Students' Hunger Strike Spreads As Gorbachev Watches

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — Hundreds of thousands of people converged on China's central square today in the most serious challenge yet to a government reeling from a month of pro-democracy protests.

It was by far the largest gathering so far in Tiananmen Square, where crowds stopped traffic on a six-lane avenue and nearly surrounded the adjacent Great Hall of the People, which was protected by hundreds of troops and police.

Embarrassing China's Communist leaders, the protesters — about 3,000 of them on a hunger strike since Saturday — have refused to leave the square during the first Sino-Soviet summit in 30 years. The added attention from Mikhail S. Gorbachev's visit seems to have encouraged them.

A scheduled meeting in the Great Hall between Gorbachev and China's Premier Li Peng was hastily moved to the state guest house about 3 miles away as entrances to the hall were clogged with students and on-lookers.

Because of the student occupation, officials already had to move the official welcoming ceremony for Gorbachev from the 100-acre square on Monday and cancel a wreath-laying ceremony today.

"Government — how long will you allow the students to starve?" read a banner carried by journalists of the conservative state-run Guangming Daily, one of thousands of red-and-white banners lofted by marchers.

More than 350 hunger strikers had been hospitalized suffering from dehydration and exposure by late today, although some later returned after treatment. A steady stream of ambulances with flashing blue lights entered the square.

Observers estimated today's crowd at more than 300,000, by far the largest crowd since pro-democracy demonstrations broke out on April 15.

The students want democratic reform, chiefly a free press, but another condition for ending the hunger strike is a government apology for an April 26 newspaper editorial that accused them of plotting against the state.

A top party official, Yan Mingfu, addressed the students in a speech over loudspeakers and said that he supported their demands. But he said the government needed more time to consider them and urged the students to leave. Fasting students took a hasty vote and decided to remain in the square.

Protest groups from at least eight newspapers, emboldened by the students' demand for freedom of the press, joined the march on the square. Another group of 800 from the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences was led by a trumpeteer.

"We are giving the government a push toward a more democratic state," said Zhang Yong, who reads the nightly English-language newscast on nationwide television.

Zhang, who wore sunglasses and handed out autographs, said his colleagues were "very, very embarrassed" by coverage of the protests censored by officials.

Workers, including factory laborers and coal miners, were prominent in the crowds, and employees of at least three government ministries also participated.

China, Soviet Union Normalize Relations

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — Mikhail S. Gorbachev and Deng Xiaoping shook hands today and normalized relations between the world's two Communist giants while outside their meeting hall tens of thousands of people chanted for democratic reform.

"We can take this opportunity to publicly announce the normalization of Sino-Soviet relations" after 30 years, Deng said to applause from Soviet and Chinese participants in the meeting.

The 84-year-old senior Chinese leader welcomed Gorbachev in the red-carpeted Eastern Hall of the Great Hall of the People as "comrade" but did not give him the bear hug he reserves for close friends and allies.

In the opening minutes of their 2½-hour meeting, he told the 58-year-old Soviet president that the world's "key political problems" have arisen from Soviet-American Cold War tensions.

That confrontation, he said, had helped prevent Sino-Soviet reconciliation but now "there may be a turning point in competition" between the two superpowers and "the situation is changing from confrontation to dialogue." The United States and China normalized relations in 1979.

One of the student demands is that Deng, the architect of China's economic reforms, step aside. They characterize Deng as a dictator who has served too long and is too old to understand the urgency for political reform.

But in a meeting with Gorbachev, Communist Party General Secretary Zhao Ziyang launched into an unusual defense of Deng, saying the party still needs his "wisdom and experience."

A Foreign Ministry spokesman quoted Li Peng as telling the Soviet leader: "China needs a peaceful environment externally and a stable environment internally. Only thus can we accomplish" modernization.

"We do not think that liberty, democracy and human rights are patent of capitalist countries," the premier said, adding that "China is prepared to perfect these aspects in its pursuit of political reform."

Foreign Ministry spokesman Li Zhaoxing said Deng and Gorbachev did not discuss the student demonstrations.

He said Gorbachev acknowledged that the Soviet Union had made "some errors" in past dealings with China but the two leaders agreed "that bygones are bygones. What is important is to look forward and do more tangible things."

Li said the two leaders discussed Cambodia, where Moscow-backed Vietnamese troops are fighting Beijing-backed resistance forces. "They shared some views but did not reach complete agreement," he said.

Ethics Rules Held Up For Two Months

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush today signed a two-month delay in new federal ethics rules blamed by some officials for a rash of resignations at the Defense Department, NASA and other agencies.

The new standards were to have taken effect today. In a one-sentence announcement, the White House said Bush had signed legislation to delay the measures.

The House on Monday approved by voice vote a White House request to delay by 60 days implementation of regulations aimed at curtailing the "revolving door" personnel relationship between some federal agencies and private industry.

The Senate last week approved the delay bill.

Some federal officials, including Thomas L. Moser, acting chief of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's space station program, have blamed the ethics regulations for their recent decisions to retire early.

The rules would ban federal contractors from hiring government officials who have supervised their competitors' projects, subject to maximum fines of $1 million and imprisonment of up to five years.

Rep. John Conyers Jr., D-Mich., chairman of the House Committee on Government Operations, said in a statement the delay was sought by the Pentagon and the Office of Management and Budget "so that both government and industry could have an opportunity to train their personnel regarding the new regulations."

The new rules are the result of legislation passed by Congress last year. However, the administration did not issue final regulations until last Thursday.

The bill delays implementation of the regulations until July 16.

Conyers said the delay did not mean the rules would go away.

"The committee has been assured both by the administration and by industry that the requested extension is not making an intent to seek legislative repeal or modification" of the new ethics law, he said.

Knowles Holds Line On City Tax

By Greg Laudick
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Greenville City Manager Greg Knowles has submitted for the City Council's consideration a record $21,027,439 budget package for 1989-90 that calls for no increase in local property taxes.

If approved, the city manager's recommended general fund budget would leave property tax rates at the current level of 55 cents per $100 of property valuation.

The 1989-90 budget proposal represents a 1.65 percent increase over the current fiscal year budget of $20,686,649.17.

"What the manager has presented us this year is a budget that is balanced according to what our projected revenues will be without any tax increase," said Mayor Pro Tem Lorraine Shinn at Monday's budget session at City Hall.

Included in the 1989-90 proposal is a departmental budget for the fire/rescue department of $2,424,002, an increase of 12.3 percent over the current year.

The manager has recommended the police department be allocated a proposed 1989-90 budget of $3,655,476, a 10.37 increase over the current year's package.

The increases include funds for three additional fire and rescue personnel and two additional police officers — an officer to work with the DARE Program and an additional detective.

Knowles said the proposed budget also includes funds for three additional maintenance workers in the parks and recreation department to further take care of its buildings and grounds.

"I feel real good about this budget," said Mayor Ed Carter on Monday. "I think the amount of expenditures versus income will be hopefully in line and I think for the first time in a number of years we won't have a tax increase."

Council member Nancy Jenkins also expressed satisfaction with the 1989-90 budget proposal.

"One of the prime credentials we looked at in hiring the city manager was that he was an expert in budgeting and I think that's reflected in this year's budget proposal," she said.

The council is scheduled to discuss the budget again at a session on Thursday before conducting a public hearing on the proposal on May 30.

The governing board will then make final budget adjustments at a session scheduled on June 12 before considering adoption on June 19.

School Board Reviews Capital Projects

By Cherie Evans
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

"Which way do we go?" is the question the Pitt County Board of Education continuously asked as it reviewed its capital outlay projects during a workshop meeting Monday night.

Deputy Superintendent John McKnight presented the revenue and expenditure forecasts for building needs in the schools from the 1989-90 year to the 1993-94 year.

At every turn, the board faced deleting instructional space.

"It's not easy to develop and more difficult to share," McKnight said of the plan.

Regulatory requirements and maintenance projects, additional classrooms at various schools, cafeteria renovations, conversion of Greenville Middle School into a high school and a new elementary school in the North Pitt attendance area are the major items that total about $18.6 million dollars in the five-year forecast.

Regulatory requirements include removing asbestos as required by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. Farmville Central High School tops the list at a cost to the school system of about $690,000 to remove asbestos from the ceiling tiles. Asbestos also will be removed

Test-Taker Accused Of Taking Real Estate Exam

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

An Elizabeth City man charged with stealing a real estate examination booklet from a testing center in Greenville is set to appear in Pitt District Court next month to face a felony charge.

Andrew Stubbington Lowell, 22, allegedly burst into a testing room at East Carolina University on April 22 and pulled an examination booklet from the hand of Mary Whitfield of Havelock, who was taking the test, said Larry Outlaw, director of education and licensing for the state Real Estate Commission. Lowell, who had finished taking his exam in a different classroom, allegedly ran from the room and escaped.

The stolen booklet contained 110 test questions for candidates seeking a real estate salesman's license. The commission has been giving the real estate tests since 1957, and Outlaw said this is the first time any type of test booklet has ever been stolen.

"In the history of the Real Estate Commission, this has never happened," he said. "We have never had a booklet stolen prior to this time."

"This particular incident was a very flagrant incident where the booklet was actually stolen out of a candidate's hand while a candidate was taking the exam," he said.

ECU Public Safety officers arrested Lowell on April 24 and charged him with felonious larceny. His probable cause hearing was continued from last week to June 9.

Lowell was one of about 80 people taking a real estate exam at ECU on April 22, but his test results are on hold pending any court action, Outlaw said.

The commission is interested in pursuing the criminal charges, Outlaw said, and it may file a civil suit at a later date. It will cost thousands of dollars to replace the test, he said.

"The North Carolina Real Estate Commission considers this to be an extremely serious concern. It is a very serious setback for us to lose an entire examination booklet," Outlaw said. "It is a serious loss for us, but we will replace the questions that we have had to basically flag.

"No candidate will ever see those questions verbatim again," he said.

The commission maintains a computer bank of potential questions, and only certain employees have access to the computer file. The questions in the stolen booklet will be purged from the question bank, Outlaw said. There is no evidence that Lowell made the booklet or test questions available to anyone else, he said.

No candidates who took the test April 22 will have to be retested because of the incident, he said.

Outlaw said the real estate commission has a contractual agreement with ECU to offer the test on campus, and officials of the university's testing office administer the exam. The commission is currently evaluating the security measures used during the tests, and Outlaw said it is likely that security will be upgraded in the future.

The next test date at ECU is Saturday.

Real estate exams for both a salesman's license and a broker's license are given one day each month at nine different locations in the state. A salesman and a broker may perform the same jobs, Outlaw said, but a salesman must work under the direct supervision of a licensed broker. A candidate for a broker's license must take a different test and meet stricter requirements.

Voting Period Opens New East Bank Gets Charter

Farmville voters will go to the polls June 13 or vote absentee in advance, beginning today, on whether the town should institute a council-manager form of government.

Application for absentee ballots for the town referendum can begin today and continue through June 6, said Margaret Hardee, Pitt County elections supervisor.

To vote by absentee ballot, a voter may obtain an application any time through June 7 and must have the ballot returned for receipt in the elections office by 5 p.m. June 12 for it to be counted, Mrs. Hardee said.

Books for new registrations for this election closed Monday. Farmville residents already on the books did not have to reregister. Registration for future elections continues, Mrs. Hardee said.

Only registered residents of Farmville will be eligible to vote on June 13 and polls will be open at the regular polling place in the Community Center, 417 S. Main St., Farmville, from 6:30 a.m. until 7:30 p.m.

New East Bank Gets Charter

New East Bank of Greenville has been granted a charter by the North Carolina Banking Commission, making it, according to commission records, the first bank to be state-chartered in Pitt County in 58 years.

The charter was granted Friday at a commission meeting in Pinehurst.

Syd W. Dunn, chairman of the new bank's board of directors, said New East Bank is locally owned and will be locally managed. Jerry W. Powell, formerly with Branch Banking and Trust in its Greenville office, will serve as the bank's president.

According to Ray Grace, N.C. Banking Commission examiner, the last bank chartered in Pitt County was State Bank of Greenville in 1931. It later merged with North Carolina National Bank.

According to Dunn, the last Greenville bank structured similarly to New East was First State Bank of Winterville which merged with First Citizens in 1985.

Also granted a charter Friday was New East Bank of Fayetteville. The commission had earlier granted charters to New East Bancorp, a multibank holding company, for banks in Goldsboro and Elizabeth City.

Manager Charged With Embezzlement

BETHEL — A fugitive from Michigan has been arrested by Bethel authorities on charges of embezzling over $6,000 in parts and equipment from an area manufacturer.

Bethel Police Chief J.B. Buell said Norman Douglass Gardner, 40, of Route 6, Greenville, was arrested last week and charged with two counts of embezzlement. Buell said Gardner is charged with stealing parts and equipment from his employer, Package Craft Inc. of Bethel, which manufactures boxes.

Gardner, plant manager at Package Craft, allegedly sold $3,000 worth of parts to a Raleigh manufacturer, Buell said. He had rented a building at Scott's Crossroads in Edgecombe County and planned to start his own manufacturing business, according to the chief.

Buell said several Greenville residents had agreed to invest in Gardner's business venture, but none of the potential investors ever gave any money.

"They were lucky," Buell said.

Gardner, who had been living in Pitt County about 10 months, is wanted in Michigan on warrants issued in 1983, Buell said. Gardner allegedly violated parole in Michigan after serving 18 months of a two- to five-year prison sentence for sexual offenses.

He is being held without bond on the parole violation, and Michigan authorities have requested that Gardner be prosecuted on the Pitt County charges before being extradited, Buell said.

While authorities have recovered more than $6,000 in parts, Buell said the embezzling may have been more extensive, and additional parts may be recovered later.

"It could be widespread. We're not sure," Buell said.

The investigation began in mid-April, Buell said, when Package Craft officials told Buell they suspected parts and equipment were missing. Gardner had already resigned to pursue his own business.

Warren Proposes Education Study

State Rep. Ed Warren of Greenville has introduced a bill asking members of the General Assembly to put into motion a plan which he says ultimately will strengthen the state's educational system.

The bill, House number 1666, calls for the creation of a study commission representing all levels of education — public schools, community colleges and universities — to review such things as teacher salaries and to provide recommendations on possible short- and long-range funding solutions.

Other areas targeted by the bill for commission attention include new buildings, repairs and renovations, school dropout rates, reduction of remediation in the state's community college and university systems and cooperative system use of facilities, equipment and faculty.

"There is a drastic need to bring representatives from all three levels of public education as well as representatives from government and business and industry together to find solutions to the pressing problems we face in education today," Warren said.

"This kind of think-tank approach worked for the Highway Study Commission, which came up with a number of fruitful plans to improve the state's transportation system. The concept can work for education, too," he said.

Those listed as members for the proposed education commission include the state superintendent of public instruction, chairmen of the state board of education, the board of community colleges and the University of North Carolina board of governors, presidents of the state community college system and the University of North Carolina, one representative from business and industry, and three appointees each to be made by the speaker of the House, the president pro tempore of the Senate and the governor.

Supporters are asking for a total of $75,000 to support the study, according to Warren.

School Building Needs Studied

from around boiler pipes at Ayden Elementary at a cost of $12,500; G.R. Whitfield, $3,700; H.B. Sugg, $2,400, and the central office, from $6,000 to $8,000.

Money also is included to pay for new equipment for the school system's child nutrition program. Funds for the equipment initially was taken from the nutrition program's budget, but financial losses in the program in addition to funds needed to equalize the programs throughout the schools and to keep up with increased costs of labor and food have negated the ability to buy new equipment with the child nutrition budget.

Fire code deficiencies and roof repairs also are included in the project needs.

Dance floors, paving, air conditioning, cafeteria renovations and furniture are among the things that were cut from list of projects, McKnight said.

While some of those items initially were required by the state's Basic Education Plan, Superintendent Eddie West said proposed changes in the BEP would allow for more flexibility in what the school system has to provide.

McKnight said the school system will only have about $16.4 million to pay for the proposed projects, which leaves a shortage of $2.2 million.

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners offered the school system about $20 million in increments of $4 million over the next five years for capital needs after having denied a request by the education board for a bond referendum of $25.7 million.

The $4 million will be used not only for capital projects, but it also will be used to make a payment on the Boys' Club property and to pay for maintaining schools buses and maintenance trucks.

The board agreed to explore several options to find the funds needed for the projects, including asking Pitt commissioners to loan it the extra $2.2 million until it receives the $3.5 million from the sale of the J.H. Rose High School facility to East Carolina University.

"Sale of J.H. Rose property will, at some point, net the system $3.5 million but does not provide timely relief for the completion of the projects outlined," McKnight said. "The difference lies not only in the total amount of money but when you have to have it."

Other options include exploring various uses of Third Street, Sadie Sautler and Agnes Fullilove schools.

Greater use of the Third Street School facility will be explored because of the 13.36 acres of the property, which would allow for some expansion. Halting the current addition of eight classrooms at Sadie Sautler School is being explored as the use of that facility is reconsidered.

In an analysis presented as an example, McKnight said, "If Sadie Sautler were moved to Third Street we would need seven classrooms, kitchen renovations and library renovations at an estimated cost of $570,000 plus $34,200 in architect's fees. The four-year old program (being considered by the board) would be eliminated. Current addition of eight classrooms would be halted with a forfeit of the architect's fees (of about $30,000). That I know would have an adverse impact on the county commissioners.

"If Agnes Fullilove were moved to Sadie Sautler there would be 400 excess student spaces. Some itinerant personnel, Community Schools, and so forth, could be housed there if Grace Church were sold. Estimated proceeds from the sale are $600,000, which is what we paid for it," McKnight said. "We've actually improved the building but destroyed the sanctuary."

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Off Pitch

Before Clapping, Wait For The Reply

The latest dialogue about a regional activity center for East Carolina University has a nice ring to it, but if you listen closely, it's a little off key.

According to Sen. Marc Basnight, D-Dare, Greenville and East Carolina University will receive the same consideration for funding a regional activity center as North Carolina State University and Appalachian State University, both of which are also asking the state for project money.

"What occurs at N.C. State will occur at East Carolina in Greenville," Basnight said Monday at a chamber of commerce meeting in Greenville. If a center is funded for NCSU, "you in Greenville will not be left out," he said.

'But before the region applauds Basnight's remarks, it should ask him to answer a question ...'

On the surface those words sound soothing to a region that has consistently been written too small a state check for its needs. Basnight, from the East, and chairman of the state Senate Budget Committee — seemed to be assuring Greenville — and eastern North Carolina — the two would get their fair share.

But before the region applauds Basnight's remarks, it should ask him to answer a question — exactly why should the documented need for a regional activity center in Greenville depend on the fate of requests from two other communities and two other universities? Why should ECU wait in the wings for the N.C. State project to take off?

Whether he meant to or not, what Basnight really said was "If N.C. State gets a new basketball arena then ECU can have its regional activity center." Here's where the tune gets a little off pitch.

ECU officials have appropriately and correctly placed the expansion of Joyner Library as its top priority 1989-90 budget request. Academic needs correctly take precedence over other spending and a library is the heart of a university's integrity. It provides the tools and raw materials for learning. Students and faculty are dependent upon a good library to build a solid education. The need to expand Joyner is urgent and the $24 million requested for the project should be made available.

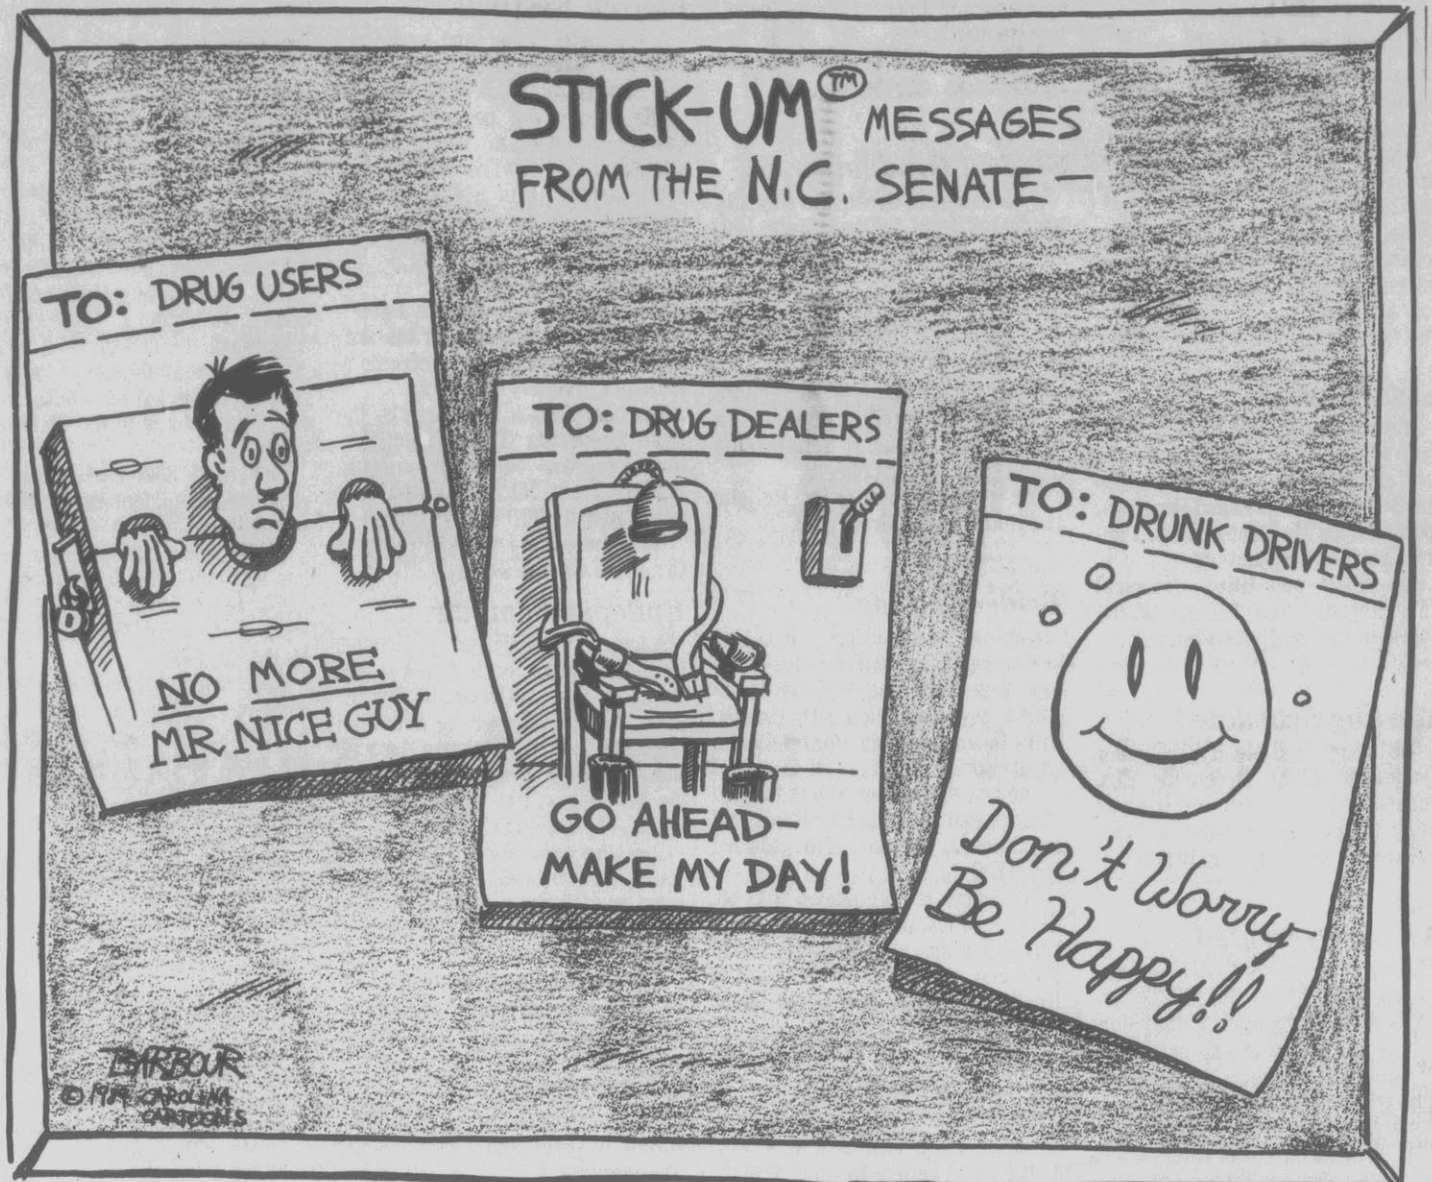

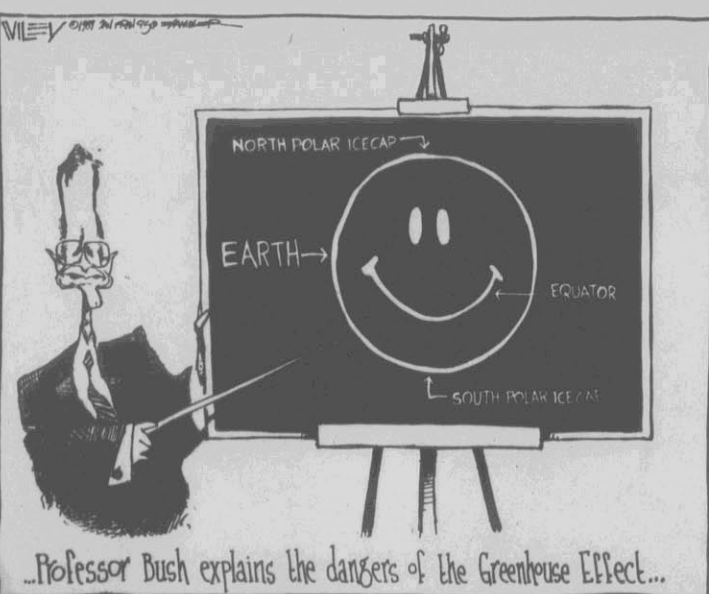

But that doesn't lessen the need for a regional activity center at ECU. And it certainly doesn't make acceptable for the fate of that request to depend on what happens at N.C. State.

Raleigh has several centers where meetings or events can be housed. The McKimmon Center, the Raleigh Civic Center, Dorton Arena — all these can accommodate large groups or crowds.

Yet the East has none. ECU draws large and distinguished meetings. Greenville, because of its geographic location, its good travel connections and its amenities, attracts diverse groups. Yet there is no place big enough to suitably house large meetings or conventions. Anything that won't fit in one of the hotel meeting rooms or one of the auditoriums at the university has to be held in a tobacco warehouse.

That's why it's unfair to suggest that ECU's need for such a center depends on N.C. State's need. That's why Sen. Basnight's seemingly pleasant words hit a few sour notes — whether he meant them to or not.

If Basnight was reassuring ECU it would not be left out when funds are divided, that's fine. But if he was in any way suggesting — as it sounds — that the future of a regional activity center depends on whether N.C. State merits a similar expenditure, that's wrong.

The Trouble With Single-Mindedness

WASHINGTON — The trouble with the early months of the Bush administration, the pundits and political mavens insist, is that the new President is insufficiently single-minded.

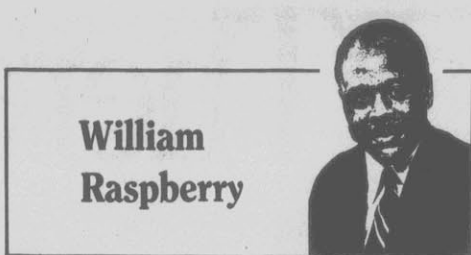

They don't put it quite that way, of course. What they say is that he refuses to select an issue or two for sustained emphasis, that he flits from issue to issue: the budget, political ethics, drugs, arms control, education — everything. What is wrong with this approach, according to these voluntary advisers, is that if everything is a priority, nothing is a priority, and nothing substantive gets done.

Two officials of the General Accounting Office have offered the same advice to William J. Bennett, director of the Office of National Drug Control Policy.

Instead of trying to do everything in pursuit of the ideal of a "drug-free society," John L. Viallet and Ronald G. Viereck write in the spring issue of the GAO Journal, Bennett would be better off "establishing well-defined goals that are realistically attainable with limited resources."

As an illustration of the wrong way to do things, Viallet and Viereck point to the strategy recommended last year by the National Drug Policy Board, which, until Bennett's appointment, had oversight authority for all aspects of the federal anti-drug effort.

"The National Drug Strategy is broken down into nine specific strategies," they say, "five dealing with supply reduction, four geared toward demand reduction. These strategies are further broken down into a set of objectives, including: eliminating international drug-trafficking cartels; increasing cooperation in global narcotics control; reducing the flow of cocaine; seizing drugs shipped in containers, hidden in general cargo, secreted aboard commercial vessels, and carried by passengers and crews; assisting local law-enforcement agencies; providing leadership to increase awareness of the drug threat; enlisting community leaders as role models; ensuring that drug treatment is readily available; and identifying drug users and encouraging them to enter treatment programs.

"The objectives set out in the strategy are sweeping — so sweeping, in fact, that it is unrealistic to expect that they can all be accomplished with the money now devoted to federal anti-drug efforts.

"In setting the goal of a 'drug-free America,' the strategy makes everything a priority, and therefore provides no basis for deciding where scarce resources should be focused."

So what should be Bennett's priorities? The GAO critics, having no policy axes to grind, don't say. They do list some "possible approaches," among them:

- Focus on ways to reduce the violence associated with drug-dealing in such places as Washington, Los Angeles and Detroit.
- Pay special attention to high-level international cocaine traffickers — the Colombian cartels or the Jamaican "posses," for example. •Put the primary emphasis on the demand side — whether by educational programs, treatment-on-demand for addicts, or stiff penalties for drug purchasers.

Their point, given the limited federal resources available for the drug fight: to emphasize one approach is to de-emphasize the others. The more federal assistance given to local-enforcement efforts, for example, the less is available for interdiction efforts. Moreover, each approach has its own built-in pitfalls. Washington's "Operation Clean Sweep" resulted in thousands of arrests of drug suspects but overburdened the courts, the treatment centers and the prison system. In hundreds of cases, the dealers were back on the street while the arresting officers were still processing the paperwork.

"That's the problem with the National Drug Strategy," say Viallet and Viereck, who stress that their views are not necessarily those of the GAO. "Its objectives are too all-inclusive to be achieved with the money likely to be available. A 'drug-free America' is such a broad, ill-defined term that, in today's world, it has become a rhetorical device rather than a realistic goal. Its use implies that the country can 'have it all' — that it's not necessary to make choices...If the government were to try to pursue every objective outlined in the National Drug Strategy, its efforts would be doomed to perpetual failure."

Is Bennett falling into the make-everything-a-priority trap? His views on how the government ought to proceed in the war on drugs will be the subject of a subsequent column.

Flowers For Us All

Richard Cohen

WASHINGTON — Recently, I went to the spot in New York's Central Park where a 28-year-old investment banker was raped, stabbed and beaten almost to the point of death. A little wire fence had been planted in the soil, spring flowers placed on the ground and notes left to "the runner." In the aftermath of a severe beating, she has become an urban martyr: Our Lady of the Park.

Nearby and in formation, marched maybe a dozen Guardian Angels, the anti-crime volunteers. They were uniformed in orange, berets atop their heads, and they swung past the shrine like priests in a church procession. The Angels were heading to a place where, in their vivid imaginations, they would fight crime.

This was an unimaginable moment, a snapshot of incredible craziness but one worth pondering. Think, if you are old enough, of what life used to be like. Summon up a grandparent, raise him from the dead and recount what has become of urban America. Read him the papers and show him television and then take him for a walk.

I would conjure up my grandfather and I would say, as we walk, that in the last year my apartment was burglarized in Washington and my car stolen in New York. In Washington, the school board plans to put metal detectors in the schools. In New York, signs in car windows say "No Radio." The cars are Mercedes and BMWs. Their owners spent $60,000 and up for them, yet for all that, they can't even have a car radio.

To get into my office in Washington, I must show a building pass. Young people must suppose that was always the practice, but it wasn't. Once, you could walk into any building. Now you have to have a pass or sign in. Now, in some buildings, you have to have an elevator pass, a card to insert into a slot to inform the elevator that you are friendly.

In New York, the really wealthy in their incredibly expensive apartment houses have elevators that are programmed by the doorman. In the Washington suburbs — in any suburb — residents have burglar alarms and almost medieval door locks, contraptions of weighty complexity. In Los Angeles, lawns are seeded with warning signs from security firms, and in the capital of the nation, office workers all wear the same jewelry — a pass hung round the neck on a cheap chain.

My block has a street sign that warns criminals: "Neighborhood Watch." My windows have bars. We all live by certain rules: Do not run in the park at night; avoid certain areas. I return from trips wondering if my apartment has been burglarized. I think about street crime and, sometimes, carry just a bit of money so I will have something to hand over. Don't want to anger the punks, after all.

Once, I tried to think of lust as an industry. I thought of what would happen if, somehow, lust disappeared. Would there be an economic depression? Motels and hotels would suffer. Florists would go broke. The lingerie industry would go into a slump. Resorts would fold, the airlines would suffer and dark and smoky restaurants would go out of business.

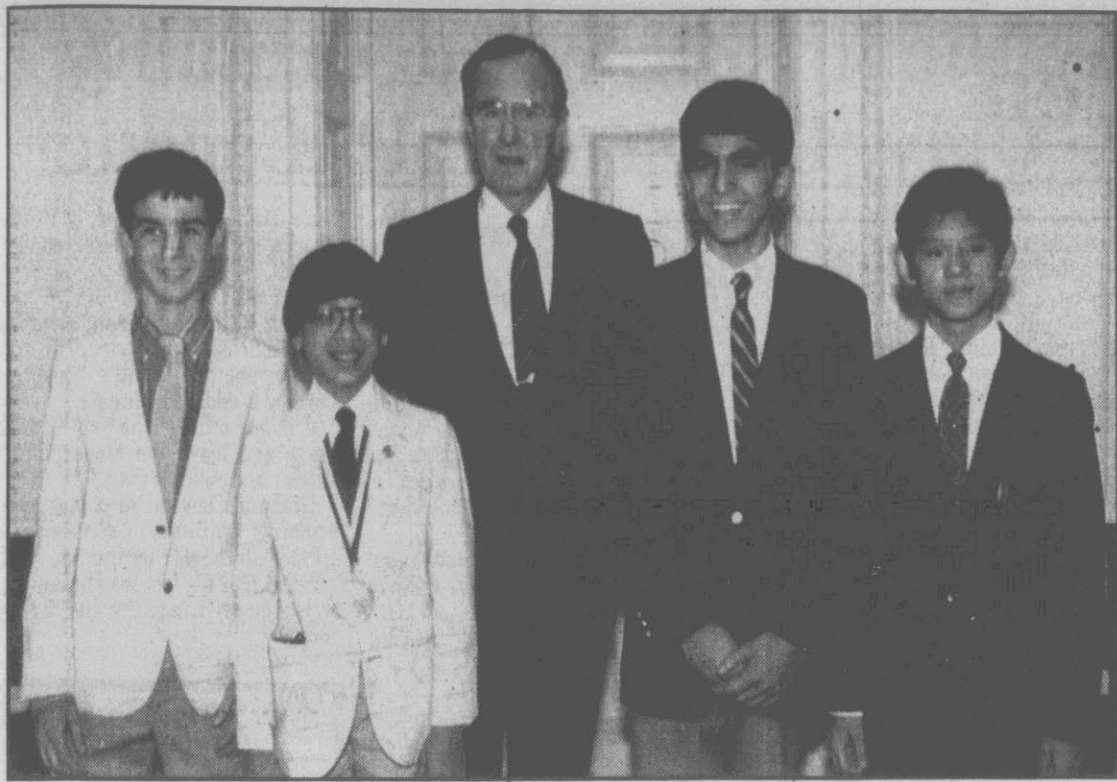

But think of the industry of crime. Can we calculate the cost of it? Crime prevention must be America's No. 1 enterprise — perhaps what the auto or steel industry used to be. What's the cost of security guards, metal detectors, added police, the courts and jails? What's the cost of the paranoid elevator that won't let you up — or of the little chain around so many necks? What is the total cost of window bars and reinforced doors, of muscled-up locks and security systems?

And what is the psychic cost? If I am told that worrying can take years off my life, then what is the national cost of constantly worrying about crime? For the city dweller, crime has become as omnipresent a thought as sex. We think of crime all the time: Where shall we park our car? How will we get to it? I use one automatic cash machine by day, another by night because I deem the night area safer.

Recently, I visited a rural area. Some of its residents had come from big cities, and a few felt compelled to explain the circumstances that had taken them to what some call "the sticks." But all I wondered about was crime: Is there crime? If there isn't — if it's minimal and no real threat — then maybe the swap was worth it. Take the movies, restaurants, bookstores and FM radio stations with their Brahms quintets — and exchange it all for peace of mind.

Maybe by now the Little Shrine in the Park is gone. But if it is, the memory will certainly linger — of the flowers, the notes, the Guardian Angels, the passers-by pausing to take it all in. Like all memorials, it raises a question: What are we mourning — the woman who was brutalized, or the way things once were? A flower for her. Flowers for us all.

House-Senate Dispute Throws Cloud Over Fate Of Legislation

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A House-Senate dispute that has left hundreds of bills clouded in uncertainty is being blown out of proportion and will be resolved soon, House Speaker Joe Mavretic insists.

"I've said a dozen times if we can put a man on the moon, we can work this out," Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, told reporters Monday. "This is a molehill that's being blown into a mountain."

Mavretic said the only reason no progress was made Monday was that Senate President Pro Tem Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, has been out of the state since Saturday because of the death of his father-in-law.

The speaker commented after meeting with House Democratic leader Dennis Wicker, D-Lee, who had voiced concern that the House might be reneging on a deal with the Senate.

At issue is the fate of bills that failed to clear either the House or Senate by last week's deadline.

House leaders interpret the rule to mean that such bills remain alive in the chamber where they originated. If passed by that body, they can be considered by the other during the 1990 "short" session, the House says.

Senate leaders say bills that failed to pass either the House or Senate by last Thursday are dead until the next full-length session in 1991.

As the matter remained unresolved last week, Mavretic refused to "read in" bills passed by the Senate — a technical maneuver that had the effect of refusing to accept the Senate bills and refer them to committees. Mavretic also failed to read Senate bills Monday, surprising Wicker, who said House Democrats in a caucus last week had been led to believe it would be done.

If the Senate position on the rule prevails, all their bills passed last week — more than 100 — will die, Mavretic said. Among them are measures to allow furniture retailers to continue telephone sales; to outlaw discrimination against AIDS virus carriers; and to limit the governor to six-year terms.

Meanwhile, the Senate has been accepting House bills but referring them to the Ways and Means Committee instead of the panels to which they normally would have gone. No action on the measures is likely until the House accepts pending Senate bills.

Tar Heels Win Mathematics Contest

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Four North Carolina mathematics whizzes returned to North Carolina Monday after dazzling judges at a national mathematics contest and visiting with President Bush at the White House.

Shortly after arriving from Washington at Raleigh-Durham International Airport, three of the youngsters smiled meekly while their parents and friends gave them flowers and balloons. Some onlookers cheered and held congratulatory banners, while curious businessmen and other travelers watched.

The Raleigh-Durham group was made up of three young mathematics whizzes — from Chapel Hill, Cary and Southern Pines — who had just won a national math contest for seventh- and eighth-grade students. A fourth team member — Alex Morcos — went home to Greensboro aboard a different flight.

The team's anchor was Lenny Ng, 12, a student at Guy B. Phillips Junior High School in Chapel Hill.

Other members of the team were Steven McInerney of Southern Pines and Anthony Ky of Cary.

The young math whizzes said they'd had a pleasant Oval Office visit with the president. The chat mostly concerned the contest, called the National MathCounts Finals.

"He was really friendly with us," said Ky, 14, who attends Ligon Middle School in Cary.

The team members said they had been confident they could compete with the nation's other math geniuses.

Fingers Reattached

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Doctors say it will be several days before they know if they were successful in surgery to reattach three of five fingers severed from a 3-year-old boy's right hand by lawn mower blades.

Derrick Paul Rhodes fell off the back of a riding mower driven by his father, James Rhodes, at their Charlotte apartment complex about 8 p.m. Friday.

"We knew we would do well," said McInerney, 14, who takes math correspondence courses from Duke University. "We were hoping for the top five."

Lenny's previous accomplishments include scoring a perfect 800 on the math portion of the Scholastic Aptitude Test, taking top honors against older students in a statewide Algebra II contest and capturing first place in a regional spelling bee.

The competition featured complex word problems and questions such as "If 216 is expressed as the sum of six consecutive odd integers, what is the largest addend?" Lenny said the easiest question went something like this: "What is one minus one-half to the negative second power?"

Lenny didn't win the top prize in the MathCounts individual category, but he said that didn't bother him.

"I was really happy I got second place," he said, holding flowers and trophies for the television cameras that surrounded him and his teammates. He quickly pointed out that he took first in the written portion of the test and dropped to second after the oral part.

Lenny, who won a $6,000 scholarship for his second-place finish, also will be competing in a national spelling bee later this month. But he said he didn't like his chances in that contest.

Still, his teachers say he shouldn't be counted out of anything. Elizabeth E. Chase, a math teacher at Phillips, said his success was easy to explain.

"Lenny," she said, "never makes the same mistake twice."

Permit Denied

ROANOKE RAPIDS, N.C. (AP) — The state Division of Environmental Management has rejected an air quality permit for a proposed medical disposal plant in Halifax County that would burn up to 100 tons of waste a day.

Division Director R. Paul Wilms notified the Operating Co. of Halifax Inc. that its request for an air quality permit for two incinerators had been denied because the firm's parent company had failed to follow environmental laws in a number of cases in other states.

Insurance Costs

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Experts disagree on how much North Carolina car insurance costs have climbed in the last five years, but one thing is sure: Tar Heel drivers on average pay less for insurance than drivers in most other states.

An industry survey says North Carolina car insurance costs have climbed by 94 percent in five years. On the other hand, state Insurance Commissioner Jim Long says premiums rose just 17 percent from 1984 to 1989.

Long based his estimate on the increases on the insurance companies' state-approved rate schedule.

An annual survey by A.M. Best Co. — the source of the 94 percent figure — shows North Carolina ranking 36th highest among 50 states and the District of Columbia in 1987 premiums. That is up from 46th in 1983. Best said it estimated insurance costs of an average $408 per car in 1987, when the national average was $487. South Carolina ranked 16th at $515.

War Monument

RALEIGH (AP) — Objections to placing a large veterans' war monument on the state Capitol grounds might be growing, with a Raleigh lawyer and a local historian suggesting the monument be moved to another location.

And a Wake County legislator said she would approach legislative leaders to see what can be done. "It caught us all totally by surprise," Rep. Peggy Stamey, D-Wake said. "We were just caught totally unaware on the size of the thing."

The monument is to be 42½ feet high. Its width is 44 feet from east to west, including a 5-foot-wide access ramp that wraps around its sides and back. The depth from front to back is 30 feet.

Since the memorial's design was unveiled, a debate has surfaced over whether its size would detract from the view of the Capitol. Veterans on the commission that approved the design have defended the location as appropriate.

Justices Say Victims Of Police Brutality Need Prove Only 'Unreasonable' Conduct

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ruling on a case against the Charlotte police department, the U.S. Supreme Court says people who sue claiming police brutality must prove only that officers acted unreasonably, not "maliciously and sadistically."

Chief Justice William Rehnquist, writing for the unanimous court, said in an opinion released Monday that the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals had wrongly dismissed Dethorn Graham's civil rights suit after ruling he had failed to prove police had acted maliciously and sadistically.

"We get a new trial? Whooooee!" Graham, 44, said Monday after learning of the court's ruling. "I'm glad."

"I think that my belief in what a police officer was 30 years ago still stands," Graham said. "The law is flexible, but I can't see what they did as being just. It just wasn't."

Under a 1973 Supreme Court decision, the "malicious and sadistic" standard of proof is required for prison inmates suing officials over alleged physical abuse.

But Rehnquist said a different standard applies "in the context of an arrest or investigatory stop of a free citizen."

Such incidents, the high court said, should be judged with a focus on the Fourth Amendment's requirement that police conduct be reasonable.

Most other federal appeals courts already had adopted the "reasonableness" standard for cases such as Graham's, but the 4th Circuit court's ruling — until Monday — had set a different precedent for Maryland, North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia and West Virginia.

"This decision does not represent a decision on the merits of the case," said Randy Means, an attorney for the Charlotte Police Department.

"The Supreme Court of the United States has not found that excessive force was used," Means said. "Rather, they have found a procedural error on the judge's part, and they're sending the case back for reconsideration on that procedural point."

Graham, then a state Department of Transportation maintenance worker, sued Charlotte and five police officers over a Nov. 12, 1984, incident near his home.

Graham's lawsuit said he was at home working on an automobile when he felt a diabetic reaction, caused by a reduced level of sugar in his blood, coming on.

The suit said Graham had a friend drive him to a nearby store, and then rushed in to pick up some orange juice to supplement his blood sugar.

Graham rushed out of the store without waiting in a long check-out line, and asked his friend to drive him to another friend's house, according to court documents.

A police officer who saw Graham enter and leave the store pursued the car and pulled it over.

Graham's lawsuit said that in the ensuing minutes Graham was treated so roughly by the five police officers that his foot was broken, his wrists cut by handcuffs and his face hurt.

House Post Office Jammed By Mail

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — If you're looking to your congressman for help with a problem, you'd be best advised to pick up the phone and give him a call.

According to Rep. Steve Neal's office, a huge backlog of mail in the House Post Office has caused letters to be delayed up to three weeks. The House Postmaster has warned that it will take 10 days to deliver any mail once it arrives at the House, said Rob Wrigley, Neal's administrative assistant.

"If you've got a real emergency, you'd better call us and not write us," Wrigley said.

Wrigley pointed to the case of a woman who sent an anonymous letter a few years ago saying that she was destitute and had no food. Aides to Neal, a Democrat from Winston-Salem, tracked her down and provided emergency help.

"If the mail system today had been in operation then, I don't know what would have happened," he said.

Invitations, too, are better sent by phone or by facsimile machine. For example, Rep. J. Howard Coble, a Republican from Greensboro, received an invitation last Friday to an event that took place nine days earlier. The invitation had been sent a week in advance.

Ed McDonald, Coble's administrative assistant, said he received a postcard Monday that one of his colleagues sent last month from California. "She's been back in Washington two weeks," he said.

Congressmen have watched their mail grow steadily in recent years, but this year the volume jumped dramatically, Wrigley said. One day last week, he said, the first of the three daily deliveries brought in 3-foot-high bundles of mail.

McDonald said letter-writing campaigns by lobbying groups are largely responsible for the increase.

"Even if they're individually drafted, a lot of them (the letters) have the same language. It's definitely a concerted effort on the parts of different groups to get a message through to us," he said.

The hottest topics this year, according to the offices of Neal and Coble, have been the catastrophic health-insurance premiums, gun control, congressional pay and abortion.

There was no indication whether the Senate has been affected by a similar backlog.

GAO Says Billions Lost On Loophole

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Treasury is losing billions of dollars because employers — including the government itself — fail to withhold taxes from the paychecks of workers who are erroneously designated as "independent contractors," the General Accounting Office said today.

GAO placed a good share of the blame on Congress which, in an effort 10 years ago to curtail the Internal Revenue Service, made it more difficult to crack down on employers who violate the withholding provisions.

Paul L. Posner, a GAO associate director, said in testimony prepared for a House Government Operations subcommittee that the failure of workers designated as independent contractors to report some or all their income is at the root of the revenue loss.

In turn, GAO found, employers are not complying with requirements that they file reports with the IRS on payments made to individual contractors. Even when auditing business tax returns, the report said, the IRS is not identifying businesses that fail to file such reports.

"The importance of employers filing required information returns on payments made to independent contractors cannot be overemphasized," Posner said. "IRS officials estimate that billions in taxes are lost because independent contractors do not report all income."

Posner told the subcommittee on consumer affairs that in 1984 alone, the IRS estimated it lost $1.6 billion because about one of every seven employers misidentified employees as independent contractors.

Independent contractors are companies or individuals who supply services to a business or government agency but do not have an employee relationship with the business or agency. There are numerous tests to determine whether a worker is an employee or independent contractor, including who controls working hours.

If a supplier is classified as an employee, a business must withhold income and Social Security taxes from his or her paycheck and pay an employer's share of Social Security taxes.

However, if that supplier is said to be an independent contractor, the business withholds no tax and pays no employer's share of Social Security tax. The Treasury loses again when the contractor claims business deductions.

U.S. Losing Edge In High-Tech Defense

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Increasing foreign competition, too many laws and too many problems in research have combined to help reduce the once-large U.S. advantage in a variety of defense technologies, a study released today said.

"The model of U.S. technology leading the world, with defense technology leading the United States, still retains some validity," said the report. "But it is a diminishingly accurate image of reality."

The report was prepared by the Office of Technology Assessment, a congressional agency.

The Pentagon now spends about $9 billion a year on a variety of technology programs, including research, exploratory development and advanced demonstration.

The laboratories where some of the research is conducted are government-owned, and "there has been a continuing and, in recent years, rising concern that they are inefficient, ineffective, self-serving and duplicative of industry work, and increasingly hampered in doing their jobs by the conditions of being part of the government," the report said.

Specifically, the report found it takes the Pentagon longer to translate lab advances in the laboratory into fielded military systems. That conclusion echoes previous findings by other studies of how the Pentagon builds weapons.

The report also found that a large amount of technology often comes from industries that sell to both military and civilian customers.

In many instances, these "dual-use industries" are international, a situation that creates tough competition for U.S. companies and makes the United States more dependent on foreign supplies, the study found.

"U.S. leadership in high-technology industries that are vital to defense is eroding in the face of strong international competition," the report said.

Another problem is the myriad of government rules and laws limiting the ability of the Pentagon to develop technology, the report said. Congress enacted the laws to prevent abuses, but the vast number have made the technology system "slow, cumbersome and inefficient."

Oil-Injured Otters Go Back Home

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — Seven otters pulled from oil-polluted Prince William Sound nearly two months ago have become the first to be returned to the waterway and are tagged with radar clips for monitoring.

The otter release came as commercial fishermen opened the halibut season Monday and a day before today's start of hearings into the nation's worst oil spill.

The tanker Exxon Valdez ran aground March 24 on a charted reef 25 miles south of Valdez. It leaked nearly 11 million gallons of oil, polluting hundreds of miles of shoreline and killing countless birds, fish and marine mammals.

The four male and three female otters were freed Monday into Simpson Bay, about 25 miles northwest of Cordova.

"That's something very measurable," said Coast Guard Vice Adm. Clyde Robbins, the federal cleanup coordinator. "Everybody can see that and understand that, and that's why I like it."

The first otter was released at the shore of a shale- and shell-covered beach. She waddled into the water, turned around and lifted a paw as if to wave at the 30 onlookers, who cheered at the sight.

The animals had been undergoing treatment at an Exxon-funded rehabilitation center in Valdez where 45 other otters remain under observation.

"It's the happiest day for the otter rescue center," Director Randall Davis said.

Simpson Bay was chosen because it was untouched by oil, has a stable food source and has a large otter population, Davis said.

Despite the radar, tracking won't be easy, biologist Chuck Monnett said. The signals can be picked up only while the flippers are out of the water, but wildlife watchers hope the flippers' movement during swimming will provide an adequate signal.

"This will be an excellent opportunity to learn more about the animals' behavior once they are returned to the wild," biologist Gary Sonnevil said.

The seven otters were selected because they appeared fully rehabilitated. "Blood samples appear normal, and the otters' fur once again will fully insulate the animals," Davis said.

Tourism

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Almost every county in western North Carolina saw an increase in spending by tourists in 1988, including Madison County, where visitors spent near three times more than in 1987, officials say.

Travel expenditures in western North Carolina increased 9.3 percent from 1987 to 1988, a rise from $780,319,000 to $839,604,000. The rate for the region exceeded the 8.2 percent increase for the state as a whole.

Overall, 17 of 19 counties in western North Carolina had an increase in travel expenditures, the commerce department reports.

Statewide, tourism expenditures increased from $5.7 billion in 1987 to $6.2 billion in 1988, according to figures from the Department of Commerce.

tion movie crashed and exploded today, killing at least two Americans and injuring five other people, officials said.

Police said the injured included four Americans and the Filipino pilot, and all were in critical condition.

Investigator Joey Dimapilis said the Dolphin helicopter crashed at the foot of a hill near a mansion once owned by former President Ferdinand Marcos in Tagaytay, a mountain resort city 30 miles south of Manila.

Dimapilis said the helicopter was being used by the crew filming "Delta Force 2," starring American actor Chuck Norris. He said the bodies were charred.

The Rescue Coordinating Center and the film crew identified the two dead as Don Marshall and Gaddi Dansik. No hometowns were available.

The center said a third American may have been killed. But a member of the crew, Roland Santos, said they could confirm only Marshall and Dansik had been killed.

According to the center, the five injured were in critical condition and could not be moved. An aircraft from the U.S.-run Subic Bay naval base was to fly to the crash site to pick up the injured.

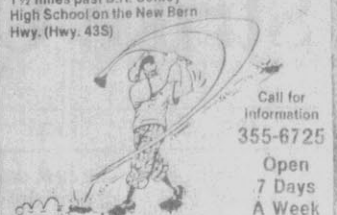

The accident was the second involving a Norris film in the Philippines.

In 1987, a Philippine military Sikorsky helicopter rented by Norris' crew crashed in Manila Bay, killing three Filipino soldiers who had been working as extras.

The 1987 crash took place while Norris was filming "Missing in Action, Part III — Braddock."

Striking teachers hold picket signs as students enter a high school in Los Angeles Monday

Strike Cripples L.A. Schools

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — The first day of a teachers' strike crippled the nation's second-largest school district as more than 20,000 teachers abandoned chalkboards for picket lines five weeks before the end of the school year.

Although the school board met in a seven-hour session that lasted into late Monday and both sides held informal talks, the walkout entered its second day today.

"We've been on the brink of settlement before," Catherine Carey, spokeswoman for the United Teachers-Los Angeles union, said Monday night. "We're cautiously optimistic because lines of communication are open and we're anxious to settle."

"However, we expect we're going to be on a full blown strike," School Board President Roberta Weintraub said the seven-member board would meet again today.

"I'm hopeful that it won't go more than two or three days," union president Wayne Johnson said of the strike. "There's still a possibility that might happen, but that depends on the board."

The union represents 22,000 of the district's 32,000 teachers, nurses and counselors. Johnson, who joined striking teachers at Hamilton High School, said more informal talks would take place, but no formal negotiations had been set.

The union claimed that 25,000 teachers did not show up for work Monday, 4,000 more than the district's estimate.

Monday morning attendance showed that 430,000 of the 590,000 students were in class but hundreds left junior and senior high school campuses after becoming bored. School officials said they would not be punished for truancy.

"All we're gonna do is sit and vegetate," complained Maureen Lim, 15, a Hamilton High freshman.

The schools were being overseen by 12,650 substitute teachers, aides and administrators. The board had increased substitute teacher's pay to $165, up from $137.

It was the first strike since 1970 for the 600-school Los Angeles Unified School District.

A so-called "fact-finder" from the state was to present a report Wednesday regarding the unsuccessful 16-month contract negotiation.

The teachers are demanding a two-year 21 percent pay increase, relief from unpaid duties such as playground patrol, and greater control in choosing curricula.

The district most recently offered a 21.5 percent pay increase over three years. It also has offered to set up councils at individual schools so that teachers would have greater input in setting curriculum. Teacher governance systems already are established in Dade County, Fla., Chicago, and Rochester, N.Y., schools.

California schools chief William Honig accused the teachers union of using grades to pressure a settlement.

The strike deadline was pushed up two weeks, from May 30 to May 15, when Superintendent Leonard Britton refused to authorize pay for teachers who failed to turn in final grades.

Teachers in the district annually earn from $23,440 in beginning salary to $43,319 for those with doctorates, 98 extra course units and 19 years' experience.

Administrators' salaries start at $37,000 for program coordinators and $95,600 for associate superintendents. Britton earns $141,000.

Bush Lists His Income At $156,000

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — George Bush earned $156,000 from a blind trust worth nearly $1 million in his final year as vice president and with his wife Barbara accepted more than $21,000 in gifts, a financial disclosure form shows.

The gifts ranged from two $75 ties for Bush from an official with the Coca-Cola Co., to a gold watch valued at $7,800 given to Mrs. Bush by the Ladies of the Senate Red Cross Chapter.

The form indicated the Bushes have non-real estate assets of $1.09 million. In addition, their house in Kennebunkport, Maine — not required to be listed — is estimated to be worth about $1 million, taking their likely net worth past $2 million.

It was the first time that the exact value of Bush's trust — $998,000 at year's end — had been disclosed. The trust was set up in January 1981 when Bush, a former Texas oil executive, became vice president.

Bush was not required to list specific amounts on his holdings and income, but did so anyway.

Presidential press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said "the president has proposed in his new ethics package that more specific data be provided" and he wanted to set an example.

The example was not followed by Vice President Dan Quayle, however, who filed a far less detailed disclosure statement.

Quayle's filing showing assets held by him and his wife Marilyn in 1988 — when he was a senator representing Indiana — of no less than $440,000 and up to $740,000 or more.

During his campaign, Quayle valued his net worth at slightly under $1 million.

Quayle reported income on holdings of from $18,500 to $52,000. He also reported fees for speeches of $52,797 — of which he donated $17,304 to charities to keep within the federal limit on honoraria.

Computing his worth is further complicated because Quayle's major asset — his 99 shares and his wife's 40 shares in Central Newspapers Inc. — have no set market value since the company is family-owned and the stock is not traded, according to his press secretary, David Beckwith.

Cholesterol In Eggs Lower Than Thought

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — New testing methods and improved farming practices have led government researchers to conclude that eggs have 22 percent less cholesterol than previously believed.

A study released Monday by the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the industry-supported Egg Nutrition Center found the average large egg has 213 milligrams of dietary cholesterol.

The government has said since 1976 that eggs contained 274 milligrams. Extra large eggs have about 230 milligrams of cholesterol, and medium eggs about 180 milligrams.

The study was welcomed by the egg industry, which has seen sales plummet $1 billion during the past five years after warnings about the risks of heart disease associated with the fatty substance.

Ad Group Agrees To Buyout Offer

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Ogilvy Group Inc. has agreed to an $864 million buyout offer in a deal that will create the world's second largest advertising and marketing concern.

The boards of Ogilvy and WPP Group PLC announced early today they had approved the buyout under which the London-based WPP will pay $54 a share in cash for all of Ogilvy's common stock.

The agreement came just hours before today's annual meeting of Ogilvy shareholders.

The agreement would allow the New York-based Ogilvy Group to operate autonomously within WPP, a fast-growing conglomeration of advertising agencies, public relations and marketing services concerns.

In an added inducement, WPP said it would appoint Ogilvy founder David Ogilvy chairman of WPP Group. The current WPP chairman, John Symonds, will become deputy chairman.

Only two years ago, WPP stunned the advertising world with its uninvited but successful buyout of the parent of another U.S. advertising giant, J. Walter Thompson. That deal had cost $566 million.

WHAT TO DO IF YOU SMELL GAS.

Call Greenville Utilities immediately. Anytime day or night. We'll get a serviceman to your home or location to correct the problem. While you're waiting for him to get there, open a window, make sure you use no electrical switches. Extinguish any open flames and evacuate the area. If you don't know what natural gas smells like, stop by our office and pick up a scratch and sniff leaflet. Because even though natural gas contains no poisonous ingredients, a leak can become hazardous if combustible gas pockets are allowed to form, which makes it important for you to know what natural gas smells like.

Your Mental Health Drugs, Behavior Modification Help Children With Disorder

By Raymond E. Webster

One of the most frequent reasons why children are referred for psychological treatment is because of attention problems in school. Estimates suggest that about 3 to 5 percent of school-aged children have an attention deficit disorder with hyperactivity.

Symptoms of this developmental disorder are lack of ability to attend at developmentally appropriate levels; difficulty controlling or limiting behavior so that the child requires a good deal of adult supervision and direction; and an above-average energy level. The child cannot stay seated, is fidgety, or runs around excessively as if driven by a motor.

These behaviors must exist for at least six months, occur before the age of 7, and not result from another disorder such as a severe emotional disturbance. These children often present significant challenges to parents, teachers and the professionals working with them.

Many people have accepted the premise that food additives and sugars in young children are a major cause of behavior problems. But evidence generally fails to support this idea.

One of the primary ways of dealing with these children has been to prescribe stimulant medications to control behaviors. About 70 percent of youngsters given these drugs will show a rapid positive response. The most often prescribed drugs are ritalin, dexedrine and cyler. Most children given these drugs remain on them for at least three years and usually longer, unless parents discontinue their use because of undesirable side-effects.

Many people believe that these drugs improve learning and achievement, but there are very few studies confirming this. The drugs do increase attention and concentration which leads to reduced disruptive behaviors and sometimes improvement in study skills. The positive impact of these drugs is greatest in situations which are highly structured and demand more self-control and attention from the child.

Research has indicated that other kinds of emotional problems, such as negative self-esteem, depression or poor social skills, are not affected by the drugs. Further, behaviors occurring outside the drug's time course may not be improved. For example, many children do not receive the drugs over the weekend or during school vacation periods. The original behaviors which led to drug therapy often reappear.

A variety of other therapies have been developed to use with children showing attention deficit disorders. These therapies have been shown to be about as equally effective as drug therapy when no drug therapy is used. When used as part of a drug therapy program they can enhance the overall impact significantly.

The major differences are that they take substantially longer to take effect and require a good deal of personal time and energy from parents and teachers. When used consistently, their effects can be seen in many different settings, giving the child and family long-term problem-solving strategies to deal with the typical conflicts of family life.

These therapies often require parents and teachers to become more knowledgeable about managing and structuring a child's behavior in a consistent, effective way. Attention is frequently focused on the parents' and teachers' verbal and non-verbal communication with the child. Specific management systems which lead to clearer and more meaningful personal interactions are developed and monitored daily.

Adults learn strategies deal with unacceptable behavior with negative reinforcement and/or punishment. Parents receive help in setting clear and predictable rules, giving quick feedback about behavior and implementing concrete consequences easily understood by the child.

Depending on the child's emotional status and characteristics, individual psychotherapy may be provided. That therapy will focus on changing thinking processes related to self-control and restraint and teaching coping behaviors and social/personal skills. Teaching these children how to analyze a situation, and to regulate their behaviors before acting, are also involved.

Many of these procedures represent cognitive behavioral modification techniques. Such programs can be easily coordinated with a receptive teacher. Home and school are encouraged to work cooperatively and communicate freely and regularly about the child's behavior and academic performance.

Attention deficit disorder is a developmental problem with an early onset. It requires a multifaceted treatment program involving the child, parents and the school. The most effective programs seem to focus on drug therapy, parent counseling and support, training parents in effective child management procedures and self-control training for the child. Dramatic improvements in a child's behavior and school performance can be seen in a rather short time, especially when parents and professionals are persistent in using these procedures.

Dear Abby: I was the project officer for Operation Dear Abby in Korea for the 1988-1989 holiday season. During this time, about 75,000 pieces of mail were sent to our servicemen and women in Korea. The 55 military chaplains in Korea handled the distribution of those letters, and we tried our best to make sure every letter was personally handed to a U.S. servicemember.

I want to thank all the Dear Abby readers who responded so generously. Many of the servicemembers "traded" letters, and some of those letters became separated from their envelopes and addresses were lost. So, those who write should have their names and addresses on both the letters and envelopes.

Don't wait for Christmas. Please keep those letters comin' any time of year. They are great morale boosters! — George W. Bearden, Chaplain (Major) U.S. Army

Dear Major Bearden: All right, you asked for it. Readers, write to a lonely servicemember. There are women as well as men in the service, you know. Address your letters to: Operation Dear Abby, America Remembers, U.S. Forces In Korea, APO San Francisco 96202.

Dear Abby: I'm in shock and really need your help. My brother just called from out of state, telling me that he is retiring this month, and he and his wife want to come and stay with my husband and me for three weeks! Abby, I love my brother dearly, but I am 71 and my husband is 76, and I just can't handle it.

I am active in my church, do volunteer work at the hospital two days a week, have church choir, plus my regular housekeeping chores, and I cannot cook for houseguests every night.

But how do I put this into words without sounding inhospitable? Just the thought of having houseguests sets my head to spinning! Our guest room is filled with things we're not using, and I'm just not up to the job of cleaning it up right now.

My husband is a dear and reasonable man. He's retired and is not in the greatest of health.

Please help me find the courage and the words. — Counting On You

Dear Counting: The courage you must find yourself, but perhaps I can help you with the words.

Call your brother and tell him that you love him dearly, but you cannot handle having houseguests for three weeks. Tell him that your husband has not been in the best of health and your guest room is being used for storing things, and much as you would enjoy seeing them, you are unable to accommodate them. Then offer to make reservations for them at a nearby motel — and quote the rates.

Sign off with: "My how time flies! Can you believe that your sister is now 71, and her husband is 76?"

Dear Abby: My friend and I have a $10 bet. She insists that Phil Donahue is bald! She said she saw him on his own show and he was totally bald — he didn't have even one hair on his head. She swears she saw it with her own eyes.

Abby, I am sure Phil Donahue is not bald, but I can't convince my friend. Can you please find out for sure. If you say so, she will take your word for it. Please help me with this bet. I know I can count on you. — K. Kee In Trafford, PA.

Dear K.: Phil Donahue bald? Absolutely not! That lush white thatch you see on his head is human hair — and it's all his!

I watch the Donahue show every day, and I recall the show your friend is referring to. It dealt with baldness, and in it Phil donned a skintight, flesh-colored rubber cap that gave him the appearance of being totally bald. The effect was amazingly realistic. Your friend owes you $10.

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 6940, Los Angeles, CA. 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

He'd Rather Hang Himself Than Hang More Pictures

Last weekend my husband drove five picture nails into our walls. In terms of pain that a layman can understand, this is equivalent to passing five kidney stones the size of patio bricks.

It all started when I said I was sick of the desert scene over the sofa in the family room. That had to be moved to the hallway. The hallway birds would go to the bedroom, the bedroom picture of the two little girls skipping rope would move to the guest room, the sunset there would hang in the dining room, and we'd hang an Indian blanket on the bare wall in the family room. None of the old nails fit the new pictures.

Maybe to some men this wouldn't be a big deal. But you have to understand what I'm dealing with here. When a hole is made in our walls, my husband bleeds. We have towel racks that for years have lain flat on the counter. We have a cup dispenser that is propped up in the corner of the medicine chest. Don't even think of looking for a hook on the bathroom door.

His theory is, "If God had meant holes to be driven into walls, he would have made the walls straight." Throughout our entire married life, putting a nail in the wall has been the one argument guaranteed to get him a night's sleep on the sofa. In fact, I never walk by the full-length mirror propped against a wall in our bedroom that old wounds aren't opened.

I bought the mirror to mount on the door of my closet so that I could see what I looked like before I walked out the door. He refused to put it up until I was "sure." That was in 1981. Do you know what I see before I walk out the door? A 3-foot grown woman on her knees angry enough to kill.

At Wits End

I'm happy to report that the nail fetish isn't in the genes. Our son borrowed our drill one day to hang a hammock in his apartment. When my husband saw it, he grabbed his chest and gasped. I thought he was going to be sick. "You violated a wall you just met! This wall was pristine and pure just a few minutes ago. Then you come in with your drill and sink two hooks the size of fists. Craters this size are something you talk about. These holes don't heal themselves, son. They're forever."

So how did I get my husband to drive five nails into the walls? Simple. I told him if he didn't do it, I would, and I wouldn't measure — I'd just "eyeball it." I told him I wouldn't look for a wall stud, nor would I wear my glasses. I wouldn't use a level on the pictures and I wouldn't put down a cloth to catch the junk from the drill. He was motivated.

But face it. He's still the same man who looked at the Sistine Chapel, his eyes glistening with excitement as he said, "Look at that! Not one nail!"

Nakasone Agrees To Take Stand

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
TOKYO — A second opposition lawmaker linked to an influence-peddling scandal that has rocked Japan's government has resigned from Parliament.
 Meanwhile, former Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone agreed to testify in Parliament about his links to the scandal, Kyodo News Service reported. Opposition parties have stalled parliamentary business to back demands that he testify.
 Katsuya Ikeda, 51, a four-term member of the House of Representatives, cited personal reasons today for his resignation from Parliament and from the Clean Government Party, the second-largest opposition party after the Socialists.
 In November, a member of the Japan Socialist Party, Takumi Ueda, gave up his seat in Parliament after news reports linked him with the scandal.

 Ikeda, a former journalist, acknowledged in November that his brother, Yuzuru, bought 5,000 unlisted stock shares from Recruit Co. at a bargain price in 1986. After public trading began and the stock price soared, the brother made a profit of about $73,530.
 The company, accused of trying to influence government policy, sold such shares in a Recruit subsidiary to some 160 influential politicians, bureaucrats and businessmen.
 It also made large political contributions to politicians including Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita, who announced last month he would resign to take responsibility for the scandal.

Chinese Students Step Up Hunger Strike

 "I saw them (the students) passing by and ... I knew I had to join them," said one worker who refused to give his name.
 "We want the right to strike," said Song Lou, a teacher at the Workers' Movement Institute.

One group of 60 museum workers dramatically entered the square from underneath the huge portrait of Mao Tse-tung that hangs above the gate to the adjacent Forbidden City, once home to China's emperors.
 They carried a huge yellow banner reading, "Forbidden City workers" and chanted, "Democracy, democracy."

At least 1,000 students also took to the streets in Shanghai today in support of the hunger strikers in Beijing, an American teacher in the city said.

On Tiananmen Square, more than 1,000 medical students and doctors set up an emergency tent amid the sprawled bodies of the hunger strikers and administered glucose and salt water intravenously to fainting fasters.
 "We can handle 10 at a time," said one medical student.

Twelve students had decided last night to stop drinking water. "They are terrible. They are lying on ice" to keep them cool, a doctor said. Two had fainted by late afternoon.
 The number of hunger strikers also grew as more people, including some teachers pledged abstinence until their demands for a dialogue with the government and democratic reforms are realized.

Students said the strike could go on indefinitely if the numbers of participants continues to grow.
 The city's emergency medical center sent aspirin and other medication for the students. Almost every hospital in the city was involved.

"If they are wise the government will give way," a doctor said.
 One of the strikers, Mao Shijing, a philosophy graduate student at Beijing Normal University, said, "sometimes I have a little pain."

Pullout
HIGH POINT (AP) — Some furniture companies are pulling their products from North Carolina stores, saying they have the right to determine their own sales strategies, but state Attorney General Lacy Thornburg called the move "outrageous."

On Monday, four major furniture makers announced they would no longer sell their products in the state, and three other high-end furniture manufacturers may follow suit.
 In letters received Friday and Saturday, retailers were notified that Henredon, Drexel Heritage, Hickory Craft and LeBarge Furniture will no longer be sold in North Carolina.

sometimes I'm dizzy. Yesterday I stood up too fast and I fainted. By night it's cold and by day it's hot. The worst thing of all is the sun beating down on us."

Students who have been collecting contributions from sympathizers bought umbrellas and hats for the strikers.
 The students are demanding recognition of their independently formed organizations and a dialogue with the government on such issues as press freedom and official corruption.

CAA Tournament Notebook:

Rain, Rain, Go Away

WILMINGTON — With just two innings left to play in the championship game of the Colonial Athletic Association's baseball tournament, rain descended on Brooks Field, drowning out play.

East Carolina held a 1-0 lead over the University of Richmond with seven full innings completed.

Under tournament rules, however, there is no such thing as a rain-out. The game must be completed — the equivalent of nine full-innings. The contest was ruled suspended and will be picked up today at the point of suspension.

That may work for or against a team. A team trailing may find a way, with a few hours' rest, to pull out the win. Or a pitcher that might not quite have been ready to throw might now be ready to shut the door.

Only time will tell. The two teams are scheduled to resume their contest at noon today. Whether that time will hold up depends on what the weather conditions overnight produce. If the rains were heavy enough, it might take longer for the field to be playable. And certainly, with the league championship and the conference's NCAA bid at stake, good field conditions are a must. It would be tragic to allow the game to be decided because of a misplay due to wet conditions.

Most Valuable Player

When the game is completed, one of the post-game awards will be given to the most valuable player.

And right now, as far as East Carolina is concerned, there are several candidates.

Primary among them are second baseman Kevin Riggs and pitcher Brien Berckman.

Riggs, who did not start the first game against George Mason, on Friday, moved into second when Tommy Eason moved from first to catch and Mike Andrews moved from second to first.

Coming into the tournament, Riggs had been up and down, and was going through a down prior to the event.

But since arriving at Wilmington, he's been a pitcher's nightmare. Going

Knicks Face Task Of Taking 3 Straight

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The New York Knicks have proven they can score in bunches and they've shown they can slow down Michael Jordan.

Their problem is that they have to do that three consecutive times to stay alive in the NBA playoffs.

The Chicago Bulls, leading the best-of-7 series 3-1, face the Knicks at Madison Square Garden tonight after holding New York to 181 points in two weekend victories. Jordan, held to a season and playoff-low 15 points in the Knicks' lone win in Game 2, scored 40 and 47 points in Games 3 and 4.

"If you keep New York to 88 and 93 points, you've got to stay you're doing a great defensive job," Bulls coach Doug Collins said. "In the first two games, we weren't reacting, but now we are recognizing what New York is going to do."

In Sunday's 106-93 loss, the Knicks trailed only 81-79 with 9:10 remaining, but they scored only 14 points the rest of the game and had only three free throws in the final 3:17. In the third quarter, New York scored just four points in the final 5:07.

The Knicks' starters made only 23 of 61 shots, hardly the kind of firepower the team showed in the regular season when it was third in the NBA in scoring with 116.7 points per game.

"We're not sure what's wrong," said Knicks guard Gerald Wilkins, who was 1-for-7 from the field. "One of the things I think that's happening is we're overanxious on offense. I don't know what's happening. I still think we're the same team we were at the beginning of the season. But this is the playoffs and other teams are playing well."

Patrick Ewing, the Knicks' All-Star center, was 5-for-15 from the field and scored 10 points Sunday. Bill Cartwright, who was traded to Chicago by the Knicks before the season, scored 21 for the Bulls.

"Cartwright is a good defensive center," Knicks guard Trent Tucker said. "Billy's been around nine of 10 years and he knows how to play. Billy is a very good low-post offensive player and a very good low-post defensive player. He puts pressure on both ends of the court."

Knicks coach Rick Pitino credited Cartwright with pushing Ewing away from the basket and forcing him to take longer shots. But Ewing said Cartwright is doing nothing special.

"He's not making anything more difficult than usual," Ewing said. "My shots are just not falling. It's never one man against one man. It's a team against a team. Everybody is making a big deal out of him knowing me, but it isn't."

Bucs, Spiders Play For Title

ECU's Early Win Forces Final Game To Decide NCAA-Berth Winner

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

WILMINGTON — East Carolina's Pirates got good pitching from both Tim Langdon and Brien Berckman and good hitting from Tommy Eason and Kevin Riggs to down George Mason, 4-2, Monday and advance to the championship game of the Colonial Athletic Association baseball tournament.

But rains interrupted the championship contest with the University of Richmond, and the Pirates had to wait overnight nursing a 1-0 lead.

The game was halted by a thunderstorm right at the top of the eighth inning with the Bucs coming to bat. The contest will be resumed and played to its conclusion today at noon, weather and field conditions permitting. Regardless, it will be played to a completion if further delayed.

"I don't know how it will affect things," ECU coach Gary Overton said. "We have to continue to play good defense and try to manufacture some runs in the eighth and ninth innings."

Langdon, who had struggled late in the season not getting through three innings in his last four starts, came through with a fine game against Mason, going the first six innings and scattering three hits. Both of the runs off him were unearned.

"We hoped that Langdon could take us through the middle innings and he did that," Overton said. "I thought that he was getting tired and immediately went to Brien Berckman."

Berckman, who had earned a save Sunday night against James Madison, went the final three innings against Mason, throwing perfect ball. He struck out four of the nine batters he faced.

"I definitely felt good in the bullpen," Berckman said. "I was ready to go."

East Carolina took the lead over Mason in the second inning, scoring once. John Gast led off with a walk and Steve Godin singled to center. Riggs sacrificed them up and Gast scored when Mike Andrews grounded out.

Mason came up with an unearned run in the bottom of the third to tie it up. With one away, Kyle Settle singled and then went all the way around the bases when a pickoff attempt by Langdon was off-target and sailed deep down the right field line.

East Carolina went back out with one in the fourth. Riggs doubled to left with two away and came around to score on Andrews' hit to center.

But again, Mason answered with an unearned run. Dayton Moore walked and Chris Jenkins singled. Godin bobbled the ball picking it up and Moore moved on to third. He scored from there on a sacrifice fly by Pete Adams.

But Langdon and Berckman held

Pistons End Series Detroit Finishes Off Bucks, 96-94

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MILWAUKEE — For the Detroit Pistons, it's a time for waiting. For the Milwaukee Bucks, it's a time for healing.

"All I'm going to do now is sit back, relax and enjoy the time off and not think about anybody," Isiah Thomas said Monday night after his 17 points, 13 assists and 10 rebounds helped the Pistons eliminate the Bucks from the Eastern Conference semifinals with a 96-94 victory, completing a four-game sweep.

"I think that the key to this series was the fact that we defended well. And in the last part of the second game, our offense finally kicked in," Thomas said after the Pistons overcame a 21-point second-quarter deficit, then hung on in the final minute.

The Pistons, who've won all seven playoff games, will play the winner of the other Eastern Conference semifinal between Chicago and New York as Detroit aims for a return trip to the NBA championship series. Chicago can advance with a victory in New York tonight.

"Detroit has a good chance to win the title as do the (Los Angeles) Lakers," said Ricky Pierce, one of the few Bucks still standing after an untimely rash of injuries. "But in the playoffs, you never know."

Meanwhile, the Bucks can only hope their injured players get well.

The Bucks, already without starting forwards Larry Krystkowiak and Terry Cummings, backup center Paul Mokeski and swingman Paul Pressey, activated rookie Mark Davis before the game to meet the NBA playoff minimum of nine players.

But when Rickey Green couldn't dress because of a hip pointer, the Bucks

Gaston Takes Over - Temporarily

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TORONTO — The fourth black manager in major league history may not have his job for long.

Hours after firing Jimmy Williams and naming Cito Gaston as his temporary replacement Monday, Toronto general manager Pat Gillick all but dismissed Gaston's chances of keeping the job on a permanent basis.

"We're not going to choose anyone from this coaching staff," Gillick said. "We don't feel it's an easy transition to make from coach to manager on our ballclub."

Gaston made a successful transition from batting coach to manager Monday night, guiding the Blue Jays to a 5-3 victory over Cleveland. But Gillick said earlier there was a 99 percent chance Gaston wouldn't even be considered for the permanent post, which will be filled within 10 days.

"We think one of the problems was with Jimmy making the transition from the coaching staff. That's why we would prefer someone with managerial experience," Gillick said.

"We feel it was a pitfall and we don't want to make the same mistake."

And what if the Blue Jays win seven or eight in a row under Gaston? Would the team feel obligated to give him the job, as Michigan did for fill-in coach Steve Fisher after he led the Wolverines to the NCAA basketball championship?

"We'd have to evaluate that, but we're still going to proceed," Gillick said.

Among those said to be in the run-

Sullivan's Status Is Unknown Injury May Keep Him From Racing At Indy 500

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — The one thing Danny Sullivan is sure of right now is that he wants to get back in a race car as quickly as possible. The question is when and where?

Sullivan was injured in a crash last Thursday during practice for the May 28 Indianapolis 500, breaking a bone in his right arm, suffering a mild concussion and a bruised foot.

He was released from the hospital

Sunday, but his immediate future in his Penske PC18-Chevrolet is uncertain.

If Sullivan is not ready to drive the car by the weekend, the final two days of qualifications, Geoff Brabham will attempt to put it in the race lineup. If Sullivan cannot drive the car in the race, owner Roger Penske says Brabham, a seven-year Indy-car veteran and the defending IMSA sports car champion, would do that, too.

Sullivan, who never had been injured before in a racing accident, said he still suffers some pain from the broken arm, particularly at night.

"The most sensitive point is here," he said Monday at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, pointing to his right elbow. "They drilled into my elbow to take a piece of bone from the soft part of the bone. They pack that into the area of the break and it helps the mending process."

"Moving it up or down isn't really any problem, but any twisting motion, moving it side-to-side, is difficult."

Sullivan was to be fitted today with a hard plastic brace, from the top of his hand to below the elbow, to protect his arm from another impact. He is expected to get back in a race car Wednesday, probably at Indianapolis Raceway Park, a .686-mile oval in nearby Clermont.

"I'll probably try to drive the car someplace just to get the feel of it," he said. "With practice going on here this week, you don't want to go out with the other cars on the track and run 100 miles an hour."

"That wouldn't be fair, and the Speedway probably wouldn't allow it anyway. It wouldn't be real safe."

Despite arm injury, Danny Sullivan still hopes to race

Final Hope For Warriors

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHOENIX — Golden State's Don Nelson can sling coaching clichés with the best of them.

He agrees that his Warriors are "in a must-win situation" in their playoff series against the Phoenix Suns.

His team trails 3-1 in the best-of-7 Western Conference semifinals heading into Game 5 tonight, but Nelson says with a straight face that "our backs are against the wall now."

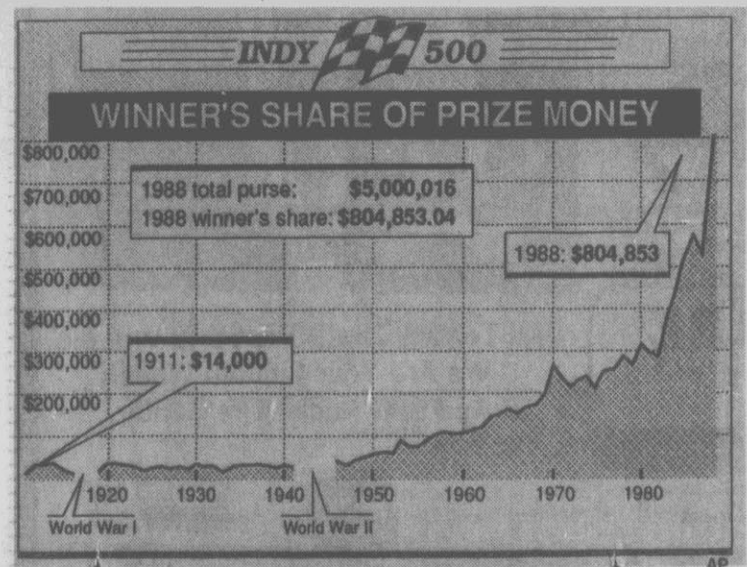

But he laughs when the talk turns to "do-or-die."

"Is this a do-or-die game? No, we're not facing a firing squad. The guns aren't backed up," Nelson said Monday. "We're not going to approach this game any differently than the others."

"We're just going to focus in on this one and try our best. I don't think we'll be uptight about it. But we do know that one more loss and you're done for the summer."

Game 6, if necessary, will be back in Oakland, Calif., with Game 7 Saturday afternoon at the Arizona Veterans Memorial Coliseum.

But the Suns want to end it tonight. A win will advance them to the conference finals against the two-time defending NBA champion Los Angeles Lakers, who completed a four-game sweep of Seattle in the other Western semifinal Sunday.

Clemson Eases Past North Carolina, 5-4

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Catcher Mike Couture doubled, stole third and scored on Todd Stefan's sacrifice fly in the eighth to give Clemson a 5-4 victory over North Carolina in the Atlantic Coast Conference baseball tournament Monday night.

Couture collected two hits, stole two bases and drove in a run with a third-inning single to leave the Tigers as the tournament's only remaining undefeated team.

North Carolina scored an unearned run in the second inning when shortstop Ron Maurer, who had singled, scored when Darren Villani's grounder eluded Clemson shortstop Rusty Charpia.

First baseman Mike Milchin led off the Clemson second with a double, advanced to third on Joe DeBerry's infield out and scored on a wild pitch. In the third Couture singled home Charpia and Brian Kowitz scored on an error by Tar Heel left fielder Todd Nichols.

Designated hitter Brad Woodall led off the Tar Heel sixth with a single and eventually scored on Nichols' sacrifice fly, cutting the Clemson lead to 3-2.

Charpia gave Clemson some breathing room with a two-out RBI single in the seventh. Left fielder Eric Macrina, who had doubled with one out, scored the Tigers' fourth run.

North Carolina catcher Jesse Levis singled and advanced to third when Woodall greeted reliever Milchin with a double in the eighth. Nichols later singled in two runs with two outs.

Clemson retook the lead 5-4 in the bottom of the eighth when Couture led off with a double, stole third and scored on Stefan's sacrifice fly to center. Milchin, 3-1, retired the Tar Heels in the ninth to earn the win.

Clemson is now 43-16. North Carolina falls to 33-13-1.

Earlier Monday, Clemson defeated Georgia Tech 9-3 in a rain-suspended game.

Tyson Won't Face Any Criminal Charges

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Heavyweight champion Mike Tyson won't face criminal charges stemming from accusations he hit a parking attendant.

Lack of witnesses and evidence made it unlikely the boxer could be convicted of the misdemeanor charges once under consideration, Assistant City Attorney Timothy Hogan said Monday.

Tyson, 22, denied Friday in a meeting with Hogan that he hit attendant Michael Devine in a parking lot near The Palace nightclub April 10.

Devine, 33, claimed that Tyson arrived near midnight in a Mercedes-Benz and started to park in a spot reserved for the club's owner, and when Devine objected, Tyson and one of two other men in the car got out.

Devine's complaint to the police alleged Tyson struck him three times in the stomach with the back of his hand.

NW Guilford, Mt. Airy Lead States

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Jason Widener shot a 3-under par 69 on Monday to take a two-stroke lead in the individual championship, and his Northwest Guilford Vikings took the lead in team division after the first round of the state 3-A prep golf championships.

Widener, who is seeking his second straight individual championship, was leading Mark Springfield of West Carteret and Jack Patterson of Eastern Alamance, both at 71.

Bryan Marshburn of Apex is in fourth, at 73, and Rusty Bumbarner of Kings Mountain is in fifth with a 74.

Northwest Guilford, which is the defending 3-A champion, has a team total of 303, two strokes ahead of West Carteret. Skyland Roberson is in third at 307, followed by Burlington Williams at 312 and Kings Mountain at 315.

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Kris Peavy of Mount Airy shot a 3-under par 69 Monday to take the individual lead and Clayton held the team lead after the first round of the state 1-A-2-A high school golf tournament.

Peavy took a three-stroke lead over Courtney Brisson of East Bladen. Scott Crocker of North Johnston was in third after shooting a 76.

Clayton's total of 338 gave it a two-stroke lead over East Wilkes and Hendersonville. Southwest Guilford was in fourth with a 344 and West Brunswick was in fifth at 348.

Rose Golfers Place Sixth In Regionals

Rose High's golf team saw its season come to a close Monday at the East Regionals in Chapel Hill.

The Rampants carded a team score of 323, their highest of the year, in placing sixth in the event. Only the top three teams from the regional advanced to next week's state championship.

Durham Jordan won the event with a score of 312, followed by Eastern Wayne at 314. Northern Durham was third at 315. Raleigh Millbrook finished fourth at 315 and Kinston was fifth at 319.

Brooks Honeycutt was the low scorer for Rose with a 78, followed by Lee Watson at 79. Derrick Daniels at 81, Chris Warren at 83 and Mark Honeycutt at 86.

Kinston's Rob Cato fired a 71 to capture individual medalist honors.

Charlotte To Hold Ultra-Swim Event

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Officials of the Mecklenburg Aquatic Club and U.S. Swimming announced Monday a four-year sponsorship commitment leading up to the 1992 Olympics for an annual Charlotte Ultra-Swim.

The inaugural event will be held June 22-25 at the Revolution Pool park, with over 20 former Olympians scheduled to compete. Among those expected to swim are 1988 silver medalist Dave Wharton, five-time Olympian Jill Sterkel, 1988 gold medalists Anthony Nesty of Surinam and Duncan Armstrong of Australia.

Tigers Activate Two Veterans

DETROIT (AP) — The Detroit Tigers optioned infielder Torey Lovullo to Toledo of the International League Monday and activated pitcher Mike Henneman and outfielder Gary Pettis.

The Tigers also placed pitcher Jeff Robinson on the 15-day disabled list and pitcher Charles Hudson on the 21-day disabled list, and purchased the contract of pitcher Mike Trujillo from Toledo.

Henneman, Pettis and Trujillo were scheduled to report before Monday night's game against the Chicago White Sox at Tiger Stadium.

Personal Fouls To Be Published

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — "Personal Fouls," the controversial book about the North Carolina State basketball program, has been scheduled for publication by a New York publisher after being turned down by a larger house, a Charlotte newspaper says.

Author Peter Golenbock is expected to announce plans for publication in a news conference Thursday morning in New York, The Charlotte Observer reported in today's editions.

Reached by telephone Monday, Golenbock declined comment. Calls to Kent Carroll and Herman Graf, who run Carroll and Graf Publishers, were not returned.

"Personal Fouls" was scheduled for publication in February by Pocket Books, a division of Simon & Schuster, but the parent company canceled those plans after the North Carolina Attorney General's office threatened legal action on behalf of N.C. State. Simon & Schuster said the book "did not meet the standards of Pocket Books."

Carroll and Graf apparently has tried to prepare for legal challenges, the newspaper reported. Noted first amendment attorney Martin Garbus of New York was hired to review the manuscript. Garbus said it would be published but did not say when, and that he was "convinced that it is libel-free."

Garbus said he could not comment on whether the manuscript was the same as the one turned down by Simon & Schuster.

Garbus said Golenbock's agreement with Carroll and Graf did not contain an indemnity clause, which is sometimes used to free authors from potential legal damages.

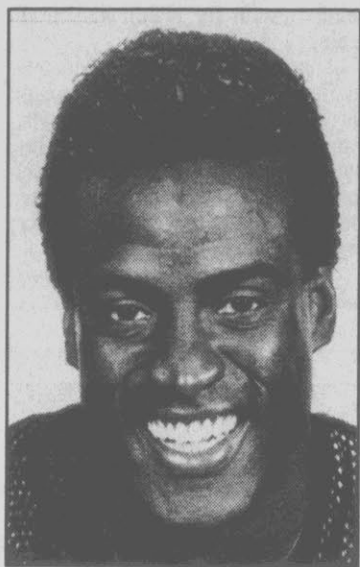

Carroll and Graf is considered a small publisher, with an average of 85 titles per year compared to 300 for Pocket Books, according to the 1989 Writer's Market. A New York publishing executive, who asked not to be identified, said of Carroll and Graf: "They're certainly not a fly-by-night company, but they're not Pocket Books either. This could be, if not their biggest title, certainly one of their biggest."

Though it has yet to be published, publicity about "Personal Fouls" led to investigations of the N.C. State program by the NCAA and the UNC board of governors. Both are ongoing.

A preliminary dust cover for the book, distributed to local dealers in January, said the book would reveal extensive corruption in the Wolfpack program, including grade changes and payments of money and jewelry to players.

It was also to detail the "broken promises and shattered dreams" of some Wolfpack players.

A primary source for the book was John Simonds, a manager on the 1986-87 Wolfpack team.

Wilson Banned From NFL

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — The Cincinnati Bengals aren't surprised that the NFL has permanently barred former running back Stanley Wilson from the league because of a chronic drug-abuse problem.

NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle sent Wilson a letter notifying him of the decision last week, the league said in a statement Monday.

Wilson, 27, was suspended Jan. 21, on the eve of Super Bowl XXIII, because of an apparent relapse into drug use. He had petitioned the NFL for reinstatement.

Mike Brown, the Bengals' assistant general manager and legal counsel, said the Bengals received a copy of Rozelle's letter Friday.

"This letter doesn't mention the possibility of reinstatement, and that was expected by us," Brown said. "Hopefully, it will finally put this matter behind us. Stanley had broken the provisions the commissioner had set out time and time again, and if he hadn't acted in this fashion, the sanctions would have been toothless."

Team officials, including coach Sam Wyche, noted that Rozelle cautioned Wilson when he was reinstated 13 months ago from a drug suspension that it was his last chance.

The Bengals, who have been paying for Wilson's drug rehabilitation programs, said they did not want him back.

The NFL's action amounts to a lifetime ban for Wilson, a former Oklahoma star who was drafted by the Bengals in the ninth round in 1983. He also missed the 1985 and 1987 seasons because of drug use and is currently being treated at a Phoenix clinic, his lawyer has said.

"I am hereby imposing on you a permanent ban from further participation in the NFL," Rozelle's letter to Wilson said in part. "In view of your history, this cannot come as a surprise to you."

ECU-GMU In CAA Final...

the Patriots to only one more baserunner after that.

Meanwhile, the Pirates regained the lead in the seventh. With one away, David Ritchie walked and stole second, scoring on a double by John Thomas.

An insurance run scored in the eighth when Godin doubled to center and Riggs singled to right.

Eason picked up three hits in the game and both Riggs and Godin added two for the Pirates.

"Kevin is hitting a hot bat (eight for 12 at the point of interruption), and even when he makes an out, he hits it hard," Overton said.

Ironically, it was Riggs who killed a rally in the sixth when he grounded into a double play. With the bases loaded, he hit a sharp liner to deep second that Moore managed to get to in time to start the twin-killing.

"He hit the ball hard, but he hit a bad pitch," Overton said. "That took us out of a bid inning. But outside of that, we scored when we had to."

Mason's starting pitcher, Chris Cloude, who was pounded when the two teams met in regular season, did a good job against the Pirates before he was finally chased in the eighth. "He came in in relief (Sunday night against Richmond) and they had to be pleased with the job he did today," Overton added.

Overton surprised everyone — including Berckman — by picking him to continue on the mound against Richmond.

"I found out immediately after the first game," the junior righthander said. "Coach asked me how I felt, and I told him fine. I figured that he was looking to me for some relief."

"But then he said, 'You've got the ball.' It really surprised me."

Overton said that since Berckman was loose, that he decided to keep on with him. "He pitched on guts and did a fabulous job," Overton said.

Berckman responded. After not having gone more than seven innings this year, he put together six and two-thirds more innings, allowing only a lead-off single by Mike Zambo. He walked two, hit one and struck out six before finally giving way to Jake Jacobs in the seventh.

Both of the walks came in the seventh, the only time Richmond had two men on at the same time against him. Jacobs struck out the final batter in the frame just before the rain hit.

"Coach told me to go as long as I could," Berckman said. "I figured that I could make three or four, but I got stronger from the third to the sixth."

East Carolina scored the only run of the game in the second. Gast doubled to right and was sacrificed to third. He scored easily when Riggs hit his fourth double and fifth extra base hit of the series.

The Pirates had one other shot at scoring a run, in the fifth when Ritchie led off with a single and moved up on a sacrifice and a grounder. But he died at third when another grounder ended the inning.

But now, the Pirates must wait until at least noon today to find out if they will win the championship and earn the CAA's automatic berth in the NCAA regionals.

Overton said he would either continue with Jacobs on the mound, or possibly would switch to Jonathan Jenkins for the final innings.

Inside-The-Park Homer Sparks Phillies

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Steve Bedrosian was surprised. And he was the winner!

In the top of the 12th inning Monday night, Bedrosian gave up home runs to Will Clark and Kevin Mitchell on consecutive pitches, snapping a scoreless tie. But Bob Dernier hit a three-run inside-the-park homer in the bottom of the inning, giving Philadelphia a 3-2 victory over San Francisco.

"Just when you thought you'd seen it all," said Bedrosian, 2-2, who already has given up three game-winning homers this season.

"It's the toughest game I've ever lost as a manager," Roger Craig of the Giants said. "I told my players it was the toughest loss of the year, but to forget it and come back tomorrow."

Craig Lefferts, 1-1, struck out Von Hayes to start the bottom of the 12th. Pinch-hitter Dickie Thon and Steve Lake singled and Steve Jeltz popped out.

Dernier, who in the 10th threw out Clark at the plate, lined a shot into the left-field corner and the ball skidded past Mitchell, rolling along the fence toward center field.

"As I came into second, I saw the ball was still rolling, put my head down and turned left," Dernier said.

He picked up third-base coach Larry Bowa's go signal shortly after rounding second.

"Twelve (innings) is enough for Larry," Dernier said. "He was ready to go home."

Mitchell followed the ball along the base of the wall, had trouble picking it up and finally threw to shortstop Jose Uribe, whose throw to catcher Terry Kennedy was up the first-base line as Dernier slid home safely.

In other games, Los Angeles beat New York 3-1, Cincinnati beat Pittsburgh 6-5, San Diego beat Montreal 6-5 in 11 innings and Chicago beat Atlanta 4-0.

Philadelphia snapped a 20-inning scoreless streak in the 12th. Orel Hershiser of the Dodgers beat the Phillies 9-0 on Sunday.

Dodgers 3, Mets 1
Mariano Duncan snapped an 0-for-19 slump with a two-run single in the ninth that snapped a 1-1 tie.

Roger McDowell, 1-2, relieved to start the ninth and walked Jeff Hamilton with one out. After a wild pitch, Dave Anderson also walked and Randy Myers relieved.

After getting pinch-hitter Mickey Hatcher to pop to third, Myers walked Willie Randolph, loading the bases. Duncan, 4-for-8 as a pinch hitter, lined a single to left.

Ray Searage, 1-2, got the last out of the eighth and Jay Howell pitched the ninth for his fourth save, completing a combined four-hitter.

Reds 6, Pirates 5
Herm Winningham's two-run, bases-loaded single off Bill Landrum capped a three-run rally with two outs in the ninth.

Barry Bonds hit a two-run homer and Rey Quinones and Bobby Bonilla added solo homers off Tom Browning as Pittsburgh took a 5-0 lead. But the Reds scored a run in the sixth, two in the eighth off Jeff Robinson, 2-4, and then rallied to win in the ninth.

Cincinnati manager Pete Rose was ejected for arguing with home plate umpire Tom Hallion after Paul O'Neill was called out on strikes to end the fourth inning. It was Rose's second ejection this season.

Norm Charlton, 2-0, pitched one hitless inning.

Padres 6, Expos 5
Marvell Wynne snapped an 11th-inning tie with a run-scoring double and Jack Clark added an RBI single.

With the score tied at 4, Andy

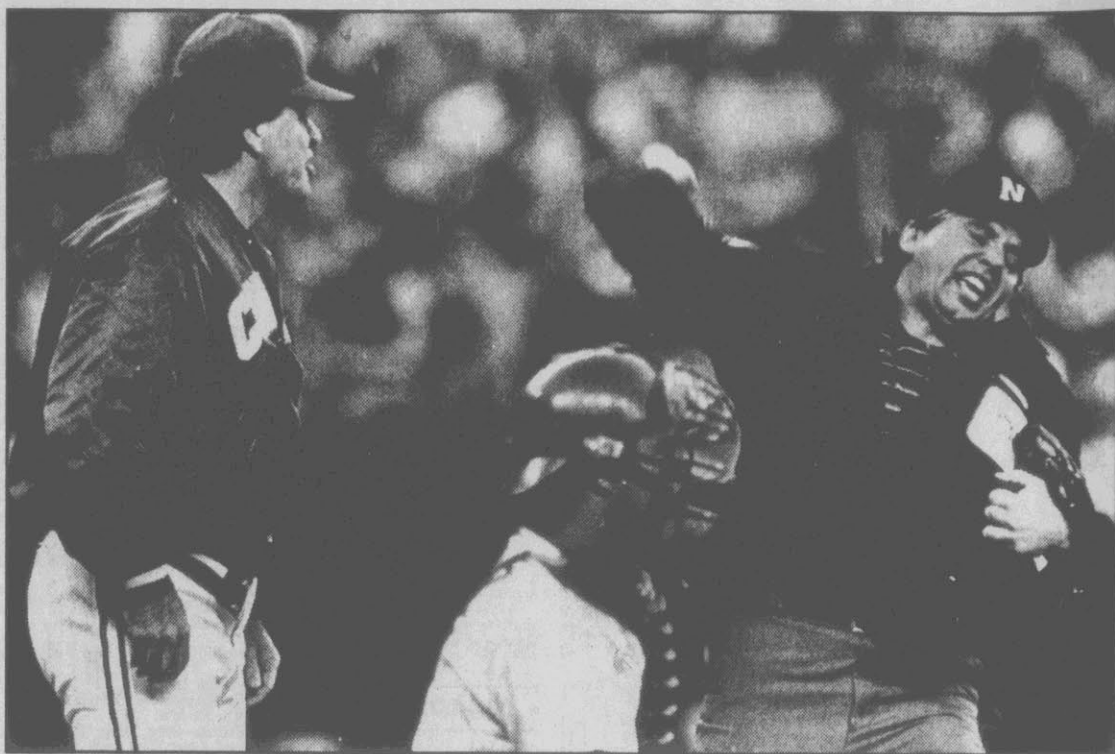

McGaffigan walked Bip Roberts with one out and Wynne followed with his third consecutive hit, driving the ball into the right-field corner. One out later, McGaffigan, 1-2, intentionally walked Tony Gwynn and Clark singled to center.

Mark Davis, 2-0, pitched 3 1-3 innings of two-hit relief, allowing a run-scoring single in the 11th to pinch-hitter Mike Aldrete. With runners on first and second, Davis struck out Rex Hudler to end the game.

Cubs 4, Braves 0
Lloyd McClendon hit a three-run homer in his first at-bat with the Cubs as Chicago snapped a five-game losing streak.

McClendon was acquired by Chicago last December from Cincinnati for outfielder Rolando Roomes and was brought up Monday from Iowa of the American Association after Mitch Webster was placed on the disabled list.

Mike Bielecki, 3-1, allowed four hits, struck out eight and walked three in seven innings. Derek Lilliquist, 2-3, gave up six hits and all four runs in six innings for Atlanta, which lost for the third time in 11 games.

Gaston Wins First With Blue Jays

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

George Bell and Lloyd Moseby, two players who let down Jimmy Williams, lifted his replacement, Cito Gaston, to victory in his first game as interim manager of the Blue Jays.

Bell, with whom Williams had some bitter feuds in recent seasons, hit a two-run homer Monday night. So did Moseby, breaking an 0-for-27 slide as Toronto beat Cleveland 5-3. Earlier in the day, Gaston, the team's hitting instructor, took over temporarily — when Williams was fired.

"I finally got the bat on a ball," said Moseby, who also had some differences with Williams, most notably about being moved out of center field. "It's unfortunate that Jimmy had to take the fall for the way we've been playing."

"I attribute it 100 percent to the players. We're the ones on the field. It's the same when you win — the manager gets a lot of the credit, but I think any good manager will tell you the players are doing the job."

"When you're losing, blaming the manager is ludicrous. The players aren't doing the job but the manager's getting the blame."

"Hopefully, the next seven days will give us a chance to turn things around."

Kelly Gruber opened the fourth with a single and came home on Bell's fourth homer of the season. Fred McGriff followed with a single and Moseby sent John Farrell's first pitch to straightaway center field for his third home run.

Jimmy Key, 4-2, allowed six hits, one walk and had one strikeout in his third complete game of the season.

"In my mind we didn't play well as a team under Williams. Good baseball wins games, not managers," Key said. "Tonight we got a couple of big base hits and I was able to keep the ball down and throw strikes."

Elsewhere, it was Oakland 12, Milwaukee 2; California 4, New York 3 in 11 innings; Kansas City 4, Minnesota 3; and Detroit 3, Chicago 2.

Athletics 12, Brewers 2

At Oakland, Dave Stewart became the first seven-game winner in the major leagues and improved his career record against Milwaukee to 9-0. In seven innings, he allowed six hits with one walk and four strikeouts as the Athletics' offense produced season-highs in runs (12) and hits (17) by the sixth inning.

"I didn't even know it," Stewart said of his lifetime mark against the Brewers. "I knew I threw well against them. The teams I concentrate on are the teams I struggle against, like Baltimore and Kansas City — teams like that."

Dave Henderson hit his seventh homer and drove in three runs for the Athletics. They got three runs in the third off starter Don August, 2-5. Glenn Hubbard doubled and scored on Luis Polonia's single. Henderson followed with a two-run homer.

Singles by Terry Steinbach, Carney Lansford and Stan Javier loaded the bases in the fourth and brought in reliever Mark Knudson; August left with a slight strain of the left hamstring. Walt Weiss singled to score two runs for a 5-0 lead, and Oakland increased the lead to 8-0 on Henderson's RBI single and Dave Parker's two-run double.

Brewers first baseman Terry Francona made his major league debut as a pitcher in the eighth inning. He retired the side in order and fanned Javier to end the inning, the only strikeout of the game by a Milwaukee pitcher.

Angels 4, Yankees 3

Wally Joyner, who thought he had provided the winning run with an RBI single in the seventh, did get the decisive run home in the 11th with a sacrifice fly.

Roberto Kelly, who also had four stolen bases, homered in top of the ninth to tie it. But the Angels came through with their 14th win in 17 games as Devon White led off the 11th with an infield single against Lance McCullers, just beating second baseman Steve Sax's throw. White stole second, then, after Brian Downing walked, White stole third. Chili Davis was intentionally walked to load the bases.

After Lance Parrish lined to left, Dave Righetti, the Yankees' fourth pitcher, came on to face Joyner, who lined Righetti's first pitch to center.

Royals 4, Twins 3

The Homerdome lived up to its name as all the runs scored on home runs.

Willie Wilson's first homer of the year, a two-run shot in the seventh, was the winner as Twins' five-game winning streak ended. The Royals' victory string is now four games.

Wilson homered off reliever Juan

Berenguer, 1-1, after Frank White led off with a walk. Danny Tartabull also had a two-run homer for the Royals.

Floyd Bannister, 4-0, allowed six hits in six innings, including three solo home runs — by Kent Hrbek, Brian Harper and Greg Gagne. Steve Farr pitched the ninth for his 10th save in as many chances.

Hrbek suffered a mild dislocation of his left shoulder in the next inning when he dove to his right to deflect a hard grounder. Hrbek left the game and had his shoulder reset; his status is day-to-day.

"It's a nice anniversary," said Wilson, whose last home run was exactly a year ago. "This date isn't special, but it seems to be working well for me."

Tigers 3, White Sox 2

At Detroit, home runs again were critical. Lou Whitaker and Chet Lemon homered, backing Frank Tanana, who is 23-13 lifetime against Chicago.

Whitaker hit a solo homer, his eighth, in the first. Lemon hit a two-run homer in the third.

The White Sox nearly caught up in the ninth. Tanana, 3-4, allowed five hits but, after Dave Gallagher singed leading off the ninth, Guillermo Hernandez came on for his seventh save in as many opportunities.

But he gave up an RBI single to Fred Manrique to make it 3-2. With runners on first and third, the White Sox tried a double steal. Catcher Matt Nokes threw to second baseman Whitaker, whose return throw got Daryl Boston at the plate after Boston hesitated before heading home.

"I saw Manrique stop, so my only concern was to get the guy at home if he went," Whitaker said. "The throw to me was up a bit, but I was more concerned with the throw than the catch."

"Once I had the play in front of me, I knew I was going to throw him out. I knew I had him all the way."

Boggs' Teammates Targeted By Adams

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Five teammates of Boston Red Sox star Wade Boggs will be targeted by representatives of Boggs' one-time lover, Margo Adams, with subpoenas seeking their testimony in her $500,000 lawsuit against him.

James McGee, Adams' lawyer, said Monday he will try to serve Jim Rice, Marty Barrett, Rich Gedman, Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd and Dwight Evans with subpoenas this week during Boston's three-game series with the California Angels.

Boyd is on the disabled list and was not with the team but the other four Red Sox will be in Anaheim, Calif., for a series that starts tonight.

Adams, whose kiss-and-tell story of her four-year affair with Boggs appeared in Penthouse magazine, claims that Boggs promised to support her when she quit her job as a mortgage banker to travel with him during road trips.

McGee said Boggs' teammates are being subpoenaed "to check on the accuracy and truthfulness of what (Boggs and Adams) have given on their depositions."

He said the subpoenas order the five players to testify in Boston June 12-15. "We still have a longer list," McGee said. "We need to get started somewhere."

McGee said Adams gave her deposition Monday to Boggs' attorney, Jennifer King.

"She testified that the damages that she has suffered are in excess of a half-million dollars and are continuing," McGee said by telephone from his office in Irvine, Calif.

Boggs, 30, began his deposition in March during spring training, testifying for two days in Florida. He will continue his deposition today in McGee's office, but the lawyer said he didn't know if the deposition would be completed today.

"We don't have a trial date yet," McGee said. "We want to finish the discovery before we get a trial date. It's hard to say when that will be. There's apparently some effort on the part of the players to avoid being subpoenaed."

"Right now, the effort is underway to subpoena those five, that's the goal. The people we were interested in deposing in September of last year are the same people we're interested in deposing today."

Dick Bresciani, Boston's vice president of public relations, said Monday that he had no idea where the players were because it was an off-day. He didn't know if any had received subpoenas.

had to get permission from Commissioner David Stern to go with eight players.

And eight was not enough, even though Fred Roberts scored a career-high 33 points in the absence of Cummings, sidelined with a bad ankle, and Krystkowiak, who faces knee surgery after being injured in Game 3.

But while the Bucks were short of personnel, they weren't pushovers. "They were outmanned, but they came out on fire," Pistons coach Chuck Daly said. "I was afraid of a letdown on the part of our club. We did it on defense. I wanted to get the Bucks' lead down to 10 at the end of the half and work from there."

The Pistons, downed by 21 with 7:33 left in the first half after a 26-6 spree by the Bucks, battled back. They used a 13-2 first quarter featuring three straight 3-pointers to whittle the deficit to 10 by the half.

Led by Thomas, Joe Dumars and Bill Laimbeer, they opened the second half with a 25-9 tear and outscored Milwaukee 32-17 to build a five-point lead they never lost.

NBC Finds Paying Sponsors For Disputed Abortion Movie

By Skip Wollenberg
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Makers of a denture cleanser and a wood cleaner good enough to make a church sparkle risked the wrath of abortion critics and advertised on the NBC movie "Roe Vs. Wade."

A spot check of network affiliates, however, reported only a modest number of telephone calls during and immediately after Monday night's broadcast, and the majority of those favored the broadcast.

Commercials that showed Polident doing its stuff on stained dentures and Murphy's Oil Soap brightening church pews and aisles appeared along with ads for perfume, spring water and wine, anti-itch medicine, fast cars and first-run movies.

NBC had to cut the prices for some of the commercials in the two-hour movie but said it found paying customers for all 14 minutes of advertising time.

The movie starred Holly Hunter as a character based on Norma McCorvey, the then-anonymous "Jane Roe" plaintiff who sued the Dallas District Attorney, Henry Wade, in an abortion case that went to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The movie was about the pro-choice advocates who prevailed in the landmark 1973 Supreme Court decision, but also portrayed sympathetically the prosecutors who argued the other side.

The National Right to Life Committee urged NBC affiliates not to run the movie while the American Family Association, a Mississippi-based religious group, encouraged advertisers not to buy time on the program. Both claimed the movie took a pro-abortion stance.

In a letter earlier this month, NBC President Robert Wright told the 100 biggest national advertisers that the movie presented a balanced view of the abortion issue and he would run it even if no advertisers bought time.

Only one of NBC's 208 affiliates had notified the network that it intended to pre-empt the movie, spokesman Curt Block said Monday. The exception was the affiliate in Kansas City, which was committed to a baseball game. NBC found another station in the market to run the movie, he said.

Block admitted the network cut its normal advertising rate during the past four or five days to find paid sponsors, but he declined to say how much time was sold at a discount or how deep the discounts were.

One ad agency media expert, speaking on condition of anonymity, said rates were cut as much as half for about 4½ minutes of commercials.

Industry sources say the going rate for a 30-second commercial in that time period is about $180,000.

Block said the movie probably will lose money but he was unable to confirm a published report that placed the anticipated loss at about $1 million.

Networks usually don't have to discount prices for commercials in prime time, Block said. If a network fails to find paying sponsors, it will often fill the time with public service announcements run for free.

Block said that calls to the NBC switchboard in New York ran 163 to 22 in favor of showing the movie during the two hours the program was on and the 15 minutes afterward.

"Less than 200 calls isn't that much, but it is unusual to have an eight to one ratio praising a product. People are more apt to voice their complaints rather to praise. We are pleased with it," he said.

At KNBC-TV in Los Angeles, a switchboard operator reported 40 calls in favor of the show and five against between 9:45 p.m. and 11 p.m. PDT.

KNSD-TV in San Diego received nearly 50 calls and a majority favored the broadcast, assignment editor Paul Levikow said.

"It was not the type of response we expected," he said. The station received more calls when it interrupted the movie "Top Gun" with a commercial, he said.

The uproar over "Roe Vs. Wade" is the latest in a series of television programs triggering protests in recent months by individuals and groups who claim the programs are morally objectionable. Among them have been NBC's "Saturday Night Live" comedy show and Fox Television's situation comedy, "Married... with Children."

NBC Will Keep Most Of Its TV Lineup Intact For '89-90

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Mel Brooks will return to network television next season after 14-year absence with a new comedy for NBC, "Nutt House," starring Cloris Leachman and Harvey Korman as the wacky staff of a New York hotel.

Brooks teams with co-executive producer Alan Spencer, whose "Sledge Hammer!" on ABC, a spoof of detective shows, was often likened to Brooks' off-the-wall spy satire of 20 years earlier, "Get Smart!"

"Nutt House" is one of only five new shows on NBC's 1989-90 schedule. The network has been No. 1 in the ratings for four seasons and had little reason to change its lineup. Monday, Tuesday and Thursday nights were left intact.

The only other new half-hour comedy is "Sister Kate," starring Stephanie Beacham ("Dynasty") as a nun with a flock of orphans to oversee.

NBC's only sore spot has been Friday night, which it completely revamped with three new hour-long dramas: "Baywatch," starring David Hasselhoff and Parker Stevenson as Southern California lifeguards, based on a TV movie of the past season; "Hardball," an old-cop-young-cop yarn starring John Ashton ("Beverly Hills Cop") and Richard Tyson; and "Mancuso, FBI," with Robert Loggia reprising his role from the miniseries "Favorite Son."

"Quantum Leap," a well-received science-fiction drama recently added to the schedule, made the cut, as did this season's newcomers "Dear John" and "Empty Nest," which premiered last fall in time periods surrounded by hit shows. "Midnight Caller" was also renewed, as previously announced.

Off the schedule was the mid-season replacement "Nightingales," Aaron Spelling's first series for NBC. It was criticized for its cheesecake portrayal of student nurses.

Other mid-season replacements that weren't on the fall schedule included "Tattinger's" revamp "Nick and Hillary," and spring tryouts "Dream Street," "The Jim Henson Hour," "Nearly Departed," "One of the Boys," "The Father Dowling Mysteries" and "Unsub."

"Miami Vice" and "Family Ties" already had been announced as leaving this season after lengthy runs. The new season is scheduled to begin Sept. 18. ABC and CBS are due to announce their schedules next week.

Singapore Attracting Foreign Filmmakers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SINGAPORE — Singapore is wooing foreign moviemakers and capital, as the great commercial center tries to become Hollywood-on-the-South China Sea.

International films are regularly shot on location here, but there are no local studios. Now separate groups of investors from Italy and Hong Kong have announced plans to build studios in the western part of this city-state.

Italy's Cecchi Gori Group agreed to spend $62.5 million to develop two sound stages, outdoor sets, offices and other facilities on 25-acre seaside site. Construction is expected to start late this year or early 1990, according to Vittorio Cecchi Gori, chairman of the group which also co-financed the Academy Award-winning "The Last Emperor."

When his subsidiary is completed, Cecchi Gori Summit Studios in Singapore expects to produce as many as 10 English-language feature films a year, he said.

Work has already started on the second project, called Tang Dynasty Village. The 30-acre area combines a film studio with a theme park featuring the Chinese architectural style of the Tang era 1,300 years ago.

Organized by Hong Kong entrepreneur Deacon Chiu, developers of the $26 million movie town and cultural display plan to turn out an average of three films a year.

To lure producers, the government's Economic Development Board offers tax holidays and other incentives. EDB Chairman Philip Yeo expects a comprehensive film industry to evolve around the infant studios, which will need processing laboratories, post-production houses and a pool of actors and technicians.

Some observers say Singapore's move is shrewd because China's takeover of Hong Kong in 1997 is likely to spark an exodus of some members of the British colony's booming film industry. Another factor is the possibility that movies made in Taiwan might be barred from Hong Kong after 1997.

At first glance, this island republic of 2.6 million people would seem an unlikely spot to produce films, particularly those aimed in part at local viewers.

Censorship is heavy-handed and the makers of some award-winning movies have refused to release them rather than submit to cuts. "Platoon," Oliver Stone's haunting portrait of the Vietnam War which won four Oscars and three Golden Globes, was withdrawn in 1987.

"A representative from the Board of Film Censors demanded 28 cuts," said Arnold Kopelson, a producer. "The irony of this issue is that anyone can purchase the uncut version in the form of a pirated cassette."

LOOK BEFORE YOU LEAP
 South was perhaps a little reticent in the bidding, especially since North persisted in no trump. That indicated some kind of diamond fit. However, with a void in hearts he was afraid he might not be able to reach dummy.
 At duplicate, you have no problem. You are safe unless trumps are 4-1 and the queen of diamonds is offside, and you can collect an overtrick if trumps break and the diamond finesse works. So rise with the ace of hearts, discarding a diamond, take the diamond finesse and go down one trick like everyone else.
 At rubber bridge, however, the overtrick is unimportant—your first concern should be to secure your contract should trumps break 4-1. Therefore, play a low heart from dummy to the first trick, ruff in hand and draw three rounds of trumps. When West turns up with four trumps, you can actually claim the contract.

Neither vulnerable. South deals.

Cash the ace-king of clubs and ace of diamonds. When the queen does not appear, simply solicit West's aid by throwing him on lead with his winning trump. No matter what suit he returns, he must put you into dummy. On a diamond return, either your jack wins or you capture the queen and return to the table with the ten to take a discard on a rounded-suit winner. And either a heart or a club return allows you to take two pitches on dummy's winners in those suits.

U.S. Reportedly Asking Latin Nations To Ostracize Panama

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PANAMA CITY, Panama — The United States is asking Latin American nations to withdraw their ambassadors from Panama in an bid to force the ouster of military strongman Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, diplomatic sources say.

The sources, who spoke Monday on condition of anonymity, said Washington is circulating a petition among the region's leaders in anticipation of an Organization of American States meeting on Wednesday in Washington.

A diplomatic withdrawal would be part of a general condemnation of the Noriega-backed government, which nullified the May 7 presidential elections.

International observers have said that opposition candidate Guillermo Endara clearly won the election. Endara and one of his running mates were beaten with metal pipes by Noriega supporters last Wednesday.

The United States, Venezuela and Mexico already recalled their envoys and one diplomatic source said Venezuela would ask the OAS to demand that the Panamanian government immediately recognize the results of the elections.

The opposition is demanding it be declared the winner. Government candidates have accepted the decision of the Electoral Tribunal and have refused to make any other public comments.

The OAS meeting was called to discuss the case and the opposition has called for a general strike in Panama to coincide with the gathering.

U.S. Ambassador Arthur Davis left Panama on Monday after accusing Noriega of ordering his men to try to kill one of the opposition leaders, second vice presidential candidate Guillermo Ford, in Wednesday's assault.

"I leave Panama with a heavy heart, but with great hope," Davis told a news conference before leaving from Howard Air Base, a U.S. military installation near Panama City. "The Panamanian people have repeatedly been victimized by Noriega's brutality. Yet they are heartened by their election victory."

Davis said the attack on Ford during an opposition march "was meant to kill." Endara has been hospitalized with head injuries but was to be released today.

Ford called on Monday for the ouster of Noriega and said any talks with the military over a possible solution must center "on a definite point of departure, date and time and flight number" for Panama's de facto ruler.

He also said a solution must include recognition of the opposition's electoral victory.

Ford said he agreed that the attack on him was an assassination attempt, but that he did not know whether Noriega had ordered it, as Davis asserted.

The U.S. government has been trying to oust Noriega since he was indicted by a Florida grand jury in February 1988 on drug-trafficking charges.

It accuses him of repression and has called on the Panamanian Defense Forces to oust him.

"Noriega can talk to the United States about his problems with drug charges," Ford said. "But he will have to talk to us about his problem with us and that's a hell of a big problem."

Polar Explorers Begin Trek Home

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RESOLUTE, Northwest Territories — Eight explorers who trekked 620 miles to the North Pole to draw attention to humanity's assault on the fragile Arctic environment began their journey home looking haggard but happy.

The team on Monday flew to Eureka and then to their base camp in Resolute Monday night.

The explorers — from Britain, Canada, the United States, the Soviet Union, Japan, Australia and West Germany — reached the North Pole on Sunday and planted a U.N. flag. They were to fly to Ottawa today.

With their uncut hair and sunburned faces, the team members appeared haggard and exhausted on Monday night.

Expedition leader Robert Swan of Britain told a news conference that he hoped the trek, called Icewalk, achieved its goal of bringing attention to the environment and would spur politicians to do more to protect nature.

"We've got to work together as one world to take on the environment," said Swan, who became the first person to walk to the North Pole and South Pole. He had reached the South Pole in 1986.

The adventurers, who walked and skied, said temperatures were as low as 67 degrees below zero during the 56-day trek.

All suffered some health problems, from frostbite to influenza, but the American, Darryl Roberts, 23, of New York, suffered the worst.

Severe frostbite on his feet made him limp much of the time, but he never thought of quitting, said Roberts, the first American to walk to the North Pole.

"With the moral support of the other team members, I knew I was going to be able to make it," he said.

The adventurers left Cape Aldrich on Ellesmere Island in Canada's Northwest Territories on March 20.

They made their journey in an effort to spur political action on halting pollution and slowing down global warming — the so-called Greenhouse effect — which is produced by the combustion of fossil fuels.

Icewalk had a high-power public relations operation promoting it and corporate sponsorship supporting its $4 million budget.

Religious Leader Killed By Car Bomb

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIRUT, Lebanon — A powerful car bomb exploded in Syrian-policed west Beirut today, killing the spiritual head of Lebanon's Sunni Moslem community and 15 other people, police said.

Police said 25 other people were wounded in the explosion, which occurred as the Arab League tried to maintain a 6-day-old truce to halt the latest fighting between Moslem and Christian forces.

The explosion happened at 1 p.m. as Grand Mufti Hassan Khaled was being driven through the crowded Aishe Bakkar district from his office to his home for lunch, a police spokesman said.

The spokesman, who cannot be named under standing rules, said Khaled's driver and three other people riding in his car were killed. Four Lebanese riot policemen riding in a jeep in front of Khaled's car also were among the fatalities.

The bomb-laden car blew up only 100 yards from the home of acting Prime Minister Salim Hoss, a Sunni politician who heads the Moslem Cabinet in Lebanon's dual government. It was not clear where Hoss was at the time, but one of his bodyguards guarding the building in which he lives was killed by flying glass and shrapnel.

Khaled, 68, is survived by a wife and four sons. Pools of blood filled the street and Khaled's black Cadillac was smashed. Police reinforcements sealed off the area as ambulances arrived to evacuate victims.

The explosion tore off the facade of a four-story apartment building in front of which the explosives-packed car was parked. Several other buildings, including a mosque, were wrecked within a 50-yard radius.

Fire engines rushed to Aishe Bakkar and began dousing dozens of smoldering cars with water hoses.

The spokesman said he could not tell whether the bomb-laden car was detonated by remote control or a timing device. All Beirut radio stations, however, said the blast was a "premeditated assassination."

Moslem and Christian radio stations interrupted programming to broadcast news of the explosion.

When Khaled's death was confirmed, they joined in mourning, displaying a rare show of unity. Moslem radios broadcast verses from the Koran, Islam's holy book, and the Christian stations played somber music.

It was the sixth car bombing in Lebanon this year. By police count, 28 people were killed and 218 wounded in the previous blasts.

Eleven political leaders of the Sunni sect, including three former prime ministers, held an emergency meeting at Khaled's headquarters an hour after the explosion. Khaled's four sons also attended.

Khaled, the widely respected spiritual guide of Lebanon's 900,000

Sunnis, had publicly advocated Christian-Moslem co-existence in the tiny Mediterranean nation where the two communities have been locked in 14 years of civil warfare.

During the latest round of bloodshed which erupted March 8, Khaled made several calls for restraint, stressing that all problems could be solved through dialogue. He also had declared supported for Arab League efforts to enforce a cease-fire.

Shortly before the explosion, police said that about 60 shells and rockets, fired from Syrian and Druse Moslem positions, had crashed on a two-mile coastal strip in the Christian heratland north of Beirut.

Despite the hostilities, a Museum crossing between the two sectors of the divided capital was reopened to motorists, pedestrians and trucked food and fuel supplies after a nine-week shutdown forced by the fighting.

Soviets Halting Aid To Nicaragua

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev has told the United States that Moscow is stopping its military aid to Nicaragua now that the U.S. administration has shifted its policy in Central America from arms to diplomacy, administration officials said Monday night.

The first word of Gorbachev's pledge was received in a letter from the Soviet leader shortly before Secretary of State James A. Baker III left Washington for Moscow early last week.

That message, which responded to a March 30 letter from President Bush to the Soviet leader, claimed that Moscow had stopped its arms supplies to Managua as of the end of last year. However, the Gorbachev message was considered ambiguous by some of the few officials who were given access to it.

In the Kremlin last Thursday, according to the sources, Gorbachev reiterated to Baker that Moscow has stopped supplying arms to Nicaragua, according to the sources. Neither Baker nor the Soviet leadership made public this Soviet statement, however.

Administration officials said Monday night they knew of no conditions on the Soviet decision to cease supplying Managua with weapons. The main rationale for it, sources said, seems to be acceptance of Washington's argument that termination of U.S. military aid to the Nicaraguan Contras diminishes the threat to Managua, and that U.S. backing for regional diplomatic efforts creates an opportunity to restore peace to the region.

U.S. intelligence agencies have been unable to corroborate Gorbachev's claim that the arms aid has already ceased, officials said. One official conceded that a shift in Soviet policy on arming Managua might take months to show up at the docks of the Central American nation.

The Central Intelligence Agency reported earlier this year that in 1988 the Soviet Union supplied $515 million worth of military equipment to Nicaragua, the second-highest yearly total since the Kremlin began shipping weapons to Managua in 1980.

The shipments of military gear to Nicaragua last year came in 68 ship visits to Nicaraguan ports, about one every six days, and totaled 19,000 tons, according to U.S. intelligence.

The Soviet Union also supplied about $500 million in economic aid to Nicaragua last year, according to U.S. estimates.

Officials cautioned Monday night that it is not clear that a termination of Soviet weapon supplies will have an immediate practical effect on the military situation in Central America. This is because the Sandinista government has already built up a military force of about 80,000 "active duty and mobilized militia reserves," according to U.S. estimates, which is an army of unprecedented size for that region.

Iran Denies Involvement In Crash

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Iran today denied involvement in the Dec. 21 bombing of a Pan American jumbo jet that killed 270 people, the official Islamic Republic News Agency reported.

The agency, monitored in Nicosia, quoted an unnamed foreign ministry spokesman as saying that the CIA had alleged Iranian was involved in the bombing. He said the allegations were "mere lies."

Shortly after the crash, an anonymous caller purporting to speak for a pro-Iranian group called Guardians of the Revolution telephoned major news organizations in London to claim responsibility for the disaster.

Western investigators have been quoted as saying they suspect the bombing was carried out by a radical Syrian-backed Palestinian faction, the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command at the behest of Iran.

The front's leader, Ahmed Jibril, denied in a U.S. television interview April 15 that his group carried out the Pan Am bombing.

Numerous news reports have quoted some investigators as saying that Pan Am Flight 103, flying from Frankfurt to New York, may have been bombed in retaliation for the downing of an Iranian airliner in July.
