Granville Landfill Poses Threat To Tar

By J. Ward Best
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Granville County has begun designing a landfill near the head of the Tar River which could potentially threaten Greenville's water supply, and that of cities, towns and counties along the river.

Despite the fact that the proposed landfill has been in the works for nearly four years, Greenville has yet to take any action either supporting or opposing Granville's actions. Few city officials say they have even heard of the proposed landfill.

The North Carolina Division of Health Services in 1985 approved the location of the landfill, which is within approximately 300 feet of Jackson Creek, a tributary of the Tar River, and within approximately one-half mile of the river. Granville recently began designing the 94-acre landfill, and plans to begin construction in 18 months, according to Granville County Manager Harold Blizzard.

The Tar River, named for an Indian word that means "river of health," according to one publication, travels approximately 179 miles through six counties in northern and central North Carolina before becoming the Pamlico River and emptying into the Pamlico Sound. The river serves as a source of drinking water for thousands of people along its route.

Louisburg, the first municipality downstream from the proposed landfill, reacted quickly once Granville's plans became public. The town council passed a resolution opposing the proposal two months ago.

Rocky Mount, although not supporting or opposing the facility, has studied the possible effects of the landfill on its drinking water. Tarboro has decided not to oppose Granville's plans. Washington city manager Bruce Radford said he had not heard of the proposal, but was concerned about the any actions which could threaten the Tar and Pamlico rivers.

Greenville is the largest municipality along the Tar River that has yet to consider the proposal.

Tar River provides drinking water for approximately 48,000 Greenville residents alone.

"I do think it's something we need to look into," said Nancy Jenkins, Greenville city councilwoman. But

Wright Decides Course

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — House Speaker Jim Wright indicated today he has made a decision about whether to resign in the face of ethics charges, but refused to say what he intends to do.

Wright, who is widely expected to announce his resignation on Wednesday, told reporters, "I think I know what I should do."

"I think I know what I believe to be in my best interests and the interests of the institution. I want to be fair to myself, my family, my reputation, and I want to be fair to this institution that I've served for 34 years," the Texas Democrat told reporters.

Wright said he would have a statement on his plans later this week.

Sources close to Wright have said he is likely to announce a decision to resign from his leadership post as early as Wednesday, but they cautioned that Wright was torn between such a move and fighting the ethics charges to some legal conclusion.

More pressure to resign was applied to Wright over the weekend, when his No. 2 lieutenant, Democratic Whip Tony Coelho of California, abruptly announced his own plans to resign from the House rather than face ethics charges involving a junk bond investment. He said such a process would hurt the party.

Wright alluded to his legal fight and to a motion to dismiss the most serious charges against him, telling reporters, "I'm convinced our motions are legally well grounded."

The ethics committee is due to take up the motion to dismiss charges at a meeting on Thursday, and it is seen as likely to reject the defense effort.

Wright added: "I'm convinced I haven't violated any rule of the House, as I understand them and as I think other members do. I have for 34 years abided by them, honored them... That is my absolute conviction."

Home Sales Soar

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Sales of new homes rose 10.9 percent in April after declining during the previous two months, but the pace of sales still was running well behind that of the past two years, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said sales of new single-family homes rose to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 620,000 units in April after dropping 10.4 percent in March and 10.9 percent in February. Sales had risen 4.6 percent in January.

While April's 10.9 percent jump in sales was the biggest increase since a 13.9 percent surge in February 1988, the pace of sales still was well behind the 676,000 new homes sold in 1988 and the 671,000 sold in 1987.

For the first four months of the year, new home sales were 4.7 percent lower than in the same period a year earlier.

The housing industry has been among the sectors of the economy hardest hit by the Federal Reserve's campaign to push up interest rates in an effort to slow economic growth and thus restrain inflation.

Fixed-rate mortgages in April averaged between 10.99 percent and 11.11 percent, down only slightly from a peak of 11.22 percent in March, according to a weekly national survey by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp.

April's partial rebound in home sales was concentrated in the West, where sales rose 31.3 percent to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 193,000 units after falling 26.1 percent during March. Sales also rose in the South, climbing 21.2 percent in April to a rate of 234,000 units after dropping 16.8 percent in March.

Bush, Allies Iron Out Nuclear Missiles Plan

President Proposes U.S.-Soviet Summit In '89

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BRUSSELS, Belgium — President Bush and the Western allies hammered out a last-minute compromise over nuclear missiles today and ended unity-minded NATO summit talks pledging "to shape a new political order of peace in Europe."

Bush urged Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev to accept his challenge to intensify negotiations on reducing conventional NATO and Warsaw Pact forces. "I have reason to believe that he knows we've been serious," Bush said.

The president said he hoped Gorbachev will be persuaded by the "unity of the alliance" behind Bush's proposals for lowering troop levels to 275,000 on each side and negotiating new ceilings for tanks, aircraft and other conventional weapons on the European continent.

Bush said his goal was to "finally free Europe from the constant threat of a surprise attack and the shadow of Soviet military power." And as an inducement to Gorbachev, he said his arms proposals "should save him a lot of money in the long run."

"I think it's a good thing, it's good for NATO, I happen to think it's good for the entire free world," Bush told a televised post-summit news conference before he flew to Bonn for further talks with West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl.

Bush said Secretary of State James A. Baker III had told Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze that the United States was interested in a superpower summit before the end of the year.

"If there was something constructive to come out of such a meeting, I would certainly be prepared to meet and I believe that Secretary Baker has conveyed that to Minister Shevardnadze," Bush said.

Baker said in an interview on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" show that plans for a Bush-Gorbachev summit will depend on the Soviet leadership's reaction to the president's latest proposals.

The 16 summit leaders disposed of a potentially disruptive issue by embracing a compromise formula for U.S.-Soviet negotiations on reducing — but not eliminating — short-range nuclear weapons. Bush told reporters he would never accept a nuclear-free Europe.

Then, in a final communique ending their two-day talks, the allied leaders acknowledged Bush's goal of completing East-West negotiations on reducing conventional arms within the next year.

In the first official reaction from Moscow, Col. Gen. Nikolai Chervov, a member of the Soviet general staff, said Bush's proposals "need to be carefully analyzed."

The summit leaders also welcomed widespread changes under way in the Soviet Union and East Europe, initiated by Gorbachev's reform policies.

"The possibilities for fruitful dialogue have significantly improved in recent years," they said.

"The allies are resolved to grasp this opportunity," the allies said attainment of lasting peace "will require that the unnatural division of Europe, and particularly of Germany, be overcome."

In a separate declaration, the summiteers said: "We want to overcome the painful division of Europe, which we have never accepted. We want to move beyond the postwar period." They said they wanted to "shape a new political order of peace in Europe."

The missile agreement was endorsed by the United States, Britain and West Germany, key antagonists in the dispute, and NATO Secretary-General Manfred Woerner credited Bush for summit's happy ending. "His leadership set the tone for the whole meeting," Woerner said.

The agreement, drafted after eight hours of intense bargaining by NATO foreign ministers, authorizes the United States to begin negotiations with the Soviets "to achieve a partial reduction" of short-range nuclear missiles once implementation of a conventional arms agreement begins.

Foreign Buying Up

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Foreign investors spent $65 billion to acquire or establish U.S. businesses last year, up sharply from the $40.3 billion spent in 1987, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department attributed the 61.3 percent increase in spending last year over the 1987 level to a surge in large transactions, with the number of investments worth $1 billion doubling from six to 12 in 1988.

Those 12 investments accounted for 80 percent of the increase in spending last year.

The $65 billion in outlays included $60 billion spent to acquire existing U.S. businesses and $5 billion to establish new operations. Some $16.4 billion of the money was spent by foreign direct investors.

Gorbachev Cites Defense 'Savings'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — Mikhail S. Gorbachev said today that the Kremlin spends $118 billion a year for defense — nearly four times the previous official claim — and promised defense cuts would help improve people's lives.

The Soviet president disclosed the figure in a speech to the new Congress in which he also promised and to root out bureaucrats who are holding back reforms and pledged an attack on the special privileges of Soviet officials.

Gorbachev said the savings from a military budget trimmed by more than 13 percent would be channeled into raising the standard of living of a nation plagued by chronic shortages and shoddy goods.

Members of the Congress of People's Deputies — the first Soviet legislative body chosen in contested elections in 70 years — have listed improving the standard of living their most pressing concern.

"All of our production capacities must be reoriented to produce what the people need," Gorbachev said in his 95-minute address.

He told the Congress on the fifth day of its inaugural session that military spending would be reduced by $15.3 billion by the end of 1991, prompting delegates to burst into applause.

The speech was greeted coolly by one of the best-known legislators, the immensely popular reformer Boris N. Yeltsin.

Pitt Ranks 64th In Support Of Public Schools

By Cherie Evans
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A finance study has ranked Pitt County's school district 64th among 140 school districts in how much financial effort is being made to support the school system.

The Public School Forum of North Carolina conducted the study that ranks Pitt County 62nd in wealth and ability to raise money and 59th in spending. Based on those figures and other factors, the system's effort was ranked 64th.

The study puts Pitt County in the 35 to 40 percentile in the state, said Kramer Jackson, county manager.

"Our effort is better than our ability to pay so even though it's not the best report in the world I think that's favorable to Pitt County," he said. "I certainly would like to see the county rank above that in it's effort to fund education."

The study shows "we are willing to be mediocre," said Judi Orbach, president of Citizens for Excellence and Equity for Education in Pitt County.

"That's why people ought to be allowed to decide if we want bond referendums" to improve the schools, she said.

"I looked at a lot of statistics this last week," Ms. Orbach said. "Out of 100 school districts or so we are way down at the bottom as to how much we spend in capital outlay."

"Out of 143 school systems we ranked 130 in pupil expenditure in capital outlay" according to state figures, she said.

Barry Gaskins, director of public information at the school system, said the criteria used in the study need to be evaluated.

"There are a whole lot of variables involved in the process so we might be wary of viewing it as good or bad. It may be a case of comparing apples to oranges," he said.

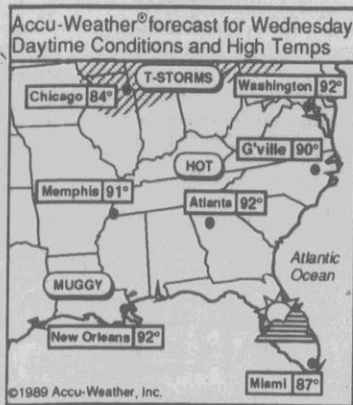

"Ultimately it's up to the taxpayers in Pitt County to decide what price we put on education. The burden falls on our leaders such as the Board of Education and the county commissioners to make sure that the money is spent productively and efficiently."

The Martin County school district ranked 28th in effort with actual spending at 47th and ability to pay at 93rd, while the Greene County district ranked 38th in effort, 103rd in spending and 110th in ability to pay.

The Washington city district ranked 114th in effort, 109th in spending and 65th in ability to pay, while the Beaufort County district ranked 125th in effort, 126th in spending and 66th in ability to pay.

Pitt Jobless Rate Holds At 5 Pct.

The number of North Carolina counties with unemployment rates at or below 5 percent stood at 73 in April, including Pitt and several neighboring counties, according to the state Employment Security Commission.

Analysts with the ESC regard 5 percent as a near full-employment situation. Eighty-three counties were at or below a 5 percent rate of unemployment in April 1988.

Pitt County's April figure was 3.5 percent, the ESC said, while Beaufort posted 4.8 percent, Greene had a 3.5 percent rate and Martin recorded 4.2 percent unemployment.

For March the unemployment rate for Pitt County was 2.4 percent. Other rates included: Beaufort, 4.5 percent; Greene, 1.7 percent, and Martin, 3 percent.

Federal funds totaling more than $16.3 million will be available to the ESC to finance employment services during the year beginning July 1. The funds will provide residents with basic employment services including job search and placement assistance, aptitude testing, labor market information and referral of applicants to employers.

The midstate region containing Pitt, Martin, Beaufort, Hertford and Bertie counties will receive $649,665 in funds.

Law Firm Competes For Pro Bono Award

The law firm of Poyner and Spruill, with offices in Greenville, Raleigh, Charlotte and Rocky Mount, is one of 15 statewide nominees for the North Carolina Bar Association's 1989 Pro Bono Service Award.

Pro bono means providing free legal services to indigent or low-income clients.

In 1988, Poyner and Spruill became the first North Carolina law firm to establish an internal public service division for the sole purpose of providing low-income clients with free legal service in civil lawsuits. The firm plans to have each of its 80 attorneys donate 25-50 hours of free service, according to the bar association.

Poyner and Spruill opened its local office Jan. 1 when Greenville attorney Jim Cheatham joined the firm. Poyner and Spruill's Greenville office is comprised of Cheatham and two associates.

The Pro Bono Service Award will be presented at the N.C. Bar Association's annual meeting in June.

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — The body of an 18-year-old Bridgeton youth who drowned while trying to swim the draw of the Neuse River railroad trestle was found floating in the river after almost three hours of searching by area rescue workers.

The three were walking from Bridgeton to New Bern on the trestle. The drawbridge on the trestle was open and the three attempted to swim to the other side of the draw.

Rose Graduate Earns Firemen's Scholarship

A $500 scholarship, renewable up to four times, has been presented to Sonya Lynn Daniels of Route 16, Greenville, by the newly created Greenville Firemen's Relief Fund Scholarship Awards Program.

Selected were Derek Brown of Farmville Central High School and Teresa Lambe, Brian Marks and Anna Wirth of J.H. Rose High School.

Miss Daniels, a 1988 Rose High School graduate now attending Peace College in Raleigh, plans to transfer to East Carolina University for a major in business administration.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D.R. Daniels. Her father is a Greenville Fire-Rescue Department captain.

The program has been endowed with $10,000 from the Greenville Firemen's Relief Fund to provide scholarships to qualified fire-rescue employees or their dependents attending a four-year college or university or a two-year community college, technical institute or trade school.

The Greenville Firemen's Relief Fund, managed by a board of trustees, is an outgrowth of the N.C. Firemen's Relief Fund established by the General Assembly in 1907 to benefit firemen injured or disabled in the line of duty.

State law requires fire insurance companies to pay 50 cents out of every $100 in fire insurance premiums on policies written in municipalities into a fund, part of which is returned for use by firemen's relief funds.

The relief fund money can be used by the trustees to: safeguard any firemen from financial loss due to service related disease or injury; provide reasonable support for those actually dependent upon the services of any fireman who loses his life in the fire service, either by accident or disease or injury; "safeguard any fireman who has honorably served served for a period of five years in the fire service ... from ever becoming an inmate of any almshouse"; provide for

Van Fleming, a member of the Greenville Firemen's Relief Fund board, said the local relief fund now uses the income from more than $215,000 in the fund to supplement retirement for paid and volunteer firemen.

He said the local relief fund last year received $17,000 from the state, while this year the fund should receive between $15,000 and $18,000 in new money.

Tar Heels Gather To Pay Tribute To State Veterans

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Thousands of people across North Carolina paid solemn tribute in Memorial Day ceremonies to those who gave their lives to preserve America's freedoms.

"We must always remember that freedom isn't free," said Col. Paul Harwood, commander of the 317th Combat Support Group at Pope Air Force Base. "It comes at the price of men and woman who have given and are willing to give their lives to ensure that the rest of us can live in the freedom that we cherish."

Harwood was at a brief ceremony to lay a wreath at the Airlifter's Memorial on Monday.

The ceremony, sponsored by the base's chapter of the Air Force Sergeants Association, drew a small crowd of about 35 to the memorial, its flag flying at half-staff.

At the state Capitol in Raleigh on Sunday, about 50 people gathered in front of the Vietnam Memorial as four veterans read the names of the North Carolinians still missing in Vietnam and watched as a wreath was placed in front of the bronze statue of two soldiers carrying a wounded comrade.

In other Memorial Day observances in North Carolina over the long holiday weekend:

Nearly 500 people came to the groundbreaking for the Mecklenburg County Vietnam Veterans Memorial, where school children placed roses in the spot where the memorial will be built in Charlotte.

The memorial project began two years ago when Mecklenburg County commissioners appointed a committee to raise money and select a location and a design. The committee met its goal of $300,000 in pledges, but more is needed.

The memorial, a 230-foot curved granite wall, will honor the 103 Mecklenburg County men who died in the Vietnam War.

A 200-pound model of the wall was on display, along with the list of veterans whose names will be carved in the granite. Malter's chronology from 1959 to 1975 will be unveiled at the dedication on Veterans Day, Nov. 11.

At the National Cemetery in Raleigh on Sunday, C.L. Dellinger, 87, and his wife Ella, 86, of Raleigh, were among about 150 who sat quietly on folding chairs, listening to words of remembrance as a gentle wind rippled the flags that lined the main drive and the graves.

The Dellingers know too well the "sacrifice" repeatedly mentioned in the speeches and prayers.

Two of their sons, Charles and Howard, were killed five months apart in World War II. Three other sons also served in the military.

"We just had that urge to come," said Mrs. Dellinger, who with her husband has attended the Memorial Day service at the cemetery every year since her boys died in 1945.

"This is a day of feeling, of emotion — personal, community and national," said keynote speaker John Coggin, a retired colonel of the U.S. Army Reserve and consultant for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

In Greensboro, Chief Master Sgt. James Shreve Hall joined his Guilford County comrades, almost 23 years after he was shot down over North Vietnam.

More than 60 people gathered to commemorate Hall's service to the United States and to add his name to the Guilford County Vietnam Veterans Memorial in the Phill G. McDonald Governmental Plaza downtown.

Hall's cargo plane was shot down over North Vietnam on July 29, 1966. The Guilford County native was missing in action until he was declared dead on May 30, 1974. His remains were not returned to Greensboro until last June.

On Monday, Hall's sister, Nancy Kenny of Greensboro, helped attach a strip bearing his name to the memorial, overseen by a flag flying at half-mast.

"It's a relief. It really is," Ms. Kenny said afterward. "It's heart-breaking, but his name is where it belongs."

Meanwhile, money for the North Carolina Vietnam Veterans Memorial near Thomasville may be approved by the Legislature this summer and the monument could be in place by next Memorial Day, a fund-raiser for the project said.

Jet Lands Safely

HONOLULU (AP) — A TWA jumbo jet made an emergency landing after developing a fuel leak and running low on fuel, and airline officials said they weren't sure how close it came to a forced ditching in the Pacific.

TWA's Flight 235, bound from Los Angeles to Honolulu with 205 people aboard, landed early Monday at Hilo International Airport on the island of Hawaii, 200 miles southeast of Honolulu, because it was the closest airport, said TWA spokesman Don Morrison in St. Louis.

Asked about a televised news report here that the Lockheed L-1011 had about four minutes of fuel left when it landed, Morrison said that had not been determined.

Passenger Domenic Silvestri said he could hear crewmembers behind a curtain reviewing ditching procedures.

The pilot reported at 11:30 p.m. HST Sunday that the jet was low on fuel and 450 miles out of Honolulu, and was instructed to divert to Hilo, said Dick Hallen, a Federal Aviation Administration duty officer in Los Angeles.

Going to Hilo cut about 110 miles off the flight, according to an FAA calculation.

Morrison said the plane's left engine was shut down after the crew realized fuel was leaking from the wing.

"The captain was not able to do anything to stop the leak," he said.

Passengers said they were only told that something was wrong with the left engine.

Court Bars Ex-Mates From VA Benefits

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court today barred the divorced spouses of military veterans from sharing in retirement pay the veterans have converted into disability benefits.

In a 7-2 ruling in a California case, the justices said a 1982 federal law does not permit state court divorce decrees to divide the disability benefits.

Justice Thurgood Marshall, writing for the court, said, "We realize that reading the statute literally may inflict economic harm on many former spouses. But we decline to misread the statute in order to reach a sympathetic result when such a reading requires us to do violence to the plain language of the statute and ignore much of the legislative history."

Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, in a dissenting opinion, said, "The harsh reality of this holding is that former spouses ... can, without their consent, be denied a fair share of their ex-spouse's military pension simply because he elects to increase his after-tax income by converting a portion of that pension into disability benefits."

Justice Harry A. Blackmun joined O'Connor in dissent.

The case stems from the 1979 divorce of Gerald and Gaye Mansell after 25 years of a marriage that produced six children.

Mansell, a retired Air Force major, receives $1,200 a month in retirement pay and $482 in disability benefits. The disability benefits were converted from retirement pay by Mansell because, unlike the pension, they are exempt from taxes.

The divorce settlement, filed in Merced County, Calif., awarded Gaye Mansell half the retirement pay in an uncontested split of that money and, originally, half the disability benefits.

But Mansell went to court in 1983 to modify the divorce decree and exclude the disability pay.

The California courts rejected his request.

California is a community property state, meaning property acquired during marriage is considered jointly owned.

In other action today, the Supreme Court:

—Refused to lift strict advertising limits imposed on a Texas counseling center that authorities called a "fake abortion clinic" run by anti-abortion activists. The justices, without comment, let stand rulings that ads run by the Problem Pregnancy Center in Fort Worth violated a state law banning deceptive trade practices.

State Assistant Attorney General Stephen Gardner contended that the center was seeking "a constitutional right to lie to pregnant women, to entice them into a fake abortion clinic" where they are urged to continue their pregnancy.

—Let stand a decision banning organized prayers at the start of high school football games, refusing without comment to review a ruling in a Georgia case that such pregame invocations impermissibly promote religion.

The 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, by a 2-1 vote last Jan. 3, said prayers carried over the public address system before Douglas County, Ga., High School home football games had to stop because they violated the separation of church and state required by past Supreme Court rulings.

—Refused to reinstate the conviction of a California man, Stephen Edward Leichty, who admitted he tried illegally to ship a drug via air freight. Without comment, the court left intact a ruling that police unlawfully searched the shipment without a court-issued search warrant.

—Ruled 7-2 in a Florida case that a state death penalty law does not have to require juries, instead of judges, to make the specific findings authorizing imposition of capital punishment.

Landfill Poses Potential Threat To Greenville's Water Supply

she said she had not heard of Granville's plans until this week.

City Attorney Mac McCarley also said he did not know of Granville's plans for a landfill along the Tar, and said he had not seen nor heard of the resolution passed by Louisburg.

According to C.L. Gobble, Louisburg town manager, the town learned of the proposed landfill "by accident," when a neighbor of the site alerted the town to Granville's plans.

The town council passed a resolution opposing the landfill, and requesting the county to find an alternate site. The council presented the March 29 resolution to Granville County. Gobble also said copies of the resolution were sent to Greenville Mayor Ed Carter and the director of public utilities.

Carter was unavailable for comment this morning, and a spokesman said he will be out of town all this week.

Malcolm Green, general manager of the Greenville Utilities Commission, said he had not heard of Granville's proposal until this morning.

Green also said he felt Greenville should have some say in matters that could affect the city's drinking water supply, and he said he would look into Granville's proposal.

The utilities commission serves 15,000 customers in Greenville, or approximately 48,000 residents, according to Green. The water treatment plant on the Tar provides 80 percent of the water for those customers.

"It's kind of an awkward position to take this far away," Green said, "other than we'd rather it not be there."

Mayo Allen, Greenville's director of public works, also said he had not heard about Granville's proposal.

In its resolution, the Louisburg town council outlined its opposition to the proposed siting of the landfill adjacent to the Tar River. The council's greatest concern was for the possible contamination of the Tar River, the drinking water source for Louisburg and central Franklin County.

"The location of the landfill adjacent to the Tar River involves variables and uncertainties which may affect the safety and quality of the water supply ...," the resolution states.

The Louisburg council also urged Granville through the resolution "to select a site for the Granville County landfill which will not affect or endanger the Tar River as a source of safe drinking water."

Harold Blizzard, Granville County manager, said he and the Granville county commissioners were sympathetic to Louisburg's concerns, but "I really don't think there's any basis to their argument."

He said Granville would not consider moving the site away from the Jackson Creek tributary or the Tar River.

The proposed site in the southern central part of the state fits the county's requirements for roadways, topography, geology and population density, Blizzard said. He also said the county afforded few sites not close to a tributary of the Tar River or within the rivers basin.

"I think to consider moving it at this time ...," Blizzard said, "would be just a problem somewhere else. To move it is not going to accomplish anything except cost the county a lot of money."

Blizzard said because of the cost of design and construction of the included safeguards to the environment, the landfill would cost the county nearly $1 million even before it begins operation.

Unlike Louisburg, the city manager of Rocky Mount, William Batchelor, said the city was not worried about possible contamination of its drinking water, and would not take any action opposing or supporting the landfill.

"Our water resources department has looked into it and suggested we stay out of it," Batchelor said.

Rocky Mount's two water treatment plants on the Tar River serve approximately 60,000 people, Batchelor said.

Rocky Mount's director of water resources, Paul Blount, would say only that the city was "interested" in Granville's proposal.

"We were interested that it was going in, and we will follow what they propose and what is permitted," Blount said. "We will follow what's being done just like we would follow anything that affects our water resources."

Tarboro has taken a similar stand in regard to Granville's proposed landfill.

Town manager Sam Noble said Tarboro trusted the Division of Health Services to properly monitor the site and keep the town's drinking water safe from harmful pollutants.

"I would feel the appropriate state agency will regulate that," Noble said. "If they do their job," Noble said, "we won't have any problem with (the landfill)."

Noble said if the landfill posed potential health hazards, "they won't let it be built there."

The solid waste management branch of the Division of Health Services handles permitting and monitoring landfills in the state.

Steve Reid, public information officer for the division, said Granville was in the process of designing its landfill with acetate liners to prevent leachate, but had not yet returned for a permit of the landfill.

Health Services requires the liners, which act as a replacement to natural barriers such as rock or hard clay.

"They're basically designed as insurance against the leachate," Reid said.

Leachate, according to Reid, is the liquid that trickles down from the collected garbage.

Blizzard said the proposed landfill would replace the county's two now in operation. The landfill would accept waste from residential, commercial and industrial sites, but he it would not hold "toxic chemicals, liquids or anything at that will be hazardous to the environment."

Along with the liner, Blizzard said the landfill would also use a leachate collection system that would collect the liquid. He said the design would prevent any run-off or seepage into Jackson Creek or the river.

"I think what's being designed and planned will never affect the Tar," Blizzard said.

Reid said the division had no study figures on the effectiveness of the liners, but he called them "real effective," and said their estimated lifespan is 20 to 25 years. Reid said he did not know what would happen to the waste after the liners have deteriorated, but said if the landfill was still in operation liners would probably have to be replaced.

After a plant has ceased operation, the land is capped with earth, which he said, acts as a natural prevention to run-off and leachate.

Reid also said the Environmental Protection Agency was considering more stringent restrictions on landfill construction and operation that would likely take effect within two years. Blizzard said Granville was designing its landfill to meet the proposed standards.

Blizzard also said the county planned to use only 48 acres of the 94-acre site, and leave a minimum of 300 feet between the landfill and Jackson Creek.

"We like our neighbors there," Blizzard said about Louisburg's reaction, "and we don't want to do anything at all to hurt them. And that goes for anybody downstream."

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

One Choice

The Options: Progress Or Inertia

One week from today, Farmville's voters will have an opportunity to choose between progress and inertia. They will have a chance to move forward in an orderly fashion or stand still. The correct option is obvious.

On June 6 Farmville residents will vote on whether the town will have a council-manager form of government instead of the mayor-council form of government it now has. It's time for an expanding community like Farmville to advance and embrace a council-manager government. That adjustment is a painless one that would enable the community to better balance the growth headed in its direction.

Adopting a council-manager government has several advantages that will prompt Farmville to grow more productively.

A mayor-council government, the system the town now has, concentrates direct power with commissioners. While this setup is suitable for small villages, it is inadequate in a more urban setting like Farmville.

Why? Well, as a community expands, the demands placed on its leadership increase concurrently. Most often, being a mayor or a council member is an after-hours job performed by dedicated citizens. That devotion is the heart of grassroots government. But it doesn't always get the job done.

When that stage in a town's growth is reached, a full-time administrator is needed to sufficiently serve the community. With growth comes a need for long-range planning, protection of resources and utilization of assets. While many elected officials have skills in these areas, they lack the perspective that translates this expertise into progress. They also fall short on time — and that's a resource a city manager could provide: time to forge the town's future.

Farmville has reached the point in its development where a professional administrator is necessary if growth is to be effectively managed. The town has a population of around 6,000. It has a distinguished industrial base. It bustles with retail activity and residential growth. It is adjacent to Pitt County's most important thoroughfare — U.S. 264 west, which connects the county with Raleigh. It sits right in the path of the county's growth westward from the medical district. The U.S. 264 corridor will harbor prosperous development, and that growth will likely benefit Farmville.

It's time for the town to look ahead and capitalize on its advantages. There is no better way to do that than institute a manager-council government. That system blends the expertise of a professional with the devotion of caring citizens. It is a bold move forward that should be embraced by Farmville voters June 6.

Grade-Free At 2, Test-Free At 3

BOSTON — A few years ago, I was drafted by a friend to write a recommendation for her daughter's admission to school. Not to college, you understand. This young applicant was in competition with her peers for nursery school.

In a state of some horror and hilarity, my friend and I tried to imagine what anyone could say about a 3-year-old that would guarantee her entry. That her last sonata showed lyrical grace? That the first chapter of her novel had a strong sense of narrative and a great use of metaphor?

Should we enclose a list of her achievements, a photo of her doing a somersault, a video of her WYCA swimming class? Perhaps her Apgar score was in order.

What I wanted to (and did not) tell the admissions officer was that this kid had a smile to beat the band. She liked herself. She liked the world. If they laid a hand on her self-image, I'd come down there personally and rip apart all their Legos.

After she was accepted and the anxiety died down, the adults in her circle came to think of this as the Dalton School syndrome. They named it after the school for upscale offspring of Manhattanites that was immortalized in the sandbox scene of "Baby Boom" when Diane Keaton learned that her baby, was already behind the competition.

One mother was seen talking to another about the devastating rejection of her toddler: "I don't understand. Her resume was perfect. Her references impeccable." Dalton had become a parody of privilege and of pushy parenting.

So it was with satisfaction that I learned that Dalton had decided to close its nursery school. They cited humanitarian grounds for ending the "agony." The admissions officer, who had six applicants for every place — a ratio not much lower than Harvard — had come to believe that,

Ellen Goodman

"It's hard to explain why 2-year-olds are turned down." It's even harder, admitted another school official, to pick the best and the brightest toddler for the elite track.

I don't want to make too much of the closing of one breeding ground of anxiety, but a symbol is a symbol. Is it conceivable that this shutdown reflects a belated mood change, a post-Yuppie desire to back off, to let up on performance pressure, to let a toddler actually toddle. Grade-free at 2, test-free at 3.

For years, we've been hearing about the hurried child: the baby born under an educational mobile, the 3-year-old scheduled by Filofax, the 8-year-old at computer camp. A new generation of competitive parents, we were assured, were using their children as a measure of success. A new generation of kids were growing up tense, stressed-out.

I never subscribed entirely to the idea that this is a new problem, or an elite problem. The children of immigrants were desperately hurried. The children of poverty are more than stressed-out. As for national problems, an inner-city school principal I talked with recently doesn't worry about the precocious; she worries about 5-year-olds who come to school without knowing colors, without having breakfast.

But there was nevertheless something appalling about gatekeepers of elitism that accepted and rejected, tracked and winnowed out 2-and 3-year-olds. The message that only the exceptional are acceptable trickled down, in one form or another, to the world most parents live in, where every child was expected to be above average.

It fed the very real concern that America is a pass-fail society. You either get in, or get left behind. Indeed, the downside of the emphasis on early childhood research (yes, they can hear sounds in the womb, see in the delivery room) has been to encourage this jump-start on adulthood.

'Even our language pushes children to be advanced for their age. Toddlers are PRE-schoolers, 11-year-olds are PRE-teens, as if youth were only a prep school for adulthood.'

Even our language pushes children to be advanced for their age. Toddlers are PRE-schoolers, 11-year-olds are PRE-teens, as if youth were only a prep school for adulthood. What gets lost in this urgency is childhood itself. Its own rhythm and pace.

So the would-be Dalton crowd got a reprieve. Their kids will not be judged for "academic competence and strength of character" at 2½. They will be judged at 4½. Hey, by then they're out of diapers. Practically grown-ups.

The Highway Bill's Time Has Come

As the State Legislature moves toward making critical decisions in preparation for adjournment, outlooks will change rapidly.

One thing that is clear, however, is that the Legislature must go on and approve a highway financing bill which provides for the projects outlined and completion within the planned 12 years. They must develop a package for financing it — and that doesn't include dumping their responsibilities on the public in the form of a bond issue.

There may be some tinkering with the mix of the financing, but in the end the bill will have to be paid and it will be paid by the users of highways — and that is taxpayers. While no one ever wants to pay more taxes the public understands that it is necessary.

There is a huge amount of discontent with the state's present highway system. Overwhelmingly it is recognized that without adequate roads the more rural areas will always be isolated.

Particularly in eastern North Carolina is there an acute awareness of how far behind the state is in construction of good roads. Easterners can tell the legislators about the difficulties of driving to Raleigh and points west on less than adequate roads. They can recite the problems of obtaining acceptable north-south highways in an east-west oriented state. And many of them can tell how it is to still live on unimproved roads.

While it won't be easy for these people to pay the extra money, the direct benefits will be forthcoming.

As constituents the citizens must make certain that our representatives contract "grassroots fever." The time has come for adequate roads in North Carolina. If this opportunity is missed there won't be another in this century.

Reconnecting Numbered Children

WASHINGTON — Deborah Meier wants it understood: She isn't trying to explain the recent Central Park "wilding" attack, though one of the youngsters accused in that affair is a student at her East Harlem school building.

She simply wants you to understand some of the everyday pressures that can leave inner-city children overwhelmed, suspicious and numbed to violence.

"During the same period of time (as the Central Park assault) there were three brutal rapes in a project near my school, two brothers of one of my students was killed in a fire, a young man was shot to death in a phone booth right outside the school.

"Do I have compassion for the woman who was victimized by that gang? Of course I do. But my compassion has to go in so many places. I have to try to deal with children who wonder why they are supposed to be more compassionate toward this victim than to all the other victims, many of them people they care about. They knew about the woman who had been gang-raped and thrown off a building. Why are they supposed to feel differently about this one?"

Meier, principal of Central Park East Secondary School, was in Washington for an appearance before the House Subcommittee on Children, Youth and Families. She said in an interview that she spends a lot of time trying to help her youngsters understand both their own feelings and the outside world's reaction to them.

"I try to help them distinguish between fault and compassion. Some of them manage better than others. Several of them went to the vigil (for the Central Park jogger) at Metropolitan Hospital. I understand that. But some didn't. I try to understand that, too."

The thing that is so hard for outsiders to understand, she said, is the utter routineness of violence in the lives of many of the children she teaches.

"Violence is normal in the lives of today's adolescent," she told the congressional hearing. "Even worse, it is glamorous and appealing. In advisory meetings, where people are frank and open, the boys will acknowledge that their ideal of manliness exudes violence....to be a man is to sneer in the face of the weak. To let your guard down is an invitation to danger or cruel jests, at the very least. Weakness (is) equated with sissiness. To be a thoughtful person is to invite a rep for being a homosexual."

The difference between poor kids and the middle-class, who also may find themselves attracted to the glamour of violence, is the difference between a rite of passage and a lifelong habit, she believes.

"Middle-class kids often see this conforming cruelty as a temporary necessity of adolescence, whereas working class and poor kids seem more prone to the view that this is the way the world is."

Meier, comfortable with her formal testimony, is uneasy with the press interviews that follow — afraid of saying something that will make her seem insensitive either to Central Park's most famous victim or else to her children, who see themselves as under attack for something they didn't do.

"If I try to talk about the larger picture, it sounds like I'm excusing the Central Park attack," she explained. "If I say I don't know what caused those particular boys to do what they did, it sounds like I'm evading."

"The thing is, those so-called 'wilding' kids took huge steps beyond what is normal even in the worst environment. They did something truly terrible. But there are millions of terrible things that children do and see that they take as norms."

Is there any way to reconnect these numbed children to the values the larger society takes for granted?

Again Meier grows cautious, fearing that her ideas will be dismissed as more liberal pablum. But pressed, she mentions two things that, while difficult, are, in her view, necessary.

The first is to break up the huge, hostile and inhuman schools into smaller units. Her own building, at 106th and Madison, houses three separate schools. The secondary school that is her special responsibility has only 325 students in grades 7 to 12.

"The advantage of a small unit is that you can talk to kids as people you know, listen to them, respond to their fears and confusions, help them to understand that ideas matter."

The other necessity, she believes, is to empower parents in their children's eyes.

"If we want families to become tougher guardians of their youngsters, we need to change the power relationships between parents and the kids. Parents can exert power when they are seen as protectors. Such parents can afford to make kids angry by asserting their power to protect."

"But where parents are seen as powerless, have no resources and dare not say 'no' because they fear their children will go elsewhere, to more dangerous places, doing more dangerous things, then parents are not in the driver's seat anymore."

Improving Education Through Structure, Not Funding

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — In a year when new money for education reform may be hard to find, a move is afoot to improve the public schools through structural changes rather than financial inducements.

A bill sponsored by Rep. Roy Cooper, D-Nash, would establish councils of teachers and administrators in each school of the state and give those councils greater authority over how the schools are run. The idea is to promote more local direction over the state's schools.

At the same time, the bill would force these schools to prove to state education officials that the changes they implement are working. In short, it would demand more accountability from school officials.

Cooper's bill would allow the council to recommend changes in how its school operate. If their recommendation challenged only an individual school's policies, then their recommendation would be implemented immediately. For example, the council might decide that the building needed a better cleaning.

If the council decided to challenge a systemwide policy, then it would have to be reviewed and approved by a systemwide council. For example, individual systems approve school calendars. If one school's council felt a different calendar should apply to their school, then the idea would have to be okayed by the systemwide council.

Finally, the council could challenge a statewide school regulation but would have to get approval from a statewide council, which would be established by the superintendent of public instruction, and then have it endorsed by the State Board of Education.

Such a challenge might involve a change in the standard course of study, for example. A school council might decide that it would be better to teach reading for more time each day and to cut the amount of time spent on another subject.

Maybe the key to it all is that the council would have to set up a procedure for proving that the changes it made actually work. That's accountability.

The bill does raise some troubling questions. As one education analyst said, "I wonder if it doesn't substitute one set of red tape for another." It would appear to set up a very long process for a school to get permission to deviate from state policy.

The new system could also create the need for a bunch of new bureaucrats in Raleigh. As requests come up the pipe from the school, it's possible to see state officials crying for more help to handle those requests more quickly. While the statewide council is supposed to rule on these matters, it would almost certainly develop its own staff. The State Board of Education would then have to review these requests all over.

But Cooper says the flow-up system might help state administrators recognize which state regulations are troublesome to schools. If they see schools repeatedly seeking exemptions from a particular regulation, they might change the regulation.

Rep. Art Pope, R-Wake, also said that he wants parents sitting on the school councils. In other states, parents are included. Supporters of the bill said they hope that parents will be added after the system is established.

The Cooper bill currently calls for a $6.5 million start-up appropriation. Rep. Dave Diamond, D-Surry, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, said that it will have a very good chance of becoming law if that money request is cut to $500,000.

President Bush: At Home Abroad

Walter Mears

ROME — Once again, George Bush was a campaigner, working the crowds, and no matter that the hands he grasped along the rope line weren't voters, but American priests and nuns at the Vatican, Italian townspeople at a playground wall in Nettuno.

The habit is unshakable, the technique universal. "God Bless America," sang about 120 Americans studying in Rome after their audience with the president in a 16th century hall in the Vatican Palace. He smilingly checked his watch as their applause ran long. "What a neat welcome, thank you," Bush told them.

'Everybody sat, as ordained by protocol, three people to two chairs toward the end of the line. Once, in similar audience, President Reagan had drowsed off during a lengthy papal statement. Perhaps mindful of such risks, the Vatican kept this one brief.'

It was that kind of Memorial Day weekend for President Bush, at home abroad. The heavy duty of his first presidential mission to Europe was before him in Brussels, at NATO summit talks that wound up today. Bonn and London lie ahead, before he flies home on Friday.

But first there was time for a hectic Roman holiday weekend, and Bush rushed through it smiling, waving, shaking Italian hands, American hands, leaving the formalities and conferences with outings he clearly found fun.

He spent an hour on Saturday with Pope John Paul II. They exchanged the standard formal statements — and the Bush White House squeezed in more people than there were Vatican chairs, to make certain the devout Roman Catholics in the presidential entourage shared the papal greeting. Everybody sat, as ordained by protocol, three people to two chairs toward the end of the line.

Once, in similar audience, President Reagan had drowsed off during a lengthy papal statement. Perhaps mindful of such risks, the Vatican kept this one brief.

Bush presented John Paul II a sterling silver tray engraved with the president's name and office. Routine; nothing to rival President Lyndon B.

Johnson's present to John Paul's predecessor — a bust of LBJ.

The Bush gift came from the three trunkloads of presents stowed in the White House luggage for ceremonies in four capitals, and at the NATO summit, where leaders of 16 Atlantic allies conferred.

Rome came first since, as Bush tritely noted, all roads lead there. All roads were traffic jammed while he was in town, wheeling from meeting to meal to memorial in a motorcade two dozen cars long, with police helicopters hovering above.

Security was tight, but not tight enough to keep youthful rightists from blocking the motorcade for a few minutes in Nettuno, near the World War II beachhead of Anzio. About 20 of them pig-piled into the road ahead of the Bush caravan on the way to a Sunday Mass at a tiny medieval church a block from the Mediterranean Sea. It wasn't much of an episode, but the whole cavalcade did stall for the better part of five minutes, close by the Ghostbusters Pizzeria, while Italian police cleared the street, arresting at least four of the demonstrators.

The Bushes went on to church, to a Mass conducted in Italian, in a church that seated fewer than 100 among the fading frescoes. When the collection basket came around, Bush had a $20 bill ready. A translator helped explain the Italian litany. No translation was needed as the parishioners applauded, then clapped in rhythmic unison as the Bushes left through a small door beside the altar.

Saturday evening at the Vatican, Bush found himself ahead of schedule, and decided he's like to make an unannounced visit to an Italian cafe before the Italian state dinner. That was not popular with security men, and it was scrubbed.

But next day, Bush got his spontaneity system working. He stopped his motorcade in Nettuno and climbed a grassy bank to shake hands with 100 or so people at a playground wall. "It looks like he's running for mayor of Nettuno," said Secretary of State James A. Baker III, who can sense such things, having managed Bush's campaigns.

Then, with 10 minutes notice, he took his helicopter out to the USS Guadalcanal, a helicopter carrier anchored 2½ miles offshore. "Surprise visit, Captain," he said, returning a salute from Capt. John McKay of Virginia Beach, Va. That it was; when the president and Mrs. Bush went below deck, they encountered a sailor who had just stepped from the shower and was wearing only a towel.

Bush flew on to Brussels and the western summit on Sunday, after telling American diplomats in Rome that he knows what a headache a visiting president can be.

"I have been on the receiving end — when I served in China — the receiving end of a visit from a president of the United States and I know what it's like — a pluperfect pain."

IN THE STATE

Traffic Deaths

RALEIGH (AP) — Fifteen people died on North Carolina roads during the Memorial Day weekend, including a Cabarrus County man whose car overturned several times, the state Highway Patrol reported today.

Darrell Ford, 30, of Concord was killed about 4:30 a.m. Monday while trying to pass another vehicle in Rowan County. Troopers say his car ran off a rural road 3 miles south of Salisbury, overturned several times and threw him from the vehicle.

So far this year, 520 people have died in accidents on North Carolina roads, compared with 560 fatalities reported at this time last year.

The N.C. State Motor Club predicted 14 people would die during the holiday weekend and about 1,000 would suffer disabling injuries.

The 78-hour holiday death toll began at 6 p.m. Friday and ends at midnight Monday. Last year, 13 people were killed and 973 injured in the 1,274 Memorial Day weekend traffic accidents in North Carolina, the club said.

Child Drowns

SOUTHMONT, N.C. (AP) — A 12-year-old girl who lived at American Children's Home in Lexington died at High Rock Lake as she attempted to save a 10-year-old boy who appeared to be drowning.

Tyrancia LaShawn Venev had gone on a trip with several other children from the home to Hanging Rock State Park on Saturday and then to the Buddle Creek Access Area to swim.

When the children were called out of the water at 7 p.m., she saw 10-year-old Tino Davis struggling in the lake, officials said. She went to rescue him and went under water herself in the ensuing struggle, according to a report from the Davidson County Sheriff's Department.

Several men who were fishing were able to pull the boy out of the water. The girl, who was the daughter of Jerome and Denise Johnson-Benev of Winston-Salem, was pulled out after 15 minutes, according to the report.

Crash Landing

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Jacksonville doctor was in critical condition today after his single-engine airplane crash-landed north of Jacksonville, officials say.

Carey Myers was the only occupant of the open cockpit bi-plane, which was destroyed Monday when it crashed into some trees shortly after 8 p.m., officials said. Myers had taken off from the Wings Aloft flying school near Jacksonville. The cause of the crash was not known.

A spokeswoman at Onslow Memorial Hospital said Myers underwent surgery Monday night. The nature and extent of his injuries was not known.

Child Injured

RALEIGH (AP) — A 10-year-old Raleigh girl was severely injured when she jumped from a moving school bus Monday morning after complaining that she did not want to go to school.

Shafon L. Jackson, a fifth grader, opened the rear emergency door of the bus and jumped, Wake County school officials said. She was taken to Wake Medical Center, where she was in guarded condition with head injuries.

Conway H. Haswell, director of security and safety for Wake County schools, said the bus was going about 20 mph on its route to Swift Creek Elementary School.

Coastal Resorts Expecting Bumper Year As Beachgoers Arrive Early

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tourism officials and business operators along North Carolina's beaches were encouraged by the size of the Memorial Day weekend crowds and said they expect another record year for the coastal tourism industry.

Robert Dyson, general manager of Cabana de Mar at Carolina Beach, said his 76 oceanfront condominiums are "booked solid already" for most of July. "We turned hundreds of people away this weekend," he said.

Jim D. Griffin Jr., of Holden Beach Realty, said "close to 90 percent" of the cottages he handles at Holden Beach are reserved for the rest of the summer.

"It looks very good," he said. "It looks like we're going to be ahead of last season."

W. Neal Lewis of Beaufort, executive director of the Carteret County Chamber of Commerce said the Memorial Day crowds this year seemed larger than in the past.

"Based on the turnout for the Memorial Day weekend and on reports from the people who take reservations, I think this is going to be a good year," he said.

"We are looking forward to another excellent season on the Outer Banks," Gene O'Bleness of the Dare County Tourist Bureau said. Most of the rooms in the area were occupied and about 3,000 people had stopped by the visitor's center on U.S. 158 at Kitty Hawk on Friday and Saturday.

"That compares with 2,400 for the whole weekend last year," he told The News and Observer of Raleigh.

Rental agencies on the Outer Banks have reported cottage reservations for the summer are up 20 percent over last year, he said.

"All the rooms on the island are booked and people are having a good time biking, boating and spending time on the beach," said Ann Ehringhaus, who operates an Ocracoke Island bed and breakfast.

Coastal businesses were hit hard last year when a toxic algae swept across 200 miles of North Carolina's beaches.

The algae caused coughing and eye irritation to beach visitors. Tourists looked inland for recreation opportunities. The red tide also forced the closing of more than 35,000 acres of shellfishing waters from Hatteras Island to Calabash.

Demonstrators Call For Martin To Drop Hatcher's Extradition

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Gov. Jim Martin held meetings with advisers and legislators while demonstrators stood outside his residence, again demanding justice for Indian activist Eddie Hatcher.

"He (the governor) just doesn't have any reaction," said Tim Pittman, Martin's communications director. "Most of the groups out there weren't from North Carolina. There hasn't been any real support for Hatcher ... among the Indian groups in North Carolina."

Protesters held a vigil outside the Executive Mansion on Monday, demanding that Martin drop efforts to extradite Hatcher to face kidnapping charges.

"Jim Martin, can't you see — Eddie Hatcher must be free," about 25 people chanted from outside the iron fence surrounding the mansion, which is the governor's official residence. They stood in the hot sunlight, holding banners and placards bearing slogans of support for Hatcher. They joined hands, prayed and sang "We Shall Overcome."

Most of the demonstrators were representatives of out-of-state organizations including All Peoples Congress, Workers World Party, Students Youth Against Racism, the Center for Constitutional Rights and the American Indian Support Group.

Thelma Clark, Hatcher's mother, said she was "disgusted" that so few Robeson County residents showed up. "I guess if I had been raised there and that's all I had ever known, I wouldn't stand up and speak out either," she said.

Hatcher and Timothy Jacobs were acquitted in October 1988 of federal charges stemming from their takeover of the Robesonian newspaper eight months earlier, when two men armed with shotguns seized the office and held hostages for 10 hours before surrendering.

The two men, who say they are Tuscarora Indians, have never denied participating in the takeover.

but say they did it to call attention to corruption in the county's government and judicial system.

They were indicted on state kidnapping charges in December.

Guilford Community Wants Its Charter

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

STOKESDALE, N.C. — The community of Stokesdale would like to become an official town — again.

Incorporated in 1907, the town council became inactive and ceased to meet during the 1930s, and the state revoked its charter in the early 1970s.

Now a group of residents from this community of 3,600 would like to see Stokesdale become Guilford County's fifth municipality.

Stokesdale has the makings of a town — a drug store, a hardware store, two florists and a barber shop. It has almost everything except the one aspect that makes a town — an official charter.

"We've got a town," said Randy Southard, one of the leaders of a committee spearheading an incorporation campaign. "We just don't exist officially. Incorporation would give us a stronger voice if we do want to do some thing."

An incorporation bill passed the state Senate last week. If the bill passes the House, voters in Stokesdale would decide in November whether they want to separate themselves from the county's reign and become self-governing.

State's Utilities Expect Adequate Electric Supply For 'Normal' N.C. Summer Season

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

North Carolina power companies should have enough power to help their customers beat the heat this summer, but officials say it's a delicate balancing act that can easily topple.

"If we have a normal summer, we should have no problem," said Dennis Nightengale, director of the Public Staff at the N.C. Utilities Commission. "But if we have a heat wave and some units are down, it's a different story."

If last summer is any indication, electric utilities should be prepared for the worst. An early heat wave hit last June while utilities were still refueling some units. Drought-parched rivers silenced hydroelectric plants, and power companies in other states didn't have spare megawatts to sell.

That's when Duke Power cut voltage 5 percent, causing a brownout in its service area. The company also sent out a plea for customers to raise their thermostat settings and dim the lights.

"That instance involved a string of problems that hit all at once," Duke spokesman Joe Maher said. "We don't anticipate anything like that happening this summer."

At least one nuclear unit will be down during the peak period of mid-July to late August; but Maher said a wet winter filled North Carolina lakes and rivers, so Duke's hydroelectric plants will be at full capacity.

This year, Duke Power predicts, the peak demand will hit 13,725 megawatts, under its 15,819 megawatt capacity. Carolina Power & Light, the state's other major electric utility, predicts a 8,257 peak, well under its 10,072 megawatt supply. Both utilities typically have their highest demand in the summer.

But one industry group says North Carolina is part of the country that will be wanting for watts.

Applied Economic Research of New York reports that North Carolina, South Carolina and most of Virginia have an expected energy reserve capacity of less than 15 percent to handle peak times. The utility research firm said the margin needed to assure comfort is 17 1/2 percent to 20 percent.

As demand builds, utilities begin using load control, cutting off power in selected homes and businesses. In return, customers receive a credit on their bills.

Duke Power can cut off air conditioners in 121,600 homes, trimming 400 megawatts off demand. Maher said Duke had to cut off air conditioners three times last summer.

While load control and brownouts help a utilities balance supply and demand, analysts say they may face a consumer backlash if it's done too often.

There is little noticeable effect when power is cut 5 percent in a brownout, but the reduced energy forces appliances to work harder and may cause them to wear out faster. Brownouts can also mess up sensitive machines such as computers.

Industry analysts are predicting more brownouts in the future because demand is increasing while supply remains stagnant.

Legislators Hold Secret Budget Talks

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A powerful state senator ordered budget leaders to meet in secret as they prepared to negotiate with the House over spending for new and expanded programs next year.

Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, ordered reporters to leave before the meeting got under way Monday. No vote was taken on whether to go into executive session.

The chairmen and vice chairmen of the standing budget subcommittees attended the meeting, along with Sen. Marc Basnight, D-Dare, chairman of the Base Budget Committee, and Sen. Donald Kincaid, R-Caldwell, vice-chairman of the Appropriations Committee and the panel's ranking Republican.

Royall later declined to give details of the 90-minute discussion, saying only that the subcommittee chairmen had reported on hearings they've conducted over the past two weeks regarding state agencies' requests for budget increases.

"It's nothing more than they've taken up in committee," he said, "nothing more than they've been doing from day to day."

Asked why he ordered Monday's meeting closed when the subcommittee hearings had been open to the public, Royall said, "I'm not going to give it to the press till the full committee gets it. ... That ain't the way to operate. You can't expect your people to do their job if they're going to vote on something when the press tells them what the hell they're voting on."

Diet Pills Sweeping U.S.
Doctors Invent 'Lazy Way' to Lose Weight
U.S. Gov't. Approves Patent! Claims for New Diet Pill
BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special) — An amazing new weight loss pill called "fat-magnet" has recently been developed and perfected by two prominent doctors at a world famous hospital in Los Angeles that reportedly "guarantees" you steady fat loss and calorie reduction by simply taking their tested and proven new pill.

The U.S. government has just approved the doctors claims for a hard-to-get patent that confirms "there has never been anything like their fat-bonding pill process before." It is a totally new major scientific breakthrough and is revolutionizing the weight loss industry.

You Can "Eat Normally" Best of all, "you can continue to eat your favorite foods and you don't have to change your normal eating habits. You can start losing fat and reduce calories from the very first day until you achieve the ideal weight you desire without exercising."

Flushes Fat Out of Body The new pill is appropriately called the "fat-magnet" pill because it breaks into thousands of particles, each acting like a tiny magnet, "attracting" and trapping many times its size in undigested fat particles. Then, all the trapped fat and calories are naturally "flushed" right out of your body because they cannot be absorbed.

Within 2 days you should notice a change in the color of your stool, caused by the fat particles being eliminated. "Automatically" Lose Fat

According to one of the inventors, Dr. William Shell, heart specialist and associate professor of medicine at UCLA medical school, "the new fat bonding process is a 'lazy way' to lose weight because the pills alone 'automatically' reduce calories by eliminating dietary fat. It is 100% safe and not a drug."

The fat-magnet pills are already sweeping the country with glowing reports of weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slimmer, trimmer and more attractive again.

Now Available to the Public If you are trying to lose 20, 50, 100 pounds or more, you can order your supply of these "no-risk" highly successful fat-magnet pills directly from the doctors' exclusive manufacturer only (includes optional calorie-reduction plan for even better results). Send $20 for a 90 pill supply (+$3 handling), or $35 for a 180 pill supply (+$3 handling) to: Fat-Magnet, 9016 Wilshire Blvd., Dept. W634, Beverly Hills, CA 90210. (Unconditional money-back guarantee if not 100% satisfied.) Visa, MasterCard and American Express OK. (Send card number, expire date and signature.) Federal Judge Who Owns GE Stock Rules For Company In Two Cases

MILWAUKEE — U.S. District Judge Thomas J. Curran ruled in favor of General Electric Co. in two cases while holding stock in the company, despite a requirement that judges disqualify themselves in such situations, The Associated Press has learned.

Curran said he would "notify counsel of the existence of the conflicting interest" and avoid future involvement in cases involving GE. The U.S. Judicial Code of Ethics forbids a judge from presiding in a case where he has a financial holding.

AP discovered the incidents by reviewing Curran's financial disclosure statements and cross-referencing his stock holdings with his case files.

Curran has reported in all his financial disclosure reports since 1985 that he held between $15,000 and $50,000 in GE stock. He presided over unrelated cases involving GE Medical Systems in 1987 and 1989 and said in an interview that he was surprised to learn of the conflicts.

"I really thought we had a system to prevent that," Curran said. He said in accepting the cases, he hadn't recognized GE Medical Systems as a "subsidiary" of GE.

However, GE Medical Systems is a division of the parent company and not a subsidiary, and in one case Curran's ruling directly cited General Electric Co. as the defendant.

"I couldn't dispute that," said Curran, who had reviewed only one case completely but acknowledged both cases involved GE. Curran said Friday he still owned the GE stock.

William Bauer, chief judge of the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, said judges in his circuit are required to compare their financial disclosure statements against court documents before deciding whether they can preside over that case.

"The code is fairly clear," said Bauer, who was informed of the details of the case but asked that the name of the judge not be disclosed to him. "If you have a financial interest you must disqualify yourself."

Bauer is responsible for enforcing the judicial code of ethics on all judges in his territory, which includes Wisconsin. He said he would impanel a committee to review the matter if he received a written complaint. Any disciplinary action would be decided by that panel, he said.

Impeachment has been recommended only in a handful of cases in the country's history, and those involved allegations of criminal acts.

University of Wisconsin Law Professor Frank Tuerkheimer, a former U.S. attorney, recommended the plaintiffs in both cases appeal the decisions. He said neither suit was large enough to affect the judge's investments, "but the case law is clear that that does not matter."

Tuerkheimer reviewed the case, but also asked that the name of the judge not be disclosed to him.

Curran, 64, is a former Mauston, Wis., attorney who was appointed to the bench in 1983 by President Reagan. His 1988 disclosure showed net investments between $648,030 and $1,720,000, generally in blue-chip stocks.

Seabrook Opponents Planning Protests

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEABROOK, N.H. — Operators of the Seabrook nuclear power plant warmed the reactor for its first low-power testing, but opponents planned to turn up some heat of their own with a new round of mass protests.

"The confrontation must come now. It's never been more important," said Paul Gunter, a founder of the Clamshell Alliance anti-nuclear group and veteran of its first sit-in at Seabrook 13 years ago. "Thirteen years of opposition have made the issues crystal clear, and now is really a testing time, both for the plant and the opposition."

Operators began heating the reactor Saturday in preparation for the first atomic chain reaction, expected within seven to 10 days. The test will be the biggest milestone yet for a plant that is a decade behind schedule, billions of dollars over budget and a focus of the nation's anti-nuclear movement.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission gave Seabrook a low-power license Friday, the day after a federal appeals court refused to block the tests.

Meanwhile, demonstrators have been meeting with local and state police to make final plans for a rally Saturday and civil disobedience Sunday. Some activists plan to try to climb fences surrounding the plant.

Edward Brown, president of New Hampshire Yankee, which operates the plant, said the planned demonstration will not affect the testing.

But critics say the protests will be an important indicator of the depth and perseverance of public opposition to Seabrook as the $6 billion plant enters the last stretch of its protracted licensing struggle.

"I think it's real important to show the political leadership in this state there is real concern about this project, and they're ignoring it at their peril — and boy, are they ignoring it," said Robert Backus, who has worked as a lawyer for 17 years for groups opposing the plant.

The plant must win federal approval for evacuation plans for nearby communities before it can operate commercially.

Freed Father Visits Graves Of 7 Children

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ARCADIA, Fla. — James Richardson dropped to his knees at the graves of his seven children, made the sign of the cross and prayed aloud under an unrelenting afternoon sun.

The Memorial Day graveside visit was Richardson's first since he was convicted of killing one of the children nearly 22 years ago, and his first since a judge ruled he was wrongfully convicted and ordered him released from prison just over a month ago. All the children died after eating a meal laced with pesticide.

"Oh, my little ones are gone. I have nothing left now ... except God to keep me going strong," Richardson said, using a white handkerchief to wipe the perspiration from his neck and the tears from his eyes.

"You took something I love. I never thought it was going to be like this. No one seems to understand, but you know Lord. That's all right. With all the agonies running up and down my spine, I thank you anyway, Lord," he said, as a crowd of about 50 looked on.

Moments later, saying Monday's memorial service at Oakridge Cemetery had "cleansed" him of the past, Richardson climbed into a limousine and headed back to comedian-activist Dick Gregory's diet and health clinic in Fort Walton Beach.

The 53-year-old former farm worker had been serving a life term, which was commuted from a death sentence.

A judge ordered Richardson freed after determining he had been wrongfully convicted with what a state investigation found was suppressed evidence and perjured testimony.

His homecoming was an emotional one, with a rousing service at the church that sits near where Richardson once lived, and where his children ate their fatal lunch of rice and beans. Inside the church, about 50 neighbors gathered for the afternoon service.

Seven wreaths adorned the front of the church. Six were decorated with pink carnations and bows in honor of Richardson's daughters, Alice, Betty, Susie, Dorine, Dianne and Venessa. The last, decorated in red, was for his son, James Richardson Jr.

Man Held In Deaths Of Four

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SPRINGFIELD, N.J. — A young Yale graduate who authorities say killed his mother, a brother and two others in a machete-wielding rampage apparently was depressed over an illness that kept him from working, neighbors said.

Roland Marcello, 23, was arrested Monday evening as he lay exhausted on a river bank after a car-and-foot chase that took him 20 miles from the home where his family had lived about 15 years.

Marcello was being held for questioning early today at Springfield police headquarters and was expected to be arraigned, Police Chief William E. Chisholm said.

He is charged with four counts of murder and one count of aggravated assault and could face the death penalty, Union County Prosecutor John H. Stamler said. The alleged murder weapon also has been recovered, he said.

The dead included Marcello's mother, Anita, 51, and brother, Raymond, 20; Nelson Paiva, 20, a family friend from Union; and Mark Dennis, 36, a neighbor who intervened in the struggle, Stamler said. All four died of multiple stab wounds.

Richard Hartmann, another neighbor who intervened, was in guarded condition in a local hospital.

The killings shattered the calm of this upper middle-class community 25 miles southwest of New York City, where residents hold frequent block parties and help each other in crises, and where there hadn't been a murder since 1981.

Experts Say Transplant Rules Discriminate Against Blacks

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — Federally mandated rules for doling out kidneys discriminate against blacks, who receive proportionally fewer organs than whites even though they are four times as likely to suffer kidney failure, some experts say.

"I don't consider it a national tragedy. I consider it ignorance. As we become more enlightened, then we expect (the system) to be more fair," said Howard University's Dr. Clive O. Callender, one of the nation's few black transplant surgeons.

The 1½-year-old rules adopted by the United Network for Organ Sharing, which administers the national transplant network, emphasize tissue-matching between kidney donors and recipients.

Callender and some others contend the rules put blacks at a disadvantage because a fifth of them have tissue-matching problems that make them wait longer for kidneys, most of which are donated by whites.

"At the time the rules were made, that information was not perceived as discriminatory," Callender said. "But we now know it because of studies on the black immune system."

Dr. William Vaughn, the network's director of technical services, acknowledges the rules aren't perfect but adds, "it's a good system within the confines that we have to work inside of."

"You can't put out quotas" on organ transplants, said Dr. Paul Eggers, chief of the federal Health Care Financing Administration's program evaluation branch.

Transplant specialists have long disputed the importance of tissue-matching for kidneys and will continue that debate at their annual meeting, which begins today in Chicago.

Proponents say the success rate for kidney recipients improves considerably when tissue is matched closely, but critics contend the gains are not great enough to justify letting donated organs deteriorate until a close match is found.

"Even if (tissue typing) is important, should we weaken its importance in the interest of getting minorities a better chance to get a transplant, even if it lowers the success of the operation?" asked Arthur Caplan, director of the Center for Biomedical Ethics at the University of Minnesota.

The standardized scoring system in effect since Oct. 1, 1987, also takes into account severity of illness, length of time waiting, proximity to the donor, size and blood compatibility.

During 1988, the first full year during which the network collected donor and recipient data, whites received 71 percent of the kidneys transplanted in the United States. Blacks received 21.7 percent and Hispanics 7.4 percent.

Whites also got 88.9 percent of the hearts transplanted last year, 85.9 percent of livers and 97.6 percent of pancreases, according to statistics just released by the network.

On the opposite end, 83.2 percent of the 4,083 brain-dead victims whose organs were donated in 1988 were white. About 8.6 percent were black and 5.9 percent were Hispanic, well below their population share.

Sixty-two percent of the donors were male. Men also dominated on the receiving side, getting 79.2 percent of hearts transplanted last year, 49.7 percent of livers, 60.6 percent of kidneys and 56.4 percent of pancreases.

The Virginia-based network excluded from its calculations recipients whose race or sex were not reported.

"Race has nothing to do with who gets allocated the organ. Neither does sex," Vaughn said. "It comes back to who's on the list and who has the disease."

Blacks have more kidney failure than any other group, according to Callender, because of their proclivi-ty toward high blood pressure.

One-third of the 107,000 Americans on dialysis are black. And one-third of the nearly 15,000 people awaiting kidney transplants are black, according to Vaughn.

The gap between black and white kidney recipients "could be an unconscious bias or a self-selection thing, too," Eggers said.

Blacks are reluctant to donate organs for the same reasons they are wary of transplantation, according to Callender. Those reasons include religious beliefs, lack of transplant awareness, fear of premature death and distrust of the white-dominated medical community.

Student Says Compromise Works

Dear Abby: I have seen several letters in your column concerning the problem of curfews imposed upon college students when they visit home. My parents and I have found a good way to handle this situation. When I go home, I consider myself a guest in my parents' house, and I try to be as considerate as possible.

My parents realize that it would be silly to impose a curfew on an adult; therefore, before I go out for an evening, I tell them with whom I am going, where I plan to be and approximately what time I'll be home. If I'm out later than I had expected to be, I always call home so my parents won't worry. This gives me the freedom to go out and stay as long as I wish without coming home to worried and angry parents.

The keys here are consideration and trust. I am a college senior now, and this system has worked for four years. If you pass this along to your readers, it may help others. — Jean In Urbana, Ill.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Dear Jean: Your consideration and trust policy should work in every home. When parents know where their children are, regardless of the hour, they are far less likely to worry. (They may not approve, but at least they won't be walking the floors and wondering if their kids are in a ditch or, God forbid, in a morgue.) More students should follow your lead.

Dear Abby: The letter from "Michael's Girlfriend" described exactly the kind of man I married. Unfortunately, I didn't realize he was a "heavy girl watcher" until after I married him. He never overcame the habit of staring at girls. One day, in the grocery store, he was in such a trance staring at a girl that he ran the cart over my foot!

He never initiated sex. I had to beg for it. (He was the one with the headache.) I felt empty, worthless and inadequate. He put me on a guilt trip by saying, "You're just like your mother — you don't have the capacity to be happy." I finally divorced him after 25 years of misery.

Thanks for advising Michael's girlfriend not to marry him. I hope she takes your advice. — Been There In Houston

Dear Been There: So do I.

Dear Abby: The letter about the father who considered leaving his very young child alone for a "few minutes" while he ran out to pick up a pizza prompts this letter. First, thank you, Abby, for saying that no one should leave a child unattended for even five minutes.

Here's my story: I am the mother of two daughters, ages 1 and 2. My 2-year-old was sleeping when I had to drive to town to do a few errands. I put her pillow and sleeping bag in the backseat to let her sleep, and took my 1-year-old into the store with me just to pay a bill and run back out. There were a few people ahead of me, so I waited in line for maybe five minutes. Then someone yelled, "There's a car on fire with a child inside!"

I ran outside, and saw it was my car! The door was locked and all the windows were rolled up. The car was filled with smoke. I unlocked the car and felt around in the backseat — screaming my daughter's name. I couldn't see her with all that smoke. I could hardly breathe. She was backed into the corner. I finally grabbed her and pulled her out. Her hair was singed, and she was black and coughing and crying. Never in my life have I felt so guilty, knowing that my child could have died because of my neglect.

I learned a lesson I will never forget. Please print this as a warning to others who may be tempted to leave a child unattended for "only a few minutes." — A Miracle In Anoka, Minn.

A Math Crisis Is Doing A Number On Us

As if we don't have enough to worry about, I read a story the other day that said this country will need 10,000 new math and science teachers next year and no one knows where they're coming from.

As a woman who once wrote the bank a check to cover an overdraft, I don't even understand the question.

I think what we've got in this country is a math crisis. We've got people who win a lottery and have no idea how many zeroes they've won. We have people running around with a full deck of credit cards with not a clue as to how much interest they have to pay on the unpaid balance. We're inundated with news programs that talk about health and drug statistics, $2.4 trillion budgets, and savings and loan deficits. There's an entire Eastern seaboard full of people who can't figure out that when they call someone in the Mountain Standard time zone, they have to subtract three hours.

At Wits End

My husband is pretty good at math. Before we were married, we sat around and talked about the genetic nightmare of any children we might have together. The worst scenario we could imagine was: What if our daughters had his legs and my math ability? What if our sons had his hairline and my math ability? We nearly broke off the engagement.

Our worst nightmare materialized. I watched in horror one day as I asked one of the kids to divide a cupcake equally with his brother. On one side of the knife were two crumbs that he shoved grudgingly across the table. The genes had been passed.

Math wizards are always telling us how much fun numbers can be. If it is so much fun, then how come I thought the film "Wall Street" needed subtitles? If Charlie Sheen and Michael Douglas can't make numbers look like fun, no one can.

Remember what happened when they tried to get this country to speak metric? The only thing that remains of that dead language is a box of poppy seeds on my spice shelf that reads 28 grams.

Occasionally I will discover my husband laughing with Louis Rukeyser over a mutual funds joke. Only my husband would know when to laugh.

I think what we have to do is to bite the bullet and get back to the basics of mathematics. We must learn how to factor in $2.4 trillion with "read my lips." We must learn how to pronounce Isaac Asimov. We should let the dollar fall BEFORE we make our vacation plans. Since IRS people never have the same answer, we should shop around until we find the lowest estimate. When our children charge us more interest on a loan than the credit union, we should cut their allowances.

Where have all the financial wizards gone? When I asked my husband that question, he said, "Most of them are serving time."

Ex-Western Coach Waters Dies Of ALS

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CULLOWHEE — Former Western Carolina football coach Bob Waters has lost his six-year battle with Lou Gehrig's Disease, becoming the third San Francisco 49er from the early 1960s to die from the incurable illness.

Waters, a frequent starter at quarterback during his first three NFL seasons with the 49ers, died in his sleep at his home Monday. He was 50.

"I just talked to his wife. She said they had a great weekend and had stayed up late last night, talking and reminiscing," said Don Dalton, an assistant coach on Waters' staff for 18 years. "He had not lost his humor. She said they really had a great time last night. I thought that was so wonderful and appropriate that they could do that."

Waters was diagnosed with the disease in 1984, and eventually lost the use of his arms and legs and was confined to a wheelchair. He was forced to use a microphone to amplify his voice and a respirator to ease his breathing.

Waters, who had coached the Catamounts for 20 years and oversaw his last spring football game on April 5, was reassigned to the position of associate athletic director and head football coach emeritus by Chancellor Myron Coulter. The change was effective April 14.

Coulter said at the time that "a lack of leadership and intensity" during the 1988 season helped bring about the reassignment. Waters was replaced as head coach by Dale Strahm.

Waters underwent experimental treatment at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston two years ago and also worked to raise money for research on ALS, appearing on the Jerry Lewis Labor Day telethon, and attending fund-raisers.

"First, I'd rather not have it (ALS)," Waters said in an earlier interview. "But if I have any hopes or intentions of getting well, something has to chance — to make an awareness, to arouse interest in it, may be a way to do it. It may be our chance."

During the treatments, Waters discovered that two of his 49er teammates — All-Pro linebacker Matt Hazeltine and former running back Gary Lewis, also had amyotrophic lateral sclerosis. Both men have since died from the disease, which attacks the body's nervous system and renders muscles useless.

The unusual link has been the subject of several studies into the disease with speculation centering on a commonly used painkiller, steroids and a type of fertilizer used on the field. But researchers have stressed that ALS remains a disease with no known cause or cure.

A series of injuries forced Waters to the 49ers' secondary in 1964 and he ended his playing career the following season.

On Monday, Coulter said the loss of Waters would have a lasting impact on the university.

"He has been a symbol of honesty and fair play for his players, and a great credit to his sport and to Western Carolina," Coulter said.

"Coach Waters not only has given us a legacy of integrity and sportsmanship in athletics, but in contending with the illness from which he suffered, he also has given us a shining example of inner strength and courage people need in times of adversity," Coulter said.

Waters' reassignment brought a groundswell of support from students, players and coaches. A petition was circulated, calling for Waters' reinstatement as head coach, and students also held a small demonstration during his last spring practice.

"Despite his illness, he never lost the qualities that made him such a

Wilander Rallying

Recent Troubles Are Fading Away

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PARIS — Last year, Mats Wilander was the most dangerous man in world tennis, his confidence unshakable, his game close to perfection.

This year, the Swede has been one of the easiest stars to shoot down, his consistency shattered, his concentration virtually non-existent.

Discouraged and demoralized, Wilander comes to the French Open, one of three Grand Slam events he won last year.

Suddenly, the performance improves and Wilander relaxes again.

"In a way it's a relief to be here," Wilander said after starting defense of his title Monday by beating Spanish qualifier Tomas Carbonell 6-3, 6-3, 6-3.

"I feel no real pressure here. I was impatient to get here."

The Swede, winless in eight months, was able to sit back today and watch the rivals for his title battle it out on the red clay at Roland Garros.

Up first on center court was the favorite, Czechoslovakia's Ivan Lendl, bidding for a third French title to follow up his Australian Open success in Melbourne last January. Lendl faced West Germany's Patrick Kuhnert, primarily a serve-and-volleyer who was not expected to pose a serious threat to the top seed.

Lendl was followed by the third women's seed, Natalia Zvereva, up against Raffaella Reggi of Italy.

Second up on court No. 1 was Boris Becker, the two-time Wimbledon champion whose clay-court game has been steadily improving and who is keen to show he can win major titles on surfaces other than grass.

Others in action today included Andre Agassi, America's main hope of breaking a 34-year drought in the men's event, and Argentina's Alberto Mancini, the hottest player in men's tennis.

First-day action at Roland Garros began with Steffi Graf launching the defense of her title with a 6-1, 6-1 victory over Camille Benjamin of the United States.

The 19-year-old West German, bidding for a sixth straight Grand Slam tournament title, downplayed her role as firm favorite in the absence of veteran Americans Chris Evert and Martina Navratilova.

"It's not easier without Chris and Martina," Graf said. "You can never say it's easy. There are so many clay-court players."

Graf's main rival, second-seeded Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina, trounced Akemi Nishiyama of Japan 6-0, 6-0.

Other seeds advancing on the opening day included, on the men's side, No. 3 Stefan Edberg of Sweden, No. 6 Jakob Hlasek of Switzerland and three Americans.

Jimmy Connors, No. 9, started his 11th visit to Roland Garros by outslugging Martin Strelba of Czechoslovakia 6-2, 2-6, 6-4, 6-3; No. 7 Tim Mayotte confidently adapted his grass-court game to clay by thrashing Mark Kratzmann of Australia 6-1, 6-2, 6-3; and No. 14 Aaron Krickstein rallied to beat Czechoslovakia's Richard Vogel 4-6, 6-3, 5-7, 6-2, 6-0.

Other women to advance were No. 4 American Zina Garrison, 6-2, 6-2 over countrywoman American Louise Allen; No. 5 Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia, No. 10 Helen Kelesi of Canada and No. 15 Mary-Joe Fernandez of the United States.

Two seeds were beaten on the opening day, both by French players, and a third was forced to pull out.

Miloslav Mecir, the eighth men's seed who has just returned to the circuit after a back injury, was ousted 2-6, 6-4, 6-1, 6-3 by Thierry Tulasne; No. 13 woman Claudia Kohde-Kilsch of West Germany lost 4-6, 6-2, 8-6 to Karine Quentrec, a wild card entry.

Sweden's Kent Carlsson, No. 10 among the men, failed to recover from a knee injury and had to pull out of the Grand Slam event he had the best shot of winning.

Rose coach Ronald Vincent's Rampants take on Hunt tonight

Hunt Set For Rose

Third Meeting Between Old Foes

By Tim Chandler

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Wilson Hunt is hoping the third time is the charm. The Warriors face Greenville Rose tonight at 7:30 p.m. in Guy Smith Stadium in the third round of the state 4-A baseball playoffs.

The game will mark the third meeting between the two schools this year, with the 23-0 Rampants having swept the first two.

Hunt, 15-7 for the year, however, threw a scare at Rose in the last meeting before falling 2-0.

"It's so tough to beat a good team three times in one year," Rose coach Ronald Vincent said. "They are capable of winning, they have real good speed and they play solid defense."

Hunt has already proved that it could beat a team that it hadn't during the regular season. The Warriors advanced to the third round by knocking off Northern Nash Friday. Nash had beaten Hunt three times during the regular season.

"I felt like all year long that us and Northern Nash were pretty even teams," Warrior coach Russell Williamson said. "They beat us in a couple of games by one run. Those were games that could have gone either way."

But Williamson doesn't feel his team is quite as evenly matched with the Rampants.

"At this stage it (losing) can happen to anybody," Williamson said. "But for us to beat Greenville Rose, it's going to take a superhuman effort. Coach Vincent has done a great job up there building a program and we're just beginning now to try and build a program, so this is a great game for us. We're just going to go up there and play our game and relax and have some fun and maybe things will happen for us. People didn't expect us to get this far so I want us to just go up there and have fun."

Williamson pointed out three things the Warriors must do in order to have a shot at knocking off the Rampants.

"Number one, we've got to keep Timmy Moore off the bases," Williamson Pitino To Return To College?

Reports Say Pitino Will Leave Knicks For Kentucky

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Rick Pitino, who has called himself a "college coach living on borrowed time," will leave the New York Knicks of the NBA to take charge of the troubled University of Kentucky basketball program, sources say.

The 36-year-old Pitino, who has coached the Knicks for two seasons, will announce his decision Thursday at a news conference in Lexington, the Courier-Journal of Louisville and WCBS-TV in New York reported.

"He said he would meet with the Knicks tomorrow and if everything goes well, he expects to make the announcement on Thursday," WCBS sports reporter Rock Rote quoted Pitino as saying late Monday night.

The Courier-Journal, in today's editions, quoted two unidentified sources as saying Pitino was leaving the Knicks.

The newspaper said the Kentucky Athletics Board would have to approve the hiring before it could be announced. Kentucky sports information director Chris Cameron said Monday that no meeting of the board had been scheduled.

Pitino, after visiting the university last week, was offered the position held for four seasons by Eddie Sutton. The latter resigned in March in the midst of an NCAA investigation that resulted in three years' probation for the Kentucky program.

Kentucky finished 13-19 last season, its first losing re-

L.A. Sweeping Into Finals

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Maybe the Los Angeles Lakers' equipment manager should start stocking brooms.

The two-time defending NBA champions' sweep of the Phoenix Suns completed an undefeated entry into the league title series, a feat never before accomplished.

The Lakers handled, or manhandled, Portland and Seattle before defeating Phoenix in four straight games.

"Always in control," was how league MVP Magic Johnson described it.

The hasty ouster of Phoenix earned the Lakers a nine-day rest as the Detroit Pistons and Chicago Bulls battle for the NBA East title.

But thanks to Coach Pat Riley's grueling workouts, few of the Lakers will consider the break relaxing.

Riley, who needs just one more playoff win to tie longtime former Boston Celtics coach Red Auerbach on the all-time NBA postseason victory list with 99, said he will likely take the team to its Santa Barbara training center during the hiatus.

"We're going into hibernation and he'll work us twice a day," Johnson said.

Isiah Thomas applies defense to Chicago's Craig Hodges

Detroit Turns Tables With Win In Chicago

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — Isiah Thomas has this wild, whacky playoff series between the Detroit Pistons and Chicago Bulls all figured out.

"We have to put back-to-back wins together," Thomas said Monday after scoring 27 points to lead the Pistons to an 86-80 victory that tied the best-of-7 series at two games each.

"The team that wins back-to-back games will win this series," he said.

Thomas also had 10 rebounds and six assists, but said "I don't have to be the main focus" of the team. Yet, he totaled 14 points in the two losses and 60 in the two victories.

At present, the Pistons can put together successive victories by winning at Detroit on Wednesday night before the series reverts to Chicago on Friday night.

If a seventh game is needed, it will be played Sunday in Detroit.

Regardless when this series ends, the winner will face the Los Angeles Lakers in the finals beginning June 6. If Detroit wins, the finals will start in Detroit. If Chicago wins, the finals will start in Los Angeles.

The Pistons regained the home court advantage they had relinquished when the Bulls came up with a surprising victory in the opening game.

"We got what we came for," Thomas said. "We almost got two and we played good defense the other day, but we let that game get away from us."

The surprise in the series has been Chicago's ability to win two games after the Pistons, who had the best record in the NBA, had a 6-0 mark against the Bulls during the regular season.

The Pistons tied the series with defense, bench strength and holding down Michael Jordan, who has averaged 37 points in the playoffs. Limiting Jordan to 23 points is holding him down. Jordan scored 12 points in the first quarter and 11 the rest of the way.

"Detroit played an excellent game in the second half and we couldn't get any loose balls," Jordan said. "The ball didn't bounce our way."

Jordan, who took only 15 shots, said "the shots weren't falling, so I tried to spread it around to the other guys. But as a team, we couldn't hit when we needed them."

Thomas did. The Pistons never led until the final shot of the first half when Thomas held the ball and hit a 3-pointer as time ran out for a 42-39 Detroit lead.

Overton Third In Masters' Event

Greenville's Kristi Overton placed third overall and was the highest U.S. women's finisher against the best in the world in the Masters' Water Ski Tournament held this past weekend at Callaway Gardens in Georgia.

The top 15 women and the top 14 men in the world competed in tricks, slalom, and jumping in the two-day event.

The women's overall title went to Karen Neville of Australia while the men's overall champion was Carl Roberge of Orlando, Fla.

Overton, the youngest competitor at 19, finished third in tricks, sixth in slalom, and had a jump of 118 feet. She fell during one of her two trick passes in the qualifying round, but held onto the rope, recovered and completed her routine to qualify for the finals.

The event was filmed by ESPN and will be air on June 17 at 10 p.m.

Overton's next competition will be in the Second Coors Light Pro Tour event this weekend at Marineland in Vallejo, Calif. She won the women's slalom event at the first Pro Tour event at Orlando, Fla., in April.

Waltrip's Win Earns Points Lead

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip's Sunday victory in the Coca-Cola 600 at the Charlotte Motor Speedway also gave him the lead in the NASCAR Winston Cup points race.

The Franklin, Tenn. native now has 1,479 points and a slight lead over the rest of the field. Geoff Bodine of Chemung, N.Y., is 21 points back, at 1,458.

"It's a pretty good feeling being back on top of the Winston Cup standings," said Waltrip. "Our goal at the beginning of the year was to win some races, win the Winston Cup championship and win the Winston Million."

Waltrip is the only driver still eligible to win the Winston Million, a $1 million bonus to any driver who can win three of four designated races. Waltrip won the first, the season-opening Daytona 500, but the second, the Winston 500 at Talladega (Ala.) Superspeedway, was won by Davey Allison. The third was Sunday's run in North Carolina.

The fourth and final designated race is the Southern 500, set for Sunday, Sept. 3, at Darlington (S.C.) International Raceway.

Waltrip has won the spring race at Darlington four times but has never won the Southern 500.

"Winning there four times proves I can win at Darlington, so I don't think it's a bad omen or anything for my chances in that race," he said. "Even if it was, I had never won the Daytona 500 until this year either. Keep that in mind."

Dale Earnhardt of Kannapolis, N.C., is third in the Winston Cup standings with 1,430 points, while Alan Kulwicki of Greenfield, Wis., is fourth with 1,375 and Sterling Marlin of Columbia, Tenn., is fifth with 1,374. Rounding out the top 10 are Mark Martin, 1,368; Rusty Wallace, 1,313; Davey Allison, 1,291; Ken Schrader, 1,238; and Bill Elliott, 1,211.

Waltrip leads the circuit in money-winnings with $605,335, followed by Wallace ($568,530); Schrader ($488,085); Earnhardt ($409,210); Allison ($284,759); Terry Labonte ($284,300); Kulwicki ($280,985); Bodine ($266,900); Marlin ($249,217); and Elliott ($213,907).

The next race in the Winston Cup series is Sunday's Budweiser 500 at Dover Downs (Del.) International Speedway.

Carter Out Two Months After Surgery

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Mets catcher Gary Carter underwent arthroscopic surgery Monday on his right knee and will be sidelined up to two months, the team announced.

Dr. James Andrews removed eight loose pieces of cartilage during the 90-minute surgery on the knee, which had been operated on three times previously, Mets spokesman Rick Lawes said.

Carter underwent surgery on at South Highland Hospital in Birmingham, Ala., where Andrews performed a series of arthroscopic procedures in the area where the thigh bone and the kneecap meet, Lawes said.

"He's fine, resting comfortably," Lawes said. "They're going to keep him in Alabama for the usual post-operative procedures and concerns, and he'll be in New York on Wednesday."

The surgery leaves the Mets without either of their co-captains. First baseman Keith Hernandez is out for six weeks with a broken knee cap. Carter, 35, was hitting .114 with one homer and five RBIs before he went on the disabled list earlier this month.

While Mets manager Davey Johnson was receiving the bad news about Carter, he received good news about his own physical problems. Johnson, who was diagnosed as having two ruptured discs in his lower back, will not need immediate surgery, Lawes said.

Preliminary test results checked by Los Angeles Dodgers team physician Dr. Frank Jobe indicated Johnson's back can be treated with therapy.

KC's Wilson To Go On The DL

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — After further examination of Willie Wilson's right shoulder Monday, doctors said the Kansas City center fielder will probably go on the disabled list for a couple of weeks.

The 11-year veteran was diagnosed as having tendinitis of the right rotator cuff.

"Willie has agreed to take the conservative approach to repairing his problem, which was recommended by the doctor," general manager John Schuerholz said. "That is, to have the shoulder injected (with cortisone) and go through a series of exercises to strengthen the shoulder and take a couple of weeks under that program. We'll see if that resolves the problem."

Wilson, 33, refused to talk about the situation.

The 1982 American League batting champion left the game Friday after striking out twice. Wilson is hitting .192 with 11 RBIs and one home run.

He is in the final year of his contract, but the Royals have options through 1994.

Wilson will be replaced in center field by Jim Eisenreich, who had two triples, two doubles and a single in two games against Detroit over the weekend.

Robertson, Cummings Unhappy With Trade

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The first trade of the NBA off-season has left two all-stars, Terry Cummings and Alvin Robertson, less than ecstatic.

"I'm very disappointed," Cummings said of the trade Sunday that sent him to San Antonio in exchange for Robertson, second-year forward Greg Anderson and future considerations.

Cummings, 28, has spent the last five years in Milwaukee, leading the Bucks in scoring each season and becoming involved in the community and its charities as a Pentecostal minister.

"I wanted to finish my career here. This is the best group of people I ever played with and the best organization I ever played for," Cummings said. "But I'm going to a team that is young with a lot of youth. I will try to intermingle. It's a business."

Robertson, meanwhile, said he had hoped he would stay in San Antonio as coach Larry Brown rebuilds the Spurs. Robertson has been the team's leader since he came into the league five years ago.

"Milwaukee is always in the race, but the Spurs are a team on the rise and I wanted to be part of it," Robertson said.

"There are always positives and negatives with a change like this, but I was looking forward to San Antonio's future," he said.

Schmidt Bids Farewell To Baseball

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN DIEGO — Age and nagging injuries finally caught up with Mike Schmidt, one of the greatest home run hitters ever, who kept his vow to retire when he no longer could play up to his expectations.

"My skills to make the adjustments needed to hit, to make the routine play on defense and to run the bases aggressively have deteriorated," a tearful Schmidt said Monday in an emotional farewell to baseball.

"Realizing this, I have decided not to keep on playing, but to retire effective immediately."

The Philadelphia Phillies' third baseman announced his decision hours before his teammates lost 1-0 to the Padres at San Diego Jack Murphy Stadium.

Schmidt, 39, said his retirement is not related solely to major shoulder surgery he underwent last September, his arthritic knees or minor injuries that have plagued him the past few seasons.

"I'm not saying that I have any (physical) problems that other people don't get when they reach 39 or 40," Schmidt explained. "I always did have (nagging injuries) throughout my career. I think it just got to the stage where it got the best of me."

Speaking in hushed tones, Schmidt said his baseball career "has been blessed with many special memories" and resulted in cherished friendships.

"You may not be able to tell, but this is a joyous time for me. I've had a great career," Schmidt said.

"Over the years, I've set high standards for myself as a player and I always said that when I couldn't live up to those standards I would retire."

"I left Dayton, Ohio, 18 years ago with two bad knees and a dream of becoming a baseball player. I thank God it came true," said Schmidt, who then broke down in tears.

With many teammates and coaches present, Schmidt took several minutes to compose himself while Phillies president Bill Giles lauded the slugger's approach to the game.

"In my opinion you are the greatest third baseman of all time," Giles said. "I don't think Mike Schmidt ever cheated us one day in effort. Michael worked his tail off throughout his career."

Giles said Schmidt would throw out the ceremonial first ball Saturday night when the Phillies host Montreal, and that his uniform would be retired at a later date.

Schmidt, who hit 548 home runs and won 10 Gold Gloves as the National League's top third baseman, has struggled with a .203 average and six home runs in his 17th major-league season.

"I feel like I could ask the Phillies to keep me on to add to my statistics, but my love for the game won't let me do that," he said.

Schmidt really doesn't need to add to his career stats, anyway.

His home run total ranks seventh on the all-time list and his 10 Gold Gloves at third rank second to Brooks Robinson's 16 for the Baltimore Orioles.

Only Babe Ruth, Harmon Killebrew, Jimmie Foxx and Mickey Mantle reached 500 homers in fewer at-bats than Schmidt.

He had only two hits in his last 41 at-bats, however, and led the Phillies in errors with eight, including costly miscues in the club's last two games at San Francisco — both losses.

"This is something I've been mulling over and praying about for a week or so," Schmidt said. "I gave it some time to turn around on the field. I looked for signs and reasons every night to continue as a player but I just couldn't find them."

"When I didn't make some plays the last couple of weeks that I used to make with ease and made outs on some pitches I should have hit, I just lost confidence in my skills as a player."

plans either in or out of baseball.

He informed manager Nick Leyva of his decision Sunday on the team's flight to San Diego, then told his teammates when they arrived at their hotel.

"Last night, I challenged my teammates to move ahead with a new enthusiasm," Schmidt said. "It's up to them to bring new life to the Phillies' organization."

Schmidt, a sure Hall of Famer, missed the last two months of the 1988 season because of the shoulder surgery and signed a contract that guaranteed him only $500,000 for this season. He doubted that by remaining on the roster through May 15, and was to receive another $500,000 if he was on the roster Aug. 15. There also were incentive clauses for games started. Schmidt hinted after he reached the first bonus level that he might quit.

The Phillies insisted on clauses in his contract this season to be sure that Schmidt, who earned $2.25 million last season, was physically capable of playing even close to the standards he had set.

He became a free agent after last season and talked with the Cincinnati Reds and Los Angeles Dodgers before signing a contract with Philadelphia.

This season, Schmidt has been bothered by an elbow problem he said resulted from working in the garden at home. He also has rested with a back ailment.

"I hate to see him retire because he still has a lot of baseball left in him," said Cincinnati manager Pete Rose, a former teammate. "I know he's not off to the start he wants. I think he would have been better off coming over here this season (to the Reds). I think he needs to be on a good team. I think he needs to be on a team that could win."

Schmidt, arguably the best third baseman in baseball history, was the National League Most Valuable Player three times and won the World Series MVP in 1980 when the Phillies beat Kansas City.

Schmidt ended his career with 2,234 hits and 1,595 RBIs. Nine times in his career, he drove in 100 or more runs. His best season came in 1981, when he hit .286 with 48 homers and 121 RBIs.

He was a member of the NL All-Star team 12 times and named to the AP All-Star team eight times.

Schmidt set a record by leading the NL in home runs eight times and he hit 30 or more home runs 13 times in his career to tie Ruth, trailing only Hank Aaron's 15 seasons.

On seven occasions, Schmidt led the majors in home runs to trail only Ruth's record nine seasons.

Schmidt was the Phillies' second-round selection in the June 1971 draft.

Yankees Give John An Ultimatum

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Fifteen years after he was told it was over, Tommy John's career may finally be over.

The New York Yankees told the left-handed pitcher on Monday that he had 24 hours to decide between retirement or receiving his unconditional release. He says he won't quit.

"I'm not retiring," he told The New York Times late Monday in a telephone interview from his New Jersey home. "If I retire, it will be later on. I'll keep working out and throwing."

"It's a tough call when you have the class of a Tommy John," said Yankees manager Dallas Green, who'd been thinking about cutting

Tommy John

John for several weeks. "I think that he desperately wants 300 wins and it's our opinion it'll be difficult to get."

John, who turned 46 last Monday is 288-231 in his 26-year career. He's 2-7 this year with a 5.80 earned run average and opposing batters are hitting .336 against him.

"He knows down deep that he hasn't pitched well," Green said. "It's been frustrating for us, too, because of the goal he wants to get."

John, the oldest player in the majors, began his career in 1963 with Cleveland, was traded to the Chicago White Sox in 1965 and to Los Angeles in 1971. He was 13-3 in 1974 before rupturing a ligament in his pitching elbow.

Dr. Frank Jobe, in a first-of-its-kind operation for an athlete, removed a tendon from John's right forearm to reconstruct his left elbow. Jobe told John after the operation that his career was finished, but John went 10-10 in 1976 and was named "Comeback Player of the Year" by The Sporting News.

He won 20 games in for the first time in 1977, signed with the Yankees as a free agent after the 1978 season and won 20 games in 1979 and 1980.

"I care about people ... This guy gave his heart and soul to baseball, and I think that's important," Green said. "TJ will probably be able to pitch until he's 60. Whether he can get people out is another question."

At Green's behest, New York released John after last season.

Alexander Leads Chisox Past Tigers, 4-2

The Associated Press

Toronto's Kelly Gruber confirms with umpire that he is safe

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

With 46-year-old Tommy John facing retirement, and 42-year-old Nolan Ryan allowing three Baltimore home runs, it was up to 38-year-old Doyle Alexander to retain the honor of baseball's senior pitchers.

Alexander shut down the Chicago White Sox on three hits in seven innings, leading the Detroit Tigers to a 4-2 victory Monday night and snapping a personal four-game losing streak. The right-hander has allowed just one earned run in his last 22 innings.

"Up to this point, I've probably pitched as well as I ever have before," said Alexander, who lowered his earned run average to 2.88. "I've had one bad start, and other than that, I've pitched pretty doggone well."

Alexander, 4-4, had retired the last 10 batters he faced, but told Manager Dick Tracewski to take him out after the seventh inning.

"It was my decision to come out," Alexander said. "And, no matter what would have happened, I would have stayed by it."

Chicago manager Jeff Torborg paid tribute to Alexander, praising his ability to mix pitches.

Yankees 6, Mariners 3

While New York was informing John that he had 24 hours to decide between retirement and release, Richard Dotson helped his own struggling career by beating Seattle for the first time in five years.

Dotson, 2-2, allowed nine hits and three runs in 6 2-3 innings, his second-longest outing this season. He had lost his previous two starts, allowing a total of 10 runs and 17 hits in 10 innings.

Indians 5, Blue Jays 3

Jerry Browne had three hits and two RBIs, and Joe Carter also drove in two runs to lead Cleveland.

Tom Candiotti, 6-2, allowed three runs, two of them earned, on six hits in seven innings to give Cleveland its second straight victory since ending a five-game losing streak. Doug Jones pitched two scoreless innings for his 10th save in 12 opportunities.

Angels 12, Brewers 3

Claudell Washington's two-run single capped a five-run third inning and Lance Parrish went 4-for-4 to lead California's season-high 18-hit attack.

Wally Joyner and Johnny Ray had three hits apiece and Dick Schofield drove in three runs as the Angels moved percentage points ahead of Oakland in the AL West.

Orioles 6, Rangers 1

Ryan struck out 10 batters in six innings, but gave up solo homers to Mickey Tettleton, Larry Sheets and Cal Ripken.

Brian Holton, 2-4, allowed no runs on five hits in 5 2-3 innings for his first win in six major-league starts. Holton has made 120 relief appearances. Mark Huisman, Kevin Hickey and Gregg Olson finished up.

Red Sox 3, Athletics 2

Marty Barrett celebrated the signing of a new contract by singling home the game-winning run in the bottom of the 10th inning as Boston beat Oakland.

Barrett, who before the game signed an extension through the 1991 season, singled with one out to score pinch-runner Randy Kutcher from second.

Barrett, who before the game signed an extension through the 1991 season, singled with one out to score pinch-runner Randy Kutcher from second.

After fouling off several pitches, Barrett singled to right against Oakland starter Bob Welch, 6-4, and Kutcher just beat Stan Javier's throw to the plate.

Reliever Lee Smith, 3-1, retired the side in the top of the 10th.

Royals 7, Twins 1

Bo Jackson doubled and tripled as Kansas City battered Minnesota's Frank Viola for seven runs in five innings.

The Royals jumped on Viola, 3-7, for four runs in the third and three in the fifth. Viola, last year's Cy Young Award winner, allowed 12 hits in five innings and now has an ERA of 4.63. He had won three of his previous four starts.

Jim Eisenreich added a pair of doubles for the Royals and now has six extra-base hits in his last three games.

Bret Saberhagen, 5-4, gave up five hits, struck out three and walked none in five innings.

Hurst, Davis Shut Down Phillies

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

In the span of a few hours, the Philadelphia Phillies lost a legend and a ballgame.

Third baseman Mike Schmidt announced his retirement in an emotional farewell Monday and told his teammates to start a new era in Phillies baseball.

But Bruce Hurst and Mark Davis combined on a four-hitter as San Diego beat the Phillies 1-0, putting the new era on hold.

"I challenged my teammates to move ahead with a new enthusiasm," Schmidt said. "It's up to them to bring new life to the Phillies' organization."

But Hurst took the life out of the Phillies.

The Padres' left-hander allowed four hits and struck out six in 8 2-3 innings to improve to 5-3 while sending the Phillies to their sixth straight loss.

Ricky Jordan singled and Von Hayes walked with two outs in the ninth and Davis came on to retire Chris James on a grounder for his 16th save in as many opportunities.

James was named as Schmidt's replacement at third base.

"I told James before the game that you're no Mike Schmidt. Nobody is going to replace Mike Schmidt," Phillies manager Nick Leyva said.

Tony Gwynn's RBI single in the first scored Roberto Alomar with the game's only run.

"If somebody would've told me that that run would've stood up, I would've told them they were crazy," Gwynn said.

Schmidt finished his career with 548 homers, seventh on the all-time list. But after a good start this season, he struggled and ended at .203 with six homers.

"I respect him for the timing of his decision, and the decision itself, because it takes a lot of courage to come to the realization that you're not the player you once were and step away," Phillies second baseman Tom Herr said.

Expos 3, Dodgers 2

Andres Galarraga's run-scoring single snapped a ninth-inning tie to lift Montreal past Los Angeles at Dodger Stadium.

Wallace Johnson led off the ninth with a pinch single and Rex Hudler, running for Johnson, was sacrificed to second. After a walk to Tom Foley, Alejandro Pena relieved Tim Leary, 5-4. Galarraga then lined a shot off first baseman Eddie Murray's glove for the game-winning hit.

Giants 3, Mets 2

Brett Butler drove in two runs with sacrifice flies and scored another on Will Clark's double as San Francisco beat New York at Candlestick Park for its fourth straight victory and ninth in its last 12 games.

The Mets, who have lost three straight, fell to 2-5 on their West Coast trip with two games remaining against the Giants. It's the Mets' first losing road trip to California since Davey Johnson took over as manager in 1984.

Astros 3, Cardinals 2

Bob Knepper allowed two runs in 7 1-3 innings and Craig Biggio had a two-run double as Houston beat St. Louis for its fourth straight victory. It was also the Astros' eighth straight road victory, equaling the club record set in 1971. Houston is 15-7 on the road.

St. Louis rookie Ken Hill, 2-4, didn't allow a hit until Terry Puhl's ground single to center with one out in the seventh. Second baseman Jose Oquendo fielded the ball in short center field but Puhl beat the throw to first base by a wide margin.

Braves 2, Cubs 1

Rookie Derek Lilliquist allowed one run and seven hits in seven innings as Atlanta beat visiting Chicago.

Lilliquist, 3-3, struck out three and walked none. Paul Assenmacher pitched one inning and Joe Boever got the last three outs for his seventh save.

said. "He's got a tendency to make things happen for them. Number two, we can't give them four or five outs per inning. As strong as they are, we can't afford any errors. And number three, when we get runners into scoring position, we need to get them in. The last time we played them it seemed like we were always a hit away when we got runners into scoring position."

Vincent feels the Rampants must go at Hunt strong the entire game. "We've got to be aggressive the entire game and put the pressure on Hunt," Vincent said. "This time of year, whoever you play is capable of beating you."

The Warriors will send Chris Davis to the mound in the contest, while Vincent said he wouldn't be sure until right before game time who will pitch for Rose.

The winner of tonight's game will advance to the East Region finals Friday on the road against the winner of the Richmond County-Cary game being played tonight at Cary.

Lakers Sweeping ...

"You know Riley's already rubbing his hands devising tortures for us," reserve center Mychal Thompson said. "I tell you, it's like a punishment for us winning in four."

Riley, usually diplomatic when asked about prospective playoff opponents, said he'd rather not have a rematch of last season's final with Detroit.

"I would say I'd only prefer Chicago because it gives us the home-court advantage," Riley said. "It's not as if we feel we can beat them easier. Both teams are tough."

The Lakers are injury-free and will go into the finals happy to know that reserve dunk-artist Orlando Woolridge has begun to mesh with his teammates on both ends of the floor.

Woolridge came off the bench to help Los Angeles eliminate Phoenix with 14 points, seven rebounds and five of the Lakers 10 blocked shots.

Considered primarily a scoring threat, Woolridge said he was glad to broaden his repertoire when it counted most.

"It was nice to be able to get some rebounds, block some shots — do some dirty work," he said.

After the win, Riley jokingly dedicated the Western Conference series to Denver Nuggets coach Doug Moe.

"The last time they were in L.A., Doug guaranteed there was no way we would get back to the NBA finals," Riley said. "When Doug said that, our guys sort of took it as a challenge. Well, tell Doug to enjoy the dog track because we're going to the finals."

Guard Byron Scott said skepticism like Moe's that the Lakers could become only the third team to ever win three consecutive league titles fueled the veteran players' competitive spirits.

"Nobody expected us to make it this far," Scott said. "But we never thought that."

But Scott said the Lakers' clean sweep of the Western Conference surprised even the victors.

"Yeah, we never thought we'd sweep Phoenix," he said. "We didn't think we'd sweep Seattle either. It just happens."

Pitino To Kentucky? ...

cord in 62 years. The NCAA penalties announced earlier this month include a ban on postseason tournament play for two years and a ban on live television for next season.

The AP could not reach Pitino for comment. Rote, who hosts Pitino's weekly show on WCBS, and Knicks spokesman John Cirillo declined to give out the coach's unlisted home telephone number.

Cirillo, who said he had "no announcement to make," added Monday night that he didn't know if Pitino had made a decision.

"I know he was thinking about it over the weekend, but we have no indication either way."

At Kentucky, Athletic Director C.M. Newton and university President David Roselle would not comment.

Pitino, who led Providence University into the NCAA Final Four in his last season before joining the Knicks for the 1987-88 season, has expressed the desire to get back to the college level.

"I'm a college coach living on borrowed time," he said last week.

It could not be determined what Pitino's contract length or compensation would be at Kentucky, the Courier-Journal reported. Various reports have placed it from five to seven years at $600,000 to $1 million a season.

The Knicks said Friday that they would ask Kentucky to reimburse them for the cost of hiring a new coach if Pitino, still under contract for two more seasons, leaves. Newton said he wouldn't pay, but Pitino said he would if necessary.

Pitino guided the Knicks to a 52-30 record this season, their best since 1972-73. New York, which was eliminated from the playoffs in the second round by the Chicago Bulls, won the NBA's Atlantic Division title, its first since 1971.

Pitino, who coached two seasons at Providence, led Boston University from 1978 to 1983. He had just one losing season in college — 13-14 at BU in 1980-81. Pitino, whose Knicks were 38-44 in 1987-88, also served as an assistant with the team in addition to similar stints at the University of Hawaii and Syracuse.

Pistons Top Bulls ...

The Bulls put on a spurt to take a 55-50 lead in the third quarter before James Edwards came in to score six of eight points to give the Pistons a 62-58 edge. Thomas made it 64-60 after three quarters and Detroit stayed comfortably in front the rest of the way.

The Pistons' bench not only outscored the Bulls' bench 36-2, but the reserves also came up with 31 rebounds, 18 by Dennis Rodman.

"We did our job today," said Rodman, who helped guard Jordan. "I tried to keep Jordan in front of me and make him work hard. Jordan can light up the sky."

Coach Chuck Daly said "I'm grateful we're alive. We played outstanding defense in every respect."

Detroit's starting front line of Mark Aguirre, Rick Mahorn and Bill Laimbeer totaled only eight points and 12 rebounds, but Daly said "I'm never concerned (about scoring) when we get a 'W.' We used Rodman and (John) Salley more."

Chicago coach Doug Collins said the Pistons "did a great job defensively. They went to a lineup with Rodman, Salley and Edwards and that really hurt us. They kept coming at us with fresh people."

Collins was not surprised at the 36-2 difference off the bench.

"The difference in the depth of the two teams is no mystery," Collins said. "But getting two points from our bench is no plus for us."

Ford and Connery team up as father and son in 'Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade'

Ford Says Connery Adds Right Touch To New New Jones Film

By Bob Thomas
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — In the first Indiana Jones caper, Harrison Ford fell into a pit wriggling with thousands of snakes, real snakes. This time out, he crawls through a cavern alive with thousands of rats, real rats.

Is that any way to treat the actor whose films have earned more than any star in history?

"That kind of stuff doesn't bother me at all," says Ford reassuringly. "The rats didn't bother me, the snakes didn't bother me. It's people I'm scared of."

It's probably half-true. Ford may seem fearless as Han Solo and Indiana Jones, but he appears reluctant about dealing with the human animal. He is rarely seen in the familiar movie habitats, preferring to vanish between films into the vastness of his 800-acre Rocky Mountain retreat. But with Paramount Pictures' $35 million "Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade" facing the highly competitive summer market, he agreed to come to Los Angeles for interviews.

"It's a dirty job, but it's got to be done," he cracked, again with a grain of truth. It may have been coincidental that he was dressed entirely in black.

Ford, 46, might be called The Quiet Star. His laid-back demeanor; seems out of sync with his achievements. Consider this: He starred in five of the eight all-time box-office champions — the "Star Wars" trilogy and the first two Indiana Jones adventures. It's a safe bet that "The Last Crusade" will join their number.

What raises the third Indiana saga above the previous two is the inspired casting of Sean Connery as Dr. Henry Jones the elder.

Ford said he had been displeased by the direction it took, by the deepening of the character. I was pleased by the relationship that was drawn between Indiana and his father, which makes this film very special.

"I was very happy (with the casting of Connery), although I was worried that he might be too young: He's only 12 years older than I am. Working with Sean was the pleasure that it looks to be. He is a consummate performer and a very skilled actor. A nice man."

"The Last Crusade" was filmed in Spain, England, Italy and Jordan, but Ford admitted he could enjoy little scenery.

"That's a bit of a shame," he said. "You either go to these wonderful places and work so hard that you don't get a chance to see them at all. Or, you so affect the place by your presence that it's not the place you want to look at anyway. Still, it's interesting. It's fun to go to new places."

Fortunately, the rigors of ranch life keep Ford in condition for such movies as the Indiana Joneses.

"Physically, they're very hard pictures to do," he admitted. "They're hard mentally, too. Big pictures are tough to do. Let's hope they're worth it."

"(Maintaining concentration) is my strong suit, I suppose. I just knuckle down and get on at the beginning and get off at the end. I just devote myself to the task at hand."

Many of the "Last Crusade" stunts, including hanging from a cannon as a tank scrapes the side of a canyon, are obviously performed by Harrison himself. Is that wise?

"Things are calculated so there's little risk of real injury," he said. "Bumps and bruises go with the territory."

"I think we get some very important moments when I do it myself. I think we have great moments of humor and characterization that occur in the midst of physical action. That characterizes these films. In an action-adventure film you lose sight of your protagonist when you see the back of the head of a stunt person. If I can do (stunts) I'm happy to do them myself."

Only once has he been seriously hurt. On "Temple of Doom" he hurt his back and filming was shut down six weeks while he healed.

Harrison Ford was born in Chicago and grew up in the suburbs with no hint of his future as an actor. At Ripon College he majored in philosophy, appearing in plays to help relieve his basic shyness. He moved to Los Angeles to try an acting career, working as a carpenter during lean periods.

Ford came along at the end of the studio stock-contract system, but neither Columbia Pictures nor Universal gave him much to do. He was languishing in episodic television when George Lucas added him to the cast of "American Graffiti." Then Lucas cast him as the high-flying Solo in "Star Wars."

For a time it appeared that Ford was stuck in larger-than-life hero roles. Then in 1986 he drew an Academy nomination as best actor in a modern drama, "Witness." Last year's "Working Girl" proved he could do comedy as well.

When not working, Ford holes up in Wyoming with his wife, Melissa Mathison, who wrote "E.T. the Extra-Terrestrial," their son Malcolm, and Harrison's grown sons from his first marriage, Benjamin and Willard.

What kind of life does he lead back at the ranch?

"It's pretty ordinary. I do things that most people do: go to the grocery store, pick up the mail, plow the snow, fix the fence, do some woodwork in my shop. I walk. It's a pretty unspectacular life."

Eddie Peck Will Resume Role On 'Dallas' Next Fall

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — It's not unusual for an actor to appear regularly on two television shows, but J. Eddie Peck had pivotal roles on two competing prime-time soap operas, CBS' "Dallas" and ABC's "Dynasty."

On "Dallas," he plays George Kennedy's bad-boy son, Tommy McKay, and on the just-canceled "Dynasty" he was Roger Grimes, the mysterious dream-lover of Emma Samms and a nightmare from Joan Collins' past.

Peck has been notified by Lorimar Productions that he'll be back next season on "Dallas." ABC is dropping "Dynasty" after nine seasons.

Peck auditioned for "Dynasty" last year, but because of the writers strike he went to Las Cruces, N.M., to work in a movie called "The Bite." He calls it a cross between "Alien" and "The Fly."

"I'd written off 'Dynasty,' but when I got back they called me in," said Peck. "They still hadn't written the role, but he was to be Joan Collins' ex-lover who was murdered 25 years ago. I played him as he was 25 years ago. I would come to Emma Samms in her dreams as her lover."

"Then I had a chance to audition for 'Dallas.' I only had a week-to-week contract with 'Dynasty' and they wouldn't tell me what was going to happen. After I got hired by 'Dallas' I was called back to 'Dynasty.' The people at 'Dallas' didn't want to let me go and I did eight shows. It was on my resume that I was on 'Dynasty' but they apparently missed it. The two shows don't want to share actors."

Peck was supposed to do only four shows for "Dynasty," but ended up doing seven.

Peck said he particularly likes his character on "Dallas" because of his many facets.

"He's a wild, wild man," he said. "He has a lot of pain, a lot of anguish. He has a bitter relationship with his father. You see a sympathetic level beneath the dark side. I really took the character out on a limb. There's a rage and frustration they didn't originally intend. But once I tried it they liked it and started writing it that way."

In the beginning, Peck didn't want to be an actor, but says eventually, "I fell in love with it."

His first roles were in the daytime soaps "The Young and the Restless" and "Days of Our Lives." Later he had a recurring role in an NBC show, "Double Trouble."

Four years ago he was cast in an ABC Western series called "Wildside." It ran for only six episodes in 1985, up against NBC's "The Cosby Show" and CBS' "Magnum P.I."

"It was a Disney show and Disney treated us first class," he said. "They spoiled us. I didn't know everybody else doesn't get this kind of treatment. It was a turning point in a lot of ways."

Peck, who was born in Virginia and grew up in Missouri, is married to Sonya Zaza Peck, a high-fashion runway model.

Networks, Retailers Join Forces

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — NBC and CBS are going shopping for viewers this fall at two of the nation's biggest retail outlets.

NBC is hooking up with Sears, Roebuck & Co., and CBS with K mart Corp., in ambitious promotions to tout the new television season that starts in September.

The efforts will combine games, store displays, TV and newspaper ads and direct mail in an effort to halt the erosion of network audiences to cable, independent TV outlets and video tapes.

Network executives hope that the promotions will encourage people to tune in to the shows at least once, and possibly become regular viewers.

Advertising agency executives and network affiliates said it is about time that the networks tried something new.

The three major networks — NBC, CBS and ABC — claimed only 67 percent of the audience in prime time during the just-completed 1988-89 TV season, down from 70 percent in the 1987-88 season and 92 percent a decade ago.

Joseph Ostrow, worldwide media director at ad agency Foote, Cone & Belding Communications in New York, said the networks have been slow to use a variety of marketing techniques to boost viewership. Traditionally, they have relied simply on running promotional spots on their own network or placing ads in newspaper TV listings.

"They haven't gone to the full extent that a marketer would go in selling a product," Ostrow said.

Allen Banks, media director at Saatchi & Saatchi Advertising Inc., said mass marketers like Sears and K mart are logical matches for TV networks.

"A large percentage of the population shops in either or both of those stores," he said. "It's a nice marriage between a mass medium and a mass marketer."

Both the NBC and CBS promotions include contests designed to make people aware of the new network shows. Participants can win prizes ranging from cars, video equipment and vacations to an appearance on an NBC program.

 When an expert comes up against a player he does not know, he is ripe for the plucking. His ego won't allow him to acknowledge that a seemingly average player is trying to pull a fast one. Consider this case from the Epton Worldwide Pairs event, which won the "Best Hand" award for Joan Burgess of Nottingham, England.

South was one of the finest women players in Europe. Despite her diamond holding, she elected to balance in a three-card suit—the auction had made it clear she would find at least four-card support in her partner's hand.

While the contract might have left a good deal to be desired, as the cards lay 10 tricks could be made thanks to the 3-3 heart break and lucky trump layout. But look what happened.

Declarer won the opening diamond lead in hand, discarding a club from dummy, and elected to go after hearts immediately. A heart to the queen won and on the low heart return, East's ten was enough to win the trick. Had that happened, declarer would have been able to ruff the diamond return in dummy, ruff a heart low (West would have been marked with the ace), and declarer would have lost only one trump, one heart and a club.

But Burgess, sitting West, deceptively overtook her partner's trick with the ace and returned a diamond for dummy to ruff. Declarer continued by ruffing a low heart with the ten of trumps, expecting to be overruffed. She was resigned to losing two trump tricks, and hoped for a winning club finesse. But West produced a heart, and the defenders were now assured of at least two trump tricks and a club for a one-trick set. In practice, declarer was so rattled by this turn of events that she lost control and went down several tricks.

Chinese Students Unveil 'Goddess Of Democracy'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BELJING — About 1,000 students and workers rallied outside police headquarters today to protest the reported arrests of leaders of a new independent labor union aligned with the student pro-democracy movement.

A Chinese source said an important Communist Party Central Committee meeting scheduled this week was postponed because conservatives did not have enough backing for their purge of moderate leaders.

Those believed to be targets of the conservatives include the reform-minded Communist Party leader, Zhao Ziyang, who reportedly was stripped of power last week by Premier Li Peng.

Students occupying central Tiananmen Square continued to snub Li and his supporters, unveiling to the cheers of tens of thousands a 33-foot replica of the Statue of Liberty.

The "Goddess of Democracy" immediately drew an angry response from Beijing authorities, who said the students' action was illegal. They ordered the statue removed immediately.

"This is China, not the United States," the nationwide television news quoted one unidentified person as saying. "Even in the United States, putting up a statue in front of the Congress building as one pleases is not permitted."

Conservatives who adopted a hard-line stance toward the pro-democracy protests have started arresting non-student participants.

Three union officials and 11 leaders of a motorcycle gang, which roared through the city in support of the students, were reported arrested.

Zhao Pinglu, head of the Beijing Independent Workers' Union, said one of its leaders, Shen Yinhan, a 27-year-old official with the national airlines, was grabbed by police Monday in front of the Beijing Hotel.

Two other union leaders, both employees of the Ministry of Railways, also were arrested, Zhao said.

Li Zhihuang, wife of railway employee Qian Yiming, said her husband's work unit claimed he was arrested by police "to find out about the situation at Tiananmen Square," where students are continuing an 18-day sit-in for a freer society and an end to official corruption.

A third man, Bai Dongping, 26, was supposed to take his wife to the hospital on Monday but did not show up, said his father, Bai Baofa.

"He would never just disappear," his father said. "The government's actions are vicious."

About 1,000 students and workers protested outside police headquarters near the square. One banner read, "Do not secretly arrest people. Let the people know."

Outside police headquarters, a man who identified himself as chief of Beijing Public Security told a U.S. television crew there that no students had been arrested. He refused comment on whether workers were detained.

The official told the journalists they had violated martial law, imposed May 20 in a bid to quash the student-led movement. He said the television crew should not talk with any Chinese in the central Beijing area under the decree, which has been widely ignored.

A police broadcast to the crowd said, "You do not understand the real situation. Beijing is in complete chaos."

When an officer told the crowd to disperse, they replied with calls of "bandit" and "rascal" and "how many people have you arrested?" Police with two video cameras filmed demonstrators, who said they would not leave.

The independent trade union, which claims 3,000 members, was formed May 19 in defiance of a government ban on all but the official trade union federation.

The party hardliners who appear to have won a power struggle occasioned by the student protests have taken the line that the students are well-intentioned but that non-students who are misleading them will be punished.

Already, workers who have joined demonstrations or supported the movement are being fined or having their pay docked. Others are being threatened with losing their jobs.

Several hundred student protesters from outside Beijing said they would return home today to spread the movement's gospel.

Koreans Injure 10 Americans

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEOUL, South Korea — Ten U.S. Air Force personnel were hurt and 22 military vehicles damaged when villagers armed with clubs and rocks attacked a bombing range to demand the facility be closed, officials said today.

Up to 100 villagers stormed the Kooni range south of Seoul late Monday to demand an end to aircraft bombing practice at the range, said Sgt. Will Baker, an Air Force spokesman in Seoul.

Military guards struggled with attackers who scaled fences and attacked them with clubs and rocks, he said.

The 10 injured Air Force men were cut or bruised by rocks and flying glass and a Korean civilian worker was beaten by the attackers, Air Force officials said. Most of the injuries were minor and one airman was briefly hospitalized for injuries, they said.

The Air Force staff was ordered to retreat to a dormitory after one of the attackers pulled a knife, Baker said. The attackers then hurled rocks through windows at the Air Force personnel, he said.

Villagers say the range plays havoc with their lives, preventing them from working in fields during bombing practice, and they have been demanding the facility be closed. The villagers have attacked the range several times in recent months, but Monday's incident appeared to be the most serious.

They damaged and overturned trucks and other vehicles and ransacked and looted buildings in the range's administration block, said Baker.

A team of 24 U.S. Air Force security police was airlifted to the range by helicopter from Osan Air Force Base to protect the range personnel, officials said. But the security police did not clash with the villagers, they said.

"At no time did the security police engage the intruders," said Master Sgt. Daniel Smith of the Osan base.

South Korean riot police reached the range about two hours after the attack began and about 450 troopers drove the villagers out after about an hour, police officials said. Twenty villagers were arrested, they said.

South Korean press reports estimated the attackers caused about $250,000 in damages. Air Force officials said damage was extensive, but they had no figures.

The attack came after villagers were stopped for safety reasons from working in fields in the outer area of the range during a bombing practice Monday, officials said. Farmers are allowed to use spare government land on the range.

The attack did not appear to be related to calls by some anti-government groups for the expulsion of U.S. forces from South Korea. Dissidents have staged a series of protests to denounce the United States for supporting the government of President Roh Tae-woo.

About 43,000 U.S. troops are based in South Korea under a mutual defense treaty against communist North Korea. The U.S. 7th Air Force is based at Osan.

Argentina Declares State Of Siege After Looting

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — Police today guarded grocery stores in the country's four largest cities after looting by people driven desperate by economic crisis prompted President Raul Alfonsin to declare a state of siege.

Many groups of looters have been led by women and children, some of whom have been eating in the supermarkets before fleeing with food.

At least three people were killed Monday during looting and riots in the northern city of Rosario, the government news agency Telam said.

Police said about 600 people were arrested and 41 — including five policemen — were injured by rubber bullets, tear gas, stones and fists.

Another 300 were arrested in working class suburbs of Buenos Aires.

Alfonsin declared the 30-day state of siege, which suspends civil liberties, in an attempt to end a week of looting by people sent reeling by soaring inflation, rising unemployment, a devalued currency and shrunken wages. In the western city of Mendoza, where a supermarket was firebombed on Friday, several others were looted Monday. In Cordoba, a central city where 200 looters were arrested last week, there was a "hunger march." Cordoba is Argentina's second-largest city, Mendoza its fourth-largest.

The economic crisis has been blamed for the defeat of the governing Radical Civic Union by the Peronists in May 14 elections.

The Alfonsin government, which replaced a military dictatorship, "had no alternative than this measure to preserve order and guarantee the property and liberty of citizens," said Interior Minister

Juan Carlos Pugliese.

Pugliese blamed the unrest on "ultra-leftists ... who want to cause anarchy." He cited the coordination of assaults, the jamming of police radio signals and pamphlets that urged Alfonsin to resign and workers to strike.

Leftist leaders denounced the state of siege and blamed the disturbances on the failure of Alfonsin's economic policy.

"The way to calm people down is to grant an immediate salary hike of 100 percent, index wages weekly, freeze prices and tell businesses and stores — on pain of confiscation — to deliver immediately food and medicine at the frozen prices," said deputy Luis Zamora of the Movement Toward Socialism.

In Rosario, a city of 955,000 people and the country's third-largest, shopkeeper Pablo Davola said he doubted the looting was politically motivated.

"I had a shotgun and had prepared a system to electrify the doors," the independent news agency Noticias Argentinas quoted him as saying. But when looters came in, "there were many people I knew, people from the neighborhood."

Terrorist Tells Of Scheme To Kill Lebanese Leader

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NICOSIA, Cyprus — A suspected Lebanese terrorist disclosed in court today that he and five others planned to shoot down a helicopter carrying the Lebanese Christian leader, Gen. Michel Aoun.

The six were arrested in the south coast tourist resort of Larnaca on Friday and Sunday. They were ordered held on charges of arms possession and conspiracy to commit murder.

The reputed plot was revealed after two Cypriot scuba divers on Sunday came across two Soviet-made SA-7 missiles and their launchers wrapped in watertight packages in shallow water off the beach at Larnaca.

"Three of the suspects admitted in voluntary statements that with the means at their disposal, they planned to assassinate an Arab personality," police investigator Nicos Kazafaniotis told the court.

Kazafaniotis did not mention any names, but one of the six, Idris Jamal Jaber, turned toward the packed journalists' gallery and spelled out the name "Aoun" with his lips. He did not say it aloud.

Aoun had been scheduled to pass through Larnaca's airport last week to attend an Arab League summit in Casablanca, Morocco, where Arab leaders were discussing Lebanon's 14-year war between Christians and Moslems.

But Aoun, Lebanon's army commander and head of a Christian Cabinet vying for power with a Moslem Cabinet, did not attend the summit.

Aoun's mostly Christian army units operate a daily helicopter shuttle service between Larnaca and the Christian enclave northeast of Beirut.

Police sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the other suspects also admitted they intended to shoot down Aoun's helicopter as it was landing.

Kazafaniotis said the launchers were found 300 yards from the end of the main airport runway, 150 yards from the beach. The Lebanese army helicopters land on an apron at the end of the airport runway.

Kazafaniotis said police investigating the discovery picked up two members of the group in Larnaca. They arrested the other four in another apartment where a cache of arms was stashed.

The police sources said the six men arrested all were Moslems but that it was not certain their names or travel documents were genuine.

Last year, Omar Ahmed Hawilo, a 28-year-old Lebanese, was jailed for 15 years for attempting to blow up the Israeli Embassy in Nicosia, the Cypriot capital.

Kazannik, right, receives handshake from Yeltsin

Yeltsin Given Seat On Supreme Soviet

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

MOSCOW — Kremlin rebel Boris Yeltsin was appointed to the Soviet Union's standing legislature Monday after a fellow reformist defused a potential political crisis by stepping down in his favor.

Yeltsin's nomination followed two days of demonstrations in Moscow by voters angered by his exclusion from the 542-seat Supreme Soviet. The former chief of the capital's Communist Party won more than 6 million votes in elections last March for the new Congress of People's Deputies.

"This shows that the congress is becoming more democratic," said Yeltsin, who was effectively blackballed by 964 conservative deputies during balloting for the Supreme Soviet Saturday. "Dissatisfaction with the election of the Supreme Soviet was mounting and by tomorrow the results might have been unpredictable."

Although the 2,250-member Congress of People's Deputies is theoretically vested with highest state authority, it is expected to delegate most of its legislative authority to the Supreme Soviet. Unlike the congress, which meets no more than two times a year, the standing legislature is to remain in session for about eight months a year.

The dramatic change in Yeltsin's political fortunes reflects the confusion that has permeated the Soviet Union's first experiment in democratic practice in seven decades. Unable to draw on either precedent or a parliamentary rulebook for guidance, the deputies have created their own rules as they go along.

Apparently concerned by the negative public reaction to the exclusion of reformist deputies, President Mikhail Gorbachev helped to shepherd Yeltsin's nomination to the Supreme Soviet through the congress Monday afternoon. He welcomed an offer by a university lecturer from the Siberian city of Omsk, Aleksei Kazannik, to step down in favor of the former Politburo maverick.

In supporting Yeltsin's election, Gorbachev appears to be calculating that his former Politburo colleague is more easily manageable inside the political system than outside. Much of Yeltsin's public appeal has rested on his popular image as an outsider challenging the system and standing up for the common man.

Speaking Monday of his relationship with Gorbachev, Yeltsin said, "I think we have had a rapprochement. ... I think there is a warming."

At Gorbachev's urging, the congress ruled that the seat vacated by Kazannik should automatically be filled by the runner-up in last Saturday's election. Yeltsin finished last on a list of 12 candidates for 11 seats reserved for the Russian federation in the Chamber of Nationalities, one of two chambers in the legislature.

Yeltsin, 58, gave up his post as deputy minister for construction, and a government limousine, on the first day of the congress. He was mobbed by supporters after leaving the Kremlin. Prevented from catching a bus home because of the crowds, he started walking through central Moscow to chants of "Yeltsin, Yeltsin" and "Hurrah."

Yeltsin was dismissed from the ruling Politburo in November 1987 after he criticized the slow pace of reform and criticized the leading conservative in the leadership, Yegor Ligachev. He achieved a remarkable political comeback by winning a landslide victory last March in a Moscow-wide electoral district.

U.N. Experts Try To Match Names

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GENEVA — Is it London or Londres? Peking or Beijing?

U.N. experts have spent 30 years trying to come up with single spellings for geographical names worldwide, but they say trying to make maps match may be a losing effort.

They struggle through 3,000 different languages, including about 250 official ones, in their search for uniform names, says Canadian Henri Dorion, chairman of the U.N. Group of Experts on Geographical Names.

The group held its twice-annual meeting in Geneva last week.

Before an internationally recognized name for a town can be adopted, a national standard must be agreed upon. That poses problems for countries like the Soviet Union, which has about 100 languages, Dorion explains.

He accepts that the task will occupy his grandchildren's generation and doubts complete standardization will ever be achieved.

"We recognize that, for example, the French will continue to call London 'Londres' and we are not trying to change that, but we would like to limit the number of different transliterations," he said.

The experts say their little-known efforts have yielded practical benefits, especially in improving communications.

Bunny Lewis, a British member of the group, cited a recent example in Sudan.

"If you are engaged in famine relief and you have to collect the names of the villages to distribute food and those villages are randomly spelled, what do you do about it?"

"The answer is that you make new maps and you arrive at a standard way of writing all those names of villages," Lewis told a news conference.

The new Roman-script transliteration of Chinese, adopted by the United Nations in 1977, has been the most successful, Dorion said.

"The Chinese system is on the way to being accepted by everybody. Although we still see some variations such as Peking, more and more we are seeing Beijing in everyday usage," he said.

Bush, Congress Agree On Salvadoran Aid

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration and Congress have worked out a tentative agreement aimed at continuing U.S. military aid to El Salvador while taking into account congressional concerns about a rightist resurgence in that Central American country, U.S. officials say.

Much of the concern stems from a reported increase in human rights abuses in El Salvador at a time when moderate President Jose Napoleon Duarte is preparing to surrender power to the leader of the rightist Arena party, Alfredo Cristiani.

Cristiani was elected in a landslide on March 19 and will be sworn in on Thursday, ending the rule of perhaps the most pro-American president in the hemisphere, a man who was able to coax billions of U.S. aid dollars from Congress but was unable to achieve peace.

The Bush administration fought hard to oppose moves in Congress for sharp cutbacks in aid to El Salvador, but Democrats were able to extract some concessions during lengthy negotiations with State Department officials, according to congressional and administration sources.

Human Rights Watch, a private monitoring group, calls the situation in El Salvador "deeply troubling." But the administration's case for continued military aid was strengthened by what officials regard as indisputable evidence that Cuba and Nicaragua have been increasing arms shipments to leftist guerrillas in El Salvador.

President Bush went public with that allegation earlier this month but Sandinista officials in Nicaragua called his charges "unfounded" and "irrational."

In talks with the Congress, the administration wanted an increase to $97 million annually in military aid for the next two fiscal years but had to settle for $85 million, the same figure as this year.

Congressional negotiators also wrestled from the administration a pledge to report at six-month intervals on the progress being made in El Salvador on protection of human rights, the prosecution of death squad members and a negotiated settlement to the country's nine-year old civil war.

Assuming the money is appropriated later this year, Congress could not block military aid funds even if there is no progress on any of these objectives.

But if the State Department continued sending military aid in the face of strong congressional opposition, it would put the administration "in an extremely difficult position," said one U.S. official, asking not to be identified.

In that circumstance, the official predicted that Congress would "extract revenge" on the administration once the two-year aid cycle is up.

Cristiani, a U.S.-educated businessman, has made a highly favorable impression on members of Congress since his election.

Nonetheless, there is considerable restiveness among House Democrats about other influential Arena party chieftains who are widely reported to have ties with rightist death squads and who believe U.S. concerns about human rights are inhibiting the war effort against the Marxist guerrillas.

To charges that he is a mere front man for party factions aligned with death squads, Cristiani says, "There should be no doubt that it is I who will be running the government."

The congressional unease also stems from what many lawmakers regard as the meager returns from more than $3.5 billion in U.S. aid to El Salvador since the early 1980s. El Salvador's civil war has claimed more than 70,000 lives and there is no end in sight.

"El Salvador has enjoyed a free ride with the American taxpayers footing the bill," says Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa. "By most standards U.S. policy has failed the test."

Campaigning, Polish Style ...

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WARSAW, Poland — Less than a week away from its freest elections, Communist Poland is papered over with Western-style campaign posters and authorities are accusing the West of trying to influence the outcome.

The red logo of the Solidarity independent labor movement, an illegal symbol of defiance a few short months ago, is splashed across posters on shop windows and telephone poles from the capital to the countryside.

Communist-backed candidates are putting up their campaign signs, too.

From the hasty handout in smudgy type to the color poster of a smiling candidate and wholesome-looking family, the free-wheeling poster war for Sunday's vote contrasts sharply with the previously tame trickle of strictly controlled information.

Jaws dropped with amazement when the first streetcar rolled through Warsaw bearing a Solidarity campaign sign with slick graphics.

"This is our main chance, and we must take advantage of it," said Anna Dub, who heads Solidarity's publicity effort in Warsaw.

Under a historic agreement reached last month, opposition candidates have been allowed to run for all seats in a new, freely elected 100-member Senate and 35 percent of the slots in the existing Sejm, or parliament.
