Truck Overturns

This tractor-trailer truck overturned this morning on U.S. 264 east of Greenville. Trooper B.J. Jones said the truck was driven by Lonnie Corey of Route 1, Washington, N.C. and was headed west. Jones said Corey did not see a car, lower photo, abandoned along the road and could not move to the left lane due to heavy traffic. The truck ran over the car and then overturned. Corey sustained minor injuries in the accident.

Jones Cites Tax Increase For 'No' Votes On Roads

By J. Ward Best
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

State Rep. Walter Jones Jr. says he opposed Thursday's passage by the House of a comprehensive roads plan because of his concern over the required tax increase linked to the package.

The Farmville representative, along with 12 other Democrats and 13 Republicans, voted against the $8.6 billion highway improvement proposal in the House's final vote on the package Thursday afternoon.

Following a large House majority, most Greenville-area representatives joined in passing the highway bill. They had expressed strong support for the proposal before Thursday's final vote.

In a prepared statement released this morning Jones said, "I do feel that this package places such a heavy tax burden on our working people that I could not in good conscience vote for its approval."

Jones said he recognized the importance of better roads in the region that his colleagues cited in support of the bill, but said in his statement taxpayers' money needed to be spent "in an efficient and responsible manner."

Jones said the public should be allowed to approve the 5 and one-fourth cent gasoline tax increase and increased taxes on automobiles and registration before the bill becomes law. He also said in his statement the estimated $8.6 billion does not include inflation estimates, and contractors could not build the highways within the proposed 13 years of the plan.

"Because of the staggering magnitude of money involved — $8.6 billion dollars — and the serious issues which have been raised in both the House and Senate about the package, I believe that it is necessary to make some changes prior to final approval," Jones said in his statement.

Rep. Ed Warren, D-Pitt, and Rep. Eugene Rogers, D-Martin, voted with the majority Thursday in supporting the roads proposal.

After its 90-25 approval, the House bill now goes to the state Senate where it will likely face some major changes, according to Sen. Tom Taft, D-Pitt.

Taft said the Senate was considering extending the construction time from 13 to 15 years and different ways to finance the plan. Like the House, the Senate would impose a gas tax and user fees to finance the proposal, but would also consider a $1 billion dollar bond issue.

Taft said he did not support the proposal to extend construction time, but said he "enthusiastically" favored the overall plan to improve the state's roadways.

"I'd rather spend the money on asphalt rather than on interest," Taft said.

The senator said he did not know when the Senate would consider the package, which includes improvements for more than 250 miles of highways in Pitt and Greene counties by the year 2001.

George And Maggie Leave 'Em Laughing

By Marcus Eliason
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — There were those who said George Bush would never get along as famously with Margaret Thatcher as Ronald Reagan did.

It appears they were wrong.

The British prime minister and the new American president showered each other with praise at a formal dinner at 10 Downing Street on Thursday night and regaled the celebrity-studded audience with anecdotes.

Bush, on the final night of his first trip to Europe as president, stayed a half-hour later than planned, and said before driving off, "It was a wonderful trip."

Both leaders had the 60 guests at the celebrity-studded, black-tie event in stitches.

Thatcher made a jocular reference to the Bushes' purported difficulties with a famous guest at their family compound in Maine.

Mrs. Thatcher recalled that it was from Downing Street that orders went out to burn the White House in 1814.

"Well, houses do need a bit of renovation from time to time," she said. "But don't worry, we've decided to spare Kennebunkport the same treatment, ever since we heard that you had to rebuild it anyway for your recent distinguished visitors."

Mrs. Thatcher was referring to reports, denied by the White House, that when French President Francois Mitterrand of France recently stayed at the Bush family home in Kennebunkport, Maine, he demanded a bigger bed and a lower toilet.

Bush paid a warm tribute to another guest, former Prime Minister Sir Alec Douglas-Home, whom he met in New York in 1972 when "I was the new boy on the block ... just out of Congress, representing our country at the United Nations."

Home, then foreign minister, was at U.N. headquarters on important business, while the Bushes were wondering how to while away a Sunday afternoon in New York.

"I said to (Barbara), 'I wonder what Sir Alec Douglas-Home is doing this morning?' She said, 'Don't you dare!' And I said 'No, I'm going to call him up.'"

"And darn if he didn't say 'Yes, I'd love to go out to Greenwich and see the birds' at the National Audubon Society Bird Sanctuary in Connecticut."

"That marvelous gesture on his part — of accepting the hospitality of a lowly ambassador, and certainly a new one in foreign affairs —

Pitt Schools Considering New Courses In Summer

By Cherie Evans
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Pitt County schools will consider offering classes in the summer of 1990 for students who want to take a new course, according to the system's coordinator of student services.

Such a program would allow students to continue their education in the summer by giving them the opportunity to take a course for the first time, said Arlene Ferren.

"Such courses will require a tuition of approximately $250 to $300 since they will have to be self-supporting," Ms. Ferren said.

"Students will also have to attend class for a minimum of 150 clock hours to get a unit of credit," she said.

Consideration of expanding the summer school program was requested by the Pitt County Board of Education to allow students to advance in addition to allowing them to receive remedial help.

The 1989 summer school program will begin this month with a few changes from last year, Ms. Ferren said.

Scheduled from June 26 to Aug. 2, the program will offer lunch free to the students attending, provided through money from the National School Lunch program.

Instructional time will be increased from three to four hours for students in grades one through eight to accommodate the lunch hour, Ms.

Ferren said. They will meet from 8 a.m. to noon each weekday.

In addition, fourth-grade students will be taught at Eastern Elementary School along with the first-through third-graders, Ms. Ferren said. Fifth through eighth grades will be at Wahl-Coates, while ninth through 12th grades will be at J.H. Rose High School.

About 1,000 students are expected to attend summer school this year in grades one through 12, Ms. Ferren said.

Applications for the summer program will be accepted through noon on June 27, she said. But, students are encouraged to register in their home schools.

Applications must be signed by the principal of the home school before students are admitted into the summer school program, Ms. Ferren said.

Two Men Sentenced In Pentagon Probe

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — A defense consultant and a former Navy engineer received 26-month sentences today for their roles in a bribery scheme to obtain secret bid information to help two private companies obtain lucrative Pentagon contracts.

Consultant William A. Parkin, 65, and former Navy senior engineer Stuart Berlin, 51, were also fined $25,000 apiece by U.S. District Judge Claude Hilton for their roles in the scheme to help Teledyne Industries Inc. and Hazeltine Corp. obtain contracts.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Joseph Aronica acknowledged at the separate sentencing proceedings that both Parkin and Berlin had fully cooperated with the Justice Department's continuing investigation of Pentagon procurement fraud.

But Aronica said that the receipt of bribes by Berlin "is perhaps the most serious offense that a government official can commit. It is a violation of the public trust. It is a corruption that is motivated by nothing more than his own greed."

Berlin's defense attorney, Leonard Greenbaum, noted that Berlin had actually received less than $5,000 in the conspiracy because he was "shortchanged at the outset" by Parkin and others.

Berlin, whose voice cracked during a brief statement to the judge,

Bush Heads For Home

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — President Bush flew home today after "a wonderful trip" to Europe, leaving U.S. allies cheering his leadership at the NATO summit and heading for a meeting with congressional leaders on future moves toward the Soviet Union.

With aides to Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher waving farewell at Heathrow Airport, Bush left aboard Air Force One on a return flight that will take him first to his oceanside vacation retreat at Kennebunkport, Maine, for a weekend of rest. He plans to return to Washington late Sunday.

The president arranged separate meetings Monday with his Cabinet and with Democratic and Republican congressional leaders to assess the results of his week-long tour of Rome, Brussels, Bonn and London and the prospects for negotiated reductions in conventional NATO and Soviet-led Warsaw Pact forces.

"We will spare no effort to achieve agreements that will reduce the risk of war and strengthen the foundations for peace," White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said before the president's departure.

Bush's staff was buoyant about widespread, positive review of the president's performance.

"I hope that it might put to rest some of that speculation" about Bush being too timid, said Secretary of State James A. Baker III.

Barbara says 'bye' to Margaret after the party

Kissing Friends

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LONDON — George and Barbara Bush wrapped up their first official European tour with a whirlwind 24 hours here that included politics, good deeds and, of course, a meal with the queen.

And if the mere presence of the Bushes wasn't enough to excite the pushy British press, Barbara Bush gave them a sparkling photo: She kissed Denis Thatcher's hand in front of 10 Downing St.

It was actually Denis Thatcher who started all the kissing when he welcomed Mrs. Bush to Britain's equivalent of the White House just before noon. As they stood out front, he pecked her hand ever so quickly — a little too quickly, it seemed, for the Brits.

"C'n ya give us the kiss of the hand again," hollered one photographer to Thatcher.

But without missing a beat, it was the first lady who obliged. She quickly grabbed the Thatcher hand and returned the gesture.

"She's something, eh," observed a British reporter. When Thursday night's banquet was all over, Mrs. Bush finished off the job — by giving Mrs. Thatcher a kiss.

Officer E.L. Butts said a 1987 Chevrolet Spectrum, containing a purse and $150 worth of clothes, was taken from 504 Rawl Road in an incident reported at 7:12 a.m., while Officer A.G. Lloyd said $250 in cash and a pair of jeans was taken from 409 S. Harding St. in an incident reported at 10:11 a.m.

According to Officer C.N. Gray, a bicycle wheel was taken from 1700 Hopkins Drive in an incident reported at 9:15 p.m.

Man Arrested

Greenville police arrested Darren F. Andrews, 23, of 602-2 Church St. on possession of stolen property charges Thursday.

Officer C.J. Melvin said Andrews was taken into custody about 5:18 a.m. on charges of possessing a television set, a video cassette recorder and a microwave oven which were taken from a Grifton residence during a break-in.

Student Selected

Denton Ward Hardee Jr., a junior in marketing education at D.H. Conley High School, recently was selected to participate in the Vocational Education Ambassadors Academy June 25-30 in Chapel Hill.

The academy is sponsored by the N.C. Department of Public Instruction's Division of Vocational Education and the Kenan Institute for Private Enterprise at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Academy activities are designed to develop competence in leadership and team-building skills, entrepreneurship and career planning. Sixty-one participants and 12 alternates were selected for the program from nominations from the state's 139 school systems.

Aaron M. Sullivan, a student at J.H. Rose High School, was selected as an alternate.

Board Meeting

The Pitt County Board of Education will conduct its regular meeting Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the third floor conference room of the Pitt County office building.

Items on the agenda include Sadie Sautler construction bids, a health occupations education program contract, a contract to audit, a fee schedule for 1989-90 and a Pitt Community College appointment.

Graduation Ceremony

Aaron Johnson, secretary of the North Carolina Department of Corrections, recently spoke during the graduation of the pre-release and aftercare services division of parole services.

Johnson challenged the 20 inmate graduates at First Pentecostal Holiness Church to make a positive difference in their respective communities while being productive citizens, said Melvin McLawhorn, training coordinator.

McLawhorn said the group was the first class of the Drug/Alcohol Rehabilitation Treatment Program to complete pre-release training.

Those persons interested in volunteering time and expertise to the program may visit McLawhorn or Elbert Buck, center director, at 108 Dexter St. or call 756-8400 for more information.

Board Meeting

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners will meet Monday at 9 a.m. at the county office building, 1717 W. Fifth St.

Included on the agenda are reports from the jail and agricultural committees, discussion of a proposed grant for the Bethel library, consideration of bids to construct a shell building for industrial development and a 1:45 p.m. workshop on solid waste.

A public hearing on the 1989-1990 budget is scheduled for 7:30 p.m.

Band Competition

Grifton school's band, chorus and strings programs recently participated in the Fiesta-val band competitions in Williamsburg, Va.

The sixth, seventh and eighth-grade combined chorus won first place for division I, and received the "Championship for the Day" award for outscoring all other junior and senior high school mixed choral groups.

Of the 12 bands competing in Division I, Grifton placed third and earned a "Superior" rating. Of the 28 bands from all divisions, the judges ranked Grifton's group as overall fourth.

The sixth-grade strings group received a rating of "Excellent."

The band was accompanied by directors Christy Hill and Sandra Phillips.

Pitt Man Draws Four-Year Term For Marijuana Plants

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A Pitt County man who pleaded guilty to growing over 300 marijuana plants in his home has been sentenced to four years in prison.

Superior Court Judge Cy Grant sentenced Marvin Daniel Davis, 44, Route 5, Box 289-A, to four years in prison today and fined him $10,000.

Davis was arrested Oct. 28, 1988, after a 13-month State Bureau of Investigation inquiry that was triggered when a Madison County man arrested on drug charges informed authorities of Davis' growing operation.

Davis pleaded guilty to felony counts of manufacturing marijuana and possessing the drug in exchange for the dismissal of additional charges. He and his wife, Joyce, 36, agreed to testify for state or federal prosecutors in related cases.

Joyce Davis pleaded guilty to one count of maintaining a dwelling for the purpose of keeping controlled substances and received a two-year suspended sentence and 10 weekends in the Pitt County Jail. She must perform 100 hours of community service and submit to drug tests or searches.

Investigators said information gathered from the Madison and Pitt arrests lead to drug raids in Washington County. Marvin Davis' cousin, Harold Davis of Plymouth, helped set up the Pitt operation, according to testimony in court this week.

SBI Agent J.C. Rea described the system Marvin Davis had created in a garage near his mobile home to grow the marijuana variety of sinsemilla, which is the most potent of marijuana plants.

The garage included three rooms with plants at different stages of growth. The plants ranged from 8 inches tall to 5 feet tall, Rea said. There was a fourth room where plants were hung to dry, Rea said.

Over a 13-month period, Rea said the Davis' power bills averaged about $300 a month, with a high one month of $511.

"That's not an operation for personal use," Haigwood said. "We could put this kind of thing on that TV show That's Incredible, and it would probably fit in on it."

Rea testified that Marvin Davis said he had invested $2,000 in the growing operation, and Haigwood said the plants found in the garage were worth nearly $150,000. Haigwood said the operation and the high quantity indicated that the plants were not just for personal use, and he asked Grant to impose a 10-year sentence on Marvin Davis and a five-year term on his wife.

However, defense attorneys Charles Vincent and Milton Williamson argued to Grant that the detailed growing operation did not indicate drug sales, but that Marvin Davis wanted to grow the best marijuana for his own use.

The attorneys produced several character witnesses, including Kay Tyson, a farmer, and Dr. Charles E. Bland, chairman of the biology department at East Carolina University. Both said the Davises, who are painters, do excellent work and are honest, dependable and reputable people that associated with their families.

In his closing argument, Williamson also said Eloise K. Howard of Greenville, the wife of U.S. District Court Judge Malcolm J. Howard, also wrote a letter in support of the Davises.

After the proceeding, Vincent said the judge had returned the letter to the attorneys and the document would not be placed in the court file. He would not allow a reporter to examine the letter, citing an agreement with the letter-writer not to involve their spouses.

In the October arrest, investigators seized timers, a tracking system that moved lights across the ceiling to provide the plants with lights, 2,500 pounds of potting soil, eight special lights to aid growing, and insulation, Rea said.

Rea said Marvin Davis told him that he had been smoking marijuana since he was 17 years old, and he grew the plants for his own use. But, he also said he sometimes gave some to his cousin, who would sell the marijuana for $240 an ounce and split the profits.

Driver Sentenced For His 11th DWI

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A 54-year-old Greenville man who pleaded guilty Thursday to his 11th drunken driving violation received a three-year prison term.

Superior Court Judge Cy Grant sentenced Thomas Parker of Route 11, Box 55-A, Greenville, to two years in prison on the Level 1 DWI charge and also gave him a one-year prison term for driving while his license was permanently revoked.

The charges stemmed from an Dec. 4, 1988, incident in which Trooper Ron Mills stopped Parker for driving while impaired. Parker refused to undergo a Breathalyzer examination to determine his blood-alcohol content, Mills said.

Parker was convicted of the crimes in Pitt District Court in April and appealed the case to Superior Court.

The December arrest came about seven weeks after the state Division of Motor Vehicles sent Parker a letter informing him that his license was permanently revoked. The revocation occurred after Parker was convicted of two DWIs in Pitt County on Sept. 28, 1988.

Nancy Aycock, chief assistant district attorney, told Grant that Parker's driving record is the second worst she has ever seen.

"You've got a problem, sir, you really do," Grant said to Parker in the sentencing. "The additional problem is you get on the highway and drive."

Parker's record of drunken driving, driving while his license was revoked and traffic violations dates back 20 years to a conviction on Sept. 27, 1969, in Elizabethtown for driving while intoxicated, according to court records.

He had another drunken driving conviction in Elizabethtown in 1972, when he was charged with refusing to undergo chemical analysis to determine his blood-alcohol content and driving while his license was revoked.

Parker also had a conviction in Fayetteville in 1976 for driving while his blood-alcohol content was above the legal limit of .10 and he had several drunken driving convictions in Clinton.

He was convicted of one drunken driving charge in Clinton in 1981, three charges there in 1983 and one charge there in 1985.

Fresh Water May Have Brought On Fish Kill

By J. Ward Best
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Scientists believe they have narrowed the field of culprits in a massive fish kill involving menhaden along the Pamlico and Pungo rivers.

Dr. Edward J. Noga, associate professor of aquatic animal medicine at North Carolina State University, said Thursday that the fungal disease believed responsible for killing the fish, ulcerative mycosis, was likely caused by a fresh water organism.

According to Noga, the organisms do not normally infect brackish water, or salt water, fish. But he theorized increased nutrient concentration and lowered salinity levels caused by spring rains allowed the organisms to thrive and infect the fish.

Since last week thousands of small menhaden have washed up along the Pamlico and Pungo rivers. According to Noga and spokesmen with the N.C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, all of the menhaden have been covered with large, open sores caused by ulcerative mycosis.

Dr. John Merriner with National Marine Fisheries Service labs in Beaufort said only an extensive kill would impact other animals in the food chain because of the reproductive capacity of menhaden. But he said the massive kills of the feeder fish in recent years could signal a larger environmental problem.

"We can think of the menhaden as a canary," Merriner said, referring to the practice of miners sending the more sensitive canaries into coal mines to test oxygen levels.

The menhaden serve as food for larger fish and also provide a large commercial catch along the east coast for food meal and oils, Merriner said.

"The menhaden are telling us something is wrong in the system," he said.

Noga said he believes "it is possible that nutrients, such as phosphorus and nitrogen from agricultural runoff, may play a role in the development of ulcerative mycosis."

Noga and two other scientists from the NCSU College of Veterinary Medicine are continuing to study to fish kills, and are concentrating their study on environmental factors. "We're probably not dealing with one factor," Noga said.

Lorraine Shinn, regional manager of NRCD, said this morning that water quality factors such as salinity and dissolved oxygen checked normal in the affected waters, but the fish kill continued along the Pamlico River.

The fish kill along the Pungo had abated, Ms. Shinn said, but she could not say if the river was free of the disease.

A team from her office was continuing to investigate the kill along the Pamlico, and was attempting to gather a representative sample of the menhaden. From a small catch Thursday the team counted a 20 percent ratio of diseased to healthy menhaden, Ms. Shinn said.

Fishermen along the Pamlico have claimed a higher ratio, and also blame a decreased catch of crabs and other fish on the disease, Ms. Shinn said.

Ayden Teacher Wins NIE Title

Lois J. Garrison, a fourth-grade teacher at Ayden Elementary School, has been named the winner of the second annual Teacher of the Year contest sponsored by the Newspaper in Education staff of The Daily Reflector.

Phyllis Ross' 11th-grade class at D.H. Conley High School won the NIE scrapbook competition.

The teachers' contest honors a teacher or teachers who use the newspaper to help teach students in the classroom, said Diane Williams, NIE coordinator at the Reflector.

Ms. Garrison, nominated for the contest by her students, said she uses the newspaper in various subjects.

"I took one activity and used it about a week and integrated it into all subject areas," she said.

For example, in language arts the newspaper may be used to divide sentences into the subject, predicate, nouns and other parts of speech. In social studies, the newspaper is used to discuss current events, and in math it can be used to go shopping, she said.

"We look at the advertisements and decide where's the best buy — where are you getting the best for your money," Ms. Garrison said.

She said the students also toured the Reflector building, becoming familiar with the operations of the newspaper, and they were visited at the school by Gigi Walter, NIE assistant coordinator.

As the contest winner, Ms. Garrison will receive a year's classroom subscription to the Reflector in which 10 newspapers will be delivered to the school on days of her choice. Included with the subscription will be holiday lesson plans and other activities prepared by the Reflector's NIE staff.

She also will receive a plaque in recognition of her accomplishment.

The scrapbook competition encouraged the collection and display of Federal Facts as presented on the Expressions Page of the Reflector since August.

Facts about the federal government and national symbols were presented on the page in recognition of the 1988 election year, helping students become familiar with the nation's government, Ms. Williams said.

As the winner of the scrapbook competition, the class at Conley was treated to a pizza party today.

Officials Hopeful Quick Answer Found For Bridge

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

State and federal officials say they hope to reach a compromise soon on how to protect the Herbert C. Bonner Bridge spanning Oregon Inlet.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service recently rejected the state's plan to build a rock seawall and a small jetty to protect the Bonner Bridge, which provides the only road link to Hatteras Island. On Wednesday, the state Department of Transportation, in turn, rejected an alternate plan suggested by the service.

Spokesmen for both sides said Thursday they hope an agreement can be reached soon so that the state can begin taking steps to protect the bridge from erosion before the storm season begins in the fall.

The DOT wants to build a 2,500-foot groin, or breakwater, on the northern end of Hatteras Island, where the 2½-mile bridge comes ashore. The department also plans to encase the end of the island behind a rock seawall. The groin and seawall, the DOT says, will stop the inlet from migrating southward and will protect the southern approaches to the Bonner Bridge.

The storm-ravaged northern tip of Hatteras Island loses about 180 feet of beach a year, and the ocean now threatens to cut the bridge off from N.C. 12.

The land is part of the Pea Island National Wildlife Refuge and is managed by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, an agency in the Department of Interior. The service would have to approve any plans and issue a permit before construction could begin.

The service, though, has determined that the groin and seawall would damage the refuge.

A panel of coastal geologists and engineers appointed by the Interior Department studied the DOT's plan and decided that the groin would increase erosion one to four miles south of the inlet by interfering with the natural offshore movement of sand, said James W. Pulliam Jr., the regional director of the service's Atlanta office, in a letter sent last Friday to James E. Harrington, the state transportation secretary.

In the letter to Harrington, Pulliam suggested an alternate plan that includes building a seawall parallel to N.C. 12, from the bridge eastward for 300 feet. The fish and wildlife service also recommended pumping sand onto the northern tip of Hatteras Island to build up the beach.

The state, though, has turned its nose up at the plan. In a letter sent to Pulliam Wednesday, Thomas J. Harrelson, a deputy transportation secretary, said the service's alternative will not protect the southern end of the bridge from storm waves and will do nothing to slow erosion.

Sand pumped onto the beach, Harrelson said, will not stay there long and, over the remaining 15-year lifespan of the bridge, will cost $51 million, which is more than double the $20 million that the state would spend on the groin and seawall.

John Oberheu, a spokesman for the fish and wildlife service in Atlanta, said he thinks that a compromise can be worked out.

Early Math Rules Approved By Board

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The state Board of Education has approved changes in the state mathematics curriculum that stress problem solving and instruction aimed at pushing students into pre-algebra by the sixth grade.

"We have refocused to look toward the kind of mathematics that we think we are going to need in the next century," said Jeane M. Joyner, math consultant for the state Department of Public Instruction.

The changes, which apply to kindergarten through eighth grade, represent a shift in emphasis rather than a major overhaul. Students will continue to learn arithmetic and memorize their multiplication tables under the Standard Course of Study for mathematics, first adopted in 1985. But the curriculum also says students should be introduced early to other concepts that they will find practical in later life, Mrs. Joyner said.

EPA Official Says State Law Baseless

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A U.S. Environmental Protection Agency official has for the first time recommended revoking a state's hazardous waste management authority in the battle over whether a chemical disposal company can build a plant in southern North Carolina.

The EPA, GSX Chemical Services Inc. and the Hazardous Waste Treatment Council are challenging North Carolina's authority to regulate treatment of hazardous waste because of a state law passed in 1987. GSX contends that law was designed to prevent the company from building a hazardous waste treatment plant in Scotland County.

"It was my opinion they (the N.C. General Assembly) were out to get GSX and stop that facility from being permitted," said John Dickinson, who oversees hazardous waste permits in North Carolina and South Carolina for the EPA. "I have never changed my opinion on that."

"The state's 1987 law on treatment of hazardous waste so zeroed in on this facility that it in essence prohibited the facility from being there," Dickinson said Thursday during the second day of hearings challenging the law.

The facility proposed by GSX would have been "state of the art" with no landfill or incinerator, he said. It would have handled wastewater and recyclable materials, he said.

Dickinson, who testified for more than six hours, claimed the law "has no legitimate basis in protecting human health or the environment."

The law in dispute requires commercial hazardous waste treatment plants to dilute each gallon of their treated wastewater with 1,000 gallons of fresh water if the effluent flows into drinking water supplies. But it also contained a "self-destruct" or "drop dead" clause that would stop the law from going into effect if the EPA took away the state's permitting authority.

Attorneys for North Carolina say they will ask a federal appeals court for a temporary restraining order to delay the hearing.

Rena Steinzor, an attorney with The Environmental Policy Institute in Washington, said Thursday that the motion for the restraining order was filed Wednesday with the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Judge J. Dickson Phillips Jr. is scheduled to consider the state's request at a special hearing today in Durham.

Backyards

Time To Ask The Neighbors Questions

Just how far does a backyard extend? In the case of Greenville and the Tar River, all the way to Granville County.

Nobody wants to be a NIMBY (Not In My Backyard). That's an emotional, often unreasonable point of view. But there are tough, important questions that must be asked before this community downstream can accept a landfill in Granville County located less than a mile from the Tar River.

To understand just how urgent these questions are, there are two things you should know.

First, if you live in Greenville, chances are the water you drink, cook and wash with comes from the Tar River. Greenville Utilities gets three-fourths of its water from that stream — seven to eight million gallons each day. It is a clean, reliable, convenient water source.

Second, a landfill is really a garbage dump. A place where trash is stored until it disintegrates. Much of it doesn't.

With these two facts in hand, Greenville must ask exactly why Granville County chose to locate a new landfill 300 feet from Jackson Creek, a tributary of the Tar. Granted, the site is 120 miles upstream from Greenville, but water — and pollution — flows fast downhill.

The city must also ask why its neighbor in the Piedmont has been planning such a site since 1985 without bothering to inform any communities downstream — and why the state's location and permit process would allow such an oversight.

After those queries are addressed, some sharp questions about the technology of such a landfill would be in order. Practical points like just how long the plastic that will line the dump is going to last. A state health official said no data on the effectiveness of these liners is available but that they're "real effective." He did not know what would happen to the waste after the liners deteriorated. Downstream, that's very reassuring.

Oh, and one question about the garbage going into that landfill. Does Granville County intend to screen out the noxious waste that inevitably finds its way into every dump? Like it or not, people put some hazardous stuff in their household garbage. Think about it. What do you do with old oven cleaner or drain cleaner? You throw it in the trash and take it to the dump. Those substances contain some harmful stuff. Granville officials say this landfill won't be used for hazardous waste, but the best intentions can't keep it out.

Greenville's citizens should pose these questions and ask — no, demand — that their elected officials also pose these questions. They should not accept the Granville County landfill without satisfactory, factual answers.

With the exception of Louisburg, whose town council vigorously opposes the site, other communities along the Tar have not probed the issue. Their blind acceptance is shortsighted.

A backyard is shared with neighbors; what hurts one, hurts the other. How well such a relationship works depends on cooperation. It depends on honesty and respect of each other's rights. Right now, the slim information about its impact makes Granville County's proposed dump site incompatible with the good neighbor policy.

A Tribute

Veteran's Monument Meaningful

The granite monument stands tall enough at the peak of the Greenville Town Common so it can be seen by motorists and pedestrians as they pass on First Street.

Yet it is simple enough. The inscription reads, "In Honor of American Veterans." It carries the seals of America's five military services — the Air Force, Army, Coast Guard, Marines and Navy.

That's all there is. Yet with those words and insignias the monument honors all Americans who have served in the military from the Revolution through World Wars I and II, Korea and Vietnam.

The stone monument, dedicated Memorial Day weekend, doesn't include much wordage, but it says it all. It honors those who served in war and then returned to pick up careers and to marry and raise families. It honors those who have volunteered in peacetime, never knowing when they might have to deal with war. It honors all branches of the military services.

For those who served, it will be a place to pause briefly and recall the military duty that most put behind them upon return to the civilian world.

For most it was a job to be done and the rewards of living in a free country are enough. Virtually all of them will feel a little touch of pride, however, as they look at Greenville's veteran's monument and recall having done their best for their country.

Legalizing Drugs: No Thanks

WASHINGTON — They are driving up the robbery and burglary rates, destroying neighborhoods, corrupting our officials, enticing our children into crime, and killing us at the rate of some 8,000 a year — and we haven't the will to get rid of them.

Make that the answer on the TV quiz show "Jeopardy!" and most of us would respond: "What are illegal drugs?"

And if James Ostrowski were the "Jeopardy!" host, many of us would go home broke. The right response, he would insist, is: "What are the laws against illegal drugs?"

Ostrowski, author of a new study from the libertarian Washington-based Cato Institute, argues that few of the drug-related problems that have produced the current "drug crisis" are the result of drug use. Virtually all of them, he says, stem from the black market spawned by our attempts to prohibit drugs.

"Since the black market in illegal drugs is the source of most drug-related problems," says Ostrowski, "that market must be eliminated to the greatest extent possible. The most efficient means of doing so is legalization....The day after legalization went into effect, the streets of America would be safer. One year after prohibition was repealed, 1,600 innocent people who would otherwise have been dead at the hands of drug criminals would be alive."

The Ostrowski study, "Thinking about Drug Legalization," comprises some 60 pages of statistics, analysis, projections and well-reasoned argument. Is it persuasive? I doubt it. The study and a Cato-sponsored forum scheduled here for next Friday are unlikely to move anyone not already convinced that the legalization is the way out of our drug problem.

William Raspberry

The reason is not that we will doubt the statistics, but that we will question the projections.

Suppose we accept Ostrowski's contention that the U.S. murder rate rose with the start of (alcohol) Prohibition, remained high during Prohibition, and then declined for 11 straight years after repeal of Prohibition. Does it necessarily follow that legalization of heroin, cocaine and other illegal drugs would make America a safer and healthier place?

Only if you assume that legalized drugs would be cheap enough to be within the means of both addicts and casual users and that legalization itself would not spawn a significant increase in the number of drug users.

The premise of most of the arguments in favor of legalization is that it would lower the cost of drugs and, therefore, take the profits out of drug trafficking. But would it? Did repeal of Prohibition take the profits out of alcohol? Did it increase the number of alcohol users? Probably. Did it significantly increase the number of alcoholics? Perhaps not.

But surely Ostrowski would accept that alcohol is not as addictive (for most people) as heroin and cocaine, particularly "crack" cocaine. Casual users of drugs are far more likely to become addicts than casual users of alcohol are to become alcoholics. If legalization led to a significant increase in the number of drug experimenters, isn't it likely that it would lead to a significant increase in drug addiction?

The truth is, we don't know — which is the basic problem with legalization.

Nor is it obvious that legalization would result in cheap drugs. What seems at least as likely is the development of drug cartels with an interest both in increasing the number of drug users and in maintaining prices at levels that would ensure their profitability.

Ostrowski, looking for parallels, cites the case of marijuana legalization in Alaska and the Netherlands and notes that marijuana use seems to be lower in those places than in the continental United States. But neither Alaska nor the Netherlands began with a marijuana "crisis." I am not aware (and apparently neither is Ostrowski) of any place whose drug problem was solved through legalization.

Would legalization save lives? Again, perhaps. Surely it would impact on the 750 murders a year that are related to black-market drug transactions. But why does Ostrowski assume that it would also reduce the number of overdose deaths or drug-related AIDS deaths or the crimes committed by those seeking the money to buy drugs?

Ostrowski insists that opponents of legalization have the burden of proving that we'd be better off without it. He has it exactly backward. The burden is on those who would legalize drugs to prove that legalization would not make things worse.

Ostrowski's study, as impressive as it is, falls sufficiently short of that proof that I'm still inclined to say: No thanks.

Riding The Wave To Shore

LONDON — There is general relief and genuine rejoicing that President Bush has come out of the NATO summit meeting in Brussels so well. Major challenges lie ahead as the alliance steers its U-turn in strategy and seeks to redefine its own future role, but the first test for the new Chief Executive has been met — and met well.

For all the preening they do for their own constituents, the officials of the European governments understand, as one British diplomat said, that "if the West is to be led, the President must lead it."

Pre-Brussels, Bush's capacity to provide that leadership was doubted by many. They saw him looking tentative, reactive and defensive, not only in his dealings with the skillful Mikhail Gorbachev but in his efforts to tame the finhorn tyrant Noriega in Panama and to extract a degree of deference from the Democratic Congress.

That is why everyone welcomed his seizing the initiative in Brussels in setting forth a new bargaining strategy on conventional-arms reductions and mediating the bitter intra-alliance dispute over short-range nuclear weapons.

Taken together with the President's action the previous week naming Japan as one of the nations subject to severe sanctions under the new trade law, the Brussels breakthrough gives the first clear signal that Bush is prepared to tackle some of the largest economic, military and diplomatic tests on the horizon.

Instead of retreating from Japan's mercantilist policies, he is challenging them. Rather than being dragged reluctantly by the Europeans into dealing with Russia's diplomatic offensive, he is pushing the pace of negotiations. In both Asia and Europe, Bush has staked out positions which give the United States leverage — if not control — over critical global decisions.

His achievement is reminiscent of the breakthrough performance at last August's Republican convention in New Orleans, when he took command of his party and set forth the themes of his successful general-election campaign. That, too, followed a period of seeming passivity on Bush's part, after he had defeated his rivals in the winter primaries. The nervous murmurs from Republican politicians then were very much like the mutterings among America's allies before Brussels.

Someone smarter than I am will have to explain Bush's cycle of alternating between lassitude and assertiveness. For now, it is simply welcome news that he rose to the occasion — once again.

But just as governing has proved to be harder than campaigning, so the follow-up to Brussels will provide a stiffer test of Bush's leadership than did cobbling together a NATO communique.

What we are seeing in NATO — what Bush has now given his stamp of approval — is the transformation of a military alliance focused on improving its battlefield strength into a diplomatic consortium bent on extracting the best possible disarmament deal from the Soviets. That is a tidal change.

Already the outlines of new problems are beginning to emerge. Although the NATO communique emphasized that the Western goal is only "partial" removal of the short-range nukes, the movement toward a denuclearized Europe is gaining momentum. Gorbachev will undoubtedly give it further impetus on his upcoming visit to West Germany.

The fewer nuclear weapons, the greater the reliance on ground forces. And increasingly, those will be German troops. Bush has promised to cut U.S. combat strength in NATO by 20 percent if the Soviets make much larger reductions on their side. Britain, which has the second-largest "offshore" contingent, will face increasing budgetary and political pressure to slice its battalions.

As Germany fills an increasing role in what remains of the NATO defense forces, its voice will become more dominant in Alliance military and diplomatic decisions, just as its financial strength already gives it the seat at the center of the table in European Community economic affairs.

Because of its history and location, Germany looks east as well as west. Already Bush has agreed to loosen some economic sanctions against the Soviet Union and its restive satellites. As time goes on, pressures from Europe for dumping the remaining security restrictions on trade with the East can only increase.

In the end, what this means is that the United States, to maintain a leadership role in a diminished NATO alliance, will almost certainly find itself betting more and more heavily that Gorbachev means what he says.

Betting on Gorbachev is betting on a man who is riding a whirlwind of his own creation. The rising voices of dissent in Moscow remind us of the point Gorbachev himself saw dramatized in Beijing: Once repression is eased and "reform" begins, events can overthrow those who instigated the process — or force them to attempt to reverse it.

The policy of caution toward Gorbachev that Mrs. Thatcher urged on Bush and that he first seemed inclined to accept has been swept aside by European — especially German — enthusiasm to test the Gorbachev promises.

Bush had been adept in getting out in front of the wave. But riding the wave to a safe shore will be even tougher.

China Looks To Bush To Resume Aid For Growing Population

Sara Engram

However the current upheavals in China turn out, one thing is certain: The country's future depends in large part on efforts to control its burgeoning population.

Unless China is able to curtail its growth rate, economic gains will never keep up with the number of people to be fed, clothed, sheltered, trained for useful work and cared for in sickness and old age. Yet considering the numbers involved — a projected population of between 1.27 billion to 1.32 billion people by the turn of the century — the country's struggle to provide for its people could easily turn into a crisis of catastrophic proportions.

The Bush administration's timidity in supporting Chinese students demonstrating for democracy may please the hard-liners in the ruling Communist Party. But soon President Bush faces a political test on which both students and party leaders will stand together. The president's decision will say a great deal about the depth of his concern for China's future and the welfare of its citizens.

On June 7, the governing council of the United Nation's Population of the Reagan years and resume U.S. contributions to the UNFPA. Those contributions were stopped in 1985, ostensibly in response to

Analysis

States had been solely concerned with ending such abuses, there were plenty of more effective ways to make its objections known directly to the Chinese government. Instead, by choosing to stop its contributions UNFPA, the United States has penalized families in poor countries around the world.

In 1985, Congress prohibited U.S. funding for any organization that "supports or participates in the management of a program of coercive abortion or involuntary sterilization." In October 1985, President Reagan endorsed two circumstances under which U.S. contributions to UNFPA could be resumed: Either the Chinese program "punishes abuses and thereby prevents coercive abortion and involuntary sterilization," or the UNFPA "radically" changes the nature of its assistance to China by withdrawing from activities that involve it in the management of the Chinese population program. The "management" activity that most upset the anti-family-planning lobby was the UNFPA's involvement in helping China take a census.

By all accounts, the new plan has been carefully tailored to meet those conditions. UNFPA has never endorsed "coercive abortions" — its governing council has stated that abortion should not be used as a form of birth control and, as a matter of policy, the organization does not fund abortion services.

The UNFPA's new plan for China would provide assistance to contraceptives factories (but not to research or development of the French drug RU486, which induces abortion). It would also extend maternal and child health centers into 300 poor rural counties, provide aid for projects in rural areas to enhance educational and employment opportunities for women, and support research on the needs of China's rapidly growing population of senior citizens.

The United States now faces a critical decision: Will it support this plan — and resume funding the important work of the UNFPA? Or will it cave in again to the anti-family-planning lobby? Already those forces in Congress, led by Sen. Jesse Helms, are gearing up to block the resumption of funding.

Meanwhile, the Chinese are watching President Bush, a man who has lived among them, a man they consider their friend. To their mind, Ronald Reagan was an ideological aberration. With George Bush, they expect a realistic approach.

Senate Democrats Encounter 'Growing Pains'

By F. Alan Boyce
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — When Sen. Ken Royall closed two budget meetings against the wishes of the president pro tem of the Senate and successfully opposed a tax plan backed by several Democratic leaders, some lawmakers worried that backroom power politics was back.

Members whispered that the openness of the process was being threatened and that the Senate was rudderless. But leaders said Thursday the disputes are just growing pains of the democratic process.

"We have no conflict between ourselves," said Sen. Henson Barnes, president pro tem of the Senate. "We may have differences of opinion on different matters."

He said the Senate is working under "leadership by consensus" although he admitted no consensus has yet been reached.

"It's not the old days of this is the way you go whether you like it or not," he said. "The days of the good ol' boy, cigar-chewing politician ruling the Senate is past."

Royall, D-Durham, downplayed newspaper accounts that he had thrown his weight around. He said he was simply trying to come up with a good budget and an effective tax package.

"I think it's just you've got a new situation this time in the fact that the Senate's got its own appropriations bill and the House has its own appropriations bill," he said.

Asked whether that was frustrating to veteran lawmakers, Royall said, "A little bit, yes."

Royall, who has served 23 years in the House and Senate, said the Barnes tax proposal arose without his knowledge.

"That was just a ... I don't know what it was, to tell you the truth," he said. "It was kind of a surprise to me."

Barnes and Finance Chairman Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, were backing a tax package that would have produced $235 million a year — more than Royall feels is needed from a tax increase. The bill was quickly killed when Royall spoke against it.

Thursday, all animosity appeared to have been buried.

Sen. Jim Johnson, R-Cabarrus, who referred to Royall as the "head grizzly" in one newspaper account, joked about the rift in committee and on the floor Thursday.

He said that during a Thursday morning committee meeting he walked into the room where Royall was sitting and growled like a bear.

"He loved it," Johnson said. "He just laughed and said, 'You're right.'"

On the floor, Johnson noted that he and some other senators were wearing the same light blue blazers as Royall and quipped that they were trying to blend in with the "grizzly bear."

Royall said he felt no animosity over the rivalry.

"I wouldn't be in the Senate if I thought that way about it," he said. "You win some, you lose some."

Senate Majority Leader Ted Kaplan said the issue was being blown out of proportion.

"I think that they (Barnes and Royall) are two very strong individuals who have a difference of opinion on a particular issue," he said. "I think that will all be compromised out and resolved by next week."

Royall is not taking the Senate by storm, Kaplan said.

"I think there are a lot of proposals," he said. "They all need time to be thought over and approved. Senator Royall's put things on the table and thought people would vote for them, and he had to think again."

IN THE STATE

Restaurant Bills

RALEIGH (AP) — Two bills aimed at limiting the spread of disease in restaurants met completely different fates at the hands of the House Human Resources Committee.

The committee Thursday easily approved a bill to require that food workers wear gloves when handling unwrapped food. But the panel balked at a measure to curb the spread of hepatitis by requiring blood tests when health officials said it would be expensive and impractical.

The glove bill, sponsored by Sen. Ralph Hunt, D-Durham, was approved without debate. The testing bill offered by Rep. Frank Rhodes, R-Forsyth, drew nearly an hour of questions before being shipped back to a subcommittee for further study.

Smoking Protest

RALEIGH (AP) — Smoking restrictions imposed at Ford Motor Co.'s U.S. facilities have drawn fire from the North Carolina Farm Bureau, which has accused the automaker of initiating an "economic assault against tobacco farmers and ... the tobacco industry."

In a release about the restrictions, Farm Bureau President W.B. "Bob" Jenkins stopped short of recommending that farmers boycott Ford products, which include farm equipment.

But, Jenkins said he had alerted the organization's 283,000 members of Ford's new policy in order to "allow the membership to express their concern over such decisions when purchasing cars, trucks and farm machinery."

Annexation

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The Jacksonville City Council has approved the final step toward the annexation of Camp Lejeune and New River Air Station.

"This is a historic day so I've been told," said Councilman Greg Johnston after the council took the action Tuesday.

The unanimous vote means that on June 30, 1990 — the effective date of the annexation — Jacksonville's population will grow to nearly 70,000, making it the seventh-largest municipality in North Carolina.

"It's a giant step forward for the city of Jacksonville," Councilman Joe Choate said.

The annexation stands to add more than $3 million in state revenues to city coffers annually, according to officials. The annexation will cause Onslow County to lose more than $2.4 million in revenues annually, county officials have said.

Hostage

RALEIGH (AP) — A Wake County woman was charged with kidnapping Thursday after the Raleigh fire chief was held at gunpoint for two hours, officials said.

The incident occurred at a fire department training center in south Raleigh when Fire Chief Sherman A. Pickard was held hostage, police said. No one was injured.

Linda Gillespie, 40, of Wendell was charged with first-degree kidnapping. She works as an office assistant at Fire Station 1 in downtown Raleigh. Police negotiators talked her into giving up, police said.

Escort Service

DURHAM (AP) — In an effort to make women on campus safer from sexual assaults, Duke University will expand its security escort service July 1 to include four vans to shuttle hospital employees from the medical center.

University spokesman David Roberson said Duke public safety officers already have been providing escorts for pedestrian employees.

"Three of the vans will be in motion all the time," Roberson said.

Also on July 1, all maintenance and engineering vehicles are scheduled to become part of a "security-alert network." The vehicles will be equipped with two-way radios enabling employees to report crimes or suspicions directly to public safety officers, Roberson said.

The safety measures were implemented in response to concern raised last January when two female employees were sexually assaulted on successive days.

Crawford Convicted In Death

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GRAHAM, N.C. — Jonathan Louis Crawford has been convicted of first-degree murder for torturing and killing his girlfriend's 6-year-old son with a water overdose last October.

Crawford, 33, showed no emotion as the verdict was read in a hushed courtroom Thursday afternoon.

With his hands folded on his lap, Crawford stared at the jury as each member stood to confirm his or her verdict of guilty in the Oct. 3, 1988, death of Christopher Michael West.

The jury, which deliberated about four hours Thursday before convicting Crawford of first-degree murder and felony child abuse, returned to the Alamance Superior Court today for a hearing on whether Crawford should live or die for the boy's death.

The first-grader died of a water overdose after Crawford gave him what a doctor estimated was at least nine quarts of water in less than three hours.

The overdose occurred in the living room of the north Burlington apartment where the boy lived with his mother, Angela Clayton West; Crawford; and a younger brother and sister. Angela West, 30, will be tried later on similar charges.

Doctors said the large amount of water caused the boy's brain to swell, leading to coma, seizures and death.

District Attorney Steve Balog, who is seeking the death penalty, argued during the trial that Crawford punished and tortured the boy for eating lime sherbet without permission. Crawford told jurors in tearful testimony last week that he "persuaded" the boy to drink the water in a misguided attempt to treat him for what Crawford thought was food poisoning from the sherbet.

Crawford was convicted of first-degree murder on two theories: That he tortured the boy and that he acted with malice, premeditation and deliberation.

Murder Plea

HILLSBOROUGH, N.C. (AP) — Lentz Craig Franklin was sentenced to two life prison terms plus 40 years after pleading guilty to second-degree murder in the deaths of two Orange County men who disappeared in 1985.

As part of a plea arrangement with the state, Franklin, a former Durham police officer, was allowed to enter the guilty pleas instead of facing two counts of first-degree murder.

Martin Says Time Essential In Deciding Pay Proposals

By John Flesher
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The next two weeks could spell the difference between success and failure in the effort to raise new revenue for teacher and state employee pay raises, Gov. Jim Martin says.

The Republican governor, whose proposal to boost the sales tax from 5 cents to 6 cents per dollar and implement a merit-pay plan for teachers has stalled in the General Assembly, said Thursday he expects movement in the House soon.

"My objective for the next two weeks is to get (a consensus among the leadership) first in the House, then in the Senate," Martin said at his weekly news conference. "The House seems ready to go."

Rep. David Diamont, D-Surry, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, said House leaders were working on an education package and said the 1-cent sales tax proposal "appears to be gaining strength" in the chamber.

"A lot of people are realizing that if we're going to pass the salary package, with the kind of figures we've been talking about, we're going to have to have new revenue," Diamont said.

Martin acknowledged he faces an uphill battle in the Senate, where the Republicans are outnumbered 37-13 and the Democratic leadership has voiced strong opposition to a sales tax increase.

Exacerbating the problem is the inability of Senate Democrats to reach a consensus among themselves on financing a pay raise, he said. While some favor using a one-time windfall from the RJR Nabisco sale to finance a raise, others have spoken of raising the income tax or other taxes.

"Fine. Let's debate that," Martin said. "But we're running out of time."

He said he had achieved a "major milestone" by winning the support of Lt. Gov. Jim Gardner and a majority of the Republicans in the House and Senate. However, in a sign of continuing discord within the GOP over the issue, two Republican lawmakers called a news conference to accuse Martin and Gardner of abandoning conservative principles.

State Will Issue Warnings If Ozone Pollution Excessive

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Starting next week, North Carolina will issue warnings when ozone pollution is expected to reach unhealthy levels in urban areas around the state.

"We don't want to say the sky is falling," said Ogden Gerald, chief of air quality for the state Division of Environmental Management. "But we don't want them to over-exert themselves."

Starting Tuesday, advisories will be issued on weekdays when ozone pollution is expected to be a problem. On hot, hazy afternoons, some people who are sensitive to ozone might want to stay indoors or avoid strenuous exercise, Gerald said.

Last summer, the air over Raleigh was considered unhealthy for a record-breaking 10 days, including six in June. There were only two such days in 1987.

"Last year was the worst on record nationwide," Gerald said.

Ozone, which forms when hydrocarbons and nitrogen oxide mix in the atmosphere and are heated by the sun, can cause sneezing and other cold-like symptoms. Ozone levels typically start out low in the early morning and rise with the temperature, peaking in the early afternoon. By nightfall, they drop again.

Even at permissible levels, the pollutant can decrease lung capacity, which is defined as the amount of air a person can exhale.

Advisories will be issued for each urban area when the state's computer model predicts the ozone concentration will exceed the national standard of 0.12 parts per million.

Last year, the highest concentrations recorded were 0.159 ppm in Raleigh, 0.137 ppm in Durham and 0.169 ppm in Charlotte.

When the computer predicts high ozone levels, the state will notify the National Weather Service between 10 a.m. and 11 a.m.

On days when the ozone is unhealthy, the state will ask residents to voluntarily reduce automobile use, open burning, lawn mowing, painting and outdoor cooking, all of which would aggravate the problem. Industries will be asked to reduce emissions.

The advisories will cover Buncombe, Mecklenburg, Forsyth, Guilford, Durham, Cumberland and Wake counties.

IRS Hits Bakkers For $1.2 Million

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ORLANDO, Fla. — Evangelist Jim Bakker says he has always paid his taxes, but the federal government contends otherwise.

Bakker and his wife, Tammy, received a $1.2 million tax bill Thursday from the Internal Revenue Service. The lien ordered the Bakkers to pay $666,492 for 1981 and $565,434 for 1982. The Orlando Sentinel reported.

"I don't owe taxes," Bakker said when shown a copy of the lien. "I've always paid my taxes. It's a part of the plot to destroy Jim and Tammy."

The tax lien is only the latest in a series of setbacks for the televangelists, who recently moved to Orlando.

Bakker is to stand trial in August on charges of fraud in connection with his former People That Love ministry. Bakker, his wife Tammy and an aide have been ordered to pay $7.7 million to PTL as part of a judgment in a suit that accused them of misusing ministry funds.

The lien, filed in Orange County, protects the government's interests by preventing the Bakkers from selling any property without IRS permission, said Jackie Bracey, an IRS public affairs officer in Greensboro, N.C. She said tax liens would be filed wherever the Bakkers are believed to own property.

Bracey could not confirm whether the Bakkers own any property in the Orlando area. It has been reported that the Bakkers own a condominium in Palm Desert, Calif., for which records showed they paid $228,000.

The Bakkers have been taping their "Jim and Tammy" show at an Orlando shopping center since May 8. They are leasing space at the center and renting a home in an exclusive subdivision.

As recently as this week the Bakkers have been pleading for money. During a taping of the "Jim and Tammy" show Wednesday, Bakker told his audience that they are about $200,000 behind in paying off bills related to the show.

IRS officials said the lien — which demands $1,231,926 in taxes, interest and penalties — was related only to the Bakkers' individual income for the two years. However, Tammy Bakker contended the IRS is somehow trying to charge the Bakkers for other expenses.

"They're charging us for PTL store fixtures," she said, referring to the North Carolina ministry they were pressed to leave in 1987 amid sex and financial scandals. "They're charging us for the band clothes. ... They're charging all the ministry expenses to us as a personal thing."

Bracey said the tax lien did not address the PTL ministry.

"This is just their individual income tax ... their own individual taxes that they owe on the 1040 (form)," she said.

GOP Joins Democrats' Call For Investigation Of Leaks

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The House Republican leader is joining Democrats in condemnation of leaks about a federal investigation of Rep. William Gray, a Democrat running for majority whip.

Rep. Bob Michel, R-Ill., said Thursday that news stories were "apparently based on information from Justice Department investigators and the office of the U.S. attorney in Philadelphia."

In a letter to Attorney General Dick Thornburgh, Michel said he was protesting "possibly illegal leaking of information damaging to a member of Congress."

"It is just hard to imagine anything more irresponsible," Michel said. He said that if the Justice Department cannot complete a successful investigation into the leaks, Thornburgh should "weigh very seriously" Gray's request for an independent counsel to investigate the leaks.

Gray, of Pennsylvania, chairman of the House Democratic caucus, issued a statement Thursday denying that he employed any "no-show" workers on his congressional office payroll or on the House Budget Committee, which he chaired until January.

Government sources, speaking only on condition they not be named, said there is a preliminary inquiry into allegations of employment practices and expenditures on Gray's staff, including allegations that the lawmaker hired a "ghost" employee. News stories based on anonymous sources revealed the investigation on Wednesday.

Justice Department spokesman David Runkel said, "We have confidence that this matter can be investigated here in this department."

Gray's statement Thursday said, "There are and were no 'ghost', 'no-show' or 'absentee' employees on my House or committee payrolls."

The Pennsylvania Democrat has asked Thornburgh to appoint an independent counsel to investigate the leaks "and the motivations of this so-called investigation arranged to occur just as I was seeking a leadership position in the Democratic Party."

He called Thornburgh's promise to have an in-house investigation "insufficient" and added, "There is nothing to substantiate these unfounded charges told by cowardly anonymous sources that there was any employee impropriety."

Meanwhile, attorney Lezli Baskerville said Thursday she has never been a "no-show" employee of Congress and described herself as a workaholic who always arrived early and left late.

Ms. Baskerville read a statement denouncing what she called a "smear campaign" against her and Gray and criticizing past news coverage by The Associated Press.

Wright Blames Exit On Political Retribution

By Jim Drinkard
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — House Speaker Jim Wright, still denying the ethics charges against him, is painting himself as a victim of political retribution and of a desire to accomplish too much, too fast in Congress.

In a 1½-hour luncheon with reporters and in a series of television interviews on Thursday, an unrepentant Wright said he decided last weekend to resign from Congress because he expected the ethics committee to recommend he be reprimanded, a move which likely would have cost him his speakership.

To fight that recommendation would have been too politically costly and tied the House in knots for a long time to come, he said. "So I decided that is one of those things that I can't change."

Wright said he believed Majority Leader Thomas Foley, D-Wash., the man who will succeed him, is better suited to heal the wounds caused by the ethics fight.

"He does have a temperamental advantage in the sense of being more cautious, reasoned, less hurried,"

Wright said. "I was probably obsessed with the notion that I had a limited period of time in which to make my mark on the future. That was one of my attitudes, perhaps a failing."

In the interview, Wright was by turns jovial and emotional, offering an unusual self-analysis and portraying himself as seeking to restore peace to the chamber he had plunged into turmoil during his stormy 2½-year tenure.

He reached back to memories of his adolescence in Dallas, when a football coach persuaded him to join the school debate team and he became interested in Woodrow Wilson's ideas for the League of Nations.

"From that time, I didn't want to do anything except to come to Congress and to use whatever influence I could to help create the basis for a more peaceful world," Wright said, his voice breaking. He paused a moment to regain his composure, and added:

"You get so self-righteous about these things, I guess, you think your way is right. So you get very determined and you try to make things happen in a way that you believe, in your finite judgment, is best. And maybe you are not the possessor of infinite wisdom. Maybe the other guys have got good ideas, too."

Wright dated his misfortunes from Nov. 13, 1987, when he attended a meeting between Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega and Roman Catholic Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo in Washington, during which the cardinal agreed to carry a peace proposal to the Reagan administration-backed Contra rebels.

"From that moment there was nothing but hostility from the administration," Wright said. "There was a determination on the part of certain people in the other party to see to it that I was removed."

Wright came in for criticism that he was trying to usurp the foreign policy-making prerogatives of the executive branch, but won praise from Democratic liberals who opposed the Contra policy.

The Texas Democrat did not allude to his ethics problems during the interview, preferring to dwell on what he saw as the highlights of his 34-year House career. He sat in his private dining room decorated with the U.S. and Texas flags and a set of longhorns over the door.

Wright announced his resignation in a House speech Wednesday after a yearlong investigation that led to charges that he improperly accepted gifts and sought to evade House outside income limits.

He said he hoped his tenure as speaker would be remembered "as a time when we began to turn from our preoccupation with military might to a recognition of the long-deferred agenda of building and rebuilding America."

And he added: "If I've made any contribution to peace in the world, then that's the thing of which I'd be proudest."

He said he made up his mind to resign during a weekend getaway with his wife, Betty, at a friend's lodge in the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia. But he said he had decided early this year that he would not seek another term in Congress, and had told the majority leader, Foley, to "get ready to be speaker."

He said he had received calls from his home district of Fort Worth urging him to stay and fight the charges. "They didn't understand the climate in Washington. They didn't realize the deadly destruction this entire episode had wrought ... the wicked forces it had set in motion between Democrats and Republicans in the House."

Isaacs holds his trophy high after victory

Eighth Grader Wins Spelling Bee Title

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — In January, Scott Isaacs started studying 104 dictionary words a day, the number he could fit on a piece of computer paper. It paid off.

Thursday, Scott, a 14-year-old eighth grader from Littleton, Colo., won the 62nd National Spelling Bee in a spell-down with Ojas Tejani, 12, a sixth grader from Hixson, Tenn.

They were the last survivors of a record 222 local and regional bee winners who were in the field when the national competition started on Wednesday.

The final word was "spoliator." Scott said he had studied the word, which means a spoiler, and the only thing that made him hesitate over it was whether it ended with "er" or "or."

He made the right choice, and tonight will collect $1,500 at a prize banquet. Ojas will get $1,000, and others will receive smaller prizes.

Scott flew to New York Thursday night to appear today on ABC's "Good Morning America."

He was also invited today to meet with Vice President Dan Quayle, along with all of the bee contestants from Quayle's home state of Indiana.

He is the 30th male champion or co-champion of the national bee. Girls have won the crown 35 times.

This was his third time in national competition. Altogether, starting in the fourth grade, he has competed in 15 local, regional and national bees and has won eight of them.

In 1987 he placed 41st in the national competition, misspelling psittacine, which means relating to parrots. In 1988, he flunked telencephalon, a subdivision of the forebrain.

"I might be into words when I get older, or I might become a pilot," he told reporters. He said he is thinking of trying for the Air Force Academy or going to San Jose State College after high school, but first he would like to be on the staff of the National Spelling Bee.

Both Scott and Ojas are engineers' sons. Bud Isaacs is an oil engineer in Denver and Indian-born Vinay Tejani is a chemical engineer. The boys' mothers list their occupations as homemaker.

Scott attends Kent Denver Country Day School and Ojas goes to St. Nicholas School in Chattanooga.

Ojas said he studied from 40 minutes to as much as 3½ or 4 hours a day in preparation for the competition.

Speaker Will Keep His Pension

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Jim Wright will lose a number of privileges when he steps down next week as House speaker, but one benefit will remain intact — his pension.

Gone will be the access to limousine service. Gone will be the use of a separate staff. The Texas Democrat, however, can expect to receive a handsome pension for as long as he lives.

The annual pension is based on an average of the lawmaker's three highest salaries, multiplied by 2.5 percent and then multiplied by his years of service — 34 in Wright's case, according to the House Clerk's office.

Although Wright plans to resign as speaker on Tuesday but not give up his House seat until later this month, the difference of a few weeks will have little effect on his pension.

The National Committee on Public Employee Pension Systems estimated that Wright's average salary was $108,333 and after all the mathematics, his pension in the first year will be $86,666.

If Wright lives another 17 years, which the committee based on the 1988 Life Insurance Fact Book, he would receive a cumulative total of $1.47 million. Factoring in a cost-of-living increase of 5 percent, the cumulative pension will be $2.24 million.

The Office of Personnel Management will handle the pension. Though his pension won't be effected by the few weeks Wright is just a member of the House rather than its speaker, his life insurance coverage is based on his salary, which drops from $115,000 to $89,500.

But the change will likely be minor since Wright's time as simply a House member will be less than a month, said Michael McCauley of Congress Watch, a public interest group.

Wright's health insurance is not tied to his salary and won't be affected.

Asheville Robbery

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Two gunmen wearing stockings over their faces robbed an Asheville bank Thursday morning and then set their getaway car on fire in a nearby parking lot, authorities said.

The men entered the Branch Banking and Trust office at 10:13 a.m., wielding two handguns, Capt. Will Annarino of the Asheville Police Department said. "They forced a bank teller to give them an undisclosed amount of money out of the drawer," Annarino said.

Abandoned Baby

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A Forsyth County teen-ager was charged Thursday with misdemeanor child neglect of her son who was found Sunday in a cardboard box in a carport, officials said.

Forsyth County District Attorney Warren Sparrow charged Vicky Deanne Lambert, 16, with the offense. Warrants identified Miss Lambert as the mother of the child.

Sparrow said Miss Lambert will be tried as an adult. Sparrow said she created and allowed a substantial risk to the baby by leaving him unattended.

Lawmakers Praise Bid To Recover Student Loans

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — An Education Department crackdown on schools with soaring loan default rates is drawing praise from lawmakers and passing marks even from the trade schools that will be most affected by the more stringent policies.

Schools turning out extremely high percentages of delinquent borrowers will face an escalating series of corrective and punitive actions under new regulations announced Thursday by Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos.

Cavazos also said his department will take administrative steps and submit a package of legislative proposals to Congress as part of a strategy to ease the default problem, which is expected to cost taxpayers $1.8 billion this fiscal year.

"There are some unscrupulous and uncaring institutions out there who are taking advantage of a program designed to help our students, not financially shackle them," Cavazos said. He said such schools "promise to educate but deliver only a debt."

The prime targets of the crackdown are for-profit vocational schools which have an average default rate of 40 percent, compared to 20 percent for community colleges and about 10 percent for other types of institutions. The top 10 schools on a list released by the department were all trade schools with default rates topping 80 percent.

Officers of two major proprietary school associations called the Cavazos approach definitely preferable to the plan advanced a year ago by his predecessor, William Bennett.

Bennett's plan called for punitive proceedings against all schools with default rates above 20 percent. Cavazos said that would have affected 2,500 schools and been impossible for the department to administer.

Under his approach, schools must have default rates over 60 percent to trigger proceedings to limit, suspend or terminate their participation in the huge student loan program. Those at 40 to 60 percent will have to reduce their rate by 5 percent a year to avoid triggering the proceedings. The system takes effect Jan. 1, 1991.

Less Draconian steps such as default management plans, delayed loan disbursements and pro-rata refunds will be required at lower levels.

Jobless Rate Drops Slightly

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The nation's unemployment rate dipped to 5.2 percent in May but — in a signal of a slowing economy — job growth fell to its lowest level in more than three years, the government said today.

The civilian jobless rate, taken from the Labor Department's monthly household survey, fell 0.1 percentage point from April's 5.3 percent, in line with the expectations of analysts.

But non-farm payroll growth, taken from a separate survey of business establishments, was up by only 101,000, down from April's revised growth of 206,000 jobs. The May growth was the lowest month-to-month gain since 84,000 added payroll positions were reported in March 1986.

For the past three months, an average of only 160,000 jobs have been added to non-farm payrolls each month, down from the robust average monthly gain of 270,000 jobs reported in 1987 and 1988.

In other signs of an economic slowdown, the Labor Department said the average private-sector nonagricultural workweek fell 0.3 hours, to 34.6 hours.

The service-producing industries again accounted for the overwhelming job growth.

Show Leads To Arrest Of Man Sought In 1971 Family Slayings

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEWARK, N.J. — John E. List's first life as a church-going accountant ended 18 years ago when he disappeared after the slayings of his mother, wife and three children in their Victorian mansion.

His second, almost parallel existence ended Thursday when FBI agents arrested List in an accounting office in Richmond, Va., wrapping up a search that had led to all 50 states, Europe and South America.

The arrest came 11 days after Fox television network's "America's Most Wanted" program broadcast details of List's case.

The show re-enacted the slayings, and displayed photos of List from before the killings and a sculptor's bust of how he might look today. One viewer called to say a man resembling List was living in the Richmond suburb of Midlothian, the FBI said.

"I don't know what a guy who's killed five people is supposed to look like, but he was not that person," said Pat Ferguson, who lives two doors away from the man she knew as Robert P. Clark but who agents said was List.

"He worked hard in his yard, went to work every day, went to church every Sunday. The guy was so average."

List is accused of shooting to death his mother, Alma, 85; wife, Helen, 45; and their three children.

Patricia, 16, John Jr. 15, and Frederick, 13.

Their bodies were found Dec. 7, 1971, in the family's 18-room mansion in Westfield, 10 miles southwest of Newark. Police said they found a confession written by List and addressed to his Lutheran minister on the dining table.

"Nobody believed he could do something like that," said Frank Chenitz, who lives a few houses away from where the mansion stood. It was destroyed by fire in 1972.

"I say give him a fair trial, because we've only heard one side of the story," said Chenitz. "But the things he's accused of, if he did them, then he deserves the worst. They were atrocities."

After the slayings, investigators found that List had two mortgages on his house, was failing as a financial consultant and had been siphoning money from his mother's $200,000 savings account.

Since 1971, List lived most of the time in Denver, where he met a woman at a Lutheran church function in 1977 and married her eight years later, authorities said.

Authorities said List's new wife, Delores, was unaware of his past and was shocked by his arrest. She has helped agents piece together some of List's movements since 1971.

The childless couple lived in the Richmond area for about a year, authorities said.

Neighbors Joseph and Jacqueline Stefano said the Clarks were good hardworking people who did not like to talk about their past.

The families did odd jobs for each other and exchanged books and videotapes, Stefano said. Clark often called up to recommend a movie or television show, Stefano said. One of his picks was "America's Most Wanted," but Stefano missed the program the week List was featured.

In his confession, List said he believed his family was drifting from the church and was upset that his daughter wanted to be an actress, investigators have said.

Before the killings, List wrote notes to his children's teachers and his minister saying the family would be away for a few weeks visiting an ailing relative, police said. Newspaper delivery was canceled and the thermostat was turned off to retard the decomposition of the bodies, police said.

Neighbors called police when they noticed lights in the house burning out. The lights had been left on as security.

Officers forced their way in and found the bodies of List's wife and children in the ballroom. His mother's body was found in an upstairs closet. All had been dead a month.

"It's something I remember like yesterday," said James Moran, who was police chief at the time. "I walked into that house and saw how one kid was shot with nine bullets in him, just savagely."

"You don't forget something like that."

Moran, 67, retired in 1986 but has continued to carry in his pocket an FBI flier on List.

At a federal court appearance Thursday in Richmond, the suspect denied being List and signed an affidavit as Clark.

The FBI said it identified him as List from fingerprints in his Army records.

A magistrate ordered him jailed pending a bond hearing Monday.

Icahn Sells Texaco Stock For $2 Billion

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Carl Icahn has sold a record $2 billion block of shares — his entire Texaco Inc. stock. The move fueled speculation that the takeover strategist may turn his sights on an old target: USX Corp.

Trading in the steel giant's stock was halted near the close of the New York Stock Exchange session Thursday because there were too many buy orders and not enough sell orders after Icahn sold his 42.32 million Texaco shares. USX finished the day up $2.62½ at $37.50 a share.

Icahn ended his long and often bitter involvement with Texaco by selling his 17.3 percent stake — which had made him the company's biggest shareholder — for $49 a share or $2.07 billion. The block trade was the single most expensive ever on the New York Stock Exchange, according to Catherine Maroney, a Big Board spokeswoman.

Texaco closed down $2.12½ at $49 a share.

Icahn declined to comment further and it was not known immediately how he planned to use proceeds of the sale. Icahn, who is chairman of Trans World Airlines Inc., bought the shares for an average cost of $36.50 apiece, and his profit on the transaction was estimated at close to $700 million. The New York Times reported today.

Senate Panel Gets Lowdown On The Cookies

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — An army marches on its stomach, Napoleon supposedly remarked, but senators say a 15-page set of specifications for government issue cookies may be carrying the concern with rations too far.

The specifications, showing the Pentagon pays equal attention to chocolate chips and computer chips, were read aloud Thursday at a hearing by the Senate Governmental Affairs subcommittee on oversight of government management.

The subcommittee was looking into the strict specifications for commercial and off-the-shelf products, along with excessive requirements, that have turned away would-be contractors.

"The cookies shall be well-baked," said Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, reading just before lunch from the guidelines for chocolate chip oatmeal cookies. "They shall be browned on the bottom surface and outer edges, but not appreciably browned on the top surface."

"They shall be wholly intact, free of checks or cracks. ... The cookies shall be tender and crisp with an appetizing flavor, free of a burnt or scorched flavor."

Specifications for sandwich cookies require "each cookie shall consist of two round base cakes with a layer of filling between them. ... The base cakes shall have been uniformly well-baked with a color ranging from not lighter than chip 27885 or darker than chip 13711."

"The color comparisons shall be made under ... sky daylight with the objects held in such a way as to avoid specular refraction (glossiness)."

"The filling shall be centered so that it does not protrude beyond the perimeter of the base cakes."

"Would Mrs. Fields comply?" Cohen teasingly asked Greg Saunders, the Pentagon's assistant for commercial acquisition.

"I suspect it would be too high quality a cookie," Saunders replied.

Saunders defended specification, saying the department has to have a number of specifications for food items because many remain on the shelf for up to five years.

On an even more serious note, Deputy Defense Secretary Donald Atwood promised to review the specifications that limit purchases of cheaper commercial products.

"I can only pledge to you that with the staff at the Defense Department we'll review some 50,000 specifications ... in great detail with the idea in mind of making use of commercial products wherever they're available," said the former vice chairman of General Motors Corp.

Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., chairman of the subcommittee, said recent legislation that requires the Pentagon to purchase, whenever possible, products already sold commercially or used by the government has had little effect.

"The real problem is that despite the 1986 law, the Pentagon remains hooked on the old way of doing business," Levin said.

Levin also noted that a recent study by the Center for Strategic and International Studies found that the number of companies competing for defense contracts has dropped from 118,000 to 38,000 over a five-year period.

Atwood described one example of strict specification. Government inspectors at a General Electric production line for military aircraft engines nearly equaled the number of workers, while employees building the same engines for commercial use were not scrutinized.

"It doesn't make sense to have that wide a disparity," Atwood said.

The deputy defense secretary attributed the high number of specifications to the publicity surrounding last summer's "Ill Wind" investigation into alleged Pentagon fraud and corruption in the acquisition process.

"There has been and is a natural tendency on people's part to bend over backwards to make sure it couldn't happen in this particular procurement," Atwood said. "And we do see a little overreaction because of the recent visibility."

But Atwood cautioned against legislative steps that could harm the department.

Whiter Teeth?

AFTER BEFORE

Commonly asked questions and answers concerning this procedure.

Question: "How long does the procedure take?"

Answer: This procedure takes only 15 to 20 minutes to start and the patient completes the treatment at home and to their desired degree of whiteness; however, on your first visit, the dentist must prepare you for the procedure and usually a normal one-hour appointment is sufficient. The results are very predictable when the patient follows the instructions to the letter. Most cases can be completed within a two week period, more complicated cases may require a longer period of time. Patients who follow the instructions properly may see results within the first three days of treatment.

Question: "If this is such a new procedure, how can I be sure it's safe?"

Answer: Although it is a new product, it is based on the older bleaching techniques that have been in use on teeth for over twenty years. When used properly, these techniques have proven to be extremely safe but overpriced for most people. It is a much milder medication than anything ever used before for this purpose and is priced where every patient can now afford to look their very best with a totally different and easier procedure.

Question: "How long will the results last?"

Answer: The procedure can be permanent with occasional and proper maintenance.

Senate Bogs Down On Spending Bill

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Senate is picking its way through a $3.3 billion bill aimed at financing agencies whose treasuries are running dry, but also toting provisions spreading federal largesse to lawmakers' pet projects.

Senate leaders had hoped to complete work on the measure Thursday and begin negotiations next week.

Fire Control Plan Ordered

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Interior Department is ordering strict fire control for national parks and wilderness areas, saying last summer's "let it burn" policy was "impractical and unprofessional."

A joint directive, embracing a task force report, was issued Thursday by Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan and Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter, whose department has jurisdiction over national forests.

There have been sizeable fires in national parks and forests already this spring in a number of states including Texas, Florida, Wyoming and Colorado.

Summer fire conditions "are being watched very closely," said George Berkley, a spokesman for the National Park Service. He added, however, that climate and other conditions give no suggestion that the fire season will be anywhere near as devastating as last year.

The task force, which was called to review federal fire management policies after last summer's fires at Yellowstone, had concluded that there are environmental benefits to allowing controlled fires, but that greater assurances must be shown that a fire cannot get out of control before it is allowed to burn.

The Interior Department endorsed all 15 recommendations of the task force, including one which called for stronger fire management policies and a ban on even controlled fires until the improvement management plans are put into effect.

Department spokesmen said all 26 national parks that have major fire prevention programs are preparing the tighter fire management programs outlined by the task force and no controlled fires will be allowed to burn in a park until the improved programs are in place.

"If a fire occurs at Yellowstone it will be fought immediately and be put out," said Berkley. He said he doubted that the prohibition against controlled, or "prescribed", fires will be lifted this summer in any of the parks.

There has been a moratorium on controlled fires in federal parks and wilderness areas since last August as a result of the controversy that erupted after the fires at Yellowstone.

While the new federal fire policy continues to endorse the "let it burn" philosophy in theory, it calls for tighter controls on such fires including more stringent monitoring to lessen the likelihood of a fire raging out of control.

Once the improved fire management programs are put into effect, officials at parks may allow some fires to burn under strict control, the department said. But among the added precautions are that a senior official at each park must closely monitor such a fire and "certify in writing daily that ... adequate resources are available to ensure that ... the fire will remain within prescribed boundaries and conditions."

"If these conditions cannot be met, the fire shall be declared a wildfire and suppressed," said the department.

with the House, which has already approved a $3.7 billion rendition of the bill. The legislation covers the final four months of fiscal 1989.

But the Senate spent much of its nearly 14 hours of work Thursday debating an assortment of amendments aimed at boosting federal anti-drug initiatives by as much as $1.8 billion. All of them failed by wide margins as lawmakers heeded Bush administration warnings that inclusion of the drug funds would pump up the federal deficit and could spark a veto of the entire bill.

"When are we going to end this effort to pile more money into this bill for drugs?" a frustrated Senate Appropriations Chairman Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., asked at one point.

The House bill includes $822 million for treatment programs, tougher law enforcement, and other anti-drug efforts.

Senate completion of a measure without any drug funds, now anticipated for next week, would augur a clash with the House when the two chambers try to work out a compromise bill. In a policy statement Thursday, the administration said it considered the Senate bill "a major improvement" over the House version.

The largest portion of both bills is $1.2 billion for health, benefit increases and other programs for veterans. The Department of Veterans Affairs has already begun curtailing the number of patients it treats at its hospitals and clinics, and further reductions have been threatened.

The Senate legislation provides $892 million for the Guaranteed Student Loan program for college students, $423 million for state foster care programs, $342 million for the expenses of battling last year's forest fires, $225 million for the food stamps program, $125 million for United Nations peacekeeping forces, and $100 million to help Soviet and other refugees to this country.

Also in the Senate measure is money for projects in the home states of many members of the appropriations panel, standard procedure for spending bills.

The legislation contains $75 million to rebuild a demolished 300-foot radio telescope in West Virginia, Byrd's home state; $7.3 million to clean up the oil spill in Republican Sen. Ted Stevens' Alaska; $1.6 million for job training in Philadelphia, represented by Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa.; and $200,000 for the University of South Carolina, compliments of Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., to study drug abuse among blacks.

Amendments adopted Thursday include one by Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., setting aside $275,000 for Kansas State University to provide information for farmers on coping with the drought.

Another provision urges the federal court in New York handling Eastern Airlines' bankruptcy proceedings to consider appointing an independent trustee to replace chief executive Frank Lorenzo in running the strike-bound carrier.

Another would provide an extra $1 million for development of orphan drugs, medications that companies find unprofitable to produce because the diseases they treat are so rare.

Attorney Charged

KINSTON, N.C. (AP) — The State Bureau of Investigation on Thursday formally charged former Kinston attorney Leland Heath Jr. with 11 counts of embezzlement.

A Lenoir County Grand Jury Monday handed down true bills of indictment against Heath, charging that he took funds from client's accounts for his personal use.

Heath is charged with embezzling funds from three separate clients while he served as their attorney. He was disbarred by the N.C. State Bar last year after becoming a target of the investigation, records show.

Banister and mother show off 'Kids Day' proclamations

Georgia Boy Hits Pay Dirt With His Call For 'Kids Day'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DAHLONEGA, Ga. — Eleven-year-old Larry Banister II is acknowledged to be the most precocious promoter in this old gold mining community now that his efforts in behalf of Kids' Day have begun to hit pay dirt.

And this definitely is a gold letter day for the blond, curly-haired boy from Dahlonega. Not only is today his 11th birthday and the last day of the school term. But thanks to Larry, it's also Children Appreciation Day in Juneau, Alaska.

Larry has a personal copy of the proclamation issued by Juneau Mayor Bruce Botelho.

"He's one of the mayors I wrote, asking him to proclaim a Kids' Day," said the talkative fifth grader with no doubts about being promoted to sixth grade.

What Larry's really interested in promoting at the moment is Kids' Day. During the past year or so, he has written hundreds of letters to politicians across the country, asking them to set aside a special day to honor kids.

"I got the idea a couple of years ago, on Grandparents Day," he said as he lounged on a couch in the office of his family's mortuary.

"We were told at school that it was Grandparents Day," he recalled. "I said to myself, 'There's a Mother's Day, and a Father's Day, even a Grandparents Day, so why not have a day honoring children? After all, we're the hope of the future, the ones who are going to have to clean up all this mess the older generation is leaving us.'"

Not being one to mess around himself, he sat right down and began his letter writing.

"I wore out three typewriter ribbons and used up all my dad's stationery," he said. "I got the names and addresses of the state legislators from my grandfather, who was the county coroner at the time. And I used my World Almanac to get the zip codes of all the big cities and sent those letters 'In Care of the Mayor.'"

It wasn't long before his efforts paid off. Dahlonega officials proclaimed Oct. 15 as Kids' Day. Officials in nearby Dawsonville followed suit on Dec. 6.

Gov. Joe Frank Harris fell into line with a statewide Kids' Day on Dec. 8.

Larry said Hawaii County, Hawaii, declared May 19 to be Kids' Day, "but Georgia is the only state I've gotten so far."

What he's shooting for is a national Kids' Day, maybe even a non-paid holiday honoring kids. He badgered his congressman, Democratic Rep. Ed Jenkins, into offering a resolution last year but the proposal failed.

This year, however, a similar resolution was offered by Rep. Joseph P. Kennedy III, D-Mass. The proposal, which would have the second Sunday in October national Children's Day, was approved by a voice vote in the House on May 9 and was sent to the Senate Judiciary Committee.

A spokesman in Kennedy's office said the congressman was influenced by his 8-year-old twin sons "who thought there should be a day honoring children."

Larry said he doesn't care what date is chosen but he wants it to be called "Kids' Day."

"It's a punchier name," he said, adding he'll go to Washington to lobby the Senate if the resolution doesn't get action soon.

His mom, Joyce Banister, said she wouldn't be surprised at anything her son does.

"We're real proud of Larry," she said. "He's always reading or playing with his computer. He also likes soccer but what he really likes is politics."

Larry, who's sure he'll have his own political career someday, has even tried to enlist President Bush, although he hasn't been able to reach the president.

"However, I have heard from more than 150 state legislators around the country," he said. "Almost all of them told me they liked my idea for a Kids' Day. Though one old sour puss did tell me it wasn't necessary because every day is kids' day. He did admit, though, that he probably sounded like a parent."

Counselor Sentenced

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A federal judge has sentenced a former Hendersonville investment counselor to five years in prison Thursday for using a clients' municipal bonds to get a loan for himself.

Daniel Nelson Dewey, 46, pleaded guilty to one count of fraudulently receiving the $100,000 bank loan. He admitted using $200,000 worth of bonds, belonging to the estate of Jeannie Robell, as collateral during the Nov. 17, 1987, transaction.

Dewey told the First Commercial Bank in Hendersonville the bonds were his. Mrs. Robell, a Hendersonville resident, was a client of Dewey's from February 1986 until she died in August 1987.

Mutilated Boy Leaves Hospital

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TACOMA, Wash. — A 7-year-old boy mutilated in a sexual attack is acting as if nothing is wrong after his release from the hospital: he wants to return to school and get a new Nintendo game, his mother says.

People shocked by the attack have donated about $200,000 to help the boy resume a normal life.

"It's a miracle," Helen Harlow, the child's mother, said Wednesday after he was released from Mary Bridge's Hospital.

"The fact that he's healing so rapidly and that his spirits are so high and that the trauma doesn't seem to have made any kind of mental block is something else," she said in an interview with KING-TV in Seattle.

He was raped and choked May 20 by a man who lured him into the woods while the boy was riding his bike. The child's penis was cut off in the attack.

Earl Kenneth Shriver, who authorities said has a history of violence against young people, has been charged in the assault.

Ms. Harlow said her son, who has a different last name, is eager to resume a normal life and wants to go back to school.

"He's not looking at this as a problem. He's just looking at it as how it is and now let's get on with life. 'Where's the next Nintendo game? I needed Zelda One, not Zelda Two.'"

Ms. Harlow added that she wants to do what she can "to make sure this kind of thing never happens again and to thank everybody that's been so wonderful."

Officials said Wednesday that people have donated $200,000 to a trust fund and the hospital waived $12,000 in bills. In addition, the state Crime Victim Compensation fund most likely will pay up to $150,000 for his remaining medical and counseling bills.

The state pays up to that amount for anyone who is an innocent victim of a felony or gross misdemeanor, said Mark McDermott, who administers the program.

The boy's mother has said neither she nor his father have medical insurance to cover the child.

Police Detective Stan Mowre, who led the fund-raising effort, said details of how the "Community Cares Trust Fund" will be administered are being worked out. But he said, "All moneys will go for expenditure of the boy for education and medical bills."

Just how much the boy's medical and counseling care will cost over his lifetime remains a big question. Doctors say the boy will need reconstructive surgery to rebuild his penis, and he already has begun seeing a mental health counselor.

Throughout the state, people have dug into their pockets at Elks meetings, grocery stores and taverns to help. Mail stuffed with letters, checks and cash has arrived by the bucket at Pacific First Federal Savings Bank's James Center branch, said manager Jim Bichsel.

The mail run peaked Tuesday when the bank received 1,500 checks and letters, said Debbie Anderson, personal banking representative. There also have been two offers of computers and a trip to Disneyland.

"It's kind of fun," Bichsel said. "There's a sense of unity among the staff to get it done for him. It's part of their contribution."

Parents Charged In Death

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NORTH CHICAGO, Ill. — Parents accused of forcing their baby to drink acid seemed like average people, but apparently had devised a scheme to collect money in a bogus product tampering case, an investigator said.

"I've never seen a case that is as heinous or violent. It's beyond imagination," said Detective Johnnie Phelps Jr.

Shelia Smith, 26, and Ricky Irby Sr., 27, have been charged with murder in the death of Quinten Irby, who was 3 months old in 1984 when he was taken to a hospital with acid burns in his mouth and throat.

Associate Judge Harry Hartel Thursday ordered the parents held in lieu of $1 million bond each. They are to be arraigned Wednesday.

The parents said Quinten had ingested tainted baby formula, and he lingered near death for more than two years, unable to eat, drink, speak or breathe on his own.

The baby died Aug. 26, 1986.

Irby filed a lawsuit in August 1987, charging negligence against the baby formula maker, Abbott Laboratories of North Chicago, and the grocery store where he said the formula was bought.

Irby withdrew the lawsuit a year ago.

Police said money probably was the motive for the poisoning.

Soviet Rocket Falls Over North America

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A Soviet rocket that launched three satellites into orbit fell back toward earth Wednesday over the U.S.-Canadian border, a spokesman for the U.S. Space Command said today.

It said American officials had no information on whether any fragments of the rocket actually hit the ground, or whether they all burned up in their plunge through the atmosphere.

The statement came after the Soviet news agency Tass carried a brief report on the incident involving the third stage of a Proton rocket booster and said Soviet authorities had started an inquiry into it.

Capt. Thomas Niemann of the U.S. Space Command at Colorado Springs said the Soviet rocket booster was tracked back into the atmosphere on Wednesday at 2:54 p.m. EDT at 48.5 degrees north and 266.9 degrees east, which would place it over Minnesota's border with Canada. Tass had announced the launch earlier in the day.

Command spokesman Dugald Gillies said the agency keeps track of 7,000 objects orbiting around the earth but can only determine where and when they enter the atmosphere and not whether any parts actually fall to the earth.

Gillies said man-made objects fall out of orbit daily but rarely draw much attention unless the re-entries occur over populated areas at night where they can be seen. Objects very rarely reach the ground, he said.

A Tass report on Wednesday said the rocket launch was designed to test elements of a global space navigation system which is being created to track civil aviation aircraft and vessels of the Soviet maritime and fishing fleets.

Awareness Group To Meet Saturday

The Christian Awareness Organization will have its 11th annual recognition meeting Saturday at the Ramada Inn. The meeting will honor about 23 people from across the state and Virginia with awards and monetary gifts for their achievements in various areas including education, music, humanities and civic services, said Elder Milton Sutton, president and founder of the organization. "Our goals are to produce and upgrade the Christian morale, to inspire and project better ways of living in the community and the city," he said. Teen-age pregnancy and drug-related problems are major concerns of the organization, Sutton said. "The main focus is to help educate people in various areas. Therefore we sponsor scholarships for higher learning." The organization also conducts seminars and lectures, he said. About 300 people are expected to attend the formal event, which begins at 7 p.m., Sutton said. Guests include state Rep. Ed Warren, Greenville Mayor Ed Carter and Jacqueline Padgett, Miss N.C. USA. Entertainment and remarks will be provided by Debra Henry, Jerry Butler, Marie Manigo Scott, Debra Dixon Trahan, the Eastern District Mass Choir of United Holy Church of America, Bonita Burney and Cherry Fields, Sutton said.

Catholics Ask Bush To Clarify School Stand

By George W. Cornell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Chieftains of Roman Catholic education are pressing President Bush to clear up — publicly — whether he wants parents allowed to put some of their taxes into schooling they choose for their children.

That, essentially, would be the effect of tuition tax credits for parents of pupils in church and other non-public schools.

It's a longtime explosive political issue on which the "education president," as Bush says he aspires to be, has become subtly enmeshed and on which Catholic educators want straight answers.

"We assume a meeting with him is going to come through," says Sister Catherine McNamee, president of the National Catholic Educational Association. "We're still waiting."

She and other Catholic educational leaders, plus 11 archbishops who co-signed a letter from Cardinal Joseph Bernardin of Chicago, have asked Bush for a meeting June 9 to clarify his position.

He indicated support for tuition tax credits in his campaign. But a comment last March 29 "gave the impression he's no longer interested in it," Sister McNamee said in a telephone interview.

"We're still willing to give him the benefit of the doubt," she said, but want him to set the record straight, in a public way.

Bernardin, in his letter signed by other prelates, suggested Bush had a debt to Catholics since, because of his campaign commitments, "Catholics played a significant role in your successful election bid."

"The question of parental choice in education is a vital and crucial issue in our nation today," he told Bush, and church educators want him to "clarify misconceptions and to address questions or misgivings you might have."

In his March comments, Bush said he was "intrigued with the concept of tuition tax credits" but that it is "the obligation of all taxpayers to support a public education system."

He said parents of non-public school students have a right "to shell out, in addition to the tax money, tuition money but that they should not get a break for that."

Bush's press secretary subsequently qualified the comments, saying Bush has not shifted his commitments, but current budget constraints prevent considering tuition tax credits.

Despite the elaborations, Bush's comments have "cast a shadow of confusion on our previous perceptions," says Sister Anne Leonard, vice president of educational administrators of the NEA.

In her letter to Bush, jointly signed by other Catholic education officials and school superintendents in major cities, she said the meeting is needed to dispel confusion.

"We are not asking you or the federal government to subsidize our religion," she said. "We do not want that."

"We do believe firmly that parents have a constitutional right to choose the educational milieu for their children without penalty" and "to benefit directly from their educational tax dollars."

Catholicism's vast educational enterprise, serving 7.6 million students at all levels, includes 9,000 elementary and secondary schools.

Most of them, especially in urban areas, enroll both Catholics and children of varied religions. Many are too poor to pay, but tuitions of those who can and supplementary contributions pay the multibillion dollar costs.

"Parents should be able to choose the kind of education and schools they want for their children," Sister McNamee said in a telephone interview, but many now can't because it

Poverty Cited

GENEVA (AP) — After a decade of consultations with medical professionals and others, the Christian Medical Commission of the World Council of Churches concludes that the No. 1 cause of disease is poverty.

Despite the value of medicines, immunization programs and medical equipment, the CMC found these do not significantly alleviate that main cause of illness.

ELCA Ends Year With Fiscal Deficit

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MILWAUKEE — The recently merged Evangelical Lutheran Church in America ended its first fiscal year with a deficit of $15.8 million — spending $104.3 million but with income of only $88.5 million.

Bishop Herbert W. Chilstrom, head of the 5 million-member denomination, says the situation requires "some painful adjustments in the coming months," but the "long-range picture for the church is good."

He says members apparently have increased giving at the local level but cut back in giving to the churchwide organization on the assumption it was "doing all right."

Among steps being taken to deal with the problem are a freeze on staff enlargements, limiting salary boosts to a maximum of 2.5 percent and reducing the number of persons traveling to regional events.

The deficit is being covered by reserves and proceeds from sale of property, mainly former headquarters of the three merging denominations before locating here.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING TOWN OF BETHEL

June 6, 1989, 7:00 PM Bethel Town Hall

The citizens of Bethel are hereby notified of a hearing to consider the submission of a Community Development Block Grant Economic Development application. The proposed application will be for approximately $425,000. The funds will be used for the extension of a sewer line 6,000 feet south of Bethel along N.C. 11. The sewer line will serve an industry which plans to create one hundred (100) new jobs.

All citizens are encouraged to attend this meeting. Those unable to attend may submit comments in writing which will be entered into the record.

Questions before the hearing should be directed to Martha J. Mewborn, Town Clerk.

Frank M. Hemingway, Mayor

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

This is a dramatized version of facts taken from the Book of Joshua, intending to show some of the customs of these ancient and traditional times.

OTHNIEL'S TRIUMPH

CALEB, SON OF JEPHUNNEH, HAS SAID THAT WHOEVER TAKES THE CITY OF KIR-JATH-SE-PHER, LAST STRONGHOLD OF THE GIANTS, WILL RECEIVE HIS DAUGHTER AS WIFE...

TO WIN CALEB'S DAUGHTER ACH-SAH, A MAN MUST TAKE THE STRONGHOLD OF THE LAST OF THE GIANTS?

BEHOLD, OTHNIEL! CALEB'S DAUGHTER IS COMELY TO THE EYE - ONE COULD NEVER WISH FOR A BETTER WIFE!

COME! LET US SEE THIS CITY OF THE GIANTS!

AND OTHNIEL, ACCOMPANIED BY SOME ADVENTUROUS YOUNG MEN, SPES OUT THE CITY OF KIR-JATH-SE-PHER.

Lutheran Challenges Pope To Be 'Equal'

OSLO, Norway — Norway's top Lutheran bishop challenged Pope John Paul II to view Scandinavia's dominant church as an equal.

The frank exchange with Bishop Andreas Aarflot of Oslo came on John Paul's first day in Norway, which has only 28,000 Roman Catholics. The pope is to travel north today to the Arctic Circle.

The five-country visit is the first ever by a pope to Scandinavia, where the Protestant Reformation vanquished Catholicism four centuries ago.

Differences between the Vatican and the Protestants are expected to be heard as the pope travels across the area for 10 days.

Most people in this capital of 450,000 people appeared to go about their business as usual as the Catholic leader moved from talks with King Olav V and government leaders to a Mass attended by around 10,000 faithful and a meeting with Aarflot in a 14th century fortress.

After meeting with priests and Catholic laymen this morning, the pope heads toward the Arctic Circle with a stop in the city of Trondheim, 300 miles north of Oslo.

He will participate in an ecumenical meeting in a Lutheran cathedral in the city that was once the seat of Catholic power in all of Scandinavia.

John Paul was then scheduled to travel to Tromsø, more than 200 miles north of the Arctic Circle, for an evening prayer service.

Aarflot and the pope exchanged speeches in English and applauded each other's remarks in an hourlong meeting in a hall richly decorated with tapestries and portraits of Norwegian royalty.

In his speech, Aarflot said there were many signs that the Roman Catholic Church is breaking away "from what many observers and historians would call its isolation and self-sufficiency through the centuries."

But he said much more needs to be done as far as Lutherans were concerned. "In a setting like the Scandinavian countries, where the Roman Catholic Church is a small minority in an overwhelming Lutheran area, it is not easy to accept that our relationship with our Catholic brothers and sisters cannot be seen as church-to-church relationship."

Students Study Mormon Gospel

By Joan Boudreaux

Soon after sunup every weekday, nine months out of every year, teen-agers of the Greenville ward of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints are awake and at study.

Later each day, they join their fellow public school students for full schedules of academic and extracurricular activities.

Seminary, as the four-year program is called wherever Mormons live and rear their children, is a four-year Christian gospel study course for youth.

Three Greenville ward seminarians — Christy Davenport, Kerry Mortensen and Joy Carman — recently were honored during a celebration for seminary graduates from throughout eastern North Carolina held at the LDS Stake Center in Kinston.

Seminary is composed of study for high school students of the principles and values contained in the Old and New Testaments of the Bible, The Book of Mormon and other Latter-day Saints scriptures.

Classes meet every weekday morning at 6:30 at the Mormon Church at 307 Martinsborough Road in Greenville. "Although it is hard to get up at 4:45 in the morning, I enjoy seminary once I get there," said Miss Carman, an Ayden resident. "Learning principles that help me to be stronger makes a good start for each day."

According to Rose High senior Miss Davenport, learning the gospel principles and values "has not made me perfect, but has taught me the correct paths in order to get there. Seminary has helped me make many decisions. It has helped me to grow up in many respects."

"I like the scripture mastery. It's fun learning to find the scriptures with little hints and clues," says Mortensen, referring to a game the students play at the end of each class. One student gives a key word or a key principle of a scripture and the other students compete to see which one finds the scripture first.

The three graduates said that the 14 class members of their class seem like a family to them. "There is not a single person in our class that, in some way, I don't love and admire," said Miss Davenport. Similarly, Carman and Mortensen said they have become close to those they see in class every morning. "We may not look bright that early in the morning, but we have fun together," said Mortensen.

They also speak about the love that their teacher, Elizabeth

Whitley, puts into their lessons.

Ms. Whitley, a Greenville resident who also works in the personnel department at East Carolina University, is enthusiastic when she talks about her students. "Today so many neglect the scriptures and question the word of God. These young people, without coercion from parents or promise of any material reward, forego many social activities to devote hours of weekday study to the gospel of Jesus Christ," she said.

"I believe that the glory of God is intelligence," Ms. Whitley said. She spends many hours each week studying to teach five mornings a week.

"Proper education of the youth" receives large emphasis in the LDS Church.

President Brigham Young, a leader of the early church, established schools in Provo and Logan, Utah, where the scriptures have been taught along with other branches of education ever since. In several states in the western United States, seminary is a part of the public schools' extracurricular programs since so many students in the public systems are from Mormon families.

In the east, they are usually held at local churches. "Our church has the goal of having schools of this kind in every city or town where LDS members reside," said John O. Nelson, bishop of the Greenville church. "With this emphasis for book learning, there has been a phenomenal growth in the LDS Seminary Program. There are about 300,000 seminary students in the church today," Nelson said.

He added, "Our children are taught to sustain themselves by their own industry and skill, and not only to do this, but to help sustain and teach others."

He Thinks Of Children As His

Dear Abby: With all the step-families in today's society, maybe your answer can benefit others with the same problem.

"Ira" and I have been married for seven years. When he married me, I had two children, ages 2 and 3 years old, from a previous marriage. Ira is the only father my children have ever known.

Now, my problem: Whenever we are with my mother-in-law and she introduces us to anybody, she says, "This is my son, Ira, his wife, Mary, and Mary's two children," emphasizing the fact that they are my children, but not Ira's.

These children are her grandchildren; they call her "Grandma." I have told Ira that I am hurt and offended by his mother's behavior, and since he has been a father to these children since they were infants, he should ask his mother to please refer to them as "our" children, which is the way Ira refers to them.

Ira says his mother doesn't mean anything by it, and I am being too sensitive. Meanwhile, she continues to hurt me this way every chance she gets. What do you suggest? — Mary

Dear Mary: Ask Ira to please be more supportive. But don't you permit this to become a divisive issue in your marriage.

What's wrong with saying: "Mother, you hurt me when you emphasize so emphatically that these children are mine. Ira has been a wonderful father to them, and he refers to them as his children. I wish you would too."

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Dear Abby: I have been dating this perfectly wonderful man steadily for more than two years. I am 30 and divorced (no children) and he is 38 and has never been married. He tells me he loves me, and I have fallen head over heels in love with him. He treats me like a queen and we are perfect for each other.

The problem: He does not want to make a commitment. He says he was hurt eight years ago and is afraid of being hurt again, so he refuses to make any kind of commitment.

What can I do to change his mind? — Dead End

Dear Dead End: Nothing. Just be grateful that he's being honest instead of leading you on. When a person says, "I was hurt once, so I am afraid of making a commitment," do not walk — run for the nearest exit. There is no future with this man.

Just because a person ate a bad meal once shouldn't stop that person from eating.

Dear Abby: I am personally indebted to your Operation Dear Abby, because had it not been for you, this native Iowan never would have met a U.S. Marine named John Patrick of New Jersey.

We started corresponding when he answered my letter in 1985, and what a wonderful long-distance romance it was! We've been happily married for two years.

Abby, I am curious — as I'm sure others are — to know just how many lives were changed when your readers sent cards or letters to lonely servicemen (and women) to make their Christmas away from home a little brighter.

Why don't you do a survey? It would make interesting reading, and encourage others to send cards, cookies and letters to the troops away from home during the holidays. — Kary Williams, Cedar Rapids, Iowa

Dear Kary: Great idea. Readers, if you, a friend, relative or buddy found romance or a mate through Operation Dear Abby, please let me hear from you. Write to Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069.

Miss Skinner Is Married To Mr. Natale

OAHU, Hawaii — Mary Julia Skinner and Stephen Anthony Natale, both of Greenville, N.C., were married May 23 at Waimea Falls on the island of Oahu.

The Rev. Dana Hunt conducted the double-ring ceremony.

The bride received B.A. and M.P.A. degrees at East Carolina University. The bridegroom attended Farmville Central High School and served in the U.S. Air Force. She is employed by Mendenhall Student Center at ECU and he is employed by Combined Insurance of America.

The couple resides in Greenville after a wedding trip to Waikiki Beach.

Planning Ahead Will Help Eliminate Excess Baggage

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Traveling light is a dream of many women, and one way to do it is to pack a few basic clothes and a lot of accent pieces.

"Taking the right accessories along is easier when you plan your wardrobe and then work your plan," says Terry Mayer, a New York fashion consultant and jewelry designer.

Basics, she says, can be made to fit the occasion with the proper shoes, belt, handbag and jewelry, scarf or hat.

"A diary of what you have worn with your favorite separates or suits makes sense," she says. "If you know what you have, you can plan what you need."

One basic that is coming around again is the shirtwaist dress.

"Someone once said it has a thousand and one ways of looking," Terry Mayer says. "It is like adding the dressing to a salad to give it its name."

The shirtwaist, of course, can be of any one of a multitude of fabrics. It can be straight from the shoulder to the shirttail hem, to be cinched by a belt or tie or left loose.

Medicaid Problems Persist For Some Elderly

CHANGING TIMES

As life expectancies lengthen and the number of people over 85 doubles by the year 2000, more and more 40- and 50-year-olds are going to be called upon to help their parents manage and protect their assets.

With nursing home costs averaging $22,000 a year, about half the patients who foot the bill see their assets wiped out, according to the Health Insurance Association of America.

Help may be available through Medicaid, the medical assistance program funded by federal and state governments. But to be eligible, an applicant must be virtually impoverished, with cash and other nonexempt assets of as little as $2,000 for an individual and $3,000 for a couple in some states. One big exception: As long as one of your parents is living at home, he or she can't be forced to sell it to pay for the other's nursing home care. Nearly all other assets are fair game, however.

tion introduced a new wrinkle. In the past a spouse couldn't be forced to pay for more than a month of care of an institutionalized spouse applying for Medicaid. Starting this year, however, the spouse at home can be required to dip into his or her assets.

Here's how it works: Medicaid totals up the nonexempt assets of both husband and wife and each is given credit for half. The spouse, the wife, say, who stays at home can keep assets from her half worth up to $60,000. Anything over that is earmarked by Medicaid to pay for her husband's care. If the half comes to less than $12,000, she gets enough of the total assets to reach the $12,000 minimum, if possible. The law also sets a ceiling, usually $1,500, and a floor, currently about $800, on her monthly income.

How can your parents protect their property? Their options are limited. Setting up a trust won't work since transferred assets will be figured into the ability to pay for a parent's care if the trustee has discretion to use the trust's income or principal for the parent's benefit. Such a trust is called a Medicaid qualifying trust.

Your parents might be tempted to try an end run around the rules by giving their assets to you or selling them to you at a bargain price. But that tactic won't elude Uncle Sam, either. Under the new Medicaid rules, a parent can be ineligible for benefits for up to 30 months following a transfer of property for less than fair market value to anyone other than a spouse.

Of course, your parents can outflank the government by transferring their property more than 30 months before one of them will be applying for Medicaid. However, that assumes they can estimate when they might need assistance, or have pockets deep enough to get through the waiting period.

Your best strategy, advises attorney Myron Greenberg of Larkspur, Calif., is to look for a good long-term-care insurance policy that pays for four years of nursing home care. If your parent is still in the nursing home after 1½ years, assets can be transferred to you or to someone else. The 30 months remaining on the policy will help cover the Medicaid waiting period.

If you contribute to your parent's financial support, you may get your earthly reward in the form of tax breaks.

Dependency exemption: You will be able to claim your parent as a dependent if all of the following conditions apply: You contribute more than half of his or her support, your parent does not file a joint return, and he or she has gross income of less than $2,000 a year. If you and other siblings together provide more than half the support, any one of you (but only one of you) who supplies more than 10 percent can claim the exemption.

Dependent-care tax credit: If your elderly parent lives with you and you have to hire someone to care for him or her while you work, you can get an income tax credit of as much as $720 to offset up to $2,400 in expenses for one dependent and as much as $1,440 to offset up to $4,800 for two or more.

Dependent-care reimbursement: If your employer offers such a plan, you can pay for up to $5,000 a year in dependent-care expenses in pretax dollars. It works like this: You estimate your expenses for the coming year. That amount is deducted from your salary and you don't pay taxes on it. You then report your dependent-care expenses to your employer periodically and get reimbursed from the money that has been set aside. One potential catch: If any money remains in the account at the end of the year, you lose it.

Medical-care deduction: If your parent is your dependent, or would be except that he or she files a joint return or has gross income of more than $2,000, you can deduct medical expenses you pay on your parent's behalf.

However, medical expenses are deductible only to the extent they exceed 7.5 percent of adjusted gross income. If it's easier for your parents to meet that threshold than it is for you, you might consider giving them the money to pay their own medical bills so they can take the deduction. But be aware that if it exceeds $10,000 a year, you will be making a taxable gift.

When you pay the money directly to a health care provider, such as a nursing home, there's an unlimited exclusion from the gift tax as long as the contribution is not reimbursed.

Time Away From Children Is Essential For Some Parents

REDBOOK

Parents don't have to suffer separation anxiety when they take a vacation without the children, provided the children are the right age for the experience.

Dr. Benjamin Spock, in his parenting column in the current issue of Redbook, writes that a week away from the children can give parents, especially overworked mothers, a much-needed rest.

"As strange as it may seem," Spock wrote, "I have found that some mothers crave a vacation most when their first baby is only 2 or 3 months old."

"Why? Because the first-time mother has never before been responsible for a totally helpless being, one who can't explain what's wrong except by crying. And, to the new parent, the baby seems to be crying, or at least fussing, a good part of the time." Spock said he was reminded of this recently when he babysat for his new twin grandchildren, who seemed to be whimpering or grunting or squeaking every few minutes.

"Fortunately," he wrote, "taking such a break is not out of the question for new parents, since babies before the age of 3 months do not appear to distinguish sharply between familiar and unfamiliar caregivers."

He did suggest vacationing parents either use a familiar caregiver or hire a sitter who can stay in the home a few days before the parents leave and spend time with the baby.

In dealing with a child over the age of 3 months, it is important to consider the psychological states through which children pass.

"During the 3-to-5 month period," he wrote, "we don't yet know how a long-term separation affects babies, so we can't say it's harmless."

By the age of 5 months, babies are able to distinguish between regular caregivers (mother, father or babysitter) and other people, and they show an uneasiness or fear with strangers.

Between the ages of 5 months and a year-and-a-half, Spock wrote, the mother-child bond becomes so strong babies are likely to become depressed if their mothers are absent for longer than a day. They are visibly sad, they cry more than usual and have poor appetites.

"Since separation from the mother can, at this stage, be traumatic to the child's sense of security, parents should consider delaying a vacation without the child until he is better able to handle their absence," Spock wrote.

Between 1½ and 3 years, a child begins to develop a taste for independence from his parents but is still keenly dependent on them, particularly his mother. He is torn between wanting to explore by himself and wanting to remain safely at her side.

Experts Say Women Should Not Delay Having Children

LADIES' HOME JOURNAL

Experts today are encouraging women to have children as early as possible, depending on their circumstances.

"If a woman is 35 or 36, I tell her to get on with it," says Dr. Luella Klein, professor and chairman of the department of obstetrics and gynecology at Emory University in Atlanta.

In a recent report in Ladies' Home Journal, experts from the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists warned about risks affecting women who delay childbirth until their late 30s or beyond.

First, they have statistically higher chances than younger women of having a baby with Down's syndrome, a birth defect marked by mental retardation and physical defects. Second, they run a slightly higher risk of having a miscarriage.

After age 35, fertility declines for several reasons. Some women ovulate less frequently and there's a greater chance one has had or may develop endometriosis or infections that affect the fallopian tubes.

Thanks to modern prenatal tests, women who do get pregnant after 35 can find out whether their babies have serious birth defects fairly early in pregnancy. One common method is amniocentesis, a test of amniotic fluid to check for fetal abnormalities. After testing, women have the option of deciding whether to continue the pregnancy. Overall, however, a woman's chances of delivering a healthy baby after 35 are very good.

Stock And Market Reports

By The Associated Press
HOGS: Market 50 cents to $1 higher at N.C. buying stations. Kinston, Spivey's Corner, Murfreesboro, Robersonville, Siler City 44.50; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Chadbourne, Ayden, Laurinburg and Benson 44.50; Wilson 44.50; sows: (500 pounds up) Fayetteville 32.00; Wallace 33.00; Spivey's Corner 33.00; Rowland 33.00.

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 62.00 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. 60 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed with a preliminary weighted average of 62.98 cents. The market is firm and the live supply is adequate for a mostly moderate to good demand. Average weights are desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina 2,730,000, compared to 2,315,000 last Friday.

HENS: N.C. hen market was steady. Supplies fully adequate for a moderate demand. Prices paid per pound, day of negotiation, generally for slaughter the following week, heavy types, 7 pounds and up, 11 cents at farm buyer loading.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn 1 to 2 cents lower, at mostly $2.73-$2.84 in the East; mostly $2.91-$3.00 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans 6 cents higher at mostly $6.85-$7.10 in the East; mostly $6.86-$6.88 in the Piedmont; wheat $3.43-$3.54; new crop corn $2.27-$2.57; new crop soybeans $5.95-$6.25. Exchange rates for P.I.K. certificates were steady to 1/2 percent higher and ranged from 97 to 99 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market jumped ahead today, responding to employment statistics that raised hopes for an easier Federal Reserve credit policy and lower interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 15.25 to 2,505.88 in the first half hour of trading.

Gainers outnumbered losers by more than 4 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 781 up, 180 down and 369 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 49.74 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

The Labor Department reported that nonfarm payroll employment increased by 101,000 in May — only about half of the amount projected by economists at leading brokerage firms.

Janet Norwood, commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, described job growth as "very slow."

Traders seized on the data as evidence that the Federal Reserve might soon relax its credit policy, seeking to cushion the economy against the risks of a recession.

Interest rates dropped sharply in the credit markets. Prices of long-term government bonds, which move in the opposite direction from interest rates, rose about $10 for each $1,000 in face value.

Texaco led the active list, up 1/4 at 49%. The stock fell 2 1/4 points Thursday as financier Carl Icahn unloaded his holdings of more than 42 million Texaco shares.

USX, meanwhile, slipped back 5/8 to 36 3/8 after taking a 2 3/8-point jump Thursday. News of the Texaco transaction prompted speculation that Icahn might be preparing a deal for USX, in which he also has long held a large stake.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained 1.16 to 180.79. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.06 at 359.15.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 10.48 points to 2,490.63.

we've never forgotten it. And I don't know whether his wife has forgotten my boosting her across the fence into the bird sanctuary," the president added.

The president, an avid sportsman, was clearly pleased with his host's choice of guests. He swung an imaginary club when golf's Masters champion, Nick Faldo, came through the receiving line.

And when Thatcher asked, "Do you know Virginia Wade?" he replied, "I feel as if I do as a tennis fan."

Later, Bush thanked Thatcher for having "adequately accommodated my insatiable quest for being the name dropper of the year by the distinguished guests here." Other famous Britons on the guest list included composer Andrew Lloyd Webber of "Cats" fame and comedian John Cleese, star of "A Fish Called Wanda."

called his crime "the worst mistake that I ever made in my life."

Parkin's role "as front man and the individual to whom the money was to be paid kept the conspiracy afloat," Aronica said.

Nine days after sources say he tried to commit suicide with an overdose of sleeping pills, Parkin, 65, pleaded guilty on March 27 to charges he indirectly paid bribes to Berlin for information to help his corporate clients get lucrative contracts.

After his guilty plea, Parkin was a star witness against two Teledyne Industries Inc. executives who were convicted in April of conspiracy in connection with the scheme to obtain inside information on a contract to provide radar test gear to the military.

Berlin, 51, also testified at the trial, admitting that he took thousands of dollars of bribes from defense consultants in return for information that would help private companies bid on lucrative contracts.

Parkin and Berlin could each receive maximum 25-year prison terms and be fined up to $750,000 for their crimes.

Postal Union Threatens Boycott

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A union representing 365,000 postal workers says its members will slice up any Sears, Roebuck and Co. credit cards they hold and boycott the retail giant unless it removes mini post offices from 11 of its stores.

The American Postal Workers Union said Thursday it also was considering asking for a nationwide labor boycott of Sears if it ignored the demand.

"We view this as a menace to postal jobs and postal workers and the general public," union President Moe Biller said in a telephone interview. "Sears today, K-Mart tomorrow, Wal-Mart the next day and JC Penney after that. Then the time would come when they say we don't need any post office retail windows."

The Sears pilot program began in October. Biller said he has complained privately to the Postal Service and Sears but was mounting a public campaign now because postal officials informed him last week as many as 100 more of the in-store counters are planned.

A Sears spokeswoman said the Chicago-based retailer planned to continue the pilot program at least through its one-year anniversary in October but said he knew of no expansion plans.

Postal Service spokesman Ralph Stewart said when the program began the agency said it would add more postal counters in Sears stores if the experiment proved successful. But he said he was not aware of any current plans to add more.

In a publication mailed APWU members this week, Biller urged the postal workers to sign and mail a form letter addressed to Sears Chairman Edward A. Brennan. "Your company's pilot postal venture with the USPS is nothing less than an attempt to replace us with a low-wage, nonunion work force," the letter said. "It is a classic example of how union-busting managers use privatization to try to crush trade unions for the benefit of profiteers."

The 11 postal counters in Sears stores now are confined to the Chicago area and Madison, Wis. The counters are run by nonunion Sears employees.

"We feel the issue is one between the union and Postal Service management," Sears spokeswoman Mary Jean Houde said. "We do regret of course that the postal union feels it necessary to threaten this action."

In a statement, the Postal Service said the units at Sears and 6,000 like

Trial Delayed

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — A superior court judge Thursday postponed the trial of a Burke County man charged with first degree murder because the defendant hurt himself in a car accident the night before.

Philip Reid Payne Jr., 25, accused in the Halloween night shooting of his second wife, 25-year-old Pamela Berry Payne, appeared in court with his legs swathed in bandages and covered with ice packs.

One of his attorneys, Larry McMahon, said Payne suffered first- and second-degree burns after he opened the hood of his car, spraying scalding water from a broken radiator on his legs.

The trial is scheduled to resume Monday.

them nationwide, largely in neighborhood drug and convenience stores, were designed to benefit consumers.

"We believe it represents the best interests of our employees and we want to assure them that nothing about these efforts is a threat to their job security."

Intoxicated

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The pilot of a single-engine plane that crashed outside Pittsboro last summer was legally drunk at the time and had limited driving privileges, says a National Transportation Safety Board report released this week.

James Jun Kang, 26, of Durham, had flown to Myrtle Beach, S.C., with another pilot and was returning by himself to Chapel Hill when his plane crashed into trees about 4 a.m. Aug. 21, killing him.

Final Rites Held For Bob Waters

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CULLOWHEE — More than 1,500 people paid last respects to former Western Carolina football coach Bob Waters, a man who suffered from a deadly muscle disease the past five years but took time to "stop and smell the roses."

Waters, who was removed in March as the Cata-mounts' coach, died Monday of amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, or ALS. He was 50.

"The thing I'll always remember about Coach Waters is that he was never bitter and never complained," Don Dalton, who played and coached under Waters, said Thursday. "He always remained optimistic. He always wanted to know how (you) were doing."

Dalton recalled a day this spring when he drove Waters home from football practice; when they arrived, Waters saw a bird singing in a nearby tree. Despite his condition, Dalton said Waters sat in the car, looking and listening.

"If I had been in that kind of condition, I don't think I would have been able to think about a bird," Dalton said.

The funeral service was held on the astroturf of WCU's football stadium, the site of Waters' greatest triumphs during his 20-year coaching career.

Numerous coaches were in attendance, including

South Carolina's Sparky Woods, N.C. State's Dick Sheridan, Furman's Jimmy Satterfield, Marshall's George Chaump, Louisville assistant Ty Smith and Citadel assistant Don Powers. Woods is a former coach at Appalachian State; Sheridan at Furman.

"We shared a very special friendship and that's very difficult to do in college athletics," Sheridan told The Asheville Citizen. "And I don't have many of those relationships. But Bob was much bigger than the outcome of any one game. That was one of the signs of his greatness."

"I'm a better coach for having competed against him," he added. "It's a great loss for our (coaching) profession."

"He made all of us better people through his gallantry and his character," said Larry Pope, executive editor of The Asheville Citizen-Times and a longtime friend of Waters. "He enlarged our capacity to have a little more compassion, a lot more courage and a great deal more dignity."

After the funeral service, a private graveside service was held at the Cullowhee United Methodist Church Cemetery.

Waters was hired as head football coach at WCU in 1969 and led the Cata-mounts to a 9-1 season. His teams were successful into the early 1980s, including an appearance in the NCAA I-AA championship game in 1983.

The following year, Waters was diagnosed with ALS. He eventually lost control of his arms and legs and was forced to use a microphone to amplify his voice and a respirator to ease his breathing. He also was confined to a wheelchair because of the disease, which attacks the body's nervous system and renders muscles useless.

Waters declined to step down, despite his physical frailties and a 2-9 record in 1988. In March, Chancellor Myron Coulter removed him as head coach and reassigned him to a newly created position as associate athletic director.

Waters' career record as coach was 116-94-6. Coulter's decision was controversial. A petition was circulated on the campus, calling for Waters' reinstatement as head coach, and students demonstrated during spring practice.

Waters, a native of Sylvania, Ga., played for the San Francisco 49ers from 1960-65. He is one of three former 49ers to die from ALS. The others were running back Gary Lewis and linebacker Matt Hazeltine.

The unusual link — the fact that three 49ers players died with the disease — has been the subject of several studies with speculation focusing on a commonly used painkiller, steroids, and a type of fertilizer used on football fields. But researchers have stressed that ALS remains a disease with no known cause or cure.

The 6-foot-3, 195-pound Waters was selected in the 1960

NFL draft by the 49ers, for whom he was a frequent starter at quarterback during his first three seasons. A series of injuries forced him to the 49ers' secondary in 1964, and he retired the following season.

Waters' last public appearance was May 7 when he was inducted into the Western North Carolina Sports Hall of Fame.

He began his coaching career at his alma mater, Presbyterian in Clinton, S.C., in 1966. After two seasons he went to Stanford as a receiver's coach. In 1969 he was hired as head coach at Western Carolina and two years later he also was named athletic director.

On Thursday morning, none of the bad feelings surrounding Waters' removal were evident during the hour-long funeral service.

"Coach Waters was a lot of fun to be around," said Todd Cottrell, a co-captain of the 1988 WCU football team. "If we take what we learned from him and use it every day, nothing would make him happier."

John Martin, the other co-captain, said he learned as much about life as he did about the game of football from being around Waters.

"Probably the greatest attribute he had was his ability to play great into the fourth quarter," Martin said. "It's easy to play great in the first quarter. But it's not so easy near the end of the game when you've had your teeth knocked out."

Graf Breezes To Rainy Win Boris Becker's Bid For Victory Held Up By Showers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PARIS — Steffi Graf, playing through a steady drizzle, eased her way into the final 16 of the French Open tennis championships today, but the rain held up Boris Becker's bid for a berth in the fourth round.

Graf, the defending women's titlist, needed only an hour on Center Court to overpower Nicole Jagerman of the Netherlands 6-1, 6-2. The 19-year-old Grand Slam champion has now lost only six games in three matches.

Graf had one or two rare lapses, such as when she was broken at love in the sixth game of the second set, but was generally a class above her opponent.

"It was awfully cold. I tried to finish it as soon as possible," the top-seeded Graf said. "I was very lucky to play first, before the rain. At the end, it was very hard."

After four days of sunshine, the temperature dropped considerably at Roland Garros and the stadium was enveloped in a cold, gray gloom.

Graf's match was played in persistent drizzle and as soon as it was over, officials covered the Center Court with a tarpaulin to protect the clay.

The delay held up the resumption of Tim Mayotte's match against Ronald Agenor, which was suspended by darkness Thursday at 3-3 in the fourth set.

Mayotte, the No. 7 seed, led by two sets to one and was hoping to join six other Americans in the third round. They included No. 5 seed Andre Agassi, No. 15 seed Michael Chang, Jay Berger, Jimmy Arias, Jim Courier and Lawson Duncan.

Becker's third-round match against Britain's Jeremy Bates on Court No. 1 was deep into the opening set when officials decided it was too wet to continue. The second-seeded West German led 5-4, with Bates about to serve to save the set.

All but one of the remaining side-court matches were suspended as the weather showed no sign of improving. The only one to continue was a women's doubles.

On Thursday, Agassi led a U.S. charge into the third round and said he loved being an American in Paris.

"I would say that I get the best responses from the Europeans, especially in Italy, West Germany and here in France," the long-haired, teen-age Agassi said. "I depend on the U.S. for the criticism ... constructive criticism."

Last year, Agassi reached the semifinals on his first visit to Roland Garros.

His first-round opponent then was the player he dispatched at the same stage, Paolo Cane of Italy. Once again, Agassi triumphed in straight sets. Once again, he lost only seven games.

This time, it was 6-2, 6-2, 6-3 and Agassi said he was ready to challenge for the title.

"I am mentally prepared to go all the way this time, whereas last year the semifinals was almost all I could handle."

Despite the best early American showing in five years, Ivan Lendl still appeared as the man to beat on the surface that gave him his first Grand Slam title in 1984. Lendl cruised to a 6-1, 6-3, 6-1 victory over Derek Rostagno Thursday, moving a step closer to his fourth French crown.

Lendl, a native of Czechoslovakia who resides in Greenwich, Conn., has taken several years to perfect his English. Against Rostagno, he said, he had to try to understand a third language.

The only seed to go down Thursday was American Lori McNeil, No. 12 among the women. She lost 6-2, 6-1 to Manon Bollegraf of the Netherlands. But McNeil's close friend, No. 4 seed Zina Garrison, rallied to beat Cathy Caverzasio of Italy 5-7, 6-3, 6-2.

No. 6 Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria, No. 7 Arantxa Sanchez of Spain and No. 16 Susan Sloane of the United States also advanced.

Jordan Says Bulls Must Cut Down On Turnovers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — The fans see the Chicago Bulls down 3-2 to the Detroit Pistons and on the brink of elimination from the NBA playoffs, but Michael Jordan is concerned with the number 24.

That's the tally of Chicago turnovers in Wednesday night's pivotal 94-85 Pistons' home victory in Game 5 of the best-of-7 Eastern Conference championship.

Jordan, held to 18 points as his team lost for the second time in three nights, said the Bulls' playoff survival depends on his team holding on to the ball in Game 6 tonight at Chicago Stadium.

"We've got to come out and take care of the basketball," Jordan said after Thursday's practice at the Deerfield Multiplex.

In tonight's game — the first June contest in the history of the Chicago franchise — Jordan also is concerned with scoring more against Detroit's tough defense, which has been ganging up on the NBA's three-time scoring champion.

"Hopefully, I can break away from the double and triple teams and get some shots," he said. "I don't think it's in our best interests to force shots."

Detroit's Dennis Rodman said the Pistons have been happy to shut Jordan down, forcing him to dish off the ball to his teammates.

"If Jordan wants to pass, we'll let him pass — we'll let him do that all night," Rodman said.

On Wednesday night, Jordan and his teammates seemed to get colder from the field as the game went on.

"We took our shots in the first half and made them, but we couldn't down the stretch," Jordan said.

"We had the shots to win the ballgame," he said. "We just didn't hit them."

Craig Hodges, who topped Chicago with 19 points, said, "We had our chances. We just didn't execute."

Rodman likens the conference finals, which the Bulls once led 2-1, to a boxing match.

"This has been like two boxers giving each other every punch he has," said Rodman, whose 14 rebounds Wednesday night helped topple Chicago.

But he thinks Detroit has one big advantage.

"I think we tire them out because of our bench strength," Rodman said.

Indeed, The Detroit reserves outscored Chicago 26-2 Wednesday night.

Vinnie "The Microwave" Johnson came off the bench for a game-high 22 points. He scored 16 points in the final quarter, giving star guard Isiah Thomas loads of rest.

Thomas doesn't want the series to come down to a duel between Jordan and himself.

"The thing I can't let happen it to be seduced into this Isiah against Michael Jordan thing ... Detroit can't win that way," he said.

Conference Alignments Possible Expiration Of CFA's TV Package Could Impact On Independents

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

East Carolina has been a Division I-A football independent since 1976, but that status could change in the next two years with the expiration of the College Football Association's television package.

With television dollars playing a bigger role in college football each year, many I-A independents have begun to look at the possibility of conference affiliation in order to get a bigger piece of the financial pie. ECU, which left the Southern Conference after the 1976 football season, is no exception.

"In my personal opinion," ECU Athletic Director Dave Hart said. "I thought that the hand would be forced for independents to look for a conference. There is an awful lot of activity."

"(Two) weeks ago, at the regularly scheduled meeting of northern independents, they invited four southern independents (Miami, Florida State, South Carolina and Virginia Tech) to feel the waters about the possibility of forming conferences," Hart added.

The northern independents are made up of Temple, Pittsburgh, West Virginia, Boston College, Syracuse, Army and Navy.

The CFA opens its yearly meetings today in Dallas, followed by the NCAA Convention the next week in Anaheim, Calif.

No doubt, a major topic of conversation will be the future plans of most of the group's major independents.

Any potential changes won't be known until the expiration of the CFA's current package and the negotiation of the next TV deal after the 1990 season.

"It's going to be very interesting to see what comes out of this," Hart said. "It may expedite the process. It may remain status quo. It is all predicated on television. They've been discussions on this for 10 years, but (with the new TV package) it is in a new light."

The benefits of conference membership are obvious. Most of the major conferences have tied themselves into local or regional television contracts which feature a game of the week and generate a substantial amount of guaranteed revenue for each conference member.

If a school like ECU — which has not been on TV in the last two seasons — was in a conference, the athletic department would receive a payment anytime a conference member appeared on TV. As it is now, they receive a flat fee each year of about $100,000 in television revenue for being a CFA member.

A conference affiliation with a game of the week would bring more than the standard payment.

"For the last year and a half, we've tried to position ourselves to be in a position to take advantage of any new television

Compton Receives Top NATA Award

Rod Compton, director of the widely-acclaimed sports medicine program at East Carolina University, will receive the highest national honor of the National Athletic Trainers Association (NATA) at the organization's national convention this month.

Compton, a former editor of the NATA Journal, has headed the sports medicine program and curriculum at ECU for the past 19 years. A graduate of Ohio University and Bowling Green State University, Ohio, he is a Certified Athletic Trainer and a member of the American Orthopedic Society for Sports Medicine.

He is to receive NATA's Sayers 'Bud' Miller Distinguished Athletic Training Award at the NATA convention June 12 in Dallas. The award is presented annually to a member who has at least 10 years of experience in athletic training or sports medicine, 10 years of experience in sports medicine education or research and recognized excellence and outstanding service in the field.

The ECU sports medicine curriculum in the Department of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Safety (HPERS) has a core faculty supported by more than a dozen community-based professionals, physicians and specialists. It will move into a new three-story sports medicine/physical education building on campus next fall and initiate a graduate curriculum in sports medicine and athletic training.

The program which Compton directs is regarded as one of the best in the country in prevention, treatment and rehabilitation of sports and athletic-related injuries and other problems. The program enrolls 30 to 35 undergraduates each year.

Burnette Keys Snow Hill To 24-1 Romp

SNOW HILL — George Burnette went 5-7 and two key hits during a seven-run first inning as Snow Hill opened the American Legion baseball season with a 24-1 romp over Edenton Thursday.

In the first inning, George Burnette led off with a base hit. Ed Stanley followed with a single to put runners on the corners. Chris West doubled in one run. Stanley scored on a wild pitch.

Walt McKeel drew a base on balls. Darrell Rouse scored off an error that scored West and McKeel moved to third. A ground out scored McKeel. Jimmy Hardy singled to drive in Rouse. Todd Mewborn then doubled in Hardy. Burnette came up again and singled in Mewborn for a 7-0 lead.

Hardy had a solo homer in the fourth while West homered in the eighth. West and William Rhodes had four hits each for Snow Hill while Hardy had three.

Snow Hill, 1-0, takes on Kinston at home tonight.

Weiss Reportedly To Have Surgery

SOUTH LAKE TAHOE, Calif. (AP) — Oakland A's shortstop Walt Weiss, a former North Carolina standout, was scheduled to undergo surgery Friday morning on his right knee, a newspaper reported.

The South Lake Tahoe Tribune reported Thursday that Weiss agreed to arthroscopic surgery to repair a cartilage tear after obtaining a second opinion from knee specialist Dr. Richard Steadman.

Steadman examined the former University of North Carolina player's knee Thursday, one day after a magnetic resonance imaging test in San Francisco first revealed the tear. Steadman is chairman of medicine for the U.S. ski team and has worked with several NFL players, including Miami Dolphins quarterback Dan Marino.

The Tribune, citing an unidentified source, said Weiss would undergo the operation at 6 a.m. and be released the same day from Barton Memorial Hospital.

Weiss originally twisted the knee when he planted his foot to throw during a May 17 game against the New York Yankees. He appeared to be making some progress but tripped in his Boston hotel room Sunday.

Weiss, the 1988 American League Rookie of the Year, was hitting .213 before his injury. He is expected to be sidelined about six weeks, placing his return around the All-Star break.

Pirates To Conduct Tryout Camp

The Pittsburgh Pirates will hold three tryout camps in the area, starting Saturday.

The first will be Saturday at Mount Olive College, starting at 11 a.m. The second will be on June 13 at East Carolina University, starting at 10 a.m. The third will be on June 24 at N.C. State, also starting at 10 a.m.

Players 16 to 22 years of age are invited to attend and must provide their own uniform, shoes, glove and personal gear. Players who might be signed will be reimbursed for reasonable expenses.

American Legion players must bring written permission from their coach or post commander in order to participate. Anyone drafted by another organization in the Baseball Free Agent Draft may not participate.

Rose Physicals Are Scheduled

Physicals for all prospective athletes at Rose High School for the 1989-1990 school year will be given Monday at 5:30 p.m. in the school gymnasium.

Prospective athletes at E.B. Aycock Middle School are also requested to have their physicals at this time also.

Stanford Coach Not Interested In Terps

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Stanford coach Mike Montgomery has asked that he no longer be considered for the vacant head basketball coach position at the University of Maryland.

"It's a great job, and the situation is primed for the right guy to come in and make things happen, but it won't be Mike Montgomery," said Montgomery, who has coached at Stanford for three years.

Montgomery, 41, told The (Baltimore) Sun in a story published Thursday that he met with Maryland officials, including Athletic Director Lew Perkins, Tuesday at a "neutral" site.

Perkins and Irwin L. Goldstein, the chairman of the university's search committee, declined to comment on the meeting with Montgomery, who has posted a 60-31 record at one of the nation's top academic universities.

"The (search) process was such that I thought it would jeopardize what we had at Stanford," Montgomery said. "... I've tried to indicate that I wasn't a candidate, but when your name keeps coming up, it's hard to get people to believe you."

Montgomery and Ohio State's Gary Williams were considered solid candidates for the position that has been vacant since Bob Wade resigned May 12.

North Carolina-Charlotte coach Jeff Mullins said he has been contacted by Perkins, but has not decided whether to pursue the position.

The university's search committee will continue to meet this week to narrow its list of potential candidates to five or 10. Formal interviews are expected to begin next week.

Mullins said that Williams, who played basketball at Maryland before graduating in 1968, should be considered the leading candidate.

Others expected to be interviewed, according to The Sun, will be Loyola Marymount coach Paul Westhead, American University coach Ed Tapscott, and Morgan Wootten, who coaches at nearby DeMatha High School.

After Wade resigned, Perkins said he expected Maryland's selection process to take three to five weeks. That timetable suggests that the final candidate will be selected in the next two weeks.

Shinn-Bahakel Dispute Talks Break Down

CHARLOTTE (AP) — An attempt by the NBA to settle a dispute between Charlotte Hornets partners George Shinn and Cy Bahakel has failed, stopping negotiations and apparently leaving the issue to be resolved in court.

"Insofar as I am able to tell, it will be a matter that will be decided in the courtroom," said Allen Bailey, an attorney representing Bahakel.

Deshaies Misses No-Hitter In Win

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — Mickey Hatcher was almost apologetic about breaking up Jim Deshaies' no-hitter in the eighth inning.

"I felt like calling up to the press box and asking them to give me an error," Hatcher said.

Deshaies pitched 7 2-3 innings of no-hit baseball, leading the Astros to a 7-2 victory Thursday night.

He didn't allow a hit until Hatcher's grounder back to the mound glanced off Deshaies' glove for an infield hit.

Eddie Murray started the ninth with a single to right field and Hatcher decided to keep his hit.

"When Eddie got his hit the next inning, I decided not to call," Hatcher said. "He (Deshaies) was like a nightmare to me. I couldn't hit him with a tennis racket. The hit came and I felt like falling down."

"We got two donkey hits off him or it's a no-hitter. He obviously does a great job against us all the time."

It was the only game of the night in the National League. Tonight, the teams will meet again. Also, it will be San Diego at Cincinnati, Montreal at Philadelphia, Pittsburgh at New York, San Francisco at Atlanta and Chicago at St. Louis.

The victory extended Houston's winning streak to seven games and kept Deshaies unbeaten in his career against the Dodgers in the Astrodome with a 6-0 record.

"As soon as you think you have someone's number they are likely to jump up and tattoo you," Deshaies said. "I started to get my rhythm in about the sixth inning. I thought about a no-hitter then."

Deshaies thought he caused his own downfall by going for Hatcher's grounder.

"I think if I'd have left it alone, it would have been an out, 'Raf' is good at those kind of balls," Deshaies said of shortstop Rafael Ramirez.

Although Deshaies lost his no-hit bid, he helped the Astros improve their home record to 11-17. Their 17-7 road record is the best in the major leagues.

Now they're trying to improve before the home crowd.

"Any time you get the first game in a series it's nice," catcher Craig Biggio said. "But we've got to come back tomorrow and the other nine games and get the job done."

"It's just a matter of time before we start winning here. We're doing it on the road and I'm sure we'll do it here soon."

The Astros scored two runs in the second on an error by catcher Mike Scioscia and a grounder by Biggio.

Bill Doran's single and a two-run single by Ramirez scored three more runs in the third. A sacrifice fly by Gerald Young and Biggio's homer in the sixth gave Houston its other runs.

A wild pitch by Deshaies and a sacrifice fly by Dave Anderson in the ninth inning provided the Dodgers with their runs.

"We didn't swing the bats real well tonight but he did a great job," Scioscia said. "When the score got to 5-0, we started getting a little disheartened."

"He's a real good pitcher. There's no magic to it. He just put it all together tonight."

but not despondent that he lost his no-hitter.

"You don't get that many opportunities at a no-hitter so you like to take advantage of it," Deshaies said. "But the important thing is we won the game at home."

Bishops Ease Past Johns Hopkins

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BRISTOL, Conn. — Bob Prince had four hits, including two home runs and seven RBI, to lead Southern Maine to a 12-6 victory over Wooster in the third game of the 1989 NCAA Division III National Baseball Tournament.

In other action on Thursday, North Carolina Wesleyan defeated Johns Hopkins 11-3 and California-Stanislaus downed Wisconsin-Whitewater 3-2.

Southern Maine was scheduled to play California-Stanislaus at 7:30 p.m. today. Wooster was to face North Carolina Wesleyan at 3:30 p.m. and Johns Hopkins was to take on Wisconsin-Whitewater at noon.

Prince hit a two-out grand slam home run in the fifth inning to put Southern Maine ahead for good 6-5. He added another home run in the seventh inning.

Prince had 11 total bases, which tied a NCAA Division III World Series record.

Wooster pulled to 7-6 in the sixth inning. Southern Maine reliever Tom Niles, however, struck out three straight batters with the bases loaded to end the inning.

In the second game, Robert Sapp pitched a complete game and struck out 10 to lead California-Stanislaus to a 3-2 victory over Wisconsin-Whitewater.

Down 2-0 going into the bottom of the eighth inning, California-Stanislaus scored three times to take the lead for good. Two walks and a single loaded the bases before Craig Baize hit a two-run single to center to tie the game 2-2. Matt Basgall then lifted a sacrifice fly to left field to score Hueter with the winning run.

package," Hart said. "Because of the TV package ... television networks are saying maximum dollars deliver the most attractive package, and that is why a conference is important."

Independent affiliation is not a new topic, though. Last year, a group of southern independents joined together to form a loose coalition of teams that would compete against each other record-wise for the right to go to the Independence Bowl.

The competing schools included a number of ECU's opponents, such as Virginia Tech, Southern Mississippi, Cincinnati, Memphis State and Tulsa. USM ended up earning the bid. Virginia Tech later dropped out of the agreement.

"We've had talks with East Carolina, along with Tulane, Louisville, Southwest Louisiana, Louisiana Tech," Independence Bowl Executive Director Tom Pulchinski said. "It was just decided by the association not to expand this year."

The Independence Bowl Association, made up of a bowl representative and representatives from the member schools, decided not to expand the field for the next year. The Independence Bowl, based in Shreveport, La., pays out $600,000 per team, according to Pulchinski, and that payment is expected to increase next year.

"Our financial shape right now is fine. We've paid out for 13 years in a row, and we don't foresee not doing that next year," Pulchinski said.

Last year was the initial year of the agreement which will be reviewed in 1990. There is also a clause in the agreement for renegotiation with the teams since the payoff is increasing each year.

"We were approached about that," Hart said. "That whole situation is really up in the air. They had a five-team arrangement. Virginia Tech backed out. I told them (Independence Bowl officials) once we knew who the teams were who were going to be involved, if we thought it was a group we wanted to align ourselves with, there would be further talks later in the summer."

Pulchinski said preliminary discussion with ECU revolved mainly around who would be included in the field.

"On his side, they may have looked to see if Louisville or Tulane were coming in, they might have been interested in talking," Pulchinski said. "From our side, it was decided to maintain the current field. This is not something we've shut the door on or something he's shut the door on. If we can get people like Louisville and Tulane, that helps our strength to attract other teams."

With the increasing pay-outs, Pulchinski said it was hoped the bowl field could be expanded in the future, but there likely would be an initiation fee in the neighborhood of $25,000.

"I would say that would probably be so, to take the financial burden off the teams already involved," he said. "But all those things can change."

Hart said involvement in the future with the Independence Bowl arrangement is a possibility if the game is in good financial health.

"Depending on who the players are, it gives you and the fans something to hang their hat on," Hart said. "We're just kind of waiting to see who those players are."

In addition to the meeting with the northern independents May 15, there has been talk of Miami and Florida State being invited to join the Southeastern Conference.

Such a move could prompt widespread movement toward conference affiliation for the remaining Southern independents.

"We play a lot of those people, and we have had some stages to present our case," Hart said. "Here is what was discussed (at the Northern Independent meeting). They talked about options like a football-only conference, which quite frankly would be the best option."

"They talked about a football-basketball conference, in which it is highly unlikely Boston College or Syracuse would jump (because of their involvement with the Big East). They've talked about all-sports conference."

Scott Whitley drive in seven runs as Jarman's Auto took a 17-10 victory over Fickling Insurance in the Tar Heel Little League Thursday.	Wellcome romped to a 20-5 victory over Allstate in the Greenville Little League Minors Thursday.
Jarman's took the lead with three runs in the first and never trailed. Jarman's added three more in the second, six in the third, three in the fourth and two in the fifth. Fickling, trying to catch up, came up with two in the second, third and fourth, one in the fifth and three in the sixth.	Allstate took a brief 1-0 lead in the top of the first, but Wellcome came back with six in the bottom of the frame to put the game away. Wellcome added one in the third, three in the fourth and 10 in the fifth. Allstate picked up single runs in the third and fifth and two in the sixth.
Abdul Jordan went the distance for the win, allowing six hits, nine walks and striking out 11.	Neil Barrow got the win, going the first three innings, allowing one hit and striking out five. Johnson Don-tae finished the game, allowing one more hit and striking out six.
Whitley led the hitting with three, including a two-run double in the big third inning. Jordan, Jason Adams, Warren Whitley and Luke Wendling each added two hits.	Alohondra Staton and Matthew Mabry led the Wellcome hitting with two each, while Charles Martin had both of the Allstate hits.
Mark Ellwanger led the Fickling hitting with two.

Higuera's Recent Improvement Is A Boon In Brewers' 5-0 Win

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Milwaukee manager Tom Trebelhorn wants to bring along Teddy Higuera slowly, but the Brewers' ace isn't making it easy.

Higuera, recovering from back surgery and a sprained ankle, held the New York Yankees hitless Thursday night until Alvaro Espinoza's leadoff single in the sixth inning.

Steve Sax also singled and Trebelhorn brought in Jay Aldrich to start the top of the seventh. The manager was relieved that Higuera had lost his no-hitter.

"It was quite an emotional game, taking the no-hitter as deep into the game as he did and then giving up a couple of base hits," Trebelhorn said after the Brewers' 5-0 victory.

"I didn't want to see anything happen that we could prevent by taking him out after six. The scoreboard was in our favor."

Higuera's fastball was clocked at 89 mph and he threw 74 pitches in his fifth start of the season since coming off the disabled list May 1. Trebelhorn saw no point in letting him continue.

"The only thing that would have come out of it was another ankle injury or he would give up some more runs and take a little away from outing he had had."

Elsewhere in the American League, it was Baltimore 8, Detroit 3 and Seattle 3, Texas 2. Minnesota and Chicago were rained out.

Higuera struck out seven, walked one and raised his lifetime record against the Yankees to 10-2. New York manager Dallas Green, however, was unimpressed. "He's not the Higuera they expect him to be later in the season," Green said. "He didn't have a good fastball. Sometimes you win with less than your best stuff. He got us out. He did his job."

The Brewers used a balk and catcher's interference to take a 4-0 lead after two innings against Dave LaPoint, 5-4.

Yankees rookie Deion Sanders, the fifth pick in the NFL draft after an All-American season at Florida State, was 0-for-3 with two strikeouts in only his second major league game.

Orioles 8, Tigers 3

Jim Traber and Rene Gonzales homered to key a six-run first inning and Baltimore won for the 12th time in 15 games.

The Orioles' four-game winning streak equals their longest of last season.

Rookie Randy Nosed, 0-2, making only his second start since being called up from Class AA London, Ontario, did not survive the first inning, giving up all six runs on four hits and two walks.

Dave Schmidt, 5-4, won his fourth consecutive start despite allowing a leadoff homer to Gary Pettis in the bottom of the first and another leadoff shot by Fred Lynn in the fifth.

Mariners 3, Rangers 2

Dave Cochrane homered with one out in the ninth inning to lift Seattle past Texas, only the Mariners' third victory in 11 games.

The Rangers had tied the game in the eighth on Scott Fletcher's two-run double, but Cochrane connected on an 0-1 pitch from Texas starter Kevin Brown, 4-2, for his second homer. Texas has lost four straight.

Mike Schooler, the third Seattle pitcher, worked 1 2-3 innings to win his first decision of the year.

Jim Presley gave the Mariners a 1-0 lead when he opened the fifth with his third homer and the Mariners' first hit off Brown.

Marlin Went With Racing

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DOVER, Del. — Sterling Marlin followed his father instead of his passing arm when he decided to be a race driver.

"I talked to a couple of colleges," said Marlin, a quarterback in high school. But he bought a race car. "The first time I drove a race car I decided that's the thing I wanted to do."

"Football was really second and racing was first."

So, No. 14 the quarterback for a time drove No. 14 the car, same number his father, Clifton "Coo Coo" Marlin, used. Sterling will be in car No. 94 Sunday in the $506,000 NASCAR Budweiser 500 at Dover Downs International Speedway.

Qualifying today and Saturday will determine the lineup for the 500-lap event on Dover's one-mile oval, where Bill Elliott won both Winston Cup races last year on his way to the season title.

At age 31, Marlin is looking for what would be a racing first for him: a Winston Cup victory, which his father never achieved. Marlin two weeks ago won the Winston Open, a non-series event, then last week finished second.

It was his third career second-place finish.

"It gets frustrating, but the team is really getting together," the Columbia, Tenn., driver said of the search for that first win.

Marlin is beginning his third season driving for car owner Billy Hagan of Lafayette, La., who put together a new team last year.

After winning Rookie-of-the-Year honors in 30 races in 1983, Marlin raced for several owners in fragmented seasons in 1984 and 1985 before hooking up with Hoss Ellington for 10 races in 1986. The following year, Hagan took him on.

Marlin, last Sunday at Charlotte, N.C., lost to Darrell Waltrip by 0.99 seconds in the Coca-Cola 600. The showing left him fifth in the Winston Cup standings, 105 points behind Waltrip's first-place 1,479.

"There's a lot of luck involved," Marlin said of winning. "You make your own luck sometimes."

Marlin pointed out he nearly won the race Ken Schrader claimed at Talladega, Ala., last year for his first win on the circuit. Marlin was running second to Dale Earnhardt on the last lap and trying to pass.

"Me and him got together and here came Schrader on the outside," Marlin said. Schrader wound up beating Geoff Bodine by a car length, with Earnhardt third and Marlin sixth.

Dover's small track makes for a long 500-mile race, giving plenty of chances for a driver to make that luck — or lose it.

Luck didn't help Marlin in his best Dover finish, at the second of two 1987 races. Running third on the last lap, he ran out of gas and fell to fifth. Last year he posted 11th- and 23rd-place finishes, leading five laps in the latter before his engine failed with 42 laps left.

"Dover, it's pretty hard on the driver and the car," Marlin said, adding cars start falling out in the last 100 miles. "I think the attrition rate will be pretty good."

Foreman Dream May Come True

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHOENIX — Former heavyweight champion George Foreman keeps longing for a title fight against undisputed world champ Mike Tyson. Now, it looks like he might finally get it.

Moments after the 40-year-old Foreman scored a third-round technical knockout over Bert Cooper on Thursday night, reporters informed him that promoters have announced preliminary plans for a Foreman-Tyson matchup in Beijing, China.

Foreman, who yelled "I want Tyson" several times after the fight, slumped in his locker room bench after hearing the news.

"Don't even tease me with that," Foreman said. "If it's true, thank you, thank you, thank you. I'll fight Mike Tyson tomorrow. I would propose marriage to him and I'm already married."

"My whole idea was to come back, fight for the title and win it. That's my ultimate goal. The people will support me. I've got the public. I've got the money. All I need is Tyson. I just need the opportunity."

The final decision on the proposed fight is up to Tyson, however.

If it falls through, Foreman said he hopes to fight either Tyrell Biggs or Evander Holyfield next.

"We offered Holyfield $1.5 million before and he turned it down. We want him in September and I'll sign right now," said Foreman, 18-0 on his comeback tour — all by knockout. "We're hoping to get Biggs (for a fight in July)."

"I'll fight anyone. I want to keep active. I can't lay off. But I'll tell you, if I fight Mike Tyson and I win, everybody age 40 and above will get their Geritol and drink a toast to George Foreman. It means something. I'm trying to prove that being 40 isn't a death sentence."

Foreman, the 1968 Olympic gold medalist who won the world heavyweight title in 1973 with a second-round TKO of Joe Frazier, retired in 1977 but started his comeback in 1987.

He now has a 63-2 career record with 60 KOs after making short work of the 23-year-old Cooper, who failed to answer the bell for the start of the third round in the scheduled 10-round bout.

The 253-pound Foreman, four inches taller and 42 pounds heavier than his opponent, stalked Cooper from the start and landed several hard combinations to the midsection late in both the first and second rounds.

Cooper, who lost his North American Boxing Federation cruiserweight title on a sixth-round TKO in his last fight on Feb. 15, stayed on his stool in his corner and referee Al Munoz waved off the fight.

"He wouldn't come out," Munoz said. "He said he was hurting. He said he took a shot to the head and was hurting too much."

"I kept getting hit with too many good shots," said Cooper, of Philadelphia, whose record fell to 21-5.

"Bert told me Foreman's right hands were buzzing his brain," said Cooper's trainer Sam Solomon. "I said, 'Give me one more round.' I didn't see him getting staggered, but Foreman kept plugging him. When your fighter says his brain is buzzing, what are you going to do?"

"I caught him with those lead right hands and he started running," Foreman said. "I stayed on him every minute. I hit him with some big body shots. What's the trainer to do — tell him to go get killed?"

The crowd of 2,000 at the Pride Pavilion, many of whom paid up to $60 to see the bout, booed loudly when Cooper refused to continue.

Officials with the Arizona Boxing Commission said Cooper's $17,500 purse would be held up until they investigate what happened.

Foreman got $50,000 for the bout, which was televised live to most of the nation on the USA cable network but tape-delayed in Phoenix.

Tyson Offered Big Money To Stage Fight In China

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Mike Tyson can have a trip to China and the lion's share of $25 million.

The Chinese government has offered that much to stage a fight in Beijing between the heavyweight champion and former champ George Foreman.

Bill Wheeler, a Seattle lawyer with contacts with the Chinese government, said Thursday he has a deal to have Tyson fight Foreman in Beijing. Bill Cayton, Tyson's estranged manager, confirmed he had reached a preliminary agreement to have Tyson fight Foreman in China, but "the final decision if the fight is to take place is Mike Tyson's."

Neither Tyson nor adviser Don King could be reached for comment. "I believe the China deal has all the credentials," Cayton said. "I understand the Chinese government will put up a letter of credit. I will recommend it highly to Mike."

"I have received communications from the government of China. When the deal is finally confirmed by Mike Tyson, we will go ahead."

Cayton cautioned that negotiations for the Foreman fight are far from complete.

"The terms and conditions are superb. It's a huge payday, similar to what he made against (Michael) Spinks," Cayton said.

Tyson made about $21 million for knocking out Spinks in one round last June.

Foreman, the heavyweight champion from Feb. 16, 1973, to Oct. 30, 1974, stopped Bert Cooper in two rounds Thursday night in Phoenix. He is expected to fight Tyrell Biggs or Evander Holyfield this summer.

"It would depend on George Foreman winning these ... fights," Cayton said of a Tyson-Foreman matchup. "If he fails to win, the deal is off."

Tyson's scheduled July 21 fight against Carl "The Truth" Williams has been finalized, Cayton added.

Cayton said the fight against Williams at Atlantic City, N.J., "was definitely on. As far as I know, the contracts are signed."

He said he sent a letter to Donald Trump, who will promote the bout, to confirm the Williams fight.

Pitino Undaunted By NCAA Penalties

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LEXINGTON, Ky. — The rebuilding of a shattered Kentucky basketball program is about to begin.

Rick Pitino was named head coach of the Wildcats on Thursday, given a seven-year package worth an estimated $6 million to repair a program that the NCAA recently hit with three years of probation, including a two-year ban on postseason play.

But he appeared undaunted by the bleak days ahead.

"I think it's going to be exciting years for Kentucky basketball," the 36-year-old coach said at a news conference. "I think it's going to be a great challenge for all of us — seeing something so rich in tradition brought back in a correct manner."

Kentucky, the winningest college program in the nation, posted a 13-19 record last season, its first losing mark in 62 years. And the Wildcats are close to being surpassed by North Carolina in victories, holding a 1,466-1,458 edge.

But the tone of the news conference was more on running a clean program than gaining victories at any cost.

"It's a tradition with me to say, 'We'll win right away,'" Pitino said. "Whether that means in terms of the losses and wins that show up I'm not sure."

"I think Kentucky people and supporters of Kentucky basketball, forgetting the score, will leave that arena thinking that basketball team is a winner."

Kentucky's Athletics Board unanimously approved Pitino's hiring earlier. His contract carries a base salary of $105,000, but that will grow substantially with income from coach's shows, endorsements and clinics, among other non-university sources.

"It was a lateral move economically," said Pitino, released from the last three years of his contract, estimated at $425,000 a year, with the New York Knicks of the NBA.

Kentucky spokesman Bernie Vonderheide said the contract provides for the university to have right of approval for agents or agencies representing Pitino outside the basketball program.

"We will maintain better institutional control over outside income," said Vonderheide, noting that the NCAA had criticized the school for its lack of control in the basketball program.

Pitino, who coached at Boston University and Providence College before joining the Knicks, said he couldn't pass up the opportunity to return to college coaching.

"We looked back everyday of our life and we missed Providence College," said Pitino, accompanied by his wife Joanne. "I wanted to be a college coach and part of a college community and part of a lifestyle that's important to the Pitino family."

"That's not in any way demeaning to the New York Knickerbockers. They're a class organization. They're going to win a championship."

He warned boosters to keep their enthusiasm in the stands.

"Come to the games and cheer as loud as you can. But stay away from our practices, stay away from my players," he said. "No one will have anything to do with University of Kentucky basketball other than our coaching staff, athletic director, and certainly, our faculty."

Pitino gave up a young, aggressive pro team that won the Atlantic Division title and tied for the fifth-best record in the NBA to coach a Kentucky squad that lacks size, strength, numbers and the respect of the NCAA.

"I gave up a lot. I gave up a potential (NBA) championship to come to Kentucky," he said. "The lure is the family atmosphere. I wanted to be a college coach."

But Pitino also indicated he didn't plan on giving up his winning ways.

Noting that the May 29 issue of Sports Illustrated contains a cover story titled "Kentucky's Shame," he said: "The one thing I promise you in this room today is you'll see us on the cover of Sports Illustrated once again. And it will be cutting down certain nets. It won't be for what you saw last week."

Top Pitchers Will Hurl In World Series

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OMAHA, Neb. — Seven of the top 10 winningest pitchers in college baseball will try to strong-arm their teams to the College World Series title when the 1989 NCAA Division I tournament gets under way tonight.

Kirk Dressendorfer of Texas, Alex Fernandez and Joe Grabe of Miami, Greg Brummett of Wichita State, Kyle Abbott of Long Beach State and Ben McDonald and Curtis Leskanic of Louisiana State have won at least 14 games each this season.

"I think this really stresses the fact that pitching is back in the game," Texas Coach Cliff Gustafson said at the CWS qualifying coaches' news conference Thursday. "For several years we were talking about the aluminum bats. I don't think the bats are as dominate this year. I think this year in Omaha you're going to see some great, great pitchers perform."

"There's going to be some obvious outstanding pitching matchups," said Wichita State Coach Gene Stephenson. "I think that's going to be great for the fans. From my standpoint, I think my staff is the best its ever been overall."

Top-seeded Florida State, 52-16, will open the tournament at 4:10 p.m. CDT tonight with Gar Finn-vold, 9-3, against eighth-seeded North Carolina, 41-16-1, and the Tar Heels' John Thoden, 12-0.

Fourth-seeded Wichita State, 63-15, will throw Brummett, 15-2, against fifth-seeded Arkansas, 50-14, with Mark Swope, 7-0, at 7:10 p.m.

In Saturday's first-round games, second-seeded Texas, 51-17, goes with Dressendorfer, 16-2, against No. 7 Long Beach State, 50-13, and either 15-2 Kyle Abbott or 12-0 Andrew Croghan at 4:10 p.m.

Newman Wins His Tax Case

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — Actor Paul Newman has beaten a $41,000 tax bite on income from "The Sting."

Newman won the tax dispute when the California Supreme Court rejected the state's claim for a greater portion of Newman's income from the movie.

In unanimously denying a hearing sought by the state Franchise Tax Board, the justices on Thursday let stand a lower-court ruling that counted the time an actor spent "on call" as work time for apportioning income.

A non-resident such as Newman who performs personal services in California for part of a year is taxed according to the portion of the total working days spent in the state. If one-third of the working days are spent in California, for example, one-third of the income from the project is taxable by the state.

Newman's case involved a dispute over the definition of working days. In filming "The Sting," which won an Academy Award for best picture, Newman spent 30 days in California in 1973, 25 of them filming and five "on call," and 24 days outside California, only two of them filming.

In their tax returns, Newman and his wife, Joanne Woodward, described 54 days as "working days" and apportioned 30, or 55.5 percent, to California. But the tax board said only the 27 days of actual filming should count as "working days," and 25 of them, or 92.6 percent, were attributed to California.

Justice Jack Goertzen said in the decision that Newman was required to report for work by his studio at any time during the period he was "on call," and could not take any conflicting jobs.

Newman's press agent Warren Cowan did not answer telephone calls for comment on Thursday.

Deputy Attorney General Richard Nielsen, who represented the tax board, said the ruling could work against actors.

"Every actor that spends his time in California not doing anything, if he's under contract to somebody else in another state, California could pick up his income," Nielsen said. "Whether the board will pursue something like that I don't know."

Hoffman Debut

LONDON (AP) — Dustin Hoffman heard cheers for his British stage debut as Shylock in Shakespeare's "The Merchant of Venice."

But while he won approval from the opening-night audience in London's Phoenix Theater, the critics today gave him mixed reviews.

"In side curls and skullcap, Hoffman gave Shylock humor, a passion for revenge and a tortured dignity when he loses all. It was a far cry from Raymond Babbitt, the autistic savant he plays in his current hit film 'Rain Man,'" wrote Reg Evans of the British domestic news agency Press Association.

In The Times of London, Irving Wardle was less enthusiastic. He wrote, "All the clamorous hype and slaving expectation is a poor preparation for the modest Shylock who arrived on the Phoenix stage last night..."

Lester Middlehurst, in the tabloid Today, found Hoffman's Shylock "fascinating."

Gumbel Does The TV Weather

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — NBC News "Today" anchor Bryant Gumbel, on a dare from weatherman Willard Scott, showed some on-air versatility.

He gave the weather report. The challenge began when Gumbel started kidding Scott on the air Thursday for arriving with only a second to spare before the 8:30 a.m. forecast.

"I was going to vamp for a little while until you managed to join us," Gumbel said. "Then I thought we'd kind of do the local (weather) at the front."

Scott said he would give $100 to Gumbel's favorite charity if Gumbel gave the weather report.

Gumbel chose the United Negro College Fund and then did the weather report, starting off in grand Willard Scott-style with birthday greetings for two viewers in South Dakota and Kansas.

Scott and Gumbel had a feud recently after Gumbel sent a memo to NBC brass criticizing Scott for making birthday greetings.

HBO's 'Tales From Crypt' Show Isn't For Children

By Kathryn Baker THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — HBO's new anthology series, "Tales from the Crypt," might be based on comic-book stories from the 1940s and 1950s, but it is definitely not for kids.

HBO in fact pitches the series as "an adult anthology," no doubt due to the R-rated nudity, language and violence.

The first three half-hour stories in the series, premiering as a trilogy on Saturday, June 10, and running as separate films at various times in June and July, are stylishly directed by top filmmakers Robert Zemeckis ("Back to the Future," "Who Framed Roger Rabbit"), Walter Hill ("48 Hours") and Richard Donner ("Superman," "Lethal Weapon").

The first in the trilogy, "The Man Who Was Death," was directed by Hill and stars Bill Sadler as a state executioner who decides to go free once when the death penalty is outlawed by the Supreme Court.

Zemeckis directed "And All Through the House..." a tasteless Christmas Eve horror story. Larry Drake, who plays the gentle, retarded office assistant from "L.A. Law," is cast here as a homicidal escapee from an insane asylum, roaming a suburban neighborhood dressed as Santa Claus and hatching residents.

Donner's offering is "Dig That Cat... He's Real Gone," an amusingly nasty comedy about a bum (Joe Pantoliano) who is given the nine lives of a cat in a scientist's experiment. The bum, Ulric, turns the gift into a lucrative circus act, but — and you can see this one coming a mile away — he has a slight problem keeping track of how many lives he's used up.

In between the stories, viewers are entertained by an unpleasant creature-host, the Crypt-Keeper, a special-effects creation of Kevin Yagher, who created the Freddy Krueger makeup and effects for the "Nightmare on Elm Street" movies.

The three stories were originally published by William M. Gaines in the comics Haunt of Fear, Tales from the Crypt and Vault of Horror. Gaines is better known nowadays as the publisher of Mad magazine.

Of the three, the most engaging is "The Man Who Was Death," probably because its death-penalty motif is the most relevant on some other plane than sheer gory entertainment. There's even room from some analysis of the story's symbolism, to-wit: the hypocrisy illustrated by the state's use of the executioner, who finds himself faced with the punishment he had once meted out on behalf of the state just because he did what the state once paid him to do... Nah.

The script, by Robert Reneau ("Action Jackson") and Hill has some clever if mostly vulgar dialogue. When Niles is canned by the prison system, he talks to his bartender about the efficacy of televising executions. "If they put executions on TV, it'd be the highest-rated show ever. Be Nielsens through the roof. Other networks would start killin' people just to compete. Pretty soon Geraldo Rivera be pullin' that switch."

The piece has a film-noir look and an appropriately haunting score by Ry Cooder.

"Dig That Cat... He's Real Gone" also makes light of death, in this case what happens to a man who is not affected by it. He becomes careless.

The film has the slick look of Donner's hand, and Pantoliano ("Empire of the Sun") shows a comic flare as the enterprising star of the circus attraction "See Ulric Die!" Kathleen York is nicely ditzzy as his opportunistic girlfriend. Ultimately, though, seeing Ulric die over and over for 30 minutes gets tedious, and the predictable ending is no payoff.

Zemeckis drew "And All Through the House..." the silliest of the three and the one with the least story, being more in the style of the scary tale told 'round the campfire. Mary Ellen Trainor, playing a vengeful housewife who becomes Santa's prey, is a great screamer.

Survey Finds Strong Public Distaste For Objectionable Television Shows

By Skip Wollenberg
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Most Americans would support advertisers that withdraw commercials from TV programs that some viewers find objectionable, and they would back a boycott of companies that sponsor such shows, a survey says. One in four respondents said the government should make it illegal to show objectionable material on television, according to the survey released Thursday by the consumer research firm Oxtoby-Smith Inc.

Respondents were asked to describe what they regarded as objectionable and 74 percent cited excessive violence, 67 percent sex, 60 percent profanity, 58 percent cited "subjects that should be private" and 41 percent ethnic stereotypes.

The survey comes as a number of individuals and groups upset with what they say is excessive sex, violence, profanity or stereotyping in TV programs have captured attention with calls for advertisers to withdraw ads from those shows.

Joseph Smith, president of Oxtoby-Smith, said those calls appear to have "touched a sensitive, pervasive and perhaps festering public concern."

"The naive supposition that the recent flurry of protest against 'objectionable' programming reflects the opinions of a small but vocal minority on society's fringe simply isn't supported by what we've learned," he said.

But some advertising and television executives questioned the significance of the poll's findings, noting that how a question is phrased may have a lot to do with how it is answered.

They said, for instance, that people who say they support withdrawing ads from an "objectionable" show may disagree on what is objectionable.

"It's a socially acceptable response. There are not many people who would give a negative response to something like this," said Paul Sonkin, vice president of network audience research at ABC.

Thomas Winner, media director at the ad agency Campbell-Mithun-Esty, said he didn't think there was much significance in the poll results.

"If someone called, what would you say? And would you really care about this if someone didn't call?" he said.

But David Smith, a marketing executive at his father's firm, said the poll questions were designed to be "as dispassionate as possible."

The survey relied on telephone interviews conducted May 4-10 with a random sample of 500 adults across the country. The survey had a margin of error of plus or minus 5 percentage points.

Oxtoby-Smith, which has been in business since 1956 and has counted Block Drug Co., Bristol Myers Co., MCI Communication Corp. and Volvo among its clients, said it commissioned the poll on its own and not for any client.

Sixty-eight percent of those surveyed said it was a "good idea" for "advertisers to stop advertising in programs some viewers found objectionable," while 72 percent said it was a good idea for "consumers not to buy products of advertisers in programs they find objectionable."

Oxtoby-Smith said 49 percent of those surveyed said the amount of objectionable material on television bothers them a lot.

The Rev. Donald Wildmon, executive director of the American Family Association in Tupelo, Miss., which has encouraged advertisers to withdraw from shows it finds offensive, said he was delighted by the results of the poll.

"Our time has arrived," he said.

Uno Wins Confirmation As Japan's Prime Minister

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — Parliament today approved Sousuke Uno as prime minister, and he pledged reforms to clear the air of an influence-peddling scandal that has decimated the top ranks of the governing Liberal Democratic Party.

The 66-year-old former foreign minister also spoke out against the United States, saying Washington's use of its new trade law to force concessions from Japan was "like negotiating with your fists up."

The conservative party was to get new leaders and a new cabinet was to be installed in an effort to wipe the slate clean of the Recruit Co. scandal before an election for half the upper house of Parliament, expected within two months.

Two months surfaced a year ago, ruined many careers and forced Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita, 65, to resign and take responsibility for a widespread loss of trust in politics.

The two houses of Parliament met separately today and selected Uno as Japan's 18th postwar prime minister on the strength of the Liberal Democrats' majorities in each chamber.

In the lower house, Uno got 285 of 477 votes, with Japan Socialist Party Chairwoman Takako Doi receiving 139, Eiichi Nagase of the Democratic Socialist Party 26 and Kenji Miyamoto of the Communist Party 25. Two votes were ruled invalid.

The upper house gave Uno 124 of 220 votes, with Ms. Doi capturing 65, Miyamoto 17 and Nagase 9. Five ballots were blank, officials announced.

Earlier, the Liberal Democrats endorsed Uno to succeed Takeshita as party president.

A special conference of party legislators spent only 45 minutes on debate and speeches before standing in virtual unanimity to endorse Uno as party president.

Uno today pledged political reforms to create "the party anew" and clear the air of the scandal that has decimated the top ranks of Liberal Democrats.

"The Recruit scandal had a great impact, and I understand what it means to be chosen as prime minister in such a situation," Uno said. "I would like to promise to carry forward political reforms with all my loyalty and strength."

Asked at a news conference about his reform program, Uno gave no specifics.

Uno has served as director general of the Defense

Agency, minister of interational trade and industry, and foreign minister, three of the most important Cabinet posts.

But he has not held two of the traditional jobs on the route to the prime ministership — the finance portfolio and the party post of secretary general — and he has no independent power base within the party.

Some observers expect him to be an interim prime minister, perhaps only until the upper house election in July, or until October, when the party holds its national convention.

A key to his survival will be his political reform program and the opinion of it by voters, who now give the Liberal Democrats record low popularity rankings, largely because of the widespread Recruit scandal.

Recruit, an information services and publishing conglomerate, is accused of trying to buy influence with political donations and by letting politicians and their aides buy unlisted Recruit stock shares, which rose in value when placed on the market.

Takeshita and former Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone are among those linked to such deals. The scandal took place during Nakasone's 1982-87 administration.

Prosecutors finished their probe of the Recruit scandal last week without indicting any top-level politicians. Seventeen people, including businessmen, bureaucrats and elected parliamentarians, have been charged with bribery or violations of laws on political donations.

In his acceptance speech, Uno said he was resigning from the Nakasone faction, taking one of the steps recommended by a party panel on reform.

Factional rivalry within the party is regarded as one reason why large amounts of money are needed in Japanese politics, because factional leaders must help finance their followers' political activities.

The reform measures also called for those tainted by the Recruit scandal to be barred from Cabinet or party leadership posts.

Nakasone resigned from the party because of the Recruit scandal, but he retained his seat in Parliament and analysts expect him to retain his influence.

Many of the Liberal Democrats' top leaders were ineligible to succeed Takeshita because they are tainted by the Recruit scandal. Party power brokers finally turned to Uno after elder statesman Masayoshi Ito repeatedly refused the job.

Oil Pact Meets To Study Prices

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

VIENNA, Austria — OPEC ministers gathered today to discuss whether they should increase oil production in the face of surging prices that have pushed the cost of a barrel of oil 40 percent higher since November.

"They're keen to keep revenues up," said Fergus MacLeod, an analyst at Barclays de Zoete Wedd in London. "The underlying mood is don't rock the boat."

The ministers of the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries were kicking off their talks at an afternoon meeting of an eight-member committee.

Their formal strategy sessions will begin Monday when they open their mid-year ministerial meeting at OPEC headquarters in Vienna.

The ministers' task is to set pricing and production levels for the final half of the year.

Analysts predicted tough bargaining during the discussions.

"They will come to an agreement in the end," said Pierre Terzian, editor of the Paris-based oil publication, Petrostrategies. "But it will be rather difficult."

Saudi Arabia's oil minister, Hisham Nazer, confirmed reports that he intended to suggest scrapping the cartel's benchmark price of $18 a barrel. He declined to elaborate.

The Saudis were earlier reported to have wanted to revive a plan, unveiled briefly late last year, for setting a minimum price of $15 a barrel.

The production accord that runs from January to June has set an output ceiling of 18.5 million barrels a day for the producer nations. Its price target is $18 a barrel.

The agreement was worked out in November in an effort to curb OPEC's overproduction and lift crude prices.

Prices have surged this year, a gain attributed not only to the cartel's output cuts but also to accidents in oil-producing areas. The supply of oil has been reduced to the world market, although analysts have reported a pickup in OPEC output in recent weeks.

The average price of a basket of seven crudes monitored by OPEC has soared from $12.34 a barrel in November to $17.67 a barrel last week. It ran up above the cartel's benchmark earlier in the year but has slipped a bit since then.

West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark American crude, was trading at $20 a barrel.

Nick Antill, analyst at the London brokerage County NatWest, predicted producers would raise their daily output ceiling by a million or so barrels, up to 19.5 million barrels.

OPEC reported last week that 12 of its members supplied 17.54 million barrels a day in international markets in April, just above the supply target of 17.51 million barrels.

Total production by the dozen was 18.47 million barrels a day in April, it said.

Figures for the United Arab Emirates were not available.

OPEC members are Algeria, Ecuador, Gabon, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Kuwait, Libya, Nigeria, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates and Venezuela.

KGB Chief Says Advisers Welcome

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

MOSCOW — Vladimir Kryuchkov, the head of the KGB, said Thursday that the Soviet security and intelligence apparatus was "interested in" and "absolutely" supportive of oversight by a commission of the new Congress of People's Deputies.

And he said that under Mikhail S. Gorbachev's program of perestroika "a great deal of noble aspects of KGB activities" will become more apparent, such as "our struggle against terrorism." In that effort, he added, the KGB had had "certain contacts" with the United States.

Kryuchkov discussed the KGB (the Russian initials for Committee for State Security) with several Western reporters a day after Yuri Vlasov, a Moscow deputy to the new Soviet parliament, condemned the feared intelligence agency as an "underground empire" that "exercises a comprehensive control over society."

The boldness of Vlasov's remarks, yet another sign of the new freedoms set loose by perestroika, caused a sensation among the deputies. Vlasov accused the KGB of still holding dissidents in psychiatric hospitals to prevent political opposition.

"If he spoke such a speech seven years ago he would have gone to prison 10 years at a minimum," said an admiring deputy, Siim Kallas of Estonia.

But equally remarkable has been the access Western and Eastern bloc press alike has had to traditionally inaccessible figures like Kryuchkov and members of the ruling Politburo, who wander the halls of the Kremlin Palace of Congresses during recesses of the new parliament.

By midday Thursday, the seventh day of the Congress, solicitous staff members of the Soviet Foreign Ministry were keeping an eye out for roaming members of the Soviet leadership and practically shoving western reporters in the right direction for impromptu hallway interviews.

When the sessions were on, reporters in the distant press gallery trained binoculars on Politburo members to see which ones applauded speeches by conservatives and which ones didn't.

Kryuchkov, who became head of the KGB last autumn, said Thursday that the agency now considers the battle against terrorism "the most important direction of our operational activities," although he did not define what constitutes terrorism.

Sakharov Draws Heckles In Soviet Congress For Derision Of Military

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — Andrei D. Sakharov, accused today of insulting the Soviet army and heckled by his colleagues in the new Congress, said he was proud of the exile he endured for opposing the Afghan war and wears it "like a medal."

His comments before the Congress of People's Deputies came in response to Deputy Sergei Chervonopisky of the Komsomol Communist youth organization, who accused the 1975 Nobel Peace Prize winner of "unprecedented badgering" of the army, which completed its pullout from Afghanistan in February.

Chervonopisky demanded an explanation of an interview Sakharov gave in Canada in which he was quoted as saying that Soviet pilots killed soldiers they could not save from being captured by Afghan guerrillas.

The hall gave the Komsomol leader a standing ovation when he finished, then heckled Sakharov.

Sakharov, who endured his punishment in the closed city of Gorky for opposing the Soviet military intervention that began in December 1979, took the podium in his defense, but he was obviously shaken by the attack and stammered as he spoke. Deputies took advantage of pauses when he stumbled over words to mock him and try to cut him short.

The 68-year-old physicist said the Afghan war was a "criminal adventure" that cost 1 million Afghan lives.

"We have to cleanse ourselves of this terrible shame," he said. "I spoke out against sending Soviet soldiers to Afghanistan, and for this I was exiled to Gorky. I am proud of this exile in Gorky, I wear it like a medal."

Sakharov denied he intended to insult the army. But he added that charges soldiers killed their comrades in Afghanistan were under investigation and that no one could call his statements an insult until the truth is determined.

But after he finished speaking several deputies hurried to the microphone to denounce the dean of the Soviet human rights movement before the session recessed for lunch.

Marshal Sergei F. Akhromeyev, former Soviet military chief of staff, said charges that Soviet soldiers were instructed to kill their comrades to prevent capture were "a blatant lie." Members of the ruling Communist Party Politburo in the Kremlin Palace of Congresses stood along with others and applauded when Tursun Kazakova of Tashkent declared that Sakharov should be ashamed of himself. "You have insulted our entire army, our entire nation, all of our boys who gave their lives," she shouted at him.

Besieged by reporters after the session, Sakharov said, "I am sorry I didn't tell the whole truth about the Soviet crimes in Afghanistan, the napalm, the bombing."

Asked about the reaction to his remarks, he added: "It was a performance ... I think it was a contrived reaction."

"I can bear it," he added.

The new Congress, which has been conducting nationally broadcast debates since May 25, remains in session with no indication when it will adjourn. It is the first competitively elected Congress in 70 years of communist rule.

Also today, the Communist Party's powerful Central Committee was ordered to convene after more than a week of parliamentary sessions in which the party's seven decades of supremacy came under repeated attack.

"We'll evaluate how the work of the Congress is going," said Politburo member Alexander N.

Yakovlev, who confirmed to reporters the Central Committee would meet later today.

The call for a meeting of the policy-making Central Committee came as members of the party's ruling Politburo rejected suggestions that the party surrender power or give up its constitutional monopoly.

One source said the committee would discuss the convening of the new standing legislature, the Supreme Soviet, which was elected last week and is expected to gather for the first time Saturday.

Meanwhile, the chief of the KGB said the Supreme Soviet should have full authority over his agency, and use U.S. congressional oversight as its model.

"We are decidedly in favor of this," the New York Times quoted Vladimir A. Kryuchkov as saying in today's editions. "And as far as the creation of a commission is concerned, I think we'll borrow some of the experience of the Americans."

The Central Committee meeting comes after more than a week of extraordinary public criticism in the new Congress.

Party maverick Boris N. Yeltsin, a Central Committee member, called for an immediate transfer of power from the Communist Party to the Congress.

"The Congress must take power into its own hands," Yeltsin said. He charged that President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's policy of perestroika, or restructuring, had failed and that people were living worse four years after reforms were launched.

The 2,250-member Congress is the heart of Gorbachev's plan to strengthen the government and limit the party in daily policy decisions. But the party remains enshrined in the Soviet Constitution as the leading force in society, and no other parties are legal.

Argentine Economic Situation Worsens

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — The food riots have subsided but Argentina's currency continues sliding in black-market trading, an indication the economic crisis that prompted looting in the major cities is worsening.

On Thursday, police arrested six leaders of the small leftist Workers Party on orders from a federal judge who accused the party of spurring riots in Argentina's four largest cities.

Fourteen people died, 80 were arrested and more than 2,000 arrested.

Looters, many of them women and children, have been sacking stores and eating food on the spot in the nationwide unrest despite a state of siege the government declared on Monday.

Provincial officials across Argentina set up soup kitchens, froze supermarket prices for basic foods and medicine, and coordinated charity collections of food and clothing.

The austral, Argentina's currency, continued its free fall against the dollar, sliding in black-market trading to 230-1, or 24 percent less than the rate of 175-1 set two days ago by the Central Bank. Foreign exchange houses refused to sell dollars at the official price.

The devaluation of the austral, 70 percent monthly inflation and unemployment has pushed prices of basic commodities beyond the means of many in this beef- and grain-exporting nation. A budget deficit and a $59 billion foreign debt have also been cited as causes for the rioting.

Government employees in several provinces threatened to strike for higher pay, bakers in Buenos Aires refused to sell bread at the official price and stores continued to mark up products.

The government of President Raul Alfonsin admitted after looting began that poverty had widened during the economic crisis of the past several months. But authorities claim slum dwellers were encouraged to rise up by agitators, who also attacked police.

The Workers Party candidate for president in May 14 elections, Jorge Altamira, said his party did not encourage the looting and such allegations by the government amount to "ideological persecution."

"We were in favor of better salaries, food, returning suspended and fired workers to their jobs, and ... a general strike," Altamira said.

Arrested with Altamira were five other party leaders, including the party's vice presidential candidate, Gregorio Flores, in the elections won by Carlos Menem and the Peronist Party. Formal charges were not immediately disclosed.

Federal Judge Gerardo Larrambeere of the Buenos Aires suburb of Moron ordered the arrest of the Workers Party leaders, and the search and closure of their offices in the metropolitan area.

Larrambeere said his order was based on "prima facie evidence showing that party activists encouraged in large measure" rioting in towns under his jurisdiction, including San Miguel, where four people were killed, and Moreno, where three others died.

In the capital and the northern city of Rosario, 14 people died since Monday, the Interior Ministry said Thursday evening in its first official tally. Preliminary reports from police and hospitals had put the death toll at 16.

Before they subsided, Alfonsin had declared a state of siege, several thousand paramilitary police were sent to Rosario, bombs exploded in Buenos Aires and a supermarket in the western city of Mendoza was set ablaze by a firebomb.

Former President Arturo Frondizi publicly urged Alfonsin to "resign immediately" and hand power over to President-elect Menem, who is due to take office on Dec. 10.

Die-Hard Chinese Students Burn Official Newspapers To Protest Government Action

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — Hundreds of students today burned copies of an official newspaper to vent their anger over the increased government condemnation of the democratic reform movement in Communist China.

Earlier in the day, about 1,000 helmeted soldiers jogged near Tiananmen Square in the latest government ploy to intimidate the students, who have been staging anti-government protests since mid-April.

In Nanjing, about 400 students from universities there began walking toward toward Beijing, 1,000 miles to the north, to add their support to the pro-democracy movement.

An American student in Nanjing said the Chinese were inspired by the U.S. civil rights movement and its marches on Selma, Ala., and Washington.

The demonstration by about 500 students outside the office of the Beijing Daily came as activists entered the fourth week of their defiant occupation of Tiananmen Square.

"Rip it up and burn it!" shouted students crammed into a narrow lane outside the paper's gate as they threw dozens of copies of the daily into a bonfire.

The students were particularly incensed by an article in Thursday's edition claiming dissension among different factions directing the movement.

The Beijing Daily, which is controlled by the city Communist Party, is known for its hardline views.

In Tiananmen Square, about 10,000 students were massed today in defiance of martial law orders to move. Up to 200,000 students have occupied the square, the symbolic heart of China, since they launched their protests six weeks ago.

The People's Liberation Army troops ran out of a nearby train station and through the surrounding neighborhood today before they returned to their camp, about a mile from the square.

It was the third straight day that troops have appeared on city streets, reinforcing government pronouncements that the army is poised to carry out Premier Li Peng's order of martial law for Beijing.
