Senate Unit Says U.S. Ignoring Warnings Over Embassy Spies

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The government has ignored its own warnings to improve defenses against spies, the Senate Intelligence Committee says in a report that comes as embassy security undergoes new scrutiny in the Felix S. Bloch espionage case.

In unusually harsh language, the committee said "bureaucratic infighting" has paralyzed the new Security Evaluation Office, established last year under CIA Director William Webster to bolster anti-spy efforts at U.S. embassies around the world.

"It has failed to achieve its objectives," the panel said in an assessment written before last week's public revelation that Bloch, once the No. 2 official at the U.S. Embassy in Vienna, was under investigation for allegedly passing secrets to the Soviet Union. Ranking committee members had been informed of the Bloch case, absent his name, in late June.

While the report deals mainly with technological efforts to thwart spying at U.S. posts abroad, it highlights the State Department's longstanding reputation among intelligence professionals for giving short shrift to security.

The panel noted, for example, that the State Department has failed to create a top-level office for a director of diplomatic security, despite the administration's own recommendation for such a position following a series of studies ending in 1987.

But several former diplomats and counterintelligence officials said in interviews Tuesday that the department has tried to improve anti-spy efforts.

James Nolan, the recently retired head of the department's Office of Foreign Missions and longtime deputy FBI counterintelligence chief, said several FBI experts have been hired by the department.

And George A. Carver, Jr., who was deputy for national intelligence for two CIA directors, said "one of the toughest things to do is have counterintelligence in an open society. I'm not suggesting we become a police state, but I think we do need to review our policies." Carver supports lie detector tests for foreign service officers, like those given regularly to intelligence officers.

BW Drug Has FDA Approval

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration agreed today to make available to some premature infants a new drug developed by Burroughs Wellcome Co. that could save their lives.

Manufactured in Greenville, the drug, called EXOSURF Pediatric, will be used to treat respiratory distress syndrome, the most common cause of death and disability among premature infants.

The disease, also known as hyaline membrane disease, is caused primarily by the inability of premature lungs to make a substance called surfactant, which aids and maintains lung inflation and prevents lung collapse. In the United States, 40,000 to 50,000 infants develop RDS each year and about 5,000 die.

Karen Collins, a spokesman at Burroughs Wellcome's Research Triangle Park headquarters, said physicians at the East Carolina University School of Medicine "are participating in on-going clinical trials of this drug."

EXOSURF Pediatric Sterile Powder is a synthetic surfactant that has been shown to reduce the severity of RDS, rate of death from RDS and overall mortality in many premature infants. It is supplied as a sterile, freeze-dried powder that is reconstituted at bedside with sterile water. The resulting white, foamy liquid is then administered through the infant's ventilator tube.

The FDA is allowing Burroughs Wellcome to market the drug through a process called Treatment IND. Through that process a manufacturer, prior to marketing approval, can make a potentially life-saving drug available to certain critically ill patients who are likely to benefit from its use and for whom no

Jones Scholarship Fund Is Scrubbed

By Stuart Savage
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

"The whole thing has been scrubbed," Floyd Lupton, administrative assistant to 1st District Rep. Walter Jones, said this morning of a proposed fundraiser to establish a foundation to honor the U.S. House member from Farmville.

Jones' wife, Elizabeth, had been heading a committee to raise funds to establish a $250,000 scholarship fund at N.C. State University to honor her husband. Among the activities in the planning stage were a lecture series and videotape production about Jones' life.

But Lupton, in a telephone interview this morning, said the effort to establish the scholarship fund was canceled on Tuesday because of the "unfavorable publicity" the project generated. "They had good intentions."

Lupton said, to "establish a scholarship at N.C. State. But the interpretation put on it by the media just made it impossible for the congressman to live with and he just requested that Mrs. Jones cease and desist from any further activity on it.

"The effort was started several months back," Lupton said. But, "I've had to stand clear of it completely," as have other members of Jones' congressional staff, he said.

The fund-raising committee had planned to raise part of the money to endow the scholarship from industry contributions.

But Jones, the chairman of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee and a member of the House Agriculture Committee, said earlier that he saw no conflict because he was not directly involved in the effort.

Efforts to contact Mrs. Jones have been unsuccessful.

Flag Bill Rolling In House

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — House Democrats today pushed ahead with a bill to ban flag burning after overruling Republican demands for a constitutional amendment as the only way to overcome a Supreme Court ruling legalizing that form of protest.

Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, squelched a GOP attempt to substitute an amendment for his proposed statute outlawing desecration of the flag, including burning, with penalties of up to a year in jail plus a fine.

Brooks ruled that the amendment, backed by President Bush and offered by Rep. James Sensenbrenner, R-Wis., was non-germane to the committee's business today.

Former A-G Athletes Sentenced In Rape

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

After hearing testimony from several character witnesses — including a District Court judge and a high school coach — a Superior Court judge sentenced a former Ayden-Grifton athlete to 10 years in prison for raping a classmate.

Judge G.K. Butterfield of Wilson sentenced David Dixon, 17, of Ayden after Dixon pleaded guilty Tuesday to the second-degree rape of a fellow Ayden-Grifton student.

The offense carries a maximum penalty of 40 years in prison.

The incident occurred at the girl's home in January. Dixon was accused of stripping the girl and briefly gaining sexual penetration after a second man, Darryl Moye, 18, allegedly helped hold her. Attorneys said both men had been friends of the girl previously.

Moye, who said he is set to enter college in late August, pleaded guilty to attempted second-degree rape, which carries a maximum prison term of 10 years.

Butterfield suspended a three-year sentence for Moye on the condition that he serve 30 days in jail, pay a $200 fine, not contact the victim, remain on supervised probation for five years and remain in college for four years or perform 500 hours of community service.

Several friends and teachers appeared as character witnesses for the defendants, including District Court Judge James E. Martin of Grifton and Ayden-Grifton basketball coach Bob Murphrey.

Martin, who worked as a teacher and a coach before becoming a lawyer, said his son, Jimmy, has been close friends with Dixon and Moye, and the defendants have excellent reputations. Both have been in his home several times, Martin said, and he would welcome them again.

Martin, who canceled his court session in New Bern and volunteered to testify, said he has been in contact with the defendants' families since the arrest. Both defendants come from good homes, he said.

There was also much discussion of the athletic success both men enjoyed in high school. As a condition of their pretrial release, both had to attend D.H. Conley High School instead of Ayden-Grifton, thus they missed out on part of the basketball season and the baseball season.

"Both of them were starting basketball players, and both of them were asked to leave in their senior season ...," Martin said. "I have no doubt about either one of them suffering. I'm sure that they've suffered."

"I think both of them possibly could have gotten some type of (athletic) scholarship," he said.

Martin said both men have shown fear, remorse and emotion over the incident, and he said he has seen tears in their eyes. He joked that the only positive aspect of the charges was that his son earned more playing time on the basketball team.

"The only good thing that came out of this is, when they were not allowed to play basketball, Jimmy could play," Martin said on the witness stand.

Murphrey, who drove to Greenville from a coaches' clinic in Greensboro, testified that both men were competitive athletes and winners.

"(Dixon) was a point guard. I felt like he was one of the leaders (on the basketball team)," Murphrey said. "He, like Darryl, was a winner."

He said he believed Moye was a college prospect in baseball.

"A lot of college coaches thought so, also. But he was not able to play baseball at all this year because of this incident," Murphrey said.

Martin, Murphrey and others who took the stand for the defendants also gave their sympathies to the victim and her family, who were seated behind the prosecutor's table. Much of the time the girl sat with her hand covering her face.

Butterfield said he usually has a sentence in mind as court proceedings develop, but this case was different. He took a 10-minute recess before sentencing.

"There is no question in my mind that on this afternoon in January, these two men went to this lady's residence and overpowered her

Pitt Legislators Expect Easy Sailing For Road Plan

By J. Ward Best
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The $9.1 billion highway package hangs on today's vote by the state Legislature, and most area representatives hope for smooth passage of the plan.

The first votes on the highway package were scheduled for this afternoon in the House and Senate.

Area representatives from each chamber have expressed support for the plan, citing the benefits to the area from better roadways throughout eastern North Carolina.

Under the present plan, a compromise between the versions originally presented in the two chambers, highway construction would take place over 13.5 years and would be funded by increases in gasoline and automobile sales taxes.

The package would build loop freeways around seven urban areas in the state and would locate a four-lane highway within ten miles of most state residents.

The compromise also includes a provision to fund teacher and state employee pay raises for the next two years with the increased taxes.

"We expect some debate in the Senate," said Sen. Tom Taft, D-Pitt,

"but we expect it will pass overwhelmingly, even among the Republicans."

Republican legislators objected to the compromise, and threatened to kill it because of the funding for pay raises.

"The Republicans are being sort of whiny and childish because they're not getting their way," Taft said. "They're forgetting this is a political compromise."

Senator Bob Martin, D-Pitt, and Rep. Ed Warren, D-Pitt, also expressed support for the compromise.

"I'm 100 percent for it," Martin said. "You can't always get everything you want."

Martin also said the eastern part of the state badly needs the road improvements outlined in the package.

Warren said he also wants larger salary increases for teachers, but said he supported the proposal because his district and eastern North Carolina needs the roads.

"There's no question it's needed," the representative said.

"With the growth that we have in Pitt County and the area, it's essential that we have a good highway system (and) good schools," Warren said.

Warren said that he felt the Legislature should not adjourn for the summer before deciding on the package.

Taft said the Senate was frustrated by the delay in completing the session, and said the Senate has been waiting for the House to complete its work since the end of June. Taft blamed part of the delay on the negotiations over the highway package.

"I'm pleased with the compromise," Taft said. "I think it's important for my district to see this package approved."

Rep. Walter B. Jones Jr., D-Pitt, said earlier he objected to the plan because of the increased taxes used to fund highway construction. Jones could not be reached for comment this week.

In The Area

Tuesday Thefts

The theft of a 22-foot lowboy trailer and three bicycles were among the six thefts reported to Greenville police on Tuesday.

Officer R.G. Mendenhall said the trailer, valued at $1,990, was taken from Larry's Carpetland at 3010 E. 10th St. in an incident reported at 9:57 a.m., while Officer C.A. Elks said a bicycle was taken from 311 Stanwood Drive in an incident reported at 11:22 a.m.

Officer E.L. Butts said a bicycle innertube was taken from the K mart store at Greenville Square Shopping Center by a juvenile — who was turned over to the department's juvenile division — in an incident reported at 11:16 a.m. He said a bicycle was taken from K Mart in an incident reported at 12:42 p.m.

Officer R.G. Mendenhall said a radio system was taken from a car parked at 106F Cedar Court in an incident reported at 5:33 p.m., while Officer A.T. Parrish said a bicycle was taken from K3 Wilson Acres Apartments in an incident reported at 10:07 p.m.

Heroin Charge

Anita Mayo Joyner, 36, of 1110 Douglas Ave. was arrested on drug charges by Greenville police on Tuesday.

Officer A.P. White said Ms. Joyner was charged with possession with intent to sell and deliver heroin in connection with a 4:11 p.m. incident near the intersection of 14th Street and Douglas Avenue.

Fraud Arrests

Greenville police arrested two people on several counts of financial transaction card theft and fraud Tuesday.

Officers C.A. Elks said Sabrina Fleming was charged with larceny and financial transaction card theft

Belk, Brody Units Open At Plaza

Customers began shopping this morning in a new Belk and in a new addition to Brody's, both components of The Plaza mall now being expanded and renovated.

Belk held a ribbon cutting for its Plaza store, the second for the Belk group in Greenville, while Brody's had no ceremony, opting to wait until its final phase is completed, probably in October, according to a spokesman.

Among those participating in the Belk ribbon cutting, held at the store's Arlington Boulevard entrance, were owner family representative Henderson Belk of Charlotte; Greenville Mayor Ed Carter; vice president and Greenville stores general manager Greenville Banks and his wife Martha Ann; store operating manager Warner Rackley; Chris McCoy and Ed Walker, representing the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce; Edna Cox, a retired longtime employee of Belk of Greenville, and Paul Peel, executive vice president of eastern North Carolina Belk Stores based in Rocky Mount.

Rackley said an invitation-only preview celebration and fashion show held Sunday in the 46,000-square-foot Plaza Belk was a success. Those attending made donations to the Dream Factory, an organization which grants wishes to terminally ill children.

More than $3,500 was raised during the benefit, according to Kyle Braswell, Dream Factory area coordinator.

Hyman Brody, president of BrodyCo, which operates seven apparel stores in eastern North Carolina, said today's opening marks the first phase of an expansion-renovation of Brody's at The Plaza being done over several months.

Brody said a second phase will open about a month from now, and a third phase will begin serving customers when the mall has its grand opening projected for October.

When completed, The Plaza Brody's will have about 60,000 square feet of retail selling space, plus offices for the entire firm, which also has a store at Carolina East Mall in Greenville and facilities in New Bern, Rocky Mount, Kinston, Jacksonville and Goldsboro.

Fraternity Seeks Rehearing By City

A request to rehear a petition to allow a fraternity house on 10th Street will be among the items to be considered by the Greenville Board of Adjustment on Thursday at 7 p.m. in the council chambers at City Hall.

At its March meeting, the board originally denied the request by Zeta Tau Alpha Fraternity Housing Corp. and Dennis O'Neal for a special use permit to allow a fraternity/sorority to be located at 612 E. 10th St. The property is zoned for office and institutional (O&I) use.

The board will decide whether a public hearing is in order on the request.

In other action Thursday, the board will consider a request by Chuck Humphrey, appearing for Lambda Chi Alpha Housing Corp., for a special use permit to allow an addition to the Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity house on the southwest corner of Fifth and Elizabeth streets.

The board will consider a request by Michael Sutton and Leonard Ambrose for a rehearing on a request, originally denied by the board, for a special use permit to allow the operation of a dry cleaning establishment on the southeast corner of Arlington Boulevard and Hooker Road.

The board will also consider requests by: Alton Spain for a variance of the Zoning Ordinance to allow the construction of a duplex on a substandard lot at 208 E. 12th St.; Bob Barbour Jeep-Eagle for a variance to allow the placement of a free-standing sign at 3303 S. Memorial Drive; James Arthur Brown for a special use permit to continue the operation of a nightclub at 814 W. Fifth St.; James McCotter Investment Co. for a special use permit to operate a home furnishings store at the southeast corner of Greenville Boulevard and Landmark Street, and by Robert B. Webb for a special use permit to place a mobile home on the south side of SR 1401, approximately 5,000 feet west of the intersection of SR 1401 and N.C. 33.

Losing Clout

Another Reason To Work Harder

No one yet knows how the 1990 census will affect Congressional districting in North Carolina, but it's a pretty safe bet the 1st Congressional District will lose strength, just as it did in the 1980 census.

That potential loss is a tangible indication that one talked-about trend is real — rural eastern North Carolina is losing people to the urban Piedmont.

It is a trend that has disturbing implications, and loss of political clout is but one. If that prediction comes true, it will mean the region must work that much harder to make sure its broad interests are adequately represented.

The census figures are used to determine the population make-up of the districts. Because the Piedmont of North Carolina is growing more rapidly than the East, the expectation is that new counties will be added to the 1st District and some Piedmont districts will shrink in size.

The final decision, of course, will await the census. Then the state will know how it stands in relation to other states and how the 1st District compares to other Congressional districts of North Carolina.

In the meantime the East Carolina University Regional Development Institute is doing projections and they are not encouraging. The East may not maintain its political strength.

For example, Talmadge Page, an economic development specialist with RDI, says Mecklenburg County's growth has outpaced the growth of the entire 1st Congressional District. Projections show Mecklenburg's growth at 85,607 from 1980 to 1990, while the 1st District's projected growth is 65,740.

There will be flat growth in some areas of the East, but increases are seen in some counties such as Dare and Carteret. Pitt County's population upswing should continue. It was 73,900 in 1970 and 90,146 in 1980. The projections show Pitt at 103,190 in the 1990 census.

But growth alone won't assure the 1st Congressional District of keeping its present boundaries. There are only so many Congressional seats allowed to North Carolina and they must be allocated on a population basis. It's a bitter but hard fact: if the 1st District doesn't hold its own in population in relation to other districts, then it will gain some counties and thus lose strength.

Loss of political strength could be yet another blow to a region beset with great promise but great disadvantage. The East, which includes 33 percent of the state, holds 44 percent of the state's citizens which live below the poverty level. Communities have a hard time finding the resources to support excellent schools. Highway construction frequently bypasses the region, taking economic development with it.

None of these factors, including possible political dilution, are reasons for the region to throw up its hands in despair. Instead, these factors should be added incentive to work that much harder to bring opportunity eastward, to entice people to live in the region and to secure as much clout in government as possible.

'It's a bitter but hard fact: if the 1st District doesn't hold its own in population in relation to other districts, then it will gain some counties and thus lose strength.'

How Will The Bill Be Paid?

WASHINGTON — In the current debate over the B2 Stealth bomber and other exotic weapons systems, a former Army corporal who found a grenade launcher an intimidatingly complex piece of equipment enters with trepidation. But two common-sense principles underline the logic of the Bush administration's position — and highlight one glaring omission on its part.

The first principle is that weapons decisions must follow strategy, not drive it. The second is that dismantling the American strategic deterrent must be the last step, not the first, in the negotiated reduction of Cold War defense forces.

On both those points, the administration position, as enunciated by the President and Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney, makes sense. What is disturbingly missing from the current week's defense debate on Capitol Hill is an equal determination by Bush and his allies to pay for the weapons they argue we need.

It is important, just now, to go back to such basic principles because so much appears to be in flux. When ships of the Soviet fleet come calling in Norfolk and the former chief of the Soviet armed forces hobbles on Capitol Hill, it's easy to ask: Where's the threat that requires us to spend $300 billion a year, year after year, on preparations for war?

The only honest answer to that question has to be: the Soviet Union. There is no other nation, or combination of nations, with the military capability and the hostile intent to make us spend more than a fraction of that sum defending ourselves and our vital interests.

But is the Soviet Union still a hostile power? Mikhail Gorbachev says no, and his actions so far give weight to his words. He appears to be focused on improving the desperate domestic situation of his country. He recognizes that the burden of an enormous army and a huge defense budget is one the Soviets cannot sustain while they rebuild their shattered economy.

But no nation the size of the Soviet Union can entirely abandon its foreign agenda or responsibilities. The Soviets are, in fact, still capable of projecting force around the world and giving aid to nations which clearly do not bear us goodwill. Deterrent force, therefore, remains a compelling need for the United States and its allies even if Gorbachev remains in power and even if the levels of force on both sides are ratcheted downward by the negotiating process. We simply cannot afford to forget that it is our strategic deterrent — with its land, sea and air legs — which has kept the peace in Europe these 40-plus years and contributed to stability in the rest of the world.

The case for preserving that deterrent — and modernizing it with weapons like the B2 — is emphasized by the instability inside the Soviet Union. With Gorbachev so obviously riding a whirlwind at home, trying desperately to bring material progress to his people before they use their new-found freedoms to rebel against him and the communist system he represents, no one can be sure how long Gorbachev and his seemingly benign foreign policy will last.

That means that the United States should scrap weapons systems or reduce forces only in proportion to actual and verified reductions on the Soviet side. Except where they serve our interests by eliminating redundant or obsolescent weapons and forces, unilateral cuts on our side are likely to reduce the Soviets' incentive to negotiate.

When Caspar Weinberger and Ronald Reagan were calling the shots, their appetite for military spending appeared insatiable. Time and again, Weinberger declined to give Congress his priorities, arguing with increasing futility as time went on, that every dollar in the Pentagon budget was as valuable as every other.

Cheney is not remotely like that. He has proposed killing what he regards as low-priority weapons, like the Marines' Osprey helicopter, while retaining those like the B2 he regards as vital. I don't know if he's right on either of those choices, but I do know this: It's better having those judgments made by one rational set of strategic criteria than by 20 separate "little Pentagons" on Capitol Hill. Congress is as incapable of formulating a coherent military strategy as it is a balanced and sustainable foreign policy. And that is not its function.

It is Congress' function to insist that any President be ready to pay for what he judges to be the nation's defense requirements. When the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings budget targets were adopted, the sponsors said one of their main purposes was to force then President Reagan to finance the defense buildup he felt vital by supporting the taxes he found repugnant.

It never worked that way with Reagan and so far, it's not working with Bush either. That is where Congress ought to speak out — and act. If the President really believes that half-billion-dollar B2s are necessary, let him get serious about paying for them, not adding them to the next generation's debt.

'Salutes'

A New Forum For Opinion Readers

Do you know someone who's done a good deed or an outstanding job and should be recognized? Is there a person or an organization in your community that deserves a public back pat?

Tell The Daily Reflector about it in 150 words or less and we'll publish it in "Salutes," a new forum for readers of the Opinion page. The column will begin Aug. 4 and will appear on Fridays. It will allow readers to recognize extraordinary efforts by individuals or community organizations. The rules for this new forum are simple:

Submissions to Salutes should consist of no more than 150 words and should spotlight a good deed or job that deserves community note. Longer letters will be cut. Signatures, phone numbers and addresses of authors should accompany all letters.

Space will not allow every letter to be published but all submissions meeting these guidelines will be considered.

Let the newspaper know about good things in your community by writing to Salutes, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27835.

To the editor:

Some of the several things that I learned in two tours on the city council are that it's hard to fight with people who buy ink by the barrel, the Daily Reflector seems never to have the facts straight and there are more horses rears than horses.

I personally know that Lorraine Shinn: the taxpayers friend, presents her commission appointments at the Monday workshop prior to the Thursday council meeting - complete with resumes. How else, as published in the Daily Reflector, could a council member have had a prepared - as in hand when she arrived - statement about the suspect appointees?

This work was done in the historically accepted manner, using the city talent bank. If you check this out you may find she is one of the few. Thanks Mama, for your hard work and straight thinking.

To the editor:

What exactly is the management of the Pitt County Schools trying to accomplish? I wonder?

The recent personnel reassignments were "street" knowledge three weeks before these changes were presented to board members in executive session. Is this fair to the board members?

One of the changes involved placing a new principal at Agnes Fullilove School, a school just for students who have major, complex problems. Since the East Carolina University School of Medicine has just been awarded a large grant and has chosen to work with Agnes Fullilove School, don't you think it would have been courteous to tell the East Carolina University School of Medicine about the change before it came out in the newspaper? The School of Medicine was not told about the change. Also the East Carolina University School of Medicine might want to have planning and training time with the new principal because of the special school population at Agnes Fullilove. Advance notice would have helped in scheduling time.

I would like to see Pitt County Schools' management be governed by a strong sense of integrity, governed by fairness to all board members and governed by courtesy to all of the outside agencies that make such a large contribution to the Pitt County schools.

To the editor:

Recently the City of Greenville approved a price change at the Pitt-Greenville Animal Shelter. In order not to compete with the shelter, the Pitt County Humane Society adjusted its prices accordingly. For a $35 fee you can adopt a kitten or cat and for $50 a puppy or dog. This fee covers the animal's spay/neuter cost at the veterinarian's office.

I have heard some criticism due to this action. Some have said that people won't adopt pets because of the high fee. This may be true for some; however, I feel very strongly that if a person can not or will not pay this fee, then it's doubtful that he will provide the proper medical attention (spaying, neutering, necessary shots, etc.) for the animal.

I commend those who are responsible for this price increase. I have adopted a cat from the Pitt County Humane Society and there learned that during one week approximately 80 kittens and puppies had to be destroyed at the Pitt-Greenville Animal Shelter. The reason for this large figure is due to the fact pet owners have not seen the importance of trying to control the pet population. In other states where these fees have been adopted it has been proven that the animal population has drastically decreased in as little as one year.

If you have a pet or plan to own one, remember this. That pet gets hungry, thirsty and feels pain. If you are not prepared to take care of these needs, you should think twice before accepting this responsibility. If you are planning to take proper care of a pet, please consider adopting from one of these facilities.

Pat Carr
Farmville, N.C.

To the editor:

I am greatly concerned about the recent attempt to buy out the remaining year of the contract of the present superintendent with the Pitt County Schools. Whatever their private problems with the present superintendent, some board members apparently forget that this is the same man who successfully forged system merger, brought in much-needed outside funding for the schools, set up systematic and detailed, long-range financial planning, and directed much-needed facility updates.

Certainly, it is the prerogative of the board of education to exercise its good judgment in obtaining the best personnel possible. It is also in the best interest of Pitt County, however, that no impetuous decisions in matters so important to our children and the growth of our county be made. If they feel that a change is in order, it is in the best interest of the citizens of this county that that change be made in a studied and orderly fashion.

IN THE STATE

AIDS Bill

RALEIGH (AP) — Victims of AIDS would have greater protection from discrimination under a bill tentatively approved 100-5 by the House over objections that it didn't do enough to promote testing for the virus.

Reps. Coy Privette, R-Cabarrus, and Peggy Wilson, R-Rockingham, each offered an amendment designed to increase AIDS testing, but both amendments were defeated after extensive debate Tuesday.

Rep. Sharon Thompson, D-Durham, House sponsor of the Senate-passed bill, said its anti-discrimination provisions would encourage people who might have the AIDS virus to get tested without mandating testing.

"By getting people tested, we will help protect all of us," she said.

The bill would prevent discrimination against AIDS victims for continued employment, housing or public services. It would create the right to sue anyone who engages in discrimination against AIDS victims, but employers still could test applicants for AIDS and could deny employment on the basis of a positive test.

State Dog

RALEIGH (AP) — The Plott hound would become North Carolina's official state dog and it would be a felony to steal a dog under a bill tentatively approved 69-28 by the state House.

Most of the debate on the issue Tuesday was light-hearted, but there were a few howls of protest over increasing the penalty for stealing a dog from a misdemeanor to a 10-year felony.

"I have problems making it a 10-year felony to steal a dog," said Rep. H.M. "Mickey" Michaux, D-Durham.

But Rep. Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe, said that would provide for the same punishment that is currently levied against people who steal cows, pigs and other livestock. He added that even though his dog might be worth only $50, "it would wreck my household if somebody stole that dog out of there."

Drug Cure?

RALEIGH (AP) — Two Jamestown brothers are championing an ambitious program they say could alleviate the nation's drug problems by tapping the buying power of young people.

The program, dubbed "Operation Link," will link merchants offering discount programs to some 36 million students controlling more than $200 billion a year, said Jay Johnson, who crafted the program with his brother, Chris. Students would pay a fee of $2 to $4 for identification cards tied to the program and merchants would pay a "nominal fee" to participate, Jay Johnson said. The money left after absorbing administration expenses would be turned into grants for non-profit drug treatment centers.

"We figure it could generate $30 million for each state every year," Johnson said in a recent interview. "That's more than most states get now from state and federal sources combined."

Bomb Sentence

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — A former member of the White Patriot Party who admitted planting a bomb under his taxicab to gain sympathy was sentenced by a federal judge to six months in prison for possessing an unregistered firearm.

John Michael Vick Sr. of Hope Mills pleaded guilty in May in U.S. District Court in Raleigh. A second charge — manufacturing the same weapon — was dismissed in exchange for his guilty plea, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Christine Dean.

Vick, 29, has been held since his arrest Feb. 17. He will be eligible for release on Aug. 17, Dean said.

Garner Bakery

RALEIGH (AP) — RJR Nabisco Inc. will hold off on construction of a new bakery in Garner, the company said, and state officials say the announcement means the firm still intends to build.

"We continue to look forward to constructing what will be the advanced bakery in the nation and are fully committed to locating in Garner, N.C.," said Ellen R. Mar-ram, president of Nabisco Biscuit Co., on Tuesday. RJR Nabisco is the parent company of Nabisco Biscuit.

Body Found

EDEN, N.C. (AP) — The body of an Eden woman who disappeared from her card shop seven days ago was found Tuesday in an abandoned house, authorities said.

The body of Nan Doyle, 43, was found in a house on N.C. 14 south of Eden after a suspect directed officers there, police said.

Mark Tyror Soyars, 28, and Donald William Campbell Jr., 22, both of Eden, were charged with murder, kidnapping and robbery in connection with the slaying, authorities said.

Victim's Brother Lets Punch Fly In Courtroom As Defendant Smirks

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HIGH POINT, N.C. — A smirk from a convicted murderer apparently set off a courtroom fistfight as family members of the defendant's victim attacked the man after he was sentenced to serve 50 years in prison.

Jeffrey Edgar Tucker, 17, was being led out of a High Point courtroom Tuesday when his victim's brother lunged, punching Tucker in the face and dragging him and a bailiff to the floor.

The ensuing fistfight shattered Superior Court proceedings for the day.

As officials struggled to bring Brian Todd Logan, 24, under control, Logan's mother joined the fray, punching Tucker twice in the chest.

People climbed over chairs to get away, a bailiff got punched and Judge W. Douglas Albright later said he had pounded his gavel so hard he dented the judge's desk.

The fight broke out about 12:30 p.m. after Albright sentenced Tucker for the shooting death of Donald Ray Logan, 32. Tucker pleaded guilty to second-degree murder in June but sentencing had been delayed until Tuesday.

Logan was riding his moped to work the night of Dec. 20, 1988, when he stopped to respond to Tucker and two other men, who were challenging him to fight. Tucker shot Logan several times, according to testimony, and the men left Logan's body in a ditch.

Logan did not know the men, and there apparently was no motive for the shooting other than the challenge to fight by the three men, who had been drinking, according to testimony. The two other men were apprehended the night of the shooting after a failed burglary. They led authorities to Logan's body and named Tucker as the killer.

Members of Logan's family said Tucker smirked at them as he was led out of court, said Det. Lindsay Royal of the High Point Police Department.

After a lunchtime recess, Albright reconvened court to try Brian Logan, his mother and father for criminal contempt of court.

After testimony from court officers, Albright said he regretfully found Brian Logan and his mother, Patricia Logan, guilty.

"It grieves me to be put in this position," Albright said before he sentenced Brian Logan to 30 days in jail and a $500 fine.

"About the last thing I would want to do is punish the family of the deceased before the ink is dry on the paper sentencing his murderer," he said.

But the judge said he could not ignore the incident because of what could have happened if someone had had a gun. "If somebody gets a gun, and Tucker gets killed, that's a lynching. That's what it amounts to,"

Patricia Logan broke down in tears several times as people testified that she had punched Tucker. Tucker never showed any remorse for killing her son, Logan told the judge over and over.

"To come up here and hear all the details and see the man who took my son's life show no emotion and no remorse," she said, her voice trailing off.

As Albright asked her to stand for sentencing, Logan collapsed.

She began to cry again, and Albright delayed sentencing until Sept. 18.

The father, Donald Logan, was found not guilty after several officials testified that he had been trying only to pull his family away from Tucker.

Tucker had no apparent injuries, but a doctor examined him after he complained of a headache, said

Capt. Geraldine Campbell of the Guilford County Jail in High Point.

Cases involving two other people charged in Donald Logan's death had been scheduled for Tuesday, but they were postponed.

Christopher Lawrence Maney, 18, and Steven Anthony Owens, 23, each charged with first-degree murder, provided the evidence against Tucker, Assistant District Attorney Howard "Buzz" Cole said.

CONSTRUCTIVE SEPARATION

Couples experiencing a protracted period of marital dispute frequently make a decision to separate. This does not always have to be a negative move. Many couples become so locked in conflict with each other that they can't begin to identify any points to help make things better. All too often the struggle has become the central focus of the relationship. When one is unable to focus on anything but the negative, a separation with certain clear guidelines can be helpful in putting things in a more realistic perspective. Such guidelines should include:

- a time-limited separation with the goal of discussing the conflict;
- limited communication;
- weekly sessions with an experienced counselor;
- no outside relationships during this period.

Couples who choose to use a separation constructively must not view it as an automatic first step toward divorce. Used toward the goals of defusing conflict and clarifying needs and feelings, a separation can help a couple begin to identify the positive elements of their relationship and minimize the damage that continued blind conflict can cause.

Leaf Marts Open On Higher Note

VALDOSTA, Ga. (AP) — The 1989 tobacco selling season opened on a high note Tuesday with grade prices up as much as $12 per hundred pounds for poorer grades.

Most prices were up $5 to $9 per hundred. Tuesday's sales were 3,761,644 pounds at an average of $142.09 per hundred pounds, according to preliminary figures. The average was up $5.59 per hundred from the opening day last year.

Georgia sales were 2,911,688 pounds at an average of $140.13 per hundred pounds. Florida sales were 849,906 pounds at an average of $148.83 per hundred pounds.

Demand was considered strong at most buying points.

The composition of offerings was improved from last year with more leaf, cutters, and lugs increased with less primings and nondescript appearing on sales floors.

Less tobacco was classified as green. The heavy volume was made up of about 16 percent good quality, 55 percent fair, and 20 percent low quality.

Some bids on various grades, with the comparison to opening day last year, included: c5fp, $148, up $4; p3l, $143, up $5; p4l, $141, up $7; p3f, $145, up $2; p4f, $141, up $4; p5f, $136, up $3; p4g, $139, up $9; n1po, $133, up $12.

Taggarts Show No 'Bitterness'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE (AP) — An attorney for two former aides to PTL founder Jim Bakker said in the wake of their tax-evasion convictions the men were not bitter that Bakker chose not to testify on their behalf.

David and James Taggart were convicted by a federal jury of evading more than $525,000 in federal income taxes on $1.2 million they received from the television ministry.

Bakker invoked his Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination when he was called to the stand last week by the defense. Bakker and former PTL executive vice president Richard Dortch are scheduled to go on trial for wire and mail fraud and conspiracy Aug. 28.

"Obviously we would have preferred it if he testified," said defense attorney Ben Cotten. Cotten said his clients were not bitter at their former boss.

"They recognized he followed his constitutional rights, just like we have," Cotten said. "He's going to face some of the same things we faced in this trial."

A prosecutor said he was not surprised the jury returned a verdict after only five hours of deliberations.

"They didn't need to spend a lot of time looking at the documents," said U.S. Justice Department prosecutor David Brown. "A person can omit $200 (in income) on their tax return but it's hard to miss $1 million."

"Greed doesn't pay, no matter how rich you are you've got to pay your taxes," Brown said.

Brown said he would recommend a stiff sentence. Each Taggart faces a maximum of 25 years in prison and more than $1 million in fines. A tentative sentencing date was set for Aug. 25.

The eight-woman, four-man jury found David Taggart, 32, and his brother, James, 35, guilty on identical charges: conspiracy to impede the IRS in collecting income taxes and filing false tax returns for the years 1984 through 1987.

Brown said the verdict was not a statement about PTL, the televangelism empire started by Jim and Tammy Faye Bakker in the early 1970s. The ministry was well known for the Bakkers' tearful, televised pleas for money.

"It was a statement about David Taggart and James Taggart's obligations to pay their taxes no matter how much they own and what kind of lifestyle they live," he said.

"I think the case turned on the testimony of the defendants — their truthful testimony," Brown said.

The Taggarts joined PTL in 1978 as piano players. By 1980, David Taggart was Bakker's top personal aide. James became the interior designer at PTL's Heritage USA Christian retreat just south of Charlotte.

Both Taggarts were fired when Jerry Falwell took over at PTL in early 1987 following Bakker's resignation.

Police Expand Arsenic Probe

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BURLINGTON, N.C. — The probe into alleged poisonings by a Burlington woman has expanded to a total of eight cases, said investigators.

An investigator with the Burlington Police Department disclosed Tuesday they are looking into three additional deaths in connection to the probe surrounding Blanche Taylor Moore.

Mrs. Moore has been charged with murder in connection to the arsenic deaths of two men and with assault in connection with the poisoning of her husband, the Rev. Dwight Moore, 54. Moore is recovering in a Greensboro rehabilitation center. Investigators also are probing the deaths of another acquaintance and Mrs. Moore's father.

Rev. Kiser died of heart failure in Alamance County Hospital in September 1966 at the age of 62 and authorities exhumed his body last week. The state's chief medical examiner, Dr. John Butts, said he hopes to know today if arsenic caused Kiser's heart to fail.

Lt. Steve Lynch of the Burlington Police Department said Tuesday authorities are looking into the deaths of Joseph Mitchell, Ina Vinson and John Reiber, all of Burlington. Lynch said all were acquaintances of Mrs. Moore.

Mrs. Moore, 56, a retired Burlington grocery clerk, has been in Alamance County Jail without bond since being charged last week in connection with three poisonings. In addition to the poisoning of her husband, she is charged with murder in the 1973 death of her first husband, James Taylor, and in the 1986 death of former boyfriend Raymond Reid.

Mrs. Moore is to be arraigned on the charges Aug. 28.

Mrs. Moore has maintained her innocence and has not been charged in any of the new investigations.

Lynch said police also have upgraded to a full investigation a probe began last week into the death of Mabel Parsons, 61, who worked with Mrs. Moore for 30 years at Kroger stores in Burlington and Greensboro.

Three days after the body of Mrs. Moore's father was exhumed, Burlington police received permission to collect the medical records of Ms. Parsons.

Ms. Parsons died at her sister's home in Burlington of lung cancer on Oct. 12, 1988. She worked with Mrs. Moore for more than 30 years as a cashier for Kroger Co. said Ms. Parsons' sister, Lucille Martin.

Ms. Martin said Mrs. Moore seldom socialized with Ms. Parsons or saw her outside of the store.

"As far as we know, they weren't buddy-buddy. It was more of a work relationship," Ms. Martin said.

Another of Ms. Parsons' sisters, Ruth Nowak, characterized the relationship similarly. But Ms. Parsons' brother, Curtis Parsons, saw it differently.

"I thought they were good friends. I did not see them together that often, but they seemed to have an easygoing relationship," he said.

Alamance County District Attorney Steve Balog said Superior Court Judge J. Milton Read Jr. signed an order Monday granting police permission to collect the medical records of Ms. Parsons.

Oak City Poultry Farmer Cites Low Earning Power

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — An advocacy group contended Tuesday that the U.S. poultry industry, pushing for greater profits, is "maiming workers and poisoning consumers" while forcing chicken farmers to work for less than the minimum wage.

The group released a report by the Institute for Southern Studies in Durham, N.C., at a news conference where poultry farmers, workers in processing plants and consumer advocates each outlined their disputes with the poultry industry.

"The No. 1 problem is that faster production lines are maiming workers and poisoning consumers," said Meredith Emmett, the institute's executive director. "The No. 2 problem is that the profits are not shared with the farmers or employees, nor are they devoted to producing cleaner meat through a safer, slower production process."

The report said big poultry companies have aggressively recruited farmers to produce their chickens, with federal loans providing the capital for the farmers to build the chicken houses.

"In exchange for buying chicken houses, the farmers receive flocks of chicks to raise on company feed, but the terms of their contract can change with each flock, or simply end without notice," Emmett said. "The earnings for a grower with three houses average only $3 an hour."

David Mayer, a poultry grower from Oak City, N.C., said once a farmer takes a government loan to build a chicken house, he is forced to continue raising chickens just to make the loan payments, since the building can be used for no other purpose.

"You can't make the payments if you don't raise chickens," he said. "And if you don't make the payments, you could lose everything you have. That's the pressure they have on you."

The National Broiler Council, an industry trade group, immediately took issue with the report's contention that an epidemic of repetitive trauma diseases is crippling thousands of poultry processing workers who perform the same task repeatedly each day.

The council said in a statement that it has developed guidelines to help companies prevent and reduce repetitive trauma diseases, which it said are occurring in many other industries as well.

"There is no correlation between increased line speeds and increased cumulative trauma injuries," the council said.

The group also disputed the institute's statement that a censored Department of Agriculture report concluded that nearly three-fourths of the chickens processed on the faster production lines are infested with potentially lethal salmonella bacteria.

The council said salmonella bacteria are found on all fresh foods and are destroyed by normal cooking. While technological improvements have speeded up the processing of chickens, the council said, "these improvements have not caused an increase in micro-organisms on poultry."

Since 1960, the institute's report said, the number of companies selling commercially raised chickens or broilers has decreased from 286 to just 48. But the number of chickens sold annually has increased from 1 billion in 1954 to 3 billion in 1972 to 5.5 billion this year.

Broadcast Journalists Decry ABC's Re-Enactment In Network News

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Re-enactments of real-life events, once limited to racy, crime-stopping television shows like "America's Most Wanted," have arrived on network news, startling some eminent broadcast journalists.

By showing a brief re-enactment Friday, ABC's "World News Tonight" has drawn criticism even from some staffers.

"We were wrong with what we did," Sam Donaldson, a veteran ABC correspondent, said in a telephone interview Tuesday.

ABC anchorman Peter Jennings apologized in his Tuesday newscast for the network's failure to identify the segment as a simulation.

The controversy was sparked by an ABC News report using two staged images to intimate that veteran U.S. diplomat Felix S. Bloch had handed a briefcase to a Soviet agent. Bloch has not been charged with any wrongdoing.

Donaldson said ABC's depiction of the alleged transaction easily could have led viewers to "believing that they had actually seen the event. And ... they might say, 'Well, I saw the dirty sonofabitch pass the briefcase ... to a dirty Commie spy.' Well, no, they didn't. They didn't see that at all."

Fred Friendly, a former CBS News president, said: "This fooled everybody. A friend of mine looked at (ABC's Bloch story), and said he had no idea it was a simulation."

In the version of "World News Tonight" seen by most of its nearly 20 million viewers, the 10-second re-created scene was not labeled as staged.

Khashoggi 'Hobbled'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Saudi financier Adnan Khashoggi must post a $10 million bond and wear an electronic monitoring bracelet to get out of jail, a federal judge has ruled.

Khashoggi, who had been a fugitive until his arrest in Switzerland April 18, is charged with helping Ferdinand and Imelda Marcos in the alleged plunder of the Philippine treasury.

He was extradited to New York last week and has been in jail while U.S. District Judge John Keenan in Manhattan considered his bail application.

Keenan's ruling Tuesday granting bail fell on Khashoggi's 54th birthday.

His lawyer, Robert Morvillo, said Tuesday evening he has raised enough money to meet the bail, but that paperwork prevented Khashoggi's immediate release.

Richard Wald, senior vice president of ABC News, defended the network's use of the re-enactment earlier this week. He did say the network made "a terrible mistake" in failing to label them consistently as simulations.

But other news officials said ABC's mistake wasn't just its failure to describe the segment as fabricated, but its decision to use a news re-creation in the first place.

"I think it's very dangerous. I think it was particularly unfortunate that they tried to fake the look of an FBI surveillance film," said Lawrence Grossman, a former NBC News president. "I just don't think the news divisions should be in the business of creating fiction, or fiction based on fact."

"The (broadcasting) techniques are beginning to overwhelm the old standards."

Ed Turner, executive vice president of the Cable News Network, said that CNN doesn't do "theater in the round. We don't do drama with actors."

Said Turner: "There's enough real drama that we don't have to re-create it. ... It is the function of the reporter on the story to tell the tale, to relate the events in narrative fashion, rather than to use some form of dramatic re-enactment to try to sustain viewer interest."

Yet sustaining viewer interest, especially in a tightly competitive television environment, has become crucial.

NBC News' "Yesterday, Today & Tomorrow" will use two news re-creations when the show debuts Aug. 2, and news simulations are among the options being weighed for CBS News' "West 57th," which will be redesigned for the fall with Connie Chung as host.

NBC News President Michael Gartner said Tuesday that "Yesterday, Today & Tomorrow," a prime-time news-oriented program, will use re-enactments only "when there is no existing video or film footage of the events."

Gartner said he "cannot conceive of an example where we would use re-creations or simulations on 'NBC Nightly News.'"

"It's not television journalism," Friendly said. "It's television carnival. ... There are people who have dedicated their lives to the concept that what you see on the air or hear on the radio is what happened, not what got simulated."

Grossman said NBC's "Today" show has already started manipulating stories without other broadcast technologies, adding "mood music" to some news reports for added emotional appeal.

"When you start mucking up reality, even though it may be justified in a particular instance, it really creates a very dangerous pattern," Grossman said.

Defenders of re-enactments liken them to artists' courtroom sketches and animated simulations of lunar landings.

But as Donaldson pointed out in the case of the ABC simulation about Bloch, people "weren't watching an artist who did see it, who said, 'I was there.'"

Ernie Leiser, the former executive producer of Walter Cronkite's newscast, said much depends on how re-enactments are used.

"If it is made clear that it is a simulation, and if it's done because you don't have pictures, and it clarifies the story you're trying to tell, I see nothing wrong with it in principle," he said.

DC-10 Pilot Says There's No Hero

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SIoux CITY, Iowa — A United Airlines pilot declared "there is no hero" in the fiery DC-10 crash in which survivors outnumbered fatalities, and conceded he learned a new way of flying in the final minutes of Flight 232.

"It was just a group of four people who did their job," said Capt. Al Haynes, in his first public comments since the July 19 crash. "It was an unusual circumstance but we put our best resources and knowledge together and did what we felt was best."

Haynes said the flight crew never doubted the stricken jetliner would make it to Sioux Gateway Airport, where the jetliner crash-landed short of a runway, flipped and broke apart. Of the 296 aboard, 185 people survived.

"We must not forget that 111 people perished in this accident. This crew ... is dedicated to finding the cause of this accident so we can maybe never have it happen again," said Haynes, a 33-year United pilot.

Later, he and his wife, Darlene, flew home to Seattle to applause and hugs from family and neighbors outside their small yellow house a few blocks east of Seattle-Tacoma International Airport.

"It's just great to be home," the 57-year-old pilot told a crowd of reporters outside. "If you can give me a few days, maybe we can all get together and talk about this."

United spokesman Rob Doughty said, however, it might be a month or more before the crew would give any interviews.

At Tuesday's news conference, Haynes said he heard a "very loud report" as the DC-10 flew over northwest Iowa on a flight from Denver to Philadelphia via Chicago. He immediately began shutting down the jetliner's No. 2 tail-mounted engine.

"It was very shortly after this that we realized we had more than just an engine failure," said Haynes. "It was apparent to us that we had lost all of our hydraulic fluid."

When he asked flight engineer Dudley Dvorak "for the procedure for that, he said there isn't one. So we made it up as we went along," Haynes said.

The hydraulic systems allow pilots to set key wing and tail panels that control the DC-10's altitude and direction. Without them, the pilot has little control over the airplane other than his throttles.

Aviation experts have credited Haynes with keeping the craft aloft until he reached the airport, where hundreds of emergency workers were waiting.

Asked about passengers who characterized him as a hero, Haynes said: "I'm not so sure I know how to answer that. There is no hero."

Haynes appeared with Dvorak at the news conference, but United officials said in advance that Dvorak would have no comments. Dvorak, 51, returned home to Tacoma, Wash., on Tuesday.

Haynes had scars from the crash on his face and hands in addition to casts on his broken ankles. He appeared relaxed and joked occasionally with the horde of reporters who showed up for the hospital news conference.

He wouldn't answer questions about details of the crash, his suspi-

The Associated Press

Haynes, showing scars on face, talks outside Seattle home

cions of its cause and the reasons for his decisions, citing the ongoing probe by the National Transportation Safety Board.

Investigators are attempting to piece together the tail system in an airport hangar. They theorize that pieces hurled from the engine may have shattered the jets hydraulic lines. The probe, however, has been hampered because key sections of the engine haven't been found.

Despite the damage to the aircraft, Haynes said, the thought of a crash didn't enter his mind as he focused all his attention on the stricken craft.

"I really didn't think about it," he said. "We were just going to go in and land and that's what we tried to do."

Haynes also credited other crew members, co-pilot William R. Records and Denny Fitch, an instructor pilot who works for United but was a passenger on Flight 232. Records and Fitch remain hospitalized.

"We became a four-man crew instead of a three-man crew," said Haynes.

Report Says Individuals Causing Medical Waste

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Most medical waste that washes up on the nation's beaches comes from illegal drug users and individuals, not hospitals, according to a new study.

The Medical Waste Policy Committee said in its report that a federal law that took effect last month won't do much to reduce the used needles, syringes and other medical trash plaguing the nation's shoreline.

Legislators have said the law will prevent a repeat of last summer, when waves of medical waste washed up along popular East Coast beaches.

"Laws and regulations specifically aimed at medical waste, such as the Medical Waste Tracking Act, are unlikely to have a significant effect on the amount of medical waste found on the beaches," said Richard A. Bernstein, head of General Medical Corp. and chairman of the committee.

The problem, Bernstein said, isn't with hospitals but with home health uses, which account for nearly 1 billion syringes annually.

The committee, under the auspices of the Rockefeller Institute of Government at the State University of New York, encouraged public education programs on proper disposal of used medical items.

Bernstein presented the results of the six-month study Tuesday to the House Small Business subcommittee on regulation and business opportunities.

Authors of the measure defended it.

"There is no reason why medical waste shouldn't be tracked in the same way other hazardous waste is tracked. That was a hole in the law," said Jason Isaacsod, spokesman for Sen. Christopher J. Dodd, D-Conn.

Survey Suggests 3,000 Died Prematurely

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A survey of cardiac specialists suggests that as many as 3,000 patients may have died prematurely after taking heartbeat control drugs that were found to increase risk of sudden death among some types of patients.

Dr. Joel Morganroth, professor of medicine at the University of Pennsylvania, said he estimated the toll after surveying 1,000 cardiologists to learn how many prescribed encainide or flecainide for patients who had mild heartbeat irregularities after recovering from a heart attack.

Morganroth, who also is director of cardiac research at Graduate Hospital in Philadelphia, said the estimate of 3,000 premature deaths was a rough number.

"Let's call that the worst scenario," he said.

None of the surveyed doctors were involved in drug trials that tested encainide and flecainide, but the physicians were prescribing the drugs for the same type of patients in the trials.

Encainide and flecainide were approved in 1987 for preventing a type of cardiac arrhythmia that features extra ventricular beats.

A national study of the drugs, called the cardiac arrhythmia suppression trial or CAST, began in June 1987. It was halted abruptly in April when data showed sudden death rates increased among patients taking the drugs.

Morganroth said he conducted a random survey to determine how many premature deaths outside the study could be associated with the drugs.

He said 250 cardiologists responded to his survey, half saying they had prescribed the drugs. Based on these results, Morganroth said he extrapolated the number of premature deaths by factoring in national heart attack death rate statistics and the prescription record for the two drugs.

"Fifteen hundred to 2,000 died, if all the assumptions are appropriate" in the year before the CAST study was revised, he said.

Exxon Will Post $20 Million To Get Tanker Repaired

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN DIEGO — Exxon Shipping Co. agreed to post $20 million and meet other requirements to get its crippled tanker Valdez into dry dock for repairs.

The oil company signed an agreement to comply with state restrictions Tuesday as the damaged tanker underwent continued emergency repair work on the high seas about 56 miles offshore.

The announcement came as the state Assembly's Select Committee on Oil Spill Prevention and Response Preparedness heard testimony in San Diego regarding the ship's status and Exxon's efforts to bring it into dry dock.

The committee was formed after the Valdez hit a submerged reef in Alaska's Prince William Sound and spilled up to 11 million gallons of crude oil.

State officials were concerned about the possibility of a similar spill washing ashore in California.

"The state of California is in the same position as the state of Alaska when they had the (Valdez) accident, and it must be corrected," said Assemblyman Gerald Felando, who visited Alaska in June.

Also Tuesday, Exxon Corp. said it will return to the site of the nation's worst oil spill next year but stopped short of making a commitment to further cleanup.

A July 19 internal memo to Exxon oil spill managers, which was quoted in media reports Monday, suggested that the oil company's cleanup crews would leave Alaska for good after shutting down for the winter.

But at a hastily called news conference Tuesday in Valdez, Alaska, Otto Harrison, general manager for Exxon Valdez operations in Alaska, said that the memo was not intended to "extend to any other phase of our cleanup operations."

During the winter the company plans to conduct scientific studies in Prince William Sound and the Gulf of Alaska, he said. A survey team will return to Alaska in the spring, he added, but declined to say whether the company would mobilize another massive effort to resume the cleanup.

"We'll be here to determine what the condition is and we'll make our decision at that time in consultation with the federal government," Harrison said. "I can't speculate on cleanup in the spring until we make that determination."

The Coast Guard denied the ship entry to San Diego Bay on July 10 because of an 18-mile slick and other discharges. The ship faced navigational problems as well when steel plates separated from the hull during the 2,500-mile trip from Alaska.

The plates cut loose Monday were dangling too deep to negotiate the bay.

Samples from two slicks that coincided with the Valdez's arrival in Southern California waters showed traces of Alaskan North Slope crude mixed with heavy concentrations of marine life now living in the ship's shredded cargo tanks.

But Coast Guard Cmdr. Don Montoro said other preliminary test results showed no toxicity and barely detectable hydrocarbon levels.

"As far as the Coast Guard is concerned, as long as everything else has been put in place, I see no reason why the vessel can't come in to port," he said.

Montoro has the final say on when the Valdez can enter San Diego Bay en route to National Steel and Shipbuilding Co. for a $25 million repair. He said the entry would likely take place between Friday and Sunday.

Pupil Wins Fight Over Dissection

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TRENTON, N.J. — A high school biology student who refused to dissect animals claimed vindication when officials agreed to recalculate her failing grade, but she said her religious beliefs still cause problems at school.

School officials agreed to honor Maggie McCool's beliefs and recalculate her biology grade of a D on Tuesday, hours before an administrative law judge was to begin a trial on the girl's lawsuit.

"I learned that it's worth it, in the end, to act on your convictions," the slight, soft-spoken 16-year-old said.

Miss McCool had charged that the Woodstown-Pilesgrove Board of Education violated her freedom of religion by giving her failing grades for refusing to dissect frogs, worms or a fetal pig in her 10th-grade biology class last year.

Board attorney Michael Jordan said the district decided to settle because Miss McCool probably would have proved at trial that her refusal to cut up dead animals stemmed from sincere religious beliefs. The district also agreed to pay $12,500 in legal fees, which will go to the American Civil Liberties Union.

A federal judge dismissed a similar lawsuit one year ago in California when high school officials agreed to let the student, a vegetarian, use photographs of a frog that was killed by natural causes.

Miss McCool said her battle has not been without its trials, and many classmates have ostracized her because they think her convictions are "weird."

She recounted one incident when a classmate spotted a mouse running across steps outside the school. When he saw Miss McCool was only a few feet away, he ran over and stomped the rodent to death.

"The fact that he took a life to torment me was very upsetting," she said.

Jordan said it was unclear early in the case when Miss McCool first informed her adviser she would not dissect animals and that her objections were grounded in religious convictions.

"We thought we were dealing with a curriculum dispute," he said.

But a lawyer for the girl maintained from the beginning that her spiritual doctrine bars her from harming animals.

"They should have known, absolutely. If they had asked Maggie the question, she would have answered it — that it was a religious belief," said E. Elizabeth Sweetser, her lawyer.

Jordan said that on the eve of the trial, the board voted unanimously to settle the legal fight.

Miss McCool, who will enter the 11th grade at Woodstown High School this year, said she refuses to wear leather or wool or drink milk. She also shuns makeup, which is often tested on animals.

She likens many of her beliefs to those followed in Jainism, an ancient Hindu religion that emphasizes asceticism and reverence for living things, although she does not consider herself a member of the religion.

MAGGIE MCCOOL

Her household has been vegetarian since she was a small child. The rest of the family does not adhere to as strict a system of beliefs, but her father, Joseph McCool, said he and the other family members believe in a doctrine of "harmlessness."

Jordan said that in future cases, the board will accommodate other students who refuse to dissect or observe dead animals based on religious beliefs. But little deference will be given to students who refuse just because they're squeamish.

"If a kid says they don't feel like touching dead worms and fetal pigs, they're going to have to learn to deal with dead worms and fetal pigs. There are very few people who have lived the kind of life Miss McCool has lived, and we feel this is a sincere religious belief," Jordan said.

Even with the recalculation, Miss McCool figures her D grade will only be boosted to a C.

"Science is not her strong suit," Ms. Sweetser said.

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — President Bush announced a plan Tuesday to phase out U.S. steel quotas over the next 2½ years, handing a victory to free-trade forces and disappointing steel industry officials, who had expected to win four more years of protection.

During the remaining period of import restrictions, U.S. trade negotiators will press other nations to eliminate subsidies offered to their domestic steel producers, U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills told reporters. But she left no doubt that Bush planned to end the current steel quota plan in 1992, whether those negotiations succeed or fail.

"The steel industry is now on notice that it has 2½ years to adjust to market forces," Hills said. International steel subsidies have simply "gotten out of line," she said. "The global trading system has suffered long enough from this kind of interference. The self-defeating rivalry in government assistance must end."

Bush's decision is a sharp break with the policies of the Reagan administration, which supported free trade in theory but, in practice, adopted a series of protectionist measures — including the so-called Voluntary Restraint Agreements on steel — to shelter U.S. industries.

The decision also came as a major surprise to steel industry lobbyists. Most had expected Bush to extend the quotas for two years, followed by an additional two-year, phase-out period.

But White House aides feared that extending the program that long would entrench the quotas so much that they would become permanent, according to a source familiar with the deliberations. The Reagan administration adopted the existing quotas in 1984, but the steel industry has been sheltered by some form of import restrictions since 1968.

Within the administration, Secretary of Commerce Robert Mossbacher was said to have urged a longer extension.

Wives Gaining In Incomes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — America's wives are bringing home a lot more of the family bacon than they used to, but still trail their husbands by a wide margin, the Census Bureau reports.

Wives earned just 57 percent of what their husbands brought in as of 1987, although their income had increased nearly twice as fast as the men's during the decade.

Between 1981 and 1987, the average earnings of wives rose 23.3 percent, while husbands' income climbed 11.8 percent, according to the study, "Earnings of Married-Couple Families: 1987."

That brought average income of all wives — including those not employed outside the home — to $13,245 in 1987, compared with $29,154 for all husbands.

A major reason for the gain by women was that "more of them are working year-round, full time, instead of part time," Census statistician Robert W. Cleveland said Tuesday. In past years, he said, women were more likely to accept part-time jobs, resulting in lower average income.

"Also, more women are in professional and technical jobs which tend to have better pay," Cleveland said, adding that one factor in the change is the tendency of women in recent years to pursue more education.

"I think there is more equal treatment, things are not as discriminatory for women. The opportunities are more available for them now than in the past," Cleveland said.

Wives working full time at least 50 weeks per year averaged $18,929 in 1987, only 57 percent of the average $33,005 annual earnings of husbands who worked full time 50 weeks or more.

Recent government statistics for all men and women showed women averaging 65 percent of men's income, somewhat more than the 57 percent for full-time working wives.

Wives are more likely to have to take time off to tend children, or to have delayed careers during child rearing, than women in general.

Indeed, the effect of children may be noted in the incomes of wives by age, as reported in the study.

The most rapid income rise between 1981 and 1987 was among wives aged 35 to 44, who saw their average jump 31.5 percent, more than triple the 9.8 percent increase for husbands in the same age group.

"In that age bracket, the kids are grown, the women can enter the labor force and ... start working full time," Cleveland said.

For all wives, those with no children averaged $14,256 in 1987 compared with $13,067 for women with children aged 6 to 17; $12,163 for those with children under age 6 and just $10,732 for those with children in both age groups.

Husbands averaged $31,636 for those with children aged 6 to 17; while those with some under 6 and some 6 to 17 averaged $29,564. For those with children under 6 average income was $28,181, and it was $27,755 for husbands without children.

While husbands may bring home most of the bacon for a majority of families, that isn't a universal situation.

Sex Scandals Titillating Philippines

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MANILA, Philippines — As Japan reels from a sex scandal that helped topple a prime minister, the "sex-capades" of Philippine lawmakers are providing Filipinos with what has turned into a political soap opera.

On Monday, Japanese Prime Minister Soudsuke Uno announced he will resign over his party's loss of 33 upper house seats, due in part to published reports alleging Uno had kept several paid mistresses.

Meanwhile, Philippine newspaper and radio commentators have been titillating their audiences for weeks with rumors of affairs by their own senators and members of the House of Representatives.

The only casualty so far has been Sen. Orlando Mercado, who resigned this month as Senate majority leader after rumors that he was involved in a sex scandal. Mercado denies the allegation.

Mercado's resignation followed newspaper reports that an undisclosed senator had impregnated the daughter of an upper house colleague.

On Friday, columnist Julie Yap Daza wrote in the Manila Standard that according to the latest rumor, an unnamed woman senator was having an affair with her chauffeur.

That ranked the two women in the 28-member Senate: Sen. Leticia Ramos-Shahani and Sen. Santanina Rasul, both well into middle-age.

They demanded an investigation by the Senate ethics committee to put a stop to the rumors.

According to another rumor, the chauffeur of a prominent male senator quit his job because of the pressure of trying to keep track of his bosses' multiple mistresses.

In a Roman Catholic country that forbids divorce, keeping mistresses, referred to here as "second wives," is not uncommon. Some prominent figures make little attempt to hide their "second wives."

But some commentators fear the rumors cheapen the government institutions, which were supposed to have elevated political life after the 1986 ouster of President Ferdinand Marcos.

The obsession with sex scandals also distracts public and legislative attention from pressing national problems such as poverty, the communist insurgency and the breakdown in law and order.

"The point is that sex gossip about Congress members have become conversation pieces no longer because of their serious moral implications but for their comic relief," wrote Hern Zenarosa in the Philippines Journal.

Senate President Jovito Salonga has resisted an investigation into his colleagues' sex lives. The Constitution provides for censure of congressmen guilty of "disorderly behavior."

Salonga suggested that whatever happens in the bedroom "cannot be considered disorderly except by your mate."

The rumors are fueled by a practice in Philippine newspapers of printing thinly veiled accusations, often with no source at all for the information.

Such allegations rarely include names. Nonetheless, they are often accepted as gospel by a public that still distrusts government after 20 years of misrule under Marcos.

Who is that ranking congressman who regularly takes his girlfriend via government-owned helicopter to an island mountain resort," wrote columnist Emil Jurado in The Manila Standard.

Would you believe that an illegitimate son of a ranking member of Cory's (President Corazon Aquino) Cabinet has been appointed to a very juicy position in his father's department," he added.

Walesa Says He'll Form Own Cabinet

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WARSAW, Poland — After rejecting President Wojciech Jaruzelski's offer to join a governing coalition, Solidarity leader Lech Walesa said he intends to form a shadow Cabinet and prepare for "inevitable" control of the government.

He said he told Poland's Communist chief during a two-hour meeting Tuesday that the "bold solution" to Poland's leadership crisis would be for the ruling Communists to let the free trade union movement govern.

Solidarity-backed candidates won all but one of the seats they were allowed to contest in June parliamentary elections.

Walesa said "everything indicates" the Communists are still unwilling to surrender power to the popular movement they tried to crush in December 1981 with martial law.

"For my part, I intend to form a shadow Cabinet to prepare for the solution that sooner or later will become inevitable," he said in making public a statement he gave Jaruzelski.

Walesa said his private talks with Gen. Jaruzelski were "very interesting" but did not produce any agreement.

He said Jaruzelski, who has led the country for eight years as Communist Party first secretary and was elected by parliament last week to the newly powerful presidency, has not yet decided what government to nominate.

Walesa said he would not stand in the way of Solidarity members accepting appointments as government ministers, but that they would be acting as individuals.

He told reporters the union fears it would not have enough strength within a governing coalition to force through its own policies, but would be held accountable by the public for government decisions anyway.

"We are remaining an opposition that will ensure that the government does not leave the path of reforms," Walesa told a brief news conference.

He added: "It will be more comfortable for us in the opposition because we will focus on making sure that the path of reforms is kept, and not on other things for which we are not yet mature."

Tuesday was not the first time Communist authorities had asked Solidarity to join a governing coalition.

The government negotiated Solidarity's April reinstatement, many believe, because it desperately needs to cooperation of the opposition if it is to revive the country's crippled economy.

Inflation is running at 160 percent and Poles are beset by worsening shortages of food and other consumer goods.

In June, Solidarity won 99 out of 100 seats in the freely elected Senate but was allowed under the April accords to contest just 35 percent of the 460 seats in parliament's more powerful lower house, the Sejm.

Walesa referred to Solidarity's electoral victory when asking for control of the government.

Solidarity lawmakers were to meet today to discuss the next government.

Pope Names Four Czech Bishops

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II today appointed four bishops in Czechoslovakia, marking another breakthrough in Vatican relations with the Soviet bloc.

The appointments were made after years of negotiations with Czechoslovakia's Communist government, which maintains rigid controls on organized religion. The Vatican estimates that 60 percent of Czechoslovakia's 15 million people are Catholic.

The pope's special envoy for Eastern Europe, Archbishop Francesco Colasuonno, took part last week in the latest in a series of talks in Czechoslovakia.

The announcement came a day after the papal appointment of the first bishop in the Soviet republic of Byelorussia in more than 60 years and the recent re-establishment of diplomatic relations with Poland.

"These appointments do not mean that everything has been resolved for the church in Czechoslovakia. We are still in the initial stages," said deputy Vatican spokesman, the Rev. Giovanni D'Ercole.

Appointed were Monsignor Jan Sokol, 55, promoted from apostolic administrator of Trnava to archbishop of that city; the Rev. Josef Koukl, 62, a theology professor, as bishop of Litomerice; the Rev. Frantisek Tondra, 53, a parish priest, as bishop of Spis; and the Rev. Frantisek Vanak, 73, a parish priest, as apostolic administrator of Olomouc.

A written statement by D'Ercole said Vanak has all the powers of a residential bishop and is expected to be given the rank of archbishop soon.

With the appointments, the church has now filled six of the 13 dioceses with bishops.

The pope has often lamented the lack of bishops and the advanced age of church officials who are led by 90-year Cardinal Frantisek Tomasek, the archbishop of Prague.

D'Ercole said negotiations are continuing to fill all the posts. "We hope this is a question of months and not years," he said.

The Vatican has refused to appoint any bishop who is a member of the government-sponsored organization of clergy called Pacim in Terris, and the D'Ercole said none of the four appointed today belonged to it.

In the first step forward in 15 years, the pope named three bishops in May 1988 but none held the rank of residential bishop.

The papal envoy, Colasuonno, has been negotiating with Vladimir Janku, head of the government's religious affairs office.

SEOUL, South Korea — Heavy rains drenched South Korea's southern coast, spawning floods and mudslides that killed at least 36 people and forced thousands from their homes, officials said today.

Another 50 people were reported missing in the flooding, which disrupted air, land and sea travel, the National Disaster Center said.

South Korean newspapers, gathering their own statistics, reported at least 93 people killed or missing and more than 55,000 people driven from their homes.

Most of the homeless were taken to schools, churches and other makeshift shelters and the government rushed in blankets, food and other relief supplies, the officials said.

Flooding Leaves 36 Dead In S. Korea

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

By this evening, up to 17.2 inches of rain had fallen in a two-day period, the center said. Center officials said 34,500 people were homeless because of flooding.

The disaster center said 7,880 homes and buildings were inundated or destroyed and estimated losses from damaged crops, highways and other public facilities at $15 million.

Most of the homeless were taken to schools, churches and other makeshift shelters and the government rushed in blankets, food and other relief supplies, the officials said.

Activists Want To End Death Penalty Before China Takes Over Hong Kong

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HONG KONG — Human rights activists say their campaign to abolish the death penalty when this British territory is handed back to China has a new sense of urgency after Beijing's executions of pro-democracy protesters.

"We certainly are intensifying our efforts," said Andrew Stables, a former chairman of the local Amnesty International branch.

Amnesty today submitted a petition to local lawmakers urging the abolition of capital punishment, saying that events in China had heightened concern of local residents over the issue.

"It doesn't require too much imagination to think of possibilities" of abuse of the death penalty in Hong Kong after 1997, when the colony reverts to Chinese sovereignty, Stables said.

Murder and treason are capital crimes under Hong Kong law, but the colonial governor has commuted all of the more than 230 death sentences since 1966 — usually to life imprisonment — because executions are not allowed in Britain.

When Hong Kong is returned to China, laws previously enforced in the territory will be kept on the books. While capital punishment may remain, there is no guarantee the automatic commutation of sentences will continue.

"After 1997, we are not sure whether this tradition (of commutation) can be respected," said Rev. Louis Ha, spokesman for the local Catholic Church, which has long opposed the death penalty.

What human rights campaigners find particularly worrisome is, in the words of Stables, the "fairly liberal use" of the death penalty in China.

Several dozen executions are known to have occurred in China since the pro-democracy movement was crushed by troops June 3-4, but Beijing authorities have linked just 12 of those reported to the protests.

Many Chinese believe the number is far higher.

Hong Kong government officials say they have not removed the death penalty statute because the public supports the law. They claim there is no evidence that recent executions in China have swayed local opinion.

"So far we haven't seen any change in the mood yet," said Nancy Law, a top official in the government Security Branch, although acknowledging that no survey has been done.

Ngai Shiu-kit, a member of the lawmaking Legislative Council, says he remains a staunch supporter of the death penalty and believes executions should resume in Hong Kong, where more than 100 people were put to death from 1946-66.

"There's an old Chinese saying, 'Blood for blood,'" Ngai said. "We must maintain this severe punishment ... to maintain law and order."

He said he believes the death penalty for murder should be kept after 1997, although he seemed less certain about executions for treason.

Other Hong Kong residents may be questioning their earlier support of the death penalty.

"Whatever one's view about morality or the efficacy of the death penalty, I think it would be naive to believe that Hong Kong people would not have revised their opinions in the last few months," said Raymond Wacks, head of the Law Department at the University of Hong Kong.

Wacks noted that since the bloody Chinese crackdown, Hong Kong people have been preoccupied with seeking the right to live in Britain and securing passports to other countries.

He expressed surprise that there has been little debate about retaining the death penalty, but believes interest will pick up. "I suspect this is just one of many issues that will be discussed in the next few months," he said.

Perhaps the death penalty will generate more interest when the government unveils later this year a Bill of Rights for Hong Kong, one of the actions being taken to restore confidence in the colony.

Stables said Amnesty International will urge that the document outlaw capital punishment in the territory.

PLO Is Ready For Peace Plan

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM — The PLO is ready to accept Israel's plan for elections in the occupied lands if the government agrees to certain conditions, including the principle of trading land for peace, legislators said today.

The new PLO position is a considerable softening of the organization's earlier policy of rejecting the peace plan unless Israel first withdraws its forces from the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Lawmaker Avraham Burg of the left-leaning Labor Party said Israel learned of the PLO's latest views from a U.S. government document outlining the organization's reaction to Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's election plan.

The document was relayed to Israel by Soviet envoy Gennady Terasov, who met an aide to Vice Premier Shimon Peres this week in Paris, said an Israeli official who insisted on anonymity.

Another Labor legislator, Aryeh Eliav, said the PLO's positions were also relayed by two aides to PLO chief Yasser Arafat during a conference in Vienna this month.

"At this conference, I definitely heard from the PLO representatives that they are ready for elections if Israel will say in one way or the other that at the end of the process, Israel is ready to trade territories for peace," Eliav told The Associated Press. "They said this very clearly."

On Tuesday, a pro-PLO Palestinian lawyer, Jamil Tarifi, said he had met with Shamir to discuss the plan. Shamir has denied meeting with pro-PLO Palestinians.

Leftist legislator Yossi Sarid said Tarifi was a PLO member. Tarifi refused to say if he was a PLO member.

Tarifi said he told Shamir to deal with the PLO.

"The PLO will accept it (the plan), or it will not be acceptable to the Palestinian people," he said he told Shamir.

Shamir maintains the government has no contacts with the PLO, but a leading Labor Party official said today Israel already was negotiating indirectly with it.

"The fact that there are negotiations on this subject with the PLO is clear and it has one aim, to get a green light from the PLO for elections in the territories," Yossi Beilin, an aide to Labor Party leader Shimon Peres, said on Israel army radio.

He said the contacts were through the United States, Egypt and Romania.

Shamir's right-wing Likud bloc opposes the land-for-peace formula and allowing Arabs in east Jerusalem to vote. The left-leaning Labor Party accepts those conditions.

Israel's peace initiative calls for electing Palestinians in the occupied territories to negotiate with Israel on an interim self-rule plan, with talks to be held later on the final status of the territories.

He said the contacts were through the United States, Egypt and Romania.

against her will (and) committed the offense of rape," he said. "Quite frankly, I don't know what to do with these young men ... Right now, I've got their lives right here in my hand."

He said the character witnesses showed that all parties involved come from fine families and solid backgrounds.

"Any time a person accused of a crime can get a District Court judge to cancel court and come to this court and be a character witness, voluntarily, that's unheard of in this type of business," he said.

In sentencing, he told both men that the could take their punishment in two ways. They could drop out of society, or they could remain competitive and work to lead productive lives.

"I hope that you will rebound from this thing in your life, that you will become a proud citizen," he told Moye. "A lot of people are counting on you ... You came so close. Then you fell."

The judge said Moye's jail sentence would begin at 6 p.m. today. Butterfield also delayed the start of Dixon's prison term to 9 a.m. on Aug. 4. Dixon was sentenced as a Committed Youthful Offender, which will allow him to become eligible for parole earlier than persons sentenced as adults.

Butterfield said he was giving Dixon the delay so that Dixon could spend time with his family and get his attitude straight before entering prison.

"I want you to get your attitude right to begin your sentence ...," he said. "I believe one day he's (Dixon) going to make us all proud of him."

Prior to the sentencing, Public Defender Robert Shoffner, counsel for Dixon, read from a transcript of a District Court probable cause hearing in which the girl testified that she had earlier written letters to Dixon indicating she would be willing to have sex with him. She testified at that hearing she had been teasing Dixon, Shoffner said.

But Assistant District Attorney Joe Blick said the girl had been violated in the worse sense, and any earlier communications regarding sex did not mean Dixon could force her to have sex.

"That was talk. It takes two to have sex," he said. "I don't know that anybody can display to you (Butterfield) what happened to this woman ... You can't call it anything but a rape."

In The Area

Dream Factory

The Dream Factory of North Carolina granted its third dream on July 19 as Latoyia Cowell of Elizabeth City paid a visit to Disney World in Orlando, Fla.

"Latoyia, who is 10 years old, was critically burned in a house fire five years ago and still faces extensive corrective surgery," said Kyle Braswell, area coordinator of The Dream Factory.

Established last November, the organization helps fulfill dreams and wishes of seriously ill children in North Carolina from ages 3 to 18 years old.

"Dream wishes are offered to children in this age group who have a chronic disease and have endured difficult times, require special care or suffer from a life-threatening condition," Braswell said.

The new Belk store, which opened this morning at The Plaza, had a preview Sunday evening which benefited The Dream Factory.

IRS Deadline

Taxpayers who requested an automatic extension to file their federal income tax returns are reminded that their filing deadline is midnight Aug. 15, said John E. Burke, district director of the Internal Revenue Service.

"We received fewer requests for extensions of time to file a return this year," Burke said. "Over 115,000 North Carolina taxpayers needed additional time to complete their tax returns compared to 125,000 last year."

Burke said those who fail to file by the Aug. 15 deadline will face a failure to file penalty plus a penalty and interest on whatever tax may also be due.

He said if someone needs additional time, Form 2688, "Application for Additional Time to File" is available. For the application to be approved, the form must be filed timely and show reasonable cause why the time is needed.

Additional information about filing tax returns can be obtained by calling the IRS toll-free number, 1-800-424-1040.

Estonian Russians Halt Plants

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — Ethnic Russians stopped operations at 19 industrial plants in Estonia today and held protest meetings about legislation they say favors the republic's ethnic Estonian majority, strikers and news reports said.

The walkouts, which began at seven plants on Tuesday, escalated as Soviet officials ended a potentially disastrous strike by roughly half the nation's 1 million miners.

As many as 25,000 workers in Estonia stopped working, halting operations at enterprises from electronics plants to a defense industry factory, said Yevgeny Kolekhnik, chairman of the strike committee at the Baltic Shipyard in Tallinn, the Estonian capital.

Tens of thousands of workers attended protest meetings this morning, said Yaroslav Tolstikhov, head of the economics section at Soviet-skaya Estoniya, Tallinn's Russian-language Communist Party daily.

"Thousands, tens of thousands of people took part. It's hard to say just how many," Tolstikhov said in a telephone interview.

"The strike isn't having a great economic impact," he added. "It is mostly psychological." Many Tallinn industries are closed for routine summer vacations.

Strikers are complaining about a proposed law requiring that people live in the republic two years before they can vote, according to Rahve Haal and Sovetskaya Estoniya, two Communist Party dailies in Estonia.

They see the law as one more Estonian assertion of power. In 1988, thousands of ethnic Russians migrated to Estonia because the republic enjoys a higher living standard than other parts of the Soviet Union. Therefore, the law making people wait before voting would primarily affect them.

The Estonian strike comes as more miners returned to work. They began striking July 11 and the unrest eventually closed mines from the Ukraine to the Arctic.

Miners began returning to work Thursday after officials agreed to most of their demands, including increases in deliveries of meat and soap and rights to share management of their industry.

Many miners who had refused to return went back Tuesday after President Mikhail S. Gorbachev and Premier Nikolai I. Ryzhkov signed a letter guaranteeing pay raises.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market got off to an indecisive start today amid disappointment about recent corporate earnings reports and uncertainty about the economy's health.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials declined 6.45 to 2,576.63 by 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Advancing issues held a narrow lead over declines on the New York Stock Exchange, with 487 up, 405 down and 551 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 26.5 million shares after the first 30 minutes of trading.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks dipped 0.06 to 186.04. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index headed up 0.52 to 370.64.

Numerous companies have released second-quarter results lately that have fallen short of, or merely matched, analysts' expectations.

After the first half hour of trading, Ford Motor topped the list of actively traded NYSE issues and was up 1/4 to 50.

The second most heavily traded issue was Unisys, the Big Board's most active issue Tuesday. Unisys perked up a bit, rising 1/4 to 20 1/2, after losing 1 1/2 in the previous session.

satisfactory treatment alternative exists.

Under the process, Burroughs Wellcome will make EXOSURF Pediatric available free of charge to appropriate hospitals nationwide as they complete the necessary documentation.

EXOSURF was invented by Dr. John Clements of the University of California at San Francisco and is being developed, tested and manufactured by Burroughs Wellcome. The company's clinical trials began in 1986 and, to date, have involved 50 hospitals in the United States and Canada and about 3,000 premature infants.

Conventional treatment for RDS involves placing infants on mechanical ventilators that force high oxygen concentrations into the lungs, a process that can itself damage the lungs. Some premature babies with RDS require several months of treatment in an intensive care nursery with ventilators and oxygen before they can breathe on their own.

Flag Bill Rushed

"Keeping the constitutional amendment from a vote is going to come back soon enough to haunt those who made the decision," because a statute would never work, Sensenbrenner argued.

Committee debate brought out strong views on both sides of the issue.

Rep. George Crockett, D-Mich., said he thought the Supreme Court was correct when it protected flag burning as a means of protest.

It was only an issue in Congress, he said, because the flag was used as a weapon by Bush in the 1988 campaign and Democrats were "running scared whenever the question of the flag has been raised."

But Rep. Chuck Douglas, R-N.H., said the American people were demanding action and the Democrats claiming they were protecting the First Amendment by blocking a constitutional amendment reminded him of repression in Poland and Hungary.

"Those who scream First Amendment the loudest are the one's shutting off debate," he said.

The Democratic-controlled committee's meeting today was cut short because the House Republican leadership has refused, unless a constitutional amendment is also voted upon, to waive a rule barring committees from voting on bills

An alumnus of Oxford Orphanage in Oxford, Mr. Thorne had lived for many years in Farmville. He had been a farmer and an employee of Rouse Printery. A 32nd degree Mason, he was a member of Farmville Masonic Lodge No. 517 and the First Baptist Church of Farmville.

Surviving are his wife, Josephine Avery Thorne; a daughter, Frances Fisher of Greenville; two sons, Johnny Thorne of Farmville and Leonard F. Thorne of Raleigh; a brother, Cecil Thorne of San Diego; 10 grandchildren, and six great-grandchildren.

The family will receive friends at the Farmville Funeral Home from 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. today. In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to Oxford Orphanage or the First Baptist Church of Farmville.

U.N. May Create Program To Cut Loss In Disasters

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Scientists are about to embark on a worldwide program that could save millions of lives by better preparing people for inevitable geological catastrophes.

Contending that good engineering is only slightly more expensive than bad engineering, Frank Press, president of the National Academy of Sciences, says he expects the United Nations to approve a program by the end of this summer that could greatly reduce the loss of property and lives during a major earthquake or volcanic eruption.

He noted that an earthquake in Chile in the 1970s that killed only 150 people was almost identical to a quake in China that killed 250,000. The only difference, he said, was in the quality of construction.

Similarly, a volcano in Colombia killed 25,000 people, though the more energetic eruption of Mount St. Helens killed fewer than 100. The difference, he said, was advance warning and evacuation.

Under the U.N. program, which will involve scientists from 140 countries, teams of experts will be sent to Third World countries to train people on all aspects of hazards reduction.

Press and several other scientists attending the International Geological Congress held earlier this month in Washington said the program is desperately needed because time could be running out.

"The vulnerability of the world is growing," Press said, because more and more people are clustering in "megacities," many of which are in areas of extreme geological hazards. Press said he was shocked when engineers returned from Armenia after that country's devastating earthquake last year with reports of deplorable building standards.

Press said engineers have determined that it costs only about 10 percent more to build structures that can withstand earthquakes, although in some Third World areas where better materials are scarce the price may be slightly higher.

The problem is not limited to underdeveloped nations, however. Even modern, highly industrialized countries like Japan could face a grim future.

Press said Japanese officials have determined that a major quake close to Tokyo — which he said will surely happen someday — could cost that country up to $1 trillion. That, he suggested, could lead to the "collapse of the world economy" because Japan would be forced to return its resources to the homeland.

What makes the matter particularly troubling is the inevitability of geological disasters, including volcanic eruptions, on a scale that has not been seen by the modern, heavily populated world.

"We haven't had a really big volcanic eruption," said William Fyfe of the University of Western Ontario, director of the International Geosphere-Biosphere Program. He said that some volcanoes are capable of erupting with a force 1,000 times greater than Mount St. Helens.

Even some volcanoes in Japan are probably capable of such a blast, and because of the country's dense population, "if you put a big bang over Japan, half of Japan will die," Fyfe added.

Although the impact of a major earthquake is fairly localized, a volcanic eruption can affect distant areas, and possibly the entire world.

One of the most serious dangers lies in the tons of ash spewed into the atmosphere by the eruption. Any volcanic cloud would be expected to lower temperatures a few degrees over a wide area, greatly reducing crop yields.

"You can wipe out an entire crop for a full year over an entire country," even from a fairly modest eruption, noted Christopher Newhall, a volcano expert with the U.S. Geological Survey.

Newhall said the volcanic island of Iwo Jima is "quite rapidly in geologic time," and it is capable of an eruption of immense power.

"Two Jima may lower global temperatures by several degrees," he said. "That will have a tremendous effect on food production."

No one is suggesting that it may be possible to prevent such an eruption, but an adequate forewarning could mitigate the consequences, scientists contend. Press, for instance, said it should be possible to monitor volcanoes from orbiting satellites, providing a global warning system of when an eruption is likely to occur. That might provide the necessary lead time to stockpile food, and it would at least give people a chance to get away.

Hearing Tests Set For Senior Citizens

Electronic Hearing Tests will be given Friday, Monday and Tuesday.

Factory trained Hearing Aid Specialists will be at the Beltone office in Greenville to perform the tests.

Anyone who has trouble hearing is welcome to have a test using modern equipment to determine if his or her loss is one which may be helped. Some of the causes of hearing loss will be explained and diagrams of how the ear works will be shown.

Everyone should have a hearing test at least once a year if there is any trouble at all hearing clearly. Even people now wearing a hearing aid or those who have been told nothing could be done for them should have a hearing test and find out if they are one of the many new technology can help.

The free hearing tests will be given Friday, July 28th, Monday, July 31st and Tuesday, August 1st, from 9:00 a.m. until 5:00 p.m. at the Beltone Hearing Care Center, 1716 West Fifth Street, Greenville. Appointments not necessary. To avoid waiting, call 758-4334 for an appointment.

Washington Aide Calls Byner Trade 'Best Ever'

Former Pirate Impresses New Redskin Teammates

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CARLISLE, Pa. — It didn't take the Washington Redskins long to find out that Earnest Byner brought more with him from Cleveland than simply a good pair of hands and the ability to run over a would-be tackler.

"He has a great work ethic, can play a number of positions and he's a heckuva character guy. He adds a lot of enthusiasm to our football team," said assistant head coach-offense Joe Bugel. "All our players have great respect for him."

Byner was often revered by his teammates in Cleveland, too, having amassed 2,136 yards in offense over the past two years. But Browns officials decided that his shortcomings in the playoffs — including a crucial fumble in the closing seconds against Denver two years ago — made him expendable.

As a result, the Browns sent Byner to Washington on draft day last April in exchange for running back Mike Oliphant. After watching Byner catch pass after pass in training camp, Bugel has little doubt as to which team got the better of the deal.

Byner played his collegiate football at East Carolina University.

"That was the best trade the Redskins have made since I got here nine years ago," Bugel declared on Tuesday.

Byner is 26 years old and has played in 72 NFL games, but he has displayed the exuberance of a rookie through his first two days of training camp.

"I was looking forward to coming to camp and getting the season started more this year than the last three or four years," he said. "I guess the transition has really made it exciting again."

Although he scored 15 touchdowns in the past two seasons, Byner's playoff mistakes were often cited as the principle reason Cleveland never made it to the Super Bowl. Naturally, he doesn't see it that way.

"If they want to make me a scapegoat, let 'em do it," he said. "But I know my contribution has been positive."

Thus, he has no intention of exorcising his memories of Cleveland.

"I haven't closed the book on anything because it was a good part of my life," he said. "I don't plan to give away any of my Cleveland paraphernalia."

Byner is spending the early part of training camp learning the H-back position, which mainly involves running pass routes from the tight end slot. Later, he'll be asked to study another chapter of the playbook: running back.

"He's got a challenge here," said Redskins coach Joe Gibbs. "He's probably going to have to learn more than anybody on our football team other than the quarterback. But he's extremely bright and very conscientious, and so far he's taken

ECU Cagers To Host Yugoslavs

East Carolina will be one of eight stops on a men's basketball foreign exchange tour by the Yugoslavian Red Star squad in November.

The exhibition series, which begins November 8 at American University, will make a stop at each Colonial Athletic Association campus. The Yugoslavians visit East Carolina November 14.

"We are looking forward to hosting the Red Star squad in November," said CAA Commissioner Tom Yeager. "The educational and cultural experience the players will derive from such a good will exchange are unlimited. It will be a tremendous experience for the conference and its member institutions."

In return for their eight games in the United States, the Yugoslavians will host a series of exhibition games vs. a group of CAA All-Stars in the summer of 1990.

In addition to the men's basketball tour, the CAA released a list of dates for its 1989-90 championships. Beginning in 1990, the league will increase the number of its championship sports to 14 with the addition of men's and women's track and field.

William and Mary is tentatively scheduled to host the first track and field championship in mid-April.

In addition to track and field, sites were selected for the CAA's baseball and women's basketball championships. UNC-Wilmington will host the baseball championship in 1990 while East Carolina will be the host in 1991.

West Rallies To Top East

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

GREENSBORO — Things didn't go well early for the West, but thanks to a late-game role reversal, it didn't matter.

After trailing the East during each of the first three quarters of the McDonald's East-West All-Star basketball game, the West changed its luck in the final period and rallied for a 93-86 win Tuesday night.

In the girls' game earlier Tuesday night, Parade All-America guard Danyel Parker scored 30 points to lead the East to a 69-63 win over the West.

Boys' game Most Valuable Player Harvey Petty of Shelby Crest came off the bench to score a game-high 22 points and keyed the fourth-quarter run that got the West back into the game.

"He didn't look all that well in practice," West coach Tommy Cole said of Petty. "But he came up fine when he got hot."

"When we had a time out (late) I substituted for him. When he came out, I told him he was the reason we were back in it. He kept slapping me five and told me to put him back in so he could finish the job."

The East led by four early in the final period, but Cole put in Petty, along with Robert Gaines and point guard Paul Childress, an ECU signee. Childress settled down the team's offense and finished with a game-high nine assists.

"When you're playing with athletes like Donnie Seale and Steve Rivers who are going to places like N.C. State and Tennessee, the only thing you need to do is get them the ball and get out of the way," Childress said.

"I figured it out by the end of the game. After I got one (shot) blocked, they sort of reminded me."

Childress quickly fed Ethan Albright for a bucket with 7:16 to go pull the West within two at 73-71.

After an East basket, Childress hit Gaines inside to again make it a two-point game at 75-73.

After that, though, Petty took over. He tied the game at 75-75 with two free throws and then put his team ahead to stay with a 3-pointer with 5:52 remaining. Gainey added another two points for a 80-77 edge. The closest the East got the rest of the way was two points.

That came after William Ellison recovered his own blocked shot and put it in with 2:55 left to make it 85-83.

"I (still) felt like we had a chance," East guard Ronnell Peterson of Ayden-Grifton said. "But we started taking bad shots."

The East's final quarter was in sharp contrast to its first three quarters of play, when the team jumped out to a quick lead and led by as many as eight points on a couple of possessions.

"We started missing some shots, we stopped playing good defense," East coach Tommy Day said. "They couldn't hit anything early, and we got the lead. All of a sudden, in the fourth quarter, we lost our shooting touch and they got theirs."

Both teams shot under 40 percent in the first half, but the East was

At The East-West Games:

GREENSBORO — West guard Paul Childress didn't get one vote as the Most Valuable Player, but he played as big a part in his team's come-from-behind 69-63 win over the East as anybody Tuesday in the McDonald's All-Star basketball game.

Childress, an Albemarle star who will play for ECU next year, started the game, but was on the bench as the fourth quarter opened.

In his stead was 6-0 Bartlett-Yancey guard Louis Williamson.

But in a few minutes, the 5-10 Childress was back in the game, and he assisted on two straight key baskets that put the West in a position to tie the game and eventually earn the win.

Childress is listed at 5-10 and 145 pounds. He's more like 5-7 and 135 with a buzz haircut that would make a drill sergeant happy.

But on the court, he more than held his own against the likes of 6-3 All-State guard Arriel McDonald of Athens Drive. And his play down the stretch made the difference, in a quiet way, for the West team.

Childress ended up with only two points, but he had a game-high nine assists and no turnovers in 25 minutes of playing time. He controlled the offense and constantly kept the ball moving.

"His main job was to control the floor, control the other four scorers," West coach Tommy Cole said.

His play also didn't escape the notice of the East's D.J. Morgan, who will be a teammate of Childress' next year at ECU.

When asked about the play of number 11 after the game, Morgan said, "Is Paul the little short guy? He's a good guard. We didn't have anybody that could handle (i.e. rattle) him."

Working Overtime

Cole said he thought two-a-day practices were a tough, but a necessary part of preparing for Tuesday's All-Star game. Childress, though, did him one better.

"We had our banquet last night and it was over about 8:30 p.m.," Cole said. "We go back to the hotel and me and my wife are getting ready to go out with some other people."

"I hear a ball bouncing in the parking lot and I go out there and it's Paul Childress. He's out there bare-backed, in shorts and sneakers, and he's going full blast."

"He's practicing moves and working on his dribbling. About Paul Childress, you won't find anybody who works any harder. They say he's 5-10. If he's taller than 5-7, I'll kiss him."

New Role For Peterson

During this past high school basketball season, Ronnell Peterson was the do-it-all guy for Ayden-Grifton.

He played just about every position for his team, rarely got a breather and produced time and again.

During Tuesday's East-West game, Peterson found himself in an odd spot — on the bench when the game started.

"It's kind of hard coming off the bench," Peterson said after scoring nine points in the East's 93-86 loss. "It's hard to get adjusted. In the second half, I got (more) relaxed."

Peterson will play for Louisburg Junior College next year, after narrowing his choices to the Hurricanes and Chowan.

Barrett Happy For Chance

Farmville Central's Reggie Barrett scored only two points in the East-West game, but they were two to remember.

After a West turnover early in the first quarter, Barrett took a lead pass to

Coastal Plains Win State Title

By Mike Grizzard

WINTERVILLE — "We're going to Georgia!"

That was the reaction of an ecstatic Patrick Joyner after he and his Coastal Plains teammates blitzed Albemarle 11-6 Tuesday night at D.H. Conley to seize the Eastern North Carolina Babe Ruth (ages 16-18) state championship and land a berth in the Southeastern Regionals in Marietta, Ga. beginning August 4.

Coastal Plains, with players from Greenville Rose, North Pitt, Ayden-Grifton, Washington and Conley, captured the title by reeling off six consecutive wins after falling to Pemo Stewart in the opening round. Albemarle had reached the championship series of the double-elimination tournament without a loss.

"People misjudged us because of the way we played in the first game," said Joyner, a Rose product. "Everybody else (except Albemarle) had played in the district and we were playing together for the first time."

"We were a little rusty but once we got the kinks out we were the best team out here — no doubt about it. It was a great team effort."

Again Coastal Plains got out of the gates quickly, knocking out a starting pitcher in the opening inning for the fourth time in the tournament en route to a 6-0 lead.

Coastal Plains chalked up seven runs in the first against Albemarle and four runs in the first against Pemo Stewart Monday.

"Our game plan was to come out and jump on them early," said Craig Willoughby, a rising senior at North Pitt who was 7-for-9 with nine RBI in the final two games, including a single, a double, a homer and four RBI Tuesday. "We knew we had one of the strongest teams here and we wanted to prove it."

Willoughby was joined in a 12-hit parade by Franz Holscher with three hits and Joyner with two. Holscher and Roosevelt Hines also cracked homers.

Derek Curtis, who hurled a no-hitter Sunday, went the distance to notch the win, yielding five hits while walking two and fanning seven. Albemarle reached him for four runs in the third with the aid of four errors and struck for two runs in the sixth with three consecutive extra-base hits.

"He pitched with a lot of heart," Coastal Plains manager Ted Curtis said. "In the third inning we should have got out of the inning with only one run scoring. He had confidence in the guys behind him and they got themselves together and played good baseball."

Emotion in the Coastal Plains dugout was soaring after Willoughby stroked a leadoff double in the first, advanced on a ground out and scored on a passed ball. Holscher followed with a single then Hines deposited a high drive over the flagpole in center for a 3-0 lead.

After a walk to Randy House and a single to center by Derek Curtis, Gray Mills delivered a sacrifice fly to up the count to 4-0. A walk to Joe DeLoach, a bunt single by Joyner and a two-run single by Willoughby staked Coastal Plains to a 6-0 cushion.

Curtis saw a string of 8½ hitless innings come to a halt when Kevin Brinkley singled to center with two outs in the second but a double play followed.

Three throwing errors and a dropped fly ball in right in the third helped Albemarle get within 6-4.

Coastal Plains picked up a run in the fourth on another bunt single by Joyner — his fourth in three games — a walk to Bryan Tuten and a single by Holscher.

Willoughby drilled a two-run homer in the fifth after a two-out walk to Joyner. DeLoach had scored earlier in the inning when a pickoff play at second went awry.

A triple by Randy Jacobs and consecutive doubles by Brinkley and Shawn Bigbie had Curtis on the ropes in the sixth but he fanned the final two batters to end the inning.

Holscher slammed a solo shot in the home half of the sixth for Coastal Plains.

North State All-Stars Rip Beaufort, 18-5, In Opener

By Mike Grizzard
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Reaching the Little League state baseball tournament is not supposed to be easy, but thus far, Greenville North State is making it look that way.

After zipping through the Area IV, District II tournament without a loss, a hard-hitting North State squad dished out an 18-5 thumping to Beaufort in the opener of a best-of-three series Tuesday night at Elm Street Park.

Beaufort, which wrapped up the District I crown in New Bern Monday, will attempt to even the series tonight at 6. Either Scott Briley or Jamie Wilson will get the call on the mound for North State.

A third game, if needed, will be played Thursday at 6. All games are at the Elm Street diamond. The victor advances to Hudson for the state tournament.

North State racked up a whopping 18 hits and never trailed after striking for three runs in the first inning. Beaufort inched as close as 6-4 but North State promptly pulled away with six runs in each of the fourth and fifth innings.

"It seems kind of easy," said Matt Davis, who hammered a two-run homer, singled twice, walked and came on to strike out the side in the sixth inning. "They could have had a bad day."

Also contributing to the big day at the plate for North State were winning pitcher Adrian Jones with four hits in four official trips and Scott Selby and Nabeel Barakat with two hits each.

Jones and Davis combined to limit Beaufort to but two hits. Jones carried a no-hitter into the fourth but surrendered a pair of two-out doubles. He finished with seven walks and seven strikeouts.

"I thought I was going good in the warmups but I got out there and couldn't find the strike zone," Jones said. "I don't know what it was — one game I struck out 15 and walked none."

Briley got North State off to a fast start with a slicing leadoff double to right in the first. He advanced to third on a single by Jones and scored on an infield hit by James Ebron. Jones was nailed at the plate on the same play.

However, Davis connected with a letter-high fastball for his two-run homer over the fence in left-center.

"It looked like a pop-up but I thought it at least was going to hit the fence," Davis said.

North State added two runs in the second on a walk to Chris Grover, a single by Barakat, a two-out walk to Matt Dellasaga and a single by Jones that eluded the left fielder.

Beaufort tallied its first run in the third on a pair of walks, an infield

Whiteville Takes Opening Game, 15-4

SNOW HILL — LeGrand Russell used a wicked curve ball to tame Snow Hill's bats as Whiteville romped to a 15-4 victory in the first game of their best-of-seven series for the American Legion Eastern North Carolina championship.

Snow Hill, the defending Eastern champ, got only six hits off Russell, who struck out 15 and walked just two. Whiteville, in turn, rocked four Post 94 pitchers for 12 hits, exploding for eight runs in the third inning.

Snow Hill took the lead early, scoring a run in the first on the first of two home runs by Walt McKeel. The other came in the fourth inning.

But in the third, the bottom fell out for Snow Hill as Whiteville took advantage of mistakes by Post 94 to score eight times.

"Their first guy got a hit and the next one hit a double-play ball but the umpire called him safe at second," Snow Hill coach James Fulghum said. "Then we threw the ball away at first and things went downhill from there."

Before the inning was over, Whiteville had picked up five hits and taken advantage of three Snow Hill errors, two hit batsmen and a walk. Matthew Gore had a two-run single to get things started after the early misplay.

Whiteville added one run in the fourth, two in the sixth and four in the ninth. Three of the four came on a homer by Byron Ward.

Snow Hill added single runs in the sixth and seventh innings. Ward led the Whiteville with three hits, while Randy Best, Calvin Freeman and Tommy Ward each had two. Ed Stanley had two hits along with McKeel's pair to lead Snow Hill.

Play continues tonight at 8 in Snow Hill. Post 94 will send Reggie Hill, 3-3, to the mound. The series will move to Whiteville on Thursday and Friday. Should a fifth game be needed, it would be played in Whiteville on Saturday. Any further games would be played back in Snow Hill.

Price Leaves South Carolina Program

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Brent Price asked University of South Carolina officials Tuesday to release him from the university's basketball program, saying he felt the decision was the best for all concerned.

Price, the youngest member of a family known for basketball, had completed his sophomore year at South Carolina.

He said in a statement released in Oklahoma City that he was uncertain about his future other than his desire to play basketball and continue his college career. He will have to sit out a year before being able to play for another university.

"This has been the most difficult decision I have ever made," Price said. "George Felton, the coaching staff and my teammates have all made a great impact on my life and I will miss them."

Drummond Leads Hornets Past Hawks

MIAMI (AP) — Rookie Kenny Drummond scored 25 points to lead Charlotte to a 104-92 victory over Atlanta in an NBA summer league exhibition Tuesday night at Florida International University.

Charlotte led by eight points at halftime and was up 74-51 midway through the third quarter before an Atlanta rally. The Hawks closed the gap to 92-88 with 2:36 remaining on two free throws by rookie Roy Marble.

Drummond, a 5-foot-11 guard who played last season at High Point after transferring from North Carolina State, scored six points in the final 26 seconds on a field goal and four free throws to ice the victory.

Brian Rowson added 17 points for Charlotte and rookies Clifford Lett and Tony Dawson each had 13. Charlotte's top draft pick, North Carolina's J.R. Reid, is unsigned and not participating in the four-team tournament.

Marble led Atlanta with 15 points and Darryl Middleton added 14.

Terps Name Preyer Part-Time Assistant

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Adam Preyer has been hired as a part-time assistant basketball coach at Maryland, it was announced Tuesday, as head coach Gary Williams filled the third of five positions on his staff.

Preyer, 26, served as a graduate assistant at Millersville University last year. He joins full-time assistants Billy Hahn and Roger McCready on Williams' staff.

Williams, who was hired as Maryland's head coach last month, intends to complete his staff with a volunteer assistant coach and a graduate by the end of the summer.

Preyer was a four-year basketball letterman before graduating from Roanoke College in 1988.

Martin Looks For First Win

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TALLADEGA, Ala. — The checkered flag has never dropped on Mark Martin on NASCAR's Winston Cup circuit, but he said that could change Sunday.

Martin said Tuesday he has more confidence than ever as he prepares for the DieHard 500 at Talladega Superspeedway.

"The way we ran here in the Winston 500 in May and the way we ran at Daytona (in the Pepsi 400) earlier this month makes us a very confident team," Martin said. "We just have a feeling about this race about finally getting our first win."

He said that he and members of his team decided after last Sunday's Pocono race "that we didn't have to run any better than we have been running to win. All we have to do is to be there at the end. The way we are running now we know we are capable of winning. It's just a matter of doing it."

Martin's Ford Thunderbird finished third in the May race at Talladega and was leading the Pepsi 400 when it ran out of gas five laps from the end.

"That won't happen again. I can assure you of that," he said.

Martin also had the pole position for the Winston 500 at 193.061 mph. He predicted the DieHard 500 pole winner will have to beat that.

If the winner of the No. 1 starting position for Sunday's race also wins the race, he will get a $114,000 bonus. A $7,600 bonus per race has been posted, with the total accumulating until it is won. No one has won from the pole position since Rusty Wallace did it in the second race of the season at Rockingham, N.C., and the bonus now is in its 15th race.

"Mark's not going to get it without a fight," said Morgan Shephard, one of the circuit's hottest drivers with four top-eight finishes in the last five races.

Shephard, in a Pontiac, will pose a serious challenge to Martin as will Davey Allison who won both the Winston 500 and the Pepsi 400 in a Thunderbird.

Only twice in the first 20 runnings of the DieHard 500 has a driver won the race from the pole position — Dave Marcis in 1976 and Bill Elliott in 1987.

The pole position will be determined in qualifying that begins at 1 p.m. Thursday. The race, with Gov. Guy Hunt giving the start-the-engines command, begins at 12:15 p.m. CDT on Sunday.

The ARCA 500 K will be run Saturday at 1 p.m.

Clemson Is Choice To Win ACC Title

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREENSBORO — Clemson has been chosen to win the Atlantic Coast Conference football championship by a poll of sportswriters and broadcasters for the third straight season.

Clemson received first-place votes on 48 of the 70 ballots cast, a slim margin over previous years. Last season, they received 66 votes for first place out of 68 ballots submitted.

The 70 sportswriters and broadcasters who participated in the 14th annual summer football poll gave only three of the league's eight schools consideration for first place. The voters also awarded each of the five remaining schools three votes or more for last place.

Also, the top three schools collected all but two of the second place votes.

The poll has correctly picked the conference champion in 27 of 34 seasons.

"Obviously, I'll feel a little more confident about the situation if we're picked first in the tour poll," Clemson coach Danny Ford told The Raleigh Times.

Ford was referring to the ACC Sportswriters Tour, which will visit each of the eight member campuses in mid-August, then take a second ballot for preseason picks.

"This summer group is batting about .500 or so and that's just average. It's the kind of record that could get a coach fired at the wrong school," Ford said. "Seriously, I guess I put a little more stock in the Tour picks because they are made later and maybe come after a little more thought."

Hill Latest Vet To Be Released

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kenny Hill didn't have an interception with the New York Giants last season. Now he doesn't have a job with them, either.

Hill, a starting strong safety for the Giants' 1986 Super Bowl team and for most of the past four seasons, was released Tuesday.

He became the second well-known veteran to part company with the Giants in recent days. Last week, the Giants lost another member of their Super Bowl team when nose tackle Jim Burt retired.

Coach Bill Parcells said the decision to "rescind" Hill was tough. Hill was one of eight unsigned veterans.

"It's not a matter of his contract at all," Parcells said. "It's not a matter of economics at all. It's a matter of commitment in a different direction."

"I felt personally about Kenny the way I felt about Jim Burt. I have a strong personal relationship with him. It's not that he's too hurt or too old."

Adrian White, Greg Cox and Tom Flynn will battle to replace Hill, who last season was fourth on the team with 74 tackles.

Tom Toner, an adviser to the 31-year-old Hill, said Hill feels he can play another two seasons despite being hampered by chronically bad ankles.

The Los Angeles Raiders chose Hill from Yale in the 1980 draft and traded him in 1984 to the Giants for a seventh-round pick.

Meanwhile, All-Pro linebacker Lawrence Taylor took his physical and participated in an afternoon workout after sitting out the first day of camp Monday.

Other news from training camp sites:

Denver Broncos

Quarterback John Elway will get to call his own plays this season.

Elway and Coach Dan Reeves came to an agreement that will allow Elway to help design the weekly game plan and have more freedom in calling plays.

"Dan has told me that I can have as much influence as I want," Elway said Tuesday. "I plan to get more involved in it and put more of my thoughts into it. I want to let him know what I'm thinking so we can be working together instead of against each other."

The two said the new system will eliminate some of the poor communications they had last season.

One of Elway's first decisions may be to put running back Tony Dorsett in the game plan more often.

"I don't think we did a good job of utilizing Tony and what he can do," Elway said. "We've got to try to get him in the open field where he can beat some people. We didn't do that. If we give him the chance to make the big play, I think he will."

Cincinnati Bengals

UCLA running back Eric Ball, a second-round draft choice, reportedly signed a four-year contract worth $1.196 million. The Bengals declined to reveal the contract terms.

New Orleans Saints

The Saints signed Pro Bowl wide receiver Eric Martin and starting guard Brad Edelman. Martin signed a three-year agreement with no option, Edelman a two-year deal with no option.

Phoenix Cardinals

The Cardinals signed second-round draft pick Walter Reeves, but negotiations have broken off with first-round choice Joe Wolf.

Wolf, an offensive lineman from Boston College who was the 17th player taken in the April 23 draft, reportedly wants a four-year, $2 million contract. Phoenix is offering a four-year, $1.7 million deal.

San Francisco 49ers

The 49ers have agreed to terms with second-round draft pick Wesley Walls, a tight end from Mississippi.

Coach George Seifert expressed pleasure that the 6-foot-5, 246-pound rookie finally agreed to a contract. With incumbent John Frank's retirement and the defection of backup tight end Ron Heller to the Atlanta Falcons, the 49ers have only Brent Jones left over from the tight end corps of the Super Bowl champions.

Indianapolis Colts

The Colts signed three more draft picks, including third-rounder Mitchell Benson.

Reaching agreements were Benson, a defensive lineman from Texas Christian; linebacker Quintus McDonald, a sixth-rounder from Penn State, and Jim Thompson, a 10th-rounder from Auburn.

Benson, the Colts' second overall pick, is expected to compete for a starting job in a multiple-front defensive scheme.

New York Jets

The Jets reached contract agreement with second-round draft choice Dennis Byrd, leaving only first-round pick Jeff Lageman unsigned.

Byrd, a defensive end from Tulsa, is expected to provide a pass rush from what was Mark Gastineau's position.

Seattle Seahawks

The Seahawks acquired offensive tackle Daryle Smith from the Dallas Cowboys for an undisclosed draft choice.

He was signed as a free agent by the Seahawks after the 1987 draft and played in four exhibition games before being released and signed by the Cowboys.

To make room for Smith, the Seahawks released free agent tight end Tyler Burdick.

Los Angeles Rams

Wide receiver Ron Brown and nose tackle Alvin Wright agreed to terms with the Rams, and placekicker Mike Lansford decided against a holdout and signed a one-year interim contract. The Rams hoped to negotiate a replacement deal before camp is over. The interim contract allowed Lansford to be at practice.

Dallas Cowboys

Defensive tackle Jeff Roth, a fifth-round draft pick from Florida, has agreed to contract terms.

Kansas City Chiefs

The Chiefs announced the signings of two 1989 draft choices, wide receiver Naz Worthen and cornerback Stan Petry.

Worthen, the club's third-round pick out of North Carolina State, signed a three-year contract. Petry, the Chief's fourth-round selection from Texas Christian, also agreed to a three-year contract.

the right of the lane, crossed over, took off in the air and delivered the first dunk of the game, a reverse slam.

Barrett had always hoped to get a chance to play in the East-West game, but thought he might have ended his career back in the early spring when Farmville won the state 2-A championship.

But when Farmville coach Mike Terrell was named as an assistant on the squad, his chances improved dramatically.

"When coach Terrell told me he was going to be the coach, I hoped I was going to be able to play," Barrett, who will play for Lenoir Community College next year, said. "Then I found out I got picked about a month before school let out."

A Good Ending

When East team football coach Ted Perry of New Bern decided earlier this year that it was time to retire, he figured he'd coached his final game. But it hasn't exactly turned out that way.

"I decided to retire before I was named to coach this game," he said. "It's a good way to go out. Of course, we want to win, but even if we don't it's been a good, positive experience. The kids have all been great. They're all real good athletes. You really get a feel for coaching at its best."

East Happy To Have Fuller

Back when Perry was putting together his roster for Thursday's game, he wanted to take three players from Rose.

He knew he wanted defensive end Carlester Crumpler and running back Tim Moore, a pair of All-State choices. But he also wanted to pick offensive lineman Raleigh Fuller (6-4, 230). Unfortunately, you can only take two players from one school.

Moore, though, ended up signing a baseball contract with the Minnesota Twins, and he's been in Sarasota, Fla. playing rookie ball since mid-June.

"We hated to lose Timmy, but when he left, that meant we could take another one from Rose," Perry said. "Chip (Williams, the Rampants' coach) knew we wanted Raleigh the whole time. I've scrimmaged them and played them for two years. I knew what he could do."

Fuller, who chose North Carolina A&T over ECU, South Carolina and Appalachian State, figures to have a good chance starting at guard.

to like a duck to water." Gibbs expected nothing less from the man who was once class president at Baldwin High School in Milledgeville, Georgia.

"I talked to some of his coaches, and they said he was fantastic as a preparer," Gibbs said. "He's already shown that."

With Byner in the lineup at H-back, the Redskins boast a formidable lineup of pass catchers. With Art Monk, Gary Clark and Ricky Sanders split wide and Byner inside, Washington quarterbacks have a host of options as to where to pass the football.

"We can depend on anybody at anytime," Byner claimed. "I can't see a defense keying on any one person."

Regardless of what position he ends up playing, Byner is simply interested in helping the Redskins get back into the playoffs. A fierce competitor, Byner would probably take the snap from center if he thought it would help Washington win.

"I'm not too sure what my role will be this year, and it really doesn't matter," he said. "As long as I'm in the game when it counts."

able to forge a 46-42 edge at intermission.

The East also led 71-67 after three periods of play, thanks to a heads up steal and layup at the buzzer by Peterson, who had nine points.

But the West started warming up in the final period and raised its shooting percentage to 56 percent for the final 20 minutes.

Arriel McDonald, a Raleigh Athens Drive product who will play for Minnesota next year, led the East with 14 points. Douglass Elliott of Cape Fear added 13, while Cedric Broadhurst of Southern Wayne and Tim Shaw of Fayetteville South View had 10 apiece.

Gaines added 19 points for the West, while Jeff Pickard of Reidsville had 12 off the bench. Seale of Morehead had 11, as did Ethan Albright of Greensboro Grimsley.

Another ECU signee, 6-6 D.J. Morgan of Athens Drive, ended up with seven points for the East and tied Ellison for the team lead in rebounding with eight.

"We just started making mistakes late," Morgan said. "We passed the ball to the wrong guys who weren't there and we got boxed out on the boards."

out and a wild pitch but North State answered with a run in the bottom of the inning on a single by Davis, a passed ball, a wild pitch and a sacrifice fly by Scott Burrows.

Jones experienced a rocky fourth inning and owned only a two-run edge when it finally ended. After sandwiching two walks around two strikeouts, Jones yielded a double down the right-field line to Willie Johnson. After Joel Fodrie drew a walk, Dwight Jones delivered a double into the gap in right-center.

Singles by Dellasaga, Jones, Davis, Darryl Cherry, Selby and Wilson, two walks and two errors produced six North State runs in the bottom of the fourth.

In the fifth, two walks and three wild pitches were followed by consecutive singles by Shawn Gordon, Burrows, Selby and Barakat. Briley's RBI bouncer to first capped the scoring.

"We hit the ball well," North State coach Roy Berbert said. "The walks hurt us and they scored a few runs off the walks."

"It wasn't our best game. We need one more win to go to the state but you can never be overconfident. You always figure your opponent is going to be ready the next time."

Oriole Loss String Goes To Six

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

One victory short of last year's total, the Baltimore Orioles are playing like it's 1988 again.

The Orioles lost their sixth straight game Tuesday night and saw their American League East lead grow even smaller, falling to the Minnesota Twins 9-3.

"We're hurting ourselves three ways. We're not pitching well, we're not fielding well and we're not hitting well," Manager Frank Robinson said. "We're just not doing anything."

Baltimore's losing streak is its longest of the season. Its lead, 7½ games last week, was cut to 4½ by Toronto and the rest of the division is catching up.

The Orioles have lost the first five games of a 14-game road trip, their longest in 14 years. They have been outscored 30-10 in the six losses.

"We're still in first place," losing pitcher Dave Schmidt said. "We had hoped to play .600 ball the second half of the season, but we're playing teams for the second time now. They know we're for real and it's tough. But we have to be tough, too."

In other games, Toronto beat Texas 4-0, California defeated Oakland 4-0, New York stopped Cleveland 5-1, Boston routed Kansas City 10-0, Chicago stopped Seattle 7-6 and Detroit downed Milwaukee 7-2.

The Orioles, the top fielding team in the majors, caused their own problems at the Metrodome. Two errors in the first inning led to two runs, and the Twins broke it open in the fifth with four runs for a 7-1 lead.

Kirby Puckett homered and drove in four runs and Allan Anderson, 10-9, ended his five-game losing streak.

Anderson led the league in earned-run average last season, but had a 7.94 ERA since his last victory on June 25. He gave up three runs on seven hits in 6 1-3 innings. Mark Guthrie, making his major-league debut, and Randy St. Claire finished with three-hit relief.

Puckett leads the majors with a .342 average, although he isn't happy with his batting stroke. He averaged 28 home runs from 1986-88, but his three-run homer was just his seventh of the season.

"I could feel better," Puckett said. "I work so hard at it that I guess I expect a lot out of myself, maybe too much. At least I'm hitting the ball hard."

Doug Baker and Randy Bush began the Minnesota fifth with singles, chasing Schmidt, 8-10. One out later, Puckett homered off Brian Holton.

Angels 4, Athletics 0

Chuck Finley and Greg Minton outdueling Dave Stewart and California won at Oakland for a two-game lead over the Athletics in the AL West.

Jack Howell, Chili Davis and Dick Schofield hit solo home runs as the Angels beat Oakland for the second straight day. California's lead is its largest of the season.

Finley, 12-6, won his fifth consecutive decision. He gave up six hits in 7 2-3 innings and defeated the Athletics for the first time in five career decisions.

Minton got Terry Steinbach to ground out to end the eighth and then finished for his sixth save.

Stewart, 14-6, failed to become the AL's first 15-game winner. He has not won two consecutive starts since May 20.

Blue Jays 4, Rangers 0

Nolan Ryan struck out 14 and the Rangers fanned a team-record 18, but Dave Stieb and Toronto outpitched Texas.

Stieb, 10-6, gave up two hits in 5 2-3 innings. Relievers David Wells and Duane Ward allowed two more hits, with Ward getting his 11th save.

Ryan, 11-6, went just six-plus innings, but came within one strikeout of the Rangers' record. He did raise his major league-leading total to 180 this season and 4,955 for his career. Reliever Kenny Rogers struck out three and Paul Wilmet fanned one.

The Blue Jays got a run in the top of the first inning when Junior Felix reached on center fielder Cecil Espy's two-base error and scored on a passed ball by Chad Kreuter as George Bell fanned for what would have been the third out.

Yankees 5, Indians 1

Andy Hawkins pitched a five-hitter and New York ended a seven-game losing streak with its first road victory in nine tries.

The Yankees had lost eight straight on the road, their longest skid since a 12-game slide that started in 1969 and carried over to the next season. The Indians had won three in a row and five of the last six.

Steve Sax got four hits and stole three bases and Jesse Barfield and Don Mattingly hit solo home runs off Greg Swindell, 13-3.

Hawkins, 12-9, allowed just an earned run in his third complete game in four starts.

Red Sox 10, Royals 0

Wade Boggs got three doubles and a triple, the first four extra-base hit game of his career, and Mike Boddicker extended his scoreless inning streak to 24 as Boston routed Kansas City.

Boggs went 4-for-5 and raised his average to .330. The Red Sox had 16 hits, including a season-high eight for extra bases.

Boddicker, 9-7, scattered nine singles and won his fifth consecutive decision. Charlie Leibrandt, 5-10, allowed six runs in the second inning.

The Royals swept their last three games at Fenway Park, outscoring Boston 24-7 and finishing the April series with a 10-0 trouncing.

White Sox 7, Mariners 6

Ozzie Guillen scored the tiebreaking run in the eighth inning on a double play and Chicago beat Seattle for its 10th straight victory at Comiskey Park.

The White Sox's winning streak is their longest at home since a 17-game success in 1983.

Guillen opened the eighth with a double against Mike Jackson, 3-5, and took third on Dave Gallagher's bunt single. Guillen scored as the Mariners turned a double play on Steve Lyons' grounder.

Donn Pall, 3-1, was the winner and Bobby Thigpen got his 20th save.

Tigers 7, Brewers 2

Doyle Alexander and Detroit each ended six-game losing streaks by winning at Milwaukee.

Fred Lynn's three-run homer in the first inning helped the Tigers win for just the third time in 19 games.

Alexander, 5-10, had not won in 10 starts since May 29. He gave up one earned run in seven innings.

Don August, 9-9, allowed seven runs in four-plus innings. He has been tagged for 19 earned runs in his last 16 1-3 innings.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Expos 2, Phillies 0

National League batters should be relieved to know that Mark Langston doesn't try for strikeouts.

"I'm not concentrating on getting strikeouts, I'm just thinking about getting ahead of hitters and us winning," Langston said after fanning 10 while pitching a five-hitter in leading the Montreal Expos to a 2-0 victory Tuesday night over the Philadelphia Phillies. "If the strikeouts come, that's extra."

They've been coming in bunches lately for the three-time American League strikeout king who has been terrorizing the NL since his acquisition from the Seattle Mariners on May 25. The 28-year-old left-hander, who has fanned 23 in his last two starts, has 102 strikeouts in 94 1-3 innings.

Langston reached double figures in strikeouts for Montreal for the fifth time. He did it once before the Mariners traded him.

Langston, 8-3, is a rarity, a pitcher who actually prefers to work in close games.

"It's not that I don't like the high-scoring games, but in close ones you tend to concentrate more and make more of your pitches count," he said after leading the Expos to their sixth straight victory. "It's better for me in tight games because of the way I want to pitch."

"When it's close, you have to have an idea of what you want every pitch to do before you throw it, and that keeps you sharp."

But not necessarily sharp from the start.

"He got stronger as the game went on and he had much better command for the last five innings than for the first four," Expos manager Buck Rodgers said.

Langston's third NL shutout and fourth complete game gave Montreal a 35-17 record since his acquisition. Montreal was 23-24 before Langston arrived.

Elsewhere, it was San Diego 6, Cincinnati 2; Los Angeles 6, Houston 0; Pittsburgh 4, New York 2; San Francisco 5, Atlanta 4, and Chicago 4, St. Louis 2.

Tim Lincecum's second-inning homer, his fifth this season and first since May 28, made a loser of Don Carman, 2-11.

Hubie Brooks followed Raines' homer with a double just inside the right-field line, advanced on an infield out and scored on an error by third baseman Charlie Hayes.

Padres 6, Reds 2

Cincinnati's ninth straight defeat matched its longest losing streak in three years. The Reds, losers in 30 of their last 40 games, dropped nine straight from April 25 to May 5, 1986.

San Diego's Ed Whitson, 14-6, tied a career-high for victories.

Garry Templeton singled home two runs and Shawn Abner hit a three-run homer as the Padres broke a four-game losing streak.

Templeton's single capped a three-run fourth inning after Cincinnati had taken a 2-0 lead in the second against Whitson. He pitched seven innings, allowed 10 hits, struck out five and walked none.

With the Reds leading 2-0, Roberto Alomar opened the fourth against Tom Browning, 7-10, with a double and scored on Jack Clark's single. Chris James followed with a single and both advanced on Benito Santiago's fly out. Templeton singled to center for a 3-2 lead.

Dodgers 6, Astros 0

With his fourth shutout, Tim Lincecum tied teammate Orel Hershiser for the league lead as Los Angeles snapped Houston's four-game winning streak.

Belcher, 7-9, pitched a five-hitter for his fourth complete game, striking out nine and walking five.

Belcher and Rick Rhoden, 0-3 and just off the disabled list, were locked in a scoreless duel until the sixth inning.

Kal Daniels walked with one out and stole second with two down. Franklin Stubbs was intentionally walked and Jeff Hamilton and Mike Scioscia followed with RBI singles.

The Dodgers added four runs in the ninth on RBI singles by Lenny Harris, and Jose Gonzalez and a two-run double by pinch-hitter Mickey Hatcher.

Belcher pitched his way out of bases-loaded jams in the third and seventh innings.

Pirates 4, Mets 2

Bobby Bonilla singled to break a 2-2 tie in the eighth inning as Pittsburgh took advantage of a key walk and an error to end New York's six-game winning streak.

The loss dropped the Mets to third place in the NL East, 4½ games behind Montreal.

Rick Aguilera, 6-4, relieved to start the eighth and walked Barry Bonds with one out. Jose Lind singled for his second hit in 39 at-bats and Andy Van Slyke flied out.

Bonilla worked the count to 3-2, fouled off a pitch and grounded a single just to the left of diving second baseman Gregg Jefferies.

Doug Drabek, 8-7, won for the third time in four starts, allowing six hits and one earned run in seven innings. Bill Landrum, the fourth Pirate pitcher, worked the ninth for his 14th consecutive save after blowing his first opportunity.

Giants 5, Braves 4

A grounder that glanced off the glove of losing pitcher Derek Lilliquist helped San Francisco hand Atlanta its sixth straight loss.

Mike LaCoss, 5-6, gave up six hits over seven innings, struck out two and walked two. He also figured in the Giants' tie-breaking run in the fifth.

Kirt Manwaring opened the inning with a walk off Lilliquist, 5-6, and went to third when a hard grounder by Jose Uribe caused shortstop Andres Thomas to break toward second base before it deflected off the pitcher's glove. The ball went for a single through the spot Thomas had vacated.

Manwaring scored to make it 3-2 as LaCoss bounced into a double play.

Lilquist drove in two runs for the Braves.

Robbie Thompson hit his career-high 11th home run for the Giants, who called on Craig Lefferts for his 18th save.

Cubs 4, Cardinals 2

Winning pitcher Paul Kilgus had an RBI single and collected a victory for the first time since June 6.

The loss snapped a streak of six victories by Joe Magrane, 11-7, who hadn't lost since June 18.

Kilgus, 6-9, pitched six innings, allowed four hits, walked one and struck out two.

In Boxing, It's Usually How Often You Hit

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OKLAHOMA CITY — The name of the game in amateur boxing isn't how hard you hit, it's how often. Most of the time, at least.

Tuesday night, Javier Alvarez of San Antonio lost to the harder-hitting John Bray 3-2 at 201 pounds and became one of three national champions to lose in the finals of the U.S. Olympic Festival.

"This time the rat-a-tat didn't work," said Bray, 19, who had lost to Alvarez 5-0 in the finals of the U.S. amateurs.

"I lost to him 5-0 the last time, beat him 3-2 this time, and I'll beat him 5-0 the next time," said Bray, of Van Nuys, Calif.

Tony Gonzales, the U.S. amateur champion at 119 pounds, lost 4-1 to Eddie Cook of St. Louis, and 156-pound national champion Chris Byrd lost to his close friend Paul Vaden 3-2 on a night when all the gold medal bouts were contested.

Gold medals were awarded in several other sports Tuesday, including archery, bowling, slow pitch softball and equestrian show jumping.

Denise Parker, 15, of South Jordan, Utah, rallied to win the women's archery gold medal. Ed Eliason, the oldest competitor at 51, held on for the men's championship by two points.

"I am physically in better shape now than ever before and Denise has something to do with that," Eliason said. "We help each other in archery continually and I feel this has made us both better archers."

Brody Robertson of Humble, Texas, became the eighth rider to win double golds in equestrian competition. Robertson's two clean individual rounds on Footnote, together with two clean team rounds, equaled a festival record set in 1986 by Silas "Jeepers" Ragsdale.

Robertson's South team also had won the gold medal Monday.

Lynda Norry of Concord, Calif., and Don Breeden of Dakota City, Iowa, won the individual match play gold medals in bowling. In slow pitch softball, the West beat the East 25-21 to win the gold medal.

Basketball gold medals will be awarded tonight, with the North going against the East in the men's and women's divisions.

Olympic gold medalist Kenny Monday continued his climb up the wrestling ladder Tuesday by beating Greg Elinski in two straight matches, giving him eight victories in three days.

"How could it not bother you?" said Rob Koll of State College, Pa., who is seeded No. 1 at 163 pounds and who will face Monday today for the gold medal. "He's a beast. He's a great athlete."

Monday is one of four former Oklahoma State wrestlers in the finals. The others are 1988 Olympic champion John Smith at 136½ pounds, Ed Woodburn at 114½ pounds and Tom Erikson at 186 pounds.

Smith will go against No. 2 seed Greg Randall, who won in controversial fashion against former Oklahoma Sooner Michael Gomez. Gomez appeared to have won the opening match until Randall scored a two-point takedown with five seconds to go. Randall wasn't awarded the points, which tied the score at 6, until the match was over. Then he won with a takedown 1:10 into overtime.

Randall won 14-2 at night.

Hockey got started Tuesday with the young South team rallying from a 4-2 deficit in the final period to tie the West 5-5. Marty McInnis scored off a rebound with 23 seconds left to complete the comeback.

"This will go a long way toward helping us, no matter what happens here, what happens in Lake Placid," said South coach Steve Cedorchuk, who will coach many of the same players on the national junior team later this year.

In the other game, the North's Joe Sacco scored two goals within 28 seconds in a lively third period to lead his team to a 6-3 victory over the East.

The boxing judges' decision in favor of Cook prompted boos from the crowd of 6,030 at the Myriad Convention Center.

"I really don't care, to tell you the truth," said Cook, a 22-year-old Army specialist who had lost by decisions in three earlier matches against Gonzales. "I'm the one who's wearing the gold."

Vaden, a 21-year-old from Puyallup, Wash., had lost to Byrd 3-2 in the finals of the U.S. amateur.

"I love this guy," Vaden said, "but for nine minutes in the ring, you couldn't say we're enemies, but we're competitors."

Byrd, of Flint, Mich., said the fight was nearly identical to their earlier matchup.

"I just waited too much, that's what it was," he said.

Four other U.S. amateur champions came away with gold medals — Frank Pena at 125 pounds, Raul Marquez at 147 pound, Brian Lonon at 112 pounds and Ray Lathon at 165 pounds.

The other boxing gold medalists were Eric Griffin of Houston at 106, Tonga McClain of Racine, Wis., at 132, Skipper Kelp of Colorado Springs at 139, Terry McGroom of Chicago at 178, and Larry Donald of Cincinnati at 201-plus.

Kelp, the Vietnamese-born 18-year-old who fled from South Vietnam with his mother and sisters at the age of 2½ to join his father, a U.S. soldier, won a 4-1 decision over ex-sparring partner Victor McKinnis. McKinnis is an Army fighter from Fort Collins, Colo.

Kelp said the fight was strange and lacked action because he knows McKinnis so well.

The gold medalists have the inside track at making the U.S. team that will compete in the world championships Sept. 17-30 in Moscow. They advance to the World Championship Box-Offs in Concord, Calif., Aug. 3-4.

Ruttman Will Sub For Speed

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. (AP) — Joe Ruttman will fill in for the injured Lake Speed in Sunday's Diehard 500 NASCAR stock car race at Talladega, Ala.

Speed suffered a fractured right shoulder blade Sunday in a crash that sent Greg Sacks' Pontiac flipping in the AC Spark Plug 500 NASCAR race at Pocono International Raceway. Sacks was unhurt.

Speed spent Sunday night at a Wilkes-Barre hospital and left Monday morning. His status to return to his Oldsmobile is undetermined beyond the Talladega race, Speed spokeswoman Randy Lavigne said Tuesday. The next race after Talladega is Aug. 13 at Watkins Glen, N.Y.

Ruttman, of Upland, Calif., on Sunday finished 34th in the 40-car field, completing 60 laps before the Oldsmobile had engine failure.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY July 27

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Take a new approach to something that was once thrilling but is beginning to feel mechanical. A moneymaking idea is good. Listen and learn!

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): A pet project is stalled. Analyze the pieces and start over—not to try is to admit defeat. Give attention to menial tasks and repairs.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): It is easier to get the freedom you need if you give your mate the same privilege. Nutritional savvy will help you to feel fit.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Join those with whom you have things in common. Continue to meet work pressure with a smile. Hang in there and be your best.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): This is not your day to be alone. Smile even in the midst of adversity, and don't throw in the towel. Nighttime has lighter moments.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Have your antennas out for important news on the job. You will find out more about where you stand with superiors.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Ignore those who feel they must blow their own horn. To get to your goals you must take the lead. A pleasant surprise comes your way.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Mix with others who are unattached. Be discreet in personal affairs. You will get as much out of a love affair as you put into it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): If you are in love, be more demonstrative. Plan to change your environment while you are in an aesthetic mood.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): When the outcome is speculative, uncertainty can have you on pins and needles. Don't withdraw into isolation—life goes on.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Your powers of persuasion are keen. Influential friends can become your ally and help you to decide what direction to go in.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Meet your friends in the "sunshine" on such a wonderful day. You can become culturally enlightened besides being entertained.

Dear Charlie:
You know I can't resist a pretty ending. Here's another hand from last month's gala rubber bridge afternoon at The Mansion on Turtle Creek, in Dallas.

Partner's one no trump response was forcing, and his three clubs was, perhaps, a trifle conservative—I think I prefer two no trump. As you can see, three clubs presents no problem as long as trumps are 2-2.

At the table, West shifted to a diamond at trick two and dummy's queen was covered by the king and taken with the ace. The simple way to make the hand is to cash the ace of spades, return to the king of clubs and discard a diamond on the king of spades. All I can lose is three heart tricks and the ace of clubs.

However, I yielded to my flair for the dramatic. After winning the ace of spades and returning to hand with the king of clubs, I ruffed a spade in dummy, exited with a diamond and claimed nine tricks!

If West wins the diamond, he is endplayed. A spade return is into my tenace, allowing me to discard three hearts from dummy. A diamond gives a ruff-sluff and a heart solves my problems in that suit.

Therefore, East must win the diamond and return a spade. I simply cover any spade that East leads. If it wins, I get two heart discards. If it loses, that means spades are 4-3 and

I get two heart discards on the king and jack of spades.

As ever,

Omar

Visitors To Congress Get Only The Blahs Of Summer

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — As National Anti-Boredom Month draws to a close, thousands of Americans are flocking to Congress in search of some excitement. But, alas, they are looking in the wrong place.

At one point Tuesday, exactly 254 tourists sat in the Senate visitors' gallery awaiting a thrilling debate. They peered down on a nearly empty chamber where only two senators — Sam Nunn of Georgia and John Kerry of Massachusetts — chatted amiably.

"It was kind of boring to me," said Bob Duax of Davenport, Iowa, who waited five minutes for something to happen and then left.

"I expected to see all the senators debating a bill and sending runners here and there to pick up something," he said. "But then I figured it's 12 o'clock and they're all at lunch."

Duax thought a moment and added, "We pay them enough. They ought to be working."

"I was disappointed," school-teacher Karen White of Detroit said later. "They were not the great orators I'd imagined." She complained particularly about Sen. Alan Dixon, D-Ill. "He spoke poorly. He wasn't prepared. The analogies he drew were elementary," she said.

On the other side of the Capitol, visitors found themselves groping through a rhetorical vegetable soup of acronyms — MIRV, ABM, START, TOW, HARM, MLRS — as House members debated a $295 billion authorization bill for the Defense Department. In contrast to the Senate, where the proceedings tend to be somnolent all year long, the House proceedings were noisy and confusing.

"It was very undisciplined, it was a zoo," said Dave Livingston of Nokomis, Fla., who was accompanied by his wife, Vicki, and three daughters.

"No one would sit down and no one would listen. They'd bang the gavel and 25 minutes later they were still hollering for order. I tried to show the girls why hardly anything gets done up here."

When they weren't talking about stealth bombers and Star Wars this week, legislators were saluting Little League baseball, deploring cheap steel imports, congratulating baseball Hall of Famer Carl Yastrzemski, urging farm belt drought relief and hearing plaudits for Mary Brooks of Idaho, former director of the Bureau of the Mint.

July was designated National Anti-Boredom Month by the Boring Institute of Maplewood, N.J., a tongue-in-cheek organization founded by Alan Caruba, a free-lance journalist, public relations consultant and presidential candidate of the Boring Party.

The purpose of Anti-Boredom Month is to "remind Americans, old and young, that boredom is a silent killer of dreams, a too-frequent precursor of depression and suicide," Caruba says.

Juvenile Books Provide Insight For Grown-Ups

By Nancy Shulins

MONTPELIER, Vt. — Marie Isenor, wife, mother and convenience store clerk, dropped out of high school five months before graduation. She's kept a low profile ever since.

"When I go to meetings, I'm always the one in the back not saying much. I've always been interested in graphic arts, but I never did anything about it. I didn't think I was smart enough."

She's beginning to see herself differently, due largely to a series of children's book discussions at the library. The gatherings, led by an area scholar, brought together a wide range of people, from Adult Basic Education students like Isenor to college graduates.

"I wasn't there five minutes before I was involved in the discussion," says Isenor, who lives in Quechee. Rather than drop out after the first session as planned, she found she couldn't wait for the next one.

Though she didn't know it at the time, Marie Isenor was a pioneer in a social experiment known as the Family Reading Project. In her case, as in most, the experiment seems to be working.

"I learned a lot about how other people think. Some thought a lot along my lines. I pretty much always thought I was on my own, that I was the only person who had those kinds of thoughts."

Discussion leader Nick Boke, who teaches history at a community college, learned something, too. "There's a statistic that gets thrown around, that only 20 percent of the population can think abstractly. This confirmed my belief: It's because only 20 percent of the population has ever been asked."

The Family Reading Project is based on a modest formula: Choose 10 classic children's books on a single theme — courage, for example, or friendship. Give them to 20 or 30 adults from a cross-section of the community, then invite them back for three monthly discussions led by a humanities scholar.

That simple recipe is yielding rich intellectual fare. It's also shattering stereotypes, building self-esteem and easing isolation. "I can go all winter and never see anyone," says P.V. Hall, a mother of two who lives near Killington Ski Area.

"I started coming to the reading group thinking I was doing it for the kids. I ended up feeling it was more for me."

The discussions also give adults from all layers of society the same chance to discover the wonder of books and to pass it along to their children.

"Reading is transformative," says project director Sally Anderson, a former librarian and reading teacher. "It's so mean-spirited to make it a class issue."

Yet class-consciousness often trespasses into public education. "We're so middle class. Our schools are so middle class. We take so many things for granted," Anderson says. "We say to parents, 'Just tell your kids to turn off the TV.' But some parents don't have the self-esteem to take control of their families."

Others may lack the necessary vocabulary or reading ability to decipher a complex, puzzling world, she says. "We have all these visual signs. If you don't know the signs you are really cut off, in ways most of us don't even understand."

The Family Reading Project has its roots in a similar reading and discussion program begun 11 years ago by a Vermont librarian to encourage people to read better books. The program she started has now been held in more than half of Vermont's 251 communities.

Mary Hatwood Futrell, outgoing NEA head, says she drew on lessons from the classroom during her tenure

The Girl With One Bootstrap

Outgoing NEA Leader Says She's Still A Teacher

By Jacqueline Trescott
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — For six years Mary Hatwood Futrell, the outgoing president of the National Education Association, has been in the public eye as a spokesman and lobbyist for education.

For six years, too, she has been a target of the critics who feel the schools are failing, and that the NEA just adds to the problem.

How did she cope? "I used my teaching skills," she says.

"One of the things you understand is that you don't walk into a classroom and assume everyone has the same level of interest or knowledge that you have. You have to take people where they are and move them forward," she says, sitting in the homey, poster-filled office she will vacate at the end of the summer.

She is explaining how the tactics of lobbying public policy-makers are the same tactics used in teaching. "I had to do my homework. I had to provide information, then I had to instruct, teach and inform. I had to organize, I had to assess where they were. I had to decide how to persuade them or how to get them to support this issue. How do I move the organization? That is part of what you do in the classroom."

"You teach, but you also learn. I had to learn to try different things, to take more risks. I had to be a student," she says. She had spent 20 years in Virginia classrooms but is more charged than worn out. She breaks into a long gusty laugh, "I told someone NEA should give me a doctorate."

'Lord knows I had one bootstrap and that was broken. But my mother said very clearly, 'You don't have to be poor the rest of your life...My mother would change buses two or three times to get to the school. And show up any old time.'

— Mary Hatwood Futrell

Futrell, 49, a tall and slender woman, dressed in a soft pink suit with a scarf at a jaunty angle around her shoulders, sits in an easy chair and rapidly lets loose with her philosophy and the pitfalls and pleasures of her tenure as Mrs. Education.

As she leaves office, her term is largely viewed as progressive. She is credited with moving the NEA, the country's largest union, away from confrontation and toward the center, and for making it better able to work with other education groups.

But critics still believed the organization is too concerned with non-education issues and protecting teachers when it should be in the forefront of education reform. William Bennett, when he was the secretary of education, once called it "the status quo incarnate."

Futrell is used to deflecting these attacks. She speaks in a patterned and practiced way. For the past six years she has given at least 20 speeches a month, the majority written for the occasion.

Sometimes those thoughts have come from her 20 years of classroom experience when she taught business education in Fairfax County, but more often they are the echoes of Josephine Hatwood, her mother, and Elizabeth Jordan, her 10th-grade English teacher in Lynchburg, Va.

Compounding the problems the schools face is the low self-esteem of many poor youngsters. Futrell can relate to that, but she tries to erase it by telling how her mother groomed young Mary Alice Hatwood.

"Lord knows I had one bootstrap and that was broken," she says. "But my mother said very clearly, 'You don't have to be poor the rest of your life.' We didn't have a car. My mother would change buses two or three times to get to the school. And show up any old time. The kids used to play a game called freeze. They would say 'Mary, here comes your mother,' and whatever I was doing, I froze."

Futrell got her education — Virginia State College on scholarship; later a master's degree from George Washington University. (She plans to work toward a doctorate next year.) She also found a niche, and a position of considerable power.

Hearing George Bush vow to be the "education president" pleased Futrell and her constituents, even though the NEA did not endorse him. However, while satisfied with the ongoing tenure of Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos, she says Bush's campaign promise has not

"translated into presidential action or reality."

She was offended that Bush declined the organization's invitation to address the NEA convention in late June. He was in Maine vacationing with his family during most of the convention.

"The message sent to educators, children and to the nation is that education really isn't important," she says.

When Futrell was elected, the dominant debate about education concerned its sharp demise. The Japanese were the model, the Americans the joke. Then, at the beginning of the Reagan administration, a move to eliminate the department threw the education troops into disarray.

Shortly before Futrell was elected president of NEA in 1983, the debate escalated with the release of the landmark study, "A Nation at Risk," which said the country's education was caught up in "a rising tide of mediocrity."

The criticism has not abated. In early June, Secretary Cavazos said the performance of American high schools had stagnated. Discussions of America's competitive edge goes right back to the classroom.

In the initial debate, the NEA was defensive, citing lack of funds for education. Reagan and Bennett assailed it as intransigent. "The organization was widely regarded as one of the causes of the decline," says Chester E. Finn Jr., professor of education and public policy at Vanderbilt University and one of Bennett's lieutenants.

Gesell Tests Come Under Fire

By Lee Mitgang
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — Diane Jackson calls it "the gift of time." For Beth Bradley, it was "the theft of a year."

Jackson's daughter, Jennifer, and Bradley's son, Shane, are among thousands of 2½- to 6-year-olds each year who take the Gesell "school readiness" test designed to assess physical, social and emotional maturity.

The Gesell is, in effect, a kiddie board — as crucial to school success as the college board exams taken years later.

The outcome can determine whether a child attends regular kindergarten or first grade, or is consigned to an extra year in slower-paced "transitional" or "developmental" kindergartens for the less mature.

The Gesell Institute, located here in two tudor mansions next door to Yale University's divinity school, estimates its test is used in 18 percent of U.S. school districts. But educators and psychologists have lately criticized it as biased, scientifically baseless and prone to abuse.

"A loose cannon," says education professor Samuel Meisels of the University of Michigan, speaking of the test. "It's being used to hurt kids, in the name of beneficence."

Such criticisms have taken a heavy financial toll on the 78-year-old institute, acting director Laura Freebairn-Smith told a reporter. Earlier this month, following a second consecutive year of deficits, the institute decided to put its New Haven properties up for sale and reduce its teacher training staff from 10 to 2.

Gesell leaders, meanwhile, acknowledge the abuses and say the test is being updated.

Nonetheless, they stand by its basic soundness and point to legions of teachers and principals who praise it as a valuable tool to help them assign children to appropriate classes.

"Fads come and go, but the Gesell work is correct," said Freebairn-Smith.

Jennifer and Shane got the same verdict from Gesell: they tested immature, and school authorities advised an extra year.

Jennifer's mother now says the extra year worked miracles. She just finished first-grade with a B-average at Golf Field Elementary School in Rockledge, Fla.

But Shane's mother says the test made her son a wreck. He was so unhappy in what he called the "dummy class" in Denver City, Texas, that she took him out two weeks early last spring.

The Gesell test is not new. Its author, Dr. Arnold Gesell, a pediatrician and school psychologist, first published it in 1925, mainly as a tool for doctors rather than educators.

Now school districts across the country use it. It's especially popular in Florida, Connecticut, North Carolina, New Hampshire, Michigan, Louisiana, Texas, Oklahoma and California, according to Susan L. Sweitzer, who runs the workshops where teachers train to administer the test.

But never have its merits been so hotly challenged by educators, psychologists and parents.

"I think every test maker bears the burden of proof that their test does what they say it will do. They have not demonstrated that. They resort to faith," said Meisels.

"There's a lot of truth in the criticisms," said Freebairn-Smith. "It's forced us to take a look at how our test is used."

The Gesell is unlike the usual standardized pencil-and-paper test.

For about 20 minutes, a teacher or counselor has a youngster build with blocks, name animals, answer questions such as "what did you get for your last birthday?" and fill in a drawing of an "incomplete man" missing limbs and facial features.

To the trained eye, the answers are supposed to reveal maturity.

For example, a 5- or 6-year old might write a beautifully formed letter "O." But if a child starts the letter at the bottom of the circle, that's taken as a sign of immaturity.

Likewise, children who draw belly buttons on the "incomplete man" — who wears an incomplete bow tie — are often judged less mature.

A review of the test in the "Mental Measurements Yearbook," an annual guide to standardized tests, says Gesell has offered "no evidence of internal consistency, reliability, stability over time, or empirical validity."

Critics also charge the questions are outdated and biased against minorities and poor children. The test's norms, or averages, were last updated in 1979, and they were based on 640 New England children, only 7 percent of whom were minorities.

The test asks, for example, "What

Kittens Frolic On Cross-Stitch

Three adorable kittens frolic amid hearts and bows on this irresistible counted cross-stitch sampler. One is a calico kitty, one is checkered, and the third looks like patchwork quilting. You'll feel a sense of meriment with each stitch as you see these winsome kittens take shape.

Make the sampler as a gift and you'll have a friend forever. Eleven-count Aida fabric is recommended for a finished size of 9 by 16 inches — perfect for framing.

Dear Readers: While the following letter is from a happy knitter, much of what she says holds true for the other needlecrafts, so I think all of you — knitters, crocheters, needlepointers or cross-stitchers — will enjoy it equally.

Dear Pat: I have been knitting for more than 20 years. My first knitting lesson was from a friend in a primitive Michigan state campground by the light of a gas lantern hung in a dripping pine tree. Through the years, we have traveled extensively in 49 states and through much of Canada and Mexico.

I have found that it is an excellent craft to pursue while traveling in a trailer. I have completed numberless projects while the miles went rolling quickly by. When stopping in campgrounds for the night, one can knit the complicated patterns and save the simpler ones for daytime traveling. I usually have at least two with me at all times — one for day and one for night.

I have often attracted other knitters while sitting outside our trailer and we've had some good visits with neighbors who would have remained strangers if my knitting had not opened many a conversation. I have also exchanged patterns with some of these newfound friends.

To keep my place while traveling, I record each row on a separate page of a small three-ring notebook — a paper clip or two keeps my place and can easily be moved forward as the car rolls along. When we suddenly stop, I can always ascertain where I stopped my knitting. — Betty C., Goshen, Ind.

Dear Betty: Even those of us who are not campers can testify to the friend-making qualities of needlework and to the almost magical way that otherwise boring times fly by when one is engaged in a happy pursuit. Thank you for sharing your thoughts with us, Betty.

Dear Pat: After making a latch-hook rug from a kit, I decided to make one with yarn I had dyed with natural dyes. I couldn't find a yarn cutter, so I devised my own method.

I carefully wrapped the yarn around a broom handle in a single layer, then cut it with an X-Acto knife down the entire length of the broom handle. This resulted in yarn strips the same length as the commercial latch hook yarn! Thanks for the good ideas I have gained from your newspaper column. — Marianne G., Thorp, Wash.

Dear Marianne: And many thanks to you. A few years ago yarn cutters were not hard to find, but I have heard from several readers that this is no longer the case. I am sure many will be grateful for your clever solution.

Couple Marry Saturday

CHARLOTTE — Annette Shamberger and Steven McDaniel were married at 5 p.m. Saturday in St. Mark United Methodist Church. The Rev. Benjamin Stewart officiated the double-ring ceremony.

Wedding music was presented by Johnny Wooten of Greenville, cousin of the bridegroom, and soloist Damon Stinson of Charlotte. Edith Otterbridge of Falkland, sister of the bridegroom, directed the wedding.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Shamberger Sr. of Charlotte. The bridegroom is the son of Rita A. McDaniel and Clarence Bembry of Falkland and Charlie McDaniel of Greenville.

Given in marriage and escorted by her father, the bride wore a gown of organza with Schiffli lace featuring a Victorian neckline and pearl-accented Renaissance sleeves. The ruffled skirt extended to a cathedral train. The bride wore a fingertip veil of illusion accented with a ruffle and pearls. She carried a mixture of carnations, lilies, roses and gladiolus accented with greenery.

Rozella Shamberger of Charlotte was maid of honor for her sister. Bridesmaids were Dana Dawson of Susan Perry of Snow Hill announces the engagement of her daughter, Cynthia Lynnette Perry, to Kenneth Baker, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Baker of Fountain and Patricia Seymour of Kinston. The bride-elect is also the daughter of the late Bruce Perry. The wedding is planned for Aug. 18.

Let Son Make His Own Judgements About Father

Dear Abby Abigail Van Buren

even though you had just cause to do so.

Don't try to correct the "false image" Nicky has of his natural father in an effort to make his stepfather more acceptable.

Does Nicky's natural father want to see his son? If so, by all means bring them together and let the boy make his own judgments. (Eleven-year-olds are far more perceptive than you think.) If, on the other hand, Nicky's father has no desire to see his son, you must tell Nicky the truth.

Dear Abby: Here is a thought about infants and air travel. It is common, as the plane begins its descent, for several babies to start screaming. This is from low pressure in the middle ear; many babies cannot easily clear their Eustachian tubes to balance the painful pressure differences. Swallowing or sucking helps clear these tubes; a bottle or a pacifier, given as the plane nears the destination, would save babies severe pain, as well as spare the nerves of nearby passengers.

My wife says you've published this idea before. My last two plane trips, next to shrieking infants, tells me it is time to publish it again. — Thomas F. Lowry, M.D., Woodacre, Calif.

Dear Dr. Lowry: Your wife has a good memory, and you're right — it's time to publish this again. Also, if flight attendants would pass this information on to mothers traveling with very small babies, it would be very beneficial.

Dear Abby: Thanks to "Alice in Altoona, Pa.," who pointed out some bad habits we have in our manner of speaking — for example, punctuating the end of every sentence with "Right?" or using "OK" in the same manner.

I offer these overused meaningless words and phrases:

"At this point in time." "Telling it like it is." "State of the art." "When push comes to shove." "The whole ball of wax." "By and large." "You name it."

And: whatever, nitty-gritty, impacted, basically, top dollar, or what have you, hopefully, simplistic, viable, bottom line, you can say that again, and bye now!

How did Edmund Burke, Churchill, Jefferson and Lincoln, to name a few, manage to communicate without the help of the aforementioned? It, like, you know, boggles the mind, so basically, I'm out of here, I'm gone, until a new cliché master signs on. We're talkin' game plan, so hang tough, or whatever, right? — Alex S. Harkavy, Margate, Fla.

Gesell Tests Come Under Fire As Biased, Scientifically Baseless

does your daddy do?" The question might baffle the many children nowadays who lack live-in daddies.

Gesell's critics, who include several early childhood education associations, recently called for an end to mass standardized testing of young children.

Some of Gesell's woes reflect recent criticisms aimed at standardized tests generally. The Scholastic Aptitude Test, taken by college-bound high school students, has been similarly accused of bias, unfairness and misuse.

The Gesell debate is also related to a larger dispute among educators: Are many schoolchildren too old for their grade, or too young?

Louise Bates Ames, at 80 a best-selling author of child-rearing guides and the institute's guiding spirit since Dr. Gesell's death in 1961, contends that as many as half of U.S. schoolchildren are "overplaced," or too young for their grade. Many eventually get labeled slow, or learning disabled.

Such problems might never occur, said Ames, if children were promoted on the basis of "developmental age," not chronological age. If educators and parents would only heed the test's results, fewer children would drop out or be held back later, she said.

"What we're looking at is the whole spectrum of 12 to 13 years of schooling. It's not so much a fear that a kid won't make it in kindergarten. It's hard for parents to see that," said Jane Keirns, a member of Gesell's national lecture staff.

Test critics take the opposite view. They see little virtue in a test that helps schools justify keeping youngsters from progressing with their peers. And they oppose segregating children who test "young" on the Gesell into "developmental kindergartens" or "transitional classes."

"There's little that supports what goes on in developmental K. If a kid is at least one year too old by ninth grade, the probability of dropping out is 50 percent greater," said Meisels. "At least 20 percent of kids in kindergarten are too old for their grade. It may be substantially greater than that."

The test's validity is hard to evaluate. There are no objectively right or wrong answers.

Dr. Gesell first published the test 64 years ago based on observations of children who visited his New Haven clinic. He used hidden cameras to build what may be the world's largest film library depicting the characteristics of children at different ages.

He concluded that each age is marked by predictable patterns of behavior, largely independent of how smart a child is, what kind of home he comes from, or how good parents he has.

The term "terrible twos," for example, is a Gesellian invention, meaning that 2-year-olds can usually be counted on to take a behavioral turn for the worse.

In the institute's heyday during the 1940s and 1950s, movie newsreels glorified Gesell and his then-novel work — a gray, bespectacled eminence, lecturing young physicians and ministering to children.

In 1952, 65 daily newspapers carried a syndicated daily column by Ames on Gesell's child-rearing theories. Only the New Haven Register still carries it.

The argument over Gesell's theories resembles the nature-vs.-nurture debate, with Gesell often painted, not entirely accurately, as a guru of the nature side. He believed childhood development was patterned and predictable, influenced but not determined by environmental factors.

If that's right, it follows that childhood development can be normed, and tested.

But his theories, which some thought downplayed the role of parenting, were considered so out of step with prevailing psychological thinking that the institute was booted off the Yale campus in 1950.

Despite the controversy, Gesell's philosophy has its supporters, especially kindergarten and first-grade teachers who see the test as a tool to validate their instincts about a child's emotional readiness to move on.

"Classroom teachers are the strongest supporters. They say it is very valid," said Ceville Hinman, principal of Green Meadow Elementary School in Comstock, Mich., which has used the test for eight years.

Readiness tests like the Gesell have helped spawn "developmental kindergartens," for kids judged unready for the rigors of regular kindergarten, and "transitional" kindergartens for children judged to need an extra year before entering first grade.

A weak showing on the Gesell test can help sway parents unwilling to take a teacher's word alone on placement decisions.

"Teachers basically like to feel the backup. They feel parents believe them more with the test," said Burelle Meeks, principal of Knight Elementary School in Lilburn, Ga., which has used the Gesell screening test since 1975.

With its increasingly meager resources, however, the institute is limited in monitoring or controlling misuse of the test.

Sweitzer, the institute's head of training, said very few cases of apparent misuse come to the institute's attention.

She learned of one in Broward County, Fla., where low-income children were being recommended for extra kindergarten time for not speaking white, middle-class English.

The situation was corrected, she said. But no one at the institute can say how many children in other districts might be victims of test abuse.

Bradley considers her son Shane such a victim.

Shane took the test in May 1988 in Denver City, Texas, in preparation for entering kindergarten last fall.

Shane was "a very curious child. He has a very great love of life and people," his mother said.

Shane tested above average on a separate IQ test. But on the Gesell, the 5½-year-old was ranked at 4½ developmentally. He was placed into what his school called a "young 5 program," where children spent hours cutting and pasting, while regular kindergartners learned phonics and worked with computers.

"It's segregation. That's how I feel about it," Bradley said. "We've had a horrible year. To me they're deciding a child's future on the basis of a 20-minute test."

Books Teaching Adults

tutor asked organizers to create a similar program for her students. Many lived on back roads not served by public transportation and felt cut off from their communities and their neighbors.

A discussion group for these people, complete with child care, could provide an entree to libraries and other cultural centers, Anderson thought.

It also could show newly literate adults that reading can be more than a survival skill, something new readers get too few opportunities to find out.

"It takes a special genius to make reading boring," says Anderson, an energetic, forthright woman who realized early in her career that "no one ever came to the library looking for the sequel to Dick and Jane."

Most adult reading texts are no more compelling, she says. For every "see Spot run" there's a grown-up equivalent: "Bill had a gun. It was black."

"Once you take the richness out of language, who cares?" Anderson says. "Nobody comes home at night and says, 'Oh God! I've got a new stove! I can't wait to read the manual!'"

Textbooks may teach reading, she thought, but they don't teach the love of reading. That's literature's job. But what sort of literature? Surely no one who reads at a fourth-grade level should be expected to plow through The Grapes of Wrath.

But why not Charlotte's Web? Or Make Way for Ducklings? Why not the best of children's literature?

Would grown men and women be insulted at the prospect of reading the same books as their grade-schoolers? Anderson didn't think so. "Children's literature is complex. Any of these books can be discussed on deep psychological levels."

How about the college professors, writers and other highbrows who'd be leading the discussions? How would they feel about focusing their analytical skills on The Biggest Bear?

"Good literature is good literature," says Nick Boke. "Well-chosen words work. The main difference between adult literature and children's literature is that children's books have fewer words."

"The issues are the same. They are the human issues: loneliness, love, fear, bravery, the small triumphs of day-to-day existence."

And so, with a grant from the Vermont Council on the Humanities, the new program, Connections, made its debut in six towns in 1986. Some books were more advanced than others, but participants were given tapes to help them through the tougher ones. They also got extra coaching from their tutors.

The scholars got some coaching, too. Organizers urged them to act as discussion leaders rather than teachers. "As soon as a program like this smacks of school, people can't hear. They shut down," Anderson says.

At first, Boke recalls, participants were wary. "There they sat, book in hand, with a 'now-what' look on their faces."

It didn't take long for the books to work their magic.

Make Way for Ducklings, the story of a duck who escorts her brood through Boston traffic to a new home in the Public Garden, sparked a lively discussion about the trials of getting kids to mind. Ramona and Her Father, about a girl whose father loses his job, prompted a revelation: "I never knew that kids worried," one mother said.

Tales of ducks, bears and spiders encouraged talk of love, trust and courage. And the more people talked, the more evident it became: Connections could do more than help people become better readers. It also could help them become better parents.

The next year, the program expanded to 14 towns, then to the state hospital and the prisons, where corrections officials witnessed a minor miracle: Inmates refrained from both ethnic slurs and swearing during their book discussions.

For a while, at the state hospital, it was unclear who were the staff members and who were the patients. For a while, it didn't much matter.

Folks were connecting — with books, with ideas, with each other. That might have been that, had it not dawned on organizers that the program was popular not only with adults.

It also scored points with their kids.

Some parents who sat down to read their new books to their children discovered the kids already knew the stories. They'd been busy memorizing the tapes.

One mother, engrossed in Ramona and Her Father, told her hungry family she'd be happy to fix their dinner — as soon as she finished her book. "I couldn't feed those kids 'til 7 that night," she said.

A mother unwilling to tear herself away from her book sends a powerful message: Reading is fun!

"For some people, these were the first books they'd ever owned," says Michael Bouman, executive director of the state Council on the Humanities.

"One man moved his bowling trophies so he could more prominently display his new books. All kinds of things were happening that we didn't have the vision to anticipate."

The Vermont Council on the Humanities' Family Reading Project came off the drawing board last fall, with a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities and a lot of crossed fingers; at the last minute, its architects decided to combine new readers with old in some groups.

'Weapon,' 'Batman' Grip Box Office

By John Horn
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOLLYWOOD — "Lethal Weapon 2" and "Batman" held their reign as the summer's box office champs while the romantic comedy "When Harry Met Sally..." hit third place in its first week of wide release.

"Lethal Weapon 2," starring Mel Gibson and Danny Glover, collected $13 million to finish in first place for the third consecutive week, according to figures released Monday by Exhibitor Relations Co.

"Batman" grossed $11.2 million for second place. The megahit now has made $187.5 million and is nearing $200 million — a mark only nine other films have eclipsed in Hollywood history.

Director Rob Reiner's "When Harry Met Sally..." featuring Billy Crystal and Meg Ryan as friends who become lovers, had ticket sales of $8.8 million to finish in third. In fourth was the comedy "Honey, I Shrunk the Kids," which reported ticket sales of $6.4 million.

"Licence to Kill," the latest James Bond movie with Timothy Dalton, was fifth with $5.1 million. The re-release of the animated classic "Peter Pan" finished in sixth with $4.3 million.

In seventh place was Robin Williams' bittersweet drama "Dead Poets Society" with ticket sales of $3.5 million. It was followed by Steven Spielberg's "Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade" at $3.4 million.

Rounding out the Top 10 were the comedy sequel "Ghostbusters II" with $2.9 million and the comedy "Weekend at Bernie's" with $2.7 million.

Here are the top movies for the weekend as tallied by Exhibitor Relations, with distributor, weekend gross, number of theater screens, average per screen, total gross and number of weeks in release.

1. "Lethal Weapon 2," Warner Bros., $13 million, 1,830 screens, $7,116 per screen, $71.6 million, three weeks.
2. "Batman," Warner Bros., $11.2 million, 2,201 screens, $5,072 per screen, $187.5 million, five weeks.
3. "When Harry Met Sally..." Columbia, $8.8 million, 775 screens, $11,415 per screen, $12.1 million, two weeks.
4. "Honey, I Shrunk the Kids,"

Jackie Mason To Try A Sitcom

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — If Jackie Mason can translate his ability to boil things down to their barest basics, he might have a hit show on ABC this fall.

Stars and producers have been sitting in news conferences answering questions from the 100-plus television critics who are meeting here to preview 1989-90 programming.

One TV critic asked Mason whether his "Chicken Soup," with its heavy emphasis on the ethnicity of its star, would play in the Midwest.

"I don't see why I have to answer to you," said Mason, one of the many times he cracked up the audience.

In fact, Mason had flown in from Washington to help promote his new show. Mason won a Tony for his one-man show on Broadway, and now, he's hooked up with Marcy Carsey and Tom Werner, executive producers of "The Cosby Show" and "Roseanne" to create a new sitcom.

Mason plays a character very much like himself, an aging Jewish bachelor. He lives with his mother and is conducting a secret affair with a Catholic neighbor, played by Lynn Redgrave, who has several children.

With Mason holding court, the news conference took on aspects of a nightclub performance. Even Redgrave got into the act when she was asked what it was like working with Mason.

"Well, I've worked with a few comedians in my day, and I must say that usually I've understood why they mostly work alone," she said.

Mason, however, is "a rarity," she added. "And when I met him, I realized I was deeply in love with him, and we're planning to run away."

As to the more serious question of whether a mass audience will take to a sitcom about a very Jewish man who performs monologues on his roof, and a very Catholic woman with an Irish brogue, Mason insisted viewers would take to the show.

He noted he has spent a career performing his stand-up act in the Midwest as well as elsewhere, and he found no communication problem.

"It's all pure nonsense in my opinion, because all my life as a comedian, I've been watching gentiles laughing at my humor, and I'm watching Jews tell me, yech, it's a little too Jewish," he said.

Weird Al Kiss
NEW YORK (AP) — Saturday Night Live regular Victoria Jackson, showing she can kiss and tell with the best of them, discussed what it was like to kiss Weird Al Yankovic in their new movie, "UHF."
"We practiced for hours the night before. I loved every minute of it. Al's a great kisser," she told People magazine for its July 31 issue.
But Jackson was a little more critical of others.
"A lot of male actors think it's a turn-on to show their tongue, and it grosses me out as an actress. I don't know who's spreading the myth among these guys that it's sexy to do that," she said.

Milk: A Simple Choice No More

By Linda Giuca
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Remember when milk was delivered to your door — in glass bottles, no less? We are talking whole milk with fresh cream that rose to the top. In those days, the biggest decision a family had to make was deciding when to drink it.

Today's shopper needs a score card to keep up with the changes in the milk department at the local supermarket. Milk is pasteurized, ultra-pasteurized, homogenized, protein- or calcium-fortified, lactose-reduced, cultured, skimmed and flavored with chocolate or strawberry. Its fat content is under public scrutiny; its shelf life dated carefully.

Milk falls into one of the four food groups that dietitians are always talking about. On the plus side, milk will add protein, carbohydrates, calcium, vitamins and minerals to the daily diet. However, it also will add fat to your diet — unless you make the right choices.

We asked Susan Dion, a registered dietitian and marketing director of food service for Milk Promotion Services Inc. in South Windsor, Conn., to explain those choices.

"If you're looking to increase protein and calcium in the diet, all milks are good," she says. But what about the fat issue?

First, some background: Milk is about 87 percent water.

Remove the water from a glass of milk, and you are left with about 13 percent solids from protein, fats and carbohydrates. By U.S. Department of Agriculture standards, all milk must contain at least 8.25 percent solids that are not derived from fat. That is where the various milk products part company. Whole milk must contain at least 3.25 percent fat, low-fat milks either 1 percent or 2 percent, and skim milk .05 percent or less.

Fat is what makes whole milk taste rich and almost thick. If you like the idea of less fat but not the watery, less creamy taste of skim milk, check the ingredient label on your skim or low-fat milk. "To bring the 'mouth feel' up, many dairies add non-fat milk solids — that's like dry milk — to get a richer-tasting product" without increasing fat content, Dion says.

The added milk solids are responsible for another buzzword on milk labels: "protein-fortified." These solids, while improving milk's flavor and consistency, also add protein, calcium and calories to the milk product.

Dairies fortify milk in other ways. Although milk is naturally an excellent source of calcium (about 300 milligrams in an 8-ounce glass or about one-third of the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowance for adults), some milk producers add more. Labeled "calcium-fortified," these types rarely contain added non-fat milk solids because the extra protein can hinder the body's absorption of calcium, Dion says. Calcium-fortified milks often contain emulsifiers, such as carrageenan, which act to keep the calcium suspended uniformly through the milk.

Calcium-fortified milks also may be lactose-reduced to help absorption, Dion says.

The lactose — a natural-occurring sugar — in milk can pose a digestion problem for individuals whose bodies do not have enough of the lactase enzyme to break down the lactose. Milk such as Hood's Lactaid is treated with the lactase enzyme to aid in digestibility for lactose-intolerant people. Lactaid, made from 1 percent low-fat milk, has 70 percent less lactose than regular low-fat milk.

Vitamins D is always added to milk because it works with calcium and phosphorus to build and maintain strong bones. Since this vitamin was added to milk, rickets, a condition caused by a vitamin-D deficiency, has almost disappeared in the United States.

Vitamin A is added to skim and low-fat milks. Because vitamin A is a fat-soluble vitamin, it is lost when the fat is removed from whole milk. Federal regulations stipulate that vitamin A must be restored to low-fat and skim milks.

Flavored milks, buttermilk and acidophilus milk can be lumped into the category of specialty milks.

Chocolate and strawberry are the common flavors added to whole or low-fat milk. These flavorings and added sweeteners do not change the nutrient content, but they do boost the calorie count.

Most milk drinkers would say that the taste for buttermilk is an acquired one. Craig Claiborne, former food editor of The New York Times, is one buttermilk aficionado.

In his book, Craig Claiborne's The New York Times Food Encyclopedia (Times; $24.95), he lists buttermilk as one of his favorite beverages. "As a child in the South, I grew up on it; back then, pardon the expression, the name was more richly deserved," he writes. "The milk was made from clabbered milk, which is to say milk that had been left to stand and become slightly sour overnight. The fat from the milk would rise to the top, and the milk would be churned up and down with a paddle. The top fat would become sweet butter, and there would be flecks of this throughout the snow-white and, to my taste, delectable liquid that remained."

The buttermilk sold in supermarkets today is a cultured milk product. A bacterial culture is added to skim or low-fat pasteurized milk until the acidity rises above a half percent.

"Buttermilk is coming into its own because of cholesterol-free diets," says Patricia Tripp, publicist for Milk Promotion Services. "People are using it in cakes and biscuits." Dion says, "It's excellent as a marinade for meats and poultry."

Another cultured product is acidophilus milk. Cultured bacteria are added to skim or low-fat milk but are not allowed to progress to the stage of souring the milk, as in buttermilk. Quick chilling slows the bacteria's progress, and the milk tastes the same as regular milk.

"Sweet acidophilus milk is more of a health food," Dion says. "When you drink the milk, the lactose bacillus becomes active in the intestinal system and aids digestibility." The milk is good especially for individuals on antibiotics, because the medication can affect the lactose bacillus population in the intestines, she says.

A cousin to the milk family is cream, also distinguished by the amount of fat. Cream is the part of the milk high in fat and rich in flavor. By federal standards, cream must contain at least 18 percent fat.

Heavy cream contains the most fat, at least 36 percent. Whipping cream is second with between 30 percent and 36 percent fat, followed by light cream with between 18 percent and 30 percent.

Half-and-half, a mixture of milk and cream, must contain between 10.5 percent and 18 percent fat.

"Using one or the other (cream) is a pure judgment call," Dion says. "If you're making a rich, thick sauce — a gourmet sauce — you'll probably want heavy cream. For cappuccino, a higher fat product will whip up better. You'll get a good froth."

The Daily Reflector/Shannon Wolfe

The rich, thick taste of milk comes from its fat content

Two important steps in milk processing are homogenization and pasteurization.

Most milk is homogenized by being pumped through tiny openings. The fat in the milk is broken into particles too small to stick together. As a result, the fat remains mixed throughout the milk rather than rising to the top as cream.

All milk shipped in interstate commerce must be pasteurized. Heating milk destroys any disease-producing bacteria and increases the keeping quality. Ordinary pasteurization involves heating and holding milk at 145 degrees F for 30 seconds or 161 degrees F for 15 seconds.

Ultra-pasteurized milk — also known as ultra-high temperature milk — brings processed milk to a temperature of 280 degrees F for at least two seconds.

The Seven Commandments Of Food Safety

Q. Someone told me that mayonnaise doesn't cause ptomaine poisoning. Is she right? — S.G., Ayden

A. Yep. Commercially made mayonnaise does not lead to food poisoning. If you get sick after eating potato or chicken salad, it was probably a food microorganism with the protein of the egg or chicken that caused the illness. The best way to avoid sad endings to picnics or other meals is to follow the seven commandments of food safety.

1. Wash hands before handling food.
2. Keep perishable food safe by keeping it cold.
3. Don't thaw food on the kitchen counter.
4. Wash your hands, cooking utensils and counters again after contact with raw chicken, seafood or meat.
5. Never leave perishable food out of the cold two hours.
6. Thoroughly cook raw meat, fish, poultry, eggs.

Kathy Kolasa

Ph.D., ECU Dept. Family Medicine

7. Immediately refrigerate/freezer leftovers.

(And remember, weight watchers, dispose of leftovers quickly, but not into your mouth)

Mayonnaise and salad dressings are fat. As you make the salads, try to use as little as possible to flavor the salad. Try to use the new lite salad dressings. They taste good. Or, substitute yogurt with some lemon or spices for the salad dressing.

Oh yes, while some people have used the word ptomaine to describe food sickness, the common types of food poisoning microorganisms are salmonella, c. jejuni, clostridium botulinum, and staphylococcus aureus. Unfortunately, listeria monocytogenes is becoming more common, too.

Several years ago, the N.C. Agricultural Extension Service prepared a handout on "Organizing a Safe Group Meal." They said it takes forethought and planning to minimize the chance of food poisoning. Some of the points to consider in planning your church supper, group picnic or other meals are as follows:

- The quality and safety will be only as good as the food you serve.

- Never buy for group meals surplus, damaged or out-of-date food.

- Arrange proper storage and handling of food before preparation. Either keep foods that should be cold refrigerated or have them delivered as close to preparation and eating time as possible.

- Never use home canned vegetables, meat or fish for large group meals.

- Use clean and sanitized equipment.
- Insist all food preparers follow good hygiene rules.

- Remember food poisoning microorganisms grow rapidly at room temperature.
- Keep garbage out of food preparation areas.

If the group is very large, have a safety chairman!

The Major Differences Show Up In Fat Content

By Linda Giuca
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Milk is about 87 percent water and 13 percent solids, including fat, fat-soluble vitamins, protein, carbohydrates, water-soluble vitamins and minerals.

Aside from protein, fat and carbohydrates, milk contains calcium and vitamins A, D and riboflavin.

Milk and cream are either pasteurized or ultra-pasteurized to destroy disease-producing bacteria and extend the shelf life. Both methods require heating milk at specific temperatures. Ordinary pasteurization heats milk at 145 degrees F for 30 seconds or 161 degrees F for 15 seconds. Ultra-pasteurization uses a higher temperature — 280 degrees F for at least two seconds.

The major difference among the types of milk — whole, low-fat, skim — is the amount of fat each contains. Here is a brief rundown of the varieties of milk available at the average supermarket.

- Whole milk, the richest-tasting, contains at least 3.25 percent fat.
- Low-fat milk has some fat removed. The label will state the amount of fat that remains, generally 1 percent or 2 percent. The vitamin A in milk is lost when the extra fat is removed but replaced to meet government standards.
- Skim or non-fat milk has the least amount of fat — and a less rich flavor and consistency. Skim milk contains about half a percent of fat and has been fortified with vitamin A. Sometimes, non-fat dry milk solids are added to improve the flavor and consistency of the milk; if so, the label will say "protein-fortified."
- Flavored milk such as chocolate or strawberry is made by adding sweeteners and flavorings to whole or low-fat milk. Because of those additives, flavored milks have more calories than regular milk.
- Cultured buttermilk is made by adding a bacterial culture to pasteurized milk. The bacteria convert part of the lactose or milk sugar to lactic acid, which produces a sour flavor. Aside from drinking, buttermilk is used in cooking. In recipes, yogurt is the preferred substitute for buttermilk.

- Acidophilus-cultured milk is made by adding a bacterial culture to pasteurized milk. After mixing, the milk is immediately cooled to prevent fermentation of the bacteria. Unlike buttermilk, the flavor does not change. Acidophilus milk may be prescribed for people on antibiotics because the bacteria help to restore beneficial microorganisms in the body.

- Calcium-fortified milk is exactly that — calcium, the mineral responsible for healthy teeth and bones, is added.

- Lactase-treated milk is often marketed under the name Lactaid. The enzyme lactase is added to the milk to break down lactose, the primary carbohydrate or naturally occurring sugar in milk. The lactase-treated milk can be digested by people who are lactose-intolerant.

- Evaporated milk and sweetened condensed milk, found on supermarket shelves, cause much confusion. To make evaporated milk, processors remove about 60 percent of the water. Sweetened condensed milk also has about 60 percent of the water removed, but sugar is added to the liquid. Since no sugar is added to evaporated milk, the two are not interchangeable in recipes.

Cream is the part of milk that is highest in fat and richest in flavor. Federal standards of identity say that cream must contain not less than 18 percent fat. Most creams are ultra-pasteurized, a heating process that extends their shelf life.

- Heavy cream contains at least 36 percent fat.
- Whipping cream, also known as light whipping cream, contains between 30 percent and 36 percent fat.
- Light cream, also known as coffee cream, contains between 18 percent and 30 percent fat.
- Half-and-half, a mixture of pasteurized or ultra-pasteurized milk and cream, contains between 10.5 percent and 18 percent fat.

Cold Milk Stays Fresh Longer

By Linda Giuca
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

The date on containers of milk or cream is known as the "pull date" — the day when retailers must pull the unsold products from their shelves.

Whether the container is opened or stays closed, the milk will remain fresh for about two days past the pull date, says registered dietitian Susan Dion, marketing director of food service for Milk Promotion Services Inc. in South Windsor, Conn. After that date, the milk will be safe to drink for several more days but will begin to develop an off flavor. Dion suggests that consumers purchase milk with the latest pull date.

"The biggest factor to affect milk is temperature," Dion says. "Milk should be stored at 33° to 40° F. Once you expose milk to increased temperatures, you immediately get off flavors."

As a general rule, figure that for every 5° F rise in temperature, the shelf life is reduced by 50 percent. For example, if milk will last 10 days at 40° F, it will last only five days at 45° F.

Dion recommends that shoppers make the dairy case their last stop during shopping and refrigerate the milk promptly after purchase. She also suggests storing milk in the coldest part of the refrigerator — toward the back, close to the fan, rather than on the door.

Freezing milk does not affect its nutritional value. Milk that has been frozen should be left to thaw slowly in the refrigerator, then stirred gently. The consistency will be more watery. Use the milk in cooking or blended drinks.

The pull date on ultra-pasteurized cream is generally 30-45 days past the processing and packaging. Like milk, cream should be stored at 40° F or lower (without freezing) and will taste good for two or so days past the pull date before it begins to develop off flavors.

Freezing also will change cream into a more watery product that will not whip properly. Whipped cream may be stored, covered tightly, in the freezer at 0° F up to three months. Frozen whipped cream should be thawed in the refrigerator.

Jalapeno-Stuffed Tomatoes Great With Chicken, Fish, Or For Brunch

By Nancy Byal
BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS

Tomatoes don't like chills; cold temperatures stop ripening and kill the flavor. Leave partially ripe tomatoes on the counter for a few days until they're bright red and slightly softened. Then they'll be just right for this southwestern-style side dish to serve with chicken, fish, or for brunch.

Instead of hollowing out the tomato half completely, scoop out only the seeds. The tomatoes will keep their shape and hold a generous amount of filling.

JALAPENO-STUFFED TOMATOES
4 large tomatoes (about 2 lbs.)
3 slices firm-textured white bread, torn into pieces
1 small onion, halved
1/2 to 1 small jalapeno pepper, seeded
2 tbsps. margarine or butter, melted

1/2 cup shredded Cheddar cheese (2 ounces)

Use tomatoes held at room temperature until fully ripe. Cut tomatoes in half horizontally; remove seeds from between cell walls with the tip of a spoon or knife. Place cut side up in a shallow baking dish; set aside.

In a blender container or food processor, process bread until fine crumbs form; transfer to a medium bowl. Process onion and pepper until finely chopped; cook in hot margarine 1 to 2 minutes. Add onion mixture to bread crumbs along with cheese; toss until thoroughly mixed. Spoon into tomato halves. Bake, uncovered, in 350-degree F oven for 15 to 20 minutes or until topping is lightly toasted. Makes 8 servings.

Old Way Best To Poach Eggs

By Joan Drake
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

We have received several requests asking how to properly poach eggs. Admittedly, there are pans that cook eggs in individual molds over hot water, but the classic method is to cook them in simmering water.

Use a 10- to 12-inch skillet. Some experts suggest lightly coating the bottom and sides of the pan with shortening to prevent the eggs from sticking.

Add water to a depth of 1½ to 2 inches. Bring the water to a boil, then reduce the heat to medium-low so that the water just simmers. Boiling water will toughen the eggs and the agitation may break them apart. On the other hand, if the water is not hot enough, the eggs will not cook rapidly enough and the whites will spread.

Squeezing a few drops of lemon juice (Step 1) or vinegar into the water will help to firm the egg whites more quickly and retain the rounded shape but it also affects the flavor of the eggs. If the lemon or vinegar is omitted, the best alternative is to use the freshest eggs possible, straight from the refrigerator so they are still cold.

Although some sources we checked suggested adding salt to the water, others claim it tends to make the egg whites runny.

When ready to begin cooking, break each egg into a ramekin or cup. Hold the ramekin close to the surface of the water and gently slide the egg down the side of the pan (Step 2) into the water. Three to four eggs may be cooked at once, but do not overcrowd the pan.

Basics

Simmer, uncovered, 3 to 5 minutes. Then carefully lift the eggs with a slotted spoon or spatula (Step 3) and lightly touch them with your finger (Step 4) to check the doneness.

By past standards, poached eggs were cooked when the white was firm and yolk still soft. It should be noted, however, that due to recent outbreaks of food-borne illness caused by raw eggs contaminated with Salmonella enteritidis, the U.S. Department of Agriculture advises consumers there may be some risk in eating eggs lightly cooked. To kill any bacteria that may be present, eggs must be cooked until both the yolks and whites are firm.

When properly poached, eggs are rounded with well-centered yolks. Sometimes, however, their appearance can be improved by trimming off the ragged edges. If the eggs are to be served at once, drain briefly on paper towels.

The eggs may be stored up to 24 hours by placing them in a bowl of cold water and refrigerating. Reheat the eggs briefly in hot water before serving.

Poached eggs may be served simply, with toast, or dressed up with cheese or tomato sauce. Add English muffins, Canadian bacon and Hollandaise sauce to create eggs Benedict.

Nit-Picking Over Eggs Is Hiding Real Issues

By Colleen Pierre
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

The uproar over the cholesterol content of egg yolks obscures a more serious cholesterol-related issue.

The Department of Agriculture's latest analysis on eggs shows that the average large egg contains only 213 milligrams of cholesterol, down 61 milligrams from the last egg-related data published by the department in its "Nutrient Content of Foods" handbook.

How did eggs change? Information published by the Egg Nutrition Center in Washington, D.C., an industry group, shows that eggs really are different now. Changes in production practices — such as changes in feed formulations, genetic differences in laying flocks and smaller yolks — produce an egg lower in cholesterol than ever before. In addition, changes in analytical techniques allow for more precise measurements of cholesterol content.

As a result, the nutrition committee of the American Heart Association now says that a person on a cholesterol-lowering diet can eat four egg yolks a week instead of the old limit of three and still stay within its guidelines limiting dietary cholesterol to 300 milligrams or less a day.

But this nit-picking over three yolks or four begs the issue and continues to obscure the fact that saturated fat — not dietary cholesterol — is the real culprit in raising blood cholesterol levels.

Are people excited about one more egg yolk? I think not. Among the folks I counsel or speak with at public gatherings, those most concerned about their blood cholesterol levels have abandoned egg yolks completely. Most believe consuming high-cholesterol foods is what elevates blood cholesterol. Research does not support this conclusion, however.

Donald McNamara, professor in the nutrition and food science department at the University of Arizona, notes that an analysis of 68 published studies shows that reducing the cholesterol we eat in food from the current average of 450 milligrams a day to the recommended 300 milligrams a day would reduce blood cholesterol levels by only 3.4 milligrams per deciliter (mg-dl — the standard measurement for blood cholesterol).

So, if your blood cholesterol is at the national average of 210 mg-dl, reducing your dietary cholesterol to 300 milligrams a day would probably knock your blood cholesterol down by about 1.6 percent.

Not much of a change. Other research shows that reducing saturated fat to 10 percent or less of total calories can reduce blood cholesterol levels by 20 percent to 40 percent.

Now that's a big change. How much saturated fat can you have? A woman can have about 20 grams of saturated fat a day, and a man about 26. An egg yolk contains 1.5 grams of saturated fat.

By comparison: An 8-ounce glass of low-fat (2 percent) milk contains 3 grams of saturated fat.

New Data A Blessing For Image Of Eggs

By Rose Dosti
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

In May, the U.S. Department of Agriculture updated nutrient composition data for raw whole eggs and came up with significant reductions in the cholesterol count, thus shedding new light as well as confusion over the use of eggs by cholesterol-obsessed Americans.

The updated data shows that the value of cholesterol in eggs is 22 percent lower, dropping from 275 milligrams in 1976 to 213 milligrams in 1989.

The new data showing a decrease in cholesterol content is considered a blessing for image-battered eggs, which, up to now, have been berated because of their high cholesterol content.

The new data won the American Heart Association stamp of approval on use of as many as four eggs per week by healthy American adults, one more egg per week than previously recommended.

"In view of new information from the USDA indicating lower cholesterol content in egg yolks, the AHA's nutrition committee has indicated that current AHA Dietary Guidelines may be satisfied using four egg yolks per week by healthy American adults," the American Heart Association says in a policy paper.

The key words, however, are "healthy Americans." Those who have severe restrictions on cholesterol should follow their doctor's advice on the use of eggs.

The new American Heart Association recommendation increasing servings of eggs from three to four per week "does not represent a change in the AHA's dietary guidelines," says a heart association policy statement. "The Nutrition Committee still recommends a maximum of 300 milligrams of dietary cholesterol per day. But new analyses of egg yolks show the average cholesterol content of one large egg yolk to be 213 milligrams rather than the previously accepted 274 milligrams. This allows up to four, rather than three, egg yolks from all sources within currently suggested meal plans."

Consumers are cautioned to compensate for "invisible" egg yolks consumed in baked and other prepared foods. "The committee re-emphasized that individuals must still strive for a balanced diet, including a variety of foods," the statement reads.

The American Dietetic Association, a professional organization of registered dietitians, says that the lower cholesterol count will make it that much easier for those who refrained from eating eggs altogether to take another look at "nature's perfect food in a package," and for those who restricted intake to two or three per week, in accordance with the heart association's recommendations.

"Dietitians look upon eggs as a valuable, highly nutrient-dense food, particularly for growing children and teen-agers. For the elderly, eggs are an excellent source of inexpensive protein," said Rita Storey, spokeswoman for the American Dietetic Association.

"This doesn't mean that it's OK to go hog-wild with eggs," Storey said. "Excess intake beyond the recommended amount should be avoided." Consumers should also be wary of egg content in processed foods. "At restaurants, instead of a three- or four-egg omelet, request one made with only one or two eggs," Storey said.

The new value for cholesterol was a result of a two-part, nationwide sampling and nutrient analysis designed by the Department of Agriculture's Human Nutrition Research Center and funded by the Egg Nutrition Center.

"The lower cholesterol values can allow more choice for individuals who wish to include eggs in a cholesterol lowering diet," according to Cathy McCharen of the Egg Nutrition Center. "We continue to recommend using one egg and two whites for serving scrambled, omelets, or other egg dishes. Now you can enjoy eggs four times a week, instead of three," she said.

The Department of Agriculture sampling analysis went like this: Using large eggs from 130 suppliers, accounting for more than 60 percent of the nation's egg production, the 1989 analysis produced a new value for cholesterol, 213 milligrams per large, which is 22 percent lower than the value published in 1976.

The Department of Agriculture update shows that there was a small decrease in fat content of eggs, which was reflected in all three fatty acid classes — saturated, monounsaturated and polyunsaturated.

Likewise, values of seven minerals listed in "Agricultural Handbook No. 8-1 Composition of Foods" (calcium, phosphorus, iron, sodium, potassium, niacin and ascorbic acid) decreased as well, with iron decreasing the most, meaning that along with decrease in cholesterol came a decrease in mineral nutrients as well. Of the eight vitamins available in measurable quantities, four had higher values and four had lower values.

However, according to Storey, the reduction in minerals does not significantly affect the total intake of nutrients in the diet. By adding one or two more eggs to the diet each week, one automatically increases lost minerals, said Storey. The Department of Agriculture report also states that changes in nutrient intake can be expected to result from changes in the nutrient content of foods.

For instance, in the 1985 Continuing Survey of Food Intakes by Individuals, the four-day intake of cholesterol by women age 19 to 50 years was 280 milligrams per day. The new cholesterol value for eggs would lower this estimate by about 9 percent, assuming that the kind and amount of food eaten remain constant.

In 1985, 42 percent of women's cholesterol intake was provided by eggs, including both eggs eaten separately and those eaten as part of mixtures, such as custard. The new value would reduce this estimate to 36 percent.

Here is a recipe using eggs and egg whites for making scrambled eggs that can be dressed up with herbs and spices for variety.

SCRAMBLED EGGS WITHOUT ADDED FAT

- 1 egg
- 2 egg whites
- Salt, pepper
- ¼ cup chicken broth

Beat egg and egg whites. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Bring chicken broth to boil. Reduce heat to medium and add egg mixture. Cook, scrambling until firm as desired and liquid is absorbed. Makes 1 serving.

Note: Any desired herbs, such as chopped, fresh tarragon, mint, basil, or mixed herbs may be added to beaten egg mixture before cooking for variety.

Cherry Season Short, Sweet

By Nancy Byal
BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS

Short but sweet — that's the fresh cherry season. Tree-ripened sweet cherries are available from mid-June through mid-August. The two main varieties are the Bing — round and rich dark red in color — and the red, heart-shaped Lambert.

Pair either variety with cheese for this easy summer salad. Serve it as a refreshing side dish with grilled chicken, pork or beef. Another time, substitute pistachio nuts for the almonds and 2 tablespoons crumbled blue cheese for the Monterey Jack.

CHERRY-CHEESE SALAD

- ¾ cup cubed Monterey Jack cheese
- Honey Caesar Dressing (recipe follows)
- 3 cups torn greens
- 1 cup pitted fresh sweet cherries
- 1 small Golden Delicious apple, cored and cubed
- ¼ cup thinly sliced celery
- 2 tbsps. sliced almonds

Combine cheese and dressing; let stand 1 hour. Combine greens, cher-

Stories Highlight Recipes In Jaffrey's Cookbook

By Sujata Banerjee
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Madhur Jaffrey has lived a dramatic life. The 50-something India-born actress, formerly married to actor Sayed Jaffrey and now to American violinist Sanford Allen, has lived in India, Europe, and for the last 32 years, in the United States. Jaffrey has had roles in such films as "Heat and Dust" and theatrical plays on and off Broadway. And all the while she has raised three daughters, spun out four cookbooks on Indian, Middle Eastern and Asian cooking, and produced a BBC Indian cooking series. With a life like that, who wouldn't have fascinating stories to tell?

This she does in Madhur Jaffrey's Cookbook: Easy East-West Menus for Family and Friends (Harper & Row Publishers; 1989; $22.50). While Jaffrey's four previous cookbooks splendidly present Indian, Middle Eastern and Asian cuisine in pure, unadulterated form, this book is a hegemony of recipes that blur national lines and encompass her family's tastes. Reading the book is like having a seat at the table for Jaffrey's picnics, parties, and family meals.

Here is an example, in her introduction to a recipe called "Basy Corn Chowder":

"I cannot help but get sentimental every time I eat corn chowder. You see, a long time ago — over two decades ago — a young man and I were sitting in a neighborhood restaurant in Greenwich Village, eating a simple bowl of this chowder, when he was suddenly seized by the desire to propose to me. The restaurant was very noisy. He insists that I said 'Yes,' I insist that I said nothing at all, or 'Hm,' at best. At any rate, the facts are that the restaurant (The Limelight) is no more, but we are married.

"There is nothing quite as soothing as a bowl of steaming corn chowder on a cool day. There are hundreds of recipes for this all across America. Mine is probably one of the simplest. It is also quite delicious. You could serve it for lunch with crisp toasts or with a crusty loaf of bread or as part of a larger meal," she writes.

Such delightful introductions precede all the recipes, which focus on healthful light fare such as soup, fish, chicken, vegetables and rice. The recipes are organized into three or four-dish menus of her personal favorites. One hedonistic menu, "All of my favorite things," includes artichokes served with ginger butter, broiled salmon steaks with minty yogurt sauce, and rice with asparagus. A menu Jaffrey calls "Aromatic and Light" consists of chicken marinated in yogurt and herbs, broccoli rabe with garlic and mustard seeds, and rice with tomato and mushrooms. Recipes are concise, easy to understand and employ simple techniques such as broiling, steaming or stir-frying and take less than 30 minutes to complete.

While Jaffrey is an expert at regional Indian cooking, she also offers interesting recipes from the Anglo-Indian style of cooking that developed when British colonials asked their Indian cooks to spice up traditional English dishes and also tone down fiery Indian ones. The result is special in its own right, as Jaffrey proves with a brunch menu combining Indian-style scrambled eggs with potatoes, cauliflower and fresh ginger; spicy chicken livers with cumin; broiled tomatoes flavored with thyme; and is properly enhanced with toast and tea. Another Anglo-Indian menu suitable for dinner is gingery chicken breasts, fried potatoes flavored with fennel seeds, and green beans stewed with fresh green coriander. Other international influences in the book are Iran, Japan, China, Italy and Ecuador, Thailand the Philippines and Scotland.

Madhur Jaffrey's Cookbook is a good bet for beginning international cooks and experienced gourmets alike. And for people who love stories about family and travel, the book makes terrific bedside reading. A word of caution, though; many ingredients may call for a special trip to the gourmet grocery or health food store — unless of course, you are a person who always keeps fresh coriander and green chilies in the fridge.

Here are two recipes from Madhur Jaffrey's Cookbook that are easy to make.

GREEN BEANS WITH TWO MUSTARDS

Salt, to taste
3 tbsps. lemon juice
1 tbsp. Dijon-style mustard
Freshly ground black pepper, to taste
¼ tsp. cayenne pepper
6 tbsps. olive oil
1½ tbsps. whole yellow mustard seeds
3 cloves garlic, peeled and cut in thin slivers
1½ lbs. green beans with their ends trimmed

saltier than your natural preference). Put the lemon juice in a small bowl. Add the Dijon-style mustard, 1 teaspoon salt, black pepper and cayenne pepper. Mix.

Heat the oil in a small cast-iron frying pan over a medium flame. When hot, put in the mustard seeds. As soon as they start to pop (this just takes a few seconds), put in the garlic. Stir the garlic until the slivers turn light brown. Take the frying pan off the flame and let the oil cool just slightly. Beat the oil mixture into the lemon juice mixture until you have a creamy dressing.

The pot of water should now be at a rolling boil. Drop in the green beans. Boil vigorously for 3-5 minutes or until the beans are crisp-tender. Drain thoroughly. Put the beans into a large bowl. Beat the dressing once again and pour over the beans. Toss. Once the beans have cooled, they may be covered and refrigerated.

Because I'm watching my sodium intake, I did not use salt when boiling the green beans.

GOLDEN SESAME CORN BREAD

1 tbsp. plus 4 tbsps. peanut or corn oil
1 tbsp. whole yellow mustard seeds

1 tbsp. whole sesame seeds
1 cup cornmeal
1 cup all-purpose flour
3 tbsps. sugar
4 tbsps. baking powder
½ tsp. salt
1 cup plain yogurt, lightly beaten
¼ cup milk
1 egg, lightly beaten
1 fresh jalapeno pepper or 5-6 fresh hot green chilies, very finely chopped (with seeds)
2 tps. very finely grated, peeled fresh ginger
2 tbsps. fresh green coriander (Chinese parsley)

Preheat the oven to 400°. Pour 1 tablespoon oil into an 8-inch-square metal cake pan and heat over a medium-low flame. When very hot, put in the mustard seeds. As soon as they begin to pop, put in the sesame seeds. Stir them about for 10 seconds. Remove the pan from the fire. Spoon out the seeds and put them in a saucer. Some will remain clinging to the pan. This is as it should be; leave them there. Just push what remain toward the bottom.

Combine the cornmeal, flour, sugar, baking powder and salt in a bowl. Mix slightly. Add yogurt, milk, egg, jalapeno or chilies, ginger, green coriander and 4 tablespoons oil. Stir gently and mix thoroughly. Spoon the corn bread batter into the cake pan. Scatter the seed mixture from the saucer over the top as evenly as you can. Bake for 25-30 minutes or until golden brown.

This bread is best served straight from the oven. I cut it into squares or thick slices and put them in a bread basket lined and covered with a single large napkin. However, it can be made ahead of time, wrapped in foil and reheated in a 400° oven for 10-12 minutes.

Because many metal cake pans are not safe to use on top of stoves, I roasted the mustard and sesame seeds in a small, cast-iron pan instead. I added a touch of oil to the bottom of the cake pan before I spooned the corn bread batter in.
