Court Upholds Key Racial Ruling

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court, which touched off an uproar last year by considering reversal of a key civil rights decision, today upheld the 1976 ruling that has been a powerful tool to fight racial discrimination.

The justices unanimously reaffirmed that an 1866 law enacted to help freed slaves could be used to sue private citizens accused of race bias.

But the court, by a separate 5-4 vote, also ruled that the 133-year-old civil rights law cannot be invoked to fight racial harassment.

Justice Anthony M. Kennedy, in his opinion for the court, said adherence to precedent compelled the conservative majority on the court to uphold the 1976 ruling.

Furthermore, he said, even if that ruling was based on a mistaken interpretation of law, "it is certain that it is not inconsistent with the prevailing sense of justice in this country. To the contrary, (it) is entirely consistent with our society's deep commitment to the eradication of discrimination based on a person's race or the color of his or her skin."

But Kennedy said allowing suits for racial harassment was not envisioned by the 1866 law.

He said the law governs contractual rights — not most conduct by an employer after an individual is hired.

The 1866 law "covers only conduct at the initial formation of the contract and conduct which impairs the right to enforce contract obligations through legal process," Kennedy said.

Justice William J. Brennan, in an opinion dissenting from the court's decision on racial harassment, said, "What the court declines to snatch away with one hand, it takes with the other."

Brennan said the court "has to strain hard" to interpret the 1866 law in a way that ignores "powerful historic evidence about the Reconstruction Congress' concerns" to end race bias.

Joining Brennan in partial dissent were Justices Thurgood Marshall, Harry A. Blackmun and John Paul Stevens.

The five-member conservative majority that voted against applying the anti-discrimination law to harassment cases consisted of Kennedy, Chief Justice William H.

Rehnquist and Justices Sandra Day O'Connor, Antonin Scalia and Byron R. White.

Kennedy, O'Connor and Scalia are appointees of former President Ronald Reagan and Rehnquist was promoted to chief justice by Reagan.

The court sent shock waves through the civil rights community in April 1988 when it announced it would use a relatively obscure case from North Carolina to reconsider its 1976 ruling.

While no party to the North Carolina case urged the court to reconsider the 1976 precedent, the justices by a 5-4 vote took the extraordinary step of acting on their own initiative to call for a re-examination.

The four dissenters then said that

Public Is Urged To Back Efforts For Clean Water

By J. Ward Best
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A group of scientists and researchers discussed publicly for the first time the progress of a five-year study of the Albemarle and Pamlico sounds and estuaries and called for public support to guarantee funding of recommended solutions to water problems in the area.

Project directors from seven different study groups and the director of the Albemarle-Pamlico Estuarine Study (APES) gathered Wednesday in Washington, N.C., for the initial report on the project.

But APES director Dr. Bob Holman stresses the importance of public participation and public concern over the extensive research of the project.

Apathy toward worsening conditions of North Carolina's sounds could kill the project and any results it may achieve, Holman said.

"The public is the main animal that will drive this," Holman said. "If the public is unconcerned about the problems of the area," he said, "... the recommendations will not be funded."

The group plans to present a comprehensive conservation management plan to the state at the end of the study in late 1992.

Each of the researchers at the press conference presented a progress report on the ongoing projects, and their importance to the comprehensive study.

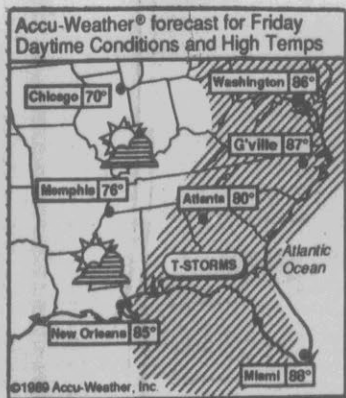

The overview of the APES project painted a bleak picture of the 30,800-square-mile area along the Albemarle, Pamlico, Currituck and Core sounds. But the scientists said they believe the area can retain its productivity and natural beauty with some positive action.

Holman said the warning signs of deteriorating conditions, such as fish kills, shellfish disease and algae blooms, indicated a complex problem in the estuarine area, not just a water quality problem.

"Obviously, you're looking at problems throughout time," Holman

An Environmental Protection Agency study released last week claiming the Burroughs Wellcome plant in Greenville poses a cancer threat to area residents exaggerated the cancer risk and used misleading statistics, several cancer experts say.

According to an EPA study released June 8, the Burroughs Wellcome plant and 204 other facilities across the country are emitting toxins that could cause cancer in people who breathe the air in areas of highest concentration.

The EPA cited the Greenville facility for releasing methylene chloride, a compound made up of carbon, hydrogen and chlorine primarily used as a paint remover.

One grade of the chemical — when mixed with alcohol — is approved for use on pharmaceutical products and food. It is used to develop coatings on pills and tablets and to extract caffeine, spices and other materials from food items.

The EPA study said that if a person receives maximum exposure to the chemical over a 70-year period, he will face a risk of between 1 in 100 and 1 in 1,000 of getting cancer.

For example, if 1,000 people stayed in the area of highest concentration for 70 years, an average of between 1 and 10 would get cancer, according to the study.

But news reports last week failed to explain how the projected risks compared with the risk of someone not exposed to the chemical.

For the population at large, cancer experts said current statistics indicate that 33 percent of the people living in the United States today will be diagnosed with cancer at some time in their lives.

Therefore, an average of 333 people out of any group of 1,000 will get cancer at some time.

Thus, even if the EPA study is taken at face value, living in the area of highest concentration for 70 years does not dramatically increase the risk of getting cancer over the risk the general population faces, experts said.

"These things are supposed to be taken with a grain of salt," said Phillip Chemaly, spokesman for the National Cancer Institute in Bethesda, Md. "This gives (scientists) something to go on, something to look at over time."

"These things (studies) don't actually prove cause and effect. It doesn't actually mean it causes the cancer," Chemaly said, claiming that the EPA's data is based on animal studies that may not apply to humans.

Chemaly and others said the EPA customarily bases its projections on the highest possible risks, while Food and Drug Administration officials and other organizations would likely project much less of a risk using the same data.

The Product: Methylene Chloride

Methylene chloride.

Food manufacturers use it to decaffeinate coffee.

Pharmaceutical companies use it to coat tablets and produce antibiotics.

Yet, the compound made up of carbon, hydrogen and chlorine is used most for removing paint, and the International Agency for Cancer Research has placed the solvent on its 2-B list, which means it believes there is evidence it causes cancer in animals.

Don Butler, supervisor at the San Jose, Calif., chemical company of Van, Waters and Rogers, one of the nation's largest distributors of the compound, said the Environmental Protection Agency may also move to include the chemical on its list of carcinogens, which would likely increase restrictions or cause a formula revision.

"The latest I hear is they are trying to put it on the list," Butler said. "The major producers are fighting it like crazy."

It may appear confusing that the same chemical included in food and medicine is also included in paint, removers and on lists of cancer-causing toxins, but the entire chemical industry can be confusing.

Last week an EPA study identified methylene chloride as a cancer threat to area residents due to emissions from a Burroughs Wellcome plant in Greenville.

Burroughs Wellcome officials claimed the statistics were taken out of context and said tests have proven the chemical levels are safe. Several cancer experts supported those contentions, but there remains a question of what is methylene chloride and is it harmful?

Larry Siegler, plant manager of Burroughs Wellcome in Greenville, said he could not reveal specifically how the company uses the chemical or what formula it uses, due to private trade information. He said the company uses the compound in manufacturing stages, in synthesizing raw materials and in processing finished products.

Nationwide, the primary use of the compound is as a

Soviet Ethnic Unrest Brings Mass Arrests

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — Authorities have arrested hundreds of people in Uzbekistan in an attempt to halt ethnic violence that has killed at least 90 people in the southern republic, Soviet officials said.

Lt. Gen. A. Anikiev, an Interior Ministry officer, said troops were guarding intersections and government buildings and patrolling streets in Fergana, the city hit hardest by the 10 days of rioting, Pravda reported.

Violence by the native Uzbeks has been directed against Meshki Turks, an ethnic minority forcibly moved from Soviet Georgia to Uzbekistan in 1944 by Soviet dictator Josef Stalin.

The Communist Party newspaper said helicopters were patrolling the tense city and a 10 p.m.-to-6 a.m. curfew that was imposed June 4 remains in effect.

"But the situation continues to be serious as an unknown hand directs bandits to generate tension," Pravda quoted Anikiev as saying.

He added that the situation in Fergana, 1,500 miles southeast of Moscow is "completely under control," the newspaper said.

The official news agency Tass later said police had received reports of further disturbances today. It said a wagon with children's clothing that had been collected for fleeing Turkish refugees was burned in Fergana.

Tass said more than 15,000 Turks had been evacuated by Wednesday. Turks have been sent to refugee centers in Soviet Russia.

Anikiev said prosecutors from throughout the country, including KGB and Interior Ministry investigators, had converged on Fergana, Kokand and the republic's capital, Tashkent, to investigate how the unrest began.

"Several hundred people have been arrested on charges of organizing pogroms, murder and violence," he said. "Along with ensuring public order, law enforcement personnel are stopping all manner of provocative rumors and explaining the situation to people to prevent panic."

Proceedings have begun in more than 60 criminal cases, the newspaper said.

Three Chinese Protesters Facing Death

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BELJING — A court accused three people today of starting a riot in Shanghai and sentenced them to death, the first execution orders since the government began crushing the pro-democracy movement.

In another display of the widening crackdown on dissidents, state television in Beijing showed reputed protest leaders being packed into police vans, their heads shaved and signs dangling from their necks describing their alleged crimes.

Government-controlled media reported numerous arrests in other cities.

The death sentences in Shanghai were the first announced since Chinese troops opened fire on pro-democracy demonstrators in Beijing on June 3-4, crushing a 7-week-old reform movement.

The hard-line government since has reported arresting more than 1,000 people in a nationwide crackdown in which the student protest leaders have been branded as counterrevolutionaries and instigators of the turmoil.

Television said the three men sentenced to death were charged with setting a train on fire and beating security officials who tried to extinguish the blaze. National television showed the three men in a courtroom being sentenced.

The court also accused them of instigating a riot unprecedented in recent Shanghai history. The men, who appeared to be workers, were identified as Xu Guoming, Dian Hanwu and Yan Xierong.

The train incident occurred June 6 when six protesters were killed as they stood at a barricade on the tracks near the Shanghai train station and a train from Beijing did not stop in time.

People in a large crowd set fire to the train and fought with firemen and police who came to put it out, injuring 21.

In Beijing, the noon news showed 26 workers, their heads shaven, being led by armed police onto a stage before a packed hall in the northeastern city of Changchun.

Several had large placards around their necks giving their names and accusing them of instigating social unrest and spreading rumors.

The signs said they had been sentenced to labor reform, a type of prison.

The placards are a throwback to the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution, when leftist Red Guards paraded their victims through city streets wearing dunce caps and signs on their chests.

Beijing television today also showed young people being jammed into a police bus in the southern city of Guiyang and said six people were arrested in central China's Wuhan. It also broadcast the arrest of Chen Xuedong, a physics major at Nanjing University and showed tapes of him leading mass demonstrations in the eastern Chinese city.

The government kept up its propaganda campaign portraying soldiers who put down the pro-democracy movement as heroes. The reports deny troops opened fire on unarmed people as they moved protesters out of Beijing's Tiananmen Square.

Chinese witnesses and Western intelligence estimates say up to 3,000 died were killed in the assault, most of them civilians. The government contends about 200 people died, half of them soldiers.

The Communist Party's newspaper, the People's Daily, ran a front-page editorial today to drum up support for the government, urging Chinese to "unite and join forces to fight the common enemy."

"A great victory already has been achieved in quelling the counter-revolutionary rebellion. In Beijing and the whole country, the situation is moving toward stability... But the struggle definitely is not over."

Officials said today that two months of demonstrations and martial law — imposed May 20 — had cost the city $270 million in economic losses.

State Advertises Search For Gray

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

State health officials say they've seen neither hide nor hair of John Gray in weeks, and they have resorted to placing ads in area newspapers to notify him of a July 10 court date in which a judge will hear evidence Gray has improperly stored medical waste and human body parts in Pitt County.

Steve Reid, spokesman for the solid waste management section of the state Division of Health Services, said the state has tried repeatedly to serve Gray with an injunction, but deputies could never find him. They staked out a condominium in Cary where Gray was reportedly living, but Reid said Gray eluded authorities.

"We've gone to the next prescribed avenue of approach: the ads in the paper," Reid said. "Basically, we're throwing it to the judge and saying: 'Please take care of it, and he can take care of it any way he wants.'"

Four months ago Pitt County deputies began investigating four Pitt farm buildings in which Gray had reportedly stored medical waste, human ashes and pathological remains, including human body parts. After negotiations with Gray failed several weeks ago, the state attorney general's office has put Gray on notice that he must respond to the charges before the case comes up in Wake Superior Court on July 10.

Graduation Ceremony

Amy Layden, Roger Rice, Nikole Sutton, Jimmy Jones and Beth Garrison were the student speakers for the graduation ceremony held recently for eighth-graders at Grifton School.

The ceremony was conducted in the school's renovated auditorium where certificates of promotion were presented by principal Randy Collier and Board of Education member Elbert Buck.

Seventh-graders marshaled the event and the school's Parent-Teacher Organization entertained the group with a reception in the school cafeteria and a dance in the gym.

Home in Bethel and Gray Funeral Home and Crematorium in Raleigh.

Cary attorney Frederick Toms represented Gray in early negotiations with the state, Reid said, but Gray told state officials by telephone two months ago that he had dismissed Toms.

Since February, Gray has not returned repeated phone calls from a reporter.

A woman who answered the phone today at his Raleigh office said he has not been in for a few days, and she did not know his whereabouts. A man in his Bethel office said Gray was in Pitt County on Wednesday but may not be in Bethel again today.

The public notice notifies Gray that the state Division of Health Services is seeking relief against him and plans to issue an injunction ordering him to catalog the waste and lawfully dispose of the material. The injunction would prohibit Gray from collecting, transporting, storing, treating or disposing of solid waste, including medical waste, the notice said.

Gray is licensed to incinerate dead human bodies at his crematorium, but he is not licensed to handle or dispose of medical waste, Reid has said. Previously, the state has cited Gray for improperly burning medical waste, and the state Board of Mortuary Science has cited him for mishandling dead bodies.

Two New Members Appointed

By Jerry Raynor
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Two new commissioners were named to the Greenville Recreation and Parks Commission and two retiring members of the board were honored Wednesday night at the panel's June meeting.

The recreation panel also appointed members to a newly formed Little League Construction Committee.

The new commissioners are Dr. Randy Williams and Brenda Goolsby, who will serve three-year terms. Williams is an orthopedic surgeon and Mrs. Goolsby is a piano teacher.

Outgoing board members honored with a plaque for three years of service on the commission were J.B. Surles and Sheila Mendoza.

The seven-member Little League Construction Committee was named for the purpose of coordinating plans and progress of the Little League fields planned for construction in Greenville's Eastwood subdivision.

The committee is chaired by Walter Stasavich, superintendent of parks for the city's recreation and parks department. Other members appointed to the panel are Charles Williams, Brenda Goolsby, Dan Gordon, Jerry Clark, Don Parrott and Mitchell Jones.

Commissioners re-elected Rosamond Tipton and Ellas Harris as chairman and vice chairman, respectively, of the Recreation and Parks Commission.

The June session, following a traditional practice, was a combination outdoor banquet and meeting, with employees of the recreation and parks department recognized for achievements during the past year. The meeting was held at River Park North.

Methodists Meet

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Racism, plastic foam cups and drunken driving will be on the agenda when the North Carolina Conference of the United Methodist Church gathers in Fayetteville today through Sunday.

Approximately 1,600 clergy and lay people from the eastern part of the state will consider resolutions and a $9 million budget at the annual meeting. The N.C. Conference encompasses 844 churches from Burlington to the coast.

One proposed resolution condemns racism in the church. It says that secular institutions have implemented equal-opportunity programs but that "the church has not, either out of fear or ignorance."

This proposed resolution pledges that the conference will have "implemented an 'open itinerary' system for the appointment of its ministers, without regard to either sex or race" by 1995.

Judge Clears Way To Sentence North

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The federal judge who presided over the trial of Oliver L. North cleared the way for the former National Security Council aide to be sentenced next week for his role in the Iran-Contra affair.

In his ruling Wednesday, U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell refused to grant a defense request for either a new trial or judgments of acquittal on all three counts against North.

A U.S. District Court jury convicted North on May 4 of aiding and abetting the obstruction of Congress, mutilation of official documents and acceptance of an illegal gratuity from arms dealer Richard V. Secord.

The 45-year-old retired Marine lieutenant colonel, scheduled for sentencing June 23, faces a possible 10-year prison term and fines up to $750,000.

North was found guilty of aiding and abetting the obstruction of Congress by helping prepare a false chronology of arms sales to Iran in 1985 and by destroying documents sought by congressional investigators.

North was acquitted him of nine other charges, including allegations that he lied to investigators about his involvement in U.S.-Iran arms sales and providing secret aid to the Nicaraguan rebels.

Gesell ruled in his 13-page opinion there was sufficient proof for the jury to reach its verdict. Gesell also rejected the notion that North could not be found guilty of helping obstruct Congress since the lawmakers' inquiry succeeded in unearthing facts about the Iran-Contra affair.

"The criminality of legality of alleged obstructive conduct cannot turn on its success, as the effort to obstruct an inquiry is an evil the statute seeks to address," Gesell said.

Gesell also rejected North's arguments prosecutors had failed to prove that North's illegal acceptance of the installation of a $13,800 security system outside his suburban Virginia home had occurred in Washington, where the case was brought.

Gesell said "the agreement to accept the security system developed in a continuous course of conduct, some of which took place in Washington."

The judge rejected arguments that the jury should have been instructed to consider that North accepted the security system under duress because no government agency would offer his family protection in the face of terrorist threats, including one from Abu Nidal.

"Long after North heard of the threat by Abu Nidal, he backdated letters indicating he was to pay for the system and he concealed the fact that Secord had actually paid (security consultant Glenn) Robinette for the system," the judge said.

Gesell also said North could have paid for the fence with funds "he admittedly had," a reference to North's testimony he kept $15,000 in cash in a locked box in his closet.

Gesell rejected North's request for a hearing to determine if the verdict was tainted by an April 22 letter NBC News delivered to the homes of jurors seeking interviews after they decided the case.

North Still Speaking

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN CARLOS, Calif. — People came to cheer and jeer Oliver North, and ended up shouting at each other, with American flags on both sides and police in the middle.

North's final speech before his sentencing next week for three Iran-Contra convictions brought out the passion in the crowd outside the Circle Star Theater, where about 150 protesters traded barbs with about 70 supporters.

Some called him a criminal, others a hero. Chants of "Jail Ollie North!" competed with "Ol-lie, Ol-lie!"

Inside, the 45-year-old retired Marine lieutenant colonel insisted his actions were lawful and won hearty applause from a crowd that half-filled the 3,700-seat auditorium Wednesday.

He claimed his legal problems stemmed in part from "an increasingly imperial Congress" that is preventing the executive branch from carrying out foreign policy.

North was found guilty on May 4 of aiding and abetting the obstruction of Congress by helping prepare a false chronology of arms sales to Iran in 1985 and by destroying documents. He also was convicted of accepting a $13,800 home security system from arms dealer Richard V. Secord.

North received a standing ovation when he entered the theater and was never booed or interrupted by the audience that paid $17.50 for a ticket. He received $25,000 for his appearance.

He spoke about the virtues of faithfulness and ideals, about God, family and country. He attacked communism, warned against trusting Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev too much, and condemned "the butchers in Beijing."

Realigned House Democrats Seek Unified Path To Regaining Control

By Jim Drinkard
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — With their new leadership team in place, House Democrats are searching for a legislative agenda to unify their party and provide a counterpoint to the policies of President Bush.

"This is our time to make a difference and move this House away from the partisan wrangling and the rancor and the bitterness, and to reassert an agenda for progress for this country," said Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri, elected Wednesday as his party's new No. 2 House leadership official.

But despite Gephardt's campaign-style speech to his colleagues, the new leadership team still has much work to do to assume the reins of power in the House and convert stylistic ability into substance.

While Bush has made much of advocating bipartisan cooperation with Congress, his political team has shown a heightened aggressiveness in attacking Democrats. The House GOP minority, meanwhile, has grown increasingly combative.

"I think you still are going to have tremendous problems between the two parties here, for at least another year," said Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif., the former whip who is leaving Congress after today because of questions about his personal finances.

The new speaker, Thomas S. Foley of Washington, is an acknowledged statesman and thinker, but some Democrats wonder whether he will have the toughness to define and fight for the party's agenda.

And after a season of fighting ethics charges, Democrats remain nervous about whether Rep. William Gray of Pennsylvania — the new No. 3 party official as majority whip — will ultimately be damaged by an FBI probe into alleged payroll padding in his office.

Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., said members of the new leadership team "are extremely adept at selling the message to the American people — our challenge now is to come up with the message."

The new leaders will work this summer on developing a party legislative agenda, then announce sometime this fall "where we're going," said Rep. David Bonior, D-Mich., who lost the whip's race to Gray but will remain in his post as chief deputy whip.

Foley already has said ethics and campaign reform will be his top priority. Democrats also are eager to pass a clean air bill and complete work on a savings and loan rescue package, and are promising to pass another bill raising the minimum wage after President Bush's veto this week.

Gephardt, in his acceptance speech before the House Democratic caucus after defeating Rep. Ed Jenkins, D-Ga., for majority leader, echoed some of the themes of his 1988 presidential campaign.

"America is beginning to be in a state of decline, and we as Democrats have to lead," he said, "even though there is not a crisis, even though the presidency is held by a different party and even though getting our consensus together on the Democratic side is always difficult to do."

He acknowledged that with the White House and Congress in the hands of different parties, "we seem near to a political standoff. Our country is in peril but few realize it. ... If (Bush) refuses to lead, we must."

Gray, meeting with reporters after his first-ballot victory, held up his fist and suggested he wanted to bring Democrats together into that kind of solid, forceful block.

The midterm leadership turnover came because of the resignation of Jim Wright of Texas as speaker and of Coelho as whip. Foley moved up last week to be speaker, leaving the No. 2 and No. 3 leadership posts vacant.

The election of Gray as whip opened up the post of caucus chairman, which is to be filled at a caucus meeting next week.

Better Water

First Step Toward Improvement

Sometimes, you have to take a first step. It may not be a very big step or a very sturdy step, but it represents forward progress.

That's the case with classifying the Tar-Pamlico river basin as nutrient sensitive waters. That action in itself doesn't go far enough. But it is the beginning of improved water quality for two stressed waterways.

The state Department of Environmental Management has recommended the Tar-Pamlico basin be declared nutrient sensitive. Tonight, at a public meeting at East Carolina University, that proposal will be explained.

The classification should be endorsed for these rivers and used as a foundation for building stronger protection for a fragile estuary. It is not an action without financial impact. But it is a move with significant economic — and environmental — value.

To the average taxpayer, proclaiming a river "nutrient sensitive" might seem a little remote. But what those words really represent is pollution — phosphorus and nitrogen that upset the balance of a healthy stream. This pollution comes from farms, industries and cities. Rainwater runoff, along with municipal sewage and industrial discharges, are responsible for most of it.

In fisherman's terms, too many nutrients cause excessive algae growth that robs water of oxygen that fish breath. The result is dead fish. Or fewer fish. Too many nutrients also encourage the growth of bacteria that cause disease. In a normal waterway, this bacteria might perish, not flourish. Complicated process, simple result: diminished water quality that eventually damages each ecological aspect of the Tar River and Pamlico Sound.

There are sharp aesthetic and economic drawbacks to that damage.

Algae blooms aren't really blooms at all. They're green gobs and are smelly, slimy and unappealing. Not very conducive to swimming or boating or fishing.

Nobody likes the thought of fish kills or disease, but to the commercial fishermen that pull their livings from Pamlico River and Sound, such happenings are more than mere inconveniences. Diminished water quality threatens their livelihood.

Designating the Tar and Pamlico as nutrient sensitive means levels of these pollutants will be capped and monitored. The points at which they enter the waterway — known as pollution point sources — will be forced to keep emissions to present levels. Again, these points include farms, cities and industries.

Why should the average citizen care? Because the average citizen is a taxpayer and limiting nutrient pollution in the Tar-Pamlico basin will cost money. The more nutrients must be removed from municipal sewage, the more expensive that process becomes. Keeping runoff from livestock operations and cultivation out of streams is also more expensive for farmers. It's more expensive for industries to remove pollution from their discharge. Inevitably, these costs will be passed along to the public. But that expense is worthwhile.

DEM's nutrient sensitive proposal has flaws. First, it only caps nutrients at present levels rather than setting goals for reducing them. That doesn't even guarantee the river, which is already overstressed, will get any relief.

Second, it doesn't require farmers to practice good stewardship. It only qualifies them for cost-share programs if they choose proper nutrient management. Agriculture is responsible for much of the pollution and that industry should do its share to improve water quality.

Third, and most important, the proposal doesn't provide any financial incentives for polluters to improve. If keeping nutrients out of the waterway costs money, it makes sense to encourage that goal by making it financially attractive. Incentives, cost-sharing and tax breaks are relevant measures. But the proposal does not address these issues.

Nevertheless, a nutrient sensitive designation can be the start of better water quality for a river basin and an estuary that is too valuable and too beautiful to be destroyed — and too sick to be ignored.

This pollution reduction won't touch a myriad of other problems that plague the Tar and Pamlico. But it can, if strengthened and supported, help.

'Never Mind' About That Bill

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — The late Gilda Radner, in her Emily Latella routine on Saturday Night Live, would always pontificate on matters only to learn, near the end of her commentary, that her remarks were way off base. She had a delightful way of extricating herself. She'd merely say, "Never Mind."

Emily came to mind last week when Rep. Alex Hall and Sen. Frank Block, both D-New Hanover, sponsors of the hotly debated furniture retailers bill, announced that they would delay action on it for one year. Their action revived a question that first arose with the bill's first airing in a House committee: Was this a matter in which the legislature should be involved, or was it one for businesses to solve among themselves?

The bill would outlaw certain restrictions which furniture manufacturers put on the retail sales of their most expensive pieces. Retailers, whose organization proposed the bill, want to take orders by telephone. Manufacturers want sales restricted only to customers who visit showrooms and order in person.

Retailers argued that manufacturers were restraining trade with the restrictions against telephone sales by threatening to sever contracts with dealers who use the telephone.

Manufacturers argued that they had a right to protect their customers by assuring that all sales were conducted in person. This way, they said, customers would be assured of the products and service that they deserved when buying high end furniture.

This may be an interesting dispute, but the more legislators looked at it, the more they questioned if it was any of their business, if there was any overriding public interest involved.

In the free enterprise system, the market is supposed to regulate matters like this. If the top producers of high end furniture won't allow telephone sales, then that opens a niche for someone else. Some other manufacturer could introduce a line of high end furniture, allow telephone marketing, and when sales start to pour in, market pressure would come to bear on other manufacturers to do the same.

There is an argument, however, for government intervention. The government oversees the manufacturer - retailer relationships in a number of different industries like wine, beer, and automobiles.

Manufacturers and retailers now have a year to settle the question of telephone sales. If they can, they'll be able to issue a big "Never Mind" to the legislature.

A Lesson For The Heavy Handed

LONDON — The Republican National Committee's assault by innuendo on new House Speaker Thomas S. Foley (D-Wash.) was found 'disgusting' by President Bush and offensive by almost everyone else in politics and the press.

What it shows, beyond the muckish mind-set of that outfit, is the sad decline of the art of applying the stiletto with enough wit or style to take the sting out of the attack.

This is not a brand-new failing, to be sure. Last fall's presidential campaign was singularly devoid of laughs. George Bush and Michael Dukakis conspicuously declined to use anecdote, or exaggeration, or caricature or satire or anything else smacking of humor to make their points.

Ronald Reagan could score politically with his store of Hollywood yarns, but most of the other recent practitioners of presidential politics have shown only a sober face to the voters. That was true even when, as was the case with Jerry Ford and Walter Mondale, they could tell a good tale and enjoy a good line in private.

With rare exceptions, Foley being one, today's prominent politicians depend on professional jokesmiths to give them the thin veneer of wit they may feel occasionally called upon to display in public. Their natural sense of humor is almost nil.

These ruminations were started by a day on the hustings last week with Neil Kinnock, the leader of the British Labor Party. Kinnock is not regarded as a notable wit by British standards, being much too easy to bait into an angry response. But he is a Welshman and he can play a crowd.

Kinnock opened a speech with a story alluding to recent tabloid reports that Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher retained her smart appearance and high energy, after ten years in office, by taking special baths enhanced by an electric current.

'You know the Tories have come up with a wonderful new slogan,' Kinnock said, with heavy sarcasm. 'Here it is: Stay at home on June 15 and you'll live on a diet of Brussels.'

In fact, that soggy line, referring to the Tories' fear of leftish social policies emanating from the European Commission in Brussels if the candidates supporting free-market approaches do badly in this week's Euro-elections, did come out of Conservative Party headquarters.

'It sounds,' Kinnock said, 'like something Mrs. Thatcher thought up in the bath. You know, you fill it with water. You add a bit of medicinal mud. You put in a few rubber duckies to remind you of the Cabinet. You pass an electric current through the muck and that's the kind of ideas you get.'

He dealt with the raging dispute between Thatcher and her chancellor of the exchequer, Nigel Lawson, not with a boring disquisition on the difference in their economic policies, but with this exaggerated Westminster story:

'Last month, you know, she blamed Nigel for inflation one week and he blamed her for the interest-rate increase the next week. So last Wednesday (during question period in the House of Commons), I said to Nigel, 'Are we going to have an interest-rate rise every time she drops a clanger in the Commons?'

'I was just trying to be helpful.' 'He said — with her sitting next to him: 'If it is the case — and I don't know that it is — that the Prime Minister's remark in the House had an adverse effect on the markets, it is because the markets wholly misinterpreted what she was saying.'

'As he said it, he looked like a blindfold nudist in a barbed wire factory. And she sat next to him with a face like a pickled walnut. She was sucking her cheeks in so far, I thought she'd turn her face inside out. You could just see they were dying to reach out — and clasp each other.'

By this time, the partisan crowd was rocking with laughter. And the feeling of goodwill carried over to the tough part of the speech, which was in fact harsher than what you normally hear American party leaders saying about each other.

But there was no uproar in the press and no need for apologies. The humor had not only made the audience tolerant of a harangue which, truth to tell, went on long enough to explain why Kinnock's nickname in the satirical magazine, "Private Eye," is 'the Welsh Windbag.' The humor also reminded the watching reporters, by its very exaggeration, that this was an occasion for hyperbole, where not everything was to be taken literally.

The humorless, heavy-handed partisans at home could note the lesson.

Tobacco Vote OK'd

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A bill to let tobacco growers vote on whether to pay a higher assessment to promote their product was enacted Wednesday on a 106-1 vote in the House.

The bill, approved by the House Finance Committee on Tuesday, would allow an extra 10 cents to be levied on every 100 pounds of tobacco, with the money going to Tobacco Associates. The panel defeated an amendment that would have split an additional 5 cents per hundred between the Tobacco Growers Association and the N.C. Tobacco Foundation.

Rep. Vernon James, D-Pasquotank, said the bill would double the assessment, bringing in more than $1 million a year for tobacco promotion.

Rep. Larry Etheridge, R-Mecklenburg, was the only member voting against the bill, which would take effect only if two-thirds of tobacco growers vote for it in a referendum.

Offshore Drilling Defended

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A major natural gas find off the North Carolina coast could be a boon to the economy of eastern North Carolina, making gas available in many areas that now lack service, an industry executive says.

"North Carolina is supplied by one cross-country pipeline," said William Wilson, vice president of N.C. Natural Gas Corp. in Fayetteville. "The gas we burn here comes from Texas, Louisiana, Alabama and offshore in the Gulf of Mexico."

"A local supply in North Carolina would have very significant effects on the economic well-being of the state and its competitiveness. ... The gas is going to have to move through eastern North Carolina before it gets anywhere, which means new transmission lines."

Wilson made his comments Wednesday while addressing the governor's working group on offshore drilling.

"There are hundreds of thousands of jobs in North Carolina that depend on a cheap, clean-burning fuel for an energy supply," he said.

Since the Mobil Oil Corp. announced its plans to drill an exploratory well about 50 miles northeast of Cape Hatteras, the group has focused much of its attention on potential environmental problems that could result from oil and gas exploration along the coast.

State officials and environmentalists have demanded that the federal government prepare an environmental impact statement before allowing any drilling. The proposed drilling site is along the Gulf Stream under 3,100 feet of water, and critics say strong currents and storms could hamper drilling operations and quickly carry any oil spills ashore.

But Mobil and federal officials say a detailed environmental study isn't necessary because exploratory operations seldom cause spills. They also say that offshore drilling is unlikely to find oil.

Wilson told the group that natural gas is the cleanest energy that comes from fossil fuels. When burned, he said, gas gives off only fractions of the many major air pollutants emitted by burning oil or coal, including sulfur dioxide, particulates, carbon monoxide, hydrocarbons and nitrous oxides.

Card Features N.C. Lighthouse

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — As part of a series called America the Beautiful, which celebrates the country's coastlines on 3½-by-5½ cards, the U.S. Postal Service is introducing a colorful seashore postal card showing Cape Hatteras National Seashore in Buxton.

A watercolor drawing of pristine beach and a lighthouse replaces the stamp in the top right corner of the card. A sea gull floats by in the foreground.

While the configuration of the post card beach might resemble the beach in front of the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse, the lighthouse in the card has red-and-white horizontal stripes. The Hatteras lighthouse is black and white, with the stripes wrapping around the structure like a barber pole.

A ceremony will be held Saturday in the visitors' center and will feature speeches by the assistant U.S. postmaster general, a local historian and Tom Hartman, superintendent of the Cape Hatteras National Seashore.

Confusion On Major Bills Slows Legislative Pace

By John Flesher
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Hopes for adjourning the General Assembly this month are dimming as powerful House and Senate leaders maneuver for leverage on major issues, including funding of salary raises, education improvements and highway construction.

"There's a feeling that things are sort of coming unraveled," said Rep. Sam Hunt, D-Alamance, a close ally of House Speaker Joe Mavretic.

Two developments Wednesday exacerbated the confusion:

- Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, powerful chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, declined to bring up the $8.6 billion highway construction bill for a vote during Wednesday's meeting after saying last week he would do so.
- The 14 House budget leaders who voted Tuesday for a one-year freeze in the Basic Education Program rescinded the vote Wednesday at the request of the chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, Rep. David Diamont, D-Surry.

Diamont then unveiled the latest in a series of proposals that have surfaced in recent weeks to finance a 6 percent pay raise for teachers and state employees, pump $106 million into the BEP to keep its eight-year implementation on schedule, and fund other new or expanded government programs.

The centerpiece of Diamont's plan is cutting state aid to local governments and authorizing them to compensate for their losses by boosting the local-option sales tax, currently 2 cents on the dollar, by half a cent.

The complex maneuvering in the House and Senate came as some legislators and lobbyists voiced concern about the seeming inability to forge a consensus on the session's overriding issues.

The struggle has given the Legislature a sense of drift at a time when activity would have to be accelerating rapidly to meet the leadership's goal of adjourning by June 30.

Rauch attributed the situation to the absence of all-powerful leaders in either chamber, a change from previous sessions when the lieutenant governor and a few senators would huddle privately to develop a tax plan and sell it to the rank-and-file.

"This is a different kind of leadership ... leadership by committee," Rauch said. "It is slower, it is more tedious, but you have everybody involved and you're going to get a better bill."

Rauch's delay on the highway bill mystified many of his colleagues. He insisted that he wasn't trying to kill the package but said the Legislature should decide how it is going to finance school programs before dealing with transportation.

"If you give me a choice of fixing potholes or education, I'll go for education," he said.

A source who spoke on condition of anonymity said Senate leaders, including Rauch, were considering diverting up to $200 million from the fund the highway bill would create for road-building and spending the money for general-fund programs such as schools and salaries.

"It would pretty well emasculate the highway funding bill," the source said.

Rauch declined to comment when asked whether he was considering such a move.

The version of the highway bill approved by a Senate subcommittee last week would boost the gasoline tax, automobile sales tax and title fee to construct an "intra-state" four-lane highway network, pave rural roads and build municipal freeways.

Meanwhile, the House leadership focused on raising $414 million to fund the BEP and a 6 percent raise.

Diamont's plan, when combined with $162.6 million already available from increased tax collections, would produce $384.3 million in 1989-90 by:

- Cutting roughly $160 million from the $200 million the state gives local governments each year as reimbursement for losses they suffered when various taxes, such as the levies on business inventories and intangible assets, were cut or repealed.
- Counties and cities would be able to make up this money through the half-cent sales tax increase.
- Establishing an amnesty program for delinquent taxpayers and cracking down on state income tax evasion. A legislative staffer said this would generate at least $37 million.

- Reducing by $23 million the state's funding of public school construction, an expense that counties historically have shouldered.
- Slashing by $1.5 million the state's payment to municipal government for services, such as fire protection, to state facilities.

Diamont said he would gladly withdraw his plan if the Legislature voted to boost the sales tax by a penny, and acknowledged the plan was designed partially to pressure the House Finance Committee into doing so.

"Personally, I would rather the state increase the tax and spend it," he told the 14 chairmen of the standing budget subcommittees. "But we don't have the power in the Appropriations Committee to do that. But we can send some very loud signals to (the Finance Committee) to get moving."

Diamont's plan was greeted skeptically by Republican members of the budget leadership.

Rep. George Holmes, R-Yadkin, said it amounted to "passing the buck" to local governments, forcing them to raise the sales tax after the General Assembly would have found doing so politically unacceptable.

"I think we here in Raleigh should be making this decision whether to tax the people of North Carolina or not," Rep. Larry Etheridge, R-Wilson, said.

Diamont said leaders of the Finance Committee, which deals with tax matters, had been "working their butts off" to fashion a sales-tax bill that would satisfy Gov. Jim Martin's demand for linkage with a statewide merit plan for teachers. If no deal is cut, Diamont said, his plan is better than nothing.

Legislator Says Courts Coddling Drug Kingpins

By F. Alan Boyce
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A bill to levy a tax on illegal drugs appeared to have strong support in a Senate committee, but its sponsor hit a sore spot when he implied the justice system is coddling drug kingpins.

Sen. Bob Shaw, R-Guilford, told the Senate Finance Committee on Wednesday that of 80 drug defendants in southeastern North Carolina, 76 had pleaded guilty but only 22 were given active sentences. One defendant who should have faced 168 years in prison and a $795,000 fine was given three years, a $5,000 fine and was later paroled — all because he cooperated with the prosecutors, Shaw said.

"We got less money from this man who was a drug trafficker than it cost to prosecute him," Shaw said. He noted that under his bill, the state would have gotten $1.5 million in taxes from that case.

"They (drug dealers) are not pulling the time, the state is not getting the fines," he said. "They're coming back on the street."

Sen. R.C. Soles, D-Columbus, erupted at the constant criticism of the justice system in his district. He said that often judges mete out light sentences only after law enforcement officers beg for the special treatment.

"There hasn't been a single soul who has mentioned this bill to me in a positive way," he said. "I personally am tired of hearing him (Shaw) going around talking about things in my district that he doesn't know anything about."

Soles asked that the bill be sent to a subcommittee, but that brought a wave of objections from senators who supported the bill.

"All I know is the present system of curtailing drugs in this state ain't working," said Sen. Richard Conder, D-Richmond, who said the bill could bring in $500 million a year in the unlikely event all drug dealers paid the tax.

Soles was adamant about slowing the bill, saying, "To run around an area of the state and indirectly criticize the courts and the judges for what they've done when that is not what this bill is all about is totally uncalled for."

Soles' motion for a subcommittee was defeated, but he circulated among committee members to get support for putting off a vote until another meeting. That motion was approved 12-8.

The bill calls for a tax of $200 per gram of cocaine and $3.50 per ounce of marijuana. A drug dealer caught with drugs not bearing a tax stamp would be billed for the taxes owed and the money could be gotten through methods including confiscation of property and garnishment of wages, Shaw said.

N.C. Ranks 4th In Industrial Survey

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — A private annual survey rating state manufacturing climates has gotten a cool reception from some critics, who say it inaccurately forecasts which locales could attract and maintain big business.

State officials in California, for example, which got a No. 22 ranking among the nation's 29 top manufacturing states, were unimpressed with the 10th annual survey by the international accounting firm Grant Thornton.

"You can't compare a major global economic power (California) with Nebraska, North Dakota or even Wilmington, Delaware," Tony Quinn, director of research for California's Department of Commerce, said Wednesday.

In the Thornton survey, released Wednesday, Delaware replaced New Hampshire as No. 1 in manufacturing climate among manufacturing-intensive states. New Hampshire fell to No. 3 behind Virginia. North Carolina was No. 4.

Peter Praetz, manager of the survey, said Delaware topped the list because of its skilled work force, wage levels and government policies toward manufacturing.

Among the 21 lower manufacturing-output states, North Dakota was first in manufacturing climate due to its low labor costs and good quality of life, followed in order by South Dakota and Nebraska.

The rankings were based on 21 factors in five categories: state and local fiscal policies; unemployment benefits and workers' compensation levels; labor costs; energy costs and work hours lost because of strikes; and quality of life.

IN THE STATE

Drug Plea

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Seven people have pleaded guilty to drug offenses in Cumberland County Superior Court and will be the first sentenced from indictments handed down by a special investigative grand jury concentrating on drug trafficking in Cumberland and surrounding counties.

The grand jury was empaneled in August 1988, and returned the first indictments in December. Authorities say the seven people were part of a drug ring headed by Michael George, 34, of Raeford. George pleaded guilty May 26 to conspiracy to traffic cocaine, engaging in a continuing criminal enterprise and 13 counts of trafficking cocaine. Authorities said he used his drug organization to bring cocaine from Florida to Cumberland County, where it was distributed.

Ten people were indicted by the special grand jury and charged with conspiring with George to distribute cocaine.

where he has served since July 1987.

Britt headed the county schools from 1981-85, and became superintendent of the 44,000-student city-county merged system in 1985.

Tire Fire

DOBSON, N.C. (AP) — A large tire-dump fire crossed a fire break early Wednesday morning and set another acre or two of tires afire before being contained, officials said.

Arthur B. Smith, the on-scene coordinator for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, said late Wednesday afternoon that about two acres of what was a seven-acre fire were still burning.

He said that the EPA decided Tuesday night to initiate a "response action," using federal money, to help put out the fire and do any cleanup necessary. He said that he didn't have an estimate of how much that will cost.

He said that heavy equipment would be moved into the area to cover the tires with dirt.

Stevens Center

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — The Endowment Fund of the North Carolina School of the Arts mailed a $247,427 check to Forsyth County Wednesday for back taxes owed by the Stevens Center in downtown Winston-Salem.

The check was accompanied by a letter of protest, which requests that the Forsyth County commissioners forgive the tax and refund the money, said Andrew Vanore, deputy state attorney general, who represents the Endowment Fund.

"The letter of protest takes the position that since the property is now owned by an agency of the state of North Carolina, it's not subject to taxation," Vanore said.

"It simply can't be done," Forsyth County Manager Graham Pervier said. "There is no provision in the law for forgiving or releasing taxes. It's as simple as that."

Hickory Flag

HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — Officials announced Wednesday they had chosen a design for the first flag to represent Hickory.

On a field of white, the flag displays Hickory's seal, recalling the city's beginnings as a tavern in the mid-19th century. Two deep blue stripes, evoking the waters of the Catawba River and the Blue Ridge mountains, surround the central image.

Three color fields represent "the excellent quality of life provided in Hickory's fertile environments for Business, Community and Family."

These concepts come from the pen of the flag's designer, Nashville graphic designer Stephanie Yount, 39, a Hickory native who left the city in 1974.

Hickory unfurled Ms. Yount's design on Flag Day, the holiday set aside to mark the date in 1777 when the Stars and Stripes became the official U.S. flag.

Sanctions Sought

RALEIGH (AP) — A lawsuit accusing North Carolina and Robeson County officials of violating the civil rights of two Indian activists and their supporters was "a propaganda and plea-bargaining tool" used by three attorneys, the state Attorney General's Office says.

And the office has filed a motion seeking financial sanctions against three lawyers who filed the suit.

In a motion filed in U.S. District Court, the Attorney General's Office asked a federal judge to financially penalize William Kunstler, a civil rights lawyer from New York; Barry Nakell, a professor at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill School of Law, and Lewis Pitts, founder of the Christic Institute-South, a public interest law center in Carrboro.

A memorandum filed with the motion characterizes the suit as "a propaganda and plea-bargaining tool" and says there was no factual or legal basis for its allegations. The documents, which will go to Judge Malcolm J. Howard for a ruling, accuse the lawyers of violating Rule 11 of the Code of Civil Procedure, which prohibits unfounded suits.

Superintendent

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — A superintendent from an Indiana school system will become the superintendent of schools in Cumberland County, officials said Wednesday.

Larry Rowedder of Bloomington, Ind., was one of five finalists from a list of 32 applicants. He replaces Jack Britt, whose contract was not renewed by the school board in March. Britt, whose contract expires June 30, was paid more than $96,000 annually.

Rowedder, 48, earned $85,000 annually as superintendent of the 10,300-student Monroe County Community School Corp. in Bloomington,

More Than Half Of State's Counties Expected To Increase Local Taxes

Counties Picking Up Larger Share Of Social Programs, Local Projects

By F. Alan Boyce
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Slower economic growth and increasing pressure to pick up the cost of mandated services like Medicaid are forcing many North Carolina counties to increase property taxes — a levy that may be tough to swallow on top of proposed statewide tax increases.

As many as half of North Carolina's 100 counties are expected to raise property taxes by July 1, when the 1989-90 fiscal year begins, said Ed Regan of the N.C. County Commissioners Association.

"If you could characterize '83 to '86 as a period where counties were, generally speaking, able to keep rates fairly stable, the current fiscal year and the upcoming 89-90 we're seeing a return to the trend of a lot of counties having to raise rates," he said.

In the early '80s, economic growth could be counted on to pump more money into county coffers, Regan said. But today? "Many areas ... are not getting the benefit of that additional tax base as they were in the past," he said.

Whatever increases occur may come as an unwelcome addition to a proposed 1-cent sales tax hike and a 5/4-cents-per-gallon increase on gasoline taxes. Those plans are being considered in the General Assembly to pay for higher teacher salaries and highway construction.

Counties are more directly affected by other legislation, however. They are being asked to pick up a bigger share of health and social service programs on top of existing school construction projects in many areas, Regan said.

"When there is a decision by either the federal government or the General Assembly to expand services to needy people such as low-income pregnant women, state and county governments have to come up with more money to fund those services," he said.

The reduction in federal participation in health and social services is still being phased in, so the state's decision to expand Medicaid poses an extra burden, particularly on smaller counties, Regan said.

Continuing capital expenses are adding to the pressure for higher taxes.

"In the last four years, county spending for school construction has quadrupled," said Regan. The total went from $90 million in fiscal 1984-85 to $360 million this fiscal year.

Last year, 42 counties raised property taxes an average of 3 cents per $100 and 14 revalued property — a move that usually means reducing tax rates to accommodate higher property values.

Chances are good that a county may break the $1 mark on property taxes. In 1988-89, Tyrrell and Currituck counties led the state in tax rates at 98 cents. Avery County had the lowest rate at 34.5 cents and the average was 61.3 cents, said Regan.

One of the biggest increases may come in Robeson County, where officials are proposing a jump of 32 cents in property rates. Regan said about 20 cents of the increase would stem indirectly from the decision to merge the county's five school systems. Part of that agreement includes a promise to bring the county up to the state average for per-pupil spending.

"The remaining 5 to 10 cents is to build a new county jail, which they're under order to do by the state," he said.

In North Carolina's more populated counties, reasons for tax increases ranged from simple inflation to controversial construction projects.

"Our budget contains no new programs," said Sally Kost, budget analyst in Wake County, where property taxes were expected to increase from 72 cents per $100 valuation to 77 cents. "Things have slowed down. The growth hasn't been that strong this year."

In Mecklenburg County, a tax increase from 62.7 cents to 66 cents per $100 will pay for "a whole list of projects" plus increased debt service on the sale of bonds, said Ruth McNeil of the assessor's office. The increase is about the same as last year, when taxes went from 58.9 cents to 62.7 cents per $100.

There were several special circumstances in Forsyth County, where commissioners were recommending that property rates go from 53 cents to 59 1/2 cents per $100.

"Last year was a revaluation year," said Pervier Graham, county manager. "Also we had a balanced budget the last few years by dipping into reserves, so those reserves are gone."

Controversies over a new jail and an overflowing courthouse were the main issues as Buncombe County considered raising the 74-cents-per-$100 rate by 3 to 5 cents, said Elizabeth Taylor, county tax collector. The county had no increase in taxes the previous year, she said.

Cumberland County commissioners "are trying to hold the line at 72.5 cents," said Stephen Horne, interim county assessor. The picture there was clouded because Fayetteville was considering raising taxes as well.

Regan said Guilford County is likely to reduce its taxes by about 5 cents to keep a campaign promise made by county commissioners. Rates are also likely to drop in Carteret County from 40 cents per $100 to 35 cents, said Ken Windley, county manager. However, the reduction will mean only partially funding the school board's recommendations and a jail reserve fund.

At the municipal level, tax increases appear about the same as last year, when 21 percent posted increases, said Lee Mandell of the N.C. League of Municipalities. He said those increases will likely be small ones.

Municipal officials don't appear to be worried that the taxes would come on top of those proposed by the legislature, he said.

Tax Fairness Bills Advance

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — North Carolina is once more en route to a simplified income-tax system that will remove some 700,000 low-income people from the tax rolls.

House and Senate versions of the bill began moving Wednesday after lawmakers stopped holding them as possible vehicles to raise taxes to fund higher salaries for teachers and state employees.

"We did hear the voices out there that said maybe it was a bit too much to put in one bill," said Rep. Sharon Thompson, D-Durham, House sponsor of the measure.

"The Senate, in my opinion, has come around to the view that this bill ought to be revenue neutral," said Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, the Senate sponsor.

The Senate Finance Committee approved one version Wednesday. A few hours later, the House Finance Subcommittee on Ways and Means discussed a similar bill with slightly different tax rates. The House version was held over for further discussions.

Ms. Thompson defended a House provision to increase day-care credits from 7 percent of expenses to 10 percent, although it cost $12 million. She said most states allow credits for 100 percent of expenses.

The main intent of both bills now is to simplify tax returns, more fairly apply income taxes and improve enforcement of tax laws, Ms. Thompson said.

"Particularly if we do any other type of tax increase ... we have to counterbalance that with some relief to those people who are most impacted by such tax increases," she said, adding that there have been no changes in tax rates since the 1930s, when the average income was $323 and income taxes were levied only on those who earned more than $2,000.

"It has the effect of taking the working poor off our tax rolls and shifting the burden to the rest of us," said Winner. He said taxpayers will be able to complete their state returns in about five minutes and that the error rate could drop by 80 percent — a figure achieved when South Carolina adopted a similar law.

"It will be an extremely rare person who has to make over five calculations to figure his North Carolina income tax from beginning to end," Winner said.

Both bills had originally called for a flat tax, but lawmakers became concerned when they learned that would provide a tax break to people making more than $200,000. The Senate version now calls for a tax of 5.5 percent on the first $10,000 and 7 percent on income in excess of $10,000. The House rates are 5.5 percent and 7.5 percent, respectively.

Despite the changes, some lawmakers objected to putting the greatest burden on the middle class.

But Winner said most working-class people would be helped by the change. And he said those in the middle class could benefit enough from simplification to make up for a small increase in taxes.

Retirees Balk At Pension Taxes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Retired federal, state and local government employees have different ideas for dealing with a U.S. Supreme Court ruling that states must tax all their pensions the same way.

But during a legislative hearing Wednesday, spokesmen for all three groups agreed on one point: they don't want to fork over any more of their retirement benefits to the state than they do now.

The two sides made their cases at a public hearing before the House Pensions and Retirement Committee and the Government Subcommittee on Military, Veterans and Indian Affairs. Neither panel took action on four pending bills for changing the state law on pension taxation.

Rep. Alex Hall, D-New Hanover, chairman of the House Finance Committee, said the Legislature had little choice but to act on the matter before adjourning.

"It needs to be resolved within this month," Hall said.

Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said he preferred to treat all private and public sector pensions equally without depleting the state budget.

The issue arose in March after the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that the pensions of federal retirees must be taxed the same way as pensions of retired state and local government workers.

North Carolina is one of 15 states that have exempted state and local pensions from taxation while exempting only the first $4,000 of federal retirees' pensions. Private-sector pensions are taxed in full.

Giving federal pensions a total exemption would cost the state $42 million. Exempting government and private pensions would cost $122 million.

At the hearing, state and local government employees' spokesmen urged the Legislature to remove all exemptions for public workers' pensions. But they said the pension payments for state and local workers should be increased to offset their potential loss.

Al Adams, lobbyist for the North Carolina Retired Government Employees Association, said state retirees have enjoyed the total exemption since 1941 and have planned their finances accordingly.

Adams, who served 10 years in the House, said while a legislator he and his colleagues often told state employees that "although you're not paid very much, or as much as you'd like to be, at least your retirement income is not going to be taxed by the state."

Karen Garr, president of the North Carolina Association of Educators, said in a written statement that tax-free retirement benefits "have always been one advantage that helped keep good teachers in our classrooms."

One of the pending bills, sponsored by Hall, would repeal all retirement benefit exemptions and would boost the pensions of state and local employees.

Baptists Take On Sin City's Golden Strip

By David Briggs
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAS VEGAS — Hundreds of Southern Baptist conventioners marched down the heart of the nation's gambling capital, leaving behind thousands of religious pamphlets with bewildered tourists and gamblers.

"We need to show Las Vegas that we are not scared of them and we do not condemn them and we need to show them the love of God," said Ken Render of Lexington, Ky., as he handed out New Testaments on a thoroughfare known simply as The Strip on Wednesday afternoon.

But some tourists didn't know quite what to make of the sight of more than 200 Baptist evangelists following a man carrying a 12-foot wooden cross marching to Caesars Palace in 109-degree heat.

"I don't think they belong in Las Vegas," said Darlene Klemm of Oconomowoc, Wis.

The two-mile march came after an evangelism conference at the midpoint of a three-day meeting of Southern Baptists, the nation's largest Protestant denomination with 14.8 million members. The convention ends today.

Led by Arthur Blessitt, a Hollywood evangelist who has carried his 80-pound cross in more than 100 countries in the past 20 years, the evangelists left religious literature in casinos, in the place of circulars advertising sex shows, and in the hands of tourists, gamblers and casino workers.

R.B. Chandler, pastor of Mount Airy Baptist Church in Mount Airy, Md., said: "The point-blank truth is that everybody in the world is either born-again or not. The idea is hopefully we would catch some people and tell them about Christ for the first time."

Chris Martin of Park Forest, Ill., got off a bus in an unscheduled stop when he saw the Baptists in front of Caesars Palace.

As they prayed, "I accepted the Lord," he said. But he has no plans to give up gambling.

Other tourists viewed the evangelistic effort differently.

Dwain Moore said he thought the Baptists were "a little too pushy" in trying to evangelize people on the street.

His wife, Thelma, said they were both Methodists and, "The Methodists don't do it."

Las Vegas residents took the evangelism in stride.

"These are nice, decent people, but I don't think they can do much to change our image, or our thinking," said Don Capaldi, a cab driver.

Larry Williams, a bellman at the Stardust, said: "What can it hurt to give people the Bible? We need to go back to more of that."

Some Southern Baptists have already revised their opinion of the city.

"Sodom and Gomorrah" was how George Mitchell, the mayor of a small town in western Colorado and a member of the Rifle Southern Baptist Church, envisioned Las Vegas.

But he said Wednesday he discovered average residents of the gambling mecca "seem to be all God-fearing people."

The decision to meet in Las Vegas evoked controversy within the Protestant denomination, with some Southern Baptists deciding to stay home rather than bring their families to a city built on vices they condemn.

Leaders of the denomination, which has pledged to evangelize the world by the turn of the century, responded by emphasizing evangelism at this year's convention.

A series of revivals were held last week in Las Vegas churches, and nearly 2,000 people participated in a door-to-door evangelization effort that led to more than 350 confessions of faith, church officials said.

The denomination hopes to start 25 new churches in Nevada by year's end. About 22,000 Southern Baptists in 71 churches are in Nevada.

Once one of the nation's fastest-growing churches, more than doubling in size in the past quarter-century, the Southern Baptist Convention has grown by barely more than half a percent each of the last two years, the lowest growth rate since 1937.

Blessitt said the community sometimes known as Sin City was not being singled out: "We're not picking on Las Vegas. We want it known, 'Look out world, we're going everywhere.'"

Broadcaster Asks Her Listeners For Help

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEULAH, Mich. — A cool-headed radio broadcaster's on-air plea for help led to the quick arrest of a man who broke into the station and took his wife away at gunpoint.

WBNZ News Director Chris Holbrook Anderson said she wasn't thinking of any risk Wednesday when she asked listeners to call the sheriff.

"I just knew I had to get help here and I knew I had to do it over the air," Anderson said.

Sheriff's deputies received about 300 calls after the broadcast. Within 10 minutes, deputies arrested Ed Bartkowiak and freed his wife, WBNZ Program Director Phyllis Minor. No injuries were reported.

Anderson said she and Minor were alone about 7:30 a.m. when Bartkowiak arrived at the rural station. Anderson said she locked the door, but Bartkowiak broke it open and used a tire iron to smash the telephone she was using to call police.

She talked Bartkowiak into letting her go alone into the studio, where she turned off the on-the-air light but switched on her microphone.

"I said, 'Someone please call the Benzie County Sheriff's Department. There is a man in the building. He has a gun,'" Anderson said. She managed to tell listeners her plea was not a joke before Bartkowiak came into the control room and she switched to playing music.

Moments later, a sheriff's dispatcher called to say help was on the way. Anderson convinced Bartkowiak that she had to answer the telephone and pretended the caller was a listener wanting to announce a birthday, said station owner Robert Brink, president of Forum Communications.

"I'm not sure I would have done as much. I can't commend her enough," Brink said.

his wife, but sheriff's deputies pulled over his car two miles from the station, officials said.

Minor, who moved out of the house she shared with her husband earlier this week, had received a threatening call from Bartkowiak Wednesday morning, authorities said.

The couple had been arguing for a few days, and "it just blew up into this," said Gina Von, a disc jockey.

Bartkowiak, 36, was charged with breaking and entering with intent to commit a felony, assault and committing a felony with a firearm, county Prosecutor Paul Schendel said.

Four Inmates Receive College Diplomas

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN QUENTIN, Calif. — San Quentin Prison issued the first college diplomas in its 137-history, as three inmates serving life sentences slipped black robes over their prison denims.

In a short commencement Wednesday attended by some 40 relatives and friends, degrees were awarded to prison inmates Elmo Chattman, 31, Dennis Jones, 45, and Lonnie Morris, 38.

Chattman received a bachelor of arts degree in creative writing and journalism, Jones earned a degree in business administration and Morris got his in communications.

"These are the greatest students I've ever had in my life," said Roger Freeburg, a professor at Antioch University in San Francisco, which began the special degree program for inmates in 1985. Antioch is closing at the end of June. "They just did something extraordinary, these three. I just can't believe they did it."

sented the culmination of college studies that began 14 years ago — on the outside — before his conviction for murder in Vicente and arrival at San Quentin in 1979.

A published poet, short story writer and editor of the San Quentin News, Chattman wrote a 65-page thesis on capital punishment while he was doing time in "the hole" because authorities suspected him of drug trafficking inside the prison.

He said his isolated incarceration may have improved the paper's quality: "There's a lot of solitude in there."

Jones, charged with conspiracy to commit murder in 1976, worked on his degree on Saturdays inside his 4½-by-11-foot cell.

Sub Sinks Tugboat

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — A nuclear attack submarine used in filming "The Hunt for Red October" accidentally snagged a tugboat, sunk it and left one crewman missing.

The search for the night watchman aboard the tugboat Barcona was suspended and no rescue effort was planned today after the sinking 10 miles from shore.

The submarine, a San Diego-based vessel with a crew of 140, wasn't damaged and it surfaced after the accident to assist in the search for the missing sailor, the Navy said.

Brian Bellanger, who was keeping watch at the time of the accident early Wednesday, was missing Wednesday night at the end of a search by four U.S. Coast Guard vessels, two helicopters and three Navy craft, said Coast Guard Lt. Rick Button.

There was no immediate word on how the accident occurred and officials said both the tug and the sub apparently were in the correct sea lanes.

Dan Rodriguez and Mike Lynk escaped the tug and were rescued unhurt after the 6,900-ton USS Houston snagged the Barcona's tow line, said Coast Guard Petty Officer 2nd Class Elizabeth Neely.

The two scrambled onto one of two empty barges being towed by the Barcona, owned by Long Beach-based Connelly-Pacific Marine.

Bellanger's brother, Glenn, said: "The water just caved in the boat, (which) just went straight down. Mike had the wires for the microphone, the radio, all wrapped around his neck. He said he didn't think Brian was going to make it."

"We're all hoping right now that he did, but there's 450 fathoms of water out there and that's, that's pretty deep."

The sub was used this week in the Paramount film production "The Hunt for Red October," based on the best-selling novel about a runaway Soviet sub by Tom Clancy. The film stars Sean Connery and Sam Neill. No actors were on the submarine at the time of the 4:43 a.m. accident.

Titan IV

Length: 174 feet
Diameter: 10 feet
Thrust (pounds): 2.76 million
First launch: June 14, 1989
Site: Cape Canaveral, Florida

- The most expensive unmanned space mission by the U.S., with the $220 million rocket, $180 million satellite, $45 million payload booster and other costs raising the total cost almost to half a billion dollars.
- The Titan IV can boost a 39,000 pound payload to an orbit of 150 to 300 miles or propel a 10,000 pound package to a so-called stationary orbit 23,000 miles up. It replaces the Titan 34D booster.
- Martin Marietta Denver Aerospace has a contract to build 23 Titan IV's for the Air Force for $5.1 billion.

Titan 4 Launch Eases Pentagon's Need For Shuttle

By Howard Benedict
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — With the successful maiden launch of the huge Titan 4, the Pentagon has an unmanned rocket that lessens its reliance on the space shuttle for lifting heavy military satellites into orbit.

Nearly 40 of those satellites have languished in storage for lack of a launch vehicle since the shuttle Challenger exploded more than three years ago.

The 20-story-tall Titan 4 made a spectacular debut Wednesday when it thundered off its launch pad with a 2½-ton satellite designed to provide instant alert of a missile attack on the United States.

It was the most expensive unmanned space mission ever by the United States, with the $220 million rocket, the $180 million satellite, a $45 million payload booster stage and other costs raising the total to close to $500 million.

The Air Force reported the big rocket had successfully passed its maiden test and placed its military satellite in orbit.

"This is an important milestone for the Air Force because it's the first Titan 4, our new heavy lift launch booster which will give us assured access to space for our critical heavy national security payloads," said Lt. Col. Ron Rand, an Air Force spokesman.

The Air Force reported only that the rocket launched Wednesday carried a classified payload which it would not identify for national security reasons.

However, it has been widely reported by knowledgeable observers and by Aviation Week and Space Technology magazine and other publications that the rocket carried an advanced missile warning satellite.

"The satellite is the first of a new class that uses an infrared telescope to detect an all-out nuclear missile attack on the United States within a minute of launch," said John Pike, associate director of space policy for the Federation of American Scientists.

This quick alert would give the president and military units 15 minutes to prepare for a submarine missile attack from the Atlantic or Pacific oceans or 30 minutes for a land-based strike from within Soviet borders, he said.

Defense Department officials decided after Challenger exploded in 1986 that they were relying too much on the manned shuttle for critical military payloads. So they more than doubled the number of Titan 4s on order and authorized development of two new smaller rockets, the Delta 2 and Atlas 2, for medium-size payloads.

The Delta 2 made its debut in February, carrying a navigation satellite into orbit. It repeated with another navigation payload Saturday.

The shuttle flights resumed last September, and the second flight in December deployed one of the backlogged heavy military satellites. Two more are scheduled on shuttle flights later this year, with at least one more Titan 4 launch planned.

The Pentagon hopes eventually to shift most of the payloads to the Titan 4, which can boost 39,000-pound payloads to an orbit 150 to 300 miles high or propel 10,000-pound packages to so-called stationary orbits 23,000 miles up.

The U.S. once had a much more powerful rocket, the Saturn 5 that launched Apollo astronauts to the moon. It could hoist 240,000 pounds into orbit. The new Soviet Energia rocket, the world's largest rocket, has nearly the power of the Saturn 5.

Both the Air Force and National Aeronautics and Space Administration are studying designs for a large advanced booster capable of lifting between 150,000 and 200,000 pounds to orbit.

The space shuttle can deliver 55,000 pounds.

Democrats Fail To Override Veto But Promise New Wage Hike Bill

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush won his first fight with Congress over raising the minimum wage, but Democrats are promising to emerge with a new measure the president will be unable to veto.

"Our obligation now is to move forward with a bill which will be enacted and put money in the pockets of low-wage workers this year," House Labor Committee Chairman Augustus Hawkins said Wednesday after he and fellow Democrats failed to override Bush's veto of a minimum-wage bill.

Hawkins, D-Calif., said he was preparing a new bill but wanted to talk with administration officials first to see if there was room for compromise.

Across the Capitol, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., wasted no time in beginning the second phase of the fight, introducing a bill identical to the one Bush vetoed Tuesday.

"The president should understand that this is an issue on which Congress has only begun to fight," said Kennedy, chairman of the Senate Labor Committee. "The issue is fairness and America's working poor deserve a fair increase in the minimum wage."

Kennedy, too, said he hoped to strike a compromise with the White House and with Hawkins invited Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole to appear before a joint session of the labor committees next week.

But Kennedy served notice he wanted to advance a new bill quickly and would do so whether or not Bush gives ground.

"I would prefer to work out an acceptable compromise with the administration," Kennedy said. "But if that is not possible we will try to enact a measure that has the support of a veto-proof majority."

Initial White House reaction indicated that Bush was not about to budge.

"The Congress should enact the president's minimum wage proposal at the earliest opportunity," said Bush spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

Bush's offer is to increase the hourly minimum wage from $3.35 to $4.25 by January 1992, with employers being able to pay all new hires a subminimum wage for six months.

The legislation he vetoed Tuesday would have increased the floor wage to $4.55 by October 1991 and contained a restrictive clause allowing employers to pay a subminimum to some new workers for no more than two months.

The House, under new Speaker Thomas S. Foley, tried to override the veto just 24 hours after it was issued, but the effort fell short by more than 30 votes. The vote was 247-178, with 20 Republicans joining 227 Democrats in trying to override the veto. Twenty-eight Democrats joined 150 Republicans in thwarting the leadership from reaching the two-thirds margin it needed to override.

A coalition of House Republicans also entered the second round of the fight, introducing a new minimum-wage proposal of their own that also includes a modest expansion of the Earned Income Tax Credit available to families with young children.

The new GOP measure would be closely studied by Democrats looking to draft a new bill that will attract enough support to override Bush in the event of a second veto.

While he introduced a measure identical to the one vetoed, Kennedy said he considered it only a start and would consider amendments. In the House, Hawkins was considering a proposal calling for an increase in the minimum wage to $4.25 an hour within two years.

That level matches Bush's final target for the minimum wage but would bring it there a year earlier than Bush favors. But Hawkins said he was not prepared to meet Bush's demand for the six-month subminimum, a provision the president has said must be in any minimum-wage legislation for him to sign it.

The new Republican proposal matches Bush's three-year formula for bringing the minimum wage to $4.25 an hour. But it takes the middle ground in the fight over the subminimum, allowing it to be paid for four months — twice what Democrats say they will allow and two months short of Bush's demand.

Panel OKs Higher Social Security Line

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A bill approved by a House Ways and Means subcommittee would allow older Americans to earn more wages before losing a portion of their Social Security pensions.

The latest in a long series of efforts to reduce the Social Security earnings limitation would permit those between the ages of 65 and 69 to make almost $1,100 more next year before they have to give up part of their pensions.

The increase was added to a package of amendments that includes one to strip the Social Security Administration away from the Department of Health and Human Services. The administration would be set up as an independent agency governed by a three-member board appointed by the president. The board would appoint an executive director to operate the agency.

The package now goes to the full Ways and Means Committee, where there is considerable support for raising the earnings limitation. The Senate went on record in favor of a higher limit earlier this year.

The limitation is as old as the Social Security system. When the pension program was enacted in 1935, it included a prohibition against paying benefits to any person still earning wages. Before the first pension check was paid, that was modified to bar a benefit in any month in which a person earned $15 or more in wages. The limit has been amended several times in recent years, as more people declined to take themselves entirely out of the work force at the traditional retirement age of 65.

Taste Scientists Explore Source Of Food Flavors

By William Kates
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

IITHACA, N.Y. — In this health-conscious age, most people want to know the ingredients in the food they're eating. John Sherbon and Harry Lawless want to know what's in the ingredients.

But Sherbon and Lawless, Cornell University food scientists, aren't driven by health; they want to determine what makes food taste the way it does.

It's an area that is increasingly crucial in the food industry.

"I'm not sure it's possible to get anyone to try green eggs and ham, but our job involves trying to learn what it is about green eggs that puts people off, and maybe find a way to make them more appealing," said Sherbon.

Away from the public eye — and mind — food scientists work on ways to improve what Americans eat. That not only means making it taste better, but improving quality, processing, storage, stability, nutrients and safety.

"When consumers buy a food product and eat it, they decide whether they like it based on the product as a whole," Lawless said at Cornell's new, $6 million Food Processing and Development Laboratory.

"They do not necessarily look at the individual qualities of the food such as color, taste, aroma and texture under a microscope. However, scientists look at the individual pieces of the food puzzle, trying to figure out what makes consumers like one product and dislike another."

In the world of big business, that's a mighty tool, said John W. Finley of Nabisco Brands Inc., in East Hanover, N.J. "It's important because no matter how much you spend on advertising and marketing, people eat foods because of their flavor. If it's not tasty, it's not desirable. It's that simple."

A more basic role for taste scientists is to ensure a food tastes the same no matter where it's made or its ingredients come from, he said. "When you're dealing with agricultural commodities grown in half a dozen states, the flavor can be extremely variable."

"You want an Oreo cookie to taste the same in Syracuse as it does in Miami. Consumers have certain expectations when they pick up a product. They're incredibly sensitive to change. And if they don't like it, they probably won't buy it again."

Early flavor analysis — the science goes back to Louis Pasteur, according to Sherbon — was limited to tasting and smelling by human observers. They would sample food as scientists watched and recorded their observations and comments. "Sensory evaluation has come a long way since the days of the tongue and palate approach," said Lawless, who has a background in psychology. "Not everything is as easy as the Pepsi Challenge would have you believe."

Sensory panels continue to play a major role, said John Vercellotti, a research chemist with the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agriculture Research Service regional center in New Orleans. The center, one of five in the nation, has had panelists evaluate such foods as beef, catfish and peanuts.

"No matter how advanced the science gets, these machines are only replicating what the nose and mouth do," said Vercellotti. "There will always be a place for them because people are the ultimate consumers and the ultimate decision-makers as to what tastes good."

The panels can be fairly objective because assessments are made as a group, usually from parameters established with the help of computers, he said. "It's kind of like an a cappella choir that sings with absolute pitch. You don't have all the same voice. You have many voices and they may be very different, but collectively you come out with one harmonious sound."

The Associated Press

Double exposure allows Sherbon to show 'tasty' food at left and 'acquired taste' food at right

What modern science has been able to do is take assessment a step further by pinpointing the chemical or chemicals that give a food a distinctive taste. One of the more recent developments in this area is "charm" analysis, which uses high-resolution gas chromatography to isolate flavor-active chemicals. It involves a person sitting in front of a chromatograph, sniffing emissions and having their responses recorded by a computer.

The name derives from the definition of charm, which is a property that attracts people, said Terry Acree, a chemist at Cornell's laboratory in Geneva. Through charm analysis scientists can tell precisely what makes a Concord grape taste different than other varieties or a Cortland apple than a Rome.

"We work in anonymity," said Sherbon, "but the consumer would be the first to know if we weren't doing our job."

Washington Area Hit By Storm

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A violent summer thunderstorm that whisked through the Washington area left hundreds of felled trees in its wake and a power outage the likes of which the local utility company said it had never seen.

One person was reported killed in the rainstorm after being involved in a traffic accident, and rush-hour was turned into chaos as fallen trees and malfunctioning traffic lights frustrated homeward-bound commuters.

An estimated 120,000 to 150,000 customers in Washington and suburban Maryland were left without power, according to Kevin Case, spokesman for Potomac Electric Power Co.

Officials of the Virginia Electric Power Company said an estimated 21,000 customers were blacked out in the northern part of the state.

"This is the worst storm in terms of the number of customers affected and damage to Pepco's electric distribution system in the 93-year history of the company," Case said.

He said complete restoration of power to all customers would take several days. The company said about 146 crews were dispatched to restore damaged lines, and workers were expected to be working around the clock today.

Dozens of homes were damaged and in several people were trapped in cars that had been struck by fallen trees, authorities said. A house in the District of Columbia had its roof blown off minutes before a tree fell on it.

Hail the size of golf balls was sighted in the northwest section of the district. Dulles International Airport in Chantilly, Va. recorded winds at up to 64 mph.

Police in Fairfax County, Va., reported several traffic accidents, including a head-on collision in which one person was killed and another seriously injured.

A fire truck responding to an alarm collided with a bus in the district, injuring three civilians and two firefighters, officials said.

Pupils attending an after-school program at a Washington elementary school had to stay later than usual because parents couldn't reach the school. Parents finally began arriving at 8 p.m., hours after the storm had departed the area, and the school decided to stay closed today.

Police in Montgomery County, Md., closed sections of several roads because of fallen trees and power lines. County and state trucks were dispatched to clear the trees.

Bush Pledges Strong Fight Against Crime

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GLYNCO, Ga. — President Bush, paying tribute to fallen federal law-enforcement officers, today promised to wage an anticrime campaign that will "put the handcuffs on criminals, not on the criminal justice system."

Bush also urged governors to join in his call for mandatory prison time and no plea bargaining for violent offenders and an expanded death penalty for convicted killers.

The president spoke at the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center, where agents and police officers from 60 agencies are enrolled. It is also the place where U.S. ambassadors go to "learn to recognize and avoid terrorists," he noted in his speech text.

Bush also laid a wreath at the Peace Officers Memorial to the 39 graduates of the training center who have been killed in the line of duty.

He repeated a warning he made earlier this year at the funeral of murdered Drug Enforcement Administration agent Everett Hatcher in New York: "Better that you had never been born than to attack one of America's finest."

At the ceremonies Bush signed a document transmitting to Congress a the $1.2 billion "take back the streets" anticrime package he unveiled a month ago.

Bush spelled out anew three of the central planks of his anticrime platform: doubling to 10 years the mandatory term for use of semi-automatic weapons in crimes involving violence or drugs; eliminating plea bargaining for violent federal firearms offenses; and an expanded federal death penalty for killers and terrorists.

"When a criminal commits a crime with a gun and someone dies, justice demands something in return: the ultimate penalty, death," the president said.

"I call on governors to match this federal initiative and propose these same three standards at home: mandatory time, no deals without cooperation and the death penalty," he said.

"Let's put the handcuffs on criminals, not on the criminal justice system," he said. "In short, I am proposing more law enforcers to catch criminals, more staff to prosecute them and more prisons to keep them off the streets."

President Seeks Quick S&L Vote

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — President Bush, declaring that Americans "have every right to be disturbed and shocked" by the savings and loan crisis, Wednesday called for the House to pass a bill forcing thrift owners to supply billions of dollars in additional capital for their businesses.

Top officials of both parties conferred at the White House with Bush and predicted that the House will vote this week to give the president the S&L rescue legislation he wants.

Thumping his hand on the table in the Cabinet room as he opened the meeting with congressional leaders, Bush said, "In my view, it is time for the American public and our administration to say that enough is enough and to earnestly ask for the support of the Congress."

The parade of prominent congressmen to the White House, combined with the president's strong statement, was designed to neutralize a revolt among Republican House members, who are being lobbied hard by the S&L industry. Many of the Republicans are sympathetic to the arguments of some S&Ls that want to count "goodwill" as part of their capital rather than raise additional funds as the financial foundation for their business.

S&Ls that acquired failing thrifts in the early 1980s were given goodwill certificates by federal regulators. The goodwill, which is the intangible value of a business beyond the cash and physical assets, can be counted in these cases as capital for regulatory purposes.

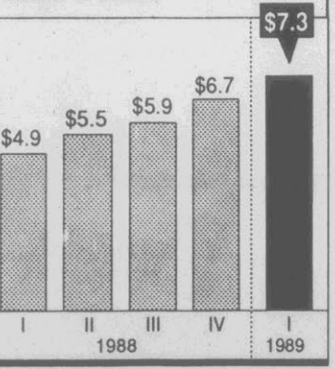

But the House Banking Committee approved a bill requiring S&L owners to put up real capital, $3 in cash for every $100 in loans made by the institution. The use of goodwill to help achieve the 3 percent standard would be phased out and would be barred by 1995.

The president and many members of Congress favor this standard, arguing that S&L owners are less likely to make risky loans if they must furnish more of their own money to the thrift institution. "Now, some of the smaller — or the weaker, I would say — S&Ls are demanding the right to continue to treat goodwill as capital, even though goodwill has no tangible value," the president said.

The S&L industry now counts as capital about $20 billion in goodwill. Bush said this would result in as much as $600 billion in loans "without one dollar in real capital for decades to come."

U.S. Spending $2.2 Billion On AIDS

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

BOSTON — The federal government is spending more to control AIDS than to conquer heart disease, which kills 20 times more Americans, but some critics contend it is still not enough.

A report today, described as the first to sum up the entire federal AIDS effort, found the government this year is spending $2.2 billion on the epidemic, with more than half going to research and prevention. The figure will grow to $4.3 billion in 1992.

"We were surprised to learn the extent to which so many different individuals and agencies were involved in AIDS efforts," said Dr. William Winkenwerder, who directed the analysis. "The breadth of the effort of the federal government was greater than we thought it might be."

In an editorial published with the study in the New England Journal of Medicine, Dr. David E. Rogers of Cornell Medical College in New York said he believes the nation is still spending "vastly too little" on AIDS.

Rogers said he would like to see more spending on AIDS education for people at high risk of the disease, especially teen-agers, as well as disaster relief for cities most severely hit by the epidemic. He also recommended even higher spending for basic research on the AIDS virus and new treatments and vaccines.

Dr. Sheldon Wolff of Tufts Medical School, co-chairman of a National Academy of Sciences review of federal AIDS efforts three years ago, agreed that the government should put more money into AIDS.

"We are not doing enough," he said. "Are we going more? Hell yes. The federal government has responded, but belatedly, to AIDS."

The analysis shows that AIDS spending now makes up nearly 10 percent of the total budget of the U.S. Public Health Service, which oversees government medical research, and by 1992 it will account for nearly 13 percent.

Spending on AIDS research, education and prevention is comparable to other diseases that "will continue to have a far greater effect on U.S. mortality," the report concluded.

Winkenwerder, former AIDS coordinator of the Health Care Financing Administration, is now a physician with the Southeast Permanente Medical Group in Atlanta.

His report found that between 1982, when the epidemic began, and the end of this year, the federal government will have spent $5.5 million on illness caused by the AIDS virus.

Helms Loses Fight To Block Negotiator

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Despite vociferous opposition from conservative Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., the Senate Wednesday approved the nomination of Richard R. Burt to serve as President Bush's chief arms control negotiator.

The 89-10 vote will permit Burt, 42, the former ambassador to West Germany, to represent the United States at the resumption of strategic arms limitation negotiations in Geneva Monday. Helms had threatened to hold up the vote until after the talks reopened.

Even as late as two hours before the vote, Helms was stalling the nomination, which cleared the Senate Foreign Relations Committee June 8.

Helms argued forcefully against Burt's nomination on grounds that the nominee had a record of violating the security of classified information by sharing it with newspaper reporters and by being careless with government documents. Helms added that he "would not vote to confirm my own brother" if he had such a record.

But Burt's many supporters in the Senate argued that the charges raised by Helms were either unsubstantiated or had been satisfactorily answered by Burt during his previous confirmation hearings before the Senate.

"None of the allegations that were made have ever risen to the level for us to even consider whether this man is a security risk," insisted Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del.

Before becoming ambassador to Germany in 1985, Burt served as director of the Bureau of Politico-Military Affairs at the State Department and as assistant secretary of state for European and Canadian affairs. Helms opposed him for those positions as well.

Truckers Back Tests For Drugs

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A national trucking industry group says it wants to help develop a random drug testing program that will cover the nation's 5 million truck drivers.

The American Trucking Associations' executive committee voted Wednesday to support random testing even though some of its members have reservations about the federal program that takes effect at the end of the year.

Associations president Thomas J. Donohue said truck operators would continue to work for improvements in the random testing rules drawn up by the Transportation Department while supporting random testing as a sound idea.

"We have always believed that the public has a right to expect that the driver of an 80,000-pound truck is drug free," Donohue told a news conference.

The organization, which represents scores of trucking organizations across the country, previously supported random roadside drug testing demonstration projects set up by the government in four states but had not endorsed the federal random drug testing program announced last November.

The federal program would require random checks of 4 million transportation workers, including airline workers, railroaders and interstate truckers.

Donohue said the new position accepts industry-wide random drug testing as long as it applies to all truckers. He said it should include large trucking companies as well as small operators, self-employed truckers and for-hire operators and should cover both intrastate and interstate trucking.

Random testing faces opposition from labor groups, and several court challenges are pending. A federal judge in San Francisco last December blocked the proposed random testing program for truckers after a suit by truck drivers.

The Supreme Court has yet to rule on random testing, although it has rejected some challenges to other mandatory drug testing.

Donohue said his group did plan to oppose the idea that truck operators should have to check out laboratories that analyze the tests. That, he said, is a government responsibility.

Donohue also said the industry should not be required to pay for rehabilitation of all employees who test positive.

"We are thoughtful about our employees," he said, "but we cannot be saddled with mandatory rehabilitation programs that would cost tens of billions of dollars a year."

Entertainer Denies Assault Accusation

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Joey Heatherton rose in the witness box, hands on her hips, and affected a snide New York accent as she acted out a brouhaha with a passport clerk who claims the singer-actress slapped her around.

Ms. Heatherton, testifying Wednesday, heatedly denied hitting Mary Polik and said if she touched the clerk at all, it was to retrieve her papers after Ms. Polik "threw my pictures in my face and said, 'They're disgusting!'"

Ms. Polik, 27, is suing Ms. Heatherton for $6 million, claiming Ms. Heatherton attacked her in 1985 when she pointed out problems with the entertainer's passport-renewal application.

Ms. Heatherton, who appeared in a number of TV shows and movies in the 1960s and '70s and has had a nightclub act, wept as she described how guards dragged her away from the clerk.

"They pulled my knee out of its socket," Ms. Heatherton, 44, testified. "I said, 'Please stop it! I'm a dancer! My leg! It's my living!' I wanted to get out of there."

In her suit, Ms. Polik said that she told the singer-dancer-actress that she had the wrong type of photos and that the $35 fee had to be in exact change.

Ms. Polik said an enraged Ms. Heatherton slapped her, pulled out a fistful of hair and slammed her head against a plastic partition before security guards intervened. She said she was out of work for 14 months because of her injuries.

In 1986, Ms. Heatherton was acquitted of disorderly conduct and obstructing government administration.

Ms. Polik's lawyer, Marie Ng, used the word "battered" in one of her questions and the witness replied, "I never battered anybody in my life."

With that, Ms. Ng referred to allegations that Ms. Heatherton had stabbed her former manager-boyfriend in 1985. A grand jury refused to indict her.

Ms. Heatherton started crying.

Her attorney, William Kunstler, objected, slamming his papers onto a table and shouting that Ms. Ng's questioning was "bad faith and dirty tactics."

The judge sustained Kunstler's objection but told him to tone down his language.

EPA Chief Says Too Much Expected

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The head of the Environmental Protection Agency said today that the American public has expected too much from the government toxic waste cleanup program, considering the money available and the size of the task.

"And EPA Administrator William Reilly said cleaning up the nation's thousands of toxic waste dumps will take tens of billions of dollars and go well into the next century.

Reilly outlined for a Senate Environment and Public Works subcommittee changes he plans for his agency's toxic cleanup program, including giving more emphasis on increased enforcement to force polluters — and not the government — to clean the waste dumps.

Reilly noted that Congress so far has provided nearly $10 billion for the Superfund cleanup program, but only a handful of the nearly 12,000 sites targeted have actually been cleaned. The total cost could exceed $60 billion, according to EPA estimates.

"Even if more funds were available... EPA lacks sufficient expert staff and the nation doesn't have enough qualified engineers, to take on a full-scale effort at all sites simultaneously," Reilly said in written testimony to the Superfund, Ocean and Water Protection subcommittee.

"There's no magic wand that I can wave to make this problem go away."

BROILERS: The North Carolina job deck quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 67 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. Too few percent of the loads offered have been confirmed to provide a weighted average. The market is about steady and the live supply is adequate for a moderate to mostly good demand. Average weights mostly desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 2,218,000, compared to 2,175,000 last Thursday.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn 4 cents higher at mostly 2.75-2.87 in East and mostly 2.88-2.97 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans 17 cents higher at mostly 6.95-7.28 in East and mostly 6.95 in the Piedmont; wheat mostly 3.48-3.59; new crop corn 2.26-2.60. P.I.K. certificates were steady and ranged from 97 to 99 1/2 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices headed lower in early trading today. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 8.02 to 2,495.34 by 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Declining issues outpaced advances by about a 5-to-3 margin, with 565 down, 336 up and 516 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 26.31 million shares after the first 30 minutes of trading.

The NYSE composite index of all its listed common stocks slid 0.46 to 180.37.

In the early going, Monsanto gained 5 to 109 after a delayed opening.

Sounds

said in his introduction, "and now we're seeing the results."

Due to the complexity and impact of the problems in the estuarine area the APES project includes an information manager to handle the accumulating research and someone to take the information to the public.

Dr. Gary Smith, an environmental scientist at East Carolina University who will serve in the public information role, is completing a video tape and slide show on APES and the sounds.

Smith said his video would focus on "not only the problems of the sounds, but also the beauty of the sounds."

Smith said he expected to finish his project later this summer.

Holman also warned during the presentation that solutions to the problems were complex and would require a number of years to affect the area. "They all take time, and it doesn't happen overnight."

The APES program includes more than 30 research studies in Virginia and North Carolina in just the last two years of the project. The final recommendations will include information from each of the projects.

The conservation plan will include recommended controls on water and land quality which will affect nearly every aspect of life in the estuarine area from farming to tourism to industrial and municipal operations.

Researchers and scientists from the North Carolina governments and state universities are now studying the impact of natural changes, pollutants and encroaching human activities on wildlife areas and the waters of the estuarine area.

The APES project will concentrate on six major areas of study: critical resources areas, water quality, human environment, fisheries, public participation and information management.

The project will require nearly $10 million dollars of federal and state funding over the course of the study. The Environmental Protection Agency provides a major portion of the funding.

Court

the move threatened to undermine the faith minorities have placed in the high court.

The 1976 decision, called Runyon vs. McCrary, held that racially segregated private schools which refused to admit blacks violate the Civil Rights Act of 1866.

That law was intended to ensure recently freed slaves all the rights of citizenship.

The 1976 ruling allows civil rights groups to use the 1866 law as a weapon to attack private discrimination in all forms.

For example, no other federal law bars racially segregated private schools. Also, the law provides for heavy punitive damages against those found to have practiced discrimination.

That is of particular importance in job bias cases which account for some three-fourths of the suits filed under the 1866 law. Congress in 1964 outlawed on-the-job discrimination, but did not provide for such heavy penalties.

The 1866 law also is a key recourse for those challenging bias in the sale of private homes.

The attorneys general of nearly every state, a majority of U.S. senators, more than 100 House members and more than 100 civil rights and public interest groups urged the court not to tamper with its 1976 ruling.

The North Carolina case stemmed from an appeal by Brenda Paterson, a black woman who was a teller at McLean Credit Union. She sued under the 1866 law, seeking actual and punitive damages for alleged harassment.

The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in 1986 upheld a ruling by a federal judge in Winston-Salem, N.C., throwing out her suit.

The Supreme Court today agreed with the appeals court and refused to revive Ms. Paterson's suit.

The case is Paterson vs. McLean Credit Union, 87-107.

County Tax
 CHERRYVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Gaston County may become the first county in North Carolina to have an income tax.

Commissioner George Bradley on Wednesday used a budget workshop to introduce the idea. His proposal came as the county board looked for ways to trim the proposed $77 million budget which calls for a tax rate of 86 cents per $100 assessed value.

Since the new budget was introduced, Bradley said there has been an outcry by the public to find ways to lower the tax rate, and even abolish the property tax.

Experts Say Cancer Threat Exaggerated

"If you got scientists together in a room and asked them what the real risk was ... it would probably be 1 in 100,000, not near this kind of risk (as the EPA study said)," said Dr. Michael Camrin, professor at the Center of Environmental Toxicology at Michigan State University and a specialist in risk assessment.

"This (EPA study), I think, would be an extreme," he said.

Dr. David Kaufman, a member of the Lineberger Cancer Institute at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, said other things in life represent a greater risk than what was stated in the EPA study.

"What are the odds of someone dying in a car crash going to work in the morning? It's got to be higher (than 1 in 1,000 over 70 years)," he said.

Kaufman said one-third of all cancer cases are related to cigarette smoking, which he said represents a much greater cancer risk than the reports of methylene chloride. However, he said people have a greater tolerance for health risks created by their own lifestyle than risks created by others.

Burroughs Wellcome officials responded Friday by denying the accuracy of the risk projections and claiming the methylene chloride levels at its Greenville plant are safe.

Company officials issued a release stating that health agents tested the Greenville facility for methylene chloride emissions in 1987 and 1988 and found no amount of the toxin at the plant's fence line.

Also, a company vice president said in a statement that the EPA statistics were intended to be used to compare the danger of toxins emitted by various plants, not as a literal guide to the real risk of cancer. The data was taken out of context in the report, the statement said.

Burroughs Wellcome also took out full-page ads in local newspapers explaining the company's position.

Chemaly, Camrin and Kaufman agreed that the numbers were taken out of context, and the data should not cause hysteria among residents.

"It's not the type of thing you'd want people to get hysterical about," said Kaufman. "It's difficult to put these (statistics) in

Moore Decided Now Was The Time

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Four years was just too long for Timmy Moore to put off his dream of playing professional baseball. "It was the quickest way because I had the chance right now, (to) go out there instead of waiting four years," Moore said Wednesday at a press conference at The Final Score restaurant to announce he had signed a contract with the Minnesota Twins. "I'm going after my chance right now."

Moore, who was selected in the 13th round of the Major League Baseball Amateur Draft last week, signed a contract with Minnesota Wednesday morning. He reports to rookie league Sunday in Sarasota, Fla.

Neither Moore nor Twins' scout Steve Williams would reveal terms of the contract.

"I'm not able to discuss that. I just know I had a pretty good offer that satisfied me and my mom. We agreed to it," Moore said.

Moore did reveal that there was an education clause in his contract.

"After I'm finished playing, or while I'm still playing in the off-season, I can go to school and it will be paid for," Moore said. "It's my decision whenever to go. My mom wanted it in there bad, or she wouldn't let me sign. I had to make a promise."

Moore, an All-State football performer, signed a scholarship with East Carolina in February with the intention of also playing baseball for the Pirates.

In football, Moore (5-9, 220) was a two-year starter at tailback. He ran for just over 1,000 yards as a junior and 1,240 as a senior. During each of those two years, he was the Big East 4-A Conference Player of the Year. During that time, Rose twice recorded undefeated regular seasons.

In baseball, Moore played center field for teams that recorded consecutive undefeated regular seasons during his junior and senior years.

He hit .422 as a junior as the team advanced to the state 4-A championship before falling to Charlotte Harding.

This past year, Moore hit .440 with five home runs and 21 RBI as Rose advanced to the Eastern 4-A Semifinals.

Moore did meet twice with ECU football coach Bill Lewis before making a final decision about his future.

"We sat down and talked," he said. "He didn't want me to play baseball. He wanted me to play (football) at ECU."

Moore and his mother, Barbara, met with Williams June 8 to discuss the Twins' offer, and weighed his options over the weekend before deciding to sign a contract.

"(We) sat down and talked and debated it over a long time," Moore said. "The final outcome was me playing professional baseball."

Williams said only time will tell where Moore will go after Sarasota.

"That's a decision I can't make, and that's a decision our farm director and our player personnel (director) will make when the time is right for him to do it," he said. "We are not going to put him into a position where he is going to be uncomfortable."

"We don't want to put him in a

Faldo Is Living Down Old Nickname

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — Since losing the U.S. Open in a playoff last year to Curtis Strange, Nick Faldo is a new man without the old nickname.

With the Masters title already in his bag this year, he no longer can be called "El Foldo," and he is one of the favorites going into today's opening round of the 1989 United States Open.

"I'm ready now," Faldo said after Wednesday's rain-soaked practice round. "Let's get started."

Many consider Faldo the man to beat at Oak Hill Country Club, a par-70 layout that measures 6,902 yards and will play even longer because of the heavy rains that have fallen this week. In fact, it has rained so much, today's first round was in danger of being postponed, in which case the U.S. Golf Association has decided to play 36 holes on Sunday.

"The course is very close to being unplayable," said Spain's Seve Ballesteros, the No. 1 player in the world right now. "If they get a little more rain, it will be."

Faldo, of England, leads a strong foreign contingent into the 89th Open that also includes Ballesteros and Greg Norman of Australia, a very long hitter who could tame Oak Hill.

Still, only one foreigner has won the U.S. Open in this decade — Australian David Graham in 1981.

"We cannot win all the majors, sorry," Ballesteros said.

Faldo, who won the 1987 British Open, blew his chance to win last year's U.S. Open in 72 holes when he bogeyed the 17th, and he shot 75 in an 18-hole playoff the next day, losing to Strange by four strokes.

But Faldo won the Masters last April with a 5-under-par 283 total, including a 65 in the fourth round. In his last two tournaments, he has won the British PGA and the British Masters, shooting seven of his eight rounds in the 60s.

"My game's not bad right now," Faldo said. "I'm still working on a few little things. I'll get them sorted out and be eady tomorrow."

Among those things Faldo has sorted out is his putting, which may have cost him the last Open.

"I've gone to a shorter putter — 34 inches instead of 35," he said. "I've widened my stance, and I've worked on my alignment. I've also got better rhythm now. That's what I lost last year."

Oak Hill is a course that demands both length and accuracy off the tee. There are only two par-5s — the 570-yard fifth hole, and the monster 594-yard 13th, called the "Hill of Fame."

Deals May Be In Works

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — When Orlando makes the first pick in the NBA expansion draft tonight, the Magic could select something rather than someone — a No. 1 pick in the upcoming collegiate draft.

The Magic will select first tonight, with the league's other new entrant, the Minnesota Timberwolves, picking second. In the June 27 college draft, the Timberwolves will have the 10th pick with the Magic selecting next.

Orlando general manager Pat Williams said his team took the first pick in the expansion draft with an eye toward the possibility of a trade. He said he expects to hear from a number of clubs and likely would ask for a No. 1 draft choice in the college draft in exchange for not selecting certain players.

With the exception of Miami and Charlotte — two expansion clubs that joined the league last year — each of the established teams could protect only eight players. Teams can only lose one player to the new clubs, and unrestricted free agents are ineligible for the expansion draft.

The names of those made available to Orlando and Minnesota will not be made public for fear of offending those players, and the league has threatened stiff fines to prevent any leaks.

However, there has been speculation in the media that the list could include James Edwards, Michael Williams, Fennis Dembo and William Bedford of the champion Detroit Pistons, Ralph Sampson of the Golden State Warriors, Reggie Theus of the Atlanta Hawks, Dennis Johnson of the Boston Celtics, Sam Vincent of the Chicago Bulls, Kenny Walker of the New York Knicks and Terry Catledge of the Washington Bullets.

The Seattle SuperSonics are expected to leave two of three top reserves unprotected: Jerry Reynolds, Avery Johnson or Russ Schoene.

Last year, Charlotte relied heavily on veterans — such as forwards Kelly Tripucka and Kurt Rambis and guard Robert Reid — and won some games early. Miami struggled early with young players, losing its first 17 games.

Merry Mex Is Aging Gracefully

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — There are streaks of gray in the hair and a few extra pounds hanging over the belt, but Lee Trevino is the same breath of fresh air he was when he won his first golf tournament 21 years ago.

The self-described Merry Mex is one of the best arguments for the seniors golf tour. If it keeps this man talking, making people laugh and in the spotlight, that in itself makes it worthwhile.

Trevino, who was to tee off today in the 89th U.S. Open on the same course where he won his first major and first tournament in 1968, turns 50 in December. His sights are set on the Senior Tour.

Asked Wednesday how many regular tour events he would play in after he joined the Senior Tour, he smiled and formed a zero with his thumb and forefinger.

"I was born at night, but I wasn't born last night," he said, dragging one of his favorite lines out of mothballs.

"No sense in playing with the flat bellies when you can go play with the round bellies."

And he was off. A very funny, very sensitive man who can even joke about his charity work.

"I do about six charity events a year but hey, I get paid for some. I don't do it all for free," said the man who has won six major tournaments, the U.S. Open, the PGA and the British Open twice each.

It was here at Oak Hill in 1968 that Trevino went from a nobody to the Merry Mex. He won his first major tournament in a big way, holding off Jack Nicklaus to take the Open.

"Man, I was so nervous," he remembered. "I topped my tee shot off the first hole on Sunday. I think my greatest accomplishment that week was that I conquered La Margarita restaurant with the amount of booze I drank."

Trevino remembered that Open as a time when he could get lost in his anonymity.

"I would sit in a cart after playing for hours and no one would come up to me. No one would ask for my autograph. I just sat there drinking beer."

Pistons Return Home To Party

Detroit's Bad Boys Celebrate Their NBA Title Win

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

YPSILANTI, Mich. — The Detroit Pistons celebrated their first NBA championship in the rain on an airport runway, as about 2,000 frenzied fans welcomed them on their return to Michigan.

The love fest at Willow Run Airport on Wednesday followed Detroit's 105-97 victory Tuesday night over Los Angeles as the Pistons swept the Lakers in four games.

Some fans carried brooms to recognize the sweep. Others carried pennants and homemade banners. Still more wore black hats and shirts emblazoned with the "Bad Boys" nickname the Pistons adopted this season.

Standing in a humid drizzle, the crowd chanted, "Bad Boys! Bad Boys!" above the roar of Roundball One's engines. They shrieked with adulation as players and coaches emerged from the team's private jet.

"I don't know how I feel," said forward John Salley, the first player off the plane, who threw his arms up in triumph as the crowd roared. "It's hit us, but it hasn't

Carolina League Continues Boom

By Tom Foreman Jr.
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The first half of the Carolina League season is virtually over, but the league continues on a roll that is carrying over from last year.

Despite some early-season delays due to rains, league president John Hopkins says attendance is still on a pace to surpass last season's figures, when the teams could rely on the Durham Bulls and the popularity of the movie "Bull Durham."

"I'm quite encouraged that the attendance has been able to compare quite favorably with last year," Hopkins said in a recent interview. "People tend to forget that we had some cold and rainy weather last year."

On the positive side, there is always Durham. The franchise is still riding the wave of popularity based in part on last year's box office hit and because the team has pulled away from Kinston to win the first-half title.

"Durham drew very close to its capacity. They've had three separate occasions where they've had to stop selling tickets," Hopkins said.

Through Tuesday's games, the Bulls have drawn 113,238, an average of 3,775 per game. Last year, the team averaged 3,300 a night for a total of 103,401.

"I'm not sure what it is," Hopkins said when asked why the Bulls can still draw. "Durham was an excellent draw even before the movie. Certainly, the publicity didn't hurt. It's quality management."

Kinston isn't quite keeping pace with Durham, but there was a time when the franchise nearly went belly up.

"In 1986, we went a year without an affiliation. The team lost a lot of money, but obtained an affiliation and has been strong ever since," Hopkins said.

The Hagerstown franchise has been moved to Frederick, Md., and Hopkins sees strength in that town for now and in the future.

"We're going to open a fancy new stadium in Frederick," he said. "That should enable that club to draw even better."

On the down side, there is Peninsula. The Pilots are 25 games behind the Bulls and 26 games under .500. What's worse, Peninsula is without a major league affiliation, which is just another chapter in its checkered history.

"They're definitely going to lose in the six-figure range, but that shouldn't have been totally unexpected. They knew they were unaffiliated and they aren't a flashy, high-profile franchise," he said.

of experience and proven ability in the NBA and integrating some young players in that mix," Williams said. "We're not going one way or the other — the Miami way or the Charlotte way ..."

"We like the expansion list. We think there are some veterans we can build with. Not superstars, not franchise-turners. But there are some ingredients we think we can piece together and build a nice expansion team."

Billy McKinney, director of player personnel for Minnesota, said the Timberwolves would lean toward youth in the draft.

"We want to find some guys who will help us five, six years down the road," he said.

Orlando and Minnesota paid $32.5 million each for their expansion franchise.

Ben Johnson

Johnson's World Record May Go After Admission He Used Steroids Prior To Setting 100-M Mark

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — Emphatically, U.S. track and field athletes are in agreement that drug user Ben Johnson should be stripped of his world record in the 100-meter dash and the mark given to Carl Lewis.

"It should go," hurdler Cletus Clark said Wednesday of Johnson's 9.83-second clocking during the 1987 World Outdoor Track and Field Championships at Rome. "He admitted he took drugs before the World Championships and the Olympic Games."

Johnson's time of 9.79 in finishing first last year at Seoul definitely is out as a possible world record. That was taken care of at the Games, where Johnson tested positive for performance-enhancing drugs.

His gold medal also was taken away and he was suspended from competition for two years.

The world record at the World Championships, however, still stands even though Johnson admitted this week before a Canadian inquiry on drugs and track and field that his seven-year involvement with steroids included injections before that meet.

The reason being that his announced test results after the championships were not positive.

The International Amateur Athletic Federation, the world governing body for track and field, however, said in the light of Johnson's testimony that it was conducting an investigation into the matter.

If Johnson's record is nullified, then Lewis, who finished second to the Canadian in the Olympics in 9.92, would get the record.

"I feel we will do our best to advocate that our athlete, Carl Lewis, gets the world record," Frank Greenberg, president of The Athletics Congress, the national governing body for track and field, said.

Al Joyner, the 1984 Olympic gold medalist in the men's triple jump, agreed that Johnson should be stripped of the record and Lewis made the record-holder.

"All his records should be taken away because he admitted it," Joyner said of Johnson's drug admissions.

"... He killed a lot of fans ... a lot of young fans ... and he almost killed our sport ... he put a dark shadow over our sport ... because of who he was."

Joyner said Johnson was not the only guilty party in the drug misadventure. He said Johnson's coach, Charlie Francis, and his physician, Dr. Jamie Astaphan, were just as guilty.

But he fingered Johnson as the main culprit.

"He wanted to make the money," Joyner said. "He's a heck of an athlete, but that's not the way to do it. He paid a big price for his experience. Cheating is not the right way."

Johnson's tactics also disturbed Harvey Glance, a three-time Olympian and president of TAC's Athletes Advisory Committee.

"He was caught cheating," Glance said. "If he was caught, he should pay the price."

Frederick Calls End To Career

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — At age 37 and after 25 years of competition, a disappointed Jane Frederick says it's time to quit and watch the younger athletes compete in multi-events.

She left track and field Wednesday bloodied but unbowed.

Instead of chasing after her ninth heptathlon title in the Mobil Outdoor Track and Field Championships at the University of Houston's Robertson Stadium, the reluctant Frederick, shot with pain because of an inflamed left Achilles' tendon, sat and watched Jolanda Jones win the heptathlon and Dave Johnson win the decathlon.

It was a chance for Frederick to enjoy the competition from afar instead of battling younger athletes like Jones, who was born in 1965, the same year Frederick competed in her first multi-event competition.

"This is it," said Frederick, who had led the heptathlon by 162 points over Jones after Tuesday's four events in the seven-event, two-day competition.

It was not the way Frederick had intended to leave the sport in which she had enjoyed remarkable success for a quarter-century.

She wanted to win the national championship in her final meet.

"You don't know how much I hate giving this meet to anyone," she said. "This meet was mine."

Jones, the three-time NCAA champion from Houston, was a generous taker. She finished with 6,006 points, 16 ahead of runner-up Gea Johnson and 23 in front of third-place finisher Sharon Hanson.

Dave Johnson, the ninth-place finisher in last year's Olympics, wound up the 10-event, two-day decathlon with 8,549 points, beating runner-up Sheldon Blockburger by 301 points. Johnson's total was the best by an American in 13 years and trails only the U.S. record of 8,634 points set by Bruce Jenner in the 1976 Olympics.

The performances by Jones and Dave Johnson could only be admired and envied by Frederick, while she nursed her injured Achilles.

"I feel I have an Achilles full of fire," she said while sitting alone in the corner of the trainer's tent near the track as the competition was about to unfold, before moving into the stands for a better view.

"I don't want to deal with that kind of pain any longer. I don't need to prove that I can tough it out with bone-searing pain. I don't want to limp around."

"It's time to let somebody else deal with these issues. The issue was whether I want to compete all day today with pain."

Choosing not to play with wrenching pain, Frederick withdrew — for good.

She said Tuesday that this would be her final year of competition, but not her final meet. She said she might end her career in the U.S. Olympic Festival July 29-30 at Oklahoma City or the International Invitational Sept. 16-17 at Talence, France.

But Wednesday, she said, "I really never intend to compete in those meets. This was going to be it." She ends her career with eight national heptathlon titles, the first in 1973, the last in 1986; two Olympic berths, in 1972 and 1976; 10 No. 1 rankings among U.S. heptathletes, 1975-79 and 1981-85; one No. 1 world ranking, in 1985, and two national championships in the 100-meter high hurdles.

However, she failed to make the U.S. Olympic team in 1980 because of injuries, in 1984 because she no-heighted during the trials and in 1988 by one place when she finished fourth in the trials. Last year's trials came about a month after Frederick suffered a jammed knee and then a torn hamstring while hit us. We're champions now. We came in with the right attitude, stayed modest, stayed humble.

"We the Bad Boys."

Salley and other players walked by the cordoned-off crowd, exchanging handshakes, high-fives and hugs while signing autographs. Some backed away just to watch the exuberant fans.

"It's great. It's what we've been fighting for all year," said guard Joe Dumars, the unanimous most valuable player of the Finals.

"There's no feeling like this," center James Edwards said. "I've seen how my friends are after winning the world championship, and now we've got one."

"The feeling's so indescribable now," said rookie guard Michael Williams, standing alone and watching the throng. "I'm going to cherish this for a lifetime."

Coach Chuck Daly led the scramble back to Roundball One when fans broke through the cordon, swarmed past outnumbered Wayne County Sheriff's deputies and advanced toward the jet.

"I gotta run! There's a mob coming!" shouted center Bill Laimbeer, interrupting an interview and hustling back into the plane as mounted deputies cut off the crowd to protect the retreating players.

The aircraft's engines were restarted and the jet taxied several hundred feet away so the Pistons could get on a waiting bus.

Greg Zulewski attended the welcoming madness with his son and six neighbors' children. "How long did we wait for the Pistons to do something like this?" asked Zulewski, 41, of Wyandotte. "So we get a little wet. A towel will take care of that."

"Rain and all, it's worth it," Janice May of Detroit said from beneath an umbrella. "Like they say, 'NBA action — it's fantastic!' And the Pistons are fantastic."

Mike Thomas, 27, of Detroit had watched the Pistons clinching victory at The Palace of Auburn Hills, which showed the game on a giant TV screen.

"I was happy. I was geeked. I was also drunk," said Thomas, clad in all-black "Bad Boys" regalia and spinning a basketball.

The welcoming ceremony was only the first for the Pistons. A victory parade was scheduled for noon today in downtown Detroit, followed by a final ceremony scheduled for 4 p.m. at The Palace.

In Lansing, Gov. James Blanchard declared the week ending June 20 as "Detroit Pistons World Champions Week."

"Your courageous, sweeping victory has brought pride to your many fans in our state and throughout the nation. You are the kings of the NBA, and we salute you," the governor said in a telegram sent to Daly after the Pistons beat the Lakers on Tuesday.

"Detroiters are happy to salute these champions and add them to our ever-growing list of sports heroes," Mayor Coleman A. Young said in a statement issued after the Pistons' victory.

"Without a doubt, winning the NBA Championship is the proudest moment in the history of the Detroit Pistons," club owner William Davidson said.

Wayne County Tops Pitt Legion, 8-4

GOLDSBORO — Wayne County pushed over six first inning runs and went on to record an 8-4 victory over Pitt County in an American Legion baseball game Wednesday night.

It was the second straight loss for Post 39, which fell to 5-4 with the defeat. Wayne used two walks, two errors and four hits to post the big inning which Pitt could never recover from. Dino Philyaw, stole second and moved to third on a passed ball. Jeff Smith walked and the two runners pulled a double steal to plate the first run. Smith moved to third on a wild pitch and scored on Bob Grant's grounder. David Whitfield kept it going with a single and Sean Harris reached on an error, scoring Whitfield, chasing starting pitcher William Gibbs. Rod Gorham was greeted by Graham Whitfield's single and Freddy Gooding got a hit to load the bases. Danny Franks singled, driving in both Whitfield and Gooding for the 6-0 lead.

The other two scored in the fourth, taking the lead to 8-0. Pitt got on the boards with two in the fifth. Ty Little walked and Chris Christopher singled. Travis Clemons reached on a fielder's choice and Jamie Brewington got a hit, driving in Little.

The other three scored in the eighth. John Bolen doubled and with two outs, Derrick Clark doubled him in. David Leisten also doubled, scoring Clark. Little followed with a single, scoring Leisten, but the rally ended there.

Each of the Whitfield picked up two hits to lead Wayne County. Leisten and Little each picked up two for Pitt. Pitt is at home to Snow Hill on Saturday at 8 p.m.

Athletes Take Home Much From Program

When 56 student athletes from eastern North Carolina high schools get together this summer at East Carolina University, they'll have more to take home than dirty sweat socks.

They will return to their hometowns armed with information and action plans against drug use in their respective high schools.

The student athletes will be in Greenville July 9-13 equipping themselves to be peer drug educators as participants in the 1989 Student Athletes Summer Institute. First implemented in 1986, the program is supported by funding from the N.C. State Department of Public Instruction and the Beaufort County Schools.

Evert Looking Forward To Wimbledon

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — Chris Evert, trying to overcome a case of burnout that prompted her to skip the French Open, departed Wednesday for England and said she's looking forward to Wimbledon.

"If you can't get psyched up for Wimbledon, you can't get psyched up for anything," Evert said. "I've practiced on grass the past two weeks, I'm having fun at practice and I hope I can enjoy myself and play good tennis."

Evert, 34, was undecided until early this month about whether to play at Wimbledon, which begins June 26. She abruptly withdrew from the French Open shortly before it started last month, saying her heart wasn't in tennis.

"It's not the physical burnout," Evert said. "A lot of athletes are still competitive at 38 or 40. But mentally it's being 100 percent intense every match. Nowadays that's not as easy for me."

"My life is fuller now. I'm glad it's that way. I'm preparing for life after tennis, and doing it in a gradual way."

Evert, winner of 18 Grand Slam singles titles, made her comments at a news conference to announce a celebrity tennis tournament that will bear her name and be held in Boca Raton Oct. 21-22.

situation where he is going to be overmatched. It is a big difference from high school baseball into the professional ranks. He has to adjust to being away from home," Williams added. "He has to go to a wooden bat instead of an aluminum bat, and going from not just playing two or three times a week to every day."

"It's going to take a little time. But he's young enough and he has the ability to do those things. It's just a matter of time for him and a matter of time for what our organization feels is right for him."

Williams said the Twins' organization prefers to draft and sign high school players.

"We would rather take a young man out of high school because he is not so much set in his ways," he said. "Plus a 17-18 year old is not to his maturity point in his knowledge of the game."

"He's going to get bigger and stronger, and he's going to know his stuff as a player. Those things are going to happen. There are exceptions (though) ... but optimally we would like a high school player."

Williams said he was tipped off to Moore by his brother Fred Williams, a Greenville resident, and that he began scouting him actively about two years ago.

Besides his athletic abilities, Williams said there was one other quality that attracted him to Moore.

"His love for the game," he said. "That was the main thing. There are

Barbour Wildcats.....1

BETHEL — The Bethel Phillies defeated the Bob Barbour Wildcats, 13-1, in the semifinals of the Southern Pitt Little League Tournament Wednesday night.

Earl Hines tossed the win for Bethel, going the distance.

Bethel was paced by Hines with three hits, including a triple, while Doug Warren and Montageous Dixon each had two. One of Dixon's was a home run.

No one for Barbour had more than one hit.

Little League

Wellcome ..... 7
Fickling Ins.....1

Jeremy Simo scattered four hits, walked two and struck out 12 as Wellcome took a 7-1 victory over Fickling Insurance in the Tar Heel Little League Wednesday.

Wellcome got all it needed in the first inning, scoring twice. Wellcome added three in the second and two more in the third.

The lone Fickling run scored in the fifth.

Simo and Chad Corey each had two hits to lead Wellcome while Mark Elwanger's hit drove in the only run for Fickling.

Bill Clark.....14
Aldridge & S'land.....3

Bill Clark Construction rolled to a 14-3 victory over Aldridge & Southerland Wednesday in the North State Little League.

Aldridge & Southerland pushed over three runs in the top of the first, but couldn't score again. Clark came back with four runs in the bottom of the frame to take the lead, then added two in the second, six in the third and two in the fifth.

Nabeel Barakat got the win for Clark, coming in of relief of Scott Selby after just a third of an inning. Each pitcher gave up one hit. Barakat walked four and struck out 11.

Rod Emery and Jason Bartlett each had three hits to lead Clark while Barakat and Selby each picked up two. No one had more than one for A&S.

Prep League

Computerland..... 24
Legal Eagles.....13

Computerland outslugged the Legal Eagles, 24-13, in a Greenville Prep League baseball game Wednesday night.

The Eagles scored first, getting six runs in the top of the first. Computerland scored a run in the second, but fell further behind as the Eagles added three in the top of the third for a 9-1 lead.

But Computerland came up with 13 big runs in the bottom of the third for a 14-9 edge. The Eagles closed to 14-11 with two more in the fourth, but Computerland added 10 more in the bottom of the frame for a 24-11 lead. The Eagles closed out the scoring with two more in the fifth.

Nicky Phillips led Computerland with three hits, including a homer, while Rob Burlington, Derrick Hopkins and Rob Barnes each had two. The Eagles were led by Neil Boardman, Dana Parker, Curtis McRae and Charles Colson, each with two. Parker had a double.

Crabby Sam's.....14
1st Citizens.....13

Crabby Sam's inched past First Citizens, 14-13, in the Greenville Prep League Wednesday night.

First Citizens scored first, pushing over three in the first. Crabby Sam's came back with four in the second, but the Bankers tied it up with one in their half of the inning. Sam's went back out with one in the third, then scored four in the fourth to take a 9-4 lead, never trailing again.

Sam's added four more in the fifth and one in the seventh. The Bankers rallied for one each in the fourth, fifth and sixth, and then came up with six in the seventh, but fell a run short.

Crabby Sam's was led by Chuck Coburn and Wilbert Levette, each with three hits. One of Levette's was a homer. Richard Ray led First Citizens with three hits.

Babe Ruth League

Pepsi-Cola..... 9
Peeler's..... 3

Jay Kuykendall allowed two hits in pitching Pepsi-Cola to a 9-3 victory over Peeler's in the Greenville Babe Ruth League Wednesday night.

Pepsi scored first, getting two in the opening inning. Peeler's rallied for one in the second, another in the third and one in the fourth, taking a 3-2 lead.

But Pepsi pushed over seven runs in the bottom of the fourth to take the win. Bryan Hill reached on an error and Mitchell Brown doubled him in. Jason Krause walked and Kuykendall singled in Brown. Aldric Sharpe walked to force in Krause and Marty Whichard reached on an error, allowing Kuykendall to score. Richard Brittle then doubled to drive in Sharpe and Whichard. Brittle was later thrown out advancing. Cole Yarbrough walked and came around when Hill reached on an error.

Kuykendall and Brittle each had two hits to lead Pepsi, while no one had more than one for Peeler's.

Wachovia Bank.....14
Home Builders.....11

Matt Aldridge and Montez Barrett each hit home runs to lead Wachovia Bank to a 14-11 victory over Home Builders in the Greenville Babe Ruth League Wednesday night.

Wachovia scored a run in the first, but Home Builders matched that in the second, then scored four times in the third to take the lead. Wachovia scored three, all on Barrett's homer, to close to 5-4, in the bottom of the third. The Builders got one in the fifth, but Wachovia rallied for three, taking a 7-6 edge. The Builders added two in the sixth, regaining the lead, 8-7.

But in the bottom of the sixth, Wachovia pushed over seven runs to move out by 14-8. Danny Batiste singled and Mark Taylor reached on an error, allowing Batiste to score. Mike Williams singled and a wild pitch scored Taylor. Aldridge then hit a two-run homer. Barrett doubled and Nathan Ellis walked. James Stanley doubled in Barrett and Batiste singled in both runners to complete the scoring.

The Builders rallied for three more but fell short.

Batiste led the Wachovia hitting with three, while Williams and Barrett each had two. Mike Beland led Home Builders with three hits, while Richie Grimsley added two.

Cubs Can't Rain On Gooden Parade

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Chicago Cubs can't seem to beat Dwight Gooden under normal conditions, so they hoped a little rain might help.

It didn't. Pitching on a damp New York evening with the wind-chill in the 50s, Gooden blanked the Cubs on four hits in six innings and the Mets won 2-0 Wednesday night in game called by rain in the middle of the seventh.

Gooden struck out five and walked two in winning for the 18th time in 21 lifetime decisions against Chicago. He did not pitch the seventh due to stiffness in his right shoulder.

"It's nothing," Gooden said. "I just thought it was the wind or something."

"I thought maybe we'd get a shot at them when Doc left the game," Chicago manager Don Zimmer said. Elsewhere, it was San Francisco 10, Atlanta 1; Pittsburgh 6, Philadelphia 4; St. Louis 10, Montreal 0; San Diego 4, Cincinnati 2, and Los Angeles 3, Houston 0.

Gooden, 8-2, complained of tightness early in the game and was given heat treatment. The second time he told trainer Steve Garland about the problem, Manager Davey Johnson took the pitcher out.

"I was tempted to send him back out there and see how it goes," Johnson said. "But all my logic tells me to be safe rather than sorry."

Rick Aguilera, who's allowed one earned run in his last 36 innings, worked the seventh inning to get his fifth save. The Cubs' comeback chances were dashed when rain began in the seventh, forcing the game to be called after a delay of 1 hour, 48 minutes.

"We got a chance," Zimmer said. "The ump's waited longer than they had to. I have no complaints. You can't beat the weather."

Giants 10, Braves 1

Don Robinson pitched a three-hitter for seven innings and helped himself with a run-scoring single as San Francisco won its fifth straight.

Robinson, 5-4, struck out five and walked one. Terry Mulholland pitched the eighth and Mike LaCoss finished for the Giants.

Derek Lilliquist, 4-4, took the loss for the Braves, who have dropped six in a row. Tracy Jones, Robby Thompson and Kirt Manwaring drove in two runs apiece for the Giants. Jones went 3-for-5, including a pair of doubles.

The Braves took a 1-0 lead when Jeff Treadway led off the game with his second home run. But the Giants scored four runs in the bottom of the inning off Lilliquist.

Pirates 6, Phillies 4

Andy Van Slyke drove in three runs with an RBI single in the bottom of the third inning and a two-run triple in a three-run seventh as Pittsburgh won for just the third time in 12 games.

John Smiley, 6-2, earned his first victory in three career decisions against Philadelphia despite allowing four runs and seven hits in seven innings.

Bill Landrum pitched two scoreless innings for his second save, the 10th by Pirate relievers in 20 opportunities. In his last nine appearances, Landrum is 2-0 with two saves and a 0.00 ERA in 15 innings.

Philadelphia reliever Don Carman dropped to 2-10.

Cardinals 10, Expos 0

Joe Magrane pitched a five-hitter for his second straight shutout and Milt Thompson went 4-for-5 with four runs scored as St. Louis snapped Montreal's four-game winning streak.

Magrane, 5-5, walked two, struck out one and was backed by three double plays as he extended his string of scoreless innings to 22. St. Louis had scored three or fewer runs in seven of Magrane's eight previous starts.

Pedro Guerrero hit three RBI singles as the Cardinals pounded four pitchers for 16 hits.

St. Louis broke the game open in the bottom of the third, sending 10 batters to the plate and chasing Kevin Gross, 6-5, who has lost 14 of 17 lifetime decisions against St. Louis.

Padres 4, Reds 2

Eric Show scattered 10 hits in 8 1/3 innings to become San Diego's all-time victory leader and Rob Nelson and Benito Santiago hit solo homers as the Padres snapped a seven-game losing streak.

Show, 7-6, earned his 93rd lifetime victory after failing three times, surpassing Randy Jones, who pitched for San Diego from 1973-80. Show walked three and struck out six.

Mark Davis got the last two outs for his 18th save, passing Cincinnati's John Franco for the major-league lead.

Santiago's fifth homer snapped a

2-2 tie in the bottom of the fourth. The Padres made it 4-2 in the fifth when Roberto Alomar singled, took third on Marvell Wynne's single and scored on a wild pitch by Jose Rijo, 6-3.

Dodgers 3, Astros 0

Orel Hershiser pitched a six-hitter and Kirk Gibson drove in three runs with a two-run homer and a bases-loaded groundout as Los Angeles won its fourth straight.

Hershiser, 8-5, struck out three and walked three for his 22nd career shutout and was backed by four double plays.

The Dodgers loaded the bases in the bottom of the fifth against Houston's Bob Knepper, 3-7, on a single by John Shelby, a walk to Dave Anderson and Hershiser's bunt single up the first-base line.

Gibson then worked the count to 3-2 before his grounder to first took a high hop on Glenn Davis, whose only play was to second for the force as Shelby scored.

Old Timers Ryan, Hough Pace Rangers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Don't try to tell the California Angels that life begins at 40.

The Angels helped Texas celebrate Old Timers' Night on Wednesday as Nolan Ryan and Charlie Hough combined to pitch the Rangers to a 5-1, 6-3 doubleheader sweep that stretched California's losing streak to seven games.

It was only the second time in the last 56 years that a pair of pitchers 40 years of age or older started a doubleheader for the same club. Ryan is 42 and Hough 41. The other time was in 1986 when Tommy John, 43, and Joe Niekro, 41, started for the New York Yankees.

Ryan allowed seven hits in 8 2/3 innings and became the sixth pitcher in major-league history to defeat all 26 teams.

"The only way to accomplish beating all 26 teams is to be in both leagues, with two clubs in each league," Ryan said. "It's no great accomplishment. It should happen if you hang around long enough and pitch well."

Hough blanked California on three hits over seven innings in the nightcap. He walked one and struck out four.

"My arm started getting a little sore and I didn't want to risk going on," said Hough, who recently got a cortisone shot. "I had a really good knuckler. It was moving, but I kept it over the plate."

Geno Petralli's three-run homer in the sixth inning off Kirk McCaskill highlighted Texas' victory in the second game before a sellout Arlington Stadium crowd of 40,159.

Doyle Alexander, Gaylord Perry, Don Sutton, Mike Torrez and Rick Wise are the other pitchers to defeat all 26 big-league teams. John, released by the Yankees last month, also has a victory over every other team but needed postseason play to do it.

STARTERS

Scott Sanderson of the Chicago Cubs has two complete games in his last three starts. Before beating St. Louis with a five-hitter on June 4, Sanderson hadn't pitched a complete game since April 23, 1986. ... Nolan Ryan, 42, and Charlie Hough, 41, Wednesday became the second pair of pitchers over 40 to start a doubleheader for the same club in the last 56 years. The other time was in 1986 when Tommy John, 43, and Joe Niekro, 41, started for the New York Yankees. Texas swept 5-1, 6-3.

SENT DOWN

Montreal sent Joe Hesketh to Class AAA Indianapolis in hopes he will regain his form. Hesketh, with a 9.78 ERA, is expected to spend about 10 days in the minors. ... Milt Thompson went 4-for-5 with two doubles and two singles and four runs scored in the St. Louis Cardinals victory over Montreal.

Seattle's Harold Reynolds has not started the last three games because of a jammed right ankle. His status is day-to-day.

Jim Presley of the Mariners left Tuesday's night's game with spasms in the lower back and was not in Wednesday night's starting lineup.

SCOUTING

Jeff Musselman, Syracuse, pitched 5 2/3 innings and gave up one run on seven hits. Musselman is on medical rehabilitation assignment by the Toronto Blue Jays after an alcohol problem.

SPEAKING

"I can't wait to call my family in Lancaster (Calif.). They'll all be there waiting to hear all about it. My mom, my wife — everybody." — Kansas City rookie Kevin Appier after his first major-league victory, 5-3 over Oakland Tuesday night.

Ryan, 8-3, walked two, struck out eight and lost his bid for his 56th career shutout with two out in the ninth. Jeff Russell retired Kent Anderson on a grounder for his 15th save.

Yankees 2, Orioles 1

Baltimore left fielder Phil Bradley lost pinch hitter Ken Phelps' bases-loaded fly ball in a ninth-inning fog, allowing both New York runs to score. Bob Milacki took a six-hit shutout into the ninth and Bradley made a diving catch of Mel Hall's leadoff liner but Jesse Barfield singled.

Kevin Hickey relieved and walked pinch hitter Steve Balboni. Mark Williamson took over and was greeted by Don Slaught's single that loaded the bases. Phelps batted for Alvaro Espinoza and a hit drove to left that would have been a game-tying sacrifice fly. But Bradley couldn't see the ball in a dense fog that settled over the field in the late innings and it landed on the warning track.

Winner Lee Guetterman pitched 2 2/3 scoreless innings. Chuck Cary, making his first major-league start after 68 relief appearances, blanked the Orioles on two hits through five innings.

Athletics 2, Royals 1

Dave Parker doubled home Tony Phillips with two out in the eighth inning. The victory prevented the Athletics from losing three games in a row for the first time since last August and ended the Royals' six-game winning streak.

Phillips singled off Charlie Leibrandt to start the eighth and continued to second when center fielder Jim Eisenreich bobbled the ball. Phillips took third on a fly ball by Luis Polonia but remained there as Mike Gallego grounded out and Dave Henderson walked. Parker then grounded his double over first base.

Dave Stewart, 11-2, allowed seven hits in 7 2/3 innings and tied San Francisco's Rick Reschuel for the major-league lead in victories.

White Sox 3, Indians 1

Jerry Reuss blanked Cleveland on three hits over seven innings and Daryl Boston hit a two-run triple as the White Sox won their first series since mid-May.

Reuss, who turns 40 next Monday, won his fourth straight decision and his third straight start after four relief appearances. Bobby Thigpen went the last two innings for his 12th save, yielding an unearned run in the ninth.

Loser Tom Candiotti allowed eight hits and three runs in 7 2/3 innings. In the Chicago second, Dan Pasqua led off with a triple and scored on Greg Walker's grounder. The White Sox scored their other runs in the fourth on two-out singles by Pasqua and Walker and a triple by Boston.

Tigers 7, Red Sox 3

Matt Nokes, 1-for-26 in his previous nine games, went 4-for-4 and Lou Whitaker hit his 15th home run and a double. Frank Tanana allowed two runs and eight hits in eight innings for his 194th career victory as Detroit snapped a three-game losing streak.

Nokes singled in the second inning, doubled in the fourth and scored on Pat Sheridan's single, lined an RBI single in the sixth and singled again in the eighth to set up a run-scoring single by Sheridan, who had three hits.

With one out in the fourth, Whitaker put Detroit ahead 1-0 against Mike Boddicker with his first homer in Boston since 1983.

Blue Jays 6, Brewers 1

Pat Borders and Bob Brenly had two hits and two RBIs each and Dave Stieb held Milwaukee to four hits in seven innings as Toronto won its fourth straight. Stieb, who pitched 16 scoreless innings in two starts against Milwaukee last year, had a shutout until Terry Francona hit his second home run of the season in the fifth inning.

Borders gave the Blue Jays a 2-0 lead in the first with a two-run single off loser Bill Krueger. Toronto made it 3-0 in the third when Manny Lee tripled and Brenly singled.

Twins 10, Mariners 8

Brian Harper's two-run single capped a three-run rally in the seventh inning and gave Minnesota its fourth straight triumph. The Twins, who trailed 6-2 after 4 1/2 innings and then blew a 7-6 lead when Jay Buhner hit a two-run homer off Juan Berenguer in the top of the seventh, tied the game 8-8 on Kirby Puckett's leadoff homer off Seattle reliever Tom Niedenfuer. It was Puckett's first home run since April 28.

Jim Dwyer singled and was sacrificed to second by Gary Gaetti. Randy Bush was intentionally walked and the runners advanced on an infield out before Harper singled to break the tie.

Buhner tied his career high by driving in five runs with three hits.

Gaetti's had a two-run homer in the fourth.

West German well-wishers hold photo of Gorbachev as the Soviet leader leaves Stuttgart

Gorbachev Says Berlin Wall Only One East-West Barrier

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

BONN, West Germany — Mikhail S. Gorbachev today said the Berlin Wall is "no great problem" in East-West relations, and he applauded NATO's new willingness to negotiate cuts in short-range missiles.

At a news conference as he wrapped up a four-day state visit, the Soviet leader praised the results of his talks with West German leaders as having opened a new path toward improved ties among European nations.

He hailed a declaration on European goals that he signed with Chancellor Helmut Kohl on Tuesday as the visit's most important accomplishment, a step toward "dissolving the confrontational nature of our relations." Gorbachev was asked if he considered the Berlin Wall, which divides the two Germans, an unacceptable symbol of a time of more troubled relations.

"I don't think the Berlin Wall is the sole barrier between East and West," Gorbachev told about 500 journalists at the summit press center. "We must improve many situations in Europe."

He observed that "nothing is eternal" and conditions on the continent may some day make all border obstructions obsolete. But he said of the Berlin Wall in conclusion: "I see this as no great problem."

At the news conference attended by his wife, Raisa, and senior officials of the Kremlin delegation, Gorbachev was asked if he could envision a day when Europe would recognize a single Germany.

"The situation in Europe today was determined by historical realities," Gorbachev responded. But he added that the continent is undergoing great political change and "time will tell."

"We can hope that we are on the right path" to better relations among European states, the Kremlin leader said.

In his 25-minute opening statement, Gorbachev welcomed the new NATO position on short-range missiles reached in Brussels last month. NATO agreed that a partial reduction of the missiles could be negotiated once an agreement to balance conventional forces begins being put into effect.

The Brussels document contains "quite a few positive and constructive elements," he said. But he added that the Soviets do not view it as a major breakthrough since it contains "a lot of elements of the old philosophy," such as reliance on nuclear deterrence.

Gorbachev spoke in Russian, and his remarks were translated simultaneously into English.

Asked by a Soviet journalist whether he was surprised by his enthusiastic reception by thousands of cheering West Germans, Gorbachev said he attributed the welcome in part to the hopes pinned on his policies.

"In the whole world, people want changes for the better," he said. "They are tired of the Cold War."

The Kremlin leader, who outscored President Bush and Kohl in West German opinion polls, has been warmly received since his arrival on Monday. Not since President John F. Kennedy's visit in 1961 have West Germans given a foreign statesman such a jubilant reception.

In reply to another question, the Soviet leader hedged on the government crackdown in China. He stressed that "all of us are very much concerned at what is happening" and expressed hope that "the people and the government of China can find a way out" of their difficulties.

A moment of humor occurred at the news conference when a Czechoslovak journalist questioning Gorbachev addressed him as "Mr. President."

"Since when have I become a Mister?" asked Gorbachev, alluding to the practice among officials of communist nations of addressing each other as "comrade."

The journalist replied that he had used the term because "we are in the Federal Republic of Germany," then repeated his question to "Mr. Comrade President" Gorbachev.

The Kremlin leader's news conference lasted barely an hour, including the opening statement.

Gorbachev was then given a formal farewell from Bonn by President Richard von Weizsaecker before he traveled to Dortmund in the industrial heartland of the Ruhr. He flies home from Duesseldorf later today.

British Soldier Killed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — A 21-year-old British soldier was shot to death today, apparently by a fellow soldier who was firing at a motorist who tried to run one of them down, police said.

Police earlier blamed an Irish Republican Army gunman firing from a passing car. But the Royal Ulster Constabulary said later that Adam Gilbert of the Royal Marines was probably shot accidentally by another soldier.

A spokesman said Gilbert was shot as a military patrol fired at a car that drove toward them and tried to knock one of them down.

The spokesman, speaking anonymously, said it "seems probable that the soldier was accidentally shot when the patrol opened fire from different points."

After the shooting, the car was found abandoned and gutted by fire at Divis Flats, a public housing complex and stronghold of IRA support.

Police said Gilbert was shot just before dawn on the edge of the mainly Roman Catholic New Lodge area of Belfast. He was taken to a hospital and died soon after.

Hours after the shooting, an off-duty soldier was injured when a bomb hidden under his car exploded in Coleraine, County Londonderry, police said.

The soldier, whose name has not been released, was taken to a hospital with serious leg injuries, police said. There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the attack.

The mainly Roman Catholic IRA is fighting to push the British out of Protestant-dominated Northern Ireland and join it with the Republic of Ireland.

Chinese Diplomat Granted Asylum

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SYDNEY, Australia — Australia granted asylum today to a Chinese diplomat, and said that because of the crackdown in China none of the 15,000 Chinese citizens in the country need fear deportation.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman said Vice Consul Dong Qi, in hiding in Sydney since Friday, was allowed permanent residence on humanitarian grounds.

Australian officials, meanwhile, refused to discuss reports that the embassy in Beijing granted refuge to prominent student leader Chai Ling.

Ms. Ling, a 22-year-old psychology student at Beijing Normal University, is No. 3 on the Beijing government's list of 21 most wanted leaders of the pro-democracy movement.

Prime Minister Bob Hawke, meeting with met foreign correspondents on Wednesday, refused to discuss whether the Australian embassy in Beijing was sheltering a Chinese student leader, who newspapers said was Ms. Ling.

A Foreign Ministry official today said reports that Ms. Ling was in refuge are "way off the mark."

Indian Troops Stay In Sri Lanka

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW DELHI, India — Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi says the 45,000 Indian troops in Sri Lanka will not withdraw immediately despite a Sri Lankan request to pull out by July 31, newspapers reported today.

Gandhi told reporters Wednesday that a withdrawal depended upon "full implementation of the July 1987 peace accord" that sought, with

Hawke said it served no purpose to "speculate or talk about it."

"There are obvious sensitivities involved," he added.

In a related development, the South China Morning Post in Hong Kong reported today that China was prepared to break relations with Australia and the United States for harboring Chinese activists at their embassies.

The U.S. Embassy in Beijing is giving refuge to dissident Fang Lizhi and his wife.

The newspaper said if Beijing breaks relations then Chinese authorities would be free to enter embassy compounds and seize any Chinese citizens being sheltered.

The paper did not identify its sources for the report. The Foreign Ministry in Canberra, the federal capital, said it had been swamped with media calls about the report, which it said "has no relation to reality."

Australian parliament today passed a motion condemning the military assault of unarmed protesters in Beijing on June 8-4 and the continued arrests of pro-democracy advocates. Hundreds of people have been killed in the unrest.

promises of limited autonomy, to end an insurgency by Sri Lanka's ethnic Tamil minority.

Last week, President Ranasinghe Premadasa of Sri Lanka sent an envoy to New Delhi to request an Indian withdrawal by the end of July.

India has said in official statements that Premadasa's deadline was impossible to meet, but Wednesday was the first time Gandhi made a categorical statement in public.

Rubber Bullet Strikes ABC Cameraman

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM — A cameraman for ABC television was hit in the head today with a rubber bullet fired by Israeli troops dispersing Palestinian demonstrators in the West Bank town of Ramallah, a network producer said.

A military official speaking on condition of anonymity said the TV crew violated an army order putting the area off limits to reporters and may be subject to arrest.

The cameraman, Shlomo Franco, was hospitalized with a rubber bullet injury, said Yael Bossem, a spokeswoman for Hadassah Mount Scopus Hospital in Jerusalem. She did not immediately know his condition.

The rubber bullet is embedded below the eye, said ABC producer Lynn Eshel.

ABC soundman Ronny Roumer drove Franco from Ramallah to the hospital after the shooting, Ms. Eshel said.

Franco, 42, an Israeli, has worked for ABC for more than 10 years.

A Palestinian news agency said Franco was filming a Palestinian demonstration in downtown Ramallah in which protesters threw stones at soldiers. Troops opened fire, wounding Franco and several Palestinians, the report said.

Belgian Hostage Freed After 13 Months' Captivity

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SIDON, Lebanon — A Belgian hostage, Dr. Jan Cools, was freed today after nearly 13 months in captivity and handed over to a leftist militia leader in this southern port city, an aide to the leader said.

The aide said Cools, 32, a physician with the Norwegian Aid Committee, was "turned over" to the leader of the Nasserite militia, Mustafa Saad, a Sunni Moslem. Saad's militia controls Sidon, 25 miles south of Beirut.

"He is wearing spectacles and has a bushy beard. He's having a meeting with Saad right now," said Saad's aide, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Saad's aide said Belgian Foreign Trade Minister Robert Urbain; his chief aide, Robert Willermain; and Belgian Charge d'Affaires were at Saad's residence when Cools arrived. Urbain and Willermain had driven from Damascus, Syria, earlier in the day, apparently after hearing about a statement from the kidnapers that Cools' release was imminent.

"All of them are meeting with Saad. They'll leave later, probably for Damascus," he said.

Cools was kidnapped on May 21, 1988, near the Palestinian refugee camp of Rashidiyeh, where he worked, on the outskirts of the southern port of Tyre.

A group calling itself Soldiers of Justice claimed responsibility.

The group, in a typewritten statement delivered to a Western news agency, said Wednesday that it would free Cools as a gesture of good will and cited an appeal from Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi.

It also said the decision resulted from negotiations undertaken by Fatah-Revolutionary Council, the radical Palestinian guerrilla faction headed by terrorist mastermind Abu Nidal.

The Soldiers of Justice in a previous statement had accused Cools of spying for Israel.

There has been widespread speculation in Lebanon that Cools was abducted by Abu Nidal's group, despite its public disclaimers. Many analysts believe Soldiers of Justice is one of many names used by the group.

Fourteen other foreigners, including nine Americans, are missing and believed held hostage in Lebanon.

Quayle Says Central American Leaders Unified In Opposition

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Vice President Dan Quayle says he accomplished his goal during his Central America trip of solidifying regional opposition to Panamanian ruler Manuel Antonio Noriega and the electoral plans of Nicaragua's leftist government.

"We are together and it's a very strong unity that we have," Quayle said Wednesday as he flew back to Washington from Costa Rica.

The vice president said he cemented a consensus among the presidents of Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala and Honduras that Noriega must step down from power in Panama and that the Sandinista government of Nicaragua must change its plans for next year's elections to ensure free and fair balloting.

The Central American presidents, excluding Nicaragua, and the United States are backing a mediating effort by the Organization of American States to remove Noriega. But if that fails, Quayle said there is a "clear understanding" that "other options" will be considered.

Quayle was not specific, but an official traveling with him who spoke on condition of anonymity said Quayle was told Costa Rica was considering breaking diplomatic relations with Panama and imposing trade sanctions if Noriega does not go.

"It was very important for them to see my deep convictions about Nicaragua and Panama," Quayle said of his one-on-one meetings with the four presidents. "I was very emphatic, very direct and I left no wiggle room about where the United States was coming from."

U.S. officials have learned that Cuba was willing to accept Noriega should he leave Panama, and that Spain, Venezuela and the Dominican Republic would also take him, said one official with the Quayle party.

One enticement for Noriega to step down might be the assurance of going to a country that has no extradition treaty with the United States, such as Cuba, so he could avoid having to face drug trafficking charges brought by a federal grand jury in Florida. President Bush has said he would not consider dropping the indictment.

Astronomers Say 9 'Brown Dwarf' Objects Discovered

By Malcolm Ritter
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Astronomers report they have found nine objects that may be "brown dwarfs," thought to be huge globs of gas that nobody has yet observed in a confirmed sighting.

Unlike the best previous candidates for being brown dwarfs, the new objects do not appear to be in orbit around stars. That bolsters the idea that brown dwarfs may help explain a key mystery of the cosmos, said William Forrest of the University of Rochester in New York.

Forrest spoke in a telephone interview before presenting the work today at a meeting of the American Astronomical Society in Ann Arbor, Mich.

He did the work with colleagues at his school, the University of Massachusetts at Amherst and the University of Hawaii's Institute for Astronomy in Honolulu.

According to theory, brown dwarfs exist as lumps of gas that failed to become stars because they did not ignite the internal nuclear reaction that makes stars shine. They could still shine for a while because of energy created as the gas collapses under its own gravity.

Scientists are interested in brown dwarfs partly because they may help explain what is called the missing mass problem. Studies show that outer space contains more matter than scientists have observed, and nobody knows what form this missing mass takes. Part of it may be brown dwarfs.

Astronomers have generally looked for brown dwarfs in orbit around stars. But the new-found objects may be free-floating instead, suggesting that brown dwarfs may be far more numerous than they could be as stellar orbiters, Forrest said.

So they may make up a significant part of the missing mass relatively close to the sun and perhaps beyond, he said.

If brown dwarfs exist, they would be hard to spot because they would be dim. Forrest and his colleagues looked toward an area where stars, and maybe brown dwarfs, are still forming, to catch brown dwarfs at their brightest.

They chose a region in the constellation Taurus, where young stars can be seen amid clouds of gas more than 450 light-years from Earth. A light-year is the distance light travels in a year, about 5.9 trillion miles.

Four of the new-found objects show the strongest evidence of being brown dwarfs, based on the combination of their brightnesses and estimated age, Forrest said. Their motion across the sky suggests they lie within the Taurus clouds, making them perhaps about 1 million years old, he said.

The argument for the other five objects is based on their reddish colors. This evidence is "good, but it isn't really overwhelming," Forrest said.

The new-found objects appear to contain five times to 15 times the mass of Jupiter, the largest planet. Jupiter is 318 times as massive as Earth.

The evidence that they are free-floating rather than orbiting around stars comes from analyzing their apparent distances from nearby stars, Forrest said. Essentially, they tend to be farther away from the stars than one would expect if they were in orbit, he said.

Jonathan Lunine, an expert in brown dwarf theory at the University of Arizona, said he was not familiar with details of Forrest's work but that the results seem "quite sensible."

The study also provides "fairly good evidence he's found some free-floaters," Lunine said.

Ship Runs Aground Off Virginia Coast

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PORTSMOUTH — A tanker carrying 200,000 gallons of oil ran aground off Virginia Beach, but Coast Guard officials said this morning there was no oil spill.

Fifth District Coast Guard spokesman Steve Blando said the tanker Omi Leader ran aground on a sandy shoal about six miles southeast of Cape Henry between 9 p.m. and 10 p.m. Wednesday. He said no injuries were reported.

The Coast Guard dispatched an inspection crew to the site shortly after the grounding and divers determined the hull of the ship was intact, Blando said.

"We are sending a helicopter to do a pollution overflight," he said.

"They will conduct an aerial observation for any signs of an oil sheen."

The Coast Guard said it would offload about 40,000 gallons of oil onto barges in an effort to lighten the vessel.

"The offloading is estimated to lift the vessel by three feet or more," Blando said. "Hopefully, it will set the vessel free off the bottom."

An oil containment boom will be placed around the tanker during the offloading as a precaution, the Coast Guard said.

Blando had no information about the owners of the vessel or its destination when it went aground. The Bill Black Agency is listed as operators of the ship, he said.

An investigation is under way to determine if navigational error caused the grounding.

U.S. Trade Deficit Falls Again In April

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The U.S. merchandise trade deficit dipped sharply to $8.26 billion in April as exports rose to a new high and imports declined, the government said today.

The Commerce Department said the second straight monthly improvement in the country's trade balance came from a 0.8 percent increase in exports and a 2.6 percent decline in imports.

The April deficit was 13.4 percent below a revised March imbalance of $9.54 billion. March's trade gap originally had been estimated at $8.86 billion.

April's trade gap was the lowest since last July, when the deficit hit $8.02 billion. The report was even better than the $8.5 billion gap that many analysts had been expecting for the month.

The trade deficit so far this year has been showing improvement over its 1988 track record. Analysts are divided, however, over how long the nation can expect the good news to continue as oil prices rise and the stronger value of the dollar makes American products more expensive on overseas markets.

For the first four months of 1989, the trade deficit ran at an annual rate of $108.9 billion, a marked improvement from last year's actual deficit of $119.76 billion.

The April improvement came even though the bill for foreign oil jumped 9.9 percent to $4.05 billion.

The average price of a barrel of oil shot up 11.6 percent to $17.83 in April, the fifth straight monthly increase. The volume of imported oil, meanwhile, rose to 7.57 million barrels a day from 7.45 million in March.

Overall, imports fell to a seasonally adjusted $38.84 billion. The lower figure included declines in sales of foreign cars, manufactured capital goods and agricultural products.

U.S. exports, meanwhile, hit a record $30.57 billion in April. Exports of industrial supplies, manufactured capital goods and consumer goods all increased.

Economist Joe Carson of Chemical Bank in New York said he expects continued progress on the trade front despite recent strengthening of the dollar against foreign currencies.

"I don't think the recent rise in the dollar will break the favorable trend that's been in place for the past two years," Carson said in advance of today's report. "The most recent trade figures have been very encouraging. We're still experiencing very strong export growth and import growth is slowing."

Nevertheless, many analysts remain concerned that the imbalance between imports and exports will begin growing again this year under the adverse influence of higher oil prices and slower demand for U.S. exports.

Economist Howard Roth of Security Pacific National Bank in Los Angeles said that as the strength of the dollar takes hold, it could negatively affect the trade deficit on both the import and export fronts as "Americans start buying more imports and foreigners find our goods more expensive."

Roth, anticipating today's favorable report, said April "may be the last hurrah. It might be getting worse from now on."

How They voted

HOUSE

FIGHTER DEAL WITH JAPAN — By a vote of 262 for and 155 against, the House adopted an amendment to limit the transfer of U.S. technology to Japan for its development of the FSX fighter plane.

This occurred as the House passed a symbolic resolution (S.J. Res 113) opposing the deal in which Japan will spend several billion dollars at home and in America on upgrading the General Dynamics F-16 into an FSX warplane for addition to its defense forces.

The amendment seeks to tighten an FSX agreement between the Bush Administration and Tokyo. It ensures that the agreement will prohibit the transfer of certain advanced engine technology to the Japanese and prevent Japan from providing any third country with certain FSX components.

Members voting yes wanted to restrict the administration's FSX warplane deal with the Japanese.

Voting no: Tim Valentine, D-2, Howard Coble, R-6, Alex McMillan, R-9, Cass Ballenger, R-10.

Not voting: none.

WATER RESEARCH BILL — By a vote of 336 for and 74 against, the House sent to the Senate a bill (HR 1101) to extend for five years, through fiscal 1994, a federal program to spur research by university scientists and others into the nation's water resources.

Members voting yes wanted to expand and extend the water research program.

Voting yes: Jones, Valentine, Lancaster, Price, Neal, Rose, Hefner, Clarke.

Voting no: Coble, McMillan, Ballenger.

Not voting: None.

FOLEY FOR SPEAKER — By a vote of 251 for and 164 against, members elected Thomas Foley, D-Wash., over Robert Michel, R-Ill., as the 49th speaker of the House of Representatives. All Democrats who voted supported Foley and all voted Republicans backed Michel. Foley succeeds Jim Wright, D-Tex., who resigned as speaker and will quit Congress in the face of charges by the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct that some of his business and political dealings violated House rules.

Members voting yes supported

Voting yes: Jones, Valentine, Lancaster, Price, Neal, Rose, Hefner, Clarke.

Voting no: Coble, McMillan, Ballenger.

SENATE

TO REVIEW MEDICARE TAX — By a vote of 49 for and 51 against, the Senate failed to table (kill) a "sense of the Senate" resolution concerning a surtax that some Medicare beneficiaries would pay to finance a new catastrophic care program.

With this vote the Senate opted for the milder of two proposals before it for defusing public outcry over the surtax. The non-binding resolution asks the Finance Committee to consider softening the new tax, which applies to Medicare beneficiaries who earn enough to pay federal income taxes. In 1989 the surtax amounts to $22.50 for every $150 in income taxes owed by a Medicare recipient and is capped at $800. Tabling the resolution would have cleared the way for an amendment postponing the supplemental tax for a year.

Most senators voting yes wanted to delay or kill the Medicare surtax, while most senators voting no wanted to preserve it in some form.

N.C. Sen. Terry Sanford, D, voted no. Sen. Jesse Helms, R, voted yes.

SOUTH AFRICA — By a vote of 69 for and 29 against, the Senate tabled (killed) an amendment relating to state and local procurement policies designed to punish South Africa for practicing apartheid.

Senators voting yes wanted to retain the bill's anti-apartheid provision.

Sanford voted yes. Helms voted no.

Aeroflot

NEW YORK (AP) — Urging Americans to "come experience glasnost," the Soviet national airline Aeroflot is launching its first major marketing campaign in the United States.

Aeroflot, the world's largest airline, said it has increased its flights from New York and Washington to Moscow from five a week to eight as of June 5. The Soviets said they also plan to build about 25 new hotels in the next two years to handle an increase in foreign tourists.

Some 125,000 Americans visited the Soviet Union last year, up from 110,000 in 1987 and 25,000 in 1980, when relations between the two countries hit a low point, according to Anatoly Matysits, U.S. general manager for Intourist, the Soviet tourism organization.

Aeroflot officials said they plan to start an advertising campaign in U.S. travel publications and national newspapers later this year.

001 Public Notices

farmers who request such ballots from Tobacco Associates prior to 5:00 p.m. July 5, 1989.

The closing date for the return of all ballots shall be 5:00 p.m. July 10, 1989. All ballots must be postmarked no later than July 5, 1989 and must be received by the Independent Tally Agent by noon July 13, 1989. All other ballots must be received by the Independent Tally Agent by 5:00 p.m. July 10, 1989. All return envelopes must be signed by the voter certifying that he or she is an eligible voter as defined in the rules and regulations and such definition shall appear on all ballots.

The Independent Tally Agent will begin counting the ballots at 12:00 noon July 13, 1989 and provide the results to the State Referendum Committee on or before July 14, 1989.

The eligibility of any farmer to vote may be challenged by any other eligible voter provided that such challenge shall be received by the Independent Tally Agent prior to the beginning of the counting of the ballots by the Independent Tally Agent and provided that the reason for the challenge be stated in writing to the Independent Tally Agent. The Independent Tally Agent will rule on all challenged ballots, provided, however, the State Referendum Committee need not rule on challenges if the number of challenges is so small that the outcome of the referendum could not be affected by such challenged ballots. The State Referendum Committee shall consist of four individuals as follows: the President, and Secretary of Tobacco Associates, Inc., and two eligible voters appointed by the Board of Directors of Tobacco Associates, Inc.

The Independent Tally Agent shall be Coopers and Lybrand, C.P.A.'s, 2626 Glenwood Avenue, Suite 300, Raleigh, North Carolina 27608.

NOTICE OF TOBACCO ASSOCIATES, INC. REFERENDUM

TO: The farmers of North Carolina who are engaged in the production of flue-cured tobacco.

Notice is hereby given that Tobacco Associates, Inc. will hold the referendum on the question of whether or not they shall continue to conduct an assessment upon themselves for 1989, 1990 and 1991 in an amount as determined by the Board of Directors of Tobacco Associates, Inc. and not more than the amount permitted by Article 50C of Chapter 106 of the General Statutes of North Carolina, as printed on ballot at time of referendum, for the purpose of promoting the export and use of U.S. flue-cured tobacco.

Such referendum will be conducted by mail by printed ballots in accordance with the Rules and Regulations set forth herein in this notice.

All farmers of North Carolina engaged in the production of flue-cured tobacco, and who intend to do or be such in 1989, 1990, or 1991 shall be eligible to vote in the referendum. A person entitled to share in the crop of flue-cured tobacco, or the proceeds of such crop because of sharing in the risk of production shall be deemed to be engaged in the production of flue-cured tobacco.

Each eligible voter is entitled to only one vote regardless of the number of farms in which that farmer has an interest or the number of counties in which that farmer has engaged in the production of flue-cured tobacco. However, the following rules will apply:

1. The general partners of a farm partnership may vote, but the partnership may not vote. In the case of a corporation engaged in the production of flue-cured tobacco, each shall be entitled to one vote if otherwise eligible.

2. No one under the age of eighteen (18) years may vote.

3. Voting in the referendum shall be by mail by printed ballots. Ballots will be mailed by the Independent Tally Agent (I) no later than June 30, 1989 to all eligible farmers whose names and addresses are known to Tobacco Associates, Inc. (II) and no later than July 5, 1989 to all eligible

How Priscilla Rescued Elvis' Dwindling Estate

By Robert Hilburn
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Three days after her former father-in-law, Vernon Presley, died in June 1979, Priscilla Beaulieu Presley sat in a downtown Memphis office and tried to comprehend the sobering news she had just heard: Without drastic action, everything that Elvis Presley had left their daughter, Lisa Marie, could be lost. Even his beloved home, Graceland.

Joseph A. Hanks, the Presley family accountant since 1969, is a conservative, soft-spoken man not given to dramatics. But the facts he had just outlined for Priscilla spoke for themselves: Income was dropping while expenses were rising, and at some point the lines would cross.

Priscilla had never gotten involved with budgets during her six-year marriage to Elvis, but she knew that the only thing Elvis ever did with money was spend it. He didn't just buy things for himself. He also loved giving friends — and even strangers — Cadillacs and other things he knew they couldn't afford. If his father or Joseph Hanks complained that money was running low, Elvis just did what he had done since 1956, the year "Heartbreak Hotel" kicked off the most successful career in the history of recorded music. He made more money.

He would call his flamboyant manager, Col. Tom Parker, and ask Parker to book another tour (Presley's average concert gross in the mid-1970s was $130,000 a night) or schedule another recording session (each new album would mean at least $250,000 in royalties) or line up another film (usual fee per picture: $1 million).

But after Elvis died on Aug. 16, 1977, there were no more concerts, films or records. There was an estate valued at $4.9 million, and there were mounting bills. The cost of maintaining Graceland was about $480,000 a year — most of it going to taxes, insurance and 24-hour security for Elvis' grave site. The estate was generating an annual income of about $1 million in 1979, and, with no new albums or movies to release, that figure was expected to drop below $500,000. What's more, royalties from the vast majority of Presley's recordings were going not to his estate but to RCA, which had bought the rights to them in 1973.

In his will, Elvis had named Vernon executor of the estate and Lisa Marie his sole heir. Two years later, Vernon's will passed the responsibility to Priscilla and Hanks, along with the National Bank of Commerce in Memphis. It would be their job to oversee the estate until Lisa Marie turned 25 on Feb. 1, 1993. As Priscilla flew back home to Los Angeles after the Memphis briefing, she was consumed by the unthinkable: By 1993, there might be nothing left to oversee.

"A million things flashed through my mind," Priscilla says now, remembering the weeks after the Memphis meeting. "I worried about my daughter's future and about Graceland and the people who had worked for us for 20 years. I couldn't comprehend them not having jobs or a place to stay. The question I kept asking myself over and over was, 'What are we ever going to do?'"

Ten years later, Priscilla, 44, is sitting in a hotel room in Los Angeles, the financial fears of 1979 long past. The Presley estate, under her guidance, is now worth more than $75 million and brings in an estimated $15 million a year in gross income. That's more than Elvis himself made in any one year of his life.

It is also the most income generated last year by a dead entertainer and, according to Forbes magazine, enough to put Elvis in the Top 10 moneymakers among pop music stars. Elvis Presley earned more in 1988, Forbes says, than Sting, Neil Diamond or any of the four members of the Irish rock band U2. More than two-thirds of the $15 million is generated at Graceland, with other revenue sources ranging from licensing of souvenirs to royalties from records, music publishing and videos.

The estate under Priscilla is doing so well that the Memphis probate court that oversees the executors has decided to leave it in place until Lisa Marie turns 30. Priscilla hasn't achieved this dramatic turnaround in the Presley finances single-handedly. Since that 1979 meeting, she and Hanks (with Bank of Commerce representative Fletcher Haaga) have hired a management team of Los Angeles businessmen and Memphis lawyers and bankers to guide the estate's operations. They are Jack Soden, executive director of Graceland; attorney C. Barry Ward; business manager Joseph F. Rascoff; and creative affairs director Jerry Schilling.

The management team talks regularly by telephone and gathers formally six to 10 times a year, usually in a Los Angeles hotel. On days when there is a lot of paper work, the committee reserves a conference room, but most of the meetings are held informally — in (See ELVIS, C-8)

Hottest Arrival In Pets ...Is Pigs

Affectionate Porkers Never Bark Or Bite

By David Larsen
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LOS ANGELES — They're affectionate and easily housebroken. They'll sleep on the bed with you like a cat or dog, and report at the sound of their names. They'll willingly walk on a leash, can use a swinging pet door and can be trained to do such things as ride skateboards. They are quiet and don't at all mind being kept in an apartment or condo.

You'll want one if only for the name possibilities: Pigmation, Einswine, Pigtail, Magnum P.I.G., Hamlet. And their appreciation of culture, such as "Swine Lake" and the works of Pigasso.

But enough of this hogwash, and on to the story behind the hottest newcomer to hit the pet scene in Southern California since the rock.

They are miniature pigs; small, porcine mammals that reportedly first made an appearance in China around 4000 B.C. According to Kayla Mull, a miniature pig owner in Norco, Calif., the breed was first written about by the Chinese Emperor Fo-Hi, who referred to their diminutiveness, swaybacks and pot bellies.

Mull, a 37-year-old microbiologist, said some accounts refer to the species as the pig raised by Neanderthal man. Although nobody has any idea how many breeders are selling the Southern California's newest novelty, both Mull and a Northern California breeder contacted by the Los Angeles Times say they have long waiting lists for piglets. "To keep up with the demand," Pescadero breeder Kiyoko Hancock said, "I'm working seven days a week, 14 hours a day."

From their natural origins, some of the pigs eventually wound up in a Swedish zoo, and, several decades ago, a few were exported to Canada for breeding.

"In 1981, a friend of mine who deals in exotic creatures mentioned miniature pigs to me," Mull recalled. "I didn't believe him, so I challenged him to get me one. I was living in a house where the yard had assorted sheep, geese, horses, dogs and a tortoise — and there was room for more.

"Two years after I had made the comment, my friend phoned me one night. He said he had been to Canada, and had three Chinese Potbellies en route in a truck for me."

When the microbiologist eventually found herself staring into three crates, it wasn't stoves that were inside.

"I named the first one Test Pattern, because I wasn't sure what to expect. I was amazed. They use a litter box, and they are as affectionate as other pets. My husband and I have had as many as seven in the water bed with us at one time.

"My other animals immediately took a liking to the little pigs. One of my dogs insists on a pig in his bed with him. My cat likes to chase their tails and — since a pig's body temperature is 2 degrees higher than a cat's — also likes to sleep on top of one, which is like resting on a clothes drier. As for the tortoise, a pig is the only visitor that won't cause him to pull his head in."

According to Mull, authorities on exotic animals guess there are no more than several hundred Chinese Potbelly pigs in the United States. After a year of living with her three Potbellies, Mull decided the pig population should be higher.

She began breeding them, and by the end of this year, expects to have placed 60 with eager human families through her Creatures of Comfort Co. The cost runs from $1,500 for a barrow (castrated male) to $10,000 for a pregnant sow. The gestation period is 110 days, and litters total from one to 10 critters.

Adult minis grow up to 18 inches, vary from 40 to 90 pounds, and have a life expectancy of as many as 20 years. Unlike livestock pigs, rather than being pink, they have a boarish black coat. Mull owns 13 at present.

"The castrated males have no smell," she said. "Unlike what may be assumed, all of them like to be clean. They will bathe regularly if clean water is available, or can be bathed. They are highly intelligent, and gentle.

"I know of one family whose baby learned to walk by holding on to a miniature pig. It actually knew enough to take a couple steps, then wait for the baby to re-balance."

Mull, for one, feels the bum raps against pigs are pork industry propaganda: "They'll sell more pork chops if they can portray pigs as unworthy of concern."

Her philosophy on the creatures: "You own a dog, a cat owns you, but you live with a pig."

In Pescadero, 40-year-old Kiyoko Hancock echoes that. About a year ago she learned of companion pigs: "I had been training show horses. A friend gave me a book on Chinese mammals. As soon as I saw a picture of one of the pigs, I knew I had to have one."

Hancock, also a former teacher, began with a pair, one of them a gilt (young female), obtained from a U.S. owner. Since then, she has imported others from Canada, and thus far has sold 40 offspring through her Kiyoko & Co.

She also runs a Pig Hotline. For $50 an hour, she dispenses advice on such matters as housebreaking, and teaching the pet to walk on a leash.

"Pigs never have fleas," Hancock enthused. "They make perfect pets for people with animal fur allergies. If you have a pool, they love to swim."

As for their dietary habits, she said they enjoy a slice or two of avocado, which also is good for their skin. Mull said their normal chow is special pellets marketed by Purina, but they will gladly accept popcorn, pizza and just about any table leftover. "One of mine has a taste for Perrier."

Technically, according to a spokesman for the City of Los Angeles Animal Regulation Department, keeping such an animal is allowed only in areas zoned for agriculture. "A pig is a pig is a pig," he said, presumably paraphrasing Gertrude Swine.

However, although the pet may grunt, he will rarely squeal.

'Star Trek' Books Fuel The Legend

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — "Star Trek" fan J.M. Dillard was temporarily laid off as an English teacher at American University in Washington, when she decided to write a novel about the Starship Enterprise and its crew.

"I'd seen some of the other books, and I was a big reader of science fiction," she said. "and I thought, 'Well, why not?' ... After I finished it I submitted it to the publisher and heard nothing for 13 months. I figured that was the end of it."

But, one day, Dillard got a telephone call from Pocket Books informing her that Mindshadow had been accepted.

Thus, Dillard became part of one of the most successful series in publishing history and another extension of the 1960s television series, which was reincarnated as "Star Trek: The Next Generation," soon to begin its third year as the most popular dramatic series in syndication.

To date, Pocket Books has published more than 60 "Star Trek" novels, including four hardbacks, and sold an estimated 18 million books, according to "Star Trek" editor David Stern.

Every one of the novels published since May 1986 has been on the New York Times best seller list.

The books have become as successful as virtually everything else in the "Star Trek" venture. The fifth motion picture, "Star Trek: The Final Frontier," has just opened, with a box office gross of $17.4 million in the first weekend.

Paramount Pictures makes the movies, Paramount Television makes "Star Trek: The Next Generation," and Pocket Books is owned by Paramount Communications Co.

"The current books began when 'Star Trek' creator Gene Roddenberry did the novelization for the first movie, Star Trek: The Motion Picture in 1979," said Stern. "Prior to that, Bantam Books had published about a dozen 'Star Trek' novels."

The novelization of the latest movie has just reached the book stores. It's written by Dillard. She's also the author of the latest hard-cover novel, The Lost Years, to be published in the fall.

"It's a historical piece," said Dillard in a telephone interview from her home in Florida. "It fills in the gap between the end of the Enterprise's first five-year mission, marked by the cancellation of the 1960s series, and the first movie."

"It talks about the Enterprise coming home, how Capt. Kirk lost command of the Enterprise when he was talked into becoming an admiral and explains why Spock returned to his home planet of Vulcan."

Connecticut Nightclub Has Everything But Booze

By Steve Feica
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WATERBURY, Conn. — The dance music pulses through the art deco nightclub with its mirrored walls as bartenders hurriedly stir, shake and blend exotic drinks.

The adult crowd at Club Soda is partying this Friday night, but they are all sober. There is no alcohol in the drinks.

"It's a major nightclub. It has everything but the booze," says Joseph W. Perugini, one of the managers of Club Soda, a Friday night non-alcoholic alternative for adults who want to party without getting drunk.

"There are people out there that just can't drink and they have no where to go."

There are many nightclubs offering dancing and a club ambience without alcohol for teen-agers, but a boozeless bar for adults is unusual, says Perugini's partner, Thomas Rowley.

"We could pack them in with kids, but at the same time, that's not what we were looking for," Rowley says.

Except for Friday nights, Club Soda is actually the Night Life VIP Lounge, a full-service bar. And the decision to ban booze each Friday night, typically a busy night for bars, was something personal for Perugini, a recovering alcoholic.

"I'm recovering and I've met through my past two years out there a different breed of people that enjoy life without the sauce," Perugini says.

"I'm just tired of reading, 'Just say no to drugs and say no to booze.' You've got to do something. Anybody can say that; it's time we show people how to live. I feel real good about it."

Perugini credits Night Life owners Pat Scarpa and Dave DeStazio, his employers for a number of years, with giving him the chance to try the no-booze bar.

It's an idea that Night Life beverage manager Lester J. Szmajljo endorses.

"You've got people that maybe shouldn't be drinking, that don't want to drink and are off the sauce, who want to come out and have that same atmosphere, a party night, and not get drunk," Szmajljo says.

Does the lack of alcohol mean a dull crowd? Not according to Club Soda's two managers.

"It's like 'Is there life without drinking?' Yeah, there sure is," Rowley says. "The important thing is people who don't drink are no different from people that do, I mean in terms of dullness. Because you have some people who don't drink who are dull and you have some people who do drink who are dull."

The Club Soda drink menu runs the gamut from the ever-popular

Mothers Carve New Niches In Work World

By Eileen Heyes
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Gay Geiser-Sandoval thrived on her stimulating job as an attorney, but full-time work cut too deeply into her family time. She found a partner and they shared a job.

Pamela Penny, pregnant with her first child, quit her job as a social worker and looked for a way to fit work in around her family. She started her own business.

Wendy Malecki knew when she had her second child that she could not keep working full-time as a university staff photographer. She became a free-lancer.

Stephanie Smith was prepared to step off her law firm's partnership track to have more time for her children. The firm made her a part-time partner.

One dilemma, four solutions. These women are typical of a growing number of professional women who are carving out career niches to complement rather than conflict with their family priorities. They evince a change in career thinking that experts say could well become the work-force issue of the '90s.

Last year, women made up about 45 percent of the "managerial and professional" work force, yet accounted for 71 percent of the part-time jobs in that sector, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

But such statistics only tell part of the story. Anecdotal evidence suggests that many professional women individually negotiated their part-time arrangements with their employers, without benefit of formal company sanction, says Kathleen Christensen, an authority on the changing nature of the workplace.

Christensen, a professor of environmental psychology at The Graduate School, City University of New York, designed and directed a soon-to-be-released national study on flexible work alternatives for the Conference Board, a New York management research company, and New Ways to Work, a nonprofit organization in San Francisco that studies the work force.

In the survey, large companies were asked what flexible work arrangements they offered. Christensen found that part-time work is being made available mostly to workers in clerical and administrative support jobs, "despite the interest of professionals."

Of the professional women who have hammered out part-time work schedules, Christensen says: "These are women with a proven track record, who are valuable to their companies."

Stephanie Smith is one of them. An attorney and the wife of an attorney, Smith was an associate on the partnership track at Jackson, Tufts, Cole and Black in San Francisco. By the time her first son was 18 months old, it had become clear the couple's full-time jobs were sapping too much of their family time.

It was rush to the sitter in the morning, rush through the demanding workday, rush home in time to pick up the baby.

"The pressures of meeting client demands and getting other things done in our lives meant life was exceedingly hectic," says Smith, 36. She and husband Ted Radosevich proposed to their companies that each would work 80 percent time — a four-day week, with different days off — as an experiment for six months, and both companies agreed. At the end of that time, Smith and Radosevich went back full-time, but she remained ambivalent.

"I view myself as hard driven, I'm competitive, I want to do the best work," she says. "Back in the days when I was in college, no one told you you couldn't do that and have a family too."

Eventually, with plans to have a second child, she told her company she would be leaving. What, two of the partners asked, would be her ideal job if she were to stay?

Three days a week, she replied, working with management and policy issues. As it happened, that meshed with the company's needs, and the company offered to create a part-time job for her, putting her in charge of hiring and training associates, traveling to recruit and working on management issues with the managing partner. She accepted.

"I guess they decided I was worth trying to retain," she says.

"It is working out beyond anyone's wildest expectations, largely due to the fact that Stephanie is truly an extraordinary individual," confirms John Siamas, a partner in the company who helped Smith develop her part-time arrangement. Several other attorneys have followed her lead and cut back their work hours to have more time to spend with their children, Siamas says.

As for Smith, while she was on maternity leave after the birth of her second son, the company made her a partner.

What is prompting companies to accommodate the newly voiced emphasis on family needs is the "change in labor-force demographics," says Barney Olmsted, founder of New Ways to Work. Olmsted has witnessed a growing recognition of workers' needs to balance work and family, a recognition that the two-income household is the norm and that most women need to help support their families.

Ultimately, she says, the bottom line is the bottom line.

Where in the past "cost" meant wages and benefits, companies are increasingly counting in dollars the costs of turnover, absenteeism, recruitment and down time when employees are absent or over-stressed by family and work concerns, she says.

"They are finding that voluntary part-time work can be an attractive option," and can help a company hold on to good employees and attract better applicants. Giving employees the option of voluntarily cutting back also can let a company expand and contract the number of paid hours to cope with business peaks and valleys without laying off valuable trained workers, she says.

Hewlett-Packard in Palo Alto, Calif., was among the first companies to do this, introducing in the mid-'70s "work sharing," a cutback in paid hours for an entire division during lean times. Hewlett-Packard was also a pioneer of "flexitime," and in January it set up a "flex force" that operates as an in-house temporary pool.

Two main obstacles, Christensen says, stand in the way of wide implementation of flexible work options: corporate culture and management philosophy, and some companies' requirements for a given head count.

"American managers don't know how to manage people being there part time, or being invisible in the office (if they work from home), or people sharing work," she says.

Gay Geiser-Sandoval anticipated this when she and a partner proposed sharing a job as a deputy district attorney in Orange County, Calif.

Now 37 and a mother of two, Geiser-Sandoval had tried staying home full time for a year after her first daughter was born and found it was not for her. But being at work full time did not work either. Though she tried to snatch bits of "quality time" with her child at the end of each day, the quality never turned out to be very good: By the time they saw each other, both were tired and crabby. Geiser-Sandoval wanted time for her family, but she knew she needed the challenge, the fulfillment of her job in the district attorney's office.

Fortunately for her, she was not alone.

Herpes Leaves Her Hopeless

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Dear Abby: I am a woman in my late 30s, recently divorced after a nine-year marriage. I have been told I am attractive, personable and marriageable. So what's my problem?

A year after my marriage, I learned that I had herpes! My world came tumbling down. I had been a faithful wife, and the only way I could have gotten herpes was from my husband. He finally admitted that he had had mild symptoms when he met me, but didn't think it was anything to be concerned about. It wasn't easy, but we were able to live with it.

After nine years of marriage, my husband told me he wanted to be "free," so we were divorced. As soon as our divorce was final, he remarried — so I suspect he had a lady waiting in the wings.

It has been two years, and I am having a hard time dealing with being single and having herpes. I hurt, knowing that no man will want to marry me knowing I have herpes. I have avoided forming any serious relationships for this reason.

I feel totally alone, but I'm sure there are others in the same boat. Could some of your readers who have this problem share their solutions with me? Maybe it will give me some hope for my life, as I have no one to talk to. I have so much love to give the right person, but I am afraid. — Alone In Wichita, Kan.

Dear Alone: You may feel alone, but you are far from it. An estimated 30 million Americans have become infected with herpes — although less than half of them are aware of it.

The Herpes Resource Center has a network of approximately 90 local support groups around the country. They provide information and emotional support, and offer an opportunity to talk about your situation (or listen to others) in a confidential environment. Sharing experiences and obtaining a broader knowledge of how the virus affects its victims' lives is the main theme of these meetings. Being able to talk with other people will relieve much of the stress, embarrassment and confusion about life with herpes.

For a list of local support groups and a free pamphlet that answers basic questions about herpes, send a long, self-addressed, stamped (45 cents) envelope to: Herpes Resource Center, P.O. Box 13827-H, Research Triangle Park, N.C. 27709. The Herpes Resource Center is a program of the American Social Health Association (ASHA), a United Way agency.

Dear Abby: My husband and I have a beautiful 3-month-old baby girl who is the joy of our lives. All I took was a six-week maternity leave, then returned to work for financial reasons. I would rather have stayed home with my baby, but we couldn't afford that luxury.

I feel so guilty leaving my daughter every day — I try to spend as much time with her as I can after work to make up for it. This has created another problem: My husband is jealous of the baby. He resents my giving so much attention to the baby instead of him, and it's putting a strain on our marriage. Is there a solution to this problem? — Feeling Guilty

Dear Feeling Guilty: It is not a cop-out to suggest that you do your best to give "quality time" (a much overused term these days) to the two loves of your life.

And who said that baby care is the responsibility of the mother only? Don't be selfish. Give your husband a chance to care for his daughter, too, and he won't feel that he is competing for your time and attention.

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 6940, Los Angeles, CA. 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Manilow's Tour Attracts Praise From The Critics

By Mary Campbell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Barry Manilow, who has had a devoted following since he first warbled "Mandy" 15 years ago, has more fans than ever today.

And now he can also count music critics as fans, as he continues an extensive tour that began in November 1987 and will run through 1990.

"This is the first tour that the reviews have been consistently good," said Manilow, whose month-long engagement on Broadway at the Gershwin Theater has been extended. "Most of the time they've been fair to awful. It turned around all of a sudden. But it'll probably change back to them hating this new album. It's the kind they have always not liked."

The album, "Barry Manilow," returns to what he does best: big, romantic pop ballads.

"I've always been a misfit musically," the 43-year-old singer-songwriter said in an interview. "I come from the kind of music that happened before rock 'n' roll. I'm not that old, but I was not affected by the rock 'n' roll that most people were being affected by. I was affected by show tunes, jazz and songs written by Harold Arlen and Irving Berlin because my parents reacted to that."

"That type of person shouldn't draw big crowds and have hit records, and I did. The critics never were happy with that."

Manilow doesn't like what he hears played on the radio these days. "The songs are about having a great party ... I have to believe there is more to all this work I do than just convincing people to have a great party ... I have to believe there are people who want to be moved by emotions." His bundle of hits includes "I Write the Songs," "Tryin' to Get the Feeling Again," "This One's for You" and "I Can't Smile Without You." His new single is "Keep Each Other Warm." What he doesn't write for his albums, Arista Records president Clive Davis selects for him. He left Arista in 1985-86 for RCA and has since returned.

"When I was away from Arista, Clive continued to put songs away for me. He knew we'd get together again after I was sowing my wild notes," Manilow said.

When he returned to Arista, he and Davis agreed he'd do a swing album first, then the current pop one.

"I wasn't in favor of making a pop album," he said. "I couldn't hear a space for my kind of pop music on the radio. Clive says there's a lack of this kind of music on the radio and it has to come back. "If this pop record takes off, I'd be foolish not to follow that for awhile. I can't predict the future but maybe I'll do a pop album with a couple of jazz songs on it."

In 1984, Manilow cut "2:00 A.M. — Paradise Cafe" with some noted jazz musicians. He calls it the highlight of his career.

"I'm learning not to be attached to the results. The reason we do things is to create something beautiful that you're proud of. You hope people like it. Eight years ago, I would live for Wednesdays, when chart information comes out. Now, unless they call with the numbers, I forget about them."

Manilow's autobiography, "Sweet Life: Adventures on the Way to Paradise," was published in 1987. Other writers praised its style and tone, and Manilow says proudly that it wasn't ghost written.

In the book, he attacks nobody, is frank about personality failings, talks about being Bette Midler's musical director and about Linda Allen, the movie set decorator with whom he lives, and recounts finding out in 1981 that he only had $11,000 in the bank. Investment advisers had lost the money Manilow made in six years of superstardom. He didn't lose the homes he owned in Bel Air and Palm Springs, Calif.

"When I was told I didn't have any bread, I went to work and worked harder than I ever worked before," the singer said. "Luckily, I was able to pull it back together. I'm still working at it. You don't need to feel sorry for me but I'm not anywhere near where I should have been about 10 years ago."

"After having that kind of good fortune, to not have anything to show for it was a disgusting story. There weren't any criminals. It was bad management and bad advice. It'll never happen again. It's a good lesson for all of us: Take responsibility for your life."

His relations with Midler were never strained. "I wrote a song for her, 'Perfect Isn't Easy But It's Me,' which she sang as a pampered French poodle in 'Oliver and Company.' We were in the studio a couple of days together and had a good time."

The show he's doing on Broadway also is organized as autobiography. "We wanted to make it a theatrical production as opposed to a pop concert. Fictitious story lines all felt contrived; the only thing that felt honest was pulling pieces of my life out."

He hopes to write a Broadway musical and star in it, possibly about the life of Danny Kaye.

After he closes on Broadway and before the tour resumes in the fall, he plans to do nothing. "I don't know whether I'll be able to do that. I'm one of those over-achieving Jewish Brooklyn guys who can't rest until there's 15 projects going at once."

Brutality: 'You're Grounded'

In the annals of parent brutality (which include summer school attendance, forced feeding of fresh broccoli and speaking to their kids in public), nothing is considered more inhumane to teen-agers than taking away their cars.

American kids are born to drive. The umbilical cord that sustained life and is severed at birth is transferred to a drive shaft. The little fists are designed to clutch a steering wheel, and the pedal-size virgin feet may wander for a few years, but at age 16, will come home to a brake pedal like salmon returning to spawn.

On his 14th birthday, a teen-ager will start the countdown on his march to a driver's license. "Only 730 more days ... 17,520 hours ... 426 more days of conning Mom into driving me to school ... two more crummy vacations in the backseat, and then ... the car is mine. I'm history!"

From the parents' point of view, the moment the car keys are in the hands of a child, he experiences a physical change. He goes from a mild-mannered, awkward, insecure, innocent child to one of those guys who are always stealing someone's billfold in American Express commercials. He becomes sneaky, conniving and cocky. Parents feel vulnerable and used.

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

Throughout the years, parents searched for a weapon to fight this surge of unbridled independence. They finally found it. They learned that by saying just two little words, "You're grounded," they can strike fear and desperation into the hearts of their young.

It has taken the schools a while to discover it, but they have learned the same leverage. In West Virginia, in a stroke of genius, the legislature passed a new attendance law in schools that decrees when you drop out of school, you drop out of the driver's seat. Your driver's license is revoked, and you are not eligible to get it back until you are 18.

If kids thought the "no pass-no play" law (where they were suspended from sports until they performed academically) was a bummer, it's nothing compared with "You don't arrive, you don't drive." It got their attention. For the past decade, 5,000 students dropped out of West Virginia high schools each year. In the 1988-89 school year, with the no-show-no-go law, the number dropped to 3,400.

Actually, making a deal for wheels isn't all that bad. All kids have to do is to show up at school and sit there. If they should "just happen" to become intrigued with how to read a Spanish menu, view dynasty Chinese-style, operate the finest in computer technology, have an adventure in Spain with Ernest Hemingway, learn about fusion at room temperature, play a little football, a little tennis, engage in a little drama and music appreciation, the world wouldn't end.

You'd like to think American kids would someday consider education a privilege. Asian kids do. I wonder if parents had to take away their bicycle licenses to do it.

More Women Are Packing Pistols Nationwide

By John Barbour
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — Terry Weber, a soft-spoken sharpshooter in this Midwestern city, sometimes answers the door with a gun on her hip. On the firing range, she practices her marksmanship against real-life assailants with wax bullets.

In New York City, where a woman jogger was attacked and raped by a roving gang in Central Park, Thalia Adams, 32, practices regularly at a pistol range. She has twice been the victim of armed robbery since she moved to Manhattan from Palo Alto, Calif.

Marie Mann, an insurance executive in Cincinnati, has a .380-caliber Bersea. She practices with it in her back yard. But would she use it to shoot an intruder or an attacker? She's not sure.

But when a woman takes to shooting, it's usually for reasons of self-defense, not sport.

No one knows how many women carry handguns on the streets in the United States. By some estimates, however, as many as 12 million, one out of eight, have handguns in their homes.

There are no reliable statistics. Neither the Justice Department nor the Treasury's department for alcohol and firearms keeps records of women who are licensed to carry or own firearms or who run afoul of the law by their use.

But firing ranges around the country report a significant increase in the number of female members in the past four years. For instance, Lt. John Benner, who started the Tactical Training Center in Cincinnati, says women once comprised only about 15 percent to 20 percent of his beginning classes. Now they amount to about 50 percent.

Sharon Sullivan, a Cincinnati attorney, can knock a clay pigeon out of the sky on the skeet range at the Moonlight Gun and Hunt Club, but she doesn't carry her handgun on the street and wonders about the wisdom of using it in self-defense. Nevertheless, she's convinced police are no longer sufficient protection.

Indeed, police all over the country have told citizens that they have an obligation to maintain order and enforce the laws, but they cannot defend every citizen's life or safety every minute of every day. Citizens must take some responsibility. And indeed the courts have upheld them.

Some women have taken the warning seriously. They are out there hefting their .44-caliber Magnums from the West Side Rifle and Pistol

The Associated Press

Twice a victim, Thalia Adams practices sharpshooting

Range in New York City to the Beverly Hills Gun Club in California. Some even graduate, for sport, to AK-47s and other automatic weapons.

Noting the trend, Smith and Wesson has brought out the Lady Smith, a version of its popular .38-caliber, scaled down to fit a woman's hand. Another firm, Charter Arms, is offering a his-and-her pair of .38s called the Bonnie (Parker) and the Clyde (Barrow), the Bonnie being scaled down in grip and trigger action.

There are all kinds of new products for the would-be gun-toter, including a little gun for joggers. It fires right through its wallet-holster.

Polls by women's magazines have shown that women are often the secret victims of crime, and have bought guns for security. A Ladies Home Journal poll in 1987 found that 40 percent of 104,000 women queried kept guns at home strictly for protection, and 42 percent said they had been victims of crime.

Paxton Quigley in her new book, "Armed & Female," a comprehensive look at women and guns, the law and self-defense, says chances of being raped at any age in New York are one in eight; Los Angeles, one in seven; Atlanta, one in five; Detroit, one in four.

"Across our nation, one out of every four families will be victims of serious crimes like burglary, rape, robbery or murder," says Quigley, who estimates that 12 million women have guns in their homes. "A Gallup Poll finds that six out of 10 women in this country are afraid to walk in their own neighborhoods at night."

Quigley, a native of California, was once an anti-gun activist. Then, she says, "Two things happened in a week's time that changed my mind. About 2½ years ago a girlfriend of mine heard someone come in her bathroom window about 1 o'clock in the morning. She called 911, and waited. She didn't know what to do. It happened very quickly and the damage was done. The police came 10 minutes later."

The same week she read a story about a woman who thwarted an intruder with her own .38-caliber special and held the cringing would-be attacker at gunpoint until the police arrived.

"But she'd stopped a crime from happening while my girlfriend was raped. Now 2½ years later she's still not well. So I decided it was time for me to get a gun."

Other women coming to the same conclusion have another critical decision to make. Should they leave the gun at home, or defy the law by carrying it?

Gun activists are careful not to encourage women to carry guns.

If a woman — or a man — kills someone who is clearly menacing her life, chances are they will get off by pleading self-defense, a woman especially because of the "disparity of force" between her and her attacker.

But no one can avoid the charge of illegal possession of a handgun, and in most places could face a year in prison. Bernard Goetz, New York's subway shooter, is a case in point. He was acquitted of shooting his young attackers, but jailed for possession of the instrument of force.

Sullivan, who practices law in Cincinnati, says, "Here's the problem. Once you're close enough to use self-defense, you're better off submitting. ... In a threatening situation with a gun, what happens? The attacker gets the gun first. Or you never get a good drop on him because there are so many variables it's incredible. Or, if it is a perfect deal and everything works right, you don't have the justification to use the gun."

"The only way I would go jogging in Burnet Park here would be with a gun. And if I carried it in a holster, the police would stop me. Or some guy will knock me in the head to get the gun."

Terry Weber, who trains people in the use of handguns agrees. "It's a Catch-22. Do I do my time in prison or take a chance with my life?"

Sullivan appealed a case of a young man who was attacked on his way home through the park early one morning after his wife had given birth. He killed his assailant and spent a year in prison for illegal possession of a handgun.

Linda Farmer, who with her husband J.D. operates the Hard Times Armory in Atlanta, Ga., says, "If women are going to be equal to men in this world, then we are going to have to take on the responsibility for our own self-defense whether we like it or not, whether it's something that's feminine or unfeminine, whether you decide to carry a gun or not."

Janet Davis of Kennesaw, Ga., carries a gun in a special pocket in her purse. There are a number of reasons. Her sister was raped. She had a job in which she carried a lot of money. The community in which she lives encouraged every citizen to own a gun, in fact passed an ordinance requiring it. The local police gave the National Rifle Association's four-hour course in the use of guns to anyone who asked.

Janet, a self-described "very religious woman," went through all of the arguments for and against the use of lethal force. Her decision — to carry a gun, but to exercise caution in its use. "If you take it out, you'd better use it, and if you use it, you'd better empty it."

Originally from Nebraska, she and her husband live in the Atlanta suburb that passed its gun ordinance in reaction to Oak Grove, Ill., which passed an ordinance prohibiting the ownership of any guns. She admits her relatives in Nebraska might not understand her fondness for guns, "but they still live in Nebraska, and they don't need to like them."

Dysart Plans Changes For 'L.A. Law' Character

By Patricia Brennan
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

"Ah, Jennifer," said Richard Dysart with a sigh.

Leggy law-school graduate Jennifer was the reason Leland McKenzie, senior partner of the "L.A. Law" firm of McKenzie, Brackman, father-figure to a horde of hard-driving lawyers, nearly fell off his white horse this season.

In one installment, Jennifer — wearing only a satin teddy beneath her coat — arrived unexpectedly and perched herself on Leland's lap during the law firm's daily round-table conference. The unlikely encounter was merely a daydream, vanishing at the intrusive voice of partner Douglas Brackman.

"I feel that that's all gone," said Dysart in a morning interview over croissants and coffee in Washington. "That 35-year difference was too much for intimacy. Leland felt that with the passage of time — 10 years from now — he'd be in his 70s, she in her 30s. I think Leland had problems introducing her to his senior friends."

Dysart chuckled softly. He is so much Leland McKenzie, and McKenzie is so much Richard Dysart, that Leland's viewpoints and problems are his. So Jennifer was written out, at least for now, without much explanation.

"We had an episode that was edited in such a way that we had some technical problems and couple of story themes were omitted," acknowledged Dysart, "so it amounted to having that particular scene, the rejection scene, at the very front of the show. It was a matter of Leland's saying that it wasn't going to work, that he was uncomfortable. And she says, 'I thought I could change that for you, but you are old.'"

Dysart, 60, sighed and smiled.

"It was sort of interesting in that Leland, to tell her this, called her in to his office." Good old stodgy Leland. "So there's plenty of work that can be done on Leland's consciousness, raise it up a bit in relation to relationships with younger women."

If Dysart has his way, there will be much in store for Leland McKenzie during the coming fourth season of NBC's "L.A. Law." Because Dysart wears hearing aids, so will McKenzie, who tucked them in for a rare court appearance but refuses to wear them in the office. And Leland McKenzie may set about learning Spanish, because Richard Dysart would like to.

"We are continually suggesting stories, some of which are used later on," explained Dysart. "The story mill, the idea mill, as I understand it, is a collection of all the ideas that come up. Then all the writers talk these stories out and maybe have someone research them, and then Steven Bochco's particular genius is to mix and match these stories."

"L.A. Law," a hit when it premiered in October 1986, may face a sort of crisis this fall. Bochco, who has a lucrative, long-term deal to develop shows for ABC, will take his hand off the tiller. More than one successful series has veered off course when the guiding hand left.

"Television series have a rather predictable history — if they're a hit, that is," said Dysart. "There's the initial surge of energy and acceptance by the American public — ours came very fast and very strong — and then the years when the audience builds, and then somewhere around the year four, problems can happen. I think it's the critical year."

"Occasionally the studio or whoever controls the making of the episodes will try to cut corners financially. I think we have a good, healthy life ahead of us if that doesn't happen. I'm sure 20th Century Fox is aware of that as well."

"We were accepted by the legal community very early on. ... That means we can't stray. Everything has to be correct. All the stories are passed through our technical adviser, Jeff Rosenberg, who is a working lawyer, and that way the writers won't go off on some tangent and create a story that just couldn't be."

"L.A. Law" has already endured a fight, including a suit between co-creators Bochco and Terry Louise Fisher, who is also a lawyer. She left.

"I don't know if it was a power struggle," said Dysart. "More of a clash of egos. I don't think it had to do with the content of the show. I think it was of a personal nature."

"Still, you look at the way things flare up, egos and what have you, in Hollywood. I find it best just to sit back and wait a while and see how things end up. You hear about these court cases, people suing each other for billions of dollars, and then you don't hear about them any more and things get worked out."

"Creative people, people who create the idea of a show, have a tendency to move on to create others, as opposed to the creator-writer who won't be that original creative force, but will be creative in writing the episodes. And that is what Terry Louise has done. We lose Steven Bochco at the end of this third year."

"I am worried — there's no way to hide that, no way to talk around it, because in his field the man is a genius. His genius is the juxtaposition of those stories and giving them that particular twist at the end sometimes."

"He has another genius in the selection of the types of people he has around him. A while back he made an extremely fine business agreement with ABC and is producing a number of series for them. I'm told it's the best deal ever made in Hollywood."

"That meant he had to have a place to create these shows and to film them, and 20th Century Fox wanted very much to keep him there on the lot. They're presently building some buildings and making it possible for him to build an organization and do this further work. So we're losing his mind to other ventures, but he's going to be physically nearby."

Bochco will pass much of the responsibility for guiding "L.A. Law" to former Boston lawyer David Kelley, who has been associated with and writing for the show since its inception. "David Kelley is sort of in charge of the writing team as a producer, and we're all very pleased with that," said Dysart.

Nevertheless, there's a philosophical crossroads approaching: Will "L.A. Law" continue to spend a part of every episode working on court cases, or will it spend more time in the bedroom? Despite the Jennifer story line that nearly brought him the promise of romance with a young, beautiful woman, Dysart said he hoped the series would keep its legal underpinnings.

"I think that's our strength, and I think that's what interests the American public more than the bedroom. Lots of other shows serve that purpose. I think if we strayed too far from the law, we'd lose what 'L.A. Law' is all about."

"I was talking to a law group in Los Angeles, and someone asked what the cast enjoyed most, the courtroom or doing the personal scenes outside the office. I said I think we all liked the legal areas, and that I was hoping that as the years went along, 'L.A. Law' would find more of these interesting cases. And a moan went up: 'Awwwww.' They were joking. But that's why they watch 'L.A. Law.'"

The NBC series came to Dysart rather late in his career, after years spent on the stage and in several movies. "I'm an extremely fortunate person to have everything in my life come together at this time, in my late 50s. I just turned 60. There were many lean years, and years of going around the country doing repertory theater, but those were the years of development and the years of learning the craft by doing it. It's wonderful to look back on, theater in particular."

Having no background in theater, he said, makes things difficult for actors who meet early success "unless they have electric personalities and catch on, high intelligence and a stable ego. The most stable egos that I encounter are those that have been through fire-years of learning the craft, primarily people who made the jump from theater to television and films."

A native of Maine, Dysart earned two degrees at Emerson College in Boston ("They gave me an honorary doctorate last year — I thought that was pretty neat") and served in the Air Force from 1952 to 1955, working in the Office of Special Investigations in Washington.

About four years ago Dysart found that his hearing had decreased so much that he was obliged to wear hearing aids. And next season Leland McKenzie will too.

Club Has All But Booze

Shirley Temple, ginger ale with a dash of grenadine, to more exotic items such as the Lemon Spritzer, Pinebush and a host of frozen coladas, as well as a mineral water, cappuccino and espresso coffees.

Joe Mrozinski, head bartender at Club Soda, says the fancy drinks, at $3.50 a pop, are big sellers. "There's not much call for non-alcoholic beer so we discontinued it," he said.

"The help has been very supportive of this and it's tough to find bartenders that will work without getting the tips that they're accustomed to in a real bar," Perugini says.

The club, which opened Feb. 27, averages 130 to 150 people a night, Perugini says. Most non-drinkers are discovering the club by word-of-mouth although the club purchased a few ads in the local newspaper.

Michelle Killiany, 19, of Bristol, heard about the club in an alcoholism recovery program in which she participates.

"I don't miss not having drinks, not at all," she says. "I like it here a lot. The mirrors and the non-alcoholic drink. Hang around, you'll see, it's a gas. It's worth the drive."

Donald Corriveau, 29, of New Britain, is becoming a regular.

"There's not too many places you can dance without alcohol being around and we just started to avoid those places," he says. "We're recovering from that alcohol experience and being around those kinds of bars is not good."

There is a doorman at Club Soda, not to check IDs but to check for boozers and potential troublemakers. The doorman does not admit anyone who has been drinking.

"Some people may come in for a goof, but that's on them," Perugini says. "They're the ones who paid the five bucks to come in and walk right out."

Opening lead: Five of ♠

To test your play technique, cover up the East and West hands and decide how you would play six no trump after a spade lead. With 12 high-card points, North should jump to 6 NT regardless of whether your range is 21-23 or 22-24. There are enough assets in the combined holding to make small slam a reasonable proposition, but a grand slam would be distinctly against the odds. After a spade lead, your first task is to count your tricks. There are seven fast tricks in spades, hearts and clubs. If diamonds are 2-2, or the queen drops singleton, that suit will produce the five tricks you need for slam. But what if the suit breaks 3-1 or 4-0? In that case, you will need the heart finesse to succeed. You can combine these chances if you go about matters in the right order. Which suit should you attack first? If you tackle diamonds immediately and they break badly, you might not be able to recover. However, if you take the heart finesse and it succeeds, you will be able to survive even a 4-0 diamond split. Win the first trick in dummy and take an immediate heart finesse. If that loses, you will have to bring in the diamonds without loss to make your contract. But if the heart finesse wins, as is the case here, you can afford a safety play in diamonds. Lead a low diamond and, if West plays low, insert the jack. Your contract is guaranteed whether that wins or loses, for the defenders can take no more than one diamond trick.

Where you gain is if West shows out on the first diamond and East captures the jack with the queen. Win the heart return (best), cross to dummy and lead the seven of diamonds for a finesse. When East covers, win and cross back to the table to repeat the diamond finesse. That assures four tricks in the suit and your slam is home.

Pianist Wants The Past Back

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Harry Connick Jr., the young pianist whose music has been rattling chandeliers at the city's swankier jazz joints, planned to do just one thing before the biggest gig of his life, a sold-out show at Lincoln Center.

"Pray," said the 21-year-old Connick.

Lately he's been practicing all night and, he says, "praying is the only thing that can help me now."

It's a tactic that's served him well. Relying on religion, in part, brought him from a rich bog of musical influences in his native New Orleans to the splendor of New York's Alice Tully Hall at Lincoln Center.

He arrived in New York at age 18, got a room at the local YMCA and within a month had a job playing the piano in a church. Then another church in the Bronx needed a choir director. After that, gigs at "little dives here and there" led to others; the joints got classier, the pianos better tuned.

Three years later, he has two albums out with Columbia Records — the first called "Harry Connick Jr." and the second "20," as in his age at the time. Earlier this year, he had a successful and often sold-out run at the famed Algonquin Hotel.

His repertoire relies heavily on nostalgia: Harold Arlen's "If I Only Had a Brain"; Hoagy Carmichael's "Lazy River"; and Bart Howard's "In Other Words" (also called "Fly Me to the Moon").

Connick finds the whole notion of today's popular music distressing.

"They don't understand," said Connick, his trademark slick ash-blond hair bobbing back and forth, referring to no one in particular and everyone in general who produces and performs trendy tunes.

"There was just an innocence which is lost in American society today. Can you imagine how nice it would have been, back in the '40s? The innocence they had back then — there is such a joyousness about the music back then."

Still, his passion for the past leaves many puzzled.

The Summer Is Still A Dead Zone For The Three Television Networks

By James Endrst
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Once upon a time, the networks thought it would be a good idea to have a 52-week television season.

Think of it, television in the fall, winter, spring and summer.

Sounds like a fairy tale, doesn't it?

Well, the way things have been going for the networks, it is.

Despite the Big Three's efforts to pump original programming into the summer months, television still has the smell of a dumping ground with failed pilots, circuses of the stars and reality-based specials killing time until the fall. And on the far end of TV's summer vacation, NBC in particular has taken a liking to the idea of previewing new series in the weeks before they officially "premiere" on the fall schedule.

There are, of course, occasional new and exciting moments of summer viewing to be had in sports and news and on cable TV, which really doesn't have a fall season per se.

Yet the summer remains TV's biggest dead zone. And it should be.

In some ways, the recent misfortunes of the networks, including declining audience shares, a writers' strike and the death of some former golden nuggets such as ABC's "Moonlighting," serve as the best arguments against television seasons without end.

One of the most common excuses offered by producers, directors and actors associated with television projects of limited importance or quality is the same one most of us used in grade school when we didn't have our book reports ready: "There just wasn't enough time."

The pressures on TV producers to deliver, especially in series television, are enormous, and much of it has to do with the frighteningly short amount of time the cast and crew have to throw their work together. Too often, the less-than-satisfying results show up on our screens.

Bubbly Billiards

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Comedian David Brenner likes a little bubbly with his billiards so he's planning to open a pool hall that will serve champagne and boutique beer.

Brenner said the chain of billiards rooms, bearing his name, also will have a dress code. He plans to make appearances, now and then, he said.

When the writers' strike finally ended this past season, many industry observers in Hollywood predicted that the quality of prime-time programming would suffer in the crunch to get shows back on the air. First drafts would become final drafts, many warned, and viewers would be left out in the quality cold. Can you imagine, then, what state television scriptwriters and their shows would be in if they didn't have a break all year? How about giving us a rest?

Has anybody ever warned you against "too much of a good thing?"

Have you ever heard anybody say that about television? Probably not, because much of it is still not very good, which is why so many new shows are canceled out of the gate each year despite their expensive price tags. Maybe, just maybe, if network television producers took a little more time with their series, there would be fewer cancellations and more viewers. And as a bonus we would probably have fewer Bob Hope birthday bashes and TV movies starring Jaclyn Smith.

There is a kind of supply-and-demand dynamic that keeps the networks going, especially since no one cable network has been able to come up with a sustained level of variety and quality to pull in huge groups of viewers the way the networks do. After a summer of running on empty TV offerings, most of the American public with any interest in television is willing to try just about anything new at least once. So when the networks start their big push with the media and advertisers about next season's "Roseanne" or "L.A. Law," most of us are ready to fall like dominoes. If there were something new and different every day, we'd be spoiled and probably miss the one or two shows each year that were actually worth watching.

Few will admit it, but if owners of videocassette recorders were given a pop quiz on how to watch one show and tape another, the majority would fail. That's why the summer is important for viewers of CBS's "Wiseguy," for example, who might like ABC's "China Beach." It's a chance to catch up, to see what we've been missing. (It's cable's big chance for viewers, too.)

It's not a pretty picture, but when you think about it, a 365-day TV season could turn out to be the biggest health hazard of the 20th century. We've heard all the warnings: that prolonged TV viewing turns your mind into so much mush; that television keeps families from talking to one another; that our kids are gaining weight and not much else from all those hours of inactivity in front of the tube. Can armchair football, as a show and a sport, be far behind if the networks ever do go to a 52-week schedule? Will American families take their summer vacations indoors? Will Fourth of July barbecues move inside with them?

We're tempted to say "Stay tuned," but if you've got any sense at all, you will opt for playing with the kids, at least until the fall.

Elvis' Millions Were Disappearing Until Priscilla Took Charge

shirt sleeves around a coffee table — in one of the four visiting Memphians' mini-suites. Lisa Marie, now 21, married and living in Los Angeles, frequently joins the sessions.

On this April day, the agenda includes a progress report on "Elvis: Good Rockin' Tonight," a TV series on Elvis' early life that the estate is developing. The team also discusses an Elvis home video featuring some of the singer's key concert performances and a $1 million museum of cars the singer owned that is being added to the Graceland tour.

The turnaround in finances has been about as unexpected as Priscilla's role in it. Whoever would have imagined that this woman — who moved in with Elvis when she was 17 and let him shape her personality and appearance — would assume the financial responsibility that her former husband never did?

Priscilla has come a long way since the Elvis years — she is confident and sophisticated, no longer the tentative young girl of two decades ago, hidden beneath beehive hairdos and smudged eyeliner. Since her 1973 divorce from Elvis, she has built a career as an actress and lives in Beverly Hills with screenwriter-director Marco Garibaldi; they have a 2-year-old son, Navarone.

Members of the management team say outsiders frequently assume that Priscilla is just a figurehead. "Reporters are always asking about Priscilla's real role, and sometimes they're very skeptical," Soden says. "They don't expect her to be very active, but she is involved in every decision. I've met a lot of Harvard MBAs that I'd be far less inclined to want to be in a partnership with than Priscilla. I'd take her common sense every time when it applies to business."

Although part of Priscilla's motivation in guiding the estate during the past decade has been protecting the interests of her daughter, she has had a second, less-tangible goal: preservation of the Elvis legacy. She's talking about more than money when she says: "We are into preserving Elvis' name and image." She's also speaking with a pride in her former husband's accomplishments. It's as if she feels a cultural responsibility.

"First, there's his talent ... his individuality, his charisma," she says. "I still don't think I have met anyone who has as much charisma as he had. I think he was very misunderstood in the beginning, when he started out. I'd like to have people know him mostly for those early years ... because of that raw talent. We'd like to preserve that."

Elvis' importance in the '50s went far beyond music, and that influence continues to be felt today. Born in poverty in the South, he had barely reached his 20s when he touched off a one-man cultural explosion that brought him a life of unending adoration and massive wealth; he was a living symbol of the American Dream. It was a sign of Elvis' phenomenal connection with his fans when thousands of mourners from all over the country gathered in front of Graceland in the days after his death. And, 12 years later, 650,000 people visit his house and grave annually. In the words of one recent Graceland visitor: "I just wanted to be close to him."

However absurd the "Elvis is alive" rumors of the past year, Elvis' legacy is very much alive for millions of people — and the seven members of the estate's management team are its life-support system.

The last thing Priscilla wanted to do when she became a co-executor of the Presley estate was open Graceland to the public. She was a Southern Californian, but Graceland was still the family home. Some of Elvis' relatives lived there, and Lisa Marie might choose to move in someday. Priscilla recoiled at the idea of visitors trampling through the house, stealing pieces of wallpaper and dripping ice cream on the carpets.

"Graceland was the only thing Elvis and I had that wasn't (on public view)," Priscilla says. "To open up your home was like being robbed."

Elvis bought Graceland and 13.8 adjoining acres in suburban Whitehaven in 1957 for slightly more than $100,000. By the time of his death at age 42, the house had been expanded to 23 rooms, including eight bathrooms, a den with a soda fountain and three TV sets placed side by side on a wall and another den — the Jungle Room — decorated in what has been described as Tahitian Provincial.

Priscilla and Hanks realized just days after Vernon Presley's death that opening the house to the public was the surest way to raise money. For almost two years, however, Priscilla explored alternatives. Maybe, she hoped, merchandising would raise enough money. Maybe the record royalties would rise again. Maybe ...

But in the end, there was only Graceland. The final blow came in 1981: The federal government, taking into account the money made since Elvis' death, reappraised the estate at $22.5 million, up from $4.9 million, and slapped on a $10 million inheritance tax.

In the fall of 1981, Priscilla visited famous houses and museums around the country. "Hearst Castle was the one that impressed me the most because there was nothing (commercial) on the grounds. It was kept exactly the same as when people had lived there. That's what I wanted, too, so that if Lisa wanted to move in right now, she could go in with a toothbrush and that's it."

It was the opening move in Priscilla's businesswoman makeover. She decided to keep direct control of Graceland, establishing Elvis Presley Enterprises Inc. to represent the estate. In late 1981, she hired Soden to oversee the project. A former Kansas City investment banker and stockbroker, he had no experience in show business or running a tourist attraction, but Priscilla had been impressed by his "intelligence and sensitivity" when she met with him to discuss her personal finances.

After two years of trying to avoid turning Graceland into a tourist attraction, the race was suddenly on to open the doors. Soden met with experts in tour management, most of whom came up with elaborate $2.5 million-to-$3 million proposals that would, he says dryly, have left "Graceland with all the warmth and charm of your average airport." They also advised yearlong surveys to determine just what the average Elvis fan would want to see in a Graceland tour.

But Soden wanted to take advantage of the summer tourist season. He and Priscilla decided to open Graceland right away on a minimal $500,000 investment. The estate only had about $500,000 in liquid assets at the time (the colossal tax bill made it impossible to borrow any more money), and it would take all of that, plus about $60,000 in advance ticket sales, to get the house ready. Soden says now that putting the $500,000 on the line wasn't exactly reckless — he was confident that Graceland would eventually pay for itself — "but still it was one shot, for all the marbles."

The estate didn't have to hold its breath for long. Opened to the public in July 1982, just before the fifth an-iversary of Elvis' death, the tour earned back the $500,000 investment in 38 days.

Soden admits that he sometimes loses track of the fact that he is not helping guide the career of a living person. "A lot of what we are doing is like managing a live entertainer," he says. "We're doing these things a manager or agent or public-relations person would be concerned with — positioning, imaging."

The difference is that Elvis' career was cut short; the challenge for the estate's brain trust is to package and repackage that career in creative new ways.

And if Elvis isn't alive to produce anything new and repackaging reaches the saturation point, there are still corners of the world where he is nearly unknown. For example, the management team hopes to build a new audience for "Hound Dog" in China later this year.
