Peace Corps To Visit Hungary

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BUDAPEST, Hungary — President Bush, declaring that "the Iron Curtain has begun to part," promised today to give Hungary unlimited access to American markets and said he would send the first Peace Corps volunteers ever dispatched to a communist nation.

Warmly applauded by his audience at Karl Marx University, Bush also offered a $25 million grant to spur this reform-minded East Bloc nation's fledgling free-enterprise system.

Saluting political and economic reforms here, Bush said there is "no mistaking the fact that Hungary is at the threshold of great and historic change."

The president said Hungary's enormous challenge is "to build a structure of political change and decentralized economic enterprise on the ruins of a failed Stalinist system."

Bush's speech, which was broadcast live on Hungarian television, followed talks with Hungarian leaders who presented him with a plaque containing barbed wire fencing torn down along the Austrian border.

In his speech, Bush noted that barbed wire separating Hungary and Austria had been dismantled and stacked into bales earlier this year.

"For the first time, the Iron Curtain has begun to part, and Hungary — your great country — is leading the way," Bush said, standing against a backdrop of huge Hungarian and American flags.

With those words, his audience of several hundred students and professors burst into applause. They also gave him a standing ovation at the end.

Bush noted that the Soviet Union had withdrawn some troops from Hungary, and assured Soviet leaders they have "nothing to lose or fear from peaceful change."

Said Bush: "We can — and I am determined that we will — work together to move beyond containment, beyond the Cold War."

Making the same offer he presented in Poland, the president promised that the United States "will be your partner" as Hungary tries to establish economic freedoms.

Guilty Plea

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A Florida woman accused of scheming with Greenville televangelist Jim Whittington to bilk $900,000 in cash and property from an elderly paraplegic has pleaded guilty and agreed to testify against her alleged co-conspirators.

Barbara Stevens, 54, pleaded guilty Tuesday in Florida's 10th Judicial Circuit Court before Judge J. Dale Durrance to two counts of grand theft and one count of conspiring with Whittington and three others to commit the crimes.

In pleading guilty to the three felonies, she could have faced a maximum of 35 years in prison, but the plea arrangement calls for her to serve three years in state prison and remain on probation for 10 years, said Chip Thullbery, administrative assistant with the state attorney's office in Bartow, Fla.

It's Sizzle Time In N.C. West Says He Wants To Stay

and Amy Gavigan
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

It's the nerve rattling, energy sapping, Greenville sizzle.

Air conditioning units, swimming pools and cozy spots in the shade were among the most valued commodities in eastern North Carolina Tuesday, as mid-July temperatures hovered near the 100-degree mark.

Most area residents, who either stayed at home or worked in cooled areas, were fortunate to be sheltered from the oppressive, mid-July temperatures.

Some people, however, endured as best as possible in the sweltering heat, despite related warnings issued from medical professionals.

As the temperatures remain torrid through the remainder of the week, area health experts are offering advice to combat the scorching environment.

"It's best to avoid the heat as much as possible and to especially avoid vigorous activity in the heat," said Dr. Timothy Monroe, director of the Pitt County Health Department.

"Outdoor exercise, in particular, should be avoided in the middle of the day when temperatures are most severe," he said.

Monroe says there are several ways to reduce the risk of suffering heat exhaustion, or its more severe counterpart, heat stroke.

"Keep well hydrated by drinking fluids frequently — even if you're

West Says He Wants To Stay

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Despite the lack of a public vote of confidence from the Pitt Board of Education, Superintendent Eddie West says he is happy with his job and wants to keep it.

"I love it," he said. "We love Pitt County."

The board met in executive session for nearly three hours Monday night to discuss the status of West's contract but took no action when it reconvened the open meeting and adjourned about midnight. West's four-year contract expires June 30, 1990, and the board must inform West of its decision on whether to renew the pact by April of next year.

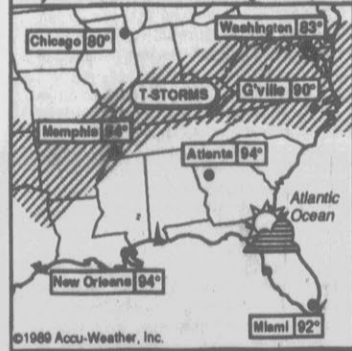

However, the board has the option of immediately buying out the final year of the contract and dismissing West. He earns about $95,000 a year.

At least six of the 13 board members, including Chairman George Williams of Greenville, have refused to say whether they support retaining West or buying out the last year of his contract. Several members said the group will probably discuss West's status at future meetings. West has been Pitt's superintendent since 1982.

The Water You Drink Rocky Mount Plant Is Top Municipal Polluter On Tar

By J. Ward Best
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

When it rains it pours. And when the rains fall, Rocky Mount pours millions of gallons of untreated or partially treated sewage into the Tar River.

Storm water run-off overloads the city's wastewater treatment plant, forcing the plant to bypass the sewage. It cannot treat. Because of the wet spring, Rocky Mount bypassed 933.02 million gallons of sewage between Jan. 1 and May 30, according to records compiled by Rocky Mount and submitted to the state Division of Environmental Management.

The Tar River supplies 80 percent of Greenville's drinking water, and recent fish kills farther downstream have been linked to the inflow of nutrients and pollutants into the river. The Tar River Regional Wastewater Treatment Facility in Rocky Mount leads all other municipal treatment plants in the Tar-Pamlico basin as the largest point-source polluter, according to DEM.

On a partly cloudy day last week, effluent — treated wastewater — raced through a concrete pipe from the Rocky Mount plant and into the river. The smell of chlorine and human waste filled the air near the discharge pipe, and the water foamed as the waste entered the river.

The river banks showed signs of recent flooding. Receding waters left brown and black waste on the land more than eight feet above the normal water level. Sanitary napkins and tampon applicators littered the banks and a condom hung on a tree branch.

Dave McNaught, director of the Pamlico-Tar River Foundation, visited the Tar River treatment plant in early April when it was bypassing an average of more than eight million gallons of waste a day. McNaught and Doug Rader, senior scientist with the Environmental Defense Fund,

Pitt Board Puts Off Vote On Bonds

By Stuart Savage
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

No action was taken Monday by Pitt County Commissioners toward authorizing bond referendums for the public schools, Pitt Community College or other capital construction programs, although the consensus of the board seemed to favor allowing the public to vote on at least the schools' and community college's needs.

The board has been requested to authorize a referendum for $25.7 million for public school capital projects. A similar request for $22 million has been received from the PCC board of trustees.

Commissioners also need some $12 million for a new jail, estimated $5 million is needed for a new landfill and have requests for $1.5 million for an agricultural center and $500,000 for new voting machines.

But the board has decided to finance the construction of a new jail through a lease-purchase plan and may well choose to use similar financing arrangements for the agricultural center, the landfill and new voting machines.

County Manager Kramer Jackson told the board Monday that to finance all the requests — some $63.52 million — would amount to some $111 million including interest and require a tax rate equivalent of 10.64 cents, based on present property values.

The proposed school bonds, Jackson said, could be repaid over a 20-year period, with no increase in taxes, by using revenues from sales taxes and state school construction funds, while a 15-year payback would take 1.76 cents on the tax rate.

Jackson also said that $32.94 million would be needed over 20 years to repay $18.8 million in bonds for PCC, requiring an estimated 5.68 cents on the tax rate — or about 5 cents on the tax rate for a 15-year payback.

Jackson's report also suggested that the 20-year payback on the $12 million for the jail would be about $21 million and require a tax rate equivalent of 3.62 cents or 4.44 cents for 15-years, while the agriculture center payback would be $2.62 million over 20-years — a 2 cents tax rate equivalent for 20 years or .55 cents for 15-years.

The report also showed that a 20-year amortization of the $5 million for the landfill would amount to $8.75 million and 1.3 cents on the tax rate, or 1.85 cents for 15-years.

Commissioners suggested that the question of financing of the capital projects would be discussed once again at the board's next meeting, which is scheduled for July 24.

In other business Monday, commissioners adopted a resolution recommending that "all public institutions supported by the public and taxpaying citizens of Pitt County," including the hospital, public buildings and areas wherein the public is invited, "set aside an area wherein persons desiring to use tobacco, in whatever form, may have the privilege and choice to do so."

The resolution noted that Pitt County is the largest flue-cured tobacco producing county in the world and that many Pitt residents earn their living through the sale and promotion of the sale of tobacco.

While saying the board "takes no position concerning the effects of smoking cigarettes and other tobacco products on the health of the public," the resolution said, "it is the feeling of the board that persons desiring to smoke should have the choice and privilege to do so within designated areas of public institutions."

Eight Thefts Investigated

Greenville police said eight thefts, at least three of which were committed by juveniles, were reported to the department Tuesday.

Officer W.R. Stephenson said two speakers, four tapes, a radar detector, two fire extinguishers, $8 in change and other items were taken from a vehicle parked at the intersection of Fifth Street and Rotary Avenue in an incident reported at 6:05 a.m., while other investigators said two power boosters, an amplifier and about 100 cassette tapes were taken from two cars parked at 205E Shiloh Drive in an incident reported at 7:08 a.m.

Officer C.S. Curtis said a juvenile, who was turned over to the department's juvenile division, took a watch from the Family Dollar store at 1202 N. Memorial Drive in an incident reported at 9:35 a.m., while Officer C.J. Melvin said another juvenile, also turned over to juvenile officers, took a Batmobile car from K&K Toys at The Plaza mall in an incident reported at 10:50 a.m.

Officer B.W. Lewis said 15 cassette tapes were taken from a car parked at Kings Arms Apartments in an incident reported at 11:56 a.m., while Officer L.T. Gray said three punching bags, a net, a slide and other items were taken from the playground equipment at Sonic Drive-In on Greenville Boulevard in an incident reported at 12:36 p.m.

Officer S.A. Bass said $150 worth of potted plants and a pair of running shoes were taken from 401 S. Harding St. in an incident reported at 3:25 p.m., while Officer S.A. Person said a juvenile took a toy gun from K&K Toys at The Plaza in an incident reported at 7:46 p.m.

Break-in Arrests

Greenville police arrested two men on breaking, entering and larceny charges early today in connection with the theft of $95 worth of items from Collins Grocery on West Ninth Street.

Officer C.L. Robertson identified the two arrested as Jeffrey Jerome Moore, 19, of 308 Paige Drive and David Levon Godley, 18, of Stokes.

According to Robertson, the men were seen running from near the Trade Station on West 10th Street at about 4:35 a.m. and were caught after a short chase.

Items taken from the store and recovered, Robertson said, included cigarettes, beer, candy and meat.

ECU Science Camp

A total of 145 elementary students from North Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia and Maryland have attended this summer's sessions of the East Carolina University Science Camp.

The camp, held at Camp Caroline in Pamlico County, featured two week-long sessions, one held during the week of June 25 for students who have completed grades 6-8, and the other, for students in grades 3-5, during the week of July 2.

Under the leadership of certified teachers, the students took part in science activities and field trips designed to increase their awareness and knowledge of the coastal environment. Camp sessions also included fishing, swimming, sailing and nightly gatherings around a campfire.

ECU's summer science camp at Camp Caroline is directed by Dr. Floyd E. Mattheis. This year was the 11th year ECU has sponsored the camp program.

Pitt Students Will Meet New Standards

By Carol Tyer
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt County schools' students are "in excellent shape" in regards to heightened admissions standards planned for state-supported schools in the fall of 1990, according to Charles Ross, the school system's associate superintendent for instruction.

Related story on A-6

"We've known for several years that this requirement was in the making," Ross said today. "So our school system has done a good job in providing these courses the entire time. We have had these 12 core curriculum courses — four units of English, three each of mathematics and science, and two of social studies — as a part of our Basic Education Plan all along.

"We encourage these courses, plus foreign languages, for all our students who even suspect that they'll go to college," Ross said. They have their choices of Spanish, French and now even Latin. Some of the Latin course, plus some advanced math courses, are taught via satellite in special tie-in programs in conjunction with other schools.

"The foreign languages are not part of the core curriculum, but many college and universities do require or encourage them, so we have them for our students," Ross said.

He said he did not have figures readily available, but had reason to believe that students in the Pitt schools' general, college preparatory and honors programs will have no problem in entering state schools in 1990 or any time in the future.

A University of North Carolina report on admission standards released this week indicated that of the 26,695 North Carolina high graduates who applied for college admission in the fall of 1988, 86 percent had taken the 12 courses that will be required in 1990.

ECU Names Powell As New Admissions Director

ECU NEWS BUREAU

East Carolina University announced the appointment of Dr. Thomas E. Powell Jr., a veteran of 16 years experience in higher education administration, as the university's director of admissions effective July 27.

Powell, 42, comes to ECU from the faculty of the College of Business of the University of Delaware, Newark, Del., where he received a doctorate in urban affairs and public policy in 1987. At ECU, he will also serve as adjunct assistant professor of political science.

Since January of 1988, Powell has served as visiting assistant professor in the College of Business, University of Delaware, teaching principles of management/organizational behavior and administrative theory. He has served on UD's Faculty Senate Committee for Admissions and Standing.

Powell served for six years as director of admissions at Old Dominion University, Norfolk, Va., and for two years, 1981-83, was director of admissions programs at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee, an urban university with an enrollment of 27,000 students.

Before becoming an assistant admissions director for recruitment at Old Dominion University in 1972, Powell was an assistant marketing officer for Virginia National Bank (Sovran Bank) in the Norfolk-Portsmouth area.

He holds a master's degree in counseling psychology and a bachelor's degree in business administration (marketing), both from Old Dominion.

The national search for an admissions director began last December following the retirement of Charles F. Seeley. Seeley came to ECU in the early 1980s from a position as admissions director at Michigan State University.

The ECU committee received and screened more than 50 applications from candidates to succeed Seeley.

Since Seeley's retirement, assistant admissions director Eugene A. Owens has filled the position in an acting capacity.

ECU, which anticipates a fall semester enrollment of approximately 16,000 students, has instituted during the past year an admissions policy which allows more careful screening of applications for admissions and greater selectivity.

The university's rejection rate for admissions applications has increased under the new policy but it also allows for an increased enrollment. Last fall's enrollment was more than 15,500.

University officials said they expect average SAT scores of the incoming freshman class to be higher than in recent years.

DIFFERENT CAREER TRACKS

Individuals seek to improve their job potential at different points in their lives. Seldom does this occur without adding stress to a marriage. The myth that a couple should grow at the same rate is just that, a myth; the reality is that individuals within a marriage bring to it their own unique needs and timetables.

When one spouse makes a career move, the other may feel left behind. This can heighten a sense of competitiveness in a marriage that can, if left unresolved, be destructive. In the face of such competitiveness, dialogue disappears.

Competition is often fueled by insecurity; improving the situation requires a commitment to talking about mutual fears as well as goals. Learning to evaluate individual ambition as part of a healthy marriage, and integrating personal and mutual goals, is a lifetime pursuit. Together you can stop competing with each other and learn to accept your insecurities as something that needs to be shared, rather than as weakness. Enlisting the assistance of an experienced marriage and family counselor may help defuse a potentially explosive situation.

West

West would not comment on whether he believes his job is in jeopardy after Monday's executive session, and he would not comment on speculation that Williams met with him prior to the meeting and asked him to resign because the board no longer supports him. West did not deny the conversation with Williams took place. Williams could not be reached at home or at work.

Still, West said he understands the evaluation process the board is using.

"I fully understand that with any superintendent, the board has that prerogative (to buy out the final year) at the end of the contract period," he said.

All superintendents sometimes draw the ire of board members, parents or teachers, he said, and the job is of such a nature that some person or group is probably always unhappy.

"It goes on 24 hours a day, seven days a week," he said. "You just try to deal with each situation fairly based on the facts. That's just part of the job description."

West recently interviewed for the superintendent's position in New Hanover County and publicly sought the post, which would have allowed him to return to his home. Though he was not selected for the job, board member Mark Owens has said that West's interest outside of Pitt County should not affect his current position because the New Hanover post was a unique instance.

People in any profession often look for an opportunity to work near their home, Owens said.

West agreed, saying it was a special situation and does not reflect a lack of commitment for Pitt County.

Board member Mary Williams has been a critic of West and the system's achievements, but he pinpointed several facts which he claims are significant accomplishments for Pitt County and his administration.

"No. 1, obviously, our test scores have shown consistent improvement, and the gains last year were consistently significant," he said.

"Wake County gained 1 percent overall (in student test scores). We gained almost 4 percent overall. When you look at the difference in the pupil population and the educational difference of parents, I think that is significant."

Awards and recognition among teachers and administrators have increased, he said, and the system has been successful in implementing the board's affirmative action plan. Also, the number of students receiving academic awards and scholarships has jumped three-fold.

There have been 21 school facility improvements since 1982, 18 of which came in the last four years, he said. The system is in sound financial shape.

"Financially, we are in excellent condition. In fact, if you check with the local government commission two years ago, we had the highest rate of return on investment of any school in North Carolina," he said. "Our ongoing fund balance has been consistently good, and we've con-

Gray Files For Delay In Hearing

By John Bare
The Daily Reflector

State officials hoping to force a Bethel funeral home owner to properly dispose of human body parts stored in four Pitt County farm locations have hit another bump in the road.

John Gray of Raleigh, who has eluded Wake County deputies and broken off contact with state health officials, had until Monday to respond to legal notices issued by the state, and he filed for a 30-day continuance at the last minute, said Steve Reid, spokesman for the solid waste section of the state Division of Health Services.

The Division of Health Services had placed public notices in state newspapers alerting Gray that the state was seeking an injunction against him to force him to dispose of the body parts, medical waste and cremated remains stored near Stokes.

If Gray had not responded, the state had planned to ask a Superior Court judge to grant relief despite Gray's absence. The state has filed a complaint in Wake Superior Court.

Gray owns Ayres-Gray Funeral Home in Bethel and Gray Funeral Home and Crematorium in Raleigh. Pitt deputies discovered the waste in February, but state officials have been unable to work out an agreeable solution with Gray or to serve him with a summons to appear in court.

Reid said Tuesday that it appears attorneys for the state have no choice but to wait out the 30-day extension. Attorneys for the state were not able to appear in court Monday to oppose the continuance motion.

"Mr. Gray did show up at the courthouse yesterday (Monday) just long enough to exercise his right to file an extension," Reid said.

tinued to make improvements to our financial operation."

Since 1985, the system has been awarded $3.5 million in discretionary money from state and federal funds, and teacher supplements have increased from an average of $100 per teacher to over $500.

In the last two years, contributions from private citizens and foundations have accounted for nearly $800,000 in revenue for the school system. The money has been used for capital projects, enhancement of teacher rewards, and curriculum improvements.

"I think if you put all those things together, it's a good track record. It's been a team effort with wonderful support from principals and teachers," he said.

GUC Seeks Answers To River Proposal

By Stuart Savage
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Greenville Utilities Commission on Tuesday authorized a written response to be sent to the state's Division of Environmental Management in connection with a public hearing to reclassify the Tar-Pamlico River Basin as nutrient sensitive waters, which was held in Greenville on June 15.

The letter and accompanying documents sets out no position — neither for or against — the proposal, but asks for the answers to a number of questions regarding some recommendations contained in the plan to clean up the river.

"None of us disagree" that the Tar-Pamlico river should be cleaned up," Malcolm Green, GUC's general manager told the board. "We do support that the river needs help. We want to clean it up."

But Green said "the staff has some problems" with recommendations on how the cleanup should be done. "Is this really the way of going about doing it," Green questioned.

"We've been perceived as being opposed" to the cleanup, Green said. "That's not true. Our staff recommends we not take a position" until a number of questions are answered.

Green said that point source discharges (wastewater treatment plants, such as Greenville's) account for only 15 percent of the nutrients in the river basin.

"Unless someone does something mandatory with non-point discharges," Green suggested, any plan to clean up the Tar is "not going to be effective. We feel the (proposed) DEM strategy won't help," because non-point source discharges are not dealt with effectively.

Green said, "We're not taking a position at all ... other than to say we think the river needs help. Any one that says we have taken a position is incorrect."

"We're questioning the recommendations that the DEM staff has made."

In other matters, board members were told the GUC saved $181,816 in wholesale power costs through operation of its load management program during the month of June.

Roger Jones, director of GUC's electric systems, said the load management system was in full operation on June 28 between 4 p.m. and 5 p.m., the time of Carolina Power & Light Company's system peak. The savings, his report said, included $79,570 from voltage adjustments, $36,088 from operation of Beat the Peak switches on water heaters, $52,652 from radio-controlled switches on central air conditioners and $10,861 through operation of generators at GUC's water plant, at Procter & Gamble Paper Products and at the Fred Webb grain elevator.

At the end of June there were a total of 18,835 Beat the Peak switches in service on water heaters, air conditioners and heat pump electric heat strips throughout GUC's service area.

Since January 1985, the load management operations have saved some $7.55 million in wholesale power costs.

In a written report to the board, Jim Anderson, director of GUC's gas system, said $31,352 was saved through the purchase of wellhead natural gas during the month of May.

Blounts Creek Decision Correct

If there were more decisions like one made about the Blounts Creek Bridge in Beaufort County, there might be hope for breathing life back into the beleaguered Pamlico River.

The state Division of Coastal Management has blocked construction of a 45-foot-high bridge over Blounts Creek to replace an aging 15-foot-high wooden span. That in itself may sound like obstruction of progress, but listen to the reasons.

Upstream from the bridge, developers have planned a golf course and residential development. The higher span would allow larger vessels and sailboats to travel up to deeper water and proposed developments. While that growth may be good for the local economy, it can have a significant impact on water quality in a pristine creek. And it will add one more water quality burden to the Pamlico River — an estuary that simply can't absorb any more blows.

That vulnerability is painfully obvious in a year when fish kills have come earlier than ever and been more widespread than before. This summer dead flounder, diseased menhaden and crabs with shells eaten away have surfaced in every key tributary of the Pamlico.

There is no denying the deplorable condition of one of eastern North Carolina's most treasured natural resources. A large portion of the waterway is commercially dead, meaning a fisherman cannot pay his expenses. Those who have lived on the river's banks will tell you there are no crabs in crab pots, no flounder to gig and no fish biting in 1989.

The causes are broad and complex. Pollution from innumerable sources has destroyed water quality. Industry, agriculture, development — each source adds its share. In turn each will have to do its share to reduce the pollution if the river is to recover.

With development, lines have to be drawn. In some cases, the environment must come first. The decision concerning the Blounts Creek Bridge is an example of such a time. Even as these words are written, appeals of that decision are likely being made by the Department of Transportation and developers. But the ruling was correct and it should stand.

It may be too late to completely reverse the harm done to a beautiful, productive Pamlico River. But curing its manmade ills must be attempted. Denying construction of a bridge that would encourage further damage from development is a good start.

Control

A Part Of Growing Larger

Large crowds often generate some problems and a major part of police work is maintaining control of minor incidents which could get out of hand.

Greenville is rapidly becoming a city where large crowds can be expected. Sporting events and other activities in a city nearing 50,000 in population will mean more traffic, more pedestrians and a sprinkling of unruly individuals. The recent July 4th activities are an example of such events.

Police Chief Jerry Tesmond has said there will be further planning for next year's July 4th activities with a goal of clearing out the crowds after the evening fireworks display within 20 minutes.

The city might consider using GREAT buses to bring crowds into the central city area. Better control of alcohol was discussed. A temporary system of one-way streets is another possibility.

Tesmond also suggested additional police officers for the July 4 activities as a deterrent to unruliness.

In the future people might see motorcycles at events which draw large crowds. The motorcycle policemen have high visibility and also can quickly maneuver to trouble spots.

Also in the future citizens might see horse-mounted officers at events such as the Independence Day celebration. A mounted officer has a vantage point so that he can see over the crowd. The officer can maneuver. Crowds can be channeled because most pedestrians are not going to try to run over a horse.

Generally crowds out for an event such as Greenville's July 4th celebration can be handled with enough police and equipment on hand. Obviously in a city the size of Greenville large crowds put a strain on the police force. Nevertheless the crowds can be expected for various events here regularly. The events are usually welcomed and consequently there will have to be both near and long term planning for crowd control. The object of it all will be to hold such events safely for all citizens to enjoy.

'Lady, You Ain't Married'

WASHINGTON — One reason to admire a clergyman is his ability to take the simplest phrase and expound on its meaning for 45 minutes or so. It is in that tradition that I, a layman, would like to take the phrase, "We have a spiritual marriage," and explain what it means. When said by a man to a woman, it means, "Lady, you ain't married."

Such a phrase was uttered by William Hurt, the actor, to Sandra Jennings, a dancer, shortly before she gave birth to his child. Based upon such sentiments and ten weeks spent together in a state that recognizes common-law marriages (South Carolina), Jennings claims she is Hurt's wife. She wants half his estimated $10 million estate.

As with almost everything else in America, the dispute between Hurt and Jennings wound up in court. We heard from one witness, a baby-sitter, who testified that Hurt referred to Jennings as his wife. This, though, was in South Carolina, no place for a man to introduce a woman as a mistress and the mother of his illegitimate child.

What's astounding about Jennings' claim on Hurt's wealth is the reaction of other women. You might expect it to be sympathy. Nothing of the sort. To a person, they consider Jennings an embarrassment to their sex — a gold digger, a spiteful woman and some terms not fit for a family newspaper. To be utterly scientific, these views come from women of all kinds — married, divorced, never married and with or without children — but all of them working and making a nice living.

On the other hand, columnist Murray Kempton took Jennings' side. One columnist does not a movement make, but his reaction was not surprising. Men have been so buffeted by the women's movement, so convinced of their malfeasance and so ashamed of the views they once held (and the things they once did), that women need only point a finger and a man will stand and confess to anything demanded.

Worse, and typically male, many men continue to idealize women. They cannot believe that the bad behavior of men is matched, and sometimes exceeded, by that of women. Burdened by a guilty conscience from too often saying, "I'll call you in the morning," they reflexively conclude that in a dispute between a man and a woman, the woman is always innocent. Regardless of religion, all men belong to the cult of the virgin.

But, oddly, women are holding Jennings accountable. They are saying she knew she wasn't married. They are saying she nevertheless chose to stay with Hurt for three years and even had a child by him. Hurt's obligation has been handsomely met: child support of $65,000 a year.

The case, though, does raise an interesting question. If Jennings and Hurt had married, she would unquestionably be entitled to a portion of his wealth. Why should the failure to tie the knot so radically change Jennings' standing — legal as well as moral? The couple had lived together. They had a baby. Surely, a cameo appearance before a justice of the peace cannot make that much difference.

Ah, but it does. And the reason, the law aside, is that marriage remains what it always has been: the ultimate commitment.

The portrait of Jennings painted by her lawyer, Richard Golub, is precisely the one rejected by many women. "This is the story of boy meets girl in modern society, they have a baby and what are the consequences. Women can be very vulnerable to these kinds of promises."

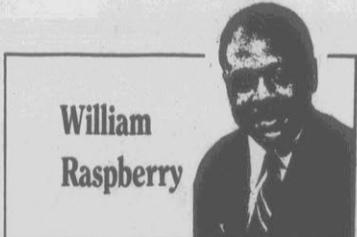

The "modern society" cited by Golub is precisely what condemns Jennings. It rejects the false image of women as victims, as people easily led astray — as children in adult clothing. The portrait of Jennings as an open-mouthed rube in the big city of life, an innocent who did not understand the rules, is demeaning to women's intelligence and their ability to make adult decisions — and live with the consequences.

Hurt would not commit. The ball was in Jennings' court. To paraphrase Rodgers and Hammerstein, she could have washed that man right out of her hair. Instead, she accepted a "spiritual marriage." It means now precisely what it meant then: The lady wasn't married.

A Little Advice From Uncle Ollie

WASHINGTON — Former Marine Corps Lt. Col. Oliver North, convicted of crimes in the Iran-contra affair, has been fined, given a suspended sentence and ordered to perform 1,200 hours of community service in a drug program for inner-city youths. A lot of people are wondering what sort of advice he might offer these youngsters.

William Raspberry

"All right, boys and girls. That ends this morning's lecture on the flag as an all-purpose cover, techniques for getting around laws you don't like, and methods of dealing with commie-sympathizing liberals. Or as it is listed in your syllabus, 'The Good, the Bad and the Ugly.' Any questions?"

"Yeh...."

"That's 'Yes Sir'"

"Scuse me, Yes Sir. I was thinking of maybe selling a little crack and using the money to help public-housing residents get their own place — like, become independent, you know. You think that's a good idea?"

"Well, it depends on how you go about it. If you start wearing gold chains and driving BMWs, everybody will think you're just another crook. But if you learn to speak with some emotion about your desire to help your people while keeping to a low-key lifestyle, I think it could be managed."

"You mean I can't use none of the money myself?"

"I didn't say that. The thing to remember is that you have to keep the two things separate. You could put some of the money in a community fund and get some highly placed politicians to endorse what you're doing. Then you could stash away a little cash for your own expenses. I'd suggest a little tin box that you could keep in your closet. Next?"

"Sir, I'm not saying I'm doing anything wrong, but if I was to get busted, would it be best for me to confess, plead the Fifth or just stonewall?"

"Well, if you remember my remarks this morning, I emphasized that the first thing to do is to make the prosecution's case as difficult as possible. That means getting rid of the evidence as soon as you learn that they are after you. Now I understand that some of you don't own paper shredders, but that's all right. You have to improvise. I mean you could burn any incriminating evidence, so long as it doesn't include an American flag, or you could flush the stuff down the toilet. You people do have toilets, don't you?"

"And of course the next thing to remember is that you were not working for yourself. You were only doing this because a city-council member or some other unnamed person in authority told you that you should do whatever you could to help your people. I've found that it works awfully well if you can convince a judge that you were just following the orders of higher-ups. Yes, there in the back."

"What about selling guns?"

"Well, again, it all depends. If you're selling guns just to make some money — 'scratch,' I think you people call it — then that would be wrong. But if you do it in furtherance of some higher good, like getting around the laws that prevent your people from getting out of public housing and off welfare, then I think you could make a case for it. Incidentally, you might consider keeping a weapon or two for yourself. In this line of work, personal security is very important."

"Tell me, sir, is saying that you're trying to get your people welfare or out of public housing the only thing that will cut you any slack with a judge?"

"Good question. As a matter of fact the only limit to your justifications is your imagination. For instance, you might start a group for the purpose of ridding your community of drugs. Since the drug dealers are armed, naturally members of your anti-drug group would also have to be armed. And since drug dealers have money for arms and lawyers, your group will have to have some money. Selling drugs might be one way of raising the necessary funds."

"But wouldn't that make us as bad as them?"

"You're not paying attention. The thing you want the judge to focus on is not what you are doing but your reasons for doing it. Do that, and keep referring to your superiors, and you'd be surprised how much sympathy you can get from a judge. Okay, the young lady there in the corner."

"Sir, I don't mean any harm, but you must be leaving something out. The judge gave you probation because he said you were only a 'low-ranking subordinate working to carry out the initiatives of a few cynical superiors.' Well, who the devil did he think my brother was, Noriega? All Tyrone did was sell a couple of nickel bags to this undercover cop, and he got two years in the joint."

"All right, class, what do you think Tyrone forgot?"

"To wrap himself in the flag?"

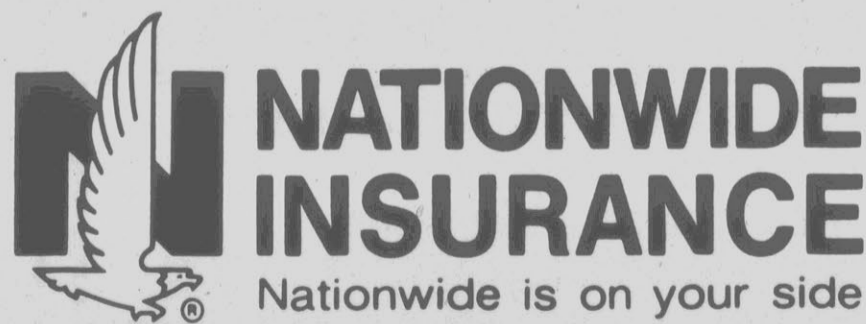

"Excellent. As a matter of fact, I think we'd better spend the afternoon discussing the basic techniques of flag-wrapping. That's it for this morning. Break for chow and be back here at 1300 hours."

UNC Report Says Admission Rules May Cause Cuts At Black Campuses

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHAPEL HILL — The University of North Carolina's predominantly black campuses might have trouble filling their freshmen classes when higher admission standards take effect in fall 1990, a UNC report suggests.

According to a UNC report released this week, at least four of the state's five predominantly black universities might be in trouble in 1990 when all UNC campuses have to turn away students who haven't taken the 12 required "core" courses.

The purpose of the report, which was mailed last week to principals of each high school in the state, is to let school officials know how prepared their graduates are to gain admission to a UNC campus and do college-level work. Although the report focused only on North Carolina students, the higher standards will apply to out-of-state students, too.

"One of the purposes in giving this letter to the principals is to point out that there still is work to be done," UNC system President C.D. Spangler Jr. told the News and Observer of Raleigh.

The new minimum standards consist of 12 courses in "core" college-preparatory subjects — four units of English, three units each of mathematics and science, and two units of social studies.

The report was based on a study of 45,789 applications filed by North Carolina high school graduates seeking admission in fall 1988 to a University of North Carolina campus. Some graduates applied at more than one campus in the UNC system.

It shows that at two campuses — Fayetteville State University and Winston-Salem State University — more than half of those who applied for admission that year fell short of the higher standards.

At Elizabeth City State University, 49.4 percent of the 1988 applicants were at least one course short of the 1990 standards. And at N.C. Central University in Durham, the comparable percentage was 39.8.

But the report also presented encouraging news for the UNC system as a whole.

Of the 26,695 North Carolina high school graduates who applied for fall 1988 admission, 86 percent had taken the 12 courses that will be required in 1990. Most of the deficiencies were in math and science courses.

White applicants were more likely to meet the higher standard, however, with 92 percent of whites having taken the 12 courses, compared with 65 percent of blacks.

Raymond H. Dawson, senior vice president for academic affairs for the UNC system, said he was confident that high school students were getting the message about tougher standards and were signing up for college-preparatory courses in greater numbers.

"This indicates that they're really taking the courses they ought to be taking to get themselves prepared for college," Dawson said, adding that the proportion of black students meeting the standards was still "far too low."

UNC officials decided in 1984 to gradually raise minimum admissions standards for all students because of concern over the amount of remedial education that high school graduates needed once they were admitted to a university.

In 1987-88, UNC campuses spent $2.9 million on remedial education. Most of that was in catch-up courses for students who either skipped, or failed to master, basic courses in English, mathematics and science.

The requirements had been set to take effect in fall 1988 but were postponed for two years when a survey showed that nearly half of all high school juniors in 1987 were not expected to meet them.

Lloyd V. "Vic" Hackley, chancellor of Fayetteville State University, said he was concerned about the number of students who might not qualify for admission in 1990. But he added that the real issue was more complex: making sure students were competent to graduate.

"It is obvious that nationally and in North Carolina we don't focus enough on the outcomes — that is, whether students are going to graduate from college," Hackley said. "We pay more attention to the number of freshmen students who show up primarily for budgetary reasons."

Hackley, a former vice president for student affairs for the UNC system, said he thought the publicity about the tougher admissions standards had encouraged high school students to pick more rigorous courses.

"We have been getting the word out since 1984," he said. "I don't think it's going to be a matter of turning the students away. I think they know what the admission requirements are."

Hackley said that there were far more high school graduates, both black and white, who met the higher admission standards but did not apply to UNC campuses.

Bobby R. Etheridge, state superintendent of public instruction, said he was pleased that 86 percent of 1988 graduates had completed the core courses.

"Based on what this study has found," Etheridge said, "it's probably safe to predict that the youngsters who are going to be entering the colleges and universities will be the best prepared in history and will have the science and math necessary to compete with their peers in other states."

House Conferees Preparing New Plan For Budget Talks

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — House leaders are preparing the first new proposal for breaking a logjam over financing the $8.6 billion highway construction program, teacher salary increases and other state programs.

A 22-member joint conference committee held its initial meeting Tuesday morning which lasted only 20 minutes and consisted of opening remarks by the co-chairmen, Rep. Sam Hunt, D-Alamance, and Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston.

A second meeting scheduled for that afternoon was canceled so Hunt and his team could work on their proposal. He declined to disclose its contents in an interview but said he hoped it would lead to productive negotiations.

"I really think we'll make progress this week," he said. "If we don't, it could be a drawn-out deal."

Hunt, who lunched with Rauch on Tuesday, spent much of the afternoon shuttling back and forth between the House and Senate chambers and huddling with members of the House negotiating team and Gov. Jim Martin's lobbyists. The House group met late Tuesday with Transportation Secretary Jim Harrington.

Rauch, meanwhile, said the Senate would make no new proposals. "We have a full and complete program to handle both the general fund and the highway fund," he said. "It's up to the House to give us a suggestion. The ball's in their court."

The complex debate boils down to one question: how big a tax increase the General Assembly will levy to pay for the highway program, a 6 percent pay raise for teachers and state employees, and other spending increases that have broad support in both chambers.

The House approved a bill that would fund the massive road construction program over 12 years with a 5/4 cents-per-gallon gasoline tax increase, an increase in the motor vehicle sales tax from 2 percent to 3 percent with a $1,500 limit for commercial vehicles, and several other smaller taxes and fees.

But the House has been unable to agree on a revenue bill for the state budget's "general fund," which includes programs not involving transportation. Martin proposed a 1-cent sales tax increase to finance the pay raise and a statewide merit pay program for teachers, but no committee has approved it.

The Senate, meanwhile, endorsed a package that would raise $422.1 million next year to get the highway program under way and grant the 6 percent pay raise. The Senate plan would raise the highway money over 15 years instead of 12.

A bitterly divided House defeated the Senate plan, largely because it would use revenue from the vehicle sales tax increase to pay for general-fund programs for the next two years. The House leadership and Martin want revenue from that tax to go immediately to the highway program. Otherwise, they say, future legislatures might decide to keep it in the general fund, which could starve the highway program.

The Senate responded by passing the House bill — after attaching to it the same general-fund provisions the House had voted to kill. The House declined to accept the rewritten version of the highway bill, leading to creation of the conference committee.

Some legislators have spoken of breaking the logjam by raising additional taxes, such as the levies on alcoholic beverages. Rep. Bob Hunter, D-McDowell, has voiced support for a bigger increase in the annual auto registration fee than the $2 boost in the House bill.

But if the House and Senate cut a deal including such tax increases, they would have to put them in a separate bill. Under legislative

Agencies Form Team

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CANTON, N.C. — Law enforcement officials in four western North Carolina counties and the Cherokee Indian Reservation joined forces Tuesday in their war on drugs.

Law enforcement agencies in Jackson, Haywood, Macon and Swain counties and the reservation make up a new drug enforcement team for the areas, with support from state and federal agencies.

Previously, the agencies have been confined by their own jurisdictional areas.

The Smoky Mountain Unit, United Narcotic Investigation Team, was made during a press conference in the Canton Municipal Building.

Jackson County Sheriff Bob Allen referred to the formation of the team — called the Smoky Mountain Unit, United Narcotic Investigation Team — "a dream come true."

Deputy Wounded

MOCKSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Davie County sheriff's deputy was in stable condition Tuesday night after being wounded by a shotgun blast when he responded to a domestic disturbance call.

Sgt. Thomas B. Grubb of the Davie County Sheriff's Department was shot once in his side.

Chief Deputy Robert Lemmons said that the sheriff's department received a call at 5:32 a.m. Tuesday, indicating that a man had locked himself in the closet of his Mocksville home, ignoring pleas from his wife to come out. Lemmons said Grubb and Deputy Gordon Smith arrived at the house with members of the Davie County Emergency Medical Services Department.

Grubbs, who was wearing a protective vest, was shot after he entered the house.

Vote Put Off On DWI Changes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The state Senate's top-ranking Democrat says he is not convinced the 1983 Safe Roads Act needs to be toughened, but Sen. Henson Barnes insists no effort will be made to stall a measure to tighten the law.

The Senate voted Tuesday to return the bill to the Judiciary I Committee instead of voting immediately on whether to accept sweeping House changes in the bill, which the Senate approved earlier this year.

Sen. Larry Cobb, R-Mecklenburg, voiced concern that the delay might signal an attempt to bottle up the bill. But Barnes, D-Wayne, said it was customary to return complicated measures to committee before voting on House revisions.

"I think we'll have a bill this session," Barnes told reporters. Identical bills seeking tougher drunken driving laws were introduced in both chambers, but the Senate removed most of the substantive provisions before approving its version.

The House passed the Senate bill last week after restoring those provisions and adding some new ones.

In its current form, the bill would:
 — Reduce the intoxication threshold for a driver from a blood-alcohol content of 0.10 to 0.08 for ordinary drivers and to 0.04 for drivers of commercial vehicles, such as taxis and buses.

— Ban all open alcoholic beverage containers in passenger sections of non-commercial vehicles. Currently, open liquor and fortified wine containers are banned in passenger sections but open beer and unfortified wine containers are permitted.

— Increase from 10 days to 30 days the period for which a driver's license is revoke immediately upon arrest on a DWI charge.

— Boost the fines for all five DWI punishment levels.

Barnes, sponsor of the 1983 law, said the Legislature that year considered and rejected many of the provisions in the House bill.

House Panel To Vote On Terms

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The House Judiciary Committee is poised to vote on whether to include longer legislative terms in a package to balance giving the governor veto power.

The bid to increase legislative terms from two years to four years drew most of the debate as the panel resumed work Tuesday on four proposed constitutional amendments that had been languishing for several weeks.

In addition to making North Carolina the 50th state to give its governor the veto and extending terms, the bill, if approved by the voters, would move statewide elections to even-numbered non-presidential years and limit the House speaker to four consecutive years in office.

Rep. Walter Jones, D-Pitt, whose subcommittee drafted the measure several weeks ago, said the committee will vote on removing the four-year-term provision today after extensive debate on the matter.

Rep. Roy Cooper, D-Nash, the House sponsor of the package, said longer terms would do little to offset the gubernatorial veto.

"It just gives power to individual legislators in order to stay longer," he said. "I think that if this issue were to appear on the ballot that it would endanger other issues on the ballot."

Tom Gilmore, a former legislator whose Keep the Two-Year Term Committee helped defeat four-year terms in 1982, said public sentiment has not changed since 78 percent of the voters and 98 of 100 counties went against longer terms seven years ago.

Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi and Maryland are the only states that have given their House members four-year terms, Gilmore said. But he said he would support longer terms for the Senate, provided the terms were staggered so some were elected every two years.

Gilmore said voters are unlikely to agree to give up half their voting rights by allowing terms to double.

"I happen to think that campaigning is an essential part of service," Gilmore said. "It's an important way that you communicate."

But Rep. Dave Redwine, D-

Brunswick, said the four-year term will provide a proper balance for the veto. Without it, "you would be subject to executive excess rather than legislative excess," he said.

The demands of running for office have risen astronomically since 1981, Redwine said.

"Unless you're retired or rich or don't mind working for $12,000 a year, you're gonna have an awful tough time running for the General Assembly," he said.

Gilmore disagreed, saying, "This is strictly an incumbents' bill." He said the cost for non-incumbents trying to unseat legislators would increase greatly.

The balance-of-power issue can be addressed without changing legislative terms, Gilmore said. He suggested more confirmation of gubernatorial appointments, oversight committees to keep tabs on executive actions, more single-member legislative districts to reduce turnover, later primaries, limits on campaign spending and restrictions on second primaries.

The veto under consideration would be effective in 1991 if approved by the voters and could be overridden by a three-fifths vote of legislators present in each chamber. It would not apply to local bills, constitutional amendments, redistricting or legislative appointments.

Cooper argued in favor of moving statewide elections, including the governor's race, "out of the shadow of presidential elections and into the sunlight of even, non-presidential years."

He said two-thirds of the states hold their major elections then, while only nine, including North Carolina, hold them in conjunction with presidential elections.

Bolt of lightning shoots out of low-flying clouds during storm near Delafield, Wis., Tuesday

Storms Hit Midwest As Cleanup Gets Under Way In Northeast

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Dozens of stunned homeowners were homeless after rare tornadoes in the Northeast destroyed their property and hundreds more cut up fallen trees and installed new windows. Thousands of homes today remained without power.

Monday's violent storms cut a swath of destruction from northern New Jersey to central Massachusetts. The tornadoes were blamed for the death of a 12-year-old girl in Connecticut who was camping when a tree fell on her tent, and for the injuries to hundreds.

At least 50 homes and 40 businesses were demolished in one Connecticut community, while 24 condominium apartments in a New York town were shattered.

A heat wave in the Midwest, meanwhile, brought temperatures in the 90s for the second day Tuesday, but a "cooling center" was largely ignored in St. Louis, where a second heat-related death was reported this week.

Thunderstorms chased the heat in northern Illinois, but lightning struck three people, injuring two critically. The storms also spawned tornadoes near Kankakee, Ill., and at Indianapolis and Fairland, Ind., where twisters damaged an apartment complex, the National Weather Service said. No injuries were reported.

A storm also closed Chicago's O'Hare International Airport for 40 minutes Tuesday afternoon. Flight operations were back to normal Tuesday night.

Gusts of 75 mph blew a DC-3 airplane into a hanger at Fort Wayne, Ind., the weather service said.

In the Northeast, the weather service was waiting to investigate the destruction before confirming that tornadoes hit the region, but Fort Lee, N.J., police Capt. Thomas Pierson had no doubts.

"When something like that comes through, I call it a tornado, even without Dorothy and Toto," he said. Damage to 18 New Jersey communities was estimated at $2 million.

In Connecticut, the damage was far worse — estimated in the tens of millions of dollars.

Gov. William A. O'Neill viewed the destruction by helicopter and car. He declared a state of emergency Tuesday and asked President Bush for federal assistance.

Hamden, Conn., was hardest-hit. Earthmovers roared into the city to clear a path through fallen trees and utility poles in a 30-square-block area. The governor's motorcade weaved through the streets to avoid the debris.

"It looks like a war zone," said Sen. Christopher J. Dodd, D-Conn., who toured the area with O'Neill. "It looks like a street in London during the blitz."

Police using dogs to sniff through demolished buildings in Hamden, which is about 30 miles south of Hartford, found seven people trapped in three collapsed buildings, said Public Safety Commissioner Lester J. Forst. He said they were taken from the buildings unhurt. State health officials said about 250 people suffered minor injuries.

Firefighters Battle Blazes In Eight Western States

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Firefighters were making headway today against the nation's top-priority wildfire — a blaze that destroyed 37 homes in Boulder Canyon, Colo. But fire bosses braced for lightning-sparked fires, despite the start of the rainy season.

Crews were battling 20 fires over an estimated 157,000 acres in eight states — Arizona, California, Colorado, Montana, Nebraska, New Mexico, Nevada and Utah, according to the federal Boise Interagency Fire Center in Idaho.

Rain helped the 11,000 firefighters working on the lines, but officials issued a "red flag" warning because of thunderstorms that are expected to move from northern Arizona across Nevada, the Sierra Nevada mountains of California, eastern Oregon, Idaho and Montana in the next two days.

Officials at the firefighting coordinating agency fear the storms could add to the more than 70,000 lightning strikes recorded across the West during the past week, mostly in the past two days.

"It's a great chess game here," Reed Jarvis, fire information officer at the center, said late Tuesday. "Now is the time for us to regroup and get ready for the next big push."

In Arizona, a firefighter was struck dead by lightning on Monday, becoming the second fatality of the fire season. A firefighter in California was killed by a falling tree on Sunday.

Rain helped crews contain or control nearly all the fires that burned 50,000 acres in southern Arizona. Officials also expected to bring under control today a 1,700-acre blaze near the Grand Canyon's North Rim tourist lodge, which had threatened a historic hunting cabin used by President Theodore Roosevelt, said Wendell Peacock of the U.S. Bureau of Land Management.

Several other fires were burning out of control in central and northern Arizona, including an 800-acre blaze that threatened the Havasu National Wildlife Refuge, which is home to nesting bald eagles, and a 500-acre fire in the Tonto National Forest.

The nation's biggest fire was in northwestern Nebraska, where officials used planes to dump slurry and water on the 100,000-plus-acre fire while about 150 firefighters used heavy equipment and shovels to dig a fire lane around the blackened timber and grassland.

"We are cautiously optimistic that the worst part of the fire is over," Gov. Kay Orr said at Chadron Airport.

Although the fire was burning out of control on its north side, it was contained on its eastern edge and officials planned to reopen the state park at Fort Robinson, the site where Sioux Chief Crazy Horse was killed, on Friday. The fire threatened the fort briefly after it broke out Saturday.

Nine people have been treated at a hospital for minor injuries since the blaze began, said Jerry Larson, state deputy fire marshal.

Authorities in Colorado blamed the Boulder Canyon fire on carelessly discarded smoking materials but said no charges were planned. The fire about 30 miles northwest of Denver has destroyed 37 homes and damaged 19 other homes and buildings, Boulder County Sheriff Brad Leach said.

The fire was given the highest priority because of the destruction and the fact that scores of other houses and buildings had been threatened.

Cooler temperatures, higher humidity and cloud cover helped about 335 firefighters make headway against the blaze, which has burned 2,000 acres. Officials expect to contain the blaze tonight, Forest Service spokesman Dave Damron said.

Residents were allowed back into the area, but the sheriff's office was advising people against staying overnight.

Elsewhere: — About 400 firefighters and archaeologists gained ground on a 2,600-acre blaze in the Mesa Verde National Park in southwest Colorado. Fire information officer Charles Harnish said that Indian cliff dwellings abandoned in the 13th century were in canyons and not damaged.

Airport Ordeal

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — A 70-year-old woman spent five days in an airport after she was separated from her family as a result of a series of misunderstandings, police said.

Irene Rodriguez wandered around Los Angeles International Airport after she went there July 5 to board a flight to Lincoln, Neb., and found there was no ticket waiting for her.

Police began a criminal investigation, believing that pages in the woman's address book were torn out, that her bank account had been cleaned out and because officers were unable to locate her children.

But her son, Robin Breadwell, 39, and his wife, Emily, reported his mother missing when they arrived in Lincoln after driving there. Their trip was delayed by vehicle troubles, said police Detective Mel Arnold.

"It was just a tragic incident, probably a communications gap," Arnold said. "It all worked out OK, I guess."

Ms. Rodriguez was undernourished and dehydrated after her ordeal. She was hospitalized Sunday after finally seeking help and was listed in good condition Tuesday at the Medical Center in Tarzana.

Breadwell told authorities he reserved a ticket for his mother July 3, but apparently his credit card purchase had not cleared in time for the ticket to be issued, Arnold said.

Ms. Rodriguez said she ate in airport cafeterias until her pocket money ran out. A carry-on bag was reportedly stolen during her ordeal.

County Chamber of Commerce Transportation Board, the Pitt County Mental Health Association Strategic Planning Task Force, and as a member of the Sierra Club since 1979.

In making her announcement this morning, Ms. Fridley said, "As I seek my third term, I feel that we've made some major accomplishments in the last four years. But there's much to do yet. I'm very concerned that we continue with our comprehensive planning."

"I think one of the issues that's going to face us is solid waste management — this will be a joint effort between the city and the county and possibly other municipalities within our region. I feel that I have an excellent experience on the Pitt County Solid Waste Task Force and in my work with establishment of recycling in Greenville.

"I'm very proud of the efforts toward historic preservation made so far.

"I feel that my four years' experience on the council have given me insight and ability to do this work. And I think we need the continuity that comes from having people on the council who are experienced in city government."

In a prepared statement, Zincone said he is "convinced that the future of Greenville depends upon the cooperation of industry, government and the university. Since I know the inner working of each of these entities, I believe I am uniquely qualified to serve during this important time for Greenville."

He said, "It's important for the city government to focus on economics, efficiency and environment."

Zincone served as a member of the Greenville Utilities Commission from 1984 until March, and was commission chairman for one term. He has also served as a member of the Sheppard Memorial Library Board.

Zincone has been involved in Pitt County 2007, a countywide planning effort. He served as president of the Greenville Exchange Club, president of St. Peter's Home School Association and co-founded the Entrepreneurial Council of Eastern North Carolina. He served as a member of the board of directors of the Greenville Noon Rotary Club, as director of the ECU School of Business Bureau of Business Research, and is a member of the North Carolina Alcoholism Research Authority.

Zincone is married to the former Maria Taylor, and he has two daughters, Molly and Alice. He received a bachelor's degree in political science at the University of Richmond and a doctorate in economics from the University of Virginia.

Zincone joined the ECU faculty in 1966.

Heat Socks N.C.

not thirsty," he advises. "The body can lose an enormous amount of fluid perspiring during a hot day."

"If working outdoors, it's important to take frequent breaks, ideally in a cool spot such as in the shade and also avoid alcoholic beverages, which can contribute to dehydration," he said.

Also wear light-colored clothing and a hat when possible, he added.

When involved in outdoor activity, a person should pay particular attention to the physical signs of heat exhaustion, including perceptible changes in consciousness.

"If a person shows signs of heat exhaustion, such as becoming dizzy, staggering, or even having a headache, he or she should get out of the heat immediately and begin taking fluids to cool off," he said.

Dr. Jack Allison, an emergency physician with Pitt County Memorial Hospital, said heat stroke can often times be fatal.

"The body loses the ability to regulate temperature and (body) temperatures can get extremely high — to 106, 108 even 109 degrees," said Allison. "It not only kills the brain cells but can cause organ failure of the liver or kidney."

Allison said that so far this summer, no cases of heat stroke have been seen in the emergency room and only a few cases of heat exhaustion and a few cases of heat cramps.

Sunburns, he said, have presented as much a problem as anything else.

High temperatures pose a major threat to the elderly and children, he said.

"We are most concerned about the elderly and folks leaving children in a car," he said. "The heat mostly affects the very old and the very young. The elderly, because when they have a change in mental status, they're not quite sure what to do or are not as aware."

Allison recommends staying out of the sun and often tells the elderly that don't have air conditioning "to spend a day at the mall, sit down and relax."

"And, of course, drink plenty of fluids, because with increased temperatures there's increased water loss."

An average of at least one, if not two or three cases of heat stroke victims are seen in the emergency room every year, according to Allison, and with the heat index soaring to around 112 degrees on some days, the emergency room is on the look out for heat-related emergencies.

"What we do in the emergency room is use a plant sprayer and put room temperature water on them and put fans on them," Allison said. "We put ice bags under their arms and behind their neck."

Humans are not the only one affected by the intense heat.

Dr. Michael House, a veterinarian with the Animal Hospital of Pitt County, said "The heat presents particular problems to those animals that don't have access to water."

"Food is not nearly as important this time of year," he said.

Large quantities of water, such as in a baby swimming pool or using a sprinkler, are handy in keeping animals cool, House said.

He advises that farmers pay particular attention to animals and farm ventilation controls.

"If we were to have a thunderstorm and the electricity were to go down in livestock farms, (animals) would be in trouble in 30 minutes," House said.

Agricultural Extension Agent P. Allen Hight said plants are faring better than the animals now.

"There are certainly problems for the guy who raises chickens or pigs," said Hight. "Most are grown in confinement houses when farmers run fans to keep temperatures down. There have been a lot of deaths of poultry animals, especially where the houses aren't well ventilated."

The only crop really hurt so far is corn, Hight said.

"Right now, corn is in the stage of pollination," he said. "Heat reduces pollination, which means reduced yield on the earlier corn."

Other crops, such as tobacco, peanuts, or beans won't be affected too much by the heat, according to Hight.

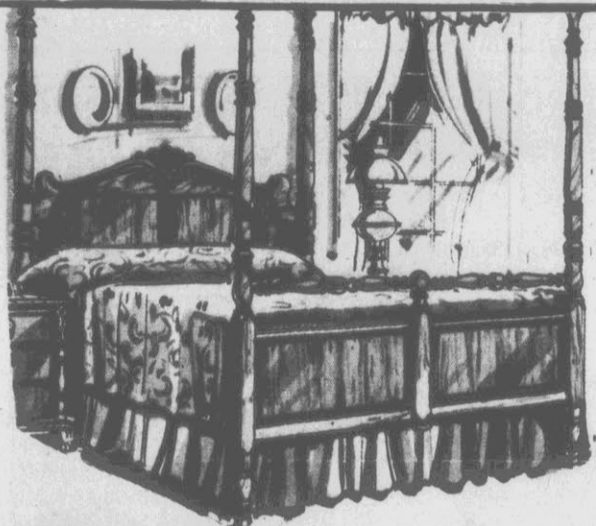

"Plants are in a stage where we're not going to lose all our crops, in fact the heat is probably helping in cotton," Hight said. "Cotton is late this year so we need to use every day of the growing season. Hot weather will help push it into maturity."

"There are some dry areas, such as Bethel, where farmers are having to irrigate already, which is one negative effect of the heat," Hight said.

Board Of Trade Tries To Break Up Soybean Caper

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — The Chicago Board of Trade moved to break up an attempt to corner the soybean market, which one analyst called the "the biggest market play" since the Hunt brothers tried to corner the silver market a decade ago.

The exchange's board of directors on Tuesday issued an emergency order requiring the liquidation of large positions in its July soybean futures contract to prevent a single large holder from gaining control over the price of the commodity.

The liquidation was to begin at the opening of the soybean market today. Analysts said the order likely would cause a sharp drop in the July contract's price.

The target of the exchange's order was Ferruzzi SPA, a huge Italian agricultural and financial firm that is one of the world's biggest soybean processors, the Chicago Sun-Times reported today. The newspaper cited unidentified soybean analysts and trading sources.

A Ferruzzi official at the company's U.S. office in Belle Chasse, La., said he had seen the exchange's order but would not elaborate.

"We're still deciding what we're going to say," he said. "We will be forthcoming with a comment."

The Sun-Times reported sources as saying that the CBOT action stemmed in part from complaints by Archer-Daniels-Midland, the Decatur-based agribusiness giant. An ADM spokesman had no comment.

Board of Trade spokesmen would not identify the parties involved but confirmed the emergency order was designed to avert the crisis that would occur if there weren't enough soybeans available to satisfy the contracts.

"I don't think they would have called it an emergency if that situation didn't already exist," said spokesman Mark Prout.

The exchange ordered all traders holding commitments to buy or sell more than 3 million bushels of soybeans for delivery this month to reduce those positions by at least 20 percent each trading day through July 20, when the July contract expires.

The emergency resolution said no trader may control more than 3 million bushels of July soybeans at the close of trading next Tuesday, and no trader may control more than 1 million bushels by the contract's expiration two days later.

"It's probably the biggest story since Bunker Hunt tried to squeeze silver," said William Biedermann, director of research with Allendale Inc., a Chicago-area futures brokerage. "It's the biggest market play since the Hunts."

Biedermann said the situation stemmed from a large foreign-based grain company's accumulation during the past 18 months of as much as 30 million bushels of soybeans — enough to control the market.

Futures are binding contracts to deliver or take delivery of a set amount of a commodity at an agreed-upon price at a later date. A typical corner occurs when a trader holding a large number of contracts to take delivery also owns so much of the commodity that those on the other side cannot acquire enough to honor their delivery commitments.

The artificial supply squeeze causes the price of the commodity to soar until the trader working the corner sells out at a huge profit.

In the most famous attempt of recent years, the federal Commodity Futures Trading Commission said then-billionaire brothers Nelson Bunker and William Herbert Hunt tried to control the world silver market in 1979 and 1980.

The Hunts lost an estimated $1.3 billion when the silver price collapsed in March 1980, and the two filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection from creditors last year.

The price of soybeans for July delivery actually fell sharply in trading Monday and Tuesday on the Chicago Board of Trade, Biedermann said the type of corner attempted hinged on the July contract's high price relative to the contract for September delivery.

July soybeans settled Tuesday at $7.26 a bushel, compared with $6.64 for September delivery, a difference of 62 cents a bushel or $3,100 per 5,000-bushel contract.

NRA Takes Look At Bush's Stance

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Some National Rifle Association members are signing petitions to oust President Bush from the organization because of his decision to ban imports of semiautomatic assault rifles.

But the White House says Bush, who last Friday permanently banned imports of 43 styles of the weapons, has no intention of resigning his lifetime NRA membership.

"The president's a good, solid member of the NRA, always has been, always will be," spokesman B. Jay Cooper said Tuesday. "We've done nothing that goes against the Second Amendment," which ensures the right of citizens to keep and bear arms.

Wayne LaPierre, executive director of the NRA Institute for Legislative Action, said "a lot of people are very upset about this" because many voted for Bush because of his opposition to gun control laws.

"President Bush ran on a 'no more federal gun control' pledge," LaPierre said. "People believed that when they heard candidate Bush say that. The pledge couldn't have been any clearer."

The petition drive "is not something the organization is undertaking," said LaPierre. But, he said, "The sentiment is certainly understandable ... There is an awful lot of disillusionment around the country."

Anthony J. Hilder, a radio talk-show host in Anchorage who is spearheading the petition drive in Alaska, said he gathered 400 signatures over the weekend at a gun show there.

Similar petition drives are under way in 22 other states and the District of Columbia, Hilder said.

The ban was prompted by the increasing popularity of high-powered assault weapons among drug dealers and the slaying of five children in a Stockton, Calif., schoolyard in January by a man wielding an AK-47.

The Bush administration Friday banned imports of 43 styles of semiautomatic assault-style weapons.

Kemp Says HUD Scandal Has Cost Agency $2 Billion

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Housing Secretary Jack Kemp says abuses and mismanagement at his department have been stopped but agrees with an estimate putting the cost of the scandal at $2 billion.

The losses to the government came from a handful of programs in the Department of Housing and Urban Development, which is under investigation by Congress, the Justice Department and the agency's own inspector general.

Kemp agreed with the estimate during his testimony Tuesday before the House Government Operations subcommittee on housing and employment. Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., based his estimate on potential losses from bad loans, inflated costs passed along to the government and outright theft that has occurred at HUD.

"It's a ballpark figure," Kemp said. "I think $6 billion would be too high, $1 billion would be too low."

Kemp was to testify about the scandal today before the House Banking subcommittee on housing.

"We are getting a handle on this," Kemp said Tuesday. "We have stopped the hemorrhaging."

Kemp made clear he held his predecessors responsible for the mess he found, although he did not mention former Housing Secretary Samuel Pierce Jr. or former President Ronald Reagan by name.

"Frankly, any administration has to be held accountable and is accountable to the American people and to the pages of the history books for how programs are run during their stewardship," Kemp said. "I think that speaks volumes about previous administrations — plural." The department is under investigation for influence peddling, in which well-known Republicans or former HUD employees used their connections to get government funds for specific housing projects.

In addition, the Justice Department is investigating the theft of as much as $20 million by private closing agents who sold HUD property and kept the money, and other investigations are focusing on loan programs in which questionable deals were made leading to high default rates.

Kemp, who was a congressman from New York before being appointed HUD secretary by President Bush, got a warm reception from his former House colleagues, who were just as eager to praise his efforts to clean up the department as they were to blame his predecessors for fouling it up.

As they groped for ways to express themselves, the metaphors got thick.

Rep. Tom Lantos, D-Calif., referred to Kemp's former career in the American Football League, calling him the "quarterback" at HUD who has been "blitzed" by the scandals but nevertheless is not one to "punt."

Rep. Marge Roukema, R-N.J., called HUD "Humpty Dumpty," although she said she thought it could be put back together again.

Congressman Says Agent Orange Study Was Rigged, Or Bungled

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A study on exposure to Agent Orange, the toxic defoliant used in Vietnam, may have been designed by the government to fail, a congressman charges.

Rep. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., also said Tuesday the decision two years ago to cancel the massive study by the Centers for Disease Control has wrongfully put the lid on other government research.

"The federal government has effectively used the CDC study to stifle any attempts to link Agent Orange to health effects," Weiss said at a hearing of his Government Operations subcommittee on human resources and intergovernmental relations. "CDC has had the last word on Agent Orange."

"Either it was a politically rigged operation or it was a monumentally bungled operation," Weiss said.

Dr. Vernon N. Houk of the CDC said the study was abandoned because the CDC couldn't find the right data to develop a valid method to study the health effects of the defoliant.

But several other scientists, including former CDC researcher Dr. Dennis M. Smith, testified that the needed data, including detailed troop movement, were available from the Defense Department's Environmental Study Group.

Houk, chairman of a scientific panel of the White House Agent Orange Working Group, denied suggestions by Weiss that the White House called the shots on the study.

"The science panel was not considered and is not considered and has never functioned as a political entity," he said.

Weiss said CDC conducted another study finding a low sperm count and malformed sperm among Vietnam veterans. As a result of the earlier study, CDC dismissed any link between those findings and Agent Orange because "we found that few Army ground troops were heavily exposed to dioxin-containing herbicides," Weiss said, quoting the report.

Many Vietnam veterans have said they have developed cancer and that their children have a high incidence of birth defects because of Agent Orange, which was used to clear dense jungle during the war.

There are 34,000 veterans seeking government benefits as a result of disabilities they say were caused by Agent Orange. The active ingredient of Agent Orange is dioxin, a cancer-causing chemical.

The Veterans Affairs Department, formerly the Veterans Administration, said in May it would take another look at those cases.

Veterans exposed to Agent Orange also have sued the seven chemical companies that made the herbicide. The suit was settled, and an Agent Orange fund was created to pay $180 million in damages. Caretakers for the fund say $12 million has been distributed to 6,039 veterans and 13 organizations so far.

Chrysler Agrees To Boost Its Jobs For Minorities, Women

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DETROIT — Chrysler Corp. has joined the nation's top two automakers in pledging to boost opportunities for minorities and women in salaried positions.

Tuesday's "fair share" pledge with the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People commits the No. 3 automaker to doubling the number of women and minorities in management roles to 20 percent, said Anthony St. John, Chrysler's vice president for human resources.

NAACP Executive Director Benjamin Hooks said Chrysler already was doing many of the things called for in the program.

"The Big Three automobile companies have been the most consistent supporters of the black community," Hooks said.

Hooks and Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca signed the agreement on the third day of the annual convention of the nation's oldest and largest civil rights organization.

Vice President Dan Quayle was scheduled to address the group today.

Chrysler became the nation's 62nd company and the last of the Big Three automakers to join the program.

Generally, companies signing the agreement make commitments to expand access of blacks to entry- and mid-level jobs, increase the number of black-owned suppliers and appoint blacks to boards of directors.

Pollution On The Tar

saw the same materials, only more of it.

"We saw condoms, panty liners — anything you would flush down a toilet — festooned in the trees and thrown on the shore," McNaught said. He also said he saw "clumps of what was obviously human waste."

Along with the flow of domestic waste, the state estimates that Rocky Mount's treatment plant takes in nearly 30 percent of its waste water from industrial sites.

Rocky Mount City Manager William Batchelor said the amount of waste bypassed by the plant was "negligible" compared to the flow of the river during heavy rains, and the majority of the bypass was only storm water.

"There is so much flow in the Tar River in the winter that you don't hardly notice what we're putting into it."

Paul Blount, Rocky Mount's water resources director, said all wastewater entering the facility goes through the first two stages of treatment, screening and chlorination, before being dumped into the river. He said he has never seen any sanitary napkins in the outfall and they should be caught by the screens.

"It's unfortunate and it's unsightly," Blount said about the waste on the river banks.

Batchelor said the state monitors and approves the dumpings by Rocky Mount, but he said other cities like Greenville allow wastewater to overflow during heavy rains without any monitoring or cleaning.

Blount said the bypasses are a necessary part of operations, and it is safer to bypass wastewater with at least some treatment. The city has "no alternative than letting it back up into the streets of Rocky Mount and into the storm sewers which flow into the river untreated."

Blount said the waste dumped into the river poses no threat to the fish or people downstream.

The N.C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, the department charged with regulating and enforcing environmental standards, regularly approves the bypasses by Rocky Mount, according to NRCD records.

Files for Rocky Mount's Tar River treatment plant at the Raleigh regional office of DEM take up nearly half of a file drawer. The papers record a history of abuses to the river.

Because of the problems at the plant, the Environmental Protection Agency demanded the state enter into a judicial agreement with Rocky Mount by July 1, 1987.

The agreement, entered into in September, outlined a timetable for completed renovations to the treatment plant by April 30, 1991. Batchelor said the renovations will allow the five-year-old plant on N.C. 97 to treat more waste coming into the plant and meet tighter restrictions on ammonium nitrate.

The federal government, through nearly $3 million in EPA grants, is funding much of the renovations at Rocky Mount.

The agreement also required Rocky Mount to report all bypasses at the plant and called for DEM, a division of NRCD, to review and grant approval for the bypasses.

Since September 1987, the Tar River treatment plant has dumped more than 1 billion gallons of sewage into the Tar River, the DEM records state.

William Kreutzberger, DEM regional water quality supervisor, said he was not surprised that solid waste escaped the plants screens. He also said, "I can't say that chlorine is going to be completely adequate in treating that waste."

NRCD recently served Rocky Mount with a notice of violation for operation and maintenance problems — not for the dumping. Since entering into the judicial order, DEM has cited the plant for only two other violations.

The Daily Reflector/Shannon Wolfe

Chlorinated wastewater passes into the Tar River through a bypass pipe built into the Rocky Mount treatment plant

Both citations were notices of non-compliance for operations violations.

Notices of non-compliance are the first step in penalties against polluters and carry no fine or enforcement action.

Not until after a joint inspection by DEM and EPA in April 1987 did the state agency issue Rocky Mount a Notice of Violation — the second level of enforcement against polluters.

The inspection cited "enormous amounts of treated and untreated domestic waste and coarse solids discharged upon land and woodlands on both sides of the effluent outfall to Tar River."

The inspection report by Susan

Rollins of the EPA and Jim Pounds of DEM also noted "domestic wastewater solids present on right downstream bank of Tar River approximately one-half mile below the outfall."

The report further stated: "The bypass is complete with screening, however disinfection capabilities are non-existent. Usage of this system without proper disinfection imposes potential health hazard to the surrounding populace."

A second joint inspection of the facility in May drew the most recent notice of violation.

Batchelor said the judicial order requires the elimination of the bypass by June 1991, but the renovations to the treatment facility will not necessarily eliminate the dumping. The city could request an extension of bypass operations.

"We hope by '91 ... that we will not have to bypass any more," Batchelor said.

"Our position has been that there is to be no more bypass when the construction is complete," Kreutzberger said.

But the DEM supervisor said the state may consider increasing the plant's effluent limits or imposing two sets of effluent limits on the Rocky Mount facility. The varying increased limits under the second option would go into affect during operations under high-water periods.

The Pamlico-Tar River Foundation and the Environmental Defense Fund plan to release a report on all 21 treatment plants in the river basin later this month. McNaught said "Rocky Mount is far and away the number one source of all point source pollutants going into the river."

But Rocky Mount is not alone in polluting the waters. DEM files reveal similar abuses by other municipal facilities along the river.

Thursday's article will take a look at wastewater treatment facilities at Tarboro and Oxford, two other municipalities located on the Tar River.

Woman Pleads Guilty In Whittington Case

Ms. Stevens was indicted in April on 24 counts of grand theft, four counts of forgery, one count of passing a forged check, one count of kidnapping and one count of conspiring with Whittington, the founder of Fountain of Life Inc., ministries.

Whittington has vigorously denied that he or his ministry has been a party to any fraud or theft and he has not been indicted.

Other unindicted co-conspirators include: Ritley Ferguson, a minister who sometimes worked with Fountain of Life; Daniel Atwood, a Florida minister now serving a prison sentence in Pennsylvania for fraud, grand theft and perjury, and Claudette Collier, a former Atwood assistant.

In the plea arrangement, Thullberry said Ms. Stevens agreed to provide prosecutors with a sworn statement concerning the involvement of the co-conspirators and to undergo a polygraph test to verify the truthfulness of the statements.

She also agreed to testify in court for the state at a later date, he said.

None of the four alleged co-conspirators have been indicted, Thullberry said, but the investigation into Whittington and others is continuing.

"There is a continuing investigation of the matter," Thullberry said.

Whittington said Tuesday he has never been involved in any plot to steal.

"We don't know anything about any conspiracy or grand theft," Whittington said. "The money that she (the alleged victim Valeria Lust) gave, ... Mrs. Lust gave through her account here at First Citizen's Bank (in Greenville). I don't know anything that would incriminate me or involve me in it."

"We used the money for the work of the Lord, so we just feel like this is an effort to discredit the ministry ... If there's anything been done wrong, it's unbeknownst to me."

Mrs. Lust's donations were used to pay postal and broadcast bills for his televised ministry, which is seen in 250 cities each week, he said.

Though Ms. Stevens' prison term was agreed upon in the plea arrangement, Durrance delayed the formal sentencing until probation officials complete a presentencing investigation, Thullberry said. It will probably take over a month, he said, and investigators will examine such issues as what conditions of probation would be appropriate.

Under the plea arrangement, which was approved by the 71-year-old Mrs. Lust of Lakeland, Fla., Ms. Stevens will not have to make restitution for the money she is alleged to have swindled. Ms. Stevens has agreed to return any stolen property in her possession or under her control to Mrs. Lust.

The charges allege Ms. Stevens was hired as a live-in nurse for Mrs. Lust and drugged the woman with prescription medication to sedate her. Then she was able to obtain Mrs. Lust's signature on the checks to cash, the charges allege. She also allegedly forged a document to gain power of attorney over Mrs. Lust's estate.

Ms. Stevens allegedly gained control of a Florida house owned by Mrs. Lust and donated it to Whittington's ministry along with $700,000 she had stolen from late 1986 to early 1988, investigators said.

Though Whittington acknowledged that Mrs. Lust donated about $700,000 in the form of personal checks to his ministry, he said his attorneys are confident she signed the checks. He said his ministry also voluntarily returned the house to Mrs. Lust.

Whittington and Atwood were also named last year as defendants along with Ms. Stevens in a civil suit in which Mrs. Lust is seeking full restitution.

Whittington has said he does not know why Mrs. Lust changed her mind and asked for the donations to be returned. Mrs. Lust became familiar with his ministry through televised shows in Florida, he said, while Ms. Stevens attended Fountain of Life crusades in Florida for seven to eight years.

If Ms. Stevens makes truthful statements to authorities, there is nothing she can say to damage his ministry, Whittington said.

"If she makes false statements, that's another thing. I can't control what she says. But I've never known of anything out of Mrs. Stevens that was not up and above board," he said.

Jackson's Feats Key Win Two-Sport Star Leads American League To 5-3 Win

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Somewhere, there may be a baseball player who can hit a ball farther and run faster than Bo Jackson.

If there is, though, he sure wasn't at Anaheim Stadium Tuesday night for the All-Star Game.

Jackson drove in two runs, one with a 448-foot homer, stole a base and made a nifty running catch.

Jackson's heroics helped the American League and Nolan Ryan beat the National League 5-3. It is the first time since 1957-1958 that the AL has won consecutive All-Star Games.

"He's exciting," NL manager Tommy Lasorda said of Jackson, the game's MVP. "When the bat hit the ball on his homer, it sounded like he hit a golf ball. He's awesome."

Awesome was only one adjective used to describe Jackson's dominant performance in the 60th All-Star Game.

The game started at 5:42 PDT and the twilight was supposed to bother the batters. But they seemed to see things just fine.

The NL took a 2-0 lead in the top of the first off Dave Stewart and then it was time for the Bo Show.

Jackson hit Rick Reuschel's second pitch of the game into the batter's eye in center field, 448 feet away.

"I rarely turn and watch a home run," Reuschel said. "There was only one other time — and that was in spring training — when I watched because I was so sure it was going out."

Center fielder Eric Davis was watching, too.

"I really thought I might have a chance for it," Davis said. "I saw it climb and then there was nothing for me to do but watch it."

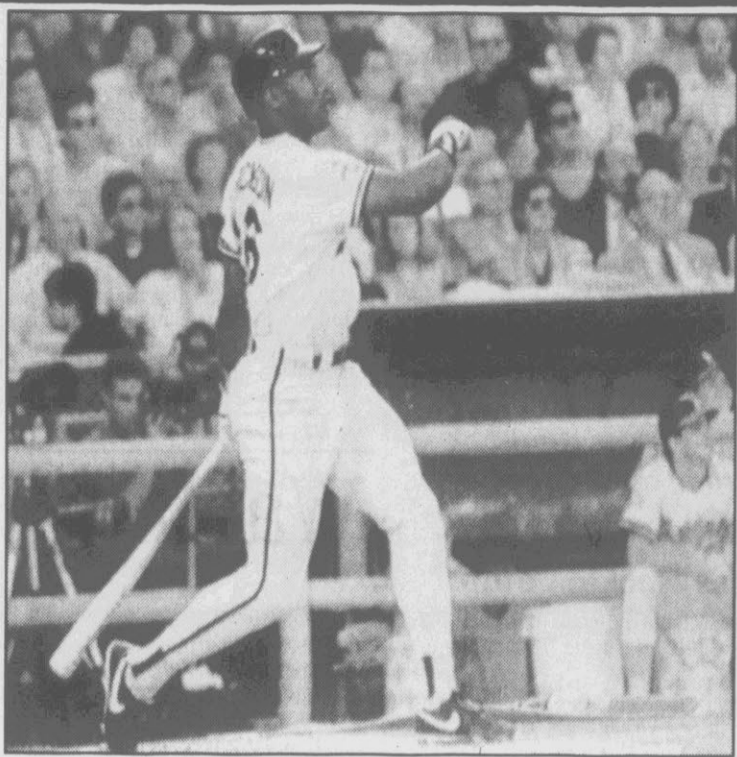

Reuschel might not have wanted to watch what happened next, though.

Wade Boggs homered to left-center field on a 3-2 pitch.

It was the first time in All-Star history that a team led off with consecutive homers and only the fourth time overall.

"Bo is scary," Boggs, a five-time batting champi-

Jackson's Legend Continues To Grow

By Hal Bock

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Choose your adjective for Bo Jackson. They all fit very nicely.

Tommy Lasorda liked awesome. Wade Boggs picked phenomenal. But Kirby Puckett might have had the best idea, even if he did need a couple of paragraphs to do the job.

"He is a human highlight film, that's what he is," Puckett said after Jackson lit up Tuesday night's All-Star Game with an MVP performance.

That didn't seem to be stretching things after Bo drilled a 448-foot home run on the second pitch he saw leading off for the AL against Rick Reuschel.

"He's awesome," Lasorda said. "When the bat hit the ball on that homer, it sounded like a golf ball."

It even caught the attention of the usually stoical Reuschel. "I rarely turn and watch a home run," he said.

This one, he watched.

"It was so high," Puckett said, a note of wonder in his voice. "He hits them so high."

California manager Doug Rader, who works here during the regular season, said Bo's homer — into a section of the bleachers blacked out to give the hitters a better background — was not exactly uncharted territory.

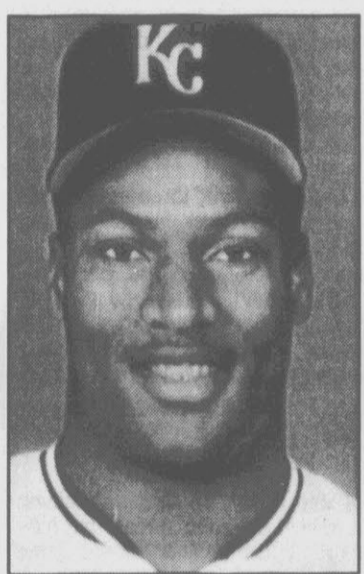

"It was unusual, though," he said. "You don't see a whole lot hit up there."

"It was a blast," said Boggs, who followed Jackson's shot with one of his own. "When he hit it, I thought, 'Oh, my gosh.' It was a sight to see. After that, I'd be let down if I had hit a dribbler up the middle."

Boggs prevented any embarrassment with a legitimate homer of his own, a garden variety shot that was impressive even if it lacked Jacksonian dimensions. The back-to-back homers erased a 2-0 deficit and ignited a 5-3 victory for the AL.

Puckett was waiting on deck to hit third for the AL. "I thought, 'I've

Robinson Might Quit

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BALTIMORE — Orioles manager Frank Robinson is refusing to dismiss the possibility that he will resign as a result of his frustration with American League umpires.

Robinson said he has set no timetable for deciding whether he will return as manager of the East Division leaders when the season resumes on Thursday.

"It doesn't have to be decided before then," he said. "It'll sit."

An unnamed club source indicated it is highly doubtful Robinson will quit, but said Robinson's anger is genuine. The (Baltimore) Evening Sun reported Tuesday.

"If I don't bring some attention to it, it'll continue to go on and on," Robinson said from his home in Los Angeles. "All I'm asking is to be able to do my job without being harassed, without being threatened, without being lied to. All I want to do is be treated like all other managers when I have something to say."

"I want to manage the ballclub. If I can't manage the way I'm trying to, I might have to let someone else do it. It's not fair to the ballclub. I'm not going to sit on my hands. Every time I say something to umpires, there's a chance I will get thrown out of a ballgame."

Robinson was supported by club president Larry Lucchino and general manager Roland Hemond, both of whom were in Anaheim for Tuesday's All-Star Game. The three talked for 20 minutes in a conference call Monday, and were expected to meet Tuesday.

Lucchino spoke with AL president Bobby Brown. Brown said he is willing to speak with Robinson, but said he does not believe the umpires are treating Robinson unfairly.

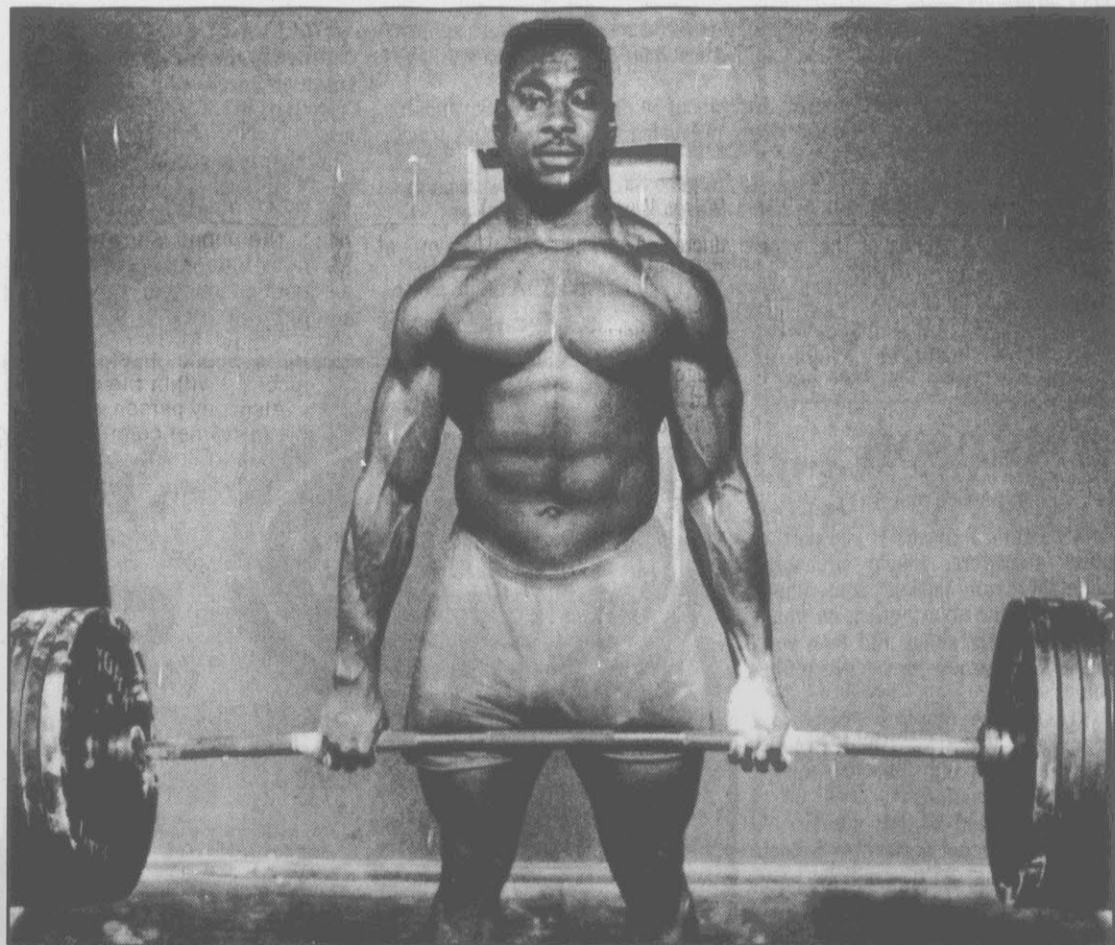

"Since Frank has started managing again, the number of times he has been ejected has been minimal," Brown said. Robinson has been ejected twice since becoming Orioles manager in April of 1988, and only once this season.

"I don't think it's unusual for a manager from time to time to feel paranoid about umpires. Frank's done a great job. We haven't had any complaints," Brown said.

Robinson lost his latest battle when AL supervisor of umpires Marty Springstead labeled "futile" his protest of Sunday's 7-2 loss to the Milwaukee Brewers. Springstead spoke with umpire John Shulock, who ruled interference and called a double play after Phil Bradley collided at second base with the Brewers' Jim Gantner.

Told that Robinson said he was being treated unfairly by umpires, Springstead said, "That's totally ridiculous. We don't single anybody out. How can we single him out when

Robert Washington deadlifts 675 pounds in preparation for the Senior Nationals

Washington Aiming Powerlifter Set For National Meet

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Robert Washington is hoping for a lucky run this weekend in Las Vegas, but his game isn't black jack, it's powerlifting of the highest stakes at the Senior National Meet which opens Friday.

A former East Carolina football standout, Washington is fresh off a win in June at the United States Powerlifting North Carolina State Championships in Charlotte. He was first in the 220-pound division at the meet and was named outstanding lifter of the event.

Washington is seeded second in his weight class for the Las Vegas meet. He holds the North Carolina state deadlift record of 815 pounds and is aiming toward breaking the world record of 837 pounds this weekend.

The winner of this meet goes on to the World Championships later this year in Tokyo.

"He's very capable," said Mike Gentry, former ECU strength coach who is now at Virginia Tech. "I think he can do it. You have to have a strong mind to be a great lifter. You can't be intimidated by big weights."

"Robert is one of the very elite that I've had the opportunity to work with. I wish we had some more like him up here."

Some people lift weights as a hobby, to stay in shape or to control their weight. But for Washington, it's a profession. He works in relative anonymity sweating through long hours at the Spa in Greenville. Five or six days a week, he trains, trying to add more strength to his 5-11, 220-pound frame.

Washington will be the first to say that powerlifting isn't the most lucrative sport around. There are no $100,000 signing bonuses, no six-figure, no-cut contracts.

In fact, just lining up sponsors to back his travel is a test of strength all its own. It's a challenge he faces each time he enters a meet.

Eagles Facing A Contract Quandary

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHILADELPHIA — Wide receiver Mike Quick, who is recognized for catching the "bomb," has thrown one at the Philadelphia Eagles.

According to Eagles president Harry Gamble, Quick's agent, Jim Solano, has told the club that the wide receiver wants to be the highest paid player on the club.

"To date we have received one letter from his agent requesting that he be the highest-paid Eagle," Gamble said.

"Later, in face-to-face talks with George Azar (a Gamble assistant), he requested to wait until the Reggie White contract situation is resolved before further discussing Mike's negotiations."

Obviously, Solano can't determine what it will take to make Quick, a former North Carolina State standout, the highest paid Philadelphia player until White signs.

Both players are in protracted contract negotiations, which appear to be going nowhere.

White, who led the NFL in sacks for the second straight year and made 133 tackles, hasn't taken part in Coach Buddy Ryan's pre-training camp workouts. Ryan says White has been excused for a few days for personal reasons.

White said he doesn't want to take part in workouts until the Eagles take out a temporary insurance policy for up to $1.5 million, the anticipated annual value of his new contract.

"Reggie wants to be at practice. But he's concerned whether he's insured properly and that's understandable," Gamble said. He added that it would be bad business to take out temporary insurance based on that amount because it would put the team at a disadvantage at the negotiating table.

Solano confirmed Tuesday that he has told the Eagles that Quick, a five-time Pro Bowl selection, wants to be the highest-paid player on the team. Quarterback Randall Cunningham currently is the salary leader at $1.4 million per year.

Solano was upset by Gamble's

Martin Won't Play For UNC In '89

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHAPEL HILL — Kennard Martin, last season's leading rusher in the Atlantic Coast Conference, will not play on the North Carolina football squad this season, Tar Heel coach Mack Brown said.

"Kennard Martin will not play football at the University of North Carolina this season for continued academic inconsistencies," Brown said in a statement. "He will remain on scholarship this fall and his status will again be reviewed at the conclusion of the fall semester."

Martin was suspended from the team by Brown in April for academic reasons. Although Brown said Martin is on schedule to be eligible this season, he said he decided to continue the suspension.

If Martin returns after this season, he will have one year of eligibility left. He was redshirted in 1986.

Martin, a 5-foot-10, 200-pound junior from Winston-Salem, ran for 1,146 yards in 1988 and tied for the ACC lead in touchdowns with 11. He capped his season with a 291-yard effort against Duke in the season's final game.

Martin's suspension on April 27 occurred two days after he was charged with felonious breaking and entering and the larceny of nine textbooks from a UNC dormitory room. An Orange County grand jury on May 30 refused to indict Martin.

Brown said last month that Martin could play this fall if he showed the necessary academic improvements, which included being more regular and prompt in attendance to team meetings and study hall.

The News and Observer of Raleigh reported that Martin had not enrolled for the second session of summer school and that Brown and his staff were concerned about Martin's failure to continue in summer school after he had attended the first session.

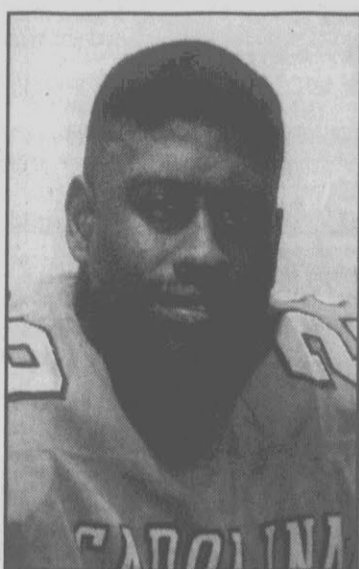

Brown, in an interview in May with The News and Observer, said Martin's absences from class and mandatory study halls were as significant as the police charges in the player's removal from the team.

North Carolina is now left with only one experienced player, senior Aaron Staples, at tailback. Staples had six carries last year for 25 yards.

Torin Dorn, who split time with Martin at tailback last year, was shifted to corner in the spring and is expected to remain on defense.

Sanders Will Skip Falcons Rookie Camp

ATLANTA (AP) — Deion Sanders, the Atlanta Falcons' unsigned No. 1 draft pick, has decided to skip the Atlanta Falcons' rookie training camp to concentrate on baseball, his agent says.

The agent, Steve Zucker, said the Falcons and Sanders are still far apart in contract negotiations. The cornerback out of Florida State has decided not to attend rookie camp beginning July 23.

"He figured it will be such a long wait, he decided to stay with baseball, and I think it's the right decision," Zucker said. "It's going to be a long wait."

Sanders, playing for the New York Yankees AAA team in Columbus, Ohio, has had some problems on the diamond of late, Zucker said. Sanders was benched for not running out grounders and was fined for missing team meetings and for being late to a game, Zucker said.

Sanders has asked the Yankees to demote him to the AA team in Albany, N.Y., so he can get more playing time, Zucker said.

"He wants to go to Albany — he's got lots of good friends there," Zucker said.

On the field, Sanders is hitting .239 with two homers and three stolen bases in 19 games. The Clippers had three days off this week for the All-Star break, and Sanders could be sent to Albany later in the week.

As for the Falcons, no negotiating sessions with Sanders are scheduled, said Chief Financial Officer Jim Hay. Hay said the team has enough to do with 15 unsigned veterans, including guard Bill Fralic.

Fralic signed a four-year, $2.35 million contract when he was picked No. 1 in 1985, including an annuity that will pay Fralic $150,000 a year for 30 years.

Prep Gambling Ring Uncovered

FLORENCE, Ala. (AP) — Authorities said a north Alabama gambling operation apparently was so determined to beat the point spread that high school coaches and others involved in prep sports events altered game clocks and yardsticks to fix scores.

The possibility of game-fixing at the high school level was raised as investigators sorted through evidence Tuesday following a search of 11 homes and businesses, including the houses of two former high school coaches and a police investigator.

The investigator, Muscle Shoals Police Lt. Tom Berryman, was placed on administrative leave for 30 days Tuesday by Police Commissioner John Conn.

There were no immediate arrests, and Florence Police Chief Rick Thompson said no current athletes were involved in the searches that took place Monday night in seven north Alabama cities, with cash, property and gambling records confiscated.

But the home of a former Colbert County High School football player, Carl Matthew Keenum, was searched, and Thompson said there are allegations that prep games were fixed and that coaches were involved.

"Nothing is more disheartening and discouraging ... as the allegations brought forth during this investigation that high school coaches and officials are manipulating the outcome of high school sporting events to cover the point spread given by odds makers," Thompson said.

"In turn, these so-called coaches and officials have been tampering with the lives and future careers of our high school athletes," he said.

FBI Special Agent Allen Whitaker of Birmingham said investigators searched the homes of former Coffee High School assistant coaches Ganum Smith and William Floyd "Brub" Hamilton, as well as several others.

Smith, who resigned at the end of the 1988-89 school year, has an unpublished telephone number. Hamilton, a former star running back at the University of North Alabama and now a driver's education instructor at Bradshaw High School, last coached football at Coffee High about 1980. He declined comment Tuesday.

Jim Hartley, head football coach at Coffee, said he was unaware of any investigation into gambling in the Shoals area of north Alabama until he heard about Monday's raids. He said he had no reason to believe any games had been influenced by gamblers.

Thompson, however, said, "We feel like this is not just gambling on the local level. It's a multi-state operation, and we feel like we can connect it to organized crime."

"Illegal gambling and the crimes connected to it — drugs, assaults and even attempted murder — have become a serious problem in our area," he said.

The searches were conducted by more than 100 federal, state and local investigators. In Athens, upwards of $100,000 in cash was seized at a clothing store, Smith's Menswear, and marijuana and cocaine were seized at Keenum's residence in Sheffield, authorities said. Agents said carloads of gambling records were seized as evidence at various locations.

Whitaker said the alleged gambling operations involved "the full spectrum of sports — football, basketball, baseball."

disclosure of his demand for Quick.

"I do not want to negotiate through the press," Solano said. "I don't think it was right for the Eagles to discuss our proposals."

Quick, who missed eight games last year with a broken left leg, said he may stay out of camp while salary negotiations continue.

"I've been around long enough to see how things are handled — that is negotiating a new contract or trying to renegotiate," Quick said Tuesday before a workout.

Quick had troubles negotiating his last contract, in 1986, and said he wasn't surprised at this year's difficulties. That contract, a three-year deal worth $700,000 per year, expired after last season.

"Looking back at that experience, and seeing what happened, I realistically don't think I'll be there" when camp opens, Quick said.

Gamble wouldn't predict whether his two stars would show up.

"To say what the odds are is always a difficult thing," he said. "Sometimes the ones you think will be the most difficult get done a little more quickly. And some that you think should go quickly take a bit more time."

There have been recurring rumors that Quick might be traded. The Eagles always have denied the reports.

LeMond Passes First Test

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOULOUSE, France — Greg LeMond, who missed the last two Tours de France after winning in 1986, passed the first test of this year's classic cycling race.

Despite losing the leader's yellow jersey, coming out of the two stages of the Pyrenees in second place was a success for LeMond, the only American to win the event.

He had to give up the yellow jersey on Tuesday to Laurent Fignon of France, the 1983 and 1984 winner. Fignon moved slightly ahead when he pulled away from LeMond on the final climb of the four hills in the 10th stage that went from Caunterets to Superbagneres.

Since last Thursday, LeMond tenaciously held onto the jersey, even after the first stage in the Pyrenees where many, including LeMond, doubted that he would stay ahead.

Finally, Fignon beat LeMond by 12 seconds on the last climb that ended more than a mile above sea level.

"On the last hill, I decided to attack," Fignon said. "I didn't feel good until that last climb. In the other three, I had trouble."

Robert Millar of Britain won Tuesday's stage, edging Pedro Delgado, last year's winner. Charly Mottet of France was third.

LeMond finished in ninth place, 12 seconds behind Fignon, who was seventh, and three behind another American, Andy Hampsten.

Hampsten now is in fifth place overall, 5:14 behind Fignon.

LeMond had been concerned about the mountain stages because he missed the last two Tours. He had been a victim of a hunting accident in 1987 and had an emergency appendectomy and knee and shin problems since.

He faltered badly in the mountains in the Tour of Italy earlier this year, but finished strongly with a second in the final individual time trial there.

In the next few days, the Tour goes through southern French towns like Marseille and Montpellier as the race continues its 2,020-mile counterclockwise journey around France, ending July 23 in Paris.

Stephen Roche of Ireland, the 1987 winner, was forced to drop out with a thigh injury before the start of Tuesday's stage.

Delgado has made a miraculous climb through the standings after starting the first stage in last place because he arrived almost three minutes late in the prologue. He is now third, 2:53 behind Fignon, after losing more than seven minutes to him in the first two days.

Washington Aiming Toward Title ...

"There are not many people around here that want to sponsor (a lifter)," Washington said. "It's like now or never (for me). I'm going to keep lifting, (but) about the money I'll have to play it by ear."

Washington got heavily involved in powerlifting after his playing days ended, and currently holds six North Carolina and Virginia state records.

"We had talked about it," Gentry said. "We always saw the potential that he would be a good powerlifter."

Still, it wasn't until football was over that he could devote himself to powerlifting full time.

"Football, I got burnt out," Washington said. "I had played since third grade. My senior year here (1985), it was the hardest to get up for a game. It was impossible to get up, to have the mental preparation."

"So I knew after my senior year, I was going to have to find something to do. I knew I was strong, and powerlifting was something I enjoyed doing. I decided to take that route."

"I had a good chance to make the pros (in football), and had an opportunity to make a lot of money in that. But it wasn't anything I wanted to do."

Given the climate concerning performance-enhancing drug abuse in sports, weightlifting doesn't have the best possible image. For many, it conjures up one word — steroids.

Washington said he competes against many lifters who use steroids, but adds that the drugs aren't part of his workout routine.

"I was tempted my senior year at ECU," he said. "They were very easy to get (off the) black market. My problem was that I had a heart murmur and high blood pressure. I could have easily had a heart attack (if I had used them). I was borderline."

They speed the metabolism. At the same time, you gain about five to 10 pounds of water weight, and that puts an added strain on your heart.

"That's one reason I want to talk to high school kids and tell them it's not worth it," Washington added. "A lot of high school kids you come across come into the gym and think that's the easy way out. It's not."

Still steroids have an impact on Washington. All too often, he ends up competing against other lifters who use the drugs.

"It's very hard," he said. "I work in the gym five or six times a week trying to keep my strength, and you got a guy sitting at home working out every three days (who uses steroids). You go to a meet and a guy takes anadrol 50, the highest type steroid they make. I have to compete against that. That was hard at first. Then I said, I just have to set my goals. I have to compete against myself."

Washington grew up in Glenview, Ga., about 50 miles West of Savannah. He started with weight training when preparing for football and track seasons.

"My high school coach wanted us to build mass. Our team was on the small side," Washington said. "He had a theory of lifting a lot of weight will help build mass, with mass comes strength."

Washington went to Hudson Valley Junior College, where he was a two-time Junior College All-American. While there, he heard about the exploits of East Carolina guard Terry Long in 1983.

Long was named the strongest football player in America his senior year when he won the North Carolina Powerlifting Championships with a combined lift of 2,203 pounds.

"That's what I came here for," Washington said. "I heard about him. The first time I heard about East Carolina was when I heard about Terry Long."

Washington was a two-year starter at linebacker. Prior to his senior year, he was featured on the cover of the Bigger, Faster, Stronger Magazine as the strongest linebacker in the nation. He went on to record a team-high 130 tackles, with three fumble recoveries and one interception during his final season.

A parks and recreation major, Washington has only to complete his student teaching requirement in the fall to earn his degree.

"Robert just never had any bad days," Gentry said. "No matter how he felt at the time, no matter what was going on he always gave it all he had. He's genetically gifted too. He's a guy who has a lot of fast-twitch muscle fiber."

"You either have a percentage of fast-twitch or slow-twitch muscle fiber. People that excel in the sprints or in lifting usually have a lot of fast-twitch muscle fibers."

The senior national meet will allow each competitor three lifts, the squat, dead lift and the bench. Washington, who is ranked third in the world in his weight division, has totaled 1,985 pounds. His goal for the Las Vegas meet is to top 2,000.

Though competition begins Friday, Washington won't begin until Sunday when the higher weight divisions hold weigh-ins and begin competition.

"To win it, it's going to take over 2,000 pounds," Washington said.

Busch Event Moving PGA Happy For The Change

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — This year marks the end of an era for the Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic, and Orion Burkhardt isn't sorry to see it pass.

Burkhardt is general chairman of the PGA Tour event that begins Thursday at Kingsmill Golf Club.

Since the tournament moved in 1981 from California to Kingsmill, Burkhardt's job has been made more difficult because the event is staged the week before the British Open.

Many of the big-name golfers traditionally pass up the Anheuser-Busch to cross the Atlantic and prepare for the British Open.

he's 5½ games ahead? If you polled other managers, they'd probably have the same feeling. Sometimes umpires judge an argument on what an argument's about and how you argue. Sometimes guys argue futile things.

"To me, no umpires single out managers. When you start feeling that way as a manager you make yourself believe it."

Robinson said his low number of ejections does not accurately reflect his problems with umpires.

Rose's Baseball Battle Alters Book Plans

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Pete Rose's prolonged battle with baseball over allegations that he bet on games will likely alter the schedule of an autobiography due to be published next spring, according to Wednesday's editions of The New York Times.

The publisher for Macmillan and Collier Books told the Times that the original manuscript has the Cincinnati Reds manager admitting to gambling on racehorses and the Super Bowl, but said the rewritten version will have to include the recent controversy.

The current manuscript was written by Roger Kahn, author of the best-selling "Boys of Summer."

"We have a wonderful book, but now it needs to be rewritten and reshaped," publisher William Rosen said. "Pete will speak directly on the issue of whether he gambled on baseball games."

Rose has denied betting on baseball.

The publisher said that, contrary to published reports, Rose does not appear to be in financial difficulty.

"We owe Pete a lot of money on the book," Rosen said, "and he hasn't asked us for a dime."

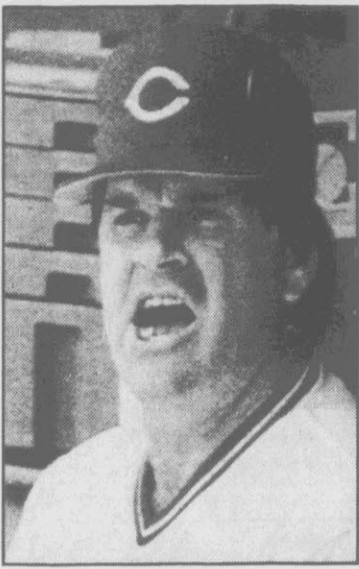

In the fall of 1990, Simon & Schuster is planning to publish "Pete Rose and the American Dream," an investigative biography being written by Michael Sokolove, a reporter for The Philadelphia Inquirer.

Rose Informer Identified
A private investigator hired by Pete Rose's lawyers formerly worked for the chief accuser in the investigation of alleged baseball gambling by the Cincinnati Reds manager, according to a newspaper report.

The Plain Dealer said in its Wednesday edition that James F. Simon, president of Business Intelligence Inc., helped Paul Janszen become an FBI informant.

According to the paper, Simon met with federal investigators in Cincinnati on Janszen's behalf on March 30, 1988, five days after Janszen agreed to cooperate with a government investigation of gambling and taxes.

Baseball Notes

The investigation has led to a grand jury inquiry involving Rose on alleged tax violations.

The paper said Janszen, while working secretly for the FBI last year, tape-recorded conversations with reputed gamblers and supplied betting sheets, which have implicated Rose in betting on the Reds.

Janszen also led the FBI to Ron Peters, a Franklin, Ohio, bookmaker who has testified under oath that he took bets on the Reds from Rose.

Janszen and Peters gave baseball investigators records and extensive statements in which they swore under oath that Rose bet on the Reds.

State law does not prohibit private investigators from working for adversaries in an investigation, the paper said, but the law does prohibit private investigators from divulging to third parties information obtained from a client.

The paper said it couldn't be determined if Simon passed information about Rose from Janszen and said Simon did not return phone calls seeking comment.

Miscellaneous Information

By beating the National League in the All-Star Game, the AL has a two-game winning streak for the first time since 1957-58. . . . Before Tuesday night's victory, the AL had lost six straight All-Star games in California. . . . Before doubling in the seventh inning off Jay Howell, Don Mattingly was hitless in eight career All-Star at-bats. . . . All nine American League starters got hits Tuesday. That happened last for either league in 1954 (not including the pitcher). In that year, the AL lineup that did it was: Minnie Minoso (left field), Bobby Avila (second base), Mickey Mantle (center), Yogi Berra (catcher), Al Rosen (first), Ray Boone (third), Hank Bauer (right) and Chico Carrasquel (shortstop). . . . Bo Jackson became the ninth player in his first at-bat. Oakland's Terry Steinbach did it last year. . . . Jackson was the fifth player to lead off the first with a homer. The others were Frank Frisch in 1934, Lou Boudreau in 1942, Willie Mays in 1965 and Joe Morgan in 1977. . . . The three stolen bases by the National League were one short of the record the NL set in 1984. The four steals for the two leagues fell one short of the record set in 1985. . . . Bo Jackson became the second player ever to hit a home run and steal a base in the same All-Star Game. Willie Mays did it in the second All-Star Game of 1960. . . . Julio Franco and Ruben Sierra of the Texas Rangers combined to go 3-for-6 Tuesday night. In the 17 previous All-Star games, Texas batters were 2-for-18. . . . The consecutive homers in the first inning by Bo Jackson and Wade Boggs were the fourth back-to-back homers in All-Star Game history. Al Rosen and Ray Boone did it off Robin Roberts in 1954, Ted Williams and Mickey Mantle did it off Warren Spahn in 1956 and Steve Garvey and Jim Wynn did it off Vida Blue in 1975.

Nolan Ryan, at 42 years, 5 months, 11 days, became the oldest pitcher to win an All-Star Game. The oldest was Satchel Paige. He is the second oldest to pitch behind Satchel Paige at 47 years, 4 days in 1953. . . .

American League tied a record by using eight pitchers Tuesday. It was the fifth time it happened and the second straight year the AL did it. . . . Fans erected the following sign on the third-base side during Tuesday's All-Star Game: "Pete Says 5-1 Giamatti Can't Beat Tyson."

SPEAKING

"It'll be something special when I can sit back and tell the story to my grand kids. But I hate to be compared to players of the past because they did their thing then and I do my thing now. If you start listening to that you're the next Willie Mays or Babe Ruth that will screw you up real fast. You'll be out of the game in the blink of an eye." — All-Star MVP Bo Jackson of the Kansas City Royals.

Johnson On A Hot Streak

Starting at third base for the National League in the All-Star Game made Howard Johnson feel like a million dollars.

Johnson knows the feeling well. On Sunday, he signed a three-year contract for $6.1 million with an option for a fourth year at $2.1 million.

"Howard didn't need a plane to fly here," teammate Gary Carter said.

The New York Mets spent much of the winter trying to trade Johnson, and his recovery from shoulder surgery made his status questionable at the start of the season.

In April, the fans in the boxes behind first base at Shea Stadium were getting more assists than Keith Hernandez when Johnson threw the ball.

"It's been kind of a whirlwind year for me," Johnson said. "In the winter I was traded to four or five different teams. Then in the spring, I had to prove that my arm was sound."

In 1987, Johnson hit 36 homers to set a National League record for switch-hitters. He also stole 32 bases to join Darryl Strawberry as the first teammates to join the 30-30 club the same year.

His critics said it was a career season and he wouldn't come close again.

Last season, his homers dipped to 24 and he became trade bait. For one reason or another, the deals never worked out and the Mets stayed with Johnson.

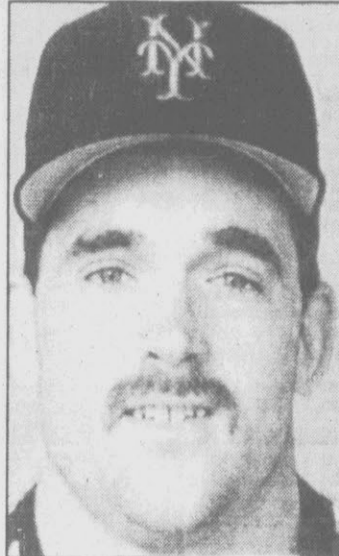

During the first half of the season, Johnson was New York's most consistent hitter with 22 homers and 57 RBIs. In June, he hit .340 with 11 homers and 24 RBIs and was selected Player of the Month.

"It's all turned around in a hurry," Johnson said. "First, I'm having a great year and then Sunday I sign a new contract and then I learn I'll be starting in the All-Star Game. If you told me this was going to happen last November, I never would have believed it."

Johnson says he never doubted himself, but expected to go the free agent route at the end of the season.

He feels the turning point came when he was moved up from the seventh spot in the lineup.

"I was too good a hitter to be hitting that low," Johnson said. "I felt I was ready to move up in the lineup."

Bo's Exploits ...

got no chance," he said. "If I don't hit one, people are going to get mad at me."

Not really. The crowd was still too busy buzzing over Bo and Boggs to get upset with anything.

Jackson drove in another run on an infield out, stole a base and singled. Not bad for a running back. And Bo only played six innings. Imagine if he had gone the full nine.

He seemed to have the crowd wired every time he came to the plate. There was an electricity about his swings, an anticipation that he might be about to do something special.

And he often did.

"He is my idol," Puckett decided.

He's not the only one. Te folks at Nike had to be thrilled that Bo knows when to unload. They debuted a Jackson commercial in the fourth inning of Tuesday night's game, right in the middle of his virtuoso show.

Jackson prefers to low-key all of this. Hey, what's the big deal? So he hit a leadoff home run, a majestic shot that soared to the deepest part of Anaheim Stadium.

"I got a piece of it," he conceded. "I didn't think it would go that far. I've hit a couple further than that. I enjoyed watching the flight of the ball, but I enjoyed watching the jets fly over the stadium before the game more. I'm a military fan."

So he stole a base, joining Hall of Famer Willie Mays as the only player to put together a homer and a steal in the same All-Star game.

"It's great to do something only one other player in history did," Jackson said. "But don't compare me with Mays. People should be judged on what they do, not what other people have done."

And what Jackson does, others don't. Mays, remember, never won a Heisman Trophy. Bo did.

"The scouts look for five things — hitting, hitting with power, fielding, running and throwing," he said. "Bo's got six. You've got to put football in there, too."

Jackson was only the ninth player to hit a homer in his first All-Star swing. Like Mays, none of the other eight ever won a Heisman, either.

"I couldn't believe it. A home run, leading off, in his first All-Star at-bat," Puckett said. "It's unbelievable to do the things he does."

But it is unbelievable only to others, not to Bo.

"I don't do anything that surprises me," Jackson said.

He snickered at Lasorda's crack about his homer sounding like a golf ball.

"I'm really not a golfer," he said. "I just don't have time to play."

AL Wins Classic ...

on, said. "He is redefining the game."

In the second inning, Jackson put the AL ahead to stay against loser John Smoltz with an RBI grounder. He also stole second in the inning.

The only other player to hit a homer and steal a base in an All-Star game was Willie Mays, in the second game in 1960.

"The twilight only effects mediocre hitters and there aren't any here," Lasorda said. "The early game didn't make a difference."

The last All-Star Game played at Anaheim was in 1967, and it took the NL 15 innings to squeeze out a 2-1 victory. By the end of the first inning Tuesday, that total had been surpassed.

Jackson, who also plays football in the NFL, is compared to Jimmy Brown when he's running for the Los Angeles Raiders and to Mays when he's hitting homers for the Kansas City Royals.

He doesn't care much for either comparison. "I really hate it when people call me the next Willie Mays or the next Babe Ruth," Jackson said. "People should be judged on what they do, not what other people have done."

Ryan, 42, relieved Stewart and pitched two innings for the victory. No comparisons are needed for Ryan; he's one of a kind.

Ryan, who is nearing 300 victories and 5,000 strikeouts, is the second-oldest pitcher ever to appear in an All-Star Game and the oldest ever to win one.

He played for California from 1972-79, so this game was special.

"It was my most meaningful All-Star Game," Ryan said. "Out of all the All-Star Games I've been in, this one means the most, both because of coming back to Anaheim and the fact that this could be my last All-Star Game."

The AL added two runs in the third inning off Rick Sutcliffe on RBI singles by Harold Baines and Ruben Sierra, who was 2-for-3, and got great pitching from Mark Gubicza, Mike Moore and Greg Swindell in the middle innings.

Relievers Jeff Russell, Dan Plesac and Doug Jones finished, with Jones going the final 1-3 innings for the save.

"I think it's a matter of the pitchers trying to keep the hitters off balance," Gubicza said. "If we keep switching pitchers, they won't be able to get used to us."

The AL also seems to have switched its luck in All-Star Games.

The AL has won three of the last four games. From 1963-82, they lost 19 of 20 All-Star Games, including 11 straight.

But now it's the Bo Show.

"See Bo hit, see Bo run, see Bo do anything," Dodgers pitcher Orel Hershiser said.

"It might be something I can tell my grandkids later on," Jackson said. "But for me, I just live for the present."

Third World Women Need Special Health Care, New Study Reports

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Women in the Third World need special health care that goes far beyond the childbearing needs that medical providers pay attention to, according to an international study.

The women's problems, stemming from the large amount of work they perform, are made worse by the lack of professional health care, according to the report, "Strengthening Women: Health Research Priorities for Women in Developing Countries."

The study said medical attention for women in the Third World is focused almost entirely on childbearing.

A.W. Patterson, director of the Caribbean Food and Nutrition Institute in Jamaica, said that in the Third World one of every four deaths of young women — in some countries one out of every two — is related to pregnancy and childbirth.

But "we don't need the infant-health rationale for attention to be focused on women's health," said Allan Rosenfield, dean of the School of Public Health at Columbia University.

The women suffer malnutrition, diabetes, high blood pressure and other physical problems far more frequently than women in developed nations, the report released Tuesday said.

"Women's... responsibilities in developing countries include obtaining water, producing and preparing food and gathering firewood, all without benefit of modern appliances," the report said.

"Women farmers grow at least 50 percent of the world's food... Women's low earnings, poverty and often sole responsibility for maintaining households add to the burdens of their dual home and market roles because women must work longer hours to earn even a minimally acceptable level of income."

Heavy work can lead to special leg and back problems. The Third World women are exposed to water-borne diseases because they are generally responsible for getting water from communal sources.

Women in the Third World also suffer from malnutrition due to lack of proteins and from anemia and other diseases caused by a lack of iron, the report said. Older women have more diabetes and possibly more high blood pressure than their counterparts in wealthier nations.

The study pointed out that many women in Third World countries do not know how to get medical attention and often lack the time, money and transportation to get it.

It called for more research that distinguishes results by gender, by geographical region and which takes social and cultural facts into consideration.

The report was prepared by researchers from the United States, India, Jamaica, Zaire and Chile.

Iranian Election Is One-Man Race

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NICOSIA, Cyprus — This month's Iranian presidential election appears a one-horse race dominated by Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani and if the Tehran media is anything to go by, the result is a foregone conclusion.

A poll published Tuesday by the radical Abrar daily, which has been critical of Rafsanjani's so-called pragmatist faction in the past, indicated that 86 percent of Iranians will vote for him in the July 28 balloting.

Eleven percent said they would vote for his challenger, former Agriculture Minister Abbas Sheibani of the Freedom Movement, Iran's token opposition party.

Three percent said they would not vote in the election, given special significance because it comes so soon after the June 3 death of fundamentalist patriarch Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

The transition of power has been smooth so far, despite fears of a struggle between Rafsanjani's so-called pragmatists and hard-liners led by Interior Minister Ali Akbar Mohtashemi.

Rafsanjani, 55, has emerged as the political strongman with his ally, incumbent President Ali Khamenei, chosen as Khomeini's successor as religious leader. The radicals have not challenged Rafsanjani in the presidential election. Political analysts believe Rafsanjani has so far been able to outmaneuver his rivals, but that the months ahead could be turbulent.

Rafsanjani and Sheibani, a member of the Islamic republic's parliament since it was formed in 1980, were the only two of 80 presidential hopefuls whose candidacies were approved by the 12-member Council of Guardians, a constitutional watchdog.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Nicosia, quoted council member Hojatoleslam Mohammad Yazdi as saying most were disqualified because they lacked religious commitment and sought to run "simply to become a sort of celebrity for all jilted purposes."

Sheibani "doesn't stand a snowball's chance in hell," said an Iranian business executive who was in Nicosia several days ago. "Everyone knows that Rafsanjani will win. It's no contest."

Rafsanjani is a formidable political figure who was considered the second most powerful figure in Iran when Khomeini was alive.

He has been speaker of the 270-seat Majlis, or Parliament, for eight years. In last year's parliamentary elections, he polled 1.3 million votes, the most in the balloting.

Sheibani is less well known. His Freedom Movement is led by Mehdi Bazargan, the republic's first prime minister, and barely tolerated. It is only allowed to function as a token opposition.

"Sheibani's was allowed to run for cosmetic purposes so that Rafsanjani would not be the only candidate," the Iraq-based Mujahedeen Khalq, or People's Holy Warriors who form the main rebel movement against the Tehran government, said in a statement. It has branded the poll "a farce."

A referendum on constitutional reforms will be held the same day as the presidential election, the fifth since the 1979 Islamic revolution.

Iran's estimated 23 million voters are widely expected to endorse the proposed reforms. These include greatly enhancing the executive powers of the presidency in an effort to eliminate competing power centers that have paralyzed the decision-making process.

That will involve scrapping the post of prime minister, currently occupied by hard-liner Hussein Musavi.

The new president is also expected to take control of much of Iran's security apparatus, thus weakening Mohtashemi's power.

Khamenei's second four-year term expires Oct. 5 and he is forbidden by the constitution from running for a third term. He is the only Iranian president so far to have served a full term since the republic was declared after the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi was toppled in 1979.

The first president, Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, was forced out of office by hard-liners in June 1981, 18 months after his election, because of his liberal policies. He fled to France, where he lives in exile.

His successor, Mohammad-Ali Rajai, a former street vendor turned revolutionary, was killed in August 1981, 37 days after his election, by a bomb planted by the Mujahedeen.

Khamenei, who was himself severely wounded in a June 1981 Mujahedeen bombing, was elected that October amid a systematic crackdown by the radicals to eliminate their erstwhile leftist and liberal allies.

Strikes Knot British Rail Service

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — Strikes today paralyzed the national rail network, the London subway, the port of London, 41 other British docks and local government services across the nation.

The 24-hour national rail strike by the National Union of Railwaymen was its fourth Wednesday stoppage in as many weeks. And the daylong strike by London subway drivers is their 10th since April 5.

This has been the worst week of labor unrest since Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher came to power 10 years ago, and polls show the popularity of her governing Conservative party sinking.

On Monday and Tuesday, rail services were badly disrupted by a ban on overtime by train drivers belonging to another union, the Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen.

Today's rail strike followed the breakdown Tuesday night of 12 hours of talks between British Rail managers and rail unions when union representatives walked out.

Union leaders said the board that runs the state-owned rail network had upped its wage increase offer to 8.8 percent from 7 percent. The union is demanding 10 percent.

Jimmy Knapp, general secretary of the National Union of Railwaymen, accused British Rail of being a "cheapskate."

Railmen also want British Rail to cancel its decision to end national pay bargaining on Oct. 31 and replace it with regional negotiations. That issue was also not resolved in the labor-management talks.

Mrs. Thatcher told Parliament Tuesday: "Once again it is some of the extreme left wing in the trade unions who never think of serving the public or of their duty to the public."

A survey of public opinion polls Tuesday by the British Broadcasting Corp. indicated Mrs. Thatcher's Conservatives are now trailing Neil Kinnock's opposition Labor Party in popularity by a 10-point margin.

Britain's rising annual inflation rate, now at 8.3 percent, its highest in seven years, has eaten into wages, leading to pay demands and unpopularity for the government.

A National Opinion Polls survey among 2,770 rail passengers published today in the Conservative London newspaper the Daily Mail said 33 percent blamed poor British Rail management for the strikes and other disruption. Twenty-three percent blamed the rail unions and 20 percent blamed the government.

Hecht Confirmed As Ambassador

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Former Sen. Chic Hecht is headed to the Bahamas, winning confirmation as U.S. ambassador despite complaints from some of his former colleagues that he's unfit to serve as point man in the war on drugs.

The Senate voted 78-19 on Tuesday to confirm the Nevada Republican and keep alive the tradition that the Senate rarely rejects a former member seeking confirmation to an executive branch post.

The vote came after Hecht's defenders declared he was fully qualified by his experience in business, banking and government to handle an ambassadorship.

But Hecht's detractors pointed to his remarks that he was looking forward to his appointment because the Bahamas offered gambling casinos, good golf and fishing.

"An appointment of an ambassador is not a vacation trip," said Sen. John Breaux, D-La.

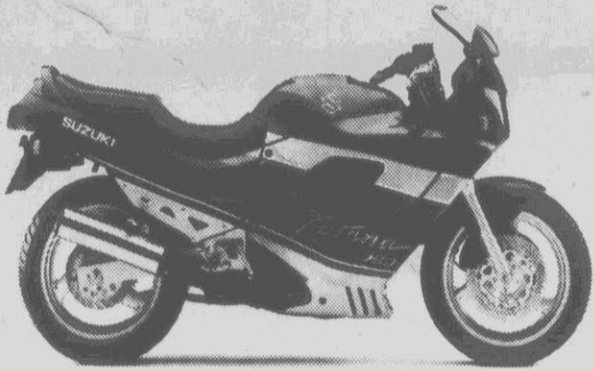

Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla., who led the fight against the nomination, said that while Hecht might serve with distinction in other posts, he is not qualified to serve as "a key operational officer in the war against drugs."

"He does not deserve, nor does our nation deserve to be represented by him in the Bahamas," Graham said.

Hecht, 60, whose one term in the Senate was marked by such malapropisms as his vow not to permit a "nuclear suppository" to be located in his state, had told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee he would feel at home in the Bahamas because of its similarities to Las Vegas.

 When you have all the tricks in a suit, it usually makes no difference.

that trick would have to come from hearts.
 But that presented a problem. Two entries would be needed to set up and cash a heart trick, and there was only one in plain view. However, declarer had no difficulty in unearthing a second.
 At trick two, South immediately led the singleton heart. West grabbed the king to continue with a club, won by declarer. When both defenders followed to the king and queen of diamonds, the contract became a sure bet.

Declarer carefully led the eight of diamonds to the ace, then continued with the queen of hearts. East took the ace and cashed two club tricks, but that was all for the defense. Declarer won the spade return in hand, overtook the four of diamonds with dummy's five, and the rest of the tricks were there for the taking.

'Batman' Is A Hit With Pitt Bat Fans

Local Box Office Receipts Are Tops

By Amy Gavigan
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Summer 1989 may well be remembered by avid moviegoers as the summer of the blockbuster.

"Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade," "Karate Kid Part III," "Ghostbusters II," "Dead Poets Society," "Honey, I Shrunk The Kids"...

According to The Associated Press, this summer's box office take is 14 percent ahead of last year's record $1.7 billion.

And, if moviegoers read comics, watched T.V. or walked into a J.C. Penny or a fast food restaurant — they might remember it as the summer of "Batman."

"Batman" opened in U.S. and Canadian theaters June 23 as the movie sensation of the summer amid minor controversies and major media hype.

Some fans were disappointed in Director Tim Burton's casting of Michael Keaton as "Batman," expecting someone with a bigger build.

Moviegoer Bill Johnson agreed. "I like special effects and Jack Nicholson is one of my favorite actors — which is main reason I saw the movie."

"I like Michael Keaton too," he said, "but I think they could have picked a better 'Batman.'"

As for the media hype, Cam Melton, assistant manager for the Plaza Cinema said "Batman" ticket sales show that the public is responding, but it would be difficult for any movie to meet expectations raised by the extensive media coverage.

"'Batman' couldn't possibly live up to all the media hype," Melton said. "I don't think anything could."

Even so, since "Batman" arrived at the Plaza Cinema, managers say that business is booming and doesn't look as if it's going to subside anytime soon.

"Since 'Batman' has been here, we've done more business than we've ever had," Melton said. "We had a sneak preview Thursday, June 22, and opened June 23. We sold out the first four shows. Now, we're still coming within 40 to 50 people of filling the theater on weekends."

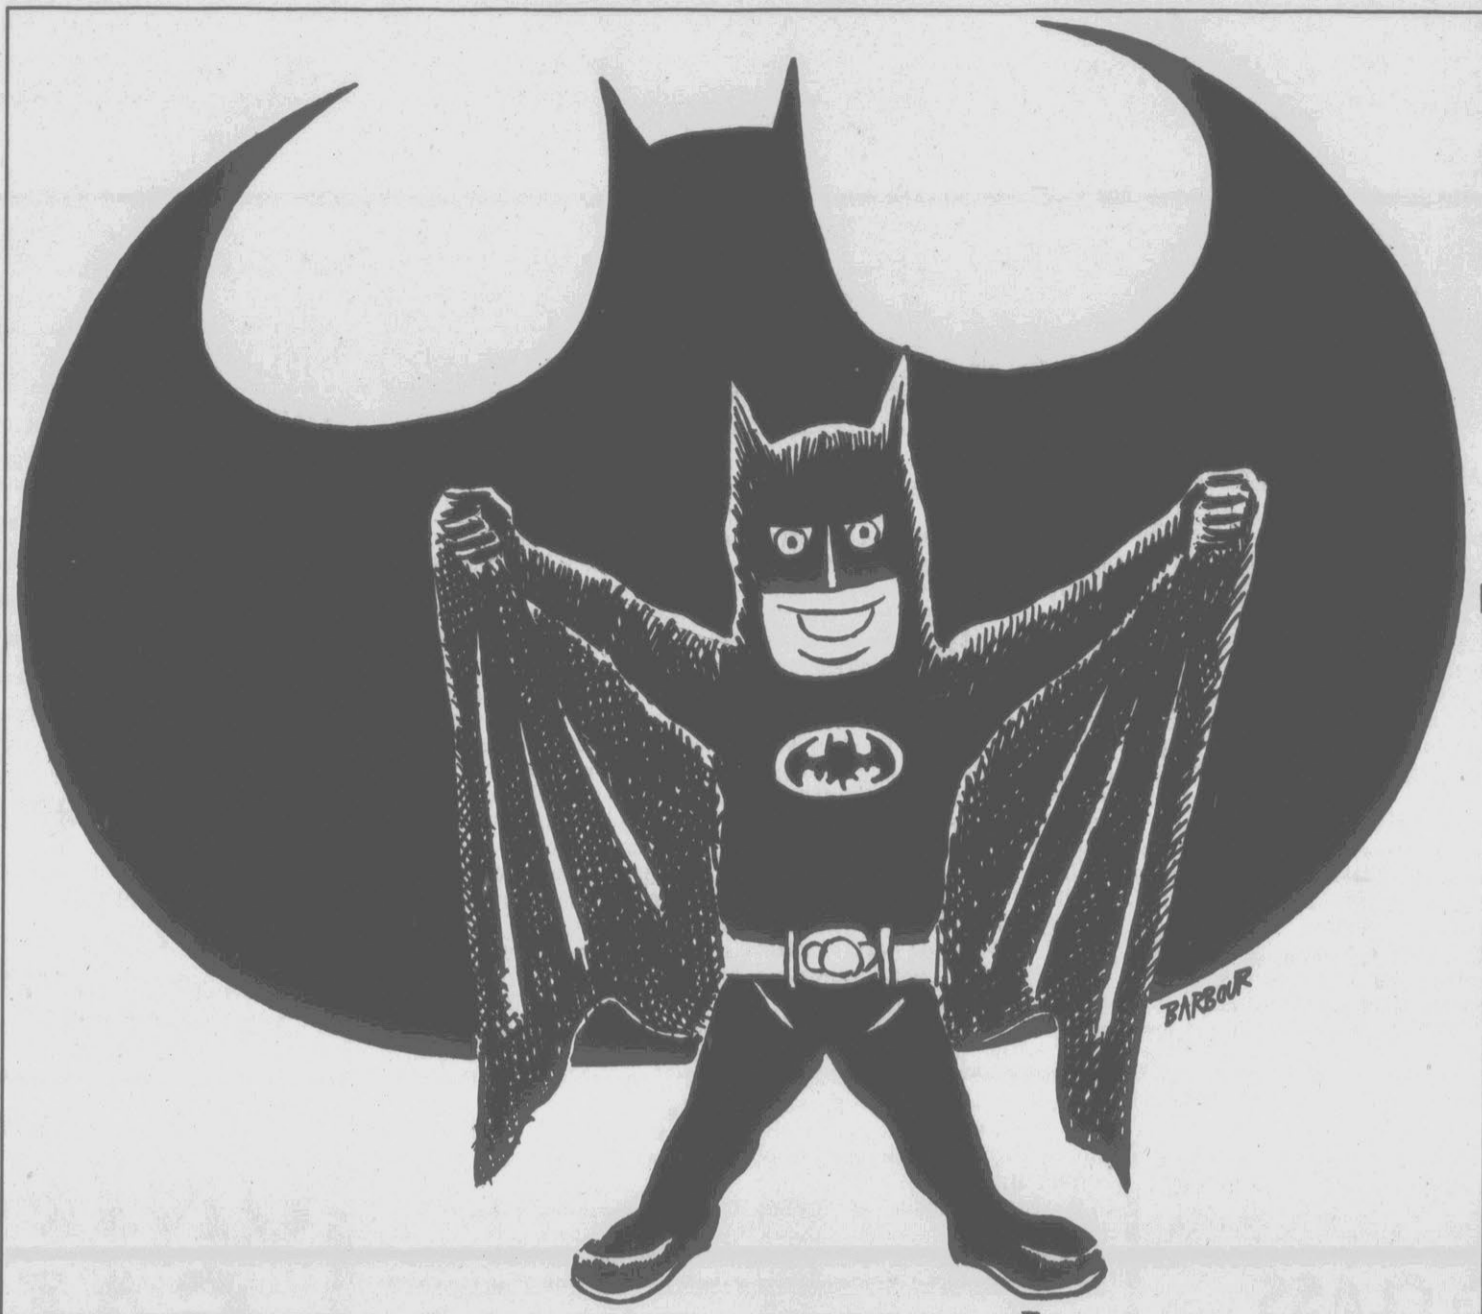

"I don't anticipate it to slack off on weekends for a couple more weeks," he said.

Lisa Robinson, assistant manager for the Plaza Cinema, said many had to be turned away.

"A lot of people came from out of town Friday and Saturday night who didn't get in," she said. "The lines would start forming at 7:40 for the 9:45 show. 'I've had some people who've come to see it three, four and five times."

Moviegoers Walt Cleaton, 17, and cousin Chad Cleaton, 14, enjoyed the movie.

"I thought it was a great movie," said Walt Cleaton. "'Batman' was "Batdance," Bat cups, Bat T-shirts, Bat underwear and much more. It all adds up to Bat hype.

"Batman" is smashing the box offices across the country. The movie is quickly out-distancing competitors by drawing huge crowds and earning an average of $10 million daily since its release June 25, according to The Associated Press.

But while Warner Brothers is adding up the profits, merchandisers across the country are raking in the bucks from the sale of items with the "Batman" logo.

It is nearly impossible to go out without seeing a reminder of the movie. Items bearing the semblance of Batman and his fellow characters include T-shirts, action figures — featuring Joker with a squirting flower in his lapel — walkie-talkies, lunchboxes and even Batman underwear.

The appeal of Batman around the country is holding true in Greenville. Local retailers say the movie's wares are big hits.

"We sell everything that we can get our hands on," said Ann Jones, assistant manager of the Record Bar at Carolina East Mall.

T-shirts and soundtracks of the movie seem to be the top sellers in the local area. Hubert Waddell, senior assistant merchandise manager for Roses at The Plaza, said his store sold 48 T-shirts in two days before the movie opened. They ordered 400 more from a company in New York but will be able to get only 60.

Greenville Banks, manager of Belk department store at the Carolina East Mall, said his store has sold about 150 of the T-shirts. Banks said that Belk also sold out of its Batman pajamas and nightshirts.

"It's just a hot item right now and hard to get a hold of," Waddell said. He said that he has ordered other items and especially wants to get the toy Batmobile.

Ms. Jones said that they have sold 50 T-shirts at $12.99 each. She said that they sell other shirts with music groups featured on them but "nothing else has sold like that."

The music featured in the movie is also making a big splash in the record stores. Ms. Jones said The Record Bar had sold 81 copies of the cassette single "Batdance" by Prince at $2.49 each. The store also sold 50 cassettes of the Batman soundtrack in two weeks at $9.99. BatCans, a metal container with three compact discs and a Batman booklet are also selling well. Record Bar sold every one it had in stock at $26.98 each.

Batman has even found his way into the restaurant business. Taco Bell is using the super hero in its latest promotional campaign. The fast food chain offers Batman cups for 99 cents. Charles Jordan, manager of the Taco Bell on Greenville Boulevard, said that his store sells about 200 cups each day.

He estimates that the campaign has increased his business by about five percent. And, he said, he has even been offered $200 for the life-size cardboard cutout of the Caped Crusader displayed inside the store.

my favorite character. I think the man that played 'Batman' was pretty good. The 'Joker' was not too nice.

"This is the second time I've seen it. I'd come to see three or four more times," he said.

Batman comic collector Bill Harris saw the movie Monday afternoon in an uncrowded theater.

"It was a great movie and lived up to all my expectations," Harris said. "The plot seemed to center more on the 'Joker' than 'Batman,' though."

Assistant manager, Lisa Robinson, said that media hype may have left some viewers with a less than favorable impression.

"They built 'Batman' up so much, some people were disappointed," she said.

Johnson said the media coverage had encouraged him to see the movie. "I figured with all the media hype, that I might want to check it out," he said. It was entertaining, but it wasn't the best movie I've seen. I certainly wouldn't stand in line for 10 minutes or an hour for it."

Johnson had tried to see the movie before Monday afternoon, but lines turned him away.

"The first time we tried to see it we had gone an hour early to go see 'Batman' and couldn't get in, so we went to see 'Ghostbusters' and that line was too long," he said. "So, we just went to see 'Dead Poets Society.' Now, I've seen all three and 'Dead Poets Society' is the best."

Doug Hale, assistant manager at Plitt Theater, Carolina East Center, said the opening of "Batman" at Plaza Cinema caused a lull in business for them.

"When they (Plaza Cinema) got 'Batman' we only had 'See No Evil, Hear No Evil,'" Hale said. "'Batman' took our business for about two days."

"We had a joke around here that people were going to see 'Batman' and 'Ghostbusters' and when they were sold out, people would come over here."

Hale said "Batman" is now "flopping and isn't holding what it should be in relation to other movies."

"'Karate Kid' or 'Ghostbusters' or 'Indiana Jones' are probably the most popular so far for the summer," he said.

Despite the mixed reviews, figures can not be denied.

According to The Associated Press, "Batman" earned a record $42.7 million in its first three days and earned $95 million for the weekend.

Moscow's Film Fest Has It All

By Masha Hamilton
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

MOSCOW — One movie poster showed a bare-chested woman embraced by a man. Another depicted a crucified figure advertising the Hungarian film "Jesus Christ's Horoscope." A few feet away were 6-foot-high placards trumpeting films from both sides of the Berlin Wall.

Sex, religion, politics. It all boiled down to glasnost in Moscow Friday at the opening of the 16th International Film Festival.

"In the past the themes which were featured in our film festivals were dictated by ideological concerns. But we are crashing through those barriers now," the deputy chairman of the festival's organizing committee, Yuri T. Khodzhaev, said.

"The process of restructuring currently sweeping through our society is being reflected in this film festival as well."

Since the last international festival in Moscow in 1987 there has been a revolution in the Soviet film industry. Topics previously taboo, ranging from prostitution to political corruption, are now depicted on the screen in the Soviet Union.

This month, foreign films that deal with controversial subjects are being permitted a showing in Moscow, albeit to a limited audience.

Twenty films from 17 countries are entered in the festival's competition, including two American-made films, "Accidental Tourist," and "Ironweed."

Other films include "Grand Cinema," produced in Iran and directed by Hasan Kheydar; "Snowball Reaction," directed by Vera Chytilova of Czechoslovakia; and "A 15-Year-Old Girl," directed by Jacques Duillon from France. East and West Germany are also represented.

Although the festival opened Friday with a screening of Charlie Chaplin's "The Dictator," the first films in the competition will not be shown until Saturday.

Four awards will be handed out before the festival ends July 18. A jury made up of directors, producers and critics from nine countries will name the two best films, the best actress and the best actor.

"For the first time the jury will not be governed by ideological considerations," Moscow Radio said Friday in a report on the festival.

Because it is freed from previous non-artistic concerns, the festival will feature better films this year than before, Khodzhaev said.

"For the first time in the history of our festival, we turned down some films for the competition," Khodzhaev said. "In the past, we were passive. We took whatever film each country wanted to offer, as long as it was approved by the censors. So the artistic quality was not always so high. This time we were offered about 40 films, and we rejected half of them."

There was some tough negotiations over the American films that will be shown during the festival, he said. "The American producers wanted us to pay money to show the films, but that is not how our festival works."

Donna Summer has turned in her disco crown

Disco Queen Returns To Rock She Works Hard For Her Money With New Label

By Hillel Italie
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — In the late 1970s, Donna Summer ruled as Disco Queen of the music world. But she turned in her tiara once breakdancing out-hustled the hustle.

Summer made headlines in 1980 by signing with the newly-formed Geffen record label, whose founder, David Geffen, had successfully promoted Jackson Browne, the Eagles and Joni Mitchell.

It seemed like a perfect match. Summer was coming off a phenomenal string of hit singles, including "Bad Girls," "On the Radio" and "Hot Stuff." Geffen was a widely respected executive (Browne still thanks him on each of his records) who also signed Elton John, Neil Young and John Lennon.

But something went wrong. Many of the big names soon became unhappy and left. Summer's first record for Geffen, "The Wanderer," went gold, but her sales later fell off. By the mid-'80s, she was seeking her release from the label.

"It wasn't working," she recalled in a recent interview. "It wasn't that we hated each other, it just wasn't working. They didn't really have the facilities to promote someone like me. It was frustrating."

Her major success of the decade came in 1983 with the album, "She Works Hard For the Money." The title track was a Top 10 smash, an anthem for working women. "Unconditional Love," a collaboration with the reggae group Musical Youth, was also a major hit.

The record came out on Polygram.

Summer had flops as well, "Cats Without Claws," and "All Systems Go"; when she completed work on "Another Place and Time," Geffen refused to release it.

"David said he didn't like the album. He said he wasn't going to put it out and I could sue him if I wanted to," she said. "I thought, 'Oh, great, then I'll go. This is the chance I've been waiting for, I don't want to be here.'"

She signed with Atlantic Records, and "This Time I Know It's for Real," the debut single, soon reached the Top 10. The album, recorded in London, was produced and written by the team of Mike Stock, Matt Aitken and Peter Waterman, who have also worked with Rick Astley and Bananarama.

"The guys who produced me are very commercial minded, much more than I am," she said. "As an artist and a writer you tend to want to do what you want to do. There's a time you need to be commercial, that's the whole object: to sell records, enough to be on a label. You need somebody to kind of monitor your sense of creativity."

Summer usually contributes her own material, but admitted to getting sidetracked by more "creative" pursuits.

"I got very involved in seeing polo played. One of my best friends, her husband is captain of Prince Charles' polo team."

"I had to go," she said with a laugh. "I couldn't say no. You don't get these chances all the time in life. Every week we went up there for about two days. I had such a ball, and I don't get to take a lot of vacations because of my kids."

Summer, who was born in 1948 in Boston, became the soloist in her church choir by age 10.

"There was no question I would be a singer, I just always knew. I had credit in my neighborhood, people would lend me money and tell me to pay it back when I got famous."

She began cashing in with "Love to Love You Baby," a No. 1 hit in 1975 that helped open the disco era.

For the next four years, she was everywhere. Eight singles in the Top 10, three reaching No. 1, and three consecutive chart-topping double albums: "Live and More," "Bad Girls" and "On the Radio, Greatest Hits I and II."

But Summer was never comfortable with the "Disco Queen" label. Musically, she began to change in 1979 with "Hot Stuff," which had a tough, rock 'n' roll beat.

"I grew up on rock 'n' roll," said Summer, who later covered a Bruce Springsteen song, "Protection."

"I like the Moody Blues, the Beatles and the Rolling Stones as well as Aretha Franklin, Dionne Warwick, the Supremes and Temptations. I didn't know many white kids who didn't know the Supremes; I don't know many black kids who don't know the Moody Blues."

And who would have guessed that the voice behind so many dance floor hits secretly longed for a house in the country?

"When I was a kid, I studied agriculture," said Summer, who lives with her husband, Bruce Sudano, and three daughters on a California farm.

Charming Boxes Feminine, Pretty

Ultrafeminine and pretty as can be, this set of two plastic canvas mini hatboxes worked in simple needlepoint stitches will dress up desks, dressers or bathroom shelves. Charming containers for all your odds and ends, use them to hold jewelry, cosmetics, hair accessories, buttons, pins, stamps, etc. The small box measures 3½ by 5 inches and the larger one, 4 by 6 inches.

Dear Pat: I have been needlepointing for years, but have only recently experimented with plastic canvas. I have learned from experience what yarns to use with various mesh sizes of traditional canvas, but would like to see a discussion in your column on the best choices for the plastic type. — Sue Bartol, Enid, Okla.

Dear Sue: I am a firm believer that there is no single "right" yarn for any particular canvas, although obviously some work better than others. The guidelines I will give you are simply suggestions. Experiment to your heart's delight, and use whatever suits you.

For tent stitches (half-cross, continental or basketweave) and many pattern stitches, a single strand of four-ply knitting worsted-weight acrylic yarn works quite well on the seven-mesh plastic canvas. Double strands are used for Bargello.

However, this type of yarn is most often found in 3-to-3½ ounce skeins, which is fine if you need a large amount, but is wasteful when you need only a yard or two of certain colors. I will sometimes use the worsted-weight for large areas and then use four plies of Persian-type acrylic yarn, available in much smaller skeins for the accent areas, or use the Persian type throughout for small projects. At other times — although it may seem extravagant to some — I will choose the pure wool Persian. Persian yarns consist of three plies loosely twisted, making it easy to separate them.

In addition, there are nylon, herculon or polyester yarns marketed specifically for plastic canvas in small skeins. Most of these have a slight sheen, a hard surface that is dirt-resistant, and they tend to pill less than other yarns.

The same is true of perle cotton and other embroidery threads, which can be used with two or more strands in the needle.

If you are working on 10-mesh canvas, three plies of Persian-type yarn is great. With some pattern stitches you might like to try a sports-weight yarn or even a finer type to achieve an open, airy look.

Your choice of pattern stitches also can be the determining factor in your yarn choice. With projects in which several stitches are made in the same hole or where the yarn criss-crosses several times, your best choice may be a finer yarn or fewer plies of Persian yarn.

Straight stitches, on the other hand, may require heavier yarns, double strands of a light-to-medium-weight yarn or extra plies of the Persian.

In general, as with traditional canvas, my best advice is not to limit yourself in your choice of yarns. Raffia, jute, ribbon and other materials can make an outstanding creation. Just let your imagination go and remember: Needlepoint should be fun!

Teacher In 'Dead Poets' Modeled After Professor

By Dean Golembeski
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

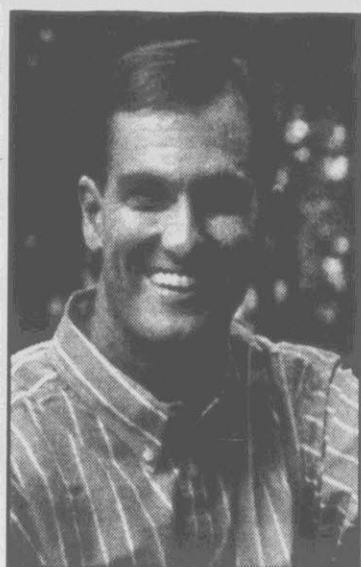

STORRS, Conn. — Samuel F. Pickering Jr. is not above telling a lie to make a good story better, and he encourages the students in his writing course to do the same.

"You've got to lie to give the illusion of truth," the English professor tells his students at the University of Connecticut.

Given that philosophy, it's not surprising that Pickering finds himself caught up in the excitement over a bit of fiction written by a former student. The teacher John Keating, played by Robin Williams in the movie "Dead Poets Society," is modeled after Pickering.

Like Keating, Pickering has been known to do the unusual in his classroom. He's lectured from a desktop, from outside a window or while wearing wastepaper baskets on his feet. He also returned to his prep school as a young teacher after studying in England. But unlike the movie, there was never any conflict between Pickering and school administrators, and he left the school on good terms.

"Whatever of me is in that character has got to be small," the 47-year-old Pickering said during recent interview at his home. "I was a kid and he was a child. Twenty-three years ago. How much of me could there be in the movie? Not very much."

The screenplay was written by Tom Schulman, who was a 15-year-old student at Montgomery Bell Academy in Nashville, Tenn., when he took a course from Pickering. Pickering, who had returned to the United States after a year of study at Cambridge University, taught at the private school for just one year, 1965-66.

Schulman has acknowledged Pickering's influence on his life and the screenplay, and has said much of his love for language and literature originated in that course.

Pickering hasn't seen the movie — his three children were sick and now he's in Canada for the summer. But many of his friends in Nashville have seen the film, and they immediately recognized Pickering as the inspiration for the movie's teacher. The friends began talking and soon the news media picked up on the subject.

"I don't mind being the center of attention if I can control it, but I can't control this," he said of the numerous inquiries he's received from reporters and acquaintances.

Pickering, who was born and raised in Nashville, is puzzled as to why he had so much influence on a former student and how it was that his friends so readily saw him in the movie. He's also flattered.

"I'm the most ordinary guy in the world," he said as he draped his leg over the arm of a chair and picked at a hole in the knee of his jeans. "Sometimes people remember me, and I don't know why. I don't know if I did anything special then as a teacher. I was young and lively."

What he does in class is unplanned, he said. He does many unusual things to get his students to think for themselves, but a bad back has forced him to abandon such acrobatics as desktop lectures. His classroom is also on the second floor now, making the leaps from windows unwise.

"Sometimes you get bored in the classroom," he said. "This semester when my class was over, the last class, two girls in my class jumped up and gave an imitation of me right in front of the class. They got A's. You'd think they might get F's, but I've learned since."

Pickering bursts into laughter after telling the story. He laughs often and easily as he recalls the past. He finds many things humorous in life and often downplays his own accomplishments.

Since leaving Montgomery Bell Academy, he has completed a doctorate and taught in Syria and Jordan and at Dartmouth College. He's been at the University of Connecticut since 1978, where in addition to teaching, he's become well-known as an essayist.

He writes about his three children, his wife, his mother and father and ordinary things in life. His writing, as might be expected, is humorous and self-critical, but also bawdy and philosophical. He has published three books of his essays and is working on a fourth. He plans to write an essay on the celebrity that has come to him in the wake of

"Dead Poets Society."

His most recent book, May Days (University of Iowa, 1988), includes an essay on Montgomery Bell Academy. It pokes fun at the idea of a "Southern gentleman" and Pickering's exploits as a student, athlete and practical joker.

From these experiences, Pickering has shaped a teaching philosophy that has in turn influenced many others.

"There are very few givens that I accept. I don't reject any either. But I think that kids ought to start looking," Pickering said. "When somebody says it's green, then you should turn around and say maybe it's not green. What's the truth? That's all I do."

Day-Care Worker Ought To Change Title To 'Day-Storage' Professional

Dear Abby: This is regarding "No Nonsense in N.W. Jersey," the day-care professional who said, "Any child not picked up by 6:30 p.m. will be taken to the county social service facility for children."

Your answer to her was, "Most parents are on time, but I'll wager not many parents are tardy twice when faced with this kind of penalty."

Is that the best response you could come up with? Abby, that lady should be working in a factory making clocks! Her responsibility to the child far outweighs any spite she may feel toward inconsiderate parents. The person she is hurting is the child. She has no business being in the day-care business — and less business calling it "day care." There is no care. She should advertise: "Day storage: We are not responsible for items left after 6:30 p.m."

Can you imagine what it must do to small children to be taken by someone they are supposed to trust and dumped with strangers in a strange place? At that age, they can't understand what's happening. They can't even be sure that their parents will come and get them. In their minds it can be nothing short of abandonment, and it must be terrifying.

Your letting "No Nonsense" get off without letting her have it with both barrels shows that you aren't in the child-care business. Thanks for hearing me out. — Disgusted In Virginia

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Dear Disgusted: You're right. I should have come down much harder on her. But I didn't get away with it. It would have done your heart good to see all the negative mail I received.

Dear Abby: I just had to write after reading the letter from "Fuming in Ontario," the man who was angry when people cut in ahead of him in line.

I, too, used to get angry and fume about this. Actually, I was more angry at myself for not having the nerve to say something to them at the time. Then I decided to be more assertive. (I discovered that one need not be obnoxious to be assertive.)

I learned to say, politely but loudly, "Perhaps you didn't notice that the end of the line is over there, and I'm sure you won't mind waiting your turn like the rest of us have." It works every time. — Assertive In Urbana, Ohio

Dear Assertive: Good suggestion. Here's another one:

Dear Abby: Whenever someone tries to get in line ahead of me, I say, loudly, "I don't mind letting you in ahead of me, if all those people behind me don't object." Then I address the people in line with, "What do you say, folks?"

Naturally, everyone in line is

"thumbs down" on the idea, and they start yelling, "Nothing doing! No way! Go to the end of the line like we did!" — No Cutting In In Phoenix

Dear Abby: I've been a delivery person for many years, and you could help all of us in the trade by impressing upon your readers how important it is to be specific when giving an address. It may seem rather unimportant to indicate whether it's street, avenue, boulevard, road, drive, court, lane or whatever when specifying a delivery address. Given how most metropolitan areas may have a 24th Street as well as a 24th Avenue, or an Elm Street, Elm Place, Elm Drive, etc., there are a lot of important documents, parts orders, blueprints and pizzas needlessly heading off in the wrong direction. Thanks, Abby! — Greg Palmer, Oakland, Calif.

Dear Greg: A misdirected pizza is merely an inconvenience, but an ambulance, fire truck or police car heading off in the wrong direction can be a major catastrophe.

Readers, pay attention when you give your address. And by the way, is your residence clearly marked and visible at night in case an ambulance, fire truck or police car has been sent there?

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Gibson And Glover Are Lethal To 'Batman' At The Box Office

By John Horn
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOLLYWOOD — The cop buddy team of Mel Gibson and Danny Glover proved lethal in the weekend box office sweepstakes with "Lethal Weapon II" drop-kicking "Batman" from atop the box-office charts.

"Great Balls of Fire!" the rockumentary about musician Jerry Lee Lewis, collapsed to 10th place in its second week.

According to box-office figures released Monday, "Lethal Weapon II" grossed more on Saturday alone ($7.8 million) than the original "Lethal Weapon" made during its entire first weekend in 1987.

The sequel sold $20.4 million worth of tickets last weekend.

For "Batman," the caped crusader brought in $19.2 million last weekend, but fell out of the top spot for the first time since the movie's June 23 premiere.

In third place was the Disney comedy "Honey, I Shrank the Kids," which drew $9.4 million to pass $50 million. In fourth was the comedy sequel "Ghostbusters II" with Bill Murray, on sales of $5.3 million.

The Steven Spielberg-directed "Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade" finished in fifth, collecting $5.205 million. "Dead Poets Society," the bittersweet drama starring Robin Williams, landed in sixth place with $5.186 million.

In seventh, falling sharply from its opening weekend, was "Karate Kid III," with sales of $4.9 million. Right behind was the new comedy "Weekend at Bernie's," which collected $4.5 million during the weekend but $6.4 million since opening on Wednesday.

Spike Lee's "Do the Right Thing" finished in ninth with $2.9 million. "Great Balls of Fire!" netted only $2.2 million.

Here are the top movies for the weekend as tallied by Exhibitor Relations Co., with distributor, weekend gross, number of theater screens, average per screen, total gross and number of weeks in release.

2. "Batman," Warner Bros., $19.3 million, 2,201 screens, $8,745 per screen, $141.7 million, three weeks.

3. "Honey, I Shrank the Kids," Disney, $9.4 million, 1,443 screens, $6,537 per screen, $59.2 million, three weeks.

4. "Ghostbusters II," Columbia, $5.3 million, 2,315 screens, $2,275 per screen, $85.5 million, four weeks.

5. "Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade," Paramount, $5.205 million, 1,917 screens, $2,715 per screen, $158.5 million, seven weeks.

6. "Dead Poets Society," Disney,

$5.186 million, 1,109 screens, $4,677 per screen, $56.8 million, six weeks.

7. "Karate Kid III," Columbia, $4.9 million, 1,560 screens, $3,145 per screen, $21.6 million, two weeks.

8. "Weekend at Bernie's," 20th Century Fox, $4.5 million, 1,134 screens, $3,974 per screen, $6.4 million, one week.

9. "Do the Right Thing," Universal, $2.9 million, 361 screens, $8,080 per screen, $8.8 million, two weeks.

James Bond Filmmakers A Close-Knit Crew

By Bob Thomas
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — In a movie world where studio bosses seem to change chairs as frequently as they do shirts, one close-knit group of filmmakers has been prospering for 17 years. They are the folks who bring the biennial adventures of James Bond.

"Licence to Kill," a midsummer entry in the season of blockbusters, boasts a veteran crew. Albert R. (Cubby) Broccoli has produced or co-produced all 16 of the Bond films. Richard Maibaum has co-written 13. Desmond Llewellyn has played the gadget maker Q in 14. Peter Lamont has been production designer for 14. John Barry has scored 11 Bond films, though a conflict of assignments kept him from the new one (Michael Kamen takes his place). John Glen has directed the last five.

In addition, stunt coordinators, special effects designers, publicists, stunt men and others have long served the Bond pictures.

Michael Wilson dates back to the 1964 "Goldfinger," on which he was an assistant director for the Fort Knox sequence. He has been with Broccoli for 17 years, first as assistant, then executive producer.

In the recent films he has been co-producer and co-writer. The New Yorker formerly practiced international taxation law, a good background for worldwide filming. Interviewed in his office at MGM-UA, he was asked about the peculiar — to Americans — spelling of "Licence to Kill."

"There was some discussion over whether we should spell it as American usually do — though the dictionary lists both 'license,' which comes first, and 'licence,'" he said. "In England, the noun is always spelled 'licence' and the verb is 'license.' We decided since we had a British subject and a British agent and Ian Fleming had written it that way as a title, we would adopt that spelling."

Only the title is Fleming's; the plot was devised by the filmmakers because all of Fleming's plots have been used up.

Starting with "Dr. No" in 1962, the first five Bond films were released annually. Now they come every other year, and that allows for a more sensible pace.

From the start, the Bond movies were unbeatable at the box office with their winning combination of violence, mystery, exotic locales, sex, sophistication, high-tech toys and almost campy humor.

The Bond movies also made credit and pre-credit sequences memorable bits to watch. In "From Russia With Love," for example, a man presumably with Bond's face is chased and killed. The titles then emerge on the undulating body of a belly dancer.

"Licence to Kill" began two years ago with a trip to China in search of locales. Wilson and Maibaum tried a couple of stories based in China but they didn't work out.

The two writers decided to follow the headlines and spin a yarn about a notorious drug dealer who controls a Latin American country. The scripting period took about eight months.

"Normally, we begin our preproduction in February," said Wilson. "We started filming in Mexico in mid-July, and we finished around Thanksgiving time. We go into post-production until around Easter. Then we have the film ready for July release."

Unlike previous Bond movies that have spanned continents, "Licence to Kill" was shot in Mexico and Key West, Fla. The company filmed interiors at Mexico City's Churubusco studio, street scenes of "Isthmus City" in and around the capital and seaside locations at Acapulco. A second unit worked at Mexicali in Baja for 14 weeks to stage a spectacular chase of tanker trucks, the climax of the film.

Despite the heavy logistics, Wilson reported that the cost of "Licence to Kill" was $30 million to $35 million. This, he said, was about average for a big production these days.

Timothy Dalton seems more comfortable in the new film than he did in his first Bond outing, "The Living Daylights," Wilson agreed.

"What happened was that when we first cast Dalton in 'Living Daylights,' we had already written the script. He came in very late, and we had already written sort of a generic Bond. Dalton played it in his style. After working with him on one film, it was quite obvious that he could not or should not imitate the Roger Moore style.

"Dalton brings something different," he said. "This was an opportunity for us to write a different direction for Bond, using Timothy's personality as a catalyst. Four actors have played James Bond (Sean Connery, George Lazenby, Moore, Dalton) and each has brought a new approach to the character. That's what keeps the series contemporary and interesting."

The producer would not reveal the contractual arrangements with Dalton, but he indicated that both the producers and cast would like to see the association continue.

And the next adventure for Bond? "We'll wait for this one to get out, take a little rest, then start all over again."

Beautiful Women Key To Bond's Successes

Clubs' Benefit Special To Paul

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEWARK, N.J. — A benefit concert for the Boys and Girls Clubs had special meaning for Alan Paul of the pop group The Manhattan Transfer, who got a start thanks to the organization.

The Boys Club of Newark provided him a college scholarship, private singing lessons and emotional encouragement, said Paul, a club trustee.

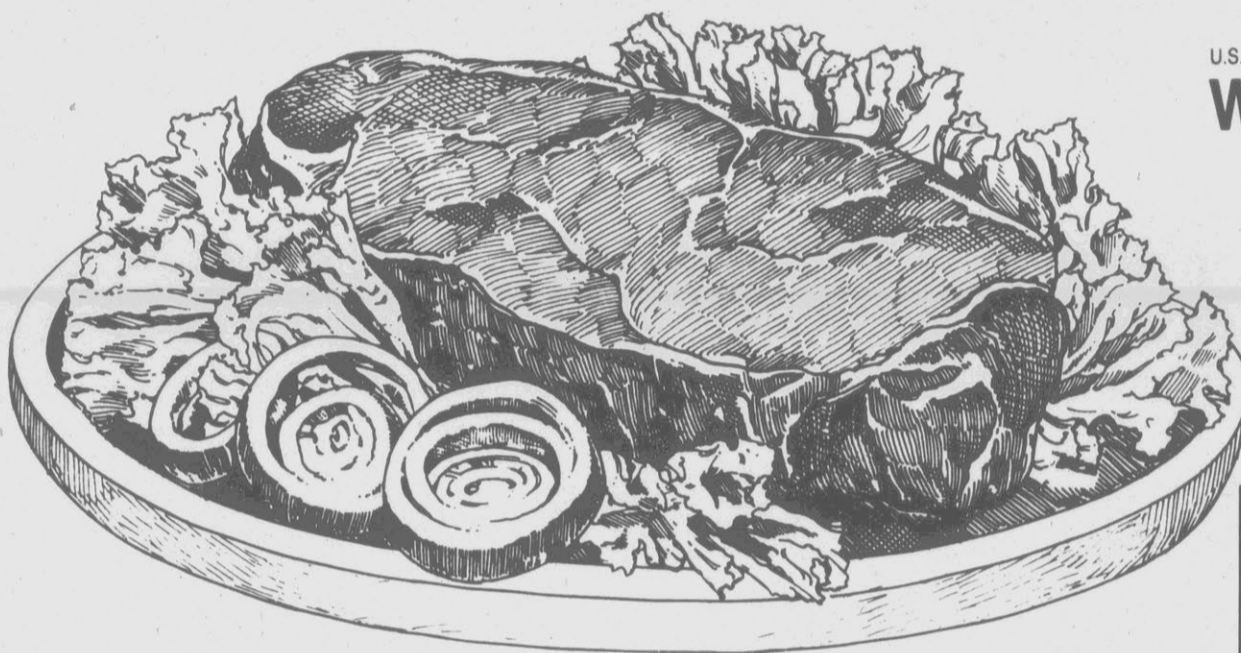

"They always let me sing at parties and other functions," said Paul. "That helped my self-esteem and made me believe in myself and my talent."

The benefit Monday at Newark Symphony Hall featured The Manhattan Transfer, the four-member a cappella group; Take Six, the Grammy-winning gospel group; and singer Dionne Warwick, an East Orange native.

Paul said Ms. Warwick, a family friend, took him to his first recording studio when he was 14 years old.

Frozen Delights

By Minnie Bernardino
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

There is something calming and meditative about ice creams — icy desserts in general — particularly when savored on a sweltering summer day. As the frosty morsel melts in your mouth, it freezes you for a moment, taking you to sensuous, refreshing heights.

The growing appeal of frosty desserts has inspired chefs to make their own ice creams, gelati, ices and sorbets. It is a great opportunity for these chefs to provide better taste and calorie or cholesterol control, to introduce an uncommon ingredient (how about tarragon in sorbet or Mexican chiles in Southwest-flavored ice cream, for instance?) and of course, to ensure freshness.

Another trend entices the visual senses, compensating for smaller ice cream portions with beautiful presentations. Some fancy chefs go as far as to orchestrate dessert plates nouvelle style — by simply staying away from the shape of scoops. To make embellishing an easier task, they frequently use fresh fruits, berries and exotic fruits as well as rich-tasting sauces and purees.

Favored for their low-calorie advantage, ices are on the rise on dessert lists. Characterized by non-dairy, water-based mixtures, ices evolved in biblical times, with records referring to King Solomon's fondness for ice drinks.

CAFE JACOULET'S CHOCOLATE-RASPBERRY MOUSSE PARFAIT

1 1/4 cups milk
1/2 vanilla bean, split and scraped
6 egg yolks
1/2 cup plus 2 tbsps. sugar
3/4 lb. bittersweet chocolate, chopped
2 cups whipping cream
Raspberry Mousse
Raspberry Sauce

Scald milk with scraped vanilla bean in heavy saucepan over medium heat until cream rises. Combine egg yolks and sugar in bowl. Whisk until light-colored. Add half of milk mixture to yolk mixture in bowl, whisking to blend. Return to pan and cook over medium heat until mixture coats back of spoon.

Strain mixture. Quickly add chopped chocolate to hot mixture to melt. Cool. Whip cream until soft peaks form. Fold into chocolate mixture (will make 7 cups).

Alternately spoon about 1-3 to 1/2 cup chocolate mixture with 1/4 to 1-3 cup Raspberry Mousse into 6 to 8 goblets or parfait glasses (2 layers of each per glass), freezing each layer quickly to harden slightly before adding next layer. Freeze 4 to 8 hours or overnight.

Serve with Raspberry Sauce or favorite custard sauce or creme anglaise. Garnish with fresh raspberries and leaf-shaped chocolate if desired. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Variation: Turn alternate mixtures of chocolate and raspberry (or separately) into individual souffle dishes or terrine mold or loaf dish and freeze. Slice molds into bars or wedges and serve on pool of raspberry sauce or creme anglaise.

Frozen Dinners Can Be Nutritious And Convenient

Q: Summer is so hectic. Our family seems to be relying on frozen dinners. Are they OK nutrition wise? M.J., Greenville

A: You can rather easily balance out meals made from frozen dinners. Sometimes it is easier than eating out. Yes, frozen dinners can be nutritious and convenient. Choose frozen dinners that include a plain vegetable combination as part of the entree. Don't use too many of those with fried foods or swimming in gravy. Read the labels, especially if you are watching your weight. The portion controlled dinners are an excellent way to do so. Once the dinner is gone, you can't be tempted to take seconds, at least without cooking another whole meal. If you are eating frozen meals regularly, try to limit how many other fast foods you eat. Fast food and frozen meals often have more fat and salt and less fiber than our homemade meals. Have a glass of skim milk, a slice of whole grain bread, or a piece of fresh fruit with the frozen dinner to give calcium, fiber and some other vitamins, especially if you are using just pies or pizzas. So, don't feel guilty if you stock your freezer and fridge with wholesome foods that various family members can "zap" while they are on the run. We have a handout that lists 99 frozen dinners that are acceptable in calories, fat and sodium. Send us a self-addressed envelope if you want a copy. And when you do find a minute to cook, fill those trays with your own food, freeze and use later. I always thought my mom's home made TV dinners were the best!

Dear Readers: I just visited the Food Expo Show put on by the Institute of Food Technologists. This is the place that makers of ingredients for processed foods show their newest ideas for the future. The ingredients we saw may not be in foods for a year or two, but it's clear the food industry is moving fast toward lower fat, lower cholesterol, lower sodium and high fiber foods. And, the public's interest in fat has the ingredient manufacturers making lower fat everything - especially cheeses and cheese flavorings.

There are many ingredients to substitute for the tropical oils. And there were many Asian firms with wide varieties of natural flavorings and colorings for foods. It was a wonderland of sights and smells. I'll be truthful. Some of the new "healthier ingredients" didn't taste or look as good as the old. But, some were even better in flavor, color, texture and odor than the old ones. We'll be seeing lots of changes in the next few years in processed foods. I'll keep you informed!

Picking Hot Dogs Can Be Down Right Complicated

By Carole Sugarman
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Life has gotten complicated, and so have hot dogs. The simple frankfurter now comes bun-sized and jumbo-sized, cheese-flavored as well as the familiar flavor, and lite, lean or lower in salt, while traditional pork and beef have been joined by turkey and chicken.

And for those who really want options, there are wieners with an all-in-one combination of pork, chicken and turkey.

Americans ate almost 2 billion pounds of hot dogs last year; in fact, 85 percent of U.S. households stock them. "It's like rice in China," says Jim Urlick, prepared-sausage manager for Hormel.

Despite Americans' craving for anything made from chicken, the frank of choice continued to be meat — either all beef or a mixture of beef and pork. Half a billion pounds of poultry hot dogs were eaten last year, but according to the American Meat Institute, the poundage has been increasing steadily.

"The turkey side of the business has been growing rapidly," says Jim Aehl, spokesman for Oscar Mayer, the country's largest-selling hot-dog vendor, which also owns the Louis Rich Co., maker of turkey franks.

Poultry franks are nothing new, of course, having made their debut about 10 years ago as what consumers presumably thought was a more nutritious alternative to pork and beef.

Many more players have gotten into the market in recent years, and there is now a reduced-fat competitor hitting the shelves, this one made from meat. "A real threat to the poultry franks," Urlick predicts.

Last year the U.S. Department of Agriculture revamped its regulations, which now permit processors to replace some of the fat in frankfurters with water, thus resulting in a lower-fat product. A handful of companies has responded with new formulations.

Swift-Eckrich, for example, is test marketing a combination of pork, turkey and beef in a frank with 25 percent less fat than the standard meat hot dog. Hormel has just rolled out its Light & Lean meat hot dog in Minneapolis and Atlanta. The product has far fewer calories and less fat than its poultry-derived rivals. According to Hormel's Urlick, Light & Lean was made possible with leaner meat.

Deciphering the differences among hot dogs is difficult. In the Washington area Oscar Mayer appears to be the only company to disclose complete nutritional information on its labels, including the amount of sodium and cholesterol.

The amount of sodium is "nothing to be too proud of in a hot dog," said Urlick.

Then again, "we have a feeling that the people who buy frankfurters for their nutritional value you could count on one hand," said Carl Gylfe, vice president of marketing for Hygrade, maker of Ball Park and Grillmaster franks. According to Gylfe, "price rules the roost."

Not too many people are likely to be popping hot dogs to boost their vitamin and mineral needs, but there are clearly consumers trying to choose products that are less likely to inflict dietary damage.

Sorry to say, no matter how you pick it, slice it or grill it, a hot dog will never be guilt-free. Choosing a poultry hot dog over a beef frank is not akin to choosing between good and evil. Poultry hot dogs may be up to 25 percent lower in fat than their meat counterparts but still derive more than 70 percent of their calories from fat.

An informal survey of nearly 30 hot-dog products sold in Washington supermarkets found poultry franks ranging from 71 to 78 percent fat; beef and meat franks ranging from 78 to 84 percent fat.

In addition, many poultry franks have more sodium than their meat counterparts — and more cholesterol. In response to an inquiry, most companies provided their missing sodium data, if they had it.

The sodium range for poultry franks was 265 to 473 milligrams per ounce; for meat and beef, the range was 230 to 300 milligrams. Few companies provided cholesterol data, most saying they had not run the necessary tests. According to U.S. Department of Agriculture data, however, the standard chicken hot dog contains 45 milligrams of cholesterol per 1.6-ounce link; meat franks contain 23 milligrams.

Jim Marsden, vice president of scientific and technical affairs for the American Meat Institute, said that some poultry franks may have more sodium because chicken and turkey have a higher moisture level than beef or pork, and thus a quicker spoilage rate. Salt is a preservative and allows for a longer shelf life.

As for the increase in cholesterol, Marsden attributed it to the fact that poultry franks are almost always 100 percent mechanically deboned poultry, a paste-like mixture of meat, bone marrow and cartilage that is made from the remains of animal carcasses that have been deboned by hand.

Poultry-frank processors can use any percentage of mechanically separated product that they wish to in their products, according to Perry Davis, a food technologist with the USDA's standards and labeling branch — and they don't have to identify its presence on the label.

Last year a decade-old controversy re-erupted when USDA proposed allowing red-meat processors to use up to 10 percent mechanically separated meat without listing it on the label. Because beef and pork processors previously have been required to list the product, none has opted to use it, believing negative consumer perceptions would deter sales. Nevertheless, poultry-frank processors have been using it and not listing it for years.)

Firms use mechanically deboned poultry because it is an economical source of lean meat, according to Marsden. The problem is that it is too lean, he said, which would result in a hot dog with the consistency of a "rubber ball." To make it palatable, processors add poultry skin, and "the skin is just loaded with cholesterol," he said.

Not all poultry-frank processors subscribe to this practice, however. "We do not add skin to our product formulation for the purpose of increasing the fat content because the material is too lean," said Pete Mingin, director of deli operations for Holly Farms.

Fruit Medley Slump Offers Positive Proof That Luscious Desserts Are Always In Style

By Nancy Byal
BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS

What in the world is a slump? Or for that matter, a flummery or fool? They're all the names of fruit desserts we found in old recipe books. Luscious fruit desserts will never be out of style. Here's a contemporary slump, cooked in a skillet, made with three fruits and a tender biscuit topper.

FRUIT MEDLEY SLUMP

- 2 cups sliced, peeled peaches (4 medium)
- 1 1/2 cups sliced pitted red plums
- 1/2 cup blueberries or raspberries
- 3/4 cup sugar
- 2 tbsps. water
- 1 cup all-purpose flour
- 1 1/2 tbsps. baking powder
- 1 tsp. sugar
- 1/4 tsp. cream of tartar
- 1/8 tsp. salt

- 1/4 tsp. baking soda
- 1/4 cup shortening
- 1/4 cup milk
- 1 tbsps. sugar
- 1/4 tsp. ground cinnamon
- Light cream (optional)

In a 10-inch skillet combine peaches, plums, berries, 3/4 cup sugar and water. Bring to boiling; reduce heat. Cover and simmer 5 minutes.

Meanwhile, in a mixing bowl combine flour, baking powder, 1 teaspoon sugar, cream of tartar, salt and soda. Cut in shortening until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Make a well in the center; add milk all at once. Stir just until dough clings together.

On lightly floured surface knead dough for 10 to 12 strokes. Roll or pat dough 1/4-inch thick. Using cookie cutters, cut into desired shapes, dipping cutter in flour between cuts. Or, cut dough into 2-by-1-inch rectangles. Drop cutouts onto hot fruit. Sprinkle with mixture of 1 tablespoon sugar and cinnamon. Cook, covered, 10 to 15 minutes or until dumplings test done. To serve, spoon warm fruit and dumplings into serving bowls. Serve with light cream. Makes 8 servings.

Nutrition information per serving: 237 cal., 3 g pro., 43 g carb., 7 g fat, 112 mg sodium. U.S. RDA: 12 percent vit. C.

Pan-Ready Boned Chicken Breasts Are A Versatile Convenience Food

By Nancy Byal
BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS

Not all convenience foods come in a box or freezer carton. My top convenience pick is boned skinless chicken breast halves. They're pan-ready, cook in less than 10 minutes, and can be varied in dozens of ways.

GLAZED APRICOT-GINGER CHICKEN

- 4 boned skinless chicken breast halves (about 1 pound total)
- 1/4 cup broken walnuts, pecans or almonds
- 2 tbsps. margarine or butter
- Salt and pepper
- 1/2 cup apricot or peach preserves
- 1 tbsps. vinegar
- 1/4 tsp. ground ginger

Rinse chicken and pat dry. In a large skillet cook chicken and nuts in margarine over medium heat for 8 to 10 minutes or until chicken is tender, turning occasionally. Transfer chicken to a serving platter, reserving juices in skillet. Season chicken breasts lightly with salt and pepper; keep warm.

For glaze, stir preserves, vinegar and ginger into juices in skillet. Cook and stir over medium heat for 1 to 2 minutes or until mixture is heated through. Spoon glaze over chicken breasts. Makes 4 servings.

Producers Now Recognizing Needs For Nutritious Fast Food

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

In the summer, especially, you want to be outdoors having fun — not indoors cooking.

Fortunately, producers are catching on to our need for nutritious fast food, and more and more grocers are adding items to their shelves that can add interest and variety to quick summer meals, along with instant nutrition.

"Thaw and toss" salads, for instance, can be found in many supermarkets' frozen vegetable sections. One pasta salad contains both plain and spinach pasta, petite peas, carrots, celery, sweet red peppers and onion. Simply move the package from freezer to refrigerator in the morning to allow safe thawing, or thaw under cold running water later in the day. At dinner time, combine the salad mix with no-oil Italian salad dressing and canned tuna or salmon.

For endurance athletes and other eager eaters, round out the meal with hearty Kaiser rolls, a glass of skim milk and a big chunk of watermelon.

Another "thaw and toss" gem even contains a protein source. Mixed with the broccoli, carrots, Italian green beans and sweet red peppers are three kinds of beans: small white beans, dark red kidney beans and garbanzos. This blend is especially good with reduced-calorie ranch style dressing.

SUMMER CURRY

1/2 cup cold chicken or turkey chunks
1 tsp. low-fat mayonnaise

1/4 tsp. curry powder
1/4 cup chopped celery
1/2 cup seedless grapes, halved
1 tbsp. slivered almonds
Salt and pepper

Combine chicken or turkey with curry-flavored mayonnaise. Stir in celery grapes and almonds.

Add salt and pepper to suit your taste and blood pressure. Serves one.

SESAME SPARKLER
2-3 ounces cold cooked scallops
1/4 cup cold cooked rice
1/4 cup sliced water chestnuts
5-6 snow peas
2 tps. sesame oil
Dash grated lemon peel
Dash soy sauce
Combine scallops, rice, water chestnuts, snow peas, sesame oil and the lemon peel. Season with a dash of soy sauce. Serves one.

Age-Old Barbecue Has Gone High-Tech

By Linda Giuca
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Cooking by fire may be older than civilization, but the multimillion-dollar business that surrounds outdoor cooking is a relatively new phenomenon.

No one quite pictures prehistoric man outfitted in a chef's apron, cap and flame-retardant gloves, brandishing a high-tech-looking fork and spatula. Modern man has these luxuries, thanks to the barbecue business.

The only thing that has not changed in outdoor cooking is the fire itself. Barbecue grills have become so large and outfitted with so many conveniences that they seem like portable kitchens. These gas grills feature various cooking levels, temperature controls, shelves and bi-level grates. The large, free-standing units can cost upward of a few hundred dollars, but they are discounted heavily.

Built-in barbecues are becoming popular again. "The built-in has been around for years, but when portables were introduced, the built-in waned a bit," says Stan Lappen, a co-owner of Lappen's Hearth & Home Centers in Connecticut.

Lappen sells Fire Magic charcoal or gas-burning units that are built into the design of a back-yard patio or deck. The cooking surface is larger — 22 by 24 inches — than many portable units and cooks hotter, Lappen says. A basic gas-fired unit costs $400-$750, while the charcoal-burning grill costs $200 to $300. Smoker ovens that fit on top of the grill surface, a cart and other accessories also are available in the line.

What are the items that will make al fresco cooking easier — and safer? First and most basic are long-handled spatulas, forks and tongs, heavy-duty mitts and holders, funky aprons and grilling baskets for whole and filleted fish, chops, steaks, hamburgers and vegetables.

But the selection does not stop there. Visits to some kitchenware shops turned up the following accessories (the same or similar products may be found at department or discount stores):

Wood chips. Mesquite appeared on the culinary scene a few years ago, and in many areas its appeal is still strong. New from Charcoal Companion are hickory or mesquite smoking chips for gas grills; puncturing holes in the aluminum foil container allows smoke to escape but prevents the chips from clogging the gas grill.

Grapevines. These cuttings from California are added to the fire for their fragrant aroma.

Kebab racks and skewers. Charcoal Companion, a manufacturer of a variety of barbecue items, thinks it has solved the problem of kebabs that stick to a grill. The company has designed a rack that sits on the grill and holds the skewers away from the grate.

Smokers. C.M. International's smoker can be used on top of a grill or a stove. The rectangular pan has a slide-on lid, fold-out handles and a rack to cover the smoking dust. Jeff Smith, better known as the Frugal Gourmet on public television, has endorsed the smoker. A more expensive version is the electric Smoke 'N Pit, a free-standing unit for smoking foods.

Pots and pans. Graniteware pots are fairly lightweight, ceramic-on-steel pans that can be used on a stove top or grill. Popular this time of year are oversized pots for steaming corn or lobsters — complete with painted pictures of both on the speckled dark-gray background.

Gadgets. The Barbe-claw by Comalco is a rather lethal-looking utensil with a combination fork and hook at the end of a long handle. It's used for picking up steaks or chops.

Charcoal Companion makes steak and poultry buttons that test for the meat as rare, medium or well-done.

Perfect Fish is a gadget that translates the 10 minutes-per-inch cooking time method devised by the Department of Fisheries of Canada. The contraption measures the thickness of fillets or a whole fish.

Odds and ends. A fun addition to patio decor is a Crate-o-Veggies light set. Ten lights in the shape of carrots or corn are strung on a 14-foot wire. The set can be strung along an outdoor wall or draped along the side of a round table.

Put Strawberries To Fruitful Use

By Sherrie Clinton
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

The sweet goodness of sun-ripened strawberries is now in many markets.

Gwendolyn B. Hagood, an extension agent for home economics for the University of Maryland's Cooperative Extension Service, recommends selecting berries that are fully ripened, with a rich, red color and fresh-looking caps. Containers should be free of stains. The stains indicate over-ripened or spoiled fruit. Because strawberries are rather delicate, they require gentle handling.

Avoid washing strawberries and removing the caps until you want to use them. Wash them by rinsing with a gentle spray of cool water while they are in a strainer. Remove the caps after washing to prevent diluting the flavor.

The following two recipes put this delicious, sweet berry to fruitful use.

STRAWBERRY ICE CREAM

Slice 1 to 2 cups of ripe berries into bite-size pieces. Combine with 1/2 cup sugar and mix well. Cover and allow to "age" for 24 hours in the refrigerator. The syrup produced by this process infuses into the fruit pieces and prevents them from freezing solid during the hardening process. When the berries are aged, reserve a portion to use as whole pieces and puree the rest. Add to the following:

- 2 cups heavy cream
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 2 cups light cream
- 1 1/2 tps. pure vanilla extract
- 2 reconstituted dried eggs, beaten well
- 1/4 tsp. salt

Combine all ingredients, and stir well with a wooden spoon until sugar is dissolved. Process according to ice cream freezer instructions. Mix in the whole pieces of fruit at the end of the process and before hardening. Top with fresh berries if desired.

Other fruit can be substituted for the strawberries.

STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKE

- 4 cups sliced fresh strawberries
- 2 to 3 tbsps. sugar
- 1 1/2 cups all purpose flour
- 1 1/2 tps. baking powder
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- 1/2 cup shortening

- 1/3 to 1/2 cup milk
- 1 tbsps. butter or margarine, melted
- 1/2 cup firmly packed brown sugar
- Whipped cream
- Strawberry leaves for garnish, optional

Combine sliced strawberries and sugar; stir gently and chill 1 to 2 hours. Combine flour, baking powder and salt. Cut in shortening with a pastry blender until mixture resembles coarse meal. Gradually add enough milk to form a soft dough, stirring just until dry ingredients are moistened.

Turn dough out onto a lightly floured surface, knead 4 or 5 times and then roll the dough into an 11-by-8-inch rectangle on a lightly floured surface. Combine butter and brown sugar; spread evenly over dough. Roll up jellyroll fashion, starting at narrow edge. Pinch seams together; cut in 1-inch slices. Place on a lightly greased baking sheet. Bake at 450 degrees for 18 minutes or until lightly browned. Serve with sliced strawberries and whipped cream. Garnish with strawberry leaves if desired.

Makes 8 servings.

Teach Microwave Basics To Kids With This Recipe

By Nancy Byal
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Here's a simple recipe to teach your children the basics of microwave cooking. Second time around, let them try it on their own. Kids like the Tex-Mex flavor also; it's peppy but not too hot. You can add hot taco sauce to spice up the dish.

CHILI-MUFFIN DINNER

- One 12 1/2-oz. pkg. (6) frozen corn muffins
- 1 lb. lean ground beef
- One 15 1/2-oz. can chili beans
- One 12-oz. can whole kernel corn
- One 14 1/2-oz. can Mexican-style stewed tomatoes
- One 8-oz. jar taco sauce
- 6 slices American cheese, cut into triangles
- One 8-oz. container sour cream dip with toasted onion

Thaw muffins in the microwave

Crumble meat into a 3-quart microwave-safe casserole. Cook, covered, on 100 percent power (high) for 3 minutes. Stir meat with a fork to break up large pieces. Cook meat on high for 2 minutes more. Drain meat in a colander. Return meat to casserole. Drain beans and corn in colander. Stir beans, corn, undrained tomatoes and taco sauce into meat in casserole. Cook, covered, on 100 percent power (high) for 3 minutes. Stir; then cook 4 to 6 minutes more or until bubbly and hot; stir again.

Cut muffins in half. Place 2 halves on each plate. Spoon chili mixture over each. Top each serving with cheese and sour cream dip. Makes 6 servings.
