176 Survive Crash Of DC-10

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SIoux CITY, Iowa — National Guardsmen scoured a cornfield today for survivors or victims of a United DC-10 jet that crashed during an emergency landing, killing at least 74 people.

At least 176 of the 293 people aboard survived. Many survivors walked away from the wreckage after the plane hit the Sioux Gateway Airport runway Wednesday and cartwheeled in a ball of fire into the cornfield.

Forty-three people were missing, City Manager Hank Sinda said today.

A flight attendant who survived the crash by crawling out of an opening in the burning wreckage was quoted by her parents as saying a higher being "opened up that hole" to allow her to escape.

CNN reported that emergency officials believed most of the 43 missing were in the fuselage and were fairly confident that anyone still in the wreckage was dead. The network said most survivors had been sitting in the central part of the plane over the wing area.

The Guardsmen were combing an area larger than three football fields where wreckage was strewn, "laying out a grid and conducting a thorough and systematic search," said Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad, who held a news conference at the airport after touring the crash site.

"They are photographing every inch of the area," said the governor, wearing a pink ribbon of mourning as an armband.

The 15-year-old jumbo jet experienced "complete hydraulic failure" before the crash, Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Fred Farrar said. Parts of the plane were found 50 miles away.

Flight attendant Virginia Jane Murray, 35, phoned her parents in Chester, S.C., to say she was all right.

"She said she was tumbling," said her father, Don Murray. "The walls were coming in. She said a hole opened up and the sunlight came in and she climbed out the hole. She said she knew the Lord opened up that hole."

Murray said he did not know the extent of his daughter's injuries except that she was not burned.

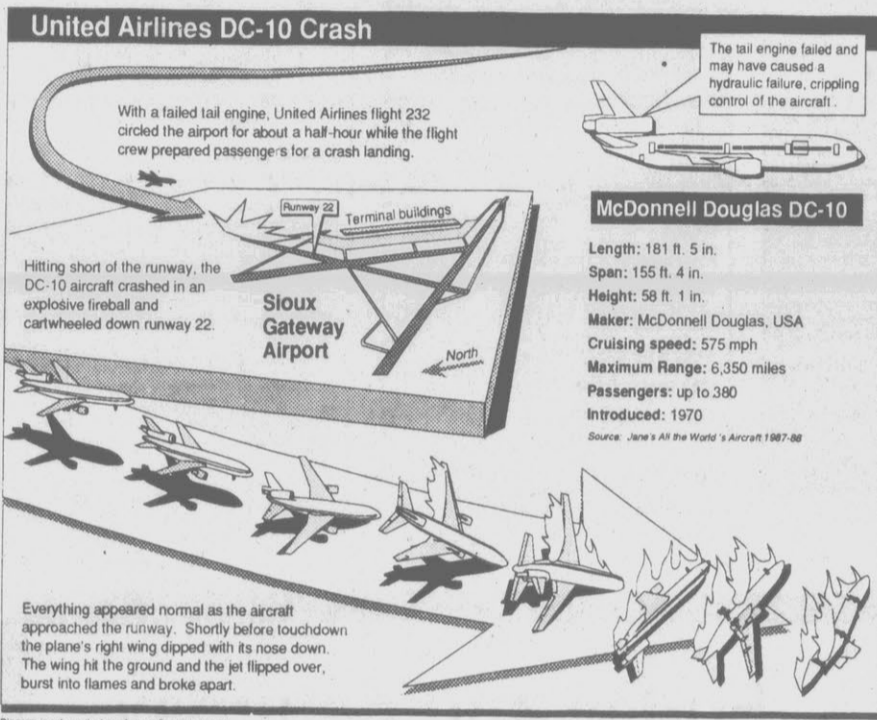

"I thought I was going to die," said 8-year-old Ben Radtke of Prairie View, Ill., who was carried out of the fractured fuselage by a passenger. The boy, shaking but unhurt, clutched a United Airlines

RALEIGH, N.C. — A North Carolina flight attendant says the Lord provided her with an escape from the burning wreckage of an United Airlines DC-10 that crashed in Sioux City, Iowa.

Virginia Jane Murray, of Pineville, called her parents, Don and Jane Murray of Chester, S.C. Wednesday evening to tell them she was alive. A Durham family of four also survived the crash.

"She said she was tumbling," Murray said. "The walls were coming in. She said a hole opened up and the sunlight came in and she climbed out the hole. She said she knew the Lord opened up that hole."

Murray said he doesn't know the extent of his daughter's injuries, but he knows she wasn't burned. He said he and his wife will go to Sioux City today morning to visit their daughter, also known as Jan, at St. Luke's Hospital.

"She says she's OK, and I don't know what that means, but it is small compared to some of the others. My heart goes out to the other parents whose kids are gone," he told the Charlotte Observer.

Ms. Murray, 35, was third runner-up in the Miss USA pageant in 1976 in Niagara Falls, and was Miss South Carolina USA that same year.

Not Enough

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan said today the central bank has been pushing down interest rates in an effort to keep the country out of a recession and acknowledged the Fed's best efforts might not be enough.

After a year of raising interest rates to dampen inflationary pressures, Greenspan said, the Fed switched course in June and began lowering rates because of widespread signs of a weakening economy.

Greenspan, making his midyear report to Congress, indicated that the Fed stood ready to lower rates further, but he said its best efforts might not be enough to stave off an economic downturn.

"Some day, some event will end the extraordinary string of economic advances that has prevailed since late 1982," Greenspan said in testimony before the House banking subcommittee.

Pitt Students Fall Short Of State Rate

By Carol Tyer
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt County applicants for admission to any of the 16 campuses of the University of North Carolina system did better than students in the state's northeast region, but not as well as applicants statewide, in meeting new admission standards that will apply in fall 1990.

The Pitt County average was 84.4 percent, while the Northeast Education District average was 81.5 percent. The statewide average was 83.9 percent.

The information on how students fared on core curriculum subjects was released recently in reports sent to each high school principal in the state by the UNC General Administration Office. The UNC report counted admission seekers having taken and passed or failed to have taken and passed courses that will be required when the higher entrance standards take effect in 1990.

This is a report of how our students would have done, had next year's core curriculum requirements been in effect this year," D.H. Conley guidance counselor Duffy Lincoln said. "I think these reports are a big help to both principals and guidance counselors. I appreciate what I've learned from ours."

Individual schools' figures included 82.9 percent for Ayden-Grifton, with 35 applicants for admission; 88 percent for North Pitt, with 25 applicants; 87.1 percent for J.H. Rose, with 186 applicants; 73.3 percent for Farmville Central, with 45 applicants, and 90.6 percent for Conley with 96 applicants.

Core curriculum requirements beginning next year will be four units of English, three maths, three sciences, and two social studies courses, one of which is U.S. history.

Lincoln said the heightened core curriculum requirements are not a new concern for high school students nor for their counselors.

"We have been working since at least as early as 1984 to have our students take seriously the core courses they must take in order to qualify for college entrance," he

School Board OK's Personnel Changes

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

After meeting in executive session twice within the last 10 days, the Pitt County Board of Education has unanimously approved 13 personnel changes recommended by Superintendent Eddie West.

Board members, after meeting in executive session for nearly two and a half hours Tuesday at a special meeting, approved the moves without dissent. The board had declined to take action at its July 10 meeting due to what Chairman George Williams called a desire to examine concerns.

West had recommended promoting three employees to principalships, transferring one principal to another principalship, promoting or transferring six employees to assistant principal jobs and filling three administrative posts.

The employees have already begun reporting to their new jobs, but the moves were not finalized until the board's vote Wednesday. The board agreed to conduct the special meeting in order to dispose of the pending personnel recommendations before its regularly scheduled meeting next month, which will come nine days before teachers are to report for work.

West, who remained with the board in the executive session the entire time, said the moves will help the system reach its goals of strengthening the leadership of the system and enhancing individual schools.

"There's no question about it," he said. "I think what the board did was have the type of decision-making process that is important to the continued progress of the (system)."

At its July 10 meeting, the board also discussed West's job status. He is in the final year of a four-year contract which pays him $95,000 a year. The board took no action on West's contract last week, but members said the group would like-

Bush: Back To The Moon

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush, marking the 20th anniversary of man's first step on the moon, today called for establishing an American base there in the 21st Century to be followed by a manned mission to Mars.

Bush offered no firm timetable or price tag for a daring program he said would take the nation "back to the moon, back to the future, and this time back to stay."

"Then a journey into tomorrow," he proposed, "A journey to another planet, a manned mission to Mars," at least 35 million miles away.

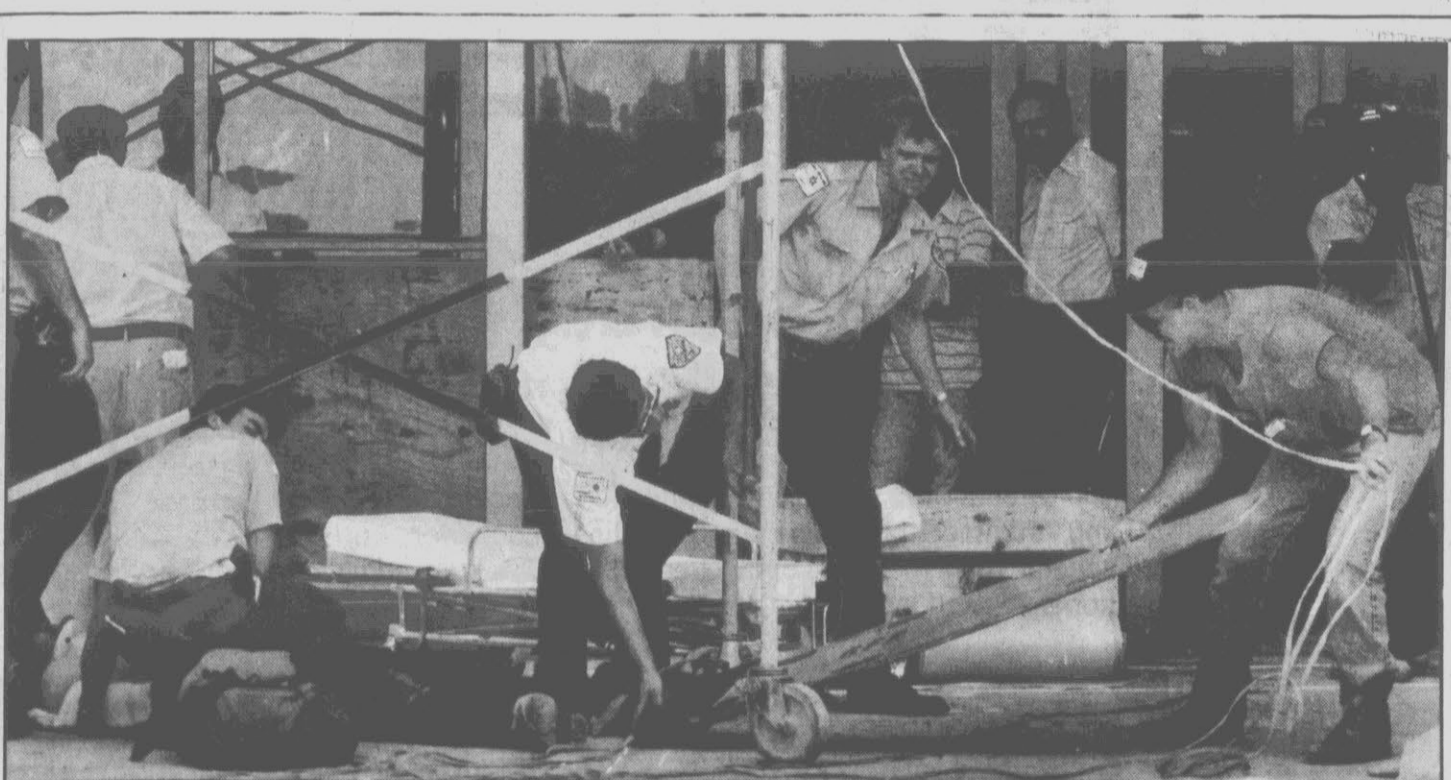

In a ceremony from the steps of the National Air and Space Museum, the president reasserted the goal of establishing Space Station Freedom in the 1990s, the necessary first step to the moon and Mars.

The technological hurdles of getting to Mars could be matched by political ones, however. At a time of huge budget deficits, Congress already is balking at the start-up costs for the $30-billion space station, and it is the essential first step to the moon and Mars.

Bush was flanked on the outdoor museum stage by the three men who flew aboard Apollo 11 two decades ago. Each of them urged the nation forward in space.

"We have rested on our Apollo laurels long enough."

Lowe's Store Opens

By Greg Laudick
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Grand opening festivities are being held today through Sunday at Lowe's new 60,000-square-foot store, located at 1055 S.W. Greenville Blvd.

Lowe's Companies Inc. moved to the new store, which is located on a 12-acre site, on June 16. The company previously operated a store on Memorial Drive.

"We're having a big celebration here to mark our grand opening," said George Eggers, assistant manager at Lowe's.

Eggers said Lowe's has experienced a considerable increase in business since opening the new facility.

"This new location features a self-service concept," Eggers said. "At the old store, you needed to drive around the building to pick up your purchased merchandise. At this new store, you select and purchase the item and then take it right out the front door."

Eggers said customers have been particularly impressed with the way aisles are conveniently marked and the substantial increase in inventory.

"We have increased the inventory here about three times over that of the old location," he said.

Eggers said that in addition to 60,000 square feet of floor space, the store also features a 10,000-square-foot lawn and garden center.

Eggers said the Greenville store employs approximately 80 people.

Lowe's refers to itself as America's largest specialty retailer of building materials and related products for the do-it-yourself home improvement and home construction markets.

The company currently operates over 300 stores throughout 21 states, primarily in the south Atlantic and south central regions of the United States. The Greenville Lowe's is one of about 69 company stores operating in North Carolina.

Planning Panel Goes To Work

By J. Ward Best
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Young couples save, and investors play the stock market. Cities plan.

In order to secure its future, Greenville has directed a subcommittee of the Planning and Zoning Commission to draft a comprehensive plan for development over the next 20 years.

The planning panel met for the first time Wednesday to discuss the goals and processes needed to outline a comprehensive plan for the city's growth.

According to Jack Simoneau, senior planner with the city's department of development, the plan will help the City Council decide "all the physical things that face the city every month."

The plan will establish goals for zoning, roads and housing, among other things, Simoneau said.

The city, as well as businesses and the general public, could use the comprehensive plan when completed as a planning tool.

Simoneau said. It will also give the city greater legal standing in its planning matters.

The document would address any contested rezoning changes or road relocations made by the city as part of the growth of Greenville, Simoneau said.

The comprehensive plan includes goals for transportation, land usage, environmental inventories, housing, utilities, recreation and economic studies. The plan may include information on other areas of the city, such as urban design, historic preservation and public safety, according to citizen input.

In formulating the plan, the committee will take public comment at meetings, through hearings and possibly through a survey.

Simoneau said the plan bears some similarities to the city's long-range plans and work by Focus 2007. But he said the study work includes only Greenville, and it will be a more general recommendation of goals than a long-range plan.

"The document is nothing more than a big suggestion," Simoneau said. "But it has legal standing."

The Comprehensive Plan Committee includes two members of the P&Z board and 13 Greenville residents.

Once the committee completes the plan, the City Council has final approval of the document.

"Once the plan is adopted," Simoneau said, "the committee will pass the baton over to the P&Z Commission." The outline of the plan calls for yearly reviews by P&Z and updates to the plan every five years.

The committee will hold its second meeting on Aug. 9.

Members of the Comprehensive Plan Committee include: P&Z members Catherine Bullock and Ruth Leggett; committee chairman Doug Gomes, and vice chairman Lewis Clark. Other members are Mary Alsentzer, Lee Ball, John Bizzell, Joel Butler, Richard Cannon, Eugene Faison, Dick Farris, Leroy James, Richard King, Bryant Kittrell and Ric Miller.

Pitt Students Short Of State Average

said. "I feel that the message has been conveyed, that our students are doing well," he said.

Sue Creech of the guidance department at Rose High School, echoed Lincoln's sentiments. She said her department had expected the 1990 guidelines to go into effect as early as 1988 and had begun providing students the information they needed about course choice long before it has proved to be necessary. (There was a postponement at the state level).

"I think Rose's 87.1 average is excellent," Ms. Creech said. "And I think we'll keep it up or improve it."

Farmville guidance counselor Bob Fuller refused to comment on the value of the report or on Farmville's having the lowest percentage in the county. "I don't think it's appropriate for a counselor to be the one commenting," he said. "I think it should come from the principal, and our principal is on vacation."

The reports were detailed in that the number of students from each school applying to each of the campuses of the university system were counted, as were acceptances and enrollments. There were many duplications because most students apply to more than one school and many last year applied to more than one state-supported school in North Carolina.

In the percentage tallies, however, duplications were eliminated, so the figures took into account performance of each student individually. Percentages were given, not only for having met all requirements for 1990, but also for having met 1988 requirements. Each deficiency or combination of deficiencies was detailed.

As an example, North Pitt High School had 88 percent of its students meet 1990 requirements. The other 12 percent met 1988 requirements. Deficiencies were noted as follows: Algebra II deficiency only, zero; algebra II and geometry or other higher-level math deficiency only, zero; one science deficiency only, 8 percent; one science and algebra II deficiency, four percent; one science and geometry or other higher-level math deficiency, zero; one science, algebra II and geometry or other higher-level math deficiency, zero. North Pitt's total number of different applicants was 25, while its overall number of applications was 31.

Percentages of met requirements by race and by sex also were noted in the report. Individual school percentages included: North Pitt — 81.3 black, 100 white, zero of a race other than black or white, 87.5 male and 88.2 female; Rose High — 63.4 black, 93.6 white, 100 other, 88.4 male and 86 female; Farmville Central — 33 black, 93.3 white, zero other, 85 male and 64 female; D.H. Conley — 75 black, 95.7 white, 100 other, 84.6 male and 94.7 female, and Ayden-Grifton — 58.3 black, 95.5 white, 100 other, 77.8 male and 88.2 female.

Northeast region percentages of met requirements as to race and sex were 65.9 black, 90 white, 100 other, 79.2 male and 83.2 female. State percentages were 64.8 black, 91.8 white and 88.7 other, 85.8 male and 86 female.

Lincoln said that requirement of core curriculum courses has, in his opinion, fostered students' deciding early whether they will seriously pursue getting into college. He said he believes it also will greatly influence how well the students who do attend four-year colleges perform once they're there.

"In the past," he said, "a student could take all the math, science, or social studies offered and still get into college just fine. But whether they could stay or whether it would be a struggle wasn't dealt with on the high school level. Now, with these requirements, those who pass the required core curriculum high school course have much more assurance of doing well in college, because they have the background they need."

He said he thinks the requirements will also remove some false hope, that students who really should be steering themselves toward technical schools and community colleges, instead of four-year schools, will do so earlier.

Edwards Elected Chairman Of Pitt Educational Foundation

By Amy Gavigan
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Pitt County Educational Foundation assembled for its summer meeting Wednesday and elected new officers for the 1990-1991 school year.

The officers include: T.L. Edwards, chairman; Patsy Duke, vice chairman; Dan Thomas, treasurer, and Betty S. Speir, secretary. Gail Joyner of Farmville was nominated as a new director and a decision on the nomination will be made by the Pitt Board of Education.

Morris Brody presented the report of the foundation's nominations committee.

Board member Larry Seigler suggested a planning retreat that would allow members to gather and discuss events for the upcoming year.

The planning retreat, approved by the members and scheduled for early fall, is designed as a workshop to give members an opportunity to plan objectives for the year and to put key activities in place. The members plan to think through operational and financial processes in an afternoon or dinner meeting.

Additional funding was allocated by the foundation to Project HUG (Help Us Grow), which is designed to target high-risk school children.

Sandra Flowers of Farmville and a teacher at H.B. Sugg Elementary School, instituted the project in the 1988-89 school year. Four teachers at H.B. Sugg spent two afternoons a week with 12 5-year-old students, who had been projected to fail, teaching them their colors, reading and how to use a computer.

According to Betty Speir, executive director of the foundation, the children were "bright and enjoyable" by the end of the year.

A $1,200 grant by Weyerhaeuser Co. will fund the implementation of the "Corner Store" project for teaching mentally handicapped children math and consumerism in six area schools.

The project uses simulated products, cash registers and play money to teach the handicapped students math skills.

"By the end of the year, they know how to add, subtract and divide," said Ms. Speir. "They even know which are the best products."

Old business on the agenda included discussion of the implementation of the "School of the Future" funded by the Danforth Foundation of St. Louis. The first phase of the project will begin Aug. 1, Aug. 2 and Aug. 3.

Scheduling of the foundation's next meeting has been postponed until plans for the retreat are complete.

School Board Accepts Personnel Changes

ly discuss the topic at future meetings.

However, the board only discussed the pending personnel matters on Wednesday, school spokesman Barry Gaskins said.

There was public opposition to some of the moves, including the transfer of Wellcome Middle School Principal Ed Tadlock to the same post at Greenville Middle School and the transfer of Agnes Fullilove Principal Johann Bleicher to the post of substance abuse coordinator.

Edwin W. Congleton, president of the North River United Association, handed out letters protesting Tadlock's transfer to board members as they entered the meeting. His group of about 300 residents was formed a year ago to improve the quality of life for residents in the northern portion of the county.

Congleton said Tadlock is needed to continue developing programs and act as a stabilizing force for Wellcome Middle School. His move is also an example of how communities in northern Pitt County are neglected, he said.

"In the past number of years, be it Pactolus, Staton House, Belvoir, Bethel or Stokes, they've all been neglected. Anything the south side of the county wants, it gets," he said.

Harold Williams, former J.H. Rose assistant principal, has assumed the principal's post at Wellcome Middle.

At the board's July 10 meeting, at least two people spoke out against moving Bleicher, who has worked as principal at Agnes Fullilove for 12 years.

Agnes Fullilove is an alternative school for at-risk students, and Bleicher has developed nationally-recognized programs.

Stephen D. Blades, a member of the board of directors of Citizens for Excellence and Equity in Education in Pitt County, and others have expressed concern that the sudden move of Bleicher could disrupt the delicate programs in the school.

Patricia Brewer, formerly the substance abuse coordinator, has assumed the top job at Agnes Fullilove.

Williams and Ms. Brewer are both black, and one of the goals West cited in explaining his recommendations was the implementation of the board's affirmative action plan.

Also, the board approved transferring John Carstarphen from principal at Greenville Middle to half-time assistant principal and half-time textbook coordinator at Elmhurst; promoting Ella T. Harris from administrative intern at Greenville Middle to assistant principal at J.H. Rose; transferring Claude Kennedy from assistant principal at D.H. Conley to the same post at Ayden-Grifton; transferring Bernie Haselrig to the community schools program, and transferring Don McLane to the maintenance department.

The group met behind closed doors the entire time Wednesday except for a brief open meeting after the executive session in which it unanimously voted to approve the personnel moves.

Board member Mary Williams immediately made a motion to adjourn, and members left the room quickly. George Williams referred questions to West.

There was no public comment for or against the recommendations, but a handful of teachers and area residents waited outside the board's meeting room during the session. At times board members raised their voices enough to be heard in the hallway.

In addition to approving changes involving Tadlock, Williams, Bleicher and Brewer, the board approved promoting Robin Dailey from assistant principal at E.B. Aycock to principal at Sadie Sautler; promoting Isabelle Wicker from administrative intern at Sadie Sautler to assistant principal at the same school; transferring Barbara Rouse from assistant principal at Ayden Middle to the same post at E.B. Aycock; promoting Susan Claybrook from teacher at D.H. Conley to assistant principal at Ayden Middle.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

One Giant Step

Space Exploration Has Found A Niche

It was a magical time, 20 years ago today. An American astronaut placed the first human footprint on the moon. That print is indelible in the minds of those who watched an American dream come true. Even for those who didn't witness the history, today, July 20, 1989, was a day to stand in awe of a conquered frontier.

Twenty years ago Sunday — July 16, 1969 — an enormous Saturn 5 rocket rose with a roar from its launching pad into a bright blue sky and began a 242,000-mile journey to the moon.

Four days later — July 20, 1969 — a phlegmatic former test pilot named Neil A. Armstrong would call home: "Houston, Tranquillity Base here. The Eagle has landed." America watched by television, spellbound.

The lunar landing craft, Eagle, had settled down in the moon's barren, dusty Sea of Tranquillity, so named by early astronomers who imagined there was water on the moon.

After he climbed down a small ladder on the side of Eagle and placed his foot on the moon's surface, Armstrong's famous words vibrated back space: "That's one small step for a man. One giant leap for mankind."

The United States had won the race to the moon, beating their competitors, the Russians.

This accomplishment healed a wound in the American psyche, inflicted a dozen years earlier when a supposedly second-rate technocracy — the USSR — shocked the United States and much of the Western world with the launching of the first artificial Earth satellite, Sputnik 1, on Oct. 4, 1957. Sputnik was a challenge many U.S. leaders felt they could not ignore.

The ensuing struggle for space spurred the scientific research and government spending that produced the successful moon landing.

Now, however, the event that secured America's first place in the race for the moon wouldn't have the same impact on the two superpowers' relations. America's leaders are no longer looking frantically for a way to "catch up with the Russians." Indeed, the two nations have been cooperating in space to a degree that would have seemed very improbable when President John Kennedy charted the course to the moon in 1961.

Today, a dramatic space adventure is no longer a matter of national honor and prestige. It is more a matter of practicality and shared global interests. Launching communications satellites, repairing technology, experimental travel. Budget deficits, domestic needs and warmer international relations have put space exploration in perspective.

That in no way diminishes the glory of that first footprint on the moon. Nor does it demean the fact the foot was an American one.

But the past 20 years have shown beyond doubt that space flight is a magnificent capability with great promise that must, nonetheless, find its niche in "the overall scheme of national affairs."

We Were Wrong

An editorial in Wednesday's Daily Reflector incorrectly stated the record of East Carolina University football coach John B. Christianbury for 1940-41.

The record is 12 wins and 3 losses for an .800 percent average.

Public Forum

To the editor:

This past Sunday a friend of mine, Charles S. Ward, and I were talking when the conversation turned to the current issues before the school board in Pitt County. It is obvious that the school board has had to make some difficult decisions concerning personnel. One topic of the discussion regarded the job of Superintendent Eddie West and the administrative changes he recommended to the board at the June 10 meeting.

My friend and I are concerned that the Board of Education seems to be dwelling on the salary of Superintendent West, and not on his productivity as superintendent of Pitt County Schools.

He is the chief executive officer of the second largest industry in Pitt County. His productivity over the past seven years has been exceptional. He has not misused funds nor created unresolved personnel problems. Neither the board of education nor the county commissioners have the nearly $200,000 it would cost to buy West's contract and replace him for the next school year.

The 1989-90 school year has already begun. To hire a superintendent to begin that school year and to make sound administrative decisions cannot be done. Why not allow West to complete this contract year, but give him a short term (2 years) contract extending through the 1992 school year? That would provide time to identify what superintendent would best serve the county and to do a national search.

As far as the personnel moves requested by West and his staff, what's the problem? The board has had ample opportunity to evaluate the recommendations that were made and approve them.

Children are our most precious commodity in Pitt County, and we do need to make judicious administrative decisions concerning their education. I encourage the board of education to get on with the business for which they were elected.

To the editor:

I would like to express my agreement with Dale Thatcher whose letter indicated that he did not care for the music played at the July 4th fireworks display.

When I heard that "synchronized" music would be played at the display I thought it would be Sousa marches, patriotic songs, and the like. Instead, we got a high-volume dose of commercial rock'n'roll which seemed more like a publicity stunt for a radio station than a stirring celebration.

Why was rock music chosen? Is it assumed that the presence of rock music makes any given occasion better? The North Carolina Symphony played at the celebration in Cary, why couldn't we have at least had a brass band or something more appropriate?

Many older people did not seem very pleased. Perhaps they won't return next year — perhaps the families with small children will be discouraged from coming. I realize that at a public celebration one may not attempt to prevent certain segments of the population from coming, but the playing of amplified rock music encourages an atmosphere of a rowdy beer party.

My family and I have been attending 4th of July celebrations in Greenville for almost 15 years. In the past, booming reports of the firecrackers echoed over the commons and the river in a silence broken only by the chirping of the katydids and crickets and the thrilled "oohs" and "aahs" of the spectators. I am not a foaming-at-the-mouth patriot, but I believe this awesome spectacle was plenty appropriate for a celebration of our nation's birth, which calls for a modicum of pomp and solemnity.

I thank the generous sponsors of the events of July 4th, and I hope they will consider keeping next year's celebration conducive to the presence of small children, older people and family and civic interests.

To the editor:

I am writing as a concerned Pitt County resident that drives down Hwy. 33 East twice a day, sometimes more.

Something needs to be done at the Simpson Fork turnoff to caution drivers more that they are approaching a dangerous intersection and dangerous curve.

Also, when there has been a large rainfall that intersection holds a lot of water, and it never fails that an accident occurs there.

To make matters worse, recently a new road has been cut to a new subdivision right at this fork; that even makes more water rush on the highway.

Coming from Greenville there is only one intersection sign with a warning, 45 mph speed limit. That's not enough, especially for the driver unfamiliar with this highway. I know I am approaching a bad curve and dangerous intersection because I drive it daily. For the unconditioned driver there is just not enough warning.

Please, Pitt County residents that drive to and from work everyday or have children on school buses like I do, let's stand together and get something done to improve this very dangerous section of our highway.

I am tired of coming upon a wreck at least once a month at this same place on Hwy. 33. I am tired of the sick feeling I have everytime I approach this intersection on Highway 33. Please let's make this intersection safer to drive through.

On February 20th 1989 in Kosovo, Yugoslavia, 11 men and women were sentenced to five years in prison. Their crime? Advocating for the maintenance of political rights guaranteed to persons of Albanian decent in Kosovo Province.

Amnesty international, a worldwide human rights organization works for the protection and liberty of persons imprisoned for the exercise of their political and civil rights, persons who have not used or advocated violence. Amnesty adopted as "Prisoners of Conscience" these eleven individuals; their cases were assigned to local groups in various countries to work for their release.

The Greenville Chapter of AI meets monthly to write letters and create support for the release of prisoners of conscience; we have adopted one of these Yugoslavian cases in conjunction with a group in Tokyo.

We encourage all persons interested in this work to join us at our next meeting on Wednesday at 8 p.m. at St. St. Paul's Episcopal Church. You will never forget the first prisoner you help set free.

Sidney Hook: A Man In Step With His Century

WASHINGTON — Sidney Hook, the political philosopher whose exemplary life ended last week in its 87th year, was a combative man who died knowing that his side had won. It is wonderful to lead a life such that your autobiography is a survey of the intellectual vitality of your time.

Such is Hook's "Out of Step: An Unquiet Life in the Twentieth Century." Hook liked to say that passions make for keen observations but defective conclusions. His is the story of a reasonable man's passions and a passionate man's reasonableness.

Born in Brooklyn and educated at City College when New York was intellectually vibrant, he was young when the Russian Revolution was, and like many intellectuals of his generation he read in that Revolution an ethical imperative. However, he was too good a philosopher not to soon reject Marxism, and too honest a man not to be energized against the mendacity required of those who support a false philosophy for political purposes. From the mid-1930s on, his life had the golden thread of anti-totalitarianism.

In the 1930s he was a leader, with John Dewey, in exposing Stalin's show trials that preceded the assassination of Leon Trot-sky. One of Hook's students, who occasionally visited Trotsky in Mexico, was one day in New York given a ticket to Paris by another leftist who claimed to be unable to use the ticket. In Paris, there was a "chance" meeting with a dashing "Belgian" who charmed her. Actually, he was a Spaniard, Romon Mercador, who used Hook's student to insinuate himself into Trotsky's household, then murdered him.

In the 1940s, with Raymond Aron and others, Hook combated the communist and fellow-travelers' hegemony in cultural institutions. In the 1950s, he was fiercely anti-communist and anti-McCarthyite.

Once in the 1960s — like the 1930s, a low, dishonest decade — Hook was in an audience for a lecture by Herbert Marcuse, a bad philosopher and darling of the New Left. It was Marcuse's usual harangue against the "repressive tolerance" of American culture and the "embourgeoisement" of American workers.

Hook asked: Did not the Voting Rights Act and other improvements in the civic standing of blacks indicate America's capacity for improvement? Marcuse answered that such improvements were useless because blacks were choosing the tawdry middle-class values of American civilization. Hook asked: "Which would you prefer, a situation in which the blacks had no freedom to vote or one which they had the freedom to vote but chose wrongly?" Marcuse replied: "Since I have gone so far out on the limb, I may as well go all the way. I would prefer that they did not have the freedom to vote if they are going to make the wrong use of their freedom."

Using logic to saw off such limbs was Hook's life work. In the 1970s, he was a critic of the detente that preceded the surge of Soviet expansionism. In the 1980s, he was a critic of reverse discrimination. Hook, like Hubert Humphrey, was a liberal whom liberalism left by turning left.

Marx's grave in London's Highgate Cemetery bears Marx's words: "The philosophers have only interpreted the world, in various ways; the point, however, is to change it." Marx, having misinterpreted reality, changed the world for the worse. Hook helped better it by understanding that the great argument is not between capitalism and socialism (an avalanche of evidence settled that) or between religion and secularism (Hook was a secularist), but between friends and foes of freedom.

"The older I become," he wrote at 85, "the more impressed I am with the role of luck or chance in life." The biggest intrusion of chance is the earliest. It decides when and where one is born. America and Hook were mutually lucky 86 years ago in Brooklyn. At the end, the author of "Out of Step" found himself in step with his century — or it with him. That satisfaction, not accorded many, was hard-earned by Sidney Hook.

Analysis

RALEIGH — Democrats in North Carolina have a fantasy. They dream of contesting state races in years when the GOP ticket is not headed by a popular presidential candidate. If elections were scheduled this way, the Democrats fantasize, then their party would reclaim the Governor's Mansion and enjoy a huge majority in the legislature.

With that fantasy in mind, Democrats have proposed that the election of governor, lieutenant governor of all other Council of State positions be held in even non-presidential election years. The history of this state shows that Republicans do best in presidential years and that voter turnout is best in presidential years. Democrats do better in non-presidential years, and turnout is less in those elections.

Putting aside the partisan political aspects of that proposal, let's first consider the pros and cons for the state at large, not just the Democratic Party.

Rep. Roy Cooper, D-Nash, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, stated the biggest positive for the proposal. In presidential election years, the race for president unquestionably receives the most attention. State races are often overshadowed. If state elections are moved out of presidential years, the public would more closely focus on state races and that would have to help the democratic process.

Rep. Larry Justus, R-Henderson, cited the obvious disadvantage to moving the election. In presidential elections, the greatest number of voters go to the polls. Therefore, the voting for governor and Council of State positions is heavier and more people take part in the decision. If switched to off presidential years, the gubernatorial election would see less turnout and it is a given of the democratic process that a bigger turnout is desirable.

North Carolina is one of only nine states that conducts gubernatorial elections on the same day as presidential elections. Supporters of the proposal are quick to point to the experiences of other states to justify their cause.

Rep. Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe, disagreed with Justus saying that other states have seen their voter turnout increase in non-presidential years once the governor was up for a vote that day. "When you set a major election in an off-year, it's no longer an off-year. I think we'll see turnout rise tremendously." If the switch improved voter turnout in these non-presidential years, that would be an improvement.

Now let's get back to what is good for the Democratic Party. If Nesbitt is right, and turnout increases, then it may just be that more Republicans will be coming to the polls. Right now, a lot of these Republicans stay home in the off-years and that apathy helps elect Democrats. But if more Republicans come to the polls to vote for a Republican governor, they may also vote for Republican legislative candidates.

The Democrats must also wonder if this voter preference for Republican presidential candidates is an eternal matter. This change, if made, would not affect a presidential election until 1996. By that time, the Democrats might have a presidential candidate who could help their state candidates, but if the election is moved they won't be able to help.

The Democrats make a good argument on public policy grounds for changing the election. As for helping their party, it's not likely to be their dream idea come true.

Who To Count?

Walter Mears

WASHINGTON — Simply put, the question was who should be counted as a person and who, if anybody, should not. But there's nothing simple about it.

The Senate voted one answer and, in effect, invited the Supreme Court to decide whether it was right or wrong.

That happened because in the arithmetic of congressional reapportionment, every question becomes complex, contentious and politically charged.

The point at issue in Senate debate on a new immigration bill was whether illegal aliens should be counted in the process that will reallocate House seats among states after the 1990 census. There could be enough of them to shift seats away from at least five states to Sun Belt states with large numbers of illegal residents.

Nobody is certain because counting illegal aliens is a hard thing to do, given the fact that they don't want to be spotted by the government. Then again, the Census Bureau maintains that not including them, and still coming up with an accurate 1990 population count, would be even more difficult. "A census of only legal residents cannot be done as accurately as a census of all residents," according to Census Bureau testimony to Congress.

After the 1980 census, the government estimated that there were 2.57 million people in the United States illegally. There were other guesses, some of them far higher. The government made no attempt to count them out in the redistricting process; indeed, the two previous administrations decided that the Constitution required that the census cover illegal aliens along with citizens.

There is not likely to be any change in that prior to the 1990 census next spring. The Senate has passed an immigration bill including an amendment that would cut illegal aliens from the redistricting numbers, but it is not likely to clear Congress before the next year's national head count.

Sen. Richard Shelby, D-Ala., proposed, and won, the immigration amendment that is supposed to exclude illegal aliens from the redistricting process. It would give Secretary of Commerce Robert Mosbacher the assignment of adjusting the census figures so that illegal aliens don't count for purposes of redistributing House seats. It does not come with instructions, so the department would have to figure out how.

Shelby's amendment says only that the secretary is to "make such adjustments in total population figures as may be necessary, using such methods and procedures as the secretary determines feasible and appropriate" to keep illegal aliens from being counted in congressional reapportionment.

That task would be perilous politically, since it would involve taking House seats away from some states and giving them to others, all on the basis of estimates. With 435 seats in the House, every representative gained by a state is a representative lost by another.

Walter R. Mears, vice president and columnist for The Associated Press, has reported on Washington and national politics for more than 25 years.

Bakker Invokes 5th Amendment Rights

CHARLOTTE — PTL founder Jim Bakker refused to testify in the tax-evasion trial of two former aides, but will break his silence in his own trial, a Bakker attorney said.

Bakker invoked the Fifth Amendment in his refusals to answer questions Wednesday in the trial of David and James Taggart. His 10-minute appearance in the federal courtroom was without the presence of the jury.

"When his trial comes about, there will be no taking of the Fifth Amendment and no refusal to answer any questions that the government cares to ask and to go into the entire matter in depth," said attorney George T. Davis.

Senators Get Heat On Roads

RALEIGH — Critics of a Senate plan to finance an $8.6 billion highway package are trying to pin the blame for potholes and traffic jams on two top Senate Democrats.

Campaign buttons began circulating in the Legislature Wednesday with the home telephone numbers of Senate president pro tem Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, and Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

"Pot Holes? Call Henson Barnes," reads one button, which then lists Barnes' home telephone number in Goldsboro.

"Traffic Jammed? Call Marshall Rauch," reads the other, which has Rauch's home number in Gastonia.

Barnes, who was wearing his button during the Senate session Wednesday night, said the pin did not bother him, "but to put my home phone number on there is tacky."

Power Outage Causes Waste Spill At Weyerhaeuser Unit In Plymouth

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PLYMOUTH, N.C. — Recent heavy rains may have helped prevent a large fish kill after a power outage at a paper mill caused four million gallons of waste to spill into a creek, officials say.

A power outage at the Weyerhaeuser Company here sent four million gallons of untreated industrial waste spewing into Welch Creek on Wednesday, state environmental officials said.

Officials who investigated the spill said they found no dead fish.

"I think we were lucky today," said Debbie Crane of the N.C. Division of Environmental Management. "Apparently all that high water mitigated the discharge."

The spill was caused by a 6:30 a.m. electrical failure in the mill that shorted out a back-up power system, said John Pritchard, a Weyerhaeuser official.

Pritchard said when the back-up system shorted out, the pumps that send the waste to a treatment plant stopped working. After 15 minutes, waste in the pumping station overflowed and spilled into Welch Creek.

The spill lasted about three hours, company officials said. About 8 a.m. the company notified state environmental officials, who spent the day investigating the accident, said Keith R. Hundley, government affairs manager for Weyerhaeuser.

Pritchard said the waste contained organic material that could have depleted the oxygen in the mile-long creek if the water had been low. The waste also contained clays and fibers normally removed in the treatment process.

The size of the spill had led environmental officials to predict a large fish kill Wednesday morning. But apparently, the rain-swelled creek diluted the spill enough to spare the fish from suffocation.

Ms. Crane said measurements showed the waste sharply lowered dissolved oxygen in the creek from 4.8 parts per million above the discharge point to 3.8 parts below. "That's when you might see effects" on fish, she said. A normal dissolved oxygen level is 5.0 parts per million.

"Our people feel that the worst is over with," Ms. Crane said. "It has begun to dissipate."

A marine ecologist who has studied paper mills, however, said the spill could cause long-term problems.

"There is just an incredible soup of toxic, organic chemicals in raw pulp mill wastes," said Dr. Douglas N. Rader, a scientist with the N.C. Environmental Defense Fund, a private conservation group. "It probably will be unsafe to harvest and consume fish from Welch Creek and the adjacent stretches of the Roanoke River for some time to come."

Rader said there definitely would be dioxin, which he called "one of the most toxic substances known," in the material that spilled.

"It's definitely the most serious spill of industrial waste in the coastal zone," he said. "I don't know what I would put in the same class."

The Plymouth plant manufactures paper for liner board and corrugated boxes, "fluff pulp" for such products as disposable diapers and fine quality papers for stationery and envelopes. About 1,200 people work at the plant, which operates around the clock.

The plant has been criticized in the past by environmental groups over discharges into the creek feeding the Roanoke River.

In April, 3,100 gallons of the sodium hypochlorite escaped from the plant into Welch Creek, killing 200 fish.

Arsenic Deaths Bring On New Investigations

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GRAHAM, N.C. — Investigators say they are turning their attention to other deaths as an attorney for Blanche Taylor Moore says the Alamance County woman is innocent of charges she poisoned three men.

Mrs. Moore, 56, made her first court appearance Wednesday in Alamance County Superior Court. She is charged with assault on the poisoning or her current husband, and with murder in connection with the deaths of a former husband and a former boyfriend.

Two sources close to the investigation, who asked that their names not be used, told the Winston-Salem Journal that "a good friend" of Mrs. Moore's — a woman — may have died of arsenic poisoning.

When asked about that information, Sheriff Richard L. Frye of Alamance County confirmed that he is looking into that case and others.

"People are calling us and giving us information," he said. "The Burlington police have some (information) that they are checking out. Anything that we come up with will be entirely up to the chief medical examiner and the attorney as to where we go from here."

Superior Court Judge Spencer Ennis set a probable cause hearing for Aug. 1 and deputy sheriffs took her across the street to the county jail.

After Mrs. Moore's arrest Tuesday night at the Alamance County home of her daughter, Cindy Taylor, bond was set at $100,000 on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill in the arsenic poisoning of her husband, the Rev. Dwight Moore.

No bond has been set on two first-degree murder charges.

Burlington police have charged her in the 1973 arsenic poisoning death of her first husband, James N. Taylor. The Forsyth County Sheriff's Department also issued a warrant charging Mrs. Moore in the death of Raymond Reid, a boyfriend, who died in 1986.

South Leads In Deaths Caused By Family Members

By L.L. Grimmer
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Dying at the hands of a family member sounds like a nightmare, but it's a frightening reality that happens all too often in North Carolina, officials and researchers say.

"If you live in the South, the risk of being killed by your spouse or another family member is greater than in other regions," said Dr. John Shelton Reed, a University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill sociology professor.

"Most of these crimes, someone is defending against what he or she sees as an injury to their honor," Reed said. "Something in the Southern culture fosters this kind of violent response to anger."

"There's an enormous difference between the states in the number of family killings," he said.

In North Carolina, about 13 to 15 people out of each 100,000 are killed by other family members, Reed said. By comparison, in New Hampshire or Vermont, one or two people per 100,000 are killed by family members.

"If you look at who people are likely to get angry at, it's not that surprising," said Reed. "You're not likely to get angry enough at bank tellers to kill them. With family members, things build up."

More than 30 percent of all homicides during 1987 were committed by a spouse or ex-spouse, another family member, or a boyfriend or girlfriend, said Michael Patetta, a statistician with the state Center for Health Statistics. An additional 43.5 percent of the people killed that year — the most recent year for which statistics were available — were killed by someone they knew.

An FBI study reports that the number of victims murdered by family members "leads officials to believe that it is primarily a societal problem over which law enforcement has limited or no control. It may be easier for individuals to protect themselves from strangers than from the people with whom they regularly associate or interact."

Dr. John Butts, the N.C. chief medical examiner, said he agrees with the FBI findings.

"The control over many criminal behaviors is not exerted by police agencies or the law," Butts said. "The laws deal with what are expected ways of behaving, but there are attitudes within society about what you can or cannot do."

Reed attributes the phenomenon to the Southern culture. "You're supposed to defend your honor — violently if you have to. You're not supposed to take any guff from others."

Law enforcement officials and experts say there's another common factor in family killings — alcohol. Officials statewide report that the number of violent deaths is on the rise, and alcohol or drug use is a major contributing factor.

"I don't think it's accidental that people are drunk when they kill someone else," Reed said.

"The one thing that keeps people from killing each other when they get mad is the fact that they're sober," he said. "When they're drunk, they'll do it. The won't stop and think about their actions."

"The most common type of domestic murder is between a husband and wife or a boyfriend and girlfriend," said Lt. Jim Hightower, Greensboro police executive officer of criminal investigations.

Seven of the 15 homicides in Greensboro this year involved family members, he said.

"I think most of these deaths happen in the heat of the moment," Hightower said. "And the use of drugs and alcohol play a big part in causing them."

In Charlotte, Capt. Jay Horner says that five of the city's 32 murders this year have family connections, either a spouse or involving a boyfriend killing their girlfriend. Horner said alcohol use was involved in all the deaths.

IN THE STATE

Budget Delays

RALEIGH (AP) — Working out the differences between House and Senate versions of a spending plan for new and expanded state programs could take a little time, the chairman of the House Appropriations Committee says.

"There are a lot of differences in our two packages," Rep. Dave Diamond, D-Surry, said Wednesday. "It could take a while (to reach a compromise)."

Among the differences in the two proposals are the spending for the Basic Education Plan over the next two years and whether teachers should be moved to a pay plan with 25 steps or 30 steps.

Diamond met with his subcommittee chairmen all day Wednesday to work out the House proposal for new spending. The Senate has already adopted its plan and sent it to the House.

Unwanted Checks

GASTONIA (AP) — Beth Hicks can't get the federal government to stop sending money.

Despite repeated calls and visits to Social Security Administration officials, Mrs. Hicks says the agency continues to send disability checks meant for her mother-in-law who died four years ago.

So far, Mrs. Hicks has put $13,000 in Social Security checks in a bank account.

With July's $358 check, the late Sally Hicks' bank account in Indiana now carries more than $13,000 in Social Security benefits. She died July 31, 1985.

"We have done everything possible to try to stop the checks," Mrs. Hicks said. "They say, 'It's on the computer. It's all taken care of.' And here they're still sending it."

DPI Job Cuts

RALEIGH (AP) — The jobs of 46 people in the Department of Public Instruction will be eliminated in an effort to create an agency that will save money and be more responsive to local schools systems, officials say.

After the latest cuts, the agency's central office in Raleigh and eight regional centers would employ about 900 people, about 110 fewer than when Bobby Etheridge took office as state superintendent of public instruction in January.

Etheridge earlier this year reduced top management posts from 70 to 24, turning some into middle management jobs. Other jobs have been eliminated through attrition and retirement.

In a letter July 6, Etheridge said the agency would make every effort to offer posts elsewhere in the department to the displaced workers.

Toxic Cleanup

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — State officials have approved plans for cleaning up toxic waste at the Cape

Fear Wood Preserving site in Fayetteville and a pesticide dump in Aberdeen, officials said Wednesday.

Removing the waste from both sites is expected to cost more than $29 million, including the state's share of the cost, officials said.

Both sites are on the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's Superfund list, which pays for 90 percent of the cleanup. But state funding for the Fayetteville project is uncertain, and no work can begin until that issue is settled, officials said.

The projects recently were approved by the state Department of Human Resources, Solid Waste Management Division. The EPA approved the projects earlier, officials said.

Two Found Dead

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP) — Officials say they are investigating the death of a Rocky Mount woman and the wounding of a man as a murder-suicide attempt.

Police were called to One Hour Koretizing about 8 a.m. Wednesday where they found two employees lying on the floor.

Mary Wiggs Edwards, 52, was found dead, and Charlie Sidney Beecham, 72, was listed in critical condition at Nash General Hospital with a gunshot wound to the head.

Rocky Mount Police Sgt. Art Delano said it did not appear that a robbery had occurred at the business, which opened at 7:30.

Ms. Edwards had been shot twice, once in the arm and once in the middle part of her body. She was taken to Nash General Hospital where she died, authorities said.

Khashoggi Jailed By U.S. Court

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Saudi financier Adnan Khashoggi landed in a U.S. jail after being extradited from Switzerland and pleading innocent to charges of helping Ferdinand and Imelda Marcos plunder $100 million from the Philippines.

U.S. District Judge Charles Keenan said at Wednesday's hearing that he "wouldn't dream of setting bail" until Khashoggi's worth is verified.

Once among the world's richest men, Khashoggi was said to be the middleman in the Iran-Contra deal.

The former fugitive, handcuffed and wearing a green leisure suit, did not talk with reporters before leaving Kennedy International Airport with FBI agents. But in a statement released by his lawyer, Khashoggi said he intends to contest the charges and is confident that "my innocence will be clearly established."

Khashoggi's attorney, Robert Morvillo, had asked that bail be set no higher than the $5 million bond granted Mrs. Marcos.

In October, a federal grand jury in New York indicted Khashoggi, the Marcoses, five other people and the California Overseas Bank in Los Angeles.

The Marcoses were charged with stealing millions from the Philippines to buy real estate and art in New York. Khashoggi allegedly posed as the owner of some of the assets as a cover.

Khashoggi, 53, had been jailed in Switzerland since his April 18 arrest at a luxury hotel in Bern. But Swiss officials denied extradition for racketeering and conspiracy charges because they're not recognized under Swiss law. He was arraigned Wednesday on mail fraud and obstruction of justice.

He faces up to five years in jail and a $250,000 fine.

Cities Face Limits On Cleaning Up Air

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Nineteen cities likely would be given 10 years to fix their ozone pollution problems, while severely polluted Los Angeles, Houston and New York would have two decades, according to a draft of President Bush's clean air bill.

The multibillion-dollar cleanup plan would set four new categories for cities with ozone problems — severe, serious, moderate or marginal — and require the most polluted communities to use the most stringent remedies.

The Associated Press obtained a draft of the proposal, and then applied the latest available Environmental Protection Agency air monitoring data to determine which cities would fall into the two most serious ozone pollution categories.

There could be some changes when new air quality information becomes available, probably next month, but EPA officials said the number of switches should be small.

Ozone is a highly reactive gas that irritates and inflames sensitive lung tissues. This causes a host of adverse health effects, including chest pains, shortness of breath, coughing, nausea, throat irritation and increased susceptibility to respiratory infections.

The current EPA data would place these areas in the "serious" category for a 10-year cleanup: Chicago-Gary, Ind.; Cincinnati-Hamilton, Ohio; Hartford-New Britain-Middletown, Conn.; Milwaukee-Racine, Wis.; Philadelphia-Wilmington, Del.-Trenton, N.J.; Providence-Pawtucket, R.I.-Fall River, Mass.; Atlanta; Baltimore; Baton Rouge, La.; Beaumont-Port Arthur, Texas; El Paso, Texas; Huntington, W.Va.-Ashland, Ky.; Louisville, Ky.; Portland, Maine; San Diego; Sheboygan, Wis.; Springfield, Mass.; St. Louis; and the District of Columbia.

EPA officials verified both the list of 19 areas that would be given 10 years to correct ozone problems and the three cities in the severe, 20-year cleanup category.

Solon Denies Sex Charge

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Rep. Gus Savage, D-Ill., faces a House ethics committee investigation into allegations he sexually assaulted a Peace Corps volunteer while on an official trip to Africa.

"Obviously we believe people should be innocent until proven guilty," said Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., one of three Democrats who formally requested an investigation by the House ethics committee. The panel must inquire when such a request is made.

But the "behavior is fairly shocking if it proves to be true," Schroeder said. "There's just no excuse ... We cannot let power go to people's heads."

The Peace Corps worker claims Savage, while on an official trip, fondled her for more than two hours in the back of a chauffeur-driven embassy car in Kinshasa, the capital of Zaire, on March 19, according to several government officials.

Savage denied the charge. "I did nothing, that's what I did," the black congressman told television reporters outside the Capitol. "This lie was leaked by the State Department for political reasons."

In calling for an ethics investigation, Schroeder was joined by Democratic Reps. Barney Frank of Massachusetts and Matthew McHugh of New York.

Pilot May Have Faked Unconsciousness

By Stephen C. Fehr
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Washington pilot and lawyer Thomas L. Root may have feigned unconsciousness while military aircraft tracked him for four hours of his mysterious plane trip last week, federal investigators suggested Wednesday.

Military pilots who intercepted Root have told investigators that they saw Root's head turn several times and that the small plane's sun visor was in at least three positions during the 800 miles he was tailed from North Carolina to the Bahamas.

Also on Wednesday, a Georgia-based company filed suit against Root in U.S. District Court here accusing Root of breach of contract, misusing escrow funds and double billing the company for legal services. Root, a communications lawyer, represented 167 of the firm's clients who were seeking FM radio station licenses.

At a briefing in Hollywood, Fla., on Wednesday, Andrew A. Alston, a field investigator for the National Transportation Safety Board, said, "Various pilots reported that (Root's) head would turn in their direction. If they intercepted from the right, his head would turn to the right, then back to the front. If they intercepted him from the left, his head would turn to the left, then to the front."

Confronted by Alston with this fact in an interview Wednesday, Root "had no answer as to how that occurred," Alston said, adding that the pilot also could not clear up the key mystery of his flight — how he was wounded.

Wednesday's disclosures raised further questions about whether Root, 36, ever was unconscious. He had no prior medical problems. Though he described to Alston symptoms of oxygen deprivation and said he tried to hook up his portable oxygen system, many aviation experts have said that it is unusual for someone to need oxygen flying at 10,000 feet. The plane's manufacturer has no history of carbon monoxide leaks on the Cessna 210.

Photographs and videotape from the Army, Air Force, Air National Guard and Marine Corps are trickling in to the safety agency in Washington and may document Root's movement in the plane. Photographs show the sun visor changing position, Alston said.

Brian Alexander, one of two Army pilots who first observed Root and who escorted the plane for an hour last week, has said that "30 minutes into the escort, we observed Mr. Root glancing our way."

Though the cockpit was dark and the pilots could not see Root's eyes, Alexander said, they "definitely" saw Root's head turn. The air was calm, so turbulence did not cause the head movement, Alexander said.

Alston said that he would not discuss whether Root's wound was self-inflicted, but said that the safety agency is working with surgeons and pathologists to pinpoint the time that the shooting might have occurred, based on Root's condition when he was pulled from the water.

Many doctors and law enforcement officials familiar with the case said all of the signs point to a self-inflicted wound. Root did not appear to be ill before the flight, according to people who saw him. He boarded the plane alone. The revolver's manufacturer and another weapons expert said it is impossible for the weapon to discharge without someone pulling the trigger. Three forensic pathologists interviewed by The Washington Post said the presence of powder burns around the wound and the bullet's trajectory indicate that the revolver was fired from less than two feet away.

The safety agency and the Federal Aviation Administration are eager to end the investigation, officials said Wednesday, because Root's flight involves no air safety issue. Alston said that the on-site investigation would end within a month.

In the lawsuit, Sonrise Management Services Inc. of Columbus, Ga., said that in the three years Root has represented the firm's clients, he failed to perform legal services on at least nine license applications. In some cases, the suit alleges, Root voluntarily dismissed applications without the client's knowledge.

The suit also charges that Root did not return $75,000 in funds that he had been holding in an escrow account for Sonrise, and that on another occasion he allegedly issued a $75,000 check from the escrow account that bounced.

The lawsuit also accuses Root of billing Sonrise twice for the same services and failing to return the overpayments.

Soviet Miners Extend Strikes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — Strikes by tens of thousands of miners spread to three more of the Soviet Union's coalfields, Tass reported today.

The official news agency said coal miners in Vorkuta in the far north, the Don River city of Rostov in southwestern Russia and the Ukrainian industrial center of Dnepropetrovsk walked out Wednesday.

It said their demands were similar to those of striking miners in the Kuznetsk and Donetsk coal basins, who are seeking greater local control over their industries and better wages and living conditions.

Kuznetsk, in western Siberia, and Donetsk, in the Ukraine, are the country's two leading coal basins and the strikes, which began 10 days ago, amount to the country's worst labor unrest since the 1920s.

The government has acknowledged that living and working conditions for miners in the regions are abysmal and has made general pledges of improvements.

Tass reported Wednesday that some miners in Siberia, where the unrest began, had returned to work after the government made pay concessions.

The government also has promised to send extra meat, butter, sugar, tea, leather shoes, furniture and cars to relieve shortages in the region, the Communist Youth League newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda said today.

But the newspaper and Tass reported more disturbances in the Ukraine. Komsomolskaya Pravda quoted a communist official in the Donetsk city of Makeyevka as saying, "The scale of the strike is growing. Practically all the coal enterprises of the city have stopped work."

Miners in Vorkuta, Rostov and Dnepropetrovsk all walked off the job on Wednesday, Tass said.

In Vorkuta, strikers sent a letter to the Kremlin asking for an "urgent resolution of the sharp economic and social problems of the coal sector, and also specific problems of workers of the far north," Tass said.

In Rostov, miners' economic demands included extra pay for evening and night shifts, longer vacations and an increase in the price of coal to world market prices, the news agency reported.

In Dnepropetrovsk, which is 150 miles from Donetsk, workers' demands mirrored those of Donetsk and Kuznetsk miners.

President Mikhail S. Gorbachev said Wednesday the strikes could imperil his reforms and that there were reports of railway workers being urged to strike.

He said that if labor trouble spreads, "We may have to take such extreme measures that it will hurt what we've been doing" to overhaul the economy through greater attention to free-market mechanisms.

Police Hold Fan In Actress' Death

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — An obsessed fan of actress Rebecca Schaeffer wrote her a rambling love letter, kept videos of her TV show "My Sister Sam" and stalked her before shooting her to death, police said after arresting the man.

Robert John Bardo, 19, was being held in Arizona today, while Los Angeles authorities pursued extradition. Tucson police picked him up Wednesday as he was dodging cars on a freeway there.

Los Angeles investigators flew to Tucson, where Bardo gave police "statements related to the murder of Rebecca Schaeffer," Los Angeles police Detective Dan Andrews said.

"I don't want to say he confessed, but he implicated himself, for sure," the detective said.

The unemployed fast-food worker from Tucson was an obsessive fan of Miss Schaeffer, said Deputy District Attorney Robert E. Savitt, who filed a complaint charging him with murder.

The 21-year-old co-star of the old television sitcom "My Sister Sam" and the current film "Scenes From the Class Struggle in Beverly Hills" was shot once in the chest Tuesday morning at the door of her apartment building.

Crash Kills 74 People

button and a pair of plastic pilot's wings as he spoke.

A flight recorder was recovered, authorities said.

Flight 232, from Denver to Philadelphia via Chicago, carried 11 crew members and 282 passengers, including three infants, said United spokesman Lawrence Nagin.

The Seattle-based cockpit crew survived and were being treated for injuries at a hospital, Nagin said.

He identified them as Capt. A.C. Haynes, a 33-year United veteran; First Officer W.R. Records; and Second Officer D.J. Dvorak.

Hydraulic systems provide power steering that allows pilots to manipulate the wing and tail controls of the jumbo jet. Without it, aviation officials say the plane would be uncontrollable.

The tail engine failed, and this may have caused a hydraulic failure, said Bob Raynesford, another FAA spokesman. The plane's three independent hydraulic systems are routed to the tail section.

The crash left a swath of charred runway and strewn bits of people's lives over the wide expanse: two sets of golf clubs, a wallet photo of a brunette in her prom dress, a Reebok tennis shoe, a purple hairdryer, one black high-heeled shoe and a collection of Marilyn Monroe photographs.

Four people near Alta, 55 miles east of Sioux City, discovered a piece of the plane, 6 to 7 feet high and 6 feet long, in a corn field.

Four miles away, Allen and Phil Jahde found three pieces of the plane scattered in their cornfield. Phil Jahde said one piece was a 6-foot-long metal band, engraved ENG 2.

"It's remarkable to us that he made it that far back with the pieces he's losing," he said.

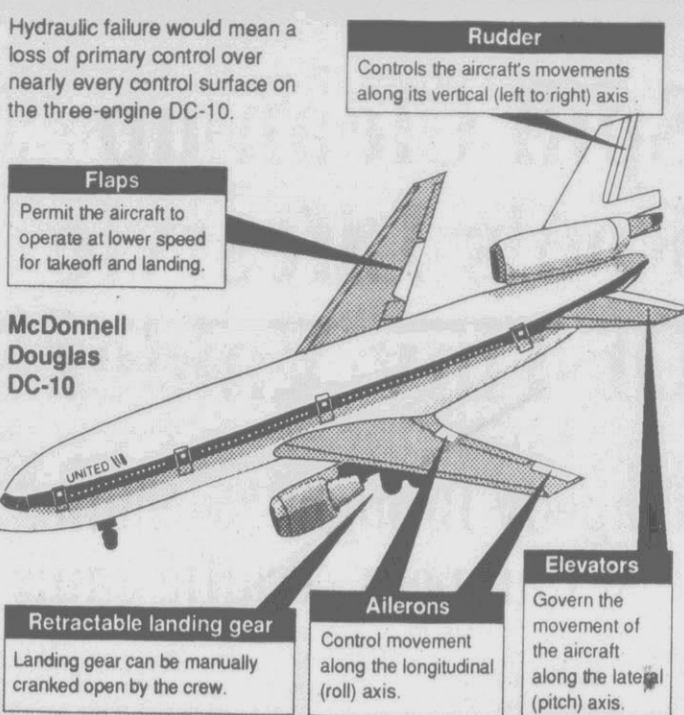

The plane apparently experienced problems earlier Wednesday. Ruth Dinsmore, of Mount Laurel, N.J., said she took the same DC-10 from Philadelphia to Denver in the morning. The plane made the return trip later.

She said the plane began to leave the terminal at Philadelphia International Airport shortly after 10 a.m., when "everything sort of shut off." The plane taxied back to the terminal, where it sat about 15 minutes for repairs.

In Sioux City, officials from the National Transportation Safety Board arrived late Wednesday to begin an investigation.

The plane was flying southwest as it approached the airport, and its wings rocked as it descended until the craft pitched violently to its right, causing the right wing to hit the ground and sending the plane into a cartwheel. The plane nose and fuselage ended upside down.

After the crash, passenger Cliff Marshall of Columbus, Ohio, said people were "sitting there upside down and it began to fill up with smoke."

"Then God opened a hole in the basement and I pushed a little girl out," he said. "I grabbed another, kept pulling them out until they didn't come no more." Marshall said he thought he helped a half-dozen out. Then he ran.

Several others walked away. Flight attendant Janice Tyrrell Brown, 47, of Schaumburg, Ill., walked off with singed hair and no injuries, according to her mother, Margaret Bournival of Goffstown, N.H.

Martha Vazquez, 44, of Elida, Ohio, had only minor scrapes, said her husband, Ivan.

She called him Wednesday night; he said he cried.

"I said, 'Somebody up there likes me.'"

Tar Heels Survive Air Crash

A Durham family returning home from a vacation in Honolulu also survived the Wednesday evening crash.

Garland Currin said in a telephone interview that his son-in-law, Adrienne Badis, his daughter, Ellen, and their children Eric and Aaron called to tell him that they had survived the crash.

"My daughter said it was a pure miracle," said Currin, adding that the family was sitting just ahead of the wing when it crashed. He said she couldn't describe to him what happened.

"She was so thrilled with the miracle, all she could tell me is that the plane flipped over on the end and they came out upside down and walked out," Currin told a Raleigh television station.

Currin said his daughter called him from Denver at 2 p.m., telling him that the flight would be late. He said he was eating dinner about 6 p.m. when he heard about the crash on the news.

"I dropped everything and went straight to the airport," Currin said. "The airport couldn't tell me nothing."

Currin said he later heard from a chaplain who told him that his daughter, a nurse at Durham County General Hospital, and her family had survived the crash. Later he received a telephone call from his family. He said his son-in-law had suffered a burned foot and a puncture wound in his leg.

The flight was carrying about 290 people. It crashed in an explosive ball of fire and cartwheeled down a runway after the pilot tried to make an emergency landing.

Authorities said 61 bodies had been recovered by late Wednesday night. Some 166 people survived the crash, officials said.

Flight 232, from Denver to Philadelphia via Chicago, carried 11 crew members and an estimated 279 passengers, including one infant, said United spokesman Lawrence Nagin.

California Apes

ASHEBORO (AP) — California apes soon will be calling North Carolina home.

While new quarters are built for them in sunny California, three gorillas from the San Diego Zoo will live at the N.C. Zoological Park, said Georgeanne Irvine, public relations coordinator for the San Diego Zoo, on Tuesday.

The apes tentatively are scheduled to leave San Diego July 25 for a two-year stay, she said.

Samantha, Katy and Jim, the California apes, would return home upon completion of an $11.5 million natural habitat-type enclosure that also will house birds and other animals, Irvine said.

Concerns Expressed At Focus Hearing

FARMVILLE — Several area citizens made suggestions and expressed concerns at the third public meeting of the Focus 2007 strategic planning group, held Wednesday night in the Farmville Community Center.

Approximately 15 citizens attended the public forum to hear strategy team leaders present goals and objectives on issues such as education, economic development, transportation, government services, crime and substance abuse, recreational and cultural activities, and research and development.

According to Lynne James, a member of the strategic planning group, several of those attending commented on each of the key areas addressed by the team leaders.

Linwood Mercer, Pitt County commissioner, urged the group to ensure that types of industries targeted through the economic development plan are desirable for the area. Mercer said he hoped the plan would attract industries that would not be polluters of the environment and would conserve natural resources, particularly water, to join the community.

Mary Alsentzer of Greenville made comments in several different areas, said Ms. James. Relative to crime and substance abuse, Ms. Alsentzer suggested the group consider possible alternatives to incarceration, particularly for non-violent offenders. She also directed a suggestion to the transportation team, citing a need for a countywide bikeway system. She said the area along the county's railway passes may be a possible route.

According to Ms. James, Ms. Alsentzer also said there was a need for more pedestrian crosswalks in the newer, more recently developed areas of the county.

E.C. Turnage of Farmville expressed concern about protecting the county's water supply. He said there should be an objective in the Focus 2007 plan directly addressing maintaining an adequate water supply for the county.

Turnage directed the group's attention to the transportation of toxic materials in the county, saying transportation of those materials by rail had been mentioned by the group. Turnage said the panel should also consider the large amount of transportation of toxic materials by road.

The aim of the Focus 2007 group is to establish Pitt County as a "metropolitan center, pursuing excellence in education, economic development, and cultural/social activities."

A meeting tonight in the upstairs auditorium of the Pitt County Office Building will be the last in a series of four sessions designed to provide the public with the opportunity to ask questions and offer suggestions.

Spill Clean-up Fouls Lifestyle Of Tiny Valdez

Tragedy Brought No Slime, Just Campers, Traffic Jams

By Jules Loh
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

VALDEZ, Alaska — Not a drop of spilled oil stains the sparkling waters of this harbor on Prince William Sound. The stain here is well ashore.

"They are turning our village into a shantytown," says Tom McAlister, the town's fire marshal.

That is one of the milder sentiments you hear these days from the 2,500 residents of Valdez. Theirs is, or was, a gentle village that fate seems to have picked on over the years for more than its share of bad luck.

Valdez is the terminal of the Alaska oil pipeline. Its shores were untouched by the worst-ever American oil spill, but it will be linked forever, its villagers feel, with the name of the tanker that spilled the oil.

The tanker Exxon Valdez filled its enormous hull here, but left its 11 million gallons well south where it ran aground.

Now Valdez has become the staging ground for the thousands trying to clean up the mess and other thousands looking to help do it at wages that seem to be causing a sort of gold rush fever in Valdez.

People are swarming here from all over. Some villagers are comparing the effect on their town to that of the 1964 earthquake. An exaggeration, of course, because that horror so shook Valdez that the entire citizenry had to pack up and move 10 miles away and start all over.

"Well," says Pat Lynn, "that's just what I sometimes feel like doing. Just look at it."

His gesture takes in clusters of tents pitched on the hillside; temporary housing in the shape of box-cars, left over from pipeline construction crews, stuck on every flat place and stacked up at the harbor until other flat places can be found; traffic jams and honking horns; camper vehicles parked helter-skelter because there's no room in the designated lots; people standing in lines — for a meal, or a drink, or a shower at the high school gym, for free, or at a truck stop to get wet, for a dollar a minute.

"It's a damn circus," says Lynn.

Pat Lynn runs a one-person radio station, one of America's smallest. It's typical of a Valdez enterprise — small, unambitious, sufficient to serve a town this size. He took a 75 percent cut in income to move to Valdez from busy Anchorage.

"Now we have suddenly become a city of 8,000 transients," he says.

"Our sense of intimacy has been fractured. Our quiet way of living has been torn away from us. Our crime rate has gone up. Our mayor told me the other day he had to go looking for his house key. He had never needed it before.

"All the reasons we chose to live in Valdez, out here in all this isolated beauty, have been shattered, maybe beyond repair.

"It's going to take forever to clean up the oil, if it can be cleaned up, which I doubt. So who knows how long it will take for Valdez to be Valdez again, or whether it ever will be?"

No question that the shock was sudden and dramatic.

On the first day after the March 24 spill, for example, the little Valdez airstrip, which didn't even have a control tower, had to handle 800 takeoffs and landings. For the month of April, it handled 8,417, comparable to Chicago's O'Hare airport, one of the nation's busiest.

No question, either, that the impact has been all the more jarring because of the serene natural beauty of this northeastern corner of Prince William Sound.

Alaskans call Valdez "little Switzerland." Herman Ruess, an airplane pilot who left Switzerland to come here, says the description is apt.

Ruess will take you to the face of the sound's 17 glaciers and let you watch them cast great chunks of ice into the sea, a phenomenon called calving, creation still in progress.

Ruess likes to take the scenic route from Valdez back to his base in Anchorage. He banks his airplane low over ice-strewn waters, looking for seals, finding them.

"No houses, no highways, no nothing," he says, grinning. "Isn't it beautiful?"

Mountains embrace Valdez on three sides. They were sculpted by ice and the ages and a hand with all the time in the world.

The winter snowfall, 300 inches or more, never quite leaves the peaks. It lingers in crevasses and shaded pockets like milk poured from a dipper.

Lower on the slopes, emerald-green alder and cottonwood surround cascades of snow melt, waterfalls that nourish heather and lupine and wild strawberries. In the winter the waterfalls freeze in mid-flow. Climbers who come here call Valdez the Yosemite of ice.

"I think one reason the oil spill so upset people in the lower 48," says Joe Leahy, a Valdez resident, "is because even if they never have a chance to come to Alaska they like to know that it's here. I know I felt that way when I lived in Cleveland."

Leahy is the curator of the Valdez Museum. Not too many towns of 2,500 have a museum of this one's scope, but Valdez has a history deserving of it, a history, Leahy says, that reassures him. In his mind there is a certain Valdez spirit that will enable it to recover from its current woe.

"We here are sort of different," he says. "We don't exactly fit in elsewhere. We gravitated to Valdez because people are not so judgmental about other people's quirks and personalities because we have our own. We're all more or less kindred."

"What gives us our tenacity is that if Valdez were to disappear we wouldn't have many places left to go."

Leahy moved to Valdez from Juneau five years ago. He left there not because he saw it grow from 15,000 to 30,000 but because the owner of a hardware store where he had done business for 13 years all of a sudden required two pieces of identification to take his check.

"It's our mutual trust and intimacy that we hope not to lose in Valdez," Leahy says.

Valdez became a place on naval

The Associated Press

Valdez, nestled among high mountains on Prince William Sound, is reeling from hordes who came to clean up spill charts in 1790 when a Spanish explorer, Salvador Fidalgo, saw the port's exquisite beauty and named it for his boss — just as Captain James Cook named Prince William Sound for his.

It remained only that, a name on a map, until 1898 when gold-seekers docked here to take a shortcut to the Klondike over an Indian trail across the Valdez glacier. Many of them decided halfway across the rugged ice that no amount of gold was worth the trip and came back. Before long Valdez became a town of more than 4,500.

When the gold boom died Valdez survived. But for decade after decade misfortune seemed to visit little Valdez, with uncommon regularity, mostly fires, sometimes disease. Somehow it managed to settle into a close-knit community with schools and churches and a fishing fleet and a way of life that sturdy folk with an eye for nature's gifts found attractive.

Then, in 1964, America's worst earthquake struck. It recorded 8.5 on the Richter scale and its epicenter was in Prince William Sound. It destroyed Valdez. It left the ground under what remained of the town so unstable that everybody had to move to a more solid foundation 10 miles away.

They brought with them the town fire bell, which had saved many of them, and the oaken bar from the Pinzon Saloon, which had succored many more. Both are in Joe Leahy's museum. They laid out a new town with broad streets and grand old trees where bald eagles nested.

The new Valdez prospered — especially when it was chosen as the terminal of the oil pipeline.

"But the town always knew that the oil bonanza could end someday, just as the gold bonanza did," Leahy says.

So when Valdez rebuilt, it put its chips not on oil but on tourism. Fifty cruise ships tie up every summer at Valdez and hundreds of visitors, awed by the scenery and the town's hospitality, come ashore for about a three-hour stay. Other tourists motor here in campers and stay longer. All in all, about 100,000 sightseers a year.

The largest item on the town budget is for beautification — flowers, trees, grass.

"Look at it now," says Leahy. "Cyclone fences with barbed wire on top. We never allowed that before, but Exxon seems to need it. Security guards are at every building where Exxon has rented office space. Security guards! In Valdez!"

"A stand of trees has been bulldozed to make room for those temporary barracks and other equipment. Well. Eagles used to perch there. An eagle won't sit on an Exxon radio tower or satellite dish.

"If what the tourists see here is chaos, they certainly won't recommend an Alaska cruise to their neighbors. The people with campers will stay away, too, when word gets around on the CB radio circuit that there's no place to park."

There is, in fact, no place to park. Or to sleep. Where will Valdez accommodate the seasonal workers who come every summer to operate the fish processing plants? Nobody knows. But then there might not be much fish processing this year. The oil spill has eliminated commercial fishing in the most productive salmon area of Prince William Sound.

Some in Valdez, of course, benefit from the spill.

In Valdez, rooms in private homes are going for $100 a night, a mattress on the floor for $50. At one restaurant the menu was reprinted. Same menu, higher prices. The Pipeline Club, a popular place for dinner, doubled its staff but not its prices and doubled its profits. It now serves breakfast and lunch as well as dinner and keeps the bar open from 8 a.m. until 5 a.m., when state law says it must close.

On the day of the spill, a woman from Fairbanks drove 350 miles to a Valdez trailer park where she rents out her camper for $60 a night from each of four people, two to a bed. No toilet. Jackie Robb, the manager of the Valdez branch bank, posted signs asking campers please not to use the parking lot as a restroom.

Valdez had never had a fast-food joint. Now it has. A trailer with a window in the side pulled up near the dock with three signs: "Burger King," "Open," and "Help Wanted."

Tom McAlister, the fire marshal, has postponed his retirement plans. "I can't leave the town like this," he says. "I just can't."

Joe Michaud, the police chief, has his hands full as well.

"I certainly understand people going where they can to find a job," says Michaud. "I've done that myself. And 90 percent of these people cause no trouble even though just being here is a real strain on the town.

"We will get through this. We will handle it."

Yes. But it does seem unfair that the little village destroyed by America's worst earthquake must endure the anguish of America's worst oil spill.

"It is unfair," says Pat Lynn. "Because the earthquake was nature's doing. This was man's."

Easy-Care Hairstyle Is Cut Of The Season

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Recently, actress Brooke Palance took the plunge. She went from so-so shoulder-length hair to a chic, freewheeling style that is showing up on savvy women around the world.

The cut of the season is short and boyish at the nape of the neck with feminine fullness through the crown. A longer top layer and subtle internal layering make for wash-and-wear ease, myriad styling possibilities and freedom from most hair-styling products.

The sassy coiffure has no official name (although Vidal Sassoon calls its versions Turnstyles). And depending upon how it is slicked back, flipped, flopped or tousled, it can conjure images of English schoolboys, the Beatles, Joan of Arc, French gamins, Delphine Seyrig in "Last Year in Marienbad" or Audrey Hepburn.

What makes it a nifty natural for summer and beyond is its softness, ease and versatility. It is ideal for busy, time-poor women. And it is the perfect topping for athletic bodies, higher hemlines, lower heels, softer shoulders, figure-framing silhouettes and the new emphasis on femininity mixed with man-tailored classic clothes.

"Liberating" is the word Palance uses to describe her shorter, sleeker do. "There's nothing to hide behind. Your face is what shows."

Although she was guided by Beverly Hills, Calif., stylist Jose Eber, other women are taking their direction from top fashion models, such as Paris-based Linda Evangelista, among the first to be photographed with the '60s-inspired cut, and celebrities such as Ali MacGraw, whose new, short do caused a stir at this year's Academy Awards ceremony.

Eber created the MacGraw cut and notes with relief: "It takes no time at all to convince a woman it is feminine and sexy." MacGraw's style has "a boyish feel to it, but once you style it, it looks feminine. She wanted something carefree because she's very active. She wants to wash and dry it naturally."

"What I like about hair now is it's freer and much healthier," Eber adds. "In the '70s, we spiked it, we gelled it, we bleached it, we permed it. Hair sometimes felt like cardboard. Now it's back to being healthy, shiny and fun."

He finds the fresh, full shape flatters neck and shoulders and solves a problem for some clients. "You can create the head shape you want. If someone has a flat head, you can cut the hair so it looks rounder."

Stylist Allen Edwards estimates

Actress Brooke Palance shows off new style

he takes 10 to 15 women each week from long to very short hair at his salons in the Los Angeles area. He thinks some women are influenced by world events as much as by fashion.

"It's subconscious, but with so many negative things in the news, women want to do something positive for themselves, something to lift them up."

Edwards likes to add natural-looking color to short cuts. He is partial to dark reds and rich auburns. The color should be solid rather than woven through the hair, he says. And he advises using a light gel on hair for shine.

Charlotte Woman Hurt By Pharmacist's Gaffe

Dear Abby: I recently went into a rather large drugstore and told the pharmacist on duty — a woman — that I was having terrible heartburn. I asked her if she could give me something to relieve my discomfort. She looked down at my stomach and said, "You're pregnant, right?"

There were several customers standing around, and they started to look at me. I felt like the bottom of my shoe! (By the way, I am not pregnant.) I have always had a weight problem, but I am well-proportioned, and can't imagine what made that pharmacist jump to that conclusion. I am aware that some medications should not be taken by pregnant women, but if the pharmacist wants to know if a woman is pregnant, she should take the woman aside and ask her in a quiet, confidential way.

I was so humiliated by that pharmacist, I hurriedly bought what she recommended for my heartburn, turned to her and said, "I will never set foot in this store again!" Then I walked out.

The next morning I wrote a letter to the management of that drugstore, reported the humiliating incident and demanded that they take action against that pharmacist. I also asked them to respond to my letter, letting me know what action had been taken. (I am still waiting to hear from them.)

Abby, do you think I was justified in writing such a letter? If you want to print this letter, go ahead and print it. Maybe someone will learn from it. — Not Pregnant In Charlotte, N.C.

Dear Not Pregnant: The pharmacist acted in an unprofessional manner, but I think you overreacted.

Apparently you now have second thoughts about having written that letter, but what's been done is done, so don't invest any more energy worrying about it. You've written to me, and I also hope someone will learn from it.

Dear Abby: I was very distressed when I read that a small child was lost in the woods near his parents' cabin in the area of Payson, Ariz. His body was found a few days later, not far from his home. He had died of cold and exposure — a recent snow had covered him up.

We used to own a cottage in

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Wisconsin, and even though the area was not very remote, I instructed my small children to always take along, and wear around their necks, a whistle on a leather thong. They were told to use it only if they should get lost. Thank God, they never had to use it!

I felt so sorry for the parents of this little boy that I had to write to you and let you know of this possible lifesaving hint in case you might be interested in publishing it. Your column is so widely read and you are such a caring person. — Bibiche Jorgensen, Scottsdale

Dear Bibiche: I have published that "whistle around the neck" idea several times, but with the camping season upon us, if just one person is saved because of this item, it will be well worth the space in my column. Thanks for writing.

Confidential To J.G.G. In Sioux City, Iowa: I like the way Malcolm S. Forbes put it: "Anybody who thinks money is everything has never been sick. Or is."

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 6940, Los Angeles, CA. 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

The Man Who Has Everything

For Father's Day, my husband received a motorized closet valet. It's a little carousel for ties and belts that runs on two batteries. My husband has about as much use for a merry-go-round for his ties as he does for polo score cards.

He tried to get worked up over it. Once it was installed over the rod in his closet, we all stood around as he pushed the button. The lights went on and the carousel hesitated, then slowly turned as his two ties paraded before our eyes. It was pathetic.

"That's great," he said weakly. "It'll really save time."

A few years ago, he became one of a growing army of men in this country who are "hard to buy for." These men are hard to buy for because they never buy anything they don't need, and they don't need anything they don't already have. I have more gift ideas for a Trappist monk than I have for my husband.

Throughout the year, we all watch him like a hawk, waiting for some careless mention of an interest, a hobby, a hook to hang a gift on. When he said he liked chocolate chip cookies, he received five boxes on Christmas. When he went on a health kick, he got every health book and cassette known to man. Running-wise, he has shorts made from a Japanese flag, headphones, shoestrings that glow in the dark, watches so complex that no one in North America can set them, running caps with moose antlers, sweatbands, ankle weights, and designer safety pins to hold his car keys.

At Wits End

When the kids had nothing to go on, they went silly. Sitting around his office are a 6-foot inflatable dinosaur, a giraffe head over the door, a life preserver with "Titanic" printed on the side, and six Opus dolls.

Don't even think of buying him something to wear. I can tell you only that if 1953 comes back, he has the wardrobe for it. According to him, you do not buy another sweater when you already have one that doesn't have a hole in it.

A couple of years ago, I bypassed clothes, hobbies and silly, and went straight to the "what is it" gift. This includes a luggage tag that is disguised as a piece of mending tape to make the luggage look old and patched so no one will want to steal it, and a pair of gloves to read the newspaper without getting your hands dirty. (I didn't expect them to bring tears to his eyes.)

Since anything I buy seems to overwhelm him, I have gone on to gifts for me that I want to convince him he wants too. The kids thought the tie express was a stroke of genius. Now they can sit back and buy ties to put on it. Me? I can hardly wait for Christmas to get him new seat covers for my car he doesn't even know he needs yet.

Bush Wants Base On Moon

It's time to get moving again," said one of them, Michael Collins.

Bush chose to look beyond the budget squabbling over the space station budget. He said that part of his proposals amounted to "only a first step."

Bush offered few details beyond his broad goals, and said he was leaving it to Vice President Dan Quayle, the National Space Council and NASA to come up with "realistic timetables."

"America should never stop seeking distant frontiers," Bush said. "We dream of distant shores we've not yet seen... A dream to be realized by future generations must begin with this generation," he said.

The ceremony a few blocks from the White House blended the president's glimpse into the future with reminiscences of Apollo program.

"The Apollo program shared a certain nobility of purpose," said Neil Armstrong, who planted his foot on the moon on July 20, 1969. "The spirit of Apollo remains today." He was joined on the stage by Apollo 11 colleagues Collins and Buzz Aldrin.

Bush unveiled a new postage stamp commemorating the first moon landing, then signed a proclamation marking Space Exploration Day. He invited the astronauts and their families back to the White House for a picnic lunch.

"Our goal is nothing less than to establish the U.S. as the preeminent space faring nation," he said in his speech.

He recalled the first moon landing two decades ago, saying, "Some called it quixotic, impossible ... but America did it."

Bush said he watched the moon landing from his red brick house in Washington, sitting with his then 12-year-old son Marvin, who watched in awe. The president then provided a short but riveting description of the event which had millions holding their breath until the announcement, "The Eagle has landed."

"The time for seizing the initiative in space is upon us," said Aldrin.

Speaking in advance of the speech, one administration official said Bush had decided to avoid setting a dramatic space goal in his speech along the lines of John Kennedy's call in 1961 for a manned moon landing by the end of the decade.

Rather, his endorsement of the costly moon-Mars project was to be "very general," said the official. Another official said Bush will ask Vice President Dan Quayle and the advisory National Space Council, which he heads, to flesh out the proposal with specifics.

"We are hear to rededicate our resources, to rededicate our energies to the future," Quayle said in remarks that preceded the Bush speech.

A return to the moon and flight to Mars would require congressional approval of billions of dollars. The administration could encounter rough sledding given congressional obstacles already evident in a bid to get $30 billion for current space station plans, which would be basic to any program for Mars exploration.

Congress is expected to approve less than the $13.3 billion Bush is seeking for NASA next year, which is about 1 percent of the $1.16 trillion federal budget for 1990.

Bush's request would have to be more than doubled to pay for a moon-Mars project, NASA officials estimate.

NASA's contractor force has shrunk to just over 100,000, from 400,000 in the Apollo days.

Storm Kills 17 In China

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — Typhoon Gordon left at least 17 people dead and more than 100 injured when it slammed into southern China, cutting communication lines and washing away roads and crops, the official China Daily reported today.

The paper said 13 people were missing and that damages totaled about $27 million. The storm hit on Wednesday.

Eight of the dead and 80 of the injured were in Yangjiang, one of the hardest hit areas in coastal Guangdong province, the paper said.

About 250 fishing boats capsized, 22 bridges collapsed and 156 miles of highway were washed away, the report said.

Eight other people died in Zhaoqing in central Guangdong, and one person was killed in the Zhuhai Special Economic Zone, near Macao, where most of the coastal dikes were destroyed and 4,200 acres of sugar cane fields, rice paddies and fish ponds were flooded, the paper said.

Thousands of people in the provincial capital of Canton were stranded and telecommunications were knocked out, it said.

Guth said the employees violated existing policy when they asked Ashley to make items such as shelves, bookcases, a wooden cart, picture frames, bird houses, bird feeders and a jewelry box for their personal use. Guth said the action constituted misappropriation of state property for personal use.

ECU Athletes Making The Grade

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

In the fall of 1985, 28 members of the East Carolina University football team were on academic probation — in danger of flunking out of school. Few athletes, if any, were graduating from the university.

It was just a year into a new program by the National Collegiate Athletic Association which restricted recruiting of athletes who might not be able to make the grade.

It was called Proposition 48, and required incoming freshmen to meet certain academic standards, a 700 on the Scholastic Aptitude Test, and maintain a 'C' average in a college prep core curriculum in high school.

But there was also another rule, Proposition 56, which the NCAA instituted. It called for the student-athlete already in college to pass 24 hours of work each year in order to maintain his athletic eligibility.

"All universities came under close scrutiny four or five years ago because of their admissions and graduation rate," Pam Penland, assistant athletic director for academic counseling at East Carolina said. "(These two rules) have brought about a revival of academics on campuses. You can't just take jump rope and jack rocks and still be eligible. You have to make progress toward graduation."

Now, five years after those rules first passed, East Carolina has only 12-15 athletes per semester on academic probation, approximately five percent of the athletes on campus. The move is on to make the term "student-athlete" a meaningful one.

At East Carolina, progress has been made, but it's still far from perfect. In fact, perfect is a goal that may be impossible to achieve. That would be to see that all recruits who come in graduate. For one reason or another, some are going to leave school. Some will simply get homesick and leave. Others will grow disenchanted with either their decision or leave because of a coaching change. Others will see grass that appears greener somewhere else.

And there will be academic casualties, just as there will be in the student body in general.

"I think we've seen a great deal of progress, but the job is still there to keep a balance," Penland said. "We need to make both the academic side and the athletic side important. We can't deny that athletics are important to that student, but we have to make them realize the importance of academics down the road. We have to help him keep his balance in this transition and at times, that's tough."

Penland does feel that Prop 48 is having its affect on incoming students.

"The high schools are finding out what they have to do to get a student ready," Penland said. "For this reason, we have less troubles once they get on campus."

For instance, in the fall semester of 1985, only 12.5 percent of the athletes on campus (both scholarship and non-scholarship) made one of the various honor rolls. This past fall, 23 percent made the list, nearly twice as many.

"That's slightly higher than the general student body average," Penland pointed out.

It's difficult to compare grade point averages between the student body and the athletes because of several factors, Penland said. Non-full time students, transfers and the like are figured in with the general student body and can make the figures somewhat misleading.

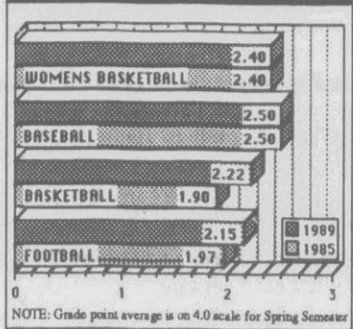

However, one can look at improvements made in several areas where improvement shows. In 1985, the football team, as a whole, had a 1.97 GPA during the spring semester. This past spring, the team's GPA was 2.15.

"That's significant," Penland said. "We've made progress in our grade point average. Since the fall of 1985, the team GPA has never fallen below a 'C' average. In fact, the total team GPA has improved each semester since the fall of 1985."

Basketball improved its GPA from 1.90 to 2.22 over the same time period. Baseball and women's basketball, two other visible sports at ECU, saw no change in their GPA over the same period, but they were high to begin with. Baseball carries a 2.50 average and women's basketball, a 2.40 mark.

NFL Says Yes To New League

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SCHAUMBURG, Ill. — American professional football, something of a cult sport in Europe, is set to carve out a permanent niche in the land where soccer is king.

By a 27-0 vote — the Chicago Bears abstained — the NFL approved on Wednesday the formation of the World League of American Football. For the first time, American football teams will be based in Europe, which over the last few years has shown signs of embracing the game.

The NFL, for instance, has played several games on London's hallowed soccer pitch, Wembley Stadium, and also staged a contest in Sweden. Too, weekly film packages of NFL games have been big sellers on Europe's burgeoning television system.

The only question now is when the league will kick off its first 10-game season. Some NFL owners are looking ahead to the spring of 1991, but Tex Schramm, the former Dallas Cowboys president who will run the new league, says he can have the 12 teams ready to play next spring.

Dan Rooney of Pittsburgh, chairman of the steering committee overseeing the new league, suggested 1991 is a more realistic starting date.

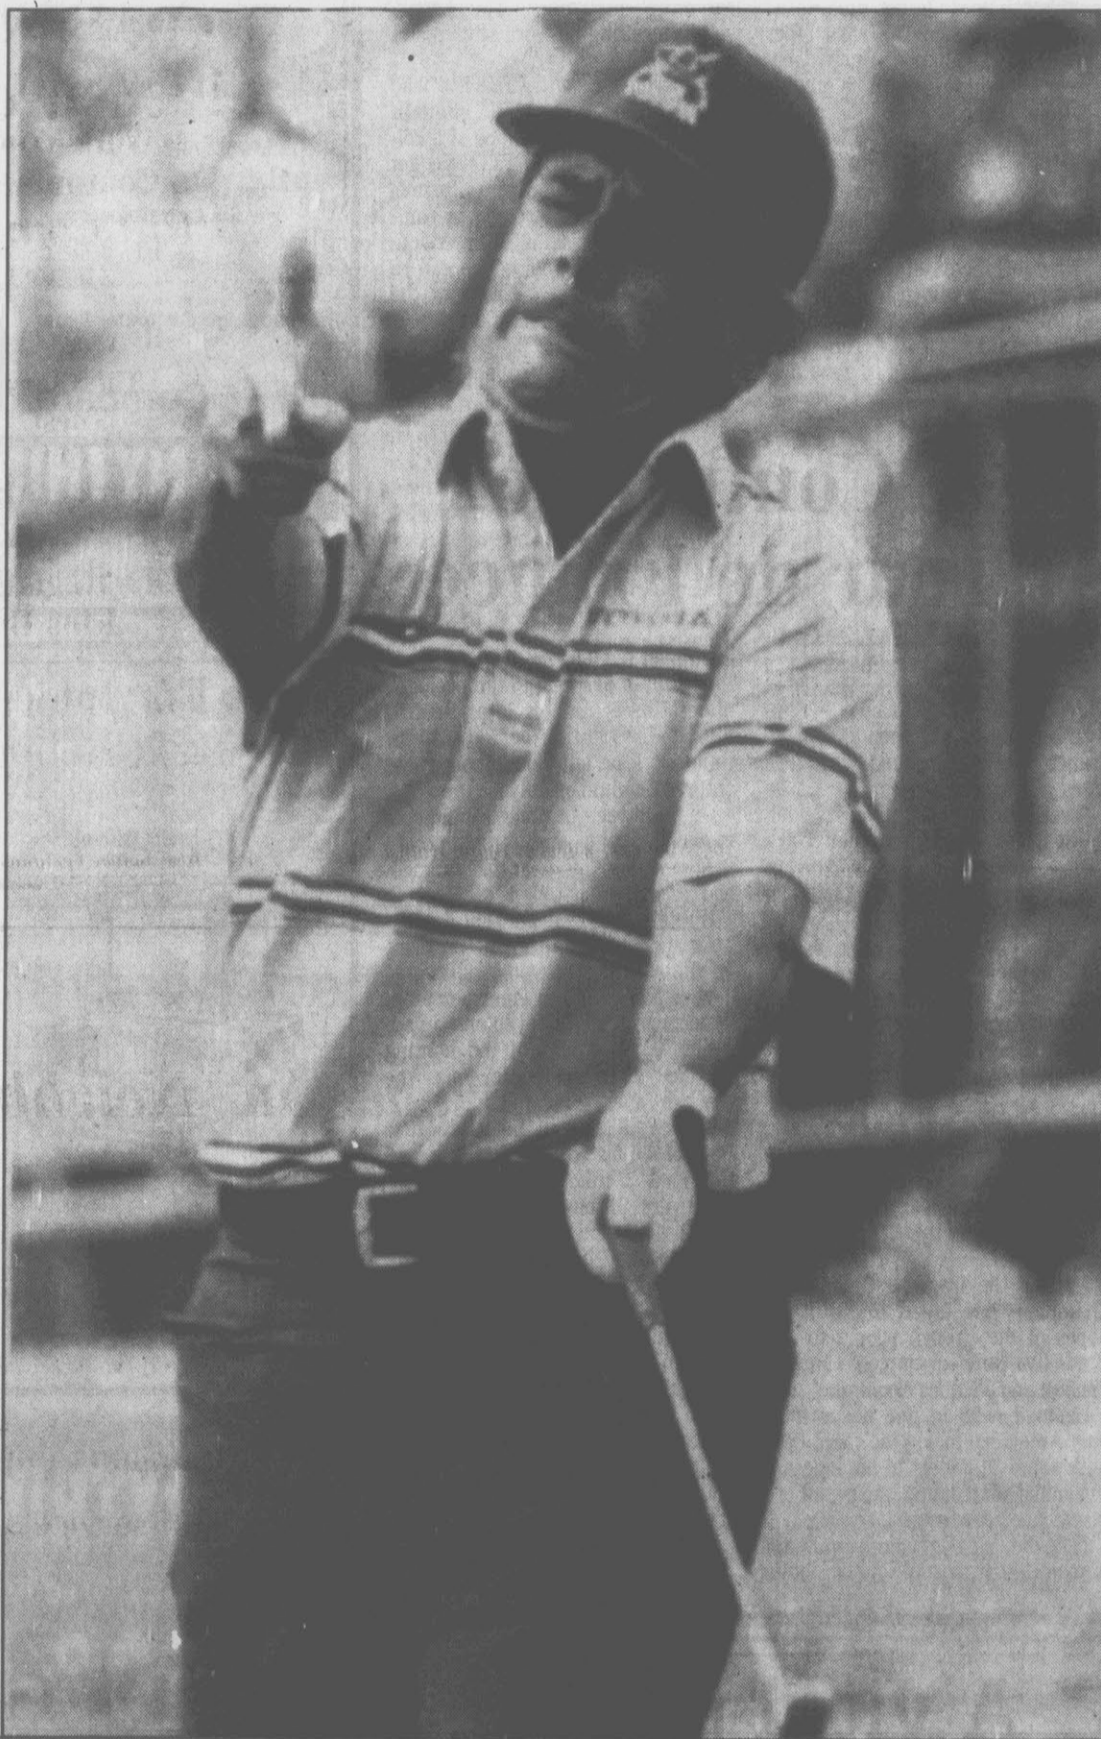

"I'm looking no farther than the sky," he said. "That doesn't rule out 1990, but we have a lot of work to do."

Schramm, who has been touring prospective sites, said one problem is reaching television agreements in Europe, which has no one network. He said that even if the league is sold to Eurovision, a continent-wide outfit, it would have to convince stations in each country to take the games.

Another problem is the length of a game.

"They want two-hour blocs," Schramm said. "They don't have three-hour sporting events the way we do."

On the other hand, there seems to be little question that some combination of regular and cable television networks in the United States will carry games.

Lee Trevino reacts after sinking a birdie putt on the 18th hole Thursday

Trevino's Early 68 Leads British Open

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TROON, Scotland — Two-time champion Lee Trevino, waving away jetliners and putting like in days past, took the early first-round lead in the 118th British Open today.

Trevino, who will be 50 in December, was in the clubhouse at 4-under-par 68 after a six-birdie round, including one with a 20-foot putt on the final hole of the Royal Troon Golf Club course.

"To win here at almost 50 — that would be just unbelievable," he said. "I don't know what I'd do. I may never go home."

A shot behind was Philip Walton of Ireland, with a 69 after bogeying the 18th. Walton never has won in 5½ years on the PGA European Tour.

American Fred Couples was on the course at 3-under after a birdie-4 at the 11th, the storied Railway hole.

U.S. Open champion Curtis Strange was another stroke back at 70. He could have been closer but became annoyed with photographers and missed a 14-foot putt for par at the 14th hole.

After three days of practice under cloudless skies and with the temperature in the upper 70s, early starters found different conditions as the tournament got under way.

The parched course, baked rock hard by a hot and virtually rainless summer, was softened by an overnight rain. Skies were overcast as the round began, although the sun was out by the time the first golfers finished, and a wind blew across the course.

But if the weather and course were changed, they did not seem to be affecting the scoring. Plenty of birdies were being recorded and scores were good.

None was better than Trevino, the 1971-72 British Open champion, who also led the first round of this year's U.S. Masters but has not won a tournament since the 1984 PGA championship.

Beware The Bounce

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TROON, Scotland — This is the "Year of The Bounce" in the British Open.

"I've got the bounce. I'm ready," Tom Watson said.

"You have to be ready for the bounce," Nick Faldo said.

"Miss the green and the bounce can put you in trouble," Greg Norman said.

Unusually warm, dry conditions have baked the fairways of Troon to a brick-like consistency, thinned out the rough and made "The Bounce" a critical factor in the 118th British Open Golf Championship.

Norman said the fairways were so hard and the ball was running so far that he had drives in the 400-yard range in practice.

"Just because the course is playing shorter, it isn't necessarily playing easier," warned Faldo, the current Masters champion and the pre-tournament favorite for the world's oldest golf championship, which was to get under way today.

"All you can do is think out the shot the best you can and hit it the best you can. When it hits the ground, it's then in the lap of the gods," Faldo said.

That's "The Bounce."

And that's the shot that must be played on the links that stretch through sandhills along the Firth of Clyde.

"The greens are so hard, you can't hope to hold them. Like all links courses, you have to hit the ball short of the green and let it run on," said Watson, who won the fourth of his five British Open titles on this course in 1982.

And therein lies the problem: the ball doesn't always run true.

"Patience is very important," Faldo said.

A Waiting Game

Utah Wants Faster Contract Talks

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

While discussions have begun between the Utah Jazz and first-round pick Blue Edwards of East Carolina, the team's legal counsel would like to see the negotiations speed up.

Phil Marantz, a Beverly Hills (Calif.) lawyer, is the legal counsel for the Jazz and handles their contract negotiations.

"I've had two or three discussions with Edwards' agent, and they are moving along somewhat slowly," Marantz said in a telephone interview Wednesday. "I wish they were moving faster. I would very much like him in camp. It's a shame. All rookies need it, especially one playing behind very seasoned veterans like we have."

Edwards was taken by the Jazz with the 21st pick in the June 25 National Basketball Association collegiate draft. So far, only one first-round pick, has signed a contract. Mookie Blaylock, the 12th pick by the New Jersey Nets, signed a deal for just over $2 million over 4 years.

Though Blaylock has signed, few of the players chosen near Edwards in the draft have signed. Agents sometimes wait until players of comparative value agree to terms before coming in with a solid offer.

"That's part of the problem from their perspective," Marantz said. "But you have to weigh that. Hopefully, you have sufficient information to determine a range of market value for the 21st pick. Hopefully, you know the player. You have to weigh coming in early against waiting to see who comes in first. Someone has to be first."

Though Marantz and William Pollak, Edwards' agent, have begun talking, no offers have been made.

"I don't want to discuss numbers," Marantz said. "He has not given me specifics yet. He's given me some general parameters."

The Jazz would like to get Edwards into a rookie/free agent camp that

Rose To Sit Out Exhibition

Does Not Want Publicity To Overshadow Bench

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — Pete Rose doesn't want publicity of his court fight with major league baseball to overshadow one of Johnny Bench's grandest moments.

Rose has received permission from Cincinnati Reds owner Marge Schott to stay behind Monday when his team plays the Boston Red Sox in the annual Hall of Fame exhibition game at Cooperstown.

Bench, a teammate of Rose on Cincinnati's "Big Red Machine" of the 1970s, and former Boston star Carl Yastrzemski will be inducted into the hall this weekend. Rose said Wednesday night that he doesn't want to have the media focus on him at the festivities, where he'd probably encounter Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti.

"Their careers have been great. I don't want to distract from anything like that," Rose said. "I know this would be the first time that Commissioner Giamatti and myself would be in the same area that peo-

Pete Rose won't be arguing any calls today

Cary Tops Snow Hill, Ties Series Up

SNOW HILL — The home field is proving to be no advantage in the Area One American Legion baseball championship series.

Wednesday night at Snow Hill, Jeff Bock tossed a six-hit complete game and aided his own cause with a solo homer as Cary Post 67 prevailed 6-5 to even the best-of-seven series at two games each.

Neither team has yet to win on its home field in the rematch of last year's title series. Game Five is set for tonight at 7:30 in Cary.

Post 67 staked Bock to an early lead with three runs with the aid of three Post 94 errors in the first. Bock homered in the third for a 4-0 lead.

Chris West, who slugged 12 homers for Eastern Wayne High School last spring, got Snow Hill within 4-3 in the fourth with a three-run shot — his third homer. A single by Cedrick Collins and a walk to Walt McKeel preceded the homer.

Both teams picked two runs in the fifth. Cary scored its two runs on three hits. McKeel and Leslie Jackson singled in runs for Post 94.

16-18 Babe Ruth Tourney Set To Open

HOLLYWOOD — The 16-18 year old Babe Ruth Eastern North Carolina State baseball tournament opens play tonight with a game between Albemarle and Central Carolina at 5:30 p.m. at D.H. Conley.

The host team is Coastal Plains, which opens play Friday at 8 p.m. against Pemo-Stuart, a team from the Richmond County area. There will be two games tonight, two games tomorrow night with play beginning at 5 p.m. for each. The second game will be at 8 p.m.

Saturday and Sunday, action will begin at 11 a.m. The championship game is scheduled for Monday at 5 p.m., with a second game, if needed, set for 8 p.m.

Duke's Peterson Will Miss Season

DURHAM — Senior placekicker Doug Peterson, Duke's career scoring leader, has suffered a career-threatening back injury and will miss the 1989 football season.

Peterson has a herniated disc in his lower back, according to Duke trainer Dave Englehart. It is uncertain whether surgery will be required or whether Peterson will kick again.

"We're trying to treat it conservatively to see if the situation will relieve itself," Englehart told The Charlotte Observer. "Surgery may be down the road, however."

Englehart said Peterson's condition probably was caused by "years of kicking and, more than anything else, overuse." He said soccer-style kickers like Peterson are especially susceptible because of the twisting motion they make when kicking.

Englehart said a herniated disc occurs when "discs situated in between each vertebrae are bulging out from where they're supposed to be. This causes a lot of pain and discomfort."

Duke coach Steve Spurrier said Peterson began experiencing discomfort in the spring. At first, it was believed to be back spasms.

Peterson was the Atlantic Coast Conference's top returning scorer with 70 points. He is Duke's career leader in points with 193, and field goals with 37. Last season, he made 34 of 35 extra points and 12 of 14 field goals.

"He's done a super job for us three years, and we're really going to miss him," Spurrier said. "He's one of the best kickers in the country, so it's a big loss for us."

Peterson has the option of taking a medical redshirt and returning in 1990. Spurrier said that has not been discussed. Peterson could not be reached for comment.

Spurrier said incoming freshman Randy Gardner and junior Keith Kushner are the top candidates to replace Peterson.

Lowe Signs Offer Sheet With Wolves

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Charlotte Hornets guard Sidney Lowe has signed an offer sheet from Minnesota and plans to work with the Timberwolves in a camp beginning this weekend, according to The Charlotte Observer.

Lowe, a North Carolina State player, is a restricted free agent and is free to sign with any team. The Hornets could retain Lowe if they make an offer.

Lowe played for the Hornets late last season and played point guard, after teammate Holton was injured.

Neither Lowe nor Hornets officials could be reached late Tuesday. But sources told the newspaper that the Timberwolves expected Lowe to be in Minneapolis on Saturday for camp.

Lowe played for Bill Musselman, now head coach at Minnesota, when both were with the Continental Basketball Association.

Charlotte has three point guards on the roster — Lowe, Holton, an unrestricted free agent who has not been signed, and Muggsy Bogues, who is still under contract.

Roe Will Enroll At Maryland

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Matt Roe, a starter at shooting guard for Syracuse University's basketball team the past two seasons, announced Wednesday he will transfer to the University of Maryland.

The 6-foot-6 Roe will have to sit out a season before playing at Maryland. He will have one year of college eligibility remaining.

"I felt uncomfortable how the team concept of play at Syracuse meshed with my basketball skills and I also felt I could provide a more positive contribution to another institution's basketball program," said Roe.

Roe, a former high school star at Fayetteville-Manlius High School in suburban Syracuse, said he felt he improved "drastically" during three seasons at Syracuse.

Roe was a high school star at Fayetteville-Manlius High School in suburban Syracuse.

After averaging 2.2 points a game his freshman season, Roe was a 9.2-point-a-game scorer as a sophomore and an 11-point-a-game scorer as a junior on a Syracuse team which reached the final eight of the NCAA tournament.

Two CBA Execs Involved In DC-10 Crash

NEW YORK (AP) — The commissioner and deputy commissioner of the Continental Basketball Association were among the passengers of a United Airlines DC-10 which crashed in Sioux City, Iowa on Wednesday while trying to land, a league spokeswoman said.

Commissioner Jay Ramsdell, 25, had not been accounted for early Wednesday evening, but deputy commissioner Jerry Schemmel was among the estimated 125 survivors among the 287 passengers.

"Jerry walked away and called us but we have not heard anything from or about Jay," said Colleen Miller, the league director of media information.

Ramsdell and Schemmel were en route from league headquarters in Denver to Columbus, Ohio, for Thursday night's CBA draft of college players. League officials said Wednesday night there were no immediate plans to cancel the draft.

League officials checked two hospitals in Sioux City and Ramsdell was not among those admitted, Tom Sise, general manager of the CBA's Columbus Horizon, told The Columbus Dispatch.

"We're praying and hoping for the best," Sise said.

Estaba Sues NCAA For Eligibility

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — University of South Alabama basketball player Estaba said his lawsuit against the NCAA is an attempt to preserve his eligibility for the 1989-90 season.

Estaba, a native of Venezuela, claims he has a year of eligibility remaining because he only played two years of junior college basketball. The NCAA ruled in April that his eligibility is over because he played three years in junior college, including the year he was injured.

Estaba, a 6-foot-7 forward, played junior college basketball in California and Texas before transferring to South Alabama in 1988.

His junior college play in 1985 was interrupted by an injury and a problem with transfer credits followed the next year.

In the suit filed Wednesday in Mobile County Circuit Court, Estaba claims the NCAA "unjustly and illegally" discriminated against him in denying him a medical hardship merely because he transferred from a junior college to a Division I school, South Alabama.

The National Junior College Athletic Association ruled that Estaba used only two years eligibility in junior college, but the NCAA refused to recognize that decision.

ECU Athletes Improving Academics ...

There are those, of course, who will excel, making high grades, while there are also those who will not make the grade and may eventually leave school. These may raise or lower the overall team GPA.

Graduating in four years is rare among athletes, who often take five or more years to complete their degree work. But graduation in four years is now uncommon among all students.

"Nationally, (all) students are taking more than four years (on the average)," Penland said. "There are a number of reasons for this. More of them are working now to earn money for college. The amount of loan money is less than it was a few years ago, so they must earn more on their own. There are also other demands on them," including sports, academics and social life.

Graduation rates would appear to be improving at ECU also. Figures prior to the beginning of annual reports to the UNC Board of Governors is incomplete at best. But in 1985, only five of 22 football players who entered in 1980 had graduated; in men's basketball, three of six who entered in 1980 had graduated.

"Different questions were asked in 1985 than are being asked now," Penland said. Those who did not graduate could have graduated later, have transferred to other schools and graduated, flunked out here or elsewhere, or still be eligible to return to school.

Figures for baseball and women's basketball for 1985 were not available.

This past year, there were 13 seniors on the football team.

"Nine of them either graduated this spring, or will graduate at the end of the summer sessions," Penland said. "Of the remaining four, three of them are in good academic standing and two are in summer school continuing their work toward graduation."

The other, however, was declared academically ineligible to return in the fall semester, although he may return at some future date and complete his education.

In men's basketball, there were three seniors, one of whom graduated. "Another is on track to graduate after the fall semester, and the other is in good standing and can return if he wishes," Penland said.

Baseball had five seniors, one of whom graduated. Three others are close to graduating and one is on academic probation, but can return in the fall.

Women's basketball had four seniors, all of whom graduated.

"The athletes have been very receptive to what we're doing," Penland said. "For the most part, they were in 1984 when our program started."

She did find some, however, who were resistant at the start. "We counseled a number of them. In some cases, we determined that the college life was not for them and helped them to find another avenue for them to live their lives.

"But now, there is a different approach to recruiting students and we're not doing that type of counseling much any more. The people we're recruiting now are students to start with."

And even for some students who have finished their athletic eligibility some years ago, the hope of a college degree is still there. "We get calls all the time from former athletes who are interested in coming back and finishing their education. When they do, our office will be open to them to give them all the help they need," Penland said.

Another big factor has been the change of attitude of parents of the athletes. "When the program first started, we seldom saw or heard from an athlete's parents. Now, the parents are more interested. They want to know what kind of an education their child is going to receive here and what their options are."

In the next few months, the academic counseling center, currently housed in the Jones Dormitory basement, will move to the new Sports Medicine Building on the athletic campus. There, more space will be available, along with state-of-the-art computers, study rooms and the like.

And plans are underway to implement the new Student Development Program which will fall under the counseling office. (Former ECU football coach Art Baker was to head this program but opted to move to the University of South Carolina as an assistant athletic director instead.)

Meanwhile, help continues for the athletes at East Carolina, to not only stay eligible but to move forward toward graduation. The GPA is up, the graduation rate is up. But much still lies ahead to be achieved.

Tight Competition At Tour de France

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

L'ALPE D'HUEZ, France — Simply, there never has been a Tour de France like this one in 75 previous races.

Three former champions, each making comebacks in their own ways, enter the final four days of competition within 115 seconds of each other.

After almost 1,800 miles and 78 hours of racing, through three countries, in 17 stages over 19 days, Laurent Fignon, Greg LeMond and Pedro Delgado — all previous champions — are battling for the title.

Fignon retook the lead with four stages to go on Wednesday as he left LeMond on the final climb of the 17th stage to go in front by 26 seconds. Delgado is third, 1 minute, 55 seconds back.

Fignon, the fragile 1983 and 1984 champion, has failed to fulfill the hopes of the French people to succeed five-time champions Benard Hinault and Jacques Anquetil.

LeMond, who in 1986 became the only American to win the race, rides with some 30 pellets in his side and two in his heart lining, the result of a hunting accident in 1987.

Delgado, the Segovian from Spain, started the first stage as defending champion but last in the standings, the result of arriving to the prologue almost three minutes late. He was almost 10 minutes behind by the time the Tour left Luxembourg and entered Belgium on July 3.

Of the three, LeMond should feel most confident, despite losing the yellow jersey this year for the second time.

He gained it first on July 6 when he won a time trial, to the surprise of many after his poor showings earlier this year. An emergency appendectomy and leg problems in addition to the effects of the hunting accident have made him miss the last two Tours.

He knows he will be the one to beat in the upcoming time trial and the final 25-mile stage on Sunday from Versailles to Paris.

"I am hopeful of gaining 30 to 40 seconds in it," LeMond said. "But over the next few days I am going to keep an eye open for opportunities to take some time from the others."

When LeMond regained the lead last Sunday after the second time trial, he said that "the ideal situation for me would be to lose the yellow jersey and be about 15 seconds behind going into the final time trial."

"It's not over until Paris," he added.

Babe Ruth 14-15

Wayne Co.....19
Pitt Co.....7

NEW HOPE — A Pitt County-Greenville final was prevented in the rain-plagued District 5 ages 14-15 Babe Ruth Baseball tournament when upstart Wayne County blitzed Pitt County 19-7 Wednesday night at Eastern Wayne High School.

Greenville, the lone remaining unbeaten in the double-elimination tournament, will battle Wayne County this afternoon at three in the championship series. A Greenville loss would force a second game at approximately 5:30.

Pitt County, which dropped a 2-0 decision to Greenville Tuesday, managed but four hits in its bid for a rematch. Troy Williams delivered a two-run single, Orlando Peterson had a RBI single and Mike Rouse and Jay Rogers each singled.

Wayne County erupted for seven runs in the fourth, three in the fifth and four in the sixth to build as much as a 17-1 bulge.

Earlier in the afternoon, Wayne County needed a pair of miraculous comebacks to nip Nash County 7-6 in 10 innings.

Down to its final out in the seventh, Wayne County tied the score at 3-3 on a two-run homer by Josh Brinkley. Then after Nash County erupted for three runs in the top

Wayne County again was down to its final out in the eighth when a heavy downpour delayed play for 75 minutes.

When play resumed, Wayne County pushed across three runs to force more extra innings. A bases-loaded walk on a 3-2 count produced the winning run.

13 Babe Ruth

Greenville.....14
Wilson.....4

NASHVILLE — Greenville scored four runs in the top of the third to break a 4-4 tie and go on to take a 14-4 win over Wilson in consolation finals of the Eastern North Carolina District V 13 year-old Babe Ruth baseball tournament Wednesday.

Both teams scored four runs in the first inning before Wilbert Levette, Jon Gavigan, Nicky Phillips and Russell Williamson each, recorded singles in the third to put Greenville ahead.

Williamson ended up 3-5 with three RBI and also came on in relief of winning pitcher Curtis McRae in the fifth inning.

Greenville advances to the finals against Wayne County, which has yet to lose in the double elimination tournament, tonight at 6 p.m. If Greenville wins, the second game to determine the champion will be at 8:30 p.m.

N.W. Halifax.....0

James Willer pitched a two-hit shutout with eight strikeouts as the Greenville Tar Heel All-Stars defeated Northwest Halifax, 12-0, Wednesday in the Eastern North Carolina District V Little League baseball tournament.

Monte Roundtree and Geoff Stallings opened the game with singles for the Tar Heel team, which scored two runs in the first to take an early lead.

The Tar Heels added two runs in the third and five more in the fourth to take control of the game. Roundtree, Stallings, Jason Howard, Jonathan Adams and Ben Hahn each had base hits during the fourth. Roundtree was 5-5 to lead the Tar Heel hitting while Stallings was 4-5. Adams was 3-3. Willer added two more hits.

The Tar Heels advance to play the Greenville North State team, a 13-1 winner over Roanoke Rapids Tuesday, today at 4 p.m. today.

R. Rapids.....7
Henderson Vance.....6

Roanoke Rapids held off a late challenge from Henderson Vance to take a 7-6 win in action from the District V Little League baseball tournament loser's bracket Wednesday.

Roanoke Rapids trailed 5-4 after five innings of play, but tied it up with a run in the sixth before taking the lead with two runs in the seventh. Henderson Vance countered with a run in the bottom of the seventh, but that was as close as it would get.

Rose Sitting Out ...

ple know about, and I didn't even want to take the chance that the (media) circus would continue. So that's why I won't be in Cooperstown next Monday."

Rose will return to Cincinnati from Montreal after his team concludes a four-game series on Sunday. The ballclub will then rejoin him in Cincinnati to open a three-game series against San Diego on Tuesday.

Rose has tied Giamatti's hands in deciding whether the manager bet on his own team, an offense that carries a possible lifetime ban from the game. Rose is protected by court order from suspension or firing while his case drags on in court.

U.S. District Judge John D. Holschuh in Columbus, Ohio, scheduled arguments for late this afternoon on whether he should move Rose's case to federal court or send it back to the state court system. There's no indication when he may rule.

Lawyers for Rose want the case sent back to Hamilton County Common Pleas Judge Norbert A. Nadel, who already has ruled that Giamatti prejudged that Rose is guilty. Baseball's lawyers want the case moved to federal court, where the broad powers of the commissioner have been upheld in previous cases.

Bench has said he didn't want his induction marred by the Rose controversy. In an interview this week with the Cincinnati Enquirer, Bench said of the Rose controversy: "So they can do whatever they want, but don't mess around with my weekend."

The manager said Wednesday he wanted to make sure that won't happen.

"I've got too much respect (for the inductees). It's unfortunate that the publicity has overshadowed some of those fellows so far this year," Rose said. "But I might add, I didn't ask for the publicity."

Rose said he'd been looking forward to the weekend, but decided to get Schott's permission to back out.

"It's just unfortunate," Rose said. "It's just something that I had to do. I can understand their feelings. I just don't want to distract from anything. I've been around this circus for about four months now, and there's just no sense in taking the circus to Cooperstown."

However, Rose stressed he wasn't backing away from a possible encounter with Giamatti.

"I'm not scared to face anybody," Rose said. "I just want you to know that I'm not scared to look in the commissioner's eye or anything like that. He has to be there, I don't."

British Open Begins Play ...

Trevino hit his stride early, making birdies at Nos. 4, 5 and 6 before two consecutive bogeys left him 1-under at the turn.

He stayed there until the 14th, when the Trevino humor and touch shone through.

As jetliners took off from nearby Prestwick Airport, Trevino waved his putter to shoot them away, and held his fingers in his ears as they roared overhead.

When the plane has passed, Trevino calmly sank a 12-foot putt for a birdie-2 and quickly followed with a birdie-3 on the 15th.

Trevino finished the round with a 20-foot putt for a birdie-3 on the 18th, punching the air and waving his blue baseball cap to the cheering crowd.

Walton, whose best career finish on the European tour was a second in this year's Irish Open, coupled five birdies and one bogey for his 4-under round. He gained strokes on the par-4 third and par-5 fourth, lost one to a bogey-5 on the ninth, then birdied the par-5 11th and two par-4s, the 13th and 15th. But he missed a share of the lead with a bogey-5 on the final hole.

Strange, playing in the threesome ahead of Trevino, had noise problems at the 14th, too — from snapping cameras rather than screaming jetliners.

Crouching over a 14-foot par putt, Strange became annoyed as press photographers took several pictures. "All right, that's enough," he said. The photographers stopped snapping, but Strange missed the putt, took bogey and quickly walked to the 15th tee. He parred the remaining four holes.

As always, when the missed putt, Strange's start was in marked contrast to his first round in the British Open a year ago.

Then, also fresh from a U.S. Open triumph, Strange shot a 79 in the wind of Royal Lytham

Braves Impacting On Wrong Race

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

No one expects the Atlanta Braves to make much of an impact in the National League West this year. The National League East, however, is another story.

The last-place Braves, no longer a factor in their own divisional race, have been giving the top teams in the NL East as much as they can handle these days.

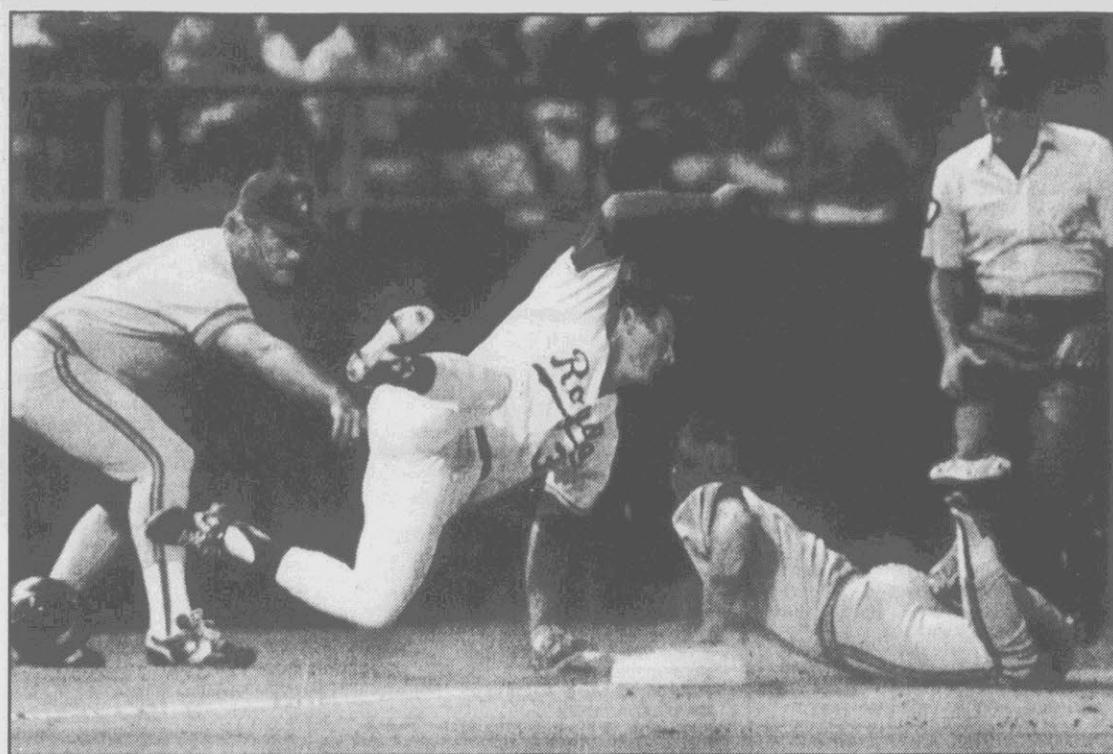

That included Wednesday night's 3-2, 12-inning victory over Montreal, giving the Braves two victories in their three-game series with the NL East leaders. Earlier, the Braves won two of four games from the New York Mets, another NL East contender.

"We understand that we can't take any team for granted," said Expos pitcher Bryn Smith, the loser in Wednesday night's game in Montreal. "We knew we had a big job on our hands going up against (John) Smoltz. But maybe it's a blessing in disguise, telling us that it's time to bear down."

Coupled with Chicago's 4-0 win over Los Angeles, the Expos saw their first-place lead shaved to 2½ games over the Cubs. The third-place Mets, 8-2 winners over Houston, moved within three games of the Expos.

Tommy Gregg had the Braves' game-winning hit, an RBI single in the 12th. Gregg singled up the middle to drive in Oddibe McDowell, who also figured in a first-inning run.

Expos reliever Joey Hesketh, 5-3, came in to get the first two Atlanta batters in the 12th and then gave up a walk to McDowell, who promptly stole second to set the stage for Gregg.

Brad Wellman is in midair after tagging out Milwaukee's B.J. Surhoff

Mark Eichhorn, 3-2, picked up the win, with Joe Boever collecting his 17th save.

Cubs 4, Dodgers 0
Mike Bielecki pitched a three-hitter and Damon Berryhill capped a three-run first inning with a suicide squeeze bunt as Chicago beat Los Angeles.

Bielecki, 9-5, struck out six and walked one on the way to his second career shutout and second of the season. The right-hander ran his career record against Los Angeles to 3-0 with his third complete game of the year, retiring 20 of the last 22 batters.

Mets 8, Astros 2
David Cone pitched a four-hitter for his fourth straight victory and Darryl Strawberry hit his 20th home run to lead New York.

Cone, 7-5, struck out eight without a walk in pitching his fourth complete game in 19 starts.

Glenn Davis hit two solo home runs, making him the first player in Houston history to get at least 20 homers in five consecutive seasons.

Jim Clancy, 5-7, has lost three consecutive decisions. He began the game with a 7.17 earned-run average in his last five starts, and gave up five runs in 4-2-3 innings.

Giants 7, Cardinals 5
Greg Litton hit a pinch-hit, three-run homer and Candy Maldonado drove in three runs as San Francisco extended its winning streak to five games.

The victory gave the Giants, who went 6-1 on the homestand, the best record in the majors at 57-37. They are 20 games over .500 for the first time since Sept. 9, 1978.

Jeff Brantley, 6-0, got the victory after relieving starter Trevor Wilson in the fifth inning. All of Brantley's wins have come in relief since June 29. He is the first San Francisco pitcher to win his first six decisions since Juan Marichal started 10-0 in 1966.

Phillies 9, Reds 4
Ricky Jordan had a career-high five hits and led a four-homer barrage off Tom Browning as Philadelphia completed a series sweep of Cincinnati.

Jordan and Randy Ready hit two-run homers off Browning, 7-9, and Dickie Thon and Von Hayes had solo homers for the Phillies, who completed their first sweep at Riverfront Stadium since 1987.

Dennis Cook, 4-3, snapped a personal three-game losing streak by scattering five hits in his second complete game in eight starts.

Padres 9, Pirates 1
Ed Whitson became the NL's second 13-game winner and third in the major leagues as he pitched a three-hitter for San Diego.

Whitson, 13-6, is 4-0 this season against Pittsburgh. He did not win his 13th game last season until Sept. 24, the Padres' 154th game.

Whitson was given all the runs he needed when the Padres built a 6-0 lead off Pirates starter Doug Drabek, 7-7, through the first six innings.

The big blows were a two-run homer in the fifth by Luis Salazar and a bases-loaded triple by Benito Santiago in the sixth. Chris James later finished the scoring with a three-run homer in the seventh.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Joe Carter is the new hottest hitter in baseball. He wants to overtake the old one.

"Maybe I can catch Kevin Mitchell now," Carter said Wednesday night after the fourth three-homer game of his career helped the Cleveland Indians over the Minnesota Twins 10-1.

Carter hit two-run homers in the first and third innings off Allan Anderson, 9-9. After walking in the fifth, he hit an eighth-inning solo homer off German Gonzalez, and added a sacrifice fly in the ninth.

He tied a major-league record in becoming the 15th player to hit five home runs in two games. He set a Cleveland record, topping the four by Rocky Colavito and Willie Kirkland.

John Farrell, 5-9, pitched a two-hitter for his first victory since June 26. He struck out five and walked two in his third complete game, allowing to hits to Jim Dwyer.

White Sox 11, Yankees 5
Ivan Calderon's double snapped a 5-5 tie in the seventh and Carlton Fisk hit his 329th home run, a three-run drive in the eighth. Chicago won its sixth straight overall and its eighth straight in Comiskey Park.

The second game of the scheduled doubleheader was called after four innings with no score. It will be made up only if it affects the pennant race.

Chicago, on its longest winning streak since the final week of the 1987 season, got 14 hits off Clay Parker, Lee Guetterman and Dale Mohoric.

Guetterman, 2-3, walked Harold Baines to open the seventh with the score tied at 5. Calderon doubled to right-center field on the next pitch and scored on Darryl Boston's single.

Brewers 7, Royals 1
Chris Bosio, 10-6, pitched a five-hitter and struck out eight. Milwaukee got 17 hits in snapping a six-game losing streak, its longest since April 1988.

Robin Yount stretched his hitting streak to 10 games and set a Brewers record with his 17th consecutive stolen base, one of five steals by Milwaukee. Jim Gantner and Greg Brock had three hits each and Gantner stole home on the front end of a delayed double steal.

Charlie Leibrandt, 5-9, gave up nine hits and four runs in 4 2-3 innings. He has won only twice in 12 starts since May 12.

Red Sox 4, Rangers 0
Mike Boddicker won his fourth straight start, combining with Rob Murphy on a five-hitter in the 93-degree heat at Arlington Stadium.

Boddicker, 8-7, allowed three hits, struck out two and walked two in 6 1-3 innings before Murphy finished for his fifth save, striking out five.

Hernandez Injured

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Keith Hernandez of the New York Mets, who re-injured his right knee sliding into home plate during Tuesday night's game against the Houston Astros, will undergo a precautionary arthrogram Thursday.

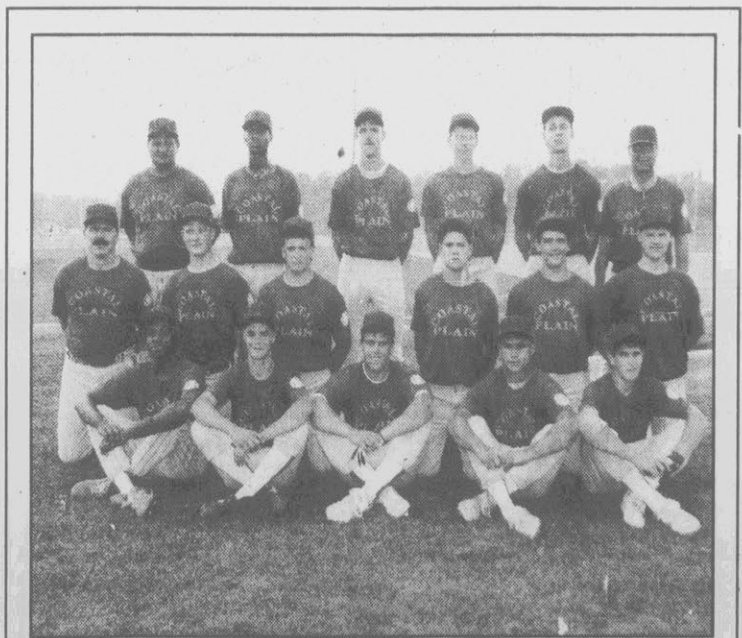

Hernandez was examined Wednesday by Dr. James Parkes, the Mets' orthopedic surgeon, after the first baseman complained of stiffness. Following the arthrogram, Parkes will make a decision on Hernandez's ability to play.

Hernandez suffered a fractured right kneecap May 17th and missed 48 games. He returned July 13th and has played in five games.

began early this week and also have him play on a team in the California Pro Summer League.

Veterans Eric Leckner, Jim Les and Jose Ortiz along with second-round pick Junie Lewis, a 6-3 guard from South Alabama, will be on the team along with a number of free agents.

"We did not have a summer team last year," Marantz said. "This year, with only two rounds in the draft, there are more summer camps. We think it's very important to have our rookies in this camp."

Some NBA teams have offered their draftees temporary pacts or insurance against injury in an effort to get them into camp while the player representative and team officials can hammer out a contract.

"I've talked to Pollak about that in the sense that we could provide him with insurance, but Pollak wasn't interested," Marantz said.

Last year's top draft pick, Leckner, a 6-11 center drafted in the 17th spot, signed just before veteran camp. Leckner signed a three-year pact for $1.1 million.

"We will sign rookies for three, four or five year contracts," Marantz said. "It depends on what position they are drafted in. The contracts at his stage have generally been somewhat shorter than contracts higher up."

In the meantime, Edwards is in Greenville, working out at the ECU Strength Center and running regularly to stay in shape.

"I just think it would be to his advantage to get in camp," Marantz said. "He'll be able to get a running start for when the veterans come. Once, veteran camp starts, it's a very fast-paced situation. They jump from item to item. It's like a merry-go-round."

 We have often seen players rolling their eyes skyward as if seeking help from the almighty. We have yet to find one recorded case of divine intervention. Therefore, we suggest bridge players rely on their own ability.

North's jump to six no trump was perhaps a little conservative in view of the five-card suit. However, with no high honor in his long suit, North discounted that asset and settled for the value raise.

West did well not to lead from his club holding, which would have given declarer the contract there and then. After a heart lead, declarer could count only 11 tricks, and the 12th could come only from spades, or an unlikely lie of the club suit. The question: Whether to play for a 3-3 drop or to take a third-round spade finesse. Mathematically, the odds slightly favor playing for a drop once both defenders have followed to two rounds of the suit.

Although it might not be obvious, as the cards lie declarer has a sure-trick play for the contract. All South has to do is count the hand. The way to get a complete picture of the distribution is to concede a club trick early.

Suppose declarer wins the first trick in dummy and immediately leads a club to the jack. Let's say West takes the queen and continues with a heart. Declarer cashes out the hearts, learning West started off with four of them. Next come three rounds of diamonds, and when West shows out, six of his cards are known. Declarer continues with the ace of clubs, and East's discard is very revealing—another five of West's cards can be counted, which leaves West with only two spades. So declarer cashes the ace and queen and, when the jack does not drop, confidently continues by taking the "marked" finesse of the ten for the fulfilling trick.

Dick Clark Takes 'Bandstand' On Tour For 35th Anniversary

By Milton Kent
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Dick Clark has no misconceptions about how the world views "American Bandstand," the vehicle that has kept his seemingly never-graying mug in the spotlight for most of the last 35 years.

"I used an analogy once in the early days where I said it was a stray dog that sort of wandered up on the doorstep and nobody paid a lot of attention to it and the family took it in and it became a part of the family," Clark said recently.

Now Clark has packed up the family mutt and taken it on a cross-country tour to celebrate the "Bandstand's" 35th anniversary, featuring the Spinners, the Guess Who, the Association and the Drifters.

And while it might seem as though everybody's favorite dance show has been around forever, Clark believes that America continues to look fondly upon the program.

"It's sort of endeared itself to millions of people, because they all grew up with it," Clark said. "It's never been held in great critical respect. It's only received one award in its life. But it's become a part of the fabric of most of us growing up."

For the uninitiated, the show that became "American Bandstand" was launched on a Philadelphia television station in September 1952. Four years later, Clark took over as the show's only host, and in 1957, "Bandstand" was introduced to a national audience on ABC, where it went to a five-day-a-week schedule before settling into a one-hour Saturday afternoon time slot.

The show remained at ABC until 1987, when the network attempted to cut the show to 30 minutes.

do respective dances of the four decades during the "Bandstand" era, and videos of the period.

In addition, Clark, who has appeared live at some of the tour stops, will host the show by way of video introductions.

In this summer of rock nostalgia, with the return of the Who, the Rolling Stones and the Doobie Brothers, among others, Clark sees the "Bandstand" tour as a way for people to get in touch with the music that touched their lives.

Downey Canceled

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SECAUCUS, N.J. — Morton Downey Jr., whose combative, ultraconservative style lifted his talk show from a New Jersey studio to nationwide syndication, announced he has harangued his last guest.

MCA Television, WWOR-TV and Quantum Media Inc., joint owners of the show, said in a statement the final episode was taped on June 30.

The companies' statement, released Wednesday, said the show would run no more original segments after Sept. 15, the end of Downey's contract with the stations carrying his show.

The show premiered in the New York area on Oct. 19, 1987 and quickly drew attention for Downey's abrasive style. The show was soon syndicated and by early 1988 was being shown in most major U.S. television markets.

Oceanographer Takes Over TV's 'Explorer'

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Underwater scientist Robert D. Ballard is becoming host of "National Geographic Explorer" on SuperStation TBS because he says the movie and television image of scientists is driving young people away from science careers.

"We're going to change the show's emphasis to more live exploration," said Ballard, the man who found the Titanic and the Bismarck and recently led an expedition to a sunken Roman ship. That effort was telecast live to several hundred thousand youngsters in 12 museums across the country.

His discovery of the Nazi battleship Bismarck, resting upright in 15,000 feet of water about 600 miles west of Brest, France, will be shown in an October episode of the weekly "Explorer" series. The fabled World War II ship was sunk in a battle with British naval forces on May 27, 1941. Ballard found the ship June 8.

"I want to motivate children and show them that science is a contact sport," said Ballard, who will become host in September. "We've created an image that scientists are nerds. And that's created a devastating effect on interest in science as a career."

"The battle for children's minds is between grades four to 12. Right now 50 percent of all the students in American colleges studying sciences are foreign students. We're now 17th in the world in science literacy, behind Spain, Hungary and Ireland and hopelessly behind Germany, Japan, England and the Scandinavian countries."

He warned that if more American students don't become interested in science the United States will slip economically, industrially and militarily.

"The image children have of scientists is that of a harebrained, forgetful wacko that they get from movies like 'Back to the Future,'" said Ballard. "Children want to fit in with their peer groups, they don't want to look like some silly guy."

Ballard is more in the mold of Indiana Jones. He has participated in or led more than 60 deep-sea expeditions. He is a senior scientist in the Ocean Engineering Department of the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution, head of the Deep Submergence Laboratory and director of the institution's Center for Marine Exploration.

The 50,000-ton Bismarck was the biggest battleship launched by a European power and was such a threat to the Allies that British Prime Minister Winston Churchill ordered an all-out effort to "sink the Bismarck."

The Bismarck sank the British battle cruiser Hood on May 24, 1941, but two days later British torpedo planes damaged the ship's steering gear and rudders. The crucial battle came the next day.

"The Germans lost their main guns and control in the battle," said Ballard. "The captain ordered the ship scuttled at 10 o'clock. She was equipped with the latest in military technology and he didn't want the ship captured."
