EPA Cites Burroughs Wellcome As Cancer Threat

By Larry Margasak
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Environmental Protection Agency today identified more than 200 industrial plants in North Carolina and 36 other states that it says release enough toxic chemicals to pose a severe cancer risk.

Risk estimates for those exposed are a thousand-fold greater than the cancer risk level most policy makers consider acceptable, said Rep. Henry A. Waxman, who released the figures.

Waxman, chairman of the House Energy and Commerce environment subcommittee, cautioned that the list could change later because the figures are preliminary. Nonetheless, he said, the numbers represent a "stunning demonstration of the urgency of the public health threat" from the nowunregulated toxic emissions.

The Champion International plant in Canton poses a risk of at least 1 in 100 but less than 10 in 100, the EPA report said.

Six plants in North Carolina were identified as having a risk of at least 1 in 1,000 but less than 1 in 100.

They are Weyerhaeuser, Plymouth; Diamond Shamrock in Castle Hayne; Abbott Laboratories in Laurinburg and Rocky Mount; Arrow International in Randleman and Burroughs Wellcome in Greenville.

The estimates assume a 70-year lifetime exposure to the contaminant at the maximum exposure level.

Waxman coupled release of the data with introduction of legislation to control toxic releases from industrial sources and motor vehicles; prevent accidental releases; protect the Great Lakes, which have been seriously damaged by airborne toxic chemicals; and control emissions from small businesses.

Waxman wants to incorporate the legislation into a comprehensive clean air bill that also would address urban pollution and acid rain.

The figures show that 205 facilities pose cancer risks for the most exposed individuals that may exceed 1 in 1,000. Forty-five of these facilities have maximum individual risks of greater than 1 in 100, and one has at least a 1-in-10 risk.

In comparison, when ordering cleanup of toxic waste dumps, the EPA tries to reduce potential cancer risks to 1 in 100,000, or less.

The new estimates represent evaluations of the maximum individual cancer risk that might arise from the inhalation of a single toxic air pollutant from an individual facility. The estimate does not indicate the risk for the entire population in the community, because not everyone would suffer the same exposure.

Burroughs Wellcome Doesn't Have Report

The general site manager at Burroughs Wellcome in Greenville said today that the company did not have a copy of the report that listed the pharmaceutical firm as among six firms in the state whose operations pose a potential cancer risk to its employees.

Larry Seigler said he could not comment on the Environmental Protection Agency report released today.

The report released preliminary information on the potential cancer risk associated with exposure to toxic chemical emissions at more than 200 industrial sites. Burroughs Wellcome was listed as posing the risk of at least 1 in 1,000 but less than 1 in 100 chance of its emissions causing cancer.

Seigler said Burroughs Wellcome knew of the SARA title III reports from EPA, but did not have a copy of the findings. Officials at Burroughs Wellcome headquarters in Research Triangle Park were unavailable for comment.

The specific chemical or chemicals emitted by Burroughs Wellcome was not available from EPA or state sources. The potential risk to the surrounding residents or habitat is also not yet known.

County's Tax Rate May Be Increased

By Stuart Savage
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Unless some items are trimmed from the proposed 1989-1990 budget, Pitt County taxpayers may face a 6 cents per $100 valuation increase in the tax rate to pay for the $8 million in new spending included in the working budget.

At a budget workshop Wednesday, County Manager Kramer Jackson estimated that a 69 cents per $100 valuation tax rate will be required to fund the proposed budget as it now stands. The present tax rate is 63 cents per $100 valuation.

Jackson emphasized that the budget as now proposed includes an 8 percent increase in spending for public school current expense items.

Jackson, who said a number of people at a public hearing on the budget Monday night suggested that local appropriations for the Pitt County schools might be cut in the coming fiscal year, reminded commissioners that the proposed budget includes $807,996 in new local tax money for the county school system's current expense budget as well as $4.2 million for capital outlay items.

The new current expense money, Jackson said, will increase the present $10 million-plus local school current expense budget to about $10.9 million in the coming year.

He said state appropriations for the county school system are expected to increase by about $4 million for the new fiscal year which begins July 1.

"The county is, in fact, not cutting the school's budget," Jackson said.

While the schools are projected to receive more than $800,000 in new money in 1989-1990, the amount is some $2.61 million less than the $3.41 million in new money the Pitt Board of Education has requested.

Commissioners on Wednesday suggested adding $24,000 to the budget to pave three unpaved solid waste container sites as well as $2,500 in new money for the family violence program.

The present county budget amounts to just over $33.91 million, while the working budget for the coming fiscal year is a list of expenditures totaling more than $35 million, including a 5 percent pay raise for county employees and a 6 percent pay hike for teachers.

If all the items the various county departments and agencies have asked for were included in the proposed 1989-1990 budget, the list would total more than $72.95 million.

But commissioners have indicated that some of the big-ticket requests — such as $25 million for capital improvements for the public schools, $22 million for capital projects at Pitt Community College, more than $286,000 for an expansion of the health department, and money for an agricultural center and a new solid waste landfill — might be addressed, in the form of a bond issue or other methods of financing, after the budget for the coming year is adopted.

The commissioners next budget session is scheduled to follow the board's regular meeting on June 19.

U.S. envoy Jim Brown says goodbye to daughter in Beijing

ECU Senior Flees Beijing As Street Fighting Erupts

By Carol Tyer
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The mother of an East Carolina University student who was in a hotel in Beijing's Tiananmen Square when fighting between Chinese soldiers and citizens broke out Saturday is relieved that her daughter is safe in Tokyo today.

Kena Alonso, a Durham real estate agent, said she always believed that her daughter, Brenna, a senior at ECU, and her three traveling companions would be all right.

Miss Alonso's traveling companions are Bowen Vanderberry of Lewisville and Hope Carlson of Durham, both Morehead scholars and seniors at the University of North Carolina, and Woodard "Woody" Heath of Kinston, a senior at Washington and Lee University.

"I couldn't get through to Brenna after I heard the first news of fighting Saturday," Ms. Alonso said. "But she called me twice and I could tell she had her head on straight and was going to do whatever it took to get out of there safely."

As it turned out, the American embassy offered the girls no help, Ms. Alonso said. "I understand today," she said, "that the State Department is chartering planes and getting Americans out. But it's taken all week. I wonder why."

Ms. Alonso said she and Brenna's father, Manuel Alonso, have a British man they know only as Mr. Champion and an American man whose name they do not know to thank for helping their daughter and her friends.

"Mr. Champion got the girls to a train station," she said. "They were thinking at the time to go to Shanghai, but didn't. For one reason, they found out that there was violence there, too. Plus there were students lying on the train tracks keeping the trains from moving."

"When they couldn't make that trip, Mr. Champion got them back to the hotel safely."

Li Peng Shows Up In Public, Praises Army

Beijing Streets Stay Calm Today

By Jim Abrams
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — Premier Li Peng reappeared in public today and praised the the soldiers who crushed the student protests for democracy in Tiananmen Square. "You have worked hard, comrades," he declared.

At the same time, the government issued new martial law orders demanding that student leaders surrender.

Li gave a rousing speech to hundreds of soldiers inside the Great Hall of the People on the square where thousands demonstrated and where the massacre of hundreds of students took place over the weekend. It was his first appearance in public since May 25.

The premier's speech was shown on television after hundreds of military trucks roared into the city center with new supplies. Busloads of foreigners, fearing new violence, rushed to the airport to catch emergency flights out.

Li, accompanied by Vice President Wang Zhen, also regarded as a hard-line conservative, was dressed in a Mao suit and looked fit. He usually wears Western suits, but he also wore a Mao jacket in an appearance just before martial law was declared.

The new martial law orders appeared to suggest the government was planning large-scale arrests of activists who led the movement for a freer and less corrupt China.

The capital's streets were relatively calm today.

Li is believed to be among the leaders who pushed for the military crackdown that ended in the weekend massacre of hundreds of unarmed civilians as troops cleared Tiananmen Square of pro-democracy protesters.

He had not appeared in public since five days after his May 20 declaration of martial law in the capital, and his appearance indicated hardliners may have prevailed over leaders who opposed using troops to quell the protests.

The student protesters had demanded Li resign for declaring martial law after weeks of pro-democracy protests, primarily in Beijing.

The martial law orders called the leaders of independent student and

Tornado

GROSSE TETE, La. — A tornado swept through a block of businesses and trailers early today, killing at least two people, authorities said.

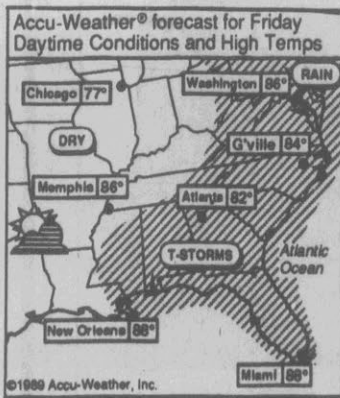

The twister that touched down in this town of 750 after 6 a.m. was part of a storm system that also brought tornadoes to Baton Rouge, 15 miles to the east, and several other Louisiana towns Wednesday night and this morning.

Richard Zuschlag, co-owner of an ambulance service, said his ambulances took at least two dozen people from the Gross Tete and Greensburg areas to the hospital.

Two deaths were confirmed, both from in or near Grosse Tete, the ambulance service said.

"From what I understand, a whole block was laid out," said Kathy St. Angelo, wife of Police Chief Aubrey St. Angelo. "It's pretty bad."

Pitt's High Schoolers Are Going To A Party

By Cherie Evans
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

There'll be music, dancing, movies, videos, racquetball, swimming, food and other activities — but no drugs — during Pitt County's first graduation party.

Juniors and seniors have been invited to a party, Project Graduation, after commencement exercises at the five county high schools Friday under the condition they do not use drugs or alcohol on graduation day.

Sponsored by the Pitt County Council on Substance Abuse with help from Mothers Against Drunk Driving and the East Carolina University Interfraternity Council, the party provides an alternative to drug and alcohol use after graduation, said Dottie Blades, director of the council.

"We're planning for 500" students, she said, noting that student response to the event has been good.

The party will be held in Minges Coliseum at ECU from 10 p.m. Friday to 5 a.m. Saturday, Ms. Blades said.

The Boomers of Charlotte will provide live music, while disc jockeys Jeff Diamond of WRQR-FM 94.3 and Michael Prince of KISS 102-FM will play music when the band takes a break, she said.

Providing the party for the students has been a community effort, Ms. Blades said. McDonald's and Pizza Hut are donating food, Pepsi-Cola and Coca-Cola are providing drinks, TCBY is providing yogurt and Kash and Karry is making popcorn available.

"Throughout the night there will be different things given away," including movie passes, gift certificates, records and tapes, T-shirts and food coupons, Ms. Blades said.

The grand prize to be given to a senior includes a round-trip ticket for two to New York with paid accommodations, provided by the ITG Travel Center in Greenville, and two tickets to the taping of the Cosby Show, provided by WITN-TV in Washington, N.C.

The party will be chaperoned by the Interfraternity Council and other adults, Ms. Blades said. In addition, the ECU police, Greenville police and Pitt County Sheriff's Department will monitor the parking lot and adjacent areas to the coliseum for maximum safety. Two lifeguards will monitor the pool activities.

Greenville's Fire-Rescue Department also will be on standby for any emergencies, she said.

Students attending the event will need to present invitations they have received to get into the party, Ms. Blades said.

Students are given an invitation once they have signed a contract agreeing not to use drugs or alcohol the day of graduation. Parents also sign the contracts, which are turned in to the school principals.

Students still needing to receive a contract may contact Ms. Blades at the council, 752-6847.

Students may leave the party at any time, Ms. Blades said. But, they will not be allowed back in.

There is an area on the contract for parents to sign if they want to be notified when their child leaves the party, she said.

Ms. Blades said it's hoped that the party will help curb a statistic from the National Drug Information Center that says more kids between the ages of 16 and 20 are killed in May and June of each year than at any other time of the year combined.

"That seems to be tied to the prom and graduation celebrations," she said.

Greenville Mayor Ed Carter has declared Friday as Project Graduation Day in Greenville.

Mishap Causes Minor Injuries

Greenville police said minor injuries resulted from a Wednesday afternoon accident on Fifth Street. Officer W.E. Davis said a car driven by Emily Applewhite of Greenville was making a left turn when a truck operated by Maurice Taylor of Fayetteville, traveling behind the Applewhite vehicle, tried to stop. The truck skidded on the wet pavement and struck a tree. Taylor, who received minor injuries in the mishap, was charged with following too closely.

Woman Draws 15-Day Jail Term For Harassing Calls

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A 19-year-old Greenville woman has been sentenced to 15 days in the Pitt County Jail after pleading guilty to placing harassing phone calls to a Greenville police officer.

District Court Judge David Leech suspended a six-year prison sentence Wednesday for Tammy Pauline Mizelle of Lot 32, Tice Trailer Park, on the condition that she serve the jail term, remain on supervised probation for five years, undergo drug testing, submit to searches by her probation officer and participate in any psychiatric treatment programs her probation officer recommends.

Ms. Mizelle pleaded guilty to three counts of placing harassing phone calls to Police Sgt. Patsy W. Scheutzow. Each charge is a misdemeanor with a maximum punishment of two years in prison.

Warrants state that the offenses occurred on April 25 and April 28, and that the harassment was repeated and annoying.

Leech fashioned the sentence so that Ms. Mizelle is to remain in jail on weekends from 9 p.m. Fridays until 6 a.m. Mondays. Each week night she is to remain in jail from 9 p.m. until 6 a.m., with her days free to work at her job at a local cleaners and attend Pitt Community College.

Her attorney, Robin Fornes of Greenville, said she is an honor student at PCC.

Leech heard testimony from Sgt. Scheutzow and Dr. Ed Katz, a psychiatrist who said that he first examined Ms. Mizelle in 1985 when she was charged in Juvenile Court with phoning in bomb threats to the Pitt County schools.

He said she was diagnosed as having a conduct disorder and participated in treatment programs at the Pitt County Mental Health Center in 1985 and 1988, as well as undergoing psychotherapy at Cherry Hospital in Goldsboro.

Haigwood said Ms. Mizelle had previously been convicted as an adult in District Court for communicating threats and harassing phone calls, and she received a suspended sentence and probation. Because of her record, he asked Leech to impose an active sentence.

"Her conduct is of such a reprehensible nature that it calls for imprisonment," he said. "It's time she saw the inside of jail."

Fornes asked Leech to impose a sentence that would provide both strong supervision and treatment, but not jail time.

Prior to sentencing, Ms. Mizelle spoke to Leech, saying she was unhappy that no one in court considered why she placed the calls. She said she harassed Sgt. Scheutzow because she believed the officer wrongly charged her with a past offense.

"I felt she had made a misjudgment. That's why I continued to harass her," Ms. Mizelle said. "She charged me with something I absolutely did not do ... I think that should be the issue: why I did it."

She said she realizes now that her actions were inappropriate.

Court documents show that Ms. Mizelle was convicted of communicating threats in June 1986 in a case in which Sgt. Scheutzow was the complainant.

Leech told Ms. Mizelle it is a sign of maturity to be able to accept the fact that life is not always perfect, and she should take this opportunity to obtain help for her problem.

ECU Coach Pleads Guilty In DWI Case

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

An assistant football coach at East Carolina University has been fined $100 and ordered to perform 24 hours of community service after pleading guilty to a charge of drunken driving.

Timothy Alvin Kelly, 34, 320 Haven Circle, Unit 4, Greenville, pleaded guilty Wednesday to driving while impaired in connection with an April 2 arrest in which a Greenville police officer said he found Kelly asleep behind the wheel of a car parked downtown with the engine running and the lights on.

Kelly blew a .19 and a .20 on the Breathalyzer, court records said. State law mandates that a person is legally impaired with a blood-alcohol content of .10.

Kelly pleaded guilty to a Level 5 DWI, which is the least severe DWI offense. In accordance with state law, he will lose his driver's license for a year. But he will be allowed to drive for certain activities Mondays through Fridays from 6 a.m. to 8 p.m., according to his limited driving privilege signed by District Court Judge David Leech of Greenville.

A New Bern native, Kelly came to ECU earlier this year from Austin Peay State University in Clarksville, Tenn., after Bill Lewis was hired to replace Art Baker as head coach. He coaches defensive linemen and has recruited heavily in the Cumberland County area.

After the arrest, ECU Athletic Director Dave Hart issued a statement through the university which said Kelly recognized the seriousness of the incident and was formally reprimanded. Hart has declined to comment on any disciplinary action taken.

Leech suspended a 60-day jail term for Kelly for five years on the conditions that he pay the fine, court costs, perform the community service, undergo alcohol assessment and complete the Alcohol and Drug Education Training School at the Pitt County Mental Health Center.

Upon request by a law enforcement officer, he must also submit to a blood test, breath test or urinalysis for the purpose of detecting alcohol or controlled substances. He must not use, possess or sell any illegal drugs, nor frequent any location where the activity occurs, according to the judgment.

The Pitt County community service office said Kelly has not yet been assigned an agency where he will complete the 24 hours of work. The office customarily interviews clients and attempts to place each one with an agency where their skills may be utilized. There are more than 50 agencies in the county participating in the program.

On the application for a limited driving privilege, Kelly stated he will be driving a 1988 Ford Taurus. Records from the state Division of Motor Vehicles in Raleigh state that Hastings Ford in Greenville owns the automobile's license tag.

Sheryl Andrews, general manager of Hastings, said the dealership donates a car to the university for a coach to drive, but she would comment on whether their vehicle is the one Kelly will be operating.

"We have no comment. I'm not certain if that's our car or not," she said.

When Kelly was arrested, he was operating a 1989 Chevrolet donated to the university by Glyn Collins Chevrolet of Dunn.

The limited driving privilege defines standard working hours as 6 a.m. to 8 p.m. on weekdays, and Kelly will be allowed to drive for work, educational related activity, or maintenance of household during those hours. He may only drive at other times for emergency medical care, according to the document.

The privilege states that if Kelly drives with the odor of alcohol on his breath, he may be subject to arrest and loss of the privilege. If he violates any restrictions imposed by Leech, it would constitute the offense of driving while his license is revoked, and the privilege becomes invalid.

Telethon

The Children's Miracle Network Telethon, which aired recently on WITN-TV, raised $160,200 for the Children's Hospital of Eastern North Carolina.

Tom Fortner, public information officer for the hospital, said the telethon received 2,851 phone calls that generated $81,588 in pledges. He said that in the previous three years the phone pledges have generated approximately $60,000 each year.

Special events, such as bike-athons and charity runs, raised $15,800. The remainder was donated from local corporate sponsors and national sponsors.

Margaret Sullivan, the telethon coordinator, said, "It was bigger and better, and that's all we can ask for."

Fortner said that more than 600 volunteers combined to produce the telethon.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Remember ...

An Accomplishment Worth Note

What advice to give those who turn their tassels Friday?

What to say to those 1,000 or so high school graduates in Pitt County that will successfully complete the first chapter of their lives with a handshake and a diploma?

That the hard work begins now? That they will face more choices in the next few years than they've ever imagined? That this end, which is actually its beginning, merely gives them a license to start their lives? That the blank slate of the future is their resource? That the diploma they have earned will have a meaningful, tangible effect on their future.

All these statements are true. But the last one — the fact that the diploma has real meaning — may be the most significant.

The graduates that will receive their degrees at commencement ceremonies around the county are bright, diverse and hardworking. They are also educated. Perhaps not as satisfactorily learned as they and the community might desire, but educated nevertheless. The little piece of paper they will step forward to accept means something. To earn it is an accomplishment worth note. For these 1,000 young adults, it signifies perseverance and skill.

While a high school diploma isn't a guarantee of a high-paying job, statistically it is a way out of poverty, unemployment — and a way toward a satisfactory, fulfilled life. For some, it is the first step toward college and more learning. For others, who will enter the work force promptly after graduation, it is a ticket to a decent job.

If you don't believe this diploma has real impact, take a look at some figures. This class started out 25 percent bigger. Somewhere in the past 12 years, if the class of 1989 is typical of a graduating class in North Carolina, 250 students dropped out of school. Whether from frustration or because of economics or because the education became irrelevant, one-fourth of the class of 1989 won't receive a high school degree. The latest estimates have that figure rising to one-third by the next century.

The 1,000 or so graduates will have skills and knowledge that an estimated 250 of their peers won't have.

Keep that tidbit in mind while you mull over some more data. Over 77 percent of the households in North Carolina who live in poverty are headed by someone without a high school diploma. That statistic alone illustrates how important tomorrow's commencement is for the 1,000 Pitt County graduates.

And it is equally important for the taxpayers of Pitt County. What may be less obvious, but more serious, are the effects of dropping out on the community. Those without high school diplomas have a hard time finding employment. When they do secure work, often it's a low paying position. The price for that deficiency is one paid for out of public coffers through increasing dependence on social welfare programs.

So as festivities begin for the Pitt County class of '89, the community has reason to applaud these 1,000 successful graduates. The advice to that class: pursue your dreams and work hard. Remember the one-fourth that didn't make it. Use your skills and your education to whittle down that number.

'The 1,000 or so graduates will have skills and knowledge that an estimated 250 of their peers won't have.'

The Baby Is Not The Cause Of Sex

WASHINGTON — From a New York Times op-ed piece by Suzanne Garment comes the oddest of sentences: "It took nearly a decade of political turmoil, beginning in the 1960s, to produce the intense preoccupation with presidential ethics that led to Watergate...." Garment is in need of instruction. She thinks the baby is the cause of sex.

Watergate was not produced by "an intense preoccupation with presidential ethics," but rather by an intense disinterest in it. The result, certified by courts and congressional committees, was lying and criminality on the part of the Nixon administration, not to mention the resignation of the President himself. Even revisionist history cannot be revised that much.

'Watergate was not produced by "an intense preoccupation with presidential ethics," but rather by an intense disinterest in it. The result, certified by courts and congressional committees, was lying and criminality ...'

But Garment, a former Wall Street Journal columnist, expressed a certain body of thought in Washington — those people who think that in ethics, as in other matters, you can have too much of a good thing. What Garment wrote was echoed by House Speaker Jim Wright. In his version of what brought him down, he was the victim of an "evil wind" which, like acid rain, corroded the Capitol, setting member upon member in a Visigothic rage of rampant ethicalism.

Wright likened the present mood to the Spanish Inquisition and, in a mighty mixing of metaphors, threw in "cannibalism" as well. At this, the House of Representatives roared to its feet since, for some unaccountable reason, the most powerful people in the land think themselves helpless victims. They profess not to know the rules which, if I may translate, comes down to the nagging suspicion that the public will no longer tolerate hypocrisy. It really wants its public servants to do what's best for the people, not for those who befriend or enrich them.

Maybe I can be of some service. I once wrote about the difficulties of buying a car: the confusing sales talk, the need to bargain, the shell game of arranging financing. Instantly, the phone rang — car dealers wishing to prove that the difference between them and St. Francis was merely one of occupation. One well-meaning guy almost hooked me. Through his leasing division, he offered to buy any car I wanted and sell it to me at cost. I named the car and he named the price — a savings of $5,000.

I did the requisite mulling and then went to see my editor for a rabbinical chat. He asked but two questions: Would the offer have been made to just anyone? And how would I feel if I accepted? The answers were obvious. The offer was made because of my column and, if I accepted, I would have felt compromised. With a heavy heart and, worse, a lighter wallet, I bought elsewhere.

These rules can be applied to Congress as well: Don't take anything others cannot also get and don't do anything that sets the conscience to fluttering. As applied to Wright, we can see that he broke those rules. He entered into business deals that were denied others and benefited when others didn't. He got those deals because he was a mighty politician. For Wright to pretend otherwise puts him in the category of rich old men who think they are being wooed for their good looks.

When congressmen rue for the "old days" they are really being nostalgic for an era when hypocrisy was king. Then, as now, no congressmen ever declaimed that his office or his influence was for sale. But that was often the case. Often ensured re-election by a strong party structure, they could do favors and, on occasion, accept bribes with every assurance that no one would notice and no one much cared. All that has changed. The public now expects the deed to conform to the rhetoric. That may be idealistic, but it's not cannibalism.

And yet from Congress and from writers such as Garment come lamentations about ethical standards being so strict they are suffocating. What in the world are these people talking about? Of the 535 members of Congress, just two have thus far departed on account of ethical charges — Wright and Rep. Tony Coelho (D-Calif.). The latter, a clever and charming man, nevertheless bought a $100,000 junk bond that, had he been an average guy making $89,000 a year, would not have been offered to him. Did Coelho do wrong? Ask him. He now concedes he made a mistake.

Garment's sentence structure is both telling and symbolic. In her view — in the view of many others also — it is not the ethical violations that matter, but the discovery and publicizing of them. In this way, we are told not to worry about the pernicious effect of money on the national legislature but the more pernicious effect of disclosure and, in rare cases, punishment.

Like Garment's sentence on Watergate, that thinking is backward: Ethics is an issue because ethics is a problem.

Avant Garde Or Retro-Garde?

BOSTON — How Life magazine does love its anniversary issues. You know, the 100th anniversary of the Johnstown flood, the 100th anniversary of Charlie Chaplin's birth, the 100th anniversary of the bra.

The bra? Yes, the heirs to Henry and Clare Boothe Luce's picture magazine have an All-American woman on the June cover in a fullsome white lace bra. There she stands next to the cover line: "Hurrah for THE BRA. It's 100 years old this month."

What's going on here? A pitch to the audience that seeks meaning in the first syllable of titillation? Or a straightforward, unabashed photogenic look at the culture of clothing? Has Life produced a sexy centerfold or wholesome centerpiece on womanhood? Or can they have it both ways?

No American, circa 1989, is shocked anymore at the sight of a woman in her underwear. Every Sunday supplement has its bra ads. There is more exposure in Sports Illustrated's annual bathing suit issue. If one magazine can put a black-lace Madonna on its cover another can put a white-lace Modern Woman on its cover.

Nevertheless, a bra on the front of Life would once have raised the hackles of every woman who ever debated whether she should wear one. When an utterly mainstream, traditionally middle-of-the-road magazine like this leads with its chest, it raises double questions about double messages. All the familiar issues about female sexuality and public imagery.

In 1989, we are bosom-deep in the post-feminist era. Words like "sexism, sex object, exploitation" sound vaguely archaic. We are supposed to be post-worrying about such things, happy that we can "once again" be feminine AND feminist, wear lacy undergarments inside our surgical scrubsuits.

Indeed, in best post-feminist style, the Life cover story was written, photographed and edited by women. The writer, Claudia Dowling, captioned the come-hither photos with a cool, correct text on the history of lingerie and liberation. The managing editor, Pat Ryan, calls it "a small tiny milestone on what's happened to women."

Ellen Goodman

But what's happened to women is not all that clear. Nor is it clear whether the great bra hurrah is avant-garde or retro-garde.

Long before 1968, when protesters dumped their bras in a trash can, there was a debate about the relationship between the sexual revolution and women's liberation. Was the centerfold a free and body-proud woman or the slave of men? (Yes, boys and girls, people actually did use phrases like that.) Should a woman be able to wear a wet T-shirt down 42nd St. without being hassled by a "sexist pig"? If she isn't dressed in combat boots is she asking for it?

Questions like these never really get resolved. The line between what's sexy and what's titillating is as fuzzy as the line between being admired and being oggled. There is a prudishness that leads down the road to the "freedom" of life inside a chador. There's a forwardness that leads to a disco full of Merry Widows asking to be taken seriously. I suspect that most of us come down somewhere in the middle here. We don't want to cover Naked Majas, but would be more comfy having dinner with Madonna if she put on some more clothes.

But back to the Life-like bra. Over the years I've developed an imperfect but useful test to decide when something goes too far, when it slips into the brown-paper-wrapper category. There are two questions on it.

(1) Is this something a reasonable woman would want on her resume?

(2) Would they have done the same thing to a man? I doubt that any of the female writers and editors — leaving pulchritude aside — would have posed for this cover. I am even more certain that Life would not, will not, set aside an illustrated anniversary issue called "Hurrah for the Jockstrap."

But as a final test, I showed this to assorted experts of the male persuasion. Not one said, "Ah, at last, a chronology of the relationship between women's roles and undergarments." When I asked them what this story was about, they answered to a man: "Boobs." What we have here is a spread of luscious ladies over a sprightly history of everything from falsies to Cooper's Droop. What we have is a cover selling sex as history.

In the immortal words of my old playground companions, June is bustin' out all over Life magazine.

March Storm Hastens Sea's Approach On Coast

By Paul Nowell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KILL DEVIL HILLS, N.C. — The message on Armand Muller's answering machine tells a sad story: "The ClayDon Motor Lodge has been condemned due to the storm of March 7," Muller tells callers seeking to make reservations for the summer.

After 34 years, the quaint complex of 33 apartments and cottages is no more. It was so severely damaged by the brutal March northeaster that Muller and his wife, Betty, cannot rebuild and still meet the state's strict setback requirements.

The storm that battered the Outer Banks for four days in early March left an estimated $4.5 million in damages in its wake. Much of the damage occurred in the towns of Nags Head, Kill Devil Hills and Kitty Hawk.

The storm also caused severe erosion beneath the Herbert C. Bonner Bridge that leads to Hatteras Island to the south.

Because the bridge is the only link to the island, North Carolina of-officials are asking the federal government to approve construction of a barrier at the Oregon Inlet to protect the southern approaches to the bridge.

Despite the damages, the March storm paled in comparison to the major hurricanes that ripped through the Outer Banks in the 1930s and 1950s.

It has been years since the barrier islands have taken a direct hit from a hurricane. Just last week, however, the National Weather Service said hurricanes threaten the Outer Banks more often than any other part of the Eastern seaboard.

Before the spring storms, Muller had the property up for sale for $1 million. He is not optimistic he will collect anything close to that in insurance.

So far, Muller estimates he has filled out 22 pounds of paperwork to collect insurance for his losses. "I no longer measure it in pages," he explained.

"Most people think if you own beachfront property and you're insured, you are wealthy," he said. "That's just not so."

While the Mullers wait for their settlement, they have been living on money withdrawn from Mrs. Muller's individual retirement account. They were forced to rent a small house to replace their apartment at the motor lodge.

"We're making our plans day to day," Muller said. "We can't do anything until we settle. When the storm hit, the cash flow just stopped." The infamous Ash Wednesday storm 27 years ago destroyed some 1,800 dwellings and caused more than $234 million in damages. Coincidentally, that storm hit North Carolina's barrier islands on March 7, 1962.

In the 27 years since the Ash Wednesday storm, the Outer Banks has developed rapidly, meaning more structures are vulnerable to pounding waves and strong winds. A similar storm would certainly cause more damage with much higher dollar values.

George Hux, tax administrator for Dare County, said more than 250 homes and businesses were affected by the March storm. Eighteen homes were destroyed in Nags Head and Kitty Hawk and another 50 sustained severe damage, he said.

To make matters worse, experts say the recent storms destroyed much of the dune line from Kitty Hawk to Hatteras, making those areas more vulnerable to a storm surge during a hurricane.

In South Nags Head, Frank and Evelyn Schmitt have watched the beach erode some 80 feet in front of the cottage they built in 1975.

"When I bought this lot I was told the beach would erode about six feet every 10 years," Schmitt said in an interview on his deck overlooking the Atlantic Ocean. "I remember we had dunes so high you couldn't see the ocean."

As he spoke, the waves lapped within 15 feet of the steps at the bottom of the deck.

"Before the storm we had about 20 feet of dunes," he said.

Next door, large sand bags that were brought in to protect the cottage in March remained in place.

"There's five cottages on this street and three have been condemned," said Schmitt, a retired high school history teacher from New York.

Would he sell?

"Absolutely," he said. "How much money do you have in your pocket? Everything down here is for sale, but no one can sell."

Nags Head town manager Webb Fuller sympathizes with Schmitt's plight. Like others, he blames the federal flood insurance program for encouraging developers to build on lots that are not protected from the ocean in storms.

The program, which is partially subsidized by taxpayers, allows owners of beachfront property to obtain insurance at a deflated price. For example, Schmitt said he pays about $800 a year for flood insurance.

"We have a certain number of houses that were built on smaller lots," Fuller said. "This isn't allowed any more. Now it's put up time."

Fuller said most Nags Head residents support the state's tough regulations against building too close to the water.

As for existing structures, "Our basic philosophy is move it or lose it," he said.

The town of Nags Head is currently debating a proposal that would curtail certain beachfront development. The planning board is floating a plan that would prohibit construction of more oceanfront hotels, motels or condominium complexes.

As expected, the plan is opposed by the business community.

"The planning board is feeling tremendous heat," Fuller said. "The question is, how do we want our oceanfront to look like in 20 years?"

Following the March storm, Kitty Hawk officials informed Hux's office that there were no buildable ocean-side lots left in the town that could meet the state's strict setback requirements.

Author David Stick has watched in horror as a generation of newcomers to the Outer Banks ignored the warnings of the Ash Wednesday storm.

In his 1987 book titled simply "The Ash Wednesday Storm," Stick uses his words and the photographs of the late Aycock Brown to illustrate the impact of a major storm on the fragile strand of islands.

"When this storm subsided it looked about the same as it did after the Ash Wednesday storm," he said. "Houses that were almost destroyed 27 years ago fell in this time."

Stick has no sympathy for the owners of cottages and businesses that built too close to the ocean.

"I don't see anything terrible about it," he said. "Too many damn fools are building too close to the ocean when they should know better."

Corporate Laws Overhauled

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — An overhaul of North Carolina's corporate laws was enacted Wednesday when the Senate concurred with House amendments to the measure.

The bill, which a study commission recommended, makes the first major changes in the corporate laws since 1955. Sponsors said they hoped the revisions would encourage more industries to locate in the state, but the law still tries to preserve protections for small corporations and shareholders.

Among other changes, the law will require corporations to file annual reports with the state listing their principal officers and the members of their boards of directors. The current law does not require corporations to list the names of current officers, only those who formed the corporation originally.

Its enactment culminated efforts begin in 1987 to modernize the state's corporate laws.

Some of the major provisions included in both versions would:

— Retain anti-takeover laws enacted in 1987 and designed to protect the interests of North Carolina shareholders of companies threatened by hostile takeovers.

— Establish one central office within the Secretary of State's Office for filing corporate documents.

— Require corporations conducting business in North Carolina to file annual reports with the Secretary of State's Office, listing their addresses, identifying their principal officers and members of their boards of directors, and providing brief descriptions of their business.

Senate Panel Accepts Proposal Requiring Helmets For Mopeds

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A bill to eliminate North Carolina's mandatory helmet law for motorcycles has undergone extensive body work. It now would reduce the penalty for violations while bringing mopeds under the mandate.

"It's sort of a deregulation and regulation bill at the same time," said Rep. Steve Wood, R-Guilford, as his bill easily passed the Senate Transportation Committee on Wednesday.

"It looks like it's on track," Wood said. "Even the motorcycle dealers are behind it. They'll be able to sell that many more helmets."

In fact, legislative zeal over the safety measure is so strong the Senate may try to require helmets for bicycle riders as well, he said.

Wood's original bill drew little enthusiasm in the House, but a subcommittee grudgingly agreed to reduce the penalty from a $100 misdemeanor to a $25 infraction.

The idea of mandating helmets for moped riders came during the full committee's debate. Some lawmakers said convicted drunken drivers were increasingly using mopeds for transportation after losing their driver's licenses.

The idea of including bicycles gained momentum Wednesday as officials used statistics on bicycle injuries to speak in favor of moped helmets.

Tom Cole of the Division of Health Services' Injury Control Branch said a recent study of bicycle riders showed the risk of serious injury could be reduced by about 85 percent if they wear helmets.

While there were only 10 fatalities among North Carolina moped riders in 1988, Cole noted that 84 percent of the accidents involved another vehicle. For that reason, the relatively slow mopeds still can have serious crashes, he said.

Dr. Jeff Runge, a physician in the trauma unit at Charlotte Memorial Hospital, said every serious head injury, whether suffered by a motorcyclist or a bicycle rider, costs society an average of $1.2 million in direct medical costs and such indirect impacts as lost income and taxes.

"Society should be protected from those folks who want to ride around and feel the wind in their hair," he said.

Sen. A.D. Guy, D-Onslow, started drafting an amendment to add bicyclists to the bill but decided not to offer it in committee. He may press for it when the full Senate considers the bill later this week.

State Health Director Dr. Ron Levine warned that requiring helmets for bicyclists would require a "major behavioral change" and might draw considerable public outcry.

"I think in the next few years there will be serious consideration given to the idea," he said, adding that horseback riders also should be considered.

Victoria Cope of the Concerned Bikers Association found herself in an awkward position. Her group originally sought repeal of the helmet law and still supports reducing the fine. But she disagreed with claims that helmets improve safety.

Ms. Cope cited federal studies showing there is no significant difference in serious injury rates between states that require helmets and those that do not. And she said other studies show no helmet is capable of withstanding an impact of more than 13 miles an hour.

Helmets restrict visibility and distort sound while creating heat that can result in dizziness, Ms. Cope said.

Still, she endorsed the inclusion of moped riders in the interests of "fairness," saying they are just as likely to be injured as motorcyclists. Ms. Cope also said she supports helmets for children who may not be prepared to make responsible decisions about the issue.

The only amendment considered by the committee was one by Sen. Ted Kaplan, D-Forsyth, to leave the fine at $100. He cast the lone vote for that proposal.

RDU Fares At The Top

RALEIGH (AP) — Airline fares at Raleigh-Durham International Airport in 1988 were the fifth highest out of 30 major hub airports, according to a study by the Air Transport Association.

Airline fares at RDU were 21.15 percent above the national average, according to the study. RDU fares were higher than those at larger airports such as Washington's Dulles Airport, Dallas-Fort Worth and Chicago's O'Hare Airport.

Charlotte's Douglas International Airport had the eighth highest fares of the group studied, with fares 20.07 percent above average.

Average fares at hub airports are slightly higher than those at airports without a predominant airline, the study said. But average fares have decreased at most hubs, with competition increasing substantially since deregulation a decade ago, the study said. However, average fares have increased at RDU since 1980, it said.

Experts say cities with hub operations have more non-stop flights and people are willing to pay more for non-stop service.

Gardner Says His Survey Shows NEA Misreading Career Ladder

Teachers' Spokesman Says He's Victim Of Faulty Reading

By John Flesher
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Results of a teacher survey conducted by Lt. Gov. Jim Gardner's office indicate the North Carolina Association of Educators has given misleading assessments of its members' feelings about the Career Ladder Program.

"The NCAE has said teachers overwhelmingly do not want to be evaluated," Gardner said. "The responses that I have received from classroom teachers say that 2-to-1 they want to be evaluated, they want to be graded on the quality of their work."

The career ladder provides teachers with higher pay based on evaluations of their teaching performance. It has been established in 16 school systems on an experimental basis. But statewide implementation, which could cost as much as $350 million a year, has been delayed because of questions about the evaluation process.

"I just feel a little bit stronger about it," Gardner said at a Wednesday news conference. "I think it is so important that we cannot back away from making it mandatory in this state."

But NCAE President Karen Garr said Gardner was misreading the results of his own survey, which she said confirm her group's argument that the career ladder is unpopular with teachers.

"He's found exactly what we've found," she said. "He's found that they aren't for the career ladder."

Gardner mailed a survey to all 62,048 certified public school teachers in March. A total of 16,314, or 26.3 percent, responded.

He acknowledged the survey was not scientific, but said his pool of participants was larger than those in the typical public opinion poll. "If anybody else has a larger sampling of 16,000 classroom teachers, then I'd like to know who it is and ask them to send it forward," he said.

Of the respondents, 53.5 percent favored retaining the career ladder as it is or with changes or want more information about it, while 39 percent opposed it, Gardner said. He said that statistic casts doubt on the NCAE's report in January that roughly 92 percent of its 47,000 members oppose the program.

Hearing Produces Support, Some Reservations For Schools Of Choice

RALEIGH — If public schools had to compete for students, they would have fewer problems with discipline and other shortcomings that have eroded the quality of education, supporters of "schools of choice" say.

A state House subcommittee conducted a hearing Wednesday on a bill that would let local school boards give parents some choice in where their children attend school.

The bill would let boards restrict the choices to schools within their district, or they could make agreements with neighboring districts to let students cross district lines.

"Choice schools is the only reform with a consistent record of actual improvement in real public schools," said Stan Ayers of the Republican Liberty Caucus. "It shines like a beacon against a bleak background of constantly increasing expenditures and declining educational achievement."

None of the 10 people who spoke during a hearing before the House Subcommittee on Elementary and Secondary Education rejected the concept of choice. However, representatives of several education groups voiced reservations, warning that it could undo integration, cause transportation problems and lead high schools to compete for athletes as colleges do.

"It opens the door to potentially undesirable and unintended consequences," said Raymond Sarbaugh, executive director of the North Carolina Association of School Administrators.

He joined spokesmen for the state's school boards, teachers and the Department of Public Instruction in endorsing further study of school choice but urging caution.

Karen Garr, president of the North Carolina Association of Educators, said schools of choice are no substitute for well-paid teachers and properly equipped classrooms.

In his State of the State address in January, Gov. Jim Martin urged the Legislature to study the issue but made no specific proposal.

The subcommittee took no vote on the bill, sponsored by Rep. Steve Wood, R-Guilford.

In remarks to the subcommittee, Wood described choice as "a diverse new trend in education policy involving various forms of competition and choice."

Already, many states are experimenting with innovations such as magnet schools, encouraging high school juniors and seniors to take college courses, and letting parents send their children to neighboring school districts, Wood said.

"What is common in each program is that parents, as consumers of education, are given a choice in where to send their children as opposed to being restricted by their school district residence," he said. Choice, he said, would force schools to offer good-quality instruction or lose students.

Addressing the segregation issue, Vernon Robinson, a faculty member at Winston-Salem State University, said North Carolina's "dirty little secret" is that many allegedly desegregated schools separate white and black students by classroom. In many schools, classes for academically talented youngsters are predominantly white and remedial classes are mostly black, he said.

The school-choice bill "has ample protection to maintain racial balance by school," Robinson said. "More importantly, it expands the choices afforded parents of children not currently served well by the existing system."

The public schools are "messed up" because of a myriad of problems ranging from poor discipline to low standards, said Douglas Alexander, a Wake County high school teacher.

Environmental Bill Has Doubtful Road

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A dispute between business lobbyists and environmentalists has left in doubt the future of a bill that would allow tougher environmental regulations in North Carolina.

After several meetings of the House Basic Resources Subcommittee on Water, Air and Soil, neither side appeared willing to move and the chairman, Rep. Ray Fletcher, D-Burke, said Wednesday it would be fruitless to consider the bill until a compromise could be reached.

"It's not dead, but it's asleep," said Bill Holman, a lobbyist for the N.C. Conservation Council and the Sierra Club.

Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, told the subcommittee Wednesday the bill to let North Carolina exceed federal rules in regulating pollution is being undermined by industry. In exchange for repealing the handcuff provision, businesses want assurances that no rules will be adopted without extensive cost-benefit analyses, he said.

"Repeal of the Hardison amendments is, in effect, being held hostage to greatly expand cost-benefit analysis to areas that had nothing to do with the Hardison amendments," Hackney said. "The intent ... is to discourage environmental regulation."

Industry lobbyists have successfully blocked the adoption of air quality standards for years, he said.

"Industries have the resources, both political and legal, to tie up proposed environmental rulemaking for great, long periods of time and this greatly enhances their ability to do that," Hackney said.

But Rep. Vernon Abernethy, R-Gaston, denied the bill is being held hostage or that the cost-benefit provisions are anti-environment.

"What I would like to discourage is the willy-nilly establishment of environmental regulations," Abernethy said.

Hackney proposed holding off consideration of the bill until next year, but Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, the bill's sponsor, said that would accomplish nothing. He suggested putting both the Hardison amendment repeal and the cost-benefit analyses into effect for a trial period of four years.

"Let's try it and see what it does," he said. "Let's see whether it really creates some burdens."

Jones' Proposal To Limit Fund-Raisers Is Still In Committee

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The practice of soliciting lobbyists for what amounts to campaign contributions during the legislative session is tradition in the General Assembly, but efforts are under way to curb it.

Rep. Walter Jones, D-Pitt, is sponsoring a measure to prohibit fund-raisers for legislators in odd-numbered years, when the General Assembly convenes for its long sessions. His bill would not affect party fund-raisers scheduled in the next two weeks.

Jones' bill was scheduled for a House vote on May 10 but was returned to the House Judiciary Committee, where it remains.

House Speaker Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, said he shares some of Jones' concerns. In a letter May 31 to the House majority leader, Rep. Dennis Wicker, D-Lee, the speaker said he would not ask lobbyists to buy tickets to the Democratic Legislative Campaign Committee's $100-a-person fund-raiser.

"I especially feel uncomfortable with the DLCC's emphasis on selling tickets to lobbyists," Mavretic wrote to Wicker, who appointed the House members of the Democratic Legislative Campaign Committee. "With so much important legislation about to be decided by the General Assembly, I would not want any member's actions to be misunderstood."

Mavretic did not know about a Republican fund-raiser when he wrote the letter. But Tim Kent, his executive assistant, said the speaker would see no difference between the GOP event and the Democratic fund-raiser.

"The timing is the question and in relation to soliciting money from people who have a vested interest in certain legislation," Kent said.

Wicker and Rep. Harold Brubaker, R-Randolph, a director of the Republican Legislative Forum, both said they see no harm in asking lobbyists to buy tickets to fund-raisers during a legislative session.

"It boils down to individual members who have to decide whether selling a ticket or asking a lobbyist to buy a ticket puts them in a compromising position," Wicker said.

"We need to do away with the lobbyists then, so they won't be captivated," Brubaker said. "They have to make their own decisions."

As for the timing, Brubaker said, he thinks there is more pressure to buy tickets to fund-raisers at the beginning of legislative sessions. "At the end, most legislation is ironed out or most people know what's going to happen to it," he said.

Several major issues are still pending, including the state budget and teacher pay, a bill to let furniture retailers continue toll-free telephone sales and the proposed $8.6 billion highway construction package.

Bill Holman, lobbyist for the Sierra Club and the Conservation Council of North Carolina, said it doesn't matter when the parties hold their fund-raisers. As long as they come during the legislative session, he said, the pressure's the same.

"Lobbyists are expected to buy tickets," Holman said. "It's a bit awkward to say no."

"I don't know that a lobbyist has much choice but to give animals in the marketplace. We can't go anywhere else. I think people are getting fed up with it."

The N.C. Republican Legislative Forum, a political action committee affiliated with the state GOP, has scheduled a $150-a-person fund-raiser for Thursday at an exclusive country club in Cary.

And the Democratic event, billed as the Elephant Safari Hunt, is set for June 15 at a Raleigh farm — 15 days before the June 30 adjournment date the legislative leadership has in mind.

Jets Go Boom For Graduates

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — A gesture of good will to high school graduates backfired in a cloud of idling jet exhaust on Wednesday when Charlotte-Douglas International Airport officials tried to reroute air traffic so the noise wouldn't interfere with outdoor ceremonies.

The less than satisfactory results were felt all the way to Atlanta.

Thanks to bad weather, a system of altered takeoff and landing patterns to avoid the 9:30 a.m. graduations of Olympic West Mecklenburg and Harding highs in Charlotte — located near the ends of the airport's three runways — failed miserably.

"We had absolutely the worst of all possible situations," said airport Director Jerry Orr.

"It was a mess," said Phil Loftin, Federal Aviation Administration tower chief.

Flight plans already delayed because of sudden thunderstorms dissolved into near-chaos when the Charlotte airport began the rerouting plan at 9 a.m. Problems quickly spread to some connecting airports.

"I know some planes sat on the ground in Atlanta for an excessive period," Loftin said.

That meant passengers waiting in Charlotte missed connections and the planes were thrown off their schedules. When thunderstorms worsened Wednesday morning, controllers had to abandon the plan and send planes out as fast as they could.

"We heard a lot of complaints from a lot of people today," Orr said.

One came from Kay Boone. "I sat out there and counted 13 planes in 45 minutes," said the West Mecklenburg school secretary. "It was horrible."

Military Tests Cold Limitations

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — A scientist at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill is working with the U.S. Navy and the Marine Corps to test the limits of human performance in cold conditions.

"What we are doing is creating profiles of how servicemen function under normal conditions and then looking for symptoms or markers for when they have become fatigued through exposure to cold on land or at sea," said Anthony Hackney.

"The Navy and the Marine Corps want to know when it is time to pull people out of the field because those people cannot carry out their mission effectively and, until they recover, are the same as casualties."

Hackney, an assistant professor of physical education at UNC, is helping the armed services through grants from the Naval Health Research Center that pay part of his salary.

He and UNC graduates and colleagues from the center followed Marines on maneuvers to Pickle Meadow, Calif., in January. The mountain warfare training area there is high in the Sierra Nevada Mountains north of Yosemite National Park, where temperatures at night dropped to 30 degrees below zero.

"At Pickle Meadow, the men lived in tents in the snow for almost two weeks in a typical winter combat deployment," Hackney said. "They were put in simulated combat situations complete with friendly and aggressor forces, forced marches, espionage and sabotage."

Among the tasks the men had to perform were running up hills in two feet of snow carrying packs, weapons, skis and sometimes each other. Hackney also helped establish a laboratory in the field where researchers could measure oxygen consumption and explosive muscular activity as Marines rode stationary bicycles.

Future data-gathering trips will include southern California this summer, and tentatively, Alaska's Aleutian Islands in the fall and northern Norway next spring.

Couple Stays Together In Death

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GASTONIA — Vnette and James McKeehan were inseparable in life — and in death.

Mrs. McKeehan collapsed and died of a heart attack Monday night in front of her family as they told her of McKeehan's death earlier that evening. Although her death was a shock, said daughter Deborah Maier, it was what Mrs. McKeehan wanted.

McKeehan, 69, died at Gaston Memorial Hospital after a long bout with emphysema. Shortly after, his two sons and four daughters gathered at their parents' home.

"She knew when we came in that he had died," Mrs. Maier said. "We told her how daddy died and how peaceful it was and now he was with the Lord."

"She talked to each one of us, and she said, 'That's what I was praying for,' and she said, 'I want to go, too.' So she did."

The family felt it would be better for Mrs. McKeehan to be at home when told of her husband's death.

When she was told, Mrs. McKeehan sat back in her chair, began to gasp and collapsed.

"They were very close," Mrs. Maier said. "Ever since I can remember. Everywhere one of them went, the other one went also, whether it was to the store or all the way to the mountains."

The McKeehans were married for 54 years, but were said to have been inseparable even before, Mrs. Maier said.

"They just loved each other a whole lot," she said. "They tried to treat all of us with the same love. That stays with me."

FBI Turns To TV's 'Most Wanted' Show To Find Longtime Fugitives

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Three allegedly killed or robbed for radical causes. One was accused of killing a police officer. One was charged with poisoning his estranged wife's drink and one with bludgeoning his family.

They are six FBI fugitives wanted longer than John Emil List, the church-going accountant authorities say was arrested in Richmond, Va., last week for the 1971 fatal shootings of his wife, mother and three children in Westfield, N.J.

As in the List case, investigators are hoping to pry these fugitives from their new lives.

They follow leads, thicken files, contact colleagues around the world and prepare their cases as proposals for the television show "America's Most Wanted," the fugitive showcase that prompted a tip leading to List's arrest.

List, who claims he is Robert P. Clark, faced a hearing today in Richmond for extradition to New Jersey.

The FBI maintains a file of about 100 long-term fugitives, including the 10 most wanted, deemed worthy of special attention. Most of these cases have reached dead ends.

"There becomes a time when you're literally down to publicity," said Thomas Bush, northeast supervisor for the FBI's fugitive unit in Washington, D.C. "You've done every kind of record check you can do."

If such long-term fugitives have anything in common, it's a "different kind of personality" that allows them to cut all ties with relatives and their past, said Bush, who has been chasing fugitives for a decade.

The oldest case on the books is perhaps most tantalizing for law enforcement officials.

Joseph Michael Maloney went to his estranged wife's house one day in 1967 in Rochester, N.Y., for their son's fifth birthday party. The next day, June Fisk Maloney went to a hospital feeling ill, and died a few days later.

Police allege Maloney served his wife an orange juice cocktail poisoned with wood alcohol.

"It was an especially horrible death," said Monroe County District Attorney Howard Relin.

Maloney was arrested but escaped from a hospital while undergoing psychiatric tests and moved to Ireland, apparently in the early 1970s. He changed his name to Michael O'Shea, married and fathered two children, authorities said.

He was under surveillance for 11 years in anticipation of an extradition treaty with the United States, Irish authorities said. In 1985, he was arrested but Ireland's high court overturned the treaty and Maloney was freed. Relin said recent reports have placed the 53-year-old former handyman and builder in Canada.

Relin now is seeking help from

"America's Most Wanted."

The four other fugitives are: — George Ernesto Lopez, 39, wanted for the 1969 fatal shooting of a San Francisco police officer investigating a burglary ring.

— Leo Frederick Burt, 41, wanted for the 1970 Vietnam War protest bombing of a building housing the Army Mathematics Research Center at the University of Wisconsin in Madison. A researcher inside was killed.

— Richard B. Thomas, 43, wanted for the 1970 slaying of a Philadelphia park police sergeant and the wounding of a patrolman. He was a member of a group called the Black Unity Movement.

— Katherine Ann Power, 40, wanted for driving a getaway car in connection with the 1970 robbery of $26,585 from a Boston bank, where a police officer was killed in a burst of gunfire. The robbery was believed carried out by a radical revolutionary group.

Airdrop Record

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — A C-5 Galaxy cargo plane set a new world record for the heaviest airdrop at Pope Air Force Base Wednesday.

The plane took off carrying 190,346 pounds of cargo, which included four Sheridan tanks and 73 paratroopers from Fort Bragg's 82nd Airborne Division. The weight was roughly the equivalent of eight city buses or 55 mid-sized cars, Air Force officials said.

On its first pass, the plane dropped the four Sheridan tanks, which weigh 42,000 pounds each. Six minutes later, the paratroopers left the plane to set the new record for an airdrop.

The previous record was 180,000 pounds, set last August by a C-5 Galaxy stationed at Dover Air Force Base in Delaware.

Retirement Suit

ATLANTA (AP) — The U.S. Department of Labor has sued Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Co., saying it violated federal law by not paying promised severance benefits to 21 managers who accepted an early retirement offer.

The complaint alleges the company violated the Employee Retirement Income Security Act by not paying the employees about $450,000. It charges Southern Bell with "misrepresenting to the participants their eligibility" under the Management Transition and Assistance Plan, established in 1984 to encourage executives to resign and reduce the work force.

The lawsuit was filed May 23 in the U.S. District Court for the Western District of North Carolina as a result of an investigation conducted by the Labor Department's Atlanta office.

The complaint seeks payment of $12,575 to $25,575 for each of the 21 employees, plus interest from early 1985, when the executives expected to receive payment.

Extradition

ASHEVILLE (AP) — A former Eastern Airlines pilot and another man arrested in a federal drug roundup waived their hearing in U.S. District Court on Wednesday and asked to be sent back to Georgia to face federal drug charges, authorities said.

Hulsey Kellet Williamson Sr., 44, and William East, 50, both of Atlanta, were arrested when local, state and federal drug agents raided a "designer drug" lab Tuesday in a summer log home in Swain County.

A simultaneous raid also was executed in the Atlanta area, in which five more people were arrested on drug charges related to the Swain County raid.

On Wednesday, Williamson and East told U.S. Magistrate J. Toliver Davis that they wanted to return to Georgia to face charges of conspiracy to manufacture methylenedioxymethamphetamine (MDMA), a Schedule I drug also known as "Ecstasy."

Ecstasy is a hallucinogenic amphetamine that comes in pill form and is usually taken orally, according to sources involved in the investigation.

Cadet Injured

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — A Reserve Officers' Training Corps cadet was injured during a training exercise Wednesday when she fell 30 feet from a pulley into a creek at Fort Bragg, a base spokesman said.

The cadet was rescued from the 10-foot-deep creek by instructors and medics and taken to Womack Army Community Hospital, where she was listed in stable condition Wednesday night, spokesman Mike Shutak said.

Her identification was being withheld pending notification of relatives, Shutak said.

Shutak said the cadet was on the "slide for life" training apparatus in which a cable extends down from a tower at an approximately 45-degree angle.

"She let go of the pulley prematurely and fell into the creek, he said.

The incident occurred about 3 p.m. during ROTC Camp All-American training, Shutak said.

Tobacco Hearing

WILMINGTON (AP) — The House tobacco and peanut subcommittee will hold a hearing this month to determine how leaf dealers' transactions have affected tobacco farmers.

The hearing is scheduled June 14 in Washington.

Leaf dealers are being investigated by the U.S. attorney's office in Raleigh for mixing foreign and domestic tobacco and selling it as 100 percent U.S. leaf under federal export credit guarantee programs.

In a March hearing before Rep. Charlie Rose's subcommittee, James R. Ebbitt, with the Office of Inspector General, said 28 of 63 leaf dealers the agency investigated had sold blended tobacco under the federal credit guarantee programs, called GSM 102 and GSM 103. Investigators planned to visit all 66 companies that had received credit guarantees on 127 million pounds of tobacco, valued at $214 million, between October 1985 and September 1988.

'Conscience'

NEWLAND, N.C. (AP) — Avery county officials have told industries with operations that threaten the environment they need not look at their county when seeking plant sites.

A resolution adopted by the county commissioners Monday night is identical to one approved May 24 by the county's economic development commission, which called for a "growth with conscience policy" for recruiting new industry for the county.

Profile Sought

STATESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The FBI's Behavioral Sciences Unit in Quantico, Va., will develop a profile of the kind of person who could have killed a 10-year-old Statesville girl, authorities say.

Statesville police said they are sending information on the death of Cora Hamby to the FBI this week.

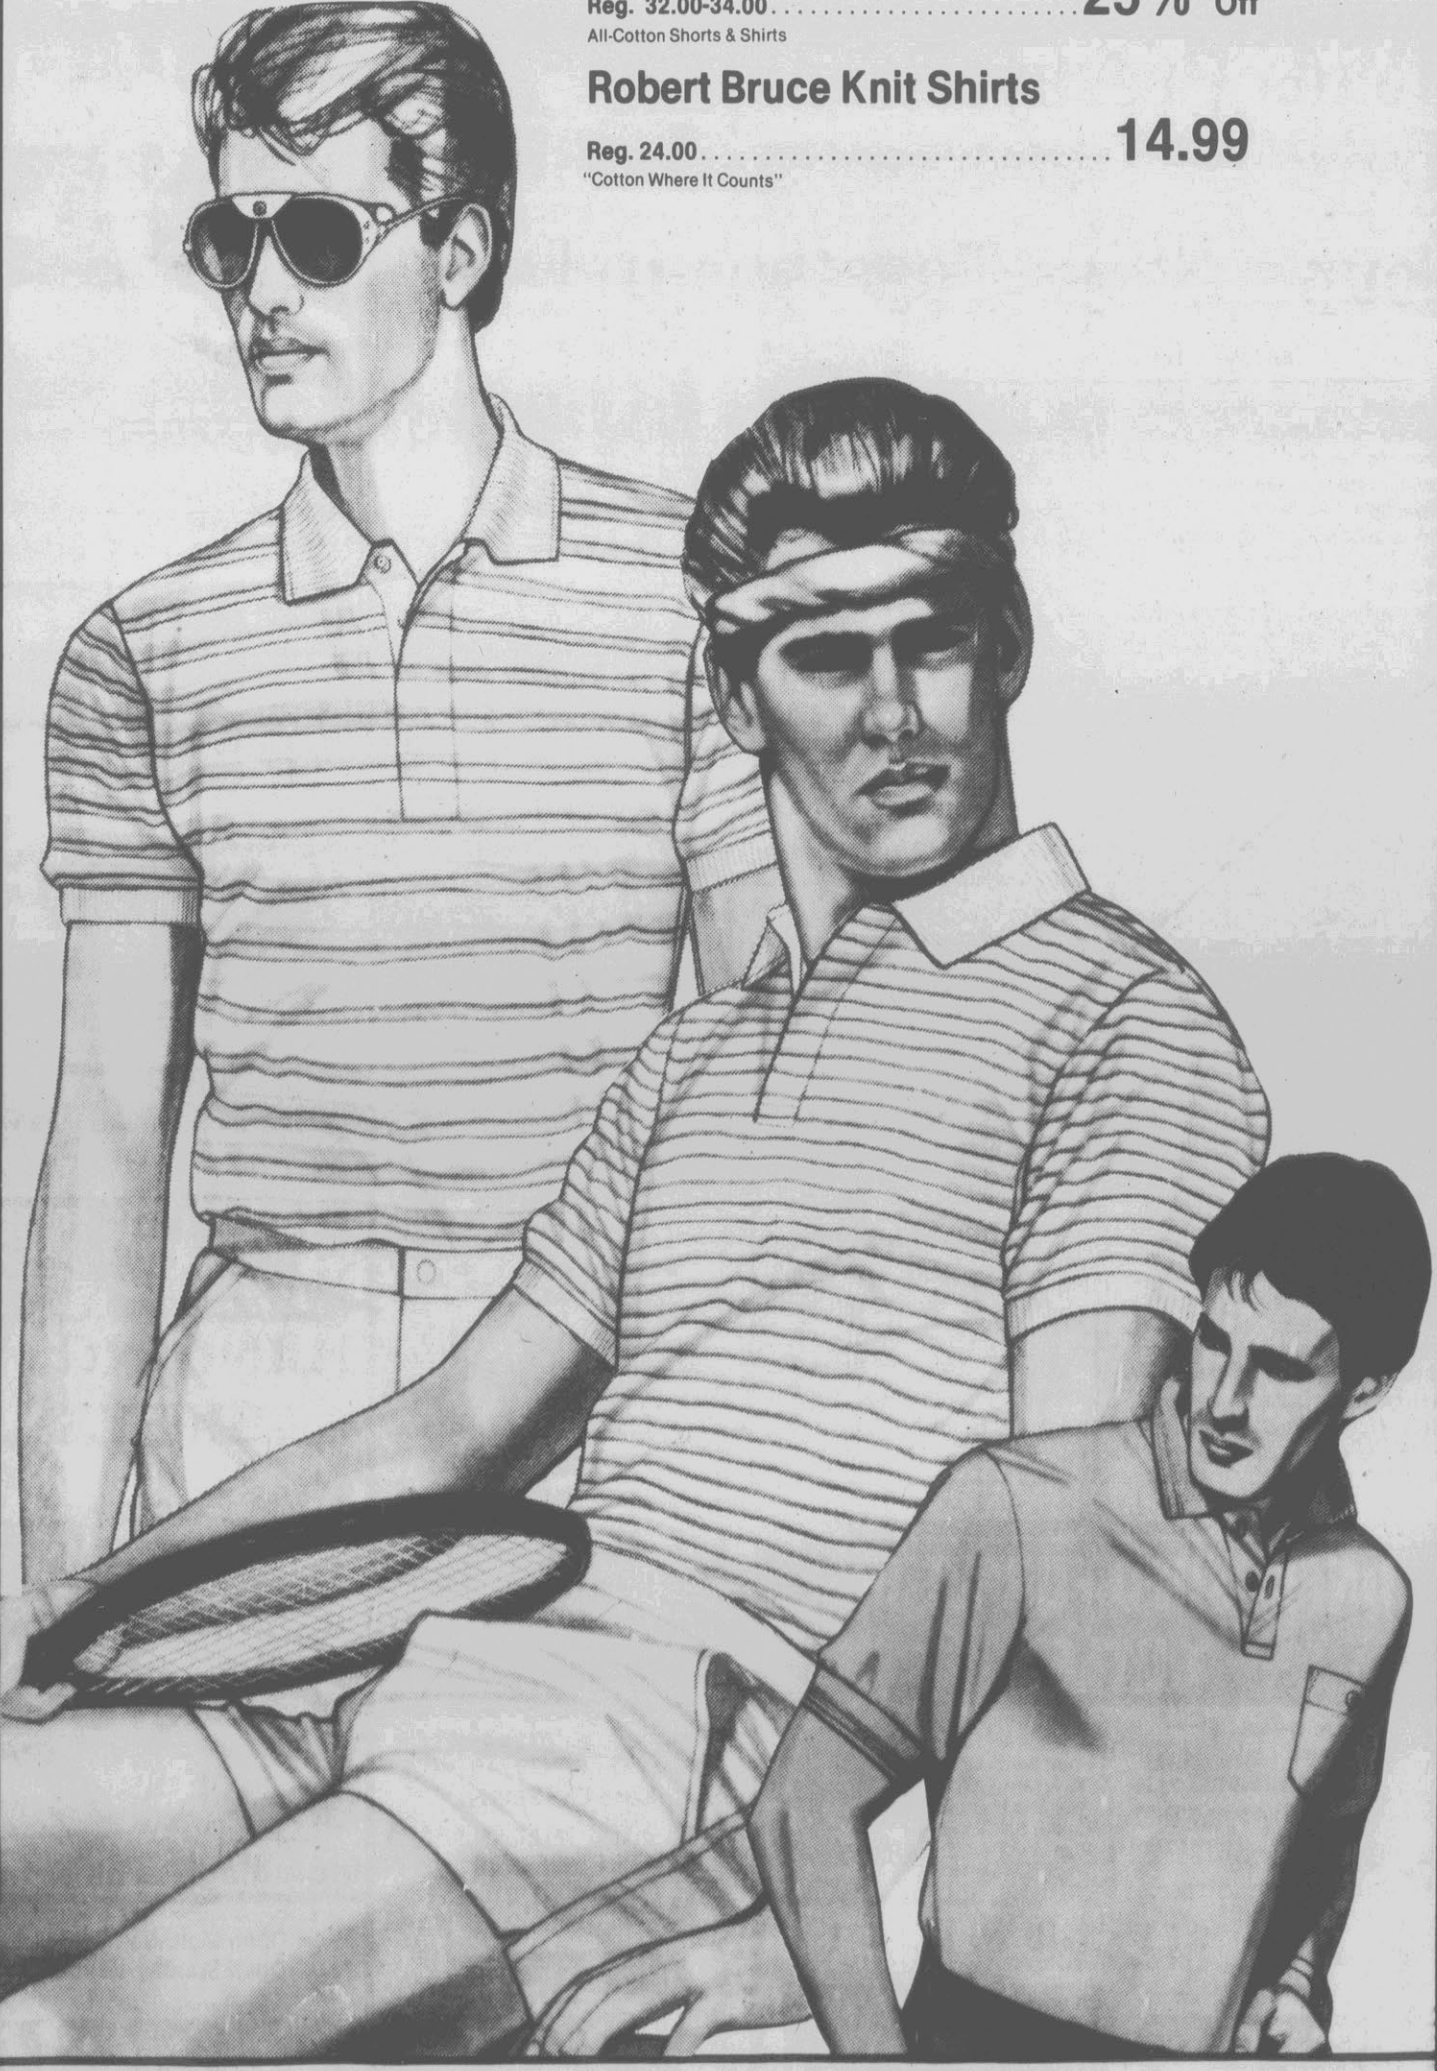

Cora disappeared May 25 from a grocery store a few blocks from her home. A fisherman found her body three days later in Lake Norman.

Statesville police say there are no suspects in Cora's death. The FBI profile might be the key to solid leads, Statesville police said.

Barbara Observes Birthday Quietly

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — First lady Barbara Bush observes her 64th birthday today but has no particular plans for celebrating the event, says her press secretary, Anna Perez.

"It will be very low key," Ms. Perez said. Actually, she already has had one birthday party of sorts. Members of the First Congregational Church of Kennebunkport, Maine, presented Mrs. Bush with a home-baked birthday cake last Sunday during a social session after church services.

The Bushes spent the weekend at their vacation home in southern Maine on the way home from a week-long visit to Europe.

The first lady isn't the only Bush with a birthday this month. President Bush turns 65 on Monday.

Mrs. Bush will spend part of her birthday attending to a favorite cause: literacy and education. She speaks at graduation ceremonies in Washington tonight for 800 students, mostly adults and older teens, who earned high-school equivalency diplomas.

Black Clergywoman Heads Presbyterians

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHILADELPHIA — The new head of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) said a "spiritual reawakening" would help reverse declining membership as the church enters its third century.

"I really think a new day is dawning," said the Rev. Joan SalmonCampbell, 51, of Philadelphia, after she was elected moderator Wednesday at the church's 201st General Assembly. She defeated two challengers.

The church's chief spokesperson made it clear her main goal is to spread the word of God.

"We need a spiritual reawakening, and I think we are on the brink of it," she told a reporter.

Known locally as "Rev. Joan," she is the second black clergywoman from Philadelphia to gain a national religious post recently. Earlier this year Barbara Harris became associate bishop of the Episcopal Church in Massachusetts. "I'm proud of my sister and I'm proud to stand with her," Mrs. SalmonCampbell said. "We are both leaders of our churches particularly at a time when our denominations are under such fire and criticism. Clergywomen bring a unique perspective to the church."

In becoming moderator — the seventh woman in the church to win the post since 1971, and the first clergywoman — she received 303 of the 603 second ballot votes to defeat the Rev. James Johnson, of Columbus, Ga., and the Rev. William Skinner, of Sioux City, Iowa.

Her first official act was to appoint a vice moderator, the Rev. Herb Meza, pastor of the Fort Caroline Presbyterian Church, Jacksonville, Fla., who had formally placed her name in nomination.

With church membership now below 3 million, or around 25 percent less than it was in the 1960s, she said a top priority was to bring new worshippers to the 11,573 Presbyterian churches around the country. She said she would help raise $15 million for an evangelism drive.

"The church must present a religious message, a message of clarity as to who we are as Presbyterians. We must neither be bland nor dull. The church should speak out as to how Christ would speak. We must talk more about Jesus," she said.

House Short Of Vote To Beat FSX Veto

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — House opponents of the Bush administration's planned $6 billion FSX fighter deal with Japan are far short of the votes needed to override an expected presidential veto.

A measure to restrict the deal passed the House on Wednesday but only on a 262-155 vote, far less than the two-thirds margin of 290 needed to override a veto in the 435-member chamber.

The administration already has agreed to develop the fighter jointly with Japan. The measure passed Wednesday seeks to stipulate the U.S. negotiating position in future talks on how the FSX, an advanced version of the F-16 jet fighter, actually will be produced.

An identical Senate resolution passed 72-27 on May 16.

Opponents of the deal say it amounts to a giveaway of critical U.S. defense technology, but the Bush administration says the restrictive legislation would tie its hands in the talks.

Before the measure was approved, Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, warned that "in case there's any doubt, the White House will veto this amendment if it is passed."

The legislation would prohibit transfer to Japan of critical American jet engine technology and bar Japan from selling to third countries the FSX or any of the plane's major subcomponents.

It also states that any agreement on coproduction of the FSX should guarantee that at least 40 percent of the work — including provision of spare parts — will be handled by American companies.

Opponents declared that the legislation, sponsored by Rep. Terry L. Bruce, D-Ill., might require renegotiation of a memorandum of understanding already reached with Japan.

Rep. Stephen J. Solarz, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on Asian and Pacific affairs, said the legislation "could arguably require a renegotiation of the FSX agreement."

But a leading FSX opponent, Rep. Mel Levine, D-Calif., said the restrictions embodied in the measure are needed to "hold the administration's feet to the fire" in negotiations.

Rep. Richard A. Gephardt, D-Mo., said afterward that "the margin by which both houses passed this legislation sends a message to the president that we are serious about safeguarding America's trading rights, protecting American jobs and preserving America's clear advantage in aerospace technology and production."

Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., who sponsored the Senate version of the FSX legislation, said it "increases the leverage of executive branch negotiators" in dealing with future coproduction of the plane.

"I sincerely hope the president will not veto improvements in this project, or veto increased leverage for his negotiators," Byrd said following the House vote.

The measure was adopted after the House voted 320-98 to pass a non-binding sense-of-Congress resolution expressing disapproval of the FSX deal in general, but that vote carries no legal weight.

Under the FSX deal, General Dynamics is to join with Japan's Mitsubishi Heavy Industries in jointly developing and producing the warplane, for deployment by Japan in the late 1990s. Most of the General Dynamics FSX work would be done at its F-16 plant in Fort Worth, Texas.

Withdrawals From S&Ls Slow

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Net withdrawals from the nation's savings institutions should continue to ease from record high levels as interest rates decline, economists say.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board said Wednesday that S&L customers withdrew $5.4 billion more than they deposited in April, down from the records set earlier this year but still high in historic terms.

Net withdrawals totaled $8.3 billion in March, $9.2 billion in February and a record $10.8 billion in January for a total of $33.7 billion so far this year.

James Barth, the bank board's chief economist, attributed much of the recent outflow to thrift institutions' failure to keep pace with rising interest rates offered by competitors such as mutual funds.

S&L analyst Bert Ely of Alexandria, Va., said S&L reports will show slower withdrawals or perhaps even a modest gain in deposits in May and June. Interest rates offered by thrifts historically lag behind money market funds both on the way up and on the way down.

"We have reached the most recent peak in interest rates and now of course they are trending down. We're seeing a lessening of the rate-driven shrinkage of deposits," Ely said.

Barth also attributed the shrinkage in April to pressure from regulators on overextended thrift institutions to shrink.

Foley Discounts Role Of 'Czar' As House Speaker

By Mike Feinsilber
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Tom Foley says he has no appetite for becoming an all-powerful "czar speaker" but wants to use his new power as leader of the House to bolster the nation's education system and arrest the growth of an underclass in America.

At the same time, he concedes that under predecessor Jim Wright the Democrats sometimes used their majority status to muscle aside the Republicans. He vows that won't happen under a Speaker Foley.

And he says he has given no thought to his new situation as second in the line of succession to the presidency — even though his mother "is enjoying that fact."

"But the speaker of the House has never succeeded to the presidency and we all pray that the president has a healthy and long and successful administration at least for the next 3 1/2 years," he said, adding that any American who does not wish President Bush well "is no friend of the republic."

Relaxed, sipping a diet cola and back from reminiscing during a 90-minute Oval Office lunch with onetime freshman congressman Bush, Foley demonstrated in an interview Wednesday the style that propelled him into the speakership with the good will of many Republicans.

"The days of the czar speakers have long been over," Foley said, recalling the tale that 19th century speaker Thomas Reed, when asked by a constituent for a copy of the rules that govern the House, "sent by return mail an autographed photograph of himself."

Foley rejected the view that the House is "a moral swamp," but said some politicians come to Washington out of a love for political warfare and their every act is aimed at the next election while others come to govern.

He put himself among the latter and, ticking off the issues that are dear to his heart, listed education high.

"I'm worried about the growth of the so-called underclass," he said, "millions of young adults and children who are not, for one reason or another, performing in school, or looking forward to an ability to compete in the job market."

He noted that South Korean children have pulled ahead of Japanese children and far ahead of American kids in educational achievements.

He said Korean youngsters go to school for 240 days a year and carry two lunches — one for noon, one for late in the day — because their school day is so long. By contrast, American children typically attend school only 180 days.

"I think the quality of elementary and secondary education is going to determine more our ability to successfully compete in an international economy than probably anything else," he said.

He said he worries about the "enormous strains" imposed on middle-class families, especially those with a few children in college at the same time.

He has no agenda of legislation to shove through Congress, but he cited civil rights and civil liberties as important to him, along with education and the enactment this year of congressional ethics legislation.

There is no "Foley plan," he said, but one idea worth examining "might be linking some extinguishment of honoraria with some staged increase in salary" for Congress.

House members are allowed to keep $30,000 a year in fees for giving speeches or writing. Most of the money comes from special-interest groups, and some reform suggestions propose eliminating such honoraria and raising congressional salaries.

But Foley suggested he will be in no rush to propose a pay increase in view of the uproar that cause the House to kill a Bush-backed 50 percent raise in January.

Foley conceded a point to Republicans, saying that under Wright, "I think we've pushed it sometimes to the point where, while we were still within the rules, we were making maximum use of the power of the majority. ... I don't think we should do that."

Rep. Mickey Edwards of Oklahoma, chairman of the House Republican Policy Committee, said if Foley is "serious about a new beginning," he should support a package of rules changes proposed by the GOP last January. Democrats ignored the proposals under Wright's leadership, he said.

"There is a new leader and Tom Foley has a different style," Edwards said, adding that Wright "systematically excluded the views, opinion, debate, amendments of people who disagreed with the leadership, whether Democrats or Republicans."

Democrats Scoff At GOP Explanation

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush and top Republicans say a press aide was solely responsible for the GOP memo comparing House Speaker Thomas S. Foley's voting record with that of a homosexual congressman, but Democrats aren't buying it.

MARK GOODIN

"One staffer can't take the fall for an entire Republican political operation that's up to its knees in sewer-style politics," said Ron Brown, chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

Mark Goodin, communications director of the Republican National Committee, resigned Wednesday and took full blame for a memo comparing Foley's voting record to that of liberal Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass. The memo was titled: "Tom Foley: Out of the Liberal Closet."

Goodin, who worked in the press operation of Bush's 1988 campaign, said in resigning that he never intended "to damage anyone's reputation." He said RNC Chairman Lee Atwater, who was President Bush's campaign manager, never knew of the document.

The White House put out word that Bush was "disgusted by this entire incident," and top Republicans on Capitol Hill hurried to distance themselves from it.

"The president was very upset," White House chief of staff John Sununu said in an interview reported today in The New York Times. "I was upset. It went too far. It was wrong. The innuendo was wrong. It's wrong not because it damages our relationship with the Democrats. It's wrong because it's wrong."

"It's a terrible thing to happen at this time. It was not appropriate or fair," said Sununu, who said he and Bush had rebuked Atwater.

Foley, who had lunch with Bush, said he accepted an apology from Atwater and considered the matter "closed." And, in an interview, he spoke of working to give Republicans fairer treatment in the House.

But other Democrats said Goodin alone could not be responsible for a pattern of Republican smears, which Democrats contend began during the presidential campaign and have continued with misleading Justice Department leaks about Democrats.

Analysts Expect Time To Resist Paramount Offer

By Skip Wallenberg
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Analysts expect Time Inc. to resist a stunning $10.7 billion takeover offer from Paramount Communications Inc. and try to carry out its planned merger with Warner Communications Inc.

Paramount launched its hostile offer only 2½ weeks before Time and Warner shareholders are to vote on their merger agreement, which would create the world's largest media and entertainment concern.

John Reidy, media analyst for Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc., said he doesn't think the Paramount offer necessarily dooms the Time-Warner merger. But he said it is "hard to envisage a shareholder vote taking place in two weeks while the Paramount offer is outstanding."

Peter Appert, media analyst at C.J. Lawrence, Morgan Grenfell Inc., said he expects Time officials "will be pretty tough about trying to retain their independence."

Executives at Time and Warner could not be reached for comment on their next move.

Paramount, the entertainment and publishing concern formerly called Gulf & Western Inc., said late Tuesday it was launching a tender offer of $175 in cash for each of Time's shares.

Time shares skyrocketed $44 to close at $170 a share in consolidated New York Stock Exchange trading Wednesday. Warner rose $1.75 to $53.50 a share and Paramount rose 75 cents to $54.75 a share. The stocks were the three most actively traded issues on the exchange.

Analysts said Time's options to fend off Paramount include making its own offer for Warner or turning the tables and making a bid for Paramount. Time has a previously arranged $5 billion line of credit at its disposal, they said.

Time also could agree to sell some assets to Paramount in exchange for dropping the bid, or it could exercise a takeover defense, analysts said.

Such defenses include offering stock to Time shareholders at a bargain rate, making a hostile takeover more expensive. Time and Warner also could buy stakes in each other under their merger plan, which would dilute their stock and make a takeover of either more costly.

Warner and Time shareholders are scheduled to vote June 23 on the merger.

Paramount filed a lawsuit in Delaware Chancery Court to block Time and Warner from exercising contingency plans designed to deter unwanted bidders from interfering with their merger. But a judge declined to grant Paramount's requests immediately.

Paramount Chairman Martin Davis met privately with securities analysts, saying that while the deal would result in "significantly lower" earnings in the near term, the chance to buy Time was "a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to maximize Paramount Communication's long-term potential."

While both mergers would result in mixes of film, programming and cable, Warner offers unique strength in recorded music while Paramount is strong in book publishing with its Simon & Schuster and Pocket Books units.

Time is the nation's largest magazine company; has interests in cable systems and networks and is a leading direct marketer of books.

Analysts said Time may have a tough job explaining to its shareholders how the proposed stock swap merger with Warner would be a better deal than the $175 a share in cash that Paramount is offering.

Under the planned Time-Warner merger, Time shareholders would get a share in the new company for each share they currently own while Warner shareholders would get 0.465 share of the new company for each Warner share.

Court Says Tieless Teacher In Right

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLESTON, W. Va. — A math teacher fired for failing to wear a tie to class has been vindicated in court, but could face the same problem next year if a school board decides to ban denim and require neckwear.

"If they're smart, they'll quit while they're behind. Otherwise, they'll get farther behind," said Bill Webb, who was suspended for insubordination three times and finally fired last December.

Judge Charlie King said Wednesday the Mason County Board of Education erred when it suspended the 46-year-old Webb. King said a dress policy drafted by the superintendent last year was improperly imposed and Webb had every right to ignore it.

But under the judge's order, a similar dress code can be put into effect by the school board. Board member Harry Siders, who introduced the motion to fire Webb last Dec. 19, said the matter would come up at the board's meeting June 19.

"If they go on and say they'll ban any fabric made of denim, I won't go back," said Webb, a Gallipolis, Ohio, farmer who had taught across the Ohio River at Point Pleasant High School for 19 years.

Webb was hit with three suspensions of four, 11 and 30 days, the last two without pay, for challenging Superintendent Charles Chambers' requirement that male teachers wear dress pants and neckties.

After he was fired, he returned to Ohio to run his farm full time. While other teachers were preparing to give final exams, he was planting corn. Webb said in a telephone interview on his way to a Chicago appearance on today's "Oprah Winfrey Show."

King ordered the board to give Webb back pay for his 11-day suspension and up to $1,000 in legal costs. Webb didn't challenge the four-day suspension because he was paid.

The 30-day suspension and firing still are to be addressed, but Webb's wife and lawyer believe King's action undermines the board's argument.

"If they couldn't suspend him, they sure as hell couldn't fire him," Julie Webb said.

Mason County school board president Emma Kearns was in New York and couldn't be reached, according to someone who answered the phone at her Point Pleasant home. A reporter was unable to reach Chambers and board attorney Diane Johnson, whose phone numbers were unlisted.

Webb said he wore suits and sportcoats early in his teaching career to distinguish himself from his students, but later opted for the blue jeans and cotton shirts he wore around his farm.

Chambers became superintendent last summer and enacted the dress code. Three other teachers who balked at the code followed normal grievance procedures and lost.

King said Webb and the others had a right to disobey the order, which was unlawful because it was unilaterally imposed by the superintendent.

Stickley Dies

RALEIGH (AP) — John L. "Jack" Stickley, a Charlotte businessman who ran unsuccessfully for the 1968 Republican gubernatorial nomination, died this week.

He was chairman of the board of John L. Stickley and Co., an international textile sales firm. From 1956 to 1961, he was chief executive of the International Association of Lions Clubs.

The funeral was scheduled to be held today at the Myers Park Baptist Church in Charlotte, where he was a life deacon. Burial will be at Sharon Memorial Park in Charlotte.

Helms' Complaints May Stall Senate OK for Bush's Chief Arms Negotiator

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Richard R. Burt, President Bush's nominee to head the U.S. arms control negotiating team, is not expected to receive Senate confirmation before strategic arms reduction talks resume June 19, in part because of complaints involving marijuana and security leaks, congressional and State Department officials disclosed Wednesday.

The delay could embarrass the Bush administration, which faces the prospect of sending a leaderless delegation to the arms talks, and impede progress toward an agreement by the United States and the Soviet Union to reduce their arsenals of intercontinental missiles.

The allegations against Burt, some made by his longtime critic, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., were rejected this week by the department's inspector general after investigation here and in West Germany, where Burt served as ambassador until his current appointment, officials said.

But the Senate postponed its vote to confirm Burt at Helms' request, making approval before opening of the arms talks in Geneva "almost impossible," according to congressional sources.

"Burt has been named head of delegation and START negotiator by the president, and what he needs is confirmation in the personal rank of ambassador," a State Department official said. "He can be sent out without formal confirmation to do the job, but whether it would be wise to send him out before Congress acts is a political decision that has not been made yet."

Burt, 42, is usually described as brash, aggressive and ambitious. He is an expert on international affairs, particularly arms issues, on which he is regarded as a moderate.

A former reporter for the New York Times, he served under President Reagan as director of politico-military affairs at the State Department and assistant secretary for European affairs. In 1985, soon after his marriage to Gahl Hodges, Nancy Reagan's social secretary, he was appointed U.S. ambassador to West Germany.

Helms opposed Burt for all those posts. Initially, he complained that Burt disclosed classified information in some of his newspaper articles. Then, as a State Department official, Burt allegedly leaked secrets to a woman reporter with whom he was friendly.

In the current skirmish, Burt was approved by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee by a vote of 14-2. Besides Helms, Sen. Connie Mack III, R-Fla., voted against him.

Helms said at the time that a number of government officials had alleged that Burt mishandled classified material.

But State Department Inspector General Sherman M. Funk's office, in a carefully worded statement, gave Burt a clean bill of health.

It said that the State Department had received a complaint from Helms "about security clearances" for Burt. Separately, it said, Funk had received "an allegation, submitted by an informant to another law enforcement agency, relating to marijuana found three years ago" in Burt's ambassadorial residence in Bonn.

"After an extensive review," it said, the inquiry "found that the three background investigations of Burt in 1981, 1985 and 1989 were conducted in full compliance" with the applicable executive order and department rules.

The marijuana complaint included an allegation of attempted cover-up, the statement said. After investigation, Funk concluded that "there is no evidence whatever that Burt possessed or used marijuana or any other controlled substance while employed by the Department of State."

Rancho Seco Plant Halts Production

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — The Rancho Seco nuclear power plant has ceased producing electricity amid predictions from public interest groups that the shutdown called for by voters would inspire similar actions across the nation. Operators began shutting down the plant Wednesday after voters became the first in the nation to say that a working reactor should be closed. The vote was not binding on the Sacramento Municipal Utility District, which owns the problem-plagued, 15-year-old plant, but a majority of its five elected board members had promised to abide by the will of the people.

The plant stopped producing electricity Wednesday morning, but the process of shutting down the reactor in the 913-megawatt plant was expected to be take up to 72 hours, said Rancho Seco spokeswoman Karen Wilson.

The utility district said mothballing or dismantling the plant will take several years and could cost more than $300 million.

"Basically, we will be plowing new ground," said Jim Shetler, Rancho Seco assistant manager. "Total decommissioning has not been done on this level before, and we won't have a lot to draw on."

Critics claimed the plant, 25 miles southeast of Sacramento, was unsafe and had a poor operating record. Tuesday's vote was 111,867 or 53.4 percent against continued operation, and 97,460 or 46.6 percent for continued operation.

"It will be essentially a shot heard around the world. Citizens are going to know they can take on city hall and win," said Scott Denman, director of the Safe Energy Communication Council, a Washington-based coalition of environmental and public interest organizations against nuclear power.

Public Citizen, a group formed in 1971 by Ralph Nader, said in a statement that the vote "marks the beginning of the end for nuclear power in the United States. ... America's love affair with the atom is over."

Witness Is Killed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DENVER — Gunmen killed a leading witness in a robbery trial after shooting two of his friends while they waited for him to come home.

Investigators said Steve Curtis, 29, and Daniel Michael Smith, 38, arrived at Curtis' house late Tuesday and were met by at least two gunmen, who shot the two in the head after ordering them to lie on the living room floor.

The gunmen ransacked the house and at one point made a telephone call and complained that "he" hadn't arrived, police said.

Frank James Magnuson, 22, who was Curtis' roommate, returned home some hours later and was killed as he walked toward the back door, police said.

The account of the events was provided by Curtis, who was shot in the head and arm but survived. He called police after the gunmen left the house and was placed under police guard after being treated for his wounds.

Magnuson was to have testified Wednesday in the kidnapping and robbery trial of Roger Lee Young, charged in a September 1988 attack on a waitress in the parking lot of a restaurant.

On Wednesday, prosecutor David Olivas asked Judge Warren Martin to postpone Young's trial. Martin scheduled a new trial for Sept. 11 and allowed Young's lawyer, William Fritsche, to withdraw.

Magnuson, who was a busboy at the restaurant, fought with one of the two men who robbed the waitress.

Young was arrested and charged in the crime a short time later. Police have failed to identify any other suspects.

Dogfighting

GRAHAM, N.C. (AP) — Four men accused in dogfighting in Alamance County, including one who owns more than 30 pit bulls, were found guilty Wednesday in district court.

Judge W.S. Harris convicted Edward Faron, 41, of Mebane, on two counts of animal fighting and one count of animal cruelty. Faron, who has more than 30 pit bulls and has previously owned as many as 72, was considered by prosecutors to be the leader of the group.

Also guilty of animal fighting are James Wilson Bailey, 29, of Mebane, Roger Dale Hellard, 27, of Hillsborough, and Paul Taylor Harden, 27, of Burlington.

The defendants immediately appealed.

Dispute Over Funding Drug Fight Threatens Spending Bill

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The House and Senate face pressure to resolve their differences speedily over a long-delayed spending bill, but the widest gulf is over one of the hottest political issues: illegal drugs.

A bipartisan Senate voiced approval Wednesday for legislation pouring an extra $3.3 billion this year into veterans, student loan and other programs. The vote capping lawmakers' fourth day of debate came more than two months after President Bush asked Congress for a $2.2 billion version of the bill.

The House passed its own $3.7 billion measure on May 24 on a contentious party-line vote. As is usual with spending legislation, each chamber sprinkled its own bill with provisions boosting individual lawmakers' favorite projects.

The biggest difference between the two bills is $822 million the House included for a host of anti-drug programs. Majority Democrats there inserted the money into the bill, over veto threats from Bush administration officials arguing that the spending would further inflate the deficit.

The Senate version contains no drug monies. Despite public opinion polls indicating that illegal drugs is the pre-eminent domestic problem, Senate Democrats heeded Bush's warnings and joined Republicans in preventing some legislators from putting drug spending into the bill.

Massachusetts Rep. Silvio Conte, ranking Republican on the Appropriations Committee, said he did not believe it would be difficult for the two houses to work out their differences over financing new anti-drug efforts.

"I think I can get the White House to compromise on something," he told a reporter.

But one administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity, insisted Wednesday there was still "no way" Bush would sign the final bill if any drug spending was included.

That was also the conventional wisdom among lawmakers and congressional aides.

Legislators will be pressed to bargain quickly by many groups hoping to garner money from the bill, but foremost among them will be the nation's veterans. In each house's measure, there is $1.2 billion for health care, compensation increases and other programs for the nation's 27 million veterans.

There is no disagreement that the coffers of the Department of Veterans Affairs are running low. The agency has already begun curtailing medical services, purchases of new equipment and other efforts.

Marine Goes To Prison For Injuring Officer

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A 21-year-old Marine was sentenced today to one year in prison for injuring an Alcohol Law Enforcement agent in a hit-and-run accident in Greenville on Halloween night last year.

Superior Court Judge David E. Reid Jr. of Greenville sentenced William James Glester, 21, after the Marine pleaded guilty to drunken driving, hit and run and assaulting a law enforcement officer. Glester is stationed at the New River Marine Corps Air Station near Jacksonville.

On the recommendation of the injured officer, Richard Thornell, prosecutors allowed Glester to plead to the three misdemeanor charges. He was initially charged with felony hit and run and the felony of assault with a deadly weapon inflicting serious injury.

Reid sentenced him to 181 days on the DWI, one year on the hit and run and one year on the assault. All sentences are to run concurrently.

Thornell said he suffered a crushed right foot and missed over four months of work after Glester ran over his foot in downtown Greenville on Halloween night 1988.

He said he agreed to the lesser charges for the benefit of Glester's military career. Glester has no prior criminal violations, he said. If Glester had pleaded guilty to felony charges, he would have been subject to an automatic dishonorable discharge, Thornell said.

On Halloween night, Greenville police did not have enough officers available to man the barricades set up along downtown streets to control the thousands of partygoers, Thornell said. Thus, he answered a call about an ongoing fight at Fourth Street and Reade Circle.

When he arrived, he said Glester and another Marine were fighting over who would drive the car. Glester then got in the car and drove away, spun a full 360 degree turn and jumped the median onto a grassy area, Thornell said.

The car door opened, and Glester fell partially out of the vehicle, Thornell said, but the car continued to roll.

When Glester failed to stop the car, Thornell said he tried to put his foot on the brake. Then the Marine hit the gas, and Thornell said his foot was caught under the brake.

"I was drug ... 40 or 50 feet," he said.

His shoe came off and remained in the car and Glester ran over Thornell's right foot.

He said Glester was "too impaired to blow into the Breathalyzer" when the Marine was asked to take the test.

Over 140 people were cited for alcohol violations and 20 people were injured in incidents on Halloween night in Greenville. Over the years, the holiday has attracted a large number of people to the center of the city.

However, in recent months the City Council has reached an agreement with downtown merchants and bar owners to close early Halloween night. City Council members have said it is important to put a stop to the large-scale Halloween parties.

union groups "important members of the counterrevolutionary turmoil." It demanded that all members of the groups, leaders of the pro-democracy movement smashed by the military, turn themselves in to police.

Radio and television gave telephone numbers for people to call to report those who stood up against the military takeover of the city.

In a continuing propaganda campaign supporting the harsh military actions, national television repeatedly showed footage of crowds attacking soldiers and burning vehicles during the crackdown in Beijing on Saturday night and Sunday.

It showed gruesome shots of three soldiers who were burned to death. One was disembowelled.

In his speech to the soldiers, Li urged them "to continue working hard to protect the capital's safety and order." They cheered and applauded.

A Hong Kong newspaper had reported that he had been shot and wounded in the thigh by a police officer on Sunday after the military took Tiananmen Square.

Hundreds of troop trucks rumbled into the city of Beijing early today, but residents claimed the hated 27th Army, which carried out the weekend assault, had left the city, replaced by new troops.

Citizens attempted to establish order in their shattered lives under the watchful eyes of martial law troops, and the government issued a new decree making it illegal to put up barricades in the street and disrupt traffic.

Last week, the people had pushed buses, trucks and other objects into the streets in futile efforts to stop troops from entering the city.

The main concern has been that military units opposing the violent suppression of the pro-democracy movement would launch an attack to drive the 27th Army from Beijing. Roughly 200,000 troops from about 13 army groups are massed in and around the city.

In buses and caravans, many bearing their country's flags, foreigners left for the airport, where chartered flights took them out of the country. They included non-essential personnel at the U.S. Embassy and their families.

"We've taken an awful lot of moves to improve our security, and the biggest one was putting those people on that plane and pulling them out of town," U.S. Ambassador James Lilley told reporters at the airport.

One Asian diplomat said Chinese officials in the past few days had been privately urging foreigners to leave the city because of the impending danger.

However, troops were seen with brooms today rather than automatic rifles, sweeping the streets south of Tiananmen.

The government accused the United States of violating Chinese law and interfering in China's domestic affairs by giving refuge to the nation's best-known dissident, Fang Lizhi, at the U.S. Embassy in Beijing.

Fang took refuge in the embassy on Sunday, hours after the military moved into the city.

Elsewhere today, disturbances still wracked almost all of China's major provincial cities.

Provincial leaders echoed Beijing in demanding harsh treatment for protesters.

"The present conditions in many enterprises in Lanzhou are critical and the situation is grim," the provincial radio in the western city quoted Gansu governor Jia Zhijie as saying.

A Chinese source in Sichuan's capital, Chengdu, where anti-government violence has been reported, said troops had come into the city but left. According to unconfirmed reports, 20 people were shot by police when crowds stormed a government building Sunday.

Retirement

CHARLOTTE (AP) — E.K. Fretwell Jr. retires as the University of North Carolina at Charlotte's chancellor this month, but he's not leaving Charlotte — or higher education.

He has been hired by a non-profit corporation to help carry out a plan to improve North Carolina's community college system.

Murder Charge Filed

Greenville police said this morning that Mary Jones Small, 34, has been charged with murder in connection with the death of John Carney, 94, of 405B W. Third St.

Carney was found dead at his home Saturday night. Police said his throat had been cut.

Detective J.E. Nichols said today that a murder warrant has been issued for Ms. Small in connection with the death.

Nichols said Ms. Small's last known address was Kimberly Avenue, New Haven, Conn. But he said the woman has "been in North Carolina probably for the last five months at different places" and had been visiting relatives in Greenville.

"She knew him and he knew her," according to Nichols, who said, "We're trying to learn where her location is."

Nichols said investigators feel robbery was the motive for the killing and estimated that "around $1,000" was taken from Carney's home after he was killed.

Carney's sister, Willie B. Wilson, 89, said Monday that Carney had been robbed before. "But he won't never hurt before and he won't scared to stay by himself."

Mrs. Wilson said that her brother had lived in the Third Street apartment for a number of years and sold treats — candy, cookies, Popsicles — to neighborhood kids. He trusted people, she said, and may have trusted the person that entered his home and murdered him.

Graduate Student Feels 'Useless'

By Cherie Evans
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A Chinese graduate student at East Carolina University said not being able to help pro-democracy demonstrators in Beijing and adjacent areas has made her feel useless and furious.

"I am worried and very, very angry," Li Ruan said in a telephone interview this morning. "I wish I could do something."

Ms. Ruan, a native of Beijing, said she has been in the United States about two years and she's anxious about the welfare of her family.

"Yesterday, I called them. I dialed for about an hour and it never went through," she said. "Today, I want to try again."

Her family had participated in the demonstrations, but they had left Tiananmen Square in Beijing before the Chinese troops began their attack on the demonstrators, Ms. Ruan said.

"So far, my family is safe," she said.

A friend she was able to reach in Beijing told her that "in certain areas things are really terrible but in the area where he lives it is still quiet. Because my family is in this area, I think he just wants to comfort me," she said.

Many people have stopped working because of the turmoil, Ms. Ruan said. "The mailman, everybody, has already stopped working. Now they can't get any mail."

Reports about the demonstrations and armed soldiers are presented through the newspapers, television and other forms of media by the Chinese government, she said.

"They only get very good news" about how things are returning to normal.

Nationalists Get Theft Sentences

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HARTFORD, Conn. — Two Puerto Rican nationalists drew prison terms of up to 15 years today for their part in a $7.1 million Wells Fargo robbery after the judge rejected claims they were prosecuted for their political views.

Antonio Camacho Negron, 45, an auto mechanic, was sentenced to 15 years and fined $150,000. Norman Ramirez Talavera, a 32-year-old graphic artist, was sentenced to five years and fined $50,000. Both were convicted of conspiracy and other charges in the 1983 robbery, the second-largest cash heist in U.S. history.

Prosecutors said members of a militant Puerto Rican separatist group, Los Macheteros, engineered the robbery of a half-ton of money from a Wells Fargo depot in West Hartford to finance their activities.

Camacho denounced his trial and that of four other defendants as a "web of lies." Speaking in Spanish through an interpreter, he claimed he was being punished because he refused to abandon the cause of Puerto Rican independence.

"I struggled for the liberty of Puerto Rico," he said. "There is no right to rob money," said U.S. District Judge T. Emmet Clarke. "It is a crime throughout the world. No one has been charged because of his political views."

Student Escapes From Beijing

The American man helped the women by sharing a taxi with them to the airport, she said. She said she understands the taxi ride cost about $200 and the man took no money from his fellow passengers.

"We were very lucky," Ms. Alonso said, "that we had given our daughter an American Express card. It cost about $700 for her to fly to Tokyo and, without money, she and the others would have been unable to leave the Beijing Airport."

She said the women left Beijing about 4 p.m. (eastern time) Tuesday and were in Tokyo about 6 a.m. (eastern time) Wednesday.

She said she expects to hear from her daughter soon as to what she and the rest of the group are going to do about the remainder of their trip. It was scheduled to last until about July 8 and to include visits to Hong Kong and Thailand.

"My daughter wants to go ahead," she said. "And I want her to. Some of the others apparently don't. So I don't know what's going to happen. I hope, if the others choose to come home, that she will find someone to continue her trip with, possibly some other American student. This is such an opportunity. I don't want her to miss out on it."

Ms. Alonso said she is proud of how well her daughter and the others handled their dilemma in Beijing. "Brenna is a very mature level-headed 21-year-old," she said. "She loves to travel and she's surely proved that she's capable of coping with almost anything now. I'm very proud of her and I've told her so."

Plants

For example, a risk estimate of 1 in 1,000 means that one person out of 1,000 could be expected to contract cancer from maximum exposure to a single pollutant.

The EPA said the new, preliminary list is the first of its kind, although Waxman noted that two previous studies found cancer rates two to four times the national average near some major chemical facilities.

There are strong indications the risk is even worse because the data is so limited, Waxman said.

For instance, the information only measures cancer risks, but not other potential hazards such as birth defects, nervous system damage or respiratory disease.

The figures do not reflect the combined cancer risk of all air toxics released by each facility, but only measure a single pollutant.

Only the cancer risk from direct inhalation of air toxics is evaluated, although numerous studies indicate the potential contamination of crops in nearby areas, or accumulation of toxics in the food chain, can far exceed the risk from breathing the chemicals.

Also, the EPA did not evaluate some of the most important toxics, including benzene and coke oven emissions.

The EPA said the worst plant on the list was the Texaco butadiene plant in Port Neches, Texas, with at least a 1-in-10 risk of cancer.

Texaco Chemical Co. objected to the rating in a letter to Waxman, saying that "subsequent information ... based on actual test results and updated operating information, indicates the 1984 information used ... significantly overstates the plant's current emissions."

The company asked Waxman not to use the information. The lawmaker refused the request, but released Texaco's letter of protest.

Exercise A Matter Of Making The Time

By Laurie Jones
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

So, you're sitting with your feet propped up, watching television and spooning double fudge ice cream into your mouth when one of those health club commercials comes on.

You know the ads. The ones featuring someone like Cher dressed in latex, looking sultrily into the camera, urging you to get off your rump and join her on the Nautilus. Or perhaps it's a football player, flexing his muscles, practically daring you to leap up and run to the nearest rowing machine.

Your spoon stops in mid-air. You've seen these ads one too many times. Tomorrow you're going to start exercising.

And none of this jogging-once-every-three-weeks business. No, this time it will be a regular exercise program — three times a week for at least 20 minutes each workout. And no giving up after the first few gung-ho weeks.

Su-u-ure. "The bottom line is, most people don't stick with an exercise program," says Dr. William Howard, medical director of the Sports Medicine Center at Baltimore's Union Memorial Hospital. "Oh, they'll respond immediately to the latest report that recommends exercise. A lot of people will start a regular exercise program the next day. Say 100 people do that. You check back a few weeks later, and you'll be lucky if there are 8 or 10 of them still exercising regularly."

icine and nutrition, agrees. "I'd be surprised if you'd get 10 percent (of American adults) exercising regularly," he says.

The federal government is slightly more optimistic. The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services estimates that about 20 percent of American adults, ages 18 to 64, participate regularly in vigorous physical activity.

Still, 20 percent falls far short of governmental hopes for Americans' fitness.

As part of their 1990 Objectives for the Nation, Health and Human Services projected that more than 60 percent of American adults would be participating in "appropriate physical activity" by the start of the next decade.

That means, according to the government, "exercise which involves large muscle groups in dynamic movement for periods of 20 minutes or longer three or more days per week, and which is performed at an intensity requiring 60 percent or greater of an individual's cardiorespiratory capacity."

In other words, if you're not running, walking, swimming, biking or doing some other activity that raises your heart rate to its maximum level for 20 minutes — activity known as aerobic exercise — at least three days every week, you are not exercising, at least by the government's definition.

Of course, not everyone defines exercise in the same way as Uncle Sam.

In a 1987 Louis Harris poll, for example, 75 percent of adult Americans said they exercised regularly.

"Are you kidding?" asks Dr. Mirkin. "Some people think exercise means walking from their car to the office. They're really deluding themselves."

Fitness experts are quick to point out that any exercise — walking several flights of stairs instead of taking the elevator, for instance — is better than no activity whatsoever. And non-aerobic exercise — like stretching or using weight machines — can help improve flexibility, body strength and endurance.

But what fitness experts and the government are trying to promote is the kind of exercise that reaps long-term health benefits — namely, reducing your risk for heart disease and stroke, reducing stress and preventing obesity. And that involves working out aerobically at least three times every single week.

"What's the excuse everyone uses?" asks Dr. Howard. "I'd love to exercise, but I haven't got the time." Baloney! It takes 20 minutes to half an hour three days a week. So get up a little earlier.

"I hear it all the time: People say they don't have time, they work long hours. Let me tell you, exercise is just as important as anything else you do during the day. In the long run, it's more important than work."

Other fitness experts agree with Dr. Howard: It's not a question of having the time, it's a matter of making the time.

"People are locked into certain routines, and it is very difficult to get them to change those routines for any reason," says Karch. "Fitting in an exercise program means adjusting your routine."

"The funny thing is, for people who make exercise a part of their routine, it becomes almost habit. They really miss it when they don't do it."

Which prompts the obvious question: Why do those estimated 10 to 20 percent of Americans who exercise regularly stick with it? What is it about them that makes them persevere while the rest of us exercise in spurts and then drop the effort almost as soon as we start?

"People who exercise are motivated to do it, one way or another," says Dr. Howard. "Now, the motivation for each person might be different. One person might be doing it for his health, another might want to lose weight, another might just enjoy it. I know guys who go to health clubs to meet women. There's nothing wrong with that. Whatever the motivation, the important thing is, they exercise, they enjoy it and they stick with it."

Health benefits are important enough to outweigh all other motivations, says Dr. Mirkin.

"The single most significant motivation for exercising is that it prolongs life," he says.

A 1987 study by Dr. Ralph Paffenbarger of the Stanford University School of Medicine, showed that people who exercise regularly increase their life expectancy by an average of two years.

First Step In Exercise Goals Is Setting A Target Heart Rate

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

The first step in deciding what goals to set for yourself in doing aerobic exercise is to measure your heart rate.

The heart rate you should maintain while exercising is called your "target heart rate." Perhaps the simplest way to determine that rate is to subtract your age from 220 and multiply the result by 70 percent.

To get a more personalized determination:

- Determine your resting heart rate. Take your pulse after sitting quietly for 5 minutes. (Count your pulse for 10 seconds, and multiply by 6 to get the number of beats per minute.) Try to measure your pulse from your wrist, not your neck. It's often easier to locate a pulse from the carotid artery in the neck, but it can be less accurate as some experts say pressing on this artery can actually lower the heart rate.
 - Determine your maximum heart rate. To do that, subtract your age from 220.
 - Subtract resting heart rate from maximum heart rate to determine heart rate reserve.
 - Multiply heart rate reserve by 0.70 to determine heart rate raise.
 - Add heart rate raise to resting heart rate — and that will equal your target rate.
- Your resting heart rate will become slower, stronger and more regular as your fitness level increases. And the fitter you are, the more quickly your heart rate will return to resting after exercising.

Parents Ruined Her Chances Of Being Corrupted By Money

There was a time when people made money the old-fashioned way: They inherited it. Then along came the state lotteries, and today this country is producing "convenience store millionaires" faster than you can nuke a Danish in the microwave.

Don't you wonder what happens to people when they suddenly come into a $115 million jackpot? Do they still turn a dress inside out looking for a price tag before they buy it? Do they continue to count their change before putting it in their pockets? Or are they able to shed the old lifestyle like a bad hairpiece and move up to capping the dog's teeth and bathing in designer water?

I don't buy lottery tickets. My parents have ruined me for any chance of corruption-by-money I might have enjoyed. They were parents of the Depression who handed down a set of values that have not changed in 50 years. I grew up believing that "rich" meant eating a can of white albacore tuna all by yourself and heating a bedroom during the winter. It was leaving the cellophane on the lampshades so they'd look good after the owner died. To this day I can't throw away a pair of pantyhose with a hole in the knee. I save them to wear with slacks.

According to my dad, you don't buy a pair of shoes until the ones on your feet wear out. You don't trade up to a new car until the one you're driving starts costing money to fix, and if you can't pay cash, you stay home. "Plastic" is the devil's business card.

I remember my mother's reaction when I told her I was expecting my third child. She sighed and said, "Is this something you really need?" It was a frill.

My parents — the Waltons — would love the Soviet Union's lottery. The cost of a lottery ticket is 50 kopecks (about 81 cents). They take away the problem of what to do with large sums of money by offering gifts instead. Recently, in the Ukraine, a winner named Ira walked off with several rolls of toilet paper, a towel and a small bowl. Other lucky ticket holders won hens, pigs, goats, detergent and soap — all items coveted more than money.

But getting back to capitalism. My parents have never understood me. Just once, I want to be able to buy respect and affection. I want to torture myself with the question, "Do my friends really like me or my fortune?" I want to be loved only for the bundle of bills under my mattress.

OK, so maybe in the long run I'll find out that money doesn't buy happiness, but I bet a couple of "mil" could sure cheer me up.

Couple Are Wed Friday

GRIFTON — Georgeanna Elizabeth Turnage of Grifton and Michael Wayne McLawhorn of Ayden were married in a high noon ceremony Friday at the Greenville Evangelistic Tabernacle Church. The Rev. Lowell Cupps conducted the double-ring ceremony.

MRS. McLAWHORN

Adrienne Calhoun of Ayden, pianist, and Charles Roundtree of Grifton, vocalist, presented wedding music.

Parents of the bridal couple are Mr. and Mrs. George A. Turnage of the Tick Bite community, and Mr. and Mrs. Billy F. McLawhorn of Ayden.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a full-length gown styled with a Queen Anne lace neckline and bodice with mother of pearl sequins and pearls and Elizabethan sleeves. Her fingertip veil was attached to a satin bow trimmed by miniature pearls. She carried a bouquet of silk spring flowers in shades of pink, blue and white tied with satin ribbon streamers.

Teresa McLawhorn, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor. She wore a pink skirt and blouse embossed with roses and carried a bouquet of white silk roses. Darlene Buck of Ayden was bridesmaid and wore a full-length pink gown.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Richard Turnage of the Tick Bite community, brother of the bride, and Billy Sheppard McLawhorn of Ayden, brother of the bridegroom.

Flower girls were Sonya Clements and Crystal Clements, both of Ayden. They wore pink and white tea-length dresses. The miniature bride was Shannon Dail of Ayden and the miniature bridegroom was Michael W. McLawhorn Jr., son of the bridegroom.

The bride's mother wore a royal blue street-length dress and the bridegroom's mother wore a two-piece street-length dress of earth tone colors.

A brunch reception was held in the fellowship hall following the ceremony.

Ann McLawhorn, sister of the bridegroom, directed the wedding. Presiding at the register was Christine Turnage, cousin of the bride.

The bride is a student at Pitt Community College and the bridegroom is self-employed as an electrician.

The couple will live in Ayden after a wedding trip.

A miscellaneous shower was given for the couple before their wedding.

Surely God Would Not Object

Dear Abby: Having read the letter in your column urging people to donate their organs after death, I am appalled by the piece entitled "To Remember Me" written by Robert Test. It was positively gruesome!

The author was asking that his body be dismembered so that it is no longer a body — in order for others to live a fuller life.

As many others do, I consider my body as the temple that God built to house my soul. It was not meant to be cut to pieces at death as if it were an old radio or some other non-living structure.

As far as I'm concerned, that letter was totally depressing. — T.G. Hayes, Clifton, N.J.

Dear Mr. Hayes: I cannot believe that the God in whom I believe would object if a blind person were to regain his sight through a cornea transplant, or that a dying baby were to miraculously survive following a liver transplant.

I am sorry that you found that letter depressing. Perhaps if someone you loved had had years added to his or her life due to an organ transplant, you would have a more tolerant view of donating organs after death.

Dear Abby: In the middle of April, I saw a movie on television called "A Deadly Silence." It was about a 16-year-old girl who paid somebody to kill her father. She was a victim of incest, and she feared for her little sister.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Abby, I, too, am an incest survivor. My father was very religious — and nobody ever suspected a thing. The incest started when I was about 3 or 4 and lasted until I was 18. I remember hiding under the bed so my father wouldn't find me.

I never told anyone because I didn't want my dad to get arrested, or my parents to divorce. I never went to counseling. I never even knew any was available until I saw that movie. I thought I was alone in this. I suppose I probably should go, because my feelings are starting to surface in my relationship with my boyfriend. I am 22 years old now and living away from home and supporting myself.

To this day, my father has never said he was sorry. I wouldn't go back home for a million dollars.

Abby, please tell kids whom to report this to if this is happening to them, too. I'll bet there are a surprising number of them.

Thanks for listening. I didn't know who to write to, but I've always read your column and thought maybe you could help me. You did just by listening! — Angry And Hurt

Dear Abby: "Just listening" is not enough. You need to resolve your feelings of anger and resentment.

Counseling is available. Call your county family service agency or your local mental health association. How sad that you did not know that any child who is being molested by anyone — family member, neighbor or stranger — should immediately tell a trusted adult, a teacher, counselor or policeman.

Adults who have not come to terms with themselves after having been sexually molested as children will forever suffer from feelings of low self-esteem and unearned guilt.

Dear Abby: About 10 years ago, through your Operation Dear Abby, I started writing to a young Marine named Nick Carpenter who was stationed in Cuba. We became great friends and I wrote several times a week for 10 months.

Then he took a leave and came to visit me. We became engaged during his visit, and on Feb. 27 of this year we were married in Camp Lejeune, N.C.

I don't think either of us could be happier. Thanks, Abby. I would never have met the great guy I married if it hadn't been for you. — Katherine Herrin-Carpenter

Dear Kathy and Nick: Congratulations. Semper Fi!

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA, 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Carlesimo Has New Plans For Matchups

P.J. Carlesimo

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

P.J. Carlesimo's problem was that no one told him anything and no one would listen to him.

The Seton Hall basketball coach held forth Tuesday as his team's conference, the Big East, and the Atlantic Coast Conference announced the matchups and pairings for a challenge series between two of the country's top leagues.

It didn't matter that Carlesimo's Pirates were seeded seventh in the nine-team Big East. His material flew with no malice and his tongue firmly planted in his cheek.

"This is the first I heard of it," Carlesimo told the assembled media in Washington D.C. with a straight face. He then turned to Big East commissioner Dave Gavitt seated to his right and said: "Dave, you should have talked to the coaches before doing something like this."

The four-day, eight-game series has been talked about for nearly two years and was highly anticipated by fans, players and conference officials. Notice the coaches weren't in that group.

The games will be played in Dec. 4-7. That's the time of the season most college coaches are looking for games against teams which pose no threat to a good start. Facing your seeding counterpart in another tough conference is not what the men on the bench are looking for.

"We were asked at the league meetings to vote on the order of teams but no one told us it was for this," said Carlesimo.

Carlesimo said his team's seeding was expected, considering he lost all five starters to graduation as well as "a key reserve walk-on." Among the starters lost was Andrew Gaze, a sharpshooting guard from Australia who played only one season and attended classes from October until the week after the championship game.

"P.J. will be all right," said Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski, whose team lost to Seton Hall in the national semifinals. "He's bringing in six kids from Australia."

"I need more time, so this bunch is coming in in September," Carlesimo retorted.

He wasn't finished yet. Carlesimo had to give his opinions on the sites selected for the first Challenge Series in a four-year contract.

"There is no such thing as a neutral site," he said. "I do have some suggestions on how to spice these things up, though."

"Put Duke instead of Virginia in the Meadowlands and you could have an all-blue doubleheader as well as letting Mike play on his home floor."

Duke has advanced to the Final Four all three times in the '80s by winning the regional championship at the Meadowlands.

"You put Virginia, Clemson and Syracuse together and you have three orange teams and we'll step aside and let Princeton in — they're also from New Jersey — and you can have that doubleheader."

"The only other one I see is an all-Italian doubleheader with us, Louie (Carnesecca of St. John's), Jimmy (Valvano of North Carolina State) — and it would have worked nice if Wake had hired an Italian instead of Dave Odom."

Carlesimo's ideas drew hearty laughs, as did one suggestion from a member of the media.

It is if you're responsible for the coffers of the schools involved. The television rights were sold exclusively to ESPN and sellouts are anticipated at the Hartford Civic Center, the Greensboro Coliseum, where two games will be played, and the Meadowlands Arena.

ACC commissioner Gene Corrigan said ticket prices haven't been set but non-student tickets are expected to sell for "$30 to $40."

Hartford's matchups will be the third-seeded teams, Pittsburgh and Georgia Tech, and the eight-seeded teams, Connecticut and Maryland. The first night at Greensboro will have Carlesimo's Pirates against Wake Forest and the No. 4 seeds, St. John's and North Carolina State. The next night will have No. 5 Providence against Clemson and a meeting of the second seeds, Syracuse and Duke.

Hearns Looking At Chance For Redemption

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAS VEGAS — Thomas Hearns dreams of the day he can rid himself of his own personal nightmare.

He gets his chance Monday night in a long-awaited rematch with Sugar Ray Leonard.

"It's been a definite nightmare, over and over again," Hearns said Wednesday. "Eight years I have lived with the pain of this little monster following me around. This pain has to stop."

For Hearns, the fight is far more than a chance to pick up $11 million and the World Boxing Council 168-pound title.

It's a chance to avenge his Sept. 16, 1981 defeat to Leonard, who stopped Hearns in the 14th round of a welterweight title fight that Hearns was leading on the cards of all three ringside judges.

It also may be his last opportunity to finally win a big fight, a stigma that has marred an otherwise successful career that has seen him win pieces of five world titles and millions of dollars in purses.

"I jumped for joy when I heard we got this fight," said Hearns, who campaigned for the rematch for years. "Talk about somebody who was happy."

The 30-year-old Hearns is a 3-1 underdog in Monday's scheduled 12-round fight, which is officially for the 168-pound title but will likely be fought with both fighters at 164 pounds or less.

Most think Hearns' chin is suspect, and his legs are gone. Even the vaunted right hand that terrorized opponents most of his career appears less of a punch than it was in his prime.

Hearns was knocked out in a shocking third-round upset by Iran Barkley last June and was knocked down by James Kinchen in his last fight in November. He would have lost that bout had he not held on to Kinchen and referee Mills Lane for some 30 seconds.

But if sheer and total determination has anything to do with it, Hearns has to be given a chance to win this fight.

Hardison Gains Dream By Signing With Guilford

By Tim Chandler
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Billy Hardison realized a lifelong dream Wednesday when he signed a football scholarship with Guilford College.

"It's been a dream of mine since the sixth grade to play college football," Hardison said. "Guilford is a good academic school and its athletic program is on the rise."

Hardison, 5-8, 180, started at defensive back for four years for North Pitt High School and served as the Panthers' starting quarterback this past season.

Guilford recruited Hardison to fill vacancies in the defensive backfield.

"The defensive secondary position will be wide open for him (Hardison) due to graduations there," North Pitt football coach Stuart Ennis said. "He's going to get the opportunity to play. It's just up to him on how hard he works."

This past season, Hardison was named to the Eastern Plains Conference All-Conference defensive team and was also named the Panthers' top defensive back after hauling in five interceptions. As a quarterback, Hardison also rushed for over 500 yards and threw for another 300.

"I've gained a lot of experience at North Pitt," (See HARDISON B-5)

Wilander's Comeback Ends Chesnokov Sends Swede Down To 6-4, 6-0 Defeat

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PARIS — After a nightmarish eight months, Mats Wilander was gradually rekindling the fire in his tennis.

Then he got badly burned by Andrei Chesnokov. Wilander, the defending champion in the French Open, was destroyed 6-4, 6-0, 7-5 by the unseeded Chesnokov in Wednesday's quarterfinals at Roland Garros, the first time in 16 years that a Soviet has reached the semifinals of a Grand Slam event.

"I was rather pleased with the way I played" earlier in the tournament, Wilander said. "I can't be pleased with the way I lost. I can't be pleased with losing in the quarterfinals of the French. That wouldn't be fair to myself. I'm disappointed."

Chesnokov's semifinal opponent will be American teen-ager Michael Chang, who kept alive hopes of a first U.S. men's title here in 34 years.

Chang, who upset top-seeded Ivan Lendl in the fourth round with as dramatic a come-from-behind victory as the Center Court crowd has ever seen, suffered no letdown and continued his march toward the title by eliminating Ronald Agenor of Haiti 6-4, 2-6, 6-4, 7-6 on Wednesday.

Free of the fifth-set cramps that hindered him against Lendl, Chang proved the victory was no fluke as he outlasted Agenor in a match full of errors and fluctuating fortunes.

Lakers Will Turn To Magic

L.A. Hoping To Even Series With A Win In Game 2

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — In times of trouble, the Los Angeles Lakers turn to Magic Johnson.

It's that time again. The Lakers lost one of their top scorers, then lost their intensity and the first game of the NBA Finals to the Detroit Pistons.

With starting guard Byron Scott sidelined at least through tonight's second game of the best-of-7 series, Johnson, who took just 12 shots in Tuesday night's 109-97 loss, must pick up the slack.

"I have to do more and be more assertive," he said. "I have to take more than 12 shots. I have to step up."

That prospect scares Detroit guard Isiah Thomas, who led all scorers with 24 points in the opening game.

Magic Johnson

"Some people have a nuclear bomb, but they don't have a guy in control who will push the button," he said. "These guys have a guy in control who will push the button. That's not good for Detroit."

Los Angeles coach Pat Riley said he expects "MVP play" tonight from Johnson, the NBA's most valuable player.

"He knows we need more from him now, more leadership and more strength," said Riley, who also needs better play from others.

James Worthy made just six of 18 shots and scored 17 points, tying Johnson for team scoring honors in Game 1. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar had eight points and played only 14 minutes. Michael Cooper, who started for Scott, finished with three points.

"We have to play as a team more (See NBA, B-2)

Gretzky Earns NHL MVP Award

TORONTO (AP) — Wayne Gretzky of the Los Angeles Kings was named the National Hockey League's most valuable player, winning the Hart Trophy for a record ninth time.

Wayne Gretzky

Gretzky, who scored 54 goals and 168 points in 78 games, is 13 points behind Gordie Howe's all-time record for career points with 1,837. He became the first player in NHL history to win the same award nine times. Bobby Orr won the Norris Trophy as best defenseman eight.

Mario Lemieux of Pittsburgh, who broke Gretzky's eight-year reign as MVP last season, was second in the voting, conducted by the Professional Hockey Writers Association.

Four members of the Montreal Canadiens received individual awards. Patrick Roy won the Vezina Trophy as the best goaltender, defenseman Chris Chelios took the Norris Trophy and Guy Carbonneau repeated as winner of the Selke Trophy given to the best defensive forward. In addition, Montreal's Pat Burns won the Jack Adams Trophy as the league's top coach.

Joe Mullen captured the Lady Byng Trophy for skillful and gentlemanly play, Brian Leetch of the New York Rangers won the Calder Trophy as the rookie of the year and Bryan Trottier of the New York Islanders won the King Clancy Memorial Award for humanitarian contributions to hockey.

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Rick Ley, a former Hartford captain and minor league coach, returned to the Whalers when he signed a multiyear contract for his first NHL coaching job.

Ley succeeds Larry Pleau, who was fired in a front-office skapeup on May 17. Ley coached Milwaukee of the International Hockey League last season after four years with Muskegon, also in the IHL.

Overton Third In California Event

Greenville's Kristi Overton came within two buoys of capturing the slalom title at the Coors Light Pro Tour water ski event at Marineland in California.

Overton, who won the slalom at Orlando, Fla., in May, was seeded first in the California event which featured 15 of the top women skiers in the world. Four made it to the semifinals, where she lost out in head-to-head competition with Deena Mapple of Florida. Camille Duval of Florida beat Susi Graham of Canada in the other semifinal, and Duval then went on to win. Each of the wins was by less than two buoys.

Overton's next competition will be this weekend at Oklahoma City on the third stop of the Coors Light Pro Tour.

Martin Named Tennessee Assistant

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Ray Martin, an assistant at Southern Methodist, has joined the Tennessee basketball staff, coach Wade Houston said Wednesday.

Martin, 34, was at SMU for one year after spending eight seasons as an assistant to Jim Valvano at North Carolina State.

"I'm excited about the opportunity and the challenge," Martin said. Houston called Martin "a dedicated and conscientious worker and a man with a strong commitment toward academic success for his players."

Martin graduated from Notre Dame in 1977 with four letters and four NCAA Tournament appearances. He coached at Harvard for a year and spent two years out of coaching before joining Valvano's staff.

Kemp Allegations Could Cause Change

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — A University of Georgia faculty committee investigating allegations made by assistant developmental studies professor Jen Kemp against the Athletic Association has suggested the university do away with the developmental studies program and incorporate remedial courses into additional academic departments.

After interviewing 32 people during the past month, the two-member subcommittee concluded Wednesday that the university is unlikely to eliminate the developmental studies program because of the "social-academic stigma attached to students enrolled in developmental studies."

In addressing a wide-ranging list of allegations, the committee also found that Athletic Association tutors "appeared qualified and should not be considered incompetent."

Kemp had charged that tutors "were a hindrance to the academic development of student athletes," according to the report.

Kemp was quoted as calling tutors incompetent while alleging they participated in ghostwriting of papers.

Although the committee found that many of Kemp's allegations were without merit, it did agree that "some instances of excessive help by Athletic Association tutors apparently occurred."

The committee cited one specific essay in which "excessive help seemed obvious" and recommended that Athletic Association tutors receive the same training as university tutors.

Pitino's Contract Has New Language

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Kentucky's contract with new basketball coach Rick Pitino lists 13 possible causes for dismissal, making it far more explicit than the job agreement for his predecessor, Eddie Sutton.

Sutton's contract stated that: "The coach agrees to conduct the basketball program in accordance with the regulations of the National Collegiate Athletic Association and the regulations of the Southeastern Conference.

"Violation of said regulations shall be cause for termination of this contract by the association."

Details of Pitino's contract were reported in Wednesday's editions of The Lexington Herald-Leader, which obtained a copy under the state's Open Records Act.

Most of the causes for firing relate to a recently completed NCAA investigation of the UK basketball program that resulted in a three-year probation and a two-year ban on tournament play.

- Major violations of NCAA or SEC regulations.
- Failure to follow athletics department or university policies.
- Acts of intentional misconduct, including a significant violation of university rules or NCAA rules. Pitino also would be held responsible if he had knowledge of a violation by an assistant coach, athlete or booster.
- Refusal to cooperate with the university, the NCAA or the SEC in an investigation.
- Knowing involvement in academic fraud of a prospective student-athlete.
- Knowing involvement in offering or providing a prospective or enrolled student-athlete an improper inducement or extra benefit.
- Providing information to individuals involved with organized gambling, or soliciting or accepting a bet on any intercollegiate team or contest.
- Failure to report orally, on at least an annual basis, the sources and amounts of all athletically related income and benefits from sources outside the university.

Ballesteros Pointing Toward U.S. Open

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Seve Ballesteros hopes to use the familiar surroundings of one of his favorite hunting grounds as a tune-up for next week's U.S. Open golf championship.

"It's very important for me to play well this week," the Spanish star said before a practice round for the Westchester Classic that begins Thursday.

"If I play well here, it gives me confidence, makes me feel good mentally, for next week," Ballesteros said.

And there's every reason for him to expect a strong performance on the hilly Westchester Country Club in the northern suburbs of New York.

Ballesteros, the current and three-time British Open champion, lists this course as one of his four favorites in the world. Madrid, where he won earlier this year; Wentworth near London; and the Augusta National, site of the Masters, are the others.

"One of the courses where I finish in the top five," Ballesteros said.

The record supports that assessment. In four starts here, he has won twice and lost in a playoff.

Boldness Counts At Bradley

By Tom Foreman Jr.

HIGH POINT — Attack, attack, attack. Many of the LPGA's best golfers say they still find being bold difficult sometimes.

"It's hard for me to be real aggressive," said Nancy Lopez, preparing for today's first round of the Pat Bradley International golf tournament. "I still don't like to make a bogey."

But who's the boldest matters most in this tournament.

For the second year, the tournament is being played under a modified Stableford scoring system, which rewards the go-for-the-pin approach and penalizes conservative players. Golfers get points for birdies, eagles and double eagles; they lose points for bogeys and double bogeys. Pars are worth nothing.

"It's tough mentally to get adjusted to it... The excitement of the fans is not like the excitement of the past because they need to be educated," Lopez said. "It's hard to change sometimes."

"I'm just going for the hole tomorrow," defending champion Martha Nause said Wednesday. "I won't change much for over what I've been doing."

Not changing just might mean another victory for Nause, who ended a 10-year drought last season by winning at Willow Creek Golf Course, earning $62,500 in the process. She finished the year with more than $138,000 in earnings — double her previous best — and has won more than $100,000 this year.

"It's really fun defending instead of being just another player," Nause said.

Patty Sheehan held on to win last week's Rochester International, sinking a par putt on the first extra hole to defeat Ayako Okamoto. It was her first victory of the season and gives her some momentum as she returns to the course where she posted successive victories in 1983-84, when the tournament was known as the Henredon Classic.

Pat Bradley was overcoming a thyroid problem last season and finished with just $15,965 in prize money. It was her worst year since her rookie season of 1974.

But Bradley said last year is a memory, and the time has come to change her approach.

"You don't want to get stupid," she said. "I think there are going to be 12 and 8-10 footers that people are going to attack. I think that will be in our minds tomorrow."

This year's format has been altered from last year. The 144-player field will be cut after the second and third rounds, with 36 players to compete in Sunday's final round in the $400,000 tournament. Last year, the field was cut in half after each of the first three rounds, with 18 players making the final.

Mom Helped Al Learn His Trade

When Al Michaels was a teenager, he sometimes would skip school and go to the race track with his mother.

"She belongs in the mother's hall of fame," the ABC sportscaster said. "What other mother would go to a principal and say 'Alan has a dentist's appointment' so she could take me to Hollywood Park or Santa Anita?"

Thanks to Michaels' handicapping skills, the trips were usually profitable.

"She'd make the bets and we would split the profits," he said.

Michaels continued to play hooky for the horses during his college days at Arizona State, where he became friendly with a journalism professor who shared his passion for the track.

"We would get together before class and see if we liked the daily double at Turf Paradise," Michaels recalled. "If we couldn't find anything, he would hold a regular class. But if we liked the double, he would cut the class short and we would take off for the track."

These days, going to the races is part of Michaels' job. He is a member of ABC's announcing crew for the Triple Crown series, which concludes Saturday with the Belmont Stakes in New York.

Given his background, it's ironic that Michaels is much better known for his prime-time baseball and football work than he is for his limited racing role.

"That's just the way it worked out," he said. "I love horse racing, but I never had the opportunity to do it until a few years ago."

At the Belmont, ABC will focus on Sunday Silence's bid to become the first Triple Crown winner since Affirmed in 1978. His main challenge is expected to come from Easy Goer, who finished second in the Kentucky Derby and Preakness Stakes.

"I like Sunday Silence," Michaels said. "He's like the Pete Rose of horse racing. He doesn't always look pretty, but he's a winner."

Don't invite NBC's Bob Costas and Sports Illustrated's Franz Lidz to the same party.

In a recent piece bemoaning the lack of sports journalism on television, Lidz chastised Costas for blurring the line between sportscasting and show business. Costas returned the fire in a speech before a group of sports editors in St. Louis.

"What is this, the Nuremberg trials?" he asked. "There should be room to have fun."

TBS' last NBA playoff telecast of the season was a record-setter.

Game 5 of the Bulls-Pistons series was seen in more than 4 million homes, making it the most watched basketball telecast in cable history. It was also the second biggest draw ever on TBS behind "Secrets of the Titanic" in 1987.

When Brent Musburger and Tim McCarver announce baseball on CBS next season, it will be a reunion of sorts.

NBA ...

now than ever and not get into ourselves," Riley said. Johnson "definitely has to give us more, as does James, but we really have to play better as a unit in all facets of our game, period."

On Tuesday night, Detroit went ahead for good at 20-18, led 55-48 at halftime and by 20 points late in the third quarter. The margin ranged from 13 to 21 points after that.

"Their intensity level will definitely be better in Game 2," Detroit's Bill Laimbeer said. "I don't think they knew what to expect from us after their (eight-day) layoff" following the Western Conference Finals. "Game sharpness and game intensity (are) very hard to maintain during any kind of layoff."

The Pistons also beat the Lakers by 12 points in the opener of last year's title series. But Los Angeles won the second game the same margin and went on to take the series 4-3.

The situation is much different this year as the Lakers seek their third consecutive title.

The Pistons, who hadn't been in the Finals since they moved to Detroit in 1958, now have that experience.

The Lakers don't have Scott, their most dependable outside shooter who had 24 points in Game 2 last year.

He suffered a partial tear in his left hamstring during Monday's practice. His status will be re-evaluated before Sunday's third game in Los Angeles, but he said Wednesday the injury would have sidelined him for at least three weeks if it occurred during the regular season.

"Byron has always been the one player that most of the opposition stays home on and opens up areas for other players," Riley said. "So the shots are now not going to be there as they were before."

The Pistons aren't getting carried away with their opening victory as they did last season.

"We were so happy to win (last year) we ran off court cheering," Detroit forward John Salley said. "Then we got in the locker room and we were cheering and everybody said, 'Cool off, cool off, be quiet, there are cameras in here.'"

"Then the next day in practice we're all be-bopping and so happy that we won and they came out and just destroyed us in Game 2," he added. "We're more mature this year."

Fernando Hurls Dodgers Past Braves

Valenzuela Captures First Victory After 19 Winless Starts Over Nearly A Year

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

There were those who wondered whether Fernando Valenzuela would ever win another major-league game.

Valenzuela put those doubts to rest — at least for a day — with his first victory in nearly a year as the Los Angeles Dodgers held off the Atlanta Braves 5-4 Wednesday night.

"I waited for a long time. I just want to do my job and hope to be winning again," he said after first victory since last June 14. "It took a long time to win one game."

Valenzuela had lost a career-high eight straight decisions and was winless in 19 starts. He was not impressive this time but he won in Atlanta, the same place he made his big-league debut on Sept. 15, 1980.

Valenzuela gave up four runs on nine hits in 6 1/3 innings. He walked four and struck out two.

"I feel happy for the first win, but I don't think tonight was one of my best games this year," he said.

In other National League games, St. Louis beat Montreal 5-2, Cincinnati routed San Francisco 12-5, Philadelphia defeated Pittsburgh 7-5, Houston edged San Diego 3-2 and New York downed Chicago 10-5.

Valenzuela, 1-5 with a 4.37 earned run average, has struggled most of the season. There was talk that with his fastball barely at 80 mph, the one-time star of the Dodgers' staff might be through at age 28 — two years younger than current Los Angeles ace Orel Hershiser.

"We're very, very happy that Fernando finally got that first win," Dodgers manager Tom Lasorda said. "To get that win under his belt really helped him a lot."

Valenzuela improved to 18-7 lifetime against Atlanta. He has won 119 games in the majors and beaten the Braves more than anyone else.

Valenzuela, a good hitter early in his career, helped himself with a two-run single. It was his first hit in 20 at-bats this season.

"I feel like everything came together — my first hit, first RBI and first win," he said.

Valenzuela took a 5-1 lead into the seventh inning, but Tommy Gregg doubled with one out and Andres Thomas walked. Dale Murphy's RBI single finished Valenzuela.

Ricky Horton got Darrell Evans to pop out and pinch-hitter Dion James greeted Alejandro Pena with an RBI single. Pinch-hitter Jeff Wetherby, in his first major league at-bat, followed with a run-scoring single to center before Jay Howell relieved for his 11th save.

Kirk Gibson's RBI double put the Dodgers ahead 2-1 in the sixth. Later in the inning, Valenzuela's two-run single finished Zane Smith, 1-9.

Smith has lost five straight decisions. The Braves have scored just 20 runs in his nine losses.

Reds 12, Giants 5
Paul O'Neill homered twice, including a grand slam, and drove in a career-high six runs as Cincinnati beat visiting San Francisco.

O'Neill hit his first career slam and the first by a Reds' player since last June 14. He also hit a solo home run, his ninth, and an RBI single, making him 14-for-26 against the Giants this season.

Barry Larkin went 2-for-5 and raised his league-leading average to .355. He hit a two-run double during a six-run second inning that made it 8-3.

Rick Mahler, 8-5, allowed 10 hits, including solo homers by Terry Kennedy and Candy Maldonado, in his fifth complete game in 14 starts. Atlee Hammaker, 5-4, lasted just 1 1/3 innings and gave up seven hits and six earned runs.

Astros 3, Padres 2
Mike Scott won his 10th game and Houston defeated San Diego at the Astrodome. The Astros have won 12 of their last 13 games and moved into a first-place tie in the West with Cincinnati and San Francisco.

Scott, 10-3, gave up two runs on seven hits in seven innings. He has won five of his last six decisions and been the winning pitcher in three of Houston's last five victories. Dave Smith pitched one inning for his 11th save.

Walt Terrell, 4-7, allowed three runs on seven hits in his third complete game. The Astros overcame a 2-1 deficit in the sixth when Glenn Davis hit an RBI triple and scored on one of Terry Puhl's two doubles.

Cardinals 5, Expos 2
Tom Brunansky homered and drove in three runs, leading St.

Louis past Mark Langston and Montreal.

A crowd of 30,214, the largest in Montreal since opening day, turned out to see Langston in his home debut since being traded by Seattle. Langston, 1-1, pitched seven innings and gave up four runs on seven hits. He struck out eight and walked five.

Brunansky's solo home run, his seventh, put the Cardinals ahead 3-2 in the fifth. He hit a sacrifice fly in the seventh and an RBI single in the ninth.

Ken Hill, 3-4, won for the first time in seven starts since May 4. Ken Dayley got his third save.

Phillies 7, Pirates 5
Curt Ford's pinch single keyed a three-run eighth inning that sent Philadelphia over Pittsburgh. The Phillies won their second straight after an 11-game losing streak and the Pirates lost their sixth in a row.

Ford singled with the bases loaded, breaking a 4-all tie. Darren Daulton's two-run, pinch double provided insurance.

Barry Bonds homered twice for the visiting Pirates. He hit a solo homer in the ninth inning, his ninth of the season.

Mets 10, Cubs 5
Dwight Gooden improved to 17-3 lifetime against Chicago as Kevin McReynolds homered and drove in four runs for New York.

McReynolds' three-run homer broke a 4-all tie in the fifth inning. Howard Johnson also homered for the visiting Mets.

INJURY REPORT

Detroit's Fred Lynn crashed into the left-field wall Wednesday at Tiger Stadium trying to catch a fly ball by Boston's Wade Boggs in the first inning and had to leave the game. X-rays were negative. ... Philadelphia's Steve Ontiveros, just off the disabled list because of an injured pitching elbow, is expected to work a game or two out of the bullpen before returning to the starting rotation.

SkyDome Gets First Baptism As Jays Win Their 1st There

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Toronto Blue Jays' first victory ever in the SkyDome was an open and shut case.

Wednesday's game between Toronto and Milwaukee started under sunny skies, so the roof was left open. However, a heavy downpour hit around the fifth inning and the retractable roof was quickly set in motion.

By the end of the game, almost everyone was dry and the Blue Jays had a 4-2 victory over Milwaukee led by Ernie Whitt's three hits and three RBIs.

The closing operation began at 8:48 p.m. EDT and ended at 9:22 — too late to prevent a six-minute stoppage in play. When the roof is working perfectly, the procedure is scheduled to take 20 minutes. But SkyDome officials are still working out some minor problems.

As three of the four panels moved to cover the stadium, the plate area was left exposed. Home plate umpire Rich Garcia, his shirt soaked, stopped play briefly and ordered a tarp placed over the dirt areas in the infield.

Two sections running up the five levels on the third- and first-base sides were left exposed during the 34-minute operation, forcing the fans to find cover as others sat comfortably.

As the roof closed, the people in the stands stood and cheered.

"I couldn't figure out what was going on," losing pitcher Chris Bosio said. "I thought maybe they traded their whole outfield or something. People here in Canada cheering about a roof. What a joke."

Rob Ducey even felt a little patriotic, being the only Canadian on the Blue Jays.

"To see the dome close during a game was a sight we've been waiting for a long time. I was excited," Ducey said. "Not only as a player and a fan, but as a Canadian. It was an important moment for me."

Elsewhere in the American League it was Oakland 3, Minnesota 2; Kansas City 9, Seattle 6; Boston 6, Detroit 1; Chicago 6, Texas 4; and Cleveland 1, California 0. Baltimore at New York was rained out.

Toronto's John Cerutti, 3-3, took a seven-hit shutout into the ninth when Glenn Hershiser singled with one out and Rob Deer followed with his 13th homer. Cerutti allowed 11 hits en route to his first complete game of the season.

"It was an incredible feeling," Cerutti said. "To actually start a game outdoors and then all of a sudden be covered, is really amazing. It didn't distract me though. It was just exciting to see."

Whitt, 3-for-3, blooped a run-scoring double just inside the left-field line and Ducey had an RBI single to put the Blue Jays ahead 2-0 against Bosio, 6-4, in the second inning.

Whitt also had run-scoring singles in the fourth and eighth innings.

"It was Ernie Whitt's night," Milwaukee manager Tom Trebelhorn said. "Every time he hit a ball it found a place to land."

Indians 1, Angels 0

Greg Swindell pitched a two-hitter and Luis Medina homered in the seventh inning to snap a scoreless tie, leading Cleveland past California at Anaheim.

Swindell, 7-1, pitched his second shutout of the season and seventh of his career. He has beaten the Angels three straight times, and has an 0.67 ERA in that span. He has won his last three starts, including a 1-0 four-hitter against Baltimore on May 28.

Medina ended a 1-for-17 slump by hitting a 1-2 pitch from Chuck Finley, 7-4, for his fourth homer.

Red Sox 6, Tigers 1

John Dopyson and Rob Murphy combined on a four-hitter as Boston beat Detroit at Tiger Stadium. It was the Tigers' sixth loss in their last seven games.

Dopyson, 6-4, allowed one run and four hits in seven-plus innings and Murphy pitched hitless relief.

White Sox 6, Rangers 4

Ozzie Guillen's third single of the game drove in the go-ahead run as Chicago rallied for three runs in the eighth inning to beat Texas in Arlington.

Ken Patterson, who got one out in the seventh, improved to 3-0 and Bobby Thigpen pitched two innings for his 10th save.

Ron Kittle, who homered in the sixth, started the eighth with a single off Cecilio Guante, 3-3, and Ivan Calderon followed with a double. Carlton Fisk's sacrifice fly tied the score, and after an intentional walk, Guillen singled off reliever Kenny Rogers.

Cecil Espy had a homer, double and single for the Rangers.

Athletics 3, Twins 2

Rookie Larry Arndt started a three-run fifth inning with his first major-league hit as Oakland edged visiting Minnesota.

Tony Phillips and Dave Henderson hit RBI singles as the Athletics won the series two games to one despite scoring just five runs in the three games.

Royals 9, Mariners 6

Kevin Seitzer had three hits and three RBIs as Kansas City got 18 hits and beat Seattle at the Kingdome.

Sunday Silence Wants Respect

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Respect? That's a word often heard around Sunday Silence's barn. He beat the favored Easy Goer in the Kentucky Derby and Preakness, and somehow, he still seems like the underdog.

There are those who believe it's because Easy Goer comes out of the East, Sunday Silence from the West. Belmont Park, where the third race in the Triple Crown series will be run on Saturday, is Easy Goer's home. Part of it also is because Easy Goer was the 2-year-old champion.

Even Charlie Whittingham, Sunday Silence's 76-year-old trainer, believes New York bettors are likely to make Easy Goer the favorite. He says they're mad at Sunday Silence for beating Easy Goer twice.

Respect?

"I think most people respect him," said Sunday Silence's jockey, Patrick Valenzuela, a West Coast rider. "I know in California they do, and I think they do in New York."

Ten horses were expected to be entered today for Saturday's 1 1/2-mile Belmont Stakes. Besides Sunday Silence and Easy Goer, they will be Easy Goer's stablemate Ave Inspiring, Hawkster, Irish Actor, Triple Buck, Rock Point and three Triple Crown newcomers — Imbibe, Fire Maker and Le Voyageur.

Each 3-year-old will carry 126 pounds, and if all 10 go to post, the race will be worth $689,200 with $413,520 going to the winner. Sunday Silence also stands to claim a $5 million bonus, which includes the purses of all three races, if he wins the Triple Crown.

Besides the possibility of being short-changed once again by bettors, Sunday Silence has some other numbers going against him as he tries to become the 12th Triple Crown winner and first since Affirmed in 1978.

No horse has ever won the Triple Crown without going off the favorite in at least one of the three races. Assault came closest, winning the Triple Crown in 1946 while going off as the favorite only in the Preakness. Lord Boswell, Knockdown and Perfect Bahram were favored as an entry in the Derby that year, and Lord Boswell was a slight favorite in the Belmont.

Gallant Fox, in 1930, was the only other Triple Crown winner not favored in the Belmont, while six of the 11 Triple Crown winners were favored in all three.

Also, the Triple Crown has never been won with a field of more than eight in the Belmont. Seattle Slew in 1977 and Citation in 1948 each faced seven challengers, while Secretariat in 1973 and Affirmed faced only four.

Whittingham said he wasn't surprised by the size of the field.

"There are more horses now than there ever have been, and maybe people figure the top two will fall down," he said.

There have been 13 horses who have won the Derby and Preakness and not the Belmont. Two of those, Burgoon King in 1932 and Bold Venture in 1936, did not run in the Belmont. Of the 11 others, six were beaten by horses that ran in neither the Derby nor the Preakness.

The last time that happened was in 1981 when Pleasant Colony came to Belmont with a chance at the Triple Crown and finished third to Summing. In 1979, Spectacular Bid, whom some consider second only to Secretariat in this era, was third to another Triple Crown rookie, Coastal. It also happened in 1971 when Pass Catcher beat Canonero II, in 1968 when Stage Door Johnny upset Forward Pass, in 1958 when Cavan beat Tim Tam, and in 1944 when Bounding Home defeated Pensive.

The last horse which came to Belmont with a Triple Crown opportunity was Alysheba in 1987, and he was beaten by Bet Twice, who was second in each of the first two races.

"When horses run that hard, it's bound to take a toll down the road," said Imbibe's trainer, Tim Kelly. "Maybe he'll still look good and act good, but it takes something away mentally. You have to be a little leery when a horse has been through two races like that."

The Triple Crown is a grueling six weeks of racing — always against the best 3-year-olds in the country, under stressful situations for trainers and horses alike, and often far from home. Maybe that's why the newcomers have done so well in the Belmont, the longest of the three races.

"That's what they say about some of the horses that haven't won the Triple Crown," Easy Goer's trainer, Shug McGaughey, said. "Maybe if they had trainers like Charlie Whittingham, maybe they would have won."

"I hope it has had some kind of effect on Sunday Silence. I don't think it's had much of an effect on us. It's something you don't really know until race day, but we've had three weeks to bounce back."

Fight ...

"Ray knows about payback and he knows how bad I want this," Hearn said. "I'm not going to be the one backing up, I'm coming forward. I'm going to give this all I've got."

The pain of his loss to Leonard is magnified in Hearn's mind by the fact he was winning the fight rather handily on points when Leonard turned the bout around with a huge right hand in the 13th round.

Leonard had hurt Hearn in the sixth and seventh rounds of the fight for the undisputed welterweight title, but Hearn turned from slugger to boxer and regained control of the fight.

In the 13th, however, Leonard knocked Hearn down, then finished him in the 14th to hand Hearn his first professional loss.

"I had the fight won but I decided to relax and try to tick off the clock, try to buy time," Hearn recalled. "Ray sensed that and took advantage of the opportunity."

Hearn, who claims his poor recent performances were caused by a lack of motivation, brought in Kinchen this week for some late, tough sparring.

The two went an even four rounds Monday but Hearn appeared much sharper on Tuesday, landing several hard rights to Kinchen's head.

Hardison said. "It all started here. I was able to work on the mental and physical phase of football."

Hardison not only excelled in athletics at North Pitt, but also in the classroom, according to Ennis.

"Billy worked very hard for four years here both on the field and in the classroom," Ennis said. "Without his hard work in the classroom, he'd never gotten the opportunity to go to such a fine institution as Guilford College."

Hardison was the 1989 senior class president at North Pitt and was also awarded the Bethel Rotary Academic Award recently.

"My parents always wanted me to go to a school with good academics," Hardison said. "They always stressed academics first and football second."

Hardison, who plans to major in electrical engineering, said the presence of Calvin Hunter, a former North Pitt quarterback, on the Guilford roster also influenced his decision.

"I've got a friend there (Hunter) so I can go somewhere that I'm not a total stranger," Hardison said.

"My decision was probably based more on academics, but with him there it made the decision a lot easier."

Sheila Boles

Lady Coach Must Prove Self

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WILMINGTON — Sheila Boles said Wednesday she intends to make believers out of critics who have questioned her selection as apparently the first woman coach of a high school men's varsity basketball team in North Carolina.

"We all have our prejudices," said Boles, who was named the basketball coach at Hoggard High School in Wilmington Tuesday night. "It doesn't mean you're a bad person, it means you're an honest person. "Once you prove yourself, I don't think that's going to be an issue at all."

Rick Strunk, assistant executive director of the North Carolina High School Athletic Association, said he knew of no other women in North Carolina coaching male teams in major sports.

"I do know we have some female coaches of male varsity teams in sports such as tennis," Strunk said.

The New Hanover County Board of Education split 4-3 in approving Boles as the new coach.

"I knew it wasn't going to be rubber-stamped through," said Hoggard athletic coordinator Jack Rasberry. "Her toughest obstacle will be being accepted among the coaching fraternity. It's a male-dominated group."

"I've had a lot of support over the last three years," Boles said. "I think in anything like this, you're going to have supporters, people who are confused and people who are totally against it."

"I'm shocked by her selection, but if men can coach girls, then why can't ladies coach boys?" said Goldsboro coach Norvell Lee. "I'm not going to lighten up on her, because she is a lady. It's tough sur-living in this league. You've got to know what you are doing."

Boles has been in the New Hanover County system for 11 years, including one year at New Hanover High School, where she was the women's varsity basketball coach for Buck Hardee, who was the Wildcats' athletic coordinator at the time.

Hardee is now on the Board of Education and was outspoken against the search committee's recommendation of Boles.

"Today was one of the hardest things I had to do," Hardee said. "I went to Hoggard and told Sheila I couldn't recommend her. When I told Sheila today, I just got choked up and left. Then I went and cried. If things don't go so well over there, they'll eat her alive."

"In my humble athletic opinion, I don't think Sheila is ready to take on a 4-A team in this (Mideastern) conference."

But Boles disagreed.

"I'm definitely ready," she said. "Our basketball program has been down. Our biggest challenge will be teaching these kids how to win, because they'll have the ability."

Boles said she did not feel any pressure to turn Hoggard's basketball program into an instant winner.

"I hope I don't allow myself to fall into that," she said. "I have enough self-control that I won't allow that to happen. I realize you can't make changes overnight."

Boles' previous basketball coaching experience includes two years as women's head coach at Laney High School, four years as girls' coach at Trask Junior High School, two years as the boys' coach at Trask and one year as Hoggard's boys' junior varsity coach.

"There is as much difference between junior varsity and varsity basketball as night and day," Hardee said. "If Sheila had applied for the girls' coaching job at Hoggard, which I understand is open, I'd have recommended her to the highest. If she had any varsity experience with the boys, I'd have said she is a candidate."

Hugh McManus, the principal at Hoggard, recommended Boles to the search committee, which interviewed 12 applicants this spring and summer for the job.

Shockers Rally After Rain To Win

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OMAHA, Neb. — Florida State bullpen ace Ricky Kimball thought a rain delay was just what the top-seeded Seminoles needed to break Wichita State's momentum with the score tied and the bases loaded in the eighth inning. He was wrong.

After a delay of nearly an hour, however, the Shockers' Eric Wedge blooped a two-run single to center to break the tie and Florida State's 12-game winning streak as Wichita State kept its national title hopes alive with a 7-4 victory.

Wedge, a catcher drafted by the Boston Red Sox, had four RBIs to force a rematch Friday between the Seminoles, 54-17, and fourth-seeded Shockers, 66-16. The winner of that game will play for the NCAA title on Saturday against Texas or Louisiana State.

"I thought I threw a good pitch to Wedge. He's just a big strong guy and he hit it," Kimball said.

"I thought the rain was going to help me because they had gotten the crowd in the ballgame and had a little momentum going. As it turned out, it was the worst thing that could have happened," he said.

Wedge said he wasn't nervous as he waited in the dugout for the game to resume.

"I thrive on that," he said. "As a hitter, if you don't want to be in that position, you shouldn't be here. I was just going to treat it like any other at bat," he said.

Florida State had beaten Wichita State 4-2 in the Series opener on Sunday and another victory would have guaranteed the Seminoles a spot in the title game.

Seminoles coach Mike Martin said he doesn't expect a letdown in Friday's rematch.

"We do not look at this game as a disaster. We know if we win that ballgame we have a chance to play for the national championship," he said. "We know there will be a lot of incentive for them, also."

Shockers relief ace Jim Newlin pitched the last two innings, striking out four to earn his 18th save. He said he was thinking about the earlier loss to the Seminoles.

"There was definitely a revenge factor. I was pretty pumped up," he said.

Wichita State Coach Gene Stephenson said he was fairly confident of the victory with a 7-4 lead and Newlin on the mound.

"We feel like we're going to win every ballgame, but when you've got a lead and Jim Newlin in the pen, you've got to feel pretty good," Stephenson said.

Wedge helped the Shockers to an early 3-0 lead with an RBI grounder in the first inning and a run-scoring double in the third.

But consecutive doubles by Rob Bargas and Buddy Cribb sparked a rally that tied the game in the sixth.

The Shockers opened the top of the eighth with three consecutive hits, including Mike McDonald's bunt single to load the bases. It was McDonald's second hit of the game and led to the suspension when Kimball slipped on the wet grass and was unable to field the ball.

Wedge's hit after the break made it 5-3. The Shockers, who finished third in last year's Series and were second in 1982, added a pair of runs on sacrifice flies by Pat Meares and Todd Dreifort for a 7-3 lead.

Florida State cut the margin to 7-4 when Bargas and Cribb opened the bottom of the eighth with consecutive singles and Bargas scored on Brian Gilliland's hit with no outs.

French Open ...

Everything seemed to be coming together for Wilander, who hasn't won an important tournament since September's U.S. Open. He had won the French Open three times and swept through the early rounds this year without dropping a set.

Chesnokov had dropped four but had one key psychological advantage in his favor — he beat Wilander in the third round here in 1986 when the Swede also was defending champion.

The 23-year-old Soviet remembered that day. His strategy worked again. "I tried to play the same, but more aggressively," Chesnokov said. "I was surprised I played so well. I had a lot of patience and I kept my concentration."

Wilander, pinned by deep groundstrokes, was pulverized by Chesnokov's baseline play. When he tried to change tactics by rushing the net, Wilander had more luck as he led 5-2 in the third set.

But he failed to convert any of four set points and Chesnokov won the last five games.

"When he plays like that, it gets frustrating on those long points," Wilander said. "He never seems to run out of time."

While Wilander — the youngest French Open champion at 17 years, nine months — moved aside, Chang moved ahead.

The 15th seed would break Wilander's record by 4½ months if he can win two more matches at the $4.5 million event.

Against Agenor, Chang showed no sign of the pain that stiffened his legs and had him screaming in the previous round, when he upset Lendl in five sets.

But he needed to keep a cool head during a 50-minute rain delay and frequent moments of gamesmanship to shake off the challenge of the unseeded Agenor.

"I was really drained mentally because of all the emotion in the match against Lendl," Chang said. "I felt tight when I came onto the court. Because of what happened against Lendl I had a fear of cramping. But it didn't happen."

"The rain definitely helped me a lot. It gave me the time to think and reflect on what was going on out there. I was playing a little tentatively at the beginning but as the match went on I was OK."

Chang resorted to some of the same gamesmanship that flustered Lendl.

At break point at 4-4 in the fourth set, Chang crept up within a few feet of the service line in an attempt to rattle Agenor's concentration.

When Chang employed the tactic against Lendl, the world's No. 1 player double-faulted on match point. On Wednesday, Agenor responded with a double fault and Chang had a 5-4 lead.

"I don't do it to try to insult anybody or make fun of anybody," Chang said. "When you're in a situation where you're desperate for the point, you do anything to bother concentration."

Agenor, who also tried the tactic twice — and won both points — agreed it worked, but doubted it would be a potent enough weapon in the long run.

"It's bothersome," he said. "It's a mental attack. He makes you think. I'm sure he won't do it at 2-2 in the first set. He does it only at crucial moments. It's very intelligent and he's a very intelligent kid. But I don't know if he'll win the French Open this way."

Arab Collaborator Killed As He Lay In Hospital Bed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM — Assaults shot a Palestinian man to death on his hospital bed today in the occupied West Bank, and Arab reports claimed he collaborated with Israel.

Another suspected collaborator was shot and seriously wounded in a separate incident, the reports said.

In the occupied Gaza Strip, soldiers sealed the homes of three Palestinians accused of throwing firebombs at troops.

An 18-year-old Palestinian also was reported wounded in the leg in a clash with troops in Jebaliya in Gaza.

The fatal attack occurred in Rafidiyeh Hospital in the West Bank town of Nablus, where Taleb Yamin, 55, had been convalescing from injuries suffered 10 days earlier in a clubbing and stabbing attack in Nablus' old city, two hospital doctors said.

"A group of people entered the hospital at 5 a.m. They forced a male nurse and a relative to leave the room. Then they opened fire, killing him instantly," Rafidiyeh's director, Abdel Rahman Shinar, said in a telephone interview.

Another doctor, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Yamin was shot once in the head.

The army confirmed the slaying and said police were investigating.

Yamin was the 49th Palestinian slain by other Palestinians since the Palestinian uprising began. Most have been accused of helping Israeli authorities or dealing in drugs and prostitution.

A total of 510 Palestinians have been killed in the 18-month rebellion against Israeli rule, most in clashes with Israeli soldiers. Twenty-two Israelis also have died in the unrest.

The second shooting also occurred in Nablus. Arab assailants shot Fayel Fawalha, 48, seriously wounding him in the head, Arab reports said.

Fawalha was reportedly evacuated by an Israeli helicopter after being treated by soldiers at the scene.

The army confirmed the man was shot and said troops had closed off Nablus.

The shootings came a day after a 30-year-old man was hacked to death in Nablus with a hatchet and his naked body chained to an electric pole.

Arab reporters said he was a collaborator. The army suggested the motive for Wednesday's slaying was criminal. Vice President Dan Quayle was quoted by the daily Jerusalem Post today as urging that Israel put a halt to announcing new settlement building in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

"The announcements of new settlements are politically problematic even if they (Israeli leaders) don't go through with it," Quayle noted.

Israel has built some 130 settlements, as homes for 70,000 Jews who live among 1.7 million Palestinians in the occupied lands.

The United States has frequently criticized the settlements as an obstacle to peace. "It's something that I wish there was a sensitivity to this," said Quayle.

He said the settlement issue gave critics of Israel "fodder for the cannon fire, and believe me, they want to unload on Israel."

"It makes it more problematic for those of us who are strong defenders" of Israel, Quayle added.

A new public opinion survey, meanwhile, showed 53 percent of Israelis would object to dismantling the settlements as part of a peace agreement.

Forty-two percent of 579 of the Israelis interviewed this week by the Dahaf Institute said they favored removing the settlements, the Yediot Achronot daily reported. No margin of error for the poll was given.

Troops maintained a curfew for a fifth day on the Gaza Strip, confining

Marine Plea

RALEIGH (AP) — A ranking Marine officer at Camp Lejeune has pleaded guilty to eight counts of a nine-count indictment charging him with accepting illegal gifts and illegally destroying government documents, an assistant U.S. attorney said Wednesday.

Lt. Col. Benjamin McNutt, 47, admitted his guilt last week during a hearing before a federal judge in New Bern, said Peter Kellen, a federal prosecutor in Raleigh.

The officer had been indicted as part of a federal investigation into price-fixing by moving contractors.

Suicide Ruled

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — A Fort Bragg soldier found dead earlier this week in a private vehicle on post apparently died of a self-inflicted gunshot wound in the head, according to preliminary investigation results released Wednesday.

The body of Pvt. 1 Michael David Gibson, 21, was found in the vehicle, said Master Sgt. Michael Hart.

Iranian Speaker Offers Help In Freeing American Hostages

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TEHRAN, Iran — Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani said today that Iran will help free American hostages in Lebanon if the United States tries to win freedom for Iranians held by Christian forces in Lebanon.

It was the first time a top Iranian leader has commented on the foreign hostages since the death of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini on Saturday. Under Khomeini, Iran supported pro-Iranian groups in Lebanon which are believed to be holding most of the 15 foreign hostages, including nine Americans.

Responding to a recent appeal by President Bush to help gain the release of U.S. hostages, Rafsanjani said that if "the Americans who have more influence than us on the Phalangists (right-wing Christians in Lebanon) take action in securing the release of our hostages, then they can expect our help."

Rafsanjani was referring to four Iranians who have been missing in Lebanon for nearly seven years. Although the four are widely believed to be dead, Iran has repeatedly tried to use them as a bargaining chip with the United States.

In his other remarks during an unusual news conference with foreign reporters, Rafsanjani said it could take a long time to formally end the Iran-Iraq war and that Khomeini told him to improve relations with the Soviet Union. He also said Britain must take the initiative to improve ties with Iran. According to British news reports today, Iran will not withdraw Khomeini's February order that Moslems seek out and kill the Salman Rushdie, author of "The Satanic Verses," but "is prepared to let the matter drop." Many Moslems believe the book defames Islam.

The four Iranians Rafsanjani referred to were seized by right-wing Christians in Beirut in 1982 during the Israeli invasion. They include Ahmad Motevaselian, commander of the contingent of Iranian revolutionary guards based in the Bekaa valley in east Lebanon; Embassy Charge d'Affaires Hussein Musavi and Kazem Akhavan, a correspondent for Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency.

The fourth was their Lebanese Shiite Moslem driver, Rastegar Moqadam, who also held an Iranian passport.

Pro-Iranian groups are believed to be holding 15 foreigners, including nine Americans. Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, is the longest held of the foreign hostages in Lebanon. He was kidnapped March 16, 1985.

On the 8½-year Iran-Iraq war, Rafsanjani, who is acting military commander, said Iran was not willing to make any concessions to Iraq in the peace talks. The U.N.-sponsored talks stalled soon after they started Aug. 25.

The official Islamic Republic News Agency quoted him as saying, "We are determined to put an end" to the war. He said the statement in peace talks may last for some time.

At his news conference, Rafsanjani quoted Khomeini as saying days before he died that Iran should improve ties with the Soviet Union. Rafsanjani said he would visit the Soviet Union later this month but that a date had not been set.

Rafsanjani said Khomeini told him to "try to promote your relations with your big northern neighbor" and we will follow this policy drawn by the imam.

Iranians refer to Khomeini as their imam, or spiritual leader. He died of a heart attack Saturday, 11 days after undergoing surgery for internal bleeding in his intestines. Rafsanjani was addressing foreign correspondents who gathered in Tehran for Khomeini's funeral Tuesday.

In his will read to Parliament after his death, Khomeini singled out the United States for special criticism, but it also warned Iran against aligning itself with the communist bloc.

On Iran's relations with the neighboring Arab states in the Persian Gulf, Rafsanjani said: "There is no problem on our side" for improving ties.

"We have received positive signals from the Persian Gulf states, except Saudi Arabia," the speaker said.

Saudi Arabia severed ties with Iran in April 1988, complaining that it supports terrorism and attempts to destabilize governments in the region. The Arab states backed Iraq against Iran in the gulf war.

Soviet Death Toll Mounts As Ethnic Violence Flares

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — A mob stormed a police station and tried to seize weapons in the Uzbek republic's Fergana Valley, where ethnic violence has killed 71 people, official media said today.

More than 600 people have been injured and more than 400 arrested since the unrest began about two weeks ago in the eastern part of the Central Asian republic, official Radio Moscow said.

Thousands of Interior Ministry soldiers have curbed, but not stopped, arson and murder in the area, 1,500 miles southeast of Moscow.

The official Tass news agency reported that in the region's city of Kokand, a crowd of thousands "stimulated by alcohol and drugs" stormed a police station Wednesday and tried to take weapons, while another crowd of 600 attacked the transportation department of the Interior Ministry.

The attempts to obtain weapons failed, but so did appeals from Kokand government and party leaders for calm, Tass said. Six people died and more than 90 were injured; 65 houses and more than 20 cars were set ablaze, it said.

"More houses are burning," Tass reported today.

In the city of Fergana, which has a population of more than 200,000, shootings and arson attempts continued Wednesday night, Radio Moscow reported.

A dispute between Uzbeks and an ethnic Turk minority led to "pogroms, arson, beatings and murder, accompanied by harassment and rape in conjunction with insolent marauding, resistance to police and internal security forces," Uzbekistan's premier told the government newspaper Izvestia.

The premier, Gayrat Kadyrov, said 141 police officers along with 100 civilians were hospitalized. He said he expected the death toll of 71 to rise as the wounded died and more corpses were found in the ashes of gutted houses.

"Passions are still boiling," Izvestia said.

About 9,000 internal security troops have been brought in to quell the unrest, but Tass said the government refrained from bringing in the Red Army.

Tass said law enforcement officers and soldiers in the area have been authorized to use weapons for self-defense.

An Uzbek grass-roots movement, Berlik, appealed today to the Soviet parliament to remedy the miserable living conditions that it said helped give rise to the unrest.

"People in the villages are living on the edge of poverty and subsisting on bread and water because of the monopoly on cotton," said the appeal, read over the telephone from Tashkent by the movement's secretary, Gavkhar Normatova.

Activists claim that cotton production quotas imposed on Uzbekistan by Moscow have resulted in neglect of food production and ensuing shortages, and has poisoned the environment with intensive use of fertilizers and pesticides.

"There are 1.5 million unemployed in Uzbekistan," Normatova said. "The real reason for this unthinkable slaughter is the economic, political and cultural frustration of the people."

Kadyrov said more than 10,000 members of the Meskhi-Turk minority involved in the unrest have been evacuated to a military training camp. "I don't want to oversimplify the situation," he said, "but I have grounds to say we are putting the situation under control."

The Meskhi Turks were deported from their homeland in Soviet Georgia in 1944 by Josef Stalin and forcibly resettled in the Central Asian republic.

Officials say the violence began on May 23 during a marketplace dispute between a Meskhi Turk and an Uzbek fruit vendor. The unrest since has spread from city to city in the Fergana region.

Over the weekend, more than 400 houses, 116 cars, eight industrial enterprises and some schools and government offices were destroyed, many by arson, Tass said.

Uzbeks and Meskhi Turks are traditionally Moslem. The Turkish minority has been pressing its demands to be allowed to return to its ancestral homeland in Georgia.

In Moscow, President Mikhail S. Gorbachev told the Congress of People's Deputies on Wednesday that authorities had the situation in the Fergana Valley under control but that there were still incidents of arson and killings.

PLO, U.S. Officials Meet For Third Round Of Talks

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TUNIS, Tunisia — Israel's proposal for Palestinian elections in the occupied lands topped the agenda when delegations from the United States and the Palestine Liberation Organization met today.

The two sides, in their third session since the U.S. government lifted its ban on contacts with the PLO, met in a Tunisian government guest house in suburban Carthage. It was not known how long the session would last.

Robert Pelletreau Jr., the U.S. ambassador to Tunisia and the only American official authorized to deal with the PLO, intended to discuss the Israeli-proposed elections in the occupied territories, a U.S. official said.

The PLO delegation was led by Yasser Abd-Rabbou, a member of the group's executive committee. PLO officials say they would accept the elections only if they were under international control and after an Israeli withdrawal.

The U.S. official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the PLO needed to define what it meant by "an Israeli withdrawal."

PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat issued a statement today that said Palestinians would accept U.N. supervision of an election. "I ask the United States of America: why did you agree on an international status for Namibia and you refused such status in our occupied territories?" he said.

U.N. troops moved into Namibia in April to help supervise the African territory's transition to independence from South Africa.

Israel, which considers the PLO a terrorist organization, has denounced the talks with the United States as an obstacle to peace.

Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Arens, in an interview with The Associated Press in Jerusalem on Wednesday, called the U.S.-PLO dialogue "counterproductive" and said it undercut attempts to win the support of Palestinians for Israel's peace proposals.

Nearly all Palestinians living in the occupied territories obey PLO instructions, whether or not they are members of the guerrilla organization.

The United States began its dialogue with the PLO in December after Arafat recognized Israel's right to exist and renounced terrorism.

As they prepared for the talks, Pelletreau and Abd-Rabbou and their advisers sat across from each other at a table and chatted amiably in Arabic while photographers and reporters milled around outside.

After a few minutes the reporters and photographers were asked to leave, and the talks began in closed session.

At an unofficial meeting on May 18, the PLO's representative in Tunis, Hakim Balaoui, handed Pelletreau a memorandum concerning the proposals put forward by Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir.

The plan calls for the 1.7 million Palestinians in the Israeli-occupied territories to elect representatives to negotiate with Israel for autonomy.

Later talks would determine the final status of the West Bank and Gaza Strip, but Israel has said an independent Palestinian state is out of the question.

Economist Says Soviets Need To Help Farms, Cut Other Aid

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — A radical economist told the new Congress today that if the Kremlin is to avert economic collapse it should cut aid to its Latin America allies and award highly productive farmers with bonuses in dollars.

Nikolai Shmelev warned that if snowballing inflation, worsening consumer shortages and the "monstrous budget deficit" are not halted, "in two or three years we could face an economic crash."

Shmelev, whose nationally televised speech won applause from the more than 2,000 members of the Congress of People's Deputies, said Premier Nikolai I. Ryzhkov's economic program underestimates the gravity of the country's crisis.

The newly re-elected Ryzhkov on Wednesday announced plans for extensive defense cuts and government relief for the nearly 40 million Soviet citizens he said were living below the poverty line.

Shmelev said the government must do away with the remnants of President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's anti-alcohol campaign and import more than $15 billion of goods to ease the country's consumer crisis.

Gorbachev's cutbacks on alcohol sales, introduced two months after he came to power in March 1985, led to massive losses of government revenue and widespread home-distilling.

Shmelev, one of the Soviet Union's most prominent reform-minded economists, said the hard currency to pay for imports could come partly from motivating Soviet farmers to work harder by offering rewards in foreign currency.

He won applause when he suggested the government tell collective farm chairmen "if they sell grain and meat to the state above a certain level they will be paid in hard currency with the right of spending it wherever they want."

The extra crops they produce would be cheaper than the current Soviet practice of buying grain abroad to make up for shortfalls in domestic harvests, he said.

Shmelev also called for a cut in aid to Latin America.

Quoting U.S. estimates that the Soviet Union spends $6 billion to $8 billion on activities there, especially in aid to Cuba, he said "no one understands what a significant portion of that money is spent on."

His speech, an assault on government policy, was in line with the vocal, combative role assumed by some members of the new Congress. In the past, Soviet lawmakers docilely adopted any measure submitted by Kremlin leaders.

In his economic program presented to the Congress on Wednesday, Ryzhkov said the Kremlin would continue trimming defense spending through 1995, reducing the Soviet Union's defense burden by 33 percent to 50 percent.

Monk Reports Seeing U.S. POWs Alive

TOKYO — Five or six American POWs were sighted in Vietnam by a Japanese Buddhist monk who spent 14 years in Vietnamese re-education camps before being freed in January, a Japanese news report said today.

Ganshin Yoshida, 65, now in a Sapporo hospital being treated for ailments resulting from his detention, told Kyodo News Service on Wednesday that "five or six" American prisoners of war were at the camp where he was held.

The location of the camp was not disclosed.

Kyodo quoted Yoshida as saying he did not know what the living conditions of the POWs were like because they lived in a separate building from him.

An official of the Vietnamese Embassy in Tokyo called Yoshida's remarks "groundless."

"Our government has repeatedly discussed that issue in the past. There are no more American POWs" in Vietnam, the official told The Associated Press.

Yoshida, formerly a city councilman on Japan's northernmost main island of Hokkaido, became a monk in 1966 and emigrated to Vietnam, where he set up a temple in Saigon, now called Ho Chi Minh City.

Yoshida was granted citizenship in 1973 by the former South Vietnamese government but arrested in 1975 following the takeover of Vietnam by communist forces and detained without trial in re-education camps and jails.

On Jan. 20, Vietnam released Yoshida for humanitarian reasons after appeals filed by himself and international human rights groups such as Amnesty International.

Kyodo said U.S. government officials received the information about the POWs through Yoshida's daughter in Tokyo on Wednesday.

An official of the U.S. Embassy in Tokyo would not confirm that the information had been conveyed. "All reports and information concerning MIAs (missing in action) in Vietnam will be sent to the home government for analysis by experts," he said.

A total of 1,730 Americans are still listed as missing in action in Vietnam, while 634 others are missing in Cambodia, Laos and China, according to U.S. figures. The Indochina war ended in 1975 with communist victories over U.S.-supported governments in Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos.

NATO Chief Skeptical About Cuts

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BRUSSELS, Belgium — A top NATO commander cast doubt today on whether the East and West can agree to cut conventional forces and weapons within a year as proposed by President Bush.

"It's optimistic, indeed. Unrealistic? I don't know," West German Gen. Wolfgang Altenburg told reporters outside a NATO defense ministers meeting at NATO headquarters in Brussels. He heads NATO's panel of allied commanders.

He spoke as U.S. Defense Secretary Dick Cheney and his NATO colleagues opened their annual two-day spring session on military strategy.

The meeting follows a session at NATO headquarters Wednesday of 12 European defense ministers that ended with a statement welcoming economic and political reforms in Eastern Europe. But the ministers also said the Soviet bloc remains more powerful in some military areas and does not appear to have slowed modernization of its forces.

In their sessions, the ministers are studying proposals to increase the share of NATO funds paid by several nations other than the United States.

In his remarks, Altenburg said East-West relations were such that "there is a lot of pressure" from both sides to come to an early agreement.

At a NATO summit last week in Brussels, Bush proposed U.S. and Soviet troops in Europe be cut to 275,000 on each side and the number of combat planes and helicopters in East and West Europe be reduced to 15 percent below NATO's current forces.

The proposal would mean a European cut in manpower of 30,000 for the United States. According to Western estimates, the Soviet Union would have to slash its troops in Europe by 325,000 to reach the same level.

Bush's proposals, endorsed by all NATO allies, will be added to proposals at conventional arms talks in Vienna, Austria. Those discussions also cover proposed deep cuts in other NATO and Warsaw Pact armaments, including tanks and artillery.

Bhutto Ends Her U.S. Talks With Pledge She'll Shun Nukes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto of Pakistan ended talks with President Bush and other U.S. officials after winning a commitment for new F-16 fighter sales and promising not to provoke a regional arms race by producing nuclear weapons.

She made the promise in an address Wednesday to a joint meeting of Congress in which she urged the United States to work aggressively for a broad-based political settlement in Afghanistan and said that Pakistan's fledgling democracy deserves continued U.S. military and economic assistance.

Mrs. Bhutto, a 1974 graduate of Harvard University, was attending Harvard's commencement ceremonies today and addressing members of the Harvard Alumni Association.

On Friday she is scheduled to meet with officials of the United Nations in New York before leaving the United States on Saturday.

The F-16 sale, said to be worth $1.4 billion, will give Pakistan a total 100 of the sophisticated warplanes.

The New York Times reported in today's editions that unidentified Pakistani officials said Ms. Bhutto had urged the United States to try to persuade the Soviet Union to accept the departure of Afghan President Najib from office, with whom the guerrillas have refused to negotiate, as a step that could lead to negotiations.

During her visit, Mrs. Bhutto and Secretary of State James A. Baker III witnessed the signing of agreements providing for $465 million to help Pakistan finance housing, narcotics and education programs.

The agreements are part of a $2.28 billion, six-year aid package designed to support Pakistan's economic development, according to the Agency for International Development. Pakistan is the third largest recipient of U.S. aid.

Pakistanis are grateful for such assistance, the prime minister told Congress, because "your military assistance has helped maintain a relative balance in the region. It has contributed to Pakistan's sense of security."

The prime minister's address was repeatedly interrupted by applause, especially when she addressed long-standing U.S. concerns that Pakistan is on the verge of acquiring nuclear arms.

"Speaking for Pakistan, I can declare that we do not possess nor do we intend to make a nuclear device; that is our policy," she said.

"We are committed to a regional approach to the nuclear problem and we remain ready to accept any safeguards, inspection and verification that are applied on a non-discriminatory regional basis," she said.

Ms. Bhutto said Pakistan has long advocated creating a nuclear weapons-free zone in south Asia and added: "A first step in that direction could be a nuclear test-ban agreement between Pakistan and its neighbors. ... We are prepared for any negotiation to prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons in our region."

"We will not provoke a nuclear arms race in the subcontinent," she said.

The prime minister mentioned no other country by name. But Pakistan's regional rival, India, which detonated a nuclear device some 15 years ago, has resisted agreeing to test-ban and nuclear weapons-free zones unless such arrangements also include China, a nuclear-weapons state.

Hunt Trial

GREENSBORO (AP) — A 19-year-old Greensboro man was sentenced Wednesday to 35 years in prison for bludgeoning to death a transient at a popular teen-age hangout, apparently in an argument about a bottle of liquor.

Curtis Ray Hunt also was given a seven-year sentence for his involvement in a knife attack on three men that occurred while he was free on bond and awaiting trial on the murder charge.

Superior Court Judge Steve Allen of Greensboro ordered the sentences to be consecutive, meaning Hunt could be eligible for parole in about 10 years.

U.S. Says Nicaragua Would Have Intervened In Panamanian Crisis

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Nicaragua denies a U.S. assertion that it was prepared to send military units to Panama last month in support of Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega if the President Bush had attempted to oust the Panamanian leader by force of arms.

U.S. officials who spoke only on condition of anonymity made the assertion Wednesday as the Organization of American States was meeting in Washington to discuss the situation in Panama.

A top Nicaraguan official disputed the allegation, saying the Sandinista government provides political and moral support for Panama but not military aid.

The U.S. officials said Nicaragua's Sandinista government was ready to act in Panama's defense as the Bush administration was weighing options during the tumultuous post-election period in that country. U.S. spokesmen at the time were refusing publicly to rule out any option, including the use of force.

In the end, Bush decided to send about 2,000 combat troops to Panama but said the purpose was not to force out Noriega but to ensure the safety of Americans residing in Panama. Bush concluded that diplomatic pressure on Noriega was the best course to encourage a democratic outcome in Panama.

According to the U.S. officials, Nicaragua also sent Panama a shipment of Soviet-made weapons as part of the Sandinista commitment to help Noriega defend his government against possible use of U.S. military force.

The officials said the Sandinistas have more than 70,000 personnel under arms, giving them the ability to dispatch troops beyond their borders without sacrificing self-defense.

The officials said there appeared to be little doubt that the Sandinistas were prepared to introduce their own combat troops into Panama if the need arose.

Nicaragua has emerged as Panama's strongest hemispheric ally in the wake of the failed election process in Panama last month. Both countries see themselves as victims of American military and economic pressures.

Asked about the U.S. allegations, Nicaraguan Vice Foreign Minister Victor Hugo Tinoco said Nicaragua was concerned about the potential for U.S. intervention in Panama and elsewhere in Central America, but denied that it sent a shipment of weapons.

"We knew there was movement of troops by the U.S. toward Panama apart from what was announced," Tinoco said.

"In the face of that situation, Nicaragua felt that there was the possibility of an intervention in Panama," he said.

"This possibility, in turn, created the possibility of a regional conflict and for an intervention in other Central American countries. Based on an emergency situation, Nicaragua declared a state of alert for its forces. That's what happened."

He said that after a few days, when the U.S. military intervention did not materialize, the state of alert was withdrawn.

Tinoco specifically denied that Nicaragua sent arms to Panama and added that Sandinista authorities have not promised to send troops to Panama in the event of an American invasion.

Nicaragua's relationship with Panama is limited to "moral and political support," he said.

Marcos Reported Still On Critical List

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HONOLULU — Former Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos remained in very critical condition, but his pain and fever subsided after emergency surgery for an abdominal infection, a hospital spokesman said.

The 71-year-old exiled leader underwent three hours of exploratory surgery Tuesday during which doctors discovered and drained an abscess on his pancreas.

The abscess was suspected as a major source of the infection that has plagued Marcos for several weeks, but doctors said they could not be certain it was the only source.

"There was some response to the treatment and the pain and the fever appear to have decreased," Eugene Tiwanak, assistant administrator of St. Francis Medical Center, said Wednesday.

Marcos has been hospitalized since January and has been listed in very critical condition since May 18, when he suffered heart, kidney and lung failure. He remains on a respirator to assist his breathing and undergoes blood dialysis four times a week, Tiwanak said.

Humorist-Pianist Victor Borge Fears Inducing Heart Attacks

By Robert M. Andrews
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Perhaps the playbills at Victor Borge concerts should include a prominent notice in heavy black type, something like "Warning: Laughing May Be Hazardous To Your Health."

Sometimes, the Danish-born musician and humorist becomes alarmed when he glances over the footlights and sees his audience doubled up, grimmacing, clenching fists and turning blue with mirth.

That's when he stops clowning and starts playing a piano interlude to give everyone a breather.

He says he fears inducing heart attacks. And for good reason.

Once, after an uproarious performance in England, Victor Borge returned to the stage in the silence of the empty theater to savor his triumph. Peering out at the seats, he noticed a woman sitting motionless in the 16th row, her eyes closed.

She had literally died laughing, he observed ruefully.

Borge may be a Dane, but melancholy he is not.

"A smile is the shortest distance between two people, and there is always room for a smile," the 80-year-old entertainer said in a dressing room interview.

Borge will be the star attraction at a black-tie gala in his honor tonight at the 6,800-seat Filene Center at Wolf Trap Farm Park in the Virginia countryside about 20 miles west of Washington.

The benefit concert, which will be taped for broadcast on public TV stations, will celebrate both Borge's 80th birthday last Jan. 3 and the 18th anniversary of Wolf Trap, the only national park for the performing arts.

Borge promised to repeat some of his most beloved comedy routines, which have delighted millions of people around the world for the past 60 years. The piano lid will slam shut, the revolving stool will never quite reach its correct height, sheet music will fly and soprano Marilyn Mulvey will wait patiently through the pandemonium for her cues.

"I'm an easy laugher," he says, "because I see humor in any situation." Even at the funeral of his father, a longtime viola player with the Royal Danish Philharmonic Orchestra, when he coaxed a smile from his grieving mother.

The casket was borne by his father's fellow musicians, and it was young Victor who noticed that a short, roly-poly pallbearer wore a silk hat that was much too small, while a tall, skinny musician's hat was so large that it covered his ears.

"I said that if my father could see this now, he would have died laughing," Borge recalls. "My mother, distraught as she was at that moment, smiled. It was the first time she had smiled since my father died."

His mother introduced Borge to the piano when he was 3, and he quickly gained a reputation as a prodigy. But while he was studying with piano masters in Copenhagen, Vienna and Berlin, he also was clowning in private musical reviews.

By his early 20s, he had become a popular film and stage entertainer — Denmark's Bob Hope — but his satiric barbs at Adolf Hitler and the Nazi movement forced him to flee to the United States in 1940. He became a U.S. citizen in 1948.

Hometown Forgives Actor Clark Gable

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOPEDALE, Ohio — Come home, Clark Gable. All is forgiven.

Twenty-nine years after his death, the "King of Hollywood" has finally won back the hearts of those who live in his hometown.

Gable — at least his legend — will be the guest of honor this weekend as Harrison County and some stars of "Gone With the Wind" commemorate the film's 50th anniversary by re-enacting the famous Twelve Oaks barbecue scene and attending a screening of a restored version of the movie.

The 850 residents of this eastern Ohio village, where Gable was born Feb. 1, 1901, haven't always regarded him as a favorite son. The gawky, gap-toothed, big-eared boy never returned to the county after he moved about 80 miles northwest to Akron in 1917.

"Most folks around here were angry because he never came back," said Michael Cope, president of the Clark Gable Foundation. "But recently, we're seeing a real turnaround. There is no longer any of that resentment we felt even after we started honoring him on his birthday in 1984."

Frances Jackson, an 86-year-old Hopedale native, said she has forgiven Gable for never returning. She has become a local celebrity herself because she once rejected Gable's request for a birthday kiss.

"He said 'This is my 16th birthday. Do you want to be the first one to kiss me?' I said, no I did not," Mrs. Jackson said.

"He had a real way with the girls. Oh, he had lots and lots of girlfriends. But not me," she said, smiling. "My father would have killed me."

Harrison County has been celebrating Gable's birthday each year since 1984, hoping that fascination with the actor and his films will give a boost to an economy hurt by a decline in coal mining, said Cope, who also is county treasurer. The county's unemployment rate was 10.8 percent in April.

'Max Headroom' Star Has New Role As Offbeat Doctor On CBS

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Matt Frewer, as Dr. Mike Stratford on CBS' "Doctor, Doctor," marches to the beat of a different EKG.

He makes house calls and treats his patients as individuals. His surgeon father is appalled, and his physician partners are dismayed. His father prefers his patients under anesthesia, and his partners regard them as payments on the Porsche.

The six-episode series makes its debut Monday, and the diagnosis is hilarious. The funny, quirky, sometimes caustic show was created by Norman Steinberg, co-writer of the hit movie comedy "My Favorite Year."

"We wanted to do something different than your usual single-parent sitcom format," said Frewer, best-known for his role as video star "Max Headroom." "This says some important things about the practice of medicine and says them in a very funny way. Norman wrote the show and the usual practice in television is, 'Don't mutilate my baby.' Norman let the reins go and said, 'Anytime you want to ad lib, go ahead.' We had a great relationship."

Stratford, says Frewer, "is basically a nice guy with a wry sense of humor. He means well but he sometimes tries too hard. His personal life falls by the wayside because of his work."

Stratford is also a novelist and is the medical expert for a local television talk show, "Wake Up, Providence." "Doctor, Doctor" is set in Providence, R.I.

The show also stars Julius Carry III as Abraham Butterfield, Stratford's best friend and one of the partners in the clinic, Maureen Mueller as another partner and a former girlfriend, and Beau Gravitte as Dr. Grant Linowitz, the upwardly mobile cardiologist.

Prior to "Doctor, Doctor," Frewer played a double role on "Max Headroom," as TV reporter Edison Carter and his computer-generated image Max Headroom, who became the quintessential star of the video age. The show, which was created in England, ran on Home Box Office and on ABC two seasons ago. "Max Headroom" was also the star of a series of Coca-Cola commercials.

"Max Headroom" was fun to do, except for the make-up," said Frewer. "They wanted everyone to think it really was computer-generated, but it wasn't. Essentially, it was me in makeup. It took 2 1/2 hours to put it on an 1 1/2 hours to take it off. The only effect was to take out a frame about every 12 frames to give it a jerky look."

"We perpetuated the myth that he was a computer-generated character. Max kept getting the cover of magazines. I was jealous of my alter ego."

After "Max Headroom," Frewer co-starred with Rick Moranis in a Disney movie called "Honey, I Shrank the Kids," which will be released this month. He also starred in the opening episode this season of NBC's "Miami Vice," an episode of NBC's "St. Elsewhere." He co-starred with Drew Barrymore in the movie "Far From Home" and was in "Speed Zone," the third in the "Cannonball" movie series.

The Disney movie, made in Mexico, stars Moranis as a man who invents a machine that shrinks people and objects. "Rick and I are both from Canada and we spent the whole time singing Bachman Turner Overdrive songs," he said.

 Don't play to the first trick until you've mapped your strategy for the whole hand. You might overlook a second line that improves your chances.

In a competitive auction, South bought the hand at five diamonds. West led a club, ruffed by declarer. The unfortunate diamond spots meant declarer had only one fast entry to dummy, so if you don't consider the alternatives carefully, you might decide the heart finesse is your only way to ensure your contract. You go to dummy with the queen of diamonds, hook the heart and end up losing a heart and two spades for down one.

If you study the hand carefully, you see that you can combine the heart finesse with another chance—a coup en blanc—where the defender with the ace of spades has to spend it on air. Since East is more likely than West to have both the ace of spades and shortness in the suit, you need your entry to the table to lead a spade toward your hand.

After ruffing the opening lead, cash a high diamond and lead a trump to the queen. Now lead a spade to the queen and return a spade, ducking on the board. When this fetches the ace, you can claim your contract regardless of whether the heart finesse wins or loses. Your only losers will be one spade and a heart.

What if the ace of spades does not appear? You can still fall back on the heart finesse. Win any return, concede a spade and ruff a spade as the entry to dummy. The fate of the contract then hinges on the heart finesse. Although it loses, you can take solace in the fact you gave the contract your best shot.

Acids Back Theory Of Ancient Comet

NEW YORK (AP) — Scientists said today they have discovered two highly unusual substances in old soils, supporting the idea that an ancient comet or asteroid struck the Earth and maybe killed off the dinosaurs. Two amino acids that are very rare on Earth but abundant in some meteorites appear in sediments that formed around 65 million years ago, the time of a mass extinction involving organisms from dinosaurs to marine plankton.

The finding is "a very compelling piece of evidence" that an extraterrestrial object struck the Earth around that time, said study co-author Jeffrey Bada.

But in a recent telephone interview, he said he took no stand on whether the impact caused the extinction.

Bada and Meixun Zhao of the Scripps Institution of Oceanography at the University of California, San Diego, present their work in today's issue of the British journal Nature.

An editorial accompanying the report called the findings intriguing but cited "troubling" questions about the researchers' interpretation.

The work follows on a hypothesis proposed in 1980, that mass extinction occurred some 65 million years ago because a mountain-sized object struck the Earth, kicking up large quantities of dust and igniting huge fires. The dust and smoke blocked the sun's rays, and many species froze or starved as their food supply disappeared, the hypothesis suggests.

Supporters of the idea note that sediments that formed at the time of the mass extinction contain unusually high concentrations of iridium, a substance rare in the Earth's crust but found in meteorites.

Skeptics counter that the iridium may have been produced by extensive volcanic activity.

The new study found amino acids called alpha-aminoisobutyric acid and racemic isovaline in sediments that lie close to the main iridium-bearing layer in Stevns Klint, Denmark.

These amino acids are extremely rare on Earth and not likely to come from volcanoes, the researchers said. In addition, the ratio of the amounts of the two substances was comparable to that previously measured in a meteorite.

Surprisingly, the substances were not found in the same layer as the bulk of the iridium, but only in nearby strata, the researchers said. Perhaps the amino acids leaked away from the iridium-bearing clay, they said.

But that does not explain how the amino acids could vacate the clay completely, John Cronin of the chemistry department at Arizona State University wrote in the editorial.

The researchers also said they found greater amounts of the amino acids than one would expect to survive from the impact of a meteorite-like body. They suggested that the celestial body may have carried unusually high amounts of the substances, at least in comparison to its iridium content. A comet might have done that, they said.

Cronin, in a telephone interview, said no celestial object has been found to meet that requirement. Too little is known about comets to know whether they could be the explanation, he said.

To follow up on the new findings, scientists could study different locales and search 65-million-year-old sediments for other amino acids that occur in meteorites but apparently not on Earth, he said.

Successful AIDS Tests Raise Calls For Widespread Check Of Vaccine

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MONTREAL — The first AIDS vaccine tested in the United States on humans triggered their immune systems into action, raising hopes that one vaccine may protect against many forms of the AIDS virus, researchers said.

One top U.S. researcher said he is optimistic enough to recommend wide testing of the vaccine.

"We are making progress, and I think we will be able to make a vaccine eventually," said Dr. Clifford H. Lane, head of AIDS vaccine testing at the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases.

Despite the encouraging results reported Wednesday, many important questions remain about whether this — or any — vaccine can keep people from catching AIDS.

Similar vaccines have failed to prevent AIDS virus infections in chimpanzees.

The vaccine is a synthetic copy of the outer coat of HIV, the virus that causes AIDS in humans. The goal of such vaccines is to warn the body's immune defenses about what the AIDS virus looks like. Then, if all goes well, the body's sentinel blood cells will quickly zero in on the virus and kill the invader if it somehow gets into the bloodstream.

The initial human testing of this approach, carried out on 115 homosexual men who were not infected with AIDS, was intended primarily to see if the vaccine is safe.

However, Lane said he will recommend that the next stage of testing be started to see if the vaccine actually protects people from AIDS infection. In the comparison study, a large group of people at risk of AIDS but not infected would randomly be given either the vaccine or dummy injections.

In the study, those who received the vaccine produced microbe-attacking T-cells that recognized different strains of the AIDS virus, Lane said. Since the virus has mutated into many related forms, some doctors have worried that a vaccine that works against one variety of the virus might be useless against others.

Lane's report was one of several on potential vaccine strategies presented at the week-long Fifth International Conference on AIDS.

Lane said he did not think the men in the initial study received large enough doses of the vaccine to produce neutralizing antibodies, probes produced by another branch of the immune system — the so-called B-cells — that target viruses for destruction.

Many researchers believe that for a vaccine to work, it will have to trigger the production of such neutralizing antibodies. In another report, Dr. Scott D. Putney of Repligen, a biotechnology firm in Cambridge, Mass., said his group had identified the single tiny region of the virus' outer coat that can prompt these killing antibodies.

Study Links Strokes And 'Trivial Trauma'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — Young adults have been the victims of strokes in recent years after traumatizing one of four main arteries supplying blood to the brain while performing such simple tasks as brushing teeth or tossing back a drink.

A 32-year-old woman recently suffered a stroke after playing a drinking game in which she tossed back several shots of whiskey, according to a letter published in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

"It was not only the alcohol but the manner in which she consumed it," said Dr. Richard M. Troesch, a neurology resident at the Yale University School of Medicine and a co-author of the article.

Knocking back a shot of whiskey should be included among a list of potential stroke-causing "trivial traumas," including old whiplash injuries, childbirth, heavy lifting and diving into water, Troesch and his colleagues reported.

"We believe that 'bottoms up' drinking, as a form of trivial trauma, caused this young woman's dissection and subsequent stroke," wrote Troesch and his Yale co-authors, Drs. Lawrence M. Brass and Moshe Hasbani.

"Although alcoholic intoxication has been reported as a risk factor for stroke, the manner in which one chooses to become intoxicated has not."

Trosch said young adults were particularly prone to damaging the extracranial carotid artery, a major vein through which blood is pumped from the heart to the brain.

"The young are particularly predisposed not only because they more often play drinking games, but also because their arteries are a little more taut than older people's and do not stretch," Troesch said in an interview.

Known risk factors for dissection of the extracranial carotid artery include fibromuscular dysplasia, hypertension and Erdheim's cystic medial necrosis.

Drug Cleared For Parkinson's Patients

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — A new drug that is expected to increase the quality of life significantly for those Parkinson's disease patients for whom standard drug therapy has begun to fail has been approved for marketing, the Food and Drug Administration announced Wednesday.

The new drug, selegiline, would be added to levodopa, the drug most frequently prescribed to combat symptoms of the degenerative central nervous system disorder, which include slowness of movement, muscular rigidity, and an instability that often leads to falls.

Currently, when levodopa's effectiveness begins to fade, the symptoms return or higher doses of levodopa are needed to suppress them, frequently with increasingly serious side effects.

An estimated 500,000 Americans suffer from Parkinson's, according to the federal government's National Institute of Neurological and Communicative Disorders and Stroke. Very few develop serious symptoms before age 40, and the great majority are diagnosed between the ages of 60 and 70.
