Farmville Gives Edge To Town Manager

By Carol Tyer
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The changing of Farmville's form of government to council-manager from the mayor-council system squeaked by in Tuesday's referendum by a margin of 420 to 416. "We are delighted," said Dr. Dan Heizer, a leader of the citizens' group which called last spring for a referendum on the matter. "Of course, I was disappointed that more people didn't vote — 2,263 could have. But when the matter was last acted on by the voters 20 years ago, the council-manager plan lost by 17 votes. Yesterday it carried by four. That's about a vote a year's difference, isn't it?" Absentee voters made the difference Tuesday, Heizer said. Without absentee ballots counted, the vote was 420 yes and 416 no. He said 14 absentees voted in favor of the new form of government, while nine voted no. Town Commissioner Marvin Speight, who, along with all the town commissioners except Joe Kue had spoken out against the change, said this morning, "Well, it lost by four votes. I can abide by what the majority of the town of Farmville voters want. We have to move forward now and forget the differences of the past. We have to see can't we get the town moving for the betterment of us all." Speight predicted that there will be no real change in the way the town is governed until a town manager is hired. Current town administrator Frank Bradham has announced his resignation, effective June 30, and at that time Town Planner Dillon Watson is to become interim town administrator. Speight said the board will act at its regular board meeting July 11 — postponed a week because of the July Fourth holiday — to begin advertising for a town manager. "In the meantime," he said, "we'll still have an administrator." Kue said this morning, "I think this change will be the foundation (See FARMVILLE, A-12)

GUC Hints Bonds May Be Needed To Aid Financing

By Stuart Savage
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Greenville Utilities Commission approved a $94.74 million budget for the coming fiscal year at a meeting Tuesday night. The budget, which must receive final approval of the Greenville City Council, proposes to spend some $2.73 million more dollars in the coming fiscal year than the $92.01 million budget adopted for this year. Malcolm Green, GUC's general manager, said in his budget message to the board earlier this year that the 1989-90 budget includes a 5 percent pay hike for GUC employees and takes into account an expected 2.8 percent tracking increase in wholesale power costs on March 1, 1990. Green also said in his budget message that, "It has become evident ... that GUC cannot continue capital investment at the same level as in recent years." Capital reserve funds, raised entirely from rates and charges, "have been used effectively to finance such large projects as the sewer system installation in the recently annexed Brook Valley area and the major transformer installation at the Greenville 230 substation," Green said. But, "these reserve funds will be substantially depleted by the end of the upcoming fiscal year," he said. Because revenue projections "indicate there will be insufficient revenues" to fund major capital projects through rates and charges, Green said the GUC "intends to have an analysis prepared ... to determine alternative financing methods and to identify the best method to meet these capital needs over the next several years. "The most likely alternatives," according to Green, "appear at this time to be the issuance of bonds in order to spread these major capital costs over a long period of time, thereby minimizing the short term impact on our rates to customers." A breakdown of the utilities budget shows that the largest expenditure for the coming year in the electric fund, which totals $77.93 million ($73.68 million budgeted this year) is $62.8 million for purchased power ($58.28 million this year).

The electric budget also includes $6.87 million for operations ($7.1 million this year) and $1.95 million in city turnover ($1.85 million this year). The largest expenditure in the water budget — which total's $5.82 million for 1989-1990 as compared to $7.25 million this year — is $2.15 million for operations ($1.85 budgeted this year). The sewer budget of $2.9 million for the new year includes $1.92 million for operations, compared to $1.7 million in this year's $3.51 million list of expenditures. In GUC's gas budget of $8.08 million ($7.55 million this year), $5.4 million is for natural gas purchases (the same as this year), $1.25 million for operations ($1.09 million this year) and $290,000 in city turnover (actually $273,430 this year). Capital outlay spending in the budget includes a proposed $5.56 million in electric ($5.18 million this year), $1.39 million in water ($3.99 million budgeted this year), $678,400 in sewer ($1.09 million this year), and $1.03 million in gas ($682,000 this year).

China Gives 2 U.S. Reporters Three Days To Leave Country

BEIJING (AP) — China today accused an Associated Press reporter and the Voice of America bureau chief of violating martial law restrictions and gave them three days to leave the country. The reporters are John Pomfret of The Associated Press, and the Voice of America's Beijing bureau chief, Alan Pessin. The British Broadcasting Corp. in Beijing initially reported that Brian Barron, its Far Eastern correspondent for television, also was ordered out, but later said "it was just a mistake." "We thought he had been. But we're assured it isn't him. The American networks, the wires and ourselves all seem to have made the same translation error. It is not Brian Barron. We do not know who it is," said a BBC spokesman in London, commenting anonymously. Also today, Denis Hault, Beijing bureau chief of Agence-Press France, was held for an hour by soldiers and had his residence card confiscated after being accused of photographing soldiers, the news agency said. Pessin and Pomfret were the first Western journalists to be expelled since the May 20 declaration of martial law in Beijing and the June 3-4 military invasion to crush the pro-democracy movement. One reporter for Britain's Independent TV News station was deported from Shanghai last week for covering demonstrations there with a tourist visa. Police called in Pomfret and Pessin this afternoon. According to Pomfret, police said he met with the leaders of student organizations that led seven weeks of pro-democracy protests. "Pomfret used his journalistic credentials for illegal activities and used illegal methods to get state secrets," the Beijing television news accused. "He protected the leaders of student groups and exchanged information with them." The government ordered martial law in parts of Beijing and placed restrictions on foreign correspondents in a bid to prevent them from interviewing student protesters. But the measures have not been strongly enforced. In New York, Louis D. Boccardi, president and general manager of The Associated Press said of the expulsion order: "We deplore and have protested in the strongest terms to the Chinese government this unwarranted assault on fair and factual reporting," Boccardi said.

Airport Board Approves $1.5 Million Budget For '90

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Pitt-Greenville Airport Authority has approved the airport's $1.5 million budget for fiscal 1990, which begins July 1. The budget, approved Tuesday at the board's regular monthly meeting, calls for $790,000 to be spent on capital projects and $717,740 to be spent on operating costs. By far, the largest capital expenditure is $600,000, which has been appropriated for the ongoing terminal expansion project that will more than double the size of the airport. Other capital projects include expanding the parking lot, purchasing furniture, constructing a corporate taxiway, and constructing a new maintenance building. Funding for capital projects will come from four areas. City and county governments have each allotted $117,500. The state Department of Transportation will provide $135,000 and the Federal Aviation Administration will provide $420,000. In funding the operating portion of the budget, city and county governments have each pledged to provide $29,627, and the authority will provide the remaining $658,486. Nearly two-thirds of the authority's proposed revenue will come from the sale of fuel and oil at the airport. Sales are expected to top $400,000 in the fiscal year. Airport Manager Jim Turcotte said the airport has been able to take in more revenue than projected over the past three years and operate without having to utilize any city or county money to supplement the operations budget. Also, for the current fiscal year, Turcotte said the authority will not have to use an interfund transfer to meet the operating budget. "We were able to maximize revenue and minimize expenses. That's what we've been able to do," he said. That may change next year, he said, with the terminal expansion and other capital projects depleting the authority's funds. Projections call for the authority to transfer $96,286 from the surplus general fund to meet operating expenses. Even with that, Turcotte said projections indicate the authority will still need the city and county to each provide $29,627 in order to meet the budget. "Next year, based on figures I've presented, once we've generated the revenue we've predicted and used the undesignated funds, we are still going to be short of a balanced budget," he said. Turcotte said the airport will work to hold down expenses such as insurance costs and utility bills, and the deficit could be smaller if fuel sales exceed projections. The largest single expense in the operational portion of the budget is $302,190, which has been appropriated for salaries. The airport has 10 full-time employees and five part-time employees and operates 365 days a

King Estate Gives ECU $400,000 Check

ECU NEWS BUREAU

The executrix for the estate of Lora Lemuel Wilson King of Duplin County has presented a check in excess of $400,000 to East Carolina University. The gift is unrestricted and will be used for scholarships and other university projects, according to Dr. Richard R. Eakin, ECU chancellor, who accepted the check. A native of the Beautancus community near Mount Olive, Mrs. King was born in 1898 and died March 11, 1987. She earned a bachelor's degree at East Carolina in grammar grades education in 1933 and a master's in elementary education in 1957. According to Violette K. Phillips, executrix, of Phillips & Phillips, attorneys at law in Kenansville, Mrs. King was an independent and conservative woman who managed and invested her assets well. She taught school for many years in a career that took her to the old Franklin

School in Duplin County, to schools in Maysville, Goldsboro and Bethesda, Md., and finally, Union Elementary School near Clinton. At her last post before retirement, Union Elementary, she taught learning disabled and educable mentally handicapped children. The school secretary, Louise Todd, remembers her as knowledgeable and well-educated, introverted but kind, humble and independent. "She loved children and devoted her life to them," Ms. Todd said. Mrs. King had no children of her own. She was married to Maurice H. King, a farmer and owner of the general farm supply store in Calypso, N.C. He died in 1967. ECU shares proceeds from Mrs. King's estate with Mount Olive College; Bear March Baptist Church where she and her husband were members; Stanford Presbyterian Church, her mother's church; St. John's Baptist Church, and the Duplin County Chapter for Retarded Children.

Greenpeace Pickets Weyerhaeuser Plant

By J. Ward Best
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Greenpeace volunteers today began posting what they hope will become the sign of the times in the Washington County town of Plymouth — "Warning!"

A spokesman for the international environmental group said Greenpeace feels the chlorine bleach used to lighten paper products produced by the Weyerhaeuser Co. near Plymouth greatly endangers marine life and fish lovers.

William Rostov, a worker with the group's pulp and paper campaign, said Greenpeace plans to alert the Plymouth community to the dangers of dioxins produced by the whitener and released into the Roanoke River by Weyerhaeuser.

But a spokesman for Weyerhaeuser challenges the claim of dioxins threatening humans, and said the company began addressing the problem long before Greenpeace began its campaign.

Greenpeace planned to target Weyerhaeuser today for what it calls unnecessary use of chlorine bleach, a necessary component in the production of dioxins. "Greenpeace is challenging the Weyerhaeuser mill and others like it to be good neighbors," said Rostov.

Greenpeace claims that the chlorine bleach released into the environment by the pulp and paper mill causes dangerously high levels of dioxins in marine life in the Roanoke River. And the group claims the consumption of fish and shellfish contaminated by dioxins causes cancer, miscarriages and birth defects in humans.

"There's a great risk from dioxins," Rostov said, "and there's no need for it."

GUC Will Purchase 500-Acre Tract Near Plant

By Stuart Savage
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Greenville Utilities Commission approved the purchase of 500 acres of land adjacent to GUC's waste water treatment plant and took final action to approve the purchase of 1.5 miles of water line from the town of Winterville.

The board, at a meeting Tuesday night, also approved a 2 percent natural gas rate decrease and was told that GUC's load management program saved $158,305 in wholesale power costs for the month of May.

Approval for the purchase of the 500 acres of land came after GUC General Manager Malcolm Green told the board the property will be used to increase the amount of land available for the application of liquid sludge from the waste water treatment plant.

Green said a U.S. Environmental Protection Agency grant of $228,800 will pay 75 percent of the cost of 161.7 acres of the Worthington Farms property, leaving GUC to fund the remaining $96,200 portion of the $350,000 purchase price.

Green also said GUC will pay the total $675,000 cost of an additional 338.4 acres of Worthington Farms property in two payments — $375,000 on or before July 1 of this year and the remaining $300,000 on or after January 1, 1990.

The property will be required to meet the sludge disposal needs of the waste treatment facility over the next 20 years, Green said.

The purchase of the 1.5 miles of water lines — all Winterville lines east of the Fork Swamp Canal, including those in the Rosewood subdivision area — resulted from an agreement reached earlier this year on a planning boundary between the city of Greenville and the town of Winterville.

Roger Jones, director of electric systems for GUC, reported that the load management program was in full operation on May 31, between 5 p.m. and 6 p.m. at the time of Carolina Power & Light Company's system peak, resulting in a wholesale power cost savings of more than $158,000.

The savings, according to Jones' report, included $68,478 from voltage adjustments, $39,194 from water heater demand reduction, $36,236 from air conditioner demand reduction and $11,754 from operation of generators at GUC's water treatment plant and at Procter & Gamble Paper Products and the Fred Webb grain elevator.

Since January 1985, the load management program has saved more than $7.37 million in wholesale power costs.

The board also endorsed passing on a 2 percent natural gas wholesale rate reduction received from North Carolina Natural Gas Corp. to GUC retail customers. The effective date of the 1.5 cents per hundred cubic feet rate cut was June 1.

In a related gas matter, Jim Anderson, director of GUC's gas system, reported that the commission saved $31,968 during April by purchasing well-head natural gas, rather than purchasing gas directly from NCNG.

Anderson said that it was the first month since GUC began purchasing natural gas from NCNG that the commission did not purchase any natural gas from the wholesale supplier.

According to Anderson's report, GUC paid $103,316 for 30,000 dekatherms of well-head gas in April. The cost of the gas from NCNG would have been $135,285, Anderson said.

Changes to gas, customer service and water-sewer utility regulations were approved by the board to take effect July 1.

Although most of the changes are minor ones, a change in the commission's sewer extension policy could make it easier for developments outside the city's extrajurisdictional jurisdiction to receive sewer service.

The existing policy says that no sewer service will be provided to developments — other than industrial sites — outside the city's ETJ limits unless: the City Council and the Planning and Zoning Commission have no objections; the property owner has filed a petition of voluntary annexation; the petition has been accepted by the city manager and GUC general manager, and the property is developed in accordance with the approved plans.

The new policy allows sewer service to be extended to property outside the ETJ providing a petition of voluntary annexation is filed with and accepted by the city manager, and the property is developed in accordance with plans approved by the utilities commission.

Green said the new policy will make it easier to serve outlying areas and will keep the commission from "having to retrofit" a development when an area comes into the ETJ or city limits.

The new policy is "more flexible," Green said.

In other business, the board awarded bids for: 30 distribution transformers to Hesco Inc. for $10,680; 60,000 feet of cable to Rigby Electric Supply Co. for $54,300; a four-wheel drive tractor-backhoe with front-end loader to Case Power & Equipment Co. for $30,807, and for employee uniforms to Century Uniform Co. for $23,474.

Two new board members appointed by the City Council — Richard "Ric" Miller and Kenneth Ray Hammond — began their GUC service Tuesday night.

Miller and Hammond replace James L. Ebron and Dr. Louis H. Zincone whose five-year terms expired in March.

Miller is president of Miller and Davis Associates and a partner in Davis Miller Interiors.

Miller, who served six years on the city's Planning and Zoning Commission, is a member of the board of directors of Home Federal Savings & Loan and of the Boys Club of Pitt County.

Hammond, associate director of university unions and student activities at East Carolina University, hosts a weekly community affairs talk show on WOOW Radio. He also serves as pastor of Mount Shiloh Missionary Baptist Church in Williamston.

How Far?

A Perspective On Education Progress

For students, the 1988-89 school year is a mere memory. The homework is done, the projects completed, the grade passed or failed. End-of-term ceremonies are past and the days of summer stretch endlessly.

But for teachers, the year isn't quite over. Since students vacated Pitt County's schools Friday, teachers have been busy with a lonely week of year-end chores; reviewing student performance, filling out cumulative records, evaluating reading, math and science and writing recommendations for those who will teach their students next fall.

Those tasks will be complete Friday. As they work toward that deadline, teachers are probably reflecting on the school year that just ended. Most are likely to conclude it was a good year, marked by enthusiasm, hard work and student achievement. But many will also agree it was a hard year, one marred by disappointment and by complaints about the inadequacy of schools.

You've heard such complaints at the store or at church and you've probably read news stories challenging the job public schools are doing. It's called education bashing. Often it's healthy and warranted. After all, public schools absorb a large portion of the taxpayer's dollar. In return, that taxpayer — who is often a parent — expects a big return.

But frequently this criticism of public education lacks perspective. It compares what schools are with what they could be — not necessarily what they have been. And should the public look at the past, it would see that the present public school system — even with its failings — is an achievement. Education is moving forward.

Fifty years ago, in the 1930s, less than 25 percent of the average graduating class in North Carolina went on to college. Over 50 percent of the class of 1989 will attend college. That number is still not high enough, but it represents progress.

Fifty years ago many children never went to school at all. Most of the retarded, autistic, disturbed, blind and crippled children were kept at home. Many poor kids went to work on farms or in factories as soon as possible. Their wages were more important than education.

But today schools must take all comers: the child with emotional disorders, the child with learning disabilities, the child who can't control his bodily functions, the child who needs medication to sit still. There is no question that these students have benefited from public education, but their presence has significantly stiffened the schools' challenge.

Finally, many of the state's teachers in the 1930s were graduates of so-called normal schools — two-year teacher training institutes with programs that barely compare to today's community colleges. Now many teachers have master's degrees and some have doctorates. All have to meet certification standards and competition allows counties to pick and choose the best.

It's clear that despite the disappointments, public education has improved.

The veteran teachers know this just as well as they know the heavy emphasis on negatives is part of the ongoing effort to convince the taxpayers, school board, county commission and state lawmakers to provide more support for education. That doesn't make the slights any easier.

But as Pitt's teachers work through their last two days of the 1988-89 school year, their charge is to look behind for a moment and discover the progress of the past. Then, they must look ahead to next year and chart the path of future progress. While expectations have escalated, many goals remain surprisingly similar to the goals of 50 years ago — to hand more students a high school diploma and to provide them with skills for a meaningful and productive life.

Public Forum

To the editor:

In the June 7, 1989 edition of the Daily Reflector, several statements I made at the Board of Education meeting concerning the addition of Moyewood neighborhood to Falkland Elementary School were taken out of context. Others were misquoted. I would like to clarify my position.

The dropout rate in Pitt County is shocking and unacceptable. We cannot continue to produce these large numbers of under-educated adults. Many children in the Moyewood neighborhood are labeled "at risk for dropping out of school." It is vital that the school system do everything possible to keep these children in school and to increase their performance level while they are there.

Pitt County cannot afford to bus these children to Falkland Elementary School. It has been demonstrated in schools across the country that students perform better in school when their parents assume an active role in the educational process. By busing Moyewood children to Falkland, the Board of Education is closing the door on any chance of parental participation by many of these families.

"At risk" children have the greatest need for a neighborhood school. Long distance busing should be limited to children from achievement-oriented homes. These children excel and their parents continue to participate even when bused long distances.

Presently 3-4 percent of the Falkland student body is "at risk." This is less than one dozen students. By adding Moyewood to Falkland, the "at risk" population will increase to over 30 percent. This may have devastating effects at Falkland School.

I urge the Board of Education to do everything possible to find a neighborhood school for the children of Moyewood and to actively encourage and assist these parents in assuming an active role in their children's education. A bright future in Pitt County depends on these children completing their education.

Over three months have passed since North Carolina's Wildlife Resources Commission unanimously approved the proposed Roanoke River National Wildlife Refuge on March 6. The North Carolina Nature Conservancy, North Carolina Chapter of the Sierra Club, North Carolina Wildlife Federation and sundry other groups whose members have long seen the need for this refuge have voiced their support of this proposal.

To date Governor Martin has not taken a stand supporting or disapproving the proposed refuge. His mailing address is Office of the Governor, 116 E. Jones, St., Raleigh, N.C. 27611. He needs to be reminded that two highly desirable benefits will result if the refuge becomes a reality. One, the land and water will be protected and this unique wildlife habitat secured for years to come. Two, the public as a whole — not just members of a few private hunting clubs who now see the area as their personal domain — will have access to the area for educational programs, nature photography, and other low-impact activities and recreation as well as hunting and fishing.

The bottomland hardwood swamps that comprise the proposed wildlife refuge are the largest intact and least disturbed wildlife habitat of this kind in the entire Mid-Atlantic region. It is high time for Governor Martin to support the establishment of the Roanoke River National Wildlife Refuge. Given the pace of development in the area, his successors may have no opportunity to serve the public interest in this way.

To the editor:

The League of Women Voters of Greenville-Pitt County (LWVGPC) would like to remind area citizens of the meeting called by the Division of Environmental Management Thursday at 7 p.m. at Jenkins Auditorium on the East Carolina University campus. It is important that citizens attend and express their opinions about the designation of, and consequent management strategy for, the Tar-Pamlico River Basin as nutrient sensitive waters.

The League feels that this designation is a necessary step in solving some of the many problems affecting the Tar-Pamlico estuary system. It is important to establish what tolerable levels of nitrogen and phosphorus which can sustain health plant and animal life in the river system without eutrophication and to move forward with measures to reduce the amounts of these chemicals from both point and non-point sources as quickly as possible. Studies toward such ends have been completed on comparable bodies of water - e.g. on the Chesapeake Bay area. Such studies could perhaps be utilized to hasten the pace of study and management strategy for the Tar-Pamlico Basin.

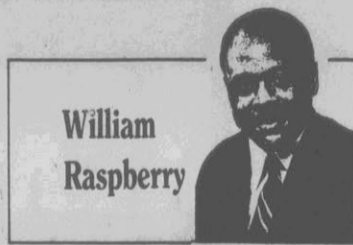

The LWVGPC encourages citizens to attend this meeting, support the designation of the Tar-Pamlico Basin as nutrient sensitive waters, and urge the DEM to strengthen its management strategy with expedited study, financially attractive Best Management Programs, and stricter, more encompassing methods of enforcement of nitrogen and phosphorus reduction.

The 'Choice' Has To Be Right

WASHINGTON — Fifteen years ago, the East Harlem neighborhood might have served as a worst-case example of what can happen when things go really bad: welfare hotels, openly sold drugs, the fruits of crime and joblessness apparent at every hand, the worst test scores anywhere in New York City — 32nd out of 32 school districts — and a high-school graduation rate of 7 percent.

William Raspberry

The welfare hotels and crime are still there, but the schools have been transformed. Their city-wide ranking has climbed to No. 16, the high-school graduation rate is 90 percent. More than 65 percent of the K-8 youngsters are reading at or above grade level (the 1974 figure: 15 percent), and parents outside the district are sending their children to East Harlem.

Ask Joe Nathan what accounts for the change and you'll get a one-word answer: choice.

In an inspired (and perhaps desperate) move, the city school system gave parents and teachers the freedom to design their own educational programs. The result is a virtual re-creation of the school enterprise. The mammoth schools have been replaced by far smaller ones — with as many as four or five separate schools, each with its own distinctive approach to teaching, sharing a building that once housed a single school. The schools which once had compulsory attendance zones now compete for students and teachers. The popular ones are replicated, those that attract too few students are simply shut down.

That's choice, and nobody doubts that it is working in East Harlem.

Nathan, a senior fellow of the University of Minnesota's Hubert H. Humphrey Institute of Public Affairs, thinks that it would work everywhere if properly implemented. The trouble, he said in a recent interview, is that it rarely is.

Conservatives often speak of choice as though all you have to do is give parents the right to send their children wherever they wish, and the good schools will flourish while the bad ones disappear.

That sort of choice might work for the children of the affluent and well-educated, but Nathan, who has edited a book on the subject ("Public Schools by Choice," MeyerStone (cq) Books, Bloomington, Ind.) wants choice that works for everybody.

"One of the reasons I've been opposed to tuition tax credits is that they do nothing for low-income kids, they don't expand opportunities," he said. "But if a choice plan is designed correctly, there is very clear evidence that it will have a dramatic, positive impact on inner-city kids."

So much of what passes for choice fails his test. Indeed, one chapter in the book he edited reports that something like 25 states are implementing choice in one form or another. As often as not, however, what these states have done is to create a magnet school or two, pump extra resources into them, fill them either by test scores or on a first-come-first-served basis, and then go on neglecting the other schools in the district.

The choice gospel according to Nathan is that no single school can meet the needs of every child. Some children work well independently, while others need a great deal of structure. Some like a heavy emphasis on athletics, some do well with team teaching, or theme teaching, or Montessori-method teaching.

But simply making available the various pedagogical approaches isn't enough. Nathan, a former public-school teacher, has some of the key elements of an effective choice program:

- A clear statement of goals and guidelines;
 - Easily available information provided by multilingual counselors;
 - Real choice ("Parents literally camped out to get in line for magnet-school placements in Prince George's County (Md.); but what of the parents who can't camp out? And what of the non-magnet schools?");
 - Parent-teacher cooperation in designing schools;
 - Smaller schools, where teachers and children get to know each other.
 - Choice for teachers as well as children;
 - Continuing monitoring and modification.
- But the genius of the choice idea is that parents and teachers in every school district could create their own ideal schools, each different from the others.
- The sort of choice Nathan is pushing is a far cry from the schemes concocted to allow middle-class children to escape the "contamination" of low-income youngsters, or to permit white parents to flee integration.
- The crucial thing is to give parents choices and enough information to choose intelligently.
- That's real choice, and if Nathan and his book are to be believed, it works.

IN THE STATE

Ocean Dumping

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Representatives of several East Coast states, upset with what they call the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's failure to work toward ending ocean dumping, are aiming for a strategy to force EPA action.

Nearly one dozen officials from eight states were slated to attend a daylong conference today at Attorney General James O'Neil's office in Providence. O'Neil chairs the National Association of Attorneys General's subcommittee on ocean dumping.

Among those expected to attend were officials from New Jersey, New York, Connecticut, North Carolina, Delaware, Massachusetts, Maryland and New Hampshire, Connell said.

Ponder Cleared

MARSHALL, N.C. (AP) — A Madison County grand jury refused Tuesday to indict E.Y. Ponder on charges stemming from the shooting of a man outside the former sheriff's home last March.

Hubert Roberts, 34, was hospitalized in critical condition for several weeks after the incident, which Ponder said happened after the two men struggled over the former sheriff's 16-gauge shotgun.

"Since day one I've had all the confidence in the world that right would prevail and justice would be done," Ponder said Tuesday. "I don't think we have a perfect system, but I think we've got the best on earth by far."

District Attorney Tom Rusher released a brief statement saying the grand jury refused to indict Ponder, and that "For Sheriff Ponder and for the district attorney, this matter is now concluded."

Boy Killed

CLINTON, N.C. (AP) — A 12-year-old Sampson County boy was found dead in his home from an apparently self-inflicted gunshot wound to the head, Sheriff W.C. Fann said Tuesday night.

Hubert Donald Naylor was found dead Monday in the den of his parents' home, Fann said. The boy had been shot in the side of the head with the family's .38-caliber pistol, which was found near his body.

Fann said no suicide note was found.

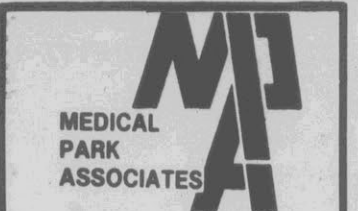

"As to what happened, I don't think anybody will ever know," he said. "We have not found any problems that he had."

Tire Fire

DOBSON, N.C. (AP) — Residents of a community near a six-acre tire dump fire were urged to leave their homes Tuesday afternoon as a precaution because smoke that contained toxic substances was lingering near the ground, authorities said.

Billy J. Eldridge, the captain of the Surry County EMS emergency response team, said about 8:45 p.m. that at least 73 people had left their homes. Some 140 houses were contacted, and people had left from at least 30 of them, he said.

An alert from emergency officials said that the quantity of the toxins had not been determined and that more measurements will be taken

LOSING FRIENDS

It is not uncommon for couples in counseling to complain that they feel that they have lost their friends. As a result, they become overly dependent on each other for all their socialization needs, and begin to feel smothered.

The underlying problem is often that each spouse blames the other for alienating their friends. Early in a marriage, it is true that one spouse may be possessive of the other, and thus discourage outside relationships. In the "honeymoon" phase, a couple may have been so self-contained that friends — single friends in particular — were alienated.

But when you blame your spouse for "turning your friends off," you may need to look at yourself instead. If, for example, personal friends of the wife start avoiding you as couple, the wife may blame the husband for alienating her friends. In fact, the problem may be that the wife acts differently in front of her husband than she does with her friends; thus the friends feel uncomfortable in the marital situation, and stay away.

A professional counselor can help identify both resentments and behavior patterns which discourage friendships.

Leaf Assessment Bill Divides Advocates

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A bill to let tobacco growers vote on whether to pay a higher assessment to promote their product has divided North Carolina's three top leaf advocates.

Under a bill approved by the House Finance Committee on Tuesday, an extra 20 cents would be levied on every 100 pounds of tobacco, with the money going to Tobacco Associates. The panel defeated an amendment that would have split an additional 5 cents per hundred between the Tobacco Growers Association and the N.C. Tobacco Foundation.

Rep. John Brown, R-Wilkes, blamed the N.C. Farm Bureau Federation for blocking the other two organizations. He said Tobacco Associates did not oppose his amendment. But Bob Jenkins, president of the Farm Bureau, said the organization is simply being practical.

"We have consistently supported Tobacco Associates as the organization to represent tobacco in the promotion of tobacco," he said.

As for the other two groups, "They may need the money, but we have concerns when more than one group can get checkoff money for one commodity when one group is doing a good job," Jenkins said.

Sen. Jim Speed, D-Franklin, who sponsored the bill, said he was sorry to be in the middle of the dispute.

"It is of course disappointing that we have a division of opinion among many of our close friends," he said. Speed had hesitantly endorsed Brown's compromise, saying it might be necessary to get the bill through the House.

"If this fails to pass and doesn't go to a referendum of the farmers, it's going to leave Tobacco Associates in a real bad position at a time when we need to do more in the area of promoting tobacco sales especially in foreign countries," he said.

The bill, already approved by the Senate, now goes to the full House.

Jones Plan Cites Need For Study

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — An amendment proposed by a North Carolina congressman would give Gov. Jim Martin what he wants — a full-scale study of offshore drilling along the Tar Heel coast.

Rep. Walter Jones, D-N.C., has drafted an amendment which would force the U.S. Interior Department to conduct a full environmental impact statement on an offshore drilling project proposed by Mobil Corp.

Mobil wants to begin exploratory drilling for natural gas next year in the Atlantic Ocean about 50 miles northeast of Cape Hatteras. Mobil and the Interior Department, which handles offshore drilling leases, say that a full-scale environmental impact study never has been required for such exploratory projects.

Instead, they say, more limited "environmental assessments" are required, and any exception made for the North Carolina project could set a troublesome precedent for oil and gas exploration nationwide.

A full-scale impact study would require more time, and Mobil's $103 million lease expires in August 1991.

But Martin and other top state officials want a full environmental study, arguing that more needs to be known about North Carolina's ocean currents and Mobil's plans for handling emergencies.

In private meetings this month with Mobil's chief executive and the interior secretary, Martin failed to change their minds.

But Jones, chairman of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, plans to attach his amendment to a California congressman's bill that would ban drilling in a marine sanctuary near San Francisco.

House OKs Bill Requiring Officeholders To Resign

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Despite charges that lawmakers were feathering their own nests, the House narrowly approved a bill to require that public officials resign from one office to run for another with an overlapping term.

Opponents said the bill was aimed primarily at county and municipal officials who often target legislative incumbents on Election Day.

"To me, it's an incumbents' protection act and I urge you to vote against it," said Rep. Larry Etheridge, R-Wilson, during lengthy debate on the Senate-approved bill. The measure, approved 56-52 Tuesday, will become law if the Senate agrees to House amendments.

"It eliminates your toughest competition back home," said Rep. Dan DeVane, D-Hoke. He pointed out that 26 of the 120 House members and 10 of the Senate members are former county commissioners or municipal officials.

Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, said the bill would simply require that officeholders live up to the public trust that got them elected.

"I think that's what the public is asking for," he said.

But DeVane disagreed, saying, "The same voters who elected them to one office will be deciding whether to elect them to another office. You're just denying the voters that right."

Rep. Dennis Wicker, D-Lee, said the bill would make for a better system than the current one in which an elected official sends the signal "that they no longer seem to be interested in the public office which they hold because they want to seek another office."

Rep. Steve Arnold, R-Guilford, proposed an amendment to require that General Assembly members forfeit their salaries once they have filed to run for re-election. He said lawmakers are just as guilty as local officials of letting their public duties slide in the heat of a campaign.

That amendment was defeated 86-25 and the House averted an attempt by DeVane to send the bill back to a committee with a 62-48 vote.

The last amendment was one by Rep. Skip Stam, R-Wake, to ask the state Supreme Court to review the measure before it takes effect. Stam said courts in Texas and Delaware have found similar measures unconstitutional, making litigation certain.

"There has not been such a bill passed that hasn't been litigated," he said, adding that the state attorney general would have to defend the law at North Carolina's expense.

However, supporters said the Supreme Court has asked lawmakers not to seek advisory opinions and Miller noted the Florida Supreme Court has upheld its law. The amendment was defeated 70-37.

One more proposed amendment failed to reach a vote. Rep. Marty Kimsey, R-Macon, asked for a delay while he prepared an amendment to require that state House and Senate members resign to run for another office.

The House voted 57-46 against waiting for the amendment.

House Budget Chiefs Back One-Year BEP Freeze

By John Flesher
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — State House leaders whose vote for a one-year freeze in the Basic Education Program set off howls of protest say they hope the move will inspire their colleagues to accept a 1-cent sales tax increase. But critics say the strategy could backfire if opponents of a tax increase call the leaders' bluff and accept their contingency budget, which does not include the $106 million BEP installment scheduled for 1989-90.

"If the tactic is to force people into a tax increase, I don't think it'll work," House Minority Leader Johnathan Rhyne, R-Lincoln, said Tuesday after the chairmen of the House budget subcommittees voted 8-6 to delay by one year the eight-year phase-in of the BEP, the centerpiece of North Carolina's education reform initiative. Senate President Pro Tem Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, an outspoken foe of a higher sales tax, said the vote was "an exercise in futility."

"Good arguments and good reasons will convince you, not playing games," Barnes said.

Rep. David Diamond, D-Surry, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, acknowledged the contingency budget would satisfy no one.

"It just magnifies the problem we have," he said. "The only alternative that's going to begin to approach satisfying the needs is additional revenue."

The freeze vote came as the House leaders assembled a $400 million spending plan for next year that can be used if the General Assembly fails to raise taxes. It would have to clear the Appropriations Committee and the full House and Senate to be enacted.

Meanwhile, efforts continued in both chambers to piece together tax packages that would gain support from the Legislature's disparate factions and generate enough money to keep the BEP phase-in on track while giving teachers and state employees a 6 percent salary increase.

— In the House, two proposals surfaced for "accountability" programs that Gov. Jim Martin and his Republican allies have set as a condition for winning their support of a 1-cent sales tax increase.

However, Martin and the Democratic leadership were still at odds over the details. The governor was pushing the career ladder as the preeminent accountability mechanism, while the Democratic plan accorded it equal status with other programs designed to ensure taxpayers get their money's worth for higher teacher pay.

— Barnes said Senate Democratic leaders were assembling yet another bill that would avoid a sales tax increase but would raise taxes on certain items such as beer and would boost user fees on state services. It also would close loopholes in the tax code, he said, declining to elaborate.

— Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, said he was ready to propose a 1-cent sales tax increase that would expire after two years. He said he would seek support for the plan during a Senate Democratic caucus scheduled for today.

At the heart of the complex debate is a shortage of revenue for spending increases in fiscal 1989-90. Economic growth will generate a surplus of about $400 million without a tax increase. Meanwhile, requests for new funding from Martin, legislative committees, state agencies and interest groups total roughly $1 billion. As efforts to forge a consensus tax increase bill sputtered last week, House Speaker Joe Mavretic has ordered the Appropriations Committee to develop a budget based on the assumption no new revenue would be available.

After rejecting numerous spending combinations, the budget group voted 8-6 to delay BEP implementation for a year.

That would free enough money to allow a 6 percent raise for teachers and state employees beginning Jan. 1, 1990 — halfway through the next fiscal year. Some of the money would begin phasing in a new teacher salary schedule. State employees would receive a 4 percent across-the-board raise and some would get 2 percent merit raises.

Rep. John Tart, D-Wayne, proposed the plan, saying he didn't like it but that it was the lesser of many evils.

Two Rival Teacher Pay Plans Presented

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Unable to agree on a joint approach, House Democratic leaders and Gov. Jim Martin's top House ally unveiled rival plans for linking teacher pay raises to improvements in school quality.

The Democratic plan was presented to the House Appropriations Committee on Education, which discussed it but took no vote Tuesday. Rep. Johnathan Rhyne, R-Lincoln, the House minority leader, planned to present the Martin plan to the panel today.

Either plan could become an integral component in a developing package that would boost the state sales tax by 1 cent to finance pay raises and other education improvements. Martin has said he will not support the tax increase without a "teacher accountability" plan that links pay raises to meritorious performance.

The governor's preference is for statewide implementation of the career ladder program, which has been tested in 16 school systems for the past four years with mixed results.

The Democratic bill would make the career ladder one of several programs local school systems could use. Others include the "lead teacher" plan, under which teachers work under guidance of team leaders; teacher performance programs implemented in other states; or a combination of any of these.

Additionally, local school systems could develop their own plans under guidelines to be established by the State Board of Education.

Participation in any of the teacher accountability programs would be optional. Local boards of education would decide whether to take part.

The state would provide funds to defray the cost of pay raises for teachers in the school systems that adopt teacher accountability programs. The state grants would start at 2 percent of teacher and administrator salaries in 1990-91 and increase to 7 percent in 1993-94 and thereafter.

N.C. VA Hospitals High In Death Rates

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Four North Carolina institutions were listed among 44 veterans hospitals nationwide that reported "significantly elevated" death rates for patients, according to a study released by the Department of Veterans Affairs.

The report also listed Asheville, Durham and Salisbury hospitals among 22 of the 44 medical centers that had "likely quality of care problems." The Fayetteville VA hospital was listed among the 44, but didn't have "likely quality of care problems," the report said.

Officials at the 471-bed Durham VA Medical Center said at a news conference Tuesday that they were concerned and were conducting their own investigation. But they said the findings did not mean that the facility's health care was substandard.

"I think we need to let the public know that all is well at the Durham VA," said hospital Director Barbara Small. "I don't think we need to be doing anything different. We're a teaching, tertiary-care facility. We get the sickest of the sick."

Ms. Small said the hospital's death rate was within normal limits for 17 of 18 patient categories. In the 18th category — which included patients with AIDS, cancer and other serious illnesses — the death rate was slightly above the national average.

The study, based on a detailed analysis of selected cases, said the problems were most pronounced at hospitals in Tuskegee, Ala., and Battle Creek, Mich.

In releasing the report, Veterans Affairs Secretary Edward Derwinski said the report carries the qualifying note that "no general statement about the quality of care within (Veterans Affairs) can be drawn from these findings."

Nonetheless, Derwinski said, "We must try to do better."

A spokesman for the Asheville hospital said the report had been criticized for not taking into account the severity of illness of the patients treated.

"No allowance is given to facilities that are treating very sick patients," Dr. David Hagen told The News and Observer of Raleigh.

Of two Asheville deaths in question, Hagen said, one was a patient with a poor prognosis. The other received prompt treatment, but a delay in filling out his medical chart gave an appearance that the treatment was not prompt, he said.

The director of the Fayetteville VA hospital issued a statement Tuesday saying that the Veterans Affairs report had found the hospital to be within quality-of-care guidelines. The report reviewed 23 deaths at the Fayetteville hospital but found no evidence of questionable care.

"The number found to have quality of care problems was zero," said A.G. Branch, director of the Fayetteville hospital.

Derwinski, the secretary of veterans affairs, said the department must conduct a more extensive review "so that the American public and especially our veterans have confidence in what we do. ... Independent oversight is essential to the credibility of VA."

The mortality study of veterans hospitals was initiated in 1987 after a separate federal study was conducted of mortality rates at community hospitals treating Medicare patients.

Bill Smith, a spokesman for the Veterans of Foreign Wars, said in Washington that the mortality figures reflect cuts in funds for the hospitals.

Baptists Re-Elect Conservative Chief

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAS VEGAS — A conservative was re-elected president of the Southern Baptist Convention, dashing moderates' hopes that an election outside the Bible Belt would help their candidate.

Jerry Vines, the pastor of First Baptist Church of Jacksonville, Fla., won 56.5 percent of the vote Tuesday in defeating his moderate challenger, Daniel Vestal, pastor of Dunwoody Baptist Church in suburban Atlanta.

"I'm just convinced the joy bells are going to begin ringing in the Southern Baptist Convention," said Vines, who continued a conservative resurgence in the nation's largest Protestant denomination.

Vines received 10,754 votes to 8,248 for Vestal. It was the 11th straight victory for conservative candidates since 1979.

Vestal said he was disappointed, but already considering another run for the presidency at next year's convention in New Orleans.

"I fear a kind of militant partisanship in this denomination," he said.

But Vines said the appointment Tuesday of Richard Jackson, a Phoenix pastor who opposed Vines for the presidency last year, to the Home Mission Board was part of his effort to bring a "kinder, gentler denomination to pass."

More than 20,000 delegates registered for the three-day convention that opened Tuesday morning.

Moderates, who came within 700 votes of defeating Vines last year, had hoped the convention site would help their cause. Some conservatives stayed home in protest of the convention being held in a city with legalized gambling.

Hal Lane, editor of Southern Baptist Issues, a conservative publication based in South Carolina, said Vines' victory "was extremely important, almost critical, because we had a site offensive to so many conservatives. It was a year we felt could have gone either way."

Bus Driver Nabs Gunman

ATLANTA — A Southeastern Stages bus driver was praised as a hero after he nabbed a passenger who pulled a gun and sprayed the bus with bullets, killing one person and injuring two others.

Driver Lou L. Porter stopped his bus, talked the gunman, Perry Tyrone Irvin, into dropping his weapon, then drove two blocks to a downtown bus station, police said. Porter was not injured.

"I asked him to lay the gun on the floor and come to me, and he followed my instructions," Porter said.

Irvin, 37, of Augusta, was charged with murder and aggravated assault, said police spokesman Keith Williams. He was being held Tuesday at the Atlanta Pretrial Detention Center.

power of the incumbency. No incumbent president seeking a second one-year term has lost in recent years.

Stan Hasteley, executive director of the Southern Baptist Alliance, a moderate group, said the election "continues the losing streak, without demoralizing moderates."

But Richard Land, executive director of the Christian Life Commission, said the string of conservative victories should force moderates "to rethink their thesis, which is that the real Southern Baptist Convention has not been heard from."

Both Vines and Vestal believe the Bible is without error, but their different approaches to doctrinal issues reflected the divisions within the 14.8 million-member denomination.

Moderates have shown increasing strength in recent years, winning elections at the state level in Texas, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia and Tennessee.

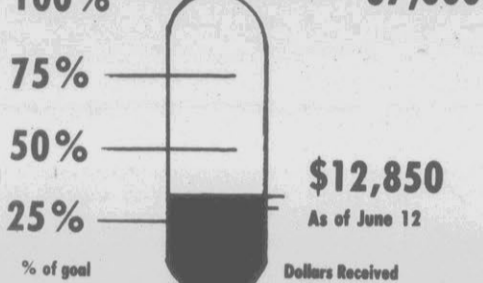

The Southern Baptist Convention more than doubled in size in the past 25 years to surpass a declining United Methodist Church as the nation's largest Protestant denomination, but has grown by barely more than half a percent each of the last two years, the lowest growth rate since 1937.

Too Many Winners

GLENVIEW, Ill. (AP) — Winners of a Kraft contest who feel the food giant is trying to give them the dodge instead of a Dodge have filed at least two class-action lawsuits against the company.

At least 100 people wound up with winning game pieces for what was supposed to be a "one and only" grand prize, a $17,000 Dodge Caravan, in Kraft's "Ready to Roll" contest.

"We've declared the game null and void. We're still evaluating what our next step will be," Kathy Knuth, spokeswoman for Kraft General Foods Group of Philip Morris Cos., said Tuesday at the company's suburban Chicago offices.

But Tuesday, at least two lawsuits were filed on behalf of the winners in Cook County Circuit Court.

"It's their mistake. They should have to pay for it. It's real simple," said attorney Burton Weinstein.

The contest's prizes were 8,000 free packages of cheese; 500 skateboards; 100 bicycles; and, at odds of 15 million-to-1, a 1990 Dodge Caravan.

But due to a printing error, it looks like nearly everybody won a prize and at least a hundred people won the car.

"We're telling people who've matched the pieces to go ahead and mail them in, but we don't know what we'll do," Ms. Knuth said. "Obviously we feel very badly about the situation."

Bush Puts Quick Veto On Wage Bill

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush's swift veto of legislation raising the minimum wage gives him the upper hand in his first major policy showdown with Capitol Hill Democrats, who are promising a lengthy fight if their bid for quick retribution fails.

"There will be an increase in the minimum wage, if not today, then soon," Sen. Edward M. Kennedy said Tuesday after Bush upstaged congressional Democrats by vetoing the minimum-wage bill less than an hour after it was sent to the White House.

"All of our efforts now are devoted to overturning the veto and I would hope that the compelling justice that is at issue in this case would reach sufficient members so that we are successful," said Kennedy, D-Mass. "If we're not successful on this we will revisit this issue." Kennedy and other Democratic leaders spoke at a news conference that had been called as a final attempt to persuade Bush to sign the measure, which would raise the hourly minimum wage from $3.35 to $4.55 by October 1991.

But even as they gathered for the event, word reached Capitol Hill that Bush had vetoed the bill aboard Air Force One while traveling in the Midwest.

"It is regrettable that this debate must end with a veto," Bush said in a message to Congress accompanying the first veto of his five-month administration.

The Democrats, however, said the debate was far from over.

New Speaker Thomas S. Foley promised a vote in the House today to try to override the veto.

"Hope springs eternal," was all Foley would say when asked if he had a realistic chance of picking up support from more than House members overnight — the additional support Democrats would need for a two-thirds override margin.

Even if Foley delivered the votes, more than enough Republican senators have vowed to side with Bush to sustain the veto.

Both sides view the battle as a contest for momentum in domestic policy.

Perhaps mindful of that, the Democrats made no predictions of winning the immediate fight but escalated their rhetoric in hopes of creating a political issue that will help them in the long haul.

"It is particularly offensive that the president would do this in this manner, demonstrating disdain for the poor working people of this country at the very time he is exerting the maximum effort to provide a $30,000 a year tax cut to the very wealthiest Americans," said Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell.

Coleman Gets Nod

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RICHMOND, Va. — Former state Attorney General J. Marshall Coleman won a narrow victory in Virginia's first GOP gubernatorial primary in 40 years, setting up a fall battle against Democrat L. Douglas Wilder.

"With your work and commitment, we're going to take back the statehouse in 1990," Coleman, 47, told supporters Tuesday night after edging former U.S. Sen. Paul S. Trible Jr.

Wilder, 58, the state's lieutenant governor, called himself the underdog in his bid to become the nation's first elected black governor.

In Tuesday's GOP primary, Coleman had 147,610 votes, or 37 percent, to Trible's 140,061 votes, or 35 percent. U.S. Rep. Standard E. Parris trailed in third with 112,409 votes, or 28 percent.

Trible and Parris pledged to support Coleman, who lost the 1981 governor's race to Democrat Charles S. Robb, who now a U.S. senator.

The turnout of 400,000 was considerably greater than expected for the $10 million race, which was the state's first GOP gubernatorial primary since 1949. Only 235,000 voters turned out for the GOP's March 1988 Super Tuesday presidential primary.

Seabrook Starts Up First Atomic Fission

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEABROOK, N.H. — After starting their first atomic fission reaction, officials at the long-delayed Seabrook power plant said they know how Thomas Edison must have felt when he lit the first electric lightbulb in 1879.

"We certainly haven't reinvented the lightbulb," Seabrook's top executive, Edward Brown, said Tuesday. "But we believe there is great significance in our success."

"Have we changed history? Some people are saying so," Brown said. "Seabrook Station has faced one of the longest, most convoluted licensing processes that any commercial nuclear power plant has ever encountered in this world."

The plant symbolizes the troubled state of the nation's nuclear power industry. Originally planned for commercial operation 10 years ago at a cost of $975 million, the plant suffered repeated regulatory delays and cost overruns that drove its pricetag up to $6 billion.

The plant also became a focus of anti-nuclear activism. Protests since construction began in 1976 have resulted in more than 3,200 arrests, including 734 arrests in two days of civil disobedience earlier this month.

Despite its woes, the seaside plant was completed in July 1986 and last month won its low-power testing license, which allows it to conduct tests at up to 5 percent of full power.

Three faulty safety valves set back the start of fission by about a week, but at 5:23 p.m. Tuesday, Seabrook operators started an atomic chain reaction in the plant's 100 tons of uranium fuel.

At a news conference a half hour later, Brown said Edison's associates cheered when he turned up the voltage and the lightbulb grew brighter.

In Seabrook's control room, there was no apparent sign that nuclear operations had begun, but about 30 plant workers broke into applause and shook hands when told the reactor had split its first atoms.

"We have crossed the threshold," said Joseph Grillo, the operations manager. "We are in the homestretch toward full-power operation, and everyone here is excited about it."

Operators plan to conduct tests for about seven days at power levels ranging from a fraction of 1 percent to 3 percent of capacity.

Still unresolved is whether Seabrook will ever operate commercially. It must win federal approval for evacuation plans for crowded beaches and communities up to 10 miles away.

Judge Is Indicted

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — A federal judge charged with racketeering is accused of doing favors for acquaintances who are felons, including going to other judges and seeking favorable treatment for them.

U.S. District Judge Robert Aguilar is the first federal judge charged with racketeering and the fourth to be accused of crimes in the last decade.

A federal grand jury issued an eight-count indictment Tuesday against Aguilar, 58, a 1980 appointee of President Carter. Conviction on the charges is punishable by 55 years in prison and $2 million in fines.

The grand jury also indicted Abe "The Trigger" Chapman, a self-styled former Mafia hitman and longtime acquaintance of Aguilar's, and Rudy Tam, a convicted embezzler for whom Aguilar allegedly interceded.

The judge, who is based in San Jose, declined to comment to reporters who went to his home in Campbell, near San Jose. Attempts, by The Associated Press to obtain his telephone number were unsuccessful.

Unlike most cases brought under the federal racketeering law, Aguilar is not accused of benefiting financially from his activities.

Reagan 'Knighted'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — Queen Elizabeth II conferred an honorary knighthood on former President Reagan today, Buckingham Palace said.

It was announced as Reagan and his wife, Nancy, lunched with the queen and her husband, Prince Philip, on the fourth day of a British visit.

The palace said the queen made Reagan an Honorary Knight Grand Cross of the Most Honorable Order of the Bath, an order established in 1725 that recognizes services to Britain.

A knighthood is the highest honor Britain bestows on Americans, but only Britons can use the title "Sir."

Reagan was offered a knighthood

"because of his special contribution to the British government under Mrs. Thatcher. He helped Mrs. Thatcher in the Falklands War and in many different ways," Brooks-Baker said.

The United States provided naval intelligence, communications facilities and political support to Britain during its 1982 war against Argentina over the Falkland Islands in the south Atlantic.

Fifty-six Americans have received honorary knighthoods. They include former Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, who was made a knight in February 1988; actors Douglas Fairbanks Jr. and Sidney Poitier; President Dwight D. Eisenhower; and philanthropists Paul Mellon and John Paul Getty II.

Arts Group To Screen Offenders

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The acting head of the National Endowment for the Arts says the agency will attempt to weed out grant recipients who create what one congressman is calling "morally repugnant trash."

Hugh Southern made the offer Tuesday after Rep. Dick Arme, R-Texas, objected to two recent projects funded by the endowment and threatened to seek cuts in the agency's $170 million budget.

Arme collected the signatures of 107 House members on a letter to Southern, the NEA's acting chairman, protesting the use of tax money on projects they deemed inappropriate because of sexual or moral content.

Arme and two House Appropriations Committee members met Tuesday with Southern to discuss guidelines for grant recipients that "clearly pay respect to public standards of taste and decency," Arme said.

Southern said he believes the NEA can craft "something that's agreeable to all parties that doesn't get into any kind of chilling of expression."

Arme complained about an NEA grant to artist Andres Serrano, who received $15,000 in 1987 and created a picture of a crucifix submerged in a jar of urine.

Arme also objected to a $30,000 award in 1988 to support a national tour of a 150-piece retrospective, "Robert Mapplethorpe: The Perfect Moment."

According to Arme's letter to Southern, the exhibit contains "nude photographs of children, homoerotic shots of men and a sadomasochistic self-portrait of the artist, and other morally repugnant materials of a sexual nature."

Arme said he wants the agency to consider a potential recipient's past work when handing out grants. Also at Tuesday's meeting were Reps. Sidney Yates, D-Ill., chairman of the House Appropriations subcommittee on Interior, and John Murtha, D-Pa., a member of the panel.

The peer panels that review grant applications and make recommendations to the National Council of the Arts, which advises the NEA, "in general do a very good job of advising us," Southern said. "On very rare occasions, they may recommend something that may be offensive to some people."

But the NEA "cannot absolutely guarantee none of our grants go to exhibits or works that do not offend anyone," Southern said.

Brazil Spurns Alcohol For Fuel As Bush Asks U.S. To Go For It

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil — At a time President Bush has urged Americans help reduce air pollution by building cars that run on alcohol, Brazil is ending a similar experiment because it has proven so costly.

Brazil in 1975 launched its Pro-Alcohol program and created millions of alcohol-powered cars in the world's first large-scale test of the fuel.

The leaders of this oil-importing country believed the program could mean not just greater energy independence but also big savings. Alcohol is made from sugar cane, of which Brazil is a leading producer.

Today, however, the government is urging a return to old-fashioned, polluting, gasoline engines.

Burdened with a huge foreign debt and 1,000 percent inflation, Brazil says it simply cannot afford to subsidize the $40-a-barrel fuel.

"Pro-Alcohol is ... inflationary and consumes as much energy as it produces," said Joao Augusto Gurgel, a longtime critic and the owner of the Gurgel auto plant.

In announcing measures to combat air pollution, Bush on Monday offered incentives to the U.S. auto industry to build cars that run on cleaner-burning fuels such as alcohol and natural gas.

When Brazil's alcohol program started, alcohol was simply mixed with gasoline at 22 percent to make gasohol.

In 1979, the program got more ambitious. The first 2,271 pure-alcohol cars were produced. To compensate for poor mileage, the government made alcohol 35 percent cheaper than gasoline and offered tax breaks on the new cars.

The incentives worked. Sales of alcohol cars shot up from 0.3 percent of total sales in 1979 to 28.5 percent the next year.

By 1985, alcohol cars accounted for 96 percent of all autos sold. Today, 3.7 million of Brazil's 12.9 million vehicles run on pure alcohol.

The alcohol industry grew with it. Distilleries today produce 3.2 billion gallons of alcohol a year, five times more than a decade ago.

One of the benefits was less air pollution. Alcohol cars produce half the carbon monoxide of gasoline-powered ones and no harmful hydrocarbons.

But Petrobras, the government oil monopoly, said it has spent $649 million on alcohol subsidies since 1981.

Worse, when it raised alcohol prices, the government had to raise gasoline prices, too, to keep the 35 percent spread. The merry-go-round of price increases added to inflation.

Also, offshore oil fields were discovered in Brazil that made the country less dependent on imports. Brazil now produces about 600,000 barrels a day, or about 55 percent of its oil needs.

In May, world sugar prices rose, and many Brazilian cane growers sold their harvests for sugar instead of alcohol. Service stations in some cities simply ran out of the fuel.

"It was like we were on the Titanic approaching an iceberg, but nobody believed it would hit — and it did," said Petrobras President Carlos Sant'Anna.

The government immediately reduced the amount of alcohol in gasohol to 18 percent and urged automakers to cut the number of pure-alcohol cars produced to 50 percent of the total.

Miners Ordered Back To Work

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLESTON, W. Va. — A federal judge has ordered unionized employees from at least a dozen coal mines back to work, but some strikers said they would remain off the job.

An estimated 10,000 miners stayed off the job for a second day Tuesday in support of a strike that began April 5 against Pittston Coal Group. About 1,600 workers in Virginia and West Virginia are on strike against Pittston, the nation's largest coal exporter.

U.S. District Judge Dennis Knapp issued his ruling as about 250 other United Mine Workers members ignored a similar order he made Monday.

His latest order applied to five Island Creek Coal Co. mines, five Cannelton Industries Inc. mines, one Landmark Corp. mine and an undetermined number of Kesscoal Inc. operations, all in southern West Virginia. The ruling was requested by those companies.

The number of miners covered could not be immediately determined.

The judge said it appears the union is violating a no-strike clause in its 1983 national contract, but the union insisted it did not authorize the walkout.

The wildcat walkout appeared to be concentrated in Charleston-based District 17, said Gary White, president of the West Virginia Coal Association. Some walkouts also were reported in Beckley-based District 29.

Gorby Urges West To Back Reforms

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

STUTTGART, West Germany — Mikhail S. Gorbachev, buoyed by an outpouring of goodwill and a new friendship pact with West Germany, consulted the leaders of this high-tech stronghold today looking for expertise to advance his reforms.

A crowd of 5,000 gathered behind barriers across from the New Castle state residence where Gorbachev spent more than two hours talking with political and industrial leaders of Baden-Wuerttemberg, one of West Germany's most prosperous states.

Before his formal meetings with local leaders and a tour of a robotics and industrial machinery exhibit at Stuttgart University, the Kremlin leader mingled with the crowd to thunderous cheers and cries of "Bravo, Gorby."

"I like Mike," "Greetings, Gorby," and "New Thinking, No New Weapons," proclaimed some of the signs hoisted by the well-wishers.

Referring to the cheering receptions he has been accorded at all of his public appearances, Gorbachev said, "this has really pleased all the Soviet people."

While he talked business with industrial and political leaders, his wife, Raisa, visited a working-class neighborhood and paid a brief call on a local family before returning to the castle for lunch.

The couple were greeted upon arrival at Echterdingen airport by Badem-Wuerttemberg state's governor, Lothar Spaeth, rumored to be a challenger to Chancellor Helmut Kohl in next year's federal elections.

Gorbachev's visit is likely to impart even more prestige on the governor, who oversees one of the nation's most prosperous regions.

On Tuesday, Gorbachev appealed for close integration of the West German and Soviet economies to make the countries' improving relations "more quake-resistant."

Addressing West German business leaders at the Cologne Stock Exchange, the Soviet president challenged them to invest in large Soviet projects rather than "trifles."

West Germany is the Soviet Union's largest Western trading partner, but Gorbachev said the level of trade is small compared to the possibilities.

He also called on the West to lift restrictions on high-technology transfers. Gorbachev is seeking advanced Western technology and know-how to rebuild Soviet industry and keep his promise that reform will bring average Soviets a better life.

West Germany's most powerful banker has warned that it could take up to two decades to reform the Soviet economy, which is plagued by consumer shortages and shoddy goods.

"But precisely because it will take so long, there is a need to start immediately and steadfastly pursue the reform efforts," Deutsche Bank chairman Alfred Herrhausen said in a television interview Monday night.

His four-day visit, which ends Thursday, has been marked by a desire on both sides for a fresh start in Soviet-German relations and co-operation between the historical adversaries in pursuit of European unity.

While the Soviet Union clearly hopes the summit will yield deeper economic ties with West Germany and other Western nations, officials on both sides have stressed that they are part of a broad strategy endorsed on Tuesday.

The document spells out common objectives for improving security and ensuring peace, and it stresses other nations should not fear closer ties between Moscow and Bonn.

It proclaims their desire for "a common European home in which the United States and Canada have their place" and where all nations exist in "peaceful competition with one another."

In an address at a state dinner at Augustusburg Castle outside Bonn, Gorbachev predicted, "Our cooperation can serve as a catalyst for new relations between the whole of East and West."

Government spokesman Hans Klein described the declaration signed by Gorbachev and Chancellor Helmut Kohl as a "turning point" in Soviet-West German relations.

Israeli Warplanes Blast Rebel Base

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BESHAMOUN, Lebanon — Six Israeli warplanes blasted a Palestinian guerrilla base today in Syrian-controlled hills above Beirut, killing three fighters and wounding nine in two bombing runs.

A police spokesman said the base outside the hilltop village of Bshamoun harbored Palestinian guerrillas from four groups, all factions of the Palestine Liberation Organization and with headquarters in Damascus, Syria.

The Israeli military command said the attack was aimed at one of the groups, the Palestine Liberation Front.

The police spokesman, who cannot be identified in line with standing rules, said the base sheltered guerrillas who evacuate their regular bases during the day to avoid Israeli air strikes.

Meanwhile, Syrian and Christian gunners traded rocket and artillery fire in and around Beirut amid reports that Christian army commander Gen. Michel Aoun had rejected a Syrian proposal for halting the confrontation.

Police said three people were killed, including a sergeant serving with Aoun's troops.

The casualties raised the overall toll to 370 people killed and 1,441 wounded since the fighting broke out on March 8.

The guerrilla base bombed by the Israelis is located in pine woods just outside Bshamoun, a tiny Druse village about eight miles southeast of Beirut. Many of the trees caught fire after the planes, diving from clear skies, dropped at least 10 bombs on the guerrillas' position.

Palls of smoke could be seen rising from the area as guerrillas fired their AK-47 rifles into the air to warn away reporters and photographers.

"They've raided our base," shouted one angry fighter, wearing a red headband. "I'll shoot whoever approaches the area."

Four ambulances sped into the base, each carried one wounded guerrilla to Kamal Jumblatt Hospital in Choueifat, a nearby Druse town, the rescuers said.

Police said two planes first dropped four rockets on the base at 11:50 a.m. Four more jets swept low over the base 20 minutes later and dropped six more bombs.

A guerrilla, who identified himself only as Ayman, said: "We didn't even hear the jets roaring overhead. We realized we were under attack when the first two planes fired four rockets."

The police spokesman said the base sheltered guerrillas from the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, the Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine, the Popular Struggle Front and the Palestine Liberation Front.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed slightly higher in moderate early trading today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 4.30 to 2,507.84 by 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about a 3-to-2 margin, with 539 up, 352 down and 534 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 25.5 million shares after the first 30 minutes of trading. The NYSE composite index of all its listed common stocks edged up 0.19 to 181.13.

In the early going, Paramount Communications, which has offered $175 a share in cash to acquire Time, led the list of actively traded NYSE issues, sporting a gain of 1 1/2%, to 59 3/4%.

General Electric, rumored to be interested in making a bid for Time also, declined 3/8 to 53 3/8 and was also among the most heavily traded shares.

Warner Communications, which had agreed to a stock swap merger with Time, rose 1/8 to 53 1/2.

Among the blue chips, International Business Machines, which gained 2 1/2% on Tuesday, pulled back 1/8 to 110 1/2.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average ended with a loss of 15.30 at 2,503.54.

The NYSE's composite index ended at 180.94, down 1.20.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about a 2 to 1 margin on the NYSE, with 1,023 down, 490 up and 464 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 164.87 million shares, against 151.46 million in the previous session.

Gephardt Elected Majority Leader As Democrats Reorganize In House

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Rep. Richard Gephardt today was elected House majority leader as Democrats sought to recover from the ethics turmoil that brought down two of their top three officials.

Gephardt defeated Rep. Ed Jenkins of Georgia by a vote of 181-76.

Three Democrats were vying for the No. 3 job in the party hierarchy.

Gephardt failed last year in a bid for the party's presidential nomination.

In selecting him, Democrats turned to a figure with lots of television experience, a populist message honed on the presidential campaign trail and — perhaps most important in Washington's current ethics climate — a personal background already well-scoured by the media and found clean.

The Missouriian's relatively easy win came in large measure because of his ability to listen and seek consensus, demonstrated over 12 years in Congress, his reputation as a legislative strategist, and his campaign work last year on behalf of many Democrats.

The whip's race pitted Rep. William Gray, D-Pa., the chairman of the Democratic caucus, against Rep. David Bonior, D-Mich. Running a distant third by most accounts was Rep. Beryl Anthony, D-Ark., the chairman of the party's House campaign arm.

Gray, the early favorite, had been hampered by reports the FBI was investigating whether there was a no-work "ghost employee" on his staff. The Justice Department said this week that Gray himself is not a target of the probe, and Gray's attorney, Abbe Lowell, said the congressman met last week with FBI agents and will continue to cooperate.

"I think when all is said and done, they will also end up confirming that there has been nothing wrong done in my office, past or present," Gray said.

The 259 members of the caucus, the organization of all House Democrats, vote to fill the jobs by secret ballot.

Rep. Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., moved up from majority leader last week to become speaker of the House after Jim Wright, D-Texas, stepped down over ethics allegations. Democratic whip Tony Coelho, D-Calif., is leaving Congress on Thursday because of questions about his financial dealings.

The leadership shakeup marks what Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., called "the moving of a new generation of political power into this place." The new team will be more technocratic, more pragmatic, more interested in bipartisan consensus than its predecessors.

But it may also lack some of the taste for partisan infighting seen in Wright and particularly in Coelho. "I felt I was on the starting team, and was one of the stars," Coelho said. "But you remove one of the starters, and the team adjusts. Somebody's going to do the political work, because it needs to be done, and there's recognition for it, and the caucus is going to demand it."

Gephardt offered campaign-honed media savvy to the visible No. 2 job.

"It raises the stature of the House," Coelho said. "It in effect makes House members bigger players on the national scene."

Farmville Says Yes To Change

for Farmville to progress economically and in public service. We needed a change. A slight majority of the people apparently agree with me. I see this as a starting point.

"I think Farmville has got to get clear as to whether it just wants to maintain or to grow. And if we are to grow, we've got to take a stand to have the kind of policies that will create growth. I think this election and the policy change we commissioners made in the regular June meeting which lets the town participate in subdivision development costs both will foster some growth. Yes, I'm happy this morning."

Kue agreed with Speight's opinion that there will be no major policy changes until a town manager is hired. He said he believes that making no changes immediately is wise. "Without someone at the helm, I think we'd only have a mess if we tried to make major changes," he said.

Tuition

20-percent tuition increase for in-state students and a 15-percent hike for out-of-state students. Overall, that plan would generate nearly $20 million in new revenue.

"This idea is one of the worst to come about in this state in many years," Roakes said. "The increase in tuition would be the biggest in 20 years."

Roakes said the proposal would raise tuition at ECU for an in-state student from $432 to $518 per year.

For out-of-state students at ECU, the House recommendations would be a raise in tuition from $4,270 to $5,124 per year, he said.

"In today's economy, $500 to $600 a year tuition might seem like an incredible bargain, and compared with other tuition costs at most state universities, it is.

"But this low cost is something that the residents of this great state have taken pride in. We have taken pride in keeping an education within the reach of a vast majority of the people," Roakes said. "By raising tuition, you would be going against the goal of our state in educating more people."

In-state tuition in the UNC system has not been raised since a 5 percent increase in the fall of 1987, according to the UNC general administration office.

Roakes and his executive board have approved a resolution opposing the tuition hike and will send it to legislators. Roakes said he has also written several lawmakers, and he plans to visit the General Assembly this month to lobby against the plan.

The Associated Press has reported that state lawmakers are considering a Senate compromise plan in which in-state and out-of-state tuition would rise 8.5 percent next year. In 1991, out-of-state tuition would rise another 8.5 percent.

Though a few students could afford the 20 percent increase without any problem, Roakes said he is opposed to any type of increase next year because most students would be hurt.

"I'm totally against a 20 percent increase. I'm against the 8.5 percent increase," he said. "I feel the vast majority of students will not be able to afford this."

105-97 Win In Game 4 Completes Sweep Of Finals For Pistons

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Mission accomplished. From the final sorrowful day of last season to the final joyous day of this one, the Detroit Pistons dedicated themselves to winning the NBA championship.

Others might want the title, but the Pistons had to have it. It became an obsession. Coming close no longer was enough.

There was nothing close about the way they took the title from the team that had won it more than any other club in the 1980s. They dethroned the Los Angeles Lakers in four games with a triple-threat backcourt, a double-teaming defense and single-mindedness.

Sure, the Lakers were devastated by injuries to starting guards Magic Johnson, the NBA's most valuable player, and Byron Scott. And Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, at 42, was far from the player he was at 32 and 22.

All that made the Pistons' task easier. But their minds were just as tough as they became the fifth team to sweep a best-of-7 Final. Detroit completed the sweep with a 105-97 triumph in Game 4.

"They lost two key players and that was unfortunate," Detroit Coach Chuck Daly said after the Pistons completed a four-game sweep with a 105-97 victory Tuesday night. "Our guys are tough-minded and they believed they could do it all along."

"We willed this championship," said Detroit's Bill Laimbeer, who had 16 points. "Last year, we sat around this locker room. Some of us cried, like myself."

On Tuesday night, Mark Aguirre cried. "I've waited all my life for this," said the forward obtained by Detroit from Dallas of Adrian Dantley on Feb. 15.

The eight-year veteran sat in the locker room, and carressed and kissed the championship trophy as tears streamed down his face.

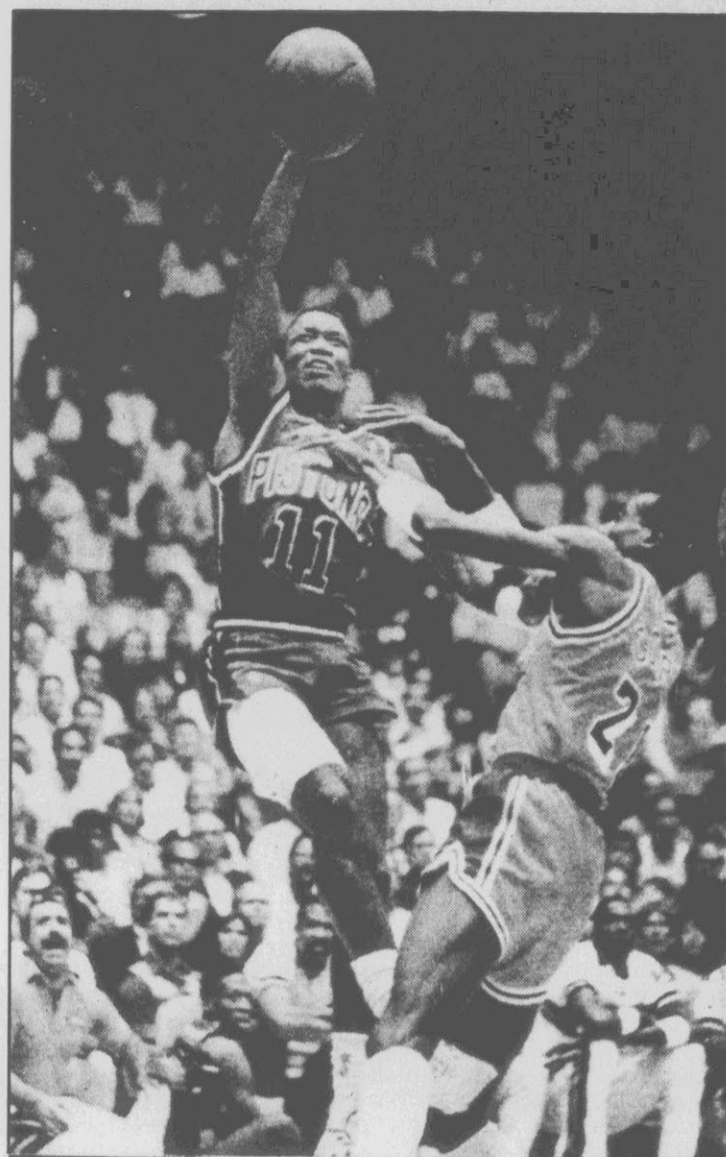

His close friend, Isiah Thomas, played in last year's title round for Detroit.

"We would not be the basketball team we are today if we did not experience what we did last year," he said. "It feels like I'm in Heaven and I'm floating. It's a great feeling."

The Pistons, an NBA member for 40 years but never a champion, led Los Angeles 3-2 in last year's NBA title series. They could almost taste the champagne.

But they lost Game 6 on Abdul-Jabbar's two free throws with 14 seconds left. Game 7 also went down to the final minute. Again, they fell short in the same Forum where they stood tall Tuesday night in the franchise's 41st and finest year.

Injuries Hurt L.A.'s Title Chances

By Hal Bock

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Imagine climbing into your car some morning, casually turning on the ignition and then discovering that two of the wheels were missing in action.

The absent equipment would be no more vital to the operation of your auto than, oh, say, starting guards

Magic Johnson and Byron Scott are to the operation of the Los Angeles Lakers.

Scott averaged nearly 20 points per game and Magic is Magic, the league's MVP. You could hitchhike down to the auto supply store for a couple of replacement wheels. The Lakers were not nearly as fortunate when Scott and Johnson went down with pulled hamstrings.

Forced to try to finesse its way through the NBA finals against Detroit without its starting backcourt, Los Angeles came up short.

Four games short.

The Pistons capitalized on the backcourt mismatch again Tuesday night, completing a sweep with a 105-97 wipeout for their first championship ever. They did it against LA's shock troops, players who got precious little playing time when Johnson and Scott were in operating order.

"It was unfortunate the Lakers lost some players, but that's a fact of life," Pistons coach Chuck Daly said. "I don't want to see an asterisk by this championship. You've got to have a car to finish the Indianapolis 500."

Williams Named New Terp Coach

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BALTIMORE — It was the only call Gary Williams would have answered. Maryland athletic director Lew Perkins made it and Williams is the Terrapins' basketball coach.

Williams left Ohio State after three seasons to return to his alma mater, becoming the third coach in three years at Maryland, a once-prominent program riddled with turmoil for most of that time.

"There weren't any other jobs I was interested in," Williams said Tuesday. "... There is nothing Ohio State did or did not do that led me to feel how I do about the University of Maryland."

Williams, who was a three-year starter before graduating in 1968, will be taking his fourth head coaching position in an 11-year career in which he has amassed a 217-128 record.

At Ohio State, Williams ran up a 59-41 record. He coached at American University from 1978-82 and Boston College from 1982-86 before taking over the Buckeye program, posting a winning record and at least two 20-victory seasons at each stop.

He called his taking the Maryland job "a career move." He signed a five-year contract that will pay him $125,000 in annual salary and a guaranteed $75,000 for radio and television shows. He is expected to earn more from en-

Norman Seeking Credibility At U.S. Open Championship

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — Credibility is becoming a problem for Greg Norman.

His recent lack of success has prompted increasing — and increasingly snide — questions about his position as one of the world's great golfers.

A nationally circulated magazine came to the editorial conclusion that the "Great White Shark" is over-rated.

Norman, a white-haired, flamboyant Australian, is painfully aware of the situation.

Twice in recent months he has sought periods of solitary introspection. The first followed his last-place finish in the Nabisco Championships last year.

The other came after his annual disappointment at Augusta, Ga. in the Masters.

"I've re-targeted myself," he said after a three-week break from competition that included fishing and scuba-diving in Mexico and the Bahamas.

"The best three weeks I've had in a long, long time," he said before a practice round for the 89th U.S. Open, that begins Thursday at Oak Hill.

"I want to play golf for another 10 to 14 years at least as well as I've played the last 10.

"I've reflected on things for the last three weeks. I have a new attitude and a new outlook," a more relaxed, less pressure-ridden attitude, he said.

"It may be just what I needed," said Norman, who admitted to self-imposed pressure to win and win quickly. He's collected 53 titles around the world, but only one in the United States in the last three years. Despite repeated challenges, his only victory in a major championship came in the 1986 British Open.

"It's not that I've been trying too hard," Norman said. "I don't think you can do that. If you aren't trying, the hardest you can, then you aren't trying hard enough."

"But trying too hard and wanting to win too much are two different things."

The desire to win in this intensely competitive man has been thwarted by an incredible series of circumstances in recent years.

"The things that have happened to him would devastate a less player or a lesser man," said Curtis Strange, the defending U.S. Open title-holder and a close friend and frequent practice partner of Norman.

Norman's trials in golf's majors are well documented. He lost a playoff to Fuzzy Zoeller in the 1984 U.S. Open. He lost to Bob Tway's last-hole birdie from a bunker in the 1986 PGA.

But it is in the Masters that he has been destroyed.

Moore Set To Sign With Twins

By Tom Morris

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Rose High's Timmy Moore, an East Carolina University football signee, was set to announce his intentions to sign a contract with the Minnesota Twins today.

Moore scheduled a 4 p.m. press conference at the Final Score Restaurant to officially announce his decision to play professional baseball.

"As far as I know, he's supposed to (sign)," Minnesota scout Steve Williams said.

Moore, a football and baseball standout for the Rampants for the last three years, signed a football scholarship with ECU in February with the intention of also playing baseball for the Pirates. His status, though, changed last week when the Twins selected Moore in the 13th round of the major league baseball amateur draft.

Moore's mother, Barbara, said her son would not answer any questions regarding his decision until after the news conference.

But, according to a source close to the negotiations, the decision has already been made to sign and the two sides have only to work out final details.

"It's all in the workings," the source said.

Moore met with Williams on June 8 to listen to what the team had to offer. Greenville businessman Bill Clark is acting as a financial adviser for Moore, but he would not say what decision Moore had made.

After being drafted last week, Moore said he would meet with ECU football coach Bill Lewis before making a decision and the two talked June 8 and again Monday.

"I have had a chance to talk with him twice, and I have no idea what he's going to do," Lewis said. "All I know is he is going to go, play baseball or choose to attend college and play both football and baseball. I

"I tried to lay out the options as far as he was concerned. I was talking about the different ways he was going to go, play baseball or choose to attend college and play both football and baseball. I tried to talk about the pros and cons of both and let him know my opinion as far as what they are worth. I thought it was important."

With Moore signing with the Twins, he gives up his amateur baseball status. If baseball didn't work out, he could still, however, play college football in the future, but would have to pay his own way through school, just as Florida State's All-America cornerback Deion Sanders did last year while also playing for a New

Rocky Mount Nips Pitt County, 6-5

ROCKY MOUNT — Rocky Mount's American Legion baseball team scored a run in the bottom of the 10th inning to ease past Pitt County Post 39 Tuesday night, 6-5.

Pitt jumped for two in the top of the ninth to tie the game at five before giving up the winning run in the 10th.

Pitt jumped into an early lead in the first inning, scoring three times. David Leisten reached on a bunt single and took an extra base on a throwing error. Heath Clark walked and Chris Christopher singled to score Leisten. Jamie Brewington then doubled in both of the other runners for a 3-0 lead.

Rocky Mount rallied for two in the bottom of the inning as Dan Wood drove in Ricky Taylor and John Bonner drove in Jimmy Adams. Rocky Mount added two more in the fourth as Taylor and Terrell Westrey scored on Adams' double. Rocky Mount then upped its lead to 5-3 as Eric Gazaway scored on a double by Jon Carter.

Pitt then tied it up in the top of the ninth. Derrick Clark reached on a two-base error and was wild pitched to third. Timmy Moore followed with a run-scoring single and Moore raced all the way from first on Leisten's double, tying it up.

But Rocky Mount pushed over the winning run in the 10th. With one out, Wood walked and moved up on an infield out. Gazaway then singled to drive Wood over to end the game.

Leisten and Brewington led Pitt with two hits, while Adams, Gazaway and Carter each had three and Taylor, Wood and Bonner each had two for Rocky Mount.

The loss drops Pitt to 5-3 on the year. Post 39 travels to Wayne County tonight.

Snow Hill Legion Rips Kinston, 20-7

SNOW HILL — Snow Hill's American Legion baseball team pounded Kinston, 20-7, Tuesday night as Cedric Collins drove in six runs.

Collins, who went three for three on the night, drove in three of the runs with a home run in the first inning, highlighting a seven-run outburst that put Snow Hill into the lead for good. Jimmy Hardy added a solo homer in the inning.

Snow Hill then came back with two more runs in the second to up the lead to 9-0, an edge Kinston could not overcome. Walt McKeel led off the inning with another homer. Chris West then walked, but was forced at second by Prentice Uzzell's fielder's choice. Uzzell moved on to second, however, when the relay to first was thrown away. He scored when Collins singled.

Snow Hill went on to add six in the fourth, four in the sixth and one in the seventh. Kinston scored one in the third, five in the fifth, three of them on a homer by Mike Surcey, and one in the eighth.

Surcey led the Kinston hitting with three, while Brian Lang had two. Collins and George Burnette each had three hits for Snow Hill, while Leslie Jackson and McKeel added a pair each.

The win boosts Snow Hill to 5-2 on the year. The team will entertain Edenton on Thursday night.

Eastern Plains Names All-Conference

The Eastern Plains Conference has announced its all-conference teams in baseball and softball, both dominated by regular season champions Greene Central.

The Rams and Lady Rams landed five each on their respective teams. Making the team from Greene Central in baseball were Walt McKeel, Cedric Collins, Jimmy Hardy, Cornelius Hill and Reggie Hill. Ayden-Griffo, Ronnell Peterson, Jay Tripp and James Woodard.

Picked from Farmville Central were George Burnette, Eddie Little and Kevin Wade, while North Pitt landed Craig Willoughby and Roosevelt Hines.

Greene Central's Jim Fulghum and Farmville's Bill Davis were selected as co-coaches of the year.

Greene Central's picks for the softball team were Shana Dunn, LaShawn Dixon, Dawn Herring, Audra Thomas and Latisha Warren. North Pitt placed Maggie Blount, Sabrina Coburn and Keisha Pilgreen on the team.

Darlene Vick and Stephanie Register also made the team from Farmville Central.

Stuart Ennis of North Pitt was named coach of the year in softball.

Olympians To Be Honored By State

North Carolina Amateur Sports, in conjunction with Gov. James G. Martin, will honor past North Carolina Olympians as a part of this year's State Games of North Carolina.

The Olympians will receive a special award, as well as participate in the Opening Ceremonies of the Games. Each will be awarded the Laurel Wreath Award by the Governor at a luncheon in their honor at the Governor's Mansion on June 23 at 11:30 a.m.

Among those attending will be Leora "Sam" Jones, an East Carolina University graduate who participated in the 1984 and 1988 Olympics in Team Handball, and Kay Yow, also an ECU graduate and the head women's basketball coach at N.C. State, who coached the U.S. women's team in 1984 and 1988.

Sears Point Race Deemed Success

SONOMA, Calif. (AP) — Over the weekend in California, NASCAR showed it could stand up to the Grand Prix tour, whose drivers and crews are considered by some to be the best road racers in the world, officials say.

The throng of California media that had just seen the Formula One racers in Phoenix the week before found Sunday's battle between Ricky Rudd and Rusty Wallace more to their liking. And, the contrasting shows put on by two of the world's most prestigious racing organizations couldn't have been more striking.

That's why for NASCAR president Bill France Jr. the inaugural Winston Cup race in the Bay area of northern California was successful beyond his wildest dreams.

The Bay area media responded with surprise, especially with the door-to-door clashes between Rudd and Wallace. Rudd tried to put it in perspective, noting "this was a gentleman's race compared to what we do back East."

Rudd, of course, was teasing because the race was anything but courteous. Wallace banged on Rudd in nearly every corner down the stretch, trying to gouge his way past, pushing and shoving, inside and outside. Rudd, in response, had to change his style; instead of his methodical attack, Rudd went wild himself in the final mile, careening wildly through the flat, twisting turns.

When it was over, they both called it great fun.

The crowd, though, was not your typical Southern stock car crowd. This was a surprisingly mellow, well-behaved and very upscale crowd. The crowd, both its size and manner, made a big impression on the NASCAR teams.

Valenzuela Shows His Old Form

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It was just like the old days. Fernando Valenzuela cooled off the hottest team in baseball.

Houston had won six straight, 16 of 17. Mike Scott was pitching for the Astros, Valenzuela for the Dodgers.

But before beating Atlanta last Wednesday, Valenzuela hadn't won in 51 weeks. Not much was expected.

Valenzuela, however, pitched a four-hitter over 7 1-3 innings Tuesday night and Los Angeles beat the Astros 3-2.

"It was a tough game," Valenzuela said. "The only way to come back is to throw a lot."

Valenzuela, 2-5, struck out three and walked four. Jay Howell finished with one-hit relief for his 13th save.

"I felt pretty good, but I was a little wild," Valenzuela said. "My arm feels the same, but the only thing that matters is to throw strikes. I have to be more consistent."

Valenzuela, 2-5, had not won in Dodger Stadium since last June 8, when he also beat Houston and Scott.

Scott, 10-4, pitched a five-hitter followed with a sacrifice fly.

Jose DeLeon, 8-4, who had beaten the Expos four straight times since June 1985, gave up three hits in seven innings.

Reds 9, Padres 6

Eric Davis hit a pair of two-run homers and Todd Benzinger a three-run homer as Cincinnati sent San Diego to its seventh straight loss and 10th in 11 games. Davis has five homers in seven games this year against the Padres.

Danny Jackson, 5-8, allowed six hits and five runs in 5 2-3 innings, striking out eight and walking five. Walt Terrell, 4-8, gave up seven hits and six runs in 4 1-3 innings.

Jack Clark struck out four times, giving him 10 strikeouts in his last 11 at-bats.

Cubs 4, Mets 2

Andre Dawson, playing in his first game since coming off the disabled list, hit a sacrifice fly to snap a sixth-inning tie. The first-place Cubs have won 14 of their last 20 road games and four of five against the Mets.

Mike Bielecki, 5-2, allowed two runs and six hits in 6 1-3 innings. Mitch Williams finished with perfect relief for his 15th save.

Chicago tied the score on Shawn Dunston's two-run homer in the fifth and took the lead with two runs in the sixth against Ron Darling, 4-5, who allowed four hits in seven innings and struck out seven.

Phillies 10, Pirates 2

Dickie Thon hit a three-run homer and Philadelphia won for only the fourth time in 18 games. All four Philadelphia victories since May 23 have been against Pittsburgh.

Ken Howell, 6-3, allowed three hits and one run in five innings. Morris Madden, 1-1, gave up five hits and three runs in four innings in his first big-league start in 11 professional seasons.

Giants 3, Braves 2

Atlee Hammaker scattered eight hits over 7 1-3 innings and Atlanta committed five errors that led to two unearned runs. San Francisco has won four consecutive games while the Braves have lost five straight.

Hammaker, 6-4, struck out five and walked none before Craig Leferts finished with one-hit relief for his 12th save.

Zane Smith, 1-10, lost his sixth straight, giving up seven hits in seven innings.

Tribe Is Trying To Make Amends

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ever since the Cleveland Indians disappointed themselves and everyone else in 1987, people have pretty much ignored the Tribe.

But maybe — and it's a big maybe — the Indians might be worth watching this year.

Greg Swindell won again Tuesday night and Cleveland beat the Chicago White Sox 9-6 to end a three-game losing streak.

The Indians are just 30-32, although only Baltimore at 33-26 is better in the wobbly American League East. With a young and more mature pitching staff and some big hitters, Cleveland could contend for its first title since 1954.

Then again, it could be 1987 all over again. That year, many people predicted the Indians would win; instead, they were an embarrassment and went 61-101.

Swindell, 8-1, took a five-hit shutout into the seventh inning before Carlton Fisk homered. The host White Sox chased Swindell with five runs in the eighth.

"He was out of gas," Indians manager Doc Edwards said. "But I told him to go out there for another inning to try to save the bullpen."

Doug Jones pitched the ninth for his 14th save.

Dave Clark snapped out of a 2-for-30 slump with four hits for Cleveland. He hit a two-run single during a five-run third that made it 6-0.

"I've struggled a lot," Clark said. "No reason. I just haven't been hitting. I have been pulling off the ball. Tonight I tried to stay back to get good pitches to hit."

Adam Peterson, who came up from Class AAA Vancouver on Monday, was chased in the third and took the loss. Chicago's 23-41 record is the worst in baseball.

"We got banged out of it early," first-year Manager Jeff Torborg activated from the disabled list earlier in the day. Frank Williams, 3-3, got the loss.

John Dopson tied an AL record with four balks in 3 2-3 innings. He leads the majors with 11 balks and is the only Red Sox pitcher with a balk this season.

Boston got 16 hits, but Wade Boggs went 0-for-4 and ended his 12-game hitting streak.

Twins 4, Mariners 3

Al Newman singled home the winning run in the bottom of the 11th inning as Minnesota beat Seattle.

The Twins tied the game in the ninth on pinch hitter John Moses' RBI single and won it in the 11th against Jerry Reed, 3-4.

Gary Gaetti singled, took third on Randy Bush's single and Gene Larkin was intentionally walked to load the bases with one out. Newman singled over the Mariners' drawn-in outfield.

Gaetti scored the tying run in the ninth after reaching base when he struck out on a wild pitch by Mike Schooler. Schooler had gotten saves in all 14 previous chances this season and was trying for his league-leading 15th.

Gary Wayne won his first major-league decision with 2 2-3 hitless innings.

Blue Jays 4, Brewers 3

Pinch hitter Kelly Gruber's solo home run in the top of the ninth inning lifted Toronto over Milwaukee at foggy County Stadium.

dorsements and a summer camp, enough to put him near the estimated $350,000 he earned annually at Ohio State.

"It's something that I guess every player who gets into coaching that comes from a program that has a pretty high level of basketball, it's in the back of your mind," Williams said. "I never went through my coaching career thinking that I had to coach at Maryland in order to reach the pinnacle as a coach."

"But, given the chance to coach here, it was something I really had to look at because I might never get another opportunity. I think it would be one of those things that I would look back on no matter what success I had at Ohio State and wonder, 'Should I have tried it?'"

The team Williams inherits was 9-20 last season, the most losses by a Terpin team since 1941. The record in the Atlantic Coast Conference was 1-13.

"I don't know a whole lot about each individual player," Williams said. "... I know we need some depth. We need some numbers, to get more people into the program. Looking at it quickly, obviously we need some guard help in the future."

"Basketball is a funny thing. You have to get a little lucky, given the right situation things can change pretty quickly."

The program Williams takes over has been through some tough times the last three years.

Since Len Bias died a drug-related death in June 1986, the Terps struggled to a pair of losing seasons around a 1988 trip to the NCAA tournament. So there are plenty of old wounds that need healing.

"I didn't hire a healer. I hired a basketball coach," Perkins said. "And I think we hired the best basketball coach in the country."

Prior to the 1988-89 season, Maryland lost six players to transfers, academic ineligibility, red-shirting or suspension. An NCAA investigation into alleged violations was started in March and Williams' predecessor, Bob Wade, resigned under pressure May 12.

"I know that Maryland is being investigated, but I don't know anything," Williams said. "That's strictly the NCAA's private matter right now. We'll all find out in the near future and go on from there. I'm concerned ... but at the same time we'll be fine. We'll survive, whatever the situation is."

Williams made a point to say how good his situation was at Ohio State.

"I really felt that when I went to Ohio State that would be the job for me," Williams said. "There was nothing there that didn't meet my expectations ... Ohio State did everything they could to keep me, and I really appreciate that."

"(Ohio State athletic director) Jim Jones and President (Edward) Jennings made every effort. So, they should not take any heat because this is a unique situation."

It is one that will allow Williams to work on the campus he enjoyed so much as a student.

"That was one of the best periods of my life," Williams said. "Playing ball was something that I just loved to do. I look back and, what did I enjoy most growing up, it was playing basketball. I played with a great group of guys when I was here ... I played for a great, fundamental basketball coach in Bud Milligan. He played for Hank Iba and he had a great knowledge and feel for the half-court game."

"I think I learned good fundamentals and good ball-handling skills, and I think that's helped me as a coach."

Leonard Is Looking For Answers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAS VEGAS — Sugar Ray Leonard wants to know. Are his skills slipping, or did Thomas Hearn simply put up a great fight? His future rests on the answer.

"If it wasn't Thomas Hearn and I can't get any better, I'll make a decision," the 33-year-old Leonard said Tuesday. "I have to search for whether it was a bad night, a bad performance, or whether it was Thomas Hearn."

Leonard hinted briefly of retirement the morning after he was knocked down twice by Hearn and had to stage a dramatic final-round rally to pull out a draw and retain his World Boxing Council super middleweight crown.

His reflexes slowed by age and inactivity, Leonard had to rely on sheer determination to remain upright and pull out the draw in a fight that many of the 15,336 fans at Caesars Palace thought Hearn had won.

"When I got into the ring, things didn't click right there," Leonard said. "I just didn't have that little magic I usually have."

The veteran fighters were cheerful and relatively unmarked as they appeared together at a final post-fight news conference to evaluate their performances the night before.

Hearn, in particular, was in fine spirits, the weight of his loss nearly eight years ago to Leonard finally taken from his shoulders.

"I woke up this morning and I had a clear mind," Hearn said. "I said to myself, I wonder who Ray is thinking about right now."

Hearn gained no crowns and no victory in the 12-round rematch, but it was clear he felt vindication for his first loss to Leonard was his.

"It's been tough for me the past eight years, thinking about this man every day, every moment," the 30-year-old Hearn said. "I had to erase it from my mind and that's what I was trying to do last night."

Hearn said a pep talk from his longtime trainer and manager, Emanuel Steward, after he was almost knocked out in the fifth round by a barrage of punches may have been the key to his staying in the fight.

"I told him his entire career in boxing was on the line," Steward said. "I said the next three minutes would determine his place in boxing history."

"When he said that history thing, I had to really focus on it," Hearn said. "I'm very concerned about my place in history."

Leonard's rally in the 12th round gained him a 10-8 round on the scorecard of one ringside judge — just enough to put the card even and make the fight a draw.

"It was similar to the first fight in that it was real close," Leonard said. "I felt I had to pour it on and that if I threw enough punches and applied enough pressure I could get him out of there."

Leonard, the master ring psychologist, thought going into the fight he would have an advantage because Hearn would be all-consumed by his quest for vindication and would make mistakes.

"I thought I had the edge mentally but he was prepared for it," Leonard said. "It was a surprise to me that Tommy put up such a gallant fight."

Rose's Lawyers Still Trying For An Interview With Peters

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — Reputed bookmaker Ronald Peters may be behind bars before lawyers for Pete Rose can interview him.

Lawyers for the Cincinnati Reds' manager want to talk to Peters as part of their preparation for a June 26 hearing on gambling allegations before Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti.

That may not be easy to do now. Peters is scheduled to be sentenced Friday in U.S. District Court on drug and tax evasion charges. Alan J. Statman, one of Peters' lawyers, said Tuesday that scheduling conflicts could prevent an interview before the sentencing.

"At least for this week, it doesn't seem a meeting is going to take place," Statman said.

Since last week, when they angrily called off an interview with Peters scheduled for last Saturday because of the ground rules set for it, Rose's lawyers have declined to discuss the matter.

"We have no comment on Peters at all," Robert A. Pitcairn Jr., one of Rose's lawyers, said Tuesday.

One of the stipulations was that Rose would pay Peters $25,000 if any of the information divulged during the interview was made public by Rose's lawyers before Giamatti rules in the case.

That condition was dropped Friday by Peters' lawyers, who renewed their offer of an interview.

Moore Set To Go Pro ...

York Yankees' farm team, according to Lewis.

There was also the remote possibility that Moore could sign to play in the Twins' farm system while also playing college football, as Sanders did.

"He could still play college ball, the only thing is he would have to pay his own way. They are technically walkons," Lewis said.

There has been speculation about whether Moore would be eligible next season at ECU pending final grades, but Rose High guidance counselor John Leich said he wasn't aware of any academic concerns.

"He's got his SAT score. He's got his core (curriculum requirements). Nobody has come to me and said there is a problem," Leich said. "As far as ECU was concerned I didn't think there was any problem."

Gene Owens, associate director of admissions for ECU, said he was bound by federal law from disclosing academic information about any potential students.

Lewis said he is awaiting final transcripts on all his recruits for next year, but said no decision had been made on what to do with non-qualifiers.

"That would be a decision that would have to be made by our administration on whether we wanted to bring in a player who would be below NCAA requirements," Lewis said.

Moore was a three-year starter for Rose on both the football and the baseball teams.

In football, he was a two-way starter, playing defensive end and tailback. He was the Big East 4-A Player of the Year for the last two years as he led the Rampants to back-to-back undefeated regular seasons. He rushed for just over 1,000 yards as a junior and 1,240 yards as a senior.

He was an honorable mention USA TODAY All-America and was named All-State by the Associated Press after this past season. He also has been chosen to play in the East-West All-Star football game in July.

Before signing with ECU, Moore also considered South Carolina, where he also would have been allowed to play both baseball and football.

In baseball, Moore was a starter in center field, batting over .400 both his junior and senior seasons. During his junior year, he was one of the key players on a Rose team that went undefeated during the regular season and advanced to the state 4-A finals before falling to Harding. This past year, Moore hit .440 with five home runs and 21 RBIs as the Rampants were again undefeated and moved on to the Eastern 4-A semifinals before being defeated by Wilson Hunt.

Missing Players Hurt Lakers' ...

Daly had the car, or at least a complete set of wheels, and the Lakers did not.

As it had throughout the series, the Detroit backcourt exploited the backcourt mismatch. MVP Joe Dumars, Isiah Thomas and Vinnie Johnson combined for 53 points and totaled 264 for the series, an average of 66 per game or 22 apiece for each Piston guard.

Compare that with a combined 104 points for Michael Cooper, Tony Campbell and Michael Cooper, LA's backcourt survivors after Scott and Johnson were hurt.

The Pistons were not interested in LA's personnel problems. They remembered coming ever so close to beating the Lakers in the seventh game a year ago and dedicating themselves to not letting that disappointment happen again.

"We willed this championship," Bill Laimbeer said. "Last year, we sat around this locker room and some of us cried. Everybody on the team knew we wanted it next year and we willed this championship."

"From Day One, we had this set in our minds," Dumars said. "Last year, Adrian Dantley (since traded) and I sat there and looked at each other for about an hour after it was over. We didn't say a word. It was the worst feeling in the world."

Remember, that Piston team was not exactly operating on all cylinders, either. Thomas limped into the Forum on crutches that night, his swollen ankle more suited for a cast than a basketball game. So the Lakers will get no sympathy from Detroit for the absence of Johnson and Scott.

"You have to feel like you're the best team, regardless of who is on the floor," Dumars said. "If they had been on the floor, we would have taken the floor as if we were the best team. We would have come in with that attitude and played with that attitude."

Scott never made it into uniform. He was hurt in practice the day before the opener of the finals and spent the entire series on the end of the bench. Johnson played poorly in the first game but seemed on track again in Game 2, when his hamstring went. He played just under five minutes in Game 3, and not at all in Tuesday's final game.

"It was the toughest thing I've ever had to deal with in my life," he said, "not being able to play and help the team. You work so hard to get to this point. It hurts a lot. I will remember what happened and take it with me through the summer and into next season."

Johnson was asked if he viewed the Pistons' championship, coupled with the retirement of LA's Hall of Fame-bound Kareem Abdul-Jabbar as a changing of the guard at the top of the NBA.

"We're not going anywhere," he said. "We'll be back. We're champions and champions never go away."

Unless, of course, somebody comes along in the dead of night and makes off with their wheels. Then they can disappear in a hurry.

"From Day One, we had this set in our minds," Joe Dumars, who led Detroit with 24 points and was the unanimous choice for playoff most valuable player said. "Last year, Adrian Dantley and I sat there and looked at each other for about an hour after it was over. It was the worst feeling in the world."

This time, the Lakers felt the sting of defeat. Their hopes of becoming only the third NBA team to win three consecutive championships were shattered in a hurry. After winning all 11 games in their first three playoff series, they lost all four in their final one.

"It was a disappointment," said James Worthy, who scored a career high 40 points Tuesday night. "All we can do now is look back at the memories and relive them and then try to get rid of them."

The Lakers have many pleasant memories of the 1980s — five titles, eight trips to the Finals and Abdul-Jabbar, whose 20-year NBA career ended with Tuesday night's loss.

The greatest scorer in league history with 44,149 points in regular season and playoff games, managed just seven Tuesday night. He hit two of eight shots and grabbed only three rebounds in 29 minutes.

"Because of the outcome, I can't feel too good about that," he said. "We fought as hard as we could."

The Lakers held their biggest lead, 44-28 with 8:17 left in the second period. But Detroit cut it to 55-49 at halftime.

The Pistons got their first lead on Dumars' free throw that made the score 59-58 with 9:38 left in the third quarter. It came during a 9-0 run that erased a 58-52 deficit and ended with Rick Mahorn's short jumper that made the score 61-58.

But Los Angeles jumped ahead 78-76 entering the final period. With the score 82-82, backup center James Edwards hit a 20-foot jumper from the right side with 9:54 left in the game. Detroit never trailed again.

Mychal Thompson's short bank shot with 4:17 to play drew the Lakers to within 98-94. But the Pistons were determined not to repeat last year's mistakes and let the chance to become champions slip away.

Thomas' layup with 3:53 left and Dumars' baseline jumper with 1:02 remaining built the lead up to 102-94. The victory and the championship were assured.

"I knew we would come back" from the 16-point deficit, said Thomas, who had 14 points. "I just told my teammates to hang tough and we would win the game."

"Losing two key people makes it difficult to sustain a run," Laker guard Michael Cooper said. "The Pistons played well all season. A championship is a championship, no matter how you win."

"There will always be questions, buts and ifs, but they are the champions now," Scott said.

He missed the entire series with a left hamstring injury suffered in practice the day before it began. Johnson hurt his left hamstring with 4:39 left in the third quarter of Game 2. He missed the rest of that and played only the first 4:46 of Game 3. He didn't play Tuesday night.

"I do not want to discredit their accomplishments," Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley said of the Pistons. "Still, we will never know if this (Los Angeles) is the greatest team ever. That sadness is going to stay with me."

Riley started and ended the series with 98 playoff wins, one fewer than the record held by Red Auerbach of the Boston Celtics.

While Los Angeles' best guards watched, Detroit's guards went wild. Dumars averaged 27.3 points in the series and led his team in scoring in each of the last three games. Guards Dumars, Thomas and Vinnie Johnson scored 264 of Detroit's 436 points in the series.

Detroit allowed fewer than 100 points in 15 of its 17 playoff games. It gave up fewer points per game than any other champion since the 24-second clock was adopted in 1954-55. Its 92.9-point average broke the old record of 94.6 set by Milwaukee in 1974.

"We worked hard all season, executed and stressed defense," Vinnie Johnson said. "We said defense will win it for us and, believe me, it did." So did determination.

A mark of how much the Pistons wanted the title is the way they rolled into the playoffs. They won 27 of their last 30 regular-season games to finish at 63-19, the NBA's best record. Then they won 15 of 17 playoff games. They were 42-5 in their last 47 games.

"They had the best record in the league and when the Finals came around they played like champions," Riley said.

"They're the team of the '80s and we learned a lot from the Lakers," Thomas said. "It felt very good to win this one after losing Game 7 last year. It was a long year to get back to this point."

"It was a terrible feeling in our locker room last year," Dumars said. "Now it's just an unbelievable feeling."

Public Notice

Community Development Block Grant funds are now available from the North Carolina Department of Natural Resources and Community Development for persons who operate or wish to operate a small business. For the purpose of this program, small business is defined as "a business that has less than $750,000 annual gross sales and fewer than 20 full-time equivalent employees." The funds may be used to purchase land, buildings, machinery, equipment, and make renovations. Loans are available for businesses that will be employing more persons as a result of these activities. The maximum loan amount is $60,000 and the interest rate is prime rate. These funds are intended to be leveraging funds and up to 50% of the total project cost may be available.

Anyone wishing to obtain more information may contact Wanda Elks of the Development Department, City of Greenville, PO Box 7207, Greenville, telephone 830-4503.

Savings & Selection!

Many dealerships boast about huge savings on their "extensive selections" of quality previously-owned automobiles. In most cases, however, their selection is "extensively" spread out over dealerships all across North Carolina. But at World Classics by Toyota East, we've got biggest savings on the the best selection of previously-owned luxury cars at any one location in the state!

Each and every automobile on our lot is thoroughly examined for quality by Mr. Ed Sigmon. If it doesn't meet his high standards, we don't sell it. So, whatever your tastes, for tremendous selection and unbeatable savings, find it all in one place—World Classics by Toyota East.

Little League Celebrates 50th Year

June 6, 1939, Three Teams Started It All

By Jules Loh
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. — When you drive south on Route 15 in north-central Pennsylvania, just as you top the crest of Bald Eagle Mountain pull over and cast your gaze to the valley below.

If there could be an ideal spot for the birthplace of Little League baseball, you are looking at it.

The Susquehanna River, its very name a poem, winds down from the green Allegheny hills through a town of 40,000 souls who live in clapboard houses with porch swings and shade trees, a timeless scene off a postcard labeled "America."

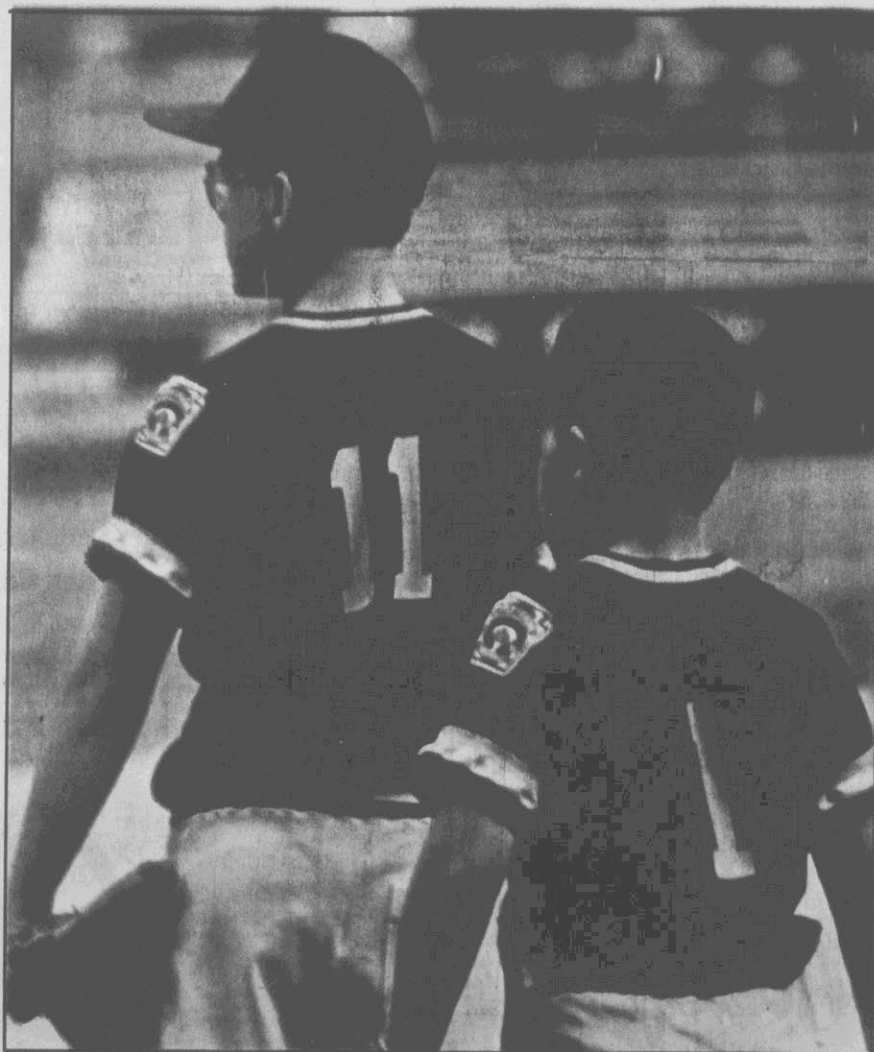

Move closer. An American flag large enough to cover a small infield draws your eye to the north bank of the river. It flies proudly in front of a 45-acre complex of buildings and ball fields, the international headquarters of Little League, Inc.

Little League baseball celebrates its 50th anniversary this year. Boys who played in the first Little League game, on June 6, 1939, have grandchildren playing in the league today.

Still, a half-century seems a relatively brief span for any activity, however appealing, to attain such astonishing growth and earn such a solid place in the national culture. A Little League ballpark has become as common a sight as a church spire in cities, villages and suburbs across the land.

A three-team league of 30 Williamsport boys in 1939 was the seedbed for what Little League, Inc. today calls the largest sports organization in the world. Today, 2.5 million youths play on 140,000 teams in 6,000 leagues in the United States and 33 foreign countries. If all the Little Leaguers joined hands the line would stretch from the Susquehanna to the Rockies.

"Of course I had no idea what Little League would become," says Carl Stotz, who founded the league while working as a clerk in a lumber yard. "All I envisioned at the time was a neighborhood program.

The Daily Reflector/Thomas Forrest

Collice Moore, 11, and Timmy Hardee, 1

Some of what it has become I am not in favor of."

At 79, Stotz still lives in Williamsport. He is a man with an incredible memory and a compulsion to keep daily logs and save receipts.

"It isn't that I enjoy saving things," he once explained to his daughter who complained about the clutter. "It's just that I can't bear to throw anything away."

He can show you, for example, that the total expenses for the first Little League season came to $174.63, that the collection taken up at the first game netted $1.42, that the first boy-sized catcher's mask, ordered from Chicago and which he still has, cost $1.67, the first dozen balls $2. The first year's deficit was $36.72, which Stotz made up out of his own pocket as he did every year until 1943 when the league finally finished in the black.

Now Little League, Inc. has assets of more than $10 million and a staff of 70 paid employees at its headquarters. It charges each of those 140,000 teams a charter fee of $14 each year and earns millions on endorsements of athletic equipment and royalties on the Little League name, which is copyrighted, and the logo, which Stotz

Greenville Little League Launches Its Celebration

By J. Ward Best
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Fifty years ago a group of boys adjusted the bills of their caps, punched the pockets of their gloves, walked onto a ball field and into history.

Every spring since 1949, history has repeated itself for the national Little League. And Saturday, the Greenville-area Little League will celebrate the first 50 years of the junior version of the national pastime.

Along with pop flies and home runs, skydivers and hot-air balloons will fill the skies over Greenville's ball parks at Elm Street and Guy Smith fields. The party-goers will also have a feast of pizza and Pepsi at the two parks.

Of course, the Little Leaguers will play ball. The top three teams in the Tarheel and North State leagues will compete for position in the upcoming tournament.

The celebration begins Friday evening at 5:30 with the seventh and eighth ranked teams of the Tarheel and North State leagues competing. The celebration kicks off Saturday at 11:30 a.m. with skydivers at both parks followed by pairings of the sixth through first ranked teams of each league.

Dominoes Pizza and Pizza Hut will provide the food and Pepsi the drinks for players, managers and coaches throughout the day.

After the games and volunteer awards, a hot-air balloon lift-off at the Elm Street park caps the day's events.

Although not as old as the national Little League — the area program began in 1951 — Greenville has built a lasting reputation in the state. And along the way, it has garnered some diehard fans.

While some players go on as high school and college stand-outs, surely the key to the success of Greenville's program is the former ball players who later become coaches, managers, sponsors and commissioners.

After playing Little League for four years, Mack Mackenzie later coached, served as president of the league and now sponsors a team in the Tarheel league.

Mackenzie says he's been sitting in the bleachers for the past 14 years. Watching four sons participate in Little League, Mackenzie and his wife have sold uncounted cupcakes and sat through more than their share of hot spring and summer days.

"I had a great experience," Mackenzie says, "and I think it's a great thing for the youngsters."

He says the game builds develops character and builds "esprit de corps" for the players.

Mackenzie, who now calls himself a Little League veteran, says the years in the bleachers have mellowed him. "I just want my Pepsi and a blow-pop," he says.

Although he may be a veteran, Mackenzie still has one son playing. His fourth son, Todd, now 12, followed his three older brothers onto the Pepsi team in Little League.

Unfortunately, Todd chose the wrong family ties this year. The team his father sponsors, Mackenzie Security, holds a tight grip on first place going into the play-offs. And Mackenzie Security has beaten Pepsi in both meetings this season.

The 9 to 12-year-olds on Mackenzie's team could head into the double-elimination play-offs with an undefeated record.

Mackenzie jokes that he'll double the salary of coach Don Parrott if he wins the league, but Parrott says the players more than make up for any time he's spent coaching. "I think I get more out of it than the kids do."

In fact, Parrott says he'll be staying involved with Little League action, even though his children long since left the program. Parrott has coached the fundamentals of batting, pitching and catching to area youths for eight years. He also coached last year's all-star team that took second place in the state finals.

He has put more than his time into Greenville Little League.

'Comeback Kids' Is A Little League Fantasy

A Review

By Tim Chandler
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Bob Cairns has put into a novel what most youngsters and adults, at some point in their lives, fantasize about.

There are few people who have participated in baseball — or any sport for that matter — who haven't dreamed of playing for the World Series title or the championship in whatever sport they hold highest in their heart.

Cairns has taken his fantasy, that of Little League baseball, and put it into a novel called The Comeback Kids.

It's his own rendition of a baseball fantasy. The names sound real, as well as the incidents and places in the book. Real people's names and historical events are also used, but they only make Cairns' work seem all the more realistic.

Cairns does a tremendous job in the novel of letting the reader feel what it would be like to try and be on a championship-contending Little League team. The reader finds himself on the van with the team, at practices with the team and in the dugout and gatherings of the team.

The reader also has a chance to experience the disappointment of the New Becton Hot Dogs when they learn that they can't have a shot at the 1954 Williamsport Little League championship.

But that's the basis for the novel.

In 1954, the Hot Dogs were promised by Elmer Thumma, the team's coach, that they would have the opportunity to play for the Williamsport Little League title. Racial prejudice, however interfered and the championship game was never played.

The book is intended to be a 30-year later look at the players, who still have the unanswered question in their mind of what could have and what might have been.

Thumma, who by the way owns a hot dog company known as Elmer's Little Giants, winds up caught in a corporate takeover. In an effort to save his company, Thumma proposes that the 1954 canceled series against the Poughkeepsie Pintails be played — 30 years later.

The key for Thumma is that the Hot Dogs must beat the Pintails five times in pregame exhibitions across the nation in some of America's most cherished ball parks.

Among the stops are Chicago, Baltimore, Detroit, New York and Cleveland.

So, with the financial support of Thumma, the Hot Dogs, now all middle-aged, begin the journey to the first site, which happens to be Chicago's Wrigley Field, in a custom-made, hot-dog shaped van.

For the players, the series, known as "The Little World Series That Shoulda Been But Never Was" was the answer to their dreams. But then again, it would have probably been the answer to any ex-little leaguer's wildest fantasy.

But the Hot Dogs didn't realize what might happen along the way.

None of them thought of the changes that would occur, or had already occurred. The dream they had held in their heart for so long might not be as easy to achieve as they had thought. After all, Little League players do grow up — and sometimes that makes a big difference.

Cairns book has received rave reviews from many people close to the sport of baseball.

Jim "Catfish" Hunter said it reminded him of the fun he used have while playing baseball.

Detroit Tigers commentator Ernie Harwell said that Cairns proves dreams indeed can come true and that what "might have been" can still become a reality.

Cairns, now a resident of Raleigh, grew up and played Little League baseball in New Windsor, Maryland. The Comeback Kids is his first novel. And it is a book for true baseball fans — whether they have fantasies or not.

Don't Feel Cheap By Declining All Invitations

Dear Abby: A number of years ago, a letter that you printed really "struck home" with me and made me realize how blessed I was to have two parents who loved and cared deeply for me. I clipped the letter and placed it in my wallet. Each time I read it, it reminds me about how important it is to drop them a note or give them a call, even if it's just to say "hi."

With Father's Day approaching, I thought you may want to reprint the letter in hopes that it will remind others to take time out of their schedules to remember those who lovingly raised them.

Please sign me ... Thankful They're Alive, or Glad There's Still Time

Dear Abby Abigail Van Buren

Dear Thankful: Although your letter arrived too late for Mother's Day, it's not too late for Father's Day - coming up Saturday. And here it is:

Dear Abby: I am the most heart-broken person in the world. I could always find the time to go everywhere else, but never time to go visit Mom and Dad. They sat at home and loved me just the same. It's too late now to give them those few hours of happiness I was too selfish and busy to give.

Now when I go to their graves and see the green grass above them, I wonder if God will ever forgive me for the heartaches I must have caused them when they were alive. I pray to God that those who still have their parents to visit do so, and show their love and respect while there is still time, for it's later than you think. -- Too Late

Dear Abby: I'm sure my problem is not unique, but I need some advice. My husband comes from a very large family, and they are big party-givers. I'm talking about wedding showers, baby showers, confirmations, communions, graduations from high schools and colleges, etc. If it's for brothers and sisters, and first-generation cousins, I can understand it, but Abby, we get invitations from second- and third-generation cousins we hardly know, and some we've never even seen.

My husband and I are retired and living on a fixed income. Our medical bills are not completely covered by Medicare, and our supplemental insurance does not cover our expenses. We're having a hard time making ends meet.

How does one go about declining invitations without appearing cheap and getting family members we really care about angry with us? -- No Name Or Town, Please

Dear No Name: If you don't know some of these second- and third-generation cousins, they probably don't know you either, but your name was on the list because you're "family." (They may have been told by other family members that you might feel hurt if you weren't invited.)

Simply decline graciously. Send an appropriate card, don't feel guilty, and let it go at that.

Dear Abby: Yes, life is hard for the unambiguous who say exactly what they mean.

My dad told me about this ambiguous statement that appeared in our church bulletin: "Following communion services this Easter Sunday, Mrs. Johnson will lay an egg on the altar." -- Chrissy In Rochester, Minn.

Couple Marries Saturday Afternoon

The First Pentecostal Holiness Church was the setting for the wedding ceremony Saturday of Angela Marie Trueblood and Jimmy Ray Westmoreland Jr.

The bride's parents are the Rev. and Mrs. Calvin S. Trueblood of Richmond, Va. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Ray Westmoreland of Pfafftown.

The double-ring ceremony was conducted by the Rev. E.L. Trueblood. The Rev. Ralph Jernigan Jr., organist, Beverly Trueblood, Kim Buck and Richard Williams, vocalists, presented wedding music.

Terrie Briley Whitehurst of Greenville was matron of honor and the maid of honor was Beverly Trueblood of Richmond, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids included Leigh Ann Westmoreland of Pfafftown, sister of the bridegroom, Sheila Manning of Greenville, Julie Grimsley of Raleigh and Wendy Roper of Pinehurst. Heather Manning of Bethel was flower girl.

MRS. WESTMORELAND

James Bodenheimer of Pfafftown, grandfather of the bridegroom, was best man. Ushers included Jim Westmoreland of Pfafftown, father of the bridegroom, Allen Trueblood of Richmond, brother of the bride, William Tigner of Nashville, Tenn., David Harris of Virginia Beach, Va., and Matthew Erwin of Raleigh. Jeffrey Whitehurst of Greenville was ring bearer.

The bride wore a formal gown of cherished satin. The gown had a modified V-neckline trimmed in schiffli scalloped lace over a sweetheart silhouette. The fitted bodice, basque waist and Renaissance sleeves were encrusted with seed pearls on schiffli embroidered and lace appliques. Scattered lace appliques and schiffli scallops were featured on the hemline. Matching appliques trimmed the cathedral-length train. Her Juliet headpiece of schiffli appliques, pearls and sequin was attached to a two-tiered illusion scalloped veil with appliques. She carried a cascade of peach sweetheart roses, white gladioli, stephanotis, fern and baby's breath tied with picot ribbon and lace.

The flower girl wore a full-length dress of white taffeta and carried a basket of silk flowers and wore a halo of silk flowers in her hair.

The maid of honor and matron of honor wore tea-length gowns of teal cherish satin, a halo of silk flowers and carried colonial nosegays of silk and satin flowers in shades of peach and aqua. Bridesmaids were dressed identically and their flowers were similar.

A reception followed and was held in the fellowship hall.

The couple will live in Cary after a wedding trip to Bermuda.

The bridegroom is a graduate of N.C. State University and is employed by Kimley Horn and Associates in Raleigh. The bride attends Meredith College.

Station Plays Music Via Short Wave

By Bob McKnight
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

METAIRIE, La. — It broadcasts on the short-wave band, that frequency where Radio Free Europe, Radio Moscow and Voice of America jostle governmental ideologies.

But to this station, current events are the latest rock hits. It is WRNO International, the country's only commercial, privately owned short-wave radio station without religious affiliation.

The station signed on in 1982 after owner Joseph Costello III overcame Federal Communications Commission worries that it might provide a forum for opposition to American foreign policy.

But Costello claims he doesn't keep up with world politics.

"When the FCC said 'How are you going to run this radio station?' I said, 'Like any other.'" Costello owns, wholly or partly, five stations in south Louisiana.

"It's not right for this station to meddle in the affairs of other countries," said Costello.

Broadcasting with the equivalent of 3.2 million watts, the station claims listeners on the other side of the world. Costello says he has letters from every state, Canada, South and Central America, Africa, the Caribbean, the Middle East and Europe.

Letters also have come from areas that engineers didn't expect, such as Japan, Australia and other Pacific points.

He said that strength has more than once drawn him into international politics.

Once, he said the FCC called him about a San Francisco church that bought time on the station. The church, it turned out, was tied to an underground group in Yugoslavia that had distributed fliers there to tune in the broadcast on WRNO Worldwide.

When U.S. embassy officials saw the flier, they called the FCC and the FCC called him, Costello said. He said he canceled the broadcast before it aired.

In a second incident, Costello said an Iranian group posing as a non-political cultural organization asked him to broadcast a foreign-language message.

"The program ran a couple times and as is my routine I picked up a tape of it and sent it to some people I know to check on whether it was culture or politics. It was calling for the death of the Ayatollah," he said.

Costello said his station is still the only one of its kind after seven years because of the financial problem: lack of advertising.

"You can't measure the audience. There's no Arbitron, no ratings, only mail. It's not an advertising medium people are used to buying," Costello said.

Part of Costello's original plan was to sell blue jeans and other American items through mail order to overseas listeners. That didn't work, Costello said, because he couldn't stock all the sizes.

Contract broadcasts pay the bills. WRNO is on the air 14 hours a day, from 10 a.m. to midnight. The first two hours are set aside for religious programming.

Most of the rest is filled with network shows such as American Top 40 and The Jazz Show. But the station's sports programming gives the New Orleans Saints, Louisiana State University football and basketball, and University of Florida football an international audience.

"There's room for only two games on Saturday. When they conflict, we tape Florida and play LSU first. We do the Saints on Sunday," Costello said.

The remaining 20 percent to 30 percent is simulcast from one of Costello's other properties, WRNO-FM — a station whose call letters he's long advertised to stand for "We're the rock of New Orleans."

"It's just like listening to a local radio station. If the government wanted to talk about the abundant food supply in the United States, they'd get three or four experts from the Agriculture Department on the Voice of America. But I believe I'm doing the same thing, when a foreigner hears a U.S. commercial simulcast from WRNO," he said.

Sailor Tie Adds Nautical Look To Sweater

Ahoy! The feeling of a knit pullover is downright nautical, with the attractive sailor tie adorning the V-shaped neckline. The tie can be worked into the design as you go or done in duplicate stitch after the sweater is completed.

And the knitting couldn't be easier — stockinette stitch, very little shaping and a modified cap sleeve add up to a quick finish. The yarn used is a cool and comfortable 100 percent cotton with a gauge of five stitches to the inch. Easy-to-follow directions are written for small, medium and large sizes.

To obtain directions for making our Sail Into Summer Top, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-061189 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. K-061189 by sending a check or money order for $15.95 to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and yarn in your choice of the following colors: red with white tie, blue with white tie, white with red tie, or white with blue tie.

Knitting in a design on a background of stockinette stitch is easier than you might think, and if you have never done charted knitting, you're in for a treat. It's fascinating to see the design appear as you knit.

The design will usually be shown on a graph chart with each square of the chart representing one stitch. Blank squares denote a stitch done in the background color while those squares filled with symbols show you the stitches to be worked in a contrasting color for the design.

When you are knitting from the bottom to the top, the bottom row of the chart is the first row of your design. The first and each of the following odd-numbered row of the chart will be knit rows and are read from right to left. The second and all following even-numbered rows will be purled, reading the chart from left to right.

When you change from one color to another — dropping the yarn not in use — you need to twist the yarns to avoid leaving a hole in your work. To twist the yarns, simply pick up the new color from under the strand you have just dropped.

If there are more than three stitches between color changes, it is wise to twist the yarns after every third stitch by draping the yarn not in use over the one you are using. When doing this, be careful not to pull the yarn tight whenever you change colors or you will end up with puckers that will never come out.

In a garment with a large number of background stitches before and after the design — as is the case in the Sail Into Summer Top featured today — do not try to carry the contrast yarn across the entire width of the piece. Simply let the contrast yarn hang free at the point where you change to the background yarn and pick it up again when you work back to the design on the next row.

Just don't forget to twist the yarns with each change, regardless of the method you are using.

Duplicate stitch, done after your knitting is completed, is a surface embroidery stitch that duplicates the appearance of a knitted-in stitch. To do this, thread a tapestry needle with yarn and secure the yarn on the wrong side of your work close to the point where the first duplicate stitch is to be made.

Bring the needle and yarn up through the base of a stitch. Then, pass the needle and yarn under two strands of the stitch above. Insert the needle back in the base of the original stitch and you will have made one duplicate stitch.

Comedian Exacts Revenge In Book

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — That Bob Elliott always seemed like such a nice man. Remember the halcyon days of the Elliott clan, when all three networks would set up in the two-acre yard behind "the Hut," the family's fabulous Upper East Side mansion — better known nowadays as the Metropolitan Museum of Art — to cover those fairytale birthday parties that famous comedian Bob Elliott (one half of Bob and Ray) would throw for his youngest son, Chris, who grew up to be semifamous as a regular on "Late Night With David Letterman"?

Did any of us realize that those were all Bob Elliott's friends? Did any of us really think a 6-year-old would invite Dick Cavett to his birthday party? Or Jerry Vale? Or Andy Rooney and Charles Kuralt — who wrestled shirtless, for Pete's sake?

Well, it seems that after long years of painful self-examination, Chris Elliott has finally found the courage to write the book that explodes the myth — Daddy's Boy. It makes Mommie Dearest — and Jackie Rogers Jr.'s Damn You, Daddy Dearest — look like love letters!

What a shock to find out that Bob Elliott was so egomaniacal, he named his sons Bob Jr., 1 through 9 — except the twins, who were 5A and 5B. Chris, the 10th son, was even forced to wear a latex "bald" wig so he would look more like his father. "Otto Preminger," Chris' heartless classmates called him.

"How could I make people listen to me?" Chris writes searchingly in his opening chapter. "How could I tell the story that so desperately needed telling, and maybe make a few bucks in the process, and then it hit me like a ton of bricks. Write a book! ...

"But wait a second, was I nuts? Did I really have enough complaints about growing up to fill a book? I convinced myself that that didn't matter. The only important thing was that I get my face on the cover."

What also mattered was the legal action Bob Elliott was sure to take when Chris let him have it in the tell-all book. To assuage the legal eagles, Chris gamely offered his father a rebuttal to each chapter.

"I don't know what Chris is talking about," Bob complains in his rebuttal to Chapter 1 of Daddy's Boy (Delacorte Press, $12.95). "Chris doesn't have nine brothers. He has three sisters and one brother. We did not live in the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and I have never in my life had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Jerry Vale, although I would not turn down such an opportunity if it presented itself. Do my lawyers actually think people are going to take this book seriously?"

Garner Says It Was Hard To Slow Down

By Larry Neumeister
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — After years of toil, and following two heart operations, James Garner has a new way of working: He smacks golf balls and reads until his doorbell rings.

If his partner in a production company, Peter Duchow, is waiting outside, he knows it's time to dust off his actor's cap.

"I say, 'Go ahead, Pete, work. And pretty soon it gets to the point where he has to get me in on it, and suddenly I'm working again and don't realize it,'" Garner says.

But slowing down wasn't easy for the 61-year-old Garner, who was once described as "the last real man" in America. He might be 6-foot-3 and robust, but his body has been telling him to ease up for many years.

He was twice wounded during the Korean War, and was awarded the Purple Heart each time. In his first year on the hit TV series "The Rockford Files," Garner ripped up his knee. Always ready for an encore, he did it again the next year. He's also broken his tail bone and his ribs, and injured tendons and ligaments. Add to that ulcers, arthritis, disintegrating disks in his back and occasional bouts of depression.

But the stakes escalated last year when he was hospitalized because of a weakness in the aorta, the main artery carrying blood from the heart. He underwent a bypass operation and surgery on the aorta.

"It wasn't very good news," Garner recalled, wryly.

The operations slowed him down a little bit and "made me smell the roses a little more, I guess," he says.

Now, he's happiest when he's making a birdie on the golf course, or when he's home quietly reading. "Happiness for me is relief from stress," the actor said.

Garner gave up tobacco after 45 years, and plays with beads to keep his hands busy and away from cigarettes. But stopping smoking wasn't easy for an actor who first appeared on television in commercials, promising that "Winston tastes good like a cigarette should."

"That's the way I did it, and a year later they did a whole ad campaign to cross 'like' out and put 'as' in its place," he recalled with a chuckle, although he's not sure whether it was wrong in the script or if he made it wrong.

However, the star of TV's "The Rockford Files" and "Maverick" and dozens of movies including "The Americanization of Emily," "The Great Escape" and "Victor-Victoria," still occasionally cheats and lights up.

"I would love to have one every few minutes but that's out of the question," he confessed.

Garner and Duchow have produced two television specials: "My Name Is Bill W.," the story of the founders of Alcoholics Anonymous, which was broadcast last month; and "Promise," the 1986-87 Emmy award-winning story of a brother whose carefree lifestyle is threatened when he is forced to care for his mentally ill brother.

"I like stories that have to do with the human condition. But I'm not a crusader," said Garner, who was nominated for an Academy Award in 1986 as best actor for his performance in the movie, "Murphy's Romance."

Garner was born in Norman, Okla., the youngest of Mildred and Weldon Bumgarner's three sons. His father was a carpetlayer. His mother died when he was young. He quit school at age 16 to join the Merchant Marines in 1944 and dropped in and out of high schools as he roamed the country for several years, shaking off the shyness that resulted from years of berating by an overbearing stepmother.

At age 17, he worked at a Hollywood gas station and got to know Paul Gregory, who became a successful producer. Eight years later, after a year at the University of Oklahoma and working for his father's Los Angeles business, Garner drove by "Paul Gregory and Associates" and decided to see if Gregory had been serious years earlier when he told him he should become an actor.

He said he saw a parking space in front of Gregory's building.

"If that space hadn't been there, I would never have driven around the block to look for one," he once said.

Gregory hired him for the stage production of "The Caine Mutiny Court Martial," and Garner worked his way from a non-speaking role as a juror to a leading role on tour.

Little League Is Celebrating Its 50th Anniversary This Year

 designed. The business of Little League is unquestionably big league.

Stotz's memory of how it all began is vivid.

One August day in 1938 he was playing catch with his two nephews, Jimmy and Harold Gehron, ages 6 and 8, in his back yard at 1108 Isabella St. Running backward, he tripped over the jagged stumps of a cut-down lilac bush and bruised his ankle. His left ankle.

"I sat on the back steps there," he recalls, pointing, "rubbing my ankle."

"I said to the boys, 'How would you like to play on a regular team with uniforms, a new ball for every game and bats you can really swing?'"

"One of them said, 'Uncle Tuck' — that's what they called me — 'who would we play?'"

"I decided on the spot it would have to be a league of teams."

Stotz gathered up a group of neighborhood boys each evening and went to a flat field at Memorial Park where picknickers played softball.

"I used folded newspapers for bases, threw the ball to various positions and had the boys run the bases. We tried different distances between the bases until I found what I thought would be right for them, and paced it off. It came close enough to 60 feet that I rounded it off to that."

Through the winter Stotz worked out the details, rules, age limits and the like, which have remained essentially unchanged. He called on 57 merchants before he found the first sponsor, Lycoming Dairy.

The next spring Little League was born.

"When Carl passed out the uniforms, the day before the first game, it was one of the proudest days of my life," recalls Bill Bair.

"It meant it was really going to happen. Some of the guys put them on right there on the field. Maurice Reader wore his to bed that night."

Bair, who now lives in nearby Montoursville, hit .462 that year to become Little League's first batting champion.

When Korea won the Little League World Series 1984, you can credit Bill Bair in part. Bair and other Little League graduates in the armed services spread Little League all across the Far East. Bair's son, Craig, now manages a Little League team in Thailand.

Stotz recalls that late in June of the first year some fans berated the umpire until he walked off the field.

"It was the first indication," said Stotz, "of the problems overzealous fans can cause."

Frank Rizzo began as a Little League umpire in 1941 and, at 78, is still at it, conducting the Little League's umpiring school in Williamsport.

"I've seen some ugly things when the parents get too excited," he says. "The kids walk off the field arm-in-arm, but I know of mothers who wouldn't speak to each other for a month."

It gets worse than that.

When an umpire named Charles Berryhill called a game in Waynesburg, Pa., on account of darkness, an irate mother hit him over the head with an umbrella.

In El Centro, Calif., three years ago the final eight games of the season were canceled after a father threatened umpire Carl Ott with a knife.

In Terre Haute, Ind., a manager

clubbed a rival manager with a bat and sent him to the hospital before the game even started.

State Police had to be called to break up a brawl at the 1972 Little League World Series.

Little League has had its share of critics over the years, but its very prosperity indicates to supporters that its benefits clearly outweigh its flaws.

Most parents who have sat on wooden benches on a lazy summer afternoon and watched their own and their neighbors' kids enjoy the national pastime, however ineptly, conclude that Little League can't be all bad.

This is especially true when a man sees his son let a ball go right by him in the outfield because he was preoccupied at the time blowing dandelion fuzz.

In another game, the same father watched the same son get struck out four times by a towheaded pitcher with a fast ball you couldn't believe. His son apparently harbored no ill will toward the pitcher, however, because 10 years later he took her to the senior prom. The Little League, after a lawsuit, began allowing girls to play in 1974.

One of Little League's least vocal but most severe critics is, sadly, Carl Stotz himself.

"I have absolutely no animosity toward anyone working for the corporation," he says. "Many of them are my dearest friends. But what Little League is now is not what I envisioned it to be and I do not approve."

Stotz feels that commercialization has blurred the neighborhood focus of the program which he saw as its heart and its purpose.

He feels this is most evident in the annual World Series. Stotz arranged the first one, in 1947, as a rather modest "tournament" among all-star teams from three states to draw attention to his idea in the early postwar years.

He did not foresee its becoming an international event, ballyhooed, televised and broadcast play by play to places as far away as Taipei.

He felt, he explains, that a county championship or state would be sufficient aspiration for youngsters, "a tournament close to home and inexpensive, financed the same way the leagues are financed, by local sponsors."

He says he watched neighborhood volunteers replaced on his board of directors with celebrities and benefactors through the influence of national sponsors.

His critics say he was behind the times, a naive innocent who didn't realize Little League's potential. His supporters say, as did one Williamsport father, "All my kid wants to do is play in the World Series. All I want him to do is play baseball and have fun."

Because of these and other philosophical and administrative differences Stotz was eased out of the Little League in 1955. Without bitterness, he says, "I decided it was time to surrender." He once described what he had given birth to as a Frankenstein's monster.

So he left. He took with him, however, his Original Little League. It is not affiliated with Little League, Inc.

The Original Little League has thrived in Williamsport in the 34 years since Stotz's ouster. About 150 children, including about 25 girls, play on 12 teams in three age groups.

"I think our program is a lot better than theirs," says John White, who played in and now directs the Original Little League.

Local Celebration Set

 Besides coaching, Parrott also provided two players to the program. His daughters became two of the first girls to play Little League in Greenville.

His daughter Vicky won best female athlete at J.H. Rose High School her senior year, and now plays on the softball team at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Parrott says working with the kids and watching them go on to high school and college play keeps him in Little League.

"Sometimes it gets to the point where you feel like it's time to get out," Parrott says, "but then a kid comes along that makes it worthwhile."

Parrott says he'll probably stay in Little League another 20 years or so.

If Parrott survives 20 years of Little League, he'll still have a few more innings to go before catching up with Dan Gordon.

Gordon has put in nearly a quarter of a century working behind the scenes. Two of his sons played in Greenville Little League, and he now has grandchildren playing ball.

What's the attraction for Little League volunteers? "It's in the blood," Gordon says.

"I'm more or less the commissioner in charge of seeing all the rules are kept," the Idaho native says, "and doing all the work."

The front license plate on Gordon's car reads: "RETIRED".

Far from it.

Each day during the season Gordon checks the concession stands and then makes the rounds of every game. The three-mile trips from Elm Street to Guy Smith take their toll on the weekends when the teams play as many as nine games.

"It's kind of trying sometimes but somehow I get by," Gordon says.

Since starting in 1951 with four teams, Greenville Little League has grown to include 16 teams with nearly 200 boys and girls in the "major" and "minor" Little Leagues. The season averages about 144 games a year.

From 4 p.m. to 8 p.m. daily Gordon makes the rounds at Elm Street and Guy Smith.

He praises parents, coaches and managers for running the day-to-day operations of the games. He also credits the sponsors and private patrons which bring in the nearly $40,000 annual budget of Greenville's Little League.

Greenville Little League has succeeded both behind the scenes and on the diamond.

Gordon says he believes some of the credit for the success of the baseball team at Rose High School belongs on the Little League field. And the younger players have succeeded in their own right. Since 1970, the Greenville team has gone on to win the state title twice.

And Gordon has already started planning for the Greenville play-offs starting Monday, and plans to bring the district finals to the city.

Even as he talks about slowing down with age, Gordon talks about what needs doing before the games this week.

"I say age is going to catch up with me," says the 66-year-old commissioner wearing a Little League cap. "I can't get out of it any other way."

Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY June 15
ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Bad news can get you down. Plan to stay centered and cope with any disappointment. An ending is a signal for a new beginning.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Cultivate an exchange of ideas. Try to find your stride and connect with loyal associates. Someone strong may be a challenge.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Someone who has power likes you and is ready to pull you up another career notch. You share experiences with someone who adores you.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Stay in your own space and avoid grouchy people. Don't push your ideas. Enjoy social contacts and later shop for basic items.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): You may be keeping a scorecard on who is giving what to whom, etc. If you feel you deserve more, speak up. Otherwise, continue your efforts.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): What eluded you yesterday comes today and can include friendly companionship. Financial status is important at this time.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): A domestic mood should focus on food, maintaining your wardrobe, reorganization of space, and securing the basics of life.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): If you are concerned about any wallflower feelings, now is the time to take a chance and give love an opportunity to grow.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Review ideas regarding work methods and basic procedures. Eliminate waste and clutter to improve efficiency.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Business adventures could run in your favor. Intuition is ripe for considering financial investment. Rely on your great ideas, not luck!
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Elements of optimism appear. Doom and gloom are giving way to your regular happy-go-lucky attitude. Let go of the past.
PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): You can successfully review contracts, insurance plans and legal matters. It is important to keep documentation up-to-date and safe.

Opening lead: Jack of ♠

Not too long ago we discussed a hand with a similar theme to the one shown above. This deal, from a team match, presents a partial strip in a different guise. With a hand worth about 19 points once spades are supported, there seems little need for South to conduct an invitational auction. A rebid of four spades seems to express the value of the hand quite nicely. The opening lead of the jack of clubs was covered by the queen and taken by the ace. Declarer won the club return in dummy and, since the contract would be laydown if trumps were 2-2, he immediately led a trump to the king, fetching the queen from East. Since South now seemed to be saddled with a sure loser in trumps, the fate of the contract apparently hinged on a successful diamond finesse. Declarer found a better line. He cashed both red aces, crossed to the king of hearts and ruffed a club. A heart ruff put him in dummy to lead a diamond toward his hand. When East played low, declarer inserted the queen. Had East held the king, the contract would have been impregnable. As it was, West was able to capture her highness with the king, but he had no safe return. A trump would have given up his trump trick; a club would permit declarer to ruff in dummy while discarding his diamond loser from hand. All West could do was surrender graciously.

The Storm

By Renee Walter

Ominous purple-stain clouds
 Roll across the sky
 Waves dancing on the sea Great thunders clasp the house
 Shaking it as if it were a child

 The gold lightning clashes
 With the black sky
 The world seems to be
 In a tumult of darkness
 Then it ends.

Helping My Dad

By Wil Bolton

My dad is nice. My dad always does fun things with me. My dad works in the garden. He plants trees. He does so much you can't remember what he did.

My dad makes things out of wood. He makes so many things out of wood. People want to buy them. Does your dad do all that with you? My dad is wonderful!

The Battle

By Christopher Bode

The guns were shooting at the enemy. They were trying to shoot all the Russians. The Americans were winning the war. The Americans had 10,000 boats left. The Americans knew they could win. Some of the American boats were sunk. Ten whole carriers were sunk by torpedos. The Marines were doing well in the war. And so far, so good, no marines had been sunk. The good guys were very lucky because the Americans had 100 destroyers. They were very lucky because they had lots of airplanes left that were bombers and fighters. The good guys were so happy they were winning. They were so lucky because they had the North Carolina bat-

Christopher Bode, 5, a student at Elmhurst Elementary School receives special mention.

Our New Apartment

By Lonnie Clopton

My daddy borrowed a big truck to move our furniture. He loaded all the furniture on the truck. He had to make three trips. We were happy to leave that old apartment.

After we left the apartment, my mother went to change our address at the Post Office. Our new address is very hard for me to remember. We also got a new telephone number.

We have five rooms in our new apartment. My whole family helped mom get the house in order. First, we fixed the living room. We couldn't decide where to put the TV. My mother decided to put it on a table. I couldn't wait for her to fix my room. When it was time to fix up my room, my mother let me do it all by myself. Now that we have finished, our new apartment looks so much better than the old one. But I could never forget our old apartment.

Lonnie Clopton, 7, a student at Third Street School receives special mention.

Federal Facts Statue Of Liberty

The Lady stands tall in New York Harbor for all to see. The Statue of Liberty symbolizes to Americans and foreigners alike the freedom which was the foundation of the nation.

The Statue of Liberty was a gift from the people of France as a memorial for the friendship of the two nations in 1778. It was during the American Revolution that the Marquis de Lafayette and the French people came to aid us win independence from England.

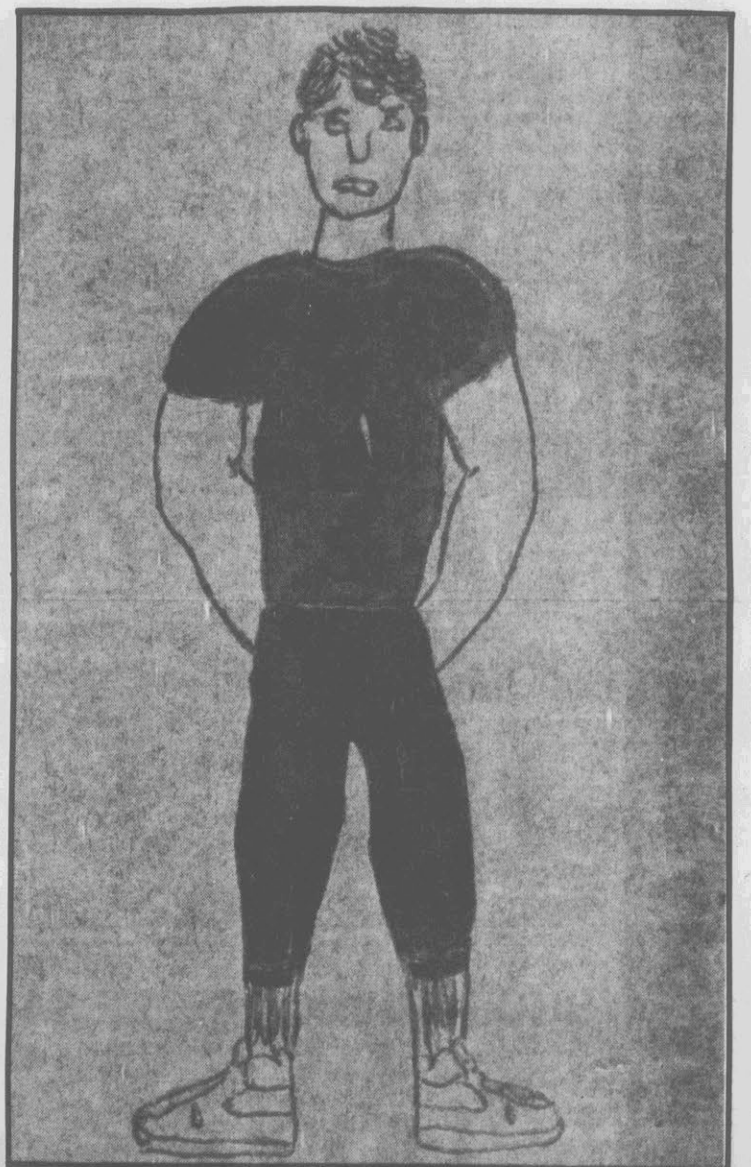

In the 1800's at a dinner party in France a man by the name of Edouard de Laboulaye, a politician and historian, suggested a gift to the American people. Auguste Bartholdi designed the figure and Alexandre G. Eiffel did the structural framework. The people of France raised money to build the statue and Americans raised the money for the base. The total cost of statue and base was $700,000.

The official name of the Statue of Liberty is Liberty Enlightening the World. It represents a woman who has just won her freedom. At her feet lie the chains or shackles which have been broken. The torch is to enlighten the world and the law book in her left hand carries the date of independence July 4, 1776 in Roman numerals. On her head is a crown of 7 rays which represent the continents and seas.

Liberty was first dedicated and given to the American people on July 4, 1884 in France and had to be taken apart and shipped to the U.S. In 1886 (October 28) Liberty was dedicated by President Grover Cleveland in New York.

From her feet to the tip of the torch, Liberty stands just over 151 feet tall. She is constructed of copper and after standing tall for 100 years she needed repairs. The repair work cost over $30 million and was completed in 1986 for her more than 2 million visitors a year to see.

Brandon Moore, 12, a student at A.G. Cox School receives special mention.

Today is Flag Day. On June 14, 1777 Congress adopted the official flag of the U.S.A. It has been changed a number of times in the 212 years since it was adopted. To know how many times it has been changed, add the number of stars and the number of stripes on the ORIGINAL 1777 flag. The answer is below.

Answer: 13 stars and 13 stripes would mean 26 changes.

Do not forget to wish your dad Happy Father's Day this Sunday!

The staff of the Expressions page hopes that you will have a safe and happy summer vacation.

Publication ends for this school year with this issue and will resume in September. Entries will be accepted throughout the summer.

Heirloom Recipe Makes Her Lemonade A Dip Into The Past

By Carol Tyer
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

FARMVILLE — When Ruth Graves shares her homemade lemonade with people in her community, it's reminiscent of the days her father treated his family to lemonade made from his own special recipe.

As Mrs. Graves favors her neighbors with lemonade and hand-dipped, candy-coated Ritz cracker-peanut butter delights, her memories return her to a time more than 60 years ago when she was the well-loved fourth child, second daughter, in the Greene County family of Sam and Agnes Tyson.

She laughs when she recalls how impatiently she used to wait while her father's freshly made lemonade was sitting a while. Her father always declared, she said, that lemonade was at its best only after the sweet of sugar and the sour of lemon were allowed to blend for an hour or so.

Usually, too, Mrs. Graves' brother Heber Tyson remembers, the lemonade serving was set to begin in late afternoon, only after the completion of the livestock feeding chores of the boys in the family.

"I'm right much younger than Ruth," Tyson, also a Farmville resident, said, "but, like her, how hard it used to be for all of us to wait for Papa's lemonade. I'd be out feeding up just as fast as I could, just thinking about how good that stuff was going to taste. We always made it sort of a party when Papa fixed lemonade."

"Papa got a lot of pleasure out of planning treats for his family," Mrs. Graves said. "We all worked hard all week, especially in the summers when we weren't in school."

"But on Saturdays, we'd drive into Farmville and Papa would give us all a nickel apiece to each buy an ice cream cone. He didn't have much spending money to give any of us. But from what he did have, he got a lot of joy in sharing with us."

"I remember how much he seemed to like giving my older sister Evelyn and me money to buy pretty pieces of cloth from Mr. J.H. Harris's Dry Goods Store," she said. "I remember once Evelyn bought a beautiful piece of blue organdy for herself, but cautioned me that we didn't have enough money to buy the pink crepe de chine I wanted. I went back to the car with none, but soon I was back in the store with more money from Papa to buy the cloth of my choice. Evelyn made a beautiful dress out of it."

"Papa loved cranking out big batches of homemade ice cream made mostly from cream and eggs from our own farm. But probably, most of all, he loved making us lemonade."

During summer months, Mrs. Graves often has lemonade on hand. But many times when she concocts the heirloom recipe, she's preparing for a visit to a friend's home, Pitt County Memorial Hospital or an area nursing home.

A Farmville resident for the past four years, she creates fulfillment for herself in the keeping of her neat gray single house on Davis Drive, in cooking for family and friends and in visiting the sick and shut-in.

Her lemonade's also a favorite at her church, First Baptist of Farmville, where she's provided it both for Red Cross Bloodmobile visits and for Vacation Bible School. She's even donated a dipper for the church kitchen.

Mrs. Tyson, now 14 years the widow of Greene County native Jimmie Hopper Graves, recalls happy married years in Fayetteville. "I married Jimmie when I was 28," she said. "He had been a childhood friend, but certainly not a childhood sweetheart," she said. "I considered him too mischievous when he was a child to be anybody's boyfriend."

One weekend in 1943, though, her perception of Graves started to change. She accompanied Edwina and Tracy Hughes to Fayetteville to visit Graves, who was Mrs. Hughes' brother. He had been hurt when a horse was frightened by an airplane at Fort Bragg. Hughes, who had spent some 15 months in Walter Reed Hospital in Washington, D.C., was then out of the Army and working at the Veterans' Hospital in Fayetteville.

Soon Graves was paying more visits than usual to his relatives in Greene County and courting the woman who would become his life-long companion. The couple was married in September 1944.

The Graveses lived their entire married life in Fayetteville where Graves continued to work at the Veterans Administration Hospital, finally putting in 28 years. This was where they reared their daughters, now Jimmie Ruth Potter of Panama City, Fla., and Agnes Ann King of Warrenton, Va. "Fayetteville was home to me," Mrs. Graves said. "I lived there 41 years. I had lots of friends there and no idea that I'd ever leave."

"But one day, driving home after visiting the graves of my parents and some of my brothers and sisters in Snow Hill, I had this real strong thought come to me — 'Go home.' It surprised me both because of its intensity and because I'd never before considered leaving Fayetteville."

"I kept getting that message over and over, and finally I asked in prayer, 'Lord, are you talking to me?'"

"And the thought kept being there, 'Go home.' And I knew it was from the Lord."

Mrs. Graves said she almost immediately called the man who had built her and her late husband's house and got his assistance in selling it. When she told her plans to her daughters, she learned that both of them were delighted with her decision to go back and live among her relatives.

Within a few weeks, she had her house sold at a satisfactory price and all her obligations in Fayetteville completed. She'd found a house in Farmville much smaller and easier to keep than her Fayetteville house.

"This house is perfect for me," she said. "Being in Farmville is perfect for me. I've renewed a lot of old acquaintances and made new friends here and I'm very happy. I still drive to Fayetteville to see old friends occasionally, but now this is home."

SAM TYSON'S LEMONADE

For an 8-quart batch of lemonade roll six large lemons on a table or counter until they're soft. Squeeze out the juice and remove the seeds with a teaspoon. Add the juice to four cups of sugar dissolved in two quarts of room-temperature tap water. Add 8 eight pounds of store-bought ice — only store-bought will do. Slice the lemons thin and add enough water to make an 8 quarts. Stir. Allow the lemonade to sit at least an hour before serving.

PEANUT-BUTTER RITZ COOKIES

For a delectable cookie that she often serves with her lemonade, Mrs. Graves offers the following "couldn't-be-easier" recipe:

"Spread peanut butter — I like smooth — between two Ritz crackers. Then heat to melting point some storebought vanilla candy-coating. Or, if you prefer, you can use dark chocolate, white chocolate, butterscotch or any other flavor you like. Then I just dip the little sandwiches one-by-one and lay them on a plate. As soon as they've cooled, they're ready to serve."

Summer Italian Stuffed Chicken Wins Top Prize

By Charlyne Varkonyi
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

SUMMER ITALIAN STUFFED CHICKEN

HERSHEY, Pa. — Melissa Mathie, a clay puppet artist who lives on a Michigan farm, won the 1989 National Chicken Cooking Contest with a recipe that could be served in the trendiest of big-city Italian restaurants.

She received the $10,000 top prize for summer Italian stuffed chicken, a beautifully seasoned dish of breaded chicken breasts stuffed with fresh basil and plum tomatoes and served on a bed of watercress and radicchio.

The contest, sponsored by the National Broiler Council, took place in late May at the Hershey Lodge.

Winning contests is not new to Mrs. Mathie. She represented Michigan at the National Beef Cook-Off three years ago and has won appliances, aprons and cookbooks in several smaller contests. But she has never been a big winner until now.

Like many of the other top winners in national contests, she prepares for contests like training for the Olympics. She has been entering contests for the past decade, but it is only recently that she started entering as many as 10 recipes a month. The winning recipe in this contest was one of five submissions.

The other top winners included: June Holley, a Cincinnati pharmacy manager who took the second prize of $4,000 for her chicken Sante Fe, chicken breasts in a marinade punctuated with hot pepper sauce and tequila and topped with roasted red pepper strips and jalapeno jelly. The recipe, developed for a friend in a University of Cincinnati nutrition class, was her only entry and her first contest submission. She serves the recipe frequently teamed with rice and black beans.

Priscilla Yee of Concord, Calif., who placed third and earned $3,000 for her chicken with pineapple salsa, sauteed breasts with a sauce of pineapple, cilantro, ginger, chili peppers and tomatoes. A staff manager for Pacific Bell Computer Systems, Ms. Yee is a frequent winner in national cooking contests, has been a finalist in three Pillsbury Bake-Offs, and won the indoor category in the National Beef Cook-Off in 1987.

Christine Tomasiewicz of Omaha, Neb., for heart smart baked chicken, a low-fat, baked chicken rolled in uncooked oatmeal and Parmesan cheese that won the $2,000 fourth-place prize. She says it took her three months to develop the recipe and another month to name it. Her husband represented their state in the 1987 National Chicken Cooking Contest in Jackson, Miss.

Janice Elder, an executive secretary from Charlotte, N.C., took the $1,000 fifth place for her chicken with carrot chutney, chicken breasts sauteed in olive oil and topped with a sweet and sour vegetable conserve. Another contest veteran, she has been a finalist in the Pillsbury Bake-Off and the National Beef Cook-Off and took second in the National Farm-Raised Catfish Cooking Contest.

A collection of the 51 finalist recipes, winning recipes from previous contests and some chicken recipes from the host state of Pennsylvania are available in "The Chicken Cookbook." Send $1.75 in check or money order to: Chicken Cookbook, Department NBC, Box 307, Coventry, Conn. 06238.

Here are the recipes from the finalists:

- 4 broiler-fryer chicken breast halves, boned and skinned
- 1/2 cup plus 1/3 cup bottled oil and vinegar dressing
- 1 small head radicchio or red leaf lettuce, torn into bite-size pieces
- 1 small bunch watercress, torn into bite-size pieces
- 1/4 cup fresh basil leaves
- 2 plum tomatoes, thinly sliced
- 1 tsp. water
- 1 egg
- 2/3 cup Italian seasoned bread crumbs
- 1/2 cup Parmesan cheese
- 4 tbsps. olive oil
- Tomato rosettes,

On hard surface with meat mallet or similar flattening utensil, pound chicken to 1/4-inch thickness. Place in large baking pan. Add 1/2 cup of the oil and vinegar dressing and turn to coat. Cover and refrigerate 30 minutes.

Put radicchio and watercress in a medium bowl. Add remaining 1-3 cup dressing and toss to mix. Arrange greens on platter and refrigerate.

Remove chicken from dressing and drain. Cut each chicken breast in half crosswise. Place an even portion of basil and tomatoes on each of the 4 pieces of chicken. Top each piece of chicken with the other half of the breast halves. With textured side of meat mallet, pound edges together to seal.

Beat water and egg in a shallow dish. Mix bread crumbs and Parmesan cheese on wax paper. Dip chicken packages, one at a time, in egg mixture and then in bread crumb mixture.

Heat oil on medium-high in a large frying pan. Add chicken and saute about 10 minutes or until chicken is brown and fork can be inserted with ease. Arrange chicken on top of radicchio mixture. Garnish with tomato rosettes. Makes 4 servings.

CHICKEN SANTE FE

- 1/4 cup olive oil
- Zest and juice of a small lime
- 1 clove garlic, crushed
- 1 oz. tequila
- 1/4 tsp. bottled hot pepper sauce
- 1/8 tsp. liquid smoke
- 1/4 tsp. salt
- 2 whole broiler-fryer chicken breasts, halved, boned and skinned
- 4 tbsps. jalapeno jelly, melted
- 2 sweet red peppers, roasted, peeled and seeded (See note below)

In a medium bowl, mix olive oil, lime zest and juice, garlic, tequila, pepper sauce, liquid smoke and salt.

Place chicken breasts between 2 pieces of waxed paper. On a hard surface with meat mallet or similar flattening utensil, pound to 1/4-inch thickness. Place chicken in a single layer in a large plastic zipper-type bag. Add marinade, close bag and refrigerate for one hour, turning once.

Bring chicken to room temperature by leaving it on the counter for 15 minutes. Place on broiler pan and brush liberally with marinade. Preheat broiler and place oven rack so that chicken is about 6 inches from heat. Broil chicken 8 minutes, turn, brush with marinade and broil 8 minutes more or until chicken is brown and fork can be inserted with ease. Remove from oven.

Brush chicken with melted jelly. Place 2 roasted pepper strips on each breast half to form an "X."

Taste, Cost, Nutrition Are Important In Cereals

Q: What breakfast cereals are best? L.H., Greenville

A: A good breakfast cereal is one that 1) the person who eats it likes, 2) fits in your budget, and 3) complements nutritionally what you eat the rest of the day. The cereal shelf is constantly changing. By fall, we'll even have "portable" cereals. Kellogg is taking some of their old favorite and most nutritious cereals like Corn Flakes, Rice Krispies, Raisin Bran and Nutri-Grain and wrapping them around either a fruit or nut filling. They are calling these cereal bars Smart Start. They appear to be an improvement on most granola bars which are really candy. When we see Smart Start in our stores, I'll give you a more careful analysis.

Back to the cereals on the shelf today. The cereal wars keep changing. About five years ago bran fiber was the focus. It was difficult for even a trained nutritionist to figure out real differences among the bran cereals. There were differences that could be used for advertising or marketing purposes such as "the maximum bran in a flake" or "the maximum bran in a bud." But, those differences were too small to make a real difference to your health. I have a similar feeling about the oat bran war today. There are differences in the products. These differences can be advertised because they are real. But, I'm not sure it's a good use of our time to worry too much. It's important to get 4-6 servings/day of complex carbohydrates.

bohydrates. Cereals are one way to do so.

It does look like the oat war is changing. It is becoming a soluble fiber war. In some parts of the country, you can already buy a cereal from General Mills called Benefit. Benefit has many soluble fibers (which may lower blood cholesterol) in it. It has oat bran, rice bran and psyllium.

Psyllium is the major ingredient in laxatives like Metamucil and Correctol. This seems like the company is trying to market cereal almost like a medicine. That changes the way we think about food.

It's important for eastern North Carolinians to get more dietary fiber in the diet. Our research shows that people in our area don't get enough. It's important for children to have breakfast before starting a day of study. Research shows that children who are hungry pay less attention in school. And, that's probably true for most adult workers. It's important for people watching their weight to eat breakfast. Almost all people who diet by eating only one meal a day, overeat at that meal. So having some breakfasts of cereal is a good idea. Some moms worry about presweetened cereals. Many, many years ago I worked on a study where children could add their own sugar to cereal. They added more than the children who ate presweetened. I don't know if it's still true today. But, I guess I would try to avoid cereals that have sugar or honey or another sweetener listed as the first ingredient.

If you have high blood cholesterol, select a cereal with oat bran, rice bran or other soluble fiber. If you are bothered by constipation, select a cereal with extra bran fiber. Unless you are eating only cereal, you don't need those that have 100 percent of the U.S. RDA, although they aren't likely to hurt you.

I sound like a professor today — I didn't give you a straight answer. Remember taste, cost and nutrition to pick your cereal.

Chocolate Revel Bars A Sweet, Rich Classic

By Nancy Byal
BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS

Our test kitchen home economists are crazy about this rich, chocolate bar recipe. We first tested it 15 years ago and our home economists still won't have a party without it. For easier slicing and fast cleanup, they suggest that you line the baking pan with a piece of foil 2 inches larger than the pan. After baking and cooling, lift out the cookie mixture, foil and all. Then slice and serve.

CHOCOLATE REVEL BARS

1 cup margarine or butter, softened
2½ cups all-purpose flour
2 cups packed brown sugar
2 eggs
4 tps. vanilla
1 tsp. baking soda
3 cups quick-cooking rolled oats
1½ cups semisweet chocolate pieces
One 14-oz. can (1¼ cups) sweetened condensed milk
2 tps. margarine or butter
½ cup chopped walnuts

In a large mixer bowl beat 1 cup margarine with an electric mixer on medium speed for 30 seconds. Add about half the flour, all the brown sugar, eggs, 2 teaspoons of the vanilla and baking soda. Beat on low speed until thoroughly combined. Beat in remaining flour. Stir in oats.

In a medium saucepan cook chocolate pieces, sweetened condensed milk and 2 tablespoons margarine over low heat until chocolate is melted, stirring occasionally. Remove from heat. Stir in remaining vanilla and nuts.

Pat 2-3rds of oat mixture (about 3½ cups) into bottom of an ungreased 15- by 10- by 1-inch baking pan. Spread chocolate mixture over oat mixture. Dot with remaining oat mixture. Bake in a 350-degree F oven about 25 minutes or until top is lightly golden. (Chocolate mixture will still look moist.) Cool on wire rack. Cut into bars. Makes 60.

Impressive Vanilla Butter Cake Is Suitable For Many Occasions

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Vanilla Butter Cake, topped with buttercream frosting, is an impressive dessert, suitable for many occasions, as delicious as it is easy to make.

For ease of preparation, the cake can be made a day or two ahead. The rum glaze used between the layers of the cake keeps it moist and fresh.

The recipe is provided by Jim Fobel, author of Jim Fobel's Old-Fashioned Baking Book (Ballantine), which won the IACP-Seagram's award as one of the best cookbooks of 1987.

The cake is decorated with a double ring of frosting violets and apple blossoms, accented with yellow-green leaves.

VANILLA BUTTER CAKE

2½ cups all-purpose flour
2½ tps. baking powder
½ tsp. salt
8 tps. (1 stick) butter, softened
¼ cup white vegetable shortening
1½ cups granulated sugar
2 large eggs

1 tbsp. vanilla extract
¾ cup milk
Rum Glaze (recipe follows)
Butterscotch Buttercream frosting (recipe follows)
Frosting flowers

Preheat oven to 350 degrees F. Grease and flour three 8-inch round cake pans, tapping out the excess flour.

In a medium bowl stir together the flour, baking powder and salt.

In a large bowl combine the butter and shortening; beat with an electric mixer until fluffy, about 1 minute. Gradually beat in the sugar and then the eggs, one at a time. Add the vanilla and beat until light and fluffy, about 1 minute. Beat in the dry ingredients alternately with the milk, about one-fourth at a time, beginning and ending with dry ingredients. Divide between the prepared pans, smoothing the tops. Bake on two evenly spaced racks until the tops spring back when lightly touched and a toothpick inserted in the center comes out clean, 25 to 30 minutes.

Cool in the pans on a rack for 10 minutes. Run a knife around the edges and invert onto the rack to cool thoroughly. Brush crumbs away.

Place one layer on a serving plate. Brush with 1 tablespoon Rum Glaze and spread with 1 cup buttercream frosting. Brush both sides of next layer with 1 tablespoon glaze and spread with 1 cup frosting. Brush each side of final layer with 1 tablespoon glaze. Frost top and sides with remaining buttercream. Decorate top with frosting flowers and chill cake. Makes one 8-inch cake.

RUM GLAZE

In a small pan stir together ¼ cup rum and ¼ cup packed brown sugar. Carefully place over low heat so rum does not flambé. Warm the rum, stirring once or twice; remove from heat and stir until sugar is dissolved.

BUTTERCREAM

4 large eggs
1½ cups packed dark brown sugar
4 sticks (2 cups) butter, softened
2 tps. dark rum
1 tsp. vanilla extract

Choose a large bowl (preferably a stainless steel one) that will fit over a pan without dropping into it. Fill the pan with 1 inch of water and bring to a boil over moderate heat. Reduce the heat to low and keep the water at a simmer.

In the large bowl beat the eggs with a handheld electric mixer until frothy, about 1 minute. Add the brown sugar and beat until smooth. Place the bowl over the simmering water (it should not touch the water) and beat constantly just until the sugar has dissolved and the mixture is just slightly warm, 1 to 2 minutes. Remove from the heat and cool to room temperature, stirring occasionally.

Put the butter in a large bowl and beat with an electric mixer until fluffy, about 1 minute. Gradually beat in the cooled sugar mixture and beat until smooth and fluffy, about 1 minute longer. Beat in the rum and vanilla. Use right away to frost the layers. When chilled, this buttercream will set. Makes about 4 cups.

Chicken Recipes To Cluck About

Spoon on remaining jelly. Return pan to oven and broil until chicken is glazed. Makes 4 servings.

Note: To roast peppers, place under broiler, turning often until charred. Cool in a closed paper bag. With point of a sharp knife, remove stem, seeds and skin. Cut in eight strips.

CHICKEN WITH PINEAPPLE SALSA

6 broiler-fryer chicken breast halves, skinned and boned
2 tps. chopped cilantro
2 tps. minced ginger root
¾ tsp. salt, divided
1 cup seeded and diced Italian plum tomatoes
¾ cup diced fresh pineapple
½ cup sliced green onion
1 4-oz. can diced green chilies, drained
1 tsp. lemon juice
2 tps. butter

½ cup grated Parmesan cheese
½ tsp. salt
½ tsp. paprika
¼ tsp. pepper
2 cloves garlic, minced
½ cup milk
¼ cup margarine, melted
Parsley
Cherry tomatoes

Heat oven to 375 degrees. In a blender, place oatmeal, Parmesan cheese, salt, paprika and pepper. Cover and blend about 1 minute or until thoroughly mixed. In shallow dish, place oatmeal mixture. In separate shallow dish, mix garlic and milk.

Roll chicken pieces in oatmeal mixture, then dip in milk mixture, and roll again in oatmeal mixture.

Place chicken in a large shallow baking pan and drizzle with margarine. Bake for about 1 hour or until fork can be inserted in chicken with ease. Garnish with parsley and cherry tomatoes. Makes 4 servings.

In a small bowl, mix together sugar, mustard, salt, 1 tablespoon of the flour and vinegar. Add to carrot mixture. Cook, stirring, over medium heat until bubbly. Reduce heat and simmer, stirring frequently, about 15 minutes or until thickened.

Mix remaining 2 tablespoons flour and curry powder. Sprinkle on both sides of chicken pieces.

In a large frying pan, heat olive oil on medium. Sauté chicken, turning, about 10 minutes, or until chicken is brown and fork can be inserted with ease. Drain chicken on paper towels, arrange on a serving platter and top each breast half with 2 tablespoons of carrot chutney. Serve remaining carrot chutney in separate bowl. Makes 6 servings.

Note: If the chutney is made too far in advance it becomes very tart. You may wish to decrease the vinegar.

CHICKEN WITH CARROT CHUTNEY

6 broiler-fryer chicken breast halves, boned and skinned
½ cup water
1 lb. carrots, peeled and diced
1 small onion, diced
½ cup diced celery
½ cup diced green pepper
½ cup diced red pepper
½ cup raisins
½ cup sugar
¼ tsp. dry mustard
¼ tsp. salt
3 tps. flour, divided
½ cup vinegar
1 tsp. curry powder
2 tps. olive oil

To make carrot chutney, place water and carrots in medium saucepan. Bring to a boil and cook about 10 minutes or until tender. Drain water from saucepan. Add to the

Make pineapple salsa by mixing together in a small bowl the cilantro, ginger, ¼ teaspoon of the salt, tomato, pineapple, onion, chilies and lemon juice. Set aside.

Melt butter in a frying pan over medium heat. Add chicken and sprinkle with remaining ¼ teaspoon salt. Sauté about 6 minutes, turning, until light brown on all sides.

Cover pan and reduce heat to medium-low. Cook about 5 minutes or until fork can be inserted in chicken with ease. Arrange chicken on serving platter and spoon pineapple salsa over chicken. Garnish with cilantro sprigs. Makes 6 servings.*

Cookbook Offers Delicious Look At Amish Life

By Carol Deegan
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Marcia Adams offers a delicious look into the life of Amish and Mennonite settlements of northern Indiana in Cooking From Quilt Country, a beautiful, 202-page cookbook (Clarkson N. Potter; $24.95).

Adams grew up on a farm in northern Indiana, near Amish (pronounced AH-mish) and Mennonite settlements in Elkhart and LaGrange counties. She became intrigued with Amish and Mennonite cooking, she said in an interview here.

The result is a cookbook filled with 190 recipes, beautifully illustrated with more than 70 full-color photographs. The text, with color photographs by Alexandra Avakian, makes for enjoyable reading, even if the book is never taken to the kitchen.

Cooking From Quilt Country is divided by seasons, and includes recipes for everything from "Breakfast at Dawn" (Sausage Gravy on Biscuits, Scramble, Baked Ham Slices in Milk and Brown Sugar); "The Ripening Garden" (Eggplant Slices in Tomato Sauce, Sautéed Sugar Snap Peas, Zucchini and Tomato Casserole); to "The Quilting Bee" (Chicken and Onions, Carrot and Raisin Salad, Black Walnut Layer Cake).

The cookbook is the basis for a 13-part cooking series on national PBS stations.

Adams says it was important for her to write the cookbook because Amish recipes are passed down in the oral tradition, from generation to generation, which means many recipes are in danger of being lost.

"Like many American women, the Amish are beginning to use boxed cakes, canned soup, and other convenience foods," she says. "I knew that the recipes had to be recorded or they would be lost."

Adams spent more than a year among the Amish and Mennonites.

"I went knocking on doors," she explains, "and everyone was willing to talk. I was never refused. In fact, one contact always led to another."

Adams says she always tried to make herself as unobtrusive as possible.

"I always dressed down," she says. "I wore denim clothes. I did not wear makeup or jewelry. Talking about a cookbook is non-threatening. And it was not strange to me. My grandparents' farm is very similar."

Because there are no written recipes, Adams says, she gathered the recipes for her cookbook by observing the women as they prepared the dishes. She then tested and retested the recipes herself.

She passed along several of the older Amish and Mennonite recipes from community to community.

For some of the recipes in the cookbook, Adams used "attic receipts" — recipes she found pressed between the leaves of old books or in dusty trunks. Still more recipes were found in diaries that the women kept over the years.

Adams says many of the cookbook's recipes are direct, versatile and easy to duplicate. Others are more complicated, she says, but for these, Adams has broken the recipe into several sections for ease of preparation.

Two of her favorite recipes from the cookbook are Amish Brown Sugar Pie and Tomato Fritters. One of the more interesting: Knee Patch. (Traditionally served on New Year's Day, this pastry got its name from the dough being stretched and slapped over an apron-covered knee.)

Adams, who lives in Winona Lake, Ind., is a food writer and columnist. Her next cookbook, Heartland, will feature Midwestern recipes. It is scheduled for publication next year by Clarkson N. Potter.

She is a firm advocate of Midwestern cooking. "The pendulum is moving back to American cooking," she says, "and Midwestern cooking and entertaining is wonderful — which many of us have known all along."

Our sample recipe from "Cooking from Quilt Country" is for Amish

Brown Sugar Pie. Don't be afraid to mix the pie right in the shell.

AMISH BROWN SUGAR PIE

- 1 unbaked 8-inch pie shell
 - 1 cup brown sugar
 - 3 tbsps. all-purpose flour
 - Speck of salt
 - One 12-oz. can evaporated milk
 - 2½ tbsps. butter
 - Ground cinnamon
- Preheat oven to 350 degrees F. In the pie shell, place the brown sugar, flour and salt. Mix with your fingers. Pour the evaporated milk over the flour and sugar, but do not stir or mix this in. Dot with butter and drift cinnamon liberally over all. Bake for 50 minutes, or until the filling just bubbles up in the middle.

The filling will never completely set, but that's the way it's supposed to be. This pie is better eaten at room temperature. If you refrigerate leftovers, reheat them in the oven before serving.

Note: This recipe can be doubled and prepared in a 10-inch pie shell. For that size, bake 1 hour and 20 minutes. (Yield: 12 servings.)

Ravioli Is Easier Than You Think

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Convenience is everything, especially these days when it seems that practically everyone wants to spend less time in the kitchen.

The challenge of preparing an interesting, healthy meal can be daunting at times — even to the most creative cook. However, ravioli, or rabiole, which means leftovers or things of little value, can be a satisfying — and easy-to-prepare — dish. Ravioli is available in specialty food stores and supermarkets, filled with everything from traditional cheese or meat to spinach or seafood. Ravioli can be made in less than 30 minutes, and served with focaccia and a salad, for a complete meal.

The kitchens of P. Sasso e Figli, one of Italy's oldest Ligurian olive oil producers, suggest a quick tomato sauce that is ready in less than 30 minutes. The basil is added after the sauce is cooked, for piquant freshness.

For spaghetti, try P. Sasso e Figli's recipes for anchovy and garlic sauces.

QUICK TOMATO SAUCE

- ½ cup extra virgin olive oil
- 2 medium cloves garlic, minced
- 1 large onion, chopped (1 cup)
- One 28-oz. can peeled Italian tomatoes, undrained
- 1 tsp. dried marjoram leaves, crumbled
- ¼ cup chopped, fresh basil leaves
- Salt and pepper to taste

In a large skillet, heat oil over medium heat. Add garlic; cook 3 minutes or until golden. Do not overcook. Add onion; cook over low heat until tender. Add tomatoes and marjoram. Simmer 20 minutes, uncovered, breaking up tomatoes with a spoon as they cook. Remove from heat. Stir in basil, salt and pepper. Serve immediately. Makes 4 cups.

ANCHOVY SAUCE

- ¾ cup olive oil
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- One 2-oz. can anchovy fillets, drained
- ½ cup chopped parsley
- ½ cup water

Heat oil in large skillet. Sauté garlic 3 minutes, or until golden. Add anchovies; simmer 5 minutes, stirring until anchovies are pureed. Add parsley and water. Heat through. Yield: 1½ cups, or enough for 1 pound of spaghetti.

GARLIC SAUCE

- 2 slices white bread, crusts trimmed
- 4 tps. red wine vinegar
- 2 to 3 cloves garlic
- 4 sprigs fresh basil
- 4 sprigs flat leaf parsley
- ¾ cup extra virgin olive oil
- Salt and pepper, to taste

Place bread on a flat plate. Sprinkle with vinegar. Squeeze bread to form a dough. In container of electric blender or food processor, combine bread, garlic, basil and parsley. Process, gradually adding olive oil until oil is completely blended into a smooth sauce. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Yield: ¾ cup.

Cocoa Cheesecake Will Spoil Dad

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — On Father's Day — or any day — tell Dad he's extra-special by baking him an extra-special dessert — Cocoa Cheesecake Supreme, a recipe from Hershey's Cocoa. This cheesecake earns its name with its creamy cocoa-cheese filling and chocolate cookie crust.

Prepare Cocoa Cheesecake Supreme a day in advance to assure firmness of texture. Make the chocolate cookie crust and press into a springform pan. Blend cream cheese, cocoa, butter, vanilla, eggs and sour cream together to make the filling. After baking, chill thoroughly and garnish with sweetened whipped cream to add a decorative finishing touch.

COCOA CHEESECAKE SUPREME

Chocolate Cookie Crust (recipe follows)

Four 3-oz. packages cream cheese, softened

3 tbsps. butter or margarine, softened
1 cup sugar
1/2 cup cocoa
1 1/2 tps. vanilla extract
2 eggs
1 cup dairy sour cream
Sweetened whipped cream (optional)

Prepare Chocolate Cookie Crust; set aside. Heat oven to 325 degrees F. In large mixer bowl beat cream cheese and butter until smooth. Gradually beat in sugar. Beat in cocoa and vanilla until well blended. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Add sour cream; blend well. Pour mixture into pan. Bake 30 minutes. Turn off oven; leave cheesecake in oven 15 minutes without opening oven door. Remove from oven. Cool completely; loosen cake from rim. Chill thoroughly. Garnish with sweetened whipped cream, if desired. Makes 10 to 12 servings.

Chocolate Cookie Crust

22 chocolate wafers (1/2 of 8 1/2 ounce package)

1/4 cup cold butter or margarine, cut into 1/2-inch slices

1/8 teaspoon ground cinnamon

Crush wafers in food processor or blender to form fine crumbs (1 cup). In medium bowl mix crumbs, butter and cinnamon until evenly blended. Press mixture evenly on bottom of 9-inch springform pan.

Lemonade Tastes Great In A Variety Of Recipes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Have you ever cooked with lemonade?

A new recipe booklet, "Gourmet Lemonade Recipes" from Newman's Own Old Fashioned Roadside Virgin Lemonade, offers a variety of recipes using lemonade — from Lemon Carrot Soup to Rosemary Chicken Wings.

The booklet also includes lemonade tips from entertaining expert Martha Stewart and thirst-quenching concoctions from some of New York's leading restaurants.

All profits from the sale of the booklet, as with all Newman's Own products, go to charity, according to company officials. In the past six years, officials say, the company has given $21 million to various causes including Newman's The Hole in the Wall Gang Camp in Connecticut, which is for children with cancer and other serious blood diseases.

Julia Child's Newest Book Out This Fall

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Alfred A. Knopf will publish in October The Way to Cook by Julia Child, her first book in nine years, according to the publisher.

The 544-page book, with a price of $50, will be produced in a 9 1/4-by-10 3/8-inch format and will include more than 800 full-color photographs. Knopf is planning a first printing of 75,000 copies.

The Book of the Month Club has selected "The Way to Cook" as a main selection, the first time in the Club's history that a cookbook has been chosen for its top offering.

"The natural choice for the first cookbook to be given the lead spot by the Club is a cookbook by Julia Child," said Lawrence Crutcher, Book of the Month Club president.

"With her incomparable grounding in French cooking and her disarming enthusiasm for new and sensible approaches to cooking and eating, she has, for three decades, been the most celebrated cook in America."

Judith Jones, Child's editor at Knopf, says the new cookbook is a blend of basic French techniques "with the marvelous new flair and inventiveness that is emerging in American cooking today."

Jones says The Way to Cook is "a clarion call for good sense in our approach to food, for delicious variety in our diet — and for a return to the pleasures of the table."

Child is the author of numerous books, including Mastering the Art of French Cooking.

Easy Recipe Is A Treat On Dad's Day

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Treat Dad to dinner on Father's Day — and let the kids lend a hand! A microwave makes it easy, and the cheese and broccoli make it tasty.

The following recipe has been developed exclusively for the Associated Press by Mueller's pasta.

MORE THAN MACARONI AND CHEESE

2 tbsps. corn oil margarine
1/2 of a medium red pepper, chopped
3 green onions, sliced
2 cups low-fat milk, divided
1 tsp. Dijon mustard
1/2 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. hot pepper sauce
3 tbsps. cornstarch
7 oz. Mueller's pasta curls or sea shells, cooked and drained
One 10-oz. package frozen chopped broccoli, thawed and drained
2 cups (8 oz.) shredded Cheddar cheese
1 cup diced cooked ham

In a 2-quart microwave-safe bowl or casserole, cook margarine, red pepper, onions, 1 1/2 cups of the milk, mustard, salt and hot pepper sauce on high (100 percent power) for 4 minutes. Using fork or wire whisk, stir in remaining milk and 3 tablespoons cornstarch until well blended. Cook on high for 4 minutes, stirring twice.

Stir in pasta, broccoli, cheese and ham. Cook on high 4 minutes or until heated through. Remove from microwave and stir. Makes 4 servings.

Top Cookbooks Pulled From Over 200 Entries

By Carol Deegan
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The Cake Bible, written by Rose Levy Beranbaum, was named 1988 Book of the Year by the IACP-Seagram Awards, the country's only major program of awards for books on foods and beverages.

The awards for outstanding food and drink books published in 1988 were sponsored by the International Association of Cooking Professionals, a 1,200-member organization, and Joseph E. Seagram & Sons, a major producer and marketer of spirits, coolers and premium wines.

Nearly 200 entries were received for the 1988 competition. A jury of 46 food and beverage writers, editors and cooking authorities participated in selecting the winners, who were announced at an awards breakfast at the Seagram Building here.

The Cake Bible (William Morrow, $25) also won first place in the Baking and Desserts category. It is an exhaustive cookbook. Most anything you could want to know is included — exactly why some pans are better than others; why cakes peak in the center while baking and how to stop it; the history of various cakes.

Some recipes are borrowed, with sources noted, but some were developed with hard work. Of the Less Than Fruity Fruitcake, Beranbaum says in the book, "It took years to perfect this recipe because each version had to ripen for three months before tasting, and many months would pass between tasting and subsequent re-baking."

The recipes are clear and precise, and the photographs leave no doubt of how the cake should look. Also included are recipes for conserves, fruit purees, fondants, marzipans, even crystallized flowers.

An entire chapter is devoted to decorating, and, in a "special section for professionals and passionate amateurs," Beranbaum discusses the science of baking more in depth and includes recipes for cakes to feed 150 or so people.

Basic and General
Cooking A to Z by the California Culinary Academy (Ortho Books, $32.95) won the Basic and General category. This 631-page culinary reference book, designed to serve cooks at every level of experience, is filled with over 600 recipes plus definitions of terms, techniques and ingredients.

More than 35 sets of step-by-step photographs, plus detailed text, demonstrate such important techniques as boning, beating egg whites, carving, rolling out puff pastry and decorating cakes.

Also included are basic definitions of the common terms you'll see over and over again in any cookbook, plus sections on how to shop and cook with fresh ingredients and processed foods; how to stock the pantry and cupboard; and how to identify, select and care for kitchen equipment.

Other Winners
Simon & Schuster came up with three top winners: Bugialli on Pasta, by Guiliano Bugialli, in the European and International category; Champagne: The History and Character of the World's Most Celebrated Wine by Serena Sutcliffe, in the Writings on Beverages category; and More Taste Than Time by Abby Mandel, in the Quick Cooking category.

The Grains Cookbook by Bert Greene (Workman Publishing) won first place in the Single Subject category and The Magnificent Cookbook by the Junior League of Chicago won in the Community Cookbook category.
