Critics Rake State Plans For Tar-Pamlico System

By J. Ward Best
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

For more than an hour environmentalists, scientists, fishermen and even government officials filed up to the speakers stand to blast what they called a weak proposal by the state to classify the Tar-Pamlico River basin as nutrient sensitive waters.

With a single voice nearly every speaker supported the basic nutrient sensitive classification at Thursday's public hearing, but called for stronger measures to protect the state's largest and most productive estuarine system.

Terry Sholar, N.C. Division of Marine Fisheries district manager, called the Pamlico River "commercially dead." The seafood catch from the river can no longer support full-time commercial fishing, Sholar said.

"We feel the controls do not go far enough," Sholar said. "We all know the status quo is already causing problems."

Dan Besse, chairman of the Coastal Resources Commission, also called for stronger measures, citing the increasing incidents of fish and crab disease as warning of an enormous problem in the waters.

Spokesmen for Greenville and two other municipalities in the basin spoke against proposed restrictions under the state measure at Thursday's public hearing, saying the state unfairly singled out waste water treatment plants in the classification.

The nutrient sensitive classification, if accepted by the Environmental Management Commission, would impose restrictions on most direct and indirect polluters in the Tar-Pamlico basin.

The proposed regulations would not reduce the inflow of nitrogen and phosphorous, two key sources of excessive nutrients in the system. According to a state environmental official, the proposal would "hold the line" on nutrient loading until the state can conduct further studies and consider stricter regulations.

The Marine Fisheries Commission passed a resolution June 1 supporting the nutrient sensitive classification. But the resolution, according to Sholar, also urged the state to "do whatever is necessary to remedy the current bad situation."

Only four of 26 speakers at the meeting spoke against tighter restrictions under the nutrient sensitive classification.

Michael Esarey, chairman of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, and Malcolm Green, general manager of Greenville Utilities Commission, both said they supported the nutrient sensitive classification. But the thrust of their comments called for a lighter burden on municipal waste water treatment plants in limiting the flow of nutrients in the river.

Esarey said the proposed regula-

Poindexter Will Call Reagan And Bush

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Independent counsel Lawrence Walsh said today the prosecution will abandon portions of its Iran-Contra case against John Poindexter, and a lawyer said the former national security adviser wants President Bush and former President Reagan to testify at his trial.

Walsh said the government is reducing the size of its case to avoid the kinds of protracted discussions over the use of classified material that delayed the trial of Oliver L. North, a former aide to Poindexter.

At a hearing in U.S. District Court, defense attorney Richard Beckler said Poindexter intends to subpoena Bush and Reagan to testify at his trial.

The former White House official "had substantial contact with both of these individuals throughout this offense as outlined in the indictment," Beckler told Judge Harold Greene.

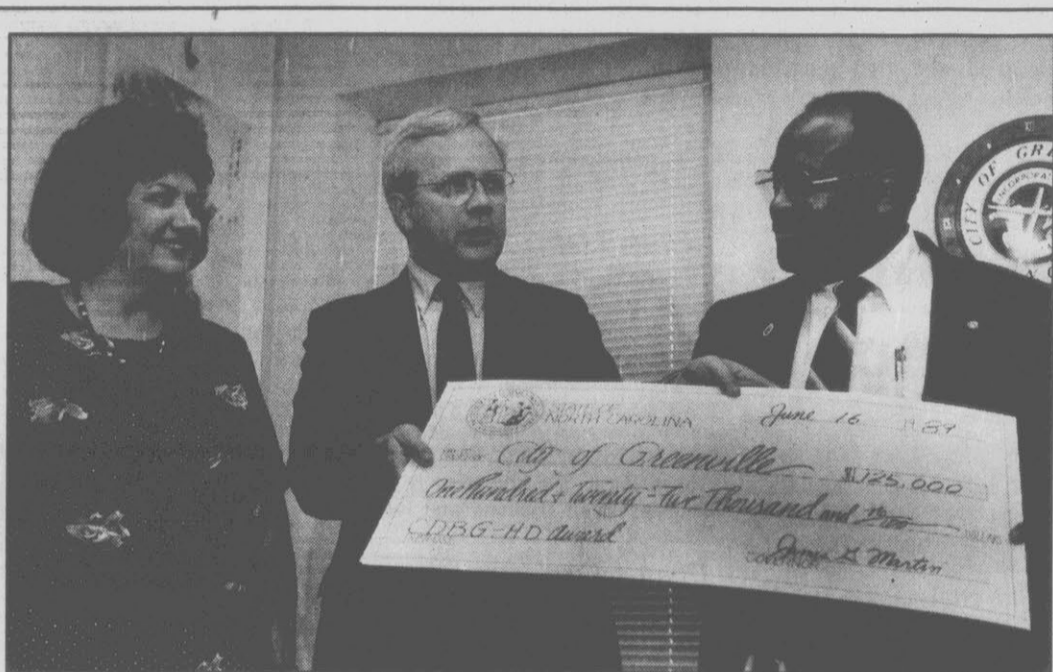

But associate independent counsel Christian Mixer contended that after the charges are narrowed against Poindexter, "there would be no reason to involve these individuals" in the trial.

North had tried unsuccessfully to require Bush and Reagan to testify at his trial, in which he was convicted of three felonies.

Walsh said he plans to seek dismissal of counts accusing Poindexter of theft of government property and wire fraud. The prosecutor also said he plans to abandon portions of the far-reaching charge accusing Poindexter of engaging in a conspiracy in the Iran-Contra affair.

Walsh didn't say which portions of the 38-page conspiracy count he would abandon.

The prosecutor said that if the government attempted to try the charges against Poindexter in their entirety, Greene might rule that vast amounts of material that is now classified might be required in the courtroom.

West Will Remain In Pitt

By Cherie Evans
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt County schools' Superintendent Eddie West was not selected for the same position with the New Hanover County schools, a representative of the New Hanover system in Wilmington said today.

The New Hanover board announced this morning that it has named Dr. Tom McNeel of West Virginia as its new superintendent, effective July 1, said Diane Avery, public information officer with the school system.

West, who had been one of four final candidates for the superintendent's position in New Hanover County, said this morning that he will continue to focus his attention on the educational needs in Pitt County.

"I extend congratulations to Dr. Tom McNeel on his appointment as superintendent of the New Hanover County schools and welcome him to North Carolina," West said in a telephone interview. "I look forward to the privilege of continuing my focus, time and energy on the Pitt County school system and community."

According to Ms. Avery, McNeel, 48, currently is superintendent of the Raleigh County schools in Berkeley, W.Va.

He was the state superintendent in West Virginia from 1985 to 1988, and he also served as deputy state superintendent from 1979 to 1985.

McNeel was the school superintendent in Randolph County, W.Va., for three years and in Monroe County, W.Va., for two years.

McNeel is a graduate of Morris Harvey College in Charlottesville, W.Va., with a degree in physical education. He has a master's degree from West Virginia University and a doctorate degree from Virginia Tech.

He taught physical education and biology for seven years and was an assistant principal.

McNeel has been offered $77,600, 55,600 of which is from the state and $22,000 of which is the county's supplement, according to Ms. Avery. His dues in various organizations are not to exceed $1,000, and travel expenses will not exceed $5,000, she said.

McNeel will be provided with an automobile, medical insurance and $200,000 in life insurance, she said.

Tropical Depression Forms

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — The first tropical depression of the Atlantic hurricane season has formed in the southwest Gulf of Mexico about 600 miles south of the U.S. Gulf Coast, forecasters said today.

Air Force reconnaissance planes located the loose area of circulation Thursday. As of this morning, it had top winds of 35 mph and was located near latitude 21.6 north and longitude 93.3 west, or about 290 miles east of Tampico, Mexico.

"It's a very loosely organized system right now," said Jack Bevin, a meteorologist at the National Hurricane Center in nearby Coral Gables. "Winds are moving away from the center of the depression, so conditions do not appear favorable for it to strengthen."

A depression has maximum sustained winds of up to 38. If its winds reach 39 mph it would be called Tropical Storm Alicia. The Atlantic hurricane season begins in June and ends in November.

Two Firms Pledge $80,000 To Pitt Club

 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Burney Warren and Spence Cosby, co-chairmen of the campaign to raise funds for the proposed new Boys & Girls Club of Pitt County, announced Thursday the receipt of two additional major pledges.

The spokesmen said Burroughs Wellcome Co. and Procter & Gamble have each pledged $40,000 to an ongoing campaign to raise the $900,000 needed to construct the proposed facility.

"These two significant pledges along with several other recent pledges bring us to within target of our goal. We now have pledges of over $650,000 of the $900,000 goal," Cosby said.

Warren said, "The campaign has been successful on all fronts. The goal of $100,000 on the part of the individual board members of the Boys Club has been reached. In the area of civic and church groups," he said, "pledges have amounted to about $50,000 to date, and pledges from the small business sector now stand at over $35,000."

Consumer Prices Go Up On Boost By Food, Fuels

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Consumer prices rose a sharp 0.6 percent in May, pushed up by strong increases in food and gasoline costs, the government said today.

The rise in the Consumer Price Index, the government's primary gauge of inflation at the retail level, followed an even stronger 0.7 percent April increase that was the largest jump in more than two years, the Labor Department reported.

During the first five months of the year, consumer prices rose at an annual rate of 6.7 percent, a significantly faster pace than the 4.4 percent price increases registered in 1987 and 1988.

Inflation at the wholesale level has been even stronger, rising at an annual rate of 9.4 percent so far this year.

Despite the persistently strong price increases, many analysts say inflation now may begin to level off and that it could start to drop again late this year.

Today's report will be closely scrutinized by the Federal Reserve Board, which last week slightly eased its grip on the money supply in the belief that the slowing economy will help to tame inflation.

Analysts believe the central bank will wait for further evidence that inflation is under control before it eases any more.

In May, the overall inflation rate was heavily influenced by a 1 percent increase in energy costs. These costs had shot up 5.1 percent in April, when there was an all-time record increase in gasoline prices of 11.4 percent.

Last month's increase in gasoline costs was a still-strong 3.9 percent, which accounted for about one-fourth of the overall increase in the CPI for May.

Food and beverage prices, meanwhile, increased 0.6 percent last month after rising 0.5 percent in April. The May increase included a sharp 3.2 percent jump in prices for fruits and vegetables. Beef prices rose 0.5 percent and poultry prices 3.2 percent.

Excluding the volatile food and energy categories, other consumer prices rose 0.5 percent in May, up from a 0.2 percent increase in April. Many analysts closely watch these figures and believe they represent the important "core" level of inflationary pressures in the economy.

The various May price changes left the overall Consumer Price Index at 123.8 percent of its 1982-84 base. This means that a hypothetical selection of goods costing $100 during the base period would have cost $123.80 last month, 70 cents more than in April.

The 0.6 percent increase in prices last month was slightly higher than most analysts had expected. The consensus projection had been 0.5 percent.

Dalkon Shield Fund Created

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RICHMOND, Va. — A federal appeals court today approved A.H. Robins Co.'s bankruptcy reorganization plan, which will create a $2.5 billion fund to cover claims against its Dalkon Shield birth control device, a lawyer said.

The plan also calls for the acquisition of Robins by American Home Products Corp. of New York in a $700 million stock-swap deal. American Home had the option of backing out of the deal if appeals in the case were not settled by next month.

Robins sought protection from its creditors in August 1985 in the face of millions of dollars in lawsuits brought by women who said they suffered injuries ranging from infections, sterility and miscarriage to children with birth defects caused by the Dalkon Shield.

The reorganization plan created a $2.5 billion trust fund to compensate about 200,000 women with injury claims against the Dalkon Shield, which was sold by the company in the early 1970s.

Pitt Teachers Join In Raleigh Assembly

By Cherie Evans
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

About 150 teachers from Pitt County are joining other state educators today in a rally at Dorton Arena at the N.C. State Fairgrounds in Raleigh for higher salaries.

Area teachers left the county to participate in several activities including a tailgate picnic, a general meeting and presentations by state Rep. Dave Diamond, D-Surry, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, and National Education Association President Mary Futrell, said Jackie Wooten, president of District 15 of the North Carolina Association of Educators and a teacher at Bethel Elementary School.

"It's a rally format to just let the legislators know that we're still seeking higher salaries," said Ms. Wooten. The rally today was the second major gathering this year to press teachers' demands.

In February, more than 5,000 teachers gathered at the state fairgrounds to demand higher salaries. Many traveled from the fairgrounds to the Capitol to press their case with legislators.

According to the Associated Press, Karen Garr, state president of the NCAE, said several thousand educators were expected to attend the rally today. The NCAE is organizing the rally, and demonstrators will come from each of the 160 local NCAE chapters.

"We want to make sure our lawmakers understand just how strongly educators feel about the need for adequate funding and resources for our public schools," Ms. Wooten said. "We also want them to realize that, although we may have differences of opinion on some issues, we are united on the need for more money for the public schools."

Tax Amnesty Bill Wins Approval

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A bill to give North Carolinians three months to repay delinquent taxes before facing stiffer penalties was tentatively approved 92-1 by the House today after supporters pushed through an amendment to accommodate legislative rules.

The measure had become tangled in a rules debate Thursday because it would have provided funds to the Revenue Department before the state's budget had been enacted. The House voted 89-1 for an amendment making it clear the bill would not obligate the state to the funding until the budget is approved.

A final House vote was scheduled for Monday night.

The main argument for the bill centered on the money it would bring in without hurting honest taxpayers.

"Ladies and gentlemen, this means that the revenues of our state will come from delinquent taxpayers, not by means of the imposition of additional taxes on the honest taxpayers," said Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, sponsor of the bill, during Thursday's debate.

"Particularly in this year when revenues are down do we need a method on which we can collect what we believe to be fair taxes which have not been paid," he said.

During an amnesty period running from September through December, delinquent taxpayers could repay back taxes plus interest without incurring any civil or criminal charges, Miller said. An estimated $20 million would come in during that period, although Miller called that a conservative estimate.

In 1990, stiffer penalties for tax evasion would be implemented and the Revenue Department's enforcement capabilities would be augmented. Improved complicity with the law and better enforcement would combine to bring in $60 million a year that currently is lost, Miller said.

The bill became bogged down when Rep. Dave Redwine, D-

Brunswick, pointed out that funding for the Revenue Department could not be approved until the state budget is enacted.

Miller proposed that the House suspend that rule, saying the bill must be approved as soon as possible so the state can gear up for the amnesty period. Without proper notice, the state might not get as much money as expected, he explained.

Rep. Jack Hunt, D-Cleveland, said that would be an unprecedented deviation.

"This is a significant policy change to me," he said. "And I think it's bad policy."

Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, a former House appropriations chairman, said he had never seen the rule suspended in 20 years.

Whiter Teeth?

Commonly asked questions and answers concerning this procedure.

Question: "How long does the procedure take?"
Answer: This procedure takes only 15 to 20 minutes to start and the patient completes the treatment at home and to their desired degree of whiteness; however, on your first visit, the dentist must prepare you for the procedure and usually a normal one-hour appointment is sufficient. The results are very predictable when the patient follows the instructions to the letter. Most cases can be completed within a two week period, more complicated cases may require a longer period of time. Patients who follow the instructions properly may see results within the first three days of treatment.

Question: "If this is such a new procedure, how can I be sure it's safe?"
Answer: Although it is a new product, it is based on the older bleaching techniques that have been in use on teeth for over twenty years. When used properly, these techniques have proven to be extremely safe but overpriced for most people. It is a much milder medication than anything ever used before for this purpose and is priced where every patient can now afford to look their very best with a totally different and easier procedure.

Question: "How long will the results last?"
Answer: The procedure can be permanent with occasional and proper maintenance.

Court Says D.A. Doesn't Have To Produce Jury Records

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt District Attorney Tom Haigwood does not have to provide a list of every jury case he has tried since 1971 and his notes concerning jury selections to defense attorneys who represent a Bethel man on death row, a Superior Court judge ruled Thursday.

Attorneys for Harvey Lee Green Jr., 28, filed a request June 5, asking Haigwood to voluntarily turn over the material and records. When he did not, the lawyers asked to argue their motion at a discovery hearing, at which time they also presented a subpoena requesting that Haigwood provide details on 25 specific cases he prosecuted from 1982 to 1984.

The attorneys have accused Haigwood, who is white, of being racially biased in selecting the jury that sentenced Green, who is black, to death in 1984. A Superior Court judge ruled in 1987 that Haigwood was racially neutral in the jury selection, but the state Supreme Court ordered a new hearing to allow Green to present evidence. That is set for July 24.

In their June 5 request, the attorneys asked for the name, address and race of all potential jurors dismissed by the state in cases tried by Haigwood.

However, at a hearing Thursday in Pitt Superior Court, Judge Thomas S. Watts of Elizabeth City granted a motion by Special Deputy Attorney General Joan H. Byers to deny the defense attorneys' request and to quash the subpoena.

"After reading the motion and the state's response, the court concludes that the materials sought are not discoverable . . . Accordingly, defendant's motion for discovery is denied," Watts said in his ruling.

In response to the defense attorneys' request, Ms. Byers filed a statement June 13 arguing that the state did not possess any comprehensive list of all the cases Haigwood has tried since the joined the office in 1971 as an assistant district attorney. She also said none of the material requested pertains to Green's sentence.

"None of the requested material is information favorable either to the defendant's guilt or an issue of mitigation in sentencing," Ms. Byers said in her statement opposing the request.

Until Pitt became a separate district in 1981, Haigwood tried cases in four counties: Pitt, Carteret, Craven and Pamlico, the response said. He first took office as the elected district attorney in January 1983.

Green's lawyers, Malcolm Ray Hunter Jr., the state's appellate defender, and Robert S. Mahler, director of the Death Penalty Resource Center, are scheduled to present evidence at the July 24 hearing that Haigwood was racially motivated in selecting the jury that sentenced Green to death.

Green pleaded guilty in 1984 to beating two people to death in a robbery of a Bethel dry cleaners. Once his plea was entered, lawyers selected a jury to determine whether Green should receive life in prison or the death sentence. The jury, which included one black, chose death. There was also one black alternate juror.

Ms. Byers has said there is no evidence in the Green case — or any other case — that Haigwood discriminated against black jurors.

As with all death cases, Green's case was appealed directly to the state Supreme Court. Green alleged 23 errors in the trial court's proceedings, including the racial selection of jurors. But the Supreme Court has yet to rule on whether or not the lower court erred.

A number of roadblocks and legal twists have delayed the matter.

First, it took an unusually long time for the transcript from the sentencing phase to be typed, which slowed the filing of legal briefs with the Supreme Court, attorneys said.

Also, after Green was sentenced, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled in 1986 in an unrelated Kentucky case that prosecutors may not use peremptory challenges to dismiss jurors solely because they are black.

In a death penalty case, both the prosecution and defense may excuse up to 14 jurors with peremptory challenges. Traditionally, attorneys for both sides have not had to state reasons for the dismissals, but the 1986 federal ruling changed that.

To expedite the review process, Ms. Byers said her office asked for a hearing in 1987 to allow Haigwood to state his reasons for dismissing jurors. At that time, Watts ruled that there was no racial discrimination and denied Green's motion for a new trial.

The state Supreme Court did not address whether Watts' decision was correct; instead, it sent the case back to Superior Court again, ruling that Green should have been allowed to present evidence on his behalf. The hearing was initially set for last month, but at that time Watts agreed to appoint a statistician from Durham as an expert to help defense attorneys prepare their case, and he continued the hearing to July 24.

Bethel Man Draws Six-Year Sentence

A Bethel man who said he helped his boss sell cocaine out of a local garage was sentenced to six years in prison Thursday.

Charlie Ray Roberson, 24, of Crawford St., Bethel, pleaded guilty to possessing and selling cocaine. Superior Court Judge Thomas S. Watts of Elizabeth City sentenced him to prison.

On the witness stand, Roberson said his boss, garage owner Luther Byrd Harrell Jr., 41, gave him cocaine to sell over a 12-month period. Roberson, Harrell and another garage employee, Dennis Roberson, 29, of Bethel, were arrested in May 1988. The Robersons are not related.

Harrell faced trafficking charges of dealing in more than 28 grams of cocaine. Dennis Roberson testified against his former boss in a trial last month in which Harrell received a 50-year prison term.

A judge later determined that Roberson, who was also charged with trafficking, provided substantial assistance to the state and sentenced him to 10 years in prison.

Charlie Roberson said he sold small amounts of cocaine, between a quarter of a gram and eight grams out of the garage and his home.

He made between $25 and $200 per transaction, he said, selling the drugs to area residents he knew only by sight, not name. He said he made about $1,000 over a six-month period, but most of the money went to Harrell to pay bills.

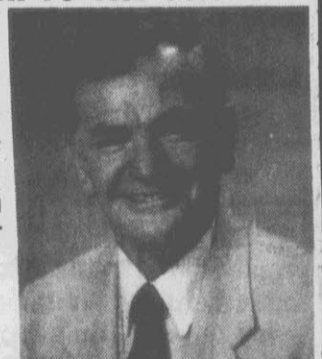

Charlie Roberson told prosecutors Thursday that Harrell bailed him out of jail after about two weeks, and he was scared to testify against him, as Dennis Roberson had done.

"(It was) fear he might hurt my family," he said. Harrell bailed him out, he said, "to keep me quiet so I wouldn't testify against him."

Items Needed

The Regional Perinatal Clinic of Greenville is appealing for baby clothing and equipment and money donations for the women with high-risk pregnancies that it serves.

"These women from 29 counties of eastern North Carolina are in need of help with such basics as food and utilities, as well as with items for the babies they are expecting," said Laura Geer, a perinatal social worker. She said any new or good-quality used baby items would be appreciated, along with donations for the program's High-Risk Pregnancy Fund.

For more information call Ms. Geer at 551-4191.

Rescue

ROBBINSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Two men were rescued Thursday when they were stranded on Big Santeeetlah Creek after torrential rains forced the creek out of its banks.

According to Marshall McClung of the U.S. Forest Service, Orrie Stenroos and Jim Carico went across Santeeetlah Creek, near where Wrights Creek joins Santeeetlah Creek, to take water samples about 9 a.m. for the Tellico-Robbinsville Road project, about 15 miles northwest of Robbinsville.

At 3:30 p.m. Jennifer Jones, another employee of the sampling company out of Lynchburg, Va., came to pick up the men. She found them stranded on the other side of the river with no way to get across.

The men were finally hauled across the water by a rescue party, reaching safety about 8 p.m.

Runaway Truck

CANTON, N.C. (AP) — A runaway tanker truck carrying a load of sulfuric acid crashed on its side off N.C. 215 in Canton Thursday afternoon, but none of the truck's contents spilled, authorities say.

The accident occurred about 4 p.m. Thursday when driver Tom Godsey of Cooper, Tenn., parked the tractor-trailer rig at Thickety Quick Shop and Deli, set the brakes, and went inside for supper.

By the time Godsey got outside the truck had rolled out of the parking lot, continued on the downslope of N.C. 215, crossed the highway and went off the other side and rolled over on its side.

Godsey said there were 3,000 gallons of sulphuric acid in the 5,000 gallon tank.

Flooded Creek Cuts Off W. Virginia Town

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLESTON, W.Va. — Storms that dumped nearly 2 inches of rain forced authorities to close several highways and evacuate homes flooded by muddy creek water in a town that remained cut off from the rest of the state this morning.

At least 50 families in Dunlow in southwest West Virginia were evacuated to churches and the fire station, which is on a hill, fire officials said. But by midmorning the floodwaters were already retreating and officials were optimistic the evacuations would not last long.

"We've taken them out in boats and four-wheel-drive vehicles. Rescue people have waded through water over their chests to haul many elderly out of their homes," said fire Capt. Reva Sanders.

The Red Cross could not reach the community of about 350 people because "there's water on both ends and all the way around," Fire Chief Tom Beckett said. He said officials were unable to assess damage immediately.

"The waters fell about a foot and a half since 5:30 a.m.," the fire chief said shortly after 7:30 a.m. "It came fast and it's going down fast. . . . We should be able to get back in there by 4 or 5 this evening."

Peter Parke, a National Weather Service meteorologist, said heavy rains fell across several counties east, northeast and west of Charleston, with westernmost Wayne County, which includes Dunlow, having the worst flooding.

At Radnor in southern Wayne County, "they feared the crest of water was going to destroy much of that town," Parke said.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Careful Look

Concern Reasonable, But Not Panic

When a major local industry is identified as a source of toxic air emissions, it gets the community's attention.

Concern, disbelief, anger ... questions. Those reactions to such an announcement are normal ones. And when the public read last week that the Environmental Protection Agency identified drug manufacturer Burroughs Wellcome of Greenville as one of more than 200 plants in North Carolina that allegedly release enough chemicals to pose a severe cancer risk, it doubtless felt a little insecure. Especially considering all the questions the announcement left unanswered.

An EPA study, made public by Rep. Henry Waxman, said the Greenville plant emitted enough methylene chloride into the air to pose an increased cancer risk of between 1 in 100 and 1 in 1,000. That's all that Waxman, the chairman of the House Energy and Commerce environment subcommittee, said. Sort of leaves the community hanging — and wondering about the responsibility of a public official that would toss out such vague, damning data without a clear explanation of its meaning.

Here's where the concern and disbelief turn to disgust.

In a news story, The Daily Reflector took a careful look at methylene chloride and how it's used by pharmaceutical manufacturers. It also talked to three cancer specialists, including the National Cancer Institute and the Lineberger Cancer Institute at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill about the statistics that Waxman cited and their significance.

The conclusions? If these experts — objective specialists in cancer and the risks of getting it — are to be believed, there is no cause for panic by the community. The data was compiled as a base line for study on toxic emissions, not for estimating cancer risks.

If the EPA study is taken at face value, if 1,000 people stayed in the area of highest concentration — somewhere the emissions are at their most intense — for 70 years, an average of between 1 in 10 would get cancer. But Phillip Chemaly of the National Cancer Institute says even that close association with emissions containing the chemical at the levels emitted by Burroughs Wellcome would not dramatically increase the risk of getting cancer over the risk the general population faces.

For example, one-third of the people living in the United States today will be diagnosed with cancer at some time in their lives. Therefore, an average of 333 people out of any group of 1,000 will get cancer at some time. That's a sobering statistic. It also puts the data cited by Waxman in perspective.

The EPA study containing the figures on Burroughs Wellcome's emissions of methylene chloride remains a useful document because it points to potential problem areas that should be corrected and it identifies toxins that should be regulated. It states these substances are in the air and that industries should work to reduce the amount of them.

That's a statement few would dispute. Methylene chloride is a potentially dangerous chemical, mostly used for removing paint. The EPA is considering placing it on its list of cancer-causing substances, a move which would increase restrictions on its use.

Concern over emissions of the substance is reasonable but panic is not. Figures fired fast from a source with uncertain motives should get a careful look, not a knee-jerk reaction.

The Right Move

Farmville Chooses Progressive Path

Farmville voters have decided an important issue in voting to adopt the council-manager form of government.

The vote was close — 420 to 416 — but spokesmen for those who opposed the change said they will abide by the majority and they expect to move forward in building a better community.

Farmville in the years ahead can expect to experience the growth advantages and problems that are affecting other areas of the county. It is in the path of residential growth which is anticipated in western Pitt County and the enterprising community has done well in attracting industry and new business. In a few years Farmville could be overwhelmed with zoning, utilities and street improvements.

It is important that the best qualified person be found as Farmville's first city manager. The person chosen should be forward thinking to fit an ambitious town.

Farmville's future is bright and in approving the council-manager form of government is moving to a more efficient method of administering local government and planning for the future.

Fighting A Costly Battle — Again

WASHINGTON — Monday's Supreme Court decisions remind me of the bitter joke from the days when literacy tests were used to keep Southern blacks from voting. An elderly Negro appears before the registrar, is handed an incredibly complicated legal document and given a few minutes to study it.

"What does that mean, boy?" the registrar demands.

"I guess," says the old man, "it means that I don't get to vote."

He should have been around to look at Monday's decisions:

In one case, the court ruled against three women employees of AT&T who were demoted under a dual-seniority system that allowed females to be fired or demoted before men. The women filed a suit. Too late, the court said. You should have sued in 1979, when the rule was adopted — not in 1982, when you were demoted.

In the other case, the city of Birmingham, Ala., found — after two trials — to have discriminated against black applicants for firefighters jobs, entered into a consent decree whose long-term goal was to have the city's work force match the racial makeup of the civilian labor pool. After the decree was signed and approved by the court (which first gave those objecting to it the opportunity to come forward and make their case), a group of white male firefighters sued on the ground that the agreement constituted "reverse discrimination" against them.

Were they too late to file their claim? Not at all, said the court, which, by a 5 to 4 vote, sided with the white plaintiffs.

What do the two rulings mean? The old man of the story might have looked past the clever wording of the majority decisions and concluded that the true meaning is that this court is not going to enforce affirmative action.

Or as Mary Francis Berry, former member of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission now teaching at the University of Pennsylvania, put it: "The clear message is that they oppose the implementation of plans for women and minorities if it works to the disadvantage of some white male."

"When the rules worked in favor of white men, as in the AT&T case, the court said the affected women didn't come in in time. When the rules worked against white men, the court said white men can come in whenever they choose. If you are a civil-rights plaintiff, you lose either way."

For all its intricate reasoning and ostensible concern with fair rules, Berry contends, the court is eroding the American consensus that blacks and women have been victimized by discrimination, that the balance needs to be redressed, and that the courts, not the streets, are the appropriate place to enforce the remedy.

"They don't understand that the history of the civil-rights legislation is conservative, not radical," she said. "The whole purpose was to keep the debate off the streets and off the picket lines and move it to the courts in the interest of public peace. The consensus was that we didn't want these issues in the streets."

Nor, she said, does the conservative majority display any familiarity with the realities of racism and sexism. "There was that lieutenant from the Birmingham Fire Department arguing that he shouldn't be disadvantaged by the effort to remedy the history of discrimination because he had nothing to do with it."

"Nowhere in any of the discussion was there mention of the fact that a lot of the white men involved got their jobs in violation of every affirmative action rule ever devised. They argue that they got their positions on merit, but the uncontroverted history is that they didn't have to compete with blacks. Blacks couldn't even apply to be in the fire department or the police department. These white men benefited from that absence of competition, so where is the justice in saying that their unfairly gained advantage must be protected now?"

The Birmingham ruling is particularly troubling because, by ruling that white men not specifically party to consent decrees are not bound by them, it destroys the value of consent decrees and leaves hundreds of carefully negotiated hiring plans subject to the whim of any white man willing to charge "reverse discrimination."

But perhaps most troubling of all is that the recent rulings — the two this week, last week's ruling in the Alaskan cannery hiring-and-promotion case, and the overturning, in January, of a Richmond minority contract law — forces minorities and women to fight all over again a costly battle they thought they had won 25 years ago.

The Mute Tongues Of Liberals

BOSTON — Jerry Falwell, the man who turned a flock into a constituency, the minister who quoted pollsters as fluently as prophets, the pol who spoke from a televised pulpit, has now pulled off a trick that the Pentagon would envy: He has declared victory and quit the fight.

Speaking from the very heart of Sin City, Las Vegas, he told his ever-attentive media congregation that the Moral Majority was closing up shop. "Our goal has been achieved," he said, "The religious right is solidly in place and...religious conservatives in America are now in for the duration."

So out with the bumper stickers that proclaimed, "The Moral Majority is Neither." Gone is the favorite whipping dog of the left and the target of the editorial cartoonists. They won't have the ten-year-old organization of televangelists to kick around any more.

'Despite the attempts of some like Mario Cuomo there is no unified, overarching description of the modern liberal view: a value-system that is egalitarian, anti-war, comfortably pluralistic and aware of the responsibility members of a community and world have to each other.'

Typically, Falwell's victory declaration was one part hype. A more objective benediction over the body would say that this grass-roots lobby group died of its excess, not its success.

At its peak of power, in 1984, the Moral Majority raised $11 million and counted Ronald Reagan as its man. After being infected by the contagious disease of the two Jimmys — Swaggart and Bakker — the group saw its revenues cut by two-thirds and its political candidate Pat Robertson stopped in the South.

Falwell didn't accomplish his agenda of getting prayer in the schools and evolution out of them, of making abortion illegal and labeling parody pornography. The Moral Majority was painted as the Moralistic Minority.

Yet the group he founded on a mountaintop in Virginia did change the way we talk in politics.

The religious right injected "values" into the public debate. Moreover, they defined that word in conservative, traditional and fundamentalist terms. Like political arbitrageurs, they took over powerful codewords from "family" to "American" to "life," even the word "moral" itself. They left liberals uneasy at such language and literally at a loss for words to express the range of their own beliefs to Americans in the middle — the ambivalent majority.

"The Moral Majority set morals and ethics as an agenda long before you had political candidates talking in those terms," says Kathleen Jamieson, who has taught and written about political rhetoric at the University of Texas. Indeed, by staking out the extreme edge, she says, they made it easier for politicians like Bush to move farther to the right, to talk in its terms while still sounding moderate.

Falwell not only encouraged religious conservatives to get involved in politics, he helped to mute the long-standing American concern about separation of church and state. Bible-based, church-taught tenets about abortion, the role of women, homosexuality, were not matters of religious belief but of basic "values." His people were brought together and held together by the fear of assorted "isms": goddess communism, secular humanism, feminism. Even pluralism.

In contrast, liberals have been far too slow in finding their own words. Some continue in the dated language of the New Deal. Others sound as mechanistic as Dukakis in his appeal to the allure of "competence." Still others like Jackson try to retake, piecemeal, co-opted words like family or patriotism. As Jamieson says: "There hasn't been a comparable discourse of values coming from the political left and that's a real loss."

Despite the attempts of some like Mario Cuomo there is no unified, overarching description of the modern liberal view: a value-system that is egalitarian, anti-war, comfortably pluralistic and aware of the responsibility members of a community and world have to each other.

But this is as much a moment of change for liberals as for conservatives. One threat which fused the many sub-sects of the religious right — the fear of the Soviet Union — has diminished. The fear of environmental disaster now emerges as Threat Number One. Can that be a new vocabulary of caring for the left?

This week, direct from Las Vegas, comes the news that the Moral Majority, sullied by its evangelical brethren, is going into retreat. Amen to that. But conservative sounds dominate institutions from the Supreme Court to the White House. And meanwhile liberals are still struggling to find their tongues.

Protecting Drinking Water A Public Health Priority

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — North Carolinians have two problems with their drinking water supplies: They may not have enough water for a growing population, and what they have is vulnerable to pollution.

Three bills which had passed the House recently came before the Senate Environment Committee. They aim to solve these problems. The bills would help state and local governments protect watershed areas, institute state and local water planning and prepare the state to comply with federal stormwater run-off legislation.

House Bill 156 gives the state Environmental Management Commission the authority to write minimum watershed protection regulations that all county and municipal governments would then have to enforce. The bill would also require farmers to abide by what are known as best farm management practices that are designed to reduce farm run-off pollution.

Some local governments already protect watersheds, said Rep. Aaron Fussell, D-Wake, sponsor of the bill. But if a local government does not protect watershed, then all the communities downstream of that city or town find themselves with polluted water. Upstream communities have little incentive to protect water supplies, Fussell said, and so it becomes a state responsibility to protect those which are downstream.

House Bill 157 orders the N.C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development to develop a statewide water plan. As Ellis Hankins, lobbyist for the N.C.

League of Municipalities said, "It just makes sense to look 20 years ahead and see what the need will (for drinking water) and how we are going to meet it."

Hankins said that most cities and towns are developing such plans already, and they will share them with the state. That raised questions of why the state, therefore, needed such a plan. Bill Holman, lobbyist for the N.C. Conservation Council, said there "isn't enough water to go around. If you don't have someone look at it, we are going to have water woes."

Mary Joan Pugh of DNRCD said recent experience highlights the need for a statewide water plan. During the recent droughts, many counties and small municipalities were without the expertise to deal with shortages. Many mistakes were made, she said, which could have been avoided with better planning.

Ms. Pugh also noted that in many cases, local water plans conflict. The state needs to step in and try to resolve those conflicts, she said.

That remark brought immediate concern from Sen. Betsy Cochrane,

R-Davie. Does this bill authorize the inter-basin transfer of water, she asked? No, said Holman.

The stormwater run-off bill is designed to protect shellfish waters, watersheds and other prime water sources in the state. Again, it would be left to the Environmental Management Commission to develop regulations.

Protection of the state's drinking waters has to be a top public health priority. Once chemicals get into the water, they are expensive to remove, or maybe impossible to remove. It is in the best public interest to keep those chemicals out of the water supply.

Difficult

Barry Schweid

WASHINGTON — China has always been difficult to figure out. But as the repression in Beijing rolls on, President Bush isn't much easier to read than the most inscrutable leaders who have guided the world's most populous nation.

Bush comes to his job with double training in Chinese affairs. He headed the U.S. liaison office in Beijing and is a former director of the Central Intelligence Agency.

His experience in these and other posts helped put him in the White House. Figuring out what goes on behind the bamboo curtain in Beijing is expected of the president based on his background and the data flowing to his desk from U.S. diplomatic and intelligence sources.

And yet, nearly two weeks after hundreds of pro-democracy students were gunned down in Tiananmen Square, the president and Secretary of State James A. Baker III still seem to be waiting for the other shoe to drop.

There is no indication they have an overall strategy for dealing with China or that they have come to any conclusions about what to expect next.

Bush, in two news conference, and Baker, sporadically through his spokeswoman, Margaret Tutwiler, have chided top Chinese officials for suppressing dissent and otherwise violating international standards of human rights.

The criticism has been mild. Bush suspended military sales to China and Baker, taking the advice of Ambassador James Lilley, urged Americans to leave the country. Those, too, were minimal actions.

Undersecretary of State Robert Kimmitt on Wednesday called in Chinese Ambassador Han Xu to protest the ordered expulsion of reporters from The Associated Press and Voice of America from Beijing. White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater defended the journalists' right to report the news.

That's not a difficult or very imaginative stand to take.

But the administration did not retaliate by ordering the expulsion of any of the 25 Chinese journalists in Washington. There was no U.S. tit-for-tat diplomacy, the usual response to expulsions of American diplomats or reporters.

Congress, meanwhile, has been relatively feisty. On Wednesday, 67 senators, including both the Republican and Democratic leadership, signed a letter to Prime Minister Li Peng urging him to release jailed Chinese student leaders.

On Thursday, at a House hearing, several lawmakers criticized the State Department for what they said was a sluggish evacuation of Americans. Some said they helped constituents out of China while the State Department while still contemplating the situation.

Many Americans businesses had ordered their workers to leave before the department made its move on Tuesday.

Rep. Rod Chandler, R-Wash., said, "In a crisis in which the lives of U.S. citizens are in danger, I believe protection of Americans must be the highest priority. Clearly this was not the case in China this month."

Bush set the tone for his gentle policy toward China at a news conference June 5, two days after the carnage in Tiananmen Square, when he said he did not intend to respond emotionally to events in Beijing.

Bush said the students struggling for democracy would be hurt if the United States went beyond cutting military ties with China.

"I don't want to see a total break in this relationship and I will not encourage a total break," he said.

To this day, U.S. diplomatic and economic ties with China are intact. Ambassador Lilley has not been recalled for "consultations," a traditional signal of disapproval. The staff at the U.S. embassy in Beijing and at four consulates through the country has not been trimmed.

The suggestion is that Bush and Baker are holding back on the theory the situation in Beijing is stabilizing, that the Chinese leadership will forgo further excesses.

Barry Schweid heads the AP's State Department staff.

IN THE STATE

Conviction

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — A Burke County Superior Court jury deliberated for less than an hour before convicting Philip Reid Payne Jr. of first-degree murder in the shooting death of his 25-year-old wife.

The eight-woman, four-man jury was scheduled to return today for a sentencing hearing. Payne could be sentenced to life in prison or the death penalty.

Pamela Berry Payne died on Halloween in the couple's Morganton apartment. Prosecutors contended that Payne, 25, killed his second wife for life insurance money.

No Money

CARRBORO, N.C. (AP) — The Carrboro Board of Aldermen says it won't provide the money to join Chapel Hill in building a trolley system between the two towns, and aldermen are leaving the issue in the hands of Carrboro businesses.

Debbie Dibbert, co-director of the Chapel Hill-Carrboro Downtown Commission said local businesses will have to donate $10,000 if they want the "trolley buses" in downtown Carrboro.

The service is scheduled to begin running in September.

Second Arrest

DURHAM (AP) — Durham police have arrested a second man charged with murder in the stabbing death of Charles Frank McRae Jr. of Durham.

Carlton Bernard Merritt, 28, of Durham was placed in the Durham County Jail without bond.

Durham Police Det. Billy Apple said McRae was stabbed about 4:30 a.m. Monday in a car parked in southern Durham.

Later on Monday, police arrested Quinten Chavis, 32, of Durham, and charged him with murder in connection with the stabbing. Chavis was accused of acting with the man who stabbed McRae by holding a gun on McRae.

Highway Death

RALEIGH (AP) — Authorities have decided not to press charges against a tractor-trailer driver whose vehicle hit and killed a Raleigh man as he tried to change a flat tire on the side of Interstate 40.

John Dunston, 53, of Bunn told investigators he did not know he had hit a man but thought his truck had run over a tire retreat in the road, said Sgt. J.L. Barbee of the state Highway Patrol.

Gary Benson, 44, was hit shortly before 4:45 a.m. Wednesday as he was trying to change a tire near an exit on I-40, Barbee said.

Officer Resigns

DURHAM (AP) — Sgt. Jenkins Hopkins, acquitted of a charge that he drove drunk while on duty in a secret undercover drug investigation, has resigned from the Durham Police Department.

Hopkins earlier this month was suspended for two weeks after a review board found he had engaged in conduct unbecoming an officer. Hopkins also is involved in two legal appeals to keep his driver's license, a requirement for continued employment as a Durham police officer.

Police Chief Trevor Hampton Thursday declined comment, other than to say that Hopkins submitted his resignation Wednesday, and that it is effective July 31.

Martin Says Any Referendum On Roads Should Include Bonds

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Gov. Jim Martin said he won't favor a referendum on the $8.6 billion highway bill unless a bond issue is attached, saying there is no precedent for statewide votes on tax bills.

The highway package would increase the gasoline and auto sales taxes and levy several fees to finance a major road-building package. Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, has said he wants to put the bill on the ballot, but Martin said Rauch was looking for ways to kill the measure.

"I don't want to play games with this," Martin said Thursday at his weekly news conference.

Martin said he did not object to another Rauch proposal — rescinding the tax and fee increases after the massive highway program is completed — but said it would not be practical to set a specific "sunset" date because the program might take longer than anticipated.

Martin also vowed to fight a proposal by Senate Democrats to shift $335 million from planned highway construction to pay raises for teachers and state employees.

"We've got what looks like a real war on our hands," Martin said.

"I'm not raiding the highway fund," Rauch said. "You give me my choice of education or potholes, and I'm for education. We are going to do both."

On another subject, Martin voiced concern over reports that two North Carolina projects are involved in a congressional probe of possible improprieties in awarding federal subsidies for housing rehabilitation.

The governor said he had never intervened with the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development on anyone's behalf to obtain federal money. One of the North Carolina developers who sought grants for a Raleigh project is an active Republican who donated $3,000 to Martin's 1988 re-election campaign.

"I'm not going to try to cover for somebody," Martin said. "Nor will I try to get HUD to award a grant to anybody, contributor or non-contributor."

The News and Observer of Raleigh reported Thursday that projects in Raleigh and Gastonia are included in an audit of a HUD program designed to upgrade troubled housing projects for low- and medium-income tenants.

The audit has led to a congressional investigation of whether some Republicans with close ties to the Reagan administration were awarded subsidies for political reasons.

According to the newspaper, Max Barbour, a developer and Martin contributor, helped obtain certificates to rehabilitate a 150-unit complex in Raleigh. The certificates eventually were divided among other projects when the Raleigh City Council declined to authorize the 150-unit project.

Martin Rejects Teachers' Invitation To Attend Raleigh Pay Raise Rally

By Martha Waggoner THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — It appears Gov. Jim Martin's relationship with the state's largest teachers organization is growing further apart.

Martin, in a curt letter Thursday to the president of the North Carolina Association of Educators, declined an invitation to a rally set for today, when teachers are expected to urge legislators to give them a higher pay raise than the governor has proposed.

The letter is the latest in what has become a contentious fight between Martin and the NCAE over salaries and the governor's efforts to implement a career-ladder system of merit pay.

NCAE President Karen Garr said Thursday that teachers wanted to thank Martin for his support of a 1 percent increase in the sales tax to support higher teacher salaries and of voluntary, rather than mandatory, implementation of the career ladder for teachers.

"I'm surprised, and I think there is a misunderstanding on the governor's part about the intention of our rally and our intention in inviting him," Ms. Garr said.

Martin has said he continues to support statewide implementation of the career ladder program for teachers, which is now a pilot program in 16 school systems. But he has said during negotiations with legislators that he also would support allowing school systems to volunteer for the program.

In a letter to Ms. Garr, Martin said he had two reasons for declining the invitation.

"First, I have previous commitments that afternoon to speak at assemblies at Boys State and Girls State and would not want to miss those obligations.

"Second, even if the day were free and clear, I would not want to lend support to the approach your organization has been taking on the pay issue."

Martin said the General Assembly has struggled to unfreeze the pay scale and fund a 6 percent pay raise and he "would think your leadership would try to show some appreciation. Instead, you express resentment and a demand for 10 percent (pay raise)."

Martin said he would continue work with legislative leaders in support of his career ladder program, which he said promotes a 6 percent pay increase, classroom evaluations and promotions for better teachers.

"I do hope your continued tactics will not cause legislators to tire of the ungrateful controversy, or cool off their commitment to 'better pay for better teachers,'" Martin said.

At least 6,000 teachers are expected at the rally, which will be held at Dorton Arena at the N.C. State Fairgrounds, Ms. Garr said. Scheduled to speak are Rep. Dave Diamond, D-Surry, chairman of the House Appropriations and the only legislator who's a teacher, and Mary Futrell, president of the National Educators' Association.

Ms. Garr said the confusion could have occurred because she delivered the invitation on the phone to someone in the governor's office rather than Martin himself.

She didn't know about the governor's reaction until Thursday afternoon, she said.

"I was in a meeting until about 3:30 p.m. and there was this letter in my chair, hand-delivered from the governor's office. I looked on my desk and I had this stack of pink slips (messages) from press people. ... Then I opened the hand-delivered letter."

David Prather, a spokesman for Martin, said he found it "very difficult to believe" that teachers want to thank the governor.

"There's been no indication of this sort in the rhetoric that Ms. Garr has used in characterizing the governor's position," he said. "... I would think if she had had that in mind when she called, she would have told the governor's staff person that that was what she had in mind."

The NCAE "has been in opposition to the governor's plans (for teachers) since he first espoused them," Prather said.

Ms. Garr said she hoped to talk with the governor about the invitation, and Prather said he intended to tell Martin about the NCAE's response.

Etheridge Says Realigned DPI Effectively 'Slimmer, Leaner'

By Laura Grimmer THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The state superintendent is getting close to the number of people he wants working in the Department of Public Instruction, but Bob Etheridge has refused to pinpoint how many other reductions he may undertake.

The massive restructuring of the department was the first step toward improving North Carolina schools, Etheridge said Thursday.

"Things will go a little slowly at first," Etheridge said. "But they'll be up and running at full speed soon. Our main goal is to help the school children in this state. Now we can start doing that effectively."

Etheridge promised when he came to the office in January he would make the department more streamlined.

"And we've done it," he said. "We're slimmer, leaner. The process of reorganization allows us to be as effective as we possibly can be."

Etheridge cut the top administrative staff by almost two-thirds — from 70 to 24 — and completely did away with 12 deputy superintendent, associate superintendent and assistant deputy superintendent positions.

The state auditor's office finished a study of the department last month, making recommendations about what positions might be eliminated and where personnel might be better suited.

The decision to move people to different divisions was based on attrition, and other personnel changes were achieved through retirement, Etheridge said.

"We've moved some folks around where they can use their skills better," he said. "Now it's going to be easier for those people who have committed their lives to education in North Carolina" to get their jobs done.

W. Glenn Keever, the new director of the Division of Communication Services, said the fewer number of people in the top management positions, the better it will be for state schools.

"I think the biggest thing that will happen is it's going to be easier to communicate," Keever said. "There aren't as many people trying to get the superintendent's attention."

"We're a lot leaner," he said. "But this is a more coordinated approach to serving the schools."

Under the new plan, Etheridge will have one deputy superintendent and five assistant superintendents.

The number of divisions within the agency has been slashed from 49 to a minimum of 17, all reporting to the assistant superintendents.

"We brought new people into some management slots," Etheridge said. "And we've had positive reactions from within the divisions."

When he came into the office at the beginning of this year, there were more than 1,000 positions within the agency. And as soon as the new changes go into effect July 1, Etheridge said, the total number will be 936.

Keever said the new department will save taxpayers' money.

"It's got to save money because now there are less employees, less people in the top echelons," Keever said.

But salaries still need to be fixed, he said. Keever said the department is waiting for the office at state personnel to evaluate the new jobs and recommend a set of salaries.

And the public school systems across the state shouldn't really be that affected by the new administrative changes, Etheridge said.

"We shared all our documents and ideas with the school superintendents before making any definite decisions," he said. "We've taken everything and everyone's opinions into consideration. Everyone has had an opportunity to comment on the changes."

"We're going to accelerate making improvements for the state's school children now that the groundwork is laid," he said.

Edmisten Seeking Enforcement Power

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Secretary of State Rufus Edmisten is pushing a package of bills in the General Assembly that would give his office expanded law enforcement powers, but some legislators worry that he's trying to create his own police force.

Edmisten, a former attorney general, wants more investigators with greater powers to fight securities and commodities fraud.

"When you look at all three of these bills together, you are creating another totally independent law enforcement agency solely responsible to the secretary of state," said Sen. Jim Johnson, R-Cabarrus. "It's investing far more authority and power in the secretary of state to accomplish what we have law-enforcement officers already in place to do."

One proposal would allow the secretary of state's office to hire securities agents with the power "to arrest and take other investigatory and enforcement actions for any criminal offense." The office administers state laws protecting investors from fraud, and also licenses brokerage firms.

Two other bills would give general law-enforcement powers, including the power of arrest, to investigators created under new laws regulating commodities traders and sports agents.

The Secretary of State's Office, should continue to conduct criminal investigations in concert with the state Attorney General's Office and the State Bureau of Investigation, rather than authorize new officers, said Sen. Bill Barker, D-Pamlico. "As a matter of public policy, I am opposed to any Council of State officer having his own private police force," Barker said.

Edmisten said that the bills are being revised to limit enforcement powers to the specific laws that apply to his office.

"You need to have an investigation contained in one spot with the same people having the arrest powers," Edmisten said in an interview. "We are the securities experts. It's simply a matter of efficiency. It has nothing to do with anyone trying to build an empire."

Panel Deletes Taxes On Alcohol From Bill For Homeless

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The issue of raising taxes on beer and wine became more cloudy as a state House committee staggered between a desire to bring in money and proposals on how to spend it.

In the end, the Human Resources Commission agreed Thursday to remove the wine-tax provisions from a bill to provide money for the homeless. The panel was poised to remove the beer-tax increase from a second bill, leaving in sections to spend the money on education and mental health centers dealing with alcoholism and substance abuse.

Rep. Coy Privette, R-Cabarrus, had linked the issues in his bills, saying drinking wine contributes to homelessness and drinking beer contributes to alcoholism. But legislative rules make it difficult to make a policy statement without invading the turf of finance and appropriations panels.

The Human Resources Committee was in an awkward position because tax bills are the purview of the Finance Committee and spending bills generally go to the Appropriations Committee. And linking a tax with its spending has long been frowned upon by legislative leaders.

"This committee can't appropriate," said Rep. Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe. He said bills like Privette's have been proliferating and can be "terribly harmful" to the appropriations process.

"I don't believe that this is a finance committee," added Rep. Beverly Perdue, D-Craven.

However, it was with considerable grumbling that the panel agreed to delete the wine tax and simply seek $3.8 million for the homeless.

"I think we have a duty as the people of this state to make sure we don't have homeless people dying on the streets next winter," said Nesbitt, who added, "This won't do one-hundredth of what we need to do."

A similar fate awaits the beer-tax bill. Privette said doubling the excise tax to 10 cents per can would bring in $66 million. He hoped to earmark $22 million for such projects and alcohol education in the public schools and local mental health centers that deal with alcoholism.

Rep. Charles Cromer, R-Davidson, suggested deleting all the funding directions, saying all the money should go to the general fund to help avert a "1-cent sales tax that there are very few of us in favor of."

Rep. Charlotte Gardner, R-Rowan, argued that the money should be earmarked to ensure equal funding for those mental health centers that fall below the state average. But the committee approved Cromer's amendment.

That left the committee with a tax bill containing no Human Resources impact. Rep. Jack Hunt, D-Cleveland, said the rules required that it be sent to the Finance Committee without approval or disapproval of its contents.

But Nesbitt suggested it would be wiser to approve only the appropriations provisions, saying the tax was simple enough for the Finance Committee to adopt by itself. He offered a proposal to simply ask the Appropriations Committee to spend $22 million as directed under Privette's original bill.

Cromer opposed the move, saying it was important that "problem-causing commodities pay for the problems that they cause."

The committee adjourned before final action could be taken on Nesbitt's plan.

Privette said he would put together a finance bill containing both the wine tax and the beer tax and have it sent to the Finance Committee.

"There will be another piece of legislation coming to provide the revenues for this," he promised.

Under Privette's plan, the tax on table wine would increase from 21 cents per liter to 25 cents. The tax on high-alcohol fortified wine would go from 24 cents per liter to 50 cents.

State Panel Voids Restrictive Pacts

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Applicants for jobs protected by the State Personnel Act can no longer be forced to sign an employment contract binding them to specific jobs, under a rule adopted Thursday by the State Personnel Commission.

The new rule, which also strikes down existing contracts, applies to all state agencies and universities.

It was prompted by Labor Commissioner John C. Brooks' policy of requiring some employees to sign contracts binding them to their jobs for up to three years.

Brooks was in Michigan on business Thursday. He sent the commission a 24-page statement supporting his policy.

Such contracts save the state money, he said, by requiring employees to stay at their jobs a reasonable time so the state can recoup the cost of training them.

"The growing problem which gives rise to the need for having written employment contracts is the fact that, increasingly, many employees feel no commitment to their jobs," Brooks said in the statement.

Richard V. Lee, the state personnel director, told the commission that training is a cost of doing business.

"Every agency, every employer, everybody that hires anybody who doesn't know the job has to train them," he said. "It's a gamble you run, whether they're going to stay with you or not. If you're a good employer and pay right and treat the people right, they're probably going to stay with you."

Assistant Labor Commissioner Charles N. Jeffress, who attended the meeting as Brooks' representative, said he had no comment on the personnel commission's decision. He said about 30 or 35 of approximately 275 employees of the state Labor Department are under contract.

S.C. Halts Planned Test Of Rabies Vaccine, Cites Threat To Humans

By Malcolm Gladwell
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — The first major experiment aimed at combatting rabies in wild animals was blocked Thursday by health officials in South Carolina, who said that questions about risks to human health and to the environment were still unresolved.

The proposed trial would involve releasing genetically altered viruses on two uninhabited islands off the South Carolina coast. The viruses, a modified version of a type that can infect humans and which may cause encephalitis in rare instances, are part of an oral vaccine intended to be eaten by raccoons.

The experiment had been endorsed as safe by federal regulators and a wide range of scientists involved in rabies research, who view the vaccine as one of the most promising weapons in battling a disease that costs the United States hundreds of millions of dollars a year and which has already reached epidemic proportions in some parts of the country.

But health officials in South Carolina, who have final say on any experiments conducted within their jurisdiction, have three times this spring turned down requests from Philadelphia's Wistar Institute, which developed the vaccine, to begin the trial, saying that the group had not adequately proven that the vaccine posed no risk to humans, if they became exposed to it during the course of the experiment.

The rejection went against the recommendations of the U.S. Department of Agriculture that the test be permitted to go ahead. The South Carolina officials said more review of the vaccine's safety was needed.

"We may be in the minority on this, but that doesn't bother me a bit," said John Brown, chairman of the state's biotechnology committee. "We happen to hold the primary responsibility for South Carolina."

The decision means that Wistar scientists must wait at least until next year to begin testing of their vaccine. The institute also has an application before Virginia authorities to conduct an experiment on an island off the Virginia coast, but approval for that test is still pending, and may not come in time to allow a trial to begin this summer.

"I'm not aware of any risks with this research. The risks are a figment of people's imagination," said John Hopkins University public health professor Harvey Fischman, one of a number of rabies researchers angered by the South Carolina decision. "There is no way that this vaccine can get into people or get into animals. . . But this is a vaccine which has the opportunity of attempting to control the rabies in wildlife. The benefits are enormous."

The Wistar vaccine was developed seven years ago, in response to the failure of traditional vaccination methods to control the wildlife rabies problem.

Conventional rabies vaccines contain strains of the rabies virus itself which have been modified so as not to cause disease. To the immune system, however, they look like a live virus and the immune system develops antibodies to attack the virus. But public health officials have considered the vaccines unacceptable because the use of a live virus, even if weakened, still carries a slight risk of causing the disease it is intended to prevent.

The Wistar approach avoids that problem. It contains a virus used for years in Europe as smallpox vaccine, the Copenhagen vaccinia virus. One gene from the rabies virus has been spliced into the virus's genes. This causes the virus to make a protein that the rabies virus makes and which stimulates the immune system to make antibodies.

The vaccine contains no genes that can cause rabies. The result is an unusually safe vaccine and also one potent enough that if placed in baits and eaten by wild animals it can inoculate them successfully against the disease. Laboratory tests have already proven this.

The problem is that Copenhagen vaccinia virus has been associated with side-effects of its own, notably encephalitis. South Carolina officials feared the virus might get into people.

Wistar officials say they are baffled by the South Carolina objections. Even if the vaccine did pose a threat, they say it is not clear how human beings would be exposed to it, unless they were to visit the islands, which are uninhabited, and eat the baits containing the vaccine, which are said to be so foul smelling that they appeal to raccoons and little else.

In any case, scientists familiar with the vaccine say that clinical data demonstrates that the steps taken to modify the strain — including the act of adding new genetic material — have stripped it of any potential for adverse side effects. In the process of adding the rabies protein to the Copenhagen vaccinia, for example, a key component of the vaccinia virus, called the thymidine kinase gene, is inactivated.

"That is the gene that leads to unnecessary virulence," said Enzo Paoletti, a virus expert at the New York State Department of Health in Albany. "Once you inactivate the function of that gene, the virus is no longer capable of causing encephalitis."

Navy Report Cites Wasted 'Treasure'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The ocean floor is full of sunken treasure from old military ships that have been blown up as targets or sunken as artificial reefs, an investigative report says.

Although there may be no doubloons or pieces of eight in the newest denizens of Davy Jones' Locker, $17 million in recoverable goods has been destroyed on board 24 ships sunk in recent years as reefs or in target practice, the report by the Navy's inspector general said.

An additional $40 million will be lost unless something is done to salvage items from 64 vessels that now await a similar fate, it said.

There are, in fact, "significant amounts" of gold and silver — to be salvaged from communi-tions and code equipment, the report says.

Mostly the wasted goods consist of power tools such as lathes, drill presses, band saws, pumps and office and electronic equipment.

Inspectors also said there were operating room and dental equipment, including sterilizers; air conditioners and ice machines; silverware; radios and teletypes; new mattresses, still in plastic bags; and numerous spare parts.

"The Navy has been derelict in the proper management of the public property under its control," the report concluded.

Rep. William Broomfield, R-Mich., who released the report, introduced legislation on Thursday to permit outside contractors to reclaim scrap items from such ships. They would apply for the right to salvage items under sealed bids, Broomfield said.

"America may be the most wealthy nation in the world, but we are not so wealthy that we can afford to dump millions of dollars worth of sophisticated equipment to the bottom of the ocean floor," he said in a statement.

The Navy continues to buy some of the same items it has wasted, the inspector general's report said, and "has ignored the possibility of re-use."

In a response, the service said it is "reviewing the report to determine any appropriate action. This will include reviewing the cost estimates of the unrecovered materials, plus the associated recovery costs, equipment condition and applicability to current needs."

The Navy added that it "also plans to review its instructions governing the process and procedures for inactivating and stripping ships."

The internal investigation was prompted by a complaint from William R. Justen, whose Stuart, Fla., company had been hired to sink an old Navy ship under the artificial reef program.

Justen complained that some $300,000 worth of reusable items were on the vessel, but he was unable to salvage them because of the time constraints of his contract. He told the Navy that he was aware of other, similar cases, as well.

The inspector general found confusion in the handling of decommissioned ships and few clear provisions for salvage.

U.S. Will Continue Dealing With Deng

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The United States still can do business with Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping despite his military crackdown and the massacre of hundreds — perhaps thousands — of people, a senior Bush administration official says.

The U.S. position as outlined Thursday by the senior administration official went far beyond public pronouncements from the White House or State Department.

President Bush has been reluctant to affix blame for China's bloodshed but has said it would be "extraordinarily difficult" for the United States to have normal relations with officials responsible for the massacre of students and workers participating in pro-democracy protests.

However, the administration official, a top policymaker in Bush's inner circle, said U.S. ties with China involve "a very important relationship with a very important country."

Despite the crackdown, the official said, "China has come a long way since 1972" when Washington re-established ties with Beijing. The official called China "a great important country in the world, and we have great stakes there."

"I think they have made a decision that they're going to restore order and that they're going to try to re-discipline the system," the official said. "It is not so clear that they have made a major reversal in course and will not resume a path like they were on before. I think it's premature to make that decision."

The official, who spoke with four reporters on the condition of anonymity, appeared open to continued contacts with Deng, China's senior leader, who has praised the military for its bloody assault against Chinese citizens.

"He is the head of a very major country. There are lots of heads of government and state who do things that we don't like that we do business with," the official said.

"Are you suggesting we should not have done any business with (Soviet leaders Nikita) Khrushchev, (Leonid) Brezhnev, anybody who has done anything wrong?" the official asked.

Saying it was premature to say China has abandoned reforms, the official added, "It is not so clear that they have made a major reversal in course and will not resume a path like they were on before."

'Winners' Don't Like Settlement

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — Kraft's efforts to appease winners in its botched "Ready to Roll" game aren't winning over everybody.

"I don't mean to sound greedy, but the settlement offer is kind of skimpy and it's a far cry from what was being offered," says Larry Bernstein, who matched game pieces for a $17,000 van.

Bernstein was one of an estimated several hundred people who matched game pieces for a Dodge Caravan in a contest designed to have only one van winner. Kraft on Thursday offered those winners $250 and a special drawing for four vans.

"I'm not really too pleased," he said. "You're talking $17,000 versus $250. I suspect lots of people will want to go ahead with the lawsuits."

At least two class-action lawsuits have been filed against the company.

The suburban Chicago-based company, known formally as Kraft General Foods Group of Philip Morris Cos., also offered to make up for the mistake by quadrupling the number of prizes and giving away cash to all winners. The company is not saying what caused the foul-up.

The promotion was run only in the Chicago and Houston metropolitan areas. The contest required consumers to match left halves of a pictured van contained in specially marked packages of Kraft Singles cheese with right halves appearing in coupons in Sunday newspaper advertisements.

Bernstein wasn't the only one banking at the deal.

"I look at it this way," said Sharon LaMont, who also had matched game pieces for a van. "If they had cheese on sale for $1.39 and I offered to buy it for 14 cents, do you think they'd let me have it?"

The Skokie resident joined one of the class-action lawsuits.

"We have five secretaries just taking the calls," said attorney Burton Weinstein, who filed a lawsuit. He said his firm is representing at least 300 people.

Diana Redmond, a Rockford resident who hasn't decided whether to join the lawsuit, said a drawing that included everyone who matched game pieces for the van wouldn't be fair.

In addition to the van, Kraft had planned to award 100 bicycles, 500 skateboards and 8,000 packages of cheese.

Congress Calls 'Robin Hud' To Testify In HUD Scandal

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Congress today begins investigating the second scandal to surface in as many months at the Department of Housing and Urban Development, and legislators say they don't expect it will be the last.

The department's inspector general, Paul Adams, and a private escrow agent nicknamed "Robin Hud" by investigators are scheduled to testify before the House subcommittee on housing and employment about the diversion of millions of dollars from HUD's property-sales program.

"I would be surprised if this would be the end of the revelations," subcommittee chairman Tom Lantos, D-Calif., said.

Last week four senior HUD employees in the Washington, D.C. field office were placed on administrative leave after HUD investigators found escrow agents may have embezzled as much as $10 million through the program without being noticed.

Marilyn Harrell, dubbed "Robin Hud," has admitted to investigators that she failed to forward at least $5.5 million to HUD for sale of houses whose HUD-insured mortgages were foreclosed. Harrell says she donated much of the money to charitable projects to provide housing for the poor.

Washington authorities also want to question Earl Martin, an attorney who has been missing for about a year about the disappearance of another $3 million.

Another agent has been indicted by a federal grand jury in Fort Worth, Texas, on charges of stealing $2.5 million from the sales of 55 homes in the Dallas area.

"It appears that HUD monitored these settlement agents with the same vigilance Exxon used in watching over the skippers of its tankers," said Lantos, comparing former HUD Secretary Samuel Pierce's tenure at the agency to the recent Alaska oil spill.

HUD Secretary Jack Kemp reportedly has ordered all 53 field offices to conduct reviews and give an accounting for all proceeds from the sales of the agency's property.

On Thursday, Attorney General Dick Thornburgh also ordered federal prosecutors to examine the property-sales programs for evidence of criminal fraud and embezzlement.

HUD already is reeling from allegations of mismanagement, favoritism and influence-peddling in the administration of a rehabilitation program to renovate housing for the nation's poor.

Lantos decided to proceed with hearings on the property-sales program despite Adams' objections they might endanger the agency's probe.

"I rarely find that it jeopardizes an investigation, particularly if you're not granting use immunity," said subcommittee member Christopher Shays, R-Conn.

"The more we investigate the more we uncover. It just doesn't seem to end."

House OKs Bush Bailout For S&Ls

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The administration is hailing the House version of savings and loan bailout legislation as a major victory for taxpayers after the resounding defeat of an attempt to weaken President Bush's key reform proposal.

Shortly before 11 p.m. Thursday, the House capped a 13-hour session by voting 320-97 to solve the worst financial crisis since the Depression with the most expensive government bailout in history. It will cost, according to the congressional General Accounting Office, $285 billion over 30 years — $157 billion of that from taxpayers.

The legislation also includes a series of what Bush has labeled "never again" provisions. In what the president identified as the heart of his proposal, it requires S&L owners to risk more of their own money in a capital cushion between S&L losses and the government deposit insurance fund.

"The American taxpayers won a major victory today when the House of Representatives voted for strong, tangible capital requirements for the nation's savings and loans," Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady said in a statement.

"We applaud the House leadership for moving this bill rapidly through the House," said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

The House action paves the way for a conference early next month with the Senate, which passed its S&L bill in April, and for final enactment before Congress goes on vacation in August.

The sharpest conflict between the two chambers will likely be on their funding plans. The Senate would allow Bush to keep some S&L spending out of the budget deficit through a plan to sell bonds through a new quasi-private agency. But the Democratic-dominated House would swell the deficit by $44 billion, increasing pressure on the administration to agree to a tax increase, in a bid to cut long-term interest costs.

IRS Finds Hidden Tips

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Waiters at a well-known downtown restaurant thought they were making pretty good tips until the IRS started checking out the tabs.

Checking just the credit card receipts for meals served by nine waiters at the Palm Restaurant, the Internal Revenue Service found that the nine failed to report nearly $145,000 in combined tip income for each year between 1982 and 1985.

As a result, the nine were charged with filing a false income tax return. Eight of them pleaded guilty to one count each, and on Thursday they were sentenced to serve nights and weekends at a community correctional institute for up to four months.

They also will have to pay back taxes, interest and penalties.

"This is probably the saddest day of my entire life," said Joseph P. Levaca, one of the waiters. "I want to apologize to the court and keep my job so I can pay back this debt."

He and the other four waiters who still work at the Palm will be able to continue doing so while serving their sentences.

The ninth defendant, who now lives in California, also has pleaded guilty and will be sentenced later.

According to a pre-trial statement from prosecutors, the waiters were reporting annual income ranging from $7,100 to $52,000 a year while really earning $27,000 to $67,000. This did not include meals paid for in cash.

Bennett Suggests Beheading Pushers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Drug czar William Bennett says that beheading some kinds of drug dealers would be a "morally" fitting punishment although difficult to implement under the American system of justice.

Bennett, interviewed Thursday on the "Larry King Live" television program on Cable News Network, said, "We are not doing enough that is morally proportionate to the nature of the offense."

His remarks were prompted by a caller's question, "why not behead the ... dealers?" as the law calls for in some Middle Eastern countries.

"What the caller suggests is morally plausible," Bennett said. "It's legally difficult."

Bennett, who is director of the Office of National Drug Control Policy, said, "Morally, I don't have any problem with that at all."

"Ask most Americans if they saw someone on the streets selling drugs to their kids, what they would feel morally justified in doing — tear them (the sellers) limb from limb," Bennett said.

Ministers Change Posts

Two changes involving area ministers were made this week at the North Carolina Conference of the United Methodist Church in Fayetteville. The Rev. Caswell Shaw Jr. of St. James United Methodist Church in Greenville has been appointed district superintendent to the Rocky Mount District. The Rev. William Haddock Jr. has been moved from the Maury-Mount Herman Church, Greenville, to Mebane in the Burlington district. The changes are effective July 1. Assignments to the Greenville churches will be made at the conference, which ends Sunday. Also at the conference, Charity Holland of Queen Street United Methodist Church in Kinston was named Greenville district lay person of the year.

Conference Urges Active Evangelism

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

An international, interdenominational conference sees expanded openings for religious activity in the world and calls on Christians everywhere to proclaim "the good news of God's redeeming love." They also were urged to help those struggling for justice and to share the Earth's resources equitably. These points highlighted the message of the 10th World Conference on Mission and Evangelism, involving about 700 Christians of most denominations in 100 countries, including a 48-member Roman Catholic contingent. Sponsored by the World Council of Churches and held about every nine years, the weeklong meeting that ended June 1 in San Antonio was the first of its kind in the United States. "Christ is still suffering in many parts of the world," the conference declared, calling for "solidarity and action" in behalf of those in "anguish and pain." The conference, which got little attention in the American press while it was going on, also cited "signs of renewal," particularly the "new opportunity for religious expression in many socialist countries." Without naming those countries, the conference added that the "Holy Spirit of Truth, Freedom, Communion and Justice is at work today in different parts of the world." The conference dealt gingerly with some sensitive subjects, such as relations to other faiths, and proselytism among denominations.

JOHN

This is a dramatized version of facts taken from the Book of Joshua, intending to show some of the customs of these ancient and traditional times.

OTHNIEL'S TRIUMPH

OTHNIEL, LEADING THE WARRIORS OF JUDAH, IS INTENT ON TAKING THE CITY OF KIR-JATH-SE-PHER, THE LAST STRONGHOLD OF THE GIANTS...

THE LORD HATH NOT LED US THIS FAR ONLY TO TURN AWAY FROM US NOW!

OTHNIEL! HOW LONG WILT THOU KEEP US HERE BEFORE ATTACKING? THE SUN BEATS FERCELY ON THE MEN AND WEAKENS THEM!

THAT IS OUR ANSWER!

THE SUN IN THE SKIES SHALL BE OUR ALLY!

AND NOW OTHNIEL GATHERS HIS MEN IN LONG RANKS AND, AS HE PASSES BEFORE THEM, HE PICKS OUT CERTAIN MEN!

Baptists Back Abortion Limits

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
 LAS VEGAS — Southern Baptists wrapped up their first stay in this gambling city by urging states to enact legislation restricting abortions except to save the mother's life.
 The nation's largest Protestant body also approved resolutions Thursday condemning past racism within its ranks and calling for an end to happy hours at taverns throughout the nation.

 The resolutions were approved at the end of the three-day Southern Baptist Convention that attracted 20,423 delegates.
 Baptist officials said it was the sixth largest Baptist convention in 132 years, despite fears that many would stay away because of concerns over the Sin City image of Las Vegas and its distance from traditional Baptist strongholds.
 The convention rejected arguments that abortions should be permitted in cases of rape or incest or if the fetus is severely deformed.
 One delegate objected that the resolution would call for abortion laws that require "moral heroism."
 "We do though want to say we do not want to victimize the child in the womb because evil things have happened to bring that child into the world," said Mark Coppenger, chairman of the denomination's Committee on Resolutions.
 The resolution noted that a U.S. Supreme Court decision is pending that may reopen the possibility of broader state restrictions on abortion.
 It also reaffirmed the support of the 14.8 million-member denomination for a constitutional amendment to prohibit abortion except to prevent the imminent death of the mother.

The convention, formed in 1845 in a dispute with Northern Baptists over slavery, said in a resolution on racism that the denomination repents of past bigotry. It called for members and churches "to reach across racial boundaries, establishing fraternal rather than paternal friendships."

NEW YORK — Hey men, how about a green sack suit and purple tie for your fall wardrobe? Then take it a step further and button the top two buttons on the jacket.

Shades of Pee Wee Herman? Nerd city? Not at all, according to the Men's Fashion Association, a consortium of clothiers formed to promote their designs.

"The fashion color for the season is some shade of green," says Chip Tolbert, MFA fashion director. "Green as a ground color or as an accent color. And it can be anything between moss and sage."

Today's sack suit is broad at the chest, has a ventless back and three variations of the button: traditional top closure, contemporary middle closure and the forward-looking version with the three buttons lower on the jacket and the top two buttoned.

Another corporate look for fall, conservative yet stylish, is the double-breasted suit in the traditional grays and navys. Look for a fuchsia or jade stripe and rich fabrics such as cashmere, wool and wool blends.

One version of a three-piece suit is a brown Lanvin with a camel vest.

Tolbert says sweater vests and V-necks, particularly pullovers, will be strong. He says patterned V-necks look particularly good with polo shirts and crew necks. Look for all-cotton as well as angora, cashmere and mohair. Pair them with corduroy, leather or denim pants.

"Anything denim," says Tolbert, goes for activewear. Pair it with the Navajo or southwestern look. Comstock put Navajo rug panels on the front of its jeans jacket. Other denims were fringed, leather trimmed or fleece lined.

Canvas, waxed cotton and oiled leather are good bets for rugged outerwear. For the corporate look in outerwear, the Chesterfield coat is back.

Formal wear is fun. Try a satin shawl collar on a one-button double-breasted tuxedo. Or a tux dressed up with a white cotton pique vest, a white fly-front shirt and no tie. Paul Samuel, a young designer from Seattle, put a braided collar and waistband on his wool crepe tuxedo. Wear it with a black wing-collar shirt, and again no tie.

Now about that purple power tie. Tie widths for fall are 3½ to 4 inches. Fabrics are silks and jacquards. Patterns are bold. And the color range is wide.

"Purple takes on a fresh look," says Tolbert, "when combined with any number of colorations."

Afternoon Ceremony Joins Two In Kinston

KINSTON — Janet Lee Puryear and Ronnie Dale Tilghman of Winterville were married in an afternoon ceremony Saturday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dalton Harris, aunt and uncle of the bride.

Wedding music was presented by pianist Connie Harris. The wedding was directed by Diane Bennett of Greenville.

The bride is the daughter of Robert and Barbara Puryear of Bethel. Jean Harris and John Tilghman of Kinston are parents of the bridegroom.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a tea-length gown of imported lace over ivory satin. It had a sweetheart neckline, full length sleeves and satin bows. The basque waistline extended into a circular skirt. She wore a fingertip veil attached to a crown of ivory satin enhanced with pearls.

Donna Puryear Adams of Washington, N.C., sister of the bride, was maid of honor and bridesmaid was Misty L. McLawhorn, daughter of the bride. Both wore tea-length gowns of mauve satin and carried bouquets of yellow and white daisies interspersed with satin ribbons. Danielle Saunders, daughter of the bride, was flower girl and wore a tea-length gown of ivory satin.

The ring bearer was Richard Harris of Kinston, nephew of the bridegroom. William C. Adams of Washington, N.C., brother-in-law of the bridegroom, was best man and usher was Dwayne Puryear of Bethel, brother-in-law of the bridegroom.

The mother of the bride wore a pastel green dress and the mother of the bridegroom wore a pastel blue dress. Both wore corsages of white carnations. Hazel Harris, grandmother of the bridegroom, also wore a white corsage.

A reception was given by the parents of the bridegroom.

Several showers were given for the couple before their wedding.

MRS. TILGHMAN

The bride is employed by Harris Supermarket and the bridegroom is employed by the City of Greenville. The couple will live in Winterville. A wedding trip is planned for a later date.

Greeting Card Glut Floods Stores

By Marybeth Nibley
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Father's Day card browsers face a seemingly endless choice of saccharin-sweet love messages and bad-taste zingers this year, tailored to senders ranging from first-born children to adoptees.

The card glut reflects an effort by makers to capitalize on the time-strapped consumer's quest for convenience. They're turning out more types of cards and cramming them into store space approaching saturation.

If you look past the Father's Day racks, the categories go far beyond run-of-the-mill anniversaries, birthdays, baptisms and bar mitzvahs.

The holiday lineup has lengthened into a string spanning more days of the calendar. Christmas, Valentine's Day, Mother's Day, Easter, Father's Day, Halloween and Thanksgiving are the leaders. But Sweetest Day, Mothers-in-law Day and Boss's Day are getting space too.

No occasion is too obscure or private. Safe-sex friendship cards warn about the dangers of AIDS. Conventional get-well messages now include versions for the terminally ill.

One company recently unveiled a faxable greeting card, betting that use of facsimile machines will get trendier than it already is.

In their zeal to satisfy every taste and circumstance, card companies seem determined to make sure no one ever fumbles for words.

Card sending may be a widely held habit partly because many people simply don't know how to express their thoughts in writing, officials of the $3 billion-a-year card industry say.

Nonetheless, they're not taking any chances on missing a market of literate card senders. Many supply artwork-adorned versions with empty space for customers who have the time and inclination to write their own.

Most buyers probably jot down a thought or two anyway, supplementing the generic sentiments, but even so some may feel guilty as they span the racks for something to send.

Commentator Andy Rooney has put his feelings about greeting cards this way: "Why are we buying someone else's words to convey supposedly intimate sentiments? Doesn't anyone just sit down with a blank piece of paper anymore and write a simple note to someone on a special occasion?"

More often than not, the answer is no.

Industry analyst E. Gray Glass III of Prudential-Bache Securities Inc. says consumers seem to be clamoring for alternative cards that are becoming more plentiful.

These non-occasion cards, appropriate any day, are part of the industry push to develop new card-sending opportunities.

"That's going to have the effect of expanding the per capita sending of cards," says Glass. "Cards are also impulse purchases so the idea is that you should have as many types of cards available on the market as possible."

Marianne McDermott, executive vice president of the Greeting Card Association, says consumers have become more demanding in choosing cards and makers have reacted nimbly to social change, creating a card-choice explosion.

Kitchen Is Most Talkative Place For Little Children

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — Adults have long enjoyed food and conversation, and now there's some evidence that the combination works well for children just learning to talk.

Lucia French, an early-learning expert at the University of Rochester, is studying the conversations of tiny talkers and has found that young children do some of their best conversing in the kitchen.

"Conversational skills are crucial to a child's later success in school and society," says French, an associate professor at the university's Graduate School of Education and Human Development.

After observing many conversations between young children in preschool settings, French and fellow researchers noticed that in all cases the longest and most complex conversations took place in the kitchen corner rather than in other play areas.

Even children who had not yet learned to talk had extensive non-verbal interactions in the kitchen corner, where they exchanged plates and mimed eating, she found.

"Often, their first words were an attempt to name imaginary food that they pretended was on the plate," she says, "or what they wanted to have on the plate. The 2½-year-olds used language to describe more complex kitchen activities such as preparing and serving pancakes."

The reason that kitchen settings stimulate conversation appears to be simple: Preparing and eating food is an activity familiar to every child, and the kitchen setting gives children something in common to talk about.

In contrast, French points out, "In the block corner, children have to work hard to create the shared knowledge that constitutes communication." For example, a child has to interpret his playmate's intent in building and knocking down blocks. But actions like stirring imaginary food in a pan are easy to interpret.

"In this situation, they use language to accompany rather than explain their play," she says. "Because it is easier for them to use language in this setting, they get more practice in conversation."

French also has found that at a certain point in a child's development, conversations with peers spur language development more effectively than adult-child conversations.

The 'Family' No Longer Exists

Dear Abby: I have been divorced from my first husband for five years, and am now happily married to another man.

My problem is my niece (by marriage to my first husband) — I will call her Melanie. She is 17 years old and still keeps in touch with me. Melanie has been calling me with a rather strange request. She wants me to arrange a "family portrait" to include me and my ex-husband, who is her mother's brother. In that picture she wants her own mother and father, who are now divorced and both living with other mates, and herself!

Melanie has been begging me to round up these people and arrange for a studio portrait. When I asked her what her mother (my ex-sister-in-law) thought about this idea, she said, "She said she would be rather uncomfortable with the idea, but she would do it if you would."

Abby, I am not comfortable with

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

this idea, but I hate to hurt Melanie's feelings. How would you handle this? — Ex-Family Member

Dear Ex-Family Member: I would tell Melanie that the "family" she would like to re-create for a family portrait no longer exists, so it is very unrealistic to take a "family portrait" now.

Let her down as gently as possible. The poor girl is still hurting, and has not yet accepted that the "family" she once had is no longer a family.

Dear Abby: These days, with so much pressure on us to "optimize" our time, it is very frustrating to have to lose so much time in public jockeying for a place, or your turn in line. So, when someone jumps in ahead of you, when you've been waiting for a very long time, you fume — not wanting to create a scene.

What, if anything, should be said if a salesperson overlooks you waiting, and turns to a newcomer on the scene? Is it better to let it go, or what? — Fuming in Ontario, Canada

Dear Fuming: I would not get into an argument with a stranger who deliberately moved in ahead of me in line; neither would I fume about it. (If the line were a long one, you can be sure that someone else would remind the "squeezier-inner" where the end of the line was.)

If a salesperson "overlooked" me to wait on a newcomer, I would politely remind that salesperson that I was "next." (Nice guys who are too nice finish last.)

Dear Abby: In regards to the fathers who are divorced, pay child support, but are dissatisfied with the amount of child support that actually goes toward the child's needs: If the fathers are as concerned as they claim to be, they should seek custody of their children, and make sure their children receive the care and attention they deserve.

I am a happily married man (thank God) and our marriage is strong, but my parents were divorced. My father paid child support, but I was raised by my mother, who was a very bitter and unhappy woman.

The real tragedy of your divorce is that I grew up seeing my father through my mother's eyes. I never really knew my father until I was 18 or 19 years old.

I know it wasn't his fault, but in retrospect, I would have settled for a little more of his time and a lot less money.

Children who grow up with two parents who really care about each other don't know how lucky they are. — My Name Is Legion

Time Rejects Buyout

NEW YORK — Time Inc. today rejected a $10.7 billion buyout offer from Paramount Communications Corp. and launched a tender offer for Warner Communications Inc. that values Warner at more than $12.4 billion.

The move comes amid a complicated, three-way battle for Time, which had announced a merger with Warner before Paramount jumped in with its own bid for Time launched on June 7.

Time and Warner had been expected to try to salvage their deal, which would create the world's largest media concern.

Time said Paramount's unsolicited $175-a-share offer was not in the best interests of the company because it is financially inadequate and highly conditional.

Coleco To Sell Off Most Of Its Assets

HARTFORD, Conn. — Troubled Coleco Industries has agreed to sell most of its assets to Hasbro for $85 million in cash, a deal analysts said would mean the end for the company that made the Cabbage Patch doll a national sensation.

"Coleco always stood for innovation and the ability to take risks," said Paul Valentine, a toy analyst with New York-based Standard & Poor's Corp. "The industry is poorer because of their demise."

Under the agreement announced Thursday, Avon-based Coleco, now operating under Bankruptcy Court protection, will also receive an offer to buy 1 million shares of Hasbro stock.

Hasbro, the largest U.S. toymaker, will receive Coleco's product line, which includes the Scrabble and Parcheesi board games as well as the Cabbage Patch dolls, Coleco Chairman Morton Handel said.

The Cabbage Patch Kids became the hottest-selling toy in U.S. history in the early 1980s after Coleco began mass production and widespread distribution of the winsom dolls, which were created by a Georgia company that licensed the design to Coleco.

In addition to buying inventory and the equipment to make the pro-

Trio Share First Round Lead At The U.S. Open

But Jack Nicklaus Is Lurking Just One Stroke Back

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — For years, only his scores have been fat. Now, Jack Nicklaus is shedding strokes, too.

Winner of 18 major tournaments, the man called "Fat Jack" when he joined the PGA Tour in 1962 is bidding for yet another title — the 1989 U.S. Open.

"I don't know what's going to happen tomorrow or the next day," said Nicklaus, one shot off the lead after Thursday's first-round 67. "But at least it's shown me that I can still play a little, sometimes."

Bernhard Langer of West Germany, tour veteran Payne Stewart and newcomer Jay Don Blake shared the first-round lead at 4-under-par 66 on Oak Hill's 6,902-yard East course, where a week of rain turned putting surfaces from teflon to velcro.

"The course was surprisingly dry on the fairways," said Scott Simpson, who was tied with Nicklaus. "No roll, but the greens are holding, and that's good for scoring."

Also at 67 were Tom Kite, Joey Sindelar and Tom Pernice.

Langer, who had only one par in the final 10 holes, had eight birdies and four bogeys in his round. His bogey on the 18th prevented him from equalling the best round ever played here during three Opens — John Spray's 65 in 1968.

"It was kind of an up-and-down day," said Langer, the 1985 Masters champion. "I didn't think there were eight birdies out there. That kind of surprised me."

Nicklaus, 49 years old and in his 33rd straight U.S. Open, started the day with a bogey, but still had a feeling this wasn't going to degenerate into another of those 78s.

"I was playing a little more positive today than I have been," Nicklaus said. "That's something that I used to do until the last three or four years when I forgot how."

He finished the day without another bogey and four birdies, including a near eagle on the 594-yard, par-5 13th when he fired a 9-iron past the cup on his third shot, backed it up and just lipped it the hole, settling for a tap-in birdie.

Nicklaus said he had gone back to three old clubs — his sand wedge, wooden driver and 27-year-old putter — for this tournament. They're all confidence-builders; so too is the knowledge that the last time there was a major tournament here — the PGA in 1980 — Nicklaus won by seven strokes.

"I know I can play this golf course," he said. "If I'm seven shots worse than I was in 1980 — and I probably am — that still puts me in contention here. That's sort of a negative positive."

Nicklaus won his last major in 1986, the Masters.

Rain fell only sporadically on Thursday, although more was forecast for today and possibly Saturday. Still, Langer agreed with most of the other golfers that it had helped scoring rather than hindered it.

"The greens must be playing a little easier," he said. "For one thing, you can hit a lot of shots more at the hole, and they may be putting just a touch slower."

"Still, the rough is very, very

Even 'Wolves Sorry For Mahorn

Piston Learns At Party He's Leaving Champs For Expansion Team

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Even the Minnesota Timberwolves felt a little sorry for Rick Mahorn.

The 6-foot-10 forward was a starter on the Detroit Pistons, who won the NBA championship on Tuesday night and were celebrating the victory Thursday when Mahorn learned he was now a member of the expansion Timberwolves. Mahorn left the party without comment.

"He went from world champion one day to 'Hello expansion' the next," player personnel director Billy McKinney said. "How would you feel about it?"

McKinney had a similar experience in 1980. He was on a successful Kansas City team, but was left unprotected and was taken by Dallas in the expansion draft.

"I'm sure I'd have the same reaction. In fact, I did," McKinney said. "He was left unprotected and he feels betrayed. He feels he's gone the extra mile for them and they didn't treat him right."

Mahorn was Minnesota's first of 11 selections in the expansion draft and second overall behind Sidney Green, who was taken by Orlando from the New York Knicks.

"Rick Mahorn is a professional," McKinney said. "It's been a great experience for him. He played a team go from being good to being great. Now he can do the same for us."

Green, a backup forward-center for New York who figured to be a role player if he stayed with the Knicks, was delighted to be the first man on the roster of the Magic.

The 6-9 Green, who averaged 6.3

points and five rebounds for the Knicks, said it was "very complimentary of the Orlando Magic to make me the No. 1 pick. They saw someone they like. I'll play wherever they like. It's a challenge."

Green had no bitterness at all that he was left unprotected by the Knicks.

"I wish them the best," he said. "I hope they win a championship with Al Bianchi as general manager."

"What I'm going to miss is the fans of New York. The media have been pretty fair with me."

"We'll miss him," Bianchi said. "I'm not surprised at all that he went No. 1 after seeing the unprotected list. We had an overabundance of big people and were obviously going to lose one."

Each NBA team except last year's expansion clubs — Charlotte and Miami — lost one player in the draft, with Orlando taking 12 players and Minnesota 11. Orlando won a coin flip Monday and opted to pick first in the expansion draft, while Minnesota will get the 10th pick and Orlando the 11th in the college draft on June 27.

Other players taken by Orlando were guard Reggie Theus of Atlanta, forward Terry Catledge of Washington, guard Sam Vincent of Chicago, guard Otis Smith of Golden State, guard Scott Skiles of Indiana, forward Jerry Reynolds of Seattle, center Mark Acres of Boston, guard Morlon Wiley of Dallas, guard Jim Farmer of Utah, forward-center Keith Lee of New Jersey and guard Frank Johnson of Houston.

Moore's Football Is Over; Memories Linger

Timmy Moore set his feet upon the path of pro baseball the other day. Hopefully, he has made the right choice for his career. I wish him the best of luck in becoming, one day in the not-to-distant future, a major leaguer.

One has to wonder, however, just what Moore's potential in his other sport, football, would have been.

During the 25 football seasons I've roamed the sidelines in high school football stadiums around eastern North Carolina, I've seen some outstanding running backs. You can put the names of Carlester Crumpler, Al Hunter, Doug Paschal, and the like among the list.

Crumpler was a vicious runner, who could go over you or around you. Hunter would dazzle you with pure speed. Paschal was great in bowling you over on the straight-ahead run.

But I don't know if I've ever seen a running back with the talents of Timmy Moore. While he never had the size of a Crumpler, he was just as difficult to bring to the ground. Whereas Crumpler used his long legs to power past people and pull loose from potential tacklers, Moore used his strength and speed together. It was almost impossible for one man to bring him down with a tackle above the knees. It took swarms to stop him by tackling him high.

Hunter was a speed merchant, but Moore appeared to have just as much speed, even after a knee injury in the latter part of his senior season.

Watching him dash from first to home on a single in baseball was enough to confirm that his speed has suffered but little from the injury.

Paschal was a bruising runner, but Moore has not only that ability, but the ability to change directions on a dime. I don't know if I've ever seen a runner who had the ability to slow, step and accelerate as Timmy showed on a football field.

One particular play always come to mind. In this game, Moore received a handoff for a sweep around the right side. After bursting past the right defensive end, only the defensive back stood in his path. Moore continued to accelerate around his corner blocks, then headed straight for the defender. After a five-yard gain, he suddenly — amazingly — came to a full halt from almost full speed. Then, once the defender made his move, Moore shot like a rocket past him, gaining another 10 yards before another player got an angle on him. Stopping had certainly given that second tackler the change to catch him — but he had still added 10 more yards to the play.

I was glad to see him sign with East Carolina because I thought that it would give me four more years to watch him do those same things on the field.

In thinking about the future, it was not hard to draw some comparisons to Timmy and Bo Jackson, who has become a star in the pro ranks in both football and baseball. Maybe that's far fetched now, but who knows what he could have accomplished in four more years of seasoning.

But it's a moot point now. Timmy has made his decision and football apparently is not a part of it.

Baseball's gain is certainly football's loss.

Jordan Leads Field At Tournament

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Michael Jordan, star of the National Basketball Association's Chicago Bulls, will swap his basketball for a set of golf clubs this weekend as he heads the list of celebrities invading Greenville to help raise funds for the Ronald McDonald Houses of North Carolina.

Jordan, in whose honor the Eastern Carolina Golf Classic has been renamed this year, is serving as honorary chairman of the tournament for the second straight year and making his third appearance in the five-year history of the event.

At Jordan's request, however, funds from the Michael Jordan Celebrity Golf Classic will benefit the four McDonald Houses, in Chapel Hill, Durham and Winston-Salem, as well as the one in Greenville. The first four tournaments benefited only the Ronald McDonald House in Greenville.

The tournament will be played Sunday at the Greenville Country Club, and a number of the celebrities will be on hand Saturday for a practice round. Some are arriving as early as today, while others will arrive on Saturday.

The tournament, expected to draw 160 golfers, now is expected to have 34 celebrities, also. Five of those who earlier said they would attend have withdrawn, Terry Long, former ECU great now with the Pittsburgh Steelers; Jason Bateman, star of TV's The Hogan Family; Pat Peterson of Knots Landing; Jacqueline Padgett, 1989 Miss North Carolina (Miss USA), and Gail Ramsey, actress on Generations.

Those expected to attend include, in addition to Jordan, former Duke basketball coach Bucky Waters; ex-Dallas Cowboy Ron Burton; ex-North Carolina basketball star Dudley Bradley; former Hill Street Blues actor Tim Culbertson; John Volstad of Newhart; Diana Goodman, ex-Hee Haw actress; Tom Hodges and Steve Witting, both of The Hogan Family; Kim Zimmer of The Guiding Light; A.C. Weary, director of Another World; Buddy Currey, linebacker for the Atlanta Falcons; Pat Patterson of Raleigh's WKIK-AM; L.C. Greenwood, formerly with the Pittsburgh Steelers; Tony Papenfuss of The Newhart; Kessie Wesley of The Guiding Light; Ron Wooten of the New England Patriots; Bob DeBardelaben, weatherman on Raleigh's WRAL-TV; David Naughton, star of "An American Werewolf in London"; Dwight Clark, ex-San Francisco 49er; Thad Dauber, World One Club golf champion in 1985 and 1987; Joe Conley of

The Waltons; William Frizzell, Greenville native with the Philadelphia Eagles; Doug Moe, coach of the Denver Nuggets; Marsha Warfield of Night Court; actor Chris Rydell; Joe Conwell, ex-Philadelphia Eagle; Michael O'Leary of The Guiding Light; Anthony Carter of the Minnesota Vikings; Kevin Wood, U.S. Tour golf professional; Lem Barney, former All-Pro in the NFL; Lisa Peluso of Loving; Larry Griffin of the Pittsburgh Steelers; and Kathleen Sullivan of CBS This Morning.

Daber and Wood have scheduled a golf clinic for 10 to 10:45 a.m. Sunday. The Golfing Gorilla will also put on an exhibition from 4 to 5 p.m.

A number of private functions have been scheduled for Saturday for the players, tournament committee members and celebrities.

The tournament itself will get underway at 7:30 a.m. Sunday. Gallery tickets for the tournament may be purchased at the gate.

The four previous tournaments have raised approximately $125,000 for the Ronald McDonald House of Greenville.

Jordan Day Proclaimed

Michael Jordan, honorary chairman of the Michael Jordan Celebrity Golf Classic, which will be played Sunday at the Greenville Country Club, is no newcomer to fund-raisers for the Ronald McDonald Houses, which the tournament benefits.

He helped organize and sponsors a similar tournament in Chicago, where he now lives as a member of the Chicago Bulls of the National Basketball Association.

The former University of North Carolina star has also been a major contributor to Ronald McDonald houses in Chicago, Greenville and Chapel Hill.

For his contributions, he has been named this year to the Board of Trustees of the Ronald McDonald Children's Charities.

And, to top it off, North Carolina Gov. James G. Martin has recognized Jordan's contributions both on and off the basketball court by proclaiming Sunday as "Michael Jordan Day" in North Carolina.

Jordan, an avid golfer, will be in Greenville this weekend to head a list of celebrities attending the tournament.

Little League Celebration Is Set

The Greenville Little Leagues, the Tar Heel and the North State, will celebrate the 50th anniversary of Little League baseball this weekend.

Most of the activities will take place on Saturday, but two games will kick off the celebrations this evening. The number eight teams from each league, Aldridge & Southerland and Fickling Insurance will meet at 5:30 p.m. at Guy Smith Field, while the number seven teams, Kiwanis and Jarman's Auto, face each other at Elm Street field.

Saturday, sky divers will parachute into the parks at both Guy Smith and Elm Street at 11:30 a.m. Lorraine Shinn, mayor pro-tem of Greenville, will read a proclamation declaring Saturday Little League Day in Greenville, while Boyd Lee, director of Parks and Recreation, will handle those duties at 11:45 p.m. at Elm Street.

That will be followed by three games at each field. Guy Smith will open with the number six teams, Clark Construction and Moose, at noon, followed by number five Eveready meeting First Federal at 2 p.m. The fourth place teams, Optimists take on Wellcome at 4 p.m.

At Elm Street, activity starts with Lions facing Exchange in a third-place game at noon, followed by Sportsworld meeting Pepsi-Cola at 2 p.m. in the second place game. The two league champs, Coca-Cola and MacKenzie Security will meet at 4 p.m.

A hot-air balloon lift-off is scheduled for 6 p.m. at Elm Street Park. Each player will receive a special 50th anniversary souvenir following their game, and pizza and soft drinks will be provided for them.

Awards will be made to the volunteers of the year for each league at the conclusion of the program.

Snow Hill Blasts Edenton, 12-0

SNOW HILL — Scott Sutton and Scott Norwood combined to toss a five-hit shutout at Edenton in as Snow Hill took a 12-0 American Legion baseball victory Thursday night.

Snow Hill jumped into the lead with a pair of runs in the first inning. Ed Stanley led off with a single and Walt McKeel got a hit. Leslie Jackson's single brought in Stanley. Chris West then grounded out, allowing McKeel to score.

Another run in the second boosted the lead to 3-0. Jimmy Hardy walked, but was thrown out going to third on Sutton's single. George Burnette then reached on an error, allowing Sutton to score.

Snow Hill put the game out of reach with seven more in the fourth, adding single runs in the fifth and eighth frames.

Sutton went the first seven for Snow Hill with Norwood coming on to finish off the game in the last two innings.

Burnette led the Snow Hill hitting with three while Stanley, Jackson, Prentice Uzzell and Sutton each collected two. Derrick Rogers led Edenton with two hits.

Ex-USC Player Hagood Receives Sentence

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Ex-South Carolina football player Rickey Hagood has been sentenced to 21 months without parole in federal prison after he pleaded guilty to conspiracy to distribute cocaine.

Under a new federal sentencing reform act, the 28-year-old Hagood could have been sentenced to 41 months, but the sentence was lighter because he cooperated with authorities, assistant U.S. Attorney Robert C. Jendron said Wednesday.

Walker Gets His Wish To Stay In NY

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga. (AP) — Kenny Walker, the reigning NBA slam-dunk king, got his wish: he will stay with the New York Knicks for another year.

Walker, from Roberta, Ga., was one of eight players protected by the club and wasn't selected in the NBA expansion draft Thursday. Barring a trade, he will play his fourth season with the Knicks.

"New York is a great place," he said at a boy's basketball camp in Milledgeville before he knew the draft results. "A lot of good things happened to me there last year, and I'd like to stay in New York."

But he said playing in New York is "tough."

"The media there is probably the toughest of any in the country," he said. "It's been a roller coaster ride for me, but a lot of great things happened this year. I think we've got a great future there, and I'd like to be a part of it."

Anti-Apartheid Protest At U.S. Open

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — About a dozen anti-apartheid protesters carried signs and chanted slogans at the entrance to the Oak Hill Country Club Thursday to protest golfers with ties to South Africa participating in the U.S. Open.

The protesters, from the Rochester Anti-Apartheid Coalition, walked in a small circle across from the club's busy main gate and attracted little attention.

"All we're doing is reminding the community about the United Nations sports and cultural boycott," said protest organizer Nancy Gee.

USGA officials, who have said they can't recall a similar type of protest at past Opens, have said repeatedly that they don't believe politics and golf mix.

"This is not the Olympics," acting USGA director David Fay said.

The small group of protesters could not be heard on the golf course when they chanted, "Golf open says yes. We say no. McNulty and the others have got to go."

Ex-Badger Coach Is In Critical Condition

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Former University of Wisconsin football coach John Jardine was in critical but stable condition Friday as he awaited a heart transplant at UW Hospital, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Jardine, 53, "hasn't deteriorated any more (today), which is gratifying, but we know that can just be a brief interlude when someone gets to this stage," Dr. Barry Fields, head of heart and lung transplants at UW Hospital, said.

Hospital officials said a nationwide search continued for a donor heart suitable for Jardine. The former coach was one of 25 people awaiting heart transplants in Wisconsin Friday, organ transplant teams said.

Pistons Celebrate Title With Party

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — The Detroit Pistons made their final appearance of the 1988-89 season here, this time in long pants and wide smiles reflected in the golden glint of the trophy awarded the NBA champions.

The Thursday afternoon rally at The Palace of Auburn Hills climaxed a three-day love-in sparked by Detroit's four-game sweep of the Los Angeles Lakers for the Pistons' first NBA title.

An estimated 125,000 people turned out for a noon parade in downtown Detroit. Another 12,000 attended the jubilant, hour-long rally at the suburban arena.

"In order to win at anything, there has to be pressure," Isiah Thomas, the team captain, told the roaring, foot-stomping Palace crowd. "Every time we lost, it was the worst feeling in the world. We never wanted to lose again. Because of you, we succeeded."

The Palace fell relatively silent as Thomas turned to his teammates, seated on a stage at center court, and led them in applause for their fans.

"This is fantastic," General Manager Jack McCloskey said. "In 1980, this team won 16 ballgames. The players were losers, the coaches were losers, we all were losers."

"I say this to you: Champions sometimes are losers who just will not quit."

Before the rally began, the crowd watched replays of Tuesday night's title-clincher against the Lakers on a giant TV screen. The loudest cheers came for scenes shot inside the Palace, which was filled that night even though the game was 2,500 miles away.

State Rep. Mike Bennane, D-Detroit, nervously guarded a large, framed resolution from the legislature praising the Pistons.

"I really moved mountains to get this done on time," Bennane said. "We got it done Wednesday."

Bill Davidson, the principal owner of the club, paced nervously in white cotton slacks, a championship T-shirt and cap, accepting congratulations from well wishers.

"I always had to be hopeful this day would come, but there was constantly a lot of frustration, like last year," Davidson said, recalling how the Pistons blew a 3-2 advantage and lost to the Lakers in seven games.

"It just never seemed like we'd get a break when we needed it."

"But we knew we'd be back," he said. "We're confident about next year, too. Maybe even more confident."

At 4:13 p.m. the arena went dark except for moving white stage lights and, with the bouncing beat of ELO's "All Over the World" pounding from the public address system, the stage began to fill.

Fans chanted "Buddha, Buddha" as James Edwards strode to the stage and "MVP, MVP" for Joe Dumars, voted the Finals' Most Valuable Player.

Each of the 12 Detroit players spoke. Some, like Dennis Rodman, were choked with emotion and found the words hard to come by. As Rodman groped for words, Thomas stepped forward and gave him a big hug.

It was an emotional and symbolic moment. All season long Thomas had pushed Rodman, saying the Pistons could go from good to great if Rodman played up to his potential.

"Everybody here is my favorite player," Dumars said. "This has been a great team."

Mark Aguirre also let his emotions flow.

"I came here from Dallas and I had to learn to be a Bad Boy," Aguirre said, referring to the nickname the team adopted to fit its defiant, outlaw image around the NBA.

"But each and every one of these guys at that moment took me in as one of their own," Aguirre said. "I never had that happen to me before. I want to thank them for allowing me to love basketball again."

"I can tell you it's not so bad to be a Bad Boy."

Rick Mahorn, calling himself "the baddest Bad Boy you've ever seen," went around the stage and kissed the cheek of every teammate.

Less than an hour after the rally ended, Mahorn learned he had been taken by Minnesota after the Pistons left him unprotected in the expansion draft. A Bad Boy no more, he left the arena neither speaking nor smiling.

"It was lousy timing," McCloskey said.

Thousands of balloons dropped from the ceiling while the rally closed to the sounds of Motown's Temptations blasting "The Way You Do the Things You Do" from the P.A. system as the Pistons hoisted aloft the NBA championship trophy.

Kulwicki Hoping For Another Win

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONG POND, Pa. — Alan Kulwicki isn't looking for another chance to drive the wrong way, but he would like another NASCAR victory.

Kulwicki for the first time is preparing for a race at Pocono International Raceway with a victory under his belt. He celebrated the first one last year, at Phoenix, with a victory lap the wrong way.

The Greenfield, Wis., native and 1986 Rookie of the Year said he doesn't think another wrong-way lap would be allowed if he were to win the Miller 500 on Sunday, but he would love a chance to celebrate with something else unusual.

He also thinks the experience of winning is important to giving him that chance.

"I think it helps my confidence a little bit," said Kulwicki, who will be shooting for his second straight Miller 500 pole in first-round qualifying today. "It's like, if you get in that situation you know you can do it. You believe you can do it because you've done it before."

His first Winston Cup race win came last Nov. 6 in the Checker 500 at Phoenix.

He had seemed in position to make a run at that first win earlier here last year, setting a track record at 158.806 mph in his Ford with a 56.673-second qualifying lap on Pocono's 2.5-mile tri-oval.

"We won the pole and then blew that engine up on Saturday morning right off the bat," Kulwicki said. "They had to airfreight one into us. Then that one blew up in the race also."

Geoff Bodine's Chevrolet beat Michael Waltrip's Pontiac by 8.18 seconds to win last year's race. A first-lap crash seriously injured Bobby Allison, who hasn't raced since but will be grand marshal Sunday.

Kulwicki finished 27th in the Miller race and eighth in the A.C. Spark Plug 500 the following month at Pocono.

As he prepares to race here again, a two-year-old race is on his mind as well.

He dueted Dale Earnhardt in 1987 on the last lap in the NASCAR Summer 500 at Pocono, when their cars bumped and Earnhardt swept by to win. The second-place showing was the best career finish to that point for Kulwicki.

NBA Expansion...

Minnesota's other selections were forward Tyrone Corbin of Phoenix, forward-center Steve Johnson of Portland, forward Brad Lohaus of Sacramento, guard David Rivers of the Los Angeles Lakers, forward Mark Davis of Milwaukee, forward Scott Roth of San Antonio, forward Shelton Jones of Philadelphia, guard Eric White of the Los Angeles Clippers, guard Maurice Martin of Denver and West German center Gunther Behnke, whose rights were owned by Cleveland.

"We felt there were two ingredients we needed — a big rebounder to get us off to a good start and a scorer," said Pat Williams, president and general manager of the Magic. "We felt Sidney Green was the best rebounder available and Reggie Theus is a guy who can score a lot of points."

"We didn't get everything we wanted, but we're very happy with what's happened. We got enough of the ingredients we were looking for."

President Bob Stein of the Timberwolves said Mahorn was a key ingredient for the Pistons.

"It's hard to top being a starter for a championship team," Stein said. "He's one of those players no one likes unless he's on your team. We feel that physical play and agressive play are part of what we should have. He's been a good scorer when he's been asked to score."

McKinney said he would be happy with a starting front line of Mahorn, Steve Johnson and Corbin.

"If we can't sign any other front-court players, we'll still be happy," McKinney said. "We felt that going into it, we would get one of two players, Rick and Tyrone Corbin. I never dreamed both of those players would be available."

Minnesota also acquired a 1989 second-round draft pick from Milwaukee in exchange for taking Davis instead of another player.

Theus, a starter who averaged 15.8 points for the Hawks last season, is a former All-Star. Theus was an All-Star in 1981 and 1983 for Chicago.

Steve Johnson was chosen for the All-Star team in 1988, but had to withdraw because of injury.

Gonzales Gets Hit Off Yanks — Again

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Rene Gonzales probably could roll out of bed on Christmas morning and get a base hit — as long as he was facing the New York Yankees.

A 203 hitter against everyone else in his 2½-year major-league career, Gonzales raised his lifetime average against the Yankees to .370 with a two-out single in the 10th inning that gave the Baltimore Orioles a 2-1 victory Thursday night.

"I haven't played in a while (he was 0-for-9 and hadn't had a hit in almost two weeks), but he threw me the same pitch twice in a row and the second time I hit it off the hands, off the label, and it landed in deep shortstop," Gonzales said of his winning hit to short center field Lance McCullers.

In other American League games, it was Kansas City 5, Cleveland 4; Milwaukee 6, Toronto 4; Seattle 9, Minnesota 5. The Detroit-Boston game was rained out.

Gonzales' game-winning hit scored Mickey Tettleton, who opened the 10th with a double off McCullers.

"I'd be an idiot to say it's easy," said Gonzales, a utility infielder who came on after third baseman Craig Worthington was lifted for a pinch hitter in the eighth. "Staying loose (to play defense) is nothing, but when you sit for weeks and have to go in and hit, it's different."

McCullers entered the game with a 2-1 lead after Richard Dowd scattered eight hits in seven innings and the Orioles promptly tied it on Randy Milligan's single, a stolen base and a single by Jim Traber, batting for Worthington.

Singles by Rickey Henderson, Steve Sax and Don Mattingly, the game's first three batters, gave the Yankees a 1-0 lead against Jeff Ballard. With a 3-2 count and the runners going, Steve Balboni lined to shortstop Cal Ripken, who threw to second baseman Bill Ripken to double Steve Sax. The relay to Milligan at first completed the Orioles' first triple play in 10 years.

Cal Ripken tied the game 1-1 with a leadoff homer in the fourth inning, his fifth of the season. The Yankees went ahead 2-1 in the fifth on Don Slaught's double and Alvaro Espinoza's single.

Mark Thurmond, who pitched the 10th inning for Baltimore, was the winner. Ballard allowed two runs and 10 hits in 7 1/3 innings.

Royals 5, Indians 4

Bill Buckner reached 1,200 career RBIs by driving in three runs, two of them during a three-run eighth-inning rally.

The Royals trailed 4-0 after two innings and were behind 4-2 entering the eighth. But George Brett led off with a walk off Cleveland starter John Farrell and Bo Jackson singled off Doug Jones, who blew a save for only the third time in 17 opportunities.

One out later, Buckner doubled, scoring both runners. Pinch runner Bill Pecota went to third on Matt Winters' single and pinch hitter Pat Tabler grounded to second, scoring Pecota with the winning run.

"I was shooting for 2,700 (career) hits, 500 doubles and 1,200 RBIs. After I get that, there's not much left to shoot for except the World Series," said the 39-year-old Buckner.

"When the season started, I didn't know if I'd get to play this much, but I'm thankful I have," said Buckner, who has appeared in 38 games and is batting .235 with 24 hits in 102 at-bats. He needs seven hits and three doubles to reach his individual goals.

Jones hadn't allowed an earned run in 15 2/3 previous innings against Kansas City.

"He's got probably the best changeup in baseball and I was looking changeup all the way," Buckner said. "But he threw me nothing but fastballs. I would have been happy just hitting a foul ball. I caught the ball late and it hit just inside the (left-field) line. I was pretty lucky."

Winner Bret Saberhagen gave up four runs and seven hits in seven innings. Jeff Montgomery and Steve Farr each pitched an inning, with Farr getting his 15th save.

Kevin Seitzer's Kansas City record of 37 consecutive errorless games by a third baseman ended when he backhanded Joe Carter's infield hit in the second inning and threw wildly to first, allowing two runs to score.

Brewers 6, Blue Jays 4

Rob Deer hit two solo home runs and Gary Sheffield's seventh-inning sacrifice fly drove in the winning run. Jim Gantner and Paul Molitor opened Milwaukee's winning rally with singles. Gus Polidor forced Molitor at second before Sheffield drove in Gantner with a sacrifice fly off Toronto starter Jimmy Key.

Milwaukee reliever Tony Fossas earned his first major-league victory and Chuck Crim recorded his fourth save. Deer tied the score 3-3 in the bottom of the third with his 14th homer, but the Blue Jays took a 4-3 lead in the fifth. Deer led off the Milwaukee sixth with his 15th homer to tie the score again.

Mariners 9, Twins 5

Alvin Davis' grand slam off Steve Shields in the seventh inning gave Seattle a 7-5 lead and Greg Briley added a two-run homer off Lee Tunnell in the eighth. Infield hits by Omar Vizquel, Harold Reynolds and Briley loaded the bases before Davis hit the sixth grand slam of his career and his seventh homer of the season.

Reliever Dennis Powell retired the Twins in order in the sixth to gain the victory. Mike Jackson pitched the final three innings for his third save.

The Mariners, who started Randy Johnson, trailed 5-0 after two innings but Edgar Martinez hit a sacrifice fly in the Seattle fifth and Davis had a RBI single in the Mariners' two-run sixth.

Dodgers Win Their Fifth Straight

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Los Angeles Dodgers have won five straight games, thanks to John Wetteland and Mariano Duncan.

Who? The Dodgers edged the Houston Astros 2-1 Thursday night, completing a sweep of a three-game series. Wetteland got his first major league victory, pitching one scoreless inning. Duncan knocked in the winning run with a long single to center field in the 11th inning.

"We were going to get that run in no matter what," Dodgers manager Tom Lasorda said. "We were waiting to see how they were going to play it. My first thought was about the squeeze but we couldn't try the squeeze if they pitched out. Duncan eliminated the decision with his drive to center."

That hit made Wetteland's fondest wish come true.

"It was a great feeling getting my first major league win," Wetteland said. "It's something I've dreamed about. The guys are really up right now. Five in a row is our longest streak of the season."

Elsewhere, it was St. Louis 4, Montreal 3 in 10 innings; Atlanta 2, San Francisco 1; San Diego 1, Cincinnati 0 in 12 innings; Pittsburgh 5, Philadelphia 3; and New York 4, Chicago 3 in 12 innings.

The champion Dodgers are 4½ games out of first place in the NL

West — but three teams are ahead of them. All of them — the Giants, Reds and Astros — lost Thursday.

The Dodgers won after rallying to tie it in the eighth.

Alfredo Griffin walked and was sacrificed to second by pinch-hitter Dave Anderson. Kirk Gibson hit a high chopper to second baseman Bill Doran. Unable to make a play on Gibson at first, Doran tried to get Griffin off third but threw wildly into the Dodgers' dugout as Griffin scored.

Franklin Stubbs led off the 11th with a single. Mike Scioscia attempted to sacrifice and, after Scioscia fouled off two pitches, Stubbs stole second. Scioscia then grounded to first base, moving Stubbs to third with one out. Juan Agosto intentionally walked Jeff Hamilton.

"When I went up to hit," Duncan said after pinch-hitting for John Shelby. "I was thinking squeeze. If I didn't get the squeeze sign, I was looking for a pitch I could drive deep to the outfield."

He found one and the Dodgers had a sweep.

Cardinals 4, Expos 3

At St. Louis, pinch-hitter Tom Pagnozzi singled home Milt Thompson in the 10th inning. Pagnozzi's hit to right field came off Andy McGaffigan, 1-3, after Tony Pena's two-out RBI triple tied it for St. Louis in the ninth. Pagnozzi's single gave the victory to Todd Worrell, 1-1, as the Cardinals erased the Expos' early 3-1 lead.

Vince Coleman started the 10th with a single and stole second. But he was caught in a rundown when Thompson bunted too close to the mound. Thompson got to second before Coleman was tagged out.

McGaffigan walked Ozzie Smith intentionally before Pagnozzi's winning hit.

Cardinals pitchers issued 10 walks, four intentional, and Montreal stranded 15 runners.

Braves 2, Giants 1

At San Francisco, John Smoltz won his eighth game with a seven-hitter and Lonnie Smith homered as Atlanta broke a six-game losing streak. The victory stopped a five-game Giants winning streak.

Smoltz struck out nine and walked two in his third complete game of the year.

"He's got one of the best young arms in the league, and he showed a lot of poise," Giants manager Roger Craig said.

Smith got his first home run since returning Tuesday from the disabled list with a sprained right ankle.

Padres 1, Reds 0

At San Diego, slumping Jack Clark broke up the scoreless duel in the 12th with a single that scored Mark Parent.

Parent singled with one out off Tim Lincecum, 2-1. After Garry Templeton singled Parent to second, Clark hit for reliever Greg Harris, 2-2. Kent Tekulve relieved Birtsas and Clark got his blood hit.

"The pitch was where I wanted it," Tekulve said. "That's the pitch he's been swinging at and missing, a slider just off the plate. On a 3-2 pitch, you can't put it in a much better spot."

Clark found a better spot.

"I didn't hit it well, but I hit it in the right spot," Clark said. "If it had been harder, they would have had a good chance at Parent at the plate."

Pirates 5, Phillies 3

At Pittsburgh, Doug Drabek didn't let three rain delays totaling two hours stop him. Drabek, 4-5, won his third straight decision since ending a five-game losing streak May 25. He struck out seven, despite allowing solo homers to Randy Ready and Juan Samuel. Bob Kipper and Bill Landrum pitched the final two innings, with Landrum getting his third save.

Gary Redus and Jose Lind hit solo home runs for Pittsburgh. Randy Ready and Juan Samuel homered for Philadelphia, which lost for the 16th time in 20 games and the 13th time in its last 14 road games.

Mets 4, Cubs 3

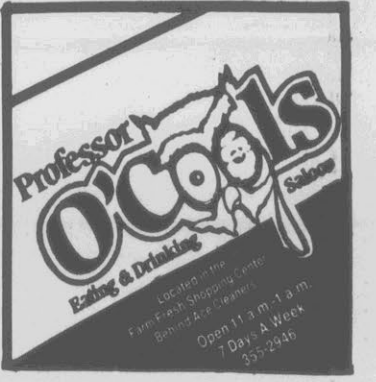

At New York, the Mets overcame a 3-0 deficit and outlasted the Cubs in the rain. Gregg Jefferies singled home the winning run with two outs in the 12th, ending a five-hour game.

The game was twice delayed by showers for a total of 1 hour, 31 minutes and finally finished at 1:24 a.m. EDT.

Dave Magadan's two-out, two-run single gave the Mets a 3-3 in the ninth inning after Howard Johnson was walked intentionally.

Magadan drew a leadoff walk from Pat Perry in the 12th. Lee Mazzilli walked with two outs and Jefferies' third straight single scored pinch-runner Kevin Elster without a throw.

PITCHING (6 decisions)-Swindell, to the bench in 1973. He challenged Gray's contention that he was justified because everyone was doing drugs.

"You go to law school and I guess on occasion in your academic career, somebody would have cheated. Does that mean other people should follow suit?" Gray asked. "If I had started the profession of law and found out that all the top counsel were doing something that was against the rules ... and that was the way to get to the top ..."

"You would do it?" interrupted Dubin, his voice rising as he leaned forward in his high-backed chair.

"I don't know," Gray responded.

The judge, looking increasingly disturbed after scolding Johnson for lying earlier this week, paused and studied the witness for several seconds.

"Where did this great desire to win come from?" he asked.

"From right here," Gray said, pointing to his chest. "From my heart."

Dubin, a lifelong sports fan, told the dark-haired, bearded lawyer the federal money he had received as an athlete was intended to "create the young Canadians who are going to be effective role models for others."

"You were a champion," Dubin said. "Wouldn't that dawn on you then: 'I can't do this; I'm supposed to be an example for others.'"

Gray: "You wouldn't be a role model if you didn't do (drugs and win)."

Dubin: "That's a pretty poor role model, isn't it - to cheat?"

Gray: "I never asked to be a role model."

Dubin expressed fears that cheating in sport could compel one to cheat in later life. Gray, now a coach and drug opponent, said he no longer cheats.

"I would assume you don't," the judge said. "I hear very good reports about you from the bar. I don't like preaching but I'm having trouble sometimes understanding what's in (athletes' heads)."

Former Discus Champion Confesses To Steroid Use

TORONTO - Justice Charles Dubin, the man heading the Canadian drug inquiry called in the wake of the Ben Johnson scandal, figured he'd heard enough cheating stories to last a lifetime.

He heard one more on Thursday, and didn't like the sound of it.

This time it was Rob Gray, a champion discus thrower turned lawyer who spent four hours on the Thursday confessing his use of the same muscle-building drugs that cost Johnson an Olympic gold medal and world record.

"You know it's cheating," the diminutive justice told the 6-foot-2, 260-pound Gray, who failed a drug test and is under a life suspension from the sport. "You aspired to a professional life. How could you?"

"Your desire to win takes over everything," Gray, 32, replied.

That did not satisfy Dubin, a shoemaker's son who spent 29 years as a defense lawyer before moving

Nicklaus Relies On Old Sticks For 67

By Hal Bock
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — The old putter had been in and out of Jack Nicklaus' bag any number of times, tossed in the back of closet now and then, retrieved for a while and then discarded again.

It has been in semi-retirement since 1986 when Nicklaus rode a wave of birdies to his emotional triumph in the Masters. In its place, its owner used a fancy new stick, a longer one, equipped with a bigger head.

Old reliable was still there, though, you know, like an old friend you could always fall back on, just in case. On Thursday, Nicklaus decided it was time to do a little falling back.

So when he set off for the first round of the U.S. Open, Nicklaus had three replacement clubs in his bag, a wooden driver, a sand wedge he used last year, and the old putter.

They happen to be the three clubs a golfer uses most frequently, so when Nicklaus produced a 3-under-par 67, one stroke off the lead, his old sticks came in for some special attention.

The putter dates to 1962 and the Phoenix Open.

"The first five tournaments I played that year, I had no less than 34 putts per tournament," he said. "I tried a new putter and shot a 64 in the Pro-Am. I've used it ever since except for a couple or three years."

Included in that putter's triumphs were Nicklaus' seven-stroke victory at the 1980 PGA, played, coincidentally at the Oak Hill Country Club, site of this year's Open.

Nicklaus remembered that and decided to put the old pal back in his bag along with the wooden driver and the sand wedge. Together, they produced results that bordered on the spectacular.

Logic tells you that Nicklaus can't win another major, not at age 49, not with his limited preparation, not with all the young lions out there.

But logic didn't matter at the 1986 Masters. And it didn't matter Thursday, even after some rather mediocre practice rounds.

"I had no reason whatsoever to believe I'd shoot three under," he said. "The way I played the last two days, there was no reason to believe that."

But with greens softened by week-long rains, Nicklaus' old putter performed flawlessly, much the way it had over this same layout nine years ago.

"I know I can play this course," he said. "I know I have played this course. If I'm seven strokes worse than I was in 1980, which I think I am, at least I'm still in contention. That's a negative positive, I guess."

Nicklaus said motivation had been a problem for him, not so much when he gets on the course, but in the days and weeks leading up to a tournament.

"I have as much motivation as ever," he said. "But I spend more time on other work before I go to play golf."

There was a time when that regimen was reversed, when golf came first and work later for Nicklaus. "I have too many responsibilities to too many people to do that now."

Yet on Thursday, it was the old master back on center stage, his name up on the leader board with a string of subpar, red numbers next to it.

Perhaps it was the old putter, perhaps the wood driver, perhaps the resurrected sand wedge. Whatever the reason, Nicklaus shook down some thunder on drizzly Oak Hill.

For Nicklaus, it was plain, old-fashioned fun.

"To play a good round in the first round of the U.S. Open, that was fun for me," he said. "It showed me I can still play a bit at times."

How will he feel if he's still in this situation Saturday night, one stroke off the lead?

"I'd feel more confident because there would be only one day to go, not three and because I would have done this for three days, not one," he said. "I'd feel more nervous because I'd have an opportunity to win a fifth U.S. Open. I hope I have that opportunity, to find out how I'd really feel."

Is this a serious bid, then?
"We'll find out real quick," Nicklaus said.

NL Expansion Part Of Players' Negotiations

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Major league owners have armed themselves with a new weapon for negotiating with the players' union this year — 48 jobs.

At baseball's current roster limits, that many positions will be created when the National League expands by two teams. The union has stated it solidly supports expansion, for obvious reasons.

But Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti announced Thursday that a timetable for expansion will be announced within three months "after the completion of a new collective bargaining agreement with the Players Association."

After a two-day owners' meeting, Giamatti supplied no specifics on where or when the National League will expand, other than to say "the early '90s," might be a good target date.

But he and Barry Rona, management's chief negotiator, made it clear that expansion will be tied to negotiations on a labor contract to replace the one that expires Dec. 31.

No date has been set to begin negotiations.

"If we have a new agreement on January 1, then by April 1 we will announce the timetable, dates and so forth," Giamatti said. "Obviously, in the meantime we will continue to discuss these things. The fact that we're saying now when we can come out with a timetable is simply a function of the fact that a lot of work has been done and a lot of work remains to be done. There is no doubt the National League is going to expand."

"The decision to expand is an ownership decision," said Rona, executive director of the owners' Player Relations Committee. "But once you make a decision to expand, the effect upon the players, the employees, is obviously great. The players themselves will directly benefit from expansion on the issue of jobs alone."

Asked if expansion would be a bargaining point with the players, Rona said, "Not the decision to expand, per se. But the effect of expansion is a bargaining issue."

Giamatti emphasized the same point.

"I've always thought that the way to expansion needed to be prepared not only in the Basic Agreement with the association around certain issues, but also, if you were thinking ahead, the renegotiation with the players development contract with the minor leagues," Giamatti said. "I've always had the view that in order to properly have expansion you had to look at the overall Basic Agreement, and the minor leagues."

National League President Bill White has appointed John McMullen of the Houston Astros, Fred Wilpon of the New York Mets and Doug Danforth of the Pittsburgh Pirates as a new committee on expansion.

White said it was not known how much time the committee will need after the timetable is announced.

"The committee will decide that," he said.

"These things are complicated," Giamatti said. "It takes a long time to do it right. We're telling you there is still a lot of work to be done."

Buffalo, N.Y.; Tampa-St. Petersburg, Fla.; Miami; Phoenix; New Orleans; Denver and Washington D.C. have been campaigning for franchises. The American League has had 14 teams and the NL 12 since 1977 when the American League went into Toronto and Seattle.

"One thing that has to happen is baseball has to see how many potential major league cities are out there," Giamatti said. "I have no idea. I keep reading there will be two 16-team leagues. I don't know if there are six major league expansion cities. I'm sure there are two."

He refused to name them.

Also following his first owners meeting as commissioner, Giamatti announced that Milwaukee Brewers owner Bud Selig, the chairman of the Player Relations Committee, Rona, and PRC counsel Chuck O'Connor would be the only persons authorized to speak on labor matters.

tough. It's wet and heavy, and the ball doesn't go anywhere, and you don't get any run on the fairways."

When Langer came to the 18th — a 440-yard par-4 — he was five under par after his only regulation hole on the back nine. He just barely made the 18th green with a 5-iron second shot, then 3-putted from 60 feet. That made up for the 60-foot birdie putt he made on the par-3 11th.

Stewart won the Heritage Classic earlier this year but has yet to win a major tournament.

"I don't think my career will be complete until I win a major," Stewart said. "I'm not saying I will, but I'm not saying I won't."

Stewart's first round was much the same as Langer's — up and down. He turned in 2-under 33, then got to four under with birdies at Nos. 12 and 14, both par-4s. He then bogeyed the 15th and 16th, and finished with birdies at 17 and 18, where he holed a 20-foot putt.

Blake, in his third year on the tour at age 30 and never a winner, had a more consistent round of 33-33. It included just one bogey, the 177-yard, par-3 15th, where he plopped a 6-iron 40 feet from the hole and three-putted.

Kite shot 32-35, Simpson and Sindelar had 33-34, and Pernice shot 36-31 with four birdies on the back nine.

Kite won two straight tournaments in March, finished fifth in last week's Westchester and is considered a strong contender here.

"It's nice to be in the red in the Open," said Kite, who was four under before bogeying the 16th when he pushed his 5-iron second shot to the right of the green. "I've got to feel good about my game, the way things have been going."

At 68 and two shots back were Nick Faldo of England, Kurt Beck, Dillard Pruitt, Larry Nelson and Raymond Floyd.

In 1968 at Oak Hill, there were only 14 rounds of 68 or better during the entire U.S. Open. This time, there were 13 rounds of 68 or better in the first round alone, and Hal Sutton blew a chance to make it 14.

 4 ♠ Pass Pass Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♠

When all else is sure to fail, a dash of guile can work wonders. We can't help admiring South's play on this hand, although we are not sure his opponent should have swallowed the bait.

North's jump raise to three spades, by agreement, showed four-card support and a hand worth 9-11 points. South's hand was easily worth pressing on to game.

West led the jack of clubs, and declarer was delighted with his dummy. If he could avoid a trump loser (odds on), or find West with either the king of clubs or ace of diamonds, the contract would be a laydown.

Dummy's queen of clubs was played to the first trick and lost to the king. A club was returned to the ace, and declarer tried his next shot by cashing his high trumps. That came to naught when East discarded a low heart on the second round. Since declarer would have to ruff his losing hearts in dummy, he could not yet afford to lead a diamond to the king. If West held the ace, he could rise with it and take his trump winner, and declarer might be stranded with a losing heart.

So declarer took the ace-king of hearts and was pleasantly surprised to see West drop the two missing honors. That not only meant that declarer's hearts were high, but it presented him with a sneaky extra chance for his game. Declarer continued with the seven of hearts. West could have ruffed and shifted to a diamond to defeat the contract, but he was a trifle stingy and did not want to waste his master trump on such a lowly spot card. He discarded and the location of the ace of diamonds became immaterial. Declarer discarded a diamond from dummy, and another on the nine of hearts. The defenders took only one trump, one diamond and one club.

Child Care Bill Reaches Senate Floor

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A multibillion dollar plan offering parents both subsidies and tax credits to help pay for child care faces stiff opposition from the White House, which favors an approach dependent almost solely on tax credits.

The Senate on Thursday started debate on the issue, with Democrats saying they are open to compromise but committed to the principals of the Act for Better Child Care sponsored by Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn.

"This package embodies a truly bipartisan and comprehensive approach to this nation's child care crisis," Dodd said. "It's not a complete answer, but it's a very solid beginning."

The debate was to resume today, and numerous amendments were expected to be proposed before a final vote, not likely to come before late next week.

Dodd agreed to a number of changes in his plan in order to get it to the Senate floor, a significant step in itself given the staunch opposition the package faced earlier this year.

Opposition stemmed from the most part from two provisions in the original bill, one calling for federal regulation of child care and another that many lawmakers believed would have forced the closing of church-run centers.

The revised version leaves regulations to the states, although it would establish federal guidelines for the states to follow if they wished.

House Panel Backs Higher Unemployment Tax

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — For the first time since President Bush was elected on a no-tax-increase pledge, a congressional subcommittee has voted to raise taxes.

The House Ways and Means subcommittee on human resources is calling for a boost in the tax that employers pay for federal unemployment benefits, which would bring in an estimated $10.6 billion over the next five years.

When fully in effect in 1992, it would cost employers an additional $4 a year for each employee.

The increase would finance improvements in jobless benefits and higher spending for child care and welfare. It would also leave $161 million next year, and $1.7 billion over five years, toward reducing the budget deficit.

The package was approved by the subcommittee on a voice vote over Republican opposition. It now goes to the full committee.

Before the vote, Kenneth W. Gideon, assistant treasury secretary for tax policy, said the administration is strongly opposed. In the first place, he said, the unemployment fund does not need more money — a statement that was challenged by Democrats on the panel.

"Second," Gideon wrote, "increasing the amount of wages subject to federal unemployment tax is a tax increase and is opposed by this administration."

Bush was elected after a campaign in which his opposition to a tax increase was repeated several times a day. He also has predicted that if taxes were raised, Congress would spend the money rather than cut the deficit.

"It's basically a $10 billion tax increase ... and a wish list of social spending," Rep. Hank Brown, R-Colo., a member of the subcommittee, said of the bill. "Many of the proposals have merit but I don't think we have the money."

He predicted the tax increase will make it far more difficult for the Ways and Means Committee to meet its deficit-reduction goal.

Present law requires employers to pay a tax of 0.8 percent of the first $7,000 earned annually by each employee, a maximum of $56 per worker. The rate is due to drop to 0.6 percent in 1991.

Activists Decry Court's Ruling

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Civil rights activists are accusing the Supreme Court of "redneck justice" and urging Congress to stem what they say is a reactionary tide threatening 35 years of progress for minorities and women.

The court's ruling Thursday on a racial harassment case is one of several new decisions showing that a newly solidified conservative majority on the court is intent on carrying out former President Ronald Reagan's agenda, civil and women's rights groups say.

The court, by a 5-4 vote, barred the use of a key 1866 civil rights law to fight racial harassment. But the justices voted unanimously to uphold use of the law, originally intended to help freed slaves, to sue private individuals for other forms of discrimination.

Molly Yard, president of the National Organization for Women, said conservatives on the court "again revealed themselves to be hostile and insensitive to the progress of the last 20 years. Redneck justice meted out with country club manners is no less painful than the real thing."

John Buchanan of the liberal People for the American Way said, "It's a sad commentary on the state of the court's general outlook on civil rights that today's decision must be greeted with a measure of relief."

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., urged President Bush to join Congress in proposing bills to reverse the high court rulings.

"Taken separately, each of these retreats would be a source of genuine concern," he said. "Together they are a serious threat to the 35 years of progress we have achieved toward a better and fairer society."

Thursday's ruling follows three other significant high court setbacks for those urging more aggressive steps to combat bias.

Last January, the court banned racial quotas in the awarding of public works projects by state and local governments.

On June 5, the justices restricted the use of statistical evidence to prove an employer illegally relegates minorities or women to lower-paying jobs.

And just last Monday, the court significantly expanded the power of white men to challenge court-approved affirmative action plans, even years after those plans took effect.

Bruce Fein, a conservative who keeps a close watch on high court rulings, said civil rights groups were exaggerating the significance of the decision.

Scientists Say Ordinary Light Can Reset Humans' Body Clock

By Paul Recer
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Scientists in Boston are learning to treat jet lag, insomnia and other symptoms of a jangled body clock with carefully controlled doses of ordinary light.

Dr. Charles Czeisler and colleagues at the Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston reported today that they succeeded in consistently resetting the body clocks of test subjects using timed exposures to a light about as bright as the rising sun. Their account of the experiments was published in Science magazine.

Czeisler said the wake-rest cycles of the subjects could be moved forward or back with ease, but the changes lack the precision needed for a useful therapy for jet setters or for those with troubled sleep.

But, eventually, he said, the study will develop the techniques needed to use light to change the body clock and relieve the wilting weariness many feel when their life style is out of phase with the sun.

Czeisler said the research proved conclusively that light can send a signal to the brain to reset the biological clock.

When such light shows up at the wrong time, it jumbles the body's wake-sleep cycle — called the circadian rhythm. Airline travelers know this disorder as jet lag, but it's also a problem for night shift workers and for thousands of people with sleep disorders, said Czeisler.

Many airline schedules aggravate jet lag, he said, because travelers are forced to cross many time zones in darkness and arrive at their destination just as the sun comes up.

"When you leave here to fly overnight to London, the flight arrives over there at 6 or 7 in the morning," he said. "When you go outside, you are getting an exposure to light that is resetting you in exactly the opposite direction than what you wish to be set. It is resetting you for Hawaii, instead of Europe."

Czeisler said a flight that arrives in Europe later in the day would be easier on the body clock, but not enough is known yet about the effects of light on human circadian rhythm to adjust travel times precisely.

"The system is much more complicated than we previously thought," he said.

To better understand the body clock, Czeisler and other investigators put 14 young men into a darkened laboratory free of any external time cues, and then exposed them to light from fluorescent lamps that mimicked the intensity of the dawn sun.

Czeisler said the researchers found they could reset the body clock of the test subjects in any direction, depending on when the light was applied.

He said exposure at one part of the cycle would move the body clock backward, an eastward time shift, while exposure at another time would have the opposite effect. Exposure at some points in the biological day, said Czeisler, would cause no change.

Circadian cycles of the test subjects were determined by measurements of body temperature, hormone levels, kidney function and alertness, all of which are affected by the body clock.

Unlike travelers, they were exposed only to the light called for in the experiment. Czeisler said all light exposure durations, intensities and frequencies influence the body clock.

Science, which published a report of the study, is the journal of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. Co-investigators in the study were Richard E. Kronauer, James S. Allan, Jeanne F. Duffy, Megan E. Jewett, Emery N. Brown and Joseph M. Ronda, all associated with Harvard University.

Zsa Zsa Claims Police 'Rough'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — An attorney for Zsa Zsa Gabor said he will file a complaint accusing Beverly Hills police of roughing up the actress during her arrest for alleged traffic law violations.

"Right now, we are going to prepare a formal complaint to the police chief," Miss Gabor's lawyer, Dale Gribow, said Thursday. "She's standing up for the rights of the average person."

Miss Gabor claims a "gorgeous officer" mistreated her, impounded her $215,000 car and misplaced a diamond brooch during her arrest Wednesday.

At one point, she said, the officer stood "looking like Tom Selleck-plus. I said, 'Darling, you are so handsome, why are you doing that to me?' He must've had a bad night with his girlfriend."

Miss Gabor held a news conference Thursday dressed in a sweater monogrammed with "Rodeo Drive Beverly Hills." She showed bruises on her wrists and arms.

"I look as if I was in a war. I'm cut where they put those cuffs on and I'm black and blue all over," Miss Gabor said by telephone earlier.

She was handcuffed and taken to police headquarters after allegedly slapping a policeman who pulled over her Rolls-Royce Corniche for expired license tags.

She was booked for investigation of evading a policeman, battery on a policeman, driving without a valid license, driving an unregistered car and driving with an open flask of whiskey.

Department of Motor Vehicles records show Miss Gabor's driver's license expired on June 6, 1988, her birthday. According to DMV records, she was born in 1923, but the reference book "Filmgoer's Companion" said she was born in 1919, making her 70 last week.

She was released Wednesday afternoon on her own recognizance and ordered to appear in court July 12.

After the officer, whose name wasn't disclosed, stopped her, he discovered her driver's license had also expired, police Lt. James Smith said.

"He proceeded to run a check on the license plate and license and she told him she was in a hurry and she left," Smith said.

The officer chased her for about two blocks until she pulled over. As she stepped out of the vehicle she slapped him, Smith said.

But Miss Gabor said she was dragged out of her car by the officer, who was screaming obscenities at her throughout the incident.

Jane Wyatt Looks Back At Her Role On Television's 'Father Knows Best'

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Jane Wyatt came away from taping an appearance for a special "Father Knows Best" marathon for Father's Day surprised at just how good the sitcom was almost 30 years ago.

"We stopped filming in 1960," said Ms. Wyatt. "It's hard to believe. We saw bits and pieces of shows when we taped the special. They were quite good. The show had substance. That's why it lasted so long. Our shows were written to be entertaining, but the writers had something to say."

Ms. Wyatt and the rest of the cast will appear during the seven-hour "Father Knows Best" marathon on the CBN Family Channel on Sunday, Father's Day.

In its last season of original episodes, 1959-60, "Father Knows Best" ranked sixth in the Nielsen ratings. It has run on all three networks. CBS first ran it in 1954, then NBC picked it up the second year, then it returned to CBS until 1961-62. ABC ran the series one last season.

Robert Young starred as Jim Anderson. Ms. Wyatt was Margaret. The children were Elinor Donahue as Betty, or "Princess," Billy Gray as James Jr., better known as "Bud," and Lauren Chapin as Kathy, "Kitten."

"Father Knows Best" was the quintessential wholesome family sitcom, along with "The Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet" and "The Life of Riley."

The show had begun in 1949 as a radio show with Young in the lead role and June Whitley as Margaret. When it was made into a television show, Ms. Wyatt was offered the role.

"I turned it down time after time," she recalled. "I said I didn't want to be in a TV serial. I was in New York doing live television. Then my agent asked me to read a script. I did and it was charming. Then when I began the first year, we used the radio scripts. They concentrated on Bud, and I was just standing around doing nothing. I was used to being a busy actress, but when they began writing new scripts we all had a lot to do."

She said she gives a lot of credit for the show's success to Eugene Rodney, who was Young's partner in ownership of the series.

"He ran it just like a Broadway show," she said. "It was his whole life. We were called 'Miss Wyatt' and 'Mr. Young.' Not a word of a script could be changed. Every line was written for a specific character. Each character's personality was so well-defined you couldn't give someone's line to another character. And all 39 scripts were written in advance."

"Each script always solved a little problem that was universal. It appealed to everyone. I think the world is hankering for a family. People may want to be free, but they still want a nuclear family."

A new generation probably knows Ms. Wyatt for her role as Mr. Spock's mother on "Star Trek." She appeared in the original TV series on NBC and in the fourth "Star Trek" movie.

Before "Father Knows Best," Ms. Wyatt starred in such movies as the 1937 version of "Lost Horizon," "Gentleman's Agreement" and "Task Force." She's been busy most recently with series guest spots and TV movies, and she's currently appearing in the theatrical film "Amityville: The Horror Goes On."

But Ms. Wyatt is still famous as Margaret Anderson. On Mother's Day, she went to Tampa, Fla., for a joint appearance with two other TV moms, Barbara Billingsley of "Leave It to Beaver" and Florence Henderson of "The Brady Bunch."

Ms. Wyatt said there is talk of doing a spinoff of "Father Knows Best" with Elinor Donahue as the mother. Ms. Wyatt and Young would make occasional appearances as the grandparents.

The CBN Family Channel will present seven episodes from the original series: "Second Honey-moon," "Betty, Girl Engineer," "Bud, The Willing Worker," "Kathy's Big Chance," "A Medal for Margaret," "Short Wave," and "Father of the Year."

"I can't get over the interest people still have in the show," said Ms. Wyatt. "When we did it we had no idea it would make such a big splash. ... I went to Peru on a botanical trip last year. The stewardesses on the plane were all over us. In Lima, we were besieged by people. The show's called 'Papa Lo Sabe Todo' there."

TV 'Highway' Actor Victor French Dies

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LOS ANGELES — Victor French, who parlayed his interests in boxing and acting into a career as stuntman, actor and director, died Thursday morning after a three-month battle with lung cancer. He was 54.

The co-star of "Highway to Heaven" and several other top TV series died at 7:50 a.m. after being admitted June 7, said a spokeswoman at Sherman Oaks Community Hospital in the San Fernando Valley.

The son of a stuntman who instilled a love of Western lore in the boy, the burly and bearded actor's first job was with his father performing stunts on "Gunsmoke." He studied theater at Los Angeles Valley College and at California State University Los Angeles before beginning to appear regularly as an actor on "Gunsmoke," then as Agent 44 on the spy spoof "Get Smart" and then "Bonanza," where he first met Michael Landon, who was to bring him into the "Little House on the Prairie" and then take him on the road in "Highway to Heaven."

On "Highway to Heaven," which completed its final season this year, French was burly ex-cop Mark Gordon, who accompanied Landon, playing a probationary angel, on a series of adventures around the country.

He had played an equally vital role as Landon's good friend and neighbor Isaiah Edwards on "Little House."

In a 1985 interview with TV Guide, French credited Landon with rescuing him from "20 years of playing killers, rapists and every kind of villain and pervert known to man."

He joked that "it had gotten to the point where crowds parted when they saw me coming...."

Landon declined to comment on his friend's death, as he also did when "Bonanza" patriarch Lorne Greene died, saying through his publicist that he did not feel such things are proper.

French left "Little House" to become Chief Roy Mobe, the star of "Carter Country," a racial comedy where he was the white police chief coping with a black deputy trained in big-city criminology.

French also was seen in the brief (1966-67) TV comedy series "The Hero."

He also directed dozens of episodes of "Little House," "Highway to Heaven" and other TV shows and for the theater, winning a Los Angeles Drama Critics Award for his production of "12 Angry Men." He wrote the play "My Daughter Comes on Thursdays."

VICTOR FRENCH

French made several movies of the week for television and was featured in such motion pictures as "Death of a Gunfighter," "Rio Lobo," "There Was a Crooked Man," "Wild Rovers," "The Nickel Ride" and "Officer and a Gentleman."

French owned a vast collection of Western lore, including Buck Jones' hat, Tom Mix's and Roy Rogers' boots and thousands of theater lobby cards. His other avocation was boxing which he traced to a childhood interest. In 1985 he became a key financial backer of Ten Goose Boxing Club of Van Nuys, a stable whose fighters include middleweight champion Michael Nunn.

Downey Says Show On Way Out

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Even Morton Downey Jr. predicts his confrontational nationally syndicated TV talk show is headed down the tubes.

"It's my guess that it'll be all over in September," Downey told the Daily News in today's editions. "It's a very sad state of affairs."

Downey said that so far the show has been sold in 22 markets, and needs at least 60 to get renewed.

Still, distributor MCA-TV insists it hasn't decided the show's fate and is still actively selling it for next season, the News reported.

Whatever went wrong, "it certainly wasn't from a lack of publicity," said the man noted for enthusiastically berating guests, including skinheads, feminists and homosexuals.

Just two months ago Downey was in the headlines again when he claimed a bunch of neo-Nazis attacked him in a San Francisco bathroom, cut his hair and drew a swastika on his face. Critics charged it was a publicity stunt.

The Downey show first aired on the New Jersey-based WWOR-TV in November 1987 and went into national syndication the following May. At its peak it was shown on 72 stations. But recently several stations have either dropped it or moved it into later time slots.

"I feel bad that this will mean the end of this type of talk show," Downey said. "No one will take a chance on it anymore."

Downey said he won't be caught unprepared if the show is canceled. He told the News he's working on a summer special for one of the networks, a Christmas album and night club revues for Las Vegas and Atlantic City.

Kristofferson Wins Custody Of Children

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — Entertainer Kris Kristofferson and his wife, honoring a promise to their slain housekeeper, have become guardians of the woman's three daughters.

The Malibu couple's request was granted Tuesday by Superior Court Judge David Rothman after several days of closed hearings to decide custody of Maria Juana Aguilar's children.

'Ollie' Pleads

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Actor David Keith, who recently played Oliver North in a TV movie, has pleaded innocent to drunken driving charges.

The 33-year-old actor, who also has played in the movies "An Officer and a Gentleman" and "Lords of Discipline," was absent from the Municipal Court hearing Thursday, but his attorney, Robert Shapiro, entered his plea, and Keith was allowed to remain free on his own recognizance.

The charges stem from a crash about midnight May 20, when Keith's 1988 Ford Mustang collided with another car in West Hollywood. No one was seriously injured. Keith's blood alcohol level tested at .18 percent, almost double the state standard for drunken driving.

Kristofferson and his wife, Lisa, said they wanted keep a promise they made to her a week before her death: to see that her children were taken care of should anything happen to her.

Rothman granted co-guardianship to the woman's sister, Vicenta Aguilar, with whom the children will live in Culver City. He refused a guardianship request from the family of Ricardo Arauz, who pleaded guilty in March to second-degree murder in the shooting death of his common-law wife, Ms. Aguilar.

The father's relatives had sought guardianship of the two children fathered by Arauz: Maria, 4, and Marta, 9. The father of their 12-year-old half-sister, Brenda, lives in El Salvador.

The youngsters' 32-year-old mother had faithfully served the Kristofferson family as a housekeeper for 10 years, according to court documents.

Shortly before she died, Ms. Aguilar confided in Mrs. Kristofferson that she feared for her life because of her husband's beatings. A week later, she was shot three times and killed.
