Thatcher Says 'Freedom Is On Offensive'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — President Bush and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher had "a very encouraging and frank exchange" today capping their NATO summit triumph in persuading Western allies to keep short-range nuclear missiles in Europe.

Nearing the end of his week-long European tour, Bush emerged from two hours of talks with Mrs. Thatcher to report that the "special relationship" between the United States and Britain was stronger than ever, "and will continue to be."

Mrs. Thatcher credited Bush's "staunch and steadfast" leadership for a "very, very successful" two-day NATO summit in Brussels, Belgium, earlier this week, and declared that "freedom is on the offensive" around the world.

The two leaders said they discussed a wide range of issues, ranging from the post-summit disarmament measures to the Middle East, China, South Africa, Argentina, Central America and Cambodia.

Bush said that "it is only with friends that you can take off the gloves and talk from the heart." Said Mrs. Thatcher: "We think very much the same way, which isn't surprising. ... I think they have been some of the most valuable and happy talks I have had for a very long time."

Bush met with the prime minister at 10 Downing Street before a luncheon at Buckingham Palace with Queen Elizabeth II. A dinner with Mrs. Thatcher was the final event before Bush returns to the United States early Friday.

The president's visit coincided with a subway strike in London, which created traffic jams 10 miles long on major highways into the capital and forced many commuters to walk or ride bicycles to work. Motorists who reached the city found routes of the Bush motorcade sealed off.

Mrs. Thatcher is regarded as the United States' most ardent supporter in the West. At the NATO summit in Brussels, she took an even harder line than Bush on keeping nuclear missiles in Europe.

Democrats Set To Name Speaker

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — House Democrats are moving to install a new leader swiftly in hopes of avoiding long-term political damage from the ethics controversy that culminated in Speaker Jim Wright's decision to resign and end "this season of bad will."

No sooner had Wright announced his intentions in a forceful speech from the well of the House on Wednesday than Majority Leader Tom Foley said he hoped to "help bring a spirit of mutual respect and reconciliation back to the Congress."

"I think I'm seeing on both sides of the aisle a wish to return to national affairs," said Foley, who is expected to be named speaker at a Democratic caucus next Tuesday.

But while President Bush issued a statement praising Wright's "effectiveness and dedication," congressional Republicans weren't ready to let go of the ethics issue so fast.

Rep. Guy Vander Jagt, chairman of the GOP campaign committee, said Wright believed he had done no wrong. But, he added, the speaker behaved out of a "thought pattern" of "self interest rather than the public interest."

Wright's resignation speech was filled with detailed denials of the House ethics committee charges against him and punctuated with a plea to Democrats not to try and exact revenge on Republicans for his political demise.

"All of us in both parties must resolve to bring this period of mindless cannibalism to an end," said the man who initially laughed off the complaint that triggered the ethics committee investigation. "There's been enough of it."

Wright mopped his forehead repeatedly and his hands shook at times as he delivered his self-defense to a packed chamber and a national television audience.

The ethics committee investigation of the speaker, which led six weeks ago to charges that he violated House rules of conduct in 69 instances, has overshadowed and interfered with the business of legislation.

Every time he wanted to talk about national priorities, Wright said, the news media "wanted to ask me about petty personal finances."

"You do not need that for a speaker. You need somebody else," he said, announcing the end of his tenure.

Despite Foley's assured ascension to speaker, Wright's resignation comes at a tumultuous time for Democrats. Democratic Whip Tony Coelho of California has also announced plans to resign, saying he didn't want to endure an ethics in-

Jones Casts 'No' Vote As Area Legislators Support House Action On Roads Package

By J. Ward Best
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Greenville-area legislators — with one exception — voted with the majority Wednesday as the state House of Representatives gave its approval to a comprehensive roads plan that could give eastern North Carolina major highway improvements.

A second and final House vote was scheduled this afternoon before the roads package would move over to the Senate, which is considering a similar proposal.

The House voted 94-21 to advance the $8.6 million package, which includes improvements for more than 250 miles of highways in Pitt and Greene counties by the year 2001.

The only area legislator voting no in the House in Wednesday's vote was Pitt Rep. Walter Jones Jr. of Farmville. Jones said late this morning that he would explain his vote in a statement he planned to issue Friday.

Other legislators, however, pointed out that the road plan had collected support from county governments in the east.

Rep. Ed Warren, D-Pitt, said in a prepared statement the governments of Pitt and Greene counties supported the plan, "and I am convinced there is a definite need for these projects to be completed."

"As we look at the growth for Pitt and Greene counties," Warren said in his statement, "better accessibility to the area will be the key to getting more industry and tourism in our area."

Rep. Eugene Rogers, D-Martin, said he was "in favor of it (the road plan) all the way."

Rogers said the proposal favored the eastern part of the state and would attract more jobs and industry to the region. "In order to make any progress, to help our tax base," Rogers said, "I think it's imperative we get some decent, good quality roads."

The comprehensive roads program would also carry a tax increase for the improvements.

Both Warren and Rogers said they felt a tax increase for the program was justified.

"The big controversy up here is about how the money is going to be raised," Rogers said.

Rogers said the House was leaning toward a five-and-one-half cent hike in gasoline tax and a highway user fee. The gas tax would be assessed on the wholesale level and at the pumps. The user fee would taken

Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce

Reception

Legislator Praises Pitt-Greenville Reception

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt County boosted its image among members of the General Assembly with a legislative reception Wednesday night in Raleigh, civic leaders and state lawmakers said.

"It was splendid. It was one of the nicest receptions of the 1989 session," state Sen. Tom Taft of Greenville said of the two-hour reception held at the Raleigh Marriott.

The Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce and other area groups sponsored the event, which has been held every other year since 1983. All members of the General Assembly and the Council of State are invited to meet with Pitt educational, business and governmental leaders.

Over 300 people attended the event this year.

"We had overflowing buses and people driving up, and we had a good turnout from the legislators," said Bill Clark, who chaired a chamber committee that organized the event.

"It does give us a chance to meet some of our supporters from other areas that have worked very closely with our delegation. That builds up some bridges that we need built," Clark said.

The $60-per-person affair cost over $12,000, but participants said the event is worth the expense because it allows lawmakers from the Piedmont and the mountains to learn of the success and the needs of Pitt County.

"It has a very significant impact," Taft said. "I'm sure it's expensive, but the money is worth the message it sends to the legislators."

"It really does make an impression on legislators that don't know Pitt County. I think it has a major impact on the legislative delegation's ability to work for ECU, especially," Taft said.

State Rep. Ed Warren said the Pitt leaders made a fine impression on the state's lawmakers.

"I heard a lot of good comments this morning from legislators that were there," Warren said. "I thought it was a first-class occasion. It made a great impression on the General Assembly membership and leaders in Raleigh."

"It showed that the people of our area are interested in good leadership in Raleigh and locally," Warren said.

Rudy Alexander, chairman of the Pitt-Greenville Convention and Visitors Authority, said the event is low key, but it affects political decisions.

"I think a lot more business gets done this way than probably in strictly business-type meetings with members of the legislators. It's a more relaxed atmosphere, and you can talk informally about things," said Alexander, who also attended the 1987 reception.

Amnesty Decries Israeli Detentions

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — Israel has jailed at least 5,000 Palestinians without trial since the uprising began, many of them non-violent opponents kept in harsh conditions and deprived of adequate legal counsel, Amnesty International says.

In a report released today, the London-based human rights movement says most of the so-called "administrative detainees" are held in tents that give little protection from desert conditions.

Amnesty said Israel's use of administrative detention, or imprisonment without trial, for non-violent opponents violates "fundamental human rights."

It called for all administrative detentions to "be urgently reviewed," with prisoners held for non-violent activity to "be released immediately and unconditionally."

Israel denied its army was violating the human rights of non-violent opponents. "People are being held because of violent activities, not because of their ideas," Avi Pazner, an aide to Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, said in Jerusalem. "Israel does not use administrative detention lightly."

Amnesty says most detainees are held for six months and that at least 1,100 Palestinians are in administrative detention, most of them at Ketziot detention center in the Negev Desert.

Accommodations are poor, consisting of tents that give little protection from desert temperatures and rain; medical services are inadequate; family visits are restricted, the camp is overcrowded and there are thrice-daily roll calls "regarded by most detainees as a form of punishment," the report says.

Interview

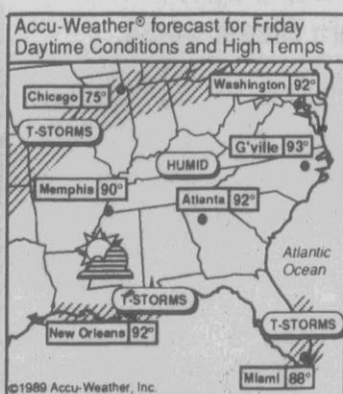

Dr. Eddie West, superintendent of Pitt County schools, has been invited to interview this month for the same job in New Hanover County, according to a New Hanover school spokeswoman.

Diane Avery said in a telephone interview today that four candidates have been invited for the interviews beginning June 12.

"There are four candidates and they're all strong," she said. Ms. Avery said she did not know when a decision would be made.

West could not be reached for a comment this morning.

How They Voted

WASHINGTON — Here's how area House members were recorded on major roll call votes in the week ending May 26. The Senate was in recess all week.

HOUSE

NEW SPENDING BILL — By a vote of 227 for and 197 against, the House sent to the Senate a bill (HR 2072) to increase spending this fiscal year by $3.7 billion. The so-called "dire emergency supplemental" bill funds several programs that are running out of money and others that are politically popular.

Democrats generally defended the spending as necessary to keep vital programs in operation, while most Republicans complained the bill violates deficit-reduction agreements. President Bush has threatened veto.

Major outlays are $1.2 billion for veterans, $892 million for student loans, $822 million for anti-drug initiatives, $423 million for foster care and $342 million for fighting last year's forest fires. The bill also provides more money for the homeless and unemployed, legislative branch operations and agencies such as the Agricultural Department and Internal Revenue Service.

Supporter Jamie Whitten, D-Miss., said "give us this bill which takes care of drugs, which takes care of veterans..."

Opponent Silvio Conte, R-Mass., said "here we go again, spending as if there were no tomorrow."

Members voting yes supported the bill.

North Carolina members voting yes: Walter Jones, D-1, Tim Valentine, D-2, Martin Lancaster, D-3, David Price, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Charles Rose, D-7, W.G. Hefner, D-8, James Clarke, D-11.

Voting no: Howard Coble, R-6, Alex McMillan, R-9, Cass Ballenger, R-10

Not voting: None.
GOP SUBSTITUTE — By a vote of 205 for and 217 against, the House rejected a Republican attempt to strip the $3.7 billion special appropriations bill (above) of all spending except $1.2 billion for veterans programs including medical care.

The motion expressed GOP and White House complaints that the Democratic majority was using popular veterans spending to run interference for unwarranted increases this fiscal year in other programs.

Supporter Gerald Solomon, R-N.Y., said "the veterans package is still being used as the engine to drive this monstrosity through the Congress..."

Opponent Neal Smith, D-Iowa, said members voting yes "are voting against enhancing and speeding up the war on drugs."

Members voting yes wanted the bill to fund only veterans programs.

Voting yes: Valentine, Lancaster, Coble, McMillan, Ballenger.
Voting no: Walter Jones, Price, Neal, Rose, Hefner, Clarke.

Not voting: None.
SPENDING PRIORITIES — By a vote of 205 for and 213 against, the House defeated a bill (HR 2442) to increase anti-drug spending at the expense of the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) missile defense system.

Next fiscal year's SDI appropriation was to have been frozen at this year's level, freeing up $862 million for immediate transfer to anti-drug programs. The bill was to have been joined with the Senate-bound supplemental appropriations bill for fiscal 1989 (see preceding votes).

Supporter Byron Dorgan, D-N.D., said the amendment shifts money "from an inflated program we do not need, Star Wars, to an underfunded initiative we cannot ignore, drug wars."

Opponent Duncan Hunter, R-Calif., said, "Let's not start tearing the country apart and saying that only the liberal left on defense can participate actively in the drug war."

Members voting yes wanted to transfer $862 million from SDI to anti-drug programs.

Voting yes: Walter Jones, Valentine, Lancaster, Price, Neal, Rose, Hefner, Clarke.

Voting no: Coble, McMillan, Ballenger.

Not voting: None.

ECU Student Goes To Jail Over LSD

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

An East Carolina University student arrested in April on LSD charges has been sentenced to four months in the Montgomery County Jail and five years of probation.

Superior Court Judge Cy Grant sentenced Gregory L. Fritts, 20, on Wednesday, after Fritts pleaded guilty to possessing, selling and delivering 15 dosage units of LSD to an undercover officer on Feb. 22.

In exchange for the plea, the state dismissed a charge of maintaining a dwelling for the purpose of a controlled substance.

Nancy Aycock, chief assistant district attorney, requested that Fritts serve the time in the state Department of Corrections, but the judge granted a request by Fritts' attorney to allow Fritts to serve the sentence in his home county of Montgomery. Grant refused Fritts' request to recommend work-release.

Fritts was one of six ECU students arrested April 21 on a variety of charges involving LSD, psilocyn mushrooms, cocaine and marijuana. The investigation spanned several months and involved Greenville police, the State Bureau of Investigation and ECU Public Safety.

A.P. White, a special investigator with Greenville police, said Wednesday in court testimony that law enforcement officers learned through officials at Raleigh-Durham Airport that a small group of students had been following the rock group Grateful Dead around the country, buying LSD at low prices and returning to Greenville and other cities to sell the drugs. Through this information, investigators targeted Fritts and several other students, he said.

Mrs. Aycock said there was no evidence presented to indicate Fritts was one of the students who actually brought drugs into the area.

Under the university's drug policy, any student involved in such drug activity would be expelled because the actions occurred on and around campus where other students would have had access to the drugs.

Ron Speir, assistant vice chancellor for student life at ECU, said any disciplinary action taken against the students is confidential.

The university registrar's office said none of the students have preregistered for classes in the fall.

Fritts, who lived at 244 Garrett Dorm at the time of the arrest, was joined in court Wednesday by his father, Kenneth R. Fritts, who is a state trooper from Mount Gilead, and his attorney, Alan W. Greene, also of Mount Gilead.

The charges to which he pleaded guilty carried a maximum prison term of 20 years, and Mrs. Aycock asked Grant to impose an active sentence of one to three years.

However, Grant suspended a six-year prison sentence for Fritts on the condition that he serve the four months in jail, remain on supervised probation for five years and pay court costs and a probation supervision fee.

Fritts had been free since April 24 on $40,000 bond. His attorney waived a probable cause hearing on May 5.

Two other students arrested April 21 also waived probable cause hearings May 5. Their cases are pending in Pitt Superior Court.

Arthur Hicks Pigford, 26, 807 College View Apartments, and James William Dixon Jr., 22, formerly of 402 Aycock Dorm, both face charges of possessing, selling and delivering mushrooms. They are both charged with maintaining a dwelling for the purpose of controlled substances. Both are from Warsaw in Duplin County.

Pigford is accused of selling 3 ounces of mushrooms to an undercover Greenville police officer on March 30, according to court records.

Dixon is accused of selling 4 grams of mushrooms and 26 grams of mushrooms to an undercover officer on Nov. 17 and Nov. 18, respectively, court records said.

Three other students arrested April 21 are set to appear Friday in Pitt District Court for a probable cause hearing.

Robert Ramsey Etchison, 19, who lived in Ringgold Towers at the time of the arrest, is charged with possessing, selling and delivering marijuana. He is also charged with conspiracy and maintaining a dwelling for the sale and delivery of a controlled substance. He is from Springfield, Va.

Erik Joseph Mansfield, 22, formerly of Garrett Dorm, is charged with possessing, selling and delivering 10 dosage units of LSD and 1 gram of cocaine and maintaining a dwelling for the sale and delivery of controlled substances. He is from Apex.

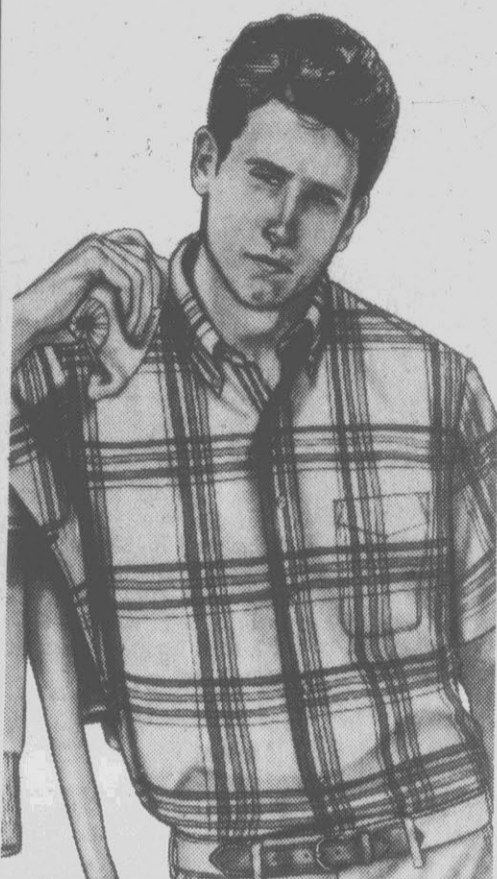

John Ray Fuller, who lived at 503 W. Fourth St. at the time of the arrest, is charged with manufacturing marijuana and maintaining a dwelling for the sale and delivery of a controlled substance. He is from Charlotte.

All charges except those against Fuller involve the sale of drugs to undercover officers.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Outranked

Mediocrity Doesn't Fuel Excellence

If Pitt County's schools ranked 64th out of 140 in academic performance, there would be some upset taxpayers. If students scored near the half-way mark on writing or achievement tests, parents would be raising cane. If 64 school systems beat out Pitt on any given competition — some of them the poorest school systems in the state — there'd be some hard questions from and for the school board and county commission.

In short, Pitt has set some pretty high academic standards for its schools. It has not settled for average. Why, then has the county opted for only moderate effort in funding its public schools? That is a tough question that Pitt's elected officials deserve — and taxpayers deserve an answer to.

The Public School Forum of North Carolina ranked Pitt County 64th among 140 school districts in the state in the amount of financial effort made to support its public school system. While the study showed Pitt's effort exceeds its ability to pay, the county's ranking is merely average. Is that acceptable for a county that proclaims "education" on its county seal? Is it acceptable for a county that clamors to be a regional leader in education — even calls itself one?

Of course not. Pitt consistently leads eastern North Carolina in test scores. It dominates the region in academic competition. Why, then, should it lag behind in spending on schools? A desire for excellence cannot be fueled by mediocre effort.

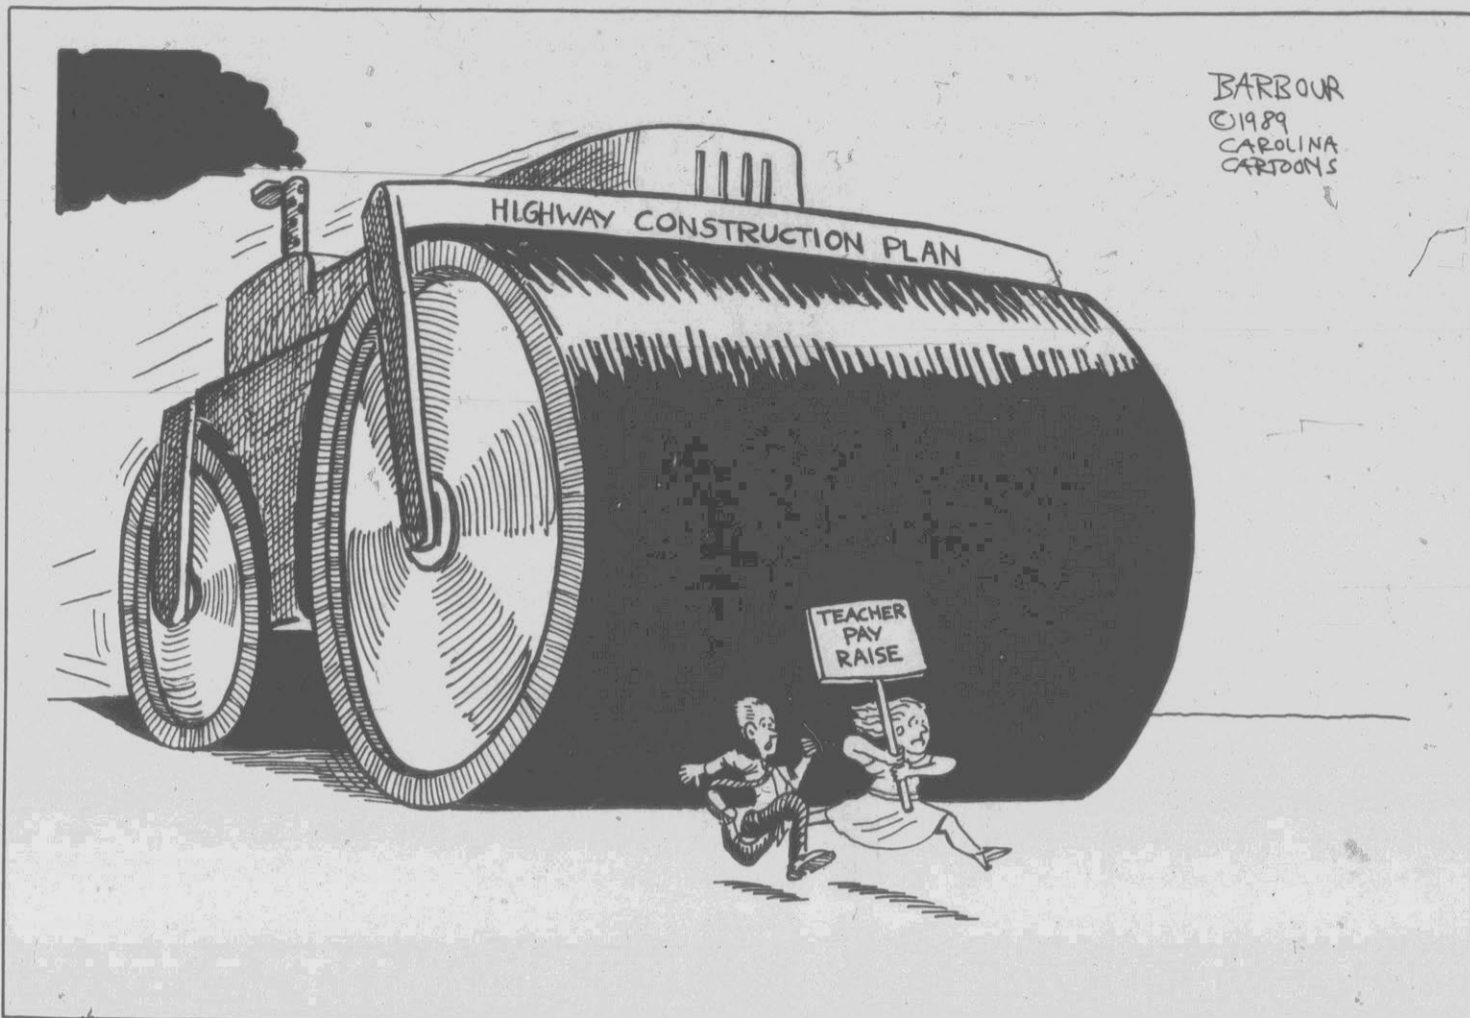

Next door, Martin County — a county with a smaller tax base than Pitt — ranked 28th. Greene County, another neighbor, ranked 38th. These are school systems that must devote a significantly larger share of tax funds to provide public education. It's disconcerting to see poorer counties outshine Pitt.

There are other indications Pitt's financial support of public schools isn't all it could be. Out of 143 school systems in the state, Pitt ranks 130th in per pupil capital outlay expenditure. That means 130 other school systems spend more to provide their students a suitable environment for learning.

Yes, Pitt's taxpayers would be making noise if their schools' academic performance were meager. The public is accustomed to excellence and expects it. Yet it is ultimately up to the taxpayers to decide what price the county places on education — to decide, through their votes and their involvement — how far Pitt will go to fund excellence.

The county is not going far enough, and the public ought to ask why. That's a question that should be written on every blackboard in every classroom. It is reasonable for taxpayers to expect top academic achievement from their public school investment. It's also reasonable for them to expect superior effort in funding.

'If 64 school systems beat out Pitt on any given competition — some of them the poorest school systems in the state — there'd be some hard questions ...'

Ethics As An Instrument Of Torture

WASHINGTON — The reign of Virtue shall begin when the last king is strangled with the entrails of the last priest. Or so 'twas said, many reigns of Virtue ago.

But what can be done for Virtue now that kings are scarce and strangling them, even less messily, is frowned upon? Well, Newt Gingrich has got a little list.

It contains the names of "another nine or ten, maybe more than that" House Democrats. They'd none of them be missed, says Gingrich, if the House is sufficiently thorough with the moral refurbishing now afoot.

Have we seen this movie before? This is the Summer of Sequels (Ghostbusters II, Indiana Jones III, and Vicebusters II is a remake of an oldie from 40 years ago).

A Wheeling, W. Va., radio station recorded Joe McCarthy's speech on Feb. 9, 1950, but later erased the tape, so it is unclear how long was McCarthy's list of "all the men in the State Department who have been named" as communists and spies. A reporter wrote that McCarthy said, "I have here in my hand a list of 205." Others remember 57 or 81. The number mattered less than the political climate in which citing a number mattered.

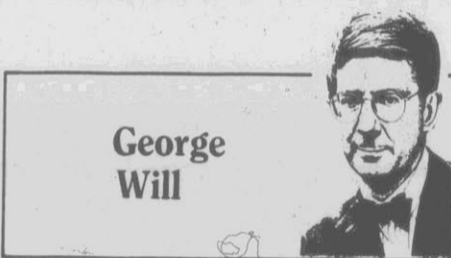

Today's list-making is different in this important particular: There are House rules; they have been broken. However, there is this similarity to 1950: The reign of the accuser has been re-established. And not by Gingrich. He is just accepting — with unlovely zest — the terms of political combat since 1986-87.

Gingrich, who relishes his bicentennial role as Robespierre, thinks the sulfurous smoke seeping from the Capitol dome denotes civic health and (in his words) "tougher standards." He offers an analogy involving the "wilding" attack on the Central Park jogger:

"Nobody 40 years ago would have suggested a young woman could have walked through Central Park. I mean, they just sort of understood, at 10 o'clock at night women don't walk through Central Park. We now have a standard that says, By God, in America you ought to be able to walk through Central Park and not be assaulted. Well, 40 years ago in Georgia, politicians routinely took cash and they gave cash."

It is progress that Georgia's politicians are cleaner. But Gingrich's Central Park analogy is wonderfully wrong. Forty years ago, everybody knew there were parts of the park you did not pass through alone after dark. What is new is the mentality that postulates a new entitlement: perfection. We are entitled to a city made safe for everyone to do everything everywhere at any time.

In this unattainable, hence foolish, ideal there is a childish impatience with imperfection. In Central Park, such impatience is physically dangerous. Elsewhere it is hard on the body politic.

George Will

Again, Gingrich is not the Abner Doubleday of today's political hardball. He did not invent the use of ethics as a truncheon. But as a player in the game of scrupulosity, he is part of the problem.

There is a downward ratchet effect in civility. The ratchet clicked many times in the negative advertising in 1986 campaigns. Also in the Robert Bork affair, when nastiness was covered with a cloying incense of ethical pretense. It clicked when some of Bork's critics in the media laid their muddy hands on a list of movies he had rented. That they were disappointed (Bork's taste involved nothing kinkier than Fred Astaire) does not alter the disgusting nature of their partisanship: Any stick will do to beat a dog with, and anyone we want to beat can be considered a dog.

Some ideologically intoxicated Republicans think Democrats are not merely mistaken but sinful. Such Republicans believe the earth must be scorched and sown with salt before the Heavenly City can be built. Some Democrats, having lost their ideological confidence, substitute character assassination for political purpose.

Yes, there is condign punishment in the fall of Tony Coelho, who was especially operatic when singing about Republican "sleaze." But nothing so became Coelho in his public career as his manly manner of leaving it. He was clearheaded in doing so. Having handled the electrodes, he understood ethics as an instrument of torture.

We are awash in a sea of synthetic passion, with politicians throwing elbows and sound bites in the crush to capture ten seconds of television time. Ethics, like every other subject, is lost to measured discourse. And ethics, more than anything else, is made for the reign of the accuser. Ten seconds suffices: "I have in my hand a list..."

Ethics is something (patriotism is another) the health of which is inversely proportional to the amount of speechifying and editorializing about it. The more people talk about it, the more pandemic is the confusion about what it is.

BARBOUR
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A Mother In Jail; An Innocent Daughter In Hiding

BOSTON — When Hedda Nussbaum's punching-bag face appeared in the papers last fall, I heard a question repeated so often that it became the emotional caption to that grim story. How had she failed to protect Lisa Steinberg? Wouldn't any mother defend a child, even against a father?

During that trial, more than one letter came to remind me of another mother who had tried to protect her daughter. This woman sent her five-year-old into hiding rather than obey the court order to deliver the girl to a father she believed had sexually abused the child.

The woman was Elizabeth Morgan. But where she lives now, she is Number 223-390. For her refusal to tell the judge where Hilary had gone, she has spent 21 months in an six-by-eleven foot cell in a jail in the District of Columbia.

I am wary of cases like this that become causes, complete with rallies and defense committees. There are few saints in the world and I rarely find them in the transcripts of such disputes. More than one reporter has dived into the details of the domestic-relations suit called Morgan v. Foretich and come out breathless, not a little bewildered.

Eight witnesses who interviewed Hilary found reason to suspect sexual abuse; four did not. Dr. Morgan, a plastic surgeon, accuses her ex-husband of sexual abuse. Dr. Eric Foretich, an oral surgeon, says of his ex-wife, "She is a pervert and insane."

To me the most damning evidence comes from the child who told her therapist in every way possible that she had been violated by her father. It comes, too, from the exact echo heard in the words and experiences of another little girl, Hilary's half-sister. But even here one psychiatric witness believed that Hilary had been "conditioned to make those statements."

Nevertheless, you do not have to be a member of the Elizabeth Morgan Defense Committee to see how ill-equipped the courts are to handle charges of sexual abuse. Or to see the absurdity in a judgment that freezes this woman in jail. Judge Herbert Dixon, Jr., found the admissible evidence in this case "inconclusive." In the face of uncertainty, he ruled that the visits continue. When Morgan refused to obey, he said she would remain in jail until the girl was returned.

Now at last, after serving more time than any other woman in America for civil contempt, this mother has had another day in court. Dr. Morgan's lawyer, Stephen Sachs, asked a D.C. Court of Appeals how long she could be jailed without a trial, without even being accused of a crime.

The point of a civil-contempt order — the reason to jail a woman who refuses to answer a court question, "Where is your daughter?" — is to coerce her into obedience. After nearly two years, it has clearly failed to coerce Dr. Morgan.

'There are some who believe that the charge of sexual abuse is the "nuclear weapon" of custody cases that any deranged woman can set off. There are others who believe that mothers must act because the courts disastrously fail to protect their children.'

Chalk it up to maternal love and protectiveness (if you believe Morgan's story). Chalk it up to the love of melodrama if believe Foretich. But there is no reason to doubt this mother's determination to stay in jail if necessary until her daughter is 18. That would mean a "sentence" of 12 more years.

Foretich's lawyer painted a bizarre portrait of the D.C. Jail as "sort of a nirvana for her" where she doesn't have to pay her bills and reporters come to interview her. Send her to a federal prison, he argued, and she will face real coercion.

But Sachs argued that she is beyond coercion. If that is true, an endless incarceration is punishment without a trial and unconstitutional. "Whenever the law is relentless, whenever it is mindless, whenever it lacks proportion," he argued, "...the law itself becomes a hostage."

There are some who believe that the charge of sexual abuse is the "nuclear weapon" of custody cases that any deranged woman can set off. There are others who believe that mothers must act because the courts disastrously fail to protect their children. However polarized the national debate on this charged subject, I can see no point to keeping this woman in jail.

Morgan has said that she would "invite" criminal prosecution on charges like parental kidnapping, "invite" a trial before a jury. There, she would muster the defense of her daughter as her own defense. There, we might get closer to the truth.

The alternative is this double injustice: A mother locked in a cell without trial or conviction. And an innocent daughter sentenced to grow up in hiding.

Gardner Accepts Tax Hike, Backs Martin Teacher Pay Plan

By John Flesher
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Almost three months after its unveiling, Lt. Gov. Jim Gardner has endorsed Gov. Jim Martin's pay raise plan for teachers and state employees, acknowledging it was difficult to swallow a 1-cent sales tax increase.

"I have looked, I have listened," Gardner said Wednesday at a news conference, flanked by 21 of the 59 Republican members of the General Assembly who also support the program.

"It is a tough decision for Jim Gardner to be standing up here talking about a tax increase," he said. "I boiled it down to what I felt was best for the children of this state."

Gardner, the first Republican elected lieutenant governor of North Carolina this century, had pledged during his 1988 campaign to champion Martin's legislative programs.

"This Legislature cannot settle for another year of patchwork," Gardner said. "It is critical that we bring forth a rational, competitive pay plan and provide the money to pay for it now and into the future."

Martin strategists hope the Republicans' backing will give a boost to the plan, which has stalled in the House and Senate as leaders of both parties search for a consensus on paying for salary increases in a tight budget year.

His proposed tax increase would generate $510 million annually, of which $308 million would be spent on pay raises. It would thaw a seven-year freeze on the teacher and state employee pay scales, establish a new 30-step schedule and provide a 6 percent average raise in 1989-90 and a 5 percent raise the next year.

A key element of the plan, which Martin unveiled March 8, is statewide implementation of the career ladder program, without which Martin says he would withdraw support for higher taxes.

However, in recent weeks he has voiced support for a local-option policy that would make funds available for each local school system to decide whether to adopt the career ladder or another program designed to reward teachers for superior performance.

"With the lieutenant governor's endorsement, and the strong support from the Republican members of the Legislature, I believe we can now forge a bipartisan consensus to work for our children's future," Martin said in a statement.

But the leader of a group of 28 Republicans who came out against Martin's plan earlier this year, proposing deep spending cuts instead of a tax increase to fund pay raises, said he has not changed his mind.

"I'm still against a tax increase," said Rep. Trip Sizemore, R-Guilford, who said he had urged Gardner not to support it. "The timing's poor. It's not a card that needed to be played."

Also voicing opposition was the Senate's top-ranking Democrat, President Pro Tem Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, said he would not budge from his opposition to a sales tax increase.

"The governor has proposed the largest highway tax increase in history and now wants to increase the sales tax 20 percent," Barnes said. "I cannot support that much tax at one time, whether it's supported by the governor, the lieutenant governor, the majority of the Republicans in the Senate or anyone else."

The Senate Democratic leadership earlier proposed a pay-raise package that relied heavily on a $159 million windfall from the RJR-Nabisco sale and levied no tax increase.

State Officials Laud DARE Program

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Thousands of North Carolina youngsters have been given important tools for steering clear of drugs in the first two years of the Drug Abuse Resistance Education program, officials say.

"Children who are taught the lessons of why and how to say no to drugs will be making their way up through the grades and into situations where they will likely confront a need to put those lessons to work," said Attorney General Lacy Thornburg during a news conference Wednesday.

The DARE program, implemented in June 1987 for $727,998, reached 294,000 students in its first year, said state School Superintendent Bobby Etheridge.

"Since the program started in August of 1987, it has received overwhelming reviews from students, teachers, principals, superintendents, parents and law enforcement officials," he said.

Steven Hicks, director of the Alcohol and Drug Defense Program, said the program had a positive effect on students' attitudes toward drugs.

"Students who had DARE were more likely than those who did not to consider drug use and its consequences as negative," he said.

The program also increased students' assertiveness, helped students recognize that advertisers present tobacco and alcohol in an attractive manner and made it more likely students perceive their peers as having negative feelings about drug use, Hicks said.

However, the evaluation showed little difference between DARE and non-DARE students in actual use of drugs or in self-esteem, Hicks said.

He said self-esteem was relatively high in both groups before the DARE program was implemented and substance abuse was relatively low. "It is thus not surprising that there were no differences in drug use between the two groups," he said.

It could take up to five years to see an impact on drug use, Hicks said. But he added, "I'm more optimistic than that. I'm hopeful that as we get results of our grade 7-12 survey ... that we'll begin to see some corners being turned in North Carolina."

The DARE program, currently in 65 school systems, includes accurate information about alcohol and other drugs, decision-making skills, ways to resist negative peer pressure and alternatives to drug use, Etheridge said.

Officials are seeking $300,000 this year to expand the DARE program statewide.

EPA Joins Opponents Of State

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — An EPA attorney has acknowledged that the federal agency's position has changed from neutral to being in favor of overturning North Carolina's disputed hazardous waste treatment law.

The Environmental Protection Agency, GSX Chemical Services Inc. and the Hazardous Waste Treatment Council are challenging North Carolina's authority to regulate treatment of hazardous waste.

GSX contends the state's 1987 law was designed to prevent the company from building a hazardous waste treatment plant in Scotland County.

The two sides are presenting their cases before an administrative law judge at N.C. State University. The hearings resumed today.

"(Prior to the proceeding, EPA's position was that they were neutral regarding whether the North Carolina program should be withdrawn or not. The judge agreed to that," said John Runkle, an attorney representing the Conservation Council of North Carolina. "He said as a neutral party, they have certain responsibilities of putting people on both sides."

"Now, they're saying that they're opposing North Carolina. That's a whole new ball game," he said. "We had expected ... EPA would do a good faith job. Now they're saying they're an opposing party. That's pretty unfair about what we can expect."

EPA attorney Alvin Lenoir said during the hearing that "events of the past several months have made us look at our position."

"But we do consider ourselves to be objective," Lenoir said.

Attorneys for the state Wednesday attempted to convince the administrative law judge to grant a delay in the hearing, but they failed.

As has been their argument all along, the attorneys for the state contended that EPA officials were lobbied by GSX representatives in attempt to have a hearing convened.

"People are talking to people they have no business talking to," Runkle said. "You don't have a fair trial unless you have witnesses who know what they're talking about."

"We won't have a fair hearing until the (one-sided) communication issue is addressed," Runkle said.

Administrative law judge Spencer Nissen said the hearing would proceed, but added that full disclosure of any meetings between EPA and GSX would occur before the hearing ends.

State attorneys spent part of the hearing trying to get EPA to produce witnesses who authored reports regarding water quality standards. Dan McLawhorn, an assistant attorney general, asked Nissen to compel Lenoir to name witnesses who authored reports that were written in connection with the issue.

"You have an obligation, and I am going to impose on you that you bring forth some names of some people who can speak to the issue," Nissen said.

The law in dispute requires commercial hazardous waste treatment plants to dilute each gallon of their treated wastewater with 1,000 gallons of fresh water if the effluent flows into drinking water supplies.

Spanking Bill OK'd

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The sponsor of a bill to let some North Carolina school systems experimentally ban spankings prepared for more hard work after spending more than two months to get the measure through a House committee by one vote.

"If it's anything like this, I expect it will be an interesting ride," said Rep. Marie Colton, D-Buncombe, after Rep. C.R. Edwards voted to break a tie in the Education Committee on Wednesday.

Under the bill, up to 16 North Carolina school systems could ban spankings in favor of alternative punishments. The bill must go to the Appropriations Committee for approval of a $40,000 price tag before reaching the House floor.

Rep. Skip Stam, R-Wake, one of the most vocal opponents, vowed to do his part to derail the bill.

"We'll fight it on the beaches, in the air, everywhere," he said. Corporal punishment is needed in the schools, Stam said.

Without it, "kids will run wild because the school will have an effective response," he said, adding that schools only use spankings as a last resort.

"There's no place in the state that does it frivolously," Stam said.

The committee agreed to an amendment that removed a provision added to the bill by opponents several weeks ago. That provision would have let teachers expel students from class and would have required that parents go to court to have them reinstated. It was watered down later to require a meeting of parents with the principal, but Rep. Edd Nye, D-Bladen, proposed deleting that as well.

State Puts Subtle Bid In As Bosses Attend Conference

By Tom Foreman Jr.
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — North Carolina officials will be on a business recruiting mission this weekend at the Inc. 500 Conference, but they're hoping not to be too conspicuous.

"This conference doesn't lend itself to that," said Ken Rabb, a spokesman for the state Department of Commerce. "I think it's more a contact conference."

Some contact, indeed.

More than 1,000 executives from some of the nation's fastest growing companies have converged on Raleigh for the four-day conference. Already, those attending the conference have heard from Charlotte Hornets' owner George Shinn. Friday morning, they will listen to media mogul Ted Turner with their morning coffee.

Remembering that the conference isn't a recruiting vehicle, North Carolina presented Inc. officials with a proposal that won over other cities. Rabb said he didn't know who the other competitors were. The state was chosen two years in advance.

What the executives will see is a state which Rabb says is opening its doors to industry.

"No one has worked harder on making North Carolina a good place to do business than the folks who do business here," Rabb says. "It's because of that that we're very fortunate that Inc. has seen that and decided to come here."

About 1,000 people are expected to attend the conference. As a warmup, North Carolina Inc. held a conference prior to the big meeting. Twice, they had to change their arrangements at a Raleigh hotel to accommodate 500 people, and that's double the number anticipated.

The Inc. 500 has been developed and published by the magazine since 1976 and an annual conference is held to honor the country's private companies that have the largest earnings growth in the latest five-year period. Eleven North Carolina companies made the 1988 Inc. 500 list, and three of them are in the Research Triangle Park.

Just another chance for the state to do some more showing off without really trying, Rabb says.

"We've had various opportunities throughout the conference to participate in various discussions, make keynote addresses, and in those opportunities, we've presented North Carolina," Rabb says. "We look at it as an educational process. We're not standing up and touting it. We're just presenting the facts."

Rabb says although North Carolina's reputation for inexpensive, non-union labor has much to do with luring industry to the state, research has shown there are other factors on which businesses are relying.

"When a company comes and looks at a site now, more and more, they come in looking at communities," he says. "They want to know about taxes and education and what's going on with schools and churches. Ours are communities which companies like. The state itself has a lot of good tools and products that we can offer a company."

Five Arrested For Crack Sales

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WINSTON-SALEM — Five people were arrested for running a drug ring out of a Forsyth County hotel after narcotics agents seized about $30,000 worth of crack cocaine, authorities say.

Forsyth County Sheriff's Det. Jerry Hobbs said authorities received a tip about a drug ring operating out of the Econo Lodge on Tuesday about 10:30 a.m. About 15 agents from the Sheriff's Department; the State Bureau of Investigation; and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms stalked out the hotel about two hours later.

Three men and a woman from New York, along with a Winston-Salem man, were arrested, Hobbs said. The arrests came after the five suspects left the hotel and were stopped about two miles away on U.S. 52 about 7 p.m. Inside the car, agents found a briefcase that contained about $9,000 cash and about $30,000 worth of crack, Hobbs said.

Charged with conspiracy to traffic in cocaine were Mike Smith, 24; Gale Arlene Criss, 24; Vaughn William Goode, 24; and Timothy Peter Shephard, 24 — all of New York City. Smith and Goode were also charged with trafficking in cocaine.

Clinton Ranair Reid, 27, of Winston-Salem, was charged with conspiracy to traffic in cocaine.

Goode and Shephard were being held in Forsyth County Jail on Wednesday with bond set at $125,000. Smith was being held with bond set at $200,000.

Ms. Criss was being held with bond set at $150,000. Reid's bond was set at $15,000, but he was not being held in jail Wednesday.

Police confiscated $22,000 worth of crack Nov. 29 — which, they said, was the largest amount of crack then seized in Winston-Salem.

Plane Crash

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — Two Trinity men escaped serious injury when their airplane crashed into trees at the end of the White Acres Airport runway.

Randolph deputies reported pilot Jeffery Chris Wagoner, 23, and his passenger, Roger Hedrick, suffered minor injuries, but did not require hospitalization.

Deputies said the Cessna 150 started off the runway, but the engine quit, and the plane crashed into some trees at the end of the runway Tuesday night.

They said the aircraft appeared to be demolished, but they did not know its value.

The Federal Aviation Agency and Civil Air Patrol are investigating.

Search Canceled

EAST FLAT ROCK, N.C. (AP) — Police called off a search for a man suspected in two robberies after a final sweep of a 3-square-mile wooded area turned up no new clues to his whereabouts on Wednesday.

More than 40 officers in six tactical teams, some with bloodhounds, set out at dawn to comb the hilly terrain between Interstate 26, the U.S. 25 connector and U.S. 176, according to Henderson County Sheriff's Capt. Tom Hatchett. A N.C. Highway Patrol helicopter aided the search from the air.

Police questioned residents of a subdivision where the man had been spotted Tuesday, and searched all abandoned buildings in the area, Hatchett said. But no new footprints were discovered, no sightings were reported and the dogs found no fresh scent.

The suspect has eluded capture since he reportedly used a long-barreled revolver to rob a man of his wallet and car outside a convenience store near Hendersonville on Monday evening.

Hendersonville police suspect he may be the same man who held up a cashier at the Pizza Hut restaurant on Sunday night.

Study Funded

ASHEVILLE (AP) — A University of North Carolina at Asheville study to examine the economic impact of retirement migration in western North Carolina has been funded by a $111,000 grant from the Appalachian Regional Commission.

The study, which was recommended by Gov. Jim Martin, will use 30 retirees from the UNC-Asheville N.C. Center for Creative Retirement to interview 700 families of retirees who have relocated to western North Carolina.

The year-long study, which begins July 1, hopes to measure the potential of retirement migration as a method of economic development, said project director Bill Haas, a sociologist at UNC-Asheville.

Residents of five western North Carolina will be interviewed during the study. The counties being considered are Buncombe, Henderson, Polk, Avery, Transylvania and Haywood.

Heavy Travel Forecast

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Southeast will be the country's hot bed of vacation travel this summer, with about 59 million Americans taking to the region's roads, according to a recent survey.

More Americans than last year will take to the roads for vacations this summer, the survey released Wednesday by the AAA Carolina Motor Club said.

Some 273 million people will take vacation trips of 100 miles or more between Memorial Day and Labor Day, a 4 percent increase over 1988, when 262 million Americans took similar trips, the survey said.

"The Southeast traditionally has enjoyed having more people vacation within its area than has other portions of the country," said Quentin Anderson, a spokesman for the association in Charlotte, N.C.

"I think they have discovered our many natural wonders in this part of the country," he added.

The association considers the Southeast to be comprised of Delaware, the District of Columbia, Florida, Georgia, Maryland, North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia, Alabama, Kentucky, Mississippi and Tennessee.

Some 58 million people will travel the Great Lakes region; 57 million, the Midwest; 56 million, the West; and 43 million, the Northeast.

All regions of the country will see more travelers this year than last year, with the exception of the West, where the number of vacationers will be the same, the association said.

More vacationers will flock to the Southeast and West than will leave those two regions for other parts of the country, while the Northeast, Great Lakes and Midwest will receive fewer visitors, according to the survey.

Automobile travel will account for nearly 83 percent of this summer's vacation travel, the AAA survey said.

About 26 percent of those travelers will vacation in a city; 25 percent will go to the beach; 16 percent to a small town or rural area; 9 percent to a lake; 8 percent to a state or national park; 7 percent to a theme or amusement park. One percent did not know where they would go.

The survey based its results on a nationwide telephone poll of 1,500 adults conducted by the National Travel Center for the Association.

The AAA Carolina Motor Club is an affiliate of the American Automobile Association. It serves about 430,000 members in North Carolina and South Carolina.

Forecaster Expects Fewer Hurricanes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BAL HARBOUR, Fla. — The 1989 Atlantic hurricane season starts today, and a renowned storm forecaster says that hurricanes and tropical storms this year should be fewer, and weaker, than those last year.

In Coral Gables, The National Hurricane Center on Wednesday released the 21 names that will be given 1989 hurricanes and tropical storms in the Atlantic.

The names are: Allison, Barry, Chantal, Dean, Erin, Felix, Gabrielle, Hugo, Iris, Jerry, Karen, Luis, Marilyn, Noel, Opal, Pablo, Roxanne, Sebastien, Tanya, Van and Wendy.

But Colorado State University professor William Gray predicted there will be only four hurricanes and seven tropical storms during the 1989 Atlantic hurricane season ending Nov. 30.

"This will be a below-average year in the number of hurricanes and they will be less intense," said Gray, a teacher of atmospheric sciences, at a conference of the American Meteorological Society Wednesday.

Last year, there were 11 named storms and six hurricanes, including Gilbert. Hurricane Gilbert killed more than 300 people and wrought heavy damage in the Dominican Republic, Haiti, Jamaica and Mexico.

Hurricane Joan hovered over the coast of Central America before causing mudslides, floods and other damage in Nicaragua.

In the last six years, Gray has made near perfect predictions about the number of hurricanes formed in the Atlantic, using reams of data and studies of El Nino's influences on the world's weather in making his predictions.

But Bob Sheets, director of the National Hurricane Center, cautioned that apathy and unfamiliarity with the destructive power of a major hurricane could prove fatal.

"If a major storm strikes a coastal metropolitan center this year," Sheets said in his annual hurricane awareness warning Wednesday, "the risk of fatalities is high because the endangered population will face congested evacuation routes, insufficient escape and too little experience in hurricane survival."

Some tips for coastal residents in the event of a hurricane warning: monitor the weather and act immediately if threatened; know local evacuation routes and shelter locations; if in a vulnerable area, be prepared to leave. As a last resort, leave the shore and seek sturdy structure.

Former Mayor Heads Crime Education Unit

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLESTON, W.Va. — Former Charleston Mayor Mike Roark, saying it's time to put his guilty plea to cocaine charges behind him, has taken a job as executive director at a North Carolina agency that provides public education on crime and punishment.

"I think you reach a point where you have to face what the realities are," the 43-year-old former prosecutor said in an interview with the Charleston Daily Mail. "I have to deal with rebuilding my life. I deal daily with the stupidity of my conduct that got me into this position. I don't blame anybody but myself."

Roark, who is awaiting a state Supreme Court decision on a recommendation that his law license be suspended for three years, began his job May 15 as executive director at the North Carolina Center on Crime and Punishment in Raleigh.

The former Republican mayor of West Virginia's capital was moving up the political ranks just a few short years ago and was viewed by some as a potential gubernatorial candidate in the 1990s.

Rumors of cocaine use had dogged him for years, but his political career came to a screeching halt in July 1987 after he was indicted on 27 drug charges and three counts of conspiracy to obstruct justice.

Roark vehemently denied the charges.

In November 1987, five months into his second term as mayor and the day testimony in his trial was scheduled to get under way, Roark pleaded guilty to six misdemeanor charges of cocaine possession and said he would resign as mayor as part of an agreement with prosecutors.

He served a 179-day sentence at the Federal Correctional Institution in Petersburg, Va., and returned to Charleston after being released last July.

"It was important for me to come back and face the community and deal with that," he said. "Many people have been very supportive. I found who a very, very few good friends are."

Roark was faced with trying to make a living, and the West Virginia State Bar's Committee on Legal Ethics has recommended to the state Supreme Court that Roark's law license be suspended for three years.

His lawyer, Jim McIntyre, argued in favor of a one-year suspension with credit for the time Roark spent in prison.

"I thought I could come back and practice," Roark said. "Circumstances have convinced me that's not possible or realistic at this time."

Bladen Man Gets 21st DWI Verdict

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ELIZABETHTOWN, N.C. — An Elizabethtown man received his 20th and 21st driving while impaired convictions in Bladen County District Court this week and was sentenced to four years in prison.

Prosecutors on Tuesday voluntarily dismissed two counts of driving with a permanently revoked license against Phillip Lewis Mote, 45.

Mote was charged Jan. 3 and Jan. 25 with driving while impaired, authorities said.

After studying Mote's driving records, Judge Bill Gore of Whiteville said, "This is your 20th and 21st conviction of DWI. You're a menace to everyone who has to share the roads and parking lots with you."

His defense attorney, Wayne White, said Mote is serving two years in prison for a previous DWI conviction. Mote is enrolled in an alcohol abuse program and is working on his high school equivalency diploma at the prison, White said.

Gore sentenced Mote to six months for careless and reckless driving but the sentence is to be served at the same time as the DWI sentences.

Rewards Posted

DURHAM (AP) — Rewards totaling $11,200 now are being offered for information leading to an arrest and conviction in the April 24 slaying of Mrs. Barbara Sikes Sherron at her Durham County home.

Gov. Jim Martin announced Tuesday that the state is offering a reward of up to $5,000.

Earlier this month, Mrs. Sherron's employer, the Liggett Group Inc., offered another $5,000. In addition, Durham Crime Stoppers has offered up to $1,200 for information leading to an arrest.

Mrs. Sherron, 49, was found slain in the kitchen of her home shortly after 5 p.m. on April 24. She had been shot once in the back with a .38-caliber gun.

Durham County sheriff's investigators said Mrs. Sherron had arrived home from work at Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co. and apparently surprised an intruder. Investigators said several rooms in the house had been ransacked.

Congratulations, Grads

House Sets Final Vote On Road Improvement Package

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — With strong bipartisan backing, an $8.6 billion highway construction bill that supporters said would restore North Carolina's tarnished reputation for good roads has gained tentative House approval.

"With this package, and it is a bold package, you will see that we'll climb back to being a good roads state and perhaps even become the great roads state," Rep. Bob Hunter, D-McDowell, said before the House passed the bill 94-21 on Wednesday. North Carolina has fallen behind neighboring states in road highway quality, he said.

A final vote was scheduled for today. If approved, the measure will go to the Senate, where a similar bill is pending.

Supporters fought off nine substantive amendments during a two-hour debate, repeatedly describing the bill as a compromise between a broad coalition of interest groups that could come unglued if significant changes were made.

"It's been like pulling eye teeth to get the elements of this package to add up to $8.6 billion and to have as much consensus as we have," said Rep. Alex Hall, D-New Hanover.

chairman of the House Finance Committee, which endorsed the measure Tuesday.

Developed over two years by a legislative study commission and the Martin administration, the bill attracted bipartisan support and opposition. Sixty-one Democrats and 33 Republicans voted for it; 12 Republicans and nine Democrats voted against it.

The centerpiece of the complex package is the widening of 1,800 miles of two-lane roads into an "intrastate" network that, combined with existing four-lane thoroughfares, would put 96 percent of the state's population within 10 miles of at least one four-lane highway.

Additionally, the measure calls for paving 10,000 miles of rural secondary roads and constructing "loop" freeways around seven metropolitan areas.

The program would be financed with a 5 1/4 cents-per-gallon boost in the gasoline tax, a "user fee" of 3 percent on vehicles, and increases in fees on vehicle registration, trucks, dealer plates, auto rentals, and titles.

Most of the proposed amendments were defeated by wide margins. The closest vote came on a proposal by Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, to have no ceiling on the 3 percent user fee on passenger vehicles. The bill would limit the fee, which is similar to a sales tax, to $1,000 per vehicle for the first four years of the program and $1,500 thereafter.

Blue argued that the ceiling would mean that wealthy people who spend $50,000 and more on automobiles would pay the same as buyers of less expensive cars.

"It is very difficult to explain to ... the middle class citizen in this state why we don't think it's fair to take the tax on up," he said.

But Hunter said removing the limit would draw opposition from automobile dealers, who had lobbied against a user fee and said it would reduce sales. The dealers endorsed the package after the ceilings were added and the bill was amended to levy the 3 percent fee on a vehicle's retail value minus the reduction for a trade-in.

"We feel like we've got a balanced package here and we don't need to destroy some of the compromises that have been put together," he said.

The amendment failed 52-58.

Also rejected were amendments to: — Increase the vehicle title fee from $5 to $20, instead of $40 as called for in the bill.

— Make a $1 billion bond issue one of the package's revenue elements; require that Republicans, blacks and women be represented on a legislative committee that will oversee implementation of the program.

— Eliminate a requirement that the Department of Transportation try to give at least 10 percent of the business generated by the program to minority-owned firms.

— Require that no road constructed with money from the program be named for a living person.

— Remove a provision allowing the program to siphon off money from the regular highway budget if the program's taxes and fees prove insufficient to fund all its projects.

The bill's outnumbered opponents formed an unusual coalition of conservatives and liberals who argued that the revenue increases would put an excessive burden on average taxpayers.

That argument was used in support of linking a $1 billion bond issue to the package — a proposal rejected earlier by a House subcommittee and the full Finance Committee.

Rep. Art Pope, R-Wake, said the bond issue would allow the gasoline tax increase to be 2 cents lower than the bill's 5 1/4 cents per gallon.

Vote

from an increased tax on auto purchases and title transfers and fees.

"It's trying not to hit one segment of the driving population," Roger said.

The proposed program would advance improvements to U.S. 64, U.S. 264 and U.S. 70, improvements already considered under the present TIP.

The proposal would also likely widen and extend secondary roadways through Pitt County and Greenville. The most likely improvements include the upgrading of the southwest loop of N.C. 11/903; multilaning of N.C. 33 and N.C. 43, and widening of Evans Street and Arlington Drive through Greenville.

According to the proposal, 249 miles of roads in Pitt and Greene counties would receive upgrading by 2001. An additional 47 miles of roads in the two counties would be completed within the following three years.

Along with the proposed road improvements, an additional $67,102 in funding is possible for Hookerton, Snow Hill and Walstonburg projects. Other potential projects considered under the proposal include widening of U.S. 13-N.C. 11 from Greenville to Bethel.

He said he spoke individually with about 10 to 15 legislators Wednesday, many of whom represent districts outside eastern North Carolina.

"It was very low key in talking. We certainly just thanked the legislators for what they're doing for the state ... and reminded them, as we see it, of a couple of paramount needs here."

"Those I spoke with were very supportive of the university's need for the library and the need for the regional activities center," Alexander said. "Those were the two items of my agenda."

Though Alexander's board has been pushing for a regional activities center to improve the city's chances of landing a major convention, the authority has agreed with the university administration that a new campus library must be the top priority this year.

As of now, Taft said he is confident lawmakers will approve $24.5 million over the biennium for the library.

"That's a constant struggle because the situation is so fluid. But I'm confident we will hold that," Taft said. "Nothing else rivals or approaches the level of that priority."

ECU Chancellor Richard R. Eakin, who attended the reception, said he is pleased with the priority lawmakers are giving the library.

"I'm happy that the library is receiving strong consideration by the legislature, yes sir," said Eakin.

"I got a chance (Wednesday night) to meet legislators I had not met previously, and express to them thanks for what they are doing for eastern North Carolina," said Eakin, who also attended the 1987 reception.

Despite the low funds in the General Assembly, Alexander said it is important to demonstrate to legislators that Greenville is the meeting and convention hub of eastern North Carolina and to push for funding of the convention center.

"The fellowship was great, and we had a chance to talk individually with legislators," he said. "I thought it was a very positive thing to do."

Greenville City Council member Nancy Jenkins said there was a good turnout of legislators from across the state, and ECU had good representation.

"We got a chance to thank them, and maybe admonish them for a couple of things," she said.

While the reception is an opportunity to mix and mingle, Mrs. Jenkins said it is also a time to prod lawmakers to support bills.

"This is the first year that I have gone," she said. "It was last-minute sort of prodding. Probably, in a large part (the reception was a chance) to say thank you for what they have done or what's already in the hopper. For a large part it is social, but there is business as well."

As a member of the City Council, she said she urged legislators to back the proposed $8.6 billion highway plan, which is needed to spark development in eastern North Carolina.

Wright's Speech Marks The Change Of A Generation

By Mike Feinsilber
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Jim Wright, never comfortable on television, talked directly to the House. He waved documents. He held aloft his famous book. He wiped his brow. He spoke an hour and at the end, almost in a mumble, said that he would quit.

Off in the Republican seats sat Newt Gingrich, gadfly from Georgia, Wright's nemesis. When the House stood to applaud Wright, Gingrich rose, too, but didn't clap. Beside him, Republican leader Bob Michel offered a sad shake of his head. He had witnessed a generational change, and he is of the old generation. Gingrich's the new.

Wright's speech was nothing fancy, a detailed point by point rejoinder to the bill of particulars laid out against him by the ethics committee.

He belittled the $3.25 per-copy royalty received on the book that had been sold in wholesale lots to lobbyists. He said his wife, Betty, had earned her $18,000 salary. They had paid for their condominium "per diem," said Wright, irate. He produced someone's affidavit, and put it in the record.

He defended hiring a young man convicted of assaulting a young woman and said he had not inquired into the details of the crime and thought redemption was still a respectable American principle.

The speaker had wanted his day in court before his peers and he had it. By the end, the television networks, with no drama to match this, tuned in.

In Wright's audience was Lloyd Bentsen, who came over from the Senate to be with a Texas colleague;

Tony Coelho of California, the Democrats' super fund raiser who stunned his party during the weekend by resigning to avoid going through the same ethics wringer; Bill Gray of Philadelphia, who saw his chance to become the first black to climb into the House leadership endangered by leaked word of an FBI investigation involving his office.

Wife Betty Wright sat in the gallery with jutting chin. The venerated Mo Udall, D-Ariz., just out of the hospital, suffering from Parkinson's disease, took off his glasses, leaned forward to catch Wright's words.

Tom Foley, D-Wash., awesomely popular with both parties, articulate and modern where Wright is old-fashioned, a teddybear on television, presided. He is destined to become speaker next week, when Wright leaves.

Bentsen sat mournful, distracted. Coelho had the look of a man relieved. Gray dangled his loafered foot in the aisle, rushed up to Wright when the speech was over, gave him a bearhug.

Before the speech, the Texas Democrats had lunch with Wright, a solemn affair, all said. They posed for a picture before adjourning.

In the hours anticipating the speech, David Obey, D-Wis., idly toying with a pocketknife, spoke of the Foley speakership even before it started. "The World War II generation is gone, now," he said.

A House reformer, father of the new ethics rules, Obey glowed over Foley's prospects. "He is a superb detail man, a Soviet scholar," he said.

From the old guard came the voice of Henry Gonzalez, D-Texas, who said he had warned back in 1977 that creating a Committee of Standards of Official Conduct — congressmen judging congressmen — would lead to ruin and disarray.

'There's An Evil Wind Blowing' In Congress

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — House members, shaken by Jim Wright's resignation speech, say their chamber has become a partisan "war zone" and wonder whether political bickering will rage on despite the speaker's call for a truce.

"There's an evil wind blowing in the halls of Congress today that is reminiscent of the Spanish Inquisition," Rep. Jack Brooks said Wednesday in likening the ethics charges that felled Wright to cruel punishments against Spaniards accused of heresy in 1478.

The mood described by the House

Judiciary Committee chairman was echoed by others, but lawmakers generally expressed hope that members would heed Wright's plea in his speech to the House: "Let us not try to get even with each other."

Wright's emotional resignation speech culminated a yearlong, $1.5 million investigation by the ethics committee into the Texas Democrat's financial dealings. The formal probe began with charges filed against Wright by Republican Rep. Newt Gingrich of Georgia — now his party's whip — and culminated in committee allegations of 69 rules violations.

Even supporters said they backed

Wright's decision to quit, stating the ethics cloud hanging over him would have made it impossible for Wright to remain an effective leader.

The speaker was praised by Democrats and Republicans alike. President Bush, in a message from London, referred to their shared home state of Texas and said: "In spite of the present situation, I believe the Wright tenure was one of effectiveness and dedication to the Congress of the United States."

But the words of praise were spiked with partisan bitterness, especially toward Gingrich, who watched the speech stoically from the fourth row of the Republican side of the chamber. If Gingrich "wants to engage in open warfare, there will be a Democratic response" came the blunt warning from Rep. Bill Richardson, D-N.M. He said partisan bickering has made the House a "war zone, not a legislative body. Both sides have had enough."

Gingrich ducked out of the House chamber and avoided reporters after Wright's speech.

Other lawmakers issued more general warnings to all their colleagues.

Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., urged members to "stop turning this place into Beirut."

Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, former chairman of the ethics committee, warned that if the present mood remains "the end result will be to destroy this institution, the end result will be to destroy this institution as we know it today."

A more optimistic note was sounded by a staunch Wright defender, Robert Torricelli, D-N.J., who said Wright's "parting gift was a warning to stop" the vengeance.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, praised Wright's accomplishments on issues including trade, welfare reform and civil rights.

"Every American whose company is able to compete overseas, every retiree who need no longer fear paying a crippling medical bill, will owe a substantial debt of gratitude to Speaker Wright," Mitchell said.

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said the resignation comes at a time that "young people are saying, why should I go into government? Why should I lay my whole life bare for something that may be destructive to me personally? An awful lot of us are hearing that sort of thing from our children."

Foley Rallies His Supporters

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Barely an hour after Jim Wright announced he was resigning, Majority Leader Tom Foley took to the telephone to rally support in a bid for speaker of the House that is likely to be uncontested.

Foley, who remained a Wright loyalist to the end, took his usual cautious approach in his pursuit of the speakership, telling reporters late Wednesday he "assumed" he would be a candidate.

As he did when he was elected to the No. 2 leadership post, Foley said he intends to call all 259 of his Democratic colleagues asking for their votes.

"I will call as many as I can," said Foley, who represents a mostly conservative district in eastern Washington state that stretches from the Canadian border to the Oregon line.

Foley said he had "scrupulously" avoided contacting any members prior to Wright's Wednesday announcement he was stepping down.

"The difference now is that there is a vacancy," said Foley, adding that even though no opponent for the speakership has surfaced he felt it necessary to ask members for their votes.

During his 25 years in Congress, Foley has built a reputation as a skilled political negotiator, more interested in compromise than confrontation. Foley is a consensus builder who is not adverse to engaging in trench warfare with Republicans, but would prefer to avoid it.

"One of the things I would like to accomplish is to help bring a spirit of mutual respect and reconciliation back to Congress," said Foley.

Foley sat calmly in the speaker's chair as Wright delivered his resignation speech on the House floor Wednesday. Immediately after returning to his office, Foley huddled with his top aides and started making phone calls. Democratic members of the Washington state House delegation came first.

"He told me he was absolutely running and asked for my support," said Rep. Norm Dicks, D-Wash., a close friend of Foley.

Rep. Al Swift, D-Wash., said he, too, received a call from Foley asking for his support.

"It's typical Tom Foley, he's not taking anything for granted," said Swift.

Quayle To Visit Central America

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Vice President Dan Quayle will make his second trip to Central America June 11-14, on a mission to encourage democratic freedoms under El Salvador's new government and intensify opposition to Panamanian ruler Manuel Antonio Noriega, Quayle's office announced today.

Quayle will travel to Guatemala, Honduras, El Salvador and Costa Rica, the four U.S. allies in the region, and meet with each country's president. He also will meet with leaders of the U.S.-backed Contra rebel movement that opposes the leftist government of Nicaragua, Quayle aides said.

In El Salvador, where the newly elected president, Alfredo Cristiani, was being inaugurated today, Quayle also will meet with military leaders. He is expected to underscore the pro-human rights message he delivered during a visit there in February.

Quayle's journey will come after a special delegation reports June 6 to the Organization of American States on its recent mission to Panama.

The diplomats from Trinidad, Guatemala and Costa Rica ended four days of talks aimed at finding a solution to the political crisis stemming from May 7 elections that were widely seen as having been rigged by Noriega.

The United States condemned Noriega, beefed up its troop presence in Panama and urged allies in the hemisphere to isolate the general.

Quayle is expected to rally U.S. allies in the anti-Noriega effort.

Although the OAS team has not issued its report, there are no indications the country is any closer to resolving its situation, in which Noriega ultimately invalidated the election results.

Quayle aides did not disclose where the vice president would meet with the Contras, whose troops are encamped inside Honduras near the Nicaraguan border.

The Bush administration is providing non-lethal aid to the Contras to keep their forces in place for a year while the Central American countries work on a diplomatic solution to the Contra war.

In El Salvador, Quayle's visit will serve to underscore support for Cristiani at a time when some Congress members have expressed concerns about continuing U.S. aid to that country because of the ties between his rightist political party, Arena, and past death squad activity.

Quayle and other U.S. officials, however, say Cristiani deserves a chance to prove he is committed to democracy and the pro-human rights government he has promised.

"Our reading is they've been pretty responsible to date. It is a situation we've got to keep our eyes on," said one administration official.

Quayle's meeting with Salvadoran military officials is not expected to carry the stern tone of his previous message.

His earlier visit, the first foreign trip of the newly inaugurated Bush administration, was to highlight U.S.

Alcoholic Beverage Industry Marshals Forces To Attack Koop's Proposed Curbs

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Surgeon General C. Everett Koop's sweeping proposals to curb drunken driving are meeting sharp criticism from the alcoholic beverage industry, which says it was intentionally left off a panel that drafted them.

"Surgeon General Koop has endorsed a drastic series of proposals that would dramatically increase the level of government intrusion into our private lives without a significant effect on the alcohol abuse problem," said Stephen Lambright, vice president of Anheuser-Busch Companies.

Anheuser-Busch's Spuds MacKenzie ads for Bud Lite beer were one target of Koop's complaints about the industry.

Koop wants a ban on some alcohol promotion and advertising he says is aimed at youths. In one of his last official acts before leaving office July 13, Koop also called Wednesday for higher taxes on liquor, tougher state laws and enforcement against drunken driving and far-reaching voluntary action by the industry.

Koop did not draw a clear line between what action should be imposed and what should be voluntary but said his proposals stress voluntary compliance.

Nonetheless, representatives of the alcoholic beverage industry interpreted the broad program as an infringement.

Koop adopted several proposals from scores presented in a report by a workshop he and other federal officials organized in December.

Among other recommendations he endorsed: a decrease in the amount of blood alcohol content at which it is illegal to drive from 0.10 percent to 0.04 percent by the year 2000, instant confiscation of drivers' licenses, anti-drunken driving programs and funding of safety and health ads to match alcohol ads.

Koop singled out the Spuds MacKenzie dog ads and Miller Lite's beach party ads as promotions designed to appeal to young people, who he said are more likely to die in a drunken driving accident than from any other cause.

Pointing to a display of the Bud and Miller ads, Koop said: "These practices ... tell youth that alcohol consumption leads to athletic, social and sexual success."

Forty percent of all deaths between the ages of 15 and 20 are the result of motor vehicle accidents, and half of all crashes are linked to alcohol abuse, according to federal statistics. Nearly 25,000 people died in alcohol-related traffic accidents in the United States last year.

Lambright said Spuds MacKenzie has been used extensively to promote responsible drinking.

He said Beer prices would double under Koop's proposals.

F. A. Meister, president of the Distilled Spirits Council, said the panel that helped draw up the surgeon general's conclusions tried to solve drunken driving by eliminating drinking rather than working to make drunken driving socially unacceptable.

He said alcoholic beverage industry representatives were not invited to participate in the conference last December.

Beach Says Put The Bottom In NORTH MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — The bottom has fallen out of beach wear this summer, and that's upsetting people who would rather look the other way.

"We've had maybe a dozen young women we have asked to cover up or leave the beach," said city waterfront director Norma Jean Page.

Part of her job lately has been to keep the beach free of the near nudity of thong or G-string bathing suits which leave the bottom bare.

"It's really no big deal. We just tell them we have a city ordinance since 1976 against revealing certain parts of the body, including the buttocks. When they understand that, they are very nice and leave," she said.

The suits are specifically outlawed in North Myrtle Beach. But women who sport the skimpy wear have not been fined or hauled off to jail, just asked to leave the beach.

Woman Stages Rope Protest

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — A woman who dangled from a rope for about an hour after rappelling from the eighth floor of the state Transportation Building says she did it to protest U.S. aid to El Salvador.

Rebecca A. Pierce, 45, a self-employed carpenter, was arrested on charges of disorderly conduct after she remained suspended 50 to 60 feet above the ground in the building's atrium, said police spokesman Scott Gillis. She was released on her own recognizance.

Pierce dropped leaflets urging U.S. Sen. John Kerry, whose office is in the building, to work toward halting aid to El Salvador.

"I think I got the message out," she said. "I hope Kerry will seriously consider changing his vote and not keep sending money to the death squads."

Ms. Pierce, who said she has a fear of heights even though she has been rock climbing for 18 years, is a member of the Boston Committee in Solidarity with the People of El Salvador.

In a statement from Washington, Kerry said: "I appreciate the woman's concern and I'm very sensitive to the passion she and others display on this issue."

Getty Museum Buys $35 Million Work

NEW YORK (AP) — The Getty Museum paid a record $35.2 million for a 16th-century Florentine portrait of Duke Cosimo de' Medici that had been displayed in the Frick Collection since 1970.

The price paid Wednesday was a record for an Old Master, and was the fifth highest price paid for a painting at the world's two major auction houses, Christie's and Sotheby's.

Scholars described the work, sometimes called the Halberdier, as the finest Italian Renaissance painting to be offered at auction in more than a decade.

Christie's said many consider it to be the finest Old Master painting in private hands in the United States.

The previous auction record for an Old Master painting was $10.4 million, paid for Andrea Mantegna's "Adoration of the Magi" in London in 1985.

The presale estimate for the Medici portrait was $20 million. The price included a 10 percent buyer's premium.

The painting, circa 1537, is by Jacopo da Carucci, who was known as Pontormo. Chauncey Devereaux Stillman, a New York investor and philanthropist who died Jan. 24, had lent it to the Frick in 1970 for its 50th anniversary exhibition.

Stillman's lawyers said it would be sold for the benefit of the Homeland Foundation, his charitable organization.

Charles A. Ryskamp, president of the Frick, said in March that he was devastated by the painting's removal and expressed concern that it might leave the country.

Paintings that have sold for more are: "Irises" by Vincent van Gogh, $53.9 million; "Yo Picasso" by Pablo Picasso, $47.85 million; "Sunflowers" by van Gogh, $39.9 million, and "Acrobat and Young Harlequin" by Picasso, $38.46 million.

Rats Invade Posh California Homes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OAKLAND, Calif. — Upwardly mobile roof rats who prefer California's newer neighborhoods are invading pricey homes, using newly planted vines and trees as an above-ground freeway, health officials said.

Twice during the past two weeks, wrecker rats have driven Lance Finkel out of his home in Oakland's Montclair district, a neighborhood of $300,000-plus houses in the hills overlooking the city.

"They're chewing the house apart," said Finkel. "They're chewing up the doors and pulling the carpet up, they've chewed through the bottom of an armoire. ... They're driving me out of the house."

Even an exterminator wasn't able to solve the problem for Finkel, who is hoping Alameda County's Vector Control unit can stop the infestation.

The baby boom among roof rats is keeping pace with California's population rise, which saw the number of residents jump from 662,000 to 28.3 million this year.

The rodents, which use telephone lines and overhanging trees to travel from city to suburb, are moving in where there was never a problem before, health officials said.

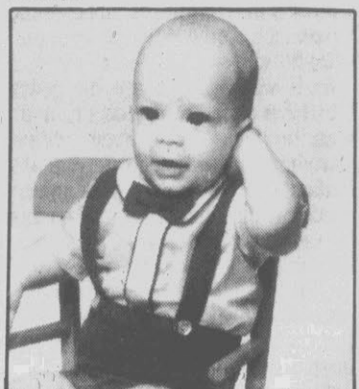

"There's a lot of development taking place all over the state. And all these developments are putting in new landscaping. As it matures, this vegetation provides ideal habitat for roof rats," said Richard Yercott, a State Health Department biologist.

Complaints about Norway sewer rats, the larger more aggressive cousin found in city slums and waterfronts, used to dominate rat complaints in Oakland and the adjacent suburban counties, but not any more.

"For years the Norways were the prevailing animals, but I think the roof rat is quickly catching up," said John Chase, a technician in Contra Costa County's rodent control unit. Chase says 50 percent of his office's calls are about roof rats now.

Alameda County roof rat complaints have increased 50 percent during the past five years, particularly in Oakland's hill areas, said Harry Scott, manager of Alameda County's Vector Control district.

Senior Has Choice Of College Scholarships

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — With nearly $1 million in scholarship offers, Chris Vuturo had the luxury of choice when it came time to pick a college.

Valedictorian, civic volunteer, newspaper columnist, athlete — Vuturo had a perfect 4.0 grade-point average at De Sales High School. He scored 33 out of a possible 36 on the American College Test and a combined 1,350 out of a possible 1,600 on the Scholastic Aptitude Test.

"He was always thinking ahead of us — teachers as well as students," said Tony Medley, who was Vuturo's journalism teacher.

He applied to numerous colleges and received scholarships and invitations to attend Harvard University, the University of Southern California, the U.S. Air Force Academy, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Columbia University, Boston University, and Georgetown University, among others.

All told, he said, he was offered $885,782 worth of scholarships, based on current tuition rates.

He had dreamed about aeronautical engineering since childhood. Then he started working for the student newspaper and thought about pursuing a career in journalism. Lately, he's been thinking about a combination of genetics and law.

Vuturo decided on Harvard, thinking it would give him room to explore some or all those fields. The scholarship package from Harvard is worth about $68,000 over four years, and that plus some of his own savings would cover about three-quarters of the cost.

The rest will come from other scholarships, including a National Merit Scholarship and a Jefferson County Farm Bureau Scholarship.

Teachers and students describe Vuturo as a ferocious competitor in the classroom. But they also said he's among the first to volunteer to tutor other students.

"I always saw his presence in the class as a positive catalyst to other students," said Richard Knoop, who taught him biology and German.

Vuturo is the youngest of six children of Salvador and Jean Vuturo. The Vuturos said Chris, who received a partial scholarship to attend the Roman Catholic high school, couldn't have gone to college without aid.

Study Shows Poor Spending More On Home Energy Bills

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — America's poor, suffering from cuts in aid levels, are spending three times as much of their income on home energy bills as the average U.S. household, according to a newly released study.

The report issued Wednesday by the National Consumer Law Center, a non-profit organization, said many state governments have not made up fully for recent declines in federal energy assistance to the poor. It said some states are cutting aid levels.

"These factors all conspire to leave the poor mired in their energy crisis, a crisis which is bound to continue," said Charles Hill of the consumer group.

The study said low-income households spend, on average, 11 percent of their income on home energy costs, compared with a national average of 3.4 percent.

Among the group's other findings: — In 25 states plus the District of Columbia average home energy bills for low-income residents exceeded $1,000 last year. The highest was $1,611, in Delaware. Costs were below $800 a year in just three states: California, Nevada and Tennessee.

— Average home energy costs during the winter exceeded $100 a month for the poor last year in 43 states and the District of Columbia.

— In 10 of 16 states for which complete data was available on recipients of federal low-income home energy aid, the average household had $75 or less to spend per week on food, transportation and other needs after paying winter heating bills.

Alaska and Hawaii were not included in the study for technical reasons, the group said.

The study focused on several different categories of poor households to compare conditions for the elderly, families of unemployed, and households reliant on minimum wage jobs.

For widows or widowers of Social Security recipients, average home energy bills in one-third of the states exceeded 20 percent of the benefits. The highest was Delaware, 27 percent; the lowest was 13 percent in Nevada and California.

For families in which the head of the household is employed at the minimum wage of $3.35 an hour, average energy costs were more than 15 percent of income in 21 states plus the District of Columbia.

In 17 states, households in which unemployment compensation is the basic source of income had on average $100 or less a week to spend on non-energy items during winter months. Those in Massachusetts were best off, with $164 a week left after paying the heating bills; Indiana was worst off, at $75 a week.

The study said that while federal energy aid to the poor has been a major help since it was started in 1980, the amount of assistance has been declining since 1985 when the average benefit nationwide was $224. Last year's average benefit was $194, the group said, and the figure is expected to drop again this year.

Many states have supplemented the federal aid with money collected from oil companies for violating 1970s price controls, but the study said it found that these additional state funds have not made up fully for the drop in federal aid.

Survivors To Stage Reunion Sunday Of Futile 'Voyage Of The Damned'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NORTH MIAMI, Fla. — The partying aboard the cruise ship St. Louis stopped when Cuba and the United States refused to allow 937 Jews fleeing Germany to land and start a life beyond the grip of Nazi persecution.

To commemorate the "Voyage of the Damned" 50 years later, Herbert Karliner has tracked down about 70 fellow survivors.

Organizers of the anniversary plan to sink the remains of Adolf Hitler's yacht, the Ostwind, off Miami Beach on Sunday as an artificial reef. The Ostwind has been decaying in Jacksonville for decades as various owners have considered plans to restore it.

The yacht Florida Princess will carry about 25 St. Louis passengers on Sunday to the approximate point where the St. Louis was shoed away by the U.S. Coast Guard on June 4, 1939. But this time, the travelers will receive a Coast Guard escort before docking in Miami Beach.

"We must have been very close because I could see the palm trees," said Karliner, a retired baker who was 12 at the time.

Telegrams from the ship to President Roosevelt and other world leaders went unanswered as the passengers tried desperately to find refuge. The ship received orders to return to Germany — events dramatized in the 1975 movie "Voyage of the Damned" starring Faye Dunaway and Max von Sydow.

Two days from a German port, agreement was reached to split the passengers among England, France, Netherlands and Belgium, but most who returned to Europe would die in concentration camps.

"We knew what the situation was in Europe for the Jewish population," Karliner said in an interview at his North Miami home. "The crossing was wonderful. We were very excited to be out of Germany."

He has snapshots of smiling adults in dressy clothes at a banquet table and shipboard pals gathered for a children's party on the trip south.

But the St. Louis would dock in Havana harbor before most of the passengers learned their travel papers had been voided. Twenty-two passengers who obtained their documents from the Cuban consulate in Italy would be allowed to land. But no one else.

"There was near panic when we were still in the harbor," said Liesl Loeb, daughter of the chairman of the passenger committee.

An attorney jumped overboard and remained in a Cuban hospital as the St. Louis set sail again while the passengers, led by Ms. Loeb's father, bargained for their future.

"These men worked day and night. I don't think my father slept one full night in our cabin after the crisis began," said Ms. Loeb, a graphic designer in suburban Philadelphia who celebrated her 11th birthday on the voyage.

About three-quarters of the passengers were on an immigration quota system to enter the United States from three months to three years later, said Rabbi Simcha Freedman of Miami Beach, who researched the cruise in conjunction with the anniversary.

Many of the Jewish men aboard were released from concentration camps for the trip on the condition they not return.

Building Work Shows Increase

WASHINGTON — Construction spending, propped up by an increase in work on government projects, edged up a slim 0.1 percent in April after dropping in the previous three months, the Commerce Department said today.

Overall, spending on both public and private construction projects rose to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $414.9 billion in April after dropping 0.3 percent in March, 0.6 percent in February and 0.7 percent in January.

The January-March string of declines had marked the first time construction spending dropped three times in a row since it fell for five straight months from February through June 1981, just before the start of the 1981-82 recession.

Road Service Repair Fleet Is Dutch Treat

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ON THE A9 MOTORWAY, Netherlands — The young couple rented a 1936 Rolls Royce for their wedding day. When the fanbelt snapped, it was the Road Service that got them to the church on time.

The Road Service is the Netherlands' 24-hour repair service, and its legendary mechanics in their yellow cars don't give up easily.

"I had a quick look through my supplies and I just happened to have the right belt," said mechanic Ruud Lucken, recalling how he got the Rolls rolling.

Because the hapless couple's chauffeur was one of the 2.3 million members of the Road Service, the emergency call cost just the price of the fanbelt.

Not a towing operation, the Road Service is renowned for its mechanics' expertise with almost any model among the 5.6 million cars, trucks and buses that crowd this small nation's highway system.

Its 650 radio-dispatched vehicles deal with an average of 2,000 breakdowns a day, providing a mechanical safety net for motorists in this cradle-to-grave welfare state.

The Road Service began in 1946 with a handful of volunteers and a fleet of seven Harley-Davidson Liberator motorcycles left behind by World War II Allied forces.

Although some motorcycles are still in use, most mechanics drive compact cars carrying more than 880 pounds of power and hand tools, fuel, water, lubricants and spare parts.

Road Service vehicles patrol all major Dutch highways and, with a toll-free telephone call, are usually at the scene of a breakdown within minutes.

Owned by the Royal Dutch Tourist Association, the Road

Service has an annual membership fee of $22.25. For that service, which can include up to two hours of labor, members pay only for parts. Tips are forbidden.

Non-members can get help as well, but the price is on-the-spot membership.

To protect against abuse, mechanics limit their work to emergency repairs designed to get the car back in motion.

Mechanic Jan Brand tells of one call for a highway breakdown. The motorist had apparently had the car towed there to take advantage of the free service. The engine was cold, and the motorist's policy only covered highway repairs.

For a small annual surcharge, the Road Service provides repairs anywhere, even in the owner's garage.

The key to the Road Service's success is its mechanics, who are "expected to know everything there is to know about every single car," says Wim van Dink, chief of the training program.

Mechanics spend 2½ years learning how to repair "everything from a motorcycle to the heaviest type of truck," as well as firefighting and first aid techniques, Van Dink says.

"Occasionally, you have to face the fact that there's something wrong with a car that you can't fix," said Brand, as he cruised this Amsterdam-area highway on the lookout for car trouble.

"But no car's getting towed away," he said, "unless I know at least what's wrong with it."

The Road Service mechanics' load is lightened considerably by Dutch government regulations requiring mechanical tests for all vehicles over three years old.

"Nowadays, they don't make any more really bad cars," says Brand. "Of course some are more breakdown-prone than others."

A Bar Of Soap Would Bring Her Nearer To The Man She Loves

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Dear Abby: I can relate to the lady who said she stayed on her side of the bed for 40 years because her husband hardly ever took a bath. I have been in the same boat for years. I threw hints at my husband for years, but it did no good. Finally, in desperation, I said to him, "Honey, you stink!" It was like talking to a brick wall.

I'm a good cook and keep a clean house, but this man refuses to keep himself clean. He must be used to the smell, but I'm not. I've slept by myself and cried myself to sleep because he doesn't think I'm worth taking a bath for.

The sad part of it is, I love this man, and he's the only one I want to give my love to. I'm 50 and still ache to have his arms around me and give me a little loving once in a while. I've never looked at another man and have no desire to.

Oh, I'd settle for a hug and a kiss, but if I try for it, it turns him on and makes him want to have sex, and I can't go that far because he smells so bad. I can't win.

The only time he ever was clean enough to love was when he was in the hospital and they bathed him. So what can I do, Abby? — Missing Love In Indianapolis

Dear Missing: If you haven't told this to your family doctor, please do. Your husband could have mental problems. His behavior is not normal, and both of you are deprived because of it. Tell your doctor what you have told me. Your husband needs a thorough examination from the neck — both ways. I wish you luck.

Dear Abby: This is an open letter to all who have treated me kindly when they have driven by me while I'm on my bicycle:

ches below pavement level and might be just the right size to catch my tire and flip me into your path.

Thank you for patience when I ride after dark. Sometimes I don't have a light and my clothing isn't bright enough, which is stupid, but maybe I've been caught unawares and didn't expect to be out after dark — maybe I had a flat, or misjudged my distance or the time. And I'm grateful when you don't turn on your bright lights in my face.

Please be considerate of me, automobile driver. When gasoline costs $5 a gallon, we'll all be on bicycles. — Anywhere, USA

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA. 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Coming Full Circle, Just Like Her Mother

I rummaged through a stack of old gift boxes in my closet before I found what I was looking for. It was a knotted, crumpled ribbon. Feverishly, I salvaged what I could and steamed out the wrinkles with an iron. My shoulders slumped as I realized that I had just come full circle. I had turned into my mother!

How could I have allowed this to happen? I love my mother dearly, but all the little things that have driven me nuts throughout the years have now found a home in my body.

I carry my lipstick in one of those little holders with a mirror. There is a piece of bright-colored yarn around the handle of my suitcase so I can spot it easily. I keep a litter bag in my car. Can you believe any of this?

Every time I change the color of my shoes, I change handbags to match. I never used to do that. And the other day I found myself throwing a measuring cup in the dishwasher when I had measured only water in it.

Maybe I have misjudged my mother. Is it possible there was a time in her life when she never considered rinsing out bread wrappers and hanging them out to dry with little clamp clothespins? Was it Grandma who passed on to her the habits of never calling anyone after 10 o'clock at night or never washing her hair just before she went to bed?

The first trait I picked up was a shock. When I pulled out of our driveway one day, I immediately got into the left lane on our boulevard.

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

"Why are you doing that?" asked my daughter.

"I have to make a left turn," I said.

"Mom! You don't make a left turn for another 30 blocks."

"I want to be there just in case no one will let me in."

"You sound just like Grandma," she said. "She's always doing that."

The comparison bothered me. I have always considered myself to be a "free spirit," a monument to rebellion. I worked at it while I was growing up. If my mother said someone was a creep, I saw him as a role model. If she said a philosophy course wouldn't pay the rent, I minored in it. If her prime concern was getting all the tomatoes canned before they went bad, mine was saving the world. Other than the fact that she gave me life, shared the same home and loved me, we had little in common.

I was riding with my daughter the other day when she entered the expressway and immediately got into the left lane. "I know," she said, "the exit ramp is a few miles down, but sometimes no one will let you in."

I smiled. It's only a matter of time before she'll be saving boxes and ironing old ribbons.

Author Says She Would Rather Write Than Talk

By Hillel Italic
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — In the 1950s, when Bobbie Ann Mason was growing up in Mayfield, Ky., women had limited choices when they graduated from high school. They were expected to marry, raise children and remain in their hometown.

BOBBIE ANN MASON

Mason decided otherwise. "I wanted to go off to college and amount to something," said the author of the best-selling novel In Country and the recently released Love Life (Harper & Row, $17.95) a collection of short stories.

"It was hard for me at the time to see the positive values of having a family in the traditional way. If anybody stops to think about it, it's a burden that prevents you from doing anything else. That kind of thing stuck in my mind."

Instead of settling down, Mason attended journalism classes at the University of Kentucky, where she developed a lasting interest in literature. The softspoken author realized that writing was a perfect way to express herself.

"I always say I'm a writer because I'd rather write than talk," she said. "It's hard to think of things on the spot but in writing you can work it out. A writer has the luxury of time. When you write you take the time to observe." She has focused her attention on the people from the western part of Kentucky, specifically the town of Paducah. Her characters face the problems and opportunities of a changing world. Should they settle down or further their education? Should they have children? Should they move to another part of the country?

"People didn't have that many choices, but I think my characters are discovering a lot more choices," she said. "Times have changed. Joe can move to South Carolina, Beverly and Jolene can hop down to Memphis for a fun weekend. They can do these things, and in a way it's bewildering, thinking about what it means."

Mason's characters are people who are ready to make decisions. In one short story, "Marita," the title character is a college student who becomes pregnant by "one of two interchangeable guys," someone whose name she can not recall. Marita decides not to keep the baby and happily resumes her education.

"I think my characters are very hopeful that they're going to get somewhere and find true love," Mason said. "They're going to find some kind of satisfaction in their home life.

"It's like the Bruce Springsteen song, 'Everybody's got a hungry heart.' Everybody tries to fill that hunger in various ways. The wife and kid in Baltimore are not enough."

Mason writes sparsely; some have called her style minimalist. She weaves complex ideas around simple story lines. She cited Vladimir Nabokov as one of her biggest influences, expressing admiration for how he used surface images to show life's infinite reflections and possibilities.

She concluded the short story "Coyotes" with one of his favorite metaphors, light shining through trees onto leaves.

"He (Nabokov) talks about dappled light," Mason explained. "You think inside this dappled light, again and again and again, and each time see things in a different way. It's an infinite complexity of the way light and dark play together and create shadows. There are just infinite ways of seeing things."

Superficially, Mason's characters are similar. They come from the same part of the country, speak with the same accent and spend their time watching television and shopping at the local mall. But Mason is determined to give them dignity and individuality. In "Piano Fingers," she writes of snowflakes falling, no two alike.

"There's individuality in the tiniest things. Nothing is really like anything else. I want to communicate that everybody is a person with a valid life even if they're not famous. There are plenty of things people do that are absolutely heroic but they're very quiet."

High Point Paper Cites GUC Help

A High Point newspaper has lauded the Greenville Utilities Commission for its part in helping High Point electrical crews restore power after destructive windstorms caused widespread outages in early May.

The GUC crews assisted High Point through the emergency assistance program developed by Electricities of North Carolina. The cities are among 65 members of the organization, which provides technical and professional assistance to municipalities that own and operate their electric distribution systems.

Roger Jones, director of electric systems for the GUC, is the eastern regional coordinator for the emergency assistance program.

The High Point Enterprise editorial of May 12 recalled how High Point crews came to the aid of GUC workers when Greenville was hit by ice storms in February.

"It was a simple matter of people helping people," the editorial said. "Perhaps it passed almost unnoticed, but the favor was returned — with interest — this past weekend. High Point electrical crews were swamped with the demands imposed by terribly destructive windstorms which this time picked out High Point among its victims."

"Working shoulder-to-shoulder with them were electrical repair crews from Greenville and from its neighboring cities of Kinston and Wilson. They didn't have to be begged, and nobody had to talk about reciprocation of favors earlier given."

According to the editorial, High Point is "deeply indebted to those johnny-on-the-spot friends from down east who were there when we needed them."

investigation like Wright's.

Coelho acknowledged recently that a savings and loan officer set him up with a junk bond buy, and that he failed to properly report a $50,000 loan toward that purchase from the officer's financial institution.

In addition, Rep. William Gray of Pennsylvania, the No. 4 leader in the party hierarchy, has complained to Justice Department officials about leaks to reporters that his office is the subject of a separate probe.

The Democrats scheduled a party caucus next Tuesday to nominate Foley, and the full House is likely to ratify the choice within hours. The speaker said by the end of June he also would give up his seat representing the 12th district of Texas.

Never before has a House speaker resigned under fire in mid-term. Wright's Democratic colleagues, some of whom had privately told reporters they thought he had stayed too long, hailed it as a heroic sacrifice for the institution and called on Republicans to take heed.

The investigation of Wright was begun a year ago based on a complaint by Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., who was rewarded by his GOP colleagues earlier this year when they installed him as the House Minority Whip.

Gingrich, who himself is now the target of an ethics complaint, avoided reporters after Wright's speech. But other leading Republicans made clear they wanted to take advantage of the Democrats' loss.

The election of Foley as speaker on Tuesday would fill only the largest void in the Democratic leadership.

Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., was considered the favorite to replace Foley as Majority Leader. Rep. Ed Jenkins, D-Ga., was battling Gephardt for that job.

Pitino To Be Named Kentucky Set To Make It Official

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LEXINGTON, Ky. — All that's left is the dotting of the "i's" and the crossing of the "t" in Pitino.

Rick Pitino, who resigned as coach of the New York Knicks on Tuesday night, was expected to be named head coach at down-and-out Kentucky today.

Kentucky's Athletics Board was to discuss the coaching job in a meeting on the campus. A news conference, during which Pitino is expected to appear, was scheduled afterward.

Pitino arrived in Lexington on Wednesday. "Nothing's done till there's an Athletics Board meeting and we have everything in place," Kentucky Athletics Director C.M. Newton said. "We want to get his signature on the dotted line and all that sort of thing."

MacLeod To Knicks? Mavs' Coach Is Top Candidate

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Will John MacLeod leave Big D for the Big Apple?

MacLeod is the New York Knicks' leading choice to replace Rick Pitino, but the Dallas Mavericks coach has yet to say whether he wants the job.

MacLeod was expected to meet today with Mavs owner Donald Carter and team executives Norm Sonju and Rick Sund to discuss his situation.

According to reports, MacLeod would like to coach in New York but has reservations about moving his family again.

"I have a commitment in Dallas," MacLeod said Wednesday. "It would be extremely hard to leave."

Sonju, the Mavs' general manager, said he expects MacLeod to stay in Dallas.

"In all our conversations ... John never gave us any indication of wanting to go anywhere else," he said. "I might be

Jordan And Johnson Top NBA All-Stars

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Michael Jordan and Magic Johnson made the 1989 Final Five, Larry Bird didn't.

For the first time this decade, the Boston Celtics' forward was not a part of the 1989 All-NBA team. Bird, a three-time Most Valuable Player, played just six games before undergoing foot surgery.

Johnson and Jordan, both guards, finished one-two in this year's Most Valuable Player balloting, but were not everyone's choice for the league's best. Each were relegated to the second team by one of the 85 media members who voted. The league would not reveal who left them off.

A new face to the first team, Utah Jazz forward Karl Malone, was the only unanimous choice.

Malone, 25, in his fourth year in the league, averaged 29.1 points per game to finish second to Jordan in the scoring race and grabbed 10.7 rebounds per game.

The forward helped lead the Jazz to a franchise-best 51-31 record this year, although they lost in the first round of the playoffs.

Making the first team, along with Malone, Johnson of Los Angeles, and Jordan of Chicago, were center Akeem Olajuwon of Houston and forward Charles Barkley of Philadelphia.

Johnson was an All-NBA choice for the seventh straight year; Jordan and Olajuwon were named for the third straight time. Barkley was first honored last year.

The second team was led by center Patrick Ewing of New York; forwards Tom Chambers of Phoenix

Scottie Pippen (33), Vinnie Johnson (15) fight for a rebound

Johnson's Spark Off Bench Keys Pistons Past Chicago

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — In the special language of the NBA, the Microwave shorted out Air Jordan's landing lights.

Vinnie Johnson scored 16 of his 22 points in the fourth quarter Wednesday night as the Detroit Pistons, who trailed by as many as 10 points in the first half, beat the Chicago Bulls 94-85 to take a 3-2 lead in the Eastern Conference finals.

The best-of-7 NBA series continues Friday night in Chicago and Game 7, if needed, would be Sunday afternoon back at The Palace. The winner will earn the right to advance to the NBA Finals against the Los Angeles Lakers, who locked up the Western Conference title earlier in the week.

The Bulls, in the conference finals for the third time, have never appeared in the NBA Finals; the Pistons lost to the Lakers in seven games last season.

Detroit's swarming defense held Chicago's Michael Jordan, who averaged 27.7 against the Pistons in the regular season, to just eight shots and 18 points.

"You have to take what the defense gives you," Jordan said. "If I didn't feel comfortable driving to the hole, I didn't do it. I'm not going to force an issue if it's not there."

In Game 1, also at The Palace, the incredible Jordan scored 32 points as the Bulls shocked Detroit with a 94-88 defeat, stealing away the Pistons' home-court advantage. In Game 3 at Chicago, he floated and soared for 46 points as the Bulls overcame a 14-point deficit down the stretch to beat Detroit 99-97.

"You want to get the ball out of his hands as much as possible," said Detroit guard Joe Dumars, one of several assigned to shadow Jordan.

"He's an unselfish player. If he's not open, he'll pass it."

"Now, we know that the help is going to be there. In the first game, we didn't know where the help was going to be. It's an awful lonely feeling, being out there with Michael. But, when he sees double (coverage) coming, he'll pass it off. He's not going to force it just to show he can."

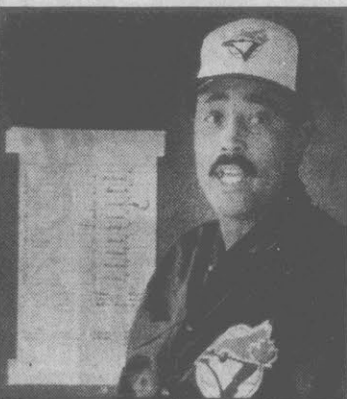

But even with Jordan lost in flight, the Pistons were doing their best imitation of the gang that couldn't shoot straight.

The Pistons, despite hitting their first two shots, hit only 27.3 percent in the first quarter and finished the game shooting 48.8 percent. The Bulls hit 49.2 percent of their shots.

It was two spurts, one by Mark Aguirre and a crunch time burst by Johnson, that proved the difference.

Aguirre scored 11 of his 19 points in the final 4:41 of the second

Cito Gaston

2nd-Choice Gaston Gets The Big Title

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CLEVELAND — The Toronto Blue Jays wanted Lou Piniella, but settled for Cito Gaston.

Gaston, 45, had the "interim" lifted from his title Wednesday and was appointed manager of the Blue Jays for the rest of 1989.

He had been elevated from hitting coach to interim manager when Jimmy Williams was fired May 15, and the Blue Jays initially said Gaston would not likely be kept at the top very long.

Negotiations to hire Piniella away from the New York Yankees' front office broke down over the weekend, however, and Gaston was deemed the next best thing.

"We were very up front with Cito. We told him he (Piniella) was our recommendation and that was the way we wanted to go," said Pat Gillick, Toronto's executive vice president.

The Yankees' demands for players as compensation for Piniella killed that idea. Piniella, a former Yankee manager and player, is still under contract to New York as a special advisor. He is working as a broadcaster on Yankees' telecasts.

"They wanted significant players from us — from what I could gather, two players," Gillick said in Cleveland, where the Blue Jays finished a three-game series with a 7-4 loss Wednesday night. "We didn't want to give up a player. We felt Lou could spring himself. He had a number of conversations with the owner of their club and wasn't able to bring it about. I think Lou wanted it (the Toronto job)."

Gaston himself said as recently as Tuesday it might be better to bring in someone from the outside.

"I know in the past they've talked about how maybe I'm too close to the players, but I think I've got their respect," Gaston said Wednesday. "As the week went on, I thought, 'Maybe I can handle this job.' If the players are really my friends, they'll understand when I have to do things they might not like."

Toronto was 8-7 with Gaston as interim manager, after going 12-24 under Williams.

Connors Is Out, But Not Down

Despite Loss, Jimbo Isn't Ready To Even Consider Retirement Yet

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PARIS — What's the best way of riling Jimmy Connors? Try telling him it's time he put his racket away and bought a new pair of slippers.

"Who brought that guy in here?" the 36-year-old Connors asked Wednesday after a reporter asked him how he felt about having just played his last singles match at the French Open.

"All the way here just to ask me that question," the American added tongue-in-cheek.

Talking about retirement is not one of Connors' favorite subjects. After all, he can still battle for hours under a hot sun and remain in good shape.

"It wasn't exactly a walk in the park today," Connors, the oldest player in the tournament, said after a 4-6, 6-3, 7-5, 7-5 loss to compatriot Jay Berger in the second round at Roland Garros, his earliest defeat here in 16 years.

The match took more than 4½ hours but, said Connors, "I could still have played the fifth set, my mouthpiece wasn't knocked out."

Another American duel launched Day 4 of the championships today as 17-year-old Michael Chang took on Pete Sampras in the second round.

Andre Agassi, the best U.S. hope for the men's title as the No. 5 seed, was next up against Paolo Cane of Italy. Also in action was top seed Ivan Lendl, playing the second match on Court 1, and defending champion Mats Wilander.

Several contenders for Wilander's title already bagged their third-round places on Wednesday.

No. 2 seed Boris Becker, in a second straight three-set victory, beat Eric Winogradsky of France 7-6, 7-5, 6-2. Stefan Edberg of Sweden, the No. 3 seed, outlasted Nicolas Pereira of Venezuela 6-4, 6-4, 6-2.

Other seeded men advancing included No. 6 Jacob Hlasek of Switzerland and No. 11 Alberto Mancini of Argentina.

Steffi Graf and Gabriela Sabatini moved closer to their expected women's championship showdown by winning in straight sets. Graf has conceded three games in two matches. Sabatini has given up four.

They were joined in Round 3 by No. 9 Katerina Maleeva, No. 8 Conchita Martinez, No. 10 Helen Kelesi and No. 15 Mary Joe Fernandez.

Two other seeds joined Connors on the sidelines. Helena Sukova, No. 5 among the women, lost to Japan's Akika Kujimuta, while Aaron Krickstein of the United States squandered a two-set lead and was beaten by Australia's Mark Woodforde.

Connors, renowned throughout two decades for his tenacious rallies, for once ran out of weapons during a 4-hour, 38-minute match against Berger that taxed the minds and bodies of both players.

Not even the excited Center Court crowd could will Connors to victory as the 22-year-old from Plantation, Fla., wore him down in the sun.

Connors, in typical street-fighting fashion, said he had enjoyed the challenge of trying to advance in the one Grand Slam event he never has won.

"All I can do is go on playing, fight till the death," he said. "It is good exercise. I enjoy matches like this. I was trying to make it to the five-hour mark to see if I could stand it," he said, jokingly.

"I still like the fact that I can go out and play a guy who is some 15 years younger. I played a perfect match. I just lost it."

Berger, enjoying his most fruitful season, said he was happy the crowd backed Connors.

Johnson Says Aikman Could Start

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Dallas Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson says multimillion-dollar quarterback Troy Aikman has made so much progress that he could start in the team's season opener.

"Troy has been everything we've expected and more," Johnson said Tuesday of the first pick in this year's NFL draft. "Mentally, he has a good grasp of what we're trying to do. And we already knew how physically talented he is."

"He is right on schedule for where we want him to be. He may be ahead of schedule. I have no reservations about Troy possibly being the starter in that first game."

Aikman, the richest rookie in NFL history, has a six-year, $11 million contract. But after practices, he eats $3 sandwiches at the site on the locker room's carpeted floor, brown-bagging it with offensive linemen.

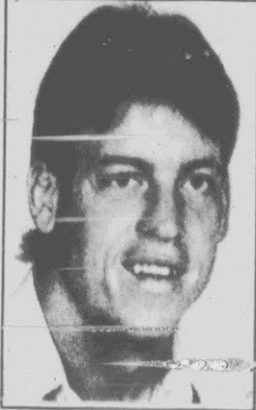

Aikman, who frequently has a dip of snuff pinched between his cheek and gum, has earned his teammates' respect on the field.

"He hasn't come in here with an attitude like 'clear out, I'm the big cheese,'" linebacker Garry Cobb said. "He's working as hard as anybody. There's no hot dog in him."

Aikman will be the first to agree that much remains to be done. "I need to work on everything; not one particular area," he said. "Right now, being in shorts is a whole different ballgame than it is when you put the pads on. When I get the pads on, I'll be able to learn a lot more about myself and my progress."

He has rejected all but a few requests for endorsements and personal appearances.

"I don't want to receive a lot of attention until I prove myself on the field, and right now I don't think I'm worthy of receiving that attention," Aikman said. "So I've backed off."

Texas May Use Multiple Pitchers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OMAHA, Neb. — Texas' Cliff Gustafson, one of college baseball's most successful coaches, may take a page from the book of another top coach, Miami's Ron Fraser, in the College World Series beginning Friday.

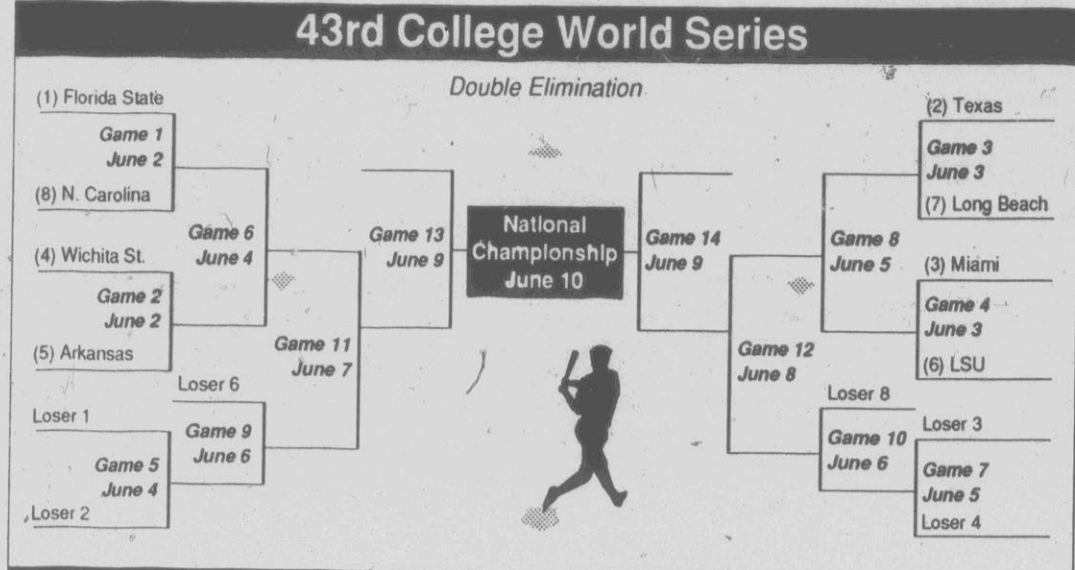

Uncharacteristically, Texas pitchers have struggled this season, aside from ace Kirk Dressendorfer, 16-2.

"We've had a little trouble finding a number two starter," Gustafson said. "I don't think this is the type of team we've built a reputation for, of having good pitching depth."

Fraser has come to Omaha with similar teams and ended up with what he called pitching by committee. He'd use a host of pitchers to fight his way through the tournament.

"We may try that," Gustafson said. "We almost did that in the regionals."

Behind Dressendorfer, who earned All-America status on some squads as a freshman a year ago, Gustafson might use Scott Bryant, who has started three games this season and is 1-0. But Gustafson said Bryant has trouble going the distance.

"Six innings is about as far as he's gone this year," the coach said. "I'm thinking of using him more as a short reliever. He's pretty effective for three innings or so."

If history has any bearing,

Gustafson will find a way for Texas. The 22-year coach has won 1,100 games, lost 240 and tied twice at the school.

This is his 15th appearance at the College World Series, tying the record of Southern California's Rod Dedeaux.

"That puts me in pretty elite company, I guess," said the soft-spoken Gustafson. "I think it goes back to the longstanding tradition of good baseball at Texas."

The Longhorns, in their 25th CWS, have made more appearances than any other team.

"It was kind of my good fortune to step into a good situation and keep it there. It would be hard for me to evaluate that (long-time success). I really don't claim the credit," he said.

Kings Name Webster As New Coach

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Tom Webster, who coached the New York Rangers for 14 games in 1986-87 before an inner-ear ailment forced him to resign, was named head coach of the Los Angeles Kings.

Webster had a 5-7-2 record with the Rangers before the ear problem, which prevented him from flying, forced him to step down.

Webster, 40, replaces Robbie Ftorek, who had at least one run-in with Kings' superstar Wayne Gretzky during the season and was fired after guiding Los Angeles to a 42-31-7 record, fourth best in the NHL last season. The Kings were knocked out of the playoffs by eventual Stanley Cup champion Calgary in the second round.

Power Reduction For NASCAR Engines

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — NASCAR officials are keeping quiet over their 1990 engine rules, but it appears that there will be a power reduction for next year.

There have been discussions that indicate NASCAR will go straight to the 250 cubic-inch motor, or that it might cut engine size in stages. The decision rests in the hands of NASCAR president Bill France Jr.

The 250 notion, though, didn't come out of the clear blue. "There have been discussions with people from the car companies," said Les Richter, a vice president for NASCAR, in an interview with the Winston-Salem Journal.

Ed Miller, who builds engines for Dale Earnhardt, is pleased about the 250 proposal.

"We're hoping that it will be the answer to getting rid of the carburetor plates," Miller says. "It doesn't really surprise me. We knew something would have to change."

Anderson Progressing Toward Return

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit manager Sparky Anderson is making progress in his recovery from exhaustion and could return to the Tigers within a week.

Dr. Clarence Livingood, the team doctor, said Wednesday in a statement, "I've talked to the physician in California and he concurs that Sparky has made remarkable progress in the past week."

Livingood also is Anderson's personal physician.

"Sparky is starting to play golf now. His return now seems to be on a day-to-day basis."

Anderson, who was sent May 19 to his home in Thousand Oaks, Calif., by Livingood, has been kept away from the phone by his wife, Carol, who even has refused calls from longtime broadcaster Vin Scully and San Francisco Giants manager Roger Craig, a former Tigers pitching coach.

Pistons Take Edge ...

as Detroit got the Chicago lead down to 45-41 at halftime.

"He's capable of doing that," said Detroit guard Isiah Thomas, who has known Aguirre since their boyhood days on the Chicago playgrounds. "We've got to find a way of getting more of that out of him."

Thomas finished with 17 points. Aguirre had eight points in a 16-7 run to start the third quarter as Detroit finally took the lead.

Then Johnson suddenly heated up and the Pistons, with both Aguirre and Isiah Thomas sitting on the bench all but one minute of the fourth quarter, steadily pulled away.

"That's why they call him the Microwave," Jordan said. "Vinnie Johnson got hot and carried them down the stretch. Vinnie got hot and no matter what you did — get a hand in his face or what — he still got the shot off and he made it."

Jordan said he couldn't remember a game in which he took so few shots.

"I was moving the ball, trying to get other people involved," Jordan said. "I was creating and passing off. I knew they were going to throw two and three guys at me, so I wanted to get other guys involved."

The most involved was Craig Hodges whose 19 points included five 3-pointers, three in final quarter. Bill Cartwright had 16 points for Chicago, but only six in the second half.

"We had our opportunities," Cartwright said. "We could very easily have won the game. But Detroit did a good job, I'll give them credit. Now we have to go back to Chicago."

With Jordan not able to get a shot, the rest of the Bulls offense suffered. Chicago got off only 59 shots, a record low for playoff games, shaving two off the old mark set May 3, 1984, by New Jersey against Milwaukee.

"I think Detroit is one of the outstanding defensive teams in the NBA," Chicago coach Doug Collins said. "You know what they're going to do. They just run at Jordan and chase him."

"I think it's to Michael's credit that he didn't try to force up a lot of shots against the triple team."

The Detroit bench, as usual, also played a key role, logging 104 minutes to just 52 minutes for the Chicago bench. In addition to Johnson's output, the Pistons also got 12 points from James Edwards and eight from John Salley to outscore Chicago's subs 40-21.

Through the five games, Detroit's bench now has outscored Chicago's 169-86 and outrebounced the Bulls bench 114-39. In Game 5, Detroit sub Dennis Rodman had all 10 of the Pistons individual rebounds in the fourth quarter.

"I'm glad it's our bench," Detroit's Rick Mahorn said. "They kick our behinds in practice, too."

"It's 12 people playing on this team. It doesn't matter who starts. I guess you could say we've got two pretty good teams here."

Despite Rodman's fourth-quarter effort, the Bulls still finished with a 39-34 edge in total rebounds.

"They are a great team, guys," Collins said. "They are not 63-19 in the regular season as an accident. They have got a lot of weapons and pride their game on defense."

Knicks' Job? ...

wrong, but I'd be surprised if he doesn't stay."

However, Sonju said he would not block MacLeod from interviewing for the New York job.

"I would never want to stand in the way of one of my employees being interviewed elsewhere," he said. "I've given permission in the past. But first, I want to talk with John."

Knicks general manager Al Bianchi, an assistant coach under MacLeod for 12 years at Phoenix, called Sund on Wednesday and asked for permission to talk with his old boss.

"I'm going to talk to Al because Al's a very good friend of mine, but that doesn't necessarily mean I'm going to New York to take a coaching job," said MacLeod, who has coached the Mavericks for the past two seasons.

"Yes, I did make the call, but any other speculation or comment should come of Dallas," Bianchi said.

If MacLeod decides not to seek the Knicks' job, there are plenty of other coaches interested in replacing Pitino, who left to become coach at the University of Kentucky.

Bianchi said Chicago Bulls assistant Phil Jackson and Detroit Pistons assistant Brendan Malone are both possible candidates.

Also believed to be in the running for the Knicks job are Atlanta coach Mike Fratello, former NBA coach Dick Motta, Suns assistant Paul Westphal and North Carolina State coach Jim Valvano.

"I think the question is who's available," Bianchi said. "I can't say, 'This is the type of guy I'm looking for.' What I have to do is say, 'Who's available?'"

Brushback Pitch Triggers Brawl In L.A.-Expo Game

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Montreal got the knockdown, but Los Angeles scored the knockout.

Expos pitcher Pascual Perez triggered a bench-clearing brawl by hitting Mike Scioscia with a pitch during a seven-run, seventh-inning rally that gave the Dodgers a 9-4 victory Wednesday.

Perez wouldn't talk about the incident after the game, but Scioscia claimed the knockdown pitch was intentional.

"When you throw 92 miles an hour, and the ball just misses your head by an inch and hits the bill of your cap, you know what's going on," he said.

Asked if Perez was throwing at Scioscia, Montreal manager Buck Rodgers said: "I wouldn't know, but I suppose he may have. It might have been frustration."

Perez had reason to be frustrated. After relieving Joe Hesketh with two on and Montreal leading 3-2, he gave up a two-run double to Willie Randolph, an RBI triple to Kirk Gibson and a sacrifice fly by Eddie Murray before facing Scioscia.

After Scioscia hit the dirt, he got up and charged the mound. Both benches emptied and players wrestled on the ground, but there were no injuries reported. Perez, Scioscia and Rodgers were ejected.

Tension began to build during Montreal's three-run, first inning when Orel Hershiser hit Hubie Brooks with a pitch after throwing one over his head. Brooks yelled at Hershiser and both benches emptied, but no punches were thrown.

"I don't know what he (Hershiser) was trying to do, but he was trying to do something," Rodgers said. "To throw two pitches like that in the same at-bat, from a pitcher who has good control..."

Elsewhere in the National League, it was Houston 4, St. Louis 3; Cincinnati 4, Pittsburgh 3; Atlanta 3, Chicago 2; San Diego 2, Philadelphia 1, and New York 3, San Francisco 1 in 10 innings.

Hershiser, 7-4, gave up three runs and three hits in the first inning, then held Montreal hitless for the next six innings. Dodgers relievers Ricky Horton and John Wetteland allowed only one hit the rest of the way.

Gibson had four hits and Randolph added three hits and three RBIs for the Dodgers, who matched their season high with nine runs.

Alfredo Griffin walked and pinch-hitter Mickey Hatcher hit a double off Hesketh, 4-2, to start the Los Angeles seventh. Chris Gwynn sacrificed and was safe when Hesketh threw to third and Hatcher beat the throw.

Perez came in and gave up a pair of run-scoring hits and a sacrifice fly before the brawl started. Jeff Hamilton capped the rally with a two-run homer off Andy McGaffigan.

Astros 4, Cardinals 3
Craig Biggio snapped a ninth-inning tie with a run-scoring double as Houston beat St. Louis for its sixth consecutive victory and 10th straight on the road.

With one out in the ninth, Ken Caminiti singled off Cris Carpenter, 1-4, who lost his fourth straight. Caminiti stole second, took third on Craig Reynolds' groundout and scored on Biggio's double to left center.

Dan Schatzeder, 3-0, pitched two hitless innings and Dave Smith pitched the ninth for his 10th save to complete a combined six-hitter. Jim Clancy allowed six hits in six innings, striking out five and walking two.

St. Louis has lost four straight and 12 of its last 16.

Reds 4, Pirates 3
Luis Quinones and Joel Youngblood hit their first home runs of the season as Cincinnati ended a four-game losing streak.

Jose Rijo, 5-1, gave up seven hits in 7 1-3 innings as the Reds won for the 10th time in his 11 starts. John Franco pitched the final 1-2-3 innings to earn his 15th save in 16 opportunities.

Quinones, one of four part-time players in the Reds' revamped starting lineup, broke a 1-1 tie in the fifth by hitting Neal Heaton's 0-2 pitch over the left-field wall. The homer was Quinones' second in 306 major-league at-bats.

Braves 3, Cubs 2
Shortstop Shawon Dunston's throwing error allowed Dale Murphy to score the go-ahead run in the sixth inning.

The Braves had two runners thrown out earlier in the inning before Murphy scored from second when Dunston fielded Ron Gant's grounder and threw into the dirt past first base.

Jeff Blauser opened the inning with a double, but was thrown out between third and home on Gerald Perry's single to left. Perry then was trapped between second and third on Murphy's grounder to short.

John Smoltz, 7-3, allowed five hits in eight-plus innings. Paul Assenmacher retired one batter in the ninth and Joe Boever got Ryne Sandberg to hit into a game-ending double play for his eighth save.

Padres 2, Phillies 1
Marvell Wynne drove in the winning run with an eighth-inning double as San Diego handed the Phillies' their eighth straight loss.

Reliever Jeff Parrett, 1-2, walked Roberto Alomar to open the San Diego eighth. Two outs later, Wynne lined a double just inside the right-field line to score Alomar.

Greg Harris, 1-2, pitched the eighth for the victory and Mark Davis worked out of a ninth-inning jam to earn his 17th save in as many chances.

San Diego starter Dennis Rasmussen gave up just two hits in seven innings, a first-inning homer by Dickie Thon and a single by Von Hayes in the fourth.

Mets 3, Giants 1
The Mets scored two unearned runs in the 10th inning on a pair of infield errors to halt their four-game losing streak and stop San Francisco's five-game winning streak.

Barry Lyons led off the 10th with a single to center. Kevin Elster then hit an apparent double play ball to second baseman Ed Jurak, but Jurak's throw sailed wide of second and both runners were safe.

After pinch-hitter Mark Carreon popped out, Elster went to second and pinch-runner Keith Miller moved to third on Craig Lefferts' wild pitch. With the Giants' infield playing in, Mookie Wilson hit a bouncer that went through charging shortstop Chris Speier, and both runners scored.

Randy Myers, 5-1, got the victory despite giving up the tying run in the ninth and Rick Aguilera pitched the 10th for his third save. Mets starter Bob Ojeda pitched two-hit, shutout ball for eight innings.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Last year, Baltimore's Mickey Tettleton and Detroit's Lou Whitaker combined for 23 homers. In 1989, they're tied for the American League lead with 13 apiece.

Tettleton's three-run homer sparked the Orioles to an 8-5 victory over the Texas Rangers on Wednesday night, and Whitaker's two-run shot lifted the Tigers past the Chicago White Sox 4-3.

Whitaker, who hit 12 homers in 1988, shrugged off his surge this season.

"I could always hit home runs," the second baseman said. "I'm not a leadoff man now, so I have to do more. I'm not worried about leading the league. That's not important, we're just trying to win ball games."

Tettleton, who hit 11 homers last season, offered no explanations. "Like I've said before, I can't explain it," said Tettleton, who has eight home runs in his last 16 games.

Whitaker's homer was his second in two games and came in the eighth inning off relief ace Bobby Thigpen, 0-2. Acting manager Dick Tracewski was glad to see Whitaker at the plate with his team down 3-2.

"He's always hit but he's hitting with more power now," Tracewski said. "He's always the guy you would want up to bat to get the big hit. He gets it done."

Baltimore manager Frank Robinson said Tettleton has been helped by playing every day. Tettleton agreed.

"I hit a little stretch last year where I was swinging the bat real well, not home-run-wise, but I was getting my hits and I felt good," Tettleton said.

Orioles 8, Rangers 5
Tettleton's homer came off Cecilio Guante, who had relieved starter Bobby Witt, 4-5, earlier in the inning. The Orioles swept the three-game series.

Tigers 4, White Sox 3
Detroit also swept its three-game series as the White Sox lost for the 11th time in 12 games.

With Chicago leading 3-2, Shawn Hillegas walked Gary Pettis to lead off the eighth and was replaced by Thigpen. Chet Lemon struck out, but Whitaker hit an 0-1 pitch to the upper deck in right field. Chicago has lost nine straight at home.

Brewers 4, Angels 1
Greg Brock hit a three-run homer in his first game of the season and Don August beat California for the fifth straight time, leading Milwaukee to a rain-drenched victory.

Brock, activated from the disabled list before the game after missing the first two months of the season following shoulder surgery, homered in the third of Mike Witt, 3-5, who allowed eight hits in his second complete game.

Yankees 9, Mariners 5
Deion Sanders, the All-American football player, made his major-league debut a memorable one, singling to start a five-run rally in the seventh inning.

Sanders, a defensive back from Florida State who was Atlanta's first-round choice in the recent NFL draft, was promoted from Class AA Albany earlier in the day. He went 1-for-4 with an RBI grounder and also threw out a runner from center field.

Don Mattingly went 4-for-5 with a two-run homer as New York got 13 hits. Seattle lost for the eighth time in 10 games.

Red Sox 4, Athletics 3
Rick Cerone's pinch RBI single capped a two-run 10th inning for Boston.

The Athletics had tied the game on shortstop Jody Reed's throwing error in the ninth and taken a 3-2 lead in the 10th on Dave Parker's eighth home run.

Eric Plunk, the fifth Oakland pitcher, began the 10th by striking out Mike Greenwell, but Dwight Evans singled to left and went to third on Ellis Burks' double to left-center. Evans scored as Sam Horn grounded out to first, Burks taking third.

Curt Young replaced Plunk, 1-1, and walked Nick Esasky intentionally. Cerone, batting for Rich Gedman, then lined a 1-1 pitch for the game-winning hit.

Indians 7, Blue Jays 4

Pete O'Brien hit three singles and drove in three runs and Bud Black won in his first relief appearance of the year as Cleveland spoiled Cito Gaston's first game as Toronto's permanent manager.

Gaston, the fourth black manager in major league history, replaced Jimmy Williams on an interim basis May 15 and was given the job for the rest of the season before Wednesday night's game. He is 8-7 since taking over.

Twins 7, Royals 1
Dan Gladden's grand slam led Minnesota over Kansas City in a game shortened by rain.

The Lions moved back out with one in the bottom of the second, then added three more in the third for a 5-1 lead. After the Kiwanis got one in the fourth, the Lions added four more for a 9-2 lead after four. The Kiwanis got one more in the fifth.

Both added one in the third, but after First Federal got one more in the fourth, MacKenzie added five more in the bottom of the inning. The two repeated that in the fifth, running the lead out to the final margin.

Mark Moye got the win, going the Pitino-Kentucky ...

But that is considered only a formality.

Kentucky has been hit by a three-year NCAA probation — including a two-year ban on postseason tournament play and no live television next season — for recruiting violations under Coach Eddie Sutton, who resigned in March.

Now, the task of rebuilding the winningest college basketball program ever has fallen to Pitino.

Why Pitino would give up a young, aggressive pro team that won the Atlantic Division title and tied for the fifth-best record in the NBA to coach a Kentucky squad that lacks size, strength, numbers and the respect of the NCAA seems to be the only remaining question.

"You have to know who you are," the 36-year-old Pitino said after reaching agreement with the Knicks and being released from his contract. "I'm a college basketball coach and I think that's where my heart is."

He coached previously at Providence and Boston University.

"The enormity of the challenge at Kentucky may have had a lot to do with his decision, too.

"Why don't you go ahead and write they'll be 6-18 next year?" asked Howard Garfinkel, who directs the Five Star Basketball Camp and is a close friend of Pitino.

"Write that there's no way they'll be .500 for three years," Garfinkel said. "Rick will love it. He'll eat it up. Doing the impossible is what drives him."

"It's an attitude," said Pete Gillen, a fellow assistant coach with Pitino at Hawaii in 1975-76 who now coaches Xavier University in Cincinnati. "Rick knows how to win, and he'll accept nothing less than that."

Neither will Kentucky fans, who live and die with each game. Last year's 13-19 record — the Wildcats' first losing season since 1927 — is still fresh in their minds, and they'll be looking for an immediate turnaround.

For the first time ever, a third team was chosen. It included center Robert Parish of Boston, forwards Dominique Wilkins of Atlanta and Terry Cummings, just swapped

The voting panel was made up of three electors from each league city plus ten members of the national media. The voters picked three teams and points were awarded on a 5-3-1 basis.

Yarborough Experiences Different Danger

By Rick Scoppe
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Cale Yarborough, the only man to win three straight NASCAR Winston Cup championships, experienced his share of thrills and danger during his career.

But he faced a different kind of excitement and danger Tuesday night.

Shortly before midnight, a neighbor telephoned Yarborough to tell him he heard noises near one of his former driver's farm, which straddles the Florence-Sumter county line about 60 miles east of Columbia.

So, Yarborough drove out to the barn in his pickup. The three men weren't there — and neither was part of his barn. But in one corner of the 4,000-acre field of newly planted corn, Yarborough saw a trailer hitched to a Toyota car and his tin, which had been hacked off the top of his barn with an ax.

Yarborough confronted the three men, who were out of their car working on the trailer hitch, which was bound with wire and had come loose.

"One of them said, 'Cale,' but I didn't know him," Yarborough said.

"I had my rifle on them and told them to stay right there."

Yarborough then walked back to his truck to call the sheriff's department for help.

"But before I could get the sheriff's department on the phone, they took off in the car across the field," he said. "They were running wide open and run head-on into a big old canal ditch."

"I tell you, it was right funny. It was serious when it was happening," Yarborough said with a chuckle, "but when they took off across that field, I knew I had 'em blocked in because the whole field is surrounded by the canal. They didn't know that."

Yarborough followed the men in his pickup, but when he got to the car the three men ran off into the nearby woods.

"I just don't see how they got out of it really. They just totaled that Toyota. When they came out of the dust, they were gettin' it."

No arrests had been made Wednesday, authorities said.

Yarborough, the fourth-winningest driver in NASCAR history with 83 triumphs, said early reports that he had used his driving skills to chase the three men down were not quite accurate.

"Actually, I didn't chase them," he said in a telephone interview from his home in Sardis. "They pulled up in the edge of the field. I came back to them and hemmed them in, and they couldn't get out that way."

"So they went the other way. They went the wrong way."

Yarborough said he never thought about shooting any of the three with his rifle.

"I wasn't going to hurt anybody over a load of tin. I let them go. But I don't believe I'll have any trouble with these three again," Yarborough said with a laugh.

He can laugh now. But he knows he faced a potentially dangerous situation.

"You don't know when somebody's got a gun. You don't ever know when it's three against one what will happen," Yarborough said. "But that canal ditch was my equalizer."

Yarborough's wife, Betty Jo, said she didn't like the idea of her husband going out to the barn in the middle of the night, although she now jokes about the incident, too.

"I told my friend he spent the night playing cowboys and Indians," she said. "I said, 'Cale, you better not go down there. Somebody's going to kill you.' It's right funny in a way, but it could not have been funny."

Wildcats Stripped Of 1988 SEC Hoop Crown

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DESTIN, Fla. — The Kentucky basketball program, placed on three years NCAA probation two weeks ago, was dealt another blow Wednesday when the presidents of the Southeastern Conference stripped the Wildcats of the 1988 SEC championship.

The presidents voted 8-0 to vacate both the 1987-88 regular-season and 1988 SEC Tournament titles won by Kentucky because "institutional staff members did or should have known about the ineligibility" of former star Eric Manuel.

Kentucky president Dr. David Rüselle abstained from voting, and Florida, which had its 1984 football title taken away because it ran afoul of NCAA rules, was not represented during the portion of the annual SEC spring meeting devoted to discussing the Kentucky case.

The NCAA placed the league's most successful basketball program on probation May 19, barring the Wildcats from postseason play for two years and live television for one season. Scholarship restrictions also were imposed and Manuel was declared ineligible at any NCAA school.

Since the action by the SEC presidents vacated the titles in question, the standings for 1987-88 are unaffected. No school will be recognized as champion.

The presidents initially determined Kentucky should forfeit all conference games in which Manuel participated, but rescinded the penalty because of the university's cooperation in the NCAA investigation and corrective measures already taken by the school.

"Naturally, I am disappointed with the events that took place to cause these actions," Roselle said. "At the same time, I am pleased that our presidents recognize the efforts undertaken by the University of Kentucky to properly investigate itself and take appropriate actions."

"We at UK are dedicated to running our basketball program in full compliance with SEC and NCAA rules and regulations, and we are excited about what the future holds for us."

Because of the NCAA sanctions regarding post-season participation and live television, Kentucky will not be allowed to play in the SEC tournament in 1990 or 1991, nor appear on TV during the 1989-90 season.

The Wildcats also will not share conference revenue derived from the SEC and NCAA tournaments for the next two years or receive funds from the league's television package in 1989-90.

Manuel, who sat out last season because of questions about his college-entrance exam, was a freshman when he helped Kentucky to its 37th SEC title in 1987-88.

In addition to ruling him ineligible at any NCAA school, the governing body said Kentucky must forfeit all money it received from the 1988 NCAA tournament because of Manuel's participation.

Precedent for the action taken by the SEC presidents was set in 1985 when the group stripped Florida of the only conference football championship it has ever won.

The Gators, put on NCAA probation in 1985 and 1986 for various recruiting irregularities, were not represented during the discussion of the Kentucky case because interim president Dr. Robert Bryan flew to Tallahassee to meet another commitment early Wednesday and did not return until after the vote.

"The difference I see in the two schools is we didn't play any ineligible players and Kentucky did," Bryan said. "I wasn't a part of the discussions, but I think what the presidents did is fine."

Debate of the Kentucky issue consumed most of the day, leaving little time for discussion of another hot topic — possible expansion of the 10-school conference.

Sports Illustrated Receives Subpoena

By Rick Scoppe
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Sports Illustrated has received the subpoena it knew was coming. Now, the magazine is preparing to fight back.

The subpoena seeks notes and other material gathered by Sports Illustrated for its story on alleged steroid use by University of South Carolina football players.

Sports Illustrated was served with the subpoena shortly before noon on Wednesday — 24 hours before a hearing today in Columbia on the subpoena before U.S. District Court Judge G. Ross Anderson, said Judy Bass, the magazine's attorney.

A subpoena served on the university last week seeking information on its internal probe of alleged steroid use in the athletic department also will be discussed at today's hearing. The university filed a motion Friday to quash the subpoena, according to court records.

Bass said the magazine hoped to file a motion to quash the subpoena before the hearing.

"I think the judge still wants us to see us there," she said in a telephone interview from her New York office. "We do whatever the judge wants. We'll go down there."

Attorney John Hardaway of Columbia requested that the subpoenas be issued on behalf of his client, John L. Carter of Bethesda, Md.

AIDS Virus May Elude Blood Tests

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — Some people infected with the AIDS virus may elude screening tests intended to protect blood banks because they produce no telltale antibodies against the lethal virus for years, researchers reported today.

Widely used screening tests cannot see the AIDS virus directly. Instead, they search for antibodies that people produce as part of their natural reaction to infection.

The latest work, however, found that some people produce no antibodies, even though they have been infected for years with HIV, the AIDS virus. Therefore, the AIDS tests are useless against their blood.

In an editorial published with the study in the New England Journal of Medicine, Dr. William A. Haseltine of Boston's Dana-Farber Cancer Institute cautioned that the research "raises the sobering possibility that HIV-1 infections may be transmitted by blood and organ donors who are silently infected."

Dr. David T. Imagawa, who directed the study at the University of California, Los Angeles, agreed that people with such latent infections might pass on the virus. He added that homosexuals "should continue to refrain from donating blood."

However, at the American Association of Blood Banks, Dr. Amoz Chernoff downplayed the importance of the discovery to the nation's blood banks.

Chernoff noted that the study was conducted in homosexual men who had high-risk sexual practices. If such people gave blood, they probably would also be infected with the hepatitis virus, so their blood would be screened out by other tests.

"The relevance of these data to the blood banks is probably negligible," he said, "but this will be followed to make sure it doesn't have an impact."

Antibody screening of large population groups also is used to gauge how many people are infected with HIV. The U.S. Centers for Disease Control estimates that between 1 million and 1.5 million Americans carry the virus.

The new research "means that the infection could be considerably more widespread than we anticipated," Haseltine said in an interview.

The work shows that HIV can permanently insert itself into the genes of blood cells but stay hidden so the body never attacks it with antibodies. People may make no AIDS antibodies for three years — and perhaps much longer — after they become infected.

Surgery Helps Infertile Men

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — A new surgical technique that opens the human egg to create a microscopic passageway for sperm has led to seven pregnancies and could raise the odds for infertile men, researchers say.

The method is so new that fertility experts aren't certain of its benefits. But they agree it has wide-ranging implications for thousands.

"This is still a procedure that's in early development. But I'm very enthusiastic about it," said Dr. Zey Rosenwacks, director of Cornell University's Center of Reproductive Medicine and Infertility. "I think it's a breakthrough."

The procedure, called partial zona dissection, or PZD, involves extracting eggs from a woman and making a tiny incision to help the sperm enter.

It has been attempted at 12 infertility clinics worldwide, but the only documented success has occurred at Reproductive Biology Associates of Atlanta, a private company working with the Emory University Medical School Center for Infertility.

PZD, which costs about $7,000 for each treatment, calls for placing the eggs in a sucrose solution to shrink them so the delicate interior is protected.

FDA Warns Against Extended Wear Of Soft Lens

WASHINGTON — The Food and Drug Administration is asking contact lens manufacturers to warn people who wear soft contact lenses for more than a week without cleaning them run that they risk eye disease.

Certified letters mailed Wednesday by the FDA asked the manufacturers to prepare labels instructing patients not to wear the soft extended-wear or disposable lenses for more than seven days because of an increased risk of developing ulcerative keratitis, a disease that can cause blindness.

The FDA also sent letters to 60,000 eye doctors, alerting them to the labeling change.

Manufacturers have 45 days to comply with the FDA request. Dr. Richard E. Lippman of the FDA said that the new labeling will apply only to the soft lenses, but he said rigid extended-wear lenses already are labeled to limit continuous wear to seven days.

"This means that no lens sold in the U.S. should be worn continuously longer than seven days," he said. "People should be aware that proper lens care is extremely important and great care should be taken in the weekly cleaning."

The target of the warnings are soft contact lenses that are marketed with instructions that permit continuous wear for up to 30 days, and soft lenses that are marketed as extended-wear disposables.

A study sponsored by the Contact Lens Institute, an organization of the six largest manufacturers of extended-wear lenses, showed that the risk of ulcerative keratitis is about five times greater for extended wear contact users than for those who use daily wear lenses.

FDA commissioner Frank E. Young said the data from the study "did not identify a wearing time that will eliminate the risk altogether, but seven days represents a relatively short, easy-to-remember interval which will encourage users to remove their lenses and clean them."

Some eye experts believe even seven days between cleanings is too long, and that any lens worn more than one day without proper hygiene increases the risk of eye disease.

"We do not recommend extended-wear lenses, except in some circumstances" such as elderly people who cannot perform the daily lens-cleaning routine, said Dr. Michael A. Lemp, head of the center for eyesight at Georgetown University Hospital. "In my view if the risk-benefit is based only on convenience, it is not acceptable."

Ulcerative keratitis is a general term for the formation of an ulcer or open sore on the cornea, the clear covering of the eye which is essential to vision. The ulcer is thought to be caused by bacteria or parasites that attach themselves to contact lenses.

They can come on quite suddenly, said Lemp. The symptoms included tearing, pain which can be intense, sensitivity to light, and decreased vision.

If a contact lens wearer experiences such symptoms, he said, they should "immediately remove the lens and immediately seek medical treatment."

The disease is usually treated with topical antibiotics.

Papilloma Viruses Double Cervical Cancer Risks

BOSTON (AP) — A study of more than 2,200 Latin American women concludes that infection with two varieties of the common papilloma virus doubles the usual risk of cervical cancer.

The study is the first major population study to estimate the increased risk of cancer in women infected with this common virus. Doctors have known for several years that papilloma viruses are associated with cancer of the cervix.

At least 60 different varieties of the papilloma virus have been identified. Some cause common warts, while others cause genital warts. The kinds associated with cervical cancer in this study — types 16 and 18 — are not thought to cause warts but can be spread through sexual intercourse and perhaps other means.

The study was conducted in Panama, Costa Rica, Columbia and Mexico. Cervical cancer is far more common in these countries than in the United States, where the disease strikes about 13,000 women annually.

It found that genes from the two types of papilloma virus had become incorporated into the tissue of 62 percent of the women with cervical cancer, compared with 32 percent of a healthy comparison group.

The researchers calculated that the presence of these virus genes was associated with double the usual risk of cancer.

Beijing Restricts Press Coverage Of City Protests

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — City leaders today expanded martial law restrictions on reporting by foreign correspondents, saying they may not cover student protesters and that news coverage in Beijing must receive prior approval.

In a stern warning, city spokesman Ding Weijun also said foreign reporters may not invite Chinese citizens to their offices, residences or hotels "for interviews on activities prohibited" under martial law.

Ding's statement, read at a weekly Foreign Ministry briefing, elaborated on martial law regulations banning foreign news coverage of the student-led pro-democracy movement.

The foreign correspondents' club denounced the expanded rules as "censorship and harassment."

Premier Li Peng declared martial law in Beijing on May 20 in an attempt to crush the pro-democracy movement, which began in mid-April with student marches and class boycotts and has galvanized the nation.

Defying martial law, Beijing have prevented troops from entering the city and nearly 10,000 students continue their occupation of Tiananmen Square, the symbolic center of power.

Martial law restrictions barring foreign reporters from interviewing demonstrators have been widely ignored.

Ding said, "Press coverage in Beijing by foreign journalists or journalists from Hong Kong, Macao and Taiwan is subjected to prior application" for approval by the city foreign affairs office.

The broad statement indicated that all news coverage, not only that relating to the demonstrations, must be approved first.

Coverage of martial law troops, including taking photos and videotapes, is banned, and reporting in a "disguised form" such as meeting Chinese participating in the democratic movement in hotels, offices or residences is outlawed.

Journalists were also told they should not "acquire by unjust means" materials "of an instigative or agitative nature."

Ding said the Beijing government reserves the right to interpret the decrees as it sees fit and that the decrees take precedence over other existing regulations.

The Foreign Correspondents Club of Beijing in a statement said it "strongly protests" the martial law restrictions on journalists, calling them "a deplorable case of press censorship and harassment."

The statement said the ban on coverage "calls into question China's policy of openness to the outside world" and urged Beijing authorities to rescind the regulations.

Beijing-based foreign journalists and hundreds of journalists from outside China covering the popular uprising so far have faced only isolated obstacles.

Foreign TV crews have had to deal with periods of not being allowed to transmit by satellite, and some Chinese-language frequencies of the U.S.-government-financed Voice of America have been jammed.

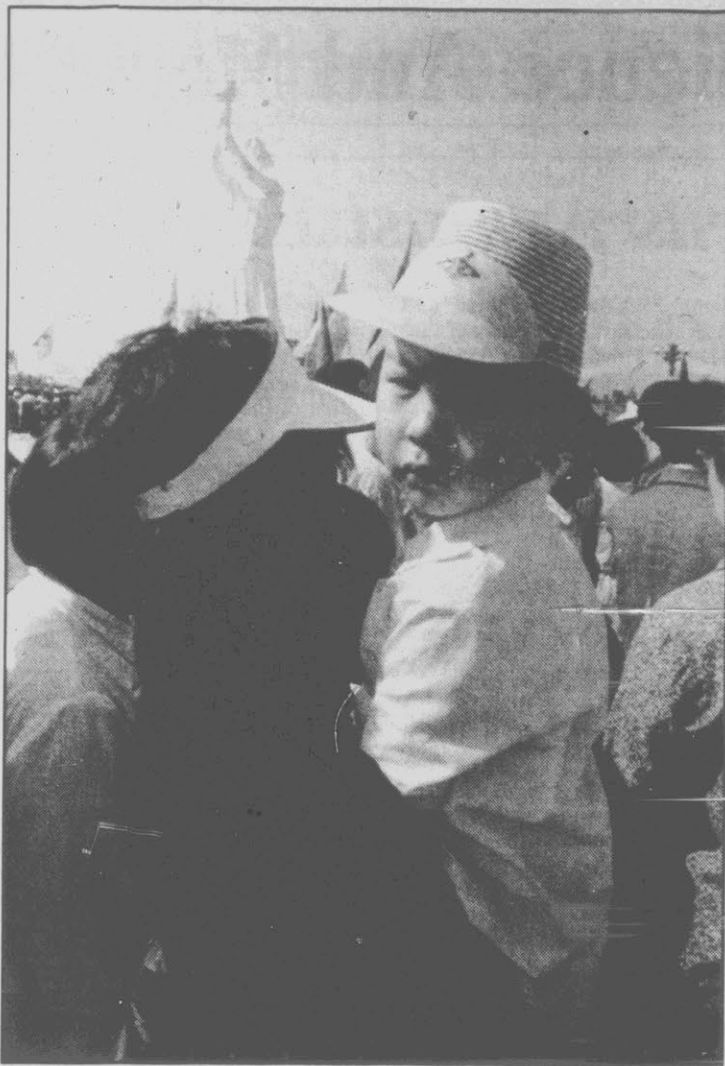

There has been no official attempt to keep journalists off Tiananmen Square or away from student activists.

However, in the past several days at least two U.S. television network representatives and a Japanese network were warned by police that their crews were violating martial law regulations and told they were to cease all unauthorized reporting.

A correspondent for the Japanese daily Yomiuri Shimbun was also summoned for a warning and today, the British Broadcasting Corp. was also called in by police.

In no case have specific threats been made. Ding also said nothing specific about penalties, only that violations will be dealt with "in light of the seriousness of the individual case."

At dawn today, about 300 People's Liberation Army troops marched down Beijing's main avenue near Tiananmen Square, chanting a military song.

The Associated Press

It was the second straight day that the military had appeared in force on city streets — on Wednesday a large convoy of military motorcycles with sidecars roared through the capital.

"I think they were just sent to try and scare us," said Wang Di, a sophomore from the Beijing Journalism Institute. "But I don't think anyone was scared. They didn't come that close and not many students knew they were there."

Students have refused to leave the square until the government answers their demands for reforms including a free press and an end to official corruption.

Government hardliners, including Premier Li and senior leader Deng Xiaoping, have demanded the democracy movement be suppressed.

They reportedly ousted from power Communist Party chief Zhao Ziyang, considered a student sympathizer.

On Wednesday night, students put up tents around their 33-foot "Goddess of Democracy" to prevent any government attempt to remove it.

The government says the statue, a replica of the Statue of Liberty, insults the Chinese people and demanded it be removed by today. The plastic foam statue of a robed woman holding aloft a torch was unveiled by students Tuesday.

The statue faces the gate to the Forbidden City and revolutionary leader Mao Tse-tung's portrait.

"Thursday came and it's still here," said a student from Wuhan Maritime Industrial Institute. "Our revolution will endure."

Arafat Creating 3,500-Man Force

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — Palestine Liberation Organization chairman Yasser Arafat has ordered the establishment of a 3,500-member Palestinian army in south Lebanon, Jane's Defense Weekly reported today.

The force is to become "the core of a regular army of an independent Palestine of the future," the London-based military affairs magazine said.

It is intended to replace "the existing chaos of assorted unruly militias, most of them affiliated with Arab countries and not always friendly to Arafat," Jane's said.

The magazine said Arafat sent his handpicked military commanders to south Lebanon in February to serve notice that part-time militia salaries were to be reduced, and eventually stopped.

"Fighters and militiamen of all factions could volunteer for the Palestine army, with the understanding that applications would be subject to Arafat's personal approval," Jane's said.

It said the affected militiamen protested strongly and at times violently because the economic crisis in Lebanon provides no other outside employment. It said the militia system provides a livelihood for about 10,000 men in south Lebanon refugee camps alone.

Jane's said that because of the protests, Arafat told his staff in the Fatah militia to postpone the salary cuts for the time being.

"Top Fatah officers, graduates of Indian, Pakistani and East bloc military academies and those who have served with the Jordanian army, are now in Lebanon running training courses in the vicinity of Miyeh Miyeh village, east of the South Lebanese port of Sidon," it reported.

It said that on May 19, about 200 Palestinians completed basic training at the Rashediyeh refugee camp, south of Tyre.

Jane's said that as Arafat's "well-equipped and well-financed army" takes shape, officers serving with other Palestinian factions have been enlisting, including Naif Hawatme's Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine and George Habash's Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP).

Although leaders of both these factions have been recently critical of Arafat's moves, a PFLP official said they have no objection to their officers joining the Palestinian Army and their departure will not affect their guerrilla operations," Jane's said.

It said Arafat currently controls about 2,000 full-time trained fighters and about 7,500 part-time militiamen in south Lebanon.

"About 1,000 more fighters and 2,500 militiamen are controlled by other factions, including virulently anti-Arafat PFLP-General Command of Ahmed Jibril and Abu Nidal's Fatah Revolutionary Council," it said.

Jane's said all the factions have been acquiring arms, but Arafat's Fatah is far ahead.

"Weapons hidden in caches during Israel's 1982-85 Lebanon invasion and occupation have been issued to the militiamen and refugee camp guards or made available to potential Lebanese allies," it said.

Death Toll Hits 15 In Argentine Riots

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — The death toll from three days of food riots rose to 15 today as authorities sought to curb further unrest by Argentina's working class over raging inflation and the lack of purchasing power.

Police said the owners of a supermarket in suburban Moreno shot and killed three looters on Wednesday, and 9-year-old Roberto Segovia succumbed in a hospital to injuries suffered in looting the night before.

Eleven people died in Rosario and Buenos Aires on Monday and Tuesday.

Scattered looting was reported Wednesday in the industrial suburbs of the capital and in the provincial capitals of Corrientes and Mendoza. In some Buenos Aires neighborhoods, vandals briefly blocked streets with burning tires and threw stones at police.

By late Wednesday, however, Interior Minister Juan Carlos Pugliese declared, "Calm reigns throughout the country."

In Rosario, Argentina's second most populous city and its meat-packing center, 3,000 paramilitary police and members of the National Guard and Coast Guard patrolled city streets to enforce the peace and protect stores.

The government effort to forestall further violence involved arresting looters and delivering free food to families hardest hit by Argentina's protracted economic crisis.

The unrest began last week in the interior cities of Mendoza and Cordoba after three months of devaluations left the Argentine currency, the austral, worth one-tenth of its previous value against the dollar.

On Monday, President Raul Alfonsin declared a state of siege in a bid to quell the unrest. Inflation meanwhile has raged on, and economists say it is expected to hit 70 percent for the month of May alone.

According to the conservative Center for a New Majority, real wages are now worth 35 percent of what they were in December 1983, when Alfonsin took office to end a seven-year military dictatorship.

Alfonsin met Wednesday with President-elect Carlos Menem, who won the May 14 election, and observers wondered whether an unpopular lame-duck Alfonsin government can implement another austerity program in an attempt to curtail inflation and the budget deficit.

Menem indicated to reporters that he didn't want to take office for the scheduled Dec. 10 inauguration: "I don't want to interfere with the desire of President Alfonsin to serve out his mandate."

Salvadoran Rebels Paralyze Travel

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — Marxist rebels paralyzed public transportation and promised to make the country ungovernable as El Salvador prepared today to inaugurate a rightist businessman as president.

Alfredo Cristiani of the right-wing Republican National Alliance, or Arena, takes over from outgoing President Jose Napoleon Duarte in the Central American nation's first transfer of power from one elected president to another.

The rebel Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front called an indefinite transportation ban on Wednesday and bus dispatchers declared it a complete success. Most of the country's 5.5 million people rely on buses to get around.

Also Wednesday, troops in the capital seized a cache of rebel weapons. Police said they netted 350 Soviet ri-files, 300 sticks of dynamite and 1.5 million bullets.

Cristiani, 41, a U.S.-educated coffee grower, was elected March 19. Voter turnout was the lowest in a decade, which was partly attributed to a rebel transport boycott that many say cost the centrist candidate the election.

The transport ban has been a favorite tactic of rebels, who threaten to shoot at or set fire to cars or buses found on the roads. Five traffic bans were enforced last year.

The leftist guerrillas, who have waged a nine-year war against the U.S.-backed government, have been heralding the new chief with nightly 21-bomb salutes, blowing up power lines and utility poles at a pace unmatched in recent years. They vow to make the country, most of which spends part of every day without electricity, "ungovernable."

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — Elvis Presley's daughter gave birth to the late rock 'n' roll king's first grandchild.

With husband Danny Keough at her side, 21-year-old Lisa Marie Presley delivered a 7-pound, 2-ounce girl in a natural childbirth Monday at St. John's Hospital, publicist Paul Bloch said Wednesday. The child hasn't been named, he said.

"Both mother and child are in excellent health," Bloch said, adding that actress Priscilla Beaulieu Presley, now a grandmother, was thrilled. "Everyone is very happy."

Miss Presley, sole heir of the rock superstar who died in 1977 married the 23-year-old Keough last Oct. 3. The couple lives in the Los Angeles area.

Prime-Time Soaps Taking New Image

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Is the prime-time soap opera, one of television's most popular formats, an endangered species — or is it just changing form?

ABC canceled "Dynasty" after nine years. CBS renewed "Dallas," "Knots Landing" and "Falcon Crest," but the luster is gone. "Dallas" and "Knots Landing" barely made it into the top 30 highest-rated shows the past season.

No new prime-time soap is on the horizon. The last effort was NBC's "A Year in the Life" two seasons ago.

But the form has evolved into something else.

The foremost exponent of the new format is NBC's "L.A. Law." It's not as outrageous as "Dallas." It's not as melodramatic as "Knots Landing." But the essential elements are there: a strong dramatic narrative, ongoing stories and evolving characters.

Other shows in this new format are ABC's "thirtysomething" and "China Beach," and CBS' "Wiseguy" and "Tour of Duty."

"I don't know the difference anymore between the so-called soap operas and 'L.A. Law' and 'Wiseguy,' except the story arcs are shorter," said David Jacobs, the creator of "Dallas" and "Knots Landing." "I think that the fading of the other shows, other than 'Knots Landing,' is just that they're old and old shows tend to fade."

Esther Shapiro, who created "Dynasty," declined to comment, but has said in the past she thinks the prime-time soap opera has undergone a metamorphosis into such shows as "L.A. Law" and "thirtysomething."

Jacobs said "thirtysomething" reminds him of the early years of "Knots Landing" when it "was a little softer and more self-conscious." He said "Knots Landing" evolved into a melodrama because it needed more excitement to hold the audience.

CBS' "Dallas" was the highest-rated show for three seasons and second for two others. The "Who Shot J.R." episode in 1980 broke all viewing records up to that time.

In the 1984-85 season, when the soaps reached their peak, ABC's "Dynasty" ranked first and "Dallas" was second. CBS' "Knots Landing" and "Falcon Crest" were 9th and 10th for the year.

The granddaddy of the prime-time soap opera was ABC's "Peyton Place," which ran twice, and sometimes three times, a week between 1964 and '69. ABC followed it with "Harold Robbins' 'The Survivors,'" an ill-conceived show that lasted only briefly in 1969. Other failed efforts: CBS' "Sons and Daughters" in 1974, CBS' "Beacon Hill" in 1975, CBS' "Executive Suite" in 1976, and NBC's "W.E.B." in 1978.

The current cycle of shows began with ABC's "Rich Man, Poor Man — Book II," which ran for one season after the "Rich Man, Poor Man" miniseries.

"I certainly had that in my head when I did 'Dallas,'" said Jacobs. "The continuing saga seemed a reasonable thing to develop for television."

After "Dallas" in 1979, Jacobs launched "Knots Landing" the following year. CBS' "Falcon Crest" began in 1982.

Numerous other soaps were attempted: CBS' "Secrets of Midland Heights," NBC's "Flamingo Road," CBS' "Emerald Point, N.A.S.," NBC's "For Love and Honor," ABC's "Call To Glory," NBC's "Berringer's," NBC's "Yellow Rose," NBC's "Gangster Chronicles," CBS' "Hometown," NBC's "A Year in the Life" and even NBC's "Crime Story."

Prior to the soaps and serials, each episode of a series started from scratch. The characters never learned anything from the previous week's experience.

"I think shows like 'L.A. Law' and 'Knots Landing' are the future of network television," said Jacobs. "We can't compete with what's on cable. We can't do nudity. If you're doing an action-adventure you can't compete with 'Rambo.' The one thing network television can offer is a continuing drama and an involvement with characters who change."

TRUMP COUP TOMMY TRUMPS THROUGH

Since he wanted to keep West off lead to prevent a club from being cashed, Tommy finessed the eight of diamonds. East won and exited with a diamond to the ten. Declarer ruffed two hearts, using the ace of diamonds as a second dummy ruff. The king of diamonds was ruffed on the table, and the last heart was ruffed with the ace of trumps. Tommy simply exited with a club. East was forced to ruff and then had to concede the fulfilling trick to the table's queen of spades.

 In an effort to improve his results, Trump Coup Tommy finally consented to adopt more modern bidding methods, including the Negative Double. Our readers will recall that TCT is something of a duffer at the game except on those occasions when trumps break badly, when he is transformed into a veritable titan.

Over East's two-club overcall North was able to bring Tommy's new weapon into the fray. The double was for takeout, and resulted in a fair four spade contract being reached in quick time.

Declarer captured East's queen of clubs with the ace and immediately led a low heart. West fell from grace when he elected to duck; had he risen with the ace and forced dummy to ruff a club, the contract would surely have been defeated. When the queen of hearts held the trick, Tommy immediately finessed the jack of spades, and was delighted to see West drop the ten—it looked as if he was getting a 4-1 trump break

CANADA AT ITS BEST

Now and then, a fine spirit can evoke the very essence of the land that produced it. So it is with Canadian Mist, America's number one Canadian. Pleasingly mellow. Yet clean, honest, and true. Like Canada itself. When it's at its best.
