Eastern Belt Tobacco Markets To Open Aug. 8

North Carolina tobacco plants got a boost when a typical early June hot spell that stresses young crops did not occur, but opening dates for tobacco markets were set later than usual to allow another week of leaf maturity.

"We've got an unusual maturity situation over the five-state area," said Fred Bond, executive director of the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corporation.

"Georgia-Florida is earlier than normal. The Border Belt is later than normal. The same thing on the Eastern Belt and the Old and Middle Belt is probably in the early stages of growth," Bond said.

The cooperative, representing 60,000 growers in North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Georgia and Virginia, buys tobacco that does not bring the minimum support price for its grade.

The Flue-Cured Tobacco Advisory Committee on Thursday set the opening dates for Georgia-Florida markets for July 25, with a double set of buyers for the first seven days. The South Carolina-Border North Carolina markets will open Aug. 7 with the Eastern Belt to open on the next day.

The Old and Middle Belt markets will open on Aug. 14, Bond said.

The Georgia-Florida date was set because some of the crop on that market has been harvested early, Bond said in an interview with The Associated Press.

"After those first days, that should take care of the tobacco ripening rather rapidly in that belt," he said.

Also affecting the crop to some degree has been above-average rainfall which has kept some farmers out of the fields entirely. But Bond said farmers haven't been complaining.

"The rains were needed and rain has come on all belts in the last two to two-and-a-half weeks," he said. "I suspect in all belts, there have been some areas with excess rain."

The 39-member committee, made up of growers, buyers and others in the tobacco industry, will forward the suggested opening market dates to the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture, who will make the final decision.

While some areas on the Eastern Belt are later than normal, Pitt County farmer Eugene James of the Belvoir community said Thursday, "In my area and in a lot of areas in Pitt County, the tobacco is ready" to be harvested. "My neighbor put in some this week."

"Some areas are behind ... the Fountain area was hurt worse that we were with water ... Wilson (County) and those areas were hurt a lot worse."

But James suggested many Pitt County farmers will "start putting in (harvesting) after the Fourth of July ... that's our normal starting-time. You'll see a lot of tobacco put in the last of next week."

"Year in and year out that's when we start," James said.

Sam Uzzell, a Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service agent, said the tobacco crop "is certainly a little later this year, but it's caught up a great deal in the last two weeks, as have corn and peanuts."

"I don't think a great many folks will start next week. They are still facing a lot of topping and suckering. But once that production cycle gets squared away by mid-July,

Atlanta Office Fire Leaves Four Dead

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — A fire broke out today in an office building, killing four people and injuring dozens of others, authorities said. One woman leapt from the sixth floor of the burning building.

Firefighters evacuated the entire building, and many coming out had their face or clothes blackened by smoke.

The fire apparently was confined to the sixth floor of the building on Peachtree Street, the city's main thoroughfare. The building has about 10 stories.

The building houses offices, a restaurant and a few shops. Among the building's tenants are the local offices of the National Transportation Safety Board.

Three Face Charges In Securities Probe

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The government's securities fraud probe of one-time whiz-kid corporate raider Paul A. Bilzerian has snared billionaire shopping center and sports magnate Edward J. DeBartolo Sr.

In a sweeping Securities and Exchange Commission lawsuit, DeBartolo, Bilzerian and three others were charged Thursday with concealing investments to mask planned takeovers, manipulating stock prices or trading on inside information in seven deals from 1985 through 1988.

The suit seeks to recover more than $34 million in illegal profits, making it one of the largest civil cases ever involving corporate takeovers.

The 70-year-old DeBartolo — the nation's largest developer of shopping malls — and an associate agreed to pay more than $3 million to settle the charges with the SEC, without admitting guilt.

The lawsuit, filed in U.S. District Court in Washington, D.C., seeks $31.3 million in allegedly fraudulent profits from Bilzerian, who already faces a lengthy prison term and fines for a criminal fraud conviction June 9.

The suit also details for the first time alleged illegal stock transactions in Bilzerian's $1.06 billion takeover last year of Singer Co., the sewing machine company turned defense contractor. Later Thursday, Bilzerian resigned as chairman and chief executive of Singer.

"In numerous situations he engaged in the same kinds of violations time and time again of the disclosure requirements," said SEC Associate Enforcement Director William McClucas.

Bilzerian's lawyer, Arthur F. Mathews, said his client would fight the charges in court.

The suit alleges Bilzerian lied about or failed to properly disclose to the SEC in October 1987 the source of at least $8 million in borrowed money he used to buy Singer stock. It maintains Bilzerian later borrowed another $6 million in a Singer stock sale agreement he never disclosed.

Bilzerian also was charged with disclosure violations in connection with stock purchases in Pay 'N Pak Stores Inc. and Fortune Financial Group Inc.

The lawsuit also alleges Bilzerian violated financial disclosure requirements or attempted to conceal stock ownership involving Cluett, Peabody & Co., Hammermill Paper Co. and H.H. Robertson Co., and a stock transaction in Armco Inc., in 1985 and 1986.

Those four transactions formed the basis of Bilzerian's criminal conviction, which was an indirect spinoff from the Ivan Boesky insider trading case.

DeBartolo agreed to pay about $2.7 million in alleged illegal profits to settle charges involving the Cluett and Hammermill takeovers.

Military Seizes Power In Sudan

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KHARTOUM, Sudan — Military forces today seized power by overthrowing the civilian government of Prime Minister Sadek el-Mahdi, the military announced. No casualties were reported.

The coup leadership suspended the constitution and placed the country under a state of emergency, Egypt's Middle East News Agency reported from Khartoum. Parliament and political parties were disbanded and newspaper licenses revoked, it said.

The agency identified the coup leader as Omar Hassan Ahmed el-Bashir and said he signed the decrees. It was unclear whether he was the same person as a man identified as Brig. Gen. Omar Hassan who announced the coup on official Radio Omdurman.

Paratroop and armored units staged the coup, according to the agency, and it indicated the coup leaders were not from the top echelons of the Sudanese military command. "The coup leaders have designated the general command and army leaders as 'the former command,'" it said.

Soldiers occupied the presidential palace, Cabinet offices, Radio Omdurman, and the official Sudan News Agency. Khartoum International Airport and Sudanese airspace were declared closed.

The agency said "some political figures and Cabinet ministers" were arrested but it was uncertain if they included el-Mahdi, who became prime minister after a May 1986 general election.

A Western diplomat in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, said he had heard the coup leaders tried to arrest the prime minister at his home in Khartoum but that el-Mahdi escaped.

A military statement said the coup was launched because political parties failed to lead the nation.

In February, the military said it would move against el-Mahdi unless he ended Sudan's six-year civil war by accepting a tentative peace pact worked out between an opposition party and southern rebels. The war has contributed to food riots, widespread hunger in the south and a severe refugee problem.

The whereabouts of former President Gaafar Nimeiri, accused by the military June 18 of being behind a failed coup, was not known. Nimeiri was overthrown in 1985 and said recently he planned to return to Sudan to seize power.

Sudan, the largest country in Africa, has about 22 million residents. It is a poor, predominantly Islamic country roughly one-third the size of the continental United States.

The military has ruled Sudan for about 23 years of its 33 years of independence.

Gili Farah, a Sudan News Agency journalist, said there were no

Former Ambassador Says U.S. Should Take More Active Role

By J. Ward Best
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Mideast may seem farther away from eastern North Carolina than any other corner of the planet. But for two days leading authorities on the Arab world will stress to area teachers the importance of teaching secondary students about the Mideast.

Herman Fr. Eilts, director of the Center for International Relations at Boston University and former United States ambassador to Egypt and Saudi Arabia, delivered the keynote address for the two-day conference on American-Arab affairs this morning. Eilts' overview of the Arab and Islamic world set the stage for two days of lectures and conferences at East Carolina University.

The American Arab Affairs Council, which sponsored the conference, hopes it will better prepare area high school teachers to present the history, geography and politics of the Arab world.

In his address, the former ambassador called on the United States to take a more active role in peace negotiations in the area, and he called for a greater knowledge of the region on the part of all Americans.

Eilts, who was also one of the chief negotiators during the Camp David peace talks between Egypt and Israel, said the region's importance to the United States remains the same today as it was during the Camp David Accord in 1978.

Along with the strategic importance of its location and the nation's dependence on Arab oil resources, Eilts said conflict in the Arab world could also present a threat to the super powers. "You can not exclude the possibility of a U.S.-Soviet confrontation," Eilts said.

American concern for the Arab world should also transcend the political and economic importance of the region. According to Eilts, basic human rights of more than 1 billion Moslems and 150 million Arabs in the region should weigh on America's relations with the Arab world.

"I do believe it's essential that the United States do what it can to achieve a better relationship with the Arab world," Eilts said in his speech.

He also called for increased initiative on the part of the United States in resolving the Arab-Israeli conflict.

"It's going to take years under the best circumstances," Eilts said of 'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

A Better Road For Progress

It's tedious to balance a community's needs and the interests of its largest employer. Usually, someone loses out. But in the case of a key intersection of the U.S. 264 northwest Greenville bypass near Burroughs Wellcome, all that's lost is time, and the benefits outweigh that inconvenience.

Both the City Council and the County Commission made the proper choice when they endorsed a redesign of that intersection at the industry's request — even though that request came at the 11th hour, just two months before right-of-way acquisition was to begin.

Acknowledging it was behind in planning, Burroughs Wellcome responsibly offered to pay the $60,000 for the re-design, an estimated $750,000 increase in construction costs, $700,000 to relocate a public utilities electric substation, as well as donate right-of-way for the new intersection — a move that could save the state $309,180.

'Despite its tardiness, Burroughs Wellcome made a reasonable request responsibly, offering to pay for its mistake up front.'

What's lost is the nine months the project must be delayed to accommodate the changes. What's gained, however, is a more serviceable interchange for two of Pitt County's most important thoroughfares — N.C. 11 and U.S. 264.

Under the old plan, traffic entering the main entrance to Burroughs Wellcome from Greenville and Bethel on N.C. 11 would be forced to use the U.S. 264 interchange to access the bypass, and finally, to access the plant. That would be a cumbersome process, and a potentially hazardous one during heavy traffic hours.

But the re-design allows traffic on N.C. 11 to access the industry's main entrance through a service road. The present westbound lanes of N.C. 11 would become that service road, with the eastbound lanes carrying westbound traffic. Two new eastbound lanes would be added. It doesn't take a civil engineer to see that plan is simpler, safer and well worth the trouble.

The only dark spot is the delay. Highway funds are hard to come by in eastern North Carolina. Every inch of four lane highway has been laid with a gallon of the region's sweat. U.S. 264 is no exception. Road dollars stick hard to urban, Piedmont asphalt but they seem to float effortlessly away from the East.

There is a chance some enterprising bureaucrat or politician could use this nine-month delay as an excuse to divert funds away from U.S. 264 to other projects, further postponing the highway's completion. It should not happen, and the county's lawmakers and representative on the Board of Transportation must see to that.

The issue also raises questions about how far a community should go to accommodate an important employer — one that's fallen behind on planning in this case. Despite its tardiness, Burroughs Wellcome made a reasonable request responsibly, offering to pay for its mistake up front. But the industry should keep up from now on.

The county has waited a long time for a northwest bypass of Greenville. It will now have to wait an extra nine months, but when the project is finished, the end result will be a better road for progress.

Just An End To Discrimination, Please

WASHINGTON — Recent Supreme Court decisions have undermined the whole notion of affirmative action, and the civil-rights consensus is that it is now up to Congress to set things right.

That may not be such a bad thing — for two reasons.

The first is that America's consensus on affirmative action (though not necessarily its commitment to racial justice) is evaporating, which means that the work to be done is more political than judicial. The second is that the give-and-take of the legislative process might force us to think about what racial justice requires.

William Raspberry

What we want — or at any rate what I think we ought to want — is an end to racial discrimination, and some acceptable procedure for making damned sure we have ended it. The Supreme Court's conservative majority has made clear that it isn't interested.'

Here are some of the things I think we ought to be thinking about:

Consensus-building. The basics of the necessary consensus already exist. All of us will agree that justice requires equality of opportunity. All of us will deny that it requires equality of outcomes. Hardly anyone will argue that more-competent white men should be denied jobs or promotions in favor of less-competent minorities and women.

But gross inequality in outcome leads us to doubt equality of opportunity. The first legislative problem, therefore, is to devise some means of testing and enforcing equal opportunity without resort to parceling out jobs, promotions and other benefits according to racial formulas.

Fashioning Remedies. Although color-blindness may be the American ideal, it is widely accepted that establishing true equality of opportunity will, at least for a time, require that race be taken into account. What remains unsettled is the nature of the inequity to be set right: present-day discrimination or the crippling effects of past discrimination?

It seems clear that a consensus exists for ending present discrimination, and it may be possible to build a consensus for legislation to help ease the effects of past discrimination against individuals. But the legacy-of-slavery argument that calls for special breaks for blacks who make no claim that they have been specifically victimized by discrimination is unlikely to prevail.

At any rate, it seems wise to distinguish among consent decrees designed to overcome demonstrated discrimination, special admissions programs designed to increase opportunities for disadvantaged minorities, and goals and timetables designed to move us toward a racially inclusive society.

Measuring Competency. Deciding which worker has performed better on the job and is therefore better qualified for promotion is tough enough. Deciding which qualified applicant for a job is likely to perform best on the job is much more difficult. Tests of specific skills — typing, vocabulary, technical expertise — work reasonably well. But relying on tests to rank qualified applicants for such jobs as law enforcement, teaching or middle management — is likely to favor those with the best verbal skills, even where verbal skills have little to do with on-the-job performance.

In certain kinds of jobs, it might make sense to look for ways to make the work force more representative of the general population.

Neither blacks nor whites want a system that parcels out benefits to groups based on their proportion in the population. No one wants what amounts to separate hiring lists for African Americans, Hispanics, Asian Americans or white men.

What we want — or at any rate what I think we ought to want — is an end to racial discrimination, and some acceptable procedure for making damned sure we have ended it.

The Supreme Court's conservative majority has made clear that it isn't interested. It is now up to the rest of us, starting with the Congress.

A Quick & Dirty Fix That Hurts The Elderly

James Sammons

No one should quarrel with the idea of controlling Medicare costs, but the proposal to impose expenditure targets (ETs) on Medicare payments is plain wrong. The idea of capping the total amount available each year is a "solution" that would work a greater hardship on patients than on their physicians by severely restricting their access to necessary medical services.

What Congress and the administration are talking about is rationing. But demand for health care is growing, and coupling that demand with shrinking resources would put an unbearable pressure on physicians to do less for patient welfare. Under expenditure targets, the government would be asking physicians to figure out how not to treat their patients instead of how to treat them — a situation physicians can never accept.

By any name, expenditure targets are simply an attempt by Congress and the Bush administration to balance the budget on the backs of America's elderly.

The real message of ETs is that the government cannot control the Medicare program. Instead of reasoned approaches to specific problem areas, the government is throwing up its hands and abdicating responsibility to a process that has not been well thought out, let alone tested.

Ironically, these targets aren't even necessary. The Ways and Means health subcommittee has already met its Gramm-Rudman target for 1990, so there is no short-term justification for Medicare expenditure targets.

Expenditure targets are not only the wrong solution, they would be applied to the wrong problem.

Let me set the record straight with the help of a Congressional Budget Office memorandum dated March 4, 1988. That document points out that "the rate of growth of Medicare has declined over the decade, an effect that is more readily apparent after eliminating the effects of general inflation. On a per enrollee basis, annual growth in real costs from 1985 through 1989 will be an estimated 3 percent compared to an annual growth rate of 7.2 percent from 1980 through 1985." The CBO report attributes the falling rate of growth in spending for Medicare to lower growth in spending for physician as well as hospital services.

The reason Part B payments have risen faster than Part A is not "overutilization" by physicians. When the government clamped down on hospital admissions five years ago, it forced more procedures to be done on an outpatient basis. According to the Social Security Administration, outpatient charges grew an average of 30 percent per year compared with 13 percent for physician services from 1980 to 1986 and grew from 16 percent of Part B spending in 1984 to 28 percent in 1986. Physician services decreased from 72 percent of Part B spending to 61 percent in the same time period.

The American Medical Association believes that practice guidelines would be more appropriate — and more effective — than expenditure targets in controlling physician charges. Although the number of practice guidelines in existence today is small compared with the future need, there are enough of them to demonstrate their usefulness in reducing the cost of medical care.

For example, a National Institutes of Health conference held in 1980 issued guidelines for the management of febrile seizures in children. The NIH estimated savings resulting from the use of these guidelines at $67 million per year.

Following the 1981 publication of guidelines on the appropriate use of tonsillectomy, the number of tonsillectomies performed nationally fell from 392,000 in 1981 to 249,000 in 1987, a 36 percent reduction. Feedback to Vermont physicians regarding their tonsillectomy rates in children 14 years and younger led to an 89 percent reduction in tonsillectomies over a five-year period.

A 1985 Chicago hospital program of practice guidelines for the appropriate use of Cesarean section operations led to a reduction from 17.6 percent to 11.5 percent. A similar reduction nationally could result in savings of approximately $1 billion per year.

The AMA is committed to working with Congress to address budget requirements, while maintaining the promise of the Medicare program made to the elderly 26 years ago: guaranteed access to health care services. Rationing in the guise of expenditure targets would betray that promise. Physicians will not abandon their role as the patients' advocate in order to provide the government a quick and dirty fix to a budget problem that the elderly did not create.

Air Conditioning, Indian Chiefs & A Lost Wager

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — Every Spring, North Carolina public schools have to close early in the day because of the heat. Administrators say that without air conditioning it's just too hot to expect children to learn when the temperature goes above 90 degrees.

But on the same days that schools must close, many city and county bureaucrats will often work a full day in an air conditioned public building. When it comes to cooling buildings, government refreshes itself first, then works on the schools.

Sen. Bill Barker, D-Pamlico, thinks it is time to change priorities. He has tried to amend a bill that would outlaw flat roofs on school buildings in a way that will force county governments to also cool those buildings.

"If a county needs air conditioning in any of its buildings, it needs it in the schools, first," Barker said in an interview.

Barker's proposal says that if a county air conditions any of its public buildings, then it must also air condition its schools. Barker would give counties four years to install the air conditioning.

County commissioners could get around the restriction by putting the issue to a public vote. If voters rejected air conditioning in the schools, then the county would be relieved of the state mandate.

*Great questions of Western civilization are often asked on the Senate floor. Sen. Austin Allran, R-Catawba, was recently debating a bill that would require that one of the governor's appointments to the Child Day Care Commission be a pediatrician.

Analysis

Allran asked Sen. Helen Marvin, D-Gaston, "Why would you want a pediatrician on the day care commission any more than you would than, say (a long pause) — an Indian chief?"

*The slow pace of legislative proceedings was wearing thin with Lt. Gov. Jim Gardner when a parliamentary problem arose one day last week. An exasperated Gardner asked, "Will the Senate be at rest?" and turned his attention to the problem.

Sen. Richard Chalk, R-Guilford, probably equally frustrated, responded, "What's he think we've been doing?"

*When House Speaker Joe Mavretic announced that the legislature would no longer use styrofoam cups, he said the switch to paper cups was just a small gesture to help with the environment.

Maybe it's not so small. The General Assembly's first order was for 15,000 paper coffee cups. Given that the Legislative Building is used by about 600 or 700 people each of the four days there are sessions and given that coffee is provided free, it's hard to imagine 15,000 cups lasting more than a month. During a six-month session, that adds up to a lot of cups.

*Every year, legislative leaders pledge that they'll adjourn by the end of June. Even given that tradition, Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, sounded overly optimistic this year. Early in the session, Barnes, the president pro tem, was so sure that June 16 would be the last day of the session that he made a wager with this reporter. If the Senate adjourned June 16, this reporter would write two positive columns about the legislature. If on June 30 the assembly had not adjourned, Barnes would bring a six-pack of beer to the press room for a late afternoon toast.

As of this writing, Barnes was looking pretty vulnerable.

WASHINGTON — Nobody ever lost votes for waving the American flag. Somebody lost a lot of them for vetoing a pledge of allegiance bill.

Those lessons were not lost in Congress or at the White House after the Supreme Court held that a flag-burning demonstrator was acting within his right of political protest, a decision that apparently overrules flag desecration laws of 48 states and the federal government.

Democrats weren't about to yield the issue this time.

The Senate adopted a resolution, sponsored by the Democratic majority leader, declaring that it will seek a way to reinstate the flag laws. Later, it approved an amendment revising the federal flag desecration law in an effort make it fit the court ruling.

President Bush said the administration is reviewing proposals for a constitutional amendment to reinstate flag desecration laws, and will consult with Congress on the measure. "And as president, I will uphold our precious right to dissent, but burning the flag goes too far, and I want to see that matter remedied," Bush announced.

He'll have no trouble finding congressional support.

Before their Fourth of July recess, members of the House and Senate tuned up for some old-fashioned patriotic oratory back home.

One House member said flags should be flown at half-staff to mark the ruling. Another said the six men who raised the flag at Iwo Jima "were symbolically shot in the back by five men in black robes." A third said that George M. Cohan, he of the grand old flag, "must be turning in his grave."

"What in God's name is going on?" cried Rep. Douglas Applegate, D-Ohio. "... Are there any limitations? Are they going to allow fornication in Times Square at high noon?"

Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis took a daily drubbing from Bush during the 1988 campaign for his veto of a Massachusetts bill to require that schoolteachers lead pupils in the pledge of allegiance. Dukakis explained his veto by citing a 1943 Supreme Court ruling.

As a candidate, Bush kept it simple. He said he would have signed the bill. He led the pledge of allegiance, frequently. He campaigned at a flag factory.

The president said he did not consider his call for reinstatement of flag laws to be a partisan matter. "... What I've said here is American, it isn't Republican or Democrat, it isn't liberal or conservative," he said Tuesday.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell of Maine sponsored the Senate resolution against the decision last week; it passed 97 to 3.

House Speaker Thomas S. Foley of Washington doesn't favor a constitutional amendment on the subject. Foley said that to play politics with the flag issue would be cynical, base and crass. But he isn't leaving House Democrats with no handle on the topic: the House voted 411 to 5 Tuesday night for a resolution expressing concern at the court ruling. Foley said there will be hearings after the recess on legislation to ban flag burning.

Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., once a presidential candidate, proposed the amendment the Senate added to a child care bill, changing the wording of the federal law that makes it a crime to mutilate, deface, burn, display on the ground or trample an American flag, by eliminating the provision of the current law which forbids anyone to "cast contempt" on the flag by desecrating it.

Panel Issues First Report On State's Health Care

By Tom Foreman Jr.
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The N.C. Medical Database Commission has unveiled a four-volume, 1,491-page document that includes statewide data on everything from childbirth to heart attacks.

Calling the report a "milestone," Chief Deputy Insurance Commissioner Allen Feezor said the data would give "the first good, statewide look at health care in North Carolina."

Among other things, the four volumes released Thursday profile hospital use and charges. They also identify the types of conditions treated most frequently by each hospital and those procedures that generate the most potential revenue for the hospital.

"The hoped-for result would be more informed health management, better use of resources and wiser purchasing and cost control decisions," state Insurance Commissioner Jim Long said in introducing the report.

The data was collected from more than 150 hospitals during the first half of 1988. Five hospitals, including N.C. Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill and N.C. Baptist Hospital in Winston-Salem, were unable to produce figures in time for release of the report. Officials said the five hospitals will have information in time for the next report, to be issued in six months.

Sandra Greene, commission chairwoman, said the health-care providers can use the report to see how their charges stack up with other hospitals across the state, and to compare the types of patients they're seeing.

"More immediately, the information will be used by other people who are planning health insurance programs and planning to deliver services," she said.

Ms. Greene said consumers might find the reams of information "intimidating" as they try to decide how to handle their own health needs.

"I think it has to go through another filtering process before we get to that point" where the public can put the figures to use, she said.

"The most interesting information out of this first set of reports that will get the most attention is the vast range in the charges among hospitals in North Carolina for the same procedure," Ms. Greene said. "Not just the range in charges, but the range in the length of stay."

For a normal childbirth without complications, parents can spend as much as $2,329 at Lenoir Hospital for staying 2.4 days. At Lincoln County Hospital, the same procedure costs $888 and the stay is slightly less than two days.

A coronary bypass averages $22,111 at the state's hospitals. One patient can be charged as much as $29,622 for a stay of 16.5 days at Moses Cone Hospital in Greensboro, and as little as $17,799 at Memorial Mission Hospital in Asheville for a stay of 10.6 days.

The commission also found that: — Medicare patients have the longest stays across all general acute care hospitals, ranging from 7.9 days in small hospitals to 11 days in teaching hospitals.

— Self-pay, indigent and charity patients tend to have shorter stays than other patients in general acute care hospitals.

— During the first six months of 1988, according to commission figures, patients discharged from North Carolina hospitals were billed more than $1.4 billion for services provided. Of 349,877 people hospitalized during the period, nearly a third were hospitalized for illnesses relating to the circulatory system, and to pregnancy-childbirth.

— Overall, North Carolinians stay in hospitals for an average of 7.6 days and are charged an average of $4,155.

Trailer Bill

RALEIGH (AP) — Longer tractor-trailers would be allowed on North Carolina's major highways and employers of drivers who violate the law would be fined under a bill that has cleared the Senate.

The measure passed 31-7 Thursday and was returned to the House, where it originated, for consideration of Senate amendments.

Currently, 48 feet is the limit for single tractor-trailer units in North Carolina, although trucks are allowed to haul twin trailers that can measure 52 feet on interstates and some other four-lane highways.

Truckers are pushing to allow 53-foot single trailers on those highways, which critics say would be dangerous.

Passage of the bill, which had gained tentative approval Wednesday, came after approval of an amendment under which driving a 53-foot trailer on an unauthorized road would not result in points on the driver's record and fines would be assessed against his employer.

The fines would be $100 for the first offense, $200 for the second and $300 for the third and subsequent offenses. The amendment reduced the latter fine, which originally was $500.

Shooting Charge

DURHAM (AP) — A Durham man was arrested Thursday and charged with stabbing a woman after breaking into her home, police said.

Thomas Lee Billings, 19, was charged with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, inflicting serious injury, attempted first-degree rape, felonious breaking and entering and felonious larceny of the woman's car, police said.

Gail Darden, 34, of Durham, had been attacked June 17 and was released last week from Durham County General Hospital.

Stepson Killed

GREENSBORO (AP) — A Greensboro man has been accused of killing his stepson after what police say was a dispute over cooking a meal in the middle of the night.

James Alexander McBride, 35, was shot in the back about 4:45 a.m. Wednesday while his mother cooked a meal of fish heads, police said. Joseph Roberts Jr., 56, was charged in the shooting.

"It wasn't an argument, anything like that," said Shirley Roberts, the suspect's wife of 33 years. "I don't know what happened."

She said she had been cooking a meal for her intoxicated son, who had been escorted home by police after a bicycle accident that injured his jaw and leg. She said she was awake at the time and complied with his request for a meal, which apparently angered her husband.

Bobbitt Released

RALEIGH (AP) — William H. Bobbitt, a retired state Supreme Court chief justice, was released Wednesday from Rex Hospital after treatment for an undisclosed illness, the hospital said.

Bobbitt, 88, retired in 1974. He had been described as a mild heart attack in 1974 and was hospitalized in Rex then.

Bobbitt was first appointed to the state's highest court in 1954 by Gov. William B. Umstead.

Firm Sued

MADISON, N.C. (AP) — The daughter of a Madison woman killed two years ago in Mayodan has sued a security firm owned in part by Reidsville Police Chief James Festerman over her mother's death.

The wrongful death suit was filed in Guilford County Superior Court by Barbara Johnson.

The suit charges that T&J Security, based in Greensboro, failed to protect Geraldine Carter Johnson May 25, 1987, the day she was killed by another employee while leaving work at a MacField textile plant.

The suit said T&J Security was wrong to allow Willie Edward Dalton, now in prison for killing Ms. Johnson, to drive into the parking lot with a gun and a knife. He had been barred from the plant earlier in the day after threatening Ms. Johnson, the suit said.

prejudicial, will conduct a hearing Wednesday.

Bakker, once president of the defunct television ministry, and Dortch, his former top deputy, were charged in December with 24 counts of mail and wire fraud and conspiracy. They are accused of conspiring to defraud PTL contributors to support their lavish lifestyles and of diverting more than $4 million in PTL money for their personal use.

Bakker Trial May Change Locations

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Attorneys for two former PTL leaders and federal prosecutors agree on one thing — a fair trial in Charlotte may be impossible.

But what both sides don't agree upon is where the fraud and conspiracy trial of Jim Bakker and Richard Dortch should be held.

Prosecutors are recommending that the trial be moved from Charlotte to Asheville to ensure a fair trial, according to documents unsealed Thursday.

In April, defense lawyers asked that the trial be moved out of Charlotte and the Western District of North Carolina because "widespread, adverse and sensational" publicity had made it impossible for Bakker and Dortch to get a fair trial.

But prosecutors want to keep the trial in the 32-county western district, according to The Charlotte Observer.

"The defendants have failed to establish that they cannot receive a fair trial and impartial jury anywhere in the district," the prosecutors contend. "Nonetheless, the government strongly urges the court to consider transferring this case from the Charlotte division to the Asheville division."

U.S. Magistrate Paul Taylor will decide if the trial, now set for late August, should be moved. Taylor, who has called publicity about Bakker and Dortch inflammatory and

Permit Is Denied

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HIGH POINT — A unanimous vote denying the state's largest privately owned hazardous waste handler a special-use permit caps months of growing public opposition to the facility, which has a string of environmental violations extending to 1980.

"I'm relieved, but at the same time I know it's not over," said Tony Hill, a High Point lawyer who has led a neighborhood group fighting Seaboard Chemical Corp. "This was a humanitarian issue, and the commissioners finally put health above politics."

The Guilford County Board of Commissioners voted 5-0 Thursday to shut down Seaboard by denying it the special-use permit it needs to stay open. But the county will not move to close Seaboard until a lawsuit filed in January to shut the High Point facility is tried, Assistant County Attorney Sam Moore said.

Seaboard officials are considering legal action against the county to recover the cost of the property, equipment and cleanup of the site in the event of a shutdown.

The facility treats solvents and chemicals from industries in North Carolina and across the country. Ground-water contamination at the site has spread from an earthen pond once used to hold hazardous chemicals to a stream that feeds the Deep River and may take 30 years to clean up, officials said.

Legislative Negotiations Likely As Chambers Wrangle Over Budget

By John Flesher
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The General Assembly has missed its leadership's goal for adjourning the 1989 session today, but the Senate has set the stage for negotiations that could resolve the two biggest unfinished issues: highway and education funding.

The Senate was scheduled to take the first of two votes today on a massive, catch-all tax bill that would generate $422.1 million next year to get an $8.6 billion, 15-year highway construction program under way. It also would grant teachers and state employees a 6 percent pay raise and finance school improvements.

If the package is approved, as seems likely, the measure would be returned to the House where it originated as simply a road-building program. The House is bitterly divided, but if House Speaker Joe Mavretic's bipartisan coalition held sway, it would reject the Senate's changes in the bill.

That would lead to creation of a joint conference committee to seek a compromise, putting into a formal setting negotiations that have been under way for weeks behind the scenes.

"If we're going to resolve this, we need to get to conference," Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said Thursday. "Rather than us stay on one side and they stay on the other, let's get together and work it out."

"We can now ... hopefully come out with a plan where everyone wins and the citizens of North Carolina win," said Rep. Alex Hall, D-New Hanover, chairman of the House Finance Committee.

Leaders had hoped to adjourn the legislative session, this month but now say it probably will last until mid-July. It costs $66,000 per day to operate the General Assembly.

For the past several weeks, Senate leaders have touted a plan that would finance the road plan and the state budget's "general fund" — which pays for teacher salaries, education, human services and other non-transportation programs.

Martin and the House leadership have opposed the Senate's approach because it would raise the automobile sales tax from 2 percent to 3 percent — with a $1,500 ceiling for commercial vehicles — and use the money for the general fund.

The House highway package calls for the same tax increase to fund the road program, which would build four-lane highways and urban bypasses and pave 10,000 miles of rural roads over 12 years. Critics of the Senate plan say it would "raid" the highway program and that other revenue sources should be tapped for the general fund.

The Senate approved its bill last week. A bipartisan House coalition loyal to Martin and Mavretic killed it Wednesday over the vehement protests of some Democrats.

"We are, in a way, back to square one," Martin said at a Thursday morning news conference. "There does not appear at this point to be a consensus in favor of doing anything that would actually work, that would fix the problems that we are facing."

The governor said he hoped the House's action would lead to a new round of negotiations. The Senate's action may have granted that wish.

The Finance Committee unanimously approved its omnibus bill — a combination of the House's highway plan and the Senate's general fund tax bill — and scheduled the first of two votes for today. If the measure passes, the second vote will be taken next Tuesday night, after the Legislature returns from a long Fourth of July weekend.

The omnibus bill contains a 5 1/2 cents-per-gallon gasoline tax increase and an increase in the fee for automobile titles from $5 to $25, both of which would pump another $200 million into highway construction in fiscal 1990 and progressively larger amounts annually through the year 2005. Senate leaders have insisted on a 15-year construction program while the House prefers 12 years.

For the general fund, the bill would:

— Raise the ceiling on the state's 2 percent sales tax on boats, aircraft and locomotives from $300 to $1,500.

— Boost the tax on short-term vehicle rentals from 2 percent to 8 percent.

— Make a technical change in income tax filings, generating a one-time $24 million windfall.

The measure's centerpiece, however, is the same sales tax increase on vehicles from 2 percent to 3 percent that the House rejected Wednesday.

Hometown Crowd Greet's Wright At Fort Worth Bash

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FORT WORTH, Texas — Jim Wright, whose resignation from the U.S. House takes effect today, thanked about 3,000 enthusiastic supporters who greeted him at a homecoming bash and said he is undecided about what he'll do next.

"I want to thank you for being broad-minded enough, tolerant enough, big-spirited enough to tolerate my foibles, my eccentricities and my mistakes occasionally," Wright said as the crowd cheered Thursday night. "And you let me do the big and important things that helped all of us."

In his folksy speech, during which he stood, relaxed, with his hands in his pockets, Wright said he would like to remain active as a private citizen. He said he would like to work toward peace in Latin America, and he added that talking with college students made him happy.

After the 15-minute speech at the hotel convention center, he said he had yet to make any long-range plans.

The former speaker never specifically mentioned the 69 alleged violations of House ethics rules that prompted him to announce May 31 that he was resigning the House seat he held more than 34 years.

But he blamed his troubles partly on reporters who he said were too quick to write about rumors.

When Julius Caesar rode his chariot through adoring crowds, Wright said, a man continuously whispered in his ear, "Remember, Julius, you're only a man."

He continued: "Thank goodness I don't need somebody to remind me of that. Now, in our modern society, we have the newspapers to remind us of that."

Afterward, Wright took off his coat and sat on the edge of the stage, shaking hands, signing autographs and saying hello to old friends.

Smiling and pleased with his reception, he said he felt no bitterness toward the media and his political opponents. "Anyone who carries a burden of bitterness does more harm to himself than anyone else," he said.

The Rev. Carol Ann Tatum of Fort Worth braved the crush in front of the stage and emerged with autographs of Wright and his wife, Betty, who sat beside him.

"I feel fantastic that other people feel the same way about him that I do, and that's pure love," she said.

Jack Adkison, a city councilman in the Fort Worth suburb of River Oaks, said the gathering was "a beautiful party but a sad occasion."

Bush Uses Iwo Jima Memorial As Backdrop For Flag Appeal

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush, using the statue of the nation's most famous flag-raising scene as a backdrop, today urged passage and ratification of a "simple, stark and to-the-point" constitutional amendment to ban flag burning.

The president spoke before a hastily assembled crowd at a ceremony at the Iwo Jima Memorial, the statue of five Marines raising the flag on a Pacific island during World War II.

Bush used the ceremony to register his support for a Republican-drafted proposed amendment that asserts: "The Congress and the states shall have power to prohibit the physical desecration of the flag of the United States."

"This flag is one of our most powerful ideas," Bush declared. "If it is not defended, it is defamed...it represents the fabric of our nation."

Bush said the statue behind him, a huge bronze casting of a photograph by Associated Press photographer Joe Rosenthal, was "stunning...even now it humbles us, inspires us."

Bush said that the amendment drafted by Republican congressional leaders with the support of some Democrats was "simple, stark and to-the-point."

Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas praised Bush for supporting the amendment and called it "a serious step" to circumvent last week's 5-4 Supreme Court ruling that said flag burning is a form of free expression protected by the Constitution.

Dole said that people across the nation were speaking out against the ruling. "People are saying, keep your hands off Old Glory," he said.

Also speaking at the ceremony were co-sponsors of the amendment, House Republican leader Robert Michel of Illinois and two Democrats, Sen. Alan Dixon of Illinois and Rep. Sonny Montgomery of Mississippi.

Both Democrats and Republicans have publicly deplored the Supreme Court decision, but a spokesman for the Democratic National Committee accused Bush of using the issue for political opportunism.

"He's running for president instead of being president," Mike McCurry, DNC communications director, said Wednesday. "The heroes of Iwo Jima didn't die so they could become a backdrop for some political photo opportunity."

Bush used the flag ceaselessly in his presidential campaign last year. He visited a flag factory and attacked Democrat Michael Dukakis, the Massachusetts governor, for vetoing an unconstitutional a bill requiring the Pledge of Allegiance to be recited in schools.

House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill., introduced the resolution Thursday before the House adjourned for its holiday recess.

Michel said he expects Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas to introduce it there when that chamber returns from its extended Fourth of July holiday, which began last week.

House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., said Thursday the House Judiciary Committee will begin hearings on the flag issue in July.

Foley, while condemning flag burning, has urged caution about amending the Constitution. Michel said he generally agrees, but believes such action is the only answer in this case.

"I just have to assume we're not going to be thwarted," he said, insisting he did not view the issue as a Republican attempt to paint the Democrats as less patriotic.

Democratic Rep. Sonny Montgomery of Mississippi joined Michel in introducing the resolution.

Michel said the amendment avoids specific methods of desecration because any list might leave one out. He pointed out, however, that the amendment referred only to physical desecration in order to avoid hampering free expression.

Navy Apologizes To Sailor For USS Iowa News Leaks

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — The Navy has apologized to a sailor for falsely implicating him in the USS Iowa turret explosion that killed 47 seamen, the man's lawyer said.

Two Naval Investigative Service agents apologized to Gunner's Mate 3rd Class Kendall Truitt Wednesday for news leaks suggesting Truitt was involved in the April 19 explosion, said Miami attorney Ellis Rubin.

"We now demand that the Navy officially clear Mr. Truitt and tell the public that he is not a homosexual nor was he involved in any murder-suicide pact that resulted in the explosion," Rubin said in a news release Thursday.

Meanwhile, ABC News reported that the NIS admitted much of the information it leaked to reporters was false, including a suggestion that a homosexual relationship existed between Truitt and Gunner's Mate Clayton Hartwig. Hartwig named Truitt sole beneficiary of his $50,000 double-indemnity life insurance policy.

Navy spokesmen in Norfolk, Va., and Mayport Naval Station said they could not comment on the ABC report. They also said they had no knowledge of the apology and the other information released by Rubin.

"The Navy investigation is still ongoing," said Lt. Larry Thomas, a spokesman in Norfolk.

Hartwig was killed at his position in the gun turret. Truitt, who was in the turret's powder magazines five decks below, survived the blast. Rubin said the Navy is looking at the possibility of a suicide by Hartwig.

"There's no hard evidence that there was a suicide and we will address that matter when we go to collect the insurance proceeds," Rubin said in a telephone interview from his Miami office.

Rubin said the money was being withheld pending an outcome of the Navy's investigation.

ABC said the NIS also admitted its reports of finding a blasting cap or timing device among Hartwig's belongings were false, and that it wrongly characterized a booklet of practical jokes titled "How to Get Even Without Going to Jail" as a "volume detailing methods of constructing booby traps and other deadly devices."

ABC also said it obtained copies of 17 letters from Hartwig which appear to contradict the Navy's claim that Hartwig was despondent and suicidal.

Lt. Cmdr. Craig Quigley, a Navy spokesman in Washington, D.C., said the Navy's report on the accident has not yet been issued. "The investigation continues and we are not in position to confirm any information that ABC put in its piece tonight," he said.

The apology by special agents came during a 3½-hour interview with Truitt, Rubin said. "They apologized for the initial press release from the Navy and from NIS which grew into a national smear of Mr. Truitt," the attorney said.

Shortly after the USS Iowa explosion, published reports said the Navy was investigating the relationship between Truitt and Hartwig.

Bucket Swinger Foils Mugger

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHILADELPHIA — A 63-year-old woman stopped a mugging by beating an attacker on the head with a scrub bucket, and later said she was only doing her civic duty.

Police say she went beyond duty, however, and plan to recommend her for a citizen's commendation for coming to the aid of a younger woman.

Margie Searles said she took a bucket to scrub some paint from the pavement in front of her son's house Thursday.

"When I got out the door, I heard screaming," she said, "and I looked across the street and saw him pulling her hair."

Searles hit the alleged assailant, Ricardo Caban, 29, and he walked away. Searles watched where he went, however, and waved down a police car. Caban was charged with robbery and aggravated assault.

The assailant's target, Annette Sinnott, 29, was treated for neck and arm injuries and released from a hospital.

"Believe me, I have never had fear in my mind," Searles said. "I just don't like to see any man beating up on a woman. This is my instinct."

States Pressing Probes Of Gouging In Gasoline Price Increases

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Gasoline prices on the Fourth of July weekend are stable for the first time since the Alaska oil spill in March, but officials in many states are still pressing oil companies to prove they didn't use the spill to gouge consumers.

Attorneys general in several states are investigating whether oil refiners conspired to use the market turmoil caused by the Exxon tanker wreck to force higher prices on gasoline wholesalers, thus triggering big increases at the pump.

The industry says it's not to blame, and some say the charges are inspired by politics. Yet the oil companies are facing a level of public suspicion about gasoline price collusion not seen in this country since the oil crises of the 1970s.

"There was something very special about this leap in prices: it was the fastest and greatest increase in the history of the United States," said Trilby Lundberg of the Los Angeles-based Lundberg Survey, which tracks gasoline prices.

The national average retail price started the year at 98 cents a gallon and stood at $1 a week before the March 24 spill, according to the Lundberg Survey. Two months later the price peaked at $1.18 a gallon, and throughout June it hovered around $1.17.

The Energy Department says the spill cut supplies of Alaskan crude oil by 13 million barrels over 13 days — not enough alone to cause a major jump in gasoline prices.

The industry contends the price runup was caused by many factors outside its direct control, including normal seasonal increases in gasoline demand, higher prices for the crude oil used to make gasoline, and tougher environmental standards for gasoline that increased manufacturing costs.

None of the state investigations apparently has produced conclusive evidence of wrongdoing. Even so, some state officials have publicly accused the companies of manipulation.

"Greed and collusion are the only apparent explanations for these unwarranted price increases," Gray Davis, the California state controller, told a U.S. Senate hearing last April.

Joseph Koach, executive director of the Service Station Dealers of America, said in an interview that the legality or fairness of gasoline pricing can't be determined because of a lack of public information about refiner costs.

"We just can't prove there's collusion, we can't prove there's price fixing," he said.

Davis and other state officials, plus some U.S. senators, have called on the Justice Department to investigate, but it has not indicated it will take up the matter. The Federal Trade Commission refused requests to investigate.

A trade group of station dealers in Washington state is launching a statewide petition drive over the Independence Day weekend seeking a law that would place oil refiners and their prices under state public utility controls.

The main organizer, Tim Hamilton, said he believed public anger at the oil companies is great enough that he can get the 150,000 signatures he needs to place his proposal on the general election ballot.

House Approves Aid Bill That Includes Sanctions Against China

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A House-passed $22.8 billion foreign aid bill, including new economic sanctions against China for its crackdown on the democracy movement, is on its way to the Senate where it faces an uncertain future.

The House approved the measure on an overwhelming 314-101 vote Thursday, venting its anger over the situation in China by adding the sanctions over mild protests from the Bush administration.

The final vote was unusually strong for a foreign aid bill, which traditionally engenders little enthusiasm in Congress.

"This is one of the best foreign aid bills we've passed," said an ebullient Rep. William Broomfield of Michigan, the senior Republican on the Foreign Affairs Committee. "I've never seen anything like it. There's momentum and confidence and respect by both parties."

The measure provides about $11.5 billion each in fiscal 1990 and 1991 for military, economic and development aid to dozens of friendly nations around the globe.

As it moved toward final passage, the House adopted an amendment softening restrictions on the administration that were intended to head off efforts to generate third-country support for the Nicaraguan Contra rebels. The Bush administration had warned the restrictions could be grounds for a presidential veto of the entire bill.

With that change, the administration seemed inclined to grudgingly declare victory and work for further changes when the bill goes to the Senate.

White House spokesman Marlin

Fitzwater, asked about the unanimous House vote for new China sanctions, said Thursday evening: "We will review the bill ... We believe it's unnecessary, but we'll take a look at it when we see it."

"We made a lot of progress," said one State Department source, speaking only on condition of anonymity. The China sanctions the House adopted were milder than the administration had feared from a Congress that has voiced impatience with Bush's cautious response to Beijing's bloody crackdown. The measure still is far from certain to become law. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee has shown little interest in working on its version of the bill this year, often failing to even get a quorum.

On the matter of China, the House endorsed Bush's previous moves to condemn government violence, halt military aid and ban exchanges of military officials and high-level visits.

But the package — passed on a 418-0 vote — went a step further, adding suspension of trade and development programs, a ban on the sale of police equipment and a limit on transfer of high-technology and nuclear materials or components.

"The Chinese leadership should be aware there is a very deep-seated revulsion in Congress about the barbarian tactics they have employed," said Broomfield, who helped draft the sanctions.

House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., noted that the administration opposed the China sanctions as robbing it of flexibility and infringing on presidential foreign policy prerogatives.

Minister Charged In Theft

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The flamboyant minister involved in the Tawana Brawley case has been charged with stealing more than $250,000 from a charitable organization he founded.

The Rev. Al Sharpton, 34, was arrested Thursday at his home on a 67-count indictment for fraud, grand larceny and falsifying business records of the National Youth Movement, which Sharpton started at age 16.

Sharpton also was to be arraigned in Albany today on three counts of tax evasion for allegedly filing a false return in 1987 and failing to file in 1986.

At his arraignment on Thursday's indictment obtained by state Attorney General Robert Abrams, Sharpton was asked how he pleaded.

"I believe the attorney general's insane," he replied.

Sharpton has claimed Abrams was out to get him because of Sharpton's role as an adviser to Miss Brawley, a black teen-ager who claimed a gang of white males abducted and raped her in November 1987.

Abrams denied the accusation at a news conference.

"The investigation of the National Youth Movement and Rev. Sharpton began at least a year before the Brawley investigation," he said.

Brawley and her advisers refused to cooperate with police and prosecutors and a seven-month grand jury investigation found that her allegations were a hoax. Abrams was the state's special prosecutor in the case.

Acting Justice George Roberts released Sharpton on his own recognizance.

Sharpton's lawyer Alton Maddox called the prosecution "a political witchhunt." On the tax-evasion charges, Maddox said Sharpton believes black people do not owe the government anything, and instead should be paid reparations.

The most serious charge against him, grand larceny, is punishable by up to seven years in jail.

Assistant Attorney General Victor Genecin said Sharpton used the accounts of the National Youth Movement and a record promotion company for his personal financial transactions.

New Jersey officers escort Clark through airport terminal before leaving Richmond

Clark Waives Extradition, Will Face Charges He Slew Family

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEWARK, N.J. — A quiet churchgoing accountant was returned to New Jersey to face charges that he murdered his wife, three children and mother in their suburban home 18 years ago.

Robert P. Clark, who authorities say is really John E. List, arrived from Richmond, Va., on Thursday after waiving extradition proceedings. He signed the extradition papers as Clark.

Although he denies he is List, authorities say fingerprints and a scar prove Clark and List are the same man.

Reporters were not allowed onto the tarmac at Newark International Airport, where Clark was led handcuffed to a car and taken to the county jail in Elizabeth. No court arraignment was immediately scheduled.

In Richmond earlier, Clark, 63, did not respond to reporters' questions as he boarded the plane.

Clark's attorney, David Baugh, said he advised Clark to waive extradition and that he was stepping out of the case because Clark had no legal matters pending in Virginia.

Baugh declined to identify Clark's New Jersey attorney.

Clark was arrested June 1 at the Richmond accounting firm where he had worked for 1½ years. FBI agents had been tipped off by a viewer of the national television program, "America's Most Wanted," which 11 days earlier had run a segment focusing on List.

Authorities say List fled to Colorado and then Virginia and had built a new life without changing his appearance or profession.

Credit Card Probe Turns Up Gay Prostitution Ring

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Federal officials are investigating possible credit card fraud against patrons of an alleged homosexual prostitution ring, including a top political operative in the Labor Department who has now resigned.

The investigation is based on financial records and other material seized in raids on a house in an upscale Washington neighborhood that police say was used by escort services with names such as "Dream Boys" and "Man to Man."

U.S. Attorney Jay Stephens on Thursday confirmed the investigation into allegedly fraudulent multiple billings of the services' patrons, after The Washington Times reported that the ring was patronized by Reagan and Bush administration officials, congressional aides and one of its own former editors.

One of a handful of individuals named in the Times article, Paul R. Balach, resigned Thursday evening.

"I hereby resign my position this date due to the public disclosure of activities concerning my personal life," Balach said in a letter announcing his resignation as Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole's political personnel liaison to the White House.

Balach told the Times that thousands of dollars in charges were run up on his credit cards without his knowledge after he used the service.

Secret Service agents and District of Columbia police raided the house in Northwest Washington on two occasions, in February and May.

In applying for search warrants, district police Detective Gerald W. Robertson said the investigation had produced "probable cause to believe that records and evidence related to an interstate prostitution business" were located there.

Stephens refused to talk about allegations of the homosexual ring, but said in a statement that his office "has been investigating allegations involving credit card fraud arising from the execution of those warrants."

During the raids, officers confiscated multi-line telephones, paging devices, credit card imprints, numerous bank statements, credit card slips and a diary of the escort business, according to an inventory filed in U.S. District Court.

The Times said it has obtained a number of credit card slips and it identified individuals who paid for services, including Balach.

Labor Department sources said Balach initially decided Thursday morning to take a few days' annual leave after being named by the Times as a patron of the escort services. He resigned Thursday evening.

In an interview before his resignation was announced, Balach said, "I have been a victim. I'm cooperating fully. I've talked several times with the Secret Service." He declined to elaborate, but said the Times had published "an accurate account of the turmoil I've been through" the last few months.

The Times quoted unnamed witnesses and law enforcement agents as saying the Secret Service kept one box of seized files containing names and other information about high-level government officials who were clients of the escort businesses.

Law enforcement officials familiar with the probe said investigators have obtained credit card receipts and phone logs linking additional political figures to the prostitution ring. The officials refused to be quoted by name or provide additional details.

Robert Snow, a spokesman for the Secret Service, said its agents are working for Stephens. He said the U.S. attorney will present the case to a grand jury.

The Times said Stanley Mark Tapscoff, one of its former assistant managing editors, was among those who used the escort services. Tapscoff, who resigned June 20, said he had not paid for sexual services of any kind, but was conducting an investigation into dial-a-porn services. The paper said its editors were unaware of any such reporting assignment.

Another individual identified by the Times as a patron of the escort services was Charles K. Dutcher, former associate director of presidential personnel in the Reagan administration.

Congressman Wants Trading Restrictions

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The much-criticized practice of dual trading — where brokers trade for themselves and their customers — would be restricted on the nation's major futures exchanges under legislation proposed by the chairman of a House subcommittee.

Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla., chairman of the House Agriculture subcommittee on credit, said Thursday he has concluded after a five-month legislative review that "dual trading presents possible dangers and opportunity for abuse."

Critics say the practice allows brokers to take care of themselves first, at the cost of their customers. However, defenders say it helps ease market volatility when there are few customer orders.

The provisions on dual trading are among several changes English is proposing to draw tighter rein on the futures markets.

English's bill, which he said will be introduced July 11 when Congress returns from its Fourth of July recess, would exempt futures markets trading on average fewer than 7,000 contracts a day from the dual trading prohibition.

English also would exempt exchanges with audit systems that can accurately track the times of trades to the nearest 30-second interval. An accurate audit system, by comparing times and prices of trades, allows investigators to determine whether or not brokers are abusing dual trading.

His bill would require exchanges to produce within a year audit trails accurate to the closest minute and to produce within three years audits accurate to the nearest 30 seconds.

English's subcommittee began an investigation of dual trading in response to revelations in January of an undercover FBI probe of alleged abuses by as many as 100 traders in the nation's two largest futures markets, the Chicago Board of Trade and the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

English also would give the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, which regulates the futures markets, power to conduct undercover probes.

"Allowing that kind of surveillance tells the American public that there are watchful eyes cast upon practices and activities which might in the past have gone unnoticed," he said.

His reform proposals are being incorporated into legislation reauthorizing the CFTC. Without the bill, the agency's legislative permission to operate would expire Sept. 30.

The Futures Industry Association endorsed English's proposals. The congressman said he will hold hearings on the bill during the week of July 17.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Miss America officials are exploring moving the pageant from the Atlantic City Convention Center and possibly out of New Jersey, the pageant's chairman says.

"The prospects for staying are excellent and there is no immediate danger that the Miss America pageant is moving out of Atlantic City," said Leonard C. Horn, pageant board chairman and chief executive.

"But I'd be stupid if I just sat back and made assumptions like we have for the last 50 years," he said. "We're looking for ways to cut down on our expenses."

Horn said the Convention Center has been unable to assure pageant officials that the Miss America competition will have a home there for at least the next 10 years, a commitment that pageant officials are seeking.

Howard Presina, executive director of the Convention Center Authority, said he thinks the board will grant the pageant a long-term lease. Presina said the center was making improvements that would cut down on production costs.

Whiter Teeth?

AFTER

Commonly asked questions and answers concerning this procedure.

Question: "How long does the procedure take?"

Answer: This procedure takes only 15 to 20 minutes to start and the patient completes the treatment at home and to their desired degree of whiteness; however, on your first visit, the dentist must prepare you for the procedure and usually a normal one-hour appointment is sufficient. The results are very predictable when the patient follows the instructions to the letter. Most cases can be completed within a two week period, more complicated cases may require a longer period of time. Patients who follow the instructions properly may see results within the first three days of treatment.

Question: "If this is such a new procedure, how can I be sure it's safe?"

Answer: Although it is a new product, it is based on the older bleaching techniques that have been in use on teeth for over twenty years. When used properly, these techniques have proven to be extremely safe but overpriced for most people. It is a much milder medication than anything ever used before for this purpose and is priced where every patient can now afford to look their very best with a totally different and easier procedure.

Question: "How long will the results last?"

Answer: The procedure can be permanent with occasional and proper maintenance.

Boilard holds some of the lures he designed

Fishing Pal Uses Bush To Test His Homemade Lures

By Dirk Beverage
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine — Bob Boilard likes nothing better than using President Bush as a guinea pig for his homemade fishing lures.

"I make lures for myself, and ... I make him my official tester," Boilard said as he worked to scout out the local bluefish in preparation for the president's long holiday weekend beginning today.

In an interview at his nearby Biddeford home, the 64-year-old retired Navy man said he made a string of mackerel flies to give the president over the weekend while Bush is at his oceanfront home.

"I'll say, 'Good luck. If we don't catch anything, we'll get rid of them,'" Boilard said.

He showed off a variety of lures, some made from old spoons and forks, and said, "You're seeing some of the stuff the president's going to fish with."

And how well does the president fish?

"You wouldn't put him in the class of the bass masters or what have you, although he's been down there with the bass people, and that's mostly what his fishing was, prior to this saltwater involvement," Boilard said.

"But, oh, yes. He's attentive, and he's got the patience. A lot of people say he hasn't got the patience, but I know."

One problem Boilard has encountered while fishing with Bush has been the disruptive presence of Secret Service agents in other boats. But he finally persuaded Bush to lessen the interference by getting the agents to stay off to the side, instead of traveling in the wake of Bush's boat.

Boilard said he met Bush accidentally near the Saco River in 1983, not long after he retired as a mechanic at the nearby Portsmouth Naval Shipyard.

"We met in the ocean," Boilard recalled. "I was fishing out at Wood Island out there at the mouth of the river, and I was just minding my business."

"I didn't notice anyone else around and I heard a voice behind me, and I was playing a bluefish at the time ... and I heard this voice behind me: 'What are you catching them on please? Oh, please, what are you catching them on?' I turned around and said, 'Oh my gosh.'"

After comparing lures for a few moments, Boilard told Bush, then vice president, to follow him for a good fishing spot.

"So we took off and went 100 yards, 150 yards. ... I was king of the heap."

Boilard recalls that Bush gave him his private phone number at the family estate in Walkers Point and asked him to call with fishing tips.

Since then, they have been fishing when they can and exchanging letters when they're unable to fish.

In one letter to Boilard dated Feb. 24, 1988, Bush wrote:

"Dear Bob: Articles on both blues and mackerels made me think of you. It was great seeing you in New Hampshire. Bob, I'm going to win, but I'll promise you one thing. It won't affect our fishing together."

But Boilard acknowledges Bush doesn't always have a lot of time for fishing:

"You know the hardest thing in the world is to get that guy out there for some time to be able to fish, to do the fishing."

Divers Push Search For Rig Workers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FREEMONT, Texas — Divers braving rough seas searched this morning for three crewmen missing after an oil-drilling vessel capsized in the Gulf of Mexico, but they were unable to enter the ship and got no response when they tapped on the hull, officials said.

A fourth man on a fishing vessel helping in the search fell overboard and also is missing, said Lt. Don Merwin with the U.S. Coast Guard in Galveston.

Six workers from the vessel Titan, containing a jack-up rig, were rescued late Thursday by Coast Guard helicopter and boat crews. They suffered minor injuries.

"There's no change; the missing men haven't been located and the search still continues," said Coast Guard Petty Officer Matt Walter said this morning. The civilian diving crew was delayed for a time while awaiting the arrival of another vessel to help secure the overturned rig, which was considered unstable amid 20 mph winds and 5- to 7-foot seas, officials said.

"The divers did go down, so evidently they felt it was secure enough," Petty Officer Ron Chadwick said later. "But they were unable to get inside the vessel. They tapped on the hull, and there was a negative response at this time." Chadwick was unsure what further measures were being taken at the site at midmorning.

The three missing workers are believed trapped within the drilling equipment.

"They may be trapped in the interior of the jack-up rig," Merwin said. "There's a possibility that it caught an air bubble. If they did, there's a possibility that they're still alive. We're proceeding on that assumption."

Walter said the drilling vessel, also called a spud boat, has legs that can be jacked down to the sea bed for oil exploration.

The fishing vessel Captain Gabriel reported the capsized rig at about 7:15 p.m. Thursday in 90 feet of water about 26 miles south of Freeport, Merwin said.

Merwin said officials do not know what caused the capsizing. There was no heavy rainfall in the area and waves were only at 3 feet to 5 feet at the time, he said.

The company that owns the drilling vessel is Jude St. Romain of New Orleans.

Flim-Flam

DURHAM (AP) — A woman was tricked out of nearly $3,000 this week by flim-flam artists who promised her a share of a $30,000 bank note they claimed to have found.

Janice Gentry, 35, of Durham, told police a man and woman offered her a share of the money after the bank note was converted to cash. She was asked to give them money and jewelry to prove that she was acting in good faith.

They disappeared with the money and jewelry when she went to meet with a man they said was handling the transaction.

Aging Nuclear Detection Center Gets An Overhaul

By Steven K. Paulson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — Deep inside Cheyenne Mountain, the military's nuclear detection force uses outdated equipment to protect the nation from attack. Officials say a $1.3 billion upgrading now under way will not be completed for years.

Green phosphor radar monitors, surplus from the Federal Aviation Administration, were designed back in the 1950s to track airplanes, not to monitor the globe for missiles, according to those who use them. They call the washing-machine-size monitors "green monsters."

Nearby is the phone they would use to contact the president in the event of a nuclear attack. It's wired downstairs through an old-fashioned plug-in switchboard.

"There's a lot of antiquated stuff at Cheyenne Mountain, there's no doubt about it," said Lt. Col. Rick Oborn, a Pentagon spokesman.

The facility was built in 1957. More than 693,000 tons of granite were removed from Cheyenne Mountain outside Colorado Springs to make way for 15 buildings housing 700 people. They work behind 30-ton blast doors 1,400 feet inside the mountain.

The Cheyenne Mountain complex, built at a cost of $142 million, was originally designed to track airplanes that could launch a nuclear attack against the United States. When the Soviet Union entered the space age, monitoring missile launches became an added duty.

The facility has been criticized by

The Associated Press

Air Force officer sits at the NORAD Command Post control center at Cheyenne Mountain

both Congress and its watchdog agency, the General Accounting Office, for failure to keep pace with technology, for project delays and for cost overruns.

Although the center's airplane tracking computer has been improved, the updating of three other computers used to track submarines, missiles and some 7,000 objects floating in space will not be finished until at least 1994.

Methods used to gather the raw tracking data used at Cheyenne Mountain are classified, but it is known that some information comes from satellites, some from intelligence sources, including spies, wiretaps and monitored radio conversations, and much from ground-based equipment.

Work on updating Cheyenne Mountain is proceeding slowly because of mistakes made in the past, said Col. Glen P. Doss, director of missile warning for the Air Force Space Command, which oversees operations at NORAD, the North American Aerospace Defense Command.

The switchboard will eventually give way to a modern communications system. The green monsters — where missiles and subs show up as green dots on dinner-plate-size screens — are to be replaced with multi-color displays.

The center's aircraft trackers are already using the new equipment to follow as many as 50 planes at a time on a screen; where they were once represented by a jumble of green numbers, the aircraft now are categorized by color.

"You can look at the green friendlies and the red unknowns," said a Canadian officer in charge one recent day at the joint U.S.-Canadian tracking center.

"I can look at a screen and get five times the amount of information" as with the old "1950s technology," he said.

Replacing the communications system is estimated to cost $255 million. Replacing the display system will cost $268 million, and putting in a survivable communications integration system will cost $135 million.

The project to replace the computer system to track satellites is already over budget, behind schedule and can't perform many of the functions required, according to a new GAO report. The system was originally expected to cost $290 million, but will now cost $437 million. The system was supposed to be operating by June 1988, but won't be completed until 1994, the GAO said.

The military is even planning a backup center, in case Cheyenne Mountain were destroyed. Construction began in April on the underground facility at Offutt Air Force Base in Nebraska.

On a recent day in Cheyenne Mountain's Air Defense Operations Room, a team of military officers monitored the flights of two Soviet Bear Delta bombers off the coast of Iceland. The planes, on a routine patrol, were not considered a threat.

These trackers have two minutes to identify an aircraft that enters U.S. airspace. If it is not identified, they scramble jet fighters.

Now, by pointing a "mouse," or computer pointer, at the dot representing a particular plane or submarine, the trackers can see its latitude, longitude, designation, and other details. With the old system, planes and subs could only be tracked with paper and pencil.

In a room deeper inside the mountain, an officer using a green monster kept track of three Soviet submarines in the Norwegian Sea; they showed up as dots with their classification beside them indicating they were capable of carrying nuclear ballistic missiles.

Another officer tracked the Soviets' unmanned MIR space station over Australia.

The sub and missile monitoring area, using satellites with infrared cameras, is at the heart of Cheyenne Mountain's operation, the command post. The trackers work in a temporary facility, slightly larger than the average living room, while a new $178 million command center is being built next door.

To their right are the battle stations, each with red telephones for officers who would help direct America's nuclear war.

When the Soviets launch a missile, the front door of the command center is locked tight. There are no klaxon horns, just the beep-beep-beep of the command network telephone alerting all points that a missile is airborne.

The launch shows up as a triangle on a green monster, with the fan of the triangle showing the missile's general direction.

The commander in chief of NORAD is notified, and he stays on the phone until the missile is considered safe.

In these days of detente, the Soviets usually give U.S. authorities advance notice of launches. Intelligence officials pass the word to Cheyenne Mountain, but sometimes the officers keep it a secret to see how their trackers perform.

In 1979, a technician placed a training tape with missile warning events into a newly installed computer tracking system, and the command center thought the United States was under attack and went on alert, NORAD officials said. Later that year, it happened again when a computer chip failed and began feeding erroneous information into the system, officials reported.

As that system is replaced, Col. Louis A. Kouts, director of space defense and surveillance, said he hopes to avoid the mistakes that were made installing it all at once instead of in segments.

Another problem then was that some of the computers could not exchange information, as needed, NORAD officials said.

Despite GAO criticism of the new system, Doss defended it and said he is trying to do something that has never been done with computers before: save money by using equipment off the shelf rather than getting it specially designed.

"Unfortunately, cost is a factor here. I have to worry about it every day," he said.

Union Leaders Urge Miners To Keep Cool

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOGAN, W.Va. — United Mine Workers leaders are urging striking members to remain peaceful in their efforts to force the Pittston Coal Group Inc. to sign a contract.

About 1,500 UMW members gathered this morning for what had been billed as a rally at a football field. The meeting was moved into Logan Memorial Field House, and union officials barred reporters.

Danny Wells, who becomes a UMW District 17 international board member Saturday, said the miners wanted to discuss certain matters in private. He would not say what those issues were.

Four coal trucks in West Virginia and Virginia have been hit by bullets this week and two others damaged by steel balls fired from slingshots, police said. Striking Pittston employees and wildcat sympathy strikers blocked traffic on coal-hauling roads Thursday. No arrests were reported, but Pittston said a security employee suffered a cut on his head in a confrontation.

"We are doing our best to make sure our people are still in a non-violent frame of mind," said Roger Horton, vice president of UMW Local 5958 in Dehue. "We cannot win with any type of violence."

Horton was an organizer of the meeting today in support of 1,900 union members on strike against Pittston in West Virginia, Virginia and Kentucky.

At Elkem Metals Co. in Alloy this morning, 300 members of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers union walked off the job for half an hour in support of the Pittston strikers.

"We're willing to tolerate it if it's limited to 30 minutes," said Gary Moore, the plant's employee relations manager.

The Pittston workers went on strike peacefully in April after 14 months without a contract. But there have been scattered violent incidents since thousands of union miners in Appalachia and the Midwest went on a wildcat strike in sympathy with the Pittston workers 2½ weeks ago.

Union and coal company officials estimate about 37,000 miners in eight states are on strike, although the start of the traditional summer vacation period this week has made it difficult to determine precise numbers. States affected include Alabama, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Tennessee and West Virginia.

The UMW has not publicly sanctioned the sympathy walkout and has urged wildcatters to go back to work.

The head of West Virginia's third-leading coal producer, frustrated that UMW officials won't answer his phone calls, says he blames the shutdown on the union.

"As far as I'm concerned, I'm for calling this contract null and void right now," said Paul Kiser, president of Beckley-based Maben Energy Corp. "If the union can't live up to its agreement, what good is it?"

Danny Wells, a UMW district spokesman, said Maben Energy remains under contract until 1993.

"Companies haven't been living up to their contracts with the union, either," Wells said. "But we still have an agreement. Mr. Kiser will find that pulling out of his contract will be easier said than done."

The Pittston miners have concentrated on the company's withdrawal from a national contract to win work rule changes it says are necessary to meet competition from foreign producers.

The strike's focus has turned to health benefits in recent days, though. Pittston has refused to contribute to two health plans and two related retirement funds since its contract with the UMW expired in February 1988, court documents show.

The union and the UMW Health and Retirement Funds have filed lawsuits against the company. UMW spokesman John Duray estimates Pittston owes as much as $10 million to the UMW Health and Benefits Fund, a figure Pittston wouldn't confirm, the Charleston Daily Mail reported Thursday.

Documents show that the two health plans spent more money than they earned last year, and the Daily Mail said both funds continue to lose money.

Pittston lawyer John Wood contends Pittston had the right to pull out of the benefit plans when its UMW contract expired in February 1988.

Soviet Veteran Says Subs Ready For Disasters

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — A veteran navy officer said in an article published today that Soviet nuclear submarines are disasters waiting to happen, and he blamed the navy for two recent submarine accidents that killed 42 sailors.

"Construction deficiencies, plus imperfect crew rescue equipment, plus the startling slowness and inertia of the naval agencies in introducing new ideas — such, in my opinion, is the alarming formula of the recent emergencies and tragedies," said Ilya B. Kolton, who served aboard Soviet submarines for 30 years.

He now works as an atomic energy researcher. Ilya, whose comments were published in the Communist Party youth newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda, accused top navy brass of trying to cover up problems in the world's largest submarine fleet.

On Monday, a pipe burst in the cooling system of a reactor aboard an Echo II-class submarine off Norway. No one was hurt, and the Soviets said there was no radiation leak.

On April 7, also off Norway, the Soviet submarine Komsomolets caught fire and sank, and 42 sailors died.

Kolton said the problems he cited were clearly behind both incidents. In an introduction to Kolton's article, Komsomolskaya Pravda noted the warships involved in the recent accidents had not been shot at and added, "The Navy poses a threat in the first place to ourselves."

Kolton, a captain now in the reserve, recounted several accidents or near accidents he said he had survived aboard Soviet nuclear subs, including one aboard the country's first nuclear-powered submarine, the Leninsky Komsomol, in 1962.

Poorly constructed valves designed to shut off the flow of steam from generators in the reactor system malfunctioned, allowing steam to flow into residential compartments. Kolton says a disaster was averted, but doesn't say how.

Western reference books say the ship suffered a reactor meltdown in the 1960s, but it was unclear whether this was the same accident Kolton described.

Prosecutors Say Juror Didn't Lie

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Prosecutors say there is no evidence a juror in the Oliver North trial lied when she gave inaccurate information during jury selection in the Iran-Contra trial.

The prosecutors said in court papers filed Thursday that juror Tara Leigh King failed to disclose that her brother had been convicted in an armed robbery case due to "inattentiveness, forgetfulness or lack of comprehension."

Attorneys for North have asked U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell to throw out the former White House aide's conviction on three felony counts because, they charge, the trial was tainted by Ms. King's presence on the jury.

Gesell had said after a hearing with the former juror Wednesday that he would issue a ruling Thursday, but the judge was tied up with other matters and gave no new indication of when he would rule.

Ms. King testified at Wednesday's hearing that she had forgotten that one of her brothers had served a year in prison for armed robbery.

She was contacted by a police detective in December 1986, was subpoenaed and testified before a grand jury, it was disclosed at a court hearing Wednesday.

Ms. King responded "no" last Feb. 1 when asked on a courtroom questionnaire whether she or any relatives had been involved in court proceedings or an investigation. "There is absolutely no evidence that Ms. King deliberately answered" the questionnaire falsely when being considered for the North jury, prosecutors in the North case said in Thursday's filing.

"Ms. King's testimony ... makes clear," said the prosecutors, that "whether because of inattentiveness, forgetfulness or lack of comprehension, or a combination of the three," the questionnaire "simply failed to trigger in Ms. King's mind her own involvement and the involvement of her brother Sam King in the armed robbery case."

Cigarette Tax Will Fund The Homeless

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — A new penny-a-pack cigarette tax to generate money for the homeless is winning praise from advocates and criticism from the tobacco industry, which says smokers shouldn't pay an undue portion of social programs.

The measure, which raises the cigarette tax on cigarettes one cent to 16 cents a pack, is expected to provide $20 million annually to city-funded homeless shelters.

It takes effect at the end of July and won unanimous approval Wednesday in the City Council.

"Because it is summertime, a lot of people forget about the homeless because they say it's warm outside," said Alderman Luis V. Collier, who co-sponsored the measure. "But this is the perfect time to do this, so we have time to prepare for the winter."

An estimated 35 of the city's 53 shelters will benefit, said Francis Tobin, housing organizer for the Chicago Coalition for the Homeless, a non-profit advocacy group that lobbied heavily for the measure.

"It will mean beds and food, but more importantly it will mean support services in the shelters, like transportation to the welfare office, to job interviews, and housing relocation assistance" for homeless people, Tobin said in a telephone interview Thursday.

The city's homeless are estimated to number between 35,000 and 40,000. That number has increased from about 25,000 just a few years ago due to a lack of affordable housing, Tobin said.

The new tax will "change the way that we look at the homeless" and represents "higher priority solutions rather than just a Band-Aid approach," he said.

A pack of cigarettes in Chicago now has a 61-cent tax: 15 cents to the city, 10 cents to the county, 20 cents to the state and 16 cents to the federal government.

That levy is one of the highest in the nation, and already forces smokers in the city to pay "more than their fair share," said Gary Miller, a spokesman for The Tobacco Institute, a Washington, D.C.-based group that represents U.S. tobacco companies.

"When it comes to public programs such as (Chicago's new measure), the financial burden should be evenly spread across our society," not just imposed on smokers, Miller said. He said he knew of no other similar tax.

Kerrie Wilson, a spokeswoman for the American Cancer Society, said she was unaware of a measure like Chicago's. She said the cancer society generally believes that increasing the cost of cigarettes is a good way to help curb tobacco use, which has been linked to causing some cancers.

Wildlife Grant

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission has received a $25,000 grant from the Wildlife Festival in Easton, Md., for development of waterfowl habitat and boundary lines on the Roanoke River Wetlands.

The Roanoke River Wetlands, 9,108 acres of land managed by the Wildlife Commission as ideal habitat for waterfowl, deer and small game wildlife, are located in Bertie, Halifax and Martin counties. The commission plans to use the grant to supplement state funds to protect the pristine hardwood bottomlands. The project also consists of improving resting and feeding areas for waterfowl.

Lake Cleanup

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Bill Hefner, D-N.C., says the U.S. House has approved legislation which provides for $3.2 million for the cleanup of the Hamlet City Lake.

The money will be used to remove the accumulated silt and debris from Hamlet City Lake and to install silt traps and other equipment to keep any new deposits of sediment from forming. The project will be conducted by the Army Corps of Engineers.

Tanker's Chief Mate Apologizes For Oil Spill Off Rhode Island

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — The chief mate of the Greek tanker that ran aground on Brenton Reef apologized today for the accident that spilled 420,000 gallons of heating oil into Narragansett Bay.

"The only thing I have to say is that the captain is one of the best captains I ever saw on board in the years of my experience on boats," Georgios Vlahos told a federal board of inquiry.

"I am very sorry for this happening. I don't know what else to say. I think it was a very bad time and all else is in your hands," he said.

Vlahos, 27, was granted federal immunity to get him to testify before the Coast Guard-National Transportation Safety Board inquiry into the June 23 accident off Newport. The helmsman also was given immunity.

A grand jury is investigating possible violations of a state law requiring a harbor pilot on board vessels inside a line from Point Judith to Sakkonet Point.

The World Prodigy had no pilot on board when it ran aground inside the area in which the state requires a pilot.

Vlahos said the World Prodigy was on the slowest speed possible, dead slow, when it ran aground. The mate said he had just returned to the bridge and was unsure what the ship's exact speed was or its course in the moments before the accident. He said the captain, Iakovos Georgudis, had made many turns during his approach to Narragansett Bay to avoid small boats in the area.

Re-creating the vessel's course and speed before the accident will be a major part of the investigation, said Richard Johnson, one of two safety board investigators hearing the case.

Georgudis, 43, remained confined aboard ship in lieu of $50,000 bail on federal pollution charges.

On Thursday, a Commerce Department guide, titled "United States Coast Pilot," was entered as evidence at the hearing. The guide advises foreign ships and U.S. vessels on foreign trips that they need to board a pilot outside the line from Point Judith to Sakkonet Point before entering the bay.

But it also says pilots board at the Brenton Reef Light Tower, about 1½ miles inside the line, said Lt. Cmdr. Theo Moniz III of the Coast Guard marine safety office in Providence.

Norman Lidstone, coxswain of the boat that brought pilot David

Leonard to the tanker, said that although most pilots meet their ships 1 to 1½ miles southeast of the tower, some ships whose captains are familiar with the area meet pilots closer to the reef.

At the Rhode Island hearing, Lidstone said the World Prodigy first radioed it was 2½ miles from the rendezvous and confirmed Leonard's account of trying to warn the tanker away from the rocks.

"The next thing I saw was his bow raising out of the water, in slow motion, so to say" as the ship ran aground, Lidstone said.

Lidstone said the World Prodigy "looked like he was closing pretty fast, or faster than normal," but he could not say if it was too fast.

The Coast Guard has estimated cleanup costs at $1.6 million.

This is a dramatized version of facts taken from the Book of Joshua, intending to show some of the customs of these ancient and traditional times.

OTHNIEL'S TRIUMPH

OTHNIEL HAS HAD ALL HIS MEN WHO CARRY BRASS SHIELDS POLISH THEM TO A HIGH SHINE - NOW HE HAS PLACED THE MEN UP ON THE HEIGHTS OPPOSITE THE GIANTS' CITY...

STAND YE THERE - AND, WHEN YOU SEE MY SIGNAL, DO EVEN AS I HAVE COMMANDED OF THEE!

ASA, TAKE THY BEST ARCHERS AND SLINGSHOT MEN, AND PLACE THEM ON THE HIGH GROUND!

THOU SHALT NOT LOOSE AN ARROW NOR A STONE UNTIL THOU HAST SEEN MY COMMAND!

NOW, YE WARRIORS OF JUDAH - FOLLOW ME...!

AND OTHNIEL'S MEN FOLLOW QUICKLY IN THE WAKE OF THEIR LEADER - THE ATTACK HAS BEEN MOUNTED AND THE GIANTS ATOP THE HIGH WALLS AWAIT THEM!

Next Week
THE GIANTS ON THE WALL!

Sgt. Williams, standing, chats with her stepdaughter, Felicia

U.S. Army/Capt. Mike Quinn

Mom Helps To Inprocess Daughter Into The Army

FORT JACKSON, S.C. — Most mothers have to kiss their sons and daughters goodbye on the doorstep when they're off to join the Army. But for Sgt. Beverly Williams, she got to send her daughter off to basic training from the Reception Battalion.

Sgt. Williams is assigned to the 3398th U.S. Army Reception Station performing summer training at Fort Jackson's 120th Adjutant General Battalion. About a month ago she learned that her stepdaughter, Felicia, was scheduled to report for basic training at the same time her unit was to perform two weeks of annual training.

"The people in the initial receiving point notified me about 5 o'clock last Tuesday that she was here," Sgt.

Williams said. "I only got to talk to her for just a few minutes after dinner. She was scared to death. I told her not to worry and to follow orders."

Actually Felicia is not much of a stranger to Army life. She often helped her mother around the Army Reserve Center in Greenville, N.C., where she is serving a tour of duty as a full-time Army Reserve technician. "She helped me a lot with the filing and stuff like that," Sgt. Williams said. "She joined the Army all on her own."

Felicia, 17, joined the N.C. National Guard last fall under the split option program where she will attend basic training here this summer and advanced individual training next summer. She is a rising senior at North Hampton East High School in Rich Square, N.C.

Although she joined the National Guard to become an administrative specialist, she said she hopes to begin a civilian career in psychology when she attends N.C. Central University in Durham, N.C., after she graduates from high school.

"I know she joined the Army for the educational benefits," Sgt. Williams said.

"I have seen her a couple of times around the Reception Battalion for the last couple of days," she said. "It feels funny that I can't touch her or hug her. But that's the rules. She's a private now and I'm a sergeant."

"I did manage to tell her, if mom can go through it, so can you," Sgt. Williams said.

NORWICH, England — Willy Loman strides around his dark kitchen trying to hold onto a single train of thought. "Population is out of control! The competition is maddening! Smell the stink from that apartment house! ... How can they whip cheese?"

Sitting to the side of the stage at the Theatre Royal, Norwich, Arthur Miller studies the scene. The accent may be a shade too Brooklyn, but it's Willy all right. Wonderful how a British actor (Warren Mitchell) bites into a line. Must be all that Shakespeare.

Miller is watching 50 years of his plays flash before his eyes as a theater full of people watch him. The experience has got to be gratifying.

It is also ironic. The original London reviews of "Death of a Salesman" weren't that great. Now it is seen as a masterpiece and Miller finds himself honored as the greatest living playwright on either side of the Atlantic.

Compare his treatment at home. He is respected, of course, but what has he done for us lately? The New York Times didn't like his new one-acts at Lincoln Center, and the Broadway revival of "All My Sons" only ran a few weeks. As the treasurer of a Broadway theater might put it, at the box office he's no Neil Simon.

Which is why he has come to Norwich to inaugurate the Arthur Miller Centre for American Studies at the University of East Anglia and to take part in "An Evening With Arthur Miller," staged by David Thatcher of the Young Vic.

The evening — it sold out the day it was announced — starts with a surprise: a scene from an unpublished, unproduced play that Miller wrote at the University of Michigan in the 1930s, "The Golden Years." It is an epic about Cortez's conquest of Mexico and one is expecting a high-flown student play along Maxwell Anderson lines.

Some of the lines do have the clang of armor, and actors John Shrapnel (Cortez) and Ronald Pickup (Montezuma) let them ring out. But the first interview between the two conquerors is effectively underwritten, with both men keeping to official pleasantries while testing each other for weakness. The untouchable Montezuma's leap backwards when Cortez tries to shake his hand is good theater, even though both actors are carrying a script.

"What did you think of it?" emcee Chris Bigsby asked Miller as the scene ended and the talk-show part of the evening began.

"I was surprised," the playwright answered. "It holds up."

Bigsby is a theater critic and a professor of American studies at the University of East Anglia. He had come up with the idea of the Arthur Miller Centre as a way of dramatizing the value of American Studies in British universities. He also knew what a good guest Miller would make at the Theatre Royal. Brits think that Yanks work too hard at being liked (or, as Willy Loman would say, well-liked). Miller is not that sort of Yank.

At 74, he is dour and laconic, a guy who has learned that you get what you pay for and that you do pay for it. What, Bigsby wanted to know, was the impact of the Crash of 1929 on Miller's family?

"Well ... it ruined them," the playwright said, in his gravel voice. "But it also caused them to look at life more realistically."

Failure will do that. Not so, success. Miller may still be a working writer because — unlike Tennessee Williams or William Inge — he was never granted so much success that he came to believe in it. Something always came along to upset the apple cart, from the Depression to his troubles with the House Committee on Un-American Activities during the 1950s to his comparative critical neglect today. Adversity braced him.

Bigsby asked Miller about the committee after Matthew Marsh and Margot Leicester finished a scene from "The Crucible." Miller recalled how strange it had been to find oneself in the middle of a scene that one had written for the stage. But where the Salem persecutors had thought they were going about God's work, Miller didn't remember much of that in Washington in the '50s. Politics and publicity — that was what the red scare had come down to.

David Calder's and Suzan Silvester's scene from "A View From the Bridge" reminded Miller that somebody had once pointed out to him that each of his plays had a lawyer in it. This surprised Miller, but when he checked, it was true. He guessed that he did believe in the law. In the end, it was all we had.

Miller hadn't come to Norwich with any sort of message for the English people. But having sat through two days of talks at the university about the state of British drama — on stage, on the radio and on TV — he did want to remind his listeners not to blow it.

England had developed a rational theater system, where a playwright could find opportunities to write decent stuff at any level from afternoon radio to the National Theatre of Great Britain; a state-supported theater where it was understood that good plays don't necessarily make the charts or attract the attention of big advertisers on TV.

But — if what Miller had been hearing was true — this theater system was being threatened by the Thatcher government's philosophy that the arts ought to pay their own way: that they would pay their own way if artists would just "give people what they want."

This was precisely the motto of the Broadway theater, Miller pointed out — the theater where "Death of a Salesman" once attracted the kind of serious, thoughtful, un-rich audience that a playwright wanted to speak to. Now Broadway is a trashy midway dominated by one or two overpriced musicals and no serious plays at all.

Meanwhile, American TV and radio become more market-driven every year. In the arts, Miller warned, Gresham's Law prevails as surely as it does in economics. "Bad money drives out good."

"Theater in New York is dead, kaput," Miller said. That was the bottom line of it, and that was what happened when theater became so privatized (a favorite word in England just now) that only a show that could provide its investors a quick return could survive.

"Don't be seduced into thinking that that which does not make a profit is without value," Miller told the crowd at the dinner in his honor after the show. "We all know that people who know the price of everything but the value of nothing are impoverished."

Meanwhile, back in London, an M.P. was arguing that it was stupid to preserve the ruins of an Elizabethan theater, the Rose, at the expense of a new office building. It could happen here.

Lynn Sentenced

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Ernest Lynn, the son of country music star Loretta Lynn, has been sentenced to five days in jail for failure to pay child support.

Attorney Rose Palermo, who was sitting in for Circuit Judge Muriel Robinson, gave the sentence Wednesday, even though Lynn paid $2,695 in back child support earlier that morning.

Palermo cited the 36-year-old Lynn for contempt of court for consistently ignoring his obligation to support his 7-year-old son by the second of his four wives, Marla Kay Heard Lynn.

Some People Treat Single Adults As Children

Abigail Van Buren

Dear Abby: Thanks for your letter regarding the grandparents who failed to buckle up their grandbabies in their car seats. Parents have to get tough and absolutely insist that their little ones are buckled up whenever they ride in a car.

My smart daughter and her husband solved that problem by training their child to insist on being buckled up. My 3-year-old grandson said to me, "Grandma, you can't go yet because you haven't buckled me up!"

Train the children to demand to be buckled up. — Peggy S. Hendrick, Springfield, Mo.

Dear Peggy: Hooray for a great suggestion. Little ones are always taking orders — what a treat for them to be able to give one. Thanks for giving several million people a lifesaving idea.

Readers, instruct your little ones to demand to be buckled up — or nobody goes anywhere.

Dear Abby: The vacation season brings to mind an experience I had on consecutive trips to Europe several years ago.

The first trip, in France, the night before the bus driver was to leave our tour group (which was flying to another city), the tour guide had some bad news: The driver's room had been burglarized, and all his money stolen! The people on our two-week tour had a meeting, and everyone agreed to double his tip.

The next year, in Greece, different tour guide, different driver, same bad luck before departure. Different, but sympathetic tourists. All except one. Just call me ... Cynical In Los Angeles Confidential To Golden Gate Girl: The man who is forever talking about what a great man he is with the ladies is usually doing what he does best — talking.

Dear Abby: A recent letter expressing concern regarding the manner in which a wedding invitation had been issued prompts me to write you about my objection to the way singles are often treated in that regard.

We have two sons, both past 35 and professional men, who are happily unmarried and have their own homes in cities many miles from ours.

Invitations for weddings, graduations and other occasions, as well as Christmas cards, often come to us with their names tacked on as if they were still children. Anyone who does not have their addresses could obtain them with a simple phone call. Instead, we seem to be expected to call them long-distance or write to them to relay the invitation or greeting. They, in turn, have made it a practice not to attend any function when invited in this manner.

On one family occasion they were seated at the "children's table" because they were unmarried!

Their grandmother excluded them from her magazine gift subscription list, saying, "That is only for the married ones. They can read yours." (No mention was made of the miles between us.)

Are single adults being treated in this manner for the purpose of saving the cost of an additional acknowledgment and postage stamp, or is it merely thoughtlessness on the part of the sender? Or are singles not considered valid social entities by some?

Abby, please let your readers know that single adults are indeed adults and should be treated in an adult manner. — Steamed In The Midwest

Dear Steamed: You just did. And I couldn't have said it better. Thanks for writing.

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Problems Can Occur On Vacation

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — A broken filling, loose crown, or painful, chipped or fractured tooth sends most people running to their dentist. But what do you do if you're on vacation without nearby dental care?

"No homemade remedy can ever substitute for the professional attention of a qualified dentist," said dentist Brooks Morgan. "In a pinch, though, when you have no alternative, these helpful hints might come in handy."

—For a broken filling, rub the cavity with clove oil. Don't fill it with candle wax or chewing gum.

—A bonding compound able to hold a loose crown in place for a day can be made by mixing petroleum jelly and flour.

—Take aspirin, acetaminophen or another aspirin substitute for toothaches. If you have swelling as well as pain, rinse your mouth regularly with salt water. Apply an ice pack, or even a cold can of soda.

Don't apply aspirin directly to the tooth because it can permanently damage the nerve.

—Rinse your mouth with warm water if you chip or break a tooth. Don't try to file the tooth, and don't use glue to try to save it.

—Use wet gauze immediately to wrap a tooth that has been knocked out. Get to a dentist quickly and it might be saved.

Body's Effort To Fight Malaria Apparently Triggers Symptoms

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Anemia, the loss of red blood cells that can kill people who suffer malaria, is largely caused by the body's attempt to defend itself against the infectious disease, research on mice suggests.

The Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory study indicates overstimulation of part of the immune system also is partly responsible for other malaria symptoms, like death of kidney tissue, clogging of blood vessels in the brain, and eventual suppression of the immune system.

The discovery could lead to better understanding of malaria and a new treatment against it: use of antibodies against the "tumor necrosis factor," or TNF, that helps cause the anemia and other symptoms, researchers said.

At least 100 million new cases of malaria are reported annually, and about 1.5 million victims die each year. The disease, which destroys vital red blood cells, is caused by a parasite called Plasmodium. The female Anopheles mosquito carries the parasite in its saliva.

TNF is produced in the body to help defend against disease and promote healing, and is being used as an experimental anti-cancer therapy. But Paul Silverman, Kathleen Miller and other Lawrence Berkeley scientists showed that anemia in malaria can be mostly reversed by giving infected mice an antibody against TNF.

The study also suggests TNF may play a role in causing chronic anemia seen in patients with other infectious diseases and certain cancers, Silverman said.

Malaria-causing parasites also destroy red blood cells, but previous studies found that such destruction alone fails to explain the severity and extent of anemia in malaria patients. Earlier studies also found that another immune system chemical, interleukin-1, plays a role in causing anemia in those patients.

The studies may explain why giving infected mice antibodies against TNF failed to completely reverse the loss of red blood cells.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined broadly today in selling blamed on spreading recession worries.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 73.60 points in the week's first four sessions, dropped another 22.76 to 2,435.51 in the first half hour of trading today.

Losers outnumbered gainers by 5 to 2 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 248 up, 633 down and 535 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 31.23 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

The market has been under pressure since the government reported Wednesday that the index of leading economic indicators posted a larger-than-expected 1.2 percent decline in May.

More evidence of a dropoff in business activity came this morning with the news of a 2.5 percent drop in new factory orders in the same month.

Until recently, Wall Street has been welcoming news of slower growth in hopes of a "soft landing" that would allow for reduced inflation and lower interest rates without much harm to corporate profits.

But in the past few days, analysts say, investors have begun to look more closely at the possibility that the Federal Reserve might not be able to pull off that tricky mission.

As evidence, they noted that stocks in the past couple of days have not responded favorably to continuing declines in open-market money rates.

Losers among the blue chips included Philip Morris, down 1 at 139; American Telephone & Telegraph, down 1/4 at 35 3/4; General Electric, down 1/2 at 52, and International Business Machines, down 1/2 at 111.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks fell 1.98 to 176.77. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 1.99 at 358.62.

On Thursday the Dow Jones industrial average tumbled 46.47 points to 2,458.27, for its biggest drop since it lost 48.57 points on March 17.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 5 to 1 on the NYSE, with 263 up, 1,317 down and 388 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 167.10 million shares, against 158.47 million in the previous session.

negotiating peace in the Mideast. But he said only America can bring the Arabs and Israelis together and the present situation offers the best time for negotiations.

Eilts also said the United States, although it has spent nearly $100 billion in the region since the Truman administration, needs to present a more balanced approach to dealings with the Arab world because of a perception of favoritism of the Israelis.

Eilts lauded efforts on the part of the Bush administration so far, but he warned against complacency.

"What is needed is a greater willingness to accelerate the peace movement. What worries me a little bit," Eilts said, "is a lack of a sense of urgency."

A general lack of knowledge about the Arab world also worries and frustrates Eilts.

"The products that are coming from our secondary schools, even those working in Arab affairs ... I'm appalled at the lack of knowledge," Eilts said.

The lack of knowledge and false impressions of the Mideast will only be corrected through education, Eilts said. He said the problem extends to other regions of the world, and needs the same corrections.

"We do live in a world of greater interdependence," Eilts said.

Eilts said he hoped President Bush would continue efforts to reach out to the Arab world. "I hope that by the end of the year we will be in a negotiating posture," Eilts said.

But he warned that peace in the region and security for the United States would not come quickly or easily.

"There is no fun being between the Arabs and Israelis," Eilts said.

reports of violence during or after the coup.

Traffic was banned on bridges spanning the White Nile and the Blue Nile, but the capital of 2 million appeared otherwise normal for the Moslem sabbath. No celebrations or demonstrations were evident.

Omdurman Radio went off the air early today but resumed transmissions at 8 a.m. with martial music.

"The June revolution has come to restore to the Sudanese citizen his injured dignity and rebuild the Sudan of the future," the agency quoted the radio as saying.

The Middle East News Agency said the coup leaders banned political opposition and political gatherings and would issue all major legislative and executive decrees. Its chairman is to serve as prime minister, defense minister and armed forces commander-in-chief, it said.

things will be happening pretty quickly."

Uzzell suggested that this season is not much different than the past few. "The past few seasons have been extended later," because of "drought, cool weather. We will probably remain sort of late."

"But so much can happen weather-wise between here and there," Uzzell said. "There are still a lot of things that can happen, both positively and negatively. I imagine we'll remain on the late side, but it shouldn't necessarily be an adverse type of thing."

In other action, the committee set up a random inspection program to halt the practice of nesting, or hiding inferior quality tobacco under better leaf.

Nesting is a practice that Bond said was limited to a few farmers, yet he said there was concern that it could have a serious impact on attempts to market American tobacco overseas.

To eliminate the illegal practice, Bond said random inspections will be held on all warehouse floors and on all belts.

Two types of tobacco are affected by the inspections, according to Bond. The first, referred to as first sale or grower tobacco, falls under

McEnroe Struggles In Win Garrison, Sabatini Are Eliminated At Wimbledon

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WIMBLEDON, England — Grass court experts are struggling or gone. Young clay court stars are playing on grass like old hands. Unknown players are posting upsets, strawberry prices go up and down and rain and sun alternate as sure as night follows day.

The first four days of Wimbledon had all the usual thrills and spills, but trying to find a pattern is impossible.

Take Thursday, for example. One day after Jimmy Connors bowed out in the second round — only the third time he had exited so early in 18 years — he almost was joined on the sidelines by John McEnroe.

McEnroe, a three-time champion, struggled for the second successive time before booking a berth in the last 32 of the men's singles.

The 30-year-old New Yorker, who needed five sets to oust Australia's Darren Cahill in the first round, had to battle for another four to dispatch Richey Reneberg, an American ranked 106th in the world, 6-3, 3-6, 6-3, 7-5.

It took him almost three hours and included a warning for racket abuse at the start of the third set, when he dropped his serve by double-faulting. The fifth-seeded McEnroe served eight double-faults, making 24 in two matches.

While McEnroe just survived, another seasoned grass-courtier, No. 5 women's seed Zina Garrison, was eliminated.

Garrison, one of the few players who had been expected to threaten favorites Steffi Graf and Martina Navratilova, lost 1-6, 6-2, 7-5 in the second round to little-known Australian Louise Field.

Field led 5-0 in the final set but almost blew her chance when she lost the next five games. She gathered her concentration, broke Garrison's serve and wrapped up the biggest victory of her career on her fifth match point.

"I just thought, if I play well, I mean, she's only human," said Field, ranked 121st in the world. "I didn't really think about what was going to happen."

While grass-courtiers like Garrison and McEnroe had problems, the teen-age clay court clan continued to confound predictions.

Arantxa Sanchez, the 17-year-old French Open champion who once thought grass was for cows and didn't win a match here in 1987 or 1988, charged into the third round by beating Julie Halard of France in straight sets.

Mary Joe Fernandez, another teen-age baseliner, did the same at the expense of Louise Allen, while Natalia Zvereva of the Soviet Union ousted big-serving Eva Pfaff.

But as usual in this topsy-turvy tournament, there was the exception to the rule. Gabriela Sabatini, the third seed but more at home on clay, was stunned 6-4, 6-3 by Rosalyn Fairbank of South Africa in the day's biggest upset.

A few things were more predictable but even they wobbled out of shape for a while.

Chris Evert, who has failed only once to reach the semifinals in 17 years at Wimbledon, beat Hu Na of the United States 7-5, 6-3 in the second round. She had to fight back from a 5-1 first-set deficit and save four set points to do it.

And Pam Shriver, an archtypical grass-court player, needed an 8-6 third set to put out Briton Sara Gomer.

McEnroe didn't quite have to go into a final set against Reneberg — and he may not have survived if he had.

"I'm glad it didn't go to a fifth set," said McEnroe, who again had no consistency on his serve and lacked his old speed. "That would have been a little bit more difficult.

I'm not feeling that I'm playing my best."

McEnroe began well enough, dropping only six points on serve in the opening set. But once Reneberg raised his game, danger loomed.

Reneberg won five straight games as he grabbed the second set and moved up 2-0 in the third. McEnroe rallied to take the set, still not serving at his peak, but then found himself on the brink of a fifth set as his opponent moved up 5-2 in the fourth.

Now McEnroe played his best tennis, returning serve with a flurry of passes. He ripped through the last five games of the match and finished with a low cross-court backhand.

"Like I said the other day, there is a lot of pressure here," McEnroe said. "That's why it's such a difficult tournament."

It was pretty difficult for No. 2 Martina Navratilova on Thursday. Seeking a record ninth Wimbledon championship, Navratilova was tied with Kristine Radford of Australia 6-3, 3-6. The match then was halted by darkness and carried over to today.

Men's defending champion Stefan Edberg of Sweden, the second seed, led Todd Woodbridge of Australia 6-4, 6-4, 1-6 when the match was stopped.

Chris Washburn Banned By NBA

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — An NBA official said the league won't abandon Atlanta Hawk Chris Washburn after his third drug infraction made him the sixth player banned from the league, but Washburn's team said it doesn't expect him back.

As a three-time violator, the former North Carolina State star was banned for life Thursday, although he can appeal after two years. His contract is terminated, which means he loses at least $1.6 million.

He technically remains Hawks' property, but Hawks President Stan Kasten said Thursday: "That's small consolation for what's happened to Chris. Frankly, we're not counting on having him back."

The league gave no details Thursday except to call it his "third violation."

The center-forward was suspended without pay by the NBA on Sept. 26, 1988, after a substance-abuse relapse and was returned to the league's rehabilitation center in Van Nuys, Calif. He did not play last season.

Gary Bettman, counsel for the NBA, said at the time that Washburn had received a "second strike" under the league's substance-abuse program, but he would not reveal what Washburn had done.

Washburn became the sixth player banned for life since the NBA drug policy was approved five years ago. Others were: John Drew of the Hawks and Utah Jazz; Micheal Ray Richardson of the New Jersey Nets; Lewis Lloyd and Mitchell Wiggins of the Houston Rockets, and Duane Washington of the New Jersey Nets.

Bettman said Washburn's problem was complying with requirements of rehabilitation.

"We've offered him the opportunity to come back into treatment. His agent, William McCandless, has been advised that the ban has been imposed. If Chris wants treatment, the league will provide it. We will not abandon him," Bettman said.

Washburn's college coach, Jim Valvano, said he was surprised and disappointed by the news.

"I'm also very, very concerned with Chris, himself. I'm hoping he gets the help he needs," Valvano said. "He certainly seemed to be getting himself together when I saw him."

Washburn apparently has been away from or has moved out of his home in north Atlanta. His doctors and counselors declined to comment on his case.

Kasten informed league officials a month ago that Washburn was in an Atlanta treatment facility.

Washburn apparently had been released because Kasten said he had a strange meeting with Washburn outside his CNN Center office recently.

"He was on his way to see his girlfriend who works in a bank. He was very friendly, asked me how I was. I said, 'Chris, never mind me, how are you?' He said he was doing great. He said: 'I'll be back next season, Stan. I'll be ready.' Of course, that was slightly ridiculous."

Kasten has said he did not know if Washburn relapsed into abuse, but he said he knew Washburn violated terms of his rehabilitation program.

Washburn first confessed to cocaine abuse problems during the 1986-87 season, while he was with the Golden State Warriors, who drafted him third overall in 1986.

Post 39 Drops To Third After 'Losing' Three Games

Snow Hill Bombs Pitt County, 16-6; Wins Over Rocky Mount, Kinston Voided By Commissioner's Ruling

The Daily Reflector/Shannon Wolfe

Snow Hill's Walt McKeel (21) high-fives after second homer

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Talk about a rude awakening! Pitt County's American Legion baseball team went to bed in the wee hours Thursday morning, the players and coaches dreaming about playing Snow Hill for the regular season championship Thursday night.

"It was like we woke up in the sunshine and by game time, it was pouring rain," Coach Grant Jarman said after learning that two supposed victories had been snatched from Post 39 in less than 24 hours.

And then Snow Hill turned the dream into a nightmare Thursday night, ripping Pitt County, 16-6.

The trouble started Wednesday night when Pitt County's game with Rocky Mount was called in the middle of the eighth inning. Rocky Mount, which went into the inning trailing, 7-6, had taken a 9-7 lead in the top of the eighth before the officials finally called the game due to rain.

Pitt considered it a victory for itself, the score reverting back to the 7-6 score since it did not have a chance to bat in the eighth. But no one remembered that the baseball rules had been changed a couple of years ago. Now, in games where the visiting team takes the lead in the top of an inning halted by rain, the score no longer reverts to the end of the previous inning. Instead, it becomes a suspended game, to be completed later in the season.

Of course, in this instance, with the season ending Thursday night, there was no time to complete the game, so it was wiped from the standings.

In addition, the Area One commissioner ruled that Pitt County's forfeit victory over Kinston, in a game postponed Saturday night, would not be counted. "We went from being 11-5 to being 9-5 in the space of just a couple of hours," Jarman said. "We were not given any explanation as to why we didn't get the forfeit." Kinston was forfeited out of the league when it failed to turn in birth certificate information by June 20. Although the ruling didn't come down until after that time, initial information was that games scheduled after that date would be forfeited to the other team.

Then, by the time Walt McKeel and company had finished with Pitt in Thursday night's game, Post 39 had gone from being a contender for first to being stuck in third place and having to open Area One East playoff action tonight while Rocky Mount gets the second place bye. The Rocky Mount team, after escaping the loss went to 10-6, while Pitt, after the loss to Snow Hill, fell to 9-6.

McKeel, who started the game on the mound for the Post 94 team, went the first five plus innings before giving way to relief. Through the first five innings, he held Pitt in check without a run while hitting

Martin Captures Pole For Pepsi 400

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Mark Martin will start Saturday's Pepsi 400 in a familiar place — first.

Martin won his fifth pole position of the year in qualifying Thursday, but he still seeks his first Winston Cup victory.

"There's no sense of frustration," he said, "because our team knows that all we have to do is continue what we're doing, and it's going to come to us. ... We don't expect to luck into one of these things. We expect to race into it."

Martin averaged 191,861 mph in his qualifying lap on the 2.5-mile tri-oval at Daytona International Speedway. The 30-year-old driver from Batesville, Ark., is one of NASCAR's rising stars, but the best finishes his Ford has managed this year are one second and two thirds.

"Those races fade away," he said. "We hardly even remember those. We keep looking forward. ..."

"The team deserves to get to victory lane, and we're going to get there soon."

Bill Elliott, who won last year's race after starting 38th in a 42-car field, qualified at 191.026 mph and will start alongside Martin in the front row. Elliott won last Sunday's Miller American 400 at Michigan International Speedway to end a 19-race winless streak.

"We're back running competitively, and that's where we need to be," he said.

Veteran Harry Gant, 49, was third fastest at 190.046 mph.

"That's the quickest we've run since we've been here," he said. "We're looking for a good run on Saturday."

Neil Bonnett was next at 189.645, followed by Ken Schrader at 189.370 and Brett Bodine at 189.310.

Speeds were lower than in February, when Schrader won the Daytona 500 pole at 193.823. To slow the cars, NASCAR has reduced the size of the carburetor restrictor plate required at Daytona.

"Some guys have figured out these plates, and some haven't," said Geoff Bodine, who qualified 12th.

Last year's pole winner, Darrell Waltrip, qualified 14th with a lap of 186.893 that he described as "terminally slow." Dale Earnhardt, who leads this year's Winston Cup standings, was one place ahead of Waltrip at 187.017.

"It really takes a lot of work to get an engine to run quick here," Earnhardt said.

Thursday's session decided the first 20 cars. The remainder of the field was to be determined in qualifying today.

Rowsom Signs Multi-Year Hornet Pact

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The Charlotte Hornets signed forward Brian Rowsom to a multi-year contract Thursday, vice president and General Manager Carl Scheer announced.

"We are delighted to have Brian with us for the future," Scheer said. "His role with our team is also unlimited as we develop. His physical strength has increased and his dedication gives him a very promising future with the Hornets."

Terms of the agreement were not announced.

The 6-foot-10 native of Columbia, N.C., was a second-round draft pick of Indiana in 1987 and played in four games for the Pacers before being released. He was drafted out of North Carolina-Wilmington, where he is the school's all-time leading scorer.

Rowsom played in 34 games for Charlotte last season, averaging 6.6 points and 4.0 rebounds. He broke a bone in his left foot in the sixth game and missed more than half the season.

"I've always thought that if I worked hard, I could play in the NBA," Rowsom said. "I'm excited that the coaches and organization see my potential and I am working very hard to improve so I can make my best contribution to the team next season."

ESPN Says Finks Next Commissioner

NEW YORK (AP) — National Football League owners will meet on July 6 in Chicago to elect a new commissioner, the league said Thursday.

Meanwhile, ESPN reported that New Orleans Saints president and general manager Jim Finks had the necessary two-thirds majority of owners' votes to get the job.

The owners will be voting on a successor to Pete Rozelle, who announced his resignation on March 22 but has stayed on pending the election of his successor. Rozelle has been commissioner since January 1960.

A selection committee has been interviewing candidates for the job.

On Thursday night, ESPN reported that Finks has the necessary votes for election and that his name will be the only one on the ballot when it is presented to the 28 owners.

ESPN also said that Jack Kemp, the secretary of housing and urban development in the Bush Administration, withdrew from consideration earlier this week. The network said the NFL would not meet Kemp's terms for accepting the job.

Earlier this month, Kemp refused to be interviewed for the position, but he did not withdraw from consideration.

An NFL spokesman said the league would have no comment on ESPN's report.

Two Make All-Conference In Soccer

Sarah Irons and Elizabeth Myers of Rose High School have been selected to the Big East All-Conference soccer team, selected by the conference coaches.

Irons, a freshman, played on defense for Rose, while Myers, a junior, was a midfielder.

Hunt, which won the league title, dominated selections with five named to the team, including Player of the Year, Ginger Petty.

Tickets Going Fast For Southern 500

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip will be going for the Winston Million at the Southern 500 — and it seems that a lot of people want to be on hand to watch.

Since Waltrip won the Coca-Cola 600 in late May to earn a shot at the $1 million bonus, tickets have been selling well for the Southern 500 on Sept. 3 at Darlington Raceway.

"The day after Waltrip won at Charlotte we had to bring in two extra people into the ticket office just to keep up with the demand," raceway President Woody McKay said. "I guess everybody wants to be a part of one of the biggest paydays in sports."

"We are close to selling out. There are some good seats left, but we have already sold all of the $35 seats. We will probably sell out completely about 30 days prior to the race."

In order to claim the elusive Winston Million, a NASCAR Winston Cup driver must win three of the Big Four races — the Daytona 500, Winston 500, Coca-Cola 600 and Southern 500. Waltrip has already won at Daytona and Charlotte — earning a $100,000 bonus from R.J. Reynolds. A victory at Darlington would give him the $1 million bonus.

When Waltrip makes his run at the cash, it will mark the second time in five years the Winston Million has been up for grabs. Bill Elliott came to Darlington needing one more victory in 1985 — the first year R.J. Reynolds posted the award money — to earn the $1 million. He got it by beating Cale Yarborough to the finish line.

Preparations for the anticipated big weekend are already under way. McKay said the chief concern is to get the seating in order.

"We will try to get all the seating down and make sure every seat is in order," he said. "The seating pretty much remains the same all year. I don't foresee us putting in any temporary seating because we don't really have any good locations."

Nerves Same; Results Differ

Cummings Hurls Victory But Dyer Gets Bombed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The feelings were similar but the results vastly different for two pitchers making their first major-league starts.

"I'd be lying if I said I wasn't nervous," Toronto's Steve Cummings said after limiting Baltimore to a run and six hits in seven innings as the Blue Jays beat the Orioles 11-1 Thursday night.

"I was pretty tight," Minnesota's Mike Dyer confessed after lasting only two-plus innings and yielding six runs and six hits in the Twins' 10-3 loss to the California Angels.

Elsewhere in the American League, it was Chicago 12, Kansas City 5; Seattle 2, Texas 0; New York 7, Detroit 6, and Boston 2, Milwaukee 1. Oakland and Cleveland were not scheduled.

The Blue Jays backed Cummings with a season-high 19 hits in snapping a four-game losing streak. The victory enabled Toronto to salvage the finale of the three-game series with the AL East leaders and avoid being swept in Baltimore for the first time since September 1982.

Manny Lee, Junior Felix, Ernie Whitt and George Bell each had three hits and Tony Fernandez drove in three runs. He hit a two-run double in Toronto's tie-breaking, five-run fourth inning and drove in another in a four-run fifth with a groundout.

Baltimore starter Dave Schmidt faced five batters in the fourth without retiring any of them and was charged with six runs. Jose Bautista went the rest of the way, yielding five runs and seven hits. The 19 hits were the most against Baltimore this season and the 11 runs tied a season high for Oriole opponents.

Felix, Bell and Kelly Gruber each drove in two runs. Bell had a two-run single in the fourth, Felix had RBI singles in the fourth and fifth, and Gruber hit a two-run homer, his ninth, in the fifth.

"Every pitcher feels good when he gets a big inning, but it was especially nice in this situation," said Cummings, who settled down after yielding a first-inning run. "The first inning was a little shaky, but after that I said, 'Just pitch.' I think I threw the ball well. I was happy with my performance."

Angels 10, Twins 3
California climbed within one-half game of division-leading Oakland in the AL West as Brian Downing had four hits and four RBIs and Mike Witt pitched eight innings for his third consecutive victory.

Johnny Ray and Tony Armas had three hits apiece in the Angels' 16-hit attack that snapped Minnesota's four-game winning streak. Downing broke open a 2-1 game in the third inning with a two-run single that keyed a four-run uprising.

"I was really missing and I couldn't get ahead in the count," Dyer said. Downing also walked and scored in the second inning, singled and scored in the fifth, doubled a run home in the sixth and hit his eighth home run in the ninth. It was California's 11th home run in the last six games. Tim Laudner homered for Minnesota.

The victory was California's fifth in sixth games and broke a string of six straight losses to West Division teams.

The Angels loaded the bases in the third on Ray's single, Devon White's double and a walk to Wally Joyner. Downing's two-run single made it 4-1 and Francisco Olivera relieved Dyer. One out later, Armas and Jack Howell added RBI singles.

Downing's four hits raised his average to .308. He is hitting .351 in June.

"He's really been terrific," Manager Doug Rader said. "He's been driving in some big runs. He sets a fine example."

White Sox 12, Royals 5
Ozzie Guillen and Dave Gallagher hit two-run doubles in a tie-breaking, seven-run sixth inning, Chicago's biggest of the year. Winner Melido Perez, who came into the game with an ERA of 6.26, yielded six hits and four runs, three earned, in 7 2-3 innings.

The first five runs in the Chicago sixth were charged to Terry Leach after Bret Saberhagen pitched the first five innings. Greg Walker, a .194 hitter, drove in two runs with a homer and double for Chicago and Carlton Fisk also had two RBIs with a sacrifice fly and single that broke a 3-3 tie.

After Kansas City tied the score 3-3 in the top of the sixth on Bo Jackson's sacrifice fly, Harold Baines greeted Leach with a single. One out later, singles by Dan Pasqua and Fisk put the White Sox ahead and Walker's double made it 5-3.

After an intentional walk to Eddie Williams, Tom Gordon relieved and surrendered two-run doubles to Guillen and Gallagher and an RBI single to Steve Lyons. George Brett homered for Kansas City, his first since April 19.

Mariners 2, Rangers 0
Scott Bankhead held Texas to three singles in eight innings and Darnell Coles went 3-for-4 with an RBI. Bankhead, who won his fourth straight decision, didn't walk a batter and struck out four before giving way to Mike Schooler.

Texas' Charlie Hough gave up 11 hits, all singles. Seattle took a 1-0 lead in the second inning on singles by Ken Griffey Jr. and Coles plus Scott Bradley's sacrifice fly. The Mariners added a run in the fourth on singles by Jeffrey Leonard and Griffey and Coles' squeeze bunt, which went for a hit.

Yankees 7, Tigers 6
New York snapped a nine-game losing streak in Detroit as Steve Balboni and Roberto Kelly homered and Steve Sax singled home the tie-breaking run in the sixth inning.

The Tigers had beaten the Yankees nine straight in Tiger Stadium since Aug. 8, 1987. The nine-game losing streak tied the Yankees' record for consecutive setbacks in Detroit set in 1912 when the stadium was known as Navin Field.

Winner Eric Plunk, the second of five Yankee pitchers, worked two innings, allowing two hits and an unearned run. Dave Righetti retired Fred Lynn on a liner to center with the bases loaded to end the Tigers' eighth and allowed one hit in the ninth for his 14th save.

With the score tied 5-5, Alvaro Espinoza doubled with one out in the Yankees' sixth against Edwin Nunez, just up from the minors. Espinoza took third on an infield hit by Kelly and scored on Sax's single. Kelly went to third and scored what proved to be the decisive run on Luis Polonia's grounder.

Both starters, New York's Dave LaPoint and Detroit's Frank Tanana, allowed five runs.

Red Sox 2, Brewers 1
Rich Gedman doubled home the tie-breaking run in the seventh inning and John Dopson and Lee Smith combined for a six-hitter as Boston snapped a three-game losing streak. Mike Greenwell's single, a sacrifice and Nick Esasky's infield hit preceded Gedman's double off loser Cris Bosio.

The Brewers took a 1-0 lead in the third on Gary Sheffield's RBI grounder. Boston tied it in the fourth on a walk to Jody Reed and Danny Heep's double.

Dopson allowed six hits in 7 1-3 innings and Smith got the last five outs for his ninth save. Bosio finished with a six-hitter.

He was admitted voluntarily to the league's treatment center Jan. 28, 1987 and received full pay.

He returned to the team March 23, saying he "had the life of a cocaine addict, and it's nothing I want to go back to."

Washburn, a 6-foot-11 center-forward, was acquired by the Hawks on Dec. 15, 1987, in exchange for the rights to forward Ken Barlow. Washburn played 174 minutes in 29 games for the Hawks, averaging 2 points. He was benched during the playoffs.

Washburn left N.C. State after his sophomore season to turn pro. In college, Washburn's troubles included a suspension after being arrested for the theft of a stereo. A former department head at the school, Richard Lauffer, also contended earlier this year that Washburn's grades were changed on his transcript — an allegation denied by the school.

Green Has New Approach

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MONTREAL — Common sense — not do! — wizards and gurus — is responsible for Tammie Green's new mental approach to golf.

"I just try to think of staying relaxed, if that's possible," Green said Thursday after a round of 68 that left her one stroke off Betsy King's lead in the du Maurier Classic.

King, seeking her fifth victory of the year, shot 5-under-par 67 over the 6,261-yard Beaconsfield Golf Club to take the lead in the $600,000 tournament, richest of the season on the LPGA tour.

Green said an inability to relax was the main reason she is still seeking a first victory on the tour. In the past, she tried to force the ball into the hole and found it unresponsive to coercion.

"I started doing this last week," she said of psyching herself up to relax. She finished 11th at Wilmington, Del., last week, a tournament that was won by King.

"I was playing well, but then we had rain delays and I lost my concentration. Now I've tried to get myself up for it again," Green said. "It doesn't make any sense, but you have to get yourself up to stay relaxed."

The Zanesville, Ohio native overcame bumpy greens and gusting winds on the back nine on Thursday.

After breezing through the front nine at 5-under, she bogeyed the par-3 13th but got the stroke back on the 16th with an impressive 8-iron shot two feet from the hole for birdie. A three-putt on 18 cost her a share of the lead.

"The attitude I have this week is to stick to my rule: Stay relaxed," said the 29-year-old Green said. "Hopefully, I can maintain what I've got going."

The closest Green has come to winning was in the 1988 Sara Lee Classic, when she lost a four-way playoff to Patti Rizzo.

It will take more than attitude to beat King, the leading money-winner this year with $365,986.

King's putter was sharp again, with a 20-foot birdie putt on the 10th and a 10-footer for birdie on the 12th.

"I've hit the ball a lot better and scored worse," King said of her round. "I wasn't like I wasn't playing well, but I was making my putts."

Nine players were tied at 3-under 69, including three-time champion Pat Bradley, who won the du Maurier when it was last held at Beaconsfield in 1985.

Bradley said unpredictable winds off the elevated tees made the back nine tougher than did the winter kill that has left several greens bare of grass.

Bradley was five under at the turn but lost two strokes on the back side.

Also at 69 were 1983 champion Hollis Stacey, Patty Sheehan, Jane Geddes, Deb Richard, Meg Mallon, Alice Ritzman, Kristi Albers and Lynn Adams.

Old Clubs Spark Boydston

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LIGONIER, Pa. — Frank Boydston isn't sure of his handicap, and his golf clubs are so old and beat-up that the numbers have been erased.

But Boydston also has himself among the leaders after the first round of the U.S. Seniors Open Golf Championship.

Boydston got there with a first-round 69 that included a double bogey on the final hole. The man who is sitting one shot back of leader Al Geiberger doesn't know what he's doing in such company.

"I've had my day. Now I'll step aside. I'm so far over my head here I can't explain it," he said.

Nor can Boydston state his handicap — "Two or three," he said.

Boydston fashioned his 69 with clubs that most of his fellow amateurs wouldn't want to use.

"I did some grinding on them when I got 'em, about 20 years ago," he said, "and I kept grinding and the numbers are gone."

"Sometimes I'm pretty slow to pull a club," said Boydston, who owns a "couple of small restaurants around Phoenix. The slowest-growing chain in the country. They're real rustic. We serve beer in mason jars and use tuna fish cans for ashtrays and sit on boxes."

Geiberger, who went past Boydston when he put a birdie-birdie finish on a 4-under-par 68, was almost as low-key about the lead as Boydston was about his round.

"With three rounds to go, you don't even think of it as leading," said Geiberger, who set the PGA Tour's single-round scoring record with a 59 in 1977.

"Just like everybody else, I was just trying to get a good opening round. Then I stole a couple of birdies there at the end."

"That's all you want to do, get off to a good start and stay in touch with the leaders, not have a high number and then spend the rest of the week trying to repair it," Geiberger said.

North State Tournament Champs

The Lions captured the North State Little League Tournament championship this summer. Pepsi-Cola spotted the Lions a 1-0 lead in the top of the first inning, then stormed back to take a 6-1 victory and win the City Little League Championship, two games to none, Thursday evening.

Pepsi had won the first game of the best-of-three series, 8-7, on Wednesday.

After the Lions had scored what was to be their only run in the top of the first, Pepsi came roaring back with five in the bottom of the frame to take the lead for good. Todd MacKenzie walked as did Jason Howard. Geoff Stallings followed with a double, scoring MacKenzie and Damian Phillips got a hit to score Howard. C.J. Wilder then doubled in both Stallings and Phillips, later scoring on an error himself.

Pepsi added another run in the fourth to finish off the scoring.

Phillips went the distance for the win, allowing three hits while he walked two and struck out 10. Scott Briley was the loser, allowing eight hits, walking two and striking out one.

Wilder, Buddy Ross and Stallings each picked up two hits for Pepsi while Trabien Shivers had a pair for the Lions.

Wachovia Bank 7

Wachovia Bank clinched at least a tie for the Babe Ruth League regular season championship Thursday with a 7-4 victory over Peeler's. Wachovia can clinch the title with a single win or a single loss by Peeler's in tonight's action.

Peeler's scored first with a run in the first, but Wachovia tied it up with one in the second. Wachovia then took the lead for good with four in the top of the fourth.

Matt Aldridge led off with a single and Montez Barrett was hit by a pitch. Mike Williams reached on a fielder's choice, loading the bases and Shae Harper walked, forcing in Aldridge. James Stanley singled in Barrett and Williams and both Mark Taylor and Jermaine Reed walked, forcing in Harper for a 5-1 lead.

Wachovia added two more in the sixth. Peeler's came up with one each in the fourth, sixth and seventh innings.

Aldridge led the Wachovia hitting with two, while Adam Charlton had a pair to lead Peeler's.

Beck Delays Honeymoon; Captures Western Lead

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OAK BROOK, Ill. — Chip Beck, delaying his honeymoon in search of the top prize of $180,000, shot a 65 to take a one-stroke lead after the opening round of the $1 million Western Open.

Beck, who came within one stroke of the Butler National course record of 64 set by Bob Gilder in the first round of the 1982 Western, had a one-shot advantage over Payne Stewart and Blaine McCallister. Paul Azinger and Mark O'Meara were two shots off the lead with 67s.

A tournament-record 55 players broke par, 11 more than in last year's first round over the par-72, 7,097-yard layout. Most of the players felt that Butler would exact its toll over a weekend with no rain in the forecast.

Beck, who was married to Karen Thompson last Saturday, had an eagle and eight birdies against three bogeys in Thursday's round.

"That was fun," Beck said. "I was telling my wife the honeymoon can come later. The best honeymoon would be winning this tournament."

Beck, who won at Los Angeles and New Orleans last year, came closest to victory this season when he finished in a tie for second, one shot behind Curtis Strange, in the U.S. Open.

"I have been playing consistently well and had a chance to win the U.S. Open," Beck said. "I was 3-under for the last 13 holes."

Beck had three straight birdies on the front nine and then carved six strokes off par in a stretch from No. 11 through No. 15. He eagled the 478-yard, par-5 12th when he put a 1-iron approach onto the green and dropped a 60-foot putt.

He sank two birdie putts of 30 feet, another of 15 feet and chipped in for another.

"The greens were beautiful," Beck said. "When it looked like a putt would break one inch, it broke one inch. That's a tribute to the greenskeeper."

Stewart, who had eight birdies and two bogeys, said, "The course is in the best condition it'll be in all year. The greens were perfect but they will get firmer. It's nice to get off to a good start."

McCallister warned: "The course will get firmer and quicker. A lot can happen in the next two days."

O'Meara had a bogey-free round and said, "I'm satisfied with the way I'm playing."

Azinger said he couldn't remember the last time he had shot in the 60s on the first day of a tournament.

"I've finished in the top 10 in the last 16 tournaments but I always had to come from behind," Azinger said.

Greg Norman was in a group at 4-under-par 68 with former Western champions Hale Irwin and Mark McCumber.

Gwynn's Glove, Guile Help Padres

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tony Gwynn is a great hitter; everybody knows that. So good that his other skills often get overlooked. Gwynn helped save San Diego with his glove and guile Thursday night as the Padres won in Los Angeles 5-3.

The Dodgers had already scored once in the ninth inning and had Dave Anderson on first base with two outs. Alfredo Griffin hit a high bouncer to pitcher Mark Davis, who threw the ball past first baseman Carmelo Martinez.

But Gwynn, playing right field, was in position. He retrieved the errant toss and made a strong throw to shortstop Garry Templeton, who tagged out Griffin trying for second.

"I was just doing my job," Gwynn said. "On a chopper off the plate, the right fielder is supposed to back up the play. It's something we worked on all through spring training."

Gwynn, by the way, went 2-for-5 and raised his National League-leading average to .363.

In other NL games, Houston stopped Montreal 8-3, San Francisco routed Chicago 12-2 and Atlanta got past Cincinnati 2-1.

Dennis Rasmussen got his first victory since May 20 as the Padres stopped Fernando Valenzuela's four-game winning streak. San Diego won its fourth straight game.

Rasmussen, 3-5, gave up seven hits in 8 1-3 innings. He had five straight no-decisions despite allowing just 2.45 runs per game. Davis got his 21st save.

Valenzuela, 4-6, allowed four runs, only one of them earned, on eight hits in seven innings.

Errors by third baseman Jeff Hamilton and second baseman Mariano Duncan helped San Diego score three times in the fourth inning for a 4-1 lead.

Astros 8, Expos 3
Mike Scott became the first 13-game winner in the major leagues as Houston ended Montreal's six-game winning streak.

Scott, 13-4, gave up two runs on eight hits in eight innings. He also drove in a run and scored one. Kevin Gross, 7-7, was tagged for six runs in five innings.

Billy Hatcher hit a three-run homer and RBI double as the visiting Astros won their third straight game.

Giants 12, Cubs 2
Robby Thompson's two-run homer and pitcher Scott Garrelts' two-run triple were part of a seven-run second inning, leading San Francisco over Chicago. The visiting Cubs lost their seventh consecutive game.

The Giants got eight straight hits in the second. Kevin Mitchell, who leads the majors in homers and RBIs, made two outs in the inning.

Garrelts hurt his hamstring running out the triple and left the game. Jeff Brantley took over and allowed one run over five innings for his first big-league victory.

Paul Kilgus, 5-8, took the loss. The Cubs have scored just nine runs in their seven losses.

Braves 2, Reds 1
Marty Clary, told two hours before the game that he would start, pitched a four-hitter for his first major-league victory as Atlanta won in Cincinnati.

Clary, 1-0, filled in for Pete Smith, who developed a virus. Clary walked the leadoff batter in the first inning but did not walk another hitter.

Dale Murphy singled home the tiebreaking run in the ninth inning. Jeff Blauser led off with a double against Rob Dibble, 6-3, advanced on a grounder and scored on Murphy's third hit.

The game lasted just 1 hour, 48 minutes, the shortest in the majors this season.

two home runs and driving in five runs of his own.

"I wasn't looking for anything like this tonight," Jarman said. "But McKeel did a real good job on the mound and his hitting had to make his pitching better. It took us six innings to find out that we could hit and pitch and catch the ball. We should have had them out in the third, one-two-three, but we made those errors and let them put the game out of reach."

Trailing 2-0 in the third, Pitt had two errors and an out in the first three batters as Snow Hill went on to score four times and take a 6-0 lead. Only once after that did Pitt set them down without allowing a run in an inning.

Snow Hill grabbed the lead in the first as George Burnette singled and McKeel hit a towering blast out in left field to make it 2-0.

In the third, Reggie Hill reached on an error and was sacrificed up. Cedric Collins also was safe on an error and McKeel followed with a shot out of the park in dead center, raising the score to 5-0.

Leslie Jackson kept it going with a single and Chris West doubled. Ed Stanley's sacrifice fly brought Jackson home.

Snow Hill added two more in the fourth on two hits and two more errors, and picked up another in the fifth on three hits and two errors, making it 9-0. Another four crossed in the sixth before Pitt finally broke the ice. Snow Hill used three hits, and error a walk and a wild pitch on a third strike to account for those runs, including a two-run double by Stanley.

Travis Clemons led off the sixth with a walk and David Leisten doubled to left center, scoring Clemons. Derrick Clark was safe on an error, which allowed Leisten to score.

Pitt came up with four more in the eighth inning, but the rally was ineffective since Snow Hill had run its lead out to 14-2 prior to that. Snow Hill scored once in the eighth and added two more in the ninth to close out the scoring.

Overall, Post 94 banged out 20 hits, including three each by Burnette, McKeel, Jackson, Jimmy Hardy and William Rhodes, while West and Stanley each had two.

Chris Christopher had three hits for Pitt while Maurice Hines added two.

Pitt will now take on Edenton in the first round of the Area One East playoffs, starting tonight at 8 p.m. at Harrington Field. A second game will be played on Saturday at Edenton at 8 p.m. A third game, if needed, will be played on Sunday at 8 p.m. at Harrington Field.

The winner will advance to face Rocky Mount in the second round, that series starting on Tuesday.

Snow Hill, the regular season champion, has a first round bye and will face the winner of the Wilson-Wayne County series in the second round. Snow Hill finished at 12-4.

"This is the first time we've ever won the title outright," Coach Jim Fulghum said. "We've tied for it before, but always had to play in the first round, so this will be a new experience for us."

Fulghum said he didn't think the layoff would hurt Snow Hill in the second round. "It's just a matter of being ready."

Fulghum said it was difficult to gauge a game like Thursday's because Pitt was down in its pitching staff. "McKeel did well early (on the mound) and we got some early runs to help us along."

Jarman said he thought that the news that the Rocky Mount victory and the forfeit from Kinston had been taken away hurt Pitt in preparing for the game. "I think it certainly had an effect on how we played," Jarman said. "Like I said, the sun was shining on us in the morning and it rained on us tonight."

vindication on allegations he bet on baseball.

The Cincinnati Reds manager said Thursday he wouldn't be interested in any settlement to his lawsuit against Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti if it involved an admission he bet on baseball games.

"I'm expending so much time and energy to prove I'm innocent," Rose said.

Robert Pitcairn Jr., one of Rose's lawyers, indicated this week that Rose's legal team would consider a settlement if it allowed Rose to stay in baseball.

However, baseball officials said Thursday there have been no settlement talks. Giamatti gave a deposition to Rose's lawyers on Thursday in Washington, D.C., as part of the manager's legal action.

Asked whether a settlement was discussed at the meeting, Giamatti said, "It wasn't that kind of a meeting."

And John M. Dowd, baseball's chief investigator in the Rose matter, reiterated Thursday that the commissioner has no thought of removing himself from handling the case. Rose's lawyers have demanded that someone other than Giamatti decide Rose's fate, a condition baseball has rejected.

"That's ridiculous, absolutely ridiculous," Dowd said.

Baseball's lawyers have been unsuccessful in their attempts to negotiate a temporary restraining order granted Rose last Sunday by Hamilton County Common Pleas Judge Norbert A. Nadel.

Nadel concluded that Giamatti had "prejudged" that Rose is guilty, and barred the commissioner from holding a hearing with Rose on the allegations or taking any action against the manager through next week. Rose also is protected from firing by the Reds.

Baseball's lawyers asked the 1st Ohio District Court of Appeals to nullify the order, but the court decided Wednesday it didn't have the legal authority to consider a temporary order.

There was no indication from baseball's lawyers Thursday whether they would pursue their appeal in the state court system to the Ohio Supreme Court. Unless they get the temporary order erased, Nadel will hold a hearing beginning next Thursday on Rose's request for a preliminary injunction that would extend the protections while the sides prepare for trial.

Giamatti is expected to testify if the case goes to a hearing next week before Nadel.

The judge has declined to comment since his unprecedented ruling Sunday, which has drawn sharp criticism from some legal scholars and media commentators. Nadel declined to respond Thursday to reports showing that he has accepted more than $1,600 in past campaign contributions from lawyers in the two firms that represent Rose.

Rose could be banned for life from baseball if it's determined that he bet on Reds' games. Dowd's investigation uncovered testimony and evidence that he did so.

Although Rose has been able to tie Giamatti's hands in state court, a federal grand jury is still investigating Rose's taxes to determine whether he claimed all of his income from gambling and memorabilia sales.

Baseball's investigators were told that Rose took measures to try to conceal some of his income from the Internal Revenue Service, which is involved in the grand jury probe.

Doctors Remove Marcos' Ailing Kidney Transplant

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HONOLULU — Doctors removed a transplanted kidney from former Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos, who battled for survival with the aid of life-support equipment, a hospital official said.

Marcos was semi-comatose in very critical condition and dependent on dialysis following Thursday's hour-long operation at St. Francis Medical Center, officials said.

Assistant hospital administrator Eugene Tiwanak said Marcos could survive indefinitely with the use of a dialysis machine, which performs the functions of a kidney by removing impurities from the blood.

However, the prognosis remained poor, Tiwanak said.

Doctors decided Thursday that Marcos' fever might be caused by an infection resulting from his body's rejection of the transplanted kidney, Tiwanak said.

Marcos received the donor kidney in 1984. His second kidney does not function, Tiwanak said.

Humans have a pair of kidneys, which extract water and waste products from the blood and excrete them as urine through the bladder. One kidney must function properly for survival without dialysis.

The 71-year-old exiled leader, hospitalized since Jan. 15, suffered liver failure Wednesday and ran a fever as high as 104 degrees, said Tiwanak. In May, he suffered heart, lung and kidney failure.

In addition to a dialysis machine, Marcos was hooked up to a respirator and other life-support equipment, he said.

"He's the sickest he's ever been,"

a hospital source told The Associated Press.

If doctors can control the infection, Marcos has a better chance of survival, the source said, adding the surgery itself was not life-threatening.

One of Marcos' doctors, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, said the exiled leader's condition has generally worsened over the last five months.

"It's like a stair step," the doctor said. "He gets worse, levels off, gets worse and levels off, but sooner or later he'll fall off the steps."

While the kidney was being removed, Marcos wife, Imelda, and two of their three children, Ferdinand Jr. and Irene Araneta, attended Mass in the hospital chapel.

Asked if his father was out of danger, Ferdinand Jr. said, "We'll have to see how he reacts to the medicine."

Mrs. Marcos had been by her husband's side since his condition worsened Wednesday, but left the hospital by limousine when her husband was out of surgery.

Mrs. Marcos had a quiet dinner at home Thursday night with her children and visitors from Manila, including Monsignor Domingo Nebres, who was the Marcos family chaplain for 12 years, and Marcos' personal physician, Dr. Claver Ramos, according to Marcos spokesman Roger Peyuan.

She returned to the hospital minutes before midnight to check on her husband's condition, Peyuan said.

"They're of course hoping the operation will be of great help," Peyuan said. "She's not really certain of what's going on ... her immediate concern is to see him."

Peyuan said Mrs. Marcos is praying that her husband live at least until Sunday, her 60th birthday. "I've heard her say to him many times, 'You're all I want for my birthday,'" he said.

Jaruzelski Says He's Open To More Reforms In Poland

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WARSAW, Poland — Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski says he's open to more democratic reforms in communist Poland as long as they benefit society.

The comments by the Polish leader came as the party's 230-member Central Committee met today to consider a nominee, likely Jaruzelski, for the new office of president.

Members of the Solidarity opposition have indicated they will vote against Jaruzelski in the National Assembly if the Communist Party picks him as its nominee. Jaruzelski crushed Solidarity during martial law in 1981 and agreed to relegalize it this year.

"We are obliged to vote against him. What happens next is their problem," said Jan Litynski, a Solidarity deputy-elect to the parliament.

Solidarity is not expected to put up its own candidate for the presidency, though a final decision has not been taken.

"For Solidarity to put up its own candidate is either too ridiculous or too serious. What would we do if he (Solidarity) wins?" asked Litynski. "It would create a revolutionary situation."

In his 40-minute interview with The Associated Press, Jaruzelski said the party will not return to its monopoly rule of the past. "We have become convinced that monopoly is a very unhealthy thing, not only in the economy, but also in political life."

Candidates backed by the labor union won 99 of 100 seats in the newly created Senate and all 161 seats open to the opposition in the 460-member Sejm during voting in June. The remaining Sejm seats were reserved for the governing communists and their allies, who control the legislature.

The two chambers, meeting at the National Assembly, are expected to assemble next week to elect a president. The president will then name a prime minister to form a government.

About the time of the Assembly meeting, President Bush comes to Poland on July 9-11 for a state visit. Bush is expected to express support for the recent Polish reforms.

Jaruzelski held the interview Wednesday at an elegant government reception room near his office. He answered additional questions in writing.

Wearing his familiar dark glasses and a traditional business suit, Jaruzelski declared that his party's automatic leading role in Poland "already is history."

Asked how far democratization could go, he said, in a written answer: "The limits of the reforms are not rigid. The main issue is their social purpose and effectiveness."

He said the economic and social changes have already put Poland in the forefront of reforms in the East bloc.

Asked if he would assume the presidency, Jaruzelski, who turns 66 on July 6, was noncommittal.

"I haven't gone to confession in a very long time, and I can see that you want me to confess," said the party leader, who once attended a Roman Catholic boarding school and leads a predominantly Catholic country.

American Buys Mussolini Relics

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — A black silk banner, military hat and medallions were among the relics of Benito Mussolini that were sold to an American for $117,400, the British auctioneers Phillips said.

The collector and seller were not identified, nor was the U.S. intelligence official who accumulated the Italian dictator's belongings after World War II.

Among the items sold Thursday was a black fur hat with a gold-embroidered eagle for $75,500, an auction record price for any military head-dress, the auctioneers said.

Other items included a bronze plaque of Mussolini in uniform and a medallion depicting elephants to commemorate Italian conquests in Africa.

Zhao Loses Last Post But Escapes Execution

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — Disgraced former Communist Party chief Zhao Ziyang was removed from his last government post today but senior leader Deng Xiaoping indicated Zhao will not be executed for sympathizing with students seeking pro-democratic reforms.

Zhao's ouster as vice chairman of the State Central Military Commission by the Chinese legislature completed a purge that began last weekend when Deng engineered his formal removal as party general secretary, or party leader.

Deng wrote in a letter to the National People's Congress that "since Comrade Zhao Ziyang has committed serious mistakes, I proposed his dismissal," the official Xinhua News Agency said.

Deng's reference to Zhao as "comrade," however, indicates he retains his membership in the party and will not face trial as a "counterrevolutionary." Earlier, there was speculation he might be tried and executed.

Zhao fell out of favor with Deng last month for opposing martial law and the crackdown on the student-led democracy movement.

He was swept out of his posts with several other moderates, who were replaced by officials backing the suppression of dissent. Zhao was replaced by Jiang Zemin, a former mayor of Shanghai who quickly put down protests in his own city.

Zhao made a tearful speech to hunger-striking students May 19, the last day he was seen in public.

Martial law was imposed in Beijing the next day. On June 3-4, the Chinese army swept into Beijing's Tiananmen Square.

Beijing Mayor Chen Xitong told Congress today that more than 200 civilians, including 36 college students, were killed. He also said dozens of soldiers died, the official Xinhua news agency reported.

Earlier, the government said variously that 200 to 300 people, about half of them soldiers, had died. Chinese witnesses and Western intelligence had estimated about 3,000 people were killed.

Chen also reported that 3,000 civilians were injured, as were 6,000 soldiers and police.

He said more than 1,000 army trucks, 60 armored cars, and 120 buses sustained $350 million in damages.

The Congress opened its session Thursday, hailing the Communist Party's violent suppression of the democracy movement as "legal, correct and necessary."

Today, China renewed attacks on foreign countries it said were trying to isolate it for suppressing the pro-democracy movement.

State media in morning reports said Premier Li Peng dismissed international criticism of the crackdown.

"China has also noticed an anti-China ... current," Li told the foreign minister of Sao Tome and Principe, an island nation off West Africa. "Under the banner of human rights, these people have made unwarranted accusations of China for its quelling of the counterrevolutionary rebellion and punishment of criminals according to law."

President Yang Shangkun told a visiting delegation from Bolivia on Thursday that he hoped the world "will understand that the suppression of the rebellion represents a reasonable act in handling our internal affairs," the state-run China Daily reported.

"No ruling party or government will allow the subversion of itself," Yang said.

The government also lashed out Thursday at the European Economic Community for making "presumptuous accusations" against China.

The 12-nation EEC on Tuesday condemned what it called the "brutal repression taking place in China." It called for an embargo on arms sales and urged the World Bank to postpone new loans.

The United States, Canada, Japan, Australia and other countries have already taken similar steps against Beijing.

In Washington, the U.S. House of Representatives voted 418-0 Thursday to endorse the cutoff of military aid already ordered by Bush. But it also voted to suspend trade and development programs, ban the sale of police equipment and limit transfer of high-technology and nuclear materials.

The House provision is part of a foreign aid bill that the Senate still must consider.

China has faced increasing isolation within the international community as authorities continue to arrest people who supported the mass protests for greater political freedom that began in mid-April.

Since the military crackdown, at least 1,800 people have been arrested and 27 executed.

Scandal May Force Uno To Quit

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — Embattled Prime Minister Sousuke Uno, dogged by a sex scandal, may resign over his failure to rally support for his party, news reports said today.

A new poll published in the Mainichi Shimbun said Uno's Liberal Democratic Party was likely to lose heavily in Sunday's Tokyo Metropolitan Assembly election.

It is the first major vote since Uno became prime minister less than a month ago and a barometer of how the governing party will fare in voting July 23 for half the seats in the upper house of parliament.

Party leaders had hoped that Uno would reverse their sagging fortunes after he replaced Noboru Takeshita, who resigned June 2 over an influence-peddling scandal.

However, the new poll mirrored other recent surveys showing the governing party low in popularity. The party has been battered by the scandal that drove out Takeshita, an unpopular new sales tax, and now charges that Uno has been involved in extramarital affairs.

On Wednesday, Uno denied news reports that he had threatened to resign over the sex allegations, but today's press reports indicated he faces a short tenure as premier and that Japan could have an early national election.

However, Foreign Ministry spokesman Taizo Watanabe said Uno will represent Japan at a summit of seven leading industrial democracies in Paris starting July 14.

"We keep having, every day, study sessions with Mr. Uno, and we are confident that our government will be well represented at the summit," Watanabe said.

Britain Advertises For Astronaut

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — "Astronaut Wanted. No Experience Necessary," blared a full-page advertisement in London newspapers today. The response was overwhelming.

In the first three hours after 16 telephone lines for applications opened, more than 1,000 people called seeking to get aboard the first joint Soviet-British space mission.

"All the lines are being used virtually all the time," said Nigel Barstow, telephone supervisor for a recruitment agency, MSL International.

Under an agreement signed in Moscow on Thursday, Britain's first astronaut will accompany two cosmonauts to the Soviet orbiting station Mir in 1991.

A cartoon in London's Today newspaper showed Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, looking outraged, floating in space in a pressure suit. "I know you didn't apply, comrade prime minister," a Soviet cosmonaut is saying. "Thirty million of your countrymen nominated you."

Those who do apply must be between 21 and 40 years old, have scientific training, proven ability to learn a foreign language and a knack for getting along with foreigners.

Early callers included a physicist, an ex-pilot and an 18-year-old schoolboy who was rejected immediately as too young.

The project, pairing the Soviet space agency Glavkosmos and a British consortium, will be the first manned space flight financed entirely by the private sector.

The British consortium is trying to raise $25 million to cover the British astronaut's costs.

The project was named for Juno, the Roman goddess of marriage, because it marks "the start of a very special relationship between Glavkosmos and the British space administration," organizers said.

Dozen People Hurt As Korean Police Raid University Campus

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEOUL, South Korea — Riot police fired tear gas and stormed a university campus today to break up an anti-government rally of thousands of radical students. At least 12 people were injured.

About 3,000 riot troopers opened locked iron gates with cutters and charged into Hanyang University in eastern Seoul. They had locked the gates to keep more students from attending the rally.

Riot police with shields and five armored vehicles fired hundreds of tear gas shells over the hilly campus. They easily overpowered and arrested hundreds of students who brandished steel bars, clubs and firebombs to stop the police attack.

There were no immediate reports on how many people were arrested. Witnesses said at least 12 people were injured, including a female student who fell from a 15-foot wall during earlier clashes around the school gates.

Many of the estimated 4,000 students at the protest fled into school buildings or grappled over walls to nearby residential areas.

Riot troopers smashed windows and charged into some school buildings to pursue the students. They kicked and punched some of them, tore down protest banners and smashed desks.

Some protesters hurled rocks from the top of school building as riot troopers raced down the school's roads with their arrested colleagues.

The students from Seoul and other cities said they want to march to Pyongyang, the capital of communist North Korea, for an international youth festival July 1-8.

South Korea has banned participation in the festival, a sports and cultural event mainly attended by non-aligned and communist nations. Government officials have accused the north of using the festival to stir up radical movements in South Korea.

Newspapers in Seoul reported North Korea had opened its border crossings to allow entry.

However, about 6,000 riot police patrolled checkpoints leading to the north, and 4,000 more fanned out at schools, intersections and government buildings in downtown Seoul, according to police.

In addition, U.S. troops guard the southern side of a joint security area around the border truce village of Panmunjom.

Pro-Western South Korea separated from North Korea at the end of World War II.

They fought the Korean War from 1950 to 1953. They are technically still at war because no peace treaty was signed, and more than 1 million heavily armed soldiers face each other across the 150-mile border.

About 43,000 U.S. troops are stationed in South Korea under a 1954 mutual defense treaty.

At today's rally, students placed one banner showing a man and woman, clenched fists in the air, walking across mountains from South to North Korea. Another banner showed small people with ropes yanking a towering Uncle Sam to the ground.

Radicals, a small but vocal minority, say President Roh Tae-woo and the United States are keeping the Korean peninsula divided. They demand the overthrow of Roh's government and the expulsion of U.S. troops.

Amazon Study

RALEIGH (AP) — A North Carolina State University geochemist is one of two scientists who will head a four-year, federally funded $5 million research study at the mouth of the Amazon River.

David J. DeMaster of the NCSU Department of Marine, Earth and Atmospheric Sciences, will lead the project with C.A. Nittrouer of the State University of New York at Stony Brook.

A team of U.S. and Brazilian scientists will study the wedge-shaped Amazon shelf off the coast of Marajo Island.

"This will be the first time a large river has been studied at one time from the points of view of physical, chemical, biological and geological oceanographers," DeMaster said.

Highway 101 Makes Rapid Climb In Country Music

By Joe Edwards
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Highway 101, the hottest vocal band in country music, took its name after roads in California and Minnesota and its style from the pop group Fleetwood Mac.

The four-piece band, voted group of the year in 1988 and 1989 by the Academy of Country Music, formed in California in the mid-1980s with the idea of becoming the Fleetwood Mac of country music.

Highway 101 hasn't sold 15 million albums like Fleetwood Mac's "Rumours," but the energy of its music and the vocals of Paulette Carlson have drawn comparisons to Fleetwood Mac's Stevie Nicks and Christine McVie.

In a rapid rise to the top in country music, Highway 101 has turned out three No. 1 records: "Do You Love Me Just Say Yes" last September; "Cry, Cry, Cry" in 1988; and "Somewhere Tonight" in 1987.

Four other singles made the Top 10 of the country charts. The band's two albums, "Highway 101" and "Highway 101 2," also did well. They performed 140 concerts last year, doing shows with country stars such as Hank Williams Jr., the Judds and Reba McEntire.

"I think it was the right time for a band situation like this," said Highway 101 guitarist Jack Daniels. "We have kind of a style, an approach, that's carefree and dynamic as opposed to playing it safe and smooth and slick."

Said lead guitarist Curtis Stone, "It was definitely a musical adventure we all participated in."

Scott "Cactus" Moser, the band's drummer, rounds out the four. The men are all from the Los Angeles area and Carlson is from Minnesota, calling both tiny Winsted and equally small Moose Lake her home.

Borrowing from roads in their home states, the four decided to call themselves Highway 101.

"It was the link between the guys on the West Coast and Paulette in Minnesota," said Daniels. "But in our travels, we've seen several others in the country. It's sort of a network."

All four members had solid professional experience before forming Highway 101. Moser had played drums for Johnny Rivers, Jennifer Warnes and others. Daniels hit the road at age 17 with country performer Freddie Hart. Carlson had recording experience as a solo singer. Stone, the son of a song publisher, had written songs for Crystal Gayle, Juice Newton and others.

"We had put in time in various other bands," Stone said. "I think we paid our dues individually."

Just as the band was getting together, Moser and Stone even appeared briefly in the movie "Back to School" with Rodney Dangerfield and did the soundtrack to the film.

"I sang the first verse to 'Twist and Shout' and Cactus played the drums," Stone said. "Rodney took the mike away from me and that was about it."

Their configuration is unique among country music recording artists: a woman lead singer who also plays guitar with three accompanying musicians who share vocal responsibilities.

"It's helped," Stone said of the arrangement. "We're the first band that did it; we're the first that had a female singer."

Said Daniels, "We are all musicians and all singers. It's nebulous why it all works. If anyone knew the answer, everyone would be lining up doing it."

"We did a few things experimentally to find our groove, our niche. It wasn't necessarily what would sell to the public. It was what we do best together. It took us a little bit to discover that. Once we did, we felt good with it and fortunately, people liked that."

"When we first came out, other musicians said we were playing raw energy. I think that sometimes music gets homogenized in the recording process. To be clean and safe, it loses its humanism. Our records were more live sounding."

Stone agrees. "There's a lot of spontaneous things that happen in our music that you don't hear a lot on record (elsewhere)."

There's a good-natured tiff among the group about numbering their albums. The guys think it's clever but Carlson doesn't.

"We went with 'Highway 101 2' and got a lot of flak from Paulette," Stone said. "But we thought it was pretty cute because it could be Highway 101 2, Highway 101 squared, Highway 101 to the second power, whatever you want to say. But she's adamant about fighting it."

Walker and Canary pose with their Daytime Emmys after ceremony in New York Thursday

'Santa Barbara' Heads List For Daytime Emmy Awards

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — NBC's "Santa Barbara" won Daytime Emmy Awards for outstanding series and actress, sending perennial nominee Susan Lucci home empty-handed for the 10th straight year.

Lucci, star of ABC's "All My Children," was on hand at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel on Thursday as former "All My Children" colleague Marcy Walker was honored for her role as Eden Capwell Castillo on "Santa Barbara."

Others who chose not to attend the ceremony fared better.

Justin Deas, who plays Keith Timmons on "Santa Barbara," repeated as outstanding supporting actor, but again missed the proceedings.

And "Jeopardy!" host Alex Trebek sent along his thanks after being named best game show host. He added that if his absence helped him win, he promised not to come again next year.

"The Oprah Winfrey Show" was recognized as best talk show for the third straight year, and veteran broadcast personality Sally Jessy Raphael received her first Emmy in a 30-year career, as best daytime talk show host.

David Canary was honored for the third time in four years for his roles as Adam and Stuart Chandler on "All My Children."

"I don't deserve this any more than any of you, but I've got it and I'm thrilled," Canary said.

In addition to the top series, actress and supporting actor honors, "Santa Barbara," which premiered five years ago, received its first writing award and two other acting awards in the competition among soap operas.

Nancy Lee Grahn, who plays Julia Wainwright on "Santa Barbara," shared supporting actress honors with Debbi Morgan, Angie Hubbard of "All My Children."

The young winners were the most excited.

Juvenile male winner Justin Gocke, who plays Brandon Capwell on "Santa Barbara," leaped out of his seat punching the air and ran to the stage, where he had to stand on a box to see over the lectern.

The next winner, Kimberly McCullough, in the juvenile female category, had trouble catching her breath.

"I'm so surprised, my heart's beating so fast," she gasped. McCullough plays Robin Scorpio on ABC's "General Hospital."

The team at CBS' "The Young and the Restless" took home the directing Emmy for the fourth straight year.

Tribute was paid to the late Douglass Watson, who starred as MacKenzie Cory for 16 years on "Another World." Watson, a nominee for best actor, died in May of a heart attack.

Muppeteer Jim Henson presented a Special Emmy for Lifetime Achievement to Joan Ganz Cooney, creator of the non-profit corporation Children's Television Workshop, responsible for "Sesame Street," "The Electric Company" and "3-2-1 Contact."

The children's programming categories, long the domain of "Sesame Street" and "Jim Henson's Muppet Babies," had some new winners this year: "The New Adventures of Winnie the Pooh" from ABC was named outstanding animated program, and "Newton's Apple," a science program for children on PBS, won for outstanding children's series.

An ABC Afterschool special, "Taking a Stand," a drama about racial bigotry, won as outstanding children's special.

CBS' "$25,000 Pyramid" won best game show, its fourth award in the past five years.

The 16th annual awards ceremony was broadcast live on NBC.

Byrne Documentary Opens PBS Series 'Alive From Off Center'

By Kathryn Baker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — When David Byrne creates a rock group, it's the brilliant "Talking Heads." When he makes a movie, it's the unique social satire "True Stories."

So it's not surprising that when he makes a documentary, it's the unusual and enlightening "Ile Aiye." Byrne's one-hour offering can be seen on most PBS stations Wednesday, opening the new season of the alternative film and video series "Alive From Off Center."

Byrne's film is a portrait of Candomble, a religion practiced in Bahia, the northeastern province of Brazil, by descendants of African slaves.

"Ile Aiye" means "the house of life."

Pulsating music is an integral part of the high-spirited and graceful rituals of Candomble. Byrne, like many composers and musicians, has a long-standing fascination with the Afro-American influences on American rock and jazz.

"The music led me to ask what was the underlying spirituality underneath the music," he said at a cafe near his home in Manhattan's Soho section. "I honestly think that some kind of spirituality that has some of the elements that that kind of religion has is going to be our saving grace."

"It's going to help us survive, because it's a certain kind of spirituality that doesn't deny any part of human nature, like sensuality or sex or good or evil. They're all thrown in there."

"One could say that this religion helps people get along with one another in a funny way. Because each person is presumed to be ruled by a specific god. ... People can kind of get along with people whose behavior is different from theirs. They don't try to make everybody behave the same, act the same. They can say, oh, that person acts that way because Oshun rules their head."

"Look at it on the good side, it works that way," Byrne said, adding with a smile, "on the bad side, it can be just an excuse."

Byrne had arrived at the restaurant toting a small tape recorder he uses for orally jotting down lyrics. He's working on a new album for release in the fall featuring Latin jazz musicians from New York no doubt strongly influenced by the music that is an integral part of Candomble.

Byrne first went to Bahia in 1987 on the way to a film festival in Rio de Janeiro. On the return trip to do the film, he attended several Candomble ceremonies before asking permission to film them.

"Ile Aiye" utilizes split screens and inserts rather than narration to tell the story. Information is presented mostly through music and image for the viewer to absorb.

"A lot of these techniques, they used to be used sometimes in narrative films and sometimes in rock videos and stuff," said Byrne, "and sometimes in those contexts they don't make much sense or they don't serve any purpose other than being kind of groovy. But in a documentary, you might be able to use them where they actually convey more information."

"Sometimes we'd show a pan of the city, we'd show it 50 years ago and as it is today at the same time. We don't tell you all that, but you get the idea. And sometimes if somebody's making an offering of a basket, we show in an insert them making the basket."

"It seemed a way to include all those kinds of cross-references and things without having to say it. You can pick it up visually and you don't have to have an intrusive voice come in and tell you about it."

Byrne doesn't pretend that his documentary is a work of journalism. In fact, he left out one important ritual of Candomble, animal sacrifice, because he figured it would be off-putting, even though the animals used in the ritual are also used as food.

"I think you can get a sense of the religion without it, without seeing it. It's something they don't do all the time. They apparently would do it only on festival days, if they can afford it, if they can afford a goat or some chickens or whatever. ... Part of the price we had to pay for filming was to buy a couple of goats and chickens and stuff like that — and we'd all get to eat pretty good later, too."

Jones Tosses Garters To Fans

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Welsh pop singer Tom Jones tossed garters to several hundred female fans during a ceremony adding his name and star to Hollywood's Walk of Fame.

"He said it was his turn to throw the underthings," said Hollywood Chamber of Commerce spokeswoman Ana Martinez-Holler, who pointed out that Jones' fans often throw lingerie at him during his concerts.

The noontime ceremony adding Jones' star to the famous sidewalk was held Thursday in front of Frederick's of Hollywood lingerie shop on Hollywood Boulevard, which later hosted a reception for the singer.

Jones had a variety of gold singles and albums in 1968 and 1969, including "Delilah," "Love Me Tonight," "Help Yourself" and "I'll Never Fall In Love Again."

Mr. T's Rolls-Roy e Grounded

CHICAGO (AP) — City officials grounded Mr. T's scarlet Rolls-Royce in a case of mistaken identity, but the popular television tough guy took it all in stride.

Police applied the Denver boot, a device that clamps onto wheels to keep a car from moving, to Mr. T's car Wednesday after a record check indicated the owner owed fines on 11 parking tickets.

It turned out the unpaid fines were owed by another "Mr. T," but the former star of "The A-Team" wasn't angered by the mix-up.

He went to City Hall and said, "I know these aren't mine, but I'll pay them anyway," according to mayoral spokeswoman Marj Halperin.

The tickets were issued to another driver who used the "MR T" vanity license plate before the real Mr. T did, Ms. Halperin said. Despite Mr. T's offer, she said officials would try to find and fine the real scowler.

Mr. T, who owns a mansion in suburban Lake Forest, uses his stage name on license plates of each of his nine cars, said his spokeswoman, Joyce Brooks.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Take a direct and positive approach to improve a shaky relationship. Don't retreat! Do something exciting to revivify your spirits.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): After a slow start, the pace picks up. Small talk comes easily. Show your love for family members with actions instead of words.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Improve the quality of your life. Old feelings are brought to the surface and must be dealt with now. You question the meaning of love.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Laying down reasonable rules will solve a parenting problem. An indulgent attitude can have you spending money on others.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Be gentle and understanding when others do not feel the same as you do. Promote family harmony. Concentrate on siblings and pets.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Your energy system may be dragging along in the morning. Wake up time comes later when you find yourself surrounded with humor and fun.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Self-doubt may have you asking whether you are in the right slot of life. Boredom also has this effect on you. Change the rut—not your life!
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Don't spend it all before you pay the bills. Consider the financial future and be honest with your budget. Stay close to home.
PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Horizons expand and bring you more valuable experiences. There is a tendency today to nag others to get your own way. Be patient!

 It is naive to believe that your opponents will always signal honestly. And to trust them when it won't help you, even if they are telling the truth, borders on the ridiculous. The auction was straightforward enough. The two tens in his long suits made North's hand fully worth his jump to three no trump.

West led the top of his interior sequence and East started an echo to show an even number of cards in the suit by following with the eight. Declarer correctly won the queen—he could not afford a spade shift and was afraid that a holdup could result in losing his second heart trick.

With only seven fast winners, the club suit was the obvious lode to be mined for two more tricks. Declarer cashed the king of diamonds, then overtook the jack of diamonds to lead a club to his ten. West won the jack and continued with the king of hearts, suggesting that his entry was in spades; East completed his echo with the two.

Declarer won the ace and cashed dummy's two diamonds, on the last of which West discarded the nine of spades. The finesse of the queen of clubs won, but when West discarded the spade deuce on the ace of clubs, declarer was still a trick short. He return would have promoted the king of spades to the fulfilling trick.

Beach Hunt Finds Tons Of Plastics And Kitchen Sink

By H. Josef Hebert

WASHINGTON — There were plastic cups and bottles by the tens of thousands and almost as many metal cans.

Bottle caps alone totaled 42,671, nothing compared to the 78,025 plastic trash bags, or the 65,819 pieces of jagged glass.

And one can't forget the bedsprings, mattresses, even a kitchen sink or two — or the 11 bottles containing notes from far-off places. And finally, the 1,718 plastic syringes and other medical wastes, not to mention the set of dentures.

From the Washington state coast to the Louisiana delta and on to Maine, thousands of volunteers combed 3,500 miles of beaches last fall — about a fourth of the country's ocean shoreline — and those were only some of the items they found.

The Center for Marine Conservation, a private conservation group, tabulated the findings and detailed them in a report Thursday entitled "Trash on America's Beaches: A National Assessment."

"We were definitely amazed at the numbers," said Kathryn O'Hara, director of the project.

What became clear in the cleanup campaign — actually no more than three hours on any beach area last September and early October — was that America's beaches are littered with trash, said the report.

The 47,000 volunteers found and recorded 1,973,995 pieces of debris from discarded fishing lines to unwanted underwear. The items weighed more than 1,000 tons, or nearly 600 pounds of debris for every mile of beach. More than half of the items counted were made of plastic.

While medical wastes have garnered much of the public's attention, Ms. O'Hara said "plastic debris is the No. 1 enemy of America's beaches and coastal areas."

The trash can be deadly. "Thousands of marine mammals, sea turtles, seabirds and fish die every year when entangled in debris items such as rope, nets and ... fishing line, or from ingesting items like plastic bags and sheeting, mistaking them for food," said the group's report.

Despite the uproar about medical wastes, only a small percentage of the items were reported in that category. The volunteers recorded finding 1,718 plastic syringes during their searches, which accounts for less than one-tenth of 1 percent of all the debris found, according to the findings.

Ms. O'Hara said other medical wastes were not specifically counted in a category, although volunteers noted finding such items as plastic gloves, hospital caps, plastic tubing.

By far the greatest amount of trash involved some sort of plastic product: 78,025 plastic trash bags, 26,148 milk or water jugs, 19,300 plastic bleach cleaner bottles, 14,721 foamed trays, and 9,526 egg cartons.

Among the "dirty dozen" items, glass beverage bottles ranked No. 6, with 95,028 bottles littering the beaches. In addition to the tens of thousands of pieces of glass, the volunteers also found light bulbs, fluorescent light tubes, wooden crates, assorted fishing lines, rubber gloves, fishing nets, and 857 plastic hard hats.

And 11 volunteers found bottles with messages inside, including one on a Connecticut beach that said it had been dumped into the water in Europe.

And the volunteers at times uncovered not trash, but cash — including a $100 bill on a Texas beach and a diamond and amethyst necklace in Florida, according to the report.

Some states had more trash than others. Here are the states where the most pounds of debris per mile of beach were recovered: Georgia (4,000), Texas (3,549), Mississippi (3,000) and Louisiana (2,337). North Carolina had 627 pounds of debris recovered for each mile.

Europe's Beaches Needed By Users' Discarded Syringes

By Maggie Jackson

LONDON — Beaches from the chic Riviera to the English Channel are beginning to be hit by the same bright that reached American shores last summer — syringes.

The needle refuse dropped by drug users on European shores hasn't been as putrid as the waste and blood — some of it AIDS-infected — that washed up on the East Coast.

No one for example is reported to have contracted any disease from the needles but French, British and Spanish children have been pricked. And as the number of discarded needles increases, concern is growing over what a British newspaper calls the "syringe peril."

"We're very concerned for children. Children are going to be digging in the sand far more than adults," said Peter Green, medical officer for the south coast district of Torbay, where five people have been treated the last month for needle injuries.

"The syringes have been found near what looked like burned-out fires, and from what we deduce these are from late night drug parties," Green said. "These people are high-risk. ... We regard their equipment as potentially dangerous."

In neighboring Exmouth district, five needles were found in the last month although no one has been hurt.

European officials see no cause for panic or closing beaches. They are counting on public vigilance and extra cleaning.

Torbay authorities asked owners of metal detectors for help, while one French mayor hopes to keep addicts from nighttime forays onto the sand.

Brian Hayes, a painter who was scratched by a needle on a Devon beach near Salcombe, agrees that beaches should remain open.

"It's not a question of scaremongering," he says, explaining why he called a local radio station to tell of his plight. "People have to be careful where they sit and step. If I can sit on one, anyone can."

On the French Riviera, a 7-year-old boy was pricked in fashionable Cannes and a 3-year-old girl was hurt at Cap d'Ail in June. Another child was injured several months ago on a Spanish beach.

Manuel Carballo, a physician from the Geneva-based World Health Organization's Global Program on AIDS, partly blames changes in drug-taking methods.

"If you are seeing more drug-injecting equipment disposed of casually, it is because there are more drug injectors around doing this," Carballo said. "Injecting, as opposed to smoking, chewing or sniffing, has increased."

Although no needles have turned up on Italian beaches, they litter some streets. In 1988, Milan sanitation workers collected up to 4,000 syringes a day.

Carballo said the availability of syringes reflects the greater use of disposable medical equipment, a factor in the appearance of medical waste off American shores.

He and others say that hepatitis B, with a virus more hardy than the HIV virus associated with acquired immune deficiency syndrome, is probably the more likely menace from the needles, although nothing can be ruled out.

In response to the problem, early morning cleaners in Cannes and other Riviera cities were asked to redouble their efforts. Some workers were given special gloves or pincers.

"We recommend that people use sandals or beach shoes," said Green.

He said that if pricked, people are sent to a hospital for a serum and vaccination against hepatitis B.

Mayor Jacques Medecin of Nice promised to try to dislodge those who sleep or party on beaches. "We're looking how to do it," he said. "It could be by spraying water on them all night."

But catching them may prove as difficult as finding needles in the sand, say officials.

"If people are caught doing this, we can prosecute them," said Devon County spokesman Brian Brady, referring to a 1974 pollution act that calls for up to five years in prison and unlimited fines for those who dispose of pharmaceutical waste illegally.

"It's catching them that's the difficulty," Brady said.
