States Win More Power To Limit Abortions

By Richard Carelli
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court today provided states with new authority to limit a woman's right to abortion. The court, ruling on one of the most contentious issues of the decade, stopped short of reversing its 1973 decision legalizing abortion.

In splintered voting, the justices restored key provisions of a Missouri law that a lower court had invalidated for unduly interfering with women's constitutional right to abortion. And the court appeared to invite further challenges to its landmark 1973 abortion decision.

"We are smiling. We are thumbs up all the way," said John Willke, president of the National Right to Life Committee.

In his dissenting opinion, Justice Harry Blackmun said, "For today, at least, the law of abortion stands undisturbed. For today, the women of this nation will retain the liberty to control their destinies. But the signs are evident and very ominous, and a chill wind blows."

In today's decision, the justices — mainly in 5-4 votes — restored several Missouri abortion regulations. Overall, the effect was to allow Missouri to restrict the use of public money, medical personnel or facilities in performing abortion procedures.

One ruling requires doctors to determine, when possible, whether a fetus at least 20 weeks old is capable of surviving outside the womb, by testing lung capacity and conducting other tests.

The decision said that a declaration in Missouri law that "the life of each human being begins at conception" is not unconstitutional because it carries no enforceable restrictions on abortion.

Specifically, the court said: — Missouri, and other states as well, may ban the use of tax money for "encouraging or counseling" women to have abortions not necessary to save life.

— Missouri may ban any public employee — doctor, nurse or other health care provider — to perform or assist an abortion not necessary to save a woman's life.

— Missouri may ban the use of any public hospital or other facility for performing abortions not necessary to save life.

Texas lawyer Sarah Weddington cautioned that the decision will have little impact on the availability of abortion immediately.

"...It will have no practical implication until state legislatures pass new laws," said the lawyer who

Court Splits On Religious Displays By Governments

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court ruled today that some government-sponsored religious displays are permissible as long as they do not have "the effect of promoting or endorsing religious beliefs."

By a 5-4 vote, the court said displaying a Christmas nativity scene inside the Allegheny County Courthouse in Pittsburgh violates constitutionally required separation of church and state because it appears to endorse Christian principles.

But the court unanimously permitted a Hanukkah menorah on the front steps of the city-county building in Pittsburgh because that display also included a Christmas tree and a sign saluting liberty.

The ruling came on the final day of this court session along with a long-awaited ruling on the controversial abortion issue.

The court said the menorah, a nine-candle candelabra used during the celebration of the Jewish holiday Hanukkah, does not appear to endorse Judaism because of its "particular physical setting."

The menorah display includes a Christmas tree and a sign saluting liberty. The court said the inclusion of the tree and sign give the overall display a secular purpose, the court said.

While the justices were split sharply in declaring the Nativity scene unconstitutional, the court substantially upheld its long-used test for determining when the wall between church and state is breached.

Justice Harry A. Blackmun wrote for the court and was joined in striking down the Nativity scene by Justices William J. Brennan, Thurgood Marshall, John Paul Stevens and Sandra Day O'Connor.

Andrei Gromyko, Longtime Soviet Diplomat, Dies At 79

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — Andrei A. Gromyko, the tough-negotiating former foreign minister who survived five Kremlin leadership changes and weathered the dramatic turns of East-West relations in a half-century of public life, has died at age 79.

Soviet news reports said Gromyko, who oversaw Soviet foreign policy for 28 years, died Sunday.

The cause of death was not announced, but a Foreign Ministry spokesman said Friday that Gromyko had been hospitalized after surgery for a vascular problem — heart or circulatory system — that was not further identified.

President Mikhail S. Gorbachev announced the death to the Supreme Soviet legislature today.

"The deputies at the session, with a minute of silence, paid homage to the memory of the outstanding government and party leader," Radio Moscow said.

The official Tass news agency said the grim-faced Gromyko was "one of the major Soviet diplomats and statesmen of the senior generation" and added that the country "lost one of its most prominent leaders."

There was no immediate announcement of funeral plans.

As a diplomat, ambassador and foreign minister, Gromyko helped forge the Soviet-American World War II alliance, joined in drafting the U.N. Charter and sat in on superpower talks that shaped the face of the modern world.

Gromyko survived several purges and outlasted Soviet leaders Nikita Khrushchev, Leonid I. Brezhnev, Yuri V. Andropov and Kostantin U. Chernenko. He served as Soviet ambassador to the United States, Britain and the United Nations, which he helped found.

Tass once said he took part in "the most important foreign political developments of our time."

After Gorbachev rose to power in March 1985 and revamped the leadership, Gromyko was gradually eased into retirement.

Bush Starts Fourth On Sporting Note

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine — President Bush, filling a long holiday weekend with sporting activities, began his day today with a 20-minute jog through the woods.

The president planned to play golf later, then get the jump on the Fourth of July by treating his neighbors to a fireworks display tonight.

Bush told reporters as he went jogging that he would "like to send condolences" to the family of former Soviet President Andrei A. Gromyko, whose death was announced today in Moscow.

The vacation White House also was awaiting the latest word from the Supreme Court on abortion rights.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said a statement would be issued in Bush's behalf if the court issued a ruling today on whether it

Car Bomb Kills British Soldier

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HANOVER, West Germany — A British soldier was killed and his wife and three children injured when a bomb left in the family car exploded, and bomb experts found another explosive nearby and defused it, authorities said.

West German officials said they suspected the Irish Republican Army was behind the Sunday evening attack, the second on British military personnel in West Germany in two weeks.

Hanover police and British military officials said the explosion occurred about 6:30 p.m. as the victim opened the door of his red Mercedes.

The car was parked along a quiet, tree-lined street where many British military families live on the outskirts of this northern city.

The Ministry of Defense in London identified the soldier as Cpl. Steve Smith of the Royal Tank Regiment, a native of Yorkshire county in northern England. It had no other information about him or his family.

Marion Yates, a spokeswoman for the British military in West Germany, said Smith's wife and three children were slightly injured in the blast. The car was destroyed.

Bomb disposal experts called to the scene found another explosive device in the area and defused it.

Home Destroyed

Pitt County firemen battle a blaze that destroyed a home on secondary road 1124 west of Winterville Saturday night. Flames leap from a second floor window as firemen prepare to attack the blaze in the top photo. According to Pitt County Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner the house was owned by William Snyder. Joyner said the family was not home when the fire began. Five Pitt County fire departments fought the blaze, which destroyed the brick home. The cause of the fire had not been determined. No injuries were reported.

Parts Wedding

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — Sam Weatherby and Wayne Harrelson exchanged wedding vows Sunday between the anti-freeze and chrome hubcaps at the Auto Zone store, where the couple turned the ignition key of love.

"She just kind of brought it up, and I said it would be nice," the tuxedo-clad Harrelson said. "It's something different and this is where we met."

Ms. Weatherby, 25, walked down the aisle of the High Point store on the arm of her father, winding between the motor oil, jumper cables and brake fluid.

"This is where we met. I thought it would mean more down the road, than an ordinary wedding," she said.

Principal Dies

BREVARD, N.C. (AP) — Richard C. Voso, the principal of Brevard Elementary School and a former National Distinguished Principal of the Year, died Friday in Paris, France, according to his school secretary. He was 52.

Voso, who had been principal of the school for 14 years, collapsed while vacationing with his wife in Paris, according to secretary Edee McCracken.

Voso was selected two years ago as the National Distinguished Principal of the Year. A year before that, Brevard Elementary School was chosen as one of the nation's outstanding schools, Ms. McCracken said.

Weekend Thefts

Investigators said five thefts, including a car, cash and a bicycle, were reported to Greenville police over the weekend.

Officer T.L. Forrest said $270 in cash was taken from a man on Arlington Circle in an incident reported at 7:09 p.m. Saturday, while Officer R.E. Jones said a 1983 model Buick Regal was taken from West Fifth Street in an incident reported at 2 a.m. Sunday.

Officer R.C. Stroud said $70 in cash was taken from a man at the intersection of Ward and Vance streets in an incident reported at 10:51 a.m. and a bicycle was taken from 400 Bonners Lane in an incident reported at 12:50 p.m., while Officer K.M. # Gas Line Leak Repaired

Greenville Utilities crews, supported by police and fire-rescue personnel and local restaurants, worked from about 5:30 p.m. Sunday until 2:30 a.m. Monday to repair a gas leak on Greenville Boulevard.

Greenville Utilities gas systems engineer Anthony Miller said a resident of the area just south of Greenville Boulevard's intersection with N.C. 33 reported the leak in a six-inch natural gas main about 5:30 p.m.

Firemen were the first on the scene, he said, and a 10-member GUC gas department crew soon followed. He said a high-volume tapping tee blew off when workers uncovered the main.

"That could have been a dangerous situation," Miller said. "We weren't expecting that to happen. But, with the firemen there dispersing the gas and keeping everything wet, there was never any fire. It all went very, very well."

He said Greenville police rerouted traffic and the fire department suggested that residents of two households in the area leave and that several restaurants in the area close.

He said a few employees of the Parker's and Burger King restaurants, both located near the leak, stayed throughout the evening and provided refreshments for the public servants on hand.

This morning GUC employees were visiting household in the area — about 60 — offering to light pilot lights extinguished during the repair time, Miller said.

Report Says More Bystanders Killed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — More innocent bystanders are being shot and killed at crime scenes in four major cities, according to a study that says criminals show a "growing contempt for accidental victims."

Forty-one innocent bystanders were reported shot in New York, Los Angeles, Washington and Boston in 1986, and 20 of them died. In 1988 that number leaped to 135 shot and 37 killed, according to a study by Lawrence W. Sherman, a University of Maryland professor of criminology.

Overall, in those three years, 250 innocent bystanders were shot, of whom 71 were killed and 179 wounded.

"Homicide in America is becoming more barbaric," Sherman said. "We may not expect honor among thieves, but we do expect some honor among killers. The growing contempt for accidental victims is even indicated by he name killers give them: 'mushrooms' who 'pop up' in the line of fire."

The compilation of information differed for the four cities, but the study found that New York City had more bystanders shot — 128 — in 1986-1988 than the other three. Los Angeles was second with 105 in the same three-year period, while Washington had 11 and Boston had six.

On a per capita basis, the study found, Los Angeles has twice as many bystander shootings as New York.

The study, scheduled to appear in the December 1989 Journal of Quantitative Criminology, was based on published indexes to The New York Times, The Los Angeles Times and The Washington Post and a computerized search of The Boston Globe.

Smiley Ashton of the Justice Department's Bureau of Justice Statistics said his agency does not keep track of such incidents and that "the way they did it is probably the only way that it could be done."

Sherman acknowledged in the study that a more thorough method for studying the trends would be to review narrative reports filed on homicides and aggravated assaults, but said the review of newspaper accounts is "the most efficient method" even though "there is a danger that press accounts would tend to suppress any increase in bystander shootings."

Given the late planting of our tobacco crop, proper sucker control can play a major role in the quality of the 1989 crop.

Tobacco which is planted more than two weeks late may experience reductions in yield and quality. This is often translated into leaf which is thin-bodied and pale in color. Paler or lemon color usually means less nicotine being present in the leaf itself.

Effective sucker control means using contact applications correctly and then topping plants to desirable leaf number. Contacts should be applied when 50 percent of the crop is in the early button stage and at a ground speed not exceeding two and one-half miles per hour. Many of today's problems associated with sucker control stem from application speeds which are too high and chemical applications being made later than the optimal growth stage. In late seasons like 1989, topping lower to a harvestable leaf number of 18 enables the crop to develop better body which in turn eliminates thin, chaffy characteristics.

For farmers who will be raising non-flowering tobacco for the first time in 1989, sucker control will take on a new dimension. No longer will contact applications be based on button counts but rather on leaf number. When non-flowering varieties develop 25 harvestable leaves, it is at this point that contact chemicals should be applied. Plants are then topped and four to six of the bottom leaves are removed from the stalk.

Although non-flowering tobacco has the capability to develop 40-45 leaves, allowing the plant to do so may reduce profits by as much as $400 per acre. This is due to the fact that as leaf numbers increase, the percentage of the crop sold from the bottom of the stalk also increases. In addition, higher leaf numbers dilute alkaloids which in turn reduces desired smoking characteristics.

"Quality" separates our tobacco from the tobacco of our foreign competitors. Producing ripe, good-bodied leaf, free of foreign matter, further establishes the United States as the world supplier of flue-cured tobacco.

Alumni Take Meaningful Look Back

High school class reunions abound in the summer time. It is unusual, however, when an entire school which no longer exists continues the tradition of meeting annually.

Members of the Greenville Industrial-Eppes High School Alumni Association preserve the memories of their school. The 9th annual school reunion was held this weekend. Various gatherings, a picnic, dance and Sunday morning worship services were held for alumni who returned for this annual event.

It has been some years since there were any potential new members of the alumni association. Eppes High School, once located on West Fifth Street at the current site of Tom Foreman Park, was merged into Rose High School many years ago. The old Eppes building burned and was cleared away.

'For all of the alumni Greenville-Industrial Eppes High School shaped their lives. The faculty and classmates had a profound effect on their futures.'

Association President Jean Darden acknowledges that it is unusual for an entire school to hold a reunion every year.

"But we see this as a way to preserve our heritage," she said. "We feel that our school was an excellent school that would soon not be remembered if we didn't give it this attention."

It is documented that it was an excellent school and many of its graduates went on to outstanding careers.

Many came from far away to reminisce about high school days. They find a Greenville that is far different from the times when they attended high school. In the years since Eppes offered an education, Greenville has changed just as the nation has changed.

For all of the alumni Greenville-Industrial Eppes High School shaped their lives. The faculty and classmates had a profound effect on their futures. Now they pay tribute to the old school by gathering each year to renew old friendships.

Looks Good

Tobacco Farmers Beat The Odds

Only a couple of months ago tobacco producers of the area were beset by rain and much concerned that plants would grow too large before the weather would allow their transplanting into the fields.

As always, the conditions were there for a disaster in tobacco production this year.

Somehow, the farmers got their tobacco crops into the fields. It has still been a wet growing season but mid-season reports indicate that it might be a pretty good tobacco crop.

Already a few farmers are curing tobacco and the rush will be on in the next few weeks. In some areas it will be a late crop and market openings have been set later by the Flue-Cured Tobacco Advisory Committee. The South Carolina-Border North Carolina markets will open Aug. 7 with the Eastern Belt to open on Aug. 8.

Tobacco farmers still face possible adverse conditions. Too much rain, hail or severe winds could damage the crop in localized areas or generally. That is the situation every year, however. Tough as the tobacco plant is, its large leaves are particularly vulnerable just before harvesting.

Tobacco is still the backbone of Pitt and area counties' farm economies. The condition of the crop will make a difference to merchants, financial institutions and all areas of eastern economy in the fall.

With storms moving in almost daily and the difficulty of finding enough short term labor, the tobacco farmers will continue to face some anxious moments in the weeks ahead.

However, the quality of the overall crop seems to be good, considering early adverse weather conditions. That makes the outlook positive for tobacco sales beginning Aug. 8.

Money, Poverty & Abortion

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — Should the fetuses of affluent mothers be saved while the fetuses of poor mothers are aborted?

A Senate committee conceded that it sounded crass to say so, but it answered that question affirmatively. The committee adopted a parental consent bill for minors that takes into consideration the mother's ability to afford to raise the child after it is born.

Earlier this session, the House passed a bill requiring minors to get parental permission, or the permission of the courts, before have an abortion.

The Senate Judiciary I Committee rewrote major portions of that bill, adding to it a set of 12 factors a parent must consider before denying to his or her daughter permission to have an abortion. If a parent refuses permission, then the daughter may go to court to have the decision overruled. In making her case, the daughter could argue that her parents failed to consider adequately the 12 factors.

Three of the factors speak directly to money.

The first factor is the financial ability and willingness of the mother, the biological father, or the mother's parents, to support the child. The second factor asks if the same people are willing to provide financially for the health, education and welfare of the unborn child. The third asks if the unborn child is likely to become a ward of the state.

Sen. George Daniel, D-Caswell, chairman of the subcommittee which rewrote the bill, said, "Somebody is going to have to care for that baby so that it will not become a ward of the state. This is what gets some people edgy because someone has finally put this on the table in its ugly form."

The someone was Sen. Jim Johnson, R-Cabarrus, who proposed the three factors. During the committee meeting, Johnson placed the blame for pregnant minors squarely on the shoulders of their parents.

"Frankly, there are parents out there who do not give a d—," he said. "They don't supervise their children, and they have no intention of supporting their children" if permission for the abortion is denied.

Johnson said that as crass as it may sound the state should warn those adult parents that if they deny their child the right to an abortion that they would be responsible for the rearing of the newborn. "If these parents realize that they'll have a financial obligation, they may make the mistake the first time, but they'll think about it the second time."

Rep. Paul Stam, R-Wake, sponsor of the bill, said later that he thought the committee overemphasized the importance of money. He also questioned if the factors would have much effect on whether parents allowed abortions.

"I don't think its constitutional to say that a grandparent must pay to raise a child if they denied permission for an abortion," he said. There is a growing body of law placing financial responsibility for children on grandparents, he said, but not when that responsibility is limited only to grandparents who originally denied their child permission to have an abortion.

"Frankly, I don't think it's going to have much effect," Stam said.

The amendments to the bill may not have much effect over the number of abortions, but they should have an effect on the entire abortion debate. They offer confirmation that money, wealth and poverty are as much factors in the question of abortion — even if they are not enunciated frequently — as are morality and freedom of choice.

We Owe Our Founders A Lot

LONDON — It's an odd experience to prepare for Independence Day in this country. You feel as if you should draw the curtains before lighting the sparklers.

The British are magnanimous about it, having had more than 200 years to recover from the loss. The rebellion in the American colonies was just the beginning of the breakup of their empire, the retreat from almost all those countries that were colored pink in the fifth-grade geography books on the eve of World War II.

The process continues, with Hong Kong scheduled to revert to China in 1997. But the British are still struggling to get it right. Even now, their politicians are tied in knots over the question of their moral and legal responsibility to the 3.25 million Hong Kong residents who carry British passports. Provisions are being made for no more than a small fraction of them to migrate here if they have qualms about living under the same kind of rulers who committed the Tiananmen Square massacre. The rest are apparently to be left to their own devices — or their fate.

Americans largely have been spared the kind of political dilemmas and human tragedies the British left behind in India, Pakistan, Rhodesia, South Africa, Ireland and other countries they once ruled. Most of our "empire" went peaceably and without domestic protest. True, Panama is an unresolved mess today, but even there, lives and vital interests are being safeguarded as the transfer of sovereignty over the canal proceeds.

The cry, "No taxation without representation," was more than a slogan Sam Adams used to embarrass its British inventors. It embodied the idea that government should be close enough at hand that citizens could feel they had a voice in the decisions that mattered to them.

Given that history, we could respond sympathetically and flexibly to Filipinos' quest for independence, to Puerto Ricans' desire for substantial autonomy along with close association, and to Hawaiians' and Alaskans' petition for membership in what had been, until then, a Union of contiguous states. Our history has even equipped us to deal with the frustrations of Panama and the canal. And it certainly has made it easier for us to adjust to the changing shape of the century's final decades.

My thoughts this week have been turning back to another July 4, this one in 1963, when President Kennedy went to Philadelphia to proclaim a "declaration of interdependence." In that speech, he welcomed what he correctly saw as the course of increased economic and political integration of the Western nations and Japan and perhaps, he suggested, in time, the communist super-states as well.

The openness to change Kennedy expressed that day at Independence Hall stands in clear contrast to the gyrations Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has gone through this week as she tried to avoid acknowledging the reality of Britain's "interdependence" with the rapidly forming European economic union. Britain is proving as inept in joining the European Community as it was in yielding its empire.

The reason is that it lacks the tradition and instinct of federalism, which America was lucky enough to be born with. That concept of shared sovereignty between the states and the national government is probably the least celebrated of the building blocks of the American Republic. But it deserves to be hailed on this holiday, right along with the separation of powers, the Bill of Rights and judicial review, as a pillar of our nation's success.

It was the luck of history that brought the delegates to the Continental Congress together as representatives of separate colonies. But it was their genius that decided them to create not a national government, modeled on the British example, but a federal government, with powers and responsibilities divided between states and nation.

'Just as the Founders imagined, the energy, variety and flexibility of state and local governments have enhanced, not diminished, the national government's ability to meet its own areas of responsibility. And being Minnesotans or Mississippians made it easier, not harder, for our citizens to become, first and foremost, Americans, after they immigrated from all the countries of the world.'

That division cost us dearly, in lives and in progress, when the Southern states rebelled over slavery. But before and after the Civil War, Americans have reaped the benefits of federalism in more ways than we usually bother to notice. At regular intervals in our history, when the national government has lagged in meeting domestic needs, the states have stepped forward.

Just as the Founders imagined, the energy, variety and flexibility of state and local governments have enhanced, not diminished, the national government's ability to meet its own areas of responsibility. And being Minnesotans or Mississippians made it easier, not harder, for our citizens to become, first and foremost, Americans, after they immigrated from all the countries of the world.

Again, the contrast with Britain is stark. Devolution is a fiercely debated issue here. Local governments have been weakened in the Thatcher years. Nationalist movements have gained strength in Wales and Scotland, to say nothing of Northern Ireland. In the recent European Parliament elections, Britain was anything but the United Kingdom. The governing Tories lost every seat they had held in Scotland and Wales and became, in effect, an English party.

Not to be smug, but we owe our founders an awful lot on this birthday.

State Elections Board Initiates New Get-Tough Policy On Fund Reports

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — State Elections Director Alex Brock says there's nothing partisan about the Board of Elections' new get-tough policy.

Led by a new GOP chairman, the panel is threatening to take action against some Democratic-leaning organizations that it says have violated state campaign finance laws.

The main target is the political committee of the N.C. Association of Educators, the state's largest teachers group. Election officials said NCAE had turned in a report that was in such disarray that they could not determine how the group spent money during the 1988 elections.

The elections board also is considering steps against some black civic groups involved in get-out-the-vote efforts that have not filed reports, although they received money from candidates.

The actions came last week as the board held its first regular meeting under the new chairman, M.H. Hood Ellis. An Elizabeth City lawyer, he is the son of Thomas F. Ellis, chief political strategist for Republican Sen. Jesse Helms.

Hood Ellis replaced Robert N. Hunter Jr., a Greensboro lawyer who did not seek re-appointment to the five-member board.

The board voted unanimously to order NCAE's political committee, one of the state's largest and a regular backer of Democratic candidates, to appear at a board meeting Aug. 25 in Asheville. The board is made up of three Republicans and two Democrats.

The NCAE will be asked "to show cause, if any, why we shouldn't turn it over to the district attorney for action," Ellis said.

Yvonne L. Southerland, the board's deputy director, said the NCAE's campaign finance report could not be understood. She said the key problem seemed to be that NCAE's headquarters in Raleigh was having difficulty keeping track of all its local units, which spend money independently of the state organization.

NCAE officials have had several meetings with board officials in an effort to solve the problem, Mrs. Southerland said, but the issue has not been resolved.

Representing the NCAE in the matter is Robert W. Spearman, a Raleigh lawyer who was State Board of Elections chairman under Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt Jr.

Julia P. Kron, the association's new president, said NCAE was working to provide a complete report.

The elections board also is pressing for action against a number of black civic organizations that are involved in efforts to get people to the ballot boxes on Election Day.

Several groups have refused to submit campaign finance reports, saying they're not political organizations, Brock said.

But candidates such as Tony Rand, a Democrat who ran for lieutenant governor last year, reported giving substantial amounts of money to the groups.

"They claim they are not" political organizations, Brock said. "They claim they are just getting out the vote. But they are getting out the vote for specific candidates."

Brock said that his office had turned over complaints to district attorneys for legal action that but they had not acted. He said most of the district attorneys, largely Democrats, received support from those groups and had been reluctant to take action against them.

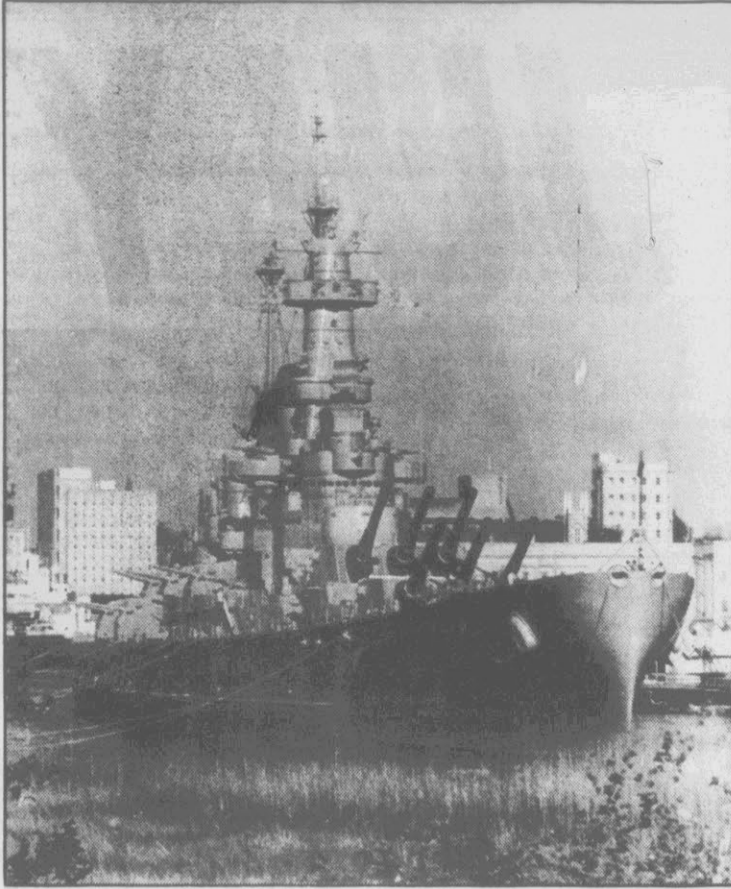

"The major violators are the district attorneys that don't do anything," said board member William A. Marsh Jr., a black Democrat from Durham.

Ellis asked the elections board staff to write to Attorney General Lacy H. Thornburg and perhaps to legislative leaders, noting the lack of enforcement.

The board also directed Brock to draft a regulation giving the board power to disband political committees if they do not comply with finance laws.

Among the black groups that have not filed reports for the 1988 elections are the Raleigh-Wake Citizens Association, Bertie United Concerned Citizens in Windsor, Halifax County Black Caucus in Halifax, the Pasquotank County Improvement Association, the Northampton County PAC, People for Progress in Hertford County and the Craven County Voters League.

USS North Carolina still stands ready to serve

Battleship Memorial Serves As Parts Depot For Fleet

By Dennis Patterson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Retired Navy Capt. Frank Conlon doesn't mind the USS North Carolina serving as a parts depot for active battleships, as long as he can preserve the ship as a floating museum.

"The relationship between the Navy and the three battleship memorials has been pretty good," said Conlon, director of the USS North Carolina Battleship Memorial in Wilmington. "There is a great deal of understanding both ways. The senior staff at all three memorials understand the needs of the Navy (all three directors are former Navy officers), and also the need to preserve the historic value of the vessel."

That historic value led Conlon to turn down a Navy request for four pairs of motors used on the ship as part of the fire control system. Instead, he gave them three pairs and kept the fourth set on board.

"We wanted to keep one fire control system in place," Conlon said. "It would be sort of like going back and trying to figure out the control system for the Monitor (a Civil war ironclad sunk off the North Carolina coast) if all the parts were gone."

"We were willing to give to the Navy something we'd never use, but we retained enough to go back years and years from now and know what it was all about," he said.

Conlon recalls receiving an urgent phone call from the Navy a few years ago when a motor burned out on a sister ship cruising off Beirut, Lebanon.

"We had one in a turret which we'll probably never open for display," Conlon says. "We took it off right then and shipped it to them. Later, we got the dead motor back and installed it in the turret. To somebody just walking by, you couldn't tell the difference."

Four World War II era battleships are still cruising the oceans for the Navy, and three have been turned into memorials. The North Carolina, Massachusetts and Alabama have all been permanently docked in their home states.

When the Navy reactivated the battleships early in the 1980s, they contacted Conlon and the other two memorial directors about spare parts.

The Navy made inventories of the spare parts carried on the ships, then came back to sort through the storerooms and select parts they needed.

"If the Navy needed parts that they could use and that we could not use, we let them have them," said Conlon, who personally checked the spare parts shipped out to make sure they were not needed.

The Navy ended up with 120 tons of parts from the North Carolina alone.

"That's reflective of how well the ships were left when they were taken out of active duty," Conlon said.

Last month, the Navy returned three borrowed pumps it had been using on the USS Iowa and USS New Jersey for five years.

When the Navy decided to replace the pumps with more modern equipment that could be easily serviced and repaired, they sent the old ones home.

Lt. Bruce Cole of the Navy public affairs office in Washington said the service does not want to damage preservation efforts on the three ships.

"If we need any of that material, we have promised to provide at least a replica, particularly if it's something that's going to be viewed by the public," Cole said. "Our position is we want the memorial battleships certainly to look as realistic as possible."

Conlon said about 15 percent to 20 percent of his time is spent on ship maintenance. Much of the rest is spent on tourism activities, which raises problems the old warship never faced in battle before it was removed from active duty 40 years ago.

"We're having some problems with our sound and light show," Conlon said, referring to the nightly spectacular that outlines the history of the battleship with special sound and light effects.

"The alligators keep eating my torpedoes."

University System Ranks Low In Costs Despite Fee Increases

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

North Carolina is considered one of the nation's best educational bargains, but there's growing talk in the Legislature and on some University of North Carolina campuses that students should pay more for their college educations.

Even with hefty fee increases over the past 10 years, North Carolina ranks 48th nationally in average tuition and fees, according to the most recent figures available.

"Anyway you look at it, North Carolina is a low tuition state," said Jim Newlin, a fiscal analyst with the General Assembly. "At the same time, we are providing a very expensive subsidy to provide a student with an education."

Student fees quietly increase almost every year and at much higher rates than tuition. Since 1977-78, tuition has risen an average of 41 percent across the UNC system, while fees have jumped an average of 113 percent.

"When people start looking at tuition, they don't look at the fact that these institutions raise fees and in many cases these fees are higher than tuition," Newlin said. "The problem occurs when parents see what their total bill is."

Fees cover the cost of programs, services and facilities that are not paid for by the state and must be borne by students. They include athletic, health, student activity and debt service fees. The latter would cover costs of non-academic buildings such as dorms, student unions, recreation centers and dining halls.

Figures supplied by Newlin's office show that:

- 10 of the 16 UNC campuses have fees that exceed tuition.
- 10 of the schools have increased fees more than 100 percent since 1977-78.
- Three campuses - UNC-Greensboro, UNC-Chapel Hill and Western Carolina University - have increased fees annually since 1977-78.
- Two institutions - UNCG and the North Carolina School of the Arts - have combined tuition and fees that exceed $1,000.

Several other institutions could surpass that mark this fall, given the fact that the General Assembly is expected to increase in-state tuition.

Currently, the General Assembly is considering two tuition increase proposals - a Senate plan that calls for an 8.5 percent increase next year and a House version that would boost the cost 20 percent.

Couple the likelihood of a tuition increase with a proposed 12 percent increase in required fees at UNCG and students there could see their costs rise a combined 20-plus percent next fall.

Students at N.C. State University can expect a 6.7 percent increase in fees while those at UNC-Chapel Hill will see an 11 percent increase.

UNC officials say the fee increases are justified.

"You always get the conversation that the university is letting fees rise and worries about tuition," Felix Joyner, UNC vice president for finance, told the Greensboro News & Record. "If you can raise fees why can't you raise tuition?"

"The answer is we have to raise fees to maintain the level of services and you want to keep tuition as low as you can in the face of that set of circumstances."

Tuition is the specific charge made to students to offset, in part, the cost of instruction. In North Carolina, tuition is heavily subsidized by the state. The UNC system has one of the lowest tuition schedules in the nation.

"I don't think any school has increased fees just because they need money," said William R. Styons, director of the cashiers office at N.C. State. "They pay for needed student services."

That's not to say that students don't get upset about fee increases.

Across the UNC system, student government typically has a say in fee increases, which originate on the individual campuses and generally are endorsed by the school's board of trustees.

However, the ultimate approval comes from the UNC Board of Governors, usually without opposition.

"I'm sure we've turned down some fee increases," Joyner said, "but we don't turn down many."

Joyner and other UNC and campus officials defend fee increases, but admit they aren't taken lightly.

"We ought to be as dogmatic about fee increases as we are about tuition," said Robert L. "Roddy" Jones, chairman of the Board of Governors.

But Styons said that while fees may have risen sharply since 1977-78, the increase is not necessarily out of line.

During that same time, he said, out-of-state tuition in the system has risen 115 percent.

"Maybe (in-state) tuition should have been going up the same way," he said.

Hatcher Returned To Jail In Lumberton

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LUMBERTON, N.C. - Seven months after Eddie Hatcher was charged with 14 counts of kidnapping in the armed takeover of a newspaper office, he has returned to North Carolina following an unsuccessful extradition fight.

Unless his attorneys request an earlier hearing, Hatcher will remain in the Robeson County jail under no bond, and his arraignment will not be held before July 17 - the earliest date for scheduling arraignments, a prosecutor said.

Hatcher's case will "pick up where it left off" when the kidnapping charges were filed last December, Robeson County District Attorney Richard Townsend said.

"I'm assuming that his case wouldn't be treated any different than anybody else's," he said.

Hatcher, who fled before his arraignment on the second-degree kidnapping charges, arrived at the Robeson County Jail about 1:30 a.m. Sunday after a flight that landed Saturday night at Raleigh-Durham International Airport from San Francisco. Officials said he was escorted by an extradition officer from the North Carolina Department of Correction.

Hatcher, 31, of Pembroke, who identifies himself as a Tuscarora Indian, is charged in the armed takeover of The Robesonian newspaper in Lumberton on Feb. 1, 1988.

Hatcher had said returning to North Carolina would put his life in danger, but a California appeals court on Friday refused to block his extradition.

Hatcher and Timothy Jacobs were charged with holding up to 20 people hostage during the 10-hour takeover. They said they were trying to draw attention to their allegations of corruption among public officials in Robeson County.

State Law On Joint Accounts Changes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Changes in state law that went into effect on Saturday will give North Carolinians more choices on what will happen to their checking accounts if they die or become incapacitated.

Prior to the changes, half of a joint checking account would be tied up in estate proceedings. But starting Monday, most financial institutions will have accounts that permit the survivor to immediately get all the money.

The changes in state law spell out three types of accounts that may be offered.

As described by officers at First Union here are the changes:

A payable-on-death feature allows someone to designate a beneficiary to receive the balance of checking, savings or certain certificate of deposit accounts if the account owner dies.

- A joint account may be designated to go entirely to the surviving account holder if one holder dies. Otherwise, a joint account would be divided equally between the survivor and the deceased holder's estate.

- A personal agency account can be an alternative to a power of attorney, usually obtained through a lawyer. As with a power of attorney, an agent is named who can act on behalf of the account owner - signing checks, endorsing checks and making deposits. This can help if someone is worried about having bills paid if he or she becomes incapacitated.

First Union, NCNB and Wachovia will introduce the accounts Monday. Many other banks, credit unions and savings and loans are expected to do the same, if they don't already have similar accounts.

IN THE STATE

Pregnant Inmates

RALEIGH (AP) — Pregnant admissions at the N.C. Correctional Center for Women have been increasing, and prison officials believe it's no coincidence.

"We had one woman come back here pregnant nine different times," said Faye Lassiter, superintendent of the women's prison. "And the reason she did that was to get the care for free."

"There was no doubt about what she was doing. We couldn't release her because she committed a crime," she said.

Pregnant admissions rose 71.6 percent in 1988 from the previous year. Last year there were 34 births, 17 state-paid abortions and eight miscarriages among the inmates at women's prison. Records for previous years are sporadic, making comparisons impossible.

unchanged from two in May 1988. Currituck and Dare counties tied for the lowest rate in May at 1.6 percent.

Roaming Bear

KINGS MOUNTAIN, N.C. (AP) — A bear romped through a backyard pool party, chased a herd of horses and hid in a kudzu patch in a Cleveland County community for five hours Saturday before being captured.

By the time the 300-pound, six-foot black bear was tranquilized, caged and carted back to the mountains, five law and wildlife enforcement agencies had helped in the hunt.

The bear, which had been spotted heading south for three days, probably left the mountains in northern Cleveland County searching for food and a mate, N.C. Wildlife Commission officials said.

Plane Mishap

WILMINGTON (AP) — USAir officials say there will be an investigation into a mishap at New Hanover International Airport when several tires on a Piedmont jet blew as it landed, resulting in a tire fire and an evacuation of passengers.

One passenger was taken to New Hanover Memorial Hospital after jumping off the plane's wing after the mishap Saturday, said Susan Young, a spokesman for USAir, which owns Piedmont. The passenger, whose name was not available, was treated for a sprained ankle and back pain and released, she said.

As the Boeing 737-200 came in for landing at about 11:15 p.m., two tires on the right main landing gear blew, Ms. Young said. The plane skidded up the runway on the tire rims and then a tire on the left side also blew.

The plane, flight 1703, had originated in Newark, N.J., and had traveled to Baltimore before arriving in Wilmington, its final destination. Ms. Young said there were six crew members and 55 passengers.

Joblessness

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina's unemployment rate for May 1989 was 3.4 percent, compared to 4 percent a month earlier and 3.3 percent a year ago, the state Employment Security Commission said.

Two counties, Graham at 12.5 percent and Tyrrell at 15.7 percent, have rates at or above 10 percent.

Poll Has Hunt Holding Slight Edge Over Helms

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — A new survey shows Democrat Jim Hunt running neck-and-neck with Jesse Helms in a hypothetical rematch of the bitter 1984 U.S. Senate race, but Hunt says his political decisions won't hinge on poll results.

The Charlotte Observer's Carolinas Poll, published today, showed 47 percent of registered voters favored Hunt, while 44 percent preferred the Republican senator. Eight percent liked neither or had no opinion. Because of the poll's margin of error, results could vary by 4.2 percentage points either way.

The poll surveyed 489 registered N.C. voters June 12-20.

In a 1983 Carolinas Poll, Hunt, then the governor, led Helms by a much wider margin, 50 percent to 31 percent.

Hunt disliked the comparison.

"I'm shocked to hear you say that the valid comparison is (1983), when we've been through the race and all we've been through," Hunt said. "After all the negative stuff and the money that was spent, I think it's significant that people still have me — who lost the race — ahead of him in the polls."

Neither man has announced his plans for 1990, and Hunt says polls won't determine what he does.

Eastern Increasing Daily Flights

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — Eastern Airlines has nearly tripled its flights in a move that was met with outrage from union workers who have been on strike against the carrier for four months.

"Fly Cheap. Die Cheap," about 100 striking pilots yelled Sunday at the first Eastern passengers to fly out of Fort Lauderdale since the strike of Bert Lauderdale since the strike began.

"Our purpose is to get the public aware of our problems and to let them know we are still on strike," said Robert Fay, a pilot for 32 years. "We're not here for greed. We're here on principle."

Eastern increased its daily flights to 225 from 80, serving 49 cities — including Charlotte, N.C. — instead of 27. The move was in line with a rebuilding plan the carrier has submitted to the bankruptcy court.

"Everything is going as planned — we're right on target to come back strong," said Eastern spokesman Robin Matell, who added that Sunday's schedule represents about 30 percent of what the rebuilt Eastern will become.

Flight 371 took off Sunday and was the first Eastern flight to leave Charlotte-Douglas International Airport since early March. Outside the terminal, about 15 pilots and machinists walked the picket line with signs saying Eastern was playing with passengers' lives. To some passengers, the picketers said: "I hope you make it."

At the only Eastern gate operating in Charlotte on Sunday, balloons and a banner welcomed passengers to the "new Eastern." Personnel served pastries, coffee and orange juice. A passenger was given a door prize of a free round-trip ticket.

Eastern will offer four daily flights from Raleigh-Durham International Airport to Atlanta beginning Aug. 1. Before the strike, Eastern had nine daily flights from RDU — six to Atlanta and three to LaGuardia Airport in New York.

By December, Eastern plans to reach its goal of 800 flights a day serving 77 cities, Matell said.

In San Francisco, one of the cities where service resumed, 300 striking machinists and pilots formed a line passengers had to push through.

At Hartsfield Atlanta International

Airport, passengers crowded Eastern's gates.

"It gives you an uneasy feeling to walk across a picket line," said Jeff Handler, who passed through Hartsfield on his way from Sarasota to Greenville, S.C. He noted his tickets cost $79 each way, much less than fares of competing airlines.

"Such is life," he said, smiling as he made his way through the crowded concourse.

In all, Eastern increased its scheduled daily flights to 225 from 80, serving 49 cities instead of 27. The move was in line with a rebuilding plan the carrier has submitted to U.S. bankruptcy court. Eastern filed for bankruptcy reorganization March 9, five days after the strike began.

Also Sunday, Continental Airlines, which like Eastern is also owned by Texas Air Corp., announced $76 one-way fares on U.S. flights for three days following the Fourth of July holiday. United Airlines plans to match the offer, said United spokesman Joseph Hopkins.

Before the Machinists union strike, Miami-based Eastern operated 1,040 daily flights to 102 cities and had 30,000 employees.

Currently, Eastern is operating with about 8,000 employees, including 300 pilots who did not honor the strike and 150 new pilots recruited and trained since the strike began. About 550 other pilots are in training, and a recruiting drive continues, said Eastern spokesman Robin Matell said.

By December, Eastern plans to reach its goal of 800 flights a day serving 77 cities, Matell said.

Crowe Will Retire

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush says he's sorry Adm. William J. Crowe Jr. has decided to retire this fall as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

"He did an outstanding job and is doing an outstanding job and very candidly, I'd like to have had him stay," the president told reporters at his family home in Kennebunkport, Maine, after Crowe announced his retirement plans on Sunday.

Crowe, interviewed on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press," said, "I am going to retire. I have not said that before, publicly."

The military chief said he will retire on Sept. 30 at the end of his second two-year term as chairman.

Crowe was appointed to the post in October 1985 by then-President Reagan and was reappointed in September 1987. Crowe, 64, had reportedly been urged by Bush for months to spend another two years in the post.

Florida Roundup Nets 2,220 Suspects

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

One thousand officers from the Florida Panhandle to the Keys arrested 2,000 people on charges of using or dealing crack, and police in Los Angeles arrested more than 400 people in anti-drug sweeps.

Many of the Florida suspects were nabbed by undercover officers posing as dealers, while others were captured in raids and dramatic foot chases.

Many also were back on the street within hours.

After the 48-hour roundup ended early Sunday, officers counted 2,076 arrests. In addition to the arrests, they seized 3,500 rocks of crack cocaine, 327 vehicles, more than $55,000 in cash, nearly 10 pounds of powdered cocaine and 50 firearms.

"It's gone way above our expectations," said Broward County Sheriff Nick Navarro, who organized "Operation Rock Pile," believed to be the largest coordinated effort against street-level drug users and dealers.

At some places Saturday night, authorities were taking in suspects at the rate of 100 an hour, with more than a third of the arrests in south Florida.

The Florida Sheriffs Association plans to meet later this month to plan more large drug sweeps, said Al Gordon, Broward Sheriff's spokesman.

"Look how much crack we took in. It shows these type of operations work. You can expect more," Gordon said.

Gang members were the targets of the police sweeps in Los Angeles, part of a continuing "Operation Hammer," which began last summer. Of the 412 people arrested, authorities said 221 were gang members.

But a religious leader said a bill that was enacted last year and allows police to designate particular gangs as criminal doesn't go far enough. The Rev. Carl Washington urged state lawmakers to revise the bill so that anyone can be charged for belonging to a gang.

"There's no such thing as a gang for social gathering," Washington said Sunday evening.

Gangs were believed to be the cause of violence that erupted Saturday during a six-hour soul concert at the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum. Nearly 250 officers assigned to the arena when warring gangs stabbed three people and fired shots at others, said Detective Tony Celli.

Details of the disturbance were unavailable from police, although a Los Angeles Times review of the concert said hundreds of skittish people ran for exits as fights broke out on the field.

Decision Sets Stage For Battle

By Jill Lawrence
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court decision today giving states expanded authority to restrict abortions is a blueprint for controversy in the 50 state legislatures and in hundreds of political races for years to come.

Even before the ruling was handed down, anti-abortion crusaders said they were ready to pressure state legislatures to tighten restrictions on abortion.

The court's decision gave them plenty to work with — so much so that moments after the justices had ruled, one key pro-choice advocate, Molly Yard of the National Organization for Women, said, "It chips away ... This is war against women."

In its ruling, the court stopped short of overturning a 16-year-old case that established a woman's right to an abortion. But in a ruling in a Missouri case, it said states can take a number of steps to restrict abortions, particularly in cases where they are not needed to save life.

More than a dozen states have laws on the books to restrict and even outlaw abortions, designed to take effect if the court overturned the 1973 ruling.

A News Analysis

However enforceable they are, they provide an early look at the direction that some legislatures are likely to take following the court's ruling — and demonstrate the difficulty of the job confronting NOW and other pro-choice groups.

Sarah Weddington, a Texas lawyer who successfully argued the 1973 case, predicted "a tremendous surge of legislative activity" and said the new ruling could lead to "abortion being almost, if not actually, illegal in at least some states and maybe many of the states."

The court also said it would review two more abortion cases next term, meaning that the political struggle about to ensue will take place on terms that could shift again before the year is out.

Under this cloud of uncertainty, abortion-rights groups are vowing to make their issue a litmus test for candidates for state legislatures.

Their premise: If you can't trust the high court to protect your right to abortion, at least you can vote for state and local officials who will.

"We intend to make this a decisive issue for the public's voting decisions in 1989 and 1990," says Kate Michelman, executive director of the National Abortion Rights Action League. "The pro-choice sleeping giant is awakening."

But the pro-choice leaders will face anti-abortion advocates whose hand has been strengthened by the court.

"I've always said that if the court overturns (the 1973 ruling) on Tuesday we'd introduce legislation on Wednesday to outlaw abortions," says Pennsylvania lawmaker Stephen Freind.

Public opinion polls on abortion have found virtually no shift in attitudes over the years. More than three-quarters of Americans have said since 1975 that abortion should be legal under all or certain circumstances; for the past decade some 60 percent have said they approve of legal abortion if a woman and her doctor agree to it.

But intense debate has continued in state legislatures, resulting in a welter of varying statutes and a sizable contingent of lawmakers who looked with dread at the idea of refueling the abortion debate at the state level.

NARAL estimates more than 250 abortion-related bills have been introduced in state legislatures since 1988. State lawmakers of both parties have used terms like "nightmare" and "gridlock" to describe the prospect of even greater state control over abortions.

Nearly three dozen states have laws requiring parental consent for abortions for minor women, parental notification or both, and all but a dozen have cut off Medicaid financing of abortions for poor women.

Justices Bounce Abortion Issues Back To The States

argued successfully in the Roe vs. Wade case. "So in terms of is abortion legal or illegal in the various states, tomorrow it's going to be the same as today."

After Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist read portions of his main opinion for the court, Blackmun calmly read for nine minutes, denouncing the court's action.

Blackmun, author of the Roe vs. Wade decision, said that the court had silently invited further challenges that would lead to the overturning of the 1973 ruling.

From the bench, Blackmun said, "The silence is callous. It is also profoundly disruptive of this court as an institution."

"This Supreme Court's decision is a major setback for women," said Judith Lichtman, president of the Women's Legal Defense Fund. "The decision is an open invitation for anti-choice groups to bring more cases and for state legislatures to pass anti-choice legislation which the court can use to overturn Roe v. Wade."

"I think it's going to go down," Randall Terry, president of the anti-abortion group Operation Rescue, said.

Today's ruling is a significant setback for abortion rights advocates because other states now may follow Missouri's lead.

But a majority of the justices said they were unwilling, in this case, to overturn or even reconsider the court's landmark, 16-year-old decision in Roe vs. Wade.

The court also said it will review in its next term, which begins next October, two additional abortion cases in which Roe vs. Wade is under attack. One of the cases is from Illinois; the other from Ohio.

"It chips away. There will be three more cases next fall," National Organization for Women president Molly Yard said. "They will chip away some more. Pretty soon nothing much will be left for a woman in controlling her reproductive life."

"This is war against women," she said.

In it, the court said women have a constitutional right, based on their right to privacy, to seek and obtain abortions.

The Roe vs. Wade ruling said a woman's decision to have an abortion during the first three months of pregnancy must be left to her and her doctor. It said states may regulate abortions during the second trimester only to protect the woman's health, and may take steps to protect fetal life in the third trimester.

State authority to regulate abortions after the first trimester was not made absolute, however.

The constitutional right established in 1973 remains after today's decision, but it is now easier for states to interfere with that right.

Four members of the court — Rehnquist and Justices Byron R. White, Antonin Scalia and Anthony M. Kennedy — appeared ready to scrap Roe vs. Wade.

But only Scalia said the 1973 ruling should be overturned outright.

Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, the crucial swing vote on this issue, joined in reversing a federal appeals court that had thrown out the Missouri regulations. But her separate opinion in the case dealt mainly with the intricacies of the Missouri regulations, and with procedural matters.

O'Connor did not give any indication that she was ready to remove abortion as a constitutional right.

Justices William J. Brennan and Thurgood Marshall joined Blackmun's dissenting opinion. Justice John Paul Stevens dissented from most portions of the court's decision.

Sue Roselle, executive director of Women's Health Services Inc. of Pittsburgh, a non-profit clinic which does about 7,000 abortions per year, reported, "The telephones are ringing off the hook."

"Women are saying, 'I want my abortion now before they change the law.'"

In her separate opinion — critical to today's outcome — O'Connor said, "There is no necessity to accept the state's invitation to re-examine the constitutional validity of Roe vs. Wade."

She added, "The court today has accepted the state's every interpretation of its abortion statute and has upheld, under our existing precedents, every provision of that statute which is properly before us."

Court Disagrees On Displays

Justice Anthony M. Kennedy, participating in his first church-state case since joining the court in 1988, dissented in voting to permit the Nativity scene.

The other dissenters were Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Justices Byron R. White and Antonin Scalia.

Blackmun said the Nativity scene, or creche, violates the Constitution because "nothing in the context of the display detracts from the creche's religious message."

That message, Blackmun said, is spelled out unmistakably in the display.

"Glory to God in the Highest!" says the angel in the creche — glory to God because of the birth of Jesus," he said. "This praise to God in Christian terms is indisputably religious — indeed sectarian."

By contrast, he said display containing the menorah includes symbols that support the nation's pluralist tradition.

"The city's overall display must be understood as conveying the city's secular recognition of different traditions for celebrating the winter holiday season," he said.

Some Had No Father To Honor

Dear Abby: I am writing on behalf of a large group of children who had no father to honor on Father's Day. Their fathers are not dead; they are "deadbeats" who make up the 2 million absent parents nationwide (95 percent of whom are fathers) who don't pay their child support.

The following statistics are appalling, and paint a picture of a social problem that has reached crisis proportions:

— Fifty percent of fathers do not pay their child support — leaving $3.7 billion unpaid each year.

— If the trend continues, over one out of four children born today will be a welfare recipient at some time before they reach the age of 18.

— Affluent fathers are just as likely to not pay their court-ordered support as fathers earning less than $10,000 a year.

— As an attorney, and the founder of the Center for Enforcement of Family Support, I've seen the effect that non-payment has on children. Tragically, non-payment is all too often accompanied by a breakdown in the father/child relationship. — Dennis A. Cohen, Los Angeles

Dear Mr. Cohen: You have made an important contribution to this column. On behalf of more than 2 million children whose fathers have failed them (financially), thank you for writing.

Dear Abby: Since my husband and I divorced five years ago, legal debts and other expenses have kept me on the brink of bankruptcy.

Six months ago, I took a new job as a secretary, and I need to know what I can say to my co-workers when they invite me to join them for lunch at nearby restaurants. I've already told them that it is only rarely (once a month at the most) that I can afford to eat out. I've had to explain my circumstances because they know approximately what my salary is, and they can't understand why I can't afford expensive lunches. I am tired of having to trot out these circumstances, and I don't want them taking pity on me and "treating" me when I know I can't reciprocate. If I merely say I'm having financial problems, they may think I don't know how to handle money.

The same thing happened on my last job, and I ended up being the "office poor person." People don't understand why I'm driving a 21-year-old car. They don't understand why I don't go to the doctor when I should, or why I live in the neighborhood I live in, and so on.

I like all my co-workers and hate to cut them off when they ask questions. I don't want them to think I have something to hide, or that I don't trust them enough to be open with them.

Please tell me how to handle this.

— The Office Poor Person
Dear O.P.P.: Since you've already told your co-workers that you can't afford to lunch with them daily, it's not necessary to explain further.

As for "explaining" why you are driving a 21-year-old car and aren't going to the doctor when you should, it's no concern of theirs, so don't beat yourself up trying to justify it.

If they continue to invite you to join them for lunch daily, hold your head high, and respond with a firm but friendly, "Not today, thank you — perhaps another time."

Confidential To R.H. In Bozeman, Mont.: Don't ever ask anyone to buy you a present. It's usually much cheaper to buy it yourself.

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA. 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Two Wed Sunday Afternoon

STANTONSBURG — Tara Denise Tyndall and Lonnie Kim Jernigan were married at 3 p.m. Sunday in the First Baptist Church.

The Rev. Max Patterson conducted the double-ring ceremony. Wedding music was provided by organist Barbara Patterson and soloist Suzanne Murphy.

Parents of the bridal couple are Mr. and Mrs. Owen Tyndall Jr. and Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Jernigan Jr.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a floor-length gown with a cathedral train of traditional bridal satin with beaded sposabella lace. The fitted bodice featured a V-neckline, Deep V back, leg o' muton sleeves and basque waist. The skirt was bordered with beaded scalloped sposabella lace. She wore a tiered veil of illusion with a hand-rolled edge flowing from a profile headpiece. She carried a cascading nose gay of pink roses and white miniature carnation with baby's breath entwined with English ivy.

Shannon Tyndall, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Terrie Maxon of Rockwall, Texas, sister of the bridegroom; Christy White and Kelly Gill of Wilson, and Debbie Lamm of Lucama. Jamie Mercer of Wilson and Paula Sherrod of Baily, cousin of the bridegroom, were honorary bridesmaids.

Attendants wore petal-pink, teal-length taffeta dresses and carried nose gays of pink and white miniature carnations with baby's breath decorated with pink and white streamers.

Kristen Lamm of Lucama was flower girl. Todd Exum of Stantonburg was ring bearer.

The bridegroom's father was best man. Ushers were Jim Maxon of Rockwall, Texas, brother-in-law of the bridegroom; Donnie Grant of Stantonburg, uncle of the bridegroom; Phil Grant of Stantonburg, cousin of the bridegroom; Ronnie Moye of Stantonburg, and Felton Moothing of Eureka.

A reception was held at Willow Springs Country Club in Wilson. The bridegroom's parents hosted a rehearsal dinner in Goldsboro.

After a wedding trip to Williamsburg, Va., the couple will reside in Stantonburg.

The bride attended Beddingfield High School of Wilson and is employed with Carolina East Kier System. The bridegroom is employed with Food Lion.

Couple Are Married Sunday

Gwendolyn Demetrius Pilgreen of Washington, N.C. and Kelvin Battle of Greenville were married Sunday at 5 p.m. at the home of the bride's brother. Dr. James B. Crandol officiated the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mary Elizabeth Pilgreen of Route 3, Washington and the late Jessie Pilgreen Jr. The bridegroom is the son of Lillie Bell Ward of Greenville.

Music was presented by organist Greg Witakers and soloists Mr. and Mrs. Olinka Little, cousins of the bride, of Greenville, and Billy Battle, brother of the bridegroom.

Bessie Pilgreen Peele, sister of the bride, and Joyce Knox, sister-in-law of the bride, both of Greenville directed the wedding.

Given in marriage by her mother and escorted by her brother, Bobby Knox, the bride wore a Lady Washington gown of shirred taffeta with a pick-up skirt over deep lace flounces. Lace with sequins and pearls trimmed the sweetheart neckline. The back was enhanced with candy box bows and a cathedral train. The fingertip veil attached to a V-shaped headpiece with pearl sprays. She carried a rose bouquet with ivy and streamers.

Mildred Pilgreen of Washington, N.C., sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Keisha Pilgreen of Pactolus, a cousin of the bride, was maid of honor. They wore pink tea-length gowns and carried flowers with baby's breath and streamers.

Bridesmaids were Verneesha Pilgreen and Devonoco Perkins, both nieces of the bride, Burnell Battle and Kathleen Battle, both sisters of the bridegroom, and Barbara Jean Battle, a cousin of the bridegroom, all of Greenville. They wore royal blue tea-length gowns and carried flowers with baby's breath and streamers.

Shanita Ward and Quinita Ward, twin sisters of the bridegroom of Greenville, were flower girls. They wore pink tea-length gowns and carried white baskets with pink ribbon.

Calvin Pilgreen of Washington, N.C., a nephew of the bride, was ring bearer.

The brother of the bridegroom, Kenneth Battle of Greenville, was best man.

Ushers were Bennie Pilgreen of Greenville and Raymond Pilgreen of Washington, both brothers of the bride; Monterrus Pilgreen, a nephew of the bride, Carlis Battle and Billy Battle, both brothers of the bridegroom, and Lindsay Battle, a cousin of the bridegroom, all of Greenville.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Ray Knox, given by the families of the bridal couple.

MRS. BATTLE

The bride and bridegroom graduated from North Pitt High School in Bethel. The bridegroom is employed by Carolina Dairies of Greenville.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will live in Greenville.

Mr. Cannon, Miss Alligood Married

WASHINGTON, N.C. — Jeannie Paige Alligood of Chocowinity and Tony Lynn Cannon of Washington were married at 3 p.m. Saturday in the Church of God.

The Rev. Elmer Bauman officiated the double-ring ceremony. Wedding music was provided by organist Annette Baluis and soloists John Allen Toppings, brother-in-law of the bride.

MRS. CANNON

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Herman S. Daughtry of Chocowinity and Delmar T. Alligood of Washington. Parents of the bridegroom are Mattie B. and John Cotton Cannon of Washington.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of crystal organza over peau-de-soie. Scalloped Brussels lace, beaded with iridescents and seed pearls enhanced the sweetheart neckline. Tiers of flounced ruffles were inlaid into the full skirt. She wore a crown of strung pearls, Austrian crystals and re-embroidered Alencon lace with a bubbled pouf of illusion. She carried red and white roses interspersed with baby's breath, seed pearl sprays and greenery, adorned with white lace ruffles and tied with red and white cascading ribbons.

Mary Jo Rivenbark of Greenville was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Yvonne Kolb of Washington, N.C., Janet Whichard of Chocowinity and Denise Kosto of Washington. They wore black and white tissue taffeta gowns and carried brandy snifters containing lighted candles atop a white lace ruffle. The stem of each snifter was tied with black and white cascading ribbons.

The bridegroom's father was best man. Charles Kolb III of Washington, William Whichard of Chocowinity and Jeff Kosto of Washington.

The bridegroom's parents hosted a rehearsal dinner at Kirkpatrick's, Holiday Inn.

The bride attended Washington High School and Pitt Community College and is employed with Pavilion Internists of Greenville. The bridegroom is a graduate of D.H. Conley High School and is employed with National Spinning Co., Washington.

The couple will reside in Washington.

Dawes-Lacy Pair Are Wed Saturday

Joyce Ray Lacy and Dalton Ray Dawes were united in marriage Saturday at 6 p.m. in the Phillipi Disciple Church. Elder David Carter conducted the candlelight, double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Morris Lacy. The bridegroom is the son of Sherman Dawes of Robersonville and the late Cora Dawes.

A program of wedding music was presented by organist Onessias Brooks of Greenville and vocalists Nellie Roberts of Greenville and Tonya Durham of Williamston.

The wedding was directed by Mary B. Baker of Greenville.

Given in marriage by her brother, Morris Lacy, the bride wore an organza gown with a Queen Anne neckline trimmed in Venice lace, a basque waistline and leg o'mutton sleeves. The chapel-length lace train was appliqued with pearls and sequins. The skirt had a bow and bubble-shaped bustle. She wore a circle headpiece of satin trimmed with pearls and sequins with single illusion.

Darlene Baker of Durham was maid of honor and Debra Stokes of Robersonville was matron of honor. Candice Stokes of Stokes, god-daughter of the bride, was junior bride. Bridesmaids included Carmella Loving of Philadelphia, Brenda Brown and Wyetha Thompson, nieces of the bride, and Gwendolyn Daniels, cousin of the bride, all of Greenville, Glenda Dawes of Robersonville, sister of the bridegroom, and Sandra Little of Bethel, niece of the bride. Lovely Roberson of Robersonville, niece of the bride, was flower girl.

The honor attendant wore a cream semi-fitted tea-length dress and carried white roses and peach carnations tied with streamers and baby's breath. Aattendants wore romantic peach tea-length dresses and carried peach colored roses accented with cream bows.

The bridegroom's father was best man and Alton Stephenson of Baltimore, Md., nephew of the bridegroom, was ring bearer. Ushers included William Dawes of Raleigh, brother of the bridegroom, William Andrews of Bethel, Travis Wallace and Donnie Durham of

MRS. DAWES

Williamston, Tracy Stokes and Ernest Perkins of Robersonville, and Jeffrey Roberts of Greenville.

A reception was held in the Greenville Moose Lodge. Several showers and a luncheon honored the couple before their marriage.

The bride attended N.C. Central University and is employed by Burroughs Wellcome. The bridegroom attended Roanoke High School and Martin Community College. He is employed by West Point Pepperell.

The couple will live in Greenville after visiting Disneyworld.

Hone Reading Skills This Summer

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — June is to kids what Fridays are to grownups — full of anticipation.

Yet, as Robert L. Baseman observes, summer can be too much of a good thing. Sun, fun and leisure lose their allure along about the third week of July.

No wonder, then, that librarians report a big increase in reading among children during July and August, says Baseman, president of the Britannica Learning Centers. This is a subsidiary of Encyclopaedia Britannica and teaches basic and advanced reading and other supplemental skills at learning centers across the country.

"The amount of time spent in leisure reading is distinctly related to children's reading comprehension, ability to spell and size of their vocabulary and overall reading ability," he says. "Summer reading not only can keep skills sharp but add to them."

Baseman offers suggestions to help parents enhance their young children's reading skills during summer doldrums.

— Discuss the products you buy at the supermarket and ask your children to help find coupons for them in the newspaper. At the supermarket, give them part of your shopping list let them to find the items on the shelves. Also have them read to you instructions and labels on the packages.

— Let children help plan family outings and vacations by looking through brochures and travel guides. They can also practice their reading on maps, roads and street signs — even on menus when you stop to eat.

— Ask your child to find the movie pages of the newspaper by looking at the index. Then select a movie together and look for its playing schedule. Use the TV section of the newspaper or a TV guide to select programs for viewing.

— Children enjoy receiving and writing letters. Summer is a good time for writing to relatives and establishing pen pals. If your child is very young, he could dictate messages or stories to you. The process of reading and writing is learned that way, too.

— Write notes to your children regarding everyday events at home. They'll love it. For example, "Jason, please put the garbage cans back in the garage this afternoon," or "Marie, you did a great job cleaning up your room. Thanks. Mom."

Gromyko Dies At 79

He was replaced as foreign minister that summer by Eduard A. Shevardnadze, a newcomer to foreign affairs, and named to the then largely ceremonial post of president.

He stepped down from the Communist Party's ruling Politburo Sept. 30 and was replaced as president by Gorbachev a day later. In April, Gromyko lost his last post, membership in the policy-making Central Committee.

Gromyko ended his career gracefully, unlike many other Soviet officials who were abruptly stripped of posts and written out of official history books as new Kremlin chiefs came on board.

He maintained a large measure of official respect even though some of the foreign policy decisions made during his tenure — such as the 1979 intervention in Afghanistan — were condemned.

Archie Brown, a Soviet affairs specialist at Oxford University in Britain, said today that Gromyko will be remembered "as a fairly formidable figure and certainly as an operator and as a survivor."

But, he added in an interview with British Broadcasting Corp., Gromyko was not "an especially enlightened Soviet leader."

Gromyko generally took a backseat to the leaders he served during the years that the Soviet Union cemented its grip on Eastern Europe and rose to become a nuclear power.

Indeed, some observers attributed his longevity to his political flexibility and his apparent failure to make a bid for personal power. Khrushchev, who often heaped insult on Gromyko, once said in his presence, "If I tell him to sit on an iceberg, he'll stay there and freeze, but he won't move."

Gromyko instead served as the articulator of Kremlin positions to the world through his speeches. He was also well-known for his off-the-cuff speaking ability and his talent at handling the world press with vitriolic rhetoric and sarcastic humor.

But perhaps his most important work came at bargaining tables from Yalta to Geneva, where he helped negotiate everything from allied war strategy to the SALT nuclear weapons treaties.

Gromyko gained a reputation as "Mr. Nyet" for his tough negotiating style. He was nicknamed "Grim Grom" for his stony countenance.

His craggy face beneath horn-rimmed glasses became instantly recognizable to the outside world.

In 1978, Cyrus R. Vance, President Carter's secretary of state, praised Gromyko's diplomatic skill.

"As a thoroughly professional practitioner of the diplomatic trade, he has few peers in the modern world," Vance said. "He represents his country with great skill, high intelligence and spirit, tempered in decades of experience."

Andrei Andreyevich Gromyko was born July 18, 1909, to Byelorussian peasants.

Joining the Communist Party in 1931, he first studied economics but switched to a Foreign Ministry whose ranks were depleted by Stalin's purges.

At 39, Gromyko was the youngest ambassador in Soviet history. But he proved his expertise by helping put together the alliance against Nazi Germany.

His career took him to Tehran, Potsdam and Yalta, where one story says Winston Churchill threw cigar stubs at him after he repeatedly whispered into Stalin's ear that he should demand Germany's unconditional surrender.

Rising through the ranks of the foreign service, Gromyko served as ambassador to Britain in 1952-53.

He also continued a relatively slow rise through party ranks with an appointment as a non-voting member of the Central Committee.

TOKYO — The governing Liberal Democrats, reeling from financial and sex scandals, suffered a setback in Tokyo elections viewed as a barometer for national elections later this month, official results showed today.

Of 128 seats in the Tokyo Metropolitan Assembly, the party won 43 seats, a loss of 20, in Sunday's vote and the Japan Socialist Party increased its representation from 12 to 29 seats, according to the Tokyo Board of Elections.

Also winning seats were seven independent candidates backed by the Socialists, the country's largest opposition party.

Opposition parties now hold a combined majority of 85 seats in the Tokyo assembly. In the outgoing 127-member assembly, they together held just one more seat than the Liberal Democrats.

The Komei (Clean Government) Party won 26 seats, the Japan Communist Party 14 seats, and the Democratic Socialist Party three seats. Four minor parties had one seat each, and independent candidates not backed by the Socialists captured two seats.

Prime Minister Souseku Uno, plagued by allegations he has kept a number of paid mistresses, blamed an unpopular sales tax imposed April 1 for the Liberal Democrats' setback.

Uno, the party president, did not stump for Liberal Democrats at the request of the Tokyo branch of the party.

A senior governing party official in Tokyo, Shigeru Kasuya, told the NHK television network that the party's losses were partly due to skepticism about the Liberal Democrats' campaign promise to consider doing away with the tax.

He said Tokyo residents were suspicious of the party's "true intention."

Chief Cabinet Secretary Masajuro Shiokawa said voter "distrust in politics" led to the Liberal Democrats' losses, adding that the government will do its best to achieve political reforms and regain public confidence.

Japan Socialist Party chairwoman Takako Doi told NHK, "Our party's gains are a result of anger against the current political situation."

Prominent in the opposition's campaign were criticisms of the Liberal Democrats for the new 3 percent tax, the broad Recruit influence-peddling scandal, and Uno's alleged extramarital affairs.

will allow states to limit or outlaw the right to abortion.

"I'm tired," Bush, 65, confessed Sunday after a day of jogging, tennis, swimming, fishing, golf and then more fishing.

Bush said Sunday he regretted the decision of Adm. William J. Crowe to step down as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff in September.

"Very candidly, I'd like to have had him stay," Bush told reporters on the golf course. "He did an outstanding job and is doing an outstanding job."

Crowe announced his decision Sunday on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press."

Hundreds of people were expected to line the shoreline of this oceanside resort to watch the Bush fireworks this evening, to be set off from his six-acre compound on Walker's Point by the same company that did the 1986 Statue of Liberty fireworks in New York Harbor.

Presidential press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said an anonymous donor helped subsidize the $20,000 display by the New Castle, Pa., company of pyrotechnics specialist George Zambelli. Zambelli has said he expects to set off two tons of aerial explosives in the 15-minute display.

Bush's stand on abortion has changed since he supported the right of a woman to choose an abortion when he first ran for president in 1980. More recently he has favored a constitutional amendment to outlaw the procedure.

It is one of four constitutional amendments Bush is advocating. The others call for a balanced federal budget, line-item veto authority on spending bills and, most recently, an amendment to restore the right of states and Congress to ban flag-desecration, a power the Supreme Court stripped away last week in a controversial 5-4 decision.

The president's flag pronouncements won Bush a fair degree of public support, including from Bartley's Dockside Restaurant in downtown Kennebunkport, which displays a different sign out front each time the president visits.

This weekend's offering: "Protecting our flag means protecting our freedom. Thanks Mr. President. We're glad you're here."

Thirty-five members of the Bush family are in town for the Independence Day festivities.

Veterans Can Still Play; Youngsters Thriving, Too

As Wimbledon Tourney Enters Final Week Of Play

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WIMBLEDON, England — "Well," John McEnroe said, "I'm still here."

All of the big names are still around, it seems, as Wimbledon begins its second week, the one that really matters.

With the men's and women's singles fields each down to the last 16 players, form was holding in the stretch run to next weekend's championship matches.

Nineteen seeds — 10 women, nine men — remained as today's crowded schedule began, an amount normal for the grass courts of the All England Club, where bad bounces and big-serving opponents often leave big names making early exits. Last year, for instance, 10 men's seeds and 11 women's remained as the fourth round started.

What made that figure surprising this year, though, was the feeling when Wimbledon began last Monday that the seedings were bloated by oldtimers living off past glories and teen-agers whose baseline games would be exposed on fast grass.

But the 103rd edition of the Grand Slam tournament is proving that veterans such as the 30-year-old McEnroe and 34-year-old Chris Evert can still play. And that upstarts such as 17-year-old French Open champion Michael Chang and Arantxa Sanchez are to be reckoned with on any surface.

"I wanted to get through this week and that's what I've done," Evert said after beating Anne Hobbs of Britain 6-4, 6-1 on Centre Court Saturday.

Evert decided at the last minute to play Wimbledon this year after skipping the French Open because of a lack of motivation. She said her game still lacked aggressiveness but expected that to come as the tournament progressed.

"I think now the whole level of tennis is going to be better the second week because you've got the best 16 grass-court players left," the three-time women's champion said.

Sanchez, who scored her first big victory over Evert in last year's French Open and beat Steffi Graf for the title at Paris last month, has been compared more and more with Evert as Wimbledon has gone on. She's a baseliner, like the American, and has turned into a darling of the crowds.

But unlike Evert, who picked up the nickname "Ice Maiden" for her composure, Sanchez lets it all go. She smiles, rolls her eyes and shouts "Vamos!" — the Spanish word for "Go!" — on big points.

Chang won the French men's title by confusing top-seeded Ivan Lendl in the fourth round and outlasting Stefan Edberg in the final. Here, he outjumped, out hustled and outplayed three good grass-court players in his opening rounds and turned to the net more and more for points.

"I think everybody has a good shot at winning," Chang said after coming back from a 5-1 deficit in the fourth set to beat serve-and-volley specialist Michiel Schapers 4-6, 6-3, 7-5, 7-5 Saturday. "Being in the round of 16 in the French, I didn't think I could win it. But in the big tournaments, people play better."

This is just Chang's second Wimbledon, but the teen-ager from Placentia, Calif., knows enough about grass-court tennis — and human nature — to realize that what he did last month at Paris won't necessarily help him this week in southwest London.

"On any given day, if the situation's right — maybe somebody didn't get a good night's sleep or is out too late, or somebody might be feeling good and playing the absolutely best tennis that day — things really can change," he said.

Crazy Play Gives Yankees Extra Run

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — So you think you know baseball, huh?

Here's a crazy play — and even more amazing, it really happened Saturday night at Yankee Stadium.

With one out in the eighth inning and New York ahead 4-1, the Yankees had Mike Pagliarulo at third base and Bob Geren at first. Manager Dallas Green put on the suicide-squeeze play and both runners broke on a pitch to Wayne Tolleson.

Tolleson's bunt was caught in the air by pitcher Jay Aldrich. Realizing he had an easy double play, Aldrich tossed the ball to first baseman Greg Brock to end the inning.

Pagliarulo, at this point, had already crossed the plate. The Brewers, meanwhile, trotted off the field.

So what's the call?

"I haven't seen that play in 26 years. I'm just glad I recognized it when I did see it," said home plate umpire Larry Barnett, the crew chief.

Barnett, citing Rule 7.10, said that even though Pagliarulo never tagged up, the run counted because the Brewers did not appeal that he left early.

"It's a 'fourth-out' situation," Barnett told startled writers. "Milwaukee had to throw the ball to third base for what would be the fourth out. Then, they can choose to make that one the final out and prevent the run from scoring."

"But Milwaukee didn't do that, and it's not my job to tell them. They have to come up with it," he said.

Barnett said he pointed to the plate and motioned to the press box, indicating the run had scored. But no one except the other umpires saw the signal.

"If I had to do it again," he said Sunday, "I probably should have been more emphatic. I'd probably do some things different. Evidently, no one saw me do it."

No one at all. The scoreboard still showed 4-1 and Green didn't know the Yankees had scored until Barnett told him on the way to the locker room. Brewers manager Tom Trebelhorn didn't know until a reporter mentioned it 30 minutes after the game ended.

Aldrich found out later he'd been charged with an earned run. Tolleson discovered he had been credited with an RBI. And in the showers, Tolleson told Lee Guetterman he didn't get a save because Guetterman protected a four-run lead in the ninth inning, not a three-run edge.

"It's kind of tough to lose a save when you get all three batters out," Guetterman said with a smile. "The next time I go in, I'm going to ask the umpire what the score is. Oh well, we won."

Imagine, though, if the Brewers had scored three runs in the ninth inning, and then found out they still had lost. Remember, this is the ballpark where George Brett's pine-tar home run did not count.

"That would've been funny if they'd tied it up," New York's Don Slaught said. "Uh, uh. Thought they'd tied it up."

Trebelhorn admitted he knew the rule and knew the run should count, but thought it didn't.

"It's very simple. We should have appealed the fourth out. It wasn't too smart on our part, but it's kind of a moot point," he said.

"No one said a word, so I didn't think the run scored," he said. "Did (Barnett) signal? I didn't see it. It's academic, but I think the whole thing was stupid on our part and not too good on his part, either."

Pitt Tops Edenton By 8-2 To Win First Round Series

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt County left no doubts Sunday night as it rolled up an 8-2 victory over Edenton in the third game of its best-of-three American Legion playoff series with Edenton.

Pitt, which won the first game Friday night, 6-2, bowed on Saturday in Edenton, 8-7, in 11 innings, to even the series at one game each.

But Pitt took the lead early Sunday night and never let up in taking the first round finale. Post 39 will now move on to the second round, facing Rocky Mount in another best-of-three series. That will start Tuesday at 8 p.m. in Rocky Mount. Game two will be played in Greenville on Wednesday, and game three, if needed, will be back in Rocky Mount on Thursday.

Pitt took the lead in the bottom of the first, getting a run. David Leisten opened with a single and stole second. He took third on an out and scored when Jamie Brewington was safe on an error.

"David Leisten really got us going early," Coach Grant Jarman said.

"He ended up with three hits and did a fine job for us."

Pitt added three more in the second, upping the lead to 4-0. With one out, Ty Little singled and Travis Clemons drew a walk. Derrick Clark beat out a bunt to load the bases. Leisten then followed with a hit to center, scoring both Little and Clemons. A wild pitch allowed Clark to score.

John Bolen led off the third with a triple to left center, scoring the fifth Pitt run when Little singled.

Aging Bonecrusher Falls To Younger Foe In 7th

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FAYETTEVILLE — Former World Boxing Association champion James "Bonecrusher" Smith says he spent too much time promoting his fight with Razor Ruddock, who floored Smith with a pair of seventh-round punches.

"I should've spent more time in the gym, but I wanted to put on a good show for Fayetteville," said the 249-pound Smith, who lives in Lillington. "It's a young man's game."

Ruddock, the Canadian heavyweight champion from Toronto, scored his 15th career knockout against Smith on Sunday.

"I wanted it so bad," Ruddock said. "I was hitting him with everything I had. I hit him with a couple of shots, I relaxed and got my punches together."

"I'm not taking anything away from Bonecrusher. I think he'll help make me a champion," he said.

Ruddock, 23, used a left uppercut to send Smith against the ropes and finished the ex-champ with a flurry of punches. Smith fell face first onto the canvas and was counted out at 2:18 of the seventh round of the 10-round event at the Cumberland County Memorial Arena.

Ruddock is 22-1-1 with 15 knockouts, while Smith is 19-8-1.

Ruddock, who weighed in at 227 pounds, was ahead on all three judges' cards when the fight ended.

Smith, 36, knocked down Ruddock with a right midway through the second round. But Ruddock got to his feet and delivered a left seconds before the bell.

"That's what champions are made of," said Ruddock. "I was under control. I was stunned, but I knew where I was."

Overton Wins Second Tour Event

Kristi Overton of Greenville captured her second Pro Tour water ski slalom event this past weekend in Fort Worth, Tex. The win moved her into the women's overall lead in points with just two Pour Tour stops remaining. In the four previous events, she had one first and two thirds. Friday, Overton skied her way into the top six and on Saturday was first of the top four qualifiers for Sunday's semi-finals. In head-to-head competition Overton went against Karen Neville of Australia, beating her. She then met Suzi Graham of Canada, who had beaten Camille Duvall of Florida. Overton captured an easy victory in the finals to take the $3,000-plus first prize. The next stop on the tour will be this weekend at St. Louis.

Cox Honored At Hargrave

CHATHAM, Va. — Mike Cox, the son of Jack H. Cox Sr. of Greenville, has been chosen to the Danville All-Metro and the All-Virginia Independent Conference baseball team as a pitcher for Hargrave Military Academy. Cox earned a 6-1 record during the season, with a 1.34 earned run average. His top win was a no-hitter against Fishburne Military, while his only loss came against Randolph-Macon in the VIC championship game. When not on the mound, Cox played third base or first base. He led the team in doubles with nine and batted .435. Cox also earned honor role standing academically.

Fittipaldi Wins Third Straight

CLEVELAND (AP) — Emerson Fittipaldi has seemingly turned back the clock. Seventeen years ago, at age 25, the Brazilian was dazzling the Formula One circuit with his exploits, including five victories — three of them in a row — and the first of his two season driving championships. Now 42, Fittipaldi is doing all his driving in North America and he is not going sedately into the twilight of his career. "It's a very nice feeling to be where we are now," the smiling Fittipaldi said Sunday after winning the Cleveland Grand Prix, his third straight Indy-car victory and his fourth victory in five starts. "This kind of thing has happened only once before, in 1972 when I was driving for Lotus and I won three straight Grand Prix's, too," Fittipaldi said. The latest victory was a runaway as he beat second-place Mario Andretti to the finish line by 16.95 seconds even after slowing over the last 10 laps to conserve fuel. It appeared the only driver who could seriously challenge Fittipaldi was pole-winner Michael Andretti, who led the first 26 laps. But Michael's hopes of victory ended when he and Mario, his father and teammate, banged together during a pit stop. Michael was leaving his pit when Mario, the defending Cleveland champion, moved past him into his own pit. The younger driver hesitated momentarily and the two Lola-Chevrolets bumped together, with Michael's car sustaining a broken tie-rod in the steering mechanism. "I guess we have some communications problem," Michael said. "It cost us the chance for the win. After that, the car was good enough for me to fight for third place, but it was not a winning car." Later, it was not a running car as electrical problems forced the younger Andretti out of the race after 61 laps. A similar pit incident last month at Milwaukee cost both Andrettis and Mario, also a former Formula One champion, said, "It looks like our timing is quite off. ... He was in front when he came in, but both here and Milwaukee, for some reason or another, there was a hesitation. It looked like he was going, then not going. "We'll have to set up a policy. It's happened twice and it won't happen again." Fittipaldi took the lead from Rick Mears in the pits on lap 27 and never again trailed in the 80-lap, 198.4-mile event at Burke Lakefront Airport.

Lewis Hopes To Expand Win Streak

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — The last stop on the IAAF Grand Prix's Nordic swing could be the best. One of the strongest long jump fields ever, headed by two-time Olympic champion Carl Lewis, will be the focal point of the DN Galan meet today. Lewis hopes to extend his long jump winning streak to 60. He'll be tested by Mike Powell and Larry Myricks, who finished 2-3 behind Lewis in the U.S. Olympic medal sweep in the 1988 Olympics at Seoul last year. Also competing are Robert Emmiyan, who recorded the second-longest jump in history two years ago with a leap of 29 feet, 1 inch at high altitude in the Soviet Union. Others in the field are Jaime Jefferson of Cuba and Americans Mike Conley and Leroy Burrell. Last month, Myricks won the U.S. Outdoor Championship at Houston at 28-6½, the longest jump this season. Lewis, who skipped the U.S. nationals, had the second-longest jump of 27-8 when he defeated Myricks last week at Lausanne, Switzerland. Lewis will switch back to the long jump after competing in the 100 meters in Saturday's Bislett Games at Oslo, Norway. Fellow American Calvin Smith clocked in 10.05 seconds to upset Lewis, the Olympic gold medalist, by .11. "It was one of those days. Now I'm focusing on long jumping in Stockholm," said Lewis, who had not lost to anyone in the 100 except Canada's Ben Johnson since Mark Witherspoon beat him in 1987. Lewis still is chasing Bob Beamon's 1968 world record of 29-2½, set at high altitude during the Mexico City Olympics. "I still believe I can improve as a jumper," Lewis said. "I've been doing the small things in training that I haven't had the time to do in the past because of the multiple events." Given the right conditions, it could push Lewis — who is concentrating on the 100 meters and the long jump this season rather than the 200 — past Beamon's 21-year-old mark. Smith, a former world record-holder in the 100 at 9.93 seconds, will run both sprints here. Also in the 200 are Floyd Heard and Witherspoon, who finished 1-2 in the U.S. nationals; Dennis Mitchell, who was runner-up in the 100 at Houston, and Robson da Silva of Brazil. Da Silva took the 200 at Oslo. Said Aouita of Morocco, who missed the 3,000-meter world mark by less than three seconds with a 7-minute, 34.79-second clocking at Oslo, heads the 1,500-meter field. Other top runners in track's blue-ribbon event include Kip Cheruiyot of Kenya, who has a seasonal best of 3:34.44, and Gennaro di Napoli of Italy, who had a 3:34.92 in the World Games Grand Prix meet at Helsinki, Finland, last Thursday. Addis Abebe, the 17-year-old Ethiopian long-distance sensation, will run his second 10,000 in four days. At Helsinki, he ran second in 27:17.82, a world junior record and the fourth-fastest time overall. Brahim Boutayeb of Morocco, the Olympic champion at Seoul, the Portuguese twin brothers, Domingos and Dionisio Castro, and Wodajo Bulti of Ethiopia will be among Abebe's chief challengers in the 10,000.

Note Helps Green Take Win

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MONTREAL — When Tammie Green bogeyed the 16th hole, her least favorite hole on the Beaconsfield Golf Club course, she asked caddy Jim Gilmour for the note she had written herself before the tournament began. It read: "Totally relaxed. Without fear." The words were magic for Green, who then played safe and parred the last two holes on Sunday to win her first career tournament — and first LPGA major — the $600,000 du Maurier Classic. "I was playing the practice round at the beginning of the week and I told Jim, 'I'm going to play this tournament totally relaxed.' He said, 'Write it down,'" said Green, 29, who won $90,000.

Gilmour is no ordinary caddy. He lugged the bag of Betsy King, this year's money leader, for two years before hooking up this season with Green, a native of Zanesville, Ohio. It was Gilmour she hugged first when she sank a one-foot putt on the 18th to beat Betsy King and Pat Bradley by one stroke. Green had fought nervousness throughout her three LPGA seasons and was visibly trembling when she fought to a final-round 72 to hold off the charging King and three-time champion Bradley. There was a time a charge by such big-name players would have had Green questioning whether she belonged on the course. "There was a time when I thought that," Green said of her famous rivals. "But I've played well in a few tournaments and I feel I can play with the best of them. "Sure, some of them were my idols when I was growing up. They are the best golfers in the world." Green, who started the day with a three-stroke lead, finished at 9-under-par 279. Following King and Bradley at 281 were Amy Alcott, the 1979 du Maurier winner who has 27 tour victories, Patty Sheehan, who has won 20 times, and Penny Hammel. Nancy Lopez, whose 40th career victory came in the last major, the LPGA Championship, had gotten to nine under before bogeying four holes on the treacherous back nine to finish at 283. Bradley had the low round of the day, a 67, to pull into a tie for second.

"There are so many good players out there today," said Bradley, who won the du Maurier when it was last held at Beaconsfield in 1985. "I know it must have been a great feeling for Tammie because there was a great field out there around her." "She withstood a lot and my hat's off to her." Bradley, who has finished second in three straight tournaments, was done in by a disastrous second round on Friday, when she shot 75. King, who has won four times this year and was coming off a win last week, had a crushing 74 on Saturday.

Babe Ruth League

Wachovia Bank.....11
Peeler's.....10

Wachovia Bank rallied for five runs in the bottom of the sixth inning to take an 11-10 victory over Peeler's and clinch the Greenville Babe Ruth League's regular season championship Sunday.

Peeler's went into the game with a chance to tie for the title with a victory. Peeler's took the lead with four runs in the first inning, while Wachovia scored twice in its half of the frame. Peeler's then added three more in the second for a 7-2 lead. Wachovia also scored three to close it to 7-5. It stayed that way until the fifth when Wachovia scored once to trim it to 7-6. Peeler's got that one back in the top of the sixth, however.

But in the bottom of the sixth, Wachovia struck for the lead. Mike Williams walked and moved to third on passed balls, James Stanley walked and the two worked a double steal with Williams scoring. Shea Harper reached on a fielder's choice and Stanley scored on a passed ball. Danny Batiste walked and stole second and Mark Taylor reached on an error, scoring Harper and Batiste. Taylor moved up on a passed ball and scored on a single by Jermaine Reed.

Peeler's rallied for two in the seventh, but fell short. Reed led Wachovia with three hits while Jimmy Rouse and Jeffrey Freeman each had two for Peeler's. The league will open its post-season tournament today as Everett's Pest Control takes on Coca-Cola at 5:30 p.m. and Home Builders meets Pepsi-Cola at 8 p.m. The tournament will be a single-elimination event.

Prep League

Crabby Sam's.....10
Computerland.....7

Crabby Sam's, which finished the regular season in third place, upset regular season champion Computerland, 10-7, in the winners' bracket of the Greenville Prep League tournament Sunday evening.

The win moves Crabby Sam's into the finals, while Computerland will face First Citizens in the losers' bracket finals on Thursday at 5 p.m. The winner advances to face Crabby Sam's for the title.

Crabby Sam's took the lead with two runs in the second and added two more in the third. Computerland then rallied for five in the third for a 5-4 lead. Crabby Sam's tied it up with one in the fourth but Computerland regained it, 6-5, in the fifth.

Crabby Sam's then scored five times in the sixth for a 10-6 lead. Brandon Moore led off with a walk and moved to second on a balk. Chuck Coburn reached on an error, as did Dante Daniels, scoring Moore. Wilbert Levette was also save on an error, scoring Coburn and Daniels. Craig Brannon also reached on an error, scoring Levette. Kevin Corbett then doubled to drive in Brannon.

Computerland came back with one in the seventh, but got no closer. Coburn led Sam's with two hits while Nicky Phillips and Jacob Zonn each had two for Computerland.

1st Citizens.....8
Legal Eagles.....7

First Citizens, the fourth place team during the regular season, eliminated second place Legal Eagles from the Prep League post-season tournament Sunday, taking an 8-7 victory.

First Citizens will now face regular season champ Computerland in the losers' bracket finals on Thursday for the right to play Crabby Sam's for the championship of the double-elimination tournament.

First Citizens took the lead with two runs in the first, adding two more in the third. The Legal Eagles rallied for three in the bottom of the third to close it to 4-3. But First Citizens came back with two in the fourth and added another in the fifth. The Eagles picked up three in the fifth to close within 7-6.

First Citizens, however, got what proved to be the winner in the top of the seventh. Jon Gavigan led off with a double and Alan Columbo walked. Both advanced on an out and John Pajak grounded out, scoring Gavigan.

The Eagles rallied for one but left the tying run at third base. J.P. DeVoe and Pajak each had two hits to lead the Bankers, while Dana Parker had a pair for the Eagles.

Arnie Struggles, But Fans Still Cheer

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LIGONIER, Pa. — It took Arnold Palmer more than a half-hour to negotiate the few dozen yards from the 18th green to the clubhouse at the Laurel Valley Golf Club.

He was besieged by old friends, fans, well-wishers.

They thrust pads and caps and programs at him, and he patiently signed autographs — scores and scores of autographs — just as he's done so many times before at so many golf tournaments over so many years.

Some simply touched him, a hand on the shoulder. Others patted his back. Others couldn't get close enough, so they tried to catch his eye. Some did. They smiled. Arnold smiled back, nodded, even winked. "They're great," he said later.

"They were with me all the way. They were encouraging and very supportive. They never stopped yelling for me."

He paused and offered that lopsided grin.

"The way I was playing, they should have been yelling at me."

He'd just finished one of the worst tournaments of his famed career. And it was one in which he so desperately wanted to play well.

He didn't. And the questions began to be whispered.

"I still feel there's a reasonable solution to the problem," he said after a dreadful performance before the hometown folks in the U.S. Seniors Open Golf Championship that ended Sunday.

Palmer, showered with honors and affection in a premature 60th birthday party last week, had what he called "a reasonable chance to do good" in the tournament held in the Laurel Highlands where he was born and reared.

Followed by an enormous gallery of family, friends, "people I went to high school with, people I've known all my life," he produced rounds of 76, 77, 82 and 77.

The 312 total, 24 over par, left him 33 strokes behind winner Orville Moody.

"Just embarrassing," said Palmer, perhaps the most popular player golf has ever known and the man generally credited with providing the impetus for the growth of the game over the last 30 years.

And it raised questions of whether, at last, the time has come for him to ease away from the game he's played so long.

No, Palmer said.

"Maybe I need some time off, an extended stay away," said Palmer, who has won only once in the last four years. "But I won't quit playing golf. Even if it's just at the club or hitting practice balls. I enjoy it too much. Whether I do too many tournaments is questionable."

"I don't think it's the end. This week has been a series of situations that arose with my personal business and the tournament itself."

"I'd like to think we will resolve that in short order," Palmer said. "I think there are reasonable solutions to be found."

He admitted to being troubled, frustrated and bitterly disappointed.

"Obviously, something is missing from my game," he said. "Certainly I'm concerned, but I think I'm old enough not to let it get scary."

The possibility exists, however, that some decisions may be forthcoming.

"If I can't put it together, then we'll look at some alternatives," he said. "But we won't make any rash decisions."

He will play in the British Open at Troon, Scotland later this month, and the following week will compete in the British Seniors.

After that? "I don't know. We'll just have to see."

What would Arnie's Army like to see? All the autograph-seekers this weekend answered that.

Moody's Putter Brews Controversy

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LIGONIER, Pa. — Once an object of curiosity, Orville Moody's 50-inch putter now has become the subject of a controversy.

Some of golf's more respected figures, Arnold Palmer and Gary Player among them, have called for the banishment of that elongated piece of equipment.

And they have the ear of golf's rulemakers.

"It isn't golf," P.J. Boatwright, the director of rules and competition for the U.S. Golf Association, said Sunday, a few hours before Moody brushed in a key 30-foot eagle putt on the way to a two-stroke victory in the U.S. Seniors Open Golf Championship.

"That putt turned the game right around," Moody said. The eagle on the sixth hole at the Laurel Valley Golf Club gave him sole control of the lead and he held it the rest of the way, eventually finishing with a final round of 70 and a 279 total, nine shots under par.

While the putt turned the tournament around, the putter has turned Moody's career around.

Moody long was noted, both on the regular tour and after he joined the Seniors, as one of the game's best ball-strikers but a terrible putter.

A couple of years ago he went to the very long shaft and a pendulum putting stroke, first used by Charles Owens.

Under this method of putting, the putter is grasped chest-high with the left hand, which is anchored against the body. The right hand, much lower, provides a sweeping motion, much as a housewife might use with a broom on the kitchen floor.

Moody went from being one of the worst putters in the game to one of the best, leading the Seniors Tour in putting statistics last year. And now, with the $80,000 he won for the Seniors Open, he is this year's leading money-winner with $318,923.

Golf purists, however, insist the putter and the stroke hurt the game.

"It goes against the tradition of the game," Boatwright said. It is on that basis, he said, that the Executive Council of the USGA opened discussions last month at Rochester, N.Y., which could lead to a rule change that would ban the long-shafted putter, just as the croquet-style putting stroke used by Sam Snead was outlawed in 1968.

"It would take a change in the rules of golf to do it," Boatwright said, and it was unlikely that any change would be made before 1991. "And it could be grandfathered."

Further discussions and a review are planned for the next meeting of the USGA's executive council in August.

"I'm not going to worry about it," the 55-year-old Moody said. "They might not do it. And if they do, it might be a while off and I might be ready to hang it up by then anyhow."

"If they hold off," Dale Douglass added, "Orville will have so much money it won't make any difference."

Two Set To Meet In Sudden Death

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OAK BROOK, Ill. — Peter Jacobsen, a man with a mission, and Mark McCumber, aching back and all, were set to complete a comeback story in the $1 million Western Open golf tournament.

The two finished in a tie after 72 holes after rain delayed play for 3½ hours on Sunday, and it was decided it was too dark to start a playoff.

Jacobsen shot a final-round 68 for a 13-under-par 275 total, a figure McCumber matched with a 69. Each bettered the Western Open record at Butler National by one stroke. Tom Weiskopf had a 276 when he won the title in 1982.

The playoff was to begin at the first hole.

Paul Azinger had a closing 69 for a 276, three shots ahead of Jim Gallagher Jr., who was fourth at 279. Lee Trevino and Lance Ten Broeck were tied for fifth at 280.

Jacobsen's mission is to prove he can win this tournament, with a top prize of $180,000. He was in the lead last year when he took a double-bogey on the 18th hole and finished one stroke behind Jim Benepe.

"I'd be lying if I said I didn't think of last year when I got to the 18th tee," said Jacobsen, who made a routine par on the hole.

For a moment, it looked as if McCumber, troubled by back problems all week, might lose the tournament at No. 18. He put his 5-iron second shot into a bunker, but came out and made a six-footer to force the tie.

"When I left the 18th green, I was all set to play one extra hole,"

Jacobsen said. "When I got to the 10th tee, it was hazy and I couldn't see the landing area or the water hazard. It was a wise decision not to have the playoff. It was getting too dark and this is too important a championship."

"Making a par on the last hole in the dark was very gratifying," McCumber said. "I had spasms twice but it's strange how the mind works. On the last five holes, I didn't even think about the back."

McCumber was in total agreement about holding the playoff today.

"No. 10 is a hole you have to play with plenty of visibility," McCumber said. "We elected to play (today). I didn't want one of us to be fooled by the haze or the density of the air. The air was very heavy and I found that out on No. 18 when I hit my 5-iron into the bunker."

Larry Mize, the 1987 Masters champion, started the day tied for the lead with McCumber, both at 10 under par.

Mize fell out of contention early as McCumber, Jacobsen and Azinger fought for the lead.

McCumber and Jacobsen were tied at 12 under after nine holes. Jacobsen birdied 12 for a one-shot lead, and they each birdied No. 13.

Jacobsen took a bogey on No. 15 to fall into a tie, and that's the way the leaders stayed the rest of the way.

Mize finished with a 69 and a 281 total and was tied with Jodie Mudd, Joey Sindelar and Chip Beck, the first-round leader. Nine others were tied at 282, including Tom Kite, this year's leading money-winner on the PGA Tour.

Mitchell's Homer Defeats Cubs

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kevin Mitchell not only keeps hitting home runs, he keeps hitting important ones.

"That's as big a home run as I've hit all year," Mitchell said after his two-run homer capped a three-run rally in the eighth inning Sunday and gave the San Francisco Giants a 4-3 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

"It was clutch," Mitchell said. "We really needed this win. Maybe this will be the spark that gets us going."

With the Giants trailing 3-1, pinch-hitter Greg Litton led off with a single off Rick Sutcliffe, 9-6. Litton was forced at second by Brett Butler, who advanced to third on a stolen base and catcher Damon Berryhill's throwing error.

One out later, Will Clark hit an RBI single and Mitchell hit Sutcliffe's next pitch over the fence in right.

"Sutcliffe was pitching me away all day," Mitchell said. "It surprised me because the wind was blowing that way. I knew I had a shot the moment I hit it."

In other games, San Diego beat St. Louis 5-2, Montreal beat Houston 13-2, New York beat Cincinnati 7-2, Los Angeles beat Pittsburgh 3-2 and Atlanta beat Philadelphia 3-1.

Jeff Brantley, 2-0, pitched three innings of one-hit relief and Steve Bedrosian pitched a perfect ninth for his 12th save. Six of his saves have come for the Giants, who acquired him from Philadelphia two weeks ago.

Padres 5, Cardinals 2

Bruce Hurst pitched his fourth complete game and triggered a four-run third inning with his second major-league hit. He entered the game 1-for-35.

Marvell Wynne helped San Diego take advantage of first baseman Pedro Guerrero's error by hitting a three-run double off Jose DeLeon, 8-8.

Hurst, 7-5, allowed eight hits, struck out six and walked one. It was the first time in eight starts that the Padres scored more than three runs for him.

Braves 3, Phillies 1

Lonnie Smith raised his average to .336 with three hits and John Smoltz, 10-6, pitched a five-hitter for his fourth complete game, his third against the Phillies.

Smith, 19-for-46 in his last 12 games, hit an RBI double in the first and his 11th home run of the season in the eighth.

Expos 13, Astros 2

Bryn Smith drove in four of Montreal's season-high 13 runs with a three-run double in a six-run second and an RBI single in a four-run third. The Expos had 19 hits and led 10-0 after three innings.

Tom Foley had four hits and drove in three runs and Dave Martinez and Mike Fitzgerald had three hits each.

Smith, 8-3, allowed seven hits and two runs in seven innings, striking out three and walking one. Jim Clancy, 5-6, got just four outs and allowed six hits and six runs.

Mets 7, Reds 2

Howard Johnson hit his 22nd home run and doubled twice as the Mets won for only the second time in six games.

Sid Fernandez, 6-2, allowed five hits in 7 2-3 innings to win his second straight start after five consecutive no-decisions. Don Aase finished with two-hit relief.

Scott Scudder, 2-2, allowed five runs and seven hits in 2 1-3 innings for the Reds, who went 4-6 on their homestand.

Dodgers 3, Pirates 2

Jose Gonzalez drove in all three runs with his first homer since Sept. 29, 1986, and a run-scoring double. On Saturday, his ninth-inning single beat the Pirates 1-0.

John Tudor, making his second start since offseason elbow surgery, left after three innings and 42 pitches because of shoulder soreness. John Wetteland, 2-0, allowed one run in three innings and Jay Howell, the fifth Dodgers pitcher, got two outs for his 15th save.

Doug Drabek, 5-6, lost for the first time in nine starts since May 14.

fifth, mixing in a right to the head with a series of body shots that backed Ruddock against the ropes. But Ruddock was able to work out of trouble again.

Ruddock began the decisive seventh with a pair of rights, then stayed on the offensive until the knockout.

Ruddock won the Canadian championship May 28, 1988, with a first-round knockout of Ken LaKusta. His only loss came April 30, 1985, against David Jaco on a ninth-round knockout. He has won his last 13 fights, 12 by knockout.

Smith won the WBA title Dec. 12, 1986 with a first-round knockout of Tim Witherspoon. He lost the championship less than three months later in a 12-round unanimous decision to current undisputed heavyweight champion Mike Tyson. Smith is 0-2-1 since losing to Tyson.

"What I want to do is promote young fighters," said Smith, who co-promoted the card with Ruddock's promoter, Murad Muhammad. "Promoting is a lot easier than fighting when you're 36 years old."

In other matches, U.S. Olympic team captain Anthony Hembrick improved his light heavyweight record to 4-0 with a knockout at 1:28 of the second round against David Overton, 8-5.

Viola Defeats His Old Teammate

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Must've seemed like old times at the Metrodome — Frank Viola and Bert Blyleven pitching well and the Minnesota Twins winning.

This time, though, it was Viola vs. Blyleven as the Twins beat the California Angels 2-1.

Viola, scheduled to pitch on Tuesday, asked Manager Tom Kelly to move him up so he could face his former teammate.

"Bert is a real close friend and to be able to go up against him is an honor," Viola said. "I learned a lot from him while he was here."

Blyleven, traded to the Angels in the off-season, said Viola, "showed how much it meant to him the way he wanted the ball on three days' rest. He pitched an outstanding game."

Blyleven, facing the Twins for the first time this season, pitched seven shutout innings and left with a slightly stiff shoulder.

Viola, 7-8, pitched a four-hitter. He struck out seven and did not walk a batter in his fifth complete game.

Viola's streak of 17 scoreless innings ended when Wally Joyner had an RBI grounder in the first. Viola retired 21 of the next 22 batters.

Blyleven gave up six hits, struck out five and walked one.

Athletics 11, Indians 3

Rickey Henderson opened the game with a home run, the 37th leadoff homer of his career, and Oakland went on to romp in Cleveland.

Dave Parker homered and drove in four runs and Jamie Quirk also homered as the Athletics got 15 hits. Henderson had three hits and scored three times as Oakland completed a three-game sweep.

Tigers 7, Orioles 3

Lou Whitaker hit a three-run homer and Detroit took advantage of an error to win at Baltimore.

The last-place Tigers won for the fourth time in six games. The Orioles, still leading the AL East by 5½ games, have lost six of nine.

With the score tied at 3 in the Tigers' sixth, Chet Lemon reached base on third baseman Craig Worthington's error and scored on Mike Heath's double. The Orioles have allowed just 12 unearned runs, the fewest in the majors.

Whitaker hit his 17th home run in the ninth.

Brewers 10, Yankees 2

Robin Yount reached the 2,500-hit mark, going 3-for-4 and driving in five runs to lead Milwaukee over New York.

Yount hit a solo homer in the fourth inning and added two-run singles in the fifth and sixth. The visiting Brewers ended a three-game losing streak and stopped the Yankees' three-game winning string.

Yount got to 2,500 hits at 33 years and 10 months. Ty Cobb, Rogers Hornsby, Hank Aaron and Mel Ott are the only younger players to get there.

Red Sox 4, Blue Jays 1

Danny Heep hit Boston's first pinch-homer in two years, a three-run drive in the 11th inning that lifted the Red Sox over Toronto for their season-high fourth straight victory.

Kevin Romine went 5-for-5, including a two-out single in the 11th. Rich Gedman followed with a single off David Wells, 2-4, and Heep homered against Tom Henke.

Heep hit his first home run since Aug. 17, 1986, with the New York Mets. The last pinch-hit home run by Boston came on June 1, 1987, by Mike Greenwell.

Roger Clemens took a four-hitter and 1-0 lead into the bottom of the ninth inning, but the Blue Jays tied it with one out on a single by George Bell and a double by Fred McGriff.

White Sox 7, Royals 3

Harold Baines homered, drove in four runs and moved into second place on Chicago's all-time RBI list in a victory over Kansas City.

Baines moved past Minnie Minoso and now trails only Luke Appling, who had 1,116 RBIs.

The White Sox won three of four against the Royals, only Chicago's third series win at home this season.

Boles also came up with two fine defensive plays, as two Edenton runners, one in the sixth and one in the seventh, were thrown out at home on singles to left. "Boles had a super game," Jarman said. "Not only did he hit the triple, but he made two outstanding defensive plays, hitting his cut-off man perfectly to nail the two at the plate. You have to credit Chris Christopher, too, for his relays on the plays."

Edenton finally broke the ice against Clemons in the sixth, getting a run. Al Pierce led off with a single and with one out, Jeff Creef doubled to left center, scoring Pierce. Andy Womble, who had walked before the double, however, was thrown out at the plate.

The other run came in the seventh. Duane Byrum singled and Nash Long walked. Both moved up on a passed ball and Derrick Rogers hit a sacrifice fly to score Byrum. Pierce followed with a single to left, but again, Long was thrown out at the plate.

"Clemons threw a very good ball game," Jarman said.

Pitt closed out the scoring with three runs in the seventh. Maurice Hines opened the inning with a solo home run to deep center. Then, with two away, Heath Clark singled and stole second. Little walked and both runners stole up a base. Both scored on a hit by Clemons.

In addition to Leisten's three hits, Little and Derrick Clark each added two for Pitt. Pierce and Womble each had two for Edenton.

"You know, we've played for eight straight nights, and these guys have got to be tired," Jarman said. "You can't be sharp playing every night like that. And it's been hot, too. (Monday) I'm giving everyone off. I told them not to even look at a baseball game."

"Then, we'll get back together on Tuesday and go to Rocky Mount."

Edenton coach Lin Jordan said he didn't think his team played that badly. "We didn't have a number one pitcher tonight. We did bring in (Creef) and he threw well, but could only go three innings (because of the limitation rule). We didn't hit the ball as well as I thought we could, but we have nothing to be ashamed of, playing a strong team like Greenville as we did."

Saturday night, Edenton pulled out the 11-inning decision when Pierce doubled, moved to third on a wild pitch and scored on Womble's single to break a 7-7 tie.

Pitt had lost its chance to win in the ninth when it left the winning run at second base. Christopher had walked and scored on a double by Hines, who came around on a hit by Boles. Heath Clark then doubled off the fence, but Boles made it only to third, leaving it tied at 7-7.

Edenton had taken the lead with a run in the first as Byrum walked, moved up on a wild pitch and a passed ball, scoring on an out by Stan White.

Pitt tied it up in the second. Heath Clark doubled and scored when Clemons reached on an error.

Pitt then took the lead with a run in the top of the fourth, that on a solo home run by Boles.

But Edenton rallied for four in the bottom of the inning, taking a 5-2 lead. Rogers walked and Pierce did too, both moving up on a wild pitch. Both scored when Womble's sacrifice was errored. Mark Raynor walked and Byrum singled to score both Womble and Raynor.

Pitt scored two in the sixth. Jamie Brewington doubled and Boles walked. Grant Harmon also walked and two more, to Travis Williamson and Leisten, forced in two runs.

Edenton came back with one Raynor singled and moved up on an error. Byrum then reached on an other misplay, scoring Raynor. That made it 6-4.

Both scored single runs in the eighth. Pitt's came on a homer by Harmon. Edenton saw Raynor and Byrum reach on errors and Long walk. White then walked to force in Raynor.

Pitt then tied it up in the ninth, but lost it in the 11th.

Hines, Boles and Heath Clark each had two hits to lead Pitt while Pierce had two for Edenton.

Brewing, who went 10 innings but did not figure in the decision, struck out 18 but walked 11.

Public Says Movies Have Gone Too Far

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Americans believe that Hollywood's golden age is gone, victim of the videocassette recorder and the movie industry's own excesses.

Even as the summer's blockbusters smash box-office records, a majority in a Media General-Associated Press poll gave unfavorable reviews to most new films. And most said the overall quality of movies has been declining.

Three reasons were sex, violence and profanity. Overwhelming majorities said most new movies have too much of each, and most of the 1,084 adults in the poll said they prefer not to attend such films.

Ticket prices were another complaint. While three-quarters of respondents paid $5 or less for their last ticket, a sizable 45 percent said the price was unreasonable.

Moreover, six in 10 of the most avid moviegoers, those under 30 years old, said ticket prices were too high.

Many film critics say Hollywood reached its pinnacle a half-century ago, when the year's new films included "Gone With the Wind," "The Wizard of Oz" and "Wuthering Heights." But it is this summer's hits — "Batman," "Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade" and "Ghostbusters II" — that have set ticket-sale records in their opening weeks.

Despite such popular new fare, the poll found that Americans watch movies on home videocassette recorders far more often than they go to the theater. And half of VCR owners said they go out to movies less since buying their machines.

Comic Jerry Seinfeld Stars In New Sitcom

By Kathryn Baker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — When a network wants to give you a prime-time show, "aimless wandering" is probably not the best concept to try to sell to them.

But if his sitcom-slash-standup show "The Seinfeld Chronicles" does well enough on Wednesday to become a midseason replacement on NBC, that's what comedian Jerry Seinfeld hopes it will evolve into.

"The Seinfeld Chronicles" has a great cast, smart writing and an unusual format, intercutting a sitcom with Seinfeld's stand-up comedy act. Seinfeld is basically playing himself, a stand-up comedian named Jerry who is a bachelor.

Seinfeld and co-writer Larry David, also a stand-up comic, came up with the idea "over a couple of cups of coffee on Eighth Avenue one night."

"I said, 'NBC is interested in doing some kind of show with me, and I don't have any ideas.' We figured why not just do a show about how comedians live and how they work and how it happens."

"A lot of" the show is very much like Seinfeld's own life, he said from Los Angeles. "I mean, it was easy for me to do it, I'm really not acting. Watching TV and sitting in a coffee shop — that's what comedians do."

With the time spent on Jerry's standup routine, a half-hour isn't much time to tell much of a story, which is why Seinfeld would just as soon dispense with a plotline. "I want to have a show of aimless wandering through life. But we figure that's a good way to get audiences interested in the beginning. I mean, it will always be some sort of progression of events, but we want to structure it very loosely."

"If they pick it up, it's going to progress in a different direction from that show. It's going to be much more an interior monologue" that would show what Seinfeld is thinking and how he incorporates everyday experiences into a comedy routine.

David, who was a writer-performer on ABC's "Fridays" and a writer on "Saturday Night Live," does a standup act that seems to be so personal, it can be almost painful to watch. Pair him with the more mainstream Seinfeld, and the result is an honest, warm and amusing examination of life in the late '80s.

Jason Alexander, who won a Tony award as best actor in a musical for "Jerome Robbins' Broadway," plays George, Jerry's neurotic manager. Another "Fridays" veteran, Michael Richard, who more recently starred in the syndicated "Marblehead Manor," plays Seinfeld's oddball neighbor, Hoffman.

In the pilot, Jerry has met a woman on the road who is coming to New York to visit. Does she want to sleep with him or not? George puts him through an angst-wrangling analysis of her possible motives.

Jerry, observing decorum, obtains a spare bed for the visitor. George is stricken. "I can't believe you're bringing in an extra bed for a woman who wants to sleep with you! Why don't you bring in an extra guy, too?"

Hoffman shows up "to borrow meat" and stays to complain about the Mets' loss, spoiling the game for Jerry, who had taped it and "avoided human contact all day" so he could watch it in suspense.

Viewers of "The Tonight Show" and "Late Night" have probably seen much of Seinfeld's act, but prime time will give his always-funny material a wider audience.

A scene in a laundromat prompts his laundry routine. Jerry believes the washing machine is the clothes' nightclub. He thinks that we return from the laundromat with one missing sock because, in the hamper the night before, it plotted its escape.

After his rendezvous with Ms. Wonderful turns sour, Jerry analyzes romance: "Women know what men want. Men know what men want. What do men want? — Women."

'Patton' Director Schaffner Is Dead

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — Director Franklin J. Schaffner, whose 1970 movie "Patton" won best picture and six other Oscars, has died. He was 69.

Schaffner, who during a four-decade career also directed such popular films as "Planet of the Apes" and "Papillon," died of cancer Sunday at his Santa Monica home.

He had just completed "Welcome Home" for Columbia Pictures, said publicist Michael Roth.

"Patton" star George C. Scott refused to accept the Oscar he won for best actor for his portrayal of the World War II Gen. George S. Patton, saying the awards demeaned the profession.

But Schaffner, who won best director for the movie, said, "I will gladly accept any honors from the academy."

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY July 4

- ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Continue with your current, positive attitude for success. News comes from a distance. There is plenty to discuss this evening.
- TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Jealousy can exist over a partner's successful activities. Build trust and emphasize the tender side of a love relationship.
- GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Your eyes are fixed on some fast cash. Take the leap, but avoid outright gambling. Stick to common sense financial procedures.
- MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): You make new starts this week if you can muster up the initiative. Even a bad choice turns out well. Try your luck with Cupid.
- LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): A misunderstanding heals. Forget the past and put it behind you. Give a little more when a sacrifice is called for. You win in the end!
- VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): You may not be giving yourself credit where credit is due. Recognize your own wisdom and talents. Give siblings more time and attention.
- LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Someone with a stubborn attitude will bend a little now. Pressures exist trying to meet a deadline. Give homelife greater attention.
- SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Your domestic life receives a pleasant reorganization during the next few days. Intuition surrounding financial matters is strong.
- SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): New business negotiations are favorable. You have lots of enthusiasm and motivation. Keep restless irritability in check.
- CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): You can have success where others fail. You gain from reading, correspondence, and verbal chit-chat. Expect positive financial surprises.
- AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): It may be difficult to keep promises made today. You have more work than you can finish. There is success in small things.
- PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Fight off negative thinking. The future holds bright opportunity. Whatever you decide will be correct.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠K72 ♥KQ876 ♦QJ9 ♣63
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♣ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
 1 NT Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—No number of hearts fits the bill. A rebid of two hearts shows a weaker hand with a six-card heart suit, while a jump to three hearts should show a good six-card suit with invitational values. The correct action is to invite game by bidding two no trump.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠A8 ♥AQ1053 ♦AJ984 ♣5
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♣ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
 1 ♣ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—While a bid of two diamonds, the fourth suit, would be forcing, it does not do this hand justice. Partner could easily have a three-card fit for one of the red suits, putting this hand in the slam zone. Jump to three diamonds.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠J10642 ♥Q9 ♦J843 ♣J7
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♥ Pass 1 ♣ Pass
 3 ♦ Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—A miserable collection has been improved somewhat by your holdings in partner's suits. While you are forced to bid, your most likely game is in hearts, so a false preference to three hearts gets the nod over a raise to four diamonds.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠73 ♥87 ♦KQ10952 ♣652
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♥ Dbl ?

What action do you take?
 A.—Here you have no problem—bid two diamonds, which does not show any great strength after the takeout double, but does promise a reasonable six-card suit. A more difficult poser would have arisen had East passed: Does your hand rate a 1 NT response followed by three diamonds should partner bid again? We think yes, but only just.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠83 ♥AK1062 ♦AQ63 ♣96
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♥ Pass 1 ♣ 1 NT ?

What action do you take?
 A.—You have a minimum opening bid with no fit for partner's suit. There is a textbook way to describe this hand after an overall—pass.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AKJ93 ♥AKJ7 ♦K102 ♣6
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East

1 ♣ Pass 2 NT Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—If there's a fit, you are in slam territory. However, don't bid any more than three hearts now—you might need the bidding room to investigate various possibilities. A jump to four hearts would promise a five-card suit in addition to extra values.

U.S. Files Formal Protest Over Apartment Attack

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — The U.S. Embassy filed a protest today over what it called a premeditated army attack on apartments of American diplomats and other foreigners last month.

The protest is likely to further worsen relations already made tense by U.S. criticism of China's crackdown on unarmed pro-democracy protesters.

Also today, two Taiwanese reporters said a colleague was taken away by security forces after he reportedly met with fugitive student leader Wang Dan. The reporters said they feared Wang also was arrested.

The evening television news reported five people have been arrested, including three students, allegedly for stealing a submachine gun from an army vehicle during the first days of the crackdown. Four other people turned themselves in for stealing army guns and were released, the report said.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Sheridan Bell said Charge d'Affaires Raymond Burghardt delivered the protest note to the Foreign Ministry, which did not respond immediately.

Chinese soldiers fired into Jianguomenwai apartment compound on June 6, a day after the State Department said the U.S. Embassy had given refuge to two Chinese dissidents, Fang Lizhi and his wife, Li Shuxian.

A U.S. Embassy report charged the shooting was premeditated but did not link it to China's anger over U.S. protection of Fang and Li.

The United States filed one protest shortly after the shooting. The new protest challenges for the first time the Chinese account that soldiers were responding to sniper fire from within the apartment compound. At the time, Radio Beijing said one soldier was killed and three were injured, and plainclothes officers who went into the compound brought out a Chinese man they claimed was the sniper.

No witnesses reported seeing Chinese soldiers hit, however.

The U.S. report said the arrest appeared to have been staged. It also said the soldiers fired not only from the ground but from a building across the street, where they had taken up positions the day before.

A diplomat from another Western country, speaking on condition of anonymity, confirmed that some bullets were fired from the opposite building and whizzed over the heads of children playing in the foreigners' apartments. No one was hurt, but most foreigners evacuated the compound later that day.

"There is no doubt, in this embassy's opinion, that certain apartments were deliberately targeted," the U.S. report said.

It said one U.S. defense attaché's apartment was hit by 18 bullets. Ten other U.S. diplomats' apartments also were hit, as were apartments of other nationals such as Spaniards.

Shortly after the shooting, the European Economic Community asked the Chinese government for an explanation, but received no response.

China has agreed to pay for damage caused by the shooting.

The Bush administration, in other responses to the Chinese crackdown, has criticized it and cut off military aid.

Wang, a history student at Beijing University, was a leader of seven weeks of student-led protests in Beijing for a freer society. He went underground after the army crushed the protests on June 3-4, killing hundreds of unarmed civilians.

Wang's name appeared on a list of 21 students wanted by police. Antonio Jiang, a reporter for Taiwan's Journalist Weekly, said security officials searched Taiwan Independence Morning Post reporter Huang Teh-Pei's hotel room at 3 a.m. today.

Police grabbed him as he left his hotel just before noon and pushed him into an unmarked car.

Huang reported that he met with Wang on Sunday and was driving in the Post's car when they realized they were being followed, according to Jiang. Huang got out, and the driver left with Wang. The driver has not returned, Jiang said.

Beijing police and the city government Foreign Affairs Office said they did not know if Wang was arrested. Jiang said police denied any knowledge about Huang.

Taiwan government spokesman Shaw Yu-ming urged Beijing to expel Huang, as it has Western reporters who interviewed pro-democracy students.

Chinese guards stationed outside the U.S. and Australian embassies, who normally carry only revolvers, were armed today with long-barreled automatic pistols and wore military helmets for a third straight day. Extra uniformed and plainclothes guards also were posted.

The guards refused to explain their new gear, which may be linked to the presence of Fang and Li at the U.S. Embassy and unconfirmed reports the Australians also were sheltering fugitives.

In other developments, China's official newspapers gave over most of their front pages today to pictures and biographies of 10 young officers and soldiers killed during the June 3-4 attack.

Senior leader Deng Xiaoping gave them the title "guardian of the People's Republic of China," which Western diplomats said they believed was a newly created honor.

The government said the 10 were beaten or burned to death by protesters.

Priest Holds First All-Black Service

WASHINGTON (AP) — The founder of the new African American Catholic Congregation says he will adhere to Catholic teachings on issues such as abortion and priest celibacy while incorporating African and southern black religious traditions.

The Rev. George A. Stallings celebrated the Imani Temple's first service on Sunday before about 2,000 people at Howard University Law School.

Stallings said he created the church because he believes the establishment Catholic church had failed to meet the spiritual and cultural needs of blacks. Imani means "faith" in Swahili.

But Cardinal James A. Hickey of Washington has condemned Stallings' plans for the new church, which were announced two weeks ago, and forbade Stallings to celebrate mass.

"In spite of his claims to the contrary, Father Stallings' action is a serious step toward separating himself from the Roman Catholic Church," Hickey said recently in a statement.

Stallings has said that he has been fired by Hickey as evangelist for the archdiocese.

Sunday's service began with an entrance procession that included one participant wearing "dreadlocks" and others who shook bells and used rattles traditionally used in African ceremonies.

The ceremony included Catholic prayers and liturgy, along with words borrowed from African and Southern black revival traditions. Black representatives of other faiths, including Baptists and Muslims, attended to show support for Stallings' move.

At one point, Stallings chanted, "We can't wait. How much longer does the Roman Catholic church need?"

Stallings, in an interview broadcast on WRC television on Sunday, said he plans to abide by Catholic dealings on issues such as abortion, birth control and celibacy for priests.

Blacks Mark Civil Rights Anniversary

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — With the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.'s grave as a backdrop, black leaders marked the 25th anniversary of the Civil Rights Act by urging President Bush to back up his words with deeds and support affirmative action.

"Mr. Bush has got to get up and make the White House the right house," said the Rev. Joseph Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference. "It's not enough to talk that talk. We need him to walk that walk."

The Civil Rights Act, which President Johnson signed into law July 2, 1964, banned segregation in public places and discrimination in the workplace.

Lowery, one of several rights leaders who met with Bush on Friday, said recent U.S. Supreme Court decisions against affirmative action programs have left blacks doubting whether the president would work to protect progress made under the law.

"I'm going to remain hopeful for the time being," Lowery said. "Mr. Bush has good instincts. He wants to do what's right in this regard."

Friday, Bush called on Congress to re-authorize the Civil Rights Commission, which is set to expire Nov. 30.

Attorney General Dick Thornburgh said last week the administration would not push Congress to overturn the Supreme Court decisions, which make it more difficult to prove discrimination in employment.

Lowery said civil rights leaders are concerned that Bush is paying lip service to their cause, and added the president is "going to have to make up his mind" by either bolstering black membership in the GOP or pleasing ultra-conservatives.

Lowery was joined at King's gravesite by Rosa Parks, whose refusal to sit in a segregated section of a Montgomery, Ala., bus in 1955 sparked the civil rights movement.

Mrs. Parks said Bush's statements "sounded good, but we are waiting for real, real action."

About 200 people gathered for Sunday's prayer service, during which Lowery blasted Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor for her position against affirmative action.

"Glory be to God, if it weren't for affirmative action she'd still be in Arizona presiding over a microwave," Lowery said, adding that the American public should "remind Sandra who she is."

Lowery scolded the crowd for not singing "This Little Light of Mine" with enthusiasm, saying that if civil rights leaders had "sung with that kind of spirit" during the movement, "we would still be in slavery."

The crowd responded by singing with three-part harmony.
