Falwell Says Mission Is Accomplished

By David Briggs
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAS VEGAS — The Moral Majority is being dismantled after a decade of leading religious conservatives out of the political wilderness, but analysts said the effects of its lobbying efforts will endure.

"There are those that are saying we are witnessing the end of the religious right," said the Rev. Richard Neuhaus, director of the Center on Religion and Society in New York. "I do not think this is the beginning of the end. To paraphrase Churchill, 'This is the end of the beginning.'"

Television evangelist Jerry Falwell, founder and chairman of Moral Majority, announced Sunday that the organization will be disbanded Aug. 31.

The lobbying group, which raised $69 million and helped elect three Republican administrations since its founding in June 1979, had accomplished its mission of politicizing religious conservatives, Falwell told a meeting of the Religion Newswriters Association.

"I feel that I have performed the task to which I was called in 1979. The religious right is solidly in place, and like the galvanizing of the black church as a political force a generation ago, the religious conservatives in America are now in for the duration," he said.

Neuhaus, a Lutheran theologian, said Moral Majority's ability to bring Christian fundamentalists out of an isolationist stance and into public policy debates was "a major development of lasting consequence."

"While the work of Moral Majority will go on forever, the Moral Majority organization is no longer needed," Falwell said.

An average of 2 million to 3 million people either donated money or subscribed to the organization's newspaper over the last decade, according to Mark DeMoss, a spokesman for Falwell.

At its height during the 1984 presidential election, the group raised $11 million. DeMoss said revenues this year are expected to drop to $3.5 million. The organization has a dozen employees in Washington.

Sociologist Nancy Ammerman said the Moral Majority served an important function for religious conservatives "as a kind of cultural symbol that they were gaining a place in the American political scene."

But the group's passing is "typical" of social movements in general that start out with charismatic leaders such as Falwell, but in the long run need individuals on local boards to put policies in place, she said.

"I've been seeing a movement over the last three or four years away from the charismatic leadership phase into the grass-roots involvement phase," said Ms. Ammerman, an assistant professor of the sociology of religion at Emory University in Atlanta.

Federal and local officials investigate the crash of hot air balloon in which three people died

Three Killed As Hot Air Balloon Hits Tower Wires

By Laura Grimmer
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GARNER — Tricky winds prevented other hot-air balloon enthusiasts from launching, but an experienced Raleigh pilot and a Cary couple died when their balloon hit television tower guy wires and "dropped like a sack of bricks."

Federal Aviation Administration officials are probing the cause of the crash at 7:15 a.m. Sunday that killed all three people aboard shortly after take-off, said Wake County sheriff's Capt. Macks Pickett.

"We didn't say anything to each other when we saw the balloon flying so low," said Orlando Haley, 25, of Smithfield, who witnessed the crash along with his brother, Dennis. "We both knew it was going to hit the tower."

The balloon "dropped like a sack of bricks to the ground," said Dennis Haley, 27. Sheriff's officials said the balloon fell 1,100 to 1,500 feet.

"The first thing that came to my mind when we saw the balloon was that there wasn't anyone in it because it was flying so low," Dennis Haley said.

The brothers were the first to reach the crash site, and found the gas valves feeding the burners that fill the gas bag with hot air were wide open, suggesting the pilot had been trying to gain altitude.

The victims, who were dead at the scene, were identified as the pilot, Dan D. Johnson, 45, of Raleigh; Joseph James Tanahey, 32, who would have been 33 today, and his wife, Margaret Angel Tanahey, no age available, both of Cary.

"I've never seen anything like this before," said Orlando Haley.

Deputy D.C. Davenport, the first officer to arrive at the crash site in a wide field of high grasses and weeds, said witnesses told him when the balloon hit the wires, "it just tore the whole top out of that balloon and it dropped straight down. It came down quick."

A woman who answered the phone at Balloon Plantation in Raleigh confirmed that one of the company's balloons had been in an accident on Sunday but refused

Pitt's New Jail Arrangement Like 'Family Buying A Home'

By Stuart Savage
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt County commissioners, faced with a long-standing problem of too little jail space, agreed last week to finance the construction of a new jail through a lease-purchase arrangement.

It's "analogous to a family buying a home," County Manager Jackson explained later. "When you buy a house, you enter into an agreement with an institution to make payments over a certain period of time."

The "house" the county will be buying will be a big house.

"We haven't pinned down the actual cost of the jail facility," Jackson said. "We tend to think the cost will be somewhere close to $12 million and think we'll retire that $12 million over a 20-year period."

"The method of financing — it's not a true lease-purchase — is called certificates of participation," or COP.

"What happens is that the certificates are marketed and sold very much like general obligation bonds or municipal bonds are marketed and sold," Jackson explained. "A financial institution enters into an agreement with the county to provide the requested amount of money ... $12 million for example. Then it's up to the financial institution to sell certificates to generate that $12 million."

"The $12 million comes to the county and the county proceeds in the same manner it would had they been municipal bonds. The county employs an architect, builds the jail and gets the facility through this financing method."

The differences? On municipal bonds, according to Jackson, "the county calls for a bond referendum and the public votes. If the referendum passes, then the bonds are sold." In the case of COPs, "no vote of the public is necessary. The county enters into a lease agreement with a financial institution."

Jackson said that the lease agreement has to be approved by the Local Government Commission, just as it would have to approve a bond issue. "In both cases, the Local Government Commission has to approve."

"With bonds," Jackson explained, "the county pledges its taxing authority to pay back the money. With certificates of participation, the county adopts a non-appropriations clause.

"With general obligation bonds, the county has no choice but to retire the debt. With a non-appropriations clause, in the event the county does not appropriate the money to repay the debt, the people who market the certificates can reclaim the jail itself and the jail is what serves as collateral," he said.

"With certificates of purchase, the non-appropriations clause is saying that in the event the county cannot, or will not, pay the balance, then the

Woman Charged In Local Murder

Greenville police have arrested a woman and are looking for another person in connection with the shooting death of Richard Ham Gaddy, 54, whose body was found in a truck parked at the intersection of Cedarhurst Road and Baywood Lane in the Club Pines subdivision at about 11:09 a.m. Saturday.

Detective T.E. Nevelle said Linda Lopez, 29, 4 Ramah Road, Bridgeton, N.J., was arrested Sunday at about 6 p.m. on murder and armed robbery charges in connection with Gaddy's death.

She is being held in the Pitt County Jail without bond. At her first appearance this morning in Pitt District Court, Judge James E. Martin of Grifton appointed the public defender to represent her.

She is set to appear in District Court on July 3 for a probable cause hearing. Nevelle, who said Ms. Lopez was taken into custody in a Cricket Inn guest room, said warrants have also been issued for a second person in connection with the robbery and death, but declined to identify the individual.

According to Nevelle, Gaddy was shot in the head at close range with a .22 caliber weapon. The investigators said it is believed the shooting occurred between 10 p.m. and 11 p.m. Friday at the site where the body was found Saturday morning.

Nelleve said police believe that robbery was the motive for the killing. Other officers close to the investigation said as much as $5,000 may have been taken from Gaddy.

Nelleve said Gaddy, an employee of the Kinston DuPont plant and operator of an aluminum siding business, had lived at 303 Highland Drive in Grifton, but more recently had stayed on Victoria Court in Greenville.

China Orders Fang's Arrest

By Jim Abrams
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — Authorities today banned the student and worker groups that spearheaded the pro-democracy movement and stepped up criticism of the United States for sheltering leading dissident Fang Lizhi.

The government said leaders of the independent groups who refuse to surrender will be arrested "and dealt with severely." On Sunday, it ordered the arrest of Fang, who sought refuge in the U.S. Embassy earlier this month.

As a result of the army's assault on unarmed protesters to clear Tiananmen Square, U.S.-Chinese relations have plunged to perhaps the lowest point since diplomatic ties were restored a decade ago.

The government-controlled media today accused the Voice of America, which has reported the hundreds of deaths in the city center a week ago, of false reporting and distortion. Official media claim no one was killed on the square.

Authorities have launched a propaganda campaign aimed at convincing the populace that soldiers were the victims of a rampaging mob and that foreign reports of troops opening fire on unarmed crowds are lies.

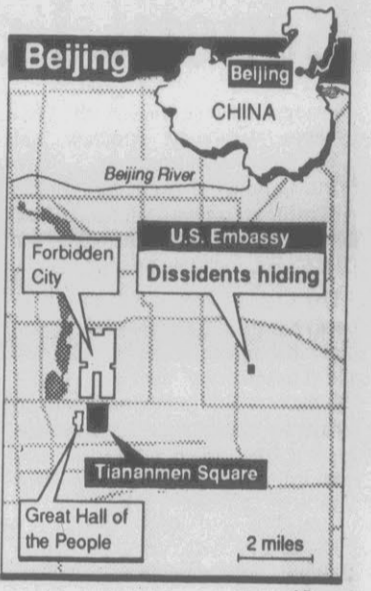

The U.S. Embassy had no immediate comment on the government's order for Fang's arrest. "It's too sensitive and I'm really not in a position to discuss it," U.S. Ambassador James Lilley said on ABC television's "Good Morning America."

Lilley said the government's "current anti-American pitch was quite predictable" as part of the government's orchestrated propaganda campaign.

The country's official trade union today urged workers to eradicate independent labor groups, which sprung up as the student-led movement for a freer China gained

Youth Employment Permits Hot Items

By Amy Gavigan
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Pitt County Department of Social Services has issued 935 Youth Employment Certificates, more commonly known as work permits, from January through May, and Brenda Worthington, administrative assistant for the department, says there is "no sign of it slowing down."

Fast food establishments and other restaurants account for 48 percent of Pitt County's youth employment, according to statistics compiled by the social services department. Grocery stores and retail and department stores are the next popular choices at 17 percent and 13 percent, respectively. Other notable employers include the Pitt County Schools, government agencies, private industries and Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Youth employment and the certificates are covered by the 1979 Wage and Hour Act of North Carolina and have been in existence since the late 1930s according to Tom Harris, director of the Wage and Hour Division of the North Carolina Department of Labor. A section says "no youth under 18 years of age shall be employed by any employer in any occupation without a youth employment certificate unless specifically exempted."

Harris said, "The purpose of the certificate is two-fold. One is to verify the age of the youth, which satisfies the federal requirement."

"Second, before social services

Coal Miners Strike

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLESTON, W. Va. — Thousands of coal miners refused to show up for work today across southern West Virginia, after the head of the United Mine Workers told cheering supporters that "it's time for labor to rise up and fight back."

A rally Sunday drew 12,000 people outside the state Capitol to call attention to UMW's 2-month-old strike against the Pittston Coal Group. This morning, several other mining companies reported walkouts.

Gary White, president of the West Virginia Coal Association, an industry group, estimated that a third of the state's 30,000 miners stayed home today, most of them in the southern part of the state. There was no evidence the walkouts affected operations in other states.

Students' Party A Hit

By Cherie Evans
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt County's first all-night, drug-free graduation party for high school students was a hit, said a sponsor of the event.

"Project Graduation was a great success," said Dottie Blades, director of the Pitt County Council Against Substance Abuse which spearheaded the event.

About 620 high school juniors and seniors of Pitt County met after graduation exercises Friday in Minges Coliseum at East Carolina University, she said.

The students participated in a variety of activities including dancing, watching movies and videos, playing racquetball, swimming and eating foods from pizza to yogurt.

"Lots of prizes were given away," Ms. Blades said. Amanda Hardy, a graduate of Ayden-Grifton High School, won the grand prize — a round-trip ticket for two to New York with paid accommodations and two tickets to the taping of the Cosby Show.

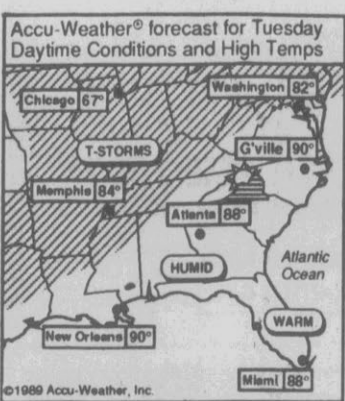

"I think we pulled four names before we got to Amanda," Ms. Blades said. Students had to be present to win prizes.

"I'm going to take my husband" on the trip, Ms. Hardy said. "That's going to be part of my honeymoon." Ms. Hardy is marrying Jeff Smith of Greenville June 25th, she said.

"He nudged me when they said the

Drug Arrest

Greenville police have arrested William Earl Perkins, 30, of 1504 Dickinson Ave. on multiple drug charges in connection with an incident that occurred at the intersection of Beatty and Howell streets about 11:01 p.m. Friday.

Officers assigned to the department's special investigations section said Perkins was charged with possession with intent to sell and deliver marijuana and cocaine, as well as with possession of drug paraphernalia and with resisting and delaying an officer in connection with the incident.

The officers said $1,135 worth of marijuana and crack cocaine and $65 in cash, were confiscated in connection with the arrest.

CRP Changes Will Benefit Landowners

Changes made in the Conservation Reserve (CRP) in January will allow more landowners in eastern North Carolina to participate in the program, according to Bobbye Jack Jones, state conservationist for USDA's Soil Conservation Service.

The CRP is one provision of the Food Security Act of 1985. Under CRP, the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) will make annual rental payments to farmers who take their highly erodible cropland out of production and establish a vegetative cover on it for a period of 10 years.

In January, Congress expanded eligibility requirements to include cropland wetland areas and fields with evidence of scour erosion, which is caused by out-of-bank flows of water. The land must have been cropped for two of the crop years 1981 through 1985 and must flood a minimum of once every 10 years.

Wetlands cropped during 1981-1985 are also eligible for enrollment in the CRP. Wetlands consist of soils that are covered with standing water or those that are saturated most of the year.

The land user must submit a bid during the sign-up period at the local Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation (ASCS) office. If the bid is accepted, the land is retired for 10 years. The land owner then establishes a permanent vegetative cover and the USDA-ASCS makes annual payments to the land user.

For more information, contact the Soil Conservation Service at 752-2720.

Weekend Thefts Probed

Investigators said eight thefts, including an armed robbery at Ryan's Steak House on South Memorial Drive on Sunday, were reported to Greenville police over the weekend.

Officer E.L. Butts said a man wearing a stocking mask and armed with a revolver took an undetermined amount of cash from the restaurant Sunday at about 1:58 a.m. Butts said the robber locked the manager and two employees in a storage room before making his getaway.

In another incident, Butts said $678 worth of property — towels, wash cloths, sheets, a cooker, silverware, dishes, a fan, jewelry and a blow dryer — were taken from C-17 Glendale Court in an incident reported at 11:19 p.m. Saturday.

Officer M.T. Scheid said a radar detector was taken from a car parked at Carolina East Mall in an incident reported at 4:07 p.m. Sunday, while Officer C.J. Melvin said a license plate was taken from a vehicle parked at Herb's Restaurant Equipment on Albemarle Avenue in an incident reported Sunday at 7:01 p.m.

Officer B.M. Highland said $340 worth of tools were taken from the H.A. Henry Co. at the intersection of 10th and Greene streets in an incident reported at 7:01 p.m. Sunday, while Officer L.T. Gray said a bicycle was taken from 1804 Norcott Circle in an incident reported at 8:09 p.m.

Officer R.L. Smith said a potted plant was taken from 402 S. Jarvis St. in an incident reported Sunday at 8:50 p.m., while Officer R.L. Smith said a television, air conditioner and a microwave oven were taken from 409 Elizabeth St. in an incident reported at 10:16 p.m.

Pitt Making Jail Arrangements

party in the agreement has the right to claim the facility as its collateral." As far as the cost of such financing is concerned, "all I can tell you is that we have been told by people in the business of selling certificates that Pitt's bond rating of AA is so good that there would be very little difference in interest costs," between financing through COPs or general obligation bonds. "I'm not sure what 'very little' difference is," Jackson said. "But we've been told that it's less than one-half of one percent. And bond council has agreed to that estimate." Jackson said the certificate of participation "is analogous to a family buying a home. When you buy a house, you enter into an agreement with the institution to make payments over a certain period of time. If you make your payments, you get a clear deed. In this case the county is building a jail and paying for it on an annual basis the way an individual pays for a house. "If there is a legal difference," Jackson suggested, "it is that there is no deed of trust involved. The lease agreement itself gives the marketers of the certificates the right to take possession of the jail if we default." If not having to pay the cost of a bond referendum is an advantage COPs have over general obligation bonds, then COPs have two more advantages, Jackson said. With COPs, "there is no outlay of funds before the jail is completed and we move in," Jackson said. "Selling bonds, the county, after six months, would start making payments. With certificates of participation there may be a two-year delay in spending money. "Another, with COPs, the county can decide how to structure the repayment. We can make small payments up-front and larger payments at the end. That can be worked out." Jackson estimated that the cost of financing the projects with COPs would be "1.5 percent" for underwriters and about $100,000 for marketing. But he said, "We would have those costs with municipal bonds also." With an estimated cost of $12 million, Jackson said "we're looking at an annual payment of about $1.4 million" for a new jail. Based on the current value of property in the county and the present tax rate of 63 cents per $100 valuation, that represents "about a 4.5 cents per $100 tax rate change (increase)." But Jackson said those figures would change in the two year period before the jail can be designed and built. Guilford County, Jackson said, in December 1988, sold $20.6 million in COPs to finance a project, while "Harnett County built a jail several years ago using the same route. "Certificate of participation (financing) is relatively new to North Carolina," Jackson said. "But it is permissible and other states have been doing it for years and years."

Balloon Strikes Tower Wires

to say anything else before talking to a lawyer. Ronald E. Brady, the co-owner of Aerial Ascensions, another charter balloon company in Raleigh, said bad wind led his company to cancel two flights Sunday morning. "You develop a sixth sense, and I guess that's what we relied on today," said Brady. "It told us that something wasn't right and we couldn't put our finger on it, so we didn't fly." The National Weather Service at Raleigh-Durham International Airport in Morrisville recorded surface wind speed of 8 mph from the north at the time of the accident. Brady said that's fine for launching a balloon, but he was concerned about a low-level wind shear — an abrupt change in wind speed or direction — detected in the 300- to 400-foot range. "We weren't sure what that low level jet would do to us later in the morning," Brady said. "And because of that, we decided not to fly." The tower whose wire was hit is owned by Durham Life Broadcasting Co. for WPTF-TV and is one of three in the field where the crash occurred. Guy wires on television towers can extend a quarter-mile from the tower, officials said. "It's a real tragedy for something like this to happen, and we regret the resulting loss of life," said Bob Butler, executive vice president of Durham Life and general manager of WPTF.

Bill May Require Medical Treatment In Juvenile Cases

By Cherie Evans
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Parents in a juvenile court case may have to get some form of medical treatment to keep their child, according to a state bill approved by the General Assembly this month. House Bill 144, sponsored by state Rep. Walter B. Jones Jr. at the request of the Pitt County Department of Social Services, may require a parent in a juvenile court case to participate in medical, psychological or other treatment to keep legal or physical custody of a neglected or abused child.

The legislation, which becomes effective Oct. 1, provides another option for protecting the best interest of both the child and the family, Jones said.

"I believe that this addition will give our judges an option they have not had in dealing with the tragic problem of child abuse and neglect in our state," he said.

Jones noted that before this legislation there was no provision for treatment of the person who had abused or neglected a child, but only a provision for medical, psychological or other treatment for the abused child.

The Pitt Board of Social Services met with area legislators in September to share their concerns about the rate that children returned through the system because of abuse or neglect.

"I am very pleased the General Assembly has adopted this legislation," said Ed Garrison, director of the Pitt Department of Social Services.

"The need for it was because we were in the position of often times returning children to environments that had not been corrected," he said. "We were putting children back into a situation we did not feel had theoretically or substantially improved."

The laws allowed a judge to order a neglected or abused child into treatment, Garrison said. "But to say to parents you're going to have to accept treatment, that could not be done" before the bill was approved.

With the new law, "while the child is being worked with the parents also can be required to undergo the treatment to remove the cause of this problem," he said.

Parents will have to pay the cost of the treatment, according to the bill. If the judge finds that the parent can not pay the cost of the treatment, the judge may charge the cost to the county.

"Success or failure of this law depends on how the district court judge will elect to use it," Garrison said.

Sound

A New Way To Address An Old Need

Pitt's commissioners have found an innovative, low-risk way to finance a badly needed jail. The proposal, although it involves methods relatively new to North Carolina, is a fiscally sound means of funding a cumbersome, unappealing project. It deserves endorsement.

Large public capital expenditures are usually funded through a bond referendum — the voters approve these 20- or 30-year bonds for a specific project, the county sells them and investors buy. Usually, a tax increase pays the bonds — and the interest — off. A long payment period keeps this increase moderate. This is a traditional, tried-and-true way to fund big-ticket items.

But there is one hitch. Voters have to approve the bonds in a referendum. Traditionally, that has worked for schools and other popular spending projects that directly benefit citizens — water and sewer, etc. But a jail — while desperately needed in Pitt County — isn't such a project. There's not an elected official within 50 miles that would truthfully tell you the voters of Pitt County would approve bonds to build a jail. And they would be right.

Pitt County has to have a new jail, regardless of whether voters approve bonds or not. The current facility, built in 1964 and never enlarged, is inadequate. It remains beyond capacity. An expensive temporary satellite jail sucks money out of county coffers. It is not a satisfactory environment and there are doubts about its security. Even with these two jails, Pitt still turns away offenders when they show up to serve time.

A community can't get tough on crime without a suitable, secure place to house criminals. Here's where the value of the proposed new method of financing comes in.

Commissioners want to build a $13 million jail through a lease purchase agreement — technically called a certificate of participation. Private investors lend Pitt the money for the jail and Pitt pays them back, with interest, over a 20- or 30-year period. Taxpayers can expect a gradual tax increase, just like with bonds.

As with bonds, there are risks to a lease-purchase agreement.

The interest is steeper, but only slightly. County Manager Kramer Jackson estimates interest will be approximately two-tenths of a percentage point higher. That's an acceptable margin.

With lease-purchase, if the county defaults on payment for its jail, the private investors repossess it. That risk is slight, but it is a possibility which should be discussed.

Besides the obvious advantages of lease-purchase over bonds, there are questions as to whether jail construction is a project that should be undertaken through bonds. Bonds are most effective when used only to fund exceptional capital needs, such as schools. Shouldn't a jail be accommodated through good long-range planning?

While questions about lease-purchase need to be thoroughly explored before entering into an actual agreement, the concept is a sound one that could allow Pitt to address a need that is not optional — a jail. As a county grows, so must the creativity of its leaders. This idea is an example of such inventiveness.

The Challenge Foley Faces

Enter the new Speaker of the United States House of Representatives Thomas S. Foley.

He replaces Jim Wright, D-Texas, who resigned after ethics question were raised which shook the House to its roots.

This was not just a ceremonial change, however. Granted, there was some partisanship in the events which led to the downfall of Jim Wright. Nevertheless it is clear that Congress must respond to a public perception of questionable ethics on the part of congressional members.

There was a time when the belief in Congress was that the conduct of a congressman or senator was between them and their constituents. That concept is not valid now. The entire nation views Congress as a whole. Thus a code of ethics is necessary and a way of enforcing it is needed.

It is essential, however, that ethics cease to be a partisan issue. There has been enough misconduct to tar both Republicans and Democrats. To be effective efforts to provide rules for all members of Congress must be bipartisan.

That is what Speaker Foley faces for the House and it is also the issue for the Senate chamber.

If the Congress of the United States cannot find reasonable grounds for proper conduct, how can that group lead the public they represent? The challenge is large but answers must be found.

...SUDDENLY, TOM FOLEY REALIZES THE GRAVITY OF THE HOUSE SPEAKERSHIP...

The D'Amato Pool For Taxpayers

NEW YORK — In his long and distinguished career, Sen. Alfonse D'Amato (R-N.Y.) has been unfairly attacked as a hack politician and a retrograde who is insensitive to the poor. Now, his critics will have to eat their words. In his very hometown, an impoverished seaside community where some homes sell for only $400,000, D'Amato came to the aid of residents who have to walk blocks to the beach. He got the government to pay almost $1 million for a swimming pool.

D'Amato's hometown is Island Park, Long Island, an integrated community (3 percent black) where not everyone has beachfront property. Desperately in need of government assistance, it has over the years been the recipient of Department of Housing and Urban Development grants which, as luck would have it, provided a home for D'Amato's cousin and for the son of a HUD official. In yet another startling coincidence, the official, Geraldine McGann, is a friend of D'Amato's. In fact, he got her the HUD job.

D'Amato's unparalleled constituent service has been detailed in a marvelous New York Times story. It turns out that in the 1980s, while the Reagan Revolution was marching on the Bastille of the Bloated Budget, big Washington somehow noticed little Island Park, population 4,200. With HUD funds, it built 44 homes there and sold them for between $40,000 and $64,000. As sometimes happens, the homes were bought by politically well-connected people and not low-income citizens. One home, bought for $59,000, sold six years later for $270,000. Look, these things happen.

Of course, D'Amato's town did all it could to ensure that blacks got a chance to buy some homes. It advertised in the paper. Was it the town's fault that by the time the ad appeared, some very smart people had slipped their applications under the door of the town hall before it opened? And would you believe some of those people were related to town officials? This is why not a single home was bought by a black person. Now, probably, some rabble-rouser will complain. You know how "they" are.

Of course, some liberal (should there be one left) is going to be critical of this wholly pristine transaction. There will be cries of "welfare for the rich" and, even, some confusion over ethics. If, after all, Jim Wright got into trouble for allegedly enriching himself, then shouldn't D'Amato be criticized for enriching his friends, neighbors and cousin?

This very same liberal (oh, what a wretch!) might also say that nobody, but nobody, was more vigorous in adhering to the Reagan administration line than this very same D'Amato. The President blamed Congress for wasting money. Yes, indeed, said D'Amato. The President wanted to cut programs that aid the poor. Go right ahead, said D'Amato.

Is this hypocrisy? Is this favoritism? Is this old-fashioned, even corrupt, politics? Perish the thought. D'Amato, after all, belongs to the new Ethics Party which, for good reason, complains that Democrats have been in power so long that they abuse their authority and funnel pork-barrel projects to their own districts. All Republicans are, naturally, opposed to that — if not, in fact, sickened by it.

In contrast, D'Amato is a champion of the little guy. Another politician might have ignored the plight of people without pools, having to trudge toward the beach on a hot day. They might have said something ridiculous about dilapidated schools, underfunded drug-rehabilitation programs or — since these were HUD funds — lack of housing for the poor. You know those people. When their hearts bleed, their brains stop.

But not D'Amato. He battled for the pool, openly, courageously. He got $425,000 from then HUD Secretary Samuel Pierce's discretionary fund and Nassau County allotted $550,000 more from its HUD funds. Island Park itself put up $50,000, if for no other reason than that the situation was desperate. The lack of a pool, the town's HUD application said, "threatens the village's real-estate values." And D'Amato and HUD cut through red tape. The funds were granted even before the village had a plan for the pool.

Now those who over the years have called D'Amato a hack politician will have to eat their words. Those who remember how he was unfairly tainted by kickback scandal when he was a Nassau County Republican official will have to revise their assessment of him. Working quietly and oh-so-diligently, Alfonse D'Amato has treated everyone equally. Because of him, the affluent will get a pool and the taxpayer will take a bath.

Beware The Dangers Of Sentimentality

DUBLIN — The Irish, who practically invented sentimentality, were smart enough to label it for what it is: blarney. The Irish politicians I've been watching at work are charming as all get out, but they also know how to cut deals and trim budgets.

David Broder

This is by way of preface to the useful perspective Dublin offers on the tumultuous events now sweeping the world from China to Poland and the Soviet Union. If there is one lesson Americans can learn from these upheavals, it is the danger of sentimentalizing.

We have a tendency to do exactly that. Remember when Deng Xiaoping visited the United States a few years ago? He was taken to a Texas rodeo, seated in a stagecoach, handed a cowboy hat and driven around the ring to great cheers. Just another good ole boy. People wanted to pat him on the head and wish him good luck.

Well, it turns out that Deng is viewed a lot less fondly by millions of the people he rules, who took to the streets of Beijing to protest the corruption and repression of the government he heads. And it turns out that he and his henchmen were willing to turn the army's guns on those people when their protest swelled out of control.

Dictators do that. Those who take power by the gun use guns to stay in power. We make a serious mistake when we forget that. We are in the process of forgetting it now with that other charismatic communist, Mikhail Gorbachev. The spirited debates in the Soviet Parliament and the victories of Solidarity members in the elections he permitted in Poland are the latest examples cited to prove that Gorbachev is our kind of guy.

He is not. He may espouse certain goals we can understand and respect-like building a modern, efficient economy able to meet the material needs of the people. But he comes from a culture, a tradition and an ideology as alien to our democracy as Deng Xiaoping's.

That is why Sen. Bill Bradley (D-N.J.) is right when he constantly cautions against adopting a policy of "sentimental capitalism" toward the Soviet Union. "Sentimental capitalists," says the old Knicks star, are like the businessmen who want to own basketball teams, not because they can get a great return on their money, but so they can invite their friends to meet Magic Johnson or Michael Jordan. A similar sentimentality infects Americans' recent eagerness to do business with China and Russia.

Even President Bush, who is not notably gushy, has found himself struggling to maintain his detachment. In an interview with The Washington Post just days before the Chinese army mowed down the demonstrators, he cautioned those expressing euphoria at the calls for democracy, "Don't judge what is happening in China by the headlines of the moment. Don't do it. You might find yourself 180 degrees wrong."

But a few moments later, he declared, "I don't think they're going to move back, no matter what the leadership is, away from some expression of democracy. I don't think that's what the leadership over there wants." And he seemed to suggest that the "radical change" he sees in the Soviet Union is also irreversible.

It is not simply a misjudgment of the leaders that's involved in our imagining that the worldwide movement to democracy "cannot be denied," as Bush said. It's also a misreading of the masses. Democracy is difficult. It takes much more than demonstrations to achieve it. And few of the brave millions who have filled the streets have a clue as to what it requires.

"That does not mean we should not encourage the forces of change that clearly are at work inside the communist world, as well as in Latin America and Africa. But we should recognize the difficulty of achieving a working democracy and the daunting odds facing anyone who sets out to invent one."

China has had no historical experience of democracy, and the Soviet Union and its satellites darn little. Gorbachev is dealing with an essentially intractable dilemma when he encourages a degree of political competition in Russia and Poland.

The universal experience of working democracies is that, within a few years of their formation, competitors for power organize themselves into parties. Warnings by George Washington and the other Founders against "the dangers of faction" did not prevent rival parties appearing in our country.

A pluralist society, anchored in law, can easily handle the internal tensions created by partisan strife. But a monolithic state, with an official ideology and a single party, inevitably finds the emergence of an alternative popular movement a threat to its very existence.

That does not mean we should not encourage the forces of change that clearly are at work inside the communist world, as well as in Latin America and Africa. But we should recognize the difficulty of achieving a working democracy and the daunting odds facing anyone who sets out to invent one. And we should make our national-security decisions accordingly.

Sentimentality must not obscure that point.

Fellow Residents of Greenville and Pitt County:

Our Greenville Plant has recently been the subject of news coverage inaccurately identifying Burroughs Wellcome Co. as posing a health risk to the community.

We want to assure you that the emissions from this facility pose no threat to you, to our employees, or to the community at large.

The news coverage was based on an Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) report that the EPA itself said does not accurately reflect local health hazards.

Only one chemical, methylene chloride, was associated with Burroughs Wellcome Co. Emissions of this chemical have been carefully evaluated, and according to an on-site study performed by the State of North Carolina for the EPA, the plant's emissions of this chemical do not pose a significant health risk and the emissions "were deemed acceptable in North Carolina."

We think you should know the following:

- The EPA says the report is not necessarily accurate for individual plants.

The report was meant as a comparison of sources on a nationwide basis, not on an individual plant basis. EPA says the data on individual sources "may be subject to significant error."

- Actual tests by the State of North Carolina at Burroughs Wellcome Co. Greenville plant detected no methylene chloride.

In 1988 a team from the North Carolina Department of Natural Resources and Community Development tested air emissions at our plant. The report concluded:

"There was no methylene chloride or other organics detected on the fence line of the Burroughs Wellcome facility."

- The EPA says its data does not reflect risks in the real world.

An EPA spokesperson said about the EPA report:

"The figures... were never used to reflect risk in the real world" and "any suggestion those data are reflective of risks in the real world is an entirely erroneous interpretation... a highly irresponsible interpretation."

We want to reassure you that emissions from the Greenville plant are well below the standards set by Federal and State regulations and do not pose a threat to the community. Our employees and their families live in this community and Burroughs Wellcome Co. is committed to an extensive environmental protection program.

We would be happy to share with you further details concerning the information presented here. You are welcome to contact our Site Manager, Larry Seigler, at (919)758-3436 for any questions you may have.

Defense Has Turn In Swindall Trial

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — For three weeks, federal prosecutors have tried to prove that former Rep. Pat Swindall lied repeatedly to a grand jury investigating money laundering last year.

Beginning today, Swindall and his attorneys get their chance to shoot down the government's case. The prosecution rested its case last week.

Sometime this week, U.S. District Judge Richard C. Freeman is expected to rule on motions by Swindall's lead attorney, Richard Hendrix, seeking to throw out each of the 10 counts in the indictment.

Freeman indicated Friday his leanings on three of the counts, saying he will probably leave them for the jury to decide.

The judge also could be called upon to rule on a motion to toss out a subpoena of two North Carolina congressmen, should Swindall's lawyers actually call them to testify.

Swindall is charged in a 10-count indictment with lying to a federal grand jury in February 1988 regarding his 1987 negotiations with an undercover agent posing as a money launderer and with Swindall associate Charles LeChasney, later convicted of money laundering.

Hendrix subpoenaed at least three current members of Congress — Rep. Howard Coble, R-N.C., Rep. J. Alex McMillan, R-N.C., and Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass. — presumably to counter the prosecution's contention that Swindall, as a member of banking and judiciary committees in the House, should have been especially aware of laws against money laundering.

Hendrix said last week that at least one member of Congress would testify willingly; such testimony could come this week. And this also could be the week that Swindall himself takes the stand, as he is expected to do.

Swindall's negotiations, the subject of much of his grand jury testimony, took place as the congressman, his luxurious home soaring over budget, sought to acquire $850,000 from the money man, through a mortgage company to be created by LeChasney.

Evidence has shown that even after he was told that the money "certainly" included drug money and that the machinations of the cash handling would be illegal, Swindall continued to negotiate for the ultimately aborted deal.

Davis Gets Leaders' Vote Of Confidence

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Embattled State Democratic Party Chairman Lawrence Davis says he's pleased by a vote of confidence by top party leaders, but he's not sure whether it will end calls for his ouster.

"I'd like to think it does, but that's not my call," he said.

The Democratic Executive Council, the party's ruling body, passed a statement Saturday saying Davis "can and will responsibly and fairly lead this party."

The action came after a group of 280 active Democratic women signed a statement asking the council to "re-assess" Davis' leadership in light of his comments saying he personally opposed abortion.

Muriel K. Offerman, a Democratic National Committee member from Wallace, said the party leaders agreed that Davis will support the party's pro-choice position on abortion despite his personal views.

"We feel the chairman has, in spoken and written word, said he was speaking personally, not on behalf of the party," said Mrs. Offerman, who was chairman of a committee that drafted the party's response. "He is and will support the party platform as chairman of the Democratic Party."

Last month, the 4th and 2nd District Democratic Conventions called for his resignation.

Also Saturday, the council approved Everett B. Ward as the party's new executive director.

IN THE STATE

Escapes Captured

RALEIGH (AP) — Bloodhounds helped law officers capture a man charged with murder and bank robbery and a man awaiting trial on attempted murder charges who broke out of the Hoke Correctional Center with a third inmate, officials say.

Otis Lynn Short of Gastonia and Raynard Keith Blackwell of Person County were captured early Sunday about 15 to 20 miles from the prison said David Guth, a state Department of Correction spokesman. The two had escaped on Friday with Willie McCain, who remained at charge.

Law enforcement officers spotted Short and Blackwell about 4:30 a.m. in woods about 8 miles north of Laurinburg in Scotland County, Guth said.

They were captured after bloodhounds picked up their scent, he said.

Blackwell fell to the ground and surrendered, but Short kept running, Guth said. Short was captured about 20 minutes later when he was found by a dog in a thicket of briars.

Four Die On Highways

RALEIGH (AP) — Four people were killed on North Carolina roads during the weekend, including two men who died when their car hit a tree and burst into flames, the state Highway Patrol said today.

James Craig Patterson, 23, of Mount Airy, and Jerry Jacob Easter, 25, of Cana, Va., were killed in the wreck at 12:05 a.m. Sunday in Stokes County, troopers said.

Walter James Bowman, 48, of Mount Airy, died at 9:49 p.m. Saturday when the car he was driving went down an embankment, throwing him from the vehicle, the patrol said.

Bernhardt A. Waldenmaier, 41, of Beaufort, was killed at 12:40 p.m. Saturday on U.S. in Carteret County. Troopers said Waldenmaier, who was riding a bicycle, pulled into the path of another vehicle.

The deaths brought North Carolina's highway fatality toll for the year to 568, compared to 608 on this date last year.

Appeal Considered

JACKSONVILLE (AP) — Marine Capt. Judy Meade says she's guilty of no wrongdoing — just poor judgment when she spent the night with an admitted lesbian while two female enlisted Marines were together in another room of the house.

"I still don't feel I did anything wrong," she told the Jacksonville Daily News.

The captain says she will appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court, if necessary, if she is not retained in the Corps or given an honorable discharge after nearly 13 years of service.

Ms. Meade, who formerly commanded military police at Camp Lejeune, now does MP paperwork in her off-base home while awaiting a final decision on her career.

On Feb. 26 a Camp Lejeune board of inquiry ruled that Ms. Meade, 37 and unmarried, committed conduct unbecoming an officer by befriending a known lesbian. The board recommended the captain be discharged under other-than-honorable conditions.

She was not accused of homosexual acts, and she denies committing such acts.

Her main accusers — ex-Marines involved in lesbianism at Parris Island, S.C. — did not appear before the board. And defense attorney Vaughan Taylor had no opportunity to cross-examine women who earlier gave statements against Ms. Meade.

The board's ruling was automatically appealed to the Navy Board of Review, which will later send a recommendation to Secretary of the Navy H. Lawrence Garrett III for a final decision.

Moon Tillet is befuddled that so many people are opposed to stone jetties that would make the volatile Oregon Inlet a safer place to navigate.

"People say they will be ugly," said the 59-year-old angler whose family operates two 85-foot trawlers and a fish house in Wanchese. "All I know is whenever I was trying to get back in and I saw some jetties, they looked pretty good to me."

Like any commercial fisherman who depends on the inlet for his livelihood, he has survived some close calls.

"The reason it's so dangerous is that it's such shallow water and the ocean bounces against it," he said. "When you come back in, sometimes the water is good and sometimes it's bad."

Tillet fears nothing will be done to stabilize the inlet, which has migrated south about three miles since it was blown open in a major hurricane in 1846.

Experts say the problem has become more acute this decade because of accelerating erosion at the northern tip of Hatteras Island.

In March, storms swept away another 200 acres of the island, threatening the southern leg of the Herbert C. Bonner Bridge. The 2½-mile-long span, built in 1962, provides the only link between the island's 5,000 permanent residents and the mainland. It also is key to the area's $90 million tourism industry. While state and federal officials continue to grapple with a plan to protect the bridge, a far more controversial proposal looms in the background — jetties.

A visit by two members of the U.S. Senate's Environment and Public Works Committee, originally scheduled for today, has been postponed. On a later trip, they will be briefed on the erosion problems on North Carolina's Outer Banks, and will take a flight over the inlet.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., and John H. Chafee, R-R.I., were invited by North Carolina Sens. Jesse Helms and Terry Sanford to see how erosion in Oregon Inlet is threatening the area's lucrative tourism and fishing industries.

Like Gov. Jim Martin, both North Carolina senators are lobbying the Department of Interior to allow the Army Corps of Engineers to construct twin mile-long stone jetties in the inlet at a cost of more than $110 million.

The project was authorized by Congress in 1970, but has been stalled several times. The Department of Interior, which owns the land, has refused to give the Corps the necessary permits to anchor the jetties on seashore property.

Orrin Pilkey Jr., an outspoken marine geologist from Duke University, has led the fight against the jetties, which he referred to as "armoring the shoreline."

Pilkey believes the state's recent efforts to install a groin to protect the Bonner Bridge is actually a ploy to break the stalemate over the jetty project.

Before the $15 million groin project can begin, the state needs the permission of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, an agency of the interior department. The 2,500-foot groin would be anchored on part of the Pea Island National Wildlife Refuge.

"This whole thing has been about the jetties, there's no question about that," Pilkey said. "The dimensions of that thing (groin) are immense 0 175 feet wide at the base and 10 feet above sea level."

"It's tremendous overkill," he said. "What we're talking about is the base to the jetties."

So far, the fish and wildlife service has refused to issue the necessary permits. Earlier this month, the state rejected the agency's alternative plan, which would have called for a seawall along N.C. 12 and the pumping of sand onto the northern tip of the island.

On Friday, state DOT officials traveled to Atlanta to meet with James Pulliam, the southeast regional director of the fish and wildlife service. No agreement was reached, said DOT spokesman Bill Jones, and the officials plan to meet again next week.

Bush Joins Senior Citizen Ranks

By Christopher Connell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — George Bush turns 65 today, only the 13th president in U.S. history to hit that milestone while in office.

Friends and experts say they don't expect his new status as senior citizen to slow down Bush, a trim non-smoker who jogs and plays tennis regularly.

"I've known him for a long time and I've never seen him look better," says White House physician Burton Lee. "Aging is different in all of us and certainly exercise retards it."

Dr. T. Franklin Williams, director of the National Institute on Aging, says, "I don't know anything at all about President Bush's medical history, but just to observe him from a distance I would predict he has 25 or 30 good years ahead of him anyhow."

Bush appears to have both the actuarial tables and genes on his side.

The president's mother, Dorothy Walker Bush, is 87 and living in Greenwich, Conn. His father, the late Sen. Prescott Bush, died in 1972 at age 77.

Bush is just one of 4,000 Americans turning 65 today — and for that matter, every day of the year.

There are 31 million Americans 65 or older now, and there will be 35½ million by the end of the 1990s.

A growing segment of them are living to truly advanced old ages. Williams said the number of American centenarians, now around 25,000, will exceed 100,000 by the turn of the century.

Perhaps because he followed the oldest president in U.S. history, Ronald Reagan, little attention has been paid to Bush's age.

He is 13 years younger than Reagan, who was 77 when he exited the Oval Office.

But at 64, Bush was the fourth oldest man ever inaugurated, behind Reagan (69), William Henry Harrison (68), and James Buchanan (65).

He now is junior to only a dozen presidents, including George Washington, who was nine days past his 65th birthday when he finished his two terms, Thomas Jefferson, who was almost 66, and Dwight D. Eisenhower, who was 70.

If 65 was once the demarcation point of old age, it is no longer clearly so.

The average life expectancy for a man turning 65 is 15 years to 80, and for a woman 18.9 years, or almost 84. Life expectancy at birth is somewhat lower: 71.7 for men and 78.3 for women.

"I don't think old age means very much to an awful lot of people," Williams said in an interview. "There's no inevitable decline with aging."

"We have lots of good research data showing many people live into their 90s in very good health and functioning," he said. "Humans who have a reasonably good lifestyle and are fortunate enough not to have one of the major diseases ... can be essentially as functional in their 80s and 90s as young people."

Williams, who is 67, got a cartoon from his secretary on his 40th birthday "showing a mountain and a person walking down the far side of it."

"I think that was an exaggeration. I think the same thing can be said about 65 now. It's not really the going-down-the-backside-of-the-mountain that we once thought it was," he said.

Sixty-five is still the age at which retired workers can first draw their full Social Security benefits and Medicare hospital insurance.

Bush can't draw Social Security because of his $200,000 salary as president.

Social Security recipients will lose $1 in benefits for every $2 in earnings above $9,360 in 1990. The maximum someone born in 1924 and retiring this year can get from Social Security is $899 a month.

Although Bush gets all the free medical care he wants, he could elect to file for Medicare now. If he fails to do so within three months of his 65th birthday, he may wind up having to pay stiffer premiums in later life for Medicare's doctor coverage.

Marlin Fitzwater, the White House spokesman, said he wasn't sure what the president's plans were for Social Security.

He was spending the milestone birthday unveiling a sweeping proposal to clean up the nation's polluted air, then hopping aboard Air Force One to visit one of America's most pristine settings, the Grand Tetons and Yellowstone National Park in Wyoming.

Utah Supreme Court To Hear Polygamy Case

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SALT LAKE CITY — In this largely Mormon state with a polygamous past, a custody battle has raised old questions on whether a man who has taken several wives can legally adopt children.

The Utah Supreme Court is scheduled to hear oral arguments today in a case involving six children whose mother died of breast cancer after she signed custody to her polygamist husband. The woman's stepsister is also trying to gain custody of the children.

Utah outlawed polygamy in the late 19th century in order to be granted statehood by Congress. Practicing polygamy is a second-degree felony in Utah, although the law has not been actively enforced in more than three decades.

In July 1987, Brenda Thornton moved with her six children from the Salt Lake City suburb of West Jordan to the polygamist community of Hildale near the Utah-Arizona border. She met Vaughn Fischer through a polygamist leader; three hours after the meeting, they married. Two months later, she died of breast cancer.

Before her death, she and Fischer signed a legal document relinquishing custody of her children to the Fischer family. Fischer has two other wives and more than a dozen children.

In the document, Ms. Thornton said she felt Vaughn and Sharane Fischer would be good parents. The children's biological father, Phil Thornton, consented to the release of the children to the Fischers.

But late last year, a judge dismissed an adoption petition filed by the Fischers, though he stayed the decision giving them a chance to appeal. In dismissing the petition, Judge Dean E. Conder said the case centered on one issue: whether the Fischers' polygamist lifestyle should disqualify them from adopting the children, then ranging in age from 5 to 19.

While the case was on appeal, the children continued to live with the Fischers in their 14-bedroom house.

Ms. Thornton's stepsister, Pat Johanson, said the original custody transfer was signed under pressure from the fundamentalists and Ms. Thornton really wanted her to take the children.

Five weeks before Ms. Thornton died, Ms. Johanson moved from her Washington, D.C., home to Hildale to be at her stepsister's bedside. She says that the dying woman confided that she wanted the children out of fundamentalism, but at the same time didn't want to do anything openly, fearing excommunication.

Ms. Johanson also said that the three youngest Thornton children, Julia, Janelle, and Deanne, came forward one at a time to say they did not want to live with the Fischers.

But Steven Snow, attorney for the Fischers, has disputed the deathbed conversations and statements concerning the children.

A friend of the court brief filed by the American Civil Liberties Union of Utah Foundation on behalf of the Fischers argues that polygamy should be permitted in the state.

Polygamy was sanctioned by the early Mormon Church, but after it was banned by the state, the church condemned and distanced itself from the practice. However, some fundamentalist offshoots of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints still believe in the practice.

Minimum Wage Showdown Is Set

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Democratic congressional leaders hope to up the political stakes this week in their struggle with President Bush over the minimum wage, after a lull caused by the shakeup in the House leadership.

It appears inevitable that Congress will lose in its first domestic policy confrontation with Bush if, as expected, he vetoes the legislation raising the minimum wage. But majority Democrats are hoping to emerge with a political issue to use against the president and those who side with him.

The measure won final passage nearly a month ago but has been held at the Capitol for a number of reasons, primarily the changeover in House leadership.

Now, with new House Speaker Thomas S. Foley in place and Democrats hoping to turn the focus on Capitol Hill away from ethics charges, the Democratic leadership has scheduled a public ceremony Tuesday before sending the measure to the White House.

The leaders were meeting today to complete plans for the event, which Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell on Thursday said was designed to "call attention to the issue" one last time before sending the measure to Bush.

It appears Congress will be dealing with the issue again as early as this week.

"We'll turn it around as soon as it gets here," Bush spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Friday, repeating Bush's pledge to veto the measure immediately.

"If the president vetoes it, we will bring it up for a veto override in the House as soon as practical," said Rep. Austin Murphy, D-Pa., a leading House sponsor of the measure.

The legislation headed to the White House would gradually boost the minimum wage to $4.55 an hour by October 1991. Bush offered $4.25 an hour.

The override effort — which could come Wednesday or Thursday — is likely to fail, but Murphy said Foley and other House leaders decided last week that not to make the attempt would be viewed as caving in to Bush.

Such talk underscores the political symbolism that has dominated the minimum wage debate from the outset, when Bush made it clear Congress would have to accept his proposal or see a ninth year pass without an increase in the minimum wage, which has stood at $3.35 an hour since January 1981.

Drug Probe Nabs Calif. Mayor, Wife

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SOUTH LAKE TAHOE, Calif. — Residents of this resort town were stunned to hear their mayor and his wife were among 18 people nabbed in a 20-month undercover drug and money laundering investigation.

Mayor Terry Trupp and his wife, Kim, were taken into custody Sunday for allegedly trying to launder about $750,000 to FBI and Internal Revenue Service agents, the bureau and other agencies announced at a joint news conference.

Later at the South Lake Tahoe police station, authorities displayed a variety of evidence seized during the day. The items included bags of cocaine, $100 bills, shotguns and pistols, and a hollow walking cane with a detachable golden eagle's head that concealed a cocaine vial.

No drugs were seized in the Trupps' arrests, authorities said.

The Trupps, who are being held without bail in an El Dorado County jail, were scheduled for arraignment today before a federal Magistrate. The other people arrested also were being held without bail.

"I'm saddened by the arrest of the mayor, but I think it goes a long way to show that no one is out of the reach of law enforcement and drugs," said Police Chief Dean Shelton.

He added that he was proud his department was one of the agencies involved in the operation.

Neva Roberts, mayor pro tem of this city of about 30,000, said she was "stunned beyond measurement" by Trupp's arrest.

"The city has suffered a deep, deep wound," she said.

"I think we'll find a great deal of surprise here," said Del Laine, a former mayor. "But we'll have to leave the process to the legal efforts of law enforcement and the justice system."

Seventeen of those arrested were taken into custody Sunday, and one was arrested Friday, police and agents of the FBI, IRS, and Drug Enforcement Administration said. Two fugitives also are being sought.

All are suspected of being involved in cocaine trafficking or efforts to launder money from drug sales, authorities said.

Trupp was first elected to the City Council in 1978, and was chosen by his fellow council members to be mayor in 1981, 1982 and 1989. His term as mayor expires at the end of the month, and his term on the council ends in 1990. Trupp has said he would not seek re-election.

Trupp allegedly laundered $108,000 for IRS undercover agents last August, said Steven Giorgi, the

Methanol Fire Allowed To Burn

PLAQUEMINE, La. (AP) — A 2.5 million-gallon tank of methanol set afire by lightning continued to burn Sunday as officials allowed it to burn itself out.

"According to what they say, it should be burned out before daylight," said Iberville Parish Sheriff's Deputy Roy Hebert.

"The tank is folding in as the fire burns itself down," Hugh Lansford,

Railroad Station Blast Fatal To 7

By Dilip Ganguly
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW DELHI, India — A time bomb exploded in a crowded passenger hall at the capital's main railroad station today, killing at least seven people and injuring 54 others, police said.

Twelve of the injured lost arms or legs, the police control center said.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility.

"I heard a very loud sound and then saw smoke, blood and limbs around me," said Ramesh Kumar, who was in the hall but escaped injury. "It was like hell. I thought I was seeing a bad bloody movie."

Blood from the victims, many of whom were waiting to board trains for summer vacations, splattered the hall's 60-foot high ceiling and at least a 100-square-foot section of the floor.

"It was a time bomb and a very, very powerful one," Police Commissioner Rajindra Mohan said at the scene.

He said forensic experts had recovered a portion of the bomb that contained an intact battery cell and nuts and bolts, which would have spewed out with deadly force.

The bomb left a crater about one foot deep and two feet in diameter in the station floor.

Sandals, sunglasses, cooked rice and half-eaten bread were strewn across the floor, blown by the force of the blast or dropped by panicked people.

Here and there were the bodies of pigeons, who normally roost on the ceiling's lights.

Mohan said waiting passengers often lie or sleep on the floor of the hall, and he said many more people might have been killed had they been standing when the bomb went off.

New Delhi's 32,000 police were put on alert. The city government broadcast warnings against touching objects left in public places.

The city's exit routes were blocked. Vehicles leaving the capital were checked.

Mohan declined to say who might have been behind the bombing.

The Press Trust of India quoted a witness, Pawan Kumar, as saying he saw a man with a mustache ask someone to watch his briefcase and a wooden crate while he went to get a drink of water. A few minutes later the bomb exploded in the same spot, the news agency quoted Kumar as saying.

Railways Minister Madhavrao Scindia, asked if he thought the blast was the work of Sikh extremists who set off a series of bombs in the capital in 1985, said: "I will not rule out

The Associated Press

A body lies partially covered, possessions littering the floor, after New Delhi bomb blast the involvement of terrorism. It looks like the job can only be done by them."

Scindia would not say whether he was referring to Sikhs. The government routinely speaks only of "terrorists" when referring to Sikh radicals, whose campaign for a separate homeland has claimed about 850 lives this year in northern Punjab state.

The last major Sikh attack in New Delhi occurred nearly a year ago. Four people were killed and more than 40 wounded on June 20, 1988, when Sikh militants hurled a grenade into a crowded outdoor market.

In 1985 a series of bombs, often concealed in transistor radios, killed at least 87 people in the capital.

The bomb at the station went off at 10:35 a.m., a peak hour at the station when most trains from eastern India arrive in New Delhi.

From 600 to 700 people were in the passenger hall at the time.

Official Meets Monk With POW Data

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — A U.S. official met a Japanese monk who claims to have shared a room with U.S. prisoners of war in Vietnam, and information from the meeting is being sent to Washington for analysis, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said today.

The U.S. representative met twice during his stay in northern Japan Sunday and today with Iwanobu Yoshida, a Buddhist monk who was freed in January after 14 years' imprisonment in Vietnam, embassy spokesman Karl Olsson said.

Olsson refused to specify what was discussed or how long the sessions were. He said the content of the meetings was being passed on to Washington for further analysis.

The U.S. official met Yoshida at a hospital in Sapporo, on Japan's northernmost main island of Hokkaido. Yoshida, 65, suffers from mental disorders and a speech impediment, a hospital spokesman said.

In the past week, Japanese news reports and Yoshida's daughter, Keiko Takatsuka, have said he saw several Americans in the re-education camp where he was held and that he shared a cell with three of them.

Ms. Takatsuka, who was not immediately available for comment on the meeting, has said her father does not remember the names of the three held in his cell, but that they were "young and healthy."

The Vietnamese Embassy in Tokyo denies the claims. Vietnam has said repeatedly that it does not hold any American prisoners from the Vietnam War.

After becoming a monk in 1966, Yoshida emigrated to Vietnam, where he set up a temple in Saigon, now Ho Chi Minh City. He became a South Vietnamese citizen in 1973.

Soviet Troops Kill 2, Block Camp Attack

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — An armed mob in Uzbekistan tried to storm a refugee camp where minority Turks sought safety from ethnic violence, but troops killed two of the assailants and drove the others off, Pravda reported today.

The account in the Communist Party daily was the first official report of troops killing rioters in more than a week of arson and murder in the Central Asian republic.

The rampage has claimed the lives of 100 people, most of them Meskhi Turks, and driven nearly 15,000 into primitive refugee camps, official media say.

More than 9,000 Interior Ministry troops brought into the Fergana Valley have failed to halt attacks by increasingly well-organized and armed gangs of marauders, officials said.

Authorities have had to airlift hundreds of the refugees out of danger.

In a sign of extreme concern about the violence, the Communist Party's ruling Politburo today dispatched Premier Nikolai I. Ryzhkov and former KGB chief Viktor M. Chebrikov, the party's current top law-and-order official, to the region, Tass reported.

Col. Y. Nechayev of the Interior Ministry told Pravda that about 400 "extremists" mounted a column of vehicles Saturday evening and tried to reach a camp housing almost 2,000 Meskhi Turk refugees in the mountains near the city of Kokand, about 1,500 miles southeast of Moscow.

Four helicopters full of soldiers landed in their path to stop the column and two attackers were killed and five wounded in a shootout, Pravda said. The remaining attackers escaped into the darkness, it added.

All 1,990 of the refugees in the attacked camp have been flown to safer quarters in the central Soviet Union, Pravda said.

Soviet troops last were reported to have killed civilians in a clash with pro-independence protesters in Georgia on April 9. At least 20 people died in unrest in the southern republic. Georgian activists have said the protesters were unarmed, but the Uzbek mobs are reported to have automatic weapons, firebombs, stones and pitchforks.

Reports conflict over the reasons for the prolonged rioting. Much of the violence has been directed against the Meskhi Turks, who were forcibly deported to the area from their homeland in Georgia in 1944.

But police stations, government buildings and stores have also been attacked.

Interior Ministry officials have blamed the attacks on outside agitators who came pouring into the valley in cars and trucks. Minister Vadim Bakatin called them opponents of President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's reforms, which have included a crackdown on high-level corruption in Uzbekistan.

Air Show Features Devices To Detect Plastic Explosives

By Sydney Rubin
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PARIS — New security systems capable of detecting plastic explosives were displayed by two U.S. companies at the Paris Air Show, the first international air exposition since the December bombing of a Pan Am jetliner.

The Federal Aviation Administration invited the companies to show the technology, on the market for the first time this spring, during the 10-day gathering at Le Bourget airport north of Paris.

In recent years, searches, metal detectors and X-ray machines have become routine at airports, and the number of hijackings has declined. But passenger planes remain vulnerable to hidden devices.

It takes less than a pound of plastic explosive, the size of a chocolate bar, to bring down a jumbo jet. The deadly material can be molded into shapes that are easy to hide.

Such an explosive hidden in a radiocassette player is believed to have caused the death of 275 passengers and crew who were aboard Pan Am flight 103, which fell in pieces onto the Scottish village of Lockerbie in December.

Thermedics Inc. of Woburn, Mass., came up with a "sniffer" that detects chemical vapors. The $125,000 hand-held sniffer, called EGIS, is a computerized chemical analyzer with programmed rules, called algorithms.

"If you look at the last 15 incidents of bombing or attempted bombing, in six of them the bomb found its way into the aircraft cabin," said Thermedics President John W. Wood Jr. on Sunday. "This illustrates the need to screen people and carry on bags as well as checked luggage."

Thermedics has developed a second sniffer that is about a year away from the marketplace. It is called SecurScan and works on the same principle as EGIS but is designed as a walk-through chamber similar to the now common metal detector.

A second new device is being shown by Science International Applications Corp. of Santa Clara, Calif. Their apparatus is called a thermal neutron activation, or TNA and sells for $900,000.

Baggage passes on a conveyor belt through a chamber where it is showered with neutrons that react when exposed to nitrogen, the chemical emitted by virtually all explosives. The reaction produces a scattering of gamma rays, a sort of chemical fingerprint that is analyzed by a computer.

Six units have been purchased by the FAA for installation at New York's Kennedy Airport and London's Gatwick and 12 others will be installed in high-risk airports in the United States and overseas.

Foreign Policy On Gorbachev's W. Germany Agenda

By Mark J. Porubcansky
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BONN, West Germany — Mikhail S. Gorbachev arrived today for his first state visit to West Germany with the aim of strengthening ties between East and West, an objective that goes to the heart of this divided nation.

The Soviet president and his delegation touched down at Cologne-Bonn airport a few minutes ahead of their scheduled arrival in an Aeroflot jet dubbed "Kremlin One."

Gorbachev and his wife, Raisa, emerged from the plane and stood solemnly for a 21-gun salute before descending to the tarmac to be greeted by Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher.

The Kremlin entourage set off in a motorcade of ZIL limousines for a quick stop at the Soviet Embassy in the suburb of Bad Godesberg before heading to official welcoming ceremonies at Villa Hammerschmidt, the residence of President Richard von Weizsaecker.

During his four-day visit to West Germany, Gorbachev leaves behind rioting in the Central Asian republic of Uzbekistan and two weeks of sharp debate in the new Congress over political power and economic failures.

His talks with West German officials will give him a chance to concentrate on foreign policy, his area of greatest success in four years in power, and the technology and financial help needed to modernize the Soviet economy.

Gorbachev's agenda includes meetings with scientific and business leaders and factory tours.

Gorbachev says Germany is at the center of what he calls "our common European home." Public opinion polls in West Germany have found him to be the most popular foreign leader ever.

Soviet officials, speaking at a briefing Sunday in Bonn, said that the Western allies need not fear that Gorbachev might try to woo West Germany to unite with Communist East Germany in a neutral entity.

Georgy A. Arbatov, head of the Kremlin's U.S.A.-Canada Institute, said the division of Europe is unnatural but "it's up to Germany to decide its political status."

"We're not exerting any behind-the-scenes pressure."

He said the Soviet Union, instead of imposing solutions on its Eastern European allies, is committed to accept reforms in countries such as Poland and Hungary to solve problems that have been festering for years.

Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady I. Gerasimov was asked about European fears of German-Soviet cooperation similar to the Hitler-Stalin non-aggression pact signed just before the Nazis started World War II by invading Poland.

He replied, "Three things have changed since 1940. First, the Soviet Union has changed. Second, Germany has changed. Third, the world has changed. How can you make comparisons?"

West Germany is NATO's frontline state facing the Warsaw Pact alliance and Chancellor Helmut Kohl has pressed the Western allies to accept Gorbachev's proposal for immediate talks to eliminate short-range nuclear missiles. Most of the weapons are on German soil.

The United States and Britain disagreed with Kohl but a compromise was reached at last month's North Atlantic Treaty Organization summit in Brussels. The alliance agreed to a proposal by President Bush to couple negotiations on short-range missiles with progress on reduction of conventional forces. Gorbachev offered in May to withdraw 500 Soviet nuclear weapons, but Soviet officials said it was unlikely he would come to Bonn with a response to the Bush proposal.

"For about five months the Bush administration wouldn't answer our proposals," Arbatov said. "Then they make a proposal and expect an answer right away."

Rebel Leader Returns Home To Join Fight

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — Contra rebel leader Alfredo Cesar has ended seven years of exile and returned home to join the political battle against the Sandinista government.

Cesar's return on Sunday follows that of two other Contra leaders over the past two weeks. Both signed an amnesty document saying they do not support armed struggle against the leftist Sandinistas.

Cesar said he came to Nicaragua "to devote myself exclusively to the civic political fight." He would not say if he had resigned as one of seven directors of the Nicaraguan Resistance, the organization of the U.S.-backed Contras.

"I bring a message of hope, that we should prepare, that the fight ahead of us in the electoral arena is a vital struggle for Nicaragua ... and that we are going to win if we organize well," Cesar told reporters at the Managua international airport after arriving from Miami via Guatemala.

The 38-year-old Cesar said he would join the Social Democratic Party but would not seek an elective post in general elections scheduled for February.

Cesar was president of the Central Bank when he left the country on April 25, 1982. He had lived in Miami, where the Nicaraguan Resistance is based.

Nine other exiles and Contra members returned on a commercial flight about one hour before Cesar arrived on a small jet that his wife, Sylvia Lacayo de Cesar, said was provided by the Venezuelan government.

The other opposition leaders who recently returned are Azucena Ferrey, who resigned as member of the directorate last fall, and Fernando Aguero, who helped negotiate a temporary cease-fire between the Contras and the Sandinistas in March 1988.

The United States cut off military aid to the rebels a month earlier and most Contra fighters fled to camps in neighboring Honduras.

Ads And Computers Replace Matchmakers

By Nilova Roy
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW DELHI, India — Newspaper advertisements and computers are replacing traditional matchmakers among the literate classes in India, where brides and grooms rarely choose their own spouses.

Every Sunday the newspapers are filled with classified ads inviting inquiries about "smart, well-educated, professional boys" and "really beautiful, homely, university graduate girls."

"Homely," in Indian matrimonial ad English, means someone who would make a good wife, mother and housekeeper.

It did not seem odd to Saswati, a 28-year-old executive in a multinational firm, that her parents inserted a classified ad to find her a husband.

"They asked if I had someone in mind I wanted to marry," Saswati said, insisting that her last name not be used. "When I said no, they proposed an advertisement in the newspaper. Frankly, I had no objections. It gave me a wider choice."

"There was a special caste of matchmakers in earlier times, called 'ghataks,'" said Arati Simal, a social scientist. "They were welcomed, respected and given pride of place wherever they visited, because every household had someone eligible for matrimony."

Annu Kurien, a sociologist who found her husband through the matrimonial columns, said: "The image of the matchmaker is so deeply ingrained in the minds of even modern urban Indian youth that when newspapers replaced the 'ghatak' as matchmaker, they assumed a popularity the 'ghatak' could not aspire for."

The phenomenon is not confined to Indians in the country.

Sanjit, a 34-year-old engineer who recently visited New Delhi, has lived in the United States since he was 12.

His family received 103 responses when they inserted this ad in The Times of India: "Alliance invited for smart, Bengali Hindu engineer, 34, 185 cms (6 feet), settled in the United States, music addict, no encumbrances."

Sanjit's family narrowed the list to seven and started negotiations, writing or calling families of the women.

Sanjit, who also didn't want his last name used, said he hopes his family will find the right woman so he can get married when he returns to India in six months.

children in a bid to retain traditional values and roots," said O.P. Sharma, chief of advertisements at The Hindustan Times, a conservative English-language newspaper famed for carrying the most matrimonial columns.

"The Hindustan Times was the first newspaper in north India to begin carrying matrimonials in the early 1970s," Sharma said.

"We now run over 4,500 such advertisements a month, and the number is increasing. Very few advertisements are repeated, an indication that the success rate is high."

The Hindustan Times charges six rupees (37 cents) a word for matrimonials and gets 48 percent of its classified advertising revenue from them, Sharma said.

"Monthly, this means an income of approximately 1.2 million rupees ($80,000)," Sharma said.

The Hindustan Times also runs a computerized matchmaking service called "Life Partners," which is offered free to advertisers.

Names rarely appear in the ads, and most advertisers receive their answers in special mail boxes at the newspapers.

An advertising executive at The Times of India, which runs about 2,000 matrimonials a month, said the number of responses varies from one to hundreds.

"Non-resident Indians and green card (U.S. work permit) holders attract a greater number of people," said Narayani Mantoo.

"The phenomenon of matrimonial advertisements is predominantly urban," she added. "More than 95 percent of our clients come from cities."

Cities have the highest concentrations of newspaper readers in a country where about 43 percent of the 880 million people are literate. Most of the ads are placed by Hindus, who account for 80 percent of the population, but Sikhs, Christians and Moslems use them as well.

A social scientist interpreted the phenomenon of matrimonial advertisements as a sign that urban Indian society was in transition but unable to cast off deeply ingrained cultural customs.

"The disintegration in the traditional joint family framework brought around, perforce, a more impersonal, unitary concept of family," said Manisha Bahl at the Center for Women's Development Studies.

"Personal contacts have been replaced by the impersonal advertisement in a newspaper or agency to bring about the desired union," she said.

Words From Heart Help Husband Cope

Dear Abby: Shortly after I had my mastectomy about nine years ago, I read something in your column that helped me handle it, and I'm sure it helped many other women who read it.

Please print it so that more women will have the opportunity to reflect on it and find the comfort that I found. — A.G.T., Tampa

Dear Abby: Last spring, my best friend and my lover, my wife of 22 years, had a mastectomy. I enclose the poem she wrote while she was still in the hospital. It is too beautiful not to share with others who may find it inspirational. Sign me ... Her Husband, Richard, Or In Love In Virginia

"The room smells of roses and Russell Stovers.

"Some foreign arm has been taped to my shoulder.

"The nurses make no sound. (Polyester doesn't rustle.)

"The Metropolitan Opera did 'Faust' for me today on radio. Demerol did the staging. I wish you could have seen it!

"When I open my indolent eyes, the people who love me are searching my face to see how they should feel.

"All the words I can say are so old, so used, so familiar. How I would love to be brilliant!

"As soon as I know anything, I know that I am fine. This is not a catastrophe — it's only an inconvenience.

"If this is a master plan to make me realize how many people love me, I do.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

"If this is a grand design to elicit promises of preserving my health, I will.

"If there is no plan to this at all, I'm making it so.

"I'm planning to work and play better.

"I'm planning to appreciate the people who make me feel good about myself.

"I'm planning to savor splendid moments, and put hurt in the far corners of my mind.

"Inhale your acrimonious tears; I'm planning not to need them."

— Sally W. Cook, Richmond, Va.

Dear Richard and Sally: Thank you for a real "upper."

Dear Abby: Some time ago, you ran a letter signed "Daddy's Girl," who said her mother had to work two jobs because her father failed to pay child support. She also complained because she saw so little of her mother.

Well, that letter really hit home with me. I am also a single parent. I have three children who live with me. I also work two jobs and am unable to spend as much time with my kids as I would like to.

I am their father, and I do not get one dime from their mother to help support these children. Please be fair and print this. — Mr. Mom From Manor, Texas

DAR Chapter Celebrates 10 Years At Dinner

A 10th anniversary dinner was held by the Susanna Coutanch Evans chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, Thursday at the Greenville Country Club.

The chapter was organized May 17, 1979, at a meeting held at the home of Mrs. J.B. Barringer. It was named for a widow who donated a parcel of land for the town of Martinborough in 1772 — which later became Greenville.

During the past 10 years, the chapter has received honor roll recognition from the National Society for nine years and has participated in many local and state historical, patriotic and education projects.

Founding or charter members told of the chapter's progress. Speakers included Doris Ballangee, the group's first regent, and Dr. Mildred Southwick, Sally Thompson, Phyllis McLane, Nancy Whitlow, Elizabeth Winstead, Anne Briley and Christine Waters.

A highlight of the anniversary was the installation of new officers including Francine Rees, regent. She will be assisted by Mrs. Winstead, vice regent; Dr. Southwick, chaplain; Charlotte Bauer, recording secretary; Ann Storms, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Thompson, treasurer; Mrs. Dallangee, registrar; Nancy Whitlow, historian, and Mrs. Briley, librarian.

Mrs. Briley, outgoing regent, was presented a silver DAR spoon as a gift from the chapter.

Scrapbooks with photographs and items showing chapter activities were displayed.

Nurse Never Tires Of Work

By Melinda Gholson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HATTIESBURG, Miss. — Chester McLaughlin loves doughnuts and Kentucky Fried Chicken and football.

But the casual visitor to his apartment would have trouble discovering his likes and dislikes, because McLaughlin is deaf, mute and legally blind.

Cindy Forrester knows, though. The Forrest County Health Department nurse can tell you that McLaughlin is an intelligent college graduate. He likes to take walks on Hardy Street; and he has gained 20 pounds in the last few months.

She makes home visits to McLaughlin and other long-term patients as part of her nursing job.

McLaughlin was born deaf. His eyesight was damaged six to eight years ago and doctors have guessed that the cause was a light stroke. Laser surgery has helped repair some of the damage to his eyes.

Because of the barriers to communication, McLaughlin was a special challenge for nurse Forrester, who lives in Moselle.

"He's not the type person that can really make friends easy," Forrester said of McLaughlin. "I just sort of hit it off with him."

McLaughlin, a graduate of Galaudet University, was assigned to Health Department care months ago, after he had had one lung removed in surgery. During his recuperation, Forrester visited her charge regularly to monitor blood pressure and give medication.

"I was going to see him every day and there was no way to communicate with him unless I learned sign language," Forrester said. So she did.

Now she converses with McLaughlin with finger-spelled conversation about sports events or other happenings. His vision has improved during his recuperation and he can read up-close sign language communication.

The sessions between the two have been reduced to about once every two weeks due to the McLaughlin's dramatic improvement.

McLaughlin's brother, James McLaughlin of Hattiesburg, commended Forrester's nursing expertise in a letter to the Mississippi Nurses' Association.

"Her patience, understanding and comforting presence has completely changed Chester's attitude, which was despair, to a now hopeful knowledge that he will conquer his illness and regain his health. She has ... created a friendship which will be enduring to Chester forever, by him now knowing somebody else cares and will take the time to enter his world of silence," James W. McLaughlin wrote.

Creating a nurse-patient friendship is almost routine for Forrester, who takes the problems of her patients to heart.

"He's like a member of my family almost," Forrester says. "We've gotten that close."

Other patients she has attended during her five years as a nurse have also become friends. "I get so intense with them. Then I have to stop it, and that's bad," Forrester said.

She once helped a patient pay an electric bill, and she often directs her patients to other resource centers for financial or medical help. But sooner or later, she must move on to other patients and other crises.

The most difficult part of her career is "having to find a stopping point, having to say I can't help them anymore," Forrester says.

"I can't do everything for everybody ... I'm just one person."

The experience of nursing is still fresh for her, after five years on the job, Forrester said. "As you get older you learn more about life," she said.

Two Try Revamping Moonshiner's Cave

By Harrison Metzger
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHIMNEY ROCK, N.C. — Retired liquor enforcement agent Fred Hennessee and explorer Susan Holler recently combined their skills to revamp Moonshiner's Cave, a popular attraction at Chimney State Park.

Located at the base of Chimney Rock, the cave has housed several moonshining exhibits over the years, none of them authentic stills. Spotlights used to illuminate past exhibits failed to display the full visual impact of the 68-foot-deep granite chasm, Ms. Holler said.

Now, thanks to Ms. Holler's cave-lighting experience and Hennessee's knowledge of moonshining, visitors can see the full depth and height of Moonshiner's Cave, and view what Hennessee calls a genuine "Snuffy Smith-type" still.

Ms. Holler, a 44-year-old professional cave consultant from Marion, has worked on six cave-lighting promotion projects and explored caves around the globe. A full-time advocate of caves and their misunderstood residents — bats — she is also a volunteer natural science teacher in McDowell County Schools.

"My job is to light caves, protect the (cave) environment, and whoever the owner of the cave is, to see that they get the most out of it," she said.

Hennessee, a 63-year-old Morganton resident, is a retired law enforcement officer who worked for the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board in Burke County for 25 years. During his days as an ABC agent, he spent most of his time hunting and destroying illegal stills.

In January, Ms. Holler spent 16 days installing lighting throughout the cave, while Hennessee worked with state and federal officials to obtain the still. Both are excited about their efforts and were eager to share the experience with a young couple from the North Carolina coast who visited the cave for the first time.

"This type distillery is not for high production — but you could produce high-quality liquor on this because it's copper all the way through," Hennessee said.

Moonshiner's Cave is a tectonic cave — a nearly vertical fissure in the mountainside created when ice and earth movement split the huge granite blocks beneath Chimney Rock. The age of the cave is unknown.

Ms. Holler, whose car sports a bumper sticker proclaiming "I Love Bats," made sure her work didn't disrupt bats, spiders and fungi that live in the cave.

"When you enter the cave, you're entering a self-contained ecosystem, and we wanted to protect that," she said.

Ms. Holler said two species of tiny bats inhabit the cave during the warmer months — pipestills and small-footed myotis. The bats are harmless to humans and help control insects, consuming up to one-half their weight in bugs every night, she said.

Working in the cave's 52-degree constant temperature, Ms. Holler installed a set of unobtrusive lights hidden behind rock-like protrusions she created and attached to the granite walls. Unlike the previous lighting, these lights cast their light upwards, exposing the height of the cave.

Ms. Holler also installed a floor grate in the cave's wooden platform and installed a light beneath it to illuminate the depth of the fissure beneath visitors' feet.

At the back of the cave, behind an antique jail door, visitors can see the still and several moonshine jugs.

Hennessee, who retired from ABC Board last year, isn't sure where the still came from or how long ago it was operated. The still's solid-copper pot and tubing indicates it is "one of the original types used since frontier days," he said.

"It's not operative as it's set up now, but it's a genuine still that operated in the past and produced either non-taxed whiskey or gasohol, which is made by basically the same process," he said.

Although there are no records of stills being operated in Moonshiner's Cave, Ms. Holler says that moonshiners were known to have operated in other caves in Hickory Nut Gorge.

"Back when distilling was legal, the roads that went through Hickory Nut Gorge were dirt, and if you had a rain, it was very difficult to get out with a horse and wagon," she said.

"In order to get their crops to market, they (farmers) had to distill them or they would have faced an economic crisis."

She said that corn, apples and fruit can all be used to make distilled spirits.

During a recent steam-cleaning, park maintenance workers removed smoke stains from the cave's walls. The stains indicate the cave may have once housed a still, she said.

Hennessee and Ms. Holler agree that the still that now occupies Moonshiner's Cave is a "museum-quality piece."

"I think it's a beautiful still and we're lucky to have it," Ms. Holler said.

BETHEL — Mrs. Kathleen W. Briley, 69, died today. Arrangements will be announced by the Ayres-Gray Funeral Home.

Ford
FARMVILLE — A funeral for Ms. Lillie Mae Ford will be held at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday at St. Matthew Free Will Baptist Church by Elder Marvin Taylor. Burial will be in Sunset Memorial Gardens, Farmville.

A native of Greene County, she had lived most of her life in the Farmville community and was a member of St. Matthew Church.

Family visitation will be today from 6 p.m. to 7 p.m. at the home of John Reid, 816 S. Main Street, Farmville.

Arrangements are by Flanagan Funeral Home in Greenville.

Gaddy
GRIFTON — Mr. Richard H. "Dick" Gaddy Sr., 54, died Friday.

His funeral will be conducted Tuesday at 2 p.m. in the Wilkerson Funeral Chapel by the Rev. David Cox. Burial will be in Evergreen Memorial Estates with Masonic Rites.

Mr. Gaddy, a native of Roanoke, Va., lived his early life in the Micro community of Johnston County and attended what is now Campbell University. For the past 35 years he had been an employee of DuPont, where he was a supervisor in the powerplant. He also had operated Dick's Roofing and Siding for 25 years. He was a 32nd Degree Mason and a member of the Grifton Masonic Lodge No. 243, AF&AM.

He is survived by two sons, Richard H. Gaddy Jr., and Jeffrey M. Gaddy, both of Grifton; two brothers, Carl Gaddy of Raleigh and Robert Gaddy of Grifton; a sister, Ruth Mehallis of Miami, Fla., and four grandsons.

The family will receive friends at the funeral home today from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. and other times will be at the home of Bob Gaddy, Merle Lane, Forest Acres, Grifton.

Grant
Mrs. Emma Shackelford Grant died Sunday in Orlando, Fla. Arrangements will be announced by Flanagan Funeral Home in Greenville.

Moye
Mrs. Addie J. House Moye, 85, died Sunday.

A graveside service will be conducted Tuesday at 11 a.m. at Greenwood Cemetery by the Rev. Glenn Evans.

Mrs. Moye, a native of Pitt County, was a former employee of JC Penney Co. in Greenville and Norfolk, Va. She lived in Washington, D.C., and also resided in Virginia Beach, Va., for 15 years prior to returning to Pitt County in 1984. She was a member of the Christian Church of Virginia Beach.

Survivors include two brothers, E. Frank House of Greenville and Thomas R. House of Stokes.

The family will receive friends at Wilkerson Funeral Home from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. today.

Newton
Mr. William David Newton of 112 Tyson St. died today in Pitt County Memorial Hospital. Arrangements will be announced by Flanagan Funeral Home in Greenville.

Reynolds
SALISBURY — Mr. John Ozment Reynolds III, 18, of 23 Hanover Court died Sunday from injuries suffered in an automobile accident in Cheraw, S.C.

His funeral will be conducted Tuesday at 2 p.m. at First Presbyterian Church in Salisbury. Burial will follow in City Memorial Park.

A Chapel Hill native, he was an honor graduate of Salisbury High School in 1988. He was an Eagle Scout, a PTA Scholar, a junior ROTarian, a member of National Honor Society and the Key Club. He was a National Merit Scholarship nominee and attended Governor's School. He was a rising sophomore at Davidson College, where he was a Stewart Scholar nominee and a member of Kappa Sigma fraternity.

He was a United National Studies Scholar and a member of First Presbyterian Church in Salisbury.

He previously worked as a counselor at Camp Sea Gull in Arapahoe and as a summer intern at the VA Medical Center in Salisbury.

Survivors include his parents, John Ozment Reynolds Jr. and Patricia Matthews Reynolds of Salisbury; a brother, Chancellor M. Reynolds of Salisbury; maternal grandparents, Chlota Matthews of Salisbury and Dr. Murray Matthews of Kingsport, Tenn., and paternal grandfather, Dr. John O. Reynolds of Greenville.

The family will receive friends today from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. at Summerst Funeral Home.

Memorials may be made to the John O. Reynolds III Scholarship Fund, Salisbury High School, in care of Security Bank, Box 2189, 215 S. Main St., Salisbury, N.C., 28144.

Permits Are Issued

issues certificates, applications are screened to see if the job is appropriate," he said. "This prevents, up-front, kids from getting into jobs they shouldn't be working in — ones that may be hazardous or detrimental to them."

Any youth interested in employment must go to the county social service offices and fill out a N.C. Department of Labor Youth Employment Certificate which requires the youth's name, address, social security number, the name of the employer and a job description. The employer's signature is also required.

The back of the certificate provides general information concerning the employment for youths under 18.

The list of prohibited employment is extensive. Prohibited employment includes "work in manufacturing, construction and occupations involving the use of power-driven machinery, roofing operations and any process where quartz or any form of silicon dioxide or asbestos silicate is present in powdered form."

The certificate is then reviewed by the social service office.

"We make sure certificates are not issued to children applying for jobs which are not approved for their ages," Worthington said. "We also verify their age by birth certificates, bible records, insurance policies or driver's licenses."

In the event of a violation, the certificate is recalled and the employer is notified, according to Worthington.

"We have very few recalls a year, maybe four or five," she said.

The Department of Labor enforces the youth employment laws by conducting periodic inspections and issuing penalties for violations, according to a report released by State Labor Commissioner, John Brooks.

Harris said one of the most frequent violations is the failure to require the youth to get the work permit.

"These are violations found when reviewing permits and when we are out on investigations," Harris said.

"14- and 15-year-olds cannot work in construction — that, sometimes, we catch," he said.

Joanne Rodgers, the receptionist at the social services department, issues and receives youth employment certificates. She recalls at least one difficult situation.

"One young girl applied for a certificate to work in a lab in the East Carolina School of Medicine where lab animals are kept," Rodgers said. "We could not issue her a work permit until we checked with the lab to make sure she would not be cleaning out the cages."

According to N.C. Wage and Hour Act, youths under 18 may not work with the "handling of unsterilized hides or animal or human hair."

Hours and time standards further restrict 14- and 15-year-olds.

According to the Wage and Hour

Act, they may not "be employed during school hours, except as provided for in work-experience and career explorations programs; before 7 a.m. or after 7 p.m., except 9 p.m. from June 1 through Labor Day; more than 3 hours on a school day; more than 8 hours a day on nonschool days, more than 13 hours a week in school weeks and more than 40 hours a week in nonschool weeks."

Currently there are no restrictions on the amount of hours 16- and 17-year-olds an work, according to Harris. But there are some bills pending which are trying to deal with the youth drop-out problem.

"One has died, which was solely addressed to working hours of 16- and 17-year-olds," Harris said.

"Another dealt with raising the mandatory school attendance age so students couldn't drop until they were 18.

"Then to put restrictions on working hours," he said. "This has now been sent to appropriations because it has budgetary implications."

momentum and found support among workers and intellectuals.

Official media told people to study senior leader Deng Xiaoping's speech Friday that praised the army for crushing the 7-week-old, pro-democracy movement. Deng claimed the movement's leaders intended to turn communist China into a capitalist republic.

National television repeatedly showed scenes of one man, identified as a leader of an independent labor union in Shanghai, who had apparently been beaten and was being held at gunpoint by police.

His face was swollen so badly he could barely open his eyes.

Broadcasts also showed the arrests of dozens of other people, many described as "thugs" who took advantage of the movement to commit crimes during protests that hit more than a dozen Chinese cities.

The propaganda assault and heavy troop presence in Beijing have ended nationwide protests that broke out after the capital was occupied by troops.

Trabert Can Finally Rest Easy Now

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PARIS — Tony Trabert can finally relax. After 34 years of being asked why no other American could match his feat of winning the French Open men's singles title, Michael Chang put the matter to rest once and for all on Sunday.

And Trabert was there to witness it.

The 17-year-old Chang, running and skidding with ease on the red clay that has proved to be a graveyard for so many Americans before him, beat Stefan Edberg of Sweden 6-1, 3-6, 4-6, 6-4, 6-2.

"I'm really happy for him," said Trabert, who broadcast the match for Australian television. "I thought he played extremely well."

"I didn't have anything to do with it, but every year I get calls around the time of the French asking me if any American will do it," he said. "At least that's over now."

Trabert, who did not speak with Chang before the match, said he wasn't sad about losing his place in history.

"To me, it wasn't a record," he said. "It's been a lot of fun."

Until Chang came along, five Americans since Trabert had reached the final in Paris only to lose. The most recent was John McEnroe, who blew a two-set lead and lost to Ivan Lendl in 1984.

"McEnroe should have won it that year," Trabert said. "I honestly didn't think anybody would do it this year after McEnroe pulled out with an injury."

"I thought if anybody had a chance it would be (Andre) Agassi, but I didn't think he could do it physically. I certainly didn't think Michael would win it at the beginning of the tournament."

But as the 15th-seeded Chang marched through the field, knocking off top-seeded Lendl along the way in a fourth-round match for the ages, Trabert became a believer. He even predicted on the air before Sunday's match that Chang would beat Edberg.

Rudd Avoided The Thump

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SONOMA, Calif. — Ricky Rudd kept glancing in his rearview mirror, waiting for the inevitable thump that could send his car sliding off the track and out of contention.

Rusty Wallace was right behind the leader late in Sunday's Banquet Foods 300-kilometer race, and Rudd knew Wallace was getting ready to make his move on the treacherous 2.52-mile, 11-turn Sears Point International Raceway circuit.

"I was expecting to get some kind of shot," Rudd said. "He gave me a shot in the rear at Watkins Glen, trying to turn me around."

Rudd was referring to the race last August at Watkins Glen, N.Y., where he survived a bump from the trailing Wallace in the final turn that turned both cars sideways. Rudd won that one by less than two car-lengths.

This time, Wallace tried to be more subtle when he made his move after the last of three caution periods, just four laps from the end of the 74-lap race.

"He sort of surprised me," Rudd said of Wallace, who darted to the outside on the slow right-handed seventh turn. "He outraked me into the corner. I was guarding the inside and he went outside, stood on the gas and surprised me by getting up alongside me."

"He was where I wanted to be, so I just moved over."

Rudd slid to the outside of the turn, bumped Wallace and sent the challenger off the racing surface and onto the grass.

Wallace recovered but never was able to get into position for another move on the flying leader.

"I never really ran my car 100 percent all day until 10 laps from the

Chang Ends Drought 17-Year Old Claims French Open

PARIS — Don Budge, Don McNeill, Frank Parker, Budge Patty, Tony Trabert. And now, at long last, Michael Chang.

After 34 years of being mired in the slow red clay of Paris, the United States finally has another French Open men's champion. But it took a 17-year-old in only his second year as a pro to do it.

Chang's five-set victory over Stefan Edberg Sunday made him the sixth American to win the title and the first since Trabert's 1955 success.

At 17 years, three months, Chang also was the youngest-ever male winner of a Grand Slam tournament, beating by six months Mats Wilander's 1982 French Open victory.

"These two weeks, regardless of what happened today, are going to stay with me for the rest of my life," Chang told the crowd after his 6-1, 3-6, 4-6, 6-4, 6-2 triumph.

His victory capped an astonishing fortnight in which he upset top-seeded Ivan Lendl in the fourth round after being down two sets and suffering from leg cramps in the fifth. Seeded 15th, Chang also came from behind to beat Ronald Agener in the quarterfinals and Andrei Chesnokov in the semifinals.

"He's played a lot of tough matches and he kept coming back all the time," said Edberg, the reigning Wimbledon champion and two-time Australian Open titlist. "You have to admire him for that."

"He's young. Maybe he doesn't think about it that much."

To win the title and the winner's check for $291,752, Chang had to save 10 break points in the fourth set at a time when the Swede's serve-and-volley game was hurrying him into errors.

Once he had broken Edberg to tie the match at two-sets each, Chang seized his chance, rediscovering the passing shots he sprayed around the court in the opening set and forcing a tiring Edberg into mistakes on his deadliest weapon, the volley.

"I really thought the match was gone," Chang said. "A few points probably inspired me to try even harder and to believe there was a chance I could come back."

Chang wasn't the only player making history in a tournament of upsets, dominated by the new generation.

Arantxa Sanchez, a 17-year-old from Barcelona, Spain, became the youngest woman to win the French Open as she upset Steffi Graf 6-7, 6-3, 7-5 in the women's final Saturday.

Graf also tumbled in the women's doubles, partnered by Gabriela Sabatini. They lost 6-4, 6-4 to Larissa Savchenko and Natalia Zvereva of the Soviet Union.

Patrick McEnroe of Oyster Bay, N.Y., and Jim Grabb of Tucson, Ariz., won the men's doubles, while Manon Bollegraf and Tom Nijssen of the Netherlands took the mixed doubles.

But no one held the spotlight more than Chang, whose tenacious, never-say-die attitude endeared him to the crowd, especially during his unexpected victory over Lendl.

Chang, a soft-spoken right-hander from Placentia, Calif., said he was inspired by his religious faith.

Robin Hood Claims Pat Bradley Title

By Tom Foreman Jr.
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HIGH POINT — As far as Patti Rizzo was concerned, Robin Hood lived up to her namesake in Pat Bradley International — she robbed from the rich.

Hood finished with 16 points on Sunday, the final day of the $400,000 tournament and took home $62,500. The victory catapulted her ahead of some of the top money winners on the tour this season, an advancement that left Rizzo a bit displeased, though she still said it was a fun format.

"This type of format, if they want to do it, that's fine, but I don't know if it should be official money," Rizzo said. "To me, as you can see, anybody can win the tournament."

"We play the same thing all year. We play stroke play all year and we work hard to get in the top 10 or to get where we are in stroke play, we play hard to get there," Rizzo added. "Taking nothing away from Robin, she played great today, but she makes $62,000 and passes a bunch of other people and other people have also played good golf."

Admittedly, Hood hasn't had the best of seasons. She came into the Bradley 115th on the money list with just over $8,200. Rizzo was 14th on the money list with $101,045.

But with a six-birdie, two-bogey round, Hood rearranged the list and made Rizzo a little hot under her collar.

"This week, and this week only, if you are fortunate enough just to stay alive and keep it going, and try to be patient ... it was anybody's tournament to win today," Hood said. "You just have to keep surviving and keep going week to week and hope that maybe this will be your week."

It may not have been Hood's week, but it was her day. After she survived a six-way playoff for the final three spots in Sunday's 36-player field, Hood was assigned the first tee time of 9:40 a.m. Then, her confidence rose.

Fight Figures To End A Career

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAS VEGAS — Sugar Ray Leonard and Thomas Hearns, a pair of flashy welterweights with unlimited futures when they first fought, meet again in a lucrative rematch that almost certainly will end at least one career.

Seven years and nine months after Leonard stopped Hearns in the 14th round of a classic battle for the undisputed welterweight title, the two aging fighters return to the ring at Caesars Palace for a scheduled 12-round fight for Leonard's World Boxing Council 168-pound title.

For Leonard, 33, the fight is a chance to add another $13 million to his already bloated bank account while seeing how much of his once remarkable skill he retains.

For Hearns, it's his last chance for vindication, and perhaps his last hurrah as a fighter.

"Thomas has to win this fight," said Emanuel Steward, his longtime trainer and manager. "If not, he's finished as far as boxing goes, pure and simple."

The fight comes two days after a woman was shot to death in Hearns' home in a Detroit suburb, a slaying Hearns insisted won't affect his performance in the ring.

"I've got to do what I've got to do," Hearns said through a spokesman. "A lot of people worked to make this fight happen."

Leonard, a 7-5 favorite when the two first met Sept. 16, 1981, enters the ring a 3-1 favorite this time. The fight, which will be televised on pay-per-view and closed circuit, is

Pistons Do It Again Bad Boys Are 1 Win From Title

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Only one win away from an almost certain NBA title, the Detroit Pistons aren't celebrating like champions.

They're just playing like champions.

The Los Angeles Lakers have hope, but little else, as they try to become the third team to win three consecutive NBA titles. To do that, they must become the first to survive a 3-0 playoff deficit.

It doesn't look good.

The Pistons, boosted by their backcourt for the third straight game, beat the Lakers 114-110 Sunday and can capture their first championship with a victory Tuesday night.

The Pistons' guards are hot. The Lakers' guards are hurt.

The Pistons have lost just five of their last 46 games. Los Angeles must beat them four games in a row to retain its crown.

And the Pistons, who blew a golden opportunity to beat the Lakers in last year's Finals, are serious and determined not to let an even better one slip away.

"We prepared ourselves to run the full race and not to enjoy the accomplishments of three-quarters of the race," Detroit guard Isiah Thomas said.

"We are going to come out for it as if it were Game 7 instead of Game 4," Pistons guard Vinnie Johnson said.

Los Angeles, which didn't lose a game in its first three playoff series, may not win one in the final round.

There have been four 4-0 sweeps in the Finals, the last in 1983 when Los Angeles, hit by injuries to James Worthy, Bob McAdoo and Norm Nixon, lost to Philadelphia.

Snow Hill Eases Past Post 39, 3-2

SNOW HILL — Todd Mewborn limited Pitt County to one-hit over nine innings as Snow Hill edged Pitt County, 3-2, in American Legion baseball action Sunday.

Pitt County scored its two runs in the first as Maurice Hines drove in Timmy Moore with one run and Hines came home with the other off an error.

But from there, Mewborn shut Post 39 down.

Jamie Brewington got the start for Pitt County and pitched seven innings of three-hit baseball, but Snow Hill was able to come up with the go-ahead run in the sixth inning.

Snow Hill's Ed Stanley reached on an error and scored on Leslie Jackson's fielder's choice in the fifth to make it 2-1.

In the sixth, Mewborn singled in Darryl Rouse and Reggie Hill came home on a ground out by George Burnette to make it 3-2.

Pitt County got a man on in the seventh, eighth and ninth but failed to take advantage.

Boggs Describes End Of Adams' Fling

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Wade Boggs described the final stages of his relationship with Margo Adams as "like a volcano getting ready to erupt," the Boston Red Sox star reportedly stated in a deposition taken in the suit brought against him by Adams.

The Los Angeles Times reported in its Sunday edition that, in 555 pages of Boggs' statements in the deposition obtained by the newspaper, his affair with Adams dimmed after the first two years of the relationship.

"The feeling was totally different the last two years than the first two," Boggs stated in the sworn statement given in Irvine recently while the Red Sox were in Southern California to play the Angels.

"The only way I can describe it is like a volcano getting ready to erupt. Tones in her voice, conversations, arguments that we would have, these kinds of things just led me to believe that this was not a utopia situation."

In a pending lawsuit in Orange County Superior Court, Adams will try to use Boggs' statements in an effort to collect a large sum that could be more than $100,000 she claims the Red Sox star promised her as compensation for accompanying him on team trips from 1984 to 1988.

She claims that he convinced her to quit a job as a mortgage broker so she could make the trips with him.

Boggs, 30, said in the deposition that early in the affair, he encouraged Adams to quit her job and find another that would make it easier to travel with him.

Grady Claims Westchester Classic

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HARRISON, N.Y. — Wayne Grady didn't let his first PGA Tour triumph take things out of perspective.

"This doesn't mean I'm a lock to win the U.S. Open" this week in Rochester, N.Y., Grady said after his playoff victory Sunday in the Westchester Classic.

"This doesn't mean I'm going to go out and win 10 tournaments in a row. I'm not that kind of player. I'm not a streak player. I don't do anything brilliantly, but I don't do anything badly."

"I'm just a good, steady player and I'm glad to have my game back," the 31-year-old Australian said after his uphill, three-foot birdie putt on the first playoff hole had beaten Ronnie Black.

The putt — "the easiest putt you can have under the circumstances," Grady said — secured a $180,000 first-place check. It was worth much more.

"Everyone who plays this game wants to get into the Masters," Grady said. "Now I'm in. They can't keep me out. That's a wonderful feeling."

The victory also wiped out any thoughts of leaving the United States to return to foreign competition.

"I got tired of kicking around the world," said Grady, who played a heavy schedule in Europe, Australia, Japan and Asia for several seasons before he established a home in Orlando, Fla., five years ago. "I just decided I wanted to play here. I don't like Europe that much, and I was tired of running around the world."

But a relative lack of success, particularly early last year when he missed the cut in nine of 11 events, prompted some thoughts of a move.

"You can make a lot of money playing in Europe and Asia now, playing the same caliber of golf you do here and not getting your head kicked in," he said. "Now, I feel like I belong over here. All the guys (other Australians on the American tour) won't be asking me 'When are you going home?'"

"You're stuck with me now."

Grady, who started the final round in a three-way tie for the lead, had to rally for a place in the playoff on the wind-swept Westchester Country Club course in the northern suburbs of New York City.

Black, playing in front of him, birdied the 18th hole to complete a round of 68 and go seven under par for the tournament. Grady promptly bogeyed the 16th and 17th to drop from the lead alone to one behind.

"Nothing like a couple of bogeys to wake you up," he said. And he rapped in a six-foot putt on the final hole of regulation to finish at 277 and force the playoff. He had a closing 72.

Tom Watson came on with a 68 that included a double bogey on the first hole and missed the playoff by a shot.

"Like the Tom Watson of old," he said of a revamped putting stroke that gave him some renewed enthusiasm for the American national championship this week.

Watson, once golf's dominant players and a five-time British Open champion, has won only once in the last five years.

He was tied for third, by far his best performance of the year, with Clarence Rose, who had a closing 70.

Tom Kite, the PGA Tour's leading money-winner, Fred Couples, J.C. Snead and Billy Andrade were another shot back at 279.

Kite shot a 70. Andrade and Couples each matched par 71. Snead, a former winner of this title, struggled to a 74.

Moody Wins Senior TPC By Two

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. — Leave Orville Moody out of the debate over whether he added a major golf title to his resume by winning the Senior Tournament Players Championship.

A $105,000 payday is enough for him.

"I don't know how major it is," he said Sunday after shooting a final-round 71 to hold off Charles Coody by two strokes and capture what is generally considered one of three premier events for senior players.

"I suppose it is a major, but the $105,000 is what I like," he said. "The most I'd ever made in a tournament was $60,000."

The lucrative payday nearly doubled his 1989 earnings to $214,256 and came four days shy of the 20th anniversary of his winning the U.S. Open — Moody's only official victory in 17 seasons on the regular PGA Tour.

He wouldn't compare the victories, but third-place finisher Gary Player said events like the Senior TPC are every bit as important to seniors as the U.S. Open is to players on the "other" tour.

"This is our tour. Winning this would mean just as much to me now as the U.S. Open did when I was a young man," said Player, the 1987 Senior TPC champion who is one of only four players to win the Masters, U.S. Open, British Open and PGA Championship.

Moody shot a course-record 64 Saturday to open a six-stroke lead heading into the final round on the 6,646-yard TPC at Sawgrass Valley Course.

He had three birdies and two bogeys Sunday, playing just well enough to hold off the fast-closing Coody.

"I was kind of nervous when I started. I didn't swing with the ease you should with such a big lead," Moody said. "It was surprising to me, but when nobody made a run at me it helped me settle down."

The winner birdied the 17th hole to virtually clinch the victory and finished with a 72-hole total of 17-under-par 271, a record for the $700,000 event.

"I started playing very conservatively the last seven holes, trying to stay away from trouble," Moody said. "When I birdied No. 17, I felt pretty good. I figured I could handle

White Sox Sign Their Top Draft Pick

CHICAGO (AP) — First baseman Frank Thomas, the seventh player chosen in baseball's amateur draft, signed Sunday with the Chicago White Sox.

Thomas, 21, came out of Auburn, where he led the Southeast Conference with a .403 average and 83 runs batted in. He was second in the SEC with 19 home runs.

During his career at Auburn, he batted .382 with 49 homers and 205 RBIs. He is the school's all-time home-run hitter. Thomas also set a school record with 73 walks.

When Thomas was a freshman, he played with Bo Jackson, who is now a two-sport star with the Kansas City Royals and the Los Angeles Raiders of the NFL.

Like Jackson, Thomas also played some football at Auburn. The 6-foot, 5-inch, 240-pound Thomas caught three passes for 45 yards as a third-string tight end.

McEnroe Warms Up For Wimbledon

BECKENHAM, England (AP) — John McEnroe warmed up for Wimbledon by capturing the singles title of the Beckenham grass-court tennis tournament, defeating Brod Dyke of Australia 6-4, 7-6 (7-0) Sunday.

In the women's final, third-seeded Ros Fairbank needed only 71 minutes to defeat Anne Minter of Australia, the No. 2 seed, 6-3, 6-3.

USSR Defeats U.S.A. In Amateur Boxing

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The Soviet Union defeated the United States 7-5 in an amateur boxing meet at the Trump Castle Hotel and Casino Saturday.

American winners were Tony Gonzales of San Diego, Frank Pena of Aurora, Colo., Eric Griffin and Raul Marquez, both of Houston, and Skipper Kelp of Colorado Springs, Colo., who won in a walkover.

The Soviet Union leads the series 33-7-3.

Golden State's McMahon Dies In Sleep

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Jack McMahon's colleagues during his 36 years with the NBA were saddened by the death at age 60 of the former player, coach and administrator.

McMahon, director of player personnel and assistant coach for the Golden State Warriors, died in his sleep on Sunday in Chicago, where he was attending an NBA pre-draft camp, the team said.

"No one has ever loved the game of basketball more than Jack," Warriors coach Don Nelson said in a statement. "He was my first pro coach and has been one of my closest friends for many years. I feel blessed to have had the chance to work with him the past two years."

McMahon, a native of New York City, played eight years in the NBA, first with the Rochester Royals between 1952 and 1955, then with the St. Louis Hawks from 1955-60. He was a starting guard on the Hawks' 1958 championship team.

"The NBA family has lost one of its truly outstanding members," NBA commissioner David Stern said in the Warriors' statement.

"Jack McMahon has been an integral part of our league for over 36 years. His knowledge of the game and players is unquestioned and his good nature, sense of humor and appreciation for life made the NBA a better place to be," Stern said.

Whiteville Wins State 2-A Title

ALBEMARLE, N.C. (AP) — Brack Williams had two hits and drove in three runs to help Whiteville win its third state 2-A baseball championship this decade with a 7-3 victory over West Stanly on Saturday.

The Wolfpack, 24-4, swept the best-of-three series 2-0. In Game 1 Friday, Williams drove in two runs in Whiteville's 6-5 victory.

Williams, Tommy Ward and Ryan Cox combined for three hits and four walks. The trio helped put the West Stanly Colts, 18-7, away in the sixth inning when a Williams double drove home Ward and Cox, who had drawn walks from losing pitcher Bryan Greene.

The Wolfpack took a 5-0 lead in the sixth before West Stanly rallied with three runs on singles by Darryl Page and Shane Hinson.

USC To Publicly Report Results Of Drug Tests

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBIA, S.C. — More disclosure by universities about their drug testing programs might halt accusations of mismanagement, a NCAA official says.

"If more schools would be out front with information about their testing programs, I think allegations of mismanagement would cease," said Frank Urysz, NCAA director of sports sciences.

South Carolina is one of the first NCAA schools to agree to publicly report verifiable results of all drug tests involving athletes, according to school officials.

"I'm not aware of any other school that does that, even though we encourage them to," Urysz said.

He said the National Collegiate Athletic Association publishes annual results of its post-season screening.

The school's release of past test results and its agreement to report future findings settle a lawsuit brought by The State newspaper in March 1988 that sought access to student testing records.

Urysz said tests conducted by the NCAA and the university identify steroids, cocaine, amphetamines, narcotics, marijuana, alcohol and other drugs.

The university disclosed Friday that screening of athletes between March 1, 1988, and May 1, 1989, resulted in 38 confirmed positive tests — three each for marijuana and cocaine; two for steroids; two for prescription drugs, one of which was prescribed by a doctor; and 28 for alcohol.

About one-tenth of South Carolina's 350 student athletes and trainers are chosen by computer each week for testing. The program allows for more frequent testing when drug use is suspected, officials said.

end," Rudd said. "I ran the car more sideways than I really wanted to at the end of the race. But, luckily, it stayed under me."

Unlike the invitational race last month at Charlotte, N.C., in which Wallace bumped leader Darrell Waltrip and sent him spinning off the track as the two battled for a $200,000 first prize, there was no anger after Sunday's bumping incident.

Wallace, who drove alongside Rudd's car to congratulate the winner after the checkered flag, said, "I guess maybe he was expecting me to be mad. He was saying, 'I'm sorry! I'm sorry!' I said, 'Hey, no problem,' and gave him the thumbs up."

"We had a lot of fun in turn seven there at the end. He drove the line he needed to run to win the race. I drove my heart out and just came up short."

Wallace said that the incident at Charlotte was on his mind as he drove the last laps Sunday.

"I know I could have tried to get by Ricky in some other turns, but it was dangerous. If I bumped him there, he would have spun out. After what happened at The Winston, with this big black cloud hanging over me, I figured I'd better be careful."

Rudd's Buick Regal, owned by drag racing star Kenny Bernstein, crossed the finish line 1.1 seconds ahead of Wallace's Pontiac Grand Prix.

It was his 10th NASCAR victory and first in 22 starts dating to the Watkins Glen race. It was also the fifth time he has won from the fourth starting position.

Rudd, who averaged 76.088 mph, earned $62,350 for winning the first Winston Cup race at Sears Point in front of an estimated 53,000 people, the biggest motorsports crowd ever in Northern California.

Bill Elliott, the defending Winston Cup champion, was third in his best finish of the season, followed by three-time series champion Dale Earnhardt and Lake Speed.

Astros Score Early, Roll To 10-6 Victory

Houston's Gerald Young slides in under Darrell Evans' tag

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Now that the Houston Astros have shown they can do it at home, they'll try to keep winning on the road.

"We have to continue to score early and give our pitchers something to work with. If we can continue to do that, we'll be all right," Astros manager Art Howe said Sunday after Houston rode a seven-run second inning to a 10-6 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

Houston has won six straight and 16 of 17.

"The thing that sticks out in my mind about this streak is that we never quit," said Bill Doran, who hit his second career grand slam in the second. "We had no business winning some of these games, so we kept battling. It has been exciting and interesting. There's no way you can anticipate games going like these have."

Jim Deshaies, 7-3, won for the sixth time in seven decisions, allowing four runs and seven hits in five innings. Danny Darwin, the fifth Astros pitcher, got the final two outs for his second save.

In other games, St. Louis beat Chicago 10-7, New York beat Pittsburgh 6-1, Los Angeles beat Cincinnati 3-1, San Francisco beat San Diego 3-1 and Montreal beat Philadelphia 7-2.

Cardinals 10, Cubs 7

Ozzie Smith had the first five-hit game of his career and the Cardinals rallied for eight runs in the seventh to win their fifth straight.

St. Louis had 10 hits in the inning off four Cubs pitchers. The eight runs were the Cardinals' most in an inning since June 16, 1987, against Pittsburgh.

Tom Brunansky drove in three runs in the seventh with a two-run homer and an RBI single. Smith and Pedro Guerrero also had two hits each in the inning.

Cris Carpenter, 2-4, allowed three hits and one run in three innings of relief. Calvin Schiraldi, 1-4, relieved in the sixth and failed to retire a batter in the seventh.

Mets 6, Pirates 1

Bob Ojeda pitched a six-hitter and Len Dykstra hit a two-run homer as New York ended a three-game losing streak.

Dave Magadan added a two-run single and Darryl Strawberry singled in a run as the Mets knocked out Brian Fisher, 0-3, in the second. Howard Johnson homered off Jeff Robinson in the ninth, Johnson's 15th home run this season and fourth in five games.

Ojeda, 3-6, struck out three, walked two and retired 15 consecutive batters at one point. Pittsburgh lost for the eighth time in 10 games.

Dodgers 3, Reds 1

Mike Davis had a two-run single in the third, ending a streak of 23 consecutive scoreless innings for Los Angeles and giving him his second hit in 32 at-bats.

Tim Leary, 5-4, allowed five hits in eight innings and Jay Howell finished the combined six-hitter for his 12th save.

Rookie Scott Studer, 0-1, allowed four hits and walked six in four innings in his second major-league start. Los Angeles snapped the Reds' four-game winning streak.

Giants 3, Padres 1

Will Clark hit a two-out, two-run homer off Mark Davis in the 12th inning, sending San Diego to its sixth straight loss and ninth in 10 games.

With two outs in the 12th, Robby Thompson singled to deep shortstop off Davis, 2-3. Clark hit the next pitch for his 11th home run this season.

Rich Gossage, 1-0, pitched the 12th to win his first game with the Giants. Dennis Rasmussen and Rick Reuschel matched eight-hitters over nine innings.

Expos 7, Phillies 2

Pascual Perez allowed three hits in eight innings and Tim Wallach drove in three runs for Montreal, which swept the three-game series by 21-3.

Perez, 3-7, struck out five and walked five as Montreal won for the 13th time in 19 games. Tim Burke pitched a one-hit ninth.

Bob Sebra, 2-2, gave up eight hits and five runs in 4 2-3 innings for the Phillies, who have lost 14 of 17.

Mattingly Leads Yanks To Pair Of Wins

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Don Mattingly is getting into the swing and, not surprisingly, so are the New York Yankees.

Mattingly homered twice and drove in six runs Sunday as the Yankees swept a doubleheader from the Boston Red Sox, 4-2 and then 8-7.

"This day was significant. We wanted to show we could sweep, not just split," said Mattingly, who hit a pair of two-run homers in the second game.

The Yankees have won three of their last four outings and improved to 29-31, tied for second place in the American League East.

With Dave Winfield possibly out for the season, Mattingly has taken on an extra burden in the Yankees' lineup. He started slowly, going 2-for-120 (.233) in his first 31 games, but has gone 39-for-107 (.364) in his last 26 games.

"I'm seeing the real Donnie Mattingly now," Yankees manager Dallas Green said. "He's been super."

Mattingly drove in four runs during Saturday's 14-8 loss to visiting Boston. He went 5-for-8 in the doubleheader and now is batting .295 with 40 RBIs.

"The game is not that difficult," Mattingly said. "It's simple, just get hits."

In other AL games, Kansas City topped California 5-3, Milwaukee stopped Baltimore 3-1, Toronto blanked Detroit 4-0, Seattle defeated Cleveland 6-3, Minnesota downed Chicago 5-2, and Oakland beat Texas 5-1.

Mattingly hit a two-run double in the first inning of the first game and Andy Hawkins, 6-7, made it stand up.

Hawkins, who had allowed 38 runs and 52 hits in his last 31 2-3 innings, shut out Boston until the eighth. Dave Righetti pitched the ninth for his ninth save.

Joe Price, 0-2, threw eight straight balls in the first inning, walking Rickey Henderson and Steve Sax, and Mattingly followed with his double.

Mattingly hit a two-run homer in the first inning of the second game against Mike Smithson. Jesse Barfield had a two-run single later in the inning.

"Mattingly is Mattingly, but I made a bad pitch to Barfield," Smithson said.

Mattingly hit his sixth home run of the season, another two-run drive, in the seventh inning for a 7-2 lead. It was the 12th multi-homer game of Mattingly's career.

Royals 5, Angels 3

Bob Boone, who left California last winter as a free agent, hit his first home run of the season as Kansas City completed a three-game sweep at home.

Boone's three-run homer, his first since last August, capped a four-run rally that put the Royals ahead 5-3. The Angels lost their fourth straight.

Bo Jackson tripled and scored on a groundout, and Danny Tartabull and Jim Eisenreich singled to finish Jim Abbott, 5-4. Boone homered off Rich Monteleone.

Abbott lost for the first time on the road. He gave up four runs and six hits in 5 1-3 innings.

Terry Leach, acquired last week in a trade with the New York Mets, won his AL debut with four shutout innings of two-hit relief. Steve Farr got his 13th save.

Brewers 3, Orioles 1

Pinch hitter Rob Deer doubled home the tie-breaking run in the ninth inning at Baltimore. The Brewers have won eight of their last 12. The AL East-leading Orioles lost for the fourth time in five games.

B.J. Surhoff got a bunt single with one out in the ninth and stole second and third. Deer doubled and later scored on Gregg Olson's wild pitch.

Chuck Crim, 5-3, got the victory and Dan Plesac earned his 14th save. Kevin Hickey, 1-1, took the loss.

Milwaukee's Ted Higuera made his longest start of the season, giving up two hits and an unearned run in seven innings.

Blue Jays 4, Tigers 0

Mike Flanagan and Duane Ward combined on a four-hitter for Toronto. The Tigers, whose .238 average is the lowest in the league, were shut out for the fifth time this season.

Flanagan, 4-5, gave up three hits in seven innings. He missed his last two starts because of a sore left shoulder. Ward finished for his fifth save and struck out four.

Twins 5, White Sox 2

Kirby Puckett hit a two-run single for his first RBIs in two weeks, sending Allan Anderson and Minnesota over Chicago.

Puckett, second in the AL with 121 RBIs last season, had not driven in a run since May 28. His single put the Twins ahead 4-2 in the fifth.

Anderson, 7-4, gave up two runs on eight hits in seven-plus innings. He had a 6.75 earned run average and won only once in May, but has allowed just three runs in 22 innings this month.

Jeff Reardon got his 11th save. Melido Perez, 3-8, lost for the fifth time in six decisions.

Randy Bush and Greg Gagne homered for the host Twins.

Mariners 6, Indians 3

Brian Holman got his first AL victory, Gene Harris his first major-league save and Bill McGuire his first major-league home run as Seattle won at Cleveland.

Holman, 1-1, gave up seven hits in 5 2-3 innings. Harris gave up one unearned run the rest of the way.

Holman, Harris and Randy Johnson were obtained May 25 from Montreal in a trade for Mark Langston. Johnson beat the Indians

"It's Jesus Christ who should be congratulated," Chang said. "I give him all the credit for the things that happen in my life."

And he said his accomplishment hadn't sunk in yet. "It's hard to think about it, it just doesn't click in my head," he said. "It's definitely a great honor and achievement. At the moment, it's definitely the highest achievement I could ever have in tennis."

The victory came as a relief to Trabert, who won't have to answer any more questions about American men in Paris.

"I haven't had anything to do with it, but every year I get calls from friends around the French Open asking me if anyone will do it," Trabert, 58, said. "I didn't think Michael would win it at the beginning of the tournament. It's amazing how he went out there and handled the pressure the way he did."

Chang said he doesn't want to rest on his laurels. "Maybe someday I'll be able to achieve something greater," he said. "I don't want to dwell on this victory. I don't want to limit myself. I want to be able to keep on going and do even better."

Whittingham Offered No Excuses For Belmont Loss

By Hal Bock THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Shed no tears for trainer Charlie Whittingham. This World War II Marine survived Guadalcanal. He'll survive losing the Belmont Stakes. Whittingham offered no excuses after Sunday Silence finished eight lengths behind Easy Goer in the 121st Belmont Stakes on Saturday. He didn't need to. His horse ran a solid race. There was no quit in him. He just got beat. It happens. Just ask Easy Goer. Shug McGaughey's handsome chestnut colt came into the Triple Crown series as the hot property among the 3-year-olds. He had won all the high-profile prep races and was considered the horse to beat. 'O' Charlie beat him, not once, but twice. Beat him by 2 1/2 lengths in the mud at the Kentucky Derby and beat him by a neck on a bone dry track at the Preakness in as pulsating a stretch duel as you'll ever see. Then they came to Belmont, much the way Jack Van Berg and Alysbea did two years ago, much the way Johnny Campo and Pleasant Colony did in 1981, much the way nine other Derby-Preakness winners did. And the 1 1/2 miles, a race that must seem to go on forever to these 3-year-olds who have never run this far before, beat him and cost him the $5 million Triple Crown bonus. It was no disgrace. It has happened before. It will happen again. So they asked Whittingham if he was disappointed. The 76-year-old trainer thought about that for one moment. "If you worry about disappointments," he said slowly, "you won't live long." Spoken like a man who has spent a good chunk of his life at the race track, cashed a few tickets, and trashed a few others. Sure, the old man was disappointed. You would be, too, if you had just lost a piece of $5 million. But Whittingham knew that Sunday Silence came out of the Derby-Preakness-Belmont trifecta with respect and admiration. And the old trainer could take pride in that. What we learned from the Triple Crown series? For one thing, it demands an awful lot from these horses in a very short time. First there is the 1 1/4 miles of the Derby, often a cavalry charge because of the huge field that race always attracts. Then, two weeks after that, come the tight turns of the shorter but in some ways more demanding Preakness. And three weeks later, there is the grind of the Belmont. It may be too much to ask from anything short of a super horse. We also discovered that there were two outstanding colts in this year's 3-year-old crop. Sunday Silence and Easy Goer duelled brilliantly at Churchill Downs and Pimlico and seemed on target for another stretch showdown Saturday. Then Easy Goer pulled away in the stretch at the Belmont, finishing in 2:26 the second fastest in history for this race. Sunday Silence was next under the wire. Finishing second to the second-fastest Belmont in history is no disgrace. And Whittingham recognized that as he paid tribute to his horse. "He ran a good race," the trainer said. "The other horse just outran him. He ran good and hard. There are no excuses. The other horse was the better horse today." The Belmont railbirds got on Whittingham as he walked Sunday Silence back to his barns. They hooted and howled, treating the winner of two of thoroughbred racing's classic races as if he were some nag lugging a carriage through Central Park. The trainer shrugged off the catcalls, walking ramrod straight, stopping for a moment to pet a stray dog and then continuing to the Belmont backside. He knew his horse had done well in the Triple Crown series. He had the consolation $1 million for finishing with the most races. And there would be more races ahead, more chances, which is what this game is all about. It is Whittingham's game. On his right shoulder, the trainer carried a tattoo, a kind of badge that announces his devotion to thoroughbred racing. It says: "Man o' War." A pretty good horse, but he didn't win the Triple Crown either.

Silver Arrow Is Back And Winning At Le Mans Race
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
LE MANS, France — The Silver Arrow is back at Le Mans. And winning. It took 34 years for Mercedes to return to competition at the Le Mans 24 Hours endurance race after the West German firm pulled out of racing when an accident in the 1955 event killed more than 80 spectators. A motor from a Mercedes car flew into the crowd and exploded. Mercedes, which was famous during the post-War years with its silver racers, returned to competitive racing last year on the sports prototype circuit. It was set to return to Le Mans in 1988, but a blown tire in practice made company officials edgy and they decided to pull out. This year they were back, winning and setting records. West Germans Joachen Mass and Manuel Reuter teamed with Sweden's Stanley Dickens to dominate Sunday's race, leading a 1-2 Mercedes sweep.

Pistons Take 3-0 Series Lead ...

"Who knows what this year is all about," Los Angeles coach Pat Riley said. "We'll find out on Tuesday. The only thing left is the best comeback in NBA playoff history."

"We are not going to give up," said Worthy, who led the Lakers with 26 points. "Tuesday is all we have left."

The Pistons, who relish their reputation as the NBA's "bad boys," have been very, very good. Their guards have been great.

The performances of Thomas, Johnson and Joe Dumars peaked in the second half Sunday, when they combined for 46 of Detroit's 57 points and handled the Lakers' trapping defense very well.

None made more than 39 percent of his shots in the Eastern Conference finals against Chicago. But against Los Angeles, Johnson has hit 64.1 percent, Dumars 62.3 percent and Thomas 47.4 percent.

On Sunday, Dumars had 21 of his 31 points in the third quarter, Johnson had 13 of his 17 in the fourth and Thomas finished with 26. In the series, they have 211 of their team's 331 points.

"We have the best group of three guards in the league," Detroit coach Chuck Daly said. "I'd be foolish not to direct our game to their ability."

The Lakers may have the best two-guard group — NBA most valuable player Magic Johnson and Byron Scott — in the league. But hamstring injuries kept Scott out of the first three games and Magic Johnson out of the last 16:39 of the second game and all but the first 4:46 of the third.

Magic started, was replaced by Tony Campbell after missing both his shots, and never returned.

"I could not do anything, play defense or do anything else. I could just run in a straight line," Magic Johnson said. "There is nothing anybody could do. I just went out and tried."

"With Byron and me we can do different things, like defend their backcourt a little better."

He's listed as questionable for the fourth game of the best-of-7 series, while Scott is listed as doubtful.

Michael Cooper, a substitute most of his career, played the entire game, often teaming in the backcourt with seldom-used guards Campbell or David Rivers.

"You play with the hand you're dealt," Detroit center Bill Laimbeer said. "We were dealt some nasty cards last year. They were dealt some nasty cards this year."

Detroit led Los Angeles 3-2 in last year's Finals, but injuries to Thomas and Rick Mahorn and poor play in the final minute of the last two games contributed to its defeat.

"We're more mature and you obviously learn from your mistakes," Daly said. "Hopefully, we know what it takes to win just one more game."

Even if it is at the Forum, where the Lakers were 41-6 overall, including 6-0 in the playoffs, before Sunday, Detroit had the NBA's best road record this season.

The injuries to Magic Johnson and Scott cloud the issue of which team is better when completely healthy.

"We'll never really know," said Los Angeles center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who is ending his 20-year career after the series.

Magic Johnson seems distraught after Game 3 loss

Lakers' Woes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Magic Johnson is certain things can't get any worse for himself or the Los Angeles Lakers. But he's in no position to say they're going to get any better.

"We get to this point and I wanted it so bad, we're down 0-3 and I'm not playing," Johnson said Sunday after the Detroit Pistons beat the Lakers 114-110 in Game 3 of the NBA Finals. "What else can go wrong?"

Just one more thing — another victory by the Pistons, which could come as early as Tuesday night when the fourth game of the best-of-7 Finals is played at the Forum.

"I worked seven or eight months to get here and now my heart hurts more than my hamstring," Johnson said. "We can't put forth a better effort Tuesday because we put forth our best effort today."

The hamstringed Lakers, without Johnson for all but the opening 4:46 of play in Game 3 and without Byron Scott throughout the series, gave it all they had Sunday. But it wasn't enough, and now they're just one loss away from elimination.

"I hoped that the crowd would give me a little lift," said Johnson, who suffered a strained left hamstring with 4:39 remaining in the third quarter of Thursday night's second game. "But it just couldn't happen. I probably should have come out before I did."

"I couldn't do anything, play defense or do anything else. I could just run in a straight line. In the back of my mind, I knew it would be tough today. This is the most frustrating thing for me."

Johnson is considered questionable for Tuesday night's game. Scott, who suffered a partially torn left hamstring in practice last Monday, hasn't played yet and probably won't Tuesday night.

Johnson and Scott comprise one of the best, if not the best, starting backcourt combinations in the NBA, averaging more than 40 points.

Leonard-Hearns Set To Go ...

scheduled to begin about 7:45 p.m. PDT.

Leonard, who has fought only 33 rounds in four fights since the first Hearns bout, is coming off a less than spectacular ninth-round knockout of Donny Lalonde, who knocked Leonard down in the fourth round with a right hand.

Unlike the Leonard of old, he fought flat-footed against Lalonde, though he showed good hand speed and power.

"If the Ray Leonard who fought Donny Lalonde fights Monday night, he will get flattened," said Angelo Dundee, who worked Leonard's corner before splitting with the fighter in a contract dispute before the Lalonde fight.

The 33-year-old Leonard, whose only defeat in 36 professional fights was to Roberto Duran nine years ago, refused to discuss what a loss would mean to his career.

"I can't answer that question," he said. "I'm not being arrogant, I just don't answer those kind of questions."

Hearns, though, freely admitted that a second loss would be difficult to take.

"It would be pretty tough for me to go home, to face my fans again," he said. "To let them down again would be very, very tough."

Hearns, who earned $5.1 million to $11.9 million for Leonard in the first fight, is guaranteed $11 million for the bout, his biggest payday ever. But it is his vision of vindication that motivates him far more than the rich purse.

"Dollars are always a factor, but the biggest factor to me is winning the fight," he said. "I have to prove I'm a better man and a better fighter than Leonard."

Hearns, 46-3 with 38 knockouts, has fought 14 times for a total of 114 rounds since losing to Leonard, and the wear and tear has been evident in recent fights.

The 30-year-old "Hit Man" from Detroit got hit with a big punch last June against Iran Barkley and was knocked out in the third round. He was floored in November by journeyman James Kinchen and was forced to flagrant hold Kinchen and the referee to stay in the fight.

"I think Ray waited to see where he had the opportunity of beating me," Hearns said. "I think with my last couple of fights he thought it was time. But he's wrong, very wrong."

Hearns will have to answer in the ring questions about his suspect chin and his legs, which many boxing observers feel are shot.

Hearns worked for the first time on a stationary bicycle while training for the bout to try and build his legs up.

"What intrigues me the most is Tommy has changed procedures," Leonard said. "I'm one who thinks you don't change something unless it's broken. Something must be broken."

Leonard said he believes Hearns will try and dance and move, using his left jab to pile up points. The tactic worked well during the middle rounds of the first fight before Leonard caught Hearns late in the bout.

"I think the people will be surprised to see the 'Hit Man' become a boxer," Leonard said. "I think he'll try to box me for 12 rounds, but I don't think he can do it. There will come a time when he slows down and at that time, I'm going right after him."

With Leonard, it's not his legs but his body that has drawn attention.

Leonard's upper body is clearly more developed and defined than for any previous fights, leading Hearns to charge that Leonard was using steroids to get his new bulk.

Steward called for both fighters to be tested for steroids, but the Nevada State Athletic Commission rejected his demand.

"It's not part of our testing and we see no need for it at the present time," said Dr. Elias Ghanem, chairman of the commission.

Leonard, as he has done for most of his fights, dictated the terms of the rematch, which reportedly include a contract clause that neither fighter weigh in at more than 164 pounds.

The Family Circus By Bil Keane

"Aren't you glad I got into the family, Mommy? You don't have to be the only girl."

Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY June 13

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): You have the ability to deal with variable situations because of your broad range of talents. Add to your knowledge during this time.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Your decisions show sound judgment and a unique approach to old problems. A careful course of action in practical matters brings results.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): You have the ability to see contradictions and weaknesses in people. This is the basis of your wit which is, at times, sarcastic.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): You can get carried away with your devotion to a cause and the intense activity that supports it. Give basics equal time.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): It is advantageous to freshen up old ideas and submit them to a new review. Act on a romantic desire if a situation develops.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): A vagabond-style vacation could be exciting and allow you to roam carefree and uninhibited. The evening brings an exciting diversion.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Even if you try to keep organized, you may find yourself spinning your wheels. There are no problems in view, just petty annoyances.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): You receive approval and admiration for accomplishments. You have won through hard work and by not taking success for granted.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Take pity on someone who is a victim of his or her own weaknesses. Kindness will be returned at a later date.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Be sure of the facts, anticipate questions and have appropriate answers ready before you introduce a new plan. Be confident.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Take things as they come—the past is gone and tomorrow is not here yet. You have your talents, friends, family and life.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Early morning inspiration can last through the day. Stellar influences signal new developments in your home.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠A6 ♥A985 ♦K952 ♣AK7
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 NT Pass 2 ♣ Pass
 What action do you take?
 A.—Partner has shown a weak hand with spade length. Even though you have an absolute maximum no trump opening bid, the fact you have only two spades bars you from further action. Pass.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AJ6 ♥AK72 ♦KQ9 ♣AQ2
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 2 NT Pass 3 ♣ Pass
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Because of your balanced hand and minor-suit tenace, three no trump has a certain attraction, but partner has announced an unbalanced hand, and your spade support is too good to conceal. Wisdom dictates a raise to four spades. Three no trump could result in a missed slam when partner devalues his hand due to the lack of a fit.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠Q93 ♥QJ762 ♦6 ♣J765
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♥ Dbl ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—Your hand is virtually trickless on defense, but your singleton and five-card support for partner's suit should provide a considerable number of tricks on offense. Jump to three hearts. Over a takeout double, that jump raise is preemptive.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AK105 ♥9873 ♦85 ♣K62
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♥ Dbl ?
 What action do you take?

A.—If you have a conventional method to show a limit raise after a takeout double, this hand is perfect for it. If those means are not part of your arsenal, the correct way to show a hand of 10 points or better is to start with a redouble.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠Q76 ♥AKQ983 ♦7 ♣Q102
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♥ Pass 1 NT Pass
 What action do you take?
 A.—Don't let the quality of your heart suit spur you to some rash action—you have a minimum opening bid, and no more. Bid two hearts. In this sequence that guarantees a six-card suit.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠6 ♥J954 ♦7632 ♣AK83
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♣ Pass 1 NT Pass
 2 ♥ Pass ?

What action do you take?
 A.—The only action that we condemn wholeheartedly is a pass—that shows a lack of appreciation of the playing power of your hand. Indeed, we consider a raise to three hearts a slight underbid. However, four hearts would be more of an overbid, so we'll make the conservative choice and bid three hearts.

CBS Starts New Comedy Tonight For 6-Week Run

By Kathryn Baker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — CBS' new "Doctor, Doctor" might cause some heart attacks, heart attacks among unsuspecting viewers who will be shocked by the arrival of a funny, new comedy in the midst of summer reruns.

The show, which is not on CBS' fall schedule, gets a six-episode summer run beginning tonight.

Matt Frewer, who played "Max Headroom," is well-cast as the irreverent, young M.D., Michael Stratford, who signed on to be Marcus Welby, but instead finds himself mired in the bureaucratic machinations of running a clinic in partnership with other doctors who spend most of their time considering computerized billing procedures, malpractice insurance rates, equipment purchases, and new uniforms for the nurses (the cardiologist thinks stark white causes anxiety in the patients).

In fact, Stratford's patients are in a near-riot stage in the waiting room. Stratford tries to quiet them. "I know you're angry, because you've been waiting so long — but, hey, that's why you're called 'patients.'"

Frewer, his angular frame topped with tufts of blond, thinning hair, lumbers cheerfully through the show, ad-libbing here, doing a bit of slapstick there. He's a smart comic actor, and this is intelligent material — no wonder, since it was written by producer-creator Norman Steinberg, who co-wrote "My Favorite Year."

The rest of the cast is likewise talented, and their characters promisingly wacky. Abraham Butterfield (Julius Carry III), the only black member of the partnership and seemingly its only sane one, turns into a suave Don Juan whenever he talks to his wife on the phone. Cardiologist Grant Linowitz (Beau Gravitte) is a preening hunk enamored of all the latest equipment. When snide associate Dierdre Bennett (Maureen Mueller) explains her hostility toward Grant by facetiously informing him, "I'm insanely jealous of any man who's prettier than I am," he finds this perfectly plausible.

Future episodes will also feature Inga Swenson as Michael's protective mother, Dakin Matthews as his gruff surgeon father who can't accept his other son (Tony Carriero), because he is gay.

In the first episode, on the advice of his lawyer-slash-agent (Holly Fulger), Stratford appears on a lame, local talk show, "Wake Up, Providence," to promote his book, "Panacea," a novel about the search for a cure for cancer. When the producer (Jane Brucker) asks if he's ever been on TV before, he claims to have played Klaus Barbie in "War and Remembrance."

The show's book critic, a sniveling dilettante named Hugh Persons (Brian George), obviously hasn't read Stratford's tome, though by glancing at the dust cover he has determined that it is "taut." "Once you pick it up, you can't put it down," he insists, as he drops the book on the desk.

The producer asks Stratford to become the show's resident medical expert — which he will be in future episodes — but he is reluctant, complaining that its viewers are mostly convicts who get credit on their work-release program for watching.

Meanwhile, back at the clinic, Stratford's long-suffering girlfriend (De Lane Matthews in a one-time guest shot) must make an appointment — and pay the bill — if she wants to see the doctor. "I'd like to key back," she tells him. He is refused. "How will I get into your apartment?" he asks.

There's yet another plotline about an elderly patient who steals Doctor's Porsche, and Stratford still has time to philosophize with Abe, who offers the advice, "Take a chill pill, homeboy," when Stratford expresses his disillusionment. "Why it," Stratford ponders, doing an exaggerated soul walk, "whenever you don't have an answer, you always welcome relief. Enjoy, enjoy."

Sultanov raises his trophy above his head after winning Van Cliburn contest Sunday night

Crowd-Pleasing Soviet Captures Cliburn Medal

By Kelley Shannon
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FORT WORTH, Texas — Alexsei Sultanov, a 19-year-old Soviet noted for his aggressive, crowd-pleasing performances, won the Eighth Van Cliburn International Piano Competition on Sunday.

Sultanov was the youngest of the 38 competitors in the prestigious two-week contest, which is known for launching musical careers. He shook hands with Van Cliburn, the Fort Worth pianist for whom the contest is named, and host Dudley Moore.

Jose Carlos Cocarelli, a 30-year-old Brazilian making his second appearance in the competition, won the silver medal. Benedetto Lupo, a 25-year-old who now teaches in the Italian city where he grew up, was awarded the bronze medal. As the bronze medalist was announced the crowd erupted in wild applause and shouts of "Bravo!" Sultanov was given a standing ovation.

"In this competition, I wanted to get first prize or nothing," the winner said afterward through an interpreter.

A native of Tashkent, Sultanov has played concerts throughout the Soviet Union and Europe and attends Moscow State University. He studies under L.N. Naumov, who taught two previous Cliburn medalists.

Along with his gold medal, the winner of the competition receives $15,000, a Carnegie Hall debut recital, concert tours and free air travel.

The only other 19-year-old gold medalist in the history of the contest was Christina Ortiz of Brazil, who won the Third Van Cliburn in 1969. The only woman to win the Van Cliburn, Ms. Ortiz was one of the judges of this year's contest.

Sultanov became the sentimental favorite of the audience during the semifinal round, bringing the audience to its feet during a performance of Chopin's Sonata No. 3 in B minor. For the finals, he performed Chopin's Piano Concerto No. 2 in F minor and Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 2 in C minor.

The three medal winners were chosen from six finalists in the quadrennial competition. Cocarelli and Lupo, the last contestants of the final round, played for jurors Saturday night.

Lupo played Chopin's Piano Concerto No. 2 in F minor and Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 2 in C minor. Cocarelli chose Chopin's Piano Concerto No. 2 in F minor and Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 1 in D minor.

Lupo said he will not enter any more competitions, explaining, "I don't like competitions. You can't compare two completely different ways to play the piano."

He said a pianist's career is not defined by a competition. "I think that a career is very long and it doesn't matter if you are first prize, second prize, third prize," Lupo said.

All six finalists were required to play a concerto with the Fort Worth Symphony Orchestra and one with the Fort Worth Chamber Orchestra.

Two of the three Soviet finalists, including Sultanov, appeared for their last-round performances Friday. Elisso Bolkvadze, 22, played Mozart's Piano Concerto No. 21 in C major and Saint-Saens' Piano Concerto No. 2 in G minor.

Alexander Shtarkman, 21, of the Soviet Union led off the finals round Thursday with Mozart's Concerto No. 21 in C major and Prokofiev's Concerto No. 3 in C major. Shtarkman is the son of Naum Shtarkman, who placed third to Cliburn's first in the 1958 International Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow.

Ying Tian, a 20-year-old Chinese student who lives in Boston, played Chopin's Piano Concerto No. 2 in F minor and Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 4 in G major.

Begun in 1962, the competition was started in honor of Cliburn, who rose to international fame after winning the Tchaikovsky competition at age 23.

His concert schedule and performance fees swelled. But in 1977 he took a career "intermission" that lasted a decade. Cliburn, now 54, gradually has been returning to the stage.

The competition finalists, announced Tuesday, emerged from 12 semifinalists narrowed from 38 contestants since the contest began May 27.

Cocarelli has studied with Adele Marcus in New York. He was born in Rio de Janeiro and lives in Paris.

Prisons Struggling To Keep Health Care Promise

By Robert Dvorchak
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Medicine behind bars begins with the fundamental paradox of caring for misfits banished by a society that could care less about their well-being.

Add a heap of more specific problems and the provision of health care in prisons becomes a constant struggle.

Doctors and nurses, in great demand in the outside world, must be recruited to work for civil service wages in steel-bar surroundings. A federal program that helped in this search, the National Health Service Corps, which allowed doctors to pay off school loans by working in prisons, was dismantled by the Reagan administration.

The patients are murderers, rapists, drug dealers and thieves who bring a hodgepodge of untreated ailments into prison.

Overcrowded cellblocks sizzle with the fear of AIDS, as well as tuberculosis and other contagious diseases. Prisons are being forced to open costly geriatric units to treat chronic heart, lung and other conditions of graying inmates.

And the source of relief for many other societal ills, the state lawmaker, has been more likely to dole out condemnation than compassion for criminals who can't vote.

Inmates' advocates say quality medical care in prisons is elusive despite court orders, national guidelines and more money grudgingly given.

"There's a general contradiction in providing health services and locking people up in steel cages. Prisons deform everybody," said Robert Cohen, former medical director at New York City's Rikers Island Prison and an expert witness in health-care suits.

Added Armond Start, medical director of the Wisconsin prison

EDITORS' NOTE — Despite a Supreme Court guarantee that U.S. prisoners receive medical care, many still clamor for improvement. They say treatment remains inadequate, sometimes slipshod, largely because good doctors steer clear of their grimly crowded, padlocked societies. The court guarantee has been further dulled by two developments no justices could have foreseen: the onslaught of AIDS and the graying of the prison population. "People should not go to prison to die for lack of health care. We're better than that as a country," says inmates' advocate William Rold.

system. "Prisons are the most anti-therapeutic places there are."

Too, most Americans feel indifferent about prisoners' rights.

"Prisoners are a pariah kind of constituency," said Edward Koren of the American Civil Liberties Union. "We treat them like garbage. You leave it outside in the trash can and don't want to see it again. Nobody cares, unless it comes back again."

Said Minnesota inmate Henry

Jackson, a 69-year-old sex offender who has diabetes and high blood pressure, "We're just dogs. We're nothing."

Medical care, however, is a legal obligation.

A 1976 Supreme Court ruling said "deliberate indifference to serious medical problems of inmates constitutes cruel and unusual punishment." It made prisoners the only class of U.S. citizen guaranteed health care by the government.

But having the right to care doesn't guarantee Mayo Clinic-style treatment. Because no federal or state authority has spelled out what constitutes adequate medical care, quality is a matter of court interpretation. Since 1982, only 10 percent of the nation's 600 prisons have met voluntary guidelines set by health professionals.

The following court cases are all based on prison care provided since the guidelines were issued:

—Six inmates died at a Pittsburgh prison in the last two years after getting "appalling, shocking and dangerously inadequate" medical care, according to Cohen, who testified in May in a federal case brought by several inmates. Cohen said an AIDS-afflicted prisoner died of pneumonia, a diabetic from lack of insulin; the other deaths are alleged to have resulted from improper diagnosis and treatment of heart attacks and cancer.

—At Minnesota's Stillwater Prison, one-third of the 1,200 inmates and at least five guards were infected with tuberculosis from 1982 through 1986. The first case wasn't diagnosed until six months after the inmate went to sick call, and officials waited two years after inmates filed suit to test the prison for the air-borne germ.

—A 25-year-old convict died in May 1987 during an asthma attack at Deer Island House of Corrections, a pre-Civil War lockup near Boston. According to a current wrongful death suit, the man was turned away from the infirmary at the 8 p.m. lockup, and the guards who dragged him to his cell ignored agony so intense that the inmate urinated as he was hauled up three flights of stairs.

—Hospitalized inmates from Rikers Island were shackled to bed frames and watched by guards until 20 months ago. They included AIDS patients, pregnant women and inmates on life support systems. "They were too ill to get out of bed, much less get out of the building," said Dale Wilker of the Prisoners Rights Project, which sued to have the shackles unlocked.

—At New York's Bedford Hills Correctional Facility for Women, several patients had to be hospitalized because dentist Donald Collings' drill slipped in their mouths while he was drunk, according to a 1984 suit filed by the Prisoners Rights Project. Collings resigned, and the state paid damages of $650,000.

Medical care remains a favorite target of lawsuits filed by U.S. inmates, who totaled a record 627,402 in January.

Courts have ordered eight states and Puerto Rico to improve prison health care throughout their systems and are demanding corrective action at individual prisons in 30 other states. Lawsuits are pending in five states, according to the ACLU.

Still, there is unanimous agreement that prison medical care has been bettered since courts prescribed legal remedies.

Robert Brutsche, who served 19 years as medical director of the Federal Bureau of Prisons before retiring in 1988, said care had "improved by light years. The changes are like night and day."

One indication of progress is funding.

The states spent $80 million on prison health care in 1975 and $215 million in 1980, according to a 50-state survey by The Associated Press. The health-care costs this year will be about $1 billion, or about 8 percent of the $16 billion tab it costs to house inmates, according to national estimates.

Michigan spends the most of any state, an average of $7.58 per day for prison health care, according to Corrections Yearbook. Hawaii spends the least, $1.14. The national average is $3.57.

The tide of reform began 15 years ago, when federal Judge Frank Johnson found "barbarous" and "shocking" conditions in Alabama and for the first time placed an entire state system under federal control.

Johnson said "unsupervised prisoners without formal training regularly pull teeth, screen sick-call patients, dispense as well as administer medication, give injections, take X-rays, suture and perform minor surgery."

The conditions, which inmates' attorney Matthew Myers called "symptomatic of a national crisis," included these atrocities:

—A quadriplegic's bedsores developed into open wounds and were infested with maggots. His bandages weren't changed in the month before his death.

—An inmate who was supposed to get intravenous feeding received no nourishment for three days before his death.

—An inmate who'd had a stroke was forced to sit on a bench so he wouldn't dirty his bed. But he fell so frequently his legs became swollen and crippled, and he died a day after one leg was amputated.

Alabama bettered conditions enough that federal control was lifted last December.

One problem Alabama shared with other states was allowing doctors to practice on inmates even when not licensed to treat the public. It was the first state to hire a private company that used fully licensed doctors to provide medical care in its prisons, now all or part of care in 29 states comes from private providers.

The norm 15 years ago was a broken-down doctor with an institutional license, someone who couldn't practice on the outside because he was too old, too sick or an alcoholic," said Dr. Jay Anno of the National Commission on Correctional Health Care.

About the same time the courts began correcting ills, health groups were seeking reform, reacting to conditions exposed by several prison disorders, including the 1971 riot at Attica, N.Y.

What evolved was the National Commission on Correctional Health Care, which determined 71 minimum things prisons should provide. About 60 prisons have met the standards since 1982.

The guidelines include medical screening of all incoming inmates, daily access to sick call, 24-hour nursing care for inpatients, and requiring uniform licensing and regulation of doctors, nurses and other staff.

While most states now assure their prison physicians are properly licensed, problems with doctors persist.

In the hiring competition, many prisons turn to doctors from foreign medical schools who struggle with English.

"That doesn't necessarily mean they're quacks. Their English is terrible, and they have a hard time communicating," said William Rold of the Prisoners Rights Project in New York.

Doctors in prison may also be treating ailments for which they have no training. In the 1970s, a gynecologist did dental exams at Bedford Hills, the Prisoners Rights Project said. In another New York prison, a pathologist practiced general medicine, and a pediatrician served as an internist.

Salaries are one of the biggest barriers to attracting doctors.

Hawaii, for example, pays prison doctors $35,000 a year, about half what they could earn outside. One-third of the nursing slots in Hawaii's prisons are unfilled.

"What doctor in his right mind would want to practice medicine for civil-service pay under harsh conditions for a group of patients that doesn't like or trust him?" said Curtis Prout, director of the internship program at Harvard Medical School.

Added Dr. Ronald Shansky, medical director of the Illinois prison system: "No one goes to medical school and says, 'Boy, when I get out, I'm going to go to a prison and make my mark.'"

Workers cover pipeline in the neighborhood left devastated by train derailment and explosion

Disasters In San Bernardino Leave Neighbors In Turmoil

By Lee Siegel
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. — Companies are handing out $5,000 checks, paying hotel bills and promising more help for people whose low-income neighborhood was ravaged by a runaway train and exploding pipeline.

But many furious survivors are afraid to return home, and worry they won't recover their losses, particularly less-tangible losses like a drop in property values.

"I don't like the neighborhood any more. There's not much of it left," said plumber Mark Kingston, 30.

Kingston lived 1½ blocks from the row of Duffy Street homes demolished one month ago Monday when an overloaded freight train speeding down from Cajon Pass at 90 mph derailed on a curve.

After the wreck, Calnev Pipe Line Co. inspected its 14-inch pipeline buried next to the Southern Pacific tracks, and assured residents they could safely return home. The 250-mile pipeline provides 90 percent of Las Vegas' gasoline and supplies three Air Force bases with gasoline, diesel and jet fuel.

But on May 25, the pipeline ruptured, spewing gasoline that exploded in a fireball and engulfed homes spared by the train wreck.

The toll of the twin disasters: six people dead, 42 injured, 800 to 1,000 evacuated, and at least 22 homes destroyed, significantly damaged or considered unsafe to reoccupy.

Trains are running again. After failed legal efforts by the city and residents, gasoline resumed flowing Friday through the repaired and reinforced 600-foot section of pipe.

Southern Pacific Transportation Co., Calnev and government officials again are telling residents of the roughly 200 homes in the subdivision that it's safe to go home.

"This is probably the most looked at and examined pipeline in the United States," Calnev spokesman Richard Kline said.

"I would not hesitate moving back into this neighborhood," said Anthony Andrukaitis, vice president of Chicago-based GATX Terminals Corp., Calnev's parent company.

"They told us that after the derailment," said Duffy Street resident Paul Evans Jr., 21. "Everybody believed it and moved back in. And what happens? It blows up after they say they checked it. They messed up and I'm never going by their word again."

Police Sgt. George Finkle estimated that by Sunday, only 40 percent of the evacuated residents had returned.

"We deeply regret that this occurred," Andrukaitis said. "The only thing Calnev can do is everything in its power to work with the citizens and elected officials to get them back to where they were."

Calnev and Southern Pacific agreed to pay the city's costs, and buy the 22 homes, most of which have been razed. They are footing hotel and restaurant bills until Monday for evacuees from undamaged homes.

The companies distributed dozens of $5,000 checks to heads of evacuated households. Recipients still can sue.

Andrukaitis and Southern Pacific claims manager Floyd Parker estimate the companies will spend tens of millions of dollars.

Southern Pacific accepted full blame for the derailment. The National Transportation Safety Board is investigating Calnev's post-derailment pipeline inspection, and whether the pipeline was dented or cracked by the train wreck.

Calnev acknowledged it visually inspected only portions of the pipe. Duffy Street residents like Dwight Pledger believe another derailment is possible.

"We can't go back — the fear, the apprehension and anxiety," said the 36-year-old real estate agent. "I've got to make mortgage payments on a place I can't even live in. Real estate values are just gone. They ought to clear the whole area."

"We're not going to buy the whole neighborhood," Parker replied. Southern Pacific lawyer Douglas Stephenson said the railroad and Calnev will establish a panel of retired judges to arbitrate claims by residents who say their property values plummeted.

Bush's Package for Clean Air First Environmental Issue Test

By H. Josef Hebert
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The White House is billing President Bush's proposal to overhaul federal clean air laws as evidence that his campaign promises to protect the environment were more than just talk.

Bush was expected to call today for sharp cuts in acid rain and urban smog pollutants, as well as more stringent requirements to protect Americans from toxic industrial chemicals.

The proposals, falling short of what some environmentalists had sought, were widely viewed as the first test of whether the Bush administration plans to take decisive action on environmental issues.

The president promised in his campaign last year and repeatedly since taking office that he will move to tighten the federal clean air laws, especially by taking action to curb acid rain.

Last week Bush told a conservation group the clean air package he intends to send Congress would represent "sweeping changes" in the 1970 Clean Air Act and "significantly improve every North American's quality of life" whether they live near industrial plants or in the countryside.

The final package was approved by Bush over the weekend at Camp David where the president reviewed an array of option papers prepared by his Domestic Policy Council, which had debated provisions of the package for weeks.

While details of the president's proposals were not yet clear Sunday, government and congressional sources said the plan was expected to include:

—Requirements for cutting sulfur dioxide emissions, mostly from older coal-burning electric power plants, by 10 million tons by the year 2000 to combat acid rain which damages lakes, streams and forests. The curbs would cut such emissions in half.

—A requirement for industry to install control technology to curb the release of cancer-causing and other toxic chemicals from facilities as chemical plants and oil refineries. Bush also is likely to streamline the way the Environmental Protection Agency regulates such chemicals, allowing it to set standards by broad categories rather than chemical by chemical, a procedure that has left most chemical releases unregulated.

—Reductions in smog-causing pollutants from automobiles through a combination of pollution controls and a limited shift to alternative, cleaner fuels instead of gasoline.

Urban smog, largely caused by automobile pollutants, has been one of the most difficult issues facing the administration. Advisers were split over whether to require specific curbs to reduce ozone-causing pollutants or allow automakers and the petroleum industry to decide how best to meet government targets.

Ozone, which is produced when hydrocarbons and nitrogen dioxide combine with heat from the sun, forms yellowish smog when it joins with particle pollutants in the air. Last year nearly 100 metropolitan areas failed to meet federal air quality standards for ozone.

Congressional leaders say they expect legislation revising the Clean Air Act to be approved by this Congress, although final action is not likely until sometime next year.

Strawberry Surprise

These large juicy strawberries were developed by Panasonic researchers, better known for electronics. They were grown using a new technique called micropropagation. Researchers in Japan remove micro sections from the best strawberries and, under controlled laboratory conditions, duplicate large quantities of plantlets.

Ethics Debated As Doctors Join Unions

By Leslie Dreyfous
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — Labor organizers say more and more doctors are joining the ranks of several unions nationwide — a trend that could change the rules by which medical professionals play.

Before doctors take the lives of others into their hands, they take a Hippocratic oath to act "with purity and with holiness," a mandate that raises ethical questions about whether a doctors' walkout would, say, stop a parent from rushing a sick child past pickets and into an emergency room.

Still, does that oath deprive doctors of the right to protect their own interests, financial and otherwise?

Union proponents and medical ethicists say no — up to a point.

Dr. Sanford A. Marcus, president of the Union of American Physicians and Dentists, said his Oakland, Calif.-based consortium has 50,000 members and is growing. He said members, affiliated through a number of offshoots around the country, are working together to advocate the rights of both physicians and their patients.

"The entire field of health care financing and distribution is being stood on its ear in these times," Marcus said. "The rules ... are going to change an awful lot."

Since the mid-1980s, membership in health maintenance organizations has risen around the nation. The prepaid medical plans generally employ specific doctors and hospitals that provide reduced rate care to HMO members.

"In a traditional insurance plan the more tests that are ordered the more hospital days that are consumed and the more money is made by the physician," said Alan Raymond, a vice president with the 500,000-member Harvard Health Plan.

Raymond said health plans benefit both parties by bringing more patients to doctors and reduced costs to those who need health care.

But Dr. Arthur Caplan, a bioethicist at the University of Minnesota, said the shift to group plans has put doctors under new strains that might best be eased through unionization.

"It's a reaction by doctors feeling increasingly disenfranchised within the health care system and by cost containment measures that are basically shifting the structure of medicine away from a profession and more toward a business," he said in a telephone interview from Minneapolis.

"The medical profession has had no power," said Edward Hanley, who directs the 1,000-member Doctors and Surgeons Association of Massachusetts. "They aren't in the business of negotiating the economics. They're trained to help people who are ill."

He said doctors need to unionize to negotiate more effectively the HMO contracts they've accepted, often out of fear that their patient load would diminish as consumers increasingly opted out of traditional third-party insurance.

Dr. Barry Leibowitz, president of the New York-based Doctors Council, said doctors have also begun complaining that health care decisions have been usurped as HMO managers lay down guidelines.

Study: Third World Farm Aid Boosts US Exports

By Carl Hartman
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Advisers to Congress are pushing aid to Third World farmers on the premise that the more food they produce, the more food their countries will buy from this country.

According to a special study by the Congressional Budget Office, the seeming contradiction works this way:

As Third World farmers increase their output, their countries' growth speeds up too. More growth means higher incomes, especially when Third World governments raise the prices they pay to their farmers, as many are now doing. In most of those countries, unlike the United States, a huge proportion of people still live in the country — including the poorest people.

They not only grow food, they also have to buy some. As they earn more they buy more, and they buy a greater variety: poor people spend a larger part of their income on food than the more prosperous do. And in some countries the population is growing faster than home production.

"In many cases, the demand for food grows faster than the supply of food, resulting in greater food imports," says the report, written by Stephen Parker of the CBO's Natural Resources and Commerce Division.

That view has important support in Congress.

Sen. Patrick J. Leahy, D-Vt, chairman of the Agriculture Committee, said the report "underscores what seems like a real paradox: that we help U.S. farmers by helping Third World agriculture. ... If we ignore this in setting our aid, trade and macroeconomic policies, we are just shooting ourselves in the foot."

"Like all general rules this one has its exceptions. We should not ignore these — but don't let the exceptions blind us to where our U.S. interests lie," Leahy said.

Some U.S. farmers see Brazil, Argentina and Paraguay as among the leading exceptions, countries where farmers have had direct or indirect aid from the United States. They have become important competitors in one of the most-lucrative U.S. crops: soybeans.

"Concerns have arisen in the American agricultural community over how U.S. assistance may benefit Third World economies to the detriment of U.S. farmers," said Rep. E. "Kika" de la Garza, D-Tex., chairman of the House Agriculture Committee.

"But where assistance, directly from the U.S. or through multilateral institutions has been provided and resulted in new competition for the U.S., it has also led to an increase in that country's economic and income growth."

Between 1970 and 1985, U.S. sales of farm products to Third World countries grew from $2.4 billion to $12.7 billion.

The report says that on average people in the Third World consume 35 percent fewer calories and 40 percent less protein than Americans.

"The huge potential consumption among these 3 billion people will become actual as their incomes rise," the report predicts.

Because the office represents both parties in Congress, it made no specific recommendations. But it said recent U.S. government reviews suggest that current American aid is not effectively helping poor countries to develop. It gave figures that show the Bush administration seeking less aid for farm development abroad this year than President Reagan sought in 1987.

For countries in Asia and the Middle East, the requested figure was $174.2 million compared with $237.9 million in 1987. The total for Latin America was down to $144.5 million from $178.8 million.

Some members of Congress have called such amounts so small as to have a negligible effect and are working on a complete reorganization of U.S. aid programs. Additional money for farmers comes from the World Bank, the Inter-American Development Bank and others to which the United States is a major contributor.

Iceland Says Whaling Won't Stop Despite Boycott By Greenpeace

By Edith M. Lederer
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

REYKJAVIK, Iceland — Iceland says it will never stop whaling and will survive an international boycott launched by the environmental group Greenpeace.

"We will never give it up, come hell or high water," Foreign Minister Jon Baldvin Hannibalsson said in an interview. "It would be the same as to underwrite our own verdict of execution."

Whaling is a tiny facet of the economy of this remote north Atlantic island, and the vast majority of the 247,000 Icelanders don't even like whale meat.

But Iceland's existence depends on the sea, and the government won't relinquish sovereignty over any of its natural resources.

In February 1988, Greenpeace launched a boycott of Icelandic fish, which accounts for 75 percent of the country's exports. The anti-whaling campaign targeted three of Iceland's biggest markets: the United States, West Germany and Britain.

Ros Reeve, a Greenpeace campaigner who is in San Diego for today's annual meeting of the International Whaling Commission, estimated in a telephone interview that Iceland may have lost up to $50 million worth of contracts.

Hannibalsson said the boycott has forced the closure of several fish processing and canning factories, mainly in sparsely populated northern Iceland, and several hundred people have lost their jobs.

Iceland says it has given up commercial whale hunting, but still kills whales under a four-year research program approved by the Whaling Commission that allowed it to kill 78 whales in 1988.

Greenpeace contends the program is a cover for commercial whaling, which the commission halted from 1986 to 1990 to preserve endangered stocks.

The hunt is being carried out by the commercial whaling company and Iceland is selling whale meat to Japan, the environmental organization says.

Hannibalsson countered that the commission allows up to 49 percent of whale meat to be exported, and the sales financed the scientific program.

"It is our sovereign right to carry out scientific research, which is the basis for our fishing policy," Hannibalsson said in the interview last week. He said researchers had counted more than 70,000 whales in Iceland's 200-mile economic zone.

Ms. Reeve said the commission never intended scientific whaling to include mass killings. She accused Iceland of using the loophole to keep its whaling fleet intact pending the commission's review of the moratorium in 1990.

Fisheries Minister Halldor Asgrimsson has said it is unlikely Iceland will go whaling in 1990.

Greenpeace selected Iceland for the boycott because Iceland created the precedent for scientific whaling, which was followed by Japan and Norway, Ms. Reeve said.

Mandela Awarded Prize

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROME — The first Gadhafi international human rights prize was awarded Sunday to Nelson Mandela, the jailed South African anti-apartheid leader, the Libyan news agency JANA reported.

The award was presented in Tripoli to Mandela's daughter, Zenani, JANA said in a report monitored in Rome. A ceremony celebrating the event was also held Saturday night, the agency said.

Ms. Mandela was quoted as telling Libyan radio that the prize was "a further impetus for all freedom fighters."

Her 70-year-old father, leader of the outlawed African National Congress, has been in jail for more than two decades for leading the fight against South African's racial segregation system.

The winner of the prize, named after Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi, was chosen by an "international people's committee."
