House Pushes Flag Plan

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Demonstrating their opposition to flag-burning, a form of protest the Supreme Court declared legal last week, House members held an all-night session of speechmaking that ended just before 9 a.m. today.

Meanwhile, the House has drafted a constitutional amendment to forbid flag-burning and President Bush hopes to work with Republican leaders in Congress to have a final version done as early as Friday.

House Republican Leader Robert Michel of Illinois, who launched the all-night session, drafted his own version of what a constitutional amendment could look like. His would simply give Congress the authority to ban desecration of the flag.

Presidential press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said Wednesday that Bush's proposal would be developed jointly with Michel and Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan.

Michel included Democrat Sonny

Montgomery of Mississippi in sponsoring his speech marathon, and more than a dozen lawmakers of both parties spoke.

Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Texas, called the Supreme Court ruling "a bit of muddle-headed libertarianism" by the majority, and he predicted a constitutional amendment would pass.

The amendment proposals seek to set aside last week's ruling upholding the constitutionality of

Supreme Court Delays Ruling On Abortions

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court did not announce its decision on the fate of legalized abortions today, instead extending its 1988-89 term until Monday and raising the suspense over the most closely watched case of the decade.

The court's lack of action disappointed the scores of abortion opponents and advocates who waited in line overnight for one of the few seats available in the courtroom. Others milled outside the historic court building in anticipation of a decision that could overturn or retain a woman's right to an abortion.

In addition, the court left hanging its decision in another important case on church-state relations.

That case stems from the holiday displays of a Christmas Nativity scene and a Hanukkah menorah at government buildings in Pittsburgh. Lower courts said the displays represented an impermissible promotion of religion by government.

The court announced just two rulings from the bench during a brief public session. The Missouri case called Webster vs. Reproductive Health Services was not one of them.

The justices are being asked to use the Missouri case to reverse the court's 1973 landmark Roe vs. Wade decision legalizing abortion.

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist said from the bench, "On Monday, July 3, the court will announce all the remaining opinions during this term of the court."

People on either side of the emotional issue were left with another weekend of anticipation.

"It is difficult to wait for the court to hand down these decisions, of course it is difficult, but we remain optimistic," said Olivia Gans of the National Right to Life Committee.

Faye Wattleton, president of Planned Parenthood, spoke of the potential for a delay into next year and said it would be "an indication of the turmoil that this court is willing to create in the country."

The Webster case is one of three cases separating the court from its three-month summer recess, which reporters previously had been led to believe would begin today.

Despite rumors that some justices are still writing opinions on the Administration Rejects House Sanctions Package

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State James A. Baker III today rejected as unacceptable a House package of proposed sanctions against China, declaring that human rights "is not the only principle which determines our foreign policy."

Baker defended the administration's policy of cautious response to the bloody crackdown of the student-led pro-democracy movement and of limited sanctions.

"We recognize the desire of elected officials to speak to this issue, and to vote on this issue," Baker told reporters. "But we really firmly believe that the leadership in this instance should come from the executive branch and it should come from the president of the United States as commander-in-chief."

Baker's comments, at a White House briefing on the upcoming economic summit, came as House leaders prepared to move ahead with the package of new sanctions drafted late Wednesday by senior members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

House leaders had said they were near winning the Bush administration's endorsement. But, Baker said, "We cannot support it in its current form."

Bush previously condemned the violence in China, halted all military aid and banned exchanges of military officials and high-level visits.

"He has forcefully expressed his outrage and his sorrow. In addition to that, he has taken a number of what we think are significant actions by way of sanctions," Baker said. "We are following the proper course."

Baker said that, while human rights remained "a major foundation principle" for U.S. policy, "it is not the only principle which determines our foreign policy... It cannot be the sole principle which determines the response of the United States in a situation like this."

British, Soviets Sign Space Pact

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — Soviet and British officials today signed an agreement for the first Soviet-British space mission and announced their search for the man or woman who will become the first Briton in space.

The Briton will accompany two cosmonauts to the Soviet orbiting station Mir in 1991.

The mission, named Juno, will be the first manned space flight financed entirely by the private sector, project director Malcolm Magee-Brown told a Moscow news conference.

Two British candidates will be selected by November. Only one will fly aboard Mir. The other will be an understudy.

British Air Vice Marshal Peter Howard, in charge of astronaut selection, said candidates should be 21 to 40 years old, physically fit, have a degree in science and an aptitude for handling delicate scientific equipment.

Ads will appear in British newspapers in the next few days.

The British consortium behind the trip is trying to raise $25 million to cover costs for the British astronaut's part in the mission, Magee-Brown said. It hopes to find the funding through corporate sponsorships, contracts for scientific experiments in orbit and the sale of broadcast and publishing rights, he said.

The project pairs the British consortium with Glavkosmos, the Soviet space agency. Glavkosmos is already planning to send an Austrian and a Japanese journalist up to Mir in 1990 or 1991, director Alexander Dunayev said.

Industrial-Eppes Alumni Set For Reunion

By Carol Tyer
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Jean Darden, national president of the Greenville Industrial-Eppes High School Alumni Association, has announced plans for the association's 9th annual school reunion to be held in Greenville Saturday and Sunday.

The festivities will include a registration reception Friday night; a breakfast, parade, picnic and dance Saturday, and worship Sunday morning. Ms. Darden said members from five chapters will take part. She said alumni from throughout the country will be arriving Friday, with several chartered buses bringing groups from chapter sites in New Haven, Conn., New York City, Baltimore, Washington, D.C., and Hampton, Va. The Greenville chapter will host the event.

"People say it's a little unusual for a whole school to have a reunion altogether and to do it every year," Ms. Darden said. "But we see this as a way to preserve our heritage. We feel that our school was an excellent school that would soon not be remembered if we didn't give it this attention."

She said the reunion is held each year on the weekend nearest the Fourth of July, with graduates and those having ever attended Greenville Industrial or Eppes having standing invitations to attend with their families.

Registration will begin at 7 p.m. today at the Greenville Moose Lodge.

A breakfast-business meeting will be held at the Moose Lodge beginning at 9 a.m. Saturday. Ms. Darden said special awards will be given during this meeting and the organization's annual $2,000 scholarship will be presented.

According to Johnny Wooten, parade chairman, the reunion annual parade will begin at 4 p.m. Saturday, unless it rains then, in which case it will be held as soon as it stops raining. He said grand marshals for the parade will be Howard Barnhill, a state representative from Mecklenburg County who is an Eppes alumnus, and Dawn Reavis, WNCT-TV news anchorwoman. The parade route will be from the Imperial Tobacco Factory on Atlantic Avenue to Thomas Foreman Park on West Fifth Street.

Featured in the parade, along with the grand marshals, will be Keisha Pilgreen, Pitt County's Outstanding Female Athlete of the Year. She will be representative of the youth of Pitt County.

Included will be floats representing each of the six alumni chapters and the national board of directors, along with marching units and drill teams. The parade's traditional Lincoln-Cadillac Review will be led by the honorary chairman, the Rev. James "Shorty" Wilkes. Floats will be decorated to carry out the parade theme, "Remember When."

Wooten said parade participants need to be at the lineup area at 3 p.m.

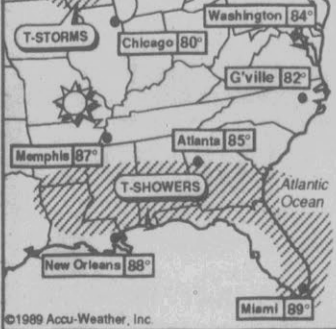

A picnic will be held at Thomas Foreman Park immediately after the parade. A dance will be held from 9 p.m. Saturday until 1 a.m. Sunday, with music by the Monitors, the leader of whom is Eppes High graduate William "Bill" Myers.

The schoolmates will worship together Sunday at 11 a.m. at York Memorial AME Zion Church.

Cocaine Suspects Arrested

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Thirty people, including one or more from Pitt County, were being rounded up to face cocaine trafficking charges today following a two-year probe that involved the work of an investigative grand jury, the SBI said.

"It enables us to sweep in some pretty substantial dealers," said SBI Director Robert Morgan. "Three are charged with continuing criminal enterprise, a number are charged with conspiracy and there are a multitude of trafficking in cocaine charges."

The 30 suspects are facing charges in 226 trafficking cases, Morgan said.

"When you say continuing criminal enterprise, you're talking about people who deal with substantial amounts of cocaine," Morgan said. "It crossed county lines, city lines and state lines. We're picking one up today in Florida."

Most of those facing charges are in Kinston, Pender County and Duplin County, with a handful in Greene, Jones and Pitt counties and one in Florida, he said.

A spokesman with the Kinston Police Department this morning said the names of the people being rounded up could not be released until they are taken into custody. But he said that "several" Pitt County residents are among those charged in connection with the investigation.

Bill Wyatt, public information officer for the Kinston police said that all those taken into custody in connection with the grand jury investigation would be taken to the Kinston Police Department for processing. But he said he did not know exactly how many are from Pitt County.

Students Join Rural Electric Tour

Three area high school students recently participated in North Carolina's 1989 Rural Electric Youth Tour in Washington, D.C.

David Whitehurst and David Lilley, both of Route 5, Greenville, represented Edgecombe-Martin County Electric Membership Corp. in Tarboro, and Scott Walston of Farmville represented the Pitt and Greene Electric Membership Corp. in Farmville.

Over 40 young people were selected to participate in the tour through contests sponsored by Electric Membership Corporations from across the state. The North Carolina students joined over 1,200 young people from 39 states for various educational sessions and tourist activities in the nation's capital.

Camcorder, Bikes Taken By Thieves

Investigators said a dozen thefts, ranging from a camcorder to bicycles, cigarettes and license plates, were reported to Greenville police Wednesday.

Officer A.G. Lloyd said a camcorder, valued at $1,000, was taken from Lowe's at 1055 SW Greenville Blvd. in an incident reported at 9:38 a.m., and said two soft drinks were taken from a coin-operated machine at Crowell Auto Cleaning at 1611 Wataugua Ave. in a break-in reported at 7:58 a.m., while Officer C.A. Curtis said a bicycle was taken from a parking lot on Cotanche Street in an incident reported at 1:59 a.m.

Officer C.G. Alphin said a battery was taken from a vehicle parked at 1809A W. Conley St. in an incident reported at 6:44 a.m. and said a license plate was taken from a car parked at 213 Allendale Road in an incident reported at 7:13 a.m. Officer C.A. Elks said a license plate was taken from a car parked at Pugh's Tire Service at the intersection of Fifth and Greene streets in an incident reported at 9:45 a.m. and a 1982 Toyota Tercel, recovered in Fayetteville, was taken from 1606 Dickinson Ave. in an incident reported at 1:28 p.m.

Officer E.L. Butts said 14 cartons of cigarettes, valued at $196, were taken from the Fast Fare at 3196 E. 10th St. in an incident reported at 10:21 a.m., while Officer K.M. Lang said a .22 caliber pistol and 50 rounds of ammunition were taken from 103A Ridge Road in an incident reported at 12:53 a.m.

Officer J.G. Jenkins said a wallet containing $13 in cash was taken from a vehicle parked at 303 Granite Drive in an incident reported at 4:11 p.m., while Officer K.L. Jones said $100 was taken from a man on Fleming Street by two others in a strong-arm robbery incident reported at 6:03 p.m.

According to Officer M.T. Scheid, two bicycles were taken from 407 Kirkland Drive in an incident reported at 8:36 p.m.

Gang Terrorizes S.C. Beach Area

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTIC BEACH, S.C. — Police say a teen-age gang known as the Posse may be responsible for assaults on 11 people last month at Atlantic Beach.

"They're coming from all areas and they're preying on the tourists," Police Chief Ronald Isom said. "On the weekends they meet up here. We've been trying to catch them, but it's tough."

At least two strong-arm robberies, one rape, one attempted rape, one assault with intent to kill and six other assaults have taken place on the four-block beach since May 24, police said.

The attacks seem similar, but there is no pattern to when they occur, police said. They seem to be random, usually with two young people approaching tourists around midnight or in the early morning. The teens usually ask for something, such as a cigarette, then rob or assault the tourists.

Police believe most of the attacks may have been committed by members of the Posse, a group of at least 15 teen-agers who live in surrounding areas, including Brunswick County, N.C., just over the border.

The assailants have been black and the victims white, but police said the assaults were not racially motivated.

With The Armed Services

Maj. Gen. Nathaniel H. Robb Jr., the adjutant general for North Carolina, has appointed First Lt. Ronald J. Turner of Tarboro, as the new company commander of headquarters, Headquarters Company, 167th Military Police Battalion of the N.C. National Guard in Washington, N.C.

Turner replaces Capt. Ricky L. Streeter of Greenville, who was reassigned as company commander of the 514th Military Police Company of the National Guard in Greenville.

Army Reserve Private Stevenson R. Maye, son of Lander Maye Jr. of Greenville and Alice Maye of Washington, N.C., has completed basic training at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.

He is a 1987 graduate of D.H. Conley High School, Greenville.

Staff Sgt. Richard L. Blow Jr. has completed a U.S. Army primary leadership course. He is a cannon crewman with the 8th Field Artillery, Fort Ord, Calif.

Blow is the son of the Rev. Richard L. Blow Sr. of Snow Hill and Ernestine Blow of Grifton.

The sergeant is a 1977 graduate of Greene Central High School, Snow Hill, and a 1983 graduate of the University of Maryland, Baltimore.

New Chairman

Jerry Lotterhos, current chair of the Department of Community Health and director of the Alcohol/Drug Program, on Friday will complete a five-year appointment as chair of community health at the East Carolina University School of Allied Health Sciences.

Lotterhos, who has been director of the Alcohol/Drug Program since 1973, will continue that role in an expanded master's and bachelor's program in the Department of Rehabilitation Studies. The expanded effort involves the addition of one new faculty member, along with Lotterhos, to that area of research and teaching.

Replacing Lotterhos as chairman will be Dr. Donald Ensley, an associate professor who has been with the department since 1976. Dr. Ensley had previously been director of graduate studies within the department.

A native of Belhaven, Dr. Ensley has a Ph.D. in higher education administration from Michigan State University and a master's degree in public health from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

New Home Sales Up During May

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Sales of new homes edged up 2.7 percent in May as mortgage interest rates continued to decline, but they remained well behind the pace set in the previous two years, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said sales of new single-family homes rose to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 613,000 units in May following a 9.1 percent increase in April. The April figure was revised downward from the 10.9 percent increase reported earlier.

The April increase had been attributed by some economists to an aberration in sales in February and March, when sales dropped 11.3 percent and 11.9 percent, respectively. Sales had risen 4.6 percent in January.

The pace of sales in May still was well behind the 676,000 new homes sold in 1988 and the 671,000 units sold in 1987.

For the first five months of the year, new home sales were 7.1 percent lower than in the same period a year earlier.

The housing industry has been among the sectors of the economy hardest hit by the Federal Reserve's campaign to push up interest rates in an effort to slow economic growth and thus restrain inflation. Recently, it appeared to ease its grip slightly as the economy showed signs of cooling.

Fixed-interest rates peaked in March at 11.22 percent and fell since then to 10.48 percent in the last week in May, according to the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp.

The Northeast led the sales rebound in May with a 12.6 percent increase to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 98,000 units after falling 20.9 percent in April.

Sales also were up 7.7 percent in the West to a rate of 197,000 units following a 28 percent jump in April. The South posted an increase of 2.6 percent to a rate of 234,000 homes after a 16.3 percent hike the month earlier. The Midwest had the only decline in sales, off 15.3 percent to an annual rate of 83,000 units. Sales had been flat in the region during April and March at an annual rate of 98,000 homes.

The increase in sales was accompanied by a $9,000 increase to $125,000 in the median price of the homes sold. The median price means half the homes sold for more and half for less.

The average price, which is pulled up by sales of expensive homes, also increased last month, rising $13,000 to $158,800.

Military Exercise

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — Some 4,000 spectators viewed Fort Bragg's annual Joint Readiness Training Exercise on Wednesday, as the Army and Air Force demonstrated its firepower with rocket-firing helicopter gunships and cannon blasts from fighter bombers.

The demonstration went off almost without a hitch. But a similar exercise at Fort Bragg in July 1987 came to a tragic end when an Air Force C-130 aircraft crashed and burned on a dirt runway before thousands of spectators. Five servicemen died and two others were hurt in the crash.

Maj. Doug Foster, a Fort Bragg spokesman, said the annual exercise is held to provide training for Army and Air Force units and to "give the taxpayer a chance to see where their tax dollars are going."

The 82nd Airborne Division troops must be ready without notice to deploy anywhere in the world, Foster said.

Shooting

RALEIGH (AP) — A 41-year-old Raleigh man has been charged with the fatal shooting of a man he allegedly chased down in a pickup truck following a confrontation, police say.

The young men were walking past the shooting suspect's house Tuesday night when the incident occurred, police said.

Frederick Thomas Staten apparently did not know the three men, but told them "something about not wanting them in his neighborhood" or to get out of his neighborhood," said Raleigh Police Sgt. J.E. Beasley.

Foul Ball

The Bottom Of The Ninth?

Norbert A. Nadel may be a good judge, but he's not so hot at baseball.

He threw the game a curve when he granted Cincinnati Reds Manager Pete Rose a two-week reprieve from disciplinary action by Baseball Commissioner Bartlett Giamatti. In any score book, that's a foul ball.

It's simple common sense about a simple pastime: if the commissioner of the all-American sport can't call 'em like he sees 'em, the game of baseball has struck out. If Nadel doesn't know that, he's got no business playing the game.

Rose has been under investigation by baseball for alleged gambling. He is accused of betting against his own team. Nadel's ruling is a victory for Rose, and now an Ohio appellate court has decided not to intervene in that decision.

The judge is clearly out of his league. He has committed an error of major proportions. By protecting Rose from any disciplinary action from Giamatti, Nadel has given the former star an unearned run.

Besides, what is a common pleas judge even doing on the team? What with flag burning and abortion vying for the court's attention, why waste a judge's time on baseball?

Sadly, the investigation of Rose's actions is pretty damning. It ain't over 'til the fat lady sings, but from the looks of the report released this week, Rose's fans are fixing to get an earful. That's not good for baseball. If the game can't take meaningful action against one of its own for what it believes to be a betrayal of the sport's moral standards, it may be the bottom of the ninth for all America's teams.

Judges and courts have no business meddling in baseball discipline. If a player tries to execute a squeeze play around improprieties, he should be thrown out at the plate.

Simple Deals Between Great Americans

Art Buchwald

It appears that almost half the Reagan administration has gone into the consulting business in Washington.

Are they doing anything wrong? Former Secretary of the Interior James Watt doesn't think so. Neither do any of the other people who are charging enormous fees to sneak their clients into the back door of government. Yet, the HUD scandals seem to have given the consulting business a bad name — at least that's what Horace Diphong, a former White House aide, told me.

"We are providing a service. We know those in power and our clients don't, so we make the telephone calls."

"Some people think it smells," I said.

"That's because they are too cheap to use our services."

"How do you operate?" I asked him.

"Suppose that you're a developer and you are trying to get a pile of money out of HUD. You're a nobody, and the people at HUD know it. You call up Jim Watt and say, 'I have a problem. I need money and no one in the Housing Department will tell me the time. Will you take my case?' Jim answers, 'Sure, I will, because you are a great American and so am I, and you're going to give me $200,000 for helping you.' You reply, 'That's a lot of money. Who are you going to talk to?' and he says, 'Would you believe the secretary of Housing himself?' Now if that isn't worth 200 big ones, I'll cut down every tree in the Yellowstone National Park."

"Watt is all heart," I remarked.

"I'm attempting to point out to you how we consultants in Washington earn our money. Only former appointees know what buttons to push."

"How do you manage to get such good results?"

"It's very simple. Every person now in power in this city was either recommended by us, trained by us or appointed by us. Practically all of Washington owes us a favor. We don't take advantage of it, and only ask for something when we're getting paid by a client."

"The present officials do seem eager to help."

"I hope so, otherwise the revolving door system would get stuck. People like Watt are the grease that makes our government go downhill."

"I assume that you do the same things as Watt does."

"Yes, but not so well. I could not have gotten Secretary Samuel Pierce on the phone — at least not on the first call. I don't do too badly. I have had clients who hired me to get them HUD money even when they weren't certain if they were going to use it to build houses in Scranton or take a trip to Rio de Janeiro."

"Did you get them the cash?"

"Has anyone ever failed to get money from HUD? We cleaned the safe out."

"Is it possible to get anything from this administration without hiring an ex-administration consultant?"

"Why would anyone try? God knows there is enough money to go around for everybody."

"So, if I want funding from the feds, the easiest way is to call you."

He smiled, "It's the only way — unless you enjoy beating your head against the wall. Listen, everything we undertake is legal. We're the good guys in Washington. All we do is make the call verifying that you're a loyal American, and that it's OK for them to give you a check. The people in charge of doling out the money feel better then because they now know that the client is a safe risk. Who is going to question a Jim Watt client, after Watt guarantees that the guy is a 100 percent patriot?"

"And for this Watt gets 200,000 bucks?"

"Well, he doesn't do freebies like Mother Teresa."

A Means To Healthier Teen-Agers

A W.K. Kellogg grant of $888,739 to the East Carolina University School of Medicine is one of the school's largest.

The grant will be used to improve personal and community awareness of teen-agers' health.

The Project co-directors are Dr. Thomas G. Irons and Dr. Katherine Kolasa, both faculty members of the School of Medicine. They say the work will continue for many years and will involve families, schools and other institutions of the community.

While it is easy to think of teen-age years as the time of life when health is best, the health complications of these years are myriad.

Nutrition is a major concern as developing young bodies sometimes must grow on inadequate diets made up to a large extent of "junk" foods. This can cause immediate health problems for teen-agers and certainly lays the groundwork for health problems in the future.

Alcohol and drug use can lead to early health troubles and even death. Accidents, particularly vehicular accidents, are the bane of the teen-ager. Sensible driving, taught early, can bring a major improvement.

Teen-age sex activities can mean early sexual diseases which might last a lifetime — or cause early death.

Teen-age pregnancies are a modern-day concern. They can be prevented through education concerning the values of love and faithful marriage. In the cases where teen-age girls do become pregnant, they must know that seeking medical care early is the best way they can deliver a healthy baby and preserve their own health.

The W.K. Kellogg Foundation was established to "help people help themselves." It is one of the largest philanthropic organizations the world and its grants have had impact in the United States, Latin America, the Caribbean and southern African countries.

The Kellogg grant to the ECU School of Medicine means that Pitt County can become a model area for developing ways to improve teen-age health. It offers an exciting challenge to us all.

A New Record For Errors

WASHINGTON — Last year Tommy John, then a Yankees pitcher, set a modern record by making three errors on one play. Judge Norbert Nadel has made five errors while butchering what should have been a routine play.

Nadel, an elected judge in Pete Rose's hometown, made a dumb decision; he began from a foolish premise; he committed the offense — prejudice — he accuses baseball's commissioner of; he mistakenly assumed that his judicial ukase is justified if Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti actually is by now less than open-minded about Rose. And he compounded confusion by continuing to keep secret the report on Rose's activities.

America's judiciary has an awful itch to bring every facet of life under its supervision. The itch is so widespread that any person with a problem that an itchy judge might alleviate can hope to hit upon such a judge. Rose, a fine contact hitter, did.

Nadel has prejudged Giamatti as prejudiced and has imposed upon him the burden of proving himself innocent. Nadel cited no case law in which a court has interfered with the commissioner in the exercise of his duties. Nadel cited no law of any sort.

Government action is not involved in the Rose case, so constitutional due-process requirements do not obtain. The only contractual rights involved are the commissioner's rights that Rose and everyone else acknowledges when signing the standard contract. Perhaps Nadel accepts the prevalent premise that any judicial fiat in the name of "fairness" is justified.

Baseball's traditional, tested procedures were going forward and Rose did not like the destination he anticipated. So he attacked the process. Nadel was agitated by Giamatti's letter to another judge, endorsing the truthfulness of one of Rose's accusers.

But even without that letter, Rose probably would have attacked the process, and Nadel probably would have supported him, on the ground that baseball's commissioner is in such cases both investigator and adjudicator. However, that is not a novelty. The Federal Trade Commission and Securities and Exchange Commission have a similar combination of functions.

If Giamatti has erred, it has been in the spirit of fairness. He has tried too hard to be fair. After receiving the 225-page report on Rose's activities, Giamatti gave the report to Rose and his lawyers and gave them 30 days to interview and depose witnesses. They contacted only one; they interviewed none. Instead, they sought the evisceration of the office of commissioner.

The office was created in the wake of the 1919 Black Sox scandal to do what it has done brilliantly: protect baseball's integrity. If Nadel succeeds in insinuating himself (and hundreds of imitators) into baseball's disciplinary procedures, the commissioner's core function — discipline — will be rendered permanently problematic. Yet another American institution will have been broken to the saddle of supervision by nanny government. The insidious permeation of life by politics and state power will have advanced.

Courts have refused when asked by owners to block commissioners who have, in effect, seized the owners' property. In 1931, the first commissioner, Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, declared a St. Louis Brown a free agent in a dispute with the Browns' owner, Phil Ball. In 1976, Bowie Kuhn blocked Charles Finley, owner of the Oakland Athletics, from selling three players for $3.5 million. Kuhn did so under the broad grant of power to act "in the best interests of baseball."

As this is written, news organizations are seeking the Rose report that the commissioner has offered to release and that Rose has not tried to suppress. No one knows why Nadel has kept it secret. Explaining his actions is not Nadel's strength.

The author of the report, a Washington attorney, interviewed 80 people. Rose has read the report and he knows the truth about his activities. Hence he knows if the report is assailable. Soon we will all know about the law-enforcement officer who says Rose's fingerprints are on betting slips, and the handwriting expert who says Rose's printing is on such slips, and the nine people who say they witnessed Rose's gambling activities, and the telephone records and cancelled checks allegedly involving gambling.

'So, no plea bargaining. Rose is a tough guy seeking justice, not mercy. More than 4,000 times he has walked into clubhouses where the rules are posted. Bet on baseball, you "shall be" suspended for a year. Bet on your team, you "shall be" permanently ineligible. Shall be, not may be.'

Either there has been an extraordinary conspiracy against Rose or there has been an incredible concatenation of coincidences and accidents that have piled up what looks like, but is not, evidence of gambling in violation of baseball's rules. Rose is either innocent or he violated those rules a lot and for a long time and now has compounded his offense by lying about it and attacking the governance of baseball.

So, no plea bargaining. Rose is a tough guy seeking justice, not mercy. More than 4,000 times he has walked into clubhouses where the rules are posted. Bet on baseball, you "shall be" suspended for a year. Bet on your team, you "shall be" permanently ineligible. Shall be, not may be.

If he is innocent on both counts, he still should be suspended for a year. Denny McLain was suspended for 90 days in 1970 and Leo Durocher for a year in 1947 for associating with gamblers.

Rose now says: Don't believe my former associates who are accusing me — they are criminals. Precisely the point.

House Panel Axes Senate Pay Plan For Teachers

By John Flesher
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — There appears to be no viable plan in either General Assembly chamber for funding a 6 percent pay raise for teachers and state employees that most legislators agree is needed.

A Senate-passed plan to fund teacher salaries died in the House on Wednesday after raucous debates that at times turned into shouting matches between members of the bipartisan coalition loyal to House Speaker Joe Mavretic and Democrats who opposed him.

"So much for openness," House Majority Leader Dennis Wicker, D-Lee, said. "We were slam-dunked in committee today. ... To me, that is a travesty and the height of hypocrisy."

"Never in my life have I been to a wilder meeting," Rep. Alex Hall, D-New Hanover, said.

When the dust settled, the House Finance Committee had voted 25-23 to reject the linchpin of the Senate program — an increase in the state sales tax on motor vehicles from 2 percent to 3 percent, with a $1,500 limit on commercial vehicles — and the full House had defeated 60-53 an effort to bypass the committee and take the plan to the House floor.

The votes effectively killed the Senate plan, leaving the two major issues before the General Assembly — highways and education — in limbo the week legislative leaders had hoped to adjourn the 1989 session.

It also hardened the schism between the House's two primary factions: the bipartisan Mavretic coalition and the Democrats loyal to former Speaker Liston Ramsey, who repeatedly challenged Hall's rulings as Finance Committee chairman and blasted the Mavretic group for cutting off debate.

Hall defended his handling of the committee meeting and accused his critics of turning the Senate bill into a power contest between the Mavretic and Ramsey factions.

Aside from the vehicle sales tax increase, the $195 million Senate bill calls for boosting the taxes on car rentals and on boats, planes and locomotives and for a technical change in income tax filing procedures that will create a one-time $24 million windfall.

The Mavretic coalition, following a strategy mapped in a meeting with Gov. Jim Martin at the Executive Mansion on Wednesday morning, removed those provisions from the Senate bill before voting the measure down. Their intent was to allow the provisions other than the automobile sales tax to be a part of future tax packages.

The coalition, allied with Martin, opposes the Senate's use of the auto sales tax in its budget plan because the House has passed an $8.6 billion highway construction program that calls for the same tax increase.

If the Senate plan were approved, the auto sales tax would generate revenue for the budget's general fund for at least two years. Afterward, Senate leaders say they would divert the tax to the highway program.

Supporters of the Senate bill say it would slow down the highway program from 12 to 15 years but that all the proposed road projects would be funded. Critics say the move would cripple the highway program.

The House floor vote against the Senate bill would require a two-thirds vote to reverse — a virtually impossible task.

Meanwhile, the sponsor of the Senate plan — Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston — is holding the House highway bill in the Senate Finance Committee, of which he is chairman.

Rauch said he would not retaliate for the House's action by killing the House road bill, but gave no indication of when he would bring up the measure in his panel.

"The Senate is a mature body of legislators and they will react as they see fit, without regard to personalities or egos," Rauch said.

Rauch, who appeared before the House committee to explain his bill, stood impassively at the podium as the House committee battled and the Mavretic coalition held sway on a series of close votes. It was standing-room-only in the meeting room, with lobbyists and other spectators lining the walls and spilling into the hall.

After stripping down the Senate bill, Rep. Roy Cooper, D-Nash, moved to cut off debate and vote.

But Democrats allied with Ramsey hotly protested. At one point, Rep. Milton Fitch, D-Wilson, and Hall were shouting at each other so loudly that neither could be heard, with Fitch charging that rules were being violated and Hall demanding order.

Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, pleaded with the committee to let other amendments be offered. He said he wanted to propose increases in alcoholic beverage taxes that would allow more spending on the Basic Education Program than the Senate plan envisions.

Rep. Bob Hunter, D-McDowell, chief sponsor of the highway bill, said he wanted to offer an amendment to raise the annual vehicle registration fee from $20 to $25 and in 1997 to $30. That, he said, would allow the highway program to be completed in 12 years as Martin and his allies desire.

But Cooper said those ideas should be discussed in a different setting and with the Senate sales tax plan out of the way.

Mavretic's allies have floated a plan to cut $170 million in state aid to local governments and allow counties to raise the local option sales tax by half a cent per dollar, but it has drawn a lukewarm reception. Martin's plan to raise the sales tax by 1 cent statewide is essentially dead.

But Hall and House GOP leader Johnathan Rhyne, R-Lincoln, said the defeat of the Senate plan sets the stage for fresh negotiations with both chambers on an equal footing.

Summer Smog Likely To Remain

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Uncertainty over new federal air pollution laws is making it unlikely that millions of North Carolinians will see significant relief from rising ozone levels until 1995 or beyond, authorities say.

"Conditions that lead to ozone are not going away, and they're probably going to get worse," said Don Willard, division manager of the Mecklenburg Environmental Protection Department. "It's hurting us from the standpoint of not telling us what to do, or what the next step is."

Congress has struggled since 1981 to rewrite the Clean Air Act of 1977, but stiffer standards have been opposed by industries, automakers, some electric power utilities and coal-producing states.

Then, earlier this month, President George Bush unveiled his own proposed clean-air legislation.

"It's good that for the first time since 1981, we've got a president who's pushing for clean-air legislation," said William Becker, executive director of the Association of State and Local Air Pollution Officials in Washington.

But Becker and other Washington officials Tuesday said Bush's proposal, on top of the existing Clean Air Act, means it's unlikely the two can be reconciled and passed in any form before next summer at the earliest.

Authorities estimate it will then take five years or more for local governments to develop comprehensive control plans, hold hearings and allow pollution sources time to implement controls.

The state Division of Environmental Management issued its first ozone advisory Tuesday, warning people in the Raleigh-Durham area that the hazy summer air could be unhealthy. The Winston-Salem-Greensboro area reported its 15th straight day of hazy conditions, although no warnings have been issued there.

The advisory for the Raleigh-Durham area comes in the first year the division has issued advisories when ozone levels exceed federal safety standards. The division measures ozone on a scale of 1 to 100, with 1 the safest level and anything over 100 exceeding the national air quality standard.

At 1 p.m. Tuesday, the amount of ozone in the air was reported to be 101 for Wake County and 110 for Durham County. By early evening, however, the Durham County reading had dropped one point and Wake's had fallen to 79, which is regarded as moderate.

"All that we are expecting (when advisories are issued) is that people will have the opportunity to change their activities for the rest of the day," said Ogden Gerald, the division's chief for air quality.

Ozone pollution occurs when hydrocarbons, primarily from car emissions, mix with byproducts of burning fuels. Ozone can irritate lungs, eyes and respiratory tracts and can hurt the body's immune system.

Premiums Going Up

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Starting this weekend, insurance premiums will rise by an average of 47.3 percent for about 150,000 North Carolinians who have Medicare supplemental policies and other individual coverage from Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina.

The round of increases affects only a small portion of the giant insurer's business, since 80 percent of the company's 1.9 million subscribers are in group or self-insured plans.

The increases that begin going into effect Saturday are in 18 categories of non-group policies, primarily those that provide supplemental Medicare coverage. Overall, the increases will average 47.3 percent, but within each of the 18 categories the average increase ranges from 25 to 90 percent.

Blue Cross and Blue Shield had requested approval for rate hikes averaging 51.5 percent, but the state Insurance Department limited the rise to 47.3 percent.

The new rates, which will be in effect for a year, will be implemented on these policies as they are purchased or renewed between Saturday and Sept. 30.

Broadcasters Say Civil Rights Used For 'Extortion'

By Susan Price Wilson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Radio station owners say they're being victimized by extortion tactics in the guise of civil rights concerns, but minority groups say their challenges to license renewals are legitimate.

The complaints focused on minority hiring practices, but the issue, station owners contend, is money.

"It's as Mafiosa as anything Al Capone ever did," said a station owner who spoke on condition that his name not be used. "Not only is it extortion, but it sets back the cause of racial understanding more than anything the Ku Klux Klan could ever devise."

Pluria Marshall, leader of the National Black Media Coalition in Washington, D.C., disagreed.

"The little bit of money we get out of them is chump change, pocket money, mad money," he said.

Marshall and an NAACP official said the companies should look instead at their own failures.

"I'm sure whoever said that would not say that publicly for fear of the lawsuit that would ensue," said Kelly Alexander Jr., president of the North Carolina chapter of the NAACP. "All (of the challenges) are based on insufficiencies of the stations themselves; all have a basis in fact."

"You've still got some significant rednecks in North Carolina who feel they don't have to hire black folks," Marshall said. "When we come up against them, we're going to file against them or their license transfer. So the law is on the book and you either abide by the law or you hear from us."

"What the media needs to do is ask one question: 'How many minorities do you have working for you?' Then you understand they ain't being mistreated, they're being dealt with as people who are breaking the law."

Most station owners who talked about the issue declined to comment for attribution for fear their comments would create more problems in the regulatory process.

"The overwhelming majority of broadcasters in North Carolina are owner-operators, not big business conglomerates, who have their personal dealings and personal welfare tied up in these radio stations," a station owner said. "The umbilical cord to their capacity to exist is that (Federal Communications Commission) license."

Radio and television stations are required to file reports to the FCC on the number of minorities and women they hire and promote and the efforts they make to seek out qualified minority applicants.

At license renewal time, owners say, those without minority employment close to a percentage of the area's labor force often get word that their licenses may be challenged. Under existing FCC rules, a group can file a "petition to deny" the license renewal and withdraw it after negotiating a settlement with the station.

Some station owners said the tactics used seemed to have little to do with concerns about the hiring practices themselves.

"Not one person ever came to see us. Not one person ever came to say they had a problem with our hiring practices" until the challenge was announced, one station owner said.

Settling the challenges can cost thousands of dollars, both sides of the dispute say.

When the latest round of challenges were announced last year, Dennis Schatzman, then executive director of the state NAACP, made it clear that challenges could be costly for the stations.

"In 1974, we challenged WBAL-TV in Baltimore," Schatzman said. "It ended up costing them $250,000 — and that was in 1974 dollars."

In the past, the FCC did not review such settlements, but the complaints have prompted an upcoming change in FCC rules that any payments must cover only the expenses involved in filing a challenge.

"The purpose behind the limitations is to get to that very abuse of process," said Marilyn Mohrman-Gillis of the FCC's Mass Media Bureau. "The FCC hopes that with limits to legitimate expenses, it will remove the profit motive" involved in license challenges.

In announcing its crackdown on the practice of allowing payments to groups filing challenges to license renewals, the FCC said that "concessions extracted from the licensee under these agreements can merely be disguised private payoffs for dismissing a license renewal challenge."

The controversy also led to a bill pending in the U.S. House of Representatives which would block the settlement of license renewal complaints "in exchange for the payment or promise of money or any other thing of value by or on behalf of the applicant."

"Certainly people have been put in a position where they had to negotiate a settlement simply in a blackmail-extortion-type situation,"

Study Targets Vulnerable Beach Areas

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

EMERALD ISLE, N.C. — It's time for North Carolina property owners and coastal managers to heed geologic warnings if they want to prevent structure damage from storms and hurricanes, experts say.

Orrin Pilkey, a Duke University geologist, led state and federal coastal and emergency management officials on a tour Wednesday of Bogue Banks to see where builders have taken nature into account and where they have not.

The trip kicked off a study of how to use geologic factors to help protect existing and future buildings on southeastern U.S. beaches.

"The question is this," Pilkey said, standing in one of the shallow, shell-lined troughs where Hurricane Hazel had cut through the island in 1954. "Should we encourage an inlet to form where we know it's going to so it'll be a safety valve, or should we try to fill it in?"

Pilkey and two graduate assistants will study 10 barrier island beaches, with differing geologic characteristics, in North Carolina, South Carolina and Florida during the next year. David Bush, research associate for the study, said all the beaches had not been selected, but tentative plans include Nags Head and Topsail Island in North Carolina, and Myrtle Beach and areas near Charleston in South Carolina in addition to Bogue Banks.

"What we're trying to do is get people to think about these things — inlet creations, overwashes of the islands — and not just wind and rising water levels," he told The News and Observer of Raleigh. "By looking at a wide range of beaches, we'll have general principles that will apply to the entire coast."

Bush said researchers will catalog how property owners might protect themselves from damage, even if some blunders such as tearing down dunes or vegetation were committed. They also will look at how to rebuild safer buildings if a hurricane wipes out the most vulnerable structures "so we don't repeat some of the stupid things that have been done already."

The results, expected in a year, will be a handbook for coastal managers to use in guiding development on barrier islands.

Pilkey, an outspoken critic of intense beach development, said that five communities on Bogue Banks had all formed different philosophies during the boom that made the island one of the state's most developed. Indian Beach, where dunes were flattened for mobile home parks and the 270-unit Summerwinds condominium is threatened by beach erosion, "is a loose cannon on this island," he said. Because the dunes were cut down to make more room for the mobile homes, all of them are likely to wash into Bogue Sound if a forceful hurricane hit, he said.

But he said Pine Knoll Shores is the safest community on the beach. Much of the community crouches on the sound side of the island and most of the buildings are below the tree line.

"There is an immediate recognition that we're not going to hold the line on the front side," Pilkey said. "But you can reduce the damage."

Nixon Says Bush Reacting Wisely To 'Brutality, Stupidity' In China

By John Flesher

Balloon Note

WILMINGTON (AP) — Glad tidings borne more than 600 miles on the wind greeted Brenda and Bill Edens as they sipped coffee at their home near Surf City Monday.

A purplish-red balloon drifted much farther than churchgoers in Ontario, who released it Sunday, imagined it might.

To the dismay of a beagle named Sam and the delight of the Edens and a 14-year-old Canadian boy, the balloon landed on the front lawn of a house more than 600 miles from the church parking lot where it was released.

"It had a note ... so we mailed a letter to the boy who sent it," she said. "We were just amazed it stayed intact."

Churchgoers of all ages released the multicolored balloons Sunday morning to promote a vacation Bible school at Glad Tidings Pentecostal Church in Burlington, Ontario, said the Rev. Owen Swain, the youth pastor.

Dealer Indicted

GREENSBORO (AP) — A Greensboro baseball card dealer has been indicted on 21 counts of mail fraud involving about 70 unfilled orders for cards amounting to $76,000, according to a U.S. Postal Service inspector.

Authorities are searching for Ronald Alexander, 26, whose last known address was in Greensboro. Postal Inspector Robert F. Chitwood said anyone with information on Alexander's whereabouts should call the postal service in Charlotte.

Alexander ran the Tar Heel Card Co. from his apartment and advertised in the national magazine Sports Collectors Digest, according to Chitwood.

A federal grand jury in Greensboro indicted Alexander on 21 counts of mail fraud, Chitwood said.

Koop Meeting

DURHAM (AP) — Two Duke University Medical Center nurses were among the approximately 120 parents, health care providers and social service professionals who were invited to meet with U.S. Surgeon General C. Everett Koop to discuss a new initiative in the war against pediatric AIDS.

"AIDS is the ninth leading cause of death in children aged one to four, and the seventh in young people aged 15 to 24," said Beth Stewart, a pediatric hematology-oncology nurse clinician.

Ms. Stewart and Anne Fitzgerald, a staff nurse in the pediatric clinic and parent of a child who had AIDS, were asked to help plan the surgeon general's "Kids With AIDS" campaign.

The project, developed by the U.S. Bureau of Maternal and Child Health and Resources Development and the Association for the Care of Children's Health, aims to increase public and professional awareness of the needs of children with HIV infection and their families.

Budget Adopted

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) — Cedar Point commissioners have adopted a $24,000 budget for 1989-90 by a unanimous vote, and set the lowest ad valorem tax rate in the state at 5 cents per $100 of property valuation.

Five cents is the lowest rate North Carolina will allow a municipality to impose, and still remain incorporated.

This is the first year the town has developed a budget. Cedar Point was formally incorporated July 1, 1988.

The budget, which was approved Tuesday night, contains $13,100 for general administrative costs, $5,000 for public works, and $5,900 for contingencies, for a total of $24,000.

UNC-CH Bequest

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill Rothrock Research Fund in Hematology has received a bequest of nearly $2.5 million from the estate of Mary Elizabeth Thomas of Jackson, Miss.

Dr. John B. Herion, professor of medicine in the hematology division of the UNC School of Medicine, accepted the bequest recently during a recent presentation in Chapel Hill. Herion was Ms. Thomas' doctor and a longtime friend.

An expert in Egyptology, Ms. Thomas was a pioneer in archaeology and participated in many early Egyptian excavations. She died in 1986 at the age of 79.

The Rothrock Fund, which supports hematology research at UNC, was established in 1975 by Lenvel Rothrock of Hillsborough.

WINSTON-SALEM — Hard-line measures against China after a recent crackdown on student dissidents would have only reduced the United States' ability to influence events in the communist country, former President Richard Nixon said.

"The Great Wall of China is very thick," said Nixon, who visited China in 1972. "It's hard to be heard when you're inside. It's impossible to be heard when you're outside."

Nixon made his comments Wednesday night at a political fundraiser for North Carolina Republicans.

"We must not do something that will turn the clock back and force China back into the Dark Ages," Nixon told about 250 people who attended a $1,000-per-couple reception to benefit a new GOP political action committee. "President Bush is right, and what's difficult is taking heat from those who say he ought to do more."

Nixon, whose historic visit to China opened the way for the normalization of U.S. relations with the communist nation, said he personally felt "the agony of China. ... I feel very close to the Chinese people."

The "brutality and stupidity" of the Chinese government's crackdown on the pro-democracy movement has understandably led many Americans to urge Bush to take a harder line, including a cutoff of diplomatic relations, Nixon said.

"Some would say, under the circumstances, let's take it out on these old men that have been responsible for this repression," he said. "That's an easy answer, but like most easy answers it's the wrong answer. Simply punishing those leaders ... wouldn't change them at all. What it would do would be to punish the people of China, particularly the pro-democracy demonstrators."

The 76-year-old ex-president, who resigned in disgrace at the peak of the Watergate scandal in 1974, told reporters before his speech that the ethical storm in Congress was diverting attention from urgent issues such as drug abuse and pollution.

"The partisan battle is not a pleasant thing," Nixon said. "I don't know why anyone would run for the House right now. ... I think we've had enough of this character assassination."

The former president was invited to North Carolina by Gov. Jim Martin, who was elected to the first of his six U.S. House terms on Nixon's coattails in 1972.

Martin, who was elected to his second term as governor in 1988, is a potential challenger to Democratic U.S. Sen. Terry Sanford in 1992, although Martin has not declared his intentions.

The new PAC Martin's organization is creating will raise money for his travels next year on behalf of the GOP ticket and for Republican legislative candidates and computer equipment to help the GOP do research for redistricting battles in 1991.

"I believe that North Carolina, of all the places in the South, is the best place to break through," Nixon said. "That's why I agreed to come to North Carolina."

Nixon, who spoke for about 20 minutes without notes, effusively praised Martin and even plugged the governor's two biggest initiatives before the General Assembly: a 1-cent sales tax increase for education and an $8.6 billion highway construction program.

"It's very, very dangerous for any governor or any public official to come out for a tax increase," Nixon said. But he said Martin had "the guts and the courage" to go against conventional political wisdom.

He said state legislatures are the next major battleground for the GOP in its effort to gain strength in the South. "I believe that North Carolina is the state of the South in which we will first see a majority won in one of the houses of the Legislature," he said.

Nixon, who graduated from Duke

University Law School in 1937, was warmly received by the crowd, which included many GOP activists from the days of his political triumphs. He received standing ovations before and after his speech, with many in the audience flashing his trademark "Victory" sign. Earlier, he mingled with the crowd, posing for pictures and signing autographs.

For many, it was a nostalgic occasion.

"You're seeing history walk across that stage," State Republican Chairman Jack Hawke said. "A lot of people wanted to see him one more time."

Despite Nixon's controversial past, Martin political strategist Brad Hays said he had "no qualms" at all about bringing him down here.

"I think he can raise more money for the Republican Party today than any political leader we have," Hawke said.

Volunteers clean birds soaked in oil from spill in Delaware River near Wilmington

Tanker Captain Charged In Rhode Island Oil Spill

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — The captain of a tanker that spilled 420,000 gallons of oil was confined to his ship today after being charged with polluting waters off Rhode Island.

For the first time since Friday's accident, fishermen were free today to begin harvesting shellfish from parts of the upper Narragansett Bay. Officials said almost all the spilled oil had evaporated.

In two other spills, cleanup crews made headway in mopping up oil.

Iakovos Georgudis 43, was charged Wednesday with two misdemeanor counts of discharging pollutants into the water in violation of the Clean Water Act and Federal Refuse Act. The captain also is under investigation by a state grand jury.

Each misdemeanor carries penalties of up to a year in prison and a $100,000 fine or double the actual damages, said U.S. Attorney Lincoln Almond. The Coast Guard has estimated damages at $1.6 million, and Gov. Edward D. DiPrete said President Bush has promised full federal reimbursement to the state.

The Clean Water Act prohibits the negligent discharge of pollutants; the Refuse Act prohibits unlawfully discharging refuse into navigable water without a permit.

Almond said that Georgudis, a Greek resident, was arrested because of concern that he might leave the United States. The United States' extradition treaty with Greece does not cover pollution crimes, he said.

A federal magistrate set bail at $50,000 and ordered him to surrender his passport. The magistrate also ordered the captain and his Greek tanker World Prodigy remain in Rhode Island waters.

Almond said Georgudis was confined to the ship "to insure the integrity of the vessel."

Meanwhile, in Philadelphia, witnesses at a Coast Guard inquiry into a spill of about 300,000 gallons on the Delaware River said a botched anchoring procedure led to the grounding of a tanker and the spill of industrial heating oil. The hearing was recessed until July 5.

Hundreds of people have been working to clean up the jobs of oil since the weekend. A hot sun melted some congealed oil on Tuesday, but cooler weather Wednesday kept the oil in more of a solid condition. Workers used shovels and pitchforks to remove it.

"We believe we are making more progress. And now the weather is working with us instead of against us," said Coast Guard spokesman Jim Weakley.

But wind shifts began moving oil toward New Jersey riverbanks, which had been spared much of the black goo.

In Houston, crews are nearly finished cleaning up a 250,000-gallon oil spill that occurred Friday when a tanker and a barge collided in the Houston Ship Channel, but the process has slowed a bit, officials said.

Only about 40 of the 6,000 barrels of oil that leaked remained on the water Wednesday afternoon, U.S. Coast Guard spokesman William Nash said. But most of the slick was difficult to reach, officials said.

Georgudis, who has admitted to Rhode Island's governor and Coast Guard officials that he made a mistake in navigation, would not be called to testify before a joint hearing by the Coast Guard and the National Transportation Safety Board, said the chief investigator, Coast Guard Capt. David Whitten.

Whitten said Georgudis intends to invoke his Fifth Amendment right to protect against self-incrimination. The World Prodigy's chief engineer, chief mate and helmsman still were scheduled to testify today, Whitten said.

Georgudis' lawyer has said the captain would invoke the Fifth Amendment if brought before the grand jury which is investigating possible violations of state pollution laws and a law requiring harbor pilots aboard ships within Narragansett Bay.

On Tuesday, helmsman Konstadinos Paraskevopolu invoked the Fifth Amendment before the grand jury. But after being granted immunity, he testified Wednesday. He declined to comment afterward.

Georgudis also declined to comment. He said little during the hearing before U.S. Magistrate Jacob Hagopian except to acknowledge that he spoke English and understood the charges.

Coast Guard Lt. Paul Wolf said the unloading of almost 8 million gallons of oil remaining aboard the ship had been completed to five barges, where the fuel would be purified.

Printing Costs Are Out Of Sight

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — The federal government's printing operations have become so vast and diverse that the General Accounting Office said Wednesday it cannot estimate how much the government spends on printing.

GAO official L. Nye Stevens told the House Administration subcommittee on procurement and printing that his office has identified $1.1 billion in printing costs in fiscal 1988, which ended last Sept. 30, but is convinced the figure is incomplete. Part of the problem is that agencies do not report all printing costs and the costs they reported are not identical, he said.

"We have concluded ... that we do not know what total federal printing costs are," Stevens said. "We do, however, believe actual costs are higher than the $1.1 billion we could identify."

Federal budget reports place a $1.8 billion price tag on government printing, but Stevens said that figure is inaccurate because it counts some costs twice and does not include other costs, such as salaries of printing employees.

Although most government printing is supposed to be coordinated by the Government Printing Office and a Joint Congressional Committee on Printing, witnesses told the subcommittee that about 21 percent of the work is performed in agency printing plants and another 1.5 percent is contracted with private printers by the agencies.

The GAO review was requested by the subcommittee, which is considering a revision to the 1968 law that governs public printing. Among the issues the subcommittee is examining is the extent of government printing activities and whether recent changes in printing technology and increasing use of computers have made the law outdated.

Stevens said the GAO examined printing done by five departments that account for about one-third of the printing procured through the GPO and found a wide extent of controls. They ranged from the Navy, which exercised "strong central" control to the Transportation Department, which ran a decentralized printing operation.

James L. Cherny, director of Navy publishing, told the subcommittee, however, that with the advent of computer-operated, desk-top publishing systems control will be difficult. "As information becomes more automated and more time-valued, attempting to force a customer base as large as the Navy into a few large printing plants becomes impractical and unrealistic," he said.

Bush Pushing Call For Reforms In Campaign Financing Guides

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush is moving to cut special-interest influence in elections, abolish gerrymandered political districts and revive talk of a congressional pay raise, aides say.

Campaign finance reform was the focus of Bush's speech today before a group of congressional interns. However, aides said the president also planned to call on Congress to again take up the pay raise issue that the lawmakers dumped earlier this year amid public outrage.

Administration officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Bush would announce his legislative proposals to:

—Abolish political action committees that are connected to corporations, unions or trade groups, while allowing so-called ideological PACs that operate independent of any such organization.

—Ban carrying over campaign funds from one election to the next. The president's proposal would have congressional candidates return leftover funds to the contributors or give the money to the political parties or the government, said one official.

—Curtail gerrymandering methods of drawing political district lines to benefit one political party or group over another. He was expected to cite provisions against discriminatory district boundaries under the Voting Rights Act.

—Require full disclosure of so-called "soft money" contributions to political parties. Soft money refers generally to corporate and labor donations that are barred in federal campaigns. Such money often takes a back channel path into federal campaigns when the funds are contributed to political parties, which then help the candidates.

—Restrict franking privileges, which allow members of Congress to send mail to their constituents free.

Officials who discussed the package sought to emphasize the campaign reform proposals and downplay the pay-hike issue, which covers ground the president has trod before.

Bush endorsed a 51 percent salary increase for Congress, executive branch officials and judges in January at his first news conference, but Congress squelched the pay hike under a firestorm of criticism in February.

In April, Bush endorsed a 25 percent pay increase for federal judges, a measure still pending in Congress. He has said he wanted to separate the question of congressional pay hikes from raises for judges and executive branch officials, because the politically sensitive Congress is skittish about raising its own pay.

After considering pushing the idea of a gradual pay increase tied to a phaseout of honoraria, the president decided Wednesday to leave such specifics out of his speech, one top official said.

He instead was to offer to work with Congress on a developing measure to link pay hikes to honoraria, the fees Congress members earn for speaking engagements. Congressmen currently rake in thousands of dollars in honoraria, a practice criticized as an invitation to influence-buying.

By all accounts, there is little sentiment on Capitol Hill for delving into the pay raise-honoraria flap again.

NIH Ethics Office Studying 87 Cases For Scientific Fraud

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — The first hint of the size of a scientific-fraud problem emerged Wednesday when officials of the government's two chief agencies for funding non-military research disclosed that 87 cases are under review or recently have been resolved.

The new Office of Scientific Integrity at the National Institutes of Health is investigating 77 cases of alleged fraud or misconduct, NIH deputy director William Raub said.

The National Science Foundation, the other agency, has investigated eight cases of fraud since it began operating under new procedures two years ago and has two cases still under study, said Robert M. Andersen, NSF's deputy general counsel.

Neither Raub nor Andersen would identify the scientists under investigation nor characterize the cases that have been concluded.

Although about a dozen cases of science fraud have made headlines in the last decade, leaders of the scientific community frequently have characterized them as rare events committed by out-of-control scientists who always get caught.

With more than eight meetings on the subject by scientific organizations in the last year and three congressional hearings in the last two months, unprecedented attention is being paid to the conduct of science and how well government money is being spent on basic research.

Governmental and private scientific institutions have begun to respond to the pressure. The activities of the NIH Office of Scientific Integrity, which has been operating since April 10, and the complementary Office of Scientific Integrity Review in the Department of Health and Human Services, to which an acting director was appointed May 23, were described Wednesday at a hearing by the House Committee on Science, Space and Technology's investigations subcommittee.

NIH's office "is using a very low threshold" to bring questionable research under scrutiny, Raub said. The problems range from failures to comply with administrative procedures to fabrication of data. The NIH office hopes to resolve the current cases in the next year.

NSF's Andersen said at least two of the eight cases already investigated "involved data fabrication or falsification." A report characterizing the eight cases in general — but not naming the scientists or institutions — will be made public in the near future.

Drummond Rennie, associate editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, told the subcommittee that before the government sets up a science police force, it should have a better idea of how much fraud is committed.

Rennie suggested that scientific research presented for publication be studied. Retired scientists, acting as auditors, would analyze the raw data supporting reports sent to the journals and perhaps visit the laboratories or medical centers to make sure that the data are valid.

"A pilot audit of 300 papers would show us if we had a real problem," Rennie testified. "If the prevalence were really 10 percent, there would be a 95 percent chance of revealing 10 cases after auditing only 154 papers."

Whatever the result of such a study, congressional action to set up procedures for dealing with scientific fraud and misconduct is expected before the end of the year.

Worker Injured

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A construction worker was injured Wednesday when he was struck by lightning during a thunderstorm, police said.

The worker, identified as Gary Riley of Chapel Hill, was in fair condition at North Carolina Memorial Hospital on Wednesday night, a hospital spokesman said.

Lt. Robert Brooks of the Chapel Hill Police Department said the incident occurred about 4:30 p.m. Riley was conscious and alert when emergency personnel arrived, Brooks said.

It was not immediately known whether Riley took a direct hit from a lightning bolt or whether the lightning struck near him.

Flushed Wedding Ring Recovered

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

UNION CITY, Calif. — Jennifer Weir has her wedding ring back — three months after it vanished down a toilet.

Weir, 25, called the Union Sanitary District after she lost the diamond ring during the Easter holiday and a crew came out and probed the sewer. "It wasn't in any of the stuff that came out," Weir said.

Crew chief Manuel Terra told her it might take a few months for the ring to be washed from the house plumbing into the 8-inch main in the street. On Wednesday, three months later, she called Terra, who came out again.

The crew sent a water-powered cleaning ball through the line from one manhole to the next.

All of a sudden, Weir said, "the guy in the manhole was yelling 'You struck gold!'"

"It was just luck," said Terra.

U.S. Enhances Role As World's Largest Debtor

By Martin Crutsinger
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — America's foreign debt burden soared to $532.5 billion in 1988, pushing the United States farther into hock as the world's largest debtor country, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the new debt total was $154.2 billion higher than the $378.3 billion in debt to foreigners that the United States owed at the end of 1987.

The debt figure means that foreigners own more in U.S. assets than Americans own abroad.

For 1988, the government reported that foreign holdings in the United States increased 15.4 percent to $1.79 trillion. American investments abroad also rose, but by a smaller 7.2 percent, climbing to $1.25 trillion.

The difference between those two figures in America's net debtor position.

The huge 41 percent jump in the debt total in just one year was certain to rekindle the debate over what the run-up in foreign holdings means for America's future.

Many private economists believe the United States is losing control of its economic destiny and the debt burden will ultimately lower American living standards as more and more wealth is transferred into the hands of foreigners to service the debt, leaving less money for distribution in this country.

However, the Bush administration, like the Reagan administration before it, contends that foreign investment has been good for the nation, bringing an infusion of capital needed to rejuvenate many aging American industries.

Foreign director investment, defined as ownership of at least 10 percent of a company, soared by 21 percent last year to a record $328.8 billion, reflecting something of a foreign buying-spree for American companies.

The overall net debtor position of $532.5 billion showed how rapidly the foreign debt is piling up. As recently as 1983, the United States was the world's largest creditor nation with an investment surplus of $89 billion.

That surplus fell to $3.3 billion in 1984 and disappeared altogether in 1985, the year the country became a net debtor for the first time in 71 years.

The country's investment surplus evaporated as the country ran up huge merchandise trade deficits during the 1980s, transferring billions of dollars into the hands of foreigners to pay for imported cars and television sets.

These dollars, now in foreign hands, have been reinvested in the United States in everything from stocks and bonds to factories and real estate, raising alarms in Congress that something must be done to curb the "selling of America."

The transformation of the United States from the largest creditor country to the world's biggest debtor is often seen by critics as the one of the biggest failures of former President Reagan's economic policies.

A report by the congressional Office of Technology Assessment, which reviewed the situation last year, concluded: "As the United States sinks deeper into debt, foreign investors and creditors will be less inclined to commit ever-increasing amounts of capital to a $4 trillion economy on a spending spree."

Many private economists have warned that the United States is increasingly vulnerable to a sudden withdrawal of funds on the part of investors. Foreign uneasiness with a plunging U.S. dollar and rising interest rates have been cited as an underlying cause of the October 1987 stock market collapse.

However, officials of the Bush administration, using identical language as the Reagan team, contend the rising foreign investment is really a sign of strength showing that overseas investors believe the United States is an excellent place to put their money.

Commerce Undersecretary Michael Darby, discussing the issue with reporters Wednesday, noted the United States was a net debtor from the founding of the country until 1914. During that period, foreigners provided the investment needed to develop America.

Darby said that foreign investment by itself "doesn't make you a weak nation. It doesn't make you a strong nation." He said what was important was that the investment be used to modernize American industry so that the country is better able to compete in the global economy.

But Nigel Gault, an economist at DRI-McGraw Hill, an economic consulting firm, said that through the 1980s, much of the foreign money has gone to support America's huge federal budget deficits and over-consumption by American consumers.

"It is plainly clear that the foreign funds have not been used to boost our competitive position," he said.

Sikes To Get FCC Chairmanship

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush will nominate Commerce Department official Alfred C. Sikes as the next chairman of the Federal Communications Commission to succeed the deregulation-minded Dennis R. Patrick.

The White House said Wednesday that Sikes, a former Missouri broadcaster, will fill the seat vacated in December 1987 by Mimi Weyforth Dawson for the remainder of a five-year term that began July 1, 1988.

The commission has had only three of its five-member complement since the 1987 resignations of Dawson and former chairman Mark S. Fowler. Patrick, a Republican who often has clashed with Congress, has been outnumbered by commissioners Patricia Diaz Dennis and James H. Quello.

Patrick announced in April he will resign upon confirmation of his successor.

Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., chairman of the Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee that oversees the FCC, refused to consider replacements offered by then-President Reagan because of congressional displeasure with Patrick.

Hollings has expressed no opposition to Sikes and two other FCC nominees Bush proposed two weeks ago: Washington attorney Sherrie P. Marshall, a former Patrick aide, and Illinois Commerce Commission member Andrew C. Barrett.

Quello has said he will retire when his commission ends in 1991. Dennis has indicated she would like to stay beyond Friday, when her term expires, but no announcement of her fate has been made. If she stays on, the commission will be at full strength for the first time since 1987.

Sikes, 49, an assistant secretary of commerce and head of the National Telecommunications and Information Administration, is considered a moderate on regulatory issues. He reportedly won out over Marshall for the chairman's post because he was considered more likely to be confirmed by the Senate.

U.S. Expands PLO Contacts

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration has secretly expanded its contacts with the Palestine Liberation Organization, meeting at least twice in Tunis with the PLO's second-highest official, Salah Khalaf, State Department officials said Wednesday.

The officials said an interview given by Khalaf to the Kuwaiti news agency KUNA, in which he disclosed that he has met twice with the U.S. ambassador to Tunisia, Robert Pelletreau, was essentially correct, but they insisted "there is no change in U.S. policy."

"He did meet with Salah Khalaf and discussed issues related to the (U.S.) dialogue but our objectives remain the same," one official said. Khalaf is also known as Abu Iyad.

Israel has watched with growing anxiety the development of an expanding relationship between the Bush administration and the PLO. Israel has refused to have any dealings with the PLO and bitterly criticized the U.S. decision last December to open a "substantive dialogue" with the PLO.

The disclosure comes amid a spate of reports that a high-ranking administration official will soon go to Tunis for a meeting with PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat. Washington Post correspondent Patrick Tyler reported that a PLO official in Tunis said last week, "The idea was (to send) Dennis Ross to meet Abu Amar (Arafat's alias)."

Japanese Company Blocks Pickens Bid

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — Shareholders of an automobile lighting company voted overwhelmingly today against giving the largest shareholder, American corporate raider T. Boone Pickens, three seats on the company's board of directors.

Officials of Koito Manufacturing Co. have said they doubt Pickens is a long-term investor interested in the business.

Among about 200 shareholders at the meeting, Pickens was the only one who raised his hand in favor of his motion to include himself and Sidney Tassin and Robert Stillwell on Koito's 20-member board of directors. Tassin and Stillwell are vice presidents of Pickens' Boone Co., based in Amarillo, Texas.

Pickens said his inability to gain representation on the Koito board showed that the Japanese investment market is not as open to Americans as the U.S. market is to Japanese.

"You invest freely in my country, the United States, yet I invest in Japan and I am excluded," he told fellow shareholders in the three-hour meeting.

"I am beginning to wonder if the reason I have been denied a seat is that I am not Japanese," Pickens said before the vote.

The shareholders present included Koito employees loyal to the company and racketeers known as sokaiya who generally took Pickens' side in their questioning and heckled Koito executives. In the end, however, they voted against Pickens.

The sokaiya, often speaking in the rough cadences of yakuza, or gangsters, echoed Pickens in demanding greater shareholders' rights and in scolding Koito management for not thinking of Japan's international responsibilities.

They drew frequent laughter from the large contingent of Japanese reporters watching on a television monitor in a nearby room.

Sokaiya are a regular part of shareholders' meetings of major companies in Japan. Companies pay them to be quiet or sometimes to silence other shareholders.

Pickens said after the meeting he would testify before the U.S. Senate Finance Committee on July 11 about his difficulties in breaking into the Japanese investment market.

Overwork Proves Fatal In Japan

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — Japanese businessmen aren't concerned just about market shares and interest rates. These days, some are wondering whether their jobs might kill them.

It's called "karoshi" — death from overwork — or "pokkuri byo" — sudden death. The number of such deaths among harried Japanese businessmen is growing at an alarming rate, researchers say.

Victims share a common pattern: sudden deaths from heart attacks or strokes after months or years of extralong working hours under heavy stress, says Dr. Kiyoyasu Arikawa, who advises executives on how to reduce their risk.

Arikawa found that sudden deaths among top executives have skyrocketed in the past 20 years, from 10 in 1969 to about 150 in 1987. Recently, he says, the number of such deaths has grown fastest among those in their 40s and 50s, men who on average could expect to live to about 79.

The risks of Japan's competitive work world were highlighted by the sudden deaths in the past two years of several prominent men in their 40s, including publishing executive Koremichi Noma, trading company president Hiroto Inui, Fanuc Co. president Nobuo Hanaoka and chairman of the mass media group Fuji Sankei, Haruo Shikanai.

"Pokkuri byo is a real concern among the businessmen I know," said Mitsuya Goto, a former Nissan Motor Co. executive who now heads an international exchange center. "They're all pretty concerned about it."

Arikawa runs a clinic in a skyscraper in downtown Tokyo where he counsels executives on how to minimize damage from their stress-laden careers. The Arikawa Medical Counseling Club, with its plush carpets, dim lighting and classical music, serves an elite clientele.

But sudden death is not confined to stressed executives.

Various reports show such deaths occur among taxi drivers, teachers, journalists, salespeople and maintenance workers.

A hot line set up by a lawyers' group to handle inquiries from families of people who suffered premature, sudden deaths estimates that as many as 600 Japanese may have died of overwork last year.

In Japan, where time spent on the job and personal sacrifice are viewed as key measures of company loyalty, the temptation to overwork is overwhelming, says Hiroshi Kawahito, a lawyer associated with the hot line.

"People feel companies are more important than their individual rights and they're praised by the company if they work hard. Their pay and position depend on it," he said.

Families of the victims are usually unprepared to cope with the loss of a breadwinner. The hot line counsels them on how to obtain government assistance and in some cases workmen's compensation.

In over 95 percent of the cases, the government ruled against paying workmen's compensation because it's difficult to prove overwork was the cause of death, Kawahito says.

In the past, the government required that families of sudden death cases prove the victim was overworked on the day he died. It now accepts evidence an overwork victim was under extreme stress in the week before his death.

For years, Noboru Fujii directed traffic on 24-hour shifts, sometimes longer, every other day, with only six hours for naps and meals at the Kobe Ferry Terminal in western Japan. He died at age 60 of a heart attack at work.

In his case, the local labor standards office judged that Fujii did die of overwork and awarded compensation to his family.

Charles: English Taught 'Bloody Badly'

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LONDON — Prince Charles Wednesday accused the British education establishment of murdering the Queen's English. It is being taught "so bloody badly" in the schools that he can't get a letter written properly, the prince complained.

"All the letters sent from my office, I have to correct myself," the heir to the throne told a conference here. "And that is because English is taught so bloody badly."

The royal complaint was taken in stride by his office staff, but it drew a quick rebuke from a teachers' union official, who said the prince "probably doesn't pay enough to attract the right quality of staff to write his letters."

Britons have become accustomed to hearing the queen's eldest son, now 40, speak his mind, especially on environmental and architectural issues. He has, on occasion, not shied away from criticizing government policy, as when he urged energy-conservation measures instead of nuclear-power development.

But the controversy over English opens up a new front in the Prince of Wales' battle for traditional values — and one that may produce even more controversy than his fights with developers over their designs, and farmers and businessmen over their use of chemicals.

The prince raised the issue in an informal discussion session with business officials launching an effort to build closer links between jobs and schools. Prince Charles has been advocating such public-private partnerships since a 1985 trip to Massachusetts when he saw the "Boston Compact," in which business guarantees jobs to all Boston high-school graduates.

Without being specific, the prince said that English teaching must be based on "a basic framework and a proper drilling system."

"If we want people to write good English and write plays for the future," he said, "there is no way they can do it with the present system."

That provoked his comments on his palace staff: "All the people I have in my office, they can't speak English properly. They can't write English properly."

Nigel de Gruchy, the general secretary of the National Association of Schoolmasters and the Union of Women Teachers, said the prince was setting such a bad example, "it is a case of the pot calling the kettle black."

In comments to the Press Association, de Gruchy noted that the prince's utterances might be graded poorly for grammar and redundancy. As for his charge that English is "bloody badly" taught, de Gruchy said, "If he has to swear, he is proving that the (private) schools are as bad as the state ones."

The prince also struck a blow for traditional, value-oriented education. "I think the whole way schools are operating is not right," he said. "They don't educate character at all. This matters a great deal."

Company Investigated

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BONN, West Germany — A prosecutor said today he has opened a criminal investigation involving officials of a company that contracted to deliver to Iran chemicals that could be used to make poison gas.

The Rheineisen Chemical Products company of Duesseldorf said Wednesday that it canceled its contract to deliver the thionyl chloride from a company in India. Government officials said they were investigating whether the deal violated export laws.

Rolf Chanteaux, the chief state prosecutor in Duesseldorf, where the company is based, said he opened a criminal probe Wednesday afternoon that will focus on Rheineisen officials.

Chanteaux said the company is suspected of violating West German foreign trade laws by allegedly failing to get a special permit for the deal. He gave no further details.

West German officials began looking into the case after U.S. officials tipped off investigators the thionyl chloride shipment could be used to make mustard gas, authorities said.

Flag

flag burning as a form of political protest.

Fitzwater had earlier said a final White House amendment would be ready by the end of the day Wednesday, but later explained the new target by saying the GOP leaders "wanted to be part of it."

Fitzwater said efforts would be made to reach a consensus proposal with Republicans and Democrats who favor addressing the flag issue through a constitutional amendment.

He said it would likely follow the lines of proposals already advanced in Congress which have suggested that Congress and the states have the power to pass laws banning flag desecration.

Fitzwater said the amendment would likely be only one to three sentences.

The outcry began last week with the Supreme Court's 5-4 decision which overturned flag-desecration laws in 48 states. Both houses have passed resolutions condemning the decision.

Gregory Johnson, whose prosecution for participating in a flag-burning protest at the 1984 Republican National Convention was barred by the high court's decision, told a news conference in New York the president should debate him on flag-burning on prime-time television on the eve of the Fourth of July.

Johnson said that if the values the flag represents are so strong, "you should not have to resort to this kinder, gentler choke hold on protestors and dissenters."

One amendment proposed in Congress by Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, senior Republican on the Senate Judiciary Committee, does not mention criminal penalties but states:

"The Congress of the United States and the states have the power to prohibit the desecrating, mutilating, defacing, defiling or burning of the flag of the United States."

Meanwhile, several House members who voted against a House resolution condemning the Supreme Court decision said Wednesday they acted in support of more, rather than less, freedom of expression. The resolution expressed "profound concern" with the ruling.

Four of the five lawmakers who voted against the non-binding resolution said they agreed with the 5-4 court majority. The fifth, Rep. Gus Savage, D-Ill., refused to comment on the vote.

Rep. William Clay, D-Mo., said the resolution "just indicates the hypocrisy in Congress and the nation ... We ought to preserve freedom of speech. We condemn China for executing (protesters), but every chance we get, we vote in favor of capital punishment."

Court

highly controversial abortion and religious cases, the delay could have an administrative explanation. For example, the court's computer print shop could be having trouble producing enough copies of the abortion ruling to meet what will surely be a flood of requests.

The case has become the most closely watched Supreme Court controversy of the 1980s.

The court must say something about the case, in which oral arguments were conducted April 26, before ending its current term.

Rehnquist's statement might indicate that decisions in the Webster case and two other cases will be announced Monday.

But instead of announcing a decision, the justices could choose to order another round of arguments during the term that begins in October. That would delay a decision until sometime in 1990.

Roe vs. Wade itself was a case that had to be argued twice before a decision was announced. Such orders are not rare. The court hears arguments in about 150 cases each term, and since 1977 has held over at least one case for reargument the following term.

In the 1973 decision, the court said women have a constitutional right, based on their right to privacy, to seek and obtain abortions.

The ruling said a woman's decision to have an abortion during the first three months of pregnancy must be left to her and her doctor. It said states may regulate abortions during the second trimester only to protect the woman's health, and may take steps to protect fetal life in the third trimester.

State authority to regulate abortions after the first trimester was not made absolute, however.

Marcos Reported Clinging To Life

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HONOLULU — Former Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos clung to life today, battling massive organ failure, hospital officials said.

"Everything that can be done has been done. We are hoping for a miracle," said Marcos' wife, Imelda. "If we could just tell him he could go home, I know that would save him."

The 71-year-old exiled leader, who has been hospitalized at St. Francis Medical Center since Jan. 15, suffered liver failure Wednesday and had a fever as high as 104 degrees, said assistant hospital administrator Eugene Tiwanak.

Marcos has been on life support equipment since late May, when he suffered heart, lung and kidney failure.

"He's such a fighter, he's been bad before and he's hung on," said

Marcos adviser Arturo Aruiza. "Now we can only hope and pray."

Marcos' daughter Irene Araneta was flying here from California and his son, Ferdinand "Bong Bong" Marcos Jr. was at the hospital.

Tiwanak described Marcos' condition as very critical and said he was semi-comatose and was unable to recognize relatives or friends.

But Marcos spokesman Roger Peyuan said Marcos opened his eyes as Mrs. Marcos softly sang love songs to him and was able to take sips of water.

Peyuan said Mrs. Marcos planned to stay by her husband's bedside through the night and is praying that he live at least until Sunday, her 60th birthday.

"I've heard her say to him many times, 'You're all I want for my birthday,'" Peyuan said.

Too few percent of the loads offered have been confirmed to provide a preliminary weighted average. The market is about steady and the live supply is mostly adequate for a light to moderate demand. Average weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 2,230,000, compared to 2,156,000 last Thursday.

Grain: No. 2 yellow shelled corn mostly 2 cents higher at mostly 2.83-2.97 in East and mostly 3.00-3.10 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans steady to 4 cents lower at mostly 6.96-7.36 in East and mostly 7.07-7.08 in the Piedmont; wheat mostly 3.60-3.72; P.I.K. steady, 97-100.

New York (AP) — Stock prices showed a broad loss today amid persistent interest-rate worries and uncertainty about the economy.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 17.07 to 2,487.67 in the first half hour of trading.

Losers outnumbered gainers by more than 4 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 187 up, 817 down and 438 unchanged. Volume on the Big Board came to 23.60 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

West Germany today raised two key interest rates by half a percentage point in an evident effort to curb strong economic growth in that country.

Analysts didn't expect that to have any immediate effect on the Federal Reserve's credit policy in this country, where all signs point to slowing growth in business activity.

In fact, some brokers say, investors in the U.S. markets lately seem to have begun worrying more in recent days about a possible economic slump.

On Wednesday the government reported that the index of leading economic indicators dropped 1.2 percent in May.

Losers among the blue chips included International Business Machines, down 1 1/8 at 112 3/4; General Electric, down 3/4 at 52 3/8; Eastman Kodak, down 3/4 at 48 1/4; and Philip Morris, down 7/8 at 142.

Giamatti Ready To Talk To Judge

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — Baseball commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti is ready to tell a state judge face-to-face that he hasn't decided Pete Rose's fate.

Barring an appeals court ruling in his favor, Giamatti will testify in state court next week that he hasn't "prejudged" the Cincinnati Reds' manager.

Hamilton County Common Pleas Judge Norbert A. Nadel concluded Sunday in an unprecedented ruling that Giamatti had already determined that Rose is guilty of betting on baseball. The judge gave Rose protection from suspension or firing for two weeks, and barred Giamatti from conducting a hearing for Rose.

The temporary order — the legal equivalent of a 14-day timeout in the case — remains in effect today despite an appeal by Giamatti's lawyers. A three-judge panel of the 1st Ohio District Court of Appeals concluded Wednesday it had no jurisdiction to consider nullifying the order.

The state appeals court didn't decide whether Nadel acted properly. It merely concluded it had no legal basis for intervening. The appellate panel consisted of Judges Rupert A. Doan, Harry T. Klusmeier and Lee H. Hildebrandt Jr.

"They didn't affirm Judge Nadel's finding about me," Giamatti said. "They just decided they couldn't decide."

"It was the easy way out," baseball lawyer Louis L. Hoynes Jr. said.

Baseball's lawyers now could appeal to the Ohio Supreme Court.

Hoynes said Wednesday he wasn't sure how he would proceed.

If the temporary restraining order can't be overturned, Nadel will preside over a hearing July 6 for a preliminary injunction that would extend Rose's protection from suspension or firing while both sides prepare for trial. Giamatti would testify at a hearing next week.

"The commissioner will certainly be a witness for us," Hoynes said. "It's important for us, for him, to be here, and he will be here."

The appellate decision Wednesday wasn't surprising. Appeals courts rarely even consider nullifying a temporary restraining order.

However, baseball's officials were disappointed they didn't get to argue their case before the appellate court. The judges accepted written arguments from both sides Wednesday morning, and ruled a few hours later through a two-page order.

"We believe it is important to emphasize that this decision in no way affirms Judge Nadel's holding regarding the commissioner," deputy commissioner Francis T. Vincent Jr. said. "We're obviously disappointed that the Court of Appeals refused to take jurisdiction of our appeal and, therefore, did not hear our argument on the issues."

"We recognize that an appeal at this early stage was extraordinary, and we will now pursue all other avenues available to us. Eventually we know we will get to the merits of the Rose matter."

Nadel's order Sunday blocked a hearing scheduled for Rose last Monday with Giamatti in New York. Giamatti can ban Rose from baseball for life if he decides the manager bet on his own team.

Although Rose has prevailed this week in the state courts, evidence supplied to baseball by his accusers could provide him trouble with federal authorities.

Rose also is being investigated by a federal grand jury in Cincinnati looking into whether the Reds manager listed all of his income on his tax returns. Testimony contained in baseball's report on Rose suggests the manager purposely hid income from the Internal Revenue Service from his race track wagers, his memorabilia sales and his public appearances — offenses that carry the threat of jail time and financial penalties.

Elliott After Second Win

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Defending Pepsi 400 champion Bill Elliott says last year's victory surprised him as much as any of his 30 Winston Cup wins.

"When the race started, I had no idea I'd win," Elliott said Wednesday. "I figured probably a top-10 finish, at best, was all I could work for."

Elliott started 38th in the 42-car field but edged Rick Wilson by 18 inches for the victory. The margin was the slimmest in the history of the race.

Elliott had the seventh-best lap speed in practice Wednesday for Pepsi 400 qualifying sessions today and Friday. He hit 187.958 mph on Daytona International Speedway's tri-oval. Wilson was fastest at 189.873 mph, with Ken Schrader second at 188.957.

Elliott is coming off a victory in last week's 400-mile race at Michigan International Speedway. That triumph a 19-race winless streak, Elliott's longest since achieving his first Winston Cup victory in 1983.

One reason for the slump was an injury Elliott sustained during his last visit to Daytona. He broke his left wrist in a crash during practice for February's Daytona 500.

Elliott said Sunday's victory, while a positive step, doesn't necessarily mean that his comeback is complete.

"We're getting closer, but we're still not where we need to be," he said. "But the race team needed that win, with everything that's happened this year."

Blue Edwards talks to a local sportscaster after getting picked by the Utah Jazz Tuesday

As Blue Traveled, Jazz Held Breath Utah Kept Its Hopes Under Cover

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

For the last few weeks, the Utah Jazz were hoping to get a chance to draft former East Carolina standout Blue Edwards, but team officials weren't about to let the rest of the league know about it.

Edwards spent last week crisscrossing the nation getting interviewed by officials from NBA teams in Miami, Seattle, Houston, Phoenix, Orlando and Atlanta. But he had no reason to think Utah was thinking about using its first pick, the 21st overall, on him.

But the Jazz did exactly that.

"There is so much at stake, throughout the league, people don't discuss who they are going to take," Scott Layden, assistant coach and player personnel director for the Jazz said. "If a team calls you, you say, 'We're looking at a point guard, a big guard or a small forward.'"

"Then you just try to guess what the teams in front you are going to do," Layden added. "Yesterday (Tuesday), I had two completely different guys going to Seattle (with the 16th and 17th picks)."

"Then they pulled up and took Shawn Kemp and Dana Barros. It helped us. I thought maybe Blue would go a little earlier. It worked out for us."

The selection definitely caught Edwards off-guard.

"I was kind of shocked," Edwards said. "I just got back from Atlanta this afternoon and I felt like I would go to Atlanta. I hadn't talked to anybody from Utah so Utah never crossed my mind."

Jazz officials first came across Edwards during preliminary scouting over the past season as the Pirate star averaged 26.7 points per game, sixth in the nation.

Layden didn't get to see Edwards live until April in the Portsmouth Invitational. It was Edwards' first all-star game, and he didn't play all that well.

"I don't know (why)," Layden said. "I was trying to figure out why he didn't play well, the only thing I can say is the format. His team lost and played one other game and left."

"I went back and watched the tape. Those tournaments are kind of hard. You're yanked in and out," Layden said. "I attribute (his performance) to that format."

Edwards turned it around at the NBA Pre-Draft Camp in Chicago, during the first week of July.

"Certainly he played great in Chicago," Layden said. "I thought he scored well in Chicago. In Portsmouth, we certainly saw he was a great shooter. He was only 2-7, but we certainly saw he was a great athlete. You could tell by his statistics (in college), he was a good shooter and a good scorer."

After playing in the Portsmouth tournament and the Japan Classic in May, Edwards was projected to be at best a late second-round choice or

Rains Save Pitt Win Over Rocky Mount

Travis Clemons fires a pitch during action Wednesday night

Post 39 Goes For Title Against Snow Hill Tonight

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt County pulled a fast one on Rocky Mount Wednesday night, pick-pocketing a win from what could have easily been a defeat.

After a second rain delay cleared the field with Rocky Mount leading 9-7 midway through the eighth, umpires called the game. That caused the score to revert back to the last full inning to give Pitt County a 7-6 American Legion baseball victory.

"I do feel that way," Pitt County coach Grant Jarman said. "I don't like to say we stole it. I feel sort of bad about it. (But) I'm not going to give it back."

Especially not with a potential bye in this weekend's playoffs in the balance.

The win allows Pitt to have a shot at first place in its game against Snow Hill tonight. Rocky Mount's loss dropped it into a tie with Wilson for third place, both at 10-7. Wilson will take third in the post-season tournament seedings having beaten Rocky Mount twice. Rocky Mount will be seeded fourth while Wayne County (8-8) is fifth and Edenton (5-12) is sixth.

Pitt County, 11-5, could take first as it hosts Snow Hill, 11-4, in tonight's regular season finale. Both teams will have byes in the first round of the tournament, which begins Friday.

Snow Hill's game at Wayne County Wednesday night was rained out. Given the situation, you can understand Rocky Mount coach Jerry Carter's displeasure with the umpire's decision.

"I don't agree with the decision," he said after the game ended around 12:04 a.m. "We should be playing now. You see as we talk it's not raining right now. It's the umpire's decision. There's not a lot you can do."

The rain caused a 50-minute delay midway through the first inning, and it began to fall again heavily in the eighth as Rocky Mount scored three runs to rally from a 7-6 deficit to a 9-7 lead.

As Pitt County came to bat around 11:30, the umpires again cleared the field.

"They (the umpires) were in a bad predicament from the very start," Jarman said. "Coming up here, it looked like it was going to rain all night. He was after the safety of the kids."

Pitt County didn't hit the ball well, but took advantage of some Rocky Mount miscues in the fourth inning to break a 2-2 tie and move out to a 7-2 advantage.

David Leisten opened the inning by getting hit by a pitch and stole second. Ty Little reached off an error. Little then stole second, but the throw from the plate was mishandled, allowing Leisten to score.

Rod Gorham reached on a base on balls and stole second. Rocky Mount catcher Eric Gazaway again tried for the pickoff, and again the ball got away at second, allowing Little to score. The ball was then errored on the throw in by the center fielder, allowing Gorham to score.

One out later, Heath Clark drew a walk and stole second. Chris Christopher followed with another walk. A ground out moved the runners up before Jamie Brewington singled to drive them in and give Pitt County a 7-2 lead.

"They scored three or four runs on the benefit of one hit," Carter said. It was the last hit Pitt County would get, but thanks to the errors at second, Post 39 still had the lead.

"We were able to steal a few bases," Jarman said. "Their catcher had four good throws and they let the ball get by them (each time)."

Travis Clemons started the game for Pitt County and other than giving up a two-run homer to Duane Thomas in the first, held Post 58 in check through five innings.

In the sixth though, Gazaway singled in one run and Clemons walked in the other to make it 7-4.

Hal Conger came on for Clemons in the seventh, but Rocky Mount was still able to pull closer. Jon Carter singled and later scored off a wild pitch, while Dan Wood scored off a ground out to make it 7-6.

Things got sloppy for Pitt County in the eighth, as Post 58 got four hits off Conger, but thanks to the umpire's decision it didn't matter.

Radja Won't Be Allowed To Play

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Dino Radja, a center on Yugoslavia's national basketball team who was drafted by the Boston Celtics on Tuesday, will not be allowed to join the National Basketball Association team, his Yugoslav coach said today.

"We are not going to give him the permission to go," said Bozidar Maljkovic, the coach of the Jugoplastika team for which Radja plays.

Yugoslav center Vlade Divac, meanwhile, picked by the Los Angeles Lakers in the first round of the draft, will be permitted to sign with the Lakers, newspaper reports said.

Even though the Yugoslav sports federation does not have a policy that would prevent Radja from signing with Boston, Jugoplastika officials claim he is bound by a contract that expires in 1992.

"The NBA must respect contracts between players and their clubs," Jugoplastika's manager Josip Bilic said. "We have no intention of selling our players in America."

Radja is vacationing in Italy and was not available for comment. Last week, during the European Basketball Championships in Zagreb, he told the Associated Press that he would join an NBA team if "the financial offer is good" and that Jugoplastika cannot prevent him from joining the NBA.

Rose, Greene Central Win League Cups

Rose High School in the Big East and Greene Central in the Eastern Plains have won their respective Wachovia Cup trophies for their conferences.

The Rampants took the Big East 4-A title by finishing the year with 99 1/2 points, including first place finishes in baseball, golf and girls' track during the spring, earning 44 1/2 points for the season.

Northern Nash took second with 90 points while Northeastern was third with 82 1/2. They were followed by Fike with 76 1/2, Hunt with 71, Kinston with 54 1/2, Rocky Mount with 51 and Beddingfield with 34.

Greene Central finished with 48 points to take honors for the Eastern Plains 2-A, winning varsity and junior varsity baseball, boys' track and softball for a total of 25 3/4 points in the spring.

Farmville Central was second with 46 1/4 points while Ayden-Grifton was third with 44. North Pitt was fourth with 36 3/4 followed by South Lenoir with 31 3/4, C.B. Aycock with 30 and Pamlico with 19 3/4.

Hertford County won the trophy for the 2-A Northeastern Conference with 132 1/2 points, including 60 from the spring where the Bears won varsity and JV baseball and boys' and girls' track. They were followed by Edenton Holmes with 120 1/2, Roanoke Rapids with 119, Northampton East with 114, Williamston with 111 1/2, Roanoke with 98 and Plymouth with 85 1/2.

North Edgecombe took the trophy in the 1-A Tobacco Belt Conference with 240 points, earning 70 in the spring. Bath took second with 195, followed by Chocowinity with 190, Belhaven with 172 1/2, Jamesville with 150, Columbia with 145, Bear Grass with 112 1/2, Aurora with 110, Mattamuskeet with 97 1/2 and Creswell with 72 1/2.

The Coastal Conference final standings have not been announced. The trophy is presented annually by Wachovia Bank and Truist with each individual conference setting its own scale for the awarding of the trophy.

Nat Norris Signs With White Sox

Nat Norris, former Farmville Central High School star athlete, has signed a professional baseball contract with the Chicago White Sox organization.

Norris, who completed his career at High Point College this spring, was assigned to the Sarasota team of the Florida State League, a White Sox farm team.

Norris, 5-9, 170, was the third pick of the 25th round, according to the White Sox.

The Farmville native batted .307 for the Panthers of High Point as a junior and turned in a .389 mark during his senior season. He also was successful in 38 of 40 stolen base tries during his two-year career. Norris transferred to High Point after two years at Louisburg.

He also ran track for the Panthers, earning NAIA All-American honors as a member of the High Point 400-meter relay team and individually in the 100-meter dash.

Orioles To Hold Tryout Camp Here

The Baltimore Orioles will hold a tryout camp at East Carolina University on July 6, starting at 9 a.m.

Prospects must provide their own shoes, glove, uniform and incidentals and pay their own expenses to attend. Should anyone be signed by the Orioles, their expenses will be paid by the club.

American Legion players must have written permission from their coach or post commander and the camp is limited to those age 16-22.

Oriole scout Jim Gilbert and area score Wayne Bender will conduct the camp.

Queen Anne's Revenge Tops Race

WASHINGTON — Queen Anne's Revenge, captained by Wilton Smith of Bath, took top honors in the 1989 Smirnoff Cup Regatta, held in the Pamlico Sound last weekend.

A total of 49 sailboats, ranging in size from 27 to 47 feet, entered the event, which was cut short due to lack of wind and sudden showers. In addition to Queen Anne's Revenge winning "First in Fleet" other winners were:

- Class A Spinnaker Division: 1) Queen Anne's Revenge, Wilton Smith, Bath; 2) Boss Lady, Pete Hunter, Kill Devil Hills; 3) Man-O-War, Jack Chesson, Rocky Mount.
- Class B Spinnaker Division: 1) Streaker, Bob Mabe, Kernersville; 2) Nine, Tom Richter, Washington; 3) Green Machine, Dennis O'Neal, Greenville.
- Class C Spinnaker Division: 1) Mistress, John Bishop, Rocky Mount; 2) Jonathon, John Phelps, Raleigh; 3) Heart of Carolina, Tom Louis, Greenville.
- Class D Non-Spinnaker: 1) Wild Turkey II, Frank Christensen, Fayetteville; 2) Attitude, Malinda Cayton, Bridgeton; 3) Creme-de-la-Creme, John Blount, Washington.
- Class E Non-Spinnaker: 1) Puff, Ray Melick, Elizabeth City; 2) Starboard Tack, Richard Owen, Greenville; 3) West Wind, John White, Greenville.

Three Swimmers Place In State Games

Three Greenville swimmers placed in the top 10 in the North Carolina State Games Age Group finals held at N.C. Central University.

Jeff Carstarphen placed in five events in the 13-14 boys meet. He took a fifth in the 200 butterfly with a time of 3:13.94, was fourth in the 100 freestyle in 1:03.62, was fifth in the 200 freestyle in 2:19.44; seventh in the 50 freestyle in 28.91 and was seventh in the 100 butterfly in 1:16.09.

Josh Glienke placed in five events also, competing in the 15-18 boys' division. His places included fifth in the 200 breaststroke in 3:03.39; sixth in the 200 freestyle in 2:22.73; sixth in the 200 individual medley in 2:41.82; ninth in the 100 freestyle in 1:03.81 and sixth in the 100 breaststroke in 1:24.71.

Bert Powell, also in the 15-18 boys group, also placed in five events. He was 10th in the 200 freestyle in 2:30.62; was 10th in the 100 freestyle in 1:04.31; seventh in the 100 breaststroke in 1:25.9 and sixth in the 100 backstroke in 1:21.05.

Langston, Expos Sink Mets, 4-3

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Mark Langston had nothing to prove to the New York Mets. He let his teammates do that.

Langston struck out 10 Wednesday night as Montreal beat New York 4-3 to complete a three-game sweep and extend its winning streak to six games.

The left-hander was the subject of constant trade rumors during spring training, and most involved the Mets. Eventually, Seattle sent him to the Expos for three young pitchers.

"I wasn't out there to show the Mets anything," Langston said. "I had no extra incentive because of the trade talk. I certainly didn't want to go out there and try to do things I'm not capable of."

The first-place Expos lead the Mets and Chicago Cubs by 2 1/2 games in the National League East.

"They're definitely a team to be reckoned with and they know it," said losing pitcher Bob Ojeda, 5-7. "I don't think they're popping the champagne and saying they beat the 'Mighty Mets,' but I think they really believe in themselves and that's one of the most important things in this game."

Elsewhere in the NL, it was San Diego 2, Los Angeles 1; Pittsburgh 7, Chicago 3; Houston 7, San Francisco 3; Atlanta 4, Cincinnati 3, and St. Louis 2, Philadelphia 1.

Entering the game, Langston had won three games on the road while dropping two decisions at Olympic Stadium. Langston, 4-2, allowed 12 hits and three runs in eight innings. Tim Burke got the last three outs for his 16th save.

"I'll be satisfied with a 12-hitter any time I end up with a 'W,'" Langston said. "It seemed like I was in trouble all night, but I was fortunate that my slider was breaking sharply."

Tim Wallach went 2-for-3 with two RBIs, including a run-scoring double in Montreal's three-run third.

"Beating the Mets in this series means we won three games, but it doesn't mean we conquered anybody or anything," Tim Wallach said. "But I do think that the way we played showed us that we're as good a team as we thought we were when we left spring training."

Padres 2, Dodgers 1

Tony Gwynn hit a two-run single in the eighth inning and Ed Whitson improved to 10-5 as San Diego rallied to beat Los Angeles at Dodger Stadium.

Benito Santiago started the rally with a single off Mike Morgan, 5-7, and Tim Flannery followed with a bloop single to right. Bip Roberts batted for Whitson and bunted to Morgan, who got the force at third. One out later, Roberto Alomar walked to load the bases and Gwynn singled off reliever Ricky Horton.

Mark Davis got his 20th save, escaping a bases-loaded jam in the eighth with two strikeouts.

Braves 4, Reds 3

Tom Glavine allowed two runs in 8 1-3 innings and Tommy Gregg had three hits as visiting Atlanta beat Cincinnati, snapping a five-game losing streak.

The Reds pulled off their first triple play in 22 years in the sixth inning when Bruce Benedict lined out to shortstop Barry Larkin with runners on first and second moving on the pitch.

Glavine, 7-17 last year, is 8-4. Jose Rijo pitched six innings and fell to 7-5.

Eric Davis hit two homers and drove in three runs for the Reds. He has 14 homers for the season.

Astros 7, Giants 3

Glenn Davis drove in two runs to lead Houston past San Francisco at the Astrodome. The victory was the fifth in six games for the second-place Astros, and cut the Giants' lead in the NL West to two games.

Bill Doran, Davis and Ken Caminiti had run-scoring doubles in the first inning and Terry Puhl added an RBI double in the third off Don Robinson, 7-5.

Jim Deshaies, 8-3, went seven innings, allowing three runs on five hits, including Candy Maldonado's solo homer in the fifth. Larry Andersen pitched the last two innings.

Pirates 3, Cubs 1

Bobby Bonilla tripled in two runs to break an eighth-inning tie as Pittsburgh won its fifth straight and handed Chicago its sixth loss in a row.

It's the first time the Cubs have gone winless on a homestand of at least six games since divisional play began in 1969.

Jeff Robinson, 4-6, allowed four hits in seven innings for the victory and former Pirate Mike Bielecki, 7-4, was the loser.

Cardinals 2, Phillies 1

Joe Magrane pitched a seven-hitter and Pedro Guerrero drove in his first run in 12 games as St. Louis beat Philadelphia at Busch Stadium to break a four-game losing streak.

Magrane, 7-6, won for the fourth time in five starts. He lost his shutout when Steve Lake singled home Randy Ready with two outs in the ninth.

Ozzie Smith had an RBI single in the first inning, extending his hitting streak to nine games, and Guerrero added a pinch sacrifice fly with the bases loaded in the sixth off Ken Howell, 6-5.

Little League

Pepsi-Cola 8
Lions 7

Pepsi-Cola pushed over a run in the bottom of the sixth inning to nip the Lions, 8-7, in the first game of the City Little League Championship series Wednesday evening.

The win moves Pepsi within one victory of the City title, with Game Two of the best-of-three series set for this afternoon at 6 p.m. at Elm Street Park. A Pepsi win would give them the sweep, while a Lions win would send the two into the rubber game Friday at 6 p.m.

Pepsi scored first in the game, taking a 1-0 lead in the first. The Lions, however, came up with three runs in the third inning to take a 3-1 edge. Pepsi cut that to 3-2 in the bottom of the frame.

The Lions then scored four times in the fourth inning, but Pepsi rallied for five in its half of the frame to tie it up at 7-7. Pepsi then got the winning run in the bottom of the sixth.

Geoff Stallings got the victory for Pepsi, going the distance. He gave up 12 hits, walked five and struck out nine. Daryl Cherry took the loss, giving up 11 hits, walking two and fanning five.

C.J. Wilder led the Pepsi hitting with four while Damian Phillips and Taylor Holt each added two. The Lions were paced on offense by Trabien Shivers with three hits. Cherry, Bryan Fagundus and David Koonce each added two hits.

Prep League

Legal Eagles 16
Computerland 11

The Legal Eagles scored six times in the fifth inning and took a 16-11 victory over Computerland in the Greenville Prep League Wednesday night.

The Eagles pushed over three in the first inning while Computerland came back with two. The Eagles matched that in the second, while Computerland added one in its half to trail 5-3. Both teams added a third inning run and the Eagles got one and Computerland, two, in the fourth, cutting it to 7-6.

In the fifth, however, the Eagles put it away with six runs. David Winbourne walked and Kevin Kirkland singled. Phillip Mann tripled both of them in and Neil Boardman walked as did Ryan Owen, loading the bases. All three scored on a triple by Russell Williamson, who crossed on Curtis McCrae's single for a 12-6 lead.

The Eagles added three more in the sixth while Computerland got two in the fifth and four in the sixth.

Mann and Williamson each had three hits to lead the Eagles, while Owen, Kirkland and McCrae each had two. Guian Operario led Computerland with three hits while Nicky Phillips and Jacob Zonn each had two. One of Phillips' hits was a solo homer to lead off the first inning.

Babe Ruth League

Peeler's 19
Coca-Cola 1

Peeler's romped to a 19-1 victory over Coca-Cola in the Greenville Babe Ruth League Wednesday night.

Peeler's pushed over 11 runs in the first inning of the game to put the game away. Mitch Jones and Courtney Barnes each hit one-run singles, while Stephen Anthony drove in a pair with a hit. Three others scored on a bases-loaded error on a grounder by Hollis Gunn and another on a ground out by Russell Oats.

Peeler's added five more in the third and three in the fourth. Coke's only run came in the third as the team was held to just two hits by Jeffrey Freeman.

Jones and Anthony each had two hits to lead Peeler's.

Home Builders 12
Wachovia Bank 11

Home Builders scored six times in the seventh inning to squeeze out a 12-11 win over Wachovia Bank in the Greenville Babe Ruth League Wednesday night.

The Builders scored three times in the first while Wachovia came up with two. Home Builders added one in the third but Wachovia rallied for seven for a 9-4 advantage. The Builders picked up two more in the fifth to trail 9-6.

Then, in the seventh, the Builders scored six times to take a 12-9 lead. Michael Beland walked and Richie Grimsley singled. Al DeBiase walked and a wild pitch scored Beland. Chuck Williams grounded out, scoring Grimsley. DeBiase also scored on a wild pitch. Thomas Adams walked as did Barry Simo. Drew Lewis also walked. Two wild pitches brought in Adams and Simo and Lewis scored after walks to Brian Fields, Roger Kramer and Beland.

Wachovia rallied, scoring twice in the bottom of the seventh, but fell short.

Grimsley, DeBiase and Williams each had two hits to lead Home Builders. No one had more than one for Wachovia.

Jury Says He's Wed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — A jury decided New York Yankees outfielder Dave Winfield had legally been married to his common-law wife, opening the door for divorce and property proceedings. Winfield's attorney said the ruling will be appealed.

The jury on Wednesday voted 10-2 for Sandra Renfro, 34, who said she and Winfield lived together as husband and wife from 1982 to 1985. A divorce hearing is set for July 10 before state District Judge Allen Daggett.

Renfro, a flight attendant from Houston, is seeking unspecified damages and child support for her and for Winfield's 6-year-old daughter.

Connors Dodges Question Of Retirement Once Again dropped the opening set before reaching the round of 32 with a 6-7, 6-3, 6-2, 6-2 victory over the Swede, ranked 311th in the world.

"I didn't know anything about him," said Lendl, still trying to find his best form. "I hadn't even seen his face."

Steffi Graf stayed on course to retain her title, taking just 43 minutes to beat Kim Kessaris, a 16-year-old American amateur playing in her second Grand Slam tournament.

"It was like a dream come true, to play the No. 1 player in the world on Centre Court," said Kessaris, who bothered Graf at times in the first set with her big serve.

French Open champion Arantxa Sanchez of Spain came through the first round after losing at the same stage the past two years. The 17-year-old from Barcelona said she had changed her mind about playing on grass.

"I felt it was for, how you say, cows? But now I think different," Sanchez said.

WIMBLEDON, England — Jimmy Connors anticipated the question, the same one he's been asked time after time since age began creeping up.

Once again, he wasn't giving anything away.

"Get through this year first and see what happens," the 36-year-old Connors said when asked about retirement after tumbling out of Wimbledon in the second round Wednesday.

His 7-6, 5-7, 6-4, 6-2 loss to Dan Goldie was only the third time since he came to Wimbledon in 1971 that Connors had exited so early. It was by far the biggest upset through the first three days of the tournament.

Known for his stirring comebacks, Connors had beaten Goldie, ranked 47th in the world, in both their previous meetings. This time, however, he couldn't convert a flurry of break points and failed again to add a third title to his 1974 and 1982 triumphs.

"That's the grass. Sometimes it works out and sometimes it doesn't," Connors said.

Pressed about his future in the game, Connors said he'd know when it was time to retire, but that time hadn't come yet. Enjoyment, not winning, was his main motivation.

"I don't need to play just to be around," Connors said. "If I'm enjoying it, I don't need any other reason to play. I don't think it's necessary for me not to come and play just because I don't think I've got a chance of winning. I don't care if I win another tournament. I've had enough of them."

Goldie said Connors played like a far younger man.

"He's still a very good player," Goldie said. "He's still very fast. He doesn't play like a 36-year-old."

Two other seeded players were ousted on the third day of the tournament.

Races Heating Up In American League

A's, Twins Battle For 1st In AL West; Multi-Team Fight For 2nd In AL East

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The American League has a couple of torrid five-team races under way — but it's a race for first place in the West and for second place in the East.

The AL West tightened up some more Wednesday night when Minnesota's Frank Viola bested Oakland's Dave Stewart in a battle of pitchers who have the league's winningest records since 1987. The surging Twins completed a three-game sweep of the slumping Athletics by winning 2-0.

"Everything's jelling right now. It's the first time all year we've been able to say that," Viola said after the fifth-place Twins pulled within 5½ games of the division-leading A's.

"You look at how many games you're out in the standings and see double figures, it gets you thinking the pennant race might be passing you by. It's nice to see us playing winning baseball again."

In the AL East, Baltimore leads Milwaukee and New York by 7½ games, Cleveland and Toronto by eight and Boston by 8½.

Wally Backman and Jim Dwyer had RBI doubles in the third and seventh innings for Minnesota, which has won four straight and 14 of 19. Oakland has lost nine of its last 13. On June 16, the Twins were 30-34, 11 games behind Oakland.

Viola, 6-8, hasn't allowed any runs in his last two starts covering 17 innings. The 1988 Cy Young Award winner walked three and struck out four in his first shutout and fourth complete game of the year.

Stewart, 12-4, failed to become the major leagues' first 13-game winner despite yielding only six hits. He is 3-9 lifetime against the Twins.

"You go through periods where things aren't going to work," Oakland manager Tony LaRussa said. "You keep trying and, if you're good, they'll start working. This is June. The standings are not of interest to me."

Twins manager Tom Kelly also downplayed the race between the 1987 champions and Oakland's 1988 titlists.

"We've got an awful long way to go," Kelly said. "We're still only a couple of games over .500 and we're still 5½ back. We ain't done nothing."

Indians 2, Angels 1

Scott Bailes allowed five hits in eight innings and Felix Fermin scored the winning run on Willie Fraser's wild pitch with two out in the bottom of the eighth as Cleveland snapped California's four-game winning streak.

Fraser's wild pitch made a loser of rookie Jim Abbott, 6-5, who limited Cleveland to four hits in 7 2-3 innings and retired 17 batters in a row until the Indians broke through for the winning run. Bailes, 3-3, held the Angels to four hits until Tony Armas tied the game 1-1 with his third home run of the season in the top of the eighth.

Royals 12, Mariners 7

Bob Boone drove in four runs, Kurt Stillwell hit a two-run double in a five-run fourth-inning rally and Bo Jackson hit his 18th home run as Kansas City came from five runs down to end a three-game losing streak.

Mark Gubicza, 8-5, yielded five runs and 10 hits in six innings. Seattle's Gene Harris, 0-1, was knocked out in the Royals' five-run fourth inning that erased a 5-1 deficit.

Pat Tabler singled home the first run of the inning, Boone had a sacrifice fly, Stillwell's double tied the score and Jerry Reed yielded a single to Kevin Seitzer for a 6-5 Kansas City lead.

Rangers 10, White Sox 5

Texas broke a 4-4 tie with five unearned runs in the fifth inning. Scott Fletcher, leading off the inning, was safe when first baseman Greg Walker dropped his pop fly and Rafael Palmeiro singled him to second. Shawn Hillegas relieved loser Steve Rosenberg, 2-5, and walked Ruben Sierra to load the bases.

After Julio Franco struck out, the go-ahead run scored when pinch hitter Rick Leach grounded into a forceout and Palmeiro also came home on second baseman Fred Manrique's throwing error and he tried to complete an inning-ending double play. After a walk to Jim Sundberg, Steve Buechele, Jeff Kunkel and Cecil Espy hit consecutive RBI singles for a 9-4 lead.

Orioles 2, Blue Jays 1

Cal Ripken broke a tie with a solo home run with one out in the eighth inning, giving Baltimore its second straight victory over the Blue Jays. Toronto has lost four straight.

After Toronto tied the game on Fred McGriff's solo homer off Brian Holton leading off the seventh inning, Ripken connected off Toronto starter John Cerutti, 3-4. It was the eighth home run of the season and third hit of the game for Ripken, who was 0-for-13 in his previous three games.

Brewers 12, Red Sox 5

B.J. Surhoff drove in a career-high five runs, Rob Deer hit his league-leading 21st homer and Teddy Higuera, 2-2, won his first game in almost a month. The victory gave the Brewers their first three-game winning streak since April 24-27.

Higuera struggled early in 60-degree temperature, giving up single runs in the first and second innings. He also surrendered Nick Esasky's 12th homer in the sixth before being replaced by Chuck Crim.

Trailing 2-0, the Brewers tied the game on Deer's 400-foot homer, a two-run shot in the second inning off Mike Smithson, 4-6. Surhoff then walked, Terry Francona singled and they moved up on Jim Gantner's groundout. Paul Molitor's sacrifice fly made it 3-2 Milwaukee and Robin Yount singled home the fourth run of the inning.

Tigers 6, Yankees 5

Lou Whitaker, who scored the tying run in the eighth inning, led off the 10th with his 16th home run, sending the Yankees to their ninth straight defeat at Tiger Stadium.

Mike Henneman, 5-1, the third Detroit pitcher, worked the final 2-3 innings. New York reliever Dave Righetti, 2-2, who allowed the Tigers to tie the score in the eighth inning, served up Whitaker's homer on a 2-4 pitch.

Edwards...

a free agent. That changed quickly after his trip to Chicago.

"It improved enough for me to go to Orlando with the 11th pick," Edwards said. "But I felt like after my visit that because they are an expansion team, they didn't want to take a gamble. They wanted to go on a sure thing."

After going down to Atlanta on Monday, Edwards figured he'd go the Hawks with the 23rd selection, but Utah beat them to the punch.

"He didn't visit Utah," ECU basketball coach Mike Steele said. "I didn't talk to anybody from Utah. That's why I was surprised. There were probably 10 (other) teams that called me and talked to me (about him)."

The Jazz are projecting Edwards to play big guard behind veterans Darrell Griffith and Bobby Hansen.

"That's how we see him," Layden said, "a guy who can come in behind two very good players and work his way in. It's going to be very competitive for him. He'll be surprised at how good these guys are."

"One thing we have to keep in mind, the 21st pick is a guy we see that has the potential of growing into the system," Layden said.

"One thing we've done in the NBA is a great job of marketing and selling the draft. On draft day, they look like giants. When they get in the league, it can be a rude awakening."

In any case, Edwards has the luxury of going to a perennial playoff team with a set lineup. Malone, Stockton and center Mark Eaton were NBA All-Stars this past season. With Hansen and Griffith in front of him, Edwards has no immediate pressure to produce.

"It's less pressure on me," he said. "Going into the NBA is tough enough. Everybody has that transition period from college to the NBA. I think my development can be delayed a little bit because I'm not looked upon to be an (immediate) impact player. I'm more a piece of a puzzle."

As the Jazz have improved over the past few years, their draft position has fallen, and that has affected how the team makes its choices.

"Really we take the best guy we feel is available," Layden said. "The thing that happened to us is we're picking lower and that's why we get the lesser-known guys."

"Yesterday, when we announced Blue Edwards, it was kind of a shock to the audience. He was not a shock to us though."

Layden is hopeful that contract negotiations with Edwards' agent, William Pollack of Washington D.C., go quickly so the rookie will be able to attend the team's first camp July 18.

"It's really important for him to be there for that," he said. "It gives him a chance to get acclimated to our system, to our coaches, to our players and the city. It gives him a chance to get established. The veterans are going to try and walk right over him."

"The summer is a chance to learn our terminology, learn our drills so that when he comes back in October, it's not a complete shock. We feel like summer is a great start for him. It's a situation where he can get a good jump."

Report Stresses Threat From Passive Smoking

By Paul Raeburn
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Alice Trillin was 38 years old and in excellent health, she thought. Then "this completely crazy thing" happened.

"I coughed and a tiny, tiny blood clot took me to get a chest X-ray. Ten days later I had my lung removed."

Trillin had lung cancer, the kind smokers get.

But she had never smoked a cigarette.

The cause of her cancer remained a mystery until a doctor friend asked if her parents had smoked. Yes, Trillin told him, they smoked heavily.

"Nobody had ever said anything about passive smoking. I hadn't worried about the question much," she says.

Most scientists hadn't worried about the question much either, until studies in recent years showed that passive smoking was causing 3,000 to 5,000 lung cancer deaths a year in non-smokers. Now a study estimates that the toll from passive smoking, including deaths from heart disease and other cancers, may be 10 times that.

Tobacco smoke in the home and workplace could be killing 46,000 non-smokers each year in the United States, the study concludes. That's 3,000 lung cancer deaths, 11,000 from other cancers and 32,000 heart disease deaths.

That would make passive smoking the leading preventable cause of death after alcohol and smoking itself, said Dr. Ronald M. Davis, director of the U.S. Office on Smoking and Health. Smoking kills 390,000; alcohol, 120,000.

"No longer are we talking about runny nose or watery eyes or headache or nausea, but a fatal disease," said Davis. "Which ups the ante, so to speak, for passive smoking."

Passive smoking has become the principal battleground for the tobacco industry and its opponents in the 1980s. It is no longer merely a health issue, but political and environmental. Cigarette pollution is fouling the air.

"We know that the indoor environment is far more polluted than the outdoor environment," said James Repace of the Environmental Protection Agency indoor air program. "We've seen that again and again wherever we've looked all over the United States."

Many people believe smokers have the right to smoke. But they also believe that others shouldn't have to pay a price.

"When you talk about an involuntary risk, the society becomes much more cautious," said University of California-San Francisco biomedical engineer Stanton Glantz, an environmentalist and anti-smoking activist.

The new estimate is controversial. Researchers agree it is preliminary and needs to be confirmed.

A tobacco industry consultant said the emphasis on passive smoking was misplaced. "Environmental tobacco smoke is a smokescreen that is keeping us from looking at the total problem, which is the quality of indoor air," said Dr. David Weeks, president of Per-Med Corp., a health consulting firm in Boise, Idaho. "You take the tobacco smoke out of the air and you've still got the problem."

Many public health officials disagree.

The risk of tobacco smoke "is

If you're breathing somebody else's cigarette smoke at home or work you may risk far more than watery eyes or a runny nose. A controversial new study suggests passive smoking may be one of the leading preventable causes of death. The study could escalate the battle over indoor smoking restrictions.

greater than the risk of radon gas is to non-smokers," said Repace. "We're talking maybe 40 percent greater. And if you're talking about all the carcinogenic air pollutants that EPA regulates, it's 100 times greater."

EPA researchers in North Carolina say in a new internal report that environmental tobacco smoke "is a major source of indoor air pollution and is also the major combustion source contributing to total human exposure to mutagens and carcinogens."

The passive smoking issue poses a serious threat to the tobacco industry. A confidential opinion poll done for the industry in 1978, and leaked to anti-smoking activists, showed passive smoking was "the most dangerous development to the viability of the tobacco industry that has yet occurred."

"What the smoker does to himself may be his business, but what the smoker does to the non-smoker is quite a different matter," the pollsters concluded.

Concern about passive smoking escalated in 1986 with two reports: The U.S. Surgeon General concluded that passive smoking doesn't merely raise the risk of lung cancer — it causes it. And the National Academy of Sciences said exposure to tobacco smoke may raise the risk of lung cancer in non-smokers 34 percent.

Alice Trillin was lucky; she was cured. But lung cancer remains one of the most difficult cancers to treat. Few others will have her luck.

The link between passive smoking and lung cancer is based on four lines of evidence, said Davis, whose Office on Smoking and Health prepares the Surgeon General's reports on smoking.

First, tobacco smoke contains known cancer-causing agents. Second, non-smokers absorb smoke from the air; by-products can be measured in their blood. Third, there's no safe level of exposure to smoke. Fourth, many studies show that non-smokers whose spouses smoke have a higher risk of lung cancer than non-smokers whose spouses don't.

At the end of 1987, 42 states had imposed some restrictions on smoking in public, more than double the number in the early 1970s, said Davis. Thirty-two states restrict smoking in the workplace.

The nation's two largest air-quality agencies, the EPA and the California Air Resources Board, are preparing assessments of the danger of passive smoking. Both have included the new estimate in their calculations.

The estimate comes from a study published in the December issue of Environment International by A. Judson Wells, a researcher in Wilmington, Del., and a volunteer with the American Lung Association.

"In general, we don't think Dr. Wells is going to be off base at all," said Margaret Jenkins, coordinator of the indoor air quality program for the California Air Resources Board.

The paper's findings on lung cancer agree with other studies; its findings on heart disease and other cancers are more speculative, but plausible, Repace said. "The largest source of death from active smoking is, of course, heart disease. We know the arteries of smokers get plugged up very rapidly, and it is very possible that these same effects could occur in passive smokers."

Wells said he himself was surprised by his estimate. "When I first calculated these numbers, they scared the hell out of me. I'd be the first to admit they're wrong, if we can find out why they're wrong."

So far, no one has, although not everyone accepts Wells' estimate.

Weeks, the industry consultant, dismissed Wells' study, as he does concern about passive smoking altogether. He believes passive smoking causes no risk, but he doesn't think any of the data on the subject are very good.

Many researchers would agree

Health Project Aims To Heal Body, Spirit Of Black Women

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — The National Black Women's Health Project is no clinic. It's a 22-state hen party and lovefest, where women tell what ails them and hugs are the order of the day.

From a rambling, tree-shaded old mansion in Atlanta's southwest quadrant, dozens of ladies set about healing bodies by healing attitudes, heightening health awareness for a nation of women who often pay a heavy physical price just for living every day.

"If you are living in a house where you are being abused sexually, physically, emotionally, that is what's on the front of your mind," said executive director Bylye Avery. "You couldn't get too excited about your health." The project estimates that black women are twice as likely as whites to die of diabetes, three times as likely to die of cervical cancer and 18 times more likely to suffer organ damage due to hypertension. It also points out that 75 percent of female AIDS victims are black, and nearly half of all black women are mothers by age 20.

Ms. Avery said black women also are three times as likely to be molested or raped and four times as likely to be murdered. She said the project's main goal is to "break the conspiracy of silence" surrounding women's health.

With shared experiences, newsletters and films, the project works in the hope that education will pull black women away from social evils that inhibit efforts to seek birth control and better nutrition.

Every month, the project stages programs on topics such as "Mothers Too Early Too Long," which gathered four generations of teen mothers to discuss how pregnancy affected their lives; "Black & Female: What Is The Reality?"; about social issues that affect black women, and "Sister-Reach," which dealt with women's health issues in Belize, a tiny Central American nation.

The project also operates a Wellness Center, providing tutorial and literacy programs, out of an Atlanta housing project.

"We create a safe space where sisters can say whatever they need to say," she said. "Where sisters have someone listen to them, and also have someone struggle with them."

And the women come. They laugh and talk. They bring their daughters.

The teen-agers deal with such topics as "Growing Up Is Scary" and "What Is A Real Man?", putting their thoughts in a newsletter written by and for them.

"What we stress is coming together and taking the risk to start talking openly with each other about the realities of our lives. It's through that analysis that women then learn what to do about certain parts of their health," she said. "It helps break down the alienation and isolation that black women feel."

The project was launched at Spelman College in June 1983, during a conference on black women's health issues. Conference planners expected 200 to 300 women. Nearly 2,000 showed up.

Small Company Turns Toxic Waste Into Aggregate For Road Projects

By Kevin McGill
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

AMELIA, La. — A little company on a steamy bayou, Marine Shale Processors, raked in millions using what it said was a revolutionary process to turn toxic waste into glassy black rubble it sold for construction projects.

Last year, it handled wastes from more than 2,500 companies in 48 states.

Meanwhile, residents of St. Mary Parish accuse the company of cancer-causing pollution. State environmental officials have levied over $5 million in fines and last month halted sale of its black "aggregate." Sen. John Breau, D-La., held hearings on Marine Shale last year and two federal grand juries reportedly have studied it.

This month, the company laid off nearly a fourth of its 400 employees. Competitors, who call the process a sham, say the end is near.

But Jack Kent, Marine Shale's fiery-tempered president, vows he won't shut down without a long and costly fight. "Anybody with half-way brains would know this is a much better process to handle this material than any other method in the country today ... or in the world today," he said.

"As far as we're concerned, Marine Shale is on death row. It's just a matter of hooking up the juice," said Richard Fortuna of the Hazardous Waste Treatment Council, a Washington-based lobbying group for Rollins Environmental Services and other waste handlers whose prices were undercut.

Marine Shale began burning hazardous waste in its 275-foot long kiln in 1985, charging up to $300 per 55-gallon drum to take toxic materials from those who produce them. Kent says that's about half what others charged. It sold its aggregate, as fill for roadbeds and boat slips, for $1 a ton.

"MSP gross revenues for the first quarter 1989 are the highest ever!" boasts a flier in the office. Kent said that translates to roughly $22 million.

Profit ordinarily would run 15 percent, he said, but millions in legal fees are making a healthy dent. And business has dropped off 50 percent, he said, since the May 26 order banning sale of Marine Shale aggregate.

The Hazardous Waste Treatment Council says the huge, computer-monitored kiln is nothing more than a glorified incinerator. Fortuna said Marine Shale skirted environmental laws by calling itself a recycler instead of a disposer.

Marine Shale countered that it was operating under some of the nation's strictest air and water permits — stricter than those for a Rollins incinerator at Baton Rouge. Louisiana Department of Environmental Quality officials backed that claim, though the agency has accused the company of frequently violating the permits and is trying to have them revoked.

The state has complained of sloppy storage, violation of air quality standards and refusal to move an allegedly dangerous storage barge off Bayou Bouef alongside the plant. Marine Shale has complied with some DEQ orders and has appealed others, including one revoking its permits because it allegedly treated waste from a foreign country, Canada, in violation of state law.

Company vice president and general counsel George Eldredge has repeatedly accused DEQ of delaying administrative hearings on orders, some dating to 1986. Kent is eager to get DEQ hearings over with so he can take matters to court. Miriam Price of St. Mary Parish is just as eager as Kent, but for different reasons. "I see a long road ahead for those of us who would like to see Marine Shale closed. And we're looking to DEQ to do the job."

Smoking

that current estimates are imprecise.

But Repace answers Weeks this way: "Environmental tobacco smoke is tobacco smoke. And tobacco smoke is known to cause 400,000 deaths a year. Here is a known carcinogen to human beings. Are we to assume that low levels are innocuous? The question is, what standard of proof you require before you take public action?"

The risk to a non-smoker in a typical office is about the same as the risk for a non-smoker whose spouse smokes, he said. "In a typical office with good ventilation, you're running about 250 times the maximum acceptable cancer risk for environmental carcinogens in air or water or food."

That is, among 100,000 workers, you'd expect 250 of them to die from lung cancer caused by passive smoking. "And in the poorly ventilated office, it would be four times as high," Repace said.

Occasional exposure in a bar, restaurant or car probably is not nearly as great a risk as exposure in the home or the office, he said.

Most of the regulatory emphasis now is on curbing smoke in the workplace. "It's one of the two most important places of exposure to tobacco smoke, the other being the home," Davis said. "For somebody who doesn't have any smokers in the home, the worksite would be the most important place."

Even many smokers favor policies that curb the passive smoking risk.

According to the 1989 Surgeon General's report on smoking, 64 percent of smokers believe their habit is hazardous to non-smokers' health. Thirty-four percent of smokers were bothered by other people's smoking.

The question for non-smokers is how aggressively to avoid tobacco smoke.

"I'm sure one day's exposure isn't going to do you any harm," said Wells. "But every little bit adds to what you've accumulated heretofore."

"Only the most sensitive individuals are going to die of passive smoking. The problem is we don't know who they are. It could be you. It could be me."

Dental Implants Catch On ... Slowly

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Pro basketball player Vern Fleming used to worry that when he was hit in the mouth his teeth would spill out onto the court. Years of neglect had left the Indiana Pacers guard's upper teeth decayed and loose.

Georgia Price never had real teeth, only soft tooth buds barely emerging from her gums where her baby teeth never came in. The Bloomington nurse, now 41, received her first dentures at age 3½ and a second set at 12.

Both have found relief with permanent implants, teeth anchored on metal rods supported by frameworks hidden underneath the gums.

"I always thought how wonderful it would be to feel like I have teeth," Price said. "I speak clearer now without my teeth flying across the room."

Dental implants have been around since the early Egyptians but remain largely unknown among the public. More frustrated denture wearers are receiving them, though, as implants gain wider acceptance among dentists.

A National Institutes of Health conference last year said in a statement that the number of dentists performing implants had grown tenfold in five years and that 300,000 Americans a year will be getting implanted teeth by 1992.

Implant dentistry was a $150 million industry last year, estimated Dr. Richard Guaccio of Lake County, president of the 2,000-member American Academy of Implant Dentistry.

Some dentists caution that implants aren't for everyone, particularly those with overriding health problems and those who won't give the devices the care and cleaning necessary to prevent infection and prosthetic failure.

Few people enjoy having to take dentures out at night, and some are embarrassed to let their spouses or others see them without their false teeth, said Dr. Craig Cooper of Indianapolis, who does 300-400 implants a year. "They eat better, but it's way beyond that from a psychological point of view."

Sixty percent of the respondents to a marketing survey last year had never heard of implants, said Cooper, who directs the faculty at the Midwest Implant Institute in Columbus, Ohio, which has trained 600 dentists in implantology since 1981.

Yet a survey three years ago by the National Institute of Dental Research suggests many people could use them. Forty-two percent of Americans over age 65 and 4 percent of those aged 35 to 64 have no teeth, it reported.

The growing older market, a wealthy segment of the population, provides implant dentistry with a tremendous opportunity for growth, and manufacturers have provided a variety of devices, Cooper said. "It's exponential growth. There are fewer and fewer patients we cannot treat."

The American Dental Association has reservations.

"In general the feeling is that implants can be used on a selected basis, depending on the patient and the patient's condition," said Dr. Wayne Wozniak, of ADA's Chicago laboratory on certification and product research. "It should only be done on people the dentist feels can properly maintain the implant. It requires meticulous oral hygiene after the device has been placed. So it requires a highly motivated individual."

Infection around the implant would erode the bone where many of the devices are implanted; lack of adequate bone would immediately eliminate some patients from being implant candidates. One implant, subperiosteal, is not based in bone and consists of a wiry framework fitted between the bone and the gum.

Depending on the type, implants can cost as little as $600 for a single tooth or as much as $10,000 for a full upper or lower arch, and some procedures are covered by Medicare. Most are performed as outpatient surgery.

The NIH statement said there was little information on long-term effectiveness of implants and called for a national registry to collect data. However, it's generally considered 80 percent to 90 percent of implants are successful for at least five to 10 years.

Cooper, who inserted the 28-year-old Fleming's subperiosteal implant, said it should last the rest of his life with proper care.

Implants can last 20 years and more, said Guaccio, estimating that after 18 years, "about 87 percent of the implants I've ever placed are still functioning in the mouth."

Some Use Cocaine To Cause Abortions

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LANSING, Mich. — Women once used hangers to end unwanted pregnancies. Now, health officials say a few desperate women are using cocaine to induce abortions.

The National Association for Perinatal Addiction Research and Education has heard of cocaine-induced abortions in every major U.S. city during the last three years, said Ira Chasnoff, president of the Chicago-based organization.

"It's probably cheaper, faster and more efficient to do it themselves" rather than seek an abortion in a clinic, he said in a telephone interview Wednesday.

The group keeps no statistics on cocaine-induced abortions, but officials in Miami and Detroit say scattered cases of women who used large doses of cocaine to end pregnancies are showing up in emergency rooms as miscarriage patients.

"If you pin down some of them and ask questions, you will find some are using it as an abortifacient," said Dr. Gene Burkette, medical director of the obstetrical and gynecology clinic at Jackson Memorial Hospital in Miami.

Even though abortion has been legal since 1973, Burkette said several factors cause women to attempt to induce abortion themselves.

"Some might not be able to afford it and some may figure, 'why waste the money when you can use it to buy cocaine?'" he said.

"It shouldn't be surprising I guess that desperate women will try anything available to them," said R. Wiener, acting director of the Michigan Department of Public Health.

At least one patient at a Detroit drug-treatment program for pregnant women deliberately increased her drug use after discovering she was pregnant, according to Dr. Rhonda Beale, clinical director of the Eleanor Hutzel Recovery Center.

"One woman talked about at the beginning of the pregnancy she started taking more and more coke," said Beale, a psychiatrist.

"She didn't want to deal with the reality of pregnancy, she wanted to be rid of the pregnancy. She was happy (when she miscarried) because she didn't want the baby anyway."

Other women tire of being pregnant and use the drug to prompt early labor and ensure a less painful delivery, Burkette said.

Universal Hepatitis Vaccinations Urged

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The current strategy for vaccinating against hepatitis B has not significantly curbed the disease, and it may make sense to inoculate every infant and 12-year-old instead, a federal expert says.

That would cost up to $150 million a year just for publicly funded programs, said Miriam Alter, head of hepatitis surveillance at the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta. Hepatitis B infections cost the nation more than $700 million a year in treatment and lost worktime.

No cost-effectiveness analysis of the massive vaccination approach has been done, but "that's what we think is the ideal strategy," Alter said.

CDC is not now recommending it because no money is available, and much organizing among pediatricians, parents and local health departments would be required before it could begin, she said in an interview, adding she hoped it could be put in place "someday soon."

An estimated 300,000 new hepatitis B infections occur every year in the United States, said Alter. The annual number of new cases rose 67 percent from 1978 to 1985 although a vaccine became available in 1982. Some 5,000 to 6,000 Americans a year die from resulting liver disease, including chronic hepatitis, cirrhosis and cancer.

Vaccination is now recommended for people in high-risk groups. Because the virus can be spread by sexual contact or infected hypodermic needles, those at risk include homosexually active men, heterosexuals with multiple sex partners, health care workers, drug abusers and those who have sex with infected people.

Although about 2.5 million Americans have been vaccinated, Alter said, the effort has done little to stem the disease. At least 30 percent of the infected people don't come from any of the high-risk groups, and most inoculations have been given to health care workers, who comprised no more than 5 percent of hepatitis B cases even before the vaccine was available, she said.

Vaccinating every infant would be effective, but it would take years before the children got old enough to affect disease totals appreciably, Alter said. Including 12-year-olds at the same time would have a faster impact.

The two-pronged program would initially cost $100 million a year in public funding and peak at $150 million, the decline because adolescent immunizations would be stopped once inoculated infants reached age 12, she said.

CDC recently gave the cost figures to Congress, which sought a strategy to eliminate hepatitis B. Alter said she was not aware of any reaction.

Woman Legally Uses Marijuana To Fight Glaucoma's Ravages

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. — Elvy Musikka begins most days like she ends them — smoking a legal joint and hoping others like her can do the same some day.

Either rolled like a cigarette or baked into brownies, marijuana has been in Ms. Musikka's life for more than 12 years as she tried to lessen the effects of glaucoma, which has left her with only 10 percent of her sight.

Yet she clearly sees herself as a crusader for the thousands of glaucoma victims around the United States denied legal use of the drug that reduces the high eye pressure caused by the disease.

"I think people have every right to sue the government for keeping them from what could be their one hope left of keeping their sight," said Ms. Musikka, 44, one of three people given government-grown marijuana for medical reasons.

"I am constantly haunted by the idea there are others who will never see the stars again or look upon their children because they were denied a simple plant."

Ms. Musikka's application for legal marijuana was approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration in October, two months after a Broward Circuit Court judge was persuaded to clear her of marijuana-growing charges.

Each month, Ms. Musikka receives 300 marijuana cigarettes shipped to Bascom Palmer Eye Institute in Miami.

If she smokes, it's a joint every three hours. "But actually I prefer to eat it," said Ms. Musikka. "You feel less stoned and it lasts longer. I can eat some pot brownies and go about 12 hours. Also, your throat doesn't get so raspy. But that's OK if you want to sing some blues."

Ms. Musikka has turned to music since her limited sight keeps her from working. She now travels around Florida discussing marijuana treatment for glaucoma and promoting her newly released four-song record partially funded by a $6,000 grant from the state Division of Blind Services.

The songs — two in English and two in Spanish — are among lyrics and melodies she began after her glaucoma worsened in 1976. "I was scared to death of going totally blind. The music was a way to keep my mind off my problems."

Ms. Musikka has a scrapbook with the cover photograph showing her beside a bushy marijuana plant in 1984. The pages are covered with clippings about her legal fight and her clandestine days growing her own marijuana.

In 1976, she conducted an interview under a pseudonym for a newspaper in her hometown of Hollywood, about 15 miles north of Miami. When friends realized Ms. Musikka was the subject of the story, they began bringing her marijuana.

"It was great because I was raising two kids and couldn't afford to keep a supply on my own. But I decided to grow my own to save some money and at least have some always on hand... The problem was keeping out animals — birds, cats and dogs. They seem to love it. One time my puppy ate a whole plant. He slept for a couple hours but otherwise he was alright."

For nearly 10 years, Ms. Musikka grew several marijuana plants on the deck of her screen-enclosed pool. A roommate in February 1988 tipped police and Ms. Musikka spent a night in jail before being bailed out. Her case drew wide publicity and support from two others allowed legal marijuana: glaucoma sufferer Bob Randall and South Florida stockbroker Irvin Rosenfeld, who has a rare disease that causes tumors in his bones.

Randall, president of the Alliance for Cannabis Therapeutics in Washington, said Ms. Musikka is only the third person to be guaranteed a supply of marijuana.

"I can't explain why the government is withholding marijuana while people are going blind," said Ms. Musikka.

FDA spokeswoman Susan Cruzan said no figures are available on the number of people given marijuana under medical experiments, including cancer patients who use it to counteract the nausea from chemotherapy.

Shortly After Delivery, Most Direct Mail Will Have Already Reached Its Target.

They promised your message would make it through the front door and they were absolutely right. Through the front door, down the hall and whammo, right smack into the old round file. Unopened, unread and unfortunately, totally ineffective.

Instead of being the exception, this scenario is more like the rule. According to a 1988 study by The Gordon S. Black Corporation, an independent Washington, D.C. media and opinion research firm, of the Greenville/Pitt County adults who report receiving some direct mail literature within a one-week period, 16% throw it away while less than one in five read it thoroughly.

It all comes down to how you define the term, "target customer." If it's a living, breathing human being, then perhaps your advertising dollars should go into something that's more effective in reaching them. Namely, The Daily Reflector. With a paid circulation of 18,300 Monday through Friday and 20,800 on Sundays, let The Reflector work for you. The Daily Reflector reaches 74% of the Greenville/Pitt County market weekly.

Most importantly, it reaches them at their request! That means you not only have a better chance of getting their attention, you have a better chance of holding it. Think about it - people paying to read your message at their convenience! Considering all the value you get with The Daily Reflector, don't risk trashing your advertising dollars. TO: CONTRACTORS OWNING MOWING EQUIPMENT
ISSUED BY: PITT COUNTY Drainage District Number Nine
Chicot Creek Watershed
Pitt County Drainage District Number Nine is now seeking price quotations for maintenance mowing of certain channels and travelways within the Chicot Creek Watershed.
Channels to be mowed are Chicot Creek, Main and all lateral channels.
Approximately 55.76 miles of mowing are to be done on the travelway side and 10 miles on the offside.
Equipment needed includes bush hog, sideboy or boom-type mower with a reach adequate to mow channel side slopes and travelways and bottom.
The work will include removal of debris from all side pipes installed under the travelway and from all pipes in the channels; and removal by hand of the wooded growth on channel side slopes not reached by power equipment (being clumps of trees, along travelways, etc.).
Clumps of trees along the travelways are not to be damaged or scarred.
Mowing will be accomplished as follows: Mow travelway, channel banks and channel bottom from travelway side. Also, mow the offside channel banks and filter strip through open land. Through wooded areas mow approximately 20-25 feet on the travelway adjacent to the channel, including the bicolor lespedeza on the back side of the travelway and the offside of growth growing over channels.
Mowing is to commence during the month of October and is to be completed not later than December 31, 1989.
Price quotations are to be submitted for cost per mile (including pipe cleanup).
The successful contractor must furnish the District either (1) a comprehensive liability insurance policy issued by an insurance company authorized to do business in North Carolina or (2) evidence of qualification of "self insurer" which complies with the regulations of the North Carolina Insurance Department in the amount of no less than $100,000.00.
Those wishing to see the project will assemble at the Post Office in Simpson at 1:00 p.m. on Monday, June 19, 1989.
Price quotations in single copy for performing work described herein will be received until 2:30 p.m. local time on Tuesday, July 11, 1989 at the office of Frank M. Wooten, Jr., Attorney at Law, 113 West Third Street, Greenville, North Carolina. The mailing address is as follows: Post Office Box 5063 Greenville, North Carolina 27835-5063.

MARJORY S. DOUGLAS

Author Still Champion Of The Everglades

By Brian Murphy
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — Marjory Stoneman Douglas stands watch over the Everglades with the temperament of the ancient sawgrass that dominates the wetland.

She can be smooth and genteel, hands folded in her lap and voice hinting at the refinement of her New England upbringing more than three generations ago.

Yet, like the sawgrass, she cuts for the bone when rubbed the wrong way.

"It's not a question of if we can save the Everglades. We must," said Douglas, 99. "There is no choice to consider. Without the Everglades, much of Florida is lost, too."

Water is the gift of the Everglades, a soggy plain that ends a 300-mile water system running down the center of the Florida peninsula. This slow-moving "River of Grass" — part of the title of Douglas' 1947 book — starts a process that brings rain to the populated coast during the six-month wet season.

"Whether you're a developer or an environmentalist, the message is still the same," Douglas said. "If the Everglades go, then South Florida becomes a desert."

The greatest threat isn't pollution, but the draining of land to accommodate the boom in one of the fastest growing states. "I'd say about 80 percent of the Everglades are unspoiled. But what I'm most worried about is man's ignorance of the importance of the Everglades. The people coming to Florida know nothing about the Everglades. That is our greatest peril."

Age has clouded Douglas' sight. But her vision is reaching new horizons.

Recent attention to the Everglades has brought renewed attention to her crusade. In January, she and five other women were named Ms. magazine's women of the year; she was ABC News' person of the week Jan. 13, and was on the NBC "Today" show in February. In May, she became an honorary vice president of the national Sierra Club, the highest award the organization gives.

But she was conspicuously absent from a three-day conference in January on the Everglades, which featured more than 200 experts and officials. She prefers to surrender the high-profile events to the Friends of the Everglades, a group she founded in the 1960s. She'd rather greet visitors in the stucco cottage that she built in 1926 in Coconut Grove.

From her easy chair surrounded by cassette tapes of books, she receives word on the political battles being waged over the Everglades. "Why do people worry about me and my age so much?" said Douglas, who disdains ambiguity. "I get by. Let's concentrate on the real problems."

"She has been to the Everglades what Winston Churchill was to Britain in World War II," said Mike Finley, the park's superintendent.

Throughout her life, Douglas has kept a distant relationship with the Everglades. Even when her sight was good, she rarely traveled into the grass and cypress interior. Besides, she says, there are too many bugs.

"Every time it rains, we know the Everglades are there," said

Douglas, who dons a floppy wide-brimmed hat whenever outdoors.

"I suppose you could say the Everglades and I have the kind of friendship that doesn't depend on constant physical contact," she wrote in River of Grass, the product of five years' research.

Among her other eight books are Florida: The Long Frontier in 1967 and Alligator Crossing, a children's book. She can no longer use a typewriter, but is determined to dictate a biography of English environmentalist W.H. Hudson, best known for his book Green Mansions.

Death, in Douglas' view, is the end. She believes in no afterlife for herself or for south Florida if the Everglades perish. "When (the Everglades) are gone, then we are finished. There's not much to consider beyond that."

Nita Wilson Aman has worked in her Cedar Point garden almost 25 years

Cedar Point Gardener Enjoys Her Annual Explosion Of Color

By Carol Tyer
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

CEDAR POINT — Using the Inland Waterway as a backdrop, Nita Wilson Aman has created a showplace of floral magnificence — a 40-by-40 plot visible from N.C. 24 that is a profusion of dozens of different flowering plants.

"I've had this garden since about 1965," Mrs. Aman says, "and it's well enough established now that I plant very little new each year."

"It's just about all I can do to keep up with the weeding and maybe move a few things around, thin a few things out."

Mrs. Aman's home, shared with her husband W.D. Aman Sr., is near the Carteret County bridge that separates Cedar Point from Swansboro in Carteret County. Its grounds, especially this English-style garden, are ablaze with orange and yellow firepokers, golden coreopsis, cut-and-come, and old-fashioned red verbena. There are also white and magenta phlox, orange and black black-eyed Susans and gailardia, deep blue larkspur, creamy Queen Anne's lace, yellow mullein and several colors in daylilies and roses.

Mrs. Aman says she transplanted the mullein and Queen Anne's lace from the wild. And the verbena, cut-and-come and phlox, she says she got from old farmsteads, long since abandoned.

"I've bought very little that you see growing here," she said. "Other people who love plants have been generous with me and I try to be generous with others."

A Laurinburg native, Mrs. Aman has lived in Cedar Point since her marriage in 1953. She and her husband, long the operator of a furniture store in Jacksonville, once owned and operated Capt. Charlie's Restaurant in Swansboro.

A special pleasure of Mrs. Aman's is providing flower arrangements for the narthex of her church, Swansboro United Methodist. She especially likes using the herb tansy, picked from her garden, as a pungent filler for those arrangements.

"I love my garden in the summer," she said, "when the bumblebees visit the flowers. And it's wonderful in the fall when so many butterflies show up."

Most any sunny day, from early spring until late autumn, will find Mrs. Aman in the garden on her knees, weeding or transplanting.

"It's fun," she said, "helping flowers grow."

Appleseed John Is Remembered In The Midwest

By Charles Hillinger
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

And he ran with the rabbit and slept with the stream ...

— "In Praise of Johnny Appleseed," by Vachel Lindsay

FORT WAYNE, Ind. — This is Johnny Appleseed country.

Yes, there really was a Johnny Appleseed. He planted thousands of apple trees across hundreds of miles of early America. He wasn't a fictional character like Paul Bunyan.

Sower of apple seeds, planter of apple orchards on the American frontier from the late 1790s through 1845, Johnny Appleseed was in and out of Fort Wayne the last 10 years of his life.

He died here at age 70 on March 18, 1845. His grave is in Johnny Appleseed Park. Nearby is the block-long Johnny Appleseed Memorial Bridge spanning the St. Joseph River.

Each summer, there's a Johnny Appleseed Festival at Johnny Appleseed Park, where huge quantities of elephant ears (a favorite Hoosier pastry) and apple cider are consumed and where people dress in old-fashioned costumes, many wearing mush pot hats.

"John Chapman, better remembered as Appleseed John or Johnny Appleseed, was a fascinating character, a true eccentric, one of the best-known American folk heroes. People are often surprised to learn Johnny Appleseed actually lived. Over the years many myths have emerged about his life. The mush pot hat is one of them," said Steven Fortriede, a Johnny Appleseed authority.

Fortriede, 43, associate director of the Fort Wayne Public Library, is a lifelong resident of this city.

"I grew up on the Johnny Appleseed story, as does everyone else here," he said. "Fact and fiction blend when it comes to the apple man."

"True, he always wore weird garb, but nowhere in the bits and pieces of information we collected about his life is there any mention of a mush pot hat, contrary to what Walt Disney and others would have us believe."

"He did, however, wear a funny-looking pasteboard hat with a huge brim to keep the sun from his eyes. He wore a coarse coffee sack for a shirt. He went barefoot sometimes and other times wore rags to protect his feet. He didn't wear shoes."

Fortriede wrote a 51-page pamphlet, "Johnny Appleseed: The Man Behind the Myth," published by the Fort Wayne Library, which also published six other pamphlets about the frontier nurseryman.

The library has the best collection of Johnny Appleseed material in existence. The most definitive Chapman biography, Fortriede said, is Robert Price's "Johnny Appleseed — Man and Myth," published in 1954 by Indiana University Press.

"Tales of Johnny Appleseed's extraordinary kindness to insects and animals portrayed in the Disney movie, in children's book, in novels and plays, such as putting out campfires to protect mosquitoes, remorse over killing a rattlesnake that bit him, are hogwash. Johnny was a gentle, forbearing sort, but he was no fool," Fortriede said.

Chapman was born Sept. 26, 1774, at Leominster, Mass. A granite marker at the site of his birthplace reads: "He planted seeds that others might enjoy fruit."

His mother died when he was 2 years old. His father, Nathaniel Chapman, one of the original Minutemen, fought at Bunker Hill. Virtually nothing is known about Johnny until 1797, when he was 23 and showed up in northwestern Pennsylvania sowing apple seeds.

It is not known where he was educated or what motivated him to be an itinerant orchardist. "If I could find school records or other recorded information for that period of his life, I would write another pamphlet, perhaps a book," Fortriede said.

From 1797 to his death, Chapman's name appears on trading-post records, voting registration lists and in county recorders' archives when he homesteaded or purchased land. There is a small amount of correspondence; his original estate papers are part of the Fort Wayne archives.

He traveled by foot, horseback and canoe (hollow logs), always loaded with apple seeds in leather pouches. He gathered his seeds from cider presses. He planted orchards, sold and gave away seeds and seedlings. What money he earned, he plowed back into land and into religious books by Emanuel Swedenborg, a Swedish scientist, mystic and spiritual leader. He distributed the religious books he bought.

"The American frontier in his time was western Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana. He was one jump ahead of the first settlers, clearing land, planting apple trees. He never married. He had an obsession to sow his seeds, plant his trees and to spread Swedenborg's teachings," Fortriede explained.

Chapman probably saw more of America than any other man of his day, traveling hundreds of miles, leaving in his wake acres and acres of apple trees. No one who met him ever forgot him because of his dress, his demeanor. He was a small, wiry man with penetrating eyes, his contemporaries reported.

Johnny Appleseed touched the lives of pioneer families in much of western Pennsylvania, eastern Indiana and across the heart of Ohio. A monument in Ashland, Ohio recalls that he ran 30 miles in 1812 to tell of an Indian massacre and to warn settlers that the Indians were heading their way.

"An awful lot of people in this part of mid-America claim Johnny Appleseed planted trees in their back yards," said Fortriede, who told of monuments and plaques in many little towns and crossroads in Ohio, in memory of the patron saint of the apple tree.

In Mansfield, Ohio, there is a Johnny Appleseed memorial put up by the local horticultural society in 1890, a Johnny Appleseed seat of honor in the public library and the Johnny Appleseed Middle School. The Johnny Appleseed Highway travels the apple man's pathway through the state.

At the same time he sowed his apple seeds, Chapman also was the best-known missionary of the small Swedenborgian congregation that started in London in 1788, about 16 years after the death of Emanuel Swedenborg.

The first Swedenborgian sermon in America was delivered in Baltimore in 1792.

"Every Swedenborgian in the world knows all about Johnny Appleseed," said the Rev. Harvey Tafel, 48, senior minister of the best known of the 35 Swedenborgian churches in North America today — Wayfarers' Chapel, or the Glass Church, as it is often called.

Texans Grieve For Treaty Oak

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

AUSTIN, Tex. — Life never seems more profound than when great people die. It is the same way with trees. Treaty Oak, the oldest living thing in the capital of Texas, a live oak proclaimed the most perfect specimen in North America, a sentinel of history that was here before Cabeza de Vaca, before Stephen F. Austin, before Willie Nelson, a tree that survived five centuries of floods, droughts, bugs and developers, is dying. As it dies, all of Texas grieves.

Every day since Memorial Day, when word first got out that Treaty Oak was gravely ill, scores of mourners have paid their respects. They arrive at the tree's little home park carrying roses, prayers, get-well cards and mixed feelings: awe, sorrow, bewilderment and rage. The latter two sentiments arise because this is not a natural death. Someone tried to kill Treaty Oak by pouring several gallons of herbicide into the grass around its trunk.

"I've talked to colleagues in forestry, and no one's ever heard of anything like this before," said John Giedraitis, Austin's forester. "Why would someone maliciously poison such a tree? To me, it is on a par with vandalizing any shrine in America — the Washington Monument, the Texas capital building. But if you had enough money, you could rebuild the monuments. You could not rebuild 500 years of growth that went into this tree."

To Giedraitis's question — why? — there are as yet no answers, though Austin police have a suspect in the case and may soon make an arrest. But in a deeper sense, even if someone is convicted of the crime and tells the world his reasons, the question is essentially unanswerable.

Millions of trees die in the United States each year, and 3 billion more are planted, but Treaty Oak is the type of tree that stands alone. Enshrined in the American Forestry Association's Tree Hall of Fame, its name derives from the legend that, under its 120-foot canopy, Stephen F. Austin and Indians signed a peace treaty in 1824. There is no truth to that, though it may be that the tree demarcated Indian lands from settler lands.

To the tribes of central Texas, Treaty Oak was a source of great mystery and potency. Folklore held that a sauce made from the tree's green oak balls, eaten when the moon was a low-hung crescent, brought warriors home from battle. Another sauce, sipped by maidens under a full moon, ensured that their husbands would remain faithful. As Austin grew around it, Treaty Oak took on new meanings: endurance, simplicity, grace, history. And Texans came to think that it represented their state.

By 1926, the property on which it stood was owned by W.H. Caldwell's widow, who was besieged by developers seeking to clear her land. The elderly lady tried to resist: She loved her tree and remembered when "it was the playing place of many little children ... when there were peacocks and pigeons in the yard and cardinals and mockingbirds in the branches." The first threat was averted in 1937 when the city bought the property for $11,000.

It was the Tuesday after Memorial Day when Giedraitis, physician for the city's 2 million trees, learned that his oldest patient was seriously ill. Initial reports to him were that the tree was suffering from oak wilt, the oak equivalent of Dutch Elm disease. Giedraitis discovered, to his alarm, that it was something worse.

"Oak wilt kills the veins on leaves," he said. "This symptom was the opposite. The veins were alive, but between the veins the leaves were dead. This is a very common symptom of chemical poisoning."

Owens-Warren Couple Wed Saturday Evening

FARMVILLE — Billie Lynn Warren and Frank Harvey Owens were united in marriage Saturday at 8 p.m. in the First Baptist Church. The Rev. David Morton conducted the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Billy Nunn Warren of Farmville, and the bridegroom is the son of Phoebe Owens of Greenville and the late Prescott Owens.

A program of wedding music was presented by Craig Everette of Farmville, organist, and Josephine Lewis of Washington, N.C., harpist. Susan Carson of Greenville was soloist.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of silk-faced taffeta with an off-shoulder sweetheart neckline, a basque bodice and puffed sleeves. The fitted bodice was overlaid with re-embroidered alencon lace, pearls and sequins. A butterfly bow accented the back. The skirt was bordered with matching lace and extended into a cathedral train. Her cathedral veil of illusion was trimmed with veed pearls and extended from a pearl dotted pouf attached to a tiara of pearls, sequins and crystals. She carried a cascade of white roses, pink carnations, miniature lilies and greenery tied with white satin ribbon.

Cathy White of Raleigh was matron of honor for her sister. She wore a formal gown of aqua iridescent taffeta and carried a bouquet of mums, carnations, daisies and miniature lilies.

Cindy Warren of Farmville, sister-in-law of the bride, was bridesmaid. Her gown and bouquet were identical to that of the matron of honor. Jenny Bumgarner of Kinston was flower girl. She wore an aqua gown similar to that of the honor attendant and carried a white wicker basket filled with summer flowers.

Lou Hallow served as best man. Groomsmen included Steven Warren of Farmville, brother of the bride, Leslie White Jr. of Raleigh, brother-in-law of the bride, Al Gurganus of Greenville and Lee Fulcher Jr. of Wilson. Chris Parker of Farmville was ring bearer.

The mother of the bride wore a periwinkle blue georgette dress with a tulip-wrap effect. The mother of the bridegroom selected a cameo pink pebble crepe long dress with a peplum waistline. Both wore white cymbidium orchids, and Elizabeth Doughtie, grandmother of the bride, wore a corsage of white carnations.

Faye Dozier of Greenville directed the ceremony.

MRS. OWENS

A reception for the wedding party and guests was held at the Colonial Inn. A dinner given by Hallow was held at the Hilton Inn in Greenville.

A picnic luncheon, lingerie shower for the bride and an alfresco supper were given for the couple prior to their wedding.

'Empathy Belly' Might Help Birth Control

We've all stumbled our way through sex education with our children. I can remember buying an aquarium to show them how life begins. The first fish my son brought home was a sea horse, which, ironically, is the only marine animal where the male gives birth. The kid was so confused, he said, "I don't mind having babies, but I don't think I can tread water that long."

Given all the variables for messing up, it's understandable that teen-agers don't begin to comprehend what being pregnant really means — especially the boys. They're usually just spectators.

At Wits End Erma Bombeck

Well, a prenatal counselor in Redmond, Wash., Linda Ware, has come up with a solution to that problem. It's called the Empathy Belly, and don't be so quick to write this off as a gimmick or a joke. Forget the precious bundle of baby in your arms that you gave life to. Let's talk about the first nine months before it is born. Men won't really appreciate pregnancy until they've walked nine months in the tennis shoes of an expectant mother with swollen feet.

You want to "feel" pregnant? Try slipping into a 35-pound plastic belly that can be filled with water to varying levels to simulate the progressive growth of pregnancy. At the top and to the sides of the belly are pockets for lead balls that press in on the upper rib cage the way the elbows and knees of a developing fetus can be felt.

Inside the apparatus is a light pendulum that swings when jostled by the outside motion to create movement. You say you can't sit, have shortness of breath and backaches lugging it around? Just wait till the separate bag fits under the bottom of the belly to ride heavily over the bladder so you can never pass a bathroom without stopping off.

The idea was born in Ms. Ware's prenatal counseling classes, where she observed that the men were skeptical, curious, detached and frustrated by the complaints of their wives. They didn't know what she or their wives were talking about.

Whether or not the Empathy Belly could be a deterrent to unplanned teen-age pregnancy remains to be seen, but it should be enough to get the boys' attention. So far, teen-age fathers have been spared the physical alterations brought on by pregnancy. They don't have to drop out of sports, let the seams out of their graduation gowns, wear a tuxedo to the prom with an elastic waistband, or have a book knocked out of their hands when they rest it on their stomachs.

'Spot Watcher' Spawns Fish Stories

Dear Abby: The letter in your column about Spot, the pet goldfish, caught my attention because I have spent many years looking after fish in a pet shop.

Spot's owner (signed "Spot Watcher") wrote: "Whenever I walk into the room and Spot sees me, he gets excited and swims rapidly back and forth. And when I call his name, his excitement increases! To reward him, I give him a treat of extra fish flakes." "Spot Watcher" asked if Spot was reacting to the possibility of getting a treat, and you correctly responded in the affirmative.

Abby, all pet fish become accustomed to their daily feeding regimen, and accordingly, they develop a conditioned response. Hunger is not a factor. The fish is merely reacting to what it has come to perceive as "feeding time."

And now I would like to point out a very real danger: Because fish act "excited" when their owners approach their bowls, most fish owners naturally assume that the fish are hungry — and they tend to overfeed them.

I would attribute conservatively 50 percent of all fish deaths to overfeeding — strictly unintentional, of course.

A little known fact: Uneaten fish food rapidly decomposes in water, resulting in a reduction of the water's oxygen. This, coupled with overfeeding, is the reason so many goldfish, in the care of amateurs, do not live very long. — True Fish Story

Dear Fish Story: Thanks for a valuable fish story. It's worth at least a fin. (Sorry, I couldn't resist it.) Read on for another fish tale:

Dear Abby: In response to "Spot

Watcher," whose goldfish got excited when she came into the room, it is possible to condition a fish to anticipate food.

When I was a teen-ager, my mother "taught" my goldfish, Harvey, to come to the surface of his bowl and take a small crumb of food from her fingers. It took many weeks of repetition, but he finally got the hang of it, and his head would surface when anyone came near his bowl.

We had ol' Harv for nearly three years until one day my sister was cleaning out his bowl, and all my mother's efforts literally "went down the drain." — Ginny Winn, Huntington Beach, Calif.

Dear Abby: We so enjoyed your fish story. Goldfish make wonderful pets, and they require a minimum of care. I am enclosing a poem about goldfish. Your readers might enjoy it.

I've had it for years, and I have no idea who wrote it, but if you publish it, the author may surface. — Marion Tripeny, Long Beach, Calif.

Dear Marion: When I've printed "author unknown" pieces in the past, I've heard from more "authors" — living and dead — than I could handle. And now the poem:

Goldfish
Consider the goldfish, a household pet,
You have nothing to do but keep him wet.
His bearing is mild, his manners are neat,
His face is clean and his breath is sweet.
He doesn't bark or scratch or sting
Or sneak out at night in search of a fling.
He doesn't shed feathers, or fur or hairs
All over your sofa, carpet or chairs.
You'll never find him underfoot,
Wherever you put him, he'll always stay put.
He asks for little, here below,
Just food to eat and room to grow.
If either of these is long denied,
When you look in his bowl
He'll have quietly died.

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA. 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Career Success Depends On Top-Notch People Skills

HARPER'S BAZAAR

No matter how good you are as a numbers cruncher or media planner, success in your career also depends on people skills.

Ambitious newcomers to the job market can make the most of a summer internship or first job, according to an article in the current issue of Harper's Bazaar, by following these expert tips.

— Be certain you are in the right place. "Make sure it's a company that will invest in you," said Robert H. Welsh, a partner with Heidrick and Struggles, a Chicago executive search firm, adding:

"You want to be in a place that will train you, educate you, give you the chance to travel, expose you to different segments of the business and to outsiders, such as security analysts."

— Find a mentor. Lynn Tendler Bignell, a co-founder of the New York search firm of Gilbert Tweed Associates, said having someone high up show you the ropes can be extremely valuable.

— Develop your people skills. "MBAs who manage upwards, downwards and sideways — those who get along with their superiors, their support staff and their peers — do best in their jobs," said Paula L. Goodman, Citicorp's recruiting manager and a former placement officer at Columbia University's School of Business. Welsh agreed, saying:

"People skills account for 90 percent of your success, and the functional skills you learn in business school for only about 10 percent."

— Volunteer for extra projects. "Volunteering for new tasks, particularly when they're out of your area of expertise, is one of the smartest things you can do," Bignell said. "You'll get exposed to new people and experience a new part of the business, which is exactly what you want when you're starting out. The time to narrow your choices comes later."

— Be a team player. "Become a resource for your peers, because the more you do, the more you'll be sought after," Bignell said.

— Don't flaunt your credentials. "Try to find a comfortable niche within the standardized norm of behavior," Goodman said.

Use Bank Services To Simplify Your Cash Management

CHANGING TIMES

Wouldn't life be easier if you could get the bank to pay some of your bills each month? Or lay your hands on the receipt for the new washing machine that just broke down?

Following are some ways to simplify your cash management. The key word is simplify. This isn't a promise to save you money. But if you're interested in saving time — and headaches — the following strategies can pay really big dividends.

Deposit Paycheck Automatically: Nearly 40,000 companies offer to deposit your pay directly into your bank account, and the banking industry is planning a big marketing push this year, according to the National Automated Clearing House Association. For direct deposit of a Social Security check, or any other regular government check, fill out a form available at your bank or Social Security office.

Save Money Automatically: Ask your bank, S&L or credit union to transfer a specific amount from your checking account to your savings account each month.

Let Your Bank Pay Your Bills: Your bank will automatically transfer money out of your account into the payee's account at the right time each month. You make arrangements through the company you're paying by filling out a form and sending a voided personal check. Or talk to your bank. Some will make the arrangements themselves for bills, such as a mortgage or car payment, that are the same amount every month.

To guard against the occasional bill that gets paid from your account ahead of your deposit, Changing Times magazine suggests you arrange for overdraft protection. This is a line of credit, so you'll have to qualify for it as you would for any other loan. You might have to pay a fee.

Cut the Number of Payments You Make: Pay your life insurance premiums, for example, once a year. That will save you the trouble of having to write monthly checks as well as the service charge of 10 percent to 15 percent that companies often tack on to cover the cost of processing the monthly payments.

Combine Bank Accounts: No more than three joint accounts are recommended for couples: one for checking, one for short-term saving (to pay for vacations and annual insurance premiums) and one for long-term investing. You'll save the time it takes to balance separate accounts and you won't have to move money back and forth from one account to another.

If you must have your own money, at least pay all household bills through a single account and designate one person to pay them. You won't waste time discussing who put money in which account, when and for what.

Pitch That Plastic: The fewer bills you have the better — and you never need more than two or three from credit card companies. You can get away with only two: a travel-and-entertainment card and a major bank card. If you need more buying power, ask your card issuers to raise your credit limit. They will be happy to if you're a good customer.

Use Your ATM Card for Withdrawals, Deposits and Transfers: You'll free yourself from the tyranny of bankers' hours. Choose a bank with machines close to your home and office. Your ATM card will be even more convenient now that Plus and Cirrus, the largest national ATM networks, are linking their systems.

If your bank participates, you'll be able to get cash from about 50,000 ATMs worldwide. And to make sure you don't have to spend time searching for those annoying little ATM receipts, Changing Times magazine suggests you carry a small envelope in your briefcase or purse. Stuff each receipt directly into it and forget it until it's time to balance your checkbook.

Use Check Registers With Carbon Copies: You don't have to bother to log checks as well as write them.

Build a Filing System: Invest in a ready-made filing system such as the Personal Financial Organizer (National Underwriter, (800) 543-0874; $15.95 plus $2.50 for shipping and handling) that's designed especially for household accounts. Open the spiral notebook and you'll have premarked file dividers and a simple format for recording personal, financial and estate information. Dome Publishing's Tax Deductions Poc-It-File ($3.25) even comes with tax tips. Stationery and office-supply stores carry it.

Automate Your Bookkeeping: You don't need a time-wasting ledger sheet to keep your books in order. Just deposit all your income in your checking account and write checks for everything, including cash withdrawals, advises Fred Munk of Retirement Counseling Associates in Westport, Conn. That way, your check register doubles as a ledger and lets you keep track of your expenses quickly and painlessly.

Or, if you're really bogged down, let someone else do it. Banks don't advertise the service but many are willing to straighten up a checkbook that's hopelessly out of balance. They may even do it free of charge on a one-shot basis for a good customer. Help from an accountant or bookkeeper will cost you about $25.

You can save a great deal of time if you're willing to take your bank's word for it.

If you're not so trusting, Code A Check of Cheyenne, Wyo., will give you a monthly computer printout of all your cash, check and charge expenditures by category, provide year-to-date totals, and even show how your outlays have varied from month to month. (You have to note each amount on a category-coded sheet when you spend it.)

Harriet Makes Home At Lagunita A Constant In The Nelson Family

By Dennis McLellan
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LAGUNA BEACH, Calif. — With a cool breeze blowing in off the steel-gray Pacific Ocean below, Harriet Nelson stood on the deck of her cliff-top house and remembered warmer days.

"Ozzie would swim way out past the rocks, and then he'd swim all the way down there," she said, pointing to the rocks off Victoria Beach to the north and then down to Blue Lagoon a half mile to the south.

"When we first came down here he'd swim twice a day and play volleyball with all the kids," she said, adding with a throaty laugh: "He'd knock his brains out. Ozzie had to win, you know. Ozzie could not come in second. No way."

Since 1932, when bandleader Ozzie Nelson hired Harriet Hilliard to be the vocalist in his band, it has been difficult not to imagine one without the other.

And for anyone who grew up watching "The Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet" on television each week in the 1950s and '60s, it is difficult to picture the Nelsons without also thinking of their white, two-story Cape Cod house — footage of the family's actual home in Hollywood was used in the opening credits of the early episodes.

This is Ozzie and Harriet's other house, 35 miles southeast of Los Angeles.

They built the one-story, two-bedroom beach house in Laguna — a gated community where homes now sell up to $4 million — in 1955 as a weekend retreat.

But while it may be less familiar than their Hollywood house, it figures no less prominently in the Nelsons' family history.

It is where the entire family came on weekends to unwind after filming all week and summers when the show was on hiatus.

It is where Ozzie and Harriet retreated the day they finished filming their final "adventure" in 1966, ending the show's phenomenal 14 years on television and 10 years on radio.

And it is where, two years after Ozzie died of cancer in 1975, Harriet moved after selling the big house in Hollywood.

Since then, the Laguna house has been Harriet Nelson's full-time residence. And with frequent weekend visits by son David and his wife, Yvonne, and Harriet's grandchildren and their friends, the house is still very much a family home that reflects the casual beach lifestyle that originally drew the Nelsons to Laguna.

Wearing an ivory silk blouse and navy blue pants, with her reading glasses hanging from a gold chain around her neck, Harriet sat at her French country dining table and discussed what Laguna and her Laguna home have meant to her.

It was Ozzie's love of the ocean, she said, that originally brought them to Laguna.

"I didn't care for it at first, but he loved it so," she said. "I learned to put up with it and then, gradually, I learned to love it, too. Now I find I don't want to live any place else."

Home has always been important to Harriet.

During the '30s when she and Ozzie were on the road with Ozzie's band, she used to clip pictures of homes and furniture out of magazines and paste them into a scrapbook. With a laugh, she recalled: "The boys in the band used to call it 'Harriet's house.' I'm a nester."

In the late '60s, Laguna became something of a Nelson family com-pond. At one point, Rick and Kris Nelson had a condominium down the beach at Blue Lagoon and Rick's in-laws, Tom and Elyse Harmon, lived a few doors down from Ozzie and Harriet. Ozzie's brother Don, who wrote for the show, still has a house in Laguna. So does actor Kent McCord, who got his acting start playing one of Rick's fraternity brothers on the show, and producer Joe Byrne, a high school friend of David's who began his career working as a gofer on the series.

Harriet, who does her own shopping at the supermarket across the highway and at other Laguna stores, enjoys the "village atmosphere of Laguna."

"I like almost everything about it," she said. "I know everyone down here, and they are all such nice people."

Harriet said she spends a lot of time on her deck, especially in the evening "because it's so lovely. The ocean's noisy, but it's a quiet noise." She also enjoys sitting on the beach but says, "if you've got stuff to do upstairs you'd better not go down to the beach because you won't come back up. I don't. It's a different world down there and you kind of leave everything else upstairs. I could be a beachcomber very easily."

Harriet is a member of the women's advisory council of South Coast Medical Center and is a patron of Las Marineras, an auxiliary to Family Service of America, a family counseling service. Although virtually retired from acting, Harriet earlier this year did a guest spot as a nun on granddaughter Tracy Nelson's television series, "Father Dowling Mysteries."

Last year, thinking she'd like to be closer to family and friends in Los Angeles, Harriet bought a second home in Studio City.

Her intention was to divide her time between Studio City and Laguna. But despite spending several months having the Studio City house remodeled, Harriet recently put it up for sale.

"It's a very nice house," she said. "It's just that I find I can't live with one foot in one and one foot in the other."

Although she has lived in the Laguna house for 12 years, it has only recently come to feel like "home" to her, Harriet said, explaining that it was a wrenching experience for her to give up the Hollywood house where she and Ozzie lived for 35 years.

"You know, I didn't realize (the Laguna house) was really home until I bought that house up in Los Angeles. Then I realized it didn't feel like home, and that this is it. So that's the good that came out of it for me."

Asked to describe what the Laguna house has meant to the Nelson family over the years, Harriet recalled something her 14-year-old grandson, Sam Nelson, said while spending the weekend with her recently.

"We were sitting in the living room and he said, 'Grandma, this is the nicest house in the world,'" she said.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY June 30

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Love can be anything you want it to be. Get away with your partner and have some freelance fun. Keep your safety in mind.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Tension occurs trying to decide on a quiet night at home, or a night out on the town. Either way is okay, but finances may decide the issue.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): The moon in your sign accents outspoken communications. Others fail to understand you. The day is great for spontaneous pleasures.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Domestic adjustments are needed to promote family harmony. You may need personal time and space to develop spiritual insight.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): It will be easy to mistake passion for love if you let emotions rule your thinking. Your upbeat mood can carry you into the early morning.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): You overcome a career stumbling block. Better organization and cooperation from others is the key issue. Peaceful accord will prevail.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Dress the way you feel. The most attractive romantic offers are pleasing and stimulating. Energetic live entertainment is enjoyable.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): A partner is disturbed over how finances are used. Do some bending to adjust the matter fairly. Reaffirm your love tonight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): You are emotionally "pumped up" with an emphasis on independence and romance. Find an intimate place with privacy.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Guard against fluctuating moods that affect others. Lay future travel plans. Friends bring you happy and enjoyable pleasures.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Sensual feelings are close to the surface today. Moving out into the limelight will give you pleasure and a new friend.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Work routines are upsetting when your mind is focused on relationships. You are in the mood for intimacy and some private fun.

cards lay, declarer could not avoid losing two diamond tricks, a club and a trump.

Had declarer been less certain where he wanted to win the first trick, he might have found a superior line. Suppose that he takes the first trump in hand and runs the jack of clubs. If the finesse wins, he has no trouble holding his losers to two diamonds and a trump.

Should the finesse lose, as is the case here, declarer is still in control. No return from East harms him. Suppose he returns a spade. Declarer wins in dummy perforce, crosses to the ten of clubs and takes a marked ruffing finesse for the king of spades. After cashing the ace of trumps, declarer discards two diamonds on dummy's master clubs and loses no more than one trick in each suit except for spades.

Bob Mould Happier As A Solo Act

Former 'Husker Du' Guitarist More Reflective Now

By Hillel Italie
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Fans longing for a Husker Du reunion beware: Bob Mould has never been happier.

"It just comes to where you accept things the way they are," explained the 28-year-old guitarist, who has released his first album, "Workbook," since the punk trio broke up in 1987.

"When you're young, you fight and rebel. I just don't think I will be doing that in 20 years because I don't think I will be physically capable."

He would have a hard time maintaining the pace of his days in Husker Du. The band emerged from St. Paul, Minn., in the early 1980s and captured a devoted audience with a string of powerful albums that displayed a manic, desperate energy comparable to the early Who.

Mould, who sings "New Day Rising" and "I'll Never Forget You" like a drowning man going under for the last time, is more reflective on "Workbook." The songs range from the upbeat single, "See a Little Light," to the angry "Poison Years," to the confessional "Sinners and Their Repentance." Mould even starts the album with a low-key instrumental, "Sunspots."

"As you get older, you get a little closer to real emotions," he said. "It's wonderful to express anger and frustration, but there are other emotions. There are a lot of different things out there."

Mould was attending Macalester College in St. Paul when he met drummer Grant Hart and bassist Greg Norton. The three were soon jamming in Norton's basement, writing songs that Mould thought were "real abrasive and real fast."

Their first album, "Land Speed Record," came out in 1982 and they maintained an exhaustive pace of recording and touring over the next few years. The band prided itself on equality, with all three members contributing material, and stayed true to the punk spirit by remaining accessible to the public.

But after releasing the double album, "Warehouse: Songs and Stories," Husker Du bitterly parted ways with disputes over songwriting credits and accusations of drug abuse.

"I think immediately upon my leaving I felt a great sense of release," Mould said. "You have to let go of things like that. It became a situation where we could not work together again. Then you wonder what to do.

"I think over the course of time you start bringing in certain elements of the group you know the others won't like. I felt like that was getting a little frustrating."

He cited the difficulty in remaining committed to the sound that attracted listeners to Husker Du. "It was almost becoming the point where I had no emotions, it was just a blur of white noise. Emotionally, I was not attached to it because I no longer felt that way. We were doing what people expected us to do."

After the breakup, Mould decided to spend some time alone, working on songs that were for himself and not for public consumption. He listened to classical music and became interested in incorporating the cello into his own writing.

"It's a very emotional instrument," said Mould, who recruited cellist Jane Scarpantoni for the album. "The instrument has a very high frequency, a very beautiful sound. When I started looking at the material I was writing, I saw the need for one more instrument to bridge those melodies. The cello seemed best."

The cello is best heard on the haunting ballad, "Sinners and Their Repentance," which Mould described as a meditation on feelings of guilt and responsibility.

Ex-Wife Says Hurt Opposed Marriage

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The former wife of actor William Hurt has testified that he vowed never to marry again at a meeting in which Hurt discussed his lover's pregnancy.

Actress Mary Beth Hurt said this week she had urged her then-husband to marry former ballerina Sandra Jennings, but he rejected the idea.

Ms. Jennings, a former dancer with the New York City Ballet, is suing Hurt for a divorce based on four weeks they lived together in Beaufort, S.C., while Hurt was filming "The Big Chill."

Ms. Hurt's testimony was the last heard by state Judge Jacqueline Silbermann, who will rule alone in the case.

Ms. Hurt said that, except for a brief reconciliation in 1978, she and Hurt had been separated since 1975. When she asked him at the September 1982 meeting why he wanted to complete the divorce at that time, he replied, "Because Sandy's having a baby," Ms. Hurt testified.

"Do you intend to marry her?" Ms. Hurt said she asked.

"No," Hurt responded.

"I said, 'Marry her, Bill.'"

"He said, 'No. I'm finished with marriage.'"

Wagner Returns To 'GH'

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Jack P.

Wagner has returned to ABC's "General Hospital" as undercover agent Frisco Jones, and he's looking for trouble.

Frisco had been presumed dead, but it's revealed he's been held in a Bulgarian prison. He's escaped and is back in Port Charles just in time to witness the remarriage of his wife, Felicia.

He's also out to even the score with Domino and all the other bad guys responsible for his disappearance. He got out of prison by disguising himself as a phony priest who was sent to kill him. Frisco now has a beard and longer hair and wears army fatigues.

"Frisco feels betrayed," said Wagner, who left the show two years ago to pursue a pop music career. "Frisco's in a CIA-like organization, and when he was captured they were supposed to let Felicia know. Instead, they let everyone think he was dead."

"It will become a triangle between Frisco, Felicia and Colton. No one is wrong. He's right, she's right, Colton's right. He sees the only way to get her back is to avenge what Domino did to him."

Anything can happen in Port Charles, and usually does. The location of "General Hospital" seems to be an international crossroads with more intrigue going on than Paris, Lisbon and Casablanca combined. Its bizarre action-adventure stories gave it unprecedented ratings for a daytime soap opera in the early 1980s, although the fervor has cooled since then.

"General Hospital" runs second to CBS' "The Young and the Restless" in household ratings but is first among women 18-49, an important target audience for advertisers.

Wagner is one of the hottest young soap stars, and his return to "General Hospital" last week was much anticipated by fans who had been writing ABC.

Wagner's music career soared during his first stint on "General Hospital." A year after joining the show he had a hit single "All I Need." His albums "Lighting Up the Night" and "Don't Give Up Your Day Job" were also hits.

When he joined the show in 1983, Frisco was a rock singer — full name Andrew Jones — who picked up the nickname Frisco from his rock band. Later, Frisco became a police trainee, then a policeman and finally a secret agent. As we said, strange things happen in Port Charles.

How To Get Started With The University College

The University College functions to serve the needs of the non-traditional or adult student. Recognizing that adults have job responsibilities, family obligations, or may reside some distance from the campus, the University College attempts to assist adult students in overcoming these barriers. At the University College, we are here to assist students in planning and fulfilling their educational goals. We take pride in the informal, interpersonal, "people-centered" atmosphere we convey. We strive to provide educational opportunities for the non-traditional student which will be pleasant and rewarding.

Programs

The University College offers flexible scheduling of DAY and/or EVENING courses. Schedules may normally be arranged to accommodate job and family responsibilities and commuting distances from campus. Evening credit classes are an integral part of the University's academic program and are taken by full-time day students as well as University College students. It is possible to complete degrees in a variety of programs by attending the University as an evening student.

The following degrees may be completed through evening courses:

- Anthropology
- Business Education/ Administrative Services
- Computer Science
- Driver and Traffic Safety
- Economics
- English
- Geography
- History
- Industrial Technology
- Psychology
- Sociology

Minors in several areas, including Business Administration, are available in the evenings. In addition, the General Education requirements for other baccalaureate degrees can usually be completed through the University College. Certificate programs in Business and Technical Communication and Alcoholism Counseling are also available. University College students may enroll (if their schedules permit) for day degree programs.

Services

The University College provides many services to the non-traditional student. The extension of operating hours during registration periods provides an opportunity for adults to register, pay fees, purchase books and supplies and secure other services. On-line registration permits individuals to register quickly, either by phone or in person. Information on admissions and registration procedures, degree programs and requirement can be obtained from the Office of The Coordinator, University College (757-6488). Materials on housing, financial aid, child care, health service, etc., may also be obtained from this office. Guidance is available to assist applicants in determining their needs and interest and to help plan the course of study that should be followed.

Counseling is an important aspect of successful entry or re-entry into the University. Students are encouraged to take advantage of the counseling services available through the University College. Counseling is available during normal working hours, 8:00 AM to 5:00 PM, Monday through Friday. As a convenience to University College students, evening counseling sessions will be available on July 25 and 31 and August 3 from 6:00 PM to 9:00 PM. Appointments are necessary for these sessions and may be scheduled by calling 757-6488. Counseling at times other than those listed above is also available by contacting the University College office.

Admission and Registration Procedures

Given the diverse educational background of the non-traditional student, the University College has an admissions policy based upon performance and maturity rather than upon standardized tests scores or class rank. Consideration is given to those whose high school class graduated three or more years ago. In addition, the non-traditional student should:

1. have acquired a high school diploma or GED.
2. have a "C" average and be eligible to return to the last college or university where they were enrolled (if applicable). Exceptions to the "C" average may be made for individuals who have not attended any college or university in the past three years or by the University Admissions Committee. In all cases, students must be eligible to return to the previous college or university where last enrolled.
3. complete an application, statement of residence, pay a $15.00 application fee, and submit official copies of high school and college transcripts.

Former East Carolina University students who desire to re-enter the University as a part-time day or evening student may apply for readmission through the University College.

Registration for the Fall Semester will be conducted on August 22 from 7:00 AM to 5:30 PM on the second floor of Erwin Hall. Late registration will be conducted on August 23 & 24 from 8:00 AM to 4:00 PM. Counselors will be available to assist students with course selections and the on-line registration process.

University College students may enroll in any course listed in this schedule provided they have satisfied the required prerequisites as stated in the 1988/90 East Carolina University Undergraduate Catalogue. The University College can assist students with questions concerning course selections, degree requirements, and University requirements and regulations. With this opportunity comes a responsibility: University College students are required to adhere to academic standards, policies, procedures, details and regulations which apply to all students of the University.

Tuitions and Fees

	Full Time 12+ Hours	9-11 Hours	Part-Time 6-8 Hours	0-5 Hours

*The above fees are required, but entitle part-time students to the same services and privileges as full-time students.

For amount of non-resident, non-degree and graduate fees, contact the University College office.

Due to the North Carolina General Assembly being in session at the time of the printing of this brochure, actual tuition and fees for the Fall Semester are not available. It is anticipated that tuition and fees for the Fall Semester will be finalized by mid-July 1989. At that time, a tuition and fees schedule may be obtained by contacting the University College office. The 1988-89 tuition and fees, which are shown above as a guide, may be increased by a small amount.

How to "Earn a Future While You Earn a Degree"

The Cooperative Education program at ECU assists students in obtaining career-exploratory or career-related paid jobs while they are getting an education. Co-op services are available to both undergraduate and graduate students in most academic fields. Among the benefits available to students are

- earnings to help defray University expenses
- academic credit, if appropriate
- practical application of classroom knowledge and skills
- work experience in a chosen field
- opportunities for future employment

For more information about how non-traditional or adult students may receive the benefits of Co-op, contact Mary Cauley, the liaison for University College students in the Office of Cooperative Education, 2028 General Classroom Building (757-6979). Let us help you put your education to work. Co-op is the best kind of "HIRE" education.

Co-op at ECU is working--make it "a Part of Your Life" . . .
