N.C. Beachgoers May Find 'No Vacancy'

By J. Ward Best
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

In the springtime a young man's thoughts turn to ... Well, around Greenville, thoughts and cars usually turn toward the beach.

But good luck finding a place to stay during the Memorial Day holiday period at Morehead City and Atlantic Beach, the closest and most popular coastal resorts for area residents.

Few hotels or motels along the southern coast list vacancies, and most report solid bookings from as long as a week ago.

"Everything on the beach is sold out," said Rheta Freedman, guest service manager at the Holiday Inn at Atlantic Beach.

Ms. Freedman said she has called other hotels and motels in Atlantic Beach and Morehead trying to find vacancies for other hopeful-but-late callers but she has had no luck.

In fact, most of the larger chain motels in the Atlantic Beach area have hung out the "no vacancy" signs. And places with vacancies expect the rooms to be filled before nightfall.

According to the central reservation office, the 90 spaces at Days Suites in Atlantic Beach are filled. The office lists the next closest available space more than 30 miles away in New Bern.

John Yancey Motel, with approximately 90 rooms at Atlantic Beach, listed vacancies on Friday and Sunday nights, but none for visitors who wanted all three days.

The same goes for Comfort Inn in Morehead City, no vacancies for the entire weekend in any of the 101 rooms.

Bush Calls For Strong Europe

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROME — President Bush began a four-nation European trip today, declaring the United States wants a "stronger and more united Europe" as he headed to a NATO summit where an arms-control dispute threatens allied unity.

With the North Atlantic Treaty Organization embroiled in a major dispute about nuclear weapons policy, The Washington Times reported that Bush planned to use the summit as the stage for announcing a reduction of up to 10 percent in U.S. troop strength in Europe, "as many as 34,000 troops."

White House officials declined immediate comment. "Anything we have to say, we'll say in Europe," said spokesman Bill Harlow. The chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, Sam Nunn, told CBS News that a 10 percent reduction "is the probable amount of reduction that would occur if the Soviet Union accepted the NATO proposal on conventional arms control which is now tabled."

A senior NATO official, asked by reporters in Brussels about the report, said "our delegations here on the spot have not been apprised of this." He spoke on condition of anonymity.

West German government spokesman Herbert Schmuelling said in Bonn, "We have no official word of such a decision." Some 250,000 U.S. troops are stationed in West Germany.

In his departure remarks, Bush provided no hint of a significant American counter to recent Soviet arms proposals. He said, "The importance of the alliance and its democratic underpinnings is the message I now take to Europe."

In Rome, the president planned a two-night stay and talks with Pope John Paul II as well as with Italian leaders.

China Purges Liberals Led By Reformer Zhao

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — Communist Party chief Zhao Ziyang was placed under house arrest and stripped of his post as conservatives began a purge of liberals to gain control of the fractured government, sources said today.

Zhao lost power in a bitter fight with conservative Premier Li Peng, the Chinese and diplomatic sources said. Li last week ordered a crackdown on students, who are occupying Tiananmen Square to press demands for a freer society and cleaner government.

Soldiers were deployed on the outskirts of Beijing, but tens of thousands of citizens prevented them from entering the city by surrounding the convoys and setting up barricades. The soldiers have retreated to nearby barracks.

The student occupation of Tiananmen entered its 14th day today. An overnight rock concert by some students contributed to a festive atmosphere.

According to the sources, officials who have worked under Zhao to chart political and economic reforms will face disciplinary action, and some will lose their jobs. Those reported in trouble include the party's propaganda chief, Hu Qili, and Vice Premier Tian Jiyun.

The reports could not be officially confirmed.

Zhao has been a leading proponent of market-oriented economic reforms championed by 84-year-old senior leader Deng Xiaoping, but the two differ over political change. Zhao has expressed sympathy with the student protesters, whose campaign has evolved into a nationwide movement involving millions of Chinese.

President Yang Shangkun, a Deng ally, told top officials Thursday that Zhao's actions "had a very bad effect" on the nation, a government source said.

Chinese and diplomatic sources said Zhao was under house arrest. A document circulated today to county- and district-level party officials said Zhao was no longer head of the party, according to a diplomat who has proved reliable in the past. No successor was named in the document.

Sources said conservatives accused Zhao of heading an anti-party cli-

U.S. To Pursue Cocaine Charges

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A federal grand jury has indicted four Jamaicans arrested in Greenville in September on cocaine trafficking charges, and an assistant U.S. attorney says the federal government is committed to prosecuting the case.

"This will go forward in federal court," said Bob Skiver, assistant U.S. attorney.

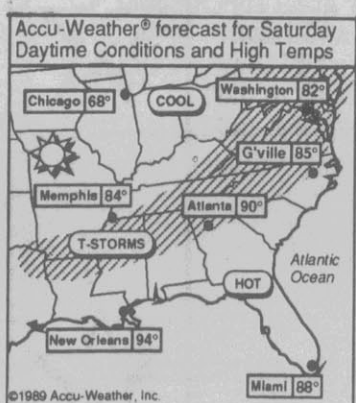

Greenville police and Pitt sheriff's investigators seized $99,000 worth of drugs, $23,600 in cash and a stolen pistol when they arrested the three men and one woman in Greenville on Sept. 21, 1988. The three are being held on bonds ranging from $750,000 to $1.3 million.

A U.S. magistrate issued federal arrest warrants for the Jamaicans in December, but federal prosecutors declined to say they would definitely take the cases. The cases have been set in Pitt Superior Court several times, including May 1, but they were always continued.

However, once the federal indictments were returned May 16, the federal government announced it would prosecute the Jamaicans. The defendants will be transferred to

Seabrook Finally Gets Its License

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEABROOK, N.H. — A low-power atomic testing license was approved today for the Seabrook nuclear power plant, which became a focus of the anti-nuclear movement since the project was conceived two decades ago.

"The people here feel it's really about time," an elated Edward Brown, president of Seabrook operator New Hampshire Yankee, told reporters Thursday after a favorable court ruling in Washington late in the day.

That court action cleared the way for the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to formally issue the low-power license. NRC spokesman Frank Ingram said the commission staff granted the license shortly after 9 a.m. today.

The commission approved the move a week ago but delayed the paperwork to allow for appeals.

Seabrook's first chain reaction could start within two weeks. Plant officials said today they expected to start preparations for the tests this weekend.

A low-power license allows a reactor to operate at 5 percent capacity.

Most of the plant's 1,400 workers had already gone home by the time the court ruled, Seabrook spokesman Ron Sher said, "but for those people seen here there were certainly a lot of smiles and congratulations."

"There's certainly a sense of relief, and also a sense of satisfaction that all of the work that we've done for so long to get us to this point will allow us to do what we've been ready to do — and that is prepare the plant for the generation of electricity," Sher said.

Located on marshland less than two miles from the state's most popular beach, near Interstate 95 and only 40 miles from Boston, Seabrook was the target of mass protests including one that resulted in 1,414 arrests in 1977.

Seabrook officials said testing should begin within 10 days.

Post Office Seeking Bids

The U.S. Postal Service is soliciting bids for leased space for a postal facility in southeastern Greenville.

According to Van VanDyke, Greenville Postal Service superintendent of postal operations, it is not certain now whether the new facility, if established, will be used only for additional workspace for postal employees or whether it will also include a retail outlet.

"We'd like another retail outlet,"

VanDyke said, "but we've almost got to have the additional workspace."

He said that about 35 of the 135 postal employees now working out of the main post office at Second and Greene streets will probably move to the new facility.

The decision as to the nature of the facility will be made in the Postal Service's real estate specialist's office in Greensboro, he said.

The Greensboro office is now having published legal notices asking for bids on 15,300 square feet of interior space and a site size of approximately 112,300 square feet in Greenville. The deadline for bids is June 16.

Boundaries set for the location of the building are Red Banks Road on the south, Charles Boulevard on the east, Evans Street on the west and Greenville Boulevard on the north.

Fugitive Mother Begins Sentence

A Pitt County woman whose two-year prison term was postponed in 1986 to allow her to give birth was arrested this week near Washington, D.C., as a fugitive from justice.

Peggy Fullerton, 24, who pleaded guilty to over 60 worthless check charges in November 1986 and fled the area, began her North Carolina prison sentence today.

She was brought back to Greenville from northern Virginia on Thursday, Pitt Sheriff Ralph Tyson said. Law enforcement officers in Virginia entered her name into the National Crime Information Center and the computer indicated she was wanted in Pitt County, according to Tyson.

Ms. Fullerton was charged with writing worthless checks in April, July and October of 1986.

Judge David E. Reid Jr. of Greenville sentenced her to two years in prison on Nov. 20, 1986, but he postponed her sentence to allow her to give birth. Court records show she was ordered to surrender herself on the Monday following the sixth week after her baby was born. Court records also show Reid later ordered her sentence to begin April 6, 1987.

In a separate incident two weeks ago, a Greenville woman who pleaded guilty to selling cocaine asked Reid to delay her four-year sentence to allow her to have her baby outside of prison. She said she was five months pregnant. But Reid denied her request.

At its regular monthly meeting at City Hall, the board approved Stallings Oil Company's request for a special use permit to allow gasoline sales in conjunction with the operation of a convenience store on the northwest corner of Greenville Boulevard and 14th Street.

In other matters, the board approved requests by: Bishop A.H. Hartsfield for a special use permit to allow the operation of a shelter for women at 1108 Dickinson Ave.; Ron Batca for a special use permit to allow retail sales of fitness equipment at 1408 S. Evans St., and by Phil Flowers to renew a special use permit to continue the operation of The Jockey Club in Suite 13 of the Flowers Office complex, 101 W. 14th St.

Three requests involving property in the medical district were continued until next month's board meeting.

The items include requests by: Jerry Whitehurst and Derek Dunn for a special use permit to allow the construction of a hotel and restaurant on the south side of U.S. 264 bypass, 950 feet west of the intersection of U.S. 264 and SR 1204; Heritage Development Co. of Greenville Inc. to amend a special use permit to allow the operation of a bank on lot 2 of Executive Park West, section 2, located on Stantonsburg Road, and by R.J. Whiter Teeth?

Commonly asked questions and answers concerning this procedure.

Question: "How long does the procedure take?"

Answer: This procedure takes only 15 to 20 minutes to start and the patient completes the treatment at home and to their desired degree of whiteness; however, on your first visit, the dentist must prepare you for the procedure and usually a normal one-hour appointment is sufficient. The results are very predictable when the patient follows the instructions to the letter. Most cases can be completed within a two week period, more complicated cases may require a longer period of time. Patients who follow the instructions properly may see results within the first three days of treatment.

Question: "If this is such a new procedure, how can I be sure it's safe?"

Answer: Although it is a new product, it is based on the older bleaching techniques that have been in use on teeth for over twenty years. When used properly, these techniques have proven to be extremely safe but overpriced for most people. It is a much milder medication than anything ever used before for this purpose and is priced where every patient can now afford to look their very best with a totally different and easier procedure.

Question: "How long will the results last?"

Answer: The procedure can be permanent with occasional and proper maintenance.

'No Vacancy'

And the same lack of vacancy applies to most of the smaller motels along the beaches.

Advertised as "The traditional place to stay," Morehead Motor Inn has followed its own tradition this weekend. All 63 rooms, mostly occupied by sun worshipers, according to its manager, have been reserved since earlier this week.

The long weekend also attracts fishermen to the coast - too many fishermen it appears.

The Iron Steamer Resort, which includes a motel, restaurant and pier, naturally attracts more fishermen than sunbathers. The desk clerk, Deana McGavock, gave a promising fishing report, but a poor report on vacancies.

Ms. McGavock said fishermen caught croaker, spot and few sea mullet and trout in the past few days. But all 49 rooms at the resort have been booked since last Thursday.

The influx of vacationers has pushed out the fishermen at Oak Grove Motel, which is within a mile of a fishing pier. Manager Stanley Smith said all 23 efficiency apartments for this weekend have been booked for the past two weeks.

Even the campsites near the beach report near-capacity reservations.

"It's going to be a real busy weekend," Ms. Freedman said. "And if the weather holds out, it's going to be even better."

The Associated Press promises a better than 50-50 chance of a great weekend for the coastal areas.

The wire service reports a 30 percent chance of showers or thunderstorms late tonight with lows in the 70s. For Saturday, "continued hot," and a 50 percent chance of thunderstorms. And on Sunday, only partly cloudy skies for North Carolina's northern beaches are forecast.

"The season has started," Ms. Freedman said with emphasis.

Federal Grand Jury Indicts Jamaicans

federal custody and probably have their initial court appearance next week, Skiver said. The defendants will be entitled to federal review, he said, and may request a new bond hearing.

Pitt District Attorney Tom Haigwood said his office will dismiss the state charges in lieu of the federal indictments.

The four charged are: Malcolm Eugene Encarnacion, 29, Courtney L. Fuller, 33, Leslie Lee Thomas, 29, and Angerette Daniels, 23. All are of Jamaican descent and lived in the Bronx, N.Y., before coming to Greenville, investigators said.

There are several reasons the case is attractive to federal authorities.

One, because the state Supreme Court holds law enforcement officers to different requirements than the U.S. Supreme Court, Haigwood said the cases are better suited for the federal system.

The state Supreme Court broke from the federal court last July, ruling that no illegally obtained evidence may be admitted into court at any time, even if an officer unknowingly commits an error while pursuing an investigation in good faith.

On the other hand, the U.S. Supreme Court recognizes an exception to the law barring the admission of illegally obtained evidence. In 1984, the federal court ruled that a judge may admit evidence if investigators were acting in a manner which they honestly believed to be correct - even if the officers' actions were later ruled improper.

In the September arrests, investigators searched a local motel room, a car and a Greenville house, investigators said. Haigwood declined to comment on any potential problems state prosecutors might have had getting the evidence admitted into a trial, but he said the case is better suited for federal court.

Skiver said he sees no problem with the case.

"I think it'll be fine ...," he said. "I'm purely sanguine about this."

Also, the defendants are linked to Jamaica and the Bronx, and federal prosecutors have more resources to track down intrastate leads than do state prosecutors. Skiver said it appears the Jamaicans were not in Greenville for a long period of time and have no ties to the area.

"I think that the intrastate connection between here and New York that involves the Jamaicans is one of the most significant benefits that could come out of the federal prosecution, because the federal government is not only able to focus on these defendants, but is able to draw on the out-of-state connections and do something with that," Haigwood said.

"You've got a lot of other people involved, and apparently they're connected in other jurisdictions in North Carolina and outside of the state of North Carolina. The federal government, with this (Jamaican) Task Force they're forming, is better able to deal with it if they want to. The U.S. attorney is committed to targeting these Jamaicans," Haigwood said.

The four are accused of manufacturing, transporting and possessing over 200 grams of cocaine-based crack and maintaining a dwelling for the purposes of controlled substances.

At the time of the arrests, local law enforcement officers said it appeared the Jamaicans moved into 1306 W. Sixth St. in late summer 1988 to set up a drug business. Officers seized over an ounce of powdered cocaine, 75 bags of marijuana, 3,723 vials of crack and an automobile.

Also, if the federal government prosecutes the case, up to 90 percent of the $23,600 that was seized may be returned to local law enforcement units to fund drug investigation work.

When the district attorney's office prosecutes such cases, state law calls for the money to be turned over to the local board of education.

Federal sentencing laws are also tougher than state laws with regard to drug trafficking crimes and firearm crimes, which is another reason federal prosecutors were interested in the case.

The prospect of longer prison sentences is also a plus to Haigwood.

"Certainly, we're looking for anything that would ensure that they would get a longer term in prison," Haigwood said.

If the four had been convicted on all state charges, they would have faced prison terms ranging from 65 years to 110 years. Potential fines ranged from $150,000 to $400,000 on the state charges.

Because of the complexity of federal sentencing, Skiver said it is difficult to estimate a potential sentence, but he said federal drug sentences are stiffer than those in North Carolina.

Traffic Death

ASHEBORO (AP) - Robert Lewis Hulin, 57, who was a familiar sight on downtown Asheboro streets and sidewalks traveling in his motorized three-wheeled cart, was killed when he was run over by a concrete truck.

Hulin had suffered a stroke several years ago.

The driver of the truck, Melvin Benjamin Marley, 46, of Asheboro, was charged with misdemeanor death by vehicle, authorities said. As the Certified Concrete Corp. truck made a left-hand turn, the left front tire struck Hulin, knocking him from his cart and pinning him under the wheel, Swaney said.

Hulin died shortly after being transported to Randolph Hospital Inc.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Puzzling

Phone Call Raises Troubling Questions

When Pitt County Commissioner D.D. Garrett phoned a judge, asking him to be lenient with a convicted drug trafficker, his actions raised troubling questions.

Why does Garrett feel a drug trafficker should be treated obligingly in a community that's worked very hard to eradicate drugs? Why would a man of his stature and experience call a judge to try to influence his decision? Why would Garrett — a man with unquestionable devotion to community; a man who fought very hard for a seat on the county commission — jeopardize his political credibility with poor judgment?

Garrett telephoned a Superior Court judge earlier this week to ask that a local businessman convicted of cocaine trafficking be allowed to remain free on bond pending additional appeals. "The only thing I requested was that he (the judge) be as lenient as possible," Garrett said.

The appeal to the judge was improper conduct for a public official. Garrett, through long years of involvement in community affairs, has earned a reputation for unerring judgment and sound principles. In light of this experience, his mistake is puzzling.

His actions had to be disappointing to police officers and prosecutors who worked hard to apprehend and convict a drug trafficker.

Garrett's concern for a long-time associate is understandable, but his request for leniency is inscrutable. It conflicts sharply with his public commitment.

Brush Fires

Be Ready For The Quick Strike

It may come as no great surprise that a Pentagon expert views guerrilla insurgencies as a greater threat to American military involvement than the Soviet Union.

The impetus for maintaining a large military establishment has come from the threat of Soviet Union expansionism since World War II. But the United States and the Soviets have faced a military stand off since both acquired massive stocks of nuclear weapons. However ambitious the Kremlin might have been, it dared not risk a full scale war with the U.S.

Now the Soviet leadership faces broad new problems. Its populace wants more freedom and more consumer goods. In short the Soviet people now are demanding the better life promised them but regularly put off due to military demands on the economy.

To placate the people, the Soviet leadership has sought better relations with the west. Less tension means less need for a huge standing army and thus some of the wealth can be shared with the people in the form of more consumer goods.

But the brush fire wars rage in Central America, Peru and the Philippines. Neither the United States nor the Soviet Union is a stranger to involvement. The U.S. was tested first in Korea, then in the agony of Vietnam. The Soviets in Afghanistan.

It is apparent that neither superpower has mastered the military art of quick strikes in such situations which avoid prolonged and costly involvements.

There is, of course, nothing glamorous about quick military strikes in far off locations. Yet, there will be times when they are necessary to protect national security. As unglamorous and unappealing as it is, the U.S. military has to be ready for such assignments. They are far more likely than the full scale world war for which the military exists.

Fantasy With A No. 2 Pencil

WASHINGTON — The Good Father offers to put his son's College Board application in the mail. The deadline is one day away and so the Good Father promises to take the application to his office, affix a stamp, insert a check and make sure the envelope is postmarked in time. The Good Father does everything — with one exception: He forgets the check, and the application goes into the mail without it, and that is not acceptable.

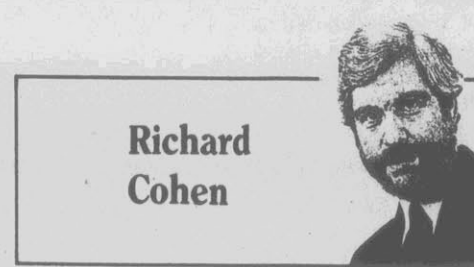

This is why he sends the next day for a new application. This is why, late in the afternoon and for the second time in his life, he is hurriedly completing an application for the College Board exams, working with a No. 2 pencil, filling in the little blocks.

The Good Father has no problems with most of the questions: name, age, address. Then he is asked questions that send him on flights of fantasy. The first is, "Indicate the major area of study that is your first choice."

The Good Father telephones his son. Not home. The Good Father then turns to the direction booklet. There, in type so small that only a young person can read it, are four columns of college majors. They begin with "agriculture business" (not my boy) and end with "undecided" (now we're getting somewhere). In between is every field of study imaginable.

The choice of a major is probably information the College Board sells to colleges. It is not binding and, besides, my son is only a high-school junior. But I pretend that I, the Good Father, really have the authority to make the choice, that it is binding — that I am choosing not just a college major but a profession as well. Here the fantasy begins or, to be perfectly honest, an old fantasy returns.

Shall my son be a lawyer? Shall I make him a physician or an investment banker who will provide for me in old age? He writes wonderfully, so maybe I should make him a writer. Foreign languages would be nice or, maybe, music, the passion of the father and so — why not? — that of the son also.

The exercise makes me chuckle, for it is the exercise of a new father, the naive dreamer not yet initiated into parenting. It is the dream of the parent who thinks — despite really knowing better — that a child can be molded, that he can be created in the parent's image, only better. The child will avoid the parent's mistakes. The parent, by virtue of his wisdom, will spare the child most heartbreaks, and he will somehow become the parent's second chance. Deep down, no parent believes he only goes around once.

This fantasy explains the appeal of "Soliloquy" from the musical "Carousel." What father has not started to sing "My boy Bill" while peering into the cradle? "Like a tree he'll grow with his head held high and his feet planted firm on the ground." But the song also contains a germ of truth: "What if he is a girl?" Ah, yes — loss of control, even from the moment of conception. Influence, yes. Control, never — not even the ability to determine the outcome.

This is the universal experience of parenting.

It is a particularly jarring experience for a generation raised in affluence. Yet our ancestors were marionettes on strings of fate. Farmers cannot control the weather. Serfs cannot control their masters. Disease was common, children died young. Marriages were arranged by others, and even a person's trade was often determined by that of his father.

But no more. For most of us, the weather is a nuisance rather than a menace. Children are expected to live. Our land cannot be seized, nor our liberties. Affluence is a given. You buy a house and sell it. You buy a car and sell it. For many people, a child is the first thing — the only thing — you cannot sell, exchange, walk away from or divorce. A child is forever.

On the day the Good Father was filling out his child's College Board application, a former colleague lost his son in an automobile accident. The news made the Good Father sad and scared — sad for his friend, scared for his son and, selfishly, I suppose, but true nonetheless — for himself. He filled out the application anyway, but by then the fun had gone out of the chore. Each little block darkened by No. 2 pencil was a reprimand, a reminder. He could not control. He could not even make safe.

The Good Father darkened the block for varsity sports. He opted for a small school away from home, a place of ivy and midnight dormitory debates, a college unlike the one he had attended. With his pencil, he constructed a life for his son: a college major (writing), then graduate school and then, even, a career. That done, he bolted for the street, handed the application to the postman in the truck and returned to his office. The fantasy was over. The Good Father had done what he could. The Good Son will do what he wants.

No Answers That Make Sense

WASHINGTON — I don't mourn for John Mack, the congressional aide who has lost his well-paid and powerful job because of something he did 16 years ago.

The "something he did" was so awful, so crazy, so brutish that I wouldn't have objected if he had been sentenced to die for his crime. By my imperfect lights, he should at the very least still be in prison.

What worries me about the Mack case is the public reaction — my reaction — to it when we learned, years later, that (1) he had been dealt an absurdly lenient sentence and (2) that he had risen to power and prominence, while his victim still struggles to keep her mind intact.

You know the details. Mack, a 19-year-old manager of a suburban Virginia store at the time, lured a young woman to a backroom of the shop and, for reasons that make no sense whatsoever, bludgeoned her with a hammer, stabbed her several times, put her in her own car and drove her off to a secluded spot, leaving her to die.

That Pamela Small didn't die is nothing short of a miracle. She regained consciousness, drove herself to a service station to summon help and, with the help of surgeons, was restored at least to physical health.

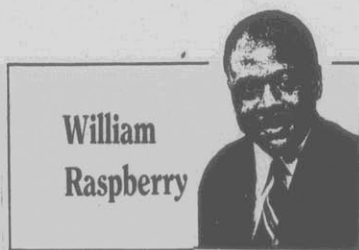

You also know what happened to Mack. He served 27 months in the Fairfax County (Va.) Jail, won an early release on his 15-year "malicious wounding" sentence when he was offered a clerical job on the staff of House Speaker Jim Wright, whose daughter was married at the time to Mack's brother, and made good.

By the time we learned about the case, through a gut-wrenching Washington Post interview with Pamela Small, Mack was Wright's top aide: competent, respected on the Hill and earning $89,500 a year.

And we went crazy. How could this man, whose public utterances are devoid of any show of remorse, be prospering as though nothing had happened? How could Small's painful physical and emotional recovery be left to the resources of her family, with no help from the public, while her attacker led the good life on the public payroll? Twenty-seven months in the county jail? What kind of justice is that?

These were my questions, too. But even now, weeks after the interview was published (and after Mack, yielding to our outrage, resigned his post), I still don't have any answers that make sense.

Were we outraged by the shortness of the sentence? (Should Mack have said: "Look, your honor, I think I ought to do more time, and in the state prison?") Was it his rise to prominence and power that upset us? (Would we have been happier if he were earning $15,000 a year as ditch-digger, or if he had remained in the clerical job Wright originally gave him at $9,000 a year?) Was it his apparent lack of remorse? (What revelation of sleepless nights or psychiatric treatment or thoughts of suicide would have altered our reaction?)

Pamela Small touched on a part of our frustration when she said that Mack had risen to power and middle-class affluence "because he tried to kill me." It's true. Mack, a high-school graduate who had evinced no interest in government, might still have been an ordinary working-class stiff if his crime had not led to the intervention of a powerful sponsor.

Still it seems to me that a part of our outrage stems not from the fact that Wright found him a job but that he did so incredibly well at it.

'It's one thing to wish that the courts had done their job when it was their's to do; quite another for the rest of us to transform their laxity into an after-the-fact sentence of life without parole.'

This is no holier-than-thou put down of societal vengeance. I was outraged, too. I still am.

But my outrage worries me. I try to picture Mack as a black man who, apparently an ordinarily decent guy before his unexplained savagery, and unarguably an exemplary worker afterwards, had made a success of his life. Would I still be outraged? Or would I be wondering at the ethics and motivation of a newspaper story seemingly calculated to destroy him?

"John Mack's crime was undeniably savage," I might have written, "and his punishment too light. But his rehabilitation is undeniable. Since we cannot undo his crime, or, at this stage, lengthen his sentence, doesn't it make sense to let this man, no doubt haunted by the savagery of what he did, get on with his life?"

Would I have written any such thing? Would I have thought it even if I didn't have the courage to say it? I honestly don't know.

What I do know is that as awful as I feel for Pamela Small, I don't feel good about my share of the vengeance that led to the derailing of Mack's life. It's one thing to wish that the courts had done their job when it was their's to do; quite another for the rest of us to transform their laxity into an after-the-fact sentence of life without parole.

A Tax On Land Transfers Helps Some, Hurts Others

Paul O'Conner

RALEIGH — A number of small eastern counties are in a financial bind. They are in desperate need of new schools and other facilities, but they can't generate enough tax money to pay for them. With what they collect in sale tax, they'd need 10 years to build a new school. Their average incomes are so low, local officials say, that property taxes can't be raised.

During the 1980s, several coastal counties have found a new tax that helps them out of such a bind — the real estate transfer tax. It's a perfect approach for these counties because it is levied primarily on the purchasers of the many new cottages and condominiums which are being constructed along the beaches and waterways of these counties.

Although the seller of property actually pays the tax, it is widely believed that the tax is included in the selling price. If competition keeps the tax out of the sales price and the seller actually pays it, that's okay, too, because the seller is often some out-of-town developer.

The results can be tremendous. Dare County, using its land transfer tax okayed by the General Assembly several years ago, has raised $13.5 million for construction of schools and hospitals and, has Pasquotank County had the tax last year, it would have raised $650,000, Rep. Vernon James, D-Pasquotank, said.

But there are some who think the land transfer tax is far from the financial cure-all that its supporters claim it to be. When a bill granting the tax to Washington, Perquimans and Pasquotank counties came before the House Finance Committee, a number of legislators argued vehemently against it. Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, former finance chairman, said that the taxes amount to bad public policy. He and Rep. Monroe Buchanan, R-Yancey, argued that the taxes, if approved for these counties, will soon spread to counties across the state where the inequities of the tax will be severe.

Rep. Harry Grimmer, R-Mecklenburg, said that while the taxes are aimed at the non-resident condo owner, they also apply to the farmer or senior citizen who tries to sell his or her property. He said the tax is basically unfair because a county taxes only segment of its population to fund facilities that will be used by the entire community. On average, he noted, 18 percent of houses in an urban area are sold during any one year. Those who sold and purchases these houses would pay the taxes that would build facilities other would use. Not everyone would be contributing.

Land transfer taxes also hit the young family the hardest. As they buy their first house and then maybe a nicer one several years later, they keep getting hit with the tax. But an established couple that already has a nice house and probably a bigger schools. The tax goes directly against the principle of taxing according to ability to pay.

As these arguments were made in the House committee, the sponsors, Reps. James and Pete Thompson, D-Granville, noting that the bill called for a referendum before the tax would be levied, made an impassioned plea to allow the people of these counties to tax themselves this way if they wish to do so.

The bill cleared the committee by a small margin and them was approved by the full House several days later.

Khomeini's Illness Underlines Problems

Ed Blanche

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Surprise disclosures that Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini has undergone surgery come at a time of intense struggle within Iran's fragile leadership structure over who will succeed him.

The public admission that the 89-year-old Imam, as he is known, was even ill marked a major departure for Iranians, who for the last three years have only glimpsed the Islamic republic's supreme leader on television.

The reports by the state television and radio networks that Khomeini was in "exceptional condition" for his age, despite the surgery on Tuesday to stop intestinal-bleeding, appeared aimed at reassuring Iranians the revolutionary patriarch was still at the helm.

"It may be that the ayatollah is feeling his mortality and is trying, like Chairman Mao in China, to ensure the future of his revolution after his death by turning the radicals loose while he is still alive," Snow said.

The uncertainty is compounded by Khomeini's tactic of constantly switching support for one faction or another so none becomes too powerful.

Against this backdrop, the deliberations of the Constitutional Committee will have a far-reaching impact on Iran's future.

Rafsanjani, the only declared presidential candidate so far, wants to widen the powers of the office and scrap the premiership to eliminate the competing power centers that have paralyzed decisions on the economy and social reform.

The hardliners favor a presidency which is largely ceremonial, with power centralized in the prime minister.

The debate is heating up, although the Tehran Times daily noted Monday that Rafsanjani's campaign "seems to be getting the nod from the majority" of the committee.

All indications are that in the absence of any leader with Khomeini's spiritual authority as vice-regent of the prophet Mohammed, there will be a tilt toward installing a collective leadership after he dies.

Ed Blanche, the AP's Middle East News Editor, has covered regional affairs for four years.

"The debate is heating up, although the Tehran Times daily noted Monday that Rafsanjani's campaign "seems to be getting the nod from the majority" of the committee. All indications are that in the absence of any leader with Khomeini's spiritual authority as vice-regent of the prophet Mohammed, there will be a tilt toward installing a collective leadership after he dies.

"I would like to inform listeners and viewers that his eminence ... is perhaps one of history's exceptions in his physical structure and state of health," the chief surgeon, Dr. Hassan Arefi, declared.

That may have comforted Khomeini's followers. But it was also a reminder of Khomeini's mortality and emphasized that the question of who will rule Iran in the post-Khomeini era is wide open.

On March 28, Khomeini dumped his designated successor, Ayatollah Hussein-Ali Montazeri, in one of Iran's biggest political upheavals since the 1979 Islamic revolution ended 2,400 years of monarchy.

Political and religious leaders are grappling with changing the revolutionary constitution to eliminate what Khomeini calls "flaws and imperfections" and settle the leadership question.

The recommendations of the 20-man Constitutional Committee that Khomeini appointed will go before voters in a referendum in mid-August — the same time Iranians vote for a new president.

Since Iran abruptly accepted a cease-fire in the 8-year war with Iraq last summer, it has been gripped by political uncertainty.

Anti-Western revolutionary radicals led by Prime Minister Hussein Musavi and Interior Minister Ali Akbar Mohtashemi, who favor tight control of the economy, are locked in a power struggle with those seeking more free enterprise and links with the West.

In March, Montazeri was forced to resign after criticizing Khomeini's policies and questioning what the revolution had achieved in its first decade.

Montazeri's resignation followed Khomeini's sharp swing back to fundamentalist radicalism. In February, Khomeini ordered Moslems to seek out and kill British author Salman Rushdie for his novel, "The Satanic Verses," charging it blasphemes Islam.

The death call brought widespread Western condemnation of Iran, smothering moves toward liberalization and efforts by Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani and others to end Iran's self-imposed isolation.

The radical resurgence intensified a wave of executions of political dissidents and purges.

The power struggle is likely to intensify.

"Montazeri's resignation ... raises the question of how far Ayatollah Khomeini is prepared to go in his current drive to root out revisionism," commented Charles Snow, an analyst with the Middle East Economic Survey weekly.

Highways

RALEIGH (AP) — A revised financing plan for the $8.6 billion highway bill has gained the backing of a House subcommittee and an array of interest groups, but Senate leaders are skeptical.

The House Finance Committee discussed the new formula Thursday after it cleared the Subcommittee on Highways, but no vote was taken. The committee will resume hearings next week, said chairman Rep. Alex Hall, D-New Hanover.

He said changes in the fee combination that would pay for the plan appear to have removed most of the objections raised by business groups, particularly automobile dealers.

"I don't know if everyone favors it, but if anyone opposes it I don't know who it is," Hall told reporters. "By and large, the package is in good shape."

Leaky Tanks

RALEIGH (AP) — House and Senate panels have approved nearly identical versions of a bill to make permanent a program established last year to clean up leaks from underground fuel tanks, but the measures face numerous hurdles.

A Senate committee endorsed its bill Thursday, while the House measure cleared a subcommittee Tuesday. But the House bill must be approved by the full Infrastructure Committee, and both must be considered by their respective chambers' Finance and Appropriations Committees before reaching the House and Senate floors.

Environmental activists and the North Carolina Petroleum Marketers Association helped craft the compromise bill. It would continue two cleanup funds created in 1988. One is comprised entirely of government money and the other is a combination of state appropriations and fees paid by tank owners.

The "non-commercial" fund would pay for leaks from tanks owned by individuals and from tanks whose owners can't be found or who won't pay. It would be supported entirely by the government. The commercial fund would cover tanks owned by businesses.

POW Returns

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Werner Luck is seeing Fayetteville for the first time this week, even though he was a soldier at Fort Bragg more than 40 years ago.

But in 1945 and 1946, Luck was a German prisoner of war at the post. He spent the final days of World War II marching off to work in a kitchen or a commissary, instead of looking forward to a discharge date and life as a civilian.

Luck, 66, who now lives in West Berlin, wrote to Fort Bragg officials last fall to ask for permission to tour the post. The request was typical of a man who carries 45-year-old prisoner-of-war documents and letters carefully preserved in plastic and placed neatly in a black briefcase.

Accompanied by his son, Wolfgang, the former Luftwaffe corporal and prisoner of war arrived Saturday to a welcome he wasn't quite expecting. Army Lt. Col. Marcel J. Lettre met him at the airport, arranged a tour and had him over for a dinner party.

Police Probe

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The case of a black drug suspect who died in police custody has been closed after a grand jury said no charges are warranted, but a local NAACP president says she's disgusted with the decision.

"I am thoroughly disgusted with the judicial system that does not allow for equal protection of the rights of our citizens," said Dorothy Whitted Hardy.

James E. Swan was declared dead on the evening of Feb. 1. His body was still in the police car at the Wayne County magistrate's office when the declaration was made. He had earlier resisted arrest during a drug raid. Several officers were required to subdue him and place him in the car, police said.

NAACP officials have sent letters to the U.S. Department of Justice and the state Human Relations Council requesting each body investigate "to determine if Mr. Swan's civil rights were violated," according to a statement.

An autopsy released in April ruled Swan died from anoxia, or lack of oxygen, due to neck compression.

Legislator Wants DMV To Pass Out Voter Registration Forms

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREENSBORO — North Carolina ranks among the states with the lowest percentage of the voting-age population registered, but a state lawmaker wants to change that by including a voter-registration form with every application for a driver's license.

Mickey Michaux's bill, which has passed a House Judiciary committee, is one of several this session aimed at increasing voter registration. None of the other bills, however, is likely to pass.

"The DMV doesn't want to bother with it," Michaux said. "The form will do it all in one fell swoop. If we attach it to a license form we will basically be asking them to register."

North Carolina also ranks among the states with lowest voter turnout.

In 1988, 43.7 percent of the 4.9 million people of voting age in the state went to the polls, ranking North Carolina 47th in the nation, according to the Committee for the Study of the American Electorate, a non-profit group based in Washington. Of the 4.9 million, 3.4 million — 70 percent — are registered to vote.

Nationally, the average turnout was 50.2 percent of the voting-age population.

Alex Brock, state election director, said he welcomed efforts to increase opportunities for registration, but he said that's not the best solution for voter apathy.

The answer, he said, should be limiting the number of scheduled elections in North Carolina to four times a year — the primary and general election and two other designated dates.

"North Carolina contributes significantly to the demise of participation of its registered voters because we simply have gotten to a point where we place upon a voter too great a responsibility," Brock said. "If he wants to be a good citizen he must vote nine to 11 times a year."

Brock said comparisons of North Carolina's voting-age population to the percentage of registered voters are inaccurate because they include military personnel and college students who prefer to vote absentee in their home states, prisoners who have lost their rights to vote and the mentally ill who might lack the mental capacity to vote.

"Subtract all those out who should not be legitimately counted and you'll find that 80 to 83 percent of the voting age population is registered," Brock said.

Panel OKs AIDS Tests For Inmates

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Concerns over health threats to inmates and others in North Carolina prisons overshadowed the chance of lawsuits as a House committee approved mandatory AIDS testing for prison inmates.

The bill, approved 9-5 by the Judiciary Committee on Thursday and sent to the full House, would require AIDS testing for every inmate entering North Carolina's prisons from Oct. 1 until March 31, 1990. Most of the committee's questions concerned whether the results should be confidential.

The Department of Correction found 116 inmates with the AIDS virus in 1988 through tests ordered by physicians during regular physicals, officials said.

House Panel OKs Teacher Pay Raise

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A House committee chairman accused the state's largest teacher organization of bullying legislators before his panel endorsed a 6 percent salary increase that a teacher spokeswoman called "unacceptable."

The Public Employees Committee voted Thursday for a new 30-year salary schedule developed by the Public School Forum of North Carolina, a non-profit research group that studies education issues and recommends policy changes.

It would establish a 30-year pay schedule that, at the end of a three-year phase-in period, would give starting teachers a $20,500 salary. Teachers at the top of the scale who have bachelor's degrees would be paid $37,480, while those with advanced degrees would receive more.

"This proposed legislation is a balanced, long-term solution to educators' salaries," Rep. Milton Fitch, D-Wilson, chairman of the committee, said. "It is not expensive that the General Assembly may have to freeze salaries again in the out years."

The plan, which would lift a freeze on the salary schedule imposed in 1982, was approved and sent to the House Appropriations Committee.

Fitch, whose committee has held weeks of hearings on various pay options, called for a vote after reading a prepared statement that criticized the North Carolina Association of Educators for seeking a bigger raise than will be given to other state government employees.

He also charged that the 47,000-member organization had jumped from support of one bill to another, seeking increasingly lucrative salary packages and putting undue pressure on lawmakers.

"We have had teachers marching with placards," Fitch said. "We have had teachers in T-shirts packing our committee meetings. We have had mail, phone calls and personal visits from teachers."

Pipeline Explosion Kills Three After Railroad Mishap

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. — A gasoline pipeline exploded and killed three people just days after residents were assured it had not been damaged by a runaway train that plowed through the same neighborhood two weeks ago.

"It looks like a bomb went off over Duffy Street," City Attorney James Penman said after the Thursday morning blast that sent flames 300 feet skyward and produced heat so intense that pets and corn stalks were singed two blocks away.

Thirty-one people were injured in the explosion that also destroyed 10 homes and 18 cars. About 300 people were ordered to leave their homes for the night.

"It's like a nightmare," said Delores Jones, whose house was destroyed by the fire. "I haven't slept since the train wreck. It's come back to haunt me."

The May 12 train wreck leveled a row of homes and killed four people. The National Transportation Safety Board is investigating the explosion, but Calnev Pipeline Co. manager Ken Seal said there was a "very good possibility" the company's 14-inch pipeline was damaged by the train accident.

The city and an attorney for more than 100 residents announced plans to file lawsuits against the Las Vegas company. The residents also plan to sue the city and the rail line, Southern Pacific.

"We did not feel in the first place they should have started up that railroad as quickly as they did. And we particularly tried to get the pipeline shut down. Now look what happened," said residents' attorney James H. Davis, who was hired after the train wreck.

The neighborhood was evacuated for several days after the train jumped the track because of fears the pipeline might have been weakened. The city was assured the line was safe when it reopened several days ago, Penman said.

The body of a woman killed in the blast was found in the back yard of a home, pinned to a chain-link fence. The other two fatalities, an adult and child, were found next door.

"A woman said she ran out of her house, she left behind her sister, her cousin and a 6-month-old baby inside, and she looked back, and the house blew up behind her," said Councilwoman Valerie Pope-Ludlam.

Just before the blast, a fountain of gasoline spouted above ground, said Paul Allaire, a city information officer. "It was up in the air — high pressure — like a geyser," he said.

The pipeline carries gasoline, diesel and jet fuel from a tank farm in Colton, several miles from the blaze site, to southern Nevada, supplying the Las Vegas Valley with 90 percent of its fuel.

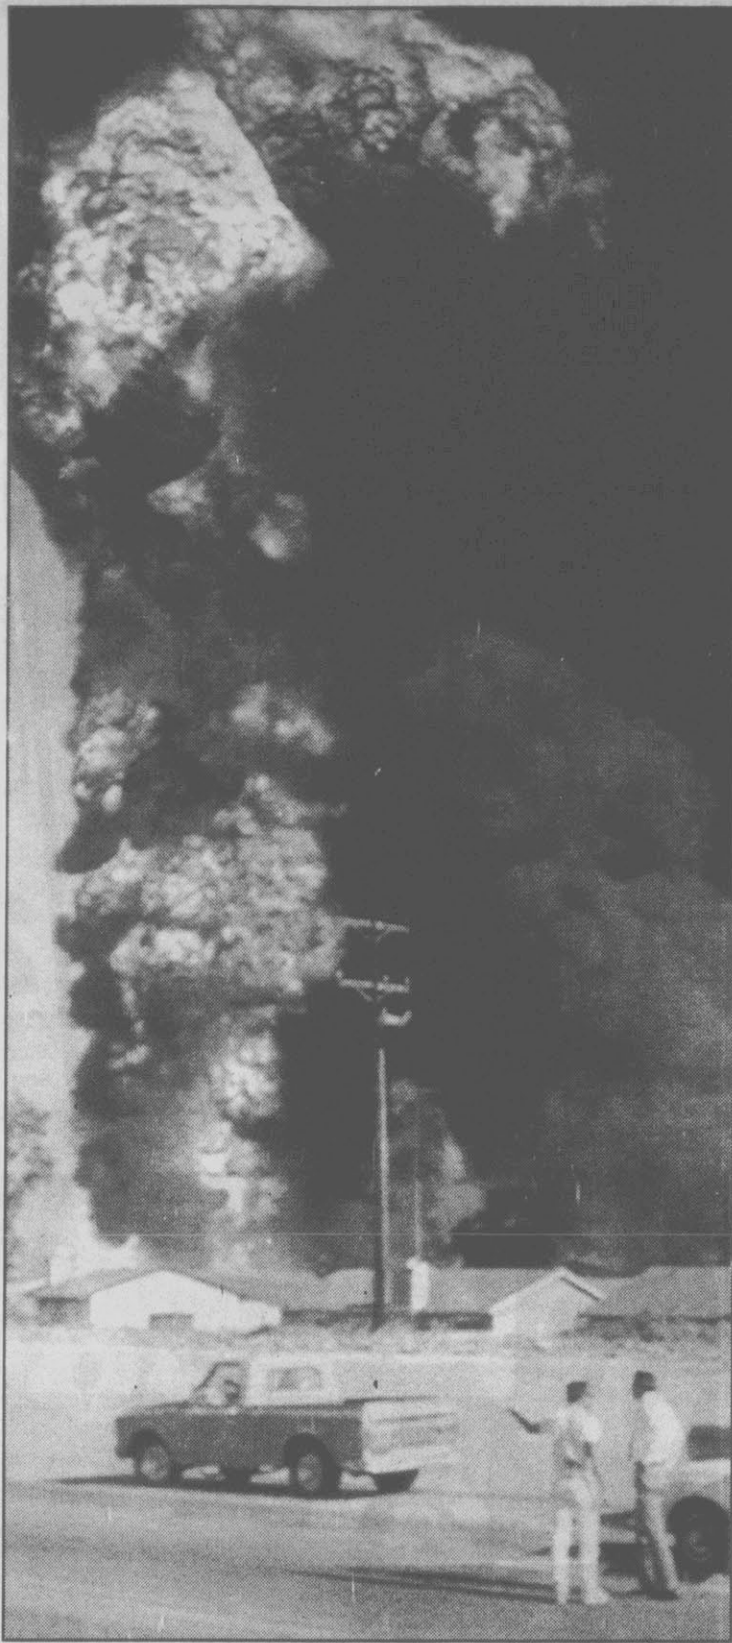

It was buried 6 feet deep near the spot where the train derailed.

Once the explosion occurred, the flow of fuel through the pipeline was shut off, said Jed Robinson, Calnev's general manager in San Bernardino. But fuel remaining in the shattered pipe continued to burn fiercely through much of the day. Robinson said up to 12,000 gallons of gasoline burned.

Residents have complained recently that train wheels throw off sparks as they pass and that railroad crews have to walk alongside afterward and douse small fires.

A freight train passed over the tracks 10 minutes before the explosion, said Southern Pacific spokesman Bob Taggart.

There was no immediate evidence, however, that sparks from the passing train triggered the blast.

Teachers Return To L.A. Schools

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Teachers return to classrooms today with higher salaries and more authority in the schools after approving a three-year contract to end a bitter strike in the 594,000-pupil district.

The teachers approved a pact Thursday that increases pay by 24 percent over three years, gives them greater curricula control, and reduces outside classroom duties such as yard supervision.

"Things in the Los Angeles Unified School District, as far as teachers are concerned, have changed for all time," proclaimed United Teachers-Los Angeles President Wayne Johnson before the agreement was approved by the union's members in a voice vote at the Sports Arena.

Teachers lost on the issue of recovering pay that had been docked because of job actions that preceded their May 15 walkout. Many teachers had refused to patrol school yards or work on grading after school.

Board members also approved the pact, reached by negotiators at 1 a.m. Thursday.

"I look forward to healing, not only on the board but in the district as a whole," said board President Roberta Weintraub.

One board member, Rita Walters, criticized the $600 million salary plan as a drain on other parts of the budget.

"There is money being taken away from the children by the district, from other workers in our district in order to support the teacher raise. I think that's unconscionable," she said.

The teachers carved out a site-management program under which they share power with parents and administrators in overseeing curriculum and discipline. The union represents 22,000 of the Los Angeles Unified School District's 32,000 teachers, counselors and librarians.

Salaries under a contract that expired in July 1988 range between $23,440 and $43,319 a year, depending on experience and education. The pact raises salaries in the first year to between $25,316 and $46,594 and at the end of three years to between $29,529 and $53,938.

Teachers will receive a retroactive pay raise for the past school year, during which they worked without a contract.

The district, the second largest in the nation after New York, brought in substitutes when teachers walked out. But attendance plummeted and classes became mostly baby-sitting sessions.

Joint Effort

ARCHDALE, N.C. (AP) — A Highway Patrol trooper's intuition and a canine's special training combined to make one of the biggest drug busts in Randolph County Wednesday.

Police seized 821 pounds of marijuana when State Trooper Tim Cardwell stopped a U-Haul truck on Interstate 85 near U.S. 311 for suspicion of drunken driving. When one of the passengers started acting suspicious, the trooper said he asked if he could search the truck. That's when drug-sniffing police dog Lobo went into action.

Sanjuanita Ashabranner, 31, and Jose Vecchio, 25, both of San Antonio, Texas, are being held under $1 million bonds each and are charged with two counts of trafficking in drugs and two counts of conspiracy to traffic in drugs.

The street value of the marijuana was estimated at $1.36 million.

Air Travel Industry Expecting Big Summer Despite Terrorism, Woes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

From labor travails to terrorist threats to rising fuel prices to aging planes, the nation's airlines face daunting challenges as their busiest season begins with the Memorial Day weekend.

Nonetheless, industry analysts and travel agents expect a strong summer for air travel as stable fares at home and a more valuable dollar abroad lure vacationers.

"I think it's going to be a record summer," said Louis Marckesano, an airline analyst for Janney Montgomery Scott Inc., a Philadelphia securities firm.

The airline industry has been turned on its head, with competition growing fiercer and takeover raiders swarming over profitable Northwest Airlines.

But the industry's biggest trauma this year, a bitter labor strike at Eastern Airlines, hasn't resulted in the mass inconvenience to travelers that originally was feared.

Instead, it's turned out to be a boon for Eastern's leading competitors.

Delta Air Lines, American Airlines, Pan Am Corp. and USAir Group Inc., especially, are reaping profits from the woes of Eastern, which has been in Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection since March 9.

Together, the rivals have captured an estimated $6 million to $7 million a day in revenue lost by Eastern, which has been virtually grounded by the walkout that started March 4.

The extra profits have given many big airlines a cushion against surging fuel prices, sparing them from increasing fares, Marckesano and others suggested.

Eastern's sister carrier Continental Airlines announced last month that it was raising its "MaxSaver" discount fares by up to 18 percent. But Continental, often a price leader, recently retracted the fare increase after other carriers failed to match its initiative.

That could signal an end, at least temporarily, to what had been a trend of rising fares. Air tariffs have increased as much as 20 percent this year over 1988, some analysts say.

"I don't think there are going to be vast increases in fares," said Andrew Geller, who follows the industry for Provident National Bank in Philadelphia.

The halt to the fare spiral has occurred despite a dramatic rise in prices of jet fuel caused partly by the oil spill in Alaska and expectations of possible short oil supplies.

Jet fuel, one of the biggest costs in the airline industry, has jumped to about 65 cents a gallon from 58.7 cents in February, before the March 24 Exxon tanker spill that delayed shipments of crude oil to refineries.

Projections by Avmark Inc., an aviation consulting concern, suggest jet fuel costs will rise even more in years ahead, hitting at least 80 cents a gallon by century's end.

The apparent slowdown in the economy, credited in part to higher interest rates that have discouraged consumers from spending, appears to have had little effect on air travel.

Robert Joedicke, an analyst at Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc. in New York, expects passenger traffic this summer to be at least as good as last year within the United States and "stronger than a lot of people think" overseas.

"Our business is up fairly substantially for this summer over last year," said David Perelman, president of DMS Travel in New York City.

Bookings to Europe are running 15 percent to 30 percent above last summer, while domestic travel is up slightly, he estimated.

The anticipated growth in foreign travel is largely because of the rebounding dollar, analysts say. U.S. currency has been surging in value against the Japanese yen, West German mark and British pound in recent weeks. This means it takes fewer dollars to vacation in Japan and Europe than it did a year ago.

In addition, international airlines like Pan Am are sharply discounting fares to Europe this summer. Pan Am's foreign passenger traffic rose 1.9 percent in December 1988 from a year earlier. But it dropped 8.6 percent in January and 14 percent in February — largely because of the Dec. 21 explosion of a U.S.-bound flight over Scotland that has been blamed on a terrorist bomb.

But Pan Am's overseas traffic has been picking up and is expected to post an increase for May, spokeswoman Pamela Hanlon said in New York.

Air terrorism isn't the only fear of flying that has kept travelers away. Some would-be passengers are still wary of the stories about aging planes that break up in flight, despite the recent flurry of orders for new aircraft by many big carriers seeking to rejuvenate their fleets.

Cracks Found In New Sub's Hull

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The discovery of two serious cracks is necessitating the replacement of part of the steel hull of a nuclear submarine under construction at a Groton, Conn., shipyard, the Electric Boat Co. said.

Navy officials said Thursday they have opened an investigation into the cracks on the Topeka, a SSN-688 fast-attack sub.

The problem in the Electric Boat shipyard is "quite severe" and "a very unusual occurrence," the company said in a memo to lawmakers.

"A thorough investigation is being conducted which will include recommendations for repair," the memo said. "Topeka will not put to sea until Electric Boat and the Navy are fully satisfied that the vessel is safe."

Electric Boat, a division of General Dynamics Corp., said workers discovered the cracks on the outer steel hull Monday afternoon during sandblasting operations in Groton and reported them to the Navy.

The hull is made at Electric Boat's plant in North Kingstown, R.I., and assembled at the company's main plant in Groton.

Student Killed As Post Topples

BOLTON, Mass. (AP) — A high school student's effort to honor two classmates killed in a car accident ended in his own death when a 500-pound soccer goal post toppled onto him as he placed a memorial wreath on top of it.

Jason Goldfarb, 17, a junior from Stow, died at Clinton Hospital where he was taken after the accident Thursday morning.

Nashoba Regional High School Principal Sam Pawluk said Goldfarb and several other students were distraught over the deaths of classmates Steven Rausch and Joanne Basteri. Rausch and Basteri were killed Wednesday night when the car they were riding in struck a tree.

"Today some kids were having trouble coping with that. In their grief and sorrow, they'd walk out to the soccer field and just sit and cry out there," Pawluk said. "(Goldfarb) was climbing on the goal to leave something there as a remembrance. It toppled, fell over and killed him."

Police said Goldfarb was climbing the soccer goal on the campus field to sit with friends mourning Rausch and Basteri, who Pawluk said were soccer players in this town about 30 miles west of Boston.

The principal said that a few students were already sitting on the 8-foot-high steel goal. One student was treated for minor injuries and released from the hospital. The others escaped injury.

Pawluk said the school canceled today's classes but the building would be open, and teachers and counselors would be available if students want to talk about the tragedies.

"It's been a devastating experience for everyone here, but we'll get over it," Pawluk said. "We'll grow from it."

U.S. Names Japan, Brazil And India As Top Violators Of Trade Accords

By Mike Robinson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush, urging Japan, Brazil and India to open their markets to U.S. products, said today that negotiations aimed at ending unfair trade practices will begin with the three countries on June 16.

The administration singled out the three nations Thursday night for priority action under a 1988 trade law that calls for penalties against countries that are deemed to be especially protectionist.

"Our goal is to open markets and to eliminate trade barriers. We oppose protectionism in any and all forms. Therefore, I urge the governments of Japan, India, and Brazil to work constructively with us to resolve these issues expeditiously," the president said in a statement announcing the negotiation date as he left on a trip to Europe.

The 1988 Omnibus Trade Act requires the administration to issue what amounts to a hit list that names the countries whose trade barriers are most harmful to American producers. The government then has 18 months to negotiate away the barriers.

Failure of the talks could lead to tariffs of up to 100 percent on selected exports from the offending countries.

Announcing the action, U.S. Trade Representative Carla A. Hills told reporters, "This exercise is not intended to be offensive. I hope there is no backlash."

However, Japanese Ambassador Nobuo Matsunaga issued a statement calling the decision to include his country "extremely regrettable."

Hills also announced the United States would be watching closely 25 countries suspected of failing to protect U.S. copyrights and patents and said the Bush administration would reveal the status of the eight most flagrant ones in November.

The Japanese lobbied in recent weeks to stay off the list of top trade violators. They were less successful, however, than the Koreans, who made a number of trade concessions in recent days and did manage to avoid inclusion.

"In light of the good faith efforts that have been made, the government of Japan and the Japanese people are greatly disappointed by this one-sided decision," Matsunaga said. "There may well be some domestic backlash in Japan which will make the resolution of the various problemseven more difficult."

Japan was cited for its refusal to buy U.S. supercomputers and satellites as well as its barriers to purchase of U.S. wood products. The United States ran a trade deficit of $52 billion last year with Japan, or 44 percent of the $119.8 billion U.S. trade imbalance.

India was cited for barriers that bar foreign investment and the closing of its insurance market to foreign companies.

The administration cited Brazil for quotas on imports and licensing restrictions.

Hills said the administration plans "to immediately commence negotiations on all of this that we have identified" but added that there was no certainty that they could succeed.

"I have no assurance," she said. "I have only my own good will and I hope we can approach these negotiations with a constructive dialogue."

Besides citing Japan, Brazil and India for flagrant trade barriers, the administration placed eight countries on a "priority watch list" of nations that have failed to protect U.S.

copyrights and patents. It declined, however, to target any countries for priority action on that issue.

It did establish a lesser "watch list" of 17 other countries that have not established safeguards against infringement on U.S. copyrights and patents.

The president also has directed Cabinet officials to open separate negotiations with the Japanese on eliminating "structural impediments" to sales of U.S. goods within their economy. The impediments range from pricing mechanisms to bid rigging.

In his statement today, Bush said U.S. officials looked at "a large number of practices" that ultimately were not listed — including Japanese rice quotas and the subsidies given by the European Community to the manufacturers of Airbus airliners. He said it was felt they could be better addressed through existing international trade forums.

OPEN MEMORIAL DAY 9-6

House Democrats Ready For Wright's Departure

By Steve Komarow
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — House Democrats, anticipating a historic resignation next week of Speaker Jim Wright, are making plans for quickly promoting Majority Leader Thomas S. Foley of Washington to the powerful speaker's post.

But intrigue is brewing for filling in the rest of the party leadership slots as some Democrats worry that Rep. Tony Coelho, Foley's likely successor, could hurt the party because of questions about his own financial dealings.

Foley, talking with reporters Thursday in Seattle, said he spoke to Wright earlier in the day and the speaker "repeated his desire to have an opportunity to state his case, his side of the case, to the widest possible audience, and he's determined to take that opportunity at the first time that seems appropriate."

"I assume that will be with either next week or shortly thereafter," Foley said.

Leadership sources in the Capitol said arrangements were being made for Wright to make a resignation address to the House next Wednesday, but the speaker himself had not yet decided on his precise course of action.

Wright, D-Texas, remained secluded in his office Thursday, but he released a statement making clear he no longer was seeking any "plea bargain" with the House ethics committee.

One of the most serious charges made by the ethics committee was that Wright's wife, Betty, was given a no-work job by Wright's friend and business partner, George Mallick. House rules prohibit gifts from people with interest in legislation, and the committee said it believed Mallick, a Fort Worth developer, had an interest.

Wright, who has vowed to clear his wife's name, dispatched his attorneys on Wednesday in search of a deal that would accomplish that, according to sources who said the lawyers offered his resignation in exchange for the panel dropping at least the charges that involve his wife.

But the deal fell through as Republicans and at least one Democrat on the panel resisted.

Wright on Thursday distanced himself from the effort and indicated it was over.

"There is no deal now. There will be no deal in the future," he said in the statement, insisting he had never personally engaged in the discussions.

It remained unclear whether Wright, if he resigned his speakership, would at the same time resign his seat in the House or if that would happen soon thereafter. The ethics committee would be forced to abandon its case only if Wright left the House.

If Wright resigns his speakership, his party would quickly caucus to fill his post and the House presumably would elect the popular Foley, the No. 2 House Democrat.

If Foley moved up to speaker, his post of majority leader would become vacant.

Coelho, D-Calif., would be next in line. However, Coelho recently admitted that he failed to include on his financial disclosure forms a $50,000 bank loan that he used toward purchasing junk bonds.

On Thursday, the Los Angeles Times reported the Justice Department is conducting a preliminary criminal investigation of whether Coelho received favors from Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc., the firm that issued the junk bond.

After the troubles surrounding Wright, some lawmakers were privately promoting Rep. Dick Gephardt, D-Mo., for the majority leader's post. Gephardt and Coelho are political allies, but the Missouri Democrat did not rule out such a run.

Gephardt press spokesman Deborah Johns said her boss is "waiting to see what the speaker is going to do. He's listening to people and at this time he just hasn't made a decision."

Rep. Ed Jenkins, D-Ga., also was being mentioned for a leadership spot. Contenders lining up for Coelho's No. 3 whip's spot, should he try to move up, included Rep. David Bonior, D-Mich., the current chief deputy whip, and Democratic Caucus Chairman Rep. William H. Gray III, D-Pa.

The politicking was taking place quietly.

"There's a certain amount of inappropriateness in mounting a campaign before the funeral," quipped Rep. Pat Williams, D-Mont.

Some Democrats were distressed at the turn of events, with the speaker seemingly being forced out before the ethics committee even moved into the phase of its proceedings during which Wright could testify and make his case.

"My heart is so heavy that this could happen to the House of Representatives," said Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., who in 1986 ran unsuccessfully for whip.

Rangel said he was especially bothered by those members who have called for Wright's resignation because he is embarrassing the House.

"I was outraged because, hell, there's nothing wrong with embarrassing other members of the damned House," he said heatedly. "I just can't think how you'd ask someone to damage the office and walk away from it without fighting like hell."

Tiny Town Manager Judy Gerace touches up a restoration project to one of the buildings

Tiny Town Reopens Saturday

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TINY TOWN, Colo. — A miniature city built 75 years ago as a play town for a businessman's daughter opens Saturday after a sprucing up, and its operators hope it will once again be a top tourist attraction.

Tiny Town is located about five miles southwest of Denver and boasts more than 70 buildings. Many are miniature replicas of Denver historical buildings such as the city's first fire station, the first telephone office, Mrs. Murphy's Boarding House, some landmark mansions and some businesses.

Twenty of the buildings — most of which are little taller than an adult's waist — are the originals that George Turner built for his daughter as a fantasy village beginning in 1915.

On a hillside across Turkey Creek from the main village are several replicas of old mining structures similar to those still in place around such historical mining towns as Central City and Cripple Creek.

On Saturday, a Colorado Ballet performance in the tiny village once known as Turnerville will mark Tiny Town's emergence from the tall mountain weeds that shrouded it for several years.

Tiny Town was closed for the better part of five years for renovation by volunteers working for the non-profit Tiny Town Foundation.

The town was opened to the public on selected weekends last summer, and when 11,000 people visited during the first one, the group decided it better prepare for bigger crowds than anticipated.

Research indicates it is the oldest miniature town in the United States, says Bob Kintzele, a longtime Tiny Town fan who helped with the restoration.

The village is still for children, said Kintzele.

"They come up here and you don't have to tell them this is for kids," he said.

George Turner's creation, which grew from a few small buildings in 1915 to about 125 by 1925, was one of the state's top three tourist attractions behind Buffalo Bill Cody's grave and Pike's Peak.

Consumers Spend More In April

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Consumer spending shot up 1.1 percent in April, the biggest advance in nearly a year, outpacing a 0.4 percent increase in personal income, the government reported today.

The combination of a strong spending increase and the sluggish income gain produced a sharp reduction in the personal savings rate, which dropped to 5.3 percent last month from a three-year high of 6.3 percent during the previous month, the Commerce Department said.

The April increase in personal income was the smallest gain since income fell 0.2 percent last November. Personal income had risen a strong 0.8 percent in March and 1.0 percent in February.

Last month's increase in personal income, to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $4.37 trillion, would have been stronger were it not for decreases in farm subsidies over the past two months, coupled with bonuses for autoworkers and retroactive Social Security benefit payments that inflated March's figure.

Excluding those special factors, personal income advanced a strong 0.8 percent in April after rising 0.7 percent in March.

The 1.1 percent increase in personal consumer expenditures, to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $3.42 trillion, was the biggest advance since a 1.3 percent increase was registered last June. Expenditures had risen just 0.3 percent in March and 0.4 percent in February, causing analysts to attribute part of the current slowdown in economic growth to slackening consumer spending.

Consumer spending is closely watched as indicator of the economy's health because it accounts for two-thirds of overall economic activity.

The rebound in spending last month was partly attributed to a rise in auto sales, which perked up somewhat in April after carmakers launched a round of rebates and cut-rate financing deals to lure customers back to showrooms.

The pickup in auto sales was the primary power behind a 3.2 percent increase last month in consumer spending on durable goods — "big ticket" items expected to last at least three years.

Spending on durable goods last month rose to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $467.1 trillion after declining during the previous two months, when auto sales had been weak.

Purchases of non-durable goods, meanwhile, rose 0.7 percent last month and spending on services rose 0.8 percent.

Disposable, or after-tax income held virtually even last month after rising 0.3 percent in March.

Field Trip Robbery

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JAY, Fla. — A class field trip turned into a visit to the juvenile detention center for two sixth-graders after they allegedly helped themselves to more than $10,000 during a bank tour.

The boys, ages 12 and 13, were charged with grand theft Thursday after allegedly stuffing $100 bills in their clothes as their class toured the vault at CNB National Bank, said Santa Rosa County Sheriff's Capt. Terry Hardy.

Hardy said the boys were taken to the Youth Detention Center in Pensacola.

Jay Elementary School Principal Elton Nowling said the boys were among 30 sixth-grade students and their teachers who toured the bank to learn about banking and currency.

After the visit, the bank manager called to say he was missing $10,100.

Nowling said two sheriff's deputies questioned the students about the reported theft one at a time. He said the boys did not try to deny that they took the money, and all the money was recovered.

Nowling later assembled all the sixth-graders for a lecture.

"I think (the incident) may have seemed kind of funny to start out with, but when I got there it ceased being funny," Nowling said.

He said the boys, both recent transfers to the school, would be suspended for the rest of the school year.

This is a dramatized version of facts taken from the Book of Joshua, intending to show some of the customs of these ancient and traditional times.

OTHNIEL'S TRIUMPH

AFTER JOSHUA HAD LED THE ISRAELITES INTO THE PROMISED LAND, CONQUERING CITY AFTER CITY, AND KING AFTER KING, THE PEOPLE FINALLY BEGIN TO SETTLE INTO THEIR INHERITANCE...

THIS IS THE LAST STRONGHOLD OF THE GIANTS - WHICH WAS GIVEN TO ME AS PART OF MY INHERITANCE!

HOW CAN I, CALEB, SON OF JEPHUNNEH, TAKE POSSESSION OF ALL MY INHERITANCE WHEN, BEHOLD, THE GIANTS STILL HOLD THIS GREAT CITY!

TO THE MAN THAT SMITEST KIR-JATH-SE-PHER, AND TAKETH IT, TO HIM WILL I GIVE ACH-SAH, MY DAUGHTER, TO WIFE!

AND WORD OF THIS OFFER SOON GOES THROUGHOUT THE TRIBE OF JUDAH - BUT THE PEOPLE TREMBLE AT THE THOUGHT OF HAVING TO FIGHT THE FIERCE GIANTS IN THEIR OWN STRONGHOLD - HOW CAN ANY MAN OVERCOME THESE GIGANTIC WARRIORS RULING THE SURROUNDING LANDS, EXACTING TAXES FROM THE LESSER PEOPLE WHO LIVE IN CONSTANT FEAR OF THESE TERRIFYING BEINGS?!!

New Baby? Begin Saving For College

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — Parents are urged to begin saving for college even before their kids are out of diapers.

But, if they do, will that eliminate them from consideration for financial help later?

No, says James Scannell of the University of Rochester.

"Colleges and universities follow standard guidelines in determining financial need. They do not penalize those who have saved for education."

Steve Martin Pays Tribute To Gilda Radner On SNL

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — "Saturday Night Live" host Steve Martin paid emotional homage to Gilda Radner on the season-ender last week. Instead of the usual monologue, Martin introduced a tape of their 1978 classic sketch, a fantasy dance sequence that paid tribute to Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, but was set in the shallow and distinctly un-romantic setting of a '70s discotheque.

After the tape was over, Martin said, "Whenever I see that tape, I can't help thinking how great you looked — and how young I was. Gilda, we're going to miss you." The show went on as usual, except that bandleader G.E. Smith, Radner's ex-husband, wore a black armband.

The reports were not the first time top leaders were said to be in trouble during the power struggle, but the official media have indicated the conservatives are winning the battle for power.

The official People's Daily newspaper reported today that all seven of the nation's military districts were backing Li's martial law decree.

State-run newspapers on Thursday prominently displayed a letter from military commanders supporting the crackdown.

Li appeared on nationwide television Thursday for the first time in six days and defended martial law.

Law Firm Named In Court Motion

Attorneys Tom Taft and Ken Haigler have denied any wrongdoing, and they are asking the N.C. State Bar Association to investigate the filing of the motion. Taft said his office will file a reply to the motion.

Taylor refused to comment on whether he received any of the gifts. He directed questions to the legal counsel for the state Highway Patrol.

"We will also ask the state bar to investigate the filing of these papers, the timing of the affidavits and motions and their relationship to the defense strategy adopted by Mr. Ragsdale," said Taft, who is a state senator.

"We believe the papers were filed as part of a calculated defense strategy to disrupt the prosecution of the case, to drive a wedge between us and our clients, to turn the focus of these cases away from the facts and to coerce an inadequate and prejudicial settlement," Taft said.

Taft's law firm originally represented seven families who sought compensation for deaths or injuries in the wreck, but five of the cases have been settled out of court. Taft's law firm still represents the administrators of the estates of John Holmes and Shawan Albritton, two children killed in the accident.

"We deny any wrongdoing on either the part of Taft, Taft and Haigler or the part of Highway Patrolman Steve Taylor," Taft said. He would not say whether the statement meant he denies the firm ever gave the gifts to Taylor.

Taylor was a sergeant stationed in Greene County at the time of the accident, but he was demoted to master trooper in January 1988 and reassigned to Wilmington. Ike Avery, special deputy attorney general and counsel to the Highway Patrol, said the demotion was not related to the investigation of the accident.

Taylor said there has already been an inquiry into the situation, but he declined to confirm or deny he received gifts.

"All the questions have been answered. There's a long story that you probably are not aware of," he said. "Everything is documented with the Highway Patrol."

Avery said appropriate action was taken after an investigation two years ago, but he could not comment on what was done.

"We can't talk about the internal affairs investigation because they are confidential under state law ...," he said. "The Highway Patrol investigated the original complaint and has taken the appropriate action."

Avery also said his office did not provide Ragsdale or Lindquist with information to file the motion.

"It's an interesting twist in the middle of civil litigation," he said.

In addition to suing the truck's owner, victims have also sued the estate of the truck driver, Karson Lee Conger, and the manufacturer of the bus, Thomas Built Buses Inc. of High Point.

In the motion filed Wednesday, defense attorneys claim they were not aware of the extent of "the abuses" involved in actions by Taft and Haigler until obtaining an affidavit in March from Taylor's wife.

Florida Rallies Past ECU For 11-6 Win In Regional

Gators Erase Pirate Leads Twice In See-Saw Game

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — In a match of point-counterpoint, Florida matched East Carolina play for and then some.

Florida twice came from behind and then put the Pirates away for good in the sixth inning en route to a 11-6 first-round win at the NCAA East Regional Baseball Tournament before a crowd of 4,217 at McKethan Stadium at Perry Field Thursday.

The Pirates, 37-10, took on Villanova at 11:30 a.m. today. Florida, 44-20, plays Central Florida tonight at 7:30 p.m.

"I felt like through most of the game we gave them a fight," ECU coach Gary Overton said. "I think we gave them all they wanted for the better part of the game. It's unfortunate that we had to make the mistakes we did and they had some timely hits."

Thanks in part to a three-run homer by Steve Godin in the top of the third, ECU had a 4-0 lead, but Florida came back with three runs in the bottom of the inning.

Then, after Florida went ahead 5-4 with two runs in the bottom of the fifth, ECU came up with two runs in the top of the sixth for a 6-5 lead.

Again, though, the Gators had an answer as they scored four runs in the bottom of the inning and never looked back.

"What hurt was the third inning where we scored four runs in the top of the inning and we wanted to hold them," ECU shortstop David Ritchie said. "They got a few hits and we walked a few people and that really hurt us. That put them back in the game."

For the Gators, ECU's early lead served as a wake-up call.

"I thought that definitely got us going," Florida's Brian Reimsnyder, who had two hits and three RBI, said. "We weren't as intense as we needed to be. But, (we rallied) not only in that inning, but in every inning they scored."

Herbert Perry brought the Gators back in the third when he singled in two runs with the third coming off a ground out by Tim Oxley.

"That was a tremendous lift," Florida coach Joe Arnold said, "just to get back in the game. We couldn't afford to give them four runs and just die. Every time they scored, we scored."

ECU's final lead came in the sixth when Mike Andrews drove in Steve Godin with a sacrifice fly. Ritchie followed with a solo homer over the right-field fence.

Things began to unravel for the Pirates in the bottom of the inning, though.

At The Regionals:

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Florida pitcher Jeff Gidcumb was expected to take the mound Thursday against East Carolina, but instead the Gators decided to go with lefthander John Wiggs.

At the pre-tournament press conference Arnold had announced Gidcumb as his starter if the right-hander's shoulder was okay.

"The reason we went with Wiggs and not Gidcumb was because we felt we would probably need our opening-game pitcher to come back on Sunday and pitch again," Florida coach Joe Arnold said. "We felt if Gidcumb threw in the tourney, he would only be good for one game. The decision to go with Wiggs was both Jeff's and mine. We both felt that he wasn't 100 percent, it would be better not to go with him."

That decision brought some changes in the ECU lineup, with Chris Cauble being inserted at catcher and Tommy Eason moving from catcher to left field in place of John Adams, who struggled at the plate in the Colonial Athletic Association Tourney after earning all-conference honors during the regular season.

Wiggs was no world-beater, but he was a winner as the Gators held off ECU, 11-6.

Wiggs scattered eight hits over six-plus innings. The Bucs' other hit came off reliever Jamie McAndrew. In Wiggs' previous three starts he had a 5.14 earned run average.

The loss was ECU's fifth-straight in regional play since 1984.

ECU twice held one-run leads against the second-seeded Gators, but coach Gary Overton said he knew it wasn't enough.

"With the number of at-bats they had, having a one-run lead is not enough of a cushion," he said.

Prior to the tournament, Miami officials were none too happy about not hosting this regional, considering they had a better record than host Florida (45-15 to 43-20). Florida, though, put together the more attractive bid to the NCAA and thus earned its first regional.

Despite the rumor and innuendo about the situation, Miami coach Ron Fraser and Florida coach Joe Arnold made no mention of it at the pre-tournament press conference. Both coaches said how happy they were to be here and usual standard pre-game statements. So for now, it's a dead issue.

This regional has a number of player who figure to be picked in the early rounds of the Major League Baseball Draft June 5-7.

Pitchers Jamie McAndrew (6-2, right-handed junior) of Florida and Joe Grahe (a 6-1, right-handed Sr.) of Miami are rated 20th and 58th, respectively in the Top 60 according to Baseball America. Villanova third baseman Gary Scott (a 6-0, 180-pound junior) is rated the 50th best prospect in the draft.

The only North Carolina-based prospect in the poll is high school senior Edward Gerald, a 6-3, 183-pound outfielder from St. Pauls, just outside of Fayetteville. Gerald has already signed a football scholarship with North Carolina.

Calgary Tops Canadiens To Win Stanley Cup, 4-2

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MONTREAL — By playing Montreal's game in Montreal's building, the Calgary Flames came away with the Canadiens' most cherished prize.

For the first time in Canadiens history, the Stanley Cup made its triumphant trip around Montreal Forum ice in enemy hands.

Using a defensive system that reminded Montreal of its own tight-checking style of play, Calgary won its first NHL championship Thursday night, beating the Canadiens 4-2 to win the best-of-7 final round in six games.

"The Flames were good at protecting the lead and that's our game," Montreal's Ryan Walter said. "Defensively, they were tougher than I expected. Their forwards come back all the way into the defensive zone. (Goalie) Mike Vernon makes all the big saves. And their defensemen just dump the puck into our end."

"They deserved to win the Cup."

By becoming only the sixth franchise in the expansion era to win the Stanley Cup, Calgary prevented Montreal from winning its 24th league title.

"We've been listening about the mystique in Montreal," said record-setting defenseman Al MacInnis, who won the Conn Smythe Trophy as the postseason's most valuable player. "It didn't really faze us that much."

It didn't faze MacInnis, whose seven goals and 24 assists made him the first defenseman ever to lead the playoffs in points and who finished with a 17-game scoring streak, longest ever for a defenseman.

It didn't faze Vernon, who allowed only 16 goals in the series and outplayed his more heralded rival, Patrick Roy.

It didn't faze Joe Mullen, who led all goal-scorers with 16, or Joel Otto, whose toughness and ability to win almost every faceoff gave the Flames a huge positional advantage.

And it didn't faze Lanny McDonald, who scored the go-ahead goal Thursday night after being benched for three games because of ineffectiveness.

McDonald, he of the shaggy red mustache, indicated that the goal and the game would probably be the last of his outstanding 16-year career.

"The nicest thing about this is that I scored my first NHL goal in the Montreal Forum," he said. "And it's a nice way to end it... um, for now."

He laughed and added: "I'm not saying I'm ending it. I might just drop back and play defense for five more years."

General Manager Cliff Fletcher called the goal "a fitting end to one of the greatest hockey careers ever."

If, as expected, McDonald does announce his retirement, he'll take with him more than 500 goals and 1,000 points — and the memory of carrying the Stanley Cup around the most hallowed hall of hockey.

Was he worried about dropping it? "There was no weight to it," he said. "You could carry it forever."

Seventeen years ago, it seemed like it would take forever for any Flames to carry the Cup.

They were born as the Atlanta Flames in 1972 and after spending eight frustrating years in the deep South — they made the playoffs six times but never won a series — they moved to Calgary.

It took a while for Fletcher to stockpile championship-caliber talent, but by 1986 the Flames were ready to make a run. They got to the finals that year, losing to the Canadiens.

"They played with revenge from when they lost the Cup in 1986," Montreal coach Pat Burns said. "They did not want to go through it again."

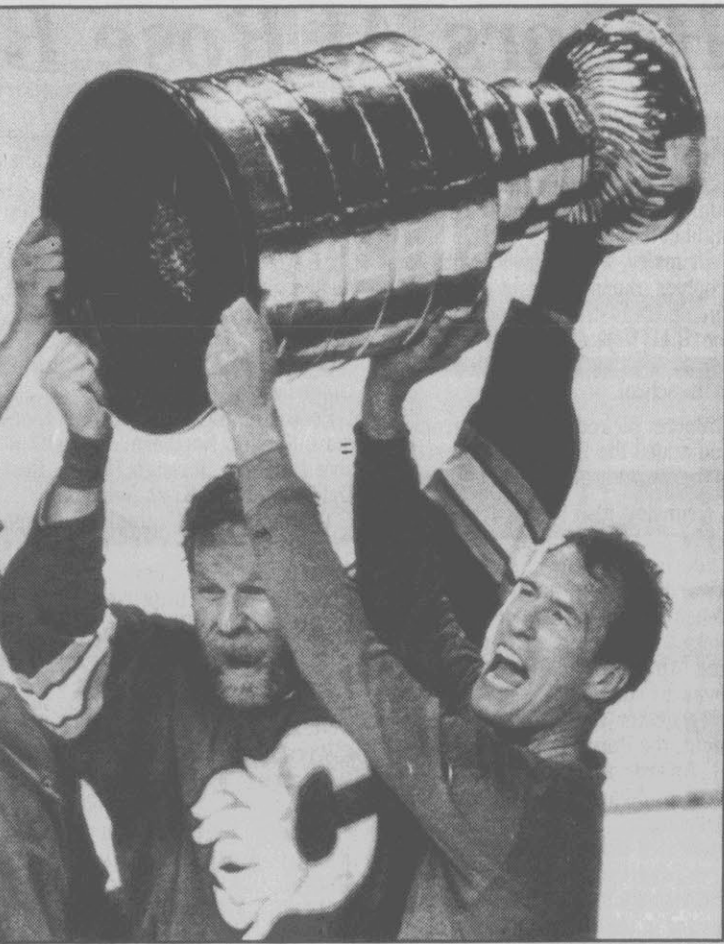

"You have to give the Flames a lot of credit for the way they played. They're a great organization."

Many of the Canadiens said Calgary won simply because it was the better team.

"We lost to a team that was a little better than us," said Mats Naslund, who had just one goal and was one of several high-scoring Canadiens who were muzzled by Calgary's checkers. "There was very little open ice all series."

Calgary coach Terry Crisp, only the 12th man to capture the Cup as a player (with Philadelphia in 1974 and 1975) and as a coach, always said "the Stanley Cup would be won on effective defensive play."

"Last year... we realized that we didn't play a patient defensive game and that was our downfall, so we worked on it," he said. "We had a style where we could play defensively and open up offensively."

Rick Mears Says Pole Position Not Necessarily Advantage

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — Rick Mears says the pole position in a 500-mile race is more a responsibility than an advantage.

"You can win from any seat in the house," said Mears, who will start from the pole in Sunday's Indianapolis 500. "There's a lot of time to work your way through traffic. The big thing, for me, is it's a little safer starting up front at the beginning."

"I can set a pace, if we can lead the race at a pace that I feel is comfortable on the car, on the tires, for the conditions, then we'll do that," the defending champion and three-time winner said.

Mears, who owns a record five poles at Indy, was criticized by some drivers for setting too slow a pace at the start of the 1982 race. Just before the leaders approached the starting line, Kevin Cogan's car veered to the right, clipped A.J. Foyt and bounced back in front of Mario Andretti. Foyt's car was repaired and ready to go when the race was re-started, but Andretti was eliminated.

Andretti blamed Cogan, and Cogan blamed Mears.

"That was to my advantage," Mears said, recalling the slow 1982 start. "I'm the pole-sitter. I'm supposed to pace the race at what I feel is right. I felt I could get a better jump at that speed, in that particular gear, and get to the corner before the other guys. That's really my prerogative to do that. But everybody hollered about it so much, I figured I just might as well pick it up and go whatever."

This year, Mears was the fastest driver in practice at more than 226 mph and the fastest in qualifications at record speeds of 224.254 for one lap and 223.885 for four laps. He doesn't think those make him the favorite on Sunday.

"Everybody has more faith in me than I do, I guess," he said. "In 1986, the car never bobbled all month long. But on race day, the car couldn't balance it. When we got in traffic, we couldn't go anywhere. So you just never know about this place until you see the checkered flag."

Mears also said the close competition — six cars were qualified at more than 220 mph and five others were above 218 — makes a pre-race prediction meaningless.

ECU Women's Cage Schedule Announced

Two tournaments, two NCAA tournament participants and a lineup of Colonial Athletic Association opponents highlight the 1989-90 East Carolina women's basketball schedule, announced today by head coach Pat Pierson. "We feel really good about next year's schedule," Pierson said as she prepares to open her third year at the helm of the Lady Pirates. "We are improving our schedule each year, but yet it's not so overbearing. We still have a young team with just one senior, and I think think schedule will prove to be challenging but we can be successful with it."

The eighth annual Lady Pirate Classic will be the first of two tournaments on the schedule, featuring Coastal Carolina, Howard, Fairleigh Dickinson and East Carolina. ECU will host the tournament on Dec. 1-2.

The Furman Christmas Classic will be the last action of 1989 for the Lady Pirates as they take on Furman, Princeton and Rider.

CAA action will open up the new year for ECU on Jan. 8, when the Lady Pirates travel to George Mason.

East Carolina finished 15-13 overall last year and 7-5 in the CAA, tied with George Mason for third.

CAA opponent James Madison advanced to the NCAA tournament last year, as did N.C. State, which the Pirates will face on Dec. 6.

"The CAA will be as tough as ever," Pierson said. "I think our biggest challenge will be N.C. State, which finished in the top 20."

ECU will host its second annual Alumni Game on Nov. 18 and then open its season on the road at Georgia Southern on Nov. 24.

The schedule:

November: 18 — Alumni Game; 24 at Georgia Southern; 25 at Augusta College; 28 at N.C. A&T.

December: 1-2 Lady Pirate Classic (Coastal Carolina, Howard, Fairleigh Dickinson); 6 N.C. State; 16 Winthrop; 20-21 at Furman Christmas Classic (Furman, Rider, Princeton).

January: 8 at George Mason; 13 American; 15 James Madison; 18 Delaware State; 20 at William & Mary; 22 at Richmond; 27 at UNC-Wilmington.

February: 3 Appalachian State; 5 George Mason; 10 at American; 12 at James Madison; 17 William & Mary; 19 Richmond; 21 at Campbell; 24 UNC-Wilmington; 28 at Appalachian State.

March: 3 UNC-Charlotte; 8-10 at CAA Tournament (site to be announced).

Edenton Eliminates Williamston, 2-1

WILLIAMSTON — Edenton High School, which finished behind Williamston in the Northeastern Conference race, got its revenge Thursday, defeating the Lady Tigers, 2-1, to advance in the State 2-A Softball Playoffs.

Edenton scored a single run in the first inning to take the lead. Tia Dillard doubled and Carolyn Stallings singled. Stacey Hughes then got a hit to drive in Dillard.

Williamston came back with one in the bottom of the inning to tie it up. Valerie Peele singled and scored on a double by Dana Hardison.

But Edenton scored once more in the second to regain the lead, 2-1. Serena Beasley reached on an error and Trudy Hughes singled. Lora Wilson also got a hit, loading the bases. Another hit, by Shana Anderson brought in Beasley with what proved to be the winning run.

Cheryl Bogues, Hughes and Wilson each had two hits to lead Edenton. Williamston was led by Peele and Hardison who each had two — the Lady Tigers' only hits in the game.

Williamston ends the year with a 14-2 record while Edenton continues into the sectional playoff round next week.

North Carolina Tops Nicholls State

STARKVILLE, Miss. (AP) — Todd Nichols slugged a three-run home run and Jim Dougherty doused a Nicholls State rally Thursday to lift North Carolina to a 8-4 first round victory in the NCAA South Regional.

In the tournament opener, Mike Holman's wind-blown double drove home the winning run in the ninth inning as Jacksonville topped Indiana State 3-2.

Nationally second-ranked Mississippi State, 50-12, was matched against Western Carolina, 29-23, in the final first round game.

North Carolina, 38-15-1, built a 5-0 lead and then had to withstand a four-run rally by independent Nicholls State in the seventh.

With runners at second and third and four runs in, Dougherty came on to strike out Buddy Nichea and then got a ground out to end the inning. He got his fourth save with two-hit ball the rest of the way.

Clemson Defeats Stetson, 6-2

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Senior Brian Barnes became the fourth pitcher in NCAA history to achieve 500 career strikeouts, leading Clemson past Stetson 6-2 Thursday in the first round of the Atlantic Regional tournament.

The Atlantic Coast Conference champion Tigers, 48-18, advance to Friday's 7 p.m. winner's bracket game against Auburn.

Stetson, 37-22, meets the loser of Thursday night's Florida State-Rider game at 11 a.m. Friday.

Hornets' Tickets Are Hot Item

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The Charlotte Hornets have received orders for 24,327 season tickets, almost 1,000 over the capacity of the 23,388-seat Charlotte Coliseum and almost 4,000 over the cutoff of 20,388 on season tickets.

But while it's too early for anything more than an educated guess, there's a chance many or all of the first-time season ticket buyers will have their orders filled, the Hornets say.

"There's just now way to tell for sure at this point," said Sam Russo, Hornets vice president of business. "With so many people and options involved, the process just takes a while."

Season tickets for 42 games — 41 regular-season games and one preseason game — will be sold in three ways. First priority goes to renewals from current season-ticket holders; second to orders for additional seats from current season-holders, and third, in the order in which requests were made, to first-time season-ticket buyers.

Sacks On Pole For Champion Filter

CONCORD (AP) — Greg Sacks hasn't had the greatest season so far, but he hopes his pole-grabbing performance for the Champion Filter 300 Grand National stock car race this weekend means that his fortunes have changed.

"We've had a rocky start," he said. "We've led in some races but we've never been able to finish off the job."

Sacks earned the pole on Thursday with a top qualifying speed of 167.214 mph Thursday at Charlotte Motor Speedway.

Sixteen Added To Coca-Cola Field

CONCORD (AP) — Sixteen of the final 20 starting positions for Sunday's Coca-Cola 600 Winston Cup stock car race were filled Thursday by drivers who stood on their first-day times.

Larry Pearson will line up on the inside of the 11th row for NASCAR's longest race. He was one of 18 drivers who decided to stand on their qualifying time from Wednesday. Pearson's time was 168.961 mph.

Alan Kulwicki grabbed the $38,500 pole Wednesday with a top speed of 173.021 mph in his Ford Thunderbird. He will line up next to Mark Martin, another Ford driver, who clocked in at 172.651 mph.

Lining up next to Pearson will be Derrick Cope, who stood on his time of 168.898 mph. During second-day qualifying, drivers can either stand on their first-day time or try again.

The top qualifier Thursday was Butch Miller, who will start on the outside of Row 14 in a Chevrolet. His time was 168.408 mph.

Other drivers who qualified Thursday were Jim Sauter, with a lap of 167.697 mph, Chad Little, 167.639 mph, and Ed Bierschwale, 167.416 mph. Provisional starts went to Rick Mast and Dave Marcis.

Giants' Scoreless Drought Continues

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The San Francisco Giants were the highest scoring team in the National League on Tuesday. They haven't scored since.

The Giants' scoreless drought reached two games and 19 innings when the Montreal Expos shut them out 2-0 Thursday. The runs were just enough to make the Expos the NL's new top run producers with 187 to the Giants' 185.

The Expos blanked San Francisco 1-0 on Wednesday night.

"I'll stake my paycheck that we won't get shut out twice in a row again the rest of the year," said loser Mike Krukow, 3-2, who had a one-hitter with one out in the seventh when he gave up a single to Mike Aldrete. Tim Wallach followed with his third homer, snapping an 0-for-16 slump.

Montreal's Dennis Martinez, 4-2, checked the Giants on five hits through 8 2-3 innings before needing last-out help from Tim Burke.

Dodgers 7, Phillies 6

Eddie Murray triggered Los Angeles' biggest first inning since 1985 with a three-run double and the Dodgers needed all seven runs to hold off Philadelphia.

Winner Tim Lincecum yielded all the Philadelphia runs and nine hits in 7 1-3 innings and won for the first time this season without pitching a shutout. Jay Howell, the third Los Angeles pitcher in the eighth inning, put down a Philadelphia rally and earned his eighth save.

The Dodgers chased Don Carman, 1-7, after only 29 pitches. The seven runs were the most in the first inning by Los Angeles since Sept. 7, 1985, at San Francisco.

The Dodgers loaded the bases with none out on singles by Willie Randolph and Mickey Hatcher and a walk to Kirk Gibson. Murray then hit a 3-0 pitch just inside the left-field line to clear the bases.

Rick Dempsey and Mariano Duncan followed a one-out walk to Jeff Hamilton with consecutive run-scoring singles making it 5-0 and chasing Carman. After Belcher sacrificed, Mike Maddux balked Dempsey home and Hatcher followed a walk to Randolph with his second hit of the inning, scoring Duncan.

The Phillies scored in the fourth inning on Darren Daulton's two-run homer and added another in the fifth on Von Hayes' RBI single. Belcher, 4-4, left with one out in the eighth after singles by Hayes, Mike Schmidt and Juan Samuel made it 7-4. Ray Searage relieved and walked Daulton before yielding a two-run single to Dickie Thon.

Howell took over and struck out pinch hitter Tom Herr and retired Steve Jeltz on a fly ball to end the uprising.

"Any pitcher would say it (the 7-0 lead) was nice," Belcher said. "But it can be a double-edged sword because mentally you think a little differently, whether you plan to or not. I didn't call a very good game for myself. You just want to go right at people and not fool around with third and fourth pitches, but you can't pitch that way. I proved that."

Pirates 7, Braves 3

Doug Drabek allowed two runs and six hits in six innings to snap a personal five-game losing streak and Pittsburgh extended its longest winning streak of the season to four games.

Pete Smith, 1-6, yielded four runs and seven hits in six innings. The Braves have lost five straight and 10 of their last 12 games and have scored only 13 runs in their last nine games.

The Pirates broke a 1-1 tie in the fourth when Benny Distefano's second double of the game drove in Glenn Wilson, who singled. They scored again when Junior Ortiz led off the fifth with a single, stole second, was sacrificed to third by Drabek and scored on Barry Bonds' single. In the sixth inning, Wilson hit his seventh home run for a 4-1 lead.

Padres 2, Mets 1

Ed Whitson combined with Mark Davis on an eight-hitter for his fifth straight victory and Tony Gwynn doubled home the tie-breaking run in San Diego's two-run third inning.

Whitson, 7-2, worked 7 2-3 innings, yielding six hits, including Darryl Strawberry's 11th home run in the second inning. Davis fanned Strawberry to end the eighth and earned his major league-leading 15th save.

The Padres scored their runs in the third inning off David Cone, 3-3. After Marvell Wynne homered, Roberto Alomar singled and scored on Gwynn's double.

Mears...

refined, you don't have to work as hard or search to get the car balanced. That alone, along with better teams, better organizations, means a lot of cars out there have a legitimate shot at it."

The only thing he will predict is that the race will be fast.

The two-hour final practice on Thursday lent credence to that opinion, with eight drivers turning faster laps than the 215 that Mario Andretti led with in last year's "carburetion day" practice.

Al Unser, Mears' teammate, was fast at 217.407, followed by Andretti at 217.286, Teo Fabi of Italy at 217.233 and Mears at 216.710.

"Just from what I've felt in practice, the kind of numbers we've been seeing from everybody ... these speeds should hold fairly true," Mears said. "I think you'll see some pretty quick laps on Sunday."

"Everybody realizes you can lean on the car pretty hard. That's something everybody is going to have to keep in mind, to be able to set a pace that's slow enough to finish and fast enough to win."

All 33 starters practiced on Thursday, turning a total 941 laps on the 2 1/2-mile oval. There were no accidents.

Other fast drivers in the last track action before the start of Sunday's race included Scott Brayton at 216.658, Fittipaldi at 216.450, Michael Andretti at 216.206 and Danny Sullivan, another Mears' teammate, at 215.982.

Jim Crawford, whose car had to be shipped back to England for repair after a crash during practice here on May 18, was back on the track in the rebuilt Lola. He had a fast lap of 214.745 mph.

Asked if the quick repair was a miracle, Crawford replied: "You expect miracles these days. There were no problems with it. I knew before I got in it would be OK, and that's the way it ran."

HOW MANY LAPS?

DENVER (AP) — Fights in pro football training camps are inevitable. You get them between veterans and rookies trying to take their jobs, between offensive and defensive linemen and between wide receivers and defensive backs.

Dan Reeves, the coach of the Denver Broncos, has seen a lot of fights in his time and he has come up with an idea to stop them quickly.

Dan simply walks over to the fighters and quietly inquires: "After this is over, how many laps do you want to do?"

Slaughter Powers Yankees Past Angels

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Don Slaughter gave his ailing mother something to cheer about.

Slaughter had four hits, including a tiebreaking double in the seventh inning, as the New York Yankees beat the California Angels 8-6 Thursday night.

After the game at Yankee Stadium, Slaughter called his mother, who had a cancerous kidney removed Wednesday in California.

"I said 'Way to go' and she said 'Way to go,'" Slaughter said.

The catcher said he was distracted by his mother's operation during Wednesday night's game, but was able to regain his concentration Thursday.

"I came out of my fog," he said. "It's your priorities. My mom comes first."

Jesse Barfield, Mike Pagliarulo and Don Mattingly homered for the Yankees, who matched their season high with 14 hits.

"Isn't it nice to see some tallies and some hits and some runners running around the bases?" New York manager Dallas Green said.

Elsewhere in the American League, Detroit beat Cleveland 9-5, Milwaukee downed Oakland 4-1 and Boston routed Seattle 10-0.

Slaughter, who raised his average to .278, doubled to right, singled to left and had an infield hit in his first three at-bats.

"Donnie's an interesting hitter," Green said. "He'll line the ball. He'll flare the ball. He'll hit the ball as hard as anybody in the lineup."

Angels reliever Willie Fraser, 1-3, walked Ken Phelps with one out in the seventh and the game tied 6-6. After Barfield popped up, Pagliarulo singled and Slaughter blooped a double just inside the right-field line to score Phelps.

"I've hit just about every spot," Slaughter said. "In fact, I got a blooper just over the pitcher's head. It just landed in the right spot."

Tommy John, making his 700th career start, allowed six hits and five runs in 5 1-3 innings. The 46-year-old pitcher has given up 42 hits in his last 28 1-3 innings and is winless in five starts since April 17.

"He's an enigma," Green said. "I don't know if he can get big-league hitters out on a consistent basis anymore."

Dale Mohorcic, 1-1, allowed one run in 1 1-3 innings and Dave Righet-ti finished for his seventh save. California starter Mike Witt struggled, giving up eight hits and five runs in 2 2-3 innings. Witt has only one win in his last six starts.

"I think it's something mechanical," Angels pitching coach Marcel Lachemann said. "Obviously, there's something that needs to be worked out."

Brewers 4, Athletics 1
Robin Yount doubled in the go-ahead run in the fifth inning as Milwaukee beat Oakland's Dave Stewart for the first time.

Stewart, 8-2, was removed in the eighth inning after giving up nine hits, including five doubles, and all four runs. He entered the game with a 9-0 record against the Brewers.

"When a guy beats you that many times, you're certainly aware of it," Yount said. "I'm not saying you go into the batter's box with it on your mind. But it's nice to finally beat him. If you play long enough the odds are in your favor."

Milwaukee starter Bryan Clutterbuck, 2-1, allowed four hits before his shoulder stiffened after six innings. Dan Plesac got the final four outs for his ninth save.

Brewers rookie Bill Spiers hit a ground-rule double in the fifth and scored on Yount's double off the fence in right center. Dave Parker homered for Oakland in the first inning.

Tigers 9, Indians 5

The Tigers used nine extra-base hits to win their third straight game over Cleveland.

Gary Pettis' leadoff triple triggered a three-run first inning for Detroit, which also had six doubles and two home runs. The Tigers finished their homestand 8-2, their best long stay at Tiger Stadium since 1984.

"If this team can continue to play the way we think it should, we'll be back before you know it," interim manager Dick Tracewski said. "The guys are pushing forward now."

Frank Tanana, 4-4, gave up four runs in six innings. Frank Williams took over and pitched into the ninth, with Guillermo Hernandez getting the last out for his ninth save.

Cleveland's John Farrell, 2-5, gave up seven runs on six hits before leaving in the second inning.

"I felt really good out there," Farrell said. "I feel like I can throw the devil out of the ball. The only problem is they're hitting the devil out of it."

Red Sox 10, Mariners 0

Mike Smithson pitched his first shutout since 1986 and Mike Greenwell had four hits and four RBI's as the Red Sox completed a three-game sweep of the Mariners.

After the game, Seattle traded ace left-hander Mark Langston to Montreal for pitchers Randy Johnson, Gene Harris and Brian Holman.

Smithson, 2-3, allowed only two runners to reach third base. He gave up eight hits, struck out six and walked two in his fifth career shutout and first complete game of the season.

"I hadn't been happy with the way I was throwing, so when I started warming up I said to heck with it and went back to my old windup," Smithson said. "It certainly helped."

Greenwell preserved the shutout in the ninth by throwing Edgar Martinez out at the plate as he tried to score on David Cochrane's two-out single to left.

"Greenie threw the heck out of that ball," Smithson said. "He even surprised me by throwing to the plate. I thought he'd go to second to hold the other runners."

Greenwell singled in a run in the first inning and hit a three-run double in the second as the Red Sox capitalized on two Seattle errors for five unearned runs off Mike Dunne, 1-3. Greenwell also singled in the fifth and seventh innings for the fifth four-hit game of his career.

Blake Leads Atlanta

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MARIETTA, Ga. — It took a couple of victories in hometown tournaments for Jay Don Blake to get the financial backing he needed to join the PGA Tour.

"My golf game kind of went in limbo for a year and a half," Blake said Thursday after posting a 6-under-par 66 to take a one-shot lead in the first round of the Atlanta Classic. "I didn't even play competitively."

Blake had come out of Utah State as a top college player, winning the NCAA championship in 1980 and finishing second in 1981.

He failed several times to qualify for the PGA Tour and settled into a job at a golf course and in a hardware store in his hometown, St. George, Utah.

"I was broke, didn't have any money at all," Blake said.

Florida Tops Pirates ...

Brien Berckman, who had come on to close the fifth for starter Jake Jacobs, struggled from the outset of the next frame.

Bill Minnis opened the sixth with a solo homer well over the right-field fence. Brent Addison followed with a walk. Ned Brigham singled to right and Brian Reimsnyder walked to load the bases.

Addison scored on a wild pitch. A ground out by Herbert Perry scored Brigham and chased Berckman.

Tim Langdon came on, but was called for a balk, allowing Reimsnyder to score and make it 9-6.

ECU could have got right back in the game in top of the seventh. The Pirates loaded the bases as Chris Cauble and Calvin Brown, who was 2-5 on the night, singled and John Gast walked.

The Gators, though, brought in relief ace Jamie McAndrews and, other than the walk to Gast, he got out of the inning easily with a strikeout and a ground-out to strand three men on. All-told, ECU stranded 10 in the game.

From there, McAndrews effectively closed out the game. In the ninth, he allowed John Adams a walk and gave up a single to Godin. But Kevin Riggs grounded out in the next at bat to end the game.

"I thought we played not our best game," Overton said. "I said earlier it was going to take our best game to beat a team the caliber of the University of Florida."

"I think the key to the game was they took advantage of every one of our mistakes. It opened the door for them. It gave them some opportune runs at opportune times.

"I was proud of our guys battling back in a couple of situations. Playing a team like Florida, it takes a near-flawless game and we by no means did that."

Godin led ECU with three hits and three RBI as ECU had nine hits to Florida's eight. But, the Pirates committed three errors to Florida's one.

Left-hander John Wiggs started the game on the mound for Florida, getting the win. He was a surprise starter for Jeff Gidcumb, who had been slated to hurl. Gidcumb, however, came up with a stiff shoulder.

"Going in to the late innings, it's important to hold the lead if you have it," Overton said. "But that's the mark of a good club. They're deserving of their national ranking."

Miami 3, Villanova 1
GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Joe Grahe scattered six hits over nine innings to help Miami ease by Villanova, 3-1, in the early game of the NCAA East Regional Baseball Tournament Thursday.

Miami scored all of its runs in the fourth inning, keyed by a pair of rbi from Rey Noriega and Alex Fernandez.

Villanova came within 3-1 with a run in the top of the fifth, but that was as close as it would get.

Grahe finished the game with 12 strikeouts and two walks while raising his personal record to 13-4.

"I thought Joe did a great job," Miami coach Ron Fraser said. "We got great defense and the hits when we needed them. We got the three runs in that one inning and that was the ball game."

Miami, 45-15, takes on the Georgia Tech today at 3:30 p.m.

ACLU Vows To Support Viet Vets

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The American Civil Liberties Union says it will defend a pair of Ohio veterans if the government prosecutes them for arranging trips to Vietnam to heal "old, deep wounds" from the war they fought there two decades ago.

The announcement Thursday came just one day after the Treasury Department reaffirmed its intention to pursue a vigorous enforcement program against violations of embargoes that it says prohibit Americans from promoting or arranging unauthorized travel to Vietnam.

Susan R. Brenda, legislative analyst with the Washington office of the ACLU, said "The Treasury Department is simply without authority to reach directly into the First Amendment-protected activities of Americans in the United States and prevent them from organizing towards the perfectly legal end of travel to Vietnam."

Ms. Brenda appeared at a news conference with Donald Mills and John Myers, members of the Vietnam Veterans of America chapter in Akron, Ohio. The two men have organized six bargain-rate tours of Vietnam for veterans since 1984, and they said they will go ahead with another in November.

"We believe that an attempt to prosecute Vietnam veterans for traveling back to Vietnam in an effort to learn about present-day Vietnam and heal old, deep wounds would be a grave mistake," Ms. Brenda said. "Should the government proceed along that course, however, we will assist these veterans in their legal defense."

It is legal for Americans to travel to Vietnam, but the Treasury Department issued regulations last year making it illegal to "arrange, promote, or facilitate group or individual tours or travel" to any country listed under the Trading with the Enemy Act.

This list now includes Vietnam, Cambodia, North Korea and Cuba.

Mills and Myers began organizing tours of Vietnam after Mills revisited the country in 1984 as a member of the national board of Vietnam Veterans of America, which was looking into controversies over the defoliant Agent Orange and the issue of American servicemen missing in action.

Myers said the organized tours last about three weeks "from home town to home town" and cost $2,700, including transportation, meals and accommodations.

Yeltsin Nominated

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — Maverick Boris N. Yeltsin and several prominent reformers in the new congress were nominated today for a smaller, full-time legislature, but some charged that senior officials rigged the nominee list to stay in power.

The moves came during the second day of debate in the 2,250-member Congress of People's Deputies, the first competitively elected national assembly and the latest step in the Soviet experiment with democratic reform.

Only one member of the ruling Communist Party Politburo appeared on a congressional list of nominees for the smaller law-making body, the Supreme Soviet, assuring an overhaul of its traditional makeup.

Procedural bickering today mirrored the disputes that slowed the first day of activity in the congress, which was elected this spring in the first nationwide multicandidate balloting in 70 years.

A list of 573 members of congress selected by their home regions was prepared for 542 seats in the Supreme Soviet, giving deputies few choices but setting up tough races for lawmakers from Moscow, home to many of the reformers.

"The party apparatus is once again asking us to elect the Supreme Soviet according to the old system," complained deputy Vladimir Shevlyuga of Rostov.

Vladimir Zolotukhin of Tashkent said top party and government officials in Uzbekistan had themselves nominated without consulting other deputies from the republic.

Reformers lost an attempt to force top party officials to choose between their party jobs and serving in the Supreme Soviet, as a way of easing the grip of the party bureaucracy on the country's legislature.

The congress adopted a measure calling for Supreme Soviet members "as a rule" to be freed from other jobs to concentrate on lawmaking — far short of the outright ban sought by delegates.

On Thursday, the congress elected President Mikhail S. Gorbachev to a five-year term. Gorbachev ran unopposed.

He was first elected president by the Supreme Soviet on Oct. 1, 1988, replacing Andrei Gromyko in what was then a largely a ceremonial post.

Arab League Agrees On Lebanese Plan

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CASABLANCA, Morocco — Arab leaders today approved a resolution calling for the withdrawal of the Syrian army from Beirut within three months and elections there to choose a government of "national unity."

The resolution was approved at a closed five-hour meeting on the final day of the Arab League summit, which was marked by bitter discord over Syria's military presence in Lebanon.

Syria has 40,000 troops in Lebanon under an Arab League peacekeeping mandate, and they have joined forces with Moslem militias fighting the mainly Christian troops of Army Gen. Michel Aoun.

The summit entered its final hours amid news reports Syria had reinforced its troops in Lebanon. Jerusalem's Yediot Ahronot said an additional 40 Syrian tanks were moved into Lebanon, along with an undetermined number of troops.

The summit resolution called for the Syrian withdrawal from Beirut in hopes that will end the division of the city and serve as a foundation to a lasting peace in the nation's 14-year-old civil war.

The resolution left Lebanon's national army to take over from the departing Syrians and to protect a new "national unity government."

The Arab League chairman, Morocco's King Hassan II, was chosen to supervise the withdrawal of the Syrians and to oversee the revision of the Lebanese constitution.

The leaders of the 22-member league were to meet again to draft a final communique summing up the achievements of their stormy five-day summit.

Syria's President Hafez Assad quarrelled bitterly over the Lebanon issue with President Saddam Hussein of Iraq. Iraq is Aoun's main backer and wants a full Syrian withdrawal from Lebanon.

Hussein reluctantly accepted the final version of the resolution only after pressure from other leaders.

The summit was extended a day as delegates sought agreement on Lebanon, where Arab League-sponsored cease-fires have failed to stop fighting between Christians and the Syrian-backed Moslems.

More than 350 people have been killed and nearly 1,400 wounded since Christian and Moslem forces began shelling each other's positions March 8 in the latest round of fighting.

The summit saw some spectacular reconciliations, particularly between Libya's leader, Moammar Gadhafi, and Egypt's leader, Hosni Mubarak, at his first Arab summit in 10 years. One session had to be delayed as Mubarak and Gadhafi concluded a 3½-hour reunion meeting.

The summit convened Tuesday to welcome Egypt back to the Arab fold after a 10-year ostracism for making peace with Israel.

Survey Indicates Most Doctors Willing To Lie For Themselves, And Patients

By Janny Scott
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Most physicians would be willing occasionally to mislead insurers and patients' families — either to protect their patients' interests or even, in some instances, to protect themselves, according to a new study.

The study, published today in the Journal of the American Medical Association, found that more than a third of the 211 doctors surveyed said they would provide incomplete or misleading information about a mistake that led to a patient's death.

Many argued that the patient's family would only be further hurt by knowing of the mistake.

"There is this tension between what's ethically correct in the abstract and what works in practice," said Dr. Dennis H. Novack of Brown University, an author of the study. "I think physicians tend to be practical people."

The anonymous questionnaire, aimed at exploring attitudes toward deception, presented the randomly selected physicians with four quandaries. In a multiple-choice format, they were asked to choose a course of action and identify their reasons.

The physicians were also asked generally about their basic principles. The results:

—Nearly 70 percent said they would mislead an insurance company in order to obtain coverage of a routine mammogram for an apparently healthy 52-year-old woman. In the example, the woman's insurance covered mammography only if there were some sign of cancer.

The physicians said they would tell the insurer the test was needed to "rule out cancer," rather than simply as routine screening. Justifying the deception, they argued that the insurance rules were unreasonable and their obligation was to their patient.

—More than 60 percent would permit a man who had caught gonorrhea from a prostitute to deceive his wife rather than jeopardize his marriage: They would allow him to tell her he had a non-specific infection, as long as he would ensure that she be treated.

But the authors noted that the wife might then underestimate the infection, neglect her antibiotics and run the risk of developing pelvic inflammatory disease — a painful consequence of untreated gonorrhea that can in some cases leave a woman infertile.

—More than a third of the doctors surveyed said they would omit telling a mother that her 15-year-old daughter was pregnant. In the hypothetical case, the girl begged for secrecy, saying she would get an abortion in a nearby state not requiring parental consent.

The physicians said they would tell the mother that they had discussed the daughter's health with her, and she could discuss it with her mother. Most justified their evasion on grounds of patient confidentiality. Some simply said it was best for the girl.

—Finally, nearly 40 percent said they would be willing to mislead the family of a hypothetical 80-year-old patient who had been hospitalized with severe hypertension, and who had then died after receiving a fatal dose of medication from a mislabeled vial.

While more than half the physicians surveyed said they would admit the accident, others would simply stress the risks of strong medication. Some said they would say that the patient had been very sick and had died, despite the physician's best efforts.

"While many argued in their comments that the family would only be further hurt by the knowledge of the mistake, deception clearly offered benefits to the physicians as well," the researchers noted in the paper.

Asked generally to describe how they felt about deception, 87 percent of the 109 physicians who answered that question said deception would be acceptable on rare occasions to protect the patient from harm, to circumvent "ridiculous rules" and to protect confidentiality.

The researchers — including physicians from the medical schools of Brown, Harvard and the universities of Washington and Pittsburgh — said their exploratory survey, which they believe is unprecedented, could serve as groundwork for developing guidelines, teaching ethics and further research.

"My view of ethics is that in certain cases there are right and wrong answers," said Dr. Robert Arnold, an assistant professor of medicine at the University of Pittsburgh and a co-author. "In other cases, what counts are not the answers but the reasons."

While the researchers believe that the survey's anonymity encouraged honest responses, one expert in opinion research said there is a well-documented tendency for respondents to "over-report good behavior and under-report bad behavior."

"Having things be entirely anonymous does not entirely ensure frankness," said Tom Smith of the National Opinion Research Center. "Doctors may be sophisticated enough to know that what they report might reflect upon the profession as a whole."

Mondale Rules Out Senate Race

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MINNEAPOLIS — Former Vice President Walter F. Mondale said today he will not enter the 1990 race for a U.S. Senate seat in Minnesota.

"I believe it's time for other candidates to step forward," said Mondale, a former senator who was the Democratic Party's presidential nominee in 1984. "It was a very difficult choice for us."

Mondale said he has enjoyed his life out of political office and has seen too many colleagues remain in the Senate for too long. He was considering running against incumbent Rudy Boschwitz, a Republican.

"I'm at peace with myself," Mondale said. "We took a lot of time making this decision and it's a basic one. It's a lot easier deciding when to get into politics as opposed to when to leave."

A poll commissioned by Mondale indicated that the former vice president could defeat Boschwitz in the 1990 race. The poll, released by Mondale's son, Ted Mondale, shows Mondale leading Boschwitz 51 percent to 40 percent, with 8 percent undecided.

Mondale, a protégé of the late Hubert H. Humphrey, generally has been considered the most formidable candidate Democrats could field against Boschwitz, a two-term senator.

Mondale represented Minnesota in the Senate from 1965 until 1976, when he ran for vice president with Jimmy Carter. He ran unsuccessfully for president against Ronald Reagan in 1984.

Speculation that he planned to run again began in June 1987, when Mondale moved back to Minnesota from Washington, D.C.

Mondale, 61, is an attorney with a Minneapolis law firm.

Boschwitz, 58, was elected to the Senate in 1978.

Democrat Paul Wellstone, a political science professor at Carleton College in Northfield, has said he will seek the Senate nomination.

Methodists

LAKE JUNALUSKA, N.C. (AP) — The emphasis of the 11th annual meeting of the Western North Carolina United Methodist Conference meeting is on an increased effort in the church, officials said.

The sessions plan a renewed attempt at reaching out to the people with no church affiliations and a major focus on building and renewing existing churches. Another highlight of the June 7-11 meeting will be on a comprehensive plan for ethnic minorities.

The conference also plans to vote on such social issues as opposition to a North Carolina state lottery, the sale and use of assault rifles and support for a prison ministry reform program.

Bishop Bevel Jones of Charlotte will preside.

Folsom Riot Leaves One Inmate Dead

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FOLSOM, Calif. — The worst violence at Folsom Prison in seven years left one inmate dead and five seriously injured.

Prison officials said 25 to 30 inmates battled Thursday morning in an exercise yard occupied by about 300 prisoners. Several had weapons made within the prison.

Spokeswoman Lt. Cammy Voss said three suffered gunshot wounds and two stab wounds. The guards fired 10 shots from their second-story posts to break up the brawl.

A strip search of all prisoners in the yard revealed 43 men with minor wounds. But officers said some of those probably happened earlier and elsewhere but hadn't yet been reported.

The fight appeared to have been racially motivated, Voss said. Mostly black and Hispanic prisoners and a couple of white prisoners were involved.

But it was apparently not gang-related, she said. "We don't know why it erupted," she added.

The slain inmate was identified as Michael Coleman, 29. He had arrived April 20 to begin a four-year term for armed robbery in Los Angeles County. He died of stab wounds 20 minutes after the fight began.

Officers locked all of the maximum-security prison's 7,000 inmates into their cells after the fight broke out at the prison 20 miles east of Sacramento.

Facility B, where the melee occurred, is one of three in a wing that opened in October 1986, next to the 119-year-old stone walls.

It houses about 1,000 prisoners considered to be among California's most violent.

Voss said it was the worst violence in the history of the new wing, and perhaps the worst at the entire Folsom Prison since seven years ago when racial violence, largely between Hispanic and black prison gang members, led to an extended lockup.

Death Row Inmates Protest As Alabama Executes Killer

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATMORE, Ala. — A man who killed a widow and stole her Christmas presents was executed in Alabama's electric chair early today as inmates in nearby cells protested and one yelled, "Murderers, murderers."

Michael Lindsey, 28, was pronounced dead by two doctors at 12:10 a.m. at Holman Prison near Atmore. The execution was the fourth in Alabama and the 111th in the nation since the U.S. Supreme Court allowed states to resume use of the death penalty in 1976.

"He had made peace with his maker," said the Rev. Robert Smith, who was in the room adjacent to the death chamber and spent time with Lindsey earlier in the day.

Lindsey was sentenced to death for the 1981 stabbing and shooting death of Rosemary Zimlich Rutland, 64, of Mobile, who was bound, gagged, stabbed and shot. Prosecutors said Lindsey killed her because she recognized him.

Warden Charlie Jones asked Lindsey if he had any final words once he had been strapped into the chair, and the condemned man shook his head and closed his eyes.

In nearby cells, inmates shouted in protest and one yelled, "Murderers, murderers!"

John Hale, a prison system spokesman, said that earlier Thursday Lindsey visited with his sister, Cynthia Murphy, and his brother, Tyrone Lindsey, for about three hours.

Prison officials said the inmate also spent his final hours watching movies on a videocassette player in his cell adjacent to the electric chair.

"Throughout the afternoon, he seemed to be accepting his fate and was very reserved," Thigpen said.

The Supreme Court refused Thursday to grant an emergency request for a stay of execution, and Gov. Guy Hunt turned down a request for clemency.

Mrs. Rutland was killed Dec. 14, 1981, and Christmas presents were taken from her home. Police said Lindsey, who lived in a rental house directly behind Mrs. Rutland's home, was captured at a shopping mall using the victims' credit cards.

Alabama's last electrocution was Aug. 28, 1987, when Wayne Eugene Ritter was put to death for his role in the robbery and killing of a Mobile pawn shop owner.

Passenger Shot Fatally

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DALLAS — A city bus driver argued with a passenger over an unpaid fare and then shot the man to death as he was leaving, authorities said.

Chauncey J. Plummer, 37, a Dallas bus driver for 10 years, was charged with murder Thursday in the death of David Hayden, 25. He was released on $25,000 bond.

Plummer picked up Hayden and a woman on a downtown street Wednesday, said Ron Whittington, spokesman for Dallas Area Rapid Transit. The driver told authorities that in his rearview mirror he saw the woman hand her bus pass to Hayden, who then tried to use it for his fare.

The driver told Hayden he could not use the pass, an argument ensued and Plummer ordered Hayden off the bus. The man was shot in the back with a revolver as he exited, then he stumbled off the bus and collapsed, witnesses said.

The driver radioed for help, then waited in the bus for police to arrive and surrendered without incident.

Hayden died Wednesday evening at Baylor University Medical Center.

Ortega Expels 2 U.S. Diplomats

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — President Daniel Ortega said he ordered the expulsion of two U.S. diplomats to teach the U.S. government to respect Nicaragua's sovereignty.

Ortega said he acted "so that the United States understands that there is a space that it must respect." The pair, he charged, were "meddling in the country's internal affairs."

Ortega spoke Thursday to a group of coffee workers in Matagalpa, 85 miles northeast of the nation's capital.

The Sandinista government said it believes the diplomats instigated wildcat teachers' strikes.

"This shows the United States government is committed to disobeying the norms of civilized coexistence and is pledged to destabilizing governments, such as the one in Nicaragua," Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto said Thursday.

In Washington, the State Department said the charges were "totally false and without any credible foundation."

"Clearly the government of Nicaragua is embarrassed by the fact that teachers in Nicaragua are on strike against conditions in that country," press officer Dennis Harter said.

He suggested the action was to divert attention from the fact that the teachers' strike is being waged by a traditionally pro-Sandinista trade union.

Ortega said Thursday, "We are conscious that (the teachers) are badly paid like the rest of the workers." But he added, "The aggressive U.S. policy is responsible" for Nicaragua's current economic crisis.

might be able to harvest. Since two-suited hands are notoriously difficult to bid, if you play weak two-bids with two clubs as your only force, South decided, correctly in our opinion, to open one club, then showed his strength with a jump in hearts. After North's club preference, South cue-bid his ace of diamonds and then leaped to the grand slam when his partner felt obliged to cue-bid hearts in response. West led the king of spades and, with a 2-1 trump break, declarer would have been able to claim his contract. Even if hearts were 5-2, he would be able to draw trumps, discard dummy's diamond losers on the hearts and ruff a diamond and a heart on the table. But what if the breaks were unfriendly? Declarer made his first fine play when he ruffed the spade lead high. A trump to the board's seven revealed the break, but South had an elegant counter—a dummy reversal. Declarer ruffed another spade high, crossed to a trump and ruffed a third spade high. The king of hearts provided the entry to ruff a fourth spade with declarer's remaining trump. The rest was easy. Declarer crossed to dummy with a heart ruff and drew the last trump, discarding a diamond from hand. He had left only three high hearts and the ace of diamonds. So the grand slam came home thanks to dummy scoring five tricks—the king of hearts and four trumps! Those, together with four spade ruffs, three hearts and the ace of diamonds in the closed hand brought declarer's total to 13. New Indiana Jones Film Makes Debut With Box Office Splash

HOLLYWOOD — Aided by a hike in ticket prices, Paramount's "Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade" is enjoying the second largest Memorial Day weekend opening ever.

Across the nation, the final installment of the popular series about the daring exploits of archeologist Indiana Jones exceeded opening day ticket sales for its predecessors, "Raiders of the Lost Ark" and "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom," but fell short of the business done by the third "Star Wars" film in 1983.

"Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade" grossed $5.6 million Wednesday, while "Raiders" grossed $2.2 million when it opened in 1981, and "Temple of Doom" grossed $4.7 million on the Wednesday before Memorial Day in 1984. "Return of the Jedi," still the record-holder for a mid-week opening before Memorial Day weekend, grossed $6.2 million on its first day in the theaters in 1983.

"We're ecstatic," Barry London, president of Paramount's motion picture group, said Thursday. "We're exactly where we want to be, with a clear period for a few weeks that we'll be trying to take advantage of."

London was referring to the competition that "Indiana Jones" will face when this summer's other potential blockbusters — including "Batman," "Ghostbusters II," and "Star Trek V" — hit the nation's theaters in June.

Despite Paramount's professed delight with the opening-day numbers, "Indiana Jones" did worse than "Temple of Doom" on a per-screen basis. That number is important because it indicates how full theaters actually were.

"Temple of Doom," which initially drew crowds because of the popularity of the first film but by most accounts was a disappointment to fans, opened at 1,687 theaters and enjoyed a per-screen average of $2,787. The third installment of "Indiana Jones" opened at 640 more theaters, and its per-screen average was $2,414.

An informal survey of theaters nationwide found that while big-screen, state-of-the-art theaters were sold out — with fans waiting overnight in New York and Los Angeles — others had plenty of tickets to spare during the morning and afternoon shows.

Comparisons of opening day business with previous hit movies are somewhat misleading because of the rise in ticket prices. Even in recent weeks, theater owners hiked prices from $6.50-$7 at some theaters in large cities and from $6-$6.50 in many other places.

Still, if the responses of dozens of moviegoers interviewed by the Los Angeles Times are any indication, "Indiana Jones" will enjoy tremendous word-of-mouth, with business likely to build in the coming weeks.

Networks Stick To Tried-And-True Tales

By Kathryn Baker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Yes, those creative geniuses who come up with network television shows have been working overtime to create fascinating new concepts that will cause you, the loyal network television viewer, to ignore cable movies, sportschannels and videocassette rentals and race over hot coals, if necessary, in order to watch the local network affiliate of your choice.

Only kidding. Despite proof that their audiences are tuning out, the networks apparently feel compelled for 1989-90 to cling to tired premises and spinoffs.

They apparently hope these will miraculously entice viewers, who come to the screen for reasons that, despite endless research and discussion, seem to completely evade network executives still baffled that "Lonesome Dove" won its time period against "The Sex Tapes."

Oh, but how can you say that? Just look at this innovation on tap for next season:

ABC has "Free Spirit," a show about a housekeeper who's a witch. Now, that's quality entertainment! When's the last time you saw a television show about a witch? Well, 1972. "Bewitched." Of course, that was a good 17 years ago, and 17 years is a long time to go without a show about a witch.

CBS has "Wolf." This is a show about a cop who was framed and forced off the force and now works as a private investigator and hopes to clear his name. Hmmm, sounds suspiciously like "Private Eye" on NBC two years ago.

Then NBC has "Sister Kate." This is a show about a nun. Yeah, yeah, "The Flying Nun," 1970. But this is different. This a nun with an attitude. Sally Field was a cute nun. Very different show.

Then there's "Nutt House" on NBC, a wacky Mel Brooks comedy about a bunch of madcaps who run a hotel. Sounds a little like "Fawlty Towers"? Who cares? Nobody watches British TV over here.

Well, CBS has "Rescue: 911," where you get to see real-life rescues, so unlike the real-life arrests on "COPS," or re-creations of real-life crimes on "Unsolved Mysteries" and "America's Most Wanted." These are rescues, see?

ABC's "Homerroom" is about an inner-city teacher who uses humor to get through to his students. "Welcome Back, Kotter"? No way. Teacher's name is Harper.

NBC's "Baywatch" is a really unique show about lifeguards. Oops, even NBC is pushing this show as a reincarnation of "CHiPs." Never mind.

NBC also has "Hardball," about two cops who are mismatched partners but eventually form a bond. It goes into the old "Miami Vice" time period. No, no, no, this is not a white cop-black cop deal. This is old cop-young cop.

Marcy Carsey and Tom Werner are putting yet another standup comic in a prime-time sitcom. This time it's Jackie Mason in ABC's "From This Moment On." Well, it is hard to argue with success. Carsey-Werner's other comics in sitcoms are Bill Cosby and Roseanne Barr. So it worked — twice.

Then there's ABC's "Living Dolls," a spinoff of "Who's the Boss?" And ABC's "Family Mat-

Lost Career

NEW YORK (AP) — Jayne Meadows was a rising Hollywood star until she married Steve Allen in 1954, but she doesn't blame him for her lost career.

Her husband still feels guilty, but she says in the June issue of Lear's magazine: "He's not to blame. My anger is really directed at me. I allowed it all to happen. I say to myself, 'How could you have been so trusting? So naive? So stupid?'"

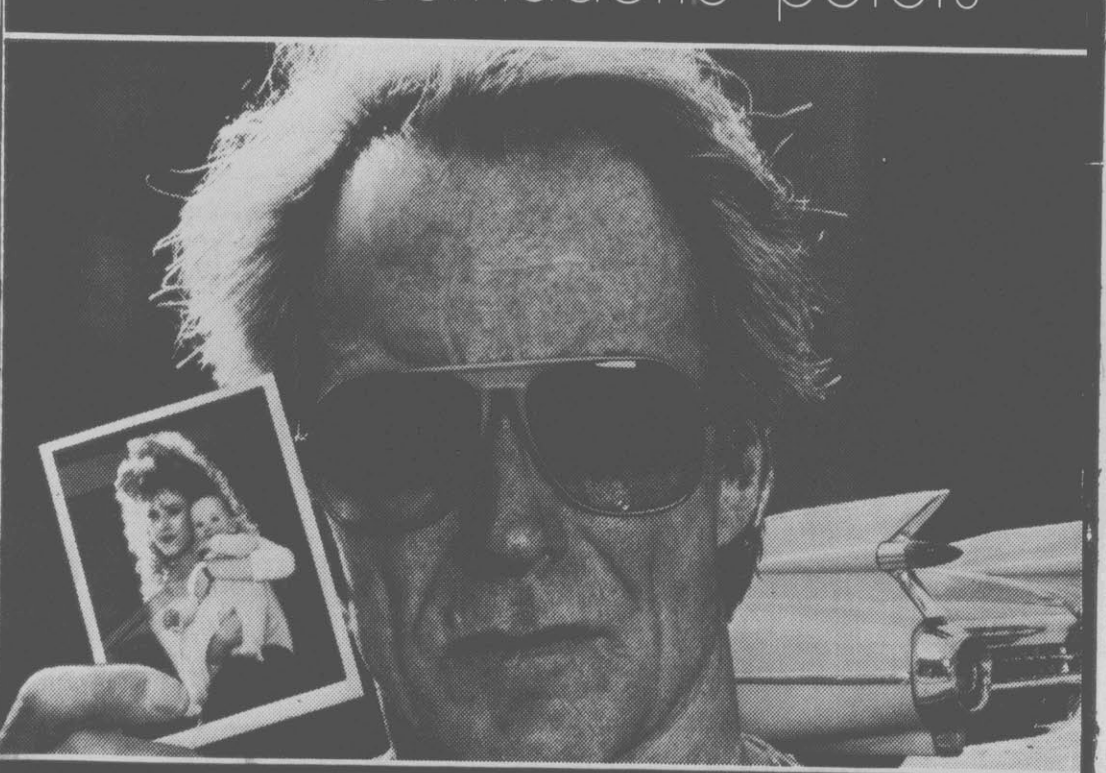

She says their marriage was strengthened when they did "The Steve Allen Show" together in the early 1960s, although she says Allen became involved with a singer on the show. They went into therapy together, and Meadows says, "The whole experience brought us closer. ... I took off the rose-colored glasses."

CBS Will Show 'The Missing Minutes'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Dallas" fans not amused that "CBS Evening News" anchor Dan Rather was an uninvited guest star on last week's season finale can catch the scenes that were pre-empted for live coverage from China when CBS presents "Dallas: The Missing Minutes" tonight, a 3½-minute capsule synopsis of the missing parts.

Those on the West Coast didn't miss the minutes and won't get to see the 3½-minute version.

Hope Serenaded

MOUNT PLEASANT, S.C. (AP) — Comedian Bob Hope was serenaded with a chorus of "Happy Birthday" sung by 3,000 people on the flight deck of the aircraft carrier Yorktown.

"Age doesn't mean a damn thing," said Hope, whose 86th birthday is on Monday. "When I wake up in the morning, I don't feel my age — in fact I don't feel anything till noon ... then it's time for my nap."

Hope visited this Charleston suburb to play a round of golf at the second annual William Westmoreland Open at Patriots Point Links. Organizers hoped to raise upwards of $20,000 for the Vietnam Veterans Institute.

Westmoreland, who commanded U.S. forces in Vietnam, lives in Charleston.

The retired general introduced Hope as a man of "exceptional character and burning patriotism."

"There is nobody that any veteran — particularly the veterans of Vietnam — know and respect more than Bob Hope," said Westmoreland, who noted that Hope made eight trips to Vietnam to entertain troops.

Hope, in turn, said Westmoreland always treated him well in Vietnam. "He even put a phone in my foxhole in case I wanted to call Dial-a-Prayer," he said.

California Bars Ads In School TV

LOS ANGELES — California's chief educator intends to withhold state money from schools that show an experimental television news program for teen-agers that includes a daily dose of commercials.

The creators of Channel One want to offer the 12-minute-a-day show to schools nationwide, providing satellite dishes, television sets and video recorders in exchange for a guarantee students will be shown the program daily.

But Bill Honig, California's superintendent of public education, said Thursday he would withhold some state money from public schools that agree to accept the show billed by its makers as an innovative educational tool.

Mandatory viewing of commercials runs counter to state laws defining schools' educational mission, he said.

Honig cannot order local school districts to ban the show. But his control of state funds for education gives him considerable influence.

Honig said Channel One, a for-profit venture by Whittle Communications of Knoxville, Tenn., would in effect put teachers and school administrators in the position of endorsing commercial products.

"The whole reason for this is to have access to kids' minds, our youngsters' minds," Honig said. "We would be ceding control of our curriculum to a commercial enterprise."

Whittle, which tested the adolescent-oriented news show in six schools across the country earlier this year, said company lawyers have checked California law and disagree with Honig's interpretation.

"To come out and reject something that's not even in existence seems to us to be a little bit premature," Whittle spokesman David Jarrard said.

Teachers who participated in the test screenings have given the show rave reviews. But several mainstream educational organizations, including the national Parent-Teacher Association and the National Association of Secondary School Principals, oppose widespread adoption of Channel One.

The show's youthful newscasters present the events of the day, with an emphasis on how they affect teens. It has 10 minutes of news and two minutes of commercials for blue jeans, candy, hamburgers and other products.

Japanese Sensitivities Over Hirohito Crop Up In Filming Story Of Rebels

By Elaine Kurtenbach
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — Kazuo Okuyama began his career with typical Japanese movie fare: gangster and cute animal movies.

Now the ambitious young producer hopes to inspire jaded Japanese with the tragedy of an idealistic rebellion in 1936 which tried to install a military government under the late Emperor Hirohito.

Okuyama's problem in making the film, due for release June 17, has been that the attempted coup by 22 fervent young right-wing military officers was quashed under orders of Hirohito himself, who was then revered as a living god.

The emperor isn't portrayed in the film, but his order against the young rebels, whom Okuyama describes as martyrs, is depicted as a misjudgment that ultimately led Japan into World War II, the producer said.

Reflections on the emperor's judgment and the question of his responsibility for the war are acutely sensitive here, although discussion of Hirohito's historical role has become freer since his death Jan. 7 at age 87.

Historians generally agree Hirohito was a figurehead, wielding little real power. His most famous decision was Japan's World War II surrender in 1945, when the government was deadlocked over the issue.

But Hirohito also ordered the 1936 leaders of the coup back to their barracks after two days of assassinations and political turmoil in the "2-26 Incident," so called because it was launched on Feb. 26.

Several coup leaders committed suicide, and others were imprisoned. On July 12, 1936, two civilians and 13 of the rebel officers were executed by firing squad.

Okuyama's movie, "2-26" tells the story of the young officers who led about 1,500 soldiers and nine civilians in a bloody attempt to overthrow the government and install a military regime under Hirohito.

The rebels claimed they sought to restore integrity to a nation they believed was corrupted by a political elite living in luxury while millions suffered Depression-era deprivation. Many of the rebels, historians say, were sons of poor farm families who had suffered hunger and seen their sisters sold into prostitution.

But in the repressive atmosphere after the failed coup, an opposing faction in the military used the incident to build its own power, eventually establishing a militaristic regime that led Japan into World War II.

"There was an energy and an intensity alive then that has been forgotten in today's Japan," the 35-year-old producer said.

"One main reason I wanted to produce this film is because we live in a similar era, when young women prostitute themselves and revelations of political corruption surface every day," said Okuyama. "The only difference is that then we were poor and now we're rich."

The film is coming out amid outrage over a scandal in which 14 prominent bureaucrats and businessmen have been arrested on suspicion of bribery and other illegalities, and more than 150 people embarrassed by disclosures that they accepted unlisted shares at discount prices from an employment information firm.

"I wanted to sound an alarm, to use the tragedy and drama of the 2-26 incident to tell people what they don't want to hear about political corruption and decay," Okuyama said.

"Influential people are gathering dirty money. Like the martyrs of 2-26, people should care."

The film depicts the deaths of the coup leaders as a tragic loss of courageous young men who died still true to their ideals.

"Even though the emperor doesn't understand that we were right, history will answer for us," says one coup leader before putting a bullet in his head.

Okuyama said in an interview that he knew a decade ago that there was material to make a good movie, but it just wasn't possible because of a lack of funds, and sensitivities about the emperor.

The screenwriter didn't want to get involved, he said, but "finally agreed on the condition we play down politics and aim the movie more toward young people."

Corporate backers also feared a backlash from right-wing groups that vociferously protest anything they interpret as disrespectful toward the imperial family.

"When we get to the last print, just before distribution, we plan to show the film to some of the major right-wing groups to try to gain their understanding," Okuyama said.
