Council Bans 'Unlawful' Parking Lot Assembly

By J. Ward Best
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Greenville's proposed ordinance to ban unlawful assembly in public parking lots passed the City Council without a hitch, but not without some protest from the target of the ban.

Five area youths attended Monday's meeting to protest the city's proposal to clear groups of teenagers and young adults from its parking lots. A group of downtown business owners also had a spokesman, but in support of the ordinance.

The ordinance, drafted by city attorney Mac McCarley, outlaws activities other than parking a car, turning around in the lot or conducting permitted activities.

Private lots and those owned by the county or East Carolina University may also be covered under the ordinance if requested by the owner. While no specific hours apply to the city-owned lots, the ordinance provides for private owners to set their hours of enforcement.

Through the ordinance, McCarley said, the city hopes to eliminate not just the unlawful assembly, but also illegal activities such as vandalism, drunk and disruptive behavior and drug sales which accompany some of the gatherings.

Craig Phelps, a student at D.H. Conley High School, lauded the intentions of the ordinance. But he told the council the problems come from the college students passing through the area, not the youths parked in the lots.

"All we're doing down there is congregating," Phelps said. "It's just simple clean fun."

Louis Clark, speaking for the downtown business owners, strongly disputed the claim of "simple clean fun."

Clark presented a petition containing 51 signatures of business owners supporting the ordinance, and letters of support from First Federal Savings and Loan Association and The Daily Reflector.

"We are in support of (the ordinance), and the vast majority of the public is in support of it," Clark said.

Amy Heath, the only other youth to speak at the meeting, supported Phelps, and asked the council where the teens would go if they could not meet in the parking lots.

Mayor Ed Carter mentioned the teen center, and asked if that wasn't for the purpose of giving teens somewhere to go.

"The teen center is a good idea, but it's just not for everyone," Phelps said.

Phelps called the crowd at the teen center "yuppies," and said only the more affluent teen-agers go to the center.

"Maybe the city might have to look at encouraging the use of recreational facilities," said Council member Mildred Council.

Council member Nancy Jenkins suggested the formation of a committee, including teen-agers, to study alternative activities for the area youth.

"I feel that you will find other alternatives — you always have," Council member Rufus Huggins told Phelps. And Huggins said the council needed to head off a problem before it got out of control.

In other business, a N.C. Department of Transportation report offered some recommendations to the council on handling traffic problems the city may face with a growing population.

Pitt Board Calls For Bond Voting

By Stuart Savage
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt County voters will have the opportunity to decide whether or not to borrow $25.7 million for public school construction projects and $10 million for new buildings and other facilities at Pitt Community College, thanks to action by the Board of County Commissioners on Monday.

Commissioners, who have been discussing requests by the Board of Education and the PCC trustees for capital projects money for several months, took final action on the requests Monday by authorizing the bond votes to be held.

While not setting a date for the referendums, the board said the voting should be held "prior to March 31, 1990."

County Manager Kramer Jackson has said that the proposed $25.7 million in bonds for the public schools could be repaid — without the need of a tax increase — from state public school building allocations and revenue from the half-cent sales tax designated for school construction.

In approving the public school bond vote, commissioners specified that the board of education agree: that retirement of the debt service on the bonds be set at 15 years; that proceeds from the sale of Rose High School be deposited in a capital reserve fund for five years to be used during that period to finance the purchase of equipment and other small capital projects, and that no capital project money will be appropriated for schools, other than the $25.7 million from the sale of the bonds, for a period of five years.

Jackson has said that retirement of the public school bond debt would cost $44.97 million, including interest, over a 20-year period.

According to figures Jackson gave the board Monday, a 15-year pay-back on $25.7 million in bonds, would cost $41.11 million, including interest. Total revenue from the half-cent sales tax and state school construction money over the 15-year period was estimated by Jackson at $54.85 million.

In authorizing a vote on $10 million in bonds for PCC — with a 15-year pay-back period — commissioners said the funds should be used to finance: construction of an allied health building ($3.51 million), roads and utility systems ($258,747); relocate modular units ($47,389), a new maintenance and storage facility ($1.77 million); a welding and masonry building ($1.2 million); the demolition of the present welding shops ($4,153), and the construction of a continuing education general classroom building ($3.12 million).

Commissioners also said efforts should be made to secure money for a $3.25 million student services buildings from the state and suggested that PCC trustees consider scaling down some of the projects in an effort to provide money for the purchase of land to expand the school's campus to allow for future growth.

According to figures that Jackson, gave the board Monday, a 15-year pay-back on $10 million in bonds would cost $16 million including interest, compared to $15.7 million over 20 years.

The $16 million pay-back over 15 years would require a tax rate equivalent — based on current property values — of 3.52 cents. A 20-year pay-back of $17.5 million, Jackson said, would require a tax rate equivalent of 2.89 cents.

No date for voting on the proposed bond issues will be set until after the county's bond council is consulted and details are worked out.

Commissioners postponed action on a proposal to purchase — through a lease-purchase arrangement — 100 electronic voting machines, at an estimated cost of $500,000.

The board also delayed action on whether to authorize a referendum on the question of issuing $5 million in bonds to finance a new solid waste landfill until a decision is made on whether or not to join several other counties in establishing a regional landfill operation.

Haigwood Upheld In His Selection Of Jurors For Bethel Man's Trial

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A Superior Court judge today refused to order a new trial for a Bethel man sentenced to die in 1984, ruling that Pitt District Attorney Tom Haigwood was racially neutral in selecting the jury that handed down the death sentence.

Judge Thomas S. Watts of Elizabeth City handed down the ruling this morning after two days of evidence and arguments from attorneys. Defense lawyers had presented a statistical analysis of the jury selection process in the case of Harvey Lee Green, 28, claiming that Haigwood dismissed more black jurors than whites solely on the basis of race.

However, Watts said from the bench that he had "considerable concern" about the fact that the statistician did not consider any characteristics — such as opinion of the death penalty, attitude toward law enforcement or prior friendship with Green — other than race.

There was one black alternate on the Green jury, and Watts said he found it difficult for the defense to justify the intentional disregard for considering the alternates in the statistical tests.

"He (Haigwood) has articulated and stated before to this court credible, genuine reasons for excusing (the jurors)," Watts said.

With Watts' ruling today, the case will return to the state Supreme Court, which has yet to rule on the merits of Green's original appeal.

In his explanation, Haigwood has cited specific reasons other than race for dismissing five of six black jurors called to the 12-member jury box. He has stated that certain jurors wavered on their opinions on the death penalty, one was related to a person who has taken public positions against his office, one appeared to be in poor health and one person knew Green and his family. Green, who is black, pleaded guilty to beating to death a man and a teen-age female clerk when he robbed a Bethel dry cleaners. Both victims were white.

Raleigh attorney Roger Smith, who said he is making a limited appearance for Green at the hearing this week, argued this morning that Haigwood engaged in "purposeful racial discrimination" in selecting the jury.

Smith presented evidence Monday showing that more black jurors were dismissed in the Green case than were white jurors. Green is also represented by Malcolm Hunter Jr., the state's appellate defender.

Joan H. Byers, special deputy attorney general, called the statistics introduced by the defense ridiculous and argued to Watts that defense attorneys failed to rebut Haigwood's non-racial explanations for the dismissals.

On Monday, she presented into evidence the transcript of Haigwood's

County Board Approves PCMH Budget

By Stuart Savage
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt County Commissioners approved the hospital's $216.4 million budget for the coming fiscal year, approved funding for $1.43 million in public school capital projects, OK'd criteria to be used in the selection of a new landfill site and endorsed major extensions proposed by three non-profit water corporations.

In approving the 1989-1990 budget for Pitt County Memorial Hospital, commissioners Monday followed earlier action by PCMH trustees in endorsing a $207 million operating budget for the coming year and $9.4 million in capital projects.

While the budget calls for an increase in many charges made to patients, PCMH President Dave McRae told the board that PCMH charges will remain competitive with rates for similar services provided by other hospitals in eastern North Carolina as well as with rates charged by other major medical centers in the state.

The school projects commissioners approved for funding Monday include: $183,933 to remove safety deficiencies — primarily install new fire doors — at 18 schools; $211,500 for roof renovations at 15 schools; $34,234 for removal of asbestos at H.B. Sugg and G.R. Whitfield schools; $12,500 to move 10 mobile classroom units; $578,650 to build an addition at Falkland Elementary school; $252,770 for more cafeteria space and a new kitchen and other renovations at Belvoir school; $102,000 for planning, development and revision of schematic drawings for the conversion of Greenville Middle School to a high school, and $58,100 for various types of kitchen equipment for 11 schools.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — James and David Taggart, former aides to PTL founder Jim Bakker, were found guilty this morning on charges that they evaded paying more than $525,000 in income taxes.

After the jury deliberated for three hours Monday night, it returned at 9:30 this morning and met for two more hours before returning its verdict at 11:15.

Both the Taggarts sat quietly as the verdict was read. David Taggart looked at the jurors as they were polled individually. James Taggart continued to stare straight ahead.

Judge Robert Potter told the jurors, whose deliberations began at 5 p.m. Monday, not to speak to reporters outside the courtroom.

Potter set Aug. 25 as a tentative sentencing date. He released the Taggarts on $50,000 unsecured bond, the same figure since the two were indicted.

Prosecutor David Brown asked Potter to raise the bond to $100,000.

"We're looking for some kind of security that they'll show up" at the sentencing, Brown said.

But Potter said he would "take a risk" and release on $50,000 unsecured bond.

On the way out of the courtroom, David Taggart declined to comment, saying "I have nothing to say."

The Taggarts were charged with evasion after they allegedly spent nearly $1.2 million in PTL money on personal luxuries such as condominiums, jewelry and designer clothes. Their defense attorney told the jury that the money was approved by Bakker, but a federal prosecutor told the jury members in closing arguments Monday they should not consider the actions of Bakker or former PTL executive vice president Richard Dortch.

The Taggarts lied when they claimed PTL founder Jim Bakker authorized their use of ministry funds they later spent on lavish lifestyles, Brown said earlier Monday in his closing arguments.

But defense attorney Ben Cotten objected to "incriminating questions" from the prosecution and used his closing arguments to return

Pitt School Board Receives Details Of Virginia Substance Abuse Plan

By Lane Dunn
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

An official of a Virginia-based substance abuse agency discussed his organization's drug prevention program with the Pitt County Board of Education on Monday as the board considered the establishment of a local program.

Richard Goll, executive director of Alternatives Inc., was at Greenville Middle School to present his program to the board's workshop session.

Alternatives Inc. is a private non-profit organization based in Hampton, Va. It directs the Hampton Intervention and Prevention Project in Hampton city schools.

Goll said that the intent of his presentation was not to sell his program but to provide the board with an example of a working program and give members some ideas of where to begin in implementing their own.

Board Member Jack Collins, who was responsible for bringing Goll to Greenville, said, "If we've got any problem at all with drugs we've got too much of a problem."

Goll stressed that the Hampton Intervention and Prevention Project does not emphasize treatment for students with drug problems but concentrates on the non-user and prevention.

"If all of your energy is devoted to the problem children they just keep coming," he said.

Goll said that one-fifth of Hampton's students belong to drug-free clubs including 2,800 in the Just Say No clubs in elementary schools. He said that 1,400 students are enrolled in the Student Assistance Program in the high schools and middle schools in Hampton.

Since the program was implemented Hampton schools have seen a 50 percent reduction in drug-related expulsions, Goll said. Students are suspended for 10 days for a first offense of use or possession of alcohol or drugs. A student is expelled after a second offense.

To be allowed back into school after suspension the student must complete an intervention program at Alternatives, Goll said. The student's parents must attend the first phase of the program.

Goll said that since 1981, out of about 1,000 cases, only two students did not get their parents to attend.

Goll said that Hampton has seen an 8 percent reduction in youth-related crimes while all other cities in the Tidewater area have experienced increases. One city had a 79 percent increase, he said.

"Everyone in the community believes that we are winning the war against substance abuse," Goll said.

Goll said that HIPP has an operating budget of $600,000 per year. The Hampton City Council allocates $350,000 per year and it receives $80,000 from federal drug free programs. It gets $50,000 from the United Way and $50,000 from the schools, according to the spokesman, and state grants provide it with $20,000.

Goll said that Alternatives makes certain that it has other sources of funding available in the event that one source can no longer provide the money. He said that HIPP has never lost a program.

Goll said that the use of an outside agency, such as Alternatives, is the best direction for a school system to take.

"You don't want the people in your school to wake up thinking about the drug program," he said. "You want your math teachers to wake up thinking about the math program."

Goll believes that the program can continue to progress.

"Our goal is absolutely no drugs in the Hampton school system by the year 2000," he said.

HIPP has gained nationwide recognition and was featured on the ABC news program, "Drugs, Why This Plague?" In addition, two stories on the project have appeared in U.S. News and World Report.

HIPP was also recognized as one of 20 exemplary programs by the National Association of State Alcohol and Drug Abuse Directors and the Office on Substance Abuse Prevention.

In other business Monday, John McKnight, deputy superintendent for Pitt County schools, said the Board of County Commissioners has authorized the sale of $25.7 million in bonds for public school capital outlay.

McKnight said that the board needs to decide if they want the bond referendum to be voted on during general elections or if they want a special vote.

McKnight also said the board recommended that proceeds from the sale of Rose High School, projected at $3.5 million or more, be placed in escrow for five years and $600,000 be appropriated annually for Category 1,2,3 Capital Outlay.

Category 1,2,3, Capital Outlay is used for such items as activity buses, vehicles and furniture.

testimony from a 1987 hearing at which Watts ruled Haigwood's actions were racially neutral. In addition to Haigwood's transcript, Nancy Aycock, chief assistant district attorney, explained to Watts the reasons why the five blacks were dismissed.

After the 1987 hearing, the state Supreme Court ordered a new hearing to allow Green to present his evidence.

Durham statistician Dr. David West Peterson, whom Watts appointed in May to assist the defense, testified Monday about statistical analyses he had performed on jury data in the Green case.

Customarily in a death penalty case, both the prosecution and defense may excuse up to 14 jurors with peremptory challenges. Traditionally, attorneys for both sides have not had to state reasons for the peremptory dismissals, but a U.S. Supreme Court ruling in 1986 changed that.

The federal court ruled in a Kentucky case that prosecutors may not use race as a basis for a peremptory challenge.

Before attorneys settled on 12 jurors in the Green case, the prosecution accepted 25 of 26 whites called to the jury box and one of six blacks, Peterson testified.

If those 32 people were prospective jurors, and the six peremptory challenges were issued randomly, it is highly improbable that five of the six people dismissed would be black, Peterson said.

He said the odds are 1 in 10,000 that five of the six people dismissed would be black if the challenges were issued randomly.

He also presented two other cases in which Haigwood tried that he said showed a trend of dismissing black jurors on the basis of their race.

In one case, Peterson said seven of 15 black jurors called were challenged peremptorily by Haigwood, and four of 30 white jurors were challenged by him.

The odds of that arrangement occurring if the challenges were issued randomly is 1 in 100, he said.

In the third case, he said Haigwood peremptorily challenged both of the two black jurors called and one of 18 white jurors.

The odds of that happening randomly are 1 in 200, he said.

Ms. Byers said Haigwood has been a prosecutor since 1971 and tried probably 1,000 cases. Peterson said he did not know that.

Watts denied Ms. Byer's motion to strike Peterson's testimony.

Defense attorneys also called to the stand two local attorneys, Jeffrey Miller and Howard Cummings, who represented Green in Superior Court. Both men said they believed prior to the Green case that Haigwood would make it difficult to seat black jurors.

Under cross-examination, however, neither man gave a specific instance in which Haigwood used race as a factor in dismissing a juror.

Monday Thefts

Investigators said seven thefts, including two railroad lanterns and a walkie-talkie from a CSX Railroad caboose, were reported to Greenville police Monday.

Officer C.A. Curtis said the two orange railroad lanterns and the $2,000 two-way radio were taken from a caboose parked on the CSX tracks near the intersection of 10th and Railroad streets in a break-in reported at 2:05 a.m., while Officer A.J. Dennison said an undetermined amount of merchandise was taken from Tom Togs on Dickinson Avenue in a break-in reported at 2:34 a.m.

Officer E.L. Butts said several items of food were eaten and a checkbook was taken in a break-in at Arlington Street Baptist Church at 1007 W. Arlington Blvd. in a break-in reported at 9:39 a.m. and four hubcaps were taken from a car parked at Building F of Courtney Square Apartments in an incident reported at 1:18 p.m.

Butts also said four patio chairs were taken from A5 Lexington Square Apartments in an incident reported at 1:44 p.m., while Officer R.C. Allsbrook said two tires and rims were taken from a car at Brinkley Moore Motors at 3104 S. Memorial Drive in an incident reported at 10:02 a.m. and a gold necklace and two rings were taken from 503A Darden Drive in an incident reported at 4:25 p.m.

Theft Charges

Two people were arrested by Greenville police on theft charges Monday.

Officer C.A. Elks said Mary Curonda Blount, 28, of 1929 Buxton Road was arrested on larceny charges in connection with the theft of a credit card — which was later recovered — from 1621B Hopkins Drive at about 8:48 a.m.

Officer W.E. Davis said Martin Lloyd Pearson, 26, of Route 2, Wilson, was arrested on shoplifting charges in connection with the theft of two cameras from Rose's at Stanton Square Shopping Center at about 4:59 p.m.

Revival Services

Revival services will be held at Sweet Gum Grove Free Will Baptist Church, Route 1, Stokes, today through Friday at 7:30 p.m. each day.

The Rev. Franklin Brinson will be the guest evangelist. A nursery will be provided.

Jobs Filled

The Greenville office of the Employment Security Commission of North Carolina placed 450 people in jobs during June, according to an ESC report.

The Greenville office has placed 3,108 individuals in jobs during the first six months of 1989.

On a statewide level, the commission indicated 16,033 North Carolinians found employment through the job service centers in June.

North Carolina employers listed 30,126 job openings with the agency during June and the ESC filled 21,846 of those openings.

The Raleigh office placed the largest number of individuals, 1,293, followed by Winston-Salem, 991; Fayetteville, 939; Sanford, 894, and Charlotte, 849.

Martin Says Environmental Groups Will Be Responsible If Bridge Is Lost

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Environmentalists will be to blame if the Oregon Inlet bridge is lost and people die in a storm because can't vacate Hatteras Island fast enough, Gov. Jim Martin said.

"If they succeed in stalling us until a hurricane comes and endangers the lives of those people, it's going to be their fault," Martin said in Washington on Monday.

"And if they're really interested in the environment, they ought to back away from a foolish effort to undermine public confidence in their causes. ... If I can find a way, I'm going to sue them for reckless endangerment."

He said he was referring to national environmental groups rather than state groups. The Wilderness Society and the National Wildlife Federation have indicated they might file suit to block the project.

Martin also defended the compromise on Mobil Corp.'s proposal to drill for natural gas off the North Carolina coast.

Some environmental groups, including Greenpeace, which will hold a news conference today in Beaufort, have criticized Martin for dropping his demand for an environmental impact statement on the Mobil project. Instead, the Department of the Interior will do a specially crafted environmental study before issuing a permit for the exploratory well.

Greenpeace only wants to create a furor "so that they can sell more memberships and get more people to send contributions to them," Martin said.

The compromise is a better deal for North Carolina than an environmental impact statement, he said, because it provides more public hearings, more time to evaluate Mobil's proposal and far more information on the consequences of Mobil finding gas or oil.

Erosion is threatening to wash the north end of Hatteras Island away from the Herbert C. Bonner Bridge, which connects it to the mainland. The Martin administration wants to build a rock jetty, or groin, to protect that part of the island from waves and ocean currents.

Some oceanographers and environmental groups, such as the Wilderness Society, oppose the move. They say jetties tend to exacerbate erosion on nearby beaches, and ultimately lose out to the ocean's power anyway.

The groups have proposed alternative ways to maintain Hatteras' link to the bridge, such as using floating pontoon-style bridges to span the area being washed away. State-run ferries also could be used to link Hatteras to the mainland, but would be hard pressed to evacuate the island in a summer emergency.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

No Business

'Hands Off' Best For Personnel

There are some areas of education a school board has no business meddling in, regardless of good intentions. The Pitt County School Board deserves a back pat for its "hands off" approach to school personnel matters.

In approving controversial personnel recommendations and transfers at a special meeting last week, board members wisely recognized that politics and personnel decisions don't mix. Promotions and transfers should be based on assessments by objective, well-informed school administrators, not influence on the school board. After dodging action on the 1989-90 recommendations at its July 10th meeting, the board correctly OK'ed the changes a week later.

Delaying the vote until the start of school is less than a month away is not the ideal way to conduct public business. But the board can be forgiven this transgression if it continues to place distance between itself and personnel recommendations. There are very sound reasons to do so.

'These factors often aren't visible to those who object to the changes — teachers, concerned parents, and yes, even school board members ...'

Personnel transfers, especially principals — and these recommendations included 10 principals and assistant principals — are always contentious. Communities and faculties grow fond of good leaders and are understandably reluctant to relinquish them.

But in a well-run school system like Pitt, personnel transfers are seldom capricious moves. They are necessary to fill vacancies, apply special abilities to specific problems, and meet school system goals on affirmative action. Any change is a carefully designed adjustment essential to improving education.

Sometimes, transfers are requested by the individuals involved for professional reasons — reasons that make good sense to administrators but ones that a community might not understand.

These factors often aren't visible to those who object to the changes — teachers, concerned parents, and yes, even school board members — those who see their school losing a capable human resource.

That's why administrators need the flexibility to make these adjustments as they deem necessary. Elected officials set hiring policies and performance standards that affect personnel. Professional educators should make decisions, based on this policy, about human capabilities and the school system's needs. The policy-setters should give them the freedom, as the Pitt school board has done, to fine-tune for excellence.

Fickle

Weather Continues To Harm Tobacco

Rain forced tobacco farmers into a late start at the beginning of the growing season. Now, when days are supposed to be hot and sunny, rains have continuing to plague the farmer.

Not only is the barning of tobacco being hampered by wet days, but the big Pitt County crop is threatened by a fungus called rhizoctinia leaf spot — an affliction caused by hot and humid weather.

The disease was reported about a week ago and last week's weather did little to improve conditions.

Tobacco growers, once hopeful of a good crop following the late planting, now are faced with a cut in the weight of the crop and a corresponding loss in revenue when the tobacco is sold.

A bright spot in the farm picture is that corn and peanuts are thriving on the wet weather.

But for the tobacco grower, the weather is critical at this time of the year. The crop must be removed from the fields as it matures. Heavy rains delay the harvesting and the quality of the product suffers.

Tobacco is a hearty plant, however, and it is rare that the crop is a total failure. Growers will be working long hours over the next few weeks. The fickleness of weather will mean that sometimes they may be working in wet fields. Handling tobacco leaves under such conditions is more difficult than at ideal times. Nevertheless farmers will harvest a tobacco crop. With a few clear days, they may yet enjoy a good year.

A Word About Flag Desecration

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — Our legislators, both state and federal, can't solve this nation's real problems, so they're making a few up, and turning to art criticism, to justify their existence.

During the past month, the federal deficit has swelled and the state has gone without either roads or schools plans. But legislators found that they could grab headlines pontificating about those who would burn the American flag and those who would disparage God or dead politicians in their artwork.

As usual, however, the solutions offered by our politicians fail to go to the heart of the problem. They fail to recognize that in desecrating the flag, religion and themselves, our politicians are the biggest culprits.

A constitutional amendment has been proposed in the Congress to make flag desecration illegal while state legislatures are working on a much more reasonable bill that would simply bring state laws into compliance with the U.S. Supreme Court ruling that set off this whole controversy.

It's curious that in President Bush's proposal, only the "physical desecration" of the flag would be illegal. That's a shame because while there had been few instances of public flag-burnings in the five years prior to the ruling, the flag is symbolically desecrated almost every time an election comes up.

If Bush and all other flag-wrapped politicians really want to protect Old Glory, they'll make it illegal for political candidates to use the flag on bumper stickers, balloons, bunting and as a stage prop, all to aggrandize themselves. They'll make it illegal to wave the flag, and to conjure up images of Marines taking Suribachi, to help some weak-kneed, self-serving politician cast dispersions on the patriotism of his opponent.

While the federal budget was about $150 billion out of balance, the Congress cut $45,000 out of the budget for the National Endowment for the Arts because it had sponsored some "art" it didn't like. Someone who calls himself an artist had immersed a crucifix in urine and called it art. Somehow the endowment paid for a show in which it was featured.

But we should ask ourselves, who desecrates religion more in this country? One flaky artist whose work hardly anyone has ever seen, or the legions of political candidates who claim to hve God's endorsement to seek office? In North Carolina in recent years, we've seen candidates running with the cross on their bumper stickers and yard signs, we've seen candidates writing letters that accuse their opponents of being godless because of their political beliefs. Dropping the cross in urine is sickening, but no more so than dropping it into the bile that constitutes recent political dialogue.

In Chicago, there has been considerable posturing about one publicly sponsored show that included a work depicting the late Harold Washington, mayor of Chicago, in women's lingerie. Chicago councilmen said the work disparaged the memory of a great political leader.

But who is more guilty of making politicians look foolish than the politicians themselves? No artist made wimpy Mike Dukakis take that M-1 tank for a drive last fall. No flag-burner proposed a legislative debate over the Plott Hound as the state dog.

If legislators can write an amendment that will stop politicians from disparaging the flag, our God and themselves, then it might be worth a curtailment of our free expression. Otherwise, they ought to leave the First Amendment alone, and allow the endowment to make an occasional mistake, so that American dissent can continue to flourish.

A Talented Conductor — & Nazi

WASHINGTON — Returning here from the isolation of Prague, the news junkie pauses at Frankfurt to change planes and scoop up newspapers — $11 worth, my expense account will say. It is then that I learn Herbert von Karajan, conductor, impresario and former Nazi, has died. For the first two he is praised and the last — his Nazi Party membership — is hardly mentioned. The man was not given his due. He was a thorough opportunist.

Little is made of that in the newspapers I read — either on the plane or later. Instead, they mention that von Karajan joined the Nazi Party twice — in his native Austria and later in Germany — and that he once lied about being a Nazi. In all, though, this odious chapter in von Karajan's life is given about as much space as his early marriages — perhaps more presumed mistakes of his younger days.

To the extent that he commented at all on his Nazi Party membership, von Karajan said that he joined to advance his career. If so, it worked. At a very young age, he became a favorite of the Nazi hierarchy and the arch-rival of the much-older Wilhelm Furtwangler. As a good Nazi, von Karajan conducted orchestras that had been purged of Jews and political nonconformists. The conformist with the baton presumably never noticed that some key players were missing.

In the various obituaries, von Karajan's Nazi Party membership seems to have been forgiven. Leonard Bernstein himself interrupted a European concert to ask for a moment of silence. Possibly, von Karajan confided his regrets to peers like Bernstein, but the public record is devoid of any regret or any explanation, save careerism. If that was indeed the case, then the maestro was no different than your ordinary German streetcar conductor. He, too, kept his mouth shut to advance his career.

Had von Karajan apologized, explained — used some of his vast wealth (royalties of $6 million a year) to aid the victims of Nazism, his reprehensible past could have been forgiven. But there is no record of this.

Arthur Koestler, the late British writer, said it was an intellectual's obligation to use his gifts to protest what is tritely called man's inhumanity to man. Koestler made that statement as a rebuff to a fellow British intellectual who said he had not known what the Nazis were doing. Not good enough, said Koestler. It was the intellectual's duty to know — to know and do something about it.

Herbert von Karajan surely knew what the Nazis were doing. But the same could be said for a musical establishment — critics, impresarios and morally vacuous audiences who cherished von Karajan for his awesome talents — never mind what he did during the war. A lesser figure might have been held accountable, might have been asked why he did not go into exile or otherwise protest the murder of innocents, but not von Karajan. From him nothing was demanded but mighty music. He died an immensely wealthy and acclaimed man.

Von Karajan's opportunism, while reprehensible, was at least astute. He would sometimes grant interviews on the condition that he not be asked about his Nazi past and a toadying press, eager for news from the maestro, sometimes agreed. At other times, he threatened to cancel tours if his Nazi past was mentioned. Usually, he was appeased. Von Karajan's genius was not limited to music. He knew something about human nature as well. Everyone has a career to advance.

This sort of compartmentalization — separating the person from his work — is done all the time, but not without difficulty. The poetry of Ezra Pound is valued, even though he was a traitor. Richard Wagner's music is loved, even though he was, politically, a precursor of Nazism. And the works of Andy Warhol fetch high prices at the same time his published diaries reveal him to be a vindictive airhead. He could, however, paint.

Reconciling the artist with his work may be an impossible task and no one is suggesting that von Karajan should have been banned for life from the concert hall. But neither should his Nazism have been slighted by critics and obituary writers. They treated his membership as if it were a misstep in an otherwise brilliant career — an off-night, maybe on account of an upset stomach. To his fans and colleagues, his music seemed not to matter most — but entirely.

My perspective is a bit different. The day before boarding the plane, I visited a museum in Prague dedicated to the children of the ghetto the Nazis established in the Czechoslovakian city of Terezin — children later shipped to Auschwitz where they were murdered. In Terezin, the children painted pictures. I will mention just one: the wonderful, colorful butterflies of Gabi Freiova, aged 11. She died at Auschwitz, May 18, 1944. She, too, could have had a brilliant career.

WE BECAME NORTH CAROLINA'S LEADING FASHION SPECIALTY STORE BY JUMPING INTO THE BUSINESS FEET FIRST.

Brody's began as a shoe store in the early 1900's in Sumter, South Carolina, and even then the Brody's difference was apparent. Founder Hyman J. Brody offered his customers the widest selection of high-quality merchandise at the best possible prices. And he stood behind that merchandise to the customers' complete satisfaction. Today, things haven't changed a bit. Even though we've expanded into men's and women's apparel and accessories you'll still find the greatest selection of top quality shoes at Brody's. Still competitively priced, and still guaranteed to your complete satisfaction.

OUR SERVICE MEASURES UP.

Superior service is one of our oldest traditions. Our salespeople are friendly, thorough, and knowledgeable. People who care, who work hard to help meet your every need. When we help a customer we do more than ask his shoe size. We carefully measure his feet. A perfect fit is the result of conscientious fitting. And not something left to chance.

WE GO TO ANY LENGTH, OR WIDTH, TO SATISFY YOUR NEEDS.

Sure it takes more room to stock more sizes, but we think it's worth the investment. In fact, we continue to offer the widest range of sizes we can find - lengths from 5 to 13, and widths from aaa to eee. We believe a perfect fit is the most important characteristic of any shoe. And we strive to provide you the size you need in as many styles as possible.

House Unit Begins Work On Last Budget Bills

By Dennis Patterson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The General Assembly has moved one step closer to adjournment as the House Appropriations Committee began working on the final two spending bills that must be approved before lawmakers leave town.

The proposed budget for new and expanded state programs unveiled by the committee Monday includes 6 percent pay raises for teachers and state employees, funding for more than 3,000 new teachers under the Basic Education Plan and 70 new Highway Patrol troopers over the next two years.

The budget for capital projects includes $36 million for a new Revenue Department Building, $8 million for repairs and land purchases for the state parks system, $18 million for a new State Bureau of Investigation complex, and $14 million for development of a low-level radioactive waste site.

posal, but no votes were taken and no amendments were accepted.

The expansion budget includes the Genetically Engineered Organisms Act, which establishes a review board and general guidelines to control the sale or release into the environment of living organisms created or altered through genetic engineering.

The proposed budget also calls for giving Beaufort County the $1 million fine levied against Texasgulf Inc. for violations of environmental regulations. Texasgulf operates a large phosphate operation on the Pamlico River in Beaufort County. A special provision of the budget bill calls for the county to divide the funds between the county school board and the Washington city schools.

The proposal also calls for increasing Medicaid coverage for pregnant women and children, as well as additional funding for adolescent pregnancy and infant mortality prevention programs.

The Senate already has adopted its spending proposals for the next two years, proposals which contain significant differences from the House version. If the House approves the spending package later this week, the two versions would be sent to a conference committee to iron out differences.

The budget matters are the last roadblock to adjournment for the session, which already has lasted more than three weeks longer than legislative leaders had predicted.

In other legislative action:

Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said his panel will take up proposals for a state lottery Thursday, with a period for public comment and a vote likely.

Bills introduced in the Senate have called for a public referendum on whether the state should develop a lottery.

The House gave tentative approval to a resolution calling for the session to end this Friday, but not before defeating amendments that attempted to virtually eliminate next summer's short session or limit it to four weeks.

The House had debated the matter for two hours Friday before adjourning.

Rep. Dennis Wicker, D-Lee, attempted to amend the measure so that committees and subcommittees in either chamber could meet only to discuss budget matters between sessions unless the House speaker and Senate president pro tem agreed on other matters to be discussed.

Wicker said he feared allowing the House speaker or Senate president pro tem to authorize committee meetings on any subject in the interim would lead to a full-time Legislature. But his amendment was rejected on a 64-45 vote.

The House then rejected 78-30 an amendment by Rep. Larry Etheridge, R-Wilson, that would have required the General Assembly to meet for only 30 minutes on June 29, 1990, to discuss only an adjournment resolution.

An amendment by Rep. Trip Sizemore, R-Guilford, that would have limited the short session to four weeks was defeated 60-50 before the House tentatively agreed to the adjournment resolution 86-25.

A final vote is scheduled Tuesday. The resolution then goes to the Senate.

The chairmen of the House and Senate negotiating panels that worked out an agreement on a $9 billion highway construction package presented their compromise plans to the two chambers.

A first vote on accepting the compromise on the 13.5-year proposal will come Wednesday.

The Senate tentatively approved changes in the state's Open Meetings Law on a 44-0 vote.

The bill would bring the General Assembly and Council of State under provisions of the law, which require public bodies to conduct the public's business in the open.

The bill contains 20 exceptions under which a public body may meet in secret.

A bill that would declare the Plott hound to be the official state dog of North Carolina was taken off the House calendar after questions were raised about a provision that would make it a felony to steal a dog.

Rep. Toby Fitch, D-Wilson, said a House measure that made it a felony to steal a pet was killed in the Senate, making any similar measure ineligible for consideration this session.

The felony provision was grafted onto the Plott hound bill sponsored by Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe, whose Senate Judiciary III Committee had killed the earlier House measure.

The House Rules Committee agreed to concur with a Senate amendment to a bill requiring motorcycle or moped riders to wear helmets.

The amendment in the Senate changes the driving while impaired statutes so that a rider of a lawn mower, bicycle or horse cannot be charged with DWI.

Committee members said the main section of the bill probably would save lives by requiring moped riders to wear helmets, and agreed to accept the Senate amendment.

The Department of Insurance would regulate lifetime care facilities under a bill approved by the House Rules Committee.

Supporters said North Carolina law currently does not regulate such facilities, which provide housing and services to elderly people in exchange for an "upfront" fee.

Rep. Mickey Michaux, D-Durham, said the centers, which cater to the elderly, typically charge from $50,000 to $300,000 to provide a home and medical services to residents.

"Usually what happens is an elderly person sells their home and then rolls that money over to live at one of these centers," Michaux said. "What concerns us is that if one of these places goes belly-up, they have nowhere to go."

The Insurance Department would keep track of the facilities' finances as they do for annuities offered by insurance companies to ensure that the facilities have the financial resources to provide the services required in their contracts.

Eye Surgeons Protest New Rules For Medicare-Paid Cataract Surgery

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Eye surgeons are protesting new rules that require them to take more time to perform Medicare-financed cataract operations, saying the requirements will hurt people in rural areas.

"A lot of people in rural areas do not have the time to arrange transportation time and time again," said J. Mark McDaniel, administrator at Southeastern Eye Center, an eye surgery center in Greensboro.

Supporters of the rules say they are designed to curb same-day surgery at high-volume cataract clinics, where surgeons replace natural eye lenses clouded during the aging process with plastic lens implants. North Carolina's cataract clinics do $42 million of business a year.

Some doctors have said such clinics do not provide proper care for patients.

Southeastern Eye Center is one of the state's largest eye surgery centers. Dr. C. Richard Epes, its best-known surgeon, has said in newspaper ads that he has done more than 20,000 cataract operations.

Southeastern has delivered more than 500 letters of protest from patients to the state's two U.S. senators, Jesse Helms and Terry Sanford, McDaniel said.

The rules were adopted last month by a state medical review group that has a contract with Medicare. One requires that surgeons wait seven days before doing Medicare-financed cataract surgery. Another requires that eye doctors wait 90 days before doing cataract surgery on a patient's second eye.

McDaniel said the North Carolina rules were more restrictive than any other state in the nation.

But representatives of the state and national associations of eye doctors said the waiting rules were a good idea.

"Most doctors do that anyway," said Dr. James L. Kesler, president of the N.C. Ophthalmology Society. "The vast majority of doctors wait two to three months at least (before operating on the second eye). It gives the first eye time to heal."

A representative of the American Academy of Ophthalmology, the nation's largest group of eye doctors, said the waiting period would "slow down the mills" that do high-volume cataract surgery.

"We totally support both those provisions," said Cynthia Root Moran, director of the group's governmental operations office in Washington. "It's the doctors in the mills coordinating the massive mailings."

Ms. Moran said it was only logical that the rules would provoke protest from some high-volume eye surgeons. "This is big business," she said. "Anything that slows down the business is going to get some of the participants' noses bent out of shape."

Since cataracts most often occur in older people, most of their surgery bills usually are paid by Medicare, the federal government health program for people over age 65.

State Says Funds Are Short For Cleanup Of Former Dump For Old Battery Cases

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ULAH, N.C. — Ten months after classifying it as the state's worst inactive hazardous waste dump, officials say they have no money to finish cleaning a Randolph County site contaminated with lead.

"We feel that we did remove the health threat from the yards of the residents, but that was the initial step," said Charlotte Verlashkin, a geologist with the state inactive hazardous sites program. "We need more money."

Two piles of cracked battery cases remain at a site where about 2,000 tons of lead-filled soil were removed last year. Ms. Verlashkin said the remaining batteries at Ulah still concern the state health department.

"When young children are playing in the soil, they could easily consume lead," she said. "With any hazardous waste site there is going to be some risk. We addressed the greatest threat. As long as hazardous waste is there it is a threat."

The Ulah battery dump was classified 10 months ago by the state as its worst inactive hazardous waste dump. In September, the tiny Randolph County community had about 2,000 tons of lead-filled soil moved from about an acre of land where local residents cracked open car batteries against an oak tree to resell the lead inside.

The state spent $344,000 on the first cleanup. Ms. Verlashkin declined to estimate how much another cleanup would cost.

Glenn Hoskins, part owner of the battery cracking business, said that from the early 70s until the early 80s the business was profitable. One pile of batteries about 25 feet high is in Hoskins' backyard.

"No, I didn't think it was a health hazard then," Hoskins said in an interview. "When we started the business, we had a license and nobody told us it was a health hazard. As far as I know, it's pretty safe. Both of my kids grew up around it, and it didn't bother them any."

The state is preparing to sue Hoskins and his co-workers to help pay for part of the cleanup.

"It (the suit) has been referred to the attorney general's office, and the case is being prepared. We are required to make every effort to recover costs," said Lee Crosby, director of the Superfund branch of the Division of Health Services. The Superfund branch oversaw the initial cleanup.

Hoskins said the state would be wasting its time.

"They haven't tried to recover as of yet. But if they did, they would be suing for nothing or very little," Hoskins said at his home recently.

Agromedicine

SOUTHERN PINES, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina physicians and agricultural researchers should work together to help prevent and treat farm accidents, injuries and illnesses, an East Carolina University doctor says.

Dr. Paul James, speaking to the Pesticide Association of North Carolina at its annual summer meeting Monday, said the state should establish and fund an "agromedicine center" to focus on farm medicine.

The center would draw on medical expertise from East Carolina University doctors and agriculture research from scientists at N.C. State University, he said.

"Medicine has neglected the rural community, traditionally, especially over the last 30 years," James said. Increased specialization, the sparse population of rural areas "and doctors not understanding what farming is all about" have led to a lack of specific treatments for many farm-related ailments, he said.

Hit And Run

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A Winston-Salem teen-ager was charged with shooting a Clemmons man who chased hit-and-run suspects from the scene of an accident here, Winston-Salem police said.

Shawn Dewayne Randle, 17, was charged with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, inflicting serious injury, and with assault by pointing a gun, said Sgt. D.J. Ingram of the Winston-Salem Police Department. Randle had not been arrested this morning, a dispatcher said.

Jeffrey Wayne Raisig, 31, of Clemmons was listed in stable condition this morning at Forsyth Memorial Hospital with a gunshot wound to his neck, a nursing supervisor said.

Marijuana Pleas

BRYSON CITY, N.C. (AP) — Seven men who were under surveillance as they planted marijuana plants on U.S. Forest Service lands in Graham County pleaded guilty to three counts of drug-related charges in U.S. District Court.

Nathaniel Burchfield of Robbinsville and Mark Allen Carswell, Paul Burlin Carswell, Donald Richard Cook, Scottie Ray Lynn, Jackie Neil Workman and Rodney Jeff Workman, all of Connelley Springs, pleaded guilty Monday to conspiracy to possess with intent to distribute and manufacture and possess with intent to distribute marijuana, aid and abetting, and the use of chemicals and hazardous substance and aid and abet.

The men will be sentenced in 60 days. They face as much as $2 million in fines and sentences of 5 to 40 years.

Private Study Says Poultry Industry Speedup Causing Abuse At All Levels

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The nation's poultry industry has adopted practices that have led to unnecessary injuries among workers, unfair treatment of farmers and the potential for illnesses among consumers, according to a report scheduled for release today.

The industry's biggest problems focus around a rapidly growing national demand for poultry meats which has prompted producers to speed up their preparation lines at various plants, said a spokesman for the Institute for Southern Studies which planned to release their report at a Washington press conference.

The document, entitled "Ruling the Roost," was an attempt to define the common problems of the poultry industry, recommend ways to fix them and to demonstrate the "new emergence of coalition of interests among farmers, consumer advocates and workers," said Robert H. Hall, research director for the Durham-based institute.

His organization compiled the report with the help of the Center for Women's Economic Alternatives, the Rural Advancement Fund and the Occupational Safety and Health Law Center. A summary of its contents and findings was released Monday afternoon.

Poultry has surpassed beef as the nation's meat of choice, a trend tied to the growth of fast-food outlets and consumers' health concerns.

In North Carolina, poultry products account for more than $1 billion annually of the state agricultural economy. The state ranks third, nationally, among poultry producers.

Farmers, consumers and workers all share a common interest in whatever the poultry industry does, Hall said.

In speeding up cleaning and deboning lines, workers have unnecessarily acquired repetitive motion disorders — carpal tunnel syndrome — injuries of the wrist and hand linked to jobs that require repeating a rapid-fire motion hundreds and even thousands of times daily as they cut and clean chickens, the report said.

Additionally, the faster processes mean chickens are not being inspected as thoroughly as they should be, the report contends, and some birds leave the plant contaminated with bacteria.

Earlier this month, the U.S. Department of Agriculture said one of every three chickens headed for consumer tables is contaminated by salmonella bacteria, tiny organisms that can cause food-borne illnesses, and in some cases, death.

Money that could go into better inspections, cleaner meats and safer production processes are being pocketed by poultry plant owners, the report said. Poultry workers are the lowest paid in the food manufacturing industry, with an average 1987 wage of $6.97 an hour, it said.

An industry spokesman described the report as "popycock."

"The government looks at every chicken inside and out," said Harold E. Ford, executive vice president of the Southeastern Poultry and Egg Association. His group represents about 8,000 producers, processors and shippers of poultry and eggs. "That is by law ... it is the cleanest meat food that can be bought."

By contrast, he said, the government requires no inspection of seafood and salmonella bacteria can be found in a variety of foods other than chicken. The best way to deal with the risk it presents, he said, is to properly prepare and cook food.

"Nobody that I know eats raw chicken," he said.

He said the national spotlight has been focused on poultry plants recently because of little-noticed skirmishes with labor groups. Many poultry plants, he said, have been targeted by labor unions who want to organize them and have been unsuccessful.

They have been working behind the scenes to draw attention to the poultry industry, he said.

The report focuses on the chicken industry in general, as well as individual accounts of problems at various plants owned by Perdue Farms Inc. and other major processors.

Richard C. Auletta, a Perdue spokesman, said that company had supported industry-wide initiatives to deal with injuries to workers, especially those associated with repetitive motion disorders. Those disorders are found in other industries, he said.

The problem, however, may be overstated, he said.

In 1988, Perdue employed 10,000 workers and had 113 documented cases of repetitive motion disorder. "That is not to say other people may not have complained about feeling well or something else," he said.

Changes May Slow Sale of City Sludge

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — City officials say they fear that proposed federal environmental regulations will slow programs in which wastewater sludge is sold for use as fertilizer.

Until about 10 years ago, cities hauled their sludge to solid waste landfills and buried it.

Rich in nutrients like nitrogen, sludge has become a newly discovered fertilizer for crop and pasture lands. When it's mixed with bark chips and cooked it becomes compost, a product that cities can sell to nurseries, landscapers and farmers.

But the Environmental Protection Agency in January proposed strict standards to protect public health by regulating the concentrations of 25 toxic metals and chemicals for sludge applied to farmlands and 56 from sludge that is incinerated.

"You'd have to spread it out thinner and on more land," said Alan Rubin, an EPA official who helped draw up the regulations, said at a conference in Charlotte on July 11.

The EPA moved to regulate sludge because it might contain metals such as cadmium, copper and lead from industrial dischargers. The concern is that the metals will concentrate in the food chain, through crops and cattle, or seep into groundwater, and reach poisonous or cancer-causing levels.

If adopted by the EPA, the standards would cut down on the amount of sludge that could be put on croplands and pastures.

"It just seems a waste to put it in a landfill," said Dan Wanucha, a soil scientist for Bio Gro Systems Inc. The Annapolis, Md., company has distributed Charlotte's sludge to farmlands in Mecklenburg and Union counties for 1 1/2 years.

Rubin agreed with Charlotte officials who said that properly managed sludge programs pose no harm to consumers. Nevertheless, he said the EPA standards would eliminate a predicted 13 cases of cancer nationally, all but one from incinerators, and reduce lead poisoning cases from 5,500 to 400.

Trille Mendenhall, who oversees the sludge program for the Charlotte-Mecklenburg Utility Department, argues that the standards are unnecessarily strict and derived from incomplete scientific information. She said public health can be safeguarded with less stringent standards based on field studies, not just lab experiments.

Rubin promised EPA would take the additional information into consideration before approving the final rules. They are due to take effect in 1991.

Mendenhall believes the EPA proposal, unless eased, could damage the appeal of sludge-as-fertilizer. Bio Gro spreads Charlotte's sludge on 7,000 acres of farmland at a cost of $1.5 million.

Protesters

DURHAM (AP) — A judicial ruling on whether to grant an injunction against nine abortion protesters has been delayed until Thursday.

Meanwhile, a temporary restraining order against the protesters has been continued with certain modifications. The modifications allow the protesters to remain within a specified area outside the Medical Care Center.

But Superior Court Judge Orlando Hudson said Monday that the protesters cannot thrust anti-abortion literature on people entering the clinic, nor can they talk with clinic patients, unless the patients voluntarily agree.

In seeking the injunction, lawyer Stewart Fisher contended that protesters have been harassing patients and workers at the center.

Operation Eagle

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A crackdown on drunken driving by state and local authorities over the weekend led to charges of driving while impaired against about 150 people.

The number charged on Friday and Saturday nights usually ranges from 25 to 40, law-enforcement officers said.

Moore Indicted In 2 Poisonings

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GRAHAM, N.C. — The Burlington woman charged in the arsenic poisonings of three men, two of whom died, was indicted by the Alamance County grand jury in two of the cases.

Blanche Taylor Moore, 56, was indicted Monday on murder charges in the 1973 death of her first husband, James Taylor. The arrest warrant charges that Mrs. Moore caused Taylor's death by administering arsenic.

Taylor died of an apparent heart attack Oct. 2, 1973, at the age of 45. His death certificate said he suffered from heart disease for four to five years and had a previous heart attack. No autopsy was performed.

The grand jury also indicted Mrs. Moore for assault with a deadly weapon in the arsenic poisoning of her current husband, the Rev. Dwight Moore. The 54-year-old Moore has been hospitalized since May, when he fell ill following the couple's honeymoon. He was found to have ingested potentially fatal amounts of arsenic.

Mrs. Moore also has been charged with murder in the death of a boyfriend, Raymond Reid. Because he lived in Kernersville at the time of his death, any indictments in that case would have to come from the Forsyth County grand jury.

Reid died on Oct. 7, 1986 at the age of 50. His death certificate lists heart failure and disease as the cause of death, but no autopsy was performed.

No indictment was handed down Monday in the case from Forsyth County. In addition, the body of Mrs. Moore's father, Parker Kiser Jr., was exhumed last week. An autopsy has been performed, and chief medical examiner Dr. John Butts said it would later this week before results from that autopsy are available.

Kiser died of an apparent heart attack on Sept. 8, 1966.

Officer Cleared In Fatal Shooting

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MANASSAS, Va. — A Prince William County police officer was justified in fatally shooting a man wanted in a North Carolina slaying, says Commonwealth's Attorney Paul B. Ebert.

Rasheed Muslin, 24, was shot once in the head last Wednesday by a SWAT team member armed with a 9mm semiautomatic rifle.

Muslin was armed with a hunting knife, which the SWAT member mistook for a pistol, police said. The officer, identified as Ben Fravel, a 14-year member of the force, was returned to active duty Monday after four days of administrative leave with pay.

"I don't think the officer was going to allow himself to come in harm's way," Ebert said. Had the suspect been wanted on lesser charges, "the officer might have hesitated," Ebert said.

Shrimpers Win Fight To Drop Turtle Saving Devices

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GALVESTON, Texas — Jubilant shrimpers pointed their boats toward the open Gulf after a weekend of protests and blockades prompted the government to suspend regulations requiring turtle-saving devices in their nets.

"Thank God, we're going fishing and making a living," said Tee John Mialjevich, a Louisiana shrimper and president of Concerned Shrimpers of America, which organized many of the protests.

U.S. Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher decided Monday to suspend indefinitely a rule that shrimpers use devices to protect the endangered Kemp's Ridley turtle.

Environmentalists denounced the suspension and one group promised to organize a national boycott of shrimp.

Hundreds of shrimpers in Galveston, meanwhile, broke into cheers when they heard about Mosbacher's decision.

"This is a lot more than we thought we would get," said Richard Santini of Galveston, who estimated he lost $6,000 to $7,000 during the weekend's blockade of the Houston Ship Channel. "We can make a living now."

The shrimpers gathered outside a Galveston meeting between Mialjevich and Gray Castle, a Commerce Department deputy undersecretary, while Mosbacher met in Washington with congressmen from Gulf states.

Mialjevich boarded a motorized cart with Castle and shouted to the throng, "Let's stay together!" Many shrimpers had threatened another blockade if their demands were not met.

Castle said Mosbacher was concerned about another blockade, but added officials also worried about shrimpers' pocketbooks.

"It's true that anytime you get 250 shrimp boats blockading a harbor, you've got a potential problem," Castle said. "But you're talking about people's livelihoods."

"I think if any of us was in the same position, we'd react in the same way."

Mosbacher said enforcement of the turtle excluder regulations would be suspended indefinitely.

Beginning in 45 days, shrimpers will have to pull their nets from the water every 90 minutes to free turtles but will not have to use the turtle excluders. That is the amount of time turtles can survive underwater.

Authorities will issue warnings to shrimpers caught not pulling their nets after 90 minutes. Next year, the regulations will be re-evaluated.

Proponents of the endangered turtles were bitter. They had claimed the turtle excluder devices would help save the turtles from extinction.

"The radical action of the secretary of commerce has convinced us that we need to take some radical action," said Mike Weber, vice president of programs for the Center for Marine Conservation.

Weber's group planned to organize a nationwide shrimp boycott and to seek a temporary restraining order against Mosbacher's decision.

"I think you may find that there are far more people out here that care about upholding the endangered species law than there are shrimpers," said Jane Scheidler, spokeswoman for Help Endangered Animals-Ridley Turtles and president-elect of the Houston Audubon Society.

Previous studies show 11,000 sea turtles die in shrimp nets every year, including 3,000 in the Gulf of Mexico. Shrimpers disclaim responsibility for the deaths.

The excluders are like trap doors allowing turtles to escape the nets. Shrimpers complain the contraptions let shrimp out, too, reducing harvests as much as 35 percent. They also say the devices are bulky and dangerous to operate.

The law requiring excluders went into effect May 1. Mosbacher's call for enforcement of the law last week led to the protests.

About 200 shrimp boats had crowded the deep-water Houston channel Saturday and about 300 shrimpers jammed Port Aransas, gateway to the Port of Corpus Christi.

Similar blockades were staged at other Gulf of Mexico ports along the Texas and Louisiana coasts, but the shrimpers disbanded Sunday after federal officials promised to hear their complaints.

Gunfire was reported in Texas and Louisiana during the blockades and four shrimpers were arrested in Texas. There were no injuries, authorities said.

Ship traffic, blocked in several ports Saturday, was normal Monday, Coast Guard officials said.

Root Checks Out Ahead Of Schedule

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — Thomas Root checked out of a hospital quietly and ahead of schedule, leaving behind many unanswered questions about his 800-mile unconscious flight, a gunshot wound to his abdomen and his business dealings.

"He asked us not to give details about his plans," said Linda Hamlin, spokeswoman for Hollywood's Memorial Hospital, where Root was taken after the July 13 crash.

Last Thursday, relatives said Root would stay at the hospital another week to undergo more medical and psychological tests.

"We're not really giving specific information about the tests," Ms. Hamlin said after Root checked out Monday. "He was well enough to leave, so he left."

Root, a 36-year-old Alexandria, Va., communications attorney, said he blacked out about two hours after taking off from National Airport for Rocky Mount, N.C., but he doesn't know why.

He said a handgun kept in the plane's glove compartment apparently discharged and shot him when he crashed in the Bahamas, a story disputed by firearms and medical experts.

Root also said he cannot explain photographic evidence collected by the National Transportation Safety Board showing he turned his head and the plane's sun visor moved while he was supposedly unconscious.

An NTSB investigator said he was awaiting more information from Root to continue the probe of the flight.

The FBI and the U.S. Attorney's Office are also conducting separate investigations of Root, but have declined to comment about them.

"Root's leaving the hospital has nothing to do with our investigation," said FBI spokesman Paul Miller in Miami. "As far as I know, he has not been charged with anything and he is free to go wherever he wants."

Members of a Drug Enforcement Administration-led task force collected information on Root after an April 24 seizure at his airport hangar of a can of ether and about three dozen guns, all but one legally registered. But no investigation was launched based on the facts gathered, a task force spokesman said last week.

Driskill Mountain Is State's Highest Point, 535 Feet

DRISKILL MOUNTAIN, La. (AP) — In 1959, an old man and three boys from Indiana pulled up in front of O.L. Bowman's house and asked him where the mountain was.

Bowman regarded the visitors for a moment and then motioned to the woods behind his house.

The old man explained: In his youth, he had traveled to every state — all 48 back then — and had climbed to the highest point of each. Now, a half-century later, the old man was taking his grandsons to the places he had been, to the top of every state. Louisiana's, he remembered, was some place nearby.

Until that afternoon, no one around here gave it much thought, but Driskill Mountain, all 535 feet of it, is the state's highest point. And visitors have been coming ever since that afternoon 30 years ago.

Driskill Mountain is an unassuming landmark in northwest Bienville Parish, about 10 miles south of the nearest town, Arcadia, and 10 miles east of where Bonnie and Clyde were killed by lawmen on a roadside in 1934.

A mere lump on the horizon, Driskill Mountain casts no shadow. It is stacked with pines and run over with rattlesnakes and ticks. There are a few abandoned rye and corn stills around its base, two empty beer cans at the peak.

From bottom to top is a walk of less than 20 minutes, the imprecision coming from not knowing where the plain has stopped and the mountain has begun. The U.S. Department of the Interior once dignified the peak with a stone marker, but it is gone now.

Nevertheless, Driskill Mountain is a big draw in these parts, a testimony to the eternal, unexplainable curiosity of the human race.

"People come from New Orleans. They come from other states," said Ledford Driskill, 64, the great-grandson of James C. Driskill, the man who first settled the land, who claimed the mountain in the 19th century and gave it his name. "They want to climb to the top of each state. But they kinda laugh when they get here. Some people think they're actually going to find a mountain."

Several people own parts of the mountain, but Bowman owns the peak. The timber rights are leased to a company in Oregon, and the Jordan Hunting Club has shooting privileges, but anyone is welcome to visit.

"One guy came in a little car with a hang glider on top of it," Bowman said. "I told him, 'You can't get there in that little car, and you'll have no use for that thing when you get there.'"

Bowman shakes his head and laughs at all the crazy visitors.

One guy came from Milwaukee. Others came from Alberta, Canada.

Bowman took the Canadians to the top, and a woman bent over and pulled a piece of paper from between two rocks. It said: "Congratulations, you made it to the top." It was from the guy from Milwaukee.

Louisiana's highest point is the third lowest of the 50 states, according to the U.S. Geological Survey.

Florida claims the lowest apex, a spot so undistinguished as to be anonymous.

"It's not a place, it's just a location," said Hank Svehlak, a cartographer for the geological survey, referring to the 345-foot top of Walton County, Fla.

Delaware, at 442 feet, and the District of Columbia, at 410 feet, are also lower than Driskill Mountain.

To most locals, the mountain is just another hill in the boondocks. There are no roads to it, no signs pointing the way.

"Half the people in Arcadia don't even know where Driskill Mountain is," said Curt Taylor. "They couldn't come up here and put their foot on it. But they know it's around here and they're proud of it."

Taylor, 37, used to sneak up the hill with friends to play cards, drink and camp.

"We'd build fires and the cops would come run us off," he said. "But we'd come back and play king of the mountain. We'd get drunk and play until one guy is left standing at the top — everybody else goes off the side of the hill. We was tough. Only one boy broke his arm."

It is not such a tough place anymore. The pines have grown so thick it's difficult to camp. So folks just come by, take a look and move on.

Residents of the Driskill Mountain community wave to them and point the way. Celebrity has not gone to their heads. Instead, they look at practical matters.

A visitor from New Orleans pointed out to Driskill that the Crescent City is 5 feet below sea level, the state's lowest point.

"I'd hate to be there when it rains," Driskill said. "It must flood awful. But here, when it sets to raining — I mean a siege of rain — I tell you, it's good to be living on a mountain."

Wife Urged To Seek Counseling

Dear Abby: My husband and I are in our early 60s. About a year ago, I found out my husband was seeing a younger woman. He said there was nothing serious between them and he promised he wouldn't see her again, so I forgave him.

Since then, I learned that he had never stopped seeing her. In fact, he loaned her a large amount of money. He still insists that he loves me and this woman means nothing to him.

Should I confront the woman and tell her I am aware of what is going on between them and demand that she stay out of our lives?

We've been married for 40 years, have wonderful children and grandchildren, and I really love him, but I can't go on this way. I am considering filing for divorce. Please help me. — Hurting In N.C.

Dear Hurting: Do not confront the woman and demand that she stay out of your lives. If your husband didn't want her in his life, she wouldn't be in it.

Dear Abby Abigail Van Buren

Loving him as you do, don't talk divorce unless you really mean it. Many a woman has threatened an unfaithful spouse with divorce, hoping it would bring him back in line, and before she realized it, a divorce she never really wanted became a reality.

Please get family counseling. If your husband refuses to go with you, go without him. A 40-year marriage is usually worth saving. I wish you well.

Dear Abby: A 14-year-old girl asked: "Can a girl get pregnant when she 'does it' with a guy for the first time?"

You correctly replied, "Yes," but you should have added: "She can also get syphilis, gonorrhea, herpes, and a host of other sexually transmitted diseases." — A Jacksonville, Fla., Physician

Dear Physician: Thank you for an important addition.

Dear Abby: Now that it costs 25 cents to mail a letter, my husband and I have received many hand-delivered invitations and thank-you notes from people trying to save a little money on postage. We live in a small town, so it's easy to drive or walk over. I have always thought this was in rather poor taste, but at least the person who did the inviting and thanking did the delivering.

My husband and I received a wedding invitation in the mail. We bought an expensive gift and attended the wedding. (I had also attended a bridal shower — to which I brought a very nice gift.)

Yesterday, I went into a store owned by the bride's mother to buy a few things. I was handed one thank-you note for my wedding and bridal gift combined. She had an alphabetical file box with thank-you notes for everyone who had given her daughter a gift, and she handed them out whenever one of the guests came into the store.

The last straw was when she gave me a thank-you note to a friend of mine — and asked me to deliver it if I should happen to run into her! I felt that if either the bride or groom could not have handed out the notes themselves, they should have mailed them.

What do you think? — Disgusted In Texas

Dear Disgusted: I agree with you. And if you accepted the thank-you note to deliver to your friend, then deliver it — if you should happen to run into her.

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA. 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Will High Tech Cripple Parents?

Listen up, parents. We've got to get our technology act together or we're going to find ourselves taken over by our children, who see us as computer cripples.

Every time we ask one of our kids to set our VCR clocks, we display digital paralysis. Every time we beg them to reset the buttons on our car radio, we diminish in stature. And when we can't even withdraw money from a drive-in bank after hours, I ask you, can a teletelton for Computer-Dead Parents be far behind?

Already, they're talking about the revolution. I came by a story written by teen-ager Russell Jacobson in his school newspaper, Tideline, of Palisades High School in Pacific Palisades, Calif., and it was enough to make your blood run cold. The thrust of this article was that shrewd teen-agers can use their knowledge of technology not only to impress and confuse parents, but eventually to make them completely dependent on their kids.

Russell wrote about his dad who bought a cordless phone, and after one frustrating attempt after another to ring the other line, had to be told by his son that he had to turn the ringer on. Only to really intimidate his father, Russell told him "the base unit was in a node, an area where destructive interference occurs, and needed to be moved."

He also recounted the story of his mother who thought the VCR was a large clock and was amazed to know that she owned a VCR in there. Now she sits around playing "Death on the Nile" all day and recording movies at night... thanks to him.

"It used to be the only means of effectively disposing my parents to my case was to hold my breath until I turned blue," he wrote, but now Russell gets what he wants by threatening not to program the VCR for his father so he can watch "Victory at Sea."

"The ultimate threat," he says, is to live on the UCLA campus and leave them alone to figure out how the microwave oven works.

By refusing to tape cute little messages for answering machines and to change the batteries in smoke alarms, we have inadvertently given our children an academic edge. Russell tipped his hand when he admitted that science had always been his weakest subject. What he did was to assemble a vocabulary of words and phrases, such as "fiber optics," "Zeroth's Law of Thermodynamics" and "new applications for superconductors."

Come on, people, we can do it. We bluffed our way through sex education and metrics. We can do it again. All we need is to fight back with a few technological terms of our own. Just a word or two a week, and in no time we'll be talking "tomorrowland."

This week, let's focus on just two words: on and off.

Mothers Dealing With Handicap Need Support

By Mary Boone Heckrotte

Carol remembers rocking 4-month-old Mindy after her morning bath. "She smelled so sweet, so normal, I could almost forget. But I looked at her stiff little legs, and the words 'cerebral palsy' felt like a jackhammer in my head."

Realizing the doorbell was ringing, Carol put Mindy in the bassinet and opened the door.

"Three friends stood there with baskets of flowers, food and big smiles. They said they'd come to have a picnic with me and the baby. I imagined what they'd think when they saw Mindy. But one of the said, 'It's all right. We know your baby has something wrong, but we love you, and we'll love her, too.'"

Not all mothers of children with handicaps have friends like Carol's. Six-month-old Josh was born with an open spine. "Nobody asks about our baby," said Josh's mother, Elaine. "Nobody says I'm sorry. Our friends don't even talk to us."

Elaine's friends probably feel a great deal of concern. Yet, afraid of saying or doing the wrong thing, they avoid her. Many mothers of children with disabilities suffer in isolation when they most need their friends' support.

What can you say to a friend whose baby has a severe handicap? A hug smooths the first awkward moments, and the only words needed are "I'm so sorry," or, "I'll be here for you."

Your friend needs to mourn the loss of her "dream child," the child she expected to be healthy, happy, full of life. Encouraging her to share her feelings helps her to accept this baby who may fulfill a different set of dreams. Statements that show your genuine concern include: "I know this is a bad time for you," "You must be terribly worried," and "It's so hard to understand why these things happen."

Use the baby's name often in conversation. As Elaine explained, "Hearing people call Josh by name made me realize he is a unique individual." The baby is, first and foremost, a baby like any other.

Your Mental Health

Asking in a caring but matter-of-fact way for details about the baby's handicap gives your friend a chance to get her own thinking straight. "When I brought Mindy in," Carol said, "my friends cried with me and hugged me. They held Mindy and rocked her and asked tons of questions about cerebral palsy."

Your friend may be exhausted by the medical care her baby requires, and she needs time away and rest. "I was scared to death to leave," said Lynn, the mother of 18-month-old Timothy. "So I never left, never went anywhere for six months."

But a close friend, Nancy, saw what Lynn and her husband were going through. Nancy learned the procedures needed to care for Timothy. She now coaxes Lynn and her husband out of the house one evening a month.

"You can't imagine," Lynn said, "what it's like to spend a whole evening without worrying about Timothy."

If you're not up to babysitting, you can pick up groceries, help with house or yard work, do a load of laundry, give an older child a ride to school, or supply a ready-made meal.

And your friend would love a little pampering: books, flowers, massages, bubble bath, candy, a thinking-of-you type of note and conveniently timed phone calls. Or you could gather friends and take the fixings for coffee, lunch, games or watching a movie at her house.

Doreen, a teacher in her early 30s, is a single parent. Her daughter, Annette, is nearly 2, hyperactive and moderately retarded.

"The first time I went to the clinic, my friend Sandy took notes about the things the doctor said. I was so scared I hardly heard a thing, but when we got home, Sandy had written it all down."

All new mothers need help and support from their friends. There's no difference in the kind of care a the mother of a baby with a handicap needs — she just needs more of it and for a longer period of time.

And that's what friends are for. Mary Boone Heckrotte is director of mental health education for the Eastern Area Health Education Center in Greenville.

Couple Marries Sunday Afternoon

Shirley Jean Atkinson and Kenneth Earl Arrington, both of Greenville, were united in marriage Sunday at 4 p.m. The double-ring ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Allen Vines.

The bride is the daughter of the late Alice Atkinson, and the bridegroom is the son of Thelma Arrington of Greenville.

Honor attendants were Jeanette Peterson of Route 1, Greenville, and Linda Atkinson of Greenville, sister of the bride. The ceremony was held at the home of the bride's sister.

Bridesmaids included Vickie Barnes and Chandra Bridges. Keesha Ariel Atkinson was flower girl for her mother. All are from Greenville. Earl Peterson of Greenville was best man.

Given in marriage by her cousin, James Earl Atkinson of Greenville, the bride wore a two-piece lace ivory dress with embroidered flowers trimming the neckline. She wore a matching hat and carried a bouquet of ivory and peach colored carnations with pearls.

The honor attendants each wore a white two-piece satin dress and carried pink carnations. Bridesmaids wore pink dresses and carried pink carnations. The flower girl wore a white dress with a pink belt and carried pink carnations.

A reception was held after the ceremony.

The bride is attending Pitt Community College's nursing program and is self-employed. The bridegroom is employed by J.H. Hudson Construction Co.

The couple will live in Greenville.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was higher in moderate early trading today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 10.24 to 2,595.22 after a half-hour of trading at 10 a.m. EDT.

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by nearly 2 to 1 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 633 issues up, 329 down and 486 unchanged.

Big Board volume came to 25.25 million shares.

Factory orders for durable goods rose a seasonally adjusted 0.3 percent in June after falling 4.4 percent in May, the government reported today. Analysts said the report helped support the market.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose 0.60 to 186.63.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 0.38 to 370.20.

Among blue-chip issues Exxon Corp. was down 1/4 to 44 1/2. On Monday, Exxon reported an $850 million charge against second-quarter earnings for expenses associated with the Alaska oil spill, whose estimated cost now exceeds $1.25 billion.

Time Inc. stock was up 1 to 138 1/2 the day after receiving court clearance to pursue its bid for Warner Communications; Paramount, who dropped out of the race for Warner, gained 1/2 to 59 1/2; and Citicorp was trading 1/4 higher at 31 1/2.

On Monday, the Dow Jones Industrial average fell 22.38 points to close at 2,584.98.

Losers outnumbered gainers by about 9 to 5 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 942 down, 532 up and 507 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 136.26 million shares.

The recommendations proposed moving the northwest loop of U.S. 264 one mile farther out of the city and extending First Street to ease cross-town traffic inside the city.

Changes in the southwest part of Greenville include a possible inner loop, widening major streets and possibly adding others to the plan to ease residential traffic.

"There's not a lot of difference on here," Darrell Hensdell, DOT engineer, said about the recommended changes to the thoroughfare plan.

"I think it's a good plan to handle the growth of the area."

The plan goes before the public on Aug. 15 during an all-day viewing of the recommended changes. And the city will take public comment on the plan at the scheduled Planning and Zoning Commission meeting that night.

During Monday's meeting the City Council also approved the sale of some parts of the city's computer equipment as part of a move to upgrade the system.

Council member Lorraine Shinn and Carter objected to the sale recommended by the city's data processing department because of the lack of information on the sales and proposed purchases.

Assistant City Manager Ron Kimble said the old equipment needed to be sold before its value decreased further and he said the purchase of new equipment would include savings and benefits not available with the old equipment.

The council approved the sale with only Ms. Shinn objecting.

Shinn said her nay vote was "not because I don't want to update the system, but because the information we had on it was not clear."

Kinston High Principal's Suicide Comes As Surprise, Associate Says

By Carol Tyer
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Kinston residents are amazed and grieved over the Sunday morning suicide of William Louis Peedin Jr., an educator of Kinston's youth for the past 25 years, Kinston High assistant principal Graham Mallard said this morning.

Peedin, who has been principal of Kinston High School since 1970, died Sunday shortly after 11 a.m. at his Emerald Isle home of a single .38-caliber pistol wound to the right temple. Medical examiner Dr. Charles Garrett of Jacksonville, has ruled the death wound self-inflicted.

Emerald Isle Police Chief Mark Wilson said a person walking past Peedin's beach residence told a police officer he had heard what sounded like a muffled gunshot from inside the house. Wilson said Emerald Isle officers barricaded streets near the house and two officers crawled onto the deck. From the deck, Wilson said, one of the officers was able to look through a window and see Peedin lying on a sofa, the gun adjacent to his body. He said emergency assistance was called immediately and Peedin was pronounced dead at the scene.

"Bill's having killed himself is the most remote possibility anyone at our school could ever have imagined," Mallard said in a telephone interview.

"Bill had worked in suicide prevention. He had bought a new Mercedes convertible Wednesday. He was preparing for another school year. He was laughing and talking Friday afternoon and looking forward to a week at the beach. It's just impossible for any of us to take in."

Mallard said he has been a co-worker of Peedin since Peedin, a Johnston County native, went to Kinston in 1964 as a student teacher in mathematics from East Carolina University. "Bill was offered a position at Grainger High School right at the end of his student teaching when the teacher under whom he was working died during exams of a heart attack," Mallard said.

Mallard said Peedin was an excellent math teacher and worked on master's degrees in both math and education at ECU and on his six-year certification in school administration, also at ECU, while teaching both in Kinston and for four years at the Governor's School in Winston-Salem.

He was named an interim principal at Grainger and became Kinston High School's first principal in 1970, Mallard said.

Mallard said Peedin's leadership had a lot to do with Kinston High School's receiving one of 250 Awards of Excellence in 1987 from the U.S. Department of Education. He said Peedin has since served on the federal department's committee to select other school recipients of the prestigious awards.

Mallard said Peedin had been honored by the Lenoir County Chamber of Commerce as its Citizen of the Year in 1987. The Kinston City School Office Personnel named him "Administrator of the Year" in 1982; the Ram Neuse chapter of the American Business Women's Association its "Boss of the Year" in 1988. He was named Lenoir County's "Outstanding Young Educator" in both 1966 and 1988. He was a Rotarian, a former president of the Kinston Arts Council, a Boy Scout adviser and a member of the Lenoir County Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Never married, he had two cocker spaniels, one of which had been his companion for many years, Mallard said. The dogs were at his Kinston home when he died.

A funeral will be conducted at 11 a.m. Wednesday in the Parrish Funeral Home in Selma. Burial will be in Selma Memorial Gardens. The family will receive friends at the funeral home from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. today.

Surviving are his parents, Louis and Geraldine Adams Peedin of Pine Level; a sister, Bonnie Woodard of Pine Level, and a brother, Donald Peedin of Pine Level.

Mallard said the Kinston schools probably will hold a memorial service later, but plans had not been completed.

In lieu of flowers, memorials may be made to the William Louis Peedin Jr. Memorial Scholarship Fund, c/o Kinston High School.

Taggarts Convicted

to testimony about a verbal agreement he said was reached between David Taggart and Bakker in 1983.

Brown said James Taggart's testimony became "unbelievable" when he claimed that cash advances would be turned into loans by PTL officials and later converted into bonuses.

"The defendants created that story as one last gasp to get out of this trial," Brown told the jury. "They concocted the story in an effort to declare their innocence."

Brown said the defense strategy appeared to be to have James Taggart "play dumb" on the stand and for David Taggart to get up and "tell his incredible story."

"The defendants have a reason to lie to you, to conceal the fact that they were stealing money from PTL and failed to put it on their tax returns," Brown said.

"In a nutshell, this case is about power," he said. "The power David Taggart and his brother exercised at PTL to line their own pockets."

Cotten said Bakker agreed to give David Taggart access to the same resources that he enjoyed. If the federal government was owed taxes, PTL would be required to pay them.

"That's the authority we function under," Cotten said. "The intent was not to beat the IRS out of money. It was to have PTL shoulder the burden."

Cotten called Bakker to the stand Wednesday, but Bakker refused to answer questions citing his Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination. Bakker and Dortch go on trial for wire and mail fraud Aug. 28 in Charlotte.

Cotten also asked the jurors not to dismiss the agreement simply because it was an oral contract and not a written one.

"That's the way business was done out there," he said. Before beginning his remarks, Cotten placed items from such exclusive New York stores as Cartier and Gucci on a bench in front of the jury.

"If what is on trial here is a lifestyle you don't like, then we didn't need a trial at all," he said as he picked up the items.

Brown, however, reminded the jury that of the $1.2 million the Taggarts took, $750,000 was cash.

"People don't routinely use hundreds of thousands of dollars in cash unless they're trying to conceal something," said Brown.

ing at which no one voiced any objections, also endorsed major water line extensions proposed by the Eastern Pines, Bell Arthur and Stokes Regional non-profit water corporations.

Ron Sessoms of Rivers and Associates, who is doing the planning and design work for the extensions, said the proposed Eastern Pines Water Corp. extension project includes 43 miles of new line, two deep wells and an elevated tank.

The $2.96 million project, according to Sessoms, will serve 526 new customers in the area along N.C. 33 at Grimesland as well as in the areas of Venters Crossroads, Calico, Clayroot, Gardenersville, Coxville, St. Johns and Redalia.

The Bell Arthur Water Corp. extension, Sessoms said, proposes 22 miles of new water mains, a deep well and a new elevated tank to serve 280 new customers at a cost of $1.8 million.

He said the extensions would include new lines west of N.C. 11 in the Ayden-Grifton area along secondary roads 1131, 1120, 1117, 1110, 1109 and 1108 as well as new facilities in the Falkland-Sharp Point area, including lines along N.C. 43, N.C. 222 and Secondary Roads 1252 and 1254.

Sessoms said the Stokes Regional Water Corp., which now serves about 33 customers, has plans for a $2.46 million expansion, to include two elevated tanks and one new well to serve 500 new customers in the Whichard, Pactolus and Clark's Neck areas to the south-east of its present service area.

Sessoms said told commissioners that the board's approval was needed before the Farmers Home Administration would consider funding for the three projects.

If FmHA loans and grants are approved for the projects, Sessoms suggested that construction could begin in the spring of 1990, with completion possibly a year later.

In other action, the board: approved establishing a self-funded dental plan for county employees; approved a contract between the town of Bethel and Sheppard Memorial Library under which the Bethel library will operate as a Sheppard library branch, and met in executive session to discuss the purchase of 15.5 acres of land for a new Stokes school and personnel matters with Sheriff Ralph Tyson.

Dumped Chickens

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Four thousand live chickens snarled pre-dawn traffic Monday when the truck trailer carrying them flipped over on an interstate.

Hundreds of chickens died. Motorists helped to corral the others.

Ron Taylor of Tacoma was driving the truck and the birds from Dallas, Ore., to Tacoma. He said the rear trailer went out of control and overturned on Interstate 5 as he drove through a construction zone at a Columbia River bridge.

The tractor and front trailer remained upright, and Taylor was uninjured. He was ticketed by the State Patrol for driving too fast for conditions.

Reds Join Rose In Missing Hall Of Fame Game

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — During the season, the Cincinnati Reds have missed key players and missed lots of scoring chances, so it somehow figured they would miss a game.

The Reds were scheduled to play Boston in the annual Hall of Fame game on Monday at Doubleday Field. But the game had to be canceled when Cincinnati had plane problems in Montreal and could not find another charter.

The Red Sox did arrive and entertained about 9,100 with some batting practice and an intrasquad game that included some minor leaguers from Elmira, N.Y.

Even if the Reds had made it, manager Pete Rose didn't plan to attend.

Rose, who denies allegations he bet on baseball games, did not want to distract any attention from former teammate Johnny Bench, who was inducted into the Hall of Fame on Sunday.

Rose also didn't want any chance meetings with Commissioner Bart Giamatti.

Rose has sued Giamatti charging the commissioner had prejudged the case and an impartial hearing was impossible.

The case is currently tied up in the Ohio courts and a restraining order has temporarily blocked Giamatti from holding a hearing to determine if Rose in fact bet on baseball games, including those of the Reds.

If Rose is found to have bet on baseball he could be suspended for one year. If he bet on the Reds, he could be banned from the game for life.

On Monday, Giamatti repeated his intention to fight for a hearing and said there would be no negotiated settlement with Rose.

"The commissioner did not initiate the court action," Giamatti replied when asked why the case was dragged for months.

"Let's have a hearing," Giamatti said. "I believe it's fair and appropriate. I'm going to do my job."

Giamatti said he thought the general public has grown "tired" of the Rose affair but that the game "is doing very well."

The commissioner added that he set out to investigate the allegations and did not consider suspending Rose without the benefit of a hearing.

"I believe in playing by the rules," Giamatti said.

"I never said I wouldn't talk to people," the commissioner said. "I never said I wouldn't listen, but that's not the way the process is set.

"I'm going to wait for a hearing." That could be a long wait.

Hamilton County Judge Norbert Nadel granted Rose a temporary restraining order on June 25 and lawyers for the commissioner are seeking to move the case to a federal court.

U.S. District Judge John D. Holschuh is due to make a decision next Monday in Columbus, Ohio, on whether the case returns to Nadel's court or is moved to federal court.

Signs criticizing Giamatti's handling of the Rose matter hung from some Cooperstown pubs and there were some boos when the commissioner was introduced at the induction ceremonies on Sunday.

Last season, Giamatti was able to take it all in as he moved from left field to right field at Doubleday Field, talking with fans and players.

As a result of the Rose case, Giamatti must shy away from the public just as Rose has wilted from the press.

Rose's Reds have lost eight straight games to fall out of the National League West race. Several key players have been injured and 12 players have been on the disabled list.

The Reds finally made it out of Montreal, and will play at home tonight against San Diego.

Morgan, Palmer On Deck For Hall

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — Joe Morgan and Jim Palmer have moved into the on-deck circle as the favorites for next year's Hall of Fame elections.

This year, Johnny Bench and Carl Yastrzemski became the 18th and 19th players to be elected in their first year of eligibility.

Morgan and Palmer figure to make it 20 and 21 in 1990.

And once again, it will be time for the folks in Ohio to load up the buses — this time to see Morgan.

Reds fans arrived by the thousands over the weekend to see Bench inducted and turned Cooperstown into a red sea.

Bench received 431 votes from 447 ballots cast by members of the Baseball Writers Association of America. Yastrzemski got 423 votes.

In order to be elected to the Hall of Fame, a player must be named on 75 percent of the ballots cast. Of the record 447 ballots cast this year, a player needed 336 votes for election.

Bench got 96.4 percent and Yastrzemski 94.63. Only Ty Cobb, 98.2 percent, and Hank Aaron, 97.9, received higher percentages than Bench.

"Joe Morgan was the best second baseman I ever saw," said Bench,

One Step Away Coastal Plains Reaches Finals

By Mike Grizzard
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

WINTERVILLE — The chances of the Coastal Plains ages 16-18 All-Stars sticking around until tonight's championship game of the Eastern North Carolina State Babe Ruth Tournament seemed slim at best after being decisively beaten in their opener Friday.

But an amazing run of five consecutive wins, ignited by a relentless offensive assault, has them just one step away from a trip to the Southeastern Regionals in Marietta, Ga.

Coastal Plains and Albemarle will square off tonight at 8 on the D.H. Conley High School diamond for that honor. A 13-4 pasting of Pemo Stewart in the losers' bracket finals and a 16-8 thumping of Albemarle in the championship series opener Monday night kept Coastal Plains alive.

"After the first game (a 10-3 loss to Pemo Stewart) we felt pretty bleak," Coastal Plains manager Ted Curtis said. "Because we didn't play in a district tournament, the guys started out pretty cold with no tournament experience and we drew a tough team."

But after falling into the losers' bracket, Coastal Plains' bats have sizzled for an incredible 60 runs in five games. Monday night's 29-run barrage featured a 31-hit attack.

"The team just got together and started hitting the ball," said Randy House, who clubbed a homer in each of Monday's games. "We got to know each other and came out played with a lot of enthusiasm."

Oddly enough, the lone two teams remaining in the double-elimination affair did not qualify by winning a district tournament as did the other six entrants. Coastal Plains received a berth as the host team, but the absence of competition in the district often leads to an early exit.

"All year these guys have been enemies and arch-rivals," Curtis said. "They've just come together as a team."

Coastal Plains continued an uncanny trend of the team designated as the visitors winning virtually every game — 12 of the 14 in fact.

Prep All-Americans Arriel McDonald and Donnie Seale figure to be the big names in tonight's North Carolina McDonald's East-West All-Star basketball game which tips off at 8 p.m. in the Greensboro Coliseum.

McDonald, a 6-3 guard from Raleigh Athens Drive, leads the East team, while Seale, a 6-5 swingman from Morehead Eden, heads up the West team.

McDonald, a Minnesota signee, played only one year of high school basketball in North Carolina after transferring from Chicago. He ended up leading his team to the 4-A Eastern Regional finals before his team fell to Wilson Fike.

McDonald will be joined by two area players for tonight's game. Ronnell Peterson, a 6-1 guard from Ayden-Grifton who will play for Louisburg next year, was a three-year starter for the Chargers. This past year he averaged 21 points a game while leading his team to the Eastern 2-A Regionals.

Farmville Central's Reggie Barrett, a 6-2 guard, played forward for the Jaguars' state 2-A championship squad, averaging just under 13 points a game for a balanced-scoring team.

The East team is coached by Tommy Day of Roxboro Person and assisted by Mike Terrell of Farmville.

High-scoring swingman Tim Shaw of Fayetteville South View, a UNC-Wilmington recruit, averaged over 20 points a game during his three-year prep career.

ECU signee Dennis Morgan, a 6-6 forward who was a prep teammate of McDonald, is one of the top front-court players on the East team.

Campbell signee Billy Ellison, a 6-7 West Carteret product, and Wilson Fike's Maurice Williams, a 6-0 guard, also figure to see some action.

For the West team, Seale, the Gatorade North Carolina Player of the Year in 1989, is the top name. Two of the state's top prep players and fellow Wolfpack recruits,

Pirate Signee Taylor Slowed By Ankle Injury, Will Play

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

GREENSBORO — After injuring his ankle Saturday during practice, East team lineman Darryl Taylor wasn't sure if he'd get to play in Thursday's McDonald's East-West All-Star football game.

A heavy amount of initial swelling had doctors thinking the injury might be serious, but X-rays determined it was only a mild sprain.

Taylor, a 6-3, 270-pound Fayetteville Westover product who will play for East Carolina next year, had the ankle placed in a cast for the weekend to immobilize it.

Taylor was on the sidelines during Monday's practice sessions after getting the cast removed, but he is expected to play Thursday.

"It happened Saturday morning," Taylor said. "We were doing a defensive drill. It was on the first play we had from scrimmage. One of my teammates rolled into me and it sprained it from the inside."

"I was lucky. If it had been (fractured) I wouldn't have played Thursday."

As it is, East coach Ted Perry of New Bern said he hoped Taylor would improve enough to at least see spot action in the game, which kicks off at 8 p.m. at Jamieson Stadium.

"I expect to practice tomorrow (Tuesday)," Taylor said.

Taylor was recruited to ECU to play in the offensive line, but he will play center and nose guard during this game.

"It isn't really tough," Taylor said of playing two positions. "On defense, you have to be more animalistic mentally. On offense, you have to be more disciplined. You're thinking more."

Taylor was one of a number of key signees for new ECU coach Bill Lewis, who despite a late start in recruiting did well in-state. In fact, six of ECU's 10 North Carolina signees are playing for the East team in Thursday's game.

In addition to Taylor, running backs Victor McBryde and Derrick Pasley; defensive back Levi Beckwith; linebacker Jeff Cooke and defensive end Carlester Crumpler Jr. are all future ECU products on the East roster.

A seventh ECU signee, Rose's Tim Moore was also set to play in the game, but he signed a professional baseball contract with the Minnesota Twins in June.

Taylor said he had received primary interest in Clemson, North Carolina and North Carolina State, but that he liked what he saw when Lewis and assistant Tim Kelly came calling in late January.

"He was a good talker," Taylor said of Lewis. "He impressed me with his words, with his plans and the school's plans."

Future ECU Backfield Gets Early Glimpse

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

GREENSBORO — A glimpse of the future could be in store Thursday when Derrick Pasley and Victor McBryde line up together in the East offensive backfield.

Pasley, a 6-0, 190-pound tailback from Southern Durham, and McBryde, a 6-1, 210-pound fullback from Red Springs, are both East Carolina signees who will play for the East team in Thursday's McDonald's East-West All-Star game.

They may not both start, but each figures to see action often and early. Pasley is already penciled in as the starter at tailback. McBryde probably won't start, but he should get ample time on the field.

"McBryde is not going to start," East coach Ted Perry said. "Pasley is. It is simply a decision we made a few days ago. McBryde is coming on strong. He's going to be a good football player."

"We had to make a decision early (for practice reasons). If we had to pick them over again, McBryde could be starting."

Monday at the East's afternoon practice, both saw a lot of action with the first-team offensive unit.

Pasley got the bulk of the ball-carrying duties, while McBryde concentrated on blocking.

Both were big recruits for ECU, which is searching for depth in the offensive backfield after switching from a one-back set to the I-formation for the 1989 season.

Both players figured they could see action early and often by signing with ECU.

"I think I had the best opportunity to play at ECU," McBryde said, who narrowed his choices down to ECU and UNC.

Pasley was a running back and defensive back in high school, but he expects to play only tailback at ECU.

"That's all they talked about," he said. "They didn't talk about anything else."

Both running backs ran for over 1,000 yards in high school. McBryde also played in the Shrine Bowl All-Star game in December in Charlotte.

If Pasley does enjoy success in Thursday's game, he can attribute at least some of the credit to McBryde's blocking.

"We've learned about each other, about how we each work and how

Taylor Reports To Giants' Camp

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Lawrence Taylor is reporting to training camp, but his agent didn't talk him into it. Neither did the New York Giants' front office, nor Coach Bill Parcells.

Taylor, seeking an extension on his contract, missed the team's minicamp in May and did not show up Monday when camp opened.

"L.T. had some conversations with Harry Carson and George Martin over the past few days," Steve Rosner, a Taylor spokesman, said Monday.

Taylor has one year and an option year remaining on a contract he signed in 1985. He will be paid a reported $1.1 million this year and $1.25 million in the option year of the deal, among the league's highest salaries for a defensive player.

According to Rosner, Taylor has not spoken to his agent, Gary Kovacs, in two weeks. Parcells has also been out of touch with the linebacker.

Atlanta Falcons
First-round pick Shawn Collins, a wide receiver from Northern Arizona, and third-round pick Keith Jones, a running back from Illinois, went through their first practice sessions at the team's training complex at Suwanee, Ga.

Collins caught 201 passes for 2,674 yards at Northern Arizona. Jones, who will compete for the starting tailback position, rushed for 1,108 yards last season at Illinois.

Green Bay Packers
The Packers opened their preseason training camp and Coach Lindy Infante said the players on hand for physical testing showed better conditioning than last year's squad.

In running tests, "last year, we had guys that didn't finish and guys who couldn't make their (required) times," he said.

"This year, there was only one guy I can even think of who had trouble even staying up with the pack or close. Everybody finished. Most everybody, with the exception of just a handful, made their times."

Indianapolis Colts
For a second straight day, thunderstorms restricted the Colts' afternoon drills. Coach Ron Meyer was forced to end the team's practice Monday after only 30 minutes on the field.

The Colts have also been hampered by the absence of draft picks. Five days after opening camp at Anderson University, six middle- and late-round draftees have not reported.

Los Angeles Rams
Seventeen veterans reported Monday, but nine more were missing on the day the Rams were scheduled to greet their veterans at camp.

The unsigned veterans included starting tackle Irv Pankey and starting guard Duval Love.

Miami Dolphins
Quarterback Dan Marino arrived at training camp Monday bearing a message: the Dolphins must improve their attitude to improve on last season's 6-10 record.

During Marino's six-year NFL career, Miami has gone from a Super Bowl berth in 1984 to last place in the AFC East in 1988. Five losses last season were by a combined 15 points.

New Orleans Saints
With four of the five top draft picks unsigned, Coach Jim Mora is getting impatient.

"They've fallen behind already," said Mora, indicating that the rookies need to get used to twice-a-day workouts.

"It makes a big difference, and they short-circuit a lot easier. You have to get comfortable with that sort of condition, and the only way you can get comfortable with it is to go out there and do it and work your way through it so you can learn to concentrate under these conditions."

Phoenix Cardinals
Like Taylor, Cardinal wide receiver Roy Green threatened to hold out unless his contract was extended. But Green has also decided to report.

Green, closing in on club career records for touchdowns, receptions and yardage, is in the final year of a five-year contract worth $715,000 this season. He is the league's fourth-highest-paid receiver.

San Francisco 49ers
Defensive end Jeff Stover was placed on the physically unable to perform list, leaving the 49ers with only four defensive linemen who played for the team in 1988.

The eight-year veteran recently underwent surgery to his left elbow

Tampa Bay Buccaneers
Derrick Little, a sixth-round selection battling for a job at linebacker, is the latest first-year player to leave the club, telling Coach Ray Perkins he was quitting for personal reasons.

Three draft picks have walked out of camp since practice began last Tuesday. One other was released before workouts began at the University of Tampa.

Washington Redskins
Wide receiver Ricky Sanders ended his mini-holdout, joining the team during the second practice of training camp shortly after signing a multi-year contract.

Sanders, the team's leading receiver last year, was entering the option year of a contract worth $220,000 this season.

Tyson's Drawing Power Diminishing

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Mike Tyson has become too much of a sure thing for the people in the casino business.

The table-games gang don't mind Tyson winning, but they're getting tired of the heavyweight champion's fights lasting only as long as the spin of a roulette wheel. A little suspense would be appreciated. A bad fight can be bad press.

The casinos in Atlantic City and Las Vegas invite high rollers to their fights and the action is good at the tables. But after spending millions of dollars to get the fight, they don't want to stage community giveaways just to fill seats and save face.

"It is better to receive than to give," Tyson's drawing power has been greatly diminished by his domination," says Gary Selesner, vice president-marketing for Trump Plaza in Atlantic City, which was the live-site promoter for Tyson's 93-second dismantling of Carl "The Truth" Williams last Friday night. "There was no question, this was the toughest sell to the general public we've ever had."

A total of 3,500 tickets out of some 11,000 were freebies.

The Las Vegas Hilton had the same problem peddling Tyson to the public in his previous fight against Frank Bruno — a five-round waltz in which Tyson did the leading.

Michael Spinks lasted only 91 seconds against Tyson in a Trump Plaza fight on June 27, 1988, but at least going in it looked a fight. More than a few people in boxing gave Spinks a legitimate chance.

Williams, however, was a 17-1 underdog for a reason, and the boxing public knew the reason — inactivity and a chin of china.

"It will be extremely difficult for us or anyone to buy any Tyson fight in the future except Holyfield," Selesner said.

Unbeaten Evander Holyfield is the one heavyweight contender the casinos, and members of the general public, are interested in seeing in the ring with the 23-year-old Tyson.

Holyfield might not last long, given his straight-up style, but he is a legitimate contender. He will be an underdog, but he is not a certain loser. The other ranked contenders' chances rank right up there with drawing five of a kind.

Tyson probably will have at least two fights before defending the title against Holyfield next summer.

Another prospective opponent for Tyson is Michael Dokes, a former champion who was stopped in the 10th round by Holyfield in a great fight and who would help make an action fight. Among others who could meet Tyson — challenge is not a word that should be used here — include James "Buster" Douglas, Jose Ribalta and Razor Ruddick.

Then there's George Foreman, the 41-year-old former champion, who, since ending a 10-year retirement, has knocked off 19 opponents, ones not good enough to be ranked. Talk about talent!

There is a certain pro wrestling, burlesque appeal to Tyson fighting the massive Foreman. There also is the risk of the bout being picketed by the Save The Whales Movement.

Except for Holyfield, and possibly Dokes, it appears promoter Don "P.T." King will have to take Tyson to foreign lands, where the fighter, rather than the fight, can be sold as the attraction.

Fenner Hopes To Put Past Behind Him

KIRKLAND, Wash. (AP) — Derrick Fenner says his two years of legal trouble seem like a bad dream he hopes to put behind him. Right now he's trying to convince the Seattle Seahawks they made a smart move in making him their 10th round draft pick.

"I made some mistakes in the past," the 22-year-old Fenner said Monday after the Seahawks began training camp workouts. "When the Seahawks said they were going to give me a chance, I said, 'Good. That's a great idea. Here I am.'"

Fenner, who rushed for 1,250 yards and six touchdowns on 200 carries as a sophomore at the University of North Carolina, hasn't played football since that Atlantic Coast Conference-leading performance in 1986.

The Seahawks picked him in the April NFL draft. Fenner spent 44 days in 1987 in a Maryland jail on a murder charge that was later dropped for insufficient evidence. He pleaded guilty last year to cocaine possession and was placed on three years probation in a case related to an April 1987 arrest.

Most recently, he was shot in the chest outside a Washington, D.C., nightclub on Christmas Day 1988. Fenner, who was not seriously hurt, said he was an innocent bystander.

After he was placed on probation, University of North Carolina officials announced he would not be allowed back in school.

As a result of his off-the-field problems, the 6-foot-3, 230-pound running back from Oxon Hill, Md., finds himself trying to make a comeback in a sport he once dominated. He thinks he would have been among the top five players chosen in April's draft if he had continued to play at North Carolina.

Monday's practice "...was a feeling-out day, to get back in the pads again and get a little rust off," said Fenner.

His first day efforts impressed Coach Chuck Knox and offensive backfield coach Chick Harris.

"Derrick Fenner moved well," Knox said. "He's looked good. Staying out here since the draft has really helped him. He's a big guy who can move. Now, we'll just have to see him in some preseason games and see how he does."

"Derrick had more quickness than I anticipated," said Harris. "He had some pretty good reactions when he had to make some abrupt changes. He's doing things quite well. He understands what we're trying to do. He catches on quick. He's also a good receiver."

The odds of a 10th round draft choice making any NFL team are slim, Harris said, "but when you have the type of tools that he has, those are the type of 10th rounders who make it."

Fenner knows he must impress the Seahawks coaches in the team's four-game exhibition season that begins Aug. 11 in Phoenix. The Seahawks open their 14th regular season Sept. 10 in Philadelphia.

Earnhardt Holds Lead, Loses Ground

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Dale Earnhardt kept his lead but, for the second straight week, lost ground to the drivers behind him in the NASCAR Winston Cup stock car racing national standings.

Earnhardt, a native of Kannapolis, N.C., held an 87-point lead over second place but only a 166-point lead over fifth going into Sunday's Talladega DieHard 500 at the 2.66-mile Talladega (Ala.) Superspeedway.

Earnhardt has 2,314 points through the first 16 races of the 29-event Winston Cup season. Rusty Wallace, a native of St. Louis, is second with 2,227 points. Wallace finished second to winner Bill Elliott in Sunday's AC Spark Plug 500 at Pocono (Pa.) International Raceway, while Earnhardt finished ninth.

Darrell Waltrip is third with 2,179 points, followed by Elliott, 2,153; and Mark Martin, 2,148. Rounding out the top 10 are Davey Allison, 2,016; Geoff Bodine, 1,996; Sterling Marlin, 1,995; Terry Labonte, 1,989; and Ken Schrader, 1,971.

Wallace leads the circuit in money-winnings with $759,035, followed by Waltrip ($710,065); Schrader ($598,235); Earnhardt ($559,390); Elliott ($430,757); Allison ($414,159); Labonte ($411,342); Bodine ($331,660); Alan Kulwicki ($326,280); and Marlin ($306,827).

Meanwhile, Elliott's victory put Ford in the lead of NAS-CAR's Manufacturer's standings for the first time since early 1987. Ford has 96 manufacturer's points to the 91 of Chevrolet, which has led those standings all but one week this season. Pontiac led briefly for one week in March.

The last Ford lead was a tie for Chevrolet in March of 1987 following the second race of the season. Ford had led after the season-opening Daytona 500 that year, but Chevrolet captured the Manufacturer's Championship.

Dick Trickle of Wisconsin Rapid, Wis., kept his lead in the Champion-Sears Rookie of the Year standings. Trickle has 177 rookie points to the 156 of second-place Larry Pearson of Spartanburg, S.C., and the 136 of third-place Hut Stricklin of Calera, Ala.

Pole qualifying at Talladega is scheduled Thursday afternoon, with the first 20 starting positions being determined. The final 20 starting spots will be decided in second-round qualifying Friday afternoon.

Pasley, McBryde...

each other blocks," Pasley said.

The sight of Pasley eight yards behind center, hands on his knees with McBryde in a down position a few feet in front of him could well be a familiar picture in the future for ECU fans.

The two have also had a lot of time to talk, wonder and dream about the future.

"Pasley is real good," McBryde said. "I hadn't seen him play before, but I had heard about him. Everything I've heard is true here."

"We keep saying something like it's the future backfield for East Carolina or something."

Pasley figures to get the ball in his hands a lot come Thursday. Not only will he be handling the bulk of the tailback chores, he'll also return kicks.

Taylor...

"I wanted to keep my options open. I went to N.C. State on a visit. I went to UNC on a visit. I (then) went to ECU (and) I liked the atmosphere."

Another factor for Taylor was personnel. ECU has a senior-dominated offensive line. Taylor figured playing time would be easier to get at ECU down the road.

"I'm a good football player," he said. "I'm not great. I'll hustle and play my hardest. I thought I'd benefit more from playing at East Carolina."

Taylor played at 260 pounds during his senior year, but had ballooned up to around 300 during the off-season. He came to Greensboro at just over 270 and said he hoped to be down to 260 by the time he reported to ECU for practice Aug. 8.

"I had never heard of him in high school," East offensive lineman Darryl Taylor, another ECU signee, said. "He's real quick. You give him a hole and he's gone."

Neither player has put on pads since December, but with practice at ECU set to open Aug. 8, the timing of this game couldn't have been better.

"It's going real good," McBryde said. "It gives me a chance before I go to school to show the coaches they didn't make a mistake recruiting me."

The two-day practices were a shock for all the players involved, many of whom have been taking it easy during the summer months.

"It's been hard, very hard," Pasley said. "The first day we got here (Friday), we were out here at 6 p.m. The next day, we had two days on Saturday and then Sunday."

"It was like getting over the hump Sunday. We look pretty good. We've got a real quick backfield. I'd say everybody runs a 4.5 or 4.6 (40-yard dash)."

Harvey Shines As Angels Win Showdown With A's

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bryan Harvey really shined in the first showdown between American League West leaders California and Oakland.

"That was the best forkball I've had all year," he said. "I was lucky enough to throw it over the plate."

Harvey came in to protect a 5-4 lead with two outs in the eighth inning Monday night, got Dave Henderson on a flyout, and then caught Jose Canseco, Tony Phillips and pinch-hitter Ron Hassey looking at third-strike forkballs in the ninth, gaining his 13th save.

"I didn't want to throw up a 3-2 fastball with Canseco at the plate," Harvey said. "He's got a chance of tying it up if I lay one in there."

Chili Davis homered off Gene Nelson, 2-5, to snap a seventh-inning tie and Jack Howell homered in the eighth as California won its sixth straight and stopped Oakland's five-game winning streak.

Davis' home run, his 12th, was his first since July 1. Howell's home run, his 13th, broke a 1-for-26 slump.

"That's a week of oh-fers all built up into one last hack," Howell said. "I've had a tough week. It was nice to see it go out."

California won at Oakland for only the second time in 11 games and took a one-game lead over the Athletics.

Indians 7, Yankees 3

Rookie Joey Belle's grand slam off Eric Plunk snapped a seventh-inning tie at Municipal Stadium and sent New York to its seventh consecutive loss.

Cleveland has won five of its last six to move from 10 games back to 5½ games behind first-place Baltimore in the AL East.

Lee Guetterman, 2-4, walked Dion James with one out in the seventh and Joe Carter singled and took second. Pete O'Brien was walked intentionally and Belle hit Plunk's 1-1 pitch deep over the left-field wall for his second home run.

John Farrell, 6-9, allowed three runs on nine hits in seven innings and Jesse Orosco finished.

Brewers 10, Tigers 0

Chris Bosio, 11-6, pitched a three-hitter over seven innings as visiting Detroit lost its sixth straight and 16th in 18 games.

Jack Morris, out with chips in his right elbow, made his first appearance since May 22. Morris, 2-8, gave up nine hits and seven runs in 5 1/3 innings.

Robin Yount extended his hitting streak to 14 games and Greg Brock had three hits for the Brewers, who had 13 hits and won for the fourth time in five games.

White Sox 5, Mariners 4

Carlton Fisk singled with the bases loaded and two outs in the ninth inning at Comiskey Park as Chicago won for the ninth time in 10 games.

Mike Jackson, 3-4, walked Dave

Gallagher to lead off the ninth. Gallagher took second when Steve Lyons sacrificed against Keith Comstock and went to third on Comstock's throwing error to first. Harold Baines was intentionally walked and Mike Schooler got two outs before Fisk singled on an 0-2 pitch.

Shawn Hillegas, 6-9, allowed one hit over three innings of relief.

Blue Jays 6, Rangers 3

Tony Fernandez, Kelly Gruber, Fred McGriff and Manny Lee homered. The Rangers' 19-year-old Wilson Alvarez didn't get an out in his major-league debut, allowing all five batters he faced to reach.

Todd Stottlemyre, 2-4, allowed four hits and three runs in seven innings for visiting Toronto and Tom Henke finished with two-hit relief for his eighth save.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Giants 2, Braves 0

Ordinarily, one would expect the San Francisco Giants to fill reporters' notebooks with praise for Kevin Mitchell, whose 33rd home run had given them another victory.

But the man who leads the major leagues in homers and RBIs took a back seat to the pitcher he'd just beaten, Atlanta's John Smoltz.

"He's the best young pitcher in the league," Giants manager Roger Craig said following Monday night's 2-0 victory over the Braves. "Boy, he's got a great arm. He'll put you in a slump if you're not already in one."

Mitchell's homer in the fourth inning was one of just three hits allowed by Smoltz, 11-7, who struck out a career-high 10 batters and retired the last 17 in pitching his fifth complete game.

"I've been talking about Smoltz all year, and tonight is an example of what I mean," winning pitcher Rick Reuschel said.

"That kid can pitch," Brett Bulter said of the 22-year-old All-Star. "On a team that hasn't won many games, he's won 11. He's going to win a lot of ballgames."

Smoltz, who had given up a single to Earnest Rilest, had an 0-2 count when Mitchell hit the ball over the fence in left-center at Atlanta Stadium.

"It was not a bad pitch," Smoltz said. "But you can't say it was a good pitch for he hit it out. I had made him look bad with the same pitch before."

Mitchell, who has driven in 87 runs, was ready in case Smoltz didn't go by the book and waste the 0-2 pitch.

"All pitchers make mistakes," he said. "That's what you just have to sit on."

The only other baserunner against Smoltz was Matt Williams, who had a single in the second. But Smoltz struck out the side in the inning and duplicated that feat in the third.

Reuschel, 13-4, pitched five innings and left after re aggravating a pulled groin muscle that has hampered him in several recent starts. He escaped a bases-loaded, no-out jam in the fourth, retiring Darrell Evans on a fly ball, Andres Thomas on a popup and Jeff Treadway on a flyout.

Reuschel, who also stranded two runners in the first and fifth innings, allowed five hits and walked two with no strikeouts. Steve Bedrosian, the fourth San Francisco pitcher, got the last two outs for his 14th save.

The loss was Atlanta's fifth straight.

Cubs 3, Cardinals 2

Two key bunts — including a suicide squeeze that put Chicago ahead to stay — by winning pitcher Mike Bielecki and sloppy defense by St. Louis helped the Cubs to their third straight victory.

Bielecki laid down his squeeze in the fifth inning following tentative plays by first baseman Pedro Guerrero and center fielder Willie McGee that allowed baserunners to reach base and advance to set up the squeeze. The loss ended the Cardinals' four-game winning streak.

Jose Oquendo of St. Louis extended the longest hitting streak in the majors this season to 22 games with an infield hit in the fourth.

Bielecki, 10-5, allowed four hits, struck out six and walked two in seven innings. He retired 11 straight before being relieved.

Expos 4, Phillies 3

Two Philadelphia errors set the stage for Tim Wallach's game-winning hit that gave homer-happy Montreal its fifth straight victory.

Andres Galarraga hit a one-out single off Greg Harris, 1-2, and stretched it to second base when Tom Herr dropped the throw from center fielder Len Dykstra. Tim Raines was walked intentionally and Hubie Brooks reached on an error by Harris before Wallach singled to left on the first pitch to extend Philadelphia's losing streak to five games.

Von Hayes had tied the game with his 15th homer, leading off the ninth against Tim Burke.

Pirates 7, Dodgers 4

Celebrating his 25th birthday, Barry Bonds went 3-for-3 with a homer, drove in two runs, scored three and stole a base as Pittsburgh gained a 3-3 split of the rare six-game series.

Gary Redus was hit below the left eye by Tim Crews of Los Angeles in the seventh inning. The benches cleared briefly before Redus was carried off on a stretcher. He was released from a local hospital. The Pirates' team physician said he did not believe any bones were broken.

No punches were thrown, but winning pitcher Bob Walk was ejected for yelling at first base umpire Gerry Davis.

Morgan, Palmer...

who played with Morgan on Cincinnati's World Series championship teams in 1975 and 1976.

Morgan, a two-time MVP, played 22 years and hit .271 with 268 homers, 1,134 RBIs and 2,518 hits. He also had 689 stolen bases and walked 1,865 times.

Along with Bench, he was a field general of the "The Big Red Machine."

In 19 seasons with the Baltimore Orioles, Palmer had a 268-152 record, including four consecutive 20-victory seasons from 1975-1978. He had a lifetime earned-run average of 2.86 and 53 shutouts.

"I'd be surprised if Jim Palmer isn't elected the first time," Yastrzemski said.

In this year's balloting, right-hander Gaylord Perry, winner of 314 games, finished third with 304 votes and missed election by 32 votes.

Jim Bunning, who missed election by four votes in 1988, was 53 votes shy this time. Ferguson Jenkins was fifth with 234 votes.

"I'm sorry Pery and Ferguson Jenkins didn't make it," Yastrzemski said. "But I'm sure they will."

Perry, 314-265, also had 3,534 strikeouts. The combination of 300 victories and 3,000 strikeouts will make it hard to keep him out.

The argument against Perry is his admitted use of the spitter, which might have cost him some votes the first time.

Jenkins was 284-226 with 3,192 strikeouts in 19 seasons. While a member of the Chicago Cubs, he was a 20-game winner for six consecutive seasons.

Bunning was 224-184 with a 3.27 ERA, 2,885 strikeouts and no-hitters in both leagues. But his time is running out with only two years of eligibility left.

In 1991, Rollie Fingers, the career saves leader with 341, and seven-time AL batting champ Rod Carew figure to make it on the first ballot.

Coastal Plains...

Coastal Plains bolted to a 4-0 lead in the top of the first against Pemo Stewart and erupted for seven runs in the top of the first against Albemarle.

"We've been taking the visitors so we can go to bat first," Curtis said. "If we win the (coin) flip tonight, we'll be visitors."

House connected for his first round-tripper in the first inning against Pemo Stewart starter James Baldwin. Jay Tripp and Bryan Tuten had each walked and advanced on wild pitches, one of which scored Tripp. Tuten scored on an error before House's towering drive got a boost from the wind and cleared the left-center field fence.

Winning pitcher Paul Powers slammed a solo homer in the third for a 5-0 lead but Pemo Stewart roared back with a run in the fourth and three in the fifth to get to within 5-4.

Right-hander Michael Sutton came on with the bases loaded and no outs in the fifth to wriggle out of the jam with a pair of strikeouts and a fly ball to deep center.

Coastal Plains answered with four runs in the sixth on a double by Tripp, singles by Tuten, Franz Holscher and Roosevelt Hines, a sacrifice fly by House and a double by Joe Deloach.

Sutton survived a single by Jamie Snipes in the sixth and hurled a perfect seventh to preserve the win. He also worked 3½ innings in relief against Albemarle.

Coastal Plains rattled Albemarle early with its aggressive sticks and building momentum.

Starter Randy Jacobs yielded two walks, a single to Holscher and a double to Hines before being lifted but the inning continued to snowball. A one-out double by Craig Willoughby preceded two more walks and successive singles by Patrick Joyner and Tripp.

House drilled his second homer — a two-run blast — in the second for a 9-1 lead. A sacrifice fly by Tripp and a bases-loaded walk to Holscher produced two more runs in the inning.

Albemarle picked up one run in the first and five in the fourth but Coastal Plains padded its cushion with three runs in the fifth and two in the sixth.

Willoughby collected four hits, including two doubles, and drove in five runs to key a 17-hit attack in the second game. Joyner had three hits while Tripp and House had two each.

Douglas Blowe, Jacobs and Chris

Hanson rapped two hits each for Albemarle. Blowe knocked in three runs.

Tripp, Tuten, Holscher, Powers and Deloach had two hits each against Pemo Stewart.

"When we were practicing, I thought we had decent pitching and I felt our defense would catch the ball but I wondered how out hitting would be against this level of pitching," Curtis said. "We've hit the ball great."

Tail section of B-52 bomber lies near hangar at Kelly AFB in Texas after fire and explosion

B-52 Catches Fire On Ground

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN ANTONIO — A B-52 bomber caught fire on the ground while being refueled at Kelly Air Force Base, killing one person and injuring 11 others, officials said.

The cause of late Monday's accident was under investigation, said Lt. Col. Ed Cooke, a spokesman at the base here. The bomber was "very heavily damaged" in the accident, he said.

Names of the victims were being withheld pending notification of family members. All were civilian employees.

Six remained hospitalized early today in Wilford Hall Medical Center at nearby Lackland Air Force Base and another was transferred to Brooke Army Medical Center at Fort Sam Houston. Their conditions ranged from serious to fair, Cooke said.

Four others were treated for minor injuries and released.

"I heard four to five large explosions about 11 p.m. and saw flames leaping 15 to 20 feet in the air," Jim Fisher, a San Antonio school teacher who lives near the base.

Flames could be seen from up to one mile away, witnesses said.

Cooke said the B-52, built in 1958, was undergoing "depot-level maintenance," a 3½- to 4-month process in which the plane is virtually stripped and reassembled. He added planes are scheduled for the maintenance "every couple of years."

The fact that it was being refueled indicated the plane probably was being prepared for a test flight, one of the final stages in the repair process, Cooke said. The plane had been scheduled to return Friday to its home base at Barksdale Air Force Base in Shreveport, La.

The fire was put out in less than one hour, Cooke said. There were no immediate reports of damage to any of the base's facilities.

House Investigators Doubt IRS Able To Police Itself

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A yearlong probe of alleged misconduct by senior officials of the Internal Revenue Service raises serious questions about the agency's ability to correct wrongdoing by its own leaders, House investigators say.

"Is it possible for the IRS to police itself internally at the senior official level? That's an area that really needs to be looked at," investigator Len Bernard, of the House Government Operations subcommittee on consumer affairs, said in advance of his testimony before the panel today.

Bernard noted that one of eight misconduct cases he and other subcommittee aides have been probing involved senior officials up to the level of deputy assistant commissioner.

Most attention has been focused on allegations that a former boss of the criminal investigation division in Los Angeles was offered a bribe by Guess Inc., a jeans manufacturer, to get an investigation of a rival, Jordache Enterprises. The IRS cleared that official, Ronald Saranow, last year.

Subcommittee investigators have checked several cases in which IRS employees who called attention to misconduct inside the agency were subsequently demoted or forced out.

The subcommittee, chaired by Rep. Doug Barnard, D-Ga., called for three days of testimony from the IRS, present and former IRS employees and the General Accounting Office.

The IRS has declined comment on the allegations, citing laws that prohibit disclosure of information about individual tax cases or about employees under investigation.

In recent interviews, however, top IRS officials defended the agency's record in policing itself.

The agency has an inspection division of 1,300 people to police 120,000 IRS employees, noted Senior Deputy Commissioner Michael J. Murphy, and a criminal investigation division of 4,700 to watch over the conduct of more than 100 million taxpayers.

The inspection division conducts about 2,000 investigations of allegations against employees each year, and about 48 percent of the cases involve complaints from other employees, said Teddy R. Kern, assistant commissioner for inspection.

The IRS is one of the few federal agencies that require employees to report wrongdoing by colleagues. Kern said President Bush soon will seek to impose the same requirement on all federal employees as part of his ethics-in-government recommendations.

"We do look pretty strictly at responsibilities and the code of conduct" that all IRS employees must sign, Kern said.

"If during an investigation (of IRS employees) we come up with any violation of federal law ... we will refer the case to the U.S. attorney, or if it is on an executive or high-level official, we will refer it to the Justice Department," Kern said.

In addition, IRS inspectors automatically refer to the Treasury Department's inspector general any allegation of criminal wrongdoing by any of the 2,000 IRS high-level officials and executives.

In 1987, 88 IRS employees were convicted of crimes, including embezzlement, selling narcotics and accepting bribes, following investigations by the agency's inspection division.

The most highly publicized case of IRS wrongdoing in recent years was in the Philadelphia district office, where 14 people, including fashion designer Albert Nippon, were convicted as a result of a bribery investigation. Bribes totaling more than $1 million were paid to IRS employees.

Klansmen To Study Course On Races

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Ku Klux Klansmen who clashed with black marchers in 1979 must attend a course on race relations taught by civil rights leaders as part of a settlement of a civil lawsuit.

The settlement, which was to be filed today in U.S. District Court in Huntsville, also requires Roger Handley, former grand dragon of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, and nine other Alabama Klansmen to pay $11,500 in damages to the marchers.

"Our goal has always been to try and change the hearts and minds of those whose racial beliefs lead to violence against us," said the Rev. Joseph Lowery, president of the Atlanta-based Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

Klanwatch, a group operated by the Southern Poverty Law Center in Montgomery, filed the civil lawsuit in 1980 on behalf of the SCLC, which had organized the 1979 march in Decatur.

The settlement also requires several Klansmen to perform community service and refrain from harassing blacks or joining any Klan or white supremacist group for periods of up to five years.

"Probably the most unique aspect of this case is that seven of the defendants have to attend a race relations course," said Pat Clark, director of Klanwatch. "We must find a way to change attitudes and give people an opportunity to assess their wrongdoings."

Former 'Winston Man' Says Now Feels 'Guilty'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A model who for six years was Winston's answer to the macho "Marlboro man" is urging Congress to take the glamour out of tobacco advertisements, saying teen-agers are the target of the ads.

"I have had children tell me that they smoked Winstons so that they could be just like me," David Goerlitz said in testimony prepared for today's hearing before a House Energy and Commerce subcommittee. "For that I shall always feel guilty."

Goerlitz described himself as a 25-year, three-pack-a-day smoker who kicked the habit in November. He has worked for private groups that fight smoking-related illnesses and his testimony was intended to bolster legislation sponsored by Rep. Thomas Luken, D-Ohio.

Luken, on a self-described crusade "to reduce cigarette smoking to zero," wants to ban all tobacco ads that might be seen by youths.

"When I modeled for Winston, I was told very clearly that young people were the market we were after," Goerlitz said. "The other models and I were depicted as young and daring buddies, and that's what young people relate to at 14 or 15 years old."

The ads showed cigarette-smoking members of a search-and-rescue squad dangling from helicopters and hanging from cliffs to rescue stricken climbers.

The Winston ad shoots we were told that we should try to epitomize the rois and virile man," Goerlitz said. "It was made clear to us that this image was important because kids like to role-play and we were to provide the attractive role models for them to follow."

Luken's bill calls for stripping billboards and printed ads of everything but printed words, and banning tobacco ads from all sports facilities. The bill is so broad that it would outlaw the names of cigarette brands painted on race cars.

Opposing the proposal are representatives of the Tobacco Institute and a coalition of advertising organizations. They maintain that further restrictions would be unconstitutional.

The Tobacco Institute has argued in the past that an ad ban would not reduce smoking by young people.

Congress passed a law in 1965 requiring the U.S. Surgeon General's warning about the hazards of smoking to be put on cigarette packages and ads. The warnings began appearing in 1972 after the tobacco industry and the Federal Trade Commission reached an agreement on the wording.

David McCall, a veteran New York advertising executive who has refused to handle tobacco accounts, submitted testimony saying smoking should not be presented "as a pastime that leads to success, sexual attractiveness or prominence."

"Some of the advertisements, if I have not gotten overheated in my old age, certainly seem to imply sexual attractiveness in no uncertain terms," said McCall, chairman emeritus of the agency McCaffrey and McCall Inc.

Employment Costs Up

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Wages, salaries and other benefits paid to American workers rose 4.5 percent in the 12 months ending in June, the government reported today.

The Labor Department said its Employment Cost Index, considered one of the best gauges of inflationary wage pressures, was pushed ahead both by rising wage costs and higher benefit costs.

Wage pressures have intensified every quarter since June of 1988, when the Employment Cost Index rose above the 4 percent level for the first time.

That rate of increase has raised concerns among economists that tight labor markets are pushing labor costs higher and making the country's inflation problems worse.

The Federal Reserve last year began pushing interest rates higher in an effort to slow the economy and lower the inflation rate.

That inflation-fighting effort has caused the unemployment rate to edge up slightly in the recent months as economic growth slows. Because of this, many economists believe that wage increases will moderate in coming months.

The 4.5 percent rise in the cost index for private industry workers covered total compensation, which includes wages, salaries and the employer costs of providing such benefits as health insurance.

The wage and salary component of the index climbed by 4.1 percent in the 12 months ending in June while benefit costs rose a faster 5.6 percent.

The increase in wages and salaries reflected in part the influence of relatively large pay gains for sales workers, a segment which is heavily influenced by volatile commission earnings, the Labor Department said.

Workers in the service sector of the economy fared better than the manufacturing sector in pay gains. Service industries saw wages and salaries go up by 4.7 percent in the past 12 months compared to a 3.2 percent rise for the manufacturing sector.

This gain reflects the fact that service industries have been more affected by shortages of workers in the past year.

Bloch Investigation Brings Soviets Out To Keep Track On FBI's Probe

By Michael J. Sniffen
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Soviets are showing extraordinary interest in the spy investigation against State Department official Felix S. Bloch — even tailing him and the FBI to New York — despite a U.S. warning not to interfere.

The unusual Soviet surveillance shows "they have a lot invested in this," said a government source familiar with the case.

The United States cautioned the Soviet Union against trying to smuggle Bloch out of the country, it was learned Monday evening. The warning came weeks before news organizations reported that the 30-year career diplomat was suspected of spying.

Still, Bloch and a caravan of FBI agents were followed by Soviet Embassy personnel on Saturday from Washington to a New York City suburb, the government source said.

Formerly the No. 2 official in the U.S. Embassy in Vienna, the 54-year-old diplomat was placed on leave with pay on June 22. He has surrendered his diplomatic passport and his State Department credentials, but has not been charged with any crime nor has his travel been restricted.

Nevertheless, President Bush on Monday called the allegations "a very serious matter."

Two U.S. sources said Monday that Bloch had been videotaped handing a briefcase to a Soviet agent in Paris earlier this year. ABC News reported that the same agent later telephoned Bloch to warn him he was under suspicion, saying, "A bad virus is going around and we believe you are infected."

The call came while Bloch's telephone was tapped by U.S. agents but before the FBI first tried to interview him on June 22, the network said.

The sources spoke on the condition of anonymity.

Bloch is refusing through an attorney to be questioned by the FBI but submitted to a brief interview by State Department security officers early in the investigation, according to a government source who, like others providing details on the case, spoke only on condition of anonymity.

Counterintelligence experts said even if Bloch were a spy, it was too soon to know what secrets he compromised.

But they said the damage could be far different than that inflicted in other recent spy cases, such as those of the John Walker ring in the Navy or National Security Agency technician Ronald Pelton. They were low-ranking American officials who compromised coding equipment and spying techniques that are very costly to replace.

Unlike the military or U.S. intelligence agencies, which have been forced to deal with a number of recent spy cases, the State Department's foreign service has prided itself on being comparatively free of such problems.

The last was in 1961 when Irvin Scarbeck, second secretary of the U.S. Embassy in Warsaw, was convicted of passing secrets to the East. The most famous State Department spy case involved Alger Hiss, convicted in 1950 of lying to Congress about passing secrets to Whittaker Chambers.

Some experts said this case might seriously damage the morale of the foreign service. "The one thing they could say was: 'We're different. Our people don't go marching in to the other side because of resentments or whatever,'" one source said.

Bloch most recently has been director of the Office of Regional Political-Economic Affairs on the State Department's European desk. Before that, while in Vienna, he at one point lobbied to keep Austrian Prime Minister Kurt Waldheim off the "watchlist" of people banned from the United States for Nazi activities during World War II, a government source said.

Waldheim eventually was placed on the list in April 1987, a move that infuriated many Austrians.

After Bloch fell under suspicion, the Soviets were informed through diplomatic channels, in a message described as "discreet," that U.S. relations with Moscow would be damaged if they tried to make off with the diplomat, a U.S. official disclosed.

"So far, they have observed the admonition," said the official.

But FBI agents tailing Bloch on Saturday on a trip to New York were followed in turn by Soviet Embassy personnel, according to another government source.

The Soviets followed a caravan of FBI agents driving behind Bloch from Washington to Chappaqua, N.Y., where one of his daughters lives. Town police said the caravan arrived Saturday afternoon.

While many Soviet diplomats may not travel more than 50 miles from their post, others have permission to make trips like the Washington-New York drive. The Soviets are required to drive cars with diplomatic license plates, which have letter codes designating the country using the vehicle.

In ABC's initial report on the spy case last Friday, the network said Soviet officials had been seen watching Bloch's Washington apartment.

Soviets Warned Bloch He Was Facing Investigation By U.S.

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Felix S. Bloch, the U.S. diplomat suspected of spying for the Soviet Union, appears to have been tipped off by his Soviet handlers that he was under suspicion before the FBI first questioned him in June, officials said Monday.

As a result, by the time State Department investigators asked Bloch about his activities as a U.S. diplomat in Vienna and Washington, he may have had time to destroy evidence that could have strengthened a case against him, they said.

The discovery that Soviet agents warned Bloch that he was under U.S. scrutiny appeared to throw another complicating factor into a counterintelligence investigation that was already laboring under an unusual set of handicaps.

The FBI has been shadowing Bloch, the former deputy chief of the U.S. Embassy in Vienna, since at least June 22, but still does not have sufficient information either to arrest him or to provide an estimate of what kind of intelligence he may have turned over to the Soviet Union.

The few officials who have been briefed about the investigation acknowledge that the evidence against Bloch remains fragmentary and may never support a criminal prosecution.

"This may become one of the great unsolved mysteries of our time," one official said. Unless Bloch agrees to talk to federal investigators — or defects to the Soviet Union and writes his memoirs — "We'll probably never know the full extent of his activities," he said.

"It's hard to know what damage he's done until you get your hooks into him," a former intelligence official added.

Far from cooperating with investigators, Bloch led a motorcade of FBI agents and television camera crews on a brief chase through New York's suburban Westchester County into Manhattan on Monday. He had been staying with a daughter in the town of Chappaqua.

Bloch, a 30-year veteran of the foreign service, was deputy chief of the U.S. Embassy in Vienna from 1983 until 1987. He is currently director of the State Department's office of regional political-economic affairs for Europe, a job which oversees regional economic issues — including limits on high-technology exports to the Soviet bloc.

The Soviet early warning to Bloch was first reported by ABC News

Monday evening. A senior U.S. official confirmed the report, saying: "It appears to be true."

One of Bloch's Soviet contacts telephoned him earlier this year, ABC reported, and tipped him off with a cryptic message: "A bad virus is going around, and we believe you are infected."

Beach Funds

BOLOGNA, Italy (AP) — The Emilia-Romagna region approved $17 million Monday in emergency funds to help clean up its algae-infested coastal waters.

The money will be used to aid the region's tourism and fishing industries, devastated by the algae which first appeared in early July.

The government recently approved $100 million in emergency aid for the Adriatic but has yet to implement any measures.

Governors, Solons Pledge Coastal Help

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Congressional leaders and governors of seven coastal states say they share a commitment to developing federal and state laws that will protect coastal waters.

"We may not all agree on the specific measures to respond to these problems, but we all share a common commitment to work together to develop the best possible response to coastal pollution problems," Senate Majority Leader George J. Mitchell, D-Maine, said after Monday's conference.

Calling the closed-door meeting "an opportunity to develop a working partnership," Mitchell defended the lack of specifics in the agreement.

"We think it's very significant that we got started," Mitchell said at a news conference.

Connecticut Gov. William A. O'Neill agreed.

"What we're seeing here is a first," he said. "This is a cohesive movement forward."

Maryland Gov. William Donald Schaefer called the conference a "historic meeting of governors and legislative leaders."

Massachusetts Gov. Michael S. Dukakis, the unsuccessful 1988 Democratic presidential nominee, said "these are going to be very, very expensive projects, all of them."

Other governors at the meeting were Edward DiPrete of Rhode Island, Michael Castle of Delaware, Gerald Baliles of Virginia and James Martin of North Carolina.

The governors and legislators signed a broad statement of principles that ranged from regional research and monitoring efforts to wetlands protections.

Rep. Gerry E. Studds, D-Mass., chairman of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries subcommittee on the environment, conceded that the agreement was not in itself that important, but said it was significant that key governors and legislators were meeting to discuss coastal problems.

On financing, the Coastal Protection Agenda called only for "creative ways to meet the funding needs of increased coastal protection." But several Democrats said the Bush administration had to come through with more money.

"We need more than a salute to a clean environment. We need money," said Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., chairman of the Senate environment water protection subcommittee.

Train-Stop Candidate Wins Race

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — Parliamentary candidate Kijun Sakurai mistakenly boarded the wrong high-speed "bullet" train last week and demanded it stop so he could get to a campaign rally on time.

"Shocked and appalled" by such arrogance, opposition Socialist Party leader Takako Doi dropped Sakurai from the party's list of candidates for parliament's upper house.

Only a candidate for the governing Liberal Democrats would be so unethical as to inconvenience others in the interests of self-promotion, according to the Socialist campaign credo.

Ten thousand people, including Ms. Doi, had been waiting for Sakurai at a rally in Mishima and the super-express train he got on was not scheduled to stop there.

A man without a party, Sakurai decided to run as an independent, though repenting by halting all campaigning for three days.

Time Takes Over Warner As Court Blocks Challenge

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WILMINGTON, Del. — Time Inc. took control of Warner Communications and began forming the world's largest media and entertainment concern after a court refused a final bid by Paramount Communications Inc. to block the merger.

A three-justice panel of the Delaware Supreme Court on Monday upheld a ruling that denied an injunction sought by Paramount to stop Time's $14 billion offer for Warner. The ruling affirmed the right of corporate directors to decide the course of their companies in the face of hostile bids.

After the ruling, Paramount abandoned its $200-a-share, $12.2 billion hostile takeover offer for Time.

Within hours, Time said it had received 100 million shares of Warner at the close of its tender offer, raising Time's stake to 58 percent. "The name of the game is going to be growth, both in the U.S. and abroad," Nicholas J. Nicholas Jr., president of the new Time Warner Inc., said, according to The Wall Street Journal today.

"The basic operating premise is that we are going to build the company and grow the cash flow."

Paramount said it would not bid for Time Warner but would seek expansion through acquisitions, mergers, joint ventures or partnerships.

"We believe in making bold moves when they are in the best interest of Paramount Communications shareholders," Chairman Martin Davis said.

The justices' ruling was widely expected and Time's stock dropped on the New York Stock Exchange during the court arguments that were televised live by Cable News Network.

Time closed down $1 at $137.50 a share. The shares traded at $126 before Paramount's bid and peaked at $182.75 before falling back in recent weeks. Warner stock rose $1.62½ to $66.12½ and Paramount rose $1.87½ to $59.37½.

After more than two hours of arguments, the justices upheld a July 14 Chancery Court ruling that said the proposed Time-Warner merger was the result of long-range planning, and Paramount and Time shareholders opposed to the deal could not interfere.

The ruling could have wide importance because many of the nation's largest corporations, including Time, Paramount and Warner, are incorporated in Delaware.

"We find no error of law by the Court of Chancery," Justice Henry R. Horsey ruled from the bench.

Hours after the ruling, Time's offer for Warner expired and the company announced it held more than 117 million Warner shares, or 58 percent of its outstanding common stock.

Under its $70-a-share offer, Time was to purchase slightly more than half of Warner's stock and exchange cash and securities valued at $70 a share for the rest. Time said it would begin paying for the tendered shares on July 31. The merger is expected to take several months to complete.

The Chancery judge noted that Time and Warner first announced merger plans in March, three months before Paramount made its bid.

Paramount contended that Time effectively placed itself up for sale by announcing plans to merge with Warner and, therefore, should have been forced to consider Paramount's offer.

"We don't question that Time-Warner is a good deal," Paramount lawyer Melvin Cantor told the high court, but he contended Time shareholders should have been allowed to vote on whether Paramount was offering a better deal in the short term.

Michael Klein, an attorney for major Time shareholders including Texas investor Robert M. Bass, said thousands of stockholders opposed the Time-Warner merger.

But Justice Andrew G.T. Moore said Klein's argument would make a board hostage "to anyone who walked in with a bid," regardless of a company's long-range plans.

Klein said the judge's decision tilted Delaware law in favor of management. He predicted attorneys would advise corporations to develop an "appearance of a long-term plan" to ward off potential takeover bids.

Time attorney Robert Joffe said a vote wasn't required on the Warner merger because it didn't involve the issue of new Time stock. Attorneys for Time and Warner also contended the merger would give shareholders greater value in the long term than Paramount's $200 a share offer.

Time Warner's revenues have been projected at more than $10 billion. The conglomerate would surpass Rupert Murdoch's Australia News Corp. as the world's largest communications and entertainment concern.

Homeowner Shoots Two Intruders

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MESQUITE, Texas — A man who came home to find his house being burglarized for the fifth time won't be arrested for shooting two alleged burglars to death and seriously wounding a third, police said. The suspects were shot while trying to drive away.

The case of Terry Duncan, 27, probably will be referred to a grand jury, but for now, he is a free man, Police Sgt. Gary Westphal said Monday.

"These three people were breaking into his home and he's been burglarized before," said police Sgt. Gary Westphal. "These people were armed. I believe under the Texas Penal Code, he can protect his home in this manner. He can use up to deadly force."

Duncan had been coming home from work periodically to check his house, police said, because it has been burglarized four times in the past two years and there had been a recent series of burglaries in the neighborhood. His wife and two children were away when the shooting occurred at 11 a.m. Monday.

Duncan told police he shot the men when they ignored his warnings and tried to drive off, Westphal said.

The men were unarmed at the time they were shot, but two pistols were found in the car, police said.

Two men died from gunshot wounds to the head, Westphal said. The third man was in stable condition with an are wound at Dallas Parkland Hospital.

Names of the dead and injured were not released immediately.

A home alarm sounded several minutes before Duncan arrived at the home, but he hadn't been notified by the alarm company, police said.

Duncan told police he arrived to find one man sitting in a car in front of his house. The man in the car yelled, and two men emerged from a broken window, he reported.

Duncan got a .44 Magnum lever-action rifle from his pickup truck, positioned himself behind a tree, and ordered the three to stop, he told police. When they didn't, he opened fire, the homeowner reported.

Duncan's father, Dallas police Sgt. Sherman Duncan, was killed in December 1984 while working off-duty at a bar, officials said.

Panel Urges Health Funds For Elderly

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The government should pay for care for 1.6 million frail older Americans who live at home but need help with such routine tasks as bathing and getting out of bed, a private commission said today.

The Commission on Elderly People Living Alone said older Americans with severe physical or mental limitations — most of them women — depend mainly on family or friends for help.

That can "exact a heavy financial, emotional and physical toll on the care-givers, many of whom are themselves elderly, of modest means and in poor health," the report said.

Providing limited amounts of government-paid help may "help deter or delay nursing home placement by easing the burden on care-givers and sustaining their ability to continue providing assistance," it said.

The commission, established in 1985 by the Commonwealth Fund philanthropic foundation, recommended that Medicare be expanded to provide home care and adult day-care services for the most severely impaired elderly.

The expansion, which would cost an estimated $6.8 billion if it were in place for 1989, would provide up to 25 hours of in-home care per week, or two hours of adult day care could be substituted for each hour of home assistance.

"These individuals, with the help of family and friends, are struggling to stay at home," said Dr. Robert Butler, chairman of the commission and the Department of Geriatrics and Adult Development at New York's Mount Sinai Medical Center. "Without help, the alternative is often a nursing home."

The report, "Help at Home," comes as Congress looks for ways to rein in rapidly rising costs for government health assistance to the elderly and poor, and as advocacy groups push for a national health care program to address needs such as financing for long-term care.

The commission said its proposal would represent only a modest benefit expansion, yet could "help to facilitate continued independent living, and most significantly, improve the quality of life for severely impaired elderly people who live alone."

Under the proposal, Medicare would pay 80 percent of the costs for limited amounts of home care, with Medicaid picking up the balance for poor older Americans.

The commission, made up of experts on health policy and aging, said more than 5 million of the 29 million elderly Americans who live at home suffer from physical or mental limitations that restrict their independence.

The proposed home-care benefits would cover only the 1.6 million older people with the greatest physical and mental disabilities, 300,000 of whom live alone and are in particular need of home care.

Currently, 70 percent of those who would be covered by the program rely solely on family and friends for help, with wives and daughters giving more than half of the assistance.

These informal care-givers often face challenges of their own — 35 percent are 65 or older, one-third are in fair or poor health and one-third have income of less than 125 percent of the poverty level, the study said.

"This is a story of poor women taking care of poor women," said

Karen Davis, director of the commission and chairman of the Department of Health Policy and Management at the Johns Hopkins University School of Hygiene and Public Health.

"The emotional and financial toll on these care-givers can be enormous."

The home care these informal care-givers provide represents a time-consuming and costly commitment, the study found. Eighty percent of informal care-givers had been providing assistance seven days a week for at least a year; 9 percent had to quit jobs because of the competing time demands, 21 percent had reduced the number of hours they work and 19 had taken time off without pay.

Ex-HUD Official Denies Favors

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The chairman of a House panel investigating the federal housing scandal says he doesn't believe a former housing employee who contends her friendship with a top agency official brought her no favors.

Washington attorney Lynda Murphy testified Monday that she was not given special treatment by Deborah Gore Dean, a friend who was the top aide to Samuel Pierce, secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development during the Reagan administration.

Rep. Thomas Lantos, D-Calif., asked whether he believed her testimony on that question, said, "Of course not."

Ms. Murphy was one of two witnesses appearing as Lantos' subcommittee on employment and housing investigated allegations of mismanagement, fraud and influence-peddling at HUD during Pierce's eight years as secretary.

The other witness on Monday, Republican National Committeeman William Taylor of Florida, defended his use of national party stationery for letters in which he lobbied HUD officials for clients.

Ms. Murphy is a Washington attorney who since leaving HUD in 1982 has had extensive dealings with the agency. She was criticized for hiring Ms. Dean as a consultant after Ms. Dean left the agency.

"I'm beginning to feel there is a quid pro quo," said Rep. Christopher Shays, R-Conn.

But asked whether it would be fair to say her close friendship with Ms. Dean helped her receive access to internal HUD information, Ms. Murphy angrily replied: "I don't think that's a fair characterization."

Ms. Murphy said she found nothing improper about her hiring Ms. Dean. She also defended her action in reading a draft copy of a HUD document that affected a client Ms. Murphy was representing before the agency.

Ms. Murphy said Ms. Dean asked a subordinate to show her the document — a letter being prepared for Pierce's signature.

At the time, Ms. Murphy represented a client awaiting financing from DRG Funding Corp., a major lender in HUD programs. In the letter, Pierce criticized DRG but lifted a requirement that it get advance HUD approval of loans. Ms. Murphy later went to work for DRG.

She said she was not surprised to be allowed access to the internal document and said such "give and take" was common between HUD and representatives of major companies doing business with the agency.

During Taylor's testimony, Lantos asked whether the GOP leader agreed that he should not have used RNC stationery to correspond with HUD officials.

"Obviously, I don't," Taylor said. "I found nothing wrong with letting people know who I am."

When Shays said the panel's goal was to rid Washington of such influence-peddling, Taylor retorted, "Good luck," and added: "I didn't invent it."

"I wish you were a Democrat," said Shays, a Republican. "I am embarrassed ... You cashed in on your party."

Taylor said he earned several hundred thousand dollars lobbying HUD for a variety of clients and also got a 10 percent stake in one project, paying less than $100 for an investment he estimated is worth more than $400,000.

Taylor, former chairman of the Florida Republican Party, said he pleaded no contest and paid $5,000 in court costs to end a conflict-of-interest case after he represented both the city of Jacksonville and the private developer concerning the same HUD project.

Also Monday, the New York newspaper Newsday reported that Washington HUD officials gave away two low-income housing projects in Chicago for $1 each and allowed the projects to wind up in the hands of real estate developers who then received federal rent subsidies and tax credits worth millions of dollars.

Search Under Way For Engine Parts

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SIoux City, Iowa — Investigators ordered another aerial search for key parts of United Flight 232's rear engine and planned to visit the General Electric Co. plant where the engine was made.

The team from the National Transportation Safety Board said they expected to wrap-up their work this week at the Sioux Gateway Airport, where the DC-10 crashed-landed last Wednesday after its rear engine blew apart.

Meanwhile, United Capt. Al Haynes, the pilot credited with keeping the jetliner aloft after most control had been lost, was scheduled to be released from the hospital and meet with reporters for the first time today.

The death toll from the crash rose to 111 on Monday. Of the 296 people on board, 185 survived, including 10 of the 11 crew members. More than 30 people remain hospitalized.

The investigation into the accident has been hampered because the rear engine, one of three on the DC-10, flew apart over farms in northwest Iowa.

On Monday, teams searched a 16-square-mile section of corn and soybean fields about 60 miles away from the crash site in hopes of finding missing pieces of the engine.

Officials also used aircraft from the Nebraska Air National Guard to take infrared photographs of the area and asked farmers working their fields to look for pieces of the engine.

While some debris was recovered, key sections have yet to be found including a 400-pound disk from the engine. NTSB investigator Robert MacIntosh said Monday night. Officials ordered another round of aerial photography.

Other investigators will travel to a General Electric Co. plant in Cincinnati where the rear engine was made.

"They will be reviewing the manufacturing history and the manufacturing process," said MacIntosh.

Thus far, investigators have found no evidence that foreign matter went into the rear engine, he said.

Workers cleared away large sections of rubble on Monday, allowing a portion of the airport that had been closed since the crash to reopen. Investigators are trying to reassemble the aircraft's tail section in an airport hangar.

The crew of the flight from Denver to Chicago reported they lost all three of the airplane's hydraulic systems immediately after the rear engine exploded. MacIntosh said probes had found breaks in two of the systems and were still looking for a breach in the third.

Meanwhile, residents of this city on the eastern bank of the Missouri River were beginning to assess the impact of the crash on their lives.

American Red Cross officials held a "coping session" Monday night where psychiatrists met with those involved in the crash rescue operations.

"It's like a large group counseling session," said Red Cross spokeswoman Marsha Pope. "This is kind of one last thing to bring some finality to it. It's been hard on everyone."

She said sleeplessness, loss of appetite and other symptoms are typical reactions to stressful situations, and those were involved need to be warned to expect those things.

"Those are normal reactions," she said. "They don't need to think they're going crazy."

Already, teams of counselors and psychiatrists were working with the hundreds of rescue workers, many of whom found themselves working for days on end at the grisly crash scene.

"You were asking a 20-year-old who had never seen a body to walk through a cornfield littered with bodies," said Air Force Col. Robert Ursano, who was heading one of the teams.

Deficit May Fall As Federal Income Holds Steady Pace

By Dave Skidmore
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The federal government remains on track to post a reduction in the budget deficit in 1989 even though the usual June surplus was smaller than a year ago.

The Treasury Department said Monday that revenues last month were up 9.2 percent from June 1988, to $108.32 billion, while spending rose 11.6 percent, to $100.53 billion.

That combined to produce a $7.79 billion surplus, down 14.7 percent from June 1988.

June usually provides a break in the monthly flow of red ink because corporations and individuals make quarterly tax payments in the month. In May, the government reported a deficit of $25.47 billion after a record $40.57 billion surplus in April.

Analysts attributed the smaller June surplus to a blip in spending caused by calendar fluke. Military pay, veterans benefits and health-care supplements usually are paid at the start of the month. But because July 1 fell on a weekend, those payments were shifted into June, cutting what would have been a larger surplus.

Even though last month's surplus was smaller than last year, the deficit for the first nine months of the fiscal year, which began Oct. 1, was $105.5 billion, 11.6 percent lower than the first nine months of fiscal 1988.

If that pace continues through September, the deficit for all of fiscal 1989 will be $137.2 billion, coming under the revised estimates of both the Bush administration and the Congressional Budget Office.

The administration's Office of Management and Budget last week cut its 1989 deficit estimate from $164.1 billion to $148.3 billion because 1986 revisions to the tax laws are producing higher-than-expected revenues.

The CBO, meanwhile, predicts a deficit of $150 billion, down from an earlier estimate of $159 billion.

Both projections are in line with or a bit higher than those of private economists. The deficit limit established for fiscal 1989 under the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction law is $136 billion.

"This year's deficit will probably come in the $145 billion to $150 billion range," said economist David Jones of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co. Inc., a government securities dealer in New York.

"But, it wasn't due to an overly impressive deficit cutting effort by either Congress or the administration but rather to the windfalls of the Revenue Act of 1986."

However, economist Samuel Kahan of Kleinwort Benson Government Securities Inc. warned that the 1990 deficit could surge if the economy tops into a recession as some analysts expect.

A recession would cut tax revenues. "I would bet Congress would turn around and start spending again as they have in past recessions," Kahan said.

The government's largest spending category last month was interest payments on the national debt, the fastest growing spending category. Interest in June totaled $37.62 billion and reached $191.28 billion for the first nine months of the fiscal year. That was up 13.1 percent from a year earlier.

Other large spending categories were:

—The military: $28.38 billion last month and $221.34 billion so far this fiscal year, up 3.8 percent from a year ago.

—Social Security: $22.64 billion in June and $170.16 billion so far in fiscal 1989, up 5.8 percent from a year earlier.

—Other programs in the Department of Health and Human Services: $16.18 billion in June and $128.52 billion so far in fiscal 1989, up 8.2 percent from a year earlier.

Democratic Chief Says Bush Clean Air Plan Needs Changes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Dealing a setback to the Bush administration's clean air bill, the Senate majority leader says it needs major surgery if the nation is to reduce auto pollution, toxic chemicals and an acid rain component.

Majority Leader George J. Mitchell made clear Monday he plans to revamp the measure, telling reporters he has no intention of making sponsorship of failed clean air legislation his "life's work."

While Mitchell — chief sponsor of clean air measures for a decade — was largely critical of the legislation, the powerful chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee gave Bush's legislation a lukewarm endorsement.

At the first congressional hearing on the legislation, Energy and Commerce Chairman John D. Dingell, D-Mich., called the proposal the "best vehicle" for breaking a decade-long clean air stalemate. He lashed out at "Detroit-bashing" critics who believe the bill is too soft on automakers.

Dingell, while praising the overall pollution reduction he said the bill would achieve, warned he has reservations about several parts of the proposal and cautioned that the measure could "have devastating effects" on the auto industry and its workers.

Environmental Protection Agency Administrator William K. Reilly, at the same hearing, asked members of the House Energy and Commerce environment subcommittee to support the legislation.

Reilly said the bill will "make the 1990s the clean air decade" and insisted it will force industry to rid the skies of pollution while taking into account the cost to business of reducing acid rain, ozone smog and airborne toxic chemicals.

He said the legislation also will give industry incentives to cut pollution by giving business the flexibility to work out alternatives and trade "credits" for achieving more cleanup than required.

However, Mitchell said Bush "avoided virtually every tough choice" in his legislation and gave too much discretion to the EPA administrator to enforce the law.

Mitchell said language to let automakers meet new anti-pollution requirements by averaging auto emissions represents a major retreat from current law. Averaging would allow some cars to exceed new anti-pollution standards while other vehicles would meet them with room to spare.

The averaging would cause confusion in emissions testing, Mitchell said, because it would be nearly impossible to tell whether a particular car should pass.

Mitchell called the Bush bill "especially weak" on nitrogen oxides, the second main ingredient of acid rain that harms lakes and streams.

"Incredibly, the president proposes to permit increases in (nitrogen oxide) emissions," Mitchell said, because Bush would reduce nitrogen oxides by 2 million tons by the year 2000, while emissions of the substance are expected to grow by 3 million tons in the same period.

The senator, however, praised Bush's plan to reduce sulfur dioxide emissions by 10 million tons by 2000, compared with 1980 levels. Sulfur dioxide is the major acid rain component.

Mitchell said it was "most disturbing" that the cleanup of toxic chemicals under Bush's plan would take into account the cost to industry when protecting Americans' health.

He attacked the so-called "unreasonable risk" health standard, in which economists would perform a "cost-benefit analysis estimating how much a human life is worth and how many must be at risk before additional control of toxic air pollutants is warranted."

Dingell said he had several other reservations about the bill, including:

—Provisions that fail to give states credit for past reductions of sulfur dioxide.

—The failure to protect between 20,000 and 50,000 jobs in the soft coal and related industries, which could result from new requirements on utilities.

—A cap on sulfur dioxide emissions after the year 2000, which he said could "tilt in favor of some fuel to the detriment of coal."

Home Sales Up Nearly 6 Percent

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Sales of existing homes rebounded 5.9 percent in June following five months without a gain, a real estate trade group said today, attributing the rise to a decline in mortgage rates and falling prices.

The National Association of Realtors said sales of existing single-family homes sold at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 3.40 million units in June, up from May's rate of 3.21 million units. It was the first increase in sales since December 1988 and the largest increase since December 1986, when sales jumped 6.6 percent.

Researchers Say Exercise May Improve Older Drivers' Skills

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Exercise, stress management and driver education may help older people improve their road skills, researchers say.

Older drivers who participated in an experimental training program had increased upper-body flexibility, felt less anxiety in stressful driving situations and improved their roadway observation habits, West Virginia University researchers said Monday.

Kenard McPherson, director of the West Virginia Traffic Safety Center and principal investigator for the study, said further research could lead to a training program to "keep older people on the road as long as they can safely operate."

McPherson said additional work is needed to isolate the effects of exercise on driver performance, but that the two-year study carries "encouraging implications" about the beneficial effects of combined training in exercise, stress-reduction and driver education.

"The automobile has become a symbol, for both young and old, of freedom, independence and opportunity," the study said.

Drivers over age 65 are second only to those age 15 to 24 in traffic accidents and, when the number of miles driven is taken into account, the two groups are almost equal, the study said.

Older drivers' most common difficulties are in situations that require visual skills or rapid judgments. Many of those problems, according to the study, "may stem from a general decline in the physical fitness status of adults as they age."

The researchers said their findings were "encouraging in that the investigators were able to demonstrate that a closely supervised and monitored exercise program at home can improve older driver range-of-motion, reduce stress and improve these individual observing driving skills."

The AAA Foundation for Traffic Safety, which financed the study, said the findings offer "new hope to older drivers that they can minimize some physical effects of biological aging through exercise programs."

Kenard said the drivers' improved observation habits resulted in better scores for straight-line backing, parallel parking, intersection scanning and checking to the sides when they wanted to change positions on the roadway.

However, their actual vehicle handling skills — for example, keeping a vehicle in its lane or stopping at the proper point — didn't improve, he said.

"The flexibility and stress management programs were not effective, for the most part, in improving the handling skills of older drivers," the study said. "However, these older drivers improved on the skill of observing after participating in a visual perception driver training program."

The study said the improved observation skills were "rather significant, given the importance of observing to driving tasks such as parking, backing, changing lanes, driving straight and driving through blind intersections."

"Furthermore, analyses ... indicate the skill of observing is an important factor differentiating good vs. poor older drivers."

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY July 26

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): It may be necessary to put up with someone who does a lot of talking with little to say. Concentrate on family needs.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Two steps forward and one step back can get you down. Don't be impatient as slow progress will win. Flirty fun can pep up your day.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Let those who want to help you know exactly what it is you need. Uncertainty over a partner can best be handled tomorrow.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): A platonic relationship can turn exciting! It may be best to stand your ground if the results are too demanding.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Achieving the sensual delight you desire with a partner requires complete surrender. Joy can give you confidence in the future.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Everyone may be talking about the "new you!" Keeping a humorous and sensitive attitude has an all around good effect.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Give up a demanding relationship—you will act younger and bring back your charisma. A wrong choice is part of life's adventure.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Ignore someone who may want to cut in on your romance. You are on firm ground, making progress and good points in your favor.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Vent your frustrations. Take off your serious face, pump up your adrenaline, and live life to the fullest. Break routines if you must.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Confusion over money is ending, and with a little help you can change your circumstances. Have confidence in the future.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Your motto is "not to try is to die," and this calls for a gathering of your forces and getting started on a new project! Build a better life.
PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Savings can give you a financial cushion. You may be a pushover for demanding family members. Learn to say "no."

 Dear Charlie:
 I spent a pleasant few days last month in Dallas at The Mansion on Turtle Creek. I was there both to attend the Ramses exhibition and to play in a few gala bridge events. This hand is from a rubber bridge party that was held in my honor. Looking at the bidding, you might think this hand was played by a quartet of novices! Quite the contrary. I was East, world champions Jim Jacoby and Bobby Wolff were West and South respectively, and Tannah Hirsch, president of Goren International sat North. The bidding was fairly normal as far as my four-club bid. Bobby decided to take advantage of the vulnerability to slip in a fake cue-bid of five clubs. Jim passed and Tannah, after taking a few moments to decide that any undoubled penalty at five clubs was likely to be less than any doubled penalty at a major, also passed. Not surprisingly, that brought a murmur from our gallery. I had no idea who could make what. After some thought, I decided that the undoubled penalty at five clubs, with my 100 honors, was likely to be as good as we would get against five of a major doubled. So I, too, chose to pass—much to the delight of the spectators. Jim led a trump, and we took 13 tricks. That brought us a total of 650 points—not quite enough, under the circumstances. With the club king doubleton aside, we could have made a grand slam in clubs or diamonds on any lead. However, as you can see even a small slam is no bargain. As ever, Omar

NBC Miniseries Explores Death Of U.S. Drug Agent

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Three years ago investigative reporter Elaine Shannon took a leave from her job, withdrew her savings and set out to nail down the story of high-level corruption behind the murder of U.S. drug agent Enrique Camarena in Mexico.

It was more than just a whodunit for Shannon. She found the political immorality spread by the drug barons was pervasive in Mexico and there was a massive cover-up.

She also found that the Reagan White House and State Department were equally reluctant to see the murder investigation pursued because it was disruptive of American foreign policy. Some courageous officials, however, resisted pressure and pushed the investigation.

Camarena, an agent of the Drug Enforcement Administration, was abducted on Feb. 7, 1985, in Guadalajara, Mexico. He was tortured and murdered by the drug lords he was trying to bring to justice.

Shannon tells the whole dirty story in her book "Desperados," which has been made into a six-hour NBC miniseries called "Drug Wars: The Camarena Story."

The three-part series, to be shown this fall, stars Steven Bauer as Camarena, Elizabeth Pena as his wife, Mika, and Craig T. Nelson and Treat Williams as drug agents. Michael Mann ("Miami Vice") was executive producer.

"I traveled in Mexico and the Southwest, particularly California, and talked to everybody I could find who knew about the murder," said Shannon on a visit to Los Angeles. Shannon, who is expecting her first child next month, is married to Dan Morgan of the Washington Post. She spent 10 years covering the Department of Justice for Newsweek, which she left after beginning the book. She currently works for Time in Washington.

"This is really about American policy. We have agents all over the world. Are they being supported by our embassies and our government? I talked to Mexican officials last. I didn't want them following me around and seeing who I was talking to."

"There is a lot of information out there. I didn't have to use the Freedom of Information Act at all. I talked to a lot of Customs agents who had seen the explosion of drugs coming in through the South. Cocaine and marijuana comes almost exclusively from Latin America."

With the help of investigators here and abroad, Shannon was able to put together a picture of the corruption and cover-up.

"In Mexico corruption is a way of life," she said. "It's essential to the drug traffic. Whenever corruption is exposed the person is usually allowed to quietly resign."

Shannon said Camarena, a very moral and dedicated man, volunteered for duty in Guadalajara because it's the only place outside of Colombia to find the drug lords. She said he was killed when he got too close to the drug bosses, as well as their high-ranking allies in the Mexican government and police.

She describes an incident in the book in which American agents watched helplessly as a top official of the Mexican Federal Judicial Police allowed an escape by a suspected drug kingpin behind the murder. Informants told the agents he promised $270,000 to the official.

Shannon also tells of opposition from the U.S. State Department and the White House to the murder investigation.

"Not because of corruption but because the agents bother important people," she said. "The American banking community also raised hell when the Customs Service ordered strict inspection of vehicles at the border. It effectively shut down the border and the bankers complained that it disrupted trade."

Shannon said she was pleased that Michael Mann produced the series because drug dealers had been portrayed as villains on "Miami Vice."

"In so many movies you see the stars taking dope and giggling," she said. "Mann made these people the bad guys. I was concerned that the book not be cheap entertainment or lose its dignity. He was zealous about the realism, and respectful of the characters."

Shannon points out in her book that a number of agents and others put their careers on the line to press ahead with the investigation and speak out against the corruption.

"One of the messages I hope comes through in this is that while law enforcement people can take direct action, all of us face choices," she said. "We can do things to help. We can refuse to be a part of a lie. Many people I interviewed did that and I greatly admire them."

New Kids on the Block claim No. 1 spot with their ballad 'I'll Be Loving You (Forever)'

New Kids Storm The Charts With Squeaky Clean Image

By Anne M. Peterson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — The name fits. Out of nowhere the New Kids on the Block have hit the streets to claim the No. 1 spot on the Billboard singles chart with their ballad "I'll Be Loving You (Forever)."

They're the hottest teen group to come along since the Jacksons, the Osmonds, The Jets, Menudo and New Edition.

The New Kids on the Block include brothers Jordan and Jonathan Knight, Danny Wood, Joe McIntyre and Donnie Wahlberg. They range in age from 16 to 19.

The success is mind-boggling to the self-described "street kids" from Boston.

"I think it's great," said Jonathan, 19, with a typical teen-age giddiness. "The odds of this actually happening are astronomical. We're so lucky."

But the New Kids groan at the mention of the Osmond comparison or any other association with teen "bubblegum" music. In fact, their music is a little bit of everything.

"I just think the bubblegum label — for any group — is an insult. It's like teens don't have the right to make music that's good and appealing to other teens," said Donnie, 19.

Donnie admits, however, the quintet's first album, "New Kids on the Block," might have seemed youthful. "As we grow up, our music will grow up, too," he said.

Their second album, "Hangin' Tough," has sold more than 1 million copies and spawned two other Top 10 singles, "Please Don't Go Girl" and "You've Got It (The Right Stuff)."

They recently taped a segment of "Kid's Choice," an award show for the cable TV channel Nickelodeon, at Universal Studios. The group performed its next single, "Hangin' Tough."

Like The Jets and Osmonds, the New Kids are as squeaky clean as their image. They are well-dressed and well-mannered. They attend classes during the school year, and they brag about having never done drugs — a rarity in a business full of raucous rock bands and recovering substance abusers.

"I think our success gives other kids role models, positive role models, because we don't do drugs or things like that. I think that's important," said Jordan, 18.

In honor of their anti-drug stance, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis proclaimed April 24, 1989, "New Kids on the Block Day."

The sudden rise to fame hasn't jaded them. They were still excited about being taped for a television show, and likewise starstruck at all the celebrities they're getting to meet on their way up.

"I just met Alyssa Milano!" said Joe, 16, referring to the teen-age co-star of ABC's "Who's the Boss?" "It's not like a job. Right now we're just having a whole lot of fun," he said.

The fun includes gathering mostly teen-age fans all over the country. The group estimates their average fan is female and ranges in age from 12 to 16.

The New Kids were discovered in Boston by producer Maurice Starr, who staged a citywide search in 1984 to create a band such as New Edition, which he also put together.

At first, the quintet focused on rap and rhythm and blues, but weren't satisfied with the minor success the first album achieved. So they widened their musical style and honed their dance steps.

For now, the boys are concentrating on developing their vocal prowess, and sing much like a polished street corner group.

Blonde To Join 'Dallas'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — J.R. Ewing will have a new "bad girl" to contend with this season: blonde actress Kimberly Foster, who will play a vixen on "Dallas."

Ms. Foster said she screamed in delight when told she had the part on the CBS television show.

"It's scary going into a show that's been going for 12 years. It's kind of like I've been invited to a really big party where you don't know any of the guests," said Ms. Foster, who will be relatively new to prime-time audiences.

In an unusual step, her name will appear in the main titles. "You always need someone to stir up the pot," said executive producer Leonard Katzman. "And everybody loves a bad girl."

Other newcomers to the long-running series: Sasha Mitchell as a well-built man who may be J.R.'s son, and Elizabeth Taylor's son Michael Wilding as a powerful art gallery owner.

White House Hails Debt Relief Plan

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration calls the new Mexican debt relief package a breakthrough accord that will make it easier to reach debt reduction plans for other Third World countries.

But some members of Congress and private bankers remain skeptical about how fast and how much debt relief will flow to Mexico because of the arrangement.

Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady, who provided a final push over the weekend to get a Mexican deal completed, hailed the package Monday as a "fantastic change in circumstances" for the poverty-stricken country.

He said the proposal, if fully implemented, will cut Mexico's annual interest payments by $1.5 billion, down about one-third from the $5 billion to $5.4 billion the country is paying on its commercial bank debt of $54 billion.

In addition, Brady estimated that over four years, the amount of Mexico's outstanding debt will be reduced by $10 billion to $12 billion from where it would have been without the agreement.

In a briefing for reporters, Brady expressed hope that agreements will be reached in coming months with other countries. He specifically mentioned Venezuela, the Philippines and Costa Rica as likely candidates.

Those deals should move more swiftly because a lot of the "pick and shovel" work was accomplished with the initial Mexican transaction, he said.

But Brady conceded that even with the Mexican plan, it could be the end of the year before benefits begin flowing to the country. That is because the relief will depend on individual decisions being made by more than 500 commercial banks that hold Mexico's loans.

To keep the country economically afloat until then, Brady said the United States and other major industrial countries are willing to put up around $1.5 billion in short-term financing.

Mexico was seen as a key test case for the administration's debt reduction effort unveiled by Brady on March 10. The administration has made debt reduction a key component of its foreign policy, believing that the only way to ensure the survival of emerging democracies, especially in Latin America, is to ease the crushing $1.3 trillion Third World debt burden.

In the case of Mexico, the debt reduction package provides banks with three options:

—Banks can cut 35 percent off the value of the current loans by exchanging the old debt for bonds carrying guarantees that banks will receive payment on the reduced debt. The guarantees would come from the 151-nation International Monetary Fund and its sister organization, the World Bank.

—Banks can agree to cut interest rates to 6.25 percent, down from about 10 percent, with the interest payments also guaranteed by the IMF and World Bank.

—Banks can agree to provide new loans. Until now, this has been the only approach to the debt problem with banks simply agreeing to funnel more money to a debtor country.

China Hit By Rains, Floods That Kill 200

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — Torrential rains and floods have claimed more than 200 lives since the weekend, stranded tens of thousands of people and washed away roads, dikes and crops, official newspapers said today.

Since the rains began two months ago, nearly 1,700 people have died.

In eastern Zhejiang province, which was hit by Typhoon Hope late last week, more than 100 people have died, the China Daily said.

Tens of thousands of people were stranded in the province's central Yongkang County, where water rose to waist high and washed away roads, dikes, dams and acres of crops, the paper said.

In northeastern Jilin province, which has been hit by torrential rains since Saturday, 63 people were killed and 15 missing in floods and mudslides, the People's Daily said.

The paper said railway service has been disrupted and more than 11,000 buildings destroyed in the province.

China Daily said the death toll in Miyun county, outside Beijing, has risen to 15. Heavy rains hit the Beijing area over the weekend. The county registered 14.5 inches of rainfall within 12 hours on Saturday.

In western China's normally arid provinces of Gansu and Qinghai, rainstorms since Sunday have killed at least 20 people, the paper said.

10% Low Price Guarantee Policy:
Lowe's guarantees our everyday low prices. If you find an identical advertised item at any retail competitor currently priced lower than ours, simply bring us written proof of that price. We'll match that price PLUS give you an additional 10% of the difference between the two prices when you buy from us. It must be an identical in-stock item. Closeout, discontinued and other clearance type sale items are excluded from this offer.

Satisfaction Guarantee Policy:
Lowe's guarantees that you will be satisfied with your purchase. If you are not completely happy with your purchase, simply return it along with your original sales receipt to any Lowe's store. We'll repair it, replace it, or refund your money.

Lowe's Raincheck Policy:
If an advertised item is temporarily out-of-stock, we will gladly issue a raincheck (except for items marked limited quantities, discontinued or closeout). When we restock you will be notified so you can buy at the previously advertised price. Some stores may not stock all advertised items; however, every item shown can be ordered for you.
