Greenville Plant Among Best, But Problems Lurk

By J. Ward Best
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The state considers Greenville's wastewater treatment plant one of the best operated facilities in the region. But environmental groups have targeted the plant for a thorough study because of potential problems lurking around the corner.

More than eight million gallons of sewage flow through the three-year-old treatment plant each day. Six million gallons of treated wastewater return to the Tar River, making Greenville the second largest discharger in the river basin behind Rocky Mount.

Environmental groups worry about the increased amount of sewage coming to the facility and the increased release of nitrogen — a known contributor to the fish kills in the Pamlico. The six major industries releasing potentially hazardous pollutants into the river through the city's treatment plant also worry environmentalists.

This is the final article in a three-part series on wastewater treatment plants along the Tar River. Today's article looks at Greenville's treatment plant.

Greenville Utilities Commission has also looked at the possibility of adding a bypass discharge pipe to Greenville's plant similar to the one in operation at the Rocky Mount wastewater treatment facility.

The plant in Rocky Mount has dumped more than 900 million gallons of partially treated waste into the Tar River, including sanitary products and human waste.

Malcolm Green, director of GUC, said plant officials have discussed the possibility of adding a bypass to the plant to handle high water conditions.

"If that's available to us, and that's an available alternative," Green said about the bypass, "we should be looking at it."

But Green said state Division of Environmental Management officials in the Washington, N.C., region office said DEM does not feel bypassing sewage is a viable treatment, and GUC has not made an official request to DEM for a bypass.

An official at Rocky Mount has said that other municipalities along the river, including Greenville, discharge wastes into the river, but without reporting them. Green disagreed and said the statement by Rocky Mount City Manager William Batchelor is untrue.

Leaders Begin Summit

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PARIS — Leaders of the world's seven richest nations, turning from partying to politics, opened their annual summit today with talks focusing on the economic struggles in Eastern Europe and the harsh repression of human rights in China.

The initial session of the 15th world economic summit began at the new glass Louvre pyramid, now the main entrance and architecturally controversial structure in front of the famed museum.

The first order of business was a picture-taking session for the "class photo" of President Bush and the leaders of Britain, France, West Germany, Japan, Italy and Canada.

Even before the summit began, Bush maneuvered unsuccessfully to obtain a final agreement between Mexico and its commercial bank lenders on restructuring Mexico's foreign debt of more than $100 billion.

Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari told Bush that no deal is in sight, despite French President Francois Mitterrand's warning that "Mexico is on the edge of an explosion because of the weight of its debt."

Today's first session of the Big Seven industrial democracies coincides with the climax of three days of festivities marking the 200th birthday of the French Revolution.

State Reaches Agreement With Mobil On N.C. Drilling

By J. Ward Best
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

RALEIGH — Gov. Jim Martin announced today that the state has reached an agreement with Mobil Oil Corp. which will allow the oil conglomerate to drill for gas off North Carolina's Outer Banks.

The agreement between the state, Mobil Oil and the U.S. Department of Interior's Minerals Management Service effectively kills a bill by U.S. Rep. Walter B. Jones, D-N.C., which would require the company to conduct an environmental impact statement before beginning any drilling operations.

Mobil Oil has proposed drilling 35 miles offshore, and has said it hopes to find as much as five trillion cubic feet of gas along the continental shelf.

Martin announced the agreement today at a press conference with Attorney General Lacy Thornburg and officials of Mobil Oil.

In a statement from his office, the governor said the agreement "offers safeguards that traditional environmental impact statements and congressional action do not provide."

"The custom-made report gives North Carolina far more clout and puts us in a much stronger position than any other plan does. This plan protects fishery spawning, mandates public hearings, strengthens our legal position, assures environmental review and guards our vital coastal commerce," Martin said in the statement.

The agreement includes provisions for environmental reviews during development and production stages of drilling and environmental documentation, and the agreement calls for a review of all 189 square miles under lease by Mobil — provisions not included in environmental impact statements.

The agreement also requires at least six public hearings on the drilling.

'Miracle' Pilot Had Been Shot

By Brian Murphy
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — A pilot who miraculously survived an 800-mile flight while he was unconscious had been shot through the abdomen at some point before he crash-landed in the Bahamas and swam to rescuers, police said today.

"It was unquestionably a gunshot wound," said Hollywood Police Chief Richard Witt. "The surgeons at the Hollywood Hospital said there was a wound that passed through the left rib cage, (and the colon), exited and struck him in the arm and exited again."

Authorities have not recovered the small-caliber gun that caused the wound and believe it went down with the plane.

Authorities earlier had speculated that Thomas Root may have had a heart attack or inhaled carbon monoxide.

The chief said a powder burn indicated Root was shot at close range, but did not say it was self-inflicted.

"That's all a matter of speculation right now," he said. "There is always the possibility of (a) self-inflicted wound."

Witt said that Root could have been shot before takeoff, but that the wound is believed to have occurred in the air. He said the investigation may come under federal jurisdiction.

Military pilots who saw Root in the plane didn't see anyone else aboard, according to Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Fred Farrah.

Root remained in stable condition under heavy sedation at Hollywood's Memorial Hospital today.

His odyssey started on a flight from Washington to Rocky Mount, N.C., and ended when he crashed after his single-engine plane ran out of fuel 10,000 feet above Bahamian waters early Thursday afternoon.

For nearly four hours, military jets shadowed the Cessna 210 Centurion as it traveled down the East Coast on autopilot with the 36-year-old lawyer from Alexandria, Va., slumped in the cockpit.

"I thought there was no way he was going to survive that crash," said Air Force Staff Sgt. Scott Tracy, one of four specially trained rescuers who parachuted to the crash site, about 15 miles east of the island of Eleuthera and nearly 800 miles from his planned destination.

Wholesale Prices Fall

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Wholesale prices fell 0.1 percent in June, the first drop in 18 months, driven down by steep declines in energy and food prices, the government said today.

The slight decline in the Labor Department's Producer Price Index surprised most economists, who were expecting a moderate increase of 0.3 percent, and marked a sharp turnaround from the big 0.9 percent jump in May.

In another report, the Commerce Department said retail sales fell 0.4 percent in June — their first monthly back-to-back drop in nearly two years — as consumer spending remained sluggish, particularly for cars and other more costly durable goods.

School Board Puts Off Personnel Changes

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Less than five weeks before Pitt County teachers are to report to work for the fall semester, the Pitt Board of Education has not taken action on 13 personnel changes Superintendent Eddie West has recommended.

The changes include the naming of four new principals, six new assistant principals and three administrative moves. West has the authority to recommend transfers and promotions, but the 13-member board must ultimately approve the moves.

Board Chairman George Williams said he is working with West to set up a special meeting to allow the board to consider the personnel recommendations before the group's next scheduled meeting Aug. 7.

The board was first notified of the recommendations at its June 19 meeting. Williams would not comment on why the group postponed action at Monday's meeting, saying only that board members wanted time to re-examine concerns.

"I hope we'll be able to reconcile things and get everything squared away," he said. "The board will have to address those concerns. We felt like we needed to come together and do that."

After meeting nearly three hours in executive session Monday, the board also failed to either give West a public vote of confidence or take action to buy out the final year of his four-year contract. At least six board members have refused to say whether they support retaining West, but Williams would not comment on whether the delay on the personnel matters is politically linked to the decision on West's contract.

If there is no special meeting, the next scheduled meeting at which the board could consider the recommendations would come nine days before teachers report to work on Aug. 16. Students report Aug. 28.

Johann Bleicher, who was principal at Agnes Fullilove School in Greenville for 12 years before West recommended he be transferred to the post of substance abuse coordinator, said he perceives the board's delay as an effort to examine whether the personnel moves are essential to the goal of improved education.

"The board is not, in my opinion, being indecisive. It is simply exercising its responsibility to ensure the integrity of the objective being pursued and the decision-making process involved.

"When the discussion of such transfers is in the street many weeks before being presented, and when many of the principals affected were in no way informed of, or involved in, these decisions before their pronouncement, I am glad that the board takes pause for re-evaluation," Bleicher said.

"My main concern, as an educator and as a parent with two children about to begin school, is that we all learn to be more appropriately collaborative in the future," he said.

Robin Dailey, whom West has recommended to take over the principal's post at Sadie Sautter School in Greenville, said she is currently reporting to her new job.

She is preparing a new student handbook and meeting informally with faculty and staff, despite the fact that her move has not been finalized. She previously worked as an assistant principal at E.B. Aycock Junior High School in Greenville.

"With respect to my position at Sadie Sautter, unless I hear otherwise from the superintendent, I will continue to work in this position."

"Generally, I believe the board accepts the recommendations that are made by the superintendent. However, the board has the authority to approve or not approve the personnel recommendations," she said. "I'm just trying to be positive and do the job that the superintendent has asked me to do."

At the meeting Monday, two people spoke out against a recommendation to transfer Bleicher.

Etheridge To Name Panel For Middle Schools' Study

By Amy Gavigan
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The state's superintendent of public instruction feels North Carolina's middle schools have long been neglected, but he hopes to change that with the appointment of a committee to address concerns for education at that level.

"(We want) to examine the status of education at the middle level and to make recommendations for strengthening the capacity of local school districts in our state to provide an exemplary education," Bob Etheridge said Thursday night in Greenville at the fourth annual East Carolina Middle School Summer Conference.

Etheridge said a report on middle schools issued by the Carnegie Council on Adolescent Development "will serve as basis to relate to North Carolina."

The report makes a number of recommendations, including creation of "small communities of learning" and the assigning of a task force in each state to study the needs of middle grade schools, according to Etheridge.

"We must do everything possible to ensure that our 'in-between agers' do not get socially and educationally derailed in midjourney," said Etheridge. "It is important for us at the state department to work closer with universities and schools."

Etheridge said he hoped to have the committee members appointed and the panel functioning by September.

Etheridge served in the General Assembly for 10 years and was a proponent of the Basic Education Program enacted in 1985.

Dr. Nancy Farmer, the state's special assistant for middle grades education, said, "This (task force) is so overdue, I'm ready for it."

"I'm so excited, I could do cartwheels in the hall," Dr. Farmer said.

The problem, according to Dr. Farmer, is that there is much talk about emphasis on the early development years, high dropout rates and low achievement.

But, many don't consider the problems of 13- and 14-year-olds and "don't connect those problems with where they (13- and 14-year-olds) live eight hours a day," she said.

"Five years ago there was a tremendous need in this area for middle school leadership," said Dr. Farmer. "East Carolina University has responded with a sterling effort of collaboration."

"(Etheridge's) announcement here, at the conference, is saying that ECU has served as a model for collaboration and that we, at the state level, must do the same kinds of things," she said.

Dr. Farmer and Dr. Sammie Campbell Parrish, assistant state superintendent for program services, will provide staff assistance.

Dr. Parrish, who was unable to attend the conference, will assume the lead role, according to Dr. Farmer.

Dr. Don Spence, middle grades coordinator, ECU, said the implementation of a task force is a "step forward for middle grades education."

"(Etheridge) is the first (state) superintendent to focus on this age group," he said. "This is very positive and encouraging."

The middle school conference is designed to help educators bridge the gap between different levels of education, from elementary to college level.

Seminars, given Thursday and today, provide ideas for specific teaching strategies and creative problem solving.

Spence, who presided over the dinner meeting Thursday night, presented a Leadership Award for Innovation and Excellence in Middle Grade Education to Karen Foushee, a graduate assistant at ECU, and Betty Suggs, a sixth-grade teacher for Greene County schools.

Ms. Foushee, who is working on her master's degree, implemented a multischool interdisciplinary unit in conjunction with Ms. Suggs and her class.

Services Added

Carolina Telephone on Saturday will introduce in Farmville new computer-controlled digital electronic switching equipment that will enable customers to have several new telephone features at an additional cost, said Jackie Morris, district commercial manager.

These features include call forwarding, which permits a customer to transfer incoming calls to another local number; call waiting, which alerts a customer already using the phone of an incoming call; three party conference, which permits a three-way local or long-distance conversation with persons on two other lines, and speed dialing, which lets customers call either eight or 30 of their most frequently dialed numbers just by dialing a one-digit or two digit code for each number.

Morris said the new 4,096-line switching equipment at Farmville cost about $1,264,000. This cost includes the new digital equipment, building modifications and outside plant facilities.

Ribbon Cutting

The Birthing Center at Pitt County Memorial Hospital will host a ribbon cutting ceremony and open house for the public from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday.

The new facility, located between West Patient Bed Tower and the Regional Rehabilitation Center on Stantonsburg Road, will provide a home-like atmosphere for uncomplicated birth and postpartum care of both mother and baby.

A caesarean delivery room and up-to-date equipment will create a medically safe environment for emergency situations, according to Anna Scott, head nurse of the center.

The Birthing Center is a joint project between PCHM and the East Carolina University School of Medicine. The 1986-87 North Carolina General Assembly appropriated $1,248,000 for the construction of the building. An additional $794,000 was provided by PCHM for construction and equipment.

Kick-A-Thon Set

The Muscular Dystrophy Association and the Bill McDonald Karate School will present the 1989 "Kick-A-Thon" fund-raiser Saturday at East Carolina Mall.

The schedule of events includes: 11:30 a.m., a karate and self-defense demonstration; noon, a "Kick-A-Thon" fund-raiser; 1:15 p.m., karate and self-defense demonstration; 1:45 p.m., kickboxing demonstration, and 2 p.m., autograph party featuring North American featherweight champion Curtis "Buzzsaw" Evans and other martial artists.

Three Incumbents File

GRIFTON — Three incumbent town officials from Grifton have filed for re-election with the Pitt County Board of Elections.

Mayor Ralph Thaxton and commissioners William Smith and Julius "Gibb" Chauncey filed with the county board earlier this week.

Thaxton, a two-term incumbent, said he wanted to continue to attract residential and commercial development to the town.

"We're just working hard and trying to make the town as attractive as possible to get some people and industry to come here," the mayor said.

Thaxton, who served during World War II, is a member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. He is also a member of the First Baptist Church and the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

Chauncey is also running for a third term in Grifton as a commissioner. Smith, who was first elected in 1978, is running for a fourth term on the Grifton board.

Whiter Teeth?

Commonly asked questions and answers concerning this procedure.

Question: "How long does the procedure take?"
Answer: This procedure takes only 15 to 20 minutes to start and the patient completes the treatment at home and to their desired degree of whiteness; however, on your first visit, the dentist must prepare you for the procedure and usually a normal one-hour appointment is sufficient. The results are very predictable when the patient follows the instructions to the letter. Most cases can be completed within a two week period, more complicated cases may require a longer period of time. Patients who follow the instructions properly may see results within the first three days of treatment.

Question: "If this is such a new procedure, how can I be sure it's safe?"
Answer: Although it is a new product, it is based on the older bleaching techniques that have been in use on teeth for over twenty years. When used properly, these techniques have proven to be extremely safe but overpriced for most people. It is a much milder medication than anything ever used before for this purpose and is priced where every patient can now afford to look their very best with a totally different and easier procedure.

Question: "How long will the results last?"
Answer: The procedure can be permanent with occasional and proper maintenance.

mended that Patricia Brewer, who formerly held the substance abuse post, take over the top job at Agnes Fullilove, an alternative school for at-risk students that has been recognized nationally.

Bleicher said he has confidence in Ms. Brewer, but he is concerned that the quick change in leadership could adversely affect Agnes Fullilove's success or the performance of the students. All parties involved in personnel changes need to be more involved in the planning and transition, he said.

"In the context of the board's discussion of selling the building (on Watauga Avenue) and transferring the program to another place and... with the abrupt administrative changes, what that all says is: 'Hey, is this program viable.' It puts pressure on it at a critical time, too," Bleicher said.

Personnel moves each year usually trigger a string of changes as employees are transferred or promoted to fill the vacancies.

Bruce Gray, principal of Belvoir Elementary, worked as an administrator at three Pitt schools from 1983 to 1987. He said most administrators have the skills to be successful in their new jobs, but the tough part is becoming accustomed to the new surroundings.

"The initial thing is learning the environment, learning new people, learning new teachers and learning your public. That's the thing you have to address," he said. "You have to get the handle on assessing the needs and areas you need to grow in and what (directions the school) needs to be taken."

Gray said his transition to Belvoir was smooth, and the community welcomed him. He was transferred to the post two years ago from an assistant principal's job at Ayden Middle School, where he had worked for three years. Before that, he was an assistant principal at Chicod Elementary School.

In his two most recent moves, he said the board had already approved West's recommendation before he took the jobs, unlike the situation this year.

"I was interested to notice it was done differently this time," Gray said.

In addition to pending changes involving Ms. Dailey, Bleicher and Ms. Brewer, other personnel recommendations include: transferring Ed Tadlock from principal at Wellcome Middle to principal at Greenville Middle; promoting Harold Williams from assistant principal at J.H. Rose to principal at Wellcome Middle; promoting Isabelle Wicker from administrative intern at Sadie Sauter to assistant principal at the school; transferring Barbara Rouse from assistant principal at Ayden Middle to assistant principal at E.B. Aycock.

Also, promoting Susan Claybrook from teacher at D.H. Conley to assistant principal at Ayden Middle; moving John Carstarphen from principal at Greenville Middle to half-time assistant principal and half-time textbook coordinator at Elmhurst; promoting Ella T. Harris from administrative intern at Greenville Middle to assistant principal at J.H. Rose; transferring Claude Kennedy from assistant principal at D.H. Conley to assistant principal at Ayden-Grifton; moving Bernie Haselrig to the Community Schools program, and transferring Don McLane to the maintenance department.

West has also recommended advertising two open positions: assistant principal at Greenville Middle, and assistant principal at D.H. Conley.

City's Promotional Video Goes Back For More Editing

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Members of the Pitt-Greenville Convention and Visitors Authority may be headed back to the editing room to clip and snip the $15,000 video the board financed to market the city to meeting planners.

At the group's regular monthly meeting Thursday, Executive Director Al Nichols presented the board the final version of the five-and-a-half-minute color video highlighting the city's hospitality and meeting services.

Horizon Videos of Chapel Hill produced the video, which uses a female narrator and a spirited music and drum beat along with quick shots of area hotels, businesses, festivals and recreational spots.

The video will not be used to mail to potential tourists, but as a specific marketing tool that will be utilized in combination with sales calls and printed material geared toward potential clients, Nichols said.

After viewing the video Thursday, the board's initial reaction was positive. But after a second viewing, several board members said there were glaring omissions in failing to clearly show that Greenville is the home of East Carolina University, a medical school, an airport and major cultural events.

"If I didn't know a university was here, I wouldn't know it after seeing that," said Don Leggett.

The video includes a glimpse of the ECU football team in action, but board members said that would not be enough for anyone unfamiliar with the area to understand there is a large university in Greenville. The video should include a shot of a campus sign and narration about the university and medical school, members said.

Authority Chairman Rudy Alexander, an assistant vice chancellor at ECU, appointed authority members Leggett, Art Thompson and Morris Brody to work with Nichols and his staff to determine if it is economically feasible to insert new segments of video and narration.

"I think that it was a major omission, not having (the university represented)," he said. "The university deserves to be mentioned and have a more prominent role if scientific and educational type conferences are to be coming here. We need that stressed."

Horizon Video representatives have said that the video may be updated or revised each year without excessive cost.

Kim Henley, Nichols' administrative assistant, said that there were shots available of an entrance sign to ECU, but the segment was to be placed in the video at a place where the narrator was talking about confidence in the city. Because students were sleeping on the sign, the segment did not adequately match the script, she said. Instead, a shot of joggers in the Town Common was used in that space.

There were segments of Pitt County Memorial Hospital and the ECU School of Medicine that might be suitable for adding, she said.

Nichols said all the available footage of Pitt-Greenville Airport was not impressive enough to include. The sales person targeting the client would explain the conveniences of the facility, he said.

However, several board members said the video should include some mention of the airport. The production could include shots of an airport sign or an airline ticket counter, members said.

Members also said it would be appropriate to include footage of a playbill or program from a major summer theater production or musical at ECU.

Ms. Henley said she did not know how expensive it would be to alter the video. Only three copies have been produced, thus there would not be a great loss of the product.

If the authority opts to have Horizon Video rework portions of the video, the new segments should be added in place of some footage of people working out in health clubs or jogging, Alexander said.

Authority members also said a segment showing an adult guiding a group of youngsters through the Adventures in Health exhibit would be of no help in attracting professional and state associations to hold meetings in Greenville.

Brody questioned whether the video is specific enough to target the type of meeting planner the authority is pursuing, but Nichols said he has viewed videos of many other bureaus, and the Pitt-Greenville product is best suited for its needs.

"This is the most unique one I've ever seen, because it is so specific.... It goes right to the meeting planner," he said. Other bureaus utilize videos that may also appeal to tourists or individual travelers.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Time's Up

Don't Talk About It, Come Home

At last, the legislature did something right. It decided against four year terms of office.

Instead of tagging longer terms onto a bill that would give North Carolinians a chance to vote on a gubernatorial veto and election adjustments, members of the House Judiciary Committee opted to keep terms of office to two years. Good for them. Finally, a decision from Raleigh that makes sense.

Now, how about some action on a meaningful issue or two?

If we thought it wouldn't tie up an already languid legislature, we'd suggest the state take a look at reviving the 120-day limit on legislative sessions. Back when lawmaking was a matter of scraping together a budget and signing a few bills, legislators were required by law to complete their business in 120 days each biennium.

That's about four months of politicking, spread over two years time — which usually got the job done. Of course that was back before lawmakers were introduced to finger foods and fancy fixin's by lobbyists. Nowadays parties consume more time than governing.

Compare that four months to the current General Assembly that's just begun its seventh month, and it's easy to see what happens when state government goes uptown. Take away lawmakers' deadline, put them in an air-conditioned state house and give them comfortable chairs. There goes efficient government and punctual adjournment.

It's a safe bet that North Carolina would have a Highway Bill by now if those guys and gals in Raleigh only had four months to talk about it. It's equally as certain that teachers and state employees would be getting a pay raise and that the county governments — who have already had to approve their 1989-90 budgets without state allocations — would know just how many state dollars would be rolling that way.

But if lawmakers were to discuss reinstating the 120-day rule, this session of the General Assembly might never end.

It might be an issue the voters decide next time they're faced with a ballot and pondering which candidate to choose.

'If we thought it wouldn't tie up an already languid legislature, we'd suggest the state take a look at reviving the 120-day limit on legislative sessions.'

Common Desire

Democracy Cements Friendship

The stirrings of Democracy in Poland followed with a visit by President George Bush tells the world much about the startling changes which are taking place in Eastern Europe.

Following the visit to Poland, Bush extended the hand of friendship to Hungarians.

The Polish people clearly yearn for freedom and they may have their chance at it. Their Communist inspired economy is in tatters and shreds.

The Poles, like people everywhere, look to the United States as the freest society on earth. They welcomed President Bush as a symbol of the freedom that Americans enjoy. And Polish leaders are looking to the United States for the economic assistance which will restore a sound economy to their country.

The most solemn moment of the presidential visit was a meeting with Lech Walesa, the Solidarity leader who has spent time in confinement because he defied the Communist rule. Now, with the old government crumbling, Walesa is in a position of power.

Walesa asked for help for Poland's sick economy citing the advances that Democracy has made in the country. Bush, in turn promised $115 million in aid and improved payment terms for Poland's international debt.

President Bush's promise of aid to Poland won't in itself end that country's economic problems. Nor will Poland suddenly become a capitalistic country.

But it can help a nation struggling for freedom move toward its goal. The people of Poland have rediscovered democracy and they are not likely to surrender it again.

President Bush's visit rebuilds the bridges of friendship between the two nations. It is a bridge that rests on a mutual desire for liberty. The United States can and should help the Poles improve their economy. Most important, though, is that through the friendship, this nation never again allow the Polish people to be dominated by tyranny.

To the editor:

This letter concerns the high pitch of the abortion debate. Barbour's (7-9-89 op-ed) cartoon caught it only too justly. I miss the voices of people who understand their opponent's position and sympathize with their opponent's feelings. There are such people on both sides. Let us hear them.

Many advocates of an abortion option know how precious is a fetus, how youth has to learn responsibility accompanying intimacy, how traumatic abortion can be for a woman. Many opponents of abortion know how precious a woman's future is, how beautiful is intimacy, how tragic a baby born and not cared for.

I hope the media will amplify such voices - of those who understand where their opponents are coming from. This will not resolve the argument, but real dialogue with mutual respect promotes necessary compromise. We must live together in one community, despite profound philosophical difference.

To the editor:

Are we all politicians? We see things that need to be changed in the best interest of everyone, but we don't want to say anything that might offend someone else. We would rather sit on the fence and let someone else be ostracized. We are glad when someone else sees the need, studies the options and makes the commitment to act in our behalf; then, when all voice approval, we feel at ease to say, "I have been behind you all the time."

If YOU are willing to get off the fence, ask any commercial or sport fisherman about fishing in the Pamlico Sound and its tributaries. They will tell you of the decline of fish in those waters, over the last 15 years.

Ask them if they know the reasons of the decline. Ask if they have read the findings of the N.C. Department of Natural Resources, the N.C. Department of Fisheries and others interested in restoring the Pamlico and Albemarle Sounds and their tributaries.

Ask if they feel better management could make our inside waters more inviting as a source of income and pleasure.

Then, if you see a need for action, take the time to write your state representative and senators, requesting they read the reports and recommendations of the study groups, make inquiries, then get off the political fence and do whatever is required to protect the inside waters of North Carolina for everyone.

I would like to congratulate Betty Gray, staff writer for the Washington Daily News, and J. Ward Best, on Greenville's Daily Reflector staff, for their excellent coverage of meetings relating to our water resources and their articles that are helping to make the public aware of the urgent need for action to protect the inside and inland waters of our state.

To the editor:

For twenty years we've been lowering our educational standards. It's time we raised both our standards and our children's capabilities. Why can't we:

- Hire well-educated and widely-read teachers for grades K-6, teachers who know the difference between "infer" and "imply," who know how to pronounce "mischievous," who use objective pronouns correctly, who themselves enjoy reading?

- Pay those early childhood teachers salaries commensurate with their importance to our society - as if they were male heads of household, feeding, clothing and providing homes for their families? (Wouldn't good male role models be a blessing in grades K-6?)

- Limit classes K-3 to 10 students and classes 4-6 to 15 students so that teachers can give each child the attention he/she needs to reach his/her potential? (Children from educationally and financially deprived backgrounds must be nurtured early and carefully or society will have to support them later.)

- Raise grade-level reading standards and advance no child beyond his/her reading and writing capabilities and grade level competence?

- Let all extra-curricular activities (including band, sports competition, vocational training, etc.) be offered as a reward for academic achievement?

- Make our high school diplomas represent the successful completion of 12 years of English, 12 years of history, 12 years of mathematics, a good introduction to the scientific method, to a foreign language and to computers?

Too expensive? Look what we'd save in non-professional aides' salaries, cost of remedial programs, adult reading programs, penal costs and life-long dependency on society.

America needs an educated citizenry. Why can't we begin now at the beginning?

A Little 'Kemp Cadence' For Bush

WASHINGTON — HUD Secretary Jack Kemp, in Detroit on Monday to address the annual convention of the NAACP, told the 3,000 delegates that the struggle for racial equality is just half complete.

"Chapter One — enactment of the civil-rights laws — is a proud part of our country's history," he said. But before the United States can promote itself as a model for the world, it has to finish Chapter Two: economic equality.

His speech, in which he called on his Republican Party — "nowhere to be found" during the first phase of the movement — to become an active player in the second phase drew three standing ovations from an overwhelmingly Democratic audience.

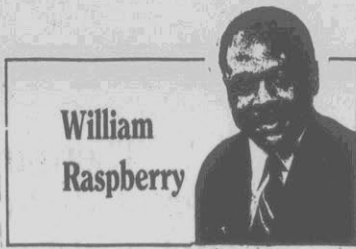

During an earlier visit to Chicago, Kemp eschewed the usual tack of inviting a few public-housing types to join him at his meeting with the mayor. Instead, he invited Mayor Richard Daley Jr. to join him at the LeClaire Court public-housing project and a visit to Cabrini Green. Only then did he head downtown for lunch with city officials.

"It played well with the press," said Robert Woodson, a black conservative who has made public housing his special concern. "But it also played well with the local public-housing leadership. By meeting with them, on their turf, he gave them status. They now get their phone calls returned from downtown."

Kemp has always known the words of racial inclusion. He's now learning the music and, as a result, is fast becoming the GOP's most effective emissary to the black electorate.

"It's no secret that I want George Bush to be the first Republican President in my lifetime to have an urban strategy," he said in an interview a few days before his Detroit trip. "Most Republican Presidents haven't thought of urban America's ghettos and barrios as potential votes, notwithstanding the need that is there. This is a magnificent opportunity to have a Republican President reach out to people who have not heretofore thought of the Republican Party as concerned or compassionate or caring about either their housing or their social or economic or educational needs."

Kemp, of course, is not the first Republican to see the value — to both blacks and the GOP — of breaking the Democratic stranglehold on black votes. But so far, no one has managed to deliver the message in a way that blacks find appealing. The Republican ideologues keep hoping that blacks will buy their cold theory. GOP Chairman Lee Atwater, for all his "white soul brother" hipness (his jam sessions with B.B. King, for instance), is almost irredeemably suspect because of his association with the negative Bush campaign.

Kemp sees the importance of showing that Republicans really do care about the pressing problems of minorities.

And what is the downside risk to wooing black voters?

"None," says Kemp, whose department is beset with scandal inherited from the Reagan administration. "The only loser is David Duke (the former Klansman recently elected to the Louisiana Legislature). There's nobody in the cities or suburbs who doesn't realize we've got to do something for the folks who've been left behind. I haven't met anybody left, right or center, in the profit or nonprofit sector or in the religious community who doesn't realize that if we fail on urban America we will miss a magnificent opportunity to show that democracy can work for the least of us as well as the well-off."

He claims there is already a growing interest in many of his economic development ideas: enterprise zones, tax incentives for investing in low-income housing, tenant management of public housing, community reinvestment schemes and help for the homeless.

"People are starting to understand the difference between Pruitt Igo (the huge St. Louis public-housing project so beset with problems that it was razed) and Cabrini Green, a third of which has been recaptured from drug dealers.

"I used to say that these people picked their bed, let them lie in it. But now I understand that there are people who are driven to such circumstances by factors over which they have too little control, where there can be a helping hand from government."

Kemp believes that the Republican Party can make serious inroads into the black electorate without abandoning its basic conservatism. Indeed, he has taken it as one of his key missions.

"I'm not quixotic, but I am idealistic," he told me. "I want to prove that you can be both progressive and conservative at the same time, that you can be both compassionate and Republican at the same time, that you can be both idealistic and a free-enterpriser at the same time, that you can be both Caucasian and a believer in civil rights at the same time."

It isn't exactly "I have a dream." But it just may be that the music and rhythm of his message may find an audience in black America — if he can teach President Bush the Kemp cadence.

House Panel OKs Plan To Cut Governor's Term

By F. Alan Boyce
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Two-year terms for the governor became the latest tradeoff for gubernatorial veto as a House committee continued wading through proposed constitutional amendments to rebalance state government's legislative and executive powers.

Along largely partisan lines, the House Judiciary Committee voted 17-15 to add a proposed constitutional amendment that would reduce the governor's terms from four years to two years. But Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, said his only motive in offering the amendment was the good of the state.

Blue said it would be dangerous to simply let the people vote on giving the governor veto power without considering other changes.

"It's not that simple," he said. "Other than a raw power grab, what purpose does it serve?"

Nonetheless, the committee vote drew criticism from Ward Purrington, Gov. Jim Martin's legislative liaison, and other Republicans.

"It looks like it's silly time ..." he said. "We're dealing with a very serious issue here. It doesn't look like it's getting that treatment."

"I don't know if I want to continue being part of this if you keep taking two steps backward for one step forward," said Rep. Larry Justus, R-Henderson.

Rep. Art Pope, R-Wake, complained that the amendment would limit the governor and lieutenant governor to four years in office because they still would serve only two consecutive terms. And he asked why Blue didn't extend the shorter terms to the Council of State.

Blue said he would consider removing the two-term limit on the officers once the amendment was approved. As for the Council of State, he said, "They're basically administrators. They really don't formulate policy as the chief executive does."

The amendment conflicts with another proposal in the package that would shift statewide races to even-numbered, non-presidential years. An amendment to address that issue was expected today.

Blue said he was dropping another amendment that would have extended the terms of statewide officeholders by two years to shift their elections to non-residential years. He said the amendment adopted Thursday accomplished the same thing, although it would not force Gov. Jim Martin to resign if he chooses to run for U.S. Senate against Democrat Terry Sanford.

In another partisan 16-14 vote, the committee agreed to have the people vote on the package in November 1989 instead of November 1990.

The timing drew extensive debate, with Republicans arguing that the issues should be decided when voter turnout is at its highest.

"They will not be going to the polls," said Rep. Michael Decker, R-Forsyth.

Rep. Doris Huffman, R-Catawba, said there would be no money in the budget for a statewide referendum this year.

But Rep. Beverly Perdue, D-Craven, said she hoped the voters would "focus on constitutional issues, not on campaign rhetoric."

"I don't relish the idea of having to work in campaigns and also talk about something that is so vital to the constitution," she said, adding that the counties would pay for the vote and possibly pass on the cost to the state next year.

The committee adjourned as Rep. Dave Redwine, D-Brunswick, explained an amendment to allow legislative confirmation of the governor's cabinet appointments.

Rep. Roy Cooper, D-Nash, committee chairman, said there are at least seven more amendments pending.

To open debate Thursday, the committee heard from former Rep. Tom Gilmore, who again endorsed the veto, saying it would help stake the governor out on the issues.

"He can no longer hide and say those bad guys in the General Assembly did it," he said.

Since resuming debate on the measure this week, the committee has removed a proposal to lengthen legislative terms from two years to four years — something that had been touted as a balance against the veto.

The bill still contains proposed constitutional amendments to limit the House speaker to two consecutive terms and to shift statewide elections to even-numbered non-presidential years.

The veto under consideration would be effective in 1991 if approved by the voters. A veto could be overridden by a three-fifths vote of legislators present in each chamber. It would not apply to local bills, constitutional amendments, redistricting or legislative appointments.

The switch to non-presidential years for statewide elections would bring North Carolina in line with 34 other states. Currently only nine, including North Carolina, hold them in conjunction with presidential elections.

IN THE STATE

Worth Increased

CHARLOTTE (AP) — David and James Taggart got rich while associated with the PTL ministry, with their net worth increasing tenfold in four years, according to testimony in their tax-evasion trial.

From 1984 through 1987, the Taggart's combined net worth climbed from $171,000 to $1.7 million, a bank officer testified Thursday the former Jim Bakker aides disclosed on financial statements.

The Taggarts are charged with evading $487,000 in federal income taxes from 1984 to 1987. Prosecutors say they diverted $1.1 million in ministry funds to their own use by using ministry credit cards and then using blank ministry checks to pay off the cards.

NCNB Bank branch manager Judy Bailey testified about the personal financial statements she was provided by the Taggarts for an unsecured line of credit at the bank.

Chain Murder

GOLDSBORO (AP) — A Duplin County farm hand has been charged with the murder of a recently discharged Marine whose nude body was found weighted down with chains last week in the Neuse River.

James Mason Gibson, 27, a laborer at a chicken farm in Duplin County, was arrested Wednesday and charged with the murder of Russell Allen Kelly, 23, of White Hall, Ohio. The suspect is being held without bond in the Wayne County jail.

Wayne County Sheriff James L. Sasser said that Gibson had not known Kelly and that the motive for the murder had been robbery.

Sasser said Kelly had been discharged from the Camp Lejeune Marine Corps Base June 20 after receiving a "considerable amount of money" for his separation from the service.

A warrant has been issued for a second suspect, Bob Woodrow Jennings, 28, of Raleigh County, W. Va., a former Marine who had been stationed at Camp Lejeune with Kelly before being discharged June 21.

Cracks Found

JACKSONVILLE (AP) — Seventeen cracked universal control assemblies were found during checks of Marine UH1N Huey helicopters and supply stocks at New River air station.

Gunnery Sgt. Don Gilbert said he did not know if the cracks could have caused or contributed to any crashes or accidents.

New River's Hueys were grounded Monday so assemblies could be inspected.

The U.S. Army said Saturday that it had temporarily grounded more than 3,400 UH1s in order to replace defective universal control levers in some Hueys.

Open Meetings Discussion Stalls

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A bill to tighten North Carolina's open meetings law and bring more legislative bodies under its provisions stalled in a Senate committee when some members balked at restrictions on closed executive sessions.

Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland, strenuously objected to including the Legislative Services Commission, which controls spending for state buildings, among public bodies that would be allowed to exclude the press only for one of 20 designated reasons. He also opposed requiring that the commission keep records of closed meetings.

His amendment to remove the commission from the bill appeared to have been defeated

Thursday on a voice vote in the Senate Rules Committee, but supporters moved to adjourn before Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, could announce the outcome. That left the bill and the amendment in limbo until the next meeting, scheduled for next Thursday.

"The public is not one bit interested in what goes on in the Legislative Services Commission," Harris said after the meeting.

Harris said it is fairly common for public bodies to go into executive session for one stated reason, "and then you get started on something else."

As for keeping records, he said, "If I go and tell a lie, then I'd have to put it in the minutes."

Winner, the committee chairman, said he wants to see the bill passed. But he said some "fine-tuning" might be needed to answer objections by Harris and Sen. Ken Royall, D-Durham.

Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, said some committee members may have thought his bill, approved earlier by the House, goes further than it does.

"I'm inclined to believe that there was not an understanding," he said.

The bill is basically the same as one approved by the House, although the Senate is considering exempting meetings of a chairman with his subcommittee chairmen — something that has become increasingly common in the legislative budget process.

The bill would require that all public bodies to meet in open session except where closed meetings are allowed under 20 exceptions. It would include most of the General Assembly committees that had been allowed unlimited license in closing meetings when in the "best interests of the state." Public bodies would have to keep minutes of all meetings and meet in in open session with reasonable public notice.

Sen. Jim Johnson, R-Cabarrus, asked why penalty provisions in the law, including the voiding of actions taken in illegally closed meetings, would not be extended to the legislature. Miller said that would leave the legislature open to unlimited challenges.

"You would have the potential of having every statute attacked in that manner," he said.

Most of the committee debate focused on excluding the LSC.

Protein Promises Treatment For AIDS

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DURHAM, N.C. — Researchers at Duke University are working on a technique they say may be used to treat, or even someday cure, AIDS.

The Duke researchers make up one of two teams working on the technique that uses fake proteins created in laboratories.

Despite the tantalizing results, researchers caution that the new approach, undertaken in the test tube only, could be years or even decades away from practical use.

"It's a promising first step," Dr. Bryan R. Cullen, a microbiologist with the Howard Hughes Medical Institute at Duke, said Thursday. "There are a hundred and one things that have to be done, and much more that we need to know, before we can determine if this approach will be effective in curing AIDS," he said.

In laboratory experiments described in today's issue of the journal Cell, the Duke team used genetic engineering to immunize monkey cells so they block reproduction of the AIDS virus. The results are likely to attract scientific attention as a potentially valuable approach to treating the disease.

The scientists found that by slightly scrambling genes, they can make them produce proteins that don't work. But because the proteins look like the real thing, the AIDS virus is fooled into using them instead of its own natural proteins. As a result, virus replication is shut down.

The approach, called "intracellular immunization," could eventually allow scientists to engineer body cells so they are protected against the AIDS virus.

Martin Proposes Plan To Block Flag Burning

By John Flesher
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Gov. Jim Martin has proposed legislation that would revise the state's flag-burning law as stormy debate swirled around a House resolution criticizing a U.S. Supreme Court ruling that burning an American flag is a protected form of expression.

"The Supreme Court has made some controversial decisions lately," said Rep. David Balmer, R-Mecklenburg, on Thursday. "But from time to time they must understand that they are not the last word. The American people are the last word."

Martin's measure was hastily introduced in the Senate, which passed it 47-0 and sent it to the House. Martin proposed a revision of North Carolina's law against flag desecration that he said would not violate the Supreme Court ruling that struck down a Texas flag-protection statute.

The bill simply would make it a misdemeanor to destroy or mutilate a U.S. or North Carolina flag unless done to dispose of a worn flag as prescribed by the Code of Flag Etiquette.

"This proposal, in my opinion, provides us with an effective way to resolve this dilemma," Martin said.

The proposed bill was modeled after a measure that New York Gov. Mario Cuomo recently submitted to his state's legislature, Martin said. The language in the New York bill is similar to that introduced in the U.S. Senate and was recommended by Harvard professor Laurence Tribe, a constitutional law expert, he said.

The actions and debate on both sides of the issue reflected the intense feelings aroused by the court decision. The North Carolina Senate adopted a resolution condemning the ruling shortly after it was announced. The House measure calls on Congress to adopt a constitutional amendment overturning the ruling.

Rep. Bob Brawley, R-Iredell, acknowledged Thursday that opponents of the resolution fear the proposed constitutional amendment would erode freedom of expression guaranteed by the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

But he said, "I hope we have not reached the point in our history where one's measure of patriotism is how much they fight to destroy the traditional values that made America great."

Balmer said the Supreme Court has made exceptions to freedom of expression over the years, such as outlawing pornography and "fighting words" that could cause a riot.

But Rep. Harry Payne, D-New Hanover, said that by passing the resolution, the House would embark on a course that "violates everything that each of us have sworn to uphold."

Americans who have died in wars were defending the ideals represented by the nation's flag, rather than the flag itself, Payne said.

"I hate Gregory Johnson," Payne said, referring to the Texas radical whose arrest for burning the flag led to the Supreme Court's ruling. "He is a terrible person. ... But if our laws are to be different from the laws of every other country, we must let him be a fool and an idiot."

The Supreme Court has upheld the right to engage in other offensive behavior, Payne said. "You can wear a swastika. You can burn a cross," he said. "You can use ethnic slurs. You can use racial slurs. If we're gonna get in and start tearing up the First Amendment, then let's prohibit those things. True patriotism requires restraint."

Rep. H.M. "Mickey" Michaux, D-Durham, recalled the 1960s, when blacks and students fought for the rights in the U.S. Constitution.

"I saw other people drape themselves in the flag to deny those rights to American citizens," he said.

The House approved 76-21 an amendment offered by Rep. Art Pope, R-Wake, stipulating that any change in the Constitution to outlaw flag desecration should not detract from First Amendment freedoms.

Rep. John Kerr, D-Wayne, said the Pope amendment had "gutted" the resolution and asked that it be sent back to the House Rules Committee for further study. The House approved his motion, 58-50.

Meanwhile, the Senate wasted little time approving the bill Martin submitted.

Existing state law makes it "unlawful for any person willfully and knowingly to cast contempt upon" the United States or North Carolina flags "by public acts of physical contact including, but not limited to, mutilation, defiling, defacing or trampling."

Violation of the law is punishable by a $500 fine, up to six months in prison or both.

"The essential difference between this proposal and present North Carolina law ... is that it eliminates any reference to the communicated impact of someone destroying or violating the flag," Martin said.

By removing any reference to acts of desecration intended to express a specific message or political statement, the bill "would seem to disconnect that act from the First Amendment to the Constitution," Martin said.

Jennifer Johnson shows no emotion as her attorney covers his face as verdict is read

Mother Convicted Of Delivering Cocaine To Her Unborn Children

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SANFORD, Fla. — A judge has convicted a cocaine-addicted mother of delivering drugs to her two children through their umbilical cords at birth.

Rejecting arguments that the law under which she was tried was meant only for criminals engaged in illegal drug deals, Circuit Judge O.H. Eaton Jr. said he viewed the two children born to Jennifer Clarise Johnson as victims.

"These children had no ability to control what was being introduced into their bodies," Eaton said in handing down the ruling Thursday after a non-jury trial. "The defendant had that ability."

The unmarried 23-year-old woman is believed to be the first mother in Florida — and one of only a few in the country — convicted of pushing drugs to their children under a criminal drug-dealing statute.

Rather Broadcast

CHARLOTTE (AP) — "CBS Evening News" anchor Dan Rather will broadcast live from WBTV, Channel 3, in Charlotte on July 21.

Rather was invited to celebrate the station's 40th anniversary.

WBTV, one of CBS's oldest affiliates, began broadcasting July 15, 1949. It was the first television station in North Carolina and one of the oldest in the South, according to WBTV news director Bill Foy.

Ms. Johnson faces a 30-year sentence, but prosecutor Jeff Deen said he would recommend that she complete a drug program she is undergoing and then serve "a lengthy probation period."

In his ruling, the judge made two key determinations:

— That the illegal substance traveled from Ms. Johnson's body into the babies at birth, but before their umbilical cords were severed.

— And that "a child who is born but whose umbilical cord has not been severed is a person" within the Florida law under which she was tried.

The defense had argued that a newborn is not a person until the cord is severed and that Ms. Johnson could not be tried under the law that makes it a felony for someone to "deliver" drugs to a minor.

"I am convinced and find that the term 'delivery' (in the law) includes the passage of cocaine or a derivative of it from the body of a mother into the body of her child through the umbilical cord after birth occurs," the judge held.

Ms. Johnson was acquitted of one count of child abuse. Other mothers giving birth to so-called cocaine babies have been successfully prosecuted under that law, which carries a maximum of five years in prison.

The defendant, who sat impassively during the trial, refused comment. Her attorney, Jim Sweeting, said he would appeal.

Sweeting, representatives of the American Civil Liberties Union and a doctor who testified on the defendant's behalf had argued that a guilty verdict encourage pregnant addicts to avoid prenatal care and give birth to their babies outside hospitals because they would fear imprisonment.

"I think what we found today is that having a baby is a crime for pregnant addicts," Sweeting said.

The judge said he believed the opposite to be true — that pregnant addicts are now placed on notice that they have a responsibility to seek treatment.

The children, a boy born in 1987 and a girl born in January, are being cared for by Ms. Johnson's mother and an aunt. Doctors said they appear to be healthy.

White House Sentinels Investigated

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Several uniformed Secret Service officers at the White House are under investigation for alleged security violations and theft, and late night tours of the presidential mansion have been curtailed, The Washington Times said today.

The Times said one Secret Service officer, Reginald A. deGueudre, has been transferred to embassy foot patrol, and a second uniformed officer was transferred following an investigation by the Secret Service's inspections division.

Both men worked the midnight shift at the White House, said the Times, which earlier this month reported that a 1 a.m. tour included two male prostitutes. Late night tours have been greatly reduced, and an internal investigation is under way, the newspaper said.

"You can expect a number of others ... on the hot seat," one Secret Service official familiar with the security probe was quoted as saying. The official was not identified.

The Times reported July 6 that deGueudre accepted an $8,000 gold Rolex wristwatch from lobbyist Craig J. Spence in return for "unspecified favors."

Spence is the target of a federal investigation of his relationship with federal employees, including deGueudre. The probe is tied to an investigation of possible credit card fraud by an alleged homosexual prostitution service broken up by local and federal agents in February.

The Times has reported Spence was a client of the prostitution service.

The Secret Service, in a sworn statement filed in U.S. District Court in Alexandria supporting a search warrant for deGueudre's house, said the officer had admitted stealing from the presidential living quarters several pieces of china dating from the Truman presidency.

In the statement, Secret Service Special Agent Paul Wearé said "deGueudre admitted ... that he gave one piece of the china to Craig Spence, who had it prominently displayed at his home in Washington."

DeGueudre has denied committing any thefts or breaking any other laws or breaching security.

B-2 Bomber May Fly On Saturday

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PALMDALE, Calif. — The B-2 stealth bomber is ready to fly after successfully completing ground tests, and takeoff could come as early as Saturday, the Air Force says.

The bat-winged aircraft sped down a desert runway Thursday, hitting a top speed of 132 mph and lifting its nose wheel off the tarmac, said Brig. Gen. Richard Scofield, director of the B-2 program.

"We've completed all the taxi tests prior to going to first flight," Scofield said. "The airplane is in good shape."

The bomber, in development for more than a decade, has been subjected to extensive computer-simulated flights but has never actually lifted off a runway.

It incorporates revolutionary technologies and the use of lightweight composite material to elude radar by absorbing radar energy, rather than reflecting it as conventional aircraft do.

But although the bomber appears ready to fly, congressional opposition to the costly defense program threatens to ground the B-2 just as it is rising to prove its secret capabilities.

Congressmen warned Air Force officials earlier this week that they face a tough uphill fight with the B-2, which recent estimates indicate would be the most expensive aircraft in history.

Alabama Executes Convicted Killer

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATMORE, Ala. — A mildly retarded killer died in Alabama's electric chair early today in the second execution attempt after the first try failed because of a misconnected cable.

Horace Franklin Dunkins Jr., 28, was declared dead at 12:27 a.m., 19 minutes after the executioner first flipped the voltage switch. The U.S. Supreme Court turned down two last-minute appeals to stop the execution.

State Prison Commissioner Morris Thigpen said the jacks connecting electricity to the chair were reversed, and so did not deliver enough voltage to kill Dunkins on the first try.

When the guard raised the two vinyl shades covering the window in the witness room, Dunkins was already strapped in the electric chair, his face covered by a black veil attached to the hood of the electrodes on his head.

Thigpen said the first throw of the switch at 12:08 a.m. brought no visible response from the condemned man.

A guard in the witness room opened the door to the death chamber, and told another guard directing the execution, "I believe you've got the jacks on wrong." Neither guard was identified.

Two doctors who examined Dunkins determined he was unconscious, but had a strong heartbeat. Thigpen told a news conference later.

Walesa Offers His Support

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WARSAW, Poland — Solidarity leader Lech Walesa announced today he will support any candidate from the Communist Party coalition for the new post of president and urged that the election be held right away.

"I state that I will cooperate with any president elected no matter if it is Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, Gen. Czeslaw Kiszczak or some other representative of the coalition, in order to solve Polish problems," he said in a statement.

Jaruzelski, first secretary of the Communist Party, announced June 30 he would not run, saying he was too closely linked with the martial law that he imposed in 1981 to crush the independent Solidarity trade union movement.

He recommended Kiszczak, the interior minister, but the Communist Party leadership asked Jaruzelski to consider running. In recent days, especially after appearing frequently with President Bush during his three-day visit, Jaruzelski has emerged again as a likely candidate.

Leaders Open World Summit

storming of the Bastille, which marked the beginning of the revolution, began with a military parade down the Champs Elysees, the most famous thoroughfare in Paris.

Heavy tanks rumbled past the VIP viewing stand as Mirage jet fighters screamed overhead, trailing streams of red, white and blue smoke.

With more than two dozen heads of state and government invited to the festivities, there was an extraordinary gathering of world leaders from nations rich and poor.

Bush, leader of the world's wealthiest nation, got a front row parade seat next to President Hosain Mohammed Ershad of Bangladesh, representing one of the world's poorest.

Bush began the day with a hurriedly arranged meeting with Salinas on his country's commercial lenders. Afterward, Sununu reported there was no early prospect for a final agreement.

Sununu said Mexican officials want "to get it done correctly rather than trying to rush it," and the White House believes "there is no requirement to leave the summit ... with an agreement."

The United States offered a temporary loan of $1 billion to $2 billion to help Mexico seal an agreement, preferably before the economic summit ends on Sunday, but Sununu said the negotiations remained snagged over details.

Mitterrand, who is pushing a rival plan for solving the Third World debt problem, said in a French TV interview that Mexico's foreign debt has carried that country to the brink of an explosion.

"No one has an interest in this explosion taking place, which would mean more misery for a suffering people," he said. "We are contributing, I am contributing, as far as possible so that a positive answer could be given in the coming days."

The 15th economic summit marks Bush's debut at the annual gathering of the leaders of the United States, Japan, Britain, France, West Germany, Canada and Italy. Leaders of some of the Third World countries attending the Bastille celebration urged the prosperous nations to hold a summit between rich and poor nations.

Mitterrand has been harshly criticized in the press here for the extravagance of the bicentennial celebration, as well as for holding two separate dinners tonight for have and have-not nations.

Bush, through a spokesman, rallied to Mitterrand's side.

"I don't think the president sees any difficulty at all in the way the French have laid out their plans, their celebrations, or their hosting of the summit meeting," said White House Chief of Staff John Sununu.

Bush hoped the summit would let him assume the mantle of leadership on economic and environmental issues, much as he did on military matters in May with a troop reduction proposal at the NATO summit in Brussels.

Following his stops this week in Poland and Hungary, Bush planned to press for a coordinated economic aid program to reward the two East Bloc nations for democratic reforms. Among other steps, Bush was expected to express support for new loans and debt rescheduling to ease their financial woes.

China's bloody crackdown on pro-democracy students in Tiananmen Square and subsequent repressions also were on the agenda. It appeared likely the leaders would approve a statement of concern about events in China rather than endorse any collective sanctions.

Sununu said Bush would welcome a summit statement reiterating previously expressed condemnations and concerns about human rights violations in China.

"We know of no specific proposals that go — that even brings all of the countries up to the levels that the president has gone, much less going further," Sununu said.

The United States has cut off military sales and technology transfers to China, urged a freeze on international loans for Beijing and restricted U.S. diplomatic contacts.

The summit will turn to economics and other subjects on Saturday and Sunday. Bush is seeking an international agreement on tackling problems of global pollution.

Other leaders had their own agendas.

Attempting to overcome a sex scandal which has shaken his government, Japanese Prime Minister Sosouke Uno came armed with nearly $40 billion in aid to improve the global environment and provide financial support to lessen the staggering $1.2 trillion debt burden carried by developing countries.

Mitterrand has his own rival plan for Third World debt. So does Bush.

Nicholas Brady, Bush's treasury secretary, unveiled a strategy March 10 to encourage commercial banks to voluntarily forgive a portion of developing nations' bad debt.

Drilling

The governor's statement also said the state released no rights to bring suit against Mobil under the agreement.

Jones, chairman of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, included the impact statement on a bill which would establish a marine sanctuary along the California coast.

Sue Waldron, press secretary for the Merchant Marine Fisheries panel, said Jones would drop the impact statement from the bill because of the agreement.

"Mr. Jones is therefore happy if the state is happy," Ms. Waldron said.

She said Jones would release a statement on the matter later today.

Jones' office said he was in meetings this morning and unavailable for comment.

The agreement also ends eight months of negotiations between the state, Mobil Oil and environmental groups.

Police Say Pilot Had Been Shot

Root managed to swim clear of the craft minutes before it sank in nearly 10,000 feet of water.
Coast Guard Capt. James Rahman, a doctor who treated Root in Nassau, Bahamas, said Root may have been jarred awake by the impact and flood of water.

"It's definitely a miracle he's alive. He's a little confused by it all," the doctor said. "I asked him what happened. He said he didn't know. He said he passed out in the plane, and the next thing he knew water was coming in and he was sinking."

Rahman, who found no signs of a heart attack and said Root had no history of diabetes, had speculated that the veteran pilot may have passed out from carbon monoxide poisoning in the cockpit.

But even before the gunshot wound was reported, the federal official leading an investigation into the incident challenged that theory. "I personally don't think carbon monoxide was the cause," said George Prelezo, regional director of the National Transportation Safety Board's Miami office. "If he was exposed to carbon monoxide for that length of time, there would be more medical problems."

"There are still a lot of unanswered questions."

Prelezo said there are no plans to search for remains of the plane. He said attempts may be made today to interview Root at the hospital.

Hospital spokeswoman Cynthia Wine said Root's family had requested that no information be released on the exact extent of his injuries. Root underwent 90 minutes of exploratory surgery Thursday.

Root's wife, Kathy, 35, said she plans to visit her husband today. On Thursday, she said she told hospital officials to send her husband the message: "Root, you really did it this time."

She told reporters Thursday night that he had suffered a fainting spell about two months ago. She also said he had often flown private planes on business trips.

"For him to survive a crash like that, it just sent us all into shock," said Petty Officer Veronica Cady, a Coast Guard spokeswoman. "We didn't expect this story to have a happy ending."

Nearly two hours after Root took off from Washington National Airport about 6:30 a.m., he radioed air traffic controllers in Virginia that he was having chest pain and trouble breathing.

"Yessir, we're having a little problem up here. Seem to have a little trouble breathing," said Root to an unidentified controller, according to tapes broadcast on WRC-TV in Washington.

Moments later, radio contact was broken. Military pilots who tailed the plane reported the craft occasionally moved within 100 miles of the shore and was traveling at more than 150 miles an hour.

Seven military aircraft and a Navy frigate were pressed into service as thousands of Americans followed the ordeal with minute-by-minute radio bulletins.

The plane began to lose altitude about 250 miles southeast of Miami and quickly dropped to 7,000 feet.

Coast Guard Lt. Commander Gary Poll said the plane then spiraled down at about 2,000 feet per minute. The nose and left wing hit the water and the plane swiveled on its belly on a 360-degree spin. It sunk a few minutes later.

Moments after impact, the four-member Air Force team from the 301st Aerospace Rescue and Recovery Squadron parachuted 3,000 feet above the crash site.

Root clung to a raft tossed from the Air Force plane.
"He was just barely hanging on," said rescue team member Tech. Sgt. Dave Dahl. "It was remarkable to see someone with that tenacity to live. I'll never forget the sight of seeing him alive."

Prices

the operating rate for U.S. factories fell in June to 83.5 percent, while industrial production dropped 0.2 percent, further easing concerns about inflation but providing more evidence of a slowing economy.

Energy costs, which had soared more than 20 percent over the first five months of the year, fell 3.1 percent in June, the biggest drop in three years.

Food prices fell 0.8 percent, the steepest in a year and a half, reversing an identical increase in May. Despite the overall decline, economists were likely to read mixed signals from the June report because goods other than food and energy rose 0.7 percent, the largest increase since October 1986.

Because food and energy prices swing widely from month to month and are less influenced by the economy as a whole, analysts look to the inflation rate of other goods as an indicator of underlying inflationary pressures in the economy.

Despite the drop in the index last month, wholesale inflation for the first half of 1989 hit a fast 7.6 percent annual pace, nearly double last year's 4 percent rise.

The Labor Department said prices of tomatoes and celery, which had doubled in May, fell sharply in June. Vegetables overall fell 8 percent last month, following a 26.4 percent rise in May.

Other food categories posting declines in May were: pasta, 9 percent; fish, 7.3 percent; chickens, 5.2 percent, and beef and veal, 3.8 percent.

Prices rose for pork, turkey, fresh fruit, eggs and candy. Energy costs fell across the board with drops of 8 percent for fuel oil, 4 percent for gasoline and 2 percent for natural gas.

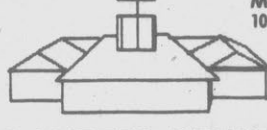

The department said the increase in other categories was driven primarily by a 5.8 percent jump in cigarettes and other tobacco products and for ships.

Prices for prescription and over-the-counter drugs, soaps and furniture also rose, while prices for flatware, women's clothing, jewelry, glassware and cosmetics declined.

The overall June decline left the Producer Price Index for finished goods one stop short of retail at 114.1, meaning that a hypothetical

Walking Grandfather Is A Non-Conformist

By Mark Rutledge
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ELIZABETHTON, Tenn. — Grandparents often tell stories of having to walk several miles to school everyday, but at least one grandfather still does.

Fritz Bernshausen, 61, walks five days per week from Elizabethton to East Tennessee State University, where he attends two philosophy courses before making the eight-mile hike back.

Without a car or driver's license, he admits to being a non-conformist, but with a cause.

Fritz can be seen most any day walking down state Highway 67 or through town bearing either an American flag or a banner which reads "Help Stop the Greenhouse Effect, Walk." He has the letters "W-A-L-K" embroidered on the seat of one pair of shorts and "E-T-S-U" on another.

"A lot of people think the ETSU on my pants stands for East Tennessee State University," he said. "Actually it stands for 'Everybody Thinks Something's Unusual.'"

Fritz jokingly says he has an allergic condition that causes him to get tears in his eyes when he rides in a car but he doesn't hold the practice against the allergy-free.

"I have no quarrel with people who drive cars," he said. "I used to drive a short distance just to get a gallon of milk. The car needs a better engine though. In spite of what the government has done about cracking down on car manufacturers to clean them up, they still pollute.

"I remember last summer when it was so hot. Maybe it was just one of the cycles of the weather but then again it just may be pollution. I've got to do what I can in my own way to maybe alert people."

Fritz is retired from the Army. He served as a Green Beret in Korea and Vietnam. After retiring he lived in Elizabethton for about 16 years before going to Kenosha, Wis., to be with his mother during her last years. While in Kenosha he occasionally walked from there to Milwaukee, which was about 36 miles.

He says the most comfortable footwear he has found for walking is socks and flip-flops. "Once when I was walking to Milwaukee, it was about 10 below zero, and this kid yelled at me, 'Hey old man, aren't your feet cold in just socks?' I said, 'No my feet aren't cold at all. My face is actually colder than my feet.' Then the kid says, 'then why don't you pull one of those socks over your face, old man?'"

"You can't bring a kid like that down," Fritz said, laughing. "He was quite a philosopher."

Fritz says he's realistic enough to know that in today's society folks can't get by without driving but he just wants to let them know there is a price to be paid. "What I would like to see is sidewalks that are a little more crowded," he said. "I feel like the sidewalks in Elizabethton and Johnson City belong to me."

While Fritz is not lacking in patriotism, carrying the American flag is not something he does to demonstrate it. "I carry the flag so that the same people who see me with it will see me with the (greenhouse effect) banner," he said.

He sometimes carries the flag upside down, known as a distress signal. "I got stopped in Johnson City the other day by two nice police officers who asked me why I had the flag upside down," he said.

"You're only supposed to do that if you need help," they said. I told them 'I need all the help I can get.'"

Asked why he would want to go to school at his age, Fritz said he likes to surround himself with young people.

"It's easier to influence young people than older people whose necks are too stiff," he said.

"When I was young I went to old people to learn about the past. Now I go to young people to find out about the future."

Dear Abby: My husband's brother and his off-again, on-again live-in girlfriend were visiting us one evening. During the visit, I was stunned when this woman asked my husband, who is 32 years old, "What would you do if you were 21 again, and knew you were going to be married and have three children 11 years later?"

He answered, "I'd get a shotgun and blow my head off!"

Abby, I thought we had a good marriage. I also thought he loved his children. He is rather moody and can be verbally abusive at times, but I never thought he was that miserable.

Should I leave him and take the children? They are 1, 2 and 3 years old. I am a good wife and mother — or so I thought. — Confused And Hurt

Dear Confused: Have a heart-to-heart talk with your husband. Tell him you were hurt by his remark because it not only put you down, it was an insult to your marriage. If he really is dissatisfied, and his moodiness and the verbal abuse continue, the two of you should consider family counseling before those little sparks become a bonfire.

Young Son Needs Protection

Dear Abby: My 2 1/2-year-old son is entirely too friendly with strangers. He runs up to people he has never seen before and puts his arms up, asking to be held — and, of course, these strangers pick him up.

He's an adorable little boy, and I am glad he's not a shy and withdrawn child, but I am concerned that his friendliness might lead to his being abducted someday. I have tried to tell him not to act that way, but he turns right around and does it anyway.

Is this something I should be worried about? If so, what action should I take to discourage this behavior without offending the stranger? — Arizona Mom

Dear Mom: Don't worry about offending strangers — they should understand a mother's concern about a child that age approaching strangers.

Do more than just "tell" your son; forbid him to speak to strangers. Explain that there are people who could do him harm — and one cannot tell by looking at a stranger who is harmless and who is not. If your child defies you, punish him by depriving him of something he considers a treat — but make that punishment memorable.

Be firm, Mother. Your child needs to be protected, and it's your responsibility to protect him.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Dear Abby: The letter from "Striking Out," the 27-year-old man who was still a virgin, interested me. It seems that when his dates learned of his virginal status, they wanted nothing more to do with him.

Why didn't you answer him with the following "Dear Abby" letter that appeared in your column about 12 years ago? (I saved it because I thought it was wonderful, but there's no date on it.)

"Dear Abby: Whether this is true or not, I cannot say, but it has an important message, so use it if you wish:

"Several worldly-wise teen-agers were chiding one of their group because of her virginal status. She took it good-naturedly for a while, then quickly silenced them with this remark: 'Should I ever become dissatisfied with my status, I can change it. How about you?' — No Name, Please"

— R.R.C. in Bend, Ore.
Dear R.R.C.: I would have, but I didn't think of it. I'm glad you did, and I thank you for it.

Farms Remain In Families For Over 200 Years

By Ron Morrison
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LORIS, S.C. — English Lords Proprietor administered South Carolina and the Revolutionary War was still decades away when royal land grants were issued to the ancestors of Rebecca Horne Johnson of Loris, Nora Vereen and Paul Sanders of Conway and Betty Jo Alford Powers of Loris.

Their farms are among a dwindling number that have stayed in one family and been handed down from generation to generation for more than 200 years.

All three are still working farms, although the centuries have changed the types of crops and how they are raised.

Tobacco, corn, soybeans, wheat and hay have replaced the rice, indigo and cotton that once served as the major cash crops. Some of the land has turned to pasture.

"I suppose love of the land kept our family on the farm. We grew up with the feeling that you should never sell it. You do without if you have to, but you keep the land," said Johnson.

Little more than 100 farms in South Carolina have remained in the same family for more than two centuries. To recognize the contributions of the family farm, the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the State Food and Agriculture Council has honored these as "bicentennial" farms.

Johnson's great-great-grandfather, William Graham, born in 1748, was the first owner of the 67-acre tract where Johnson was raised.

Graham and his wife had three daughters and two sons. One son later served as a lieutenant in the Revolutionary War. The other son, William Bellamy Graham, stayed in Horry County and built the house where Johnson fondly remembers growing up.

She remembers the building as a large two-story structure with chimneys at each end and a kitchen separated from the main house by a breezeway. Pegs were used to join the wood together. The house was destroyed by fire in 1967.

Tombstones mark the graves of William Graham and William Bellamy Graham in the small family cemetery near where Johnson and her husband, Mack, a retired Greyhound bus driver, now live. An inscription shows that William Bellamy Graham drowned in 1846 in Winyah Bay.

Johnson inherited the farm from her late parents, John "Hobby" and Mary Elizabeth Horne.

Researching family records, she discovered that her ancestors made long trips each year to market their livestock and grain in Charleston or Georgetown. They raised cows, hogs, goats, turkeys and geese, and harvested fields of corn, cotton and sweet potatoes, she said.

The early fortunes of the Graham family grew with the acquisition of more Horry County land and slaves. William Graham's will divided 6,257 acres of land and 32 slaves among his wife and children.

The Dog Bluff community near Aynor is where Powers still owns a 70-acre farm site that was granted to her great-great-grandfather, William Johnson, in the 1740s.

"To think that there are three (bicentennial farms) in this county. I'm really proud of that," said Powers.

She said she once lived in the original house and was active in farming the land until her first husband died in 1976. Now the land is leased for other farmers to work.

She and her two sisters inherited the acreage from their late mother, Isla Johnson Thompkins. Powers later bought her sisters' land.

"To my knowledge, this farm has never been mortgaged," Powers said.

She said her ancestors managed to retain farm ownership through difficult times by living within their means.

"It was hard. People lived on what they had. They didn't have credit cards, but they raised cows, chickens and turkeys, planted all kinds of fruit trees and grapevines, and preserved everything they produced," she said.

Little remains of the original house at Bear Bluff Plantation where Nora Vereen Sanders was born and raised. The house is on a high bluff near the Waccamaw River off S.C. 90, eight miles from Conway.

Sanders said she has documents showing that 1,500 acres was granted to Jacques and Samuel Porter Vereen in 1735 by Lord Proprietor John Musgrove. The Sanders own 60 acres of the original tract.

"A lot of history is connected with Bear Bluff Plantation," Sanders said.

Farmers were apparently much more self-sufficient than they are today, Sanders said. "The plantation had its own brick mill and grist mill, almost everything it needed to support itself."

Retaining ownership of her part of the original farm, handed down through seven generations, hasn't been easy. Sanders inherited some of the land and obtained a mortgage to buy the rest of it from an uncle. A house where she and her family lived was destroyed by fire in January.

But the couple, who operate Minnesota Fats, a downtown Conway restaurant, are determined to rebuild and move back on the farm when they can afford it.

The farm "provided for us when we were young. I've had it ingrained in me to keep the land, whatever the cost," she said.

Greenville Plant Among Best

"His statement that we have overflows and don't report them is incorrect," Green said.

In state compliance evaluation reports, GUC's treatment plant regularly comes in under its permitted limits for effluent — treated wastewater released to the river — and the reports cite a high level of efficiency in managing the plant.

The most recent compliance evaluation report conducted by DEM in January came in clean. And an earlier report noted: "GUC is in full compliance of the pretreatment program — excellent administration."

Wadie Lewis, director of water resources for GUC, said he would pit Greenville's treatment plant and its staff against any in the state. But he admitted the plant still had a few problems.

Greenville's treatment plant, constructed on the north bank of the Tar River five years ago, was built as an experimental facility. It employs an activated sludge process, which uses micro-organisms to break down the waste. The plant also uses an experimental air-injection process which allows for a greater oxygen transfer rate in the waste.

The effluent now leaving the plant goes through a series of filter and chemical treatments before flowing into the Tar.

Officials at the Washington office of DEM say GUC's facility is the only one of its kind operating in the 21 counties of the region.

When the plant first began operations in 1985, it could not meet ammonia limits, and the state has twice cited the plant for violating safe limits of fecal coliform bacteria, a organic pollution indicator.

The problem with ammonia limits was due to the experimental nature of the plant, Green said, and the problem has been corrected.

The plant has also been cited for not reporting the nitrogen content in its effluent. Although the plant has no permit limits on nitrogen, the state requires monitoring and reporting on nitrogen releases.

State and environmental researchers have linked nitrogen and other nutrient pollutants in the Tar and Pamlico rivers to excessive algae blooms and subsequent fish kills in the water.

The state has proposed classifying the Tar and Pamlico river basin nutrient sensitive, which would limit to present levels the amount of nutrient pollutants coming from wastewater treatment plants.

According to David McNaught, director of the Pamlico-Tar River Foundation, continued growth of Greenville naturally means an increase in the amount of sewage treated by the plant, and an increase in the amount of pollutants released into the river.

"Being relatively brand new they are probably more efficient than most," McNaught said. "But the question is: How efficient are they to handle the increased growth?"

Greenville's treatment plant also handles pretreated waste from six industries. Two of the facilities, Burroughs Wellcome and Eveready Battery, release potentially toxic chemicals through Greenville's plant which are not regulated by the state.

According to a report by the Environmental Defense Fund which used EPA data, Burroughs Wellcome, a pharmaceutical manufacturer, released more than 10,000 pounds each of acetone, ethylene glycol, methyl tert-butyl ether and sodium sulfate — all listed as chronic or environmental toxins.

"We work very closely with Burroughs," Green said. "Whatever they put into the waste stream we are able to manage."

The Eveready Battery plant released about 300 pounds of zinc compounds through the treatment plant.

GUC treatment plant officials said they test for metals and toxins as required by the state. State reports support the claim.

But environmentalists say that may not be enough to safeguard the waters.

Green said GUC plans an expansion of the treatment plant within the next five years, "well before any saturation point." McNaught said his environmental group will closely watch what GUC does.

Dawson, Banks To Attend Hornets' Camp

Tony Dawson

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — A crop of 10 rookies and free agents have signed on to participate in the Charlotte Hornets' rookie-free agent camp, according to a published report.

The players will be led by Florida State forward Tony Dawson, Florida guard Clifford Lett and former Duke and NBA star Gene Banks, the Gaston Gazette reported.

The three committed to the Hornets after the June 27 NBA draft. Hornets' player personnel director Gene Littles says he hopes to add 10 more players to the camp's list.

Of those who have given a commitment to attend the camp, Littles said in an interview that he likes Dawson, who was projected to go in the second round of the NBA draft.

Dawson is a former Kinston standout who was a prep teammate of former North Carolina State player Charles Shackleford of the New Jersey Nets.

"Dawson is a good solid player," Littles told the newspaper. "He'll push some people in our camp. We're going to take a long look at him."

The camp will be held on July 21 at the team's training facility. Those seven remaining players expected to attend are Wayne Casey, a 6-foot-4 guard from West Virginia State; Kenny Gattison, a 6-8 forward from Old Dominion who played 77 games with the Phoenix Suns in the 1987 season; 6-4 guard Brett McNeal from Western Kentucky; 6-8 center Charlie Sitton from Oregon State who played for Dallas in 1984-85; 6-2 guard Jarvis Walker Ferris State; 6-11 center Grady Mateen of Ohio State; and 6-5 Walker D. Russell of Western Michigan who played for Detroit two seasons ago.

Seton Hall forward Ramon Ramos, who had earlier committed to the Hornets' camp, turned down the invitation Wednesday in order to attend another team's camp.

From this group, those who can advance will join the veterans in training camp on Oct. 7 at Appalachian State University.

Littles also said the Hornets are not interested in unrestricted free agents Wayne Cooper of the Denver Nuggets and Steve Alford, recently released, from the Golden State Warriors.

Cooper has played 11 years for Golden State, Utah, Dallas, Portland and Denver. Last season, he appeared in 79 games, averaging 6.6 points and grabbing 619 rebounds.

Alford was released by Dallas last December, but was picked up by the Warriors, where he averaged 6.3 points in 57 games. In all, he played in 66 NBA games and averaged 5.5 points.

Littles also denied the Hornets have been contacted by the Philadelphia 76ers concerning a trade for forward Kurt Rambis. That potential deal was proposed by a player agent on Monday, but Littles said there is no substance to the rumor.

Sutton Makes Good Performance Answers Questions

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — For two years, Hal Sutton has heard the whispers and seen the stories suggesting he no longer has what it takes to win on the PGA Tour.

Now it's his turn to answer the criticism that has been directed his way.

"It's kind of fueled the fire a little bit," Sutton said Thursday after his 7-under-par 64 tied him with Tim Simpson for the lead after the first round of the Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic.

"If I weren't trying, it might not hurt so bad," said Sutton, a non-winner since 1986, "but I'm really, really trying, and it does hurt."

Sutton and Simpson both had bogey-free rounds to come within one shot of the course record at the 6,776-yard Kingsmill Golf Club course and take a one-shot lead over Tim Norris, Chris Perry and Mike Hulbert.

Opening with 66s were Fuzzy Zoeller, Ian Baker-Finch and Don Shirey.

Eleven players were at 67, and the group at 68 included Curtis Strange, the two-time U.S. Open champion who lives at Kingsmill. Also at that figure was Bill Britton, who carded the first double eagle on tour this year when he used a 4-wood to hole his second shot at No. 3, a 514-yard par-5.

Sutton, who like Simpson eagled the third hole, said his round was the latest stage in his effort to return to the form that made him the tour's leading money-winner in 1983.

Between 1982, his rookie year, and 1986, Sutton won seven tournaments and nearly $1.7 million. In addition to going winless since then, Sutton last year was 88th on the money list, the first time he has finished lower than 26th.

Sutton attributed his recent difficulties to two factors, the first of which was a swing imbalance he was able to correct in recent weeks on the practice tee.

"It took me six weeks of hard, hard work to get my golf game to where I've never gotten it before," he said.

The other factor was his attitude.

"I kind of wish I had listened to my dad," he said. "When I was 26 years old, he told me I was loafing, and I said, 'No, I'm not.'"

"But let's kind of put it in perspective a little bit. I'd made more money by the time I was 24 years old than I had ever dreamed possible."

Now that he has made some changes, the improvement is showing. Sutton, 31, has made $219,372 this year, and finished in a seventh-place tie last week in the Greater Hartford Open.

On Thursday, his irons put him in position to make five birdie putts of between six inches and 15 feet.

"There was a time when, in all honesty, I knew that my game wasn't good enough to win golf tournaments," he said. "But right now, I know I'm playing well enough to win, and right now, I want to win a golf tournament."

Simpson is enjoying the best season of his 12-year pro career. His winnings of $368,293 already surpass by more than $167,000 his previous best total, and in March he won the USF&G Classic for his second victory.

Simpson has yet to win the Anheuser-Busch, but this represents the fourth time he has been atop Kingsmill's leaderboard.

"There's just something about this course," he said. "It sets up well and I have good vibes here."

Simpson, who has had difficulty in the opening rounds of recent tournaments, said he received a boost Wednesday from a session with Bob Rotella, the sports psychologist used by a number of players on tour.

"I'm a big fan of his," Simpson said. "What he's done for so many of us is unbelievable."

Simpson said his only trouble spot was missing the fairway on the par-4 18th, where he sank a 5-foot downhill putt for par.

Seventy-one players in the field of 152 broke par on a hazy, humid day when thunderstorms held off until about 15 minutes after the last group had completed play.

Dibble Earns A Suspension

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — Reliever Rob Dibble isn't happy about his second league-ordered suspension, but he's most upset about an injury-forced break from pitching.

The Cincinnati Reds' setup reliever was given a three-day suspension Thursday by National League president Bill White for his role in a brawl Saturday in New York.

Dibble also was one of four players — two on the Reds, two on the Mets — to receive fines from White. He said it was "ridiculous" that he got the toughest punishment of the four.

"I don't even think I should have gotten ejected," said Dibble, who hit the Mets' Tim Lincecum with a pitch to start the fight. "I didn't do anything."

Dibble doesn't plan to appeal the suspension, which will be served when he comes off the disabled list. The Reds put him on the 15-day disabled list Thursday retroactive to July 10 because of tendinitis in his right elbow.

That development troubled him the most.

"Everything was going my way for a while," said Dibble, who leads the major leagues with 46 appearances. "To have to step away from it for a while is mind-boggling. You ask yourself, 'Why me?'"

Dibble has been one of the most effective setup relievers in baseball. He is 6-3 with a 2.52 earned run average, and has struck out 92 batters in 60 2-3 innings.

The fight resulted in his suspension and intensified his elbow troubles. He said the elbow has been sore for several weeks, but the pain became much more severe after the fight at Shea Stadium.

Trainer Larry Starr said Dibble probably had the arm twisted during the fight, causing further damage. The reliever won't be allowed to throw a ball for seven to 10 days.

"At that time, he'll get back into a gradual throwing program," Starr said.

The fight occurred last Saturday with the Mets leading 7-0 in the eighth inning.

Contract Games Begin In NFL

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

This is the fourth straight year since the demise of the USFL that NFL training camps will open with a lot of players unsigned. It is a situation that leaves agents fuming at general managers playing hardball.

Reggie White and Mike Quick are threatening to stay out of the Philadelphia Eagles camp. New York Giants quarterback Phil Simms may do the same when the New York Giants begin practice.

And, as of Thursday, only 35 of the NFL's 334 draft choices had signed contracts.

Contributing to the situation is the 80-man training camp roster limit established by the owners last March. Many teams are already at the 80-player level and each new player they sign means they will have to cut another. Washington, for example, has 87 players under contract, but has 10 unsigned rookies and three unsigned veterans.

"It's unbelievable," agent Leigh Steinberg said. "They just don't seem ready to do any business."

Actually, Steinberg has already done business, which may be one reason for the slow pace.

He represents Troy Aikman, the UCLA quarterback who was the first player taken in the draft by the Dallas Cowboys. Before the draft, Aikman signed an $11 million, six-year contract, making him the highest-paid rookie in history. Steinberg has also negotiated a $10 million, five-year deal for Houston quarterback Warren Moon. The only other first-round draft choice to sign is wide receiver Andre Rison of Indianapolis, who agreed to a $3 million, five-year deal shortly after the draft. Rison was the 22nd player chosen and his signing led to grumbling that he and Aikman had already inflated the cost of doing business.

In fact, of the 35 rookies signed, 27 were chosen after the seventh round.

In the past few years, teams have generally used a "slotting" system basing salary on a player's draft position.

The same kind of system applies to veterans. Washington cornerback Darrell Green wants $1 million a year, but is waiting for the signing of two cornerbacks of comparable worth, Albert Lewis of Kansas City and Hanford Dixon of Cleveland.

"The market will be set by these three guys and it's almost a who's-going-to-go-in-first? situation," Green's agent, Kyle Rote Jr., said.

A few veterans have gone in first,

NFLPA Wants Dual Testing

League Officials Decline The Split-Sample Approach

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — The NFL Players Association wants a laboratory of its own choosing to test for drug use among players this year, but the league has declined to conduct simultaneous split-sample testing of players' urine.

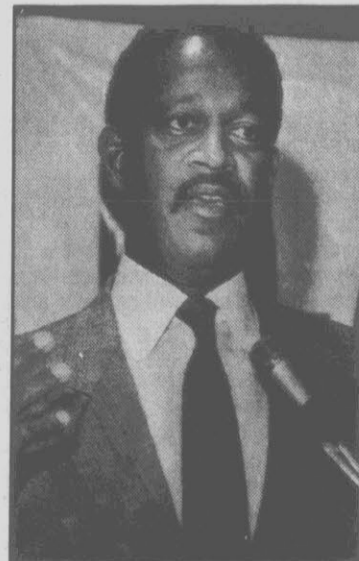

Joe Browne, a spokesman for the NFL, said the league couldn't go along with the simultaneous gathering of urine samples because of "logistics and numerous steps involved in the chain of custody procedures."

"They can do their own drug testing but it would have to be at a time different than ours," Browne said of the NFLPA proposal unveiled by the union's executive director, Gene Upshaw, during a news conference on Thursday.

Upshaw said Commissioner Pete Rozelle told him the league couldn't go along with the plan when it was explained to him earlier.

"The only request we had then was to tell us the date the tests will be conducted," Upshaw said. "They said no." The league usually takes urine samples during preseason training.

The union has been adamantly opposed to Rozelle's call for random drug testing. It also opposed his original drug proposal and the current plan, which allows suspension for four weeks after a second offense and indefinitely after a third. That plan is the result of arbitration between the sides.

"Players have no confidence in this program and the way the league administers it," Upshaw said of the league's testing procedure. He said players are concerned that the NFL plan is geared toward penalties and punishment, not rehabilitation.

The union wants its own samples to be tested and stored by the Center for Human Toxicology at the University of Utah in Salt Lake City. Smith-Kline laboratories in Pennsylvania conducts the league's tests.

"Over the years, the NFL has used this program to undermine the integrity, the trust and the confidentiality the players have put in the chemical dependency program," Upshaw said.

Upshaw said Rozelle told him the players could go to the league's testing agency in Philadelphia and watch Smith-Kline do the testing and analysis on the urine.

"We felt this does not address the concerns of our program," Upshaw said. "That is totally unacceptable."

Upshaw said the NFLPA tests would be voluntary, unlike the NFL tests, which are mandatory.

The Utah facility is certified by the National Institute on Drug Abuse and currently conducts all post-accident testing for the Federal Railroad Administration and the National Transportation and Safety Board.

Upshaw said collection of samples will be handled by EMSI, a nationwide collection agency.

Upshaw and Mike Kenn of the Atlanta Falcons, president of the NFLPA, said the players want to

Drawdy Wins Medalist Honors

GEORGETOWN, S.C. (AP) — Oswald Drawdy two-putted for par on the third extra hole of a sudden death playoff to claim medalist honors in qualifying for the Carolinas Golf Association's Amateur Championship at the DeBordieu Club.

Drawdy, of Hampton and a senior at Clemson, added a 5-under-par 67 on the 6,850-yard course to his first round 73. He went on to defeat first-round leader Bob Kulp, of Winston-Salem, N.C., in a playoff.

One shot back at 141 was Appalachian State golfer Andrew Pitts, of Hildebran, N.C. Pitts had a 71 Thursday.

Tied at 142 were Mike Goodes of Reidsville, N.C., and Larry Boswell of Greensboro, N.C.

The top 31 players and two-time defending champion Matt Peterson qualified to compete in match play beginning Friday, with the final set for Sunday.

Agassi Breezes; Wilander Struggles

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — Top-seeded Andre Agassi won in a breeze, but chief challenger Mats Wilander had a lengthy struggle in the U.S. Pro Tennis championships at Longwood Cricket Club.

The 19-year-old Agassi needed just under an hour to whip unseeded Barry Moir, 6-1, 6-2, in the third round. But Wilander, tournament champion in 1985 and 1987, had a two-hour and 25 minute struggle subduing 15th seeded Jimmy Arias 3-6, 7-5, 6-4.

Rockets' Olajuwon Is Hospitalized

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Rockets All-Star center Akeem Olajuwon is hospitalized for treatment of what is believed to be a blood clot in the calf area of his leg.

Ray Patterson, the general manager of the NBA club, would confirm Thursday only that Olajuwon is in the hospital. He referred all questions about the team's star player to Olajuwon, who refused to talk.

Patterson, however, said he was not alarmed about the treatment. "He'll be out in a day or two," Patterson said. "I'm not concerned."

Officials at Sharpstown Hospital referred all inquiries about Olajuwon to the Rockets, saying only that the player was resting comfortably.

Last season, Olajuwon averaged 24.8 points per game and led the NBA with 13.5 rebounds per game. He also became the first player ever to get 200 steals and 200 blocks in the same season.

In his five years in the league, Olajuwon has missed just 24 games due to injury.

Unidentified sources quoted today by the Houston Chronicle and Houston Post indicated Olajuwon, 26, entered the hospital Monday after complaining of discomfort in his leg and was undergoing tests for phlebitis, an inflammation of a vein in his leg.

Lyle Getting Game Back In Shape

GLENEAGLES, Scotland (AP) — Sandy Lyle, on the mend after case of the golfing miseries, said he cured his problems with a visit home.

"I had a session with the old man (Alex Lyle, his father and teacher) and I've got my teeth back in the game now," Lyle said Thursday after a 5-under-par 66 lifted him to within a stroke of the halfway lead in the Scottish Open.

"The best two rounds I've had at least since April," said Lyle, who finished 36 holes at 136, one back of co-leaders Ian Woosnam of Wales and Naomichi "Joe" Ozaki of Japan.

Woosnam, the first-round leader, had to contend with a balky putter in a hard-won 70. "The putter was the difference: 29 putts yesterday, 35 today," he said.

Ozaki, 33, winner of three Japanese tournaments already this season, did not make a bogey in round of 67 that gave him a share of the top spot at 135, seven under par on the King's course at the Gleneagles Hotel.

Lyle was tied at six under par with Ronan Rafferty of Northern Ireland, David Gilford of England and veteran Brian Barnes of Scotland.

Barnes, 44, now a club pro and part-time tour player, capped a 68 with an eagle on the final hole. Gilford also shot 68 and Rafferty had a 67.

Lyle, a former Masters and British Open champion, had been in a deep slump most of the year.

"I got in a rut where I was missing the cut in America week after week after week," he said.

"I was going through a stale period after a very busy year last year. Now I'm rested and refreshed and not worrying about my game and just playing naturally," he said.

Mike Allen, who has played the European Tour for the last four seasons, and Larry Rinker were the leading Americans at 139, three under par and four off the pace. Each had a second-round 66.

Masters champion Nick Faldo of England, seeking a fifth victory in as many starts on the European tour, could do no better than a 72 and reached the tournament halfway point at par 142.

Tiny Adjustment Keyed Moody's Play

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — It was the best golf tip Orville Moody has ever received, and it took him only five minutes of work to make him into the top senior player of 1989.

Moody, 55, the PGA Seniors Tour's leading money winner, was struggling five months into the season. There was no consistency to his game, and the man they call "Sarge" couldn't figure it out.

Dave Hill could see the problem, and he gave Moody a lesson. After a 30-second consultation, and a mere five minutes on the practice tee, Moody began a winning tear that he carries into this week's $300,000 Greater Grand Rapids Open.

"During the first five months of the season, I wasn't happy with my game at all," said Moody, the defending tournament champion. "I asked Davey Hill one day, and he told me to make an adjustment on my swing."

"He told me I wasn't turning enough on my back swing, and it was causing a lot of problems. It was probably the best tip I've ever received in my golf career."

Moody, who ranked 14th in money won when Hill provided that tip, has now made over $326,000 this year. He won the Senior TPC and the U.S. Open and lost in a playoff to Butch Baird in the Northville Long Island Classic, all in the last month.

He would pick up another $45,000 by winning this 54-hole tournament, which is being held at the par-71 Elks Country Club.

"I think I have a good shot this weekend," said Moody, who shot a 5-under-par 66 in Thursday's pro-am. "The course is in good condition. The fairways are perfect and the greens are beautiful. There will be some low scores this week, and a lot of them."

"I think you have just about as tough a field as you could have here. There are a lot of guys that could challenge. But the Elks is suited for me. I like the greens the way they are now. I just have to hit some putts."

Moody shot a 10-under-par 203 last August for a one-shot victory over Gary Player, Chi Chi Rodriguez and Chick Evans.

Although Player, Rodriguez and Bob Charles, the tour's No. 2 money winner, are absent this weekend, the field includes six of the top eight and 18 of the top 25 on the earnings list. Also in the field of 72 is 1986 GGRO winner Jim Ferree.

Some Can Make Golf Look Easy

New LPGA Entrants At U.S. Open Are On A Roll

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAKE ORION, Mich. — Who says it's hard to play golf well?

Deborah McHaffie, 31, who first touched a club only eight years ago, has won $52,893 on the LPGA tour this year and is making a serious run at the 44th U.S. Women's Open title this week.

And 16-year-old Jamille Jose, who just finished her sophomore year at a San Francisco high school, has been playing the game for only three years. Last year, she won the National Junior Girls championship, earning the right to compete in the Open this week at Indianwood Golf and Country Club.

McHaffie began playing in 1981 while on vacation with her husband, and won the Nevada State Amateur the same year and again in 1982. She quit her job as an elementary school teacher and joined the LPGA tour in 1985.

On Thursday, McHaffie was one of 13 players at even-par 71. That left her four strokes behind first-round leader Betsy King.

"I've been an athlete all my life, but I just never got around to golf. Basketball used to be my game," said McHaffie, a 6-footer. "Once I played golf, I just got hooked."

She also came close to burning out. "Since I was starting late, I guess I felt I had a lot of catching up to do," McHaffie said. "I spent a lot of extra hours at the range."

On the golf course, McHaffie favors striking fashions. On Thursday, she wore skin-tight bicycle trunks and a loose purple knit top wrapped with a wide leather belt.

"Because I started late, I always just wore what I had," McHaffie said. "I feel now I have the right to incorporate fashion into the game. I just can't imagine wearing traditional golf clothing. I'm not one to conform."

Jose, who picked up the game from her stepfather, was paired with LPGA veterans Hollis Stacy and Amy Alcott.

"I think she was a little nervous," Stacy, a three-time Open winner, said. "It had to be hard on her, but she held it together."

Jose, of Philippine ancestry, bogeyed the first hole and made the turn at four over. A double-bogey 6 on No. 18 left her at 5-over 76.

"I was paired with Amy and Hollis because they won the U.S. Junior, just like me," Jose said. "At first, I was nervous, I was so pumped up. I was hooking my drives. I was all over the place."

But Stacy and Alcott came to her rescue. "Off the first tee, they told me to relax. They comforted me often today," Jose said. "They said my game would come back, and it did."

Jose's game never strays very far. That's how it is when, the first time you play nine holes, you shoot 44.

"My stepfather was very supportive," Jose said. "For the next three months after that, I practiced every day, eight hours a day."

That's some easy game.

Unsigned Players Waiting ...

notably Cleveland quarterback Bernie Kosar, who got a new six-year deal averaging more than $2 million a season.

But others are staying put.

White, the Eagles' All-Pro defensive end and the NFL defensive player of the year two years ago, is seeking a contract at least comparable to the $7.5 million over five years given to Buffalo's Bruce Smith. Smith only signed because Buffalo was forced to match a free-agent offer tendered by Denver.

And Quick, Philadelphia's Pro Bowl wide receiver, says he's nowhere near agreement.

If there is any consolation for the Eagles, it is that their two chief rivals in the NFC East are also having contract problems.

While Washington worries about Green, the Giants are working on extending the contract of their quarterback. In any event, Simms will almost surely pass Lawrence Taylor, due to make $1.1 million this year, as the team's highest-paid player and perhaps causing problems with Taylor, who stayed out of mini-camp to protest his contract.

Simms, the most valuable player in the 1987 Super Bowl, is due to be paid $800,000 in the final year of the contract he signed in 1985. That makes him 22nd in salaries among NFL quarterbacks, fifth in his division.

He is seeking a three-year contract at $1.6 million, a 100 percent raise. The Giants are offering $1.2 million and Simms' agent, David Fishof, isn't happy.

"We are not going to report until we settle this whole thing," Fishof said. "Phil is committed to this."

assure confidentiality of positive tests and stress rehabilitation of players over punishment.

Kenn appointed a committee chaired by Falcons teammate Bill Fralic to devise a survey that will be taken of players during training camp. Kenn said it would deal with rehabilitation and also with punishment for repeat offenders.

"This is something the players have been concerned about a long time," Kenn said. "We actually are moving things along as quickly as we can."

"We would like to get to a point where an independent body would handle it," Fralic said. "We feel there should be little opposition to it."

Fralic said he had such doubts about the accuracy of the league's testing that he sometimes wonders if his outspoken anti-drug statements might lead them "to do something to Bill Fralic because he's a big mouth."

The players also announced the hiring of a consultant, Ted Schramm, president of Behavior Research Inc. in Lakeside, Calif.

Schramm was the associate director of the White House Office of Drug Abuse Policy during the Carter administration and spearheaded a crackdown on drug abuse in the military.

Schramm said that the dignity of a player testing positive should be sanctified and that treatment, rehabilitation and assistance would have the highest priority.

"We will not, under any circumstances short of litigation, let it be known anyone tested positive," Schramm said.

He said the only people who would know the identity of a person who tested positive would be the player and a physician, who would prescribe a treatment program.

Upshaw said that the players had no idea how much separate testing would cost but that the cost is unimportant if it helps to save one life or gets a player help one day sooner.

King Rolls To Top Spot

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAKE ORION, Mich. — Apparently it will take more than the heather and hype in this year's U.S. Women's Open to shake Betsy King.

Currently in the midst of her best year on the LPGA Tour, King fired a 4-under-par 67 in Thursday's opening round at the Indianwood Country Club course, whose heather-infested rough surrendered only three sub-par rounds.

That was one stroke better than Marie-Laure de Lorenzi-Taya, the latest of the European challengers who in recent years have kept the U.S. Open trophy out of American hands.

King tamed the 6,109-yard Scottish-looking course with six birdies and a solid tee-to-green effort that saw her hit 15 greens in regulations and need only 28 putts.

"It's a tough course, but it's not as tough as it looks," King said after her round. "If you keep it in play off the tee, you can score on this course."

King, 33, is seeking her fifth win this season but first U.S. Open title. Her earnings of $423,794 leads the LPGA, and after Thursday's round, King sounded like a golfer in total command of her game.

"I played about as well as I can today," King said. "I made three or four putts from about 20 feet from places it's best not to be on this course."

King turned the front side in 2-under 33, and went to four under with an eight-foot birdie putt on the par-4 11th and a 25-foot, double-bogey on the 456-yard par-5 12th. She nullified a bogey at the par-4 16th with a 20-foot downhill putt on 18 that dropped into the right side of the cup.

King said Indianwood's slick greens, which claimed countless three-putts from the field of 156 players, were ideal for her putting style.

"I think I'm a much better putter on fast greens," she said. "I think I have a good imagination and these greens definitely require that."

De Lorenzi-Taya, winner of 11 tournaments on the European circuit the past two years, stayed in King's shadow with five birdies.

Playing with Hall of Famer Nancy Lopez, the French-born 28-year-old de Lorenzi-Taya was unfazed by both her company and the fact she was playing her first round ever in a U.S. Open.

"I was a little nervous at the start, but once I hit my first tee shot, everything was fine," she said.

De Lorenzi-Taya is trying to become the third straight European to win the Open. England's Laura Davies won in 1987 and Sweden's Liselotte Neumann won it last year as a rookie on the LPGA circuit.

Jane Geddes, the last American to win the U.S. Open — 1986 — was the only other player to break par in the opening round. Playing in the morning, before intermittent rain and wind toughened conditions, Geddes carded a 1-under 70.

"I drove the ball extremely well," she said. "The course is playing very difficult and I'm very pleased with my round."

Thirteen players were at even par, including Neumann, who is trying to become the first back-to-back winner since Hollis Stacy did it in 1978.

Neumann conceded the defending champion label affected her first-round play.

"My putting (25 putts) saved my day," she said. "I was really nervous the first couple of holes. I think the first round is the worst."

Lopez, who has won 40 tournaments in 13 years but never the Open, was two under through 12 holes but bogeyed four of the next five holes and finished with a 73.

Canseco Starts Where He Left Off

A's Top Blue Jays; Hawkins Keys Yankees To Win By Pitching 3-Hit Shutout

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It didn't take Jose Canseco long to get back into the swing of things in the American League.

After missing 86 games with an injured wrist, the slugging Oakland outfielder came back with a bang Thursday night to lead the Athletics to an 11-7 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

"I'm a bit surprised, the way I hit in the minors, but I convinced myself before the game that I would do well," Canseco said after hitting a home run and driving in three runs.

Canseco, last year's American League MVP with a league-leading 42 homers, had a sacrifice fly and an RBI single in his 1989 major-league debut. He also managed to steal a base, even though he was admittedly not quite himself.

"I'm only about 80 percent right now, but my attitude is to go up there and see the ball well," said Canseco, who had spent the last couple of weeks with the Athletics' Southern League affiliate at Huntsville, Ala.

For A's manager Tony LaRussa, Canseco was a sight for sore eyes.

"It's not like we forgot how good he is but it's nice to be reminded," LaRussa said.

In other AL action, it was New York 6, Kansas City 0; Boston 3, Minnesota 1; Texas 9, Cleveland 3 in 11 innings; California 13, Baltimore 5; Seattle 5, Detroit 4 in 12 innings, and Chicago 5, Milwaukee 4.

While Canseco stole the spotlight, a couple of other big hitters contributed to Oakland's winning effort.

Mark McGwire and Dave Parker both hit three-run homers. McGwire's 18th of the year came in the A's four-run first inning and followed a run-scoring single by Dave Henderson.

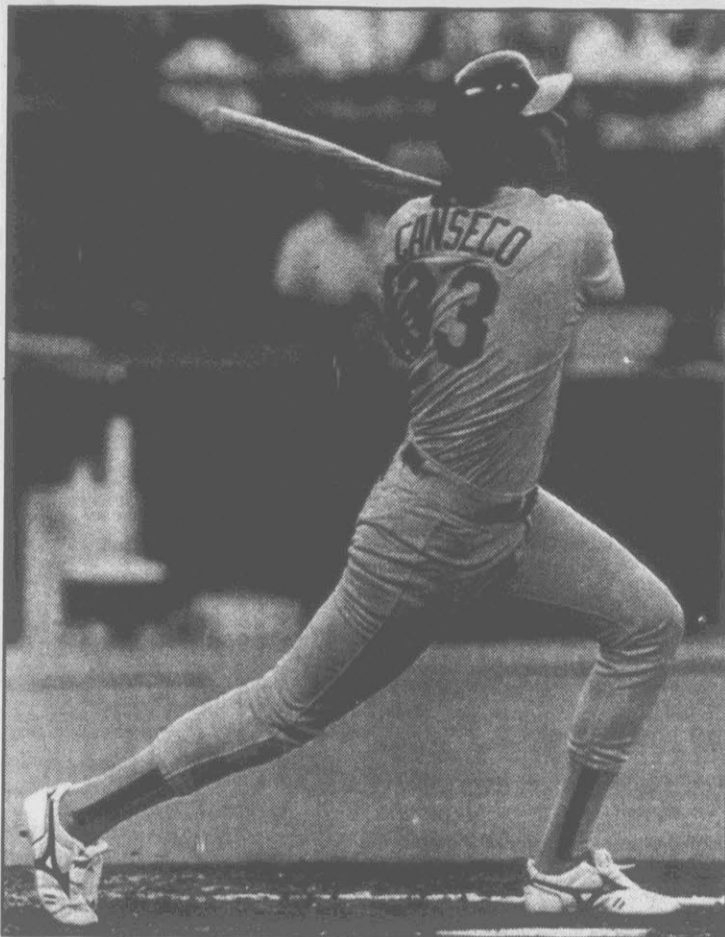

"We've heard from guys around the league that the ball doesn't carry here," McGwire said of the Blue Jays' new SkyDome. "I guess tonight was the first night it carried."

Parker's homer proved to be the difference as the A's turned George Bell's error into a four-run fifth inning.

Canseco's homer, an opposite-field blast to right, put the A's up 10-7 in the top of the seventh.

"I wasn't trying to hit a homer," Canseco said.

Meanwhile, reliever Dennis Eckersley made his first appearance since May 27 for Oakland.

retiring the side in order in the ninth.

Yankees 6, Royals 0

Andy Hawkins retired the first 20 batters he faced and finished with a three-hitter as New York beat Kansas City.

Hawkins, 11-8, pitched his second straight shutout and won for the sixth time in his last seven decisions. He struck out a season-high eight and walked one.

Don Mattingly capped a four-run Yankee fifth with his 12th homer of the season after Roberto Kelly doubled in a run and Luis Polonia drove in another with a sacrifice fly off Kansas City starter Mark Gubicza, 8-7.

Red Sox 3, Twins 1

Roger Clemens pitched a two-hitter over eight innings to outduel Frank Viola as Boston defeated Minnesota, handing the Twins their seventh straight loss.

Clemens, 10-6, gave up only two singles, struck out five and walked four before getting relief help from Lee Smith.

Smith pitched the ninth for his 13th save, his eighth in a row since June 13. The save was the 222nd of Smith's career, tying him for sixth place on the all-time list with Sparky Lyle.

Boston scored twice in the eighth to snap a 1-1 tie against Viola, 7-10, who allowed only three hits in eight innings.

Rangers 9, Indians 3

Cecil Espy had his first career five-hit game, including two singles during a six-run 11th inning, as Texas beat Cleveland.

Espy started the Rangers' outburst with a leadoff single, and two outs later scored the go-ahead run on Julio Franco's single. Pete Incaviglia followed with a two-run single, and Jeff Kunkel added a run-scoring single to finish loser Rod Nichols, 0-1.

Espy's bases-loaded two-run single off Keith Atherton closed the scoring.

Jeff Russell, 5-2, struck out the only batter he faced to get the win. Gary Mielke finished the 11th.

Angels 13, Orioles 5

Lance Parrish hit a tie-breaking solo homer in the sixth inning as California overcame an early four-run deficit to defeat Baltimore.

Parrish hit a 1-2 pitch from reliever Mark Thurmond, 2-3, for his 11th homer a half-inning after the Orioles had tied the score at 5 on a sacrifice fly by Joe Orsulak.

After the Angels made it 7-5 on a two-out, RBI single by Wally Joyner, Jack Howell hit a two-run homer off Mike Smith in the seventh. Dick Schofield added a three-run homer in the ninth.

Bert Blyleven, 9-2, won his fifth straight decision, allowing five runs and nine hits in six innings. He reached the 3,500-strikeout level and moved within eight of Walter Johnson, whose 3,508 ranks sixth on baseball's all-time strikeout list.

Mariners 5, Tigers 4

Edgar Martinez's two-out single off Mike Schwabe in the 12th led Seattle over Detroit, handing the Tigers their eighth straight loss. The losing streak is the longest for the Tigers since September 1985.

Harold Reynolds singled with two outs, Greg Briley followed with a single and Martinez knocked in Reynolds from second on a 3-2 pitch.

Bill Swift, 6-2, pitched the last two innings for the victory, while Schwabe, 2-4, pitched the final inning for the Tigers.

The Tigers tied the game 4-4 in the bottom of the ninth on a one-out RBI single by Lou Whitaker off Mike Schooler.

White Sox 5, Brewers 4

Dan Plesac issued a bases-loaded walk to Ivan Calderon with one out in the ninth inning, boosting Chicago over Milwaukee.

Ozzie Guillen reached first leading off the ninth against Tony Fossas, 1-1, when shortstop Gary Sheffield threw wildly to first for the Brewers' league-leading 92nd error.

Guillen was sacrificed to second by Dave Gallagher and Fred Manrique, pinch-hitting for Steve Lyons, was intentionally walked. Fossas then walked Harold Baines to load the bases and set the stage for Plesac, who walked Calderon on a 3-1 pitch.

Bobby Thigpen, 1-3, won his first game since a July 1, 1988 decision against the New York Yankees.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Dennis Martinez didn't make the All-Star team, but he's making the Montreal Expos the team to beat in the National League East.

Martinez won his ninth straight decision Thursday night as the Expos beat the Cincinnati Reds at Riverfront Stadium 6-3.

The Expos are averaging 4.5 runs per game when Martinez starts.

"That's the way it's been my last three or four games. Everything's been going our way, especially my way," Martinez said. "Every time I go out we're able to score some runs. That's how you manage to have a decent year."

Martinez, 10-1, allowed six hits in six innings and singled home a run as he set a club record for consecutive winning decisions. Charlie Lea won eight consecutive decisions in 1983.

Martinez's nine victories have come in a span of 13 starts.

At 50-38, the Expos are 12 games over .500 for the first time this season.

The victory kept the Expos 1½ games ahead of Chicago and 2½ in front of the New York Mets.

Elsewhere in the NL it was Chicago 7, San Diego 3; New York 5, Atlanta 1; Los Angeles 3, St. Louis 2; San Francisco 3, Pittsburgh 2 in 13 innings, and Houston and Philadelphia split a doubleheader, with the Phillies winning the opener 11-4 and the Astros the nightcap 3-0.

The Reds have lost four straight and 20 of their last 29. They got some more bad news on Thursday when All-Star shortstop Barry Larkin was placed on the 15-day disabled list with stretched fibers in an elbow ligament.

"It's kind of a tough road to go when you don't have an extra infielder or an extra catcher," Manager Pete Rose said. "I had 21 or 22 (healthy) players and a banded-up bullpen. It can only get better."

Spike Owen's two-out single in the seventh completed the Expos' comeback from a 3-0 deficit. Tim Wallach added a two-run homer in the ninth for the Expos.

Giants 3, Pirates 2

Will Clark lined a single to left field to score Brett Butler with none out in the 13th inning, lifting San Francisco past Pittsburgh at Candlestick Park.

Butler led off the 13th with a line drive single off third baseman Bob by Bonilla's glove. Miguel Garcia, 0-2, then allowed a bunt single to Robby Thompson and Clark lined a 2-2 pitch into left to score Butler.

Jeff Brantley, 5-0, pitched the final four innings for the victory.

Pittsburgh's Barry Bonds led off the game with home run for the 18th time in his career.

Dodgers 3, Cardinals 2

Orel Hershiser allowed two runs in 8 1-3 innings and Eddie Murray drove in two runs as Los Angeles beat St. Louis at Dodger Stadium.

Hershiser, 10-7, allowed six hits before Jay Howell got the last two outs for his 16th save.

Rookie right-hander Ken Hill, who has beaten the Dodgers twice this season, fell to 5-5.

Jose Oquendo extended his hitting streak to 11 games for St. Louis with two hits and an RBI.

Mets 5, Braves 1

Darryl Strawberry and Gregg Jefferies each hit home runs as visiting New York extended its winning streak to four games by beating Atlanta.

Both homers came off Pete Smith, 2-11, with Strawberry hitting his 18th in the fifth inning and Jefferies his second in the second.

Ron Darling, 7-6, pitched a five-hitter and improved his lifetime record against the Braves to 9-1. He had a shutout bid stopped in the eighth when Jeff Blauser led off with his fifth home run.

Cubs 7, Padres 3

Jerome Walton went 4-for-4 and Greg Maddux continued his mastery of San Diego as Chicago beat the Padres at Jack Murphy Stadium.

Maddux, 9-7, allowed five hits in 6 1-3 innings to improve his lifetime record to 5-0 against the Padres. Les Lancaster pitched 2 1-3 for his first save.

The Cubs improved their season record to 8-1 over San Diego and have won eight of their last 10 games.

Bruce Hurst, 7-7, allowed five runs and seven hits in five innings.

Phillies 11, Astros 4

Astros 3, Phillies 0

Mark Davidson hit a two-run homer for his first NL hit and Bob Forsch and two relievers combined on a seven-hitter as Houston beat Philadelphia to gain a doubleheader split.

In the opener, rookie Charlie Hayes' three-run double highlighted a six-run third inning as the Phillies won 11-4.

Forsch, 39, evened his record at 2-2, by allowing four hits in 6 1-3 innings. Danny Darwin pitched 1 2-3 innings and allowed one hit and Dave Smith finished for his 19th save in 20 opportunities. Dennis Cook, 3-3, was the loser.

In the first game, Bruce Ruffin, 3-3, won his third straight decision and Bob Knepper dropped to 3-10.

Braves' Perry Gets Shoulder Surgery

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

First baseman Gerald Perry of the Atlanta Braves underwent three hours of surgery Thursday to correct a separated left shoulder.

"There was more damage than we originally thought," said Dr. Joe Chandler, who performed the surgery at Piedmont Hospital.

Chandler said Perry's shoulder would be immobilized for about four weeks and that he will wear a sling.

The Braves said they expected

Perry to be fine by the start of spring training next February.

Perry separated the shoulder to varying degrees four times in the last 13 months, with the most serious injury coming last Sunday against the Philadelphia Phillies when he tried to make a diving catch.

Perry, now sidelined for the season, had a .252 batting average in 72 games. He hit four home runs with 21 RBI and endured a stretch of more than two months without driving in a run.

Jose Canseco was back in the Oakland lineup Thursday night after missing the Athletics' first 86 games with a wrist injury. Canseco hit a homer and had a sac fly in the A's 11-7 victory over Toronto.

"I'm a bit surprised after the way I hit in the minors," Canseco said. "But I convinced myself before the game that I would do well. I think that tells you just how important the mental aspect of the game is. I'm only about 80 per cent right now, but my attitude is to go up there and see the ball well."

Cincinnati All-Star shortstop Barry Larkin was placed on the 15-day DL Thursday with ligament damage in his right elbow.

Space Council Wants To Use Moon As Base For Exploration Of Mars

WASHINGTON — The National Space Council, working on "a major new space initiative," is focusing on an American return to the moon, establishing a permanent base and proceeding from there to Mars.

But it will be expensive, warns Rep. Robert Walker, R-Pa., who was among a group of congressmen briefed Thursday on several options being considered by the council.

Any of the options, Walker said, will require "a substantial increase in resources available to NASA — it will require doubling the size of NASA and the NASA budget."

The council, headed by Vice President Dan Quayle, favors the moon-Mars scenario over other courses being considered, Walker said, but no final decision has been made. Quayle, NASA Administrator Richard H. Truly and Mark Albrecht, executive secretary of the space council, conducted the briefing.

"They basically outlined three options,"

Walker, the ranking Republican member of the House space science subcommittee, said in an interview.

"One, for the United States to move ahead with a robotic program and gradually phase men out of the space program; another, to go back to the moon with the idea of establishing a permanent moon base and then going from there to Mars, and third, to take us directly to Mars after the turn of the century."

The council is not expected to make a recommendation about America's space future to President Bush in time for inclusion in his speech next Thursday on the 20th anniversary of the first landing on the moon.

Walker said Quayle is "basically consulting with the people on Capitol Hill who have something to say about authorizing space funds as an advance of Space Council consideration of a major new space initiative."

Attending the meeting in the White House complex were the chairmen and ranking members of the Senate and House subcommittees and committees that handle the space program.

The space agency has asked for $13 billion in the next fiscal year, but is likely to get far less than that from a budget-minded Congress.

"I made the point that they basically were asking for us to find about 2 percent of the federal budget for NASA in the 1990s and into the next century," Walker said. "We were almost double that level in the 1960s — this nation has shown it is capable of spending 3.6 percent of the budget for space activity if the program is truly visionary."

The National Space Council was established by Bush as a presidential advisory body. It includes the secretaries of State, Defense, Treasury, Commerce and Transportation, the director of the Office of Management and Budget, the White House chief of staff, the national security adviser, the president's science adviser, the director of the CIA and the NASA administrator.

Moon Facts

Diameter: 2,160 miles
Mass: 1/81 that of Earth
Volume: 92.4 billion cubic miles (1/49 that of Earth)
Distance from Earth: 240,000 miles
Temperatures of surface rocks: Sun at zenith: approx. 214°F
Night: approx. -250°F
Rotation: Because the moon rotates in the same length of time that it takes to orbit the Earth, we always see the same face of the moon from the Earth.

Viewing the Earth

Swirls of white clouds could clearly be seen against the blue of the sea and sky, and the brown of the continents.

Footprints

The footprints left behind by the 12 astronauts who landed there, will be preserved for centuries in the weatherless environment.

Gravity

Because of the moon's low gravity (one-sixth of the Earth's), the astronauts at first found it difficult to move around. They soon found that it was best to move in a kind of loping gait, rather like a kangaroo.

Rocks

Moon rocks are different in composition from Earth rocks, implying that the moon almost certainly did not come from the Earth. Samples from the lunar plains are much younger than those from the highlands, which are thought to be part of the moon's original crust.

Apollo 11 Astronauts Will Celebrate Landing On Moon

By Howard Benedict
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — The Apollo 11 astronauts kick off a weeklong celebration Saturday to commemorate the 20th anniversary of man's landing on the moon, beginning at the site where their lunar rocket was designed.

They will take part in ceremonies and parties at three NASA space centers and with President Bush in the nation's capital.

Neil Armstrong and Buzz Aldrin left the first footprints on the lunar surface on July 20, 1969, while Mike Collins circled overhead in the command ship.

The three will start their anniversary trip Saturday at the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., where the giant Saturn 5 rocket that propelled them to the moon was designed and tested.

There they will meet with rocket pioneers and attend a reception and an open house concert where the landing on the moon's Sea of Tranquility will be re-created by actors on a stage.

The astronauts will be at the Kennedy Space Center at Cape Canaveral on Sunday, the launch's anniversary. Against a backdrop of an unused Saturn 5, now a museum piece, they will make brief remarks and listen to a tape recording of the launch commentary in the minutes before the Apollo 11 liftoff.

The "taped liftoff" will occur at 9:32 a.m. EDT, precisely the time they left Earth.

After the ceremony the spacemen will ride in a motorcade that will travel 20 miles to Cocoa Beach, where they will be honored at a luncheon.

On Wednesday, they will be in Washington for an evening reception at the Smithsonian Institution's National Air and Space Museum.

The next day, the anniversary of the moon landing, Armstrong, Aldrin and Collins will be joined by President Bush for a ceremony on the Mall in front of the museum.

Bush is expected to unveil a long-term space plan that could include strong endorsement of a permanent space station and proposals for building a lunar research base and sending Americans to Mars early in the 21st century.

The astronauts then will fly to the Johnson Space Center in Houston, site of their Apollo training base and home for the Mission Control Center that directs all U.S. manned spaceflights.

There they will attend a giant reception on Thursday night attended by 5,000 or more people who will re-create the infamous "splashdown parties" that went on all night after each successful Apollo mission.

Next Friday, they will attend a black tie gala at a Houston hotel. The master of ceremonies will be Walter Cronkite, the former CBS anchorman who reported on the mission for his network.

GM Orders Recall

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICW

General Motors said Thursday that it was recalling about 1.7 million 1984-1988 medium-size and large cars to repair a flaw in cruise-control systems that could cause throttles to stick partially open.

The recall is voluntary, but it comes four months after an announcement by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration that it had opened an investigation into the problem and was considering ordering a recall.

In a statement issued from Detroit, GM said it knew of no accidents or injuries resulting from the defect. But the traffic safety administration said the 354 consumer complaints it received about the problem included reports of 28 accidents and 13 injuries.

Cars involved are 1984-1988 models with 5.0-liter gasoline engines and those with 4.3-liter and 5.7-liter diesel engines. That includes the Chevrolet Caprice and Monte Carlo; Pontiac Parisienne and Grand Prix;

Oldsmobile Delta 88, 98, Cutlass Supreme and Toronado; Buick LeSabre, Riviera and Regal; and the Cadillac Brougham, Eldorado and Seville.

GM and the safety administration said the throttle could stick without warning if a small nylon bushing, or ring, that is part of the linkage becomes dislodged. That, in turn, could cause a rod to wear through a bracket that is holding it and catch on other engine components. Even if the throttle sticks, the safety administration said, the cars can be brought to a stop, but braking efficiency would be reduced and a driver could be sufficiently startled to lose control of the car.

Columbia Will Move To Pad Site

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Technicians made final preparations to move an overhauled space shuttle Columbia to the launch pad tonight for an early August flight with a secret military spy satellite.

A giant tracked vehicle, moving at maximum speed of 1 mph, is to start the four-mile trip at 8 p.m. NASA had hoped to make the move early in the day, but spokeswoman Lisa Malone said more time was needed to complete work on the craft's thermal protection tiles.

The space agency had planned to launch Columbia on July 31, but NASA administrator Richard Truly said Thursday that preparations were behind schedule and that liftoff now is expected during the first week in August. A firm date will be set July 25 during a flight readiness review.

The flight will be the first in more than three years for the oldest vehicle in the shuttle fleet. Columbia's last mission ended just 10 days before Challenger exploded on Jan. 28, 1986, killing the seven crew members.

During the 32-month grounding following the accident, NASA concentrated on Discovery and Atlantis in making engineering changes to improve safety and reliability. Columbia was last in line for the 250 changes ordered.

U.S. Cool To Cuban Proposal On Drugs

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Despite the execution of four former Cuban military officers on drug trafficking charges, the State Department is reluctant to accept an offer from President Fidel Castro for a joint anti-smuggling campaign.

"You don't automatically start negotiating cooperation until you have an indication the other side is really serious," deputy spokesman Richard Boucher said Thursday, alleging that drug-related activities in Cuba are continuing.

Boucher spoke after a Cuban war hero and three colleagues were executed for shipping tons of drugs to the United States.

Boucher said the Bush administration did not have access to all the evidence in the case and therefore cannot make a judgment about the executions.

"With regard to policy, we, of course, support vigorous prosecution of alleged drug traffickers whoever they may be," he said.

Castro has suggested U.S.-Cuban cooperation to halt drug trafficking, but State Department officials said they believe it possible the Cuban leader has known all along about current and past use of Cuban territory for narcotics shipments.

Castro said the drug probe that led to Thursday's executions began in March after U.S. authorities arrested two traffickers who said they used Cuba as a transit point for smuggling cocaine from Colombia.

Another reason for U.S. caution in responding to Castro's offer, officials said, is that they don't want to create with Cuba the same kind of situation they have faced with Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, head of Panama's Defense Forces.

Noriega, they said, has cracked down from time to time on his adversaries in the drug-smuggling business, winning praise from the Drug Enforcement Administration while allegedly engaging in aiding drug shipments himself.

Noriega has been under indictment in Florida since February 1988 for drug-related offenses.

 Duplicate pairs can prove to be an interesting game to kibitz if you were to be permitted to follow a particular board from table to table. Most pairs failed to make three no trump on this deal from a pair championship, but a few managed to demonstrate that the contract was unbeatable.

It was a difficult hand to bid, because most players use a secondary jump in their suit as invitational, not forcing. Therefore, three diamonds would have been an underbid, so most Norths chose a jump to three clubs, and that resulted in a three no trump contract.

West's lead of a spade was damaging, since it removed one of the two entries to dummy before it could be put to good use. At some tables declarer came to hand with the ace of clubs, East following with the queen, to lead a diamond to the king. East simply refused to win the trick and the diamond suit was dead, since declarer had only one entry and needed two to establish and run the suit.

Other declarers used the entry to hand to finesse the ten of diamonds. East took the jack and shifted to clubs, and the defenders forced out dummy's remaining entry before the diamonds were set up.

The winning line is to lead the ten (or nine) of diamonds from dummy at trick two. East must win with the jack and let's suppose he shifts to a club (a heart is no better). Declarer wins in hand and forces out the ace of diamonds, and the king of clubs is still on the table as an entry to the diamonds.

Tiny Tim Tiptoes Away From Song

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
 FARGO, N.D. — When Tiny Tim got a request to sing his old hit "Tiptoe Through the Tulips" at a department store, he threw his hands in the air and ran out of the store.
 "This came at a very untimely moment," Tim said Thursday at a news conference with other Red River Valley Fair entertainers.

 Tim said he was trying to decide what skin-care products to buy earlier this week at Delendrecie's in the West Acres shopping mall when a sales clerk asked him to sing the song.
 "I said, 'Listen, I don't get any products free here, and I'm certainly not going to do a number here,'" Tim said.

 The singer said he only had about $200 to spend and was trying to choose from about $1,000 worth of products at the time.
 Tim apologized for the incident Thursday, and a store spokesman said Delendrecie's hopes there is no hard feelings as well.

Animated 'Simpsons' Move To Own Show

By Kathryn Baker
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Matt Groening had been asked to pitch ideas for an animated television show before, but network executives didn't quite get it.
 "They would say, what do you want to do?" Groening recalled, "and I'd say, I want a show with the wit and charm of 'Bullwinkle.' And they'd say, you don't understand, we're trying to appeal to 3-year-olds. I'd say, I do a cartoon called 'Life in Hell'. Why did you want to talk to me?"
 Producer-director James L. Brooks ("The Mary Tyler Moore Show," "Broadcast News") knew exactly what Groening's "Life in Hell" cartoon was all about.
 The strip is carried by "alternative" weekly newspapers around the country, such as The Village Voice. Brooks asked Groening to create the brief "bumpers," cartoon vignettes, that lead in and out of commercials during "The Tracey Ullman Show," of which Brooks is executive producer.
 The Simpsons, a homely, squabbling brood of Middle-Americans, became such a hit on "Ullman," Fox is spinning them off into their own series.

 Fox won't yet say when, but sometime during the next season, Tracey Ullman and company will bid adieu to the Simpsons, the week before they embark on their own show. It will be the first prime-time, network animated series since "The Jetsons" and "The Flintstones" in the 1960s.
 "The Simpsons" is set in the mythical Midwestern city of Springfield, a burg replete with a nuclear power plant and a toxic waste dump.
 The voices of Homer, Marge and their kids, Lisa, Bart and Maggie, are provided by Dan Castellaneta and Julie Kavner, both of "The Tracey Ullman Show," Nancy Cartwright, Yearley Smith and celebrity guest voices, such as Harry Shearer and Penny Marshall.
 Brooks, Groening and producer-writer Sam Simon told a meeting of television critics that they just don't know what America will think of the Simpsons once audiences start getting a bigger dose of their darkly funny sitcom antics.
 Someone wondered whether America was in fact receiving enough cutting satire of sitcom families in Fox's "Married ... With Children." Simon insisted, almost maintaining a straight face, that the Simpsons are unlike the unscrupulous and conniving Bundys and really do love each other, deep down.

"They don't hate each other," Simon said. "If they do occasionally strangle each other or hit each other over the head, it's just an impulsive act."
 "Whether they will go over, whether these drawn figures will go over, we don't know," Brooks said.
 The Simpsons, who look very much like the wild-eyed rabbits who populate Groening's "Life in Hell" strip, derived from an "unpublishable novel" Groening said he wrote in high school, "Mean Kids."
 Groening said he never expected to become a cartoonist, since "my drawing didn't improve much after sixth grade." He describes the Simpsons as having "large, round eyes, and a tremendous overbite problem" — basically, his rabbits without the giant ears. "Maybe someday Marge will take off a wig and reveal her true identity," he teased.

 Groening said he does fervently hope that Binky and the other rabbits from "Life in Hell" might get their own TV series, too, someday.
 "Someday," Groening said, "maybe television will be ready for my hellish stuff."

Co-Host
 ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Phyllis George, a former Miss America who went on to become a television personality, will co-host this year's Miss America Pageant with Gary Collins, the pageant's director said.
 Ms. George's selection is part of the pageant's push to promote "today's modern, educated woman," Leonard Horn said Thursday.
 "The Miss America competition helped open doors for her, and with her talents, she has achieved a great deal," he said.
 After being crowned Miss America 1971, Ms. George went on to become a television sportscaster and newscaster, an author and lecturer. For eight seasons, she was anchorwoman of CBS Sports' "NFL Today."

Roseanne Files Suit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Roseanne Barr, the hefty star of the top-rated TV sitcom "Roseanne," is divorcing her husband of 15 years, blaming the split on irreconcilable differences.
 Miss Barr filed her petition to divorce William Pentland in Superior Court Thursday. The papers said the couple separated on April 1.
 The comedian-actress, who portrays a sarcastic, overweight housewife in her highly successful ABC television show, is seeking joint custody of the couple's three children.
 The youngsters, Jessica, 14, Jennifer 13, and Jake, 12, live with their mother, according to the petition.
 The divorce petition does not seek any spousal or child support. The couple married Feb. 4, 1974.

Rolling Stones Lose To Football

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
 SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Rolling Stones fans will be disappointed that a concert by their rock 'n' roll idols was scrapped in favor of a Syracuse University football scrimmage.
 Athletic Director Jake Crouthamel refused to allow the Rolling Stones to open their new tour Sept. 1 at the dome because preparations for the concert would have conflicted with an intrasquad football scrimmage and dinner for the team's booster club scheduled for the previous day.

 "I couldn't believe my ears when I heard he said no," said Barbara Hoffman, spokeswoman for the concert promoter.
 The rock band will instead open its first tour in eight years at Rich Stadium near Buffalo on Sept. 1.
 Pat Campbell, assistant director of the 50,000-seat dome, said the dinner and scrimmage "means a lot — more than any concert — as far as the university is concerned."

CDC Survey Finds States Vary On Risks To Health

By Robert Byrd
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — People in Kentucky are bad about smoking but good about not drinking and driving, most Hawaiians buckle up and Montana residents aren't a sedentary lot, a health survey shows.

The national Centers for Disease Control asked people in 32 states and the District of Columbia about their exercise habits, their drinking, their driving and their efforts to ward off heart disease, breast cancer and the flu.

The survey, taken in 1987 and released Thursday, is the latest of the CDC's Behavioral Risk Factor Surveys — an effort to find out what Americans do to ruin their health.

The survey found a wide variety of health-related behavior from state-to-state. It also found variations in the use of precautions, such as cholesterol checks, mammograms and flu vaccinations.

"We've seen that risk-taking behavior varies a lot," said Dr. Robert Anda, a specialist in health risks with the Atlanta-based CDC.

He cited several possible reasons for the differences. "It could be socioeconomic factors. It could be that the quality of medical care may vary from state to state, or the availability, or access," he said. "Prevention has not had the emphasis it needs in this country."

In the survey, the widest variance in unhealthy behavior was the use of seat belts: 72 percent of the South Dakotans surveyed reported that they did not usually wear seat belts, while just 7 percent of Hawaiians fell in that category.

But most of the nation seems agreed on a distaste for exercise. In all but three states, more than half the respondents said they led "sedentary" lives — not engaging in thrice-weekly exercise sessions of 20 minutes or more.

A look at the surveys' other highs and lows:
— Smoking ranged from 32.3 percent in Kentucky to 15 percent in Utah.
— Montana reported the fewest with sedentary lifestyles, 47.2 percent, and New York the most with 73.5 percent.

— "Binge drinking" (more than four drinks in one sitting in the last month) was reported by 29.4 percent in Wisconsin and just 6.6 percent in New Mexico.

— "Heavier drinking" (60 or more drinks a month) ranged from 3.7 percent in West Virginia to 10.3 percent in New Hampshire.

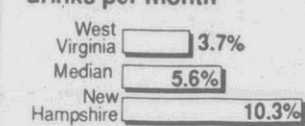

— Drinking and driving, defined as getting behind the wheel after "too much to drink," ranged from 8.3 percent in Wisconsin to 1.3 percent in Kentucky.

— In Maryland, 56.8 percent of those surveyed had had a cholesterol check, while in New Mexico, it was just 29.3.

— In New Hampshire, 57.5 percent of the women surveyed had had a mammogram, compared with 34.6 percent in Nebraska.
— And while 41.3 percent of those 65 and older in Montana had gotten their flu shots for the year, just 24 percent of those in Rhode Island did the same.

NAACP Proposes Washington March

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DETROIT — Comparing the Supreme Court to the Ku Klux Klan for recent decisions on civil rights and affirmative action, NAACP head Benjamin L. Hooks called for a march on the nation's capital next month to protest the rulings.

"We're not going to let four men and a woman in black robes turn us around any more than we'll let white robes turn us around," Hooks said, referring to the garb traditionally worn by Klan members.

Meanwhile, the Rev. Jesse Jackson challenged President Bush to offer blacks and other minorities more than "kinder and gentler" words.

"(Former President) Reagan laid the tracks and built the engine to take the rights of workers and women and African-Americans and Hispanics and the poor. Bush is putting grease on those tracks, not brakes," Jackson told 3,500 cheering people at the closing session of the group's 80th annual convention.

"We all appreciate President Bush's appeal, a shift from hostility to be kinder and gentler. We appreciate that he is prepared to meet and greet us and even sup with us and even shake our hands."

"But after six months, it is time to look beyond the smile and look at the substance, because thousands of poor people, working people, women, African-Americans and Hispanics need more than kindness and gentleness," said Jackson, who received the group's coveted Spingarn Medal for achievement by an African black.

The harsh criticism of the Supreme Court contrasted with the warm words Hooks had for Bush earlier in the week for his appointments and for inviting black leaders to the White House.

In the term just ended, the high court struck down contract guarantees for minority firms, made it tougher to prove bias in the workplace while making it easier for white males to contest affirmative action, and allowed states to impose restrictions on abortions.

The rulings "have impacted on the civil rights laws already on the books. They have pinched them back so far that they have made them nearly null and void," said Hooks, the group's executive director.

The nation's oldest and largest civil rights organization, addressed this week by Vice President Dan Quayle and Bush cabinet members Jack Kemp and Louis Sullivan, decided to protest the administration's apparent inaction following the court rulings by calling for the Aug. 26 march, Hooks said.

Hundreds Arrested At Mine

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PRENTER, W.Va. (AP) — Police arrested hundreds of striking United Mine Workers members and supporters for blocking the road to a non-union mine, and coal companies accused the governor of letting the protests get out of hand.

In Kentucky, meanwhile, rock-throwing pickets Thursday injured the president of a coal company and a driver.

Gov. Gaston Caperton "may know how to run an insurance company, but he damn sure don't know how to run a state," said Sid Young III, president of Hampden Coal Co. Caperton is a millionaire insurance executive.

E. Morgan Massey, head of A.T. Massey, says Caperton should call out the National Guard "before it is too late." Massey blasted Caperton for not controlling violence.

A Caperton spokesman said the governor and state police are in control of the situation and intend to remain neutral. Col. Jack Buckalew, head of the West Virginia state police, on Thursday placed all 486 troopers on around-the-clock duty.

About 1,900 United Mine Workers members went on strike April 5 over a contract dispute against Pittston Coal Group Inc. in Virginia, West Virginia and Kentucky. Other union workers began staging sympathy strikes June 12 throughout Appalachia and the Midwest.

The union this week authorized a weeklong work stoppage affecting 60,000 miners east of the Mississippi in what it said was an effort to calm coal field tensions and allow negotiations to resume. Before the work stoppage, permitted by the union's contract, about 37,000 miners were off the job in eight states.

In Prenter, 35 miles south of Charleston, state police on Thursday arrested 277 of the 500 strikers who blocked the road leading to the operating, non-union Elk Run Coal Co., said state police spokesman Ric Robinson.

Elk Run is a subsidiary of A.T. Massey Coal.

The miners were charged with obstructing a road, a misdemeanor, and one was charged with resisting arrest. They were taken to Boone County Magistrate Court in Madison, where they were issued traffic tickets and released.

While Robinson said the Prenter protest was peaceful, violence has erupted in the coal fields in the past few weeks.

At Sidney Coal Co. near Sidney, Ky., company President Charles Snavely was hit in the face with a rock, said Deborah Herndon, spokeswoman for A.T. Massey Coal Co. Sidney Coal is a Massey subsidiary.

Snavely was treated and released at Appalachian Regional Hospital in Williamson.

Don Gibson of Gibson Trucking said one of his drivers, Doyle Maynard, was slightly injured when pickets at Sidney Coal threw rocks. He said the driver was hauling gravel, not coal.

Kentucky state police said no arrests were made.

Senate Votes To Ease Bans On European Immigration

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — The Senate on Thursday night approved a major overhaul of U.S. immigration aimed at increasing the flow of skilled and educated workers, especially Western Europeans who have been largely excluded in recent years.

It approved the measure 81 to 17 after banning inclusion of illegal aliens in census figures used for legislative reapportionment, a move that was hotly contested and could significantly affect the allotment of congressional seats after the 1990 census.

Other key provisions would bar illegal aliens from receiving federal benefits but block deportation of close family members of aliens legalized under the 1986 immigration law.

Responding to the bloody repression of pro-democracy demonstrators in China, the Senate also increased the annual immigration quota for Hong Kong from 5,000 to 10,000 and agreed to allow Chinese studying in the United States to remain for four years and qualify for legal residency without returning to China unless the president certifies that it is safe for them to return.

While the 1986 immigration bill attempted to control illegal immigration, the new bill, co-sponsored by Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyo., would expand legal immigration under a new but loose ceiling that envisages entry of more skilled workers without the close family connections that have recently favored Latin American and Asian immigrants. The number of immigrants with family connections would be increased slightly; those without would nearly triple.

A similar Senate bill died in the House Judiciary Committee last year, but new committee leaders, including Chairman Jack Brooks,

D-Texas, and immigration subcommittee Chairman Bruce A. Morrison, D-Conn., are regarded as more sympathetic to the legislation. Kennedy said he has been assured by Brooks and Morrison that they will consider the bill and added that he is "very hopeful" that it will be enacted this year.

The bill sets a new "national level," or ceiling, of 630,000 legal immigrants for each of the next three years, not including refugees, who are governed by separate legislation. This is 136,000 more than last year's level of immigration, and the ceiling would be adjusted every three years in accord with recommendations from an independent commission.

Of the initial 630,000 visas, 480,000 would go to close relatives of U.S. citizens and permanent residents. The other 150,000 would be reserved for "independent" immigrants without family connections who qualify because of skills, education and job-related assets.

But the Senate put a big hole in the ceiling late Wednesday when it voted, under pressure from Hispanic, Asian and other groups, to guarantee a minimum level of family-connected visas, meaning that the actual number could rise well beyond the theoretical ceiling.

With spouses and minor children of U.S. citizens guaranteed unlimited entry, as they are now, La Raza and other groups representing recent immigrants argued that an overall ceiling, coupled with designated slots for independent immigrants, could have the effect of squeezing out other family members. So the Senate, at the behest of Sens. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, and Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., guaranteed that these other family preferences be maintained at no less than their current 216,000.

"You have snorted and rolled and ripped around ... and given birth to a mouse," complained Simpson, who championed the idea of a ceiling and failed in several attempts to keep it intact but nonetheless supported the final version of the legislation.

The Senate put another bulge in the ceiling, originally set at 600,000, when it voted 78 to 21 Thursday to approve a proposal from Sens. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., and DeConcini to add 30,000 visas for professionals and skilled workers, and rejected a proposal to cut the family preferences by a comparable amount. This raised the independent immigrant total to 150,000 and the overall ceiling to 630,000.

To attract more skilled and educated immigrants, the bill proposes to create a pool of 54,000 visas that would be awarded under a point system giving highest priority to young, educated and skilled workers in high-demand occupations.

A similar proposal in last year's bill also gave priority to English-language proficiency, but the language criterion was decried as discriminatory by Hispanic and other groups and omitted from the bill this year. A proposal by Simpson to restore it was rejected Thursday 56 to 43.

The Senate also voted 93 to 6 to end direct federal benefits, such as Social Security, to illegal aliens, although the attorney general would have limited authority in hard-ship cases. Sen. J. James Exon, D-Nebr., said the Social Security Administration estimated that benefits to aliens could rise to nearly $8 billion over the next 40 years.

French Farmer Under Tight Guard After Shooting 14 With His Shotgun

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LUXIOL, France — A farmer severely wounded in a shootout after killing 14 people with his double-barreled shotgun was under tight guard in a hospital today, partly for his own protection, authorities said.

Funerals were planned today in Luxiol and in nearby villages for the victims. Bastille Day celebrations were canceled, and decorative flags and bunting removed from streets and buildings.

Neighbors said Christian Dornier, 31, frightened them long before the dramatic events of Wednesday afternoon.

Investigators and witnesses described how Dornier shot his mother and sister to death, wounded his father, then got in his car and drove around this village of 128 people and neighboring communities for about two hours, firing at anyone he saw.

The spree ended in the village of Verne, where officers returned fire and hit him in the abdomen, said a spokesman for the Besancon headquarters of the gendarmerie, the military police responsible for public order in rural France.

Verne was to be the site of the largest of the main funeral service. Special security protection was prepared for the large crowd expected to attend.

Seven of the dead were from Luxiol. The others came from nearby Anteuil, Autechaux, Sechin, Fourbanne and Baume-les-Dames, with two from Voillans.

The gendarmerie spokesman, speaking on condition of anonymity in conformity with department practice, said investigators were taking seriously reports that local people had privately made threats against Dornier.

"He is now being kept in a Besancon hospital under a heavy police guard intended as much for his protection from the irate citizens, as to make sure he does not escape," the spokesman said.

The investigating magistrate in charge of the case is expected to decide next week whether Dornier is to be tried on murder charges or considered legally insane.

The maximum penalty for murder in France is life in prison. If someone is ruled insane, he can be interned in a psychiatric institution as long as necessary.

"We knew he would create havoc one day and the police should have dealt with him months ago. Unfortunately, our laws don't allow such preventive action," said Dominique Cuenot, a member of the village council.

"Everyone here was afraid of Christian Dornier," said Joel Clause, whose father is mayor. "His behavior was strange. No one ever complained to the police about him, but we all knew."

"Christian was a taciturn, depressed fellow," Serge Dornier said of his brother. "He had no friends, hardly ever talked to anyone. A few weeks ago he suddenly got a punk haircut. He did strange things like that and we did not pay much attention."

The village council had decided no action was called for because Christian Dornier had never been in trouble with the law.

"We advised the family to get him psychiatric treatment, and they did," said Jacques Fleury, a council member.

A psychiatrist came regularly from nearby Baume-les-Dames and prescribed tranquilizers, but Serge said his brother did not take them.

France's Bicentennial Revelers Set For Parades, Fireworks, Jets

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PARIS — Brass bands marched down the Champs-Elysees today and scores of planes streaked across the sky, leaving a trail of blue, white and red smoke wafting over the heads of hundreds of thousands of bicentennial revelers.

Celebrants danced and frolicked into the wee hours this morning at nearly a dozen places around Paris to celebrate the July 14, 1789, storming of the Bastille prison.

The thousands of revolutionaries who rushed the hated prison found only seven inmates to free, locked up not for their politics but for fraud, incest and lunacy, but the action marked the beginning of the French Revolution.

The traditional Bastille Day military parade in the morning followed all-night partying that briefly got out of hand, resulting in a 5 a.m. scuffle between a few stragglers that riot police tried to clear from the Place de la Bastille.

Three of the baton-wielding policemen were slightly injured as were an unknown number of others, the French news agency Agence France-Presse reported. About a dozen people were arrested.

President Francois Mitterrand rode standing up in a jeep from the Arc de Triomphe to the Place de la Concorde, where he took his place in the parade viewing stands behind bullet-proof glass shielding more than 30 world leaders in Paris.

Among those seated in the VIP stands to watch the military parade were President Bush, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Britain and President Corazon Aquino of the Philippines.

Nine bands set the stirring pace for units representing every branch of the French military, including the Foreign Legion.
