Road Plan Could Bring New Jobs

A proposed $8.6 billion highway improvement program currently under discussion in the General Assembly would generate 26,007 new jobs annually, according to a study released today.

The study was prepared by The Road Information Program (TRIP), a non-profit organization based in Washington, D.C. Formed in 1971, TRIP researches, evaluates and distributes data on highway transportation issues. The group met with local officials today at a noon press conference in Greenville.

For every $100 million the state invests in its highways, 3,663 jobs are created, the study said.

TRIP found that 2,065 of those jobs would be in the construction industry; 468 in retail; 363 in services; 321 in manufacturing, and 446 in other industries.

In addition, every $100 million of investment generates $24 million in immediate benefits, such as new income, corporate and retail taxes and vehicle operating costs.

The bill before state lawmakers calls for the state to raise $8.6 billion over the next 12 years in order to expand and improve North Carolina highways. The plan is designed to put over 90 percent of the population within 10 miles of a four-lane road. Peter J. Fensel Jr., chairman of the Transportation Committee of the Wilmington Chamber of Commerce, said quality roadways are a key in attracting industry and sparking growth.

Between 1984 and 1988, new businesses in the state spent $11.1 billion establishing offices and plants. They hired 159,000 workers.

The TRIP study also indicated that increasing traffic on state roads is costing consumers. TRIP estimates that the average driver wastes $120 per year in motor fuel, excess tire wear and added repairs caused by poor roadways.

In metropolitan areas, drivers are wasting an additional $1,046 a year in lost time and extra fuel because of traffic backlogs, TRIP said.

Statewide, the number of automobiles on state highways jumped 32 percent from 1980 to 1987, and TRIP estimated that traffic will increase another 45 percent by the year 2000.

TRIP's sources for the study included the state Department of Transportation, the Department of Commerce, the Office of State Budget and Management, the Federal Highway Administration, the U.S. Department of Labor, the Internal Revenue Service and other government and private agencies.

Khomeini 'Satisfactory' After Surgery

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iranian revolutionary patriarch Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini underwent surgery today to stop internal bleeding in his digestive system, Tehran radio reported.

The radio broadcast a statement from Khomeini's office saying the 89-year-old Iranian leader was in satisfactory condition following the operation and that progress reports about his health would follow.

There have been persistent reports that Khomeini has been in poor health. He has been reported to be in frail condition since suffering a heart attack in 1986.

The statement from his office said:

"We inform the public that with the grace of God, and the attention of the hidden Imam, the operation on Imam Khomeini, which was undertaken Tuesday morning to stop bleeding in his digestive system, was successfully completed, and praise the Lord, his condition is completely satisfactory."

In Paris, Ayatollah Mehdi

Rouhani, spiritual leader of the European Shiite community, called The Associated Press to say he had information that Khomeini had "lost a great deal of blood" and was in "precarious" condition.

He would not say who his sources were or provide details.

Khomeini was last shown speaking on television, also monitored in Nicosia, during an audience with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze in February.

He seems fragile and slow moving in his frequent appearances on television, attending prayer audiences at the Jamaran mosque near his north Tehran home.

He lifts himself out of his chair after the meetings, but does not speak.

There have been scores of stories since the reported heart attack that he was dead or dying, with unconfirmed reports saying he has cancer of the prostate.

Aside from the audiences, Khomeini does not circulate in public outside his home.

House Panel Hears Wright Plea

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Jim Wright's defense opened before a national television audience today with his lawyer urging the House ethics committee to "stand in the way of the lynch mob" seeking the House speaker's resignation.

"According to the press, Jim Wright's through. He's got to resign his speakership. Maybe even his seat in Congress," said Stephen Susman, attorney for the Texas Democrat.

"Why worry about due process for a dead man?" he asked rhetorically. "Why should this committee stand in the way of a lynch mob or a conviction based upon guilt by association?"

Because "if a member of Congress cannot get a fair trial, ... no American can," he said.

Susman was asking the ethics committee today to dismiss key charges against Wright based on different interpretations of the House rules. Supporters hope for a narrow legal victory that the speaker could parlay into political salvation.

Wright's lawyers contend he is being judged by a new, harsher standard that goes far beyond the letter of House rules. In advance of today's hearing, they gave themselves no better than an even chance of winning dismissal of at least some of the 69 counts against him.

But with Wright's political support eroding under the weight of serious ethics charges, even the speaker's supporters emphasize the importance of persuading the ethics committee to drop at least one of the two main charges.

In the month since the panel formally made its charges against the speaker, his support has eroded. Members of his own party have begun holding meetings to discuss his case and its possible harmful effect on their own political situations.

The stakes in today's arguments were heightened by the ethics committee's decision to allow television coverage of the hearing. Rarely does the panel allow such open coverage, but Wright said he welcomed the chance to have his side of the story presented.

The C-SPAN cable network planned full coverage of the proceedings.

Wright himself was not scheduled to testify today, and his spokesman, Mark Johnson, said the speaker probably would not even attend the session.

Susman, a tough, 48-year-old litigator from Houston brought in this month to bolster the legal team, opened the proceeding for Wright.

Williamston Names Chief

WILLIAMSTON — The Williamston Board of Commissioners on Monday named a new police chief for the Martin County town.

Ronnie E. Avery, 49, a lieutenant with the Winter Park, Fla., police force, will take his new post on June 19.

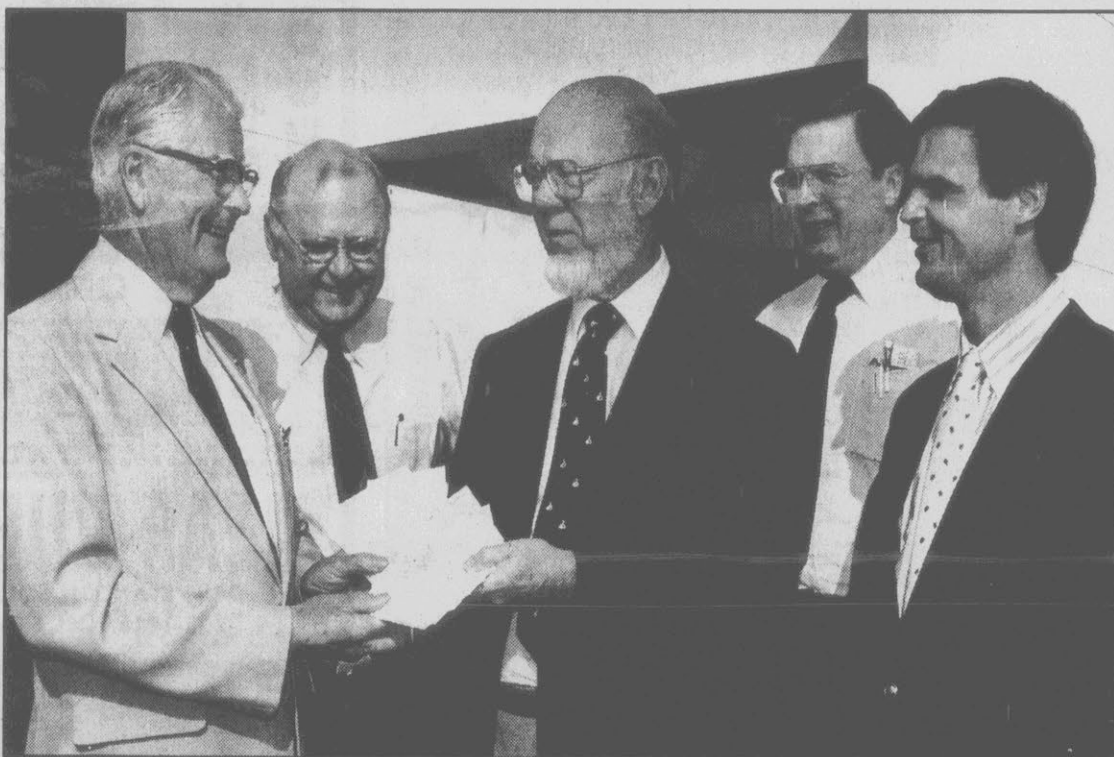

Avery will replace James David Thompson who was sentenced earlier this month to three years in prison after pleading guilty to firing a high-powered rifle into an occupied home in the Church's Crossroads community of Martin County.

Since Feb. 3, when Thompson was charged with the incident, Calvin Roberson has served as acting police chief in Williamston. Roberson is a captain with the police department.

According to Town Administrator John Boykin, the board chose Avery on Monday after interviewing four finalists for the job.

Avery decided to retire from his job in Florida, but "wants to keep active for 12 to 15 more years," Boykin said. Avery also has family members in the area, Boykin said, and began his career in law enforcement in New Bern in 1961.

The former chief pleaded guilty May 1 to the felony charge of firing into an occupied building. According to Martin County Sheriff Willie Rogers, a land dispute between Thompson's family and Charlie and Mavis Whitaker, the owners of the home, sparked the Christmas Eve drive-by shooting.

Private Physicians Pledge $320,000 To PCMH Drive

By Carol Tyer
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The privately practicing physicians at Pitt County Memorial Hospital have pledged the lead gift to "The Pride and the Challenge" hospital equipment endowment campaign with $320,000 raised to date, Dr. Jack W. Wilkerson, campaign division chairman, said this morning.

Harry Leslie, general chairman of the Pitt Memorial Hospital Foundation campaign said, "The privately practicing physicians have, by their exemplary support of this campaign, demonstrated that those closest to the need understand the importance of building an endowment fund to keep medical equipment state-of-the-art at Pitt Memorial."

Dr. Earl Trevathan, foundation chairman, said that the foundation launched the $1,750,000 "Pride and Challenge" campaign in January to establish an interest-earning endowment fund for medical equipment. Only the interest generated annually will be spent for equipment, while keeping the principal untouched, he said.

Leslie said that the lead gift joins other pacesetter campaign gifts already announced, including the Greenville Service League's $300,000; Burroughs Wellcome Company's $300,000, and hospital employees' gift of $297,303.51.

Dr. Michael D. Weaver, a privately practicing radiologist and a principal volunteer in securing the private physician gifts, said, "During the past 13 years, I have had daily contact with the hospital from the perspective of a physician. On several occasions, however, I have also had more subjective and personal experiences. My three children were born in this hospital and my mother-in-law had successful cerebral aneurysm surgery in 1985. I have also been a patient myself and know first-hand the fine care that patients receive here.

"Although I may live in Greenville another 30 years without similar situations, it is reassuring to know that such a fine facility exists in our county without having to travel approximately 100 miles for a similar level of care. Since we are all potentially dependent upon the hospital at any time, it is important that we support it through the Foundation Endowment which will provide necessary equipment for maintaining the current excellent level of care."

Court Denies Stay Of Drug Sentences

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Two Pitt County businessmen convicted a year ago of cocaine trafficking began serving their prison sentences today after a Superior Court judge refused to issue a stay that would have allowed them to remain free pending further appeals.

Judge George Green of Raleigh denied the motion filed by Jamie R. Taylor, 45, and Robert Lee Kite, 55. A Pitt County jury convicted both men in May 1988 on charges of possessing, transporting, delivering and selling more than 28 grams of cocaine. They were also convicted on three counts of conspiracy.

Judge George M. Fountain of Tarboro sentenced each man to 14 years in prison and fined each man $150,000. After the conviction, both men remained free on $250,000 bond pending an appeal.

Pitt District Attorney Tom Haigwood asked Green to announce his decision today so that the men could begin serving their prison terms immediately.

"We are opposed to the stay," Haigwood said in an interview. "They've been convicted by a jury, and the North Carolina Court of Appeals has affirmed the judgment of the trial court and the jury in an opinion written by the chief judge of the Court of Appeals (R.A. Hedrick)."

"It's the state's position they need to be in prison, now," he said.

Defense attorney Charles Hardee said Green's ruling will not affect plans to file a petition with the Supreme Court asking for further review. Kite and Taylor may file the petitions while serving their sentence.

"The stay was to try to keep them out of prison pending review by the Supreme Court," Hardee said.

Kite owns Evans Street Auto Service at 1525 S. Evans St., and Taylor is the former owner of Farr Carr Inc. an auto parts store at 1530 S. Evans St. At the time of the alleged drug transaction — May 1986 — the men owned the businesses.

On May 2, a three-member panel of the state Court of Appeals unanimously affirmed the trial court's decision in a nine-page opinion written by Hedrick. That judgment went into effect Monday, when Taylor and Kite were scheduled to surrender themselves to begin their sentences.

Prior to Monday, defense attorneys Hardee and Wayne Hardee, who both represented Kite at the trial, filed a petition with the state Supreme Court asking the court to stay the sentence.

The attorneys argued that Kite and Taylor should be allowed to remain free on bond while they filed a writ of certiorari, asking the Supreme Court to agree to review the case. Because the Court of Appeals ruling was unanimous, the defense attorneys were not allowed an automatic appeal.

S.C. Board Blocks Pardon For Longtime Fugitive

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Chances for a pardon for a woman who built a family and a career during 10 years in hiding from the law were dashed today when a state board refused her request to look into her case.

The State Department of Probation, Parole and Pardon Services rejected 5-2 Kay Smith's request for a pardon investigation, but gave her hope for an early release from prison by moving up her parole date.

It takes the approval of five members of the seven-person board to approve an investigation into a pardon. If the investigation would have been approved, then the board would consider actually granting the pardon and schedule another hearing.

"The hope we provide in this state is parole. I think that's a pretty good right," board vice chairman

Thomas Neal said during the 35-minute hearing.

The board moved up the parole date for Mrs. Smith, who did not attend the hearing, from April 1990 to Dec. 15 for work she has done while in prison.

If the pardon request from Mrs. Smith, 37, had been granted, she would be the first inmate other than a terminally ill one to be pardoned since at least the 1940s when the state constitution was amended.

In South Carolina, the governor does not have the power to grant pardons.

In 1975, Mrs. Smith, then known as Pamela Rodgers, was convicted in South Carolina on five counts of armed robbery and sentenced to 12 years in prison. She walked away from a work release program in 1978 and hitchhiked to Maryland.

During the next 10½ years, she earned her high school diploma, overcame drug and alcohol abuse, married Ray Smith, raised a foster child and two sons, and became a successful real estate agent.

But Mrs. Smith's happy life and her role as what others describe as "a model citizen" ended in May 1988 when she was arrested by authorities on a fugitive charge. Her previous husband, convicted of murder in Idaho, had tipped officials off to her whereabouts.

Mrs. Smith was returned to South Carolina to finish her original prison sentence and one additional year on the escape charge, to which she pleaded guilty. Under an interstate agreement, Mrs. Smith was transferred last fall to the Women's Correctional Institution in Jessup, Md., so she could be closer to home. She is currently in a medium-security unit at the facility.

Her attorney, Dick Harpootlian, asked the board to grant Mrs.

Smith's pardon request, saying she is not the woman she used to be.

"She changed. She's no longer Pamela Rodgers, she's Kay Smith," Harpootlian said. "You make judgments about what threatens a person poses to society. I suggest she poses no threat."

Mrs. Smith's mother, Jean Gilbert, also pleaded to the board to release her daughter.

"During this period she has been locked up again, her family has missed her but she is still the leader of the family. Without a leader in the home, a family can't stay together for long," Ms. Gilbert said.

Mrs. Smith's attorneys and family had been optimistic the board would grant her request for a pardon investigation.

"Her story is the most extraordinary story any of us has ever heard about someone who has ever rehabilitated herself," said Har-pootlian, her attorney in Columbia.

"Someone who was convicted of several armed robberies and a drug problem, on the run, took herself and pulled herself up by her bootstraps to become a productive member of society."

Her husband on Monday also expressed hope she would be released.

"There's no reason for her being in there other than just punishment," Smith said in a telephone interview from his home in Severn, Md. "She's made changes in her life, and it hasn't cost anyone anything except her."

Smith and his wife's two sons from her previous marriage, Dan Rodgers, 19, and James Rodgers, 17, drove to Columbia for the hearing but did not arrive until it was nearly over.

"It's going to be rougher now than it was," Smith said after the hearing. Overcome with emotion, he was unable to speak further.

"Mom will continue to be the leader of the family. That's just the way it is — she's going to continue to be the leader," Dan Rodgers said. "But there's a lot more strain on her now. She was really anticipating the outcome of this."

"I think she got her hopes up really high, and this is going to let her down pretty low. It's going to be a strain on the entire family," he said.

How They Voted

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes in the week ending May 19:

HOUSE

1990 BUDGET — The House passed, 241 for and 185 against, the conference report on the document (H Con Res 106) giving Congress spending, revenue and deficit targets for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1. The Senate followed suit and the 1990 budget (H Con Res 106) is now in effect.

The fiscal plan was developed by the Republican White House and Democratic Congress. It formalizes President Bush's pledge of no new taxes but projects $5.3 billion in largely unspecified new revenue.

The plan assumes spending of $1.17 trillion, revenue of $1.07 trillion and a deficit within the Gramm-Rudman law's $100 million target. All sides conceded it avoids tough fiscal decisions and that its goal of a $100 million deficit is wishful thinking. Members looking for a bright spot said the agreement shows the president and Congress can work harmoniously toward fiscal goals.

Members voting yes supported the fiscal 1990 budget. Representatives from North Carolina voting yes were: Walter Jones, D-1; Tim Valentine, D-2; David Price, D-4; Stephen Neal, D-5; Howard Coble, R-6; Charles Rose, D-7; W.G. Hefner, D-8; Alex McMillan, R-9; Cass Ballenger, R-10 and James Clarke, D-11. Martin Lancaster, D-3, voted no.

SENATE

JAPANESE PLANE DEAL — By a vote of 47 for and 52 against, the Senate refused to block an American-Japanese deal in which Japan will develop the FSX fighter plane for adding to its arsenal in the mid-1990s. This vote during debate on SJ Res 113 appeared to remove the major congressional obstacle to the deal.

Japan would finance a $6.5 billion upgrade of General Dynamics F-16 aircraft to its specifications, paying at least $2 billion of that sum into the U.S. economy. America would limit its transfer of aerospace knowhow and require Japan to protect any technological secrets it receives, among other conditions negotiated by the Reagan and Bush administrations.

Don Riegle, D-Mich., who voted to disapprove the deal, said "if we continue to...give away the strategic strength of this country, we will reach a point of no return, and we are very close to that today."

"We seem to be losing sight of the fact that Japan is our closest ally in the Pacific," said Malcom Wallop, R-Wyo., calling the deal good for America's national security and economy.

Senators voting yes wanted to kill the FSX deal with Japan. For North Carolina, Terry Sanford, D, and Jesse Helms, R, voted yes.

FSX AMENDMENT — By a vote of 72 for and 27 against, the Senate amended SJ Res 113 to place stricter conditions on the FSX warplane deal between America and Japan. The administration said the measure intruded into its constitutional power to negotiate with foreign countries.

The legislation recommends that Japan award American companies at least 40 percent of the FSX production and maintenance work, and restricts technology transfers to the Japanese.

Supporter Alan Dixon, D-Ill., said this spelling out of conditions sends "a powerful message to Japan that we feel this is a terribly flawed (FSX) agreement..."

Opponent Bob Dole, R-Kan., called the amendment "another way to kill the FSX deal."

Senators voting yes wanted to further restrict the Administration's FSX warplane deal with Japan. Sanford and Helms voted yes.

MINIMUM WAGE BILL — By a vote of 63 for and 37 against, the Senate sent to President Bush legislation (HR 2) raising the minimum wage for the first time since 1981 and beginning a subminimum or training wage for newcomers to the workforce.

The bill raises the federal wage floor from its present $3.35 an hour to $4.55 by October 1991, and provides newcomers with a training wage of 85 percent for the minimum. Those first-time workers would get the full minimum after 60 days.

President Bush was set to veto the bill because he favors a $4.25 top minimum and a training wage covering more novice workers for longer periods at a slightly lower hourly rate.

The Democratic-drafted bill was supported by organized labor and opposed by major business organizations.

Senators voting yes wanted to increase the minimum wage to $4.55 an hour. Sanford voted yes and Helms voted no.

BUDGET PLAN — The Senate voted 63 for and 37 against to give final congressional approval of the $1.17 trillion federal budget for fiscal 1990, a tentative guide for House and Senate spending, revenue and deficit decisions affecting the budget year beginning Oct. 1. Contents of the budget plan (H Con Res 106) are identical to those approved earlier in the week by the House.

The budget resolution also serves as an unofficial political document used by Congress and the White House to try to convince the public they are gaining control of the government's fiscal problems.

Senators voting yes supported the fiscal 1990 budget resolution. Sanford voted yes and Helms voted no.

Youth Charged

DURHAM (AP) — The state Highway Patrol has charged a Rougemont youth with manslaughter and driving while impaired in the death of another teen-ager who was impaled by a sign post.

Richard Paul Fowler, 17, died Sunday night in Durham County General Hospital, after 6 p.m. accident, said patrol Sgt. Raymond Isley.

Fowler, a passenger in the rear of a car, was injured by a sign post that was caught under the car and was rammed through the car's floorboard as the driver backed up, Isley said.

Driver Pervis Parrish, 19, ran off the shoulder and into a ditch, striking a road sign on a curve, Isley said. Parrish continued driving, dragging the sign under the car, another two-tenths of a mile, Isley said.

An ambulance took Fowler to Durham County General Hospital, where he died about 9:15 p.m. in surgery, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Another passenger, a 15-year-old boy, was in the car, but was not injured, Isley said.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Precarious

Be Careful, Don't Juggle

Budgeting isn't a juggling act.

Financial stability is purchased with careful dollars, not necessarily with abundant ones or craftily shifted ones. That's the maxim the state Senate has budgeted by for 50 years — and the maxim it is about the depart from if it adopts Sen. Kenneth Royall's spending plan.

Under that plan, North Carolina's teachers and state employees would get a deserved, overdue pay raise without an increase in taxes. Magic? Nope, just some world class juggling that takes the political heat off legislators and gambles that the state's economy will improve.

Royall's plan proposes to take an estimated $159 million in windfall taxes from the sale of RJR-Nabisco stock to partially fund the $308 million in salary increases. The remainder would come from a shift in the state's income tax structure and a tax amnesty program.

Sounds simple and painless to the taxpayer, but there's one big liability.

It's a juggling act of the plainest kind.

The plan proposes to pay for a continuing expense — one that will recur year after year — with revenue that's only expected for one year. That is unsound fiscal policy. It depends on one-time revenue to pay bills that will keep on coming long after that revenue is exhausted. It doesn't take a financial wizard to understand that recurring expenses — salaries, maintenance, etc. — should be funded by permanent revenue sources — taxes, fees, etc. One-time revenue such as the RJR windfall is best spend on one-time expenses — construction, emergency measures and the like.

Such an approach to budgeting is unfair to taxpayers, who may be duped into thinking they won't have to foot the bill for salary increases. The public may not get hit with a tax increase this year, but surely it will when the notice for the pay raises comes due and the RJR tax windfall is gone.

What such juggling does is get state lawmakers off the hook where a tax raises is concerned — for now.

A shortfall in expected revenue has put North Carolina in a penny-pinching position in a year when needs threaten to overflow the budget pot. By shuffling one-time monies to a pay for a permanent expense in 1989-90, lawmakers are hoping — and gambling — that the revenue shortage is a temporary phenomenon. By next year, they're saying, the state will have enough money to absorb this additional expense.

But there is no proof the shortfall will end. Taking a chance that it will is merely a short-term solution that is inequitable to taxpayers.

Cautious budgeting has kept North Carolina fiscally sound for half a century. Lawmakers put the right dollars next to the right line item. The same logic should be applied to the salary increases. A careful, proven approach should not be abandoned for a plan that makes the taxpayer part of a juggling act.

'Financial stability is purchased with careful dollars, not necessarily with abundant ones or craftily shifted ones.'

To the editor:

In a free and democratic society such as ours, we citizens should always allow ourselves the time for calm reasoning and assessment of the merits of whatever issues concern us, including the prosecution of Oliver North. I, for one, do not believe that it is "time for indignation at that part of Congress which produced the situation in which Col. North acted in defense of his country." In fact, I believe, that not only is this previous statement completely erroneous, it also has no basis in reality.

I would not regard the sale of arms to a country as hostile to us as Iran an act in our defense. Wasn't there something recently in the news about one of the more "moderate" voices from this country decreeing that five Americans should die for every Muslim? Were these the elements regarded as "moderate," to which Oliver North wanted to peddle arms? This is the act of a hero defending his country? I would describe these acts as the behavior of a scoundrel or a traitor, not a hero.

And let us not forget that the most serious charges against Oliver North were thrown out. And I do believe that the good Colonel was only following orders from his superiors, who, while remaining mute throughout the unfolding of the scandal and ensuing trial(s), have almost indicted themselves. Remember that Oliver North's star witness for the defense never testified. And remember our current chief executive's Roger Aile's inspired method of obfuscation when asked about his role in the scandal.

George Bush needn't worry, however, because he has obtained iron clad impeachment insurance in the name of Dan Quayle.

To the editor:

The California Achievement Test Scores (CAT Scores) are in, and the schools are notifying parents that they can come to pick them up.

But I wonder how many schools are notifying parents that their child must be re-tested if there's more than a 25 point difference in the language and/or math scores, compared with those same scores from the previous year. Also, a child can be re-tested if there's at least a 15 point difference if a parent requests it.

Why is this important? In the elementary school, these scores are used for math and language arts placement - or to determine at what "level" the child will be placed in these classes.

As a parent, I feel that the schools should notify us in writing of such important information, then all children will have the same opportunities.

Wahl-Coates will be doing this. What about the other elementaries?

A New Kind Of Courting

Art
Buchwald

It was in all the papers. A young woman in Palm Beach, Fla., named Tomontra Mangrum was stood up by her 17-year-old date who had promised to take her to the high school prom. Tomontra did what any jilted young woman would do — she filed a lawsuit to recoup the cost of her new shoes, her hairdo plus the flowers for her hair.

Wait, there is more... The defendant, Marlon Shadd, says that he had fractured his ankle and had informed Miss Mangrum a week before that he would not be able to take her to the dance.

It must be obvious to anyone reading this that the only way this dispute can be resolved is to turn it over to the lawyers.

Something about this story was familiar. My mind went back to my youth when the situation was very different from the one we have now. Those were the Roosevelt years when many more men than women were stood up. I can remember at least 10 — no, make it 12 — occasions when I arrived at a young woman's door only to be informed by her father that she had already left for the evening.

In those days, corsages did not grow on trees — nor did tickets to the Paramount Theater on Broadway. We're talking about five bucks for the entire package, but they were 1940 dollars, worth about $100,000 today.

Yet, no matter how cruel the rejection, the last thing I would have done in that distant time and place would have been to sue the girl who wasn't there. The fact is I respected her for seeing through me, and for giving me a lower opinion of myself than I had ever had before.

It just wasn't in teen-agers to seek out a lawyer's help to resolve our lovers' quarrels. Most of us didn't even know a lawyer, which is more than can be said for the affluent kids of today, who usually have one attorney living on either side of them.

Instead of taking our case to court, we suffered — sometimes for weeks and, if it was serious enough, even a month. We wove fantasies in which we went off to join the Navy, came back in uniform and then refused to dance with the girl who had broken our heart. We never wanted monetary satisfaction — we only wanted the one who had wronged us to weep tears and beg forgiveness.

Those of us who grew up in the '40s, '50s and even '60s did not wish for a black-robed judge to mete out justice against the person who had stood us up. We dealt with our sorrow alone.

So back to Miss Mangrum who, I am sure, is quite lovely. Yet, according to Marlon, she suffers from a communication problem. The reason that her suit has today's parents unnerved is that young people are breaking dates all the time, and if they're going to be dragged into court for it, they'll never get their homework done.

In More Ways Than One, The New Day Begins In The East

WASHINGTON — In June 1987, a Western diplomat stationed in East Berlin went to the infamous wall and held his breath. Something momentous was happening. The music from a rock concert in West Berlin had drawn hundreds of East Berliners to the wall. They surged towards the music shouting "The wall must go," but then, rebuffed, changed their direction and their chant. Marching on the Soviet Embassy, they shouted, "Gorbachev, Gorbachev." As China has proved, the Soviet leader is the Pied Piper of revolution.

In Germany, the authorities soon regained control and a dangerous moment passed. But the diplomat wondered what would have happened if East Berlin youths had tried to get to the west and, even more perilously, West Berliners had tried to help them? In his poem "The Second Coming," William Butler Yeats may have provided the answer: "Things fall apart; the center cannot hold."

Richard
Cohen

That incident was a precursor of what was to happen in China — another reminder that the collapse of the old order can bring unpredictable consequences. But events in China, for all their drama, are somewhat peripheral. China is no threat to the west. None of its missiles can reach an American city.

Not so the Soviet Union. Internally, it is in turmoil and, maybe more ominously, its Eastern European empire is convulsing. As in China, reform has yet to produce tangible results. As in China, a young generation is restless, both heady on democracy and too young to have experienced the penalties for dissent. In both areas, this yearning for both democracy and material goods is expressed by what the Germans call "Gorby fever," a romantic, naive idolization of the Soviet leader.

China also showed the power of television. As Marshall McLuan might have put it, when the authorities lost control of the medium, they lost control of the message. After Chinese journalists insisted on covering events in Tiananmen Square, all China could see what was going on. It is no accident that before troops moved in, the authorities pulled the plug. Unlike Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley in 1968, the Chinese authorities cared that the whole world was watching.

Together, we have a combustible mixture: Gorbachev and television. If anything, the two have even more impact in Eastern Europe. (East Germans, for instance, can watch West German television.) The more Gorbachev relents, the more he shreds the Iron Curtain, the greater the chances that the explosively unpredictable will happen — and the reaction to it, both in the West and the East, will be equally unpredictable.

But among the images television brought us last week, one in particular, jarred: President Bush playing golf at Kennebunkport. Surely this President, a wordly man, knows the old order is collapsing. But he has chosen the role of a spectator who seems, really, befuddled by world events. He has reason. As leader of a triumphant democracy, he visited China and had the impact of an ordinary tourist. Gorbachev made the same trip and nothing has been the same since.

The more Gorbachev liberalizes, the more unpredictable the situation becomes. We do not know how the Soviets will react to threatening, as opposed to benign, reforms in Eastern Europe. We no longer know what they perceive as essential. It no longer seems to be one-party governments in their old satellites. It is no longer orthodox communism. What, then, is it? Maybe even Gorbachev does not know. For understandable reasons, Bush moves cautiously.

But the fear the Bush administration has expressed is not of the unknown, but of the known: the old Russian game of saying one thing and doing another or of reverting to a Stalin-style regime. The real threat to world peace, though, is that none of that will happen. Instead, the danger is that the collapse of the old Soviet empire will trigger an explosive event: a China in Eastern Europe that will catch both the United States and the Soviet Union by surprise.

By failing to enunciate what is sometimes called a world view.

the President only adds to the uncertainty. What do we want? What shall the new world look like? In the case of Gorbachev, it's not even clear if we are willing to work with him, against him or both. Do we wish him well or do we, instead, long for his failure and thus a return to the more predictable superpower arrangement? The structure that the Cold War provided the Western alliance has been removed. In its place is not even the scaffolding of a new idea.

The incident at the Berlin wall was a warning. Nowadays, the chant of "Gorbachev" might be taken up by West Berliners as well. Deprived of leadership, they might take matters into their own hands. It happened in China, and it could happen in Europe. In more than one way, the new day begins in the East.

The scholarship honors Bobb and his wife, Christine, and remembers their son, Aaron, who died of cancer at age 3 in 1981. It awards grants-in-aid to the continuing student-athlete at who has the highest grade point average each year.

"The endowed scholarship is also recognition of Nelson's outstanding work at UNCG and his commitment to the student-athlete concept," said Deborah A. Yow, UNCG associate director of athletics for public affairs.

UNCG has maintained one of the highest graduation rates of its student-athletes among the institutions of the University of North Carolina system.

But thanks to Shawn Mehall of Dudley and Terry Toner of La Grange, two fourth graders at Spring Creek School, Daniels got his money back Monday.

Daniels, who lives in Winston-Salem, said he was in Raleigh to attend a car auction when he lost the cash. He was carrying cash because he did not know how much the car would be and couldn't write a traveler's check.

The boys were on a field trip to the Legislature when they found the money and reported it to police.

As a reward, Daniels is giving Shawn and Terry $200 each and will give Ms. Smith's fourth grade class a $150 pizza party.

"I wish I could do more," said Daniels. "It speaks very well of the parents and educators about the character of these kids."

Duke Fine

ATLANTA (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission staff on Monday proposed a $75,000 fine against Duke Power Co. for alleged violations of NRC requirements at the utility's Catawba nuclear plant near Rock Hill, S.C.

During an inspection from Nov. 27, 1988, through Feb. 4, 1989, NRC inspectors identified two significant failures to comply with NRC regulatory requirements.

The first violation involved the breakdown of a hydrogen skimmer system due to an electrical wiring error during the January 1988 installation of a station modification.

The second violation stemmed from the company's failure to report the degraded safety system for 10 months after its discovery.

Duke Power has 30 days in which to either pay the civil penalty or to protest the fine.

Fatal Fire

ROXBORO (AP) — A Roxboro woman died in a fire at her home Sunday, and two firefighters were injured battling the blaze in eastern Person County.

Wille Hayes Gentry, 53, is believed to have died of smoke inhalation, said Sheriff Ernest Dixon. Firefighters responded to the fire at about 10 p.m. and were at the scene until about 2 a.m. Monday.

One firefighter was injured and taken to Person Memorial Hospital where he was kept overnight for observation, and another was treated for a minor injury and released.

The house was destroyed, and authorities said the cause of the fire was under investigation.

Drug Runners Taking Other Roads To Avoid Police Crackdown On I-95

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — Drug runners are fanning out across North Carolina after a crackdown on Interstate 95, making an already tough battle even tougher for law enforcement officials, authorities say.

"It's getting more difficult all the time," said Charles Dunn, deputy director of the State Bureau of Investigation in Raleigh. "We're seeing more sophisticated operations and more violent operations. I'm seeing a smarter drug dealer coming into the state."

Traffickers' travel habits began to change in 1986 when the federal Drug Enforcement Administration initiated Operation Pipeline — a nationwide program designed to reduce interstate drug traffic.

During that year, the Highway Patrol confiscated 17.3 pounds of cocaine, 450 pounds of marijuana and $357,072 in cash through Operation Pipeline along I-95 alone, statistics show.

In 1988 the patrol netted 76.3 pounds of cocaine, 208 pounds of marijuana and $602,410 in cash along interstates throughout North Carolina.

"As a result of this concerted effort, traffickers have changed their routes," said Maj. W.A. Ballard, head of a drug special emphasis team for the North Carolina Highway Patrol.

"I know we're nowhere near getting it all," he said. "But hopefully, we're getting the smugglers' attention. When they change locations, we change locations. We have to adjust as they adjust."

"We're not saying traffickers are no longer using I-95, because we are still making arrests," he said. "There's been a decrease in the amount of drugs confiscated on I-95 in the Carolinas, and there's been an increase in the amounts confiscated on I-85 and I-40."

Those adjustments also have led traffickers and law enforcement officers to rural roads, said Detective Phillip Little of the Bladen County Sheriff's Department.

Reports show Robeson County, through which I-95 runs, made 494 drug-related arrests in 1986 and 522 in 1987. State officials had not compiled 1988 figures as of May 10.

Little said not many arrests in Bladen County were made along I-95, but law enforcement officials know traffickers used the interstate and then switched to rural roads.

Little said investigators learned that traffickers would come from Florida on I-95, get on U.S. 701 to bypass Cumberland and Robeson counties and get back on I-95 near Smithfield.

A large number of drug arrests have been made between Fayetteville, Lillington and Smithfield, according to Wilmington Drug Enforcement Administration agent Skip Garcia. The cities are linked by I-95, U.S. 301 and N.C. 210.

U.S. 74, a main artery that extends east to west across I-95, I-85 and I-77 and leads into Wilmington and near Jacksonville, also is a popular route, Little said. U.S. 76 runs from Florence, S.C., and across I-95, and it merges with U.S. 74 in Columbus County. Traffickers in Bladen County have been arrested after getting on 74 and 76 from 95, then switching to 701, Little said.

N.C. 87 near the border of Columbus and Brunswick counties also is a popular route, he said. The road links with I-95 in Hope Mills just south of Fayetteville and travels east for nearly 60 miles through Bladen County to Wilmington.

Drugs are moved through Robeson County by people coming from Florida who take U.S. 74 to Charlotte, and by others who head east on U.S. 74 to Wilmington, said Burnis Wilkins, a Robeson County sheriff's detective.

A large amount of the drugs that pass through Bladen County are destined for other locations, and there have been arrests in connection with such activities, Little said.

Jose Acosta, 56, of Miami was arrested last June and charged with drug distribution after officials traced drugs routed from Florida, through Bladen County and on to Myrtle Beach, S.C. Acosta was released on $75,000 bond.

"During a two-year span, we arrested eight people who were getting drugs ... for transporting drugs through Bladen County," Little said.

In February, before Acosta was to go on trial in Bladen County, he was arrested in Miami and charged with trafficking in cocaine, Little said. He's in the Bladen County Jail under $500,000 bond, awaiting a May 30 court date.

Carter Says U.S. Should Support China Movement

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — Former President Jimmy Carter acknowledges that it isn't customary for world leaders to encourage an insurrection, but he says the Bush administration should begin to show that it supports a more democratic form of government in China.

"I think no matter what happens, China is going to make a major step toward democracy," Carter said in Charlotte Monday, after helping dedicate a park that bears his name.

"I would predict that they would be reluctant to have bloodshed because, among other things, the army is not going to attack their own people," Carter said.

"But I think that (Bush) could certainly let it be known increasingly as time goes on that we do indeed support the move toward democracy and freedom," he said.

Chinese students began leading the protests on April 15 to demand talks with the government on bringing democratic reforms and ending official profiteering. But now the students — bolstered by widespread support their movement has won from the populace — are pressing for the resignations of Li and senior leader Deng Xiaoping.

The protests reached a zenith last week during the historic visit to China by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, whose social reforms are admired by reform-minded Chinese.

Students began a hunger strike May 13, two days before Gorbachev's arrival. The populace embraced the students' cause and poured into the streets, resulting in crowds estimated at more than 1 million.

Carter spoke at the dedication of a park adjacent to homes that were built by Habitat for Humanity volunteers. Carter, a member of the organization, also toured one of the homes that he helped build.

"Everything looks really nice," he said. "The properties have been maintained. The grounds look good. Nothing has deteriorated."

"In all the Habitat cities we've revisited, it is obvious the lives of people have transformed for the better. They have an investment and their pride has spread throughout the communities."

The former president suggested the idea of building a park when construction began on the homes in 1987.

The Charlotte project was the fourth straight summer effort that Carter had headed for Habitat for Humanity. Several hundred volunteers from around the country helped with the project.

The homeowners helped build the houses and bought them from Habitat for Humanity through no-interest loans.

Carter and his wife, Rosalynn, said Monday that the Charlotte project has become a model for other Habitat projects.

The former president said they visit — and have participated in — others throughout the United States and in other countries, none of which has had more success than Charlotte.

"And (the commitment) is not only sustained, but it is constantly growing," he said. Charlotte, he added, has the potential "to become the first community in the whole United States to succeed in eliminating poverty housing."

Already, the Charlotte Habitat affiliate is the country's largest, with 50 houses completed, 49 in Optimist Park and one in neighboring Belmont, the group's current target.

Gas Prices Up 17.4 Pct.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Motorists can expect to pay 17 cents a gallon more to fill up their tanks for the Memorial Day holiday than they did just nine weeks earlier at Easter, the American Automobile Association says.

It's the steepest price increase between holidays in nine years, AAA said Monday. The price per gallon jumped 19.1 cents between Christmas 1979 and Easter 1980.

The average price of a gallon of gasoline has risen to $1.254 compared to $1.08 at Easter, the AAA said. Last Memorial Day, gasoline averaged $1.088.

New Jersey has the lowest average prices, $1.124 a gallon, and Nevada the highest, $1.374 a gallon.

AAA's Fuel Gauge Report is based on a survey of nearly 5,400 stations along major U.S. routes.

Despite the price increase, the auto club said it expects 24 million motorists to take to the road over Memorial Day weekend for a trip of 100 miles or more.

TV Show Leads To Man's Arrest

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — A man who fled to Arizona before his sentencing has begun serving a 7- to 21-year prison term for the biggest Medicaid fraud in history, thanks to a tipster who turned him in after seeing the case on a TV show.

Sheldon Weinberg, convicted of stealing $16 million, was imprisoned Monday after five months as a fugitive.

Officials received hundreds of leads on his whereabouts after his case was featured on NBC's "Unsolved Mysteries." One call led FBI agents to Scottsdale, Ariz., where Weinberg and his wife were living under assumed names.

Weinberg, 69, was returned to New York on Friday and brought to court Monday. He was deeply tanned and made no statement during the proceeding before Justice Ruth Moskowitz, who had sentenced him in absentia.

"I do not consider this a white-collar crime," Moskowitz said. "It is a crime of violence to all the people of New York City. It is a crime of violence to the Medicaid recipients who should be receiving the best medical care."

Weinberg and his two sons were convicted Nov. 30 of defrauding Medicaid by submitting phony reimbursement claims from the health clinic they operated.

Deputy state Attorney General Edward J. Kuriansky said Weinberg used the money to finance an $18,000-a-month New York apartment, a $5 million lakefront mansion in Boca Raton, Fla., yachts and a fleet of custom cars.

Ex-Executive To Plead Guilty

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DALLAS — A former savings and loan executive has agreed to plead guilty to federal charges he took part in a scheme to donate thrift funds to House Speaker Jim Wright and other politicians, court records show.

Federal law forbids corporate contributions to politicians.

Pat L. Malone, former executive vice president of Vernon Savings, admitted setting up a system that used thrift funds to reimburse Vernon employees for making $55,000 in political contributions in 1986, according to a criminal information filed in federal court.

The documents show Malone agreed to plead guilty to bank fraud charges.

Court records show donations included unspecified contributions to Wright and $2,000 to 1986 Texas Tribune, a political committee set up to seek donations for the Texas Democrat.

Court records show other contributions included $2,000 to Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah; $1,000 to Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif.; $3,000 to the gubernatorial campaign of former Rep. Tom Loeffler of Texas, and unspecified contributions to Rep. Bill Lowrey, D-Calif., and former Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y.

Skyscraper May Be Tallest Unit

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — A developer wants to turn the Sears Tower into the world's second-tallest building.

Miglin-Beitler Developments Inc. announced plans Monday for a slender, 125-story skyscraper resembling a rocket emerging from the Loop. The 1,914-foot structure would eclipse by 400 feet the Sears Tower, the tallest building in the world.

The developer did not indicate how much the concrete and steel-reinforced skyscraper would cost.

Plans for the building have been submitted for approval to the Chicago Plan Commission.

Planning Commissioner David Mosen said his first impression is "it is a handsome building, but I can't take an official position until we get a chance to study it."

Construction could begin by December and could be completed by mid-1992, the developer said.

The building, being designed by architect Cesar Pelli, of New Haven, Conn., would contain 1.2 million square feet of office space, only about one-third the rentable space of the Sears Tower.

Storm Damages Trailer Sales Lot

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RUTHERFORDTON, N.C. — A storm in Rutherford County Monday damaged a mobile home sales lot in Rutherford County and stopped traffic into Forest City, officials said, but no injuries were reported.

Witnesses said the storm severely damaged five trailers at Applegate Mobile Homes Sales and Parts. Damage also was reported in the Holly Springs neighborhood, where several house fires broke out after the storm, officials said.

Damage also was reported to the Silver Pines mobile home park in Forest City.

Officials said traffic into Forest City was blocked from the west side of town by fallen trees and power lines.

The storm knocked out power to hundreds of Rutherford County homes and businesses.

The National Weather Service issued a warning Monday night about heavy thunderstorms extending from Hendersonville to Boone and warned that the storms could produce flooding in low-lying areas.

The storms came just over two weeks after tornadoes and storms swept across the Piedmont May 5 and May 6, causing $103 million in damage in 17 North Carolina counties. Five people were killed.

Two men have been missing since May 6, when their boat capsized during a storm on Lake Norman.

Study Indicates One In Every 500 College Students Has AIDS Infection

By Susan Okie
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — The first large study to determine the rate of AIDS infection on college campuses found that about one in every 500 students was infected with the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV), health officials reported Monday.

If the results of the anonymous blood-testing survey on 19 campuses reflect the situation at colleges around the country, about 25,000 of the country's 12.5 million college students are infected with the virus, said Richard P. Keeling, director of student health services at the University of Virginia and president of the American College Health Association.

The overall rate of infection,

0.20 percent, is slightly higher than the 0.14 percent infection rate reported for military recruits and is comparable to rates found by the Centers for Disease Control in hospitalized patients and in pregnant women giving birth, said Helene Gayle, a medical epidemiologist with the CDC.

Keeling said the infection rate was higher than expected from preliminary studies. "We are more disturbed than heartened," he said. Because of patterns of sexual activity and drug use among college students, he added, "it is possible that there could be further significant spread of HIV in this population."

Of 16,861 blood samples in the study, 30 tested positive, indicating infection with the virus. Twenty-eight of the 30 positive samples were from male students, said Gayle. She said the overall percentages of male and female students tested were not available.

For the study, blood samples collected for other purposes at 19 student health services — most of them at large public universities in different regions of the country — were anonymously tested for HIV infection. Students were informed that a study was being conducted, but because "blind" samples were submitted, there was no way to identify or inform those who tested positive.

Ten of the 19 schools had no positive blood samples. Samples from five schools showed infection rates of 0.40 percent or higher. The highest rate found was 0.90 percent. Keeling said that because of administrators' concerns about the negative impact of having a high infection rate, the study was designed so that no one involved would be able to match infection rates with specific schools.

Gayle said the infection rate of one in 500 could be an overestimate or an underestimate. For example, students undergoing blood tests may have been sicker than the campus population as a whole. Alternatively, students who believed themselves infected might have avoided the campus health service because of concern about lack of confidentiality.

"It gives an idea of what ballpark we are dealing with," she said. "We can probably say it (the infection rate) isn't much more than, say, one percent" on campuses nationwide.

Homosexual Unions Recognized By Law

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — Gay rights advocates hailed a unanimous vote by the city's Board of Supervisors to adopt a domestic partnership law recognizing the unions of homosexuals and unmarried heterosexual couples.

The supervisors voted 10-0 with one member absent Monday to approve an ordinance allowing unmarried couples, homosexual or heterosexual, to register with the city as domestic partners. They also urged the mayor to consider extending health benefits to live-in lovers of city employees.

The legislation, a first for a major U.S. city, faces a second procedural vote next week before going to Mayor Art Agnos, who has said he will sign it.

Homosexual rights groups gave cautious praise to the legislation. "It's an important first step," said Roberta Achtenberg, executive director of the National Center for Lesbian Rights. "There is no one piece of legislation that could've gone far enough."

The precise benefits of the legislation remain unclear because no one knows if health care benefits will ultimately become available to domestic partners of city employees, she said. Still, she predicted that many homosexual and unmarried heterosexual couples will register.

The Roman Catholic Church helped defeat a similar proposal in 1982. But after Monday's vote, Deacon Norman Phillips of the San Francisco Archdiocese expressed resignation.

"We could always hope that it wasn't going to happen, but I think sensibly, it looked like it was going to," Phillips said. "I think our hope would be that they might reconsider."

The church is opposed to the "pseudo-marriage" provision of the legislation, although it supports the extension of civil rights benefits and health coverage, Phillips said.

But some advocates complained that while the burdens of domestic partnership are substantial under the ordinance — including becoming responsible for each other's basic living expenses — the benefits remain somewhat unclear.

Board of Supervisors President Harry Britt, author of the measure and a leader of the city's politically powerful gay community, acknowledged the doubts but was confident nevertheless.

"There are still obstacles ahead of us, in terms of working out the health insurance part of this," said Britt. "We're sure we can do it, and that we can do it without any negative effects on anybody. It's not going to cost the taxpayers any money."

Some city employees worry that health care premiums could rise if the cost of insuring domestic partners — including AIDS patients, in the city with the highest per capita number of such patients in the nation — drains city funds. Health and insurance officials, however, claim the newly eligible people will have a negligible effect on the city because employees' dependents must pay monthly premiums of about $150.

Despite the criticisms, Britt spoke passionately of the fundamental right of people to pursue love on their own terms.

"If my heart tells me and your heart tells you that we should share our lives together and take care of one another ... the government has no business telling us that we're going to be discriminated against," he said.

"I hope that other cities around the country ... will be looking at ways to change their laws to reflect the reality of the way people live," Britt said.

A few other cities, including Berkeley, across the San Francisco Bay, have adopted policies extending health benefits to live-in lovers, and 219 couples in West Hollywood, have registered since 1985 for a domestic partnership certificate.

San Francisco would be the first major metropolitan city to allow non-married couples to register their relationships as traditional couples file marriage licenses.

The law defines domestic partners as any "two people who have chosen to share one another's lives in an intimate and committed relationship." The "Declaration of Domestic Partnership" form would be filed with the county clerk for a $35 fee.

Under the partnership law, 25,000 city workers would be entitled to the same bereavement leave that is accorded married couples, and hospital visitation rights would extend to live-in lovers.

Helms Satisfied

RALEIGH (AP) — President Bush has taken appropriate action in dealing with political unrest in Panama by sending troops into the Central American nation, U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., says.

"I don't think we could afford not to do whatever is essential to protect our people and those people down there who yearn for freedom and our canal, which was unwise to give away 10 or 12 years ago," Helms said in a weekend interview.

Helms has repeatedly called for the United States to rescind the Panama Canal Treaty.

House Members Took In $5.9 Million In Honoraria For Speeches, Articles

By Larry Margasak
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The honoraria system that narrowly avoided extinction earlier this year cranked out nearly $5.9 million in 1988 for House members who wrote articles and gave speeches to special-interest groups.

The honoraria figures, compiled by the public interest group Common Cause, came from the annual House financial disclosure statements that were released Monday.

The final honoraria figures for the year could surpass the 1987 total of $6.7 million once financial disclosure forms are received from an additional 20 lawmakers. The 20 reports not yet available included that of House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., the 1987 honoraria leader with $245,000.

The annual disclosure forms filed by all 535 members of Congress provide a look at members' wealth and outside income. Each form lists a member's money received, assets and liabilities. The Senate reports were released last Friday.

Rank-and-file House members were allowed to keep $26,850 in honoraria in 1988 — leaders slightly more. The amount over the limit, more than $1 million, was donated to charity while nearly $4.8 million was kept for personal use.

Most lawmakers also supplemented their $89,500 salaries with investments, while others made money in more unorthodox ways.

Rep. Ben Nighthorse Campbell, D-Colo., a Northern Cheyenne Indian, earned $5,000 last year for his jewelry designs.

Rep. Tom McMillen, D-Md., a former National Basketball Association player, received deferred income totaling $45,000 from the Washington Bullets and Atlanta Hawks.

House Speaker Jim Wright, facing House ethics committee charges of 69 rules violations, reported income between $188,183 and $203,579 and assets ranging from $31,005-$100,000. These figures do not include holdings in a blind trust established by Wright in 1987. Those assets and the income they produced were not available Monday.

The speaker earned $30,000 in honoraria, a figure eclipsed by 45 other House members who filed on Monday.

Wright paid off debts totaling between $105,000 and $220,000, including money he owed to his former investment partnership, Mallightco, and a bank.

The special counsel to the ethics committee said Wright satisfied these notes with money he made from his share of an oil and gas investment that is still under investigation by the panel.

Not everything was revealed by House members.

Rep. Floyd Spence, R-S.C., noted that the ethics committee waived the reporting of wedding gifts in a letter dated Dec. 16, 1988. Spence, a widower, got married last July 3 in a hospital room while recovering from a double lung transplant.

House Republican Whip Newt Gingrich of Georgia, who said his assets are no more than $45,000, did not list any royalties in 1988 from his book, "Window of Opportunity."

A complaint is pending before the House ethics committee in connection with a limited partnership formed in 1984 to promote the book.

The honoraria system was in jeopardy early this year, when House leaders were ready to abolish it and institute other reforms in return for a 51 percent pay raise. The effort collapsed when a furious public let lawmakers know they opposed the increase.

The fees of $2,000 a speech are controversial because invitations usually come from special-interest groups courting lawmakers, and because often the events are held at resorts where members and their spouses can enjoy free vacations.

Factory Orders Jump In April

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Orders for factories for "big ticket" durable goods shot up 2.9 percent in April, the best showing in four months, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said orders for durable goods, items expected to last at least three years, rose to a seasonally adjusted $129.1 billion last month after climbing 1 percent in March and declining during the first two months of the year.

The report reflected renewed demand in all major industry categories after broad weakness earlier this year. The biggest increase came in orders for electrical machinery, up 9.4 percent to $20 billion.

Last month's 2.9 percent increase was the biggest since a 7.4 percent jump recorded last December.

Orders reached a high of $132.1 billion in December, but have yet to return to that level after the downturns in January and February.

Analysts had cited the first-quarter weakness in orders for durable goods as evidence that growth has begun to slow as the economy extends into the seventh year of a record peacetime expansion.

U.S. Setting Tough Stance Against Israeli Annexation

By Barry Schweid
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration is gradually prescribing a Middle East settlement that excludes Israeli control over the occupied West Bank and Gaza, telling Israel to "forswear annexation."

In a speech Monday, Secretary of State James A. Baker III also demanded an end to further settlement of Jews on the land taken by Israel in the Six-Day War of 1967.

The speech followed statements by President Bush last month ruling out Israeli sovereignty over the territories.

Baker mixed in demands that the Arabs accept Israel, end their economic boycott of the Jewish state and repudiate the 1975 U.N. General Assembly resolution equating Zionism with racism.

Baker called for "full recognition of Israel as a neighbor and partner in trade and human contact."

He also advised the Palestinians to abandon the "illusion" of controlling all of Palestine. Baker's reference was to Israeli territory apart from the West Bank and Gaza.

The West Bank and Gaza, which Jordan and Egypt lost to Israel in the Six-Day War, are predominantly Arab. But since Israel took control Jews have been establishing settlements there.

Baker urged Israel to "stop settlement activity," which apparently would rule out expanding current Jewish settlements as well as starting new ones. And his demand to "forswear annexation" would rule out incorporating any of the territory into Israel.

"The United States does not support annexation or permanent Israeli control of the West Bank and Gaza, nor do we support the creation of an independent Palestinian state," Baker said.

The speech was delivered to the American Israel Public Affairs Committee, a private research and lobbying group, just before Baker met at the State Department with Israeli Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

Rabin said his meeting with Baker concentrated on trying to implement Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's proposal for elections to select Palestinian leaders to negotiate self-rule on the West Bank and in Gaza.

Today, Shamir rejected Baker's criticism of Israel's policy of continuing to support new Jewish settlements in the occupied lands, including Baker's statement that "Now is the time to lay aside, once and for all, the unrealistic vision of a greater Israel."

Shamir, interviewed by Israel radio, said, "I don't know how anyone could speak at all of a large Israel. Israel is a very small country and all of us know that its territory is very limited. It really rings ironic to speak of Israel as big."

Shamir, who was on a visit to London, said, "It is clear there are differences of opinion between us and that isn't new. I don't see any link between settlements and the subject of the peace process."

Rabin said he had not read Baker's speech. But later, he told Israeli reporters he wished Baker had directed more of the speech to the Palestinians.

Today, Rabin meets with members of Congress and attends a dinner at Blair House hosted by Defense Secretary Dick Cheney. He sees Bush on Wednesday.

Baker's approach to the Arab-Israeli conflict is different from past U.S. administrations in that he has not put forward a U.S. plan for negotiations or settlement.

Instead, Baker has given lukewarm support to Shamir's proposal for elections to be followed by negotiations on an overall settlement.

"Neither the United States nor any other party, inside or outside, can or will dictate an outcome," he said.

However, Baker added: "We do have an idea about the reasonable middle ground to which a settlement should be directed." And he went on to state the administration's position on several controversial issues.

"Now is the time to lay aside, once and for all, the unrealistic vision of a greater Israel," he said.

Baker also called for the reopening of schools in the occupied ter-

Latin Ministers Heading To Panama For OAS Mediation

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three Latin American foreign ministers, fulfilling a mandate from the Organization of American States, headed to Panama today to promote a democratic transfer of power.

Panamanian authorities have promised to cooperate with the mediators but Bush administration officials said initial comments by Panamanian authorities have not been encouraging.

A pro-government party in Panama said Monday it wants the OAS to focus on U.S. "aggression" against Panama.

The foreign minister of Trinidad and Tobago, Sahadeo Basdeo, arrived Monday night and said the delegation is "not here to interfere with the internal affairs of Panama. We came as friends and neighbors."

The other two, from Ecuador and Guatemala, were to fly separately to Panama and planned to join OAS Secretary General Joao Baena Soares of Brazil.

OAS foreign ministers last week blamed Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega for "the grave events and abuses" in Panama following the failed election process in that country earlier this month.

After a vote count that international observers said was marred by massive fraud, Panama's electoral tribunal threw out the results. The Bush administration has maintained that the opposition slate, based on an independent count, won the election by a 3-1 margin.

Opposition candidates subsequently were beaten and bloodied by Noriega supporters during a post-election demonstration.

The United States claims that Noriega has disrupted constitutional processes on two occasions in 15 months. The first was the ouster of then-President Eric Arturo Delvalle in February 1988 and the second was what the administration says was the theft and subsequent annulment of the May 7 election.

In addition to Baena Soares, the delegation is made up of the foreign minister of Ecuador, Diego Cordovez; of Trinidad, Sahadeo Basdeo; and of Guatemala, Mario Palencia.

The OAS resolution calls for the mediators to "secure a national accord, within democratic mechanisms and in the shortest time possible, to ensure the transfer of power with full respect for the sovereign will of the Panamanian people."

The tentative plan is for the ministers to report back to their OAS colleagues on June 6. If Panamanian authorities show no interest in complying with the spirit of the OAS resolution, the Bush administration is expected to support an escalation of OAS pressure against Noriega.

A U.S. official, insisting on anonymity, said Monday that Noriega has raised the possibility of resolving the crisis by inviting opposition presidential candidate Guillermo Endara to join a three-member junta. The other members would be Noriega allies.

"Noriega is proposing one of you and two of us," said the official, suggesting that any such proposal would not be acceptable to OAS ministers.

The opposition's three top candidates, seeking recognition of their victory claim in the election, shook hands and passed out leaflets in Panama Monday welcoming the OAS delegation.

"The OAS will not solve all our problems, but it will create the environment. They have come to investigate," said Endara.

A pro-government party Monday criticized the OAS for condemning Noriega and said its delegation could not mediate among Panamanians.

"We call on the OAS to adopt a virile attitude toward aggression against our people by the United States," said a statement issued by the Revolutionary Democratic Party, the largest pro-government group.

Noriega and his allies have consistently maintained that Panama's problems stem from a systematic U.S. effort to subvert the country's democratic process, citing accounts of a $10 million CIA contribution to the opposition coalition.

Airports Receive Warning

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MUNICH, West Germany — Authorities have issued a warning about possible attacks on airliners and have ordered airports in the country to tighten security, officials said today.

The warning came less than a week after a Frankfurt court convicted Mohammed Ali Hamadi, a Lebanese Shiite Moslem, of murder and air piracy in the 1985 hijacking of a TWA airliner and sentenced him to life imprisonment.

Officials said after Wednesday's verdict that Hamadi's sentence raised the danger of attacks by terrorists on West German airports.

The latest warning did not specify the reasons for the alert. It came shortly before the start of the busy summer tourist season that further strains the nation's already crowded major airports.

The warning was disclosed in a statement released by the Bavarian Transport Ministry. It said the warning came from the federal Interior Ministry and was sent to all West German regional authorities and airports in the country.

"The danger of attacks against air traffic has risen recently," the Bavarian statement said, summarizing the information it had received from federal security officials.

The statement did not say if authorities had specific information about an impending attack.

Bernd Lenze, spokesman for the Bavarian Transport Ministry, declined to discuss the reasons that led to tighter airport security.

Lenze also refused to give details about the security measures authorities were taking.

But the statement said airport security staff were told to conduct more elaborate inspections of luggage and passengers will have to count on longer check-in times.

After the verdict in Hamadi's trial, the West German Foreign Ministry warned its diplomats to be on the alert for possible retaliation.

Newspaper reports also said authorities were on the lookout for possible terrorist action at home following Hamadi's sentencing.

The Frankfurt court ruled that Hamadi was a member of Hezbollah, or Party of God. The radical Shiite Moslem group is backed by Iran and is believed to be holding Western hostages in Beirut.

The court said Hamadi had been in contact with Hezbollah terrorists operating in Europe before his arrest at Frankfurt airport in January 1987. Hamadi was convicted of the hijacking and slaying of U.S. Navy diver Robert Stethem.

Two West German relief workers are still missing in Lebanon after reportedly being kidnapped the day before Hamadi's sentencing.

A terrorist bombing is believed responsible for the Dec. 7 crash of Pan Am Flight 103, which blew up over Lockerbie, Scotland, killing 270 people. The flight originated in Frankfurt and changed planes in London.

Germans Re-Elect President

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BONN, West Germany — President Richard von Weizsaecker was re-elected today to a second term as head of state in the first uncontested presidential vote in the nation's history.

A special assembly of legislators and appointed electors that is convened every five years re-elected the 69-year-old Christian Democrat with 881 votes of the 1,022 cast, or 86.2 percent.

Each of the five political parties represented in the federal parliament was entitled to nominate a candidate. That none did was largely a reflection of the respect Weizsaecker has won.

He was endorsed by all but the far-left Greens Party.

Weizsaecker, a member of Chancellor Helmut Kohl's conservative Christian Democratic Union, has transformed the largely ceremonial post of president into an influential position of elder statesman.

Parliament President Rita Suessmuth opened the federal convention in Bonn's sprawling Beethoven Hall with words of praise for Weizsaecker, the sixth man to serve as West German president since the nation was founded on May 24, 1949.

Korean Protests Bring 200 Arrests

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEOUL, South Korea — The government deployed about 10,000 riot police today to block protests by radical students calling for the expulsion of U.S. troops in South Korea. Authorities said 200 people were arrested.

Thousands of riot troops in green combat fatigues blanketed the center of Seoul, standing guard along main streets and ringing the U.S. Embassy and key government buildings. Students who tried to attend the rally at city hall were seized and there were no reports of any incidents.

Police headquarters said about 200 radicals had been arrested.

Troops conducted spot checks on many streets, questioning and searching people and taking away suspects. Police patrols roamed subway stations in the city center to stop students from gathering.

Radical students staged peaceful campus protests earlier today at 16 colleges in Seoul on the second day of a week of anti-American protests. Students marched or held rallies, but there were no reports of fighting.

Students at Sungkyunkwang University tried to push through lines of riot police, but were held back. Students from the school staged a protest march dressed as skeletons and microbes to symbolize U.S. nuclear and chemical weapons.

"Drive out the Yankees" and "Down with the dictatorship," protesters chanted.

The Foreign Ministry issued a strong statement today criticizing radical students for burning U.S. flags at campus protests on Monday. Ministry spokesman Chang Hoon said such acts must stop.

"Defaming a nation's flag is a deplorable act," he said.

Accidental Discovery May End Obesity

Blocks calorie absorption

SWEDEN—Medical researchers at the University of Kuopio, in Finland, have discovered (accidentally) a new weight-loss formula. The new discovery enables an overweight individual to lose pounds and fatty tissue without dieting or exercise.

Scientists made the discovery while searching for a formula to lower cholesterol. In a controlled study of a test group of people, cholesterol levels remained unchanged but the doctors were astounded to find that every patient who used the formula lost weight. The published report of this study stated, "A highly significant decrease in body weight was seen" in patients who received the formula.

The formula was then tested in Sweden at Sahlgren Hospital, University of Goteborg. Again, all patients lost a substantial amount of weight even though they did not change their eating habits. The report detailing this study, published in the British Journal of Nutrition, stated: "Body weight was significantly reduced even though the patients were specifically asked not to alter their dietary habits". One patient in this study lost more than 30 pounds.

According to one informed source, the active ingredient comes from a 100% natural botanical source and contains no drugs or stimulants. When taken before mealtime it bonds with the food you eat and "ties up" calories, preventing their absorption.

A substantial portion of the calories ingested therefore pass through the digestive system unabsorbed. The body has to get energy to replace the lost calories, so it starts to burn stored fat. The result is rapid body weight loss. Extensive clinical tests have verified the safety of this formula for long-term use.

The formula is marketed in tablet form in the United States under the trade name Cal-Ban 3000. A firm located in Tampa, Florida, has exclusive North American distribution rights. A review of the customer files of this company revealed the names of hundreds of people who have lost as much as 20, 40 or 60 or more pounds overall with Cal-Ban 3000. Your Mental Health Techniques Help Cut Stress For Many Working Mothers

Raymond E. Webster

The American family has undergone significant changes during the past 30 years. Many of these changes have occurred because of the need for mothers to work to provide additional income and because of the number of single-parent homes headed by the mother.

A variety of social problems, such as school failure, drug/alcohol addiction, and delinquency, have been attributed to these changes. But blaming mothers for having to leave their roles in the home has only produced feelings of guilt, anxiety and apprehension in those mothers.

The latest evidence shows that single-parent families headed by a mother and families where both parents must work do not have children with more social or school problems. In fact, recent evidence shows that child behavior problems most often are the result of continued and unresolved verbal and/or physical conflicts between the parents, mental illness in one of the parents, the effects of poverty on the family or limited education of the parents.

The mere absence of a father or the presence of a single or working mother do not appear to explain why children misbehave. Instead, stresses stemming from personal conflict in the home are often at the root of adjustment problems in children.

A mother's attitude is one very important element related to stress for both children and the mother. If a mother believes that her role is in the home, then being deprived of that role will create a conflict for her. Naturally, emotional and personal stress evolve from the conflict.

Similarly, a woman who quits her job to raise children because others tell her to will also experience feelings of conflict, anger and guilt. These feelings result naturally when someone is forced into a role contrary to what she sees for herself.

If a woman must work outside the home because of economic reasons, it is important that she learn some effective techniques to limit the effects of job-related stresses on her home life. The home life should not be contaminated by work stress, because life will gradually and quietly become one continuous series of problems, conflicts and dissatisfying relationships.

As dissatisfaction increases, so will personal problems and feelings of anger, guilt and anxiety.

Before arriving home after a work day it would be ideal if everyone could spend 20 to 30 minutes alone or in a low stimulation setting to put work day problems aside. But, real life time limits and demands usually make such a time impossible, especially for working mothers, who must balance the demands of multiple responsibilities.

The obvious alternative is to set up a work day so that more demanding activities occur as early as possible. As the work day nears end, and especially during the last 30 minutes, try for low stimulation from demanding work assignments and a minimum number of stressful interactions with others.

Regardless of your work setting, these general ideas can be useful if you are creative and committed to controlling the effects of job stress on you and your family.

On the way home, try not to rush through traffic to finish errands. There are few things in this world that cannot wait a few minutes. Is it worth the personal stress and irritation to arrive some place two minutes earlier if you must drive faster than the speed limit, tailgate other cars or run traffic lights and stop signs? Time yourself to see how much time you actually save with these tactics as compared with driving in a more relaxed style. You may be quite surprised.

When you do get home, try to limit the amount of stimulation. Don't turn on the television. Sit with your child, have a glass of juice and talk about the day's activities. It may produce some unexpected rewards. Listening to and sharing with each other are very important to strengthening personal ties.

Finally, make stress management and reduction a priority, especially if you must maintain a family and a job.

Each of us can find many excuses as to why we cannot slow down or give ourself better treatment, but these excuses can lead to some very unpleasant situations in a family where members feel alone, misunderstood and not part of a group which accepts and respects them as individuals.

Engagement Ring Lacks Sparkle

Dear Abby: My problem is too embarrassing to discuss with friends or family, so here goes:

I am a single, 40-year-old professional woman who enjoyed being single until last year when I met "Barry." He is my age — also a professional person — and we hit it off the minute we met. We love each other very much and plan to marry soon.

Well, Barry gave me an engagement ring last week, but I'm not wearing it for two reasons. First, it has a 14-karat gold mounting, and I must be allergic to the metal because I started to break out on my finger after wearing it for only a few hours. Also — and I know this is going to sound terrible, but I'll be perfectly honest — that ring is a terrible disappointment. Abby, it's one-fifth of a carat. Barry said he insured it for $500. I am a large woman with large hands, and this diamond looks so small you need a microscope to see it.

If that's all he could afford, I wouldn't mind, but this man is very successful — I'm talking a $200,000-a-year income!

Dear Abby

Is there anything I can (or should) do about this? I would like a ring I can be proud to wear. — Disappointed

Dear Disappointed: Be candid with Barry. Tell him you had an allergic reaction to the metal, and also that you would like a larger diamond, since he can afford it. Offer to accompany him to the jewelry store when he returns it to ask if he can trade it in for one with a larger stone. (The jeweler will be glad to accommodate him — and how!) Yes, I know it's the "thought" that counts, but a fine diamond ring is also an investment. Diamonds are forever.

Dear Abby: Just before my 17th birthday, I got pregnant. The baby's father was 18 and irresponsible, so I kept "Todd," and my parents are raising him. I worked and continued my education. I even graduated from college.

I am 22 now and am going with a wonderful young man who wants to marry me. "Ray" doesn't know that Todd is my son. Ray has met my parents and believes that Todd is my kid brother. (Todd calls my parents "Mommy and Papa" and he calls me "Sissie.") I know this is wrong and I'm not proud of it, but I've lied about it for so long, I'm in too deep to get out.

My parents think I should tell Ray the truth, but I'm afraid if he knows I lied about my son, he will lose all trust in me and say goodbye.

Abby, please tell me how to get out of this mess without losing the most wonderful man I have ever known. — "Sissie"

Dear Sissie: Face reality. You can't go on living a lie for the rest of your life. Now is the time to tell Ray that the little boy who is living with your parents is in fact your son. And if Ray is the wonderful man you say he is, I doubt if you will lose him. But if you do, then you never really had him.

one of the most beautiful afghans in creation.

My friend has now passed away. I would like to give this lovely afghan to her daughter because I feel her mother's handiwork would have great sentimental value for her. Would it be improper for me to offer it to her? — Holding Off In Houston

Dear Holding Off: Handmade articles often become family heirlooms. By all means, give her the afghan. It will warm her body — and her heart.

Trademarks Step Back In Time

I call it the Grecian Formula syndrome. Every 15 or 20 years, designers of those trademark personalities who appear on food products turn back the clock. Sometimes it's just a simple brush stroke removing a line here and there, but instead of getting older, the characters all regress. The designers think these obscure changes won't be noticed.

In 1986, Betty Crocker had her sixth face-lift, her ears pierced and her hair moussed because, as a spokesman for General Mills said, "She's been a little too grandmotherly looking."

Betty and I started out together. Today I buy moisturizer by the case and Betty's face has the elasticity of an Ace bandage. I noticed.

Remember when a Ben Franklin look-alike smiled back from your oatmeal box? Well, that was before they took away his glasses and gave him blue contact lenses. I noticed.

Aunt Jemima, a 100-year-old trademark, is appearing in July with a "more contemporary look." The bandanna goes; the capped teeth stay. The excess poundage she lost in 1968 has stayed off. She gets a new lace collar and sports a pair of pearl earrings. (Possibly a serious present from Uncle Ben on the rice box.) Designers still want her to look like she "knows her way around a kitchen."

At Wits End Erma Bombeck

My personal favorite would be a frazzled woman suffering from smoke inhalation turning off the smoke alarm. That's a woman who knows her way around a kitchen.

If box and can designers really want to set back the clock, they should go to work on the babies advertising diapers. Is it my imagination, or are they getting older? Some are shown with a full set of teeth and should have been toilet-trained years ago.

The point is, if they keep tampering with these people, 2010 will see a whole group of unlikely trademarks.

I visualize the Mrs. Butterworth syrup bottle as a Barbie doll clone with a waist so small you'll have to force the syrup through with a lighted candle under it. Mr. Clean, after a series of hair plugs, will emerge with so much hair he can braid it. The Campbell Soup twins will regress to a stroller. I fully expect the Pillsbury Doughboy to drop 60 pounds and wear jeans.

Why don't the creators of these mythical people trust us to understand the aging process? If the little girl on the Morton Salt box is widowed and lives in a condo in Fort Myers, Fla., I can handle it. If the Smith Brothers died 20 years ago, I can handle it. If Peter Pan has bad dentures and no longer eats peanut butter ... I can't handle it.

Court

However, on Friday, the Supreme Court denied the stay.

On Monday, the Hardees were joined in court by Greenville attorney Robert R. Browning, a former Supreme Court justice, and the lawyers asked Green to grant a stay pending the appeal to the Supreme Court. Browning was brought in to assist with the case because of his experience at the appellate level, Charles Hardee said.

Green took the issue under advisement and ruled this morning, denying the defendant's motion and ordering them placed in custody of the Pitt Sheriff pending transfer to the state Department of Corrections.

He said he spoke Monday with James Exum Jr., chief justice of the state Supreme Court, to ask for "advice and sense of direction." After the discussion, Green said he concluded that he has the authority to grant the stay, but he chose not to do so.

"I would not, as a Superior Court judge, feel comfortable granting this stay when the Supreme Court of North Carolina has denied it," Green said.

After the Supreme Court receives the motion, the state will be allowed to file a response. Then the Supreme Court will consider the briefs and issue a decision at a later date.

J. Gregory Wallace, clerk of the Supreme Court, said the court receives about 600 petitions a year, most of which are for some type of discretionary review. The court agrees to review between 10 and 15 percent of those cases, he said.

The state operates with two systems, but both are similar. Defendants may file a petition for discretionary review within 15 days of judgment, he said, which would have been Monday for Kite or Taylor.

Or, defendants may file a writ of certiorari, which also requests that the court grant a review. However, the writ may be filed after the 15-day time limit or when there is no appropriate avenue of appeal, he said.

If the court does grant the motion, that only opens a new stage of review. It does not necessarily mean any lower court decision has been overturned, he said.

"That means they will be allowed to go into briefing stages. It will be treated as an appeal," he said. "It's not necessarily granting a release."

Students Will Press On In Beijing

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — Student leaders, sensing an intense political struggle in the government over their huge protest, decided today to continue the massive demonstrations that have paralyzed the capital.

Despite exhaustion and some thinning of ranks, hundreds of thousands of people defied martial law for a fifth straight day and stayed in the streets of Beijing and Tiananmen Square. Similar crowds were reported in Shanghai, China's largest city.

Rumor and innuendo filled Beijing. Reports said that conservative Premier Li Peng and the more liberal Communist Party chief, Zhao Ziyang, were battling for control.

Authorities today lifted a martial law ban on foreign network coverage of the Beijing protests and satellite feeds resumed. Television transmissions had been cut Saturday.

The famed portrait of Mao Tse-tung in Tiananmen Square was splattered with paint today as hundreds of thousands of students, intellectuals and workers marched nearby, demanding Li step down.

The vandalism of Mao's gigantic portrait with red, black and blue paint by two young men was akin to blasphemy and an isolated incident in a remarkably peaceful popular rebellion that has galvanized much of the country.

A Chinese journalist who saw the attack said the two, wearing the white headbands of student protesters, were seized by students.

Workers later covered the painting with a tarp.

The student movement, launched last month with marches and class boycotts demanding democratic reforms, and an end to official corruption, has won such widespread popular support as to tame martial law, which Li declared in Beijing on Saturday.

Today's march in the square was at least the third such huge outpouring of support for the students in a week. Marchers called for the resignation of Li, senior leader Deng Xiaoping and President Yang Shangkun.

Intellectuals from the Chinese Academy of Sciences led the protest, accusing Li of staging a military coup in his struggle with Zhao, whom they support. Li apparently acted on orders of the 84-year-old Deng.

"People unite and break the militaristic coup," read one poster. "Bury the cult of the individual. End old people's politics," read another.

A bus designed by the Central Academy of Fine Arts broadcast for a free press. A painting on the bus showed red lips crisscrossed by two rifles. "We will not be silenced," read one slogan.

In Shanghai, tens of thousands of students and workers marched in support of their Beijing colleagues, calling for Li's resignation, according to Jason Hurtado, a professor at the city's Fudan university. Throughout the day, about 200,000 city residents milled around expectantly.

Overnight, student leaders printed and distributed thousands of posters and pamphlets calling for workers to support students and people gathered around to read the inscriptions.

In the capital, subways reopened and many bus lines running, after a tense weekend in which hundreds of thousands of people spontaneously set up roadblocks to protect the students from troops. Many military and Communist Party leaders have opposed using troops to crack down on the students and soldiers kept their distance.

The Beijing television news reported that one soldier was killed when another military vehicle struck him. It was the first confirmed death since Li declared martial law.

Drug Conference

problem from the demand side, and to stiffen penalties on the supply side. The group expressed strong support for increased drug awareness education in the state through programs such as D.A.R.E., drug awareness and resistance education. D.A.R.E. now reaches fifth- and sixth-graders in some parts of the state through a trained police officer. But the group recommended expanding the education program to all grade levels, including kindergarten.

The group also recommended beginning or expanding programs which educate family members and the entire community. Greenville Police Chief Jerry Tesmond called for an equal commitment to enforcement, saying, "You can't educate people when their brains are fried."

Nancy Jenkins, a member of the Greenville City Council, said she supported the chief's recommendation. She called for municipalities to seek more designated funds for both drug enforcement and drug education.

Along with stricter enforcement of existing drug laws, the group called for revising some laws which could address the problem, such as housing laws which allow for little control of 16- to 18-year-olds and mandatory jail terms for drug offenses. The group also recommended construction of more prison facilities around the state.

"You've got to go after them with a pitch fork," said Tesmond. His general plan calling for an increased effort toward education, awareness and law enforcement drew support from the whole group.

"Whether it's law enforcement or clergy," Richardson said, "they're saying the same thing."

In all six of the previous meetings, Richardson said the groups have stressed education and stricter enforcement. He said the groups have also cited the importance of the family in combating the drug problem.

Along with fielding new solutions to the drug problem, the drug cabinet has also been collecting information on existing awareness and prevention programs operated by businesses, schools and churches.

"There's an awful lot going on," Richardson said. "There's a lot to be built upon."

Pirates To Face Florida Gators

ECU Seeded Fifth In Gainesville Regional

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

East Carolina's Pirates will face home-standing Florida in the first round of the NCAA East Baseball Regionals in Gainesville, Fla., Thursday night.

Florida, seeded second in the tournament, will take on the fifth-seeded Pirates at 7:30 p.m. in the regional's third game of the day.

Top-seeded Miami, Fla., will open the tournament against sixth-seeded Villanova, at 11:30 a.m. Thursday, kicking off the event. The Hurricanes bring in a 44-15 record, while Villanova is 37-11.

Number-three Georgia Tech, which finished fourth in the regular season Atlantic Coast Conference race with a 37-24 record, takes on number-four Central Florida, 40-20, in the second game of the day. That's scheduled for a 3:30 p.m. start.

Florida, one of the favorites in the Southeastern Conference, lost out in the SEC tournament, which was won by Auburn, coached by former ECU coach Hal Baird. The Tigers will join top-seeded Florida State and ACC champ Clemson in the Atlantic Regional at Tallahassee, Fla.

The Gators posted a 43-20 record this year. East Carolina, winner of the Colonial Athletic Association regional tournament, is 37-9.

"I'm pleased with the site since we'd been to Tallahassee the last two times," ECU coach Gary Overton said. "Too, I'm excited about having to play the host team. That seems to be the norm for East Carolina teams. It will be a tough challenge, yet one I think this team can meet."

Overton was joined in that thought by a number of team members who were in attendance at a news conference in which the pairings were announced via a telephone hook up with the NCAA offices in Kansas City, Mo., Monday afternoon.

"I had an idea that we would go to Tallahassee," senior shortstop David Ritchie said, "but I'm looking forward to (being in Gainesville). Florida is the host team, and it should be a huge crowd. I'm real excited."

Ritchie missed the 1987 regionals, sidelined with a knee injury. He has been plagued with a bad shoulder this year, but said Monday that he felt fine now.

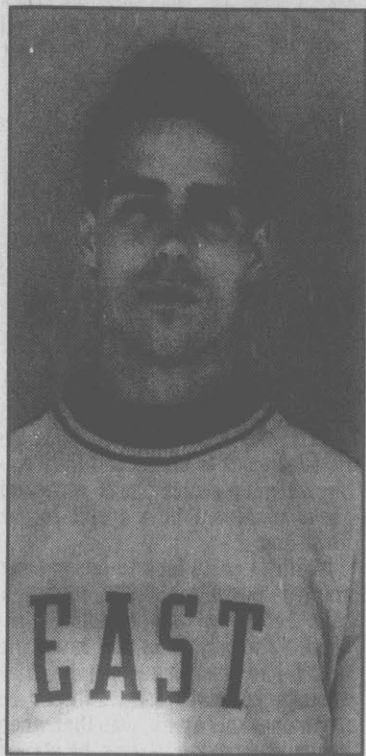

Senior first baseman Mike Andrews, however, was a little disappointed. "I was hoping that we'd be in a bracket with Jacksonville. My brother (Mark) plays (first base) for them." Jacksonville, instead, was assigned to the South Regional at Starkville, Miss., along with North Carolina and Western Carolina, the only other North Carolina teams to make the field along with the Pirates.

"But it doesn't matter," Andrews continued. "I've seen some of them play and they're all beatable."

Another senior, centerfielder John Thomas, looks forward to playing on his second NCAA team. Thomas, along with the other seniors and juniors, played in the 1987 field at Tallahassee. "The big difference this year is that two years ago we went down there to vacate. This year, we're going to win some games. I think we can play with the teams there. Of course, it's tough playing the host team, but the game will be before a big crowd and that's what every player wants."

Junior pitcher Jonathan Jenkins also is looking forward to the crowd. "Florida lost out early in the SEC tournament and we're playing well, so maybe we can surprise some people. It's an advantage to have been there because we have the feel for it now and we feel that we belong

Magic Keeping This MVP Award

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Magic Johnson, his characteristic grin beaming even brighter than usual, sounded — with tongue in cheek — uncharacteristically selfish. "Last time, I dedicated this to my dad," Johnson recalled Monday at a news conference at which he received his second NBA Most Valuable Player trophy in three years. "But this time, I had to work off some fat, and worked hard to win the free-throw championship, so I'm going to keep this one for myself."

"Nobody was out there last summer running and sweating with me," the Los Angeles Lakers guard said, chuckling.

Johnson did, of course, credit virtually everyone connected with the Lakers' organization with helping him win the award.

"A lot of thanks go to my teammates; they made me look good, kept pushing me, whether in practice or in games," Johnson said.

Johnson edged Michael Jordan of the Chicago Bulls for the award, and Johnson himself said Jordan would probably have been voted the honor if the playoffs were taken into account.

Jordan, the league's leading scorer with 32.5 points per game, has taken the underdog Bulls to the Eastern Conference finals with seven playoff games of 40 or more points. He lost to Johnson in the closest balloting since 1981 when Julius Erving edged Larry Bird by 31 points.

Johnson, currently trying to lead the Lakers to their sixth NBA crown since he joined the team in 1979, received 42½ first-place votes and 664.5 points from a nationwide panel of 85 media representatives who voted before the playoffs began.

Jordan received 598.8 points, including 27½ first-place votes.

Lakers coach Pat Riley said both Johnson and Jordan deserved the award, adding, "but one (Johnson) deserved it a little bit more."

Johnson praised the competition, then singled out Jordan.

"It's definitely special when you consider the people ... and the man who would, because of the playoffs, probably would win it if the voting was now," Johnson said, alluding to Jordan.

Following Johnson and Jordan in the voting were Karl Malone of Utah with 362 points and five first-place votes, Patrick Ewing of New York, 200 and eight, and Akeem Olatunji of Houston, 179.3 points and two.

Johnson, who was MVP in 1987, said the quality of the other candidates for the honor made this year particularly gratifying.

Rose, Conley, Chargers Open Playoffs

Rampants, Westover Have Different Expectations In First Round 4-A Meeting

By Tim Chandler
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Rose High School and Fayetteville Westover enter tonight's state 4-A baseball playoffs with entirely different expectations.

The Rampants carry a 21-0 record into the game and a number five ranking nationally by USA Today. Over the past two seasons, Rose has compiled a 48-2 record, including a 43-0 record in regular season games. The only losses suffered by the Rampants last year came in the state finals against Charlotte Harding.

Chris Christopher

The Wolverines, on the other hand, begin postseason play with a 12-9 record after finishing third in the Mid-South Conference with a 9-6 league mark.

"I honestly am looking at this as a golden opportunity," Westover coach Stuart Hobbs said. "We were picked to finish in the bottom of our league this year. But the guys came out and worked hard and we made it to the playoffs."

"Everyone is saying that they feel sorry for us because we have to go up to Greenville and play Rose," Hobbs said. "But the pressure is on them (Rose). They're supposed to win. If we win it'll be one of the biggest stories of the year, but if we lose nothing will be said because we're supposed to."

Vincent agreed. "We've had a very successful year," Vincent said. "But there are some people who will think that we didn't have a good year if we don't win. We just want to play our best and go from there."

"I would say they (Westover) definitely have the pressure off of them," Vincent said. "They can come up here relaxed with nothing expected of them."

Hobbs believes the key for his club is to keep the game close and try to pull out the win in the late innings.

"For us to win, we can't give them any extra outs," Hobbs said. "They're going to hit the ball with all the hitters they have in their lineup so we can't give them any extra help by putting people on with errors. We're not going to blow anybody away, we've got to try and stay close and score when we have the opportunity and hope for a chance to pull out the win at the end."

The game is set for a 7:30 p.m. start at Guy Smith Stadium.

D.H. Conley

When D.H. Conley begins play in the 3-A playoffs tonight against SouthWest Edgecombe, coach Allan Wilson is hoping his hitting team shows up.

"Offensively we've been like a jekyll-and-hyde act this year," Wilson said. "It (the Vikings' success) all depends on what team shows up. It could be the one that puts the ball in play. If it is a lot can happen. But it could also be the other team where we have a lot of strikeouts and don't put the ball in play."

Conley carries a 12-6 record into the 7:30 p.m. game at SouthWest after placing in a second-place tie in the Coastal Conference with a 8-4 league mark. The Cougars finished the year as champions of the Tar-Roanoke Conference with a 18-2 overall record and a 11-1 league mark.

The two teams met back at the beginning of the year when SouthWest recorded a 3-2 win on March 15.

"I don't think you can even look at that game," Wilson said. "You're talking about right at two months since then. They've beaten some good teams since then in their conference and they're playing really well."

But Cougar coach Donald Rhodes feels his team will rely on the same philosophy as they did in the earlier win.

"Basically what we want to do is the same as earlier in the year when we won 3-2," Rhodes said. "We know they've got good pitching, but we feel we do too."

The Vikings will start Travis Clemons on the mound, while the Cougars will counter with Phil Arrington. Both pitchers have a 6-2 mark for the season.

One thing the Vikings have in their favor heading in, according to Rhodes, is their playoff experience.

"Coach Wilson's got a annual playoff team down there," Rhodes said. "I think they've been 10 years in a row. This is only our second trip in our history so that is going to worry us."

Ayden-Grifton

Ayden-Grifton enters play in the 2-A playoffs against Roanoke Rapids on a roll.

The Chargers won four out of their last five games to finish second in the Eastern Plains Conference with a 10-11 overall mark and a 7-5 league record. Roanoke Rapids, which finished in a tie for first in the Northeastern Conference but lost in a coin flip, was 11-4 overall and 8-4 in league play.

Ross is hoping the momentum the Chargers have had of late will continue in the playoffs.

"We have some goals that we set as a team each time we hit the field," Ross said. "We try to keep our walks to two or less. We try to shoot for a double-figure hitting game. And we try to keep our errors to one or less."

The Chargers will rely on sophomore pitcher Brian Haddock against Roanoke Rapids. Haddock, a righthander, is 5-1 for the year.

"He's not going to strike out anybody," Ross said. "But past history has shown him to get a lot of ground balls. We hope that will continue."

Roanoke Rapids is expected to start senior lefthander Mark Oliver. Oliver shut out the Chargers 1-0 in the opening round of the playoffs last season.

Offensively, Ayden-Grifton is led by Junior Jay Tripp, who is batting .350, and senior James Woodard, who is batting .340.

"That's the number one part of our game that worries me most — our offense," Ross said. "We don't have but two guys hitting over .300."

In other playoff action today, Greene Central will face Wake Forest-Rolesville, the third-place team from the Capital Area Conference, at home in a 7:30 p.m. contest.

The Rams, champions of the Eastern Plains Conference will carry a 15-6 record into the game.

In softball action, D.H. Conley will travel to Southern Durham for a 5 p.m. game. The Valkyries, 15-4, finished second in the Coastal Conference, while the Lady Spartans were runners-up in the Triangle Conference.

North Pitt's softball team will travel to Williamston tonight for a 7:30 p.m. game.

The Pant-Hers finished third in the EPC with a 10-4 record, while Williamston won the Northeastern Conference with a 12-1 mark.

Greene Central's Lady Rams will entertain Bunn in another 2-A playoff game at 4 p.m. That contest was postponed from Monday due to wet grounds.

Greene Central's first round game in the 2-A State Softball Tournament was rained out Monday night and has been rescheduled for today.

The Lady Rams will play at home against Bunn at 4 p.m. this afternoon for the right to advance to the second round.

Elsewhere, Greenville's Little League and Babe Ruth League baseball games were also rained out. In Little League action, Coca-Cola and the Lions are now scheduled for Sunday at 1:30 p.m. at Elm Street, while Wellcome and Exchange will meet Sunday at Guy Smith at 1:30 p.m. No date has been set for the play of the Peeler's-Coca-Cola game in Babe Ruth League.

All softball action in the Greenville Recreation Leagues was also postponed because of rain and wet grounds.

Valvano's Name Back In Book Title

RALEIGH (AP) — Coach Jim Valvano's name has been put back into the title of Peter Golenbock's book about the North Carolina State basketball program, publishers said Monday.

John Sawyer, a publicist for Carroll and Graf, said the New York publishing company had planned to delete Valvano's name from the book title to shorten it.

But Sawyer said Carroll and Graf felt the decision was being misconstrued, so the book has its original name, "Personal Fouls: The Broken Promises and Shattered Dreams of Big-Money Basketball at Jim Valvano's North Carolina State."

"Nothing else has changed," Sawyer said. "It was important to us that we didn't send out a message that wasn't correct. We don't want people to think the book was somehow changed or watered down. We want to make it perfectly clear that hasn't been."

Carroll and Graf announced last week that it would publish the book sometime in the fall.

The book, which reportedly makes allegations of corruption in the Wolfpack basketball program, was originally set for publication by Simon and Schuster, but the publisher announced in late winter that it would not print the book.

9 Golfers Set To Compete For Open Spots

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Nine golfers qualified Monday to play in sectional competition for the right to compete in the U.S. Open.

Tim Krapfel of Orlando, Fla., and Kevin King of Hilton Head each had a 68 to lead the qualifying on the 7,152-yard, par-72 course at the Columbia Country Club.

Dillard Pruitt of Greenville, Rocky Catalano of Mount Pleasant, and Glen Davis of Surfside Beach posted 71s.

Others who qualified were Steve Larick, Blythewood, 72; Tim Fleming, Oklahoma City, Okla., 72; Doug Weaver, Orlando, Fla., 72; and Clem King, Columbia, 72.

The first alternate is Roy Hunter of Charlotte, N.C., who shot a 72. Second alternate is Bill Smunk of Charleston with a 72, while Rick Bunting of Holden Beach, N.C., qualified as third alternate with a 73.

The golfers now are eligible to compete in sectional qualifying events throughout the United States, with the closest event in Atlanta.

IU Basketball Player To Transfer Out

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Indiana University basketball reserve Chuckie White said Monday he will leave the school because of a lack of playing time, according to a published report.

White said he felt he never fit in to Coach Bob Knight's system at the Bloomington school. The Indianapolis Star reported in Tuesday's editions.

White, who transferred from Dodge City (Kan.) Junior College to Indiana, saw action in 32 of the Hoosiers' 35 games last season. But he started just five times and averaged 13 minutes per game for the season — eighth highest on the team.

In 16 Big Ten Conference contests, White played eight minutes per game — 10th best on the team.

White, who said he decided shortly before the spring term ended that he would leave, did not tell Coach Bob Knight of his decision. He announced it instead to assistant Dan Dakich, The Star reported.

"A lack of playing time and other things I'd rather not talk about," White told The Star in a telephone conversation from his Charlotte, N.C., home. "I couldn't understand why I wasn't playing as much as some of the other guys."

"It was a hard decision, but it was the right decision."

He said he has not decided where he will transfer. He withdrew from Indiana at the close of the spring semester.

White will have to sit out next season under transfer rules before using his final year of eligibility.

"I think Coach Knight is a great coach, but I don't think I'm the type of player he wanted," White said.

He becomes the seventh player in five years to transfer from Indiana.

Eastern Wayne's Mull Leads State

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Eastern Wayne's Brian Mull shot a 3-under par 69 Monday to take a two-shot lead and Durham Jordan took a three-stroke lead after the first round of the state 4-A golf championships at Finley Golf Course.

Mull, who finished eighth in 1988, shot a bogey-free round, and led Pat Long of Scotland County by two strokes and Steve Creasey of Wilmington Hoggard by three strokes.

Jordan, led by Tray Jervis's 1-over par 73, had a total of 307. Reidsville was second with a 310 total, followed by Wilmington Hoggard at 315 and Pinecrest at 319.

Seton Hall Joins State, UNC In Festival

NEW YORK (AP) — Seton Hall, which came within a point of capturing the NCAA college basketball championship this year, will be joined by North Carolina State, Florida State and Rhode Island this December in the 38th annual ECAC Holiday Festival.

The tournament at Madison Square Garden will start on Dec. 27, with the final two days later.

P.J. Carlesimo's Pirates, coming off a 30-7 season, lost all five starters from the team which lost to Michigan. N.C. State, coached by Jim Valvano, returns perhaps the nation's best backcourt in Rodney Monroe and Chris Corchiani.

Florida State finished 22-8 last year, losing in the first round of the NCAA tournament. Rhode Island, which was in the NCAA "Sweet Sixteen" in 1988, is coming off a disappointing 13-15 record.

Smith On DL; Justice Called Up

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta Braves outfielder Lonnie Smith has been placed on a 15-day disabled list, and Richmond Braves outfielder David Justice is to fill his space on the roster, officials said.

Justice will likely start in right field in Tuesday night's game against the Pittsburgh Pirates, said manager Russ Nixon, who already has used five players at the position this year. The loss of Smith leaves Nixon with only two everyday outfielders with major-league experience.

Justice was batting .241 with three homers and 18 RBIs in 40 games for Richmond.

Braves General Manager Bobby Cox decided Monday afternoon to put Smith on the disabled list after learning results of an examination by a team orthopedic specialist who said Smith suffered a severe hyperextension of his right ankle joint.

Smith hit his leg against the fence in left field foul territory Friday while trying to catch Terry Pendleton's fly ball as the Braves battled the St. Louis Cardinals.

Smith, hitting .324 with six home runs and with 18 RBI, is the second Braves player disabled this year. It is the third time in a 11-year major league career he has been disabled.

Gillick Holds Talks With Piniella

TORONTO (AP) — Toronto Blue Jays general manager Pat Gillick met for three hours Monday with former New York Yankees manager Lou Piniella, then extended his deadline for naming a new manager to two weeks.

"We're not getting the short list down," Gillick said before Monday's game against Minnesota. "We're going up."

Faster Cars May Not Be Better

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — Tom Sneva has consistently said that faster is not necessarily better in auto racing.

Sneva, the 1983 Indianapolis 500 winner and the first driver to qualify for the race at over 200 mph, has for most of this decade advocated slowing the cars down in the interest of competition.

This month, with drivers warming up at 210 mph and Rick Mears leading a record-smashing speed assault at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway with a mind-boggling qualifying run of 223.885, Sneva says it's time to do something about slowing the speeds or the sport will suffer.

"That's what I've been saying for the past five or six years, at least," said Sneva, who qualified for Sunday's race on the inside of the eighth row at 218.396 mph. "NASCAR slowed their guys down. You heard them at Talladega. They slowed 'em down from 212 down to 190."

"The drivers were complaining and moaning before the race, but the fans were standing and shouting for about 500 miles in that race."

Sneva was referring to the Winston 500 on May 7 at Talladega, Ala. Davey Allison took a stirring victory in a very competitive NASCAR stock car race after the sanctioning body imposed carburetor restrictor plates to slow the cars down in the interest of safety for competitors and fans.

"Fans come to Indianapolis to see speed most of the month of May, but on race day they want to see a race," Sneva said. "Like I said, we don't have to worry about this place surviving. But we have to worry about the rest of the sport."

"I wonder why nobody else can figure it out. I'm not exactly a rocket scientist," added the former school principal. "This is pretty common sense stuff ... I don't think I'm that far off the track on these issues."

"The boys down south have pretty much done the same thing and have made it work."

Talking about the Indy-car rulesmakers, Sneva said, "They make way too many small changes. I don't know who they're listening to. ... Superman died a long time ago."

"You've got to have the equipment. Michael Jordan can wear adidas or Nike or whatever and he's still going to do his thing. Our sport isn't like that. Our tennis shoes are a pretty important element of our success, and the bad news is those tennis shoes cost about $350,000 apiece, and you've got to have more than one."

"Right now, if you've got enough money, you can buy the equipment that's going to put you in the show. That's the sad part about our sport: If you've got enough money, you can make it here."

"You don't see it in the Super Bowl, where somebody'll go up to the coach and say, 'Hey, Coach, I wanna throw a couple of passes in the Super Bowl. How much is it gonna cost me?' That doesn't happen in other sports, but it sure seems to happen in ours ... the only flag is green."

"We need to be more concerned with the quality of the show from green to checker," Sneva said. "Believe me, racing is better now than it used to be. The cars are better and safer and the money is up. But there just hasn't been enough attention paid to the quality of the sport."

Sneva and the rest of the drivers who will start Sunday's 500-mile race cannot get back onto the track until Thursday, when the track will open for the traditional two-hour "carburetion testing" session.

Mears Could Have Already Won 4 Indy's

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — Rick Mears, the pole starter in Sunday's Indianapolis 500, would already be a four-time winner if he hadn't strayed too far from Gordon Johncock in the last, frantic lap of the 1982 race.

That's what Johncock says.

Mears, making up almost a second per lap in the closing minutes of that race, almost caught Johncock at the finish. In fact, Mears edged ahead briefly, but a stronger engine carried Johncock to his second Indy victory, a microscopic .16 of a second ahead of Mears in a sprint to the finish line.

"With 11 or 12 laps to go, my car started pushing bad," Johncock said, referring to a handling problem. "The only thing that saved me was I had a stronger engine. The mistake he made, and I'll bet he never does this again, was that when he made his move to pass, he stayed out to the side, one or two car widths, and had to break his own air."

"If he had stayed up tight against me, I'd have been breaking the air for him and when he made his attempt, I'd have never held him off."

Johncock said the fact that he was even in position to win is a testament to his crew.

"My car was working so bad, Rick almost lapped me early in the race. I went in to the pits and the crew made some adjustments," Johncock said. "You have to have people in the pits, the crew, to watch for those things and take care of them."

Johncock, driving this year for Hemelgarn Racing, will start from the middle of the eighth row on Sunday after solidly qualifying his 1988 Lola-Buick at 215.072 mph. It's the same car that set a speed record for a stock-block engine a year ago.

"I don't think you can really have a strategy before the race," said Johncock, preparing for his 22nd start, a feat of longevity matched or exceeded by only five other drivers in Indy history. "That's just something that happens as you go along."

"You see how the car is running, how it's handling. If it's not handling well, you wait for the first pit stop and make an adjustment. Even when it's going well, everything can change at the first yellow."

Johncock was a member of one of the greatest rookie classes in Indy history when he made his debut in 1965. Other first-year drivers in that race included Al Unser, Mario Andretti, George Snider, Joe Leonard and Jerry Grant.

Of the 33 starters in 1965, only Andretti, Unser, Snider, A.J. Foyt, Johnny Rutherford and Johncock are still active in racing.

"It takes a team effort. It takes everybody from the car owner to the sponsors, the crew, everybody," Johncock said of the key to a successful effort. "One mistake puts you out. But I'm real happy. Everybody's putting the effort forward."

Signs With Elizabeth City State

North Pitt High School football player Mark Hines, an offensive lineman with the Panthers, has signed a grant-in-aid with Elizabeth City State University. As Hines signs, his mother, Ida Hines (left) and grandmother, Lydia Little, look on with Panther coach Stuart Ennis. Hines' father, the Rev. Walter Hines, was unable to be present for the signing.

and can win some games not just show up."

Jenkins, who opened the CAA tournament on the mound for the Pirates, then came back to win the championship game, may draw the starting assignment against the Gators on Thursday.

And he's ready. "I'd love to have it," he said. "I feel pretty confident. If our pitching continues like it did in the (CAA) tournament, we'll be all right."

Two mound mates, Jake Jacobs and Brien Berckman are ready, too. Jacobs got the victory when the Pirates defeated UNC-Wilmington to stay alive in the CAA tournament and Berckman, with two saves and six plus innings of shutout ball in the championship game, was named the tournament's most valuable player.

"I'm excited," Jacobs said. "I think we have a chance to make a lot of noise. I'm sure at the time I'll be nervous, but right now I'm just happy about being able to play before some scouts. I'm going to try and take advantage of the opportunity. It's a chance for the team, and for me to prove that we can play on that level."

Berckman was very pleased with the berth in Gainesville.

"I said before we came here (to the press conference) that I thought we'd go to Gainesville. We've been to Tallahassee, so I wanted to go somewhere else."

Berckman said he was ready to head to the bull pen. "I like that role."

Overton said that the upperclassmen for the Pirates will be in a good situation, having been to the tournament before and he will look to them for leadership.

"Two years ago, we just happened to get hot at the right time and we went into the NCAA lacking confidence. We went in feeling that the other teams were better (than the Pirates). And we came away thinking that they were not that much better."

"This year, I think that we'll take that confidence with us this time. And confidence and experience go hand-in-hand," Overton said.

This will be the fifth time during the 1980's that the Pirates will enter the NCAA field. And for Overton, it will seem somewhat like old hat. In addition to his earlier visit as the Pirate head coach in 1987, he attended four other tournaments as an assistant coach, one as a graduate assistant and one as a student manager.

Cleveland Changes Luck Against Tigers' Morris

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

For the past 12 years, Detroit right-hander Jack Morris always checked to see when the Cleveland Indians were coming to town.

Morris entered Monday night's game against the Indians with a 23-7 lifetime record, including 15-0 at Tiger Stadium. But Cleveland finally got its revenge.

The first four hits off Morris were home runs by Brook Jacoby, Mark Salas, Oddie McDowell and Pete O'Brien as the Indians beat the Tigers 7-3.

"I think he's struggling a little this year," Salas said. "I think guys are laying off that split-finger fastball, that pitch that goes down in the dirt. That was his out pitch and now guys won't swing at it. That means he has to come back with a fastball."

Quite often this season, Morris'

"out pitch" has been the one that's hit out of the ballpark. Tiger pitchers have allowed 31 home runs, nine by Morris.

"He's one of those guys you've got to get early if you're going to stick it to him," O'Brien said. "We just put some good swings on him tonight."

Elsewhere in the American League it was Baltimore 5, Chicago 1; Texas 4, Kansas City 1; and Minnesota 6, Toronto 2.

Morris, who began the season with a six-game losing streak, allowed seven runs and six hits in 2 1-3 innings.

"He's a horse, but you figure somebody would get him some time," Cleveland manager Doc Edwards said. "You've got to figure somewhere along the line you're going to get him some day."

Bud Black, 3-5, allowed three runs and seven hits in 7 1-3 innings and Jesse Orosco got the final four outs for his first AL save.

Black, apparently fully recovered from the elbow trouble that hurt him last season, said shedding the relief role he had in Kansas City has made a world of difference.

"Last year was frustrating," Black said. "Now, I've got my arm back. I'm using all four pitches. I'm using weapons I haven't had."

Rangers 4, Royals 1
Knuckleballer Charlie Hough broke out of one of the worst slumps of his career as Texas beat Kansas City in Arlington.

Hough, who was 0-5 with an 8.53 ERA in his previous seven starts, pitched 5 2-3 innings and allowed four hits before giving way to Cecilio Guante in the sixth. Jeff Russell got the last three outs for his seventh save as the Royals lost their fifth straight.

Pete Incaviglia hit a two-run homer in the sixth for Texas.

Orioles 5, White Sox 1
Dave Schmidt allowed two hits in seven-plus innings and Mike Devereaux had a two-run triple as Baltimore beat Chicago at Comiskey Park.

Schmidt, who pitched for the White Sox in 1986 before becoming a free agent, was perfect through five innings until Matt Merullo lined a leadoff single to right field in the sixth.

Schmidt lost his shutout when Greg Walker led off the eighth inning with his first homer of the season.

The White Sox have lost four straight and six of their last seven.

Twins 6, Blue Jays 2
Allan Anderson pitched a five-hitter and Greg Gagne had two hits and scored twice as Minnesota beat Toronto at Exhibition Stadium.

Anderson, 5-2, struck out six and walked one for his first complete game of the year. After retiring 12 straight batters, he lost his shutout with two outs in the ninth when George Bell doubled and Fred McGriff hit his 10th homer.

Dave Stieb, 3-3, gave up eight hits, struck out three and walked one over seven innings as the Blue Jays lost for just the second time in seven games under interim manager Cito Gaston.

Stanley Cup Final Close As Expected

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CALGARY, Alberta — Before the series even started, it was being called the most evenly matched Stanley Cup championship in years. Nothing in the first four games has happened to change that notion.

"It should be a long, exciting series," Calgary Flames coach Terry Crisp said after his team beat Chicago in the semifinals. "After all, these are the best two teams in hockey."

The Flames had 54 regular-season victories and an NHL-high 117 points. The Montreal Canadiens were second in both categories with 53 and 115. They had the best defenses, the best goalies, plenty of experience and coach-of-the-year candidates.

So far, the series hasn't disappointed. "I think it's had everything everybody expected it to contain," Montreal's Brian Skrudland said.

Going into Game 5 tonight at the Saddledome, each team has won twice. Each has scored 12 goals, each has won a home game and a road game, each has rallied for a victory.

Game 1 was tied 2-2 until midway through the second period. Game 2 carried that same score into the third period. Game 3 took more than 38 minutes of overtime to decide. Game 4 was scoreless for almost 32 minutes.

Both teams have received superb goaltending, Montreal from Patrick Roy, Calgary from Mike Vernon.

Both have gotten production from four lines.

Both have played strong defense, yet both have had enough uncharacteristic defensive lapses to keep things interesting.

Neither team has backed down in the battles along the boards and in front of the nets. In Sunday's fourth game, each was assessed 10 penalties for 36 minutes in the most physical game of the series.

"All series long, momentum swings one way and then swings back the other," said Ryan Walter, whose double-overtime goal gave Montreal its 4-3 victory Friday. "You couldn't ask for more of a seesaw series."

Added Canadiens captain Bob Gainey: "Both teams are very evenly matched. Both teams fight back. The Cup is a long-term thing after a long season. Now it's two out of three."

There's now a good chance that this will be only the second seven-game Stanley Cup final since 1971.

"I don't know what other people are thinking about the series, but we are not thinking about (it going seven games)," Calgary's Brad McCrimmon said. "We are just interested in getting ready for the next game."

Friday's overtime loss put the Flames in a hole. Sunday's 4-2 victory helped them climb back out.

"They had their backs to the wall and they played that way," Montreal's Craig Ludwig said. "We can learn from that."

"We needed it bad," Calgary's Doug Gilmour said. "This gives us some confidence. We got home-ice advantage back."

But how advantageous is home ice?

Calgary was the league's best home team during the season, Montreal the second-best. The Canadiens had the best road record, the Flames the second-best.

"Going back to Calgary doesn't scare us," Ludwig said. "We've done well there."

Montreal won two regular-season games at Calgary and is 7-2 on the road in the playoffs.

"Home-ice advantage doesn't mean anything in this series," Vernon said. "They've proved it and we've proved it."

Both team are looking for something to give them the edge.

The Canadiens have averaged just 18 shots during regulation time of the last two games and "we have to shoot more," Chris Chelios said.

"We have to start throwing the puck to the net. A lot of bad shots go in."

Calgary, meanwhile, may have found Roy's weakness. The league's best goalie during both the season and playoffs was beaten high twice Sunday.

"He stacks his pads well. He's tough to go low on," said Gilmour, who has scored in each of the last two games. "When he goes down into his 'butterfly,' you can go up top."

Crisp isn't sure the Flames have discovered anything.

"Oh, people always talk about the style of goalies," he said. "If you ask Glenn Hall, one of the best goalies (ever), about style, he'll say they just stop the puck. Shooting is the same way. Seven times out of 10, you ask a guy where he put the puck and he'll say he just shot it. Gilmour went penthouse on one, but Roy stopped so many we didn't solve him."

The only thing Crisp noticed about Roy "was he was good, just like Mike Vernon."

Equals. Just like these teams. Just like this series.

Magic Wins...

"Because of all these men, it makes it even more gratifying, more special," he said.

The voters selected five players, in order, with points awarded on a 10-7-5-3-1 basis.

Johnson, who finished third behind Jordan and Boston's Larry Bird in the voting a year ago, led the league this season with 17 triple-doubles — double figures in points, rebounds and assists in a game — and in free throw percentage at .911.

He shot .509 from the field, becoming the only player other than Bird in NBA history to shoot 90 percent from the line and 50 percent from the field in the same season.

And Johnson, who averaged 22.5 points and 7.9 rebounds, led the Lakers to their eighth consecutive division title.

"Winning the MVP is great but I'll take a championship any time," he said as he and the Lakers continue their quest for a third consecutive NBA title.

"I love team awards, championships over this," he said, pointing at the MVP trophy. "But I'll still cherish this, I'll remember the year for winning the championship as well."

Bird said that Johnson certainly deserved the award.

"There's no question in my mind that Magic Johnson is the best player in the game and the best player I've ever seen," Bird said in a prepared statement. "He plays the game the way I like to see people play and the way I like to play. He rebounds, passes, is a leader. Whatever it takes, that's what he does to win basketball games."

Lakers forward James Worthy said it's possible Johnson, who has won three playoff MVP honors, is taken for granted because he's consistently great.

"His talents are so obvious," said Worthy, himself the MVP of last year's championship series. "But it's the extras, his approach and attitude, the unseen things that make the difference with Earvin."

Riley said he had written Johnson a note last summer saying he needed to have another MVP season if the Lakers were going to be successful.

"I said that for us to win the championship, you're going to have to play like the MVP," Riley related. "I felt like it was going to take that kind of an effort to lift this team up, and he did it."

Charles Barkley of Philadelphia was sixth with 94.3 points, followed by John Stockton of Utah, 28; Kevin Johnson of Phoenix, 22; Tom Chambers of Cleveland, 20; and Mark Price of Cleveland, 18.

ABC Will Drop 'Hooperman,' 'Dynasty' To Add Comedies

By John Horn
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — ABC is topping its long-running prime-time soap "Dynasty" and busting "Hooperman" to make room for six new comedies, two dramas and a weekly news program in its fall schedule.

The second-place network announced Monday its new lineup includes comedian Jackie Mason's first television series, "From this Moment On"; "Doogie Howser, M.D." from "L.A. Law" creator Steven Bochco; and "Prime Time," an informational series hosted by Sam Donaldson and Diane Sawyer.

Low ratings of late have tarnished "Dynasty," the once-popular opulent soap starring Joan Collins, Linda Evans and John Forsythe. It will be replaced on Thursdays by "The Kid" (9 p.m.-10 p.m.), a new drama about young men working for the Pony Express in the 1860s.

"Hooperman," a comedy cop show featuring John Ritter as a detective beset by various professional and personal hurdles, will be supplanted on Wednesdays by "Doogie Howser, M.D." (9:30 p.m.-10 p.m.). "Doogie Howser" stars Neil Patrick Harris as a child genius serving as a medical resident at a major hospital. It is produced by Bochco, who also created "Hooperman."

ABC also is pulling the plug on "Men," "A Fine Romance," "Coach," "HeartBeat," "A Man Called Hawk" and, as previously announced, "Moonlighting."

The new schedule was the work of Robert Iger, who took over for Brandon Stoddard as head of ABC Entertainment in March. The network is smooching to NBC in the viewer ratings and ahead of CBS.

ABC will add three new series to its Sunday schedule. The new programs are "Life Goes On" (7 p.m.-8 p.m.), a drama about a working-class family whose members include a child with mental retardation. The show stars Bill Smitrovich and Patti LuPone. It is followed by "Free Spirit" (8 p.m.-8:30 p.m.), a comedy featuring a divorced father of three whose housekeeper (Corrine Bohrer) turns out to be a witch.

ABC's other new Sunday program is "Homerom" (8:30 p.m.-9 p.m.), focusing on a teacher (Darryl Harper) in an inner-city elementary school.

While the network's Monday schedule will remain the same, ABC will add one new show on Tuesday. "From this Moment On" (9:30 p.m.-10 p.m.) features Mason as Jackie Fisher, a former pajama manufacturer who is now assisting young people at a local community skills center. Lynn Redgrave co-stars.

In addition to "The Kid," the Pony Express show starring Anthony Zerbe and Josh Brolin, ABC's new Thursday lineup will include "Prime Time" (10 p.m.-11 p.m.). The series will pair Donaldson with CBS veteran Sawyer in what ABC calls "a provocative look at the news of the week." It is scheduled to make its debut Aug. 3.

On Fridays, ABC will add "Family Matters" (8:30 p.m.-9 p.m.), a spinoff from the network's "Perfect Strangers." "Family Matters" features Harriet Winslow (Jo Marie Payton-France), the talkative elevator operator from "Perfect Strangers," trying to manage a diverse group of children and relatives.

Saturday's new program is "Living Dolls" (8:30 p.m.-9 p.m.), a comedy is about four teen-age models learning that there's more to life than just pretty faces — or so ABC promises.

Oprah Films Cancer Show

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PLAQUEMINE, La. — Oprah Winfrey brought her talk show to a community known locally as "cancer alley" to raise national consciousness on the health hazards of pollution.

The syndicated TV show was filmed Monday at the civic center in Iberville Parish, an area of many chemical plants on the Mississippi River between New Orleans and Baton Rouge.

The main topic was the miscarriage rate around the region, and the audience included parents of cancer victims, women with a history of miscarriages and representatives of chemical companies.

The federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta are conducting a study of the area's miscarriage rate to determine if chemicals are responsible. Some previous studies have indicated high smoking and drinking rates may share the blame for Louisiana's high cancer rates.

Pharmacist Kay Gaudet, who began raising alarms a few years ago after her sister and other women suffered miscarriages, told the audience she wanted to be assured by industry that chemicals have not caused one miscarriage.

Convicted

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — The wife of imprisoned singer James Brown has been convicted of possessing the hallucinogen PCP and a prosecutor said his office would recommend a fine and probation.

Adrienne Brown, 39, pleaded guilty Monday to one count of possession. Augusta police found two vials of PCP in her possession after she arrived at Bush Field airport a year ago.

Film Traces Lives Of Children Born To Communist Families

By Dana Kennedy
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — Country Joe McDonald, whose rock band Country Joe and the Fish appeared at the Woodstock festival, remembers how strained his life was growing up in a communist family.

Joan Sokoloff, a 48-year-old therapist, grew up in Boston in the 1950s. But she might as well have spent her childhood on another planet. While other children were watching "Father Knows Best," Sokoloff, the daughter of communists, was contemplating world change.

"I couldn't care less if they were investigated as communists or not," said McDonald, who grew up in Southern California. "All I cared about was when I went to a Cub Scout meeting or went to play baseball. ... I didn't feel comfortable anymore."

Said Sokoloff: "They (my parents) always used to say that the revolution is just around the corner. So there was always a sense that we were working toward something imminent."

McDonald and Sokoloff are two of five so-called "red diaper babies," the children of communists, who appear in "Children of the Left," a new documentary by filmmaker Eric Stange. The 60-minute film traces the evolution of children raised as communists who are now adults in a conservative America.

The topic is a hot one. "Loyalties — a Son's Memoir," a new book by former Washington Post investigative reporter Carl Bernstein, is the story of Bernstein's childhood in a communist family.

Bernstein writes about the conflicting legacy left by communist parents. His story is woven out of what he says are the torn loyalties and lasting repercussions of a communist childhood.

Stange found that communist parents left a mixed legacy. Some of their children remained communists. One became a Reagan conservative. But almost all remain political and most vote.

Stange, 35, a former reporter and editor for the Boston Herald, had made one previous documentary, "The Pitch of Grief," when he decided to make a film about the children of communists. He knew several as friends and found out about others through them. A network exists among them as adults, he said, formed from childhood when communist families often sent their children to the same progressive summer camps and schools.

But Stange said that even now, many who grew up in communist households were still hesitant going public about the experience.

"The penalties were too great in the '50s," he said. Stange spoke to 50 former "red diaper babies," interviewed 15 on tape and culled five for his film. The term "red diaper babies" has several rumored origins. One is that communist parents in the '20s were so poor that they used the red flags they received in return for their party dues to diaper their babies.

"I found an incredible mixture of pride and anger," he said. "It was a way of looking at the world that was much more open and diverse and worldly than what most American kids were getting."

The film, which premiered last month in Cambridge, and was co-produced with the Newton Television Foundation, will also be shown at New York's Public Theater this month and in Los Angeles in June.

The stories that unfold on camera are generally happy ones. Though they participated in one of the most tumultuous periods in American history, Stange's subjects recall their childhoods with more pleasure than pain.

Eugene Dennis Jr., son of the former general secretary in the American Communist Party, was a longshoreman for many years and is now a historian. In the film, tears come to his eyes as he recalls how "safe" he felt, held in the arms of singer-actor-writer Paul Robeson at one point during the worst of the communist witch hunts in the '50s.

 Bridge is a strange game. This hand, from a team competition in Britain, saw North-South play the hand once in a minor-suit partscore and the other time in a major-suit slam!

 In one room, North overcalled West's one heart opening bid with two clubs and played it there. Since the whole spade suit was missing, West astutely decided not to compete. Declarer lost a trump trick and a heart, scoring 11 tricks for 150.
 In the other room, the bidding went as shown. North's bid of two hearts showed spades and an undisclosed minor. South made an invitational jump in spades and, when West showed a red two-suiter, North elected to gamble on the spade slam.
 West led the king of hearts. Although he appreciated the necessity of forcing dummy to ruff, West failed to find the correct continuation. The winning defense was to shift to a diamond, which would have left declarer powerless. Instead, West continued with the ace of hearts, which set up declarer's jack as the 12th trick.

 Declarer ruffed in dummy and came to hand with the ace of spades, revealing the bad break. He cashed the jack of hearts, discarding a club from the table, ruffed a diamond and then cashed the three master clubs. When West failed to follow to the last of these, declarer ruffed a club, ruffed another diamond low, and then scored the last three tricks on a high crossruff as East under-ruffed helplessly. In all, declarer made three club tricks, one heart, three diamond ruffs and a heart ruff in dummy, and four trumps in his hand.
