Gorbachev Offers More Cuts In Soviets' Nuclear Stockpile

U.S. Stands By Its Own Proposal For Reducing Nuclear Arms

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

STRASBOURG, France — Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev today offered additional and rapid cuts in his country's nuclear arsenal if NATO accepts negotiations on tactical nuclear weapons.

Gorbachev's proposal, contained in a speech to the Council of Europe's assembly in this eastern French city, appeared designed to increase pressure on the United States to agree to the talks, an issue that caused a deep rift in the Western alliance that was patched over last month.

"If it became clear that NATO countries are ready to join us in negotiations on tactical nuclear weapons, we could, naturally, after consulting our allies, carry out without delay further unilateral reductions in our tactical nuclear missiles in Europe," Gorbachev told the assembly, which contains parliamentarians from 23 Western European democracies.

Gorbachev did not say how many missiles the Soviets would cut.

In Washington, presidential press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said the Gorbachev statement had been anticipated.

"We welcome any unilateral reductions" in the Soviet's nuclear arsenal, Fitzwater said. But he added that the Bush administration would stand by its own proposal on East-West force reductions in Europe.

NATO last month agreed to link any future negotiations on tactical nuclear arms to results obtained at the Vienna talks seeking Europe-wide reductions in conventional weaponry, a step the Soviets have said will cause delay.

As presented at the NATO summit in Brussels, Bush's plan calls for a reduction in conventional forces in Europe to 275,000 troops apiece for NATO and Warsaw Pact nations before talks are held on reducing short-range missiles.

An attempt by the Soviet Union to seek earlier talks "was the reaction we expected from the Soviets," Fitzwater said. "Our position remains the same as before: to do the conventional talks first."

"NATO has its posture established," Fitzwater said, conventional arms reductions first. "I wouldn't anticipate any change in that."

Gorbachev's announcement, made from the podium at the ultramodern Palace of Europe, seemed designed to force a break in that link.

NATO specialists, however, said the Soviet offer represented only a fraction of the Red Army's tactical nuclear weapons.

City Rips Down 2nd Old Home

By J. Ward Best
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The city continued on its path of destruction today.

A one-story house at 1022 Fleming St. leveled this morning by an oversized back hoe and a bulldozer was the second structure destroyed since a May 11 decision by the City Council to remove unsafe buildings in Greenville.

The city's public works department razed the Fleming Street house because it was considered structurally unsound and posed a potential hazard to children in the neighborhood. The house was located across from Sadie Saulter Elementary School.

"That was one of the reasons it was such a high priority to tear it down," said Greg Brown, Greenville's public information officer.

The windows of the house had been boarded and the interior walls were marked by fire, Brown said.

Empty wine bottles and beer cans found in the house also indicated vagrants used the house for shelter, Brown said. Unlike the first house the city demolished on Third Street, no drug paraphernalia was found at this house, he said.

The Fleming Street house had been vacant for the past eight years, Brown said, and the city had required the owners, the heirs of John Langley, to repair or level the building. "This has been an on-going thing for the past eight years," Brown said.

The city also gave the city manager a deadline of July 10 to resolve the problem. The city ordinance allows for a physical solution to the problem.

Pitt Gears Up To Begin Electronic House Arrest For Some Offenders

Three County Probation Officers Promoted To Work With Program

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Three Pitt County probation officers have been promoted to work in the new electronic house arrest program scheduled to begin in the county next month.

Robert Guy of Greenville, manager of the 18-county probation branch in eastern North Carolina, said the equipment has been ordered from BI Inc. of Boulder, Colo., and company officials will be in Greenville early next month to train the officers.

The Pitt Board of Commissioners has rented a suite of offices on the second floor of the Minges Building to house the officers and computers, and Guy said judges could begin sentencing defendants to house arrest as early as the second week of August.

When the program gets under way, probation officials plan to host an open house for the media and select a member of the community to test the equipment, which restricts people to within 200 feet of their house by using an electronic ankle capable of communicating with a monitor stationed inside the house.

The new electronic house arrest officers are Don Vickers, Dwayne Benfield and Rick Streeter. All have worked at least two years as regular probation officers.

In their new positions, each will be issued a firearm and car radio and have a caseload of no more than 30 clients. The clients will be restricted to their home, workplace or school by the electronic ankle.

Pitt is one of just 12 counties in the state participating in the pilot program, Guy said, with New Hanover County being the only other county east of Raleigh. The state awarded the programs to counties with the highest rates of incarceration, he said.

Some governing boards and civic groups have expressed concern that the program will not be reliable or restrictive enough, but Guy said most people have supported the idea after hearing an explanation.

Probation officials are not targeting the program for convicts with a history of assaultive behavior, Guy said, nor are they targeting it for people sentenced to 10-day or 30-day terms in the county jail. The program is not intended for vagrants; candidates for house arrest should have a job or be enrolled in school, he said.

"(A job) is the No. 1 criteria to keep them out of prison. They are tax-paying citizens, and the house arrest program will allow them to continue to work and pay taxes," he said.

House arrest will be used as a special condition of probation. It is most effective when defendants serve a six-month period and receive a longer suspended prison sentence that could be invoked, Guy said. House arrest sentences of a few days are not recommended.

For example, a Superior Court judge may give a convicted thief a suspended five-year prison sentence and order the person to serve three years on probation. The first six months of the probationary sentence may be served on house arrest.

Or, those who violate the conditions of regular probation may be sentenced to house arrest for six months instead of being sent into the state's overcrowded prison system, Guy said.

ECU Stands To Get Funds For Library, Conference Center

By Stuart Savage
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

East Carolina University would get $2 million for a conference center and $6.36 million of the $24 million needed for an addition to ECU's Joyner Library under a $222.6 million spending bill approved by a state committee Wednesday.

The bill, which would make dozens of one-time grants for capital projects such as construction, repairs and renovations, needs full Senate and House approval before it becomes law.

House member Ed Warren, commenting on the Senate bill, said, "The plan is that the remaining funding for the library would come in the second year" of the biennium. That's what I've been told.

"I would anticipate getting the library completely funded in the second year and the conference center would come in the next year (1991-1992). That's the understanding I have of the Senate Bill."

The General Assembly has already earmarked $850,000 for the conference center, Warren said.

"We have that on hand. "The first phase of the project, the conference center itself, will cost about $15 million," Warren said, with the cost of the remaining two phases of the project estimated at $11 million.

But Warren said the House "doesn't have a spending plan yet. On the House side it just hasn't surfaced. But I'm sure it will be negotiated between the House and Senate."

"We're still working on an educational plan in the House right now. It's essential that we appropriate that money for the library and it's appropriate that we have a conference center in Greenville."

Sen. Bob Martin this morning said, "For a fact it ensures the Joyner Library. We have to have time and money for planning and we've got $6.3 million for that ... $6 million for the library and $300,000 for planning. That's a pretty good start, and we hope to finish it up the second year" of the biennium.

But Martin said complete funding for the conference center is less certain.

Americans Say Tests Successful

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — American scientists proclaimed success today in a pioneering experiment to detect the presence of a nuclear warhead aboard a Soviet warship in the Black Sea.

The success of the experiment, if confirmed by other scientists, could bolster Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's argument that it is possible to verify the presence of nuclear weapons aboard ships and submarines.

"It was very successful," said Tom Cochran, an American physicist with the Natural Resource Defense Council, a liberal Washington group that organized the experiment with the Soviet state Academy of Sciences.

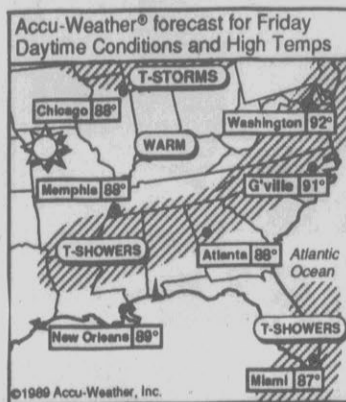

But it remains possible for either side to hide weapons or shield them against detection by the type of devices used Wednesday, Cochran said.

Washington has balked at Soviet demands that the proposed Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty, which would cut superpower atomic arsenals by 30 percent to 50 percent, include a curb on nuclear-tipped cruise missiles aboard submarines.

Housing Authority Approves Budget

By J. Ward Best
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Greenville Housing Authority on Wednesday approved operating expenses of more than $2 million for the coming year without arguing over increased costs or budget cuts.

The conventional budget of $1,933,970 represents a 7 percent increase over the figure approved for the 1988-89 fiscal year. Kenneth Noland, GHA executive director, called the increase "considerably over last year's" total. Expenses for University Towers showed a smaller increase of 2 percent. The budget for the 60-unit housing complex for the elderly totaled $161,680.

Money for both budgets comes from rent collections and subsidies from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Expenses for the two budgets cover administrative salaries, maintenance costs and contracted work for the Housing Authority. Noland said both of the projects are solid financially, and can operate without excessive HUD restrictions because of a large reserve fund.

"Our reserves on those two projects are just tremendous," Noland said.

In addition to considering the two budgets, the three members of the Housing Authority attending the meeting also reviewed progress on renovations to Moyewood.

James Barnhill, director of operations, told the board that contract work on the project is about 90 percent complete. Phase I renovations, which began in September, include installing cabinets, sinks and furnaces and painting the apartments. Renovations in the second phase for Moyewood began in March.

Barnhill said the Moyewood contract runs for one year, but he said he hopes the project will not take that long.

"We're well on our way," Barnhill said.

Housing Authority members also adopted a safety in the workplace resolution, which Noland said would encourage safety on all levels of operations. The resolution also allows the director to investigate any accidents involving property or bodily damages.

Quarterly write-offs totaled $1,992.58, according to Barnhill. And he said this quarter was well under the previous one.

Sallye Streeter, director of resident affairs, said the occupancy report for June reflected an average rent of $128.41 in the housing developments operated by the authority.

Rents included: Meadowbrook, $114.72; Kearney Park, $130.06; Moyewood I, $135.51; Moyewood II, $142.28; Hopkins Park, $118.27; Newtown, $126.74, and West Meadowbrook, $129.30.

Morning Theft

Greenville police said $100 in cash was taken from a car parked at the Bingo center on West 10th Street in an incident reported at 12:44 a.m. today.

Officer C.S. Candler said that in addition to the money, a pair of sunglasses was taken from the car.

Drug Arrest

Kenneth Luisiano Barnes, 20, was arrested by Greenville police today on cocaine possession and other charges.

Officers B.W. Lewis and A.J. Denison said Barnes was charged with the sale and delivery of cocaine, assault, resisting, delaying and obstructing an officer and carrying a concealed weapon in connection with a 12:16 a.m. incident at the intersection of Sixth Street and McKinley Avenue.

The officers said a .25-caliber pistol and $3,200 worth of "crack" cocaine were confiscated in connection with the early morning arrest.

Escape Sentence

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — One of two women charged with aiding in the escape of six inmates from the Cumberland County Jail last summer was given a five-year suspended sentence on Wednesday in Cumberland County Superior Court.

Tonya Harris, 21, of Fayetteville was sentenced by Judge Coy E. Brewer Jr. after pleading guilty to providing a weapon to an inmate in connection with the June 1988 jailbreak.

Miss Harris and Barbara Ann Murrah, also of Fayetteville, were charged with smuggling hacksaw blades into the jail through the mail.

Six men, including admitted double-murderer Jeffrey Karl Meyer, escaped after cutting through bars in their cell. They then broke open an exterior window and lowered themselves on knotted bed-sheets to the ground, authorities said.

Judges To Name College Monitors

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW ORLEANS — A panel of federal judges will now choose from nominees suggested by the state, Southern University and the Justice Department for a three-member committee to monitor desegregation of Louisiana higher education.

The three-judge panel overseeing the case had asked that nominees for the committee be submitted by Wednesday.

In his final report last month to the judges' panel, special master Paul Verkuil recommended creation of such a three-member committee.

Verkuil, who was chosen by the three judges to draft the desegregation plan, also recommended a single board to govern the 13 universities in the state, replacing the four current boards.

The Justice Department on Wednesday nominated Franklyn G. Jenifer, of Boston, chancellor of the Massachusetts Board of Regents of Higher Education, and Richard F. Wilson, of Urbana, Ill., associate chancellor of the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign.

Southern University nominated

Ronald Mason Jr., a vice president and general counsel for Tulane University, and Gordon Davies, director of higher education for Virginia.

The state, the Board of Regents, the Louisiana State University Board of Supervisors and the Board of Trustees for Higher Education submitted a combined list of six nominees.

They are: William C. Friday, president emeritus of the University of North Carolina; Winfred Godwin, retiring president of the Southern Regional Education Board; Lloyd Hackley, chancellor of Fayetteville State University in North Carolina; former LSU chancellor Paul Murrill, who now is a special adviser to Gulf States Utilities; James E. Sulton Jr., special assistant for minority affairs to the president of the University of Wisconsin; and Frank Vandiver, former president of Texas A&M University.

Doctors Back AIDS Tests

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The N.C. Neurosurgical Society has released the results of a poll in which physicians strongly support being allowed to test patients for the AIDS virus without written consent, but a House subcommittee delayed acting on a bill that could include that proposal.

The poll of 505 physicians indicated 65 percent wanted to be allowed to test for the AIDS virus without the written, informed consent of a patient. The poll also showed that 87 percent of physicians believe confirmed cases of HIV infection should be defined as a reportable, communicable disease.

"They (physicians) do not want their hands tied by paperwork," said Dr. James Fulghum at a news conference Wednesday. He called informed, written consent a "further impediment in the way of good medical care."

Fulghum said greater testing for AIDS would help alert patients as early as possible if they carry the virus while helping doctors decide whether to take special precautions to avoid exposure to acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Fulghum said his organization does not object to informed consent, only to requiring that it be in written form.

"Written consent inhibits people," he said. "When somebody that is really ill sees something like that pushed in front of their face, they think you're putting something over on them."

Fulghum said lawmakers should not be swayed by extreme arguments on either side of the issue.

"This is not a homosexual rights bill," he said. "This is not a freedom to test whoever you want bill."

Opponents of the proposal said the poll results did not warrant changing the bill.

"I think this bolsters our position," said Roslyn Savitt of the N.C. Council for Social Legislation. "If they all want to do it, it shows we need restraints."

Police Investigate 14 Reported Thefts

Investigators said 14 thefts, ranging from a car and shirts to cash, a shotgun and electronic items, were reported to Greenville police on Wednesday.

Officer C.S. Candler said a radio was taken from a car parked in the 500 block of South Evans Street in an incident reported at 12:02 a.m., while Officer E.L. Butts said a purse containing $95 in cash and a gold necklace and bracelet was taken from a car parked at Georgetown Apartments at the intersection of Cotanche Street and Reade Circle in an incident reported at 12:20 a.m.

Officer W.R. Stephenson said the hood ornament was taken from a car parked at 201B Roundtree Drive in an incident reported at 8:27 a.m., while Officer C.N. Gray said a ceiling fan was taken from 905 Imperial St. in an incident reported at 8:48 a.m. and five cans of oil and an oil filter were taken from a car parked at the Hilton Inn on Greenville Boulevard in an incident reported at 1:20 p.m.

Gray also said five watches and a Browning rifle were taken from 203A Riverbluff Road in a break-in reported at 3:51 p.m., while Officer W.T. McCarter said a marine radio-telephone was taken from a vehicle at 526 Crestline Blvd. in an incident reported at 9:32 a.m. and a 1987 model Volkswagen GGL was taken from the Riverside Oyster Bar on North Greene Street in an incident reported at 11:50 a.m.

Officer F.G. Pruitt said four wheel covers, a radio, four tires and rims and a stereo were taken from cars parked at Leith Olds Nissan at 991 Greenville Blvd. in an incident reported at 9:34 a.m., while Officer P.W. Worthington said two window air conditioning units were taken from 402 Holly St. in a break-in reported at 12:34 p.m.

Officer C.L. Robertson said a power booster for a citizens band radio was taken from a car parked in the 800 block of Dickinson Avenue in an incident reported at 1:43 p.m., while Officer L.T. Gray said trim rings were taken from a car parked at Brinkley Moore Motors on Memorial Drive in an incident reported at 6:11 p.m.

Officer R.L. Smith said a box of shirts valued at $360 was taken from Carolina Imprints at 715 Albemarle Ave. in an incident reported at 9:19 p.m., while Officer B.W. Lewis said four hubcaps were taken from a vehicle parked at The Plaza mall in an incident reported at 9:45 p.m.

Wanted: Good Candidates, Wise Voters

Political observers are fond of calling 1989 an off political year. That's because there are no state or national elections, only municipal elections. But for Greenville and Pitt County, it is anything but an off year. Voters will decide who their local leaders will be. The future of the community rests heavily on those choices.

The quality of that leadership will depend on two things. First, how wisely voters mark their ballots determines the integrity of local government. But before voters can choose judiciously, they must have a broad pool of talent from which to pick their leaders. That means the best candidates — the brightest, most energetic, most devoted citizens — should be in the race.

It's time for that process to begin.

Friday at noon candidates can begin filing for municipal races in Greenville, Ayden, Bethel, Fountain, Winterville, Simpson and Grimesland. Those who feel in their civic hearts they have time, talent and ability to offer should put their names in the hat. They might just wind up with a seat on a city council, a board of aldermen or a town council. Their reward could be a palpable opportunity to shape the future of a community.

'Before voters can choose judiciously, they must have a broad pool of talent from which to pick their leaders.'

In Greenville a spirited race for mayor is already shaping up. Mayor Ed Carter says he will seek reelection. Council member Nancy Jenkins has said she will oppose the mayor. That contest for office will generate a lot of debate, some calm, some strident. As other races around the county stir up, they'll add their heat to the pot.

That kind of competition and vigorous dialogue enhances the community's chance of having the best local government possible. When the choices are many, the people are involved and the debate is strong, democracy flourishes.

Local government is the most tangible, most relevant cog of government by the people. It is the only branch of American democracy where the majority of those governed can have coffee and talk about the weather with those they are governed by. Voters have more influence over the thrust of local governments than any other branch.

A vote is a powerful right. It guarantees the individual control over his or her destiny. That privilege should be exercised, but exercised knowledgeably. It is important that all those eligible to vote follow the issues in the months ahead. Know what is best for the communities choosing new leadership and then know where the candidates stand.

It is also important that the communities entice their best citizens onto the ballot. Government is not a job that should be left to those with time or direct interest. It is a civic responsibility that demands full participation from a broad spectrum of the people.

This, 1989, is not the year to stand back from the election process. Instead, it is the perfect time to become involved.

An Echo Chamber Of Blarney

WASHINGTON — In my personal pantheon of baseball heroes, there is no place for Pete Rose. Having hustled his way into the record books, he now tries to hustle his way out of his current bind — dashing from the commissioner's office to the county court and soon (who knows?) back again. This is an old man playing a young man's game. A. Bartlett Giamatti is sure to pick him off.

Richard Cohen

But when that happens, my cheer will be a weak one. If Rose gambled on baseball in general and his own team in particular, he should be banished from the game. Having said, that, though, a piece of me feels sorry for the man. This is the piece that recoils from the arrogance of professional baseball, from its smug assumption that it and America are synonymous and that just intoning the words "Organized Baseball" is, like the rumble of a mighty church organ, enough to bring the faithful to their knees.

Poor Rose. He's not fighting a mere organization of businessmen and egotists called "the owners," but the incredible myth of the game: the films, books and — yes — columns. These for the most part have not been turned out by present and former athletes, but by one-time nerds who love baseball precisely because it is the sport most hospitable to the ordinary man. It's the game almost every man played as a boy, the male breast that supposedly bonds son to father, the game for which you were not automatically disqualified by virtue of size. Baseball, like gin rummy, can be played by almost anyone.

But no sane man thinks he could play professional football or basketball. These are the games of gods — giants and behemoths with the reflexes of a gnat. A boy need only look at his father to glean the future. Unless your old man looks like Paul Bunyon or has to duck to enter a bus, you can forget about playing professional football and basketball.

But not baseball. Look at some of the greats. Phil Rizzuto was short. Yogi Berra looked like Yogi Bear and Babe Ruth seemed always to be in his ninth month. Fernando Valenzuela could pitch but he would turn no heads if he walked into a tavern and Billy Cox, a great third baseman, appeared downright anorexic. You could study a picture of Joe DiMaggio or, for that matter, Ted Williams, for hours and not be able to account for their awesome talent, and Jackie Robinson stole home preceded by a pot belly.

Baseball remains the domain of the common man, the lottery almost anyone thinks he could have won. Looking at the players and having once played the game ourselves, ordinary men think they have the experience and the expertise to comment on baseball. We use it to bludgeon football and basketball. We set it off as something special: a sport we could have played. We adore its statistics (nerdy).

It's unlikely Pete Rose appreciates irony, but he must sense its presence. Athletic ability is the great leveler and athletics the true American meritocracy. (Not even the greats stay beyond their time.) Everyone knows this, including the nerds. The high-school athlete is more valued, more popular, than the student scholar. He writes his own rules — soars above the nerds and does it all without cracking a book.

But the nerds lie in wait. The athlete's body will age. In the end, the nerd will not only get the girl, but claim baseball for his own. He will write the books. He will make the films. He will do the columns. And few of these will be about the special gift of the athlete, but about his ordinariness — especially how time erodes gifts until, balding and bandaged, middle age calls him home. For those envious of the athlete, patience is the best revenge.

And so it is with Rose. His body aged, his gifts gone, he is in an unequal contest with a commissioner from Yale University and writers who never had a throwing arm. He lives in an echo chamber of blarney. He is instructed in his obligation to little boys and autograph seekers. He is reminded of the sanctity of the game and — incredible timing! — fights for his professional life at the very time the nation is drunk on the hokum of baseball: movies about Shoeless Joe Jackson and the Black Sox scandals of 1919. Why a man with this luck wanted to gamble is beyond me.

So goodbye, Pete — and good riddance, too. You can't win this one. Hustle doesn't mean a thing anymore; lawyers won't let you take a lead. The very same people who once heard the taunt "no hitter" as they stepped up to the plate are going to hit you right out of the park.

The movie of the season is not "Field of Dreams," but one from years back: "Revenge of the Nerds."

Child Care: A Piggyback Ride On The American Flag

BOSTON — In the midst of all the flag furling of the past days, a single, small, star-spangled footnote almost went without notice: One afternoon, as the child-care bill headed to the Senate floor, Joe Biden tacked on an amendment that would make it a crime for anyone "knowingly and publicly to mutilate, deface, burn, display on the floor or ground or trample upon the American flag."

So, in the curious way of American politics, the long-awaited Act for Better Child Care Services passed the Senate with the American flag flying over it. Chalk one up for the history books.

Day care was once regarded as a communist plot to undermine the American family. The last serious child-care bill to come out of Congress was vetoed by Richard Nixon in 1971 because "it committed the vast moral authority of the national government to the side of communal approaches to child-rearing." Now, after 18 years in the legislative wilderness, child care is back, wrapped in the flag.

The reasons can be found, not in the stars or stripes, but in the numbers. Today, 57 percent of mothers of pre-schoolers are also employed outside the home. The need for child care, not just custodial but quality care, is on parents' minds when they work and when they vote.

On one momentous day last summer, both presidential candidates had photo opportunities in day-care centers. During the same wowing season, both parties put forth positions that they labeled pro-kids, pro-family, and pro-child care.

The bill that passed the Senate was an amalgam or compromise between the two party proposals. It was engineered, appropriately, by two sponsors, Democrat Christopher Dodd and Republican Orrin Hatch. More remarkably, it went beyond the traditional bounds of child care.

The major provision (label this one with a D for Democrat) would send $1.75 billion to the states to help provide child care to lower-income working families. About ten percent of this money would also help the states set standards.

The secondary provision (label this idea with an R for Republican) would proffer tax credits to lower-income families. The first of a trio of income-tax credits would put as much as $750 back in the pockets of lower-income families with children under four to be used for child care or just survival. The second would extend a refundable dependent-care credit for lower-income working families that use such care. The third part (Label it D again) would give a separate refundable tax credit for health-insurance costs. Some 13 million American children currently have no health coverage.

Money for child care, standards for that care, help for lower-income families with kids and a tax break for their health care. It's a child CARE bill in many senses of the word. "That's what makes this landmark legislation," says Helen Blank, who has spent many lean years working for kids at The Children's Defense Fund.

But this child and child-care legislation is by no means a done deal. It still has to pass the House, where the legislation comes in a slightly different version. And after Congress finishes, it has to get through the White House, where it has been called a candidate for veto.

The administration is still unhappy with the direct payments to parents, and there is continuing opposition to the requirement that states set standards. Sen. Dodd has countered, "If your car and your pet are guaranteed certain standards by state licensing agencies, we believe your children deserve no less."

In the Bush press conference devoted to raising the flag from the ashes, he was asked about child-care legislation and he didn't exactly stand up and salute it. But it is now believed that the opposition in the White House is, as the polls and polls say, "softening."

A single bill isn't going to resolve the child-care crisis. But as Blank says, "It's a way to move forward. It means that if you meet your state's income test, you'll get help. It means there may be money to recruit new family providers. It means that maybe a child-care worker will stay put for a while. It means there will be new centers."

And it means that after a long period of national denial and neglect, child care has become as American as apple pie, the flag and working motherhood.

Frustration Breeds A Session Ripe With Animosity

Paul
O'Connor

RALEIGH — It may be hard to believe, but there actually is a consensus in the legislature on the question of merit pay for teachers. As Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, told the House Education Appropriation Subcommittee, the great majority of legislators "think there ought to be some merit pay system."

The problem which that subcommittee has encountered this year is that it can't agree on what form that merit pay system ought to take.

For the past six months, the subcommittee has floated one plan after another, only to see them all shot down. The subcommittee, like the full House, is split into three or four factions. Whenever a plan surfaces, there are usually at least two factions ready to vote against it.

Late last week, the co-chairmen, Reps. Jim Crawford, D-Caswell, and John Tart, D-Wayne, asked the committee members to start anew in their deliberations on the issue. All agreed. As Rep. Trip Sizemore, R-Guilford, said, "We must assure the public that we are not going to waste these two years" until the legislature meets again.

That talk was fine, but the proceedings exposed the enormity of hard feelings that exist between members of the committee. When Crawford suggested that the subcommittee use House Bill 1510 as the basis for discussion, Rep. Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe, sponsor of the bill, sounded surprised. The ideas in the bill have been before the full Appropriations Committee before, only to be voted down. "If I remember correctly," Nesbitt said, "the two chairmen (Crawford and Tart) voted against this bill. Is there something going on that I'm not aware of?"

Crawford said the HB1510 was a good bill and that it deserved consideration. Nesbitt agreed, saying it had been fashioned after discussions with the many different elements of the state's education community. But Rep. Howard Chapin D-Beaufort, expressed skepticism. "Everytime we turn around, there's something new in these bills," he said.

Chapin is one of several Democrats on the committee who were miffed when the Republican minority leader, Rep. Johnathan Rhyne of Lincolnton, was allowed to completely re-write one Democrat's bill to reflect Gov. Jim Martin's Career Ladder plan. That plan died in the full committee after the eventual annual price tag of $1 billion became known.

Chapin's comments infuriated Crawford, "We've been trying to add things as people say that they want them. I hear all of you say things you want. Most of them are in this consensus bill." Then he questioned if the members had even read the bill.

When the committee re-convened the next morning, it found that Crawford and Tart had put a two-page listing of the essential elements of Rhyne's plan, Nesbitt's plan, and a new plan from Sizemore, on the agenda. Chapin and Nesbitt asked why the subcommittee wasn't still working on the Nesbitt bill.

Crawford implored the subcommittee to just look at all the ideas included in the three bills. (There were 21 different points times three bills. And the listing did show some areas of agreement.)

The subcommittee adjourned with Tart asking that it meet Wednesday and then reach a consensus plan which could be sent to the full committee after today. Nesbitt and Blue weren't optimistic. They charged that House Bill 1510 is caught up in the faction politics of the house and the governor's office. Many observers of the meeting had felt that the different sides were beginning to come together, but the remarks from Blue and Nesbitt showed how deep runs the animosity from a session of frustration.

Bush's China Course Fits Plan For Dealing With Communists

Mears

WASHINGTON — Proceeding with caution despite Chinese repression, President Bush is determined not to tear down bridges to Beijing, believing that ties with the United States, though shaken, may yet be the path to greater economic and political freedom.

He's been facing political pressure for a more forceful U.S. policy since the days before the crackdown and massacre in Tiananmen Square, but he has resisted demands for tougher sanctions.

That's based on practical judgment as well as philosophy. There's little chance that the Chinese government would change its repressive course because of them.

Bush's China course fits his broader view of the way the United States should deal with economic and political change in the Communist world. He is doing so with care, wary of over-reaction that could court trouble.

Bush is applying that guideline as he journeys to Poland and Hungary beginning on Sunday.

"It is important the United States show its interest in these countries that are undergoing change," Bush said last week. "You don't want to overexhort. You don't want to overpromise. You don't want to rally people to levels of political activity that might cause repression."

In an interview with three Polish journalists, Bush repeatedly stressed that concern. He said he would not seek to inflame, would not do anything that could provoke crisis.

When students seeking democratic reforms in China first occupied Tiananmen Square, Bush resisted demands that he speak out forcefully in behalf of their demonstrations as well as their goals. But he said on May 22 that beyond urging the students to peacefully stand up for their beliefs, he was not going to try to tell them what to do. Bush also urged the Chinese government to seek a peaceful resolution that would further democracy.

The president said he did not want to exhort the students "in a way that is going to stir up a military confrontation."

When confrontation came, in the bloody crackdown of June 3, Bush condemned it, cut off sales of military equipment, barred private arms sales, barred military and other high-level visits, suspended U.S. support of international bank loans to China, and left open the possibility of further steps.

He stopped short of trade sanctions or a break in diplomatic relations.

The Chinese government protested those measures as interference in domestic affairs, but apparently continues to cooperate in U.S. intelligence-gathering from missile and nuclear monitoring sites near the Soviet border.

While the administration has not been explicit about that, Bush has said that any president must be concerned about the strategic importance of U.S. relations with China.

Bush said he will continue to express outrage about the attack that ended the demonstrations, and the executions that have followed. "But I reiterate also my desire not to do damage to the people themselves, because I believe that it was contact with the United States and others in the West that moved the process of economic reform forward and hopefully, some day will move the process of political reform forward," he said.

That has not satisfied Congress. Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, said the president should speak more forcefully about Chinese executions, "which can only be described as organized murder — terror by a government against its own people, seeking to intimidate them."

The House voted unanimously on June 29 to toughen U.S. sanctions against China. An amendment to a foreign aid bill would put into law the steps Bush took, and add suspension of trade and development programs, a ban on sale of police equipment, and a bar against transfer of nuclear materials that might have military application.

The vote was 418-0, but it probably doesn't mean much. The bill was sent to the Senate, which hasn't started work on the subject. So it is far from enactment, although it did send a message.

"I think someone in this government ... has to speak clearly on behalf of the American people and take more forceful action than the president and the secretary of state have been to date willing to take," said House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo. Rep. William Broomfield, R-Mich., said "the Chinese should be aware that there is a deep-seated revulsion in Congress to what they have done."

But Bush, who spent 16 months as U.S. representative to China in 1974 and 1975, noted after the crackdown that the Chinese historically have been "less than totally interested in what other countries think of their performance."

Richard M. Nixon, who as president opened U.S. relations with China, said a policy of reprisal would only isolate the Chinese regime.

"Lashing back with punitive policies would be politically popular and emotionally satisfying for the great majority of the American people," he said. "Such policies would make us feel better."

But he said they wouldn't have any impact on the hard-liners who hold power in China.

WASHINGTON — The judge in Oliver L. North's case balanced the former presidential aide's achievements against his Iran-Contra crimes to fashion a punishment that could defuse the controversy over his prosecution.

U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell's sentencing decision Wednesday answered a question posed by defense lawyer Brendan V. Sullivan Jr., who asked: "What is Oliver North's good life worth?"

Before placing him on two years probation, Gesell told North he had considered "the many highly commendable aspects of your life" as a Marine hero in Vietnam and later as a staff aide at the National Security Council.

Against North's 20 years of service as a Marine Corps officer and a presidential aide, Gesell weighed the three crimes for which North he stands convicted — destroying or altering Iran-Contra documents, helping falsify a chronology of U.S.-Iran arms sales to deceive Congress and illegally accepting a home security system.

By giving North what he called "a chance to start something good and wholesome for the future," the judge made it harder for North's supporters to portray their hero as a martyr.

Gesell told North that while he was a "low-ranking subordinate working to carry out initiatives of a few cynical superiors" he didn't consider him blameless.

"As you stand here now, you are not the fall guy for this tragic breach of the public trust," the judge said.

"You're here now because of your own conduct when the truth was coming out," Gesell said of North's role in helping "keep Congress and others from finding out what was happening."

That said, Gesell gave North a suspended three-year sentence, imposed a $150,000 fine and ordered him to work 1,200 hours while on probation to help administrate a program to keep inner-city youths off drugs.

In doing so, the judge may have lowered the volume of the debate about whether North was a scapegoat and the victim of a hard-nosed prosecutor determined to get scalps from the Iran-Contra investigation.

The sentence also may relieve some of the pressure on President Bush to pardon North now that the retired Marine lieutenant colonel is not facing time behind bars.

"A far more important thing in the North case was that legal accountability be established, not that imprisonment be decreed," said Laurence Tribe, a Harvard University law professor. The sentence "focuses the country on the right issue."

"Little would have been gained and much would have been lost by adding fuel to the fires of martyrdom in this case," Tribe said.

"I don't think that anybody or very few people wanted all of the additional chaos in the country, the additional hard feelings that we have too much of right now, of having Oliver North trundled off to jail waving the American flag," said Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif.

Rep. Lee Hamilton, the Indiana Democrat who co-chaired the 1987 congressional hearings on the Iran-Contra affair, said most of his colleagues "would not really feel comfortable seeing Oliver North go to jail."

James Rowley, who has followed the Iran-Contra investigation since 1987, covers the Justice Department for The Associated Press.

Mountain Counties To Seek Federal Aid For Flood-Stricken Residents

Searchers Continue Hunt For Two Vacationers Missing Since Tuesday

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Officials in several North Carolina mountain counties say they plan to ask for disaster relief in the wake of flash flooding that swept away two vacationers and caused damage to homes and crops.

Searchers Wednesday had not found the bodies of Krystal D. White, 18, of Granite Falls and Jennifer Ruth Kane, 17, of Marietta, Ga.

Ms. White was inside a tent when a flash flood carried it into Wilson Creek in Caldwell County on Tuesday morning. Her boyfriend was pulled from the tent by other campers, but she could not be reached.

Searchers Wednesday recovered an empty tent from the rain-swollen creek, but found no trace of Ms. White.

"The best we can gather right now, the tent traveled 500 to 600 feet before becoming lodged (in tree branches)," Collettsville Fire Chief Jerry Gragg said.

Rescue workers in Jackson County resumed the search Wednesday for Ms. Kane, who apparently drowned when she was swept over a series of waterfalls on a rain-swollen creek Monday.

Ms. Kane was floating down Norton and Mill Creek south of Cashiers with three companions when she was swept away, said Lt. Ron Melton of the Sheriff's Department. The other three managed to reach the bank and were unhurt, he said.

Skies cleared on Wednesday, and the cleanup process began, authorities said.

"If it had kept on, we would have had a real disaster," said Avery County Manager Randall Fletcher. He said the county plans to apply for disaster relief.

In addition to damage to homes, roads and bridges, the flooding hurt the area's Christmas tree industry, Fletcher said. Seedlings that had just been planted were uprooted and carried away by the storm.

Fletcher said it would be several days before a dollar estimate could be placed on the damage.

By Wednesday afternoon, water was receding and families were returning to homes, Fletcher said. Of the 200 to 300 families displaced by the flooding, Fletcher said, all but 25 had returned to their dwellings Wednesday.

Extensive crop damage from flooded fields in Henderson and Transylvania counties was reported to the state crop emergency board Wednesday, the first step in a procedure that can bring federal financial relief to farmers.

Crops in Transylvania County have been "extensively damaged," reported Charles Bryson, of the local Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service. Losses in Transylvania County already exceed $1 million, he said.

"If there were any doubt about the crop damage before the weekend, the rains we've had in the last few days removed any possible doubts here," Bryson told the Times-News of Hendersonville.

Nancy Holbert, director of the ASCS in Henderson County, said that the emergency board can't disclose specifics of its damage appraisal.

She added, "Where there is damage, it's serious."

Searchers combed the banks of flooded streams in Avery and Caldwell counties Wednesday, searching for campers that might have been stranded by rising waters. Officials said they believed most campers had left the area.

Even though the rain had stopped Wednesday, the streams were still dangerous, an experienced whitewater rafter said.

"It's as bad as it gets," said Jeff "Wahoo" Stanley of Boone, who owns an outdoor outfitting company. "The first person without expert skills who puts a raft in today will be the first person to die today."

Stanley, along with six of his guides, helped rescue 18 people stranded by the rapidly rising waters Tuesday, but would not go out on the streams Wednesday.

"I'm exhausted. I put my life on the line," he said.

A cloudburst sent floodwaters gushing through northern Ashe County on Wednesday afternoon, causing several hundred residents to seek higher ground. No injuries were reported.

Volunteer firemen were sent door to door in the Warrensville community to alert residents at 4:30 p.m.

There was no general evacuation, but firefighters and rescue personnel helped some residents move to safer quarters, said Jerry Ashley, the emergency-management coordinator in Ashe.

Authorities prepared to set up an emergency shelter at the National Guard armory in Jefferson in case it was needed.

A mud slide temporarily stalled traffic on N.C. 194 between Warrensville and Lansing in Ashe County when a tractor-trailer became mired, according to the N.C. Highway Patrol.

Spending Proposal Advances

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The full Senate will consider a bill that would give North Carolina State University $6 million for a proposed sports arena and $222.6 million to two state agencies for new facilities.

A Senate committee approved the capital spending measure Wednesday.

The measure, described by one senator as "a lot of pork barrel," would make dozens of one-time grants to state agencies, schools and other recipients for capital projects such as construction, repairs and renovations.

It now goes to the Senate floor and would have to gain House acceptance before being enacted.

N.C. State would be a big winner if the package were approved. The University of North Carolina Board of Governors has requested $16.5 million over two years for the proposed arena, according to Sen. Wendell Murphy, D-Duplin, a big NCSU supporter.

He is pushing for $6 million this year and the rest in fiscal 1990-91, all of which the university would match dollar for dollar. The Legislature already has spent $1.5 million in planning money for the facility, which likely would seat more than 20,000 people. Its cost has not been determined, Murphy said.

He warned that the appropriation is a long way from being certain, but voiced satisfaction with the committee's approval. "I feel like we're in pretty good shape at this stage of the game," he said.

The coliseum has spawned controversy in Raleigh, where city officials want it located downtown. A study commissioned by the N.C. State Board of Trustees recommended putting the arena adjacent to Carter-Finley Stadium on the outskirts of the city.

Questions also have been raised about whether another major arena is needed in the Triangle area, with the presence of the Dean E. Smith Center in Chapel Hill. But Murphy said the study had concluded that the Raleigh coliseum would be used 150 times a year for a variety of programs, not just N.C. State basketball games.

Other members of the UNC system did not fare as well under the Senate bill. The measure includes no money for campuses in the Triad — North Carolina A&T State University, the N.C. School of the Arts or UNC-Greensboro.

That prompted a complaint from Sen. Richard Chalk, R-Guilford. "My area sure didn't do well in this," he said.

Stephanie Schortinghouse, Miss Appalachian Valley, took top honors in the swimsuit competition. Miss Schortinghouse, 18, is from Spruce Pine.

Kelly Fletcher, Miss High Country, won the talent competition after singing "Think of Me" from the musical "The Phantom of the Opera." Miss Fletcher, 21, is from Morganton.

Preliminary competition will continue tonight and Friday at the Raleigh Civic and Convention Center. The 47 contestants are judged in talent, swimsuit and evening gown competitions, with preliminary evening gown winners announced during the final round of judging.

The 10 competitors who earn the most points during the preliminary contests will participate in the pageant finals Saturday. Competition begins at 8 p.m. each night. Admission is $11 for preliminary rounds and $15 for the finals.

The winner of this year's pageant, the 52nd Miss North Carolina competition, will take home $7,000 in scholarship money and compete in the Miss America Pageant in September.

The Miss North Carolina Pageant is sponsored by the Raleigh Jaycees. Daily rehearsals are open to the public and are free.

The theme of this year's pageant is "America ... The Dream Goes On." In keeping with that theme, the pageant will offer traditional American songs and dances, in colors of red, blue and silver.

Pilot Abuse Program Costly

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WINSTON-SALEM — A refusal by the General Assembly to help 10 North Carolina counties to pay for a state-ordered pilot substance abuse program has left the counties struggling to make ends meet.

Officials whose counties are participating in the pilot program say that they are losing thousands of dollars in administrative costs and that lawmakers should allocate money to help counties get the program off the ground, the Winston-Salem Journal reported.

The program requires that drunken drivers pay for substance abuse and alcoholism counseling. The Legislature is debating whether the program should go into effect statewide in six months or a year.

County officials say the state's plan that the program be self-supporting works in theory only.

In Alamance County, the mental-health authority lost about $21,000 last year, said its chief administrator Robert H. Windham. "Our cash flow is severely limited," Windham said. "I've got $60,000 of services to deliver with no cash flow."

Under the program, anyone convicted of driving while impaired must be assessed for chemical dependency and, if dependent, must go into outpatient or inpatient treatment.

Those who are not dependent must attend Alcohol Drug Education Traffic School, and no one can get a new license without proof of having completed the treatment.

Counties participating in the program are Forsyth, Alamance, Buncombe, Cabarrus, Iredell, New Hanover, Pender, Rowan, Wake and Wayne.

drivers whose passengers imbibe. The bill would reduce the current legal definition of intoxication from a blood-alcohol content of 0.10 to 0.08 for regular drivers and 0.04 for those who drive commercial vehicles such as buses and taxis. The Rules Committee voted to apply the 0.04 standard to all drivers whose passengers drink.

Under the committee's policy, if a driver's BAC exceeded 0.04 and there were open containers in the passenger area, he and his passengers would be guilty of violating the open-container law.

Wicker said that policy was preferable to an open-container ban because it would encourage the "designated driver" concept under which one person stays sober and provides taxi service for his drinking companions. The proposed ban might have the opposite effect, he said.

Under Ethridge's amendment, "you're discouraging the designated driver policy," Wicker said. "Because if you're going to be convicted anyway, why not drink and drive? ... We felt like the way we had drawn it was a responsible approach to the problem."

Another problem is that a ban would outlaw drinking in limousines with bars and with buses that transport people to ball games, concerts and other activities, Wicker said.

IN THE STATE

Waste Manager

RALEIGH (AP) — As a bill to alter North Carolina's laws governing low-level radioactive waste neared House action, environmentalists battled Chem-Nuclear Systems Inc. over amendments that could take the company out of the state's waste picture.

More than a dozen representatives of environmental groups held a news conference Wednesday decrying the recent selection of Chem-Nuclear over Westinghouse as the company to run a waste site mandated by an eight-state compact and slated to open in 1993.

The group voiced support for a House amendment adopted last week to prevent any company convicted of felony environmental or contract crimes from managing North Carolina's waste.

House consideration had been scheduled for Wednesday, but Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, asked that the issue be delayed until today.

Black Catholics

RALEIGH (AP) — Black North Carolina Catholics say the church needs to be more responsive to their needs, but they stop short of endorsing a Washington priest suspended for starting his own black church.

The priest, New Bern native George A. Stallings Jr., was suspended this week by the archbishop of Washington after he celebrated Mass on Sunday for his new and unsanctioned African-American congregation.

Stallings, 41, has said he decided to create a new church, called Temple Imani, because the Catholic Church was responding too slowly to the needs of black Catholics. He also said church authorities outside the black community should not tell blacks what to do.

Patient Death

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Three Cherry Hospital workers have been suspended from their jobs without pay pending the outcome of an investigation into the June 25 death of a patient, hospital director J. Field Montgomery said.

The suspensions came Wednesday just hours after the release of an autopsy report which said Albert Hucks, 28, died from neck compression while being restrained.

Montgomery said a decision whether to dismiss the health care workers would depend on whether there was a violation of hospital policy.

Hucks was found dead in a special restraining chair following a psychotic outburst during which he reportedly attacked the workers. He was a patient in the unit which houses patients who are violent and considered a threat to themselves or others.

Boy Drowns

CHARLOTTE (AP) — An 11-year-old boy drowned at the Carowinds theme park Wednesday, officials say.

Rodney Ligon of Cross Hill, S.C., was pronounced dead when he arrived at Charlotte Memorial Hospital about 1:45 p.m., said hospital spokeswoman Catherine Rencher.

Lifeguards at the Rip Tide Reef area of the amusement park pulled the boy from the pool and attempted to revive him with cardiopulmonary resuscitation before emergency medical technicians arrived.

Heart Study

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — People who eat relatively small amounts of Omega 3 fatty acids, found in fish and other seafood, gain protection against death from coronary heart disease, a Wake Forest University study suggests.

Conducted under the direction of Dr. Therese A. Dolecek, acting head of the nutrition unit of the Department of Public Health Sciences of the Bowman Gray School of Medicine, the study monitored the deaths and diets of 6,250 male participants over a 10-year period.

When the men who average more than .2 grams of omega 3 fatty acids a day were compared to those who ate no fish, coronary heart disease deaths a decade later were 34 percent lower, deaths from all forms of cardiovascular disease were 39 percent lower, and deaths from all causes were 29 percent lower, researchers said.

Surf Death

WEST ONSLOW BEACH, N.C. (AP) — A Jacksonville teen-ager apparently drowned Tuesday while playing in the surf by the Ocean City Pier, according to the Coast Guard.

The victim, Teshia Martin, 14, was apparently playing in the surf near the pier when she disappeared under a wave and did not resurface, said Ensign Gary Bracken of the Coast Guard station at Fort Macon.

Coast Guardsmen received a call from Onslow County sheriff's dispatchers at 5:09 p.m. Tuesday.

Blacks Critical Of Choices For Budget Negotiations

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Controversy continues to swirl around the state Senate's $42.1 million tax bill, with black representatives accusing House Speaker Joe Mavretic of racial insensitivity in his selection of a negotiating team.

The House voted 94-21 Wednesday not to accept the Senate's bill, which combines the $8.6 billion highway program with money for a 6 percent pay raise for teachers and state employees and for other budget increases.

Mavretic later announced the appointment of 10 House members to a joint conference committee that will try to iron out a compromise bill. All but one of the representatives — Rep. Bob Hunter, D-McDowell — were members of the bipartisan coalition that elected Mavretic speaker. None was black.

Shortly thereafter, 11 of the 13 blacks in the House walked out of the chamber in protest. While they were gone, Mavretic announced that Rep. Howard Hunter, D-Northampton, a black freshman, would be on the conference panel. Hunter's name was on the list all along, Mavretic said, but he overlooked it before.

The blacks returned after a few minutes. They charged at a news conference that Mavretic had slipped Hunter's name on the list at the last minute to mollify them.

Rep. Mickey Michaux, D-Durham, chairman of the Legislative Black Caucus, said he had spoken with Mavretic at the podium immediately after the speaker announced the conference panel's membership.

Michaux said he asked whether the committee membership was "set in concrete" and that Mavretic responded, "Yes." Michaux said he pointed out that no blacks were on the committee and that Mavretic replied, "You all have not supported me, so I'm not going to put any (blacks) on there."

"All of us felt it was an affront to all the blacks in this state," Michaux said. "We feel this is just another one of the matters of insensitivity that this General Assembly shows toward people of color."

The black lawmakers said Rep. Thomas Hardaway, D-Halifax, should have been put on the conference committee. Hardaway, who is black, is chairman of the House Finance Subcommittee on Highways and conducted extensive hearings on the road construction package.

Michaux also noted that the House delegation includes four freshmen and said some members were not closely involved in assembling the highway bill. He questioned whether the group could hold its own against the seasoned senators likely to represent the upper chamber. Senate conferees were not announced Wednesday.

In a prepared statement, Mavretic defended his selections. "I wanted a balanced perspective — a cross-section of this chamber's demographics," he said. "My main objective, though, was to appoint a group of individuals who have consistently supported the House position" on matters of disagreement with the Senate.

Mavretic said the remark he made to Michaux was directed at him personally and did not target all the black representatives. "I thought he (Michaux) wanted to be on the conference committee and was concerned that he wasn't appointed," Mavretic said.

The House conference delegation will be chaired by Rep. Sam Hunt, D-Alamance, chairman of the Infrastructure Committee. Other members, aside from Howard Hunter, include Reps. Bob Hunter, D-McDowell, sponsor of the highway bill; Alex Hall, D-New Hanover, chairman of the Finance Committee; Betty Wiser, D-Wake; Pryor Gibson, D-Anson; Dan DeVane, D-Hoke; Harry Grimmer, R-Mecklenburg; Billy Creech, R-Johnston; George Robinson, R-Caldwell; and Clayton Loflin, R-Union.

Hunt said the conference panel included members of various House factions and would represent the chamber well. "We've held our own against some pretty tough opponents," he said. "I'm sure we'll hold our own against the Senate."

As approved by the House, the bill would finance the highway construction program, which would build a statewide network of four-lane highways, pave 10,000 miles of rural roads and construct seven urban freeways.

Organic farmer Bill Dow of Pittsboro works in his field

More Farmers Grow Pesticide-Free Crops

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREENSBORO — More and more farmers are turning to natural methods to control pests in their fields and Bill Dow of Pittsboro is one of them. "I think the gaps in our knowledge about what pesticides do are too big to justify their use," Dow said.

Dow is one of an increasing number of farmers, gardeners, environmental activists and agricultural specialists encouraging growers to reconsider their traditional use of pesticides. Instead, they advocate natural pest-control methods that are aimed at eliminating or cutting back on chemicals to preserve soil, water and biological resources.

Today, Dow grows pesticide-free broccoli, lettuce, cauliflower, herbs, tomatoes and cut flowers at his Pittsboro farm to sell to local restaurants and at farmers' markets.

"There's a lot of antagonism from traditional farmers," Dow told the Greensboro News & Record. "I think some see it as an intent to put them out of business. But you have to give the consumer alternatives."

The recent controversy over Alar, a ripening agent used on apples, has given impetus to a movement to find alternatives to chemical pest control, said Allen Spalt, director of the Agricultural Resources Center in Carrboro, a private, non-profit organization that promotes stricter regulation and control of pesticides.

"When people find out that chemicals are poisoning their children, they not only get aware, they get angry," Spalt said. "Alar is only one example of what's wrong with pesticides."

An estimated 2 billion pounds of toxic chemicals are used to control pests on American produce annually, according to officials at the Agricultural Resources Center, and some data suggest that some pesticides may cause birth defects, cancer or damage to the nervous system.

A small group of North Carolina growers is out to prove that it's possible to raise crops with little or no chemical pesticides or fertilizers.

About 100 of these farmers, along with agricultural specialists from North Carolina, Virginia and South Carolina, met at Davidson College in June to exchange information and ideas on alternatives to pesticides. The two-day conference was sponsored by the Carolina Farm Stewardship Association, a 350-member organization of farmers, gardeners and consumers formed in 1980 to disseminate information on alternative farming methods.

To Dow, chairman of the farm stewardship association, the conference gave people who are interested in growing pesticide-free produce a chance to exchange ideas and encourage other like-minded growers.

That support is especially needed by the small contingent of commercial organic farmers in the state, Dow said. The farm stewardship association has certified only 24 North Carolina farms as organic. Another 24 growers are awaiting certification.

According to association standards, organic produce is grown without chemical pesticides or fertilizers, though some insecticides derived from plants are allowed. Growers use biological or cultural control techniques, which involve use of organisms that prey on pest species or arranging crop land to discourage pests.

In one biological control method, the larvae of green lacewings, which eat insect eggs, spider mites and caterpillar larvae, are distributed over an infested garden. The lace wings will stay in the garden, reproduce and continue to feed on small soft-bodied insects. They don't pose a threat to the crops.

An example of cultural control is crop rotation. This method works well on soil-dwelling pests such as the western corn rootworm, an insect that lays its eggs in cornfields in late summer. During the following growing season, the rootworms infest the corn's roots and kill the crop. But if another type of crop is planted in the field the next season, the rootworms starve to death because they only feed on corn.

The demand for organic produce will continue to grow as consumers become more aware of the dangers posed by chemical pesticides and start looking for alternatives, said John Luna, an entomologist with Virginia Polytechnic Institute in Blacksburg. The dollars generated by that demand will slowly erode opposition faced by growers who use alternative methods, he said.

"There's not going to be a banning of all pesticides in the near future," Luna said. "I think there's going to be a chipping away, pesticide by pesticide."

Panels OK Pension Proposals

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Committees in both houses of the General Assembly approved measures that would change the way North Carolina treats pension income for state and federal retirees.

The moves Wednesday came in response to a U.S. Supreme Court decision that states cannot give their retired employees more favorable tax treatment than granted to federal retirees.

Both bills would set precedents for North Carolina by taxing the pensions of retired North Carolinians who move to other states and by giving private-sector retirees a tax break.

The Senate bill has now cleared three committees and could reach the floor this week. The House bill still must go before the Appropriations Committee.

"This is a compromise bill," Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, said of the House measure. He said it was supported by groups representing state employees, local governments, teachers, retired government workers, and retired military personnel. "This is a bill all of them can live with. It's not perfect."

Under current law, state and local government pension benefits are not subject to state income tax. Federal employees have had a $3,000 exemp-

Magistrate Delays Ruling On Change Of Location For Bakker, Dortch Trial

By Paul Nowell

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Attorneys for Jim Bakker and Richard Dortch say the fraud and conspiracy trial of the former PTL leader and his chief aide should be moved out of North Carolina, but prosecutors say the case drew national attention that would make it difficult to seat a jury anywhere.

"Let's move this to a place that has not focused on PTL the way this community has," said Dortch's attorney, Bill Deal. He said the media onslaught has been "recent, tainted, widespread and throughout this district."

Bakker's attorney, Harold Bender, said he felt there was no way his client could receive a fair trial anywhere in North Carolina.

"I'll take Atlanta, Jacksonville (Fla.), Knoxville (Tenn.), or Richmond (Va.) — or even Washington D.C.," he said. "The position of the Rev. Bakker is that the prejudice is inherent (in the community)."

But prosecutors said there is no place in the world where they could find jurors who had not heard about the case.

"They (defense attorneys) want a jury from another planet to hear this case," said Debra Smith, a Department of Justice attorney. "Where we're supposed to take this case, a place where no one's ever heard about it, I don't know."

Defense attorneys for Bakker and former PTL top aide Richard Dortch came to the hearing in federal court loaded with boxes of newspaper articles, videotapes and even T-shirts that poked fun at Jim and Tammy Bakker.

Following the four-hour hearing, U.S. Magistrate Paul Taylor did not rule and did not indicate when he would. He also heard arguments on whether Bakker and Dortch should be tried separately.

Part of the delay in the ruling stemmed from requests by Deal in a motion for a separate trial. The material submitted included testimony from the 16-month grand jury investigation into PTL's finances under Bakker's leadership. Taylor said he would review that material in his chambers.

Taylor gave the attorneys until 5 p.m. Thursday to present any other exhibits in the case.

Wednesday's hearing was open to the public because of a 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruling last week that said Taylor was wrong when he decided the hearing should be closed out of concern for the defendant's right to a fair hearing.

Prosecutors filed briefs last week recommending that the trial be moved to Asheville. Ms. Smith said suggestions by defense counsel that a fair trial could not be conducted there were unsubstantiated.

She presented the magistrate with examples of national media coverage of the PTL scandal, including interviews by Bakker on national shows such as ABC television's "Nightline," and the syndicated "PM Magazine." She said most of the coverage cited by defense attorneys was published between 1987 and 1988.

Ms. Smith said some of the stories cited as examples of prejudice by defense attorneys were actually generated by the defendants themselves.

"The defendants have very skillfully used the press to proclaim their innocence," she said.

During Dortch's severance motion, Taylor expressed concern to prosecutors that allegations of homosexuality and other morals allegations leveled against Bakker could hurt the chances of Dortch in a joint trial.

That prompted Ms. Smith to say the government had no plans at the time to call Jessica Hahn or John Wesley Fletcher as witnesses. Ms. Hahn accused Bakker of forcing her into a sexual encounter in a hotel room in Florida in 1980. Fletcher was quoted in an article in "Penthouse" magazine, accusing Bakker of homosexual activities while still at PTL.

"Give us the opportunity to be tried on our own merits, on the facts, as opposed to the horrible crap that's being thrown at us to make us smell bad," Deal said. "Let me sit here with Richard Dortch and 12 jurors and (let prosecutors) prove that there was a conspiracy between Jim Bakker and Richard Dortch."

Deal told Taylor that his client had not sought out publicity in the way that Bakker did.

"We should not be tainted by the same broad brush, and convicted together," he said.

TV Evangelists May Be Called To Testify

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — With a witness list that looks like a "Who's Who" of television evangelism, prosecutors in the tax evasion trial of two former top PTL aides urged the jury not to be distracted by the glitter and to concentrate on the allegedly unpaid taxes.

"This case is not about (former PTL President) Jim Bakker, Tammy Bakker or (PTL aide) Richard Dortch," Justice Department prosecutor Joseph Bender told the eight-woman, four-man jury. "It's not about whether the defendants collected exorbitant salaries or bonuses. It's about the income the defendants failed to pay taxes on."

Prosecutors allege that David Taggart, 32, who was PTL founder Jim Bakker's personal aide, and his 35-year-old brother, James, PTL's former interior decorator, used ministry credit cards to get large cash advances and used blank PTL checks to pay American Express bills.

Prosecutors Bender and David Brown are expected to call up to 69 witnesses to testify during the Taggart trial, which may last as long as a month. The prosecution may call evangelists Jerry Falwell, John Wesley Fletcher, Rex Humbard and Rex Humbard Jr.

In his opening statement, Bender said the government would prove that the Taggart brothers illegally used more than $1.1 million in PTL money to buy such things as a New York condominium, luxury automobiles, jewelry, furs and designer clothing.

David Taggart was a little-known executive at PTL. But behind the scenes, many considered him second in power only to Bakker. Taggart was fired in April 1987, weeks after Bakker resigned in a sex and money scandal.

James Taggart, 35, worked at PTL in the early 1980s. In 1984 he formed an interior decorating business whose chief client, PTL, paid him hundreds of thousands of dollars a year.

"Be patient. Look for the colors, look for the shapes," Bender, 33, said.

To underscore the point, Bender and his colleagues carted forward seven boxes of documents from a 16-month grand jury investigation. "The nice thing about documents is they don't have a memory. They don't forget. . . . They're always there."

Bender and Brown, summoned four witnesses Wednesday: an IRS agent, a former PTL accountant, a one-time PTL secretary and the Charlotte lawyer who signed the Taggart's tax returns between 1984 and 1987.

Spot Truck Checks Find Little Abuse

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Recent spot checks on tractor-trailer rigs on North Carolina highways kept truckers on their toes, and it showed state officials that alcohol use isn't as big a problem as they had suspected.

Agents with the N.C. Department of Motor Vehicles made two arrests for driving while impaired, said Vernon Morton, special assistant to the commissioner of motor vehicles.

"We're pleased with the apparent low alcohol use and the results of this saturation program," Morton said.

TAME — the month-long Theft and Motor Carrier Enforcement program — started with a June 6 inspection at a weigh station in Hillsborough and ended Wednesday with an inspection in Lumberton. Inspections were also done at weigh stations in Charlotte and Asheville.

During the four operations, DMV enforcement officers arrested two drivers — one in Charlotte and one in Asheville — when they registered .09 percent of alcohol in a breathalyzer test.

NOW Plans Mass March On Capitol

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Abortion rights activists expect to blunt the impact of a Supreme Court ruling with a "mass mobilization of the American people" to march on the Capitol and to target key legislative races next year.

Organizers for the National Organization for Women announced Wednesday they hope to draw 1 million people to the march at the end of October.

The march "will make the equal rights march look like a peanut compared to the giant that will come out here," NOW President Molly Yard told a rain-dampened crowd of several hundred who gathered for a rally across the street from the White House.

"We will organize with NOW the largest mass mobilization in history," she said.

Last April, abortion rights activists lobbied on Capitol Hill to try to influence the Supreme Court's decision on a Missouri law imposing restrictions on abortion. Crowd-size estimates ranged from 300,000 to 600,000 men and women, Democrats and Republicans and Hollywood stars.

However, justices on Monday upheld the Missouri law, giving states new power to regulate abortion.

"We're not about to go home and give up," said Yard. "We are going to stay and fight."

Yard said the NOW march will be part of the group's "Freedom Campaign for Women's Life," which also will include a "Freedom Caravan" that will travel to every state to educate women about the abortion rights movement.

About 14 leaders from a dozen national pro-choice groups yelled into microphones set up in Lafayette Park to issue warnings to President Bush and other elected officials who are against women having the right to choose abortions. Others held banners, waved signs, hooted, cheered and clapped.

Police lined the streets and milled through the crowd to carry off a few anti-abortion activists who infiltrated the rally with their own signs.

Irene Natividad, national chairwoman of the National Women's Political Caucus, said her group will focus on training women to run for state legislative seats. She said delegates to the group's August convention will receive copies of a manual, "How to Run and Win on Choice."

Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., said she will introduce legislation to move the family planning issue "front and center."

"I think this is a political struggle from beginning to end. We say to state legislators and federal congressmen all across this country, 'Take our rights and we'll take your jobs,'" said Kate Michelman, executive director of the National Abortion Rights Action League.

"We will be single-issue voters," she said. "Choice is the most important issue that we can vote on. We are busily engaged in targeting key races. We are going to be the most bold and sophisticated and hard-hitting political campaign this nation has ever seen."

Older Moms Having Healthier Babies

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — College-educated women who postponed having children until their 30s are getting earlier pre-natal care and having fewer underweight babies than other mothers, according to a government report.

Four times more women aged 30 to 34 had first babies in 1986 than did women in the same age group in 1970, the National Center for Health Statistics reported Wednesday.

Between 1970 and 1986, the number of first births to women 30 to 34 increased from 42,404 to 181,504, the center reported. For women 35 to 39, the total first births rose from 11,704 to 44,427.

The increase in older first-time mothers reflects women who have postponed families while completing educations and launching careers, sociologists have reported.

Among women 30 to 34, the proportion of first-time mothers who have college degrees increased from 40 percent in 1975 to 48 percent in 1986, according to the report compiled by Stephanie J. Ventura.

Although some increase can be attributed to the overall rise in education among women, the rate also reflects that some women are postponing having children, the report said.

"It is apparent that well-educated women ... have postponed childbearing, and that they are making up for at least some of the delay at a growing pace," Ventura said.

Better-educated mothers are seeking earlier medical attention for themselves and their babies, resulting in fewer underweight births, according to the study. "Trends and Variations in First Births to Older Women, 1970-86."

Birth weight is widely used as a measure of infant health, with babies weighing less than 5 pounds 8 ounces considered at risk.

For women 30 to 34, the report found, 7.5 percent of all first births suffered from low birth weight. But among women with college educations the share was 5.8 percent.

Watergate For Sale

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Watergate Hotel, the site of the 1972 bungled burglary at the Democratic National Committee offices that led to the resignation of President Richard M. Nixon, is for sale.

The British Coal Board has put the 23-room hotel, which is part of an office building, up for sale, along with the lease it holds on another office building in the Watergate complex, the land under three cooperative apartments and retail space in the Watergate shopping mall.

Pension fund officials said Wednesday they want to pull out of the U.S. real estate market because growth prospects are better in other countries.

Wendy Luscombe, president of Pan American Properties Inc. and Buckingham Holdings Inc., the American companies that manage the fund's holdings, would not comment on the asking price.

Estimates for the complex, which was completed in 1965, have ranged from $28 million to $71 million, according to today's editions of The Washington Post.

The break-in at the sixth-floor offices the DNC was using in 1972 made the complex something of a landmark and the name of the site also became the name of the nation's biggest political scandal.

"It has historic value," said Stephen J. Wayne, a Georgetown University professor of government.

The British pension fund's U.S. portfolio, valued at nearly $1 billion, includes 10 shopping centers, two shopping malls and office buildings in New York City and San Francisco.

Asbestos May Be Banned Entirely

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The government is preparing to ban almost all uses of asbestos, ending a decade-long debate over the health risk posed by the cancer-causing substance in such items as brake linings and water pipes, according to sources.

The regulatory action, which will end the manufacture of most asbestos products in three phases over the next seven years, was expected to be announced by the Environmental Protection Agency today.

According to government and private sources who spoke on condition they not be identified, the agency action will allow asbestos to be a component in only a small number of items, prohibiting its use over the next seven years in an estimated 94 percent of the products in which it currently can be found.

Among those products are automobile brake pads and linings, cement water distribution pipes, roofing shingles, floor and pipe wrapping and other construction products.

Because asbestos has been singled out as a cause of lung cancer, its use has been restricted in recent years. Loosely formed asbestos insulation for buildings and pipes no longer is used and asbestos emissions into the air are regulated.

School officials across the country have been directed to inspect for asbestos and develop plans to eliminate it from school buildings.

But asbestos continues to be used in various forms for a wide variety of products. As recently as 1987 it was estimated that 85,000 tons of asbestos went into hundreds of products annually. Three years earlier the estimates were 240,000 tons a year.

Asbestos is part of the nation's water system with an estimated 400,000 miles of concrete-asbestos piping carrying drinking water to thousands of communities. Most automobile and truck brake linings and pads are made of asbestos because the product is strong and relatively inexpensive.

Its use has continued, although scientists have known for years that asbestos fibers when inhaled can cause lung cancer and other lung disorders that may not show up for decades.

But while there is widespread agreement about the health risks from loosely packed asbestos found in building insulation or from high levels of certain occupational exposure, the risks posed from its other uses has been debated for nearly a decade.

The government first considered a ban on asbestos use in 1979.

But EPA attempts to propose a regulation covering a wide variety of asbestos products were stymied in the Reagan administration because of strong opposition from the Office of Management and Budget. Finally in 1986 the EPA proposed a ban covering a variety of asbestos products.

The final EPA rule to be announced will not affect products already in use such as asbestos brake pads in many cars and trucks now on the road or the thousands of miles of cement-asbestos water distribution pipes found in many parts of the country.

Sources said the ban will affect: —A variety of felt products for roofing, flooring and pipe wrap, as well as construction sheet products beginning next year.

—Automobile and small truck brake linings, disc brake pads, clutches and automatic transmission components in all new cars beginning in 1994.

—Cement water distribution pipes, in used auto and truck replacement parts and repairs, roof shingles and paper products beginning in 1997.

The expected regulatory action was praised by environmentalists even in advance of its release.

"This is the first time since 1980 that the EPA has done a major industry-wide ban on a particular toxic substance," said Jacqueline Warren, an attorney for the Natural Resources Defense Council.

She said the action represents a change in focus from trying to control emissions of certain toxic substances to halting their use. "This is a new approach — pollution prevention," she said in an interview.

In 1980, the EPA directed a ban on PCBs at the insistence of Congress.

House Members Call On Bush To Grant Pardon To Ollie North

By Alan Fran
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush is facing renewed pressure to pardon Oliver North after a federal judge decided the former White House aide would serve no time in jail for his Iran-Contra convictions.

U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell sentenced North on Wednesday to a three-year suspended sentence, two years probation, $150,000 in fines and 1,200 hours of community service work.

Fifty-eight members of the House composed a letter to Bush urging a pardon for North, arguing, "It is time to put an end to the political persecution of an honorable man who has served his country with distinction."

White House Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater said Bush had no comment on the sentencing and had not considered a pardon.

"We haven't discussed a pardon," Fitzwater said. "There's been no discussion. It hasn't even been discussed."

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said he believed Bush should pardon North because the fine was too high and the loss of the former Marine Corps lieutenant colonel's pension was too stiff a penalty.

The Navy announced that as a result of the sentencing it was suspending North's $23,000-a-year pension earned in 20 years of service. But it recommended the pension be restored by Comptroller General Charles Bowsher, who has the final say.

North said after the sentencing that he planned to press an appeal of his conviction and looked forward to carrying out Gesell's order that he devote 1,200 hours to a new program to help District of Columbia youths avoid drug involvement.

"I welcome the chance to work for these folks and anybody in the fight against drugs," North said.

Gesell said he believes North still lacks understanding of "how the public service has been tarnished" by his activities, adding, "jail would only harden your misconceptions."

The judge told North: "Your notoriety has caused many difficulties but it also has made you a rich man. ... You can continue to flame the myth by which you have supported yourself during these recent difficult years or you can turn around now and do something useful."

North is free to continue the $25,000-a-speech tours that have occupied his time since his conviction for aiding and abetting in obstruction of Congress, for destroying or altering government documents and for accepting a gratuity — a security fence around his home.

The shredding conviction bars North from holding federal office.

North had asked the judge for lenience.

"I have devoted nearly two decades to the service of our country and I would never knowingly do anything to hurt it or any of its institutions," he said in a soft voice. "... I grieve over what has happened and I truly pray about it every day."

North was convicted on May 4 for his role in the Iran-Contra affair, in which the government secretly sold weapons to Iran and funneled some of the proceeds to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels. During the trial, North argued he was merely following the orders of superiors in the Reagan administration.

Lawmakers on Capitol Hill generally applauded Gesell's sentencing decision.

Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., the chairman of the House Iran-Contra Committee, called the sentence "good and wise" and said: "Judge Gesell balanced difficult facts, recognizing's Colonel North's distinguished military record and his devotion to family with the fact the jury convicted him on three counts and his difficult position with regard to his superiors."

Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, chairman of the Senate Iran-Contra Committee, said, "I am certain that Judge Gesell's sentence is appropriate, in light of the unique circumstances of this case."

Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., said: "I don't think that anybody, or very few people, wanted all of the additional chaos in the country, the additional hard feelings that we have too much of right now, of having Oliver North trundled off to jail waving the American flag."

Meantime, two other Iran-Contra figures face sentencing this week.

Public relations consultant Richard Miller, who pleaded guilty in 1987 to transmitting private donations to North's Contra aid pipeline, was scheduled to be sentenced today.

Carl "Spitz" Channell, who helped raise more than $10 million in private contributions for the Contras, is to be sentenced on Friday.

Homeless Returning To Park

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Homeless people began moving mattresses and shopping carts back into a park early today, hours after their tents were torn down by city workers.

Hundreds of people faced off with police as officers sealed off the park entrance. Ten officers suffered minor injuries and at least 30 people were arrested, charged mostly with disorderly conduct and resisting arrest, authorities said.

Tompkins Square Park in the East Village was the site of a riot last summer. But the confrontation that began Wednesday night was limited largely to some egg throwing and jeering at police, although skirmishes continued into early today.

Late Wednesday, officers appeared to be going out of their way to be courteous, saying "please" and "thank you" to those in their path.

Homeless people were told to leave the park at 8:30 p.m. under a new city regulation that took effect Wednesday banning residential structures, like tents, from parks.

"We're giving them a chance to take down their tents and gather up their belongings and they're being offered shelter," said Alan Moss, a Department of Parks and Recreation deputy commissioner who was at the scene.

He said the regulation was aimed at getting rid of unauthorized structures. "When you see a big spike being driven into a tree and boards being nailed together, that doesn't belong in a park," he said.

The park was reopened at midnight and the homeless began moving mattresses and shopping carts back inside.

Deputy Police Chief Charles Reuther said there were no plans to stop the homeless people from returning "as long as they don't bring structures."

City Human Resources Administration workers with vans were in the park to transport those who wanted to go to city shelters for the homeless.

Helmeted police officers blocked the entrance to the lower Manhattan park while workers dismantled the large cardboard boxes and other makeshift structures homeless people had been living in.

No raids were planned at other parks because "we don't have any other place where we have structures going up," Moss said.

Meanwhile, several hundred people gathered around the park. Most appeared to be curious rather than hostile.

While the mood was tense, the most serious acts involved egg throwings and rubbish burning, said a police spokesman, Sgt. Edward Burns.

Dozens of people were living in the park on Aug. 7 when police tried to enforce a curfew that was later revoked. A riot ensued, injuring 52 officers and 18 civilians. More than 100 complaints of police brutality were filed.

Stream Watch

ASHEVILLE (AP) — If the Buncombe County Board of Commissioners approves funding for equipment and if volunteers can be found, the county could become the first in the state with an organized countywide stream watch, officials say.

Stream Watch, a program that emphasizes improving and protecting waterways, has operated in the Asheville area since 1983, but so far the program has been on an individual level.

Graduate students at the University of North Carolina at Asheville would be given the information from each stream watch monitoring point of local waterways. They would plot, graph and maintain individual statistics on each stream and when changes were observed report their findings to the state Division of Water Resources.

The Buncombe County program would be the first of its kind in the state, according to the stream watch coordinator for the state Division of Water Resources.

Body Found

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — An unidentified man found nude and wrapped in chains in the Neuse River in Wayne County on Sunday apparently died of gunshot wounds, preliminary autopsy results showed.

Detective Sgt. Owen Jackson of the Wayne County Sheriff's Department said the identity of the dead man was unknown. He said the autopsy performed Monday at the state Medical Examiner's Office at Chapel Hill determined that the body had been in the river for "three days to a month."

A fisherman found the partially decomposed body in shallow water in the Neuse River on Sunday afternoon about 300 yards from the N.C. 111 bridge north of Seven Springs.

Navy Deserter Gets Suspended Term, Discharge

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TREASURE ISLAND, Calif. — A Vietnam-era Navy deserter who secretly led a normal life for 20 years received a suspended sentence and a bad conduct discharge after friends, politicians and even veterans urged leniency.

Charles Smith walked away from his Navy post at Treasure Island in September 1969, just days after being ordered to report to an Alaskan outpost. He also left behind a wife and son.

Smith kept his name, married again and lived less than 10 miles from the California base during his desertion, which was among the longest of the Navy's recent cases.

On Wednesday, the 43-year-old seaman apprentice pleaded guilty to unauthorized absence from the Navy at a court-martial. He was tracked down by Navy investigators after his name popped up during a credit check. Smith had recently purchased a home.

Judge Capt. Phil Roberts ordered Smith discharged for bad conduct and added a four-month suspended sentence and the forfeiture of $1,000 in future Navy pay.

"I couldn't ask for anything more," said Smith, who had faced a maximum life sentence for unauthorized absence.

He also could have been sentenced to one year for desertion and two years for marijuana use, which was detected during a urinalysis after his May 3 surrender, said his attorney, Howard DeNike.

When Smith was asked about his 18 months of active duty during a news conference following sentencing, he described it as "a lot of harassment. We're even now."

Smith left the Navy after finding out his first wife was unfaithful and because he resented the rigidity of military life, DeNike said. Smith enlisted in March 1968, and left the service without permission twice for brief periods before his final desertion.

Smith has never contacted his former family or his parents and a sister in Ohio. He also never obtained a divorce from his first wife, although DeNike said he assumes she either annulled the marriage or received a divorce.

Smith remarried in 1975, had five children, bought a house in the San Francisco suburb San Pablo and became active in the Episcopal church. He has worked the last 12 years as a foreman at Kardum Paint Co. of San Francisco, earning $24,000 yearly.

Prosecutor Lt. Dennis Hoffman portrayed Smith as a "problem child" who never grew up, but Smith's employer and the church pastor testified he was a dependable worker and family man.

Friends and his 37-year-old wife, Mary, gathered 600 signatures from people asking that Smith be given an administrative discharge and no prison sentence. His wife said she knew nothing of her husband's desertion.

U.S. Reps. Ron Dellums and George Miller wrote the Navy urging leniency. And a veterans' organization with members from every U.S. war and major conflict since the 1930s asked the military to grant Smith clemency.

"From our personal experiences we can understand how an individual might simply walk away from the pressures of life in the Navy, particularly in time of hostilities," said Mike Felker, secretary of the San Francisco-based Veterans Speakers Alliance, in a letter to the court.

Following several days in the brig, Smith has reported daily to Treasure Island for duty on a maintenance unit, earning a salary of $750 monthly. He is likely to be placed on leave without pay within a few weeks and then discharged.

A new enforcement program has reduced the number of desertion cases from 14,000 in 1987 to 2,485, said Lt. Cmdr. Kaye Roberts, head of the Navy Deserter Apprehension Program in Washington D.C.

The record for Navy deserters who turned themselves in belongs to a now-deceased sailor who jumped ship in 1926 and surrendered to Navy authorities last year, said Roberts, who would not reveal the man's identity.

The longest unresolved desertion case involves a sailor who left his base in 1962, she added.

Jefferies Draws Probation, $250,000 Fine In Wall Street Trade Scandal

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Former stockbroker Boyd L. Jefferies was placed on five years' probation and fined $250,000 today for his role in Wall Street's insider trading scandals.

U.S. District Judge Morris Lasker said he didn't send Jefferies to prison in part because of his cooperation with prosecutors. "Mr. Jefferies has by now earned his way through agony and effort to a suspended sentence," Lasker said.

But Lasker added a message to the financial community: "It is absurd and probably obscene for any person so engaged to undertake acts which will possibly bring him greater riches."

Spectators in the packed courtroom burst into applause after the judge left.

Jefferies, 58, pleaded guilty to two securities fraud charges of helping now-jailed speculator Ivan Boesky conceal ownership of $56 million in stock in 1985 and scheming to manipulate the stock price of Fireman's Fund Corp.

He also agreed to cooperate in other cases, resign from his Los Angeles brokerage and stay out of the securities business for at least five years.

Jefferies could have received up to 10 years in prison and a fine of up to $500,000.

His voice cracking, Jefferies told Lasker before the sentence was imposed, "I want to apologize to the court, to apologize to the government, to apologize to my friends and family who have given me so much support."

During a presentencing conference last week, U.S. Attorney Benito Romano commended Jefferies for the "exemplary nature of his cooperation" and told Lasker that Jefferies' crimes were less serious than Boesky's.

"He advanced our effort enormously because he agreed to cooperate so early," Romano said in an interview Wednesday. "He gave his time freely and without complaint and he's entitled to significant credit for that."

Lasker had sentenced Boesky to three years in prison. That sentence was widely viewed as a message that violators of securities laws would receive prison time but those who cooperated would be treated more leniently.

Jefferies admitted to holding $56 million in stock in 1985 to help Boesky disguise its ownership. He also admitted to scheming with indicted speculator Salim B. Lewis to manipulate the stock price of Fireman's Fund Corp.

"I am certainly disgraced by my actions," Jefferies told Lasker at the court conference. "I knew at the time I was bending the rules. I felt at the time that all of us in the securities industry were bending the rules. I felt if I got caught, I'd get slapped on the wrist."

At his Los Angeles-based Jefferies & Co. brokerage, which he formed 25 years ago, Jefferies worked 16-hour days making multimillion-share transactions for some of Wall Street's most important dealmakers.

Jefferies also has testified that he helped GAF Corp. manipulate the price of Union Carbide Corp. stock, although that case twice ended in a mistrial.

He also told a jury he "parked" stock for Florida takeover specialist Paul A. Bilzerian, the former Singer Co. chief who was convicted recently in the first trial success of the government's three-year securities fraud crackdown. Parking refers to hiding the true ownership of stock, a violation of securities laws.

In the GAF case, Jefferies sweated and fidgeted while giving testimony that a co-worker contradicted on several points. Defense lawyers also tarred his credibility and jurors said after both GAF trials that they did not believe Jefferies.

The mistrials were considered major setbacks for prosecutors. A third trial is set for November.

Deadly Bacteria Staging Return

By Daniel Q. Haney
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — An outbreak of rapidly fatal bacterial infections in at least four western states could mark the return of dangerous strains of strep germs that mysteriously disappeared almost 50 years ago, researchers reported today.

The newly recognized illness, which doctors call streptococcal toxic shock syndrome, can lead from a minor skin infection to death in a day or two.

Strep germs are common but usually result in relatively minor illnesses, such as sore throats. More virulent forms of the microbes were once frequent causes of life-threatening illnesses, including scarlet fever and rheumatic fever. But for reasons unclear, the dangerous strains of strep largely faded away in the early 1940s.

In today's New England Journal of Medicine, doctors describe 20 cases of severe illness, including six deaths, that were seen between 1986 and 1988 in Idaho, Montana, Utah and Nevada. They believe the illness was caused by strep bacteria that produce scarlatina toxin, the poison responsible for scarlet fever.

Although experts are unsure of the outbreak's scope, Dr. Dennis L. Stevens said, "It's a bigger problem than 20 patients, believe me."

Stevens, the report's chief author, said he expects to hear of many more cases after today's publication. However, Dr. Robert Breiman of the U.S. Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta cautioned that there may always have been occasional severe strep attacks that have gone unnoticed.

"Whether these 20 cases are a major change from the past, it's hard to know," Breiman said.

Stevens saw his first case in 1984 at the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Boise, Idaho. The victim had gone to the hospital with a mild fever. After 10 hours, he went into shock. Eight hours later, he died.

"I was amazed at the rapidity with which this occurred," he said. "I saw another case a year later. I started talking to colleagues. They told me of similar cases."

Since Stevens and his colleagues, a group of infectious disease specialists who meet once a year at the Rocky Mountain Pus Club, assembled the 20 cases he has since seen more, including some in California and Washington state.

About two years ago, other doctors began reporting an increase in the number of cases of rheumatic fever. In addition, outbreaks of severe strep disease have been reported recently in Britain and Scandinavia.

Dr. Edward Kaplan of the University of Minnesota, a co-author of the latest study, said he believes there may be some connection between the emergence of these dangerous strep illnesses, perhaps a genetic change in the strep bacteria.

"With all due respect to some people who are skeptical, one can't help being impressed with what has happened," he said. "This could be either because we are looking harder or it's a real event. I think it's a real event."

Of the 20 cases described, six victims, or 30 percent, died of the illness. Five died within four days of admission to a hospital. Three of them died within 36 hours. Most started with red, tender skin and quickly went on to more serious symptoms, including shock, kidney failure and breathing failure.

Most were healthy young adults. Their median age was 36 and all but four were younger than 50.

"People born before 1940 (when scarlet fever was more common) probably have had contact with this toxin and probably have antibodies that protect them from developing this shocklike episode," said Stevens. "We think the reason it's attacking young people and not old people is predominantly because they are immunologic virgins to this toxin."

The variety of toxic shock syndrome associated with tampon use in menstruating women is caused by a different microbe, the staphylococcal bacteria.

U.S. wine consumption declined 4.9 percent last year as modest increases in the sale of higher-priced wines failed to offset the continued plunge in popularity of wine coolers, an industry journal reported Wednesday.

Moreover, according to San Francisco wine consultant Jon Fredrikson, who tracks sales independently, the downward trend appears to be continuing this year — even in California, by far the nation's leading producer.

Wines & Vines, a magazine that covers the industry from vineyard to retail, reported in its current edition that wine consumption totaled 552.2 million gallons last year, down 28.7 million from 1987 and off 34.9 million gallons from 1986. Excluding wine coolers, dessert wines and sparkling wines, however, consumption showed a very slight increase to 340.4 million gallons, up 0.5 percent from the 338.6 million consumed in 1987. However, that still lagged well below the 351.8 million gallons of 1986.

According to editor Phil Hiaring in San Raphael, Calif., where Wines &

ment offset (declines) in jug wines. But this year, the premium segment is maybe breaking even and jugs are still plummeting.

Fredrikson attributed this change both to higher wine prices and consumer concerns stimulated by several years of increasing anti-alcohol publicity, which resulted last year in California with the requirement that retailers of alcoholic beverages post health warnings.

In any case, annual consumption per person nationally declined 5.9 percent last year to 2.25 gallons, Wines & Vines reported. While 2.39 gallons were consumed per person in 1987, the average stood at only 1.96 gallons in 1988.

Excluding the District of Columbia and Nevada, where consumption statistics are exaggerated by large numbers of non-resident sales of wine, California leads the nation in wine per inhabitant with 4.17 gallons, the magazine said. (The District of Columbia tops the annual listing with 6.22 gallons, followed by Nevada's 4.85 gallons.)

Wines & Vines also reported that only 14 percent of all wine sold in the United States last year was red.

Ag High School Flourishes In Chicago

By Robert Lee Zimmer
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — It's a high school with a livestock judging team, a field full of vegetables and a greenhouse full of flowers.

No football team. No cheerleaders.

In Chicago, of all places. The Chicago High School for Agricultural Sciences opened four years ago on the southwest edge of this city of 3 million, the last stop before the suburbs and rural countryside. It's one of only two in the nation focusing on agriculture, and university recruiters lined up with scholarships for its first graduates this spring.

"If we can't find students in the country, we'll find them in the city," says Roger Bruene of the Iowa State University College of Agriculture. "You don't have to grow up on a farm to take advantage of these excellent career opportunities."

"These ag companies are crying for people, especially minorities," says horticulture teacher Ron Biondo. "We had 19 universities here a few weeks ago recruiting our kids."

The first 86 graduates received their diplomas June 23 in a ceremony at the Chicago Board of Trade, where the nation's major farm commodities are bought and sold.

The new school was welcomed by colleges of agriculture because their enrollments were declining at a time when there was a strong demand for people trained in agricultural sciences, food engineering, finance and marketing.

"This is a futuristic bridge between a metropolitan area and new job opportunities in the food and natural resource system," says Allan Goecker of Purdue University.

The graduating seniors raised and sold crops on the school's 72-acre farm, spent weekends with farm families hundreds of miles away, and worked afternoons and summers for major agribusiness companies.

"I knew I was interested in science and chemistry, but when I got here I really got excited about agriculture," says Corie Yearby, who will study agronomy at Alcorn University in Mississippi.

"I see all these career opportunities in agriculture and I want to be part of it," said Theresa Garza, who will attend Lincoln University in Missouri and eventually hopes to grow crops in outer space.

The small high school reflects the racial balance of the city's public school system — 80 percent of its 435 students are black or Hispanic. They are recruited for their interest, not their grades.

"If Johnny can't add two and two, you don't say he can't come here," says Assistant Principal Kevin McCarthy. "You say to the parents, 'Does Johnny want to come here and do you want him to come here?'"

Students face a tough academic program in the longest school day in Chicago and nearly 50 percent more class credits than other high schools.

But, there is no shortage of applications. For every freshman accepted, another qualified student is turned away.

Parents and students are attracted because the school is relatively small and safe, and there is a likelihood of college and good jobs later.

"They learn about soil, landscaping and horticulture, and they use these skills," says Gloria Yearby, Corie's mother. "It gives them a real incentive to go on to college."

The students have grown up in the city and for many, Biondo's horticulture class is the first opportunity to have flower petals between their fingers and dirt under their nails.

In the greenhouse, sophomore Julie Berner watered and fertilized geraniums, some of the 50,000 bedding plants grown and sold by the students. The sale raised $7,000 for the school.

"Just listening to lectures in class would be boring, but this is exciting, hands-on experience in horticulture," she says.

Outside, students fed the floppy-eared rabbits they raised and showed in competition. Janet Martinez, a junior, won first place with Buffy, her black Angora.

"I want to be a veterinarian and I know this is the right start — an agricultural high school," she says.

Down the hall, the floral design lab was strewn with pieces of stem from the cutting table. There were cut flowers in a cooler; a diagram of plant parts on the wall; a chalk drawing of a celosia; and young violets growing under lights.

Students sell their arrangements, including many that are used at official Board of Education activities.

"I had one girl with a learning disability who never had gotten good grades," says Donna Theimer, who teaches floral design. "But, she loved this class and now she has a career goal she can actually attain."

In the computer laboratory, freshman Tracy Givens and classmates work on 34 terminals. Computer training is required.

"You just have a lot more opportunities here, a lot more responsibility," says Miss Givens, wearing a yellow shirt and cap advertising the "Webberville, Mich., Corn Festival."

If You Can Find Him, Propose To Him

DEAR ABBY: Last December, a man I had been dating for two years proposed to me, with ring in hand. I was not prepared for a marriage proposal at the time and didn't know what to say, so I told him I'd give him my answer in a week or so. Well, after a week or so, I told him that I wasn't ready for marriage.

He replied, "OK" — but I think he felt totally rejected and thought that I was not interested in him at all. At the time, I really wasn't sure about my feelings for him, but now I am definitely sure that I love him and want to marry him. So what should I do? Ask him to marry me? Or wait until he asks me again? I haven't spoken to him since last December. — Cautious In Philadelphia

Dear Cautious: There appears to be a colossal communications gap between you two. If you can find him, ask him.

Dear Abby: Please tell me how I should introduce myself to single men at my sister's wedding now that I am in the process of getting a divorce. (Sis and I do not live in the same state.)

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

When my sister asked me to be in her wedding, four months ago, I was married and living with my husband, but all that has changed now. We separated last month and are living apart. I don't want to brag, but I am a very pretty woman, and people tell me I look like a teen-ager.

What should I say if a man shows an interest in me? I have three children all under 5 years old. When should I bring that into the conversation? I would not try to hide it, but I wouldn't want to scare off any man by mentioning it too soon. I would like to meet a nice man and start my life over, but I'm not sure how much I should tell about myself right off the bat. Please guide me. — Starting Over At 25

Dear Starting Over: Right off the bat, be absolutely honest. It's not necessary to say, "Hi, I'm 25 years old, have three children under 5 and I'm in the process of being divorced." But if someone shows an interest in you, those vital facts are very important, and should be disclosed early in the "getting-to-know-you" stage.

Dear Abby: With regard to "Spot Watcher," whose pet goldfish jumped out of the water at feeding time, I thought you might be interested in the story about my grandfather's pet goldfish named Rosa. Grandpa told me this story when I was a lad of 10, some 65 years ago.

It seems that Rosa learned not only to jump out of the bowl and right into Grandpa's hand at feeding time, she also learned to live out of the water for hours — yes, even days — at a time!

Rosa would just flip-flop, flip-flop, and follow Grandpa everywhere! Grandpa said it was quite a sight when he went with Rosa for a walk through the village. People would line up just to get a glimpse of Grandpa with Rosa the little goldfish flip-flopping along behind him!

Even to this day, it brings tears to my eyes when I think of Rosa's tragic demise. One day when Grandpa and Rosa were walking on an old wooden bridge that crossed over a small creek, Rosa flip-flopped and fell through a crack in the bridge floor into the creek a few feet below ... and drowned! — Arthur Reed, Clearwater, Fla.

Dear Arthur (from Clearwater yet ... how appropriate): What a delightful fish tale!

Designers Show Bathing Suits Not Meant For Normal Women

Every year, women allow bathing suit manufacturers to do a number on them. Designers march out the same six perfect bodies wearing a string connected to two Dixie cups, a bottom the size of a bus token, and declare, "This is what you'll be wearing on the beaches this summer."

Two hours after those bodies in those suits are splashed on the pages of Sports Illustrated, women all over the country start boiling dietary plastic pouches.

I used to do that. Not anymore. Face it, America, you've cooked turkeys bigger than those bodies, and you are never going to look like that. Look at me when I write. I know you don't want to hear this, but it's true: These women starve for a living. Can you understand that? On their resumes, under experience, they list "Diet." They don't eat a dozen olives while they're getting dinner. They don't stand over a disposal gnawing at the meat their kids left on the pork chop bones. They don't scrape the bottom of the skillet with a fork for the crispy stuff that fell off the chicken.

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

Oh sure, they've known success, but they've never known the ecstasy of dumping an envelope of onion soup mix into a pint of sour cream and devouring it with a bag of chips and a dietary drink on a Friday night.

Not only that, all six of them are young. Real young. Cologne on my dressing table is older than most of them. They have never had a pregnancy where they gained 48 pounds. They've never balanced a stroller on one hip and a 40-pound baby on the other. They don't have stretch marks so deep the sand collects in them. They go through life squeezing buttocks and going into the pelvic tilt at traffic lights. Is that the kind of life you want?

I've been to a lot of beaches and swimming pools in my life, and I have yet to see a bathing suit from the pages of Sports Illustrated. What I am seeing are tushes that have tumbled, chests that have fallen, knees that have bloused and Pillsbury Doughboy stomachs.

The average woman emerges from the dressing room wearing a cover-up or a beach towel wrapped around her middle. Her bathing suit will have a little flounce to cover the tops of her legs. It will drape over her stomach so you're not quite sure what's under it, and will have more built-ins than an RV. The back of her knees will look like a road map outlined in varicose veins.

Don't bother looking for the six bathing suit models. They won't be there. Oh, there will be a couple of teen-agers who look pretty good in a lime green bikini that glows in the dark, but for the most part, there will be self-conscious women scouring the beaches in a desperate attempt to find someone who looks worse in a bathing suit than they do.

I fully expect mail from good bodies who will assure me that in spite of kids and time, they have not gone to pot. Probably six letters. No more.

Smith-Hardy Couple Are Wed

GRIFTON — Amanda Leigh Hardy of Grifton and Jeffery Dwayne Smith of Route 3, Greenville, were married at 3 p.m. June 25. The Rev. Joyce Mott, aunt of the bride, of Bridgeton conducted the ceremony in Black Jack Pentecostal Free Will Baptist Church.

The bride is the daughter of Carol Allin of Grifton, and William H. Hardy Sr. of Winterville. She was escorted by her father and given in marriage by her parents. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Billy Smith of Route 3, Greenville.

The bride wore a formal gown of candlelight satin with a fitted bodice of satin and re-embroidered alencon lace and sweetheart neckline. Seed pearls enhanced the wedding band collar. Lace motifs adorned the flared skirt, which extended into a chapel train. Her halo of silk flowers and seed pearls was attached to a chapel-length illusion veil with streamers in back. She carried a nosegay of white carnations and pink sweetheart roses.

The maid of honor was Tracey

MRS. SMITH

Tatum of Ayden. Bridesmaids included Cindi Smith of Ayden, Monica Mills of Greenville, and Lee Anna Allin of Kinston, step-sister of the bride. Kimberly Fisher of Hookerton, cousin of the bride was flower girl.

Toby Corey of Greenville was best man. Ushers were Timmy Smith, brother of the bridegroom, Doug Wilkinson and Joey Williams, all of Greenville. Brandon Goff of Greenville, nephew of the bridegroom, was ring bearer.

Wedding music was presented by Mrs. R.W. Stewart, organist, and vocalist William S. Oliver Jr., uncle of the bride.

Dawn Fisher and Sara Oliver directed the wedding.

The bride is a graduate of Ayden-Grifton High School and is employed by Rose's, Inc. The bridegroom graduated from D.H. Conley High School and is employed by Regional Storage and Transport.

The couple will live near Greenville after a wedding trip to New York and the beach.

A reception was given by the bride's parents and the bridegroom's parents gave a rehearsal dinner. Several showers and a bridesmaids luncheon were held before the wedding.

Whitfield-Howard Couple Marry

MRS. CHAUNCEY

Pair Wed Saturday Afternoon

Tammy Gail Martin and Charles H. Chauncey were married at 2 p.m. Saturday at Black Jack Pentecostal Free Will Baptist Church. The Rev. R.M. Stewart officiated the double-ring ceremony.

Wedding music was presented by organist Mrs. R.M. Stewart, pianist Paige Adkins and soloist Merideth Adkins.

The bride is the daughter of Carl Wayne and Alice Martin of Route 13, Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Annette Chauncey Radford of Greenville.

Escorted by her father, the bride wore a taffeta gown accented with Victorian lace. The fitted bodice of lace and sequins featured off-shoulder, ruffled sleeves. The bustled skirt flowed into a chapel-length train accented with a bow at the waist. The headpiece was a wreath of silk roses and pearls with Lily of the Valley. A pouf of illusion flowed into a fingertip veil. She carried a bouquet of miniature, white, silk roses and carnations with pearl and lace streamers.

Amy L. Martin of Greenville, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a blue taffeta, floor-length gown and carried a bouquet of blue and white silk roses.

Bridesmaids were Karen Wells of Grimesland, a cousin of the bride, and Debbie Klaich of Greenville. Their dresses matched the maid of honor's. They carried bouquets of royal blue, silk tiger lilies.

Carla Jo Martin of Greenville, a sister of the bride, was flower girl. She carried a white basket accented with miniature, silk, white and blue roses.

Danny Radford of Greenville was best man. Ushers were Timothy Moseley, a cousin of the bride, and Mark Klaich, both of Greenville.

The mother of the bride wore a beauty pink tea-length taffeta gown. The mother of the bridegroom wore an aqua and white, floor-length gown. They both wore corsages of miniature white carnations.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall following the ceremony hosted by aunts of the bride, Peggy Elks, Sandra Guy, Glenda Jackson and Joyce Miller, and Susan Elks, a cousin of the bride. An after-rehearsal party was also hosted by aunts of the bride.

The bride attended Trinity Christian and is employed by Carolina Windows and Doors Inc. The bridegroom attended North Pitt High School and is employed by Simpson Industries.

After a wedding trip to Fairfield Harbor Resort, the couple will live in Greenville.

MAURY — Jennifer Lynn Howard of Winterville and James Andrew Whitfield of Ayden were married at 4 p.m. Saturday in Maury Chapel Free Will Baptist Church.

Bishop J.E. Reddick and the Rev. Ollie Harris conducted the double-ring ceremony. Wedding music was provided by pianist Terrell Powell and soloists Jeffrey Parker, Owen Forbes and Michele Whitfield.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a formal satin gown. The fitted bodice was encrusted with pearls and iridescents. Appliques of lace pearls and iridescents trimmed the tucked sleeves. The ballgown skirt had sheer inserts trimmed with schiffli lace, pearls and iridescents and extended to a cathedral train. She carried a cascade of star-gazer lillies, white roses, baby's breath and ivy with a satin, rose-colored ribbon. She wore a headband of pearls and iridescents with silk flowers and dropped pearls at the side.

Adriann J. Howard of Durham, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Deborah Howard of Durham, sister of the bride; Sarah W. Clark of Kinston, sister of the bridegroom; Angela Whitfield and Michele Whitfield, both of Ayden and sisters of the bridegroom; Renee Mills of Winterville, cousin of the bride, and Regina Thomas of Ayden. They wore dusty rose tea-length gowns and carried nosegays of pink, blue, yellow and rose colored carnations with daisies, baby's breath and satin ribbons.

Ashley Danielle Howard of Winterville, daughter of the couple, was flower girl.

Melvin Rosenboro of Washington, D.C. was his cousin's best man.

Groomsmen were Michael Clark of Kinston, brother-in-law of the bridegroom; Derwood Connor of New Haven, Conn., cousin of the bride; Bruce Hines of Silver Spring, Md., cousin of the bridegroom; Charles D. Howard of Grimesland, brother of the bride; Anthony Randolph of Goldsboro, and Harold Willoughby of Greenville. Ushers were Ronnie Alston and Samuel Harris Jr., both of Greenville.

Marcus Carmon of Ayden was ring bearer.

The mother of the bride wore a tea-length rose dress with a tiered skirt. The mother of the bridegroom wore a tea-length blue two-piece crystal pleated dress. Grandmothers of the bride and bridegroom were remembered with corsages.

A reception, hosted by the bride's parents, was held at the Hilton Inn, Greenville. A rehearsal dinner was held in the church fellowship hall and was hosted by the bride's parents and Michael and Sarah Clark.

The bride attended D.H. Conley High School and Pitt Community College. She is employed with Pitt County Memorial Hospital. The bridegroom attended Ayden-Gritton High School and is employed at Grady-White Boats, Inc.

The couple will reside in Ayden.

Consumers Could Be Putting Too Much Faith In Oat Bran

MATURE OUTLOOK

Health is just as likely to be the focus of conversation over a golf or bridge game as is gossip.

With each finding in nutrition, there's more information to sort through. But, as Mature Outlook magazine says, sometimes these new reports seem to contradict earlier advice, especially on topics such as fiber, sodium and caffeine.

Fiber is certainly big news. "Oat bran is the current craze," says David Kritchevsky of the Wistar Institute in Philadelphia. The reason: Oat bran helps lower cholesterol. This source of soluble fiber is almost flying off grocery shelves.

Two ounces of this grain — cooked up as a breakfast cereal, mixed in the batter of a healthful muffin recipe or sprinkled onto just about any food — may lower blood cholesterol levels 5 percent, note researchers for a recent study done at the University of California.

Oat bran alone, however, will not negate the effects of an otherwise high-fat, high-cholesterol diet. "Oat bran is useful as an adjunct to an already good diet," says Kritchevsky.

Because of all this hoopla about oat bran and other sources of soluble fiber, some people are tempted to shun insoluble fiber. A good diet should contain a balance of both.

Insoluble fiber, such as wheat bran, also plays a vital role. Although it may not be as protective against cancer as once thought, insoluble fiber has at least one major redeeming feature. "Insoluble fiber is a good laxative," according to Kritchevsky.

Soluble or insoluble, most Americans eat little fiber. The National Cancer Institute has noted that most people probably benefit from an intake of 20 to 35 grams of fiber per day. Kritchevsky recommends calculating total fiber intake based on calorie intake: 15 grams of fiber for every 1,000 calories.

And when it comes to fiber sources he says, "It's better to get fiber from the grocery store than from the pharmacy" because foods high in fiber contain a variety of other important nutrients not found in fiber supplements.

Durable Iron Furniture Moves Inside

COUNTRY HOME

Long recognized for its durability outdoors, iron furniture is now moving in.

Its move from the garden or gazebo into the home signals an increasing appreciation for texture and substance, says Country Home magazine. Iron, with its cool rigidity and weightiness, serves as a visual tonic and lively anchor for rooms otherwise furnished entirely in wood. It retains a flexibility of design, too, that ranges from rustic to refined.

No country room is exempt from the benefits of an iron accent. Ornate ironwork on an occasional table or console dresses up an informal dining room or melds with its elegance.

Old world impulses are recalled with the addition of a single iron chair in the living room. A stylized iron bench that echoes the rustic shape of twig furniture injects subtle humor as alternative seating in a family room or study. Iron also lends wit, art and function to the kitchen, where an aggregate wall sculpture and baker's rack are appropriate.

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 58.75 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. Too few percent of the loads offered have been confirmed for a weighted average. The market is about steady and the live supply is adequate for a mostly moderate demand. Average weights desirable, instances heavy. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 2,262,000, compared to 2,163,000 last Thursday.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn mostly 10 cents higher at mostly 3.00-3.16 in East and mostly 3.21-3.29 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans 25 to 30 cents higher at mostly 7.52-7.87 in East and mostly 7.64-7.67 in the Piedmont; wheat mostly 3.54-3.64; (new crop corn 2.52-2.92; soybeans 6.65-6.92). PIK certificates were steady to 1/2 percent higher and ranged from 97 to 100 1/2 percent.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market advanced slightly today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose 3.61 to 2,460.17 in the first half hour of trading.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about 4 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 530 up, 380 down and 506 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 21.71 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Armstrong World Industries rose 3/8 to 48 1/2 on top of a 4 1/2-point jump Wednesday, when the company said the Belzberg family of Vancouver, B.C., had acquired 9.85 percent of its stock and was considering a possible bid for the rest.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average closed with a 3.79 gain at 2,456.56.

House

Leveling the house cost the city nearly $2,300, Brown said. But the owners of the property will foot the bill or have a lien placed on the property to collect the costs.

Brown said the city plans to destroy a third house within three weeks, this one also on Third Street.

"This one we'll probably torch," Brown said. Burning the building would give fire fighters practice with structural fires while eliminating the offensive structure.

In all, Brown said, the city plans to raze six houses by this fall.

ECU Funds Planned

"We've got $2 million for the conference center" that he said is expected to cost "anywhere from $18 to $26 million, depending on how far we go and how big."

When the remainder of the money needed for that project will be appropriated is "not determinable right now," Martin said, "because the revenue picture for next year and the following year is uncertain. We hope it will be much improved, but we'll just have to wait and see."

According to Martin, "We owe a lot of thanks to Sen. Kenneth Royal and Sen. Marc Basnight ... they were very cooperative and instrumental in getting the funds for us. And all the subcommittee chairs were supportive of our plan, which puts us in good shape."

Efforts to reach other members of Pitt County's legislative delegation for comments this morning were unsuccessful and ECU Chancellor Richard Eakin was out of town and could not be reached.

North Carolina State University in Raleigh would be the big winner from the $52 million bill contains for the 16 University of North Carolina campuses.

The measure includes $6 million of a requested $16.6 million for NCSU's proposed sports arena and another $6 million for an engineering graduate research center at NCSU, as well as $9.6 million for a physical education complex at Fayetteville State University and $7.5 million for a business school building at UNC-Chapel Hill.

The bill also earmarks $12.1 million in 1989-90 and $8 million in 1990-91 for a State Bureau of Investigation complex; $11.2 million for prison construction; $8 million for repairs and renovations at state parks; $33 million for repairs and renovations to state buildings; $18 million — half the estimated cost — of a new State Department of Revenue building, and $7 million for a new steam plant in the state government complex in Raleigh.

The bill does not include any money at all for UNC campuses in the Triad area — N.C. A&T State University, UNC-Greensboro or the N.C. School of the Arts — nor does it include $4.2 million requested for gymnasium renovations at ECU, $8.3 million needed for a building for the School of Social Work at UNC-CH or $13.9 million requested for a UNC School of Medicine biomedical research laboratory.

Totzauer

Mr. Josef Totzauer, 92, of Greenville died Wednesday in Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

A memorial service will be conducted at 5 p.m. Saturday in the Wilkerson Funeral Chapel.

Mr. Totzauer was a concert violinist and music director, the founder of the Paterson, N.J., Philharmonic Orchestra and the operator of the Ridgewood, N.J., School of Music for more than 50 years. Born in Trossau, Austria, he studied at the Leipzig Conservatory in Germany and performed during World War I for Emperor Charles I.

He was a composer of orchestral and choral works and authored a seven-volume comprehensive string-instruction method. For many years he served as president of the American Aid for Austrian Expellees, giving numerous benefit concerts. He received the Sudetendeutschen Volkstumpreis in Stuttgart, Germany, in 1976. In 1984, the German ambassador, on behalf of the government of West Germany, presented him the Service Cross for outstanding service to German culture.

Surviving are a daughter, Theresa Shank of Greenville, and three grandsons.

The family will be at the home of Theresa Shank, 1215 Drexel Lane. They suggest that those desiring to make memorial contributions consider the Totzauer Music Scholarship, East Carolina University, ECU Foundation Corp., Taylor-Slaughter Alumni Center, Greenville, N.C., 27834.

Arrest Nagy Charges Canceled

method to allow officers to detect drug use at any time, Guy said, instead of scheduling expensive daily tests at a commercial lab. The client must pay for the tests.

The drug testing is an example of how the house arrest officers work in combination with the computer technology.

"The equipment is not the only thing checking them. They (house arrest officers) have to go by the employer and check them. The employer will be aware of the program. If the person leaves the job site, the employer is to call us directly," Guy said.

The computer is programmed to allow the client to be away from the home during designated work hours, such as 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. At all other times the client must be within 200 feet of the monitoring device in the home. The computer can determine if the schedule is broken. The effect is that the client is homebound except for work or school, Guy said, and the program is cheaper than prison.

If the anklet is cut at home, it instantly signals the computer. If the person cuts the strap while at work, the computer will notify the officers at the time when the defendant was supposed to have arrived home.

House arrest will be available to District Court judges, Guy said, but he hopes the program does not get bogged down with clients not targeted for the program. If a District Court judge hands down a 30-day suspended sentence and requires six months on house arrest, he said most defendants would rather take a chance on serving the jail term than abiding by house arrest rules.

BUDAPEST, Hungary — Hungary's Supreme Court today canceled all charges against Imre Nagy, the leader of the 1956 anti-Stalinist uprising.

The move by the Supreme Court meant full legal rehabilitation for Nagy and eight associates, two of whom are still alive. Shortly before he died, Nagy predicted he would one day be exonerated.

"The Supreme Court has found the chief prosecutor's petition well-founded and canceled the sentences against Nagy and his associates passed in 1958," the official MTI news agency reported.

"All of the charges were canceled as no crime was committed," it said.

Nagy's daughter Erzsebet and relatives of other executed leaders attended today's proceedings. Miklos Vasarhelyi and Sandor Kopacs, surviving Nagy aides included in the Supreme Court decision, did not.

Nagy's legal rehabilitation came just hours after the government announced the death of leader Janos Kadar, under whose regime Nagy was executed after Soviet tanks crushed the revolt.

Arms Tests Successful

not allow Soviets aboard American submarines to conduct the intrusive inspections needed to determine whether a cruise missile is carrying a conventional or nuclear warhead.

Soviet technology lags far behind American in the sophisticated missiles, which can be launched very close to an enemy's shore, can fly at altitudes too low for radar detection and deliver a nuclear punch without warning against key coastal areas.

In Wednesday's Black Sea experiment, Soviet government and private American scientists used a variety of radiation detection devices to measure the emission of neutrons and gamma rays from a nuclear warhead on an SS-N-12 subsonic cruise missile aboard the Soviet missile cruiser Slava.

Among observers were three American congressmen, all Democrats: Reps. John Spratt, a member of the House Armed Services Committee from South Carolina, Bob Carr, from Michigan, and James Olin, of Virginia. They were in Yalta, 750 miles south of Moscow and not available for comment immediately.

Cochran and other American scientists from Princeton and Stanford universities made their measurements with portable detectors placed alongside the deck launcher, less than a yard from the warhead.

Simultaneously, Soviet scientists from the academy's institutes of geochemistry and earth physics used radiation detection devices carried in a military helicopter and a troop transport, said Cochran.

Free Equipment Proposal Under Fire

NCHSAA Head Criticizes New General Assembly Proposal

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A proposal in the General Assembly that would allow certain North Carolina high school athletes to use equipment given to them by companies would set a bad precedent, the head of the state's governing body for prep athletics says.

Last week, Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, asked to add a provision to a bill that would allow high school golfers and tennis players to use equipment given to them by companies wishing to promote their products.

"It (the proposal) destroys the consistency," said Charlie Adams, executive director of the North Carolina High School Athletic Association. "The rules in this state have been applied to all 21 sports — men and women. We've always stood tall in being consistent and fair. All this does is separate tennis and golf from the other 19 sports.

"I don't like the idea of any sport being treated differently than the rest," Adams said. "We absolutely don't need an exception. Here's your affluent upper class — not middle class — but upper class. They don't need free balls and racquets. We're not denying anyone the right to participate."

NCHSAA's amateur rule states, "Money or awards having utilitarian value (i.e. golf balls or tennis racquets) may not be given to students for participation in athletics Students may not accept items by virtue of being on a 'free list' or 'loan list.' Enforcement of this rule by the NCHSAA begins with a student's entry in the ninth grade."

Adams said sporting goods companies such as Wilson often let prep

Raleigh Not On Itinerary

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A book tour of 11 cities to tout "Personal Fouls," Peter Golenbock's chronicle of the North Carolina State basketball program, won't include Raleigh, according to a catalog issued by the book's publisher.

A catalog from Carroll & Graf Publishers Inc. of New York, reproduced a copy of the book's cover, which depicts a deflated basketball. The catalog announced a first printing of 200,000 hard-cover copies at $18.95 each, an advertising budget of $150,000 and an author's tour of 16 cities.

Jonathan A. Sawyer, a spokesman for the publisher, said the tour had since been cut to 11 cities and that a stop in Raleigh was not planned. Asked why the author was not coming to Raleigh, the home of N.C. State, he said: "I don't really know. I will tell you there have been death threats on Golenbock, and whether that relates to it or not, I'm not sure."

The book is scheduled to be published Sept. 5.

The catalog said the serial rights to the 320-page book had been sold to Penthouse magazine. But a spokesman for the publisher said the serialization had been canceled since the catalog had been printed.

The original publisher, Simon & Schuster, dropped "Personal Fouls" in February after state Attorney General Lacy H. Thornburg and attorneys for Valvano threatened to sue.

Three months later, Carroll & Graf announced it would publish the manuscript.

The language of the Carroll & Graf catalog is much more restrained than the wording of a proof of the book's dust-jacket that Simon & Schuster issued before canceling the book.

Carroll & Graf officials have said the book is identical to the manuscript that Simon & Schuster rejected. Sawyer said the new publishers have added material, but he declined say what was new. "There is more stuff in it than there was before," he told the News and Observer of Raleigh. "There was nothing removed. There has been information added."

When Carroll & Graf announced its plans in May, spokesmen said the book would become a national best seller. One writer who follows the publishing industry said Wednesday that the first printing of 200,000 copies showed that the company had faith in the book's future.

"That's substantial," said John Allison, a staff writer for American Bookseller magazine. "It means they really want to position it in the best seller mainstream, and they think it will fly. A hundred thousand first printing is the cutoff point if a publisher is serious about a book."

John McEnroe returns a shot to Mats Wilander during action from their quarterfinal match

Family Man Flashing Old Form

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WIMBLEDON, England — John McEnroe finished off Mats Wilander with a service winner, looked up to the stands and gave the lady with the straw hat a triumphant wave.

His wife, actress Tatum O'Neal, was off her chair in an instant, smiling and clapping wildly as her husband and father of two punched the air.

Instant rapport — and it made a point.

Just when he says he has his personal life together, McEnroe is in the semifinals at Wimbledon for the first time since 1984.

"It's a juggling act," the 30-year-old McEnroe said after beating Wilander 7-6, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4 on Wednesday. "Anyone who has kids and is married knows. Playing tennis is the easy part. I think I'm doing a better job with the juggling act at this particular time."

While McEnroe controlled his temper through most of his match, fellow American Tim Mayotte lost his.

The normally mild-mannered Mayotte exploded during the second-set tiebreaker against defending champion Stefan Edberg when a line call was overruled, giving Edberg set point.

Mayotte was so angry he slammed his racquet and bent it almost in half. A sympathetic crowd couldn't inspire the eighth seed and he lost 7-6, 7-6, 6-3.

The women's semifinals were scheduled for today with defending champion Steffi Graf against Chris Evert and eight-time champion Martina Navratilova against Catarina Lindqvist of Sweden.

While McEnroe will play Edberg in one of Friday's men's semifinals, the other features a rematch of last year's final four meeting of big-hitters, Ivan Lendl and Boris Becker.

Lendl and Becker ousted the tournament's last two unseeded men, both Americans, in the quarterfinals. The top-seeded Lendl beat an ailing Dan Goldie 7-6, 7-6, 6-0. Becker hammered outclassed Paul Chamberlin, ranked 91st in the world, 6-1, 6-2, 6-0.

"I was still looking forward and the ball was by me," Chamberlin said. "The next time I play him, I'll probably wear a cup and chest protector."

After beating four unseeded players, and dropping sets against all but one of them, McEnroe has his biggest challenge so far against Wilander, who had only lost one set.

Rocky Mount Rallies

10-8 Win Ties Up Legion Series, 1-1

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Rocky Mount came up with the key hits at the right time and rolled up a 10-8 victory over Pitt County to even their best-of-three Area One East semifinal game at one win apiece Wednesday night.

Post 58 used a three-run triple, a three-run home run and a two-run single to great advantage in the game, taking an early lead, then coming back to pull out the win after Pitt County had twice taken the lead.

"We played lousy defense," Pitt Coach Grant Jarman said. "Our concentration was zero and I don't know why. We have tried to do everything the hard way all year and we tried again tonight. We haven't played good defense since the playoffs started."

True enough. In the five playoff games, Pitt County has amassed over 20 errors, better than four a game.

"The only bright spots I can think of," Jarman said, "is the fact that Maurice (Hines) hit the ball well (three for four with a double) and John Bolen did some good things for us (two hits, one a three-run homer). And I thought (Rod) Gorham threw two good innings of relief."

Gorham, the third Pitt County pitcher on the night, did not allow a baserunner in the final two frames.

Curious Choices Top All-Star Selections

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Injured Jose Canseco, who hasn't played in a major-league game this season, wants to jump from the minor-league Huntsville Stars to the American League All-Stars.

Mike Schmidt's star flamed out earlier this season and forced him into retirement. But he was voted the National League All-Star third baseman anyway, although he won't play.

As usual, there were several oddities in the voting for next Tuesday night's All-Star Game at Anaheim, Calif., with Oakland's Canseco and Philadelphia's Schmidt leading the parade.

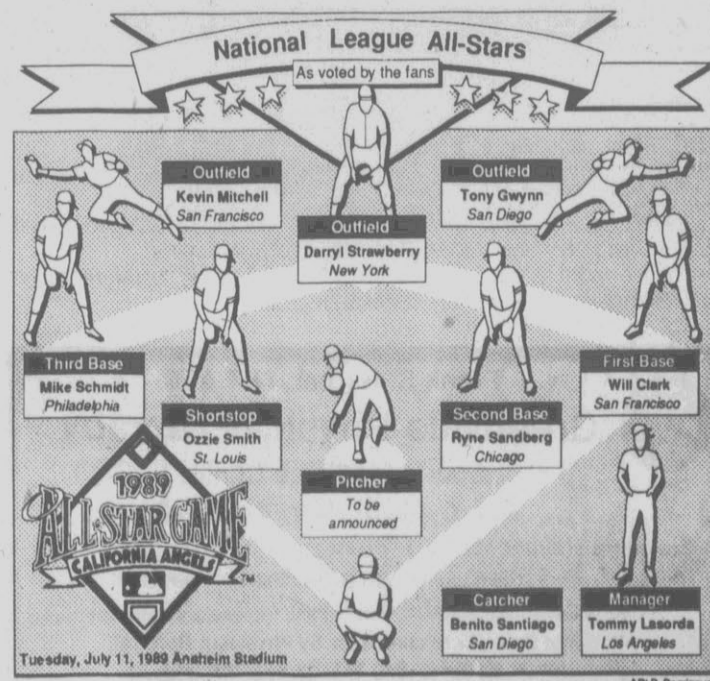

In addition, Texas' Ruben Sierra, who leads the AL with a .334 average and is tied for the RBI lead with 61, was not voted to the starting outfield — he finished sixth — while Darryl Strawberry of the New York Mets, batting just .223, was second among NL outfielders. However, Strawberry probably won't play because of a toe injury.

"I thought I'd be in a better position than sixth at the end of the voting. But I expect to be at the All-Star Game," Sierra said. "If I'm Canseco I wouldn't start the game. I would go because the fans chose me but I'd let somebody else start."

Schmidt will definitely be in Anaheim, but will only be introduced in pregame ceremonies.

"It will be my last hurrah," said Schmidt, who retired on May 29 with 548 home runs, seventh on the all-time list, plus a record 11 Gold

Wilson Evens Series With Snow Hill

WILSON — Wilson County's American Legion baseball team took an 8-5 decision over Snow Hill Wednesday night to even their best-of-three Area One East semifinal series at one game each.

The final game of the best-of-three series will be played tonight at 8 p.m. at Snow Hill.

Snow Hill took the initial lead in the game in the second inning on a solo home run by Chris West.

But in the third, Wilson rallied for three runs to move ahead for good. John Bunn led off with a single and Kevin Bowen reached when the defender fielding his grounder fell down. Kevin Satterfield's grounder forced Bunn at third and Dewey Scott singled. Bowen, however, was caught in a rundown and put out.

Wayne Sullivan was then hit by a pitch, loading the bases and a walk to Angelo Cox forced Satterfield over. Scott Davis then singled in Scott and Sullivan for a 3-1 lead.

Wilson added two in the fourth and after Snow Hill got two in the top of the fifth, Wilson pushed over what proved the difference in the bottom of the inning. With one out, Cox singled and scored on a double by Mark Watson, making it 6-3.

Wilson added two more in the sixth, while Snow Hill rallied for two in the ninth.

Scott, Cox and Bunn each had two hits for Wilson, while George Burnette, Walt McKeel, West and Ed Stanley each had two hits for Snow Hill.

The winner of tonight's game will meet the winner of the Pitt County-Rocky Mount series for the Area One East title in a best-of-five series starting Saturday.

The North State Fathers took an 18-2 victory over the Tar Heel League Dads in the annual Pops' All-Star Game.

The North State took a 5-0 lead in the first inning on the strength of homers by Mick Hickman and Mitch Jones. Jones had a three-run double in the second to lead a four-run outburst and Rick Langley hit and Pat Bizzaro each hit two-run homers and Ronald Redman hit a solo shot in the third as the North State built up a 14-0 lead. They added four more in the fifth.

The Tar Heels got both of their runs in the fourth.

Charlotte's Final 4 Decision Awaited

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A decision on whether Charlotte will be the host for the NCAA Final Four could be made on Thursday, but it might be as late as Friday before the decision is known, officials say.

The NCAA Division I men's basketball committee, which governs college basketball's three-week chase for a national championship each March, will pick sites for the 1994 and 1995 Final Four tournaments from four remaining applicants. Their decision, to be made in Travers City, Mich., will be announced from NCAA headquarters in Mission, Kan., on Thursday afternoon or Friday.

An announcement also will be made on Charlotte's bids for first- and second-round games and or regional semifinal and final games in 1992 and 1993.

Other arenas still in the running for the Final Four in 1994 or 1995 are the Meadowlands in East Rutherford, N.J., the Kingdome in Seattle and the Hoosier Dome in Indianapolis. The NCAA is expected to select one of the domed arenas for one year and one of the coliseums for the other.

Slight Muscle Tear Affecting Gooden

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Mets pitcher Dwight Gooden, who went on the disabled list last weekend, has been diagnosed with a slight muscle tear in his right shoulder and may miss 3-4 weeks, the club said Wednesday.

The diagnosis, arrived at after extensive tests that included magnetic resonance imaging, alleviated fears that Gooden's injury was more serious.

In a statement, the Mets quoted Dr. Fiske Warren, one of the club's orthopedic surgeons, as saying there was no other damage to the arm and "no career threatening problems."

Gooden, a right-hander, has experienced tightness and some pain in the shoulder for the past month, and finally was placed on the 15-day disabled list on Sunday. He had a record of 9-4 and a 2.99 ERA when he was sidelined.

The examination was done by Warren and Dr. Steve Albert. The doctors determined that "a small muscle tear in the front of the right shoulder" had caused the soreness and stiffness.

Warren said the best treatment for the injury was rest.

"The shoulder will heal without chronic problems," Warren said, "but it may take some time, perhaps 3-4 weeks."

Announcer's Action Prompts Fight

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — The trouble started in the second inning, and the first to get bounced was the public address announcer.

Before the Texas League game between Wichita and Midland ended Tuesday night, Midland's manager was ejected and six players were bounced following a bench-clearing brawl.

Announcer Barry Sykes was ejected after he had played the Linda Ronstadt tune, "When Will I Be Loved?" which contains the lyrics, "I've been cheated, been mistreated."

It was Sykes' timing rather than his tune selection that got him in trouble. He played the song after an argument over an umpire's call which went against the home team. Catcher Otto Gonzalez hauled in a foul pop close to the screen, but umpire Brian Owen ruled that Gonzalez had trapped the ball.

Midland manager Max Olivaras was thrown out for protesting the call.

In the eighth inning, relief pitcher Luis Merojo applied a hard tag on Wichita's Dave Hollins on a play at first base. Hollins fell over the bag, got up and charged Merojo. The benches emptied and the game was halted for 20 minutes.

Owen threw out three Midland players and three Wichita team members in the incident, including Merojo and Hollins.

"We have to forget about what happened to us ... and get ready to tee it up again Thursday," Midland pitching coach Gary Ruby said.

"It didn't have anything to do with the way the series has been played. This has been a very clean series. Things like that just happen."

The game ended as 9-1 victory for Wichita, and then the fans were treated to a fireworks display. For many, it was anticlimatic.

More Court Action For Rose; Baseball Reopens Investigation

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Pete Rose's lawsuit is going extra innings in federal court.

A federal judge has given lawyers for baseball Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti until July 12 to present their arguments for moving Rose's lawsuit from state to federal courts. Rose's lawyers have until July 17 to reply in their attempt to keep the lawsuit before a state judge.

An agreement reached Wednesday in connection with the legal dispute will keep Rose in a Cincinnati Reds' uniform until at least July 20 — exactly four months after baseball announced its investigation of gambling allegations against the manager.

NBC News reported today that baseball has renewed the investigation and is focusing on an alleged New York bookmaker identified only as Val in former federal prosecutor John M. Dowd's report on the Rose probe. NBC said Val is Richard Troy, under indictment since January on gambling charges. Troy was indicted along with others allegedly tied to the Bonanno crime family.

NBC said police seized Troy's phone books in a raid on a Staten Island home. It reported that law enforcement sources said one contained the entry Paul-Rose along with phone numbers for Paul Janszen, who claims he placed bets with bookies, including Val, on baseball for the Reds' manager, a charge Rose denies.

Telephone records in Dowd's 225-page report on the Rose investigation showed calls billed on Janszen's credit card to a number used by Troy in June and July of 1987.

Dowd declined comment on the report.

Neither side was surprised Wednesday at the timetable approved by U.S. District Judge John D. Holschuh, even though it means the baseball season will be well into its second half with Rose's fate unresolved.

"It is certainly Pete's and our desire that it be decided as soon as reasonably possible," Rose lawyer Reuven J. Katz said. "Although we're anxious to get this case decided, we understand (the judge's) time needs, having just been brought into it."

Holschuh got the case Monday after baseball's lawyers asked the U.S. District Court in Cincinnati to take Rose's lawsuit away from the state courts. Two federal judges in Cincinnati transferred the request to the court in Columbus to avoid appearances of impropriety, citing Rose's popularity in the Cincinnati area.

Rose's lawyers filed papers with Holschuh on Wednesday in an attempt to show the federal court has no grounds to intervene. Lawyer Robert G. Stachler also took a swipe at the commissioner's office, claiming it was trying to change courts after losing twice in the state court system.

"By taking two strikes in the state courts, baseball now tries to avert strike three by removing this proceeding to what it hopes will be a more favorable venue," Stachler said.

Federal courts in the 1970s upheld the baseball commissioner's sweeping authority under challenges from team owners Charles O. Finley and Ted Turner. However, Hamilton County Common Pleas Judge Norbert A. Nadel has shown a willingness to go into what he called "uncharted waters" in the case.

Nadel gave Rose a 14-day temporary restraining order on June 25 protecting him from suspension or firing. The order also prohibited Giamatti from holding a hearing and deciding whether Rose bet on his own team — an offense that means a lifetime ban.

Although the order will expire, lawyers for both sides agreed Wednesday that the protections for Rose will remain in effect through July 17 and another three days after Holschuh decides which court will handle the case.

"That's vital, to protect his interests while we get an impartial decision maker," Katz said.

Babe Ruth League

Peeler's 14
Pepsi-Cola 7

Peeler's, which finished second in the regular season standings, advanced to the finals of the Babe Ruth League post-season tournament with a 14-7 win over Pepsi-Cola Wednesday night.

Peeler's will meet Everette's Pest Control, a 14-8 upset winner over Wachovia Bank, on Friday at 8 p.m. at Guy Smith Stadium for the championship.

Peeler's pushed over three runs in the top of the second but Pepsi matched that in the bottom of the inning, two of them on a home run by Richard Brittle. Peeler's added three more in the third and Pepsi got one, a solo homer by Marty Whitchard.

Peeler's then pushed over two more in the fourth, taking an 8-4 lead. Parham Stanley led off with a walk and stole second. He took third on a passed ball and scored when Jimmy Rouse reached on an error. Another error later allowed Rouse to score.

Peeler's added four more in the fifth and one in the sixth while Pepsi got two in the fourth and one in the seventh.

Jeffrey Freeman and Stephen Anthony each had three hits for Peeler's while Adam Charlton, Omar Jordan and Mike Harkley each had two. Whitchard led the Pepsi hitting with three.

Everette's 14
Wachovia Bank 8

Everette's Pest Control, fourth-seeded in the final standings, knocked off regular season champion Wachovia Bank, 14-8, in the semifinals of the Babe Ruth League post-season tournament Wednesday.

Everette's will face Peeler's in the championship game Friday at 8 p.m. at Guy Smith Stadium.

Everette's jumped off to a 6-0 lead in the second inning and both teams scored twice in the third. Wachovia picked up another in the fourth and scored three in the fifth, closing to 8-6.

Everette's then pushed over four in the sixth to take the win. Kenny Coward opened with a triple and scored on a passed ball. Henry Clark walked and moved up on a wild pitch. Josh Potter walked and Matt Robertson singled, scoring Clark. J Cox singled in Potter and an error allowed Robertson to score for a 12-6 lead.

Each team scored twice more in the seventh.

Clark, James Witherspoon and Cox each had two hits for Everette's while Mark Taylor and Montez Barrett each had two for Wachovia.

students in other states "loan" equipment during the high school season, but said the practice is illegal by NCHSAA by-laws.

Rauch said he intended the measure to help parents of disadvantaged children who might not be able to bear the expense of golf or tennis.

"That argument is just full of holes," Adams said in a telephone interview from his Chapel Hill office this week. "Not one member school out of 330 has called or written me or said let's reconsider this rule or said it's a bad rule. We've had the rule for 20 years.

"They'd be hard-pressed to name one kid in this state that has not been eligible to participate in golf or tennis," Adams said.

Adams said he also was angered when he returned from a national convention on Monday to find the proposal on his desk.

Blundering Reds Fall To Phils

San Francisco Beats Pittsburgh, 6-4, As Mitchell Hits His 28th Homer Of Season

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Paul O'Neill was embarrassed. And he didn't even lose the game. Catcher Jeff Reed did that.

"I might have a tough time keeping a straight face," Phillies manager Nick Leyva said Wednesday night after Philadelphia beat Cincinnati 3-2 in 10 innings. "That's a first."

Steve Jeltz opened the 10th with a single to shortstop off John Franco, 2-2. Jeltz stole second as Bob Dernier struck out and headed to third as Len Dykstra singled to right.

O'Neill, playing in right, twice bobbled Dykstra's hit and then, thinking Jeltz had already scored, kicked the ball toward first.

"I got to the ball as fast as I could," O'Neill said. "I don't know what happened. Too much in a hurry I guess. But it won't happen again. Just no reason for it. I can't explain what happened."

Jeltz, who didn't see O'Neill's performance in right, remained at third. Dykstra went to second on the play and Tom Herr was intentionally walked to load the bases. Reed then failed to handle Franco's 1-0 pitch to Von Hayes, and Jeltz scored on the passed ball.

Roger McDowell, 2-5, pitched a two-hit 10th for the victory. The Reds have lost six of their last eight and 17 of their last 26.

Giants 6, Pirates 4

Trevor Wilson, 1-1, allowed two hits and one run in seven innings for his first major-league victory and also singled home a run at Three Rivers Stadium.

Kevin Mitchell hit his major league-leading 28th homer and his sixth in seven games against Pittsburgh, which lost for the third time in 11 games. Bob Walk, 7-5, gave up 11 hits and five runs in 5 1/3 innings.

Cardinals 3, Dodgers 2

Jose Oquendo tripled off John Wetteland, 2-1, and scored on John Morris' double off former teammate Rick Horton to snap a 2-2 tie in the seventh.

John Costello, 1-1, pitched an inning in relief for the victory over the visiting Dodgers and Todd Worrell got two outs for his 11th save in 13 opportunities.

Expos 7, Braves 5

Dennis Martinez won his eighth consecutive decision and Hubie Brooks' sacrifice fly broke a 5-5 tie in the sixth after visiting Montreal rallied from a 4-0 deficit.

Martinez, 9-1, allowed nine hits in five innings, struck out three and walked two. Mark Eichhorn, 1-2, came in to start the sixth with a 5-3 lead and gave up Mike Aldrete's two-run double and Brooks' fly.

Cubs 5, Padres 3

Mark Grace hit a two-run homer off Dennis Rasmussen, 3-6, and doubled three times as Chicago beat San Diego for the sixth time in seven games.

Grace drove in three runs and hit his first home run since April 29, the Cubs' second homer in 120 innings.

Scott Sanderson, 8-6, allowed eight hits and three runs in five innings. Paul Kilgus finished with two-hit relief for his second save.

Astros 6, Mets 5

Danny Darwin improved his record to 8-2 and hit a sacrifice fly, and Billy Hatcher got three hits in the Astrodome. Dave Smith, the fifth Astros pitcher, pitched the ninth for his 17th save in 18 opportunities.

All-Star Picks ...

Gloves and a record-tying three Most Valuable Player awards. "I'll tip my hat to the crowd and get goosebumps one more time. I think that's something I'll always remember and always be proud of."

Schmidt, the first retired player elected an all-star starter, will wear a Phillies uniform and sit in the NL dugout during the game. He won the closest race at any position, edging Cincinnati's Chris Sabo by 16,136 votes.

"It probably was a lot of kids punching my name on the ballot because I'm synonymous with third base," said Schmidt, who was hitting .203 with six homers and 28 RBIs when he retired. "Maybe it will start a new craze — guys will start to retire before the All-Star game."

NL president Bill White and All-Star manager Tom Lasorda of Los Angeles will pick a replacement for Schmidt, an 11-time All-Star. Sabo is on the disabled list and cannot play. Pittsburgh's Bobby Bonilla and Howard Johnson of the New York Mets finished third and fourth in the voting, separated by only 2,244 votes.

Canseco, last year's AL MVP when he became the first player in major-league history to hit 40 home runs and steal 40 bases in the same season, has been out since spring training with a fractured bone in his left wrist, which required surgery. He has been with Huntsville of the Class AA Southern League on a rehabilitation assignment and has five hits in 22 at-bats.

He did not play for Huntsville on Wednesday night but plans to make his 1989 major-league debut on Sunday, Oakland's final game before the break.

"The fans are, and have been, extremely supportive of me," Canseco said. "They are the ones who vote for who they want to see in the game, their favorites, and obviously I'm one of their favorites."

First baseman Will Clark of San Francisco led all vote-getters with 1,833,329 and will make his second All-Star start. Outfielder Bo Jackson of Kansas City got the most votes in the AL with 1,748,696 and will make his first appearance.

Only one race was decided in the final week. Texas second baseman Julio Franco, who is tied with Sierra at 61 RBIs, overcame a 7,000-vote margin and beat out Steve Sax of the New York Yankees by 27,000.

San Francisco's Kevin Mitchell, leading the majors with 28 homers and 76 RBIs, led NL outfielders. Ozzie Smith of St. Louis will start for the seventh straight year as the NL's shortstop. He outdistanced Cincinnati's Barry Larkin, the majors' second-leading hitter at .351, by more than 950,000 votes. Baltimore's Cal Ripken will start for the fifth time as the AL's shortstop.

Oakland was the only team with three starters. Joining Canseco will be catcher Terry Steinbach, who drove in both runs in last year's 2-1 AL victory, and first baseman Mark McGwire.

McGwire reached 100 career home runs Wednesday night when he hit a three-run shot off Kansas City's Charlie Leibrandt in his 1,400th at-bat. Only Hall of Famer Ralph Kiner got to 100 faster, in 1,351 at-bats.

Also elected for the AL were Boston's Wade Boggs at third base and Minnesota's Kirby Puckett in the outfield. For the NL, Benito Santiago of San Diego is the catcher, Ryne Sandberg of the Chicago Cubs at second base and Tony Gwynn of San Diego in the outfield. Gwynn leads the majors with a .355 batting average.

Schmidt, who was an All-Star starter seven times, expressed no regrets about not being allowed to play.

"There is nothing to gain," he said. "If I strike out, I'd have to live with that the rest of my life. If I got a hit, I'd be second-guessed. They'd say that I could still do it, should not have retired. I made the right decision. I don't belong on the field."

Sandberg disagreed with Schmidt's decision.

"As for Mike Schmidt being named, I think it's great," Sandberg said. "He deserves it. He's been a great player, and the fans respect that. So what if he retired earlier this year? If I was a fan and I could vote, I'd have given him my vote."

Canseco's desire to play has Oakland officials worried.

Orioles Continue To Fly High

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Baltimore Orioles are halfway home and want to speed up the schedule. The Oakland Athletics, meanwhile, want to stop playing more than nine innings.

The Orioles continued their amazing turnaround by beating Toronto 5-4 Wednesday night, giving them a 23-game improvement over last season at the midway mark.

Baltimore is 47-34 and holds a 6 1/2-game edge in the American League East, the largest lead in the majors. Last year, the Orioles were 24-57 and 26 games behind as the All-Star Game approached and wound up with the worst record in baseball.

Royals 12, Athletics 9

Bo Jackson got three hits, stole three bases and scored the tiebreaking run in the 11th inning on Frank White's single. In the ninth, Jackson singled, stole second and came home on Pat Tabler's single for a tie at 9.

Kansas City leads the majors in extra-inning games, 13, and has a 9-4 record. The Royals, who had 18 hits, have gotten 22 runs on 30 hits in two nights against Oakland, the most in consecutive games versus the Athletics this season.

Angels 2, Rangers 1

Dick Schofield tripled home the tying run and scored on Johnny Ray's sacrifice fly in the eighth inning as California rallied past visiting Texas.

Mariners 7, Twins 3

Ken Griffey Jr. hit two solo home runs and Gene Harris got his first American League victory as the rookies sent Seattle over visiting Minnesota.

Griffey leads all rookies with 13 homers after his second two-homer game. Harris, 1-1, gave up one run on four hits in six innings and Mike Schooler got his 19th save.

Indians 4, White Sox 2

Greg Swindell won 11th game and Cleveland completed a three-game sweep of visiting Chicago.

Swindell, 11-2, trails only 13-game winner Dave Stewart in AL victories. Swindell lowered his earned-run average to 2.75 and Doug Jones got his 21st save.

Yankees 9, Tigers 0

Andy Hawkins pitched a five-hitter and New York shut out Detroit for the second straight day.

Hawkins, 10-8, got his first AL shutout and won for the fifth time in six decisions. Brad Havens, starting in place of flu-ridden David Palmer, fell to 1-2.

Pitt Falls To Rocky Mount, 10-8, ...

Starter Jamie Brewington, who worked six innings, got the loss, while Hal Conger worked one inning, giving up the final two runs.

Across the way, Rocky Mount coach Jerry Carter was very pleased with the job done by his pitchers, starter Scott Lewis and reliever Ralph Mihlfeld. Mihlfeld came on the final two innings and got the save. Lewis, after a shaky start — allowing four first inning runs — settled down and allowed only one until he tired and allowed Bolen's three-run homer in the seventh.

"We got off to a fast start," Carter said, "and we got some key hits, (Eric) Gazaway's triple in the first, (Duane) Thomas' homer in the fourth and (Ricky) Taylor's two-run single in the seventh that really won it for us. We got the hits when we needed them and with our backs to the wall. We had to play well tonight or it would have been all over."

"Greenville kept coming back on us, but we finally managed to hold them off," he added.

Rocky Mount set the tone for the night in the top of the first, scoring three runs. Taylor opened by reaching on an error and Jon Carter singled. Both were sacrificed up and Thomas walked to load them up. With two away, Gazaway delivered a triple to right center, driving in all three baserunners.

But Pitt recovered quickly and scored four times in the bottom of the frame for a 4-3 lead. David Leisten led off with a bunt single and Chris Christopher walked, as did Hines, loading the bases. Brewington beat out a slow roller down the third base line, driving in Leisten and Bolen followed with a sharp hit to right, scoring Christopher. With one out, Ty Little hit one up the middle to drive in both Hines and Brewington and put Pitt County ahead.

Rocky Mount tied it up in the top of the third. Jimmy Adams walked and Thomas singled. Gazaway's grounder was errored, which allowed Adams to come all the way from second with the tying run.

Again Pitt answered, regaining the lead in the bottom of the inning. Heath Clark reached on an error. He stole second and raced on to third when the ball was overthrown at second. The ball also got through the center fielder, and Clark trotted on home for a 5-4 lead.

Then, in the fourth, Rocky Mount struck for the lead, moving out to an 8-5 edge. Terrell Westry reached on a high-hopping infield ball and he was sacrificed to second. Taylor singled and Carter's grounder forced Taylor but allowed Westry to score. After Adams walked, Thomas unloaded to left center, driving the ball out of the park.

Rocky Mount added the final two — the winning runs — in the seventh. With two away, Ernie Jones singled and Westry walked. A walk to Lewis loaded the bases and Taylor delivered a single to left, driving in Jones and Westry, upping the lead to 10-5.

The series will now return to Rocky Mount at 8 p.m. tonight for the final game. The winner will move on to face the winner of the Snow Hill-Wilson County series, also to be decided tonight, in the Area One East finals. That series, a best-of-five event, is scheduled to begin on Saturday night.

Wimbledon Field Narrowing ...

McEnroe, who warned for wasting time in his previous match against John Fitzgerald, at times barked at umpire Richard Kaufmann but was generally well-behaved.

Lendl served 21 aces against Goldie and the American was further hindered by a hamstring injury that started to impede him at the end of the first set.

McEnroe, a three-time Wimbledon champion, skipped the tournament in 1986 and 1987 and was bumped out in the second round last year.

China Expresses Outrage Over U.S. Sanctions

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — The conservative mayor of Beijing today condemned recent activism by China's usually silent intellectuals and hinted at the beginning of a far-reaching purge of the educated elite.

Mayor Chen Xitong also leveled more accusations at ousted Communist Party chief Zhao Ziyang, charging that Zhao "connived" to promote the political turmoil that climaxed with the massacre at Tiananmen Square last month.

Also today, the Communist Party newspaper People's Daily expressed outrage at recent moves to impose additional sanctions on China by members of the U.S. Congress who "sanctimoniously claim to be the guardians of human rights."

Mayor Chen made his comments in a speech to the National People's Congress, China's legislature, to be delivered Friday. The official Xinhua News Agency released the text of the speech today.

Chen said that in September, certain Hong Kong newspapers and journals began boosting Zhao and debunking Deng.

"The essence of the dialogue was to whip up public opinion for covering up Zhao Ziyang's mistakes, keeping his position and power and pushing on bourgeois liberalization even more unbridledly," Chen said.

He attacked a series of forums, speeches and open letters organized since December by intellectuals including dissident Fang Lizhi, who took refuge at the U.S. Embassy in Beijing after the military crackdown, and magazine editor Ge Yang and ideologist Su Shaozhi, who gathered to discuss political questions.

Some of the intellectuals Chen named are known to have escaped

China or gone underground in the last month, while others have been arrested. By naming individual intellectuals and describing their activities in detail, Chen's speech appeared to signal a widening purge of intellectuals.

"Zhao all along tolerated and connived at the increasingly evident signs of turmoil...thus facilitating the formation and development of the turmoil," Chen said.

He said that other party leaders had urged that Zhao call a meeting April 23 of the party's top body, the Standing Committee of the Politburo, but that "instead of accepting this suggestion, Zhao went golfing, as if nothing had happened."

"Because he took such an attitude, the party and the government lost a chance to stop the turmoil."

Zhao was sacked after being accused of trying to split the party and supporting the student-led demonstrators.

He has been stripped of his party and government posts, but Chen's occasional reference to him as "comrade" and similar references in the official press indicate he retains his party membership.

Chen also repeated government charges of foreign influence in the demonstrations, saying: "Political forces outside the Chinese mainland and in foreign countries had a hand in the turmoil from the very beginning."

China's Foreign Ministry today rejected a U.S. Embassy protest over an army attack last month on diplomatic housing. Xinhua said the ministry called "groundless" the embassy's charge that the attack was premeditated and targeted certain apartments, including those of American diplomats.

The Chinese government also expressed indignation at recent moves to impose sanctions against Beijing by members of the U.S. Congress.

The House of Representatives voted June 29 to suspend trade and development programs, prohibit sale of police equipment and suspend transfers of nuclear technology. The Senate has yet to act on the bill.

"To those people in the American Congress who deliberately distort the fact and interfere with China's internal affairs, we cannot but express our indignation," said the People's Daily.

Troops armed with semi-automatic rifles and backed by tanks fought their way to Tiananmen Square June 3-4, leaving nearly 300 dead according to Chinese government estimates. Western and private Chinese estimates say as many as 3,000 people died.

"Any sovereign country would use the same legal and reasonable methods when faced with a situation of this magnitude," the People's Daily said.

The Liberation Daily, Shanghai's Communist Party newspaper, said the United States also has used force against student protesters, noting that the National Guard shot to death four anti-Vietnam War protesters at Kent State University in 1970.

Chinese media have concentrated on attacking the United States, although other Western governments have voiced strong criticism of China's military action and imposed sanctions as well.

Beijing especially has singled out the U.S. government-run Voice of America radio network, which has an estimated audience in China of tens of millions. The government last month expelled a VOA correspondent, accusing him of making false reports and violating martial law.

Guards Stand By As Man Scales Wall

BERLIN (AP) — Communist border guards ordered a 24-year-old East German man to halt as he scaled the Berlin Wall, but did not fire on him when he defied them and went on to reach the West, West Berlin police said.

The escape Wednesday came just one day after Chancellor Helmut Kohl's chief of staff said East German officials had told him border guards had been ordered not to use deadly force.

Rudolf Seiters said East German leader Erich Honecker informed him of the policy during his visit to East Berlin on Tuesday. He said Honecker assured him that deadly force would only be used in cases of "self-defense or desertion."

The last shooting incident occurred on April 8, when communist border guards opened fire on two men attempting to scale the Berlin Wall. Eyewitnesses said the men were led away, apparently uninjured.

In a March 10 escape attempt, shots fired by Communist border guards hit and seriously wounded one of three men attempting to flee.

On Feb. 6, a 22-year-old East German was killed when he tried to scale the Wall with a ladder.

According to the West Berlin-based Working Group August 13, a private organization that monitors events in East Germany, at least 191 people have been killed trying to escape from East Germany since 1961.

The group is named after the date the Berlin Wall was erected.

Longtime Hungarian Leader Dies

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BUDAPEST, Hungary — Longtime leader Janos Kadar, who came to power after the Soviets crushed the 1956 revolt and steered Hungary through relative prosperity until hard times and liberals forced him out, died today at age 77.

The Communist who led Hungary for 32 years until last year — ultimately coming to symbolize resistance to democratic change — died this morning after "a prolonged, grave illness," the state-run MTI news agency said.

The agency said the ruling Communist Party had "with profound sorrow" informed its members and the Hungarian people of "comrade" Kadar's death.

MTI said funeral arrangements would be announced later. It was considered unlikely he would be buried before President Bush's visit next week.

Kadar was hospitalized Monday with pneumonia and severe breathing and circulatory problems.

He was first reported gravely ill in April and in May lost his post as honorary party chairman as well as a seat on the party's Central Committee, which wrote him a letter criticizing mistakes during his lengthy rule.

Since he was replaced by Karoly Grosz in May 1988 as party general secretary, Kadar's political legacy has come under fierce attack and the Communists have moved rapidly to embrace democratic change, promising contested elections and a multiparty system.

After guiding Hungary in the 1970's to relative prosperity and freedom dubbed "goulash Communism" in the West, Kadar came to be seen as an impediment to further reform in the 1980's.

He will perhaps be most remembered for his 1962 statement to a rally in the industrial town of Csepel: "Those who are not against us are with us."

By the mid-1980's, Hungary's economy was in a tailspin and the Soviet Union was undergoing a political rebirth under Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Kadar fell out of favor in ruling circles.

He died as the Supreme Court met for the expected legal rehabilitation of Imre Nagy, the leader of the 1956 popular uprising who was executed under Kadar after being convicted of treason and buried in an unmarked grave.

Nagy was reburied with honors last month.

Kadar's change in fortunes was typical of a long career that began in 1931 when he joined the illegal Communist Party as a 19-year-old from a peasant background, with only eight years of schooling.

Kadar was jailed and seemingly forgotten after a party purge in 1951, but was rehabilitated after the downfall of his Stalinist rival, Matyas Rakosi.

While in power, Kadar was conciliatory and ruthless by turns.

U.S., Britain Sign Customs Accord

WASHINGTON — U.S. Customs Commissioner William von Raab signed an agreement with Britain today to simplify procedures for exchanging information on drug trafficking, commercial fraud and other customs matters.

A Customs spokesman said the Mutual Assistance Agreement "for the first time, provides a legal basis for intergovernmental cooperation" that has been going on informally for years.

The new agreement was signed by von Raab and J.B. Unwin, chairman of Britain's Board of Customs and Excise.

Customs spokesman Dennis Shimkowski said similar agreements are being negotiated between the United States and other countries that are frequent trade partners.

Narcotics smuggling is a prime target of the agreement, which will allow the quick exchange of drug trafficking intelligence between the two governments. There also is a provision that calls for cooperation in the surveillance of suspected persons or goods.

Other provisions provide for investigative and inspection assistance when requested and the mutual use of witnesses and documents in civil or criminal proceedings. Both nations are allowed to withhold assistance for reasons of national interest.

Shimkoski said Britain and the United States have been cooperating informally for years, but there were delays in sharing intelligence because the information was sent through diplomatic channels.

"It took forever to get things done," said Shimkoski.

The United States already has similar customs agreements with 10 countries. They are West Germany, Austria, Mexico, Canada, Italy, South Korea, Cyprus, Sweden, Finland and Norway.

Youngster Survives Siberian Ice Storm

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

BRATSK, U.S.S.R. — A weary, homesick 11-year-old attempting to become the youngest person to fly around the world successfully guided his single-engine plane through a fierce Siberian ice storm that twice nearly forced him to make an emergency landing before arriving in this Central Asian trading center Wednesday.

Showing signs of mounting fatigue and trying to recover from a case of food poisoning, Tony Aliengena expressed little interest in touring this city and surrounding countryside after a harrowing 635-mile flight from Kemerovo.

"I just want to go home," said Aliengena, who is more than half way into his bid to become the youngest person to fly around the world on a trip dubbed the "Friendship Flight."

Even another hero's welcome, replete with flower-carrying schoolchildren and nagging dignitaries, seemed to have little impact on Aliengena as he and his immediate family, which is accompanying the young pilot on his unprecedented journey, set down in this Siberian town, about 250 north of the Mongolian border.

A surprise ice storm on two occasions nearly forced him to land before reaching Bratsk on the flight from Kemerovo. After 3,200 miles of relatively calm flying weather crossing the Soviet Union from Moscow, Aliengena and two other light planes accompanying the San Juan Capistrano, Calif., youth flew straight into an ice storm.

The bad weather caught the encouragement by surprise. Soviet forecasters had predicted the storm front would move well to the south of Aliengena by the time he took to the air Wednesday. But the front stalled, and the trio of planes was caught in the midst of the storm. Up to an inch of ice formed on the wings of the single-engine Cessna Centurion Turbo 210 that Aliengena was flying under the supervision of his father.

Sizing up his dilemma, Aliengena at one point messaged: "We have heavy ice and we're being bounced around crazy."

On the advice of Soviet air traffic controllers, Aliengena, who had been trying to fly above the storm, flew to a lower altitude hoping the ice on the plane's wings would melt, improving its handling. It worked, though Aliengena's father admitted it was a much rougher ride at a lower altitude.

"That was the worst ice of the whole trip," Aliengena's father, Gary, said once the group reached Bratsk.

Once in Bratsk, Aliengena and his family planned to spend a full day resting before returning to the air Friday for a 630-mile flight north to the Soviet city of Mirnyi. The group is scheduled to spend one more week in the Soviet Union before crossing the Bering Sea and reaching Anchorage, Alaska, on July 15.

Bus Crash Kills 11 People In Israel

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ABU GHOSH, Israel — A Palestinian shouting "Allahu Akbar" grabbed the steering wheel of a crowded bus today, forcing it off the road into a deep ravine, police said. Eleven people were reported killed and 23 injured.

Police Commissioner David Kraus said the bus caught fire and that other victims were believed trapped inside. The gutted bus lay on its roof about 180 feet down a slope from the Tel Aviv-Jerusalem highway.

"He (the Arab) yelled something and grabbed the wheel. The bus tumbled into ravine, flipped over and caught fire," Police Minister Chaim Bar-Lev told reporters at the scene.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said on the radio: "This is a shocking disaster, the fruit of a disgusting mind, hate-filled. We have reached the height of madness, a product of flowing hatred (engendered) by endless incitement."

"It doesn't matter much if this is a result of an organized plan or a result of the atmosphere some groups create," he said. "I think we will find a way to take care of incidents like this."

Witnesses said the red-and-white bus of the state Egged company, which seats about 50 people, was full.

The number of passengers could be higher, however, since people often stand on the 45-minute ride between Tel Aviv and Jerusalem. The crash occurred at 11:40 a.m. as the bus was about 15 minutes from Jerusalem.

Kraus said the Arab who grabbed the wheel shouted "Allahu Akbar!" which means "God is great!" and has become a battle cry of the nearly 19-month-old Palestinian uprising in which more than 540 Palestinians and 23 Israelis have been killed.

A witness identified only as Reuven said on Israel radio that he pulled the driver from the bus and the driver said: "How did he do this to me?"

An Arab passenger who was slightly injured was arrested and taken for questioning in Jerusalem, Kraus told reporters at the scene. Police said he was from the occupied territories but did not identify him further.

It was the worst such incident since March 11, 1978, when Palestinian guerrillas from the PLO's Fatah faction infiltrated Israel from the sea and hijacked a bus on the coastal highway. Thirty-three people were killed and 82 wounded.

Today's bus crash came five weeks after a lone Arab wielding a knife fatally stabbed two elderly Jews and injured three in downtown Jerusalem.

The murderer, Nidal Zalour, 22, of the West Bank town of Ramallah, was sentenced in June to life in prison for the attack. He had shouted "Allahu Akbar!" when he attacked his victims, witnesses said.

Witnesses to today's crash said they rushed to help the victims.

"I ran across the road and saw bodies strewn all down the ravine," said Yitzhak Cohen, 44, a businessman who was driving past when the crash occurred.

He said he heard a young female soldier in the bus screaming, "Save me, save me!" He said he helped her crawl out of the bus through a window.

The bus crashed through a steel barrier on a straight section of the four-lane highway near the Israeli Arab village of Abu Ghosh.

Reputed Drug Trafficker Arraigned In Prison

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — A reputed Colombian drug cartel leader accused of trafficking tons of cocaine into the United States was arraigned in prison for fear fellow smugglers would try to free him, authorities said. Luis Santacruz Echeverri, 35, is accused of heading U.S. drug operations for the Cali cartel, a Colombian drug gang that rivals the older Medellin cartel.

Santacruz, who is being held without bond, pleaded innocent Wednesday in an office at the Metropolitan Correctional Center south of Miami before U.S. Magistrate Samuel Smargon.

It was the first time such a hearing has been held in a prison in the south Florida federal district, authorities said. No trial date was set.

"He is so important from our information that we believe the cartel will make efforts to free him, even though we have no overt indications of any threat," Chief Deputy U.S. Marshal James Tasso said.

An indictment accuses him of involvement in a 2½-ton cocaine shipment seized in Chicago in July 1987, the largest such confiscation at that time; in all, he is accused of trafficking about 10 tons into the United States.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Toby Vick said the role of Santacruz in the Cali cartel was more important than that of Carlos Lehder Rivas' in the rival Medellin cartel. Lehder was convicted in Jacksonville last year of drug smuggling and is serving a life sentence.

Vick also said after the arraignment that authorities "believe there is a lot more cocaine involved than what he's charged with."

Santacruz is a half-brother of Jose Santacruz Londono, a wealthy Cali businessman who the Drug Enforcement Administration says is co-leader of the drug cartel and the target of indictments in Orlando and New York.

Santacruz is believed to be third in command of the Cali cartel, following his half-brother and Gilberto Rodriguez, Tasso said.

Santacruz is a master of disguise, said Tom Cash, head of the DEA in Miami. Cash said Santacruz visited Miami often, traveling on phony passports and changing his looks with each trip.

"He grows a beard. He shaves it off. He dyes his hair. He puts on glasses. He's like one of the Marx brothers, merrily changing his repertoire while he bounces around the city of Miami organizing these shipments," Cash said.

Agents spotted Santacruz on June 8 in a south Miami neighborhood and arrested him.

"It was like spotting John Dillinger as he walked out of a movie theater," Cash said.

Santacruz was charged June 14 with 14 drug-related counts.

The Cali and Medellin cartels probably account for up to 85 percent of U.S. cocaine imports, said DEA spokesman John Fernandes.

The cartels have cooperated in the past, but by some reports have been at war since 1988.

Money-Lauderer Pleads Guilty

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TAMPA, Fla. — The alleged head of a money-laundering ring has pleaded guilty in a secret agreement with prosecutors. It was the first guilty plea from an undercover operation that handled $32 million in drug profits.

Roberto Baez-Alcaino, 51, was among 85 people and banking institutions indicted as a result of the Customs Service's Operation C Chase, named for the C in C-note, or $100 bill.

Over a two-year period, federal agents infiltrated powerful Colombian money-laundering syndicates and helped launder money intended mainly for Colombian drug traffickers, including the Medellin cartel.

Baez-Alcaino, his wife and two associates pleaded guilty in closed hearings Wednesday, but the charges involved and the deal struck with prosecutors were kept secret.

Prosecutors and defense attorneys urged the judge in private to let agreement remain secret. In open court, they said only that they were "concerned" about unspecified "sensitive related matters."

U.S. District Judge Elizabeth A. Kovachevich granted the request over objections of an attorney for The Tampa Tribune, but she did direct prosecutors and defense attorneys to review and edit the plea agreements so at least some information could be made public.

The government has yet to comply. U.S. Attorney Robert Genzman said his office wouldn't comment. Baez-Alcaino's attorney was on a flight back to Los Angeles when the judge ordered the attorneys to agree on an edited plea bargain.

Gregg Thomas, the Tribune's attorney, said the newspaper would appeal the decision.

Cinematic Chameleon Has English Role In Miniseries

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — John Rhys-Davies, one of the most successful of all cinematic chameleons, plays a rare English role in a new miniseries based on Charles Dickens' "Great Expectations."

Rhys-Davies is Joe Gargery, the gentle giant of a blacksmith in this Victorian tale of the creation and destruction of a snob. The six-hour miniseries, which follows young Pip's sudden fortune and his effort to become a gentleman, will be seen this Sunday, Monday and Tuesday on the Disney Channel.

The English-born actor is virtually a multinational cast all by himself. He is perhaps best known as Sala, the Arabic friend of archaeologist Indiana Jones in the movie series that began with "Raiders of the Lost Ark" and is currently on the screens with "Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade."

The nationalities of other characters Rhys-Davies has played include Indian ("Kim"), Portuguese ("Shogun"), Russian ("The Living Daylights") and Irish ("The Little Match Girl"). In NBC's upcoming "Desperado" movie, he's English again.

Rhys-Davies, like another English actor, Peter Ustinov, is quite good with accents and has the sort of face that takes on the look of whatever national accent he is using.

"Sala is an Arab and I give him an English accent with a touch of his native Egypt," he said. "Steven Spielberg (the director) says he listens to Gilbert and Sullivan. He's more British than the British."

Rhys-Davies said he sees Joe Gargery as "a holy fool who is not wholly foolish."

The miniseries also stars Anthony Hopkins as Magwitch, Jean Simmons as Miss Havisham, and Anthony Calf as Pip. It was filmed on location in England in the sites where Dickens set the story.

"It's a thankless task to play Pip because there are many times when we don't like him," he said. "He behaves badly. Of course, we in the audience never show any snobishness and we never make judgments based on appearances. The growth of Pip is a painful process in which he ends up sadder but wiser."

"Everybody in the piece has an ax to grind, with the possible exception of Joe Gargery. He's the character that Dickens fell in love with. Which gave him a problem because Dickens wrote it in weekly installments as a serial. He began by making Gargery a figure of fun and saddling him with a nagging wife."

As the story progressed, Dickens changed Gargery and eventually killed off his wife and had him remarry Biddy.

Rhys-Davies has a home in Los Angeles, but between work he retreats to the Isle of Man in the Irish Sea. He has a 16th-century house named Ballateare where he can see Ireland and Scotland from his bedroom window. The stone house is on the edge of a crumbling cliff and he hopes to postpone its inevitable destruction by about 60 years.

"I bought it because I wanted to write a film about a man who buys a house and tries to stop the sea from taking it," he said. "It's a metaphor for coming to terms with time and growing older. It should be rather sad and rather funny."

He said he finds the island home an idyllic place to rest and to write. "I started out wanting to be a playwright," he said. "I've written a few films."

He has two sons, Ben, who attends the University of California at Berkeley, and Thomas, who is in school in England.

Although he does a lot of television he has yet to do a series. "If the writing was good I'd do it," he said. "I'm not proud and I like working. I'd just want time off each year to do a film of my own. We're now in the early talk stage of doing a pilot."

Asked if there will be another Indiana Jones movie, he smiled.

"It's hard to turn down those numbers," he said. "Harrison Ford says he's getting too old for that sort of thing. They're very demanding physically. But Harrison is rather fond of the character and with the right story and the right director he might do one more. Steven Spielberg has said he will not direct another one."

Spike Lee Challenges Movie Industry As Filmmaking Maverick, And Wins

By Bob Thomas
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Filmmaker Spike Lee is looking for the day when he no longer has to sell himself to the movie industry like some new kid on the block.

"Each time out is another struggle, another battle, another war," he said. "I don't think it should be like that, but each time I have to prove myself again."

So far, Lee is winning the war. His second movie, "She's Got a Way," won him the Cannes Film Festival prize for best new director. His third, "School Daze," was Columbia Pictures' biggest moneymaker of 1988, grossing $14.5 million.

Lee's first film was "Joe's Bed-Stuy Barbershop: We Cut Heads" in 1982. It was his thesis work at New York University Film School, and won the student Academy Award from the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

The latest movie from Lee's 40 Acres and a Mule Filmworks is "Do the Right Thing," which goes into release June 30 with rave reviews and a warm reception at Cannes where it lost the festival prize to the American film "Sex, Lies and Videotape."

"Even though we were robbed and didn't win any awards, we had a great time," Lee said. "It was a positive experience. "It was a test of the power of the film that the French audience would get it through subtitles. Some of the slang couldn't be translated. But the overall message about racism and how we've got to live together hit home."

"Racism is not just an American thing. It's all over the world."

"Do the Right Thing" takes place during a sweltering summer in and around Sal's Famous Pizza, run by an Italian (Danny Aiello) in a lower-middle-class neighborhood in the predominantly black Bedford-Stuyvesant section of Brooklyn. Tensions of family, race, friendship and love run high.

Tensions between Sal's hothead and racist son, Vito, and an angry black, Radio Raheem, lead to the Raheem's murder by police and the destruction of the pizza parlor.

The theme of the movie's title comes from a speech made by the late black activist Malcolm X in December 1964: "Racism is a human problem and a crime that is absolutely so ghastly that a person who is fighting racism is well within his rights to fight against it by any means necessary until it is eliminated."

The 32-year-old Lee has been touching nerves ever since his first major film, "She's Got a Way It," which chronicled the life and times of a sexually independent and liberated young woman. It made a lot of men — and some women — mad.

"That was the hardest film I've done," says Lee, who wrote, directed and co-starred in the off-beat movie as a manic, bike-riding suitor. "It cost $175,000, and it almost killed us to get it." Besides the Cannes festival prize, the film also earned Lee the Los Angeles Film Critics' new generation award.

Using his student Oscar as a credential, Lee had tried to make a movie about bicycle messengers but ran into the barriers of financing and distribution. But Lee had a vision and the tenacity to follow it.

"I knew that Steven Spielberg wasn't calling me, George Lucas wasn't calling my house, or any of the studios," he said. "If I was to become a filmmaker, I would have to do it myself. Once I showed my talent, it'd be out there. The first step I had to take myself."

"She's Got a Way It" grossed $8 million for Island Pictures, impressing David Putnam, then head of Columbia Pictures. He commissioned "School Daze," a musical satire of fraternity life at a black campus.

"That was an easy sell," Lee said. But the $6.5 million movie got caught in the crossfire of corporate politics. Putnam was ousted as Columbia's boss and new leadership gave the movie little promotion.

"To be honest, I really carried that film on my back. I was doing Michael Jordan work," Lee said, referring to the star player of the Chicago Bulls.

With a chilly reception from Columbia, he took his third film to Paramount Pictures. The relationship was pleasant until the studio wanted "a more Walt Disneyesque type of 'We Are the World' ending," Lee said. "I would rather had shot my own self first."

Universal gave him a go-ahead.

Born in Atlanta, Lee was raised in Brooklyn by a jazz musician father (bassist Bill Lee writes his son's film scores) and a mother who taught art. He attended Morehouse College as an undergraduate, and then went to NYU.

Lee is confident that "Do the Right Thing" will repeat his previous successes: "With the movies that are coming out this summer, I think there is definite space for our film. People are going to see 'Ghostbusters,' they've already seen 'Indiana' and they're looking forward, myself included, to 'Batman.' We have the most important, the most widely discussed and hotly debated film."

Like most lovers of the cinema, he's critical of the quality of Hollywood movies.

"It's the same old, tired, Hollywood formulaic school of filmmaking," he said. "They have no respect for the audience's intelligence. In the first 10 minutes you can always tell where the film is going, every step of the way. I just don't understand it."

"In my film, there are no heroes. We don't put any white hats or black hats on anybody. We're always two steps ahead of the audience, so they can't anticipate what's going to happen."

Lee's movies have centered on aspects of black culture, but he sees himself making many kinds of films. "The first two were predominately black films because that's where they took place. 'Do the Right Thing' is about racism and New York City. Because of the many ethnic groups that live there, it could not be only a black cast."

Lee has appeared in his three theatrical films, but not necessarily because of his own choosing.

"I really do not enjoy acting," he said. "I do not consider myself an actor. By being in my films, it makes it easier to get them made. When I negotiate with a studio, there are three things they ask: 'What's it about?' 'What does it cost?' and, 'Spike, are you in it?'"

"If I'm not in it, I would not be able to play hard in the game of negotiation."

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY July 7

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Develop more enduring relationships—let romance flow. Enjoy the early evening with siblings and then find stimulating adult fun.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Stimulate relationships by stepping out on the town more. Hold back purchases for a better price and selection. Showcase special talents.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Concentrate on work and proficiency. Changes taking place have a deep effect on future plans. Keep priorities in order.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): You are more magnetic and attractive than you let yourself believe. A secret meeting lends spice to your life, and that's nice.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Stick to familiar basics. This is not the time to take risks. A cool approach will help to turn negative circumstances into positive attitudes.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Family tensions mount until you admit to a problem and start to deal with it. Concentrate on teamwork and flexible attitudes.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): You gain what you are looking for through patience. Stay put and give fate and its companion, luck, a chance to work for you.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): You learn that higher profits come as a result of teamwork. This can be a lively and delicious Friday with provocative good fun. Open up!
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Stop waiting for others to get organized—it may be necessary to proceed on your own. Focus on self-control and independence.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Finish what you start and refuse to be discouraged. This is a power day that requires concentrated efforts. A spiffy friend appears.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): At times you are your most severe critic. Avoid trying to control situations about which you feel insecure. Be your own best friend.
PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): There is a tendency to fuss when someone disagrees with you. Tolerance will allow you to enjoy others more. Know your own heart.

 The late Barry Crane could well lay claim to the title "The World's Greatest Duplicate Pairs Player." Perhaps his main rival as a pairs specialist would be London's Martin Hoffman. This hand will illustrate why he fared so well in matchpoint events.

When North showed a five-card heart suit in response to his forcing two-club bid, Crane decided that it was more important, in a pair tournament, to describe his balanced 23-24 points than to support partner with his five excellent hearts. North made the value jump to six no trump.

Six hearts would have been a simple contract. Declarer would discard a spade on the king of diamonds, ruff a spade and take the club finesse for an overtrick. In six no trump, Crane won the opening diamond lead in hand, cashed the ace of hearts and crossed to dummy with the king of hearts. The ten of clubs was covered by the jack and the finesse of the queen won. After unblocking the ace of diamonds, declarer ran off three more rounds of hearts, ending in dummy, and cashed the king of diamonds.

On these tricks East had to find five discards. He nonchalantly discarded two clubs and two spades, then another club. Meanwhile, West carefully held on to a club and three spades. Crane decided East did not look like a man with the queen of spades, so he discarded the jack from hand, crossed to the king of spades, took the ace of clubs and then confidently finessed the ten of spades. When that held, declarer had all 13 trick and an absolute top.

Voyager Shows Broad Bands Of Clouds On Neptune

By Lee Siegel
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PASADENA, Calif. — Neptune's poles may be encircled by broad bands of dark clouds blown by jet streams like those on Earth and Jupiter, say scientists studying a new photograph from the Voyager 2 space probe.

Two dark bands, each about 2,700 miles wide, are clearly visible forming a collar around Neptune's south pole. The photograph also shows hints of similar banding around the north pole, said Edward Stone, Voyager project scientist for NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

"They are probably regions of clouds associated with high-speed jet streams," said Stone, a physicist and vice president at the California Institute of Technology.

The planet's southern hemisphere bands stretch from 50 degrees south latitude to 70 degrees south latitude, said Candice Hansen, a planetary scientist at Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

The new photograph was taken by Voyager 2 on June 22 when it was 57.2 million miles from Neptune. Because of the time needed to process an enhanced color image, it was released Wednesday by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, which called it "the best color photo of Neptune taken so far by the Voyager 2 spacecraft."

Today, the spacecraft was 44.6 million miles from the remote planet, cruising at 42,202 mph as it headed for its Aug. 24 close encounter with the solar system's fourth-largest planet.

Voyager was 2.67 billion miles from Earth, but has traveled 4.38 billion miles along its curving path since it was launched 12 years ago.

The photograph shows in greater detail a large dark spot — a cloud system bigger than the entire planet Mars — seen in earlier images of Neptune. Scientists have said the 6,200-mile-wide spot probably is a storm similar to Jupiter's Great Red Spot or Earth's hurricanes.

Earth's jet streams are 65- to 200-mph high-altitude air currents that zigzag across various latitudes as they blow around the globe. The cloud bands on Jupiter, Saturn and apparently on Neptune are straight belts encircling those planets. Uranus also shows faint hints of narrower cloud bands.

Scientists believe Earth's jet streams meander across latitudinal lines because of interference from continents and temperature differences in the oceans.

It may be that the bands are straight on the giant planets because those worlds have extremely thick atmospheres with relatively simple wind patterns, said Hansen and Caltech planetary scientist Andrew Ingersoll.

Jupiter's 250-mph jet streams are found along the edges of its cloud bands, and scientists suspect the same is true on Neptune, Stone said. There is no obvious association between jet streams and cloud bands on Saturn, he added.

Stone said that on Jupiter, and possibly Neptune, the cloud bands help create the jet streams and then are blown by them. Jupiter's clouds are pushed to high altitudes by winds stirred up by heat within the planet. They try to fall back to lower elevations by moving north or south. But the planet's rotation deflects the falling clouds to form jet streams, he said.

Voyager is still too far from Neptune to determine if the bands contain dark high-altitude clouds or if they are broad ribbons of clear sky that allow Voyager to peer at dark clouds lower in Neptune's atmosphere, said Rich Terrell, a Jet Propulsion Laboratory astronomer.

Studying Neptune's atmosphere will give scientists "an understanding of the circulation pattern on a planet at one of the most remote fringes of our solar system," Terrell said, adding that knowledge of alien atmospheres "improves our ability to understand our own atmosphere."

Voyager 2 and its twin, Voyager 1, were launched from Cape Canaveral, Fla., in 1977.

They explored Jupiter in 1979. Voyager 1 flew past Saturn in 1980 and is headed toward interstellar space. Voyager 2 encountered Saturn in 1981, Uranus in 1986 and will fly about 3,000 miles above Neptune's north pole PDT Aug. 24.

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Charlotte police this week began indexing a million fingerprints on computer, an unprecedented measure that will allow police to identify thousands of fingerprints gathered from the scenes of unsolved crimes.

Charlotte law enforcers will become the first police department in the state to have a computerized fingerprint file at its fingertips come January, when the $1.1 million conversion is expected to be completed, police said.

Police said every fingerprint in the Mecklenburg County file will be on tap.

Workers began typing in the height, weight, hair and eye color of everyone in their arrest file. The fingerprints are read into the computer by a scanner that resembles a desktop photocopy machine.
