Chinese Military Backs Students

Public Showing More Support For Pro-Democracy Movement

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — In a stinging blow to Premier Li Peng, more than 100 top military officers signed a letter today opposing his declaration of martial law in Beijing, saying the army "will never shoot the people," sources said.

State-run television also quoted an officer as saying he had been told to withdraw his troops because of widespread popular resistance.

In central Tiananmen Square, the roughly 45,000 student protesters the troops had been ordered to disperse savored their latest victory after hundreds of thousands of people again mired troop convoys with roadblocks.

For a second night, masses of city residents had stymied the army, jamming major roads with public buses, trucks and garbage cans.

Students and citizens defiantly vowed to continue their struggle until Li and senior leader Deng Xiaoping resign. Many people believe Li acted on Deng's orders.

The people's mobilization was a severe blow to Li, whose declaration of martial law in the capital on Saturday has apparently backfired and strengthened popular support for a 10-day pro-democracy protest in the square.

The letter, sent to the People's Daily newspaper, mouthpiece of the ruling Communist Party, was a further blow.

Seven well-known military figures, including former Defense Minister Zhang Aiping and former People's Liberation Army Chief of Staff Yang Dezhi, wrote the letter, a source at the People's Daily said.

"As old soldiers we have the following demands," the letter said. "The People's Liberation Army belongs to the people. It cannot confront the people, even more so it cannot suppress the people and it will never shoot the people."

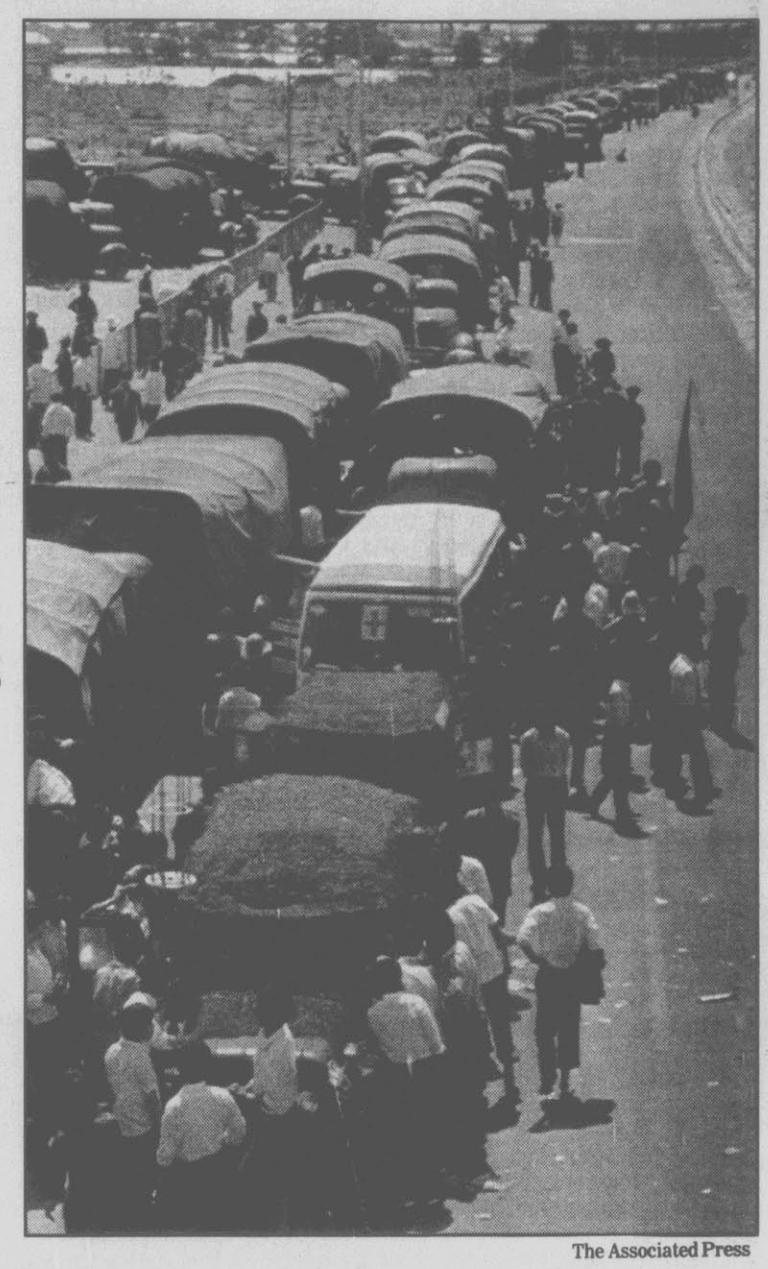

"To keep the situation from worsening, the army cannot enter the city," it said. The letter was signed by 100 other officers, said another source.

The letter and the inability to remove the students from the square called into question Li's hold on power and ability to control the army, which has yet to move against the protesters.

Liu Binyan, a well-known Chinese reporter, claimed several Chinese provinces and eight government ministries, including the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, are refusing to support Li's government. Liu made his remarks in Missoula, Mont., to a group of Chinese students. His claims could not be independently confirmed.

The Communist government has not announced any resignations as a result of the crisis, although sources have reported that party head Zhao

Stern Says Terrorist Is German Spy

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HAMBURG, West Germany — A magazine said today that a bomb maker for a radical Palestinian group suspected in the bombing of Pan Am Flight 103 was arrested in October but released because he works for West German intelligence.

The Hamburg-based Stern magazine said the man was arrested during police raids on terrorist hideouts in West Germany.

The man, identified by Stern as Jordanian-born Marwan Khreesat, is believed to be a bomb maker for the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command, Stern said.

Khreesat, 44, was released 15 days after his arrest because he is an agent for the West German intelligence service, Stern said. The magazine said its report was based on information provided by two high-ranking security officials, whom it did not identify.

A spokesman for the intelligence agency, BND, denied the Stern report. "He has never been an agent for BND and he is not one now," said the spokesman, who requested anonymity. He declined to discuss other aspects of the report.

Stern said Khreesat was responsible for making "radio bombs for attacks on planes" for the terrorist group.

The Syrian-based group has been mentioned in British, U.S., and West German news reports as a prime suspect in the bombing of Flight 103 over Scotland on Dec. 21. The New York-bound plane exploded over Lockerbie, killing all 259 people on board and 11 people on the ground.

Stern said Khreesat was among 16 suspected Palestinian terrorists arrested in West Germany in October. Police seized large quantities of weapons and explosives in the raids, including a bomb-rigged radio-cassette recorder.

Bush Urges Chinese To Stand Up But To Act With Restraint

By Terence Hunt
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush is encouraging demonstrators in China to "stand up for what you believe" and urging the Communist authorities to exercise restraint, saying he hopes pro-democracy protests do not result in bloodshed.

"I would urge the government to be as forthcoming as possible in order to see more democratization and to see a peaceful resolution of this matter," Bush said Sunday.

"We do support freedom of speech, freedom of assembly, freedom of the press and clearly we support democracy," the president said at a news conference in Boston with French President Francois Mitterrand.

The two leaders received honorary degrees and delivered commencement remarks at Boston University. Afterward, Bush returned to the White House and Mitterrand flew to Paris.

Bush's comments came as pro-democracy students occupied Tiananmen Square in Beijing in violation of martial law for a third day. Despite repeated rumors of an imminent military crackdown, the Chinese army had not moved to evict the protesters.

Bush, who served as U.S. envoy to China in 1974-1975, said, "I think this perhaps is a time for caution because we aspire to see the Chinese people have democracy."

He said he did not want to "exhort in a way that is going to stir up a military confrontation." Bush said it would not be appropriate for the leader of the United States to tell the demonstrators "exactly what their course of action should be."

However, he said he hoped the students would follow a peaceful course and "continue to fight for what you believe in, stand up for what you believe in — but beyond that I cannot go."

Former Secretary of State Heny A. Kissinger and other U.S. experts on Sunday endorsed the moderate course pursued by the Bush administration.

Emphasizing hopes for avoiding bloodshed, Bush said, "We revere the model of Martin Luther King in this country for his peaceful protest and so I might suggest a familiarization with that for the people in China."

King, an apostle of nonviolence, led the civil rights movement in the United States in the 1950s and 1960s. He was assassinated in 1968 in Memphis where he was lending support to a garbage workers' strike.

"I don't want to be gratuitous in giving advice," Bush said, "but I would encourage restraint. I do not want to see bloodshed."

He said it would be "sound advice" for students and workers to adopt "peaceful means of effecting change."

"I think that the president is saying just about all that can be said," Kissinger said on the ABC-TV program "This Week with David Brinkley."

"We do not want to incite to riot, partly because the consequences are unforeseeable in human terms, but also partly in terms of hardheaded American foreign interest," said

Clearing Weather Gives Some Relief To Area Farmers

By Stuart Savage
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

In spite of unusually heavy rains earlier in the planting season, recent fair weather has allowed most farmers to get into their fields and get a major part of their crops into the ground.

According to Sam Uzell, an agent with the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service, "I would say we're approaching the last 25 to 30 percent of the tobacco planting season and I would imagine tobacco would be out by the end of this week.

"I think that in most cases," Uzell said this morning, "the land is in good workable shape now for the most part. There are some difficult-to-work spots and I think the supply of plants for transplanting is still on the short side. But I would anticipate most of the tobacco will be in the ground by the end of the week."

Uzell said "soybean planting has not begun yet to any appreciable extent," and suggested "peanut planting has largely gotten under way by those people who have been able to get through or near completion with tobacco. I anticipate farmers planting peanuts this week and next week as well."

While saying, "I don't think anybody is going to plant corn any longer," Uzell suggested that, "in the case of wheat and other small grains, I think we've seen a very diseased crop year because of all the abundant rain and humidity." But, he said, "Yields of wheat are good to fair (although) slightly lower this year as compared to last year."

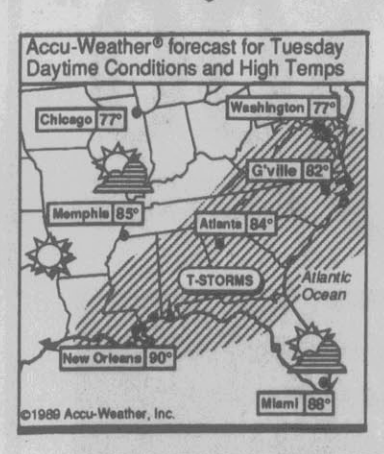

Uzell had "one precaution I would like to extend. Because of the amount of leeching rains and the amount of packing-type rains, it's difficult to judge and gauge the amount of soil fertility.

"I would very much encourage farmers to use the analysis capability of the NCDA (N.C. Department of Agriculture) labs in Raleigh. You want to know as soon as possible if there are nutrient deficiencies and identify those as quickly as possible," Uzell said.

The agricultural agent, touching on another subject, said, "We still have an abundance of good flavored strawberries throughout the county."

The drying off has "allowed the berries to develop an excellent taste," Uzell said, and "people who have not done so should pick strawberries this week."

Trevathan, Knights Of Columbus Win Awards

By Carol Tyer
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

State legislators spoke and awards were given this morning during the annual report breakfast of the Pitt County Interagency Child Service Team which serves as advocates for children with special needs medically, educationally and socially.

Dr. Earl Trevathan, longtime pediatrician both in private practice and with the East Carolina University School of Medicine, was honored as the person deemed this year to be the individual who has contributed most to the well-being of children with special needs.

The Knights of Columbus, a Roman Catholic men's organization, was honored as the civic group that has contributed most to these children. It was noted that this organization raised some $15,000 with its Tootsie Roll campaign and that $11,000 of this stayed in Pitt County in such programs as the United Cerebral Palsy Center and the Farmville Child Development Center. Raymond Reddrick accepted the award on behalf of the Knights of Columbus.

Two businesses — the Manpower temporary services agency and Procter and Gamble — were honored jointly for their contribution to the community through support of an employment program for the mentally handicapped at P&G. This program gives closely supervised, paid work experience to handicapped people. Frankie Beeker accepted the award on behalf of Manpower; Gene Parker on behalf of P&G.

Brief talks were given by each of the four legislators present — state Sens. Bob Martin and Tom Taft and Reps. Walter Jones Jr. and Ed Warren. Jones addressed day care, Martin transportation, Taft a program for children neurologically impaired from birth, and Warren education of children with special needs.

Martin, addressing a question from Dr. William Martin, president of the Pitt County Mental Health Association, said the local legislative delegation is acutely aware of inequities that exist between funding of everything from centers for the mentally retarded to local detox programs between the eastern part of the state and western North Carolina. He said it's going to take "hardball politics" like, "I won't vote for any more monkeys at the state Zoo if you don't let me have some money for eastern detox centers," to make statewide funding more equitable. He encouraged those present to keep on speaking out against such inequities.

Taft, addressing a question about whether there could be funding for children with special needs to have state assistance with tuition and expenses for community college education beyond high school, said this was a need of which he was not previously aware. He asked that Ann Warner, who raised the question, get together with Dr. Charlie Russell, president of Pitt Community College, and others and have the matter prominently put before the Legislature during its next session.

Taft also said he believes programs for 3- and 4-year-olds in the public schools with an eye toward alleviating later learning and adjustment disabilities will be important in the next session. He encouraged the group to work toward making this a priority concern.

Sunday Thefts

Investigators said seven thefts, including a lawnmower from Home Builders Supply Co. on Dickinson Avenue, were reported to Greenville police on Sunday.

Officer L.E. White said the lawnmower was taken from the building supply firm in a break-in reported at 2:14 a.m., while Officer L.T. Gray said a radar detector was taken from a car parked at 121A Victoria Court in an incident reported at 6:40 a.m.

Officer K.M. Smeltzer said two potted plants were taken from 413 Ford St. in an incident reported at 7:36 a.m., while Officer M.J. Nobles said two cement flower pots were taken from 1207 Battle St. in an incident reported at 8:17 a.m.

Officer A.T. Parrish said the centerpiece from a wheel was taken from a car parked at Home Federal Savings & Loan on Evans Street in an incident reported at 3:06 p.m., while Officer R.S. Sawyer said a suitcase was taken from a vehicle parked at The Plaza in an incident reported at 4:37 p.m. and a bicycle was taken from 200 E. Ninth St. in an incident reported at 6:43 p.m.

Assault Charge

Gregory Thomas, 22, of 110 Fairwood Lane was arrested Sunday night by Greenville police on charges of assault with a deadly weapon.

Officer R.S. Sawyer said Thomas was arrested after a man was cut on the left chest with a knife about 11:06 p.m. at the intersection of 14th Street and Douglas Avenue.

Chamber Reaccredited

The Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce has been reaccredited by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, according to an announcement by John L. Clendenin, chairman of the board of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Clendenin is chairman, Bellsouth Corp. in Atlanta. The chamber was first accredited in 1978. There have been three applications with all three of them accredited. The chamber is one of 547 chambers to be accredited out of over 5,000 local chambers throughout the United States.

The committee in charge of the evaluation report for reaccreditation for the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce was: Chris McCoy, chairman, Olin Davis, John Miller, Janice Faulkner and Jack Steelman.

This committee, the board of directors, and others met with Scott Christopher from the U.S. Chamber on March 20, 1989, when the reaccreditation overview was made.

The local chamber was cited as an organization meeting standards of performance in planning and programming and conducting a well-balanced and productive program of work.

The primary goal of the accreditation program is to provide a management tool whereby chambers of commerce can improve their effectiveness. As chambers achieve accreditation and maintain it through reaccreditation, the industry is better and stronger as a result.

Students Awarded

Two Martin County high school seniors were awarded the Eagle Snacks Inc. annual scholarships to East Carolina University.

Receiving scholarships are Michael E. James, a senior at Roanoke High School, and Christie L. Peele, a senior at Bear Grass High School.

James is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Irvin E. James of Robersonville and Miss Peele is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Johnny W. Peele of Williamston.

Theft Charges

Greenville police arrested two people on theft charges over the weekend.

Officer P.K. Burrows said Ronda Laforrest Johnson, 24, of Tarboro was charged with larceny in connection with the theft of several items from JC Penney at The Plaza about 8:09 p.m. Saturday.

Officer R.E. Jones said Mitchell Demetrius Nelson, 17, of 106 Greenfield Blvd. was charged with larceny in connection with the theft of cigarettes from the Fast Fare store on Evans Street about 10:36 p.m. Sunday.

Meeting Set

The Greenville Historic Preservation Commission will meet Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the third floor conference room of the Municipal Building, located on the corner of Fifth and Washington streets.

Reception Planned

The Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, East Carolina University, ECU School of Medicine, Pitt Community College and citizens of Pitt County will honor North Carolina legislators at an appreciation reception May 31 at the Raleigh Marriott in Raleigh from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Invited to the event are the governor, the lieutenant governor, the leadership of various state governmental agencies, state senators and state representatives.

Bus transportation will be provided, with the group leaving from the parking lot of the Carolina East Mall at 4:30 p.m. May 31. Registration is required and must be made by Wednesday.

To make a reservation or for further information, call the chamber at 752-4101.

Indecent Exposure

Greenville police said indecent exposure charges were brought against David Allen Nicholson, 37, of Route 2, Greenville, Saturday afternoon.

Officer A.T. Parrish said Nicholson was arrested in connection with a 2:38 p.m. incident at the Town Common.

Music Program

The Wahl-Coates Sixth Year String Ensemble, under the direction of JoAnn Moore, recently presented a program of music at the Greenville Kiwanis Club's luncheon meeting.

The Wahl-Coates Beginning Orchestra performed, wearing new T-shirts supplied by the Greenville Orchestra Boosters, at a recent PTA meeting.

2007 Meeting

Participants of the 2007 Strategic Planning Committee will meet at the Greenville Utilities Commission board room Tuesday at 6 p.m.

Committee Chairman Jerry Powell said members of the various strategy teams, which have been meeting independently since April, are scheduled to present completed recommendations to the entire 2007 Committee coalition.

Degree Received

Francis Rudolph Wondolowski of Greenville received a doctorate in business from the University of Kansas on May 21.

He was among 1,550 who graduated in the university's 117th commencement.

Pageant Held

The Southside Senior Citizens Club recently presented its sixth Senior Citizens Pageant.

The theme for the program was "Growing in Grace, Not in Age." Contestants were Katie Edge, Lillian Elks, Mary Ray, Christine Lewis, Coy Farmer, Alice Streeter, Elma Wooten and Martha Spence. The Senior Citizens Choir, with Johnnie Wooten as pianist, furnished music. Winners were Lillian Elks, Mary Ray and Alice Streeter. Coy Farmer received an honorable mention.

Alice Streeter, 1988 winner, performed the coronation which was followed by a grand march. Alice Moore is adviser to the group.

Mrs. Elks will compete in a regional contest in Roanoke Rapids.

Jones Wants Study Of UNC Budgeting

By Stuart Savage
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Rep. Walter Jones Jr. of Farmville has introduced a bill in the General Assembly calling for a study of the University of North Carolina system's capital budget process.

Jones said the bill "addresses increasing concern about apparent inequity and unequal access to funding for member schools," by creating a study commission to review the current capital budget process for the university system.

Under the bill, according to Jones, "the commission would be asked to determine which factors the Board of Governors takes into consideration when formulating its recommendations on priorities for capital improvements," and would also "determine whether the present authority of the Board of Governors is exercised properly."

Jones said the bill also calls for the study commission to review systemwide long-range capital needs and the impact of these needs on the preparation of capital budget requests and such other needs as the commission deems pertinent.

The bill also charges the study group to determine whether the administration of a particular campus limits the amount which that campus may request for capital improvements.

"The budget process has had the cumulative effect of creating great disparity in funding for capital improvements on the separate campuses," Jones said. "For instance, East Carolina University, with the third largest student body, has the smallest amount of library space per student and ranks next to the bottom (15th out of the 16 UNC-member schools) in funding allocations per student.

"This is extremely important to the whole system," Jones suggested, "not just to ECU."

As proposed, the study commission would include five members from the Senate, five members from the House, four members appointed by the governor and, as an ex officio member, the chairman of the Board of Governors.

The commission would submit a final report, with recommendations, to the General Assembly at the beginning of the 1990 short session.

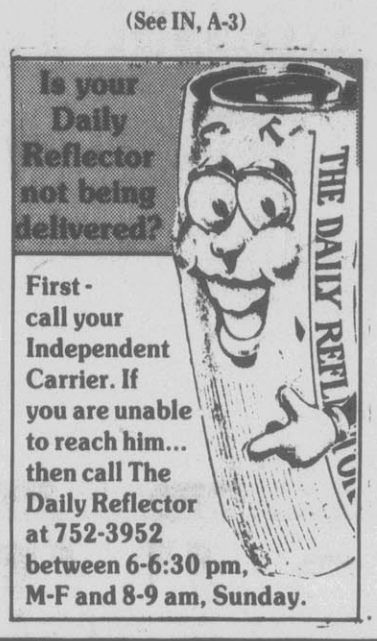

Obedience Classes

The Greenville Department of Parks and Recreation and All-Breed K-9 Specialists will hold dog obedience classes beginning May 29 at 7 p.m. The classes will meet for 10 weeks from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. on Mondays at the Teen Center on 14th Street.

Meanwhile, Pitt County schools and All-Breed K-9 Specialists will sponsor a dog obedience class for children ages 8 to 18 beginning June 14 and meeting for 10 weeks from 9 a.m. to 10 a.m. at Wintergreen Elementary School.

Farm Scene

PITT EXTENSION DIRECTOR

The excessive rainfall of May has created major problems for farmers in terms of tobacco and corn planting. Among the many problems associated with this situation is the inability of growers to apply herbicides to corn acreage previously planted. In order to ensure profitable yields, herbicidal treatments must be applied to decrease weed pressure in corn. At this time of the season, options related to over-the-top applications must be considered.

There are several herbicides which are labeled for over-the-top applications of corn less than five inches tall. These materials are applied as broadcast sprays and are listed as follows: AAtrex-tank mix, and Bicep. All of the labels of these products contain similar information, "apply before grass and broadleaf weeds pass the two-leaf stage and before corn exceeds five inches in height. Application to weeds larger that the two-leaf stage will generally result in unsatisfactory control. Occasional leaf burn will result, but this should not affect later growth or yield. Do not apply post emergence in fluid fertilizer or severe crop injury will occur."

Another possibility is a tank mix of Tandem plus atrazine plus crop oil concentrate. This should be applied when grass weeds are in the one- to three-leaf stage. A second post-emergence treatment of atrazine plus crop oil concentrate five days to 10 days after the initial treatment is suggested for improved full panicum control.

Two other products, Bladex and Extrazine can also be applied post-emergence to field corn up to the four-leaf stage and weeds less than 1.5 inches. Labels should be checked carefully for directions n use of surfactants or crop oil concentrate with these products.

Generally, control from an early post-emergence application. Injury may be greater under cool and wet weather or other stress conditions.

Dosimetry Graduate

The East Carolina University School of Medicine has graduated its fifth student from its three-year-old medical dosimetry program offered through the department of radiation oncology.

Jane P. Narcisco, a Virginia Beach, Va., native, completed the nine-month certificate program which trains individuals to plan radiation treatment, calculate and measure appropriate radiation dosages and assure treatment quality.

Prior to enrolling in the ECU program, she received her radiation therapy technology training at the University of Virginia in Charlottesville and had worked in radiation therapy at DePaul Hospital in Norfolk, Va. She has accepted a position as medical dosimetrist at the Medical College of Virginia in Richmond and will take certification boards later this month.

The medical dosimetry program, initiated in the fall of 1987, is conducted in conjunction with the ECU Division of Continuing Medical Education and is one of eight programs nationwide.

Seminar Set On Islam, Arabic World

ECU NEWS BUREAU

Distinguished scholars and diplomats will participate in a two-day seminar on the Arab world and Islam for public school teachers and administrators June 29-30 at East Carolina University.

Approximately 100 public school teachers, mostly in the social studies, will attend the seminar which is designed to enrich educators' knowledge of Islam and the Arab world, to assess available materials and resources and to develop teaching units and classroom strategies, according to Dr. Maurice Simon, coordinator of international studies at ECU.

The seminar is being sponsored by ECU's Office of International Studies in cooperation with the N.C. Committee of the American-Arab Affairs Council and the Southeast Regional Education Center of the N.C. Department of Public Instruction.

A keynote address will be delivered June 29 by Hermann Fr. Eilts, director of the Center for International Relations, Boston University, former U.S. ambassador to Egypt and Saudi Arabia.

A second keynote address on Friday will be by Ambassador Clovis Maksoud, permanent observer to the United Nations for the League of Arab States.

Other scholars and speakers will include George A. Naifeh, president of the American-Arab Affairs Council; Joseph W. Twinam, John C. West professor of government and international studies at The Citadel and former U.S. ambassador to Bahrain; Dr. Fouad M. Moughrabi, professor of political science at the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga; John M. Roberts, bureau chief of Al-Hayat Publishing Co. in London; Dr. Yvonne Y. Haddad, professor of Islamic studies at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, and Les Janka, senior vice president of Neill & Co.

Others include Michael C. Griffin, a Wisconsin high school teacher, and North Carolina educators Doug Robertson, assistant director of the Division of Social Studies; Ann Hamze of Greenville Middle School; Caroline Mew of Greene Central High School; Karen Faushee of East Carolina University; Ken Thigpen of Beulaville Elementary School, and Betty Scoopmire of Greenville Middle School, serving as moderators.

As a special feature, teachers will develop their own five-day teaching modules on the Arab world and Islam to enter in a statewide competition. The three winners of the competition will receive a three-week, all expenses paid tour to the Middle East in the summer of 1990. In addition, the N.C. Department of Public Instruction will grant one unit toward teacher accreditation for all individuals completing the seminar.

Applications are being accepted for participation in the seminar, which costs $15, including lunch on both days, a reception, and instructional materials. To register, contact Joe Webb, Coordinator, Southwest Regional Education Center, 612 College St., Jacksonville, N.C., 28540 or telephone (919) 455-8100.

Drinking Water

RALEIGH (AP) — State officials say that no health-threatening levels of contamination are evident in 26 of the largest surface-water drinking supplies in the state, despite a private report that said 557,000 people's health may be threatened.

"These chemicals are not present at levels that are going to hurt anyone in the short run," state toxicologist Ted Taylor said of 20 chemicals defined by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency as priority pollutants, which were found in treated water in public systems.

Honorary Chairman

Dottie Martin, North Carolina's first lady, has accepted the position of honorary chairman for the Caring Program for Children.

The program provides primary and preventative health care, through health insurance, to low-income children who are not eligible for Medicaid.

Mrs. Martin has been involved in children's issues ranging from child safety to drug abuse prevention.

ECU Theater Arts Awards Presented

ECU NEWS BUREAU

Fifteen students in the East Carolina University Department of Theater Arts have received awards and scholarships. The recipients include students majoring in acting, broadcast communications and dance.

Candace McKenzie of Myrtle Beach, S.C., a sophomore acting major, received the $1,000 Amanda Meiggs Loessin Acting Award. Ms. McKenzie has appeared in campus theatrical productions at ECU and at Coastal Carolina College and was a stand-in for actress Phoebe Cates in the film "Shag."

The $700 David Martin Memorial Award was presented to sophomore broadcasting major Andrew S. Forbis of Teachey. The award, established in memory of a deceased broadcast student at ECU, is given to an outstanding broadcast communications student each year.

Other students received $500 awards. They included Stephanie Louise Dawson of Durham who received the the John D. Messick Scholarship; Jane Atkinson of New Bern, the Marie Wallace Dance Award; Marilyn Molloy of Hillsborough and Christian Brent Keiber of Greenwood Lake, N.Y., Nell Draper Burnette Acting Scholarships; Holly Eckman of Pitman, N.J., and Debbie Jean Briley of Nashville, Merrill Scholarships; Matthew Geneczko of Greenville, the Drama Endowment Scholarship; Brinley Arden Vickers of Greenville, the Acting Scholarship, and Christie Anne Cox of Roxboro and Julie Farrior Evans of Farmville, Theater Arts Scholarships.

Julie Evans also received a $500 dance scholarship.

Sharyl Butts of Rockville, Md., was presented the $400 Elizabeth Ivey Daniels Award in broadcasting.

Two students received non-monetary annual awards for excellence in their respective fields. Michael William Hunt of Durham received the Kelvin Parks Memorial Award given each year to an outstanding broadcasting student, and dance major Gina Lynn Weatherman of Charlotte received the Rosalind Roulston Award given each year to an outstanding theater arts student.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Patients First

A Difficult, But Correct, Choice

Few events illustrate the changes in the county as do the efforts of Pitt County Memorial Hospital's board of trustees to regulate smoking.

A couple of decades ago tobacco was king in the county. The crop had a high impact on the economy. The hospital then was a county facility serving only local citizens.

Today tobacco is still important. It is the major cash crop of the county, which produces more tobacco than any other in the nation.

'There are good reasons for concern about smoking in any hospital. Oxygen and other flammables are frequently used. A fire could prove disastrous to immobile patients.'

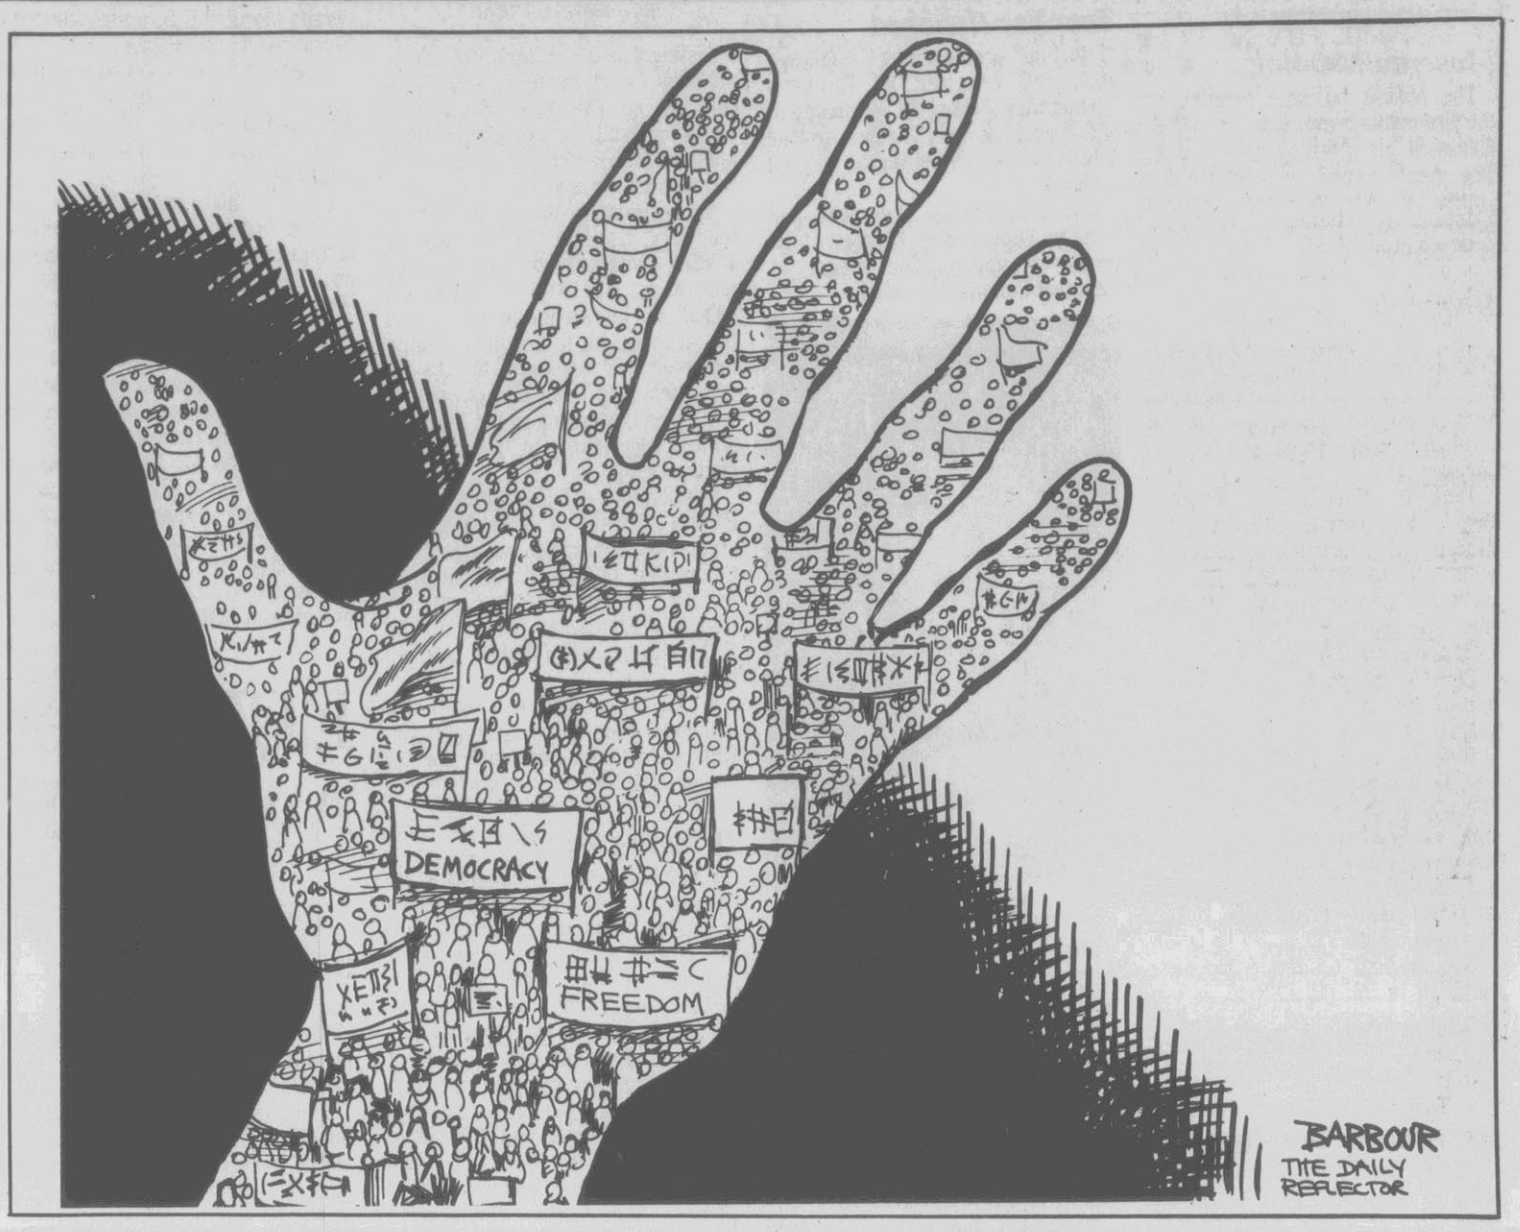

The hospital's trustees, most of whom have eastern North Carolina roots, were understandably concerned about the tobacco growers as they attempted to formulate smoking policies. They know that without tobacco the family farm as the area knows it will disappear from Pitt County and all tobacco producing areas.

It is also the trustees' duty, however, to keep the patients welfare paramount. There are good reasons for concern about smoking in any hospital. Oxygen and other flammables are frequently used. A fire could prove disastrous to immobile patients. Some patients have conditions which are aggravated by foreign substances in the air — including smoke.

So with reservations, the trustees approved phase I of a smoking control plan. It provides for restricting public smoking to designated areas. It also says that smoking will be allowed in offices only with the other occupants' permission. Smoking in patients' rooms will be permission only if the patient approves and the patients' physician permits it.

Phase II, which is by no means certain, would be to provide for a smoke free hospital in its entirety.

The decision to implement Phase I was a difficult one for the trustees in this county which produces such a huge amount of tobacco. Still the trustees must always put the patients' welfare first. They have weighed their responsibilities properly and acted with a justified show of concern for the area tobacco growers.

The Quiet Civil-Rights Statesman

William Raspberry

WASHINGTON — This May 17 was the 35th anniversary of the Supreme Court decision outlawing public-school segregation. It is as good a time as any to take another look at the forgotten man who, as much as any, made it possible.

My contemporaries will know I'm talking about Roy Wilkins, the longtime executive director of the NAACP who led the fight against school segregation and whose name was for years virtually synonymous with "civil rights."

And yet it's a safe bet that thousands of youngsters who owe their desegregated schooling to Wilkins would be hard-put to identify him. For them, "civil rights" means Martin Luther King Jr.

Part of what has happened to Wilkins is the simple compression of history. A handful of names come to stand for entire episodes: George Washington for the American Revolution; Lincoln, Lee and Grant for the Civil War years; "Roe" and Wade for the abortion controversy; King for the movement.

Part of it is timing. King's martyrdom, at age 39, eclipsed the fact that he was at the time (1968) losing ground to the Black Power militants. Wilkins, who died at age 80 a full 13 years later, had retired from the NAACP helm under intensifying pressure from the "young Turks," embarrassed by his lack of outspoken militancy.

Part of it is style. King was the eloquent, charismatic preacher, whose strength was his ability to inspire, energize and embolden the masses; Wilkins the quiet negotiator, who, though his achievements manifested themselves in numerous legislative acts and court decisions and the most powerful black organization in the history of the country, was content to stay out of the limelight.

As his old colleague Joe Rauh once put it, "I guess you can say Martin was the front man who changed public opinion. But Roy was the one who was able to use that shift in public opinion to bring about legislation and legal rulings that benefited blacks, as well as any number of other people."

No single act of Wilkins stands out even in the minds of his admirers; neither King's I-have-a-dream oratory nor Rosa Parks' dramatic refusal to move to the back of the bus nor Malcolm X's rapier wit. Wilkins, like the similarly eclipsed Whitney Young and A. Phillip Randolph, is remembered by those he inspired for his integrity, his ability to get results, his always-on-call willingness to help.

Civil-rights activists recalling King might quote a line or two, complete with his famous inflection, from a famous speech. Wilkins is more apt to be remembered as the late Bayard Rustin remembered him: "When Jim Farmer and I started the first Freedom Rides across the South, we knew we were taking terrible chances, that we could be slapped into jail or lynched at any city anywhere along the line, and we went to Roy Wilkins and asked for the NAACP to provide lawyers to help us at every stop just in case, and he said: 'You've got it.'

"There was never bombast, never threats, never argument. Always logic. He was the civil-rights statesman of this century."

And the civil-rights patriarch as well. Most of the best-known movement leaders were Wilkins disciples. Vernon Jordan, who achieved prominence as head of the National Urban League, was his NAACP field secretary in Georgia. King, before the Alabama bus boycott thrust him into national prominence, had headed the NAACP membership campaign in Montgomery.

It is in an effort to retrieve the memory of the forgotten man of the movement that the University of Minnesota is raising funds to endow a Roy Wilkins Chair in Human Relations and Social Justice. (Wilkins grew up in St. Paul and graduated from the University of Minnesota.)

The Wilkins chair, to be held by "a distinguished scholar and public-policy shaper," will focus on "research, teaching and outreach that relate to major issues in intergroup relations, racial justice, social change and the availability of opportunity."

But it will also give scholars, activists and unmindful beneficiaries of the Wilkins legacy a chance to reflect on the career of this great man and to restore him to his place of honor in the civil-rights pantheon.

Roy Wilkins deserves it.

The World May See Major Changes From China Upheaval

Jim Mann

WASHINGTON — The crisis now engulfing China has reached such critical proportions that even if the country's aging leaders manage to crush the democracy demonstrations and sweep student protesters from the streets, the future course of the world's most populous nation has almost certainly been changed.

The forces that have come to the surface over the past week run so deep that, if history is any guide, the Chinese regime will not be able to keep them suppressed forever.

"It certainly is an upheaval of historic dimensions, and I think it will eventually change the dynamics of politics in China," Prof. Kenneth Lieberthal, director of the Center for Chinese Studies at the University of Michigan, said Sunday.

Over the past four decades, ruling leaders of the Chinese regime have several times cut off student protests or other demonstrations — only to find in later months or years that the protests had re-emerged even stronger and that leaders of the crackdown were themselves swept away.

And, with the possible exception of a full-scale revolt in Tibet in 1959, none of these previous outbursts of protest were nearly so large or pervasive as the outpouring of demands for democracy that have swept the country over the past week.

Although students have taken the lead in the massive democracy demonstrations, experts agree that they are supported by virtually every segment of the Chinese population and throughout almost all regions of the nation.

The most dramatic example of a crackdown that proved unsuccessful in the long run was in April 1976, five months before the death of Chairman Mao Tse-tung. As many as 100,000 people turned out in Tian An Men Square to protest what they felt was the Chinese leadership's refusal to give proper respect and honors to the memory of former Premier Chou En-lai, who had died earlier that year.

Then, as now, the fervor of the protesters was mingled with softer emotions that seem to characterize such confrontations in China — including surprising concern among the demonstrators for the forces arrayed against them. Such sentiments stand in sharp contrast with the harsh spirit of comparable protests in many other countries, most notably neighboring South Korea.

In the spring of 1976, the regime was controlled largely by radical leaders such as Mao's wife, Jiang Qing. The leadership called security forces into Beijing to clear the square and quell the protests. The forces moved in at about 9:30 p.m., using nightsticks. By all accounts, there was considerable violence and, according to the initial estimates of security officials, more than 100 deaths.

The brutal suppression of that protest, while initially successful, eventually helped lead to the downfall of some of the Chinese leaders involved in calling out the security forces. A month after Mao died, his wife and her allies — known as the Gang of Four — were arrested.

The more moderate leaders who rose to power after Mao's death overturned the Chinese Communist Party's judgment that the 1976 protests had been counterrevolutionary and instead concluded that they had been "completely revolutionary." The mayor of Beijing, who had called the police into Tian An Men Square that night, lost his job.

"If Chairman Mao had been in good health, if he had been capable of making up his own mind, he would not have made such decisions," declared a new Chinese leader nearly three years after the suppression of the Tian An Men demonstrations.

Ironically, that new Chinese leader was Deng Xiaoping, the same man who now, as chairman of the Communist Party's Central Military Commission, has become a symbol of resistance to political change and the target of student protests. It is Deng who is responsible for the decision to call in the troops to Beijing over the past few days.

In late 1978 and early 1979, a new series of demonstrations swept Beijing. Hundreds and sometimes thousands of young people began gathering at a site known as Democracy Wall, where wallposters called for human rights and democracy in China.

Deng, then in the process of consolidating his control over the Chinese Communist Party, at first voiced some support for the Democracy Wall protests. But a few months later, he led a crackdown. The demonstrations were stopped, leaders were arrested and the right to put up wallposters was eliminated from the Chinese constitution.

Wei Jingsheng, the leader of that Democracy Wall movement, was tried as a counterrevolutionary for allegedly giving state secrets to a foreign journalist. He remains in jail, but the people in the streets today — numbering in the hundreds of thousands — are his political heirs.

Deng's willingness to suppress the Democracy Wall campaign was reminiscent of his successful efforts two decades earlier, with Mao, to crack down on intellectual freedom in China.

In 1956, when Mao was Communist Party chairman and Deng was the party's general secretary, the party encouraged intellectuals to voice their opinions. "Let a hundred flowers bloom, let a hundred schools of thought contend," said Mao, quoting an old Confucian aphorism.

The following year, astounded by the vehemence of the intellectuals' criticism of the Communist Party that the invitation had triggered, Mao and Deng cracked down. About 300,000 people were purged from the party, and thousands of intellectuals were jailed or exiled to the countryside.

More recently, Deng and the Chinese regime have confronted a recurring series of student demonstrations and have tried to cut them off. But the efforts have proved unsuccessful over the long run.

The current wave of student demonstrations dates to December 1984. At first, the protests were pitifully small, particularly when compared to the mass outpourings of the past week.

At Beijing University, the nation's most prestigious school, several hundred students put up wallposters and marched at night to protest overcrowded conditions on campus. At another nearby university, students demonstrated to complain of poor food.

In those days, less than five years ago, the participants were so afraid of retaliation that students who threw burning newspapers out their dorm windows quickly hid their faces to avoid being recognized.

The regime paid little attention until the following fall, when the student protests spread to Tian An Men Square and took on larger political overtones. Nearly a thousand students outside the Great Hall of the People denounced Japan's "economic invasion" of China and corruption within the party. Some of these demonstrators also called for democracy.

The student demonstrations spread to other Chinese cities. When then-Vice President George Bush visited China in October 1985 Chinese protesters in the city of Chengdu overturned Japanese cars. U.S. officials quickly took all Japanese cars out of the Bush motorcade.

This time, the Chinese leadership acted. The regime warned students that it would use tough measures against anyone who took part in another planned demonstration. After the protest movement subsided, a handful of student leaders vanished from campuses.

Within a year, however, Chinese students were back in the streets, this time in much greater force and focusing more directly on the cause of democracy. In December 1986 protesters at a small university in Hefei, encouraged by a school administrator named Fang Lizhi, took to the streets to protest efforts by party officials to exclude non-approved candidates from an election.

This time, the protests for democracy spread. In Shanghai, tens of thousands of students took to the streets. In Beijing, students staged a midnight march to Tian An Men Square.

The crackdown began in January 1987 when the Chinese Communist Party launched a campaign against "bourgeois liberalization." Communist Party General Secretary Hu Yaobang and his propaganda chief were ousted from their jobs, and three leading intellectuals, including Fang Lizhi, were expelled from the Communist Party.

When skeptics questioned the wisdom of this campaign against bourgeois liberalization, Deng's answer was simple: crackdowns work.

"We put Wei (Jingsheng) behind bars, didn't we?" Deng said, according to internal party documents. "We haven't released him, but China's image has not been tarnished by that."

For a time, the crackdown worked. But in April, triggered by the death of Hu, students took to the streets again, this time in far larger numbers and with the support of workers and others in China.

Biologist Says State Laws Aren't Protecting Wetlands

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ELIZABETH CITY, N.C. — State laws regulating use of wetlands are not enough to protect those areas, a biologist with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers says.

"There are so many exceptions to the rules and loopholes in the laws, that many wetlands are disturbed by development," said David Franklin, a biologist with the Corps' office in Wilmington.

Franklin said the Corps' jurisdiction over wetlands is authorized mainly by Clean Water legislation, created by the federal government in 1972. He said those laws allow the Corps to restrict the filling of wetlands. Wetlands are identified by studies of the area's water table, soil and vegetation, Franklin said.

"But the Corps only controls the dredging and discharging of fill material into wetlands," Franklin said last week.

And there are agricultural exemptions to the laws for some farmers, as well as other exemptions that allow for the cutting of trees in wetland areas. Franklin also said that a federal permit allowed the discharging of fill material in other wetland areas.

Franklin said Nationwide Permit 26, a standing federal permit for filling wetlands, allowed many wetland areas under 10 acres to be filled. He said Permit 26 rulings generally affect inland areas, which abut a stream with a flow of less than five cubic feet per second. "Permit 26 areas that are less than an acre can be filled without even notifying the Corps," Franklin said.

Permit 26 areas also fall in that category of wetlands that the Corps has most difficulty in protecting. "Most people realize that you cannot fill near rivers, swamps and along the coast," he said. And many of the more obvious coastal wetlands come under the jurisdiction of the state's Division of Coastal Management, giving those areas added protection, he said.

Rich Shaw, coastal program analyst for the DCM, said last week that there had been little loss in wetlands located on the coast since the state enacted legislation in 1974 to control those areas. Shaw said development was not allowed on coastal wetlands and salt marshes, but he agreed with Franklin that interior wetlands are being disturbed. "The Corps can only enforce the law as it is," Shaw said.

Shaw said future state legislation may take away many of the loopholes in the federal statutes. He said some legislators are contemplating the adoption of a state wetlands protection bill, which would take jurisdiction over wetlands away from the Army Corps. The proposed legislation would be much stricter and provide more protection for the state's interior wetlands, Shaw said.

Franklin said the intent of federal legislation controlling wetland use is to insure clean water. He said that wetlands act as a filtering device for groundwater, as it runs off into lakes and streams. He said wetlands also act as a vital link in the food chain for marine animals, a habitat for wildlife and as areas that collect water and recharge underground aquifers.

Coastal wetlands often act as a sponge, pulling in flood waters and making coastal areas safer for residents, Shaw said.

Stabbing Deaths

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Two Hispanic farmworkers were stabbed to death apparently during a fight over beer Saturday night at a Duplin county farm, sheriff's department officials said.

The men, who were 24 and 30 years old, were stabbed in their chests at a farm six miles north of Beulaville, said a dispatcher with the Duplin County Sheriff's Department. Their names were not released pending notification of relatives.

Child Killed

SHELBY, N.C. (AP) — A 35-year-old Shelby man was charged with murder Sunday in the shooting death of his 12-year-old nephew. Jason Matthew White of Casar died of a single gunshot wound to the chest, authorities said.

Jack White has been charged with first-degree murder, said Cmdr. Dale Ledbetter of the Shelby Police Department.

White was being held in the Cleveland County Jail without bond Sunday pending his first appearance in county court Monday, a county jailer said.

Pot Bust

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — Gaston County police Sunday arrested two more suspects and seized tens of thousands of dollars in cash in a continuing probe into one of the biggest marijuana busts in the county's history.

Authorities confiscated the cash and three pounds of marijuana, said Gastonia Police Capt. Billy Lytton said. The arrests came the day after officials seized about 1,500 pounds of marijuana worth an estimated $3.6 million Saturday night at the home of David Queen.

While police had not counted the cash seized Sunday, Lytton estimated it could be as much as $200,000.

Dale and Theresa Black were charged with conspiracy to traffic marijuana and several other drug offenses.

The search of their home followed the Saturday night arrest in Gastonia f Queen. Police say they seized about 1,500 pounds of marijuana in that arrest, and they estimated the street value of the marijuana to be $3.6 million.

Storm Assistance Centers Set Up

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Federal Emergency Management Agency field offices were opening today in Winston-Salem and disaster application centers were setting up shop in Lincoln, Union, Forsyth and Durham counties where tornadoes struck two weeks ago.

On Sunday, two North Carolina counties were added to the list of counties that are eligible for federal disaster aid in the wake of tornadoes and storms that ripped through the state on May 5 and 6.

Residents of Anson and Rutherford counties were declared eligible for individual assistance from the federal government. They join 11 other counties which were approved for a variety of individual assistance last week by President George Bush.

Guilford County was also approved on Sunday for assistance geared toward repairing public buildings affected by the storms. The county's residents had already been declared eligible for individual assistance.

J. Wayne Goodson, a public information officer with the Federal Emergency Management Agency, said the public assistance available for Guilford County is intended for damaged county and town government buildings.

Traffic Accidents Kill 4 People

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Four people died in traffic accidents on North Carolina roads this weekend, including a Shelby teenager who died in an accident with an off-road vehicle, the state Highway Patrol says.

William Michael Wilson, 15, was killed on Sunday when he struck a utility pole off a state road in Cleveland County.

Alvin Louis Dula, 48, of Lenoir, was a pedestrian who was struck by a car about 4 a.m. Sunday on a state road in Caldwell County.

Dwight Thomas, 31, of Weldon, was killed at 11:05 p.m. Saturday when he was struck by a car while walking along U.S. 301 in Northampton County.

Alex Alfredo Nemland, 24, of Fayetteville, died about 3 p.m. Saturday after his car collided with another vehicle on N.C. 41, about three miles west of Duplin in Bladen County.

The death toll in North Carolina since Jan. 1 is now 471, compared with 526 on this date last year.

Durham Legislator Proposes Broad Study Of UNC System

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

With no fanfare and little notice, a state representative has introduced a bill asking for $100,000 to finance a special study commission on the University of North Carolina system.

"I think it's one of the most significant bills out there," said Robert Eubanks Jr., chairman of the board of trustees at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, has yet to spell out the specifics of the study he proposed. But before introducing the bill May 11, Miller said, "I am considering legislation covering the subject matter of where we think the university system should be in the year 2000. I'll have more to say later."

As they awaited details of Miller's proposed study, most of the UNC chancellors and boards of trustees chairmen interviewed agreed there is sufficient need to study the 16-campus system, which was reorganized in 1972.

"To my knowledge, there has been no major study done since the system was put together," Eubanks said. "Nobody ever said the system is perfect. We want to make it as perfect as it can be."

There are those, however, who think the system works just fine the way it is, citing the fact that the system is widely considered one of the best in the nation. They contend that a study could weaken the system's national stature and open old wounds that have tended to heal over the years.

One source, who asked not to be identified, told the newspaper, "This can cause nothing but problems."

Efforts to reach UNC President C.D. Spangler Jr. and Roddy Jones, chairman of the UNC Board of Governors, were unsuccessful.

Most members of the Board of Governors contacted last week did not want to talk about a UNC study until they have seen details of Miller's bill.

J. Earl Danieley, a board member from Elon College, said he senses no need for a study, but would not object to one.

"When we are dealing with a multi-campus system we ought to be open to the possibility that we ought to be doing things that we are not doing," Danieley said.

However, he believes $100,000 is too much to spend on a study.

"If you've got $100,000, you ought to put a roof on another (university) building," Danieley said.

Danieley and several others interviewed said they like the way the UNC system is set up.

"I am not at all convinced that it is the university that should be studied as it is the state (regulatory) systems that should be studied," said David G. Brown, chancellor of UNC-Asheville.

Although Miller has yet to talk about his bill, those who support the study believe it will do just that.

Several recent studies have reported that the UNC campuses operate under state government regulations that are among the most rigorous in the nation.

Officials at several universities surveyed say they are frustrated by the burdensome rules and regulations imposed on them by the state. They say these regulations — ranging from line-item budgeting to the annual reversion of unspent money to the state — often put them at a disadvantage when competing with in-state private institutions or public universities in other states.

"If I could have some relief from the state personnel system and purchasing system ... most of the problems in my life would have gone away," said Bruce R. Poulton, chancellor at N.C. State University.

The institution complaining most loudly in recent months about state regulations has been UNC-Chapel Hill.

But representatives of other campuses say there is enough frustration to go around.

"We have the same problems," said Charles A. Hayes, chairman of the Board of Trustees at UNC-Greensboro. As a taxpayer, Hayes said, he would favor a study because "it would make me feel that our monies are used in the most efficient manner to run the educational system."

In January, a task force of the UNC-Chapel Hill General Alumni Association suggested it was time to study the system's structure.

Alumni and university officials say that such a suggestion is often equated with a desire for the Chapel Hill campus to pull out of the system.

They say that's not what they want.

"I don't know anyone who seriously suggests dramatically changing the structure of the system," said Tom Lambeth, General Alumni Association president.

"If the General Assembly authorizes a study, they ought to authorize a study to make the existing system operate better, not to change the system," Lambeth said.

Smelly Time In The Vineyard

TISBURY, Mass. (AP) — It's springtime on Martha's Vineyard and the locals are girding for what's become an annual influx of arrogant, offensive pests who walk the streets at night and hang out at restaurants.

It's not tourists. It's skunks.

Hordes of the "black cats with white tails" have inhabited the island, taking up residence under houses, rummaging through restaurant garbage, intimidating vacationers, terrorizing pets and, frankly, stinking up the place.

"They're really bold and brassy. You can see them on the main streets, you can see them walking around anywhere," said Diane Goodale, animal control officer for the Vineyard Haven section of town. "If you're fishing at night, they'll just come right up to you."

Dead fish along the shore, ground nesting birds and plenty of woods make the island an ideal habitat for skunks. And state wildlife officials and animal control officers in the island's six towns say their telephones don't stop ringing in the springtime when baby skunks are born and the warm weather makes the beasts more active.

Many islanders swear that, at least since Colonial times, no skunks were on the island before the late 1950s. How they returned to Martha's Vineyard is a touchy matter involving old allegations that have flourished into local lore.

Legend has it that the skunk population was revived when Vineyard Haven native Craig Kingsbury brought two unscented skunks — one male and one female — and set them free to roam with the oxen, cattle and goats on his farm some 30 years ago.

Kingsbury, 77, swears it's not true.

He blames vacationers for bringing baby skunks and raccoons over as pets and abandoning them on the island when the cuddly critters got big and nasty. The old farmer said he was accused by his neighbors because a family of abandoned skunks took up residence on his property.

Wright Claims Rules Changed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — House Speaker Jim Wright's televised defense against ethics charges this week will be that the rules were changed in mid-stream, but even his own lawyers give him less than an even chance of winning quick dismissal of the case.

Wright's lawyers will argue that the two most serious sets of charges brought against their client by the House ethics committee should be dismissed because the panel, reacting to a new moral climate, has stretched the rules beyond their original intent.

"We are hoping for a clear interpretation that the rules haven't changed on us," Wright said.

But Wright's lawyers concede such motions are routinely denied and give the speaker less than even chance of winning a pre-emptive dismissal of the charges.

William C. Oldaker, one of Wright's lawyers, said last week that in a best-case scenario, the odds of succeeding with such a motion would be 50-50; in this case, he conceded that the odds could be something less than that.

And a growing number of House Democrats are saying that while the ethics process is important, it may ultimately prove irrelevant to the speaker's political fortunes.

"It would be nice if he could be in a position to defend his case on the merits before he has to face the question of what the political consequences are," said Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., who has argued that the rules are on Wright's side.

Stephen D. Susman, a hard-nosed trial lawyer brought in this month to bolster the defense team, is expected to argue that the committee misapplied the rules in two ways:

—In charging Wright with evading limits on outside earned income through bulk sales of his book, "Reflections of a Public Man," the panel ignored a rule specifically exempting book royalties from the limit.

House rules place a cap on money earned from speaking fees at 30 percent of congressional salary. The ethics panel said that in seven instances, Wright sold bulk quantities of books to groups he had spoken to, and that the sales were really disguised speaking fees which he otherwise wouldn't have been able to accept.

"No rule of the House, no advisory opinion, no prior cases and not one shred of legislative history ... supports the outside special counsel's revisionist approach to the copyright royalty exemption," the lawyers argue in a statement.

—Charges that Wright improperly accepted $145,000 in improper gifts from George Mallick, a Fort Worth real estate developer and business partner of the speaker, are based on a finding that Mallick had a direct interest in legislation before Congress.

Anti-Child Abuse Advocates Exerting Pressure For Funds

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Child abuse appears to be on the increase in North Carolina, with more than 35,000 reports received last year, but federal funding for related social services has fallen dramatically, officials say.

"Kids are dying and suffering from injuries that have already been identified as abuse, but that we don't have time to follow up on because so many new reports are coming in," said Bill Crawford, director of the Montgomery County Department of Social Services.

"The public and the media get pretty irate about it, but ... it's difficult to handle the load," Crawford said. "It's like the candles burning at both ends."

Fearful of getting squeezed out of a tight budget, advocates of a beefed-up war on child abuse are turning up the heat on the General Assembly to find $11.7 million to hire almost 300 social workers.

Representatives of more than 50 religious, business, civic, and professional organizations will spend Thursday lobbying the General Assembly to approve House and Senate bills that would appropriate the funds.

The effort has been dubbed "Who Will Save the Children?"

"It's not going to be a big, confrontational thing like you saw with the teachers," Crawford said, referring to the Feb. 14 march on Raleigh by 5,000 teachers demanding higher pay.

"It will just be about 200 people coming peacefully and quietly to tell the legislators about our concerns," Crawford said. "There is a critical problem in our state, which is a national leader in child deaths resulting from ... abuse."

According to a statement issued by groups sponsoring the lobbying effort, 54 abused children have died in the state in the past six years.

"The situation is explosive," said John Niblock, president of the North Carolina Child Advocacy Institute. "Child abuse reports are up by some 33 percent while federal funding for child protection decreased by 55 percent over the past nine years."

In its recently released "1989 Children's Index," the institute said reports of child abuse and substantiated cases have risen "dramatically" for five consecutive years.

There are about 400 "child protective workers" — social workers who investigate reports of abuse — in North Carolina, whose jobs are funded with federal, state and local money. The state's contribution is $1 million a year — $10,000 per county — while counties pay more than $3 million.

The federal government says each worker should handle no more than 25 cases at a time, but about 75 of North Carolina's 100 counties don't meet the standard, Crawford said. In some counties, case loads average 55 or 60 per worker.

Salaries range from $15,000 in some counties to $28,000 in others. The job of protective worker is stressful, with the constant threat of lawsuits and physical assault from family members who resent interference, Crawford said.

As a result, he said, turnover is rampant and cases sometimes fall through the cracks.

Another problem is that more than half of the workers do not have degrees in social work, he said.

The sharp increase in child abuse reports is a result of heightened public awareness and the fact that abuse is on the rise, Crawford said.

News reports of particularly horrifying cases — such as the recent rape of a 4½-month-old Charlotte child — are drawing attention to a problem that long remained in the shadows, he said.

And the complexities of modern life — such as the spiraling rate of divorce and family breakup — lead many adults to take out their stress on children, Crawford said. Often, the abuser is the live-in boyfriend of a divorced mother of young children, he said.

Sen. Russell Walker, D-Randolph, sponsor of the Senate bill to appropriate the $11.7 million, said he was optimistic about chances for getting at least some of the money although legislative leaders say few new or expanded programs can be funded this year.

Bush Says Weapons Spat Can Be Settled

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush says the dispute over short-range nuclear weapons that has split NATO could be resolved before next week's 40th-anniversary meeting of the alliance.

"I think great progress has been made" in efforts to reconcile U.S.-West German differences over possible negotiations on the missiles, Bush said Sunday during a joint news conference in Boston with French President Francois Mitterrand.

"I think that we could well have this resolved before the summit," Bush said.

Still, the dispute remains a "vexing question" and "there are strong-willed people from strong countries, and they each have an opinion," he said after he and Mitterrand gave back-to-back commencement speeches at Boston University.

"One way to guarantee there will not be progress is to lock each other in, in public statements," Bush added.

The United States, after first opposing Bonn's suggestions for early U.S.-Soviet talks on reducing short-range missiles in Europe, has sent a counterproposal to West Germany agreeing to accept such talks in principle in the future, according to Secretary of State James A. Baker III.

However, the United States first wants to see the Soviets reduce their conventional-force edge, a position Bush reiterated Sunday.

In his commencement address, Bush said that "though hope is now running high for a more peaceful continent, the history of this century teaches Americans and Europeans to remain prepared."

Mitterrand, who has generally agreed with the U.S. position, said his role was not that of a mediator between the United States and Germany on the issue.

"Obviously, I'd be happy if views can be reconciled and I believe, I think, that they can be reconciled," he said.

Mitterrand, in response to a question, refused to agree with a statement last week by White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater that Soviet Leader Mikhail Gorbachev was acting in a "drugstore cowboy fashion" in making a succession of arms-control proposals.

"I think that one must be wary of caricatures. Mr. Gorbachev is worth very much more than that," Mitterrand said.

Abortion Protesters Stage Massive Rally In St. Louis

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Up to 40,000 people in St. Louis rallied to demonstrate their hope the U.S. Supreme Court will overturn the 1973 decision that legalized abortions, and more than 100 anti-abortion protesters were arrested in Cleveland.

In Pittsburgh, about 4,000 people sang and prayed, carrying balloons and placards during an anti-abortion rally in the city's Market Square. The protesters paraded through the downtown shopping area in a light rain Saturday during the 10th Annual Greater Pittsburgh March for Life.

The St. Louis demonstrators gathered at Kiener Plaza on Sunday without incident and no arrests were made, said police Lt. Roy Miller.

Organizers called it the largest anti-abortion rally in St. Louis. But several police officers at the scene and pro-choice supporters disagreed with the official crowd estimate. They said only about 5,000 to 10,000 demonstrators were on hand.

In Cleveland, 119 protesters were arrested Saturday outside of two abortion clinics. They were charged with aggravated disorderly conduct, resisting arrest and criminal trespassing.

Edward J. Heben Jr., a lawyer representing the protesters, said his clients planned to plead innocent to all charges today in Cleveland Municipal Court.

St. Louis demonstrators marched several blocks through downtown, some holding balloons and banners. One teen-age girl carried a sign saying, "Thanks, Mom!"

The "Show-Me Life" rally came several weeks after the U.S. Supreme Court heard arguments in a Missouri abortion case that could be used to overturn the landmark Roe vs. Wade decision that legalized the procedure in 1973.

The court is expected to announce its decision this summer in that case, Webster vs. Reproductive Health Services.

The Missouri law at issue, passed in 1986, declares that human life begins at conception. It restricts abortion by banning the procedure in publicly financed hospitals and by forbidding the use of public funds.

Gas Price Hike Slows

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — The average price of gasoline rose a penny a gallon in the last two weeks, the smallest increase since the Alaska oil spill sent gas prices soaring, an analyst said.

For all grades of gasoline, pump prices rose to $1.1843 per gallon between May 5 and Friday, Trilby Lundberg said Sunday.

Wholesale prices dropped only about one-third of a cent per gallon during the same period, according to the most recent Lundberg Survey of 13,000 gasoline stations.

"This is the highest overall price seen for the nation since January of 1986, just before the world oil price competition cut world oil prices in half," Ms. Lundberg said of retail prices.

But the recent price hike was the smallest since the March 24 grounding of the Exxon Valdez — an environmental disaster that briefly closed the Port of Valdez, temporarily cutting crude oil supplies and sending prices soaring by 10 cents per gallon.

That was followed by another nickel-per-gallon increase as of April 21, Ms. Lundberg said.

Heavy competition among wholesalers accounts for the small size of the latest increase, she said.

"Wholesalers and refiners, knowing full well that the recent prices were rapid and surprising to many consumers, are trying very hard to tow the line and not to lose sales," she said. Normally, prices continue to rise during the high-consumption summer season, so the price slowdown may not be a trend, Ms. Lundberg said.

"It is possible that a lull in gasoline price rises will occur, but it cannot be expected because demand seems strong at a time when gasoline supplies are not in surplus," she said.

Yeltsin Joins Other Soviet Reformers In Vowing To Replace Party Agenda

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — At a rally attended by tens of thousands, Boris Yeltsin and other reformers elected to the new Soviet congress were cheered as they swore to substitute their radical agenda for that of the Communist Party.

"If, at this historic moment that is so important for the future of our country, we permit the apparatus to dictate to us as it has in past decades, we will not advance, but sink back into the swamp from which we'd only begun to extricate ourselves," Yeltsin told Sunday's rally.

The Communist Party, whose members constitute 80 percent of the new Congress of People's Deputies, convened a session of its policy-making Central Committee today to work out its plans for the body, which meets in inaugural session Thursday.

But many of the 2,250 members of the new congress are independent-minded Communists, and it was not known if they would follow the party line.

Yeltsin, a one-time Moscow party boss, is himself a member of the party's 251-member Central Committee and at Sunday's rally he and his anti-establishment colleagues called for contested presidential elections and urgent action on the economy.

He demanded that President Mikhail S. Gorbachev give a public accounting of the first four years of his reforms during the opening session. Only then should the congress decide if Gorbachev should be re-elected president, Yeltsin declared.

The reformers' talk of specific legislative proposals indicated they may try to create a congress with far greater power than Gorbachev may have intended. According to legislation approved last fall, the body would have just one regular session a year and elect from among its members the president as well as the smaller, working parliament, the Supreme Soviet.

Human rights activist Andrei Sakharov told Sunday's rally that the congress itself, not the Supreme Soviet, should be the supreme legislative authority.

The congress, directly elected by the people and a number of official organizations, includes hundreds of reformers.

It is not clear if the reformers constitute a large enough faction to win selection to the working parliament.

The party's intentions remained unclear. All 12 full members of its ruling Politburo were elected deputies but it was not known if they intend to serve in the Supreme Soviet as well.

Many Soviets hope the congress will take swift action on problems ranging from empty store shelves to the unresolved ethnic conflict between Armenians and Azerbaijanis.

The radical tone of Sunday's rally, which drew an estimated at 30,000 people, was demonstrated by the loud cheers that greeted Deputy Alexander Tolstoukhov's suggestion that "we should elect true people's power with a true people's president: Yeltsin!"

Yeltsin was ousted as Moscow party boss in November 1987 and lost his seat on the party's ruling Politburo after he criticized the slow pace of Gorbachev's reforms.

He made a comeback in the March congressional elections, however, when his anti-establishment platform captured almost 90 percent of the vote in Moscow.

Yeltsin on Sunday called for convenin an "extraordinary party congress" that would be empowered to replace old guard Communists on the Central Committee and Politburo.

He said a group of 39 deputies elected to represent Moscow in the new congress has drafted its own agenda for the session and demands "radical decisions" on reviving the stagnant economy, guaranteeing social justice and developing a more open society.

Yeltsin said that only after addressing that agenda and evaluating Gorbachev's performance should the congress proceed "to elect the chairman of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet from among alternative candidates."

Gorbachev was unanimously elected to that post without an opponent on Oct. 1. But that election was by the Supreme Soviet, which has until recently been a rubber stamp legislature.

Two prosecutors who have been accused of abusing their office in conducting a probe of alleged official corruption also addressed the rally to deafening cheers.

Nikolai Ivanov, who was accused of slander after he said publicly the names of Politburo member Yegor K. Ligachev and former Politburo member Mikhail S. Solomentsev came up in his probe, called for a wider investigation of former high officials.

Fellow prosecutor and deputy Telman Gdlyan said the party and government apparatus "is scared by the people."

Poll Shows Most Americans Would Support Rules To Control Pollution

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Americans would accept an array of encroachments on their lives to help clean up the environment, such as a ban on aerosol cans and mandatory refuse recycling, a poll has found.

The Media General-Associated Press survey of 1,084 adults found broad perceptions that environmental pollution is on the rise, and that government, businesses and average Americans are not doing enough to combat it.

Three-quarters of the respondents said laws against pollution in the United States are too weak, and majorities favored urgent government action, no matter what the cost, to protect the nation's drinking water.

Large majorities also supported strict pollution controls at all major oil facilities and at oil- and coal-burning power plants, even if those measures would raise the price of oil, gasoline and electricity.

Environmental concerns were heightened by the nearly 11 million gallons of oil spilled by the tanker Exxon Valdez off Alaska in March.

But the poll, conducted by telephone May 5-13, found concerns went beyond the issue of oil tanker safety.

The highest environmental priority was toxic waste disposal, in which 63 percent supported urgent action by the government regardless of the expense. Next was the related issue of the pollution of drinking water, with 52 percent favoring urgent action, cost aside.

On the issue of household waste, 20 percent said their communities now require them to separate and recycle glass, cans and paper refuse. Of the rest, an overwhelming 87 percent said they would support such a requirement.

Respondents also favored new steps against air pollution. Seventy-five percent backed a ban on household aerosol products; 60 percent supported a ban on charcoal lighter fluid; and 58 percent favored a ban on non-radial tires, which release more rubber into the air than do radials.

Those proposals are among the steps suggested for Southern California by a regional air quality board in March. Other measures in that plan won less support nationally: Respondents were split on parking restrictions in cities to discourage driving, and 59 percent opposed banning gasoline-fueled garden appliances.

Still, 72 percent supported strict pollution controls on oil-and coal-burning power plants, even if that would raise the price of power. Smokestack controls are another feature of the Southern California plan.

In an issue related to the Exxon Valdez disaster, 81 percent said new safety rules and emergency cleanup teams should be in place at all major oil facilities, even if that raised the price of oil and gasoline.

Responses were less certain on whether the federal government should issue new drilling permits. Forty-five percent opposed new drilling off the coasts of California and Florida, while about 35 percent favored new drilling there and 20 percent were unsure.

Opposition was greater to oil drilling in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge in Alaska, which also is being considered. Sixty percent were opposed and only about a quarter were in favor, with the rest unsure.

Overall, 72 percent said pollution appears to have increased during the past decade. And in a measure of its personal impact, nearly a quarter said they stayed away from the beach last year because of beach pollution.

Concerns about the environment crossed ideological and political lines. Residents of the nation's most densely populated areas were the most apt to see anti-pollution efforts as inadequate and to favor new steps.

Respondents indicated there was plenty of blame to go around for the nation's pollution problems. Forty-two percent said businesses are doing a poor job of keeping the environment clean and 36 percent said "only fair." Similarly, 83 percent rated the federal government's environmental record as only fair or poor, as opposed to good or excellent; 71 percent gave a negative rating to their state and local governments' environmental records; and 79 percent said most Americans are doing only a fair or poor job of keeping the environment clean.

The poll, which had a margin of error of plus or minus 3 points, was conducted by the AP and Media General Inc., a communications company based in Richmond, Va., that publishes the Richmond Times-Dispatch, The Richmond News Leader, the Tampa (Fla.) Tribune and the Winston-Salem (N.C.) Journal, and operates TV stations WXFL in Tampa, WCBD in Charleston, S.C., and WJKS in Jacksonville, Fla.

Expelled British Journalists Claim They're Caught In Diplomatic Battle

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — Three British journalists complained today of being made pawns in a diplomatic battle after being ordered out of the Soviet Union in apparent retaliation for London's ordered expulsion of Soviet diplomats and reporters charged with spying.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government announced Sunday that it had on Friday secretly ordered eight Soviet diplomats and three journalists to leave the country.

The government said it only decided to make public the expulsions when Moscow responded Saturday night by ordering a similar number of British diplomats and reporters to leave the Soviet Union.

Britain's ambassador to Moscow, Sir Rodric Q. Braithwaite, called it "a mirror-image act of retaliation."

Britain said its expulsions were legitimate, though it did not give details, and that the Soviet response was unjustified. Independent Television News radio said the Soviets had been caught spying on military installations.

The Soviets were not identified and Moscow had no immediate comment on the expulsions.

Each group was given 14 days to leave.

One of the expelled journalists, Sunday Times correspondent Angus Roxburgh, denied spying and said he was angry with London and Moscow over "being caught up in the latest diplomatic chess game."

"Why do the British have such a predilection for expelling Soviet spies? Presumably there are as many Russians engaged in 'impermissible activities' in West Germany, France or the U.S., yet expulsions from those countries are much rarer," he wrote in The Times today.

"One might imagine that it is easier to know who the spies in your midst are, and to keep tabs of them, than to expel them and have to deal with a fresh batch of unknown quantities," he said.

News organizations in London today urged President Mikhail S. Gorbachev to reconsider the expulsion of the journalists, which some commentators said violated the current spirit of reform in the Soviet Union.

"Tit for tat acts may appear to be a part of the past," The Times of London said in an editorial. "They can more appropriately be seen as a sign of how little has changed in the land of glasnost."

Since Gorbachev came to power in 1985, the Soviets have matched all expulsions. That year, Britain ordered out 25 Soviet diplomats, journalists and trade representatives identified as secret agents, and Moscow retaliated by expelling 25 Britons.

When the British ordered out six more Soviets, Moscow did the same.

It was the largest expulsion of Soviet personnel from Britain since 1971, when 105 were ordered to leave. But the Soviets on that occasion responded by sending home just 18 Britons.

The other journalists expelled on Saturday, Jeremy Harris of the British Broadcasting Corp. and Ian Glover-James of Independent Television News, also denied any improper conduct.

Glover-James said he had been reporting from Moscow for two years on "some of the most exciting changes in this country ... and to have to end it like this is really rather sad."

The Britons were accused of "impermissible activity on the territory" of the Soviet Union, he said.

Marcos Still Critical But Reported Alert

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HONOLULU — Family and friends of Ferdinand Marcos were heartened by news that the former Philippines president was alert and responding to medication, an aide said.

Marcos continued to rally on Sunday, said a spokesman for St. Francis Medical Center, stressing that his condition remained very critical.

Marcos, 71, was undergoing kidney dialysis, had a respirator to help him breathe and was hooked up to a monitoring system, said Eugene Tiwanak, the hospital's assistant adminstrator.

Arturo Aruiza, a top aide who has been with Marcos much of the time since a surgical procedure was performed Thursday to prepare him for dialysis, said Marcos has shown the will to live.

"The will to fight, the determination, he has that," Aruiza said.

Marcos is able to mouth words to his doctors and family, and responds with a smile when his wife, Imelda, and children, Irene Araneta and Ferdinand Jr., hold his hand and speak to him, Aruiza said.

Marcos was alert and conscious and seemed to be responding to medication to fight a bacterial infection, Tiwanak said.

Marcos and his wife have lived in exile in Hawaii since fleeing the Philippines in February 1986 after a civilian revolution swept Corazon Aquino to power.

COLOR PERSONALITY OR PRACTICALITY

Every carpet salesperson knows that color is the primary consideration in most consumer selection decisions. Volumes have been written on the subject of coloring in order to determine what best expresses your sense of style and taste. There are, however, certain practical limitations to letting your imagination run wild in color selection.

In order for your carpet investment decision to stand the test of time, consider these practical suggestions: first, avoid extremes. Just as white carpet shows every little dark spot tracked on it, so also extremely dark colors tend readily to show dust, lint, hair and even the effects of abrasive soil (in terms of color). Second, determine what type soil (in terms of color) prevails in the area of intended use. Your selection for the den with its constant parade of children and pets must be considerably more soil-oriented than the carpet in the formal living room which every kid knows is strictly off limits!

Third, consider that some colors will fade more readily in areas exposed to extreme sun light or humidity. Blue tones are particularly susceptible to fading, while yellow is the strongest primary color, followed by red tones. Similarly, green, a combination of blue and yellow, usually fades to yellow under the right conditions. Solution-dyed fibers (color on the inside) are particularly recommended when extreme fading probability exists. Finally, ask yourself, "Will a pattern help minimize the effects of spots and spills in extreme soiling situations?", and "Will the color I select stand the test of time (wear) and style change?"

Remember, color is one of many factors in determining the best carpet for you; and since it's one you'll have to live with for years to come, it deserves careful consideration. © 5/22/89

Miss Whitehurst Weds Mr. Pearce

Angela Kay Whitehurst of Winterville and James Ashley Pearce of Carrboro were married at 3 p.m. Saturday in The Memorial Baptist Church.

The Rev. E.T. Vinson officiated the double-ring ceremony.

Joseph Goodwin, organist, and Tom Proffit, soloist, presented the wedding music.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Whitehurst of Winterville. Mr. and Mrs. H.C. Pearce of Chapel Hill are parents of the bridegroom.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a formal gown of candlelight satin and silk Venise lace featuring a V-neckline. The fitted bodice closed in back with bridal buttons and was partially covered with silk Venise lace, pearls and iridescent sequins. The long, sheer sleeves of illusion were accented with Venise motifs, sequins and pearls. The basque waistline extended into a full skirt with the cathedral train enhanced with silk Venise border and lace appliques. She wore a fingertip-length veil designed with side sprays of pearls and silk flowers with flowing satin ribbon streamers. The bride carried a cascade bouquet of silk roses, lilies, baby's breath and greenery with matching streamers tied in love knots.

The mother of the bride wore a dress of pink chiffon and a corsage of cymbidium orchids. The mother of the bridegroom wore a dress of gray linen with a corsage of pink cymbidium orchids.

Maid of honor was Lynn Whitehurst of Chapel Hill and matron of honor was Jan Doss of Raleigh. Both are sisters of the bride.

Bridesmaids were Bunny Horn of Durham, sister of the bridegroom; Lisa Stalls and Tammy Jenkins, both of Greenville.

The attendants wore floor-length gowns of aqua taffeta and carried aqua and peach silk flowers.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Ushers were Marty Horn, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, of Durham; Steve Doss, brother-in-law of the bride, of Raleigh; Hal Durham of Chapel Hill, and Ken Yarnell of Greenville.

MRS. PEARCE

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall. The parents of the bridegroom hosted an after-rehearsal dinner at the the Colonial Inn in Farmville. Other parties in the couple's honor were given before the wedding.

The bridegroom is a graduate of East Carolina University and is employed by Burlington Industries. The bride is a graduate of Peace College. She was formerly employed by Owens, Rouse & Nelson Attorneys at Law.

After a wedding trip to Bermuda the couple will live in Greensboro.

Wait For Graduation, First

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Dear Abby: Our son is a senior this year, but because he fooled around and skipped school so much, he does not have enough credits to graduate with his class. He plans to go to summer school to get the credits he is short, but he is not allowed to participate in the graduation ceremonies with the rest of his class.

The graduation announcements, thank-you cards, etc. had to be ordered months ago. (They cost me $75.) Since my son won't be graduating, I don't think we should send out any announcements. His grandmother thinks that we should go ahead and send them. His father says if we send the graduation announcements, a note should be enclosed explaining the situation.

My son wants them sent because of the money and gifts he might receive.

What do you think? — A Tug Of War

Dear Tug: I think you should not send graduation announcements until there is a graduation to announce.

Dear Abby: You had a letter in your column from a young girl whose parents were divorced. She complained that her mom had to work two jobs because her father fails to send support checks.

Abby, please be fair and print this letter. It's from a daddy who does pay child support money, but Mom spends it on something other than the child.

In my case, my ex-wife sends our son to me whenever it suits her convenience. When the boy arrives (he's now 12 years old), his clothes are shabby, his shoes have holes in the soles, he wears no socks, and he carries a battered suitcase with underwear that's ready for the rag bin. My first job is get the boy a haircut and buy him some decent clothes and shoes.

Abby, something should be done about monitoring "Mom" to be sure that the support checks she receives are spent on supporting the child. — Equal Time In Newark, N.J.

Dear Equal Time: I received many letters such as yours. Read on:

Dear Abby: So, Daddy doesn't send the support money! Well, I am one daddy who has sent $2,000 a month for the support of my two children, but Mommy tells them that their father is a rich but stingy man who doesn't give her enough money to support them.

Abby, in addition to the $2,000 a month, I pay tuition and transportation to their boarding schools. (Mother does not work, but she sends the children to boarding schools anyway.)

At Christmastime, I give each child $1,000 for clothes, but they don't see a penny of it because their mother keeps putting off taking them shopping for the clothes. Last Easter, the children were put on a plane to spend the holiday with me, and they arrived looking like a pair of ragamuffins.

I am sure this letter could have been written by many fathers, so you can sign it ... Divorced Dad, Anywhere USA or Canada

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA. 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Couple Are Wed Sunday Afternoon

AYDEN — Janet Lee Stocks of Greenville and Jimmy Ray Beacham of Ayden were married at 3 p.m. Sunday in the First Baptist Church.

The Rev. Linwood Walters conducted the double-ring ceremony. Wedding music was presented by organist Mac Swanson and soloists Paul Pierce, Lynn Pierce and Patricia Stocks Ristow.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Stocks of Ayden. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lee Beacham of Ayden.

The bride wore a formal white taffeta gown featuring a Victorian neckline and double puff, long sleeves. The basque bodice was trimmed with beaded Venise lace. The cathedral train featured a beaded back bow with beaded lace streamers and a beaded lace ruffle trimmed the edge. Beaded Venise lace pickups accented the full skirt. She wore a matching headband, designed by her mother, of silk flowers and pearl peps attached to a waist-length veil of illusion. She carried white and pink silk roses with ribbon streamers and seed pearls.

Ms. Ristow of Chapel Hill, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids included Jeannie Stocks of Southern Pines, sister of the bride; and Jeanne Overman Gaylor, Janice Newell Van Scoy and Kirsten Jill Dale, all of Ayden. Each wore a tea-length gown of imported schiffli lace in a floral pattern over matching satin and carried carried three white long-stemmed silk roses with white stephanotis, tied with matching ribbons.

MRS. BEACHAM

The best man was the father of the bridegroom. Ushers were Bob Beacham of Goldsboro, brother of the bridegroom; Danny Coward and Gary Coward, both of Ayden, and Al Williams of Greenville.

Christopher Beacham of Goldsboro was ring bearer and Crystal Michelle Van Scoy was flower girl. Carolyn Page of Black Jack, aunt of the bride, directed the wedding.

The bride's parents gave a reception in the church fellowship hall. An after-rehearsal dinner was given by the bridegroom's parents at Golden Corral and several honors were given by family and friends honoring the couple.

The couple will live in Greenville after a trip to Myrtle Beach, S.C.

The bride is a graduate of Pitt Community College and is employed by Pitt County Memorial Hospital. The bridegroom attended D.H. Conley High School and is self-employed as a brick mason contractor.

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 71.25 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2½ to 3 pounds birds. 92 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed with a final weighted average of 68.72 cents. The market is lower and the live supply is adequate, ocasionally fuly adequate for a light to moderate demand. Average weights are desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina 2,077,000, compared to 1,980,000 last Tuesday.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn steady, at mostly $2.82-$2.94 in the East; mostly $3.02-$3.07 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans steady at mostly $7.19-$7.36 in the East; mostly $7.11-$7.14 in the Piedmont; wheat mostly $3.60-$3.71; new crop corn $2.48-2.79; new crop soybeans $6.45-6.75; Exchange rates for P.I.K. certificates weremostly steady and ranged from 97 to 98½ percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market pressed ahead today, extending its six-month-old rally as the dollar climbed in foreign exchange and U.S. interest rates fell.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which broke 2,500 on Friday for the first time since the 1987 crash, rose 6.78 to 2,507.88 in the first half hour today.

Gainers outnumbered losers by more than 2 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 732 up, 314 down and 457 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 33.74 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

The dollar rose sharply in world currency markets today. That prompted strength in the American credit markets.

Prices of Treasury bonds, which move in the opposite direction from interest rates, gained as much as $10 for each $1,000 in face value.

That, in turn, encouraged buying of stocks. Falling rates mean less competition for stocks from interest-bearing securities.

Pentagon Contends Small Wars Are Greater Threat Than Soviet Union

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — American troops face a greater threat of becoming involved in war because of guerrilla insurgencies in such places as Central America, Peru or the Philippines than from tensions with the Soviet Union, a Pentagon specialist says.

"That's the real threat. It's the real war," William Olson, deputy assistant secretary for defense for low-intensity conflict, said in a recent interview. "But it's very difficult to go to the American public and convince them that a country that has a population less than Cooke County, Ill., is a threat to national security."

Olson and others say Pentagon strategy for the past 40 years has focused on possible confrontation with the Soviet Union, leading in turn to an emphasis on massive troop deployments and expensive, hi-tech weapons. They say the Defense Department's failure to concentrate more on guerrilla wars left the United States ill-prepared to deal with such low-intensity conflicts, which Olson says can pose "a threat to our economic interests, a threat to political values, a threat to the survival of our friends and allies."

Congress, noting the importance of the issue, in 1986 mandated a special office to coordinate low-intensity conflict and special operations. It called for a new command, an added assistant secretary of defense and a special board within the National Security Council.

Since then, legislators have given high marks to the military for moving ahead with the special operations command, which unites the elite units of the Army, Air Force and Navy at MacDill Air Force Base in Florida. But they point to foot-dragging surrounding low-intensity conflict policy.

"Three problems are most glaring: the lack of interest in low-intensity conflict which is most pronounced in non-defense activities, major conceptual shortcomings, and the lack of interagency coordination," four of the Senate proponents of the legislation said in a Jan. 25 letter to Lt. Gen. Brent Scowcroft, President Bush's national security director.

"Unfortunately, opposition within the Executive Branch has blocked meaningful implementation of these important reforms," the letter signed by Sens. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., John Warner, R-Va., Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and William Cohen, R-Maine, said.

Rep. John Kasich, R-Ohio, of the House Committee on Armed Services, said "institutional opposition" at the Pentagon delayed the appointment of an assistant secretary of defense. Former Ambassador Charles S. Whitehouse assumed the office in June 1988 but already is stepping down due to the change in administrations.

Military and legislative sources said the leading candidate is James R. Locher, an aide to Nunn, and that Defense Secretary Dick Cheney has sent Locher's name to President Bush for approval.

"He's the only man for the job," retired Army Col. George Talbot said of Locher. "Of all the possible men who could make the cut, Locher is the one."

Talbot was Olson's predecessor as Pentagon policy specialist for low-intensity conflict from May 1987 to October 1987. He said he quit because the Pentagon "didn't want an activist guy" and few policy makers understand what guerrilla wars involve.

"In a very short time we get fed up," he said in a telephone interview. "It's not what the professional warrior class wants to do. That's why we're no good at it."

Army Col. Ed Smith, in a position paper about low-intensity conflict last year, said it is "total war" and described it as "an armed conflict in a Third World country that affects national security interests — a conflict which has the potential to involve U.S. armed combat forces."

Smith preferred the term "high-probability conflict" and defined it as "our Marxist-Leninist foes exploiting a U.S. vulnerability — the seams between the Department of State, Department of Defense, and Congress created by regulatory missions and statutes."

Guerrilla wars, such as those being fought today in El Salvador and Peru, generally involve low levels of combat with weaponry no more sophisticated than rifles or mortars.

Ziyang offered to resign. The reform-minded Zhao has expressed clear sympathy with the students' aims.

Television news today quoted one military officer deployed outside the city as saying he had been ordered to turn back his convoy, "but we can't move," apparently because of swarms of people around it.

"We've got no food, no water, no blankets. But what we can't swallow is the wrongly placed blame" of creating the confrontation, the officer said.

The TV film showed a young boy giving water to a smiling soldier armed with an AK-47 rifle while hundreds of people surrounded the military vehicles.

On the square, the country's symbolic center of power, many students slept after a tense night of waiting for a military attack.

Others sang and danced, while some helped truck away garbage that had accumulated since the students began occupying the square May 13.

The students are demanding a dialogue with the government and democratic reforms including a free press and an end to official corruption.

During Mikhail S. Gorbachev's visit last week, more than a million people flooded the city center for two days in support of student hunger-strikers in the square. The weeklong hunger strike ended Saturday.

Students from outside Beijing continued to arrive at the square this morning to the cheers of the encamped protesters. The official press has said about 50,000 students were taking part in the protest.

Li called in the 27th and 28th armies to restore order Friday night, but the number of troops sent to the capital was not known.

A Chinese source claimed up to 70,000 troops moved into the city center by subway and followed connecting tunnels to buildings surrounding Tiananmen. But that could not be confirmed.

At least 1,500 more troops were moved to the nearby train station and hundreds of trucks filled with soldiers were deployed on Beijing's outskirts.

Others were stationed at state-run media but apparently did not disrupt news operations, which continued to report freely on the situation. Newspapers were published but largely went undelivered because of transportation problems.

Beijing Vice Mayor Zhang Baifa appeared on television and urged demonstrators to remove the barricades on streets. He said the city's supplies of coal, liquefied gas and staple foods were dwindling.

Under martial law, the city government banned marches, strikes class boycotts, spreading rumors and any criticism of leaders. The bans were widely ignored. A special city command group responsible for maintaining martial law was created.

Foreign reporters were told they could not conduct interviews, take pictures or make tapes or videos on the streets, in work places and at several other locations.

Kissinger, stressing that anarchy in China would be bad for America.

"From a foreign policy point of view, we Americans ought to consider that if China leaves the game for a while because of domestic turmoil, it increases Soviet freedom of maneuver to a remarkable extent," he said.

Winston Lord, U.S. ambassador to Beijing in the Reagan administration, said Bush administration officials were "appealing to the authorities for restraint, and ... they have made clear they are on the side of the students and political reforms." He spoke on the NBC-TV program "Meet the Press."

During his news conference with Mitterand, Bush also expressed optimism that a rift within NATO over short-range European missiles could be bridged before next week's summit of alliance leaders.

West Germany wants negotiations with the Soviet Union to reduce short-range nuclear weapons in the European theater, a step the United States opposes.

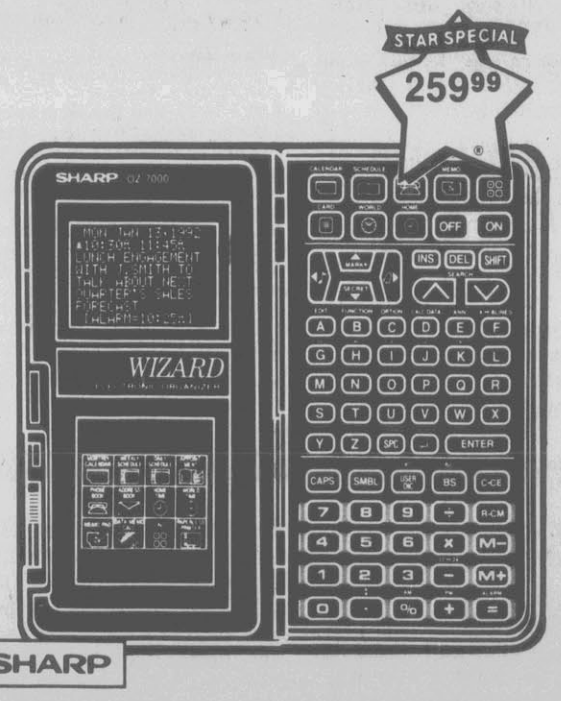

Bush said he has been working "behind the scenes" to reach a consensus, and added, "I think we could well have this resolved before the summit."

Bulls Shut Down Pistons, Gain 1-0 Lead

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — The Chicago Bulls tore the page marked "defense" out of Detroit's book and let the Pistons see how the other half lives.

The Bulls beat the Pistons 94-88 in the first game of the Eastern Conference finals on Sunday, wiping out the home-court advantage, just as the Bulls had done in their first two playoff series.

Chicago, with Michael Jordan scoring 10 of his 32 points in the fourth quarter, held Detroit to just 38.5 percent shooting.

And it was Jordan who led the defense.

"Detroit is the best defensive team in the NBA," Chicago coach Doug Collins said. "I just told our guys to keep it on the line and see what happens. If the ball is loose on the floor, go down and get it.

"I thought our aggressiveness on defense was outstanding. When you look up on the board and see 88 points, you've got to be happy with the way you played against this team. I'm real surprised."

The Pistons, who had won their first seven playoff games and were riding a club-record 12-game winning streak — 25 at home — had been holding opponents to 89.6 points in the playoffs. In winning all six regular-season games against the Bulls, Detroit had held Jordan to a 27.7 scoring average.

"I'm not here just to lay down and let the Pistons walk all over us," Jordan said. "It's going to be tough from here on in."

Detroit guards Isiah Thomas, Joe Dumars and Vinnie Johnson had been averaging 43.8 points in the playoffs. But the Bulls' defense held the trio to just 27 points Sunday on 11-for-45 shooting from the field.

Rick Mahorn led Detroit with 17 points, but he missed two free throws and was called for an offensive foul in the final minute.

"It was a tough game to lose," said Dumars, who finished with 10 points. "We were a little off on timing. We didn't execute on defense or offense in the first half. We didn't execute down the stretch."

The Pistons fell behind by as many as 24 points in the second quarter and Chicago led 50-34 at halftime. It was the worst half of playoff basketball in Detroit's history as the Pistons' previous low had been 35 in the first half at Seattle on April 8, 1975.

"Michael did a great job of getting everybody off early and then we got stagnant," Collins said.

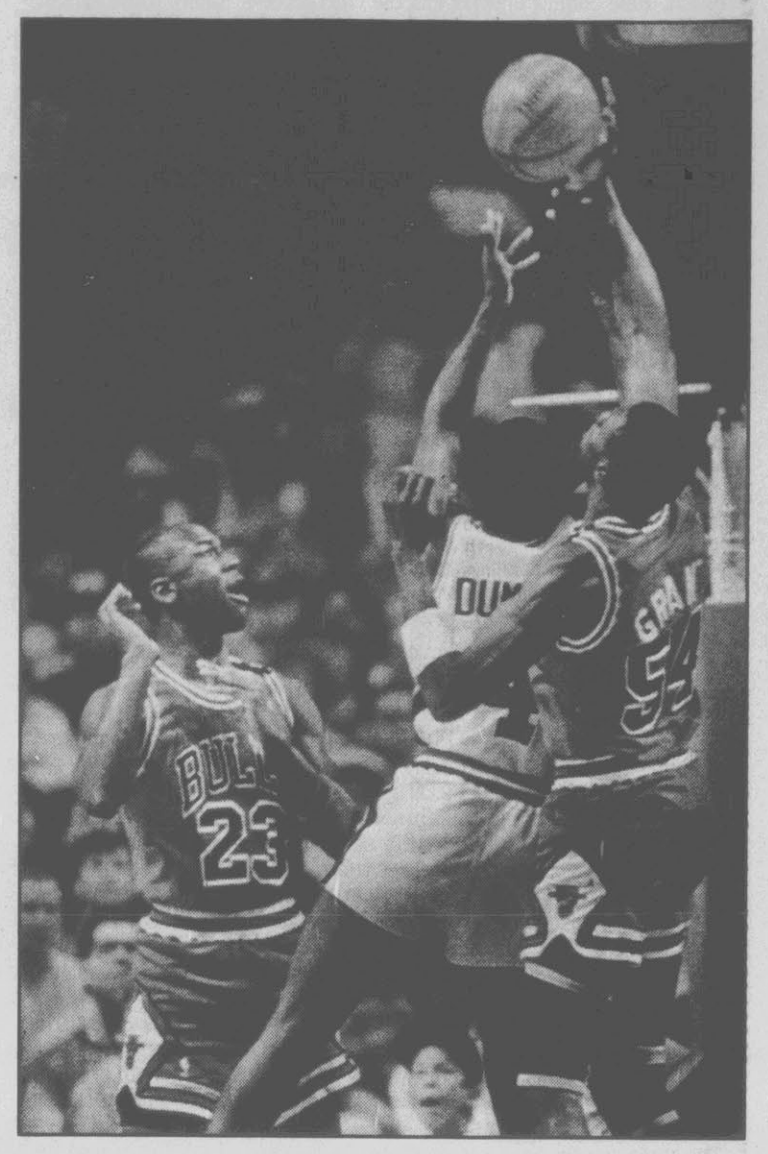

The Pistons fought back to finally take a 74-73 lead on a basket by Dennis Rodman with 8:33 remaining. But Scottie Pippen scored 19 seconds later to put the Bulls back on top to stay as the Pistons missed six free throws down the stretch.

"We gave up something like 28 points on second shots and that's a disaster," Detroit coach Chuck Daly said. "And the other thing is that we missed free throws, especially down the stretch. I did not do a good job during the layoff and that's my fault. I take total responsibility."

The Pistons, who were idle for eight days after sweeping Boston in the first round, swept Milwaukee and then rested for five more days waiting for the Bulls to dispose of the New York Knicks in the second round. They were obviously flat.

"Anytime you can catch a team on its heels, you have to take advantage of it," Jordan said. "As you saw, we didn't hold that (24-point) lead long. That gave us confidence. It gave us

Lakers Can Win Without Magic

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Everyone knows what the Los Angeles Lakers can do with Magic Johnson in the lineup.

Now everyone — including the Phoenix Suns — knows what they can do without him.

The Lakers were without Johnson for nine minutes in the second half Saturday, first because he was in foul trouble and then because he fouled out.

But Laker reserves Orlando Woolridge, Michael Cooper and Mychal Thompson stepped in and helped the Lakers to a 127-119 victory over the Suns and a 1-0 lead in the Western Conference finals.

Johnson, too, had a big part in the victory. He went to the bench with 4:07 left in the third quarter after drawing his fourth and fifth fouls on offensive charges just 26 seconds apart.

He returned with just over seven minutes left and put the Lakers ahead for good, 101-100, on a long jumper. He assisted on the Lakers' next four baskets and then scored three more points before fouling out with 2:23 to go and the Lakers leading 116-109.

But the focus was still on the reserves.

"We didn't do some things we wanted to do and then we did some things right, but at the end I have to give the victory to our bench," said Johnson, who had 18 points and 12 assists before fouling out for the first time since March 7, 1984, against Philadelphia.

Byron Scott was also in foul trouble and sat out for seven minutes midway

Lopez Fires 66 To Gain LPGA Title

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MASON, Ohio — Nancy Lopez, like Jack Benny, thought she was stuck on 39.

But Lopez captured her 40th career victory and third LPGA Championship with a final-round 6-under-par 66 Sunday to overtake Ayako Okamoto at the Jack Nicklaus Sports Center and win by three strokes.

"I got to 39 and wondered if that was going to be it," Lopez said. "I was stuck on 39 for a while, getting a lot of seconds and thirds. I was frustrated. I was beginning to hate that number. But I like 40 a lot better."

Lopez, who collected $75,000, won her third career major — LPGA Championships as a rookie in 1978 and again in 1985 — by picking up five strokes on Okamoto over the final eight holes.

"Nancy is number one under the skies," Okamoto said through an interpreter.

Told what Okamoto said, Lopez joked, "Does that mean I'm close to death?"

Lopez finished at 274, 14-under-par, over the 6,359-yard Grizzly Course.

Her closing 66 was the low round of the day.

The victory marked Lopez's fifth top-10 finish in her 11 starts at the LPGA Championship and upped her winnings in the event to more than $157,000. Published reports have the tournament moving from the current site next year — where Lopez lived for two years — to be replaced by a men's Senior Tour event.

"It's hard to compare them," she said of her three LPGA victories. "All have been special for me. The

Baker-Finch Tops Colonial's Field

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FORT WORTH, Texas — He may not be the Great White Shark, but Jaws himself couldn't have flashed a toothier grin than Ian Baker-Finch did at the 18th hole of the Colonial National Invitation golf tournament.

The tall, slender Australian floated an 8-iron to within three feet of the pin Sunday to secure his first American PGA Tour title and cap a wire-to-wire triumph — the first on tour this year — that earned him $180,000 from Colonial's first $1 million purse.

His smile lit up the 18th fairway and a few million television screens and you could almost hear the sounds of "Waltzing Matilda" as Baker-Finch marched on in with a closing round of par 70 for a four-shot victory over Dave Edwards, who started the day nine shots off the pace but managed a final-round 65.

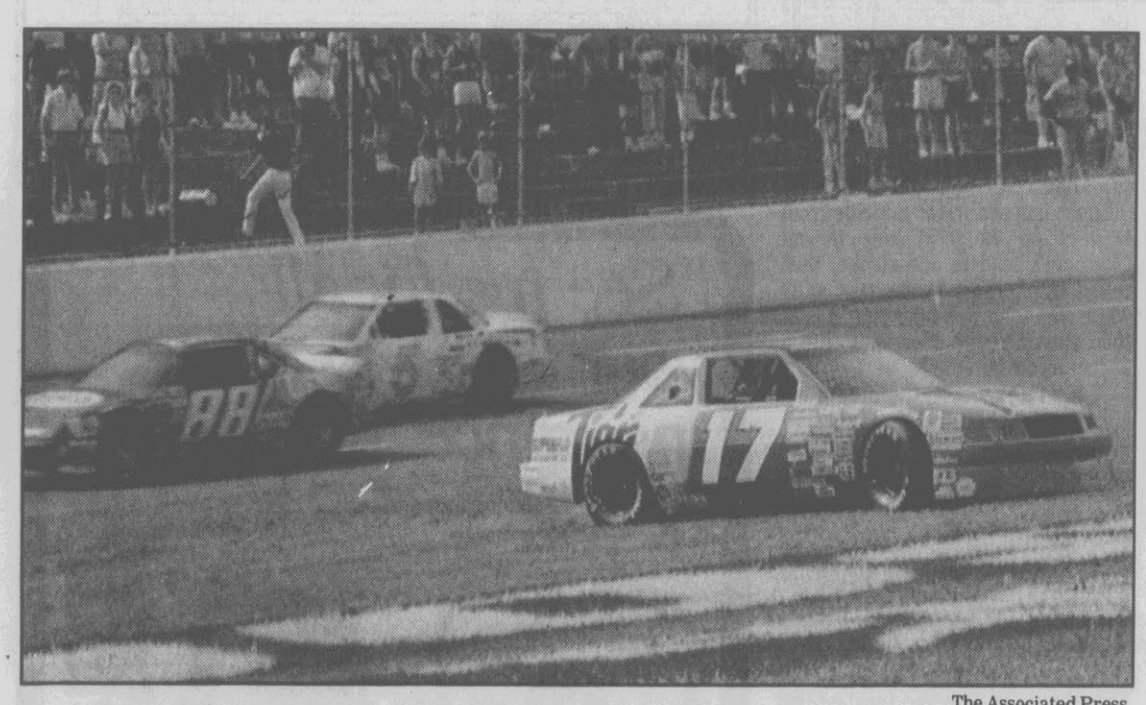

Baker-Finch, 28, posted a 10-under-par 270 that kept him atop the leaderboard for four days, hiked his official earnings to $193,689 and aroused admiring comparison to countryman Greg Norman, golf's Great White Shark.

"If I'm compared to Greg, it's because we're both Australians and we're mates," he laughed. "... But I don't hunt sharks and I haven't had time to drive Ferraris fast. We're two different sorts of people."

And while he made it look easy Sunday, there were some shaky moments.

Tim Simpson provided the most serious challenge, before closing with a 68 to share third at 276 with South African David Frost, who finished with a 69.

Darrell Waltrip slides through the infield grass after mishap during the Winston 500

Wallace Takes Winston 500

Controversy Once Again Plagues Finish Of Race

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CONCORD, N.C. — Following a one-year hiatus, controversy is back in full bloom at The Winston, NASCAR's all-star event.

With just over a lap left at Charlotte Motor Speedway Sunday, Rusty Wallace nudged front-runner Darrell Waltrip from behind, sending him spinning across the infield — and out of the running for the $200,000 purse.

"I just hope he chokes on that $200,000, that's all I can tell him," an angry Waltrip said following Wallace's victory. "He knocked the hell out of me."

The finish was reminiscent of the fist-flying affair two years ago that was won by Dale Earnhardt. That altercation led NASCAR to fine Earnhardt, Bill Elliott and Geoff Bodine.

Immediately following Sunday's race, NASCAR officials said the bumping incident had been reviewed and no penalties were planned.

"As far as what happened on the race track, it's over with," said NASCAR spokesman Chip Williams.

But tempers were hot in the pits. As Wallace drove his Pontiac into victory lane, blows were exchanged between members of his crew and some of Waltrip's crew.

"It was a real bush-league move," said Jeff Hammond, Waltrip's crew chief. "If you knew a guy was going to come up there and knock the fool out of you, it might be different. But you don't expect someone to come up there like that and take your line and his line and hit you like that."

Wallace had no apologies.

"The Winston is an awful tough race," he said. "It's like running a 500-mile race with a shotgun to your head.

"I'm sorry that it happened that way, but you have to drive as hard as you can," Wallace said. "It was hard-core. I did not intentionally spin him out."

Following a caution flag, Wallace held off Ken Schrader by .23 seconds. Wallace's average winning

Preakness Duel Will Be Remembered

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BALTIMORE — The stretch duel.

It's as dramatic as anything in sports — a head-to-head confrontation between two straining thoroughbred horses from the top of the lane to the wire.

When it occurs in a showcase race it can become part of the sport's lore. The duel between Sunday Silence and Easy Goer in Saturday's Preakness certainly will.

Duels between two horses over the final quarter-mile in which the other members of the field became fading spectators are much more rare.

There was Native Dancer outlasting Jamie K. by a neck in the 1953 Belmont Stakes. There was Majestic Prince wearing down Arts and Letters for a neck win in the 1969 Kentucky Derby. There was Bold Forbes refusing to surrender the lead to Honest Pleasure and winning the Derby by a length in 1976.

Of course, there was Affirmed's head victory over Easy Goer's sire, Alydar, in the Belmont Stakes in 1978 when Affirmed became the 11th, and last Triple Crown champion.

None was more dramatic than the one between Sunday Silence, the Kentucky Derby winner, and Easy Goer just two days ago at Pimlico.

Such a duel takes few seconds more than 20, but as the sense of drama heightens, time seems suspended.

It's an outfielder running after a fly ball headed for the fence with two outs and runners circling the bases. It's two fighters going toe-to-toe for three minutes of eternity.

As Sunday Silence and Easy Goer battled toward the wire, memory raced 11 years into the past.

Suddenly the yellow and gray silks worn by Pat Valenzuela on Sunday Silence were pink and black and his name was Steve Cauthen; the red and black worn by Pat Day on Easy Goer turned devil's red and blue and his name was Jorge Velasquez.

The two straining 3-year-olds were Affirmed and Alydar.

With a quarter-mile left, Affirmed on the outside had a head lead over Alydar. Alydar pulled almost even with three-sixteenths of a mile remaining, but he couldn't get by and Affirmed's head was in front at the wire.

The dramatic duel was set up when the colts began to run off from their three rivals with seven-eighths of mile left in the 1½-mile race.

The two stars in the 1 3-16-mile Preakness Saturday set the stage for their drama with a little more than a half mile left.

At this point Easy Goer moved by Sunday Silence in close quarters.

"He kind of pushed me over to (pace-setting) Houston's heels," Valenzuela said. "He stopped us a little."

At that point, Arthur B. Hancock III, who owns half of Sunday Silence, lowered his binoculars and told his wife: "We've been cut off. Can you believe, it cut off in the Preakness."

Scheer: Hornets' 5th Pick Will Benefit Club

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Charlotte Hornets General Manager Carl Scheer says he wasn't surprised that his team came away with the fifth pick in the June 27 college basketball draft, but he's not disappointed, either.

"We felt there were at least five players we would be interested in, but with J.R. Reid coming in early and the emergence of Randy White (of Louisiana Tech), there are at least seven significant players," Scheer said Sunday before boarding a plane to Charlotte.

"Even at five, we are confident that we will get a player who will be able to make a positive contribution to the team," he said.

The draft weighting system ensured Charlotte's pick, since the Hornets finished with the NBA's second-worst record (20-62). As the team with the worst record this season, Miami will pick fourth.

The Hornets are seeking to bolster inside scoring and rebounding, but are expected the select the best available players without regard to position.

Sacramento won the top draft selection in the lottery, and the Los Angeles Clippers will pick second, followed by San Antonio and Miami.

Experts predict the top three picks in the draft will be Arizona forward Sean Elliott, Duke forward Danny Ferry and Glen Rice of Michigan.

"We've brought players in that we thought were at the five-spot because we think those first three are set," said Gene Littles, the Hornets' director of player personnel.

Reid, a 6-foot-9 junior forward from North Carolina, who declared his draft eligibility last week, may be tops on the mid-first round shopping list.

"The three we're looking at strongly are Reid, (Stacey) King and (Pervis) Ellison," said Littles. "Unless a guy like Rice drops to fifth and then he would get strong consideration."

NBA scouts agree that Oklahoma's 6-11 King and 6-9 Ellison of Louisville should become immediate impact players.

Published reports have named Reid as Miami's other leading candidate.

Pitino Will Visit Kentucky Today

NEW YORK (AP) — Rick Pitino, still mulling the coaching vacancy at Kentucky, plans to visit the Wildcats' campus Monday.

Pitino, whose New York Knicks' were eliminated from the NBA playoffs Friday night by the Chicago Bulls in six games, disclosed his plans Sunday.

"The lure of it is to go find out," said Pitino, whose contract with the Knicks was recently extended for three years.

He emphasized that if he decided to leave the pros and return to college coaching — he coached at Providence before joining the Knicks — it would not be for financial reasons.

"I make a good living," said Pitino, who earns about $425,000 annually with the Knicks. "I never thought I'd leave Providence. My players are very special to me. All the negative things that may have happened are overshadowed when I look at them."

At Kentucky, Pitino reportedly would receive $750,000 a year in salary, plus income from camps, clinics, a television program and other perks that could raise the figure to $1 million.

The same day the Knicks were ousted by the Bulls, the NCAA placed Kentucky on three years' probation, with two years of postseason ineligibility, two years of restrictions on basketball scholarships and one year of television blackout.

In addition, two players — Eric Manuel and Chris Mills — were declared ineligible to play for the Wildcats by the NCAA.

Pitino said he had been to Kentucky only once, during the senior year of Kenny Walker of the Knicks.

"I gave a one-man clinic and flew out in an hour," he said.

Pitino, who has coached the Knicks to a 90-74 record and two playoff appearances in two seasons, has been called a top candidate for the Kentucky job by Wildcats athletic director C.M. Newton.

"You don't see this type of job open at this time of year," Pitino said. "There are very few jobs you can leave the Knicks for to go back to college."

UNC Tops Loyola In Lacrosse Playoffs, 12-5

BALTIMORE (AP) — Neill Redfern scored four goals and had three assists to lead North Carolina to a 12-5 victory over previously unbeaten Loyola of Maryland in an NCAA Division I lacrosse quarterfinal Sunday.

Goalie Pat Olmert had 12 saves for North Carolina, 13-4, which advanced to the semifinals Saturday against Johns Hopkins. Loyola finished 10-1.

Brian Kroneberger led Loyola with three goals, and goalie Charlie Toomey had 17 saves.

North Carolina scored five straight goals in the third quarter to take an 8-3 lead. Dennis Goldstein and Michael Thomas scored in an 11-second span to start the five-goal spurt.

Porter Claims North And South Tourney

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Lee Porter overcame a late challenge by Eoghan O'Connell to win the 89th annual men's North and South amateur golf tournament at Pinehurst Country Club on Sunday.

Porter, a Guilford College senior, claimed the title with a match score of 4 and 3.

Porter led by two holes after the morning round and by winning holes 11, 12 and 13 in the afternoon he increased his lead to five. O'Connell, of County Cork, Ireland, was in trouble on the right side of the green on the 14th hole, but rolled in a birdie to force play to the 15th hole.

Porter secured the championship when both players made par on the 15th hole.

Porter will play in the NAIA championship and next week in the British Amateur.

Miami, UNC Win At Carolina Invitational

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Alex Fernandez struck out eight batters allowed one run to lead No. 5 Miami to an 11-1 victory over top-ranked Arizona on Sunday, in the Carolina Invitational.

It was the second defeat in a row for the Wildcats, who lost to North Carolina 5-3 on Saturday.

Every member of the Miami starting lineup had a least one hit, as the Hurricanes totaled 16 hits. Miami picked up its first run in the first inning when F.P. Santangelo was hit by a pitch and scored on a Kirk Dulom single.

The Hurricanes added three more runs in the fourth off a Henry Hernandez triple, a Mike Tosar single, a Rey Noriega single and Jose Trujillo's double, which drove in two runs.

Miami scored four more runs in the fifth inning. Miami closed out its scoring in the seventh inning with three runs, highlighted by Henry Hernandez's home run.

Arizona's only run came in the fifth when Jack Johnson, scored on a Kevin Long sacrifice fly.

Alex Fernandez, 14-1, was the winner and Jim Richardson, 5-3, was the loser.

North Carolina relied on seven strong innings by freshman starter Frank Maney to defeat Atlantic Coast Conference foe North Carolina State 5-1.

The victory was the third of the tournament for the Tar Heels in as many days as they improved their record to 37-14-1 on the year. North Carolina State fell to 35-21-2.

Maney allowed only five hits and one run, striking out three and walking two. Chris Cornacchio relieved Maney at the start of the eighth and Rich Fernandez came on in the ninth to pick up the save.

North Carolina got it first run in the first inning when Tom Nevin drew a walk from Wolfpack starter Preston Woods, 5-4. Catcher Jesse levis followed with a single, moving Nevin to third. Nevin then scored on a Brad Woodall ground ball.

North Carolina picked up two more runs in the third inning when Nevin led off with a single and Lewis followed with another. Woodall's single then drove both runners home. In the eighth, the Tar Heels picked up two more runs on a hit batter, three walks and a sacrifice fly.

North Carolina State's lone run was a Bobby Russell home run in the fourth inning.

Charles Claims Commemorative Title

SCARBOROUGH-ON-HUDSON, N.Y. (AP) — Bob Charles shot a 5-under-par 65 to successfully defend his title in the $300,000 Seniors Commemorative tournament, breaking his own record with a 17-under-par 193 total for 54 holes.

For Charles, it was his third Seniors victory this year and earned him $45,000.

Don Bies and Bruce Crampton tied for second at 198. Next was Charles Coody at 201 and Dave Hill and Harold Henning at 202.

KASUGAI, Japan (AP) — American Holly Hartley shot a 1-under-par 71 and took a two-stroke victory in the Chukyo TV-Bridgestone tournament on Sunday. Hartley finished with a 212, 4-under par, for her second win in Japan this season. She won $52,000.

Trades Could Reshape Lottery

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Psst. Hey buddy, want to trade for a high NBA draft pick?

With no obvious superstar in the draft and virtually every team in Sunday's NBA Lottery carrying a roster filled with young players, some serious trade talks could adjust the draft order before June 27.

"The possibility of a trade is real," Miami coach Ron Rothstein said. "Our number is 305-577-HEAT."

Miami, which had an NBA-low 15 victories this season, finished with the No. 4 draft spot, behind lottery winner Sacramento, the Los Angeles Clippers and San Antonio.

The top players avaiable in the draft include Danny Ferry of Duke, Sean Elliott of Arizona, Michigan's Glen Rice, Stacey King of Oklahoma, Pervis Ellison of Louisville and J.R. Reid of North Carolina.

"We might keep the pick or we might trade it if we get a quality veteran," Clippers general manager Elgin Baylor said. "If we end up using the No. 2, we will still get a good player. Elliot and Ferry are fine players."

Spurs general manager Bob Bass said the team's management was talking about trading the first-round pick, "but because we're in the top three, we may choose to reconsider. Even if we had won, I couldn't pinpoint a player."

Bass said Coach Larry Brown "wants to mix some veterans in there. I think there will be wheeling and dealing before the draft."

The Spurs will add center David Robinson, who they drafted No. 1 in 1987 after winning the lottery, to their roster next season after he completes two years in the Navy. San Antonio has few veterans to support him.

Following the Kings, Clippers, Spurs and Heat in the draft will be Charlotte, Chicago, Indiana, Dallas and Washington.

General Manager Jerry Krause of the Bulls, the only non-playoff team in the lottery, said Michael Jordan will get a voice in who the team gets with the sixth pick.

"We're going to get a good pick," Krause said. "There probably will be trades. We'll look up, down, everywhere. A draft choice is a commodity. You look to get what you can for it."

The Kings, who finished sixth in the 1985 and 1987 lotteries and have never won more than 37 games in a season since moving from Kansas City in 1985, had their team logo drawn last from a hamper containing the cards of eight other teams.

Gregg Lukenbill, managing general partner of the team, said Kings fans, who have sold out every Sacramento home game since the team moved from Kansas City, deserved to win the lottery.

"We were due for something lucky. We've been through some tough times in Sacramento," Lukenbill said. "We haven't had a lot of luck, so we were due for something to fall our way."

Lukenbill said he never thought the Kings would win.

"I was thrilled to be in the top three," he said. "I never allowed myself to think we would get the first pick."

The team's doubt about who it wants in the draft was made perfectly clear by the back of a Kings jersey Lukenbill unveiled after the lottery.

It had a big question mark on it.

Lukenbill said that Bill Russell, general manager of the team, likes Rice, who led Michigan to the NCAA title last month.

The Kings traded centers LaSalle Thompson and Joe Kleine during the season, but Lukenbill said that won't necessarily lead them to draft a big man.

"We'd like to get someone who can make us 10 or 12 games better," he said. "We brought in Danny Ainge and Wayman Tisdale and improved a lot in the last 30 games.

"The game is changing. The days of the dominant center are ending. We want less reliance on the big man and more on 3-point shooting."

Lukenbill said Russell and Coach Jerry Reynolds will decide what to do with the first selection for the Kings, who finished 27-55 this season.

Reynolds said the team is considering three players from a list of five — Elliott, Ferry, Rice, King and Ellison.

But Reynolds refused to identify the Kings' top three candidates, saying the team's priorities could change in the five weeks before the draft.

"If I honestly felt there was one guy better than the others, for sure I'd tell you," Reynolds said. "I can assure you, I'll be watching a lot of tapes."

Reynolds said the Kings will make its draft choice according to talent rather than position. "We want to get the very best basketball player," he said. "If you can truly get a great player, the position is secondary."

As the non-playoff team with the best record, Washington had to settle for the ninth pick when they didn't draw in the top three. That result assures that Ferry, son of Bullets general manager Bob Ferry, will not play for his father.

Unless, of course, there's a trade.

Flames' Duo Sinks Montreal, 4-2

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MONTREAL — Joe Mullen and Doug Gilmour are two guys who are too good to keep scoreless for too long.

"They are very dangerous," Montreal captain Bob Gainey said after Mullen scored twice and Gilmour once Sunday night, leading the Calgary Flames to a 4-2 victory over the Canadiens in Game 4 of the Stanley Cup finals. "You can't keep those guys locked up forever."

After combining for 77 goals during the regular season and 18 more in the first three rounds of the playoffs, a two-game slump seemed like forever to Mullen and Gilmour.

"We had to create more," Gilmour said. "We had to go to the net."

They've gone to the net and gotten the puck into the net the last two contests.

On Friday, Mullen scored twice and Gilmour once but the Flames lost 4-3 in double overtime.

Those numbers weren't good enough that night, but they were Sunday, as the Flames sent the best-of-7 series back to Calgary for Game 5 Tuesday night tied at two wins each.

"They are both pretty good snipers and we have to keep an eye on them," Montreal defenseman Chris Chelios said. "Before (Friday night's) game, I think we held their big guns pretty much in check."

Both players are part of the Flames' St. Louis connection. There are six former Blues on the team. Mullen came in a 1986 trade that General Manager Cliff Fletcher considers one of his best ever. Gilmour arrived before this season.

"(Gilmour) was known to be a big-game performer," Fletcher said. "He's given us that and more. We saw in him a top-notch, two-way player and he's done the job.

"Those are the same things we saw in Joey. We've gotten a lot of production."

On Sunday, Gilmour took advantage of a Montreal mistake to break a scoreless tie with 8:04 left in the second period.

He came out of the penalty box just in time to steal Bobby Smith's pass at center ice, went in alone on Patrick Roy and put the puck over the goaltender's glove.

"I just didn't see him," Smith said. "Immediately, I was hoping Pat could make a great save. When he didn't, I was looking for a hole to crawl into and that's still how I feel right now."

The Canadiens had scored first in the series' first three games but allowed the Flames to either tie or take the lead each time; nevertheless, Montreal won twice.

This time, the Flames scored first and, though the game remained close, they never trailed.

During the regular season, Calgary was 36-4-4 when scoring a game's opening goal. During the playoffs, the Flames are 11-1.

"It's nice to get ahead for a change," Gilmour said. "If you don't get the first goal, you're always fighting back."

"Hockey is a mistake game," Montreal coach Pat Burns said. "Whoever makes less mistakes usually wins. We made two or three bad mistakes and that's what cost us the game."

Mullen capitalized on another Montreal miscue to stretch the Flames' lead to 2-0.

During a second-period power play, Roy stopped Al MacInnis' shot from the point. But defenseman Rick Green failed to sweep aside the rebound and Mullen scored into the vacated net.

"Sometimes you have to have the breaks," Mullen said. "The puck went toward the net and we got a break when it jumped over Green's stick."

Montreal's Russ Courtnall scored to make it 2-1 in the third, but MacInnis answered to put the Flames back up by two.

MacInnis has scored in 15 straight games, breaking Bobby Orr's 19-year-old playoff record for a defenseman. He has 28 points and is in position to be the first defenseman ever to be the leading scorer in the postseason.

The Canadiens pulled Roy for an extra attacker, a ploy that worked Friday as Mats Naslund scored with 41 seconds left to send the game into overtime.

With about a minute to go Sunday, Mullen hit the post and, when Claude Lemieux scored with 27 seconds left to make it 3-2, "I got a bad feeling," Calgary coach Terry Crisp said.

But Mullen got another chance and, this time, he fired dead center to keep history from repeating itself in two respects.

Not only did the Flames not get tied by an extra-attacker goal, but they guaranteed that the series would not be a replay of the 1986 Stanley Cup finals, when they won Game 1 and then lost four straight.

"We feel we've played well enough to win every game," Crisp said, "but if you told us that we'd get a split, we'd be happy with that. Now we're going back home."

first year, being so young, winning with my dad here and all of that pressure at such a young age — it meant a lot.

"The next one, I got a two-stroke penalty and I was so mad. That win was so self-satisfying because I played my tail off to do whatever I could to win.

"But this was sweet, too. My husband (former baseball player Ray Knight) was with me here, and my kids. And everybody was talking about the tournament leaving. So all of that made it special too."

Lopez, who started the day two strokes behind Okamoto, stalked her playing partner to pull even at the turn. But she three-putted the 10th hole for a bogey while Okamoto was birdieing to regain the two-stroke lead.

"I really got angry with that three-putt at 10," said Lopez, a 1987 LPGA Hall of Fame inductee. "I just said, 'I'm not going to do that.' I wanted to win, I wanted it so badly, that my concentration just took over and I was thinking of one shot at a time. I was very motivated.

"I was concentrating so hard that when I looked in the scoring tent and saw I had a 66, I didn't believe it."

Lopez chipped in for a birdie from 15 feet on the 11th hole to cut Okamoto's lead to one stroke, then rolled in a 12-foot birdie putt at 12 while Okamoto was bogeying. Lopez then slammed the door shut with a 20-foot birdie putt at 17.

"I kind of knocked the breath out of her with that birdie," she said.

Lopez, 32, then closed her round with another birdie for her first victory this year. It made her the top money-winner with more than $279,000 as she has finished in the top three in eight of 10 tournaments this season.

The loss continued Okamoto's final-round misfortune at the LPGA Championship. She had finished tied for third in each of the last three LPGA Championships after shooting her worst round of the tournament on the final day.

"I was surprised in other years because when I crossed my arms, I could see my heart beating very hard," she said. "But that was not the case today."

a cushion in case we fell back. We kept our poise and kept our composure."

The Bulls, in the conference finals for only the third time in the club's 23-year history, were 0-6 against the Pistons during the regular season. They also were 0-6 against Cleveland but eliminated the Cavaliers in the first round.

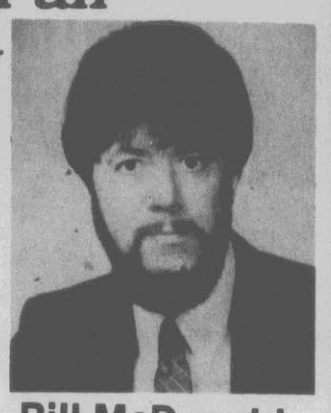

It also was the third straight series in which the Bulls won the opening game on the road, beating Cleveland and New York earlier.

"You have to congratulate them," Daly said.

Game 2 of the best-of-7 series is set for Tuesday night at The Palace. The action then shifts back to Chicago for Games 3 and 4 on Saturday and Monday.

Van Slyke's Big Return Keys Pirates

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

In four at-bats, Andy Van Slyke showed the Pittsburgh Pirates what they've been missing most of the season.

Van Slyke, who recently came off the disabled list, had four hits, drove in four runs and scored four times as Pittsburgh pounded Houston 17-5 Sunday at the Astrodome.

While Van Slyke recovered from a pulled rib-cage muscle, the Pirates' offense flopped and they fell into last place in the National League East.

Last season, Van Slyke hit .288 with 25 homers, 100 RBIs and 15 triples. He also won a Gold Glove for his work in center field.

Van Slyke had two singles, a double and home run in leading the Pirates' 18-hit attack. Bobby Bonilla added three RBIs and hit his fifth homer.

The 17 runs were the most for the Pirates since May 9, 1979, when they beat Atlanta 17-9.

Utilitymen Craig Reynolds and Greg Gross both pitched for the Astros, allowing six runs.

Neal Heaton, 1-4, pitched five innings and gave up nine hits and four runs for his first victory since July 26, 1988, while he was pitching for Montreal. The victory snapped a personal eight-game losing streak.

"I can't even remember the last time I got a victory," Heaton said. "I pitched the worst game of my year today and I won. It's crazy."

Giants 10, Mets 6

A two-out throwing error by shortstop Kevin Elster in the seventh inning led to five unearned runs as San Francisco beat New York at Shea Stadium.

After Donell Nixon singled and moved to second on a groundout, Will Clark's two-out single off Roger McDowell, 1-3, tied the score 5-5. Kevin Mitchell followed with a single, and took second on the late throw to third.

Ken Oberkfell then chopped a grounder and Elster's throw to first was high, allowing Clark to score the go-ahead run. After a walk loaded the bases, pinch-hitter Terry Kennedy doubled in three runs and Jose Uribe capped the inning with an RBI single.

Atlee Hammaker, 3-3, got the victory by throwing one pitch and getting Darryl Strawberry on a liner to second to end the sixth inning.

Phillies 3, Padres 1

Steve Jeltz hit his first home run since 1984, a tie-breaking, two-run shot in the eighth inning, to lift Philadelphia past visiting San Diego.

It was only Jeltz's second career homer, his first coming on Sept. 23, 1984. Jeltz went 1,357 at-bats between homers.

Phillies starter Bob Sebra, who was recalled from Class AAA Scranton-Wilkes Barre of the International League on May 17, allowed one run and seven hits in eight innings. Steve Bedrosian got the last three outs for his fourth save.

Cardinals 6, Braves 1

Third baseman Ron Gant's error allowed the go-ahead run to score and Willie McGee hit a two-run single to cap a five-run 10th inning as St. Louis beat the Braves in Atlanta.

Jose Alvarez, 2-1, walked Tom Brunansky to open the 10th and Jose Oquendo singled him to third. Paul Assenmacher relieved and Gant booted Jim Lindeman's grounder, allowing Brunansky to score.

Reds 7, Cubs 2

Eric Davis went 4-for-4 and drove in three runs and Rick Mahler pitched an eight-hitter as Cincinnati beat Chicago at Riverfront Stadium, snapping the Cubs' five-game winning streak.

Mahler, 6-4, struck out six and walked three en route to his third complete game of the season. He also had a bunt single to spark a four-run fourth.

Schroeder Gets Measure Of Revenge

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bill Schroeder wanted to show the Milwaukee Brewers they made a mistake when they traded him. And he did.

With California leading his former club 5-2 in the third inning Sunday, Schroeder came up with the bases loaded after Bill Wegman walked Jack Howell intentionally.

Schroeder hit his second career grand slam and the Angels went on to a 12-9 victory.

Schroeder was traded to California last winter after 10 seasons with the Brewers' organization. He understands why Milwaukee manager Tom Trebelhorn ordered Howell walked.

Claudell Washington homered twice and drove in four runs. Washington hit an RBI double in the first, a two-run homer in the second and a solo homer in the sixth, his fifth of the season. He also singled in the eighth.

Devon White homered for the fourth consecutive game. His eighth-inning homer gave him seven this season.

Kirk McCaskill allowed 11 hits and seven runs in four-plus innings. Dan Petry, 1-0, won for the first time since last June 10, when he beat Kansas City 1-0 on a three-hitter.

Yankees 6, Mariners 2

Rookie Clay Parker pitched a five-hitter and struck out 10 in his third major-league start.

Parker, a 26-year-old right-hander, took a shutout into the ninth before Ken Griffey Jr. hit an inside-the-park homer. Parker, 2-0, walked two in his first major league complete game.

Rookie Bob Geren had a two-run single in the sixth inning that put the Yankees ahead 4-0 and a solo home run in the eighth, his second homer in two days.

Mark Langston, 4-5, allowed eight hits and five runs in 6 2-3 innings, striking out three and walking four.

Tigers 4, Royals 2

Fred Lynn had three hits, including a two-run double, leading Detroit to its first three-game sweep this season. Kansas City has lost four straight and 10 in a row at Tiger Stadium.

Paul Gibson, 2-3, allowed eight hits and struck out five in 6 1-3 innings. Guillermo Hernandez pitched the final 2 1-3 innings for his eighth save, striking out four.

Mark Gubicza, 3-4, pitched a six-hitter, struck out three and walked three in his third complete game.

Indians 2, Orioles 0

Rich Yett, Scott Bailes and Doug Jones combined on a five-hitter and Cleveland scored two unearned runs in the second inning.

Yett, 4-2, gave up three hits in six innings but strained his right tricep while pitching to Joe Orsulak, the final batter of the sixth. Yett finished the inning but was replaced by Bailes. Jones pitched 1 2-3 innings of hitless relief for his ninth save.

Brian Holton, 1-4, went six innings in his first start since April 17, 1987, when he pitched for Los Angeles at San Diego. He gave up eight hits and walked none in his longest major-league outing. He is 0-3 as a starter.

Blue Jays 9, White Sox 3

Nelson Liriano had three hits, including a go-ahead double in the sixth inning, and visiting Toronto swept the three-game series. Liriano went 9-for-11 in the three games as the Blue Jays improved to 5-1 under interim manager Cito Gaston.

George Bell and Ernie Whitt hit ninth-inning homers and John Cerutti, 1-2, won for the first time since beating Minnesota in July 27, 1988. Duane Ward pitched two hitless innings for his third save.

Melido Perez, 2-5, lost for the fourth time in five decisions.

Athletics 5, Red Sox 4

Dave Parker snapped a tie with a bases-loaded single in a four-run fifth inning as Oakland beat Roger Clemens.

With the Athletics trailing 3-1, Tony Phillips hit an RBI single and Ron Hassey homered to snap an 0-for-25 slump. Luis Polonia's single tied the score and Parker singled in two runs, extending his hitting streak to nine games.

Clemens, 2-3, allowed seven hits and struck out six in his fourth complete game.

Reliever Todd Burns, 3-0, pitched 3 2-3 innings and allowed four hits.

Aaron Kopping scattered four hits over six innings to lead Pizza Hutt to a 15-11 Greenville Little League Minor League baseball victory Sunday.

Pizza Hut trailed 9-2 early before scoring four runs in the fourth and nine more in the fifth to claim the win.

In the fifth, Seth Chased, who had two hits on the day, drove in one run and Miller Pearsall added a two-run homer.

Vantonia Council had three hits for Computerland.

Harris.....15
Sundrop.....14

Harris Supermarket built up an early lead and then held off a late charge by Sundrop, 15-14, in a Greenville Little League Minor League baseball game Sunday.

Lucretia Daniels and Michael Jackson had two hits for Harris. Jackson's two-run double along with an RBI double by Stephen Helms keyed Harris to a seven-run, first-inning lead. Jackson added an RBI single in the second on the way to three more Harris runs.

Sun Drop came back with five runs in the bottom of the first and six in the second to make it 11-10. But Harris scored four runs in the third to regain the lead for good.

Babe Ruth

Home Builders.....6
Pepsi.....4

Home Builders broke a 4-4 tie with a run in the fifth and went on to take a 6-4 win over Pepsi-Cola in a Babe Ruth League baseball action Sunday.

Barry Simo reached off an error in the fourth and later scored off another Pepsi miscue to give Home Builders a 5-4 lead. Chad Mills scored off an error in the sixth to complete the scoring.

Wallace Wins Winston ...

speed was 133.15 mph. He also picked up $40,000 in bonus money from the lucrative event that is run in three segments of 75, 50 and 10 laps.

Waltrip was leading in the next-to-last lap of the final 10-lap shootout when Wallace's car tapped him on the left rear fender as they came out of turn four.

"It's an ugly way to win," Waltrip said. "A lot of guys let greed overcome speed, and that's what happened. I got spun out. A guy drove underneath me and drove up into me and spun me out. It was pretty blatant."

Wallace said his car was stronger than Waltrip's but he had handling problems in the middle segment because of a mixup involving tires.

"We had our right-side tires on backwards," he said, adding that the problem was fixrd during the break before the final sprint.

During the first few laps of the shootout, Wallace got right on Waltrip's bumper but was unable to pass him. When the white flag about to fall, signifying the final lap, he made his move.

The bump was "just a normal racing accident," he said, adding that he barely touched Waltrip's fender.

"If anyone thinks it was such a bad crash they should look at my car," Wallace said. "There's no marks."

Wallace said he had no plans to talk to Waltrip this week as they prepare for Sunday's Coca-Cola 600.

"I don't think it would make any sense," he said. "I guess I'll just let you guys let him read it in the papers tomorrow."

Track officials designed the race with hopes that the finish would be close. They've gotten what they wanted — in its five runnings, The Winston has ended in controversy twice.

In 1987, Earnhardt won the race after he was involved in a paint-swapping encounter with Elliott and Geoff Bodine in the final 10 laps.

Last year was close but clean, as Terry Labonte edged out Sterling Marlin by less than one second.

The 1989 version was calm until the final minutes. It appeared that Waltrip, the 1985 winner, was going to hold off Wallace when he got up on his rear bumper.

"Now I know how Dale (Earnhardt) felt in 1987," Wallace said. "I feel a little uneasy now, especially after the fans booed me. I'm not even thinking about the money.

"I don't want him (Waltrip) to make me out as the bad guy," he added.

Elliott finished fourth and Alan Kulwicki was fifth. Marlin was sixth, followed by Waltrip, Ricky Rudd, Geoff Bodine and Greg Sacks.

The Winston's 20-car field was made up of the 19 most-recent winners of Winston Cup races and Marlin, the winner of the Winston Open, which was run earlier Sunday.

Kyle Petty was hospitalized after his car slammed the wall between the third and fourthp early in the race. He was released from Charlotte Memorial Hospital Sunday night after X-rays of his neck and back were negative.

Colonial ...

Nick Price, who started the day four shots back in second, cut the margin to two after only two holes but stumbled in with a 73 and settled for a fifth-place tie with Curtis Strange, 66, and Lon Hinkle, 68.

Simpson was almost a story unto himself.

Though eight shots back, he predicted on the eve of the final round that he could win with a 64 Sunday and that he just might do it.

"The Fat Lady may not sing to me, but I'm going to be close enough to hear her," he quipped, then proceeded to birdie four of the first six holes on Sunday. He went on to birdie the par-3 13th to go seven under and pull within two strokes of Baker-Finch.

The challenge died a swift, painful death when Simpson 3-putted the next hole for a double bogey.

"I knew what was going on," Baker-Finch admitted. "The heat was on when Simpson went to seven under."

The "turning point" for Baker-Finch came at the 14th hole. As the ball disappeared in the cup after a 10-foot par putt, he told himself, "This tournament is yours."

Until that point, he admitted, it was kind of touch and go, explaining that it was difficult to take a four-shot lead into the last round of a U.S. tour event, although he had won 10 foreign championships.

"All these thoughts were going through my mind," he said. "What should I be thinking about? Should I look at the leader board? Should I not look at the leader board?

Lakers-Suns ...

through the second half, and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar took a knee to his right hip and sat out the final four minutes.

"When your key guys are out, everybody out on the court has got to do something extra. You have to," said Woolridge, who scored 13 points, had seven rebounds, two blocked shots and three assists.

The bench "was the difference," Coach Pat Riley said. "All three guys did the job. O (Woolridge) was outstanding. He paid his rent today. Coop ran the offense very well.

"We know it's going to take eight men to beat these guys."

Cooper and Thompson had eight points apiece and Cooper added eight assists.

Scott had 24 points and A.C. Green 18 for the Lakers.

"Magic's been out before," said James Worthy, who led the Lakers with 32 points. "We've learned that we can't sit around and wait for him to come back. We have to keep playing and not worry. The bench was crucial; the guys played remarkably well."

Johnson had not fouled out of a playoff game since April 3, 1981, against Houston.

"It happened and we dealt with it," Johnson said. "The main thing is we won. I'll correct it next game."

Game 2 is Tuesday night at the Forum.

The Lakers have not lost since April 15, to the cross-town Clippers. They won their final five games of the regular season and are 8-0 in the playoffs. Their longest winning streak in the regular season was seven.

Additionally, they set an NBA record with their 10th straight playoff victory over two seasons, including the final two games of last year's Finals against Detroit.

Old-Line Movie Stars Will Star In NBC Movie Lineup

By Kathryn Baker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — NBC, the network of known quantities, has enlisted such tried-and-true stars as Doris Day, Loretta Young, Elizabeth Taylor and Anthony Quinn for a wave of star-driven, 1989-90 made-for-TV movies.

The word "reprise" occurs frequently in NBC's list of upcoming projects for the fall:

Jack Klugman and Tony Randall will reprise their roles as "The Odd Couple," the popular series inspired by the movie.

Randy Quaid will reprise his Emmy-nominated performance as Lyndon B. Johnson in "LBJ: The Presidential Years," a sequel to "LBJ: The Early Years." Patti Lupone returns as Lady Bird Johnson.

Also reprised is "Eight Is Enough." The Bradford clan will reunite for another reunion movie, this time "An Eight Is Enough Wedding."

Reprised, too, are fact-based dramas.

Daniel J. Travanti ("Hill Street Blues") stars as a prosecutor in "Howard Beach: Making the Case for Murder," based on the real-life racially motivated Queens attack.

NBC will make a miniseries about Drug Enforcement Agent Enrique "Kiki" Camarena, who was murdered by drug dealers. "Desperados: The 'Kiki' Camarena Story" will star Steven Bauer, Elizabeth Pena and Craig T. Nelson.

"Murder In Mississippi" will recount the final days of three civil rights workers murdered in 1963. The TV movie is something of a prequel to the Oscar-nominated film "Mississippi Burning," which was a fictionalized account of the investigation into the slayings.

"The Rock Hudson Story" will be told in a TV movie. No casting has been announced.

"Roxanne: The Prize Pulitzer" was to have aired this season, but was held over. It is based on Mrs. Pulitzer's autobiographical account of her messy divorce from Herbert "Pete" Pulitzer.

When not re-creating real-life stories, NBC's movies will be based on classics. There is a two-part miniseries of "Phantom of the Opera" in the offing. The miniseries is based on the Gaston Leroux novel, not the hit Broadway musical. Anthony Quinn will star in Ernest Hemingway's "The Old Man and the Sea." Elizabeth Taylor plays a faded movie queen and Mark Harmon the drifter she becomes involved with in Tennessee Williams' "Sweet Bird of Youth." Nicholas Roeg ("Track 29," "The Man Who Fell to Earth") directs in his television debut.

Loretta Young has been cast as "Lady in a Corner," a respected editor of an international magazine that an infamous publisher wants to take over.

Doris Day will star in the comedy "Running Mates," as a woman in a small, Southern California town who runs against an interloping movie star for mayor in order to stop his plan to turn the community into a tourist attraction — shades of Clint Eastwood who was elected mayor of Carmel, Calif.

In a new-season preview for advertisers last week, NBC Entertainment President Brandon Tartikoff showed clips of the five new series that will join the network's prime-time schedule and revealed some changes in returning shows.

"ALF" will be getting into comic trouble caring for the Tanners' new baby. The series will also get a new cast member, yet unnamed, who will play Willie Tanner's brother.

Lisa Bonet will return to the nest in "The Cosby Show." The spinoff she spun off to have a baby, "A Different World," will make a transition, too. Tartikoff says "a mystery wedding" will begin the season.

Rod Parker and Hal Cooper, producers on "Empty Nest," are going over to "Dear John," in an apparent effort to relieve tension on the set. Executive producer Ed. Weinberger will stay on.

Tartikoff stressed that the network has "the best bench since Johnny," referring to shows waiting in the wings. The network only needed four hours of new programming to fine-tune its No. 1 prime-time schedule. NBC will add two half-hour shows: "Nutt House," a slapstick Mel Brooks comedy with Harvey Korman and Cloris Leachman running a New York hotel; and "Sister Kate," starring Stephanie Beacham as a tough nun with a herd of orphans to manage. The one-hour new shows are "Baywatch," a lifeguard drama; "Hardball," a mismatched-partners cop show; and "Mancuso FBI," a spinoff of the political intrigue thriller "Favorite Son."

Crockett And Tubbs Turn In Their Badges

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Crockett and Tubbs solved their last case on NBC'S "Miami Vice," tossed in their badges after breaking all the rules and rode off, more or less, into the sunset alive and well.

The rumor was that either Sonny Crockett, played by Don Johnson, or Ricardo Tubbs, played by Philip Michael Thomas, would die in the final two-hour show, which was broadcast Sunday night. But both survived several gunfights, winding up five years on the air.

As the hip, stylish series ended, Tubbs was preparing to return to New York. Crockett was heading South.

Crockett said, "I'm going where the water's warm, the drinks are cold and I don't know the name of the players."

Their final case was a suicide mission to a Latin American country to snatch a dictator during a revolution. As usual, they were double-crossed at every turn, but still came out the winners.

In the finale, they took on federal agents trying to spirit the dictator away to freedom in violation of an agreement that he would turn informer on his drug-dealing partners.

Their own police chief was on the Colombian payroll and was killed. The dictator died as Crockett and Tubbs shot down his seaplane when it was taking off on the Miami waterfront.

"Miami Vice" made quite a splash with its debut in September 1984. Johnson and Thomas portrayed two dashing vice-squad detectives on Florida's Gold Coast. They dressed in expensive pastel-colored clothing, drove a Ferrari and solved their cases in glamorous settings to the accompaniment of pulsating rock music.

Johnson became a sex symbol as the macho detective who wore a three-day growth of beard and no socks. He parlayed his fame into a budding film career. Edward James Olmos also gained a movie career from his role as the mystical, taciturn Lt. Castillo.

The glitz soon wore off. After the first year, the stories became mere excuses for Crockett and Tubbs to tool around in nighttime Miami as the lights bounced off their Ferrari or as backdrops for the fashion show.

In the final season, at the insistence of NBC, the scripts were improved, but the ratings continued to slip.

At the beginning of the last season, executive producer Michael Mann made preparations to end the show. He said he wanted the series to go off in as stylish a manner as it had gone on.

Last season, Crockett married a rock singer, played by Sheena Easton, but after several shows she was killed. The current season opened with Crockett believing he actually was his undercover alter ego, drug dealer Sonny Burnett.

Guest stars on the series over the years included singers Phil Collins, Little Richard, James Brown, Ted Nugent and the Fat Boys. Convicted Watergate conspirator G. Gordon Liddy also made an appearance, as did Chrysler chairman Lee Iacocca.

Oprah Gives $1 Million

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — Talk show host Oprah Winfrey received an honorary doctorate from Morehouse College and gave $1 million to establish a scholarship at the private men's college.

"The world awaits what you have to give," she said after receiving an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters degree during commencement ceremonies Sunday. "The pressure is on."

Ms. Winfrey said she established the Oprah Winfrey Endowment Scholarship Fund because she felt she should share her good fortune. She chose Morehouse because the students and faculty treated her warmly during a January 1988 visit, including sending her a sweatshirt, she said.

"I wear that sweatshirt like I know everybody at Morehouse," she said. "Now that I have this doctorate, people are going to have to get a special dispensation to talk to me."

Networks Maintaining Their Coverage Of China Protests

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

The television blackout imposed by the Chinese was more like a brownout as of Sunday. Despite the government decree prohibiting newsgathering and the shutdown of satellite transmission facilities in the Chinese capital, American networks were continuing to shoot footage and were flying it out of Beijing to Tokyo and Hong Kong for relay to the United States.

"It's limited, and we can't do it frequently, but we hope to get more out," one network news executive said.

Some of the new material that showed up on television screens included scenes in Tiananmen Square, children playing around the tanks, protesters arguing their cause with soldiers, and students in trucks laughing and making the V-for-victory sign for the benefit of the cameras.

What was lacking was live video coverage, but that was made up in part by telephone reports from correspondents at the scene. Thanks to the ingenuity of editors, in some instances the telephoned reports were synchronized with the relayed video pictures, which gave almost the same impression as a live telecast.

The networks are walking a thin line between flouting Chinese authority and pursuing the story. Their ability to get away with it no doubt reflects the tenuousness of the situation in Beijing. As of Sunday, the military appeared reluctant to crack down on either the protesters or the press. The cameras were operating, and newspaper reporters were interviewing people, but there was no interference.

"We're shooting as much as we can and as often as we can and at the same time trying to keep from being hauled away by the troops," said a news executive from another network who did not want to be identified.

"They haven't restricted us as much as we thought they would," an executive from a third network said. "There's a lot of uncertainty, but we're taking one hour at a time. The ban is not really complete at all."

A network editor in Beijing said in a telephone interview that "police and undercover police sometimes ask us to move along and discourage us, but up till now the authorities have not been a problem." A newspaper reporter said, "I have my running shoes on, but I'm not altering my reporting techniques at all so far."

What news organizations worried about were the phone lines. As of Sunday evening, telephone communication was still open. The instant any news breaks, it is known back at headquarters in the states. If the Chinese cut off the phone lines, it would severely delay reports.

Since the government ordered the networks on Friday to shut down their satellite ground stations in Beijing, they have been flying their footage by courier to Tokyo and Hong Kong, where it is transmitted by satellite to the United States. Sometimes one network will carry another's material on a flight.

Horoscope — From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY May 23

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Seclusion is one way to help sort matters. You feel hassled, overburdened, and you need to rearrange your priorities.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Stay on the firing line, and don't pass the buck. Slow down, verbalize your feelings calmly, and stay close to those who need your affection.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): You have a lot going for you, but your talents need more focus. Stick with what you do well until you master what is new.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Fear of change is a concern. You may feel that your dreams for the future are unattainable. The mood will change shortly.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Negative energy can destroy financial projects. Pessimism is not your style. Be confident that everything will turn out in your favor.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Many of your ideas are wasted for lack of follow-up. Choices must be made on how to divide your time between career and family.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): You see the handwriting on the wall and must make career choices. Pass up transient affairs in exchange for concrete action.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Gear up for a busy week ahead. Be diplomatic and avoid insisting on getting your own way. Time and patience will win in the end.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Resolve a relationship problem with tact. Householders have scattered interests that are difficult to organize.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Focus on color, music and harmony. You may find yourself in a dreamy mood. Accept the rewards of past efforts.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Avoid a work overload and possible burnout. Your personality features confidence, an improved attitude, and determination.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Things are on the mend after an irritating situation subsides. Look your best when working with VIP's who have power over your future.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKJ1095 ♡J3 ◇876 ♣62
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—This is not a question of which game you want to play; it's a matter of whether there's a slam. Since partner might need reassurance about the quality of your spade suit, jump to four spades. That shows a very good suit with little or nothing on the side.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q94 ♡AJ7 ◇64 ♣AQJ98
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ◇	1 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—For his vulnerable one-spade overcall, partner should have a reasonable five-card suit and a fair hand. You have a very sound opening bid, and the combined assets should produce game. Jump to four spades.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠7 ♡AKQ5 ◇KQJ102 ♣873
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	2 ♣	2 ◇	3 ♣

What do you bid now?
A.—Since there is a strong likelihood that partner is short in clubs, prospects for game are bright, and it costs nothing to investigate an alternative contract en route. The way the auction has developed, partner could easily have a four- or even five-card heart suit. Bid three hearts. If partner doesn't raise hearts, we would take our chances in five diamonds.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K1095 ♡Q103 ◇K87 ♣K62
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—Your hand is worth more than 11 points in support of spades—your kings are undervalued in the point count, and your fourth trump must be upgraded 1 point. Despite your balanced shape, jump to three spades.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q10952 ♡8 ◇A982 ♣QJ7
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Ideally, you would like a bid such as three no spades to show a five-card suit and stoppers in the unbid suits. Since that is illegal, choose three no trump. The danger with three spades is that, if partner doesn't have three-card support, you could bypass your only makable game of three no trump.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ10 ♡853 ◇K105 ♣AQ82
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 NT	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ◇	Pass	4 ◇	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—Partner's auction is game-forcing, so a pass is out of the question. Your duty now is to show him one feature of your hand that he does not know about—your good spade fragment. Bid four spades. You can't have four-card support because you didn't raise immediately.

Leaderless Italy Set For Bush

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

ROME — President Bush will get a first-hand look at a polished but increasingly vexing Italian political merry-go-round this week when he comes from Washington to visit an ally without a government.

An American Embassy spokesman said Saturday that the substance of the three-day Bush visit would not be altered by Friday's resignation of Prime Minister Ciriaco De Mita. Italian observers, for their part, saw no chance that prideful politicians could resolve their squabbles to allow formation of a new government before Bush's arrival Friday.

De Mita, then, will greet Bush as caretaker while the battering search for a new leader swirls around them.

Since the list of De Mita's potential successors is almost identical to a list of his prime ministerial predecessors, not much will be lost in talks expected to focus around joint and sometimes fruitful Italian-American assaults against organized crime and drug trafficking.

Bush will also see Pope John Paul II in a rare Saturday evening audience at the Vatican, and will lead Memorial Day observances at an American military cemetery south of Rome before leaving Sunday for a North Atlantic Treaty Organization summit in Brussels.

Maneuvering to form the 49th Italian government since World War II will begin in earnest this week with consultations between President Francesco Cossiga and leaders of more than a dozen political parties represented in the Italian Parliament.

There seems little chance Cossiga will ask De Mita to form a new government and no chance that he would ask someone else to try before the Bush visit: no one wants to have to present Bush with both a caretaker prime minister and a prime minister designate

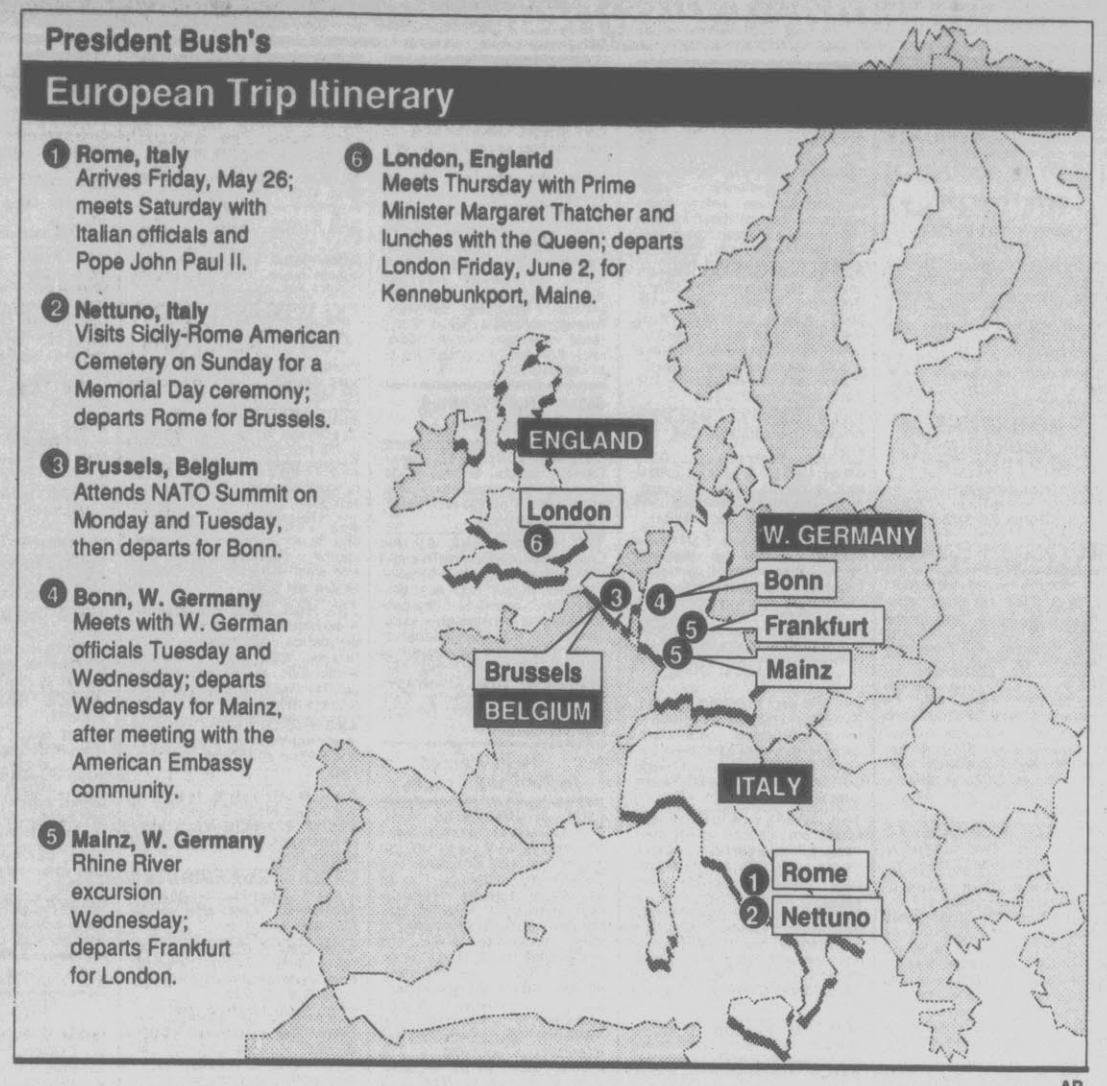

Amid an unprecedented wave of national development that has carried their country to the front rank of the world's industrial powers, Italians increasingly tell pollsters that they are embarrassed and fed up with a political system that seems wed to instability. De Mita, a 61-year-old Christian Democrat, took power last year hoping to remain in office until scheduled elections in 1992. He lasted 13 months, and even that is longer than the average life span of an Italian government in the last 40 years.

"We have reached the lowest point in a long history, filled with ambushes, daggers and poison, which does not serve Italy well in preparing for a new Europe," commentator Eugenio Scalfari noted Saturday. "The united Europe of 1992 is getting closer, but, with sovereign foolhardiness, we are moving in the opposite direction. Between the Alps and the Pyramids, we have, unfortunately, chosen Beirut as our model."

Holiday Traffic

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The N.C. State Motor Club predicted that 14 people will lose their lives and approximately 1,000 will suffer disabling injuries in traffic accidents on North Carolina streets and highways over the Memorial Day weekend.

The state will count its toll over a 78-hour period from 6 p.m. Friday, May 26 through midnight Monday, May 29.

Elected Officials Face Bribe Charges In Recruit Scandal

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — Prosecutors filed bribery charges today against two leading politicians, the first elected officials formally accused in the Recruit influence-peddling scandal.

Prosecutors said the two received donations and highly discounted stock shares from the Recruit Co. in exchange for using their political clout to help the company's magazine publishing business.

Charged were Takao Fujinami, 56, a former Cabinet minister and member of the governing Liberal Democratic Party, and Katsuya Ikeda, 52, former secretary general of the opposition Komeito, or Clean Government Party. They were not taken into custody.

The bribery charge carries a seven-year prison sentence.

Before today, 14 bureaucrats and businessmen had been charged in the scandal, which has eroded public trust in politics.

Last month, Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita said he would resign to take responsibility. The Liberal Democrats still are searching for a successor; most of the party's senior members have been linked to the scandal.

Prosecutors questioned Fujinami and Ikeda several times last week, and their homes and offices were searched on Thursday.

Ikeda, a former journalist and four-term member of Parliament's lower house, said in a statement today that the charges "are not the truth. They are a fabrication of reality."

Fujinami said today that he would resign from the governing party, Kyodo News Service reported. Ikeda announced last week he would resign from Komeito and Parliament.

Fujinami, the chief government spokesman in former Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone's Cabinet and an eight-term member of the lower house, was widely considered a rising star among Liberal Democrats.

He has acknowledged that an aide bought 12,000 shares of stock in a Recruit subsidiary at discounted prices in 1986 and then profited by about $215,000 when the stock was listed for public trading and rose rapidly in value. Fujinami used a portion of the profit to buy a house in Tokyo, according to news reports.

Fujinami, a former labor minister, also reportedly received about $640,000 in political donations from the company.

Ikeda has admitted that his brother bought 5,000 shares of stock in the Recruit subsidiary and profited by about $70,000. Ikeda allegedly received $100,000 in donations from Recruit.

Both politicians have denied personal involvement in the stock transactions.

Prosecutors say profits from the transactions were deposited in the politicians' bank accounts.

They say Ikeda and Fujinami used their political influence to persuade government officials to continue a "gentlemen's agreement" among government agencies and private companies on a uniform date for the hiring of graduating college students. Recruit believed the agreement was crucial for the sale of its employment magazines, prosecutors say.

NORTH CAROLINA
PITT COUNTY
NOTICE OF SALE
UNDER AND BY VIRTUE of the power of sale contained in a certain Deed of Trust executed by Daniel L. Blount, Sr. to Fred T. Mattox, Trustee, dated November 5, 1975, and recorded in Book B 44, Page 170, in the Office of the Register of Deeds of Pitt County, North Carolina default having been made in the payment of the indebtedness thereby secured and the said Deed of Trust being by the terms thereof subject to foreclosure, and the holder of the indebtedness thereby secured having demanded a foreclosure thereof for the purpose of satisfying said indebtedness, and the Clerk of the Court granting permission for the foreclosure, the undersigned Trustee will offer for sale at public auction to the highest bidder for cash at the Pitt County Courthouse Door in Greenville, North Carolina, at 12:00 Noon, on the 24th day of May, 1989, the land, including any improvements thereon, conveyed in said Deed of Trust, the same lying and being in Pitt County, North Carolina, and being more particularly described as follows:

That lot of land, lying and being situate in the Town of Greenville, Pitt County, North Carolina, and specifically described as follows: Being Lot No. 8 in Block "F" in the subdivision of the Higgs Bros. property in that section of the Town of Greenville known as west Greenville, as is designated on map of survey of said subdivision made by Dresbach and Clark as appearing of record in Book M-9, Page 257, in the Register's office in Pitt County, being the same lot No. 8 in Block "F" which was described in a deed executed by J.S. Twistall and wife to Nellie S. Williams by Deed dated February 1, 1910 and recorded in Book G-10, Page 413 of the Register's office of Pitt County reference to which said map and reference to which said deed is hereby made for a specific description. The Garage standing on the premises is excepted from the operation of this Deed and is property of W.E. Warren.

The record owners of the above described real property as reflected on the records in Pitt County, North Carolina not more than ten (10) days prior to the posting of this Notice are the heirs of Daniel L. Blount, Sr.

SUBJECT, however, to taxes, special assessments and prior encumbrances of record, if any.

Five percent (5%) of the amount of the highest bid must be deposited with the Trustee pending confirmation of the sale.

Dated this 9th day of May, 1989.
