receive their awards later. Joani Zumbunnen, manager of United flight attendants in Honolulu, said they were still recovering from the effects of the incident.

She said at least one has refused to fly at all and "may never fly again" because of the experience.

Edward Lythgoe of Kailua-Kona, Hawaii, who suffered two broken ribs in the incident, said he returned to work only last week and still reacts with newfound anxiety whenever a plane gets into turbulence and during landing and takeoff.

Flight Attendant Darrell Blankenship of Seattle, who accepted the award with his arm still in a cast, said a flying liquor cart jammed into him during the flight.

Blankenship and Lythgoe both said passengers and some flight attendants had difficulty putting on life vests, which Lythgoe said he thought were badly designed.

Sharol Perkins of Honolulu said not enough oxygen bottles or enough megaphones, needed to communicate with passengers above the roar caused by the hole, were readily available to flight attendants.

Sarah Shanahan of Kailua, Hawaii, said she does not want to return to work until United improves its training for emergencies.

She said the airline has "watered down" safety procedures and training over the years.

Ms. Shanahan, who has been flying for 22 years, said attendants used to have to undergo three days of retraining each year, including an open-book test, but now have only an eight-hour session.

"It makes it more difficult because you have to fly by the seat of your pants," she said. "The corporation doesn't seem to think safety is cost-effective."

United spokeswoman Sara Dornacker in Chicago said the airline's No. 1 priority is safety.

"Safety is good business," she said, noting that although the 747 is required to carry only nine flight attendants, Flight 811 had 15, in addition to one who was flying as a passenger but joined in helping with the emergency and also received an award.

She said the airline's training for flight attendants exceeds industry standards, including eight hours of classroom work, four hours of home study and added security training each year.

"The quality of our training has never deteriorated and, in fact, we have enhanced it to improve proficiency over the years," she said.

Ms. Dornacker said safety equipment aboard United planes either meets or exceeds FAA specifications, providing more supplies of emergency oxygen than required.

She acknowledged, however, that some passengers have complained of difficulty in putting on life vests. She said there has been no report that any passenger on Flight 811 was unable to don a vest.

Other flight attendants from Hawaii receiving the secretary's award included Laura Brentlinger, Tina Blundy, Jean Nakayama, Ilona Benoit and Ricky Umehira, all of Honolulu, and Robyn Nakamoto of Aiea.

Skinner also gave awards to Linda Shirley and Curtis Christensen of San Francisco and Leonard Jenkins of Denver, who was flying as a passenger but joined the crew after the door blew off. Awards were to be sent to those not attending from Hawaii — John Horita of Hilo, Mae Sapolu of Honolulu and Richard Lam of Haleiwa.

Landlord Finding Support On Rule Against Unmarried

By Tony Kennedy
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MARSHALL, Minn. — A man who rented a house to an unmarried couple and then changed his mind because he believed they were not showing respect for Christian values is getting support from across the country.

"I just couldn't allow that type of activity to go on in our house," said carpenter Layle French, 33, who reneged on an agreement that would have allowed Sue Jensen and her fiancé to move into a house he was trying to sell.

A Minnesota administrative law judge ruled in March that French violated a law that prohibits discrimination based on marital status. He said the only unsettled issue is how much French should pay in damages.

French, a member of the Marshall Evangelical Free Church, contends the law should take a back seat to his Christian values. Aside from that, he maintains that couples who live together violate the state's fornication law.

"We go back to a very scary time if we say landlords get to pick the religion of tenants," said state Human Rights Commissioner Steven Cooper.

Although there is some support for the 27-year-old Ms. Jensen, most of this politically conservative town of 10,000 residents seem to back French.

"If people want to live together that's their business, but then they should rent from someone who doesn't care," said Bob Cool, who owns an office supply store.

"I look at the case as a morality case," said Lionel Bolden, another businessman in this town 150 miles west of Minneapolis. "Layle in essence would be responsible for what goes on in that place."

"It's really a paradox," said attorney James Anderson, who organized a non-profit corporation that has raised about $1,300 for French's appeal. "The state is coming after Layle for upholding a statute."

About 200 people attended a rally for French last month, and petitions and letters of encouragement have streamed in from around the country, including one from a group of about 40 Orthodox Jews in New York City, Anderson said. About 300 people have made $1 contributions to French's legal fund, he said.

"As the matter works its way through the courts I think we're going to prevail," Anderson said.

French agreed on Feb. 22, 1988, to rent to Jensen, who told him what her living arrangements would be. French changed his mind two days later and paid a refund.

"I didn't feel good about it but I initially took the money anyway," French said. "My biggest, toughest thing was to go back on my word."

Not knowing that Jensen complained to the state Human Rights Department, French said he forgot the transaction until the department wrote him in May 1988, requesting an unspecified amount of money to pay for Jensen's damages.

"To me it was like they were asking for a payoff," French said.

Jensen, who has since married her fiancé, said she is proud of the state and angry that French is publicizing the case as a moral quandary.

"What Mr. French did was against the law," she said. "He broke a contract. This isn't about religion."

Lab Fire Destroys 500,000 Research Mice

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BAR HARBOR, Maine — Fire killed about 500,000 research mice at a Jackson Laboratory, and the loss sent scientists around the world who depend on its purebred strains, officials said.

Four construction workers who were remodeling the building where the blaze broke out Wednesday afternoon were hospitalized, and at least two firefighters were treated for smoke inhalation, officials said.

"We managed to save what are called the foundation stocks ... the original genetically defined strains" of mice, said Director-designate Kenneth Paigen. "It will take us time but we will be able to reproduce what was there."

Earl Green, a former Jackson director, said it would take six to eight generations of mice, or about two or three years, to replace the animals.

It was unclear what effect on research the short-term mouse shortage could have.

With an annual budget of $27 million, the lab produces between 2 million and 3 million mice a year and provides them to scientists throughout the country, Europe, Africa and the Soviet Union.

Its major customers include mammalian genetics researchers at the National Institutes of Health, Harvard, and Massachusetts Institute of Technology, as well as major hospital research centers, said Barbara Trevett, a Jackson spokeswoman.

During years of breeding, the lab has produced 1,700 strains of mice by genetic accident. The mice carry odd physical traits, some caused by mutant genes. Studying those genes can provide clues to human disorders, such as heart disease, diabetes, cancer and AIDS.

Suspect Chased

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — Morganton Department of Public Safety officers used tear gas on a Lenoir robbery suspect after he refused to surrender to officers at a local motel.

Larry Wayne Nance, 30, refused to open the door of his Econo-Lodge room when Lenoir police officers tried to arrest him on charges of robbery with a dangerous weapon at another Econo-Lodge in Lenoir.

After repeated refusals to open the door, officers shot tear gas into Nance's room. Officers forced open the door, and Nance was arrested and charged with resisting, delaying and obstructing a public officer, according to a department report.

Nance has also been charged with robbery with a dangerous weapon by Lenoir authorities.

The Daily Reflector's Newspaper In Education Department's Teacher Of The Year Contest.

Help us celebrate Teacher's Day, June 4, 1989, and help your favorite teacher win a free newspaper subscription by sending us your nomination by May 19th!

To celebrate Teacher's Day, June 4, The Newspaper In Education Department of The Daily Reflector is sponsoring a Teacher Of The Year Contest in which they are looking for a teacher who has used the newspaper in the classroom in the past year. Nominations can be made by teachers, students, parents and administrators, and must be sent to The Daily Reflector no later than Friday, May 19th. All nominations must be accompanied by an explanation of 100 words or less as to why the teacher nominated should be chosen for the award and how he/she utilized the newspaper as a learning tool. Judging will be conducted by a panel of educators and newspaper staff members. The teacher chosen will then receive a year's classroom subscription to The Daily Reflector, in which ten newspapers will be delivered to the school on the days of his/her choice. Included with the subscription will be holiday lesson plans and other yearly activities prepared by The Daily Reflector's Newspaper In Education Department.

Please send nominations to:

Colic Is Still A Stumbling Block For Doctors

By Sally Squires
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Question: What five-letter word sends new parents running for cover?

Answer: Colic.

Few who have had to cope with a colicky baby ever quite forget the experience. "It is just an overwhelming sense of helplessness," said Maria Vorel of Alexandria, Va., whose year-old daughter Sara suffered from colic for 3½ months and could only be consoled by being tightly held for hours.

"You can tell that they are in pain, and you just feel this overwhelming sense that there is not enough that you can do for your baby and at the same time you are totally exhausted. It's a real rigorous ordeal."

The symptoms of colic — inconsolable, high-pitched crying that lasts for hours on end — usually start suddenly at about 1 month of age and persist until about 3 months, when they disappear as mysteriously as they began. During attacks, colicky babies turn from easygoing, gurgling infants into screaming manies who try the patience of their parents.

"I felt like I couldn't take it another minute sometimes," said Ann Boas of the District of Columbia, whose 23-month-old daughter Rebecca suffered from colic for nine weeks. "I remember her screaming, being completely inconsolable and feeling so completely inadequate. Nothing we did could stop her from screaming, and she cried all day long."

One of the biggest stumbling blocks to treating colic is that doctors still can't agree on its symptoms or its cause. The word colic comes from the Greek word for colon, since the earliest theories suggested that babies were screaming from gastrointestinal distress. Since then, it has been suggested that colic could be also caused by allergies, nerve disorders and hyper-reactivity.

What's puzzling is that breast-fed babies experience colic just as frequently as do formula-fed infants. "There really isn't any standard definition of colic," said William Carey, a pediatrician in private practice who also studies colic at the University of Pennsylvania. "The very term colic is a misnomer. I think we would do better to call it excessive crying."

As a result, the number of infants thought to suffer from the condition varies widely. Estimates range from 10 to 30 percent of all newborns. Many of those cases probably include other disorders. "We need to stop using colic as a garbage category for kids," said Barry Lester, a pediatrician who does colic research at Brown University School of Medicine.

Help could come from results of two studies presented last week at the annual meeting of the American Pediatric Society and the Society for Pediatric Research.

One study of 16 babies by Lester and his colleagues at Brown lends support to the theory that colic may be caused in some infants by problems with the vagus nerve that helps govern such wide-ranging functions as the gastrointestinal tract, the esophagus, movement of the tongue, pharynx and larynx and some hearing.

Lester and his colleagues screened children thought to have colic. They only included infants in the study who had sudden, high-pitched crying that lasted for three hours a day and occurred at least three times a week for at least three weeks. The babies were inconsolable during an attack. In addition, they became rigid and often threw themselves backward when they cried.

By applying this more rigorous definition of colic, Lester said he believes that he screens out babies who may be suffering from other problems.

When Lester and his colleagues analyzed babies' cries during an attack, they found that the babies with colic emitted a significantly higher-pitched cry than a group of control infants without colic. The colicky cries also had greater variability in frequency and more sound turbulence than the cries of babies in the control group.

Difference also emerged in how mothers of colicky babies viewed their children when compared with the mothers of control infants. Mothers of the babies with colic "perceived their infants' cries as more urgent and grating than mothers of the control infants," Lester said. The mothers of infants with colic described their children's cries during an attack as more piercing and arousing. They reported feeling sadder and more helpless than did the other mothers.

These differences persisted to 3 months of age, when "mothers of colicky infants rated their babies as having a more fussy and dif-

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — No superheroes grace the pages of Javier Juarez's comic books, no archvillains with maniacal plots to control the world, and not a single "Pow!" "Zap!" or "Bam!"

Even so, the black-and-white adventures of "Felipe" and his friends as they try to conquer a mountain of bureaucratic obstacles to become legal U.S. residents may be the most dog-eared literature in California.

Distributed free at employment offices, churches and social service agencies, the booklets are lessons in applying for residency under the complex 1986 Immigration Reform and Control Act, better known as the amnesty program.

"Amnistia" or "Amnesty," about applying for temporary residency, was out of print soon after the release of 50,000 copies a year ago. "The Second Phase," about permanent residency and avoiding disqualification, is in its second printing four months after distribution of the first 30,000 copies.

"We've never had this kind of response with any material before," said Emily Goldfarb, executive director of the San Francisco-based Coalition for Immigrant and Refugee Rights and Services, which produced the books.

The potential audience in California exceeds 1.5 million, the number of applicants for residency status under the amnesty program.

"All this subject matter is deadly boring if you aren't affected by it. If you are affected by it, it's not deadly boring — it's terrifyingly boring," said Juarez, 39, a former Mexican government economist who got the idea after he married a U.S. citizen and moved from Mexico City to California.

So Juarez lightened it up, capitalizing on the gallows humor and love of storytelling he said is the heritage of Mexico, where political cartooning has enjoyed a long tradition and soap opera-style novellas are popular.

"Lots of people say, 'Why a comic book? That's for a kid or the mentally retarded.' There's nothing comic about the situations portrayed in the comic books. Actually, it's a matter of life and death. It's going to determine where they live and work. But there's no reason to lose your sense of humor."

When the characters discuss the difficulties of obtaining documents and witnesses' sworn statements to prove they've been in the country since Jan. 1, 1982 — the cutoff date for amnesty applications — Felipe laments: "Even my mother-in-law wanted to use the opportunity to get rid of me."

The idea was so good that the Immigration and Naturalization Service, which had said it couldn't afford to produce Juarez's book, followed suit. The government version also proved popular, said Scott Nyborn, outreach coordinator with the INS in San Francisco. "I don't think we have any left, actually."

Juarez writes the scripts in Spanish, then translates them for English editions. A former student of dramatic arts, he gets help with

The Associated Press

Juarez and his comic book, written to explain immigrants' obstacles to becoming U.S. citizens illustrations from his media-wise family — his father works in advertising, his brother in film-making, and his sister is a television director in Mexico.

He strives to write the scripts in the idioms of everyday Spanish, while accurately imparting information about the amnesty program — a task that can be a "nightmare" because experts frequently disagree on the complex law.

Goldfarb believes that unlike with government brochures, people hang onto the comics and read them aloud to their families, reaching illiterate people who otherwise might be misinformed or exploited by swindlers.

"They're fun to read," she said. "The graphics and the conversations and the cultural aspects of it are things that people can identify with."

"Amnistia" dealt with the first phase of the amnesty program, but applying for residency is just the first step. The application deadlines were May 5, 1988, for aliens here since 1982 and Nov. 30 for seasonal agriculture workers who had picked perishable crops at least 90 days between May 1985 and May 1986.

The second phase deals with permanent residency and problems like arrests, unemployment and welfare dependency that can make applicants ineligible.

Two more issues are in the works to address mandated AIDS tests; qualifying for government assistance including free and reduced-price school lunches and prenatal and infant medical care, and meeting requirements for a basic understanding of English, and American civics and history.

If the next issue wins a state grant, Goldfarb said the Immigrant and Refugee Rights Coalition plans to print 70,000 copies for distribution by its 80 nonprofit member organizations in the San Francisco Bay area, then make it available to other organizations throughout the state to reprint.

Juarez said the widespread readership is its own reward and has inspired him to try producing as his next project an analytical Spanish-English language magazine for California's rapidly growing Hispanic population.

Relighting The Flame For Davy, True Hero

By Don Oldenburg
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

For the past six weeks, a larger-than-life figure has ruled my 24-inch television screen. Not Hulk Hogan. Not Rambo or Roseanne. Not Willard. At last count, I've watched all or parts of the two Davy Crockett movies Walt Disney made in the mid-1950s 25 or 30 times.

I'm not complaining. And there's no obsessive fixation at work here. It's just that occasionally the little things in life take on larger meanings.

This near-exclusive diet of old-fashioned heroism comes on the insistence of my 2½-year-old son. Otherwise uninterested in wasting much time in front of the tube, he suddenly allowed for this exception one day after randomly pulling the "Davy Crockett — King of the Wild Frontier" videotape from a shelf at our nearby video store. He scanned the picture of the darkly handsome frontiersman on the cover, decked out in buckskin and raising high his rifle in one fist. He asked to take it home.

At first the thought amused me. It's been 34 years since the Disney series about the legendary American pioneer had captivated me as a tyke. A memory flashed of my family huddled around our glowing little set on Sunday evenings in 1955, hoping each week for the next Davy Crockett segment instead of the usual Mickey Mouse or Goofy stuff. My brother and I had coonskin caps but never those mouse ears. Nothing against Mickey. Just that Davy Crockett was somehow more entertaining, substantial, meaningful...

"And violent?" asked my wife. Whoa! What was I doing? Introducing my toddler to guns and tomahawks? Even to scalping? I recovered quickly. Kids witness a whole lot worse these days, I reasoned. Look at the evening news, those suggestive commercials, worst of all the cutesified brutality of some Saturday morning cartoons. Besides, his interest would wane within minutes of the opening credits, so we rented the tape. I wanted to see it again, anyway.

Never underestimate heroic appeal at any age. Especially in an age scarce of heroics. My son would watch at least a little of the Davy Crockett films every day if I let him. I'm not sure how or why this happened. Perhaps he detected my own strange sort of commitment to the movie. The songs. The characters. More likely it's something bigger.

When my boy wears his coonskin cap as we walk along the streets downtown, graying men in pin-striped suits smile knowingly. They nod to him. Some can't resist sentiment; reverently they utter the name aloud. "Davy Crockett." Some of them aren't really addressing anyone other than the youngster they once were. A woman spotted my son one afternoon and broke into song: "Born on a mountaintop in Tennessee..."

Sparked by the sight of a child with a coonskin atop his head, they all seem to recall for a moment a time when life was a little slower, when choices were simpler, when right and wrong were more certain, when a slow-on-the-draw Texan named Fess Parker embodied those values in the historic character of Davy Crockett.

Davy Crockett blazed other lasting trails. The identity stuck to Fess Parker like a fly to molasses. "It's most gratifying that there is a conti-

Los Angeles Is Seeking A Taller Image

By Frank Clifford
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LOS ANGELES — A downtown in search of a more fashionable face can look out at the world with a new hauteur today, as the sleek, pale contours of a new and conspicuously different skyscraper rise in cool contrast to the city's bulky skyline.

This horizontal city, where buildings over 13 stories were prohibited until 1957, has become home to the tallest building on the West Coast.

The 73-story tower is the work of I.M. Pei & Partners and is one of a score of giant office buildings being shaped for Los Angeles by well-known architects, including Michael Graves, Cesar Pelli, Arthur Erickson, Helmut Jahn and others.

The new crop of designer skyscrapers is part of a bid for visual distinction that has long eluded downtown Los Angeles. Flush with foreign money and eager for the world's approval, the city is anxious to shed any traces of provincialism. At the same time, the city is hoping to create a landscape in which a lot more people will want to live. With less than 2 percent of the people who work downtown living there, habitability has become a major issue.

Take care of the problem, and local leaders believe they can realize their goal of a downtown with nearly twice its current working population of 276,000 and twice the commercial space of downtown San Francisco (Los Angeles now has slightly less than San Francisco). With office growth averaging about 1 million square feet a year and the occupancy rate running about 80 percent, the boosters' dream of a greatly expanded skyline may not be all that fanciful.

In the works for nearly 10 years, the tower points to the city's growing preoccupation with its image and its confusion over what the image ought to be.

On one side are those who say the city needs a majestic skyline, like New York or Chicago, if it is going to be recognized as a world capital. California historian Kevin Starr said recently that one reason Los Angeles has not been taken as seriously as other cities its size is because its large buildings are not especially impressive. Starr suggested that a city better known for zany architecture — the original Brown Derby restaurant shaped like a hat, Grauman's Chinese Theater, the Tail of the Pup hot dog stand — could do with a make-over.

But there are also people who say that the rush to build modish skyscrapers, like Pei's tower, will superimpose an anonymous big-city look on a town famous for the personality of its smaller buildings. Critics wonder why a Western city with a long legacy of original architecture should look eastward for its inspiration.

Pei's architects said that as they worked on plans for the new tower, they looked east and west, at buildings rich in classical ornamentation and at those with very little detailing. The architects said that they hung up pictures of the Chrysler Building and the Empire State Building. But they said that they also paid close attention to Los Angeles' Central Library — "a strong, spare building, very authoritative and very Western," in the words of Henry N. Cobb, the architect in Pei's company most responsible for designing the tower.

Cobb and his colleagues said they wanted to put up a building that was both showy and self-effacing.

"We wanted to make a building that was more spirited than many big buildings downtown, but one that did not threaten the primacy of the library," Cobb said.

In other words, Cobb set out to build the tallest building west of Houston, a $350 million skyscraper standing a fifth of a mile high, that would not overshadow the three-story structure across the street.

As the tower has risen to its full height, it has become clear that its success will be gauged as much by the way it meets the ground around it as how it greets the sky.

"The building is going to be judged on how it enhances the environment around it as opposed to how it shows off at the top. The top 60 feet belongs to a few people. The bottom 60 feet belongs to everyone," said Richard Weinstein, dean of the School of Architecture and Urban Design at the University of California, Los Angeles.

"It's at the bottom that the building will achieve its uniqueness, if it is going to, in its response to the

Is Inexperienced, Single Guy Doomed To Fail With Dating?

Dear Abby: Are the women in this country nuts, or am I? We are constantly being told that all the good men are either married or gay — as though single men are at the bottom of the barrel, or else why would they be single?

I can't answer for all single men — only for myself. I'm 27 years old, considered fairly good-looking, average height and weight, in good physical condition, my hair is thinning a little — I wear glasses, and yes, I am shy with a capital "S." Surprise — I am still a virgin! So what?

I graduated from college at 22 and have worked as a bartender for the last few years. I've saved my money and have been accepted by a good law school this fall.

During the last few years, I've been involved with four women. I guess I screwed up with the first three by revealing my virgin status. Two thought I was lying and dumped me. The third classified me as a "geek."

I kept silent with the fourth. Unfortunately, once we reached a more intimate stage, my nervousness ruined everything. I suppose this would have been OK at 16, but at my age, she thought something was

Dear Abby

"wrong" with me.

Hey, ladies, I'm an intelligent, sincere, sensitive man — a gentleman. How about a survey, Abby? Is an inexperienced, decent single guy disqualified in the search for a mate? — Striking Out In Florida

Dear Striking Out: I don't need a survey to tell me that decent women want decent men. I also know that virtue and virginity don't necessarily go hand in hand. There are virginal cads and experienced people with hearts of gold.

Since by your own admission you are shy with a capital "S," get some counseling to overcome your shyness, and the rest will fall into place. There are singles groups, square dancing, cooking classes, workout gyms. Get going. The longest march in the world starts with one step.

Dear Abby: I would like to express my sympathy for "Old-Time Salesgirl," who deprecates the lack of consideration shown by prospective customers who mistreat garments they try on, then reject.

A similar attitude toward all things, even including their own possessions, has become the hallmark of a much too large proportion of young adults, and sadly, many of their parents.

This "hooray for me and to heck with everyone else" attitude disgusts and infuriates this Victorian respector of others' rights and property, but my only recourse is to attempt to compensate for those boors. Yes, I'm the chump who picks up the box of cereal or the toy from the store aisle and tries to find its rightful place on the shelf, who reorganizes the scrambled greeting cards in the rack, and who straightens the twisted garments on their hangers while shopping.

I do these things by natural compulsion, for the sheer satisfaction of knowing that I may have lightened another's daily burdens. So, cheer up, "Old-Time Salesgirl," there are still a few considerate old squares on your side. My bride of 43 years is another of this same archaic breed. — Fred Lee Montgomery, Glendale, Ariz.

Dear Mr. Montgomery: How refreshing to learn that amidst the cactus in Arizona, an orchid blooms — make that two, and greet your good wife for me.

Dear Abby: Thanks for encouraging the members of a high school reunion planning committee to send flowers to the parents of the classmates who had passed away.

We lost a dear daughter 37 years ago, and would have cherished even a brief note — signed by her classmates — acknowledging that she was remembered and missed. — Dale And Leona Perry

Dear Dale And Leona: Please accept my belated and heartfelt sympathy at the loss of your beloved daughter. I think that sending a letter to the parents of a deceased classmate, signed by all the surviving classmates, is a splendid idea. I hope it catches on.

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Advice On How To Create A Best Seller

Scarcely a week goes by that an unpublished author doesn't write to me seeking advice on how to create a best seller.

It used to be pretty simple. All you did was write a manuscript, have it published, and learn how to cook something. Anything. Because for the next three months, in order to plug your book, you had to go on local and national TV shows across the country... and cook.

I must have sold a ton of books from a garbanzo bean salad I made on Dinah's show, not to mention a "war" cake on "Hour Magazine" and hash browns on Mike Douglas' show. On rare occasions, a host would ask what my book was about, but if the studio audience responded to a skillet full of sauteed onions, you knew you had a straight shot to the top of the New York Times list.

At Wits End

It's not that easy today. A quiche just won't cut it. Talk shows still don't want to know anything about your book, but they want to know about you — all the good stuff you've never told anyone before. It helps if you have had an abused childhood, an alcoholic mother or are a recent graduate of the Betty Ford clinic. Naming an impressive list of famous lovers in your youth might even get you an alternate selection of The Book-of-the-Month Club.

It also helps if you give the book away for free. For many years it has been traditional for authors to speak at lunches without charge and afterward sell their books. Speaker of the House Jim Wright had a novel approach. Instead of collecting a fee for a speech, he encouraged organizations to buy copies of his book, which were then distributed free of charge to the audience. If the organization didn't want the books, Wright could sell them twice, which means he could sell more books than his publisher printed. Publishers like this.

Another way to create a best seller is the Amway party approach. Say you write a book on corporate management or how to be a leader. Instead of selling it through bookstores, you hold a corporate party and sell it to the entire company. Sales soar. Don't bother inviting your relatives. They wait for a free copy.

There was a time when having your book banned by a morality group ensured stardom. That's nothing. Today, the author has to be banned from the face of the Earth and live out the rest of his life in seclusion. You can do this by putting "Satanic" in your title.

I don't want to talk down to you, but everyone knows if you're going to come out with a biography, for crying out loud have UNAUTHORIZED stamped across the cover in red letters.

There, I've told you all I know about creating best sellers. Of course, if you once saved the lives of Oprah, Phil, Larry King and a couple of hundred major book critics, it couldn't hurt.

Pair Wed Saturday

Ann Stephens Watson and Herbert Monnie Morris III were married at 3 p.m. Saturday in the Red Oak Christian Church.

The double-ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dexter Wasson. Organist John Barker presented a program of music.

Parents of the bridal couple are Mr. and Mrs. James Clyde Stephens of Route 5, Mount Olive, and Herbert Monnie Morris Jr. of Kinston.

Teresa Harrell of Greenville was matron of honor and honorary bridesmaid was Wendy Flannagan of Kinston, daughter of the bridegroom.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers were Mike Morris of Kinston and Tim Morris of Laurinburg, both brothers of the bridegroom.

Escorted by her father, the bride wore a tea-length gown of ivory peau de soie with alencon lace overlay on the fitted bodice. The gown had a sweetheart neckline and leg o'mutton sleeves trimmed in sequins and seed pearls. The V-back had a dropped waistline accented with a bow. Her ivory alencon lace picture hat had an illusion pouf in the back with a fingertip veil. The hat was trimmed with sequins and seed pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of pink tea roses, white daisies and lilies with ivory streamers.

The matron of honor wore a royal blue tea-length dress of bridal satin and carried a pink rose and baby's breath tied with pink satin streamers and lace.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to Williamsburg, Va.

MRS. MORRIS

The bride is employed at West Craven High School in Vanceboro and the bridegroom is employed at Evans Ford in Kinston.

Women Attend State Convention

Anne Briley, Sallie Mann and Mildred Southwick attended the Delta Kappa Gamma, Eta state convention held during the weekend in Charlotte.

The state convention will be held in Greenville in April 1990.

A slide program on "French Impressionism at the New Musee D'Orsay in Paris" was given at the meeting of Beta Alpha chapter Thursday night. Karine Sparrow-Ginter, assistant professor in the East Carolina language and literature department, was speaker.

Sam Combs, a graduate student in the ECU School of Music, presented a musical program and was accompanied by Alisa Wetherington. He is a recent winner of the Young Artists' award from the Music Teachers Association in Greensboro.

Ms. Mann, a recent retiree, was recognized by President Jane Maier.

Circle Has Talk By Lucy Wright

Lucy Wright was keynote speaker at the Wednesday meeting of the Benevolent Circle of the King's Daughters and Sons.

She is associated with international students at East Carolina University, coordinating activities at the International House.

Betty Tate announced the group's yard sale will be held May 20 at the home of Stella Baker.

The Creative Living Center birthday party was held in late March. Representing the circle were Penny Cox, Jean Weaver, Nancy NaHouse, Mary Ellen Calder and Edith Payne.

Mrs. Weaver announced that Michelle Rabey has been awarded the State Health Careers Scholarship. She was nominated by the Benevolent Circle.

The May 24 covered-dish luncheon meeting will be held at the home of Delphia Corbett. New officers will be selected.

Chosen for competition

Christy Angle, left, and Allyson Maloney are among 60 finalists chosen statewide to compete this weekend in Raleigh for the honor of becoming North Carolina's Homecoming Queen. The winner of the state pageant earns the right to compete in the national pageant in Hawaii. Miss Angle, homecoming queen at North Pitt, is the daughter of Ken and Pat Brown of Route 1, Stokes and the late Bill Angle Jr. Miss Maloney's parents are Millard and Gwenn Maloney of Greenville. She is homecoming queen at J.H. Rose High School.

Suttons Celebrate Milestone

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Lee Sutton of Greenville celebrated their 50th anniversary April 29. They were honored at a reception given by family and friends at Grace Free Will Baptist Church.

The couple's children are Mr. and Mrs. Earl Sutton of Great Bridge, Va., and Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell Meeks of Greenville. They have four grandchildren and a great-grandchild.

Spanish Musical Prodigy Gets Balanced Education In Denver

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DENVER — If Diego Alonso is a young Mozart, his parents don't want to make too much of a fuss about it.

That's why they whisked the 5-year-old out of their native Spain, where the press hailed him as a genius and a virtuoso, and enrolled him in kindergarten at the Mackintosh Academy, a school for gifted children in Denver.

"We wanted him to get a well-rounded education, and be with children his own age who are more like him," said Rosa Alonso Plaza, 29, Diego's mother.

She and her husband, Manuel, 49, are amateur musicians who set out to create a musical child. While pregnant they played scales to the fetus because, she said, "we love music, and we think music is very important for the development of the child's mind — the creative, abstract mind."

Diego began singing scales when he was 6 months old, his parents say, and at 2 began to read music.

At 3, he could play simple Bach pieces on the piano.

Alan Weber, a teacher at the National Conservatory of Music in Paris who tested Diego, said the 3-year-old showed exceptional gifts and could listen to music and then play it back by memory. Weber said Diego should not be schooled with children his own age.

In February 1988, when he was 4, Diego had an audience before Queen Sofia of Spain, but declined to play. Instead, he showed the queen a game he played in which he stands with his back to a piano and identifies any note that is struck.

All the attention, however, soon made Diego stop playing for several months. He was, after all, only 4, and according to his parents has a stubborn streak.

Duplicate Bridge Winners Named

Several games of duplicate bridge were played at the Senior Center last week.

Mrs. Lacy Harrell and George Martin and Janice Mitchell and Donald Dunbar placed first in the Saturday afternoon game.

Other North-South winners were Lee Hastings and Dave Proctor, second; Mr. and Mrs. Jeff McAllister, third, and Mrs. J.M. Horton and Mrs. W.R. Harris, fourth.

Others placing East-West included Mrs. Zeb Cummings and Dr. Charles Duffy, second; Ida Rowe and Mary Mitchell, third, and Masao Kishore and Sam Jones, fourth.

Thursday night, North-South winners were Miriam Martin and Jeff McAllister, first; Tom Knutson and Krishna Prasad, second, and Lib Ross and Ned Kinsey, third. East-West winners included Dave Proctor and Lee Hastings, first, and tied for third were Mrs. Harold Forbes and Effie Williams with Masao Kishore and Sam Jones.

Brunch Planned

The Greenville Christian Women's Club No. 2 will have a brunch meeting at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday at the Holiday Inn.

Rita Lambert will give a program on handwoven baskets. Janna Brendel will present special music.

A nursery is provided. For reservations call Irene Gurganus at 756-2139 or Debbie Parrish at 756-9266.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: S equals H

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY May 12

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Your hard work and high energy gain powerful allies. VIP's may consider giving your career a boost up the ladder. Look your best.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Your popularity is higher than you estimate. Don't sell yourself short. Strong advice and words of wisdom given a friend may fall on deaf ears.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): A shortage of funds can delay a new project: education. Remember Gemini's theme: You are alive as long as you are learning.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): There is a bright future ahead. Evening company is a big hit. Go potluck or Dutch and protect your dwindling cash reserve.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): You are your own severest critic; on one hand you seek higher goals, and on the other hand you ache when you do not meet your own criteria.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): When you are cruising along in high gear, a ton of work can be accomplished. A romantic interest brings you an unexpected surprise.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): The current cycle remains high. Business hopes, your own this time, can be a reality. Enjoy the twilight hours with friends.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Fickle contacts can hurt, especially when you want more action than just flirting. Read between the lines and understand what you sign.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Personal contacts are rewarding when you turn on the charm. A short trip will stimulate the senses.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): The search for increased finances intensifies. You can see the light at the end of the tunnel. Family matters are important.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Write down your ideas until you can use them, and thus not lose them. A love relationship strengthens.
PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Let go of worn out situations that drain your emotions. Get up and go, come alive and find spirited adventures that fit your style.

We are not enchanted with the Unusual No Trump convention, only because we feel it is more often misused than applied correctly. Over an opponent's major suit and the eight of clubs was run. When that won, a repeat finesse enabled declarer to bring in the suit. Note that declarer had to retain his eight of clubs and lead it for the second finesse. If he wastes it on the first club finesse, or does not lead it the second time around, he will end up in dummy after taking the second finesse, but since he has no way of getting back to hand for another North's hand is perfect for the convention. When East's four-spade preempt came back to him, North bid four no trump to force his partner to choose a minor suit.

Against five diamonds, West led the king of spades. Since there was a sure heart loser unless there was a very lucky lie of the club suit, as was indeed the case, declarer had to limit his club losers to one. The best line was to plan to take two finesses. Since two entries would be needed for that, declarer carefully ruffed the first trick with the six.

The ace and king of diamonds were cashed, and the thoughtfully-preserved deuce was overtaken with the five. A low club was led to the nine and queen, and the spade return was ruffed. Dummy's last trump was overtaken with the jack and the eight of clubs was run. When that won, a repeat finesse enabled declarer to bring in the suit.

Note that declarer had to retain his eight of clubs and lead it for the second finesse. If he wastes it on the first club finesse, or does not lead it the second time around, he will end up in dummy after taking the second finesse, but since he has no way of getting back to hand for another

NBC Logs 46th Week At The Top

By Kathryn Baker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — NBC has tied CBS' 26-year record of 46 weeks at the top of the A.C. Nielsen Co. television ratings, and says it expects to keep the streak going at least until the National Basketball Association finals.

"The next hurdle is when CBS has two games of the NBA finals," said Gerald Jaffe, NBC vice president for research projects.

"If we hurdle that, and I'm not saying we will, I can't see anything (to stop NBC) until next season."

The NBA finals broke NBC's streak last June before it started building to the 46-week mark. The streak was almost broken in February when CBS, aided by "Lonesome Dove," tied one week with NBC.

NBC won last week with an average, prime-time rating of 13.7 to CBS' 12.4 and ABC's 11.7.

ABC's seemingly never-ending miniseries "War and Remembrance" began anew with the final 11½ hours, but viewers weren't very impressed. The first installment of the final five chapters in the 39½-hour sequel to "The Winds of War" began Sunday with a 13.4 rating and 21 share. NBC won the movie battle Sunday with "Witness," which ranked 10th.

Each rating point equals 904,000 households with television. The share is a percentage of sets in use.

NBC's Saturday-night hit "Hunter" finished in seventh place and had its highest rating since July.

Tuesday's conclusion of CBS' two-part "Guts & Glory: The Rise and Fall of Oliver North" didn't stir viewers and ranked 58th.

The top 10 shows of the week were: "Roseanne" ABC, "The Cosby Show" NBC, "Cheers" NBC, "A Different World" NBC, "60 Minutes" CBS, "Golden Girls" NBC, "Hunter" NBC, "The Wonder Years" ABC, "Empty Nest" NBC, and "Witness" NBC.

Hurt Says Flap Over 'Scandal' Is Just A 'Storm In A Teapot'

By Bob Thomas
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — The scandal about "Scandal" is "much overblown, declares John Hurt, star of the movie about naughty goings-on among the high and mighty in 1960s England.

The British actor was recently in Los Angeles for the opening of the film, and he termed the fuss over its X rating "a storm in a teapot."

"The scene that was allegedly the demon was what we call 'the orgy scene,'" he said. "It was certainly not a sexy scene. It was really a rather tawdry, nasty scene behind closed doors with a particular tired old (upper) class."

"It was directly opposite to what the protagonists, Christine Keeler and Mandy Rice-Davis represent, the 'Swinging '60s.' It was a different kind of permissiveness."

"Scandal," which concerns the sex revelations that helped topple Harold Macmillan's Tory government, was handed an X rating by the Motion Picture Association of America's rating's board. After making a few snips from the orgy scene, the film was rated R. An X would have meant box-office death — few bookings, fewer ads.

Hurt viewed the film before and after the cuts and concluded: "It says the same thing. Apparently somebody took exception to what is known as 'rocking motion.' The 'rocking motion' went, and something else was put in its place."

The reaction in England to "Scandal" was something else. "We had quite a lot of flak for making the film. The Establishment somewhat closed ranks, really. What I call 'the poor old Jack syndrome' came up. 'Why drag him through it again?'"

"Which is understandable, I suppose, but most of the criticisms were made by people who hadn't read the script or certainly seen the film. That's not surprising, I suppose, because they may have thought that we were making some kind of specious movie. Which is not the outcome at all."

"Poor Old Jack" is John Profumo, Britain's former minister of war, a married man who was bedding Keeler at the same time she was having an affair with a Soviet naval attaché and suspected spy.

"I can't say that we did (Profumo) a favor, but I think the film has put him in a different light," Hurt said. "Our perception is different from the public's perception at the time, largely gleaned from the sensationalist press."

Hurt portrays the late Stephen Ward, an osteopath who was charged with pimping for his celebrity clients.

"I think it's pretty clear from the evidence that he was a scapegoat," the actor said.

With his gaunt face and intense manner, John Hurt has made a specialty of difficult portrayals. The most notable was the title role in "Elephant Man," which drew an Academy nomination as best actor.

"Robert DeNiro would do something like 'Raging Bull' the same year," Hurt said about the actor who won the prizethat year.

He was the mad emperor Caligula in "I, Claudius," and the eccentric homosexual Quentin Crisp in "The Naked Civil Servant."

In "Champions," he was a famed jockey who conquered cancer, the inmate of a Turkish prison in "Midnight Express" — for which he received an Oscar nomination as supporting actor, and the homosexual cop in "Partners" with Ryan O'Neal.

Hurt moves smoothly between the London and New York stage, television and films. Surprisingly for a stage-trained actor, he prefers movies.

"If I were told that I could only do one medium and had to cut the rest out, I think I would choose film," he said.

Schroder Stars In Sunday Movie

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Despite a more grown-up role as cowboy Newton in the acclaimed CBS miniseries "Lonesome Dove," Rick Schroder is still struggling with a transition from his child star status to adult roles.

"So it's hard," said Schroder. "A lot of people say it can never be done successfully. Natalie Wood did it. Maybe a few other actors."

Schroder was 8 when he made his film debut in 1979 opposite Jon Voight in a remake of "The Champ," then spent five years playing a rich kid in the comedy series "Silver Spoons."

On Sunday, in the CBS movie "Out on the Edge," he plays a troubled teen-ager who is sent against his will to an institution.

"Making the transition is not easy," he said. "In fact, it's pretty hard. But it's getting easier with each new role. Everything since 'Silver Spoons' has been a role that's helped me grow up. I'm being taken more seriously for adult roles. I don't want to be 30 and still playing high-school kids."

Schroder has been passed over for a few roles that went to older actors.

"I went up for a role in a movie with Robert De Niro called 'The Freshman,'" he said. "The script calls for a 19-year-old, which is my age. They cast Matthew Broderick. He's got to be 30. I said, that's not fair, and it's not realistic."

He'd also wanted the lead role in "Gore Vidal's Billy the Kid" on Turner Network Television. It went to the older Val Kilmer.

Mention the names of child stars such as Elizabeth Taylor and Mickey Rooney who went on to adult careers in show business, and Schroder says, "I'm talking about actors. Those are celebrities."

In the CBS movie, Schroder plays Danny Evetts, 17, who is committed to a behavioral treatment center when his divorced mother is unable to control him.

The movie also stars Maya Lebzonz as a young patient who befriends Danny, Mary Kay Place as Danny's mother, Richard Jenkins as his father and Dakin Matthews as the hospital administrator.

"This is a good role for me because I get to be bad," said Schroder. "I usually play such angelic roles. In this one, I'm really messed up. Danny's a good guy. He's not a jerk or nothing. But he's got problems he doesn't know how to deal with. He starts to hurt himself and those around him."

L.A. Now Home To Skyscrapers

weather, to the street-scape, to the library ... to those things that are distinctly Los Angeles," Weinstein said.

When completed, the tower and a 54-story neighbor that also is a Maguire Thomas project will bring 8,000 to 10,000 people, about 2,000 cars, and more than 3 million square feet of development to the three-block neighborhood now known as Library Square. Most of the people who will work there are part of the city's expanding financial service sector.

There will be no public viewing deck at the top of the tower. The bottom is where the developers will try to please the public. There, they have taken on the daunting challenge of trying to provide downtown Los Angeles with a popular outdoor gathering place.

Creating a colorful street-scape where people of all walks of life mix easily and often, where there is a little fun in the air, has proved to be one of the more elusive goals for planners and developers who want to make the downtown an enjoyable place to work and live.

In Weinstein's words, the downtown badly needs "an extraordinary public place."

As Pei's staff prepares to complete the new tower with its illuminated crown, they say the bottom of the building is the most important part of the project.

"The base will be considered the most notable aspect of the building when the whole thing is done," Cobb said.

Cobb said he wanted to get away from the fortress facades typical of many big buildings downtown and to avoid "a confrontational stance" toward the library.

"We wanted a building that came to the street facing several directions, and not staring stiffly in a flat-faced way that would challenge the primacy of the library," Cobb said. At the same time, he said, he did not want a round building. "Round buildings are self-centered. We were not interested in being the center of everything. We were trying to make a welcoming gesture."

The shape that evolved is an interlocking series of planes and curves. From its glass crown, the building steps down, its competing geometries facing off at corners, terraces and ledges. At the base, the tower's granite finish gives way to colonnades of glass that Cobb hopes will create a feeling of transparency and openness.

As critics and other architects watch the tower take shape, they say the business community is getting what it wanted, a thoughtfully conceived, sleekly tailored contemporary skyscraper with an aura of the past about it.

"It's a late-modern office tower that recalls the romantic era of American skyscraper building," said John Kaliski, principal architect for the city's Community Redevelopment Agency.

The building may also turn out to be the pacesetter that people hoped it would be.

The sculpted facades and classical allusions evident in the plans of a dozen or more office buildings, now in the works, suggest that the skyline will be more varied than ever before.

"There is no doubt at all that the design stakes have been raised," Kaliski said.

Crockett Heroism Still In Style

ning interest," says Parker, now 63 and sounding just like an aging Crockett if he hadn't fought to the death at the Alamo. "For some reason, it seemed to touch people in a way that was a little bit different."

People regularly stop him on the street to chat. Three weeks ago, a large corporation held a conference at Fess Parker's Red Line Resort, in Santa Barbara. Parker showed up for an appearance and was mobbed throughout the evening. "Mostly by young executives," he says. "They still have their caps at home."

Parker's not one to downplay the impact. "If I were to be immodest, I think a lot of people have forgotten that Davy Crockett played a large part in building" the Disney empire, he says. Its blockbuster success helped to finance Disneyland, he says, when the park's future was at stake. "The audience share for Davy Crockett probably was greater than any Super Bowl, if you were to think about the number of TV sets in existence then, and the number of people watching each one," says Parker. "I can't help but to conjecture if his Davy Crockett films had not been successful, what would've happened to Walt Disney? What if Davy Crockett had been a dud?"

That other Crockett and Alamo films made before the Disney version go largely forgotten isn't lost on Parker. And the few that followed have fallen flat as wheatcakes. When network TV last year tried to spin a new Crockett yarn starring some Hollywood pretty boy, it got so-so reviews and drew a modest audience. "I didn't watch it either," says Parker, who turned down a small role in the film. "Frankly, I couldn't identify with it ... true believers, they know the difference."

Never mind the icon bashers who speculate that Davy may have been as much a lout as legend; that he may have spent as much time wrestling in bars as wrestling with bears; that maybe he didn't even wear a coonskin hat. When it comes to heroes, only perception matters.

So Davy Crockett's on my son's hero list. Good. The guy was fair — at least the Disney version was. Granted, he fought Indians. He hunted animals for skins (it was another era). God knows what else he did wrong. But my son pays close attention to what he did right, like when Davy spares the life of the warring Indian Chief Red Stick and convinces him to accept peace.

"Why you no kill me?" Red Stick asks after losing in hand-to-hand combat with Crockett.

"Maybe because of another law," says Davy. "We have trouble living up to it. But it ain't bad for red man or white man alike. Thou shalt not kill." My son looks up from the TV and says, "Davy helped Red Stick be a good person?"

Why not emulate a legend who stood before the U.S. Congress and argued for equal treatment of races? Who lectured his colleagues in Congress about their responsibility to this "britches-bustin' young bear of a country ... to help make it grow into the nation the Good Lord meant it to be."

The violence? Davy Crockett is no Snow White. But come to think of it, I had a harder time answering why a stepmother would want to slip her beautiful stepdaughter a poisoned apple. It was easier explaining to my son why, after winning the keel boat race down the Mississippi against the King of the River, Davy graciously let Mike Fink keep his title. "That way, Davy gets a good friend for life," I tell him.

Questions Surround Cause, Treatment Of Colic

fic temperament than did the mothers of control infants," Lester said.

When Lester and his colleagues measured the activity of the vagus nerve in babies with colic, they found it was overstimulated. In adults and infants without colic, the vagus nerve is stimulated about three times a minute, according to measurement by an EGG or electrogastrogram that measures activity of the gut and is controlled by the vagus nerve. "But if you make an adult nauseous or nervous, then stimulation jumps from three cycles a minute to seven to 10 cycles a minute," Lester said. "It's the feeling of butterflies in the stomach."

Colicky babies in the study showed the same gastric stimulation and stomach tension, which Lester believes is caused by overstimulation of the vagus nerve. "We think this is what is going on in at least some colicky kids," Lester says. Hyperstimulation of the vagus nerve could also explain the high-pitched cry heard during colic attacks, given that the vagus nerve also stimulates the pharynx and the larynx, Lester said.

What might cause the vagus nerve to be overstimulated is still not known. It could be that babies with colic overreact to their surroundings, or they may be overstimulated because they have not yet developed a fine-tuned control of some of their physiological functions, Lester said. Additional research at Brown will investigate whether there is some way to help babies with colic better regulate nerve function.

In another report, researchers found that some infants with colic may be reacting to proteins from cow's milk. Studies presented by Anthony Kulczycki, a pediatrician at Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis, and fourth-year medical student Patrick Clyne suggests that babies with colic are sensitive to the immunoglobulin, IgG, from cow's milk.

For years, pediatricians have often recommended that nursing mothers eliminate many foods from their own diet, including milk and milk products, if their baby develops colic. This is one of the first studies to show that potentially irritating proteins from cow's milk are found in human breast milk and thus could be passed to a nursing baby.

In one study, Kulczycki and Clyne found that 88 of 97 nursing mothers had significant levels of cow IgG in their breast milk. In another study of 59 mothers of infants 2 to 17 weeks of age, they showed that 29 mothers of colicky infants had significantly higher levels of cow IgG in their milk than did mothers of babies without colic. In some cases, the mothers of babies with colic had levels of cow IgG that far exceeded the levels found in cow's milk infant formula.

"What these findings suggest is that bovine IgG may be one of the factors that is causing colic in infants," Kulczycki said. "We think this is a good bet for what is causing colic, but we are only pointing out an association; we can't prove it yet. There may be multiple causes of colic."

"To me, colic is exasperating and at the same time it is gratifying and fascinating," said the University of Pennsylvania's Carey. "It probably represents the earliest example in life of a poor fit, between normal variations of the infant and the environment."

One treatment that seems to help for some colicky babies is frequent holding and carrying. Ronald Barr, a pediatrician at the Montreal Children's Hospital, has found that babies who are carried everywhere — as they are in underdeveloped countries — rarely suffer from colic.

But whether constant carrying helps to soothe colic in babies in developed countries is still not known.

"Babies who are carried more seem to cry less," said Lester. But the other side of the issue is the question of spoiling a child and whether babies learn to console themselves on their own if they are carried all the time.
