Fish Litter The Shores Of Bond Creek Tributary

By J. Ward Best
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

AURORA — This summer's fish death toll along the Pamlico River continues to mount. This weekend residents along Bond Creek, a previously untouched tributary of the Pamlico, noticed menhaden and larger fish washing up on shore. State officials have yet to estimate the number of fish killed, but guess "several thousand" have died as a result of poor water quality.

"There were lots of flounder . . . and thousands of tiny menhaden," said Darnell Smith, an area resident.

Mrs. Smith also sited perch, croaker and eels struggling in the water. Bond Creek flows into South Creek, a large tributary near the mouth of the Pamlico River.

Mrs. Smith, who has lived along Bond Creek for the past 10 years, said she has never seen dead fish floating in the waters behind her house. She said Sunday she could not count the number of dead fish she saw.

"It was a real eerie feeling," Mrs. Smith said. "It felt like death was all around."

Scientists at the North Carolina Division of Marine Fisheries in Washington, N.C. attribute the most recent fish kill to either a "salt wedge," which pushed brackish water upstream from the Pamlico Sound, or an algae bloom.

Jess Hawkins, biologist supervisor with the Division of Marine Fisheries, said the Pamlico Environmental Response Team noticed two unusual conditions in Bond Creek during its visit Sunday. PERT found confirmation of a salt wedge and areas of high salinity which could have caused an algae bloom in the creek.

"Right now we've got indications that an algae bloom was going on," Hawkins said.

The death of salt water and salt resistant fish such as flounder and eels makes the salt wedge theory seem implausible to Mrs. Smith. "When you can kill an eel you're really doing something," Mrs. Smith said.

Soviet Sub Catches Fire

By Doug Mellgren
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OSLO, Norway — Billowing smoke, a Soviet nuclear submarine limped toward port today after a reactor malfunction caused a fire aboard.

No casualties or radiation leaks were reported aboard the vessel, which was of a class built in the 1960s to carry nuclear-tipped cruise missiles.

The Echo II class submarine was off northern Norway when the malfunction occurred. Officials said the reactor was shut down and the submarine was heading east for the Soviet naval base in Murmansk under diesel power.

A Norwegian Northern Defense Command spokesman said the submarine, with both nuclear and conventional power, apparently caught fire at about 5 a.m. in the Norwegian Sea.

"We received a telex from Soviet Murmansk rescue central . . . at about 9:45 a.m. that said the situation was under control, the crew was in good shape and that there was no danger of a radiation leak," Maj. Arne Skjaerpe said by telephone.

The submarine was first spotted by Norwegian aircraft 70 northwest of South Island, which is part of the northern province of Finnmark.

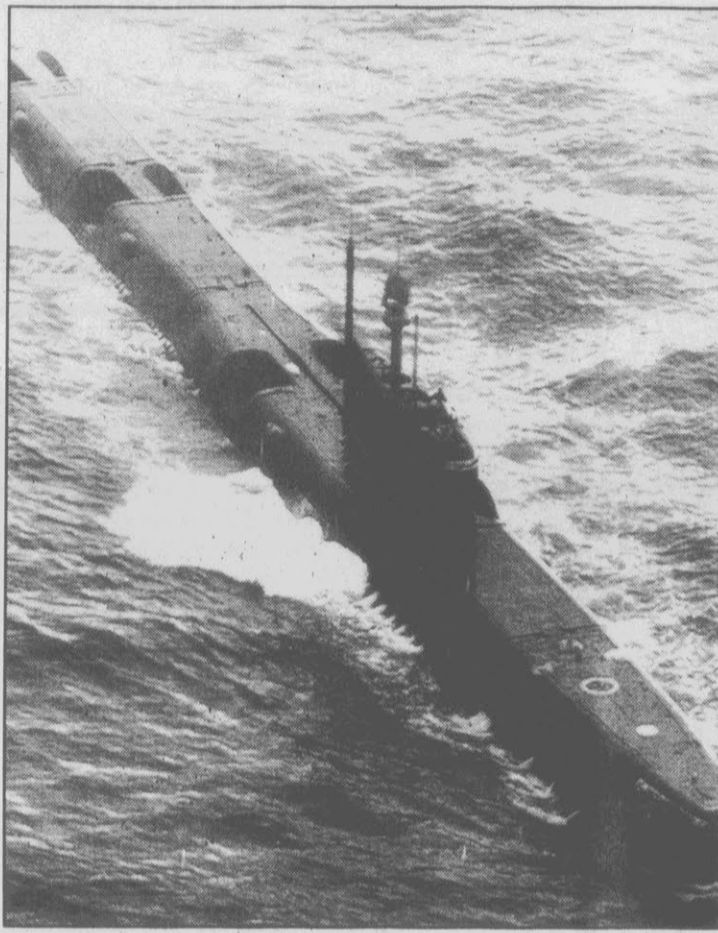

The vessel's crew fired a rocket and waved off a Norwegian Sea King rescue helicopter to indicate it did not want civilian help, said Terje B. Lien, an official at the Norway Rescue Coordination Center at Bodoe.

The Echo II class, from the early 1960s, is nuclear-powered and normally carries nuclear weapons.

The authoritative British handbook "Jane's Fighting Ships" said Echo II submarines are 380 feet long, have crews of 90 and eight missile silos built for cruise missiles. The reference says the vessels have two nuclear reactors and two steam turbines.

"It was a malfunction in the main power plant," the official Soviet

Court OKs Death Penalty For Teens

By Richard Carelli
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — States are free to impose the death penalty for murderers who committed their crimes while age 16 and 17, the Supreme Court ruled today. Separately, the court ruled that the Constitution does not categorically prohibit the execution of mentally retarded killers.

But in splintered voting in a Texas case, the court said sentencing juries and judges must be allowed to take into consideration a murder defendant's mental retardation.

Ruling in juvenile-killing cases, the judges voted 5-4 that the death penalty for older juvenile killers does not violate the Constitution's ban on "cruel and unusual punishment." The ruling could affect about 25 of the some 2,200 death row inmates across the nation.

An eagerly anticipated decision on abortions, Webster vs. Reproductive Health Services, was not announced today.

The court also meets on Thursday, which is the last day of the term. If the Webster decision does not come down Thursday, the court could order a re-hearing in the term beginning the first Monday in October.

In the juvenile-killer decision, the court upheld the death sentences of two young killers in Missouri and Kentucky. They were 16 and 17, respectively, when they committed their crimes.

In the decision on the death penalty for juveniles, Justice Antonin Scalia wrote for the court that no na-

Oil Spills Foul Coastlines

By Kevin Galvin
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEWPORT, R.I. — Nearly half a million gallons of oil from a grounded tanker closed beaches and claimed its first wildlife victims, and hundreds of people worked to clean up spills in five states.

Beaches were ordered closed today in Rhode Island, and shellfishing was banned off the coast.

An undetermined number of oil-covered small lobsters and several birds have been found dead, state and federal environmental officials said.

Since lobsters, flounders, cod and haddock — important to the region's fishing industry — are now laying their eggs, it is the "worst possible time to experience an oil spill," said Kenneth Sherman of the National Marine Fisheries Service. Fish can swim away from the oil slick, but larvae do not have that mobility, he said.

The Greek-licensed tanker World Prodigy struck Bretton Reef at the mouth of Narragansett Bay on Friday. Gov. Edward DiPrete said the captain, Iakovis Georgudis, admitted he failed to wait for a pilot and mistakenly changed course, sending the ship toward rocks.

Results of drug tests on Georgudis and a mate whose name was not immediately available were expected by late today, although the Coast Guard said drugs or alcohol were not believed factors in the accident.

A federal inquiry into the accident would be convened Tuesday, Coast Guard Adm. Richard Rybacki said. State Attorney General James E. O'Neil said he hoped to learn if Georgudis violated state law by approaching too near the bay without a pilot.

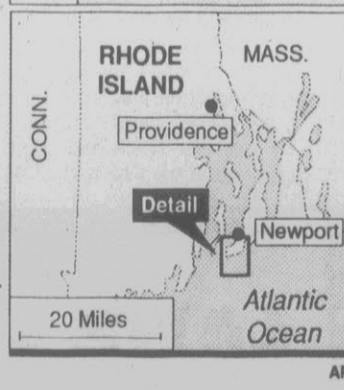

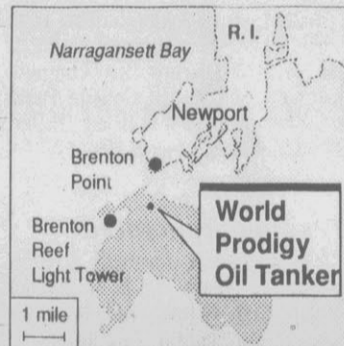

Elsewhere, contractors cleaning up a spill from a Uruguayan tanker grounded in the Delaware River have hired 255 employees. The state of Delaware also agreed to provide 300 National Guardsmen to help remove thousands of gallons of heavy fuel oil that leaked onto beaches in Delaware, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

The tanker, refloated Sunday, was carrying 18 million gallons of heating oil. Officials had no estimate of the severity of Saturday's spill, saying they were unable to account for at least 800,000 gallons, including an undetermined amount that mixed with water and remained in the tanker.

Delaware wildlife officials worked to protect Pea Patch Island, home to several species of nesting shorebirds. Crews laid 1,700 feet of oil-retaining booms along the island, one of the mid-Atlantic's largest rookeries. One oil-covered duckling died.

In Texas, crews aided by wind and waves from a storm tried to contain 250,000 gallons of heavy crude oil that spilled into Galveston Bay after a barge collision. By late Sunday, more than a third of the 6,000 barrels that leaked from the barge had been sucked from Bayport Channel, said Coast Guard spokesman Bob Morehead.

ECU Gets $888,739 Grant For Teen Health

By Carol Tyer
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Fostering of personal and community responsibility-taking for teen-agers' health will be the focus of a Pitt County project, the $888,739 funding grant for which was announced this morning by the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

Project co-directors Drs. Thomas G. Irons and Katherine Kolasa, both faculty members of the School of Medicine, said the project will be of many years duration. They expressed appreciation for the launching investment of the W.K. Kellogg Foundation of Battle Creek, Mich.

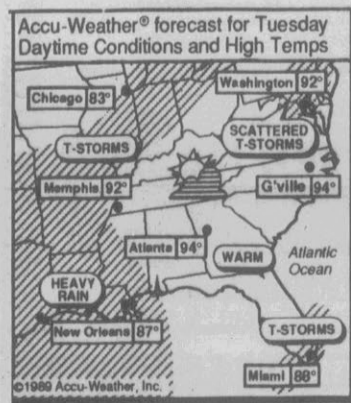

Announcement of the project and its funding grant were made during a news conference conducted at the East Carolina School of Medicine this morning by Drs. Irons and Kolasa and Dr. Thomas Hallock, medical school dean. Hallock said he sees the project as "having the potential to make significant inroads into the colossal health problems we see in the teenagers of Pitt County."

Drs. Irons and Kolasa emphasized that the project will use the expertise and effort of, not only the school of medicine, but "every segment of the community." Participation of the Pitt County Schools, the Pitt County Health Department and the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce will be central, they said. But no less vital will be the involvement of parents, schools, churches, civic groups and many other individuals and groups within the community.

"Personal responsibility-taking lies at the heart of every threat to the well-being of our teen-agers — from early unprepared pregnancy to obesity to reckless driving to substance use and abuse," Irons, an ECU associate professor of pediatrics, said.

Pitt Summer School Opens

By Amy Gavigan
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Countywide summer school began at three Greenville schools this morning.

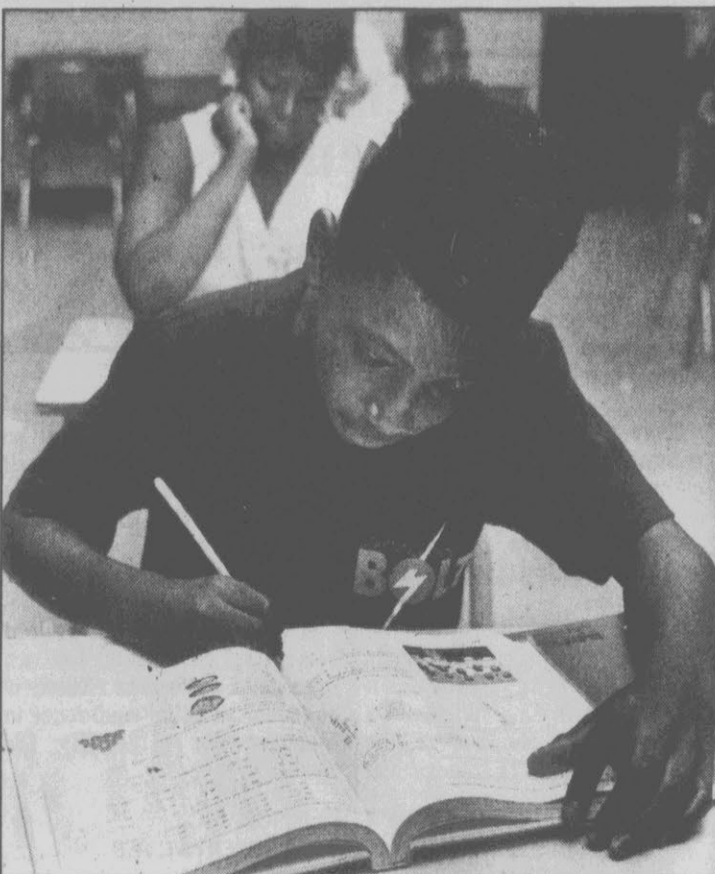

The Basic Education Program, enacted by the General Assembly to fund a remedial summer school, provides for better salaries and transportation not available in the past, said Arline Ferrin, Pitt County Coordinator of Pupil Services.

"We've been able to pay teachers on their certification, instead of paying them based on enrollment," said Ms. Ferrin. "Summer school in the past was self-supporting."

The program began in 1985 providing summer school classes for grade three through eight. The following year it was made inclusive for grades one through 12.

Grades one through three meet at Eastern Elementary, grades four through eight at Wahl-Coates and grades nine through 12 at J. H. Rose High School.

European Summit Under Way

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MADRID, Spain — Leaders of the 12 European Economic Community nations today began a two-day summit to tackle the tough issues that threaten to stall their drive for creating a single European-wide market by late 1992.

Britain appeared bent on blocking radical plans for a single currency and central bank and there were signs that the economically powerful West Germans would accept a compromise.

But as the meeting started, British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher appeared isolated on the second major issue — a proposed social charter guaranteeing workers' rights, including representation on company boards.

The EEC leaders plunged immediately into behind-doors negotiations on the monetary plan, trying to avoid a confrontation over the sen-

Collision near Stokestown sent two men to Pitt Memorial Hospital

Head-On Collision Injures Two

Two men were admitted to Pitt County Memorial Hospital this morning for treatment of injuries suffered in a head-on collision near Stokestown.

The accident occurred about 7:45 a.m. at the intersection of rural paved roads 1753 and 1923, about a half-mile from Stokestown.

Trooper Brad Ward said it appears James Casner of Kinston failed to yield at a stop sign. His car collided almost directly head on with a car driven by Bob Seigler of Ayden, he said. There were no other passengers.

A hospital spokeswoman said there was no official word on their condition, but Ward said the injuries appeared serious.

Rescue squads from Ayden and Grifton and the Gardenville Fire Department responded to the call.

Grant Funds Teen Health Program

"Patterns set in teen years and before set the stage for health difficulties 30 and more years afterward. We feel we can enroll the whole community in making sure that our teen-agers are healthier now and in the future."

"We'll be asking parents," he said, "not only to go to bat for their own children, but to commit themselves to the well-being of other people's children as well. We're looking at models already in place here, like Project Parenting, which let citizens be advocates and role models. We're also looking at other models all over the country and will be bringing the ideas we deem best to Pitt County and developing our own approaches to have our children be healthier."

Key participants will include other faculty members from the schools of medicine, nursing, allied health sciences and education, with advisory input from the Adolescent Youth Council of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

Irons said he believes the present health delivery system in Pitt County is diverse, but poorly coordinated. And he believes its teen-agers who are "falling through the cracks."

"Historically, teen-agers have made very poor use of the health care system, no matter what their problem is," said Irons, who has directed the Adolescent Health Center at the ECU School of Medicine for four years.

"Unfortunately, we in the health care system don't always have our act together either. Our task in this project is to ensure that the health care system actually reaches the kids who need it in a consistent and organized way."

The project will concentrate on two subsets of the county's adolescent population: those at high risk for major health problems and the remainder, who tend to be underinformed about preventive health and health maintenance needs such as good nutritional habits.

"Dietary intake is related to many of the diseases seen in our population, including heart disease, obesity, hypertension and diabetes," said Dr. Kolasa. "It's important for adolescents to learn how good nutrition and good health relate to each other."

A focal point for the high-risk group will be teenage pregnancy. Irons said many pregnant teen-agers don't receive medical care until late in their pregnancies. The care they do receive is often fragmented, as the expectant mother is seen by a variety of providers.

The results of that spotty record of care show up in infant mortality statistics, which indicate that a Pitt County infant born to a mother under 18 years of age is nearly twice as likely to die in infancy than a child born to an older mother. Infants who survive are at very high risk for social and medical problems of their own.

"The problem of infant mortality is not so much availability of medical care. It's getting the mother there for the first time early enough," said Kolasa. "Early prenatal care, including good nutrition, is the crux of the problem."

The project will address this and other issues of adolescent health through several specific channels

Among these will be the following:

- Development of an extensive program to recruit, train and retain adult volunteers from churches, businesses, industry and the community at large. These volunteers will work with teen-agers, especially expectant teens and young parents, and in other health education capacities. These volunteer programs will be modeled on two existing programs offered through the Pitt County Schools and on other successful programs in use in communities around the country.
- Extension of the services of the medical school Adolescent Health Center to the Agnes Fullilove Community School, a specialized alternative high school whose enrollment includes many of the expectant teens and teen parents still in school in Pitt County. Among other benefits, the arrangement will permit medical resident physicians and other health care providers to gain valuable experience in working with adolescents.

•Institution of a computerized network linking major providers of adolescent health care. The system will permit a patient's medical record to be reviewed via computer at the Pitt County Health Department, the Pitt County Memorial Hospital Emergency Department, the School of Medicine Outpatient Center and the Eastern Carolina Family Practice Center.

•Design of a systemwide county school curriculum dealing with health promotion and disease prevention involving input from parents, church and community leaders, health professionals and teens. Irons said the curriculum will be "built around the concept of abstinence from sex, drugs and alcohol as the safest and most responsible choice for young people. Its goals will be to develop in teens a sense of responsibility for their health and to make them comfortable with the use of the health care system."

Dr. Edwin L. West, superintendent of Pitt County Schools, praised the cooperative nature of the project.

"The joint venture has the potential to positively impact the lives of significant numbers of our county's adolescents," he said. "The unique, comprehensive and cooperative approach between and among agencies will assure the success of the project."

A militia unit, intended to act as a backup for the National Guard, is being formed in Greenville.

The local regiment, the 12th Regiment of the North Carolina State Defense Militia, is being formed as a result of an executive order by Gov. Jim Martin in February 1988.

Members of the regiment will serve on a volunteer basis. Gesulga said members will be required to serve about 96 hours per year. The unit will hold drills at the National Guard armory in Greenville.

IN THE STATE

Citations Issued

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina wildlife officers issued nearly 1,000 citations during a four-day enforcement operation on Memorial Day weekend.

Officers statewide came to central North Carolina for Operation Waterspout, which included lakes in Catawba, Iredell, Lincoln and Mecklenburg counties. From Friday afternoon through Monday evening, officers used airplanes and patrol boats to find 358 boating violations and 229 fishing violations.

The patrols were on lakes Hickory, Lookout, Norman, Wylie and Mountain Island. They also issued 358 warning tickets for boating violations and 30 for fishing.

Operation Waterspout covered three of the state's nine wildlife districts.

Building Increases

RALEIGH (AP) — Building activity in North Carolina's 45 largest cities and towns for April 1989 rose 5.2

percent from the activity recorded in April 1988, state Labor Commissioner John Brooks said.

Permits for 3,748 units were recorded in April 1989, compared to 3,562 units in April 1988. The April 1989 figure was 28 percent above the 2,905 units recorded in March 1989.

Estimated value of the April 1989 activity was $196,488,790. That figure was 0.2 percent above the $196,192,498 recorded in April 1988, and 6.3 percent above the $184,884,407 recorded in March 1989.

Spill Recorded

RALEIGH (AP) — As much as 35,000 gallons of untreated and partly treated sewage spilled into Swift Creek in southwest Wake County on Friday after a valve malfunctioned on a sewer main.

The main carried wastewater to Cary's new Middle Creek treatment plant.

Swift Creek feeds Lake Wheeler, about two miles downstream, and Lake Benson, about seven miles downstream.

Report Says Sears Will Remain In Illinois After An Agreement

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — Sears, Roebuck and Co. will keep its Merchandise Group in Illinois under an agreement with state officials to the north with Sears Tower to the northwest suburb of Hoffman Estates, a published report says.

The deal was cemented in a phone conversation Sunday between Gov. James R. Thompson and Sears Chairman Edward Brennan, according to a story in today's editions of the Chicago Tribune.

Sears spokesman Ernie Arms said early this morning he could not confirm the report, but Sears scheduled a news conference for 11 a.m. EDT to discuss its plans for the merchandising group.

"I can't tell you anything," Arms said in a telephone interview. "We have said all along we wanted to tell our employees first."

The nation's largest retailer late last year announced a restructuring plan that included selling the 110-story Sears Tower and shifting the Merchandise Group and its 6,000 employees to less costly quarters.

The announcement set off competition around the nation as several cities tried to woo the retailer to their areas.

For months there has been speculation that Sears was leaning toward North Carolina, Texas, a site near O'Hare International Airport, or the Hoffman Estates site.

A spokesman for the North Carolina Department of Commerce said today he had heard of the Tribune report, but hadn't heard anything official from Sears. Gov. Jim Martin, meanwhile, scheduled a 4:30 p.m. news conference for what spokesman Tim Pittman said would be "the governor's reaction to the Sears announcement."

Low-Level Radioactive Waste Incinerators Praised By Official

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DURHAM (AP) — Private incinerators of low-level radioactive waste in North Carolina do the job well and dispose of the waste safely, says an official with a company that owns one of the state's seven incinerators.

"We feel we have better management of our waste on-site" than by sending it elsewhere, said John Dement, director of occupational health and technical services for the National Institute of Environmental Health Science.

"We have nothing to hide," he said. "We do the job well and dispose of it in a safe manner consistent with government regulations."

North Carolina is the next recipient of low-level radioactive waste from the eight states in the Southeast Interstate Compact. The state is searching for a suitable site for the plant, which is scheduled to open in 1993.

But officials with the seven incinerators say the process is convenient and economical.

"We can minimize the amount of radioactive material sent off-site and thus, the amounts transported through the community," said Kathy Bartlett, a spokeswoman for Burroughs Wellcome. "It allows for stricter supervision of the dispersal and in some ways, it's more economical."

In addition to the National Institute of Environmental Health Science and Burroughs Wellcome, two other companies that own incinerators in Research Triangle Park are the Chemical Industry Institute of Toxicology and the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

The others are East Carolina University in Greenville, Baptist Hospital in Winston-Salem and General Electric Co. in Wilmington.

State officials say the incinerators reduce the volume of contaminated trash destined for costly, out-of-state storage.

"The waste going into these incinerators is best managed when it is incinerated," said Dayne Brown, chief of the radiation protection section in the state Department of Human Resources. "It is the best-value reduction technology."

Although incinerators dispatch radioactive waste differently from the way the proposal disposal plant would, the type of waste involved is the same.

Since the state began incinerator inspections in 1982, there have been few problems, Brown said. Burroughs Wellcome was cited in 1986 for failing to perform an emission calculation before incinerating, and the Chemical Industry Institute of Technology was cited in 1988 for failing to sample ash from its incinerator at the required frequency.

"Both of these problems were relatively minor," Brown said. There have been no repeat offenses and no violations at either East Carolina or Baptist Hospital, he said.

Incinerators at the EPA, the Institute of Environmental Health Science and General Electric are monitored by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Hocus-Pocus

Face The Music, Don't Dance To It

The N.C. Senate has managed to anger two of the state's most militant groups of voters, motorists and teachers, with a foolish plan to divert highway tax money to fund pay raises for teachers. Leaders in the N.C. House have done no better with their latest funding scheme, which dumps financial responsibility for teacher raises on local governments.

What's going on in Raleigh? Why can't the state's elected officials simply find a reasonable and fiscally sound way to obtain the revenue necessary to meet North Carolina's needs? Neither of the proposals at hand is acceptable. The Senate's plan, which is simply a bait-and-switch act that postpones a tax increase, insults the intelligence of the average taxpayer, who must monthly balance his own checkbook without the benefit of such tactics.

The House plan, unveiled Saturday and promptly and appropriately booed heartily, hurls the burden of a tax increase back to the counties. It snips state support to local governments while allowing them the option of raising the sales tax. That is simple folly at a time when most counties in North Carolina are struggling to find the money to fund even the most basic needs of their citizens.

What we have here is juggling, not leadership. No one, not one lawmaker, wants to take responsibility for a tax increase. The result may be the adulteration of a very important plan for building roads and the abandonment of a commitment to bettering the state's public education system.

That should make taxpayers very angry.

The legislature had before it a comprehensive $8.6 billion proposal that over the next 12 years would let the state catch up with most of its pressing highway needs. It would have prepared N.C. roads for the 21st century.

The plan asked the legislature to finance new highways with a package of new taxes and fees, including a 5 1/4 cent hike in gas taxes and a 3 percent fee on new cars and trucks bought in the state.

But led by Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, Senate Democrats decided to take $335 million from the 3 percent fee on new cars and trucks and for two years spend it on public education. It would pay for part of a proposed 6 percent pay raises for teachers and state employees.

After two years money from the fee would be funneled to the highway trust fund. The little diversion means a proposed 12-year construction plan would become a 15-year program.

Here's what should make motorists froth at the mouth.

In truth, the $355 million not spent in the first two years of the program would likely raise the cost of the construction program considerably. Right-of-way not purchased early in the program will cost more later. Construction not begun early in the program will also be more expensive. Roads predicted on traffic counts projected for 12 years will not be adequate for traffic increases over 15 years.

Now consider what's at stake for teachers, state employees and public education.

The plan only funds half of this year's scheduled $124 million installment on the Basic Education Plan, an eight-year effort to lift the quality of instruction in the state's schools. Senators say they will fund the remainder at a later, unspecified date. Given pressures on state coffers, it might never be funded.

After two years of diverting money from the highway fund, legislators will have to come up with the final BEP installment of $300 million, plus continue to fund $300 million in 6 percent pay increases, plus $600 million more for a second 6 percent pay raise. That's over $1 billion in new money.

In light of those figures, it isn't likely for the legislature to restore the 3 percent fee on new cars and trucks to the highway fund. Neither is it likely to have the money to meet other demands for public education.

It is obvious to even the most casual observer of the state's problems that North Carolina cannot meet its obligations to roads, schools, the environment and dozens of other needs without a tax increase.

The House originally passed the $8.6 billion Highway Bill intact with its tax increases and fees. The plan its leaders unveiled Saturday keeps that bill intact, but incorrectly shuffles too much funding responsibility to counties. How many county commissions, many of them already under intense public criticism for raising property taxes, are likely to exercise the additional sales tax option?

Both House and Senate should face the music, not dance to it. The Senate has promised more than it can deliver. The House wants to shift the blame. It will take far more than such hocus-pocus to solve North Carolina's problems.

The Threat Is Real

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — Think of the dangers to which policeman are exposed and you normally think of car chases and shoot-outs. A new danger is troubling police in North Carolina these days, and because of the uncertainty it creates, it may actually weigh more heavily on their minds than do potential gunmen.

Members of the Charlotte police force are concerned that they may be coming into contact with HIV, the virus that causes AIDS. They say they have no way of telling, however, whether they have been infected until after they may have exposed their spouses to the disease, also.

Rep. David Balmer, R-Mecklenburg, recently told the Senate Judiciary I Committee that police officers were reporting that, in the process of frisking drug suspects, they sometimes prick themselves on intravenous needles concealed under the suspects' clothes. Since these needles are an effective transmitter of HIV, the officers are concerned that they themselves are becoming infected.

But officers can't tell if they've been infected. The virus can take weeks or months to show up in your blood. During that time, an officer could unknowingly spread the virus to his or her spouse.

So Charlotte officers asked Balmer to introduce legislation that would hold them test the blood of certain suspects for HIV.

State law currently gives health officials the authority to subject to blood test anyone they think may have HIV. State law does not currently give court officials, however, any means of holding someone they think may have the virus long enough for a health official to order that test.

Balmer's original bill, as passed by the House, would give the courts the power to hold someone for 72 hours after arrest while a health official was found. That bill would have applied only when a police officer had reason to believe that he or she had been infected by the suspect.

Two questions arose in the Senate committee. Why 72 hours? And, why only police officers?

Balmer said that he made the holding period 72 hours because the state law allows for the holding of a drunk driving suspect for that long. He said it would give authorities plenty of time to find a health department official and to have the test ordered, if one appeared to be needed.

Sen. Fountain Odom, D-Mecklenburg, expressed concern that 72 hours was too long. "We're risking a serious infringement of someone's rights," Odom said. Balmer agreed. After Dr. Ron Levine, state health director, said he was certain that a health official could be found and the test completed within 24 hours, the time someone can be held was reduced to 24 hours.

Odom also questioned Balmer's reasons for restricting the law to police officers. He asked why an emergency medical technician, or anyone else at a crime or accident scene, shouldn't have the same protections.

Again Balmer conceded and the bill was amended to include any individual who has reason to believe that they were exposed to HIV at a crime or accident scene or in the course of an arrest.

Phil Lyons of the attorney general's office said that criminal suspects often try to transmit the AIDS virus to police officers. They will often threaten to spit at officers, or prick them with a needle, Lyons said.

The committee sent the bill forward the amendments. For police officers, the threat of being attacked with an HIV infected needle remains real. But when this bill becomes law, at least those officers will be able to learn quickly if their attacker had the virus.

Respect What The Symbol Stands For

WASHINGTON — Can democratic freedoms be stretched to the point that they destroy themselves? Is it sometimes necessary to curtail liberty in order to protect it?

In one sense, the questions are paradoxes — like the question posed by an innocent child (or a cynical adult; I can't remember which): If God can do anything, can He make a rock so big that He can't lift it?

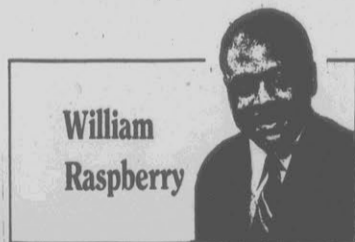

But in another sense, they represent real-life dilemmas. I'm speaking, of course, about last week's Supreme Court decision on flag-burning-as-protest.

The question before the Court was the constitutionality of a Texas law forbidding the desecration of venerated objects. During demonstrations at the 1984 Republican National Convention in Dallas, Gregory Johnson, a member of the Revolutionary Communist Youth Brigade, snatched an American flag from a bank building, doused it with a flammable liquid and set it ablaze, while his comrades chanted "America, the red, white and blue, we spit on you."

The statute under which Johnson was subsequently convicted was overturned last week on a five to four Supreme Court decision.

It was not the usual conservative-liberal split. Justice Kennedy, the court's newest conservative, observing that "sometimes we must make decisions we do not like," joined the majority. Justice Stevens, ordinarily a member of the four-man liberal minority, dissented. If democratic ideas are worth fighting for, he said, "it cannot be true that the flag that uniquely symbolizes their power is not itself worthy of protection from unnecessary desecration."

Interestingly, both the majority and the minority accepted

William Raspberry

Johnson's flag-burning as political expression. But was it "protected" free speech, or was it a threat to the very system that makes free speech a fundamental value?

I think the court decided correctly. That doesn't mean that I support Johnson's dastardly act. It means only that I believe he had a free-speech right to commit it. If Johnson had simply said, "I hate America and all it stands for," it would have been a shocking expression — calculated, in fact, to shock. But it would have been his right under the Constitution to make it. Why is saying the same thing by means of a symbolic act so different?

Stevens claimed to see the majority decision as comparable to allowing dissenters to "post bulletin boards and graffiti on the Washington Monument." It might "enlarge the market for free expression, but at a cost I would not pay."

Nor would I. And I wouldn't allow the desecration of particular flags: those in the National Archives, for instance. But I would permit a protestor to deface a model of the Washington Monument — or the White House or the Supreme Court or any other symbol of our democracy.

That's how I see the flag that Johnson destroyed. Replicas of the American flag are symbols. And as with other symbols — whether wedding bands or crosses — it is not possible to mandate respect for them.

Does that mean that I don't love the flag, that I have not on occasion become teary-eyed in its presence? Not at all. I have also become emotional in the presence of a cross. But I would not jail the atheist who burned a cross.

As Justice Brennan put it for the Court majority, "The government may not prohibit the expression of an idea simply because society finds the idea itself offensive or disagreeable....The way to preserve the flag's special role is not to punish those who feel differently about these matters. It is to persuade them that they are wrong."

That persuasion, to be effective, must begin early. That is why I have objected to high-school civics courses that treat democracy "objectively" — that is, as just another political arrangement.

Democracy is such a fragile thing that we dare not leave it to fend, unaided, for itself. Its values require indoctrination and it is right to begin that indoctrination early: in school, in the community and at home.

To teach democracy, not as the best of political arrangements but as just one among a number of ways by which people choose to govern themselves, is to weaken democracy. Too much freedom undercuts freedom.

Similarly, we need to teach respect for the flag. But more importantly, we need to teach respect for — and understanding of — what the flag symbolizes. I don't think you can do that by laws like the one the court struck down last week.

So would I have let Johnson walk away from his insult to the flag and what it represents? No. I would have convicted him of theft of the flag, polluting the environment by burning it and maybe reckless endangerment by fire.

I would have hated his political expression, but I would have agreed with the Supreme Court that the Constitution allows it.

U.S. Overestimating Underclass, Failing to Understand Poor

Jonathan Rauch

WASHINGTON — Think of the poor, and the image arises of jobless young black men and unmarried black mothers — an underclass maelstrom sucking the American inner city into a deepening pathology of violence, fractured families and idleness. More and more of the poor seem beyond the reach of either the government or the economy, even beyond the reach of society. In Washington, not far from the Capitol grounds, whole neighborhoods are lost to drugs and gunfire.

Americans ask: Why do these people behave this way? Why do they flout the norms of work, marriage, lawfulness, supporting one's children? Whites blame blacks for underclass crime and anti-social behavior; blacks feel scapegoated, stereotyped and resentful. Meanwhile the problem grows. Economist Isabel V. Sawhill of the Urban Institute, a Washington think tank, estimates that the number of people living in hard-core underclass areas more than tripled between 1970 and 1980; the trend seems to have continued in this decade. The underclass culture has proved depressingly, even frighteningly, intractable.

When we talk about the poor, it is this mesmerizing, horrifying story that we most often hear. But there is another story — one best not forgotten if Americans hope to look at the poor with clear eyes. The underclass problem is not the poverty problem. Far from it.

In fact, the underclass is small. "There isn't anybody doing research in this area who doesn't conclude that this is a small group," Sawhill said. Roughly 33 million Americans live in officially designated poverty. Of those, Sawhill finds, about a third are elderly or disabled, and another third are temporarily poor as the result of job loss, divorce or other misfortune. Of the rest, many are single women with children and often with at least part-time jobs.

And the hard-core underclass? Looking at the 1980 census data, Sawhill found 2.5 million people living in underclass neighborhoods — places with unusually large numbers of school dropouts, female-headed families, welfare dependents and idle men. Of those, 1.1 million were poor. That's a far smaller number than many people imagine.

By no means are all poor people chronically poor; almost half of them climb back out of poverty within a year. And, in 1987, 25 percent of all poor families with children had one full-time wage-earner (or the equivalent — say, two adults working half-time).

"While we want to keep the focus on people in the underclass, there are many other groups in the poverty population," said Robert Greenstein, the director of the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, a liberal Washington organization that focuses on poverty issues. "A group that is many times larger than the underclass is the working poor."

The country in fact does not have one poverty problem — it has two. One is behavioral, a problem of people who either do not know how to obey society's rules or do not want to, or both. This is the one that generates the lion's share of both publicity and fear.

"If you point out to people that poverty is much higher in the '80s than in the '70s," Greenstein said, "an assumption people have is that the large increase in poverty probably occurred in the inner city, probably among blacks." But actually, he says, the increase is higher among whites and two-income families than among blacks and single-parent families. That is the other poverty problem — the one that is primarily economic — and its causes are neither pathological nor particularly mysterious.

The poor were clobbered by the recession of the early 1980s, and they have yet to recover all the ground that they lost. The Reagan administration's philosophy of limiting poverty programs to the "truly needy," Greenstein says, knocked many of the working poor off the public-assistance roles. Unemployment insurance has been scaled back. Thanks largely to Social Security, poverty among the aged has dropped steadily in the last 20 years, but young mothers with children to support have not fared so well: In the average state, the combined value of Aid to Families with Dependent Children and the Food Stamp program has fallen by 20 percent (adjusted for inflation) since 1976.

All in all, according to one recent congressional analysis, almost half of the increase in the number of poor people since 1987 can be traced to cutbacks in state and federal aid. The Bush administration has taken no dramatic steps to reverse the trend. George Bush's rhetoric has been softer than Ronald Reagan's was, but his pocketbook is no fatter. "Most of the specific programs the president has put forward have been pretty small," Sawhill said. Greenstein calls Bush's approach so far "largely a policy of drift."

Misapprehension about the poor can't make finding a direction any easier. Nor will it add to the public's sympathy. To talk about poverty as though it is mainly an "underclass" issue, when in fact it is much more than that, is to wall it off and make it alien. True, some of the poor are different from you and me (although a 1985 Los Angeles Times survey found that poor people's values and aspirations are much like everyone else's). And the hard-core, anti-social underclass may well be beyond the power of government to straighten out.

Most of the poor, though, remain within reach of traditional income-support programs like unemployment insurance (for the temporarily out of work), Supplemental Security Income (for the elderly and disabled poor) and wage subsidies (a more recent innovation, adding federal dollars to low-income workers' paychecks).

The risk today is that the obsession with the underclass, and the growing despair of healing it, will lead policy-makers and the public to forget about the less "dangerous" but much more numerous army of the poor who stand quietly among us.

U.S., Soviets Open Talks

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GENEVA — U.S. and Soviet negotiators today opened a new round of talks on monitoring underground nuclear tests with both sides saying they are close to reaching agreements.

They are drafting new monitoring provisions for two 1970s superpower treaties limiting the power of military and other nuclear explosions to 150 kilotons.

One kiloton has the force of 1,000 tons of TNT, and the bomb dropped on Hiroshima, Japan, in 1945, carried an explosive force of 20 kilotons.

The aim of the talks is to gain U.S. Senate ratification of the two accords. The original treaties never entered into force because the Senate refused approval over concerns the limits could not be enforced.

Talks resumed after a six-month recess partly due to the Bush administration's review of U.S. arms control and security policy.

The new discussions began at the U.S. mission in Geneva with a meeting of the two delegation chiefs, C. Paul Robinson of the United States and Soviet Igor Palenykh.

Robinson has said the new talks, due to last five to six weeks, will aim to complete agreements.

Palenykh said there is "a good basis for reaching practical results within a short time."

The officials said a verification plan for the 1976 Peaceful Nuclear Explosions Treaty is virtually complete, but some work remains on amendments to prevent cheating on the 1974 Threshold Test Ban Treaty on nuclear weapons tests.

Both sides are to be allowed various methods to measure nuclear blasts, including on-site checks at each other's nuclear testing grounds.

In the future, the negotiations are intended to produce further superpower agreements limiting and, ultimately, banning nuclear tests.

The Soviet Union has long urged Washington to join in a mutual ban on testing. However, the United States says tests will be needed as long as its military strategy includes reliance on nuclear weapons.

The nuclear testing talks are separate from U.S.-Soviet negotiations on reducing long-range nuclear arsenals that resumed in Geneva last week.

Senators Cut Back On Pricey Travel

By Larry Margasak
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Senators facing re-election in 1990 have cut down on privately financed travel that sometimes takes them to pricey resorts, according to a study of financial disclosures.

The group, comprising almost a third of the Senate, took 179 privately financed trips in 1988 compared with 223 in 1987.

Such travel — usually paid for by corporate and trade associations — has been severely criticized this year by members of Congress and private organizations.

The Associated Press study of 33 senators was based on travel statistics compiled on the full Senate by Congress Watch, an organization founded by consumer advocate Ralph Nader that culled the data from 1988 Senate financial disclosure reports filed last month.

Senators are required to list all reimbursed travel expenses totaling at least $250. The lawmakers were not surveyed on why the number of trips dropped.

While legal, the trips leave members in potential conflicts of interest involving special interest groups that are pushing for passage or defeat of legislation. The invitations often include airfare, several days at a resort or top-of-the-line hotel, and expenses for a spouse.

Task forces in both houses are considering whether to eliminate speaking honoraria in return for a congressional pay raise, but an end of those fees — up to $2,000 per speech — would not necessarily prevent privately funded travel.

"Many of these junkets are designed to give lobbyists the chance to fraternize with lawmakers, frequently at pricey resorts, and provide special interest groups with yet another opportunity to gain access and influence with members of Congress," said Joan Claybrook, head of Congress Watch's parent group, Public Citizen.

Those who traveled frequently, however, probably have little to fear from the voters, according to two political scientists, Norman Ornstein associated with the American Enterprise Institute and James A. Thurber of American University.

"I don't think it will be a devastatingly effective campaign weapon in 1990," said Ornstein, unless the travel has caused a senator to miss votes.

"You're going to have much more luck slamming a guy for doing it on public expense than at the expense of private interests," Ornstein said. "The public reaction is, 'We don't give a damn if it's taken out of special interests, but don't take it out of our pockets.'"

Thurber said there were few studies on voters' reaction to congressional trips, but added it was his "gut reaction" that the trips "play almost no role in the way they evaluate the performance of a member of Congress."

The AP found that among those whose current six-year terms are winding down:

—Eighteen traveled on fewer privately paid trips in 1988 than in 1987, while 10 increased their travel and five had the same number of trips in both years. The ratio becomes 10-9 in favor of reduced travel when Sens. William Armstrong, D-Colo., and Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., are subtracted from the list. Both have announced their retirement.

—The gap in the number of trips is greater, 164 in 1988 compared with 223 in 1987, without Sen. James A. McClure, R-Idaho, who listed no trips in 1987 and 15 in 1988.

—Six senators facing re-election were among the top 15 privately financed travelers in the Senate. They are Democrats Joseph R. Biden Jr. of Delaware, 24 trips; J. James Exon of Nebraska, 23 trips; J. Bennett Johnston of Louisiana, 21 trips; Sam Nunn of Georgia, 21 trips; and Republicans Mark Hatfield of Oregon, 24 trips, and Alan K. Simpson of Wyoming, 21 trips.

Public Citizen found that all senators took more than 1,100 privately financed trips during the 100th Congress, led by John Breaux, D-La. with 37; Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, 34; Alan Cranston, D-Calif., 33; Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., 30 and Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, 29.

Chappaquiddick Jury Head Claims Coverup

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The foreman of the grand jury that investigated Mary Jo Kopechne's death at Chappaquiddick in 1969 said he was approached by two "key lawyers" who said an inquiry wasn't needed, according to a published report.

Newsweek reported in its July 3 issue that grand jury foreman Leslie Leland, a pharmacist on Martha's Vineyard, said that the two men invited him to "a clandestine meeting" to discuss the case involving Sen. Edward Kennedy.

"There was a cover-up," Leland said. "All they were concerned about was protecting Teddy's political career. It was, like, the hell with the fact that this young woman lost her life."

Miss Kopechne was killed when the car Kennedy was driving across a bridge on the Massachusetts island and skidded into 8 feet of water. He surfaced moments later; Miss Kopechne died in the car.

The Massachusetts Democrat failed to report the accident for 10 hours. He received a suspended sentence for the misdemeanor of leaving the scene of an accident.

The magazine did not identify the men or say when the meeting occurred.

"The bottom line was that this was nothing more than an accident and a minor vehicle violation — and there was no need for the grand jury to get involved," Leland said.

In the months that followed, Leland received three anonymous death threats and for a time was under 24-hour police protection, the magazine reported. He nearly lost his pharmacy license when state officials did not send the usual renewal notice.

Leland said that after he had convened the grand jury, a prosecutor warned him to watch his step or the supervising judge might cite him for contempt.

Government Under Fire For Estimates

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Interior Department is coming under fire for assigning specific dollar values to birds, mammals and other animals killed in toxic spills as a means of totting up the damage to the environment.

The department plans to use the same basic approach in setting the damage estimate for the disastrous oil spill that occurred March 24 when the tanker Exxon Valdez ran aground in Alaska's Prince William Sound, The Washington Post reported today.

No dollar values have yet been set in that incident, but the Post said that in past spills, the department has calculated that fur seals were worth $15 each, sea gulls $7.88 apiece and Canada geese $35.74 each. Striped bass were valued at $1.84 per pound.

Chinese Leadership Hints At An Expanded Purge

By Jim Abrams
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"supporting the turmoils and splitting the party."

The leadership shakeup, announced Saturday, replaced the 69-year-old Zhao with Shanghai party secretary Jiang Zemin, 62, a proponent of economic reforms who supports the current hard line that dissent must be dealt with harshly.

Zhao is believed to have been stripped of power in mid-May for refusing to endorse plans by Premier Li Peng and senior leader Deng Xiaoping to declare martial law in Beijing and have the army clear central Tiananmen Square of student pro-democracy protesters.

The party's Central Committee on Saturday also announced the dismissal from the powerful Standing Committee of the ruling Politburo of Hu Qili, another moderate said to have opposed the military crackdown, and several Zhao supporters in top party positions.

There were also suggestions, in a weekend meeting of the party's Central Commission for Discipline Inspection, that the purge would be extended to lower levels of the party and government.

The commission, in a report appearing in Chinese dailies today, said party members "who deviated from the correct political stand and violated party's disciplines during the turmoils and the counterrevolutionary rebellion should be strictly punished ... including expelling them from the party."

It added that "those party organizations which had made resistance against the decisions made by the party's Central Committee or had been controlled or manipulated by bad people during the turmoils and counterrevolutionary rebellion should be firmly overhauled and strictly dealt with."

"Turmoils" alludes to the seven weeks of student-led pro-democracy demonstrations that were joined by hundreds of thousands of people including journalists, workers, professionals, party members and government workers.

"Counterrevolutionary rebellion" is the government's term for popular resistance to the introduction of troops in Beijing and for the nationwide unrest that followed the military assault on the capital. Troops shot to death hundreds of unarmed civilians as they cleared central Beijing on June 3-4.

The official media, which in the first weeks following the assault reported about 1,800 arrests nationwide and paraded handcuffed detainees before television screens every night, has recently stopped publicizing detentions.

It was not clear whether the government was responding to the international statements of protest and outrage over the harsh suppression of dissent, which has included the execution of 27 people.

Cuban General Allegedly Involved In Smuggling And Drug Trafficking

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HAVANA — The defense minister has told a military tribunal that a highly decorated general accused of trafficking in cocaine also smuggled ivory and diamonds and should receive a punishment that sets an example.

The 47-member tribunal was to hold a second closed-door session today to consider the case against Gen. Arnaldo Ochoa, who is alleged to have been involved with Colombia's Medellin drug cartel for three years.

The tribunal of top-ranking officers is to decide if the general is to be stripped of his rank and ordered to stand trial on the charges.

With his voice at times rising in anger, Gen. Raul Castro told the tribunal on Sunday that Ochoa's actions "represent an outrage, a stab in the back to the fatherland and a slap in the face."

He said Ochoa should receive "punishment that sets an example" because he was such a highly regarded officer.

Gen. Castro is the brother of Cuban President Fidel Castro.

Ochoa, 57, is one of only five officers who hold the medal of the Hero of the Republic of Cuba. A veteran of the Cuban revolution, he was decorated for his service as a field commander of Cuban troops in Angola.

Gen. Castro's allegation about ivory and diamond smuggling represented a new dimension in the biggest scandal to rock Cuban power circles in 30 years of Communist rule. Authorities say Ochoa was the ringleader of officers who let cocaine smugglers use Cuban military air bases and arranged escorts for drug-carrying boats.

The defense minister's speech was broadcast on state-run television during the evening newscast, which devoted 40 minutes to the hearing. A newscaster said eight witnesses, all military officers, also testified.

Gen. Castro said fellow officers had disapproved as early as 1970 of Ochoa's joking manner and frequent bragging about business deals. They suspected corruption, but it was not proven until later, he said.

"Only he could explain, if he has been able to explain it to himself, how this process occurred in which his highest aspiration becomes transforming himself into a typical capitalist businessman," Gen. Castro said.

He also accused Ochoa of demoralizing officers in Angola by saying, "They have sent me to a lost war so that they can hang the defeat on me."

The Cuban troops were sent to Angola to back a Marxist government in its fight against a rebel insurgency. A cease-fire in the conflict took effect over the weekend.

Ochoa sat with his head bowed and a tense look on his face during Gen. Castro's speech.

After Ochoa's arrest June 12, Cuba reported that 10 other military officers and government officials were accused of accepting bribes from drug traffickers.

U.S. prosecutors say the names of some of the Cuban officers had surfaced in a U.S. investigation of a smuggling ring that culminated in two indictments and a 1988 trial.

On Saturday, the Cuban military announced that it would shoot down private planes that violate Cuban airspace and refuse orders to land for inspection. The announcement said Cuba intended to stop drug-smuggling planes from using its airspace.

The official Granma newspaper has said U.S. allegations about Cuba being a way station for cocaine traffickers prompted Castro to order the investigation that led to the arrest of Ochoa and the other officers.

A Foreign Ministry official, asked about reports that U.S. officials want to talk to Ochoa, did not rule out the possibility.

"These things are from top level to top level," the Ministry official said. "This sort of thing has been done before."

Police Say, 'Flush Or Pay'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SINGAPORE — In their latest move to toilet train the people, authorities plan to fine those who fail to flush after using public lavatories.

Beginning July 1, first-time offenders may be penalized as much as $77. Repeat offenders caught neglecting to flush three or more times may have to pay as much as $155.

Public toilets are defined as those to which the public has access, including those in hotels, department stores, cinemas and restaurants. The Environment Ministry says many people simply are not flushing after use.

Government campaigns to improve public hygiene in this city-state of 2.6 million people are not new. A Clean Public Toilets campaign was first mounted in 1983. A team of health inspectors was deployed last year, but offenders merely received warning letters.

The deteriorating state of public toilets and anti-social bathroom behavior receive much attention in this country, which uses the slogan "clean and green" to describe itself.

A survey of 3,550 public toilets turned up "a problem of users showing no consideration for the next person," said Richard Lim of the Environment Ministry.

The Straits Times newspaper last year targeted "toilets of shame," singling out by name, photograph and location "particularly disgusting facilities." Both the newspaper and the Environment Ministry installed telephone hotlines for complaints.

Many apartment blocks have become high-rise slums with elevators reeking of urine and corridors filled with trash.

The elevator problem became so bad that the Housing Board installed a sophisticated monitoring system in some buildings.

Sensors activated by the high salt content in urine stop the elevator, activate a video camera hidden in the ceiling and alert the janitor. The trapped offender is supposed to be turned over to police.

Dozens of culprits, aged from 7 to 79 and including at least one woman, have been flushed out so far. They face a fine of $1,030, three years in jail and a flogging of from three to eight lashes.

Palestinian Is Killed By Israelis

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

TEL AVIV, Israel — Israeli soldiers shot a Palestinian to death Sunday during unrest in the occupied Gaza Strip as a general strike called by the fundamentalist Islamic Hamas organization continued.

The Palestinian was killed in the town of Khan Junes in the southern part of the Gaza Strip when soldiers opened fire on youths who set up barricades of burning car tires and threw stones, Palestinian sources said.

Israeli armed forces said later the Palestinian killed in Khan Junes was 28-year-old Yussuf Abdel Karim Farara.

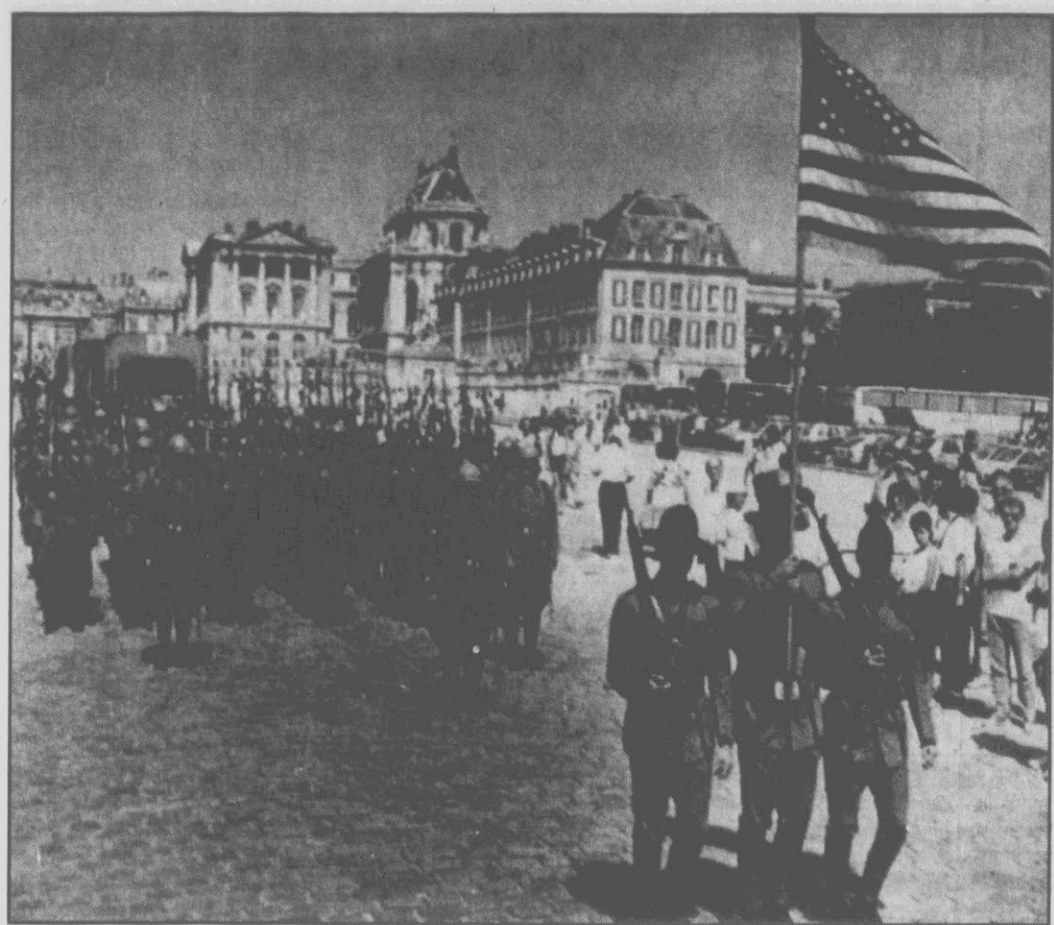

Arab sources said an Israeli soldier was injured in the head during another incident in Hebron on the occupied West Bank.

Meanwhile an Israeli military spokesman said Israeli forces and their allied South Lebanon Army killed six Shiite guerrillas in fighting in southern Lebanon.

A unit of Israeli paratroopers and SLA soldiers were operating Friday in the vicinity of the Shiite village of Maidun when the guerrillas of the fundamentalist Hezbollah organization attacked with grenade throwers, bazookas and automatic weapons, the army said.

One Israeli soldier was wounded, the spokesman said.

Official Indicates An Apparent U.S. Policy Shift In Lebanon

By Donna Abu-Nasr
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIRUT, Lebanon — In an apparent U.S. policy shift, Assistant Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger said in an interview broadcast today that Syria should withdraw from Lebanon.

Also today, police said a bomb went off in a school in the Syrian-policed mountain town of Dhour Shweir, wounding the principal and seven schoolchildren. They had no other immediate details.

"The Syrians have to back off," Eagleburger said on Christian-controlled Voice of Lebanon in an interview conducted by the station's Washington correspondent.

"All of the outside parties ought to back off and let the Lebanese make their own judgment about where their future lies. There is too much foreign involvement on all sides."

His remarks in the taped interview reversed a statement he made before the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee on March 16. He said at that time that the withdrawal of Syrian troops from Lebanon would aggravate the situation because their presence restrains the warring parties.

The Syrians have 40,000 troops deployed in mainly Moslem areas in Lebanon under a 1976 Arab League peacekeeping mandate.

Along with Druse militia allies, the Syrians have been engaged in bloody fighting with army commander Gen. Michel Aoun's 20,000 mainly Christian troops since March 8.

Today's interview was broadcast during renewed Syrian shelling of the Christian coastline north of Beirut. The Syrians are maintaining a blockade of the enclave to block military supplies sent by Iraq, Syria's main Arab foe.

A police spokesman, who cannot be identified under standing rules, said sporadic 130mm mortar fire hit around the ports of Jounieh and Byblos.

Aoun's artillery retaliated with 155mm howitzer fire on a seaside boulevard of Moslem west Beirut where several Syrian batteries are deployed.

No casualties were reported today. By police count, 373 people have been killed and 1,460 wounded in the 14 weeks of bloodshed.

Eagleburger's interview was broadcast a day after Secretary of State James A. Baker III urged Lebanese leaders to show restraint to avert further bloodshed.

Baker made his appeal in identical letters to acting Prime Minister Salim Hoss and Aoun, who head the rival Moslem and Christian cabinets in Lebanon's divided government.

Aides to both leaders said Baker's letter restated U.S. support for Arab League efforts to end Lebanon's 14-year civil war.

In today's interview, Eagleburger also said the United States was optimistic about efforts by the three-member Arab committee on Lebanon.

It is made up of King Hassan II of Morocco, King Fahd of Saudi Arabia and Algerian president Chadli Bendjedid. The panel was set up during an Arab summit in Morocco last month.

"We're obviously very hopeful that the Arab committee can, in fact, bring sense to the situation and can convince the Syrians to withdraw plus all those other foreign parties that have gotten themselves involved in the tragedy of Lebanon," said Eagleburger.

The Arab panel was given a six-month mandate to enforce a ceasefire, lift land and sea blockades stemming from the battles, and introduce political reforms to redistribute power between Moslems and Christians.

Papandreou Is Battling For Political Life

By Patrick Quinn
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATHENS, Greece — Swept into power eight years ago promising radical changes for Greece, Premier Andreas Papandreou is battling for his political survival in elections June 18.

The 70-year-old leader is beset by allegations of widespread corruption among senior members of his ruling Panhellenic Socialist Movement (PASOK) and accusations that he failed to implement many socialist reforms he espoused when first elected in 1981.

He's also in the midst of divorcing his American-born wife of 38 years to take up with a former airline stewardess half his age.

But friends and foes alike admit that Papandreou, an economics professor in the United States before returning to political life in Greece, is far from beaten. He still retains an oratorical flair and personal appeal that gave him 48 percent of the popular vote in 1981 and 46 percent in 1985.

Papandreou is banking on support from Greece's rural areas, where socialist policies have had more success than in the cities.

"Socialism, democracy, patriotism, peace, these were the goals of the popular movement in our country," he told a recent rally. "PASOK continues this popular movement today. Our enemy is not the left, it is the right."

Opposition parties claim Papandreou has ignored many of the accusations against him and tried instead to polarize the electorate.

He has also skirted the issue of his personal life, choosing instead to allow his live-in companion, 35-year-old Dimitra Liani, to accompany him on campaign trips.

Papandreou's open affair with Ms. Liani has hurt his personal popularity, but public interest in the relationship seems to be dying down.

"People are tired about hearing about his personal life. People want to talk about economic and social issues, people want to know what's happening," said Theodoros Pangalos, deputy foreign minister and a member of PASOK's executive council.

Papandreou has said his affair with Ms. Liani hurt his standing in the polls but added that he made it public because he was committed to the tall blonde.

"I knew this would have a cost. But it was not a passing thing. It was a relationship, it was a way of life," he said in an interview with a Greek newspaper.

Abby's Answer To 'Disappointed' Lacked Luster

Dear Abby: I couldn't believe your answer to "Disappointed," the 40-year-old woman who complained because her fiancé gave her such a small diamond (one-fifth of a carat). She said she was a large woman with large hands, which made the ring look even smaller; she also complained because the 14-karat gold mounting caused her finger to break out in a rash.

You advised her to accompany her fiancé to the store where the ring was purchased and trade it in for a larger diamond, since her fiancé made $200,000 a year and could well afford it.

Abby, where does love and appreciation come in? — Disappointed In You

Dear Disappointed: Many other readers were also disappointed in me (an understatement). However, I stand by my answer. If her fiancé couldn't afford a larger diamond, she would not have complained, which was the point of her letter. I'm all for love and appreciation, but where does honest communication come in?

Dear Abby Abigail Van Buren

Among the hundreds of critical letters in which I was called "mercenary, grasping, materialistic, devoid of sentiment and over-the-hill," I did receive a few letters that reaffirmed my confidence in my own judgment. For example:

Dear Abby: I totally agree with the advice you gave "Disappointed," the 40-year-old professional woman who was not happy with her engagement ring.

If "Disappointed" were to tell her fiancé exactly how she felt, a number of things might be cleared up before they married. Perhaps her fiancé would tell her that his personal income is none of her business (yet). Maybe he'd tell her that if she wants a ring "she'll be proud to wear" (translation: one she can shove under other people's noses in hopes of sparking envy), they can go to the jeweler together, pick out what she wants and split the cost.

Also, her fiancé may point out that a middle-aged, large woman with large hands should be thankful that she's getting married at all. And maybe he'll wake up and realize he's engaged to a spoiled brat instead of a mature woman. — Kathy In Florida

Dear Abby: Regarding the newly engaged woman who's disappointed with her engagement ring: Abby, the ring is the least of this woman's problems.

I question the future of a relationship in which (a) the groom-to-be has no idea of his fiancée's taste in jewelry, or chooses to skimp on such a symbolic gift, and (b) the bride-to-be doesn't trust the relationship enough to discuss her allergic reaction to the ring, let alone her feelings about the gemstone.

Of course, the size of the diamond is irrelevant if it was given with true love. It's open communication that seems in short supply here. — G.S. Confidential To Second Time

Around In Palm Beach, Fla.: Brush the stardust out of your eyes, lady, and don't worry about "insulting" him. No matter how "honorable" a man you think he is, it's better to have a prenuptial agreement and not need one than it is to need one and not have it. This agreement should spell out who gets what in case the marriage doesn't work out, and who's entitled to how much should you precede him in death, or vice versa.

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O.

Summer School Opens Today

"We've had a great turnout, about 400 students," said Ms. Ferrin. "At Rose High, we have 32 teachers, a principal and an assistant principal, a guidance counselor, a social worker and a media specialist. A building principal, guidance counselor and a media specialist are provided in all three sites.

"We have a full range of services available to students," she said. The high school teachers are paid full salary, and the teacher of grades one through eight are paid 5/6 of regular pay because they work five hours, according to Ms. Ferrin.

Ms. Ferrin said that English attracts the most student this session with 230 registered. The summer school program also provide teachers with the opportunity to experiment with different teaching methods, according to Paige Adkins, summer school principal at Eastern.

"There are usually 12-15 children in each class, which gives the teacher the opportunity to do things not possible during the regular school year," said Adkins. "They also have more time and try different things because, obviously, the regular routine hasn't helped these children."

Grades one through eight meet from 8-12 with a morning snack break, according to Adkins.

"With the younger children we must vary what to do in the class because of their short attention span," she said. "We don't tolerate disruptive behavior that would cause other children not to learn."

Students must meet certain qualifications to register for summer school, according to Pitt Pupij Services Coordinator, Ms. Ferrin.

"Students in grade three, six, and eight, who score below the 25th percentile on the California Achievement Tests are given the North Carolina minimum skills diagnostic test are offered summer school," Ms. Ferrin said. "If they do not go to summer school they must repeat the school year."

Students in grades one, two, four, five and seven qualify on local promotion-retention guidelines established by the Pitt County Board of Education, said Ms. Ferrin.

The summer school program will be completed August 2.

Fish Kill Increases

Mrs. Smith believes that upstream run-off from the heavy rains this weekend more likely caused the fish kill.

The state has identified nutrient run-off from farms, industry and waste water treatment plants as compounding the natural occurrence of algae blooms in the Tar and Pamlico rivers and their tributaries. The North Carolina Division of Environmental Management has proposed classifying the river's basin as "nutrient sensitive," and limiting the amount of nutrients going into the river.

David McNaught, the executive director of the Pamlico-Tar River Foundation, stressed that he did not know what killed the fish, but said it was further indication of serious problems along North Carolina's coastal waters.

The Pamlico-Tar River Foundation and other environmental groups have pushed for stronger pollution controls in the area.

"There was a struggle for life in that river yesterday," said Mrs. Smith. "I don't care what it takes something has got to be done."

sitive issue behind the dispute — member-states yielding national sovereignty as the community heads toward dropping all trade barriers in three years.

"There is no point in hiding the fact all these issues strike at the heart of national decision-making," Lord Plumb, president of the European Parliament, the EEC's legislature, said in a speech to the summit.

Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez of Spain, who holds the rotating presidency, welcomed each leader in the lobby of a modern convention center, bedecked with flags and decorated with a brightly colored mosaic by Spanish artist Joan Miro. British officials said Mrs. Thatcher, now criticized within her Conservative Party for her often-combative stance toward the EEC, probably would go along with the initial stage of the monetary union plan.

That phase commits Britain to link the pound to the other major EEC currencies. It is a move Mrs. Thatcher has long resisted.

Sub Burns Off Norway

news agency Tass reported in Moscow.

"According to commander of the submarine, there was a breakdown in the system that insures air and water tightness of the reactor. The reactor has been shut down. There are no casualties," the report said.

The submarine was on the surface and moving toward home under its own power. Ships and aircraft of the Soviet northern fleet have been sent to the area, the report said.

Major Gullow Gjeseth, of the Norwegian Supreme Defense Command, said it appeared the Soviets had the situation under control with rescue efforts from Murmansk.

"The crew who were on deck were reported to be relatively relaxed," he said. Norway's rescue coordination center said the submarine was first spotted at 71 degrees 36 minutes north and 21 degrees 5 minutes east.

Scalia said that of the 37 states permitting capital punishment, 15 decline to impose it for anyone who committed the crime when not yet 18.

TOO MUCH DEBT?

Rose Given Two-Week Reprieve

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — Pete Rose is ahead 1-0 in his legal skirmish with baseball Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti.

The Cincinnati Reds manager was on the winning side of an unprecedented court decision Sunday that blocked Giamatti from holding a hearing today on evidence that Rose bet on his own team.

Instead of going to New York today with a possible lifetime ban at hand, Rose has a court order keeping him in uniform for the next two weeks.

The legal dispute could drag on for months in Hamilton County Common Pleas Court, with the outcome possibly reshaping the baseball commissioner's powers. For now, Rose has a temporary reprieve from any disciplinary action by baseball.

"I'm just pleased that we get the next opportunity," Rose said Sunday, after his team lost 7-0 to Los Angeles. "Obviously we're pleased about this. That's it. Next things next."

There's no telling what the next thing will be.

Baseball lawyers were upset Sunday when Common Pleas Judge Norbert A. Nadel granted Rose a temporary restraining order blocking the hearing with Giamatti. Nadel, a low-profile judge thrust into national prominence for the first time, ruled that Giamatti had "prejudged" the case.

The ruling, delivered in a sultry and crowded courtroom, set a collision course with federal court decisions that have upheld the baseball commissioner's broad authority to act when the integrity of the game is at stake. Baseball team owners Charles O. Finley and Ted Turner both challenged the authority of former Commissioner Bowie Kuhn in the 1970s, and each lost.

"The judge has made a mistake, a big one," baseball lawyer Louis Hoynes Jr. said. "It's an erroneous ruling. It's a problem (for baseball), a serious mistake."

Hoynes declined to comment on what baseball's next move might be, but lawyers are expected to try to get Nadel's decision overturned by a court with higher authority.

Roger Makley, one of Rose's lawyers, suggested that the ruling Sunday shows a change in the wind for the office of the baseball commissioner, which has generally had sweeping powers since Kenesaw Mountain Landis ruled the sport from 1920-44.

New Concerns For Williams

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — A member of the committee that selected Gary Williams as the University of Maryland basketball coach says he regrets the panel did not know Williams was accused of misusing telephone privileges at Ohio State.

Len Elmore, one of the six search committee members, said he could not say whether that information, if it had been known, would have changed the committee's decision.

"I really don't know. I couldn't answer that," Elmore told The (Baltimore) Sun. "The fact is, it probably should have been brought to the table. You don't expect Gary Williams to bring it to the table. Nobody in their right mind would in his situation. When you're looking for a job, you emphasize your strong points. But that information would have been useful."

The Cleveland Plain Dealer reported that Ohio State officials plan to investigate Williams' phone records after a review by the newspaper that revealed the 479 calls to the residence and office of Victoria Chen, who said she is Williams' investment broker.

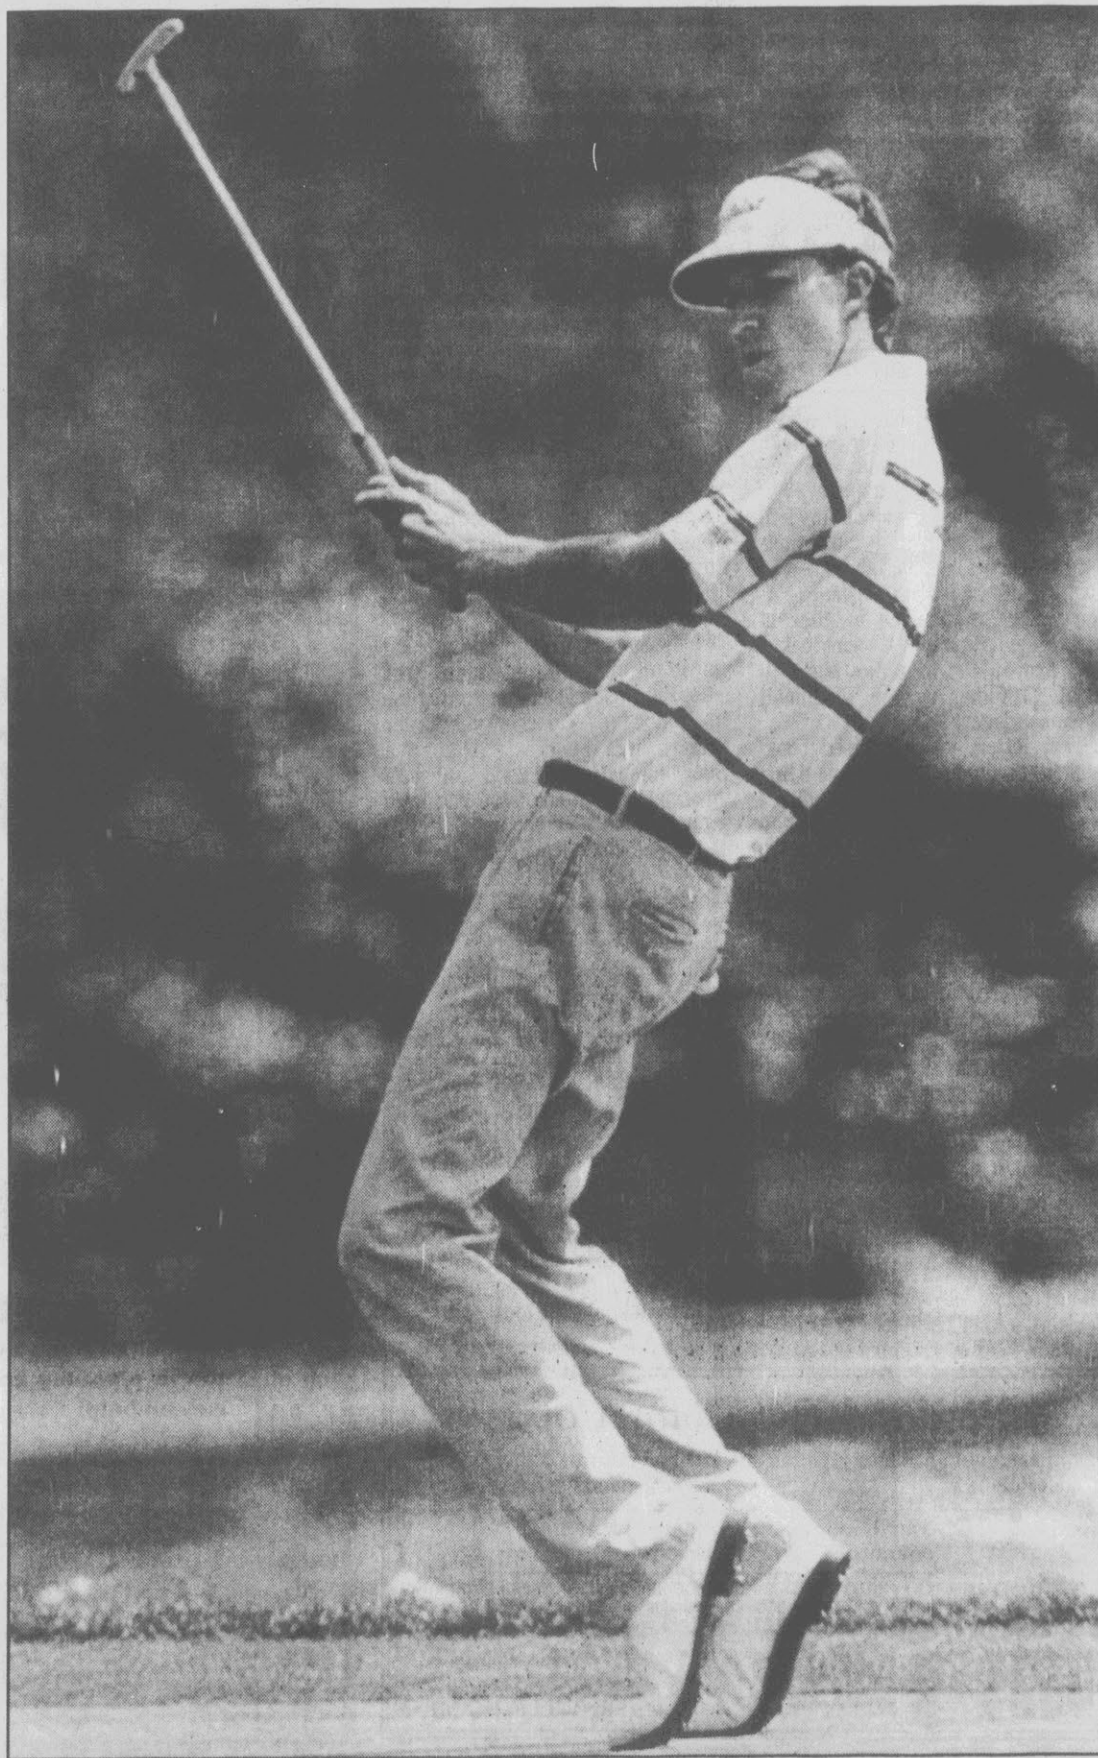

Williams, who had coached at Ohio State since 1987, accepted the Maryland job earlier this month.

In a statement issued Friday by the University of Maryland, Williams expressed regret and offered to pay the charges in question.

"If I have violated a Ohio State University policy, I am sorry and I apologize," Williams said. "I have contacted (Ohio State athletic director) Jim Jones and, of course, affirmed that I will reimburse the university for the cost of any personal phone calls."

Irwin Goldstein, the search committee chairman, said, "I think it's fairly obvious we were not aware. But, basically, the search committee made a decision based on our analysis. Now, the search committee has disbanded."

Another member, university journalism professor Ben Holman said, "This seems to be a day in which journalism is practiced a little differently than when I practiced it. My position is that, starting with Bob Wade, journalists have made a big to-do over stuff that is pretty trivial."

Jones Wins 3rd Late Rush Earns Canadian Title

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OAKVILLE, Ontario — Steve Jones, the first three-time winner on the PGA Tour this year, has a soft-spoken warning for golf's other touring pros.

"Mine seem to come in streaks," Jones said Sunday after his late rush produced a two-stroke victory in the Canadian Open.

"I look for a good tournament at the Western (at Oak Brook, Ill., this week). I like the golf course. It's a good course for me. I've played well there before. I'm looking forward to it," Jones said.

If his performances earlier this year are any indication, he very well may be the man to beat in the Western.

The 6-foot-5 Jones won the first two tournaments of the season, the Tournament of Champions and the Bob Hope Classic.

"After winning two so fast, I was thinking I had a chance to win a lot of tournaments. Then I got in the frame of mind that I should win a lot of tournaments.

"I didn't.

"Then I had to take another look and say, 'You've got to go out there and practice and work just like everybody else,'" he said.

That paid off in the stretch run at the Glen Abbey Golf Club course, a stretch run that was aided by the inexperience of the man he was battling for the title.

"My hands were shaking on the short putts," said Clark Burroughs, who hadn't finished higher than 11th and had not made expenses in three years on the Tour.

"That's where I lost it. On the greens," Burroughs said. "The last three holes. Four feet, eight feet, six feet. Yip, yip, yip," Burroughs said.

"He's been there before. He knew how to handle himself better than I did," Burroughs said.

King Wants More McDonald's Victory Isn't Enough

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WILMINGTON, Del. — Betsy King is a hard sell. Despite four LPGA tour victories and the lofty perch of 1989's top money winner, she says her game hasn't yet reached its highest level.

"Hopefully I can get better," King said Sunday after she rallied from six strokes back with 16 holes to play to win the $550,000 McDonald's Championship.

King, 33, shot a final round 4-under-par 67 for a 72-hole total of 272, 12 strokes under par and two shots better than Pat Bradley and Shirley Furlong.

The $82,500 winner's share increased King's money total to $365,986 and moved her past Nancy Lopez ($297,860), who withdrew from the tournament because of her father's illness.

"Maybe my level is as high as its ever been. But it's not as high as it could be," King said. "I know it's not possible for perfection. Hey, when you get to perfection, there is only one way to go."

King said she managed her comeback without worrying about the play of others.

"When someone else does well that shouldn't bother you," she said. "You're competition is to just to do the best that you can be, or to be as close to your potential."

King said she told her caddy, "I'm just going to play my own game, play for myself, play to my potential. Golf is a funny game."

After the second hole, when King dropped six shots behind Furlong, she thought, "Either it's her day to win, or something will turn it around down the road."

"I think her three putt bogey (on No. 3) started her thinking."

Furlong, who led by four shots when play began, struggled to a 73 to finish at 274. Bradley tied for second after a final-round 68. Deborah McHaffey closed with a 70 for a 276, the fourth-place finish her best since joining the tour in 1986.

Elliott Wins First Of Season

Michigan Becoming A Home Away From Home For Georgia Native

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BROOKLYN, Mich. — Michigan, despite an absence of red clay, soft nights and grits, is beginning to look a lot like home to Bill Elliott.

When things are going bad out on the NASCAR Winston Cup racing circuit, the Georgia native frequently finds solace at Michigan International Speedway.

It happened again Sunday when Elliott, the defending Winston Cup champion but winless in 13 races this season, beat Rusty Wallace by 1.99 seconds in the Miller 400.

"Michigan's been good to me," said Elliott, who averaged 139,023 mph. "It's the type of place where, if you're running good, you can get to the front. At those other places, if there is a situation on the track, you can easily be a victim of it."

Twice before, Elliott had been in the same situation.

In 1986 he was winless in NASCAR points races until he hit victory lane at Michigan. Two years earlier he ended a similar drought at MIS.

"I've gone through a lot of different situations in my racing career," Elliott said. "I want to win races and I'll be the first to admit it."

Those efforts in the past led to six straight victories at Michigan between 1984 and 1987, including three in the Miller 400. Elliott won the pole position in both NASCAR races at the high-banked two-mile oval in 1988 and another three poles from 1984-85. He started in the No. 2 spot Sunday.

The race, run in 85-degree temperatures, came down to an 11-lap sprint between Elliott's Ford Thunderbird, Wallace's Pontiac Grand Prix and Darrell Waltrip's Chevrolet Lumina.

During the fifth and final caution period, caused when Jimmy Means spun out in the second turn, most of the cars made a final pit stop. Waltrip stayed on the track, a decision Elliott felt was a mistake.

"Darrell and those other guys didn't put on new tires," Elliott said.

"New tires will make you go for about 10 or 15 laps."

After the restart, Waltrip jumped out to a big lead but Elliott began moving up fast. He was in second with nine laps remaining and passed Waltrip coming out of the fourth turn to lead with seven laps to go.

"Darrell was awful strong on the restart," Elliott said. "He just wasn't getting through the corners that good. It just took me a little bit of time to get back by him. And I hated that."

From then on, it was all Elliott as the smooth-running Thunderbird pulled steadily away from the pack. Wallace, who was eighth when the green flag came out for the final time, moved around Waltrip on the third turn with two laps left to finish second.

"Second was good for us," Wallace said. "The car was very strong and it was a real good run."

Wallace might have won except for two poor pit stops late in the race. He got a set of bad tires on one and the jack broke on his final stop. Wallace chalked it up to bad luck.

Bird Returns Celtics' Star Pours In 33 Points

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — Larry Bird says there's little he can do about his feet at this point. What he needs to do is get into better shape.

The Boston Celtics forward took the court against NBA competition Sunday night for the first time since bone spurs were removed from both heels seven months ago. Lingering soreness in the left foot kept him from returning to the court during the playoffs.

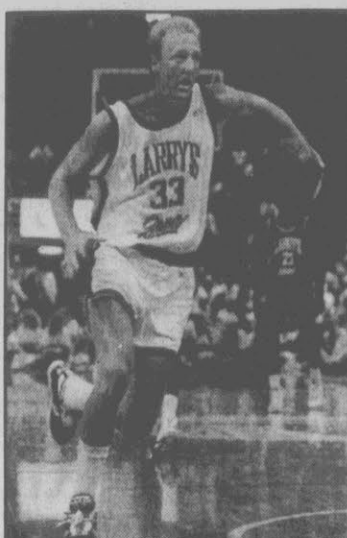

He may not be back to full form, but he scored a reassuring 33 points in 29 minutes in the second Larry Bird Pro All-Star Scholarship Classic, a charity all-star game also featuring Isiah Thomas, Michael Jordan and Dominique Wilkins.

"Well, it's been a while but overall I was pleased with this little test," Bird said. "I really wasn't thinking about the injury going out there. I was just worried about getting in the flow and up and down the court."

"These are games that are great for seeing what kind of shape you are in. I obviously need to be in better shape for the season. I've got three months yet to prepare for next year."

Smith Keys Pitt Past Wayne County

GOLDSBORO — Bryan Smith tossed a six-hitter while John Bolen and Chris Christopher both homered as Pitt County defeated Wayne County, 15-1, in an American Legion baseball game Sunday.

Smith went the distance for Post 39, striking out seven while walking two en route to the win. Pitt banged out 16 hits, led by Christopher and Derrick Clark, who went 3-4 and 3-5, respectively. Walter Gatlin and Travis Williamson added two hits apiece.

Pitt jumped on top early, scoring three runs in the first as Heath Clark opened with a base on balls. Christopher followed with a double before Clark scored on a ground out by Maurice Hines. Walter Gatlin followed with a double to score Christopher and later scored himself when Grant Harmon singled.

Pitt added four more runs in the second as Ty Little had two RBI and Gatlin and Christopher recorded one each 7-0 advantage.

Pitt added two more runs in the third to make it 8-0 before putting the game completely out of reach in the late innings as Bolen hit a four-run homer to left centerfield in the seventh, and Christopher added two-run shot over the right centerfield fence in the eighth.

Wayne County's only run came in the ninth when Shawn Harris doubled in Freddy Gooding.

Pitt returns to action tonight at Kinston.

Snow Hill Edges Wilson In 10 Innings

SNOW HILL — George Burnette came home with the winning run in the bottom of the 10th courtesy of a sacrifice fly by Leslie Jackson to give Snow Hill a 10-9 win over Wilson in American Legion baseball action Sunday.

Snow Hill trailed 9-7 heading into the ninth, but rallied for two runs to force the game into extra innings. Jimmy Hardy opened with bottom of the ninth with a reach off an error. Cedric Collins followed with a single to put runners on the corners. Prentiss Uzzell came up with a fielder's choice which put out Collins but allowed Hardy to score. Darrell Rouse followed with a reach off an error before William Rhodes singled in Uzzell with the tying run.

In the 10th, Burnette came up with a triple before coming home on Jackson's sacrifice fly.

Snow Hill was led by Hardy, who went 4-5. Burnette added a 3-5 performance while Collins was 2-4.

Wilson's Angelo Cox had a two-run homer in the fourth to put Wilson ahead 4-0 early. John Bunn, who was 2-5 on the night, added a two-run shot of his own in the fifth to make it 6-1.

Snow Hill, 8-4, returns to action at Wayne County tonight.

Petrovic Might Join The Blazers

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP) — Yugoslav star Drazen Petrovic, considered the best European guard, said Sunday he might join the Portland Trail Blazers of the NBA.

Petrovic, 25, who plays for Real Madrid, said at the European Basketball Championships that Portland was willing to "buy the rest" of his contract from the Spanish team.

After last year's Seoul Olympics, where Yugoslavia lost to the Soviet Union in the final, Petrovic signed a four-year contract with Real Madrid, reportedly for $1 million.

"I was told that Portland is willing to buy the rest of my contract with Real," Petrovic said. "If the two teams reach agreement, I'm willing to join the NBA."

The 6-foot-5 Petrovic said he was asked to join Portland before signing with Real Madrid, "but the financial offer by the Trail Blazers at that time was much smaller than Real's."

"Now Portland is willing to give much more," he said.

"I think Portland is a very good team for me since I hear they are having problems with Terry Porter, who might leave the club," Petrovic said.

"If Porter goes, I would be the only real guard (playmaker) on the team."

However, Harry Glickman, the Trail Blazers' president, said Porter would remain with Portland.

Cards Purchase The Bull's Contract

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals purchased the contract of veteran first baseman Leon "Bull" Durham from their Louisville farm club on Friday and optioned pitcher Chris Carpenter to the Class AAA team.

Durham, 31, is a nine-year major-league veteran, including 7½ years with the Chicago Cubs. He has a career .278 average with 147 homers and 529 RBIs.

He split last season between the Cubs and Cincinnati Reds, batting .218 with four homers and eight RBIs before being released by Cincinnati on Oct. 3 after spending time in a drug rehabilitation center.

Blue Jays Release Batiste After Arrest

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Toronto Blue Jays outfielder Kevin Batiste was released from Oakland City Jail early Sunday after being arrested at the Oakland International Airport Saturday on weapons charges.

Batiste was optioned to the team's AAA minor-league team in Syracuse Friday. A gun was found in his checked baggage as he attempted to board a plane for Toronto Saturday, according to the Blue Jays' manager of team travel, John Brioux.

"He was going back to Toronto to collect some things before he went on to Syracuse," Brioux said. "He said he got the gun from a friend, and did not know it was stolen."

Williams Pounds Czynz Into Submission

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Charles Williams retained the International Boxing Federation light-heavyweight championship Sunday by pouncing former champion Bobby Czynz into submission after 10 furious rounds of their rematch.

The fight ended with Czynz, his left eye almost closed, sitting on his stool after the 10th round.

"He said he didn't want to continue," referee Rudy Battle said.

It probably was the 27-year-old Czynz' last hurrah. He said he would retire if he lost.

Czynz tried very hard while in there, but Williams was just too strong. The champion began to turn the fight in his favor in the sixth round, and he knocked Czynz down twice in the eighth.

Hornets' Decision Time Is Coming

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — After a weekend of inaction, it's decision-making time today for the Charlotte Hornets as they attempt to complete preparations for Tuesday night's college draft.

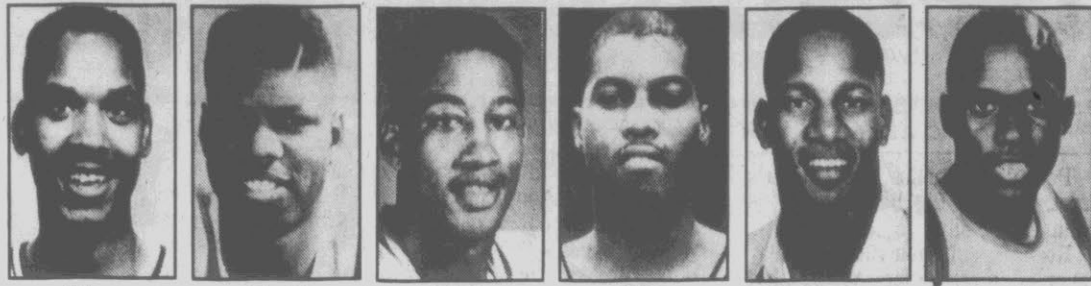

Among the decisions: Do the Hornets hold on to their second-round pick, the 29th overall in the two-round draft, or do they trade for an established player?

Several preliminary offers have been made, including the never-ending pitch for Indiana's Stuart Gray. He'd go straight up for the second-round pick.

Coach Dick Harter might like to see that move made, but the rest of the Hornets' braintrust may not be as fired up.

"Yeah," said Gene Littles, the team's personnel director, "Gray's still out there. And two or three other things. But there really hasn't been anything very substantial to date. Some teams that pick late in the first round or don't have a first pick (Milwaukee and New York) would like that pick. But we'll have to see."

The Hornets would have to weigh

any offers against the list of players they might be able to pick with their second-round selection. Charlotte would love to acquire a point guard from the rich lode of playmakers in this draft, or pick up a small forward to groom for the future.

But most of the top players at both those positions figure to be gone. Still, there's a chance that a guard like Sherman Douglas or Pooh Richardson could fall that far, or that they might be able to grab a forward like Murray State's Jeff Martin.

If that's the case, the Hornets would almost certainly keep their pick. But if they think the best they can do is Georgetown's Charles Smith or Louisville's Kenny Payne, then they might listen more closely to a trade.

The Hornets have until noon Tuesday to complete any deals. After that hour NBA teams must wait until after the draft to make a trade.

Also on the docket for today are final arguments for the various possibilities in the first round where Charlotte picks fifth. Much of that debate will center on predicting the actions of the teams ahead of Charlotte in the draft.

Littles and the rest of the Hornets' staff will be on the phone most of the day, talking with other teams, trying to pin down the order in a most confusing draft.

Charlotte has narrowed its choices to seven players: Pervis Ellison, Sean Elliott, Danny Ferry, Stacey King, J.R. Reid, Glen Rice and Randy White.

It's a lock that Ferry, Charlotte's first choice, will be gone. The Hornets also doubt they'll have a chance at Elliott or Ellison.

Among the other four, anything is possible. White, a 6-7, 256-pound forward from Louisiana Tech, is a fairly sure to be to be available. So is UNC's Reid. The Hornets will likely have their pick of those two, plus Rice or King, although heading into the last 24 hours of preparation, the situation remains very unsettled.

Dowd Wishes He'd Signed Letter

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — John M. Dowd now wishes he'd signed the one-page letter that has landed major league baseball in trouble with the judge.

Dowd, baseball's special investigator of the gambling allegations against Pete Rose, was the one who suggested that Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti send a letter of recommendation for a bookmaker who provided information about illegal gambling by the Cincinnati Reds' manager.

That letter, which praised bookmaker Ronald Peters for being "candid, forthright and truthful," was the decisive evidence cited Sunday by Hamilton County Common Pleas Judge Norbert A. Nadel in issuing an order against Giamatti.

During two days of testimony last week before Nadel, Dowd explained that such letters are common and that he had recommended that Giamatti send it. Rose's lawyers said it was improper for the commissioner to send a letter of recommendation on behalf of one of Rose's main accusers before the commissioner ruled in the case.

In retrospect, Dowd said he wished there was a different signature on the bottom of the five-paragraph letter.

"I wish I had (signed it)," Dowd said, smiling. "We probably wouldn't be here today."

The letter was cited Sunday by Nadel as a clear indication that Giamatti had "prejudged" that Rose was guilty of betting on the Reds, an offense that carries a lifetime ban from the game. Nadel believed Rose's lawyers, who had stressed the letter's importance during the hearing.

"You always look for a smoking gun in any lawsuit and I think (the letter) in this lawsuit constituted the smoking gun," Rose lawyer Roger Makley said Sunday. "It gave a clear indication beyond anyone's imagination that the issue had been prejudged and that Mr. Giamatti had already made up his mind."

"That's the ultimate issue. ... Mr. Giamatti had established himself as the investigator, as the prosecutor, as the judge."

Baseball's lawyers failed to convince Nadel that the letter was merely the fulfillment of an agreement that helped to get Peters to cooperate with Dowd. The letter was sent to U.S. District Judge Carl Rubin, who was scheduled to sentence Peters on drug and tax evasion charges.

"The letter to Judge Rubin is a red herring," baseball lawyer Louis Hoynes Jr. told Nadel. "But if all you have is a red herring, I suppose you have to make the most of it."

Hershiser Spoils Rose's Reprieve

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pete Rose remains in the driver's seat, but the Big Red Machine is sputtering badly.

Rose, fresh from a victory Sunday over Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti, went from "very happy" over an Ohio judge's reprieve to extremely frustrated over a 7-0 loss to Orel Hershiser and the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The Dodgers right-hander allowed 11 hits, but pitched his National League-leading fourth shutout.

"I thought we'd get him for sure," Rose said. "I guess that's why he makes $3 million a year — he pitches 11-hit shutouts."

Hershiser, 9-6, allowed 10 singles, a double and walked two in pitching the 23rd shutout of his career. Eddie Murray, mired in a slump until the Dodgers arrived in Cincinnati, led the Los Angeles offense Sunday with three hits and three RBIs.

Expos 5, Cubs 0

Hubie Brooks' run-scoring triple broke a scoreless tie and keyed a two-run seventh inning, leading Montreal and Dennis Martinez to a sweep of Chicago that left the Cubs in second place, a percentage point behind the Mets.

It was the second straight shutout by the Expos, who allowed the Cubs one run in the three-game series.

Tim Raines beat out a bunt single for his third hit of the game to open the seventh and Brooks followed with his triple off loser Scott Sanderson, 6-6.

Martinez, 7-1, won his sixth straight decision, allowing three hits and one walk in six innings.

Although the first four Expos hit safely in the opening inning, Montreal failed to score because of two outstanding throws by right fielder Andre Dawson. Dave Martinez was thrown out at second and Tom Foley at the plate.

Mets 5, Phillies 1

Sid Fernandez ended a long drought and New York tied a 44-year-old major league record by getting all 27 outs without an assist.

Fernandez, 5-2, struck out nine in seven innings to win for the first time since May 9 as the Mets swept the three-game series and won for fourth time in a row and 10th in 13 games.

Philadelphia, losing for the fifth time in six games, had 12 fly ball outs, two grounders to first and 13 strikeouts. The assistless game was the first in NL history and the first in the majors since July 4, 1945, when Cleveland retired 27 New York Yankees without an assist.

Gregg Jefferies had three hits and drove in two runs. Kevin McReynolds also had two RBIs.

Steve Jeltz, who drove in the Phillies' run, had the first four-hit game of his career.

Pirates 5, Cardinals 3

John Smiley allowed five hits in 6 2-3 innings and doubled home a run for Pittsburgh.

Smiley, 7-2, left after allowing Tom Brunansky's run-scoring double and Milt Thompson's RBI single. Bill Landrum got the last five outs for his sixth save, extending his scoreless streak to 24 1-3 innings in his last 14 appearances.

Junior Ortiz doubled to right with one out in the fourth against Ted Power, 0-2, and Smiley, with one hit in 33 at-bats, lined a double over right fielder Brunansky's head, making it 2-0.

Rey Quinones singled and Ortiz hit a sacrifice fly as the Pirates added two runs in the sixth.

Astros 12, Braves 6

Houston, trailing 5-4 after six innings, made a laughter out of it with three runs in the seventh and five in the ninth. The Astros matched season highs in runs and hits, with 18.

Gerald Young's two-run single in the seventh put Houston ahead to stay and gave the Astros a sweep of the three-game series. Pinch-hitter Craig Biggio had tied the game with an RBI single.

Lonnie Smith lifted the Braves into a 4-4 tie in the fifth inning with an RBI triple. Smith also hit his 10th homer and added a run-scoring fly ball.

Reserve catcher John Russell came on to get the final out for Atlanta.

Padres 10, Giants 7

Tony Gwynn hit a three-run homer and singled three times for his first four-RBI game this season as San Diego ended San Francisco's seven-game winning streak.

Mark Parent added a two-run homer to put the Padres ahead to stay at 6-5 against Scott Garrelts, 6-3.

San Francisco's Kevin Mitchell had three hits, including his 25th home run, extending his major-league lead. He also drove in three runs to boost his major-league-leading total to 70.

Reliever Mark Grant, 2-1, blanked the Giants for 4 1-3 innings, but tired in the ninth. Mark Davis came on for his 19th save, matching Cincinnati's John Franco for the league lead.

Ryan Flirts With No-Hitter — Again

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Never fear, when Nolan Ryan is on the mound one milestone or another is bound to be reached.

Ryan was four outs away from his sixth career no-hitter when Brook Jacoby doubled to right field, just beyond Ruben Sierra's outstretched glove.

"When the ball left the bat I felt it was a hit," Ryan said. "I knew it would take some kind of spectacular play."

The 42-year-old Ryan was relieved by Jeff Russell after allowing Dave Clark's two-run homer with one out in the ninth as Texas beat Cleveland 4-2 Sunday night.

Ryan, the all-time strikeout leader, fanned Joe Carter in the fourth for the "K" No. 4,900 of his career.

In addition to his record five no-hitters, Ryan has 11 one-hitters.

"I don't get involved in it," Ryan said. "I don't get too caught up in it until the ninth. I go out there to shut them out."

Ryan pitched his last no-hitter on Sept. 26, 1981, against Los Angeles while a member of the Houston Astros.

"Nolan's the greatest, isn't he? If he continues to throw like that, he'll get a no-hitter, maybe two," Texas manager Bobby Valentine said.

Rafael Palmeiro had a two-run single in the seventh off Tom Candiotti, 7-6, to give the Rangers a 4-0 lead.

"The fact that he's 42 and still throws that hard is amazing," Indians manager Doc Edwards said. "I tip my hat to him. He's an amazing human being."

Athletics 6, Blue Jays 3

Rickey Henderson had three hits and drove in two runs and Stan Javier hit the first homer by an Oakland right fielder this season as the Athletics beat Toronto at the Coliseum.

Henderson, who rejoined the A's this week after a trade with the New York Yankees, was on base five times with three singles and two walks. He also scored two runs and stole three bases.

Storm Davis, 6-3, allowed six hits in seven innings, and is 4-0 in five starts since returning from the disabled list on June 10.

Angels 7, Orioles 6

Wally Joyner drove in three runs and hit his first homer since April 27 as California held on to beat Baltimore, taking three of four games at Anaheim.

Joyner doubled for two runs in the first inning and hit his second homer of the season in the third as the Angels grabbed a 7-1 lead after three innings against Jeff Ballard, 9-3.

Larry Sheets hit two homers for the Orioles, a two-run homer off Kirk McCaskill, 8-4, in the fourth and a solo homer against Dan Petry in the sixth.

The Orioles got two bases-loaded walks in the ninth, but Bryan Harvey struck out Jim Traber to end the game.

Yankees 5, Royals 4

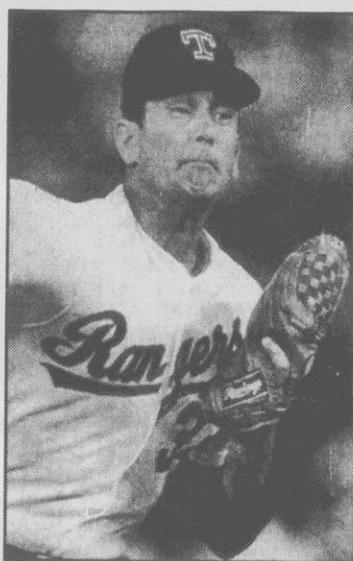

Steve Balboni hit a two-run homer and Don Slaught's run-scoring single capped a three-run sixth inning as New York edged Kansas City.

The Yankees won two of three games, only the second home series the Royals have lost all season. It was the first time New York has won a series of three games or more in Kansas City since July 28-30, 1986.

Twins 7, Red Sox 0

Allan Anderson allowed six hits in eight innings and Gary Gaetti stole home and drove in a run, leading Minnesota past Boston at Fenway Park.

Anderson, 9-4, who led the AL with a 2.45 ERA in 1988, pitched his way out of jams in the fourth and fifth innings and Jeff Reardon got the final three outs.

Brewers 3, White Sox 1

Rookie Jaime Navarro allowed one run in 7 1-3 innings in his second major-league start and Milwaukee scored two runs on a throwing error to beat Chicago at County Stadium.

Navarro left after allowing nine hits and Dan Plesac finished for his 18th save in 23 opportunities.

Mariners 5, Tigers 3

An obstruction call on Detroit first baseman Dave Bergman led to three unearned runs in the second inning and Seattle beat Detroit at the Kingdome.

Bill Swift, 3-2, faced the minimum 20 batters through 6 2-3 innings, allowing four hits, before Bergman hit a solo home run in the seventh.

The Mariners scored four runs in the second, helped by Bergman's error, off David Palmer, 0-3.

Bird Returns ...

Bird made 13 of 23 shots, including four of seven from 3-point range, and added seven assists and three steals in leading his squad to a 182-168 victory in the loosely played game.

Thomas, a member of the NBA champion Detroit Pistons but on the losing team Sunday night, said Bird appeared well on his way back after having played only six games last season.

"I saw just about what I expected. I expected him to be playing well, and he is," Thomas said. "You give him two months, 2½ months, three months to really get his skills down sharp, Boston will win the Atlantic division and be playing for the Eastern Conference championship."

Bird wouldn't say whether his feet had any stiffness or soreness after the game.

"If it gets better, it does," he said. "If it doesn't, there's nothing I can do about it."

"I just have to keep working on my conditioning. If I am healthy I can play," Bird said. "The rest of this summer will be spent on improving my shape and regrouping for next year."

Since the end of the season Bird has had daily basketball workouts, has run sprints and jogged three miles per day, lifted weights, swam, bicycled and played tennis.

"This game allowed me to test myself. This was a challenge I wanted to face. If I was worried about reinjuring the foot, I wouldn't have played.

"I am not sure if I will have any swelling after this test or not. I have pushed myself harder during my workouts and have had no problem," Bird said. "However, I haven't done this much cutting on my own."

Celtics trainer Ed Lacerte came to town and examined Bird's feet Saturday. He sat on the bench and talked with Bird when the player came out of the game. He also was going to check the feet again today.

"We're very pleased with the way he's progressed in the past six weeks," Lacerte said. "We think he's doing well in his conditioning and his running."

"This is a first step, (to) get a sense of where he's at," the trainer said.

Lacerte said it's uncertain at this point how hard Bird will be able to play when he reports to the Celtics' rookie camp next month.

"I think that's another step, another bridge to cross," Lacerte said.

Accidental Discovery May End Obesity

Suppresses-calorie absorption
SWEDEN—Medical researchers at the University of Kuopio, in Finland, have discovered (accidentally) a new weight-loss formula. The new discovery appears to enable an overweight individual to lose pounds and fatty tissue without conventional dieting or exercise.

Scientists made the discovery while searching for a formula to lower cholesterol. In a controlled study of a test group of people, cholesterol levels remained unchanged but the doctors were astounded to find that every patient who used the formula lost weight. The published report of this study stated, "A highly significant decrease in body weight was seen" in patients who received the formula.

The formula was then tested at another prestigious European university hospital. Again, all patients lost weight even though they did not change their eating habits. The report detailing this study, published in the British Journal of Nutrition, stated: "Body weight was significantly reduced even though the patients were specifically asked not to alter their dietary habits". One patient in this study lost more than 30 pounds.

According to one informed source, the active ingredient comes from a 100% natural botanical source and contains no drugs or stimulants. When taken before mealtime it bonds with the food you eat and "ties up" calories, especially those from fats, suppressing their absorption.

A significant portion of the calories ingested therefore pass through the digestive system unabsorbed. The body has to get energy to replace the lost calories, so it starts to burn stored fat, which can result in rapid body weight loss. Clinical testing has verified the safety of this formula for long-term use.

The formula is marketed in tablet form in the United States under the trade name Cal-Ban 3000. A firm located in Tampa, Florida, has exclusive North American distribution rights. A review of the customer files of this company revealed the names of hundreds of people who have lost as much as 20, 40 or 80 or more pounds overall with Cal-Ban 3000. This appears to be a golden opportunity for people who are plagued by fat and cellulite that they can't seem to lose by conventional methods.

Cal-Ban 3000 is reasonably priced at $19.95 for a 3-week supply and $38.95 for a 6-week supply. Postage and handling is $3. VISA, M/C, AMEX and COD orders are accepted. To order call TOLL-FREE 1-800-537-3723 or purchase locally at Farnco Drug Center, 609 E. Greenville Blvd., Greenville, N.C.

That gave Jones a two-shot advantage with one to play and he brought it home, collecting $162,000 and pushing his earnings for the year to $595,971. There was some considerable consolation for Burroughs, who came into the tournament with career earnings of $45,082. 'Hey, that's cool,' Burroughs said after learning he won $67,200 in a three-way tie for second. He had a closing 74.

Real-Life Batman Tries To Keep Sense Of Humor

...But He Might Have To Get His Batphone Unlisted

By Dave Pego
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DALLAS — Batfans are not going to believe this, but Stephen Batman has an assistant named Robin and life is getting so crazed since the huge success of a certain film that he's thinking of getting his batphone unlisted.

"Our family hasn't received many crank calls since the TV series in the '60s," Batman said Saturday. "But now I expect I'll have to unlist my phone. We'll wait and see."

The Dallas securities dealer may be thinking of changing his phone number since the release of the new

"Batman" movie, but he would not change his name.

The 33-year-old is from Dodge City, Kan., not Gotham City. He says his grandfather did a genealogical study of the unusual family name, which originated in England, and found about 300 Batmans — or should that be Batmen — in the United States.

Batman said he has some similarities with the comic book and cinema hero, including having dark hair and being the same height and build.

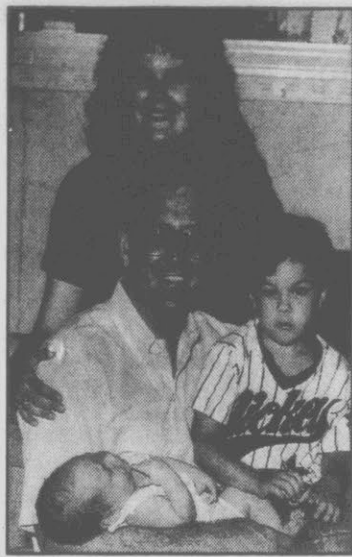

"My administrative assistant's name is Robin — Robin Campbell," he said. "I make a lot of speeches and presentations around the country and no one forgets my name. I get to say, 'I'm Batman and this is my assistant, Robin.'"

And the real Mrs. Batman is named Vicki, bringing to mind Bruce Wayne's girlfriend in the new movie, Vicki Vale.

"I take a lot of kidding," Batman said. "I have a 3-year-old batson, my newborn baby is a batbaby, I have a batdog, and everybody at work says I drive a batmobile."

Batman said he was a grade-schooler when the television series came out and his own popularity rocketed as the program became a hit, although he found it a bit slapstick.

The movie starring Michael Keaton and Jack Nicholson draws high marks from Batman, who was among the first in Dallas to see the show.

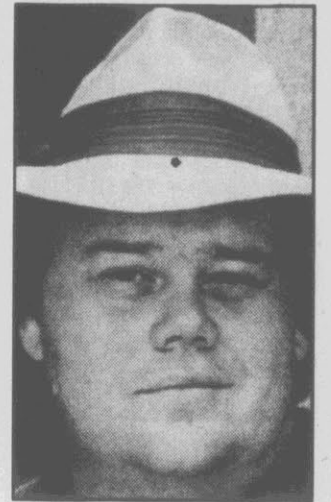

Comedian Gets Buyer With The Magic Touch

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Get this: Comedian Louie Anderson sold his house to a magician.

Anderson, who was featured with sitcom actress Roseanne Barr in "America's Fun Couple Summer Tour," sold his two-story house in Hollywood Hills to an unidentified Orange County magician, said Brett Lawyer, his real estate representative.

Anderson also appeared in the Eddie Murphy movie "Coming to America," and is in "The Jim Henson Hour," scheduled for broadcast in April. Anderson's home was built on property once owned by James Dean.

Even A Convoluted Plot Won't Hide Wit Of 'Playhouse' Comedy 'B-Men'

By Kathryn Baker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Now why would CBS not buy a series about comic teen-age bounty hunters?

"B-Men" airs Tuesday, the latest offering in the "CBS Summer Playhouse" series. "Summer Playhouse" is a nice name for dud pilots.

James MacDonald and David Arnott, a sort of Dan Aykroyd-John Belushi-inspired pairing, star as two wise-mouth high schoolers who win a $25,000 reward after accidentally capturing the "714 killer," a crazed motorcycle madman who kills people who live in the 714 area code.

Despite a convoluted plotline and bumpy direction, the pilot does have its moments of wit, thanks to the satirical script by Dave Thomas, a former member of SCTV, and Rick Kellard. They are also co-executive producers.

CBS no doubt made the right decision in not picking this one up, based on the pilot. Ultimately there's too much dumb stuff to wade through to get to the few good parts.

But in the midst of all the predictable bunk on summer rerun TV, fans of send-up might find "B-Men" worth a look. While many of the jokes don't work, there are some smiles, and even an occasional outright laugh or two. Talk-show host Joe Franklin makes a cameo appearance as himself. Cut to the boys out on the street carrying the ungainly 5-by 3-foot cardboard check, the reward presented to them by the city on Franklin's show. They successfully deposit it in a normal-size bank.

Jim (MacDonald) decides that $25,000 for bagging the biker is the perfect launching pad for a lucrative new career. But Kevin (Arnott) is skeptical. To be a bounty hunter, he argues, "you have to have a beard that grows twice a day!"

There's a poke at the prevailing teen-appeal view of '80s parents when Jim informs his folks over dinner about his new after-school job. "So, how are you going to juggle this and school?" wonders distracted Dad (James Staley). "I don't think it's going to interfere with my schoolwork, Dad," Jim insists. "Well, fine," says Dad. "Pass the veggies, dear."

Past Hasn't Kept Him From The Future

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — Guitarist Steve Morse can't escape his past, but he says the devotion fans have to his old band, the Dregs, hasn't stifled his creativity or kept him from looking to the future.

Wherever Morse plays these days, people want to hear the old songs he wrote and performed with the Dregs, an eclectic instrumental group that never had anything approaching a hit record but garnered an intensely loyal — though relatively small — following.

The band, originally called the Dixie Dregs, was formed in 1977 and broke up in 1983, leaving behind six albums and memories of frenzied, stimulating concerts. The continuing interest in the old material is no problem for the 35-year-old Morse.

"What allows me and my family to eat is the fact that people do come back," he said in an interview during a short break from a month-long club tour to promote his latest solo album, "High Tension Wires" for MCA records.

"It's like one guy, a baker, in a neighborhood of a big city doing his job the best he can. He gets a following and, as long as he does the job, people will come back.

"I'm more like that neighborhood baker than Nabisco, but the repeat business gives me confidence there will be a tomorrow."

Morse's latest music is, like the Dregs, a wide mix of styles. He incorporates rock, jazz, classical, Celtic and country and fuses them into a sound that somehow manages to be both manic and sweetly lyrical.

There's also a bit more acoustic guitar than before from the five-time winner of Guitar Player magazine's "Best Overall" readers poll category.

Though Morse is joined by some of his former bandmates on the album, which contains a remake of the Dregs' "Leprechaun Promenade" recorded during a brief 1988 reunion, his touring trio includes new sidemen Van Romaine on drums and Dave Larou on bass.

Morse said he was excited about the new band, which hit the road after only three days of rehearsal. He likes the freedom of playing in front of an audience, and relishes the contrast from the more methodical approach he takes in the studio.

"Playing live is the ultimate expression. When you improvise, it's stream of consciousness," he said. "Playing live is like driving a race car. You have to react quickly, and hope you're right."

The live show includes songs from the Dregs days, numbers from his two previous Steve Morse Band albums and about three selections from the new record.

The band does not play many of the quieter songs on stage. "We try to keep the energy level up," Morse said.

Since the break-up of the Dregs, Morse also has played with the group Kansas and sat in with the reformed Lynyrd Skynyrd. Those projects gave him another outlet for his guitar playing — that of sideman instead of bandleader.

"Part of the reason I did the thing with Kansas was to completely experience the opposite (of leading a band)," he said. "In manageable doses it's fun, it's less pressure. Just playing guitar parts and showing up for gigs alive — that's a lot less pressure."

Morse also is an accomplished pilot who flies his group's airplane from date to date. He also holds clinics for young guitarists in almost every town in which he performs.

He said the guitarists coming up now are approaching the instrument differently than when he started out, but their goals have not changed.

"The emphasis now is more on technique — and I don't mean moronic technique — than on writing," he said. "There's more emphasis on two-handed playing and on whammy-bar playing."

"But I guess the motivating factor is the same as 10, 20 years ago. The kids want to play and make good music come out of their guitars."

Morse also sees a resurgence in interest in instrumental rock music, and he finds that gratifying.

"But it would make me feel better if it had happened when we were doing it," he said.

Elvis Promoter Col. Tom Parker Honored With 80th Birthday Dinner

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Col. Tom Parker, the promoter who helped transform Elvis Presley from a Memphis truck driver into an entertainment legend, was honored at a gala dinner marking his 80th birthday.

Saturday night's party was at the Las Vegas Hilton, where Presley set attendance records.

Hilton Hotels Chairman Barron Hilton called Parker a "living legend" who could have achieved any goal he desired — from the business world to politics.

Telegrams of congratulations were read from a variety of political and entertainment figures, including President Bush, Bob Hope, Frank Sinatra, Bill Cosby and Presley's widow, Priscilla.

Victims Awarded

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Victims Compensation Commission, at its June 15 meeting in Raleigh, awarded $390,822 to crime victims, the largest ever awarded by the panel.

The guidelines for the commission put a limit for claims at $22,000. Claims of $5,000 or more must be decided by the five-member commission. Decisions on claims of less than $5,000 are made by the commission's director, but must be reported to the commission.

The money awarded is for reimbursement of medical expenses and lost wages resulting from injuries sustained during criminal acts.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): You may be criticized for your ambition. Tell them "there is more to life than staying alive just to see what happens next."

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): If you force hasty, angry conclusions early today, you may have to make peace later. Avoid a tit-for-tat argument. Use creative talents.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Your mood has improved. Join in group activities. Give others the benefit of the doubt until you study matters further.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠A76 ♥652 ♦AK63 ♣A98
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
 1 NT Pass 3 ♥ Pass

What do you bid now?
 A.—We would make the same bid whether partner's jump is invitational or forcing. With an absolute maximum for our bidding, splendid support for partner considering the auction, and all primes, a cue-bid of three spades stands out. Since you didn't bid one spade over one heart and have limited your hand, that must be a cue-bid in support of hearts.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠K1054 ♥83 ♦AQJ72 ♣K7
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♦ Pass 2 ♥ Pass
 2 ♣ Pass 3 ♥ Pass

Q.3—As South, vulnerable you hold:
 ♠A83 ♥J843 ♦AK ♣J765
 Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?
 A.—Although you have a balanced hand of 13 points, the ruffing value in diamonds, a four-card major and fit for partner's suit weigh heavily against a jump in no trump. Bid one heart.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠K752 ♥AJ4 ♦K95 ♣AJ3
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 NT Pass 4 NT Pass

Q.5—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠QJ10982 ♥75 ♦KJ6 ♣52
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♦ 1 ♥ 1 ♣ 3 ♥
 3 ♣ 4 ♥ ?

What action do you take?
 A.—For defense, you have the worst hand possible. Not only do you have virtually nothing in the way of tricks, your fit for partner's suit detracts from his defensive prospects. While you cannot expect to beat four hearts, your offensive prospects are bright. Bid four spades. We would make this bid at ANY vulnerability.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

What do you bid now?
 A.—If you think partner is asking for aces, you need to brush up on your no trump bidding. Partner wants you to bid a slam if you are maximum for your opening, and whether your range is 15-17 or 16-18, this square hand with no intermediates does not qualify. Pass.

Q.7—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠QJ7 ♥AJ4 ♦KQ83 ♣K72
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 NT Pass 3 ♣ Pass
 4 ♣ Pass 5 ♣ Pass

What do you bid now?
 A.—Although you have shown a minimum no trump, partner is still looking for slam with his cue-bid. You have good prime values and solid fillers for his suit—nothing to be ashamed of. Cooperate by cue-bidding five hearts.

AIDS A Major Theme In Gay Pride Marches Report Says Government Undercounted AIDS Cases

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Nearly 670,000 people turned out for gay pride parades from coast to coast Sunday to mark the 20th anniversary of the Stonewall riot in New York City, considered the start of the homosexual rights movement.

AIDS was a major theme in marches in New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Minneapolis, West Hollywood, Calif., Birmingham, Ala., and Lansing, Mich.

In San Francisco, a cheering crowd estimated at 300,000 people turned out for the 19th annual Lesbian-Gay Freedom Parade.

Paraders were led by "Dykes on Bikes," a women's motorcycle contingent clad in everything from nothing to black-lace stockings and leather corsets.

The parade wound through San Francisco's predominantly gay Castro District to the Civic Center for a rally and entertainment.

In New York City, a record 150,000 people marched in the annual Lesbian and Gay Pride March, which marked the 20th anniversary of the Stonewall riot, organizers said. Thousands of cheering spectators lined sidewalks.

Participants mourned the loss of friends to acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

"I have to be here for all those who aren't," said marcher Joe Polito. "This isn't an issue of being gay any more. This is an issue of human rights."

Polito's feelings were echoed by many marchers, who represented groups from the nationally known AIDS Coalition to Unleash Power (ACT UP) to the small contingent of Armenian Lesbians.

One marcher carried a banner citing the parade's honorary grand marshal, Edward F. Murphy, "The Original Stonewaller." Murphy, a longtime gay activist, died earlier this year at 63.

The Stonewall riot occurred on June 27, 1969, when homosexuals battled police conducting a raid at the Stonewall Inn in Greenwich Village. Several participants in the riot marched together.

Mayor Edward I. Koch and other city officials also marched.

The festivities were stopped briefly for a moment of silence for AIDS victims. As marchers stood quietly, skywriting planes spelled out "We remember" over Manhattan.

An anti-gay group of about three dozen people heckled the marchers from behind a double police barricade, waving signs and shouting, "Perverts on parade!"

Marchers mocked the protesters by blowing kisses as they walked past. One man, wearing a striped dress and a towering bouffant wig, shouted over, "We love you!" while Lee Ann Betz held a sign that read "Jesus was gay."

In Chicago, Mayor Richard M. Daley climbed into a glistening aqua 1956 Thunderbird to help kick off the windy city's 20th annual Gay and Lesbian Pride Parade.

"I think the parade means a lot to the gay and lesbian community, and it means a lot to Chicago," Daley said. "It shows a community spirit."

About 90,000 people were expected during the two-mile parade that was to end with a rally.

Daley said an ordinance to protect homosexuals' rights and other minorities was enacted by the City Council earlier this year with his support. He said the ordinance is helping deal with "young punks who come through bashing the gay and lesbian community."

In West Hollywood, Calif., more than 200,000 people gathered for the annual Gay and Lesbian Pride Celebration.

The parade began with the release of thousands of pink balloons inscribed with the words "I Love You" as a tribute to AIDS patients.

An estimated 5,000 to 10,000 people turned out in Minneapolis for a parade and rally.

By Deborah Mesce THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A report today that federal officials are underestimating the spread of AIDS raises questions about the nation's ability to cope with the crisis, say congressmen who are monitoring the epidemic.

A General Accounting Office report says the number of AIDS cases expected to be diagnosed over the next three years has been undercounted by as much as one-third by the Centers for Disease Control.

"The really frightening aspect of this report is it proves how little we know about the AIDS epidemic," Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., said Sunday. He and Reps. John Dingell, D-Mich., and Henry Waxman, D-Calif., requested the study.

"When these projections of AIDS cases go awry, it undermines research, destroys the validity of our plans for taking care of AIDS victims and conveys a false sense of confidence to our fellow citizens that the AIDS epidemic is under control," Wyden said.

The GAO, in a report being released today, estimated that 300,000 to 480,000 Americans will have been diagnosed with AIDS by the end of 1991.

This compares with CDC's estimated range of 185,000 to 320,000 cases through 1991.

Meanwhile, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration was expected today to announce approval of a drug to treat an eye infection in AIDS patients that can lead to blindness, according to sources who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The drug, ganciclovir, has been widely available for several months to AIDS patients with the eye infection, cytomegalovirus retinitis, under a special FDA category that allows distribution of promising drugs to the gravely ill while safety and effectiveness research continues.

About 20 percent of AIDS patients develop the eye infection. Syntex Corp. of Palo Alto, Calif., will market the drug under the name Cytovene.

The GAO evaluated 13 national forecasts of the cumulative number of AIDS cases through the end of 1991 and found a range of predictions from 85,000 to 750,000 cases. The report looked only at the number of potential AIDS cases, not the number of people who test positive for the AIDS-causing human immunodeficiency virus but show no symptoms of AIDS.

Projections of the spread of acquired immune deficiency syndrome are important because they are used in deciding how much money is spent on AIDS education, research projects and public health care services for AIDS patients.

Also, if faulty forecasting is underestimating the heterosexual spread of AIDS, as the report concludes, the result "may be luring a significant number of Americans into a false sense of security," Wyden said.

CDC spokesman Donald Berthel said the agency had no comment on the report.

Sunday editions of The Washington Post said CDC officials acknowledged serious underreporting of AIDS cases but said GAO projections were too high.

The report blamed the undercounting on a variety of factors, including the absence of data on the size of risk groups, the definition of what constitutes an AIDS case, reliance on incomplete surveillance data, and the undercounting of heterosexuals at risk.

The report said CDC must get more up-to-date and accurate information about the risk groups if it hopes to improve its projections.

HUD Reviews Co-Insurance Program For Scandal

LAT-TP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — The Department of Housing and Urban Development, anxious to head off another potential scandal, has suspended or is reviewing nine mortgage companies that finance government-subsidized housing projects in its so-called co-insurance programs.

The agency also has imposed a four-month moratorium on approving new participants for the troubled programs.

Co-insurance, a centerpiece of the Reagan-era efforts to privatize HUD programs, allows private lenders to earn lucrative fees by making mortgage loans to federally backed housing projects. But under the program HUD assumes the lion's share of the losses should a project default.

A recent HUD inspector general's report found that mismanagement and alleged fraud in the program, designed to encourage the rehabilitation and preservation of moderately priced housing, is expected to cost the government millions of dollars. Nearly $700 million worth of mortgages are in default, according to a recent HUD inspector general report.

Internal HUD communications sent to regional HUD administrators and to lenders in recent weeks have detailed the growing concern with how the program has been run both in the field and at HUD headquarters.

The program's problems came to public attention when DRG Funding Corp., a major lender based in Washington, D.C., was kicked out of the program in March. Shortly afterward, two other lenders, Southwest Funding Group, Inc., of Houston and Puller Mortgage Associates of Indianapolis, also were suspended.

A half-dozen other firms have been placed on six-month probation or are being reviewed for fiscal irregularities as HUD officials and, now, congressional investigators begin to take a closer look at the operations of a program that was supposed to showcase the best of privatization.

"Everyone is talking co-insurance," said an aide to Rep. Tom Lantos, D-Calif., who is chairing continuing hearings into program abuses at HUD. "The magnitude of the problem is such that it clearly warrants a closer look."

In most cases, HUD officials charged with reviewing the program's operations said in interviews, the co-insurance problems have centered more on mismanagement than on outright fraud. But investigators in the inspector general's office have expressed concern that developers and mortgage lenders have worked together to "goldplate" some projects, resulting in overvalued and overinsured properties that drive up rents, that could force the projects to the edge of default.

At one auction of foreclosed HUD properties held in Houston last month, 10 projects were resold for only a quarter of the amount it originally cost to finance them. The mortgage loan on the 1,818-unit Colonial House project there, for instance, totaled $47.2 million, but the property sold for $8.9 million.

A former high ranking HUD official, in an interview, called the inflated Colonial House loan "the most brutal abuse I've ever seen in my life." The appraisal was "wildly inflated," and HUD kept the project afloat when it should have been foreclosed, the official said.

Under the co-insurance program, HUD approved private lenders who wanted to take part and who met the requirements. But critics say HUD officials often subsequently failed to perform even the minimum of oversight required under the program.

The department's inspector general began reporting problems with co-insurance in 1984, but it was not until last September that HUD suspended DRG, which is now under criminal investigation. The HUD audit found that $538 million worth of DRG mortgages are in default, representing about 75 percent of all of the co-insurance program's bad loans.

Under co-insurance rules, mortgage companies make loans to the projects then sell securities to the public that are secured by the proceeds of the loan. The mortgage companies collect monthly payments from the property owners and pass them on to purchasers of these Government National Mortgage Association securities. The lenders get lucrative fees — sometimes nearly 5 percent of the loan amount — for these services. But in a default, the lender usually is responsible for about 20 percent of the loss, with the federal government bearing the rest. The government also guarantees the mortgage-backed securities.

"We are trying to determine whether the problem we have is a few co-insurers, or whether the problem is systemic in the program," said Peter Monroe, who has been nominated to be the assistant secretary for housing. "We want specific operating and status reports on the 1,430 projects that exist."

HUD has requested documentation on vacancy rates, cash flow and rent levels from each of the lenders it does business with in order to determine whether other programs are headed for trouble.

Millions May Not Get Welfare Benefits Despite Being Eligible

LAT-TP NEWS SERVICE

EMPORIA, Va. — Harriet Clary's daughter came home with her baby and left after a year. For 17 years Clary and her husband raised their grandchild, sometimes with their daughter's help and sometimes without it.

In recent years leg pains forced Clary to quit her mill job, and the family has been living on her disabled husband's disability check of about $566 a month, but it never really occurred to Clary, whose education ended in the second grade, that other help might be available.

Dealing with "the welfare folk," as she calls them, was never a pleasant experience.

"They scare me to death when they talk to me, the welfare folk. I'm just scared," she said, adding, "They make you feel small."

A year ago she came to the Virginia Legal Aid Society office here after finding out that the leg pains she experienced may have qualified her for disability payments from the federal Supplemental Security Income (SSI) program.

She found that for most of the time she had been raising her granddaughter, she could have received payments from another federal program as well — Aid to Families for Dependent Children (AFDC).

Through ignorance and fear, Clary lost thousands of dollars of benefits, according to Legal Aid officials, which cannot be recovered. Her case, outlined in an interview at the Virginia Legal Aid office here, is not unusual.

While efforts to trim welfare rolls by tightening eligibility standards have traditionally generated considerable controversy, especially in the early years of the Reagan administration, relatively little attention has been focused on the millions of people believed to be eligible for welfare benefits who for a variety of reasons are not receiving them.

Failure to receive the benefits is not the result of any budget constraints. The federal and state governments automatically pay out whatever is needed to provide benefits to anyone who is eligible for major programs since there are no effective spending ceilings.

The implications of millions of the poor or near-poor failing to receive billions of dollars designed to reach them are not lost on experts, both as an indication of the effectiveness of the "safety net" provided by the nation's welfare system and as a further potential fact in budget deficit.

"If more eligible people enrolled, outlays would be substantially higher, probably billions more, but the result would be fewer people in poverty, in need of food or lacking medical care," said Robert Greenstein, a former administrator of the Food and Nutrition Service, now director of the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities.

Recent studies have documented the extent of under-enrollment in major federal programs:

—One-third to one-half of all persons legally eligible for food stamps are not enrolled, according to studies by the Congressional Budget Office, Mathematica Policy Research (done for the Agriculture Department) and the General Accounting Office.

The CBO and Mathematica studies found that in mid-1984 about 30.4 million people were eligible but at most only 20 million were enrolled. Enrollment may have been as low as 15.6 million, the Congressional Budget Office said.

—A third to a half of those eligible for SSI, a cash welfare program for the aged, blind and disabled run by the Social Security Administration, are not enrolled. A study by ICF Inc. for the American Association of Retired Persons concluded that in 1985, looking at those age 65 and over, only about 2 million were enrolled in SSI although 3.8 million persons were eligible — a 51.5 percent participation rate.
