Gorbachev Pledges Era Of Peace For Far East

Million Students Get Control Of Central Beijing

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — Mikhail S. Gorbachev today promised a new era of peace in the Far East, said the Red Army would reduce its forces in the area and urged Washington to pull its soldiers out of South Korea.

As the Soviet president spoke, a mighty flood of more than 1 million Chinese poured into the streets to demonstrate for democratic reforms in China and took control of the center of Beijing.

The mass protest prevented Gorbachev from touring the Forbidden City and forced him to call off a scheduled news conference.

In his speech to Chinese academics in the Great Hall of the People, Gorbachev said the 4,300-mile-long Soviet-Chinese frontier should be turned into a "border of peace."

Gorbachev's historic visit to Beijing is to normalize relations after a 30-year chill between the two largest communist countries.

In a nationally televised interview, Gorbachev said his summit talks went well "despite all the tensions." He made a point of acknowledging receipt of a letter from the student protesters, saying it was "a very warm letter, full of feelings of support for perestroika (reform)."

He steered clear, however, of any comment on the demonstrations themselves in keeping with the Soviet position that they are an internal matter for Chinese authorities.

Gorbachev also called for establishment of joint trade ventures between Beijing and Moscow.

During a trip outside the city to visit the Great Wall, Gorbachev's motorcade passed waves of demonstrators making their way in trucks, buses, by bicycle and on foot toward downtown.

Within hours, central Beijing streets were crammed with students, workers, teachers and journalists swelling out of central Tiananmen Square into the streets to march for democracy.

Gorbachev and his wife, Raisa, canceled plans to tour the Forbidden City. And in the late afternoon, after some journalists spent two hours getting through the crowds to the Great Hall where Gorbachev was to hold a news conference, the session was called off.

Afterward, two student representatives met with government and party officials and said they were optimistic an agreement would be reached on their demands, which include a formal talks with the government to be broadcast live.

Officials said Gorbachev would meet reporters sometime later at the state guesthouse, outside the city center.

In his speech a day after the first Sino-Soviet summit since 1959, Gorbachev called for a regional security network in Asia that would provide a means of settling disputes.

And he said an earlier pledge to withdraw 200,000 troops from Asia would be fulfilled by the end of 1990 and would include the pullout of 12 divisions, or 120,000 soldiers, from the China frontier.

The Soviet Union is believed to have 600,000 troops along the Chinese border. The Chinese, armed with older equipment, have more than 1 million troops stationed there.

Gorbachev said 11 air force regiments would be disbanded and 16 warships removed from the Pacific Fleet.

Gorbachev added that the Soviet Union is "prepared to work for the withdrawal, on terms to be agreed with China, of military units and armaments from the border areas, leaving only the personnel required for performing routine border guard duties."

OAS To Take Up Crisis In Panama

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Organization of American States foreign ministers assembled here today for a historic debate on the Panama crisis, with the United States prepared to ask for a resolution demanding that Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega step aside.

As the delegates prepared for their opening session in mid-afternoon, the United States was emerging as perhaps the most militant of the 31 nations represented here for the first special OAS foreign ministers meeting in seven years.

U.S. officials said Tuesday the Bush administration was ready to ask the OAS to demand that Noriega step down following an election 10 days ago that the State Department claimed was rigged initially and then voided when the fraud could not be concealed.

But the preliminary signs for the administration were not encouraging because two of the countries thought to be most sympathetic to the U.S. view, Venezuela and Peru, were proposing resolutions that fell far short of U.S. objectives.

Neither mentions Noriega by name nor recommends that he step down.

The session evoked memories of one 10 years ago when OAS foreign ministers, including then-U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, demanded the resignation of Nicaraguan President Anastasio Somoza. He fled less than a month later.

This year, the delegates seem somewhat reluctant to interfere in Panama's internal affairs to the degree that they did a decade ago in Nicaragua.

The Venezuelan draft calls for the "immediate recognition" of the May 7 electoral returns in Panama while asserting that the solution to Panama's crisis rests exclusively with the Panamanian people.

A U.S. official said the Venezuelan proposal is not plausible because no accurate count of the election returns is possible since most of the ballots have been destroyed.

The Peruvian draft calls on the OAS secretary general to facilitate a dialogue between the Panamanian government and opposition, leading to the election of new authorities.

Alternatively, other mechanisms would be agreed to that would ensure "the transfer of power" in Panama.

While Bush administration officials consider both drafts to be tepid, the decision to raise the events surrounding the Panamanian election to the highest hemispheric tribunal is seen as a plus for U.S. policy.

The United States has been attempting to topple Noriega for more than a year.

Hospital Board Approves Plan Restricting Smokers

By Carol Tyer
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Phase I of a proposed two-year plan to make Pitt County Memorial Hospital a tobacco smoke-free environment was approved Tuesday night by hospital trustees although some members expressed reservations about the proposal.

Several trustees expressed how troubled they were to have the board come out against tobacco smoking in the public hospital of "the fine-cured tobacco capital of the world."

But others expressed their sensitivity to taking a stand for better health among the citizens of Pitt County. The vote was 17-4 in favor of instituting Phase 1, which would provide for smoking in public areas of the hospital to be limited to designated spaces.

Phase 2 of the plan would make the entire hospital off-limits to smoking within the following year — if it is voted in. Several trustees said they would not favor the second phase of the plan.

The phased plan was requested by the medical staff of the hospital as a way to gradually rid the hospital of tobacco smoking by patients, staff or visitors.

The phase voted in Tuesday night calls for immediately installing signs at main entrances and public areas indicating that smoking is prohibited in the public areas of the hospital except in identified smoking areas.

Signs in smoking areas will be clearly identified by "smoking allowed in this area" signs. "No smoking" is to be enforced in waiting areas except for designated area like a limited portion of the emergency department waiting area, the visitors' entrance lobby, a limited portion of the hospital cafeteria and a limited area of the rehabilitation lobby.

During Phase 1, smoking in private offices and patients' rooms may be continued if the person occupying the office or room allows it and if the patient is allowed by his or her doctor to smoke or have visitors smoke in his or her presence.

A tentative plan for year two calls for PCMH to become "smoke-free."

Tobacco use cessation programs would be developed for employees and the community under the plan. The sale of smoking materials and related supplies would no longer be allowed on the premises. And patients would be allowed to smoke only with doctors' orders and with limited distribution of smoking materials.

Several trustees, including W.R. Duke, who is also a county commissioner, Betty Lewis of Farmville and Lawrence Davenport of Pactolus, indicated they would be opposed to going beyond Phase I. Several trustees who voted for the Phase I plan said they would do so only if they were assured that the institution of the Phase I plan would in no way compel them to later moving to Phase 2.

said most hospitals in the country, even Duke University Medical Center built with James Biddle Duke's tobacco fortune, are now smoke-free environments or are becoming so. She said the community hospital must take a stand for people to protect their health by not smoking.

Pitt Schools To Remove Asbestos This Year

By Cherie Evans
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The removal of asbestos found in 27 schools in Pitt County will begin this summer as inspections of all the schools and the central office have been completed and management plans for removing the material have been developed, said Barry Gaskins, public information officer.

"We have development plans for each of the areas where asbestos exist," Gaskins said. "The different projects have different recommendations" for when and how the asbestos should be handled.

"The two things we look at to determine the timeline are if it's friable or non-friable, of course, the friable having most potential for problems, and then the access to staff and student potential," Gaskins said.

"Our actions are all within the legal requirements that we have to go through. What we're going through is not unlike what most school systems in the state and nation are doing," Gaskins said.

The Asbestos Hazard Emergency Response Act of 1986, as regulated by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, requires a series of activities related to the elimination or control of asbestos conditions in schools nationwide.

Asbestos is a hard mineral made of small fibers. Used for fireproofing and insulating, it is not consumed by fire and is not a conductor of heat.

It becomes dangerous once it is released into the air and can cause problems by building up scar tissue within and around the lungs. It has also been shown to contribute to lung cancer among other lung irritations.

The first effects from asbestos generally take 10 to 15 years to develop.

"There are different kinds of asbestos," Gaskins said. "There are different levels of asbestos. You're not talking about an extreme every time you're talking about asbestos," Gaskins said.

About $709,000 will go toward removing the asbestos at: Farmville Central, $690,000; Ayden Elementary, $12,500; G.R. Whitfield, $3,700, and H.B. Sugg, $2,400. Asbestos removal from floors of the Pitt County office building, where the school system is housed, will cost from $6,000 to $8,000.

Another $170,000 will pay for removal of asbestos at A.G. Cox School, Gaskins said.

School maintenance workers trained in removing asbestos will strip it from around pipes and boiler rooms in the other schools, he said.

"The two main projects are A.G. Cox and Farmville Central,"

Gaskins said. "We will do A.G. Cox this summer."

At Cox, asbestos is located in the ceiling, Gaskins said. It is considered friable which means it will crumble, but it is blocked from any direct contact with the students or staff by the ceiling tile.

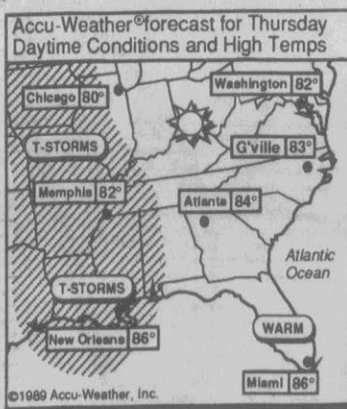

The asbestos will be removed along with the ceiling tile and lights, he said.

The asbestos found in Farmville Central is non-friable, Gaskins said. It is located in the ceiling tiles and is scheduled for removal in the summer of 1990.

"Beyond those two projects, the

Urban Horticulturist Joins Extension Staff

The Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service has added an urban horticulturist to its staff, according to Mitch Smith, extension director.

The new staff member, Al Hight, said his duties will focus on vegetable gardens, lawns, shade trees and insect control — "anything not considered a commercial operation."

Hight said he also will conduct clinics and will talk with garden clubs and other groups on various horticultural issues.

Hight said he's looking forward to working in Pitt County because of the new opportunities the position creates.

"We're trying to reach out to people who need that kind of service," he said. He said his duties include giving more time to the homeowner with horticultural inquiries.

"I hope the people will respond" to the new service, Hight said.

Originally from Macon in Warren County, Hight is a 1983 agricultural graduate of North Carolina State University. He worked in the Fayetteville-Cumberland County area before coming to Pitt County.

AL HIGHT

"We had been looking to hire someone in this position since early November 1988," Smith said.

State Files Complaint Against Funeral Home Owner

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

State health officials are still pursuing legal action against a Bethel funeral home owner accused nearly three months ago of improperly storing medical waste and human body parts in several Pitt County farm buildings.

Nancy Scott, associate attorney general, said her office has filed a complaint and a request for a preliminary injunction in Wake Superior Court, requesting that John Gray of Raleigh provide a description of the contents of the buildings and pay for a licensed contractor to clean up the waste. Gray is not licensed to accept, store or dispose of medical waste, only dead human bodies.

When Gray failed to answer the complaint within 30 days, Ms. Scott said her office sent a copy of the complaint and a court summons to Gray by certified mail. That was about two weeks ago. So far, she said there has been no reply.

If Gray refuses to acknowledge the mail, she said the state will likely choose to notify him of a court date through public notices placed in newspapers and in other public locations.

The state has nearly exhausted all other options. Wake County sheriff's deputies have attempted several times to locate Gray and serve him with a search warrant or an injunction, Ms. Scott said. Deputies have not been able to find him before the time limit on serving the notices expired. Also, it appears no federal aid is available to assist in the cleanup.

"We've let this thing go longer than we would like," said Stephen Reid, spokesman for the solid waste section of the state Division of Health Services. "(But) we have done everything we know how to do at this point."

If the state is ever able to bring Gray into court, a judge may issue an injunction with specific orders detailing how Gray is to clean up the waste, Mrs. Scott said. If Gray fails to follow orders prescribed by a judge, he could be held in contempt of court, she said.

Gray owns Gray Funeral Home and Crematorium in Raleigh and Ayres-Gray Funeral Home in Bethel.

Pitt deputies first discovered the waste Feb. 26 after nearby residents entered a building while playing in the snow. While local authorities determined there was no criminal violation, state officials said Gray has apparently violated several regulations governing the handling of medical waste.

Gray initially entered into talks with the state in an effort to reach a mutual agreement on how the cleanup should be handled. But Ms. Scott said several weeks ago he broke off the discussions. Gray has not returned phone calls from a reporter.

Without his participation, the state has yet to determine where the waste came from, exactly what type of waste is stored or the age of the material.

The farm buildings are located on SR 1545 and SR 1547 near Stokes. Investigators said the buildings contain cylindrical cardboard cartons with needles, syringes, human ashes, specimens with remains of blood and urine samples and pathological remains such as lungs, livers and other internal organs.

Some of the cartons are dated 1986, and a plastic carton at one site was labeled "contaminated needles." Such materials might have come from clinics or physicians who perform minor surgery, investigators said, but they could not determine the exact origin of the waste.

The state asked the Environmental Protection Agency to step in and help clean up the sites, but EPA scene coordinator Bill Klutz said in a telephone interview from his Atlanta office that Superfund money generally is not used for medical waste cleanups.

"We're just going to follow the state's actions and see what the results of those are. If they prove futile or defective ... we may look to see if (Superfund money) may be available to step in," said Klutz, who visited Pitt County to inspect the farm buildings earlier this year.

Reid said Gray is not permitted to burn medical waste in his Raleigh crematory because some items, such as needles, may require incineration at a higher temperature or burial after incineration.

Jewelry Stolen

Investigators said five thefts, including more than $15,000 worth of jewelry from a Carolina East Center jewelry store, were reported to Greenville police on Tuesday.

Officer R.J. Brewington said $15,000 worth of gold chains and $155 worth of rings were taken from Royal's Jewelers at Carolina East Center in a break-in reported at 4:50 a.m.

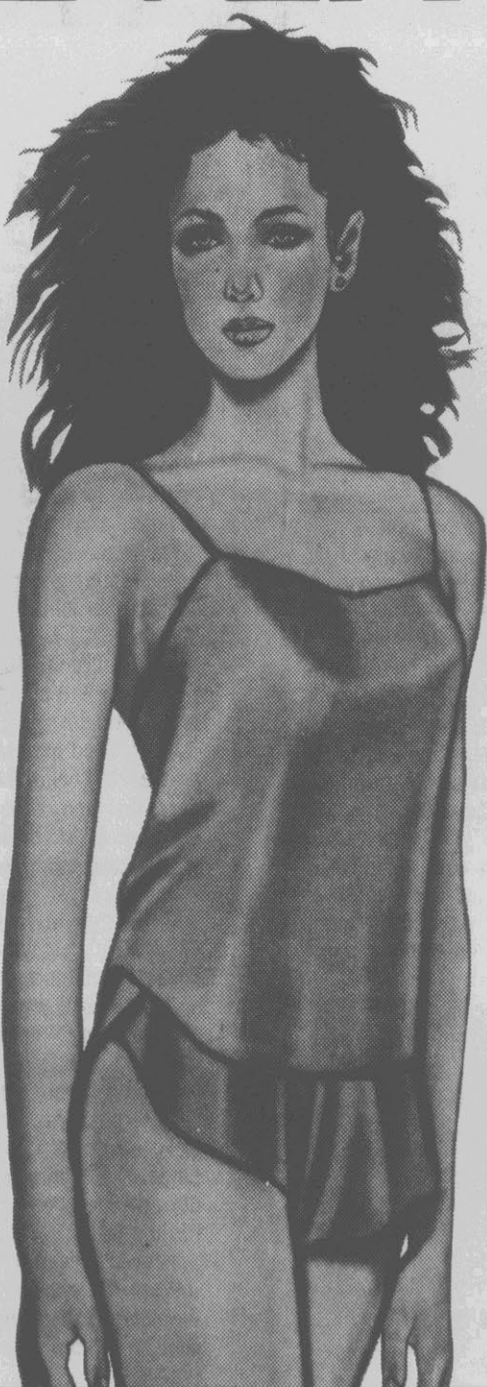

Officer L.T. Gray said a 1985 Ford LTD was taken from a parking lot at Carolina East Mall on Memorial Drive in an incident reported at 7:15 p.m.

Officer C.L. Robertson said four tires and wheels were taken from 3114 S. Memorial Drive in an incident reported at 9:50 a.m.

Officer S.A. Bass said a bicycle was taken from the Boys Club of Pitt County on Arlington Boulevard in a break-in reported at 4:57 p.m., while Officer R.L. Smith said two packages of cigarettes, a six-pack of beer and a bag of potato chips were taken from the Fresh Way Food Store on East 10th Street in an incident reported at 5:35 p.m.

FAMILY BORROWING

It is not uncommon for family members to borrow money among themselves. While this can sometimes strengthen extended family bonds, some couples find that it causes strain in the marriage.

Borrowing from a relative frequently affects the marriage's power structure. The lender may seek to have influence over some of your personal decision making, often with the active or passive acceptance of one spouse or the other. The consequences can be unpleasant.

Counselors often find that the real issue is an inability on the part of one or both spouses to disengage from their family. Borrowing money is often a way of justifying to your spouse a continued influence on you by your family. Counseling will focus on the unresolved issues you have brought into the marriage and help you to learn to limit family power over you. Learning to develop a greater sense of autonomy, combined with greater reliance on your spouse, is the first step.

History

A Step Away From World Conflict

History is being made at the summit meeting between Mikhail S. Gorbachev and China's president Yang Shangkun.

It is not only that the leaders of the two Communist behemoths are meeting after decades of strained relations. Additionally, it is the circumstances under which they are meeting.

China's student elite continue to demonstrate in Beijing even as the conferences go on. Amazingly their hero is Gorbachev — the man they see as bringing new levels of democracy to the neighboring Soviet Union. The students seem unaware of the doleful economic situation in the Soviet Union.

It is equally amazing that the students can continue to demonstrate in China, where under previous Communist regimes such dissent would have been cruelly put down.

It is also refreshing that the western world does not view an accord between the Soviet Union and China with the same grave concern that such a development would have caused a couple of decades back.

Gorbachev said improvement in the relations between the two countries should not be viewed as directed toward any third country. He said the entire world would gain from improved Soviet-Chinese relations. The United States, which has a huge stake in what is going on in China and the Soviet Union, seems to agree.

Communism is not about to disappear from the face of the globe, but iron fisted Communism is crumbling. The largest two Communist nations have come to see that controlled societies lead to economic troubles, as well as government corruption. The times are producing more democratic leadership.

As western fear of the Soviet Union as a military power diminishes, so too should concern about possible war between the Soviets and China. Thus with all the social and economic changes under way within the two nations, an accommodation between them can indeed be another step away from world conflict that could lead to world destruction.

Well Done

O. Max Gardner Award Cites Laupus

The O. Max Gardner Award, given by the University of North Carolina Board of Governors, grows in prestige every year

And it is fitting that Dr. William E. Laupus, vice chancellor for health sciences and former dean of the Medical School at East Carolina University, is one of this year's recipients.

The award, named after the late Gov. O. Max Gardner, recognizes faculty who have made the greatest contributions to the welfare of the human race.

That description applies to Dr. Laupus who came to the tiny new East Carolina University School of Medicine in 1975 and guided its development into a nationally recognized medical education facility.

The medical school, and Pitt County Memorial Hospital which developed along with it, had an enormous task ahead when it was established. Given that, it was a natural alliance between the fledgling school and Laupus as its new dean in 1975.

The board of governors citation says it best. "Blessed with uncommon wisdom, sensitivity and patience, Dr. Laupus quietly harnessed the energy of the proud eastern region of North Carolina and directed that energy toward excellence in medical education, research and service. Guided by his single-minded dedication, the School of Medicine successfully addressed each of its mandates: to increase the supply of primary care physicians for our state, to enhance the opportunities for minority students to obtain a medical education, and to raise the standard of health care available to the people of eastern North Carolina.

"It is difficult to conceive that the school would have achieved its remarkable record without the unique contributions of its founding dean."

When Dr. Laupus accepted the challenge to develop the four year medical school, the state and the board of governors were committed to its adequate funding. It is surely fate that the right individual was identified to guide development precisely at this time.

Today a respected School of Medicine stands at East Carolina University. The quality of medical care in eastern North Carolina has been immensely improved. Great credit is due to Laupus and the prestigious O. Max Gardner award attests that the medical school's development is a job well done.

A British Lesson For Democrats

LONDON — For the past ten years, there's been a steady traffic of Republican politicians to London and Tory politicians to Washington, as operatives in the winning parties of the two old allies swapped tricks of the trade. Now, for the first time in the 1980s, it looks as if the opposition Laborites may have something to teach the Democrats.

Neil Kinnock and his colleagues this week formally publish the policy paper that came out of the two-year review the Labor Party chieftain ordered after Labor suffered a third successive defeat at the hands of Margaret Thatcher in 1987.

Gone are the pledges of unilateral disarmament, of early removal of American nuclear bases from Britain, of massive renationalization of the industries the Tories sold to private investors. Gone, too, is the dogmatic opposition to sale of public-housing units to their tenants — perhaps Thatcher's most popular social policy.

At some cost to his own consistency and avowed principles, Kinnock has systematically erased most of the elements that caused one wit to call the 1983 Labor platform 'the longest suicide note in history.' It was the policy embedded in that platform and the prospect of the election debacle it produced drove many notable figures from the party's right-wing to quit Labor in 1981 and form the Social Democratic Party (SDP) as a new 'third force.'

In place of that platform, Kinnock and his allies have put forward a foreign policy closely resembling that of West Germany's Kohl-Genscher conservative coalition and a domestic policy which smacks more of welfare-state capitalism than doctrinaire socialism.

Now it is the left-wingers in Labor who are screaming 'betrayal' at Kinnock and threatening to overturn his handiwork at the party conference this autumn. But their bark is worse than their bite. Labor's rank-and-file are hungry for victory and there's a sense that Kinnock's new-found pragmatism may point the way.

It won't be easy, for the Tories have entrenched themselves in the London suburbs and all of southeastern England in a fashion that resembles the grip Republicans have fixed on the South in the last three presidential elections. And Kinnock himself suffers a bit from the reputation of being too much an intellectual lightweight to fill No. 10 Downing Street.

But he's gaining respect for his political acumen. As Kinnock has risen, the teeter-totter has dramatically dropped for his great rival for de facto leadership of the forces opposing Thatcher, Dr. David Owen. Owen was the most charismatic of the 'Gang of Four' who led the Labor exodus and the founding of the SDP. The youthful foreign secretary in the last Labor government, he had an unblushingly high estimate of his own abilities. But others who did not share that prejudice — including, reportedly, Mrs. Thatcher — thought him the man most fit to succeed her as prime minister should the political balance shift slightly leftward.

But over the weekend, Owen admitted publicly that the SDP experiment has gone bust. The party has only 11,000 members, he said, and cannot afford to compete on a national scale in next month's European Parliament elections or the next general election.

So Britain appears headed back to two-party politics, with Labor once again a credible alternative. For reporters like myself, who have come to believe that there's a clear parallel in the forces operating in British and American politics, the development is a significant one.

It's as if a Ted Kennedy without his personal problems had rounded on the left-wing of the Democratic Party and said, 'We're not going to let you push us into defense and domestic policies that doom us to another defeat.' But Kennedy is not the leader of the Democrats; no one is. And the party at present has no vehicle for undertaking or forcing a review of the policies that have crippled it in the last three campaigns. All that must be postponed until the 1992 presidential primaries.

Kinnock and Labor have sent a clear signal that they have learned a lesson from their three defeats and have taken steps to make themselves competitive. If the Anglo-American parallels of the past decade hold, Republicans should not be too complacent about the next phase of American politics.

Saving The American Dream

BOSTON — I wrote recently about the economic gap that has opened up on the favorite American turf we call real estate.

The haves and have-nots of the '80s are now those who have and have not their own homes. And the gap, I wrote, is often between generations. While the rise of real-estate values contributed to the economic well-being of the elderly, the rise of real-estate costs contributes to the economic stress of the young.

Well, the response to that column would fill a starter house. If I could reconstruct the letters into wood, I could indeed build a handyperson's special.

Most of my older correspondents repeated one simple refrain. If young people can't buy their own homes, it is their own fault. In the words of a woman from Mt. Dora, Fla.: "Today's young families often have two incomes and still complain that they can't save. The truth is, they won't."

Another in St. Petersburg wrote: "Are these the same young people who arrived at college with two cars full of the latest in stereo, VCR, TV, microwave, toaster oven? Are these the same young people who spend every cent they make on their backs, their stomachs or their cars?"

A San Franciscan added, "You know what the big difference is? Well, we knew how to save for the big item, a home first, then a car, as we could afford them."

Correspondents like one from Chino Valley, Ariz., chronicled in detail their own youthful thrift: "The laundry was done in a neighbor's basement, hung out in the wind (even in three feet of snow). This included, of course, diapers (not disposable)." Others, such as one from Spring Lake, Mich., chronicled in detail today's youthful spendthrift: "Today's young people have to have two cars, a boat, a camper, designer clothes, weekend vacations, Camcorders, hot tubs....They have not learned to sacrifice some things to obtain others."

I wasn't entirely surprised by this generational judgment. It is common for an aging cohort to think that (1) life was better in the old days and (2) they had it harder when they were young. Never mind the apparent contradiction in those phrases.

Succeeding generations in America have had an easier time of it. The mother of the woman who did her laundry in a neighbor's basement did hers in a sink. Her grandmother did it in a tub and her great-grandmother at a river's edge. The correspondent whose first house had no wiring may have had parents who lived in a time without electricity. His grandparents lived in a log cabin.

What I find intriguing, though, is the subtext of thrift. There is a deep-seated belief that if the young would only scrimp like their elders, they too could have that house to call their own. It doesn't quite add up, mathematically or historically.

The Depression generation was most assuredly thrifty, if that is an appropriate synonym for impoverished. Their only safety net was the ability to stretch each dollar.

But the generation that built and bought the postwar homes of the Fifties in which baby-boomers were raised were people who set the style of consumption we live by. As Phillip Longman, the author of "Born to Pay," notes: "The Fifties generation invented the credit card and established installment buying." Collectively their generation has run the country while running up a deficit.

More pointedly, in 1948, a home in the postwar development of Levittown cost $7,000, with no money down. Today the average home is creeping toward $100,000 and you need 10 percent for a downpayment. Since the 1970s, real estate has risen faster than inflation, faster surely than the interest on any savings accounts. It may even have proved a disincentive to savings.

What of the perception that today's young are choosing the immediate gratification of VCRs? There is some truth in that, but I wonder if it's a cause or effect of the receding hope of home-owning.

Longman says the apt phrase is displaced consumption. "If you have a new-collar job and know it's hopeless to save for a house, you have a lot of discretionary income. If you can't afford to buy a house, you can afford to buy the world's best mustard and probably will."

Finally, it is ironic that a column about the connections that bind generations to each other, as well as to the hope of home, drew such a mailbag of generational conflict. It seems to me that those who place such value on thrift should also want to save the American dream.

The Only Way To Prove They're Doing A Good Job

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — The change of leadership in the state House could soon bring a change in the access North Carolinians enjoy to the voting records of their legislators.

With Rep. Liston Ramsey, D-Madison, out of the speaker's chair, a bill is moving through the House that would upgrade the legislature's electronic voting system. If the bill becomes law — and the prospects appear to be good — then every vote would be recorded electronically, stored in a computer data base, and thus be available to the public through computer terminals.

During Ramsey's 8-year tenure as speaker, he resisted efforts to upgrade the legislature's electronic voting system in this fashion for several reasons. He said he didn't think the legislature should spend the money it would cost to put in such a system, and that he worried that hackers could invade a computer data base and change official state records.

But the current House leadership doesn't have such a concern and a bill filed by three Republican members recently received unanimous support in the important House Rules committee. Although the bill does not require any new appropriations because it simply reassigns money already budgeted to the legislature, it was sent to the House Appropriations Committee.

Rep. Larry Etheridge, R-Wilson, sponsor of the bill, envisions a system where legislative votes would be transferred directly from the electronic voting board into the legislative computer. The public already has access to that computer for some purposes. Now, the public would be able to perform basic data analysis on the voting records.

For example, in the last campaign, Etheridge's opponent charged that he was absent a great deal of time. To prove or disprove this point, the two sides had to thumb through hundreds of bill records, checking when Etheridge voted and when he didn't. With the new system, a couple computer commands and, within a few seconds, there would probably be a convenient count of how many votes the member cast and how many he missed.

The system would also be able to perform more sophisticated analysis, also. For example, if the bill's co-sponsors Reps. Art Pope, R-Wake, and Robert Grady, R-Onslow, want to compare their floor votes on environmental bills, they will probably be able to do so through use of a key word command. In a short time, the computer should be able to gather every environmental issue that came to the House floor and list how each of the man had voted.

This change in legislative operations is much needed because of the arcane vote-recording system currently in use. "The presumption (on the part of the public) is the voting record is there. And it is," Etheridge said, "But you need to have a Ph.D. in library science to get to it."

Gathering any complete record of legislative votes for a topic as broad as environmental, educational or commercial issues would probably involve hundreds of hours of research.

In interviews conducted for a story written last year on the difficulty of researching legislative votes, several legislators speculated that the system was designed to be difficult to use, and thus, good for those legislators who want to hide their records from political opponents.

If electronic voting and the computer system are merged, the public will have great new access to the positions their elected representatives are taking. That might be dangerous for some. But as Etheridge added, it might also be good news for legislators. The public might find out they're doing a good job in Raleigh.

WASHINGTON — George Bush outlined his anti-crime package in a setting reminiscent of his presidential campaign, but the president sounded very different from the candidate on gun control and he never mentioned prison furloughs.

Once again, when confronted with the realities and conflicting pressures of governing, Bush opted for compromise.

His speech Monday from the steps of the U.S. Capitol included echoes from his campaign, including his call for greater use of the death penalty, tougher sentencing and increased prison construction.

But on the touchy question of gun control, he sounded far different.

His calls for a ban on large-capacity cartridge magazines and for import restrictions on assault-style weapons were welcomed by gun control advocates. But while taking that action, the president declined to move against assault-style rifles manufactured domestically.

A month ago, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater suggested — and it was nothing more than a suggestion — that a ban on domestically manufactured assault-style rifles could be part of the Bush crime package.

The press secretary said there was "some unfairness" because the ban on imported weapons would have no impact on sales of U.S. made rapid-fire rifles.

"Unfortunately, it is not something we can do anything about," said Fitzwater. "To do anything about domestically manufactured weapons would require a change in the law."

That change was never requested.

What Bush did request was a prohibition on manufacture and sale of magazines that carry more than 15 cartridges, a position that puts him on the same side as Democratic Sen. Howard Metzenbaum of Ohio.

But Metzenbaum also wants to ban sales of new assault-style weapons made in the United States. The Ohio senator argues that limiting imports only deals with about 25 percent of the weapons.

The day that Bush delivered his speech, the National Rifle Association ran a full-page ad that attacked Metzenbaum's bill. The NRA ad suggested alternatives that were identical to some of Bush's key proposals, including barring plea bargaining for any felony committed with a gun, mandatory sentencing for crimes committed with a gun, and increased prison construction.

During the campaign, Bush took a no-compromise position on gun control. "My opponent favors gun control and I do not," he said in speech after speech. "I don't believe in new restrictions on the rights of citizens to own arms."

As a president faced with a growing wave of drug-related violence, Bush is inching away from that hard line.

"The right to own a gun is not a license to harm others," he said Monday, using language unlike any he uttered during the campaign.

Furniture Retailers Ask Help

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HIGH POINT — State Attorney General Lacy Thornburg says he's considering legal action against furniture manufacturers that pull their products from North Carolina retail stores.

"We are going to work on this issue the next few days and hope to have a legal review by the end of the week," Thornburg said Tuesday. "We have been asked by the furniture retailers to look into this matter, and that's what we will be doing."

Four furniture companies — Henredon, Drexel Heritage, Hickory Craft and La Barge Furniture — notified retailers last weekend that they were not accepting orders from North Carolina retailers. The four are owned by Masco, which is based in Michigan. Other companies have said they may follow suit.

Thornburg called the companies' decision "an act of intimidation. He said the companies are trying to intimidate retailers, legislators and consumers.

The pullout was attributed to a bill approved by the state Senate last week that prohibits manufacturers from restricting telephone sales and sales outside geographic areas.

Supporters of the bill said manufacturers limit competition and set prices with retailing restrictions.

Under the bill, manufacturers could still control advertising, retailing standards and displays, but could not prohibit retailers from selling to customers over a toll-free phone line. The manufacturers have complained that the toll-free sales would lead to discount operations that would offer low prices and no services.

The bill has been sent to the House for debate scheduled this week.

At least 100 North Carolina retailers could be affected by the pullout, said Bill Kester, president of Rose Furniture in High Point.

While there are other furniture manufacturers that could fill the void, these companies have the name and product recognition, Kester said.

"Most consumers who are talking about it are outraged, too," Kester said.

Justice Department staff members met with furniture retailers from across the state Monday, Thornburg said, and his department "will make an analysis of legality regarding any anti-trust action."

Kester met with Thornburg Monday. He also said manufacturers are trying to intimidate the General Assembly, consumers and retailers.

"The attorney general assured us he was going to take the steps necessary to prevent this," Kester said. "I think members in the House are as outraged about this as the Senate, and nobody is opposing the bill. If anything, more are favoring it."

The loss of Henredon and Drexel Heritage will be felt in High Point-area stores, retailers agree. The two are leaders in the high-end market producing a variety of furnishings.

Literacy Classes Unchanged

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Despite increased efforts to reach more of the 1.7 million North Carolinians estimated to be illiterate, enrollment in literacy classes remained virtually unchanged during the past year, officials say.

From 1986-87 to 1987-88, the number of adults enrolled in the free literacy classes at the state's 58 community colleges increased by less than 1 percent — from 95,972 to 96,625.

The statistics are part of an annual report on literacy programs in the two-year schools. It will be presented to members of the state Board of Community Colleges on Thursday.

The report says last year community colleges reached 5.56 percent of all North Carolinians estimated to need literacy training, which includes courses in reading and writing, as well as classes that lead to a high school diploma. The previous year, they enrolled 5.5 percent.

The community colleges get about $20 million annually to provide the free literacy programs, which are funded according to the number of students enrolled.

But despite the enormous need for literacy classes in the state, the schools did not spend all the money. Roughly $1.6 million — or about 8 percent of the $20 million literacy budget — remained unspent for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1988, the report says.

The reason for that, school officials say, is enrollment in the literacy classes fluctuates widely.

Jet Blows Two Tires In Landing

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — A Piedmont Airlines jet with 46 people aboard was forced to return to Palm Beach International Airport just after takeoff Tuesday because the landing gear failed to retract, a Federal Aviation Administration spokesman said.

The Boeing 737, bound for Orlando and Charlotte, N.C., blew two tires during the unscheduled landing, but none of the 40 passengers or six crew members was injured, said Ken Fisher, a Palm Beach County fire-rescue spokesman. Those on board left the plane by a staircase as it sat on the main runway.

"It appeared that a hydraulic line was broken, because quite an amount of fluid continued to leak on to the ground after the landing," Fisher said. He said the hydraulic system is used to control the brakes, landing gear, wing flaps and steering.

The plane, carrying 12,300 pounds of fuel, took off at 4:24 p.m. EDT, and the pilot declared an emergency almost immediately. The plane landed only minutes later, said an FAA spokesman in Atlanta.

The passengers were taken by bus to the terminal building and booked onto other flights. The main runway remained closed for one hour and nine minutes, an airport spokesman said.

Audit Says DPI Needs Trimming

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The Department of Public Instruction is top-heavy and almost 140 jobs should be cut, a move that would save $5.4 million a year, state Auditor Ed Renfrow says.

"There exists fragmented authority, too many administrative titles, a lack of uniformity among the numerous divisions and instances of overlap and duplication of duties," says a report to be released today that is the first part of an ongoing audit of the state's public education system.

"It appears the organization has grown over the years in an inconsistent manner, without any standards or criteria for uniform staffing patterns," the report says.

The recommended cut of 139 jobs would mean streamlining the agency's staff from 1,010 workers to 871, or by 14 percent.

Superintendent of Public Instruction Bob Etheridge requested the report after taking office in January. He took over a department that was run for 20 years by Craig Phillips, who retired after deciding not to seek re-election last year.

In a written response to Renfrow, Etheridge said he is generally pleased with the report.

"Overall, we are in agreement with most of your findings and proposed plan of reorganization," Etheridge said. "You have done exactly what I asked you to do."

Regional Education Centers should be reorganized to provide better service and to meet the specialized needs of particular regions, the report says.

The chapter on the regional centers points out that while each received about the same annual funding — between $900,000 and $1.1 million — the eight centers serve different numbers of students, schools and school systems.

For example, the Regional Education Center in Greensboro serves more students, schools, school systems, exceptional students and students with special needs than any of the other centers. So, it has less to spend per student than the other regional centers.

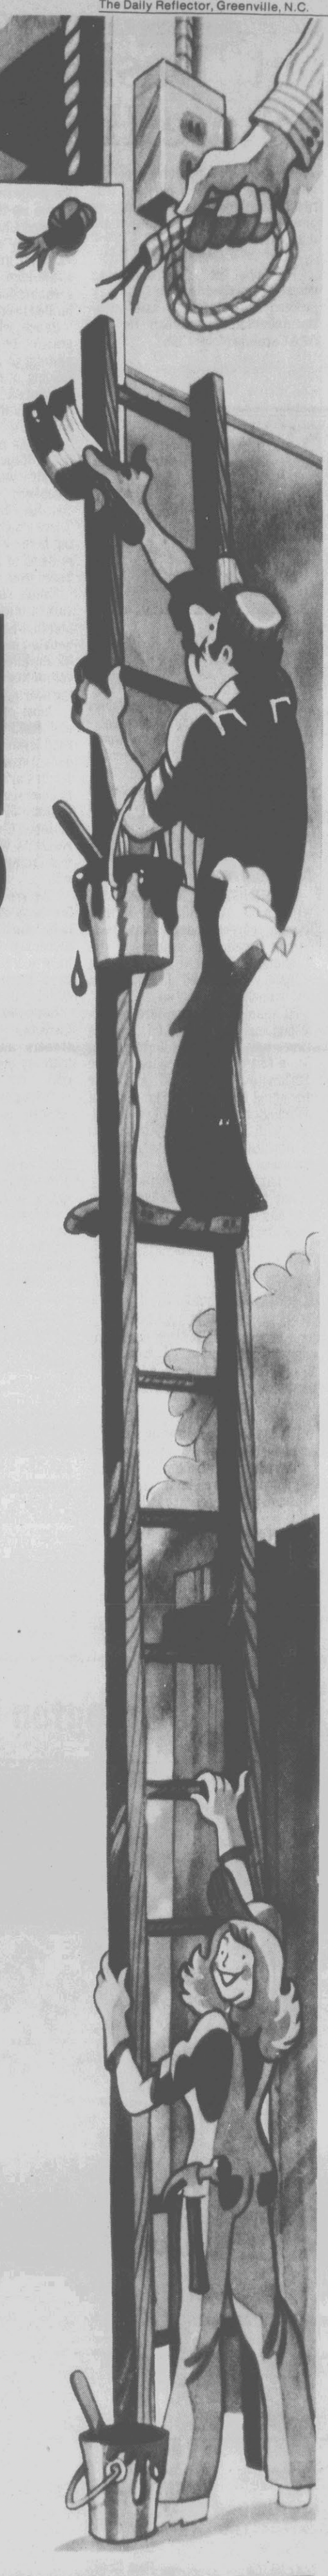

The report recommended the number of jobs in the eight centers, now 204, be cut to 184.

"We concur that the eight regional centers are not balanced in terms of local administrative unit personnel, number of students in the region or the geographical area," Etheridge said in his response.

When Phillips ran the department, concerns were raised — particularly in election years — that the regional centers served little practical purpose except to provide ways for Phillips to spread his political organization and patronage across the state.

One area mentioned in the report, but not dealt with in depth, is how state government handles education in elementary, middle and high schools. Now, there are no clear lines of responsibility, with duties shared among the superintendent of public instruction, the State Board of Education and the governor.

"The current system has a critical flaw," the report said. "Responsibilities for overseeing the state's public school system are divided up in such a way that it is difficult for the citizens of this state to hold those responsible for the successes or failures of the system."

Government, Business Officials Back Plans For State Highway Program

The Daily Reflector Classifieds

"When You Want Results!"

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — More than 100 local government and business leaders flocked to a legislative hearing to support the $8.6 billion highway bill, while a handful of detractors criticized its price tag and potential impact on the environment.

The House and Senate finance committees conducted the hearing

Tuesday, which supporters hope will give momentum to a package that has been stalled since gaining approval of other committees more than a month ago.

"We hope the ... legislation is quickly approved so the job may proceed without delay," said Quentin Anderson, spokesman for the AAA Carolina Motor Club.

Only eight people spoke against the program, while so many people signed up to endorse it that Senate Finance Chairman Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, delayed the hearing so various groups could designate spokesmen. Forty-three ended up speaking for the bill, and they were limited to one minute each.

Rauch, who has criticized the program's 12-year timetable and is pushing to add a bond issue to the funding provisions, said he was not convinced the turnout reflected overwhelming support from average citizens.

"It was not a grassroots outpouring," Rauch told reporters. "The people were brought here by chambers of commerce, by city councils, by county commissions. There's nothing wrong with them being here ... but I'm saying there are millions of people who haven't been heard from."

Rauch said he would appoint a subcommittee today to study the bill and that he hoped it would clear the Senate in two or three weeks. Meanwhile, the House Finance Subcommittee on Highways is continuing hearings on the package.

"Most of our citizens agree that additional taxes needed to fund this road system are necessary," said Jack Dossenbach, president of the North Carolina Association of County Commissioners.

Larry Meadows, county manager of Jones County, said Coastal Plain residents who have long sought the four-laning of U.S. 17 are behind the bill.

"We are willing to pay the price," Meadows said. "We are willing to help others understand they also must pay the price if they are to have adequate roads. We have to have them to reach any kind of stability in our economy."

Loise Morgan, leader of the North Carolina Coalition of Property Owners and Taxpayers, said the highway program was not worth the cost.

"With the passage of this bill, government is putting its hands in the pockets of our working class," Ms. Morgan said. "Government in North Carolina has its priorities out of line. The argument that higher gasoline taxes will help develop North Carolina is a figment of the imagination."

"Please read my lips," said Joe Saunders, a Gastonia businessman. "No tax increases."

Representatives of cities and counties from mountains to coast rushed to the podium to support the program, which would construct an "intrastate" network of four-lane highways, build "loop" thoroughfares around seven urban centers and pave 10,000 miles of rural roads.

Both bills seek a 5 1/4 cents per gallon increase in the state gasoline tax. The House bill would impose a 2 percent fee on automobile title transfers, while the Senate bill would replace the current 2 percent sales tax on autos with a 3 percent "user fee."

"It's time we all started working together," Charlotte Mayor Sue Myrick said, "because this benefits everyone, urban and rural alike."

Anderson said a survey of the Carolina AAA Motor Club's 4,263 members showed that 73 percent favored a gasoline tax increase of some amount for a highway building program.

Groups representing automobile and truck dealers said they supported a road-building program but opposed the title transfer fees, which they said would hurt sales.

Barney W. Hill of Thomasville said technological advances could lead to new forms of transportation in the next decade or two.

"We could spend the next 12 years paying for a massive program that would be of no use to anybody," Hill said. "By the year 2001, our current system of surface transportation may be as obsolete as Hannibal's elephants."

The proposed outer loops are unnecessary and would endanger watersheds, lead to "strip" development and worsen pollution, said Ed Harrison of Durham, vice-president of the Conservation Council of North Carolina.

IN THE STATE

Abstinence

RALEIGH (AP) — Despite muted questions about legislating morality, a House committee easily approved a bill to require that public schools promote abstinence from sex as "the only certain means" of avoiding pregnancy and sexually transmitted diseases.

Rep. Coy Privette, R-Cabarrus, told the panel he hopes to send the message that abstinence "is the expected standard for all school-age children."

"I thought it would be an excellent standard for us to adopt in North Carolina," said Privette, who modeled the bill after a law in Indiana.

While Privette said he expects the full House to approve the bill, it remained to be seen whether the Senate would address the issue this session. The deadline for bills not dealing with appropriations or finance matters to pass at least one chamber was last Thursday.

S&L Protest

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolinians should fight President Bush's plan to bail out the crippled savings and loan industry because it has abandoned its original purpose of providing low-cost mortgage money for housing, protesters say.

"Any bailout plan should be tied to a renewed federal commitment to affordable housing," says a letter sent by North Carolina protesters to the state's congressional delegation.

At a demonstration Tuesday in downtown Raleigh, a representative of the Financial Democracy Campaign said Bush's bail-out plan is a "rip-off and a scandal" that would cost North Carolina taxpayers $1,000 each.

"In return for that, North Carolina gets nothing — absolutely nothing," said Bob Hall, the state's representative of the Washington-based coalition of church, labor, neighborhood and citizen groups.

Water Bonds

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Both proponents and opponents of an Asheville bond issue proposal that would have financed improvements to the city-county water system say they were surprised at how soundly the measure was defeated.

Sixty-one percent of the votes were cast against issuing the general obligation bonds, which would have pledged property tax revenues to pay for the improvements.

Officials said 2,918 people casted ballots for the issue and 4,571 voted against it.

New Editor

WASHINGTON, N.C. (AP) — William J. Coughlin, a former foreign correspondent, has been named executive editor of the Washington Daily News, according to Ashley B. Futrell Jr., president and publisher.

Coughlin is a former foreign correspondent for the Los Angeles Times and McGraw-Hill Publishing Co., a former foreign editor for The Washington Times and a former managing editor of the Star-News of Wilmington. He began his news career with United Press Association in Honolulu, Mexico City and San Francisco.

A native of Washington, D.C., Coughlin succeeds J. Michael Rouse, who has been named managing editor of The Fayetteville Observer.

Redwood Travels

CHEROKEE, N.C. (AP) — An 11-ton, coastal redwood log made an eight-day, 3,000-mile trip from Fort Bragg, Calif., to Cherokee, and will be carved into a huge bust of a Cherokee scholar.

The 5 1/2-foot-diameter log raised a lot of eyebrows as it made its way on a flatbed tractor-trailer rig through the downtown area on its way to the Museum of the Cherokee Indian.

The redwood log was donated to the museum by the Georgia-Pacific Co. It will be carved into a huge bust of Sequoyia, the famous Cherokee scholar and leader who created the Cherokee syllabary (system of writing). Sequoyah died in 1843.

Musician Green Dies

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — John Green, who pursued a music career despite advice from his father and won five Oscars for movie scores including "An American in Paris" and "Easter Parade," has died. He was 80.

Green died at home Monday night of pulmonary edema, said his spokesman Frank Liberman. Green had suffered a stroke two years ago.

Green, an accomplished pianist, began playing at age 3. Nine years later, he became a protege of George Gershwin.

Green received 14 Academy Award nominations in a career spanning decades. His Oscar victories came for scoring "Easter Parade," "An American in Paris," "West Side Story" and "Oliver!" and for producing the one-reel short subject "The Merry Wives of Windsor Overture."

Additional awards included the recording industry's Grammy, the film industry's Golden Globe, and an Aggie, the highest award of the Songwriters Guild.

In 1963, the American Society of Music Arrangers named Green the first recipient of its President's Award for distinguished service to music, musicians and the entertainment industry.

He had remained active until a few days before his death. On Sunday, he produced the annual gala for the John Douglas French Foundation for Alzheimer's disease, of which he was a founder.

A memorial service will be held Monday at the Bel-Air Presbyterian Church.

High Winds, Hail Hit Texas

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A tornado swept through a central Texas town early today, destroying several homes, damaging apartments and injuring more than a dozen people, part of a severe storm system that drenched the Southwest for a second day.

Tornadoes, hail and heavy rains elsewhere in Texas forced the evacuation of 150 homes and a zoo.

In the Northeast, showers stretched from eastern Virginia to southern New England. There was widespread flooding in the Newark, N.J., area.

A tornado struck Jarrell, Texas, early today, destroying several homes, damaging an apartment complex and five 18-wheelers on Interstate 35, the state Department of Public Safety reported. Fourteen people were taken to a hospital for treatment of injuries.

The tornado came as severe thunderstorms triggered tornadoes, flash flooding and hail across a vast expanse of Texas from the Rio Grande to the Red River.

Forecasts called for the violent weather to continue through today.

"I've been working here since 1973 and this is the worst thunderstorm I've ever seen," said Warren Kneis, supervisor for the Federal Aviation Administration at the Dallas-Fort Worth airport control tower.

In addition to Texas, which got 7 inches of rain in some parts, flood warnings were also issued for parts of Louisiana and Oklahoma. A tornado touched down near Westcliffe, Colo., and huge hail pelted Louisiana and Oklahoma.

A weekend storm that damaged more than half of the 190 Apache tank-killer helicopters at Fort Hood in Killeen, Texas, could cost $500 million, said Rep. John P. Murtha, D-Pa., chairman of the House Defense Appropriations Committee.

Tuesday night, thunderstorms disrupted air travel in the Dallas area, where roads also were flooded. However, normal operations resumed early today as the storm system moved east.

The thunderstorms developed ahead of a cold front as it crossed the Southern Plains and along a stationary front in Texas, the National Weather Service said.

The weather service said as many as nine tornadoes hit Texas on Tuesday.

A funnel cloud was reported near Del Rio in western Texas early today and a severe thunderstorm with at least one funnel cloud damaged homes, barns and out-buildings near Bracketville in neighboring Kinney County.

Some of the strongest thunderstorms roared across north and northeast Texas overnight with high wind or tornadoes causing damage in Hood and Johnson Counties, southwest of Fort Worth. High wind ripped off the roof of a nursing home at Cleburne and some mobile homes were damaged at Granbury.

Gainesville, a city of 14,000 people about 60 miles northwest of Dallas, was among the hardest hit Tuesday. National Guardsmen helped evacuate about 150 homes in low-lying areas threatened by floods, said state Trooper M. Dial. Most evacuees were taken out by boat.

Animals at Gainesville's Frank Buck Zoo were taken to a cattle auction barn because of flooding.

Exports Trim Trade Deficit

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The U.S. trade deficit narrowed to $8.86 billion in March as a record level of export sales helped to offset rising oil imports, the government said today.

The Commerce Department said the improvement in the country's trade balance came from a 7.4 percent rise in exports, which hit a record $30.78 billion. Imports were up as well, climbing by 3 percent to $39.64 billion.

The March deficit represented a 9.9 percent improvement from a revised February imbalance of $9.82 billion. The March deficit was the lowest since January, when the deficit fell to $8.68 billion.

For the first three months of the year, the deficit has been running at an annual rate of $109.4 billion, an improvement from last year's deficit of $119.76 billion.

The size of the March trade improvement was a surprise to many economists. Analysts continue to insist, however, that the country's trade performance will show little, if any, improvement for the whole year as U.S. exports fall victim to recent increases in the value of the dollar, which make American products more expensive on overseas markets.

Such an outcome would represent a blow to the Bush administration, which is counting on continued trade improvement this year to fuel overall economic growth.

Last year's dramatic 21 percent drop in the trade deficit from an all-time high of $152.1 billion in 1987 accounted for almost half of all U.S. economic growth.

The trade improvement last year came from a sharp jump in export sales. The administration is hoping to push exports even higher in 1989 by threatening to retaliate against countries that keep their markets closed to U.S. products.

The March improvement came despite the fact that the bill for foreign oil climbed to $3.69 billion, up 13.6 percent from the February level, reflecting higher prices.

The total oil bill was the highest since November 1987. The $15.97 per barrel price represented the fourth consecutive monthly increase.

smallest imbalance in more than seven years.

But U.S. exports fared exceptionally well during the month with across-the-board increases in most categories. The $30.78 billion in total sales topped the previous record of $29.06 billion set last December.

The strength in exports helped to give the United States a rare trade surplus of $0.4 billion with Western Europe, the best showing since March 1983. The deficit with Canada, the largest U.S. trading partner, fell to $0.2 billion, the

As usual, the biggest deficit was recorded with Japan, a $4.2 billion imbalance, down from a $4.7 billion gap in February. Other large deficits were recorded with Taiwan, $0.8 billion; South Korea, $0.4 billion, and Brazil, $0.3 billion.

ECU Names Seven New Scholars

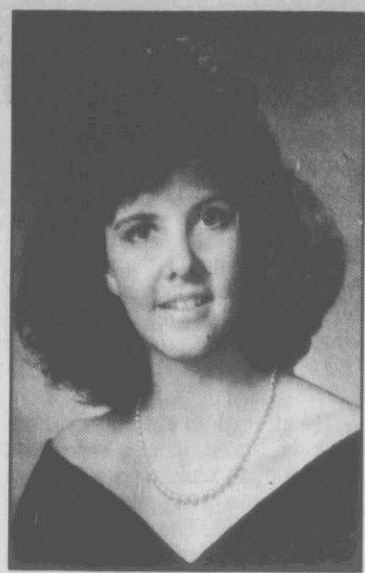

ECU NEWS BUREAU

Elizabeth Walker Freeman of Greenville is one of seven high school seniors from across the state to receive East Carolina University Scholars Awards for four years of study at the university.

Miss Freeman, a student at J.H. Rose High School, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wilmer Freeman. She will receive the John F. Minges II and Thornburn Whitehurst Minges University Scholars Award.

Miss Freeman was Greenville's Community Ambassador to Italy in 1988. She is president of Future Teachers of America at Rose and is involved as a marshal, secretary of the National Honor Society, a member of the National Math Honor Society, vice president of Fellowship of Christian Athletes and first runner up in the Pitt County Junior Miss Program. She is a member of Immanuel Baptist Church.

Others selected for the 1989 awards are Gillian Kim Ashley and Rocco Timothy Wicks of Fayetteville, Jennifer Rebecca Marion and Kristen Faye Matthews of Fuquay-Varina, Dena Gale Price of Williamston and Ethan Hess Skemp of Marshall.

ELIZABETH W. FREEMAN

As the university's most prestigious scholarship award, University Scholars receive full tuition and expense-paid scholarships for four years of undergraduate study, each valued at more than $12,000. Recipients are chosen on the basis of academic achievement and leadership potential.

Pitt Board Approves Application For Funds On Hanrahan Project

By Stuart Savage
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt County commissioners have approved an application for $600,000 in Community Development Block Grant funds to complete the second phase of the Hanrahan revitalization project.

The first phase of the project, now under construction, will install water and sewer lines, improve drainage and pave streets in a small subdivision at Hanrahan, as well as rehabilitate 11 houses. The project is being financed with a $600,000 CDBG grant and $60,000 in county money.

The application for phase two of the project would continue water, sewer, drainage and street improvements in the subdivision, as well as rehabilitate 11 dwellings. The grant, coupled with $80,000 in local money, would also provide funds to acquire four parcels of land, demolish four houses and relocate two tenants and one homeowner.

The board also appropriated up to $500 to Ayden-Grifton High School students Jonathan Lee and Robert Smith and history teacher Delano Wilson for a trip to College Park, Md., in June to compete in National History Day. The students qualified for the national competition by taking first place in a State History Day event at Wake Forest University on April 29.

Commissioners, at an afternoon workshop meeting Monday, began work on the Pitt County schools' proposed budget for the coming year.

The Pitt Board of Education has requested more than $13.4 million in current expense money from county funds for the coming fiscal year, compared to a budget of $10.09 million this year. But in the working budget County Manager Kramer Jackson presented to commissioners earlier, he recommended an 8 percent or $800,000 increase in current expense funds for the coming fiscal year.

In addition to the current expense funds, the proposed 1989-1990 budget contains a recommendation for $4.2 million in capital project money for the schools.

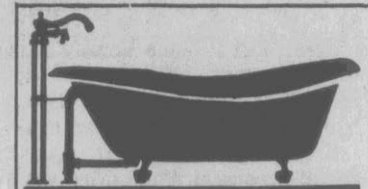

But school officials have suggested that $1.2 million alone would be needed to make up a shortfall caused by the loss of the state pilot finance project which ends this year.

School spokesmen Monday told commissioners that the pilot finance project, which allowed flexibility in spending state school money, allowed the county system to operate, even though local appropriations over the past few years were not sufficient to meet the needs of the system.

Dan Thomas, the school's finance officer, said that as an example, the schools have requested a total of $1.2 million over the past three fiscal years to meet state mandated pay increases, while commissioners have appropriated only $666,751. The shortfall, Thomas said, was made up from flexible state funds.

The board took no action on the schools' budget Monday, but scheduled a budget workshop for May 23.

Whiter Teeth?
Commonly asked questions and answers concerning this procedure.
Question: "How long does the procedure take?"
Answer: This procedure takes only 15 to 20 minutes to start and the patient completes the treatment at home and to their desired degree of whiteness; however, on your first visit, the dentist must prepare you for the procedure and usually a normal one-hour appointment is sufficient. The results are very predictable when the patient follows the instructions to the letter. Most cases can be completed within a two week period, more complicated cases may require a longer period of time. Patients who follow the instructions properly may see results within the first three days of treatment.
Question: "If this is such a new procedure, how can I be sure it's safe?"
Answer: Although it is a new product, it is based on the older bleaching techniques that have been in use on teeth for over twenty years. When used properly, these techniques have proven to be extremely safe but overpriced for most people. It is a much milder medication than anything ever used before for this purpose and is priced where every patient can now afford to look their very best with a totally different and easier procedure.
Question: "How long will the results last?"
Answer: The procedure can be permanent with occasional and proper maintenance.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market showed a modest gain today on a better-than-expected report on international trade.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose .36 to 2,453.881 in the first half hour of trading.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about 3 to 2 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 581 up, 375 down and 524 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 30.59 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

The Commerce Department reported this morning that the nation's trade deficit narrowed to $8.86 billion in March from a downward-revised $9.82 billion the month before.

Gainers among the blue chips included General Electric, up 1/4 at 52; American Telephone & Telegraph, up 1/8 at 34 1/2; McDonald's, up 1/8 at 57 1/2, and Eastman Kodak, up 3/8 at 43 3/8.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .21 to 176.13. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .47 at 350.39.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 10.44 points to 2,453.45.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 7 to 6 in nationwide trading of NYSE-listed issues, with 791 down, 677 up and 500 unchanged.

Big Board volume came to 173.10 million shares, down from 179.35 million in the previous session.

PCMH To Expand Child Abuse-Neglect Program

By Carol Tyer
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Trustees of Pitt County Memorial Hospital have made a $77,036 per year commitment to fighting child abuse and neglect in eastern North Carolina.

Having had in April an education program on child abuse and neglect as it presents itself at PCMH, board members voted unanimously Tuesday night to hire a master's-level social worker and a nurse practitioner who would coordinate the efforts of the rest of the staff to identify abused and neglected children. They would work in conjunction with other agencies to assist these children and their families to eliminate the conditions that fostered abuse and neglect.

The $77,036 will pay salaries and benefits for the social worker and nurse.

In other business before the board, the resignation of trustee Hodges Hackney was reported. Chairman Bob Harrington also mentioned the impending resignation from the board of the Rev. Arlee Griffin.

Approval was given to guarantee the Tammy's and APEC day care centers of Greenville set numbers of hospital employees' children as clients in exchange for their agreeing to be open during evening and weekend hours for the benefit of hospital workers with children.

The plan is for hospital workers to pay their own day care fees at these day care centers, but if sufficient business is not generated, the hospital would pay the difference. A three-year plan calls for day care 24 hours a day on the premises of the hospital.

The hospital's nepotism policy was amended to say that no close relative of one employee may be in direct supervision of another. The old policy had called for no supervision of or authority over a relative.

Valerie Dixon, assistant vice president for financial services, reported that inpatient use of the hospital continued during April to be below budget projections — 40 patient days below. But she said that outpatient use was 92 days above budget for the month, helping offset the loss.

Patient revenues for April, Ms. Dixon said, were $30,281 below budget, but operating expenses were $401,388 below budget. Net income was $439,881 above budget, so cash and investments increased $69,199 during the month, she said.

The board approved the hiring of the Ernst and Whinney accounting firm to conduct a feasibility study for tax-exempt revenue bonds that will be sold soon to finance new construction at the hospital. Trustees said the bill should not exceed $48,000.

The board approved capital budget expenditures of $236,856. Among those were a microprocessor ventilator for respiratory care at $19,675; coagulation analyzers for hematology at $22,900; a nurse call system for facilities management at $48,000; a television surveillance system for security at $50,000; copiers for warehouse-receiving at $42,462; a video system to record bronchoscopies for the pulmonary lab at $22,180; a vertical flow hood for pathology at $5,639, and a control system for the birthing center at $26,000. Several of these were budget exchange items.

A proposal to have additional hospital room space at the Holiday Inn near the hospital was presented. The plan would call for the hospital to renovate some rooms at the hospital and have a unit there for the care of ambulatory patients who are almost ready to leave the hospital setting.

Joel Butler, hospital director of service development, showed the cost savings from regular hospital care that the plan could create. No action was taken.

Several plans for making better use of present facilities were discussed for the trustees. One involved a proposed plan to start offering more clinical services like elective surgery, MRI studies and heart catheterization on Saturdays.

Superintendent

DANBURY, N.C. (AP) — G. Frank Sells, the associate superintendent of Stokes County schools, has been selected to replace Superintendent Kent S. Moseley. Moseley, 58, is retiring June 30 after 12 years in the position.

Sells, who started with the school system in 1971, has been the associate superintendent for the last four years.

Zoning Report Delayed

By Greg Laudick
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The presentation of recommendations of a Planning and Zoning Commission subcommittee studying a series of rezoning requests involving over 400 acres south of the city was continued Tuesday until the P&Z meeting in April.

Dr. Wallace Woales, commission chairman, said the subcommittee members have met once with representatives of the planning staff and the developers seeking the rezoning requests and another meeting has been scheduled next week to further discuss the rezoning matters.

The series of rezoning requests involve property adjacent to the intersection of the proposed Arlington Boulevard extension and the State Road 1708 realignment just west of N.C. 43.

The series of requests include petitions to rezone parcels from RA-20 (residential-agriculture) to CS (shopping center); RA-20 to CH (highway commercial); RA-20 to O&I (office and institutional); and RA-20 to R-6 (residential).

In other matters Tuesday, the commission recommended that the City Council approve a request by Bryant Kittrell, an agent for John H. Banks and Philip E. Carroll, to rezone an 8.3-acre tract located west of the U.S. 264 Bypass, south of D.T. Jones industrial subdivision, from RA-20 to IU (unoffensive industry).

Commissioners recommended approval of a request by Charles R. Vandiford and William G. Blount to rezone a 2.8-acre tract located east of Landmark Street and across from Sheraton Village Townhomes from CH to R-6.

The board also approved preliminary plats for: Wandsworth Commons, Section 1, located on Arlington Boulevard and involving six lots on a 3.02-acre tract; Medical Shopping Center, located on N.C. 11, north of the Norfolk Southern Railroad and involving 32 lots on a 29.4-acre tract, and Hookerton Square Apartments, located on Hooker Road just south of Fairlane Road and involving 52 multifamily apartment units on a 4.98-acre tract.

Discussion of a proposal by the Southern Christian Leadership Conference to rename Memorial Drive as Martin Luther King Boulevard was continued until additional input is obtained from the state Department of Transportation.

A request by Leroy T. Cherry to rezone two tracts of an 8.7-acre parcel, located north of Rollins Drive and west of Summerfield subdivision, was continued, while consideration of the preliminary plat of Lynddale Townes, located on Dartmouth Road and containing six single-family lots on an 8-acre tract, was continued for 30 days.

A preliminary plat for Hubert N. Edwards division, located on the proposed Arlington Boulevard Extension, south of SR 1708, and consisting of three industrial lots and 741 feet of public street on a 4.5-acre tract, was withdrawn.

Victim Testifies

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A 17-year-old Greenville girl took the witness stand today in Pitt Superior Court for the third time in three years to describe for a jury how, according to her testimony, her stepfather raped and abused her.

Charlie James Jones, 40, of Greenville is facing a third trial on charges of rape and taking indecent liberties with a minor. He was convicted on all counts in November 1986 and sentenced to life in prison, but the state Supreme Court granted Jones a new trial last July. The court ruled the trial judge allowed evidence to be admitted that was prejudicial to Jones' right to a fair trial.

In a retrial in March, Pitt County jurors deliberated six hours before announcing they were hopelessly deadlocked, and Judge G.K. Butterfield of Wilson declared a mistrial, setting up the trial this week.

Jones is accused of fondling and raping the girl while her mother was working and the girl was left in his care. He allegedly threatened her with a knife and handgun to make her consent to sex, and a 1986 search warrant stated she claimed Jones also used duct tape, rope and a butcher knife to threaten her.

The girl has previously testified that Jones threatened to harm her mother and her younger sister if she told anyone about the incidents.

The alleged offenses occurred from December 1982 through October 1985, when the girl claims she asked her mother if she could move in with her biological father, who also lives in Greenville.

On Oct. 21, 1985, the evening she asked to live with her father, she testified that Jones held a knife to her throat and choked her for over two hours, repeating his threats to harm family members if she revealed the crimes. When her father visited her the next day and saw the physical abuse, she said he took her to the magistrate's office where she reported the assault.

It was not until several months later — in early 1986 — that she told her father of the sexual encounters.

Graveside services will be conducted Thursday at 11 a.m. in the St. Barnabas Cemetery by the Rev. Bill Braswell.

Survivors include her daughter, Martha Anne Nimmo of Snow Hill; her son, Dr. James R. Harper of Chapel Hill; a sister, Kathryn Robinson of Snow Hill; four grandchildren, and one great-grandchild.

The family will be at Taylor-Edwards Funeral Home today from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Gast, Andrews Lead Pirate Win

Twosome Provided Key Plays In ECU's 2-1 Title Triumph

By Woody Peele

Bucs Overcame Obstacles To Claim Title

WILMINGTON — East Carolina sidestepped disaster Tuesday afternoon and pulled out a 2-1 victory over the University of Richmond to win its second Colonial Athletic Association baseball championship.

The other title came in 1987, and just like this year's, the Pirates had to come back through the losers' bracket and win two games the final day to do it.

There were some differences, however. In 1987, the Pirates lost their first game in the second round. This year, they lost in the first round. In 1987, they had to beat the same team, James Madison, twice. This year, they had to beat George Mason and then Richmond as all three teams came to the final day with a loss in the double elimination event.

And this year, ECU coach Gary Overton pointed out, the final day took two days instead of one.

The rainout Monday night halted the game after seven innings with the Pirates up 1-0. However, Richmond came back Tuesday to tie it up in the bottom of the ninth.

(See PEELE, B-2)

WILMINGTON — John Gast saved the day for East Carolina University's baseball team and Mike Andrews provided the game-winning hit as the Pirates nipped Richmond, 2-1, in 11 innings for the Colonial Athletic Association tournament championship Tuesday.

The victory carries with it the league's automatic bid into the NCAA regionals. Pairings and sites will be announced on Monday.

Gast came up with the ball on a diving play to squelch a Richmond threat in the bottom of the 10th inning. The Spiders had loaded the bases with one out and appeared headed for victory.

But Gast made the diving stop of a ball hit by Don Vossler — who had scored the tying run in the ninth — and fired to home on one knee to force Mike Zambo.

Jonathan Jenkins, who would have been jerked but for a rule that Coach Gary Overton forgot, then struck out Chris McMullan to end the threat.

"I can't explain it," Gast said of the play. "It was just reaction. I didn't think I had time (to get the runner); it happened so fast."

Gast's play drew near universal praise as the play of the game. "Gast made a couple of plays that turned things around," Richmond coach Ronnie Atkins said. "That ball Vossler hit would have won it but for him."

"There were a number of factors in the game," Overton said. "The hit by Mike Andrews that won it for us, and that was preceded by an outstanding play by Gast and a gutsy performance by Jenkins."

Jenkins nearly wasn't out there at the end. Overton, who had just been out to talk with the junior righthander, returned two pitches later to jerk him, but forgot that after a conference, the coach cannot come back out until a batter has been faced.

Jenkins proceeded to walk Andy Malloy to load the bases just before Gast's game-saving play.

He then went on to retire the side in order in the bottom of the 11th to post his 12th victory in 14 decisions.

The championship game got underway Monday night following ECU's decision over George Mason. In that, Brien Berckman had come on to earn his school record-tying fourth save of the year, pitching the final three innings.

Berckman, who was named the tournament's Most Valuable Player, then got the call to start the second game, going six and two-thirds innings before giving way to Jake Jacobs.

One out later, however, a heavy downpour fell, and officials called the game. Under CAA rules, the game was suspended, with the contest to be completed on Tuesday, starting where play left off.

At that point, the Pirates held a 1-0 lead. The lone run had scored in the second when John Gast doubled and scored on another double by Kevin Riggs.

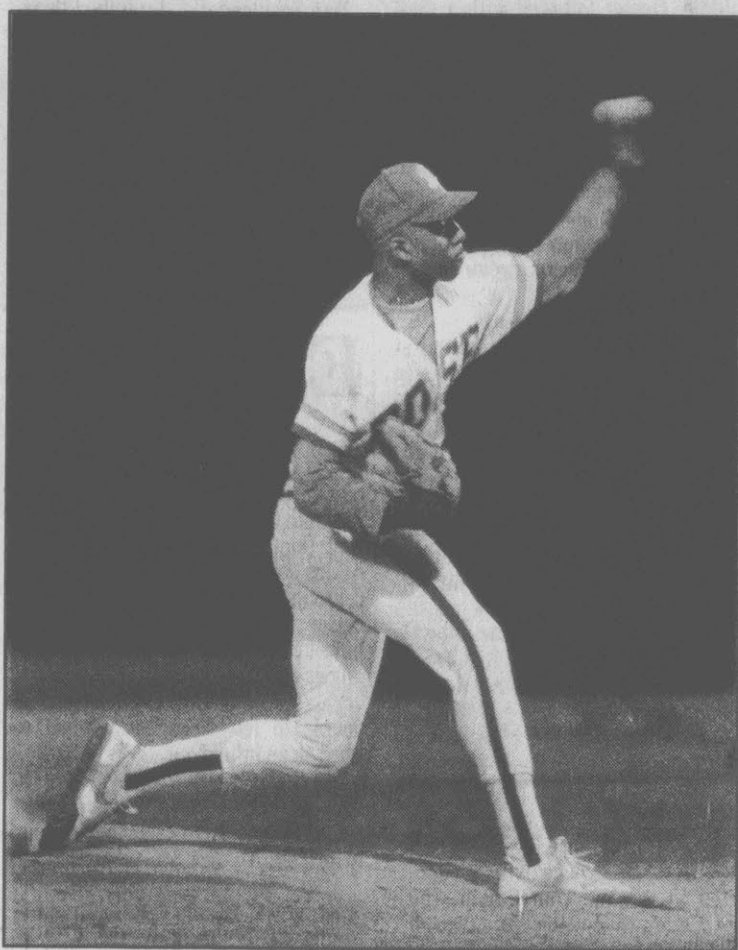

But when play resumed Tuesday at noon, Richmond felt it had the odds in its favor and the Spiders

Rose's Maurice Hines delivers a pitch against Wilson Hunt

Rose Avoids Upset Bid

Hines' Two-Hitter Keys Rampants Past Hunt, 2-0

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Wilson Hunt dared to go where few teams had gone this year, into the later innings of a tight game with Rose, but the Rampants closed the door on the Warriors' upset hopes in the sixth inning.

Rose generated just enough offense to hold off Hunt, 2-0, Tuesday at Guy Smith Stadium.

"Our guys felt they could play with them, and they did," Hunt coach Russell Williamson said. "A hit here or there and it's a different story."

Instead, undefeated Rose (20-0 overall and 13-0 in the Big East) got a repeat of its last 19 games, though a slightly different version.

The Warriors stranded seven men on base during the game as Maurice Hines limited them to three hits over seven innings.

In the sixth, Hines quenched a sixth-inning charge by the Warriors to tie the game.

Trailing 1-0 after five innings, Marquis Spell led off the sixth for Hunt with a single and stole second. He moved to third after tagging on a pop-fly.

Up to this point, Hines had allowed but two hits and only three baserunners past first. But he looked like he was beginning to tire as he faced Shannon Davis and Rose coach Ronald Vincent paid a visit to the mound.

"(I wanted) to give Maurice time to back off and think about what he was doing," Vincent said.

After the break, Hines got Davis to ground out to second baseman Heath Clark for out number-two. That brought another mound visit from Vincent.

"We wanted to set our defense," he said, "to make sure everybody was together on what were going to pitch to that guy (designated hitter John Brown) — fastballs inside."

That done, Hines quickly struck out Bunn to end the inning and the threat, leaving Spell stranded at third.

In essence, that made it a new game. Rose had been listless early in the game, but with the threat of the season's first loss looming, things changed.

"In pregame we weren't very sharp," Vincent said. "When they came off the field (in the sixth), it was a different frame of mind. We needed the challenge we got from Hunt."

"You get in that frame of mind that you don't have to work hard and this reminds you how easy it is to get knocked off."

In the bottom of the sixth, Chris Christopher led off with a walk and after one out moved to second on an infield hit by Maurice Hines. Christopher then stole third.

That brought up John Bolen and his sacrifice fly drove in Christopher on a close call at the plate to make it 2-0.

"A two-run lead in the sixth inning is tremendous," Vincent said. "We were just trying to get that run home."

Hines then retired the bottom of the Hunt order three in a row in the top of the seventh to end the game.

Suns Now Looking Toward Lakers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHOENIX — Their fans are already chanting "Beat L.A.," but the Phoenix Suns know the next assignment won't be easy.

Rookie Dan Majerle scored nine of his 24 points in a pivotal third period and Tom Chambers had 13 of his 24 in the final 10 minutes as Phoenix beat the Golden State Warriors 116-104 Tuesday night to win their Western Conference semifinal series in five games.

The Suns, winning the last three games to take the best-of-7 series 4-1, advanced to the conference finals against the two-time defending champion Los Angeles Lakers, starting Saturday at Inglewood, Calif.

Phoenix has lost all five previous playoff series against the Lakers, getting swept twice.

Golden State, which lost Game 1 130-103 and Game 4 135-99, led 47-36 late in the second quarter and 50-49 at halftime after forcing Phoenix into 12 turnovers and 21-of-51 field-goal shooting.

But the Suns went ahead to stay at 71-70 on Chambers' 15-foot jumper with 3:34 left in the third period.

Majerle, known more for his defense, came off the bench and hit a dunk with 1:26 remaining and a 3-point goal with 27 seconds to go for a 79-74 lead after three quarters.

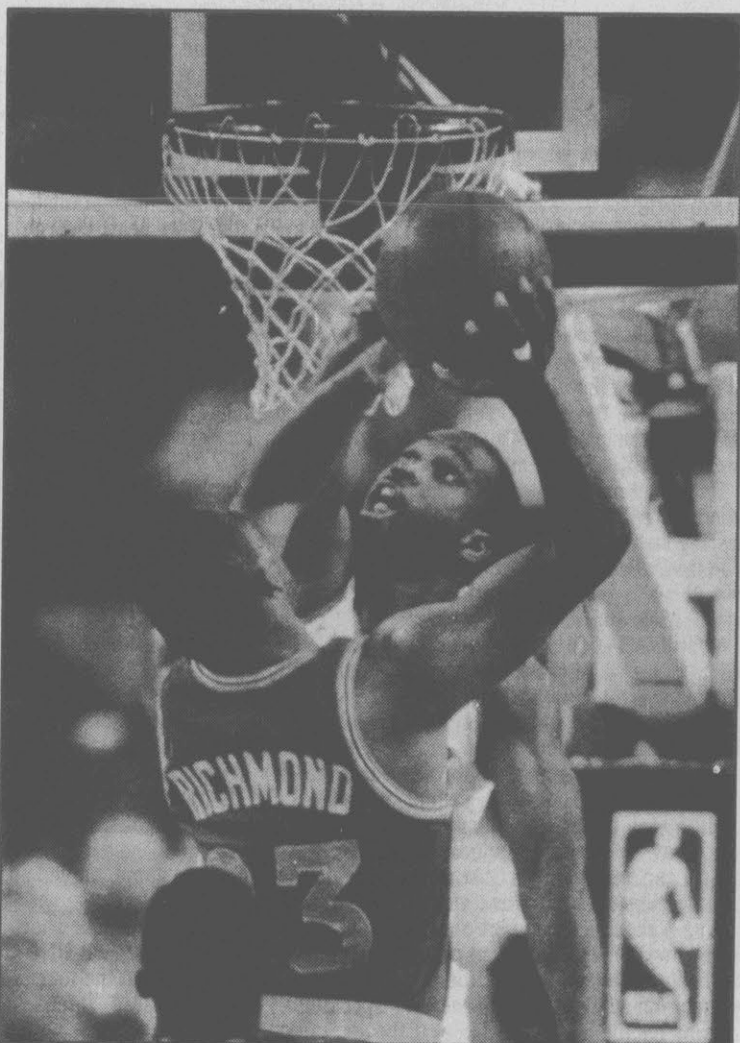

The Suns opened the fourth period with five consecutive points, capped by Majerle's three-point play, and stretched the lead to 96-83 on Tyrone Corbin's steal and stuff with 7:36 to play.

Golden State, getting two jumpers and a 3-point goal from Rookie of the Year Mitch Richmond, cut the gap to 103-98 with 2:54 left.

But Eddie Johnson, the league's top sixth man this season, hit consecutive jumpers and Kevin Johnson's jumper with 1:35 remaining gave the Suns a 109-98 bulge. Chambers' two layups and a three-point play made it 116-102 with 26 seconds showing and clinched the victory.

Kevin Johnson finished with 24 points and 11 assists while Corbin had 15 points and 10 rebounds. Chambers and Eddie Johnson grabbed 11 rebounds

Golenbock Book To Be Published

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Peter Golenbock, whose book on North Carolina State's basketball program was spurned by a major publisher, is expected to announce today that the book will be distributed by a smaller company.

Attorney Martin Garbus, who represents the publishing firm Carroll and Graf, said he had reviewed Golenbock's book, "Personal Fouls." Asked if Carroll and Graf planned to publish it, Garbus replied, "I understand they will."

"Personal Fouls" was scheduled for publication in February by Pocket Books, a division of Simon & Schuster, but the parent company canceled those plans after North Carolina Attorney General Lacy Thornburg threatened legal action on behalf of N.C. State. Simon & Schuster said the book "did not meet the standards of Pocket Books."

A state official said Tuesday that Thornburg still may pursue legal action if the book is published.

"... I simply hope whatever they publish is true," said Andrew Vanore, chief deputy attorney general for North Carolina. "If the university or any officials are damaged, we'll take whatever steps are necessary to protect ... North Carolina State University."

Garbus said he could not comment on whether the manuscript was the same as the one turned down by Simon & Schuster.

Carroll and Graf is considered a small publisher, with an average of 85 titles per year compared to 300 for Pocket Books, according to the 1989 Writer's Market.

Though it has yet to be published, publicity about "Personal Fouls" led to investigations of the N.C. State program by the NCAA and the University of North Carolina Board of Governors. Both investigations are ongoing.

A dust jacket for the book, distributed to Raleigh-area book sellers in January, said it would reveal irregularities in the Wolfpack program.

A primary source for the book was John Simonds, a manager on the 1986-87 Wolfpack team. Simonds was dismissed by Valvano before the 1987-88 season.

McGaughey Hopes For Dry Preakness

BALTIMORE — Having done it once already this week, trainer Shug McGaughey and Easy Goer will be trying to dodge the rain the rest of the way to the Preakness.

"We've got our fingers crossed," McGaughey said Tuesday after arriving at Pimlico. "We've been told the weather is supposed to clear. We're looking for a good, fast track. This track has always been a fast-drying track. With all things being equal, we're looking to turn the tables."

Sunday Silence beat heavily favored Easy Goer by 2½ lengths in the Kentucky Derby, but a muddy race track is thought to have compromised Easy Goer's chances.

"What I've tried to do is not make excuses, but look for an explanation," McGaughey said. "But all I can go on is that both of the races he hasn't run well the track was wet. Every other race, he's won easy and he run fast, except the day of the Wood Memorial."

"... We came to run in the Preakness and we're going to run. I'm not closing the door if the track is off but that is something I'll have to discuss with Mr. (Ogden) Phipps (the colt's owner)."

McGaughey has shown an ability to dodge the wet weather with Easy Goer. The colt's final workout at Belmont Park earlier this week ended less than an hour before rains inundated the track.

"We got really lucky because ... when I was driving to work it was raining as hard as it could rain," McGaughey said. "I wanted to go out early because I knew the forecast. A half hour later the track was a sea of mud."

McGaughey said if the rain keeps up, he'll enter Awe Inspiring in the Preakness with Easy Goer.

Sunday Silence, who went to the race track Tuesday for the first time in two days, is set to return today for the second test of his injured foot.

The Kentucky Derby galloped 1½ miles Tuesday and showed no signs of being bothered by his bruised right front foot. Whittingham plans to work the colt a half-mile this morning.

"Right now, health-wise we are in good shape," Whittingham said after colt was back in his stall.

Sunday Silence's right front foot, which he bruised sometime over the weekend, will be soaked in a tub of Epsom salts.

"All we are doing is keeping the circulation going in there and try not to get an abscess or something," Whittingham said.

The veteran trainer has had Sunday Silence out early for most of his preparations, but this workout could be different.

Roberson Wins 3-A Title; Conley Is 6th

CHAPEL HILL — T.C. Roberson High School of Skyland captured the 3-A state golf championship, held at the Finley Golf Course in Chapel Hill. D.H. Conley's Vikings finished in sixth place, while Coastal Conference rival West Carteret took third. Jason Widener of Northwest Guilford won the individual championship with a 69-72-141 score. West Carteret's Mark Springfield was second with a 71-77-148, while Apex' Brian Marshburn was third with a 73-77-150. T.C. Roberson completed the two-day, 36-hole event with a 307-317-624 total, while Northwest Guilford finished second at 303-322-625. West Carteret was third with a 305-324-629 total. Conley finished with a 324-322-646 total for sixth place. Tran Dean and Ben Edwards led Conley with 158 totals. Dean carded an 81 and a 77 while Edwards turned in an 80 and a 78 for the two days of play. Jason Wing had an 83-80-163 and Gentry Piner finished at 80-87-167.

Junior High Baseball Roundup

Jermaine Reid was the winning pitcher and Rod Hill, Al Debiase and Cole Yarbrough had two hits each as Aycock I beat Aycock II, 8-4, in junior high baseball action Monday.

AYDEN — Jay Rogers went 4-4 to lead Aycock to a 12-11 win over A.G. Cox in junior high baseball action Monday. Robert Moye was the winning pitcher as Ayden moved to 12-1 and clinched a division championship.

Rose JV Team Takes 10-8 Win Over Hunt

WILSON — Rose used a four run fourth-inning to come from behind and take a 10-8 win over Wilson Hunt in a JV high school baseball game Tuesday. Williams Gibbs had a key single to key the fourth as Rose overcame a 7-5 deficit to take a 9-7 lead.

Clemson Rolls Past UNC For ACC Title Win

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Second baseman Henry Threadgill had four hits in five at-bats to lead Clemson to a 12-4 victory over North Carolina in the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament championship game Tuesday night. Threadgill scored three runs as the Tigers won their first ACC tournament championship in eight years. The Tigers won five regular-season titles over that span. After spotting the Tar Heels a 2-0 lead in the bottom of the first, Clemson, now 45-16, erupted for three runs in the third, three in the fourth and six in the fifth. Righthander Ron Frazier, 5-1, pitched six innings, allowing seven hits and all four Tar Heel runs before yielding to reliever Jerome Santivaschi, who earned his fifth save with three shut-out innings. Rich Fernandez, 3-3, the North Carolina starter, took the loss. Designated hitter Brad Woodall, first baseman Steve Estroff, center fielder Tom Nevin and second baseman Dave Arendas each produced two hits in a losing cause for the Tar Heels, 35-14-1. First baseman Mike Milchin drove in four runs for the Tigers with three hits. Shortstop Rusty Charpia also had three hits, and center fielder Brian Kowitz, catcher Mike Couture, right fielder Todd Stefan and left fielder Eric Macrina collected two hits apiece. Macrina belted his sixth home run of the season — a solo shot in the fourth.

Davidson Star Moving To Vanderbilt

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Davidson freshman Bruce Elder, who led the Wildcats in scoring and rebounding last season, says he has decided to transfer to Vanderbilt. "I want to emphasize more than I can say that I loved my year at Davidson, and that I really enjoyed my teammates," Elder told The Charlotte Observer from his home in Marietta, Ga., on Tuesday. "The only thing my decision reflects on is the school not being in a conference, and the climate surrounding athletics at Davidson right now," he said. "If we (Wildcats) were getting into a conference, say, for my last two years, I really think that would have affected my decision. But without a strong conference, I really couldn't see the basketball situation at Davidson getting much better during the next three years." Elder's transfer is one more negative in Davidson's search for a basketball coach to replace Bobby Hussey, who resigned April 20. Two candidates have turned down offers for the job. Elder, a 6-4 wing who averaged 17.2 and 5.6 rebounds on Davidson's 7-24 team, will sit out next season and have three years of eligibility remaining.

Hornets Say Ferry Is Their Man

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The Charlotte Hornets will draft Duke forward Danny Ferry if the expansion franchise receives the first pick in Sunday's NBA draft lottery, team vice president Carl Scheer says. The Hornets will be one of nine teams taking part in the draft lottery on Sunday. The actual draft will be staged June 27. Scheer predicted as early as last October that Ferry, 6-10, would be the Hornets' first choice if they win the No. 1 pick. That wasn't changed any by Ferry's senior season, for which he was named national player of the year by four organizations — the Naismith Award committee, United Press International, the U.S. Basketball Writers Association, and Eastern Basketball magazine. Scheer listed Ferry and Arizona's Sean Elliott as essentially 1 and 1-A in the Hornets' evaluation. As a 6-8 guard, Elliott has drawn consideration by some teams for the No. 1 overall choice. Scheer said there is a plateau in the draft that separates Ferry's and Elliott's potential from that of the rest of the field. As the team with the second-worst record in the league, behind Miami, the Hornets can get no worse than the fifth pick in the first round. Scheer said the Hornets have no clear idea who they would take if they receive the third, fourth or fifth pick. But he listed five options — Louisville's Pervis Ellison, Michigan's Glen Rice, Oklahoma's Stacey King, Louisiana Tech's Randy White and North Carolina's J.R. Reid. Reid's decision to turn pro a year early will complicate the Hornets' situation if they receive the fourth or fifth pick, since Scheer predicts Reid will go somewhere between fifth and 10th. Undoubtedly, North Carolina fans in the area will lobby for the Hornets to take Reid, and just as undoubtedly will second-guess the Hornets if another player, such as King or Ellison, is chosen. Joining Charlotte and Miami in the lottery are San Antonio, Dallas, the Los Angeles Clippers, Sacramento, Indiana, Washington and Chicago. The Bulls are in the lottery because of a trade with New Jersey.

Daniels Undergoes Knee Surgery

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Reds outfielder Kal Daniels underwent arthroscopic surgery on his right knee Tuesday and will miss the next six weeks of play. Dr. Warren Harding, the team physician, removed a bone spur from Daniels' knee, shaved and smoothed rough edges on cartilage and cleaned out loose pieces of cartilage. Daniels was placed on the 21-day disabled list Monday retroactive to May 10, although the Reds said Daniels' absence was likely to be longer than 21 days. The Reds called up reserve infielder-outfielder Skeeter Barnes from Class AAA Nashville to fill his roster spot.

Bradley Player Killed In Car Crash

MEXICO, Mo. (AP) — A Bradley University baseball player was killed and two others were critically injured when a van carrying players to a tournament collided with a flatbed truck carrying a wide load, the Highway Patrol said Tuesday. Tim Trunk 19, a pitcher from Oak Forest, Ill., was killed Monday when the van — one of three carrying Bradley players to the Missouri Valley Conference tournament in Wichita, Kan. — collided with a truck on U.S. 54 about 12 miles east of Mexico.

Blue Jays Responding To Gaston

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

For six weeks under Manager Jimmy Williams, the Toronto Blue Jays did hardly anything right. The Blue Jays couldn't get the big hit, failed to protect leads and lost 24 of their first 36 games. But Williams was fired Monday, and in two games under interim Manager Cito Gaston, the Blue Jays have gotten the big hits and even a save. Lloyd Moseby homered to snap an eighth-inning tie and Toronto rallied from a six-run deficit to beat Cleveland 7-6 Tuesday night for its second straight victory under Gaston.

Toronto general manager Pat Gillick has formed a search committee to name a new manager by next week. Two of the candidates reportedly are former New York Yankees manager Lou Piniella and

New York Mets coach Bud Harrelson. Moseby, who homered Monday night to snap an 0-for-27 slump, hit his fourth homer off reliever Keith Atherton, 0-2, with one out. Tom Henke, 2-3, pitched 1 1-3 innings in relief for Toronto to get the victory. After Henke walked two batters in the ninth, Duane Ward came on and got the last two outs for his second save. It was the Blue Jays' first save since April 21, when Ward got one against Texas. The Indians scored six runs in the second to chase John Cerutti, but David Wells came on and allowed no runs and three hits in 5 1-3 innings while the Blue Jays battled back. Mariners 6, Brewers 5. Ken Griffey Jr. snapped an eighth-inning tie with a pinch-hit two-run homer as Seattle rallied from a four-run deficit to edge Milwaukee at the Kingdom.

Darnell Coles singled with one out in the eighth and Griffey, making his first major league pinch-hitting appearance, hit Bill Wegman's 1-0 pitch over the right-field wall for his fourth homer of the season. Yankees 3, Athletics 2. Clay Parker, recalled on May 9, pitched seven-plus innings for his first major league victory and Steve Baibon snapped an eighth-inning tie with a two-out, two-run homer as New York beat Oakland at the Coliseum. Curt Young, 1-4, gave up a two-out single to Jesse Barfield before Balboni hit a 3-0 pitch just over the 330-foot marker down the left-field line for his fourth home run. Angels 7, Red Sox 2. Johnny Ray drove in four runs and Kirk McCaskill allowed two runs in eight-plus innings as California beat visiting Boston for its fourth straight victory. The Angels have won 15 of their last 18 games. McCaskill, 5-1, has a 1.06 earned run average, tops among starters in the American League. Royals 8, Twins 1. Kurt Stillwell hit a pair of two-run homers and Mark Gubicza allowed five hits in eight innings as Kansas City routed Minnesota in the Metrodome for its fifth straight victory. Bo Jackson homered, doubled and scored three runs for the Royals. Tigers 9, White Sox 7. Keith Moreland's three-run double keyed a six-run fourth inning as Detroit beat Chicago at Tiger Stadium despite five RBIs by Harold Baines. Frank Williams, 2-2, who took over in the fifth for Mike Trujillo, got the victory with 3 1-3 innings and Willie Hernandez pitched the final 1 2-3 innings.

Bucs' Kramer Misses No-Hit Bid

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Randy Kramer lost two no-hitters in one night. Kramer pitched a one-hitter in his fourth major-league start, blemished only by Ron Oester's two-out double in the eighth inning, and the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Cincinnati Reds 5-0 Tuesday night. "I had the obvious response. I wondered what would have happened — what if, what if," said Kramer, who was trying to become the 14th rookie to pitch a no-hitter. Kramer's bid was kept alive by a controversial scoring decision in the seventh inning. Oester, batting just .175, spoiled it for good by slicing a liner 10 feet inside the left-field line. Four pitchers have lost no-hitters in the ninth inning this season. Kramer, 1-1, had his hopes preserved with a close call in the bottom of the seventh. Herm Winningham opened the inning with a hard grounder that bounced off first baseman Sid Bream's glove and rolled away. The fans did cheer when the Riverfront Stadium scoreboard operators, without waiting for a decision, posted "Hit." But official scorer Glen Sample ruled it an error after watching the replay. With two outs in the eighth, Pirates second baseman Jose Lind was charged with an error when he bobbed Jeff Reed's grounder up the middle. Oester followed with a double, ending the no-hitter. Kramer, 1-1, struck out three, walked one and allowed just five balls to be hit to the outfield. He had never lasted more than 5 1-3 innings, but sent Cincinnati to its seventh shutout of the season. Rick Mahler, 5-4, lost for the first time in five decisions. Rey Quinones and Junior Ortiz each drove in two runs. Giants 13, Phillies 5. Atlee Hammaker won his first start of the season and drove in three runs, leading San Francisco on a rout in Philadelphia. The Giants' 13 runs and 18 hits were season highs as they ended a three-game losing streak. Hammaker, a .101 career hitter, went 3-for-4. Every San Francisco starter scored a run and got a hit. Astros 8, Cardinals 7. Rafael Ramirez hit a sacrifice fly in the 11th inning and Bill Doran drove in five runs, helping Houston beat visiting St. Louis.

The Astros loaded the bases with none out in the 11th on a leadoff triple by Craig Biggio and two intentional walks. Ramirez flied to center field and Biggio beat Willie McGee's throw home. Dan Schatzeder, 1-0, pitched three scoreless innings. Cris Carpenter, 1-3, took the loss. Cubs 4, Braves 3. Ryne Sandberg's two-run triple highlighted a strange first inning and sent Chicago over Atlanta at Wrigley Field. The Cubs scored four times in the first inning against Tom Glavine, 5-pushed over a run in the bottom of the ninth to tie it. "I think the rain-out helped us," Atkins said. "It gave us a chance to regroup. Too, you can see the ball better in the daylight. And we haven't played very much at night, anyway." Vossler started the ninth with a double to left field and moved to third on an infield out. Overton then made the move to Jenkins, who promptly gave up a single to Rob Reid, scoring Vossler to tie it up. After the Pirates survived the scare in the 10th, Steve Godin opened the top of the 11th with a walk and he stole second. Riggs sacrificed him to third and Andrews followed with a base hit to left, driving in Godin. "I just said to myself, get the ball in play," Andrews said. "(Richmond pitcher Mark Sweeney) had just thrown me a fast ball that was right where I wanted it, but I fouled it off. Then, he threw another in the same place. I didn't think he would do it again. It was a good feeling when I saw it get through (to the outfield)." That took the wind out of the Spiders' sails and gave Jenkins the lead he needed. "I was tired, but this was the end of the tournament," Jenkins said. "When the coach came out to pull me and couldn't fire me up. Then John Gast made that great play and Mike came up with the clutch hit." Overton was happy that his decision was rescinded by the umpire when he opted to jerk Jenkins. "Thankfully, I couldn't get him out. After he walked the batter, I decided to let him pitch to the righthander." For Overton, this was his second CAA title in the last three years. His 1987 club also had to come from behind and win two games the final day of play. "That was two the last two, this was two the last day twice," he said.

1. They opened with four straight hits and Glavine then left the game with a sprained left ankle, which he hurt covering first base. Chicago used an error, a stolen base, two wild pitches and a passed ball for its 4-0 lead. Padres 5, Expos 2. Jack Clark hit a two-run homer and a run-scoring single as San Diego won in Montreal. Clark connected on a 3-0 pitch from Brian Holman, 1-1, for his sixth home run and a 4-1 lead in the fifth inning.

Eagles Upset Vikings; Jags Win

Greene Central Tops Panthers; South Lenoir Downs Chargers

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley's Vikings saw their hopes of making the state 3-A baseball playoffs shrink Tuesday with a 5-2 defeat at the hands of West Craven.

The loss dropped the Vikings to 7-4 in the Coastal Conference, tying them for second place with Havelock. The win also clinched the title for East Carteret, Conley's final opponent on the road Thursday.

Conley would have to win to ensure a tournament berth. Should Washington, 6-5, upset Havelock in their final game, it would make it a three-way tie for second, and one of the three teams would then be left behind for the playoffs.

West Craven took the lead in the first inning on a solo home run by Ken Holzworth, but Conley came back to tie it up with a run in the bottom of the inning. William Crandol walked and Gray Mills singled. Andy Fasset then reached on an error which allowed Crandol to score.

It stayed that way until the fourth when West Craven scored two to take the lead for good. John Dizon doubled and scored when Monte Brown hit a two-run homer.

West Craven added two more in the fifth for a 5-1 lead and Conley managed one more in the seventh.

Holzworth and Jay Gaskins each had two hits for the Eagles, while no one had more than one for Conley.

South Lenoir then put it away with three in the third. Robert Harrell singled and stole up, scoring on a hit by Allan Edwards. Mike Noble walked and Surcey reached on an error, scoring Edwards. Noble then scored on a wild pitch.

South Lenoir added two more in the fifth on another homer by Surcey. Ayden-Grifton also picked up a pair in the bottom of the inning.

Surcey was the only player with more than one hit in the game.

Pamlico rallied for three in the bottom of the seventh, but fell short. Burnette, with two doubles, led the Jaguar hitting. C. Ward and A. Forbes each had two for Pamlico.

Farmville is now 5-6 in the conference and 8-10 overall. The Jaguars close out the season today, hosting South Lenoir.

Jamesville.....2
Aurora.....1

JAMESVILLE — John Asby outduelled Derrick Gaynor and tossed a one hitter and struck out eight to lead Jamesville past Aurora, 2-1, in a high school baseball game Tuesday.

Gaynor limited Jamesville to only one hit, striking out 10 and walking eight, but the Bullets pushed across the only two runs of the game in the fourth on a sacrifice fly by Kent Dickerson that was error.

The win moves Jamesville to 13-7 overall and 12-4 in the Tobacco Belt 1-A Conference and returns to action at Bath today.

The Bullets are tied with North Edgemore for third but in order for Jamesville to make the playoffs, North Edgemore must lose and Jamesville must win today.

apiece as the Suns outrebounded Golden State 55-45 in Game 5 and 279-215 overall in the series.

Richmond paced the Warriors with 23 points while Mullin 22, Winston Garland 17 and seldom-used Ralph Sampson 10.

Nelson, who had stuck with a starting lineup that had no player taller than 6-foot-8 throughout the playoffs, started the 7-4 Sampson at center.

Sampson, who stayed on the bench in five of the Warriors' previous seven playoff games and had a combined 10 points in 22 minutes in Games 1 and 4, had six points and three rebounds as Golden State led 26-22 after the first quarter.

A 12-4 spurt put the Warriors up 47-36 with 2:32 left before Phoenix cut the gap to 50-40, then closed out the first half with nine consecutive points — six by Majerle on a jumper and four free throws.

Knicks.....121
Bulls.....114

NEW YORK — Patrick Ewing says the only thing that bothers him about playing poorly is that it sometimes causes the New York Knicks to lose games.

"It's not me; it's New York versus Chicago," Ewing said. "All I want to do is win and be known as a winner. I wasn't disturbed at the way I was playing; I was disturbed we were losing."

The Knicks and Ewing regained the winning touch Tuesday night, defeating Chicago 121-114 as he scored 32 points on 12-for-20 shooting, grabbed 11 rebounds and blocked four shots. The outcome left the Bulls with a 3-2 lead in the best-of-7 Eastern Conference semifinal series, with Game 6 at Chicago Stadium Friday night.

Ewing, who made 56.7 percent of his shots in the regular season while scoring 22.7 points per game, was averaging 17.9 on 45 percent shooting in the playoffs before Tuesday.

While winning was Ewing's first priority, he knew he had to improve his numbers against former teammate Bill Cartwright if the Knicks were going to send the series back to Chicago.

Cartwright, who outscored Ewing 21-10 on Sunday, fouled out with 12 points in Game 5.

Ewing scored the Knicks' final nine points in the last 1:38, defusing a Chicago rally that cut a 96-77 lead to three. Michael Jordan keyed the rally by scoring 17 of his 38 points in the fourth period.

Chicago is seeking to reach the conference finals for only the third time in franchise history. The Bulls lost to Milwaukee in 1974 and Golden State the following year.

The Knicks, meanwhile, are trying to become the fifth team in NBA history to win a playoff series after trailing 3-1.

The Bulls trailed only 63-61 in the first minute of the third quarter. But the Knicks outscored Chicago 31-16 in the rest of the period to lead 94-77 going into the final 12 minutes.

Rod Strickland gave the Knicks their biggest lead, 96-77, to start the fourth period before Chicago rallied.

Chicago closed the gap to 110-105 with 2:50 left, but Ewing responded with a baseline jumper for a seven-point lead with 1:38 to go.

After baskets by John Paxson and Jordan made it 112-109, Ewing scored on a turnaround jumper and a breakaway layup, making it 116-109 with 33 seconds left. He added three free throws, offsetting another basket by Jordan and a 3-pointer by Paxson.

A 3-pointer by Craig Hodges sparked a 9-0 run that gave Chicago a 13-8 lead. The Knicks came back with a 25-13 run during which Jackson and Gerald Wilkins scored six points apiece.

New York never trailed after taking a 33-28 at the end of one quarter. The Knicks extended the margin to 52-41 as Ewing scored eight points in the first 7:08 of the second period.

Dave Corzine, who scored only three points in the first four games of the series, had 14 in the second period to keep the Bulls close. In the final minute of the half, Paxson hit a 3-pointer and Jordan added a three-point play, making it 62-59 at halftime.

game as the Warriors' John Williamson used curvball-fork ball combination to keep the Rose hitters at bay.

"Our pitcher did well," Williamson said. "His fastball isn't all that quick, but he's got a curve and forkball and he kept them off-balance."

One hit that he did give up early was costly, though, as John Bolen ripped a single over the second baseman to score Hines in the second inning.

pends on the track," Whittingham said. "We might wait for a good track (after a break in training for the strip to be groomed)."

Rain fell hard on Pimlico's track at some points Tuesday morning and a layer of water still covered the racing surface at the end of the morning workout session.

There has been at least a trace of rain 14 of the first 16 days this month, with measurable amounts on 11, said Ray Newcomb, a forecaster for the National Weather Service. A total of 4.60 inches of precipitation has fallen on the Baltimore area. The average for the entire month is 3.44 inches.

However, Newcomb said forecasts call for "fair weather Thursday through Saturday and we're not anticipating any precipitation during that period."

The Pimlico racing strip, which was resurfaced last month, has shown the ability to dry out quickly. After several days of rain last week, the Pimlico Special was run over a fast track and Blushing John set a track record in winning the race.

The next Preakness probable scheduled to arrive is expected to be Houston.

The colt who set the early pace in the Derby before fading to eighth was to gallop early this morning at Churchill Downs before being flown in. Trainer D. Wayne Lukas is supposed to accompany the colt, which is to arrive sometime in the late afternoon.

With Houston's arrival, five of the eight probable Preakness starters will be at Pimlico. In addition to Sunday Silence and Easy Goer, Danzil and Hawkster are already stable on the backstretch.

Rock Point is still at Belmont Park, and Northern Wolf and Pulverizing are both preparing for the 1 3/16-mile race at a training track in Bowie, Md.

Whittingham said earlier this week that Easy Goer would probably be the favorite in the second leg of the Triple Crown.

"I'm looking forward to (the Preakness)," McGaughey said. "My horse worked good. He shipped well. We haven't missed a beat since the Derby."

SNOW HILL — Greene Central High School, the champion of the Eastern Plains Conference, finished off its regular season schedule with an 8-4 baseball victory over North Pitt Tuesday.

The Rams jumped into the lead in the first inning, scoring a pair of runs. They added a third run in the second. North Pitt closed it to 3-1 with one in the top of the fourth.

But Greene Central put it away in the bottom of the fourth, scoring three times for a 6-1 margin. Brad Kearney struck out but reached on a passed ball and Reggie Hill singled. Cornelius Hill then slapped a home run.

Randy House, Craig Willoughby and Shawn Howard each had two hits to lead North Pitt while Cornelius Hill had three and Cedric Col-

LITTLEFIELD — South Lenoir defeated Ayden-Grifton, 6-3, to keep its hopes of a second place finish in the Eastern Plains Conference alive Tuesday night.

The loss drops Ayden-Grifton to 7-5 in the conference while South Lenoir is 6-5. The Blue Devils play at Farmville Central today with much to be decided. Should Farmville win, Ayden-Grifton would take second place and Farmville, South Lenoir and Charles B. Aycock would be in a three-way tie for third. Should South Lenoir win, it would tie Ayden-Grifton for second and gain the second seeding for the playoffs, since the Devils beat the Chargers twice.

South Lenoir took the lead on a solo homer by Mike Surcey in the first inning but Ayden-Grifton tied it up with one in the second.

BAYBORO — Farmville Central rallied for five runs in the sixth inning and gained an 8-6 baseball victory over Pamlico County Tuesday.

Pamlico took the lead in the third inning scoring two runs. Farmville came back with three in the top of the fourth, but Pamlico tied it up with one in the bottom of the inning.

Then, in the sixth, Farmville pushed over five to win it. Mitchell Moore reached on an error and Jay Phillips walked. Monte King also reached on an error, loading the bases. Scott Shirley and Jeff Tyson both walked, forcing in runs. Eddie Little's grounder forced King at home. George Burnette then doubled to drive in all three baserunners for the 8-3 lead.

JAMESVILLE — John Asby outduelled Derrick Gaynor and tossed a one hitter and struck out eight to lead Jamesville past Aurora, 2-1, in a high school baseball game Tuesday.

Gaynor limited Jamesville to only one hit, striking out 10 and walking eight, but the Bullets pushed across the only two runs of the game in the fourth on a sacrifice fly by Kent Dickerson that was error.

The win moves Jamesville to 13-7 overall and 12-4 in the Tobacco Belt 1-A Conference and returns to action at Bath today.

The Bullets are tied with North Edgemore for third but in order for Jamesville to make the playoffs, North Edgemore must lose and Jamesville must win today.

Conley, Rose Post Wins

VANCEBORO — Nikki Adams scored off a sacrifice fly by Tracey Summerell in the top of the seventh and Conley then held off West Craven over the final frame for a 3-2 win in Coastal Conference 3-A action Tuesday.

Adams led off the seventh with a single. Lori Boyd also singled and an error allowed both to move up. Charlene Davenport was intentionally walked to load the bases. After Stephanie Haddock lined out, Summerell brought in Adams with a sacrifice fly.

Conley, 14-4 overall and 9-2 in the Coastal, returns to action Thursday at East Carteret.

BEAR GRASS — Shelby Leary went 3-3 with three doubles and drove in five runs to lead Bear Grass to a 15-9 win over Belhaven in Tobacco Belt 1-A Conference softball Tuesday.

The Lady Bears broke a 9-9 tie with six runs in the bottom of the sixth to take control of the game.

Dana Mobley went 4-4 and had two RBI while Susan Raynor was 3-4 and drove in a run and Barbie Perry added two more hits.

Bear Grass scored four runs in the first as Kathy Taylor, Dana Mobley, Leary and Susan Raynor all drove in one run apiece to take an early 4-1 lead.

Bear Grass, 7-10 overall and in the conference, returns to action at home against Bath.

EDENTON — Williamston used a strong fifth and sixth innings to edge Edenton, 12-9, and take over first place in the Northeastern Conference 2-A softball standings Tuesday.

The Lady Tigers broke a 2-2 tie with four runs in the fifth and then scored six more in the sixth to take control.

In the fifth, Melissa Coltrain singled and scored off a single by Valerie Peele. Dawn Bundy followed with a reach off an error that scored Peele. Bundy then scored off a double Lynn Cowan. Dana Hardison tripled in Cowan.

Williamston had six hits in the sixth, keyed by a run-scoring triple by Bundy to take Williamston, 11-1 overall and 10-1 in the NEAC, returns to action Thursday at home against Roanoke Rapids.

The win moved Williamston into first place. A win Thursday will clinch the title. A loss and a win by Edenton will bring a tie but Williamston will get the top seed since they swept Edenton during the regular season.

Shumacher Claims To Have Rose Report

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Free-lance writer David D. Shumacher, the author of Margo Adams' two-part series in Penthouse magazine, claims he has a copy of the Pete Rose report and is offering to sell it, according to a published report.

Shumacher, who wrote the story of Wade Boggs' former lover, says he's already been offered $20,000 for the report by investigator John M. Dowd, according to Wednesday's editions of USA Today. The report was delivered to Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti on May 10.

Henry Freeman, managing editor for sports of USA Today, said Wednesday that the paper listened to Shumacher but refused to make an offer. Kevin Huhn, deputy sports editor of the Cincinnati Post, said Shumacher approached his paper Wednesday but that it, too, declined.

Rose, who is under investigation for gambling on baseball, is scheduled to appear before Giamatti at a May 25 hearing. Dowd, a special counsel for the commissioner, submitted a 225-page report along with seven volumes of supporting evidence.

Reuven J. Katz, a lawyer for Rose, was quoted by USA Today as saying he didn't know how Shumacher obtained the report. Katz, who was given a copy of the report last Thursday along with a letter from Giamatti saying the contents should not be disclosed or copied, refused to comment Wednesday morning.

Rich Levin, a spokesman for Giamatti, was quoted as saying "We're not going to comment until we can confirm it."

Rich-Kid Skinheads Bash Gays

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — A group of affluent teen-age "skinheads" suspected in attacks on up to two dozen homosexual men boasted to police after their arrest in a park, authorities said.

"We're still shaking our heads at how freely they talked about their actions," Deputy Police Chief Terrence Rickard said Tuesday. "It's a sad commentary on our society."

The loose-knit group calls itself the Buffalo Rochester Aryan Skinheads, or B.R.A.S.H., and its 10 members live in affluent neighborhoods in the Rochester area.

"We didn't even know this group existed until we arrested them and they told us who they were," Rickard said. "The officers who made the arrests were amazed and disgusted at what they were saying."

He said he knew skinhead groups had caused trouble elsewhere, but he was surprised to find one in this northwestern New York city.

Police learned of the group when undercover officers stopped an attack Friday night in Highland Park, which Rickard said is a popular meeting place for homosexuals. The youths, two age 16 and the others 18 and 19, were arrested and charged with beating a 30-year-old man.

The eight were jailed over the weekend. Seven were released on $250 bail Monday. The other was released on his own recognizance.

Each was charged with second-degree robbery, second-degree assault and fourth-degree grand larceny, which carry maximum penalties of five to 15 years in prison. The 16-year-olds are being charged as adults.

In his statement to police, one of the group's leaders, 16-year-old Timothy Waite, of Rochester, said, "Basically, what we believe is that we do not like blacks or homosexuals."

Rickard said it appears the attacks were only against homosexuals.

Another suspect, 16-year-old Andrew Johnroe of nearby Pittsford, told police: "Gay bashing is when we lure a gay guy into our path and jump him. Sometimes his wallet gets stolen, but most of the time, we just beat him up real bad."

Rickard said none of the members of the group actually have shaved heads, a trademark of the skinhead movement. He said the group has nothing to do with Buffalo, which is 75 miles west of Rochester.

The skinhead subculture emerged in working class neighborhoods in England as early as the 1960s.

Governors Meet Bush

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Democratic and Republican governors pressed a list of state concerns on President Bush and avoided any open disagreement with the new administration following a private White House meeting.

Virginia's Gerald Baliles, chairman of the National Governors' Association, said the governors called for federal action on schools, the environment, roads, crime and welfare reform in their session Tuesday.

Bush responded by agreeing to call a national summit meeting on education, Baliles said.

"Governors are realistic. They know these issues are not going to be resolved in 100 days," Democrat Baliles said. "But they're also eager for results. We want to work with Washington, but we're not waiting on Washington."

Iowa's Republican Gov. Terry Branstad said he urged more federal effort to help Midwestern farmers deal with drought, and sought a relaxation of new federal welfare regulations affecting the states.

The rules, Branstad said, "don't fit the spirit" of the welfare reform act.

Thirteen governors, representing the National Governors' Association, met with the president for 30 minutes in the Cabinet Room.

The meeting made up for one that was canceled in February because Bush was out of the country during the governors' annual Washington meeting. He will host a formal state dinner for the governors Monday night.

"I think that he clearly understands that for his initiatives to succeed he needs support from those who are working at the state level," said Ohio Gov. Richard Celeste, a Democrat.

Vermont Gov. Madeleine Kunin said she encouraged Bush to support strengthening the Clean Air Act and told him that "delay is now not acceptable" on the issue. She said Bush "seems to agree with that fundamental message."

Branstad said he had first suggested a summit meeting of governors and education leaders when Bush met with them after his election in November.

Senate Tightens Rules On Jet Fighter Pact

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The State Department says new restrictions imposed by the Senate on President Bush's plan to coproduce the FSX jet fighter with Japan may force the renegotiation of parts of the agreement.

The Senate on Tuesday voted 52-47 to defeat a bid by Sen. Alan Dixon, D-Ill., to scrap the FSX deal.

But it then adopted, 72-27, an amendment by Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., to tighten the conditions under which codevelopment and coproduction of the new fighter would take place.

Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence S. Eagleburger made it known immediately before the vote that the administration regards the new directives as unnecessary and likely to trigger new and lengthy negotiations.

The votes came after two days of debate in which senators emotionally and angrily denounced Japan for allegedly unfair trade competition and sounded warnings that the deal could threaten U.S. dominance of the aerospace industry by transferring vital technology to Japanese industry.

"It would be foolhardy not to be vigilant in protecting our aircraft industry and the vital technologies associated with it," Byrd said. "This nation needs to get our economic relationship with Japan on a saner and sounder track."

The amendment was opposed by the administration and Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas dubbed it a "killer amendment" which would require the reopening of negotiations with the Japanese government.

Byrd said the amendment "will not torpedo" the deal but will provide necessary protection for the United States.

Roman Popadiuk, a Bush administration spokesman, noted the White House had made the Senate aware of its objections to the Byrd amendment in advance of the vote and said there would be no further comment until its language was carefully considered.

Eagleburger, in a letter circulated before the Senate action, said additional restrictions imposed by Congress would "inhibit rather than facilitate" the FSX program.

He said the terms of the arrangements with Japan are already consistent with the content of the amendment and do protect U.S. "security, economic and technological strengths and interests."

"Implementation of additional conditions ... which would require renegotiation in some cases, would not materially advance these objectives," Eagleburger said.

The amendment prohibits the transfer of advanced jet engine technology to the Japanese, in Byrd's words, "under any circumstances."

It would bar the Japanese from selling or transferring FSX aircraft technology to third parties.

"No one expects the Japanese to turn this system into an export item, and this provision simply makes it impermissible for the Japanese to use the specific systems they are getting from us to enter the international market," Byrd said.

The amendment also expresses the sense of Congress that the United States receive no less than 40 percent of the production work on the aircraft.

Amanda Lawrence gives loving touch to baby brother that she helped deliver at home

7-Year-Old Girl Takes Charge As Mom Gives Birth At Home

ATLANTA — A childbirth film and a little coaching from a 911 operator was all 7-year-old Amanda Lawrence needed to help her mother, who went into labor and gave birth at home minutes later.

"I think I did a great job, and it was a good idea I helped little Zachery be born," Amanda said after her baby brother's arrival.

Amanda's mother, Teri Lawrence, and William Zachery Lawrence were doing very well Tuesday night at Northside Hospital, said spokeswoman Carol King.

Amanda was about to leave for school Tuesday morning when her mother went into labor. She helped her mother to a sofa and dialed the operator for help, said her father, Edwin.

The operator connected Amanda with 911 operators, who instructed the little girl how to help her mother while an ambulance was heading to their home in suburban Acworth.

The 6-pound, 9-ounce boy was born three minutes later.

"I was talking on the phone, and the water broke," Amanda said. "I could see the baby coming, but the operator kept talking to me and told me to wrap the baby up to keep it warm until the ambulance got there."

"I was shocked, but I knew what was going on, even though he came out a little purplish, purple-blue," she said. "I even got to hold him."

Rescue workers arrived at the home 15 minutes later and took the Lawrences to Northside Hospital.

"I'm just so proud of her," Lawrence said of his daughter. "Amanda was fine about it until her mother started carrying on a little from the pain, but the operator kept her calm."

Ms. King said the girl had to provide information that the mother couldn't give herself.

"She had to give directions to the house, which was on streets that aren't marked, and get towels for her mom and unlock the doors for the ambulance," Ms. King said.

"Thank goodness she was here because I couldn't get to the phone," Mrs. Lawrence said from her hospital bed.

Mrs. Lawrence said she and her baby were expected to go home today.

Just weeks ago, Ms. King said, Amanda had attended a childbirth course. She said the Lawrences attended a refresher course and brought Amanda along when they couldn't find a baby sitter.

"We saw that she was taking in the film," Lawrence said. "She knew that when her mom's water broke, it was just a matter of time."

The couple's second child, which was due around June 1, arrived on their eighth wedding anniversary.

Amanda said she can't wait to take her little brother home.

"We're having a party to welcome him home and thank me for such a great job I did to help him be born," she said.

Astronaut Has Close Call In Air

WASHINGTON — The commander of the space shuttle Atlantis came within 500 feet of crashing his NASA jet into a Pan Am airliner as he flew to Washington for a White House ceremony honoring the astronauts, say aviation officials.

The incident is being investigated by the Federal Aviation Administration, said FAA spokesman John Leyden.

"We are looking at a possible pilot deviation," he said Tuesday night, referring to Navy Capt. David M. Walker.

The incident occurred at about 6:35 p.m. Monday some five miles west of Washington Dulles International Airport in the northern Virginia suburbs, Leyden said.

Although Leyden couldn't confirm that the David Walker piloting the NASA T-38 was the same man who commanded the space shuttle Atlantis last week, National Aeronautics and Space Administration spokesman David Garrett confirmed that the space agency employs no other pilot by that name.

"That's the only one," he said.

Walker, contacted at his hotel room in Washington, refused to comment on the report of the near miss, but did not deny that the incident occurred.

"That's something that I need to probably talk about with the FAA about, not with the news organizations," Walker said. "I'm going to have to get my information from them before I start talking to you all."

Garrett said Walker flew a NASA T-38, a training jet, to Washington to attend Tuesday's White House ceremony at which President Bush honored the shuttle astronauts. Garrett said he had heard reports of a possible close call involving Walker but had so far been unable to reach the pilot.

Leyden explained, "The pilot (of the NASA craft) was given an 8,000-foot assigned altitude. He was descending below his assigned altitude of 8,000 feet to 7,000 feet, and that caused him to come close to a Pan American Airbus 310."

Pan Am spokeswoman Pamela Hanlon confirmed that the small plane crossed the path of Pan Am Flight 140, which had just taken off for Paris. The plane, which has 296 seats, was carrying 166 passengers and a crew of 10, she said.

"It had taken off from Dulles and was at 7,000 feet when it reported a T-38 aircraft came within what the captain believed to be approximately 500 feet of the Airbus aircraft," said Hanlon.

Justice Postpones Teen's Abortion

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — In an unusual move, Supreme Court Justice Anthony M. Kennedy temporarily blocked a Florida teen-ager Tuesday from having an abortion, even though two state courts had ruled that she could do so without the consent of her parents or a judge.

Kennedy postponed for at least two days an abortion for a 15-year-old in Lake County, Fla., after a private attorney appointed to represent the fetus she is carrying asked for a delay.

The postponement was expected to last until at least Thursday, when all nine justices are to take up the case and decide for or against further delay.

Although Kennedy gave no explanation, he acted after the fetus' attorney had said in legal papers that failure to do so would mean that "hundreds of unborn children will be aborted" without a final ruling on whether Florida teen-agers have a right to terminate their pregnancies without permission from parents or a judge.

At a minimum, the order seemed to mean that Kennedy was unwilling to clear the way for an abortion until after the teen-ager's lawyer had had a chance to comment, and until after the full court had considered the question of delay.

Kennedy, who is expected to cast a crucial vote when the deeply divided court rules within a few weeks on a major abortion case now pending, had never before taken a position as a judge on any abortion case. Tuesday's order could be considered procedural, offering no indication of his attitude on abortion rights.

His action, nevertheless, was considered unusual because the court rarely has stopped an abortion at the request of a legal guardian for a fetus. It was also unusual in that it contradicted a decision earlier in the day by the Florida Supreme Court that there was no need to postpone the young woman's abortion while the state courts move toward a final ruling on the scope of teen-agers' abortion rights in Florida.

The case is before the state Supreme Court, which is expected to take it up next September. In the meantime, that court was prepared to allow the Lake County teen-ager and other Florida teen-agers to have abortions with only their doctors' permission.

The case involves a teen-ager, identified in court papers only as "T.W.," who is 12 weeks pregnant — just about a week less than the point after which many clinics and doctors will refuse to perform abortions.

U.S. Lets Cuban Family Cross Line

BUFFALO, N.Y. — A Cuban family's exile has ended with shouts of joy as they returned to this country five months after crossing into Canada for what was supposed to be a brief look at Niagara Falls.

"Feliz! Feliz!" Bermaida Fajardo yelled in Spanish as she ran from a car to hug a friend.

Even though the family lived in Miami for several years and owned a home and business there, U.S. officials blocked their return from a Christmastime sightseeing trip to Ontario because they lacked proof of citizenship.

"I made a mistake," Mrs. Fajardo's husband, Carlos, said Tuesday after crossing the Peace Bridge into Buffalo. "We should not have left the country. I know that now."

At the time, Fajardo had an application for political asylum pending, but it was nullified when the Fajardos and their two children crossed the border.

Fajardo, his wife and her two children, Yoradlys and Yoandys, had traveled north during the Christmas holidays to see snow. They said they crossed into Canada to get a better view of Niagara Falls.

Much of the family's stay in Canada was spent trying to get a new application prepared.

Their plight attracted the attention of Miami's Hispanic community and Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla., appealed to immigration officials to allow them to return on humanitarian grounds.

But Benedict Ferro, district director of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service in Buffalo, denied the request for humanitarian parole in March, citing the family's record of immigration fraud.

Ferro said Mrs. Fajardo used phony documents to enter the country illegally in 1985 and that an immigration judge ruled last summer that she and her two children by another marriage should be deported.

But after a new application for asylum and subsequent INS investigation, Ferro said he could overlook the history of fraud because Fajardo had a legitimate fear of political persecution if returned to Cuba.

"The system worked the way it is supposed to," Ferro said. "They were denied (parole) on merit, but they were able to meet the test for asylum. Those are two different standards."

Sister Kathleen Rimar, who acted as the Fajardo's attorney, criticized immigration officials.

"They could have been allowed to return much sooner but I think they felt they had to make an example of them," she said.

She said that during the exile in Canada the Fajardos lost their home and business in Miami.

World Population May Hit 10 Billion By Year 2025

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — The world's population, currently 5.2 billion, is likely to nearly double to 10 billion by 2025 and to reach 14 billion by the end of the next century unless birth control use increases dramatically around the world within the next few decades, according to a report released Tuesday by the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA).

The report revises an estimate that the agency made a decade ago and that has been widely quoted since. The earlier prediction was that the world's population would stabilize at about 10 billion late in the 21st century. That estimate assumed a greater increase in the worldwide use of family planning than has occurred.

"There has been a failure to address the problem on the scale that it should be addressed," said Stirling D. Scruggs, deputy director of the agency's division of external affairs.

In order to hold population growth to the older, lower estimate, the percentage of the world's women of reproductive age who use birth control would have to increase from the current level of 45 percent to 71 percent by 2025, the report said. Only a few Western European countries and China have such a high level of birth control use. In the United States the rate is about 65 percent.

The more pessimistic outlook comes despite the considerable success that international family-planning efforts have had in the last 20 years. Birth rates are declining for more than 90 percent of the world's population. Worldwide, the average number of children per woman has dropped from 6 to 3.6.

Despite these gains, the world's population is growing by 1.7 percent a year because of declining death rates and because in many developing countries, people of reproductive age make up a large proportion of the population.

"The growth rate has come down, but the number of people added to the population every year has gone up," Scruggs said.

In many countries, rapid population growth has already caused depletion of agricultural land, water, firewood and other resources. The clearing of trees to create more farm land leads to increased erosion and loss of forests needed to help counteract the atmospheric buildup of carbon dioxide, the major cause of the "greenhouse effect."

"We don't know what will happen to the natural resource base at a population of 8, 9, 10, 14 billion," said Sharon Camp, vice president of Population Crisis Committee, an advocacy group, at a news conference Tuesday.

Boosting birth control use to the level required to stabilize the world's population at 10 billion would require spending at least an additional $2 billion a year for international family-planning efforts, the report said. Current worldwide expenditures are about $3 billion a year, with half of the total being spent by China and India, the most populous countries.

Scruggs said the United States spends more than any other industrialized country for international population-control programs, about $230 million this year. However, U.S. contributions have decreased from $290 million in 1985.

The United States has not contributed to the UNFPA since 1985 because the federal government yielded to antiabortion groups that objected to the agency's funding of China's population-control program, claiming China's policies were coercive. The Chinese program seeks to limit each couple to one child. Forced abortions and sterilizations have been reported.

Camp said the agency's governing council will vote next month on a new five-year program of assistance to Chi that emphasizes making contraceptives more available. She said the vote of the U.S. representative to the council will be viewed as a signal of the Bush administration's policy on international family-planning efforts.

Hamadi Convicted

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Mohammed Ali Hamadi was sentenced to life in prison after being convicted today of air piracy and murder in the 1985 hijacking of a TWA jetliner in which a U.S. Navy diver was slain.

It was the maximum penalty under West German law. The three-judge District Court convicted the Lebanese Shiite Moslem for his role in the hijacking of 39 Americans for 17 days and the brutal beating and shooting of Robert Dean Stethem of Waldorf, Md. Stethem's body was tossed from the plane onto the tarmac at Beirut Airport.

Hamadi, 24, admitted to taking part in the hijacking of Flight 847, which had been bound for Rome from Athens, but denied killing Stethem. He stood looking straight ahead impassively as Chief Judge Heiner Mueckenberger read the verdict to a packed courtroom inside Frankfurt's fortress-like Preungesheim prison.

Mueckenberger said the court found Hamadi guilty of "joint participation in murder." By law, a defendant taking part in a serious crime may be convicted of murder even if he does not actually kill the victim. "He was an active member of Hezbollah," the judge said, referring to the pro-Iranian Shiite Moslems believed to be holding Western hostages in Lebanon. "Hezbollah fights against the United States and Israel with violence."

The court also found Hamadi guilty of hostage-taking, inflicting grievous bodily harm in three cases and two counts of smuggling explosives into West Germany.

Two Generals Die In Futile Coup Effort

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia — The government maintained shaky control of the capital today after a coup attempt in which two rebel generals were killed, but the revolt persisted in at least part of the civil war-plagued nation.

Heavy fighting was reported this morning around an old unused airport on the outskirts of Addis Ababa, but the city itself was quiet and heavily patrolled by loyal troops in tanks and armored cars.

"The fighting at the airport apparently involved tanks and artillery," said a western diplomat who spoke on condition of anonymity. "It was thunderous. You could feel buildings shaking here in the city."

Government-run Addis Ababa Radio made no mention of the battle, which raged for at least two hours before dawn.

Maj. Gen. Merid Negusie, the military chief of staff, and Maj. Gen. Amha Desta, commander of the air force, were killed in Tuesday's attempted military takeover of the Marxist government of President Mengistu Haile Mariam.

The revolt began after Mengistu and his wife departed for a state visit to East Germany.

There were unconfirmed reports that the defense minister, Maj. Gen. Haile Giorgis Habte Mariam, was slain by dissident officers in the early hours of the attempted coup but the government radio made no mention of his death.

There have been persistent reports of military unrest in Ethiopia, especially among field commanders who reportedly feel the government has not supported them adequately in the country's 28-year-old civil war, Africa's oldest.

Marcos Stricken By Pneumonia

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HONOLULU — Ousted Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos has been placed back on a respirator and was listed in critical condition because of a recurrence of pneumonia, hospital officials said.

Marcos, 71, has been at St. Francis Medical Center since Jan. 15 with respiratory, heart and kidney ailments.

He had been listed in guarded condition and was in a unit for heart patients before his relapse prompted his return to intensive care on Monday, hospital officials said.

He also was transferred to a respirator, the hospital said in a statement Tuesday night.

In April, doctors said Marcos was chronically ill and unlikely to recover.

Marcos and his wife, Imelda, are under U.S. indictment on charges they plundered more than $100 million from the Philippine government and used the money to buy artworks and real estate.

One For All...

Many dealerships boast about their "extensive selections" of quality previously-owned automobiles. In most cases, however, their selection is "extensively" spread out over dealerships all across North Carolina. But at World Classics by Toyota East, we've got the the best selection of previously-owned luxury cars at any one location in the state!

Each and every automobile on our lot is thoroughly examined for quality by Mr. Ed Sigmon. If it doesn't meet his high standards, we don't sell it. Whatever your automotive tastes, we've got one for all, and all for you. Best of all, it's all in one place—World Classics by Toyota East.

Drugs Bring A Halt To The DeBarges' Climb Toward Top

By Lisa Perlman
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. — Just five years ago, the singing DeBarge family was at the top of the pop music world, promising to be one of Motown's brightest lights of the 1980s.

The four brothers and a sister, with their silky harmonies first perfected while singing in their uncle's church choir, were often compared with the Jackson Five.

Further, there were five more talented siblings who also were either already in the music business or were waiting in the wings.

Since then, three of the siblings have been convicted of drug charges and at least two others have had other brushes with the law.

Only one, El DeBarge, has remained in the musical spotlight.

Etterlene DeBarge Rodriguez, the mother of 10 and grandmother of 15, blames drugs.

"In every life a little rain must fall, and this rain happened to be drugs," she says. "They had a calling, but they deviated because they were young and very talented. There are so many vices out there to destroy you."

Seated next to her recently in the family's stylish Grand Rapids home was son Jonathon, better known as "Chico." Just two years after gaining national attention with his self-titled, pop-funk album on the Motown label, Chico was on his way to prison.

Last June, at the same time he was planning a European concert tour, the 22-year-old singer-songwriter was stopped by federal authorities at Detroit Metropolitan Airport after returning from Los Angeles. They found 2.2 pounds of cocaine in his bag and that of a companion.

Brother Robert, 33, who gained notoriety in the late 1970s and early '80s with the now-defunct soul group Switch, also was convicted in the case.

Robert began serving a five-year, three-month prison term in February. On April 12, Chico began a five-year, eight-month sentence.

In the past few years, Mrs. Rodriguez also has seen son El convicted of creating a disturbance for the beating of a Calvin College student after she reportedly resisted his advances.

She has seen son Tommy spend time in jail for cocaine convictions and son Robert arrested for allegedly telling a stewardess he was carrying a bomb.

Rodriguez believes the arrest of Robert was a "blessing in disguise" because of what she says was a longtime drug habit.

Rodriguez says her home is a gift from son El, as is the new Cadillac in the driveway. In the garage is a new black Jaguar El has just bought for himself.

The Rev. William Abney remembers how the family would captivate the audience as they sang in the choir at his Bethel Pentecostal Church in Grand Rapids.

But, he says, they weren't able to cope with their rapid rise to fame.

"It was like putting an ice-cold piece of glass into burning hot water," Abney says. "It'll crack."

Fame came first to Robert and Tommy in the late 1970s and early '80s with the group Switch, which had a contract with Motown.

The family struck gold again with Motown in the early '80s when siblings El, Bunny, James, Mark and Randy hit the top of the soul charts and then crossed over to pop with a series of hits: "Time Will Reveal," "Rhythm of the Night" and "All This Love."

With fame, however, came varying levels of success and the pressures of being in the spotlight. By 1986, the group had disbanded and El and Bunny wound up solo artists for Motown.

The family is now spread across the country. El commutes between California and Michigan with brother Tommy, who plays bass in his group. Marty, James and Randy are trying to get another recording contract and Bunny also is hoping to record again, Rodriguez says.

The youngest DeBarges, 19-year-old twins Carol and Darrell, aren't budding musicians, though Darrell wrote some songs on El's new album, "Real Love," which has been rising on the Billboard charts since it was released in February.

In fact, almost every member of the family had some part in the new album.

"We're still together, just not market-wise," Chico says.

Chico believes the music business and

The Associated Press

Jonathan DeBarge faces a prison term for possession of cocaine aggressive record companies are at the root of many performers' problems.

"The business is very deceitful," he says. "It will deceive you and bring you up to where you can't handle things."

Traci Jordan, vice president of publicity for Motown, which has signed Chico through 1992, would not discuss Chico or any other member of the DeBarge family.

Dennis Hunt, black-music critic for the Los Angeles Times, was less reticent to critique the family's music.

"As a family, they never took off as people expected," he says. "El seemed to be the most talented one. When he left, the others didn't seem to fare quite as well."

Hunt says the DeBarge family problems were well-known in the music community.

"People knew about their strange activities," he says. "I can't think of any group there were more rumors about."

Hunt is pessimistic about the group's future.

"There is nothing to indicate any niche for them now or in the future," he says. "The main route to success for black musicians is through dance music, and that's taken more by women than men."

Chico says he intends to write songs in prison about his experiences, but when he gets out he probably will turn to gospel music.

That pleases his mother. "I never wanted my children to be stars," she says. "But they were young and talented and there are a lot of temptations out there."

Havens Is Still 'A Loose Cannon'

By Milton Kent
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

His voice is as distinctive today as it was 20 years ago when Richie Havens first pricked the national conscience with his stirring renditions of "Freedom" and "Here Comes the Sun" during the Woodstock festival.

And while the voice remains as powerful as it ever was and the commitment to the cause remains undaunted, the times have changed around Havens.

In fact, the times around him have changed so much that Havens' music, which helped prod the Woodstock generation, is now considered mainstream enough where he will appear as a guest on the taping of "Classic Rock with Wolfman Jack," which appears weekly on the Nashville Network.

So, how does the 60's firebrand reconcile appearing on an "establishment" television show?

"It may seem like an interesting twist from the outside, but from this side, it's not really," he said, laughing, during a phone interview from his New York home.

"They didn't know what the heck to call me, so they called me 'mixed bag,'" Havens said, still laughing. "They've never been able to corner me yet. I'm still a loose cannon, in terms of where the heck I am."

"I go to these clubs that I played in when I first started out and they (introduce me) 'Richie Havens, the folk-blues singer' or 'Richie Havens, the jazz-folk singer' or 'Richie Havens, the jazz-rock-folk-blues singer.' I've been everything. Basically, I'm a rock 'n' roller from the 1960's."

Actually, while the times are changing around Havens, who is now a grandfather, his message has not changed at all. If anything, his fervor has become even stronger.

Havens is still singing that the world is a global village and that we should all get to know our neighbors, both down the street and across the international date line.

Havens thinks that today's youth, thanks to the music of up-and-coming artists such as Tracy Chapman, Suzanne Vega and the Indigo Girls, have realized that Russians, Chinese and American children all have the same concerns.

"I think the kids today are the meaning of what we were singing about then. They are basically living the hell that we tried not to have to live. At this point, I hold it against us that we haven't really sat down and said, 'You know, a lot of what you guys take for granted, we got beat up for in the streets,'" Havens said.

"Unfortunately, the so-called difference perceived between us and them is that we're different. And there is no difference. The things we were talking about then are in fact what we thought was the actuality then and today is the actuality. We're coming of age and at the same time, there are lots of kids who are being of age. And that's the difference: we're coming and they're being."

Don McLean Recovering From 'Pie'

By Milton Kent
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Anyone who has been near a radio in the last 17 years probably knows these lyrics: "Bye-bye Miss American Pie — Drove my Chevy to the levee — But the levee was dry — Them good old boys were drinking whiskey and rye — Singing 'This will be the day that I die.'"

But do you remember who wrote them? If it took you longer than a few seconds to answer, then you have some idea of the helter-skelter that the last 17 years have brought Don McLean.

It has taken most of that time for McLean to put some distance between

'So much happened around that song that it was very hard for Don McLean to crawl out from under it. Gradually over the years with a great deal of effort and while not selling out, I feel that I have emerged as an entity. But it was very difficult.'

— Don McLean

himself and the monster song he wrote and sang, "American Pie."

Make no mistake that "American Pie" — which sold 3½ million copies and is still, at 8½ minutes, the longest song to reach the top of the music charts — is one of the greatest things to happen to McLean.

It is just that the song, considered by many to be an homage to the late Buddy Holly and by others to be the ultimate statement on American life of that time, has been so analyzed that it dragged McLean's career down under the weight of hyper-scrutiny.

"I kind of shot myself in the foot back there in 1972 because I raised expectations so high. So much happened around that song that it was very hard for Don McLean to crawl out from under it. Gradually over the years with a great deal of effort and while not selling out, I feel that I have emerged as an entity. But it was very difficult," said McLean, during a recent phone interview.

"I suppose the analysis of the song was one of those things that kept the focus on the song so relentlessly and off the rest of my work. I am sure that had that song not been written and had the phenomenon surrounding it not occurred, that I would have developed in a much more measured way and I would have had more of an identity with the public, which eventually I got. But it took a hell of a lot of work to do it."

Appeal Of 'Wonder Years' Is Found In Youth

By Howard Rosenberg
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

"Some people pass through your life and you never think about them again," the unseen narrator observed in a recent episode of ABC's "The Wonder Years."

Some television series, too. Not this one, however. Created by Neal Marlens and Carol Black, "The Wonder Years" is a comedy you can't help thinking about again ... and again ... and again. It is a memory you carry for days afterward, a half hour you repeatedly replay in your mind and discuss with friends who love the show as much as you do.

That alone makes it special. "The Wonder Years," which airs Tuesdays, is itself a memory — a man in his early 30s (the narrator) recalling his entry to adolescence in the late '60s. Although the era is beautifully recalled with music of the time, it is less a period piece than a kid's-eye view of growing up in middle-class suburbia, no matter the year.

The youthful attitudes, perceptions and values expressed here are universal and timeless, for at its essence, "The Wonder Years" is a simple story about a kid, his friends and his family.

The center of this "kiddom" (to use the narrator's word) is Kevin Arnold (Fred Savage), who was 12 when the series began in the spring of 1988, but about a month ago hit 13. He shares a pleasant but undistinctive house with his parents, Jack and Norma (Dan Lauria and Alley Mills), his flower-child older sister, Karen (Olivia d'Abo), and his Godzilla of an older brother, Wayne (Jason Hervey), who exists only to torment Kevin.

There are excellent reasons why "The Wonder Years" won an Emmy after its initial six-episode outing last season and has been a huge hit in the ratings since its return last November:

—It has a swell cast, led by Savage, who plays Kevin to wide-eyed perfection and is so cute you want to reach through the screen and hug him. (But what will happen when his voice changes and he sheds his baby fat and shoots up to 5-foot-10?)

—It is so good you want to cry. That is to say, besides being very, very funny, it evokes a spate of emotions while tapping the youth in us all.

That was especially the case in an exquisite early episode written by Black and Marlens that had Kevin mystified about his dad's job and accompanying him to the office to learn what he did as manager of "distribution and product support services at Norcom."

Kevin swiveled in his dad's desk chair and proudly watched his dad punch phone buttons, bark out instructions, chew out subordinates and be in command. His dad was a powerful man, a great man.

But Kevin's perspective abruptly changed when he saw his dad chewed out by his boss. It was one of those small but significant shifts in a relationship, where one party now saw the other with more clarity, where a son now understood why his unfulfilled father disliked his job and escaped each night by stargazing through a back-yard telescope.

—It is the only series about kids that seems to have been designed and written by people who actually were kids. On "The Wonder Years," for example, seventh-grade boys mindlessly punch each other's arms, call each other "buttface" and mock each other with stupid talk — "Duhhhhhh" — because, well, that is what they do.

And Kevin's gawky best friend, Paul (Josh Saviano), and his sometime girlfriend Winnie (Danica McKellar), are genuine enough to be pages from your own life.

—It is honest. No hero or crusader, Kevin is never more than what a seventh-grader is. Last week's episode, written by Todd W. Langen, found Kevin paired in square dancing with the "most unpopular girl in school," someone whose individualism immediately marked her as "weird" in the conformist universe of junior high.

After initially being repelled, Kevin began to find her ... interesting. But did he defend her when she was cruelly ridiculed by the other kids? No. It was a lesson in peer persuasion.

"In seventh grade," the adult Kevin interjected from the present, "who you are is what other seventh-graders say you are."

a hilltop and listen to a friend play his guitar.

Kevin reluctantly cooperated, not because he understood his sister's feelings or blossoming hippiehood, but because of his need to be accepted by her and her friends as "cool."

There was more recent "Wonder Years" magic in an episode by David M. Stern that found Kevin resentful about Paul's approaching bar mitzvah. The ceremony — celebrating a Jewish boy's arrival at religious responsibility at age 13 — was going to overshadow Kevin's own somewhat perfunctory 13th-birthday celebration. As it turned out, Kevin attended the bar mitzvah and ended up feeling as if it were almost as much his as Paul's.

With Black and Marlens recently having abandoned their creation for "personal reasons," "The Wonder Years" is in a period of transition as it closes out the season. There has been no visible drop-off in quality, however, with Bob Brush taking over as sole executive producer.

That a half-hour comedy could remain so full, rich, fresh, funny and true to itself week after week is something to behold. And that America should fall in love with such an unconventional comedy, which has no laugh track or live audience, is something to celebrate. There is genius here.

The wonderdome of kiddom.

Easy Sweater A Year-Round Beauty

Exquisite detailing highlights a year-round knit beauty. Faggoting created by yarnovers forms diamond shapes, which are interspersed by cables on both the front and the back. Easy-to-do seed stitch is used on the soft collar and short sleeves.

The yarn of choice is 100 percent cotton — perfect for warm-weather wear. The gauge is 5½ stitches to the inch and easy-to-follow directions are written for small, medium and large sizes with finished bust measurements of 36, 38 and 40 inches respectively.

To obtain directions for making the Easy and Fashionable sweater, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-051489 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, "The Daily Reflector," P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. K-051489 by sending a check or money order for $19.95 to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and yarn in your choice of the following colors: ecru, deep orchid or teal.

The beaded ribbing used on today's featured sweater is one not often seen, but it gives a very interesting look. Try it out, and if you like it as well as I think you will, clip and save this column in your pattern stitch file.

To practice, cast on 22 stitches and work Row 1 as follows: Step 1 — purl 2; Step 2 — knit 1, purl 1, knit 1. Repeat Steps 1 and 2 across row, ending with purl 2.

Row 2: Step 1 — knit 2; Step 2 — purl 3, knit 2. Repeat Step 2 across to end of row. Repeat these two rows for desired length. To use on a larger piece, cast on a multiple of 5 stitches, then cast on 2 more stitches.

The knotted cable, also used on this sweater, is another good candidate for your pattern file. It is worked on a panel of 10 stitches. For a practice swatch, I suggest you cast on 20 stitches, working the first and last 5 stitches on each row in stockinette stitch.

Row 1: (right side) Knit 5, place marker on the needle, purl 2, knit 2, purl 2, knit 2, place marker on needle, knit 5.

Row 2: Purl 5, pass marker to right needle, knit 2, purl 2, knit 2, purl 2, knit 2, pass marker to right needle, purl 5. From this point on the directions will refer only the stitches between the markers; remember to keep the first and last 5 stitches on

Rows 4, 6, 8 and 10: Knit 2, purl 2, knit 2, purl 2, knit 2.

Rows 5, 7 and 9: Purl 2, knit 2, purl 2, knit 2, purl 2.

Repeat these 10 rows in sequence for desired length.

Here are short and simple directions for another version of beaded ribbing. Cast on any uneven number of stitches. Row 1: Step 1 — knit 1; Step 2 — purl 1, knit 1. Repeat Step 2 across to end of row. Row 2: Purl all stitches. Repeat these 2 rows for desired length.

Here's hoping you will enjoy learning and using these pattern stitches.

Karnowski-Gilbert Pair Are Married On May 6

Kendra Cheryl Gilbert and Earl David Karnowski were married May 6 at 11 a.m. in St. James United Methodist Church.

The Rev. Samuel W. Loy conducted the double-ring ceremony. Wedding music was presented by organist Frances Cain.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norwood K. Gilbert of Broadway, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin H. Karnowski of Washington, N.C., and the late Inez Rawls Karnowski.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white gown of lace and organza over bridal taffeta. The fitted bodice was accented with pearls and sequins and had a portrait neckline with cameo inserts and bishop sleeves. The full skirt was sprinkled with lace motifs and extended into a cathedral train. She wore a fingertip veil of illusion and carried a bouquet of cascading yellow roses, iris and daisies.

Michelle Brinkley of Greenville was matron of honor and Karen Murray of Greenville was bridesmaid.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and Paul Hatch of Fayetteville was usher. The wedding was directed by Lori Wilson.

A reception followed in the church parlor.

The bride, a graduate of East Carolina University, is a graduate student there. The bride and bridegroom are employed by ECU.

Pearce Pair Are Reunited

MILLINEUM — Ann Outlaw Pearce and Mahlon Edward Pearce, both of Fayetteville, were reunited in marriage May 7.

The double-ring ceremony was conducted by the Revs. Jerry McBride and Lotis Joyner in Millineum Pentecostal Holiness Church. Music was presented by organist Sylvia Vaughan and soloists Eugene Joyner and Sandra Outlaw.

Parents of the bridal couple are Trolie Harrington Outlaw of Aulander, and the late Brodie Outlaw, and Hettie S. Pearce of Wendell, and the late Grover Pearce.

The bride was escorted by the bridegroom. Heather Pearce McQueen of Clinton, daughter of the bridal couple, was matron of honor. Flower girls were Erin and Erika Outlaw of Millineum, twin nieces of the bride.

The best man was Steve McQueen of Clinton, son-in-law of the bridal couple. Ushers were Tommy Hurdle of Millineum and David Lassiter, both cousins of the bride.

The bride wore a satin ivory tea-length dress with a brush train. The fitted beaded bodice was trimmed with Venise silk lace and had a square neckline. She carried a bouquet of miniature white roses.

The wedding was directed by Wanda Rueb.

A reception in the Aulander Community Building was given by relatives and friends. A rehearsal dinner was held in the church.

The couple will live in Fayetteville after a wedding trip.

The bride is owner of Reflections Beauty Salon in Greenville, and the bridegroom is owner of M and H Builders in Fayetteville.

Engagement

Gould-Graham

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Gould of Jacksonville announce the engagement of their daughter, Linda Nell Gould, to Lawrence Dale Graham, son of Mr. and Mrs. L.D. Graham of Taylorsville. The wedding will take place June 24.

Old Wristwatches Moving Into World Of Collectibles

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Vintage wristwatches are big business. And not just the fancy ones, but the ones you, your parents or grandparents once wore.

"Very few people realize what their old watches might be worth today," says Edward Faber of Aaron Faber Gallery in New York. "Rare or popular European collectors' items are now priced beyond the reach of most collectors, but ordinary American watches only a generation or two old are worth a great deal of money as well."

For example, a Hamilton electric that sold for $250 in the late 1950s is now pushing $2,000. Stuart Unger of Time Will Tell, a vintage watch store in New York City, predicts that American timepieces currently selling from $250 to $5,000 will appreciate to more than $13,000 in the next several years.

He predicts wristwatches with curved or asymmetric shapes or enamel from the 1920s will appreciate rapidly. Especially valuable, he says, are the Hamilton Coronado and Piping Rock models, Gruen Curvex watches, Hamilton Electrics, enameled Walthams and 1920s Bulovas.

The classic European names — Patek Philippe, Audemars Piguet and Vacheron & Constantin — still draw top dollar, says Steffan Aletti, president of the Jewelry Industry Council, with early Rolex and Cartier watches a close second. Chronographs or any highly complex multi-function mechanical watches are also real collectors' items.

"Everybody loves a treasure hunt, but most people don't realize that they can start hunting right at home — in their jewelry drawer or safe deposit box," says Aletti.

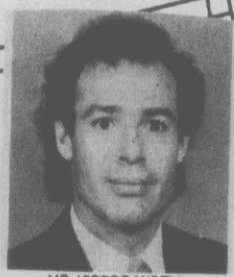

Aletti adds that watches don't have to be heirlooms to be in demand. In fact, he says, vintage steel watches are very popular at the moment. A Gene Autry watch, for example, can fetch $600.

She Remembers Heartbreak, 47 Years Later

Dear Abby: Your column about grandmothers who favor one grandchild over another reminded me of my own grandmother. I am 51 years old and will never forget my fourth birthday. My cousin and I shared the same birthday, and our mothers had planned a party for the two of us.

My grandmother gave my cousin a set of dominoes and a large doll with blond hair. It was the most beautiful doll I had ever seen.

I opened my gift and found a piece of green corduroy yardage. Grandma said, "Your mother can make a dress for you out of this." I still recall thinking at that moment, "Grandma doesn't like me." To this day I can't remember ever having shared a hug or a kiss with her.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

My only vivid memory of this grandmother was the hurt I felt on my fourth birthday. — Rose Marie Powers, Olympia, Wash.

Dear Rose Marie: Your grandmother must have been a medical miracle. One wonders how she could have lived for so long without a heart.

Dear Abby: I am writing to congratulate the students at Skeen Elementary School in Leesburg, Fla., for their "Litter Perfect" program, and to let your readers know about a national public awareness campaign called "Take Pride in America."

The U.S. Department of the Interior is the lead agency for the Take Pride initiative. Certainly, as "landlord" of more than 500 million acres of public land, I am familiar with the enormous problems associated with careless use and intentional abuse of America's precious natural and cultural resources. And, I believe it is our responsibility, our duty, to use these treasures prudently, and pass them unspoiled to our children and grandchildren. How we care for the land today will determine whether or not we will be able to enjoy its majesty and bounty in the future.

"Take Pride in America" promotes wise stewardship through volunteerism with the assistance of the Advertising Council Inc. in a public service advertising campaign. Equally important is a national awards program that recognizes annually the most outstanding stewardship activities occurring across the country. Anyone wishing more information about how to nominate deserving individuals and organizations for awards can write to: Take Pride in America, P.O. Box 1339-A, Jessup, Md. 20794.

Surely, these 12 young students at Skeen Elementary School are a bright and shining example of the "thousand points of light" upon which the American people, President Bush and his administration rely to contribute to the care of this great country.

Thank you, Abby, for helping us to spread this important message. — Manuel Lujan Jr., Secretary Of The Interior, Washington, D.C.

Dear Abby: I have a question about my marital status. After my husband and I were divorced, I legally reclaimed my maiden name. Our daughter uses that name for her school records, medical treatments, etc.

A few years ago, my ex-husband died, so I now call myself "a single parent." However, since I now use my maiden name, what do I say when I go to a hospital and the admissions clerk asks me what my marital status is?

Am I widowed, divorced or single? — Eenie, Meenie, Miney

Dear Eenie: Since your husband died after your divorce, you never were, and are not now, widowed; you are divorced. A single person is one who has never been married.

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA. 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Traditional Quilts Hold Clues To History

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOWELL, Mass. — Traditional American quilts, admired for their warmth and beauty, also yield clues to the daily lives of the women who stitched them.

Women did not leave for posterity the written records that men did, especially women who had neither the education nor the time to write, says Susan Porter, a specialist in women's social history at Clark University in Worcester, Mass.

"A lot of women who didn't write wrote their history into the quilts," Porter says.

A quilt tells not only of a woman's personal joys and sorrows, but also of her spiritual and economic life and political views.

Quilting originated in 12th- or 13th-century China, when women discovered that stitching three layers of fabric together made a coverlet of exceptional warmth.

But patchwork, or piece work, is uniquely American, an invention of necessity by Colonial women, according to Marta Gredler, director of the New England Quilt Museum in Lowell.

"American settlers had very little fabric they were able to bring over with them from England," Gredler says. "And until the industrial revolution, until the mid 1800s when fabric became much more readily available, they really were reusing every bit and scrap they had. The whole idea of patchwork and piecework grew out of that."

Quilts are also rich in symbolism. Some quilts made by slaves in the antebellum South, for example, incorporate African mythological symbols, according to Gladys-Marie Frye, a folklorist at the University of Maryland who specializes in studying slave culture.

Frye has an extensive collection of slave quilts. Some were recently exhibited at Radcliffe University's Bunting Institute. From July 20-

Sept. 17 they will be at the Museum of American Folk Art in New York City.

One quilt, she says, was made in 1852 by a slave named Yellow Bill as a gift to his mistress. At first glance, one sees flowers and a basket, but a more careful look shows the basket is surrounded by snakes, an ancient African symbol of fertility, Frye says.

"If the mistress knew what was in the quilt, she might not have been so happy," Frye says.

The social structure of the Old South is frozen forever in a quilt at the Lowell museum that was stitched by white plantation women and their black slaves in the early 1800s.

'See No Evil' Winner At Box-Office

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOLLYWOOD — The comic antics of Richard Pryor and Gene Wilder helped "See No Evil, Hear No Evil" make its debut last weekend as moviegoers' favorite.

The movie starring the Pryor-Wilder team, who in the past co-starred in "Silver Streak" and "Stir Crazy," took in $7.1 million.

Kevin Costner's baseball-farm fantasy "Field of Dreams" came in second with $5.8 million in ticket sales.

"K-9," starring James Belushi, dropped from No. 1 to third place with $4.5 million, while Stephen King's scary "Pet Sematary" lured $4 million in business to place fourth.

"Major League," a comedy about baseball, was fifth with $2.3 million. Oscar-winning "Rain Man" finished sixth with $1.24 million, bringing its 22-week total to $162 million.

"Scandal," about the Profumo sex affair that rocked Britain in 1963, moved into wider release and placed seventh with $1.22 million. Michael Keaton's "The Dream Team" was eighth with $1.15 million.

In ninth was "Say Anything" with $1.11 million, and "Criminal Law" completed the top 10 with $1 million.

Here are the top movies for the weekend as tallied by Exhibitor Relations Co., with distributor, weekend gross, number of screens, average per screen, total gross and weeks in release.

1. "See No Evil, Hear No Evil," Tri-Star, $7.1 million, 1,677 screens, $4,233 per screen, $7.1 million, one week.

2. "Field of Dreams," Universal, $5.8 million, 1,028 screens, $5,620 per screen, $16 million, four weeks.
3. "K-9," Universal, $4.5 million, 1,706 screens, $2,610 per screen, $22 million, three weeks.
4. "Pet Sematary," Paramount, $4 million, 1,585 screens, $2,504 per screen, $38.9 million, four weeks.
5. "Major League," Paramount, $2.3 million, 1,557 screens, $1,484 per screen, $39.2 million, six weeks.
6. "Rain Man," MGM-UA, $1.24 million, 1,119 screens, $1,110 per screen, $162 million, 22 weeks.
7. "Scandal," Miramax, $1.22 million, 346 screens, $3,536 per screen, $2.1 million, three weeks.

8. "The Dream Team," Universal, $1.15 million, 1,128 screens, $1,020 per screen, $23.1 million, six weeks.

McClure Story Will Air Sunday

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Did anybody who wasn't down a well miss the mass-publicized rescue of little Jessica McClure, the Texas toddler?

For those who missed it or just want to relive it, ABC offers a dramatized replay Sunday in "Everybody's Baby: The Rescue of Jessica McClure."

Roxana Zal, who won an Emmy Award two years ago for "Something About Amelia," plays Cissy McClure, the young mother who realizes that her 18-month-old baby has disappeared into an 8-inch opening in the ground.

Sen. Robert Byrd, Stickler For Form, Renounces Tuxedo

By Sarah Booth Conroy
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Senate President Pro Tem Robert C. Byrd Jr. of West Virginia is widely known as a stickler for form. His knowledge of parliamentary procedure has long been acclaimed as the greatest in the Congress.

Not only is Byrd correct congressionally, but he is the very image of the august Southern senator — a mane of white hair, suitable for shaking for emphasis; serious mien impressive during oratory; dapper, well-pressed, carefully inspected every morning by Erma Byrd (who herself does all the family laundry) before he leaves his house.

That's why the following announcement is likely to rock the Washington social world and have far-reaching repercussions internationally:

Byrd has renounced the tuxedo. He'd been thinking about it for some time, he says. In December 1987, when Mikhail Gorbachev appeared in mufti at the White House state dinner in his honor "then I thought to myself, well, we agree on at least one thing."

His resolve hardened, that mirror of form has since declined to wear the tuxedo, the notched silk lapels, the semiformal male evening dress.

"I call it the monkey suit," says Byrd (and a number of others). "The person who invented it didn't have much to do. The suit is uncomfortable. And wearing it makes me feel silly and stiff."

Not that he hasn't worn the Washington evening uniform at some surprising occasions. "Once I drove in to a dinner but took a wrong turn and found myself headed back to McLean (Va.). So in full black tie, I had dinner — we call it supper — with my wife and daughter."

However, Byrd, a letter-of-the-law man, is rarely in technical violation of the instructions on engraved invitations that say black tie.

Recently at the black-tie White House Correspondents dinner, Byrd appeared resplendent in a three-piece black suit, suitable for going to a marriage or funeral, applying for a loan and certainly eating in the midst of 2,500 reporters and guests, many of whom had hired their residency.

And his tie was, indeed, black — a plain, undecorated, pristine full-length tie-type tie.

If anyone noticed that he didn't have stripes of satin down his pants, no one dared to say. Many husbands, when told of Byrd's feat, thought it great that he, who has the clout to do it, had struck this blow for male liberation from the tyranny of the tuxedo. "I'm a one-man crusade," said the senator.

His West Virginia constituents have not yet been told of his revolutionary action, but Byrd expects no repercussions.

"I don't think I've ever worn a tuxedo in West Virginia," he says, dismissing the possibility of voter backlash.

Byrd says that in his 37 years in the Congress he has made do with only two black-tie evening suits. Considering he has been both a regular (at least 12 times) at the White House and other such august assemblages, it is reasonable to suppose that: (1) he hasn't gained any weight since he came to town, and (2) Erma Byrd's taken good care of his outfits, and (3) he's gone to a number of semiformal events in a dark business suit, explaining he'd come directly from the floor of the Congress without time to change.

But this formal declaration of independence from the awkwardly cut evening ensemble may be part of Byrd's new way of life.

This year Byrd is 71. He resigned as majority leader of the Senate in 1988 at the end of the 100th Congress, a post he's held twice, from 1977 to 1979, and again in 1987-88. (He was minority leader for six years as well.)

He's given up fiddling — he was a famous violinist, both on record and at country-music fairs — in favor of writing history. His book, "The Senate 1789-1989, Addresses on the History of the United States Senate," was published last month to acclaim, winning the Henry Adams history award and the Bookbinders Institute of America award.

He's reading the page proofs of Volume II, due out next fall, and beginning work on Volume III. And he says he's given up going out to mass-audience dinners except under exceptional circumstances.

Not that Byrd can be considered to be retiring. As president pro tem of the Senate, he sits in the seat of the mighty, playing musical chairs with Vice President Dan Quayle (and everyone expects Byrd to perch the most time in the best seat in, if not the House, at least the Senate.) As chairman of the Appropriations Committee, he wields considerable power over the pursestrings.

All of which indicates that black tie may be fading in the capital. For that, there may be many who will propose a painting of Byrd be added to the Capitol's Old Senate Chamber.

Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY May 18
ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Be aware of the image you present to others. Spruce up and be your radiant self. First impressions are important. Avoid a practical joker.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Focus on social activities that involve co-workers. Interact, but be conscious of the dangers of combining business and pleasure.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Further analyze your desires to relocate. A fresh start can improve your situation if you play your cards right and plan carefully.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): You feel that you need more space to think and activate your creative yearnings. Pressure at the workplace can bring you down.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): You find yourself in the role of peacekeeper, and you are also the voice of reason. Shop for staple items today. Stick to basics.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Fate is on your side as plans mature and projects get the "go ahead" signal. The pace may be frantic, but you love it.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Help given to a friend is genuinely touching and personally rewarding. Your job performance is nearly flawless—keep up the good work.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Ignore a power-hungry individual with very little to offer. A comical turn of events, in the later day, changes the mood.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Focus on your ability to teach others. Catch up on important correspondence. Double-check financial figures, reconciliations, etc.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): You worry over the outcome of a problem. Family members can be a comforting tranquilizer if you do not withdraw from them.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Grab a chance to be in the spotlight. You feel the only stumbling block is a shortage of cash. Be prepared for pleasant changes.
PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Stellar influences can have you whistling while you work. You have the ability to be spontaneous and to make others feel important.

The Python

By Adrienne Allison

Twisting and turning and roaring around
 This ride's not for me—I keep my feet on the ground.

As I get ready to hold on with all my might
 The attendant comes around to strap me in tight.

I close my eyes and silently scream.
 Is this real or is it a dream?

This big yellow coaster goes every-which-way.
 Should I go? Should I stay?

Hey, there's nothing to this, I don't think.
 Then suddenly I hear a "clink"!

As the ride slows down and comes to an end.
 I turn around and wave to my friend!

Trying to decide if I should go
 Is the toughest thing—Yes or No?

The coaster then begins its climb.
 Can I get off? Is there still time?

Just in time—the ride's all done!
 Let's do it again—that was fun!

Scared? Who me? What do you mean?
 Well, of course, I've already been!

Up and down and to and fro.
 Loop de loop, high and low.

PUZZLE CORNER

On this date in 1792 the New York Stock Exchange began operation in the street under a tree. The NY Stock Exchange still operates today on this famous street. To find out the name of the street, first do the math problems below.

$(10 \times 2) + 3 = \underline{\quad}$
 $1 + 0 = \underline{\quad}$
 $24 \div 2 = \underline{\quad}$
 $6 \times 2 = \underline{\quad}$

Now, assign a number to each letter of the alphabet, A will be #1 and Z will be #26. Find out which letters match the above math answers and you will know the name of the famous stock market street.

My Mom

By Morgan Morgan

My mom is like a bird that sings in a tree or the music of a violin. She is like a pretty picture.

Federal Facts The National Anthem

Another of the many symbols which represent our nation and her people is the national anthem or song. This is sung or played at official government occasions, at the opening of ballgames, at the beginning of meetings and during parades. It shows pride in the country and it shows others which nation of people it is representing.

Most Americans know the story of how Francis Scott Key, a lawyer from Washington, D.C., wrote a poem which was later set to music. The country was involved in a second war with England, the War of 1812. It was September 1814 and a fellow by the name of Dr. Beanes had been arrested and placed on a ship in the harbor of Baltimore. Lawyer Key was asked to help gain his release. While on the ship, Key and those who were with him had heard of plans to attack Ft. McHenry in the Baltimore harbor. Since they were held on the ship until after the mission was complete by the British. During the fighting, Key stood on the ship's deck to wait and watch for the outcome of the battle. When he saw that the American flag (with 15 stripes and stars) still flew, he quickly wrote his feelings on the back of an envelope in his pocket. About a month later the poem was set to an anonymously written piece of music which had first been heard in London, England in 1775. The poem was also published in 2 newspapers and was originally called "The Defense of Fort McHenry".

In the 1890's the Navy and the Army required that The Star Spangled Banner be used. In World War I President Woodrow Wilson approved its use and in 1931 on March 3rd, the Star Spangled Banner became the official anthem of the entire United States. Even today there is no official version of the music or even the words.

The flag which Francis Scott Key watched for through the "bombs bursting in air" is on display in the Smithsonian Institution in Washington D.C.

Cabbage: Delicious Leaf From Past

By Cherie Evans
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The mouthwatering fragrance of cabbage cooking in grandma's kitchen may be one of the fond memories cabbage lovers conjure when reminiscing about their favorite vegetable.

Or some folks might recollect the somewhat soggy cole slaw that had to wait too long to be served at the church picnic, or the cabbage rolls stuffed with crab meat at Aunt Frances' fancy party.

Whatever image is evoked with the thought of cabbage, the fact is the leafy vegetable has survived ages of cooking fads by being nutritious, tasty and versatile.

The cabbage's roots date back to prehistoric times in the Eastern Mediterranean and Asia Minor areas. The Romans brought it north to Britain, and the monks of the Middle Ages grew it in their gardens.

Today, it is a major vegetable in most countries of the temperate zone.

"Locally cabbage is grown both spring and fall," said Sam Uzzell of the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service.

"We would normally set plants out here in the eastern part of the state in early February or late January or early April for the spring crop," he said. "We set it out during the month of August for the fall crop."

There are about 50 acres of commercially-grown cabbage in Pitt County, Uzzell said.

"It's a pretty durable sort of a plant. As long as it's planted and grows at a fairly good speed, it has nice tender foliage and adequate qualities," he said. Alternating wet and dry conditions will sometimes cause the heads of cabbage to split, Uzzell said.

"It's best to keep things growing rapidly and at an even pace," he said.

"Insects I suppose are the biggest problem," Uzzell said. The three major culprits are cabbage loopers, imported cabbage worms and diamond-back moths.

Edible parts of the plant are low in calories and provides ascorbic acid, minerals and necessary bulk in the diet. Rich in vitamin C and high in fiber, cabbage trails only the potato in the consumption of vegetables.

It is listed among foods recommended for a healthy diet by the National Cancer Institute, the American Cancer Society and the National Academy of Sciences.

Cabbage is the patriarch of such descendants as broccoli, brussels sprouts, cauliflower, collards, bok choy and kale.

The solid head green cabbage also may appear as white and early season varieties include Golden Acre, Hispi, Greyhound and Savoy. Savoy has curly edges on loosely bunched leaves.

Red cabbage, which is actually magenta in color, most often is used to add color to cold salads, cooked for casseroles or pickled. Varieties include red head and meteor.

Chinese cabbage looks more like a lettuce family member because it doesn't have a solid, round head. It has been cultivated in China since the fifth century and in Europe since the 1850s. It has a delicate flavor, cooked or raw, and produces very little of the "cabbage odor" when it is cooking.

Varieties include Michihli, Nagaoka, and Napp or "celery" cabbage, which has a sweet flavor and is available in either a long and narrow or a short and broad leaved variety.

COLE SLAW

½ cup slaw dressing
In mixing bowl, stir dressing into cabbage. Mix well. Chill to blend flavors.

Variations: Confetti — 1 carrot, pared and shredded, and 2 tablespoons finely chopped green pepper; Waldorf — 1 small unpared red apple, chopped; ½ cup raisins, ¼ cup chopped walnuts and ½ teaspoon celery seed; Garden Green — ½ cup each shredded cucumber and zucchini, 2 tablespoons each grated onion and chopped parsley; Hawaiian — 1 (8-ounce) can drained crushed pineapple, ¼ cup each diced dates and chopped nuts. Makes 4 servings.

ORIENTAL VEGETABLE DIP

1 (8-oz.) container sour cream
1 (8-oz.) can water chestnuts, drained and chopped
½ cup finely shredded cabbage
½ cup shredded carrot
½ cup slaw dressing
¼ cup sliced green onions
2 tsps. beef-flavor instant bouillon
1 tsp. toasted sesame seed (optional)
½ tsp. Worcestershire sauce
¼ tsp. garlic powder
Combine ingredients in medium bowl. Chill to blend flavors. Serve with potato chips or fresh vegetables. Makes about 2 cups.

THREE-BEAN BUFFET SLAW

4 cups chopped or shredded red or green cabbage (about ½ medium head)
1 (17-oz.) can green lima beans, drained

1 (16-oz.) can cut green beans, drained
1 (15-oz.) can red beans, drained

½ cup chopped green pepper
½ cup chopped onion
2 tsps. chopped pimiento
1 cup slaw dressing
1½ tsps. thyme leaves
1 tsp. celery seed
1 tsp. sugar
½ tsp. pepper
Combine all ingredients in large bowl. Mix well. Cover and chill several hours or overnight. Stir before serving. Makes 12 to 15 servings.

LAYERED PARTY SLAW

1 medium head cabbage, shredded or chopped (about 8 cups)
½ medium head cauliflower, chopped (about 2 cups)
8 slices bacon, cooked and crumbled
2 cups frozen green peas, thawed
2 cups sliced fresh mushrooms (about 8 oz.)
½ cup sliced green onions
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese
½ cup slaw dressing
2 medium tomatoes, cut into wedges
In large glass serving bowl, layer cabbage, cauliflower, 4 slices bacon, peas, mushrooms and onions. Top with cheese, remaining bacon and dressing. Cover and refrigerate several hours or overnight. Top with tomato before serving. Garnish with chopped parsley or more bacon if desired.

BROCCOLI SLAW

1 head fresh broccoli, cut into florets
1 can (8 oz.) sliced water chestnuts, drained

1 small onion, diced
1 cup diced celery
½ cup raisins
½ pound bacon, cooked, drained and crumbled
1 cup slaw dressing
1 tbsp. vinegar

Combine cabbage, broccoli, water chestnuts, onion, celery, raisins and bacon. Mix together salad dressing and vinegar. Pour dressing over broccoli mixture and refrigerate. Serve chilled. Makes 4 servings.

CURRIED FOUR BEAN SLAW

1 cup dried white beans
1 cup dried baby lima beans
1 cup garbanzo beans (canned)
1 cup fresh chopped green beans, raw
2 cups chopped green cabbage
2 cups slaw dressing
½ cup mayonnaise
2 tsps. curry powder
6½ oz. can tuna, drained

Follow soaking directions on package for white beans and lima beans. In large saucepan combine soaked beans, garbanzo beans and green beans, and boil for 8 minutes in salted water. Drain. Mix slaw dressing, curry powder and mayonnaise. Add tuna to beans and fold in dressing mixture. Save warm as is or chill for 2 hours and serve cold.

RED CABBAGE SLAW

1 small head of red cabbage, finely chopped
1 medium onion, minced
1 tbsp. mustard
1 dozen black olives, chopped
1 tsp. chopped chives
1 tsp. chopped parsley
4 tsps. slaw dressing

Combine cabbage, onion, mustard, chives and parsley. Chill for 2 hours. Add slaw dressing. Toss well. Garnish with olives.

HOT SLAW WITH PEAS

1 medium head of cabbage
2 cups shelled green peas
½ cup chopped onion
½ cup butter
2 cups slaw dressing
1 chicken bouillon cube
Chopped parsley
Salt and pepper

Discard outer leaves of cabbage and wash head thoroughly. Prepare chicken stock from bouillon cube. When stock is bubbling, add cabbage, onion and peas. Season with salt and pepper. Cover and cook slowly for ½ hour. Add butter and salad dressing. Cook until juice is reduced. Serve warm. Garnish with chopped parsley. Serves 6.

GREEK SHRIMP SALAD

12 thin slices red onion
½ cup crumbled feta cheese
1 bunch watercress, trimmed, rinsed and shaken dry
1 bunch savory cabbage, rinsed and finely sliced
24 cherry tomatoes
3 tsps. finely chopped basil
3 tsps. fresh lemon juice
1 cup slaw dressing
1 clove garlic, finely minced

Arrange onion rings in bottom of the salad bowl. Sprinkle with feta cheese and cover with watercress and cabbage. Cook cherry tomatoes in boiling water for exactly 12 seconds. Drain and run under cold water. Peel each tomato. Combine basil, lemon juice, slaw dressing and garlic. Pour over salad and toss well. Makes 4 servings.

Exact Role Of Nutrition In Aging Isn't Known

Q: Do older people have special nutrition needs?

A: I am delighted to participate with many of you in two local events aimed at improving the health and quality of life of our senior citizens. The Creative Living Center sponsored a day of activities on Caring for the Older Adult.

There were many questions about general nutrition for older people. If you missed the program and would like our handout on the Care and Feeding of Alzheimer's patients, please send me a self-addressed, stamped envelope. We will mail you one.

I hope many of you have seen the publicity of Elder Fair, an event for seniors sponsored by Pitt County Memorial Hospital on May 30, 1989. I was there last year and it was a great day of information and activities and socializing. Call Fred Cross for more information on this year's program at 551-5575.

Kathy Kolasa

Ph.D., ECU Dept. Family Medicine

I've been struggling with the correct word to use to describe our valued older residents. My 72-year-old father was visiting recently. He said he felt so good he couldn't be a senior citizen. He decided he was a "junior senior." As a result, we let him hit from the junior golf tees.

Anyway, some gerontology experts believe that nutrition or the way we eat is linked to many of the health problems elderly have. But the exact role of nutrition in the aging process has not been well studied. So, lots of advice we give is based on scientific opinion. Since there isn't much proof, that leaves lots of room for fads and other schemes. We know older Americans are cheated out of money looking for ways to improve their quality of life.

We do know that early detection and treatment of any important nutritional deficiencies can prevent further tissue breakdown and help maintain good working order of body organs. We also know that all people need the same nutrients. Children, adults and elderly all need protein, carbohydrates, fat, vitamins and minerals.

But the amounts of these nutrients may vary with age, activity and health. We know, too, that the elderly person's need for calories declines with age, even if they do not reduce their activity. So, we use the rule of thumb that says after age 50, you probably need 10 percent fewer calories than before. And after age 75, your calorie needs go down another 10-15 percent. That means if you reach age 50 eating 2,000 calories and neither gaining or losing weight, you keep your activity the same, you are not sick, you will start to need only 1,800 calories.

After 75 years of age, you need only about 1,530 calories. So, nutritionists say that as you age, you must eat "nutrient dense" foods. That means you have little room for foods that five calories (fat, alcohol, sugar) with few other nutrients. Unfortunately, it seems, that many older people actually prefer those foods that have lots of sugar or fat. Eating leads to nutrient imbalances and/or weight gain.

The actual amount of vitamins and minerals an elderly person needs will vary if they are ill, if they are taking medications, if they drink more than moderate amounts of alcohol and if they use laxatives often. If you or someone you know does this, you may want to talk with your doctors about your vitamin and mineral status.

Many older people's diets fall short of nutrients. Some just don't eat enough food. Some have had lifelong poor eating habits. Researchers find that many older people do not consume enough foods with vitamins A, B1, B2, B6, niacin, folate, vitamins C, D, E, iron and calcium. So, it is best to look carefully at your diet and talk with your doctor about the right vitamin and/or mineral supplements for you.

You can spend money on supplements and do yourself no good unless you are using the right ones. Just because the bottle says Elder Vitamins or Senior Vitamins does not mean it's formulated for you. Also, remember that many of the favorite vitamin/mineral tonics are 14 percent alcohol.

I'll answer some other questions later.

Try Fresh-Baked, Make-Ahead Sweet Rolls For Breakfast

By Nancy Byal
BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS

Rouse your family on a fine spring morning with the smell of fresh-baked super-size breakfast rolls. Mix the dough the night before and refrigerate; then shape and bake just before serving.

NO-KNEAD FAN ROLLS

- 3 1/4 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 pkg. active dry yeast
- 1 cup milk
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1/4 cup shortening
- 1 tsp. salt
- 1 egg
- 1/2 tsp. finely shredded lemon peel
- 1/2 cup packed brown sugar
- 1/2 cup raisins
- 2 tsp. ground cinnamon
- 2 tbsps. margarine or butter, softened
- Powdered Sugar Icing (recipe follows)

In large mixer bowl stir together 1 1/4 cups of the flour and yeast. Heat milk, sugar, shortening and salt just until warm (120 to 130 degrees F) and shortening almost melts; stir constantly. Add to flour mixture with egg and lemon peel. Beat on low speed 1/2 minute, scraping bowl. Beat on high 3 minutes. Stir in remaining flour (Dough will be soft.) Place in greased bowl. Cover; chill 2 to 24 hours. Let stand at room temperature 10 minutes before shaping.

For filling, combine brown sugar, raisins and cinnamon. Roll dough into a 16- by 12-inch rectangle. Cut in half lengthwise. Spread half the margarine over each rectangle; sprinkle half the filling down center third of each. Fold edges of dough over filling, so each rectangle is 3 layers thick. Pat lightly to flatten. Cut each rectangle crosswise into 4 rolls. Place rolls on greased foil-lined baking sheet. Cut 5 slashes in each roll from one long edge to but not through the opposite edge. Spread slashes apart slightly. Cover; let rise in warm place until double (about 45 minutes).

Bake in 350-degree F oven 20 minutes or until golden. Transfer to wire rack. Drizzle with Powdered Sugar Icing. Serve warm or cool. Makes 8 large rolls.

Powdered Sugar Icing: Combine 1 1/4 cups sifted powdered sugar and enough cream or milk (2 or 3 tbsps.) to make drizzling consistency.

Springtime Buffet Blossoms Around Pork 'Scallopine' Dish

By Peggy Katalinich
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

You have seen the ads for the new pork, the lighter pork, the other "white" meat. Pork marsala. Pork in mustard sauce. Pork primavera. I've always liked pork, so they didn't have to sell me on its virtues. But in keeping with the promotion, I'm offering pork "scallopine," pork cutlets pounded thin enough to double for veal, in a sauce of pine nuts and golden raisins, with that classic herb for pork, rosemary.

Because the dish is so easy and can be made in advance, a springtime buffet just started happening — asparagus, of course, in a vinaigrette with a roasted pepper and sun-dried tomato garnish, and ramekins of orzo in a creamy cheese sauce. While the proportions are for eight, they can easily be cut in half for a more intimate dinner. The only possible dessert: perfect strawberries with brown sugar and creme fraiche.

PORK IN RAISIN AND PINE NUT SAUCE

- 3/4 cup golden raisins
- 1 1/2 cups vermouth
- 16 pork cutlets pounded for "scallopine," about 2 1/2 lbs.
- Flour
- Salt and pepper
- Olive oil
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 2 tbsps. fresh rosemary or 2 tpsps. dried
- 3 cups chicken broth
- 3/4 cup pine nuts

Soak raisins in vermouth for 30 minutes. Drain, reserving vermouth and keeping raisins separate.

Pound pork until it is quite thin. Dust very lightly with flour, then season with salt and pepper. Heat enough olive oil to film the bottom of a large saute pan. Quickly cook the pork on both sides, from 2 1/2 to 5 minutes per side, depending on thickness. Remove and set aside. Add garlic and rosemary to the pan and cook briefly, then stir in vermouth and cook over very high heat 1 to 2 minutes. Stir in chicken broth and continue cooking until slightly thickened. Can be prepared in advance up to this point.

Return pork to pan, scatter raisins and pine nuts on top. To serve, reheat gently. Makes 8 servings.

SAVORY ORZO CUSTARDS

- 1 lb. orzo
- 2 cups grated fontina cheese
- 2 cups half-and-half (plus 1/2 cup optional)
- 2 eggs, lightly beaten
- Tabasco
- Salt and pepper

Cook orzo in boiling salted water until tender, but do not overcook. Drain, rinse in cold water and set aside.

Meanwhile, combine 1 cup cheese, half-and-half, eggs, Tabasco to taste, salt and pepper and mix well. Stir in cooled orzo. Divide among 8 greased ramekins. Can be made ahead up to this point.

To serve, sprinkle remaining cheese on top (if the ramekins have stood more than 6 hours and look a little dried out, pour just a little more half-and-half on each, no more than a tablespoon each). Bake in 325-degree oven 20 minutes. Run under broiler briefly to brown tops. Makes 8 servings.

ASPARAGUS VINAIGRETTE

- 2 lbs. asparagus
- 1 roasted pepper, preferably homemade
- 5 sun-dried tomatoes, in olive oil
- 3/4 cup olive oil
- 3 tbsps. red wine vinegar
- 1 tsp. Dijon mustard
- Salt and pepper to taste

Trim asparagus and cook in boiling salted water just to cover (a wide saute pan works well). Do not overcook. Drain thoroughly and run under cold water. Arrange on a serving platter.

Chop pepper and tomatoes. Combine oil, vinegar, mustard, salt and pepper. Add a little of the vinaigrette to the pepper-tomato mix. Arrange attractively over the asparagus. Spoon vinaigrette on top. Makes 8 servings.

Let Berries And Sugar Stand Awhile To Get Full Flavor In This Shortcake

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Isaac Walton summed up the way I feel about strawberries: "Doubtless God could have made a better berry, but doubtless God never did." And doubtless shortcake is my favorite way to serve them. Lemon butter adds a fresh new taste to this spring tradition.

Be sure to let the berries and sugar stand while you mix and bake the biscuits. This allows the berries to juice out and create a thin syrup.

STRAWBERRY LEMON SHORTCAKE

- 3 cups sliced fresh strawberries
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1 cup all-purpose flour
- 1 tbsps. sugar
- 1 1/2 tpsps. baking powder
- 1/4 tsp. salt

- 1/4 cup margarine or butter
- 1 beaten egg yolk
- 1/4 cup milk
- 1 1/2 tpsps. finely shredded lemon peel
- 2 tpsps. margarine or butter, softened
- 1/4 tsp. sugar
- 1 cup whipping cream, well chilled
- 1 tbsps. sugar

Combine strawberries and 1/4 cup sugar; set aside.

In a medium bowl stir together flour, 1 tablespoon sugar, baking powder and salt. Using a pastry blender, cut in 1/4 cup margarine until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Combine egg yolk, milk and 1 teaspoon of the shredded lemon peel; add all at once to flour mixture and stir just until moistened.

On lightly floured surface knead dough gently 12 strokes. Pat dough into a circle. Cut dough into 4 pieces. Roll into balls. On an ungreased baking sheet flatten each until 3/4-inch thick. Bake in 450-degree F oven 8 to 10 minutes or until golden. Remove from baking sheet and cool slightly on wire rack.

Meanwhile, stir together remaining shredded lemon peel, 2 tablespoons softened margarine and 1/4 teaspoon sugar. Split warm biscuits; spread bottom layers with butter mixture. Immediately beat well chilled cream and 1 tablespoon sugar with an electric mixer on low speed until soft peaks form. Fill and top shortcakes with strawberries and whipped cream. Serve immediately. Makes 4 servings.

How To Make The Most Of Trip To The Salad Bar

By Charlyne Varkonyi
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Oh, you, the virtuous one. Your friends order the unhealthy trinity of hamburgers, french fries and a soda or the roast beef and mashed potatoes blue-plate special. But you parade up to the salad bar, the lunchtime mecca for dieters and the health conscious. If only they were as careful about what they put into their bodies as you are.

The next time you, the smug one, start piling all those salad bar goodies on your plate, stop and count the damage. The innocent-looking salad bar can be a mine field of nutritional booby traps. Chances are good that you are eating as much fat and sodium as your friends.

"A lot of people think salads are diet food regardless of the type of toppings they pile on. So many of the selections are so loaded in fat, calories and salt that you may not be eating healthy at all," says Caroline M. Buchanan, a registered dietitian and spokeswoman for the Maryland Dietetic Association.

She pointed to a study conducted for the Nutrition Research Program at Mississippi State University to support her theory.

Students who selected the "make your own salad" option from the school cafeteria came out with the same amount of fat and calories as those who selected their food from the hot entree line where options included fried fish, french fries, spaghetti with meat sauce and rice with gravy.

900 calories, ranging from 480 to 1,250 calories.

Whether they selected food from the salad bar or the hot meal line, the students averaged 42 percent of their calories from fat. That is the equivalent of nine teaspoons of butter or oil, according to Ms. Buchanan. And it is significantly more than the goal of 30 percent of calories from fat suggested by the American Heart Association, the American Cancer Society and the American Dietetic Association to prevent obesity, heart disease and cancer.

So where is all this fat hiding? It is not in the "good fresh guys" of the salad bar — ranging from alfalfa sprouts to water chestnuts. They have zero fat and minimal calories. But, after you load up on the healthy stuff, it is the toppings that do the damage.

"By far the worst offender when it comes to fat and calories is the salad dressing," Ms. Buchanan says. "If you use one ladle (4 tablespoons) of regular salad dressing that's about 300 calories. Often people use two or three ladles and bring the fat and calories sky high."

The tally for three ladles of Russian dressing: 912 calories, 94 grams of fat and 1,596 milligrams of sodium. Limit yourself to one ladle of a low-calorie Italian dressing and the score sheet is significantly lower: 63 calories, 6 grams of fat and 472 milligrams of sodium.

"The one thing to remember about salad dressing is that most are really high in sodium," she says. "Even the diet dressings are 450 to 900 milligrams of sodium per ladle. You are getting an awful lot of salt that way."

If people are healthy and don't have high blood pressure, a ladle full of dressing is no problem, she says.

But for those who need to watch their sodium intake, a healthier option is to use vinegar with a splash of oil. Another popular alternative is flavoring lemon juice, wine or rice vinegar with fresh herbs and a splash of low-sodium soy sauce.

Sometimes it is not the food, it is how it is prepared or the variety you use that causes the problem. For example:

If you really want to use cheese as a topping, select the lower fat option. One tablespoon of the more intensely flavored Parmesan cheese has 1.9 grams of fat compared with 4.7 grams of fat in 2 tablespoons of the milder Cheddar cheese.

If there is a choice between types of olives and you are watching your sodium, select four black olives with 77 milligrams of sodium instead of four green with 324 milligrams. But don't be misled into thinking olives are low-calorie. They contain between 16 to 20 calories for four.

Select fresh fruit rather than fruit in syrup or high-calorie fruit in a prepared salad. Once a healthy salad is swimming in high-calorie dressing, the benefits of the fresh fruit or vegetables are negated. A 1/4 cup serving of Waldorf salad has 147 calories and 13 grams of fat. Pile on watermelon and cantaloupe instead with 13 to 14 calories for the same serving size and 0.1 to 0.2 grams of fat.

Another booby trap is the prepared salads section. Remember that potato, macaroni and cooked vegetable salads may contain high fat dressings made from mayonnaise or other creamy bases. Two ounces of macaroni salad total 101 calories; 6 grams of fat and 295 milligrams of sodium.

Just How Popular Is The Salad Bar?

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Something besides fear of midafternoon munchies may be keeping other potential diners away from the salad bar.

The April and May issues of the Shopper Report, a marketing newsletter published by a Philadelphia consulting company reported that consumers are becoming disillusioned with salad bars in restaurants and supermarkets.

The survey, published by Consumer Network, said that shoppers are worried about viral and bacterial contamination of the food by store employees and shoppers. Lesser concerns included taste and price. Supermarket salad bars rated 4.5 out of a possible 10 points, right above the lowest rating for supermarket pizzas. Restaurant salad bars rated 5.7.

"As a general fear it is completely unfounded," says Philip A. Berman, director of the Bureau of Community Hygiene in the Baltimore Health Department. "It's like saying I don't want to drink tap water because it might be dirty," he says. "Sure, there can be individual places that are bad and, if they are bad, we have to get the specifics so that we can do something about it."

Consumers should call any of the following problems to the attention of the restaurant or supermarket management: patrons sneezing and then touching the food, food kept out in the open and not protected by sneeze guards, short handles on ladles and spoons that fall into the food and employees with cuts or open sores handling the food.

If the management is not responsive and does not correct the problem, call your local health department immediately and ask for the restaurant inspector's office.

Take Advantage Of Spring Vegetables Making Their Appearance In Stores Now

BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS

Early-bird vegetables are ready for you to enjoy. Packed with vitamins, they cook quickly because they're fresh and tender.

ASPARAGUS

— Choose firm, straight stalks with closed tips. Fatter spears are likely to be more tender than thinner ones.

— Wrap stem ends in moist paper towels, then refrigerate in a plastic bag. Use within a day or two.

— Wash stalks well; scrape off scales if you wish. Break off woody bases at point where the spears snap easily.

— Herbed Asparagus: In a screw-top jar combine 3 tablespoons olive or salad oil; 2 tablespoons wine vinegar; 2 teaspoons snipped chives; 1 teaspoon dried oregano, crushed; 1/8 teaspoon salt; and 1/8 teaspoon pepper. Cover and shake well. Arrange 1 pound fresh asparagus, cleaned, cooked and chilled, on a serving platter. Top with dressing. Makes 4 servings.

ARTICHOKES

— Look for compact, bright green globes with tightly closed green leaves.

— To store, sprinkle unwashed artichokes lightly with water and seal in airtight plastic bags. Refrigerate for several days.

— Before cooking, wash, trim stems and remove loose outer leaves. Cut off 1 inch of tops; snip off sharp leaf tips, if desired. Brush cut edges with lemon juice.

— The slickest way to cook artichokes is in the microwave: Place two 10-ounce artichokes with 2 tablespoons water in a 2-quart microwave-safe casserole. Cook, covered, on 100 percent power 7 to 10 minutes or until a leaf pulls out easily, rearranging once. Remove from casserole and turn upside to drain.

— Tips for eating: Pull off a leaf and dunk it into melted butter, mayonnaise, or a tangy sauce. Pull the leaf through your teeth, eating only the tender flesh. Discard the remainder. Also discard the purplish, prickly leaves in the middle. Use a spoon to scoop out the fuzzy looking choke. Cut the heart beneath the choke into bite-size pieces and dip into butter or sauce.

SNAP PEAS AND PEA PODS

— Look for small, bright green, glossy pods and fresh stems. Avoid dull, faded, yellowish, or limp pods.

— Store unwashed in plastic bags in the refrigerator up to 2 or 3 days.

— Use in stir-frys, in salads, or as appetizer dippers.

— To freeze, blanch in boiling water for 2 minutes; chill in ice water for 5 minutes. Lay peas on shallow baking pans and freeze. After freezing, place in moisture- and vaporproof bags. Seal, label and freeze.

— Pea Pods and Summer Squash: Wash and stem 2 cups fresh pea pods. Bias-slice in half crosswise. Place pea pods, 1 1/2 cups sliced yellow crookneck squash, 2 tablespoons chopped sweet red pepper and 2 tablespoons water in a 1-quart microwave-safe casserole. Cook, covered, on 100 percent power (high) 3 to 5 minutes or until crisp-tender, stirring twice. Drain well. Stir in 3 tablespoons clear Italian salad dressing. Cook, uncovered, on high about 1 minute more or until heated through. Makes 4 servings.

Products Vie For Slots On Supermarket Shelves

By Caroline E. Mayer
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Despite the spiraling real-estate prices in many areas, the most expensive piece of property may not be the empty lot down the street, but the shelves of your neighborhood grocery store.

With more than 10,000 new food products introduced annually, the battle for supermarket space has gotten so fierce that many retailers are demanding special fees just to accept new products in their warehouses. And many manufacturers, eager to get their products into the store, are willing to pay big bucks.

These admission fees — which in some areas of the country can run $30,000 or more for each flavor of a new product just to get into a supermarket chain — have stirred up a growing controversy within the food industry, with manufacturers and retailers accusing one another of unreasonable and inequitable treatment.

The fees "may be the ruination of the grocery business," charged one salesman at a major food-manufacturing company. Like most other food-company officials, he declined to be named, fearful he would antagonize the grocery stores, his chief customers, in discussing slotting allowances, as they are called in the industry.

"As manufacturers acquiesce to the slotting allowances, they are taking the eye off the consumer," the salesman said. "They are giving too much money to the retail stores, who in turn are putting it in their pocket. Meanwhile, the manufacturers are spending less money on advertising and couponing, which is necessary to get the customers into the store in the first place."

Beyond that, food-industry officials complain that slotting allowances hurt consumers by keeping many new products off the shelves, particularly those made by smaller companies that cannot afford the steep entry costs.

That is particularly the case in New York, where slotting fees are said to be the highest in the country, from $15,000 to $30,000 or more per item. In the Washington area, the fees run about $5,000 to $10,000 an item, food industry officials say. (Precise numbers are hard to come by, with few people willing to talk publicly about the controversy.)

"We have given up trying to sell our product in the greater New York area, because we can't afford what's being asked," said Phil Parsons, president of Perfect Pinch Inc., a small Chicago condiment company that sells packages of blended Cajun and Caribbean spice mixes.

According to Parsons, when his company tried to sell to New York supermarkets two years ago, it was asked to pay $3,000 an item. With 10 different blends, that amounted to $30,000. "And then there was no guarantee that the product would remain in the store past six weeks," Parsons said.

Making matters worse, he added, if the product was pulled off the shelves, supermarkets would try to get Perfect Pinch to buy it back at the retail, not the wholesale, cost, arguing that sum was the amount of money they lost by not selling Perfect Pinch or another product that would have been in its place.

It's hard to say how much slotting fees have added to food costs; many industry officials say that when one considers the overall costs involved in getting a new product to consumers — from creation to production to distribution to advertising — the fees are minimal.

What's more, they add, by bringing added revenue to the stores, the fees help a store's balance sheet, which in turn keeps the chain from raising prices.

Yet, slotting fees have risen dramatically in the last couple of years and "have definitely had a chilling effect" on the introduction of new products, according to Martin Friedman, editor of Gorman's New Product News.

In 1988, 10,558 new products were introduced for supermarket sale. While that was a record number, it represented only a 4 percent increase over 1987, compared to a 26 percent jump the previous year.

"There is no way you can show precisely that the reduction was due to slotting allowances, but it certainly was a factor," Friedman said. "It is hard to think of anything else that was a contributing factor."

But given the high number of new products introduced yearly, supermarket officials contend that the slotting fees are a necessary fact of life in the increasingly complicated supply-and-demand juggling act for space.

What's more, they argue, unique products that are clear winners can get on the shelves easily, even without slotting allowances. That was the case with squeezable jelly bottles and the juice-in-the-box packages when both were first introduced.

The main problem, supermarket officials add, is that rival manufacturers rush to introduce copycat products. Few of these have been test-marketed and many — if past statistics are a guide — are bound to fail.

"It's a situation manufacturers have created," said Tim Hammond, senior vice president of the Food Marketing Institute, an association of 1,600 food retailers and wholesalers.

"There has been an absolute explosion of new products, and four out of five will fail. To put a new product in, you have to drop something. You are trading the uncertainty of whether a product will make it with the certainty of lost sales of the product you are pulling off the shelves."

Retailers expect some compensation for the cost of entering the product into the computer system, the warehouse and store, monitoring how well the product does, dropping it if it fails and dropping an existing product to make space."

Industry officials also say that it often is the manufacturer, not the retailer, who first brings up the issue of slotting fees, hoping the money will entice a store to carry a product.

"The big companies use slotting fees to keep out the little guys," complained Allan Kaufman, executive director of sales and marketing of Ben & Jerry's Homemade Ice Cream Co. "They make offers of such high numbers that others can't match them. It's a way to control the shelves and force the small firms out of the market," Kaufman said.

"What retailer in the world would turn down found money?" asked Robert Wunderle, public-affairs vice president of the New Jersey Supermarkets General Corp. "Yes, we ask everybody if slotting allowances are available. If so, we definitely want it." But he adds, a slotting allowance "is never a condition for bringing a product in."

In many ways, slotting fees are an extension of introductory promotions long offered by manufacturers to grocery stores. To get stores to accept new products, manufacturers usually offer special discounts; additional price incentives are given if the stores give the new items exceptionally good display. In this day and age — when two-thirds of all supermarket purchasing decisions are made in the store — display is critical.

But what has gotten the manufacturers so upset is the high price tag of slotting fees. "The dollars being asked are far in excess of direct cost," said Frank Dell, vice president of Cresap, which as a division of the management-consulting firm Tower Perrin advises manufacturers, retailers and wholesalers.

Put another way, consider that the average supermarket's profit is a penny on every dollar of groceries sold. "That means that a $40,000 slotting fee is equal to the profit of $4 million of sales," noted Ryan Mathews, senior editor of Grocery Marketing magazine.

Not all stores charge such high fees, and that is part of the problem, Mathews noted. "It either costs $1,000 or $25,000 to empty an existing slot and refill it, but not both," he said. An attempt to determine the real cost is now under way in a joint study being conducted by FMI and the Grocery Manufacturers of America.

Quick Pasta Sauces Easy To Make From Scratch

By Caroline E. Mayer
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Opening a bottle of spaghetti sauce is certainly one of the easier ways to prepare dinner.

Yet there are a host of other pasta sauces that are almost as quick and easy to make from scratch, requiring about the same amount of time it takes the spaghetti to cook.

What's more, these homemade blends can provide a whole new perspective on pasta, as they offer more than the traditional marinara sauce, making spaghetti one of the most versatile of foods.

In fact, many Italians say the only way to eat spaghetti is not with tomato sauce, but rather with olive oil, lots of garlic and fresh basil.

To prepare spaghetti this way, put about one cup of olive oil in a pan, add lots of minced garlic (the more the better) and brown the garlic until golden. Meanwhile, cook one pound of pasta and drain. Mince fresh basil and sprinkle liberally on top of the pasta, along with fresh pepper. Add the olive oil, toss and serve. With salad and bread, "that's the quintessential Italian meal," one enthusiastic Italian chef comments.

MARINARA SAUCE

- 1/4 cup olive oil
- 3 cloves garlic, minced
- 1/2 medium onion, minced
- 2 28-oz. cans tomatoes
- 1 1/2 to 2 tbsps. rosemary
- 1 large bay leaf
- 6 fresh basil leaves, minced or 4 tablespoons dried basil
- 3 tbsps. oregano
- 1 tsp. coarsely ground black pepper
- 1 cup dry red wine

Heat oil, add garlic and onions and saute until tender.

Crush tomatoes and liquid in blender or food processor for a few seconds until the tomatoes are in small chunks. Add to the garlic and onions. Add the rosemary, rubbing it first in the palm of your hands to crumble. Add remaining ingredients and simmer on low heat for one hour, stirring frequently. 4 to 6 servings

- 1 bunch fresh broccoli (about 1 1/2 lbs.)
- 1/2 cup olive oil
- 1 tsp. fresh garlic, minced
- 1/4 cup sun-dried tomatoes, julienned
- 2 tbsps. lemon juice
- 1 tsp. minced fresh oregano or parsley, or 1 tsp. minced fresh rosemary (optional)
- 1 lb. pasta, cooked
- Freshly grated Parmesan to taste

Remove bite-sized florets from the broccoli. (Save the rest for soup if you wish.) Blanch florets in a large quantity of boiling, salted water for about 3 minutes or until barely tender. Drain and rinse in cold water to stop cooking.

Heat olive oil in a large skillet or saucepan. Add the garlic and stir for a minute or two over heat. Add broccoli florets, sun-dried tomatoes, lemon juice and optional fresh herbs and toss in oil. Add cooked pasta and toss.

Serve immediately with Parmesan passed separately. 4 to 6 servings

CLAM SAUCE FOR PASTA

- 1/4 cup olive oil
- 1/4 cup minced onion
- 1 red bell pepper, sliced into thin matchsticks
- 1 tsp. minced fresh garlic
- 1 10 1/2 oz. can whole clams 1/4 cup fresh minced parsley
- 1/2 lb. cooked pasta

Heat olive oil in a large pan. Add onion and pepper and let cook for about five minutes or until softened. Stir in garlic and juice from clams. Raise heat and boil rapidly for about a minute.

Add clams and parsley and toss over heat just until hot. Add pasta and toss again. Serve immediately. (2 to 3 servings)

PASTA WITH TOMATOES AND BALSAMIC VINEGAR

- 1/2 cup extra virgin olive oil
- 3 or 4 garlic cloves, sliced very thin
- 2 sprigs fresh rosemary, about 4 to 6 inches long, or 2 1/2 tbsps. dried leaves, chopped
- 2 cups canned Italian peeled plum tomatoes, drained of their juice
- Salt and black pepper
- 1 lb. penne or other short, tubular pasta
- 2 tbsps. balsamic vinegar

Put the olive oil and garlic into a saute pan or skillet with, if it is fresh, the rosemary. Turn on the heat to medium.

As soon as the garlic begins to sizzle, add the tomatoes, salt and a liberal grinding of pepper; if you are using chopped, dried rosemary, put it in now. Cook for about 10 to 12 minutes, then turn off the heat.

Cook the pasta al dente, then toss it with the sauce for about 1 minute. Turn off the heat and make a well in the middle of the pasta. Pour the vinegar into the well, draw the pasta over it, toss thoroughly for a few seconds, and serve at once. 4 to 6 servings

PASTA AL BURRO

- 2 oz. spaghetti
- 1 tbsps. unsalted butter
- 2 tbsps. Parmesan cheese
- Salt and pepper, to taste
- Place pasta in boiling water and cook until al dente.

Melt the butter in a medium skillet

over medium heat. Remove from heat until needed.

Just before draining the pasta, spoon 2 tbsps. of the cooking water into the skillet with the butter. Return the skillet to medium heat.

Drain pasta, shaking well to remove excess liquid. When the butter mixture is simmering, turn the pasta into the skillet. Sprinkle the cheese over the pasta, season to taste and seve immediately, with additional grated cheese if desired. 1 serving

MAMA D'S SPAGHETTI WITH RICOTTA

- 1 lb. spaghetti
- 1 cup ricotta cheese
- 1/4 cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese
- 1 egg, beaten
- 1/2 tsp. salt

- 1/4 tsp. freshly ground black pepper
- 1/8 tsp. dried oregano
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 4 tbsps. butter
- 1/4 cup freshly shredded mozzarella cheese

Cook the pasta according to directions on the package until al dente.

While the pasta is cooking, combine the ricotta cheese with the Parmesan, egg, salt, pepper, oregano and garlic.

When the pasta is done, drain, leaving a little water in the pot. Add the butter to the pot and return the pasta to it, tossing well. Stir in the ricotta cheese mixture and transfer all to a baking dish.

Top with shredded mozzarella and put under the broiler until the mozzarella is melted, but not browned. 4 to 6 servings
