Yeltsin Says Soviet Life Worsening Under Gorbys

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — Boris N. Yeltsin charged today that the Soviet people are worse off now than they were before Mikhail S. Gorbachev's reforms, and he said the president has accumulated so much power there is danger of a dictatorship.

The former Moscow party boss proposed radical changes that would take control of Soviet society away from the 20-million-member Communist Party and make the party subservient to the newly elected Congress of People's Deputies, on which Yeltsin serves. His proposals also would require the president to submit to an annual nationwide referendum on his performance.

In another challenge to traditional Soviet power, the president of the Latvian republic, Anatoly V. Gorbunov, proposed making the Soviet Union's 15 republics sovereign states that could decide what functions to give the Kremlin.

Gorbachev, sitting erect on the dais at Yeltsin's back, kept a stoic face throughout the speech, scanning the Congress hall for the deputies' reaction.

Gorbunov — like Yeltsin a Gorbachev protege — said the republics should be given power over their own resources and "full state authority."

Latvia's sister Baltic state, Estonia, declared itself sovereign last fall, with the right to overturn Soviet laws on its territory. The third Baltic state, Lithuania, followed Estonia's lead two weeks ago.

"The promised program and the promises of the past four years have not been met," Yeltsin said in his first nationally televised speech as a parliamentarian. "People live worse ... the leadership knows that."

He said he held Gorbachev responsible. (See SOVIETS, A-12)

Worthington Draws Fine, Probation

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A 64-year-old Greenville man acquitted of burning the Liberty Tobacco Warehouse was fined $30,000 Tuesday and placed on three years probation for making a false statement on an application for a tobacco marketing card.

A federal jury convicted J.T. Worthington Sr. of the crime in March. The jury also cleared him of more than 50 counts of arson, fraud and conspiracy charges connected to the 1986 fire that destroyed the Wilson tobacco warehouse.

The same jury convicted Worthington's son, J.T. "Tommy" Worthington Jr. of Greenville, of 56 counts of arson, fraud and conspiracy. He faces a maximum of more than 200 years in prison and fines of over $10 million. He is set to be sentenced Friday, and Assistant U.S. Attorney Kieran J. Shanahan said the government wants him to serve a lengthy prison term.

"We will ... be seeking an extended jail term for Tommy Worthington on Friday," Shanahan said.

If the elder Worthington had been found guilty on all charges, he could have been sentenced to a maximum of 170 years in prison and $8 million in fines. The single charge on which he was convicted carried a maximum prison sentence of five years, but Shanahan said the government did not seek an active prison term.

"We had requested a $100,000 fine," Shanahan said. "Obviously we'd like to see a higher fine (than $30,000). But we're satisfied that the $30,000 fine will send the proper message to the farmers, the warehousemen and the producers."

U.S. District Court Judge Terrence W. Boyle ordered the elder Worthington to perform 100 hours of community service, but there were no other special conditions of the probationary sentence.

In sentencing, Shanahan said Boyle considered the man's age and poor health.

The Associated Press reported that New Bern attorney Trawick H. Stubbs Jr., counsel for J.T. Worthington Sr., said in a memorandum that his client suffers from diabetes, high blood pressure and angina.

Worthington has been involved in the tobacco business nearly all his life, and he is recognized "for his in-

Bush Dares Soviets To Raze Berlin Wall For 'Free' Europe

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MAINZ, West Germany — President Bush today challenged the Soviet Union to bury the Cold War by ending the division of Europe, starting by tearing down the Berlin Wall. "Let Europe be whole and free," he declared.

In a major speech clearly aimed at Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, the president said popular demands for democratic reforms are sweeping through the communist world, forcing a re-examination of Cold War fears and security precautions.

"The world has waited long enough," said Bush, who plans to visit Poland and Hungary in July. "The time is right. Let Europe be whole and free."

"The Cold War," he said, "began with the division of Europe. It can only end when Europe is whole."

Triumphant after his debut at the NATO summit in Brussels, Belgium, the president spoke in the Rhine River city of Mainz before an audience in the Rheingoldhalle theater.

Four blocks away, about 250 demonstrators protested Bush's visit under a heavy police guard.

The protesters waved banners and placards reading "Bush Go Home," "Bush Is Not Welcome Here" and "Bush — Hands Off Nicaragua." The main bridge spanning the Rhine River was sealed off, and helicopters circled the hall where Bush spoke.

In the capital of Bonn, boats crammed with security agents in diving gear watched over the nearby Rhine when Bush made a farewell visit to U.S. ambassador Vernon Walters. "Youth are the world, and I hope what happened within NATO guarantees the future," the president told several hundred flag-waving Americans and West Germans who massed on the ambassador's lawn.

It was his first and only major address during a week-long trip to Italy, Belgium, Germany and Britain. After today's speech and a cruise down the Rhine River, Bush headed for London for talks with Prime

Economic Index Reverses Trend, Moves Up

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The government's chief economic forecasting gauge shot up 0.8 percent in April as it reversed course after posting declines in the previous two months, the Commerce Department said today.

The upward turn in the Index of Leading Economic Indicators allowed the index to steer clear of the traditional signal of a forthcoming recession — three declines in a row.

The index, designed to foretell economic activity six to nine months into the future, had dropped a revised 0.6 percent in March and 0.3 percent in February.

Analysts said April's upturn, which had been widely anticipated, was consistent with the view that while the economy is slowing, there still is enough strength left to power the record peacetime expansion through its seventh year.

"It wasn't a good bet, it isn't a good bet and it's not going to be a good bet in the fall that a recession is about to occur," economist James Annable of First National Bank of Chicago said in anticipation of today's report.

Last month's increase in the index was the biggest rise since a similar 0.8 percent jump in January.

Using the three-month rule of thumb for predicting recessions, the index has correctly forecast all eight economic downturns that have occurred since 1948, but it also has flashed false recession signals on five other occasions.

Most recently, the index declined five times in a row in the months surrounding the October 1987 stock market crash, from which the economy emerged unscathed.

In April, eight of the 11 forward-looking business statistics that make up the composite index pointed upward, led by an increase in manufacturers' orders for consumer goods.

Three indicators pointed downward: a drop in an index measuring consumer confidence; a contraction in the money supply; and falling prices for sensitive materials, indicating slower demand.

County May Drop Commodity Distribution Program

By Cherie Evans
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Pitt County Board of Social Services has agreed to consider eliminating its Commodity Distribution Program as the number of households served in the program dropped by 758 people between distributions.

During the board's meeting Tuesday, George Perry, income maintenance administrator, said only 2,657 households were served earlier this month compared to 3,415 households served in March. Cheese is no longer being offered through the program, which may be a cause for the decrease, Perry said. Also, butter will not be available because there is no place to store it, he said.

About 2,790 pounds of butter and other items were returned to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, which administers the program, Perry said.

The board directed Perry and his staff to develop a survey to determine how clients in the program would respond to its elimination. The board's concern is that those actually needing the program will not be deprived because of low participation.

Board member Lillian Bradley said she frequently helps in the distribution and she said that "there just was not the numbers there, (but) the smaller number that's coming now might be the people who really need it."

There is no administrative cost to the Pitt Social Services Department to conduct the program, said Lois Gray, administrative officer. Volunteers distribute the items, and the USDA reimburses the county for supplies or equipment, she said.

But, the income maintenance staff does spend time processing the information needed to qualify clients for the program, Ms. Gray said.

In other matters, John Jablonski, child support supervisor, reviewed the results of the county's child support enforcement program, which showed deficiencies in two major federal- and state-regulated areas.

According to the report, "Compliance requirements were not met in the location (32 percent), establishment of paternity (30 percent) and enforcement (56 percent) categories. The unit must establish procedures which will bring the performance activity to an acceptable level of at least 75 percent."

Also, "The case record must contain a running case narrative of all contracts and case activity specifying the date, reason and results thereof. Numerous deficiencies were noted during the review," the report said.

Other recommendations made in the report that are not mandatory include hiring four additional child support agents and an additional clerk to better handle the caseload, reassigning clerical tasks being performed by agents to clerical support staff and studying the feasibility of an in-house attorney.

The unit was commended on withholding unemployment benefits for child support in all the cases

Pitt Says 'Thank You' To Legislators

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt County civic leaders and state lawmakers are set for two hours of backslapping and politicking tonight at the Raleigh Marriott.

"It allows us an opportunity to say thank you. It also encourages legislators not to forget us," Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce President Ed Walker said of tonight's legislative reception.

The event is sponsored by several county organizations to allow Pitt leaders to meet with the statewide membership of the General Assembly. The reception is set for 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Gov. Jim Martin, Lt. Gov. Jim Gardner and more than 150 lawmakers and their spouses are expected to meet with over 170 Pitt leaders, Walker said. The reception has been held every other year since 1983, and tonight the chamber is sending two busloads of Pitt residents to the event.

In addition to the chamber, other sponsors include: Citizens of Pitt County, East Carolina University, ECU School of Medicine and Pitt Community College.

"It's the key leadership of Greenville, county leaders, city leaders, community leaders from the university and from Pitt Community College. You've got the business leaders going."

"It gives residents a chance to talk one-on-one about how important their (lawmakers') support is for what's going on in our area," Walker said. "It keeps us visible in front of the legislators. Pitt County is on the rise, and they've got to pay attention to us."

The reception carries a $60-per-person ticket. This year's event will cost over $12,000, and the ticket charge goes to finance the transportation and reception, which includes heavy hor d'oeuvres. The sponsors hope to break even, he said.

Dozens of other counties have similar lobbying events, but Walker said Pitt was one of the first counties to host the entire General Assembly and the council of state officers.

In past years, Pitt residents have been able to say "thank you" more than anything else, he said. This year, however, he said residents also want to ensure that eastern North Carolina receives its fair share of funding for medical industries, schools, roads and airport projects.

Al Nichols, executive director of the Pitt-Greenville Convention and Visitors Authority, said about six members of the authority will be on hand tonight.

"The nature of the contacts will be to discuss the work of the authority and the importance of the convention and visitors industry to Greenville and eastern North Carolina," Nichols said.

The authority agreed to pay for any member who wished to attend the reception. Despite bare state coffers this year, members said they must continue to hammer home the need for a regional activities center in Greenville. Without a conference facility, members say Pitt County will be left out of the race for large conventions.

"Certainly the advantages of that conference center are many fold. In addition to the obvious benefit of enabling us to bring in larger meetings, the facility would also serve as a magnet to draw in one other high-caliber meeting hotel and other facilities for the community too, probably additional restaurants and related service businesses," Nichols said.

Two Pitt Industries Receive Coveted State Safety Award

By Jerry Raynor
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Two Pitt County industries received the coveted Million-Hour Safety Award and 39 other firms and agencies in Pitt and Beaufort counties were presented safety achievement awards Tuesday night in Greenville.

Cited for achieving the million-hour level of safety were H.A. Haynie Co. Inc. of Greenville and the Farmville plant of Collins & Aikman Corp.

Hugh Haynie accepted the award for his company, which has a 14-year safety record, while John Skipper accepted for Collins & Aikman, which has amassed a 16-year safety record, the longest of any achieved in the area.

State Labor Commissioner John C. Brooks, a Greenville native, presented awards to representatives of the 41 winners at the gathering sponsored by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

In brief remarks prior to the presentations, Brooks warned that safety in the work place "continues to be an uphill struggle. This past year, North Carolina took a step backwards in its safety record, with a 12.5 increase in the rate of injuries.

"The only bright spot in this picture," Brooks said, "was the decline in injuries in the construction industry, certainly one of the industries most prone to work related accidents."

Brooks said that "this overall rate of increase in injuries sends a clear message, one that indicates increased efforts" both on the part of the labor department and individual efforts "to improve conditions in the work place."

Assistance in ways to improve safety conditions, Brooks said, "is readily available and I urge all of you to take advantage of this and to pass word on to other industries."

Aside from the two top award winners, industries and agencies in the two-county area recognized for achieving safety records for five or more consecutive years were: fifth year, Roy H. Park Broadcasting Inc., Greenville, and Reed National Corp., Farmville; sixth year, White Rock Products Corp., Washington, N.C.; seventh year, Blount-Midyette & Co. Inc., Washington, and Fountain Apparel Inc., Fountain.

Also, ninth year, Eastern Omni Constructors Inc., Greenville; 11th year, Burroughs Wellcome Co., Greenville; 12th year, Pitt & Greene Electric Membership Corp., Farmville; 14th year, Washington Daily News, Washington, and 15th year, Morgan Printers Inc., Greenville, and Procter & Gamble Co., Greenville.

The largest number of awards, 17, went to achievers of a first-year record of safety, with recipients for the second, third and fourth years totaling 11.

Most winners were represented by one or two personnel from the respective industries. However, in the case of three recipients — Burroughs Wellcome, Texas Gulf and Procter & Gamble — a sizable contingent from each was on hand as acceptors.

Representing the chamber of commerce at the banquet were Bruce L. Flye Jr., chamber vice chairman, who presided; Mavis Butts, chamber president-elect, who welcomed guests, and Pat Burnette, chamber vice president, who handled arrangements for the event.

The banquet was the 28th in a series of 31 N.C. Labor Award safety presentations taking place across the state this spring.

Jewelry, Unset Gems Missing From Shop

Investigators said 14 thefts, including some $2,400 worth of jewelry and unset gem stones from a downtown shop, were reported to Greenville police Tuesday.

Officer M.A. Jordan said 30 gold necklaces, 20 silver necklaces, 17 gold and silver rings, a pair of emerald earrings and $300 worth of unset gem stones were taken from Les Jewelers at 120 E. Fifth St. in a break-in reported at 2:43 p.m.

Officer S.A. Person said a license plate was taken from a car parked at the intersection of Cadillac Street and Colonial Avenue in an incident reported at 6:59 a.m.

Officer R.D. Andrews said $132 worth of beer, candy, cigarettes, chips, ice cream and other items were taken from Collins Grocery at 209 W. Ninth St. in a break-in reported at 7:10 a.m., while Officer L.C. Overby said a number of tools — a circular saw, hand saw, hammer, water cooler, saw blades — were taken from a vehicle at a Willoughby Park construction site on Evans Street in an incident reported at 7:15 a.m.

Officer M.R. Benton said a 1989 model Nissan Sentra was taken from Leith Olds-Nissan at 991 Greenville Blvd. in an incident reported at 8:25 a.m., while Officer R.L. Forrest said a small amount of cash was taken from the Arlington Street Baptist Church in a break-in reported at 10:50 a.m.

Forrest said a $700 diamond necklace and an $80 pair of sunglasses were taken from an apartment at 1500 Willow St. in an incident reported at 2:59 p.m.

Officer R.E. Jones said a purse containing $20 in cash and a $500 topaz ring was taken from a car parked at 102 Ash St. in an incident reported at 11:13 a.m., while Officer R.S. Sawyer said an American flag valued at $300 was taken from a pole at the Quality Mart at 601 Greenville Blvd. in an incident reported at 3:06 p.m.

Officer P.W. Worthington said a purse containing $650 in cash was taken from Julienne's Florist at 1703 W. Sixth St. in an incident reported at 4:33 p.m., while Officer C.N. Gray said a bicycle was taken from 500 E. 11th St. in an incident reported at 5:11 p.m.

Officer C.L. Robertson said $20 worth of meat was taken from 418 Pittman St. in a break-in reported at 8:46 p.m., while Officer E.A. Tyson said $20 in change and a modular component stereo system — receiver, tape deck, turntable — valued at $328 was taken from 114A Hunting Ridge Road in an incident reported at 9:37 p.m.

According to Officer R.E. Stroud, a pack of cigarettes was taken from the Fast Fare store at 1920 S. Evans St. in an incident reported at 10:09 p.m.

Relief Team Ready When Disaster Hits

By Constance Ward
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

When there is a natural disaster and the Red Cross needs help, disaster relief team members from Greenville and Wilson are ready to assist when called.

An area team, consisting of 23 members, was summoned earlier this month to help victims of the tornadoes that hit Lincoln and Catawba counties, killing five people.

According to Mike Anders, team captain stationed in Wilson, the relief group distributed meals for over 1,000 people during its stay at the disaster area.

Four team members are from Greenville and three are from Wilson.

Team member Wayne Ross of Greenville said there are 10 disaster relief squads across North Carolina made up of volunteers from Southern Baptist churches. The teams include cooks, servers, emergency medical technicians, amateur radio operators and counselors.

Ross said a team is called in to help if the work load at a disaster site is too much for Red Cross alone.

He said the Red Cross replaces supplies that the team uses up.

Each team can work at a site for a maximum of 48 hours because they "give out of food and plus, after getting up at 4 a.m. to prepare food, it's 11 p.m. or midnight before we get to bed," Ross said. After one team leaves, another team comes in to relieve it.

Ross said the 48-hour rule was put in by the N.C. Baptist Convention.

The teams utilize a Disaster Relief Van, which is actually a tractor-trailer truck that holds 3,000 meals and sleeping quarters for the volunteers, according to Ross.

CHILD IN THE MIDDLE

A theme commonly heard in marriage and family counseling is that couples feel they didn't have problems until their children left home. But it is not "empty nest syndrome" that affects them. In fact, many couples come to confront their problems when a child has left under troubling circumstances.

Children are often more sensitive to the problems in a marriage than their parents may think. Sometimes such a child "acts up," consciously or subconsciously, to distract the parents and keep them from acting on marital issues which the child perceives as frightening and threatening to the family. If such a child runs away, he or she may have exhausted less drastic ways to distract the parents from their problems, or may have come to resent their self-assumed burden of being the family focus.

If a child exhibits runaway tendencies, or is figuratively "running away" by drinking or taking drugs, the whole family needs to be examined. Together with a professional counselor, you can all learn to deal with issues in a more constructive and less fragmented or threatening way.

A representative of the local chapter of the League of Women Voters endorsed Greenville's 1989-90 budget proposal at a City Council public hearing held Tuesday at City Hall.

Chapter president-elect Karen Lapicki, speaking on behalf of the organization, called the 1989-90 proposal, "overall, a good fiscally responsible budget."

City Manager Greg Knowles has proposed a record $24,912,437 city budget package for fiscal year 1989-90, representing a 10.3 percent increase over the current year's budget of $22,347,671.

If approved by the council, the budget would leave property tax rates at the current level of 55.36 cents per $100 of property valuation.

Included in the proposal is the addition of a variety of equipment along with allocations for 16 new city personnel.

Ms. Lapicki told the council that the league is particularly pleased with the proposed addition of three maintenance workers to the parks and recreation department and an additional employee to expand the city's recycling efforts.

"We are also pleased over the decision not to implement user fees this fiscal year," she said.

Knowles told those attending the hearing that the city's budget total is able to increase without property taxes rising because "assessed value has increased dramatically."

He said the increase is a result of both recent annexations and the city's current level of growth.

"The city's value on which this tax is based is over $1.32 billion," he said.

Knowles said other additions included in the 1989-90 proposal include expansion of the city's mosquito abatement program, including acquisition of a new mosquito program vehicle; additional ambulance service staffing for the Red Banks fire station; a full-time police officer for the DARE program; four new GREAT buses, along with a shuttle bus, and the acquisition of new public works equipment to assist in road repairs.

The City Council is scheduled to make final budget adjustments at a workshop session on June 12 before considering adoption at a meeting on June 19.

Whiter Teeth?

Commonly asked questions and answers concerning this procedure.

Question: "How long does the procedure take?"

Answer: This procedure takes only 15 to 20 minutes to start and the patient completes the treatment at home and to their desired degree of whiteness; however, on your first visit, the dentist must prepare you for the procedure and usually a normal one-hour appointment is sufficient. The results are very predictable when the patient follows the instructions to the letter. Most cases can be completed within a two week period, more complicated cases may require a longer period of time. Patients who follow the instructions properly may see results within the first three days of treatment.

Question: "If this is such a new procedure, how can I be sure it's safe?"

Answer: Although it is a new product, it is based on the older bleaching techniques that have been in use on teeth for over twenty years. When used properly, these techniques have proven to be extremely safe but overpriced for most people. It is a much milder medication than anything ever used before for this purpose and is priced where every patient can now afford to look their very best with a totally different and easier procedure.

Question: "How long will the results last?"

Answer: The procedure can be permanent with occasional and proper maintenance.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Troop Reduction Productive End

President Bush's proposal to reduce United States combat troop in Europe has real meaning today where such a proposal might have been seen as diplomatic posturing only a decade ago.

That's how much things have changed in Europe in recent years.

True, the president presented the proposal with a challenge to Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev to make comparable troop withdrawals. In past eras, however the Soviets would have only made counter proposals and the entire idea would have been lost in prolonged debate.

'The troop reduction proposal was well received by our Allies and there was agreement on an approach to short-range nuclear weapons reduction.'

Today the Soviets are serious about reducing their military commitment. They have to be or risk seeing the Communist economy disintegrate. That means the Bush proposal will be seen as a means of reducing military spending and real progress can come from it all.

As for the United States, the lessening tensions in Western Europe cause our allies to see the big U.S. military presence as a liability rather than an asset.

When NATO was formed it was propelled by a fear of a common enemy. Western Europe feared the Soviet Union and specifically Josef Stalin. The Western European nations welcomed a strong U.S. military presence.

Now the Soviet Union is not so feared and a U.S. troop reduction is seen in a positive light.

As for our own country the troop reduction should be welcomed. The United States government still spends more than its revenues. If both the United States and the Soviet Union reduce their troop commitments in Europe the area will be better off ... and both countries will reduce their military spending leaving funds to address their respective economic problems.

President Bush can claim success in the NATO summit meeting. The troop reduction proposal was well received by our Allies and there was agreement on an approach to short-range nuclear weapons reduction.

Now the new president can point out his own peace initiative and take credit at the same time for keeping NATO intact.

Certainly the troop reductions by both the United States and the Soviets should be carried out.

Awaiting The Other Shoe

WASHINGTON — And now, mesdames and messieurs, we await the other shoe. French authorities, having long sought the Nazi collaborator Paul Touvier, found him — not surprisingly — hiding in a Roman Catholic priory in Nice. The other shoe? Oh yes, the arrest of church officials and others who for years have hidden Touvier.

Richard Cohen

Such an event is not likely to happen. France, more than most countries occupied by the Nazis, has successfully obscured the role of its World War II collaborators and traitors. It took Marcel Ophuls' 1969 film, "The Sorrow and the Pity," to reveal to the French what historians have long known: Hardly everyone in France was a resistance fighter.

Touvier was certainly not one. An intelligence officer for the puppet Vichy regime, he was accused in 1973 of the deportation of French Jews to death camps and the torture and execution of French Resistance fighters. These are so-called "crimes against humanity" for which, in neither France nor morality, no statute of limitations exists.

For Touvier, the 1973 indictment must have seemed, as Yogi Berra once put it, "deja vu all over again." Following the war, he was sentenced to death in absentia and remained in hiding until 1971 when he was pardoned by French President Georges Pompidou.

More than Klaus Barbie, who was, after all, a German Gestapo officer, Touvier not only confronts France with its past, but its present as well. Ever since the end of World War II, he has reportedly been hidden by reactionary Catholics who might have been honoring a deal made by church authorities in 1944. In exchange for sparing the lives of 40 Catholics, Touvier was supposedly granted what amounted to lifetime sanctuary. The priory where he was found is run by followers of Msgr. Marcel Lefebvre, the arch-conservative cleric excommunicated by the Vatican last year.

What seems a tale out of history, mildewed with age and, therefore, irrelevant, is really nothing of the sort. The genocidal impulse is as contemporary as a Fax machine — a persistent problem in Africa, Asia, the Middle East and, now that Moscow's boot is off the neck of its ethnic republics, in Eastern Europe and the Caucasus as well. Not even in the case of Germany and Hitler was mass murder the work of one man or, even, one nationality. The Holocaust took the assistance of many peoples, some from nations we usually consider blameless or exemplary.

Of course, any nation has its goons. But France for years pretended otherwise and, except for some egregious examples of treason, refused to clean house.

One can only imagine what would have happened if a Nazi war criminal had been found in a German priory. A scolding world would point a finger at Germany: There they go again. But Germany, as opposed to France or, for that matter, Austria, really has attempted to confront its history.

But from Nice alone, where Touvier was found and where he once worked for the Nazis, some 5,000 Jews were deported to death camps. Such a task clearly required a network of collaborators, informants and volunteer killers. By verdict of the court, Touvier fit the bill. Yet, except for a short period, he was able to live in the very France he betrayed, shielded from justice by some of the same elements who once had doffed their berets to welcome the Nazis.

A trial, an accounting of those who harbored Touvier, would confront France with its past. It would educate a younger generation to the consequences of race hatred and unmask those who, in the name of doctrinaire religion or a perverted patriotism, helped the killers in their task. But France's Justice Minister, Pierre Arpaillange, issued something less than a ringing call for justice: "The possibility of charges of harboring a criminal will be discussed." The "possibility...will be discussed"? Why not just do it?

It is said that, from time to time, Touvier ventured from his sanctuary in the priory of St. Francis and walked the streets of Nice dressed as a priest. The garb he chose was a disguise for himself, but it would do for much of France as well. For too long, it has taken a vow of silence.

Give Moral & Political Leadership, Not Money

LONDON — Dr. Nafis Sadik is Barbara Bush's kind of woman. The Pakistani physician is a dynamic doer.

After years of working with women and children in underdeveloped countries of Asia, Africa and Latin America, she has become the head of the United Nations Fund for Population Activities (UNFPA). She came through London the other day to deliver its annual report, devoted at her insistence to the women she has known and the millions like them.

'Long overlooked, dismissed and even marginalized by planners and decision makers,' she said, 'women are the key not only to patterns of future population growth but also to the goal of sustainable development...When women achieve control over their fertility, social and economic self-determination follow. The Republic of Korea, Singapore and Thailand are economic successes in part because, as part of their overall development efforts, strong programs of family planning helped to reduce high rates of population growth.'

What would move the First Lady are not the economic analyses but the human stories Dr. Sadik tells — of her own experiences in trying to save some of the half-million women who die in childbirth each year, in large part because they lack help in planning their families, and must care for themselves during pregnancy and at birth. Or the 10 million infants who die each year before they reach their first birthday, victims of malnutrition, disease and neglect.

The United States spends more than $120 million supporting family planning and maternal care in specific countries. But since 1985, it has cut off help to Dr. Sadik's organization, the main worldwide coordinating agency for such assistance.

Although the consequences are felt mainly by women, the decisions were made by men. In the mid-1980s, the Reagan administration ended such assistance on the grounds that UNFPA gave tacit support to the Chinese government's policy of forced abortion as a means of population control.

The decision was controversial then and it remains so today. UNFPA always has denied that it subsidizes coercive programs in any country. In 1984 and 1985, when the issue first surfaced, M. Peter McPherson, then director of the Agency for International Development (AID), concluded there was 'no evidence of UNFPA intentionally or actually promoting or supporting abortion in any country.'

The battle then shifted to Congress. Anti-abortion forces, led by Rep. Jack Kemp (R-N.Y.) and Sen. Bob Kasten (R-Wisc.), attached language to an appropriations bill setting tighter restrictions but still leaving the administration some discretion. Under heavy pressure from Capitol Hill and the White House, McPherson then cut off aid to UNFPA. And when that decision was challenged in court, the D.C. appellate bench ruled that he was carrying out the intent of Congress.

Dr. Sadik argues that the China issue was simply 'an excuse' the last administration used to 'satisfy domestic (political) pressures.'

She is not alone in that view. In a recent House Appropriations Committee hearing, Rep. John Edward Porter (R-Ill.) told Secretary of State James A. Baker III that he agreed with the principle of opposing coercive abortion. But he added: 'My concern has always been that...we've cut off our voluntary family-planning funding to 130 other countries that don't have and never have been alleged to have coercive policies at all.'

Baker replied that if it were true (as both the congressman and Dr. Sadik insist) that UNFPA's programs in China are limited to providing modern contraception and maternal and child-care services, 'it certainly deserves review.' But Porter is not optimistic. 'There's so much emotion about that one country's policies,' he said, 'that neither Congress nor the administration can see the larger question.'

During his confirmation hearings, Baker told Sen. Gordon Humphrey (R-N.H.) that the present policy 'was worked out...in my office' when he was Reagan's chief of staff, adding: 'I would see no reason why we would be interested in changing....'

But the issue will not go away. Dr. Halfdan Mahler, who recently retired after 15 years as director general of the World Health Organization to take up similar responsibilities with the International Planned Parenthood Federation, said in an interview that 'ways must be found to reinvolve the United States in the dialogue' about world population problems and the role of family planning. 'We need your country's moral and political leadership even more than we need your money.'

The United States was the world's pace-setter in this effort, beginning with President Eisenhower and continuing under five successors of both parties. Now Japan has stepped in as the largest contributor to UNFPA, and last year the Soviet Union helped fill the vacuum with its first contribution.

But the agency's budget is grossly inadequate to the need.

At both the national and the family level, Dr. Sadik remarked, 'we have to change the attitudes of decision-makers. And most of them are men.'

That is something Barbara Bush certainly understands.

The Mini Tire Approach To Leaking Storage Tanks

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — Those mini tires that come in the trunk of a new car are a mixed blessing. They work as a spare when you get a flat, but you can't drive your car on them for very long.

The General Assembly used the mini tire approach last year when it passed legislation governing the clean up of leaking underground storage tanks for hazardous chemicals like gasoline. The law proved to be sufficient for the state's short term needs, but is very inadequate for the long run. Bills now moving through the assembly would finally give the state the authority to run a vigorous regulatory program for these tanks.

The law enacted in 1988 created two funds for leaking tank clean-up, distinguished between commercial and non-commercial tanks, and set fees for owning a tank in the state.

But the 1988 law had shortcomings. The legislature failed to put any state money into the fund, and the fees charged of tank owners proved inadequate to get a clean-up program running. The definitions were sometimes fuzzy and the whole law was equipped with a sunset clause which means it will be repealed on the last day of 1989. Rep. Dennis Wicker, D-Lee, sponsor of the bill, said the bill was so weak that private insurers could not establish tank insurance, a key ingredient to the state program.

"The bill just did not do the job," Wicker said in a recent interview "This bill, this year, is intended to improve it and smooth it out." Separate bills moving through House and Senate committees are essentially the same, with the exception of fees.

The bills say that when an underground tank is found to be leaking, the owner of that tank is liable for all costs of clean-up up to $50,000. Any costs above that - up to $1 million - will be borne by either the commercial or non-commercial clean-up fund. In addition, the non-commercial fund will pay all costs for cleaning up those leaking tanks for whom an economically responsible owner cannot be found.

The bills also allow third parties who suffer either property or bodily injury from a leaking tank to recover from the funds for all damages above $100,000. The owner of the tank is responsible for all damages up to $100,000 and anything over $1 million.

The funds are to be financed through fees paid by tank owners. Current state law puts those fees at $30 a year for tanks of less than 3,500 gallons capacity and $60 a year for larger tanks. The House wants to increase the fees by 50 percent, the Senate by 100 percent. Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, sponsor of the Senate plan, says the higher fees will allow the state to collect money faster and begin cleaning up sooner. Legislators hope that tank owners will be able to buy private insurance for liability not covered by the funds.

The two bills also propose that about $8 million in tank inspection fees that are collected each year by the Department of Agriculture also go into the two funds.

These bills represent a compromise between the petroleum industry - which owns the majority of the tanks involved - environmentalists and the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development. Questions of fairness, constitutionality and money left one gaping hole in the bill. Tanks found to be leaking before June 30, 1988, are not covered. Their owners are still liable for clean up, but won't benefit from this program if it's made law.

Nonetheless, with these bills the state's effort to clean up leaking tanks finally will be running on four good tires.

Walter Mears

BONN, West Germany — Granted, it was a less-than-elegant paraphrase of the solemn pronouncement of the North Atlantic Council. Sixteen heads of state in summit conference assembled, and President Bush summarizes a line of their communique as "blah, blah."

But no offense intended. He was just skipping over words, hurrying to get to the heavy stuff. And nobody cared more about the heavy stuff than George Bush.

It gave Bush, by his account, a double hit. He did keep reminding himself, out loud, that this was good for the alliance, not only the United States. Or George Bush, president thereof.

After weeks of taking flak while Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev took bows for his arms-control offensive, Bush had his own, dramatic proposal in place, with the blessings of the NATO summit.

His euphoria was showing. At a Brussels news conference, the president was asked why his arms offer didn't seek to eliminate nuclear weapons. Bush said repeatedly that the West proposes to reduce nuclear weaponry, not go to zero.

"Well," he said, "the communique addresses itself to where nuclear forces are concerned" - and stopped reading the text.

"Blah, blah," he abbreviated. "Land, sea, air-based systems, including ground-based missiles - in the present circumstances as far as can be foreseen, they'll be needed in Europe."

And when will the alliance get rolling with a specific negotiating offer on the Bush plan? The president lapsed into NATO-speak:

"NATO is tasked to be back on September 7th, with our internals to be farther along."

"... We all remember September 7th, don't we?" he asked, and laughed.

That's the day the campaigning Bush pronounced to be Pearl Harbor Day, three months ahead of the real one on December 7.

He also laughed when asked whether his attitude toward the critics is now "I told you so."

"Not really," he said. "Not really. No, listen, I'm not going to get into that game with Congress, or anyone else."

But it wasn't the only game in town, Brussels or Bonn.

Bush was so enthusiastic he even waived his rule against talking to reporters at photo-taking sessions, briefly, on Tuesday. "We'll make an exception ... just to say, yes, I'm very pleased. ... It was a united alliance; plenty of credit for everybody there."

That was at the headquarters of the European Community, where Bush's exit was briefly delayed when he tried to make his way through the middle of a brown curtain that had no opening in it. He flailed briefly, then went around end.

At the American School in Brussels, he rated the summit "marvelous." At the Chancellery in Bonn, he said it had been good for the United States, good for NATO, good for West Germany, and could be good for the Soviet Union, too.

Was the president feeling up?

"Have you ever seen him down?" said Mrs. Bush as they flew to Bonn.

"You are a friend among friends," West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl told the president in welcome. He'd been in Brussels, too, and got back shortly before the ceremony.

The short-range missile compromise may yet come back to haunt Kohl politically, although he said Tuesday the Bush visit would be a boost in the 1990 West German elections.

House Set For Floor Vote On Highway Package

By John Flesher
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — As the House prepares for a long-awaited vote on the $8.6 billion highway bill, a Senate leader is pushing to let North Carolina citizens vote on what would be the biggest road-building program in state history.

The House version of the plan cleared the House Finance Committee on Tuesday, setting up the first of two floor votes for this afternoon. If approved, a final vote would be taken Thursday.

Meanwhile, Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, unveiled a financing plan for the bill that differs from the House package in several significant respects — including lengthening the 12-year timetable to 15 years.

It also would put the highway package to a statewide referendum, unlike the House bill, and would finance the program with a different combination of taxes and fees than its House counterpart.

Rauch, a Gastonia businessman and 23-year Senate veteran, told reporters 12 years was too tight a schedule for the most ambitious road-building program in North Carolina history.

"I'm committed to the phasing in," he said after a meeting of a finance subcommittee studying the Senate version of the highway bill. "I just don't know any businessman who feels it's prudent to start purchasing three times as much of anything as you have been historically from your same suppliers."

Rauch's proposal drew negative reviews from House leaders.

"The message we've had from people across this state is that there is overwhelming support for building these roads in 12 years," said Rep. Alex Hall, D-New Hanover, chairman of the House Finance Committee. "This (program) is really just catching up with what our need are right now."

Hall said he saw no reason for a referendum. "It's terribly difficult to have a tax package with so many funding elements and put it on the ballot," he said. "You'd confuse the public."

Rauch said he crafted his plan after submitting a questionnaire to the nine-member Senate subcommittee. He said members voted 6-3 to "phase in" the construction — a phrase Rauch uses to describe the 15-year timetable. The senators voted 7-2 in favor of the statewide referendum, he said.

However, four of the nine subcommittee members — including Sen. Bill Goldston, D-Rockingham, sponsor of the Senate bill — said in interviews they favored sticking with the 12-year approach.

"I think when this comes before us (for a vote), there will be sentiment against the 15-year plan," said Sen. George Daniel, D-Caswell. He also voiced opposition to a referendum.

Two subcommittee members — Sens. Paul Smith, R-Rowan, and Dan Simpson, R-Burke — endorsed Rauch's proposals.

Transportation Secretary Jim Harrington spoke against the 15-year schedule, saying it would leave $3 billion in unmet construction needs because some of the money would be diverted for right-of-way purchases.

The emergence of Rauch's plan further complicated the debate over how to pay for the three-pronged road-building program, which has drawn broad support from legislators in both parties, businesses, local governments and the Martin administration.

The program calls for an "in-trastate" network of four-lane highways, construction of "loop" thoroughfares around seven metropolitan areas and paving of 10,000 miles of rural roads.

All three of the proposals now on the table call for boosting the gasoline tax to 21 cents per gallon — a 5 1/4-cent increase.

Also, under the Senate bill North Carolina car buyers would pay a title transfer tax of 3 percent of a vehicle's retail value, minus the value of the vehicle he traded in. Thus, the buyer of a $20,000 car who traded in a car worth $5,000 would be taxed 3 percent of $15,000.

The Rauch bill would set a $1,500 limit per vehicle on the transfer tax; Goldston's bill has no ceiling.

The House bill calls for a 3 percent title transfer fee, but would impose a $1,000 ceiling for the first four years of the program. The cap would rise to $1,500 thereafter.

Other financing provisions in the House bill — higher fees for annual vehicle registration, car rental and dealer plates and a boost in the current title fee from $5 to $40 — are absent from both Senate plans.

The House version cleared the Finance Committee after members spent an hour grilling the sponsor, Rep. Bob Hunter, D-McDowell, about its potential impact.

The committee approved two amendments recommended by Rep. George Miller, D-Durham. One called for spending up to $5 million a year to study alternate transportation such as mass transit and special highway lanes for vehicles with several riders. The other seeks a study of long-term highway needs.

Rejected was an amendment offered by Rep. Art Pope, R-Wake, to add a $1 billion bond issue to the program and lower the gasoline tax increase by 2 cents if the bond issue were approved in a referendum.

Helms Threatens Bill Over Debt

RALEIGH (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., is threatening to introduce a bill that would force the Rev. Jesse Jackson to pay a $25,000 debt that a Fayetteville man says is owed to him.

Helms, a critic of Jackson, said last week in a letter to him, "I am exploring whether a private relief bill is appropriate." He urged Jackson to "work out this situation" with Marion Rex Harris of Fayetteville.

The senator's staff released the letter Tuesday. Harris, a black businessman, chaired Jackson's 1984 presidential campaign in North Carolina. But he wrote to Helms on May 8 to ask for the senator's help.

Harris said in an interview Tuesday that he and his wife had loaned $25,000 to a Jackson-related group in 1984, when Jackson returned from Syria, where he had secured the release of Navy Lt. Robert O. Goodman Jr.

Goodman's jet was hit during a bombing attack on Syrian anti-aircraft positions in Lebanon's central mountains. He was captured by Syria and held as a prisoner of war for a month.

Harris said that Jackson aides had sought the funds to pay hotel expenses in Syria. The Syrian government had covered the hotel costs, but Jackson insisted on reimbursing the Syrians.

Harris said he wanted to help Jackson and the Goodman rescue effort, and was told by Jackson aides that he would be repaid within 10 days. The loan, which he and his wife made from their savings account, "was stupidity," he said.

He said his main complaint is with Jackson's staff. "Jesse has given directions to his staff many times to pay me," he said, but the loan never has been repaid.

Jackson and his spokesman could not be reached for comment Tuesday.

Two months ago, Harris wrote to Navy Secretary William Ball, asking the Navy to hold a fund-raiser to repay his $25,000. A Navy official wrote back, suggesting that Harris ask his senator or representative to offer "a private relief bill" in Congress. That's when Harris wrote to Helms.

Harris has switched his voter registration back-and-forth between the Democratic and Republican parties. A former Democrat, he became a Republican and was named to the N.C. Board of Transportation under GOP Gov. James Holshouser.

Senate OKs Hazardous Waste Bill

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — North Carolina has enacted legislation to resume its work on handling the state's hazardous wastes, and officials hope the action will soften South Carolina's stand on accepting wastes from the Tar Heel state.

Sen. Lura Tally, D-Cumberland, said she was relieved at the Senate's 37-8 vote Tuesday to enact the law. But she said there was no guarantee that South Carolina Gov. Carroll Campbell would rescind an executive order banning North Carolina wastes from a Pinewood, S.C., facility.

"Now I'm just hoping they'll open up again and we'll see how long that can last," she said.

Campbell labeled North Carolina's actions "a positive step," Campbell spokesman Tucker Eskew said. But until Campbell's staff can assess the impact of the legislation on South Carolina, he will not decide if North Carolina can resume dumping its waste in the Palmetto state, Eskew added.

Campbell had ordered the facility closed until North Carolina took steps to handle its own hazardous wastes. But he relaxed the ban for 10 days following initial Senate passage of the bill.

"Gov. Campbell is anxious to review the final language of the bill and see how it pertains to South Carolina and his executive order," Eskew said. The review will take "a few days at the bare minimum."

Gov. Jim Martin said after the enactment that he was delighted. "He thinks it's a responsible way to deal with a complicated issue," said David Prather, Martin's press secretary.

The new law will overhaul the state Hazardous Waste Treatment Commission, giving the governor's appointees control of finding a facility. The governor also may try to forge agreements with neighboring states to share the management of hazardous wastes.

The new law also repeals North Carolina's ban on land burial of hazardous wastes — an option supporters say is extremely unlikely.

Press Says Senate Backsliding On Open Sessions

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Senate leaders are backsliding on their promise of a more open General Assembly, a press spokesman said as a bill to strengthen North Carolina's open meetings law bogged down in the upper chamber.

The criticism by Hugh Stevens, general counsel for the North Carolina Press Association, drew angry denials from senators Tuesday.

"I don't give a damn what Hugh Stevens says," Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, told reporters. "If I got paid like he did, I would write a letter like that too."

"It is a bad characterization," said President Pro Tem Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, the top-ranking senator. "He's absolutely wrong. It won't help him to get anything passed in the General Assembly to be calling names."

Stevens warned the press group's 170 members in a memorandum that the open meetings bill — which sailed through the House on a 114-0 vote May 11 — "may not even be given serious consideration" in the Senate.

Stevens also voiced concern that two private meetings of Senate budget leaders this week might signal a return to the days when a small group of Democratic bosses assembled spending packages behind closed doors. Royall, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, ordered the closed meetings Monday and Tuesday.

"It would appear that the 'super-sub,' whose death has been so widely heralded, has made a Lazarus-like reappearance," Stevens said.

"Senator Royall's arrogant display of power, and the silence of his powerful colleagues in the face of it, indicates that the Senate leadership may have shut their windows against the fresh breeze of legislative openness embodied in (the open meetings bill)."

Barnes acknowledged that Royall might have erred in closing the meetings and said he would be "a little more careful in the future." Royall said he stood by his actions but that a meeting of budget leaders today would be open.

The open meetings bill is designed to close what supporters say are loopholes in a comprehensive rewrite of the law enacted in 1979. Barnes helped steer that measure through the Senate.

Minister Poisoned

BURLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — The only motive ruled out so far in the arsenic poisoning of a Burlington minister is suicide, but authorities say it may take some time to determine how he got the chemical in his system or where it came from.

Dwight Moore, 54, pastor of the Carolina United Church of Christ, is being treated in the intensive care unit of North Carolina Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill, where his condition is described as critical.

Moore was admitted to N.C. Memorial Hospital on May 7 following two separate stays at Alamance County Hospital. He checked into the local hospital after returning home from New Jersey, where he had taken his new wife, Blanche, on a honeymoon trip in late April.

Two days after arriving at N.C. Memorial, physicians discovered arsenic in Moore's system, said Alamance County Sheriff's Detective Phil Ayers. Further tests to determine how and when the poison was ingested are not complete.

Moore has told detectives he has no idea how he was poisoned, Ayers said.

Director Fired

GRAHAM, N.C. (AP) — The Alamance County director of animal control, who was suspended without pay in late April, has been fired following an interdepartmental hearing.

County Manager Robert C. Smith said Tuesday that Bob Bullard had no avenue of appeal from the firing. Smith and other county officials said they could not disclose details of the Bullard case due to restrictions in the state's personnel law.

But a county commissioner has said the action was taken because Bullard carried a firearm April 23 while on duty. Bullard, 44, contacted at his home Tuesday, said he had retained an attorney and would take steps to try to get his job back. He declined further comment.

Bullard, employed by the county's animal control unit since February 1977, was earning $22,488 annually at the time of his suspension and dismissal.

Safekeepers

RALEIGH (AP) — The state Department of Correction on Tuesday notified sheriff's departments that a temporary ban on the admission of "safekeepers" into the state prison system has been lifted.

The temporary ban was enforced last Friday for the first time ever when the number of safekeepers — people awaiting trial that are transferred to the state prison system for health or security reasons — reached the 200 mark.

Under the recently amended Prison Population Stabilization Act, the so-called prison cap, correction officials may not admit more than 200 safekeepers unless they are specifically authorized by the secretary of correction.

Since last Friday, the department has been accepting safekeepers only where an acute security or health need was shown.

Body Found

CURRITUCK, N.C. (AP) — The body of an unidentified man washed up on the Currituck Outer Banks on Monday, authorities say.

The body was discovered around 4 p.m. at Swan Beach. The man, described as being in his early 20s, was wearing blue corduroy shorts and a life vest.

A Currituck County Sheriff's spokesman says the body was sent to the state medical examiner in Greenville for an examination.

Fishermen Drown

COLLETTSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Two Marion men fishing in a creek apparently drowned over the weekend, authorities say.

Officials suspect that one of the men slipped into the river and the other man went in after him. Neither of the men could swim, according to Caldwell County Sheriff's Department Det. Tim Munday.

The bodies of Ernest Gordon Stewart, 32, and Kenneth Worley, 37, were found at about 5:30 p.m. Sunday by divers with the sheriff's department. Their bodies were found in about 15 feet of water at a pooled area in the creek.

Four Murder Trials Strain Courts

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEWTON, N.C. — Four murder trials have begun in the Hickory area as potential jurors and court officials are being shuttled among three counties.

More than 200 potential jurors milled around the Catawba County Justice Center Tuesday, where two of the trials are taking place. Forty-eight were sent to a trial one county west, in Morganton.

"We're just up to our ears in cases," said Superior Court Judge Robert Burroughs. "And we got about a knee-level of space."

In one courtroom, James Clifton Gibbs awaits trial on two counts of first-degree murder. That trial was moved from McDowell County because of pretrial publicity. He is accused of pushing two women off a Blue Ridge Parkway overlook.

Next door, Jerry Lynn King also awaits trial. He is charged with murder in the 1986 stabbing death of Nancy Brown Covington, 66, in Hickory.

Catawba County sheriff's deputies took jurors from Newton to Morganton because defense attorneys argued that their client can't receive a fair trial from a Burke County jury.

Once at the Burke County Courthouse in Morganton, lawyers grilled potential jurors who may hear the case of Philip Payne. Each day, they will be driven back to the Catawba County Justice Center.

Payne is charged with first-degree murder in the Halloween night shooting death of his second wife, Pamela Berry Payne, 25, in the couple's home near Morganton.

Attorneys for Payne argued in court documents that news accounts mentioning the death of Philip Payne's first wife, Martha Payne, 21, would have hurt a Burke County's jury's impartiality.

Six jurors were seated Tuesday. In Caldwell County, the prosecution began presenting its case against Leonard Junior "Red" Cannon.

Cannon, then a maintenance worker with Yale Materials Handling Corp., is charged with murder in the shooting of 17-year-old Dean Louis Eckard of Lenoir.

Police say Eckard was doing construction work on Cannon's new Hudson home.

CP&L Files For Higher Fuel Rates

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Carolina Power & Light Co. filed a request Tuesday to raise the "fuel component" — the utilities' way of recouping money they pay for fuel to generate electricity.

The increase would generate a total of $40 million in fuel revenues, CP&L spokesman Wayne Ennis said. Half of that reflects fuel costs CP&L paid in its purchase of electricity from two steam plants operated by Cogentrix Leasing Corp. of Charlotte in the 12 months ending March 31. The other $20 million is sought to reflect similar fuel costs in the current 12-month period.

The fuel charge is separate from other rates and does not include profits, Ennis said.

With the increase, customers could see their bills increase 99 cents per month for each 1,000 kilowatt hours. The request will be reviewed by the state Utilities Commission and will be the topic of a public hearing in August. The hike could go into effect in September. The proposal "reflects the fuel costs associated with some co-generation projects which sell electricity to us," Ennis said.

"We are simply this year asking to be allowed to recover costs, and to make an adjustment in the fuel component for the next 12 months," he said.

The commission annually reviews power companies' fuel costs, and adjusts the fuel charge per kilowatt hour accordingly.

Nader Group Says Brunswick's Reactors Among Worst In U.S.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The two reactors at Carolina Power & Light Co.'s Brunswick Nuclear Power Plant are among the nation's 20 worst reactors, a Ralph Nader group said Tuesday.

"Brunswick-1 and 2 have long been at the bottom of the nuclear industry," said Joan Claybrook, president of Public Citizen, which released a survey of nuclear reactors. "It is time we closed that nuclear lemon down."

Using government and industry documents, Public Citizen rated reactors on 10 criteria, ranging from safety mishaps to operating and maintenance expenses. For each criteria, the group listed the 20 worst reactors.

Brunswick-1 and 2 in Southport ranked 13th on the list of the worst commercial reactors overall because they were included on four separate criteria lists. The Brunswick plant received low ratings for worker ex-posure to radiation, radiation release, management ratings and repair costs.

CP&L spokesman Elizabeth Bean said company officials had not seen the report and could not comment until they had studied it.

"I would point out that Ralph Nader's Critical Mass Energy Project (a part of Public Citizen) has historically demonstrated in their reports ... a bias against nuclear plants, and historically has supported the shutdown of nuclear plants," Ms. Bean said.

Public Citizen ranked the Turkey Point-3 reactor in Miami as the worst in the country, followed by Oyster Creek-1 in Forked River, N.J.; and the Peach Bottom-2 and -3 reactors in Peach Bottom, Pa.

The Brunswick plant did not appear on the first Public Citizen list, which was released in April 1988. That report was based mostly on 1985 and 1986 data, while the new study was based mostly on 1987 and 1988 data.

Boat Slams Into Embankment

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Four people were injured during the Memorial Day weekend when a boat slammed into a road embankment on Lake Gaston at the same spot where residents had asked the state 18 months ago to install warning lights.

State boating officials said the crash might cause them to re-examine the area in northern Warren County for safety-related problems.

The boat hit a rocky slope near the Eaton's Ferry Bridge shortly before dawn on Memorial Day, flung its driver into the water, rammed a highway guardrail, flipped over and slid back down to the water's edge, a state wildlife officer said Tuesday.

The four people in the boat escaped serious injury although one was hospitalized overnight, Officer H. Conley Mangum said.

He said two or three boats crash each year in the general area of the bridge because the road that crosses it and its supporting embankments are not always visible after dark.

The rocky embankment supports State Road 1344, which links the southern and northern shores of Lake Gaston. The road is about a half mile long, a third of which is the bridge.

Local residents and lake users, backed by the Lake Gaston Chamber of Commerce, tried to persuade the state to install navigation lights on the bridge more than a year ago, said Howard Tomlinson, executive director of the chamber.

Instead, the state Wildlife Resources Commission, the agency that regulates boating on inland waters, put large white-and-orange reflectors on the bridge pilings.

Claude Pepper, Dead At 88, Will Lie In State At Capitol Rotunda

WASHINGTON (AP) — The body of Rep. Claude Pepper will lie in state in the Capitol Rotunda as a tribute to a half-century political career in which he championed the elderly and the poor, his former colleagues promise.

Pepper's political odyssey, one of the longest in American history, ended Tuesday with his death at age 88. A Florida Democrat who served as a state representative before his election to the U.S. Senate in 1936, Pepper later served in the House after 12 years out of office and became its oldest member.

"He was always a voice for the voiceless and a helping hand for the helpless," said House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas. Wright said the House will adopt a resolution today so that Pepper can lie in state Thursday.

The Senate was also expected to approve the resolution today, Wright said. Lying in state in the Rotunda is the highest final honor an American can receive. It has been accorded presidents, and more recently to the unknown soldier from the Vietnam war.

Pepper had been hospitalized since April 6 suffering from an undisclosed stomach ailment, which a spokesman in his office said Tuesday was cancer. He died at Walter Reed Army Medical Center, where he returned a month ago after an interim stay at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore.

Pepper's colleagues said he used his opportunities to the hilt, and to the service of his least powerful constituents.

"In the bosom of that small, gentle man beat the heart of a giant — a heart that felt the pain of a world where children go to sleep hungry and where the old die alone," Rep. Joe Moakley, D-Mass., said.

"He was not just a witness to the century," said Rep. David E. Bonior, D-Mich., the chief deputy whip of the House.

Pepper, born Sept. 8, 1900, on a farm near Dudleyville, Ala., rose from poverty to attend the University of Alabama and Harvard Law School. In Congress, he was an architect of some of the nation's most enduring "safety net" programs, including Social Security, the minimum wage, and medical assistance for the elderly and for handicapped children.

He was the first national legislator to push publicly for federal funding for the war against cancer, a disease that took his wife, Mildred in 1979, some 43 years after they were married. They had no children.

In his final years, he dug in his heels against cutting Social Security benefits to elderly retired workers — half a century after campaigning for establishment of the retirement program.

President Bush, who presented Pepper with the Medal of Freedom, the nation's highest civilian award, during a hospital visit last Thursday, offered this summing up from Bonn, West Germany:

"Claude Pepper gave definition and meaning to the concept of public service. He fought for the poor and the elderly in his own determined way.

"Those who agreed with him were proud to follow his banner. Those who disagreed with him always respected him. Claude Pepper was a gentleman, a noble human being."

Others noted Pepper's extraordinary length of public service, beginning with his election to the Florida House of Representatives in 1928 at age 28.

He went to the Senate four years into the administration of President Franklin D. Roosevelt. Defeated for re-election in 1950, he taught and practiced law until his election in 1962 to the House from a Miami district.

Pepper, who early on perceived the threat posed by Adolf Hitler, earned Winston Churchill's undying affection for casting the only vote in the Senate for the Lend-Lease Act the first time around.

But his Senate career ended in 1950 after a campaign which saw him branded as "Red Pepper" — playing on claims during the communist scare of the era that he was soft on the Soviet Union.

Surgeon General Urges All-Out Drive On Alcohol Usage

WASHINGTON — A federal report on drunken driving released today calls for an all-out attack on alcohol consumption, including tax hikes on liquor and strict curbs on advertising that glamorizes drinking.

The report, written by a panel from five federal departments, would require anti-alcohol advertising to counter beer and wine commercials, ban the use of celebrities in beer and wine ads that appeal to youths and mandate the display of warning labels whenever a beer or wine container is shown on television. Radio and television stations generally do not carry hard liquor ads.

The nation's television and radio broadcasters attacked the report as an unwarranted infringement on the advertising of legal products.

The surgeon general's report also makes scores of other recommendations, among them a call for an end to sponsorship of athletic events and youth-oriented musical concerts by alcoholic beverage companies.

Surgeon General C. Everett Koop called a news conference for today to announce his plans for pushing the recommendations drawn up by the Surgeon General's Workshop on Drunk Driving last December. The workshop marked the start of a federal campaign to save the 25,000 lives lost each year because of drunken driving.

Participants in the workshop included representatives of the Defense, Education, Justice, Transportation and Health and Human Services departments, along with doctors, social workers, anti-drunken driving groups, law enforcement officers, lawyers, religious figures and others who deal with the problem.

The National Association of Broadcasters, in a prepared statement, took strong exception to some of the report's recommendations.

The broadcasters, along with representatives of the advertising industry, had refused to participate in the three-day workshop and also criticized it in December, saying it was an effort to "politicize the emotional tragedy of drunk driving."

Today's statement by NAB president Edward O. Fritts said: "Despite all scientific evidence finding no link between advertising and abuse, the surgeon general's report nonetheless would place restrictions on the right to advertise alcoholic beverages which are legal products." The organization represents 5,100 radio stations, 970 television stations and major networks.

Fritts said said broadcasters contribute $1 billion a year in airtime and community services against substance abuse.

In a letter sent Tuesday to 200 members of Congress, Fritts said the group would endorse some of Koop's recommendations. But he said the suggested advertising curbs are unwarranted. He said Koop's final report failed to consider hundreds of pages of material, including results of scientific studies, submitted by broadcasters and others after the workshop.

Among other recommendations in Koop's report are a ban of advertising of alcoholic products on college campuses and elimination of advertising that portrays activities that may be dangerous if combined with drinking.

Females, Minorities Still Missing From Required Reading In Schools

NEW YORK — High schools are requiring students to read almost exactly what they did 25 years ago: heavy on Shakespeare but light on works by female and minority authors, according to a survey.

Eighty-four percent of public high schools assign students "Romeo and Juliet," the tearful Shakespearean play that tops the list of required works, according to the nationwide survey by the Center for the Learning & Teaching of Literature at State University of New York at Albany.

But only one of the top 10 most frequently assigned works was by a female author — "To Kill A Mockingbird," by Harper Lee. No works were by minorities, according to the survey of 322 public schools, 80 Catholic schools and 86 private schools conducted last spring.

"I think the survey shows schools are still very much concerned with emphasizing good literature. They continue to assign classics complemented with modern and accessible works," said the survey's author, Arthur N. Applebee.

"At the same time, it's disturbing that there are essentially no books by minority authors working their way into the canons, and little representation of women."

Following "Romeo and Juliet," 81 percent of public high schools required "Macbeth." "Huckleberry Finn," the classic Mark Twain novel, was the third most assigned work, with 70 percent requiring it.

The rest of the top 10 were, in order, "Julius Caesar," by Shakespeare, "To Kill A Mockingbird," "The Scarlet Letter," by Nathaniel Hawthorne, "Of Mice and Men," by John Steinbeck, Shakespeare's "Hamlet," "The Great Gatsby," by F. Scott Fitzgerald, and "Lord of the Flies," by William Golding.

The most frequently assigned books by minority authors are Lorraine Hansberry's "A Raisin in the Sun," required in 19 percent of schools, and Richard Wright's "Black Boy," required by 7 percent, the survey found.

Applebee added, however, that commonly used high school literature anthologies frequently include works by minority and female authors.

The survey appeared to answer conservative critics who have lately accused schools of watering down curricula and retreating from the classics. Such charges gained currency in the recent best-sellers "The Closing of the American Mind" by Allan Bloom, and "Cultural Literacy," by E.D. Hirsch.

Helicopter Strikes Cable Car's Wires

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. — A sightseeing helicopter struck the wires supporting a moving cable car about 200 feet above the Niagara River, but no injuries were reported.

Canadian Aviation Safety Board teams were expected to arrive today to investigate Tuesday evening's accident, which occurred above the churning Whirlpool Rapids.

The Niagara Falls, N.Y.-based helicopter carrying three tourists and pilot Mark Felderstein passed within 250 feet of the Spanish Aero Car, struck the cables and sheared off its landing gear.

The impact swayed the cable car that was carrying 17 passengers, but it returned safely to its base. Felderstein landed the copter safely on a golf course.

Cable car tour guide Roger Barnsley said he noticed the low-flying craft for several minutes before the impact.

"I was thinking it was very odd for him to be flying down that low," Barnsley said. "Nobody's ever down that low."

"The next thing we know, there was this impact and the landing gear just shattered into a million pieces and dropped down into the gorge. It all happened in seconds."

Barnsley said the cable car swayed for perhaps a half-minute, but no one was in danger of being tossed from the open-air coach and no debris came near the car.

"I thought he (the helicopter pilot) was gone, but he pulled it back up. It was amazing he could control it so well," said Barnsley.

Felderstein piloted the craft about 100 yards inland to the Whirlpool Golf Complex and allowed the passengers to jump a few feet to the ground before the helicopter landed safely on the 10th fairway.

Scott B. Hughes, general manager of Rainbow Helicopter, said the 25-year-old Felderstein has been employed by the company for about four months and has three years' flying experience.

FBI Studying Pennsylvania Congressman's Staff

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Government sources say the FBI is looking into allegations of a no-show employee in the office of Rep. William H. Gray III, but the fourth-ranking House Democrat denied any wrongdoing and questioned the timing of news leaks about the probe.

FBI agents are conducting a preliminary inquiry into allegations dealing with personnel and expenditures in the office of the prominent Pennsylvania Democrat, said the sources, who spoke Tuesday night on condition of anonymity.

Gray, who is seeking the post of majority whip in a leadership shuffle that hinges on the expected resignation of House Speaker Jim Wright, denied at a news conference Tuesday night that he was a "target" or "subject" of a probe. He also disputed a televised report that he had declined to cooperate with agents in a criminal investigation.

The sources stressed that the FBI did not know whether its preliminary inquiry would lead to a full-scale criminal investigation, and said the purpose of a Memorial Day meeting with Gray was to advise him of the inquiry. One source said the allegations involved a "ghost employee."

Gray, the chairman of the House

Democrat Caucus, said two FBI agents from Philadelphia came to his home in Reston, Va., but he said, "I was told over and over again that I was not under investigation."

Gray said he was cryptically told only that "the bureau was looking into allegations about an employee or employees, and that they had been looking into these allegations for the past four to five months."

He said, "We pledged to provide any materials or documents to assist in this investigation."

Gray said he was asking Attorney General Dick Thornburgh today to initiate an independent counsel investigation to determine who leaked information about the FBI visit.

"All I can say to you and the American people is you be the judge as to the motives of the Justice Department leaks," Gray said. "You be the judge as to the timing. You be the judge as to what the agenda is."

Chief Justice Department spokesman David Runkel said he could not discuss "anything that has been reported about Mr. Gray or any of Mr. Gray's comments." In Philadelphia, Assistant U.S. Attorney Thomas H. Lee II also declined comment.

Gray replied "You bet!" in answer to question of whether he would still be seeking the majority whip position being vacated by Rep.

Tony Coelho, D-Calif. "I have done nothing wrong," Gray said.

Aides to Gray said privately that they were "in the dark" about nature of the FBI investigation, and that they had concocted a number of theories — including one that Gray might have been contacted in connection with an already existing probe on Capitol Hill, not a new one.

But the aides declined to elaborate, and Gray spokesman Jon Plebani said, "We don't know what to expect to happen next." After the news conference, Gray and his aides met in his office until after 11 p.m.

Gray, the highest ranking black in Congress, appeared on a CBS program Sunday and said he was confident the Democratic congressional leadership, recently rocked by ethical problems of Wright and a questionable financial deal involving Coelho, was headed for better times.

Coelho announced on Saturday that he will leave the House on June 15. Wright may resign possibly as early as today.

The pastor of a Baptist church that his father also led, Gray, 47, is a powerful political figure in his native Philadelphia, as well as in Washington.

He runs his campaign committee as a virtual bank for local Democratic candidates whom he supports. His 1988 committee reported loans of $25,000, $20,000 and $15,000 for three city council candidates, as well as a $15,000 loan to the re-election effort of Philadelphia Mayor Wilson Goode.

First elected to the House from one of the nation's most impoverished districts in 1978, Gray headed the House Budget Committee for four years before assuming the Democratic caucus post this year.

Congressman Hires His Live-In Girlfriend

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Rep. Robert Davis says his hiring of his girlfriend for a $28,000 a year job on the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee is ethically sound.

Davis, 56, R-Mich., acknowledged Tuesday he has been living with the 28-year-old staffer, Brook Ball, since earlier this year. Miss Ball was hired Jan. 1 on Davis' recommendation and he moved into her Virginia apartment in late January or early February, shortly after separating from his wife, Marty Davis.

"We checked with the ethics committee before we hired her to make sure there was nothing wrong with doing it," Davis said. "The answer was very clearly there is nothing wrong with it."

Disclosure of the relationship between Davis and Miss Ball prompted a flurry of accusations between the congressman and his wife of 12 years. The congressman has filed for divorce, and he and Mrs. Davis have been sparring in court over how much support he should be required to pay.

Davis accused his estranged wife of leaking the information to reporters in an effort to get more alimony in the divorce proceedings.

"She has threatened me on numerous occasions, ... saying, 'if I don't get what I want in the way of alimony, I'm going to go public with it.'"

Mrs. Davis, however, denied she was the source of the information and said she had never threatened the congressman or his staff.

"All I did was just warn them to try to keep him in check because he's going to hurt himself," she said. "I asked what can be done to stop this."

Davis presented the affair against the backdrop of a stormy marriage, with both party's dating while separated.

Mrs. Davis, however, said word of the affair caught her by surprise.

"I had no idea," she said. "He traveled so much, I didn't know what he was doing."

"Last spring I got calls from mutual friends asking me if I was OK," Mrs. Davis said. "I couldn't figure out why I was getting these phone calls."

Miss Ball and the congressman first dated in 1987 and had continued their relationship off and on until he began living in her apartment, Davis said. Miss Ball would not talk to reporters.

Davis made the information public after learning a newspaper planned a story on the affair, aides said.

"Brook has been up to my district, been with me down here. It is no secret," Davis said. "I have not tried to make it a secret."

Marine Chopper Crashes Off Okinawa; 14 Missing

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — A U.S. Marine helicopter crashed upside down into the sea during night training exercises off Okinawa, and 14 Marines were missing today and feared dead, U.S. military spokesmen said.

Authorities said eight other Marines on board the CH-46 Sea Knight helicopter, based in Kaneohe Bay, Hawaii, were rescued shortly after the 11:55 p.m. crash Tuesday about 30 miles south of Okinawa's Kadena Air Force base.

The names of the missing were withheld pending notification of next of kin, the Navy said. The cause of the accident was under investigation.

The Sea Knight helicopter had just taken off from the USS Denver, said Marine Master Sgt. Jake Rodriguez, spokesman for U.S. Forces, Japan.

Rodriguez said the helicopter, built in 1967, was carrying a crew of four and 18 soldiers assigned to the 2nd Battalion, 3rd Marine Regiment, Okinawa, for six months' training as part of a unit-rotation program.

In Washington, Marine Corps spokesman Lt. Col. Fred Peck said the helicopter "pitched over to the right and went into the water inverted, upside down. I have nothing to indicate why it did that."

Peck said the four injured men were being treated aboard the Denver, an amphibious transport vessel designed for amphibious assaults and capable of carrying up to six CH-46 helicopters.

Capt. Lenny Ryan, a Kaneohe Marine Corps Air Station spokesman, said the four suffered minor injuries.

"An investigation will be initiated immediately," Ryan said. "As soon as they're able to talk, we'll start getting information immediately so we can start trying to piece together what happened in this tragedy."

He said the pilot was not wearing night-vision goggles at the time of the accident.

The helicopter went down 9½ miles southeast of Kiyan Cape, said Nagatoshi Naruse, spokesman for the Maritime Safety Agency, Japan's coast guard. He said three Japanese aircraft and six Maritime Safety Agency patrol boats joined two U.S. vessels, including the Denver, and four U.S. aircraft in the search.

Another coast guard spokesman, Kazuhiro Sameshima, said the weather in the area was fair at the time of the crash, with waves about three feet high.

Okinawa, Japan's southernmost prefecture, has the highest concentration of Marines outside of the United States, the 20,000 Marines stationed there comprise about 10 percent of the corps.

Okinawa was under American administration from 1945 until it was turned over to the Japanese in 1972.

Carcasses Collected

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — Dead animals are piling up in refrigerated trailers on the coast as officials collect evidence of the vast damage caused by the oil spilled from the tanker Exxon Valdez.

The carcasses of 22,818 migratory birds, 733 sea otters and 51 birds of prey, most of them bald eagles, had been collected, tagged and stored by Tuesday at four coastal cities.

"It's a morbid milestone we have reached this week; more than two months after the oil spill from the Exxon Valdez, we are still counting its victims," said Walter Stieglitz, Alaska regional director of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

The gooey fingers of the spill have drifted more than 500 miles from Prince William Sound across the Gulf of Alaska and beyond Kodiak Island. About 11 million gallons of oil spilled from gashes in the Exxon Valdez when it ran aground March 24.

Davis said he escorted Miss Ball to an inaugural ball in January.

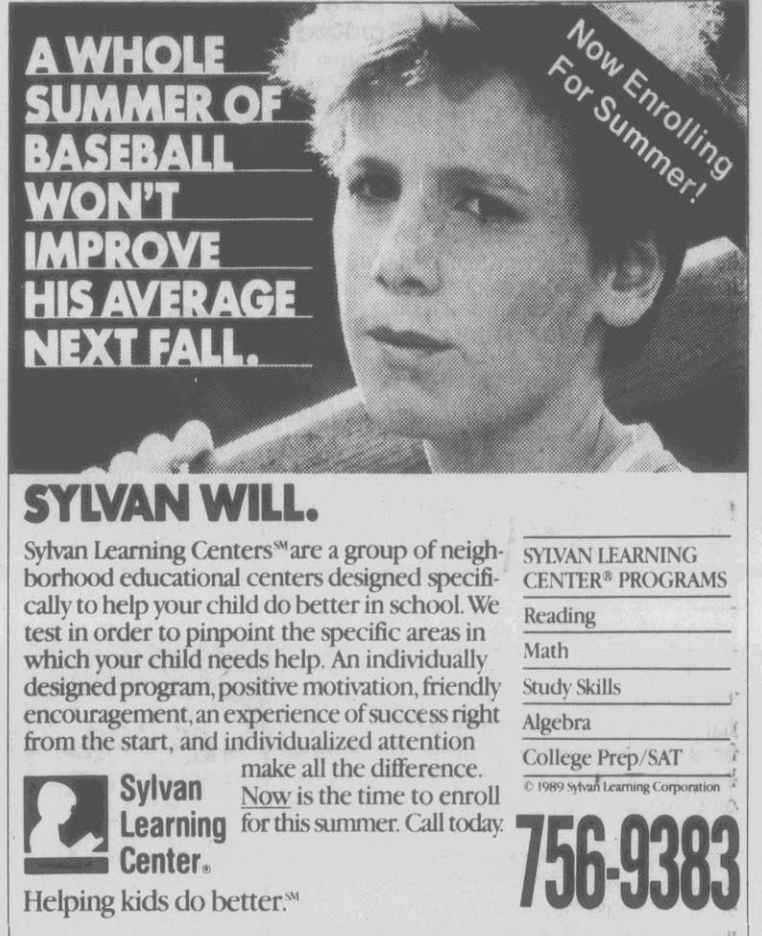

Miss Ball, who works for the committee's oversight and investigations subcommittee, reviews testimony and prepares questions and statements for Davis, said George Pence, the committee's Republican staff director. He said she has done excellent work.

Mrs. Davis, in the divorce proceedings, told a judge she needed $4,000 a month in support payments for herself and the couple's 5-year-old daughter. Davis has he can't afford to pay that much until $112,000 in joint debt has been paid.

Chinese Forced To Stage Rally

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
BEIJING — About 4,000 farmers, workers and students burned China's best-known dissident in effigy today in the first government-sponsored rally since the pro-democracy student movement began six weeks ago.
 The rally in Huangcun, 20 miles south of Beijing, came as Communist authorities pressed ahead with tactics aimed at intimidating and discrediting the 10,000 students occupying central Tiananmen Square.
 Several people said officials forced them to participate in the 40-minute rally in support of Premier Li Peng's hard-line policies.
 The demonstrators marched to an outdoor stadium carrying banners reading: "We support Li Peng" and "We oppose the small group causing turmoil." Many wore new straw hats provided by their work units.
 Li is the main target of protesters, who demand he resign for imposing martial law in Beijing on May 20 and ordering a crackdown on students and workers pressing for a freer China.
 The pro-government rally lacked the enthusiasm of the demonstrations in Beijing, in which hundreds of thousands of people have marched through the streets to demand such reforms as press freedom and an end to official corruption.

 Rally leaders burned an effigy of astrophysicist Fang Lizhi, an outspoken proponent of democracy, but they failed to stir the crowd.
 Few joined leaders in shouting slogans such as "Long live the Communist Party!" and "Down with Fang Lizhi!" Students responded to the slogans with giggles.
 "They told me to come, so I've come," said one 27-year-old peasant in the crowd.
 "To tell you the truth, we were forced to come," said an 18-year-old high school student. Some participants said they did not understand the purpose of the demonstration.
 The rallying farmers expressed support for the ruling Communist Party's "four principles," which include allegiance to the dictatorship of the proletariat, socialism, party rule and to Marxist-Leninist-Maoist thought.
 The Beijing Foreign Affairs Office informed foreign journalists of the march and several others in suburban sections of the capital. Martial law regulations that have been widely ignored forbid foreign reporters from covering student demonstrations.

Alfonsin Pressured To Step Down Early

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — The looting of groceries and rioting that have wracked Argentine cities for a week, claiming at least 11 lives, are putting pressure on lame-duck President Raul Alfonsin to step down early.
 Six more people were killed Tuesday and 70 wounded as troops sought to halt the looting, much of it by women driven desperate by the economic crisis.
 The country's largest labor coalition and most influential business group on Tuesday asked President-elect Carlos Menem to take office before Alfonsin's six-year term expires on Dec. 10.
 The crisis stems from Alfonsin's failure to combat the $59 billion foreign debt, a national budget deficit worsened by the many inefficient state companies and months of chronic inflation that could top 70 percent for May.

 The inflation has sparked layoffs, food and supply shortages and declining real wages that has left retirees living on the equivalent of $25 a month.
 "The country is dying of hunger. Factories are closing. People are unemployed," Adolfo Perez Esquivel, head of the human rights group Peace and Justice Service and the 1980 Nobel Peace Prize winner, said in an interview.
 Alfonsin's on Monday declared a state of siege, suspending civil liberties, but the looting of groceries continued in this country that is among the world's largest grain and beef exporters.

Uno Picked To Lead Japan

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
TOKYO — Bucking stubborn resistance, leaders of the scandal-ridden governing party decided today to go ahead with their choice of Foreign Minister Sosuke Uno as the next prime minister, and he accepted, a party official said.
 Elders who opposed Uno or tried to have the Liberal Democrats adopt a more collective leadership were told the decision to back Uno was final, said an official who spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity.
 Kyodo News Service quoted unnamed party sources as saying four top party leaders had met and approved outgoing Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita's choice of the 66-year-old Uno as his successor.

 Uno, in Paris attending international conferences, agreed in a telephone call to take the difficult job of party head and government leader after expressing some reluctance, Ryutaro Hashimoto, deputy party secretary general, told a news conference.
 "I am not confident I can handle the job when the party is facing such a difficult time," Hashimoto quoted Uno as telling him. "But now that the party is in an unprecedented crisis, I will commit myself for the party."

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was slightly higher in moderate trading today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was up 2.94 points to 2,478.49 after 30 minutes of trading at 10 a.m. EDT.

Volume and declining issues were running neck and neck on the New York Stock Exchange, with 459 issues up, 455 down and 510 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 26.65 million shares.

The Commerce Department reported today that the Index of Leading Economic Indicators jumped 0.8 percent in April after posting declines in the previous two months.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks was up 0.21 to 178.32.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 0.02 at 354.43.

On Tuesday, the Dow Jones industrial average fell 18.22 points to 2,475.55.

Declining issues outperformed advances on the NYSE by a margin of about 5 to 3 with 917 down, 559 up and 490 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 151.78 million shares, up slightly from 143.12 million in Friday's session.

Body Found

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A man wind surfing Tuesday on Lake Norman found the body of a Belmont sailor lost May 6 when his sailboat overturned in high waves and winds.

The body of Bob Curtis, 44, who ran a painting and wallpapering company, was floating in the middle of Torrence Creek, said Scott Kilpatrick, lake patrol officer for the Iredell County Sheriff's department.

Paul Williams found the body about noon and called Mecklenburg County officials.

Guilty Plea

GREENSBORO (AP) — A 25-year-old car salesman pleaded guilty Tuesday in Guilford County Superior Court to 14 felonies involving assaults on three women.

Michael Cox of Asheboro faces up to 120 years in prison. Cox contends that it was his heavy use of cocaine that drove him into a sexual frenzy and spurred the attacks.

Cox admitted to police that he assaulted or tried to assault the three Greensboro women. In each case, he said he had been using cocaine and drinking alcohol before the assault.

The three victims — ages 24, 27 and 33 — recounted the assaults Tuesday in sometimes tearful testimony.

reviewed, and it fully complied in the collection category. It also was cited for its professional, courteous and cooperative staff.

A plan to correct the deficiencies must be submitted to the state within 60 days.

Peggy Chandler, social work program administrator, said the plan would be developed once the department knows if Pitt County commissioners will fund the three positions being requested in its 1989-90 budget.

Ms. Chandler presented the proposal for a state grant under the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act to establish a social worker II position in the Family and Children Services unit. An employee in that position would respond to incidents as they relate to children and their medical needs.

Board attorney Ed Harper told the board that the Eastern Carolina Exchange Club and its workers could be considered as agents of the social services department, which would be liable for any negligence.

The board is considering entering into an agreement with the club to support the work of an Exchange Child Abuse Prevention Center.

The center would work with self-referred and DSS-referred parents of children deemed to be in need of child protective services.

Because liability may come from negligent placement as well as negligent supervision, Harper suggested that all persons connected with the center meet minimal training and certification requirements approved by the local DSS and perhaps the state Department of Human Resources.

He also suggested that the DHR specifically approve the agreement with the center, and that the county's liability insurance carrier specifically commit to coverage of any incidents related to the performance of the contract.

Ms. Chandler presented the board with copies of a bill passed in the state House of Representatives that allows the court to consider whether a parent should be required to undergo medical, psychiatric, psychological or other treatment as a condition of custody.

The bill, proposed by the county board to area legislators, is being sponsored by Rep. Walter B. Jones Jr. of Farmville.

The board agreed to continue its membership in the Association of County Board of Social Services, and it reviewed the status of agency personnel.

Ms. Chandler presented information about the Pitt County Wellness Program, and the board held an executive session to consider administrative overpayment cases.

Fungus Disease In Pamlico Spreads Into Pungo River

By J. Ward Best
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

State officials said today a fungal disease has caused a massive fish kill along the Pamlico River, and now spread to the Pungo River.

Lorraine Shinn, regional manager of the northeast regional office of the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, said fish kills of menhaden, a small feeder fish, have been spotted in the Pamlico since Thursday.

And dead fish have recently been reported along a five-to seven-mile stretch of the Pungo, Ms. Shinn said.

"All the fish we've seen are all menhaden," she said, "and all of them are diseased."

Ms. Shinn blamed the fish kill on ulcerative mycosis, a fungal disease that causes large sores on the outside of the fish.

She said she could only offer a conservative estimate of "hundreds of thousands" of dead menhaden spotted since Thursday.

So far, the reported area of the fish kill covers reaches up the Pamlico to within 10 miles of Washington, N.C., and from the mouth of the Pungo to Woodstock Point five miles upstream.

"It's big," Ms. Shinn said.

According to Dr. Ed Noga with the North Carolina State University School of Medicine, the disease often causes high mortality rates in menhaden and can also infect sport fish such as bass, flounder, sea trout, red fish, spot and croaker.

Noga, who is leading a study project of the disease, said ulcerative mycosis has appeared in the spring and fall each year since the first incidents in 1984. But he said the early appearance of the disease this year bodes ill for fish along the coastal waterways.

"It's showing up with a vengeance," Noga said. "Eighty-nine looks like it may be a really bad year."

Both Noga and Ms. Shinn said they could not say for certain if the ulcers on the fish are harmful to humans. But Ms. Shinn said none of the fish other than menhaden had been reported dead.

Noga said, "It can have a serious effect on the reputation of fish from the Pamlico River."

Water quality factors in the Pamlico River, such as salinity and oxygen content, appeared normal earlier this week, Ms. Shinn said.

Noga said the cause of the disease was still unknown, but he said environmental factors were the primary suspects.

Ulcerative mycosis peaks in the late spring and early fall, Noga said. When fish contract the disease, large, deep sores appear. "The ulcers look like a fish took a bite out of them," Noga said. "It's not a pretty sight."

Ms. Shinn said Natural Resources has set up a toll-free number to report fish kills to the office in Washington, N.C. Any sightings of dead fish should be reported to 1-800-338-7804.

Bush Calls For 'Free' Europe

Minister Margaret Thatcher. Bush's NATO proposals for cut-backs in conventional East-West troop levels and armaments drew another positive response from Soviet officials today.

Gennady Gerasimov, spokesman for the Soviet foreign ministry, said on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" that "we ask for a timeout to study it, but the initial reaction is positive."

The central theme of the Mainz speech was a call for freedom and democracy for all of Europe.

"In the East, brave men and women are showing us the way," Bush said.

"Look at Poland, where Solidarity and the Catholic Church have won legal status. The forces of freedom are putting the Soviet status quo on the defensive."

"In the West, we have succeeded because we have been faithful to our values and our vision. But, on the other side of the rusting Iron Curtain, their vision failed."

He said that nowhere is the division between East and West more obvious than in Berlin, where Communist authorities erected a wall of concrete and barbed wire in 1961 in an effort to halt the flow of refugees to the West.

"There, a brutal wall cuts neighbor from neighbor and brother from brother," Bush said. "That wall stands as a monument to the failure of communism. It must come down."

He issued that challenge as part of a series of proposals "to help Europe become whole and free."

Bush said Berlin should become a center of commerce and cooperation instead of confrontation.

"Bring glasnost to East Berlin," he declared.

Bush said the West and East should cooperate to foster free elections in Eastern Europe, and he offered Western technical training and other steps to help the East cope with environmental problems.

Soviets

Yeltsin said the Soviet leader had been given "extraordinary powers" in the political overhaul that created the Congress, and he suggested Gorbachev might be tempted, as past Kremlin chiefs have, to abuse his power.

Gorbachev, obviously sensitive to such charges, promised Congress before he was elected last week that he never would take advantage of the increased power of the presidency.

But Yeltsin warned, "We can again be... under a new totalitarian regime, under a new dictatorship."

Yeltsin, fired from his job as Moscow party chief in 1987 for criticizing the pace of Gorbachev's reforms, called on Congress to abolish "all unlawful privileges for the Nomenklatura — yes, and in general, strike this word from our lexicon."

"Nomenklatura" refers to the party and government elite, who receive special privileges as a result of their positions or those of their families.

Hunt Stuns Rampants, 9-0

Warriors End Rose's Title Hopes With Shutout Win

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

After Rose High School and Wilson Hunt were involved in two shutout baseball games during the regular season, maybe it wasn't that surprising that they played another shutout Tuesday night in the state quarterfinals of the 4-A Baseball Playoffs.

What was surprising was that Hunt, a 10-0 and 2-0 loser during the regular season, completely shut down the Rampants, handing USA Today's nationally fifth-ranked team a 9-0 shutout.

And it was no fluke. Hunt totally dominated Rose. Left-handed pitcher Chris Davis, who was on the losing end of the 10-0 game, allowed only three hits, walked but two and struck out eight as he kept the Rampants off stride with a moving fast ball and a curve that left them swinging at air.

"We played a team on a roll to-night," Coach Ronald Vincent said of the Warriors. "Everything they did tonight was right and everything we did was wrong."

Prior to the game, Hunt coach Russell Williamson said that he thought Hunt had to accomplish three things in order to win: keep Timmy Moore off base, play good defense and get the key hits with men on base.

And that's exactly what the Warriors did. Moore got on two out of three times, but no one behind him could keep things going. Hunt made only one error and a key outfield play helped erase that, and, most importantly, the Warriors got the hits.

"They would hit two or three little infield hits, then come up with the big hit," Vincent said.

All told, Hunt had 12 hits, five of them in the infield. Rose played good defense throughout the game, but it seemed that they were just inches away from making an outstanding play each time.

"Our guys have really come along," Williamson said. "We are hitting the ball well in the playoffs; hitting it better than at any time in the season. The guys have cut down on their swings and are trying to hit it to the opposite field when they get the chance. They're concentrating on making contact and luckily for us the balls went into the holes."

After three scoreless innings, Hunt finally broke the ice in the third, scoring for the first time in three games against the Rampants. With one out, T.J. Lewis drew a walk from starting pitcher Walter Gatlin. Angelo Cox then beat out a slow roller down the third base line. Dewey Scott followed with a single to right center, driving in Lewis with the first Warrior run. Marquis Spell added a hit into the hole at short, scoring Cox. Donald Barnes reached on a fielder's choice and both he and courtesy runner Richard Keely scored when Shannon Davis doubled to right center, making it 4-0.

In the bottom of the inning, Hunt came up with a defensive play that may have been the back-breaker for the Rampants. With one out, Heath Clark reached on an error. He then stole second and, when the ball was overthrown there, raced on toward third. But center fielder Spell scooped up the ball and fired a strike to his brother Quincey Spell at third for the tag.

Moore followed that up with what would have been a run-scoring hit.

"That was an excellent play for us," Williamson said. "We didn't want to let them get that hitting machine going."

"It was a big play," Vincent said. "I really thought that he could make it (to third)."

Hunt then came back to collect three more runs in the fourth. Jamie Brewington, who had come on in relief of Gatlin gave up a slow rolling single to short by Quincey Spell and a bunt single to Jay Gunter. Both then moved up on a wild pitch and scored on a single to center by Cox, who then stole second. Scott picked up another infield hit and with two away, Barnes singled to center, driving in both Spell and Gunter.

In the seventh, Lewis punctuated the win by hitting a towering two-run homer to climax Hunt's scoring parade. He drove in pinch-runner Chad Davis, who had come on for John Bunn who had singled.

The hero of the game was obviously Davis, however, who did what no one else has done this year, shut down the Rampants.

"Everything worked well for me tonight," he said. "My curve ball

Hunt's Chris Davis fires as he shuts out Rose, 9-0

Woody Peele

Baseball Notebook:

There's no question that it's a frustrating experience. And for Rose High School, it's doubly...no...triple frustrating. For the third time in three years, Rose High School's Rampants went through an outstanding regular season only to see things fall apart for them in the State 4-A Playoffs.

Two years ago, Rose won the Big East conference, losing just three times during the regular season, twice in the league. They advanced to the Eastern finals before losing a heart-breaker to Raleigh Broughton. Broughton went on to win the state championship the following week.

Last year, the Rampants were unbeaten through the regular season and went all the way to the state championship series. But there, their luck ran out on them and despite leading in all three games, they lost twice to Charlotte Harding, again seeing the title elude them.

This year, Rose posted another unbeaten regular season and made it through the playoffs to the third round, the state quarterfinals. But Tuesday night, Wilson Hunt, a team the Rampants had beaten twice during the regular season, played a super game and again, Rose's dreams ended, this time in a shocking 9-0 decision.

"There's no way I'm going to let one game ruin what these guys have done in the last two years," Coach Ronald Vincent said after it was over.

And he's totally right.

No baseball program in the state has accomplished what Rose has in the last three seasons — two unbeaten regular seasons — and three trips into the state playoffs.

"The seniors on this team are 72-7," Vincent pointed out. "That's some accomplishment."

Considering that only three of those losses occurred during the past two years, it's even more of an accomplishment.

All year long, Rose's pitching was somewhat suspect and it began to tell on Friday against Wilmington Hoggard. Rose blew a 6-0 lead and nearly the game when walks began to add up.

Before that game was over, Rose had used all three of its pitchers, Jamie Brewington, Maurice Hines and Walter Gatlin.

That left them in a quandary as to who to use Tuesday night. Vincent chose Gatlin because "he was the freshest."

But Hunt got to him in the third inning, chasing him for Brewington. Brewington then gave way to Hines in the fifth. All three gave up runs.

Meanwhile, Hunt's Chris Davis threw a lifetime game against Rose. He scattered only three hits against the usually powerful Rampants, struck out eight and walked but two. Only once in the game did Rose have more than one baserunner on, and only one reached as far as third base.

Vincent said he thought perhaps the team didn't play as well in the final few weeks of the year. Rose struggled in a couple of regular season games toward the end and again against Hoggard.

But nothing can take away what the Rampants have done over the years. "We beat an outstanding team," Hunt coach Russell Williamson said. "Tonight was just our night."

Every team but one which makes the playoffs will see its season end in frustration. That's just the way the playoffs work.

Like the old Brooklyn Dodgers, Rose must wait until next year. And, things being what they are, they'll probably be back in the playoffs, striving for that title, once more.

Coach Robert Langston reacts as Heath Clark is out at third Heel Secret: Basic Baseball

By Tom Foreman Jr.
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — North Carolina heads into the NCAA baseball championships in Omaha, Neb., starting Friday with a stout pitching staff and a lean batting average.

"We've turned one of our boyhood dreams into a reality," outfielder Tom Nevin said. "It's nice to get a ticket to the main event, but we don't want to leave with just a ticket stub. We want to bring back a trophy."

Coach Mike Roberts says North Carolina, 41-16, is going to the College World Series because it relies on the simplest baseball principles.

"I think it's a team that, if you are a knowledgeable baseball fan, you would look at and say 'How are they winning,'" Roberts said in a telephone interview Tuesday. "But this team goes back to basic baseball philosophy. The best teams win on pitching and defense."

The Tar Heels are led by unbeaten pitchers John Thoden, 12-0, and Brad Woodall, 6-0. North Carolina also has an earned run average of 3.10. But at the plate, the Tar Heels are hitting .259 with only 34 home runs.

Roberts said it took a victory over Arizona in the recent Carolina Invitational tournament to finally convince them that they could use their strong points with the so-called national powers.

"We didn't have any trouble with it, but until you do it on the field, mentally you're not sure," Roberts said. "I think that was the big game for us."

To get to the College World Series, North Carolina's offense had to overcome temporary power failure in a 6-0 loss to Mississippi State in the South Regional in Starkville, Miss., the home of the Bulldogs. Thoden came through in the decisive night game, throwing a complete-game six-hitter as North Carolina took a 7-1 victory before approximately 10,000 Mississippi State fans.

"They knew they were going to have trouble scoring, but John got them out. We also played tremendous defense," Roberts said.

"Our team had the attitude that the only people who felt like Carolina could win were the 22 players, the coaches and the others in the party. Nobody else felt we could win," Roberts said.

"When we arrived in Starkville, they (Mississippi State) were being compared with PARIS — Natalia Zvereva, last year's beaten finalist, returned to the Center Court at the French Open today and crumbled again on the dusty red clay as Raffaella Reggi rallied to beat her 3-6, 7-6, 6-2 in the tournament's first major upset.

The No. 3 women's seed from the Soviet Union, blanked 6-0, 6-0 by Steffi Graf on her last visit to Roland Garros' main show court, slumped to a dramatic first-round defeat against her Italian opponent.

Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia, the men's top seed and favorite, battled through a one-hour opening set before beating Patrick Kuhnen 7-6, 6-3, 6-1 in the opening Center Court match of second-day action.

Joining the 29-year-old three-time champion in the second round was Boris Becker. The West German looked like the perfect clay-court player as he abandoned the trademark serve-and-volley style that reaped two Wimbledon championships to whip Jim Pugh of the United States 6-4, 6-2, 6-3.

Zvereva, the No. 3 seed, seemed to be heading for a routine first-round success against Reggi as she led 6-3, 5-2, needing only one more game.

Then Reggi, the world's 29th-ranked player, staged a remarkable comeback.

First, the Italian fought her way to 5-5, then rallied from 4-2 down in the tiebreaker to square the match after Zvereva was warned for wasting time as she protested about a line call.

In the decider, Zvereva struggled to 2-2 but then caved in and didn't win another game on the Center Court at Roland Garros where she was blanked 6-0, 6-0 by Steffi Graf in last year's championship match.

"I knew that if I didn't win it in two sets, I wouldn't last in the third. My physical condition is not good enough," Zvereva said.

The 18-year-old Soviet player said her poor results over the past few weeks, including today's upset, were partly the result of a dispute with her national tennis federation over prize money.

"It's a major thing for an 18-year-old girl to do," Zvereva said, referring to her demands to keep the majority of her earnings instead of handing them over to Soviet officials.

She said she would hold a news conference in Paris during the remainder of the French Open to talk about the issue, which she said had affected her mental state.

Reggi said it was the biggest win of her career, even ahead of her defeat of Chris Evert at the Seoul Olympics.

"I've been working really hard on my game in the last two weeks and it paid off," the Italian said.

Jenkins On ABCA-Converse All-Star Team

East Carolina junior pitcher Jonathan Jenkins has been named to the American Baseball Coaches Association-Converse East Region All-Star Team.

Jenkins, a junior from Culpeper, Va., was 12-3 this year with a 2.04 earned run average for the Pirates, who finished in second place in the Colonial Athletic Association regular season race before winning the conference tournament.

Steve Schwartz of James Madison was the only other CAA player chosen to the squad's first team. Villanova, runnerup at the recent NCAA East Regional in Gainesville, Fla., placed three members on the first team.

The Wildcats eliminated ECU, 10-6, May 26, en route to the regional championship game against Miami.

Two other ECU players, pitcher Jake Jacobs and first baseman Calvin Brown, were named to the second team.

ABCA East Region All-Star Teams: First Team — Joe Ross (C) George Washington; Frank Matrone (1B) Villanova; Lenny Richardson (2B) Delaware; Steve Schwartz (2B) James Madison; Steve O'Donnell (3B) LaSalle; Kevin Cain (OF) Villanova; Mark Ozoroski (SS) Rutgers; Joe Cerasi (OF) Rider; Tom Nuneviller (OF) West Chester; Gene Schall (DH) Villanova; Jonathan Jenkins (P) ECU; Carl Majeski (P) Temple.

Youth Track Program To Begin

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department will begin its Youth Track Program, associated with the National Hershey Track Program, on Thursday at the Aycock track from 3:30 p.m. until 5 p.m.

The program is open to boys and girls, ages 9 to 15. Fundamentals of the various events in a track meet (no hurdles, discus, shot put, or pole vault) will be demonstrated and practiced. Coaches are James Rankin and Dennis Gibson, with Rose High School.

A regional track meet, with qualifiers for the state meet, will be held in late June. This program will meet each Thursday. Contact Alonza Price, Recreation Supervisor, at 830-4548 for more information; register at the track. There is no fee.

GTA Captures Mahogany Award

The Greenville Tennis Association won the team award for the Mahogany Fourth Annual Closed Tennis Classic held Memorial weekend in Rocky Mount.

GTA won the team championship with 34 points. Ebony Racquet Club of Raleigh was second with 29 points. GTA has won the team championship three of the four years the Mahogany Classic has been in existence.

There were approximately 100 participants in the five events. GTA had 15 members to participate in the tournament. Ty Myers was champion of ladies singles. Marvin Hardy was a finalist in men singles. Marvin and Ty were champions of mixed doubles. Bobby Short and Ben Johnson were finalists in men doubles.

GTA will visit the Ebony Racquet Club June 4 for a team match. GTA members also will participate in the USTA/VOLVO state playoffs June 9-11 in Greensboro.

Three Locals Among Triathlon Winners

Three Greenville athletes were first place divisional winners in the Nelson Bay Challenge Sprint Triathlon held this past weekend at Sea Level.

The race included a 750-meter swim, a 20-kilometer bike ride and a 5-kilometer run.

Edward Chaffin of Greenville was the winner of the men's 19-year-old event, clocked in 1:19.59. Barry Scott, also of Greenville, was the winner of the 20-29 age group, with a time of 1:03.24.

Eva O'Neal of Greenville took first place in the women's age 20-29 age division with a time of 1:23.53.

John Payne of Durham was the overall men's winner with a time of 1:00.36, while Val Hardin of Cary was the women's champion, clocked in 1:13.45.

The event will be held again next year on May 5. Proceeds from the event benefit the Sea Level Hospital and Extended Care Facility.

Ex-UNC Star Doherty Joins Davidson Staff

DAVIDSON, N.C. (AP) — Former North Carolina basketball player Matt Doherty has been named an assistant basketball coach at Davidson.

Doherty will join his former high school coach, Bob McKillop, who was named the Wildcats' head basketball coach earlier this month.

Doherty was a member of three New York state championship teams when he played for McKillop at Lutheran High School in Brookville, N.Y. He was a starter on North Carolina's national championship team in 1982, which included Michael Jordan, Sam Perkins, and James Worthy.

"I've always thought about being a basketball coach," Doherty said. "I'm excited about the opportunity to work with someone I respect in Coach McKillop at a school with such a great reputation."

Doherty will begin work immediately with the Wildcats, and will focus his effort this summer on recruiting.

"I'm thrilled to be reunited with Matt Doherty," McKillop said. "His life is the story of a winner."

Baker Racing Team Cans Sacks

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Less than a week after winning the pole for the Champion Filter 300 at Charlotte Motor Speedway, Greg Sacks has been relieved as driver with the Baker-Schiff Racing team.

"Sometimes in racing, like in other sports, combinations just don't work, and this is one of those times," team co-owner Buddy Baker told The Charlotte Observer on Tuesday. "Our combo wasn't getting the job done."

Sacks could not be reached for comment.

The newspaper said Jimmy Spencer was expected to drive for the Baker-Schiff team this weekend at Dover (Del.) Downs, where the Budweiser 200 will be run on Saturday and the Budweiser 500 on Sunday.

Spencer recently moved to Mooresville to become a Busch Series regular and won this season at Hickory.

Sacks, 36, won the pole for last Saturday's 300-mile race at Charlotte with a speed of 167.214 mph. But he missed the pre-race drivers' meeting and under NASCAR rules had to start at the rear of the field. He finished 22nd after his car's engine failed.

Sacks started 19th in Sunday's Coca-Cola 600, but wrecked on the 320th of 400 laps and finished 30th.

A former New England modified division champion, Sacks joined Baker-Schiff for the final seven races of 1988, taking over after an injury forced Baker to quit driving. He got the ride fulltime for 1989.

Sacks' best finish was a seventh place in the Valledale 500 at Bristol (Tenn.) Raceway, an event it appeared he might win before yellow flags late in the race gave rivals the advantage.

Abbott Hurls California To Win

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

American League opponents are starting to talk more about Jim Abbott's left arm than his right hand.

Abbott won his third straight start, limiting Milwaukee to two hits over seven innings in California's 3-2 victory Tuesday night. The only hits off the rookie, born with a deformed right hand, were singles by Rob Deer in the first and Charlie O'Brien in the second.

"The only handicap I saw was us trying to hit the son-of-a-gun," Brewers manager Tom Trebelhorn said. "He shut us out. It speaks for itself. We had two hits and both of them were broken bats."

Abbott, 5-3, has a 1.69 earned-run average in his last three outings. But he still must put up with constant questions about his handicap.

"Maybe if I get through the league one time and prove that pitching is the reason I'm here, maybe the questions will stop," he said.

Elsewhere in the American League, it was Seattle 3, New York 2; Baltimore 6, Texas 2; Oakland 4, Boston 2; Cleveland 6, Toronto 2; Detroit 10, Chicago 3, and Minnesota 7, Kansas City 1.

Abbott was replaced by Greg Minton after walking the first two batters in the eighth. Minton gave up a two-run single to Robin Yount, but retired the next three Brewers to end the inning and Bob McLure pitched the ninth for his first save.

"I don't know if it was the weather or not, but the shoulder got a little tight and a little sore," Abbott said.

Claudell Washington's sixth homer gave the Angels a 1-0 lead in the first off Bryan Clutterbuck, 2-2. Jack Howell's RBI double in the fourth and Johnny Ray's run-scoring single in the seventh made it 3-0.

Benches emptied in the fifth shortly after Gus Polidor was hit by an Abbott pitch. When Polidor reached third on a sacrifice and a groundout, Trebelhorn ran across the field and got into a heated argument with California manager Doug Rader. Players ran onto the field and the managers had to be restrained, but no punches were thrown.

"It was a 2-0 game and I wasn't trying to hit anybody in that situation," Abbott said.

Mariners 3, Yankees 2

Ken Griffey Jr. hit two home runs and Randy Johnson won his debut with Seattle.

Griffey hit a solo homer in the second and a two-run shot in the sixth off Jimmy Jones, who also made his American League debut. Seven of Griffey's nine home runs have tied games or put Seattle ahead.

Johnson, 1-0, was acquired along with pitchers Brian Holman and Greg Harris from Montreal last Thursday for left-hander Mark Langston. The 6-foot-10 Johnson, 0-4 with Montreal in six starts, allowed two runs and six hits in six innings. He struck out six and walked three.

Orioles 6, Rangers 2

Phil Bradley drove in two runs with a seventh-inning single and the Orioles scored twice on Texas throwing errors for their sixth win in seven games.

Reliever Mark Williamson, 2-2, pitched 3 1-3 shutout innings to pick up the victory. Gregg Olson struck out the final two batters for his fourth save.

Texas starter Jamie Moyer, 3-5, gave up three runs on three hits before straining his left shoulder in the fourth inning and being replaced by Gary Mielke.

Athletics 4, Red Sox 2

Dave Stewart became the American League's first nine-game winner and Dave Parker homered and drove in three runs for Oakland.

Stewart, 9-2, gave up 10 hits and two runs in seven innings. Rick Honeycutt finished for his fourth save.

Lance Blankenship had three hits and an RBI for Oakland, while Parker drove in runs with a homer, a sacrifice fly and a double. Boston starter Mike Smithson, 2-4, gave up 10 hits and three runs in 4 2-3 innings.

Boston's Dwight Evans hit his seventh home run in the sixth.

Indians 6, Blue Jays 2

Pete O'Brien capped a five-run fifth inning with a two-run homer and John Farrell broke a personal four-game losing streak.

Farrell, 3-5, pitched a five-hitter for his first victory since a near no-hitter on May 4. He retired the last 13 Toronto batters and finished with seven strikeouts as the Indians won their third straight.

Toronto's Alex Sanchez, 0-1, was the loser in his second major league start. The Blue Jays took a 2-0 lead in the fifth on RBI singles by Ernie Whitt and Rob Ducey, but the Indians rallied for five runs in the bottom of the inning.

Twins 7, Royals 1

Wally Backman had three hits and two RBIs and the Twins scored all their runs in the second inning to halt Kansas City's five-game winning streak.

Kirby Puckett and Jim Dwyer also had three hits each for the Twins, who had 15 hits off four Royals pitchers.

Stan Clarke had trouble in his first major league start. He couldn't get anyone out in the second inning and was charged with all seven runs.

Roy Smith, 4-2, gave up eight hits and struck out four in his first complete game since 1985. Smith had failed to get an out in his previous start last Friday against Texas.

Tigers 10, White Sox 3

Keith Moreland hit a three-run homer and Lou Whitaker had a two-run shot as the Tigers handed the White Sox their eighth consecutive home defeat.

Moreland also had an RBI groundout, while Whitaker added a run-scoring single.

the '85 team," Roberts said in reference to the Bulldog team that included Rafael Palmeiro, currently the leading hitter in the American League, Will Clark, the National League's leading hitter, and Chicago White Sox reliever Bobby Thigpen.

And, there was more heat on the Bulldogs than they might have wanted to admit, Roberts said.

"This was their third year in a row to host a regional. I think there was a lot of pressure on them to win it and get to Omaha," he said. "Maybe it was an advantage for us to play there and a disadvantage to them."

Now comes the big show, the second trip to Omaha for Roberts. The key this time, in addition to the pitching and defense, is how his team's nerves hold up.

"They've been very businesslike all year," he said. "I believe that will continue, but you've still got to factor in a lot of human nature. They're going to be nervous."

Heels Facing FSU

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Florida State and North Carolina will open the College World Series on Friday, followed by Wichita State against Arkansas.

The Seminoles, seeded first, carry a 52-16 record into the double elimination tournament. The Tar Heels, seeded eighth, are 41-16-1.

Wichita State, 63-15, is seeded fourth in the tournament, while Arkansas, 50-14, is fifth.

On Saturday, No. 2 Texas, 51-17, takes on No. 7 Long Beach State, 50-13. Then, No. 3 Miami, Fla., 48-16, faces No. 6 Louisiana State, 52-15.

The tournament runs through June 10. ESPN will televise all games except the final, which will be on CBS.

Giants' Duo Wreaking Havoc On NL

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ruth and Gehrig. Mays and McCovey. Mantle and Maris. Now, Mitchell and Clark. Kevin Mitchell and Will Clark swung their big bats again Tuesday night, each hitting three-run homers that sent the San Francisco Giants over the New York Mets 10-3 for their fifth straight victory. Mitchell leads the majors with 15 homers and 47 runs batted in. Clark leads the National League with a .368 average with 10 homers and 42 RBI. Mitchell had been in a 3-for-24 slump and took pregame batting practice for the first time in nearly a month. Then, the Giants took batting practice against the Mets. "I felt that my hands were getting slow and my timing was getting off," he said. "But I've got a man in front of me that can carry the ball. If I can't do the job, he can." Mike Krukow improved to 22-7 lifetime against the Mets. San Francisco leads the West by two games over Cincinnati while New York lost its fourth straight game and fell to 24-24. "We're certainly better than a .500 club, but we're not even playing that good," Mets manager Davey Johnson said. "I think we've really hit rock-bottom — but I've said that before." In other games, Montreal rallied past Los Angeles 5-4, San Diego beat Philadelphia 9-3, Houston downed St. Louis 8-4, Chicago got past Atlanta 3-2 and Pittsburgh defeated Cincinnati 2-0. Ernest Riles also hit a three-run homer for San Francisco. The Giants lead the majors with 43 home runs and hit three in a game for the first time this season. "We're playing our best when we need to be," Giants manager Roger Craig said. "When you get home runs from your third-, fourth- and fifth-place hitters, it makes it a lot easier for you." The Giants got 14 hits, seven for extra bases. Clark got two hits with runners in scoring position and is batting 21-for-48 (.437) in those situations this season. "Will is just unbelievable. When the game is on the line and we need a hit, he handles it as well as anybody I've ever seen," Craig said. Krukow, 4-2, gave up three runs in 5 1-3 innings. David Cone dropped to 3-4 after going 20-3 last season. Mitchell connected off Cone in the third for a 3-1 lead. Clark homered against Terry Leach for a 7-3 margin in the sixth and Riles homered in the eighth off Roger McDowell. The Expos slipped to 2-6 on their West Coast trip with one game left in San Francisco. Hitting, rather than pitching, has been the biggest problem. "Our pitchers can only hold them so long, and they've done a good job," said rookie Gregg Jefferies, now batting just .187. Expos 5, Dodgers 4. Pinch hitter Mike Aldrete's sacrifice fly capped a four-run rally in the ninth inning and lifted Montreal over Los Angeles. The Angels, held to three hits for eight innings by Tim Belcher, opened the top of the ninth with singles by Tom Foley, Andres Galarraga and Tim Raines. Jay Howell, 9-for-9 in previous save chances, was met by Hubie Brooks' run-scoring single. Tim Wallach followed with a sacrifice fly and Mike Fitzgerald's tied it with an RBI single, chasing Howell, 2-3. Aldrete, batting for Spike Owen, greeted Ray Searage with a fly ball that scored the go-ahead run.

Joe Hesketh, 4-1, got the victory, the Expos' ninth in their last 11 road games. Tim Burke finished for his 11th save. Belcher struck out a career-high 12 and had retired 14 consecutive batters going into the ninth. Astros 8, Cardinals 4. Ken Caminiti homered and drove in five runs as Houston continued to win away from the Astrodome. The Astros have won a team-record nine straight on the road, and five straight overall. Caminiti hit a two-run homer, a two-run double and an RBI single. He set career highs for hits and RBI. Danny Darwin, 4-1, got the victory. Scott Terry, 4-4, took the loss. Caminiti's fourth home run broke a 2-all tie in the seventh. Tom Brunansky hit a two-run homer for St. Louis, his fifth of the season and first since May 10. Pirates 2, Reds 0. Doug Drabek shut out Cincinnati for 8 1-3 innings and Randy Kramer finished for his first major-league save as Pittsburgh won at home. The Reds' longest losing streak of the season reached four games. They have been shut out eight times, most in the majors. Drabek, 3-5, won for the second time after five straight losses. Rick Mahler, 6-5, was the loser. Bobby Bonilla hit a solo home run in the sixth inning. It was his seventh homer of the season and second in two games. Padres 9, Phillies 3. Ed Whitson won his sixth consecutive decision for his 100th career victory as San Diego sent visiting Philadelphia to its seventh straight loss. The Padres set season highs with 14 hits and nine runs. Bip Roberts scored four times and Jack Clark hit a two-run double for San Diego, which has not gotten 10 runs in a game since Sept. 12, 1987. Whitson, 8-2, is off to the best start in his major-league career. He is 100-99 in 12 seasons. Don Carman, 1-8, took the loss as the Phillies fell for the 11th time in 13 games. Cubs 3, Braves 2. Greg Maddux and Mitch Williams held down slumping Atlanta and Mark Grace singled home Chicago's go-ahead run in the fifth inning. The visiting Cubs won for 11th time in the last 14 games. Atlanta has scored just 34 runs in its last 17 games. Maddux, 4-5, gave up five hits and two runs in 7 1-3 innings. Williams got his 13th save. An error by second baseman Jeff Treadway set up Grace's RBI single in the fifth. Pete Smith, 1-7, had his streak of 26 consecutive scoreless innings against the Cubs stopped.

Doctor Was Threatened?

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TORONTO — Ben Johnson's doctor said today he had been warned his family would be harmed if he identified an East German athlete with whom he did a drug deal. Dr. Jamie Astaphan, testifying for the fifth day at the Canadian inquiry into drug use in athletics, refused to identify the East German he says supplied 48 bottles of banned steroids in a drug swap in Toronto in 1985. He said he remained steadfast in his refusal to protect "the security of my wife and children." "It's a matter of security for yourself and your family — is that what you're saying," asked Mr. Justice Charles Dubin. "Not myself — for my wife and children who live in Toronto," Astaphan replied as his estranged wife Karen looked on from the audience in the downtown hearing room. Would they be harmed if he disclosed the name of an East German? asked Dubin. "I have been so warned," the Caribbean-born doctor told the inquiry examining the drug scandal that cost Johnson a gold medal at the Seoul Olympics.

nament was No. 9 seed Hana Mandlikova of Australia, still unable to rediscover the form that helped her capture the Australian Open title two years ago and three other Grand Slam tournaments earlier in her career. Andrea Vieira of Brazil beat her 6-7, 6-1, 6-4. Michael Chang and Susan Sloane gave the United States a pair of first-round victories. Chang, the No. 15 men's seed, beat Eduardo Masso of Argentina 6-7, 6-3, 6-0, 6-3. Sloane, No. 16 among the women, crushed compatriot Carrie Cunningham, 6-0, 6-2. Lendl, a three-time winner of this clay-court Grand Slam event, had to rally from a 3-1 deficit to take the opening set against Kuhn on a tiebreaker before his powerful groundstrokes overwhelmed his West German opponent, ranked 45th in the world. "I really didn't know if I'd win the first set," said Lendl, who blew two set points at 5-4, then lost his serve for the second time and needed to break back immediately to level at 6-6 and force the set into a tiebreaker. He won the match on an ace. "The first round is always difficult to get settled down and not get over-anxious," said Lendl, still capable of winning the Grand Slam after his Australian Open title. "But I'm feeling really well, mostly because I've had no injuries and have been able to build up over a period of time." Becker, whose game on the slower surface has been steadily improving, harnessed power and patience as he overpowered Pugh on Court No. 1. Pugh, whose natural game is even more suited to grass than Becker's, found to his cost how well the West German had adapted to clay as he repeatedly saw flashing passing shots zip by him. "I've won more matches on clay coming into this tournament than I ever have before," said Becker, who led West Germany to victory in the clay-court World Cup team title in Dusseldorf last week. "I think differently on clay nowadays, I've changed my approach. I'm more patient and I don't rush in on break point." Also advancing was the hottest player in the men's game, Alberto Mancini of Argentina. Mancini, winner of clay-court tournaments in Monte Carlo and Rome in the last month and seeded No. 11, entertained a packed side court as he ousted Australia's Simon Youl 7-5, 6-2, 6-3. Another Argentine seed, No. 16 Guillermo Perez-Rolden, a quarter-finalist last year, thrashed Sergio Casal of Spain 6-1, 6-2, 6-0. Afterwards, there was more bad news for Spanish fans when Casal's regular doubles partner, Emilio Sanchez, withdrew with groin and thigh injuries. Sanchez, who was seeded No. 12, did not start his match against Andrei Chesnokov of the Soviet Union as he joined the list of late withdrawals in Paris. Pablo Araya of Peru, a "lucky loser," replaced Sanchez in the draw. On Monday, Kent Carlsson of Sweden, the No. 10 seed, withdrew with knee tendonitis, joining a spate of other top players, including John McEnroe, Martina Navratilova, Chris Evert and Henri Leconte, on the sidelines for a variety of reasons. Spain's top women players kept their national flag flying as No. 8 seed Conchita Martinez downed Beth Herr of the United States 6-3, 6-2 and No. 7 Arantxa Sanchez — Emilio's sister — beat Regina Rajchrtova of Czechoslovakia 6-2, 6-1. Others in action today included Andre Agassi, America's main hope of breaking its 34-year drought in the men's event. Enjoying a rest day was defending champion Mats Wilander, the most dangerous player in the world last year when his game was close to perfection. This year, the Swede has been one of the easiest stars to shoot down, his consistency shattered, his concentration virtually non-existent. Discouraged and demoralized, Wilander comes to the French Open, one of three Grand Slam events he won last year. Suddenly, the performance improves and Wilander relaxes again. "In a way it's a relief to be here," Wilander said after starting the defense of his French Open title

Monday by defeating Spanish qualifier Tomas Carbonell 6-3, 6-3, 6-3. "I feel no real pressure here, I was impatient to get here." The Swede, who hasn't won a tournament for eight months, was able to sit back Tuesday and watch rivals for the men's title battle it out on the slow red clay at Roland Garros. First-day action at Roland Garros began with Steffi Graf launching the defense of her title with a 6-1, 6-1 victory over Camille Benjamin of the United States. The 19-year-old West German, bidding for a sixth straight Grand Slam tournament title, downplayed her role as firm favorite in the absence of veteran Americans Evert and Navratilova. "It's not easier without Chris and Martina," Graf said. "You can never say it's easy. There are so many clay-court players." Graf's main rival, second-seeded Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina, trounced Akemi Nishiyama of Japan 6-0, 6-0. Other seeds advancing on the opening day included, on the men's side, No. 3 Stefan Edberg of Sweden, No. 6 Jakob Hlasek of Switzerland and three Americans. Jimmy Connors, No. 9, started his 11th visit to Roland Garros by outslugging Martin Strelba of Czechoslovakia 6-2, 2-6, 6-4, 6-3; No. 7 Tim Mayotte confidently adapted his grass-court game to clay by thrashing Mark Kratzmann of Australia 6-1, 6-2, 6-3; and No. 14 Aaron Krickstein rallied to beat Czechoslovakia's Richard Vogel 4-6, 6-3, 5-7, 6-2, 6-0.

was breaking well and my fast ball had some pop on it. "We were loose tonight. The first time we played them, I think everyone had heard the hype on them and we believed it. But we found that we could play with them. Tonight we settled down and let our bats come around for us," he said. Williamson praised the effort of his pitcher, but also added that it was a team effort. "We had great pitching, great hitting and great defense," the coach said. "The kids wanted it and felt like they could do it and they did." Vincent said that having to use all three of his top pitchers Friday night against Wilmington Hoggard hurt the Rampants. "We went with Gatlin because he was the freshest," he said. "Maurice (Hines, who came on in the fifth) would have stayed out there until he fell off the mound, but we couldn't do that. You don't ruin someone's arm for this." Hunt will now advance to the Eastern finals, traveling to Cary High School, a 7-5 winner over Richmond County, on Friday. The winner will host the Western champion in a best-of-three series for the state championship the following week. Hunt improves to 16-7 while Rose closes out its season at 23-1. Game Five Might Develop Into A One-Man Showcase

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — The Detroit Pistons have mixed emotions about turning the NBA Eastern Conference final into a one-man show.

The Pistons and Chicago Bulls meet tonight in Game 5 at The Palace with the best-of-7 series tied 2-2.

That's mainly because one man, either Chicago's Michael Jordan or Detroit's Isiah Thomas, has been dominating while the other has been held in check.

Jordan scored 32 points as Chicago won Game 1 and 46 as the Bulls overcame a 14-point deficit down the stretch to win Game 3. Thomas, who had a total of 14 points in those two games, scored 33 and 27 in the games the Pistons won.

The storyline seems obvious: stop Jordan and you can beat the Bulls. It's a story that irritates some of Jordan's teammates.

"We don't wait around to see how Michael Jordan is going to or how we can complement him," reserve center Dave Corzine said. "Michael Jordan doesn't control the emotions or play of this entire team. He's just one of five players."

Oh, really? Jordan scored 17 of the Bulls final 23 points in Chicago's comeback win in Game 3. He had an ordinary 5-for-15 shooting day and just two field goals in the last 43 minutes of Game 4.

"When he's not going good, I think it does shift the pressure from the defense right back onto them," Detroit guard Vinnie Johnson said. "When you've got a guy like him, a guy quarterbacking the whole game, playing and controlling everything for 46-47 minutes, you do wait for him. You do look to see what he's gonna do."

"When you depend on a guy like that for that much all the time and a team is defending him, you can find yourself standing around wanting him to put on a show."

The main difference between Jordan and Thomas is that Jordan thrives on his offensive fireworks displays. Thomas doesn't. Thomas, in fact, conducted a hasty closed-door meeting following Game 2, telling his teammates they had to pick up more of the slack.

"All I know is I don't want to lose," Thomas said after Game 4. "I've been playing this game for a long time — about 26 years — and I know what I have to do. I got my points today. I got to take the ball to the basket."

"But I don't have to score to be effective. In Game 3, I was effective, but I didn't score and we were up by 14 with seven minutes left. The reason we won (Game 4) was our defense, not my scoring."

The Pistons also do better when they can force Chicago's starters into foul trouble. That allows the Detroit bench to take over.

In Game 4, the Pistons bench outscored Chicago's 36-2 and had a 31-8 edge in rebounds while playing 107 minutes, compared with 45 minutes for the Bulls reserves.

"Detroit really made Michael work," Chicago coach Doug Collins said. "Joe Dumars, Vinnie Johnson and Dennis Rodman took turns on him and Michael really had to work on defense guarding Isiah because he has a big game."

Whether the Pistons will be able to keep Jordan in check again tonight is anybody's guess. During the regular season, Detroit held Jordan to an average of 27.7 points per game and the Pistons beat the Bulls all six times they met.

"When the shots aren't falling, I try to spread it around," Jordan said.

The victory Monday in Chicago restored Detroit's home-court advantage in what has become a three-game shootout. Game 6 will be played Friday night in Chicago and Game 7 back at The Palace on Sunday.

"We won it, but we won't be overconfident," Thomas said. "But we'll be as confident as the Bulls."

Pitino's Way To College Cleared

Knicks And Their Coach Agree On Contract Release

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Rick Pitino is going from pro basketball to probation.

Pitino resigned as coach of the NBA's New York Knicks on Tuesday and is expected to be named coach at the University of Kentucky later this week. The job at Kentucky, one of the most prestigious in college basketball, carries with it a three-year NCAA probation for recruiting violations under Coach Eddie Sutton, who resigned in March.

"I think right now, in the best interest of everyone, my job is to turn around the University of Kentucky," Pitino said Tuesday night after reaching agreement with the Knicks and being released from his contract. "That's my job right now. It's going to take quite a few years to do so."

It took Pitino two years to take the Knicks from near the bottom of the NBA to 52 victories and the Atlantic Division title. But it wasn't really what he wanted.

"I wasn't looking to get into professional basketball," said Pitino, 36, who led Providence College to the 1987 Final Four before joining the Knicks. "I wanted to be a part of the turnaround here with the New York Knickerbockers. I wish it could have lasted longer, but you have to know who you are and I'm a college basketball coach and I think that's where my heart is."

So Pitino will head to the heart of Kentucky and the winningest college basketball program ever. A program with a dagger stuck deep within its breast.

The Wildcats, 13-19 last season, their first losing record in 62 years, are banned from postseason tournament play for two years and not allowed on live television for next season. That didn't scare Pitino.

"I've always gone in with one thing in mind, that we were obviously going to go in there and do it the right way and win and build a very entertaining style of play," he said.

Kentucky athletic director C.M. Newton, told of Pitino's availability, said, "That's great. We're obviously pleased with that because that was part of the process — Rick being able to obtain a release from his commitment to the Knickerbockers. Now that that's occurred, we can continue on and see where it ends up."

Knicks general manager Al Bianchi gave Pitino permission to discuss the Kentucky job, but the Knicks have said they expected to get back the money they spend in searching for a new coach. That hurdle apparently was overcome at Tuesday's meeting and the search will begin immediately.

"Rick has been very good at keeping me apprised about things," Bianchi said. "When the Kentucky thing came up, he explained the situation would be good for him and his family. He gave us two good years, how can we deny him this?"

Pitino scoffed at reports that he had feuded with Bianchi.

"There is no dispute and there hasn't been a dispute in two years with Al Bianchi," Pitino said. "Al Bianchi is an outstanding general manager and I think under his guidance we will see a banner — and I say 'we will' because I'm part of New York — hanging in Madison Square Garden sometime down the road."

Who might coach the Knicks down that road?

Among those mentioned for the job are Dallas Mavericks coach John MacLeod, North Carolina State coach Jim Valvano, Atlanta coach Mike Fratello, who came under fire when the Hawks lost in the first round of the playoffs this year; Dick Motta, the man MacLeod replaced in Dallas, and Chicago Bulls assistant Phil Jackson, an ex-Knicker.

"Until Rick told us today, I haven't spoken with anybody," Bianchi said. "Tomorrow, we'll make some phone calls — and I'm sure we'll get some — and make a list. Selecting a new coach isn't an easy thing to do."

The New York Daily News, in today's late editions, quoted Bianchi as saying he would seek permission from the Mavericks to speak with MacLeod.

USC Hoping To Nullify Steroid Probe Subpoena

By Rick Scoppa
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBIA, S.C. — The University of South Carolina is seeking to quash a subpoena requesting information gathered in a continuing internal probe into the use and distribution of steroids within the athletic department.

Sports Illustrated plans to do likewise — once the magazine is served with the subpoena that's been given to its local attorney in Columbia.

Attorney John Hardaway of Columbia requested that the subpoenas be issued on behalf of his client, John L. Carter of Bethesda, Md. Carter and four former South Carolina football coaches were indicted April 19 following a grand jury probe into the alleged use and distribution of steroids at the university and across the state.

The issue of the subpoenas is expected to be argued at a hearing Thursday, when other matters in the case also are expected to be taken up. The subpoena seeks notes and other material gathered by Sports Illustrated for its article on alleged steroid use by University of South Carolina football players, court records obtained Tuesday show.

But Sports Illustrated attorney Judy Bass said the magazine had not been served with the subpoena and reiterated that the magazine intended to fight any effort to obtain its notes or other materials.

Carter is charged with distributing steroids to four former South Carolina football players, including Tommy Chaikin. It was a story co-written by Chaikin in the Oct. 24 issue of Sports Illustrated that prompted the grand jury probe.

In the article, Chaikin, who played for South Carolina from 1983 to 1987, said he and other players used steroids and about half the 1986 team used the muscle-building drugs.

The trials for Carter and the four ex-coaches — Tom Gadd, Jim Washburn, Keith Kephart and Tom Kurucz — are scheduled to begin June 19.

In the Sports Illustrated subpoena, Hardaway is seeking "any and all notes, rough drafts, interviews, memorandums, statements, tape recordings, videotapes or other documents or items relating to any article entitled, 'The Nightmare of Steroids.'"

Bass said she had not seen the subpoena.

"We have not been served," she said in a telephone interview from her New York office. "Nobody has shown up here."

Bass said the magazine planned to fight the subpoena but was not sure there would be enough time before Thursday's hearing for the magazine to prepare its case.

ty will, upon demand forthwith make payment to the obligee upon said bond if the bidder fails to execute the contract in accordance with the bid bond. Said deposits shall be retained by the Owner as liquidated damages in event of failure of the successful bidder to execute the contract within ten (10) days after award or to give satisfactory surety as required by law. Performance and payment bonds will be required for one hundred percent (100%) of the contract price. Payment will be made on the basis of ninety percent (90%) of the monthly estimates and final payment made upon completion and acceptance of work. The City of Greenville reserves the right to reject any or all bids, waive informalities, and award contracts which appear to be in the best interest of the City. This notice is reserved to hold any or all proposals for a period of 60 days after the bid opening thereof. SIGNED: Leah Brock, Purchasing Agent, City of Greenville, 201 West Fifth Street, Greenville, NC 27834. May 31, June 2, 4, 1989.

ONE FOR ALL...

Many dealerships boast about their "extensive selections" of quality previously-owned automobiles. In most cases, however, their selection is "extensively" spread out over dealerships all across North Carolina. But at World Classics by Toyota East, we've got the the best selection of previously-owned luxury cars at any one location in the state!

Each and every automobile on our lot is thoroughly examined for quality by Mr. Ed Sigmon. If it doesn't meet his high standards, we don't sell it. Whatever your automotive tastes, we've got one for all, and all for you. Best of all, it's all in one place—World Classics by Toyota East.

Telethon Airs To Benefit The Children's Hospital

The Children's Miracle Network Raises Funding And Awareness

By Lane Dunn
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Hundreds of people from across Eastern North Carolina will come together this weekend to donate their time, money and services to air the Children's Miracle Network Telethon.

The telethon, which benefits the Children's Hospital of Eastern North Carolina, begins at 9 p.m. Saturday and continues until 6:30 p.m. Sunday on WITN-TV, Channel 7.

The Children's Hospital, a division of Pitt County Memorial Hospital and an extension of ECU School of Medicine, includes the neonatal unit, pediatric unit, pediatric intensive care unit, newborn nursery and children's rehabilitation unit.

Outside appearances may imply that the focus of the telethon is to raise money. But those who know the intricacies of the Children's Hospital say otherwise. The money is helpful, they say, but it's not the most important aspect.

"It gives us an opportunity to share some of the successes that patients have experienced, with our friends in Eastern North Carolina," said Dr. Jon Tingelstad, medical director of the Children's Hospital. The Children's Hospital serves 34 counties in eastern North Carolina.

Four special guests will be the poster children for the telethon. The Batton quadruplets, James, Annette, Patricia and Theresa, were born three months prematurely on Christmas day, 1985. They spent the first few months of their lives in the hospital's neonatal unit. Today, they are healthy 3-year-olds.

Seven other former patients of the Children's Hospital will appear on the telethon, and reporters from WITN-TV will tell the stories of the children's stays at the hospital.

Margaret Sullivan, coordinator of the telethon, said no monetary goal will be set. "We just try to do better than we did last year," she said.

She said the funds donated come from four sources, phone pledges, corporate donations, special events and national sponsors.

The money is used to buy special equipment and services for the hospital. Last year's proceeds went toward the purchase of an electronic device that analyzes children's brain-wave patterns, life support equipment for the pediatric transport vehicle, a personal computer for the in-hospital school program, rocking chairs for the neonatal intensive-care unit and furnishings for the Children's Hospital waiting room and the adolescent lounge.

The telethon will feature several local stars. Pedro Cherry and Paige Powell are honorary youth chairpersons. Cherry is a "Parade" All-American high school football player from Bertie County. Powell, from Greenville, is one of the state's top-rated tennis players. David and Betty Speir of Bethel, are the honorary chairpersons.

Other celebrities include Miss North Carolina, Lee Beaman; Miss North Carolina-USA, Jackie Padgett; professional football player from ECU, Terry Long; former professional football player Jim Clack; singer, Little Eva; and Ben Cherry, who uses a Blackbeard impersonation to give an anti-drug message to school children.

Mrs. Sullivan said that approximately 700 volunteers combine to turn out the telethon. She said 18 committees have been working since September to hammer out the details, and hundreds of people will donate their time on the day of the telethon.

Tingelstad also had praise for the volunteers. "We appreciate the significant contributions of Eastern North Carolinians which go to improving health care services and the overall environment at the Children's Hospital. This becomes especially important as resources are stretched," he said.

All of the money stays in Eastern North Carolina. Promoters say that their telethon is the only one that can make that claim. Last year the telethon raised $132,000 for the Children's Hospital. The national effort produced nearly $60 million.

Tom Fortner, media coordinator for Pitt County Hospitals, said the national telethon benefits 170 hospitals in five countries. He said that it is the largest charity fundraising event in existence.

More than 100 celebrities ranging from movie stars to athletes will appear on the program.

Celebrities

Realtors Sponsor Benefit Friday

By Constance Ward
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Get out your poodle skirts and white jackets, because the Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors is sponsoring a '50s and '60s dance.

On Friday from 8 p.m. to midnight, party-goers will dress in sweaters and bobby socks just in time to bob and twist to the tunes of D.J.s Jeff Diamond and Gina Gray from WRQR. And all of this dancing will help to raise money for the proposed Boys and Girls Club of Pitt County.

The Greenville Moose Lodge has donated its building for the activities. County Board of Realtors president, Marie Davis said there will be "tons of food" including beer and wine in washubs, soft drinks, Mary Jane Candy and Moon Pies. Everything used for the dance has been donated by area businesses.

Mrs. Davis will wear a demin top with a sunset embroidered on the back, a demin skirt and penny loafers. Though she expects many of those at the dance to be dressed in '50s styles, the dance includes the '60s, too. Casual dress is welcome.

Among the activities planned for the dance are a silent auction, a jitterbug contest and the best costume contest. The winners of the jitterbug and costume contest will receive $25.

For tickets, which are $5 per person, call Carl King at 355-2000.

Mrs. Davis says the Board of Realtors has a strong feeling about activities like the dance. "We feel we get our livelihood from the community," she said. "That's why we are giving the dance." The board hopes to raise as much as $4,000 for the Boys and Girls Club.

The Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors was formed in 1949. It was made up of 10 men who sold insurance, and a little real estate on the side. They sold their properties with a handshake, Mrs. Davis said, since they didn't have contracts. Their first president was David L. Turnage.

The board now has 150 members, including all the real estate businesses in Pitt County.

"It wasn't until 10-15 years ago that we got active in the community," Mrs. Davis said.

In 1983, with the help of board member Jean Hopper, the CrimeStoppers telethon began. Mrs. Davis said the board gave $2,500 the first year, $3,500 the next year, to fund the telethon. And though pledges have helped underwrite the cost of the telethon now, the board is still involved.

Among the board's projects this year are the endowment of $3,000 to the School of Business at East Carolina University for scholarships, Operation Santa Clause, the 5th Annual Easter Egg Hunt and Picnic for Special Kids, the Moving Wall and Adopt-a-Highway.

The goal of the Realtors Community Service program is to involve local realtors in public service programs.

The board has also won awards from the North Carolina Association of Realtors and National Association of Realtors for the past 10 years for community involvement.

Attitudes Are Changing About Mentally Retarded As Parents

By Paul Ciotti
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

The first thing you notice about Tammy Bachrach is that she seems completely normal in every respect. She lives with her husband, a first-year law student, in a clean, uncluttered apartment near Los Angeles.

She has a warm, gentle, sensual way about her. She teaches emotionally disturbed and mentally retarded high school students and is about to enter a graduate program in special education.

The only thing not completely normal about Bachrach, in fact, is the relationship she had with her mother, Sharon Woods, while growing up.

Bachrach was 7 when she first began to be aware that her mother was different. She would ask her for help with her second-grade math homework and her mother would tell her to ask her father. Bachrach's father, who had a learning disability, would tell her to ask the teacher. When her mother needed to get a phone number from information, she would ask Bachrach to make the call — the operator spoke too fast for her and Woods always got the digits wrong.

Still, when she was a young girl, it didn't seem to Bachrach that such occurrences were that big a deal. "In the family," she says of her mother, "it was just said that she was a slow learner."

As Bachrach got older, however, things began to change. At age 10, she says, she began to notice a disconcerting role reversal. Instead of her going to her mother for advice, now, it seemed, her mother — who by then was divorced — was coming to her.

But it wasn't till Bachrach was 16 that psychologists tested her mother and finally put a name on the problem — she was "developmentally disabled." She had an IQ of 70.

It was far from being a family tragedy. Bachrach's home was a warm, welcoming place. "I felt real comfortable bringing friends over," says Bachrach. And further, unlike some other parents, her mother was always there. "I could talk to her real openly because it wasn't a real strong parent role."

The idea that women with mental retardation should be permitted to bear and raise children is a relatively new notion in this country. Until as recently as 20 years ago, such people routinely were institutionalized, sterilized or supervised in such a way as to preclude physical intimacy. And, if by chance, a mentally retarded woman did get pregnant, the baby was generally put up for adoption.

But over the last two decades, many attitudes have changed. Mentally retarded people, who in former times might have been institutionalized, now live in the community. (About 1 percent to 3 percent of the U.S. population is mentally retarded, according to the American Association on Mental Retardation.) And among people who work with developmentally disabled people, there is a growing notion that the mentally retarded have the same rights as anyone else to a sex life and children.

Phone Lines Are Ties That Bind Oprah And Gayle

By James Endrst
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Oprah Winfrey has been talking to her best friend, Gayle King, nearly every night for almost 13 years.

But Oprah and Gayle don't just talk when they talk.

They talk — $300-to-$500-a-month-in-phone-bills kind of talk, a Ma Bell dream team.

You would think that Winfrey, star of "The Oprah Winfrey Show," the nationally syndicated talk show that all but shut Phil Donahue's mouth, would be talked out at the end of the day.

But it is obvious that these women love to talk — especially to each other. And they are talking up a storm on Winfrey's latest project, "Just Between Friends."

The hourlong, syndicated prime-time special from Winfrey's Harpo Productions features interview-profiles with a variety of best friends — beginning, of course, with Winfrey and King, who is also a TV news anchor-interviewer in Hartford, Conn.

Other best buddies include a couple of precocious grammar school girls; basketball greats Magic Johnson and Isiah Thomas; The Roches, a singing trio of sisters with a decidedly different spin on the meaning of friendship; and a couple of kibitzing New York cabbies. But as interviewer-host of the show (to be broadcast between June 3 and 17 around the country), Winfrey brings the conversation back time and time again to her best friend, King.

The show opens with what has to be much-edited-for-television chit-chat — with King filmed in shorts and T-shirt in her Meriden, Conn., home, and Winfrey, in a bathrobe, kicking up her feet on the other end of the line in her Chicago apartment.

It was a late-night talk one stormy evening in November 1976 that brought them together. Winfrey, then the news anchor at WJZ in Baltimore, invited King, a production assistant at the station, to spend the night at her apartment rather than risk a drive home to Chevy Chase, Md. And they have been talking ever since.

"I talk to her so much that when she comes to town, there's not another thing left to say," said Winfrey over the phone from Chicago, as King, on the line in Hartford, laughed.

These are the almost umbilical ties that bind them, phone lines stretched between Baltimore and Washington, D.C., Baltimore and Kansas City, Mo., and, in recent years, between Chicago and Hartford.

Winfrey, 35, and King, 34, say they have not missed calling each other more than a day or two in the past decade, calling sometimes two or three times a day.

And what, in heaven's name, do they talk about? "We don't know anybody to gossip about," Winfrey said. "We don't have any mutual friends, so we talk about what happened on my show and what happened in her newsroom."

"It's not like we have exciting conversations," King added. "We talk about normal stuff."

Judging by the phone interview, scheduled for one hour but which ran closer to two, the Winfrey-King exchanges are something any pair of close friends could appreciate but something only these two could understand.

And they do go on. Some people, including one of Winfrey's ex-boyfriends who got the heave-ho, think it is a little much at times.

And some eyebrows undoubtedly will be raised when Winfrey discloses in the show, apparently for the first time, that the day King was married was "the worst day of my life."

"It's the first time I ever really brought it up," said Winfrey of that segment. "I really did think it would be the end of our relationship as I knew it. I didn't think our relationship was going to end; I just thought nobody is going to tolerate Gayle and I spending as much time on the phone as we do."

There is no denying that theirs is a special relationship.

King flies out once every six weeks, one of her two children in tow, to have her hair done by Winfrey's stylist in Chicago — a long way to go for a haircut, even if, as King says, "It's just an excuse to see Oprah."

And Winfrey, a multimillionaire who is known to have bouts of Elvislike generosity, once offered King $200,000 a year to stay home with her children after King, who admitted she had been "boo-hoing" at length over the phone, voiced

Sleeveless Sweater Lots Of Fun To Knit

What makes this hand-knit sleeveless shell so appealing? Easy! It can be worn year-round with or without a shirt underneath. Make it in any yarn that will work to the recommended gauge. It's loads of fun to knit, thanks to the cabled yoke. And best of all, it has the look and feel of a specialty sweater, but not the price.

Easy-to-follow directions are given for small, medium and large sizes. Finished bust measurements are 35 1/2, 37 1/2 and 39 1/2 inches.

To obtain directions for making the Casual Cables Vest, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-052889 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. K-052889 by sending a check or money order for $13.95 to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and yarn in your choice of the following colors: white, pale blue or peach.

Dear Pat: I once read somewhere that knitting should always be done in front of all stitches unless the instructions specifically call for knitting in the back of the stitches. I have a male friend who knits in the back of every stitch and does beautiful work. He claims that I imagined this taboo on knitting the back or that it is just an old wives' tale. Who's right, Pat? — Puzzled in Omaha.

Dear Puzzled: Like so many so-called rules in needlecraft, this isn't so much a matter of who's right and who's wrong; it's a matter of choice. Knitting in the front of stitches is the most widely used method, and is usually the only one illustrated in how-to books.

If you knit in the back of all knit stitches and purl in the front of all purl stitches, you create an effect known as "twisted stockinette." Now there is nothing wrong with that; it just has a slightly different appearance.

If you still prefer to knit in the back of the knit stitches and want to achieve true stockinette stitch, you have to do one of two things: Either purl in the back also, or wrap your yarn in the opposite direction on the purl rows.

People who knit in the Continental style, where the yarn is carried in the left hand and the stitches are "picked through," often find it easier to do the purl stitches in a way that twists the stitch. They then knit in back of the knit stitches to achieve true stockinette. If you don't knit in this way, you might find this paragraph confusing, but that minority of people who do knit in this way will understand exactly what I mean. Many feel, by the way, that Continental knitting is faster, and I personally use it more often than not.

For all except experienced Continental-style knitters, however, I recommend knitting in the front of all stitches for one reason: All patterns written in this country assume you will knit in the front of all stitches. Thus, when it is required as part of the pattern stitch that you knit in the back, Continental-style knitters have to reverse the directions at that point and may not come up with the exact effect planned by the designer.

I would never try to change anyone's method of working as long as it is satisfactory. My advice applies to the average knitter who normally knits with the yarn held in the right hand, working in the fronts of all stitches.

But just to prove that there can be exceptions to every rule, I might suggest that you try "twisted ribbing," which is achieved by knitting in the back of all knit stitches and purling as usual all purl stitches. The ribbing thus achieved seems to have more elasticity than the better known way.

The Entrepreneurial Woman Is Target Of A New Magazine

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

IRVINE, Calif. — It is almost 1990, and most of us would agree by now that women and men are, well, different. And that is just the point that the publishers of Entrepreneur magazine want to make June 20, when they launch their latest editorial effort: Entrepreneurial Woman.

The 114-page June issue includes articles on the best cars for women's entrepreneurial life styles, the outlook for the infant-products industry, and a woman record executive, as well as a health column.

The new periodical is planned as an every-other-month companion to the successful Entrepreneur, a publication based in Irvine in Southern California. Entrepreneur's audited readership is 300,000 and about 25 percent female. The June issue of Entrepreneurial Woman is a prototype with regular issues to follow in February.

Rieva Lesonsky, editor of both magazines, concedes that basic issues are the same for male and female business owners. But she also talks a lot about "women's special needs" and said that her latest creation would do the same.

"Women face some unique problems in starting their own businesses," Lesonsky says. "Raising money is harder because of the attitude of bankers. And it's only recently that we've given women the approval to work, let alone own their own companies."

Lesonsky is quick to rattle off a raft of horror stories gleaned mostly from letters written by Midwestern readers of Choices: For Entrepreneurial Women, a short-lived quarterly that Entrepreneur delivered in 1985 and then abandoned in 1986.

Choices did "fairly well," Lesonsky said, but was discontinued after three issues so the staff could concentrate on Entrepreneur. Choices magazine may have died, she said, but it left a legacy of letters that motivated editors to try another publication for businesswomen.

"We got a letter from a woman who went to a bank with a very detailed business plan," she said. "The banker, in the Midwest, told her they were not in the habit of funding 'hobbies.' Another woman wrote that the bank told her they wanted her 17-year-old, under-age son to co-sign for her loan."

So the need, Lesonsky says, is there for a magazine like Entrepreneurial Woman. But is there a market?

"Absolutely," says Rick Boden, an economist with the U.S. Small Business Administration's Office of Advocacy. Not only is the market there, but it is growing. In 1977, the SBA counted 1.9 million woman-owned sole proprietorships operating in the United States. By 1986, the latest year for which statistics were available, the number had grown to 4.12 million.

But Boden has caveat for the publishers of Entrepreneurial Woman: This working woman's wave may be cresting soon.

"We see a growth in women-owned business," Boden said

Farmville Pair Wed Saturday

FARMVILLE — Caroline Yumi Washburn and Samuel William Sumrell Jr. were married Saturday at 3 p.m. in Farmville United Methodist Church.

The Rev. Wilbur Teachey conducted the double-ring ceremony. Organist Drucilla Lamm and soloist Emerson Hogbood provided the wedding music.

The parents of the bridal couple are Mr. and Mrs. William H. Washburn and Mr. and Mrs. Samuel W. Sumrell Sr.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal-length gown of matte taffeta featuring Schiffler lace encrusted with seed pearls and iridescence encircling the scoop neckline and short puffed sleeves. The full skirt was gathered in drapes by medallions of pearled lace. Schiffler lace adorned the hem extending around to the sweep train. The bride's veil was a wreath of silk flowers, Schiffler lace and pearls with a pouf of imported illusion sprinkled with pearls at the crown. Illusion in double layers extended to a fingertip veil. She carried spring flowers in pink and white backed with illusion and satin ribbon streamers.

bride, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Cindy Washburn of Bostic, sister of the bride, and Tammy Jolly of Vanceboro.

The bridegroom's father was best man. Ushers were Dean Washburn of Bostic, brother of the bride, and Wes Sumrell of Farmville, brother of the bridegroom.

A rehearsal dinner was held in the Colonial Inn of Farmville. A reception was held in the church fellowship hall.

The bridegroom is employed by A.C. Monk and Co. of Farmville and the bride is employed by Sheppard Memorial Library. After a wedding trip to Charleston, S.C., the couple will reside in Farmville.

Volunteers Help Parents Adjust To Life With Baby

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROYAL OAK, Mich. — The proud parents admire their newborn child, smiling. A gentle breeze puffs the curtains and clowns smile from the walls. It is a picture usually found in magazines and conjured up by expectant parents.

Reality usually hits in the middle of the night.

Parents pace the room to quiet a crying child. The darkness reflects their mood and the clowns on the wall now smirk. This is the time parents realize how little they know about taking care of their bundle of joy.

Chances are the couple took classes on delivering the baby. When those ended, it was a case of learning by mistake.

Parents whose first children are born at William Beaumont Hospital in this Detroit suburb have an option. Beaumont helps first-time parents adjust to the experience with a program involving mothers who volunteer as trainers.

"We've had very positive feedback, usually because of the family setup nowadays," said Beth Frydlewicz, one of two coordinators. "If used to be that the mother, aunt, or someone else from the family would come over and help out the new mom," but that is rarer these days, she said.

Volunteers for the 9-year-old parenting program that began as a Michigan State University research project go through intensive training. In eight three-hour classes the volunteers learn about listening to the new parents, feeding, sleeping and crying habits of newborns and how to comfort them.

The program is available to first-time parents only who either deliver at Beaumont or whose pediatrician works out of the hospital. Neither the Michigan nor American hospital associations were aware of a similar program elsewhere.

When a volunteer contacted Nelle Bird, 26, of St. Clair Shores, "my husband and I decided we could use all the help we could get."

For Susan Larinto, 41, volunteer Ann Scheel "was like my friend and mother. It was like having June Cleaver helping me through."

"The baby was colicky, so I called and asked to join the program. Ann came and looked at the baby and calmed me down. They even sent a massage therapist to help the baby."

Not all moms need the same help, said Scheel, 57. "Some moms had very little skill and common sense. Others could have done without the program and some moms are relieved to find someone interested in them, not just the baby."

Please The Bridal Couple

Dear Abby: I have a problem that needs urgent attention. I have been living with a man for 11 years. I am divorced; "Jim" is not, but he's legally separated. Jim's family knows about me. I have been invited to their homes many times, and they have been invited to ours.

Here's the problem. Jim's son is getting married, and Jim's estranged wife (I'll call her Judy) is having a dinner at her home for the bride and groom and has asked Jim to attend the dinner and act as the host.

Since Jim and I intend to have our own dinner for the bridal couple, I see no reason for Jim to attend Judy's dinner. He has given me all kinds of excuses why he should be there, so I finally agreed that he go, even though I would rather he didn't.

I also understand that the bride's parents plan to give a dinner. If they invite Jim and Judy as a couple, I definitely feel that Jim should not go because they plan on having another dinner to which Jim and I will be invited. I feel that Jim should refuse all invitations that include Judy since they are no longer a couple and are not living together.

Please advise me, Abby. What is the proper procedure? — Unsure

Dear Unsure: The "proper procedure" is to do whatever pleases the bridal couple. It is quite clear that Jim's son wants his parents to appear at the bridal festivities as a "couple," so don't make it difficult for Jim or his wife. As unfair as it may seem, you should quietly defer to Jim where his family is concerned.

Dear Abby

Dear Abby: I just gave birth to our second child and am still heavy and flabby. My husband desperately wants to go to Hawaii for our vacation.

My problem is that I am very self-conscious about my body. He tells me to exercise, but I don't think that in one month's time I will feel comfortable in a skimpy bathing suit.

I want him to have a wonderful time, but he won't if he senses that I am miserable. I do not want to ruin the wonderful vacation that he has planned for just the two of us, but I just can't stop feeling depressed about it.

Should I go and try to fake a good time for his sake? — Self-Conscious

Dear Self-Conscious: Buy some shorts and a halter top, or a pretty gauze "shift," and forget the skimpy bathing suits. Once you're on the beach, you will see all shapes and sizes — and discover you look better than most! Trust me. You won't have to "fake" a good time; you'll have one.

Dear Abby: A recent column contained a letter about a small child falling into a swimming pool and the CPR that saved him. Good. I'm glad the child is OK. But very young children should be taught some survival techniques.

A child of 2 months can be placed in an inch of water in the bathtub and taught to turn itself over, put its hands under its chest, and get its face out of the water so it can make a noise. By 2 years, my own children could all float on their backs!

When they were 3, I started teaching them to undress in the wading pool. Their sandals and summer shorts came off. Later, we used the same technique in deeper water.

As they grew older, the clothes became heavier and they learned to take off sneakers, shoes and winter boots. It was "fun," but when my 10-year-old son went through the ice in a swamp (a place he was forbidden to go!), I bought new boots and scolded him — but I had a living son!

Of course, children need to be carefully watched, but they also need to be taught how to take care of themselves in emergency situations — and they're never too young to learn.

I hope you think this is worth printing. — K.L. Lennox, Newark, N.J.

Dear K.L.: I do. And I did.

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA, 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Retarded Mothers More Accepted

Michael Shapiro. "We don't require licenses for people to reproduce."

Which is not to say that everyone concerned is entirely happy about the current state of affairs. Parents of mentally retarded children, for one, often tend to feel that current attitudes and court decisions regarding the rights of the retarded to bear and raise children have gone too far.

"We used to keep people sterilized like cattle in state institutions," says Fred Hougardy, executive director of the Association for Retarded Citizens. "But once we ended that, because of the rolling locomotive of civil rights, it ran over everything, including common sense."

And now, as a result, says Hougardy, some advocates for the mentally retarded — he cites as one such group the Southern California Protection and Advocacy, a federally funded legal agency — now say that "all people should have children; all people ought to go on and become parents."

Not only is it "crazy," says Hougardy, it's also unfair, because it's not the social workers who end up taking care of the children in such cases — it's the grandparents.

But when anyone has the temerity to suggest that, perhaps, there might be some people so severely handicapped as to preclude their being able to care for children, some of these professional advocates become extremely touchy, says John Chase, trustee of the Exceptional Children Foundation.

As a result, social workers don't even dare suggest tubal ligations any more for retarded women, says Rose Bromwich, a California State University, Northridge, professor in the education, psychology and counseling department. Physicians are reluctant to perform the operation. And the courts, says law professor Shapiro, won't order the procedure for fear of being labeled fascist. Advocates for the rights of the mentally retarded respond that their critics are misinformed about the possible dangers. It's the mildly mentally retarded women who get pregnant and have children, not the women who don't even know what pregnancy is.

And as for grandparents sometimes having to assume the burden of caring for their children's offspring, there's nothing unusual about that, says Steven Forness, director of UCLA's Mental Retardation and Developmental Disabilities Program. "Even with normal parents, there are times when the grandparents have to pick up the pieces where the biological parent has not been able to handle parenting responsibilities."

In any case, social workers say, no one has to fear that large numbers of retarded women are having children. "Clearly at the bottom end of the spectrum, sex is not an issue," says Sanford Gerber, a speech and hearing professor at the University of California, Santa Barbara. "These are people who are clearly helpless."

Retarded women who do get pregnant, though, usually deliver normal babies, says Andrew Tymchuk of the UCLA medical school's psychiatry department, who notes that people with severe genetic problems tend to be infertile and most mild kinds of retardation typically are not passed on.

If the woman is mildly retarded, no one worries about her raising a child because, in most cases, says law professor Shapiro, such individuals are "indistinguishable from the rest of us."

It's the severely retarded women who cause the anguish. These are the people, Jackson says, who can't take care of themselves, let alone a child, but insist: "You're not going to take my baby away. I have a boyfriend. And you're not going to do anything about it."

In such cases, says Sass of the Harbor Regional Center, "we have to suspend any moral judgments as an agency."

Although mildly mentally retarded women can be taught parenting skills, the process is not always a simple matter. Mentally retarded women often don't know anything about the mechanics of giving birth. Lamaze classes are generally too complicated, so instructors go to prenatal classes with them and re-explain everything in simplified language. "You have to be very detailed and very repetitive," says Carolyn Jackson, manager of Clinical Services, South Central Regional Center for Developmental Disabilities.

Once the baby arrives, mentally retarded mothers have a whole new set of issues to deal with. "One problem," says Sass, "is that the developmentally delayed parent doesn't generalize." They, thus, are unaware of the normal precautions and techniques that most people pick up on their own. In such a situation, the women must be taught to do laundry, make medical appointments, draw up shopping lists, ride buses, prepare baby food, diaper and give baths.

Usually they can't read, and, as a result, require explicit instructions on problems such as keeping household chemicals out of reach, locking up drugs and dispensing medicines.

But the biggest problem mentally retarded mothers have is over-cautious neighbors, teachers or pediatricians.

"Common childhood accidents may be interpreted by child protection workers as indicative of parental incompetency or serve as grounds for the removal of the child from the home," says UCLA's Tymchuk. A mentally retarded mother takes her child to a hospital emergency room for some common childhood accident, and the doctors and nurses take one look at her disheveled state or lack of comprehension, says Tymchuk, and right away they're on the phone to agencies trying to put the child in a foster home.

Independent Filmmaker Eyes Network Television

By Kathryn Baker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — John Sayles, the staunchly independent filmmaker, would not seem the most likely guy to jump into the network series grind.

"It's part of my program," he said. "I've told myself I'd do anything once."

"Shannon's Deal" isn't on NBC's fall schedule, but the two-hour pilot airs Sunday. Besides Sayles, it boasts such behind-the-camera talent as "Jewel of the Nile" director Lewis Teague, who also directed Sayles' early feature effort, "Alligator," a cult-favorite horror film; "Fame" producer Stan Rogow; and composer Wynton Marsalis, who wrote the score.

Sayles, who has avoided big movie studios throughout a film career that includes "The Return of the Secaucus Seven," "Brother from Another Planet" and most recently "Eight Men Out," got involved with the NBC project after Rogow asked if he'd be interested in writing a TV movie that could become a series.

"I said I would if it was something I would be interested in and maybe write one or two episodes and tell whoever was taking it over, so long. Kind of establish the character and see if they could run with it," Sayles said as the sound of a jet airplane almost drowned him out. He talked from a pay phone at JFK International Airport just before boarding a flight to Italy where he was to appear in a friend's first feature film.

Sayles was no stranger to television, having written the TV movies "Perfect Match" and "Unnatural Causes." "I actually had a pretty good experience on both of them," he said.

He came up with several series premises, and NBC Entertainment President Brandon Tartikoff picked "Shannon's Deal." It is from NBC's own production company, "so I felt like it wouldn't die of neglect, because it's one of his babies," Sayles said. "And it was a nice experience. Everybody seemed to be talking about the same thing."

Indeed, in an apparent effort to keep talent like Sayles coming back even if he doesn't get on the schedule, NBC is giving the pilot red-carpet Sunday movie treatment.

In "Shannon's Deal," set in Philadelphia, Jamey Sheridan plays Jack Shannon, a former corporate lawyer whose gambling addiction cost him his family and career. As the movie opens, he's trying to start over as a general-practice, anything-that-comes-in-the-door attorney.

The first case in the door is Lucy Acosta (Elizabeth Pena), who says her boyfriend was framed and she needs a lawyer. "The place is lousy with lawyers. They ought to spray more often," says Shannon, who's sitting on a crate playing poker with himself. Shannon agrees to represent Lucy's boyfriend if she'll work as his secretary.

Shannon's second case — another young woman looking to spring her boyfriend from jail — lands him in the middle of a drugs-and-money scheme involving CIA agents and Central American crime bosses.

Sharing the same floor of the run-down office building is Lou Gondolph, a shyster who hawks accidental-injury lawsuits in Spanish language TV commercials. He's played to great comic effect by Martin Ferrero, who was informant Izzy Moreno on "Miami Vice."

Jim Henson Hour Includes Variety And Storytelling

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Miss Piggy, glamorously attired in swimwear and a broad-brimmed hat, is lounging around the hotel pool soaking up the sun and the attention.

The sun, high in the cloudless sky, is hot and Miss Piggy retreats to a cabana. The hotel, like a pink fantasy surrounded by palm trees, is reflected in the sparkling blue pool.

Behind her, the crew rigs up a sun screen for her scenes by the pool. Her makeup woman and wardrobe mistress await her summons.

She pulls down her sunglasses, peers over them at a reporter and says breathlessly, "Please, no interviews."

Jim Henson, however, is willing to talk. After all, the NBC series Miss Piggy is working on is called "The Jim Henson Hour."

More than 30 years ago, Henson created "The Muppets," which has grown to include Miss Piggy, Henson's green alter ego Kermit the Frog, Big Bird and Cookie Monster on "Sesame Street" and a wide assortment of mostly lovable but sometimes gruesome creatures.

"The Jim Henson Hour" is a magazine-style show that mixes half-hour "The Storyteller" dramatic pieces, "Miss Piggy's Hollywood" and Muppet creatures in various pieces, some of which are enhanced by computer graphics.

"We had been doing 'The Storyteller' and were working on a high-tech version of a variety show and some specials when the idea struck us of putting it all together," said Henson. "We presented it to NBC and they said OK. What it is, is two half-hour shows back to back, but about every fourth episode we'll do an hour show."

Henson said he wanted to do things that have never been done on television before. "I think we've always pushed puppetry to the limits and now we're pushing new technologies to the limit," he said. "We're using the most sophisticated state-of-the-art technology available. It's very exciting to mix puppets and technology."

The Muppets made their first network appearance on "The Jimmy Dean Show" in the early 1960s. Rowlf the talking dog carried on frequent conversations with Dean. The first wide exposure of various Muppet characters came on "Sesame Street," whose 20th anniversary was celebrated on "The Jim Henson Hour" in early May.

"The Muppet Show" from 1976 to '81 ran in more than 100 countries and was seen by more than 235 million people. Kermit, Miss Piggy, Fozzie Bear, Animal and all the other creatures became as famous as real celebrities.

Grammy Winner Back After Near-Fatal Shooting

LARRY CARLTON

By Larry McShane
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — On April 6, 1988, Grammy-winning guitarist Larry Carlton walked out of his California recording studio and into a gunman's bullet. He believed he was going to die.

"I hit the floor, and then I prayed. ... I was ready to go to heaven," said Carlton, a born-again Christian. "And I'll bet you that bought me some time. I think that kind of faith was a real positive thing."

Carlton's faith — and the frantic efforts of doctors who repaired his severed carotid artery — saved his life. Since then, Carlton has made an incredible recovery and returned with a new album, "On Solid Ground," and an upcoming world tour.

But music is not Carlton's only business these days. He's also established a fund to aid crime victims who need help and have nowhere to turn.

None of it seemed possible when he was gunned down by an unknown assailant for unknown reasons in the Hollywood Hills 13 months ago. The bullet severed a vocal cord and caused damage to his left arm.

"The doctors told my wife, 'He'll be fine — if he lives. He'll play,'" Carlton recalled in a voice still raspy from the shooting. "I couldn't see it ... In the back of my mind, I wondered if I was ever going to be as good as before."

After seven months of rigorous therapy and medical attention, Carlton picked up the guitar for the first time to see for himself if the licks featured on albums by Steely

Dan, Michael Jackson and Joni Mitchell were still within him. The answer came one night in his studio, when Carlton settled in to record an instrumental version of the Derek and the Dominoes classic "Layla" for his new album.

"That part that's on the record is one complete take all the way through. And there's that one lick in the middle of it that's just flying," said Carlton, his voice rising with excitement.

"I was real proud, and I felt great. So that was kind of a spark, that night I did 'Layla.' It was like, 'It's back, it's back.'"

Confident that he could handle the guitar, Carlton turned his attention to Helping Innocent People (HIP), a support group he founded to aid crime victims in need of financial or other help.

"We watch the news and we read the papers, and there's victims every day," Carlton said. "Most of us are jaded to it — I was. I'd be eating my dinner and watching TV, and go on with my life."

HIP has already started to help, recently providing $100 to a crime victim left hospitalized by a vicious gang beating, Carlton said.

"That's our dream — to help people just when they need it," he said. Carlton will contribute part of the proceeds of the world tour which begins June 31 in Buffalo, N.Y., toward the fund.

Carlton established his credentials as a premier guitarist during the 1970s. He played on 13 albums with the Crusaders, worked on three Jovi Mitchell albums and contributed guitar work on Steely Dan classics such as "Kid Charlemagne" and "Josie."

His fretwork was featured in more than 3,000 sessions, including appearances with John Lennon, Linda Ronstadt and Barbra Streisand. Along the way there were two Grammy Awards and another five Grammy nominations.

But in the early part of this decade, Carlton put out the word he was through with session work. "I just started realizing that I wasn't looking forward to going to work in the morning. And when I realized I wasn't looking forward to making my sessions, rather than continue doing them and take the money, I quit."

Since then, Carlton's solo career has progressed steadily, peaking in 1987 with his acclaimed "Last Nite" album and its single, "Minute by Minute." The shooting interrupted work on a follow-up album, and instantly changed his priorities.

Almost Anything Goes On German Stage

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BERLIN — Shakespearean characters zoom around on skateboards on one stage, a wooden pillar speaks to a troubled woman on another and neo-Nazis unleash a bloodbath during yet a third German theatrical production.

From high-living West Berlin to the shabby steel city of Bochum, the artistic heirs of the great 18th-century playwright Friedrich Schiller have given modern German theater an international reputation for intensity and daring.

But critics are not completely satisfied with today's West German theater, and some even charge the stage hasn't actually progressed past styles of a decade ago.

"There are really not that many innovations since the 1970s. Directors even seem to imitate each other these days," said Georg Hensel, drama critic for the Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung newspaper.

Theater officials, on the other hand, say West German critics are a hard-bitten crew who aren't willing to give fair appraisals of the contemporary theater scene.

"Many times critics will generally like a play but then tear it apart over just a few small points," said Sieglinde Tuschy, spokeswoman for the world-famous Schiller Theater in West Berlin. "I think this has something to do with the serious German mentality. German theater is really some of the best in the world."

Germans have long been known for their love of music, but they also have a special passion for drama. There are more than 300 theaters scattered across West Germany, and about one-tenth of the population of 62 million goes to see a play at least once a year.

Some of the major theaters are in relatively unknown places such as the rundown Ruhr Valley city of Bochum, staging premieres by such internationally renowned directors as Peter Zadek and Hans Neuenfels.

West German theaters get hefty government subsidies to help keep the price of tickets down. About 2 billion marks ($1.1 billion) was shelled out in 1988.

Schiller helped launch German drama into the international limelight 200 years ago with such plays as "The Robbers," a vicious attack on political tyranny. German theater flourished through the beginning of the 20th century, creating greats such as Bertolt Brecht, but it was harshly repressed by the Nazis.

The West German stage burst into a renaissance after the war, marked by boldness and innovation. Even theater in East Germany is marked by an experimentation and intensity that some might find surprising for the communist country. The '60s and '70s launched the careers of a group of directors who today are among West Germany's most prominent — Neuenfels, Zadek, Peter Stein and Heiner Mueller.

Critics say this new breed, teaming up with native authors such as Rolf Hochhuth and Botho Strauss, brought West German theater to new heights of innovation.

Attacks on the Third Reich were among the targets of the new generation, as exemplified by Hochhuth's 1963 play "The Deputy," a critical look at the alleged failure of the Vatican to do enough to stop the extermination of European Jews during the Nazi era.

Phone Joins Two Broadcasters

King and her husband, Bill Bumpus, were not comfortable with the idea of accepting such a gift. So Winfrey instead opened an account for the purpose of getting King and Bumpus a life-altering, live-in nanny.

When it is pointed out that their friendship might seem saccharine to outsiders, King responds, "Oh, I know. I wish we had something to tell you that was really obnoxious."

But they don't. Instead, they report, they have never had a fight (though they had a spat once when Winfrey left King — but not some other friends — behind on a late-night visit to Quincy Jones).

"I have a husband. I have three sisters. I have a mother, all of whom I'm very close to, but I know there are things only Oprah knows," King said.

Added Winfrey, "She actually knows more about me than I remember about myself."

Though both women can track their individual earnings over the past decade (Winfrey always made more), King said, "I can honestly say — and people ask me this all the time — that I haven't been (jealous). I think it would be different if I was working at (a fast-food place) and thought ... 'look at all she has.' But I feel very satisfied with my own life, so that whatever she does makes me even happier for her."

Which is why Winfrey said that King comes first.

"There's sort of a jockeying for position among friends," she said. "And the interesting thing about that is nobody jockeys with Gayle; everybody knows that Gayle is No. 1, so nobody even tries to get that position. All of my friends and work associates embrace Gayle as their friend. I believe it's the 'we-can't-beat-her-so-we-might-as-well-let-her-join-us' philosophy."

Winfrey said that she is particularly grateful that King has never asked for anything — unlike many others she knows.

"The thing about it is every single person I know at this point has asked me for something," Winfrey said. "People have come out of the woodwork. People who are my friends, other people who think they are my friends. Everybody wants something."

When a longtime friend recently hit Winfrey up for a favor, she buzzed King up on the phone immediately.

"I called up Gayle and said, 'Please, please. You're the only one left. I'm putting on my panty hose, and I just want to say to you now: Please don't ever ask me for anything. Really, I'm holding out for you, OK? You've made it this far. Hold on a little longer.'"

"The only thing I've ever asked her for is old clothes," King said.

Of course, Winfrey's old clothes are good enough to wear to the Oscars.

"I'm getting a little tired of that action, though," said Winfrey, ribbing her buddy.

"She comes to Chicago with an empty suitcase. And I don't mean one of those over nighters, either. I mean the kind where you can put three other pieces of luggage inside and zip it up. Unbelievable."

"But she's smaller than me now," King said, regretfully.

Our History

The Daily Reflector, a part of the life of Greenville and Pitt County for over one hundred years, has come a long way since December 10, 1894 when founder David Jordan Whichard issued the first daily newspaper in the history of Greenville. Since that time, it has outgrown four buildings and ten presses, and now employs close to one hundred people, both full and part-time. And, with the ever-growing population of Greenville and Pitt County, the circulation of the newspaper has increased to about 20,000 over the past ninety-five years.

Founder of The Daily Reflector, David Jordan Whichard

The Daily Reflector's history began when "L. Thomas and Company" began publication of The Express in 1877. One year later, two brothers, David Jordan Whichard and Julian R. Whichard, came to work for the company, with David later becoming editor at the young age of sixteen. In January of 1882, however, the brothers struck out on their own and began publishing The Eastern Reflector, a weekly newspaper for Pitt County. With his older brother moving away from Pitt County in 1885, David Jordan Whichard became the sole owner and publisher of The Reflector, and began publication on December 10, 1894 on a one-month trial basis. Realizing its success, The Daily Reflector continued to be published daily except Saturday, up to the present time.

David Jordan Whichard continued as editor and publisher of The Daily Reflector until July of 1919 when he sold it to his son, David Julian Whichard, who, at 94 years of age, is the present chairman of the board for the company. The younger Whichard continued to publish the newspaper, incorporating it in 1948 when his two sons, David Jordan Whichard II and John S. Whichard, now co-publishers of The Daily Reflector, began to assume management responsibilities. D. Jordan Whichard III, a fourth generation descendent of the founder, is presently the general manager of The Daily Reflector, having joined the organization in 1985.

Since its very beginning, The Daily Reflector has continued to grow and change to meet the informational needs of its readers. Today is no different. Let us show you how we've changed for the better...all to serve you and our community.

Our New

The Daily Reflector is proud of its most recent renovations, and would like to invite you to come and take a look at our new facilities. Our thirteen-month renovation program, beginning in October of 1987, is the result of continued growth of our organization.

The first phase of the project included the addition of 2400 square feet to The Daily Reflector's distribution and circulation area and the installation of more modern machinery, better accommodating the newspaper's traffic flow while making the circulation department more accessible to the public.

Once phase one was completed, expansion was focused on the advertising department and the newsroom, where additional square footage and more structured departmental designs were planned to make these areas more spacious and productive.

Building

The Daily Reflector building after latest additions and renovations: same address, new look!

The remodeling of the second floor included the relocation of the administrative offices and a central computerized bookkeeping department, not to mention the impressive second story skylight which can be seen from our main lobby, the last area to be completed.

With the final landscaping and the expansion and redesign of our parking areas, our building was completed in January of 1989, giving The Daily Reflector a total of 30,000 square feet and a new, updated look that we are very proud of.

Please join us on Sunday, June 4th, when we open our doors to the public, and share the pride we feel as we introduce you to our new Daily Reflector building.

Greenville, N.C.

Our Progress II

1. The first Reflector Building was located on Pitt Street in Greenville from 1882 until 1896. Then called The Eastern Reflector, a weekly publication, the newspaper was printed in this building which D.J. Whichard's grandmother originally used as a schoolhouse.

2. The second home of The Daily Reflector was in this building, located on Evans Street just south of Fifth Street in the vicinity of Five Points in Greenville. The newspaper was published in this location until 1900, when The Reflector moved to a newer facility.

3. In 1900, The Daily Reflector purchased a two-story building at the corner of Evans and Third Streets, where it remained until 1956. The move from Five-Points was completed just in time for the January 1, 1901 edition to be printed in its new location. Growth and the addition of new equipment, however, prompted the design of a new building for future expansion.

4. The last move for The Daily Reflector was in 1956, when the newest building was constructed at 209 Cotanche Street, its present location. This was the first facility that was actually designed for the newspaper and its needs; all the other locations being in buildings constructed for other purposes.

5. In 1969 and in 1978, additions were made to the building on Cotanche Street to accommodate the growth of the business and the addition of new printing equipment.

Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY June 1

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Do something "together" with a special friend. The economic picture brightens. If you receive a confusing message, don't reply.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): The Moon in your sign accents a steadfast personality, personal popularity and romance. Intuition is heightened.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Accepting a social invitation is uplifting. Focus on expanding your horizons and camaraderie. Nighttime dreams carry a message.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Economic picture appears brighter. It is advantageous to continue to clamp down on expenses. Extend congratulations to a pal.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): It is a good time to address issues. How can you improve life? Where are you in career objectives? What is needed to go forward?

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): You are slow to gather your forces and approach a prospective mate. Plan a rendezvous surrounding a common interest.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): An attitude adjustment may be needed if you are seeking to get ideas across to siblings. Talking on their level will do wonders.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): You seek more independence and private time. Listen to your daydreams, as they are part of your intuition.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Your memory may not be cooperative today. Mental rest and relaxation are recommended. You can find a good buy on hard goods.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Furthering a relationship may require a stronger commitment. Boring routines can be changed by diversification and rescheduling.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): You may adjust to change more easily as your recent stubborn streak changes. Now, live it up a little, relax and avoid drudgery.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Do one thing at a time. Tie up loose ends. Connect with elements of pleasure. Be confident of your ability to perform difficult tasks.

 The hallmark of an expert is his card-play technique. He takes every chance to ensure his contract. To illustrate our point, we've made a slight change in a hand played at the recent Spring North American Championships by Steve Robinson of Washington, D.C.

After uncovering the heart fit, North invited game. With five trumps and a maximum no trump abounding in prime cards, South had no hesitation in accepting.

West's lead of the six of spades, his second-best, is the modern way of showing a worthless suit. Declarer's problem was to keep East off lead so as to protect the king of clubs from a lead through.

A discard from dummy was not going to help, so declarer won the spade in hand and led a heart toward the king. West did as well as he could by rising with the ace and exiting with the jack, won on the board. Since hearts had split evenly, declarer could afford to overtake the queen of spades with the ace and ruff the remaining spade. Next, he cashed the king of diamonds and then finessed the jack.

In with the queen of diamonds, West had a choice of losing returns. A spade would yield a ruff-and-sluff and a club would set up the king as the game-going trick.

Note that declarer's line of play guaranteed the contract whenever East had the queen of diamonds or the suit split 3-3—the 13th diamond would be set up for a club discard while dummy had a trump entry to cash it. If West had four diamonds to the queen, declarer would still be able to fall back on leading a club to the king for the fulfilling trick.

What I Want Out Of Life

By Joel Cohen

I want to be president of the United States in the twenty-first century. I would stop people from cutting down too many trees so that there will be enough trees in the world. Trees give us oxygen we need to breathe. I would try change the laws to not let people buy machine guns, except the army.

First, I will go to college to become a lawyer. Maybe I will go to Duke. Then I will try to become a judge. I will put up a campaign to let people know I am a good person so they will vote for me to be president.

Someday I might marry and have three children. I will take my family to Disney World, Chicago and Hawaii. I would always like to have a sense of humor because I don't like to be too serious. I love to laugh.

Federal Facts Liberty Bell

In 1752 the people of Philadelphia paid $300 for a bell for their state house. It was made in England after the design of a bell called "Great Tom" in Westminster. After its arrival in the colony of Pennsylvania, the bell broke and was remade by John Pass and Charles Stowe, Jr. On the newly made bell the original inscription was recast: "Proclaim Liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof" (Leviticus 25:10). From this wording the bell later became commonly known as the Liberty Bell.

It was not until 1848 that the name Liberty Bell was first printed for all to read. Prior to that date, the bell had been called the Bell of the Revolution, Old Independence and the Old State House Bell.

When the Liberty Bell first broke, the people of Pennsylvania wanted to return it to the Whitechapel Bell Foundry in England. The ship's captain refused to take the 2,080 pound bell on a return voyage. For this reason, it was recast by Pass and Stowe who put their names on the remade bell.

During the fighting of the American Revolution, the Liberty Bell was taken out of the tower of the Pennsylvania State House and was hidden. The bell was taken to Allentown where it was kept in the basement of Zion's Reformed Church. It was rehung in Philadelphia on June 28, 1778 and was rung when the British General Cornwallis surrendered to George Washington and the Marquis de Lafayette at Yorktown, Va.

The bell has been rung on many occasions and after cracking a second time, it was again repaired and used. The last ringing took place in 1846 in celebration of the birthday of George Washington. In 1917 it was lightly struck to announce that war with Germany had been declared. On D-day (June 6, 1944), the Liberty Bell was again struck when the allied forces invaded Europe in World War II. The bell is no longer rung today and has even been moved from the Pennsylvania State House (Independence Hall) in Philadelphia. In 1976 the Liberty Bell was moved to a glass enclosed building in front of its original location. Today this symbol of freedom and liberty can be visited and seen in the Liberty Pavilion located on the green in front of Independence Hall.

Author: Foods Control Moods

By Valerie Foster
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

If we really are what we eat, then most of us are giant nacho chips or chocolate bars.

Lucky for us that we are not walking advertisements for the foods we consume. Or are we? Some experts say our moods are governed by the foods we eat.

Judith Wurtman has been researching the effect of food on our brain at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and for her the answer is a definite "yes." Her work centers on the brain's neurotransmitters, which, she says, control our behavior. And what controls these neurotransmitters?

Food. She has put her research into a paperback, Managing Your Mind and Mood Through Food, (Harper & Row; $7.95), which, if you believe the book's cover, will help you "enhance performance, handle stress, and avoid out-of-control eating."

In simplest forms, the neurotransmitters Wurtman studies are dopamine, norepinephrine and serotonin. The first two are the alertness chemicals, the latter, the calming chemical. When the brain is producing dopamine and norepinephrine, people have a tendency to think more quickly, react more rapidly, and feel more attentive, motivated and mentally energetic. When the brain produces serotonin, stress and tension are eased and the ability to concentrate is enhanced. Keep everything in balance and not only will you stay healthy, you may lose unwanted pounds.

So what are those magic mood foods?

—Eating protein increases alertness and has an energizing effect on your mind.

—Eating carbohydrates alone, without protein, has a calming, focusing effect.

The most beneficial proteins are those with small amounts of fats or carbohydrates such as shellfish, fish, chicken, veal, and very lean beef trimmed of all visible fat. The group of proteins next in line are high-fat dairy products, including cottage cheese, milk and yogurt; dried peas, beans and lentils; and tofu and other soybean-based foods. Eat sparingly of this last group of high-fat proteins, which includes beef, lamb, pork, lunch meats, organ meats, hard cheese, whole milk and regular yogurt.

Now for the calming factor — those wonderful carbohydrates that produce serotonin. You will like this list, but Wurtman cautions moderation, because they are fattening and only small amounts are needed to produce the calming effect. The list of sugars includes: candy, cookies, pie, cake, ice cream, jams, jellies and preserves, syrups and soft drinks. Not fruit, because it does not promote serotonin production, although it should be part of your well-balanced diet.

From the starch category, reach for bread, crackers, muffins, rolls, bagels, pasta, potatoes, rice, corn, barley, kasha, oatmeal and other cereals.

Do you need a quick revival around 3 or 4 every afternoon? Combine a cup of caffeinated coffee or tea with a carbohydrate, say five graham crackers or a bran muffin. A mini version of British High Tea.

Soybeans can be found in a variety of foods regularly purchased by consumers

Soybeans Among Oldest New Foods In Kitchen

By Rosalie Trotman

"Tarheel Pearls," soybeans, are one of North Carolina's fastest growing economic commodities to farmers and allied industries.

"Soybeans are around us in a lot of different ways," said Addie Gore, Pitt County home economics extension agent. "The largest form of soy products is infant formulas. When an infant cannot tolerate or take cow's milk, a doctor might prescribe a ready-prepared formula — it's generally a soybean product." Soy milk is available commercially in dry, concentrated and ready-to-use forms. "Commercial soy milk is often fortified with vitamins and minerals to approximate the composition of cow's milk," she said.

"Soybeans are rich in polyunsaturated oil, which is extracted for commercial use," she said. "Many commercial vegetable oils contain soybean oil such as margarine, shortenings and salad oils. Because soybean oil is polyunsaturated, it has become a leading food for diet-conscious people."

An important ingredient in some prepared foods such as hamburger, sausage, hot dogs and commercially prepared salads is soy protein. Meat loaves, patties, chili and meatballs can be made more uniform, juicy and nutritious with added soy protein. In sausages, soy protein acts as an emulsifier, promoting the even distribution of fat and lean meat.

"You can buy canned soup mix, chili, Italian-style ravioli, frozen beef patties and bacon bits containing soy protein and soy milk," Miss Gore said. "There's a breakfast bacon that is high in protein and low in both fat and calories."

"Soy protein is now being used in a number of new food products. Highly versatile, it can be concentrated, textured, spun into fibers, flavored and colored. It can be formed into slices, chunks, chips and tailored into almost any form desired," she said.

"Soybeans have nearly twice the protein content of cheese, twice the protein of red meat and 10 times the protein of milk. It assures freshness in refrigerated biscuit doughs, helps give a special golden-brown crispness to doughnuts, materially increases the protein content of bread and promotes tenderness and aroma in cakes," she said.

Soybeans are one of the earliest food plants cultivated by man. Ancient Chinese literature reveals that it was widely used as a food centuries before written records were kept. The soybean was introduced in Europe in the 17th century and was first mentioned in American literature in 1804.

"Soybean curd or tofu may be purchased fresh in many grocery stores and specialty markets. Tofu is available in Pitt County in most grocery stores in the produce section and can be used for any meal as it is very bland in taste. It can taste like shrimp or peach cobbler — depending on what it's cooked with. Tofu is a protein food that is very versatile — it can be used as an extender in home cooking," said Miss Gore.

Soybeans can be used in a variety of recipes including:

OVEN CROQUETTES

1½ cups chopped celery
1 cup pureed tomato
1 tsp. salt
4 tbsps. flour
2 tbsps. oil
3 cups soybean pulp
Bread crumbs or cornflakes
1 beaten egg
2 tbsps. milk

Mix together onion, celery, pureed tomato and salt. Blend flour and oil. Bring tomato mixture to a boil, then add slowly to flour blend, stirring until smooth. Return to stove and cook, slowly, stirring until thickened and smooth. cool. Add soybean pulp and roll into croquettes of desired size. Dip each croquette into blended egg and milk, then into crumbs or cornflakes. Bake in hot oven for about 30 minutes. Serves six to eight.

SOYBEAN CHOPS

2 cups cooked soybeans
1 cup cooked rice
2 tbsps. chopped onion
2 eggs
½ tsp. salt
½ tsp. celery salt
1 cup soft whole wheat bread crumbs (not packed)

Mash soybeans; mix all ingredients together. Form into patties and bake in moderate oven until brown, approximately 45 minutes. Serves six.

SOY VEGETABLE LOAF

2 cups cooked soybeans
¾ cup cooked carrots
2 tbsps. onion, chopped
¾ cup celery
¾ cup fresh or canned tomatoes
1½ tsp. salt
1½ cups dry bread crumbs

Grind soybeans, carrots, onion and celery in food chopper. Add tomatoes, salt and bread crumbs and mix well. Pour into greased loaf pan. Bake for 45 minutes in moderate oven. May be topped with sliced tomatoes. Serves four to six.

SALTED SOYBEANS

Because soybeans contain so much protein and fat, they are good fried in deep fat and salted to served like salted nuts. Any of the good table varieties may be used. Wash and soak the dray

Bar Codes Scan Market Secrets At The Checkout

By Martha Groves
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Safeway Stores figured out a few years ago that shoppers bought more candy bars when they were stocked at front-end check stands than when placed only on racks in the middle of stores. So the Oakland, Calif.-based chain started stocking the sweets up front.

Ralphs Grocery recently found in a store-by-store analysis that sales of fresh pasta had "really exploded" in certain of its locations, according to Al Marasca, executive vice president of the Compton, Calif., company. That enabled the company to expand the space for that product only in those stores where demand was greatest.

What led to these changes were bar codes, those ubiquitous black and white stripes on products from peanut butter to kiffy litter. To shoppers, the codes are best known for being pulled by a cashier across a windowlike device in the checkout stand, which somehow translates them into a price that flashes onto a screen.

But bar codes also have a secret life — as speedy providers of facts and figures about what people buy and why.

In addition to streamlining the checkout process and saving grocers the cost of tagging many items, bar codes are being used increasingly to help manufacturers and retailers make smarter decisions about which products to sell and how to market them.

Manufacturers depend on the data to find out how well their products are moving and what promotions work best to stimulate sales. At Ralston Purina Co. in St. Louis, maker of Chex cereal, Wonder Bread, dog food and other products, bar code data is "relied upon in different degrees in our different divisions, but all of them do use it," said spokesman Patrick Farrell.

The technology, which uses laser beams to scan bar codes, is worthy of "Star Wars." Scanning was pioneered in the early 1970s by Kroger, the big Cincinnati-based grocery company. Now, according to industry figures, nearly 17,000 of the nation's 30,000 supermarkets (not including small mom-and-pop stores) have laser scanning equipment.

Here is how the process works: Before any information about a product can be collected, a supermarket company makes an entry in a host computer at headquarters.

The file usually contains a 10-digit number represented by the bar code plus the current price. The first five digits stand for the manufacturer, whose number is assigned by the Uniform Code Council in Dayton, Ohio. The council, which maintains a database of about 60,000 companies from 77 different countries, also determines the specifications for each bar code, including the width of stripes and the contrast between the bars and the background.

The next five digits, assigned by each manufacturer, signify the product, with variations by flavor, size or weight. A 16-ounce box of Rice Krispies, for example, would have a slightly different code from a 24-ounce package. And an 8-ounce container of strawberry-flavored Dannon yogurt would have a different number from an 8-ounce container of blueberry.

Back at the checkout stand, a cashier passes the bar code across a window embedded in the counter that covers the inner workings of the laser scanner. The scanner can read the code in the proper order, even if the item is upside down. If the scanner recognizes the code as one contained in the store's computer, it sounds a beep and flashes a brief product description and the price on a screen. It also tallies another sale in that store for that product.

Although stores could analyze the data on a daily basis, "most don't have the time," noted Jerry Morton, who runs Store Systems Consulting in Lawrence, Kan., and advises supermarkets about scanning equipment.

More commonly, the headquarters computer retrieves information on a weekly basis from each store, and then the chain sells the data to services that analyze it for manufacturers. Some large chains get as much as $1 million a year just for selling the data, according to Tony MacNeary, vice president of retailer client services for one such company, Information Resources Inc.

Information Resources Inc. and A.C. Nielsen Co., both based in Chicago, use the vast stores of data to track the success or failure of products and promotions. By tracking data from a representative sample of stores, these companies can analyze how an individual item (say, Diet Pepsi) or company (PepsiCo) is faring during a certain period or in a given region. They can also determine whether sales of bean dip go up if a supermarket puts taco chips on sale.

"For the retailer or manufacturer, we can see whether it's worth more to run a feature ad in a newspaper or a huge display in a store," MacNeary said. "Combining them might be even more effective."

As part of its service, Nielsen analyzes a wealth of data from 15,000 U.S. households. Using special hand-held scanning equipment at home, participating residents scan the groceries and other products they have bought. They note such factors as whether the price was marked down or whether they used a coupon. Nielsen also takes into account what magazines and newspapers these people read to find out what ads they may have seen. Participants are rewarded with gifts and trips.

Although manufacturers have started putting such data to good use, retailers have yet to tap the full potential of scanner information, many observers say. Instead of using scanner data and computers to develop automated reordering of products, an estimated 98 percent of the nation's groceries still use manual methods. Usually, store personnel must walk the aisles with hand-held scanners that read bar code tags on the shelves.

"Nobody is getting more than 10 percent of value out of the data,"

Special Dietary Guidelines For Infants Discussed

Q. My sister brought home a booklet of dietary guidelines for infants from the Family Practice Center. Could you please talk about them. — A.G., Ayden

A. We spend a lot of time talking adult nutrition concerns in this column. The other newspaper and magazine columnists, too, talk about the cholesterol, fat and sodium needs of Americans over two years old. As a result, many Americans are changing the way they eat. Sometimes, they change too dramatically the way they feed their babies. So, the professional staff at Gerber Company has taken the dietary advice given by the American Pediatric Association and the American Dietetic Association and created a Dietary Guideline for

Kathy Kolasa

Ph.D., ECU Dept. Family Medicine

Babies less than 2 years old. I've had the pleasure of working with the Gerber nutritionists while I was at Michigan State. They are informed and a caring and concerned group.

1. Adults are told to eat a variety of foods. For babies, they should build a variety of foods. Babies do not need a variety of foods in their first six years of life. Breast feeding is recommended for babies. The best alternative to breast milk is infant formula. Although every baby is an individual, most don't need and really can't nutritionally benefit from eating cereal or other foods before they are 4 months old. From 4-12 months, give new foods to the baby. We generally recommend giving them one at a time so adults can watch for any food sensitivity. By the baby's first birthday, baby should be eating a variety of foods.

2. Adults are told to maintain desirable body weight. For babies, listen to the baby's appetite to avoid over-feeding or under-feeding. Many moms and dads ask how much they should feed their baby. Generally, the appetite of the baby is a good measure of his/her energy needs. Parents should, along with their physician, chart the weight and length of the baby regularly. This is a good way to see if the right growth is occurring if you feed the baby according to the baby's appetite. Feed babies when hungry. But, don't force them to drink the last few ounces or "clean their plate." Most babies will not overeat nor undereat unless stressed or pressured. So many of my weight control patients tell me the hardest habit to break in the one they learned very early. They learned to never leave food on their plate, even if they are not hungry.

3. Adults are told to avoid too much fat, saturated fat and cholesterol. This is the dietary guidelines that has caused problems for many parents and children. Moms and dads with family history of heart disease want to do all they can to prevent the disease taking its toll on their children. But, some fat and cholesterol is needed in everyone's diets, not only for the flavor, but also for health reasons. Even more so, for babies. Babies need many calories to grow. But, their stomachs are small and limit the amount of food they can eat. Breast milk has almost half of its calories in fat. Breast milk has cholesterol in it. Infant formulas are made to be like breast milk and also have high calorie load from fat. It is OK for babies to get half their calories from fat. But, it is not good for adults to do so. So, after a baby stops drinking infant formula, they baby needs whole milk until the second birthday. Adults need only 30 percent of their calories from fat, so skim milk and low fat dairy products are right for them.

I'll finish my guidelines next time. Remember, if you have questions about your baby's diet, ask your doctor, nurse, nutritionist or registered dietitian.

Bar Codes Have Variety Of Store Uses

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

The following are some of the various ways that stores are putting bar codes to use:

At a store in Morrow, Ga., super-market giant Kroger Co. is taking another step with the scanner concept that it pioneered: At two of eight checkout lanes, customers may unload their carts and scan items themselves. The products then travel along a conveyor belt equipped with a sensor to make sure that all items have been "rung up." The shopper then gets an itemized receipt and pays a cashier.

"It's a fairly user-friendly system," said Paul Bernish, a spokesman for Cincinnati-based Kroger. Although Kroger plans to continue testing the nearly 3-year-old program to "work out some of the kinks," Bernish acknowledged that the company has no plans to expand the idea to its other 1,234 stores.

"We don't have the manpower and resources to devote to this project," said Bernish, noting that Kroger has been undergoing a costly corporate overhaul since last September. He added that there is tremendous "expense involved in trying to make a store totally scannable."

Who likes self-service scanning? Not surprisingly, Bernish said, older customers have not taken to it much. But younger shoppers have. "There is a perception that it saves time," he said.

Another pilot program could help

LAT-WP News Service

A pilot program would make scanning self-service, eliminating need for check-out personnel eliminate what many bargain-minded shoppers dread: the need to clip and keep track of coupons.

In February 1987, a unit of Citicorp, the New York-based financial company, set up an electronic coupon program with the 18-store Ukrops supermarket chain in Richmond, Va. About 6,500 volunteers received cards to use when shopping. Each month they are also given a list of 40 items for which they can automatically receive cents-off credit.

Each time participants visit a Ukrops store, they hand the card to the cashier, who runs it through a machine. Scanning equipment then captures a record of that person's purchases. If any items bought are on the electronic-coupon list, the equipment records the deduction.

"For the consumer in the long run, this saves bother on clipping (coupons), and they get $500 per year of coupons," said William J. Ahearn, a Citicorp vice president. Ukrops gains because it can tailor promotions to individuals or families. And down the road, Ahearn added, Citicorp could benefit by having supermarket customers use debit cards tied to Citibank accounts.

Talk about precise. Dwayne H. Rapp, operations manager for Stork Symbology in Monrovia, Calif., one of about 10 U.S. manufacturers of the bar codes that go on product packages, said that each code must be correct to within 4-10,000ths of an inch. But to be on the safe side, Rapp said, "we don't like to send out any differences plus or minus 2-10,000ths."

Grocery shoppers may benefit from the increased speed and accuracy that bar code scanning affords, but many cashiers pay a high price for the technology. Many checkout stands require clerks to stretch, reach, bend or stand in uncomfortable positions for long periods.

Bar Codes Scan Facts

said W. Frank Dell, vice president in the New York office of Cresap, a Towers Perrin company that consults for food and consumer products companies.

Safeway Stores is an exception. In May 1983, the big chain hired a developmental psychologist named Louise H. Booth to head an in-house marketing research organization. Her team collects and analyzes scanner data for other retailers and for manufacturers, such as Procter & Gamble, Ralston Purina and PepsiCo.

"We not only earn some money by doing research," said Booth, manager of Safeway Scanner Marketing Research Services. "We learn the answers to questions (our clients are) asking." Safeway also analyzes its own data, looking for ways to boost sales, as it did with candy bars.

Armed with scanner data, manufacturers can get influential retailers such as Safeway on their side by proving that shelf space for their products can mean added profit all around.

Take kiwis. In 1984, the New Zealand Kiwifruit Authority went to Safeway to learn how best to market the exotic fruit to U.S. customers. In a series of tests, Safeway showed that added display in the produce area plus special advertising and a reduced price could boost weekly kiwi sales to more than 450 per store from 25.

"It was so useful that we're thinking of updating it in the next year or two," said Hillary A. Brick, with the kiwi marketing board in Oakland.

(To be sure, kiwis and other fruits and vegetables do not have bar codes affixed to them. To ring up produce purchases, cashiers punch in a two-digit code that prompts the computer to look up the price for that item. The data is then analyzed in the same way as other bar code information.)

Eventually, as the system becomes even more sophisticated, Booth expects Safeway's service to help manufacturers target customers more effectively. "P&G might want to send a coupon to people who buy disposable diapers, in particular people who buy the other brand, or to anybody who buys baby food," she said. "This is a way for P&G to get a mailing list based on the purchase behavior of a household."

Where's the Rhubarb? In Tortes, Pies And Breads

By Lynn Williams
LAT-WF NEWS SERVICE

"Rha of the Barbarians."
What is this? A Saturday morning super-hero opus? A new movie starring Arnold Schwarzenegger and Brigitte Neilson?
Don't be silly. Despite its name, "rha of the barbarians" (or, in Latin, rhabarbarum) is as home-spun, old-fashioned, wholesome and non-violent as your own grandmother's strawberry-rhubarb pie.
Food historian Waverly Root says that rhubarb gets its botanical name from the Rha river — now called the Volga — on whose banks the Tartars cultivated the ruby-red vegetable with the sour-sweet flavor. Rhubarb apparently originated somewhere in Northern Asia, and the first written mention of it is in a Chinese herbal of about 2700 B.C. For centuries it was treated as a medicine, not as a food; its root was used as a purgative and as a tonic to perk up tired blood.

Apparently, according to Root, Europeans finally began to consider eating rhubarb in the 17th century. But they made one colossal mistake. They first tried the leaves, boiled, as a salad green. One English taster found that they had "an acid but highly refined flavor." But some were able to say nothing at all; rhubarb leaves contain oxalic acid, and eating them can prove fatal.
Understandably, this caused a considerable setback in rhubarb's popularity. It was not until the early 19th century that the stalks' unusual flavor — which is somewhere between apples and strawberries, but much tarter than either — was fully appreciated. It found favor in the Netherlands, Germany, Scandinavia and the United States (where its introduction is credited to Benjamin Franklin) — and especially in pie-loving England.

When buying rhubarb, look for firm, crisp, tender stalks; if it is floppy, it is not fresh. The stalks will be pale pink to deep red. If the leaves have been left on, they will be perky and fresh-looking, not wilted. Avoid stems that are very thick, as they can be hollow and fibrous, or too thin, as they may lack flavor.

Rhubarb will not keep long at room temperature, but if the stalks are bought fresh, you can keep them for several days in a plastic bag in the vegetable crisper of your refrigerator.

To prepare the rhubarb for cooking, trim away the toxic leaves and discard them, and trim the ends of the stalks. Stalks are usually cut into half-inch to three-inch pieces before cooking.

It also freezes well. Wash and trim the stalks, and cut into one or two inch pieces. Place the pieces in a flat pan and cover, then put in the freezer. When the rhubarb is frozen, transfer the pieces into moisture-proof bags, and return to the freezer.

RHUBARB TORTE

- 1 cup flour
- 2 tbsps. powdered sugar
- 1/2 cup butter or margarine
- 1/4 cup flour
- 1 1/2 cups sugar
- 2 eggs
- 3/4 cup chopped walnuts
- 3 cups rhubarb cut in 1-inch pieces.
- 1 tsp. vanilla

Mix 1 cup flour and powdered sugar in a bowl and cut in butter with pastry blender. Pack lightly in greased 8-inch square pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 15 minutes.

In a bowl, mix 1/4 cup flour and sugar. Stir together well.

In another bowl, beat eggs with egg beater. Add walnuts, rhubarb and vanilla. Add to flour and sugar mixture. Pour over baked crust.

SAUTEED SCALLOPS IN RHUBARB-GINGER SAUCE

- 1/2 cup finely diced rhubarb
- 3 tbsps. brown sugar
- 1 tbsp. fresh orange juice
- 1/4 tsp. grated orange zest
- 2 tbsps. minced fresh ginger root
- 2 tbsps. granulated sugar
- 1/2 cup butter
- 1 lb. sea scallops, rinsed
- 1/2 cup dry vermouth
- 1/2 cup heavy cream

Combine rhubarb, brown sugar, orange juice and zest and cook until thoroughly softened, about 20 minutes.

In skillet, combine ginger root, granulated sugar and 2 tablespoons water; cook until reduced by half; add butter.

Increase heat and add scallops. Cook, stirring, until opaque, about 45 seconds. Remove scallops with slotted spoon.

Add vermouth to skillet over high heat and deglaze, scraping up brown bits from bottom. Add cream and rhubarb mixture and cook 2 to 3 minutes. Serve over scallops. Makes 4 servings.

RHUBARB BREAD

- 3 eggs
- 2 cups brown sugar
- 1 cup salad oil

- 2 tps. vanilla
- 2 1/2 cups finely chopped rhubarb
- 1/2 cup chopped walnuts
- 3 cups flour
- 1/2 tsp. baking powder
- 2 tps. baking soda
- 1/2 tsp. nutmeg
- 1/2 tsp. ground allspice
- 2 tps. cinnamon
- 1 tsp. salt

Beat eggs, brown sugar, oil and vanilla until thick and foamy. Stir in rhubarb and nuts.

Mix flour, baking powder, baking soda, spices and salt. Add to the rhubarb mixture, and stir until just blended.

Divide the batter between two greased 5-by-9-inch loaf pans. Bake at 350 degrees for 1 hour. Cool in pan 10 minutes, then cool on wire rack. Makes 2 loaves.

SHARON'S PORK CHOPS WITH RHUBARB DRESSING

- 1/2 tsp. dried rosemary, crushed
- 3/4 tsp. salt
- 1/8 tsp. pepper
- 2 tbsps. salad oil
- 6 pork loin or shoulder chops, cut 3/4-inch thick
- 4 slices firm-textured bread, cut into 1/2-inch cubes
- 3/4 cup firmly packed brown sugar
- 1/2 tsp. ground cinnamon
- 1/4 tsp. ground allspice
- 2 to 2 1/4 lbs. fresh rhubarb, cut into 1/2-inch pieces
- 3 tbsps. all-purpose flour

Heat the oil in frying pan over medium high heat. Add chops and brown on both sides; set aside, with drippings.

Stir together the bread cubes, brown sugar, cinnamon, allspice, rhubarb and flour. Spread half the mixture in a greased 9-by-13-inch baking dish. Arrange chops on top; spoon over 3 tablespoons of drippings (Add water if necessary to make this amount). Top with remaining mixture. Cover (If you are making the dish ahead of time, refrigerate).

Bake in 350 degree oven for 45 minutes; uncover and bake 15 minutes or until tender. Makes 6 servings.

RHUBARB CREAM PIE

- 2 cups sliced rhubarb
- 2/3 cup sugar

- 2 tbsps. flour
- 1/4 tsp. nutmeg
- 1 tbsps. water
- 1/2 tsp. lemon extract
- 1/4 tsp. red food coloring
- 1 9-inch unbaked pastry shell

Cream Filling and Meringue:

- 1 1/2 cups milk
- 3/4 cup sugar
- 3 tbsps. flour
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- 2 eggs, separated
- 1/4 tsp. salt
- 1/4 cup sugar

Mix together the rhubarb, the 2-3 cup sugar, the flour and nutmeg. Combine water, flavoring and food coloring and mix with the fruit. Turn into the pastry-lined pan and bake in a 325 degree oven for 40 minutes, or until rhubarb is tender. Cool.

Meanwhile, in the top of a double boiler, heat milk. Mix together the 3/4 cup sugar, 3 tablespoons flour and 1/2 teaspoon salt and mix into hot milk. Stirring, cook until thickened. Beat egg yolks and stir in part of the hot milk mixture; add egg yolks to filling. Place over hot water and stir until eggs are cooked. Cool.

Spread cooled cream filling over the rhubarb layer. Beat egg whites with the 1/4 teaspoon salt until stiff; gradually beat in the 1/4 cup sugar. Spread meringue over cream filling. Place the pie in a 350 degree oven and bake for 15 minutes, or until meringue is golden brown.

Rice Recipes Make Easy Barbecue Side Dishes

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Summer is here and that means it is time for picnics and barbecues. Rice can make a super side dish because it is easily prepared ahead of time. Who wants to spend hours in a hot kitchen when they could be outside baking in the sun?

Most rice dishes, like the Mexican Rice one, can be made a day ahead of time and stored in a casserole dish. Before serving, reheat the dish in a slow oven, covered with foil or lid, or in the microwave. If you use a microwave be sure to heat the rice in a microwave-safe container.

Plain cooked rice can be stored for 7 to 10 days in the refrigerator. Reheating is simple — add 2 tablespoons of water per cup of cooked rice and heat for 5 minutes in a saucepan, or microwave on high for one minute. For example, you could make the rice a day ahead of time for a dish such as Cheddar Beans and Rice. The day you serve it, reheat the rice and add the rest of the ingredients.

MEXICAN RICE

- 2 tbsps. butter or margarine
- 1 cup uncooked rice
- 1/2 cup each chopped onions and green pepper
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 1 tomato, peeled, seeded, and chopped
- 2 cups chicken broth
- 1 tsp. cumin seed
- Salt

Melt butter in 2- to 3-quart saucepan. Add rice and cook over moderate heat until golden, stirring often. Add onion, pepper, and garlic; cook until onions are soft but not brown. Stir in tomato; cook 30 seconds longer. Add broth and cumin. Bring to boil; stir once or twice. Reduce heat, cover, and simmer 15 minutes, or until rice is tender and liquid is absorbed. Add salt to taste. Makes 6 servings.

CHEDDAR BEANS AND RICE

- 1 cup each chopped onions and sliced celery
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1 tsp. polyunsaturated margarine
- 1 cup dried black beans, cooked and well seasoned
- 3 cups hot cooked brown or white rice
- 2 cups shredded Cheddar cheese
- 3 tbsps. snipped fresh parsley

Cook onions, celery, and garlic in margarine until tender. Stir in beans; heat thoroughly. Serve bean mixture over fluffy rice. Top with cheese. Makes 6 servings.

MARINATED GARDEN SALAD

- 2 tbsps. each olive oil and dry white wine
- 1 tbsp. red wine vinegar
- 2 tbsps. snipped fresh parsley
- 1/4 tsp. sugar
- 1/4 tsp. each salt and basil leaves
- 3/4 cup each broccoli florets and diagonally sliced yellow squash
- 1/2 cup chopped red pepper
- 1/4 cup julienned carrots
- 2 cups cooked rice (cooked in chicken broth), cooled
- Lettuce leaves

To make dressing, combine oil, wine, vinegar, parsley, sugar, salt, and basil in screw-top jar. Pour dressing over broccoli, squash, pepper, and carrots in shallow dish. Cover and chill 2 to 3 hours. Add rice; toss lightly. Serve on lettuce leaves. Makes 4 servings.

LENTIL AND CHEESE RICE SALAD

- 3 cups cooked rice, cooled
- 1 1/2 cups cooked lentils, cooled
- 1 cup each diced tomato and chopped broccoli
- 2 cups shredded mozzarella cheese
- 1/4 cup thinly sliced green onions, including tops
- 1/2 cup plain yogurt
- 1/4 cup reduced-calorie sour cream
- 1 tbsp. Dijon-style mustard
- 1/2 tsp. each sugar and salt
- 1/4 tsp. ground red pepper
- Lettuce leaves for garnish

Combine rice, lentils, tomato, broccoli, cheese, and green onions in large mixing bowl. Blend remaining ingredients except lettuce. Toss with rice mixture; chill. Serve on lettuce leaves. Makes 6 servings.

RICE OLE

- 1 cup each chopped onions and green peppers
- 1/2 cup finely chopped celery
- 1 tsp. butter or margarine
- 1 tsp. each chili powder and garlic salt
- 1 can (14 1/2 oz.) peeled whole tomatoes, chopped
- 3 cups cooked rice

Cook onions, green peppers, and celery in butter until vegetables are soft but not brown. Add seasoning, tomatoes, including all juice, and rice. Simmer, stirring occasionally, until all flavors are blended and liquid is absorbed. Makes 6 servings.

CRUNCHY RICE PILAF

- 1 can (8 oz.) sliced water chestnuts, drained
- 1/2 cup diced green pepper
- 1 tsp. butter or margarine, melted

2 cups cooked rice (cooked in beef broth)

- 1 tbsp. snipped chives
- 1/4 tsp. each salt, ground black pepper, and crushed dried thyme leaves

Cook water chestnuts and green pepper in butter in large skillet over medium-high heat. Stir in remaining ingredients; cook until thoroughly heated. Makes 4 servings.

CHINESE RICE WITH VEGETABLES

- 1 cup uncooked rice
- 2 cups water
- 2 tbsps. soy sauce
- 2 tps. vegetable oil
- 2 cups any combination of: Fresh or frozen peas, Frozen mixed vegetables, Julienned carrots

- Sliced mushrooms
- Chopped green pepper
- Shredded Chinese cabbage
- Broccoli flowerets
- Sliced green beans
- Ground black pepper
- Salt (optional)

Combine rice, water, soy sauce, and oil in 2- to 3-quart saucepan. Bring to a boil. Stir once or twice. Reduce heat, cover, and simmer 15 minutes. Add vegetables. Reduce heat, cover, and simmer 5 minutes, or until rice and vegetables are tender and liquid is absorbed. Season to taste. Makes 6 servings.

APPLE ALMOND RICE

- 1 cup uncooked rice
- 1/2 cup each chopped dried apples and toasted slivered almonds
- 1 tsp. each parsley flakes and chicken bouillon granules
- 3/4 cup apple juice

Combine all ingredients with 1 1/2 cups water in 2- to 3-quart saucepan. (For brown rice, use 1 3/4 cups water.) Bring to a boil; stir once or twice. Lower heat to simmer; cover with tight-fitting lid. Cook 15 minutes (45 minutes for brown rice, 20 minutes for parboiled rice) or until liquid is absorbed. Fluff with fork. Makes 6 servings.
