U.S. Relief Worker Kidnapped Abductors Demand Release Of Prisoners

By Nicolas B. Tatro
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM — The army today blamed the kidnapping of a U.S. relief worker in the occupied Gaza Strip on terrorists with ties to the PLO, and Palestinian accounts said the captive sent letters with his abductor's demands that Palestinian prisoners be freed.

The relief worker, 35-year-old Chris George, is an official for Save the Children Federation. He is believed to be the first foreigner kidnapped in Israel or in the territories for political reasons.

Officials said George, of Montclair, N.J., disappeared at midday Thursday during a weekly trip to a field office in Gaza City.

The army announcement said George was abducted "by Palestinian terrorists linked to the PLO."

The army set up checkpoints and stopped cars driven by Palestinians in Gaza City, with a population of 150,000. Soldiers conducted searches and declared the entire Gaza Strip a closed military area, barring journalists from entering.

During the 18-month uprising against Israeli occupation, the PLO-backed underground in the occupied lands has maintained a policy opposing the use of arms and expelling foreigners from attacks. The kidnapping would mark a change of strategy if it was sanctioned by the leadership.

The U.N. Relief and Works Agency, which oversees aid programs for Palestinian refugees, has told foreign nationals in Gaza to stay in their offices or in the U.N. hostel near Gaza City, said U.N. spokesman Rulf Van Uye.

Donald Cofman, a spokesman for the U.S. Embassy in Tel Aviv, said the embassy was advising U.S. nationals to stay at home if possible or, if forced to venture out, use "extreme caution."

Fewer than 100 U.S. citizens reside in the Gaza Strip, where 700,000 Palestinians live.

George worked in Oman with the Peace Corps and in the Palestinian refugee camp of Ein Hilweh in Lebanon with Save the Children before moving to Israel. He is fluent in Arabic.

Budget Shows Increased Expenditures City Tax Rate Projected To Stay The Same

By J. Ward Best
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The ordinance passed by City Council earlier this week, which directs Greenville's 1989-90 budget, shows increased expenditures of more than $2.6 million. But the city tax rate remains unchanged from last year.

The general fund budget totals $21,747,549.

Nearly every department will see an increase in funding next year, including monies for a five percent market adjustment (cost of living) salary increase for city employees and a pay raise for City Council members. The City Council also approved nearly all requests for non-departmental funding.

With an increase of $2,637,746 over last year's budget, not including intra-governmental transfers, the tax rate remains at 55.36 cents per $100 valuation.

But City Manager Greg Knowles warned that to continue services at present levels and maintain the city's prosperity at the present tax rate, Greenville needs to take in an additional $50 million to $60 million in property valuation next year.

The budget includes an average increase of 10 to 12 percent over last year's budget for each of the city's departments.

The expenses for mayor and City Council increased from $66,809 to $143,990 - a 54 percent increase. Earlier this month the council approved $200 per month raises for its members and a $250 per month raise for the mayor.

The 12 non-departmental requests totalled $141,400. The largest expenditure, $64,000 went to Evergreen.

This year the appropriations for non-departmental projects are not separated from the budget, but are included under the most closely related governmental department.

The budget also distributes more than $2 million for city workers' fringe benefits among the departments. Last year the $2,276,383 for retirement plans and other benefits was listed as a separate item in the budget.

Because of the outside expenses in this year's report, Ron Kimble called the department figures "artificially high."

The assistant city manager said the change in accounting was not to confuse or hide cost figures in the budget. The new system would provide more accurate cost figures for

Supreme Court Blocks Outlaw Of 'Dial-A-Porn'

By Richard Carelli
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court today refused to let Congress totally outlaw the billion-dollar "dial-a-porn" industry, rejecting arguments that such a ban is needed to protect the nation's children from merely "indecent" messages.

The justices unanimously said Congress was not justified when it passed a law last year banning all sexually explicit telephone dial-up message services.

Congress may outlaw obscene telephone messages only, not indecent ones, the court said. The dial-a-porn industry therefore must be allowed to survive, it said.

The ban violates free-speech rights when applied to "indecent" messages, the court ruled.

The 1988 law made it a crime to use a telephone to make any "obscene or indecent" communication for commercial purposes. But its total ban was never imposed because U.S. District Judge A. Wallace Tashima in Los Angeles ruled it could be applied only to obscene — not merely indecent — phone messages.

The judge said that outlawing non-obscene messages, even though they may be inappropriate for minors, violates the free-speech protections of the Constitution's First Amendment.

Today, the nation's highest court said the law could be applied to obscene messages, but not to indecent ones.

"Sexual expression which is indecent but not obscene is protected by the (Constitution's) First Amendment," Justice Byron R. White wrote for the court.

In an argument session before the justices last April, the Bush administration urged that the total ban be reinstated.

Justice Department lawyer Richard Taranto said then that the ban is needed to "protect children

Assistant AG: High Court Ruling Nullifies State's Statute On Flags

By Amy Gavigan
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Supreme Court ruling overturning the conviction of a protester for flag-burning nullifies the North Carolina statute governing the mutilation of the State and United States Flag, the state's assistant attorney general says.

"We have reviewed the (Supreme Court) ruling and our North Carolina statute, 14-381, and the Supreme Court ruling nullifies our statute," William P. Hart said.

That doesn't mean that conduct involving desecration of the flag can't be dealt with using other statutes such as conduct that leads to a riot, he said. The Supreme Court made that distinction.

"I think there has been some surprise," he said. "Of course, a 5-4 decision reflects a difference of opinion."

The protester, Gregory "Joey" Johnson, was sentenced to a year in jail and fined $2,000 for burning a flag at the 1984 Republican National Convention. The sentence was overturned by the Supreme Court voting 5-4.

The decision has caused mixed emotions in North Carolina citizens.

Ceremonies Launch State Games Of N.C.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHAPEL HILL — Todd Mesibov is motivated by the thrill of competition. Tom Williamson is motivated by his wife.

Regardless of what moves them, Mesibov, 13, and Williamson, 56, will be at Duke's Wallace Wade Stadium on Sunday to compete in the State Games of North Carolina.

The games actually begin today with the opening ceremonies. Mesibov, a rising ninth-grader at Culbreth Junior High School will be running the 3,000-meter run, while Williamson, retired from the restaurant business, will compete in the shot put.

Mesibov, who was first introduced to distance running at age 6 by his father Gary Mesibov, recently was named the most valuable performer of the Culbreth track team. He began his running career with the Chapel Hill-Carrboro Pacers.

Anne Williamson, who does a lot of walking to keep in shape, encouraged her husband to get back to competing in track and field. The two met in 1959 when they were both attending the University of Illinois.

"She's my trainer and my instigator," Williamson says of his wife. "She wants me to stay in good physical condition so I won't become a couch potato."

Mrs. Williamson said being in the restaurant business was very confining to her husband and gave him very little time to exercise.

"What else do two people do except sit around and get F-A-T," she told The Chapel Hill Newspaper. "He's six years older than I am, so I have to push him a little bit."

Mesibov says he runs distance races because he doesn't have the speed to run the sprints.

"It's not only the physical challenge that I like," Mesibov said. "It's the mental challenge, knowing when in the race to make your move."

Success has come quickly for the trim- and fit-looking Williamson, who recently won the shot put, while finishing second in the discus, long jump and 200-meter dash at a seniors' competition in Pinehurst.

The top finishes qualified Williamson for September's Senior State Championships, which will be held at North Carolina State.

Before the Pinehurst meet, running was not part of Williamson's repertoire.

"Do you know what the time was on that?" Williamson said he asked his wife after the 200-meter race. "She said: 'No, but at least you're still alive.'"

Williamson said the competitive aspect of events like the State Games isn't that important to him anymore.

"It forces me to stay in somewhat decent shape, and I meet a lot of nice people, he said. All of the senior competitors like to hang out together," he said.

Williamson, who throws a six kilogram (just more than 13 pounds) shot, said that he walks, runs and lifts weights.

Williamson also volunteers his time with the North Carolina Special Olympics.

Mesibov said he usually doesn't train with his father, who has completed nine 26.2-mile marathons. "He gets up too early in the morning,"

Mesibov said he doesn't know of any friends who plan to spend part of Sunday running in the grueling 3,000-meter race.

"I do it mainly for extra competition and fun," Mesibov said. "I like the competition and that's what makes me do it."

Personal Income Saw Weak Rise

By Dave Skidmore
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — American's personal income rose a lackluster 0.3 percent in May, the smallest gain in eight months, while consumer spending posted its weakest advance since October, the government said today.

Consumer spending represents two-thirds of the U.S. economy and analysts closely monitor fluctuations in both spending and income as a barometer of the economy's overall health.

Economists are likely to consider the small gain in income, the slowest since September, to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $4.39 trillion as a sign that consumer demand may slacken.

The income boost followed stronger gains of 0.5 percent in April and 0.9 percent in March. However, the Commerce Department noted that the March gain was swelled by two special factors: profit-sharing payments to auto workers and retroactive Social Security checks. That made the April rise look smaller. A dip in farm subsidy payments in April made the May rise appear larger.

Disposable, or after-tax, income surged 1.4 percent in May after falling 0.7 percent in April. April tax payments took a larger-than-expected bite out of income and May represents a rebound.

The personal savings rate, representing the percentage of disposable income saved by Americans, rose to 5.3 percent in May from 4.3 percent in April.

The savings rate has been averaging about 5.1 percent this year, up from 4.2 percent last year and 3.2 percent in 1987. Analysts believe the rising savings rate this year indicates consumers are becoming more cautious.

Personal consumption spending, which includes everything except interest on debt, rose a modest 0.3 percent to a seasonally adjusted $3.44 trillion annual rate last month, following a 1.1 percent surge in April and a 0.4 percent gain in March.

The Commerce Department said much of the May weakness and April strength was accounted for by swings in auto buying, which have been influenced by introduction of manufacturers' incentives in April and their partial rescission in May.

Spending on durable goods, "big ticket" items including autos, fell 1.5 percent last month to $465.7 billion after rising 4.4 percent in April.

NARAL Staffers Push 'Pro-Choice'

By Carol Tyer

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Staff members of the North Carolina affiliate of the National Abortion Rights Action League were in Greenville on Thursday appealing for participants in NARAL's "pro-choice" campaign.

Ruth Ziegler, director of the state organization, and Wyatt Closs, a senior staff member, are traveling this week from Asheville to Wilmington via Charlotte, Greensboro, Raleigh, Rocky Mount, Greenville and Kinston. They are visiting "houseparties" from mountains to coast being held to bring together pro-choice activists in letter-writing campaigns. "We attended a houseparty in Asheville Monday and several in Charlotte, Greensboro and the Triangle area Tuesday. There's to be one in Rocky Mount tonight and we'll be at another in Wilmington Friday," Ms. Ziegler said.

"By the end of the week, we will have met a lot of people, many of whom we had only talked to on the phone before, many of whom have just accepted invitations to join our effort. We understand that there will have been more than 50 houseparties," she said. "And we hope that as many as 800 people will have written at least three letters each to state legislators and/or the governor advocating pro-choice."

Ms. Ziegler emphasized that NARAL, the state affiliate of which she has headed for about a year, is "pro-choice, not pro-abortion."

"We don't assist with abortion," she said. "We simply fight the political battle to see that women who choose it have access to safe, legal abortion."

"And we believe that North Carolinians as a whole agree with us that this is what's needed. She cited a recent 520-participant Planned Parenthood poll which asked for reaction to the statement, "Abortion is a private issue between a woman, her family and her doctor. The government should not be involved."

She said that 72 percent of the North Carolinians from every region questioned agreed, that 24 percent disagreed and that four percent said they did not know.

One hundred three of the 520 were from the East, she said. Of these 72 agreed, 27 disagreed and three said they did not know.

She said NARAL members believe that this is a crucial time for abortion rights. "Abortion rights in America hang by a thread. And women's lives literally hang in the balance. Any day now, the Supreme Court may shift the battle over abortion to the states. We need to be ready for that shift."

Ms. Ziegler was referring to a Supreme Court decision expected within the next few days in the Webster v. Reproductive Health Services. This is a case that may allow states to restrict or prohibit abortion. NARAL expects to rally the day after the decision in Raleigh.

In April of this year, NARAL members took part in rallies in both Washington, D.C., and Raleigh.

In addition to trying to prevail on state legislators not to restrict abortion rights in this state if the Supreme Court allows them the power, the group hopes to have the legislators maintain a minimum level of funding for the State Abortion Fund, Closs said.

Authorities Probe Deputy's Actions

By John Bare

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Greenville police and the Pitt Sheriff's Department are investigating allegations that a deputy sheriff failed to notify police Sunday when he was involved in an accident.

Records from the state Division of Motor Vehicles also indicate the deputy, Frederick Tyrone Alston, has been involved in eight previous accidents, said Vernon Morton, special assistant to the DMV commissioner. The records do not state whether Alston was at fault in the accidents, he said, only that Alston was involved. Four of the accidents involved personal injury, Morton said.

Five of the accidents occurred in 1984, one in 1987 and two in 1988, he said, and several incidents involved law enforcement vehicles. Alston has hit a utility pole and a stop sign, and twice he rear-ended other cars, Morton said. He has been charged with traffic violations but never convicted, he said.

Vickie McLawhorn of Winterville said Alston was driving his patrol car when it struck her vehicle in the rear on Sunday near Carolina East Mall. Her car suffered about $650 in damage, she said.

Mrs. McLawhorn said she asked Alston to notify police of the accident, but he did not.

"I asked the officer to call Greenville police a couple of times. I didn't get a reply from him," she said.

She said he asked her to move her car back into the mall parking lot, at which time he took down her name and address and told her he would come by her home before 5 p.m. with information on repairing the car.

When she arrived home her husband called the police, and she returned the accident scene to fill out a report with an officer, she said.

Greenville Police Capt. Nelson Staton said an officer is conducting an inquiry to determine whether any charges should be filed. On the accident report, Staton said the officer indicated Alston was at fault and committed a safe movement violation, but Alston was not charged because he was not at the scene when the officer was there.

Staton said an officer is also considering whether Alston violated the law by failing to report an accident involving more than $500 in damage.

"We are looking into it from that angle," Staton said.

Chief Deputy Brooks Oakley also said he is conducting an internal investigation into the accident. He said it would be up to Sheriff Ralph Tyson to decide whether to keep Alston assigned to duty that included driving. Tyson could not be reached for comment.

It appears to be the second time in two months that a Pitt Sheriff's deputy failed to report an accident. Deputy Troy Boyd said he hit a road sign in Hoke County on May 1 when he was transporting a prisoner to Pitt County. He said he called the Pitt Sheriff's office and was told to proceed back to Greenville. She said no one was hurt, but the accident damaged the car door. He said he did not call a law enforcement officer to the scene.

Alston, who has been with the department about four years, has had at least three other wrecks involving sheriff's vehicles, Oakley said.

In the most recent, on June 13 of last year, Alston was involved in an accident on Memorial Drive in which he flipped his patrol car and hit two parked vehicles, causing about $16,000 in damage and suffering injuries. Tyson said Alston was responding to a call at the time and lost control when he switched lanes to pass another car.

Mrs. McLawhorn said the accident Sunday was especially frustrating because Alston did not contact police. She and her husband have met with Oakley, she said, but she did not know details of the investigation.

John Bulow, assistant county manager, said the accident should not have a great effect on the county's insurance rates for a couple of reasons.

One, all 600 county employees are covered in the policy, he said, thus the large group may lessen the effect of any one person's poor record. Also, deputies are already considered in a high-risk group because of their job duties, he said.

The county does turn over the driver's license numbers of deputies each year to its insurance company, thus Bulow said the driving records do figure into the rate-setting process.

Whiter Teeth?

Commonly asked questions and answers concerning this procedure.

Question: "How long does the procedure take?"
Answer: This procedure takes only 15 to 20 minutes to start and the patient completes the treatment at home and to their desired degree of whiteness; however, on your first visit, the dentist must prepare you for the procedure and usually a normal one-hour appointment is sufficient. The results are very predictable when the patient follows the instructions to the letter. Most cases can be completed within a two week period, more complicated cases may require a longer period of time. Patients who follow the instructions properly may see results within the first three days of treatment.

Question: "If this is such a new procedure, how can I be sure it's safe?"
Answer: Although it is a new product, it is based on the older bleaching techniques that have been in use on teeth for over twenty years. When used properly, these techniques have proven to be extremely safe but overpriced for most people. It is a much milder medication than anything ever used before for this purpose and is priced where every patient can now afford to look their very best with a totally different and easier procedure.

Question: "How long will the results last?"

Ruling Keeps Congress From Totally Outlawing 'Dial-A-Porn'

from hearing patently offensive speech."

But Laurance Tribe, a Harvard law professor representing a dial-a-porn company, said technological safeguards blocking children's access to the racy messages make a total ban unnecessary and unconstitutional.

In today's decision, White said, "It may well be that there is no fail-safe method of guaranteeing that never will a minor be able to access the dial-a-porn system."

But he said technological restrictions on the industry might prove "extremely effective, and only a few of the most enterprising and disobedient young people will manage to secure access to such messages."

The court's three most liberal justices in freedom-of-expression cases — William J. Brennan, Thurgood Marshall and John Paul Stevens — voted to strike down the law as it applies to obscene material as well.

"I have long been convinced that the exaction of criminal penalties for the distribution of obscene materials to consenting adults is constitutionally intolerable," Brennan wrote in an opinion joined by Marshall and Stevens.

In other action, the court:

— Ruled that states are not required by the Constitution to provide free lawyers for death row inmates who lost an initial round of appeals.

By a 5-4 vote, the court ruled in favor of Virginia officials who said requiring states to pay for attorneys in second-round appeals could lead to interminable delays in carrying out executions.

— Ruled that the Justice Department has a legal obligation to supply a weekly tax magazine with copies of all federal trial court opinions and orders in tax cases.

The justices, by an 8-1 vote, said the federal Freedom of Information Act imposes such a duty on the Justice Department's tax division.

Dial-a-porn companies make their services available to callers through 976 exchanges and AT&T's 900 long-distance lines.

The telephone company typically charges callers according to per-call rates, retaining a portion of the charges and giving the remainder to the dial-a-porn company.

The same exchanges also are used for other, non-controversial types of messages such as sports scores, time checks and weather reports.

Born in 1983, the dial-a-porn industry matured quickly. According to court records, in 1984 some 180 million calls were placed by customers in New York alone.

The industry's income last year topped $2 billion.

Congress in 1983 directed the Federal Communications Commission to figure out ways children could be prevented from calling dial-a-porn services. A company's failure to adhere to those methods was to be a crime.

The commission considered various means of restricting access to sexually explicit messages and eventually settled on access codes, scramblers and requiring credit card payment.

But an impatient Congress in 1988 enacted the outright ban.

Writing for the court, White said, "Because the statute's denial of adult access to telephone messages which are indecent but not obscene far exceeds that which is necessary to limit the access of minors to such messages, we hold that the ban does not survive constitutional scrutiny."

Obscenity is a legal term that does not apply to all sexually explicit material.

The Supreme Court since 1973 had defined obscenity as a work that appeals to a morbid interest in sex, is patently offensive and when taken as a whole lacks serious literary, artistic, political or scientific value.

Sexually explicit material, often called pornography, may or may not be legally obscene.

In 1978, the court drew a distinction between obscene and "indecent" expression when it allowed federal regulators to restrict the broadcast of indecent language.

Upholding the government's power to punish use of "dirty words" carried on television or radio at times when children might be listening, the court adopted the FCC's definition of indecent — "patently offensive references to excretory and sexual organs or activities."

After Tashima's decision last July, the Reagan administration appealed directly to the Supreme Court, challenging that part of the ruling that protects indecent material.

Sable Communications of California Inc., a major purveyor of dial-a-porn services in that state, filed a counter-appeal challenging the part of Tashima's ruling that allows the ban on materials judged to be obscene.

The cases are Sable Communications v. FCC, 88-515, and FCC vs. Sable Communications, 88-525.

State Statute On Flag Mutilization Said Nullified

freedom of speech goes beyond verbal expression to forms of conduct.

"Dissenters are taking the view that the flag is such a special symbol it can be considered property of the government," said Yarbrough. "What the Supreme Court is saying is criticism can be expressed through conduct."

Yarbrough said that the decision would definitely be a controversial one because it will rouse anger in those who are repulsed by the burning of the flag.

Greenville police chief Jerry Tesmond is one of those people.

"I got a lot of police officers down here that don't like that decision, including myself," he said. "That's veterans and non-veterans."

"I just question the wisdom of the Supreme Court in this case. This is University, said that he was not surprised by the decision based on previous Supreme Court rulings, but he is apprehensive about the implications.

"I think the decision is in line with earlier Supreme Court rulings," Yarbrough said. "I am not sure whether the First Amendment should be extended to include acts of protest, conduct wise."

Yarbrough said that the Supreme Court ruled in the 1974 case Spence v. the state of Washington, the flag could be displayed with a peace symbol attached as a form of protest to United States' involvement in Southeast Asia.

"The first Amendment protects freedom of speech and the press. I'm not sure it is wise to include conduct," he said. "After all, a political assassination is an attempt to protest."

The court, he said, is taking the same position it has before, saying our flag. I imagine, if somebody looked, there's probably a tear running down the Statue of Liberty's face today," said Tesmond.

Tesmond, a veteran of the Korean War, said he was surprised by the decision but will adjust.

"We do our job in a professional manner, as the law requires it," he said. "Once we have opportunity to review findings of the ruling, we will act accordingly."

Sgt. Mack Tripp, supervisor at the National Guard office in Greenville, said he is upset by the ruling.

"To me the flag is sacred," he said. "I don't think the flag should be stepped on or touch the ground."

"A lot of people lost their lives for that flag, people should respect it. That's the only right way to have a flag," said Tripp.

An official at the Institute of Government in Chapel Hill said the point of the flag is not the flag itself, but the ideals it represents. One of those, he said, freedom.

"The fact that we protect this guy doesn't mean we like him," the official said. "What we're talking about is whether we should punish him, not like him."

Rep. Walter B. Jones Sr. said in a telephone interview he is not pleased with the ruling.

"I'm terribly upset by that ruling, even disgusted," Jones said.

Jones said he plans to co-sponsor a bill with Tom Beville, D-Ala., which proposes to move control of the flag from the Supreme Court to the states.

Three Being Held In Man's Murder

WASHINGTON, N.C. — Three men suspected of murdering a Washington, N.C., man in July 1988 are being held in the Beaufort County Jail without bond pending preliminary hearings.

Washington Police made the third arrest earlier this week when they picked up Gerald Neal Henderson, Beaufort County District Attorney Mitchell North said. Henderson is accused along with James Bartlett Upchurch III and Christopher Wayne Prichard — who were arrested last week — of murdering Leith Von Stein, 44, last year.

Von Stein, who was Prichard's stepfather, worked at National Spinning Co. He was found dead in his bed early on the morning of July 25, 1988. He had been stabbed and beaten. The attackers allegedly took $60 from the house, police reported.

His wife, Bonnie, was able to call police and tell them of the attack. She was found in the bedroom in a semi-conscious state suffering from stab wounds, police reported. She is Prichard's biological mother.

The fact that the arrests came nearly a year after the murder should not hurt the state's case, Norton said. The State Bureau of Investigation assisted local police in the effort.

"It just took that long to complete the investigation," he said.

Beaufort County does not conduct special arraignment days in its Superior Court, thus the defendants will remain in custody pending preliminary motions hearings, Norton said. No trial date has been set.

Each man has been indicted on charges of murder, burglary, and conspiracy to commit murder concerning Von Stein, and each has been indicted on a charge of assault with deadly weapon with intent to kill, inflicting serious injury concerning Mrs. Von Stein, Norton said.

State law permits a jury to consider stealing money from a murder victim as an aggravating factor in determining whether to hand down the death penalty or a life sentence.

Overweight Adults

By Robert Byrd
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — People in the Northeast and West are thinner than Midwesterners and Southerners. Just ask them.

The national Centers for Disease Control reported Thursday that 25.7 percent of the adults surveyed in Indiana and Wisconsin reported that they were overweight, the highest percentage out of 32 participating states and the District of Columbia.

On the other end of the scale was New Mexico, where only 15.2 percent reported being overweight.

Among the five heaviest states — Indiana, Wisconsin, West Virginia, Ohio and North Dakota — four are in the Midwest. Meanwhile, the slimmest five are in the West: New Mexico, Hawaii, Utah, Montana and Arizona.

"The prevalence of overweight in this report may be underestimated," because people may not always tell the truth about their weight, the CDC cautioned.

The CDC survey, conducted in 1987, asked 47,975 adults about their weight and height, and used the information to compile a "body mass index." Overweight was defined as a level equal to the fattest 15 percent of American adults in their 20s.

By region, the West had the lowest overweight percentage, at 17, followed by the Northeast, at 19.8 percent, the South, at 22 percent, and the Midwest, at 23.1 percent, the Atlanta-based CDC reported.

"State and regional variations ... may result from differences in eating habits and exercise practices," the agency said.

An estimated 34 million adult Americans are overweight, putting them at increased risk for diabetes, high blood pressure and some types of cancer, the CDC said.

The formula used to compute "body mass index" is this: weight in kilograms, divided by height in meters squared. A figure of 27.8 or higher for men or 27.3 or higher for women indicates overweight, the CDC said.

Get The Facts

Jones' Stance Correct For District

Congressman Walter Jones deserves a word of praise for his "get tough" stance on exploratory oil drilling off North Carolina's Outer Banks. His constituents in the 1st Congressional District shouldn't be shy about giving him that thanks.

Jones, who chairs the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, persuaded that group to demand a full environmental impact study before allowing Mobil Oil to drill into the ocean bottom 47 miles off North Carolina's Dare County coastline. The congressman attached an amendment requiring the study to a bill barring oil and gas drilling in a northern California marine sanctuary.

That may sound like so much twisting and turning to taxpayers, but it is a move that can prevent hasty, potentially damaging oil exploration until a current, careful examination of the environmental consequences is completed. For the residents of Jones' district, which includes both the Outer Banks and Pitt County, that scrutiny makes an important economic and aesthetic difference.

What Mobil wants to do is drill into the ocean bottom on a geologic formation known as the Norfolk arch. In that area, ocean currents are strong because of the Gulf Stream. The sea bottom is uneven. Wind is often fierce, waves are powerful and weather conditions unpredictable. It is a most fickle environment for a process where one mishap could produce inestimable ecologic damage — and accompanying economic damage.

Mobil admits this ambiguity. It plainly says it has never drilled in these conditions and admits its safety statements are guesses. But the company — and the U.S. Department of Interior — insists exploration should proceed without any kind of environmental impact study. Then, if oil is found, a study would be done to assess the danger of retrieving it. That's like saying to North Carolina, "we care about your coast, but only if there's petroleum there." That's just not the right approach, and Congressman Jones was smart enough to know it.

Dare County depends on its pristine coast for tourism and commercial fishing revenue. In 1987, that county netted $399 million in travel-related income. It claimed a large portion of the $65.7 million in fishing income the state reported that year.

Further from the coast, residents depend on beaches for recreation and relaxation. Counties like Pitt that have roads that feed these beaches, also share travel bounty. Tourists stop for gas and food and leave dollars behind.

There are far too many unknowns surrounding exploratory drilling, questions that should be thoroughly answered by an up-to-date environmental impact study. Jones was correctly defending the interests of his constituents when he authored the amendment demanding that study. His actions should receive the support of his district and state.

Together

Unified Effort Will Bring Progress

How can eastern North Carolina recapture its role as a leading area of the state?

The answer is deceptively simply — the region has to work together for jobs, roads, recreation and generally a better quality of life.

Area counties and cities must join in common efforts to improve their way of life and provide adequate incomes for citizens. All that means planning can't stop at municipal or county lines.

Mayors of half a dozen eastern cities took a step in that direction recently when they met in Kinston to form a new coalition. The consensus at the first meeting was that the East can obtain highways, attract industry and attack the major problem of illegal drug influx if the cities will but work together.

At this point no one is looking to create metropolises in the east. At the same time it must be recognized that eastern cities are the focal points for potential growth and they can do far more by working together.

The advantages of four-laned highways were recognized by the mayors. Certainly tackling the illegal drug problem — a major concern of Greenville's Mayor Ed Carter — is essential to improving the East. That will take the concerted efforts of all the municipalities and counties of the area.

Many concerns involve county governments and include shared recycling centers or waste disposal systems. There could be cost efficiency in such ventures.

The region won't know what can be accomplished until ideas are explored. That's what the mayor's coalition will be doing. It's a giant start on the road to cooperation throughout the east. While the ideas are still budding, the concept can blossom and improve life in the East in ways which cannot be imagined.

Propaganda, Not The Fax

BOSTON — Now from China comes the news that the police are guarding the fax machines. What comes next, house arrest for the telephone? Interrogation for the portable computer and its modem? Will we see a cellular phone in manacles?

There is something horribly appropriate about the attempt by this government to take back the fax. It is not just the student leaders who are being held responsible for protests this time. Nor is it just reporters who are being expelled for spreading the word. It is the demon of communication technology itself.

Here in America, where we are subject to junk fax, where the telephone interrupts as much as it connects, where the cellular phone pursues us on the highway and the computer overwhelms us with access to endless databases, it's easy to become jaded to hi-tech communications. We are used to conversations between continents, and television shows that uplink and downlink the hemispheres. We are saturated, often overwhelmed, with the information they deliver.

But in China, days of protest and repression have shown the relationship between information and freedom, technology and democracy. Between fax and facts.

What democracy meant to the "pro-democracy movement" was never entirely clear to outsiders. The students who rallied around their statue of liberty did not take to the streets in favor of pluralism or representative government or free elections. Rather, they hoped to reform communism. But they were committed to the passionate core of democracy, freedom of speech.

So in the early days, watching Tiananmen

Ellen Goodman

Square was like bracing for an accident at an intersection you always knew was dangerous. Coming from one direction were the people who wanted to say what they thought. Coming from the other was a state that wanted to control what was said.

The people were, as always, on foot or bicycles. The state, as always, in tanks. But I was not the only one lulled into hoping that new technology of information might provide some balance between the people and the tanks.

In part it was hope based on the extraordinary experience of seeing such an event as it was happening. In the global village, China was no farther away than the television camera and the telephone. Stories were bounced off satellites, editors in high-rises in New York and Atlanta talked through open phone lines to street reporters in China, news was sent by battery-operated laptop computers.

For once, the protesting students could fax their own news, from Beijing to Shanghai via Los Angeles or even London with no government involvement. Such hi-tech free speech seemed unstoppable. After all, this equipment was as swift and as personal as one voice in another's ear. As direct as a dial.

But that was before the crackdown. Since then, we've seen how the technology of information and freedom is also the technology of propaganda and repression.

In one instant a student's face can be beamed from Tiananmen Square to the American living room. In the next it can be beamed back again over Chinese television bearing the caption "Most Wanted." The Saturday night massacre of hundreds of unarmed Chinese youths is reported abroad. Then transformed back home into the murder of a soldier by thugs.

The government, unabashed, rounds up the leaders, the reporters, assigns police to the fax machines. Score one for the tanks.

But in the long run, a country can't have a modern economy or society without its megabytes and modems, its phones and fax machines. It cannot conduct research or business without the ability to communicate easily, directly, personally.

Much of the new technology allows people to exchange ideas as easily as they push the buttons on a keyboard or a phone. The most repressive regime can't control these exchanges and their information without banning the equipment and the progress.

So this is the conflict facing the frightened regime in Beijing. They have learned about the connection between a modern economy and modern communication. They have seen this technology act as the handmaiden of free speech. And the sorry news of the moment is that in China they would rather deal in propaganda than deal with the fax.

Leaden Opportunism, Ideological Gold

WASHINGTON — In the town where I grew up, a certain bake shop was doing poorly. That changed when Greta went to work there.

If you asked for six rolls, you got a dozen. If you asked for a dozen cookies, you got maybe 15.

When you asked for the bill, you got one for your original order and if you asked the customers what they thought of it all, they said what Greta was doing was no concern of theirs. The bakery ultimately went out of business.

Former Interior Secretary James G. Watt is a latter-day bake shop customer. For making as many as eight phone calls and for meeting with his one time Cabinet colleague, Housing and Urban Development Secretary Samuel Pierce, Mr. Watt earned around $400,000 from private developers. These were his cookies and in getting them he kept his mouth shut.

On other matters, such as big government, Mr. Watt could not be shut up. He spoke before college and other audiences and, always, his eyes twinkled with wacky zealotry.

He had gone to Washington on behalf of the people, battled the dragon of the bureaucracy, gone mano-a-mano with creeping socialism — and done it all for Ronald Reagan, Republicanism and the Union. Let us pray.

Mr. Watt, it seems, suffers from clinical hypocrisy — either that or an ethical sense so warped that he should donate his conscience to the Smithsonian Institution.

When it was revealed how he and some other former Reagan administration officials had cashed in on various HUD programs — all of it, you understand, perfectly legally — he said that this was precisely what he had been warning about all along.

Such HUD programs were a joke and his ability to make money off them was exactly what was wrong with Washington.

Well, the HUD programs were a joke. But did Mr. Watt let us in on the humor? No sirree. In a couple of hours at the word processor, he could have written an article about how consultants such as himself were making incredible sums for intervening with Mr. Pierce's office.

He could have mentioned the matter in his speeches. He could have called me (collect, if need be) and told me about the scam. Instead, Mr. Watt took the money and, uncharacteristically, kept his mouth shut. For $400,000, Mr. Watt learned the virtues of silence.

In his own way, Mr. Watt is like Marilyn Harrell, a HUD escrow agent who kept around $5.5 million in government funds and said she donated most of it to charity.

Dubbed "Robin HUD," she seems to think of the government as if it were a cocaine cartel — its gains ill-gotten and its purpose evil. She does not acknowledge that the money she was donating to charity was yours and mine. Can we now take a tax deduction based on her contributions?

It probably has not occurred to the recently knighted Sir Ronald Reagan that both Ms. Harrell and Mr. Watt, among too many others, are expressing nothing less than the former President's well-known loathing for government.

Eight years of subjecting the Civil Service to defamation by anecdote has done its damage.

Many people consider the government to be their enemy — distant, cold and an entity having nothing to do with them. On a Phil Donohue show, one person, outraged that taxpayers would have to pay for the savings-and-loan mess, demanded that the government bear the cost — where that government gets its money was never explained.

This us-against-them attitude has taken its toll. It was reflected in the angry public reaction to the congressional pay raise bill — an anti-Congress animus directed not at particular members (constituents consider their own congressman to be an exception to the rule), but to the institution in general.

Why the public thinks a college president, a county executive, or a police chief deserves to make more money than a congressman can only be explained by general loathing of all things Washington, the cherry blossoms excepted.

Thus, it was possible for Mr. Watt to sanctimoniously characterize his undertaking in behalf of housing developers as "moral, ethical and effective" or for Ms. Harrell to say, in effect, she was only taking from the government.

Mr. Watt above all knew something was terribly wrong at HUD — or else why would anyone ask someone with zero experience in the field to intervene? Only now do we learn that housing programs designed for low or moderate-income people were, in fact enriching people who were anything but.

Mr. Watt's sanctimony is as big as the great outdoors — at least that part of it he wanted to give away. Unlike those customers who took what Greta offered and rationalized their complicity by shrugging their indifference, Watt attempts alchemy: turning leaden opportunism into ideological gold.

Like Jimmy Swaggart, his knowledge of sin is now more than theoretical. The government is as bad as he said it is — and for the right sum, he will help it stay that way.

Taxes, Highways, Education ... And The Pitch Of Roofs

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — While some legislative committees were debating state tax policy and others the future of education, the Senate Education Committee spent most of its meeting last week arguing over the pitch of school roofs.

In the firm belief that the legislature is the font of all wisdom, Rep. Ed Bowen, D-Sampson, has sponsored a bill that would require that all schools built in North Carolina have roofs of at least a two-inch per foot pitch. He argues that flat roofs, though less expensive to construct, cost more to repair over the years.

As senators who confessed to knowing nothing about proper roofing techniques listened, advocates of flat roofs argued with advocates of pitched roofs. Finally, the testimony of Gene Causby, director of the N.C.

School Boards Association, prevailed. Causby said that flat roofs are more likely to leak, but that it would be unwise to put a particular pitch requirement into state law.

Sensing that more urgent matters awaited, Sen. Richard Conder, D-Richmond, chairman, sent the bill to a subcommittee whence it may never return.

"There is justice in this world, sometimes you just have to look under the dust to find it."

When the General Assembly convenes, streetside parking all around the legislative Building is reserved for legislators and their staff. With the Raleigh parking crunch, almost everyone else who uses the building must park at least three blocks away.

But those parking in front of the building this year, on Lane Street, have had a nuisance with which to deal. Dump trucks are hauling away hundreds of loads of red Raleigh clay from the Museum of History construction site across the street.

And by the end of a typical dry, hot day, all of the Cadillacs, Mercedes and BMWs parked on Lane Street are just covered with a thick coat of red dust.

"From the 'Stand Up and Be Counted' Department."

The Senate Finance Committee was debating a bill that would tax illegal drugs, thus empowering the state to seize the assets of drug dealers who had not paid the tax.

Sen. Bill Barker, D-Pamlico, a lawyer, expressed concern that the bill might allow the state to seize the retainer that a drug dealer defendant had paid to his lawyer. Barker reminded the committee that he earned his living by practicing law.

Sen. R.C. Soles, D-Columbus, had also expressed concerns about the bill, so he moved that action on the bill be delayed until the committee chairman, Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, chose to bring it up again. Soles said he needed time to discuss his concerns with the bill's sponsors.

When the vote came, Sen. Tom Taft, D-Pitt, also a lawyer, sat in the back of the room, barely raising his hand high enough to be seen. It was unclear if he was voting for Soles' motion, which did pass, or just resting his elbow. Shortly afterwards, Taft walked by the desk at which the press sits and a reporter asked Taft how he'd voted.

"That vote will be up next time," he replied.

Asked again how he voted, Taft said, "I'm in favor of the bill." Asked yet again how he'd voted on the motion, he said, "I don't remember," and he walked away.

A few minutes later, Taft returned and came clean. "I voted with R.C. to put the bill off but with the understanding that it will be back up next week."

But Rauch, who was given complete control over the bill's fate by passage of the motion, said he didn't have any such understanding with Taft.

Analysis

Right Idea, Wrong World

Dale Russakoff

WASHINGTON — It has become conventional wisdom in Washington that the savings and loan disaster is so enormous that there is no honest way to deal with it under the federal budget. The White House has resorted to fiscal chicanery to disguise the problem; so has Congress.

Rep. John LaFalce, D-N.Y., last week offered what normally would seem a compelling alternative: to confront it honestly. The House respectfully declined.

"Sadly, we do not live in a normal world," Rep. Thomas J. Downey, D-N.Y., shrugged.

The admission came during debate over President Bush's proposed $157 billion bailout of bankrupt savings and loans. The administration's position is that the full cost of the bailout would send the budget deficit far beyond legal limits. Discipline requires that those limits be inviolate, it says.

So, in the name of discipline, Bush has proposed a sleight of hand to hide $50 billion of the cost in a specially chartered entity that wouldn't show up in the budget — or in the deficit.

This fiscal deceit enraged House Democrats. Here was the administration, Democrats and some Republicans complained, facing an S&L disaster born largely of Washington's refusal to deal honestly with a huge problem, and proposing to solve it by dancing around yet another disaster, the groaning budget deficit.

Honesty and straight-shooting demanding something more, the House said. Its solution was to put the full bailout in the budget so taxpayers would know the extent of their government's obligations. (Significantly, this approach also would save $4.5 billion in interest over the next 30 years.)

Of course, this would cause the deficit to skyrocket beyond allowable limits. But, not to worry, the House would simply waive those limits.

At this point, LaFalce, who says he worries that the deficit will place huge burdens on his 8-year-old son as he grows up, made his suggestion: Why not put the $50 billion in the budget — and pay for it? Why not, he asked, impose an emergency tax, finance the bailout in three years, save the government billions of dollars in interest on the debt and strike a blow for tackling problems directly?

"I just wanted to see how many individuals found this so intellectually and morally compelling that they'd vote for it," LaFalce said. "And I found out."

LaFalce's amendment lost by a vote of 256 to 171. But what was most striking was the floor debate, in which leading opponents of LaFalce's amendment called it the only honest and straight-shooting thing to do, but added that it unfortunately couldn't be done.

"Many members who feel overpowered by urges to be wholly honest and to make good on their pledges of truth in advertising may want to support (LaFalce) for that reason," said Rep. Bill Frenzel, R-Minn.

"I agree with the gentleman (LaFalce)," said Downey. "In the world that you should live in, the LaFalce amendment would make perfect sense."

"I have a tremendous amount of respect for the motives and the goals of the gentleman from New York," said Budget Committee Chairman Leon Panetta, D-Calif. "But... it is always pleasant to talk about these issues but very difficult to do anything about them."

Frenzel, Downey and Panetta all voted against the amendment.

"If everyone who thought I was right had voted for the amendment, it would have passed unanimously," LaFalce said.

That so many people voted against an amendment that appeared to make so much sense provides a case study in Washington logic. Defeat was so inevitable, by this logic, that some have accused LaFalce of grandstanding.

It is a truism that the Republican White House and the Democratic Congress both have refused to take the first step toward a tax increase. And neither is willing to make the giant-sized budget cuts needed to tame the deficit. That is why this year's budget relies on questionable assumptions and fiscal shenanigans to understate the deficit rather than tackling it directly.

As such, LaFalce's proposal to put the full bailout in the budget without waiving legal limits on the deficit would have triggered a wave of automatic cuts built into the budget-balancing law — cuts in everything from defense to AIDS research. Neither side was willing to do that, either.

"I consider the budget process in catastrophic failure here in Congress," said Rep. Nancy L. Johnson, R-Conn. "The S&L solution is just the most recent example of a willingness to substitute theater for reality."

"Is it any wonder," Rep. Lynn Martin, R-Ill., asked as the LaFalce amendment was going down to defeat, "that people have lost faith in us if we do not face this honestly?"

Russakoff is on The Washington Post's national staff.

Time For National Health Care

Richard Gilluly

The U.S. system of paying medical bills probably is the civilized world's most absurdly and cruelly convoluted one, a crazy quilt that sometimes seems designed to find ways to exclude people from coverage — often on the flimsiest of grounds and in the most destructive of ways — instead of helping them get the medical care they need.

For instance: A year ago, I changed jobs. At the age of 56, I not unexpectedly had one or two medical problems that needed continuing treatment.

But since more and more employers, faced with the rising costs of health insurance, must purchase policies that cover less and less, my employer's group plan excluded coverage of pre-existing conditions for a certain period, 10 months in this case.

If I had had a really serious problem — say a continuing need for expensive treatment of a kidney condition, as was the case with a co-worker — I would have had

When I asked a National Capital Area Blues official the reason for the exclusion, she said, in the most reasonable of tones, "Well, without it, a lot of people would save up things like tonsillectomies for their kids and then get them done when they got a job that had health coverage."

"Do you imagine," I asked in reply, "that people would get tonsillectomies for their kids if they didn't think their kids needed tonsillectomies?" She had no answer.

A few years ago, my then college-age daughter had a series of operations on her knee to repair damage from a basketball injury. Her mother and I both had health coverage for her through our jobs.

That was not as great a boon as we had imagined it would be, for the two companies ended up disputing for two years over which was responsible for my daughter's bills. Naturally, neither paid a penny during this period, because to do so would have been to admit liability. Doctors and hospitals sued my penniless daughter in an effort to collect their bills. Finally, one company acknowledged liability and paid up. My daughter would have been much better off if her mother and I had had only one policy between us — as pungent a commentary as I can imagine on the absurdity of the U.S. health care system.

Recently, my daughter's knee problem worsened due to a bone infection. My coverage for her had expired when she reached 21, but her mother's coverage continued as long as she was in college. But as the infection worsened, she needed inpatient treatment. That made it necessary for her to withdraw temporarily from college. The insurance company then canceled her coverage because she no longer was a college student. She is now suing the company on the grounds it placed her in an impossible Catch 22, but the suit may take years to settle. In the meantime, pressure from doctor and hospital creditors is so great she probably will have to take bankruptcy.

Such disruptions of people's lives through the health insurance system sometimes seem the rule rather than the exception in the U.S. One of the most egregious examples is the practice by many health insurers of charging employers higher premiums for older people, an obvious inducement to not hiring those workers. The law should require that premium costs be distributed equally among all workers so as to eliminate this clear incentive to discrimination.

Many Canadians, hearing of atrocities of the kind I have described here, are appalled. That's because Canada has comprehensive health insurance for everyone at reasonable cost under a national health insurance plan. Most Western European countries and Japan have similar plans.

Not only does U.S. health insurance often fail to cover those it purportedly covers, it leaves 37 million people — most of them working poor who don't qualify for Medicaid and whose employers furnish no health insurance — without any coverage at all. Not only would national health insurance extend coverage to these people; it would offer another important advantage: It would provide a handle for controlling the skyrocketing medical and hospital costs that so plague our present system.

Maybe even more important, however, it would eliminate the monstrous bureaucracy that now exists solely to exclude people from care. That surely would save billions — not to mention untold agony, tragedy and financial ruin.

Richard H. Gilluly is a free-lance writer living in Washington.

LA Times-Washington Post News Service

'Not only does U.S. health insurance often fail to cover those it purportedly covers, it leaves 37 million people — most of them working poor who don't qualify for Medicaid and whose employers furnish no health insurance — without any coverage at all.'

four choices: pay for treatment out of my own pocket, impossible for many people; simply do without treatment for the 10-month exclusion period, an option which would have killed my co-worker; avoid changing jobs in the first place or find a new employer with a plan that didn't exclude pre-existing conditions.

Joining a health maintenance organization — an option offered by my employer — would have saved me some of my problems when I changed jobs. But because my family lived in Baltimore, which was not served by the Washington, D.C. health maintenance organization available through my employer, this option was not open to me.

Finally, I was able to negotiate an arrangement with my employer's other insurer, Blue Cross and Blue Shield of the National Capital Area, to cover my pre-existing conditions. This was because my previous insurer (through a Baltimore employer) had been Maryland Blue Cross-Blue Shield, and the National Capital Area Blues finally agreed to concede, upon my insistent urging, that this meant I had had "continuous coverage" while changing jobs.

The idea of "continuous coverage" under these circumstances was my invention. The first reaction from the National Capital Area Blues when I called to complain was to stonewall and tell me I had no recourse. I assume many people simply accept the claims of insurers that they don't have the coverage they thought they had. After long experience, my reflex is to raise hell. I raised hell in this case, and it paid off.

AIDS Discrimination Protection Bill Advances

By F. Alan Boyce
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — By a slim 4-3 margin, a bill to limit discrimination against carriers of the AIDS virus emerged from a House subcommittee over objections that it might be going too far.

"Who is protecting the people out there in society who don't have AIDS?" asked Rep. Theresa Esposito, R-Forsyth, after three committee votes went along party lines to strengthen the bill.

Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, chairman of the Judiciary Subcommittee on Civil and Criminal Justice, broke 3-3 ties on each occasion. Democratic Reps. Harry Payne, Sharon Thompson and Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe, joined Hackney in removing a provision to let the bill expire after two years. The panel also adopted amendments to make it clear hospitals can't avoid treating patients just because they have AIDS and to ensure an AIDS carrier would not be fired for that reason alone.

The bill now goes to the full Judiciary Committee.

Rep. Skip Stam, R-Wake, objected to removing a two-year expiration date on the bill, although its removal had been endorsed by the medical community, state officials and the sponsor, Sen. Helen Marvin, D-Gaston. Stam said AIDS discrimination was different from racial discrimination.

"We had that (racial discrimination) for several centuries," he said. "We knew what it was about and we knew how to deal with it."

Ms. Thompson, D-Durham, offered the second amendment to prevent "patient dumping" for victims of acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

"We're going to overload the few facilities that specialize in them (AIDS victims)," she said.

Stam countered that the amendment would remove a medical care provider's ability to protect himself. And Rep. Coy Privette, R-Cabarrus, agreed, saying a hospital not equipped to handle AIDS patients might end up facing a malpractice suit for trying.

Ms. Thompson said hospitals still could refer patients to other facilities for valid reasons.

"If you have AIDS and a broken arm, they darn well better take care of the broken arm," added Payne, D-New Hanover.

Stam also objected to an amendment that reworded a section governing an employer's ability to fire an AIDS victim. He wanted to make sure an employee could be fired for reasons other than an AIDS infection, but other committee members said such language was unnecessary and would dilute the intention to keep someone from being dismissed for AIDS alone.

In other legislative action:

Leaking Tanks

The House voted 104-0 to tentatively approve a bill that would establish funds and methods for cleaning up leaking underground petroleum storage tanks.

"We have many underground storage tanks in this state that are awaiting disaster," said Rep. Dennis Wicker, D-Lee.

His bill would set up commercial and noncommercial funds for cleaning up leaks. The funds would be created through increased registration fees on commercial tanks. Fees for tanks of 3,500 gallons or less would increase from $30 to $45 and fees for tanks in excess of 3,500 gallons would increase from $60 to $75.

That would generate about $4 million a year. Another $8 million left over from tank inspection fees collected by the Department of Agriculture would be split evenly between the two funds.

The bill was scheduled for final House consideration today. The Senate is considering a similar bill that calls for registration fees of $65 for smaller tanks and $100 for larger tanks.

Motorcycle Safety

A House subcommittee put the brakes on a bill to establish motorcycle safety courses in community colleges after learning it could affect the $8.6 billion highway construction package still pending in the Legislature.

Rep. Bob Hunter, D-McDowell, who crafted the highway package, said a proposed $3 increase in motorcycle registration fees would interfere with a 10 percent increase in all motor vehicle registrations called for in his bill.

Hunter worried that earmarking the motorcycle registration increase for safety instruction could reduce the amount of money raised for highway building and asked that the safety bill be held until the fate of the larger package is known.

Hugh Stevens, representing the Motorcycle Industry Council, agreed to the delay, although he said after the meeting that the bill might not be passed until the short session next year.

While Hunter suggested there was no need for a statewide program costing $200,000 a year, Stevens disagreed, saying North Carolina has few motorcycle training courses available.

"We unfortunately have a pretty bad track record in terms of motorcycle fatalities and injuries in North Carolina," he said.

A bill to allow the Council of State to authorize the sale or lease of North Carolina's ports and port railroads was put on hold despite the sponsor's claims that it could make the ports more profitable and competitive.

Rep. Art Pope, R-Wake, said the state is "handicapping our ports by operating them as a government agency, a government authority, rather than as a business."

Pope told the House Infrastructure Subcommittee on Railroads, Airports and Waterways that the state's two ports now must compete in the General Assembly for money. If sold, the money could be used for other needs such as completing highways around the ports and the sales or leases could be made conditional on certain performance standards, he said.

Privatization of ports has been successful in Great Britain and in New York, where a river port is outperforming other state-run facilities, Pope said.

But Rep. Larry Diggs, R-Mecklenburg, said a state-run port might be preferable as North Carolina tries to unify all of its transportation.

"It would be much harder to work towards that central goal 20 years or 10 years from now if the ports are able to be commercialized," he said.

Rep. Leo Mercer, D-Columbus, asked that no action be taken until he could find out whether coastal legislators approved.

Inventions

A bill to put tighter reins on companies that promote the ideas of inventors was approved by a House subcommittee after supporters said consumers were being bilked.

A representative of Burlington Industries told the Judiciary Subcommittee on Civil and Criminal Justice his company is besieged by suggestions for identical inventions from different clients. Although the proposals would never be purchased by a company, inventors pay $4,000 to $20,000 to have them submitted, officials said. Randy Miller of the attorney general's office said the bill would require disclosure statements of promoters and ensure the companies have sufficient funds to reimburse disgruntled clients if they win a judgment against them.

Flag
The U.S. Supreme Court's ruling that desecrating the United States flag cannot be outlawed drew criticism on both sides of the Legislative Building.

The House suspended its rules to let Rep. Bob Brawley, R-Iredell, introduce a resolution "lamenting" the decision. Brawley at first pushed for an immediate vote, but backed off at the urging of Reps. George Miller, D-Durham, and Paul Stam, R-Wake, who said they wanted time to read the court's ruling.

Meanwhile, Sens. Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland, and Richard Conder, D-Rockingham, took to the Senate floor to denounce the decision handed down Wednesday. It struck down laws in 48 states — including North Carolina — against desecrating the U.S. flag.

Conder said the Legislature should adopt a resolution calling on Congress to adopt a Constitutional amendment that would overrule the Supreme Court.

"This is something we don't have to sit back and take lightly," he said.

Beer Tax

The House Human Resources Committee failed to take action on a bill that would boost the tax on beer by 5 cents a can and use some of the revenue to fund alcoholism treatment and prevention programs.

Rep. Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe, proposed dividing the bill, sending the tax portion to the Finance Committee and the spending provisions to the Appropriations Committee.

The Human Resources Committee argued about the move until shortly before its meeting time ran out, then adjourned.

Pensions

The Senate Finance Committee has approved a bill under which all retirees, including those with non-governmental pensions, would be treated equally and many would get a tax break.

The measure, approved Wednesday, is designed to respond to a U.S. Supreme Court ruling that places the state's current system of taxing pensions in jeopardy. It would give a tax credit of up to $200 not only to state, local and federal retirees but also to people drawing pensions from private businesses.

The tax credit would replace the state's total income-tax exemption for state and local government pensions and its $4,000 exemption for federal pensions.

House Panel Backs Veto Plan

By John Flesher
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A package of proposed constitutional amendments including veto power for the governor has gained a House subcommittee's approval and if enacted will be submitted to a statewide referendum this November.

Although North Carolinians would decide the fate of all four suggested amendments separately, the House Judiciary Subcommittee on Election Laws and the Constitution grouped them into one bill. That way, the House will have to accept all or none unless the package is amended.

"I think this is the best way to get the 72 votes we need to get the veto through," said Rep. John Kerr, D-Wayne. Constitutional amendments must be approved by three-fifths of both chambers.

Under the bill, the governor could veto bills passed by the Legislature, which could override a veto by three-fifths votes.

Other provisions in the bill would:

- Lengthen legislators' terms from two to four years.
- Prohibit any House member from serving more than two consecutive terms as speaker.
- Move statewide elections to even-numbered years between presidential elections.

The bill now goes to the full Judiciary Committee. Rep. Walter Jones Jr., D-Pitt, the subcommittee chairman, was noncommittal about its prospects. "It's hard to read the feeling at this point," he said.

The subcommittee made two major changes in the bill before approving it.

The first was to schedule a statewide referendum on the proposed constitutional amendments for this November instead of next year as originally proposed.

"I'd think people would be happy with this," said Rep. John Kerr, D-Wayne. "It will give us a chance to have a meaningful, in-depth discussion and debate of these matters without being distracted by elections for Congress or the Legislature or other major offices."

Rep. Art Pope, R-Wake, fought the amendment, saying turnout for a referendum this fall would be low because the only elections will be for municipal offices such as mayor and town council.

"For municipal elections, it (turnout) is pitiful," said Rep. Larry Justus, R-Henderson.

But Jones said with no major elections to compete for attention, the news media probably would give thorough coverage to the constitutional issues that would enhance voter interest.

The second major change involved the mechanics of implementing the switch to elections in non-presidential years.

Currently, North Carolinians elect their governor, lieutenant governor and Council of State officers every four years along with the presidential election. Most states have state elections in even-numbered years between presidential elections.

Taggart Jury Is Selected

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — With many being asked if they regularly contributed to a church or religious organization, it took only about seven hours to pick a jury that will decide if two of Jim Bakker's former PTL aides are guilty of tax evasion.

Twelve jurors and four alternates were selected from 48 Thursday to hear the trial of David Taggart, 32, and his older brother and housemate, James, 35. Both are accused of not paying about $494,000 in income taxes from 1983 to 1987. They also are charged with using more than $1.1 million of PTL money to pay personal bills, including $55,000 in purchases from the Cartier jewelry store in New York.

U.S. District Judge Robert Potter also asked if jurors were familiar with brand names such as Gucci, Jaguar, Cartier and Mercedes-Benz and if they shop in discount stores or expensive stores.

The Taggarts were known for their expensive clothes, jewelry and cars.

The trial, scheduled to begin July 5, will be a prelude to the August trial of Bakker and Richard Dorich. The two former PTL leaders are accused of diverting more than $4 million in PTL money for their own benefit.

After the jury selection, the Taggart brothers both declined comment. Defense Attorney Ben Cotten said he had expected the process to last more than one day.

"It's surprising because of the fact that the issues in this case are as such that we thought it would have taken a longer time," he said.

IN THE STATE

Guilty Pleas

SALISBURY (AP) — Two Rowan County men arrested earlier this year for looting Indian graves pleaded guilty to charges that they had sold or tried to exhibit human remains.

In a plea arrangement Thursday, Hoke Wayne Honbarger, 46, of Salisbury pleaded guilty to one felony count of selling human remains. Wayne Rainey, 48, also of Salisbury, pleaded guilty to five counts of attempting to exhibit human remains, a misdemeanor.

A 1981 state law was set up to prevent Indian grave sites from being disturbed. The charges are believed to be the first to be brought under the law, though state archaeologists say such activity is widespread.

A bill was introduced in the state House but has not been enacted in the current legislative session that would toughen state laws dealing with the desecration of Indian burial grounds.

Under the agreement, Superior Court Judge W. Douglas Albright was expected to give both men suspended sentences on the condition that they forfeit their collections of Indian relics obtained from gravesites; that they pay $2,000 each in restitution to the state for the cost of analyzing and reburial of the remains; and that they not explore or dig at any known or suspected archaeological site for five years, among other things.

Hair Loss Suit

GREENSBORO (AP) — A Greensboro woman is suing the makers of Southern Curl, a chemical solution used by hair stylists, claiming the product caused most of her hair to fall out.

Joan Vilnor is asking for $10,000 in damages from Pride and Power of Houston, Texas, in a lawsuit filed in Guilford County District Court. Also named as defendants in the suit are Pearl's Beauty Salon and Boutique of Greensboro, owner Pearl Jeffries and employee Deborah Gant.

Ms. Vilnor's hair fell out Feb. 25 while having her hair permed at Pearl's, the suit says. The problems began when Ms. Gant, a hair stylist, applied Southern Curl to Ms. Vilnor's hair.

Ms. Vilnor reported her scalp was burning and itching. The stylist said Ms. Vilnor's hair needed further treatment with the chemical and that the burning probably would stop soon, the suit alleges.

But the burning didn't stop. And when Ms. Gant removed Ms. Vilnor from the hair dryer, Ms. Vilnor's scalp was "severely and seriously burned, and most of the plaintiff's hair had fallen out," the suit said.

Duck Hunter Fined

RALEIGH (AP) — A federal magistrate Thursday fined a New Bern neurologist $1,000 and ordered him not to hunt anywhere in the country for a year after he pleaded guilty to baiting ducks and killing more than his legal share.

Dr. Clarence Ballenger III, 40, also was ordered to keep others from hunting on his property for a year as part of a plea bargain. In exchange for the pleas, the U.S. attorney's office agreed not to prosecute the doctor on felony charges stemming from his confrontation with a wildlife officer.

"I pushed the game warden, and that is why they're (being tough on) me," Ballenger said after leaving the courtroom. He could have been fined $5,000 and jailed for up to six months on each of the two misdemeanor charges.

The penalties imposed by U.S. Magistrate Alexander B. Denson should make hunters think twice about violating game laws in Eastern North Carolina, state and federal wildlife officers said.

Accept No Substitutes

Every man needs a god. Every man has a god. Every man's god is not God. But every man's god is the choice of his own heart. The very personal subject of where you stand with your god, and with God is an important issue—more important than this life, because it concerns death. And if you trade God for a god, you've traded eternal life for death—which is a poor substitute.

Bush Expresses His Distaste For Court's Ruling On Flags

By Christopher Connell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush says he'll enforce the Supreme Court's ban on flag desecration laws, but he doesn't like it one bit.

Bush returned to the White House late Thursday after a day trip to New York where he mixed politics with a patriotic call to all Americans to join his crusade for volunteerism.

He made clear his distaste for the Supreme Court's 5-4 ruling striking down the 48 state laws against flag burning and other desecration.

The president told 1,000 business leaders he understands the legal basis for the ruling, and "will see that the law of the land is fully supported, but I have to give you my personal, emotional response: flag burning is wrong, dead wrong."

Bush's distaste for the ruling was matched in Congress as a bipartisan Senate passed a resolution condemning the Supreme Court decision.

"Congress has believed that the act of desecrating the flag is clearly not 'speech' as protected by the First Amendment," said the resolution, which passed 97-3.

Sens. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts and Howard Metzenbaum of Ohio, both Democrats, and Gordon Humphrey of New Hampshire, a Republican, were the only dissenters.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., summed up the majority mood: "We must stand for America. The flag, the flag, America, America. For us!"

At a New York Republican fundraising dinner later Thursday, Bush urged the GOP to press for "big legislative gains in Albany" and other capitals to keep the Democrats from rigging congressional district lines after the 1990 Census.

"It is absolutely essential that we block the gerrymandering ways of the Democratic party in all 50 states," he said. "They've done it to us in the past, and we can't let them do it to us again."

Bush also exhorted the faithful to wrest control of "the most powerful local office in America" from incumbent New York Mayor Ed Koch. He tried to play no favorites in the three-man Republican field in September's primary, but stumbled and mispronounced the name of front-runner Rudolph Giuliani, the former top U.S. attorney in Gotham.

"Sorry, Rudy," he apologized.

The ex-prosecutor, vying against Ron Lauder and Herbert London, laughed it off, saying, "If you haven't taken Latin, sometimes the name Giuliani can be a little difficult."

Bush capped his New York visit with a stop at a black-tie banquet marking the 100th anniversary of The Wall Street Journal. He hailed the business newspaper as "one of America's most trusted publications," but quipped that the thing he really liked about it is "you don't carry Doonesbury." That comic strip has taken frequent shots at Bush over the years.

Bush also seized the occasion to repeat his pitch to corporate America "to enlist in a new crusade to bring national service into every corner of America."

Bush's return from New York was delayed a half hour by an accident involving containers of dangerous chemicals near Newark International Airport that led him to detour in the fog to New York's Kennedy Airport. Containers of two toxic and potentially explosive chemicals overturned while being loaded on trucks next to the Newark airport, but never spilled, officials said.

Air Force One was flown to the other airport and Bush's motorcade was held up at the banquet as the Secret Service plotted a new path out of New York.

Earlier, Bush elaborated on plans for a public-private foundation called the Points of Light Initiative to spearhead the push for volunteerism, and he chatted with youths who have spent years living on the streets and now have found shelter at Father Bruce Ritter's Covenant House.

Barbara Bush joined him at the shelter, cradling one young woman's three-week-old baby.

At one point in the unusual rap session, when a boy told the president he could make "a $100 in 15 minutes" peddling drugs, Mrs. Bush remarked that the same boy had said earlier that selling drugs led to jail, death "and whatever the third (choice) was."

"Doesn't always happen, though," the boy replied.

"Mrs. Bush," said the priest, "the kids are bullet-proof."

"Oh, I forgot that," said the first lady.

Confessed Murderer Put To Death In Nev. Prison

By Brendan Riley
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CARSON CITY, Nev. — A confessed murderer was put to death today by lethal injection for the slayings of two men he thought were homosexuals.

Sean Patrick Flanagan, 28, had refused to seek appeals of his death penalty for the 1987 killings in Las Vegas. One of his victims was dismembered.

After he was strapped to a gurney at the Nevada State Prison, Flanagan lifted his head and told the man who prosecuted him, "I love you." He was declared dead at 2:09 a.m.

Flanagan was the fourth person put to death in Nevada and the 114th nationally since the 1976 U.S. Supreme Court ruling allowing states to resume use of the death penalty. He was the second person executed this week in Nevada.

Before he died, Flanagan also told Deputy Clark County District Attorney Dan Seaton, "You are a just man."

"He has said it before," said Seaton, who witnessed the execution. "He means it in terms of Christian love and forgiveness."

A last-minute bid by the American Civil Liberties Union of Nevada to intervene in his behalf was rejected late Thursday by Gov. Robert Miller.

"I'm paying my debt to society," Flanagan said in an interview Wednesday. "If I had to live, I'd live. I do not have that choice."

"Every man who has committed a crime of murder knows deep down inside he should die for taking another man's life," he said. "These men have no right to life."

Flanagan apologized to the families of his victims for "the horrible burdens I've put in their lives. I hope they'll understand my execution is proper and just."

Flanagan said he became involved in homosexual activity while in the Marines.

"I'm just as wicked and nasty as Ted Bundy. I believe if I had not been arrested, I would have ended up being another Ted Bundy against homosexuals," said Flanagan.

Bundy was executed earlier this year in Florida after admitting to the serial killings of women throughout the country.

But Flanagan said he is no longer violence-prone. "After giving my life to Jesus, I couldn't hurt anybody again," he said.

Flanagan provided a rambling seven-page statement in which he said he hated his homosexuality. He said it was difficult for him to determine what made him kill homosexual men, but "the thought that I would be doing some good for our society crossed my mind."

Flanagan spent Thursday with family members and a minister, said Warden Pete Demosthenes.

The first of his victims befriended him, bought him some clothes and got him a room, Flanagan said. James Lewandowski, a 45-year-old chef, was strangled and dismembered. The body parts were put in plastic bags and tossed into a trash bin near the motel. The remains were never recovered.

Four days later, he said he strangled pianist Albert Duggins, 59, after Duggins offered him a ride and Flanagan concluded the man was homosexual.

Flanagan was arrested in Orange, Calif., for jaywalking shortly after Duggins' death and voluntarily returned to Las Vegas where he led detectives to the man's body in a vacant lot.

FAA Order Calls For Intense Electronic Device Screening

By David Briscoe
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Airline passengers can still carry laptop computers or radio cassette players, but the devices are to be closely inspected for plastic explosives on U.S. flights originating in the Middle East and Europe.

The Federal Aviation Administration, in announcing a new inspection order to all airlines Thursday, said passengers who don't need electronic devices on a trip "should consider leaving them behind."

But the American and Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner rejected proposals to ban the devices on all U.S. flights.

Noting the inconvenience a ban of electronic devices might cause businessmen and others who use laptop computers or electronic equipment, Skinner announced the new measures in a speech to an air freight group.

His office had billed the announcement as a major step in efforts to ensure aviation security.

But the action by the FAA fell short of calls for at least a temporary ban made by relatives of some of the 270 people killed in the radio cassette bombing of Pan Am Flight 103 over Scotland last December.

The new screening order is limited to U.S. flights originating in Europe and the Middle East. It will not affect foreign airlines, U.S. domestic flights, flights from the United States to Europe or the Middle East, or U.S. flights to and from other countries.

The flight 103 victims' relatives had called for the government to require all airlines to refuse to carry any device that might easily conceal plastic explosives, pending installation of sophisticated detection equipment in airports used by U.S. carriers in the United States and abroad.

Skinner in April ordered airlines to install equipment that can detect plastic explosives, with six units scheduled for installation before the end of the year.

Congress is considering legislation that would have the government pay for the explosive screening equipment, at about $1 million per unit, out of a $6 billion aviation trust fund. The administration wants the airlines to pay for more than 100 units it wants installed over the next few years.

Skinner said the new screening measures take effect immediately and will include "more than just turning on and off" the equipment as passengers board a plane. He said inspectors will go through a series of checks, including possibly opening up the devices.

The screening is not likely to put U.S. carriers at a competitive disadvantage with foreign airlines, he said.

Skinner said he expects several other countries to announce similar increased screening, as the latest reaction to the Pan Am bombing. British authorities are continuing their investigation into who planted the bomb.

Skinner said he consulted with top transportation officials of other countries, and the officials agree that increased screening is the most "acceptable and effective" method of dealing with the danger.

Female Vets Unhappy

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Many female veterans of the Vietnam War aren't collecting their benefits even though they show the same war-related disorders as male veterans, witnesses told a congressional panel.

Retired Rear Adm. Frances Shea-Buckley, chairwoman of the Department of Veterans Affairs advisory committee on women veterans, said a survey found women were routinely excluded from government studies of such veterans' problems as Agent Orange contamination and post-traumatic stress syndrome.

"We also found a general lack of awareness or concern about the effects on women of their experiences in the combat theater," she told a House subcommittee Thursday.

"We believe the VA should address the war experience of women who served in Vietnam, specifically the physical, reproductive and psychological effects," she said.

She said one of the biggest problems in extending benefits to female veterans is getting women to admit they served in the armed forces.

"They don't see themselves as veterans," said Shea-Buckley.

She said veterans hospitals are not setting up proper mental health programs for women because few women come forward for help.

"It is difficult to provide a true therapeutic community for a minority of one or two women," she said.

Susan Mather, chief of women veterans programs for the Department of Veterans Affairs, said several studies have been done on the health effects of Vietnam service.

"Results indicate significant differences between women who served in Vietnam and those who did not," she said. "Nearly 27 percent have had PTSD (post-traumatic stress syndrome) at some point in their lives and an additional 21 percent have some symptoms of PTSD."

Panel Members Put Vacation Before S&L Bailout

By Dave Skidmore
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Members of a House-Senate savings and loan panel are calling for speedy enactment of President Bush's proposed bailout — but they're putting off work on it until they get back from vacation.

A conference committee appointed to reconcile S&L bills, passed by the Senate on April 19 and the House on June 15, held a brief organizational meeting Thursday but did not tackle any of the issues dividing the two chambers.

Senate Banking Committee Chairman Donald W. Riegle Jr., D-Mich., who was named chairman of the conference panel, scheduled the next session for July 11. The Bush administration, noting that the industry is hemorrhaging at a rate of $10 million to $12 million a day, has been pressing Congress to move quickly ever since the president proposed his bailout plan on Feb. 6.

However, the Senate is taking off the last week in June and the first in July. The House is due to be out of session only during the July 4 week.

Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas, who is heading the House delegation, said he was willing to work through the recess.

"The sense of urgency must be sustained," Gonzalez told reporters after the meeting, adding that pressure from industry lobbyists to weaken the bill "never ceases." "I think it's important that we do it as soon as possible," Riegle agreed, but said it will take aides time to prepare an analysis of the lengthy and complex bills — 602 pages in the Senate version and 770 pages in the House.

Also, two of the five members representing the Senate on most conference issues — Sens. Jake Garn, R-Utah, and Paul Sarbanes, D-Md. — will be in Switzerland next week as part of a Senate team monitoring U.S.-Soviet arms talks.

In a related development, federal regulators took control of three savings and loans in Georgia on Thursday, bringing the total under government management to 226 in 32 states.

The three are: First Federal Savings and Loan Association, Americus; Habersham Federal Savings Bank, Atlanta, and Great Southern Federal Savings Bank in Savannah. They have combined assets of about $1.03 billion.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. has been taking over the most deeply insolvent S&Ls in preparation for congressional passage of the S&L bailout, which now appears unlikely before late July.

Two other members of the Senate Banking Committee, John Heinz, R-Pa., and Alan Cranston, D-Calif., are joining Riegle, Garn and Sarbanes in the Senate conference delegation. Three members of the Senate Finance Committee — Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas; Spark Matsunaga, D-Hawaii, and Bob Packwood, R-Ore. — will represent the Senate on tax matters in the bill.

On the House side, Gonzalez is involving nearly everyone on his 51-member banking committee. He's divided the bill into five areas, and a separate delegation of 12 to 14 Democrats and eight or nine Republicans will represent the House on each issue.

Gonzalez called on the conference panel to preserve tough new capital standards for S&Ls, which has been identified by President Bush as the most important reform in the bill.

The House would require S&L owners to risk $3 of their own capital for every $100 in lending. It allows five years for the phaseout of an accounting break known as "super-velocity good will." The Senate standard is $1.50 and provides for a 25-year amortization of good will.

Gonzalez said the conference likely will agree on a 3 percent capital standard but said the Senate delegation probably will try to push back the five-year deadline on good will.

The Senate adopted President Bush's plan to keep spending out of the federal budget deficit. The House would include it in the deficit, but exempt it from automatic spending cuts under the Gramm-Rudman budget balancing law.

EPA Says Users Will Pay More For Safer Water

By H. Josef Hebert
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Millions of households are expected to face higher water bills because of new federal rules that are designed to make water safer to drink, says the Environmental Protection Agency.

The EPA announced new regulations Thursday which will require local water authorities serving an estimated 150 million people to rid drinking water of a variety of germs that are annually blamed for 90,000 illnesses, including diarrhea, nausea and upset stomachs.

About a third of the nearly 10,000 water systems subject to the new requirements will have to install new filtration equipment or make other expensive adjustments over the next four years to comply with the federal requirements.

In many cases local authorities will be given up to four years to install the equipment required by the new federal water standards, said EPA spokesman Dave Ryan.

The communities that already use filtration as a way of decontaminating their drinking water may have to make other, less costly, adjustments such as improving their chemical treatment procedures, the agency said.

The EPA estimated the new requirements will cost $3 billion overall for initial equipment and add about $500 million a year to operating costs. These costs are expected to be passed on to water customers.

The increases in household water bills are likely to vary widely depending on the size of the public water system and whether the system already has some filtration equipment. In some cases compliance to the regulations will require modest adjustments, while others will need entirely new filtration systems.

In communities where water systems serve fewer than 500 customers and where no filtration is now used, household water bills could increase as much as $30 to $50 a month, the EPA estimated. The increases in urban areas where the cost may be more widely distributed are likely to be about $6 a month or less if some filtration equipment already is being used, the EPA said.

"These rules are a major step forward in providing maximum protection for our nation's drinking-water supplies," said EPA Administrator William K. Reilly. He called the more stringent requirements "a major step forward in providing maximum protection for our nation's drinking water supplies."

The regulations, which apply only to communities where drinking water comes from surface sources such as rivers and streams, are aimed at reducing the risk of illness from microscopic living organisms such as viruses, bacteria and protozoa.

The EPA estimated Americans are subjected to tens of thousands of illnesses annually from such waterborne germs and that those estimates might be low because such illnesses often go unreported or are not linked to water contamination.

The agency said estimated 90,000 such illnesses could be avoided each year because of the improvements.

The EPA said more than 21 million people get water from systems that use no filtration, including residents of Boston, New York City, Newark, N.J., San Francisco and Seattle.

Other cities listed by the EPA as not filtering their drinking water were Portland, Maine; Syracuse and Utica, N.Y.; Scranton, Bethlehem, and Wilkes-Barre, Pa.; Greenville, S.C.; Reno and Sparks, Nev.; Tacoma, Wash., and Portland, Ore.

Bill Parmer's goats find refuge from rising flood waters in a small boat in the Greer community north of Montgomery, Ala., on Thursday. ## Food Aid Loans May Be Halted

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration may halt the long-standing policy of loaning Third World countries money to buy American food, says a high-ranking foreign aid official.

"One must wonder why our present food aid structure encourages foreign countries to add to their debt burden and whether those debts can be serviced in the future," said Philip L. Christenson, assistant administrator of the U.S. Agency for International Development.

Christenson did not indicate whether some other way would be found to pay for food purchases. He did say, however, that AID has decided to make grants rather than loans in the future for long-term development projects.

Christenson testified Thursday before a hearing by the House Select Committee on Hunger on whether the distribution of U.S. food as aid should be restructured.

Grants generally were used rather than loans when the Marshall Plan and other aid programs began under President Harry Truman more than 40 years ago, though Christenson did not go that far back in his account.

He said that 35 years ago loans to Third World countries were considered highly secure.

Damaged Tanker Dry Dock Bound

By Paul Jenkins
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

VALDEZ, Alaska — Next stop is San Diego for the crippled tanker Exxon Valdez, three months after being impaled on a reef, shredding its hull and causing the nation's worst oil spill.

The Coast Guard expects the vessel will have a safe journey and cause no further environmental damage as it moves 2,500 miles down the Pacific Ocean to a dry dock at San Diego. The tanker was scheduled to embark today.

Exxon Shipping Co. President Frank Iarossi has said the ship will be rebuilt to original specifications, which include a single hull. The 987-foot tanker will undergo nearly a year of repairs costing more than $25 million.

The Coast Guard on Wednesday approved Exxon's towing proposal and issued the necessary permits. The ship will be repaired by the company that built it in 1986.

Coast Guard officers will be aboard to monitor the vessel's movement as it leaves Prince William Sound and again as it enters the approach to San Diego, Lt. Alan Carr, a Coast Guard spokesman, said Thursday.

"The commanding officer of the Marine Safety Office went out and did a final walk-through inspection yesterday," Carr said. "He made the decision everything was OK and gave his go-ahead that everything was ready to go."

He said the Coast Guard is "satisfied it will make a safe transit and not cause any kind of environmental problem."

Two oceangoing tugboats will tow the tanker with another tug and a salvage ship trailing behind, Exxon spokesman Joe Tucker said.

The convoy will move about 100 miles offshore at 5 knots, about 5 mph, making it a 20-day trip to San Diego, officials said.

"As I understand it, the Valdez will not be moving under its own power," Tucker said. "But they (engines) are capable of being fired up."

Seven Exxon officers and four salvage experts will be on the ship, Tucker said. They are to monitor air pressure in the vessel's cargo tanks, conduct inspections and be ready to help with the ship's engines, he said.

Repairing the tanker, which bled almost 11 million gallons of North Slope crude oil into Prince William Sound when it ran aground March 24, will require the replacement of 3,000 tons of steel.

Divers and salvage specialists worked two months to stabilize the Exxon Valdez after it was refloated and towed to an anchorage off an already fouled beach on Naked Island, about 24 miles from where the calamity occurred.

"It's stable and clean," Tucker said. "I understand there are some fish swimming in one of the tanks."

Ohio Wants Tax On Neighbors' Trash

By Katherine Rizzo
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Ohio is asking Congress to consider taxing the trash that crosses state lines.

"The importing of wastes has truly enraged the citizens of Ohio," Richard Sahli, chairman of the Ohio Solid Waste Management Advisory Council, told a House subcommittee Thursday. "We could become the next New Jersey in just a few years."

New Jersey sends 55 percent of its trash out of the state, including 1.5 million tons a year to Ohio, a state whose landfills last year doubled their intake of imported garbage.

Sahli said Ohio Gov. Richard Celeste proposes a $40-a-ton tax on garbage shipped long distances.

"Such a tax would act as an incentive to states to take care of their own waste disposal needs and not create ... potential environmental problems in communities located hundreds of miles away," he said.

The money could be used to encourage recycling, develop markets for recycled products and to increase Environmental Protection Agency funding for research into better ways of handling solid waste.

The garbage shipped to Ohio alone would generate more than $100 million if taxed at the suggested $40-a-ton rate, he said.

Ohio last year took in 2.4 million tons of out-of-state waste, up from 1.2 million tons in 1987.

"We simply do not have adequate disposal capacity to become the East Coast's dumping ground," Sahli told the House Energy and Commerce transportation and hazardous materials subcommittee.

The Natural Resources Defense Council said 15,000 landfills have closed in the past 10 years, leaving about 5,000 nationwide. All of Florida's landfills must close within 10 years because of threats to groundwater, the environmental group testified.

Paul Templet, secretary of the Louisiana Department of Environmental Quality, said that state has 40 landfills, down from 800 in operation in 1980.

"Solid waste management in Louisiana has reached crisis proportions," said Templet, who suggested a national recycling program and strict landfill guidelines.

Rep. Paul Kanjorski, D-Pa., said he would introduce legislation that would treat trash the same way the government treats low-level radioactive waste. His bill would force states to develop regional compacts to deal with the garbage problem collectively.

'Big Ticket' Orders Drop

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Orders for "big ticket" durable goods plunged 4.2 percent in May, the steepest drop in 10 months, the government said today.

Durable goods include a wide range of items, from waffle irons to warships, expected to last three or more years. Economists closely track the orders as a measure of the health of the industrial sector and of the impact of interest rates on the economy.

However, analysts were unlikely to be overly alarmed by the May report because orders had surged in April and because May was heavily influenced by a sharp decline in orders for aircraft and parts that still left that category at strong levels.

The Commerce Department said orders for durable goods fell to a seasonally adjusted $124.0 billion after climbing a revised 3.2 percent in April and 1.0 percent in March. The April increase had previously been estimated at 3.0 percent.

Excluding the volatile transportation sector, which swings widely from month to month, orders fell 2.1 percent in May, rose 4.5 percent in April and climbed 2.6 percent in March.

Mitsotakis still trying to gather support to form government

Conservative Urges Papandreou To Quit Interim Premier In Hospital

By Dina Kyriakidou
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATHENS, Greece — The leader of Greece's conservative party demanded Thursday that Andreas Papandreou resign as the interim premier because of a new banking scandal, the latest to occur under Papandreou's socialist government.

Papandreou later was admitted to a hospital, and doctors said he had an infection of the respiratory system. Papandreou, 70, who underwent triple bypass heart surgery in September, was reported in excellent condition after he entered the General State hospital.

Doctors said the prime minister would spend the night at the hospital, but that his illness "does not prevent execution of his duties."

Constantine Mitsotakis, whose New Democracy party had until today to form a coalition, said Papandreou was "responsible and guilty" in the scandal involving the state-owned Greek Mortgage Bank and the Atlantic Bank of New York, a subsidiary of the state-controlled National Bank of Greece.

U.S. officials allege the Mortgage Bank operated illegally in the United States and helped people avoid taxes and get around bank reporting laws. It is accused of laundering at least $700 million.

U.S. Attorney Andrew Maloney announced in New York on Wednesday that 13 employees and executives of the Mortgage Bank had been arrested. There were no allegations of wrongdoing against U.S. banks.

"These usurpers of power who shame Greece and rob the Greek people must leave immediately ... it's vital that a new government is formed now," Mitsotakis told a news conference.

New Democracy emerged the winner of Sunday's general elections with 145 seats in the 300-seat unicameral Parliament but fell short of an absolute majority necessary to form a government.

Papandreou's Panhellenic Socialist Movement, or PASOK, won 125 seats, failing to win a third consecutive four-year term.

On Tuesday, President Christos Sartzetakis gave Mitsotakis three days to form a government. If he fails, the other two major parties will have a chance to form a coalition.

If there is no government by July 3, Parliament will be dissolved and a caretaker government will be formed by the president to prepare for new elections.

Mitsotakis said a caretaker government should be formed immediately and that elections should be held no later than September, because Papandreou "will do his utmost to cover up" the Mortgage Bank scandal.

The scandal gave Papandreou's political opponents new ammunition since it took place during his socialist administration's tenure in office. Ranking executives in state-controlled institutions are traditionally appointed by the government in power at the time.

The new scandal surfaced one day after Parliament was asked to lift the immunity of two former PASOK ministers accused of involvement in a scandal involving the Bank of Crete.

Former Justice Minister Agamemnon Koutsogiorgas allegedly received $2 million from fugitive banker George Koskotas for passing a law that blocked an investigation at his troubled bank.

Former Public Order Minister George Petsos is charged with receiving gifts and money from the banker.

Koutsogiorgas' wife, Alike, was allegedly involved in the payoff by depositing the $2 million in a joint account with her husband at a Swiss bank.

Koskotas, who is held in the United States pending a hearing on an extradition request, was charged with offering the bribe. His lawyer, Yannis Mantzouranis, a former secretary to Papandreou's Cabinet, was charged with complicity for arranging the payoff.

Peru Plane Crash Toll Reaches 60

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HUANCAYO, Peru — The death toll from a Peruvian air force plane that crashed into an Andean mountain has reached 60, officials said today.

The aircraft, a cargo plane converted to civilian transport, crashed Thursday near Tarma, 100 miles east of Lima, killing all 60 Peruvians on board, the air force said. Witnesses said the plane broke in two on impact.

It was the sixth plane crash in Peru the past two years. Critics blame most of the accidents on poor maintenance because of a shortage of spare parts in Peru, which has been ravaged by high inflation and a costly rebel insurgency.

An investigation into the cause of the crash is pending.

Gen. Edgar Sulca Flores, police chief of this central highland city, initially said the plane had been carrying 42 people, including military and civilians. The air force communique said later that 42 of the 60 bodies had been identified.

The Canadian-made Buffalo bimotor plane left the jungle town of San Ramon, 126 miles northeast of Lima.

The air force provides passenger service to towns in the remote eastern Amazon jungle because the routes are not profitable for civilian airlines.

Colleagues Wonder Why Nun Was Shot

By Douglas Grant Mine
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — Colleagues today puzzled over why a gunman in a pickup truck fired on a vehicle carrying three churchwomen, seriously wounding an American nun.

Sister Mary Stanislaus MacKey, 73, suffered a shattered cheek bone when she was shot Wednesday evening, said the Rev. Ken Myers, a fellow Roman Catholic Church worker. He said she may lose sight in her left eye.

The nun, who was at Policlínica Hospital, had regained consciousness and communicated with others by writing notes, her colleague said.

An American plane today is to fly her to Houston where her order, the Sisters of Charity of the Incarnate Word, is based, Myers said in a telephone interview.

Sister MacKey, a native of Ireland, is a naturalized U.S. citizen. She had worked in Central America since 1963 and in El Salvador since 1983.

Witnesses and authorities say one of several men in a pickup truck opened fire on another pickup truck that carried Sister MacKey and two other nuns outside Zaragoza, a town 10 miles south of the capital.

Sister MacKey, a registered nurse, worked at a Zaragoza home for orphans founded by Myers. It shelters about 200 orphans of the nine-year civil war between leftist guerrillas and the government.

Sister Ana Maria Brangan, who was driving the pickup with the two other nuns, said they were approaching Zaragoza from the capital when a yellow pickup carrying at least six men — four of them in the back — pulled alongside.

"They stayed alongside and pulled closer, and I didn't understand what was going on. Then I heard a noise and thought they had bumped us. I didn't realize it was a bullet," she told reporters at the hospital.

She said the other nun, Sister Juana Flores, saw a man standing in the back fire a single pistol shot.

She said she stopped the truck, and the attackers stopped just ahead. However, when she started, they fled.

"There were at least six men in the truck and only one weapon. They may have been thieves. Maybe they were drunk," Myers said.

In 1980, four American churchwomen were murdered by five National Guard troops, and the United States temporarily suspended aid to the Salvadoran government in protest.

The five were convicted of murder and sentenced in 1984 to 30 years imprisonment.

Extreme rightists and some armed forces officers consider nuns, priests and other churchpeople who work in poor communities to be guerrilla sympathizers.

Myers said his colleagues have not been directly threatened but have been accused of being leftist sympathizers. "That kind of thing happens all the time because of the kind of work we do: the orphanage, bringing in medicine, a clinic for poor people," he said.

Cpl. Asencio Mejia of the Zaragoza Civil Defense, which is handling the preliminary investigation, said no suspects had been found.

U.S. Ambassador William Walker said he will press officials to find the attackers.

Lava Said No Threat To Temple

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KALAPANA, Hawaii — A lava flow that destroyed a visitor center at Hawaii Volcanoes National Park is no longer an imminent threat to an ancient Hawaiian temple, a park spokesman said.

The wooden visitor center burst into flames late Thursday afternoon after molten rock from erupting Kilauea Volcano crept beneath the raised structure, said park spokesman Jon Erickson.

Firefighters on Hawaii Island had pumped more than 18,000 gallons of water onto the lava flow in a futile effort to save the building, Erickson said.

It would cost about $60,000 to replace the building that housed an information office, museum and restrooms, he said.

Park officials had feared the lava would next claim the temple, called the Waha'ula Heiau, which was built in 1275 and sits on a bluff 50 yards south of the center.

But the lava, some 25 to 30 feet below the temple, was moving to the west, posing no immediate danger to the temple, Erickson said. No other structures are in the flow's path, he added.

The eruption began Jan. 3, 1983, from a vent 2,000 feet up Kilauea and seven miles from the visitor center.

Lava from the eruption has destroyed 68 homes, including four last month in the lava-ravaged Royal Gardens subdivision above the visitor center.

Meanwhile, the world's most active volcano continued to pump out half a million cubic meters of lava per day, said Reggie Okamura, chief of operations at the U.S. Geological Survey's Hawaiian Volcano Observatory.

Fires Target Soviet Towns

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — Two forest fires were burning out of control and endangering towns after scorching more than 220,000 acres on the eastern Soviet island of Sakhalin, Tass reported today.

Tass said the fires had brought Sakhalin, a 500-mile-long island, "to the brink of an ecological catastrophe."

Firefighters, including parachutists, have been sent from several Soviet cities with special equipment. However, they have been unable to control the fires, which broke out June 8, according to the Communist Party daily Pravda.

The worst fire has destroyed 197,600 acres. Another has charred 24,700 acres. The two fires are spreading toward one another, Tass said.

It said one town, Val, is preparing for evacuation, and flames are approaching the village of Piltun.

Pravda and Tass indicated natural causes are not suspected.

Forsyth, who has sold more than 30 million books, insists he does not like to write

Spy Novelist A Methodical Writer

Suspense, Frederick Forsyth Says, Takes Research

By Hillel Italie
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Even with sales of over 30 million books, Frederick Forsyth, the author of The Day of the Jackal and The Fourth Protocol, insists he does not like to write.

"It's partly because I'm not a compulsive writer, like some of my colleagues," explained the 50-year-old British author. "I try and take a period off between books and do something that has nothing to do with books."

When Forsyth does force himself to the typewriter, he maintains a strict schedule: rise around 7 a.m., at his desk by 8, reread the previous chapters, start writing at 9, continue until his daily ration of 12 pages is completed.

The books usually take 4-5 months to research, 6-7 weeks to write and arrive faithfully every 5 years. The results are just as predictable: tightly constructed, easy-to-read spy thrillers that blend historical figures and fictional characters.

"It's the story that identifies what I have to research," Forsyth said. "I work out the story first, beginning middle and end, chapter and verse — right down to almost the smallest details."

Originally a journalist, Forsyth chooses an international topic of interest and carefully works out every plot twist, making sure to establish a logical motivation for each of his characters.

The Devil's Alternative, published in 1979, anticipated the fall of the Shah of Iran and the rise of a female prime minister in Great Britain. For his latest novel, The Negotiator ($19.95, Bantam), Forsyth imagines the world shaken by a major energy crisis. The idea came while Forsyth was lunching with a friend.

"He said there's a feasibility of our running out of oil," Forsyth said. "The Saudis are going to own us. Out of 41 producer nations, 31 are scheduled to run out within 20 years. Six of the 10 remaining are from the Middle East. That's power."

"I saw that Russia is due to run out in nine years. That started my thought processes. What the hell are they going to do? They're in more dire straights than we are."

The plot centers on the kidnapping of college student Simon Cormack, the son of John Cormack, the president of the United States who has agreed to a sweeping arms reduction deal with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

Desperate U.S. officials turn to an embittered former hostage negotiator, Quinn, to attain the young Cormack's release.

In a book filled with presidents, prime ministers and millionaire businessmen, Forsyth considered it essential to structure the story around Quinn.

"It's difficult for the public to identify with a big organization or a big government ministry," he said. "We prefer to empathize with one individual. The guy who stands up to the establishment."

"The only way a man would have that capacity to act as a loner would be that role. If he's for the FBI he's going to be on strings to superior officers. If he's CIA, it's the same thing."

He used the same approach for his first book, The Day of the Jackal, which came out in 1971.

French President Charles de Gaulle had been under harsh criticism in the early 1960s for favoring the independence of Algeria, and several assassination attempts were made by the OAS (Organisation de l'Armee Secrete).

"It just occurred to me that they weren't getting anywhere near him because they were infiltrated," recalled Forsyth, a French correspondent for Reuters at the time. "French counterintelligence got so many people in OAS they were being blown away."

He decided to write a book about a hired assassin's attempt, code name "The Jackal," to kill de Gaulle.

"I just dashed it off in a break between journalistic assignments, thinking I might make a quick $1,000. Even my publishers (Huntington; Viking), they decided they were going to print 5,000 copies, thinking that was a very good print run."

The novel sold millions of copies, was translated into 11 languages and won the Mystery Writers of America Edgar Allan Poe Award. He was immediately commissioned to write two more books, leaving behind his career in journalism.

Chain Will Sell Some Records To Adults Only

By Richard Harrington
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Over the past few weeks, Billboard magazine has been tracking several developments that, while not directly connected, suggest that the record industry is heading toward a showdown over its more explicit product.

Several weeks ago, Hastings Books and Music, a 119-store chain centered in the Midwest and Southwest, took the unprecedented step of attaching its own stickers to certain records — mostly rap, heavy metal and comedy — prohibiting their sale to minors. Some large chains (including the 235-store Camelot Music) had previously restricted sales of the few albums with parental advisories; those advisories were placed by the record labels themselves, part of the voluntary program instituted in 1985 by the Recording Industry Association of America under pressure from the Parents Music Resource Center, the PTA and other parental groups.

However, the Hastings move marks the first time a major retailer has instituted its own chainwide "18 to Purchase" program. The stickers restrict sales of product with "explicit lyrics, graphics or satanic references in both music and books." Some (but not all) albums by such acts as NWA, Sodom, Ice-T, Eddie Murphy, Sam Kinison, 2 Live Crew and Suicidal Tendencies were restricted. Leading the list with nine out of 74 listed titles: comedian Richard Pryor.

One Hastings employee said that the company was merely responding to escalating consumer complaints, and this week Billboard reports on subtle behind-the-scenes pressure being exerted on music dealers by mall developers, who traditionally have a great deal of control over what's sold by their lessees. Although such releases constitute only a small fraction of the overall record industry, they seem to be on the increase and, some feel, are becoming increasingly blatant in certain genres.

Since mall locations are high-volume cash cows, most retailers are not about to risk losing their leases just to sell a dozen 2 Live Crew tapes. One Camelot memo to major record distributors puts it succinctly: "We don't want to censor and pull product, but we don't want to lose these locations over this, either. And we don't need the extremely raunchy lyrics to have a successful music business." All this activity may force the record industry into a more defined, more responsible position in regards to controversial recordings. For the most part, the labels have been dismissive of parental concerns, deferring to artists' creative freedom and control and trotting out the standard censorship defenses, usually attached to attacks on right-wing fundamentalists.

Adding to the tension is news of a 1987 report to Congress from an in-house legal research service suggesting that Congress does in fact have constitutional authority to regulate explicit recordings, to restrict minors' access to them, and to mandate content labeling or the display of explicit lyrics, all this based on lawmakers' authority to regulate interstate and foreign commerce. The report noted that such regulations would have to be narrowly focused so as not to infringe on adults' rights to the same material and indicated that suggestive lyrics, innuendo and double entendres would not be subject to legislation. But it did not actually suggest any such legislation, merely that Congress had authority to legislate. Critics of the report contended that some of its conclusions were constitutionally dubious and that while states have more leeway in restricting material deemed harmful to minors, a rigorous federal law would have difficulty withstanding a constitutional challenge.

Home Need Not Look Like Museum

COUNTRY HOME

A home needn't be decorated like a museum, but for historically accurate interiors follow the advice given in Country Home magazine by The Wool Bureau Inc.

— Wing chairs don't really belong in the living room. In the 18th century, wing chairs were designed for moments of relaxation in one's bedroom.

— Despite the 20th-century mania for stripping wood, that glorious 18th-century wood paneling was designed to be painted. Paint was an expensive status symbol. A gentleman who could afford a paneled library would never have left it unfinished.

— Textiles were a precious commodity in early America. Curtains were skimpy and many windows had no coverings at all. Special fabrics were most likely to be used as bed curtains in the master bedroom.

Surgeon Is Operating On Pure Determination

By Beverly Beyette
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LOS ANGELES — The squeaking of Dr. Serena Young's leg braces cuts the silence as, swinging along on her crutches, she hurries down a corridor at Rancho Los Amigos Medical Center in suburban Downey. She laughs and says, "I need oiling."

Young, an orthopedic surgeon, has just completed two surgeries, a 3½-hour multiple limb repair and a 1½-hour procedure to straighten a claw-like hand; now she is on her way to the intensive care unit to look in on a brain-injured boy.

Her patient is a heartbreaker, a handsome blue-eyed teen-ager who was supposed to die but didn't after being horribly injured three years ago in a car accident. Now, at Rancho Los Amigos, doctors are patching up his broken body.

Young props her crutches against the wall, hoists herself onto a footstool and braces her body against the bed to improve her leverage as she removes a half-cast from his left arm. Two pins jut like miniature antennae from the patient's left shoulder, where a dislocation has been fixed.

The boy cannot talk but groans in pain as Young lifts his arm. She works deftly, explaining each move to him, reassuring him. As she leaves, he reaches his hand out to hers. His eyes follow her as she walks away. She promises to stop by tomorrow.

Horrible deformities are the norm in this ward at Rancho Los Amigos, where the majority of patients, all of them brain-injured, are victims of car or motorcycle accidents.

But Young knows, "These are human beings capable of love and feeling, not just deformed bodies."

No one could understand better. Young, 34, has been a paraplegic since age 2, when she was stricken with polio.

She remembers the hospital room in her native Taiwan and remembers her mother's bedside vigil. Her mother, a Roman Catholic, was praying: "God, if you bring her back, I promise I'll devote her to you." And, Young said, "at that moment I opened my eyes."

She thinks about her life against all odds: medical school, a residency in orthopedic surgery and, as of July 1, the post as assistant chief of orthopedic surgery, adult brain injury service, at Rancho Los Amigos. "I really believe it's God who's given me the strength to pursue this," she said.

Dr. Robert Waters, medical director at Rancho Los Amigos, puts it another way: "She's a gutsy girl."

Polio immunization was not widespread in Taiwan in the late '50s. Stricken overnight, Young was paralyzed from the neck down.

"I had every treatment from Chinese herbs to acupuncture," she said, including a painful procedure in which she was placed in a dark room on a slatted wood bed, from which rose incense-scented, scalding steam. She said her parents had to bribe her with sugar cane, her favorite treat.

Over the next year, she gradually regained the use of her arms, as often happens with polio victims.

But her legs did not respond. "I remember crawling around on the floor, getting from place to place. I used to look like a mermaid, with my legs dragging behind me," she said.

When she was 4, her father, an American Embassy employee in Taipei, and her mother, a seamstress, both in their 30s, moved to America with their little girl and her two brothers. "They thought the medical technology was so much better here," she said.

From the time Yi-Len, as Young was then called, was 5, until she was 21, she was treated at Orthopaedic Hospital in Los Angeles. She had four surgeries, muscle transplants and transfers to enable her to straighten a knee, and fusions to stabilize a foot and ankle.

"I came to America crawling with my hands," she said. "They got me up and straightened out my legs."

She was grateful and fascinated. Somewhere along the way, Young decided: "Maybe I'll be an orthopedic surgeon just like my doctor. I thought the reason I went through all this suffering was so I could help someone else."

"I didn't realize how crazy it was. I had no idea what I was getting into," she said.

In seventh grade, she transferred from a school for the handicapped to Luther Burbank Junior High; then came John Burroughs High. In both schools, she was the only student who had had polio, a curiosity.

"I have to be honest," she said, "it was really hard. I had to come to grips with accepting my disability. But my parents never let me use my handicap as an excuse."

With a degree in biological sciences from the University of California, Irvine, Young enrolled at the University of California, San Francisco's, School of Medicine, where she was the only visibly handicapped person in her class. She told people there of her dream of being an orthopedic surgeon and, for the most part, she said, they told her, "You've got to be out of your mind."

There were "a lot of days," Young said, when she thought they were right.

Although she kept up an exhausting pace in which "there were no excuses made for me," she said, it was not the demands of her training that got her down, not the pain in her joints. It was "the emotional drain of having to prove myself over and over again," she said, adding that she sometimes still must do it.

Serena Young stopped in mid-conversation and asked, "You know how I got my name? From a telephone book." When she was 11, and about to become a citizen, she said, her mother decided that she should have an American name. In the directory, she found Serena. She laughed and said, "Serena, right? A good American name."

The talk turns to her private life.

Her husband, Buu Dinh Nguyen, who came to the United States as an exchange student in 1977, is now an engineer. They met through his sister, who was in Young's medical school class.

Church Representative Is Giving Her More Than Spiritual Support

Dear Abby: Our church has a policy of sending laypeople out to the elderly and infirm who cannot get to church to provide Holy Communion and spiritual companionship. I have a dear friend (I'll call her Dora) who has benefited from this service for the last few years, but recently she told me something that horrifies me.

This church visitor has become actively involved in Dora's life to the point of handling all of her finances. While I am delighted that Dora, who has been confined to her home for many years, has found such a companion, I have begun having second thoughts since hearing that my friend has rewritten her will, leaving everything to this woman and this woman's children!

Abby, I don't know what, if anything, to do about this. I realize it is Dora's estate and she can do anything she wants with her money, but it appears that she has been totally brainwashed by this woman. I feel an obligation to inform our priest about this situation. Am I being a busybody? Should I just mind my own business, or talk to the priest about this? — In A Dilemma In California

Dear In A Dilemma: It is so easy for an elderly, isolated person to be influenced by someone who regularly visits to provide constant attention and companionship.

By all means, tell the priest. He would appreciate knowing that this church representative is "administering" to more than your friend's spiritual needs.

Dear Abby: I am getting tired of hearing how much in debt our government is because of all the social programs we are paying for. The solution is so obvious, I am surprised that nobody thought about it.

Dear Abby

The government should stop paying Social Security benefits to people who are rich and don't need the money. Billions of dollars could be saved, and nobody would be hurt by it. — Abby Fan In Bakersfield, Calif.

Dear Fan: Hold it! Social Security is not — and never was — a "social program." It is an earned right — not a "gift" based on need. Those who have worked long enough under Social Security are entitled to monthly benefits when they are eligible, regardless of whether they are rich or poor.

The government is simply paying back the money the workers have put into the system since they were old enough to draw a salary. If "rich" people want to give their Social Security money away, that's their business. But they should not be denied what is rightly theirs because they don't "need" the money.

Dear Abby: My brother and his wife invited me to their golden wedding anniversary celebration, which will take place in a distant city.

Since they have no room for me to stay with them at their home, they informed me that they made reservations for me at a nearby motel — at my own expense.

I contend that they should pay my motel bill (three days), as I am an invited guest and I am paying for my own transportation to this distant city. Other family members disagree. What do you think? — Invited Guest

Dear Guest: I agree with "other family members" who disagree with your contention. Unless an invitation expressly states that the host will pay for the lodging, the guest should plan on paying for it.

Confidential To "Hating Him In Toronto": Hating him as you do will hurt you more than it will hurt him. Please consider these wise words of Dale Carnegie in his book How to Stop Worrying and Start Living (1948):

"When we hate our enemies, we give them power over us — power over our sleep, our appetites and our happiness. They would dance with joy if they knew how much they were upsetting us. Our hate is not hurting them at all, but it is turning our own days and nights into a hellish turmoil."

Keep Your Feet Happy This Summer

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Ah, summer. Time to trade in pumps and sneakers for sandals and bare feet.

It's also time for blisters, swollen feet, burning feet and sweaty feet.

Short of a hydromassage, there are some things you can do to keep your feet in working order — and comfortable — this summer.

— Never buy shoes in the morning. Feet swell during the day and shoes will be too tight.

— To soothe sweaty feet, gently rub with rubbing alcohol twice a day and dust with talcum powder.

— To revive tired feet, soak them in a warm footbath with a few drops of lavender oil. Dip them in cold water before rinsing.
— Cornstarch or potato-flour talcum powder dusted over foot blisters soothes and assists healing.

— Relieve aching feet by massaging the soles with cider vinegar or lemon juice.

These home remedies are compliments of The Body Shop, a London-based company specializing in natural hair and skin products.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market ran up a broad gain today on fresh evidence of a slowing economy.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 16.12 to 2,498.29 in the first half hour of trading.

Gainers outnumbered losers by more than 5 to 2 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 721 up, 255 down and 446 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 31.95 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

The Commerce Department reported this morning that new factory orders for durable goods fell 4.2 percent in May. Wall Street had been expecting them to be unchanged or slightly higher.

Analysts saw the surprise decline as a sign that the economy might be slowing more dramatically than previously forecast.

That stirred some stepped-up talk of a possible business slump. But brokers said it also raised expectations of falling interest rates and reduced inflation.

Optimists in the financial world argue that as evidence of a weakening economy mounts, the Federal Reserve will relax its credit policy to cushion the impact of the "landing."

Gainers among the blue chips included American Telephone & Telegraph, up 3/4 at 37 on heavy volume; International Business Machines, up 3/4 at 109 1/2; General Motors, up 1/2 at 40 3/4, and General Electric, up 1/4 at 54 1/4.

Relief Worker Kidnapped In Gaza Strip

Moslem radicals there made it dangerous for Westerners.

PLO spokesman Ahmed Abdul-Rahman said in a telephone interview from Tunisia that the Palestine Liberation Organization had nothing to do with the abduction and "denounced completely and thoroughly this capture of an American citizen who works to help Palestinian children."

Representatives of six Palestinian institutions, including unions of physicians, engineers, lawyers and women, met in Gaza to condemn the kidnapping, saying in a statement, "The ugly crime is not linked to the Palestinian people. It is aimed at hurting our people, our intefadeh (the uprising) and our leadership, the PLO."

Khatem Abu Shaaban, a Palestinian official of Save the Children, said the agency's office in Gaza received a letter written by George that was relayed via the Red Cross.

"It said that Chris George was kidnapped by five people, and that they have certain demands," Abu Shaaban said in an interview.

Abu Shaaban said George and Tony Charter, the director of Save the Children in Gaza, were alone in the Gaza City office when main Omar el-Mukhtar street around noon Thursday when a Palestinian whom George knew entered.

"The man said he wanted Chris to walk out of the office so that they can discuss an important subject," Abu Shaaban said. "Chris never came back."

The Israeli news agency Itim reported George knew the man well enough to hug and kiss him in Arab fashion.

A Palestinian who spoke on condition of anonymity said he saw the second of two letters written in English by George. One was addressed to U.S. Ambassador William Brown and President Bush.

"After 20 hours I write my second letter to the American ambassador and George Bush and his administration, the friends of the Israeli government, in order to obtain my freedom," he quoted the letter received today as saying.

The letter said George was taken from his office by five men armed with a machine gun and four grenades.

It demanded the release of seven senior Palestinian activists held in Israeli jails, including Sheikh Ahmed Yassin, the wheelchair-bound spiritual leader of the Hamas fundamentalist movement, which does not belong to the PLO.

They included one member of Yasser Arafat's Fatah organization, Mutawakil Taha, the jailed head of the Arab Writers Union who is held without trial under administrative detention. They also demanded freedom for members of two PLO factions, the Syrian-based Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine and pro-Communist Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine.

In addition, the letter said Israel should stop deporting Palestinian activists and investigate the death of Omar Al Qassem, a senior figure of the Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine.

Arab activists and Israeli officials said Qassem died of cancer earlier this month.

The Save the Children Federation is a private international development and relief organization that employs over 3,000 employees in 40 countries.

George lives with his wife and their two daughters outside the West Bank town of Ramallah. Reached about 2 a.m., she sounded distraught and asked a reporter to clear the telephone line for other calls.

Holland Reportedly Headed To Davidson

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RICHMOND, Va. — Officials at Davidson College in North Carolina and the University of Virginia have refused to comment on a newspaper report that Virginia basketball coach Terry Holland may be leaving to become athletic director at Davidson.

The Richmond News Leader, quoting unnamed sources close to the North Carolina basketball community, said Thursday that Holland and Davidson have reached an agreement.

A member of the Davidson athletic department who requested anonymity said the school was making arrangements for a news conference today.

The newspaper said the sources were unclear on the timetable of the move. One said Holland, who is working on the last year of a five-year coaching contract at Virginia, would stay at the Charlottesville school for the 1989-90 season before leaving.

Jerry Stockdale, Davidson's director of college relations, declined to comment about the Holland report.

"I'm unable to comment on that report," he said, adding that he couldn't say whether a decision had been made on filling the athletic director's post.

"Whatever comes out will have to come out without any official word from Davidson," Stockdale said in a telephone interview Thursday.

Holland did not return telephone calls, and his secretary said he probably would be out of the office Friday.

Holland's wife, Ann, told The Charlotte (N.C.) Observer that "they (Davidson) did a good job of talking to him. I guess after a while we have to move on. I really don't know that it's final — Terry has always been really good keeping things at the office."

Jim Copeland, Virginia's athletic director, declined to comment on the report. "I can't speak to that at this time," said Copeland. "I can't help you. Maybe tomorrow sometime."

Holland, a Davidson alumnus, is known to be interested in a career in athletic administration and has never concealed his fondness for his alma mater, which is located near Charlotte. Holland played at Davidson from 1962 through 1964 and succeeded Lefty Driesell as coach in 1969. He was the Wildcats' coach through 1974, when he left for Virginia.

Cheerleaders Quit In Dallas

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DALLAS — Fourteen veteran members of the Dallas Cowboys cheerleaders have quit the team because new owner Jerry Jones wants them to wear skimpier uniforms, fraternize with the players and appear in beer commercials, The Dallas Morning News reported today.

The squad met Thursday night to consider changes proposed by Jones, an Arkansas oilman who purchased the NFL team earlier this year.

"He (Jones) wanted to change the uniform, and do you know what he wanted?" asked Twiggy Isip, 21, a two-year veteran said. "Biker shorts and a halter top. He wants us to play hostess at parties and fraternize with the team. We've never done that."

Cheerleading squad director Debbie Bond said, "It's always been a first-class organization that people would look up to."

"However, with the new regime of Jerry Jones, the high standards and principles that made the (cheerleader squad) what it is today are about to be changed," Bond, who has been with the organization for 10 years, said.

Saying she would resign today, Bond added, "It would be against my morals and my thinking to be a part of what it will be."

Jones could not be reached for comment Thursday night, the newspaper reported.

Larry Wamsley, an aide, said, "All this is news to me."

Members of the 38-woman squad discussed the changes at a four-hour meeting Thursday night, the newspaper reported.

All of the veterans who quit said they decided they could not tolerate the changes because they believe the rules would tarnish their clean-cut image, several told the newspaper.

One cheerleader said rookie members of the squad said they would decide what to do by Monday.

"There's nothing we can do," Isip said. "We just have to sit and watch next year's cheerleaders ruin the name."

"The worst thing is, he wants us to be in beer commercials," Miss Isip said. "We've never even been able to have a drink in our hand."

Bond said she confronted Jones about the changes on Wednesday.

"I told Mr. Jones that I had heard that there was a change in the policy about fraternization, and that he cheerleaders could fraternize with the players," Bond said. "He said that is true. I told him I had a problem with that and he said you can accept that or move on."

"I can't ask these girls to do something I wouldn't have my own daughters doing," Bond added.

Group leader Tina Miller, who has been with the squad for three years, said she felt the changes would demean the cheerleaders' image.

"I didn't want to be a part of it," she said. "I wanted to leave it as it was, classy and the top."

The order to fraternize with the players and where alcohol was served particularly bothered Miller, she said.

"We felt that wasn't very respectful because rumors get started," she said. "It wouldn't be very professional."

Under former owner H.R. "Bum" Bright, the cheerleaders were not allowed to drink or even be photographed with someone holding a drink while they were wearing their uniforms.

"Our standards, our dignity, our honor, I really feel that is being threatened," said Judy London, 23, a five-year veteran.

Bond says she wants nothing to do with the new organization.

"I just loved the (old) organization so much," she said. "My hope was that everything that had been built over the last 14 years had been maintained."

"It is not being made possible by the new regime," she said.

Jones fired Tom Landry, the only head coach in the team's history, on the same day he purchased the team from Bright. The Landry firing angered Dallas fans, who turned out by the thousands later when the city held a parade and ceremony in Landry's honor.

Nicklaus' New Plan He Wants To Win Canadian Open

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OAKVILLE, Ontario — Jack Nicklaus, who has accomplished about all that can be done in golf, still has his ambitions.

"I'm stubborn," said the 49-year-old player who has won six Masters, five PGA national championships, four U.S. Opens and three British Opens.

"I haven't won this tournament. I've been second — what? — seven times. But I haven't won. I still want to win it," Nicklaus said.

And he was in position to challenge, just as he was a week ago in the U.S. Open, when play resumed today in the storm-delayed completion of first round of play in the Canadian Open.

Extremely heavy rains delayed the tournament start for five hours and backed up starting times as late as 6:48 p.m. EDT.

Half the field of 156 was stranded on the course by darkness last night. They marked their positions on the Glen Abbey Golf Club course and returned at daylight today to finish their rounds.

Included in that group were Curtis Strange, two-time winner of the U.S. Open, Masters champion Nick Faldo of England, PGA title-holder Jeff Sluman and defending Canadian Open champ Ken Green.

Second-round play was scheduled later in the day.

Jim Gallagher, not yet a winner is six seasons of PGA Tour activity, had been at the golf course for more than six hours and "I warmed up four different times" before his much-delayed start.

"I didn't think we'd ever get started," he said.

But when he did, he one-putted 14 times and birdied half the holes he played in an eight-under-par 64 that gave him an early two-shot lead.

Nicklaus, holder of a record 18 major professional titles, was within two shots of the lead until he hit into the water and made a double bogey on his final hole, finishing with a 68 that left him four behind.

But that finish failed to dampen his obvious enthusiasm.

"I'm playing much better than I did last week," when he had a first-round 67 in the U.S. Open, then played poorly.

Evidence Mounting Rose Could Face A Lifetime Ban

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — Pete Rose could be banned from baseball for life if Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti believes evidence in a damaging report on the Cincinnati Reds' manager.

Whether Giamatti gets to make that determination soon is up to a state judge who was told Thursday that baseball's investigators have solid evidence that Rose bet on his own team.

Baseball investigator John M. Dowd outlined the evidence, saying his investigators had telephone records, taped conversations, checks signed by Rose, and "betting sheets" that have been verified as bearing Rose's handwriting.

The evidence is substantial, with nine witnesses giving information about Rose betting on baseball games or the Reds, according to Dowd.

While defending his report Thursday against attacks by Rose's lawyers, Dowd said he's taken no enjoyment from presenting the case against baseball's all-time hits leader.

"Do I like it? No," Dowd said. "There isn't a day I haven't felt enormous sadness about this matter."

Baseball's special investigator unveiled the case against Rose during a hearing related to Rose's lawsuit against Giamatti. Rose sued him earlier this week, asserting the commissioner is biased and has already decided against him.

The hearing Thursday was on Rose's request for a temporary restraining order that would block his meeting scheduled Monday with Giamatti in New York — the final step before the commissioner decides the case. Dowd was to be cross-examined today by Rose's lawyers to complete the hearing, and Hamilton County Common Pleas Judge Norbert A. Nadel was expected to make a decision soon thereafter.

Baseball attorney Louis L. Hoynes Jr. told Nadel that it's important to let the commissioner use his full authority in deciding Rose's case.

"What's at stake here is the integrity of the game of major-league baseball," Hoynes said.

Hoynes and Dowd then made it clear that Rose's future standing in the game also is at stake.

"There is evidence, substantial and heavily corroborated evidence, that Mr. Rose bet large sums of money on major-league baseball games and on games of the Cincinnati Reds," Hoynes said.

Three Soviets Close To Signing

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Three of the Soviet Union's top players may be on the verge of coming to the United States to play basketball.

Sources close to the Soviet national team have told The Associated Press that Arvidas Sabonis has reached a preliminary agreement with the NBA's Portland Trail Blazers, forward Alexander Volkov with the Atlanta Hawks and guard Sharunas Marchulenis with the Golden State Warriors.

There still is red tape and legal questions to overcome, including a contract Sabonis, the Soviet national team's highly regarded center, says he signed with the Forum Filatelico team in Spain.

"We have an agreement with the Spanish league that we respect each other's contracts, and we will honor that agreement," NBA vice president Gary Bettman said Thursday. "We're in the process of evaluating the situation."

Portland president Harry Glickman said he understood that one stipulation of the contract was that it had to be approved by the Soviet Union.

"I don't know if the Soviet Union would approve, but if they don't, then it's not a valid contract," Glickman said. "But we'd like to see a copy of the contract and see exactly what it says."

Even if Sabonis plays in Spain, Glickman said, "That isn't the worst scenario. We can wait another year for him to come to Portland."

The Trail Blazers drafted Sabonis in 1986, helped him rehabilitate an ankle injury and then saw him return home to help the Soviets win the 1988 Olympic gold medal.

"I expect that someday he'll play in the NBA, hopefully with the Portland Trail Blazers," Glickman said. "We knew at the time we drafted him that it was a big gamble."

In what is seen as a sign that the Soviet stars will be allowed to play abroad, national team coach Vladimir Garastas praised a recent ruling by FIBA, the international basketball federation, to permit professionals to play in Olympic and world championships.

"It is good that FIBA made the decision because the Soviet players who join the NBA will now be able to remain members of our national team," Garastas said at the European Championships.

Although Marchulenis' club, Statiba Vilnius, "is making some problems for him," according to one source, Marchulenis told the AP that he is certain to play for the Warriors next season.

"Everything is settled with the Soviet sports authorities and I'm continuing my basketball career in the NBA," Marchulenis said.

The sources said the unexpected problem with Marchulenis' club arose when he said he was signing a three-year contract with the Warriors. His club said he can sign only a two-year contract, the sources said.

Watson Claims Second Place In North State

RALEIGH — Ahoskie's Joel White shot an even-par 72 on the final round of the North State Junior Golf Tournament to claim a four-shot victory over Greenville's Lee Watson Thursday.

Watson, a rising senior at Rose, was in a tie for first place after Wednesday's round, but ended up finishing second with a 224 total over three days. He shot a 75 Tuesday and Wednesday and a 78 Thursday.

Watson led both White and Wednesday co-leader Teague Tripp by one stroke after nine holes, but White then took control from there.

Also at the North State, Gentry Pinner won the first place in the first flight for 15-16 year olds.

Last week Watson won the Optimist International Junior World Golf Tournament in Laurinburg. Next up, he will go to San Diego July 18-21 representing the Eastern North Carolina region at Torrey Pines.

Pilgreen Leads Region I To Win

Former North Pitt standout Keisha Pilgreen scored 16 points to lead Region I to a 64-62 win over Region III in North Carolina State Game basketball action Thursday.

Pilgreen, who has signed to play for East Tennessee State next year, was the team's second leading scorer in the game. Michelle Leathers led the squad with 19 points.

Wilson Edges Pitt In Extra Innings

WILSON — John Bunn singled in Donald Barnes with the winning run in the bottom of the 10th inning as Wilson edged Pitt County, 5-4, in an American Legion baseball game Thursday.

The game-winning RBI made a winner out of Mark Watson, who went the distance striking out five and walking four. The loss dropped Pitt to 6-5.

Pitt had the bases loaded in the top of the 10th as Ty Little opened with a walk. One out later Maurice Hines singled. Walter Gatlin followed with a reach off an error to load the bases, but Post 39 was unable to take advantage.

Early in the game, Pitt moved out to a 2-1 lead after the first inning as Chris Christopher reached off a walk and Maurice Hines singled before both came home on a wild pitch.

Wilson came back to take a 3-2 lead in the sixth as William Barnes and Angelo Cox each singled in a run.

In the eighth, Pitt regained the advantage with two runs as Hines singled and then came home on a homer by Gatlin to make it 4-3.

Wilson tied the game in the bottom of the inning and the teams shut each other out in the ninth, forcing extra innings.

Hines got the loss for Pitt, but scattered 10 hits over 10 innings with 12 strikeouts and five walks. He also led the team in hitting, going 4-5.

Pitt returns to action Saturday at home against Kinston.

Pitt played the game without a number of regular starters who were in the Triangle competing in the state games. Gone were pitchers Hal Conger, Jamie Brewington and Travis Clemons along with outfielders David Leisten and John Bolen.

Spotlight No Guarantee For Dumars

NEW YORK (AP) — Now that Joe Dumars has found the spotlight, he isn't sure it will make him an All-Star.

"This is the biggest honor I've ever had," Dumars said after accepting the NBA finals most valuable player trophy on Thursday. "I've always tried to be a good person and to have something like this happen to you makes it all worthwhile."

Dumars, whose regular-season scoring average was 17.6 and whose career mark is 14.1, said Coach Chuck Daly will determine if Dumars shoots more next season.

"It's not up to me to change my game," Dumars said. "Chuck has a lot to say about it. We've had a lot of scorers in Detroit the last few years — Isiah Thomas, Kelly Tripucka, Vinnie Johnson, John Long — but I always thought I could score, that I would get my chance."

Dumars, from McNeese State in Louisiana, ranks 17th on the college career scoring list, but is known in the NBA for his defense, winning all-defensive team honors this year.

After shooting 37 percent from the field in the Eastern Conference finals against Chicago, Dumars made 38 of 66 shots — 57.6 percent — against the Los Angeles Lakers, averaging 27.3 points in the four games of the finals.

Clemson Adds Hussey To Coaching Staff

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Bobby Hussey, former basketball coach at Davidson and Belmont Abbey, was named a part-time assistant at Clemson, coach Cliff Ellis said Thursday.

Hussey's job will include on-court teaching and some administrative work, Ellis said.

Hussey replaces Don Hogan, who resigned earlier this month to take an assistant coaching job at Davidson.

"Bobby Hussey is an outstanding teacher who has impressed me for a number of years in his ability to communicate with his players on and off the court," Ellis said in a prepared statement. "When Don Hogan left, we needed a chief floor aide, and Coach Hussey certainly fills this need."

Hussey was coach at Davidson for eight years, compiling a 108-127 mark during his tenure at the North Carolina school that ended with his resignation after last season. Under Hussey, Davidson won at least 20 games in 1985-86 and 1986-87. The Wildcats also won the Southern Conference tournament title in 1986-87.

Before going to Davidson, Hussey was head coach at Belmont Abbey, amassing a 179-111 record at the North Carolina school. The 1962 Appalachian State graduate has a 287-238 record as a head coach.

Casey's Lawyer Suggests New Link

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOWLING GREEN, Ky. — A lawyer for former Kentucky assistant basketball coach Dwane Casey has suggested a booster might be linked to $1,000 found in a package bound for the father of a recruit, according to a published report.

Joe Bill Campbell told The Daily News of Bowling Green that reporters for The Courier-Journal of Louisville and The Associated Press provided tips about the booster's possible involvement in the incident, which was among charges that prompted NCAA sanctions against the university last month.

Campbell declined to name the booster, but described him as a "close friend" of former basketball Coach Eddie Sutton who frequently visited the school's basketball office in Lexington, the newspaper reported in a copyright story Thursday.

Casey left the package, addressed to Claud Mills — the father of then-Kentucky recruit Chris Mills — on a receptionist's desk with a videotape inside about one hour before it was sealed on March 30, 1988, Campbell said.

"We also know that there was a booster in (the basketball office) that afternoon," Campbell said. "A couple of members of the media told me later that this same booster was seen in the office the day the story broke and he was in a sweat."

Campbell said Richard Wilson of The Courier-Journal and Mike Embry of the AP had described the booster's activities on the day the cash was discovered.

"Dick Wilson was not in the basketball office on the day in question," said Irene C. Nolan, managing editor of the Louisville newspaper. "He has no first-hand knowledge of who was."

"The Courier-Journal printed all the information we obtained and could confirm during the NCAA basketball investigation."

Ed Staats, the AP bureau chief for Kentucky, said the scenario Campbell described seemed unlikely. Embry was on vacation out of state and could not be reached for comment.

Staats said that like other news organizations that covered the Kentucky basketball story, the AP had reported everything that could be confirmed.

Campbell said he provided information about the booster to attorneys for the university, but they failed to take action and it was not mentioned in the school's response to the NCAA.

"We gave that information to the university," Campbell said. "The university never interviewed (the booster). Why, I don't know."

Campbell said the reporters told him the booster was nervously looking for Sutton on April 14, 1988, the day the Los Angeles Daily News reported the cash was found in an Emery Air Freight package bound for Mills.

"They said the guy was in a sweat and was in the basketball office looking for Coach Sutton," Campbell said.

The lawyer said he had confronted the booster with the statements he contended came from the reporters. "My observation was that he was very nervous and fidgety about it," the lawyer said.

Hill Hopes To Revitalize Golf Game

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Dave Hill hopes this year's $300,000 MONY Syracuse Senior Classic will revitalize his golf game the same way it did last year.

"I wasn't playing well last year when I got here. It started here and went on for the next 5½ months. I was playing fantastic," said Hill, who will try to defend his 1988 title beginning today at the Lafayette County Club.

"I haven't been swinging well for weeks," said the 52-year-old, Brooklyn, Mich., golfer. "But one never knows. It might show up at any time. I like this course and that makes a difference when you're playing."

In 1988, Hill had one early-season victory and then went into a slump that lasted until his five-stroke victory at Lafayette. He followed with victories in the PaineWebber Invitational and the Mazda Tournament of Champions and finished third on the tour with earnings of more than $415,000.

This year, Hill won the Bell Atlantic St. Christopher's tournament in Malvern, Pa. He's seventh on the tour's money list but for the last six weeks he's struggled with his game.

Hill, who captured 12 PGA titles in nearly 20 years on the PGA Tour, blamed his recent poor play on the no-break schedule he has followed during the past year.

"I haven't had any time off and I'm the type of player who needs to get away for a month or so. If I don't, my play suffers," Hill said. "I've played pretty much straight through the end of 1988 until now."

But Hill said he would be revived by the 6,530-yard, par-72 course at Lafayette, where last year he shot a course-record 64 in the second round.

The field of 72 also will be playing for a fattened purse of $300,000, with $45,000 going to the winner.

"I got good irons here last fall. But I'll have to wait to see what I have this time around," Hill said. "The way I've been playing, it's been one thing one week, and the next week something else is off."

Five of the circuit's top 10 golfers will be at Lafayette, including Hill and former two-time winner Bruce Crampton, and 13 of the tour's top 25 money-winners. The field also includes past champions Peter Thomson, a five-time British Open champion, and Gene Littler, who won 29 titles on the regular PGA Tour.

Despite four inches of rain since June 1, the Lafayette course will be in good shape, tournament operations chairman Bill Motto said.

The weekend forecast was promising, with dry conditions and temperatures in the mid-80s.

Cubs Blank Pitt

Sweep Brings Lead To 3 Games

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PITTSBURGH — It was appropriate that Pittsburgh catcher Junior Ortiz carried out the lineup card before the Pirates' game with Chicago. After all, Ortiz's number is 0.

The Cubs hiked their National League East lead to three games over the idle New York Mets on Thursday night, completing their first three-game sweep in Pittsburgh in 32 years by winning 8-0 on Rick Sutcliffe's five-hitter.

The O's of Baltimore are the American League's story of the year, but with the storybook pitching the Cubs are getting, they may become known as the 0-0-0-0's.

Chicago completed the series with 23 consecutive shutout innings, including a 1-0, 11-inning victory Wednesday.

"Everything in this game is dictated by pitching, and the Cubs are getting the pitching," Pirates manager Jim Leyland said.

The Pirates, falling 1½ games behind Chicago, didn't have a chance against Sutcliffe, who retired 14 consecutive hitters in one stretch. Pittsburgh didn't advance a runner past second and didn't have more than one hit in any inning.

Could the Cubs — who haven't won a pennant since 1945 — be for real?

"Hey, they've got talent," Leyland said. "They've brought guys up like (Jerome) Walton and (Dwight) Smith who are hungry, and I looked over there (Wednesday) in the 11th and Andre Dawson, who came out in the ninth, was cheering like a rookie. That's impressive."

In other games Thursday, Cincinnati beat Atlanta 6-1 and Philadelphia routed St. Louis 11-2.

Cubs manager Don Zimmer, who has waved his magic wand to transform the once-hapless "Flubs" into title contenders, isn't ready to predict what will happen in the final 90 games.

"We're playing good and we're pitching good," Zimmer said. "What's going to happen from here? I don't know, it's a crazy game ... but we're doing what we're here to do."

Sutcliffe didn't need much support as he breezed through the punchless Pirate lineup, but got plenty. Ryne Sandberg broke an 0-for-16 slump with a run-scoring double to key a three-run third against Randy Kramer, 1-4.

Damon Berryhill and Domingo Ramos added run-scoring singles and the Cubs roughed up much-battered reliever Jeff Robinson for four runs in the ninth, inflating Robinson's earned-run average to 6.85.

Reds 6, Braves 1

Scott Scudder, recalled from the minors earlier in the day, got his first major-league victory.

Scudder, 1-1, gave up one run on seven hits in seven innings. Todd Benzinger and Barry Larkin homered for the Reds.

Tom Glavine, 7-4, allowed five runs on six hits in four innings.

Phillies 11, Cardinals 2

Newcomers Dennis Cook and Len Dykstra helped Philadelphia rout visiting St. Louis.

Cook, 2-0, scattered three hits in seven innings. He was acquired from San Francisco in a trade for Steve Bedrosian.

Track Funding Woes Causing Problems

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TORONTO — The Canadian government's sports funding programs are paltry and encourage athletes to cheat to survive, a federal inquiry was told.

Bruce Kidd, a world-class distance runner in the 1960s and now professor of sports sociology at the University of Toronto, said Ottawa has turned Canada's Olympians into little more than underpaid professionals who are contractually obligated to deliver "incredibly high" results just to survive.

Since they are treated like professionals, Kidd told the government inquiry into drugs in sport, they should be paid like them.

"It's a very, very demanding, difficult, very exploitive system," Kidd, 45, said. "It's become a highly alienating ... program."

"I don't want to say that athletes who face terrible economic conditions are automatically led to cheat to get ahead, but it seems to me it adds significantly to the pressure and that has to be taken into consideration."

In two hours of testimony, Kidd told the commission that the funding program, which provides up to $650 monthly for athletes ranked among the top eight in the world, was designed in the early 1970s to help athletes go to school while training.

Only 32 per cent, however, attend school.

Kidd said the training and competition necessary to meet financing requirements make even part-time schooling almost impossible.

"The primary focus (is) performance," he said. "And even though athletes are on a full-time basis, the payments they get are far below minimum wage, far below what people in comparable positions get."

Kidd said athletes are expected to be ambassadors and are burdened not only with the expectations of their friends, family and countrymen, but of their sport.

"If they don't win or score high enough on the international list, their sport will be cut back and that's a terrible pressure to bear."

He said if the program is to be based on performance, it should at least pay athletes the same as top Canada Council artists. Otherwise, performance incentives should be removed and money allocated on the basis of need.

It is believed that sprinter Ben Johnson was earning nearly $500,000 a month in commercial contracts and appearance fees on top of his $650 stipend from Sport Canada before he lost it all — and an Olympic gold medal — when he failed a drug test during the 1988 Olympics at Seoul.

Somehow, the Baltimore Orioles find more and more ways to win.

They did it again Thursday night in California. Baltimore blew a five-run lead, got only half as many hits as the Angels and still beat them, 6-5.

The Orioles won their seventh straight game and lead the American League East by seven games, the largest margin in the major leagues.

Pinch hitter Jim Traber broke a 5-all tie in the eighth inning with a home run. Traber was batting for Randy Milligan, one of several moves Manager Frank Robinson made.

"Everything he has done this year has been right," Traber said.

In other AL games, Toronto beat Oakland 4-2 in 13 innings, New York downed Chicago 10-7, Milwaukee got past Kansas City 3-2 in 10 innings, Minnesota overcame Cleveland 9-8 and Texas routed Boston 9-1.

The Orioles led 5-0 in the fourth inning against Jim Abbott as Bob Melvin drove in three runs with a pair of singles and Mike Devereaux homered. Abbott, who beat Baltimore on April 24 for his first major-league victory, hurt himself by walking four batters and hitting another.

California, which got 14 hits to Baltimore's seven, chipped away and finally tied it at 5 in the seventh when Devon White singled and scored on Brian Downing's double.

On Wednesday night, Downing hit a home run in the ninth against Toronto that put California into extra innings. He almost rescued the Angels again in the ninth, but his two-out drive hit the top of the left-field fence and stayed in the park for a double.

Gregg Olson retired Chili Davis on a routine grounder for his 11th save. Mark Williamson, 5-2, was the winner.

Traber's fourth home run of the

Blue Jays 4, Athletics 2

Fred McGriff's two-run homer in the top of the 13th inning lifted Toronto and spoiled Rickey Henderson's return to Oakland.

Henderson, traded back home Wednesday by the Yankees, went 2-for-6 and scored a run.

George Bell singled with one out in the 13th off Jim Corsi, 0-1. McGriff's 15th home run came against Brian Snyder.

Xavier Hernandez, 1-0, pitched 2 1-3 innings for his first major-league victory. Dave Wells got two outs for his second save.

Twins 9, Indians 8

Tim Laudner drove in four runs and Dan Gladden's sacrifice fly capped a two-run rally in the ninth inning.

Minnesota trailed 8-3 when it scored four times in the seventh, three on Laudner's homer.

Gary Wayne, 2-0, pitched 2 2-3 perfect innings and Jeff Reardon got his 14th save. Jesse Orosco, 0-1, took the loss.

Yankees 10, White Sox 7

Don Mattingly hit two homers and drove in four runs, leading New York over Chicago.

The Yankees led 6-1 but then fell behind 7-6. Mattingly tied the score with a leadoff homer in the seventh against Shawn Hillegas, 3-7, and Tom Brookings singled home the go-ahead run later in the inning.

Brewers 3, Royals 2

Rob Deer's two-run homer tied the game in the bottom of the ninth inning and Greg Brock's RBI grounder won it in the 10th.

The Brewers were blanked on six hits for seven innings by Luis Aquino. Glenn Braggs doubled with one out in the ninth against Steve Farr, 0-3, and Deer followed with his 17th home run.

Rangers 9, Red Sox 1

Kevin Brown pitched a five-hitter and Geno Petralli again bashed Boston.

Brown, 6-4, pitched his fifth complete game in 14 starts.

Petralli went 2-for-3 and doubled to start a five-run fourth inning.

Scott Fletcher hit a two-run double in the fourth and Mike Smithson, 3-5, then hit Rafael Palmeiro with a pitch. Both benches emptied, although the players were kept apart.

Evert Will Play Wimbledon Despite Recent Obstacles

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The prospect of playing in another Wimbledon tournament has cured whatever ailed Chris Evert.

The three-time champion, who skipped the French Open because of a self-described lack of motivation and pulled out of a Wimbledon warm-up tournament because of an ear infection, has decided she will play the big one after all. Wimbledon gets underway next Monday.

It will be her 18th Wimbledon, and Evert has reached the semifinals in all but one of her previous appearances.

Evert was playing in the main women's warmup tournament in Eastbourne, England, but awoke Wednesday complaining of dizziness and nausea from an ear infection and saying the room spun whenever she stood up.

By Thursday, however, her condition had improved enough for Evert and her husband, Andy Mill, to leave for London.

"I'm feeling much better," Evert said. "I'll be on medication for at least another three days, but I'll definitely be playing at Wimbledon next week."

Meanwhile, several Americans battled their way through qualifying to reach the main draw and 17-year-old Michael Chang, the French Open champion, was handed a major challenge in the first round.

Chang, who won in France on slow clay courts two weeks ago, drew Bill Scanlon, a solid grass-court player.

Scanlon has twice reached the quarterfinals of a grass-court Grand Slam tournament. He was a semifinalist in the 1983 U.S. Open.

Chang, the first American man to win the French Open in 34 years, has never made it past the second round at Wimbledon.

Aaron Krickstein, the No. 13 seed, injured his elbow during practice and was uncertain if he would be ready for his first-round match against Francesco Cancellotti of Italy.

how this sort of thing can catch the public fancy." But three months later, on Aug. 26, 1939, NBC again televised a sporting event, this time a major league baseball game between the Cincinnati
Reds and Brooklyn Dodgers at Ebbets Field, with Red Barber announcing. Dunlop was more impressed. Dunlop was more im-

NEW YORK — On May 17, 1939,
Columbia played host to Princeton
in a baseball double-header at Baker
Field in New York. Princeton won both games, knocking Columbia out of contention for the Eastern baseball title.

Although not much was made of it at the time, the second game was significant for another reason: It was the first sporting event televised
in the United States.

NBC had a single camera perched on a 12-foot-high wooden stand on the third-base side of the diamond. It transmitted picture impulses of the game through a cable to a truck and from there to the 85th floor of the Empire State Building.

From there, the impulses were transmitted by NBC's experimental station, W2XBS, to viewers at Radio
City, Madison Square Garden, a few advertising agencies and the homes of pioneer set owners. At the time, fewer than 400 sets, all of them experimental, existed in the world.

crew of 16, cost NBC $3,000, a good sum in those days.

Bill Stern, the famous radio sportscaster, was the lone announcer. He opened by saying: "I'm not sure what it is we're doing here, but I certainly hope it turns out well for you people who are watching."

Stern, without benefit of a monitor, had no idea what was being seen. Actually, strikeouts were about all that the viewers could follow. The players looked like flies, except the outfielders, who couldn't
be seen at all.

Orrin E. Dunlop of the New York Times wrote: "It is difficult to see

athletes because the winning teams get the most money. A college team that goes to basketball's Final Four gets $1 million.

But it pales in comparison to the money professional teams make off
television.

The 28 National Football League teams this season will each get more than $17 million from television.

The 26 major league baseball teams will each make $9.9 million off national contracts with NBC and ABC. Beginning in 1990, they'll each make $16.2 million per season off
new contracts with CBS and ESPN, plus millions more off local
packages.

The New York Yankees, besides getting their share from the national packages, get a whopping $42 million per season from a new 12-year,
$500-million deal with the Madison
Square Garden network.

At those prices, some people have wondered why the cable network
didn't just buy the team.

Television is the main reason the average salary of a major league player is $513,730, and that 20 players make at least $2 million per year.

Without television, baseball players probably wouldn't make much more than surgeons, or U.S. presidents.

Old-time boxing promoter Mike Jacobs predicted in 1939 that someday television might generate $1 million for a major championship fight. People figured Jacobs had lost his senses.

But Jacobs knew what he was talking about. He just underestimated the possibilities.

When Sugar Ray Leonard and Thomas Hearns fought to a draw June 12 at Caesars Palace in Las

Las Vegas, the take from pay-per-view and closed-circuit television alone was more than $26 million, according to promoter Bob Arum.

A likely rematch would figure to generate considerably more.

And if the Super Bowl ever gets on pay-per-view? Some experts say the take could be in the $500-million range.

The NFL this year will enter the final season of its three-year deal with the three major networks and ESPN, a package that is worth a total of $1.5 billion.

In 1958, the Hughes Network paid
$200,000 for NFL rights. In 1962, CBS paid $1 million. And this season, the

TV Sports Has Come A Long Way

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

NEW YORK — On May 17, 1939,
Columbia played host to Princeton
in a baseball double-header at Baker
Field in New York. Princeton won both games, knocking Columbia out of contention for the Eastern baseball title.

Although not much was made of it
at the time, the second game was significant for another reason: It was the first sporting event televised
in the United States.

NBC had a single camera perched on a 12-foot-high wooden stand on the third-base side of the diamond. It transmitted picture impulses of the game through a cable to a truck and from there to the 85th floor of the Empire State Building.

From there, the impulses were transmitted by NBC's experimental station, W2XBS, to viewers at Radio
City, Madison Square Garden, a few
advertising agencies and the homes of pioneer set owners. At the time, fewer than 400 sets, all of them experimental, existed in the world.

The experiment, which involved a crew of 16, cost NBC $3,000, a good
sum in those days.

Bill Stern, the famous radio sportscaster, was the lone announcer. He opened by saying: "I'm not sure what it is we're doing here, but I certainly hope it turns out well for you people who are watching."

Stern, without benefit of a monitor, had no idea what was being seen. Actually, strikeouts were about all that the viewers could follow. The players looked like flies, except the outfielders, who couldn't
be seen at all.

Orrin E. Dunlop of the New York Times wrote: "It is difficult to see

athletes because the winning teams get the most money. A college team that goes to basketball's Final Four gets $1 million.

But it pales in comparison to the money professional teams make off
television.

The 28 National Football League teams this season will each get more than $17 million from television.

The 26 major league baseball teams will each make $9.9 million off national contracts with NBC and ABC. Beginning in 1990, they'll each make $16.2 million per season off
new contracts with CBS and ESPN, plus millions more off local packages.

The New York Yankees, besides
getting their share from the national packages, get a whopping $42 million per season from a new 12-year,
$500-million deal with the Madison
Square Garden network.

At those prices, some people have wondered why the cable network
didn't just buy the team.

Television is the main reason the average salary of a major league player is $513,730

A Welcome Banner greeted Rickey Henderson in his return to the Oakland Athletics

Warm Welcome For Henderson On His Return To The Athletics

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OAKLAND, Calif. — The Toronto Blue Jays spoiled Rickey Henderson's welcome-home party, but the guest of honor was still a hit.

Now Henderson wants to stick around long enough to earn a "gift": a World Series ring or two. Five years away from his hometown team taught him the importance of winning, he says.

"I've changed a lot in terms of learning about the game, what winning is all about, and wanting to win so bad," he said after going 2-for-6 in Oakland's 4-2, 13-inning loss to the Blue Jays Thursday night.

"Any ballplayer goes out to achieve a World Series ring. That's the ultimate thing. When you haven't achieved that goal, it makes a bigger burn inside of you."

The new, old Athletic did everything he was supposed to do except produce a victory in his first game for Oakland since being traded to the New York Yankees in 1984.

He scored the first A's run in the third inning on a flying head-first slide, singled to set up the second run in the fifth, and beat out a chopper to put the potential winning run in scoring position in the 12th. He also made an outstanding backhanded grab of Ernie Whitt's deep fly to left in the 10th.

Not a bad day for a guy who arrived at the ballpark straight from the airport and had an unexpected case of the jitters as he jogged out to left field to start the game.

"It felt like the first time I got to the major leagues," Henderson related afterward. "When I got to the outfield I was telling myself, 'Why are you so nervous? You've been playing in the majors for a long time.'"

The crowd of 21,418 fans at the twilight game greeted him warmly with a standing ovation and two welcome signs draped over the railing in left. They cheered when he bounced to the mound leading off in the first. They even cheered when he was caught stealing in a rundown in the fifth.

The first-day impact of the trade wasn't all positive. Brian Snyder, one of two pitchers recalled from the minors to replace departed relievers Greg Cadaret and Eric Plunk, gave up the game-winning homer to Fred McGriff, the first major-league hitter he'd faced in four years. But the A's were clearly pleased with Henderson's contributions and attitude.

"Rickey had to be a little short physically, getting right off the plane," Oakland manager Tony La Russa said. "But he didn't say anything and he played real well. He hit, he played defense and he ran well. He did a heck of a job on that catch."

The next question is how long the A's can hang onto Henderson, who will be a free agent after this season if he doesn't agree to a new contract.

He brushed off talk of his reported demand for $8.6 million over three years from the Yankees, saying he wants to stay in Oakland and expects no insurmountable contract problems.

Neither does General Manager Sandy Alderson, who dealt Henderson away five years ago because the then-rebuilding team couldn't afford him.

"Let me emphasize that we did not make this trade to get us through the 1989 season," Alderson said. "We expect and hope that we will be able to keep Rickey here for a very long time in the future."

Henderson's combination of power and speed will come in especially handy during the absence of the injured Jose Canseco. But Alderson made the first overtures for Henderson during the winter meetings in the belief that the 30-year-old is greatly matured from his sometimes troublesome first tenure in Oakland.

The A's veterans huddled after hearing rumors of the deal a week ago, and seem unanimously in favor of it.

"He's an offensive machine," said Dave Stewart, the team's other Oakland native, who knew Henderson as a child. "Any guy that does the things Rickey creates on base can be nothing but a positive impact."

"He's a guy that's full of pride, and he plays with heart. I can't believe the stuff I read about him. I like everything about the way he plays the game."

Slaney Tired Of Drug Use By Competitors In Track

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Mary Slaney, the premier women's distance runner in United States history, says that competing against drug users "is frustrating and makes me very angry."

"But when you win, you feel you've accomplished something. ... You've reached a goal that you've set for yourself ... and it makes it one thousand times more meaningful."

Still, Slaney, the 1983 world champion at 1,500 meters and 3,000 meters, the world record-holder in the mile and the American record-holder at all distances from 800 meters to 10,000 meters, would prefer competing against drug-free runners.

Despite the recent crackdown on drug usage, highlighted by the Ben Johnson case, many track and field athletes still are using the banned substances, Slaney said.

"I like the fact that people are naming names," she said, referring in part to the current Canadian drug inquiry, triggered by Johnson being stripped of his gold medal and world-record clocking and being suspended for two years after testing positive for anabolic steroids in last year's Olympics.

"I haven't named names because I have no proof," Slaney said. "But I think I can tell when I look at someone and see how they've grown whether they've been on drugs."

Slaney, 30, said she was only 19 when she was approached by track coach Chuck DeBus about taking drugs.

"He said I wouldn't be able to perform internationally if I didn't take drugs," Slaney said Thursday during a press conference for Saturday's L'eggs Mini Marathon. "He was trying to recruit me for the (Los Angeles) Naturite Track Club."

Mary Slaney

Saying she was "horrified" at DeBus' proposal, Slaney said, "I didn't believe in his methods and I didn't want to participate in his system. I said I can't do that."

"At that time and now, I don't believe in the drug abuse problem," Slaney said. "I haven't even touched on my potential naturally, so why should I use them?"

Slaney said that at the time, she was aware that athletes were trying to enhance performance with drugs, "but I thought it was only the Eastern Bloc countries."

"He was saying that if we wanted to be as good as them, we had to take them," Slaney said of DeBus, who will have a hearing July 11 in Los Angeles on allegations by three athletes that he was providing them with drugs.

The hearing will be conducted by a three-member panel of The Athletics Congress, the national governing body for the sport.

One athlete is Diane Williams, the 1987 national champion in the women's 100-meter dash, the 1987 Pan American Games silver medalist in the 100 and a gold medalist in the 1984 Olympics for the 400-meter relay.

Williams admitted this year she tested positive for anabolic steroids in the 1984 U.S. Olympic Trials and took drugs before the 1984 Los Angeles Games.

She said she was introduced to steroids by DeBus, who has coached many of the nation's leading women track and field athletes.

DeBus has denied the allegation. "I am vehemently against the use of all banned substances," he said.

The identity of the other two athletes isn't known.

Slaney said that, in 1980, she again was approached about taking drugs, by someone she would not identify.

"I turned down the offer," Slaney said. "I think people believe if you are going to get better, this is what you have to do."

Since then, she has had no other offers, Slaney said.

"People know where I stand," she said. "I have made that very clear." However, her possible association with drugs did not end with the second offer.

"A number of people have accused me of taking drugs because I was so much better than everyone else," Slaney said.

Slaney said although she never has won an Olympic medal, she is extremely proud of all her other accomplishments.

 If you elect to play in a suit slam, your fate might hinge on the distribution of the trump suit. Therefore, with all suits adequately stopped and possible alternative sources of tricks, many experts will choose the no trump slam over a suit contract, since it might offer more than one chance. This hand, from an international tournament in Europe, illustrates the point.

The fate of those pairs who reached six clubs rested on the opening lead. Where a spade was led, East won the ace and declarer eventually went down when he took the percentage play in the trump suit by finessing for the queen. Several pairs, however, reached six no trump on an auction such as the above. This contract offered far better odds.

Where the opening lead was a heart, declarer could claim 12 tricks. That ran round to the ten, after which declarer led a heart to the queen before offering up the king of spades for sacrifice. That meant one spade trick, four hearts, five diamonds and two clubs.

With a spade opening lead, some Easts won the ace and shifted to a diamond. Declarer won the king performance, then cashed the queen of spades in the hope of dropping the jack. When that didn't materialize, declarer tried the ace-king of clubs in the hope of felling the queen. That, too, came to naught, but declarer still had a high card up his sleeve. He played off the queen of hearts and cashed his four diamonds, on which he discarded his four black-suit losers. A finesse of the ten of hearts yielded the fulfilling trick in that suit and the slam. After a diamond lead, the play goes much like the above, except that entry considerations mean declarer has to give up his extra chance in spades and rely on the club drop or heart finesse.

Rebels' Leader, Angola Head Agree To Cease-Fire

By Michael Goldsmith
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GBADOLITE, Zaire — The leader of U.S.-backed rebels in Angola and the nation's Marxist president have sealed with a handshake an accord to end their 14-year civil war.

"I was not born to make war at all costs. Even if I have made war until now for precise reasons — and even if these reasons cease to exist — I will always remain, in my skin, a citizen of Angola," rebel leader Jonas Savimbi told reporters Thursday after the cease-fire was announced.

The cease-fire, which goes into effect midnight Saturday, left details of the peace agreement to be worked out in later negotiations between Savimbi and President Eduardo dos Santos, who made no public comment.

"I want to believe that going by what took place at Gbadolite, there is no doubt at all that the reconciliation is real. It is genuine," said President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia, who also took part in the summit.

Kaunda said as part of the agreement that Savimbi will go into foreign exile. No site was immediately disclosed.

President Moussa Traore, president of Mali and chairman of the Organization of African Unity, announced the cease-fire at a news conference in Gbadolite.

The meeting was the first between dos Santos and Savimbi since civil war broke out in 1975 shortly after the former Portuguese colony gained independence. There have been ten of thousands of casualties since the conflict began.

Savimbi heads the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola, known as UNITA, which has fought to share power with dos Santos' Popular Liberation Movement of Angola. The peace agreement was called the Declaration of Gbadolite, after President Mobutu Sese Soko's hometown and the palatial site of the summit of the OAU, 400 miles northeast of Kinshasa, the capital.

The agreement came after a U.S.-brokered regional peace accord was signed in New York in December. South Africa, which backed Savimbi, agreed then to grant independence to Namibia and halt aid to UNITA in exchange for the withdrawal of 50,000 Cuban troops backing dos Santos' government.

Angola, Cuba and South Africa signed the accord. UNITA was not a party to the agreement.

The summit adopted an eight-point declaration, drafted by Mobutu and accepted by Dos Santos and Savimbi. Most of the 20 African leaders who attended the one-day conference left for home immediately after the pact was announced.

Sources close to the negotiations said the agreement was largely the work of Mobutu.

In Washington, the assistant secretary of state for African affairs, Herman Cohen, said Thursday that the United States "helped develop" the Zaire summit.

Mali's president, head of the OAU, was quoted as saying in a closing speech: "This brotherly handshake between Dr. Jonas Savimbi and President dos Santos symbolizes the end of civil war in Angola, which will open up a new era ... devoted to economic and social development."

Angola, twice the size of Texas with only 8 million people, has oil, diamonds, minerals and fertile agricultural land, but the civil war has seriously disrupted the economy.

It was not clear what role Savimbi himself would play in the reconciliation process and elections, which are expected in two years.

Kaunda said Savimbi also promised to abide by a previous agreement to personally stay out of peace negotiations, according to the Portuguese news agency LUSA.

Savimbi agreed last month he would not demand a role in any transitional government on condition democratic elections are held within two years.

For his part, dos Santos agreed to "the formation of a government of national unity, though a policy of national reconciliation, a comprehensive amnesty program, and the reintegration of UNITA members and all other Angolans outside the present political system into the mainstream, including the armed forces," according to the semi-official Zimbabwe Inter-African News Agency.

Before leaving Angola earlier Thursday, dos Santos commuted the death sentences of 50 rebels, Angola's official ANGOP news agency reported. On Wednesday, the government released 700 rebel prisoners who accepted an amnesty, it said.

A commission headed by Zaire's president will be set up to supervise the national reconciliation in Angola. It will also reportedly include Congo and Gabon.

There was no immediate word on where and when the national reconciliation talks would begin and who would participate.

Most of Savimbi's support comes from the rural southern area. The northern city and coastal area form Dos Santos' power base.

Cuban Drug Probe Nets 3 Officers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MEXICO CITY — Three high-ranking Cuban military officers were arrested in a drug investigation ordered by President Fidel Castro after the United States said his country helps drug traffickers, the official Cuban news agency said.

Prensa Latina added that Cuba is ready to take "drastic measures" against drug smugglers, including shooting down suspected airplanes using Cuban airspace.

In an unusually detailed report Thursday, the agency praised the government for "uprooting the evil" of drug trafficking. It also acknowledged that Cuba is not immune from a problem that afflicts much of the hemisphere.

The investigation, undertaken in April, resulted in the June 12 arrest of two generals and a colonel accused of acting as middlemen for a Colombian cocaine cartel based in Medellin.

Prensa Latina said Castro ordered the investigation because the U.S. charges added weight to information from "friends of Cuba" that "drug traffickers could count on the cooperation of Cuban officials."

"Even though it is habitual in the United States to give room to all sorts of slanders against the Cuban revolution, the coincidences of the past several months caught the attention of President Fidel Castro," Prensa Latina said.

Chinese Intellectual Leader Said Now Safe In Hong Kong

By John Pomfret
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HONG KONG — A leader of an illegal organization for intellectuals in China has been smuggled to Hong Kong as part of a campaign to save pro-democracy activists from a crackdown in Beijing, student activists said today.

They said more dissidents and Chinese students who led the movement for freedom were expected to arrive shortly in Hong Kong from Communist China. One dissident already has gone to the United States.

Yan Jiaqi and his wife, Gao Gao, came to Hong Kong on Tuesday from China, said the students, who spoke on condition of anonymity. They said the couple were planning to go to the United States by way of Western Europe.

One Hong Kong student said he could release no details of the escape other than to say they did not arrive by train or plane.

"There are many ways to leave China," he said.

He said Yan and his wife "were in a safe place" but he refused to specify where.

On Thursday, another Chinese dissident, Liu Binyan, speaking in Hong Kong, joked that Yan and his wife "were even in a safer place than I am." Liu came to Hong Kong from the United States on the invitation of the Hong Kong Journalists Association.

As a leader of the Beijing Independent Intellectuals Association, Yan faced certain arrest in China. The organization was formed in May and played an important role in the movement for freedom. The Chinese government banned it and other independent organizations when martial law began in Beijing May 20.

Since June 3, when the Chinese army invaded Beijing, gunning down unarmed citizens, China has moved to crush the freedom movement. More than 1,600 have been arrested since early June and so far this week 27 people have been executed.

The Chinese government also has tightened its borders to prevent activists from fleeing. The state press has reported participants in the movement have been arrested boarding planes and trains in attempts to leave Beijing.

Yan was aided in his escape by Hong Kong students who belong to the Committee for the Advancement of Democracy in China, a New York-based dissident organization.

An official of the group in New York said the organization is dedicated to helping Chinese pro-democracy activists flee the mainland.

Another leading dissident, Su Shaozhi, arrived in the United States on Thursday and went to live with his brother in Chicago. But he refused to tell U.S. reporters how he left China.

Su headed the Research Institute of Marxist Thought until 1987 when he was removed from his post during a campaign to battle "bourgeois liberalization," or Western liberal thought.

Su was not active in the recent protests for freedom. But he had signed an open letter earlier this year calling for the release of political prisoners including Wei Jingsheng, who was jailed in 1979 for calling for political change in China.

He also advocated sweeping reforms of China's Communist system.

Yan, however, did participate in the protests.

He was a drafter of an essay criticizing senior leader Deng Xiaoping and worked to organize intellectuals.

Dodgers' Lasorda Plays Corn Ball

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Baseball manager Tommy Lasorda traded his Los Angeles Dodger blue for bib overalls, but kept within camera range as he taped the "Hee Haw" TV show.

Lasorda, enjoying a day off, stood in the famous "Hee Haw" cornfield Thursday in a studio at the Grand Ole Opry House. His segments on the syndicated country music-humor show will be aired this fall. Lasorda posed for pictures with "Hee Haw" stars Roy Clark and Minnie Pearl, saying he positioned himself between the two on advice given to him years ago by St. Louis Cardinals' great Stan Musial.

"He said always get in the middle because that way they can't cut you out," Lasorda said.

Paramount Seeks Time Suit Dismissal On Takeover Bid

By Skip Wollenberg
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Paramount Communications Inc. asked a federal court on Thursday to dismiss a lawsuit filed by Time Inc. in an effort to thwart Paramount's hostile $10.7 billion takeover bid.

At the same time, Paramount asked the U.S. District Court here to block Time's $14 billion tender offer for Warner Communications Inc.

The legal salvo was the latest in a series of increasingly bitter exchanges between Paramount and the allied Time and Warner, which are locked in a fight to create one of the world's largest communications companies.

On Wednesday, Paramount asked the Delaware Chancery Court to block the Time bid for Warner. A hearing on that case was set for July 11.

In its response to Time's suit in federal court here, Paramount fought suggestions that its takeover of Time would damage the journalistic integrity and independence of Time's publications.

It said Time has created some problems of integrity by launching its bid for Warner and failing to disclose more about the past legal problems of several present and former Warner executives.

Time and Warner called Paramount's filing an "act of desperation."

In consolidated trading on the New York Stock Exchange, Time fell $1.87 1/2 a share to $155.37 1/2, Warner rose 62 1/2 cents a share to $59.12 1/2, and Paramount lost 75 cents a share to $58.50.

Time had agreed in March to merge with Warner in a stock swap, but amended that plan last week to provide for a $70-a-share tender offer for Warner.

In announcing the new deal, Time rejected Paramount's $175-a-share offer for all of Time's shares and filed suit in U.S. District Court in New York to block Paramount from proceeding with its offer. It said Paramount had made false and misleading statements in pursuing Time.

In response, Paramount claimed in its suit Thursday that Time had made "misleading statements and material omissions designed to deceive Time stockholders" in its offer for Warner.

Nelson Cowboy Network

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Known for his crooning cowboy tunes, singer-songwriter Willie Nelson has turned his fondness for the American Wild West into a broadcasting network he can call his own.

The Cowboy Television Network, which Nelson developed with Austin entrepreneur Edward Yi, will air movies, series, music videos, live music shows, specials, and historical vignettes in the United States and several other countries.

The network's 24-hour programming, to start in late summer or early fall, will be designed by Nelson and associate Mack Long, according to a news release Thursday from Nelson and Yi.

It said that by agreeing to the deal with Warner, Time "is forcing upon its shareholders a transaction whereby Time's 'integrity' and financial future will fall under the control of Warner, whose executives in the recent past have been the subject of criminal investigation, prosecution and in some cases conviction."

Among other things, Paramount cited the 1977 federal investigation into the operations of the Westchester Premier Theater. Two Warner executives pleaded guilty and a third was convicted on charges in connection with Warner's purchase of shares in the theater. Paramount noted that Warner Chairman Steven J. Ross was involved in the investigation. Ross, however, was never charged in the case.

Casino Operators Ponder Ruling On Drunk Gamblers

By Joyce A. Venezia
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — A federal judge's ruling that casinos may be held liable for money lost by drunk gamblers could give customers an easy way to reclaim large gambling losses, casino executives said.

"Every idiot in the world will be suing us," Roger Wagner, the Claridge Casino Hotel president, said Thursday after U.S. District Judge Mitchell Cohen's ruling.

Casino operators, like tavern owners, have a responsibility to their customers, the judge wrote in his decision.

"Maybe we have to put Breathalyzers at the door," Wagner said, only half joking.

Nevada casino executives were concerned about the judge's decision, too.

"Are they suggesting that we administer a drug-alcohol test to a patron before we let him gamble?" said Roy Galylean, president of the Union Plaza Hotel and Casino in Las Vegas.

But some casino executives believe the decision reinforces what the gaming halls already do.

Jim Wise, spokesman for Trop World Casino and Entertainment Resort, said: "The judge uses such terms as 'obviously' and 'visibly' intoxicated. We already follow those guidelines. Anyone in that state is neither allowed more alcoholic beverages or the opportunity to gamble."

Stephen Hyde, chief executive for Donald Trump's two casinos in Atlantic City, said, "It is not in our best interests to have a drunk sitting at a gaming table making a fool of himself."

Trump's casinos will stop serving an intoxicated customer, he said.

Wagner said cocktail waitresses who stroll casino floors will ask customers if they want any complimentary coffee, juice or soda. "We do not solicit free alcoholic beverages," he said. "But if a customer says he wants a beer instead of juice, he can have it."

"Casinos are the best whipping boy. They're so visible and exciting," he said. "You know, Johnson & Johnson makes drugs. If someone took too many, should they be held accountable?"

Wise said many gamblers will not drink alcoholic beverages "because it dilutes the decision-making process."

Lois Szabo of New Brunswick, sipping a pina coloda at Trump Plaza Hotel and Casino Thursday, concurred. She said she and most casino customers "are more interested in gambling than drinking. You get so caught up in the slots that you actually forget to take a drink."

But some customers might take advantage of the decision "because some people would do anything to sue," Ms. Szabo said. "Personally, everybody should be able to control themselves with liquor. When some people drink excessively, they should be responsible for their own actions."

The judge's decision, issued Wednesday, stemmed from a lawsuit between a casino and a customer who lost $200,000. Shmuel Aboud of New York said casino officials pled him with free alcohol and painkillers for his aching back.

The ruling will allow a court case to continue toward a finding of whether the casino was responsible for Aboud's losses.

Gus Sunday of Philadelphia, who visits Atlantic City's casinos about twice a month, said he has never seen a fellow gambler intoxicated.

"Anybody who would get drunk has his own problems. It's not the casino's problem," he said. "People who come to Atlantic City are not kids. They should have enough sense to know when to say no."

'Batman' Problems

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — Some moviegoers left a special showing of "Batman" believing the Joker had the last laugh.

One hour into a sneak preview of the much-publicized film, spectators were driven batty when the movie played out of sequence.

Right off the bat, members of the crowd rushed into the lobby of the Warner Theater and demanded that the show be stopped until the problem was fixed.

When theater officials investigated, they found their copy of the seven-reel movie had two reel 5s and no reel 4.

Theater officials said they'll try to correct the problem for the weekend's showings, but they're not sure if they can locate the missing reel in time. "Batman" opens in 2,100 North American theaters tonight.

"They just kept showing the ending," one spectator said after the theater handed out rainchecks to the disappointed crowd. "The end was great. The middle, we don't know."

TV Networks Look For Help In Battle Over Rerun Rights

By Matt Yancey
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The three major TV networks, contending the tradition of free television is threatened, asked Congress on Thursday to side with them in a war against Hollywood studios over lucrative syndication rights to reruns of popular shows.

The top executives of CBS, ABC and NBC warned that unless the rules are changed so they can get in on the syndication of such shows as "Jeopardy" and "Cheers" viewers may have to start paying for the World Series, Olympics and Super Bowl on TV.

"At any point in time, the cable systems can take away the World Series," Laurence A. Tisch, president of CBS Inc., told the Senate Commerce Committee's communications subcommittee.

"If cable should bid for the Super Bowl, I don't think we could keep it," Tisch said. "We are gradually eroding the base of free television."

"You can only afford to lose so much money on prestige," echoed NBC President Robert C. Wright, who said his network loses money on news and sports programming. "The entertainment shows pay the bills."

Wright said his network was forced to package its successful bid for coverage of the 1992 Olympics so that a portion of the programming will be aired only on pay cable channels.

"We couldn't afford to bid without generating some additional revenues," he said.

At issue is a regulation issued in the 1970s by the Federal Communications Commission forbidding networks from having any ownership in programming they did not produce or from selling them to independent TV stations for syndicated reruns.

The FCC, as well as the Federal Trade Commission and Justice Department, called for repeal of the so-called Financial Interest and Syndication Rule in 1983 as an antiquated regulatory practice.

But the effort stalled after the Hollywood studios appealed for help to President Reagan, a former actor. The networks signed a consent decree allowing them to produce five hours of programs a week. The consent decree expires in 1990 and the networks will be allowed to produce all their programs again.

But the networks also want a piece of the syndication market, where hit shows are worth hundreds of millions of dollars.

The network executives, citing the growth of cable systems now reaching into 54 percent of the nation's households and an average 27 channels that they offer, said the three networks' combined share of the prime-time audience has dropped from 90 percent in 1970 to 67 percent last season.

That has put a cap on network advertising revenues, said Thomas S. Murphy, chairman of Capital Cities-ABC Inc.

"This change is not cyclical," Murphy said. "We have experienced a permanent, structural change in the media market, and the audience will not be recaptured."

Several senators expressed skepticism at the networks' plight.

"Any antitrust lawyer would say that for three companies to have 70 percent of the market is still a monopoly," said Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C.

Responding to the network executives' claim that cable systems are now able to outbid them for sports programming, Hollings noted that ABC has a large ownership interest in ESPN, the premier cable TV sports channel.

Jack Valenti, Hollywood's chief lobbyist as president of the Motion Picture Association of America, said repealing the financial interest and syndication regulations would turn "the single most powerful emotional, social and political force in all the land" over to three corporate network executives.

Wall Street Journal Celebrates 100 Years

By Bart Ziegler

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The Wall Street Journal, the nation's first national newspaper and a fixture in corporate America, began life 100 years ago as a 2-cent broadsheet handdelivered in lower Manhattan's business district to a few hundred readers.

As it celebrates its centennial with a special edition Friday, the Journal can boast a readership of 2 million, making it the nation's largest newspaper, and a reputation as the daily diary of capitalism.

"It's given us a common language with regard to how we look at everything from markets to international trade," observed Everette Dennis, director of the Gannett Center for Media Studies in New York.

But even as the paper has grown and adjusted to the modern world — adding graphics and extra feature sections — its virtual monopoly on financial news eroded in recent years.

A series of birthday bashes held this week cannot obscure the challenges the paper faces as it heads into its second century: Circulation has slipped, advertising revenue is down and new competition has emerged for both readers and ad dollars.

"It still is by far the strongest and most profitable newspaper franchise in the country," said John Morton, a media industry analyst with Lynch, Jones & Ryan in Washington. "But it's not as strong and not as profitable as it used to be."

Advertising linage peaked in 1983 and has fallen by 7.5 percent since, according to the Journal's figures. Circulation hit a high of 2.1 million at the end of 1983, but since then dropped to about 1.95 million. Also in the last few years, The

New York Times launched a national edition, USA Today had its nationwide rollout and most metropolitan newspapers beefed up their business coverage, as did the broadcast networks and cable television.

Most of the ad decline stemmed from advertising cutbacks by banks and financial institutions — the Journal's biggest source of ads, said Kenneth Burenga, general manager of the Journal and its parent, Dow Jones & Co. Inc.

Financial advertising began to slip long before the stock market crash of October 1987, due to Wall Street mergers that reduced the number of investment houses, Burenga said.

Circulation was crimped by a reduction in the number of middle managers and executives — the paper's prime readers — in the wave of mergers, takeovers and corporate restructurings of the 1980s, Burenga said.

The Journal struck back by adding a third section last fall and starting special columns on real estate, media, marketing, law, technology and other topics. It also upgraded its coverage of the arts. focus. Norman Pearlstine, the Journal's managing editor, disagrees.

"We've always felt that while we are a business newspaper, that our readers have interests in more than just business," he said.

Pearlstine views the broader coverage as another step in the Journal's evolution from a paper serving Wall Street traders to a national daily.

The Journal began on July 8, 1889, as a four-page afternoon paper. The first edition included brief reports on the New York, Boston and Philadelphia stock exchanges and

Much of the shape of today's Journal is the work of the late Bernard "Barney" Kilgore, the newspaper's legendary former managing editor who began his 38-year Journal career in 1929.

Under Kilgore, the paper launched its trademark front-page feature stories — called leaders — and its in-depth reports, along with stories about trends and issues shaping the business world and society.

Kilgore stressed that business stories need not be written in the arcane language of business. "Don't write banking stories for bankers," he told reporters. "Write for the banks' customers."

The Journal is unusual in many ways: Although it has run an occasional photograph, it prefers to illustrate stories with drawings, and it is one of the few big papers to eschew the color explosion.

Its front-page design of six vertical columns is virtually cast in stone. Notable exceptions were on Oct. 20, 1987, the day after the Black Monday stock market crash, and the day after the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor.

Pearlstine says highlights of his 20 years at the paper include the two Pulitzer Prizes the Journal won last year, increasing to 13 the number of Pulitzer prizes it has been awarded.

The nadir, he said, was the scandal involving former Journal reporter R. Foster Winans, who was sentenced to 18 months in prison in 1985 for securities fraud.

Winans was convicted of tipping stock traders to the contents of the Wall Street column he wrote for the paper before it appeared in print. In exchange, Winans received a share of any profit they made from market-affecting news.

Pearlstine credited the Journal's thorough coverage of the scandal for restoring the paper's credibility.

Journal executives and industry analysts say the Journal's circulation and advertising setbacks are temporary.

"They've had these kinds of problems before, and once the advertising economy gets through these things, the Journal will once more prosper," said Morton.

Shortly After Delivery, Most Direct Mail Will Have Already Reached Its Target.

They promised your message would make it through the front door and they were absolutely right. Through the front door, down the hall and whammo, right smack into the old round file. Unopened, unread and unfortunately, totally ineffective.

Instead of being the exception, this scenario is more like the rule. According to a 1988 study by The Gordon S. Black Corporation, an independent Washington, D.C. media and opinion research firm, of the Greenville/Pitt County adults who report receiving some direct mail literature within a one-week period, 16% throw it away while less than one in five read it thoroughly.

It all comes down to how you define the term, "target customer." If it's a living, breathing, spending human being, then perhaps your advertising dollars should go into something that's more effective in reaching them. Namely, The Daily Reflector. With a paid circulation of 18,300 Monday through Friday and 20,800 on Sundays, let The Reflector work for you. The Daily Reflector reaches 74% of the Greenville/Pitt County market weekly.

Most importantly, it reaches them at their request! That means you not only have a better chance of getting their attention, you have a better chance of holding it. Think about it - people paying to read your message at their convenience! Considering all the value you get with The Daily Reflector, don't risk trashing your advertising dollars.
