Premier Papandreou Rejected By Greeks

By Dina Kyriakidou
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATHENS, Greece — Voters rejected Premier Andreas Papandreou's scandal-plagued socialist government, and thousands of people rallied in the streets today to cheer the conservative opposition that finished first.

But the center-right New Democracy party of Constantine Mitsotakis failed to capture a majority, meaning the conservatives will have to try to forge a coalition with other parties or else call new elections.

Official results from 18,491 of the 20,081 voting precincts clearly indicated that Mitsotakis' party would fall far short of the parliamentary majority needed to make him the next premier.

Government computer projections indicated that in Sunday's vote his party would win 144 of the 300 seats in Parliament; Papandreou's Panhellenic Socialist Movement, 125; the Coalition of Left and Progress, 29; and one each for the conservative Democratic Renewal and a Greek-Moslem of Turkish origin from northeastern Greece.

The Ministry of Interior said today that with more than 90 percent of the ballots counted, New Democracy was getting 44.43 percent of the vote and Papandreou's party, also known as PASOK, 39.07 percent. The Coalition of Left and Progress had 12.97 percent and the rest was split among minor parties and independents.

Official figures showed that New Democracy received 2,655,580 votes, PASOK 2,335,123 and the Coalition of the Left and Progress 775,403. Abstention was running about 21 percent of the 7.89 million eligible voters.

"New Democracy has toppled PASOK from the government," Mitsotakis told thousands of screaming supporters from the steps of party headquarters as dawn rose over the capital. Tens of thousands of supporters celebrated in the streets of central Athens.

As the results trickled in shortly after the polls closed Sunday night, gloom set in at the socialist camp. The atmosphere was muted at Papandreou's suburban home. His party headquarters in central Athens closed early.

A well-laid buffet in the garden of Papandreou's spacious villa remained untouched as PASOK supporters and friends scowled at a

10,000 Are Homeless As Rivers Overflow

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DHAKA, Bangladesh — Rain-swollen rivers burst their banks in northern and eastern Bangladesh, washing away mud-and-straw houses and leaving at least 10,000 people homeless, officials and news reports said today.

The government-owned Bangladesh Times newspaper said the Teesta River, which rose after three days of monsoon rains, swept away at least 1,000 houses in the northern Rangpur and Lalmonirhat districts.

Officials at the town of Tangail, 45 miles north of Dhaka, said the Jamuna River washed away another 800 houses in the Tangail district. The officials, who were contacted by telephone, spoke on condition of anonymity.

They said an estimated 10,000 people were homeless. Officials at the Flood Forecasting Center in Dhaka, also speaking on condition of anonymity, said at least 600 people were left homeless Saturday when the Gumti River broke through an embankment in eastern Comilla district.

Bangladesh, a low-lying country, is criss-crossed by hundreds of rivers that form the deltas of the Brahmaputra and the Ganges, the two major rivers of the Indian subcontinent.

Floods are an annual calamity after the summer monsoons. Last year, floods inundated about four-fifths of the country and at least 1,400 people were killed. At least 2.3 million were left homeless.

Bush Calls For Drug-Free Schools

By Christopher Connell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush, opening a week of White House events focusing on youth, today called for a day when every school in the nation will be "safe and drug free."

At a Rose Garden ceremony, Bush honored schools for their efforts to rid their corridors and classrooms of drugs.

A high school from each state was cited in the ceremony as part of the annual Drug-Free Schools recognition program, launched by drug policy coordinator William J. Bennett when he was secretary of education in the Reagan administration.

"As I look around here today, I see some of the top commandos in the war on drugs — our teachers, community leaders, parents and students," the president said.

"You're the ones winning this war, because you are the ones looking to tomorrow, you're the ones who know it takes a clear mind to get a good education and lead a productive life. You understand that students have a right to learn in drug-free schools."

Bush said that, while most schools were now out for the summer, "there's one last lesson for all Americans to learn." He called for "downright stubbornness" in the effort to see that "every school in this country can win, every school in this country can be safe and drug free."

The president noted that the red tie and ribbon he was wearing was intended to symbolize drug-free schools. He said it was inspired by Harold Maready, the principal of Roosevelt Vocational School in Lake Wales, Fla.

"He bet (his students) that that if at least half the school wore red — that is, were drug free — he'd paint his bald head with the words, 'Just Say No.' Well, 225 out of 295 showed up in red — and guess what happened."

"I think Mr. Maready had a great idea, and I'm looking for Marlin Fitzwater here somewhere," Bush joked, referring to his balding press secretary.

The president tonight was traveling to the Philadelphia suburb of Wyncote, Pa., to deliver a commencement address at Cheltenham High School. His topic was one that many speakers cover at similar ceremonies: the future awaiting the graduates.

Bush also was meeting today with visiting Guyana President Desmond Hoyte.

Then on Tuesday the 1989 President Scholars — more than 100 of the nation's top high school seniors in academics and the arts — will have their hour in the White House limelight.

Bush also will attend a fund-raiser for disadvantaged children sponsored by Washington Redskins football coach Joe Gibbs.

Then on Wednesday, Bush plans another White House ceremony to announce the start of the Youth Entering Service, or YES program — a foundation-led effort to encourage more young people to perform community service.

Bush says he will ask Congress to pump $25 million a year for four years into the YES to America Foundation to help provide matching grants for service projects.

Bush, father of five and grandfather of 11, spent most of Father's Day at Camp David before returning Sunday afternoon with Mrs. Bush and their eldest grandson, 13-year-old George P.

IRA Blamed For Barracks Bomb Blast

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OSNABRUECK, West Germany — A bomb exploded outside the living quarters of a British military barracks in Osnabrueck today, causing extensive damage but no injuries, a military spokesman said.

No one immediately claimed responsibility, but West German authorities said they suspected the Irish Republican Army was responsible.

The two suspected attackers fled after they were surprised by a West German employee at the barracks.

The employee was hit in the face and investigators later found four more unexploded bombs containing plastic explosives at the barracks, officials said.

Col. Henry Day of the British Forces Headquarters in West Germany said the bomb exploded at 1:10 a.m. at Quebec Barracks, 100 miles north of Duesseldorf.

The bombing came five days after West German officials indicted two alleged IRA members for earlier at-WASHINGTON — Most American middle schools are too large and impersonal to meet adolescents' intellectual and emotional needs, and the result for many students may be a "life on the edge of society," according to a new report.

Middle grade schools could be a strong positive influence on adolescents as they face a world in which they are tempted to experiment with alcohol, sex and drugs, according to the report by a task force of the Carnegie Council on Adolescent Development.

Instead, "many large middle grade schools function as mills that contain and process endless streams of students. Within them are masses of anonymous youth," said the study. "Such settings virtually guarantee that the intellectual and emotional needs of youth will go unmet."

The report, titled "Turning Points: Preparing American Youth for the 21st Century," was released Sunday on the first day of a three-day meeting sponsored by the Carnegie Corp. of New York to focus on ways to improve mid-level schools.

Of the 28 million U.S. children between ages 10 and 17, one-fourth may face futures in "serious jeopardy" because of the consequences of school dropout, drug use or early, unprotected sex, the study said, citing research conducted for an upcoming book, "Adolescents at Risk," by Joy G. Chemical Fire Forces Evacuations

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BETHANY, Conn. — A chemical fire erupted at a factory early today, forcing at least 70 people from their homes and injuring 14 firefighters, authorities said.

The fire at Carbolabs Inc., also known as JayChem Industries, broke out about 3:45 a.m. and was brought under control by about 6:30 a.m. but flared an hour later, State Police said. Smoke continued to waft into the air at midmorning.

Fourteen firefighters were taken to Yale-New Haven Hospital complaining of chest pains and breathing difficulty, said Michael Driscoll of the Seymour Ambulance Association. The hospital said they did not appear to be seriously injured.

An additional 34 firefighters were taken to the hospital as a precaution, Driscoll said.

The cause of the fire was under investigation.

Henry Renfrew, a hazardous materials specialist with the state Fire Marshal's office, described Carbolabs as a pharmaceutical-type lab where dozens of chemicals were kept, most in containers of a gallon or less.

Two chemicals used by the company were phosgene and isocyanate, which can cause upper respiratory

Views On Dental Health

Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S., P.A.
Family & General Dentistry

CHRONIC JAW PROBLEMS

In dentistry, it is a truism that the longer a condition is left untreated, the worse it will get and the more difficult the treatment itself. This is true whether the condition is a cavity, gum disease, or jaw problems.

Most jaw problems which are not the result of some specific disease are found to be part of the TMJ SYNDROME (temporomandibular joint syndrome). Symptoms develop gradually as the result of a bad bite, tension, or a combination of the two. At first you might notice an ache in the jaw or surrounding area, headache, clicking or popping in the joints themselves. You can also develop muscle spasms which make it difficult, or impossible, to open and close your mouth normally.

Don't delay treatment. In chronic cases, irreversible changes can occur to the ligaments, disc, or bony surfaces within the joint. These include arthritis, as well as erosion of bone surfaces and formation of scar tissue.

If you have any of the symptoms of TMJ Syndrome, call our office today. We would like to recommend treatment to help you feel better.

Note: We welcome new patients, both children and adults.

Study Says Middle Schools Not Equipped To Aid Adolescents

for learning by dividing large schools into "schools within schools" where children know each other and their teachers better.

—Teaching a core academic program aimed at producing students who are literate, understand the sciences and have a sense of health, ethics and citizenship.

—Eliminating use of "tracking" students by achievement level, which the report said essentially dooms many children to failure.

—Giving teachers and administrators more creative power, and hiring teachers who specialize in dealing with young adolescents.

—Involving parents and community leaders in the schools.

—Boosting students' health and fitness with more in-school programs and by helping those who need public health care to get it.

The study suggested dividing schools into smaller communities of 200 to 500 students who represent a cross-section of the school in terms of ethnic and socioeconomic background and intellectual ability. Those students would be teamed with a set of teachers who would work together to provide a more unified learning environment.

For example, separate classes in English, arts, history and social studies could be organized around a single theme such as immigration, the report said. Students should be given long-term writing assignments and national achievement tests should be expanded to judge students on the basis of an overall work portfolio, it said.

Some classes should be longer than the 40- to 50-minute norm, and each student "should be well known by at least one adult" at school who can provide counseling and academic help, the report recommended.

The result, the report said, should be "a thinking, productive, caring and healthy person who takes seriously the responsibility of good citizenship."

"Our vision is of such an outcome for every youth of the nation, not just for those more advantaged than others," it said.

Albert Shanker, president of the American Federation of Teachers, praised the report, saying it "recognizes it is not too late to improve the educational opportunities of those students who are already in school."

National Education Association President Mary Hatwood Futrell said she agreed with the report's recommendations, "but the reality is that we must lay the groundwork for school success long before these tumultuous years."

"We must begin earlier than grades six, seven or eight," she said. "We must prime our youngest students for academic success."

IRA Blamed For Blast Outside Barracks

tacks on the British military in West Germany.

British military authorities first said property damage in today's blast was slight, but a spokesman later said the damage was extensive.

A military spokesman in Osnabrueck, who requested anonymity, said the blast caused "severe damage to the one-story building."

He said the explosion "blew a hole from ground level to the roof of the building measuring about eight feet in diameter."

"It also blew out numerous windows in the area," he said.

The unidentified West German employer was treated at a local hospital for facial scratches and bruises, the spokesman said.

He said the employee was a 62-year-old boilerman. "He was just making his rounds and accidentally stumbled onto them," the spokesman said.

Police in Osnabrueck said 1,000 people living near the barracks were temporarily evacuated while bomb squads checked for more explosives.

The barracks is the headquarters of the 12th Armoured Brigade and the 23rd Engineer Regiment, of the Royal Corps of Engineers, officials said. About 800 British troops are stationed at the barracks.

The IRA has in the past attacked British troops in Europe as part of its guerrilla campaign to force the British out of Northern Ireland and unite the predominantly Protestant province with mostly Roman Catholic Ireland.

On June 14, West German prosecutors said they had indicted on attempted murder charges two suspected Irish Republican Army members held in connection with 1987 and 1988 bombing attacks that wounded 46 people.

Coal Strike Spreads

By Rob Wells
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

McANDREWS, Ky. — A 76-day-old strike against Pittston Coal Group spread to Kentucky today, while a wildcat walkout by more than 20,000 miners in support of the Pittston employees expanded to a seventh state.

Terry Varney, spokesman for a United Mine Workers local, said production stopped at Eastern Coal Corp.'s three mines as of 12:01 a.m. today. Eastern is a Pittston subsidiary. About 200 people work at the mines, Varney said.

The union had predicted the Kentucky strike after 1,600 Pittston miners walked off the job in April in Virginia and West Virginia.

The union, meanwhile, held a rally in Pennsylvania and prepared for court action by coal industry officials in Indiana.

More than 20,000 UMW members Sunday were on a sympathy strike begun June 12. Unlike the Pittston walkout, the sympathy strike in Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Virginia, Tennessee, Indiana and Kentucky lacked official union backing.

This morning, miners in Ohio joined the sympathy strike. Workers at three Southern Ohio Coal Co. mines employing 1,100 union miners didn't show up for the midnight or morning shifts, said Terry Trimper, a spokeswoman for American Electric Power Co., Southern Ohio's parent company.

"We've received no communications from them," said Ms. Trimper.

There was no immediate comment this morning from the union's Ohio headquarters.

Union officials in Nova Scotia and Alabama have said miners there also were likely to stage unsanctioned strikes. All of Indiana's 1,750 union miners were off the job for the first time in eight years, while in West Virginia about two-thirds of the state's 24,000 miners are estimated on sympathy strike. At least 2,500 wildcat strikers were idled in Pennsylvania, 790 in Virginia, 700 in Kentucky and 200 in Tennessee.

The wildcat strikers say they're off the job to show support of the UMW's sanctioned strike against Pittston, which last week declared negotiations at an impasse. That move allows Pittston to implement its latest contract offer. UMW leaders are required by law to present that offer to their membership.

At issue in the Pittston strike are benefits and wages. One of the main rallying points for the wildcat strikers is the jailing of three UMW leaders who helped organize the Pittston strike. They also fear that Pittston demands that would improve competition with foreign producers would be applied by other U.S. companies.

As the Eastern Coal strike began, a picket line was set up at the gates of the company's main coal production facility at McAndrews. About 20 miners milled about a freshly constructed picket shack.

"We are not anticipating anything going on tonight," Varney said. "It's going to be peaceful and quiet, the way we like it."

A Kentucky State Police cruiser drove by the picket shack, and the troopers asked the miners how they were doing and if they had any hot coffee. The policemen left telling the miners, "Good luck."

Several miners from West Virginia also stopped by to show their support.

All miners wore camouflage and had small yellow ribbons pinned to their shirts to show solidarity for the strike.

Calls to Eastern's main office Sunday night went unanswered, and Pittston spokeswoman Susan Copeland could not be reached late Sunday night at her home.

Local 5737 President Glenn Stanley said he received a telegram and a phone call from UMW President Richard Trumka on Sunday afternoon authorizing the local to strike.

According to Stanley, Trumka said it was time to strike Eastern because the company reportedly was ready to ship a large order of coal. Stanley could not provide any further details.

Artist Dies

ROME (AP) — Mino Maccari, a noted artist and founder of a satire magazine that opposed the fascism of Benito Mussolini, has died at the age of 91, his family said Saturday.

Maccari died late Friday at home of natural causes, they said.

The painter and graphic artist co-founded the magazine "Il Selvaggio" (The Savage) in 1924 and became its main illustrator.

The magazine derided fascism and supported a literary and artistic movement known as "Strapaese," which emphasized Italy's peasant tradition and rejected foreign, cosmopolitan models.

After the magazine ceased publication in 1943, Maccari continued to write and draw satire of Italian life, especially of the upper classes and the powerful.

The funeral was to be private, his family said.

Greenville police said today that 90-year-old Richard Warren King of 2009 Fern Drive was found dead in the back yard of his house Sunday and Regional Medical Examiner Dr. Page Hudson has ruled the death a suicide.

Officer R.C. Allsbrook said a neighbor, who reported the incident at 5:23 p.m., heard a shot fired and then while investigating, found King hanging by the neck on a nylon rope outside a storage building. He had been shot once in the chest with a .38 caliber pistol.

Other officers familiar with the case said this morning that King had been experiencing health problems.

Mayors Meet

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Republican National Chairman Lee Atwater told the nation's mayors today his party is "not opposed to spending more money on the cities" and will actively recruit blacks as mayoral candidates.

Atwater said Republicans hope to establish "a political beachhead" in the cities by winning the New York mayoral race this year.

Atwater, at the annual meeting of the U.S. Conference of Mayors, steered clear of the Bush administration's differences with Republican and Democratic mayors on guns and taxes but said the president would be responsive to cities.

"George Bush ... does have the cities in mind," Atwater said. "We in the Republican Party are not opposed to spending more money on the cities — we just want to be careful to spend taxpayers' money on projects that work."

More than 200 mayors heard Atwater at the conference, which Bush declined to attend. Atwater offered no specifics on urban aid, which the mayors want increased.

Later, speaking to reporters, he dismissed disagreements the administration has with the mayors on resolutions nearing final approval by the group. Republican and Democratic mayors have backed policy statements calling for an increase in federal taxes and an outright ban on semi-automatic weapons.

Continuity

West's Challenge Is To End Strife

Continuity and stability. That's what the headline "West Will Remain In Pitt" means for the county's schools.

Eddie West, superintendent of Pitt County schools since 1982, was not selected last week as top administrator of New Hanover County schools, a job he vigorously sought. While that announcement was undoubtedly a personal disappointment, it is good news for Pitt.

It means the county will retain a leader who has charted a clear, ambitious course for public education — a leader with a record of planning, problem-solving and implementing change. It means this record will continue uninterrupted, a shot of stability at a time when constancy is the best medicine for a school system with growing pains.

West's continued challenge in Pitt County is to dissolve the fragments of divisiveness that impair the schools' quest for excellence. In 1986, Pitt and Greenville schools merged, with West at the helm. That consolidation was the beginning of a new era of education for the county. It represented equalization of school facilities, standards and opportunities, better racial balance and more efficient management. The schools have moved steadily toward these goals since consolidation.

But, like any progressive growth, merger was not without pain. There was resistance to change. There were those who felt their community and their schools were treated unfairly under a consolidated system. There were those who failed to grasp the vision of excellence offered by merger.

One of the side effects of merger was factiousness. Black versus white, rural versus urban, county versus city ... these interests, despite efforts to resolve them, continue to conflict. That strife is apparent on the school board, in the schools themselves and in the community. It is a visible scar on the flesh of the school system, one that threatens to sever and bleed onto the fabric of progress.

West's challenge is to erase this scar, to purge its mark. How? through continuity — adherence to the course to which he has already directed the schools. Consider these facts about West's tenure in Pitt.

He successfully merged two two school systems in the face of intense controversy. He set specific goals for the unified school system and implemented equally specific measures to achieve them — adjusting school attendance lines to achieve better racial balance, for example. He directed methodical, long range financial planning for a school system that never had more than a knee-jerk approach to spending money. Then he obtained more money from the county commission for public education than any superintendent before. Realizing that would not be enough to fund excellence, he initiated the Pitt County Foundation, a private endowment for Pitt County schools.

West has placed the schools at the edge of an era of expansion. To move forward, however, will require adherence to current goals. It will require continuity of direction and perseverance.

Pitt's schools have a better chance to maintain this momentum with West as superintendent.

Recognition, But No Answers

WASHINGTON — When former President Richard M. Nixon vetoed a federally sponsored child-care bill in 1971, he called it "the most radical" piece of legislation to come out of the 92nd Congress. He accused its supporters of trying to weaken the American family and "Sovietize" its children.

In the 18 years since then, attitudes toward federally subsidized child care have shifted enormously as the number of women in the work force has multiplied, propelled by a combination of single mothers who must work and couples who find that they need two incomes to make ends meet.

Lawmakers and others, who once dismissed child care as "just a women's issue," now regard it as one that strikes at the heart of America's productivity and competitiveness.

"Demographics drives social policy. There's no question about it," said Edward Ziegler, director of Yale University's Bush Center in Child Development and Social Policy. "Something clearly has changed, and policy-makers are responding."

Former Vice President Walter F. Mondale, as a senator in the early 1970s, was a lonely voice in Congress promoting federally financed child care. "The idea was so new to people then that they got scared," Mondale said. "Now, everyone accepts it as essential."

Beyond that agreement, however, Republicans and Democrats diverge profoundly on what the government should do.

President Bush has proposed a child tax credit for poor families, even if only one parent is working. His approach assumes that the recipients will use the money for child care and that they will be able to find affordable services.

Democrats in Congress do not oppose the Bush proposal. But many of them believe it does not go far enough. They argue that there are not enough child-care services to go around, and that Congress must enact legislation that will result in an increase in services and an improvement in the quality.

Democratic-sponsored bills would provide states with money not only to offset poor families' child-care payments but also to set standards for child-care facilities and provide training and incentives for those interested in child-care careers.

The split reflects a fundamental difference in philosophy over the boundaries of federal intervention in society.

Supporters of the White House proposal, sticking to the GOP belief in limited federal involvement, say that parents should receive their federal aid directly and make their own decisions about the care of their children.

Supporters of the major Democratic-sponsored legislation argue that the Bush plan does not cover enough families or provide enough money to pay for decent child care. Without a first-class child-care system in place, they say, parents will not be able to make any real choices, no matter how much money they receive.

The underlying support for the Democratic legislation comes from social scientists who argue that decent child care is not now available in the United States.

"We are just nowhere that we should be in the social engineering of a child-care program," said Dr. Irene Goldenberg, a family psychologist and professor of psychiatry and biobehavioral science at the University of California, Los Angeles. "We are far behind many other civilized countries. The kinds of places that exist today in the United States are far behind the standards that you find elsewhere."

The philosophical underpinnings of Bush's approach to child care can be traced to a confidence in free enterprise — a belief that the market will provide the sort of child care that families want, as long as families have the money to buy it.

"President Bush assumes that if people are willing to pay, somebody will be willing to sell," said a spokeswoman for Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan. "It will be a growing market, because employers will see it as a matter of survival as the percentage of women in the work force increases."

The federal government, in this view, has no business setting standards for child-care providers. That should be left to families and, if necessary, the local governmental units closest to them.

Besides, according to the White House, existing child care is not as bad as some social scientists complain. Citing a report by the Massachusetts-based consulting company of Abt Associates, a White House fact sheet on Bush's child-care proposal said that "unregulated family child care is 'stable, warm and stimulating. ... It caters successfully to the developmentally appropriate needs of children in care.'"

Despite their fundamental differences, both philosophical camps agree on one thing: that the need for federal support for child care is urgent.

In 1988, women in the labor force numbered 51.6 million and accounted for 45 percent of the total. More than half of all mothers with children under the age of 2 are in the work force, according to the Children's Defense Fund, a public interest advocacy group. About 57 percent of all mothers with preschool children and 65 percent of all mothers with children under 18 work outside the home.

And they don't work just because they enjoy it. About one-quarter of today's working mothers are the sole support for their children, according to the Children's Defense Fund.

Under President Bush's plan, estimated to cost $2.5 billion a year within three years, low-income parents would receive a tax credit of up to $1,000 a year per child. Families with incomes between $7,143 and $8,000 would be entitled to the maximum credit; a lesser credit would be available for those with incomes up to $7,143 and between $8,000 and $13,000.

If the credit exceeded income taxes owed, the difference would be refunded by the government — a sort of a negative income tax.

Parents could spend the money however they chose, not necessarily on child care. They could care for their children themselves or use any form of child care they could find.

Critics of the Bush plan say that the maximum $1,000 credit, which is about $20 a week, would not go very far toward meeting typical child care costs.

"Family day care in major cities usually costs $75 a week or more for the care of children up to 3," said Helen Blank, a child-care specialist with the Children's Defense Fund. "If poor families are to have real choices, they must receive enough help. This is a child allowance. You can do it, but don't call it child care. It has nothing to do with child care, and won't have any impact on child care at all."

In the Senate, the leading bill is sponsored by Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn.. Titled the Act for Better Child Care, or ABC, it has garnered a surprising ally in conservative Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, one of its chief co-sponsors.

The bill would authorize $2.5 billion to provide states with funds to make child-care assistance available to working families with incomes all the way up to the state's median income. The states would decide how to provide the assistance, either through contracts with child-care providers or through vouchers for parents.

The measure would make some of the new federal funds available to states to increase the number of child-care programs, and it would set minimum federal standards for the facilities.

The ABC bill has been introduced in the House by Rep. Dale Kildee, D-Mich. But the leading proposal there, incorporating many of the same elements but also providing funds to expand Head Start and establish more school-based child-care programs, is sponsored by Rep. Augustus F. Hawkins, D-Calif.

Some action is expected in the Senate within the next few weeks. Many lawmakers are talking about considering ABC, or some form of it, in conjunction with a tax proposal, whether Bush's or one of several others that have been introduced.

"I think the president would sign a bill, even if it isn't his approach," Hawkins predicted. "The demand is so strong. I don't think the president would dare veto it."

'All The Running You Can Do' Just To Stay Put

WASHINGTON — "One wonders whether the majority still believes that race discrimination — or more accurately, race discrimination against nonwhites — is a problem in our society, or even remembers that it ever was."

That poignant sentence, from Justice Blackmun's dissent in Ward Cove v. Antonio (the Alaskan cannery case), pretty well sums up the frustration so many of us feel with the Supreme Court's recent discrimination decisions.

The problem is not that the conservative majority are bigots but that their personal experience seems to have left them unequipped to understand bigotry and unable to muster any sympathy for its victims.

It is tricky business, I know, to suggest that members of the highest Court in the land — a Court symbolized by the blindfold and the impartial scales of justice — are guided by personal predispositions. But it is foolhardy to imagine that a judge's personal background and his view of what ought to be have no bearing on his assessment of what a less-than-crystal-clear law requires.

The views of Chief Justice Rehnquist, Justice Scalia and, increasingly, Justice Kennedy suggest (and not just to me) the conservative ideologue, the tendency to prefer good theory to racially fair outcomes (Justice White has been tending toward that position since about 1970). Four other justices — Blackmun, Brennan, Marshall and Stevens — seem to care about the probable results of their rulings.

The outcome is that Justice O'Connor often represents the swing vote on the nine-member Court. As a woman who finished near the top of her Stanford Law class only to be spurned by a number of major law firms, O'Connor brings to the Court a special sensitivity to gender discrimination. But on matters of racial bias, hers is often the fifth vote of a conservative majority.

The conservatives on the Court (unlike the retired — and generally reliable — Justice Powell, who was a member of the Richmond school board during the 1950s wars over school desegregation) are largely innocent of hard-edge racial experience: thus the aptness of the Blackmun quote.

They seem to believe that racism and (except for O'Connor) sexism are something that used to exist and that efforts to reduce their effects amount to nothing more than discrimination against white men. Only the most blatant discrimination merits their concern.

Thus a plan to help minority contractors in Richmond land city contracts was overturned because its architects failed to show a pattern of discrimination. The plantation-like stratification of workers in an Alaskan cannery — whites holding virtually all the professional positions, with native Alaskans and Filipinos concentrated in the unskilled jobs — was insufficient evidence of discrimination. Women demoted under a dual-seniority system that expressly favored men were denied relief because they sought it too late — when they were demoted rather than when the system was adopted. White firefighters were allowed to challenge, after the fact, a consent decree calling for integration of the work force in Bull Connors' Birmingham. The unsettling implication is that white men can now lay claim to jobs achieved by blacks under hundreds of consent decrees.

Fortunately, except for Richmond, which was decided on constitutional grounds, the recent decisions rest on the interpretation of statutes and, thus, can be corrected by Congress, just as the Civil Rights Restoration Act corrected an overly narrow reading of the Title VII in Grove City.

"We have reason to believe that there exists in Congress a bipartisan consensus to do the right thing," says Ralph Neas of the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights. "I think we can correct the Court's decisions through congressional action, but it will require a wasteful rear-guard action to re-fight the civil-rights battles of the '60s and '70s."

Neas echoes the point made by Mary Berry of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission, who wonders "how far we might be if we had been able to work on social-policy and economic issues instead of fighting to retain what we had already won."

Maybe Lewis Carroll's "Red Queen" said it best of all: "It takes all the running you can do to keep in the same place. If you want to get somewhere else, you must run at least twice as fast as that."

It is the shame of this Court that it has transformed settled fights into running battles.

Playing A Dangerous Game With Public Education

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — The leadership of the House Appropriations Committee played a dangerous game with public education last week.

Rep. David Diamont, D-Surry, chairman of the House budget subcommittees. Because the legislature had been unable to agree on a tax increase to fund new spending for schools, he suggested that the chairmen write a budget that included no tax increase.

Diamont's game was with the Senate. At the time, the House appeared willing to okay a tax increase. The money raised would pay for a 6 percent pay raise for teachers and state employees, to put education personnel on a rational salary schedule, and to fully fund the next two steps of the Basic Education Plan. At the same time, the Senate leadership was saying it would not accept a general tax increase, but that it would raise some relatively smaller amounts of money through limited increases.

So Diamont called for a bare bones budget to show the public how much such a spending plan would hurt the schools.

There were proposals to cut the proposed 6 percent pay raise to 3 percent, or maybe to 4 percent if it was provided for only six months. The next step in the Basic Education Program, the legislature's 8-year plan to upgrade the public schools, could be delayed one year, or cut in half. The proposed options also included little or no new money for human services, cut money for satellite jails and for new Highway Patrol positions.

Analysis

On several occasions, Diamont reminded the subcommittee chairmen that they were preparing a budget that only would become law if no tax increase was passed. His remarks were reminiscent of these made by the ghost of Christmas Future in Dickens' "Christmas Carol." These are cuts that will only come about if the Scrooges in the Senate do not change their ways.

Rep. Bruce Ethridge, D-Onslow, said he tried to warn the panel that it was treading on dangerous ground, by approving a budget that did not need a tax increase, the panel would be "legitimizing" efforts to cut planned education spending. "We ought to go on record," he pleaded, "and get across to the Finance Committee and others, that needs are out there...even if this will cost tax dollars."

Ethridge went on to say that cutting the BEP and providing a 4 percent pay raise "does not say we are supporting better education in North Carolina...We should do the right thing."

Diamont was not trying to cut the BEP, nor was he, the only active teacher serving in the General Assembly, advocating a smaller raise. He was just, as Rep. David Redwine, D-Brunswick, so eloquently stated, "trying to make everybody mad" enough to force the hands of the Senate leadership.

But as Ethridge adeptly perceived, a House committee vote to support such a niggardly education budget would only play into the hands of the senators who have abandoned education reform. The panel went back and forth, first refusing to cut education funding but then agreeing. In the process, they may have seriously undermined education reform efforts in North Carolina.

Liston Ramsey sits in the back of House chamber after he lost the speaker's job on Jan 11

When Ramsey Speaks, N.C. House Still Listens

AP Member Exchange

By Mark Barrett
THE ASHEVILLE CITIZEN

RALEIGH — Despite predictions that Liston Ramsey would be only a shadow of his former self after he was ousted as House speaker, the 14-term lawmaker from Marshall has been active during the 1989 legislative session.

"Probably he enjoys his legislative activities more now than he did when he was speaker," said Rep. Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe, a longtime Ramsey lieutenant. "He's much more comfortable getting in the trenches with his fellow legislators and fighting for the things he believes in."

Ramsey, 70, doesn't speak often on the floor since he lost his bid for election to an unprecedented fifth term for speaker in January.

But when he does, there's more than a little similarity to the old stockbroker's television commercial.

"When Liston Ramsey talks, people listen," Nesbitt said.

Ramsey is characteristically modest and tight-lipped when it comes to discussing his time after the speaker's election.

"I attend the session every day, got a good attendance record," he said. "I support what I consider good legislation. I oppose what I think is bad legislation."

Friends paint a picture of a man who was cut to the bone when 20 House Democrats — from whom the strongly partisan Ramsey says he had personal commitments — deserted him and supported the election of House Speaker Joe Mavretic.

There was a time, they say, when Ramsey seemingly didn't know what to do with himself without the large power base of the speakership and the long train of supplicants that comes with it. "Of course there was a period in there when he was obviously disappointed," said Dot Barber, Ramsey's long-time legislative secretary. "He was deeply hurt."

But that time ended as the House committee system got rolling, and Ramsey's colleagues say he is one of the most active legislators in committee and still one of the most respected.

"The quality of the man is what carried him to that position (the speakership) and you can't take that away from him," Nesbitt said.

"Liston has been very helpful to our committee," said Rep. George Holmes, R-Yadkin, who chairs the House Appropriations Committee's subcommittee on capital outlay where Ramsey serves a member. "He has a vast knowledge of state government. ... He has participated probably more than any other single member."

"He's very helpful. He always has good suggestions," said Rep. Marie Colton, D-Buncombe, who chairs the House Pensions and Retirement Committee on which Ramsey sits.

Ramsey — who said he plans to seek re-election to the House — seems to wonder why anyone would expect him to act any differently.

"There wasn't any adjustment to make," he said. "I served more time not being (speaker) than I have being speaker — 27 years and only eight years of that was as speaker."

Of course he's active in committee, Ramsey said. "Most work's done in committees. Everybody knows that."

Ramsey's latest piece of work appears on the list of budget recommendations approved by his Appropriations Committee subcommittee.

Requests for new facilities from the UNC Board of Governors far outstripped funds available.

Ramsey suggested that the committee recommend funding for one project at each school. If plans had already been drawn for the project, the committee would recommend enough money for construction.

If not, the committee would only recommend planning money.

The result: the second and third largest sums recommended for the UNC system — $12.8 for development of the North Carolina Arboretum at Bent Creek and $10.4 million for a conference center at UNCA — are pet Ramsey projects in western North Carolina.

Ramsey insists the method is a good one for the state as a whole: "I try to be of service whenever I can," he said.

"Of course I had a pretty good idea of what projects already had planning money," he said.

Some observers expected Ramsey to attempt to lead a bloc of votes opposing Mavretic's forces, sort of an "old-line Democrat" opposition.

Ramsey and those who voted for him for speaker do often vote against legislation sponsored by Mavretic's backers, but Ramsey says the votes aren't at his direction. And though Mavretic has received plenty of criticism from all sides, it hasn't come from Ramsey.

"The state is bigger than any one person," Ramsey said.

Dunn: No Area Immune To Crack

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Police are using a variety of tactics to rid the streets of crack cocaine, which is quickly spreading across racial, social and economic lines in North Carolina.

"It seems to be the most rapidly growing drug on the street right now," said Charles Dunn, deputy director of the State Bureau of Investigation. "It's everywhere. There's no area that's immune."

State and local agencies together have formed drug interdiction teams to work airports, bus and train stations.

"We try and do a lot of street level enforcement as well as get them on campaigns" and other undercover operations, said J.A. Bartlett with the special investigations unit of the Greenville Police Department.

"We try and make it as unpleasant for them to deal in Greenville as we can," he said.

This spring, Jacksonville police had an officer from another department buy crack while they secretly videotaped street corner transactions near the old downtown section.

More than a dozen mid-level dealers — who were making $15,000 a week each — were arrested, said Delma

Collins, Jacksonville deputy chief. "We see the potential for it being the drug of the 90s," he said. "We've got to get it under control now before it gets away from us."

The users cannot be stereotyped. "People now go from zero — from no problem, no criminal record — to doing major crimes, doing robberies because of the power that drug has over them," Raleigh police Sgt. M.R. Longmire said.

"Anybody is subject to becoming that person, and not just the traditional junkie type," he said. "You've got clean cut, all-American, white Anglo-Saxon middle America and their families getting messed up."

Crack or rock cocaine is frequently packaged in vials that usually sell for about $20 to $25, but might go for as low as $10, depending on the amount and where it is sold. Because it is cheap and easy to get, crack has ensnared people from all walks of life.

"Today you can't say crack and cocaine are found in any ethnic group or social group," said Marshall Evans, director of the City-County Bureau of Narcotics in Cumberland County. "It crosses over all lines."

Longmire agreed. "People think that it's somebody else's problem," he said. "I've been involved on and off in drug investigations for 16 years, and I have never in the whole time seen a drug do so much so quickly to so many people."

Cocaine in any form is a highly addictive drug and treatment is still experimental, said Wendee Wechsberg, director of adult treatment services for Drug Action of Wake County. Cocaine admissions to Drug Action's adult outpatient treatment program have tripled in the past year.

"Crack is a very fast addiction," she said. "It takes over before people realize." Crack is smoked in a pipe, where its effects go directly from the lungs to the brain.

During the first quarter of 1988, 197 crack samples were submitted for analysis at the SBI laboratory in Raleigh, Dunn said. During the first quarter of this year, he said, 544 crack cases were submitted, an increase of 176 percent.

Crack first appeared in North Carolina along the interstate highways, in migrant labor areas and through airports, Dunn said.

Police say the drug funnels in from Jamaica, New York, Miami and most recently, Washington, D.C. Children also are ensnared in the drug trade.

"We've got them as young as 8 years old as runners between the houses," said Gil Campbell, chief of police in Spring Lake, small town between Pope Air Force Base and Fort Bragg. Its population explodes at night when commuter traffic and drug-dealing peak.

Earlier this year, Spring Lake police raided a house and found crack, money, guns and two boys, ages 15 and 16. "Within two weeks we busted another house, and it was the same two characters," Campbell said.

Once a teen-ager is involved in crack, it's difficult to pull him away, the chief said.

"You can tell him 'No' all day long, but when he's getting $50 to $100 a day to be a runner and even more to be a dealer, where's the motivation for him to stop?" Campbell said.

Runoff Problem

MOUNT AIRY (AP) — The fire at the Surry County tire dump owned by Billy Gray Johnston was brought under control Saturday, but the heavy rains of the past few days aggravated the problem of resulting runoff in the stream next to the dump.

Arthur B. Smith, the on-scene coordinator for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, said the escalating water level caused the runoff to become dispersed but that since the water level has dropped, the 10-member crew has been able to contain it.

"Everything's under control," Smith said, referring to the limited smoldering and contained runoff.

The runoff resulted from the incomplete combustion of the tires, Smith said. It is a black, oily substance that floats on the water and was first discovered Thursday, Smith said.

IN THE STATE

Mayoral Lobbying

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Asheville Mayor Louis Bissette will go to Washington Tuesday to try to convince a congressional committee that it should approve a $30 million federal office complex in downtown Asheville.

Bissette said he and U.S. Rep. James McClure Clarke of Fairview will testify before the House Committee on Public Works on the need for a complex adjacent to the federal courthouse.

Plans call for a five-story Federal Plaza Building to house the National Climatic Data Center and other federal offices now in the historic Grove Arcade building, which is owned by the General Services Administration.

The Grove building would be sold to a private developer and could be returned to its original use as retail space on the ground level and possibly offices and residential units on the upper floors.

The building also would be returned to the city's tax rolls if its use became commercial rather than governmental, which is not taxable.

Temple Construction

BOLIVIA, N.C. (AP) — The Wat Carolina Buddhajakra Vanaram is growing.

Buddhists have begun clearing pine trees from a low-lying area along a rural road here to make room for a $640,000 building. It will provide a place for worship and study at the site of the first Buddhist temple in the state.

The temple was consecrated last year when a monk arrived from Thailand.

As word of the temple spread to the 1,000 or so Buddhists in the state and they began visiting, worship services became cramped, said Sounthone Hemvong, president of the Buddhist Association of North Carolina.

The 10,000-square-foot traditional Thai-style building should relieve the problem, he said.

Too Wet To Fly

RALEIGH (AP) — A year-old bald eagle that had been nursed back to health got a long-anticipated send-off at Jordan Lake, but she was back in custody 90 minutes later — too wet to fly.

"You never know until you let the bird go," said Patricia A. Marcum, executive director of the Carolina Raptor Center. The eagle had been nursed at the center since October, when it was found in a Davie County yard, too weak to fly.

The bird, named Maiden America, was to be checked by a veterinarian and given time to regain strength before a second release.

"We'll try again near the roost," Ms. Marcum said. Jordan Lake was the largest population of bald eagles in North Carolina, and one of the largest on the East Coast. As many as 65 eagles have been counted during the summer migration season.

Maiden America is fully grown now, with a wing-span of about seven feet. But she will not get the bald eagle's trademark white crown and tail until she's 4 to 6 years old.

After being released, the eagle paused in a tree about 100 yards from the crowd, which included Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C. She then flew across a small pond and began playing in the water along the shore.

Miss. Firm May Buy Rutledge Education Systems

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WINSTON-SALEM — Figures that show the Rutledge College system campuses in North Carolina have one of the nation's highest student loan default rates ignore the good things the schools have done, says a spokesman for the owner of Rutledge.

"We're looking at literally thousands that we have taken off the welfare line and put out as tax-paying citizens," said Buck Lattimore, vice president of George Shinn and Associates.

"One thing you have to remember about the figures coming out of Washington is that, first of all, it is the student and not the school who is defaulting. ... Once a person fails to make even one payment, they show up on the list as a default from then on, even if they pay their loan off in full later."

Nevertheless, the statistics apparently don't worry officials with Phillips Colleges Inc. of Gulfport, Miss., which is purchasing the Charlotte-based Rutledge Education Systems.

Last week, a Rutledge official said the sale of the schools, which are owned by George Shinn, a principal owner of the Charlotte Hornets NBA team, to Phillips could be closed as early as Tuesday. He estimated the sale price for the 25-campus system to be $25 million to $30 million, the Winston-Salem Journal reported.

Rutledge's Winston-Salem campus had the highest default rate on federal loans in the state, with 69 percent of its borrowers failing to make payments in 1986 and 1987, according to figures released this month by the federal government.

Rutledge campuses in Charlotte, Raleigh, Fayetteville, Greensboro and Durham ranked second, fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth among the state's defaulters.

In South Carolina, Rutledge campuses held the top three spots on the list, and, in Virginia, a Rutledge campus ranked fourth for defaults.

James R. McElhiney, director of student affairs for Phillips, said the schools in that chain have a much lower default rate nationwide than Rutledge.

"Of all the numbers that have been bounced around, we've not been uncomfortable with any of them regarding acquisition," McElhiney said. "We've been able to control the default rate in our schools, and we feel we can do that with the acquisition, given a little time."

Rutledge and other similar schools are routinely reviewed by teams appointed by the board of governors of the University of North Carolina system, which licenses private schools in the state that give post-secondary degrees. In a report released last November, the review team cited many violations of UNC standards at all the schools.

Phillips owns Hardbarger Junior College in Raleigh, which has a default rate of 13 1/2 percent. But it is under scrutiny by the state for academic troubles similar to those found at Rutledge schools.

Many students at schools such as Rutledge borrow money from the government for school. Tuition at the Rutledge campus in Winston-Salem, which has about 225 students, ranges from $3,795 for 36 credit hours to $8,595 for 96 credit hours.

The guaranteed student loans allow trade schools to collect tuition for students who otherwise could not afford to attend college. When the student fails to pay a federal loan, the government picks up the tab. Last year's cost, according to U.S. Education Secretary Lauro F. Cavazos, was $1.8 billion.

To curb defaults, Cavazos announced June 1 that the Department of Education would make fewer loans available to students at schools where the default rate is more than 60 percent in 1991. Schools with default rates from 40 percent to 60 percent will face the same penalties unless they reduce the rates by 5 percent each year.

John F. Corey, associate vice president for planning for UNC, said when the ownership of the schools changes, the slate will be wiped clean and the UNC committee will have to begin a new review process. Until that is complete, he said, Phillips will be allowed to operate during a grace period.

Seminary Censured

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WAKE FOREST, N.C. — The president of the Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary says the school's reputation won't suffer because of the American Association of University Professors' vote to censure the seminary.

"The AAUP just has no status and no authority," seminary President Lewis Drummond said Sunday. "It's not an accrediting agency and therefore, we have no dealings with them, per se. And that's all I wish to say."

However, members of the association have often refrained from accepting appointments to an institution on the censure list to indicate their support of the principles they thought were violated.

Iris Molotsky, association spokesman, said about 190 members voted at its annual meeting in Washington, D.C., on Saturday to censure the Southern Baptist seminary, saying the seminary's trustees and administrators have violated the principle of academic freedom.

Southeastern will now be placed on the list of censured seminaries in the association's journal, which will "inform the academic community that academic freedom is in peril" at the seminary, Ms. Molotsky said.

A report issued Thursday by the association's committee on academic freedom, which recommended that the seminary be censured, said trustees were "determined to remold the seminary into an institution reflecting the board majority's religious, social and political views."

The report said the faculty tried to maintain its academic freedom while trustees "improperly interfered" with the selection of new faculty and denied reappointment to part-time faculty members who were recommended by the faculty.

Drummond and the trustees acted improperly in the selection of a new academic dean, it said.

The report concluded that "an array of statements and actions by the board of trustees and president and, most particularly, restrictions on further faculty appointments to those holding a certain ideological stance have placed academic freedom in peril at Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary."

In October 1987, the seminary's president, Randall Lolley, and seven administrators resigned to protest efforts by the school's new trustees to ensure the teaching of biblical inerrancy. The term refers to teaching the Bible as undisputed fact.

Job Hunting

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Former astronaut Sally Ride is university hopping, leaving Stanford to become a professor of physics at the University of California at San Diego.

She also will become director of the California Space Institute at UC's Scripps Institution of Oceanography, UC regents said.

Rider, 38, has been at Stanford for two years, examining issues of space and nuclear weapons policy as a research fellow in the Center for International Security and Arms Control.

As director of the space institute, Ride will oversee research projects on eight of the university's campuses, the regents said.

Supreme Court Ruling May Open Door For Land Claim

By Elizabeth Groat
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBIA, S.C. — The fate of the Catawba Indian Tribe's long-standing lawsuit to reclaim 144,000 acres of land may come one step closer to being settled today.

The U.S. Supreme Court is expected to announce its ruling today following last week's discussion of a petition by state and local governments, landowners and local businesses, said Jay Bender, an attorney representing the 1,300-member Catawba Indian tribe.

If the judges side with those groups, the issue related to adverse possession rights would be brought up for review.

If the judges disagree with those groups, a federal court will be able to hear the Catawbas' lawsuit, which was first filed in 1980, Bender said.

In January, the 4th Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va., ruled that the Catawbas could sue to claim any property within the area in question that was not adversely possessed.

A person can claim adverse possession if, among other conditions, he or she was in continuous possession of the land for 10 years between 1962 and 1980, according to the ruling.

The circuit court also said the Catawbas could make the claim for land that was not adversely possessed because they held title — a 1763 treaty from the king of England that granted them possession of the 144,000 acres in York, Lancaster and Chester counties.

Attorneys for the defendants are contesting that ruling. They contend that the South Carolina statute of limitations does not apply to the Catawbas because they have not had physical possession of the land for more than 10 years.

The Catawbas contend that the land was taken from them illegally because when it was sold to the state of South Carolina in 1840, the sale was not approved or reviewed by federal officials as required under the U.S. Non-Intercourse Act.

The state paid a total of $21,000 for the land — $5,000 of which was used to buy the tribe's current 630-acre reservation in Rock Hill, and the remaining $16,000 paid out over nine years.

"The Catawbas have a title to the land that traces back to the 1760s," Bender said. "It was a document, a treaty, entered into by the king of England and the Catawbas. It's precisely the same sort of title document that all land in South Carolina can be traced to." But Dan Byrd, a Rock Hill attorney representing several landowners in the area, said the statute of limitations should be upheld and that the circuit court did not uphold a U.S. Supreme Court's order to issue a ruling based on South Carolina laws.

"Under the law of South Carolina, there is a presumption that a person has been in possession if that person has a legal title," Byrd said. "But in finding the legal title, (the appeals court) relied upon U.S. Indian law instead of South Carolina law."

"The 4th Circuit said while it's true they don't have a deed, they have a treaty, and they think it's the same as a legal title," he said.

Bender said the defendants' request for a writ is a "last gasp" for an intermediate appeal.

"The defendants have been looking for a quick fix ... that the claim is absolutely barred from the statute of limitations. And the 4th Circuit has said that's not so," he said.

Local business officials say the lawsuit has not really hampered industrial development in the area, which includes the cities of Rock Hill, Fort Mill and Tega Cay.

However, it has delayed the sale of Jim Bakker's Heritage USA religious theme park and resort.

Stephen Mernick, a Toronto businessman who has entered into a contract to buy the 2,400-acre area from the defunct PTL, has been unable to secure title insurance on the land, which he needs in order to borrow money for the purchase.

Former Helms, East Aide Faces Kidnapping Charges

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Long before Sen. Jesse Helms hired Quentin Crommelin in 1987 as GOP chief counsel for the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, some of the aide's personal problems had gone beyond just rumors.

In 1983, Sen. John East, R-N.C., had dismissed Crommelin from his chief-of-staff job after federal investigators dropped an investigation into the alleged assault of a 16-year-old girl who also had worked in the senator's office.

Scripps-Howard News Service reported at the time that the investigation involved "allegations of other sexual incidents involving Crommelin over a period of years."

This week, Crommelin faces a preliminary hearing in Virginia on charges that he kidnapped and tried to sodomize a young woman last fall.

Many of Crommelin's political colleagues say the case shows a darker side of congressional life, where political cliques sometimes dismiss accusations as smear campaigns by their enemies, where idealistic youths are star-struck by people in power, and where well-intended efforts to give a friend the benefit of the doubt can backfire.

Crommelin, 44, seemed to have all the makings for a political career: prominent Alabama family, University of Virginia law degree, Army medals from Vietnam, and a reputation for legislative brilliance that led to top jobs with Sens. James Allen, Harry F. Byrd Jr., Strom Thurmond, East and Helms.

East, who died in 1986, rejected an appeal from Helms' top political advisers to reinstate Crommelin.

"I did recommend to John (East) that he consider taking Quentin back, but John had made up his mind not to, so there was no prolonged discussion of it," R.E. Carter Wrenn, director of the National Congressional Club, told The News and Observer of Raleigh. The Raleigh-based club, which is Helms' political organization, had run East's 1980 campaign. Helms said in a recent interview that he knew — and sought to know — almost nothing about the 1983 incident.

"I never did talk to John about it, and in fact knew nothing about it," Helms said. "There were conflicting stories."

"What I knew," he said, "is that (former Alabama Sen.) Jim Allen, for whom Quentin had worked, said he was one of the finest young men he ever saw, brilliant. And he is brilliant. ... He understands national defense as well as anybody I've ever seen. To me, he had the greatest potential, or as great a potential, as any young fellow I'd seen. And it just bewilders me that all this has happened."

Crommelin joined Allen's Senate staff in 1976 and held key posts for Byrd of Virginia and Thurmond of South Carolina before joining the East staff in 1982, partly on Wrenn's recommendation.

Sen. Jeremiah Denton, R-Ala., banned Crommelin from entering his office, several unnamed former aides to Denton and East told the newspaper. The reason, they said, was that Crommelin had made advances to the fiancée of the senator's son.

"I know of no information firsthand, but information about allegations involving Mr. Crommelin has been circulating for years," conservative leader Paul Weyrich recently told The Washington Times.

And if Helms reserved judgment on Crommelin when he hired him in 1987, he soon had a new occasion to decide whether accusations about his committee aide were true or were, as Crommelin maintained, the work of Democratic political foes. Following a New Year's Eve party, the Washington Times reported, Crommelin "severely beat" an unidentified man who was with a young woman Crommelin had dated. No charges were filed.

The mother of the young woman, however, later complained to Helms of Crommelin's behavior.

Lawmakers Eye Handgun Bill After Accidents

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TAMPA, Fla. — State lawmakers are considering a bill to make leaving a loaded firearm accessible to a child a crime after a third Florida child died this month in an accident involving youngsters playing with guns.

"We think by highlighting the responsibility to keep a loaded gun away from children, we're going to save a lot of lives," Gov. Bob Martinez said today on ABC's "Good Morning America."

"Most Floridians will accept that what law is passed will provide greater safety. We've done that with car restraints and with safety caps on bottles."

Four-year-old Silvio Claud Pierre died Saturday at Tampa General Hospital, where he had been in critical condition after shooting himself at home June 11. Two other children died earlier in the month and a girl was paralyzed from the neck down in separate, accidental shootings.

In Tallahassee, lawmakers intended to take up a bill that would make leaving a loaded gun within reach of a child a misdemeanor, unless a child died or was disfigured as a result, in which case the offense would be a felony carrying up to five years in prison.

The bill legislators will consider during a three-day special session beginning this afternoon borrows language from the state's abandoned-refrigerator law. It would require that guns be secured with a trigger lock or kept in a locked container.

The National Rifle Association has said it would not oppose the bill if it were amended to exclude shootings involving guns that are stolen from a home.

Silvio found a .25-caliber semiautomatic handgun under a couch while his mother was in the shower. His father was out.

Five days earlier, a 10-year-old Orlando boy was killed by a playmate. On June 5, an 8-year-old Miramar girl was killed by her 10-year-old brother, who thought his father's gun was unloaded.

A 4-year-old Orlando girl was critically injured when her 6-year-old brother dropped a pistol and she was wounded in the neck, and a 9-year-old Tampa boy was wounded by his 13-year-old brother as they played with a handgun.

The Orlando girl is not expected to be able to move or breathe on her own again. The 9-year-old Tampa boy underwent surgery but is expected to recover.

Martinez opposed including the gun legislation in his call for a special session on a $2.4 billion turn-pike expansion plan but changed his mind last week as the accidents continued.

Paging Firms Do Part In Drug War

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Two of the city's biggest paging companies are cracking down on drug dealers by raising rates for suspiciously frequent use of beepers.

"The drug problem in the U.S. is far beyond the realm of pagers. They're just tools — if this helps us do our little part in battling drugs then we've done something," said Ron Kilcoyne, a spokesman for NYNEX.

Police have found that many drug dealers use beepers to keep in touch with customers and delivery boys.

NYNEX on Aug. 1 plans to start charging 50 cents extra for every beep over 500 a month, $1 for every beep over 1,000 and $250 for each month a customer gets more than 1,000 beeps.

Metromedia Paging already has begun charging $1 extra for every beep over 1,000.

Kilcoyne said the average pager user gets between one and two calls a day.

"If you're getting 1,000 pages a month, you're not getting much work done — that's an amazing number of calls. It adds up to a page every 10 minutes," he said.

Kilcoyne said that industrywide about 1 percent of beeper users get more than 500 beeps a month.

Metromedia will donate its money from extra charges to Target, a national organization that helps children deal with alcohol and drug problems.

AMA Concerned About Bush's Health Care Plan

By Lindsey Tanner
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — The nation's health chief and its largest group of doctors are on a collision course over a plan by the Bush administration to curb skyrocketing health care costs.

Dr. Louis Sullivan, secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services, reiterated the administration's support for "expenditure targets" during a private meeting Sunday with the American Medical Association's Board of Trustees.

The forum was on the opening day of the AMA's five-day policymaking session, where Dr. James H. Sammons, the association's executive vice president, called the proposal "rationing" of medical care.

Under the proposal, the government would set maximum levels for reimbursing fees of doctors who treat Medicare patients. The amount by which fees exceed the target level would be cut from the next year's budget, an AMA official said.

Sammons said in a speech to more than 1,000 AMA members he has "personally communicated the medical profession's objections" to the White House and to Sullivan.

Sullivan did not mention the plan in addressing those at the meeting. He told reporters later he was trying to avoid a "confrontational approach."

"What we are trying to do ... is get a handle on the escalation of medical costs," he said.

The United States' per capita expenditures for health care are the highest in the world, using more than 11 percent of the gross national product, "and they continue to rise at an unsustainable rate," Sullivan told the convention.

"Yet the United States lags far behind other industrialized countries in some basic health indices, including average life expectancy and maternal mortality," he said.

"We have an infant mortality rate of 10.4 deaths per thousand live births, which ranks our nation 19th among industrialized countries of the Western world," he said.

In his speech, Sammons criticized delays by the Bush administration in filling key national health care positions.

"Six months into the administration, we do not have any political leadership in the Health Care Financing Administration. The post of assistant secretary for health affairs at the Pentagon is vacant. Beginning July 13th the position of surgeon general of the Public Health Service will be vacant," he said.

"This is no way to usher America in to the health care arena in the final decade of the 20th century." Sullivan said the administration is concerned about the vacancies but he argued that they do not signal a lack of leadership.

Both acknowledged that U.S. health care is in trouble but said reforms rather than a complete overhaul will cure the problems.

Sammons cited a report to be presented this week by the AMA's Board of Trustees, its governing body, criticizing the nationalized health care program in Canada.

The report says programs such as Canada's highly touted system fail to address the needs of patients and doctors, and won't work in the United States.

Some doctors started a movement this year seeking adoption of a system similar to Canada's in which individuals and employers are taxed to pay for health coverage for all.

But the board is highly critical of the system, saying "all responsibility for health care payment is placed on the government."

"In theory, Canadians have an ideal health care system: a comprehensive system of primary care, removal of all financial barriers to access to primary care, decentralization of health programs, and professional standards of care equal to or better than those of most western countries," the board said in its report.

"But in many important ways Canada's system is lacking."

Canada's program is less responsive to consumers than the U.S. system, "adoption of major medical technologies lags far behind the United States, there are growing backlogs for a variety of surgical and emergency procedures, it does not reward or encourage high performance by providers, it is rigid and inflexible," according to the report.

BALTIMORE (AP) — A man seen taking collection money from a church collapsed and died on a sidewalk after being pursued by a member of the congregation, police said.

A man who usually conducts the collection at St. Philip and St. James Church noticed someone taking money from an open safe in a chapel on Sunday afternoon, said police Sgt. Krt Ellinger.

The man chased the intruder outside, where he collapsed, Ellinger said.

Joseph Phillip Tubman, 42, of Baltimore, was pronounced dead at the scene by emergency medical workers.

Two mortuary workers wheel Thompson's body on gurney after he was executed early today

Multiple Killer Is Executed By Lethal Injection In Nev.

By Brendan Riley THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CARSON CITY, Nev. — A multiple killer who murdered a transient because he "just got in my way" was executed by injection today after thanking his guards for "letting me die with dignity."

William Paul Thompson, 52, was pronounced dead at 2:09 a.m. He gave no final statement but talked with guards as he lay on a gurney in Nevada's former gas chamber, then stared at a ceiling fan as the injection was administered.

The 300-pound Thompson spent the hours before his execution talking with a minister and with a fellow death-row inmate who is scheduled to die later this week, officials said.

He was the third person put to death in Nevada and the 112th in the nation since executions resumed in 1977. Counting Thompson, eight murderers have been executed this year.

In the only death row interview he granted, Thompson told The Associated Press on Saturday that he had recently found religion and was "paying back to society the only thing I have to offer it."

"When you give everything you got, that should be enough," he said. "My death is payment to everyone I've ever hurt, my family, the victims' families."

Thompson said he didn't want to stop his execution because he's ready to die and might kill again if he remained alive. Defense attorneys and the American Civil Liberties Union filed no last-minute petitions, and no eleventh-hour court reviews were held.

"They're letting a guilty man die with dignity," he said in the interview. "I never thought I'd be thanking someone for letting me die, never in a million years."

His last words struck the same theme. According to Warden Pete Demosthenes, as guards closed the death chamber door, Thompson said, "Thank you for letting me die with dignity." The warden also said Thompson "was very resigned to this."

Thompson, convicted of three murders, said he was the hitman in other contract murders. He said one victim was a federal prosecutor in Oklahoma in 1983.

In Tulsa, Okla., U.S. Attorney Tony Graham said he wasn't aware of any prosecutor in the state who had disappeared or was killed in 1983. Graham said Thompson's statement sounds "somewhat preposterous" and he didn't intend to investigate the claim.

Bill Price, who recently stepped down as U.S. attorney in Oklahoma City, said, "If a federal prosecutor had been killed in Oklahoma, I would definitely know about it. That (claim) is categorically false."

The other murders were in New York and in Kansas, Thompson said. He wouldn't reveal the names of the victims or the people who hired him.

Thompson declined further interviews, prison officials said.

Thompson was sentenced to die for the 1984 killing of Randy Waldron, a 28-year-old transient in Reno. After that sentence, he was convicted of killing Robert Pariset, 35, and Pariset's 28-year-old brother, John, who were camping near Auburn, Calif.

Thompson said Waldron "just got in my way" while he was on the run from the killings of the brothers. He said he shot the brothers because they were drug informants.

He said his life of crime and alcoholism started at age 12 in Texas. He said he spent more than half his life behind bars.

Fiery Everglades Highway Collision Leaves Eight Dead

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NAPLES, Fla. — Dental records will be required to identify eight people killed in a fiery collision officials said was the worst accident ever on the desolate highway through the Everglades known as Alligator Alley.

The driver of a Toyota pickup truck was trying to pass on the narrow, two-lane road about 44 miles west of Naples Sunday when he ran head-on into a Pontiac Firebird with seven people, the Florida Highway Patrol said.

The crash engulfed both vehicles in flames and killed everyone inside within seconds, said Lt. Malcolm Rhodes in Fort Myers.

"I've been here for eight years and I've never seen anything this bad," Rhodes said.

The blaze gutted the vehicles and melted the license plates, forcing investigators to sift through a grisly scene of charred debris for clues to the victims' identities.

The burning cars also sparked a brush fire that blackened hundreds of acres south of the accident.

Collier County Medical Examiner William R. Anderson said the best hope for identifying the victims was by matching teeth and bones with dental and medical records.

The 100-mile, east-west highway through the Everglades linking Fort Lauderdale and Naples was closed following the 4:40 p.m. accident and did not reopen until 8:30 p.m., said Florida Highway Patrol duty officer Doug Dailey.

Until Sunday, the worst accidents on the alley had claimed four lives. The latest four-person fatality was a head-on collision about two miles down the road from Sunday's crash Nov. 2, 1987.

"It appears (the westbound pickup driver) was just passing and did not judge the closing distance," Rhodes said. "I don't see signs of excessive speeds."

The Florida Highway Patrol initially reported that nine people were killed in the burning wreckage because officers on the scene mistakenly identified a 20- to 25-pound fish as a victim.

Tracy Roberts, 20, and Amy Burgess, 22, both of Boca Raton, sideswiped the wreckage in their car but escaped injury.

"I saw them hit and things fly and the back of the white car went up," Ms. Burgess said. "I yelled at Tracy and he swerved."

She said there was chaos following the accident.

Arrest Of Tahoe's Mayor Stuns Resort's Residents

By Elisabeth Dunham THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SOUTH LAKE TAHOE, Calif. — A hot item at Beacon restaurant is a T-shirt bearing the slogan, "Lake Tahoe, A Sunny Place for Shady People."

Such humor is common in this wooded tourist haven following charges of money laundering and conspiracy against Mayor Terry Trupp, 46, and his fourth wife, Kimberly, 24.

Hangouts like Ernie's Coffee Shop and the South Lake Tahoe Country Club have been rife with gossip and jokes about the arrests.

Not many are surprised. For years, people have wondered how Trupp afforded a Maserati and an airplane.

"He was not as much a part of the community as many of us are. He didn't belong to the Rotary Club," said John Wynn, president of the Chamber of Commerce.

"He drove fast cars, rode motorcycles and was rather grandiose in talking about his international business dealings."

When pressed about his income, Trupp often said he dealt in foreign currency.

But in an affidavit accompanying his request for a public defender, Trupp listed his only source of income as the $300 a month and medical expenses he receives from the city.

Nestled in the snow-capped Sierra Nevada of eastern California, this town of 30,000 residents hardly shows the seamy underside brought to light by a recent sting operation code named "Deep Snow."

Trupp told undercover Internal Revenue Service agents he had a "method to launder money out of the country that left no paper trail and no tax liability and that the system had been in place for 20 years," according to one affidavit.

The 20-month investigation resulted in the arrest of the Trupps and 17 others, including a chiropractor. Also arrested was Robert Moon, accused of being a drug courier who was picked up by agents as he prepared to tee off in a golf tournament.

By the casinos. And they don't contribute money into California to solve these problems."

City officials have sought to distance themselves from Trupp. They called him a skilled politician, but no one interviewed said they knew him well.

"I didn't know him outside of the city council — we didn't move in the same circles," said Acting Mayor Neva Roberts, who begins a regular term as mayor in July, when Trupp's term would have ended. "I didn't know any of his friends."

Roberts and Councilman Norm Woods said the scandal will leave no scars.

"Of course we were all shocked," said Woods, who has known Trupp 11 years. "But this is an isolated case, not a reflection on the city as a whole. We'll get over it."

But Martens, who often disagreed with the pro-growth Trupp over environmental issues, said the case has uncovered ills in government.

"I haven't heard anyone say there's something wrong with a government system that allows a guy like this to get elected for 11 years or there's something wrong with a government that allows him to put no income on his campaign and political reporting forms," he said.

The rumor mills, meantime, are keeping the issue alive.

"Since it happened, it's all we talk about," said Charlene Wightman, a bartender. "This is better than watching 'All My Children.'"

Museum In Dogfight Over MiGs

CHINO, Calif. (AP) — The government is locked in a dogfight with the Chino Planes of Fame Museum over two Soviet fighter jets on display.

The State Department, Customs Service and Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms insist the museum imported the MiGs from Poland illegally.

Officials also say the museum's 1947 Antonov, a Soviet-designed biplane still in flying condition, must go because it was bought in Hungary.

U.S. law bars importation of military equipment from a list of countries that includes Poland and Hungary, "based on our belief we should not contribute to their armament industries by purchasing implements of war," said Jack Killorin, an ATF official in Washington.

"The casinos control some of these city council members — not directly but they do it through campaign contributions," said Tom Martens of the environmental group, The League to Save South Lake Tahoe.

"We get all the social problems from the casinos. We get the drug problems, the alcohol problems and the gambling problems — all caused

China Postpones Special Congressional Session

By Kathy Wilhelm
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — Authorities today postponed indefinitely a special session of the national legislature that was scheduled before the pro-democracy movement was crushed with the intent of discussing the movement's demands.

The move further deepens the mystery about what is going on inside Communist China's traditionally secretive leadership.

The legislature may be waiting until the Communist Party holds an expected Central Committee meeting to formally oust party General Secretary Zhao Ziyang, who has reportedly already been stripped of power. Qiao Shi, the party official responsible for security, has emerged as a likely successor.

Wan Li, the chairman of the National People's Congress, had scheduled a special session beginning Tuesday.

But a man who answered the telephone at the Congress's press office said the session was postponed because Beijing has not yet returned completely to normal. No new date was set.

Several thousand student protesters had planned to stay in central Beijing's Tiananmen Square, outside the Great Hall of the People where the Congress meets, until the session began.

But they were routed out June 3-4 when troops with tanks and machine guns shot their way through huge crowds protecting the students and rolled into the square. Hundreds of unarmed civilians were killed.

The nearly 3,000-legislature normally meets just once a year, with a 135-member Standing Committee fulfilling its duties the rest of the year.

It was not clear what Wan had in mind by calling the session, though discussion had been expected on how to deal with the pro-democracy movement's demands for reforms including a free press and an end to official corruption. The congress has played a somewhat larger role in shaping legislation in recent years but still has no say in basic policy.

The 17-member Politburo and party elders including senior leader Deng Xiaoping hold the real reins of power.

Although Wan has a reputation as a political moderate, like other moderates he has publicly supported the army crackdown and visited the troops to thank them for crushing what is now being called a counter-revolutionary rebellion.

The only top officials absent from the public eye in recent days and believed purged are Zhao and party propaganda chief Hu Qili, who Chinese sources said opposed the crackdown.

Qiao, a Politburo member, told a meeting of non-party officials Saturday that "it is very natural that people have different views and doubts" under the current "complicated" situation.

The comments, reported Sunday by the official People's Daily newspaper, were more conciliatory than past remarks by hard-liners who now control the Communist Party.

Two weeks after the sweep on Tiananmen Square, the military presence on central city streets was sharply reduced. More than 100 army trucks, most filled with soldiers, drove east from the city center before dawn, apparently heading for bases in the suburbs.

Most of the estimated 150,000 soldiers called into Beijing to enforce martial law have returned to bases outside the city, Western diplomats said.

The number of soldiers guarding Tiananmen Square was cut sharply this morning, and armored personnel carriers that had been parked there were gone. Pedestrians remain barred from the square.

Soldiers stood guard at only key intersections. The television news said many had been sent into fields and factories to help boost production idled during the protests.

Workers were busy erasing traces of the battles fought in the heart of the capital. Road crews patched asphalt torn up by tanks.

However, the city retained a subdued air, with far less traffic than usual and far fewer pedestrians. Illegal open-air labor markets where peasants sought work on construction crews and as maids were shut down.

Some stores displayed red-and-yellow banners thanking the martial law troops for restoring order, but most people were reluctant to discuss the crackdown at all.

"I'm a businessman, I should talk about business," said one resident. Official Beijing Radio today announced the arrests of two more leaders of illegal worker unions.

On Sunday, the national television news reported 10 more arrests of protesters, including three identified as students.

More than 1,300 people have been reported arrested in the wake of the Beijing violence, but the pace dropped off sharply over the weekend.

Sixteen of 21 student leaders named in a wanted circular remained at large. Among them were the three top leaders, Wang Dan and Chai Ling of Beijing University and Wu'er Kaixi of the Beijing Normal University. Rumors have placed some of them in foreign embassies, but only the United States has acknowledged harboring fugitives, dissident Fang Lizhi and his wife.

A total of 11 people have been condemned to death for alleged roles in protest-related violence in Beijing and Shanghai.

Solidarity Ahead In All But One Race Open To Opposition

By Deborah G. Seward
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WARSAW, Poland — In another rebuff to Communist authorities, three in four voters did not cast ballots in runoff elections in which nearly all candidates were Communist Party members or allies.

Only in districts where Solidarity-backed candidates were running did turnout in Sunday's vote exceed 25 percent, and the free trade union movement appeared after the runoff to have won all but one of the Senate's 100 seats.

The new chamber is the East bloc's first freely elected legislative body.

The victory Sunday of Henryk Stoklosa, a rich fodder farmer backed by the Communists, prevented a Solidarity sweep of the Senate, where the union handily won 92 places in the first round of voting June 4.

Stoklosa had waged Poland's most expensive election campaign ever, plastering his district in the western province of Pila with a Western-style advertising blitz and hosting picnics with free beer and sausages.

Andrzej Wybranski, the lone Solidarity candidate for the Sejm, or more powerful lower house of parliament, appeared headed for victory in the runoff along with seven opposition candidates for the Senate.

Solidarity had secured 160 of the 161 Sejm seats open to independents in the first round of voting, when just three Communist candidates — reformers backed by Solidarity activists in their regions — got the 50 percent of the vote needed to win.

On Sunday, 294 of the Sejm's 460 seats were decided but there was little interest because all but one were reserved for the Communist coalition, which is blamed for Poland's economic crisis and tried for so long to crush Solidarity.

The people had made their view of Communist rule known on June 4, when Solidarity clinched 252 of the 261 seats available to it.

The ruling Communists were assured control of the Sejm under a deal struck between the opposition and authorities in April that reinstated Solidarity after a seven-year ban.

Nationwide turnout Sunday was estimated at 25.31 percent, the lowest on record in postwar Poland, according to State Electoral Commission spokesman Bogdan Szczesniak. Turnout was 62 percent for the June 4 voting, the freest in Eastern Europe since World War II.

Solidarity sought to build its power in the Sejm by taking the unusual step of endorsing the most reform-oriented Communist coalition hopefuls.

Union leader Lech Walesa, voting before church near his Gdansk home, said "the real game, looking from the point of view of Solidarity, has already taken place," the state-run PAP news agency reported.

But he said he encouraged participation because "one should elect people who are in favor of reform."

Polish leader Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski said as he voted in Warsaw that ending the pre-determined elections of the past was a "risk" for the ruling Communists, but was necessary if reform is to succeed.

"So far what is important is that we are talking to each other," Jaruzelski said.

Even before the voting ended, attention had started to focus on the government changes expected to follow.

Valuable Show Dog Found

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOUNT PROSPECT, Ill. — Korsair, a valuable European show dog missing for a week, had only to hear a few words of French to realize he was back among friends.

"As soon as I started speaking to him in French, he came right up to me and buried his head in my side," said Gerald A. Rousseau, a dog trainer who took command of the 3-year-old Belgian Malinois after he was captured by police.

The dog, valued as high as $50,000, slipped from his cage while he and his French owner were changing flights at O'Hare International Airport on June 12.

Korsair was spotted Sunday morning in the back yard of a Mount Prospect home, a few miles from the airport.

Police officer Jim Lange won Korsair over with a few dog biscuits and was able to slip a leash over the animal's head.

An examination by a vet showed the dog had gashes on his front legs and inside an ear, but otherwise was alert and in good shape, said Rousseau.

Weather Data Center Offers 'Hard Science'

By Paul Nowell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ASHEVILLE — Perhaps it's fitting that the world's largest repository of weather records is housed in a 1920s-vintage indoor shopping mall that leaks during downpours.

Accurate weather records dating back to 1890 — some even to the time of the Pilgrims at Plymouth Rock — are available at the National Climatic Data Center, which has dozens of cubbyhole offices in the historic building guarded by two terra-cotta griffins.

"Every time it rains hard the roof leaks and we have to break out the buckets," says Steve Doty, the center's project director.

Despite the accommodations, the center, with a staff of 300, turns out an impressive amount of weather information, answering 85,000 queries last year alone.

"We can't give you the weather forecast for next week but we can give you a look back 100 years," Doty says. "Our role is to supply the historical perspective."

The center's long view at the world's climate can be vital when it comes to such things as fighting world hunger, sending astronauts into space or winning court cases.

For example, when an Exxon tanker spilled 10 million barrels of oil in March into Prince William Sound in Alaska, industry and government experts called the center to learn what kind of weather conditions could be expected during the cleanup.

By coincidence, the center had just published a climatic atlas of the area, which provided detailed information on temperatures, wind speed and ocean currents.

Bill Brower, who helped prepare the atlas, said the data showed the 70-mph winds that hit the Valdez area at the time of the accident were unusual for that time of year. The information was beneficial as cleanup efforts were coordinated.

"What we offer is a lot of good hard science," Doty says. "We can tell you normals and extremes so you know what to expect."

While keeping weather records may seem like dull work, some of the greatest minds in U.S. history have shown an interest in it.

Ben Franklin, Thomas Jefferson and George Washington Carver all were amateur weather observers. Copies of their records can be found at the center, which is part of the U.S. Commerce Department's National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

The tons of records stored in the center's basement are testimony to generations of less-famous volunteer weather trackers.

"We've even got a copy of a diary with weather records from Plymouth Rock," Doty says.

Most of the bound records stored in what once was the mall's underground parking deck come from places like Vicksburg, Miss., St. Joseph, Mo., or Bear Mountain, N.Y., since 1890.

So if you've just got to know how many times it snowed in Chicago on April 30 for the past 99 years, the folks at the NCDC can help.

The raw data comes from the military, the National Weather Service, the Federal Aviation Administration and 8,000 volunteer weather observers. Hourly weather observations pour in from around the globe, much of them from 10,000 ships stationed in various positions and from weather satellites orbiting Earth.

Current records are stored on computer. But because of budget constraints the center has been able to save on microfiche only a fourth of the 200 million paper records.

In 1951, the center was moved from New Orleans to Asheville in the mountains of western North Carolina. The city had a pool of workers skilled in key-punch machines, so the government bought the Arcade Building and set up shop.

At one time, the sprawling building that takes up an entire city block was bulging at the seams with key-punch cards. Now its rooms are stuffed with computers and microfiche readers.

The center prints about 5,000 different publications on such topics as hourly precipitation data by state, national storm data and global climatic data. The publications go out to more than 50,000 individuals and businesses.

Seven staff meteorologists answer thousands of telephone and mail queries each month. Over the years, they have been asked some peculiar questions, including:

—A free-lance writer wanted to know what the weather was like during the Oct. 30, 1938 radio broadcast of the "The War of the Worlds."

—Actress Carol Burnett called to find out whether thunderstorms and hail hit the San Antonio area on April 26, 1933, the day she was born.

—A company planning to shoot a television commercial wanted to know where in the United States they were likely to find snow on the ground in November. They were instructed to shoot on location in Stampede Pass, Wash., which averages 64 inches of snow each November.

—A Texas law firm requested wind speed and direction records for a client who was planning to build a chicken coop. The lawyers wanted to show that the odors from the coop would not be blown to surrounding homes.

—A chocolate candy company planning a summer publicity campaign requested nighttime temperatures in several Midwestern towns to help them pinpoint the best time to leave samples on doorsteps.

One out of three requests come from attorneys trying to reconstruct weather conditions in accident or criminal cases, says Sam McCown, the center's supervisory meteorologist.

The minimum charge for information was increased recently to $12, while the average cost is about $40. Some complicated requests can cost several thousand dollars.

Last summer, the center set up a special office to handle requests for drought-related information. Calls came in from all over the country.

Richard Heim, who was in charge of the drought office, said records on file from the 1930s and the 1950s put last year's dry weather into perspective.

At the peak of the 1988 drought, about 26 percent of the country was classified as experiencing extreme drought. On his computer, Heim called up a map from 1934 which showed 45 percent of the country was suffering from extreme drought.

The weather records also help scientists explore such things as the "greenhouse effect," a warming of Earth's temperatures that has been attributed to industrial growth.

"There are some scientists who believe the 1988 drought was caused by the greenhouse effect," Heim says. "We've had worse droughts. If this one was caused by that, what caused the droughts of the 1930s and 1950s?"

Haddock-Edwards Couple Are Married

Tonya Melissa Edwards and Thomas Alan Haddock were married at 3 p.m. Sunday in Sweet Gum Grove Free Will Baptist Church. The Rev. David Hill officiated the double-ring ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Elliott Sr. of Greenville and Mrs. William Thomas Edwards of Chocowinity are parents of the bride. The bridegroom is the son of Janie Buck and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Haddock of Ayden.

Mr. and Mrs. Vance Briley Jr. of Greenville and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Edwards, also of Greenville, are grandparents of the bride. Grandparents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Odel Haddock of Ayden and the late Mr. and Mrs. Leon Tripp.

Ginger Briley, aunt of the bride, was organist and Donna Glisson was soloist. Both are from Greenville.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her stepfather. She wore a formal gown of acetate satin with a Queen Anne neckline and modified Elizabethan sleeves. Chantilly-type lace made ruffles creating the chapel-length train. A Juliet cap held the walking-length, tiered illusion veil in place. She carried a cascading bouquet of white silk miniature roses, accented with pink and blue miniature roses, greenery and ribbons interlaced with beaded pearls.

The bride's sister, Pamela Hulon of Belvoir, was matron of honor. She wore a royal blue tea-length acetate satin gown and carried a nosegay of white, blue and pink silk miniature roses.

Bridesmaids were Charlene Elliott of Bath, stepsister of the bride; Laura Briley of Greenville, cousin of the bride, and Tina Dixon of Grimesland and Kim Kalbfell of Greenville, both sisters of the bridegroom.

They wore pink dresses identical to that of the honor attendant and carried matching nosegays.

Honorary bridesmaids were Cathy Smith of Ayden, Kim Francis and Christy Angle, both of Greenville, and Erika Puryear and Bonnie Clemmons, both of Bethel.

Robin Tyson of Farmville, cousin of the bride, was flower girl. She wore a gown identical to the matron of honor and carried a white basket with satin ribbons rose petals. Valerie Hulon of Belvoir, niece of the bride, was miniature bride.

The bridegroom's father was best man. Ushers were Jeffrey Sutton of Greenville, cousin of the bride; Jerry Dixon of Grimesland and Erich Kalbfell of Greenville, both brothers-in-law of the bridegroom; Richie Overton of Raleigh, stepbrother of the bridegroom, and Donald Haddock of Ayden, cousin of the bridegroom.

The ring bearer was Nicholas Haddock of Greenville, cousin of the bridegroom. P.J. Sutton of Belvoir, cousin of the bride, was miniature bridegroom.

The mother of the bride wore a tea-length, teal-blue crepe outfit. The bridegroom's mother wore a beige silk tea-length dress, and his step-mother wore a lilac silk dress. Each wore a corsage of white silk roses.

Sharon Tyson of Farmville, aunt of the bride, directed the wedding.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall following the ceremony. An after-rehearsal party hosted by the bridegroom's father and step-mother was held prior to the wedding, as were two showers in honor of the couple.

The bride is a graduate of North Pitt High School. The bridegroom graduated from D.H. Conley High School and is employed by the Greenville Utilities Commission. After a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will make their home near Ayden.

Engagement Announcement

Doris Daughtry of Brooklyn, N.Y. announces the engagement of her daughter, Wanda Kayla, to Stephen Vernon Daniels, son of Mr. and Mrs. Will Daniels of Greenville. A July 1 wedding is planned.

'Too Late' Letter Struck Home

Dear Abby: A number of years ago, a letter that you printed really "struck home" with me and made me realize how blessed I was to have two parents who loved and cared deeply for me. I clipped the letter and placed it in my wallet. Each time I read it, it reminds me about how important it is to drop them a note or give them a call, even if it's just to say "hi."

I thought you may want to reprint the letter in hopes that it will remind others to take time out of their schedules to remember those who lovingly raised them.

Please sign me ... Thankful They're Alive, or Glad There's Still Time

Dear Thankful: Here it is:

Dear Abby: I am the most heart-broken person in the world. I could always find the time to go everywhere else, but never time to go visit Mom and Dad. They sat at home and loved me just the same. It's too late now to give them those few hours of happiness I was too selfish and busy to give.

Dear Abby

Now when I go to their graves and see the green grass above them, I wonder if God will ever forgive me for the heartaches I must have caused them when they were alive. I pray to God that those who still have their parents to visit do so, and show their love and respect while there is still time, for it's later than you think. — Too Late

Dear Abby: I'm sure my problem is not unique, but I need some advice. My husband comes from a very large family, and they are big party-givers. I'm talking about wedding showers, baby showers, confirmations, communions, graduations from high schools and colleges, etc. If it's for brothers and sisters, and first-generation cousins, I can understand it, but Abby, we get invitations from second- and third-generation cousins we hardly know, and some we've never even seen.

My husband and I are retired and living on a fixed income. Our medical bills are not completely covered by Medicare, and our supplemental insurance does not cover our expenses. We're having a hard time making ends meet.

How does one go about declining invitations without appearing cheap and getting family members we really care about angry with us? — No Name Or Town, Please

Dear No Name: If you don't know some of these second- and third-generation cousins, they probably don't know you either, but your name was on the list because you're "family." (They may have been told by other family members that you might feel hurt if you weren't invited.)

Simply decline graciously. Send an appropriate card, don't feel guilty, and let it go at that.

Dear Abby: Yes, life is hard for the unambiguous who say exactly what they mean.

My dad told me about this ambiguous statement that appeared in our church bulletin: "Following communion services this Easter Sunday, Mrs. Johnson will lay an egg on the altar." — Chrissy In Rochester, Minn.

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 6944, Los Angeles, CA 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Greeks Shun Scandal-Plagued Government

television set broadcasting election results.

"The conservatives are first and PASOK is second," a gaunt and tired-looking Papandreou told reporters and guests gathered in the garden.

Papandreou has governed Greece for eight years and swallowed a bitter pill today when he acknowledged he could not defeat Mitsotakis, who advocates closer U.S. ties and less economic controls than the premier.

Papandreou nevertheless thanked supporters for denying "an absolute majority to the forces of conservatism."

His government has been rocked by financial and arms scandals that led to the firings or resignations of eight Cabinet members. The 70-year-old Papandreou also was hurt by a divorce from his American-born wife, Margaret, and his affair with a former airline stewardess half his age.

Still, Mitsotakis' lack of a major-ty left Papandreou with a chance to salvage a third four-year term at the helm of Greece's turbulent politics.

When there is no majority, the constitution requires the president to give the leading party three days to form a governing coalition.

Mitsotakis is expected to meet with President Christos Sartzetakis on Tuesday. If Mitsotakis fails to muster enough support, PASOK and then the Coalition of Left and Progress must be given the chance.

Should all efforts fail, the president can form a caretaker government and call new elections. Papandreou remains premier until efforts to form a coalition are exhausted.

The premier refused to answer questions about a coalition today but hinted at the possibility by noting that leftist parties — PASOK and the Coalition — would have a majority.

Before Sunday's vote, both Papandreou and Mitsotakis said that in forming a government, they would reject support from the communists.

Bush Issues Call

the White House" concert, featuring singer John Denver and others, that will be aired on PBS stations at 9 p.m. July 5.

The emphasis on youth comes less than a week after Bush successfully vetoed the minimum wage bill, in part because of Congress' refusal to enact a six-month subminimum "training" wage for youth. Congress also wanted to raise the $3.35-an-hour minimum by $1.20, some 30 cents more than Bush was willing to go.

Also on Bush's agenda this week is a meeting Wednesday with West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, whose dovish views on short-range nuclear missiles nearly caused a rift in the NATO alliance.

At last month's NATO summit the allies unanimously endorsed Bush's blueprint for deep cuts in conventional arms while holding out the prospect of eventual talks to withdraw some — but not all — of the short-range missiles from Europe.

U.S. and Soviet negotiators were meeting today in Geneva to resume the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty negotiations — the so-called START talks to curb the long-range, intercontinental ballistic missiles that the United States and the Soviet Union can hurl at each other from half a world away.

Bush's busy schedule includes a trek Wednesday evening to Richmond, Va., to address the Family Motor Coach Association and attend a Republican fund-raising dinner for gubernatorial candidate Marshall Coleman.

He will fly to New York on Thursday to address the New York Partnership, a business-community leaders' organization trying to spur voluntary efforts to help the inner city poor, and attend a New York State GOP dinner and the centennial banquet of the Wall Street Journal.

problems and can be absorbed through the skin, authorities said.

Authorities evacuated homes a half-mile downwind from the plant, located about 10 miles north of New Haven.

Auction Scheduled

BALTIMORE (AP) — A bank plans to auction the home of a civil rights movement matriarch this week unless her friends and neighbors can raise enough money to pay off her $60,000 loan.

Juanita Jackson Mitchell has lived in the home for 46 years. Her brother-in-law, former U.S. Rep. Parren J. Mitchell, launched his political career there. Such prominent Americans as Eleanor Roosevelt and Thurgood Marshall visited to discuss civil rights issues over dinner.

The foreclosure is the latest in a series of setbacks for Mrs. Mitchell since the 1984 death of her husband, Clarence M. Mitchell Jr., the longtime Washington lobbyist for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Mrs. Mitchell, a lawyer who fought for the integration of swimming pools and restaurants, is bedridden at age 76 after a pair of strokes and a bout with high blood pressure, a relative said.

The Coalition had hoped to emerge as a third force in Greek politics and a power broker in any negotiations for a new government.

Papandreou came to power in 1981 promising to lead Greece out of NATO and the European Economic Community and to close U.S. military bases around the country. His maverick foreign policy created a new pride in a country accustomed to feeling like a poor cousin of the rich West.

However, he now supports membership in both NATO and the ECC and is negotiating a new base agreement with the Americans.

Mitsotakis, 71, who calls himself an advocate of a free-market economy, campaigned with promises to clean up the scandals and put the ailing economy back on track. Inflation is running at 14 percent.

The biggest scandal has centered on fugitive banker George Koskotas. He is charged with swindling more than $200 million from the Bank of Crete to build a publishing empire and buy a top Greek soccer team.

Koskotas has accused Papandreou of masterminding the plan to loot the bank as a way of financing his election campaign. The premier has denied any wrongdoing.

Strange Answers Call, Claims Open

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — The gallery chanted, "Two, Curtis, Two," and it was almost too strange to believe.

On Sunday, Curtis Strange became the first golfer to win consecutive U.S. Opens since Ben Hogan in 1951. And, believe it or not, he sealed the victory with a birdie at the 16th, the first on his card in 36 holes.

"If there was a shot that won the Open, that did it," Strange said.

Strange hadn't made birdie since the 16th hole of Friday's second round. And, if that isn't bizarre enough, consider that in the space of 1½ hours, Tom Kite, one of the game's best shotmakers, went from three ahead to one behind with a triple bogey and two bogeys.

"My play stunk," said Kite, winner of 12 career tournaments but never one of the majors. "It's been a very long day for me. ... It's a bitter pill to swallow." Sometimes, truth is stranger than fiction.

For the second straight year, Strange made that march up the 18th fairway, cheered by the huge gallery, arms raised in the air. And, for the second straight year, he embraced his wife, Sarah, then walked away with the U.S. Open trophy.

Strange, a 34-year-old winner of more than $4.8 million in 13 years on the PGA Tour, is the fourth golfer to win consecutive U.S. Opens. First, there was Willie Anderson's three in a row from 1903-05, John J. McDermott's two in 1911-12, and Hogan's two 38 years ago.

Not only did Strange equal Hogan's feat of consecutive Open victories, but he also equalled Hogan's Oak Hill Country Club course record in the second round with a 64, his only subpar round of the tournament.

"Move over, Ben," Strange said. "You know, as great a player as he was, it's a great feeling not so much to do what he did, but to do something that others haven't done, like the great Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus and Tom Watson."

Strange finished the day with an even-par 70 after a meaningless bogey on the 18th, and he shot 2-under 278 for the tournament. He had 71 in the opening round and 73 on Saturday, starting the day at two under and three back of Kite and two behind Scott Simpson.

Both Kite and Simpson — playing in the final pair of the day — ran into horrendous troubles over the 6,902-yard East Course.

Call them the Gruesome Twosome. Kite birdied the par-3 third hole, going six under for the tournament, while a bogey there put Simpson at three under and one shot ahead of Strange. It didn't last long, in fact no more than a half hour.

Kite hit his tee shot on the 406-yard, par-4 fifth hole into the water on the right side of the fairway. When he took his drop, he was too far behind some trees to see the green, so he laid up with a wedge, lying four. His pitch to the green was eight feet below the hole, and he two-putted.

Simpson made par, so the two were tied at three under with Strange just one shot back, mechanically making par at every hole.

Kite bogeyed the par-4 eighth, dropping into a tie with Jordan Event Lures Frizzell Home Ex-Rose Standout Now With Eagles

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

William Frizzell made a homecoming trip to Greenville, his home town to join in the Michael Jordan Celebrity Golf Classic, but his team didn't come away with any of the prizes.

Nevertheless, the defensive back of the Philadelphia Eagles, was satisfied with his contribution to helping the families of hospitalized children in North Carolina.

Frizzell was one of a number of celebrities who joined in the tournament which annual raises funds for the Ronald McDonald Houses of North Carolina. This is the first year that the event has helped all four houses, however. The four previous events, all called the Eastern Carolina Celebrity Classic, benefited the Greenville house.

The team headed by former San Francisco 49er Dwight Clark won the superbowl event, carding a 14-under-par 57. His team consisted of David Glenn, Doug Jones, Tom Jones and Doug Wynn.

Second place went to the team of former one-club world champion Thad Daber, which also recorded a 57. The final placing was decided on the second hole after a blind draw. Jim Gilliam, Forrest Pulley, Michael Weaver and Patrick Weaver made up that team.

Third place was won by the team of "the other brother Darryl" from Newhart, John Volstad, which had a 58. The team consisted of Bill Clark, Ron Hinson, Bill Hooks and Paul Petrisko.

Jack Chatham added the prize for the longest drive on the 16th hole, while Chip Casey was closest to the pin on the 10th hole.

Frizzell, who graduated from Rose High School in 1980, played on the last Rampant football team to advance to the state championship. That team lost, 21-9, to High Point Central.

From there he went on to N.C. Central, from where he was drafted by the Detroit Lions as a defensive back. After two seasons, he was cut and signed as a free agent by the Eagles and will play with them for the fourth season this fall.

"I was a quiet player in college," Frizzell said. "But there were a lot of scouts coming into the Triangle area to look at players and they checked the other schools in the area. I had a pretty good senior season and I ran a decent 40 (yard) time. After the way they talked to me, I thought that I would go higher than I actually did, in the 10th round.

"Still, it was a joy just to be drafted," he said. Frizzell had won all-conference honors as a senior, both in pre- and post-season listings.

In his two years with the Lions, he wasn't a starter, but did see a lot of action, especially in nickel defenses (five defensive backs). "I played in a lot of situations that got attention," he said.

But when a coaching change was made, Frizzell said his role with the Lions changed and he was let go, hooking on quickly with the Eagles.

"I started at right corner for about a half-season," he said, "then I was

John Matuszak

Matuszak Death Not Yet Explainable

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — An autopsy found no natural cause for the death of former Oakland Raiders lineman John Matuszak, whose ferocious play on and off the football field epitomized the team's "outlaw" image.

Forensic pathologist Susan Selser ordered lab testing for the presence of possibly toxic substances after determining on Sunday that Matuszak's heart attack could not be explained by natural causes, coroner's supervisor Claude Boucher said.

A natural heart attack is obvious

"right away" during the autopsy, Boucher said Sunday evening. "That was not the case" with Matuszak, who died Saturday night at age 38.

Sharon Farrell, a friend who said she spoke with Matuszak about an hour before he was rushed to the hospital, told KABC-TV: "He was just kind of ranting and raving. He sounded like he'd had a couple of drinks, you know."

Another former Raiders defensive lineman, Lyle Alzado, who joined the team after Matuszak had retired and the team had moved from Oakland to Los Angeles, speculated that drugs might have contributed to Matuszak's death.

"John had a problem with drugs, which was publicly known, it was written in the papers," Alzado said Sunday. "But I don't know to what extent, what boundary he crossed over and what he decided to experiment with or how."

Farrell's husband, Dale Trevillion, who recently produced a film starring Matuszak called "One Man Force," said the ex-football player was upset over his inability to gain leading roles in Hollywood.

Breaking into tears, Farrell added: "I love John and he's a good person and he doesn't do anything and he's no drug addict and he's not an alcoholic, but sometimes things get real tough in this town."

Matuszak, who played on two Super Bowl champions before turning to an acting career, was taken from his Los Angeles home to St. Joseph Medical Center in Burbank Saturday night, suffering massive heart failure.

The imposing 6-foot-9, 280-pounder played with the Raiders from 1976 to 1981. Nicknamed "The Tooz," his aggressive play and tough attitude typified the bad-boy spirit of the Oakland Raiders and helped earn the team Super Bowl victories after the 1976 and 1980 seasons.

The Raiders moved to Los Angeles in 1982, but Matuszak spent most of the season on the team's injured reserve list. After sitting out that season, Matuszak retired to pursue acting full-time.

"I'm just overwhelmed, shocked," said Al Davis, the Raiders' managing general partner. "We really loved the guy, he was our friend."

"It was a very emotional moment when he retired because the team meant so much to him," recalled former Raiders coach Tom Flores, now general manager of the Seattle Seahawks. "He identified with the Raiders more than anybody."

Fittipaldi Battles To Grand Prix Win

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DETROIT — Nothing could stop Emerson Fittipaldi in the Detroit Grand Prix.

Not two bumping incidents with Mario Andretti, not a punctured tire, not a stalled engine, and not the narrow, treacherous downtown street circuit on which the Indy-cars were debuting Sunday after seven years as a Formula One venue.

"It was an incredible race," Fittipaldi said. "It was my race to win because my car was beautiful."

The Brazilian driver's Chevrolet-powered Penske PC18 somehow survived the 62-lap, 155-mile grind that left only 13 of the 28 starters running at the end.

In fact, Fittipaldi, who earned $144,160 from the $1 million purse, beat Indy-car rookie Scott Pruett to the finish line by 29.544 seconds.

It appeared for 54 laps that Michael Andretti, Mario's son, would win easily while others struggled.

The youngster led all but two of those laps, giving up the top spot to his father only during his last scheduled pit stop.

Michael's luck ran out on lap 55 when a broken wire caused the throttle to run open and Andretti jerked the gearshift to slow the car down. That broke the gearshift linkage.

A pit stop cost Andretti the lead and, moments later, the throttle stuck again, sending the 26-year-old racer into a concrete barrier. He wound up 13th.

Terry Labonte emerges to celebrate winning the Miller 400

Labonte's T-Bird Rises To Challenge

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONG POND, Pa. — Terry Labonte had a hunch his new Ford Thunderbird would be tough at Pocono International Raceway. It just took him a couple days to prove it.

Labonte, starting 23rd based on his Friday qualifying time, quickly made up ground Sunday and won his first race in more than a year with a persistent, 1.88-second victory over Harry Gant in the $514,000 Miller 500 stock car race at Pocono International Raceway.

"It takes a big load off your back," said Labonte, who last year drove a Chevrolet. "Believe me, these races are tough to win."

The 32-year-old Corpus Christi, Texas, native grabbed the lead with 14 laps to go and held off Gant's Oldsmobile for his first victory on Pocono's 2½-mile tri-oval. Dale Earnhardt finished third, Ken Schrader fourth and Morgan Shepherd fifth.

Pole-sitter Rusty Wallace, outside-pole starter Darrell Waltrip and defending champion Geoff Bodine — the top qualifiers — established themselves early as drivers to beat, but bad breaks took the race out of their hands.

Starting 23rd isn't what Labonte had in mind going into the weekend.

"Before we qualified, I told the guys this is the best car I ever had at Pocono and we were really quick in practice," he said.

"I was disappointed that we didn't have a good qualifying run but it didn't make any difference. It's a long, hot race."

Labonte ran strongly all day, moving to fourth after only 19 of the 200 laps.

Phillies Begin Cleaning House

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHILADELPHIA — Philadelphia Phillies general manager Lee Thomas has said his team needed two things to get back on the road to respectability — pitching and a leadoff batter.

"Our first need has been pitching, and it remains so," Thomas said Sunday, shortly after the team announced it was sending former Cy Young winner Steve Bedrosian to the San Francisco Giants for left-handed pitchers Dennis Cook and Terry Mulholland and minor-league infielder Charlie Hayes.

"But we've also desperately needed a real leadoff hitter, someone who can get us going," Thomas said, explaining why the Phillies sent centerfielder Juan Samuel to the New York Mets for centerfielder Lenny Dykstra and right-handed reliever Roger McDowell. "Dykstra fills that bill. He's always been one of those guys who you didn't like to play against but you'd love to have, and I think he will become very important to us."

Dykstra, 26, did not like being platooned in center with Mookie Wilson. Dykstra is hitting .270 with three homers and 13 RBIs in limited playing time.

"I've been with the Mets for five years, but I still hadn't been given the chance to play every day. And that's been frustrating for me," Dykstra said. "Now I'll be getting the chance to contribute every day, and that's all I've ever wanted."

"Len Dykstra will play every day no matter who's pitching and be our leadoff hitter," Phillies manager

Samuel Dykstra McDowell Bedrosian

Nick Leyva said. "McDowell will be a closer. He's a durable, steady guy. Samuel is a quality player and a quality person and I'm sure he'll help the Mets."

Samuel, 28, had been shifted to center this year after playing second base his entire career. He was batting .246 with eight home runs and 20 RBIs and was not pleased with the Phillies' plight.

Mets vice president Joe McIlvaine said Manager Davey Johnson would decide where Samuel will start.

"I'm not sure if Davey will play him in the infield or the outfield or both," he said.

"I don't know if I won or lost," Samuel said. "But I think I picked up about 10 games in the standings. I'm just going to try to help the club as best I can."

"I think they're suited to my kind of baseball," he said. "I think I'm a winner, and that I'll fit in very well with them."

Bedrosian, who had 40 saves in 1987 and 28 last year, had only six this season. He was 2-3 with a 3.21 earned-run average and had gotten few save opportunities.

"I know that they're trying to make some headway and make things happen and you can't blame them for that," Bedrosian, 31, said of the Phillies.

"They've been telling me that if things didn't get much better that there was a good chance I would be traded. It was inevitable that I would be moved," he said. "It's been a hectic month, what with Mike Schmidt retiring and Chris James being traded."

McDowell, 28, had lost his job as the Mets' right-handed closer to Rick Aguilera. McDowell is 1-5 with four saves and a 3.31 ERA.

Said McDowell: "I'll really miss leaving the guys. I've been here 4½ years and we've had a lot of success. I'm looking forward to getting a chance to pitch."

Thomas said, "We're going to give him every opportunity to be our stopper."

"As everybody knows, we weren't getting a lot out of Bedrosian and it wasn't fair to him, either," Thomas said. "I think we got good value. Cook and Mulholland will go right into the rotation."

San Francisco manager Roger Craig likened the trade to deals the team made in 1987. The Giants, near the top of the division at the time, acquired Dave Dravecky, Craig Lefferts and Kevin Mitchell from San Diego on July 4 and later added Rick Reuschel and Don Robinson in deals that propelled the team to the NL West title.

"We felt we could win in 1987 and by getting pitchers like Dravecky, Reuschel, Robinson and Lefferts, we became a lot more confident. We feel the same way now," Craig said.

"Our scouting reports said Bedrosian is throwing as hard as ever, but that he's having trouble with his slider. We just feel he hasn't been getting enough work," Craig said. "You hate to give up young pitching, but when you can get a solid stopper in return, you do it. To win, you have to have a stopper."

The Phillies announced the Bedrosian trade during Sunday's 6-5 victory over the Mets. After the game, the Mets and Phillies announced the rest of the deal.

Phillies manager Nick Leyva said Dykstra and McDowell will get plenty of opportunities.

Dykstra and McDowell both played a big part in the Mets' World Series championship in 1986. Their roles were diminished last season when New York won the NL East.

"I admire the talents of both guys. They've been a big part of our success," Johnson said.

"Every time we play the Phillies, I worried about Samuel," he said. "He has good power, gets a lot of extra-base hits, and can run. He reminds me of Bobby Bonds."

Samuel enjoyed his best year in 1987 when he drove in 100 runs, hit 28 homers and batted .272. Last season, he slumped to .248 with 12 home runs and 67 RBIs.

Wilson's status is still uncertain. He did not like being platooned, but will probably play even less if Samuel is in center field.

Hayes' Home Run Snaps Phillies' Skid

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Von Hayes led off the bottom of the ninth inning with his 13th home run Sunday and Philadelphia beat the New York Mets 6-5, ending the Phillies' four-game losing streak.

Hayes connected on a 1-2 pitch from Randy Myers, 6-3. The Mets had won four in a row.

Jeff Parrett, 3-2, pitched 1 2-3 innings for the victory. During the game, the Phillies announced that their relief ace, former Cy Young winner Steve Bedrosian, had been traded to San Francisco in a five-player deal.

New York made it 5-all in the eighth after Howard Johnson's single finished reliever Don Carman. Johnson stole second, advanced on a groundout and scored on Parrett's wild pitch.

The Phillies scored four times in the first against Ron Darling. Tom Herr singled walks to Hayes, John Kruk and Juan Samuel forced home a run. Curt Ford followed with a two-run double and Ricky Jordan hit a sacrifice fly.

The Mets got a run in the second on consecutive doubles by Mookie Wilson and Mackey Sasser off Ken Howell. Herr walked and scored on Kruk's triple in the bottom of the second.

Johnson hit his 16th home run in the third and Dave Magadan hit his third homer in the Mets' sixth. In the seventh, Wilson and Sasser singled and Darryl Strawberry had an RBI grounder.

Dodgers 5, Braves 3

Fernando Valenzuela won his third straight decision and Los Angeles beat Atlanta.

Valenzuela, 3-5, won for the second time at Dodger Stadium since June 8, 1988. He gave up three runs on six hits in 7 1-3 innings and Jay Howell finished for his 14th save.

Zane Smith, 1-11, lost his seventh consecutive decision.

Giants 2, Reds 1
Brett Butler's third hit, a tie-breaking single in the seventh inning, sent San Francisco over visiting Cincinnati.

Terry Kennedy opened the seventh with a single against Jose Rijo, 6-4, and pinch-runner Donell Nixon took third on Jose Uribe's hit-and-run single. One out later, Butler singled.

Mike LaCoss, 3-5, worked two innings for the victory and Craig Leferts got his 13th save.

Cubs 5, Expos 4

Andre Dawson tagged Montreal again, hitting a three-run homer that kept Chicago in first place in the East. The Cubs moved 1 1/2 games ahead of the host Expos.

Dawson is batting .343 with seven home runs and 30 RBIs against his former team since joining the Cubs in 1987. Dawson's sixth homer of the season came in the first inning against Mark Langston, 2-2.

Mike Bielecki, 6-2, gave up three runs in six innings. Mitch Williams pitched out of a bases-loaded jam in the eighth and got his 17th save.

Astros 5, Padres 2
Mike Scott won with home-run support from Craig Biggio and Ken Caminiti, leading Houston over San Diego.

Scott, 11-4, struck out seven in his seventh complete game. He is 16-8 lifetime against the Padres, but has won only twice at Jack Murphy Stadium.

Biggio's solo home run broke a 2-2 tie in the seventh. It was his fourth homer and came against Walt Terrell, 4-9.

Pirates 12, Cardinals 4
Jose Lind finished a fine weekend in St. Louis, driving in three runs as Pittsburgh routed the Cardinals.

Lind went 7-for-14 with six RBIs in the three-game series. Gary Redus added a three-run homer for the Pirates.

Morris Madden, a 28-year-old rookie, won his second major-league start and is 2-1. Bill Landrum pitched four innings for his fourth save.

U.S. Open To Strange ...

Strange while Simpson took double bogey there when it took him three shots to get onto the fairway. Simpson bogeyed No. 9, too, dropping back to even-par for the tournament, and his day was effectively over.

Kite lost his share of the lead on the 10th when he missed the green and two-putted from five feet, and matters got even worse when he shot double bogeys on Nos. 13 and 15.

He double bogeyed the 594-yard, par-5 15th when he skulled his second shot, a 4-wood, out of the rough, took five shots to get on the green and two-putted.

"Thirteen was the killer," Kite said. "I know this is going to sound bad," Strange said, "but I felt like that triple bogey played right into my hands. What I mean by that is making pars — that's what you have to do to win the U.S. Open."

"What I did better than anyone else did today was show patience," he said. "To go as long as I did without a birdie, you just have to hang in there. It's tough to play on Open courses, and invariably, that's what the winner has, patience. It's a marathon in many ways."

The bumping of Kite and Simpson actually had given Strange the lead before he made his birdie on the 439-yard, par-4 16th. Jumbo Ozaki and Chip Beck trailed by one, and Strange was beginning to wonder if he'd ever birdie another hole.

"It was kind of like waiting for paint to dry," he said. He hit his drive down the left side of the fairway, then put a 6-iron on the green, about 15 feet from the hole, leaving himself an uphill putt. The putt started slowly, and it didn't look like it would make it. But when it stopped rolling, it was in the bottom of the cup.

Strange went two ahead and punched his fist in the air. The Open was his, and he knew it. He always would that secretive, slightly devious smile that says: "Now, I've got you."

He bogeyed the 18th, three-putting from about 25 feet, but it was a conservative three-put, a winner's three-put.

He won last year at The Country Club in Brookline, Mass., for his first major tournament victory. He took a lead into the final round but needed an 18-hole playoff on Monday to beat Nick Faldo of England.

"I went out today feeling like I wanted to play a good round for me," he said. "Win, lose or draw, I wanted to go out and do what you have to do to win."

"I wasn't uptight. I think there's a big difference coming from behind in an Open than there is leading the Open. The pressure wasn't on me."

It could be next year, though, when the Open will be played at Medinah, Ill. He'll be going for three in a row and trying to equal Anderson's turn-of-the-century feat.

"I knew that would come up," he said. "But we'll talk about that next year."

Davies 30-Foot Birdie Putt On 18 Nets 1PGA Victory

By The Associated Press

HERSHEY, Pa. — Laura Davies won't give up her lucky putter again. Davies sank a 30-foot birdie putt on the final hole Sunday to win the LPGA's $300,000 Lady Keystone Open on Sunday, beating Pat Bradley by one stroke.

"This is the same putter I used when I won the U.S. Open last year," Davies said. "My cousin, Matthew, had it. Matthew caddied for me this week and I got the putter back. I'm going to keep it this time."

The putt gave Davies a 5-under-par 67 for Sunday's round and a 9-under-par 207 total for 54 holes on the 6,348-yard, par-72 West Course of the Hershey Country Club.

Davies said she only wanted to get the ball near the hole, never expecting it to fall in the cup.

"I turned and looked at Matthew," she said. "He was jumping up and down, so I knew it went in."

Bradley's 68 was the second-best score of the final round but left her one stroke behind Davies with a 208 total.

Bradley had to scramble for her par on the final hole. She hit her tee shot into the trees, chipped out to the fairway and then hit an iron eight feet below the pin.

"I honestly didn't think she could make that," Bradley said after watching Davies' winning putt. "I figured if I can make my putt, we're going back out for a playoff."

But Davies used a smooth, confident stroke to knock the ball in and collect the $45,000 first prize in the $300,000 tournament.

The victory was the 26-year-old Davies' third in two seasons on the LPGA Tour.

California Extends Tigers' Misery, 3-1

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The beat continues for the Detroit Tigers, who are getting beaten by just about everyone.

The Tigers fell to 25-41, their worst record in 13 years, by dropping their third straight game and 13th in 16, a 3-1 loss to California on Sunday. The last time Detroit, which won the AL East two years ago, was so low was Sept. 16, 1976.

"The world won't go away and tomorrow will come," said Tigers manager Sparky Anderson, who missed 17 games this season while recovering from exhaustion. "We're just not getting the big hits. You'd think we'd run into a ball and get one in the alley once. But we're just not getting the big hits."

Or the small ones. The Tigers were held to six hits in seven innings by Mike Witt, who broke a personal four-game slide. They didn't get any hits off three relievers.

"Every day it's a different story," Tigers reliever Paul Gibson said after pitching 5 1-3 innings of one-hit relief. "You can't say that one thing has been beating us. We need to win seven of 10 or eight of 10 to at least make things respectable. We're not a 25-41 team and everybody on this team knows that."

The standings say otherwise, of course. The Tigers are 12½ games out of first place and 5½ out of sixth in the mediocre East Division.

"Before we can mount a charge, we have to get back to solid defense, solid pitching and scoring runs like we did last year," Gibson added. "We're just too sporadic right now. We have to get back to playing solid, fundamental baseball."

Elsewhere Sunday, it was Minnesota 8, Milwaukee 6; Baltimore 4, Oakland 2; Boston 7, Chicago 4; Seattle 8, Toronto 2; Texas 5, New York 2, and Cleveland 4, Kansas City 1.

Witt was 0-4 with a 7.14 ERA in his previous five starts. But he and relievers Greg Minton, Bob McClure and Bryan Harvey had more than enough for Detroit, which suffered its first sweep at home to the Angels since 1970.

"After the second inning, I didn't get into any situations where I could get beat," Witt said. "I found a little groove and I was pleased with that. I felt strong enough to go nine innings, but I understand what (Manager Doug Rader) was doing."

The Angels scored all their runs in the fourth. Claudell Washington led off with a walk, Johnny Ray singled and Devon White walked. Wally Joyner singled to score Washington and, after Brian Downing struck out, Chili Davis knocked in Ray when pitcher David Palmer couldn't handle a slow roller down the first-base line. Lance Parrish drove in the other run with a groundout to short-stop.

Twins 8, Brewers 6

At Minneapolis, Gary Gaetti's second homer of the game, with two outs in the bottom of the ninth, won it after the Twins blew a 6-3 lead in the top of the inning. Gaetti also homered in the fourth, the first homer given up by Chris Bosio in 38 2-3 innings.

1988 Cy Young Award winner Frank Viola was replaced by Jeff Reardon after a leadoff double by Greg Brock in the ninth. Reardon yielded a two-out RBI double to Jim Gantner and a run-scoring single to Paul Molitor to make it 6-5. Molitor stole second and Robin Yount singled him home.

But Chuck Crim walked Jim Dwyer just before Gaetti hit his game-winner.

"We knew it would be sooner or later," Twins center fielder Kirby Puckett said about Gaetti hitting a hot streak. "We just hoped it would be sooner than later. Gary has been struggling a little bit and I'm glad to see him come around. He's capable of carrying a team for a long time."

Orioles 4, Athletics 2

At Baltimore, Mickey Weston got his first save in his first mainor-league appearance with three innings of scoreless relief for Dave Schmidt. Schmidt limited Oakland to three hits in six innings and retired the first 14 batters.

Bob Melvin hit a three-run double in the first inning and an RBI single in the seventh for Baltimore, which finished with six hits.

The Orioles won the final three games of the four-game series. Sunday's game drew 46,541 fans, the largest crowd at Memorial Stadium since opening day.

Red Sox 7, White Sox 4

At Chicago, Luis Rivera had four singles and Joe Price got his first American League victory. Five of Boston's seven runs off Steve Rosenberg, 2-3, were unearned as the Red Sox made it three straight victories to equal their longest winning streak of the season.

Price, 1-2, was making his third start for Boston since being signed as a free agent on May 5, four days after being released by San Francisco. He allowed five hits in six innings, including two-run homers by Fred Manrique, his second, and Ivan Calderon, his eighth.

Lee Smith pitched the ninth for his seventh save.

Mariners 8, Blue Jays 2

At Toronto, the Mariners got going quickly with three runs in the first and didn't look back.

Greg Briley led off with a single and went to second on a wild pitch. Harold Reynolds walked and Jay Buhner's drive went under the glove of a charging Junior Felix in center for a triple. Ken Griffey Jr. then singled in Buhner.

Edgar Martinez and Briley later had solo homers and Scott Bradley drove in two runs with a double.

Rangers 5, Yankees 2

At New York, Ruben Sierra drove in three runs and Charlie Hough's knuckleball finally befuddled the Yankees.

Sierra, who has hit in 11 straight games, had an RBI single in the first inning and a two-run single in the third as the Rangers averted a four-game sweep in New York. Sierra, who leads the American League in batting at .338, has 21 hits in his last 44 at-bats.

The 41-year-old Hough had lost eight of his previous nine decisions to New York. He allowed four hits, walked one and struck out one in eight innings. Jeff Russell pitched the ninth.

Indians 4, Royals 1

At Cleveland, Greg Swindell, 9-1, won his fifth straight game. Swindell allowed nine hits, struck out six and walked two while pitching his fourth complete game. Swindell, who gave up a sixth-inning home run to Bo Jackson, has a 2.47 earned run average.

With the score 1-1, Kevin Appier, 1-2, walked Pete O'Brien leading off the sixth. After Cory Snyder flied out, Mark Salas hit his second home run.

Jackson struck out three times Sunday and nine times in the series, which Cleveland won 3-1.

Henderson Vetoes Trade To Giants

NEW YORK (AP) — Outfielder Rickey Henderson said Sunday he would not accept a trade to San Francisco and New York Yankees general manager Bobby Quinn said it was unlikely to happen.

The New York Daily News reported Sunday that Henderson, who is eligible for free agency at the end of the season, would go to the Giants for outfielder Candy Maldonado and right-hander Scott Garrelts.

Henderson has a clause in his contract giving him the right to refuse any deal.

"I'm not going to Candlestick," Henderson said after the Yankees lost to Texas on Sunday.

Henderson said before the game that the Yankees had agreed to his request for a three-year deal, but the financial terms were still unsettled. Henderson wants about $8.6 million for the three years. He has given the Yankees until the All-Star break to finish the negotiations.

Little League Honors Three

The Greenville Little Leagues honored its Volunteers of the Year during ceremonies Saturday marking the 50th anniversary of the Little League program.

Don Parrott and Chester Robbins received the awards this year. Both have served as coaches for several years. Parrott, in addition, led the effort to establish new playing fields in Greenville, while Robbins led the effort to establish the new Minor League program which went into effect this season.

In addition, an award was also presented to Dan H. Gordon for his 25 years of service to the league as its commissioner. Under his leadership, the program has grown from a six-team league to a program serving over 300 youths on 22 teams.

ECU Hires Bass As Marketing Director

East Carolina Athletic Director Dave Hart has named Jim Bass as the Assistant Athletic Director for Marketing at ECU.

Bass, 32, comes to ECU from UNC-Wilmington, where he was an Associate Athletic Director for External Affairs and Executive Director of the Seahawk Club for three years.

Under Bass, the Seahawk Club saw funding for athletic scholarships increase almost 175 percent and membership grow from 230 to 1,110.

A native of Dunn, Bass graduated from North Carolina State and worked with the Wolfpack Club at NCSU and with the Wildcat Club at Davidson College before moving on to UNC-W.

Myricks Hopes To Give Leadership

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — Larry Myricks, who has been chasing the world record in the long jump for 13 years, will have another matter on his mind during the World Cup Championships.

Myricks, at 33 the oldest member of the United States team, also will try to lend leadership to the youthful team that will compete at Barcelona, Spain, Sept. 8-10.

"I think I can help some of the guys who never have been in a situation like that before," said Myricks, who won his third national long jump title Saturday.

"I can maybe help them not get freaked out. We've got a lot of people making the team for the first time and it can be scary."

The U.S. team has been depleted by the loss of world-class athletes who did not compete in the Mobil Outdoor Track and Field Championships that ended Saturday and served as qualifying for the World Cup team.

Carl Lewis, Myricks' arch-rival in the long jump, did not participate in the five-day meet, protesting policies of The Athletic Congress. Six of the eight Americans who won track and field gold medals in the 1988 Olympics did not enter the meet.

"I think this team can be whatever we want to make it," Myricks said. "We can't cry over spilled milk. We still have to go out and represent the United States the best we can."

Myricks' supportive efforts may not be needed by 20-year-old Kamy Keshmire, the youngest member of the American team. Keshmire won the men's discus and gained confidence with the victory.

"I think this proves I'm not a flash-in-the-pan high school thrower and that I can compete against anyone in the world," Keshmire said.

Men's coach Harry Groves echoed Myricks' positive approach to the World Cup.

"I think you have a healthy situation with regards to all the young talent we'll have on this team," Groves said. "Any coach in the world would feel better going in with the old guys who have done it."

"But I'm looking to the future. It's a good learning experience for these young athletes. We've got to have some lead in time for 1992. These athletes can't all just pop up in 1992."

Women's coach Leonard Braxton said he was excited about the young talent he'll be directing.

"I went to the last World Cup and we were really underrated there and we performed well," he said. "I feel we'll do that again. We aren't a weakened team. You have to mention Dawn (Sowell). She's the next heir to being the sprint queen and she's got backup."

Groves thinks morale will be good for the World Cup.

"Walking through the tent I haven't heard anyone dismayed that so-and-so didn't show up," Groves said. "In fact, it's been the opposite. They are glad they got their chance."

Myricks' winning leap of 28 feet, 6 1/2 inches was the best in the world this year and the 13th-best ever.

Sandra Farmer-Patrick and Davis Patrick won the men's and women's 400-meter hurdles, becoming the first husband-wife team to win national events since 1960 when Hal Connolly won the hammer throw and Olga Connolly the discus.

Leroy Burrell earned a spot on the team with a 9.94 victory in the 100 meters, the sixth-fastest race ever.

Antonio Pettigrew won the 400 meters with a world-best time of 44.27 and was so eager to get on the U.S. World Cup team that he signed up before he even won his race.

"Now that's the kind of guy we want on our team," Groves said.

Women Blast Uno For Sex Scandal,

By Eric Talmadge
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — As important elections loom, charges that Prime Minister Souseke Uno paid a geisha to be his mistress are drawing angry roars from women and could alienate more voters from the scandal-tainted governing party.

"Personally, I think that if the report is true he should resign," says Kii Nakamura, spokeswoman for the 1-million member Housewives Association. "It could come to us pressing for that, but we won't decide what course of action to take until he explains himself."

Ms. Nakamura said her group and 51 others representing most major Japanese women's organizations will submit a letter to Uno, demanding he confirm or deny the report and explain his feelings toward "sex as a product you can buy."

Among those calling for Uno to step down are such diverse groups as the Japan Communist Party and a national anti-prostitution organization headed by a former legislator.

"He is not qualified to hold such an office," the anti-prostitution group said in a statement.

Chairwoman Michiko Matsuura of the 5,000-member League of Women Voters said, "Overall, the status of women is moving in the right direction. But what worries us is that the scandal involves the man at the top, the man with ultimate responsibility for enforcing the laws that guarantee women's rights."

According to the report, published soon after Uno became prime minister on June 2, an unidentified, 40-year-old woman said Uno paid her $2,100 a month to be his mistress for four months in 1985.

"He is not a man of noble character," the woman allegedly told the respected weekly magazine Sunday Mainichi. "I don't want him to use politics the same way he treated me."

Uno has avoided replying to opposition lawmakers' questions in parliament on the subject, saying he will not comment publicly on personal matters as the assembly's rules permit.

"We were shocked ... when we heard the questioning in the parliament session," said a joint statement from the League of Women Voters, the Japan Nurses Association and five other organizations representing 6 million women. "The prime minister must clearly and honestly answer to the charges."

Dalliances of public officials often have been ignored by the media, but chief editor Shuntaro Torigoe said his Sunday magazine published the article to bring social ethics into the public arena.

The latest scandal comes as the Liberal Democratic Party, which has run Japan for 34 years, struggles to regroup after the resignation of Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita, who left office because of links to an influence-peddling scandal that has involved much of the governing elite.

Uno is considered a weak politician, but the party chose him because of his unblemished reputation after another scandal-free party elder refused the post.

Analysts say party leaders had hoped Uno would polish the party's image before late July elections for half the seats in the upper house of parliament. But Matsuura told The Associated Press that strategy may have backfired.

Palme Widow Is 'Certain' Of Assailant

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — The widow of Prime Minister Olaf Palme, testifying for the first time today in the trial of her husband's accused killer, said she was "absolutely certain" the defendant was the murderer.

Mrs. Palme, who was leaving a movie with her husband when he was shot to death Feb. 28, 1986, said she clearly saw the gunman's face. In her testimony, however, she never used the name of Christer Pettersson, who is charged with the killing.

Mrs. Palme, saying she still suffered from "a deep wound," had refused to testify with Pettersson present in the Stockholm district courtroom.

She is the only witness who had a clear look at the killer at the murder scene, and her testimony was crucial to the prosecution's case. The defendant was held in an adjoining room during her testimony.

She identified him in testimony only as "No. 8," a reference to Pettersson's place in a videotaped lineup where Mrs. Palme had earlier picked him out.

"I have been trained in my job to observe things. Not to analyze, but to observe," she told the court. Mrs. Palme is a psychologist by training.

"My state of shock made me even more observant," she said. "That's why I remember his face so clearly."

Mrs. Palme, who wore a gray suit and a green silk scarf, appeared on edge during much of her testimony. Accompanied by her son Joachim, she entered the courtroom walking sideways to avoid facing the 60 reporters present.

When court officials tried to show her a map of the murder scene, she refused to turn in profile to the audience to look at it. The map was moved so she could keep her back to the gallery.

Mrs. Palme had also demanded that no official tape recording be made of the session, that it not be broadcast, and that reporters be excluded. The court agreed to the first two conditions, but allowed the news media inside.

Foley Says Bush Should Speak Out Against China

By Susanne M. Schafer
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — House Speaker Thomas Foley says it's time for President Bush to begin speaking out more forcefully in opposition to the harsh Chinese crackdown on pro-democracy dissidents.

As China's hard-line leadership hands out death sentences to dissident leaders and Western journalists continue to be expelled, Foley and others on Capitol Hill are expressing skepticism that the United States can afford a business-as-usual approach.

Foley, D-Wash., noted Sunday that there are those who believe Bush "ought to be speaking more loudly and more clearly" as China's leadership takes steps to erase the pro-democracy movement.

"The president ought to be doing that," said Foley, interviewed on NBC's "Meet The Press."

The speaker also said the United States should break relations immediately with China if the Chinese use violence against the U.S. Embassy in Beijing to seize dissident Fang Lizhi, who sought refuge there two weeks ago.

The U.S. decision to harbor Fang and his wife Li Shuxian has angered the Chinese leadership, which has accused the United States of interfering in China's internal affairs.

While the administration has repeatedly said it abhors the violent and bloody means used by the Chinese to crush the student-led democracy movement, the president has been reluctant to direct harsh rhetoric at Beijing, or affix blame for the June 4 massacre of the protesters around Tiananmen Square. According to Western intelligence estimates, some 3,000 persons were probably killed.

Bush moved swiftly to curtail military sales to China, but did not recall the ambassador, nor did he draw down the official diplomatic presence there.

He and other administration officials have said repeatedly that they oppose taking economic sanctions, saying such steps might hurt the Chinese people.

But others on Capitol Hill think differently, even some from the president's own party.

Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., called the idea of business as usual with China's regime an "intolerable" idea.

Wilson, appearing Saturday on CNN, said he intends to introduce a resolution in the Senate calling for the revocation of that country's favored trading status with the United States.

"The United States must be a moral leader. ... I think we've got to do that with some concrete, tangible means," Wilson said.

Under the most-favored designation, a trading partner must be given the best trade terms granted to any other nation.

Although a congressional resolution would be non-binding, Wilson said it is important to put the Congress on record against the Chinese regime's bloody suppression of the pro-democracy movement.

"The United States is the largest direct investor in the People's Republic of China. ... The hope is ... that a more moderate leadership takes over, but one can assist that to come about," Wilson argued.

Iran Says Fight Aboard Airliner Caused Crash

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NICOSIA, Cyprus — The crash-landing of an Afghan airliner in eastern Iran in which six people were killed was caused by a fight between the crew and security guards, Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency reported today.

The agency and Tehran Radio, both monitored in Nicosia, made no mention of a hijacking, which earlier Iranian and Afghan reports had blamed for Sunday's crash in the desert southeast of Zabol, close to the Afghan border.

IRNA said deputy Prime Minister Alireza Moayyeri, sent by Premier Hussein Musavi to Zabol Sunday to investigate the incident, had found that the fight aboard the twin-engine Antonov An-26 led to the crash.

He did not elaborate, but said that investigators had determined "the full details," IRNA reported in a dispatch from Zabol, 700 miles southeast of Tehran.

The radio quoted the governor of Zabol district as saying that, according to accounts given by passengers, the plane had "headed for Iranian territory as a result of the clash on board." It did not elaborate.

The Ariana Afghan Airways plane was flying from Kabul, the Afghan capital, to the provincial city of Zaranj in the southwest, across the border from Zabol, with 38 passengers and crew aboard when it ran into trouble.

Moayyeri said four people — earlier reported to be a woman and three men — died in the crash-landing.

Two of the 34 injured dragged from the wreckage died later in Zabol's Imam Khomeini Hospital, he said. One was identified as a 70-year-old man.

IRNA listed the pilot, Mir Weis Haji, 50, and the co-pilot, Khayr Mohammad Sadar Khayl, 26, among the injured. The agency on Sunday named the pilot as Mirvis Paktia.

IRNA said a team from Iran's Civil Aviation Organization submitted a report on the incident to Moayyeri this morning.

The report said neither the control tower at Zabol airport or the tower at the Iranian city of Zahedan, 100 miles to the south, monitored any distress calls from the Afghan pilot.

But the report said both airports prepared for an emergency landing when the Antonov entered Iranian airspace. It was not known why the pilot did not try to make for either Iranian airport.

In Kabul, foreign ministry spokesman Mohammad Nabi Amani said earlier today that the Antonov had been hijacked and that 12 people aboard the airliner were being held hostage.

He did not say where his information came from, but said the hijackers' identities were not known.

He also charged that Afghan diplomats "have not been allowed to go near the site of the hijacking."

But IRNA said an Afghan delegation left for Zabol today to investigate the incident and to arrange for transporting the casualties and dead back to Afghanistan.

Afghanistan and Iran do not have diplomatic relations, but maintain embassies in each others' capitals.

Maine Battling Canadian Coins

By Dirk Beveridge
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OLD ORCHARD BEACH, Maine — Canadian tourists who keep cash registers jingling in this resort town also have vending-machine operators singing the blues as lower-valued coins pile up.

"Starting shortly, through the end of the season, probably 8 or 9 percent of the coins are Canadian," said Paul Dunn, vice president and operations manager at Donovan and Donovan Inc., a vending company in nearby Saco.

The nickels, dimes and quarters are the same size as their U.S. counterparts, and at current exchange rates — $1.19 Canadian per $1 U.S. — they can take a slow, steady bite out of profits.

"We have a pretty hefty discount when it goes to the bank," Dunn said. "Coins we get discounted 50 percent. The way it's explained to us is it's an expensive process, handling them and shipping them back."

Dunn said his company plans to install electronic devices to make machines refuse the Canadian coins, but that can create new problems.

"Of course, that makes irate customers," Dunn said. "A few years ago, it (the exchange rate) was 3 percent, and we put in coin acceptors."

In northern Maine, Hedrich Vending Inc. of Presque Isle winds up with so many Canadian coins that trying to keep them away would not be worth the effort, said Joe Hedrich Jr. Fixing the machines to reject the Canadian coins would lead to too many jammed machines.

"We'd have service calls galore," Hedrich said. "We eat the discount."

Up north, the discount is not as bad, with banks subtracting the actual exchange rate of around 20 percent in recent days, he said.

But in southern Maine, banks are not fond of handling Canadian coins.

"For a customer of Maine National Bank, we will discount it 50 percent, but for a non-customer, we will not do it at all," said Jim Parisi, head teller at Maine National in downtown Portland.

In Old Orchard Beach, a seaside town 20 miles south of Portland, the tourism economy gets such a lift from Canadians that officials have decided to take the foreign coins at face value when they turn up in municipal parking lots and pay toilets.

"As a courtesy we don't discount them," Town Manager Jerry Plante said. "What limited number we get we process through the bank, and we get discounted 40 percent." Vending companies that need to sift the Canadian change out of the U.S. coins have found that they can do so by running all the coins under special magnets, which fish the Canadian coins out, said Hendrich.

The Canadian coins also turn up in parking meters. Some Maine residents have found the meters to be a good place to get rid of Canadian coins that turn up in their pocket change.

In Portland, parking meter supervisor Robert Henderson said the problem may be aggravated by businesses who buy the cheap coins and hand them out to let customers plug meters with them. Henderson said he can't prove the coins are being systematically used and he would not identify any suspect businesses, but he's gotten reports for several years of the practice.

Strange Weapons Employed In War Against Insects

By Don Kendall
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — It's that time of the year when the Agriculture Department's bug writers turn out reports about the creepy, crawly, hoppy things that chew on crops and livestock.

Some of the reports turned out by specialists in the department's Agricultural Research Service involve space-age technology, foreign entomological recruiting and even sex, one of the favorite weapons of pest managers.

And when a fierce insect predator attacks a lace bug ... well, the details aren't for small children.

Take the common grasshopper, a notorious villain with an appetite for almost anything in the plant world. Or nematodes, ticks, weevils and sundry other kinds of critters that make farmers, ranchers and home gardeners fret.

"Grasshoppers like to sit in the sun," says USDA research entomologist Raymond I. Carruthers. "If it's cold, a grasshopper can't develop quickly. It might not develop to adulthood at all during its growing season — from May into September."

Don't feel sorry for the hopper, though. Millions of them chew on pastures each year, destroying almost a fourth of the forage grasses in 17 of 22 Western states. And migrating grasshoppers also ravage potatoes, alfalfa and other crops.

The internal body heat of the sun-loving hoppers serves the insects another way, by protecting them against certain diseases. For example, Carruthers said one fungus — Entomophaga grylli — would show promise as a biological control if it could stand the heat.

Carruthers said the fungus can stand about 100 degrees Fahrenheit for six to eight hours before starting to die. Grasshoppers in laboratory tests have been shown to "actually cure themselves by basking in the light," he said.

But a type of E. grylli from Australia can stand greater heat ex-posure and may be introduced on Western rangeland as early as this summer, Carruthers said.

In parts of Texas and other rangeland areas of the West, snakeweed and other unwanted brush is a costly and persistent problem for livestock producers. Maybe two South American insects will help.

A weevil named Heilipodus ventralis and a moth called Carmanta haemata attack the roots of snakeweed, a plant that infests 143 million acres in western states.

Entomologist Jack DeLoach, who works for the USDA agency in Temple, Texas, said federal approval has been granted to introduce the weevil into the United States. But the moth is still being tested, he said.

Agency scientists are looking at biological controls for brush because chemicals are too expensive in areas where it takes 20 to 50 acres to provide grazing for one cow for a year, he said.

Besides snakeweed, which can cause pregnant cows to abort, targeted brush includes saltcedar, which infests about a million acres along Western streams, and baccharis, a willow-like shrub found from Florida to California.

Other possible brush enemies are being looked at, including some from Argentina and Brazil, and at least a dozen insect species from Asia.

But sometimes a natural ally shows up no farther away than a potted azalea at the USDA's main research center in Beltsville, Md. In this case, it was a natural enemy of lace bugs, the most serious enemies of azaleas.

Entomologist John W. Neal and colleagues discovered an insect predator — Stethoconus japonicus — in 1985 on a U.S.-grown potted azalea. Studies since have shown that a single female predator, which has a needle-like snout, can consume five or six lace bugs each day. The slightly smaller male handles two or three.

"The lace bug doesn't have a chance," Neal said.

Saving Money A Way Of Life In Japan

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — The Japanese may appear to be the world's most avid consumers of luxury goods, but they are just as enthusiastic about stashing money in the bank.

The country's 39 million households each held an average 19.1 million yen, equivalent to about $132,450, in personal savings last year, according to a recent Bank of Japan report.

Total personal savings rose 11.4 percent to $5.18 trillion in 1988 and accounted for more than half the total value of Japan's goods and services, outpacing growth in consumer spending, which surged 4.5 percent.

It was the third year that personal savings deposited at banks and postal offices or held in stocks, bonds and insurance posted double-digit growth over the previous year.

It also is a clear indication that the Japanese have not abandoned their habit of saving a substantial part of their incomes.

Japanese save 16 percent of their income on average, compared to about 5.5 percent in the United States.

The bulk of personal savings in Japan — $4.45 trillion — is held in bank and postal deposits and in bonds and insurance, the remainder in stocks.

However, savings figures exclude important assets such as real estate and therefore understate the wealth of many Japanese families.

Homeowners in Tokyo, for example, held real estate worth an average of $596,393 in 1987, according to the government's Economic Planning Agency.

Likewise, the lower savings rate in the United States understates the wealth of American families, which is mainly held in housing, says Richard C. Koo, senior economist at Nomura Research Institute.

Japanese savings mainly are in financial assets, he says. That creates a massive pool of capital for Japanese industry.

"While the value of land in Japan tends to appreciate, housing actually depreciates. People know that their houses will not be worth much 10 years from now, so they don't invest in housing," Koo said.

"Americans put their savings into keeping their homes up, because they expect them to appreciate," he explained.

Housing in Japan is vulnerable to earthquakes and fires and traditionally is torn down and rebuilt rather than maintained.

Numerous surveys say the Japanese save to prepare for illness and disaster, for retirement and children's educations.

"I've always stashed whatever I could in the bank, so I'd have a nice nest egg," said Seitarou Komatsu, 41, an employee of a major Japanese industrial firm. "It's my security. That way, I can relax and not worry."

The prospect of long years of retirement is a crucial reason. Average life expectancy in Japan is 82.1 years for women and 75.9 years for men, while the mandatory retirement age at many companies is 55-60.

"The Japanese are much less confident about the future than Americans," said Koo. "They know how much things cost here, and they're wise to prepare for their old age."

But, how do they do it?

The expansion of two-income families has contributed to the growth in personal savings, along with rising values of financial assets.

The average monthly wage for a Japanese worker in a company with 30 employees or more — about half of Japan's work force of 44 million — is about $2,329, while spending averages $2,080 a household.

Husband's Death Changed Joyce Brothers' Outlook

NEW YORK — Psychologist Joyce Brothers says the death of her husband has left her better able to understand the pain of others. Brothers said in this week's People magazine that after the death of her husband, Milton, last year to cancer she realized that no one lives without pain. "My pain just came a little farther down the pike than a lot of people's," she wrote. "It's one thing to read research and discuss the findings. It's another thing to be able to understand another person's pain emotionally. I'm a changed person; I'm much more sensitive to others." Brothers wrote that she misses the laughter she and her husband shared in their 39 years of marriage. "You miss that more than anything else. Sex is not something you miss. What you miss is the person who, with all his problems, warts and difficulties, thinks you're the greatest person in the world." Brothers, 60, said that the only good thing about her husband's illness was that it allowed her enough time to say goodbye. "You have a chance to say everything in your heart, to leave nothing unresolved," she wrote. On the night before he died, she went to the hospital and spoke to him about their marriage highlights.

Boston Pops Celebrates 20 Years On PBS

By Arlene Levinson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — Last summer, viewers of "Evening at Pops" tapped their feet to everything from Tchaikovsky to Stephen Sondheim, Simon and Garfunkel to Irving Berlin, not to mention conductor John Williams' scores for "Star Trek," "E.T., The Extraterrestrial" and "Raiders of the Lost Ark."

After 20 years on PBS, the eclectic summertime perennial is one of the longest-running and most-watched public television programs.

"I don't think its name is accidental," said Peter McGhee, program manager for national productions at WGBH-TV, which produces the series.

"Pops" is short for popular, right? It draws on a sort of mainstream popular musical vernacular and it does so in a musically intelligent way with people of great luster and accomplishment."

Beginning Friday — check your local PBS station schedule — PBS will air a special 20th-anniversary "Evening at Pops," taped at Boston Symphony Hall, the home of the Pops.

The concert kicking off the 12-week season features humorist Art Buchwald, opera stars Robert Merrill and Roberta Peters, comic pianist Victor Borge and piano duo Anthony and Joseph Paratore.

Williams took over as Pops conductor in 1980 after the death of Arthur Fiedler.

"I don't think it's complacent to point out that the popularity of the Pops does not seem to have diminished at all ... (but) we have to keep up the search for a new repertoire, finding new things, discarding things that no longer work," Williams said in a recent interview.

"The Pops is famous for delivering a certain glowing, good feeling that it must produce each and every time out. The amazing thing is that it does."

McGhee suggested that the show is so popular because it is "a refuge from the violence and banality of the rest of television."

"Evening at Pops," runs from June through August. Half the 60-minute concerts are new, the rest are repeats.

The Pops was born 104 years ago when the Boston Symphony performed its first "Music Hall Promenade Concert."

The Pops' first program promised: "The Programme for these Concerts will be made up largely of light music of the best class." To draw summer crowds, the concerts offered electric lighting, instead of the more stifling gas lights which drew oxygen from the air, and cafe tables set up in a hall where alcoholic beverages could be consumed, a move considered risky by staid Bostonians.

The Boston Globe reviewed the inaugural concert on its front page and declared, "More than a 'sea-change' has come over Music Hall. The statue of Beethoven, which has witnessed many a strange sight, looked out last evening on a summer garden scene as Teutonic as though Boston were in (the) Fatherland."

Newspapers came to refer to the summer shows as "popular promenade concerts."

Jerry Lee Lewis uses everything he has to entertain a crowd gathered on the rooftop of the Hotel Peabody over the weekend in Memphis, Tenn. The party was part of the grand opening of the movie, "Great Balls of Fire," with Dennis Quaid portraying Lewis.

Taped Favorites

NEW YORK (AP) — More than 2 million households taped each of the final two parts of CBS' "Lonesome Doye." They were the top two most-taped programs in February 1989, according to survey results just released by the Nielsen Media Research.

Except for NBC's "L.A. Law" and soap operas, VCR users mostly taped television movies, according to Nielsen.

"The ABC Mystery Movie" came in third on the top-10 list, followed by "The CBS Sunday Movie," the daytime NBC soap opera "Days of Our Lives," ABC's Sunday movies, "L.A. Law," CBS' Tuesday movies, NBC's Sunday movies, NBC's Monday movies, ABC's daytime drama "All My Children" and the repeat of the TV movie "The Day After" on ABC.

Nielsen said 66 percent of taping was of programs carried by network affiliates. Independent station programs accounted for 13 percent of the taping, 10 percent pay-cable, 7 percent cable and 4 percent PBS.

Greenpeace members show a poster as they pass U.S. battleship Iowa on their rubber raft

Greenpeace Boats Attempt To Block Battleship Iowa

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KIEL, West Germany — Anti-nuclear activists said they buzzed around the U.S. battleship Iowa in rubber dinghies to keep it from anchoring Sunday, but that police dragged them away.

Eight motorized rubber dinghies and a small sailboat belonging to the international environmental organization Greenpeace failed to keep the battleship from dropping anchor in Kiel harbor, Greenpeace said in a statement from Hamburg.

A scuffle ensued when West German marine police showed up with "at least 15 ships and rubber boats," it said.

West German television showed two motorized Greenpeace dinghies just under the Iowa's giant anchor, which was hovering in the air. It also showed police boats pushing the dinghies away.

A banner from the Greenpeace sailboat read: "No Nukes in Kiel, Greenpeace."

Police "pushed off and hauled away" some of the activists' rubber boats, ending the protest, Greenpeace said.

Greenpeace said the Iowa may be carrying nuclear weapons, although the claim has not been confirmed by either West German or American officials.

The 58,000-ton Iowa, one of the world's biggest warships, later dropped anchor in this northern city.

It sailed into Kiel to take part in the annual "Kiel Week" nautical show that opened Saturday.

The Iowa was the scene of a disaster in April when an explosion ripped through one of the ship's gun turrets, killing 47 crew members while the vessel was on maneuvers near Puerto Rico.

Mexico Extends Wage-Price Freeze

By John Wright
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MEXICO CITY — The government on Sunday renewed a wage-price freeze imposed last year in an effort to curb Mexico's triple-digit inflation.

President Carlos Salinas de Gortari and Cabinet officials announced in a televised address Sunday night that the Economic Growth and Stability Pact would be extended through March 31, 1990.

Labor Secretary Arsenio Farrell said the extension of the government-business-labor pact "is a new testimony to the unity of Mexicans to modernize the economy."

Under the pact that first went into effect Feb. 29, 1988, the government froze the peso-dollar exchange rate, the federal minimum wage and prices for government-regulated goods and services.

Inflation registered 159.2 percent in 1987. Consumer prices rose by 51.7 percent last year under the program.

On Jan. 1 this year, the government began a gradual devaluation of the peso and granted granted workers an 8 percent increase in the daily minimum wage, amounting to about $4. It forbade employers from passing along the added labor cost to consumers.

Sunday's extension maintains the price freeze on such items as electricity and gasoline.

Inflation is not the only problem in the nation's economy. Mexico's foreign debt stands at a staggering $107.4 billion, with private banks the main creditors.

The government has said Mexico must cut its debt-service burden from 7 percent to 2 percent of the gross domestic product to revive the stagnant economy.

Report Blames Secrecy For Safety, Health Problems At Weapons Plant

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Congressional investigators report that unchallenged secrecy at nuclear weapons plants allowed the Energy Department and its private contractors to neglect a need for improved health and safety programs.

The safety problems, which came to light mostly over the past two years, were aggravated by a lack of outside scrutiny and effective oversight from the Energy Department, which pays private companies to run the facilities, the congressional report issued Sunday said.

"This penchant for secrecy and the classified nature of the process of making nuclear weapons contributed to a mindset of emphasizing production at the expense of health and safety," the report said.

A variety of congressional committees and independent panels have been studying problems in the weapons complex, which includes 16 major facilities in 12 states. Some of key facilities are closed down for repairs and improvements.

The latest blow to the weapons program was struck at the Rocky Flats plutonium fabrication plant, near Boulder, Colo., where FBI agents swooped in June 6 to check out allegations of a cover-up of illegal storage and waste disposal practices.

The Energy Department subsequently froze nearly $5 million in bonus payments to the operator of the Rocky Flats facility, Rockwell International Corp.

The bonuses were to cover work performed between September 1988 and March 1989, but have been "frozen indefinitely," according to W. Henson Moore, Energy Department deputy director.

"They're not going to get that money until we know more," Moore said Friday.

Energy Secretary James D. Watkins is putting together a masterplan for modernizing the complex and cleaning up the radioactive and toxic wastes that have contaminated the sites and surrounding areas during 40 years of bomb making. He says national security may be jeopardized if improvements aren't made quickly.

Estimates of the rebuilding and cleanup cost range up to $150 billion over 30 years.

"Obsessive secrecy and lack of outside oversight have been hallmarks of the nuclear weapons program since its beginning as the wartime Manhattan Engineering District" in the early 1940s, Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., said in a letter accompanying the investigators' report.

The inquiry was conducted over three years by the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on oversight and investigations. Dingell is chairman of the subcommittee as well as the full Energy and Commerce committee.

The investigators listed a variety of incidents and shortcomings in the weapons complex that have been documented by other agencies in recent years.

They include:

—The use of illegal drugs at some of the most sensitive weapons facilities, including the Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico, which designs and tests nuclear arms; the Hanford Nuclear Reservation, near Richland, Wash., which is involved in a variety of nuclear materials production, and the Oak Ridge Y-12 plant in Tennessee, which makes weapons components and uranium.

—Inadequate fire protection at the Savannah River Site, near Aiken, S.C., which is the nation's only source of tritium, a radioactive gas used to make warheads. The report cited a 1986 federal review of the problem that said the only fire-fighting device available at one nuclear reactor there was an ordinary garden hose.

—Poor training of safety inspectors at Hanford and Savannah River. It took the Energy Department five years to discover that several inspectors at Hanford had not been properly certified for their jobs because of improperly graded tests or a lack of experience.

The investigators said there had been some signs of hope for improvement since Watkins took office in March but that serious shortcomings are still pervasive.

"The problems cited in this report indicate a breakdown in the DOE's entire system to insure compliance with its own policy of producing nuclear weapons without undue risk to its workers and the public at large," the report said.
