Uno To Resign As Party Loses Control After Three Decades

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — Prime Minister Souseke Uno today announced that he would resign after his scandal-plagued party suffered a stinging electoral defeat — losing control of a house of parliament for the first time in its 34 years.

The long-governing Liberal Democrats had seen their popularity plummet over the Recruit influence-peddling scandal, a new 3 percent sales tax and the liberalization of agricultural imports, which farmers say hurts their livelihood.

Uno, who has been prime minister for less than two months, said his party's loss of control of parliament's upper house in Sunday's elections was ultimately his responsibility.

"It was a very difficult election," he told a nationally televised news conference, speaking calmly.

Uno had been criticized by women's groups and others for his alleged extramarital affairs with women including a geisha who said he paid her to be his mistress for several months.

He said he hoped a successor could be found "promptly." Analysts said they expect the process to take at least several weeks.

Uno's resignation will result in the dissolution of the entire Cabinet and a restructuring of the governing party's leadership.

In the balloting for half the 252 seats in parliament's upper house, the big winner was the Japan Socialist Party, led by Takako Doi, the first woman head of a major Japanese party.

Of the 126 seats at stake, the Socialists won 46, the Liberal Democrats 36. The Socialists' total strength in the chamber rose from 43 to 66; the Liberal Democrats' fell from 142 to 109.

Rengo (Confederation), a new labor-based group, was received 11 seats and the centrist Komeito (Clean Government Party) 10 with the rest split among smaller parties.

Ms. Doi said her party would quickly call a meeting of opposition leaders to form a coalition against the Liberal Democrats, who still hold 293 of the 512 seats in parliament's more powerful lower house.

Any such coalition is expected to be fragile. While most major opposition parties have called for abolishing the new sales tax, they vary broadly on other issues such as defense policy, relations with the United States, and nuclear power.

With the loss of their majority in the upper house, however, the Liberal Democrats will face greater difficulties in passing legislation.

The upper chamber can vote down bills and can delay but not block the budget and treaties. Differences between bills passed by the two houses must be ironed out by a conference committee.

Ms. Doi called her party's victory "the people's verdict," and said Uno's decision to step down was "only natural."

She said the Socialists' first priority would be to pass a bill in the

Bush Says B-2, Star Wars Are Critical

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush, defending the half-billion-dollar B-2 Stealth bomber and saying the Star Wars missile defense system is critical, appealed today to senators to keep his defense budget intact.

The president, meeting with members of the Senate Armed Services Committee and other senators, also said an espionage investigation at the State Department doesn't help U.S.-Soviet relations.

Bush said the B-2 and the Strategic Defense Initiative, both of which are threatened with deep cuts on Capitol Hill, are essential to the U.S. defense and to arms talks with the Soviets.

"I strongly support what we sent up there to the Hill. SDI, in my view, is critical," said Bush.

The B-2, he added, "is a revolutionary plane with revolutionary technology. Again I would strongly urge your support for that." He also appealed for support for funds for the Midgetman missile and for making the MX missile mobile.

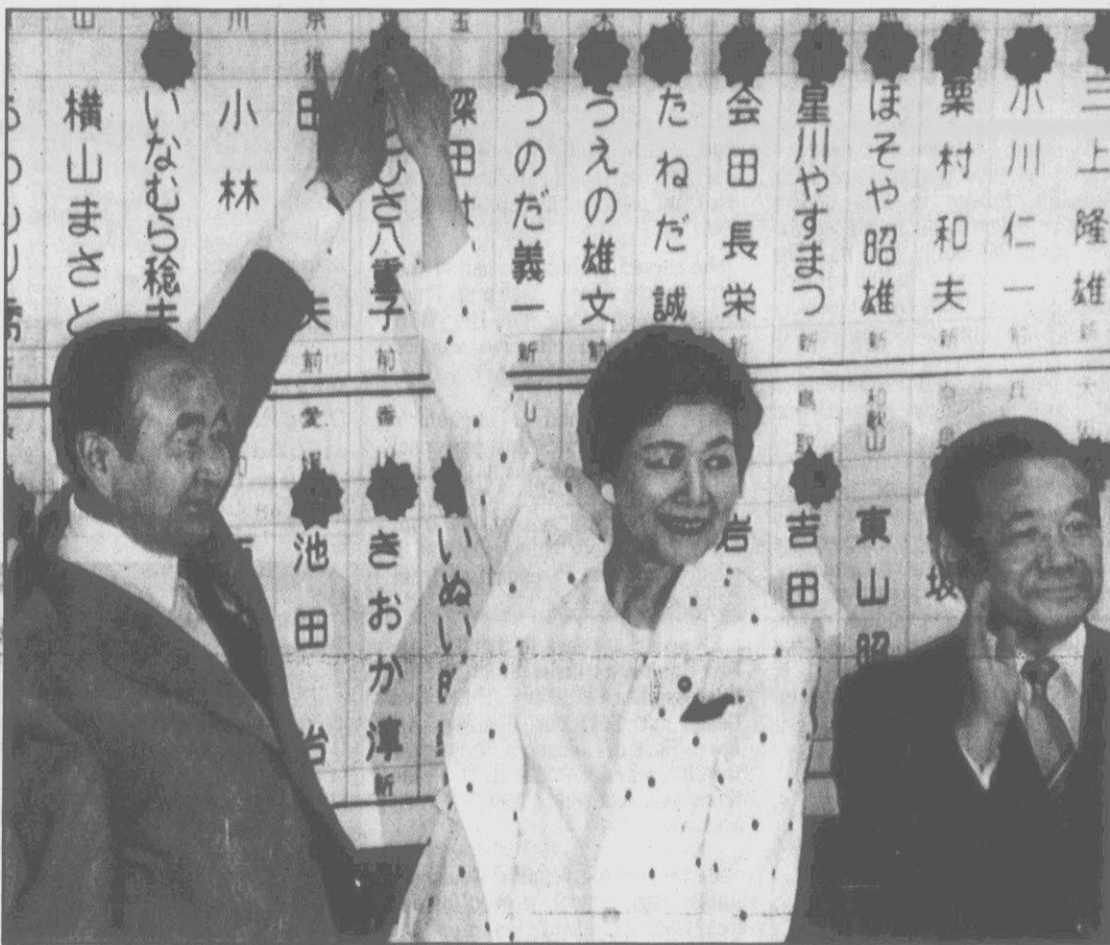

"We need the utmost flexibility in terms of arms control," said Bush.

Asked by reporters how he could justify the expense of the B-2, costing $70 billion for 132 planes, or $530 million apiece, Bush replied, "I justify it because I think the prime responsibility of the president is the national security of the United States."

Asked about the investigation of top State Department official Felix Bloch as a possible Soviet spy, Bush said it "is a very serious matter and it will be thoroughly investigated."

Pitt Weather Brings Mixed Bag Of Blessings, Woes For Farms

By Jerry Raynor
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The current run of warm summer days and nights, coupled with recent rainfalls and high humidity, has resulted in a mixture of blessings and problems for Pitt County farmers, according to Sam Uzzell, Agriculture Extension agent.

"In the case of tobacco, the number one money crop in Pitt County," Uzzell said, "the warm temperature is just what tobacco wants, what it needs."

"In areas where rain has been heaviest, there are a few cases of obviously too much moisture, which restricts the plant's root system."

"However," Uzzell added, "so far there has been little damage to tobacco by being pushed over by high winds during summer storms, which is fortunate. Some years such damage has been relatively heavy from wind."

Uzzell said that peanuts "are highly susceptible to fungus diseases when warm weather and high humidity exist at this time. Just now, farmers need to pay close attention to the onset of fungus diseases."

"We have access to a weather forecasting system which gives advice on good days to spray peanuts. A tape recording with this information is being installed today. Farmers can get details on best spraying days by calling 830-6371," he said.

The corn crop in the county, Uzzell said "looks promising for a good harvest despite the late season in which much of the corn was planted. The high heat does not appear to be interfering with pollination. This is good, as excessive heat at pollination time can be a real problem. Farmers do need to keep a watch for corn ear worms."

Current weather conditions for another major Pitt County crop, soybeans, "is conducive to the prospect of a good harvest. We are concerned about the insect population for late-planted soybeans, but so far not too many spider mites have been seen," he said.

Local truck farms, Uzzell said, "have experienced some stem rot caused by high rainfalls. This has been true particularly for squash and tomatoes. But all in all, the yield in vegetable crops has been quite good."

Gorbachev Says Striking Miners Pose Biggest Test

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — Mikhail S. Gorbachev told legislators today that the strikes that have swept the Soviet Union's major coal fields for nearly two weeks have been the "biggest test" of his four years in power.

He blamed coal ministry and local officials rather than the miners for the unrest — which halted work at mines in all the country's major coal fields — but he said "deciding such questions by striking will ruin our tasks."

The Soviet president said most striking miners have returned to work, including at least half the 300,000 miners in the country's biggest coal basin, the 121-mine Donetsk region in the Ukraine.

"We are coming out of a very serious crisis, the biggest test during the four years of perestroika," Gorbachev told the Supreme Soviet, referring to his program of restructuring economic and political life.

On Sunday, Gorbachev said in a rare television interview that he was "inspired" by the workers' initiative although he disagreed with their tactics. He also said he understood why the miners mistrusted a government that long ignored them.

The strikers in the Donetsk basin were among the last holdouts from the nationwide coal strike that started in western Siberia July 11 and spread to the Arctic Circle and Central Asia.

The strikes began to ebb Friday as the Siberia strikers returned to work Friday after exacting promises of higher pay, better food, clothing and housing and greater control over their industry.

The government said those concessions would apply to striking miners nationwide.

Strikers in the Donetsk have held out for legal guarantees from the Supreme Soviet that the government would keep the promises it made to miners in a settlement signed Saturday by strike leaders and government officials.

A lawmaker from the Pechora coal basin in the far north told the Supreme Soviet that miners around the city of Vorkuta also remained on strike, in part due to "disinformation" by the media.

Miner Vladimir P. Lushnikov said state-run media reported erroneously that the Vorkuta strike ended.

According to recent reports, miners remained on strike at 11 of the 13 mines in Vorkuta and at all 12 mines in Chervonograd in the western Ukraine.

Grower Ends Life On Lawn Of Farm Credit Service

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SHALLOTTE, N.C. — William "Shorty" Bellamy appeared to be a happy, life-loving guy. He was a signature away from a possible fortune after rich deposits of high quality sand desired by industry and golf courses had been discovered on his farm.

But he ended his life on the lawn of the Farm Credit Service office on July 7. Friends said Bellamy was squeezed by farm debts and believed lawyers, loan agents and developers were working to take advantage of him.

"He done it to send a message," says Hollis Smith, a farmer who owns a produce stand on U.S. 17 where Bellamy stopped often to share jokes and troubles.

Bellamy owed the Farm Credit Service $112,715.

Bellamy, 55, was found about 6:45 a.m. July 7 when the manager of the McDonald's across U.S. 17 from the Farm Credit Service noticed a man sprawled on the lawn. His hand still clutched the .25-caliber pistol. Charlotte police ruled his death a suicide.

Smith has part of his own property up for sale so he can get money to pay off a $150,000 farm debt. He says he can understand why Shorty Bellamy did what he did.

"It is pure hell to know you can't meet your obligations," he told the Greensboro News & Record. "A man who has always paid his debts and then can't — it's tough on him."

Yet he was also a bitter, frustrated man, a victim of a crisis that most Americans have forgotten about: the farm depression of the mid-1980s. Bad weather, falling crop prices and overborrowing plowed many of America's farmers under. Bellamy was still heavily in debt from those years.

He and some farmer friends were convinced that lawyers, bankruptcy court officials, farm lending agents and land developers were trying to take advantage of them.

Bellamy believed developers were working behind his back to hasten foreclosure on his 187-acre farm, located about 14 miles south of Shallotte and about six miles west of the seafood capital of Calabash. Holden, Ocean Isle and Sunset beaches are close by. North Myrtle Beach is just a few miles away across the South Carolina line.

Farms are being replaced by new residential communities and golf courses in south Brunswick County.

Some farmers complained of looking up from their fields and seeing developers sizing up their property.

Bellamy believed the fate of his farm was in the hands of the Farm Credit Service, a nationwide financial lending cooperative that is supposed to be run by farmers for farmers. It makes loans for planting, equipment and land.

Bellamy and other farmers had complained that a certain employee would call late at night threatening foreclosure. Some believed the employee was in cahoots with developers.

Farmers say every time they proposed a way to ease debt burdens, Farm Credit Service bureaucrats would nix the idea.

Bellamy, whose main crop was tobacco, quit farming about four years ago because of money and health problems.

Last September, he sought relief in U.S. Bankruptcy Court. He also was being sued in a land dispute.

He felt squeezed. He spent hours calling and visiting lawyers, bankers and Farm Credit Service people.

"They are going to be the death of me," Corbit Reeves says Bellamy told him.

"That was about three or four months ago," says Reeves, a friend and farmer who is also in financial trouble. "I just thought it was talk."

In Bankruptcy Court, Bellamy listed debts of $275,896,097, including the $112,715 owed Farm Credit. His assets totaled $734,000 — his farm accounting for most of that.

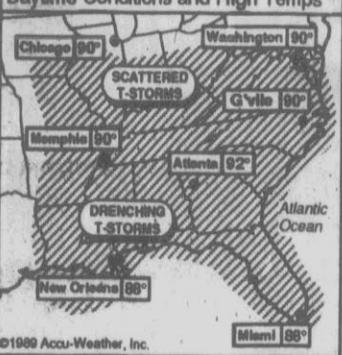

Friends say Bellamy desperately wanted to keep the land.

He knew the sand on the property could make him well off, and he wanted to pass the property on to his children, just as it had been handed down to him.

Cost Of Transplant Drug Causes Man To Halt Treatment

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WILSON, N.C. — A federal health program that pays for expensive kidney transplants should include long-term payment for the drugs that keep those kidneys functioning, say transplant specialists.

Paul Lucas of Wilson is one patient who was forced to choose between a drug and basic necessities. In January he stopped taking the anti-rejection drug cyclosporin, which costs more than $100 a week, because his Medicare payments for it ran out.

The federal Medicare program will pay most of the costs for dialysis and for kidney transplants, but it does not pay for continuing the use of cyclosporin. The drug helps prevent rejection of the transplanted organ by suppressing the body's immune system.

The policy is "dumb economics" in addition to poor health care, said Dr. Stanley Mandel, director of the transplant program at the University of North Carolina School of Medicine.

"It's a disservice to people to have a drug that gives them an advantage in preventing rejection and then denying it to them because of the cost," he said.

"I don't think people ought to be taken off a drug that prevents rejection because they can't afford it. That is the wrong reason..."

Lucas said he had little choice but to quit the drug.

"I had to cut something out," said Lucas, a former plumber whose only income is a disability payment. "You've got to have somewhere to live, have enough to pay the light bill and buy a little food."

So far, Lucas has been lucky in that the kidney he received in a transplant at the East Carolina University medical school in 1986 continues to function. If it fails, he will have to return to dialysis treatments that remove wastes and excess fluid from the blood.

Transplant specialists say Lucas' case illustrates the illogic of the federal health program that pays for an expensive treatment for kidney ailments and not a less expensive alternative.

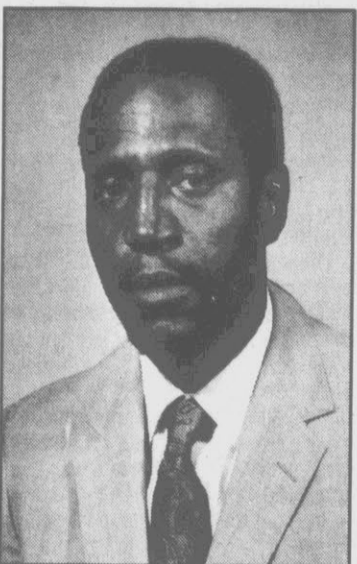

Dr. Francis T. Thomas, director of the transplant program at the ECU School of Medicine in Greenville, said that he did not know of any cases in North Carolina in which patients had lost a transplant because of inability to pay for the medicine but that there had been cases across the nation. About 250 kidney transplants are performed in North Carolina each year.

Pitt Schools Have 3 New Principals

Three new principals at Pitt County schools are set for the upcoming fall semester.

The Board of Education last week approved transferring Dr. Patricia Brewer to principal at Agnes Fullilove School, Robin Dailey to principal at Sadie Sautler School and Harold Williams to principal at Wellcome Middle School.

Ms. Dailey and Williams worked previously as assistant principals and Dr. Brewer held the post of substance abuse coordinator.

Dr. Brewer earned a bachelor's degree in elementary education from North Carolina Central University in 1977 and a master's degree in special education from NCCU in 1979.

She earned a master's degree in educational administration from East Carolina University in 1984 and a doctorate from Southern Illinois University in Carbondale, Ill., in 1986.

She has worked in mental health at Gracewood State School and Hospital in Gracewood, Ga., in 1987 and as a student assistant specialist at Southwest Edgecombe High School. She worked as a graduate assistant at SIU from 1984 to 1986.

From 1980 to 1983, she worked as a mental retardation habilitation coordinator at the O'Berry Center in Goldsboro.

She has worked as an educational specialist at the Western Correctional Center in Morganton and as a temporary health care technician at the Murdoch Center in Butner. In 1986 she worked with the state's Program Quality Evaluation which examined exceptional students' programs in correctional institutions.

Ms. Dailey earned a bachelor's degree in voice performance from Meredith College in 1975 and a bachelor's degree in music education from Meredith in 1976. She earned a master's in educational administration from the University of North Carolina at Greensboro in 1982.

She began teaching in 1975 as a substitute teacher in Raleigh and taught music in Raleigh and Alamance County from 1976 to 1978.

In 1979, she taught migrant kindergarten in Austin, Texas, and she taught math and aerobic dance in Canaan, N.H., for two summers.

She taught choral music at Allen Jay Middle School in Guilford County from 1979 to 1985 and at Chicod Elementary from 1985 to 1986.

She worked as an assistant principal at G.R. Whitfield School in 1986 and 1987 and began working as an assistant principal at E.B. Aycock in 1986.

She served as chairwoman of the 17th Annual State Assistant Principals' Conference and as lead teacher for the effective teacher training workshop.

Williams earned a bachelor's degree in economics and personnel administration from North Carolina Wesleyan, a master's degree in management and supervision from Central Michigan University and a master's degree in education from Campbell University.

He spent 20 years in the U.S. Air Force and is a retired director of the Professional Military Education Center at Seymour Johnson Air Force Base in Goldsboro. He worked for 10 years as director of the Seymour Johnson Federal Credit Union.

He taught five years at Goldsboro Junior High School, worked for one year as assistant principal at Greenville Middle School and worked for one year as assistant principal at J.H. Rose High School.

He is a member of the Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development.

Hearing Held On Bias Appeal

By John Bare

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Lawyers for a Bethel man sentenced to die in 1984 were scheduled to present evidence at a hearing today in Greenville that Pitt District Attorney Tom Haigwood was racially biased in selecting the jury that sentenced the man to death.

Harvey Lee Green, 28, pleaded guilty in 1984 to murdering two people in a robbery at a Bethel dry cleaners. After the guilty plea, a jury was impaneled to determine whether to sentence Green to life in prison or to death. The jury chose death.

Green's lawyers have appealed the sentence to the state Supreme Court, but the court has declined to rule on the case until a Superior Court judge allows Green, who is black, to present evidence that blacks were intentionally excluded from the jury.

There was one black on the 12-person jury and one black alternate.

Customarily in a death penalty case, both the prosecution and defense may excuse up to 14 jurors with peremptory challenges. Traditionally, attorneys for both sides have not had to state reasons for those dismissals, but a U.S. Supreme Court ruling in 1986 changed that.

In a Kentucky case, the federal court ruled that prosecutors may not use race as a basis for a peremptory challenge.

To expedite the appeals process in Green's case, the state Attorney General's Office requested a hearing in 1987 to allow Haigwood to present evidence that he did not use race as a factor in selecting the jury.

At the hearing, Superior Court Judge Thomas S. Watts of Elizabeth City ruled that Haigwood was racially neutral.

However, Green's attorneys appealed the decision, and the state Supreme Court ruled that Green should have been allowed to put on evidence to support his claims.

In May, Watts granted Green's attorneys a private hearing closed to prosecutors and the media and appointed a state-paid statistician to aid defense attorneys in the case.

In June, defense attorneys requested that Haigwood provide a list of every jury case he has tried since 1971 and all notes concerning jury selection, but Watts denied the motion. Defense attorneys also entered a subpoena requesting Haigwood's notes on 25 specific cases, but Watts threw out the request.

Green is represented by Malcolm Ray Hunter, the state appellate defender, and Robert S. Mahler, director of the Death Penalty Resource Center.

Joan H. Byers, special deputy attorney general, represents the state in the case.

Bush Says Espionage Allegation 'Very Serious'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush said today that reports a former top diplomat in Vienna may have spied for the Soviets are "very serious," but he does not have an assessment of potential damage to the United States.

"I have known about this matter for some time and the minute I heard about it I was aggrieved because it is a very tragic thing should the allegations be true," Bush told reporters in commenting for the first time on Felix S. Bloch, who is under investigation by the FBI.

The president refused to reveal details of the case, noting that the investigation is still under way. But he said: "Any time a person is ... allegedly involved in something like betraying his country, that to me is a very serious matter."

Asked about possible damage to U.S. security, Bush, a former CIA director, replied: "I don't think anyone could give you a full damage assessment" at this time. He added that the case, if true, "doesn't help" further better relations between the superpowers, even though everyone knows that "espionage goes on."

The president's remarks came as Bloch's one-time superior, former U.S. Ambassador to Austria Ronald Lauder said he "did not like" Bloch. "There was something about him that bothered me," Lauder said on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" program.

Lauder, now a Republican candidate for mayor of New York, said, "The more I got to know him the more I realized there was something dramatically wrong." He said he had Bloch, who was second-in-command for most of his seven years at the Vienna embassy, recalled in July 1987 because of "in-subordination."

But The New York Times today quoted the former director general of the Foreign Service, George S. Vest, as saying, "It was time for (Bloch) to go, anyway, so we brought him back. He was not pulled back prematurely." Vest said Bloch returned to attend a seminar for top diplomats.

Stansfield Turner, who was CIA director during the Carter administration before Bloch's embassy stint, said "it's not very likely (Bloch) would know the specific names and details" concerning CIA agents in Vienna because such information is not normally shared with officials outside the agency.

However, a person in Bloch's high position "could have gotten into things that weren't normally his business" because of his access to the embassy's cable section, Turner said on "Good Morning America."

Bush administration, legislative and law enforcement officials skirted questions Sunday about the inquiry into Bloch, the highest-ranking U.S. official ever implicated in an espionage investigation involving the Soviet Union.

Bloch, who has not been charged with any crime, reportedly was filmed by U.S. officials earlier this year passing a briefcase to a known Soviet KGB agent in a European capital.

The State Department and the FBI are "pursuing the inquiry thoroughly in order to identify the compromised security which has occurred and the appropriate steps," the State Department said. Bloch's building pass and security clearance have been lifted.

"My directions are really not to comment on this case," an FBI spokesman said Sunday. "You're talking about security matters."

Press aides for Sens. David L. Boren, D-Okla., and William S. Cohen, R-Maine, the chairman and vice chairman of the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence, said Sunday the senators had no comment on the reports. President Bush, on his return Sunday from Camp David, Md., ignored reporters shouting questions about Bloch.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., also a member of the intelligence committee, said Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press" that he had not been briefed on the Bloch case but added: "It could be very serious indeed."

Committee spokesman Jim Currie said, "It's not normal for us to get briefed on a case before they've arrested someone. It's way to early for that. This is a law enforcement matter at this point."

Although reports remained sketchy, the picture was emerging of a 54-year-old career diplomat who was frustrated by his lack of advancement while serving in Vienna under two political appointees.

Vienna, because of geography, traditionally has been a hotbed for East-West spy activity.

Bloch's close friend, Austrian Foreign Minister Alois Mock, was quoted Sunday as saying he heard about the recent allegations of espionage through Austrian channels three weeks before the news broke in Washington on Friday.

Mock said in the Austrian tabloid Kurier there was "a certain suspicion on the U.S. side reaching back into the 1970s" about Bloch's activities.

Government Seeks Delay In Ex-CIA Official's Trial

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — Citing national security concerns, the Justice Department today sought a delay in the Iran-Contra criminal trial of former CIA official Joseph Fernandez.

Department lawyer Ronald Noble said the government would seek a stay from the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond to halt the trial of Fernandez, which was scheduled to start today in U.S. District Court.

U.S. District Court Judge Claude Hilton said he was prepared to swear in a jury early this afternoon and proceed with the case.

In court, the judge rejected proposals by the government that would have limited disclosures about CIA stations and programs at the trial of Fernandez, who was the intelligence agency's station chief in Costa Rica.

Facing four criminal charges, Fernandez says he needs to present the information about the agency's stations and programs in his defense.

One proposal presented by Laurence Shtasel, who is prosecuting Fernandez, would have referred to CIA stations and facilities in Latin American countries by a series of numbers rather than by name. Hilton rejected that proposal.

The judge also rejected a proposal Shtasel made Friday in which the government offered to drop a portion of the case in exchange for not allowing disclosure of three highly sensitive CIA programs in Costa Rica. Hilton said it was important to Fernandez's defense that he be allowed to refer in open court to the programs.

The Justice Department's seeking of an appeals court delay is a last-ditch attempt to avoid filing an unprecedented national security affidavit that would kill the case.

Hilton said he would give the government two hours to get an appeals court stay before swearing in a jury. If the government was unable to get an emergency stay from the appeals court, it would likely have to file the affidavit.

Fernandez is charged with lying and giving misleading statements to the CIA inspector general's office and to Congress in an alleged coverup of assistance to Oliver North's secret Contra resupply network.

Fernandez says a substantial amount of classified information is essential to his defense.

U.S. intelligence experts spent the weekend with Justice Department officials drafting an affidavit detailing national secrets that they will not allow to emerge in the trial.

Independent counsel Lawrence Walsh's office said Friday the Fernandez case would be untriable if the Justice Department's affidavit barred disclosure of too a wide range of material.

"If the CIA's request for a broader affidavit is granted, the case will be untriable," prosecutors said in court papers.

Fernandez was charged with two counts each of making false statements and obstruction of an inquiry by the congressional Tower Commission and the CIA's office of inspector general.

Plane Makes Safe Landing

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WATERLOO, Iowa — An American Airlines DC-9 with 27 people aboard made an emergency landing early today with no traffic controllers in the airport tower and with its primary electrical system down. No one was injured.

It was the second jetliner forced to make an emergency landing in Iowa in less than a week.

The pilot switched to his backup electrical system and the jetliner, en route from Chicago to Portland, Ore., landed safely, an American spokesman said.

Police and fire units were standing by at the Waterloo Municipal Airport, but were not needed. The plane, Flight 639, landed just after midnight, said Hagan Gibbs, area supervisor for the Waterloo tower.

Hagan said the Waterloo tower is staffed only until 11 p.m. and no air traffic controllers were on duty at the time of the landing. He said regional controllers handled the emergency landing.

On Wednesday, a United Airlines DC-10 lost power over northwest Iowa and crashed while attempting an emergency landing at the Sioux City airport, killing 110 people.

Bush Backs Budget

aggrieved because it is a very tragic thing should these allegations be true," said Bush.

Asked what impact it might have on U.S.-Soviet relations, Bush said, "It doesn't help any. ... Espionage goes on. I don't think it helps when you have high-visibility cases, but I think regrettably it says more, if it's true, about an individual who is alleged to have passed secrets to the Soviets, which is very bad."

Bush said he was not sure how seriously U.S. security may have been compromised. Bloch was the No. 2 official at the U.S. embassy in Vienna.

On Sunday, Bush's budget chief said the president has ruled out any suggestion from Democrats that he accept future tax increases in exchange for an immediate cut in the capital gains tax.

Bush, kicking off the week with an unusually hectic schedule, also planned to meet with South Korean Foreign Minister Choi Ho Joong.

Another White House visitor was Chicago's Mayor Richard Daley, son and namesake of the city's legendary mayor. And Bush was meeting with Defense Secretary Richard Cheney.

Bush has been negotiating with House Speaker Thomas Foley and Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., the Ways and Means chairman, on a revenue package.

White House budget director Richard Darman said Sunday, "We believe that right now, we have the votes for a satisfactory capital gains proposal in the Ways and Means Committee. Our only problem is ... (House Speaker Thomas F. Foley and committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski) won't actually bring it up for a vote."

Darman said the president was not willing to agree to exchange a lower capital gains levy now for increases in other taxes next year or later. "The president is firmly committed to his pledge not to raise taxes," Darman said on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation."

Asked how long Bush intended to stick by his no-tax-increase pledge, Darman said, "For the time being, let's assume forever — but I don't know exactly what that means."

The Democratic leaders contend lowering the capital gains rate — now 28 to 33 percent — would hurt the Treasury and help only the wealthy.

Darman said it would stimulate growth and raise Treasury revenues.

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Kristen Huxhold has eased her parents' concerns about paying for her college education by winning Young Woman of the Year honors.

The 18-year-old from Kirkwood, Mo., got a $30,000 scholarship with the award Saturday night in a contest that featured 50 high school seniors.

"I just wanted the experience of meeting all the girls," she said afterward. "It's more than I ever could wish for."

Her first official duty as holder of the new title, which replaced the Junior Miss award, was a trip to New York City on Sunday.

Your Social Security Disability Benefits

BENEFITS DENIED?

Have you been denied benefits under Social Security's disability benefits programs? Do not be discouraged. That happens to most people who apply the first time.

Have you asked for reconsideration of your disability claim and been turned down a second time? Again, don't be discouraged or give up. That's the way the disability system works today.

Appeal your case further to the Office of Hearings and Appeals for a hearing before an Administrative Law Judge and a review by a Member of the Appeals Council. The Judge will see you and hear your personal description of your physical or mental illness, and we will present your case as it applies to the complex rules of the Social Security Act.

Our win rate average is over 80%.

If you have been denied benefits, call now for an immediate conference. There is no fee for an initial conference to discuss your eligibility for disability.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Long Lasting

A Government Program That Worked

One has to harken back to the late days of World War II to recall a congressional act which was to have far reaching effects on post-war American society.

It was then, June 22, 1944, that President Roosevelt signed the "GI Bill" to provide education benefits for the veterans who would soon be returning to civilian life. That program is 50 years old this year.

While the concept of providing education to veterans has changed over the years, the impact of that first act has been enormous.

Prior to World War II attending college was largely reserved for the affluent and those families whose offspring had traditionally gone to college. With the GI Bill the veterans poured on to the college campuses, seeking the education which would provide them better careers than they ever dreamed of before they were uprooted by the war.

'The money could have been frittered away. Instead it trained the people that we so badly needed and likely their increased lifetime earnings paid the money back through taxes.'

It was the country's great good fortune virtually by chance. Most Americans recognized that they owed the veterans a debt. It could have been paid in the form of bonuses, a free car or whatever. The incentive to further education emerged.

The result for the nation was a new influx of engineers, teachers, doctors, lawyers and many other professionals which could only be supplied through college degrees. The veteran graduates provided the skills which were essential to the post war prosperity that continues today.

They also changed college campuses forever. They were older, more mature and experienced and their numbers brought on a campus building boom which better prepared the colleges for future expanded enrollments.

The GI Bill could also be used for learning skilled trades and, while its impact in that area might not have been as significant as on the colleges, that, too, helped post war America.

This was one government giveaway which generally wasn't botched. The debt was owed to the returning vets. The money could have been frittered away. Instead it trained the people that we so badly needed and likely their increased lifetime earnings paid the money back through taxes. It's nice to salute one government spending program that worked.

Neither Choice Is Right

WASHINGTON — Rep. John Conyers, who until Thursday had matters exactly backward, has now taken half a U-turn.

The Michigan Democrat had supported the nomination of William Lucas to head the Justice Department's civil-rights division, while opposing the nomination of Clarence Thomas to the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. He now has withdrawn his support for Lucas.

The nominees — both black, as is Conyers, and both Republicans — have faced near-unanimous opposition from the civil-rights establishment, but on different grounds.

The objection to Lucas, a former county executive and sheriff of Wayne County (Detroit), is his lack of qualifying legal experience for a post for which legal expertise has been a taken-for-granted qualification. He has never tried a case, civil or criminal; never written a brief or filed an appeal. He is devoid of experience in civil-rights law and seems to have little beyond a layman's grasp of recent Supreme Court decisions involving questions of civil rights.

Joseph Lowery of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference and Andrew Young, mayor of Atlanta, are among the tiny handful of civil-rights leaders who have supported Lucas' nomination. Jesse Jackson, who had been thought to favor it, backtracked a few weeks ago.

"If you were about to have serious surgery, as in heart surgery," Jackson said, "would you want a doctor who has never operated on a patient?"

But Conyers supported the Lucas nomination, branding black opposition to it as "transferred frustration" over the recent course of civil rights.

His opposition to the Thomas nomination, on the other hand, centers on allegations that Thomas was "insensitive to the injustice" suffered by minorities, women and the aged during his Reagan administration tenure as chair of the Equal Employment Opportunities Commission.

Conyers was one of 14 members of the House who recently complained in a letter to President Bush that Thomas had "demonstrated an overall disdain for the rule of law," a charge that seems almost willfully wide of the mark.

Among the allegations is that the EEOC under Thomas failed to process age discrimination cases (EEOC officials say the processing of age cases increased four-fold under Thomas) and that the agency allowed a backlog of race and sex discrimination cases to accumulate.

But the EEOC has virtually always had a huge backlog of cases, even under Democratic administrations. In addition, the Congress, without opposition from Thomas' critics, reduced President Reagan's budget requests for the agency, thus limiting the amount of work it could do.

Thomas' major sin is that he is a conservative Republican, who harbors misgivings regarding such liberal approaches as minority set-asides and other race-specific remedies for the problems confronting minorities.

"I don't think we should have any policies based on race," he said recently. "But in terms of equity, what is the difference between set-asides and the way government has operated in the past, when getting a contract depends on having a strong lobbyist and good connections? I would favor wiping out set-asides, but only...if we beat away all the other pigs at the government trough."

"I believe that the government should be aggressive in enforcing antidiscrimination statutes, but I worry that efforts to promote black capitalism end up helping a relatively few special pleaders who are just like other businessmen seeking influence in Washington in hopes of increasing their profits. They just happen to have an angle that others don't have available, but their interests don't have much to do with the real problems of the inner-city poor."

That's a conservative view, all right, but what is to be expected of a George Bush nominee — the liberalism of the Congressional Black Caucus?

My sense of Thomas is that he is a man of honesty, integrity and competency. Like Conyers, I'd prefer to see a liberal named to the appellate seat formerly held by failed Supreme Court nominee Robert Bork. But if the seat is to be taken by a conservative, I'd rather see it go to a competent conservative with some firsthand knowledge of racism.

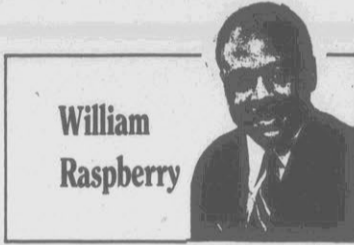

I don't blame Conyers for being impressed. But whether an indifferent lawyer without serious legal experience is the right choice to head the civil-rights division is another question.'

Lucas is different. Like Thomas, his conservatism may be tempered by his hard life. Thomas is the son of a poor Georgia farmer. Lucas, born to immigrants from the West Indies and orphaned at age 14, grew up in Harlem, went on to become a teacher, a police officer (a job he held while working his way through law school) and an FBI agent.

I don't blame Conyers for being impressed. But whether an indifferent lawyer without serious legal experience is the right choice to head the civil-rights division is another question.

I'd rather take my chances with a competent conservative on the appeals court than with a civil-rights innocent at the Justice Department.

Two Superpowers Finding The High Road From Hostility

Charles Maynes

George Bush's recent visit to Poland featured the bizarre spectacle of an American president praising a Polish dictator. Yet Bush's support of now-elected Wojciech Jaruzelski helps legitimize public debate on a genuine dilemma facing the United States in Eastern Europe.

The United States wants to free the East Europeans without offending the Soviets. It wants change in the political order in Eastern Europe but is wary of change in the security order.

Is the former possible without the latter? Even today, many observers doubt that the Soviets will be able to accept changes now underway in Eastern Europe. They anticipate an explosion that will end the promise of Mikhail S. Gorbachev's revolution. In the words of a recent Rand Corp. study, "Today, Eastern Europe's persisting structural instability poses the greatest single threat of a major discontinuity in international politics."

Events in Eastern Europe could indeed spin out of control, but part of the great pessimism many experts express about future Soviet policy toward Eastern Europe may rest on a dated view of East-West relations.

Many, perhaps most, Western observers see Gorbachev as an aberration in Soviet politics. In terms of attitudes toward Eastern Europe, the majority of Soviet leaders are seen as little changed from the 1950s. But it can be argued that ever since the death of Joseph Stalin, the Soviet Union has been making fitful efforts to become a normal member of the international community. Gorbachev's genius would then lie, not in discontinuity, but in so accelerating the pace of change that the West at last begins to recognize it.

Looking back, we can see roughly four periods in East-West relations since 1945.

—The Cold War, 1945-55: Soviet consolidation of control in Eastern Europe and American consolidation of influence in Western Europe. New lines of hostility were drawn down the center of Europe.

But any permanent "cold" required an enemy incapable of evolving into a more normal international partner. Stalin's death in 1953 began the evolution. As soon as the regime stopped shooting people, cracks began appearing in the totalitarian structure and the Soviets began their journey toward normality. By 1955 the stage was set for Stalin himself to be denounced officially — and he was at the 20th Party Congress the following year.

—Defense of the status quo, 1955-65: The two sides essentially tested boundaries of the postwar division of power but they drew back from any ultimate challenge to those boundaries. Each side attempted to stir rebellion in the other camp. But the invasion of Hungary, the Berlin Wall and the Cuban Missile Crisis established just how stable the new status quo already was.

—Detente, 1965-1975: With boundaries firmly set, the two sides could begin cautiously exploring areas of common interest within an established security framework. The fruits of this effort were the non-proliferation treaty, SALT I, and the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty.

—Wary cooperation, 1975-present: Although boundaries were fixed in Europe, they had remained fluid in the Third World. Superpower conflict centered in the Third World but both sides quickly learned that they had to observe certain rules of the road. Like the United States in Korea and Vietnam, the Soviet Union in Afghanistan acted according to a certain code of conduct, however brutal. Like the United States, the Soviet Union did not invade the neighboring state that gave provisions to the forces it was fighting. Like the United States in Korea and Vietnam, the Soviet Union used enormous power in Afghanistan but stopped short of applying its full might. And like the United States, the Soviet Union also did not allow its anger — when the great rival helped feed the rebellion — to end relations with the United States.

It may be that the American defeat in Vietnam and the Soviet defeat in Afghanistan finally established the rules of the road in Third World crises. With such behavior established, cooperation could begin between the two superpowers in resolving some of these conflicts.

Can the process now be extended to understandings between superpowers about political change in their respective areas of influence? There is no clear reason why the answer should be negative. Either by itself or with other regional powers, no country in Eastern Europe or Central America threatens the security of the Soviet Union or the United States. Only when political change in these areas becomes linked in some way to the foreign policy designs of either superpower do security considerations come into play. In other words, there is no reason for a Brezhnev Doctrine or a Monroe Doctrine if there is no extra-regional power attempting to take advantage of political change in a way that could tilt the global balance.

Some months ago, Henry A. Kissinger was heavily criticized because one of his columns was interpreted to suggest a second Yalta, another great power effort to arrange the affairs of Europe. A real attempt at condominium would be overreaching and would fail. But there is no reason why the superpowers cannot reassure one another about actions taken as inevitable change takes place in regions of special concern and sensitivity. Thus Moscow and Washington could each:

—Reaffirm that its principal concern was national security, not the internal order of neighboring states.

—Reassure neighboring states that it understood its commitments under the U.N. Charter regarding the use of force.

—Pledge publicly that it would not seek, would not accept military facilities or special privileges of any sort in the zone of concern to the other side. (Consistent with that pledge, Moscow could pledge to withdraw military personnel from Cuban soil once Washington had succeeded in establishing normal diplomatic relations with Cuba.)

There may yet be a tragedy in Eastern Europe. But even in that event, the process of Soviet international normalization will not likely come to a permanent halt. The process begun so long ago will one day resume. As international politics become less ideological, the Soviet Union can relax its grip on Eastern Europe just as the United States can relax its grip on its own region. We should all hope that day comes sooner rather than later.

AIDS Discrimination Bill Heads For House Floor

By F. Alan Boyce
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Consideration of a bill that would ban discrimination against AIDS patients is centering on an amendment that would require hospital patients to indicate whether they want to be tested for the disease.

Three Injured

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Three people were injured Sunday on the Blue Ridge Parkway when a Virginia man lost control of his car in a curve and hit a pine tree, according to Ranger Harold Wood of the National Park Service.

Gerald Andre Cottrell, 19, of Galax, Va., was charged with driving while impaired, reckless driving and drinking underage. He and two passengers, Lamont C. Cottrell, 13, and Winford Brown, 23, also of Galax, were taken to Alleghany Memorial Hospital. They were in stable condition last night.

A fire truck from the Glade Creek Fire Department that was responding to the accident hit a parked car when its brakes failed. The car, on the shoulder of the parkway, was not occupied and no one was injured, Wood said.

Firefighter Ralph Thomas Edwards was charged with a safety-movement violation for traveling 55 mph in a 45 mph zone, authorities said. The fire department had received an incorrect report that the car was on fire, Wood said.

Car Hits Train

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A Charlotte man, allegedly fleeing a police officer who saw him driving the wrong way on I-277, was killed Sunday when he drove his Camaro at 70 mph into a stopped freight train.

"My understanding is he was driving the wrong direction and then tried to elude an officer," said police Capt. Bill Ensley.

Roger Dell McKinney, 28, was driving twice the 35-mph speed limit, police say, when his 1987 car slammed into a CSX Transportation train. McKinney hit the train after driving around a car waiting for the train to pass, police said.

The train, stopped at 2 a.m. while several cars were disconnected, began moving just after McKinney's car hit it. The train dragged the car — wedged below — about 1.5 miles.

Rep. Sharon Thompson, D-Durham, House sponsor of the Senate-passed bill, said she opposes the amendment.

"I don't think we as legislators ought to be passing laws on how forms should be written," she said. "We don't tell any other private business how to write their forms."

Ms. Thompson said the form would make it possible for hospitals to subtly discriminate against people based on which box they check. And there might be a tendency for physicians to order AIDS tests in virtually every case where the patient agrees to it.

But Rep. Coy Privette, R-Cabarrus, plans to offer the amendment when the bill comes up for debate on the House floor on Tuesday. He agreed to hold off on the amendment so the bill could get out of the House Judiciary Committee last week.

"If you go to a medical facility, you are going to be treated for a medical condition," he said. "It just makes sense that you would let the physician conduct whatever tests are necessary for that treatment."

Privette said his amendment would simply require that admissions forms have a checklist which a patient can either agree to an AIDS test if a physician requests one, refuse the test or ask for additional information.

"If I were a surgeon, I'd want to know whether a patient has AIDS or not," he said.

But Ms. Thompson said she would rather see the bill die than adopt the amendment.

Privette agreed that the tests for acquired immune deficiency syndrome are not perfect and that a negative test doesn't prove a patient doesn't have AIDS. But he said, "I'd rather know the situation than not know anything."

Ms. Thompson, who worked for weeks to get the bill through a House subcommittee and the full Judiciary Committee, said she doesn't expect the fight to be easy.

"We always knew it would be a tough bill to run," she said. "It seems like every word has been put under a microscope."

The bill would ban discrimination against AIDS victims in housing and continuing employment. It would let employers move infected employees to other jobs if their condition affects job performance or endangers others. It also would let companies refuse employment to job applicants who test positive for AIDS.

Ms. Thompson said the anti-discrimination provisions are much needed in today's society.

"There is no risk in employment situations or housing or public accommodations," she said. "Therefore, why should a person be fired, be able to be thrown on the street because he has a fatal disease?"

"If there was truly a health risk, then that would be a different matter. But discriminating against a person with AIDS is no different than discriminating against a person because of the color of their skin."

Accidental Discovery May End Obesity

Supresses calorie absorption
SWEDEN—Medical researchers at the University of Kuopio, in Finland, have discovered (accidentally) a new weight-loss formula. The new discovery appears to enable an overweight individual to lose pounds and fatty tissue without conventional dieting or exercise.

Scientists made the discovery while searching for a formula to lower cholesterol. In a controlled study of a test group of people, cholesterol levels remained unchanged but the doctors were astounded to find that every patient who used the formula lost weight. The published report of this study stated, "A highly significant decrease in body weight was seen" in patients who received the formula.

The formula was then tested at another prestigious European university hospital. Again, all patients lost weight even though they did not change their eating habits. The report detailing this study, published in the British Journal of Nutrition, stated: "Body weight was significantly reduced even though the patients were specifically asked not to alter their dietary habits". One patient in this study lost more than 30 pounds.

According to one informed source, the active ingredient comes from a 100% natural botanical source and contains no drugs or stimulants. When taken before mealtime it bonds with the food you eat and "ties up" calories, especially those from fats, suppressing their absorption.

A significant portion of the calories ingested therefore pass through the digestive system unabsorbed. The body has to get energy to replace the lost calories, so it starts to burn stored fat, which can result in rapid body weight loss. Clinical testing has verified the safety of this formula for long-term use.

The formula is marketed in tablet form in the United States under the trade name Cal-Ban 3000. A firm located in Tampa, Florida, has exclusive North American distribution rights. A review of the customer files of this company revealed the names of hundreds of people who have lost as much as 20, 40 or 80 or more pounds overall with Cal-Ban 3000. This appears to be a golden opportunity for people who are plagued by fat and cellulite that they can't seem to lose by conventional methods.

Cal-Ban 3000 is reasonably priced at $19.95 for a 3-week supply and $38.95 for a 6-week supply. Postage and handling is $3. VISA, M/C, AMEX and COD orders are accepted. NCAE Hopeful Administrators Will Resolve Split, Restore Credibility

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Leaders in the state's largest teachers' association say they hope the selection of new top administrators for the N.C. Association of Educators will restore the group's credibility and resolve a split in the association.

The split led to a law suit and the ouster of the top two NCAE administrators in June.

The board of directors of the association voted 14-9 not to renew the contracts of Executive Director

Thomas A. Husted and his associated executive director, Frances M. Cummings.

"We all made a commitment that we are going to start a healing process," said Thomas A. Simmons of Charlotte, a spokesman for the board majority that fired Husted and Cummings. "We are going to put all of this behind us."

Observers say the association has its political clout at stake as it begins a nationwide search for successors.

"The $64,000 question is, can they find someone who can establish credibility not only with their own members but also with the General Assembly?" asked John N. Dornan. "I do think the choice is critical for them."

Dornan quit as NCAE's executive director in 1986 to take over the Public School Forum of North Carolina.

The association has struggled with internal conflicts for the past three years, during which it lost three executive directors and several key staff members, including two lobbyists.

Legislators say those and other problems could cost the NCAE membership and influence in the General Assembly.

Hep. John L. Tart, D-Wayne, said he and many fellow lawmakers look to local instructors in their districts rather than the NCAE for teachers' opinions on issues.

With eight new members, the NCAE board met early in July and agreed to let the association's new president, Julia P. Kron, pick interim administrators to fill the vacant posts.

Mrs. Kron may choose a senior manager from the organization's staff or call on the association's parent group, the National Education Association, for a temporary replacement.

"To start this healing process, we left this decision up to her," Simmons said.

Mrs. Kron said that while she plans to choose interim directors this week, the search for a permanent director and associate director will take several months even if NCAE launches a "fast track" search.

The board's 24 voting members were split in recent years over the leadership style of its top officers, most recently Karen D. Garr, whose term as president ended June 30.

A 13-member faction contended Ms. Garr, Husted, Ms. Cummings and their supporters, including Mrs. Kron, had a heavy-handed, disorganized leadership style that alienated legislators and NCAE staff members.

Ms. Garr and her supporters said the dissidents were interfering in administrative matters.

The dispute came to a head when Ms. Garr and supporters filed a lawsuit challenging the move to fire Husted and Cummings. The board's subsequent vote to replace its directors settled the legal fight, Mrs. Kron says.

Mrs. Kron said internal problems stemmed largely from conflicting perceptions among board members about what their roles should be. Members of the rival faction wanted to go beyond setting policy to overseeing personnel decisions that should be left to the executive director, she said.

The new board is trying to avoid conflicts by agreeing from the outset that its role is to set policy and not to meddle in administrative operations, Mrs. Kron said.

"We also need some training in team building," she said.

Rival members still on the board also will be looking for a more responsive president and executive director, Simmons said.

IN THE STATE

Picnics Return

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — Families in Concord's Logan community did something last week they'd been afraid to do for years.

They had a picnic in the park.

More than 150 residents and friends of the Logan community gathered at the picnic shelter in Caldwell Park. They shared hot dogs and hamburgers, sang hymns and affirmed the hope that the mostly black community can rid its park of drug dealers and troublemakers.

Organizers say they hope the now-regular picnic suppers and church softball games will help the community "take back Caldwell Park."

The Logan Ministerial Association, which represents about 10 churches in the area, is sponsoring the events along with the NAACP, the Logan and Central Optimist clubs and the Logan Concerned Citizens, a community interest group. Together, the groups call themselves the Coalition of Logan Associations.

clause of the 14th Amendment. Instead, the plaintiffs challenged the law under the First Amendment prohibition against the "establishment of religion" by the state.

Court Votes

DURHAM (AP) — The state's District Court judges will vote this fall on three controversial proposals, including one to unify the District and Superior Court divisions of the judicial system.

The other proposals involve merit selection of judges rather than popular election and, if elections continue to be the selection process, to hold Superior Court bench elections on the county or regional level instead of statewide.

All three issues were "hotly debated" by about 160 District Court judges at a June conference in Morehead City, said Durham's Chief District Court Judge David Q. LaBarre.

LaBarre said judges will vote at an October conference in Asheville.

Democrats

DURHAM (AP) — Speakers at a Democratic leadership conference in Durham Saturday urged greater optimism in the Democratic Party despite recent Republican victories and encouraged young Democrats to shape and control the state and national political agendas of the future.

"We don't need to wait for the Republican Party to define the issues," said Attorney General Lacy Thornburg, keynote speaker at the luncheon banquet of the Young Democrats of North Carolina Leadership Conference. "We need to start leading rather than following."

Bible Tax

RALEIGH (AP) — A suit challenging a state law that exempts the Bible from sales tax has been dismissed on technical grounds by a federal judge.

Lawyers for the individuals and bookstores that filed the suit said they would continue to challenge the law, either by amending the original complaint, filing a new complaint or appealing.

U.S. District Judge James C. Fox said the plaintiffs lacked standing to challenge the constitutionality of the law because of the way the complaint was drawn.

He said the claim should have been filed under the equal protection

Infant Shot

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A 2-year-old Charlotte girl — held in the arms of her fleeing mother — was shot and seriously wounded Sunday during a domestic dispute, police say.

Katherine Anna-Leigh Roberts was in critical condition in Charlotte Memorial Hospital Monday morning after surgery for a gunshot wound to her abdomen.

Her father, Ricky Eugene Roberts, 29, was in the Mecklenburg County Jail under $100,000 bond, charged with assault with intent to kill.

Kathy Lynn Roberts, the child's mother, told police that Ricky Roberts — her recently separated husband — brought 2-year-old Katherine home Sunday morning at about 11 a.m. and the two got into an argument.

Ricky Roberts began searching for a handgun kept in the home, she said. Mrs. Roberts picked up her daughter and ran from her husband. Two or three shots were fired, according to police records.

Ricky Roberts then grabbed his wounded daughter, jumped into his wife's red Firebird and rushed to Charlotte Memorial Hospital. Police arrested him there.

Legislators say those and other problems could cost the NCAE membership and influence in the General Assembly.

Hep. John L. Tart, D-Wayne, said he and many fellow lawmakers look to local instructors in their districts rather than the NCAE for teachers' opinions on issues.

With eight new members, the NCAE board met early in July and agreed to let the association's new president, Julia P. Kron, pick interim administrators to fill the vacant posts.

Strangulation

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — A Fayetteville woman whose nude body was found Saturday morning apparently died from strangulation, according to results of an autopsy released by the Cumberland County Sheriff's Department.

The woman has been identified as Carolyn Faye Lee Smith, who was in her mid-20s, officials said.

Taggarts' Trial Is Nearing Jury

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — The fate of David and James Taggart might come down to whether a federal jury believes their lawyer's contention that PTL founder Jim Bakker authorized the brothers to take large cash advances from the ministry.

The prosecution was expected to present rebuttal witnesses today after a break in the 11-day trial on Friday. U.S. District Judge Robert Potter gave no reasons for postponing Friday's session.

Following closing arguments, the jury will begin deliberating in the trial that began July 5. The Taggarts are charged with evading $525,000 in income taxes after spending nearly $1.3 million in PTL money on personal luxuries such as condominiums, jewelry and designer clothes.

If convicted, each brother could be sentenced to 25 years in prison and face fines of more than $1 million.

Defense attorney Ben Cotten's case could hinge on his contention that Bakker authorized David Taggart, his personal assistant for seven years, to take large cash advances and use PTL funds to pay for personal items on a personal American Express account belonging to the Taggarts.

On Wednesday, Cotten was unable to elicit any testimony from Bakker, who invoked the Fifth Amendment when he was asked several questions, including whether he even knew the Taggarts.

Bakker and former top PTL aide Richard Dortch are scheduled to go on trial for conspiracy and wire and mail fraud on Aug. 28 in Charlotte.

During six hours on the witness stand Thursday, David Taggart said Bakker enticed him back to the ministry with a pledge that PTL would pay all of his travel and vacation costs.

He recalled telling Bakker, "I want access to the same resources that you have."

The defense rested Thursday following two days of testimony from the Taggarts, who joined PTL in the late 1970s as piano players.

Durham Family Survives Crash, Takes The Train

By L.L. Grimmer
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A Durham family returned home, survivors of the United Airlines jet crash near Sioux City, Iowa, that killed 110 people.

Adrienne and Ellen Badis and their two sons, Aaron and Eric, were greeted at Raleigh's Amtrak station amid smiles and tears of joy from waiting relatives Sunday evening.

"Wonderful! Wonderful! Beautiful!" said Marie Currin, the mother of Ellen Badis when the family appeared at the door of a sleeper car.

The Badis family was returning from a vacation in Hawaii when the DC-10 crashed Wednesday. Officials say they believe an engine blew up and flying parts severed hydraulic lines causing the pilot to lose much of his ability to control the plane. It crash-landed at the Sioux City airport.

"I don't have any fears about flying," Mrs. Badis said during the tearful reunion. "It's just wonderful to be back with my family."

Mrs. and her two brothers, Joe and Mark Currin had been waiting at the train depot since 7 p.m. When the train rolled in around 8 p.m., the group of about a dozen relatives was nervously striding up and down the platform, searching the windows of the train for the Badises.

"I'm an optimistic person," said Mark Currin of Yanceyville, Mrs. Badis's brother. "But when I saw the crash on TV, I knew they couldn't have survived."

Bandages covered the left foot and right calf of Badis' leg, the effects of puncture wound and second-degree burns he suffered in the fiery crash. Badis did not speak to reporters, and was taken immediately in a wheelchair to a waiting car.

Family members recalled the day the accident occurred.

Mrs. Badis telephoned about 30 minutes after the accident with news that she and 2½-year-old Aaron were unharmed, Mark Currin said. But she didn't know if her husband and other son were alive. Mrs. Badis, 35, and Aaron were in row 14, and Badis and Eric, 6, were in row 28.

At that point the chaplain got on the phone, "and chaplains don't just talk to you about nothing," Currin said.

About three hours later, they learned that the entire family had survived.

Karen Currin, Mrs. Badis's sister-in-law, said a nurse at the Sioux City hospital reunited the family after discovering that the boys were wearing identical t-shirts.

The shirts said "Don't worry. Be happy."

The family began their journey home Saturday, taking a train to Chicago. They changed trains there, and on Sunday, traveled to Washington, where they were met by Mrs. Badis' father, Garland Currin, for the ride to Raleigh.

Marie Currin hugs grandson Aaron Badis, 2, at train station

"I feel fine now that I've got them back in Raleigh," he said. "This family is just incredible," said Bill Zahn, United general manager of customer services at Raleigh-Durham International Airport. "All the families have been great to deal with."

Zahn said 12 people who were on Flight 232 were bound for RDU, and 10 survived the crash. Forest Mixon Jr. and his wife, Sandra, of Chapel Hill, died in the crash. A memorial service was held for them Sunday.

Steve Strickland, a business manager at Crown-Honda-Volvo, where Badis is a car salesman, said he was shocked when Mrs. Badis called last Thursday let them know Badis wouldn't be into work.

"We weren't worried at all because they weren't supposed to be on the flight," said Strickland, who came to Raleigh to meet the family. "They missed the direct flight and had to take that one."

Investigators Still Seeking Cause Of Crash; Memorial Service Held

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SIoux CITY, Iowa — Investigators stepped up a hunt for pieces of the rear engine from United's ill-fated DC-10, training infrared cameras on cornfields 60 miles from the crash site and asking farmers to search their land.

At Sioux Gateway Airport, officials on Sunday were painstakingly reassembling the tail section of Flight 232 in hopes of determining what caused the jet to lose hydraulic power and tumble out of control across the runway. In Denver, meanwhile, a United official told about 200 people at a service for survivors and victims that it was time for healing after Wednesday's crash.

"There is little to say to ease the sadness. We at United feel deeply your pain and loss. We have lost members of the United family. And we offer thanks for those who were spared," said Capt. William Traub, United's vice president of flight standards in Denver.

Authorities were beginning to return home the bodies of crash victims. A spokesman for Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad said more than 20 bodies had been sent home by Sunday.

According to a list compiled with information from United, relatives and employers, 105 people were confirmed dead and five were still listed as missing. Another 186 passengers survived the crash, United said.

Hospital officials said 40 people remained hospitalized.

Jim Burnett, a member of the National Transportation Safety Board, said farmers in a 16-square-mile section about 60 miles northeast of the crash site were being asked to look for parts, including the missing engine fan.

Nebraska Air National Guard jets photographed those fields with infrared cameras in a search for metal fragments thrown from the engine when it exploded.

Burnett said the search had been hampered because some pieces apparently fell in areas where corn is up to 6 feet high.

"We basically plan on being alert. We're concerned about our machines getting a flat tire and so forth," said Tim Anderson, on whose farm several pieces of the plane fell.

In a separate development, Burnett said he would ask the NTSB to look at the issue of child safety in aviation accidents, including whether special child safety seats should be used on airplanes, according to today's editions of The New York Times.

If child safety seats are required, infants who now sit on laps and fly free would need their own seats, which could make family travel more expensive. An unusually large number of children were aboard the flight in part because airlines offer free tickets to children flying with adults on Tuesdays and Wednesdays.

At least one infant died in the crash, United said. A list compiled by The Associated Press shows 24 children under 10 years old, including seven under 5, were among the survivors.

Investigators continued to interview crew members, meanwhile.

The flight engineer said that immediately after the explosion in the No. 2 engine, the gauges indicated the immediate loss of fluid in all three hydraulic systems, according to Burnett.

Without the hydraulic systems, the DC-10 is almost impossible to fly.

Investigators also said they checked maintenance records on key sections of the engine.

"There's nothing here that gives us cause for concern at this point," said Burnett. "Although I will say that previous accidents have led to reductions in cycles. So it's not to say that this is irrelevant."

The age of engine parts is expressed in cycles, or one landing and takeoff.

NTSB officials said they hoped to end their on-site investigation by midweek. Other investigators gathered personal items of passengers, storing them in a hangar to be claimed later.

"We are taking great pains to collect everything we can, identify them and return them," said United spokesman James Guyette. He said United would assign specially trained workers and give personal phone numbers to families of those who died.

Doctors said they were working to stabilize crash victims and allow them to move close to their homes.

"We're moving them home as soon as they're physically capable of the trip," said Larry Foster, head of the burn unit at St. Luke's Regional Medical Center. Full recovery would take much time for some, he said.

Smoke pours from burning chemicals in derailed train cars in Freeland, Mich.

Burning Chemicals Keeping Hundreds From Their Homes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FREELAND, Mich. — Hundreds of people remained in temporary quarters today as a chemical fire in a derailed tank car burned into its third day, but officials said they found no dangerous levels of toxic chemicals in the area.

Residents in a 15-square-mile area around the crash site will be kept from their homes until the fire burns itself out, which was expected sometime today, said R. Lindsay Leckie, senior manager of news and media relations for CSX Transportation Inc., which owns the train.

Even after the fire goes out, the evacuation will remain in effect in the immediate area as hazardous materials experts examine the 14 derailed cars and determine how to handle their contents, Leckie said.

Monitoring around the tank cars found no dangerous levels of toxic chemicals, and no long-term effects to homes or possessions were anticipated, Leckie said.

The burning cars did not threaten other chemical-laden cars in the 32-car train, Leckie said earlier.

Three tank cars burst into flames after Saturday's derailment. One carload of highly flammable naphtha burned up within an hour, sending up a fireball and column of smoke.

Two homes were destroyed by the fire, but no serious injuries were reported.

A carload of acrylic acid burned itself out Sunday, but the third tanker, containing chlorosilene continued to burn early today. Experts decided the safest way to handle the fire was to let it burn itself out.

The chemical is a flammable liquid used in silicon production. It is made by Dow Corning Corp., a joint venture between Dow Chemical Co. and Corning Glass Works.

Unofficial estimates on the numbers of evacuees ranged from 400 to 2,000, but the Red Cross and Tittabawassee Township officials said they'd been too busy to make an accurate count. The Saginaw County township, located about 100 miles northwest of Detroit, has a population of 5,000.

Investigators from the National Transportation Safety Board arrived in Freeland on Sunday. Leckie said it would take as long as several weeks for the railroad to determine the cause of the crash.

"Right now, the safety of our workers is the number one priority," he said.

It was the third derailment involving a CSX train in Michigan within a year. Leckie said the company had found no links between the first two derailments and didn't believe there were any problems with the way the company conducts its operations.

Leckie said the train was traveling at about 37 mph when it derailed. He said the section of track where the accident occurred has been inspected once a week, most recently by the Federal Railroad Administration and CSX engineers last Tuesday.

The three-member train crew also inspected the train before it left Port Huron for Midland, he added.

Husband-Wife Spat Sets Off Brawl On Airliner

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — A husband-wife tiff aboard an airliner escalated to a fight among several passengers and led to the arrest of six people from the Continental Airlines plane at Logan International Airport.

"They had a little brawl," state police Cpl. Joseph Howley said of the weekend incident aboard an MD-80 jet with 146 passengers aboard.

"It started out as a husband and wife that were sort of running around the plane and making demands on the crew and being a general nuisance and hollering," Howley said.

Officials available today were unable to say if blows were exchanged on the flight Saturday, but said the husband struggled with police who arrested him in the airport terminal.

Facing arraignment today on a variety of charges are Steven Sacks-Wilner, 39, attorney for Republicans in the New Jersey Senate, and his wife, Joane, 37. Also arrested were a Medford, Mass., family, Frank J. Federico, 50, his wife, Camella, 48, and their son John, 22, and John's girlfriend, Lauren Belmonte.

Sacks-Wilner is charged with interfering with a flight crew, being a disorderly person and three counts of assault on a police officer for allegedly resisting officers at the gate. The others were charged with interfering with a flight crew.

The Massachusetts State Police say the fracas aboard the flight took place when the plane was in the air, and forced the pilot to abort the landing Saturday evening.

But airline spokesman Ned

Walker insisted the fight took place on the ground, and that the pilot aborted his first landing attempt because another plane was slow to taxi out of the way.

The Federal Aviation Administration is investigating, said Michael Ciccarelli, a spokesman in Boston. He said the agency was told the pilot made a routine maneuver for a second landing because the plane ahead was slow to clear the runway.

MIAMI — After he bounced off the ceiling a second time and the plane began shaking and dropping, Bob Watson was sure American Airlines Flight 1707 from San Juan, Puerto Rico, to Miami would crash.

"Everybody thought that was it," said Watson, 39, a tennis pro from Jensen Beach. "I was resigned to dying."

About 45 passengers on the American Airlines A-300 Airbus were treated for cuts and bruises after the plane was jolted by turbulence at 35,000 feet during its descent into Miami International Airport Saturday night.

John Hotard, an airline spokesman, said Sunday in Fort Worth, Texas, that the pilot's radar hadn't shown the storm that buffeted the plane.

The airliner, carrying 239 passengers and a crew of nine, landed at 11 p.m. Several people were removed in wheelchairs and stretchers.

Bus Driver, Rider Killed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. — A man with a semi-automatic handgun opened fire at a bus at a busy downtown stop, killing the driver and a rider, then fled by critically wounding a motorist and taking his car.

"The guy just raised his arm and pow, pow, pow!" said Devin Oppy, who was sitting in the rear of the bus when the shooting occurred Sunday afternoon.

Police were searching for the gunman and his getaway car today. They said there was no apparent motive for the shootings.

Witnesses said the unidentified gunman had been drinking wine on a bus stop bench in front of a busy supermarket in Hollywood, a suburb north of Miami.

Suspect In Shootings In 4 States Nabbed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAWTON, Okla. — A man wanted in a fatal shooting in an Oklahoma flower shop and suspected in five more killings in three other states was arrested at a hospital emergency room.

Police on Sunday afternoon arrested Michael Frank Greene, 37, at Comanche County Memorial Hospital in Lawton, where he had gone for treatment of an undisclosed back injury.

Two hours earlier, District Attorney Fred Collins said one count of first-degree murder, two counts of shooting with intent to kill and two counts of robbery with a firearm were filed against Greene in connection with the shootings of three women in a flower shop in Ardmore, about 100 miles southeast of Lawton.

Greene also is a suspect in the killing of a photo processing shop owner in Pampa, Texas, and the killings of two convenience store clerks in Garden City, Kan., said Carter County District Attorney Gary Henry.

"There is physical evidence linking all of the murders," said police Capt. Ron Rardin of Garden City. "I can't say much more than that, but the evidence points that way."

Henry said the slayings were "within a day's drive and occurred on three successive days and the manner of the killing and the ... weapon used appears similar."

Meanwhile, in Merrillville, Ind., police said the slayings of two motel clerks earlier this year may be related to the killings in Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas.

Investigators with the Jasper County, Ind., sheriff's office on Sunday told The Daily Oklahoman in Oklahoma City that new leads in the March 3 deaths led them to Greene as a suspect. They did not elaborate.

Indiana and Kansas investigators have tentatively set a meeting next week to discuss the killings in both states, which are "strikingly similar," said Capt. Bob Hicks of the Jasper County sheriff's office in Indiana.

In the slayings in Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas, all four victims were shot in the back of the head, said Les Weaver, a Texas highway patrol dispatcher.

Acoustic Guitar Is Coming Back

Stars Stage New Popularity For Traditional Instrument

By Bruce Rule
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NAZARETH, Pa. — When Tracy Chapman played her Grammy-winning song, "Fast Cars," on this year's awards show, she did more than just herald the return to folk-pop: She championed the acoustic guitar.

After a decade or so of synthetic sounds, the acoustic guitar is making a comeback. The Traveling Wilburys play acoustics while singing songs off their platinum LP. And Tom Petty's new record is full of songs written on 6-string and 12-string acoustics.

Chapman played a Martin guitar — built by C.F. Martin & Co. in Nazareth, Pa. It is a handmade instrument constructed with care.

"I wrote and thanked her that night," said company chairman Christian F. Martin IV, whose great-great-grandfather founded the company in 1833.

At the company's plant, 90 craftsmen carefully perform by hand the nearly 300 steps necessary to turn Indian rosewood, Amazon Mahogany and Hawaiian koa into an instrument. Another 100 make the strings for the instrument.

The work is time-consuming. The wood is aged up to six months in the climate-controlled work area. Almost all of the work is done by hand, with the pearl inlay taking up to two weeks per guitar.

From start to finish, it takes three months to build a Martin guitar.

Most are Dreadnoughts, a widely copied acoustic instrument named after a class of World War I British battleships.

"Ask someone to draw an acoustic guitar and he'll draw a Dreadnought," Martin said.

The Dreadnought — which means "fear nothing" — was designed in 1931 by the company for country-western singers who needed a big, loud guitar. It is pear-shaped, with an extra wide and deep body to produce a stronger bass and clearer treble.

The original design is still the most popular, and Martin said 75 percent of the 8,500 instruments made this year at the plant will be Dreadnoughts.

This year, the company introduced its first acoustic bass. Priced between $2,050 and $2,350, the original allotment of 50 instruments were almost immediately sold out.

"We heard Tracy Chapman bought one the first day it was in the stores," Martin said.

The company now plans on building 350 this year, but even that won't fill all the orders. "We can't just crank up production," Martin said.

But most changes do not catch on. Martin Guitar introduced an acoustic guitar with a polished black finish. It didn't sell because musicians wanted the natural wood color.

"I thought it would fit with some bands who have outlaw images," Martin said. "The guitar is thousands of years old. People wouldn't want us to change it much. They want to buy the guitar their father bought."

After a peak year in 1971 — when Martin produced 22,627 instruments, the market slowly declined. Electronic instruments became big in the late 1970s, and the nation suffered a recession, severely damaging business for the country's acoustic guitar makers.

Martin's annual sales fell from $18 million to $12 million, and the company was forced to close factories in Connecticut and New York, as well as sell subsidiaries in Sweden and a drum company called Fibes in nearby Easton, Pa. About 330 of 550 employees were laid off.

The business started to turn around in 1985, when some musicians became tired of the electronic instrument sound. Also, the economy had rebounded enough that people could afford a Martin — which runs between $1,000 and $5,000.

Then came Susanne Vega's folk hit, "Luka" in 1987. She received three Grammy nominations for her song about child abuse. Then came Chapman's "Fast Cars," a bracing look at inner-city poverty that won three Grammys.

Oddly enough, the company's founder, Christian Frederick Martin, came to the United States in 1833 because guitars were regarded as a fad in Germany.

Overweight People Have Feelings, Too

DEAR ABBY: My daughter, age 11, is seriously overweight. She is an adorable child who is bright, outgoing and has a terrific personality, and the people who know her think she's wonderful.

This child has suffered a lot from her peers, who at times can be very cruel, but adults are the cruelest of all. When we are out for the evening or shopping, adults actually stop and stare, point and whisper. Each time, I cringe, then I get angry. They look at me with such expressions of disgust on their faces, as though to say, "How could you have allowed this to happen to that child?"

Abby, strangers do not know that I have had my daughter to more doctors than I can count, including a year and a half of therapy. We joined Overeaters Anonymous and we still live the 12-step program in our daily lives. (I have always been overweight, too.) We go to the spa and either ride bikes or go for long walks several times a week, and watch what we eat, avoiding cholesterol, sugar and fats.

Dear Abby

Our society is so obsessed with being thin that overweight people are abused even after death. One local headline read a few years ago: "The Naked Body of a 200-Pound Woman Found at the Bottom of a Mine Shaft!" Never have I read the weight of a thin victim in bold print. That poor woman was a victim in more ways than one — and so were her loved ones.

Abby, please tell your readers that overweight people have feelings, too. Most are just like thin people — loving, kind and caring. — Heartbroken Mother

Dear Mother: You are speaking for many. Perhaps those cruel or simply thoughtless people who stare, point or make fun of overweight people will see this and change their ways. I hope so.

Dear Abby: I would like to thank the person who sewed two pennies in the lining of a silk suit I purchased to wear to the funeral of my beloved mother. She passed away last January. We were very close, and talked on the phone or saw each other every day of our lives.

During the funeral services, my sorrow was beyond comprehension. When I jammed my hand into the pocket, I felt something in the lining. I finally worked out the two pennies someone had sewn in there to wish a stranger good luck.

It gave me such a wonderful feeling, I had to smile through my tears. May I use your column to thank that person? — Loretta Hilliard, Mansfield, Ohio

Dear Loretta: You just did. Please accept my condolences on the loss of your beloved mother, and add my 2 cents' worth of "good luck" to match those of the anonymous stranger.

Dear Abby: Whenever I hear about a man who asks his wife to pack his suitcase for him, I'm reminded of the following story:

A man called his wife from his office and told her that he was going on a weekend fishing trip, so would she please pack his overnight case. Then he added, "And please don't forget to put in my nice new robe."

After he returned from the trip, he said to his wife, "I thought I asked you to pack my robe — I couldn't find it."

His wife replied, "I put it in your tackle box." — Lucille R. Henderson

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA. 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

BROILERS: The North Carolina job dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 59.50 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. 100 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed for a final weighted average of 59.07 cents. The market is steady and the live supply is adequate for a moderate demand. Average weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Monday was 2,151,000, compared to 2,009,000 last Monday.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn steady to 1 cent lower, 2.66-2.79 in East and mostly 2.85-2.90 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans 3 to 4 cents lower at 6.30-7.25 in East and mostly 6.54-6.90 in the Piedmont; wheat mostly 3.42-3.55; new crop corn 2.28-2.59; new crop soybeans 5.85-6.15; P.I.K. certificates steady to 1/2 percent higher and ranged from 100 to 104 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market moved broadly lower in early trading today, settling down from Friday's futures and options-related rally.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks fell 10.43 to 2,596.93 at 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

In the broader market, declining New York Stock Exchange-listed issues widely outnumbered gainers with 666 down, 275 up and 467 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 39.59 million shares after the first half hour of trading.

Marion Laboratories led the list of actively traded NYSE issues in the early going and was up 1/4 at 35 1/2.

Losing blue chips among the heavily NYSE stocks included: American Telephone & Telegraph, off 1/4 at 37 1/2; International Business Machines, down 1/4 at 113 1/2; Exxon, down 3/4 to 46 1/2; and General Motors, down 1/2 to 44 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks was down 0.81 to 188.54.

On Friday the Dow Jones industrial average jumped 31.87 points to 2,607.36, its highest close since it stood at 2,640.18 on Oct. 5, 1987.

Advancing issues just barely outnumbered declines on the NYSE, with 718 up, 697 down and 529 unchanged.

Lead volume totaled 174.88 million shares, down from 204.59 million in the previous session.

people's revolution coming from the kitchen," said Kazuo Shinsaka, a Rengo candidate who won election in Nara.

A record 146 women candidates ran for office Sunday, and a record 22 were elected — more than doubling female representation in the chamber from ten.

"One result of the election is that Japanese politicians from now on will have to pay more attention to women," said Seisaburo Sato, professor of political science at Tokyo University.

Though Ms. Doi is immensely popular, her party has been widely accused in the past of lacking a realistic and constructive platform.

In the past, it has called for Japan to disband its Self-Defense Forces and scrap the U.S.-Japan Security Treaty, under which about 64,000 U.S. troops are stationed in Japan.

Women were particularly unhappy over the new sales tax, which was authorized through parliament last year by the governing party despite an opposition boycott.

Jackie's Mother Dies At Age 81

NEWPORT, R.I. — Janet Lee Auchincloss, the mother of Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, died following a lengthy illness. She was 81.

Mrs. Auchincloss, who died at her home in Newport on Saturday, was considered an accomplished horsewoman. She won the hunter championship three times at the National Horse Show at Madison Square Garden aboard the mare "Daneuse."

She married John V. Bouvier III on July 7, 1928. The couple's other daughter was Caroline Lee Radzawill Ross. The marriage ended in divorce in 1940.

She married Hugh D. Auchincloss, the father of three, on June 21, 1942. The couple had two children, Janet Auchincloss Rutherford, who died in 1965, and James Auchincloss. Hugh Auchincloss died Nov. 26, 1976.

Grower Ends Life

He was paying $3,750 quarterly to the Bankruptcy Court to be applied toward his debts. He had missed his payment due July 1. He was making a separate payment to Farm Credit Service, which declined to discuss details.

Bellamy had told several people before his death that he thought Farm Credit was preparing to foreclose on him. Farm Credit denies this.

Harvey Beckham of Fayetteville, president of Farm Credit's 12-county Cape Fear region, also denied using high pressure tactics on delinquent borrowers. He said most farmers have had a good relationship with the institution. Of the more than 5,000 loans in the Cape Fear region, less than 200 are in trouble, he said.

According to James Bellamy, a cousin and a retired farmer, Shorty Bellamy was close to signing a sand-mining contract that would have paid him $20,000 every three months or 25 percent of the proceeds — whichever was higher.

Dennis Worley, a Tabor City lawyer who was representing Bellamy in mining negotiations, said the sand was potentially lucrative.

"Things were looking up for Shorty," he said.

But snags kept delaying the final signature. Worley, the lawyer, described the contract negotiations as typical. But Bellamy believed developers might be behind the delays.

Bellamy's three children, all grown, declined to be interviewed on the advice of their father's bankruptcy attorney, Frank Gibson of Wilmington. Gibson didn't return calls.

Destiny Teases Norman

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TROON, Scotland — The format changed, but the scene is becoming familiar.

Greg Norman, crouched and scowling, surveying an impossible situation, his craggy face clouded and haunted, his expression stunned and bewildered.

"Destiny," he mused, "has a funny way of saying, 'Hey, this is the way it's going to be.'"

And once again destiny decreed that Norman would come close only to be a loser in one of the world's four major tests of golfing greatness.

Does destiny now owe him one? "It owes me about four," Norman said.

He short-changed himself. "The things that have happened to Greg in the majors is unbelievable," Mark Calcavecchia said Sunday after he had beaten Norman and another Australian, Wayne Grady, in a playoff to win the oldest of all the world's golf tournaments.

It was just another in a series for Norman.

He has lost to sand shots and pitch-ins, to the last hurrah of the most successful player the game has known, and now holds a dubious, extremely unenviable record: he has lost major championships in three different kinds of playoffs.

He lost the 1984 U.S. Open at Winged Foot to Fuzzy Zoeller in an 18-hole playoff.

He lost the 1987 Masters to Larry Mize's pitch-in birdie on the second hole of a playoff.

And he lost this British Open to Calcavecchia in a playoff format that was being used for the first time in a major championship, a peculiar arrangement in which the participants play four holes of stroke play.

This one may have been the TROON, Scotland — An American has won the British Open at last.

All that was missing was the apple pie.

The flag was there on Sunday, the Stars and Stripes hanging proudly beside the silver claret jug that goes to the winner of the oldest of all golf tournaments.

Motherhood was even in the offering, as new champion Mark Calcavecchia talked about his pregnant wife back in West Palm Beach, Fla.

"I called her right after the final hole and she was crying up a storm," the 29-year-old Calcavecchia said. "I was just about ready to ask, and she said, 'No, I haven't had the baby yet.' I thought, 'If I sent her into labor with this.' But it could happen any minute. It's time to get home."

The home hole of Royal Troon was where Calcavecchia added his name to the list of Open champions by beating Australians Greg Norman and Wayne Grady in a four-hole playoff after they had finished four rounds tied at 13-under-par 275.

With Norman picking up after hitting out of bounds to finish another near miss in a major, and Grady bogeying three of the playoff holes after leading the tournament for almost two rounds, Calcavecchia became the first American winner of the Open since Tom Watson in 1983.

He said he was proud to end the losing streak.

"I thought about it quite a bit," Calcavecchia said. "Practicing before the playoff started, I said to myself, 'Man, it's been a long time since an American won it.' I had to get an American name back on that trophy. I had to do it for our Tour."

"I know there are a lot of happy people back in the U.S."

To make this Yankee Doodle Dandy dream become reality, Calcavecchia had to overcome nearly as many obstacles as Washington did at Valley Forge.

He started the day three strokes behind Grady, with five players between him and the top of one of the most tightly bunched fields in recent Open history.

He had to bounce back from a bogey-5 at the seventh hole, a hole he had played well throughout the tournament.

He had to scramble for par with a 40-foot putt at No. 11, then chip in from 60 feet up a hill for a birdie-3 at No. 12.

"I sent up the shot. I blinked, it hit the flag and fell in the hole. I was more embarrassed than anything," Calcavecchia said. "I mean, how lucky can you get?"

The long-range success from bad situations at 11 and 12 inspired Calcavecchia.

"My spirits just changed," he said. "That put a smile on my face."

He birdied the par-5 16th, and then rapped in a 5-foot putt for a final birdie at the 18th. He was tied with Norman, who finished early with a course-record 64. But both were one shot behind Grady, for the time being.

"I went in to sign my scorecard and I heard the crowd groan," he said. Grady had just bogeyed the 17th, missing a par putt by inches.

"I went out and watched Wayne play 18, and I'm in the playoff," Calcavecchia said. "My caddy told me it was sudden death, but then I learned it was four holes and said, 'I like that.' That relaxed me."

Norman birdied the first playoff hole as Calcavecchia and Grady made par. Grady's par on the second put him two strokes behind, as the other two birdied the par-4.

Two holes from the end and Calcavecchia was again just one stroke back. And again he heard the groan of the crowd as something went wrong to the player in front.

At the 17th hole, the third in the playoff, Norman sent his tee shot

LeMond Completes Comeback Final-Day Rally Carries American To Tour Victory

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PARIS — Greg LeMond tried to become just another American in Paris, taking in the Moulin Rouge, the famed French night club.

But he had a hard time going unnoticed. Less than six hours earlier on Sunday, he had won the Tour de France, the famed French cycling race, to complete a miraculous comeback.

And he won the 2,020-mile, 23-day race by the closest victory margin ever — eight seconds over Laurent Fignon of France. After 315,515 seconds of competition, LeMond, the only American to ever win the Tour de France, won his second.

So, it's no surprise he was greeted by applause at the Moulin Rouge. Or was recognized at a local McDonald's when he went for a quick snack.

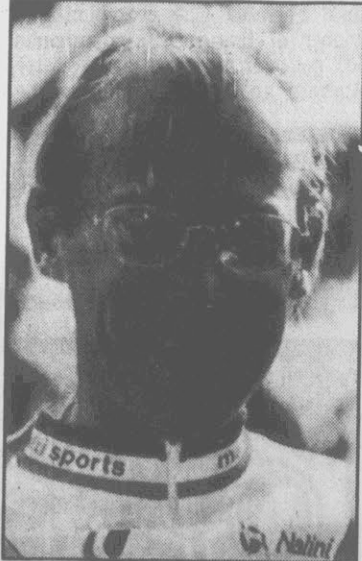

In 1986 LeMond prevailed in cycling's most famous race in a French-dominated sport.

Then he went through misfortune. In April 1987 he was accidentally shot by his brother-in-law while hunting. Then he had an emergency appendectomy followed by shin surgery. All of which made him miss the Tour de France in 1987 and 1988.

He came back this year with low expectations.

"One month ago, I didn't think I would be in the top 10, top 20," LeMond said. "But through the race I got more confident."

He kept performing well. He won a time trial on July 6 that put him him in the lead for the first time.

Laurent Fignon

He lost the lead five days later to Fignon only to gain it back on the basis of a good performance in another individual race against the clock.

Again Fignon battled back to reclaim the leader's yellow jersey with four days to go and held an apparently insurmountable 50-second lead entering the final 15-mile time trial from Versailles to Paris.

"I went all out," LeMond said. "I didn't think I was going to win. The worst thing I could have done was lose by a second — the worst thing."

LeMond finished in 26 minutes, 57 seconds to Fignon's 27:55. LeMond's overall margin of eight seconds was the slimmest in 76 editions of the Tour de France, besting Jan Jensen's 38-second margin in 1968, a race which was also decided in a time trial.

LeMond's total time for the race was 87 hours, 38 minutes, 35 seconds, eight seconds faster than Fignon. Pedro Delgado of Spain, the defending champion, finished third, 3:34 back.

"I thought it was possible but when I warmed up today I saw there was a strong tailwind," LeMond said. "With a strong tailwind it's hard to make up the difference."

But LeMond did. "When I finished the stage I turned around and waited," LeMond said. "I heard the announcer counting off the seconds. I saw Fignon pass. That was the hardest moment. I was afraid."

"I saw he had 20 seconds to go and make it. He was in sight and I didn't think it would take that long to finish," LeMond said.

Fignon finished eight seconds too late.

Fignon, who had been overpowering last week in the brutal climbing stages in the Alps, was hindered by an inflamed perineum, which made sitting on his bike seat painful.

"What does it matter for eight, 10, 20 or 30 seconds. It's all the same," Fignon said. "My legs were going well, but that wasn't enough. Still, I was hoping. But Greg performed a super time trial. He's a great champion."

Bench, Yaz Like The Sound Of Hall Of Famer

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. — It took Johnny Bench and Carl Yastrzemski no time to get used to the sound of being called Hall of Famers.

Not that they always expected it.

"I had no idea that the Hall of Fame was waiting for me," Bench said. "I don't think any youngster ever dreams of that or ever thinks that's possible."

"You might think of All-Star Games and World Series, but you wouldn't think of the Hall of Fame because that is a place for fantasy."

On Sunday, however, it was all very real as Bench and Yastrzemski took their places in the Hall of Fame along with Veterans Committee selections Red Schoendienst and umpire Al Barlick.

A record crowd of more than 25,000 jammed tiny Cooperstown to see the new Hall of Famers and such returning stars as Ted Williams, Stan Musial, Bob Feller, Ernie Banks, Willie McCovey and Ralph Kiner.

Yastrzemski Bench

"I've done a lot of reflecting on why I was elected," Yastrzemski, who played all 23 years for the Boston Red Sox, said. "I was not blessed with great God-given talents, so I had to work twice as hard every day. When I put that Red Sox uniform on, I gave 100 percent."

If there was a time Bench and Yastrzemski doubted their place among the stars, it has long since passed.

They spoke Sunday as leaders of a new generation of Hall of Famers.

Two of the greatest players of their era are now counted among the greatest of all time.

"I'm part of that now," Bench said. "A guy by the name of Yogi Berra said it's not over until it's over. Yogi, it's over and we have made it."

Deservedly so, too.

Bench and Yastrzemski are the 18th and 19th players elected in the first year of eligibility.

Bench, the leader of Cincinnati's Big Red Machine, and Yastrzemski, the only American Leaguer to have 3,000 hits and 400-plus homers, had big numbers and much more.

Bench received 431 votes from 447 ballots cast by members of the Baseball Writers Association of America. Yastrzemski got 423 votes.

In order to be elected to the Hall of Fame, a player must be named on 75 percent of the ballots cast. Of the record 447 ballots cast this year, a player needed 336 votes for election.

Bench got 96.4 percent and Yastrzemski 94.63. Only Ty Cobb, 98.2 percent, and Hank Aaron, 97.9, received higher percentages than Bench.

Yastrzemski's percentage was the seventh-highest ever after Honus Wagner (95.13), Babe Ruth (95.13) and Willie Mays (94.67).

"Just getting into the Hall of Fame was a thrill," Bench said. "But to be mentioned with people like that is hard to explain."

A look at Bench's career, however, speaks volumes.

He is arguably the best all-around catcher in the history of the game.

Bench won the Gold Glove for 10 consecutive years and hit 389 homers, including a major league-record 327 as a catcher.

He was Rookie of the Year in 1969 and the National League's MVP in 1970 and 1972. And in 1975 and 1976, he helped the Reds win the World Series.

"I'm most proud of my combination of offense, defense, power, RBIs — the leadership — the overall ability," Bench said.

While Bench was ticketed for stardom, Yastrzemski had to replace Williams as Boston's left fielder.

Yaz, as he came to be known, finished with 452 homers, 1,844 RBIs and 3,419 hits.

"I struggled when I first came up

Snow Hill Nips Cary, Advances

CARY — The final game of the Area One American Legion baseball championship series will not be remembered as a thing of beauty, but that matters little to Snow Hill Post 94.

Post 94 and host Cary Post 67 combined for nine errors in Sunday night's finale, but Snow Hill surfaced with clutch hits down the stretch to prevail 10-8 and secure its second consecutive Area One crown.

A two-run triple by Jimmy Hardy and a run-scoring single by Prentice Uzzell keyed a decisive four-run Snow Hill eighth inning.

Chris West, despite soreness in his pitching arm, came on to pitch a scoreless ninth.

"I can't tell you how we did it," said Snow Hill coach James Fulghum, whose team begins a best-of-seven eastern championship series with Whiteville Tuesday night at home at 8. "The three bats at the bottom of the order got the big hit that got us over the hump."

Hardy's triple down the right-field line followed an infield error and a walk to Ed Stanley and forged an 8-8 deadlock. Uzzell then punched a single to right and came around to score on a sacrifice, an infield out and an error.

Post 67, which also fell to Snow Hill in last year's Area One title series, had enjoyed leads of 4-1 and 8-6. Matt Berry's three-run homer to center in the third snapped a 1-1 tie.

Snow Hill capitalized on four Cary errors, a passed ball and a two-run single by Cedric Collins to push across five runs in the fourth for a 6-4 edge. Cary answered with four runs in the fifth.

Todd Mewborn worked three perfect innings in relief, was credited with his eighth win against no losses. Starter Scott Norville yielded three runs in two-plus innings before being replaced by Farmville Central product George Burnette.

Jeff Bock, who allowed only four hits in eight innings, absorbed the loss.

Hornets Cut Loose Seven Players

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Seven rookies and free agents have been released from the Charlotte Hornets, and the summer league team will leave today for a three-city, 10-game tour.

Four forwards and three guards were cut Sunday. They are 6-9 Randy Henry of Middle Tennessee State, 6-9 Al Lorenzen of Iowa, 6-7 Rodney Mack of S.C. State, 6-9 Grady Mateen of Ohio State, 6-2 Herb Brooks of West Virginia, 6-3 Wayne Casey of West Virginia State and 6-1 Jarvis Walker of Ferris State.

"We've had three good days of practice, now we'll look forward to the games to see how many players can contend for jobs in the NBA," said Hornets coach Dick Harter.

The remaining summer Hornets will travel to Miami, where they will begin their series of games against other NBA rookie-free-agent teams on the Florida International University campus, Tuesday against the Atlanta Hawks and Wednesday against the Miami Heat.

Charlotte then moves to Orlando, Fla., for a Friday game against the Hawks and a Saturday game against the Orlando Magic. The team then goes to Los Angeles next Sunday for six games in the Southern California Summer Pro League.

Most of those on Charlotte's 12-man roster at the end of last season will be back, and Harter said Sunday he would like to have 16 to 18 players available for the fall workouts.

Others still on the summer roster are:
— Gene Banks, a 6-7 forward from Duke who has played four seasons at San Antonio, two at Chicago and one in Italy.
— Tony Dawson, a 6-7 rookie forward from Florida State who was not taken in the June draft, after predictions from many league scouts that he would go in the second round.
— Kenny Drummond, a 5-11 rookie guard from High Point who played one season at North Carolina State.
— Kenny Gattison, a 6-8 forward from Old Dominion who played one season with Phoenix since leaving college three years ago.
— Hubert Henderson, a 6-10 rookie forward from Southwest Missouri State.
— Clifford Lett, a 6-3 rookie guard from Florida.
— Leo Rautins, a 6-8 forward from Syracuse and a good perimeter shooter who has spent the last several seasons playing in Europe.
— Walker Russell, a 6-5 guard from Northern Michigan who split time with three NBA teams (Detroit, Atlanta, Indiana) and in the Continental Basketball Association over the last seven seasons.
— Charles Sitton, a 6-10 forward from Oregon State who played 43 games for the Dallas Mavericks in his rookie season of 1984-85 and was in the CBA last season.
— Greg Van Soelen, a 6-8 forward from Dordt College in Iowa.

Ferry's Trip More Than Just Vacation

DURHAM (AP) — Danny Ferry's European vacation may have been more than just a sight-seeing tour.

Ferry, the 6-foot-10 former All-American forward at Duke, took a three-week trip to Europe recently. While there, he visited the sites, watched an automobile race with a former Duke roommate and also talked with a European team in Rome.

"They were just some general discussions," said Bob Ferry, Danny's father and general manager of the NBA's Washington Bullets. "European basketball has come a long way."

Ferry was selected second in the NBA draft June 27 by the Los Angeles Clippers. Ferry has not decided on an agent for contract negotiations but is expected to do that within a week. Bob Ferry said Danny had talked with Elgin Baylor, the Clippers' general manager, over the phone.

Danny Ferry was not available for comment.
"He hasn't talked with them for an extensive period," Bob Ferry told The Durham Morning Herald. "I think things will start to get clear here soon."

Danny, his father and his mother, Rita, made the trip to Rome last week to talk with the team, which competes in the Italian League.

"It was just a situation where basically they invited Rita and myself," Bob Ferry said. "Danny went first and then we met him there. It is just a case of him looking at his options."

Ferry said they were impressed by the Rome program. He wouldn't divulge financial discussions but did mention some "big incentives."

An NBA player must sit out of professional play for one year before becoming a free agent in the NBA, the NBA office said. The team that drafts the player has rights when he returns to the NBA.

Rogers Drawing A Lot Of Attention

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Rodney Rogers of Hillside High in Durham has been rated one of the top 50 players in next year's senior class since he was a freshman, but his reputation has risen even higher in recent weeks.

Rogers, a 6-foot-7 forward, played at Nike camp in Princeton, N.J., two weeks ago on a team with 6-7 point guard Anfernee Hardaway, whom many consider the nation's best returning high school player. The two put on a show for scouts and recruiters.

"He was too good," said one Big Four recruiter who had hoped Rogers would remain one of the nation's best-kept secrets.

Instead, recruiting analyst Bob Gibbons of All-Star Sports in Lenoir said he plans to move Rogers into his national top 10 after the Nike performance. Many scouts say Rogers could belong in the top five.

Rogers, whose high school produced John Lucas, is projected as a power forward. He has outstanding first-step quickness, reminiscent of James Worthy. He is hard to stop close to the basket — some say he is similar to Charles Barkley — and is beginning to display outstanding perimeter skills as well.

Rogers attended the Prep Stars camp at North Carolina-Charlotte last week and is expected back this week. Rogers is expected to attend a Big Four school, but he is also considering Georgetown and Minnesota.

Ellis' Gamble Pays Off In Win

HICKORY (AP) — Tommy Ellis of Richmond, Va., gambled on not making a tire change and it paid off as he won the $59,488 Pepsi 200 NASCAR Busch Grand National Series race Saturday night at Hickory Motor Speedway. Rob Moroso lost his points lead in the series by finishing 28th in the race.

Ellis, driving a Buick, started fourth in the 31-car field. He moved into the lead on lap 45, and led the rest of the way in the 200-lap race on the .363-mile track.

The defending champion of the Grand National Series, Ellis received $10,225 for his third win of the season in 18 races.

Moroso of Madison, Conn., lost his season-long points lead after he wrecked only seven laps from the end of the race. Moroso's Oldsmobile was destroyed when he was involved in a three-car accident.

He was not injured, but his 28th-place finish caused him to lose the series points lead to Jack Ingram of Asheville, N.C., who finished third. Ingram has a 22-point lead with 11 races left.

Randy LaJoie of Norwalk, Conn., finished second in a Buick, two seconds behind Ellis, with Ingram third in a Chevrolet. Rick Mast of Rockbridge Baths, Va., was fourth in a Buick with Tommy Houston of Hickory fifth in a Buick.

Ellis and Mast were the only drivers to run the full race without making a pit stop for tire changes.

Byrum Wins His First PGA Event

COAL VALLEY, Ill. (AP) — Curt Byrum joined his brother as a first-time winner on the PGA Tour this year by coming from behind Sunday to capture the Hardee's Golf Classic.

Byrum, whose brother, Tom, earned his first Tour victory in June by winning the Kemper Open, shot a 4-under-par 66 and capitalized on the collapse of defending champion Blaine McCallister to finish one shot ahead of Brian Tennyson and Bill Britton.

The Byrums became the first brothers to win on the PGA Tour during the same year since Dave and Mike Hill accomplished the feat in 1972. Byrum finished with a 12-under 286.

Alcott's 68 Captures Boston Five

DANVERS, Mass. (AP) — Amy Alcott shot her fourth straight 68 on Sunday to win the Boston Five Classic by three strokes with a 16-under-par 272 total, the best score this year on the LPGA Tour.

Cathy Marino with a final-round 68 for a 275 total. Marta Figueras-Dotti came in third with a 276. Beth Daniel and Furlong tied for fourth at 277. Ayako Okamoto was at 278.

Awesome Bill Outduels Wallace

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONG POND, Pa. — Let the NASCAR world beware. Bill Elliott is back.

A broken wrist slowed the defending Winston Cup champion at the start of the season, and a flat tire forced a first-lap pit stop on him Sunday in the $527,567 AC Spark Plug 500 at Pocono International Raceway.

But just as he has snuck up on the leaders through the summer, Elliott was among the leaders in time for the stretch run on Sunday.

The defending race champion took the lead for the first time on the 171st of 200 laps, pitted for right-side tires on 173, then passed Rusty Wallace to take the lead for keeps with six laps left. He held on for a 2.21-second victory in a caution-filled race.

"I didn't think it was that good all day long," Elliott said, who claimed his second victory in three races. "But we kept working on the car. I ran about the same pace most of the day and it looked like they came back to me."

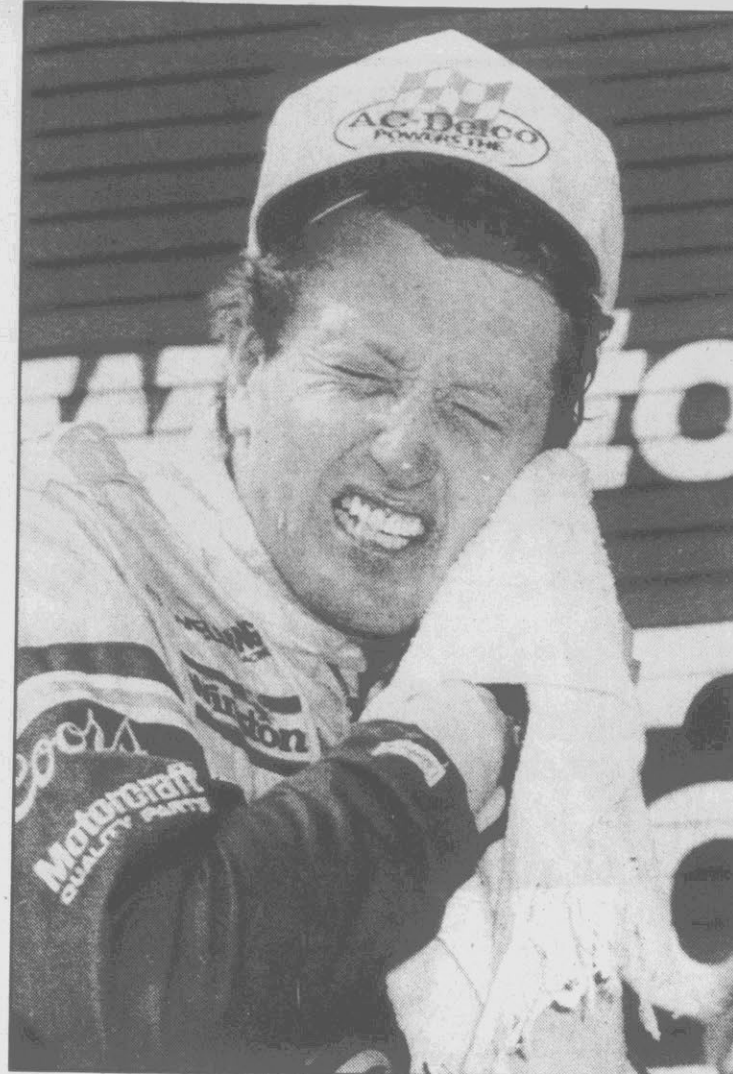

Mark Martin finished third, followed by Darrell Waltrip and Harry Gant as Dale Earnhardt's closest challengers for the season points lead closed the gap. Earnhardt finished ninth.

Elliott averaged 117.870 mph as he picked up $58,400 for his fourth career victory on the 2 1/2-mile tri-oval.

After working on Wallace, Elliott made his move to overtake the Pontiac coming out of the second turn on lap 195.

"I stuck right up under him and his car just drifted out," Elliott said. Wallace, who led 68 laps, said his tires became slick at the end.

"I did everything again," said Wallace, who has three victories this year but has finished second in three of the last five races. "I led the most laps, and I'm getting tired of finishing second. But he's a great competitor and he beat me."

Before Elliott made his charge, Wallace was busy holding off Geoff Bodine's Chevrolet after taking the lead on lap 173. But Bodine spun on lap 187 and couldn't challenge again, finishing a lap down in 17th.

"I lost it. It was getting pretty slippery out there, and Rusty and I were racing really, really hard," Bodine said.

Elliott said Bodine's problem was crucial "because if Bodine would

Andretti Nudges Fittipaldi For First

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TORONTO — Michael Andretti was so close to victory and, suddenly, there was Emerson Fittipaldi again.

Andretti had not won an Indy-car race since the season finale at Miami in 1987, with a rash of mechanical problems and accidents keeping him out of Victory Circle for 23 races.

And here he was just two laps from victory in Sunday's Molson-Indy bumping wheels with Fittipaldi in the first turn on the 1.78-mile, 11-turn temporary circuit in downtown Toronto.

Fittipaldi, who had won four of the last six races and was second last week, cut a 9-second deficit with 23 laps remaining to nothing as the leaders headed into the first turn on lap 102, one lap from the end of the 183-mile race.

"I think I had used my tires too much," the 26-year-old Andretti said. "In the last 10 laps I was doing everything I could just to keep it (the car) straight."

"I didn't know he was there," Andretti said. "He was just a spot in my mirror before that. He must have had a lot of straightaway speed."

Fittipaldi tried to squeeze his Penske PC18-Chevrolet on the inside of Andretti's Lola-Chevrolet.

Andretti moved over slightly and his right rear tire touched Fittipaldi's left front, nearly sending the Brazilian into the concrete wall. Fittipaldi spun slowly into a runoff area as Andretti straightened out his car and went on to his eighth career victory.

"It was just our day, other than that," Andretti said. "I was real sure something broke in my car (in the Fittipaldi incident), but it was fine."

The 42-year-old Fittipaldi, a two-time Formula One champion and winner of this year's Indianapolis 500, got over his anger quickly after Andretti apologized to him, saying he didn't see Fittipaldi and taking the blame for the latest in a series of Indy-car bumping incidents among the top competitors.

"He apologized and I believe him," Fittipaldi said. "I'm happy, with all the circumstances, to finish second."

The Brazilian now leads Rick Mears, who finished fifth Sunday, 141-102 in the CART-PPG season points race.

Danny Sullivan, back most of the way from a broken arm suffered in practice at Indianapolis in May, wound up third, one lap behind the leaders.

Teo Fabi of Italy was fourth, another lap behind, followed by Mears and Scott Pruett.

Steeb Upends Agassi; W. Germans Triumph

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MUNICH, West Germany — And on the third day, Boris Becker rested.

After leading West Germany to a 2-1 lead over the United States in a Davis Cup semifinal, the three-time Wimbledon champion was prepared to play Brad Gilbert in the deciding match of the best-of-5 series on Sunday.

But Carl-Uwe Steeb gave Becker the day off by upsetting Andre Agassi 4-6, 6-4, 6-4, 6-2 to clinch the series for West Germany.

The victory, which gave the defending champions an unbeatable 3-1 lead, allowed Becker to pull out of the meaningless final match.

"I think it's great for the team that Boris doesn't have to win all three points," Steeb said. "It makes our team even stronger."

Gilbert beat substitute Patrick Kuhn 6-4, 1-6, 6-4 in the closing contest, which was shortened to best-of-3 sets after Steeb's clinching victory.

West German officials said Becker had a fever and was exhausted after beating Agassi in a match that stretched over two days and then teaming with Eric Jelen for a doubles victory over Ken Flach and Robert Seguso on Saturday.

But the officials admitted that Becker would have played the final match if Steeb had lost.

West Germany will play Sweden Dec. 15-17 in a rematch of last year's final. Sweden advanced this weekend with a 4-1 victory over Yugoslavia.

After a short intermission between the third and fourth sets, Steeb came out of the locker room and finished off Agassi in 28 minutes.

"I don't think he gave up, but he was tired," Steeb said. "He couldn't play the long rallies and that's why I beat him."

Agassi, who played brilliantly in a five-set loss to Becker, was lethargic against Steeb.

At least a dozen times, the 19-year-old American failed to run after shots that appeared reachable. He also used questionable tactics during the final two sets, switching from his bread-and-butter baseline game to a serve-and-volley attack.

"I was fighting, but mentally I wasn't into it," Agassi said. "It was tough to play again after that match against Boris."

Although the United States failed to reach the final for the fifth straight year, Coach Tom Gorman said he was proud of his team's performance. The American squad played without John McEnroe, who withdrew at the last minute because of a shoulder injury.

"Our preparation and our effort was exactly what we wanted it to be," Gorman said. "We just got beat by a great team."

Steeb, who lost to Gilbert in the opening match on Friday, redeemed himself against Agassi before a boisterous overflow crowd of 12,300 in the Olympic Hall.

The left-hander broke Agassi at love in the opening game of the final set and raced to a 5-0 lead, winning all but four points during the run.

Agassi then staged a brief rally, saving two match points in the sixth game and holding serve to make it 5-2. But Steeb gained his third match point with a forehand winner and won when Agassi netted a routine backhand.

O's Grounded

Fifth Consecutive Loss Tightens AL East Race

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

If the rest of the American League East is going to catch up with the Baltimore Orioles, now is the time.

The Orioles' lead, larger than anyone could believe last week, isn't so big anymore. Cleveland and Milwaukee are on the move, and so are Boston and Toronto.

Baltimore lost its fifth straight game Sunday, matching its longest skid of the season. Jose Canseco's home run helped the Oakland Athletics win 3-2 and complete a four-game sweep.

"We've been through this streak before, and we came out of it all right," Manager Frank Robinson said.

The Orioles have lost their first four games of their longest road trip in 15 years, a coast-to-coast swing of 14 games. Coming off their first sweep of the season, Baltimore begins a three-game series Tuesday in Minnesota and follows with visits to Kansas City and Boston.

While Baltimore has slumped and its 7½-game lead has slipped, the rest of the division is creeping up. The Indians cut their deficit from 10 games to six, and Toronto is also within six games.

"I don't know what it is, but everybody is kind of hungry and feels he has something to prove," Brad Komminsk said after Cleveland routed Kansas City 17-5.

Oakland remained two percentage points behind California in the AL West with its fifth consecutive victory. The Athletics had never swept a four-game series from Baltimore and had not done it against any team since beating Seattle in 1984.

Canseco homered for the third straight game, connecting against Jeff Ballard, 11-5. Canseco's two-run drive into the second deck in left field was his fifth home run in nine games since returning from the disabled list.

Storm Davis, 9-4, won for the sixth tie in seven decisions. He is 4-0 lifetime against the Orioles.

Davis became the only former Bird to beat Baltimore this season. The Orioles are 12-0 in other games against ex-O's.

"I'm glad to see them on top, and I hope to see them again," Davis said.

The A's again got good relief. Dennis Eckersley pitched one inning for his 17th save, including three in the series. The Oakland bullpen has allowed only one hit in 10 innings.

Canseco homered in the fourth inning after outfielders Steve Finley and Joe Orsulak each made great catches to rob Dave Henderson and Mark McGwire of extra-base hits.

"I'm thinking to myself, this guy's luck is going to run out," Canseco said. "I've got to hit one where they can't catch it."

Cal Ripken hit a two-run homer in the seventh that pulled Baltimore within 3-2. Ripken's 13th homer was the first by the Orioles in 46 innings and only the second home run against Oakland in 65 innings.

Texas, held to one hit for eight innings, rallied for four runs in the bottom of the ninth and then scored the winner in the 10th on right fielder Jesse Barfield's two-base throwing error.

The Rangers swept a four-game series from New York for the first time in their history. The Yankees lost their sixth straight game.

Chuck Cary was one out away from a one-hit shutout when Scott Fletcher doubled home Rick Leach, who had walked. Julio Franco met reliever Dave Righetti with an RBI single and Ruben Sierra tied it with a two-run homer.

With one out in the 10th, Rafael Palmeiro drew a walk from Righetti, 2-3. Cecil Espy then grounded a single through the right side. Palmeiro rounded second and then was headed back to the base when Barfield, the major league leader in outfield assists with 16, threw the ball past third base and into the stands.

Bobby Witt, 9-8, pitched a four-hitter for the Rangers, striking out 11 and walking two.

Red Sox 8, White Sox 2
At Boston, Roger Clemens stopped Chicago's eight-game winning streak and sent the White Sox to their first loss since the All-Star break.

Chicago's winning string was its longest since 1983. The White Sox have not won nine straight games since 1977.

Clemens, 11-7, gave up one run on six hits in seven innings. Steve Rosenberg, 3-6, was the loser.

Utilityman Randy Kutcher hit his first homer since 1986 and drove in four runs. He had an RBI single in the second and a three-run homer in the third.

Nick Esasky hit his 15th homer for the Red Sox.

Angels 5, Tigers 4
Wally Joyner was hit by a pitch with the bases loaded and California scored twice in the bottom of the ninth inning to again sting Detroit.

The Angels swept the four-game series, winning each time in their final at-bat. Detroit has lost 15 of 17 games.

Pinch hitter Dick Schofield and Claudell Washington singled with one out against Mike Henneman, 6-4. Johnny Ray met Brad Havens with a tying single, Devon White walked to load the bases and Joyner was hit by a 2-2 curveball.

Bob McClure, 3-1, got the victory. Angels starter Bert Blyleven passed Walter Johnson for sixth place on the all-time strikeout list with No. 3,509.

Indians 17, Royals 5
Dion James homered and drove in five runs as Cleveland got 16 hits in its highest-scoring game since 1986.

Brad Komminsk homered, doubled and drove in four runs, giving him 15 RBIs in 10 games. Joey Belle tripled and also drove in four runs.

Kansas City, because of injuries, began the game with just two regulars in their normal positions. Cleveland finished 8-4 against the Royals, the only team with a winning record against Kansas City.

James hit a two-run homer in the first against Mark Gubicza, 9-8, and broke a 4-all tie with an RBI double in a five-run fifth. Bud Black, 8-7, went 5 2-3 innings against his former team for the victory.

Pat Tabler and Matt Winters homered for Kansas City. The Royals, whose 33-15 home record is the best in the league, dropped three of four to Cleveland in losing just their third series at home.

Mariners 5, Blue Jays 2
Rookie Randy Johnson struck out a career-high 12 and Seattle stopped Jimmy Key and Toronto at the Kingdome.

Johnson, 3-4, gave up five hits in his second complete game. Key, 7-11, had won all seven of his previous decisions against Seattle, but wound up losing his fifth consecutive game.

Alvin Davis' two-run triple highlighted a four-run third inning. Omar Vizquel hit his first major league home run in the seventh.

Brewers 4, Twins 1
Milwaukee hit four home runs against Frank Viola in six innings and again beat Minnesota.

Robin Yount connected in the second inning, Greg Brock and Glenn Braggs hit consecutive homers in the fourth and Rob Deer hit his 24th in the sixth. Viola, 8-11, had allowed just three home runs in his previous 96 innings.

Tom Filer, 1-1, gave up four hits in six innings in his second start since being recalled from the minors. Dan Plesac pitched the ninth for his 23rd save.

Philadelphia catcher Darren Daulton takes a tumble

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Astros 3, Phillies 2
Charlie Rehliford is one of those temporary umpires who fills in for vacationing regulars.

Philadelphia Phillies manager Nick Leyva figures Rehliford should find another occupation.

"He was terrible all four games, but you can't talk to him," Leyva said. "This guy should be training horses."

Leyva was irate over the call Rehliford made for the final out in Philadelphia's 3-2 loss to the Houston Astros on Sunday.

Rehliford, umpiring at third base, called Dykstra out. A television replay clearly showed that the ball had hit the ground and was traveling upward when it lodged in the pocket of Hatcher's glove.

The call cost the Phillies at least one run and probably two while bringing to an end Dykstra's 14-game hitting streak. It also enabled Houston to sweep the four-game series and move within 1½ games of front-running San Francisco in the National League West.

Crew chief John McSherry would not take issue with the call, but did not say he thought it was correct.

"He got into position for the call. He saw it clearly and he made the call," McSherry said. "He has umpired in the minors for eight or nine years, he has umpired at spring training and he has been scouted thoroughly. I've got to think he belongs in the majors."

Rehliford was not available for comment.

Expos 12, Reds 4
Cincinnati, mired in its worst slump in three years, lost its eighth straight as Mike Fitzgerald had two of five Montreal home runs and a career-high five RBIs to lead a 16-hit attack.

Dennis Martinez, 11-1, won his 10th straight decision. He allowed eight hits in five innings.

The losing streak is the longest by Cincinnati since April 25-May 6, 1986, when the Reds dropped nine straight. The four-game sweep by the Expos left Cincinnati with 12 losses in its last 13 games.

Ken Griffey hit two homers for the Reds, the first a two-run shot in the opening inning.

Cubs 9, Giants 5
Mark Grace and Andre Dawson drove in three runs each as Chicago wound up winning three of four games against the NL West leaders.

The Giants entered the series having won five straight while losing only once since the All-Star break.

Grace had two hits, extending his hitting streak to 13 games

Mets 7, Braves 2
New York extended its winning streak to six games and David Cone ran his personal streak to five as the Mets scored six times in the first inning.

Mookie Wilson had two hits in the opening inning as the Mets battled around against Sergio Valdez, making his first start since Oct. 3, 1986. Kevin McReynolds and Mackey Sasser had two-run doubles.

Valdez, 0-1, got just two outs. He gave up six runs and five hits, walking three.

Cardinals 3, Padres 2
St. Louis swept a four-game series on the road for the first time in nearly seven years behind the hitting of Willie McGee and Milt Thompson.

Jose Oquendo, who struck out twice against Bruce Hurst, 8-8, doubled in the fifth inning to extend his major league-leading hitting streak to 21 games. McGee doubled in two runs and Thompson was 3-for-4 with an RBI.

Dodgers 4, Pirates 3
Pirates 2, Dodgers 1

Jay Bell, with one hit in 25 previous at-bats this season, began the 10th inning with a double and scored one out later on a single by R.J. Reynolds as Pittsburgh gained a split.

Kal Daniels hit his first homer since being traded to Los Angeles last week, and Orel Hershiser won his 12th game as the Dodgers took the opener. Jay Howell picked up his 19th save.

Dodgers' Gibson On Disabled List

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Los Angeles Dodgers placed 1988 National League Most Valuable Player Kirk Gibson on the 15-day disabled list Sunday because of chronic leg problems and activated right-handed pitcher Alejandro Pena.

Gibson met with Dodgers manager Tom Lasorda before Sunday's doubleheader against Pittsburgh and the two agreed the outfielder was unable to make a significant contribution to the team in his present condition.

Gibson, who is batting .213 with nine homers and 28 RBIs in 71 games, was diagnosed as having a sprained right knee ligament and a strained left hamstring.

Gibson, who was shifted from left field to center field last week after the acquisition of outfielder Kal Daniels from Cincinnati, was 0-for-6 on the Dodgers' current road trip. He is hitting .121, 13-for-107, in his last 26 games.

Caray In Hall Of Fame
Holy Cow! Harry Caray is in the Hall Of Fame.

Caray, who has been broadcasting baseball games for 45 years, was inducted into the Hall of Fame on Sunday when he was given the Ford C. Frick Award.

"As I reflect on 45 years, I think I represent the fans," Caray said. "In my mind, they are the upcoming heroes. The players come and go but the game goes on."

For 25 years, Caray broadcast St. Louis Cardinals' games and his voice boomed throughout America over KMOX Radio.

If your team was playing the team Caray was broadcasting for, his style might have seemed less than objective at times but it was always exciting and entertaining.

After leaving the Cardinals, Caray worked Oakland A's games for one season before moving to the Chicago White Sox.

Caray spent 10 seasons with the Sox before moving to the North Side, where he has entertained Cubs' fans for eight seasons.

More than anything, Caray is an entertainer — and a true baseball character.

He has broadcast games from the bleachers at Wrigley Field and sings "Take Me Out To The Ball Game" during the seventh-inning stretch.

Baseball Notes

As he accepted his award and place in the Hall, his fans sang "Back to Harry."

Caray, whose son, Skip, handles Atlanta Braves telecasts, broadcast nearly 7,000 consecutive games, spanning 43 years.

The streak ended in 1987 when Caray had a stroke during the winter. He returned to the booth in May and Illinois Gov. James Thompson declared May 19, 1987 "Harry Caray Day."

Caray has certain phrases that make his call of a game unique.

A home run?
"It might be ... it could be ... it is."

A strikeout?
"The 3-2 pitch, heeeyee struck him out"

A good play?
"Holy Cow!"

A Chicago victory?
"Cubs Win! Cubs Win! Cubs Win!"

Call once. And for all.

and was hitting about .220," Yastrzemski said. "Ted Williams came in for three days and I hit .300 the rest of the season."

Williams grinned when Yastrzemski said that and hunched his shoulders as if to say "If you say so, Carl."

Yastrzemski was the first player in the history of the game to get at least 100 hits every season for his first 20 seasons.

Yet, playing in the shadow of Williams' splendid career always left Yaz a bit on the defensive.

"Some people want to say I finished with the numbers I did and accomplished what I did because I played 23 years. But you know Babe Ruth never did it, Lou Gehrig never did it, Joe DiMaggio never did it, Mickey Mantle never did it," Yastrzemski said of his 3,000 hits and 400 homers.

Yaz was named to 18 All-Star teams, won seven Gold Gloves, and captured the American League's MVP Award in 1967, when he won the Triple Crown and led Boston to the "Impossible Dream" pennant.

In 1967, Yastrzemski hit .326 with 44 homers and 121 RBIs. But it was what he did down the stretch that got the Red Sox into the World Series. Yaz batted .444 with 26 RBIs in Boston's last 19 games. In his last 13 at-bats, he had 10 hits.

"When I was going for the Triple Crown and all that stuff, it wasn't going through my mind. I didn't even know I'd won the Triple Crown until after the last game because I was so involved in the pennant race."

In 19 seasons as a slick-fielding second baseman, mostly for the Cardinals, Schoendienst hit .289. He also managed St. Louis to two pennants and the World Series championship in 1967.

"I was teammates with Stan Musial, Willie Mays, Warren Spahn, Eddie Mathews and Henry Aaron," Schoendienst said. "Musial was my roommate and I'm glad we'll be roommates again."

Barlick, known for his booming voice behind the plate, worked 27 full seasons as an umpire and part of another in the National League after coming up at 25 in 1940.

Barlick called seven World Series and seven All-Star Games before retiring after the 1971 season.

Chicago Cubs broadcaster Harry Caray accepted the Ford C. Frick Award, and the J.G. Taylor Spink Award went to sportswriters Bob Hunter of the Los Angeles Daily News and the late Ray Kelly.

"In my mind, the fans are the upcoming heroes," Caray said. "The players come and go, but the game goes on."

Calcevecchia wins British...

Very quickly, he was alone at the top.

Norman, one of the biggest hitters in golf, sent his drive screaming down the right side of the fairway. It hit on ground left hard by weeks of sun and little rain and rolled 30-40 yards into a steeply banked fairway bunker.

The Australian was incensed with himself. He glowered at the hole and the ball, and bit his lip. Then he hit the ball into another bunker.

A desperation shot sailed through the green and out of bounds. Add Troon '89 to Augusta '87, Winged Foot '84 and so many other sites where Norman has been close, but not close enough.

Grady bogeyed again, two-putting from four feet, and Calcevecchia, his approach shot resting six feet from the pin, was all but official.

To the 18th again, and this time Calcevecchia was tied for the lead.

Calcevecchia expressed sympathy for Norman.

"As happy as I was for myself, I felt very bad for Greg," he said.

"The things that have happened to him in major tournaments are unbelievable."

He also defended Greg, who had the Open to win with two holes left to play.

Calcevecchia wins British...

Very quickly, he was alone at the top.

Norman, one of the biggest hitters in golf, sent his drive screaming down the right side of the fairway. It hit on ground left hard by weeks of sun and little rain and rolled 30-40 yards into a steeply banked fairway bunker.

The Australian was incensed with himself. He glowered at the hole and the ball, and bit his lip. Then he hit the ball into another bunker.

A desperation shot sailed through the green and out of bounds. Add Troon '89 to Augusta '87, Winged Foot '84 and so many other sites where Norman has been close, but not close enough.

Grady bogeyed again, two-putting from four feet, and Calcevecchia, his approach shot resting six feet from the pin, was all but official.

To the 18th again, and this time Calcevecchia was tied for the lead.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY July 25

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): If you have been beating your head against a wall without results, find the weakest part and change your strategies.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Get up, get out, and move on. Taking a well-thought-out chance can change the picture. Avoid starting a new rut.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Hidden benefits come from new contacts at the workplace. Take time to do necessary repair work. Focus on your health maintenance.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Kindness is one of your persuasive qualities that can get out of hand. Cater to your special likes and dislikes.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): You have the power of persuasion. Romance is within reach. Consult professionals and get a second opinion on any health issues.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): You are in financial limbo at present. Expect a turnabout soon and hold fast to your current position. Vent your frustrations privately.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Ecstasy and complete surrender? You could get deeply involved in spite of variables and all the complications. Be rational.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): The emphasis is on career. Make plans to increase your level of experience, approach work more seriously, and carry a good image.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Avoid a burnout by manipulating your schedule to increase leisure time. Explain young love to siblings.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Someone who appears standoffish may only be shy. Develop a better dialogue with a focus on communications and friendliness.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Avoid premature action until you study a proposed career offer. Focus on your lifestyle, health, and family planning.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): You are spirited and vivacious, with an accent on personality. This is a good time for job interviews or asking for a raise.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠K87 ♥KQ6 ♦KQ854 ♣103
 Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?
 A.—Had your suit been a major, you certainly would show it. However, you really don't want to look for an 11-trick contract, and your hand is balanced even though you have a five-card suit. A jump to two no trump describes both the strength and shape of your holding perfectly.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠KJ9 ♥J10 ♦AQ9872 ♣K6
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♦ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
 2 ♦ Pass 3 ♦ Pass
 What action do you take?
 A.—You are certainly worth another bid, and if you're a gambler, you probably tried three no trump.

However, there's something undignified about bidding a game in no trump and having the defenders run a suit against you. We prefer three spades, allowing partner to bid three no trump if he has a heart stopper.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AK85 ♥AQ3 ♦95 ♣KQJ8
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♣ Pass 1 ♣ Pass
 What do you bid now?
 A.—A jump to three spades would be invitational, not forcing. Since your hand is worth 20 points in support of spades, you should have reasonable play for game even if partner has a rock-bottom minimum. So leap to four spades.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠K105 ♥AJ1042 ♦85 ♣A63

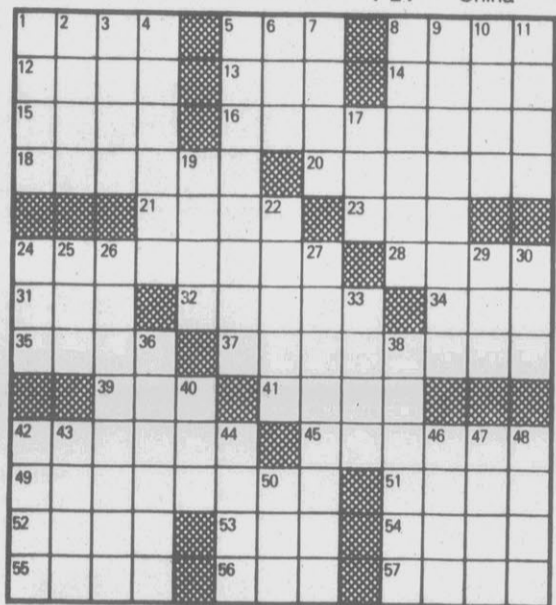

The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♥ Pass 2 ♦ Pass
 What do you bid now?
 A.—It depends on your bidding style. If you play a rebid of two no trump promises extra values, then you must rebid two hearts. However, in the modern style there is no such restriction. With only a five-card heart suit and stoppers in the unbid suits you should choose two no trump.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠76 ♥AKQ8 ♦954 ♣Q543
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ 1 ♣
 1 NT Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—For his free bid of one no trump, partner should have near the top of his bid, i.e., 14-15 points, and a double stopper in the enemy suit.

Since game may be laydown and cannot be worse than a reasonable proposition, we would jump to three no trump.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AK762 ♥754 ♦8762 ♣4
 The bidding has proceeded:
 West North East South
 1 ♦ 1 ♥ 2 ♦ ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—First, partner must be short in diamonds. Secondly, since he could have doubled if he was interested in spades as well as hearts, North must have a reasonable suit and fair hand. Compete with two hearts, but we also would accept more bullish action.

Ringo Starr Kicks Off First Solo Tour

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DALLAS — Kids got in free on the first night of Ringo Starr's Tour for All Generations but their parents were doing the screaming for the former Beatle, a grandfather backed by a graying constellation of rock stars.

They included former Beatles collaborator Billy Preston, who played the organ on "Let It Be;" spooky Bayou singer Dr. John; saxman Clarence Clemons and guitarist-keyboardist Nils Lofgren, on loan from Bruce Springsteen's E-Street Band; and volume-cranking guitarist Joe Walsh, a former Eagle.

Ringo opened the first show of his 30-city tour stage front and center, singing "It Don't Come Easy." After his third vocal on "Yellow Submarine," his best-known composition, the 49-year-old retired to the rhythm section.

Banging the drums rapidly along with Ringo were Jim Keltner, who played for John Lennon and George Harrison on their solo efforts, and Levon Helm, drummer for The Band. Fellow Band member Rick Danko provided the bass line.

The audience for Ringo's first-ever solo concert was dominated by thirty- and forty-somethings, including one woman who brought her two young daughters to show them what the fuss was about.

"My kids don't even know who Ringo Starr is, but they will after tonight," she said.

The concert's promoters boosted the family theme by giving free admission to children 12 and under accompanied by adults.

Starr was wearing a star-trimmed jacket in his first public appearance since a 1986 guest role with the Beach Boys in Washington, D.C.

Though he has released nine solo albums since 1970, Starr hasn't toured since the Beatles split.

A legendary drinker, he told USA Today that he and wife Barbara Bach dried out last year at a Tucson rehabilitation center.

Sober, he felt restless, and channeled his musical drive into a plan he first hatched in 1978 — assembling a cast of "All-Stars" with himself in charge.

"I am the boss," Starr told the newspaper in an interview published Friday. "The big boss!"

Guitarist Walsh interjected, "The rest of us are little bosses."

Shakespeare Festival Offers 'Pay What You Can' Tickets

By Martha Waggoner
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Under a "pay what you can" program the North Carolina Shakespeare Festival is trying to bring high art to people who normally wouldn't think of paying $16 to see a play.

The High Point-based festival operators are allowing some patrons to pay as little as $5 for tickets to see plays such as "Twelfth Night." So far, a couple of dozen people have taken advantage of the program.

"That's a couple of dozen more individuals who are coming to the festival who otherwise would not," said Pedro Silva, managing director of the festival, which is in its 13th year. "We try to find a positive way of asking they've ever been to the festival. In virtually every case, this is their first time. So we're very excited."

The festival's 1989 season features five productions with performances in High Point, Greensboro and Winston-Salem between June 16 and Sept. 30. The main part of the festival season begins Aug. 4, so Silva is hopeful that more people will participate in the pilot program. So far, it's received good reviews from the community.

"So many of the major arts festivals, most of their program is fairly expensive, especially for lower-income people," said Liz Wheaton, editor of the Greensboro-based monthly publication "Omega News." The newspaper included an editor's note in its listing of area arts happenings, thanking the festival for the program.

"For people who might not ordinarily go to something like the festival, it's an incentive," Ms. Wheaton said. "It's a community-spirited kind of thing. This is a new program and I just thought it needed a boost."

Gulfport County Commissioner Dot Kearns said she also supported the "pay what you can" ticket program.

"We certainly do in our area have a lot of people who are among the working poor or who are not able to pay a great deal for pleasure," she said. Particularly in terms of the young and people and who want to bring children, it's a good way for us to help motivate people to enjoy and have a better quality of life. It motivates them in many ways if they can through literature and the arts come to have more faith and understanding of their own lives."

"Shakespeare had a popular theater," said Silva. The masses "stood in the pews, but they were there, enjoying 'King Lear' and 'Hamlet.' Given the namesake of the company, we're trying to make audience as diverse as it possibly can be."

Under the "pay what you can" plan, ticket buyers who can't afford the regular charge of $16 per seat may do exactly what the name of the program implies — pay what they can. They call the theater, tell the person on the phone that they wish to participate in "pay what you can." The caller sets the price and then mails a check or pays by credit card.

The theater recommends a minimum of $5 per ticket. "Pay what you can" includes a waiver of the customary postage and handling fee added to ticket orders.

Some restrictions apply. The plan applies to all festival performances except those on Friday and Saturday evenings. A limited number of the reduced price tickets will be available for each performance. And finally, "pay what you can" patrons may purchase no more than four tickets per performance.

Silva said the most important feature of the program is how the buyers of lower-priced tickets will be treated.

"People who take advantage of this special program will be treated with as much respect and consideration as we possibly can," he said. "They will get the best seats available at the time they call. They will not be relegated to the balcony or back rows of the theater."

Although the continuation of the program depends partially on the number of people who use it this year, Silva said it could take two or three years for it to really succeed.

"I think it's very important that we not only come up with a wonderful way of serving the public but also stick with the program," he said. "... We have to be patient and we've got to let more and more people know about it."

The festival can't afford to pay to advertise the program. Silva hopes that a corporation will step forward next year to sponsor "pay what you can."

But it's not only the patrons who stand to benefit if the program is successful; the festival does, too, Silva said.

"At the most fundamental level, there's a very positive hope that it will help to increase our audience," he said. "We feel we have to develop a diverse audience. The arts historically have been perceived as an elitist experience. Many people say 'that's not for me. I don't have that kind of education, that of social, economic background.'"

"Many people who don't have high levels of education can enjoy great art as well."

Chamberlain TV Show Redesigned

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LOS ANGELES — Richard Chamberlain's new series for CBS has been given both a new title and a new look, according to Chamberlain and his co-executive producers, Nigel and Carol McKeand.

The new fall medical series, which had been announced in the spring under the working title "The Hawaiian," is now called "Island Son," and is one of several fall series — including NBC's "Nutt House" and ABC's "Living Dolls" — which are being re-tooled or undergoing some casting changes before making their debut in September.

NEW YORK (AP) — Batman creator Bob Kane got his start in New York by acting a little more like the Joker.

"I'd scribble on walls. On the subway, I'd see an advertisement with the Colgate girl smiling with that beautiful set of ivory teeth, and I'd start blacking the teeth out," Kane said in the July 31 issue of People magazine.

Kane, the son of a printer at the Daily News, invented Batman at age 18 and drew him for DC Comics from 1939 to 1966.

He's been lecturing and making television appearances since the release of the "Batman" movie.

Colleges Say Minority Recruiting Results Fall Short

By Jill Lawrence
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — An overwhelming majority of colleges and universities are trying to attract and retain more minority students but few of their efforts are bearing fruit, says a new report on "Campus Trends, 1989."

Eight in 10 administrators responding to a survey by the American Council on Education reported either "a lot" or "some" activity toward those goals on their campuses. But only one in four said minority enrollment had increased in the 1988-89 school year.

"We obviously would rather see more progress," said Elaine El-Khawas, an ACE vice president and author of the report. "It's encouraging that there's a tremendous level of activity. But the actual results fall short."

ACE surveyed senior academic administrators at 366 colleges and universities for its sixth annual campus trends report. Other findings showed that faculty shortages and inadequate physical facilities are pressing concerns on campus.

Many of the questions on minorities were based on recommendations from a recent ACE publication called "Minorities on Campus: A Handbook for Enhancing Diversity."

Only 25 percent of the administrators said their enrollment of blacks, Hispanics and Asians had risen during 1988-89 and only 10 percent reported an increase in American Indian students.

The same proportion of institutions reported they were making special efforts to increase minority faculty members. But only 17 percent said they offer incentives to academic departments to hire minorities and only 25 percent reported a net gain in minority faculty over the previous year.

While some studies have predicted overall faculty shortages in the mid-1990s, El-Khawas said her survey found that the problem already exists.

Half of the administrators reported it is taking longer to find qualified people for full-time faculty positions. Half also said they are having greater difficulty getting top applicants to accept positions when they are offered — up from 25 percent in 1987.

Specifically, four in 10 institutions reported problems finding qualified full-time computer science professors. One in three cited similar problems for business; mathematics and health professions each were mentioned by one in four schools.

"The labor market for faculty is tightening right now," said El-Khawas. "The real dilemmas for colleges are going to be starting much sooner than 1995."

El-Khawas attributed the problem to a number of factors, among them an inadequate number of doctorate holders; an increasing number of Ph.D.'s going into private industry; a greater proportion of doctoral degrees earned by foreigners; accelerating retirement of faculty members; and expanding student enrollment.

More than 71 percent of the administrators in the survey reported increased overall enrollment in the 1988-89 school year and half said the size of their full-time faculty had grown. Half also said they expect the pace of retirement among full-time faculty to accelerate in the next few years.

The result is bound to be a highly competitive situation, El-Khawas said, with universities offering incentives to keep people from retiring, higher salaries to people in certain fields, and lures designed to attract professors from other universities. Class size may also increase, she said.

Other findings:

—Only 32 percent of the administrators felt their physical plant was excellent or very good. Another third said plant renovation and renewal will be a significant problem in the next five years, and more than half predicted their facilities will not be adequate to last the next decade.

—About half of the administrators said they believe assessments of student learning, mandated in large part by states, will "significantly improve" undergraduate education. But 37 percent said that so far, the process has resulted mainly in new reporting requirements to the state.

—Basic skills testing is in place at 65 percent of schools and another 19 percent are planning such tests.

—Half of the colleges and universities now assess writing and 27 percent report that writing assessment is in the planning stages.

—Close to half of the schools plan to assess students' critical thinking skills and 14 percent already do so.

ACE is the umbrella group for the nation's colleges and universities. Its campus trends survey was adjusted to reflect the country's 2,500 general institutions of higher education. Seminaries, art schools, stand-alone graduate schools and other specialized institutions were not included. The margin of error for the survey was 2 percent.

NOW Eyes New Political Party

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — The National Organization for Women said it wants to amend the Bill of Rights to include abortion rights and agreed to explore forming a new political party for women.

NOW President Molly Yard called "historic" the passage of a resolution for a "Bill of Rights for the 21st Century" at the group's convention Sunday.

It urged an expansion of the Bill of Rights to include freedom from government interference in abortion or birth control. It also said women should have the right to receive public funds for abortions, birth control and pregnancy services.

Other parts of the resolution dealt with discrimination and violence against women, living standards and the environment.

"We're fighting for women's individual rights," Ms. Yard said in an interview. "I feel we are in a battle."

The convention on Saturday sponsored a march in support of abortion rights that attracted about 3,000 supporters. About 1,500 attended the convention itself, which ran Friday through Sunday.

The political party resolution called for NOW to form a commission to investigate the possibility of forming a new political party "dedicated to equality for women" because of "the failure of both major political parties to address women's needs."

The proposal reflected the NOW membership's "total disgust" with the Democratic and Republican parties, Ms. Yard said.

The report said Cooper was believed to be living on his luxury yacht off the Spanish island of Mallorca.

The Sun newspaper quoted Mrs. Cooper as saying at her home near Wolverhampton in the English Midlands: "I still love John. My only worry is that he might get snapped up on his travels by some smart bimbo."

Wife Reveals Divorce In Ad

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — Steel company boss John C. Cooper, 41, sold his business four years ago and walked out on his wife and their three children to sail around the world.

His wife, Marie, said she learned what he had done only by reading the local newspaper.

Now, Mrs. Cooper has a newspaper message for her millionaire husband:

We're divorced.

Mrs. Cooper put an advertisement in The Times of London on Friday that said: "Mrs. Marie L. Cooper. Should anyone know the whereabouts of my husband, John Charles Cooper, ex-chairman of Cooper Industries PLC, would they please inform him that I divorced him today and was granted sole custody of our children. Thank you."

But on Sunday night Mrs. Cooper, also 41, was quoted as telling the Daily Express newspaper she would remarry her husband "if he ever gets this out of his system and comes back to us."

The report said Cooper was believed to be living on his luxury yacht off the Spanish island of Mallorca.

The Sun newspaper quoted Mrs. Cooper as saying at her home near Wolverhampton in the English Midlands: "I still love John. My only worry is that he might get snapped up on his travels by some smart bimbo."

ADVERTISEMENTS FOR BIDS - ROLL OFF TRUCK
PITT COUNTY
NORTH CAROLINA

Sealed proposals will be received by the Pitt County Engineering Department, in the Commissioners' Conference Room on the First Floor of the County Courthouse at 1717 West Fifth Street, Greenville, North Carolina 27834 during normal working hours.

A prebid conference will be held at the above address at 2:00 P.M. on August 3, 1989.

Bids for furnishing two (2) Roll Off Trucks will be opened and read immediately after the time specified above.

Specifications are available in the office of the County Engineer at 1717 West Fifth Street, Greenville, North Carolina 27834 during normal working hours.

All equipment shall be bid on a unit price basis and the prices shall include everything whatsoever required to put the equipment in service at the Pitt County Landfill.

Each proposal shall be accompanied by a five percent bid security. This security may be in cash, certified check or bid bond issued by Surety licensed as published by the Audit Staff Bureau of Accountants, U.S. Treasury Department. The deposit may be retained by the OWNER as liquidated damages if the successful bidder fails to execute the contract within ten (10) days after notice of award.

Payment bonds will be required in an amount equal to one hundred percent (100%) of the Contract Price.

The OWNER reserves the right to reject any and all bids and to accept any bid which appears to be in its best interest.

Mexico, Creditors Agree On Debt Reduction Plan

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Mexico and its creditor banks finally agreed on the key points of a debt-reduction package, providing the first victory for the Bush administration's effort to ease the $1.3 trillion Third World debt burden.

The agreement announced late Sunday night ended two days of intense talks at the U.S. Treasury Department where Mexican officials and U.S. bankers were joined by Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady and Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan.

In the final package, negotiators representing the commercial banks agreed to choose from three options for providing assistance. They can cut the principal on the old loans by 35 percent, reduce the interest rate they are charging to 6.25 percent or provide new loans to Mexico.

U.S. officials predicted that the debt-relief package could slash by up to one-third the $4.5 billion Mexico is paying annually to service the $54 billion it owes to commercial banks.

However, officials said the exact amount of debt relief will not be known for some time because each of Mexico's creditor banks must decide on its own the extent to which it will participate in the plan.

Still, the agreement signified the first tangible result for the Bush administration's debt-reduction plan, which was unveiled by Brady on March 10. The strategy seeks to provide various incentives for commercial banks to voluntarily reduce the amount of Third World debt they hold.

Brady, who had lobbied intensely for the final agreement, hailed the package as "a major step forward in the implementation" of the debt-reduction effort.

The administration had made Mexico the test-case for the Brady plan, believing that an agreement with the developing world's second-largest debtor would establish precedents for deals with other countries.

Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari went on nationwide television Sunday night to praise the final package, saying, "Mexico has opened the way for other nations with similar problems."

Salinas said the debt reduction plan answered "the cry of Mexicans to return to growth" but he cautioned Mexican citizens, "don't look for spectacular results overnight."

The Bush administration had hoped to have a completed Mexican debt plan to present to the seven-nation economic summit last week in Paris. But even without a deal, the final summit communique included a strong endorsement of the approach.

In an effort to break the stalemate, Brady brought the negotiators to Washington on Saturday and Sunday to resolve the remaining issues.

Salinas described the final talks as "difficult, complex and tense." Mexico had begun the discussions demanding that the banks cut Mexico's debt by 55 percent.

Others participating in the final round of negotiations were Mexican Finance Minister Pedro Aspe and John Reed, chairman of Citicorp and head of the 15-bank committee which bargains for the hundreds of banks to which Mexico owes money.

In a joint statement from the Mexican government and the banks, the two sides said they had reached agreement on the main points of the financing package with the expectation that it would be accepted by "Mexico's approximately 500 creditor banks worldwide."

The debt reduction options include slashing the principal on old loans by 35 percent or reducing the interest rate banks receive to 6.25 percent.

Banks taking either of these options would be able to get guarantees against default on the remaining debt from the 15-nation International Monetary Fund or its sister organization, the World Bank.

The joint statement estimated that $7 billion will be available from the international lending organizations and other sources, including Japan, to support the debt-reduction and interest-rate reduction efforts for Mexico.

In conjunction with the Mexican agreement, Brady said the United States is willing to provide up to $2 billion in short-term financing to Mexico to tide the country over until the new loans begin arriving later this year. He said other countries would help in providing this bridge loan.

Officials said one of the final issues resolved Sunday night involved a "readjustment clause" that would increase debt payments once the Mexican economy rebounds.

One official, who spoke on condition that his name not be used, said both sides agreed to tie increased debt payments to any improvements in Mexico's export sales after the year 1996.

Opposition Lawmakers Resign, Call For Gandhi To Step Down

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW DELHI, India — All 106 opposition members in parliament's lower house resigned today, saying a foreign arms deal that allegedly involved kickbacks had destroyed confidence in Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi's government.

They are demanding that Gandhi step down and call new elections.

As deputies from deputies from Gandhi's Congress Party chanted "shame, shame," the lawmakers from the 12 opposition parties handed their letters of resignation to Speaker Balram Jajhar.

Gandhi quietly looked on.

Although opposition politicians have in the past boycotted entire sessions of parliament, they had never resigned.

Still, Gandhi's party holds a solid majority in the 544-member chamber and the opposition's departure likely will have no effect.

In a rare display of solidarity, the usually fractious and unruly opposition on Sunday announced its decision to resign, citing an auditor's report on inconsistencies in the 1986 purchase of artillery from a Swedish firm.

By giving up their seats, opposition leaders said, they hoped the billion-dollar deal would be a major issue in the next general election, which Gandhi must call by January.

"Never before has the office of the prime minister been brought into disrepute as under the present incumbent," said V.P. Singh, leader of the People's Party. "We were all elected by the people and now we are going back to them for their verdict on this issue."

Government officials contend the deal was sanctioned by Singh, who at that time served as finance minister in Gandhi's Cabinet. Singh left the governing party in 1987.

As he left Parliament, Singh denied any wrongdoing but added if anyone had proof, "They should prosecute me."

Besides the People's Party, the opposition parties include the Indian People's Party, the Party of the Telugus, the two major Communist parties and seven regional groups.

The rest of the seats are controlled by Gandhi's Congress Party and independents.

After the auditor general's report was released on Tuesday, opposition members in parliament shouted anti-government slogans, called Gandhi a thief and demanded his resignation. When he refused, they walked out and stalled the proceedings for three days.

The $1.4 billion deal has been a major scandal for Gandhi's government because of allegations that the Swedish firm AB Bofors paid kickbacks to secure the contract.

Newspapers and opposition politicians say kickbacks amounting to at least $50 million were paid to senior government officials and to Congress Party coffers. The allegations have never been proved.

The report by the auditor general said the arms purchase was flawed on technical considerations and cost assessment.
