City Council Rezones Bells Fork, PCC Areas

By J. Ward Best
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The City Council approved rezoning requests for 655 acres, including more than 100 acres that will be rezoned for commercial development, at Thursday's meeting.

Most of the rezoning requests involve the area near Bells Fork, and won unanimous approval from the council with little or no discussion.

City Manager Greg Knowles praised the combined efforts by the developer, Bells Fork Associates, and city government to plan development of nearly 400 acres along the extended Arlington Boulevard.

The development includes an area of nearly 70 acres centering around the intersection of Fire Tower Road and Arlington Boulevard.

"This represents a significant achievement for all of us," Knowles said. "This area is primed for movement."

The rezoning of the proposed Bells Fork area increased the allowable density of the area from mostly residential and agricultural zoning (RA-20) to high density residential (R-6), office and institutional (O&I) and commercial shopping center (C-S).

Bells Fork Associates, the partnership requesting the rezonings, did not indicate any plans for the area other than establishing a central area of CS zoning with lesser density zoning surrounding the area.

Permitted uses within the O&I zoning classification include banks or savings and loan associations, churches, flower shops, office buildings and multifamily dwellings including apartments, cooperatives, condominiums and dormitories.

Permitted uses within the CS zoning classification include drugstores, pet shops, sporting goods stores, opticians, gift shops, department stores, beauty shops and banks.

Similar rezoning requests for an area near Pitt Community College drew more debate from the council. But the two requests, submitted by the Tucker Co. and Joseph D. Speight, won approval from the council.

The city planning department recommended not approving two separate requests to rezone land on both sides of N.C. 11 near PCC because of a projected increase in area traffic. The two requested rezonings total 29.6 acres.

The first request from Tucker Co. down-zoned two tracts from O&I to O&I II and from commercial highway (CH) to shopping center. The second request from Speight increased the density of O&I and RA-20 tracts to shopping center zoning.

Representatives for Tucker indicated that the owner planned to build a shopping center on the property. Speight's representatives would not say what the owner planned to build on the property, and the planning department also said the developer had not revealed his intentions.

City Council members questioned the developers about the increased traffic and the impact on the community college.

Council member Lorraine Shinn said the council's decisions were not based on concerns for the community college, but rather the best use of the land.

The Planning and Zoning Commission recommended the requests last month after similar debates about the proposal.

Council member Inez Fridley had asked half jokingly during the council's Monday workshop meeting who would shop at all the new stores.

Following the meeting, Ms. Fridley said she feared opening the area to strip development like that found along Greenville Boulevard.

"We're just going to end up with a solid mass of highway commercial," Ms. Fridley said about the area between Pitt Community College and the intersection of N.C. 11 and Greenville Boulevard. Ms. Fridley also said the rezoning decision would set a precedent for more rezoning requests.

She said the coming development would plague the area with "nightmare traffic."

The remainder of the City Council approved the two requests for rezoning over Ms. Fridley's objections.

The council also approved a rezoning request for an industrial site along the U.S. 264 bypass. The board voted to rezone 131 acres from a shopping center designation to industrial use.

The council also heard public comments supporting the move to allow city voters to decide the issue of giving the mayor a voting position on the board. Voters will decide the issue during the November elections.

Philippine Airlines plane rests on scattered debris after overshooting Manila runway

Jet Overshoots Runway, Slams Crowded Highway

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MANILA, Philippines — A Philippine Airlines plane carrying 98 people today overshot a runway, plowed into a concrete wall and bounced onto a highway, killing at least eight people on the ground, officials said.

The dead were crushed in their cars when the twin-engine BAC 1-11 jet careened onto Manila's 12-lane South Expressway, said witnesses and officials at nearby hospitals. The plane then came to rest on a railroad track.

Airline spokesman Enrique Santos said 91 people were injured, four critically. The critical injuries occurred on the ground, Santos said. Eighty-five people on the plane, including two crew members, were hurt, he said.

Santos said the plane was arriving in Manila from Zamboanga City, 540 miles southeast of the capital, when it crashed at about 3:23 p.m. (3:23 a.m. EDT).

Air traffic controllers said the pilot, Capt. Ricardo Misa, reported that visibility was poor because of heavy rain and that he could see only half the runway as he approached.

"It was raining at the time, but weather conditions were above the minimum for landing, so he was cleared to land," Santos said. "He landed and he ran out of runway."

The aircraft overshot the runway, hit the ground, crashed through a concrete highway wall and bounced across the road.

"We came down and went up again about 150 feet. Then we went down again very steeply," said passenger Beverly Spilman, a British teacher who works in Austria and is vacationing in the Philippines. "I did see we were reaching the end of the runway ... then we hit the highway, plowed through a railroad track and landed on the opposite side of the highway."

Spilman, who spoke to reporters at the Manila airport clinic, suffered minor cuts.

"We landed, three, four, five, six times on the runway. We were actually bouncing," said David Tillson, a tourist from Tacoma, Wash.

Another passenger, Roberto Mendoza, cried as he recounted in a radio interview how he thought he was going to die.

"People started shouting. We were expecting that at any moment the plane would explode," he said. "When it stopped, the windows shattered and I jumped out. I thought I landed on the wings but then I found out it was the roof of a house."

Part of the belly of the British Aircraft Corp. jet was ripped open.

Officials closed the highway to facilitate the rescue operation, which was hampered by the heavy rain and traffic jams on streets leading to the scene.

I-95 Sweep Turns Up Speeders, Few Drugs

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — Troopers in 15 East Coast states issued hundreds of traffic citations and seized stolen car parts but made few drug arrests in a crackdown along Interstate 95, one of the nation's busiest drug trafficking corridors.

In the 24-hour sweep that ended at 8 a.m. today, a Jacksonville, Fla., man was jailed on drug trafficking charges and Virginia state troopers seized 140 pounds of marijuana from one traveler.

Arrest totals were still being compiled, said Chuck Peltier, a spokesman for the Washington, D.C.-based International Association of Chiefs of Police.

The effort was called Operation CoFlaMe, representing cooperation among agencies from Florida to Maine.

In Georgia, officers arrested five people and recovered a truckload of luxury car parts at a rural weigh station. Georgia State Patrol spokesman J.D. Coleman said the truck apparently was hauling the items up the East Coast from a Florida "chop shop" where stolen cars are dismantled.

South Carolina highway patrolmen reported more than 300 traffic citations on their 200-mile stretch of I-95, said spokesman Brian Ellison.

"The message is: You better be toing the line. If you are carrying drugs, we do stop people in South Carolina for traffic violations and vehicle violations and we will check

Flameproof Old Glory?

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Now you can flameproof Old Glory. In the wake of objections to the U.S. Supreme Court's ruling that flag burning is protected under the Constitution as a freedom of speech, there have been new laws proposed, jingoistic speeches delivered and a country song written. Now Scott's Cleaners on 10th Street in Greenville will chemically treat your Stars and Stripes to see that it remains free of flames.

Scott's has placed a sign on its marquee touting the service. Mike Walsh, manager of the cleaners, said he has had the sign up about two weeks, but there have been no takers so far.

"It (the idea for the sign) happened on the spur of the moment. It seemed appropriate at the time," he said. "It was probably more of a political statement than a marketing strategy, but we can do it."

The cleaners uses a chemical that is manufactured by Du Pont and a Philadelphia chemical company named Eaton. The flags are soaked in the solution, removed and ironed.

"What it is basically is the application of a chemical to the flag. When it's impregnated into the fabric, it just doesn't support a flame," he said. "You could probably get a corner to burn, but it (the fire) just won't advance at all. It makes the flag feel a little bit heavier, but it does the job."

While capitalistic initiative is truly American and may be an example of what the flag represents to some folks, the issue of protecting Old Glory is more than a money-making idea.

Country music star Merle Haggard said in a television interview this week he has recorded a new song protesting flag burning, called "Me and Crippled Soldiers," and he will donate the profits to charity. Walsh had similar feelings about cashing in on public outcry against the court ruling, and he said the flameproofing at Scott's is free.

"We just don't charge for Old Glory," he said.

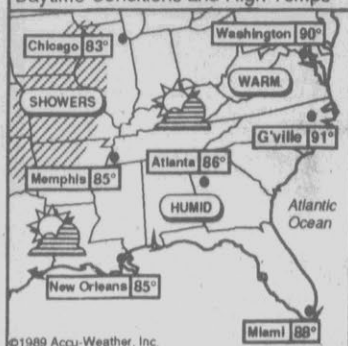

Mike Sutton, owner of Home Dry Cleaners on Dickinson Avenue, said his cleaners sometimes treats draperies for residents or businesses to make the material flame-retardant. But he said no customers have asked about treating flags.

He said the treatment process works best on cotton fabrics, and it is least effective on nylon or rayon items. He said the term "flame-proofing" is technically incorrect because the treatment only makes fabric "flame retardant" at best.

"If you take a match and strike it and put it against the garment, it'll catch on fire. But when you take the match away, it'll go out," Sutton said.

PCC Wants Separate Vote On Bonds For Buildings

By Amy Gavigan
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt Community College trustees recommended Thursday's that a bond referendum requesting funds for additional buildings be held as soon as possible, but not at the same time as the primary or general elections.

The bond referendum would not be as effective if it were held at the same time other elections were involved and could require the candidates to take sides, said board member Vernon White. This should be a non-partisan issue, he said.

County Commissioners are scheduled to decide Monday on the time of the referendum and the amount to be allocated for expansion of PCC campus.

The PCC board originally requested a $22 million bond referendum for building expansion. PCC President Charles Russell, in talking with the county commissioners recently, said he pushed for a $15 million minimum.

The commissioners told the board of trustees that it should consider an additional monetary amount to cover land expansion.

According to the executive committee report presented by Chairman Kay Whichard, PCC's enrollment 25 years from now is expected to be twice the current figure, based on an enrollment projection of 3 percent increase per year.

Additional land for further expansion of the campus is needed to accommodate the projected enrollment, according to the report.

The board of trustees approved a motion recommending that, if the commissioners do not feel that adequate funds for future land expansion can be appropriated from general tax revenues, then approximately $2 million should be added to the college's bond request.

Joan Warren, personnel committee chairman, reported the panel's approval of Alan Edwards as security chief succeeding Earl Keel, who retires Aug. 1.

According to a report delivered by Mrs. Warren, Edwards is certified by the North Carolina Judicial Standards and Training Commission as a law enforcement officer for the state of North Carolina. A Pitt Sheriff's Department employee, he meets the North Carolina Sheriffs' Standards and Training Commission Certification. Edward has worked for the department since July 1983.

Wachovia, Yale Pledge $25,000 Each To Club

By Jerry F. ...
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Contributions of $25,000 each have been pledged by Wachovia Bank and Trust Co. and Yale Materials Handling Corp. to the ongoing fund-raising campaign of the Pitt County Boys Club.

"These two most welcome and significant contributions have put us well on the road to an early completion of reaching our goal of raising $900,000," said Burney Warren, co-chairman of the fund drive.

"At this time we have pledges amounting to $750,000," said Spence Cosby, co-chairman.

John J. West, Greenville city executive for Wachovia, said, "Wachovia is pleased to participate in the fund drive. All of us realize the importance of this club to Pitt County overall. We are delighted to be able to be part of the efforts to have a boys and girls club in Pitt County in the near future."

West is also a member of the club's board of directors.

Frank G. Muller, Yale's vice president of manufacturing, said Yale "is pleased to invest in the future by supporting the capital campaign of the Boys and Girls Club of Pitt County with our pledge."

"I personally share in the enthusiasm being shown for this fine organization," Muller said.

Cosby enumerated the general breakdown of contributions in the campaign to date. "The biggest portion of the $750,000 in pledges has come from large industries in the area through the major gifts sector. The board of directors of the Pitt County Boys Club has pledged $90,000, individuals and small businesses have pledged $65,000, and the tally for churches and civic clubs is $50,000."

Warren said, "Due to the fine response we have had from the community, we feel we will be capable of ending the drive about the end of this month."

"I do want to ask those who have made tentative pledges to try to get their pledge cards in as soon as possible so that we can wrap up the campaign."

The proposed facility, to be located on state road 1708 a short distance beyond Pitt Community College, will serve both boys and girls in Pitt County. Construction is due to begin in the fall of 1990, with the facility to be ready for occupancy by December 1991.

Cosby said that since the initial announcement of plans for a larger facility, "the number of applicants on the waiting list to become members is steadily growing. We now have 400 on our waiting list."

States Agree On Waste Deadline

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — Representatives from eight Southeastern states agreed Thursday to come up with a draft regional plan by the end of August to dispose of hazardous wastes.

The private meeting at the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's regional headquarters involved North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Kentucky, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi and Alabama. Hagan Thompson, an EPA spokesman in Atlanta, said the plan would enable each state to meet an EPA mandate that they develop a way to deal with all hazardous waste generated inside their borders for the next 20 years.

The EPA has imposed an Oct. 17 deadline for each state to certify it has the capacity to deal with the wastes, but treatment facilities can be located in other states.

"We're trying to encourage a regional approach because it would be less expensive and spread the responsibility," Thompson said.

The plan, Thompson said, would dole out various kinds of waste-treatment facilities — incinerators, landfills and solid treatment plants — among the states.

None of the facilities would involve radioactive waste, he said, but would concern chemical wastes.

Linda W. Little, executive director of the North Carolina Governor's Waste Management Board, said the kinds of facilities that could go in each state would be decided at a later meeting.

Wedding Arrest

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A 25-year-old man tied the knot and then found himself in handcuffs when police arrested him for murder moments after he recited his vows.

The Philippines Journal reported Thursday that five policemen on Sunday went to the town of Caoyan, 200 miles north of Manila, in search of Amante Belen, a former security guard sought in the April slaying of a factory engineer.

When police arrived, they learned Belen was getting married that day, the paper said. The police went to the local church and found the ceremony in progress.

Police waited patiently until the service was over. After the priest pronounced the couple husband and wife, police Sgt. Reynaldo Enrico walked down the aisle and handcuffed the groom, the paper said.

Environmentalists Attack Bush Clean-Air Bill

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush's clean-air bill drew criticism today from a key senator and environmentalists because it would ease an early draft's requirements for reducing motor vehicle pollution and provide wide government latitude to meet the concerns of industry.

Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., chief Senate sponsor of clean-air legislation, said the final language of Bush's bill "will significantly tarnish his image to be the environmental president."

"The president stepped up to the problem, blinked and stepped back," Baucus said, contending the bill would actually increase motor vehicle emissions, allow cities too much time to clean their air and give too much weight to cost in toxic chemical cleanup.

Bush, at a White House photo session with members of Congress, was asked by a reporter about criticisms of the legislation. The president, who generally refuses to answer at such sessions, ignored the question, smiling as if he had not heard it.

An Environmental Protection Agency summary of the legislation was given to members of Congress Thursday and made available by lawmakers to reporters. The summary showed the final version, to be sent to Congress today, was changed from a preliminary draft that was written June 30.

The new language, compared to the earlier draft, would push back new emissions standards for cars, trucks and buses, and would give the EPA administrator discretion to delay new regulations even further.

Other provisions of the final bill, some known previously, would give the administrator, local governments and industry flexibility in taking measures to reduce ozone pollution, acid rain and airborne toxic chemicals. The EPA chief could specifically address industry's economic costs in making key decisions.

Richard Ayres, head of a coalition of all major environmental groups, said the legislation's flexibility was a prescription for "chicanery and fraud" by industry. He said acid rain components would be reduced less than promised, and said giving weight to economic concerns would reduce the effectiveness of provisions to control toxic emissions.

But EPA Administrator William Reilly, who would get to make many key decisions under the legislation, called the bill "faithful in every respect to the spirit and letter of the promises he (Bush) made" to clean the nation's air.

"There are a lot of tough things in the bill," said an EPA official who, speaking on condition of anonymity, contended environmentalists were focusing on "relatively minor concerns."

Rep. Henry Waxman, chairman of the House Energy and Commerce environment subcommittee, scheduled the first hearing on the Bush bill for Monday.

He called the final language "weaker than last month's draft, which was far weaker than the president's promises."

"It undercuts the clean fuel program, pushes back compliance deadlines and loosens emissions standards. The bill actually appears to allow emissions from cars and trucks to increase from today's levels," Waxman said.

According to the summary, new buses operated in cities with more than 1 million population would be required to use clean-burning fuel. The June 30 draft would have imposed the requirement on all cities of 250,000 or more.

While the bus program would be phased in over the 1991 through 1994 model years, the EPA administrator would have the authority to delay the plan for two years for economic reasons.

The final language also would allow the administrator, for economic reasons, to revise and postpone for two years a clean-fuel program for cars — a cornerstone of the Bush program.

The bill would establish a schedule requiring sale of clean-fuel cars, beginning in the 1995 model year, in the most heavily polluted cities. One million of these cars would be sold in each of the model years 1997 through 2004.

The deadline for all cars to meet new emissions standards for hydrocarbons and nitrogen oxides was pushed back — from the 1994 model year in the previous draft to the 1995 models in the final version.

The June 30 draft also had tougher emissions standards for light and heavy trucks, and the deadline for meeting the new requirements was pushed back for the light trucks — such as pickups — from 1993 to a phased-in period ending with 1995 models.

Criminal penalties against auto makers, for violating the anti-pollution emission standards, were in the draft bill but not in the new version.

Other provisions in the final bill would:

—Allow the EPA administrator discretion to override deadlines for ozone cleanup in cities, including doubling the cleanup time from 10 to 20 years. But such cities would have to show steady progress over the longer period of time after receiving the extension.

—Require a 10-million-ton reduction from 1980 levels of sulfur dioxide, a key ingredient of acid rain. Nitrogen oxide, the other key ingredient, would be reduced by 2 million tons from the levels that would have been reached by the year 2000.

Environmentalists argued the nitrogen oxide figure is not really a reduction, just a smaller growth rate. And they pointed out the sulfur dioxide reduction would be only 9 million tons since the administration is counting a 1 million ton reduction already achieved.

—Permit auto makers to average the emissions of their cars to achieve new anti-pollution standards, a tactic that environmentalists said would not bring about a reduction. The EPA contended it would write regulations to make the program work effectively.

—Permit auto and petroleum companies to propose alternative ways to reduce pollution, a plan Ayres said would be "a floating crap game" that would lead to delay. EPA officials said they would establish tough regulations to prevent industry from stretching deadlines set by the agency.

—Require maximum available control technology for toxic emissions, but require that cost, the feasibility of installing the technology and energy requirements be taken into account. Environmentalists said these considerations negated the technology standards, but the EPA disagreed.

Ms. Nobles said 20 PCC vocational and technical programs will display photos, promotional materials and applications. The exhibit is designed to promote vocational and technical recruitment immediately before the fall quarter.

According to Ms. Nobles' report, Continuing Education and Adult Basic Education will also exhibit and will host performances by the college's visiting artist at various times during the weekend.

Other business on Thursday's agenda included discussion of a new trustee bill recently passed by the General Assembly which said four-year terms for trustees for community colleges will remain. The possibility of a six-year term had been brought before the General Assembly.

The bill also extended the term of office one year for those trustees appointed in 1981 and 1987 to ensure proper rotation.

Board members whose terms have been extended include Ed Davenport, Henry Leslie, Raymond Reddick and A.B. Whitley.

W.F. Tyson was reappointed to the board by the county commissioners.

The board welcomed new member James Wynne, appointed by the Pitt County Board of Education. Wynne is an attorney with Fitch, Wynne and Associates and is filling the position held by Joe Taft, whose term ended June 30.

Focus Panel Completes Hearings

The last of four public meetings held this week by Focus 2007, a strategic planning group for Pitt County, prompted some input from citizens on several issues.

Approximately 15 area citizens at Thursday's meeting in the Pitt County Office Building heard strategy team leaders present goals and objectives on issues such as transportation, government services, education, crime and substance abuse, transportation, recreational and cultural activities, economic development and research and development.

Dr. Roger Sharpe, a faculty member at East Carolina University, told the group that a primary concern of the committee should be tree management and preservation of trees and green space.

Dr. Charles Coble, education team leader, suggested that his planning group consider some type of land acquisition plan for parks and wilderness areas.

Bernadine Wardkallon of Fountain said she was concerned with the lack of attention given to providing some types of benefits for part-time and seasonal farm laborers, particularly Hispanics.

Martha Coffman of Greenville, addressing the education strategy team, said she felt all teachers should be trained to deal with learning-disabled students in classes.

Focus 2007 plans to coordinate public and private efforts and focus on pursuing excellence in education, economic development and cultural activities to establish Pitt County as a metropolitan center.

In Massachusetts, about 10 people were arrested on drug charges Thursday, State Trooper Francis Poiterast said.

In Rhode Island, three people were arrested on charges of possession of cocaine with intent to distribute, one just on possession and one trucker on a charge of possession of a sawed-off shotgun, said Lt. Norman Pineau.

Pineau said 1,148 people were stopped and 213 were issued traffic citations, including 43 for speeding.

At least 70 traffic citations were issued in Pennsylvania on Thursday. There were no drug arrests or seizures of contraband or weapons, said Pennsylvania trooper Roger Hoffman.

Truckers who had been stopped in several states were complaining by the time they reached Pennsylvania, Hoffman said.

"We had one trucker stopped, and he was already topped in North Carolina and Virginia before we stopped him," Hoffman said. "He said, 'Please, how many times I got to get stopped today?'"

Florida Highway Patrol Trooper Chris Roper said he stopped Wright for failing to drive within a single lane on the interstate. Wright consented to have the car searched and a dog sniffed cocaine, police said.

Shamir Meeting With PLO To Promote Peace Plan

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir has met twice in the last two weeks with Palestinians from the occupied territories in an effort to promote his peace plan, a spokesman said today.

Shamir's rival in the right-wing Likud bloc, Trade Minister Ariel Sharon, claimed he had blocked PLO approval of the plan.

Shamir spokesman Yossi Ahimeir confirmed Israeli news reports that since Sharon pushed through restrictions on the plan two weeks ago, the prime minister had met twice with leading Palestinians to discuss it. He gave no details on the meetings or the Palestinian participants.

The plan calls for elections in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip of Palestinian representatives to negotiate an autonomy plan for the territories. Later, negotiations would be held on the final status of the territories.

Sharon succeeded in imposing limitations that would postpone any elections until the Palestinian uprising ends and would reject creation of a Palestinian state in the occupied lands.

The Jerusalem Post reported today that before the restrictions were added, the Palestine Liberation Organization was about to accept the election under certain conditions. It did not spell out those conditions.

It said the PLO had put together a delegation, including four PLO members, to work out details of the elections and had proposed Israeli officials meet with the delegation. The report did not say if the meeting was one of the conditions for acceptance.

Israel refuses to talk with the PLO, which it considers a terrorist organization.

Sharon was quoted in the Yediot newspaper as saying his move blocked PLO acceptance. A spokesman for Sharon, Moshe Behegaon, agreed.

"If it were not because of the limitations of the Likud, it seems that Arafat would have accepted the elections plan," Behegaon said today. "Sharon says the limitations are like a stone caught the wheel of a cart about to veer out of control."

There have been newspaper reports that Shamir intends to dismiss Sharon from the government at a Cabinet meeting Sunday because of the split on the election issue. Shamir's spokesman denied this.

A Tidier House

Adjustment Means Broader System

When an elected board makes appointments to a public commission, those decisions should be the consensus of the entire board, not the choice of just one of its members. That's sound government with a broad scope.

Greenville's City Council moved closer to that end this week when it agreed to discuss proposed appointments at Monday meetings but postpone decision-making until Thursdays. That change in procedure gives each member time to do research into the proposals and carefully consider each person.

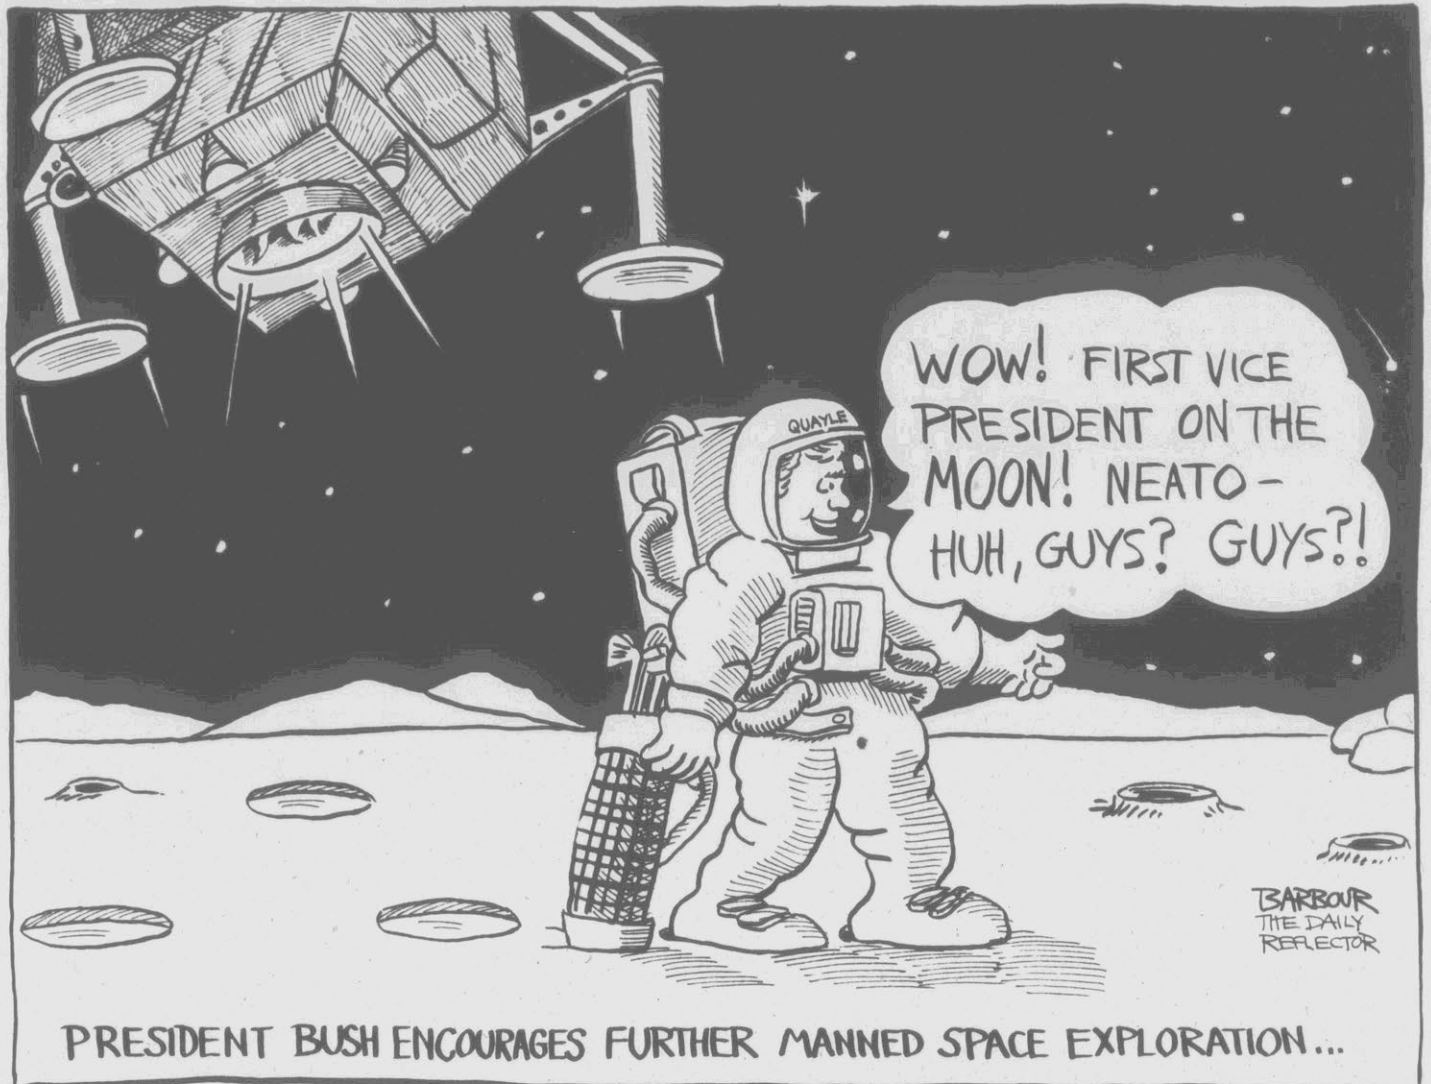

It encourages those suggesting appointments not to make surprise proposals. On the other hand, a little breathing room prevents council members from rubberstamping such surprise appointments.

The council assigns one of its members as a liaison for public commissions, and that liaison is charged with proposing appointment to that commission. The council, however, must approve those appointments. Before the new housekeeping rules, the council received, discussed and approved those proposals at the same meeting.

But at a June 9 meeting, sparks flew when council member Lorraine Shinn made some recommendations to the Planning & Zoning Commission other members thought unsuitable. Shinn accused her fellow officials of blackballing her choices and her peers accused her of trying to load P&Z with pro-development appointments, then attempting to ramrod those choices through quickly. The appointments were approved, but it became apparent the system failed.

When it comes to appointments to public commissions, neither surprises nor individual choices provide proper membership. The city council as a whole should reach a decision on who serves on these boards. While it is reasonable to designate one council member to work carefully with a particular commission, especially if that person has expertise in an area — that liaison should not dictate appointments. Instead, that person should make informed recommendations. The council should have adequate time to explore those proposals and object or concur. Then, the appointment should be formalized by the board as a whole and it should reflect unified broad thinking. That's good government.

The City Council's adjustment is in line with this policy. It may sound like a small change, but it makes for a tidier house.

PRESIDENT BUSH ENCOURAGES FURTHER MANNED SPACE EXPLORATION...

Devising More Accurate Thermometers

WASHINGTON — What's wrong with teaching?

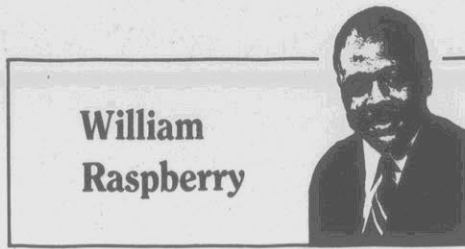

The pay is too low; too few of the brightest college students are attracted to the field; too many of those who are lack the ability to inspire their students. There are too few rewards for excellent teachers; the proportion of minority teachers is shrinking as the proportion of minority students is increasing.

What should we do about it? The National Board for Professional Teaching Standards (NBPTS) has come up with an answer that may not merit the enthusiasm it is likely to provoke. The 64-member board, created by the Carnegie Forum on Education and the Economy in the wake of its 1986 report on public schools, is calling for national certification for outstanding teachers as a way of "ensuring educational excellence in elementary and secondary education."

The certification, which would be an addition to the minimum standards for state licensure, would focus on "effectiveness" — classroom results — not such ticket-punching procedures as taking the right courses.

And what would it do? The optimistic — it is tempting to say "pie in the sky" — expectation of the NBPTS is that it would "increase the supply of high-quality entrants into the profession, with special emphasis on minorities," help to provide a better atmosphere for learning, and create a "new image for teachers in this country."

It might also increase pay for the best teachers, but that would be up to local school officials. "We're not employers," said James A. Kelly, president and chief executive of the board. What the NBPTS has in mind is to define the "knowledge, skill and dispositions" required for success in as many as 29 teaching specialties — early childhood education, elementary-school science, high-school math, and so on — and to award national certification to those who meet the yet-to-be-devised standards.

William Raspberry

The board, whose members include corporate executives, elected officials, teachers' union officials and — the majority — teachers, envisions all sorts of wonderful things flowing from certification.

"In view of their achievement," says Kelly, "board-certified teachers might be asked to assume the sort of increased responsibility that adds stimulation to the professional life of a teacher." Or as board member Susan Adler Kaplan, a Providence English teacher says, a board-certified teacher "may become a mentor, may provide leadership for her colleagues by demonstrating new teaching methods, evaluating the latest instructional materials, or organizing instruction....In short, she will have varied opportunities as a teacher."

But what has board certification got to do with it? Principals know already who their best teachers are, and if they want to use them to strengthen the weaker teachers, what's stopping them? Can it be that principals who are reluctant to select their best teachers and employ them as mentors would overcome that reluctance if the selections were made by a national board?

Moreover, why would outstanding teachers want the additional burden of training their colleagues unless it entailed additional compensation? And additional compensation raises the specter of "merit pay" that teachers and their unions have rejected for decades.

The results envisioned by the NBPTS make a lot of sense: teachers, led by their most effective peers, organizing instruction, choosing textbooks, setting curricula and in general exercising unaccustomed autonomy.

But it's hard to see how board certification would necessarily produce those results — or how it would inspire bright college students to switch their majors to education, or increase the number of minorities entering the field.

Certification by a national board certainly seems preferable to the minimum-competency tests a majority of the states now use.

But would it really enhance the skills of teachers? The problems cited by the NBPTS are the critical problems — no doubt about it. But the certification remedy sounds like an effort to cure chills and fevers by devising more accurate thermometers and propounding new standards for bodily temperatures.

A Film About Gender, Not Race

Money Issue

Planes Can't Be Built On Deficit

The Stealth bomber had a successful first flight, a fact which cheered its supporters and brought new expressions of concern about costs from Congress.

The mysterious bat-like bomber took its maiden flight from Edwards Air Force Base in California. The sleek, dark plane is designed to sneak in under enemy radar and drop its deadly cargo without ever being detected.

Arguments for its further development revolve around its deterrent effect and the fact that a force of such bombers gives the United States an extra card in negotiations for arms reduction. They are valid and persuasive arguments.

The cost, however, is staggering. Each of the B-2 bombers is expected to run to $500 million with a full fleet costing over $60 billion. Of course there is no way to make defense spending cost efficient. The cost will all go for nothing if the expensive military equipment is never used, which is its purpose for being in the first place.

On the other hand, at some point even defense spending has to be weighed against the government's ability to pay. At present the government's paying ability is miserable, indeed.

Our annual federal deficit continues and the national debt mounts ever higher. It is a rocky road to national financial disaster — and that is seldom if ever talked about by either President George Bush or Congress or Senate.

It's difficult to argue that the Stealth bomber is not needed in our defense weaponry. No nation knows what is needed until the moment of danger arrives. Then it is too late to prepare.

Before Congress approves the administration's plans for such enormous spending, however, it should hear from the president some plans for producing the revenues to offset its cost. Perhaps the United States should build the fleet of B-2's, but the planes cannot be built with federal money that doesn't exist.

BOSTON — I went to Bedford-Stuyvesant the other night. The stylized Bed-Stuy seen through the aggressive fish-eyed camera lens of Spike Lee. The low-budget setting for the high-volume movie: "Do The Right Thing."

I'd seen the reviews. The black reviewer who called it "Afro-fascist," the white reviewers who'd called it, in turn, "false and pernicious," "brilliant," "irresponsible."

'Maybe it's because violence is noisier and grabs attention. Maybe it's because violence is threatening. The world isn't afraid of women.'

I'd heard about the controversy as well. The film opens with near-folksy parade of characters in a simmering urban neighborhood. But by the end of the long, hot day, a black man has been killed by police and a white-owned pizza parlor has been burned out by a race riot.

As a closing amen, the words of Martin Luther King run across the screen saying violence is senseless. They are followed by the ominous epitaph of Malcom X saying violence in self-defense is intelligence.

In the big-city symposia and big-media debates, from The New York Times to "Nightline," the film has been debated as if it were a player in deteriorating race relations. Is Spike Lee justifying violence? Will "Do the Right Thing" incite to riot?

So I was prepared to be on new film turf, to be provoked, to watch the scenes roll across Bed-Stuy toward a climax of conflict. I was prepared for film about race.

But I was less prepared for a film about gender. The much-heralded and masterfully made story of racial conflict is about black and white... men. This movie about finding and declaring, staking out manhood against great odds, comes down to violence between men.

Spike Lee, a strikingly original talent, put an old male frame around the topic of race and few even noticed the familiarity of that theme. Are we so accustomed to arguments about violence — the nature of it, the value of it, the inevitability of it — taking place in an all-male setting?

Does it go without saying that most discussions about violence are about men? Or does it just go unsaid?

The three visible women in this movie are types, if not stereotypes: A mother-figure, a sister, a welfare-mother-girlfriend. Not one has a caring permanent man in her life. All three try to whip their males into connection, into responsibility. They are not harmless or brainless. Their weapon is the tongue-lashing.

But these women don't get involved in the battles of will that escalate into physical violence one hot cinematic summer night. The one female bit player and the only woman caught in the action itself screams hopelessly at the rioters to stop. She too goes unheard.

Indeed when Spike Lee, playing Mookie, breaks the glass window of the pizza parlor, beginning the riot he performs a rite of passage in front of men. There is no woman to confirm or deny that image of manhood.

Where is the African-American woman's voice in this cultural take on violence?

I don't mean to suggest that sisterhood is always peaceful, between races or genders. But for the most part, women don't have trouble deciding whether physical violence is senseless or intelligent.

When as reporter or researcher you ask the witnesses of a murder or riot to tell you about it, men are more likely to tell you how it got out of hand, how it should have been stopped.

Perhaps that's because women are often victims of one kind or another. They may be perpetrators as well, but for the most part they suffer the losses. Murder may be the greatest cause of death among young African-American men. But women are the mourners, the mothers, the sisters, the wives.

So watching the last scenes of bru-talities and then of burning, I wondered about the muffled sound of women. Maybe it's because violence is noisier and grabs attention. Maybe it's because violence is threatening. The world isn't afraid of women.

But when the academics and bureaucrats turn to black women, they like to talk about "matriarchy." They often choose to examine women for symptoms of the "pathology of the black family."

At times they make it sound as if motherhood were a social disease and African-American women too powerful. Instead, it's the relative powerlessness of women — the sheer difficulty in making their voices and values heard — that makes it harder and harder to "do the right thing."

Salutes

A New Forum For Opinion Readers

Do you know someone who's done a good deed or an outstanding job and should be recognized? Is there a person or an organization in your community that deserves a public back pat?

Tell The Daily Reflector about it in 150 words or less and we'll publish it in "Salutes," a new forum for readers of the Opinion page. The column will begin Aug. 4 and will appear on Fridays. It will allow readers to recognize extraordinary efforts by individuals or community organizations. The rules for this new forum are simple:

Submissions to Salutes should consist of no more than 150 words and should spotlight a good deed or job that deserves community note. Longer letters will be cut. Signatures, phone numbers and addresses should accompany all letters.

Space will not allow every letter to be published but all submissions meeting these guidelines will be considered.

Let the newspaper know about good things in your community by writing to Salutes, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27835.

Taxing Sin

Paul
O'Connor

Analysis

RALEIGH — Budweiser sells beer with the jingle "This Bud's For You." In North Carolina, a more accurate jingle might be "This Bud's For You, and for the taxman."

A proposal from the House finance leadership last week would raise the tax on a can of beer by another one cent, that proposal says a lot about the state's political system, and about legislative candor.

According to a brochure distributed by the N.C. Beer Wholesalers Association, the state collects $63 million and the federal government another $35 million, from excise taxes on beer sold in North Carolina. The state collects another $12 million in sales taxes on that beer. In all, that's $110 million a year in taxes on beer sold in North Carolina, or 20 percent of the purchase price being tax. North Carolina currently has the sixth highest beer tax in the nation.

Why propose to raise the tax even more? There are two obvious reasons. First, drinking beer is a sin to our right-minded and upstanding legislators, most of whom get their beer, wine and mixed drinks free every night at receptions. When they are there, they are taxing sin.

Second, taxing beer is easy because excise taxes are hidden axes. The beer companies, for some foolish reason, do not print on the side of a can that the price of this beer is one-fifth tax.

So the next time you pop a cold one, remember that you're contributing generously to the state treasury.

•A press release from the N.C. Civil Liberties Union stressed the spelling of its new president's name as "Micheal," not "Michael," Moore.

Who were the first folks to print Mr. Moore's first name incorrectly? On the masthead of the stationery used for the press release, his first name is spelled Michael.

•From the Wrong Word Department. In the Judiciary committee, Rep. Beverly Perdue, D-Craven, was arguing for a 6-year gubernatorial term. "I think we ought to move away from secession and go to a 6-year term." She probably meant "secession," as in two consecutive terms. North Carolina hasn't tried "secession" since 1861.

•Tom Gilmore of Julian argued to the same committee that it ought not put 4-year legislative terms on the ballot. Gilmore led the 1982 effort that defeated such a constitutional amendment and, in 1984, he ran fourth in the Democratic gubernatorial primary. As Gilmore droned on, Rep. Narvel Jim Crawford, D-Buncombe, quipped to reporters, "Didn't he use this as a springboard for his resounding defeat for governor?"

•Rep. Art Pope, R-Wake, has been unusually outspoken legislative freshman. In the same committee, his outspokenness led to a putdown suitable for a college freshman.

N.C. State political scientist Abe Holtzman was speaking on the gubernatorial veto when Pope contended that the nation's founding fathers had replaced the parliamentary government with one of checks and balances.

Holtzman shook his head, saying Pope wasn't right. But Pope, a lawyer, persisted, trying to make his case. To which Holtzman replied, "I hate to disagree with you, but as a teacher, I'm telling you you're wrong."

The audience gasped — and laughed out loud — at such an unusually stern rebuke of a legislator. But Pope was undaunted. He asked another question and made an important motion a few moments later.

Moderates Save Jaruzelski

A.D.
Horne

WARSAW — Moderates within Poland's Solidarity opposition were responsible for saving Communist leader Wojciech Jaruzelski from humiliation and Poland from a prolonged government crisis through parliamentary maneuvers that led to Jaruzelski's hairbreadth election as Poland's president Wednesday night.

Voting records made available by Solidarity sources showed that seven opposition moderates, including Senate Speaker Andrzej Stelmachowski, a prominent law professor, deliberately cast invalid ballots. In addition, 11 other Solidarity legislators were absent for the vote. Those actions, which came after Solidarity caucus leaders had estimated at least 20 defections from the 299-seat Communist coalition, taken together had the effect of lowering the number of votes Jaruzelski needed to win from 281 to 270 — which turned out to be exactly the number he received.

In fact, an elderly scientist from the northwestern Suwalki region elected to the senate on the Solidarity ticket voted for Jaruzelski, and one Communist deputy, elected last month with Solidarity support, actually voted against him. To win, Jaruzelski had to receive more than half the valid ballots cast.

In a caucus Thursday morning, a number of Solidarity radicals expressed bitterness over their colleagues' actions, which Stelmachowski and his allies defended as necessary to honor commitments made in the April agreements that legalized Solidarity and led to the June elections that brought Solidarity into the parliament.

For the radicals, Solidarity's overwhelming victory in those elections, despite an overall allocation of parliamentary seats that guaranteed the Communist coalition 65 percent of the lower house, or Sejm, changed everything. If they couldn't make Solidarity chairman Lech Walesa Poland's new president, these legislators argued in a series of hours-long caucuses, they should at least bargain with the Communists for some share of power.

However, the Solidarity caucus had voted earlier this week to let its members make their own decisions on the presidential balloting. In the end, that decision, widely supported across Solidarity's spectrum, allowed moderates to come to the rescue of both Jaruzelski and the political reforms outlined in the "round-table" agreements.

The opposition's impassioned debates before and after the presidential vote raised the likelihood, long predicted even by Walesa, of eventual splits within Solidarity, which is a loose coalition of union activists, Catholic intellectuals, longtime dissidents, private farmers, environmentalists and others opposed to Communist rule.

On the government side, there are even stronger signs of disarray, both within the Communist Party and among its smaller coalition partners, all of whom were shaken by their sweeping rejection at the polls in June.

Next week, the Communist Central Committee is scheduled to meet for the long-delayed task of assigning the blame for the party's election failure. One rumored candidate for the scapegoat role is Jaruzelski's Politburo deputy and political adviser, Jozef Czyrek. Another is Janusz Reykowski, the party's chief political negotiator in the round-table talks. A third is Prime Minister Mieczyslaw Rakowski, who is considered unlikely to form Poland's next government.

The party leaders must also find a new first secretary to replace Jaruzelski, who agreed to give up the post to assure his election as president. While the party post will no longer be the power center it was under Jaruzelski, the committee's choice will be watched closely for signs of an upcoming power struggle between Jaruzelski's reform wing and a conservative opposition whose current leadership is still unclear. For the Communists' coalition allies, the June election returns were a signal to scramble for cover. In his speech before the presidential balloting, Peasants' party floor leader Alexander Bentkowski invoked the name of the leader of Poland's London-based government-in-exile during World War II, Stanislaw Mikolajczyk. The speech recalled that the Polish Peasant Party Mikolajczyk led into the 1947 elections which the Communists rigged had been the strongest in Poland. Similarly, the Democratic Party floor leader, Jan Jankowski, declared that his party's caucus had endorsed Jaruzelski only after extracting a series of policy promises from him.

Hard To Meet Demands

Ruth

WASHINGTON — President Bush went to Eastern and Western Europe with an open checkbook, but not with carte blanche to accommodate the many countries and causes juggling at his sleeve.

In fact, he left disappointed people everywhere — in Warsaw, at the headquarters of the Solidarity trade union in Gdansk, at the seven-nation economic summit in Paris, and even in the Dutch capital of The Hague.

"Everybody wants the United States to pick up the check for everything," Bush grumbled as he returned home Tuesday from the 10,000-mile journey.

He said a group of Dutch legislators he met with wanted U.S. funding for international environmental cleanup programs. They all assume "we are rolling in money," and at the same time foreign leaders are asking the United States to balance its budget, he said.

"They understand we are not rolling in money because of our deficit," he said, returning home only hours after his administration issued its semi-annual economic prediction forecasting slower growth and higher interest rates than earlier projections.

However, it said the federal budget deficit will be lower this year than was expected — $148.3 billion, down sharply from the $164 billion predicted in February.

From the start, the administration ought to play down hopes of U.S. influence in Europe.

"This is really not a trip to bestow economic largess," Secretary of State James A. Baker III said on Bush's first day in Poland.

In fact, the aid package Bush unveiled in the Polish parliament was a drop in the bucket of Poland's urgent needs.

Bush promised to ask Congress for $100 million to help private entrepreneurs and $15 million to fight pollution in the city of Krakow.

He also pledged to ask U.S. allies to increase their aid to Poland — which he did later that week in Paris — and to encourage the World Bank to provide $325 million in loans for Polish agriculture and industry.

But the Polish government wrote to the seven-nation Paris summit, asking for $4.3 billion in loans and debt relief.

In the Baltic Sea port of Gdansk, Solidarity chief Lech Walesa invited the Bushes to his home for lunch — and asked for $10 billion to help Poland. The next day, the Solidarity daily newspaper said Bush's gift "disappointed many people" although it praised the warm intentions it reflected.

In Hungary, Bush promised $25 million to encourage private enterprise and 60 American Peace Corps volunteers to teach English.

On to Paris, where Bush encountered an embarrassing situation: leaders of some two dozen developing nations were invited by left-leaning French President Francois Mitterrand to participate in the bicentennial parties of the French Revolution and to mingle with their richer counterparts.

The Third World group called for an urgent dialogue between developed and developing nations to discuss economic and environmental programs. But the United States and England rebuffed the suggestion, and Mitterrand promised to support it — at a later date.

PTL Trial

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A former PTL aide testified in his tax-evasion trial that Jim Bakker enticed him back to the ministry with a pledge that PTL would pay all of his travel and vacation costs.

David Taggart testified Thursday that he recalled telling Bakker, "I want access to the same resources that you have. But I also want to control my money. I don't want a house or a car to be given to me."

Taggart and his brother, James, are on trial for allegedly evading $525,000 in federal income taxes. Prosecutors contend the two used nearly $1.2 million in PTL money for their personal expenses during a four-year period. The defense rested its case Thursday and U.S. District Judge Robert Potter indicated the prosecution would call rebuttal witnesses today.

David Taggart said Bakker enticed him to return to PTL after a six-month absence.

Candidates

LENOIR, N.C. (AP) — The director of a statewide environmental group says he believes Caldwell County could be "particularly vulnerable" in getting "stuck" with nuclear waste.

Lou Zeller, director of the Blue Ridge Environmental Defense Fund, said he is concerned over certain characteristics of Caldwell, Catawba and Burke counties that he feels make those counties choice candidates for the low-level nuclear site.

About 95 percent of the radioactive waste will come from power companies. It can range from highly radioactive liquids to hospital aprons contaminated with radioactivity.

Caldwell County, and other surrounding counties, have areas that have been identified as potential sites. Once the plant is built, it will take radioactive waste from industries in the eight-state region for the next 20 years.

Jumper Survives

THOMASVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A High Point man jumped from the truck tractor cab he was driving in Thomasville Wednesday as a train bore down on the cab.

Larry Ray Duncan was not injured, said Thomasville Fire Chief C.R. Cranford. No one on the train was injured.

The truck cab, owned by Murrows Transfer Co., locked its rear wheels as Duncan attempted to drive it out of the crossing, police said. Traffic forced Duncan to stop in the crossing.

He jumped from the cab as the Norfolk Southern diesel engine approached. The train struck the cab, spinning it into a nearby power pole. The cab had damages estimated to be $12,000.

No charges were filed.

Suspect Arrested

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A man who has eluded arrest since he was charged in a 1981 killing in Winston-Salem was arrested in Florida Wednesday after SWAT teams surrounded his house to keep him from fleeing into a swamp.

As John P. Jewell, 33, was surrounded at his house in a rural section of northern Jacksonville, a helicopter hovered overhead in case he tried to run, said Special Agent Mike Bettis of the Florida Department of Law Enforcement.

In December 1981, Winston-Salem police charged Jewell with first-degree murder in the Nov. 29, 1981 shooting death of William L. Wright, 33, of Winston-Salem. He was also charged with assault with a deadly weapon, with intent to kill, inflicting serious injury in the shooting that same night of Donald Burns of Winston-Salem.

Storm Touches Off Mudslides In West

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOONE, N.C. — A torrential thunderstorm in Watauga County left at least eight mudslides in its wake and forced officials to evacuate some people from their homes, officials said.

The downpour brought down mud onto U.S. 321 between Boone and Blowing Rock in three places, said Watauga County Sheriff's Department dispatcher Kathy Cole. She said mudslides also were reported on rural roads in the eastern and southern sections of the county.

No injuries had been reported to the sheriff's department, Ms. Cole said. "We still have a lot of roads that are under water now," she said this morning.

"It's been unreal," Ms. Cole said. "It was just a massive thunderstorm." She said flooding forced the evacuations of three people from their homes in the Holiday Hills subdivision just outside of Boone. About four people were evacuated from homes in Boone, said Boone Police Department dispatcher Mozella Jackson.

Ms. Cole said N.C. Department of Transportation employees worked into the morning clearing the mudslides.

She said the storm hit Thursday night at about 9 p.m. and that it rained for over an hour.

"You could have your windshield wipers on high and you still couldn't see," Ms. Cole said.

She said much of the water had receded by early this morning.

Train Buffs Gather

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SALISBURY, N.C. — The fascination of steam locomotives has drawn train buffs from across the nation and around the world to western North Carolina where they can ride the trains, but best of all, photograph them.

"All you have to do is look at a steam locomotive and you'll see there is something that fascinates people about them," said Judy Calvert of the National Railway Historical Society's Asheville chapter which is hosting the annual convention. "It seems to be a living, breathing thing that draws people to it like a magnet."

More than 1,500 railroad enthusiasts are gathering to ride, chase and photograph old steam and diesel trains at the convention.

Participants converging on Asheville have come from across the United States, Canada, Austria, Australia and a few other countries for the tantalizing show Asheville organizers have planned.

Martin Gives His Tentative Support To Referendum On Abortion Issue

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Gov. Jim Martin gave his tentative support for a public referendum on the abortion issue and re-issued challenges to the General Assembly to get moving on important bills during his weekly news conference.

While some legislators may balk at shirking their legislative responsibilities, Martin said, "It may be that the only way you could settle it in a fixed way would be to have a referendum and let the public express their view."

But he said that even with the added pressure of the recent U.S. Supreme Court decision allowing states more freedom in legislating the issue, some lawmakers may need some time to be convinced.

"I think legislators will have to go through a couple of elections before most of them will agree," he said.

Sen. Jim Johnson, R-Cabarrus, has proposed that a joint House and Senate committee meet before the 1990 short session and decide how to phrase the question for a referendum. He said the action could take the issue out of the political arena.

"There is no rational reason why every House and Senate race next year should be dominated by this issue when we can put it directly to the people, freeing the candidates so they may discuss other important issues to be considered by the people," Johnson said in a letter to House Speaker Joe Mavretic and Senate President Pro Tem Henson Barnes.

Martin said the issue is usually debated between the small percentage of people who oppose all abortions and those who favor having the state pay for them. He said a referendum would defuse the issue as both extremes try to woo the majority in the middle.

"They would not want to put their pure position before the voters because the majority might turn down that pure position," he said. "It would be on an issue that would probably be framed in a moderate position."

Meanwhile, Martin renewed subtle pressure on legislators to come to an agreement on a massive highway construction package, a budget to fund 6 percent pay increases for teachers and state employees, a constitutional amendment to give the governor's office veto power, tougher drunken-driving laws and the consolidation of the state's environmental agencies.

He maintained his opposition to a Senate proposal that would divert highway funds to provide salary increases for two years, suggesting that the Senate should consider a "higher level of responsibility."

House conferees on the budget will have to show unity against the Senate position if any movement is to occur, Martin said.

"They need to let the Senate know that the House conferees are not to be trifled with," he said.

Senate Panel Accepts Open Meetings Bill

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Efforts to tighten North Carolina's open meetings law moved a step closer to enactment as a Senate committee approved the bill and removed a provision some opponents said might cost the state money.

The Rules Committee endorsed the bill and sent it to the Senate floor after deleting a requirement that all public bodies keep written minutes of closed executive sessions.

Sen. Ken Royall, D-Durham, said he still was considering having the bill referred to his Appropriations Committee, but he admitted the amendment made it less likely new demands on government agencies might require more funding.

Hugh Stevens of the N.C. Press Association said the amendment adopted Thursday "eviscerated any reason for the bill to go to appropriations." Since no new records would be required, it could not be argued that more equipment might be needed, he said.

Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, who ushered the bill through the House, said he was pleased with the bill despite the amendment and other Senate changes.

"I think the bill in its present form carries forward the primary purpose of addressing the issues for which I introduced the bill," he said.

That purpose is to make it clear that public bodies meet primarily in the open and to spell out any exceptions, Miller told the committee.

Most of the committee debate centered on the issue of requiring written minutes.

House Conferees Pose Counter Plan For Highways, Salaries

By Dennis Patterson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Senate negotiators on a massive highway construction package are mulling over a House proposal that would extend the program for an extra year and allow increased vehicle sales taxes to be used for 6 percent salary increases this year.

The counter-offer from the House Thursday came as Senate president pro tem Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, and House Speaker Joe Mavretic exchanged verbal barbs over whether the committee trying to reach a compromise should meet "virtually around the clock" through the weekend until an agreement is reached.

"Basically, what we are offering ... is a 13-year program at $9.3 billion with a one-year general fund transfer," Rep. Sam Hunt, D-Alamance, the chairman of the House delegates, told the Senate negotiators.

The House had started with a 12-year package to put a four-lane road within 10 miles of every state resident by the year 2000. The House proposed to use a one-cent sales tax increase for salary increases, but House leaders say that proposal is now dead for the session.

The Senate package called for a 15-year program, with increased vehicle sales taxes to be used for teacher pay raises in the first two years.

The House panel earlier had offered to accept the two-year transfer of sales taxes, but was roundly criticized by Gov. Jim Martin and Republicans in the House. The Senate had earlier offered to decrease the length of the program to 14 years.

Hunt said after making the counter-offer that he believes allowing the funds to be transferred for one year will win greater acceptance in the House.

"I think it's safe to say that the governor, some Republicans and others don't want any transfers," Hunt said. "But I think we had better support for this (the one-year transfer) than for the last one."

Hunt said the one-year transfer would leave the budget short of money to pay for the proposed raises in the 1990-91 fiscal year.

"We would have to solve that problem in the short session," he said.

Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, the chairman of the Senate panel said a response to the counterproposal could be ready as early as today.

Rauch said after the meeting that extending the program to 13 years was "a major concession" for the House, "just like our going to 14 years was a major concession for us."

The counterproposal to that is obvious."

Rauch said he also was pleased that the House would consider a one-year transfer to cover salary increases.

"Hopefully, we can work this out tomorrow," Rauch said.

"Frankly, I think we will either settle it tomorrow or we won't," Hunt said.

An agreement on the highway package would clear a major logjam to adjournment for the session, which has now lasted three weeks longer than House and Senate leaders had predicted.

Barnes, in a letter to Mavretic before the counter-offer was made, suggested that the conference committee work through the weekend until an agreement is reached.

Lucas Loses Chief Supporter In Bid For Civil Rights Post

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — In a remarkable turnabout, the chief congressional sponsor of William Lucas's nomination to the administration's top civil rights job withdrew his support Thursday, saying he was "frankly astounded" by Lucas' testimony minimizing the impact of recent Supreme Court civil rights decisions.

Rep. John Conyers Jr., D-Mich., who enthusiastically introduced Lucas at the start of Senate Judiciary Committee hearings on Wednesday as a man "deeply committed to the vigorous enforcement of the civil rights law," returned to say that he could no longer support Lucas to head the Justice Department's civil rights division.

In a further erosion of support, Committee Chairman Joseph R.

WILLIAM LUCAS

Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., who has been chairing the hearings on the embattled nominee, called Conyers' reappearance an "unusual situation. I do not even remember anything like this occurring before," he said.

The endorsement from Conyers, a leading black congressman, had been seen as an important boost for Lucas following the unusual refusal of Michigan's two Democratic senators to engage in the traditional courtesy of introducing a nominee from their home state. Lucas, 61, served as sheriff and county executive of Wayne County and was an unsuccessful Republican candidate for governor.

The switch by both Conyers and Biden heightened Lucas' opponents, who had been pessimistic about their chances of defeating him.

Justice Department spokesman David Runkel Thursday restated the department's confidence that Lucas will win confirmation and said Lucas' statements on the Supreme Court cases were in line with those by President Bush and Attorney General Dick Thornburgh.

"For anybody to expect a nominee of the president to go up on the Hill and denounce the president's views is unrealistic, to say the least," Runkel said. "Mr. Lucas has made his views known privately to Mr. Conyers several weeks ago. They come as no surprise."

Lucas supporters testified Thursday that he would be an effective and forceful advocate for civil rights within the administration.

"He is not a marcher," Father William Cunningham of Focus Hope, a Detroit civil rights group. "He is not a carrier of signs. He is a man who is capable of sitting down with a whole group of white people and saying, 'Let's get this done.'"

Gromyko Book

NEW YORK (AP) — Before his death earlier this month, former Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko added a chapter about Joseph Stalin to his soon-to-be published autobiography, according to a published report.

Heyward Isham, who acquired the book for Doubleday, told the Times the new chapter will criticize Stalin.

Biden Jr., D-Del., who said Wednesday he was "favorably inclined" to toward Lucas, said he had also changed his mind as a result of Lucas' testimony and is "inclined to vote against him."

"I was quite frankly surprised yesterday when I asked this man ... whether or not he thought we were moving in the right direction or wrong direction on civil rights, he didn't have an opinion," Biden said.

"When I asked him whether or not the Supreme Court was moving the right way or the wrong way, he didn't have an opinion. When I asked him whether the last administration was for or against civil rights he didn't have an opinion. Makes me wonder whether or not he'll fight" for civil rights within the Bush administration.

Conyers, citing the "crisis in the civil rights movement" prompted by the Supreme Court rulings, said he was revoking his support "with a slightly heavy heart" because of Lucas' testimony asserting that the Supreme Court decisions were essentially sound and represented fine-tuning rather than retrenchment.

"If you can't figure out that these cases are seriously cutting back on the very modest progress that we've made then there's no point in me waiting for you to become the assistant attorney general..." Conyers said. "I did not know that was going to be said."

United Pilot Had Little Control Over Jet During Final Minutes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SIoux CITY, Iowa — United Airlines Flight 232 pilot had almost no control as he struggled to land a DC-10 that had lost an engine fan and sustained holes in the small wing of the tail, investigators said.

The jumbo jet's hydraulic system, which is routed through the tail and allows the pilot to manipulate wing and tail controls, contained no fluid as Capt. Al C. Haynes tried to bring the plane into Sioux Gateway Airport, National Transportation Safety Board officials said Thursday night.

"The aircraft could only be turned to the right. They made three 360-degree turns" before Wednesday's crash landing, NTSB member Jim Burnett said.

Security Exercise

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina state and local governmental agencies will participate in a national security exercise on July 27-29.

"National security exercises are designed to test various aspects of (the) government's capability to respond in a situation where the security of the United States and North Carolina are threatened," said Joe Myers, director of the N.C. Division of Emergency Management.

Tax Payment

SPRUCE PINE, N.C. (AP) — Henredon Furniture Industries Inc., Mitchell County's largest employer and taxpayer, will prepay $75,000 of its $142,000 tax bill for 1989 to help the county weather a cash-flow crisis.

The $75,000 payment on Friday means the county will not only be able "to get through August, but the infusion of that amount of money means we will be able to pay some of the bills we had been holding," county manager Keith Holtsclaw said.

At least 76 people were killed and up to 43 others were missing and believed dead in the crash. United released the names of survivors Thursday but withheld a list of casualties while relatives were notified.

As workers continued to search wreckage strewn through a cornfield and across a runway, investigators released details of the harrowing last hour of the flight bound for Chicago and Philadelphia from Denver.

The chief flight attendant told the NTSB an explosion rocked the jet over western Iowa, knocking flight attendants to the floor, Burnett said. The attendant, who was unidentified, went into the cockpit and found the flight crew struggling to regain control of the plane, he said.

Thirty-four minutes before the crash landing, the pilot told air traffic controllers he had almost no control of the aircraft, Burnett said.

Eight minutes later, the crew expressed "serious doubts" they could reach the Sioux City and began discussing small airports and four-lane highways as possible landing sites, he said.

Investigators found a 10-inch-by-12-inch hole and three or four smaller ones in the horizontal stabilizer, the small wing on the plane's tail, NTSB spokesman Ted Lopatkiewicz said. The rear engine sits just above the stabilizer.

Lopatkiewicz said the holes were "projectile penetrations" but declined to be more specific. Such holes could be caused by pieces of metal spewed like shrapnel from a disintegrating engine.

Burnett said investigators were surprised to discover the entire fan-rotor system missing on one engine. The DC-10 has three engines, one on each wing and a tail engine.

"That's the first time for this type of engine that we've ever seen," he said.

At a news conference, Burnett said investigators could not determine if the fan had come from the rear engine. However, an NTSB official who spoke on condition he not be named said the rear engine did suffer explosive failure.

The Des Moines Register and The New York Times reported in today's editions that Burnett confirmed the fan came off the rear engine.

The failure of the tail engine may have caused the hydraulic system to fail, said Bob Raynesford, a spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration.

Reports were conflicting on the number of passengers and survivors. Officials on the scene said 174 passengers survived, United said 183 and the NTSB 186.

United and other officials said earlier 293 people were aboard the DC-10, but Burnett said Thursday night 295 were. He said four people were in the cockpit, not three, including an off-duty pilot. United stuck by its figure of 293.

Rescuers planned to resume their search for victims today among the wreckage that is scattered the length of three football fields.

They were concentrating on a large, blackened section of fuselage lying in the cornfield alongside the scorched runway. The section had to be reinforced with large timbers and hoisted off the ground with a crane.

"It's slow going," said Gary Brown, director of Woodbury County disaster services. "It's a hazard for our rescue workers as they move through there."

Dr. David Greco, director of emergency services for the Marian Health Center and one of the first physicians on the scene, said the plane's breakup determined the pattern of deaths and injuries.

The three members of the cockpit crew survived the crash, but Greco said the first-class section was devastated. Passengers in the ninth through 19th rows suffered no injuries or minor ones, he added, but "there was nothing left of the rear half of the aircraft."

Tales of heroism abounded, beginning with praise for Haynes, a 33-year-old United veteran.

Gov. Terry Branstad visited Haynes' bedside and said at a news conference: "He was quite emotional about the situation and tears came to his eyes when he talked about the number of people who lost their lives."

"I told him he did a valiant job."

The flight voice and data recorders were taken to Washington, D.C., and found to be in good condition, said NTSB aeronautical engineer Thomas Jacky. Their contents are unlikely to be made public for several weeks.

Investigators also collected maintenance records on the 15-year-old aircraft. Burnett also said toxicology tests given to the four people in cockpit were negative.

GE Aircraft Engines, the General Electric Co. subsidiary that made the plane's CF6 engines, dispatched a team to assist in the investigation.

The missing fan-rotor system includes a rotor, disk and fan blades. The fan is encased in the engine housing and draws in cold air to circulate around the combustion chamber and mix with hot exhaust gases.

Methodists Using Down-Home Songs In New Church Hymnal

By George W. Cornell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Contrary to church trends toward loftier music, United Methodists are turning to some foot-tapping gospel songs that the denomination previously shunned.

Such hearty spirituals as "Go Down Moses" and "Shall We Gather at the River" are additions to the church's new hymnal now being distributed to congregations nationwide.

"It's a serious reformation in United Methodist hymnody," says the Rev. Carlton R. Young of Nashville, Tenn., the hymnbook editor. "We have made a profound turnaround to give people the songs they like to sing."

Many of them, such as "In the Garden" and "Softly and Tenderly Jesus is Calling," had been excluded from previous denominational hymnals as too sentimental.

But they and other popular gospel songs, spurned by musicologists and generally omitted from formal church repertoires, are in the new book, along with the longtime classic numbers.

However, far more dramatic than the broadened gender metaphors is the book's opening to songs historically excluded from hymnals of major liturgical churches — Presbyterian, Episcopal, Lutheran, Roman Catholic and Methodist.

Past exclusion of popular gospel songs and spirituals "has been our main inadequacy," Young said. "The complaint for the last 50 years is that we didn't have the hymns people wanted to sing."

Musicologists spurned such songs, Young observed. "Only the people liked them." But they now occupy a principal place, alongside traditional hymns. "I don't think any mainline denomination has had the turnaround that we've had," Young said.

The newly incorporated songs evolved in America from revivals of the 19th century and out of the travail of blacks rather than from a European heritage, which has long dominated most American hymnals.

"We were slow" in accepting the home-grown creations, Young said. Yet "they are at the heart and recall of our constituency. They're familiar to our people. But they hadn't been in the book."

Among the black spirituals included for the first time are "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," "It's Me, It's Me, O Lord," "This Little Light of Mine," "Tis the Old Ship of Zion (Give Me That Old Time Religion)," "I'm Goin' a Sing When the Spirit Says Sing" and "Kum Ba Ya, My Lord."

Gospel favorites newly added include "Marching to Zion," "Nothing but the Blood," "I Surrender All," "Pass Me Not O Gentle Savior," "There's Within My Heart a Melody," "Leaning on the Everlasting Arms" and "Lord of the Dance."

Altogether, the book's 625 hymns include 84 gospel songs and 38 black spirituals, a total of 122. There also are 17 Spanish hymns, offered in that language for the first time, 14 Asian and seven American Indian hymns. Of 300 carry-overs from the old book, 60 are by founder John Wesley or brother Charles.

SUNSHINE

Visit the SUNSHINE FACTORY, enter P.J.'s fixit shop where an enthusiastic repairman invites neighborhood children into his very special backroom factory. Discover basic Biblical values as children explore the special sunshine that is produced in P.J.'s factory. Each 30 minute episode features basic Biblical concepts and highlights extra learning activities including Bible memory work.

Meet Mr. Umstadt, a kindly old gentleman. Steadley, a bubbling rabbit. Romar, a clumsy robot, and Chadsworth, a seeker in search of God's truth.

Through a variety of vignettes that include animation, music, and dramatic situations, P.J. leads the children on an adventure as they learn what's most important in God's rules and guidelines.

An MDM Production.

Mobile Health Team Has Time To Show Care

By Pat Leisner
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Dr. Geoffrey Greene makes house calls, but only to people who don't have homes.

Greene heads a mobile medical team that makes the rounds of Pinellas County shelters and soup kitchens to bring medicine — and hope — to those down on their health as well as their luck.

They work out of a $70,000 van set up like a doctor's office.

"I was destitute. I got immediate help here and I'm very grateful," says Otis Simone, 53, an out-of-work barber who suffers from bleeding ulcers and glaucoma.

"No one else cared," says Jim

Daniels as he accompanied his fiancée, Elizabeth Craps, to the blue-and-white miniclinic parked in front of St. Vincent dePaul's soup kitchen. She was treated for anemia and seizures.

Greene, registered nurse Faith Bennett, social worker Phyllis Kleckley and secretary-driver Ann Campbell make up the team. Their workshop includes an exam table, scale, refrigerator for medicines, cabinet for supplies, telephone, bathroom and a tiny desk with a folder of files.

Medical care is free to the homeless in what county officials say is the only such mobile outreach operation of its kind in the Southeast.

"The concept is to go where the people are," Greene says. "A lot of these people would have no medical treatment at all if not for a program like this."

They see an estimated 15 patients daily, many with problems related to alcohol and cocaine abuse. Others come with cuts from fights or muggings, feet or skin problems, lice, viruses, sometimes tumors. In kids, the team finds everything from colds to chicken pox.

The program began last June and is operated by the county's Department of Social Services under an annual budget of $265,000, said supervisor Jim Dates.

"The only other program I know of that's like it is in New York City," Dates says. "There aren't a lot of us."

The county has two clinics that help the indigent. "But we felt very strongly that because the homeless people weren't coming to them, we had to go out to them," Dates says.

Greene was at the University of South Florida in 1986 doing his residency in internal medicine when he grew disillusioned.

"I felt the emphasis was misplaced," he says. "We need specialties. But a lot of medical problems we see are treatable and preventable long before they get to the intensive care stage."

When he heard about the program, he applied.

The Mobile Medical Team also tries to plug in patients to other assistance programs — financial, vocational or established medical clinics if the ailment is long term, such as diabetes.

Greene had expected to treat mostly middle-aged alcoholics. But he also found people with drug and mental problems, women with dependent children on the run from abusive husbands, families who couldn't make ends meet on unskilled minimum wage jobs and those who just chose to drop out and live on the edge.

"Like everyone, I had misconceptions about the homeless," the doctor says. "You just don't realize how bad it is until you start working with it."

Dates, who has been involved in social work for nine years, said families account for the biggest increase in street people.

"In 1981-82 you almost didn't see homeless families," he says. "Now, all of a sudden, family shelters are bursting at the seams. And I don't see any program coming along that's going to get these people out of the situation they are in."

Tanya Freeman, a 40-year-old grandmother, suffers from hearing impairment, heart disease, epilepsy and shortness of breath. She first met Greene at a shelter in July after she moved to Florida from the Bronx in New York City.

"I was raped and beaten and they helped me," she says. "I had no place to go. Now, I'm in school studying electronics. I volunteer at the soup kitchen. And I'm getting a healthy body back."

"They let me feel comfortable. Ever since I met them my life is going up, up, up and I refuse to let it go back."

Parents Force Child To Bear Marijuana Secret

Dear Abby: A number of us were having a discussion at work about whether children should be asked to keep family secrets. Since we couldn't agree, I thought I would submit the matter to you.

The subject came up when a co-worker told us that he knew of a little boy whose parents smoked marijuana openly at home. Rather than hide it from the little boy, the parents told him that they didn't think smoking pot was wrong, but many people did, so he was not to tell anyone that his parents smoked pot. It was to be their secret.

Abby, putting aside the question of drug abuse, I think it's wrong to force a child to bear the burden of a family secret — especially a shameful one. Learning right from wrong is hard enough as it is without the notion of an at-home morality and an out-of-home morality. What do you think? — J.C. In Alameda, Calif.

Dear J.C.: These parents are giving their son a dangerous message when they smoke marijuana in his presence and tell him it's OK. It's not OK. Marijuana is illegal in all states. Furthermore, studies have concluded that its habitual use can be physically damaging and psychologically addictive.

Dear Abby Abigail Van Buren

I agree, it's unfair to force a child to bear the burden of keeping this kind of family secret.

Dear Abby: My husband and I love each other and have a very good marriage. However, he twitches, wiggles and thrashes around in his sleep. I happen to be a very light sleeper, and I just don't sleep well with all that going on.

Should we sleep together for convention's sake, or is it all right to sleep apart? We are in our 30s and have two small children. — Tired In Pennsylvania

Dear Tired: If I had a husband who twitched, wiggled and thrashed around in his sleep, as well as two children to raise, I would opt for twin beds with a single headboard. A tired wife makes a poor bed partner. And a twitcher, wiggler and thrasher is no bargain, either.

Dear Abby: Six years ago I was a divorcee with a small son to raise alone, so I struggled through three years of nursing school. After graduation, I went to work as a registered nurse in a local hospital.

I met a wonderful man while working at the hospital. We dated for two years, fell in love and were married. We have been married about a year and couldn't be happier.

This wonderful man is a doctor. Don't get me wrong — he is not wonderful because he is a doctor. He is wonderful because he is the kindest, most considerate person I have ever known, and he couldn't be a better father to my son if he were his own flesh and blood.

My problem: People constantly tell me, "I knew you'd 'get' a doctor."

Abby, it is hurtful and offensive that people think I took up nursing because I had to support myself and my son, and the field of nursing appealed to me.

What can I say to these cruel people to shut them up? — Married To A Doctor

Dear Married: Say nothing. Just because a dog barks doesn't mean you have to answer it. Anyone with his head on straight knows that the nursing profession is no piece of cake — the training is rigorous and the work is demanding. True, many nurses marry doctors because they meet in the workplace and have a common interest — caring for the sick.

Vows Solemnized

LA GRANGE — Tyjuana Shereese Best and Derrick Lee Atkinson were married at 4 p.m. July 8 in Ebenezer Missionary Baptist Church. The Rev. David Hammond officiated at the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of William Best Sr. of La Grange and the late Fannie Ellis Best. Her grandmother is Effie Best Wooten of La Grange. The bridegroom is the son of Dorothy Atkinson Williams and James Earl Williams Sr., both of Ayden.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of crystal organza with a Queen Anne neckline and long sleeves accented with iridescent sequins and seed pearls. A satin bow accented the A-line skirt which fell from a basque waistline. Scattered pearls and iridescent sequins trimmed the sash. The bride wore a chapel-length train. Her double-tiered, waltz-length veil of illusion was attached to a V-shaped halo of matching lace, beads and silk flowers. She carried a cascade bouquet of silk white roses and ivy accented with rosebuds and bridal streamers tied in love knots.

The maid of honor was Veronica Best of La Grange and the matron of honor was Allie McCallum of Greensboro. Bridesmaids included Darlene Lang of Washington, D.C.; Debbie Ellis Isaac of Greensboro, cousin of the bridegroom; Jennifer Best of Garysburg and Lisa Ellis of Columbia, S.C., both cousins of the bride, and Keecia Rouse of Goldsboro, niece of the bride. The flower girl was Aiyanna Williams of Wilson, niece of the bride, and the miniature bride was Chequitta McNeill of Goldsboro, godchild of the bridal couple.

Honorary attendants were Chiara Best and Yashica Best of Maryland, nieces of the bride; Deidra Ellis of Columbia and Tashena Best of Garysburg, both cousins of the bride.

James Earl Williams Jr. was best man for his brother. Groomsmen were Alvis Best of La Grange and Andre Best of Raleigh, both brothers of the bride; Keefe McPhail of La Grange, nephew of the bride; Maurice Williams, brother of the bridegroom, and Daryl Moya, both of Ayden, and Michael Lewis of Goldsboro. Ushers included Arlanda Rouse Jr. of Goldsboro, nephew of the bride, and Terraine Gardner of Durham.

The ring bearer was Jason Keys of Greenville and the miniature bridegroom was Frankie Ellis Jr. of Kinston, cousin of the bride.

The bride is a graduate of North Lenoir High School and North Carolina A&T State University. She is employed by the Lenoir Health Department in Kinston. The bridegroom is a graduate of Ayden-Grifton High School and N.C. A&T State University. He is employed by the Pitt County School System.

The couple are living in La Grange after a wedding trip to Myrtle Beach, S.C.

Sons Educated In Ways Of Crime

By Pat Leishner
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SARASOTA, Fla. — Like a lot of couples, Matthew and Pamela Schultz taught their teen-age sons the family business. It wasn't your typical Mom-and-Pop operation — the Schultzes were into robbery.

For William, 16, and Matt, 15, the tools of the trade were AK-47s, police scanners, surveillance and survival gear, maps, wigs, even hypnosis, police say. They were trained in hand-to-hand combat, went through daily routines of jogging, situps and pushups, and memorized streets, zones and police codes.

There were dry runs and days of scrupulously logging police movement.

Files police found in a rented home near Sarasota included blueprint-like drawings and maps showing distances to police and fire stations, hospitals, malls, railroad terminals and streets leading to interstate highways.

After a job, the two teens would be hypnotized and debriefed.

"Some sessions were more detailed than others," said Detective Bob Drone in Kenneth City, 50 miles north of Sarasota. "The reason was if any mistakes were made during a robbery they could be corrected before the next one."

One mistake the Schultzes made cost them; they pleaded guilty in Tennessee to a botched robbery and drew a 10-year prison sentence.

Documents police found in the house left no doubt the Schultzes thought of it as a business. There were ledger entries for expenditures. A contract dealt with firearm purchases, handling of loot, and standards of behavior.

"No greed will be tolerated for personal use and pleasure," it warned, according to investigators.

Police don't know much about the family. Schultz, 29, was at one time a trucker. His 35-year-old wife was a one-time exotic dancer and was married to a Rochester, N.Y., man named Hinton, who fathered the boys and since has died.

The Schultzes told their landlady, Stella Penney, they were Matt and Pat Avery last September when they rented the three-bedroom country home she owned on 10 acres near Sarasota. They said they'd be there two years.

Schultz told Mrs. Penney he was a Marine on special assignment at MacDill Air Force Base in Tampa, 70 miles away. "I wasn't suspicious. I didn't know they were criminals," she said, adding that the boys were polite, but didn't seem to go to school and dressed mostly in military clothes.

Over the months, Mrs. Penney grew wary of Mrs. Schultz, who demanded several days' notice before the landlady could visit, then was rude to her. "I was getting kind of scared of her. The others would come around and apologize, make excuses for her that she was having a bad day or the like."

The first police knew of the Schultzes was a six-month spree of robberies and burglaries that began in the Sarasota area in May 1988. On Nov. 26, the Schultzes sat outside a Kenneth City restaurant while the two teens and a runaway they had picked up took $3,000-$4,000 at gunpoint, Drone said.

On Dec. 1, Mrs. Penney got the November rent. "Matt opened his wallet and I saw a stack of big bills, two inches thick. It was loaded; there were hundreds. I said, 'What did you do, rob a bank?'"

Schultz said no, then told her he was going to Tampa on business and would be back in a few weeks. But the family fled.

"It looked like they got out in a hurry," Mrs. Penney said. They left behind two big dogs, their clothes and a $300 electric bill.

Gone were the stove, dining room table and fans, and the carpet was ruined. One bedroom was painted in military camouflage colors. A barrel on the wooded lot had been used for target practice and looked like swiss cheese. Shots had been fired into the barn. Empty ammunition shells were scattered around and there were three homemade obstacle courses in the front yard.

Scared by a local crime-reenactment TV show, the Schultzes headed home to Churchville, N.Y., starting back south in January or February, police say.

They made it as far as Red Bank, Tenn., outside Chattanooga, where police nabbed the two Schultz boys and a runaway from New York after the botched armed robbery of a businessman as he made a night deposit, said Sgt. Dan Dyer.

Police recovered all but $110 of the $1,180 cash and $300 in checks. Some was stashed in a motel light globe and $300 was in a refrigerator drip tray, he said. "The light globe had been lined with tissue paper so the money was not visible even when you shined a flashlight on it. Some of the stuff was ingenious."

Police confiscated an AK-47 and 750 rounds of ammunition, a .45-caliber pistol with 130 rounds, an automatic rifle with 300 rounds, magazine clips and a number of military-type knives, Dyer said. "They had enough weapons and ammo to keep us held off the better part of a week."

The Schultzes pleaded guilty last month to the robbery. A judge sentenced the adults to 10 years to run concurrently with any sentence in Florida. The boys' unspecified sentence is to be parallel and concurrent to Florida's.

The family was extradited last month and pleaded innocent July 7 to charges stemming from three shoe-store robberies, one each at a computer software store and a yogurt shop, and burglaries of a restaurant and three schools.

Matthew and Pamela Schultz and William Hinton, now 17, face 24 counts each of conspiracy, robbery with a firearm, burglary and grand theft. Each is being held on nearly $500,000 bond. Matt Hinton was indicted by a grand jury on 19 counts as an adult and is being held on $200,000 bond.

They are to be tried Oct. 23.

Police traced the family to the rented home and found shotguns, ammunition and 60 pounds of spent shells. They also seized a three-inch-thick file giving more than a glimpse into the carefully orchestrated, resourceful operation that included runaways the adults brought into the fold.

The contract they found reads in part:

"Any and all firearms will be bought by the business and held by the overseer for proper use." Stolen money would be "cleaned and unmarked by overseer Matt." Big expenditures "would not be allowed in one lump sum as it might be traced back." Anyone who took drugs or alcohol within seven days of a job would be excluded. Traceable items had to be destroyed.

There also were individual's notes: "three days ago, stopped smoking ... you can beat anybody but Matthew ... you are smart, smarter than the cops ... you feel no pain ... won't remember being hypnotized."

Jobs were carefully planned. For a grocery store stickup, they figured 20 seconds to open the safe, 15 seconds to grab the money, 10 to get out followed by a 100-yard dash. Police were two-fifths of a mile away. They had 36 seconds to run half the driveway with maybe 12 stacks of money totaling 20-30 pounds.

Stock And Market Reports

By The Associated Press
HOGS: The trend is steady to 50 cents higher at N.C. buying stations. Kinston, Spivey's Corner, Murfreesboro, Siler City and Robersonville, 45.50; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Pine Level, Chadbourne, Ayden, Laurinburg and Benson 46.00; Wilson 45.75. Sows: (500 pounds up) Fayetteville 32.00; Wallace 32.00; Spivey's Corner 33.00; Rowland 33.00.

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 59.50 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. 75 percent of the loads offered here were confirmed for a preliminary weighted average of 59.68. The market is steady and the live supply is adequate for a mostly moderate demand. Average weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Friday was 2,722,000, compared to 2,105,000 last Friday.

HENS: Market 2 cents higher. Supply barely adequate for a good demand. Prices paid per pound for hens over seven pounds at farm for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday was 16 cents.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn 2 cents lower, 2.66-2.80 in East and mostly 2.85-2.95 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans mostly 1 cent lower, two locations 24 cents higher, 6.69-7.29 in East and mostly 6.83-6.94 in the Piedmont; wheat mostly 3.44-3.57; new crop corn 2.28-2.60; new crop soybeans 5.89-6.19; P.I.K. certificates steady 1/2 percent higher and ranged from 97 to 103 1/2 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices were widely mixed today in the aftermath of Thursday's late selloff.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 2.85 to 2,578.34 in the first half hour of trading.

But losers outnumbered gainers by more than 2 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 314 up, 638 down and 505 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 25.18 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

BankAmerica rose 3/8 to 29 1/8. On Thursday the company reported a larger increase in second-quarter earnings than analysts had been expecting.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks edged up .02 to 186.13. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .86 at 370.33.

On Thursday the Dow Jones industrial average closed with an 8.92 loss at 2,575.49.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 4 to 3 on the NYSE, with 641 up, 861 down and 481 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 204.59 million shares, against 215.74 million in the previous session.

AIDS Activists Praise Bush Choices For Commission

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — AIDS activists are heaping praise on President Bush for his two appointments to a new AIDS commission that will help plan a national strategy to fight the epidemic.

The president's selection of a homemaker with AIDS and a prominent medical professor for the 15-member commission is an indication that Bush will be responsive to AIDS issues and to victims of the deadly disease, activists say.

"These appointments show that Bush agrees with the principle that people with AIDS should be part of the decision-making process ... and that there is a great need to adapt our health care system to the needs of such an epidemic," said Mathilde Krim, founding co-chairwoman of the American Foundation for AIDS Research.

Stewart Makes Charge On Grady

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TROON, Scotland — Payne Stewart of the United States broke the course record with a 7-under par 65 today, but it wasn't enough to keep Australian Wayne Grady out of the early second-round lead at the 118th British Open.

On a day of chilly rain and low scores, Tom Watson also was among the leaders. Aiming for a record sixth Open title, the American veteran shot a 4-under par round of 68 that included an eagle at the par-5 16th to move into second-place tie with Stewart at 137, two shots behind Grady.

The play of the leaders was indicative of the whole field. Of the first 45 finishers, 24 were at par or better, and it looked as if the cut for the final two rounds could be as low as 146 — just 2-over par.

Grady, who plays on the U.S. PGA Tour, had a 5-under par round of 67 for a 36-hole total of 135.

That was enough to hold off Watson, the last American champion of the Open in 1983, and Stewart, who never has won a major tournament but has been the most successful American at the Open in those five barren years.

weather gave way to more traditional British summer fare, he was better for one round than anyone who ever struck a club at Royal Troon.

Wayne County Gets Clean Sweep

By Mike Grizzard
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

NEW HOPE — Greenville's ages 13-15 Babe Ruth All-Stars headed to Eastern Wayne High School Thursday afternoon with one win separating them from a berth in today's state tournament in Princeton.

Instead, Wayne County's comeback kids continued to ride a tremendous wave of momentum and swept two games to capture the District 5 title.

Wayne County, which advanced through the losers' bracket with a 7-6, 10-inning win over Nash County and a 19-7 thumping of Pitt County Wednesday, blanked Greenville 4-0 behind the three-hit pitching of Brad Matthews in the opener of the championship series, then rallied for a 9-7 victory in the second and deciding game.

"Baseball is a funny game but that's the way it works out sometimes," said Greenville coach Jimmie Grimsley, whose team rolled into the finals of the double-elimination tournament undefeated. "Our guys were a little flat today and Wayne County made the big plays when they had to."

"That's typical of what happens when a team comes back through the losers' bracket. They are a little tired, but they have a lot of confidence and are in the groove of playing."

Grimsley cited a layoff due to heavy rains as having a negative effect on his team. Downpours washed out play Sunday and Monday and delayed Wednesday's schedule.

"The turning point for us in the tournament was the layoff," Grimsley said. "It's no excuse. Wayne County beat us fair and square."

Matthews, a crafty right-hander, silenced Greenville's bats with a tantalizing breaking pitch and pinpoint control en route to his second shutout of the tournament. He fanned five, walked none and was backed by an errorless defense.

Greenville managed only a leadoff single by Matt Aldridge in the second, a leadoff single by Jay Kuykendall in the fourth and a leadoff double by Josh Potter in the seventh.

Wayne County picked up a run in the first on a leadoff double to right-center by Micheal K. Smith, a bunt single by tournament most valuable player Josh Brinkley and a sacrifice fly by Matthews.

Three walks, one of which was issued to Darren Thompson with the bases-loaded, and a two-run single by Ashley Alford produced three runs in the fifth.

Greenville starter Al Debiase got the loss. He allowed three hits and three runs while walking three and striking out three in 4 1/2 innings.

In Game Two, Greenville roared back from a 3-0 deficit with a five-run third inning, but Wayne County answered with five runs of its own in the home half of the inning.

Reliever Ashley Alford then protected the lead, surrendering two unearned runs in the fifth.

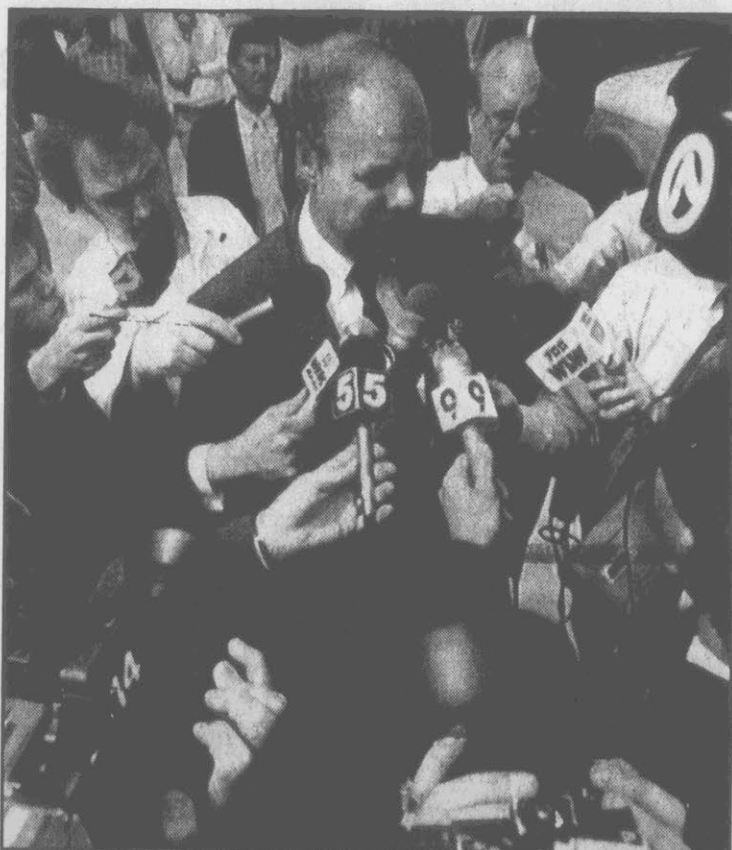

"The mark of a real good ball team is when you get the lead you hold them the next time up," Grimsley said. "We weren't able to do that."

Two walks, two Greenville errors and Smith's two-run single vaulted Wayne County in front 3-0 in the second.

Greenville did all its damage in the third with two outs. Mitch Jones

Judge Delays Decision In Rose Case

The Associated Press

John Dowd talks with reporters after court action

Investigation Now 5 Months Old

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Pete Rose's lawsuit isn't going anywhere fast. Neither is the Cincinnati Reds' manager.

A federal judge in Columbus won't have a decision in Rose's case for at least another 10 days, leaving Rose to manage the Reds under court protection. The investigation of gambling allegations against Rose is five months old — and there's no telling how long it will be before there is a conclusion.

A baseball lawyer who argued the case Thursday before U.S. District Judge John D. Holschuh said a quick resolution isn't baseball's top goal at this point.

"It's more important now that we get this matter straightened out," lawyer Louis Hoynes Jr. said. "Getting this straightened out and getting the right result is more important than the time it takes to get it straightened out."

One thing is certain: the case will drag on at least until the dog days of August.

The next step in the case is a ruling by Holschuh on whether Rose's lawsuit against Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti should be heard in state court, as Rose has requested, or in federal court, as baseball suggests.

Holschuh, known as a deliberate decision-maker, heard arguments on the issue for an hour and 45 minutes Thursday afternoon in a crowded courtroom. He pointed out that lawyers have filed thick briefs that will require further legal research, and the judge's docket already is crowded.

"The fact is that there are other litigants whose cases to them are just as important as this one is to Mr. Rose and Mr. Giamatti," Holschuh said.

Holschuh said he won't have a decision until at least July 31, and it might be longer. Rose is protected from suspension or firing for three days after Holschuh's decision.

That leaves Rose to manage a team that has lost 26 of its last 36 games and has tumbled to fourth place in the National League West. Injuries have played a major role.

Montana, 49ers Ready For Camp

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Eleven years and three Super Bowl victories have not made Joe Montana complacent.

With the departure of longtime 49ers coach Bill Walsh, the San Francisco quarterback sees this season as one of his greatest challenges.

"It's up to the players and (Coach) George (Seifert) and his staff to pull it together, not only to prove we can do it without Bill, but to prove that we can go on and play well after that Super Bowl," Montana said Thursday.

Montana didn't predict a title repeat, saying it depended largely on how healthy the team stays, but backup quarterback Steve Young brashly said the team was poised to win a fourth set of diamond-studded rings.

"We kind of prepared for another trip to the Super Bowl by staying low key," Young said. "No books were written, no controversies seemed to come out. Our head coach of 10 years is now a commentator. So we've got a fresh start. I think we have enough new faces to not be complacent."

Cleveland Browns

Carl Hairston believes that the shift to a four-man line on defense will help spread the work of stopping opposing offenses. Hairston, 36, usually played defensive end on a three-man line last year, but is slated for left tackle in new coach Bud Carson's four-man unit.

"In the past we always depended on the secondary to get things done. We've got an excellent secondary, but there were times when we should have helped by putting pressure on the passer," Hairston said Thursday, the first day of Cleveland's two-day practice sessions.

"I think we'll be very effective if we have four guys working together all the time. Last year we played a four-man line only on some third down plays, so we didn't work together much," Hairston said.

Detroit Lions

Among the missing Thursday were 12 unsigned players, including kicker Eddie Murray, Pro Bowl punter Jim Arnold, Pro Bowl linebacker Mike

Tyson Is Ready Champ Set To Face "The Truth"

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — The divorce is behind him, the weight has not been around the 276-pound mark in a while, the manager and trainer controversies are almost second nature and there hasn't even been a speeding ticket in recent memory.

Mike Tyson appears ready for Carl "The Truth" Williams in tonight's heavyweight title bout, and the world's undisputed champion says he is.

"Friday, I'll be there and I'll be ready," Tyson said. "No one is taking the title. I'll be champion still."

Few, with the obvious exception of the Williams' camp, expect the challenger to win. Williams, 29, is a 12-1 underdog in the fight to be held at the Atlantic City Convention Center and many experts think Williams and his questionable chin will make him an early victim.

Still, there are some questions the 23-year-old Tyson has to answer in his sixth defense of the undisputed title. He was not his usually impressive self in stopping Frank Bruno in five rounds at Las Vegas, Nev. on Feb. 25.

Jay Bright, one of two co-trainers who replaced Kevin Rooney in that position, says Tyson had other problems then.

"I felt there were a lot of inhibiting factors the last fight," said Bright, a 31 year-old protégé of the late Gus D'Amato, which explains his association with Tyson. "Mike was coming down from 276 and was going through the divorce."

"As much as you'd like to let things bounce off you, it had an affect on him," Bright said. "That fight was the downside of his career. You'll see him on the upswing on Friday."

Tyson, who weighed 219 1/4 at Thursday's weigh-in, refused to make predictions about the fight and added he would be jittery coming in, just like he is before any fight.

"Just come to the fight and I'm sure you'll enjoy it," said Tyson, who is undefeated in 36 fights with 32 knockouts. He has won his last five by knockout.

Foreman Goes Distance For The Win

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Former heavyweight champion George Foreman, whose appearance belies his success, has gone the distance for the first time since starting a comeback two years ago.

Foreman won a 10-round decision Thursday night over Everett "Big Foot" Martin, improving to 19-0 his record since coming out of retirement following a 10-year absence from the ring.

The 40-year-old Houston resident, who weighed in at 256 pounds, has gone the distance only four times, the last against Jimmy Young in a 12-round bout in 1977.

"I didn't want to hurt the guy, and I needed to get the rounds," Foreman said. "I wanted to prove that I'm not just a one-round or two-round fighter, that I can go farther."

Foreman earned $50,000 for the fight, while Martin received $15,000.

Foreman, 64-2 overall with 60 knockouts, knocked down Martin in the eighth round and dominated the bout before 1,000 at the Tucson Convention Center Arena.

Judge Jerry Maltz gave Foreman a 99-91 edge, Greg Hughes scored it 98-91 and Joe Garcia had it 97-92.

East-West All-Stars Arrive For Game

GREENSBORO (AP) — The state's top 60 high school football players arrived in Greensboro on Thursday to begin preparation for the 41th annual McDonald's East-West All-Star football game.

The state's top 20 male and female basketball players will arrive Friday. The basketball doubleheader will be held Tuesday at the Greensboro Coliseum. The football exhibition will follow two days later at Jamieson Stadium.

Rose High's Carlester T. Crumpler Jr. and Raleigh Fuller will play for the East team, which is coached by Williamston's Harold Robinson and assisted by D.H. Conley's Steve Craft.

Area basketball players Ronnell Peterson of Ayden-Grifton and Reggie Barrett of Farmville Central will play for the East basketball squad. Farmville Central coach Mike Terrell is an assistant to Roxboro coach Tommy Day for the game.

Two football players and one female basketball player were scratched from the roster.

West lineman Scott Youmans of Eastern Guilford was advised by doctors not to play in the football game. He was involved in an automobile accident Wednesday and has a bruised jaw. He was replaced by Chris Cotton of Greensboro Page. The 6-foot, 226-pound lineman earned all-conference honors for the Pirates and plans to walk-on at North Carolina State.

East linebacker Terrell Powell of Wallace-Rose Hill told officials he would be unable to participate in the game. His replacement has not been announced.

The East girls basketball team lost the services of all-state guard Gaynor O'Donnell. O'Donnell, a foreign exchange student from Ireland, was unable to return to the states in time to play in Tuesday's game. Her replacement is Staci Kyle, a 5-8 guard from West Carteret.

Rain Postpones Cary-Snow Hill Matchup

Snow Hill's Area I American Legion Championship Series baseball game with Snow Hill was rained out in Cary Thursday night.

The teams are tied at 2-2 in the best of seven series and are set to play tonight in Cary at 7:30 p.m. They'll follow that up with a game Saturday in Snow Hill at 8 p.m.

VPI Loses Top Football Recruit

ROANOKE (AP) — James Wilson, a top Virginia Tech football signee, has been dropped from his letter of intent after failing to gain admission to the school. He will attend Tennessee instead, according to a published report.

"The thing I can say is that he wasn't admitted to Tech," Mike Smith, Wilson's coach at Hampton High School, told the Roanoke Times & World-News. "I'm not trying to put it behind us."

Wilson said he was trying to say whether the lineman could have gained admission to Virginia Tech by attending summer school. Virginia Tech coach Frank Beamer would not comment on the matter.

"I'm over it now," Wilson told the newspaper. "I was real fired up about going to Tech. It was a bad situation there for a while, but I won't be hurting because of it. I'm real fired up again about Tennessee."

Majors Reinstates Cobb To Team

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Junior running back Reggie Cobb, who led Tennessee in rushing the past two seasons, was reinstated to the squad Thursday. Volunteer coach Johnny Majors suspended Cobb in January for an undisclosed violation of team rules.

"Reggie Cobb has met the requirements set forth for him," Majors said. "And therefore I am removing his suspension. ... He will report with the rest of the varsity squad on Aug. 9."

Cobb gained 1,197 yards and scored 20 touchdowns as a freshman two seasons ago. Hampered by injuries and a weaker offensive line, he managed 1,547 yards and three touchdowns during the Vols' 5-6 season last fall.

Also Thursday, Tennessee announced its 1991 football schedule, which includes games against Notre Dame and Louisville.

Rose Inquiry ...

with 10 players going on the disabled list this season.

Rose lawyer Robert Stachler said he doesn't think the Reds' failures will create pressure for a change in the court agreement protecting Rose from firing.

"I don't see that as a problem," Stachler said, following the arguments Thursday. "You can see they've got injuries. They're bringing the (Class AAA) Nashville team up to play. You can't blame that on him."

Reds owner Marge Schott has declined to comment on Rose's performance since the lawsuit was filed. The Reds are remaining neutral in the lawsuit, a point baseball stressed Thursday.

Baseball's lawyers want the case kept in federal court, where the commissioner's broad authority has been upheld in previous decisions. Rose wants the case given back to Hamilton County Common Pleas Judge Norbert A. Nadel, who already has determined that Giamatti improperly prejudged the manager. The legal skirmish over whether the case belongs in federal or state court depends upon how Holschuh interprets the relationship between the Reds and the commissioner.

Stachler contends Rose and the Reds are involved in a breach of contract dispute that properly belongs in the state courts because both parties live in Ohio. Stachler described Giamatti as a chief executive officer of major league baseball who actually acts on behalf of the Reds and other teams, rather than an independent person.

"He's the chief executive officer like you have a chief executive officer of any other entity," Stachler told Holschuh. "Any way you look at it, he is still their agent."

Such an interpretation would make the case a matter for the state courts.

Hoynes tried to convince Holschuh that the dispute actually is between Rose and Giamatti, with the Reds merely an "innocent bystander" in the case. That interpretation could result in the case staying in federal court because it involves persons who live in different states.

The judge listened attentively to the arguments, his hands folded under his chin. He asked questions that appeared to undercut the arguments of both sides on the jurisdiction question, giving no indication which way he may rule.

The two sides also skirmished over whether the case can get a fair hearing in Rose's hometown before a judge who is up for election next year. Hoynes noted that in Cincinnati, Rose is viewed as a hero while Giamatti is "viewed suspiciously as a foreigner from New York, trapped in an ivory tower," and biased against Rose.

Stachler contended that questioning the Common Pleas Court's integrity "entirely misses the boat."

NCSU Investigation Criticized

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The chairman of N.C. State University's Board of Trustees criticized an internal investigation into the university's basketball program saying the program is apparently guilty of only minor rule violations.

NCSU Trustees Chairman Edward I. Weisiger said he had told University of North Carolina system president C.D. Spangler not to investigate the basketball program because both the National Collegiate Athletic Association and NCSU administrators were looking into allegations of wrongdoing.

"I told Dick Spangler he shouldn't have done it, and that I didn't appreciate that," Weisiger told The News and Observer of Raleigh in an interview published today.

Weisiger also said the NCSU program was "pretty clean" and that the school was apparently guilty only of minor violations of NCAA and university rules.

"What I've found from the NCAA and the internal audit is that nothing's been found other than (former Wolfpack player) Bennie Bolton selling his shoes and violations of the ticket situation."

Weisiger referred to two reports by the Raleigh newspaper. In one,

Bolton said he sold his complimentary athletic shoes. In the other report, two Wolfpack players said that team members' complimentary tickets had been sold, sometimes with the help of an assistant coach.

Weisiger said he had not been in contact with the NCAA about its findings. An NCAA spokesman said he could not comment on the investigation. NCSU officials have said their internal review found no evidence of improprieties.

Weisiger, a Charlotte, N.C., businessman, also said Spangler's investigators should not have asked Wolfpack head basketball coach Jim Valvano to open the records of JTV Enterprises, the coach's private firm.

Meanwhile, N.C. House Speaker Joe Mavretic said Spangler should release the findings of his six-month investigation, which Spangler has declined to do. On Wednesday, state Senate President Pro Tempore Henson P. Barnes, the leading state Senate Democrat, called for the report to be made public.

On Monday, saying their work was over, the four members of Spangler's investigative commission gave him an oral report. Spangler has said he will not issue a written version of their findings but will address the Board of Governors soon.

NFL Training Camps Opening Up

Cofer and defensive lineman Eric Williams, as well as Heisman Trophy winner Barry Sanders of Oklahoma State, the Lions' No. 1 draft pick.

"It would be great if Barry were here now but he's not," Coach Wayne Fontes said. "That gives the other backs a chance to move ahead of Barry. He'll be behind when he gets here, but Barry is very intelligent and when he gets here he'll catch up quickly."

Indianapolis Colts

The Indianapolis Colts are the only AFC East team with its No. 1 draft pick in camp. They're also the only one with a quarterback problem.

"That's the highest priority in our camp," said Coach Ron Meyer, who welcomed rookies, free agents, quarterbacks and injured veterans to camp at Anderson University on Thursday.

"Among AFC quarterbacks, we rank fifth. Jack hasn't had enough time to solidify himself as an NFL quarterback and the other guy has only played 15 games," Meyer said of Jack Trudeau and Chris Chandler, the Colts' top quarterbacks.

Kansas City Chiefs

The Chiefs placed veteran quarterback Bill Kenney on waivers after virtually eliminating him from their plans this season by signing another veteran, Ron Jaworski, to back up Steve DeBerg.

Kenney, who signed as a free agent with the Chiefs in 1979, said he was asked to stay away from the club's offseason workouts because he does not fit into the team's plans this year.

The 34-year-old quarterback set a Chiefs' record with 4,348 passing yards in 1983 and earned a berth in the Pro Bowl. After numerous injuries in recent seasons, his starting role with the Chiefs diminished, and he was replaced midway last season.

New Orleans Saints

Coach Jim Mora isn't turning training camp into a country club, but he does plan to ease up a bit on the work load.

"I think we got worn out last year, and that probably starts in camp," he said.

The Saints finished 10-6 last season, riding high through a 7-1 start and going to 9-3 before a three-game losing streak knocked them out of the playoffs.

New York Jets

The Jets are without 11 of their 13 draft picks, plus veteran wide receivers Al Toon and Wesley Walker, who haven't signed. But Coach Joe Walton, who led the improved Jets to an 8-7 finish last season, said his "refurbishing" of the team will continue.

North State.....5
Tar Heel.....4

Scott Briley raced home on an in-field error with two outs in the bottom of the sixth inning as Greenville North State clipped Greenville Tar Heel 5-4 in the winners' bracket finals of the District V Little League All-Star Baseball Tournament Thursday.

North State rallied from a 4-0 deficit with one run in the third, three in the fifth and one in the sixth. Tar Heel pushed across two runs in the first on a two-run homer by D.J. Miles and added two runs in the second on a two-run, two-out single by Monte Roundtree.

James Ebron laced two hits, including a double, to lead North State. Briley, Mike Worthington, Adrian Jones, Matt Davis and Chris Grover had one hit each from the winners.

Ebron's double keyed the three-run fifth.

Roundtree collected three hits for Tar Heel. Miles and Jonathan Adams had two hits each while James Willer had one hit.

Jones went the distance on the mound to pick up the win. He struck out eight and walked four.

Tar Heel will meet Northwest Halifax tonight at 6 in the losers' bracket finals. Northwest Halifax ousted Roanoke Rapids by a 5-0 count Thursday.

The winner meets North State in the championship series Saturday afternoon at 4. A North State loss would force a second game Saturday night.

Roanoke Rapids.....7
Henderson Vance.....6

Clint Edwards and Brad Etheridge sparked a two-run rally with one out in the bottom of the seventh inning with back-to-back doubles, lifting Roanoke Rapids to a thrilling 7-6 win over Henderson Vance in a losers' bracket game in the District V Little League All-Star Baseball Tournament Thursday.

Matt House had slammed a two-out homer in the top of the inning to give Henderson-Vance a 6-5 lead.

Jovan Hawkins also homered for Henderson. David Hoyle and Michael Coghill contributed one hit each.

Etheridge finished with three hits to pace Roanoke Rapids. Jaime Inscope, Kevin Shearin, Michael Garner and Danny Inscope added one hit each.

Northwest Halifax.....5
Roanoke Rapids.....0

Antonio Williams tossed a two-hit complete game to lead Northwest Halifax to a 5-0 win over Roanoke Rapids in the losers' bracket of the District V Little League All-Star Baseball Tournament Thursday.

Northwest Halifax will meet Greenville Tar Heel tonight at 6 in the losers' bracket finals with the winner advancing to Saturday's championship against Greenville North State.

Williams was staked to a 3-0 lead in the first. Northwest added single runs in the second and fourth innings. The run in the fourth came on a solo homer by Otis Rooks.

Terrence Dickens had two hits for Northwest. Daster Magnum, Shawn Taylor and Curtis Smith added one each.

Brad Etheridge and Blaine Mills singled for Roanoke Rapids.

RED OAK — Wayne County handed Greenville a 5-2 loss in the championship of the Eastern North Carolina District V 13-year-old Babe Ruth Baseball Tournament Thursday at Northern Nash High School.

Left-hander Frankie Shingelton keyed the win for Wayne County, tossing a two-hitter with seven strikeouts.

Wayne County now advances to the state tournament which opens play today in Monroe.

HOLLYWOOD — Albemarle held off Central Carolina, 3-1, in the opening game of the Eastern North Carolina State Babe Ruth Baseball Tournament Thursday at D.H. Conley High School.

Albemarle totaled nine hits while

Central Carolina was limited to two.

In the second game, Nash County led Johnston County 4-1 after three innings, but rains forced a postponement. The two teams will complete action at 2 p.m. today.

Other games set for today in the tournament include Wilmington taking on New Bern at 5 p.m., and the host Coastal Plains team playing Pemo Stuart at 8 p.m.

PINETOPS — Coastal Plains landed a berth in the 16 Babe Ruth All-Star State Baseball Tournament Thursday with a two-game sweep of Wayne County at SouthWest Edgecombe High School.

Coastal Plains forced a second game in the championship series of the double-elimination tournament with a 15-6 win in the opener then seized the title with an 8-3 triumph in the second and deciding game.

The state tournament, also a double-elimination affair, launches play today at Cutler Field in New Bern. Coastal Plains is scheduled to play at 6 tonight.

Lancaster Caps Improbable Cub Comeback

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

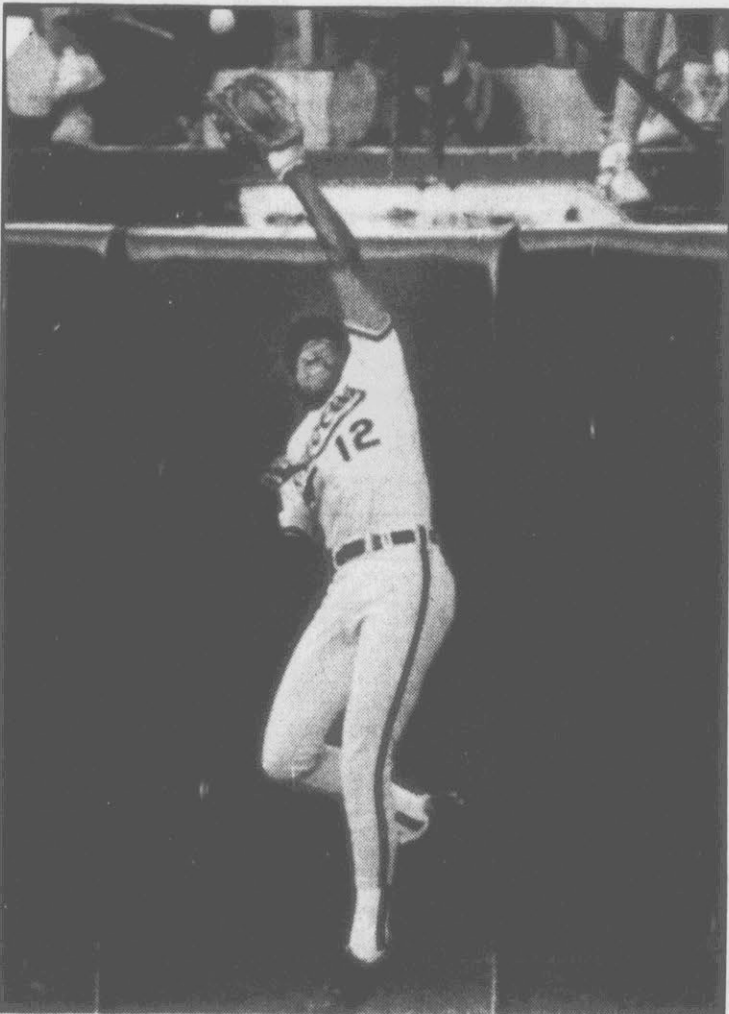

As a hitter, Les Lancaster is a thinking man's pitcher. "Believe it or not, I was looking for it," Lancaster said after shocking the San Francisco Giants with a two-out, run-scoring double in the 11th inning that gave the Chicago Cubs a 4-3 victory. It was only his sixth hit in 71 career at-bats.

"The pitch was a hanging slider," Lancaster said. "I didn't over-swing."

Lancaster, whose hitting feat made him the winning pitcher, batted because the Chicago bench was depleted of all reserves but a backup catcher. His first hit of the season scored Curtis Wilkerson from first and capped a most improbable comeback. In the ninth, Wilkerson had a two-run single in a three-run rally that tied the game.

"I was moving," Wilkerson said. "I practically swallowed my chewing tobacco going around third."

Lancaster, batting for just the second time this season, hit a hard grounder off the glove of third baseman Ken Oberkfell that rolled down the left field line. Wilkerson scored easily as the Cubs snapped San Francisco's five-game winning streak.

Times Are Rough For Texas' Hough

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ARLINGTON, Texas — Charlie Hough was the ace of the Texas pitching staff for several years, but this season the Rangers have remained in contention in the AL West despite Hough, not because of him.

Since beating the New York Yankees in mid-June, Hough is 0-5 with a 5.18 earned-run average and is in the second-longest losing streak of his big league career.

"Bad pitches, terrible," the 41-year-old Hough said of a disastrous first inning Wednesday night that started him on the way to a 4-0 loss to Boston.

The Red Sox slapped five singles off him for a 3-0 first-inning lead, and Hough dropped to 5-11, the most losses in the American League.

By the time Hough left in the fifth inning, he had given up nine Boston hits.

Hough's money pitch, the knuckleball, is considered by many to be the most unhittable of all deliveries, when thrown correctly. It's also the hardest for a catcher to handle.

But Wednesday night, catcher Jim Sundberg said, "he was pretty easy to catch" — proof that Hough's knuckler wasn't working.

"That's how I gauge it," Sundberg said. "He was real flat. It was not a good knuckleball. One out of five was a good one, and that's not enough. He had one inning that was halfway decent, and that's because he changed speed."

"I just saw it in his face. It was real frustrating. You could just see him fighting to make the ball move."

Good News For Hernandez

NEW YORK — Keith Hernandez and the New York Mets got some good news Thursday when an arthrogram determined that the only thing wrong with his right knee was a bruise.

Hernandez reinjured the knee Tuesday night, sliding into home plate against Houston. He fractured the kneecap on May 17 and was on the disabled list until July 13.

He has hit in three of five games since coming off the disabled list.

Stats, Streaks, Swings

The Kansas City Royals are 21-10 with George Brett, Bo Jackson and Danny Tartabull in the starting lineup. . . . Jose Oquendo has an 18-game hitting streak, the longest in the major leagues this season. . . . Atlanta's Joe Boever converted 12 straight save opportunities. . . . Robin Yount stole his 17th consecutive base Wednesday night, setting a Milwaukee record. . . . Andy Hawkins of the New York Yankees extended his scoreless streak to 23 before Texas' Pete Incaviglia homered in the fifth inning Thursday night. . . . Baltimore made just 26 errors in its first 66 games, but has committed 23 errors in its last 27 games. . . . After allowing 13 homers in his first nine games, Philadelphia's Don Carman didn't allow a homer in his next 28 1/3 innings. . . . Greg Briley hit four home runs in Seattle's first 90 games. He has hit four homers in the Mariners' last four games. . . . Chuck Finley has not allowed a first-inning home run in 53 career starts. . . . Doyle Alexander has not won in 10 starts. . . . Phil Bradley is 14-for-30 since being moved into Baltimore's leadoff spot. . . . Joe Carter did not hit a home run Thursday night in Kansas City and failed to tie the major league record of six homers in three consecutive games. Carter, who had homered five times in six at-bats for Cleveland, singled in four tries against Bret Saberhagen. . . . Nolan Ryan struck out 11 batters in 7 1/3 innings Thursday night against New York. He leads the majors with 166 strikeouts and had fanned at least 10 in nine games this season and 190 in his career. Ryan, who did not issue a walk, got his 284th career victory as Texas won 6-2. . . . The Cleveland Indians have lost 13 games in the final at-bat. . . . Chili Davis has just five hits in his last 46 at-bats.

Expos 4, Reds 1

Mark Langston continued in his role as Montreal's stopper with 13 strikeouts.

"This was a big ballgame coming off two tough losses," Langston said after reaching his season high for strikeouts while pitching a four-hitter.

"The most gratifying thing is to pick the club up, but that's the way it is with our staff," Langston said. "We won't have too many losing streaks."

The same can't be said for Reds, losers of five straight games and 10 of their last 11. Ironically, Langston, who dropped a 5-3 decision Saturday at Cincinnati, was their last victim.

Langston, 7-3 since his acquisition from Seattle on May 25, reached double figures for the fourth time in 11 National League starts. He led the American League in strikeouts three of the last five seasons.

The only run Langston allowed came in the first inning on Todd Benzing's 10th home run.

The Expos scored all their runs in the fourth against Rick Mahler, 9-9, who allowed six hits in six innings while losing to Montreal for the first time in four decisions this season. He beat Langston on Saturday.

Tim Wallach had a two-run single and Tim Lincecum and Hubie Brooks also had RBI singles.

Cardinals 7, Padres 1

Tom Brunansky hit a three-run homer and Joe Magrane allowed five hits in eight innings for his sixth straight victory as St. Louis snapped a four-game losing streak.

Magrane, 11-6, walked four and struck out five while shutting down the Padres, who had scored 26 runs in their two previous games. Todd Worrell pitched a hitless ninth inning.

Brunansky hit his sixth home run in nine games at Jack Murphy Stadium, a three-run shot which highlighted a four-run third inning off Walt Terrell, 5-13. Brunansky leads St. Louis with 13 homers.

Pedro Guerrero hit his eighth homer for the Cardinals, who had 15 hits.

Terrell has lost eight of his last nine decisions and has won only twice in 14 starts since April 29.

Mets 4, Braves 1

Darryl Strawberry hit his 21st homer and drove in three runs as New York won a game delayed twice by rain for a total of 1:48.

Bob Ojeda, 6-9, gave up two hits in 5 2/3 innings to win for the first time in five starts since June 26. Both hits off Ojeda — who walked six — were singles by Andres Thomas, the second driving in a run in the sixth.

Rick Aguilera came on with the bases loaded and struck out pinch-hitter Tommy Gregg, then finished with hitless relief for his seventh save. Aguilera fanned seven of ten batters.

Derek Lilliquist, 5-5, gave up six hits and four runs in the first three innings, but held the Mets hitless over the next three before he was removed. He has won once in eight starts since June 4.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Dave Stewart usually pitches against the Baltimore Orioles like he did against the National League All-Stars — poorly.

That was the case until Thursday night, when Stewart did what he usually does to the rest of the American League.

Stewart won his 14th game, tied for most in the majors, by ending a five-game losing streak to the Orioles in the Oakland Athletics' 5-2 victory.

"On any given day, I'm capable of beating any team in this league," said Stewart, hit hard last week in his All-Star Game start.

Those given days have rarely come against Baltimore, a team that turned Stewart down for a tryout when he was temporarily out of baseball in early 1986. Stewart, a 20-game winner the past two seasons, had not beaten the Orioles since Aug. 29, 1986.

innings and won his 284th career game, pitching Texas past visiting New York.

Ryan, 11-6, gave up five hits and did not walk a batter. He leads the majors with 166 strikeouts, and fanned at least 10 batters for the ninth time this year and the 190th time in his career.

Kenny Rogers relieved with one out, the bases loaded and the Rangers ahead 4-1 in the eighth. Steve Balboni hit an RBI single, but Don Mattingly grounded into a double play, although replays appeared to show Mattingly was safe at first base.

Steve Buechele, who had three RBIs, hit a two-run single in the eighth and Rogers finished for his first save.

Andy Hawkins, 11-9, extended his scoreless-inning streak to 23 before Pete Incaviglia hit a solo home run in the fifth for the game's first run. It was Incaviglia's 10th homer this season and fourth in his last eight games.

Indians 4, Royals 0

Greg Swindell got his 13th victory, pitching two-hit ball for seven innings as Cleveland won at Royals Stadium. Kansas City leads the majors with a 32-13 home record.

Swindell, 13-2, won for the ninth time in 10 decisions. Jesse Orosco and Doug Jones each pitched one hitless inning.

Bret Saberhagen, 9-5, had his six-game winning streak stopped.

Joe Carter, who had hit five homers in his last six at-bats, singled in four tries. He failed to tie the major league record of six home runs in three consecutive games, done seven times. Mike Schmidt was the last to do it, in 1976; Gus Zernial was the last AL player to accomplish the feat, in 1951.

Carter's leadoff single in the seventh inning started a three-run burst that broke open a scoreless game.

Mariners 5, Blue Jays 2

Scott Bankhead set a team record with his eighth consecutive victory — also an AL high this season — as Seattle beat Toronto.

Bankhead, 10-4, has won seven straight starts and eight of his last 10 outings. He gave up two runs on six hits in 7 2/3 innings and Dennis Powell went one inning for his second save.

Greg Briley hit his fourth home run in four games, a three-run shot in the third against Dave Stieb, 9-6. Briley, who hit two solo homers Wednesday in Baltimore, has eight home runs this season, but only one at the homer-producing Kingdome.

The Mariners, who have never had a winning season in their 13-year history, are 47-47. This is the second-latest date Seattle has been at .500, having been 59-59 in 1982.

Fred McGriff hit his 23rd home run for the Blue Jays.

Angels 4, Tigers 3
Wally Joyner singled home Claudell Washington from second base with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning as California sent Detroit to its 12th loss in 14 games.

The Angels scored the winning run against Mike Henneman, 6-3, on two walks and Joyner's third hit of the game.

Chuck Finley, 11-6, gave up 10 hits, struck out 12 and walked one. Tigers starter Doyle Alexander remained winless in 10 outings.

Washington homered and Joyner doubled in the Angels' two-run third that made it 3-2. Detroit tied it in the seventh on Mike Heath's RBI triple.

Gilbert-Steeb Match Crucial For US

MUNICH, West Germany — A fourth choice will play the first match for the United States against defending champion West Germany in the Davis Cup semifinals.

Despite the problems, Agassi said he is mentally and physically primed for the Davis Cup semifinal. Working with weights, he has added six pounds to his lean 5-foot-11 frame in the last month.

Gant After Slow, Steady Start

NASCAR Veteran Is Hoping To Parlay It Into Victory At A.C. Spark Plug 500

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONG POND, Pa. — Slow and steady may not be the formula for winning a NASCAR race, but Harry Gant has seen the importance of the steady part at Pocono International Raceway.

Gant, one of the most consistent drivers at Pocono over the years, will be shooting for his first victory in five years at the track in Sunday's $527,567 A.C. Spark Plug 500.

The 49-year-old Gant said the key to challenging over the grueling 500 miles on the 2½-mile tri-oval is "just staying in there, just being in there at the end."

"That's what it takes up there is a car that'll maintain that speed ... a car that'll run as good on old tires as it does on new ones," said Gant, who has nine top-five finishes in 17 starts at Pocono since becoming a Winston Cup regular in 1979.

To win the big prize of the weekend, however, a driver will need a mix of tortoise and hare. Any driver quick enough to win the pole on his one-lap qualifying run today, and also strong enough to win the race Sunday, gets a $106,400 bonus.

Gant last month finished second to Terry Labonte by 1.88 seconds at Pocono in the Miller 500.

"We hope we can just pick up another position," said Gant, who won at Pocono in July 1984.

Last month at Pocono, Gant's Oldsmobile ran steadily but didn't have enough to catch Labonte.

"We had a few things that happened," Gant said of the June 18 race. "The alternator quit working and we lost some power. We just didn't have it there at the last."

Gant said his rear-tire set-up was off and his battery went dead as well.

"It just seemed to be a little weak the last 30 laps or 20, especially the last 20."

NASCAR drivers have had a three-week break in their 29-race schedule, but that doesn't mean they've been resting. For Gant and several others, the lull has meant promotional races and other appearances.

"I've been keeping my schedule up," said Gant, a former carpenter who found time during the break to work on a new kitchen and storeroom for his steakhouse in his hometown of Taylorsville, N.C.

The break gave his team, which engine builder Leo Jackson formed in December, a chance to catch up in the garage. The team only had time to get two cars ready for the first half of the season.

"From then on, it was engine, engine, engine every week to put in," Gant said. "We never did get our race cars done. We ran the same car for almost every race except Daytona and Talladega."

Luckily for Gant, two cars were enough to get him through the first part of the season.

Open ...

Stewart, however, was unimpressed.

"Course records do not mean anything unless you win the golf tournament," he said. "If I come out on top on Sunday, then it will really mean something."

His round over the 7,067-yard, par-72 links course included an eagle, six birdies and one bogey. The 65 was one stroke better than the old course mark, tied most recently in Thursday's first round by English surprise Wayne Stephens.

It left Stewart one stroke in front of two journeymen from the European tour, Eduardo Romero and David Feherty, after 36 holes. Stewart held the lead briefly before Grady, playing in the following threesome, finished his own torrid round.

Joining Stewart at 137, Watson birdied the second, sixth, 11th and 12th holes, and eagled the 542-yard 16th. He took a bogey-5 at 13 and missed a chance for sole possession of second when he bogeyed the final hole.

Stephens, meanwhile, was holding his own, staying 6-under through 32 holes for the tournament with three birdies and three bogeys in his second round.

But in the gathering gloom of a midsummer day, Stewart outdid all of their rounds.

The 32-year-old Floridian, known as much for the clothes he wears as the golf he shoots, was as sharp as the black-and-white checked plus-fours in which he toured the course.

Starting the day at even-par 72, Stewart birdied the second and fourth holes, then eagled the par-5 sixth — the longest hole in Open golf, a 577-yard monster.

Another birdie came at another famous hole, the par-5 11th known as the Railway. Stewart stayed on track with a birdie-2 at No. 14, bogeyed the par-4 15th, then birdied the 16th and the 18th, capping the record round with a 20-foot putt.

Grady birdied the second, fifth, seventh and eighth, bogeyed the ninth, then birdied Nos. 10 and 11 and matched par from there to the clubhouse.

It was another solid round for the Australian, who recorded his first U.S. tour victory last month at the Westchester Classic.

Weeks of warm sunshine gave way to clouds and drizzle, then to pelting rain as the first half of the 156-player field took to the course.

"The course was playing completely different," said Greg Norman, the 1986 Open champion and among the early finishers. "I could feel the rain coming in."

Low scores from the morning could be protected by the worsening weather, a prospect that brought a smile to Norman's face.

"I hate to see it for the rest of the guys," he said with a grin. "It's terrible."

Norman was in at 139 after a second-round 70, 2-under par.

and Kuykendall reached via infield singles. Potter and Matt Aldridge followed with singles then a throwing error allowed two runs to score. Following a wild pitch, Debiase singled in the fifth run of the inning.

Four walks after Brinkley's leadoff single helped Wayne County put together its five-run third. A single by Ashley Thompson pushed across two runs. Michael Sauls added a run-scoring groundout.

Wayne County added an insurance run in the fifth when Sahne Jones reached on a swinging third-strike wild pitch, stole second, went to third on a passed ball and scored on a wild pitch.

Teachers' Salaries Rising, But Buying Power Steady

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Average teacher salaries are at an all-time high this year but still amount to just $737 above 1972 levels when adjusted for inflation, the American Federation of Teachers said today.

The union released an annual 50-state survey that put the average 1988-89 salary at $29,629. That compares with a $9,705 average salary in 1972, which translates into $28,892 in 1988 dollars, according to the group.

AFT President Albert Shanker said the bottom line is that all the raises teachers have received between 1972 and 1989 amount to about $41 a year.

"That's obviously not enough to pay a mortgage or provide for one's family, and it's certainly not enough of an incentive to enter teaching," he said in a statement.

Shanker said real earnings fell for a decade after 1972 and while salaries have jumped in the 1980s, "trying to recover the salary high water mark is as motivating as trying to get ahead on a treadmill."

The AFT survey, based on information from state education departments, showed that the average teacher salary has increased 5.5 percent over 1987-88. Alaska had the highest average salary at $41,832 while South Dakota was at the bottom with $20,525.

North Carolina ranked 34th with an average salary of $25,650.

Fourteen states reported starting salaries exceeding $20,000 and four — Idaho, North Dakota, South Dakota and West Virginia — had starting salaries below $16,000. Five states — Alaska, California, Connecticut, Hawaii and New York — reported first-year wages of more than $22,000.

The rival National Education Association reported similar findings in a teacher salary study released in March. The AFT conclusions also were consistent with the Education Department's latest "wall chart," a state-by-state comparison of education indicators issued in May.

Seniors Nevada, Far West Rap AMA Top Income List Stance

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Advocacy groups for the elderly say the American Medical Association is putting health for doctors ahead of health for seniors in its campaign against a congressional proposal to restrain rising Medicare costs.

A coalition of senior citizen organizations Thursday said the AMA was using scare tactics and distortions in suggesting health care for older Americans could be rationed under legislation that would set annual goals for Medicare reimbursements to doctors.

Newspaper ads run by the AMA depict a frail elderly woman and warn she could become an "expenditure target" and that "services would have to be reduced" if the proposed spending targets were exceeded.

The ad is aimed at legislation approved by the House Ways and Means Committee that would set yearly expenditure goals for Medicare physicians' costs nationwide to discourage doctors from padding profits by performing unnecessary procedures.

If spending exceeded the target, Medicare-approved doctor fees would not rise as rapidly in the following year as they would otherwise. A similar proposal is under consideration in the Senate.

The proposed spending targets are part of a broader package designed to cut down rising Medicare costs. The legislation also would revise the fees paid to doctors for various services to more accurately reflect the skill, training and time involved. It also would limit the amount that doctors could charge Medicare patients on top of the government reimbursement rate.

Theresa McKenna, director of information for the National Council of Senior Citizens, said the spending targets would help "put a stop to price gouging by America's physicians."

Ronald Pollack, executive director of Villers Advocacy Associates, said the AMA campaign against the targets was designed to "protect the wealth of doctors at the expense of the health of seniors."

"The AMA is conducting a slick and dishonest media campaign to protect their control of Medicare's golden goose, while pretending to be acting for older Americans who are in fact being squeezed by skyrocketing doctor charges," he said.

The AMA responded that its ads and lobbying campaign contained no distortions and were designed to "alert people to a danger" of medical service cutbacks.

WASHINGTON — Nevada's booming gambling industry is helping the state lead the nation in the growth of non-farm income, the government says.

The Commerce Department, reporting non-farm income growth during the 12 months ending March 30, said Thursday that Nevada led the nation with a 15 percent increase.

Wyoming trailed the other states, showing the only income growth that was below the 5.9 percent rate of inflation for the 12-month period, the department said.

Nationwide, non-farm income increased 9.4 percent, although there were wide differences between the states.

In the Southeast, North Carolina posted a 9.3 percent increase in non-farm income while Virginia was up 10.5 percent and South Carolina climbed 10 percent.

Construction of more hotels and casinos, as well as the mining industry, helped push Nevada ahead of the rest of the nation, according to department analyst Rudolph E. DePass.

Also showing sharp increases were Florida, whose non-farm income was up 12.1 percent; Nevada's neighbor California, 10.7 percent; Vermont, 10.5 percent; and Virginia, 10.5 percent.

DePass said Wyoming's poor 5.7 percent increase was partly due to declines in the construction and services industries.

Other states at the low end of the rankings were: West Virginia, up 6.3 percent; North Dakota, 6.4 percent; Oklahoma, 6.9 percent; and Alaska, 7.2 percent.

By region, the Far West, with Nevada and California, led the nation with non-farm income growth of 10.5 percent. This was followed by the Southeast, up 9.9 percent, and New England, up 9.6 percent.

Other regions and their income growth rates were: Great Lakes, 9 percent; Midwest, 8.9 percent; Plains, 8.8 percent; Southwest, 8.6 percent; and Rocky Mountains, 8.2 percent.

Differences between coastal and interior regions in non-farm growth continued to narrow from the first quarter of 1988 to the first quarter of 1989, DePass said, although coastal growth did continue to outpace the inland areas.

The Commerce Department focuses on changes in non-farm income as a better indication of a region's prosperity because of the often erratic nature of farm incomes.

EPA Approves Draft On Farm Pesticides

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Reacting to the recent public alarm over a chemical used on apples, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has approved a draft legislative proposal that would make it easier to pull potentially hazardous pesticides off the market.

The proposal, which is expected to be reviewed by President Bush's Domestic Policy Council within the next two weeks, would allow the agency to suspend use of a pesticide suspected of harming health even if there is not enough evidence to warrant an immediate ban.

During the uproar earlier this year over Alar, a growth regulator used on apples, the EPA was derided by consumer and environmental groups for announcing its intention to ban the chemical while defending its continued use for 17 months pending completion of a study. Following plummeting apple sales, Alar was withdrawn from the U.S. market last month by its manufacturer, Uniroyal Chemical Co.

"Allowing continued use of pesticide products for years after significant health risks are identified results in loss of public confidence in the government's ability to protect health," the EPA wrote in a July 18th internal report entitled "Highlights of EPA's Draft Legislative Proposals."

Agency officials fear that unless the law is changed, there will be another public outcry over yet another pesticide and the EPA again will be unable to act. "Alar is not an isolated case...." the internal report said. "EPA will be reviewing massive amounts of new testing data on old pesticide products, and some of the results will inevitably indicate risks."

The proposal is now being discussed with the U.S. Food and Drug Administration and the Department of Agriculture. A congressional source familiar with the negotiations said the FDA wants an even stronger bill while the USDA has pushed for a weaker one. Agency and congressional officials predicted that there is a 50 percent to 70 percent chance that the EPA's proposals, or a bill containing similar regulations, will be sent to Congress and approved.

Suspect Refuses Extradition

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TUCSON, Ariz. — A young man accused of stalking and killing actress Rebecca Schaeffer in Los Angeles plans to fight extradition to California, his lawyer said.

Robert John Bardo, 19, was ordered held on $1 million bond Thursday. He appeared from the Pima County Jail via closed-circuit television before Superior Court Judge Pro Tem Walter U. Weber on a California murder fugitive warrant.

Weber set the bond, which Los Angeles authorities had requested, and scheduled an Aug. 18 hearing to review the status of California's extradition efforts.

Bardo, who was being held in the jail's mental health unit under a suicide watch, gave no audible reply and did not speak during the proceeding.

Lori Lefferts, the public defender appointed to represent Bardo, said she advised Bardo to not waive extradition.

Earlier, Ms. Lefferts said Bardo's mental competency could be at issue.

Bardo was arrested Wednesday by Tucson police for running in and out of traffic on Interstate 10.

After his arrest, detectives said, Bardo gave Tucson police statements related to Ms. Schaeffer that prompted them to notify authorities in Los Angeles, where Miss Schaeffer, co-star of the defunct "My Sister Sam," was shot to death Tuesday.

"I don't want to say he confessed, but he implicated himself, for sure," said Los Angeles police Detective Dan Andrews.

A female friend of Bardo's living in Tennessee also called Los Angeles police headquarters Wednesday to tell police of his obsession with Miss Schaeffer. The woman told authorities Bardo had a video collection of her television shows and an autographed publicity photo, Los Angeles police Detective Dan Andrews said.

Andrews said Bardo had written Miss Schaeffer an affectionate love letter that was "a bit rambling."

Andrews said the friend also told authorities that Bardo said "he was going to harm Miss Schaeffer," but investigators do not know why he might have wanted to do so.

Miss Schaeffer, who appeared in the current film "Scenes From the Class Struggle in Beverly Hills," was shot once in the chest Tuesday at the door of her apartment building.

The weapon has not been found. Tucson Sgt. Paul Hallums said officers who searched the Bardo family's Tucson home Wednesday night and seized several bundles, including papers and a telephone directory, but did not find a gun.

Los Angeles detectives said Bardo is believed to have traveled the 480 miles to Los Angeles by bus and to have returned to Tucson late Tuesday. Andrews said Bardo apparently had gone to California several times in the past year and had called Miss Schaeffer's agency.

Bardo told Tucson Magistrate Clifford Hofmann he quit a job last week at a fast-food restaurant, where he was a custodian. Bardo appeared before Hofmann, also via closed-circuit television, on a misdemeanor count of obstructing a street or freeway.

Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY July 22
ARIES (March 21 to April 19): A project comes to a close, but another one will open. Be prepared to let go of the past. Independence is important.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): A financial transaction nears completion. Take greater charge of your life. Communicate with parents and distant relatives.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Early tensions exist over finances, shopping and leisure activities. Love interests animate the later day into a symphony of pleasure.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): You are feeling on top of the world, but it may be a lonely place. Mingle with friends who can give you warmth and joy.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Indulge yourself in sensual pleasures. Excite your current romantic partner and let go of inhibitions. Give and you will receive!
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Leisure time is crammed with unexpected events. A schedule may be impossible. Frivolous socializing can cost you money.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Mix with others but avoid indulgences that go beyond reasonable limits. It is a bright day, full of good cheer and trust.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): This day can be promising and creative. It may be necessary to deal with restless energy and strong sensual eagerness.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): You can express wonderful, creative feelings if you push career out of your mind and enjoy your free time.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Enjoy the outdoors and communicate with nature. Consider a recent money proposal. Make hay while the sun shines!
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Sensual pleasures have you singing with joy but can leave you exhausted. Take the lead, but know when to quit.
PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Avoid wasteful spending and extravagance when your financial judgment is subnormal. Creative juices continue to flow today.

 Had dummy held one more spade, life would have been easy. As it was, West's opening lead removed a key dummy entry. At trick two declarer cashed the king of clubs and, when East dropped the ten, made the excellent unblock of the eight from hand. Next came a low club from dummy to the nine, and it was West's turn to star. Realizing that winning the club would be futile since his remaining honor could be finessed, West allowed the nine to hold!
 Now declarer switched horses. Since there were three club tricks and two spades in the bank, he needed only four tricks from hearts and shifted to the king of diamonds and another. East took two tricks in the suit and declarer claimed the balance.

 This far-sighted series of plays left the defenders helpless. The best they could do, no matter how they defended, was to take four tricks. At the table, West won the heart

'Hunter' Reverses Tradition, Continues To Gain In Ratings

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC's "Hunter," a detective drama starring Fred Dryer, is a show that is reversing a television trend.

The usual course for a hit series is to reach a ratings plateau, then slowly decline as the show becomes complacent and finally runs out of steam.

"Hunter," which begins its sixth season in September, turned that routine on its ear. "Forget the first two years," Dryer says. "They don't count. We're going into our fourth season."

The show has been climbing in the ratings, finishing in a tie for 16th place this past season. The stories have also gotten better and have more substance. "Hunter" has bounced about the schedule, but seems to do best on Saturday at 10 p.m.

In the beginning, the ratings were lackluster. So were the stories. The show was a blatant rip-off of Clint Eastwood's "Dirty Harry" film character.

Dryer, the 6-foot-6 former All-Pro defensive end for the Los Angeles Rams, even closely resembles Eastwood. Hunter began as a swaggering, unorthodox cop who carried a .357-caliber Magnum, relentlessly pursued the bad guys and constantly fought with his superiors.

Stephanie Kramer also stars as his partner, Sgt. Dee Dee McCall, an equally hard-boiled detective who was nicknamed "the brass cupcake."

"We've evolved way out from that," says Dryer. "He's unorthodox today if it's unorthodox to be compassionate, to live your job and take it home with you. I credit Roy Huggins with turning the show around during his time as executive producer. He took a show that was making very small concentric circles and opened it up and set up guidelines to make it bigger and better with more emphasis on stories."

"What I contributed was to take those stories and tell them through the characterizations of Hunter and McCall. The audience must see how we react, how we feel about things. The relationship between Hunter and McCall is drastically important. You must care about the people you are watching."

More changes are due in the fall. Dryer and his partner, Lawrence Kubik, will become executive producers.

"You're going to see a lot of subtle changes in communications, in quality control and in post-production," Dryer says. "Hunter and McCall are moving away from the station house to Parker Center. It'll give it a more contemporary, high-tech look. We're redesigning the set and we're making it easier to film in. The old set physically restricted where you could place the cameras."

"We'll do fewer car chases, fewer fistfights. Our stories will have more to do with decision-making by Hunter and McCall. They'll have more to do with the human condition, where one truth can collide with another truth. Our scripts will be more accommodating to good roles for guest stars."

As a football player, Dryer believed in preparation. He adheres to that same practice as an actor and producer.

"The people paying you never see the preparation," he says. "But that's the most important thing you do. I sit in on all the story pitches and conferences. I have good writers and I rely on their tastes and ideas, but I help them structure the stories."

"This is a collaborative medium and I enjoy that. I want to hire people and let them do their job. But they can only do that if everyone is clear on the vision we're trying to accomplish. It's going to be my vision and my taste."

Dryer has his own production company and is developing films, but he doesn't expect to have time for them until "Hunter" leaves the air. He thinks the show will go at least another two years.

Since starting "Hunter" in 1984, Dryer has made four guest appearances on "Cheers" and went to Israel in 1986 to star in the feature film "Death Before Dishonor."

Dryer says first on his schedule after "Hunter" is to build a new house with his own hands. "I have a lot of builders in my family," he says. "My brother and I helped my father build his house. If I wasn't in acting, and producing I'd be in construction."

"The great thing is I can do other things in life. My life isn't defined by the fact that I do 'Hunter' or that I was a football player. I want as many diversified experiences as I can have. If I'm prepared for it it won't get by me."

'Hee Haw' Comic Overcame Early Denials, Makes It On TV

By Joe Edwards
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Gailard Sartain tried out for acting roles in high school and college, but never made the cast.

But he didn't give up on his ambition to become an actor. Thanks to his perseverance, he's become a familiar face on TV and in movies during the past 17 years.

The rotund 44-year-old performer also has been in segments originating in a flea market and a truck stop. This fall, he'll be seen in two new spots: "Eyewitness News" and the Kornfield County Kourtroom.

"Because of his comedy work in the cornpone 'Hee Haw,' some people didn't recognize him as the sheriff in 'Mississippi Burning.'"

"I've been told people don't believe I was the sheriff," Sartain said. "They say, 'No, not Maynard. What are you talking about?'" He considers his work in "Mississippi Burning" as his best to date.

"It's a quality film and I enjoyed it. It was a real departure for me. A couple of scenes of mine were brutal. There was an undercurrent of hatred and hostility. It was a gigantic departure from 'Hee Haw.'"

He has already finished two other movies that will be released in coming months — "Blaze," starring Paul Newman, and "Love at Large," starring Tom Berenger.

GAILORD SARTAIN

has been doing skits since 1972 on "Hee Haw," the syndicated country music-humor show on TV. He's also appeared in 23 movies, most recently portraying a sheriff in "Mississippi Burning."

He didn't get discouraged after being rejected for parts in productions while in high school in his native Tulsa, Okla., and at the University of Tulsa.

"I tried out for stuff, but never got in," Sartain recalled in an interview at a TV studio in the Grand Ole Opry House as he awaited "Hee Haw" tapings to resume.

"I wasn't in the right clique or in the theater department," he said. "Even in high school, there was a clique. At the college level, it was a major clique, and if you weren't a drama major, you might get to play a doorstop or something."

He first got noticed in the early 1970s while doing some comedy routines as host of late-night movies on a Tulsa TV station. This led to "Hee Haw," and his "Hee Haw" skits led to dramatic motion picture roles.

He portrayed the Big Bopper in "The Buddy Holly Story," and also was in "Hard Country" with Jan-Michael Vincent and Kim Basinger, "Roadie" with Art Carney and Meat Loaf and "The Jerk" and "All of Me," both starring Steve Martin.

On "Hee Haw," he's best known as the bumbling Maynard in a general store segment, and Hammerhead in a spot about a hotel. He

Dinah Returns 'Safe TV' To Nashville

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LOS ANGELES — Remember when talk shows used to demand nothing more of their guests than that they be famous?

Those were the days of Mike Douglas, Merv Griffin and Dinah Shore.

Those days are back, and so is Dinah Shore, who will star in "A Conversation With Dinah," a new half-hour interview show that begins Aug. 28 on the Nashville Network.

Shore, 72, is the perfect tranquilizer for a talk-show tense public — inviting, comfortable, safe.

Even TNN's news conference at the Century Plaza Hotel here the other day seemed to herald a return to a more reassuring TV age. While critics have spent much of their time chewing up talk-show hosts in the past year, this time out they filled up on a Southern-style breakfast (including grits) right out of one of Shore's cookbooks.

And rather than challenge the wisdom of the singer-entertainer's return to television, many seemed to breathe a sigh of relief. The news conference was more like a welcome-home party than an interview session.

"It is hard to be cynical about someone with the easygoing grace of a Dinah Shore, even when she says things like, "Television is what I am. It's who I am."

A 10-time-E Emmy winner who starred in "The Dinah Shore Show" (1951-57), "The Dinah Shore Chevy Show," (1956-63), "Dinah's Place" (1970-74), "Dinah and her New Best Friends" (1976) and the syndicated "Dinah!" (1974-1980), Shore has watched the twisted turns that talk shows have taken in recent years. Her reaction to the Geraldos and Oprahs of the world, perhaps predictably, is not one of shock or outrage. It's just not Dinah's style.

Instead she calls them "interesting" and comments, "I am absolutely fascinated because I thought those were things you only talked about in the doctor's office. ... It is not what I could do well."

"A Conversation With Dinah" is what Dinah Shore does well. The program will move out of the three-ring, confrontational circus of latter-day, issues-oriented TV and into a sanctuary (without a studio audience) that Shore says has the look and feel of her home (The furniture for the set was selected from the store in which Shore shops).

It's a place where guests will feel safe and warm — not left out in the cold, where the host or the great unwashed can have a go at them.

"I want to get beneath the crusts of a lot of people who are wonderfully programmed and have built up a kind of wall between them (and everybody else), but I don't want to do it in a hurtful way.

"I sometimes think we are being talked to death on television," she continued. "And you don't hear much conversation."

These won't be in-depth interviews, she joked, these will be "in-shallow, and if they turn out to be deep, I'm excited."

Former first lady Nancy Reagan will be the guest on Shore's debut show. Rounding out the week will be Betty White, John Forsythe, Angie Dickinson, Rosemary Clooney and Jack Lemmon. (In future weeks, there will be only three original shows in the Monday-through-Saturday rotation).

The guest list will be gleaned from what TNN describes as her "vast and intimate group of friends."

"Ours is an intimate portrait," said Shore, who added, "I don't want anybody to go away from that show, and say ... 'I wish I hadn't said that.'"

And from the looks of a short preview reel offered by the Nashville Network, nobody is giving away any state secrets. Reagan, for instance, talks about her first date with the former president; Dickinson talks about men, too, and specifically, her divorce; Jack Lemmon shares an anecdote about "Some Like it Hot"; and Gerald Ford explains why he pardoned Richard Nixon.

Hardly the stop-the-presses stuff National Enquirer-ing minds want to know.

But the Nashville-bred Shore is the product of a different television age. It was Eddie Cantor who brought Shore, a singer who has nine gold records to her credit, to national attention on his star-making NBC Radio program. And it was a musical variety show, the dinosaur of TV genres, that resulted in her greatest success.

House OKs Funds For Space Station

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — The House, engaging in a full-blown debate on the space program on the 20th anniversary of the Apollo 11 mission to the moon, Thursday easily defeated an attempt by liberal Democrats to slash funding for development of a manned space station.

The 291-to-125 vote preserved $1.6 billion in funding for research and development of the space platform. It came as the House passed by voice vote a $65.1 billion appropriations bill covering the departments of Veterans Affairs and Housing and Urban Development and several independent agencies.

The measure, the fourth of 13 annual spending bills to be approved by the House this year, also served as a vehicle for expressions of congressional dissatisfaction over the influence-peddling scandal at HUD.

In response to the scandal in HUD's section 8 moderate rehabilitation program, the legislation directs the department to devise a rule prohibiting the use of consultants in awarding contracts under the program. In addition, the legislation would eliminate any new funding for the so-called mod-rehab program and would require that all deputy assistant secretaries at HUD be reclassified as career positions instead of political posts. The Appropriations Committee report said the re-classification would help prevent "revolving door" employees from trading on their influence at HUD.

The House's defeat of an amendment by Rep. Charles E. Schumer, D-N.Y., seeking a $714 million cut in the space station represented an endorsement of a strong space program. But the overall spending bill appropriates $12.3 billion for NASA, $1 billion less than sought by the White House. The House did, however, restore $20 million of a $49 million cut in funds for the proposed national aerospace plane, increasing total funding for the plane to $98 million.

Schumer's amendment, which would have re-allocated the $714 million from the space station to programs on veterans' medical services, asbestos removal, and low-income and elderly housing programs, prompted a wide-ranging debate on national spending priorities.

Schumer and other Democrats argued that the nation can ill-afford massive spending on space exploration that siphons funds from other domestic programs, and criticized President Bush for proposing to expand the space program while refusing to support a tax increase to pay for it.

"As we reach for the stars let us not forget those who live underneath them," said Schumer.

But the concerns of liberals were drowned out by congressional euphoria over the 20th anniversary of the lunar landing.

"It's time the House spoke to the issue: Does it want a space program or does it not want a space program," said Rep. Robert A. Roe, D-N.J., chairman of the space, science and technology committee.

In other action on the massive spending bill, the House backed up the Democratic leadership in refusing to allow the Appropriations Committee to claim paper savings of about $316 million by advancing a pay date in October.

And it approved by voice vote an amendment that could cut off some community development funds to communities that repeatedly permit law enforcement officials to use unnecessary force in containing non-violent demonstrations. The amendment, sponsored by chief deputy GOP whip Robert S. Walker, R-Pa., was aimed at protecting anti-abortion protesters involved in "Operation Rescue" demonstrations at abortion clinics.

In a related appropriations development, the Senate Appropriations subcommittee on energy and water added $25 million for the proton-smashing Superconducting Super Collider and $24 million for magnetic fusion to a House-passed spending measure.

The Senate panel reduced by $70 million the House's funding of work on the Nevada civilian nuclear waste site but increased to $1.5 billion the House's allocation for a start on dealing with the critical waste disposal problem at the Pentagon's atomic bomb plants.

Bush Senate Battle Over PLO Talks

By Sara Fritz
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — President Bush beat back a serious challenge to his Middle East peace policy Thursday by engineering the defeat in the Senate of a proposal that would have ended U.S. negotiations with members of the Palestinian Liberation Organization.

talks with the PLO to continue. Co-sponsored by Democratic and Republican leaders in the Senate and acceptable to the president, the substitute was attached to a bill authorizing fiscal 1990 funds for the State Department. The Senate is expected to vote on the bill before the end of the week.

Helms, the only senator to vote against the substitute, dismissed it as "nothing but a fig leaf."

"After six months of careful preparation, we have arrived at a sensitive but promising diplomatic juncture," he said. "This is no time to take away from the executive a key tool of our diplomacy. Should this amendment become law, U.S. influence would be diminished and the prospects for peace significantly and possibly decisively undermined."

Bush was referring to the administration's current efforts to prod Israel into carrying out its proposal to hold elections among Palestinians in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. The proposed elections have been jeopardized by hard-line conditions for balloting established by Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's Likud Party.

Bush had tried to avoid a straight up-or-down vote on the Helms proposal by negotiating a compromise with the North Carolina senator. Helms said that he received several calls from the president, including one from Air Force One as Bush returned from Europe earlier this week, as well as several visits from White House Chief of Staff John Sununu, asking him to back down on the amendment.

But several days of behind-the-scenes negotiations involving Helms, the Senate leadership and the White House failed to produce a compromise, forcing the president to mount an all-out lobbying assault against the proposal.

The president's success was assured when he enlisted the support of Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, and Minority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., as well as most of the Senate's most outspoken opponents of the PLO, including Sens. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, and Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn.

Helms' proposal would have prohibited administration officials from negotiating with any PLO representative who had participated directly or indirectly in any terrorist act that resulted in the death, injury or kidnapping of an American citizen. While it technically did not rule out all contacts with the PLO, Helms acknowledged that it would effectively end U.S.-PLO talks.

Helms, who clearly took delight in the consternation that his proposal created at the State Department, refused to yield to a compromise proposal on grounds that the United States should not be talking with terrorists whose activities he estimated had been responsible for the loss of at least 40 American lives.

The substitute amendment adopted by the Senate rules out negotiations with any PLO representative "if the president knows and advises the Congress that the representative directly participated in the planning or execution of a particular terrorist activity which resulted in the death or kidnapping of an American citizen."

Although this language was carefully drafted to permit the current talks to continue without interruption, Dole said that Secretary of State James A. Baker III has promised to draw up a list of PLO members who would be excluded from the talks by this provision. It is not known how many names might ultimately be placed on the list.

Mitchell said that while Bush was opposed to the substitute, he would not veto it.

Afghans Release News Photographer

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — Authorities today released American photojournalist Tony O'Brien six weeks after he was arrested in Kabul in the company of anti-government guerrillas who brought him into the country.

"I want to walk on the street," O'Brien, 43, of Santa Fe, N.M., said moments after he was formally handed over to U.S. consular officer Renny Smith, who had flown from New Delhi.

"I want to thank the people of Afghanistan, the government of the United States and (President) Najibullah," said O'Brien, who had been on assignment for Time-Life Inc., covering the war from the Pakistan border city of Peshawar.

The photographer was arrested at a rebel hideout in the capital on June 8 after entering the country without a visa.

But he was never formally charged and the Soviet-backed government agreed to release him after a personal appeal by PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat.

He is to fly home via New Delhi on Saturday.

The Afghan government had demanded a formal letter from the State Department requesting O'Brien's release and authorizing Ms. Smith to escort him out of the country. Ms. Smith said she delivered a letter and another one was sent by telex from Washington direct to the Afghan government.

The contents of the letters were not disclosed.

"They got what they wanted," she said without elaborating.

Diplomatic sources said the government appeared to be using O'Brien as a pawn in an effort to force the United States, which backs the rebels, into issuing a statement that could be construed as recognizing Najib's government as legitimate.

A French photographer and an Italian photojournalist captured by government forces were freed last year, but only after their governments formally requested their release and dispatched senior officials to Kabul.

The clemency pleas by the French and Italian governments were widely publicized by Kabul as a show of official international recognition.

The guerrillas, backed by the United States and based in Pakistan, have been fighting to overthrow the Soviet-supported government for 11 years.

The United States and other Western nations closed their embassies in Kabul in late January and early February, shortly before Soviet troops withdrew from Afghanistan, ending a nine-year military intervention.

Tribal Clash Leaves Two Dead

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WINDOW ROCK, Ariz. — Hundreds of supporters of an ousted Navajo Indian chairman clashed with police and took over a tribal building, leaving two men dead and nine wounded, witnesses and officials said.

Supporters of suspended tribal Chairman Peter MacDonald occupied the tribe's business and finance building for five hours late Thursday after a pro-MacDonald rally that turned violent, authorities said.

Tribal police, federal agents and state police sealed off the area today. In Albuquerque, N.M., U.S. Bureau of Indian Affairs, U.S. District Judge Sid Mills said he had dispatched as many agents as available to the reservation.

A federal Bureau of Indian Affairs tactical team was working with tribal police and the FBI was expected to arrive at the remote reservation this morning, said Steve Goldstein, a spokesman for Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan Jr. in Washington.

The violence in this tribal capital near the Arizona-New Mexico line was the latest episode in the struggle for power on the Navajo Reservation. With 200,000 members the Navajos are the nation's largest Indian tribe.

The two victims, Jimmy Dixon and Arnold Begay, were MacDonald supporters, officials on both sides said.

Four of the other 10 hospitalized suffered gunshot wounds, and the others were treated for cuts and other injuries, said Rosalyn Curtis of the Indian Health Hospital in nearby Fort Defiance.

According to Goldstein, tribal Police Chief George John was in Washington and pro-MacDonald forces were trying to reinstate former Police Chief Wilbur Kellogg.

In January, MacDonald was accused during U.S. Senate hearings of accepting kickbacks and personally sharing in the $7.2 million profit realized by non-Indian businessmen who sold the tribe a ranch for $33.4 million in July 1987. He was placed on administrative leave by the Tribal Council on Feb. 13.

After a rally at the home of a

MacDonald booster about a mile from the government buildings, a throng of 300 members of the MacDonald-backed Pro-Dineh Voters group and others marched or drove early Thursday evening to the seat of government. "Dineh" is a Navajo word meaning "the people."

Witnesses said the demonstration got out of hand when members of the crowd attacked Lt. Daniel Hawkins, a Navajo police official who led the May 24 sweep of the tribe's administration building that ended with MacDonald and his appointees evicted from offices they had refused to leave.

Hawkins was beaten and kicked by assailants wielding 4-foot wooden clubs who "handcuffed him and left him lying there," said tribal spokesman Duane Beyer. He said the crowd then went after a second officer, taking his revolver while beating and handcuffing him.

Onlookers said Dixon took Hawkins' gun and shot tribal police Sgt. Daniel Lee. According to varying accounts, Lee either returned the fire, killing Dixon, or Dixon was gunned down by other officers.

Beyer said Begay was shot fatally by an unidentified officer who saw Begay with a club about to hit another officer from behind.

Witnesses said the crowd turned its clubs on the doors of the tribe's financial services building to break in.

Defendant Will 'Cooperate'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BROWNSVILLE, Texas — Prosecutors arranged a plea bargain with a man linked to a cult ring that allegedly smuggled marijuana and killed at least 15 people in rituals intended to magically protect its operations.

Serafin Hernandez Rivera, 45, pleaded guilty Thursday to possession with intent to distribute 113 pounds of marijuana seized in May 1987.

Prosecutors will recommend dropping four other drug-related charges against Hernandez, along with a firearms indictment, in exchange for Hernandez' cooperation, said Assistant U.S. Attorney John Crews.

Hernandez Rivera was the only person arrested in the United States in connection with the discovery of 15 bodies, many of them horribly mutilated, near Matamoros, Mexico, in April.

Hernandez was never accused in any of the killings.

His son, brother and three other men are in jail in Matamoros on murder and drug charges. Six other people have been jailed in Mexico City, and another of Hernandez' brothers is a fugitive.

Prosecutors also agreed not to seize Hernandez' Brownsville home, indict him in connection with an alleged 75-kilogram cocaine purchase last year, or recommend that the resident alien be deported to Mexico.

Crews would not say how Hernandez is expected to cooperate.

Public Notices

PERMIT STATUS IN ACCORDANCE WITH 10 NCAC 10F.

The North Carolina Department of Human Resources Hazardous Waste Branch has notified Burroughs Wellcome Company of Greenville, North Carolina that it intends to deny Burroughs Wellcome's application for a permit to incinerate hazardous wastes in the NAO incinerator at their facility located at the intersection of US 13N and State Road 1500. The intent of this notice is consistent with Section 3005(c)(2)(A)(ii) of the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act as amended which calls for issuance or denial of a final permit within five (5) years after the enactment of the notice and ending on or before the date of the Hazardous Waste Amendments of 1984. A draft permit cannot be prepared for the NAO incinerator since operating conditions have not been determined by a trial burn on the incinerator as it now exists.

The public is invited to comment on this application by the forty-five (45) day comment period commencing on publication of this notice and ending on September 5, 1989. A public hearing on this matter will be held if requested during the comment period.

Comments regarding this action should be sent to the following address by September 5, 1989:

Jerome H. Rhodes, Head
North Carolina Hazardous Waste Branch
Post Office Box 2091
Raleigh, North Carolina 27602-2091

Copies of the application package are available for review at the following location during the comment period from 4:00 p.m. Monday through Friday. All data submitted by the applicant is available as part of the administrative record.

 JOB #9190037

THE ROAD TO SUCCESS IS FILLED WITH STRESS. THE DRIVE TO WORK NEEDN'T BE.

the new Integra and you'll see exactly what we mean. Bolstered front bucket seats offer excellent support and comfort. An expansive "greenhouse" design makes for extraordinary visibility. And the interior's controls and gauges are easy to reach and easy to see.

All of which will help you make more of the Integra sedan's other interior. The one that contains a powerful 1.8-liter, dual-overhead cam, 16-valve engine. An engine inspired by Formula One racing technology.

And to help you handle the road, the Integra is equipped with a four-wheel independent double wishbone suspension system, and four-wheel disc brakes.

So stop in for a test drive of the 1990 Acura Integra. It could give you a whole new outlook on going to work. Not to mention going home.

No one ever said that getting to the top would be easy. But getting to the office is an altogether different story.
 At least, if you're getting there in the 1990 Acura Integra.

Manila Floods

Low-lying areas of Manila were flooded Thursday after heavy rains spawned by Typhoon Gordan. The storm hit the northern part of the Philippines early this week, leaving at least 32 people dead and hundreds without homes.

Briton Hanged For Drug Trafficking

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KAJANG, Malaysia — A Briton convicted of drug trafficking was hanged in prison today and spent his last hours clutching a photograph of his 7-year-old daughter, authorities said.

Derrick Gregory, arrested with more than a pound of heroin, was the first Briton to be executed under Malaysia's stringent 14-year-old drug law that deems a trafficker to be anyone carrying more than a half ounce of heroin.

Authorities ignored pleas from British diplomats that he be spared.

Gregory clutched the photo of his daughter, Tara, through the night until he was marched to the gallows early today, authorities said.

Gregory, 39, had not seen his daughter since she was an infant.

He was arrested in 1982 at a Malaysian airport with the heroin hidden in his boots. At the trial, the court in Penang was told Gregory had 14 packets of the drug in his boots and four packets in his underwear. He was arrested just before he planned to board a plane for Singapore en route to Los Angeles.

His wife divorced him soon after he was sentenced to death in 1987.

Gregory, of Middlesex, England, was turned down in his final appeal for clemency by the Penang State's Pardons Board last week.

Gregory's parents, Kenneth and Mary Gregory, and his brother, Paul, visited him Thursday at the Kajang jail, 10 miles south of Kuala Lumpur.

OAS Proposes Transitional Rule, Elections In Panama

By John M. Goshko
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — The Organization of American States, ignoring U.S. fears of giving Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega a possible way to retain control in Panama, Thursday called for establishment of a transitional government by Sept. 1 followed by new presidential elections "as soon as possible."

Foreign ministers of the 31-nation group concluded two days of private negotiations by instructing three mediators to help Panamanian factions negotiate "through democratic mechanisms and in accordance with domestic procedures in effect in Panama, a transfer of power on Sept. 1 and the holding of free elections as soon as possible."

U.S. officials said they had agreed reluctantly to this course because it offers hope of getting rid of Noriega. However, Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence S. Eagleburger, who headed the U.S. delegation, also spelled out the U.S. understanding of the instructions in order to warn Noriega and his supporters in the Panamanian Defense Forces not to manipulate the OAS plan to stay in power behind the scenes.

Jail Escape

GREENSBORO (AP) — Three Greensboro jail prisoners hit the ground running late Wednesday after they assaulted a guard, burst through a glass window and left blood trailing behind them during two 30-foot leaps.

Two of the teen-age inmates were recaptured within 40 minutes, but a third — 18-year-old Dennis Maurice Richardson — remained at large Thursday.

U.S. officials fear that indefinite phrases such as "a transfer of power" and "domestic procedures in effect in Panama" could permit Noriega to replace the figurehead provisional president, Manuel Solis Palma, with another civilian under his control.

If that happened, U.S. officials warned, the Noriega-controlled transitional government might seek to delay new elections indefinitely or repeat the electoral fraud that marred Panama's May 7 presidential balloting. When Noriega failed to get his hand-picked candidate elected, he annulled the results, moving the OAS to try to resolve the resulting crisis.

"Let us be clear about what the United States believes we have decided here," Eagleburger said. "There must be a transfer of power through democratic means by Sept. 1 ... that must reflect the will of the Panamanian people. The report of the commission makes clear what must happen before Sept. 1 for the transfer of power to happen: General Noriega must go."

"New democratic elections must be held as soon as possible. Not in one year or two years or three years — but as soon as possible."

However, despite two days of closed-door bargaining, the United States was unable to prevail over the reluctance of Latin American members to adopt language that might be construed as interfering in Panama's internal affairs. The OAS instruction also did not say specifically that Noriega must give up command of the defense forces, which is a major U.S. goal. The United States did get agreement that the OAS mediating commission of three foreign ministers — appointed May 17 — should report by Aug. 23 about the prospects for transferring power by the Sept. 1 deadline.

The Panamanian constitution calls for a new president to be installed on Sept. 1, and the United States wanted the OAS mediating commission to support the claim of Guillermo Endarra, the U.S.-supported opposition candidate in the recent election. The commission's failure to do that prompted Eagleburger's statement.

The three mediators — Foreign Ministers Diego Cordovez of Ecuador, Mario Palencia Lainsiesta of Guatemala and Sahadeo Basdeo of Trinidad — have reported that there is a chance of an agreement between Noriega and the opposition. Panamanian Foreign Minister Jorge Ritter, a Noriega loyalist, said Thursday his government will cooperate fully with the mediating team, but there has been no real sign that Noriega is willing to surrender command of the Defense Forces.

Lucky Lunch

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — A man who went home to retrieve a lunch he had forgotten saved his housemates from a fire late Tuesday.

Robert L. Hicks found the house where he lived on fire when he went back for his lunch about 11 p.m., police said. When he couldn't wake his five housemates by knocking on the windows, he went through the front door, woke everyone up and got them out, according to police reports.

Firefighters then extinguished the blaze.

Police placed damage to the frame structure's floor, walls, and windows at $3,000.

Siberian Miners Call Off Strike

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PROKOPYEVSK, U.S.S.R. — Coal miners in Siberia ended their strike today after exacting promises of better food, housing and working conditions, but the wave of unrest they launched continued in other key coal regions.

Some of the 150,000 miners who went on strike last week in Siberia's Kuznetsk coal basin region returned to work Thursday and the rest went back today, strike leaders and the official Tass news agency said.

Despite announcements that President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's sweeping concessions — including granting miners greater control over their industry — apply nationwide, tens of thousands remained off the job elsewhere.

Strikes continued in Russian republic, the Ukraine, the northern city of Vorkuta and the Karaganda coalfields of Soviet Central Asia, official media said. A Ukrainian dissident reported another strike near the Polish border.

The labor turmoil is the Soviet Union's worst in six decades.

Gorbachev has expressed sympathy for the strikers and placed much of the blame for the miners' deteriorating working and living conditions on leaders of the officially sanctioned trade unions.

Still, he and other Communist leaders have warned that if the strikes don't end quickly coal shortages will shut down much of the country's industry.

On Wednesday, the Kuznetsk strike committee and members of a high-level government commission signed an agreement meeting many of miners' demands.

The workers were promised higher wages, increased deliveries of meat, sugar, soap, clothes, furniture and other consumer goods, more housing construction and — most important — a greater voice in running their industry.

"It's a victory over the system that we've had in the Soviet Union for the last 70 years, a system in which we work hard but get little in return," said Pyotr A. Menayev, an engineer at the Taldinski Severny open pit mine on the outskirts of Prokopyevsk.

Strike committee member Vyacheslav G. Akulov stressed that the miners had agreed to "interrupt the strike, not to end it."

He said the miners would hold the government to its word: "If the government doesn't keep its promises, we will go back on strike."

The strike wave began 11 days ago in Kuznetsk, the country's second-largest coal field.

Tass said late Thursday that strikes had ended at six mines in the Ukraine's Donetsk coal basin but that most mines in the region — the country's largest coal field — remained on strike.

Somalia Executes 46 After Clashes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NAIROBI, Kenya — The military in Somalia summarily executed 46 men after 400 people were killed in clashes that began when troops fired on Moslem worshippers there, a human rights group and independent sources said today.

The executed men were among an estimated 2,000 people arrested in house-to-house searches after the disturbances one week ago in the Somali capital, Mogadishu, said the human rights group, Africa Watch.

The group said the men were rounded up two days after the unrest, taken to a beach just outside Mogadishu, and shot to death.

Africa Watch and other sources put the number killed during the July 14 violence at around 400. Somalia's government previously said 23 people died and 59 were injured in the unrest, which it blamed on "troublemakers."

Africa Watch and the other sources said many of those who were slain died when military vehicles armed with .50-caliber machine guns opened fire on houses in heavily populated residential districts.

The human rights group said more than 1,000 people were injured.

Africa Watch, with offices in London and Washington, released its statement in Nairobi. The independent sources spoke on condition of anonymity for fear of government reprisals.

Mogadishu residents contacted by telephone said that aside from isolated gunfire that continued a day after the riots, there had been no further violence in Mogadishu.

Africa Watch and the independent sources said the violence broke out after the July 13 arrests of four Moslem leaders and an unspecified number of civilians. They said armed detachments surrounded Mogadishu's major mosques in anticipation of protests and tried to disperse worshippers as they left the mosques following prayers.

Soldiers then opened fire on the worshippers, who fought back mainly with rocks and stones, the human rights group said. In at least one neighborhood, worshippers who outnumbered security forces seized their weapons and returned fire, the rights group said.

The army moved into the city with tanks and took over major government buildings and strategic roads, according to Africa Watch.
