Pitt Legislators Defend Votes On Highway Bill

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Complaints that the highway package approved Thursday by state lawmakers will leave a gaping hole in future budgets are unjustified, Pitt legislators say.

"That is a lot of slang and misstatement of fact," said Sen. R.L. "Bob" Martin, who supported the highway plan.

On Thursday, the General Assembly approved an $8.6 billion highway package that is designed to put four-lane highways to within 10 miles of 90 percent of the state's population and pave nearly all roads by the end of the century.

Revenue for the construction will be raised through a 5 1/4-cent per gallon increase in the gasoline tax, which takes effect Tuesday. It will also be financed through an 8 percent tax on car rentals, an increase in the title fee from $5 to $35 and an increase in the tax on automobile sales tax from 2 percent to 3 percent, with a $1,000 cap that will rise to $1,500 in four years.

All Pitt area lawmakers supported the bill, except for Rep. Walter B. Jones Jr., a Farmville Democrat, who was not on the floor and did not vote Thursday, according to a House clerk. He voted against the plan at earlier stages.

Efforts to contact Jones this morning were unsuccessful.

Gov. Jim Martin and GOP lawmakers argued against the plan because the compromise version will divert auto sales tax revenue to fund 6 percent raises for teachers and state employees for two years.

Given a chance, Gov. Martin said he would have vetoed the bill, and there have been accusations that the plan "robs" the highway fund by channeling revenue to finance pay raises.

There have also been complaints that the diversion will create a hole in the state budget in two years when the auto tax reverts to the highway fund and takes a bite out of paychecks of teachers and state employees.

However, Sen. Martin said using the tax revenue for pay raises is no problem. Traditionally, sales tax has gone into the general fund, he said, but the House version called for placing the auto sales tax revenue into the highway fund. The only difference with the approved version is that the tax dollars finance pay raises for two years.

"It's just delaying what the House wanted to do for two years," Martin said. "It is absolutely no problem."

Those forecasting budget problems are forgetting that it is impossible to predict how much tax income the state will receive three years down the road, he said.

"We've always found there's a pretty good problem to do one (budget) year at a time. To sit back and say what the budget will be three years from now, everybody is talking out the top of their hat. They don't know," Sen. Martin said.

Sen. Tom Taft, D-Pitt, said the plan might help lawmakers avoid raising taxes for pay hikes.

"We believe that there's a good probability that the growth in tax revenues for the next two years will be in excess of $570 million. That will occur with an 8 percent average growth, and the average for the last (few) years has been 8.8 percent," Taft said.

If revenue does not increase as projected, then lawmakers can consider raising taxes in two years. Ei-

Canadian DC-10 Loses One Wheel

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TORONTO — A Canadian Airlines DC-10 with 254 people aboard lost a wheel as it left Rio de Janeiro but landed safely today at Pearson International Airport in Toronto, airport officials said.

Airport spokesman Bruce Reid said the flight crew was aware of the problem and the aircraft circled the control tower to confirm the wheel, one of four on the left wing, was missing. Fire crews and ambulances rushed to the scene before the pilot was given permission to land at 7:30 a.m., said Reid.

"We wanted to be prepared in the event that something went wrong," Reid said.

Airline spokesman Mike Dukelow said passengers were told to assume the crash position. "I'm sure there was apprehension," he added.

No one was injured in the landing.

Dukelow said that when the plane took off from Rio, the flight crew reported what they thought was a blown tire, but pieces of metal on the tarmac indicated otherwise.

Dukelow said the missing wheel was not critical to the landing. The DC-10 has 10 wheels — four on each wing and two on the nose.

He said Canadian aviation and Canadian Airline officials are investigating why the wheel fell off.

It was the latest in a series of incidents involving the McDonnell Douglas jets.

ECU Turns Away More Applicants

ECU NEWS BUREAU

East Carolina University expects a larger on-campus enrollment this fall, approaching 16,000 students, but because of higher admission standards the university is turning away more applicants than at any time in its history.

The increase in overall enrollment for the fall semester is expected to be only 200 to 300, well short of last year's gain of more than 700. Last year's fall semester enrollment reached a record 15,579.

This year, the admissions office has denied nearly 2,000 applications, or 929 more than were denied last year. Applications were up by 8.4 percent, reflecting increased demand.

"What will be surprising is the denial rate," said Eugene A. Owens, acting director of admissions. Compared to the number of denials last year, this year's number increased by 87.8 percent, he said.

"We are not admitting students who don't have all of the standard (University of North Carolina system) subject matter requirements, including a third unit of math," Owens said. "There are no exceptions."

"We've raised (academic) requirements across the board," Owens said. These requirements are based on a formula — a mathematical equation — which includes weighted variables such as high school class rank, predicted grade point average and the student's SAT or ACT score.

"A predicted outcome is that the incoming class will be better prepared. It is projected that the average SAT will be the second highest in the past 10 years," Owens said.

According to admissions officials, the 1989 class of incoming freshmen will be approximately 13 percent smaller than last year's 2,991. As of

Research Vessel Gets First River Test On Short Notice

By J. Ward Best
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

WASHINGTON, N.C. — The state's newest research vessel used to study water quality problems along the Pamlico River received its first test less than 24 hours after the official dedication.

The Swan Point, a 19-foot fiberglass boat designed and built for the Pamlico Environmental Response Team (PERT), hit the water for the first time Thursday morning in an official dedication ceremony. And a report of floating clams and fish in Bond Creek sent PERT and its new boat into action this morning.

"Right now, in the heat of the season, it will be on standby for use by the PERT team," said Jess Hawkins, Washington district manager of the Division of Marine Fisheries.

The most recent report from the Bond Creek area has not yet been confirmed by PERT, Hawkins said, but the tributary of South Creek experienced fish kills from poor water quality earlier this year.

High temperatures and stagnant waters usually compound water quality problems in the Pamlico and result in fish kills. Ulcerative necrosis, a fungus disease responsible for a number of fish kills, has also reappeared in the river, Hawkins said.

William Cobey Jr., secretary of Natural Resources and Community Development, called the new boat proof of the state's dedication to protecting the Pamlico.

The Swan Point will allow PERT to respond more quickly to kills and other environmental emergencies, Hawkins said. The boat will remain at the NRCD office in Washington for quicker response to any area along the river.

Until Thursday, PERT borrowed boats from Marine Fisheries and the Division of Environmental Management to go out on the river.

Barry Adams, a chemical analyst with PERT, designed the boat for the special needs of the team.

The "deep V" hull allows for greater stability in rough waters, and an out-drive motor, a motor attached away from the stern, allows the boat to make sharp turns in marshy creeks and smaller tributaries. The boat also includes a host of high-tech equipment for monitoring water quality.

The Swan Point cost an estimated $16,000, and was specially built by Swan Point Boats of Washington.

Since forming last June from members of the Division of Environmental Management and Marine Fisheries, PERT has re-

Solons Oppose Lottery

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

In the wake of the $8.6 billion highway plan approved Thursday, the Senate Finance Committee has approved a measure to allow the people to vote in a referendum on a statewide lottery.

The highway plan will divert auto sales tax revenue for two years to finance pay raises for teachers and state employees. In 1991, the tax money will revert back to the highway fund, and lawmakers could be forced to increase taxes to fund salary increases.

Though the lottery idea has the backing of the Senate committee, Pitt County and Martin County area legislators are still opposed to the idea.

"If we've got to depend on income from gambling to raise the funds necessary to operate our government, we're in bad shape," said Sen. R.L. "Bob" Martin, a Democrat from Bethel.

Sen. Ken Royall Jr., D-Durham, was politicking this morning to gain support for the idea, Martin said, but Martin could not endorse a lottery.

"I know some people like to take a chance. But I'm more fearful of what it might bring," he said.

Sen. Tom Taft, D-Pitt, said he has traditionally opposed lotteries.

"I have tended to resist the concept of a statewide lottery because I don't like gambling."

"But I'm more and more convinced that with lotteries surrounding North Carolina, and people buying the tickets anyway out of state, that we may have to rethink that concept," Taft said.

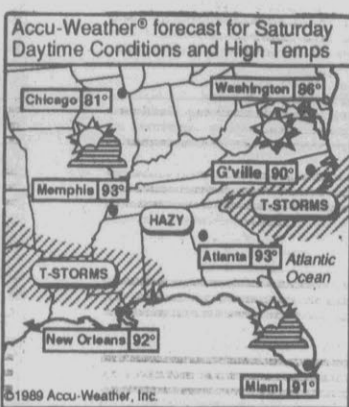

"I could only support it if the monies were going to go to education, and I (was) convinced that it's not funded primarily by the poor and those who can't afford the tickets."

Rep. Gene Rogers, D-Martin, said two House members introduced lottery bills earlier this session, but both failed to reach the House floor. Despite the Senate action, he said the lottery idea is probably dead in the House this year.

"I'm leaning against the lottery. It's surfacing in the Senate, but I'm not sure it will get any attention in the House," Rogers said.

Senate Battle Looms Over S&L Bailout

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Democrats and Republicans are heading for a showdown on the Senate floor over a compromise landmark savings and loan bailout bill that would balloon the federal budget deficit.

A House-Senate conference committee, finishing its work with two marathon sessions lasting late into the evening, decided Thursday night to reject Bush's complex plan to exclude $50 billion in rescue spending from the deficit.

The agreement sends the legislation to the full House and Senate for votes next week. However, the Bush administration has raised objections and senators warned that Republicans could block the plan in the Senate.

Nearly six months ago, Bush asked Congress for emergency action to close or rescue hundreds of failed, but still-operating, savings institutions.

Under the compromise, the government's largest-ever bailout would involve spending $166 billion, including interest, over the next 10 years — the vast majority of it from taxpayers.

The bill includes a number of provisions to prevent a recurrence of what analysts call the worst financial crisis since the Depression.

It requires S&L owners to risk more of their own capital to absorb losses before government deposit insurance kicks in. S&Ls would have to devote more of their assets to financing housing and disclose how well they serve minorities and the poor. They also would be prevented from using deposits to invest in high-yield, high-risk junk bonds.

The bill would enact the most sweeping restructuring of the regulatory bureaucracy since the 1930s. It would dismantle the S&L agency, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, dividing its duties between an office in the Treasury Department and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., now solely a bank regulator.

The conferees decided to defy Bush on his funding proposal.

The administration argued that the Democratic plan, which inflates the budget deficit but exempts it from triggering automatic spending cuts under the Gramm-Rudman law, will inspire a congressional spending spree on other programs.

Democrats, however, say their plan allows the government to borrow the needed S&L money at a lower cost and is a more honest way to account for the spending.

The five-member Senate delegation had been split 3-2 in favor of the Bush plan, with Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., joining the two Republicans on the panel.

But, after 5 1/2 hours of debate and the House rejection of a Senate compromise offer, Cranston shifted his position and joined Sens. Donald W. Riegle Jr., D-Mich., and Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., in accepting the House plan.

Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., chided his fellow conferees for effectively postponing the difficult question.

"It will result, I fear, in a stalemate, not in this conference, but on the Senate floor," he said.

Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas, an ardent opponent of the House funding plan, says he has the support of 40 other Republicans, enough to block the compromise package under that chamber's rules.

And even if the full Senate goes along with the House, Bush's advisers have threatened to recommend a veto.

White House Budget Director Richard Darman told reporters Thursday that he favors a veto, joining Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady who has previously threatened to push for one.

Brady, however, stopped short of such a threat in commenting on the agreement, which he called "an excellent product."

Volkman Named To Medical School Post

ECU NEWS BUREAU

Dr. Alvin Volkman has been appointed associate dean for research and graduate studies at the East Carolina University School of Medicine, one of three administrative changes announced by Dean James A. Hallock.

Volkman, professor and acting chairman of the school's department of pathology, will replace Dr.

Wilhelm Frisell, who stepped down as associate dean of graduate studies but will continue as professor and chairman of the department of biochemistry. A veteran faculty member at the medical school, Frisell held the post for 13 years.

Volkman, who joined the medical school in 1977, will oversee all aspects of research and the six doctoral programs within the medical school. His responsibilities also will include further development of current research activities at the institution.

Hallock also announced the appointment of Dr. Thomas G. Irons as associate dean of the medical school and Dr. Mary J. Raab as assistant to Dr. Dean Hayek, associate dean of admissions. The appointments are effective Sept. 1.

Irons, ECU associate professor of pediatrics and director of pediatric ambulatory programs, will assist Hallock in carrying out activities of the institution. He will also retain teaching and patient care responsibilities.

In addition to serving as assistant to Hayek, Dr. Raab, ECU associate professor of medicine, will continue her duties in the department of medicine's section of hematology and oncology and complete her obligations as chief of staff at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Judge Issues An Arrest Order For Former Basketball Player

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A Superior Court judge has issued an order to arrest a former East Carolina University basketball player who failed to appear in court this week on charges of stealing textbooks from dormitory rooms.

Kevin L. Staples, 22, of Birmingham, Ala., was charged in January with breaking and entering three rooms at Scott Residence Hall in December 1988. He was indicted on three counts of breaking and entering and two counts of larceny. Each charge carries a maximum prison term of 10 years.

Staples' case was set for Wednesday in Pitt Superior Court, but he failed to appear. Judge G.K. Butterfield of Wilson revoked Staples' bond and issued an order for his arrest.

Staples' attorney, Assistant Public Defender Arthur M. McGlauffin, said Staples is now living in Birmingham with his wife and did not have money or transportation to get to Greenville.

With the order for arrest, Staples' name will likely be entered into a national computer list. If a law enforcement officer stops Staples for any reason and checks his name on the computer, he could be arrested and held. No new court date had been set this morning.

ECU Sports Information officials said Staples will not return to the ECU team this fall.

A 6-5 center last season, Staples was arrested Jan. 10 and charged with stealing five textbooks valued at $128 on Dec. 16, 1988. He was caught when he attempted to sell the books at the student store, police said.

At the time, Staples lived at 313-B Scott Hall, and he was charged with breaking into 312-C Scott Hall and stealing a biology textbook, a psychology textbook and a sociology textbook from Daniel Lamont Baldwin. The total value of the books was $88, according to court files.

He was charged with breaking into 312-D Scott Hall and stealing an electronics textbook and an economics textbook from Derek Dexter Smith. The total value was $20.

He was also charged with breaking into 312-A Scott Hall with the intent to commit larceny. Court files do not indicate any item was stolen.

A Logan, W.Va., native, Staples transferred to ECU in 1988 from Southern Junior College in Birmingham. He had previously played for Marshall University in Huntington, W.Va.

Institute Participant

Jacqueline Heston of Greenville, an employee of the Northeast Regional Education Center in Williamston, recently participated as a staff member at the North Carolina Geographic Alliance Summer Geography Institute at Appalachian State University.

She presented sessions on geography in the social studies curriculum and methods and materials for teaching about Japan.

Guest Speaker

Lt. Gov. Jim Gardner will be the keynote speaker at the Mid-East Commission Council of Government meeting Monday at 9:30 a.m. at Martin Community College.

The commission is meeting to discuss the possible application of the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation grant. The grants support communitywide initiatives to reduce the demand for drugs.

The commission consists of Beaufort, Bertie, Hertford, Martin and Pitt counties.

Fraternity Given OK For Addition

The Greenville Board of Adjustment on Thursday agreed to allow an East Carolina University fraternity to build an addition to the chapter's house.

The board approved a request by Chuck Humphrey for Lambda Chi Alpha Housing Corp. for a special use permit to allow the addition to the Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity house at the southwest corner of Fifth and Elizabeth streets.

Approved was the addition of 2,437 square feet of space, consisting of a chapter room and an additional bath facility.

In other action Thursday, the board denied a request by Zeta Tau Alpha Fraternity Housing Corp. and Dennis O'Neal for a special use permit to allow a fraternity/sorority to be located at 612 E. 10th St.

The board approved a request by Michael Sutton and Leonard Ambrose for a special use permit to allow the operation of a dry cleaning establishment on the southeast corner of Arlington Boulevard and Hooker Road. The request was originally denied at a previous meeting, but the board reversed its decision Thursday after the petitioners brought in additional information.

The board denied a request by Alton Spain for a variance of the Zoning Ordinance to allow the construction of a duplex on a substandard lot at 208 E. 12th St., and denied a request by Bob Barbour Jeep-Eagle for a variance of the Zoning Ordinance to allow the placement of a freestanding sign at 3303 S. Memorial Drive.

In other action, the board: renewed James Arthur Brown's special use permit to continue the operation of a nightclub at 814 W. Fifth St.; granted a request by James McCotter Investment Co. for a special use permit to operate a home furnishings store at the southeast corner of Greenville Boulevard and Landmark Street, and granted a request by Robert B. Webb for a special use permit to place a mobile home on the south side of SR 1401, approximately 5,000 feet west of the intersection of SR 1401 and N.C. 33.

Poverty-Stricken Mississippi Town Learns That Most People Still Care

Rocky Mountain Fever Increases

By Ron Harrist

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BLUE HILL, Miss. — This poverty-stricken rural town has received pledges of toilets, sinks and bathtubs from Florida to Alaska for residents who only a few days ago had to haul water from a muddy creek.

"We've come a long way in a short time, but we've still got a long way to go," said Janie Cole, who with her husband have led a decade-old fight to bring the community of about 40 homes into the 20th century. "It's a warm feeling to know people still care about each other."

Running water came only a week ago to the town of weathered shacks and mobile homes sprinkled along a twisting gravel road in southwest Mississippi.

Until then, most residents hauled water from a creek or collected rainwater from rooftops.

Federal money was used to pipe water into the community, and appeals by Cole and others resulted in a donations to pipe the water from the main line along the road to front porches of each home.

But there progress has stopped. "There are about 20 homes that have no inside plumbing, so they are still getting their water for cooking and bathing from the outside tap," Cole said.

"Many of these people are old and they have no money to take care of the problem themselves," said Cole, whose family has a private well. "Without help, there is little they can do."

News coverage focused on the community's plight resulted in at least 25 calls from groups and individuals offering donations of fixtures and money, Cole said.

"A man in Florida has said he may provide water heaters, a woman with an advertising agency in Kentucky pledged commodes, and a man in Ohio has said he can help us with fixtures and possibly to install sewer lines," she said.

If the pledged fixtures show up, the major need would be plumbing work for the homes, obtaining fittings to install fixtures and a sewage system.

Perhaps the most impressive offer, Cole said, came from officials with the Alaska State Housing Authority.

"We have 150 substandard, low-income housing units we are demolishing and replacing them with newer units and as a result we will have fixtures and items we will be surplus," said Ray Price, the authority's executive director in Anchorage. "Rather than put these items in the shelf or auction them off, we felt it would be best to send them down to those who need them."

"As you know, our state has been through some tough times the last few years and we have rural communities here — we are not oblivious to what these guys are going through."

Mike Wadell, the authority's project manager, said officials were negotiating with Federal Express to transport tubs and other fixtures to Memphis, Tenn., and with a truck line to haul them to Blue Hill.

"You really don't think people care that much any more but now you see that they just needed to be made aware of your problems," said Mary Moore, who is raising her three sons in a mobile home in Blue Hill.

Moore said water had been piped inside her trailer "and you cannot believe how thrilled we are. But we are the lucky ones."

John W. Engerd, who owns a furniture plant and store in Berlin, Ohio, called offering his help with plumbing and fixtures, but said he may end up financing septic tanks and field lines.

"There are always people heading to South America or somewhere else to help out," Engerd said. "When I read about their problems, I thought it would do more good to help someone right here at home."

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA (AP) — The tick-carried Rocky Mountain spotted fever, a potentially deadly disease, increased nearly 4 percent last year, with dramatic hikes reported in Missouri, Arkansas and Kentucky.

The national Centers for Disease Control reported Thursday that 615 cases of Rocky Mountain spotted fever occurred in the United States in 1988, up 3.9 percent from 592 cases in 1987.

The largest number of cases occurred in North Carolina, with 108, followed by Oklahoma with 97 and Missouri with 57.

The Missouri data indicate that the geographic focus of the disease may be shifting. That state's case total was up nearly threefold from just 19 cases in 1987.

"The increase in Missouri may reflect an extension of the area in which RMSF is endemic in the West South Central states," the CDC said.

Large increases also occurred in Arkansas, from 12 to 32 cases, and in Kentucky, from 13 to 30.

The disease causes symptoms including fever, headache and rash. At least 21 deaths were reported in 1988.

"Because no vaccine exists ... the best preventive measure is avoidance of tick-infested areas," the CDC said in its report.

The CDC recommends that people who are in tick-infested areas wear protective clothes and use tick repellent.

Tick bites were reported in 63 percent of the U.S. cases. The CDC said such reports are important because in cases where tick bites are not reported, "diagnosis may be delayed," increasing the "likelihood of serious or fatal complications."

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

The Right Thing

Commission Takes Second Step

It's not easy for public officials to do the right thing, especially when that "right thing" involves asking taxpayers to spend millions of dollars. When that's the case, acting appropriately is as hard as driving a crooked nail in a knothole.

But Pitt County's commissioners proved they were equal to the task this week when they stamped their approval on a $25 million bond referendum for county schools and a $10 million bond referendum for Pitt Community College. Although the voters will decide whether these expenditures occur, the county commission placed this very important issue on the public agenda.

For its foresight, that board deserves the respect of its constituents. The issue itself demands a thoughtful and open-minded public debate.

The commissioners correctly recognized that dynamic growth has pushed Pitt's resources to the breaking point. The county's population leapt from 80,000 in 1980 to an estimated 103,000 by 1990. Growth is an enviable problem, but one that cannot be ignored. Education, one of the county's prize possessions, has keenly felt the strain.

For example, the county's public school system has picked up 454 students since 1984. Good management dictates that a new school be built each time 600 new students are added.

Another example: despite a four-year special funding effort to eliminate the use of trailers as classrooms, as many mobile units remain in use now as before.

Here are some hard facts. One-third of the county's schools are near or over 30 years of age. Another one-third are over 20 years old. Only a handful have been in use under a decade. This means the county can expect some high-dollar school construction needs in the coming decade.

At Pitt Community College, growth has placed equal pressure on physical facilities.

It is difficult for a community to tangibly measure the economic value of a good education system but that worth is considerable. Education provides skilled, trained labor for industries. If it does its job right, public education is the bedrock of progress. It is also the resource a community can least afford to overlook.

Pitt's commissioners, faced with steep non-education capital needs, raised the county's tax rate for 1989-90. That was a difficult, but important, first step. Endorsing a bond referendum for public schools and Pitt Community College is step two.

Elected officials often take the easy way out. The commissioners didn't. They did the right thing.

No Quick Fix

Forget The Lottery & Come Home

If the N.C. General Assembly is wise, it won't buy a lottery ticket.

That's one issue the legislature shouldn't rush through before adjournment. A lottery amounts to gambling on a quick fix to solve North Carolina's financial woes.

On Thursday the Senate Finance Committee approved a bill that would let North Carolinians vote on whether they want a state lottery. The House is now contemplating a similar move — as well as discussing legalizing pari-mutuel betting.

But lawmakers ought to just can these issues and come home.

A lottery is an easy way to raise a sizable chunk of revenue, no question. But the fact is, the flaws overwhelm the advantages.

First, easy money isn't a sound way to generate revenue. The old axiom "easy come, easy go," holds true. A lottery simply lures the state into thinking it has more money than it really does.

Second, a lottery is essentially a tax on the poor. Consider this: who is most likely to spend $2 or $5 or whatever on a chance to win $1 million? An affluent person or an unemployed or disadvantaged one. The answer is obvious and statistics prove it.

Just 5 percent of all adults account for half the spending on state lotteries, according to the National Bureau of Economic Research, Cambridge, Mass. The most likely lottery players are males, Hispanics, blacks, laborers and people lacking college degrees. Individuals in these groups wager about $1,100 each annually.

A lottery is unfair to the poor because it takes a disproportionate share of their income. A $1,100 contribution to a lottery takes a lot larger percentage of a $12,000-a-year income than it does a $20,000-a-year income.

It's too late in the session to adequately debate having a state lottery or legalizing gambling. These two issues would be better left undone.

Public Forum

To the editor:

I concur with Mr. Dennis Biggs in his Public Forum letter of July 17th about his travel in 10 states and Canada, the beautiful scenery and in comparison, quote: "Trash here - not there."

I am proud of Greenville and the progress it has made, but it does not "have it all" and never will have until we, the people, stop littering and strewing garbage throughout our once picturesque city. First of all we have to get our pride back, pride in ourselves and pride in our town. We have to care, love and conquer. United we could "have it all."

Mr. Mayo Allen, director of the Public Works Department, Mr. Ken Jackson, the maintenance workers and the beautification committee have made a commendable contribution to Greenville's landscaping efforts. It is so refreshing to enjoy the colorful flowers and blossoming trees and shrubs at the various entrances to streets and on the medians. Then we are almost sickened by the debris surrounding all this beauty.

Mr. Allen and his crew do a super job, but they do need our cooperation. Also we can enhance the looks of our neighborhoods by not leaving garbage cans or containers curbside on our front lawns forever. Winds blow them over, dogs tip them over and contents make scattered mess. The city has always emptied garbage cans at the back of a dwelling, and it continues to do so. However, the cans must be set outside of a fenced yard due to a recent change.

If residents persist in placing their garbage cans out front why can we not have an ordinance saying that: "Garbage cans or containers placed at curbside should be placed there the night before or on the morning of pick up. When emptied they shall be removed until time for the next pickup."

To the editor:

The recent and on-going debate about supporting or not supporting the "state's plan to protect the Tar River from nutrient pollution" (page 1, July 18) amazes me. From about 1935-1941 I walked by a canal every school day which carried the totally untreated, raw human waste downstream out of sight and out of mind. But mine was a very small town.

In 1957 I worked my "summer vacation" with the North Carolina Stream Sanitation Committee, testing the waters of the Roanoke from Roanoke Rapids to a point some 10 miles below Plymouth. The biggest pollutants appeared to be waste from industries, dumped wholesale into the river.

In 1960, in Asheville, I could not believe the entire city's sewage was flushed into the nearest river!!

Now, in 1989, cities on the Tar River are saying "We have a great sewage treatment system. That is if we don't have a lot of heavy rainfall." Is there a psychiatrist in the house? I can hear me saying to my neighbor, "Hey, Will. I have a great septic tank and sewage disposal thing here. My crap will only run down into your yard when we have a lot of rain." Be serious!

It will not get cheaper. From first grade on, I have witnessed this scene and we need to stop using our streams as open sewers! Now!!

Oh, Jackie O. You're 60

BOSTON — The woman is in a state of high gush. Never mind that she has interviewed prime ministers and grilled presidential candidates, that she eats her subjects with a side dish of cynicism. This is the ultimate news bulletin:

"I just saw Jackie," she breathes into my phone, "She looks fabulous!"

I do not ask, Jackie Who? I know. Everybody knows. Everybody has seen her, if not in person, close up enough. She's on the cover of Life and Vanity Fair. She's on both covers of "A Woman Named

'Now Jackie has another birthday carrying another sort of message across the cover stories. This is what 60 can look like. This is what we're supposed to look like at 60?'

Jackie" the best-seller that everybody loves to hate and refuses to admit they have read. Every gossipy, intrusive, unreliable word.

Jackie is turning 60 today, July 28. Sixty. This is not the sort of event that colleges hold symposia about. There is nothing of national meaning or international significance for this life marker.

But for at least one month, Americans will gape at her photo the way they gape at the person who comes back to their college reunion looking, dammit, exactly the same. Fabulous.

Jackie, 60 and skinny, celebrating her 15th birthday as a 45-year-old, looks like the young girlfriend on the arm of her 59-year-old companion. Jackie, 60 and surviving, her 15 minutes of fame have extended to 30 years of speculative, bitchy biography.

She has gone from being Jacqueline Bouvier to Jackie Kennedy to Jackie Onassis to Jackie O. The last name of the most famous woman in America sounds like a simple exclamation of admiration, a vowel of awe. Jackie, Oh.

Jackie came into the public eye in a pillbox hat and never left. She became famous as a wife and widow. She became infamous as a wife and widow. She became famous again and permanently for being famous. By now her life is more familiar than many members of our family. How many of us know about our father's infidelity? How many know our own sister's shoe size? We know Jackie's size: 10.

Jackie O has rarely made a move in public that wasn't photographed, rarely had an employee who couldn't be paid for her private memoirs, or had a friend who could talk about her without feeling like she was name-dropping. She has led the most private of public lives, the most public of private lives.

So what do we say about this 60-year-old survivor? One brief admiring word about her success at mothering. A pro-forma acknowledgement of her success as a working grandmother and a dutiful daughter. And then to the big stuff: Gawd, she looks fabulous!

The photos in Life are f-stops along every year from 1929 to 1989. The last 20 of them look the same. The only thing that has changed are the headlines and the language. At 40 she was glamorous, at 60 she is "still" glamorous.

This is what 60 looks like?

How many women search these pictures for clues of the cost of maintenance, the way they search along her hairline for evidence of a scalpel. How many single-potato-and-caviar dinners account for the dress size? How many lunches passed up, how many yoga sessions have replaced desserts? How much time spent jogging and how much at the hair dresser?

The most energy, money, and time-consuming activity is the struggle against aging. There isn't a woman in the world who doesn't know that. Vanity is an expensive vice and beauty an expensive virtue. There is hardly a woman of any age who hasn't wrestled with that cost-accounting. Ours and hers.

How many million women wake up saying this is the first day of the rest of their diet? How many resent the glorification of youth and yet blame themselves for aging as if it were a personal lack of willpower? How many have felt the ambivalence? Faulting ourselves for caring about looks. And for not caring enough. Wondering when we get permission to stop caring, stop fighting.

When the new First Lady came into view this January, there was much ado about her gray hair, her laughlines, her dress size and lifestyle. At 64, she looks her age. We want her to wear it comfortably. When the old First Lady comes into view, just four years younger, there is much ado about her skin, dress size, glamour. We want to know how she does it.

The truth is that most women want to want to (sic) look like Barbara Bush. But they truly want to look like Jackie. We want to stop fighting against age — pass the chocolates and the footrest — and we want to still look young. We want to be admired for our character, lines and all, and thought of as glamorous. We want to let go and stay the same.

Nancy Rader

WASHINGTON — Imagine the United States running almost entirely on energy drawn from sunshine, wind, water and the Earth's own heat. Buildings that warm and cool themselves. Cars powered by wood-derived fuels and solar cells. Pie in the environmental sky? Not at all.

In fact, renewable energy is already an $18-billion-a-year industry and provides almost 10 percent of U.S. domestic energy production—more than nuclear power or "clean coal." Its share could easily be doubled by the turn of the century and, with an all-out effort, could provide 80 percent by 2010, according to a 1985 Department of Energy report. And there's more:

•Most renewable electric technologies are or soon could be cost-competitive with new oil, gas and "clean coal" facilities, and far cheaper than nuclear power. Despite 90-percent cuts in research-and-development funds for renewable energy during the Reagan years, advances in solar and wind technologies drove down the cost of their power by as much as 75 percent.

•Renewable electric facilities can be built quickly—usually in two years or less, as compared with at least eight years for a nuclear plant—and flexibly in small increments.

•Renewables offer the most effective means of addressing global warming, acid rain and other environmental problems associated with fossil fuels.

Why aren't we going full-speed ahead on renewable energy? The barriers are less technological than institutional and political. Overcoming them will depend to some degree on how seriously it is taken in "National Energy Strategy," an action plan being prepared by the Bush administration for release next year.

Perhaps the most striking advances over the past decade have occurred in solar and wind technologies.

In the Mojave Desert, a solar-thermal electric complex built by Luz International supplies almost 200 megawatts (MW) of power to Southern California Edison — enough to meet the residential needs of more than 250,000 people. Its plants use mirrored troughs that concentrate sunlight to create steam-generated electricity.

In 1984, its first unit produced electricity at a cost of 24 cents per kilowatt-hour (kWh). An 80-MW plant being built today will reduce costs to 8 cents per kWh — low enough to compete with new conventional coal or oil-fired electric plants (6-9 cents-kWh) and less expensive than the full cost of nuclear power (10 cents-kWh). By 1994, with six additional plants providing a total of 480 MW, costs are expected to fall to a fully-competitive 5 cents-kWh. With more supportive government policies and a continuation of the federal 10-percent solar-energy business investment tax credit, Luz estimates that it could provide at least another 3,000 MW by 2000.

If solar thermal plants were installed on desert land just one-third the size of California's Edwards Air Force Base (that is, an area about twice the size of the District of Columbia) they would generate the equivalent of all the peak power produced by the nation's largest utility, Pacific Gas & Electric.

Meanwhile, technological developments have dramatically improved photovoltaic (PV) cells—free-standing collectors that provide power directly to the user. Costs have fallen from $1.50-kWh in 1980 to 25-35 cents-kWh today, and PV systems now have an expected life of at least 20 years.

Though most familiar as the "solar cells" used in many watches and calculators, the largest existing market for PV systems is in remote areas here and abroad that have no access to utility power grids. In California, more than 1,000 highway call boxes are powered by PV cells. The Coast Guard has more than 11,000 PV-powered navigational aids. PVs supply power to remote communication, irrigation and highway lighting systems. Tens of thousands of homes and boats get their electricity from solar electric systems, and now the Philadelphia Electric Company is studying the possibility of installing PV systems in customers' homes.

Paul Maycock, former head of the Department of Energy's PV division and now a PV consultant in Cassanova, Va., estimates that if the installation of home PV systems began in earnest by 1995, the construction of dozens of new "peak power" utility plants could be avoided by the year 2000: "For commercial buildings in the Northeast, PVs are also likely to be economic by 1995 where the cost of peak power is high."

While PVs for centralized utility power stations are not expected to be cost-competitive until some time in the 1990s, utilities are actively developing the technology.

Windpower is another success story. A common source of rural electricity early this century, it was largely replaced by cheaper centralized electricity made possible by the Rural Electrification Act of 1937. When electricity became more expensive in the '70s, windpower rebounded. In California, the number of utility-connected wind turbines grew from virtually zero in 1980 to about 17,000 operating on "wind-farms" today. Last year, these machines produced approximately 1.8 billion kWh of electricity — the energy equivalent of almost 3 million barrels of oil — and supplied more than 1 percent of California's electricity needs.

The cost of electricity from wind turbines has declined over 60 percent since 1980, to 7-9 cents-kWh today, and design improvements are expected to reduce windpower costs further to 4-5 cents by 2000. While virtually all development has occurred in California, wind resources are plentiful throughout the United States, including the Plain States and the Northeast, and windfarms are compatible with other land uses such as ranching and agriculture.

A four-fold growth in windpower capacity is already expected by year 2000, and more supportive government policies could produce much greater development.

Biomass and hydropower resources are much more extensively developed than solar and wind technologies, and, along with geothermal energy, can provide a constant power supply to complement the variable output of solar-wind technologies and meet "baseload" levels of demand.

Biomass—predominantly wood, wood wastes and agricultural wastes—already accounts for 5 percent of domestic energy production. Most is used in wood stoves and industrial burners—already providing 8 percent of the industrial sector's energy use, primarily in paper and lumber manufacture. In addition, 5,400 MW of biomass electric plants are operating — the equivalent of six nuclear reactors — and biomass resources can be converted into gas and liquid fuels.

Although the combustion of biomass fuels produces carbon dioxide — a "greenhouse gas" — the regrowth of biomass to replace what is harvested absorbs carbon from the atmosphere, thereby creating a "carbon cycle." So proper management of biomass resources would not contribute to global warming. (In the United States today, there is currently net forest growth due to an increase in hardwoods for which there is little demand.) Moreover, biowaste left to decay produces methane gas, which is 20 times more destructive than the carbon dioxide produced when biowastes are burned for energy.

Biomass waste products — such as wood waste, sugar cane residues and even animal manure — are the most abundant and cheapest form of biomass. Proctor and Gamble, for example, uses wood chips processed from tree trimmings and construction debris in a 50-MW electric plant on New York City's Staten Island. In California, a 17-MW manure plant generates enough electricity to supply 20,000 homes.

Legislative Pay Raise Stays In Spending Bill

By Dennis Patterson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — After four days of marathon meetings, the House Appropriations Committee has approved a $1.4 billion budget for new state spending and will begin work on a budget for construction projects and aid for non-state projects.

The approval of the expansion budget Thursday night came without reconsideration of a $5,000 pay increase for legislators. House Speaker Joe Mavretic had asked the panel to take a second look at that recommendation.

"We tried to get support to reconsider the decision from the committee, but it just wasn't there," said Rep. Dave Diamont, D-Surry, the chairman of the panel.

The committee Wednesday overwhelmingly had approved increasing the salaries for legislators beginning in 1991 from $11,124 a year to $16,644. But Mavretic several hours later asked the panel to reconsider its decision.

Committee members, who have worked in marathon sessions since Monday considering more than 100 amendments to the proposed budget, applauded after unanimously approving the budget proposal. That proposal must now go to the full House and will end up in a conference committee with the Senate.

Diamont said the House version contains significant differences from the Senate version "so the conference committee could be real interesting."

The panel also must approve a capital improvements budget for construction and state aid to non-state projects. Those considerations begin Friday morning, and Diamont said he hoped the panel would complete it in one day.

Diamont held the panel in session for nearly five hours Thursday night without a break as they considered dozens of amendments, many of them aimed at spending for public education and the Basic Education Plan.

The panel twice rejected amendments by Rep. Joe Hege, R-Davidson, that would have forbidden counties from substituting state money for local money for teachers required by the BEP. One of those amendments would have required that 1,566 new teachers hired over the next two years under the plan be used to reduce class sizes in science, math and language classes, not to expand programs.

The group also rejected a Hege amendment that would have funded separate lobbyists to represent the State Board of Education. Hege said the board, which is controlled by Republicans, needed different lobbyists from the Department of Public Instruction, which is headed by Democrat Bobby Etheridge.

The group approved an amendment by Rep. Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe, that would reduce the salaries of principals who are shifted to smaller schools to keep the pay in line with state guidelines.

Nesbitt said school systems were shifting higher-paid principals at large schools to smaller schools and holding their salaries at the higher rate, since the money was paid by the state.

His amendment, which becomes effective immediately and provides a one-year exception for merging systems, would force counties to reduce the salaries or pay for the difference from local funds.

The panel also rejected an attempt by Rep. Anne Barnes, D-Orange, to use salary reserve funds to bring the 1,449 lowest-paid state employees up the poverty level.

After rejecting her proposal, the panel also removed a provision in the bill that would have allowed counties to use up to $3 million in state funds, if available, to pull the lowest-paid county workers to the poverty level.

Open Meetings Law In The Air

RALEIGH (AP) — The Senate voted to approve a bill to expand North Carolina's open meetings law, but Republicans pinned their hopes on the House to remove a controversial, last-minute amendment to include the governor's meetings with his cabinet and budget officials.

"I think that I disapprove very much with what's been done and how it's been handled," said Sen. Jim Johnson, R-Cabarrus, after the Senate adopted the amendment over GOP objections Thursday and approved the bill 35-11.

"This bill is bad. It's a terrible bill," said Sen. Howard Bryan, R-Iredell. "But I'm going to vote for it and hope that the House has common sense enough not to vote to concur in this amendment."

"I've heard of games like these being played by second-year law students," said Sen. Bob Shaw, R-Guilford. "This is rank, rank precinct politics and doesn't belong on the floor of this Senate."

The House position remained muddled.

Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, the sponsor, said he hadn't had a chance to review the amendment, but he said it might be appropriate in light of the governor's "strong critical comments about whether the meetings of the legislative branch have been open."

"When the governor's conducting the public's business ... the public should be aware of it," he said.

Hugh Stevens, general counsel of the N.C. Press Association, said he was not responsible for the amendment. But he added, "I'm always in favor of maximum openness in government."

Tim Kent, a spokesman for House Speaker Joe Mavretic, said Mavretic's feeling was, "What's the Senate so afraid of?"

He said by the Senate's rationale, all the legislative conference committee's should be open. But he added, "Strategy is a key component in conducting the public's business."

The bill would tighten up exemptions long extended to legislative committees so they could meet in executive session for virtually any reason. It would require that most meetings be open and that closed meetings have minutes kept.

Sen. Sandy Sands, D-Rockingham, offered the amendment to include the executive branch in the bill, saying people are "crying out" to reduce secrecy in all branches of government.

Sen. Larry Cobb, R-Mecklenburg, the Senate minority leader, said the amendment was an obvious attempt to kill the bill.

"It's so ludicrous as to cause the bill to be fatally flawed," he said, adding, "I've never heard of any secret meetings of the governor's cabinet."

Commission Blocks Seawall For Road

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEAUFORT, N.C. — The North Carolina Coastal Resources Commission has refused to bend its rule on oceanfront seawalls, denying a state Department of Transportation request to build a wall of sandbags to protect a stretch of coastal highway.

In 1985, the commission established a ban on the seawalls, which can block the ocean's waves from damaging property, but can also worsen erosion in adjoining, unprotected areas.

"If we approve this, we are essentially saying that we will allow permanent hardening of the oceanfront ...," said Dan Besse, the commission chairman. "We are being asked to revisit the very substance of our ... rule."

The Department of Transportation requested permission to build the wall to protect a 700-foot stretch of N.C. 12 on Hatteras Island in Dare County.

The section of N.C. 12 discussed Thursday is about one mile south of the Oregon Inlet. Transportation officials wanted to use sandbags to stabilize a row of dunes that eroded during past storms.

"N.C. 12 serves as the only vital link along the Outer Banks," Jerry R. McCrain, who handles environmental permits for the transportation department, told the commission. "We do feel that some stop-gap measures are needed to stop the erosion."

"We have a potential breach and overwash situation at that particular location," said engineer Michael T. Stanley of the transportation department. "Under storm conditions, that water will come all the way across."

But officials with the state Division of Coastal Management said storm damage has been an infrequent problem and the road is in no immediate danger.

House Committee Remains Blocked

By F. Alan Boyce
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The chairman of a House committee deadlocked over the veto issue says he may force a vote in an effort to end weeks of lobbying and posturing on the matter.

"I think that may be the only thing to do," said Rep. Roy Cooper, D-Nash, after two hours that resulted in only one amendment being added and several tie votes. Cooper said he might have to ignore adjournment motions today and let the pieces fall where they may.

Opponents appeared content Thursday to keep the bill bottled up in the Judiciary Committee, relentlessly debating amendments and moving to adjourn each time a vote seemed imminent.

"I don't think there's any question they've got the votes," said Rep. Dennis Wicker, D-Lee, one of the leading veto foes. But he denied filibustering the bill.

"I think it's genuine, sincere debate and wanting to amend the bill and make it better," he said.

But the constant jockeying drew criticism from Rep. Larry Justus,

R-Henderson, who said he was tired of the "same rhetoric over and over, watching amendments go through, apparently to make sure we don't do anything."

And Rep. Art Pope, R-Wake, said opponents are simply afraid to have a recorded vote on the issue, fearing they will anger an electorate that polls show favors the veto.

"Once it gets to the House floor, people are going to have to vote on the record and have to go back to the people and say how they voted," he said. "I think that will have an influence on how they vote."

Cooper agreed some were trying to avoid a public vote.

"Whenever we come to a vote, the tale will be told," he said.

Gov. Jim Martin made light of the machinations during his weekly news conference.

"I would settle for a vote up or down on veto to take effect sometime in the next century," Martin said.

He said he did not mind if legislators wanted to submit two-year terms for the governor, four-year terms for legislators and other constitutional issues to the voters at the same time as the veto.

"Go ahead and submit it to the voters and let's see how they respond to it," he said.

Proposed amendments offered by opponents Thursday included:

— Changing a three-fifths override of the veto to a simple majority — an amendment that failed on a 16-15 vote.

— Requiring legislative confirmation of gubernatorial appointees to the state Board of Transportation, which failed when Cooper voted against it to create a tie.

— Spending $2 million educating the public on both sides of the veto issue. That amendment failed when the committee deadlocked 15-15, with veto supporters fearing the bill would be sent to the Appropriations Committee and never seen again.

— Putting the entire issue of balancing government before a blue-ribbon study commission. Cooper, who had proposed a similar plan last week, voted to create a 17-17 tie that held off that proposal. He said later he objected to the commission because it would not have reported back until 1991.

The only amendment adopted was one offered by Wicker to change the public referendum on the veto from November 1990 to November 1992, when the presidential election would ensure a big voter turnout.

Report Cites Gaps In State Waste Plan

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — North Carolina's waste management program has too few inspectors, inaccurate records and little grasp on the true volume of toxic industrial waste generated by 3,800 small companies and 688 major producers on which records are kept, a report says.

The state audit report, which is scheduled to be released today, said that at the current rate, North Carolina regulators would need 25 years to visit every small company that admits to generating at least 220 pounds of hazardous waste a month.

That would not deal with the thousands of companies that have not notified the state of their waste.

"While this percentage (inspected) meets (U.S.) Environmental Protection Agency requirements, we consider the small-quantity generator a high-risk group and believe that, for the state's public health and environmental protection, more of this group should undergo inspection," according to the audit, which was obtained by the Winston-Salem Journal.

The report, based on a six-month review of the North Carolina Hazardous Waste Section, commends the agency for a "high level of professionalism and conscientiousness exemplified by the management and staff."

But it concludes that the program suffers from a number of problems, including having too few inspectors, incomplete reporting, and inaccurate records.

Stephen T. Reid, a spokesman for the state's hazardous-waste program, said Thursday that the agency has to meet more demands than its $2.7 million budget can accommodate.

"We're dedicated to protecting the public health and the environment, but it's a matter of assigning priorities to match what dollars you have and, ultimately, it's a question of getting the money from the legislature."

To that end, the program seemed to be faring well as House budget leaders conferred Thursday night.

The proposed budget for 1989-91 includes $750,000 for 17 new positions in hazardous-waste management, $2 million for 28 new workers in solid-waste management and $3.1 million to help clean up inactive or Superfund hazardous-waste sites.

Among the report's findings and recommendations:

- More staff should be added to the program's 54 positions and better safety training is needed for investigators. "We also recommend that safety equipment necessary to adequately protect staff members be purchased," the 54-page report says.

- The state needs to work harder to help industries develop ways to reduce waste. A bill passed May 30 shifts the burden to industries to prove that they are minimizing waste, as a condition for renewal of their permits.

- Environmental laws need to be strengthened. Violators of hazardous-waste laws and regulations were assessed $542,875 in civil fines last year but face little more than misdemeanor penalties even for flagrant offenses. A bill pending in the House would make many of those crimes felonies.

- A heavy reliance on industries to voluntarily report the wastes they generate has led to vast amounts of waste going unreported. "The hazardous waste generated in the state is somewhere in excess of 6 billion pounds instead of the 2.8 billion pounds reported in the N.C. Hazardous Waste 1987 Annual Report," the audit says.

- The method used in assessing companies fees for the waste they generate charges as much for waste water as for extremely toxic waste, which encourages under-reporting of waste water. The report recommends basing the fee instead on waste shipped off-site.

- Failure to require the generators of hazardous waste to show proof of financial liability could impede future cleanup efforts, especially since hundreds of inactive hazardous-waste sites across the state await state money because the responsible parties can't be found.

Corporate CEOs Like Raleigh, Charlotte

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Air transportation, a wealth of technical workers, and even a basketball team have made two North Carolina cities an attractive commodity to the nation's chief executives, a survey says.

The 1989 Cushman & Wakefield Monitor survey said the chief executive officers preferred Charlotte at least two-to-one over every other medium-sized city except Raleigh. Fourteen percent of those surveyed mentioned Charlotte, compared to 9 percent for the Triangle area.

Next were Orlando and Indianapolis at 7 percent.

It was the second straight year that Charlotte and Raleigh received high marks on the survey.

"The attractiveness of Charlotte and Raleigh-Durham to American big business runs deep," James B. Sineath Jr., Cushman & Wakefield senior vice president and director of the company's operations, said in a prepared statement. "This type of interest will continue to pay dividends for years to come."

The survey questioned 400 chief executive officers of large companies on economic and business-related issues conducted by Louis Harris & Associates.

When asked to identify medium-sized cities that would be most attractive as business locations in 1994, Charlotte and the Raleigh-Durham area were named most frequently.

"There's probably a combination of circumstances," said Terry Orell, vice president for economic development of the Charlotte Chamber of Commerce.

"Charlotte's national advertising and marketing campaign, the advent of the (National Basketball Association franchise) Hornets, our air transportation system and all of the visitors all over the country who are passing through that hub system," Orell said in a telephone interview Thursday.

Orell said Charlotte had moved into sixth place among the nation's largest financial center, and with recent acquisitions, the city has gained a lot of notoriety.

He said the recent deregulation of the airline and banking industries might have created an awareness for Charlotte, but those things might have increased the city's exposure and enhanced its image.

"Our good fortune is that in terms of services and amenities, we really have a much higher level of those things than one would expect for that size population," Orell said. "And because of our size, we have much more ready access to them."

Still, Orell said, there are areas in which Charlotte can make itself even more attractive.

"One of the things we'll continue to improve on is the road system," he said. "As are many areas throughout the U.S., we're working very hard for reaching and continuing to improve the education for the bottom tier of students."

Officials of the Raleigh Chamber of Commerce were out of town Thursday afternoon and were unavailable for comment.

Airliner Mishap

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A USAir jet made an emergency landing at Newark International Airport on Thursday after a failure of a hydraulic system, according to an airport official. No injuries were reported.

The jet, a Boeing 727 en route from Charlotte, N.C., to Newark, was able to land without incident at about 8:45 p.m., according to Lynn Tierney, a spokeswoman for the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, which oversees the airport.

Passengers interviewed at the airport said the pilot informed them of the hydraulics problem, but said a backup system was still working.

"They told us everything would be OK and not to be surprised when fire engines came aside," said Al Silverman, a passenger.

Flight 354 from Chicago to Newark was carrying 89 passengers when it made the emergency landing shortly after 8 p.m. Tuesday. The plane blew four of six tires and skidded about 7,500 feet on the runway before stopping. There were no injuries in the incident.

Storms

CHERRYVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Lightning set fire to a mobile home in Cherryville and severe storms caused massive power outages throughout the area Thursday night, officials said.

During the heavy storms, lightning struck and ignited a mobile home in Cherryville about 6:30 p.m. "It (lightning) ran in on the TV," said Waco Volunteer Fire Chief Robert Howard.

The resident, Billy Carpenter, escaped without injury, Howard said. Fire destroyed the television and a living room wall, causing about $8,500 damage, Howard said.

Lightning struck the city's power substation about 7 p.m., leaving three-fourths of Cherryville without power, said Public Works Director Ted Mace. Half of the power was restored by 9 p.m., he said.

Exchange Students

BURLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — The Eastern States Student Exchange made its stop in Burlington this week, giving 327 Rotary Club exchange students from 34 counties a taste of North Carolina.

Students who live south of the equator have been in the United States since January; those who live north of it arrived last August.

The program matches students with host families in the eastern United States. While in America, they attend high school just as they would at home.

For most of the year, the students live with a single host family. But during a special 35-day tour of the country which began June 24, they will visit numerous American cities and live with different families. The tour costs $850, which includes all admissions to such places as Disneyland and Universal Studios, hotel fees and transportation, said Al Reitz, who heads the 18-member staff of the Rotary Tour of the U.S.A. In addition, students were asked to bring more than $300 for food and spending money.

Tar Heels Killed

MIDDLETOWN, Del. (AP) — Two North Carolina men were killed in an accident on U.S. 301 at a truck stop near Middletown, police said.

Dewey Bass, 44, of Leland, N.C., and Aubrey Stokley, 40, of Bolton, N.C., a passenger in the sleeper section of Bass' tractor-trailer, were killed Wednesday night when the vehicle crashed into the rear of a flat-bed truck stopped to make a turn into a truck stop, New Castle County Police Cpl. Joe Maichle said.

The other driver, Herman Grissett, 27, of Henderson, N.C., was treated at Christiana Hospital.

Middletown is in northwestern Delaware across the Maryland state line near Cecil County.

Death of Moore's Mother-In-Law Added To Arsenic Investigation

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BURLINGTON, N.C. — The state medical examiner will review the medical records of Blanche Taylor Moore's mother-in-law as part of an arsenic poisoning investigation that now encompasses nine deaths or illnesses.

Isla Taylor, 83, died Nov. 25, 1970, in Alamance County Hospital of apparent cerebral hemorrhage brought on by hypertension and cardiovascular disease, according to her death certificate. No autopsy was performed at the time of her death.

Detective Lt. Steve Lynch said Isla Taylor's medical records will be sent to Dr. John Butts, the state's chief medical examiner, who will then review the records and give his opinion as to whether she should be exhumed for arsenic testing.

Mrs. Moore is charged with two counts of murder and a charge of assault with intent to kill in the arsenic poisoning deaths of her first husband, James Taylor, and a boyfriend, Raymond Reid, and the poisoning of her current husband, the Rev. Dwight Moore. She is being held in the Alamance County jail without bond.

Lynch said Burlington police are reviewing medical records in response to numerous calls from residents wondering if the relatives or friends died of arsenic poisoning.

"We don't mean to imply that these people were murdered," he said. "We're conducting a screening process."

The screening process kicked into high gear earlier this week when Lynch announced four new death investigations. Lynch said Wednesday he sent to Butts the medical records of Mabel J. Parsons, Joseph M. Mitchell, Ina P. Vinson, and John W. Reiber.

Ms. Parsons worked with Mrs. Moore at Kroger Co. for about 30 years. She died of lung cancer at age 61 in October 1988. Mitchell worked as a meat cutter for Kroger before he died at age 57 in July 1985. Doctors attributed his death to an inadequate flow of blood to his brain.

Ms. Vinson, 74, was a retired Southern Bell employee when she died of apparent heart failure in August 1977. Lynch said her death is part of the Moore investigation but refused to say how she is linked to Mrs. Moore. Mrs. Moore's attorney, Mitchell M. McEntire, said his client doesn't remember ever meeting Ms. Vinson.

Reiber was 77 when he died of liver failure in February 1988. Reiber was retired from Kayser-Roth Hosiery Co. and was a member of Carolina United Church of Christ near Hopedale, where Mrs. Moore's husband preached. Reiber's son sat on the grand jury that indicted Mrs. Moore.

Her current husband, the Rev. Dwight W. Moore, was in good condition Thursday in Moses Cone Memorial Hospital in Greensboro. Doctors at N.C. Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill found potentially fatal levels of arsenic in Moore shortly after his admission May 7.

Titanium Is Sought In Wilson

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WILSON, N.C. — Two foreign companies that are looking for titanium have approached more than 50 Wilson County farmers in hopes of searching their land for a mineral used in paint pigment.

In March, Lester and Lucille Jones of Kenly signed a 20-year agreement with Becker Minerals, an English corporation, with American headquarters in Cheraw, S.C.

"As far as I'm concerned, it sounds like a pretty good deal to me," Jones said. The possibility that a valuable mineral was lying beneath his farmland surprised him. "I never gave it a thought," he said.

The agreement is to lease his land by the acre. When mining begins, he would be paid a 5 percent royalty fee based on the value of the mineral mined.

During the exploration stage, Jones will continue to farm his land. Becker must give him a year's notice before any mining can occur to allow him time to tend his crops.

Titanium metal is used in the turbine blades and rotor discs of jet engines because of its strength and lightweight properties. It is also used in the undercarriage of jet aircraft.

"They have indicated the mineral is in sufficient quantities to mine if other landowners don't price them out of the market," said Toney Stone of Kenly.

Stone has signed a contract with Renison Goldfields Consolidated (USA) Minerals Inc., an Australian firm with American headquarters in Green Cove Springs, Fla. The company purchased a mineral sands mine there in 1980 and has continued exploration up the coast.

The contract with RGC Minerals gives the company the option to purchase a 115-acre plot of land he owns through a partnership called Five Stone Investors.

If exploration proves fruitful, the agreement would be ended and a new agreement would be drawn to allow mining to begin, said Dan Wolcott, project manager of land and administration for RGC Minerals.

Stone said RGC Minerals first began exploring his land about three months ago.

"We would like to have more time, but the competition is causing us to rush," Wolcott said. He said RGC Minerals representatives have talked to about 50 landowners.

Oregon Inlet Project Funded

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate passed an amendment Thursday sponsored by Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C., which will provide additional funds for U.S. Army Corps of Engineers work at Oregon Inlet in North Carolina.

Oregon Inlet has posed severe problems for northeastern North Carolina for many years. It is the only navigable inlet within a span of 156 miles of the North Carolina coastline, and is the only means of transit to the Atlantic Ocean from all of North Carolina's inland ports.

Viable access through the inlet is critical to the important commercial and sport fishing industries in North Carolina, Sanford said.

Unfortunately, severe shoaling problems have made access through the inlet impossible many times in recent years, he said.

Sanford said Thursday's amendment will provide $500,000 so that the corps can move ahead with activities that will be essential to a long-term solution to the inlet's problems.

"The funds will be used to reassess the sand-bypassing system that is critical to the authorized project," Sanford said. "This analysis will also provide benefits relative to sand-bypassing which may be necessary in conjunction with North Carolina's terminal groin. The funds will also be used to update project information, including the impacts that the state's proposal will have on the design for any long-term solution."

"From now on we plan to secure money in each year's appropriations bill for the eventual construction of the jetties," Sanford said.

Coharie Indian Tribe Seeks Recognition

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FAYETTEVILLE — A council is developing plans to seek federal recognition that could mean federal funds for education, health, care and economic development for about 1,500 Coharie Indians living in Sampson County.

The Coharie Intra-Tribal Council, based in Clinton, plans to apply to the Bureau of Indian Affairs in the Department of the Interior by 1991, council Executive Director Jane Jacobs said.

Tribal officials say the prestige of being recognized is as important as the monetary benefits.

"We want to be recognized so we won't be pushed back in the corner by other recognized tribes," said Tribal Chief Tom Carter. "We're not looking for a big piece of the pie, we want the prestige."

Mrs. Jacobs said the council is in the final stages of doing the petition.

"We have already completed the genealogy and historical research and we are now in the process of pulling together that information," she said.

Mrs. Jacobs said the tribe decided to seek federal recognition about eight years ago, and it has taken all that time to compile the information required.

Althel Duffield, an official with the Bureau of Indian Affairs, said that after the completed petition is submitted, it will take at least two years before a decision is announced.

Duffield said his office is very thorough because a federally recognized tribe is an expensive investment for the U.S. Government.

"Once the tribe is established, it could cost the government as much as $7,000 per member per year for life," Duffield said.

Duffield said the groups must be able to prove that they have been recognized as an Indian group in the community; that they have lived in a community viewed as American Indian with an established communal network; that they have an established political system and an established system of government. They also must have a complete list of members, be descended from an Indian group and the majority of members must not be enrolled as members of another tribe. The tribe also must not have been terminated by Congress in the 1950s, he said.

Four Cherry Employees Dismissed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GOLDSBORO, N.C. — Four health care technicians at Cherry Hospital have been fired in connection with a patient who died in restraints last month, the hospital says.

The patient, Albert Hucks, 28, died June 25 after a psychotic episode during which he attacked technicians. He was subdued and placed in a restraining chair in a seclusion room, the hospital said.

Hospital director J. Field Montgomery said Hucks may have been unconscious when he was placed in the chair.

Montgomery said the workers did not seek medical help for the patient in a reasonable amount of time and violated several hospital policies regarding patient abuse, seclusion and restraint.

The technicians, Cleveland K. Johnson, Charles E. Bailey, Charles L. Spears and Joe S. Arnette, can appeal their dismissal, Montgomery said. He said all the employees had a clean record until the episode.

"The department took no issue with staff members defending themselves when the patient became aggressive," Human Resources Secretary David T. Flaherty said in a prepared statement. "But, let me make this clear, we cannot tolerate the lack of action that occurred after the patient lost consciousness."

"The report showed the technicians did not immediately report placing the patient in restraints, begin administering CPR when the patient went limp or call for the assistance of a nurse or doctor," Flaherty said.

Officials from the Human Resources Department joined Cherry Hospital administrators in announcing the results of the hospital's internal investigation.

Montgomery said the time that elapsed between the incident and the discovery that Hucks had died was 10 to 15 minutes, "sometime in that framework."

One of the technicians, who had not been suspended until last week, was dismissed because of his "action and inaction," Montgomery said.

He also said that a nursing supervisor who would normally have been on duty on the floor was absent that day. The unit was being covered by a nurse from medical services, he said.

Montgomery declined say whether the presence of the supervisor may have had any effect on the outcome.

Two of the technicians dismissed had more than 15 years experience, Montgomery said.

NCNB Seeking Full Ownership Of Texas Bank, Will Expand

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Gaining full ownership of NCNB Texas National Bank will position NCNB Corp. to become a more aggressive buyer of failed banks and savings and loans in Texas, financial experts say.

NCNB announced Thursday that it would pay $800 million to buy 51 percent of its Texas bank now owned by banking regulators. The move comes four years ahead of NCNB's original timetable for the purchase.

"Confidence in Texas and confidence in our earnings stream in Texas" prompted the accelerated purchase, NCNB Chairman Hugh McColl Jr. said. The banker was in Dallas to mark the first anniversary of the purchase of the holdings of the former First Republic Bank Corp.

When the purchase is completed, in about 10 days, NCNB will become the nation's ninth-largest bank with around $60 billion in assets.

Last July 29, NCNB agreed to buy 20 percent of the Texas bank and obtained a five-year option to buy the rest from the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. In April, it raised its share to 49 percent.

NCNB will pay the FDIC $480 million in cash and $320 million in an interest-bearing note that matures in one year. Helping finance the move is $410 million NCNB received from a stock issue this month.

Timothy Hartman, NCNB Texas vice chairman, acknowledged the Texas bank would be interested in buying failing savings and loans, which are likely to be available soon. The Texas bank would like to expand its deposits from $21 billion to around $30 billion, he said.

In buying the remainder of NCNB Texas from the FDIC, NCNB would be able to keep all of the bank's surprisingly high profits. The Texas bank earned about $120 million in the first half of the year.

"Texas earnings have been very, very good," McColl said. "That's because of the tremendous job our Texas team has done in turning around this situation. And we've been able to do this because of the tremendous earnings by our Southeastern bank."

NCNB dispatched five of its top 10 Charlotte-based managers to Texas, but its profits from North Carolina, South Carolina and Florida have continued to grow.

Investors are likely to react enthusiastically to the move, bank analysts said, though many had predicted NCNB would shortly increase its ownership to around 80 percent. "It's good news for shareholders since earnings will increase immediately," said Richard Fredericks of Montgomery Securities in San Francisco.

NCNB's stock has jumped nearly 125 percent in the year since NCNB announced its Texas deal. In New York Stock Exchange trading Thursday before the announcement, NCNB closed unchanged at $52 per share.

"No one outside the company thought it would work out so well," said Peter Tuz, analyst with Howard, Weil Financial Corp. in New Orleans.

Republicans Delay House Action On Democrats' Flag Burning Bill

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The House apparently will begin its August recess without voting on a Democratic-backed statute designed to overcome the Supreme Court ruling that allows flag burning.

The House Judiciary Committee approved the flag-protection bill on Thursday, 28-6, with Republican support. But the GOP turned around and made parliamentary objections that blocked Speaker Thomas S. Foley's plan to bring the bill to the full House next week.

Foley, D-Wash., told reporters he would bring the bill to the floor in September.

But the lack of full House action before the Aug. 5 recess hurts the Democrats' strategy of making their argument to the public that Congress should pursue a statute before any constitutional amendment.

The bill includes penalties of up to a year in prison plus an unspecified fine for physically desecrating a flag, and it was drafted to address the high court's decision that existing statutes against flag burning were an attempt to squelch free speech.

"It protects the flag and it protects the Constitution," said Rep. Steny Hoyer, D-Md., chairman of the House Democratic Caucus.

Republicans insist that only a constitutional amendment can overcome the Supreme Court ruling that flag burning was a protected form of free speech.

House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., said GOP refusal to try a statute before a constitutional amendment showed that the Republicans were mostly interested in partisan advantage.

"The people who pose as the most vigilant supporters of flag protection ... seem more interested in adding political graffiti to the Constitution than in protecting the physical integrity of the American flag," he said.

House Minority Leader Bob Michel, R-Ill., told reporters that Bush's chief of staff, John Sununu, urged Republican leaders at a White House meeting Tuesday to push the flag amendment because it's a "wedge issue" — one that divides and injures the Democratic Party.

Although to protect themselves politically they're voting for the statute also — 12-1 in the Judiciary Committee — Republicans ridicule the Democrats for pursuing it.

"This bill is essentially useless," said Rep. Carlos Moorhead, R-Calif., who voted for it in committee along with 12 of 13 voting Republicans.

"It's obviously going to get a try. And I may end up voting for it," Michel said, but said it would be "a meaningless vote."

Democratic leaders Thursday

defended their position at a news conference, toting along with them the flag that flew over the Capitol on the day Pearl Harbor was attacked by the Japanese. The flag saw service in the European theater and then flew on the U.S.S. Missouri when the Japanese surrendered in 1945.

Judiciary Committee chairman Jack Brooks, a decorated Marine in World War II, said he would sponsor a constitutional amendment if the statute didn't work, but said it would be foolish not to try. A statute could be passed far quicker than an amendment, which requires ratification of the states, said Brooks, D-Texas.

Financier Adnan Khashoggi waves as he leaves courthouse

Khashoggi Posts $10 Million Bail

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

NEW YORK — Adnan Khashoggi, the grounded jetsetting financier, was freed on $10 million bail Thursday, traveling by rented limousine from his jail cell to his heavily mortgaged Manhattan penthouse where he will be monitored electronically by a special bracelet he must wear at all times.

"I am pleased that the courts have granted me bail," Khashoggi said as he stood in a wrinkled leisure suit outside the Federal Courthouse. "I am anxious to begin work on my defense and look forward to clearing my name at trial. I assure you I will be here for the trial."

The short, balding arms dealer, a smile fixed to his face, then tried to walk down the steps. He was engulfed by shouting, pushing photographers. Several people were knocked to the ground. In the melee, television cameras bumped Khashoggi's shoulders. Lenses crowded within an inch of his face. Finally, a wedge of U.S. marshals helped him to his car.

Khashoggi, 54, who was a key middleman in secret White House arms sales to Iran, is charged with fraud and obstruction of justice in connection to claims he helped Ferdinand and Imelda Marcos plunder Philippine national assets.

Federal Judge John F. Keenan granted his application for bail Thursday over the strenuous objections of prosecutors who argued Khashoggi had ample resources to flee the country.

As a condition of bail, the Saudi businessman — once regarded as the world's richest man — had been required to disclose details of his financial empire. It provided a rare insight into an empire in decline.

Although Khashoggi's financial statement claimed a net worth of $54 million, $46 million of that amount is listed as equity in real estate subject to foreclosure proceedings in New York and Malaga, Spain.

Khashoggi's statement disclosed that dozens of his companies around the world are in trouble — bankrupt, dormant or abandoned. Many of his bank accounts, scattered around the world, have only pennies. Some are overdrawn.

Lawyer Says Lucas Intervened In Suit

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — William Lucas, President Bush's embattled nominee to be the chief civil rights enforcer, is denying a new but unverified allegation that he once complained about a federal housing discrimination suit against a predominantly white Detroit suburb.

Justice Department spokesman David Runkel said late Thursday that Lucas, nominated as assistant attorney general for civil rights, denied urging the government to drop a housing discrimination suit against the city of Birmingham, Mich.

The allegation was contained in a letter to the Senate Judiciary Committee from Michael Sussman, a former Justice Department civil rights lawyer who now represents black plaintiffs in the landmark desegregation case against Yonkers, N.Y.

"This kind of a last-minute tactic is reprehensible from somebody who is certainly aware of the system to raise an issue without any substance at all at this point," Runkel said, calling Sussman "a disgruntled former employee of the department."

Civil rights organizations have questioned Lucas' qualifications to serve in the post. The 61-year-old black Republican from Detroit was sheriff and later chief executive of Wayne County, Mich. He is a lawyer who has never appeared in court.

Sussman's letter describing a 1980 telephone call by Lucas was circulated Thursday by congressional sources after the Judiciary Committee postponed a vote on the nomination until Tuesday at the request of Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala.

Heflin, whose vote could decide whether the panel gives Lucas a favorable recommendation to the full Senate, said he wanted time to study the new information.

"I don't want to injure anybody — the allegations are not substantiated," Heflin told reporters.

Lawmakers, lobbyists and Justice Department officials professed ignorance about the new information to which Heflin referred. The Alabama senator told colleagues he would not necessarily support Lucas if forced to vote Thursday.

Experts Deny Poor Locked In Poverty

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A report on black Americans attacks the belief that poor people are locked into a self-perpetuating "culture of poverty" that sets them apart from society and saps them of the will to work or sacrifice.

Many of the nation's poor "are hard-working people who save when they can, endure numerous deprivations, worry about the future and urge their children to do well in school and on the job," experts said after a four-year study.

The conclusion was a central finding in "A Common Destiny: Blacks and American Society," issued Thursday by a panel of the National Research Council, an arm of the National Academy of Sciences and Engineering.

Yale economist Gerald Jaynes directed the study, participated in by nearly 100 academic experts.

Elks Lodge Drops 'Blackball' Rule

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW ORLEANS — The Elks is still a "men-only" organization, but in the future more of those men may be non-white.

Members voted against admitting women and for doing away with the Elk's "blackball rule" at a closed business meeting Thursday on the final day of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks 125th annual convention.

Repeal of the blackball rule was approved at the urging of the Elks Lodge at Lompoc, Calif. Two black applicants there were blackballed recently, and as a result the California Attorney General's Office is investigating possible civil rights violations.

The old policy allowed any three members of an Elks lodge to reject, or "blackball" a prospective member. Some said that made it difficult for blacks to join the Elks.

Under the new policy, a two-thirds majority of a lodge's membership could approve a new member.

"I think it was a step forward. It was a rule that has caused problems for a number of lodges. I think everyone felt it was time to change," said William Wodarczak, the exalted ruler of the 1,800-member Santa Barbara lodge.

In Lompoc, about 35 miles northwest of Santa Barbara, two black men whose membership bids were rejected said they planned to reapply.

"I'm elated at the outcome," said Ernie Hutchinson, 57, a local housing official. "I'm proud of the lodge here because they spearheaded this thing."

Hutchinson said he plans to reapply immediately. Should he be accepted, "I don't think there will be a

Atlantic City Officials Arrested

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — The seaside resort that once looked to Mayor James L. Usry to end a legacy of corruption has seen him and 13 others charged in conspiracies that include bribes, illegal gifts and extortion.

The City Council president and zoning board chairman also were among those arrested on corruption charges Thursday after an eight-month state investigation. A 14th person has not yet been arrested.

"We've been the laughingstock of the country for a long time," said Republican Assemblywoman Dolores Cooper, who lost the last non-partisan mayoral election to Usry. "This sets us back another decade."

Usry, president of the National Conference of Black Mayors, was elected Atlantic City mayor five years ago as a reformist candidate after his predecessor was implicated in an influence-peddling scandal and lost a recall election.

The 67-year-old Republican mayor is charged with bribery, conspiracy, official misconduct and accepting unlawful gifts.

A criminal complaint against the 14 people alleged five overlapping conspiracies, including an attempt to gain control of a lucrative Boardwalk electric cart business and a gift shop franchise at the Atlantic City International Airport. The carts are used by tourists to travel the Boardwalk.

State police Superintendent Col. Clinton L. Pagano said the complaints "charge that the regulation of economic activity in Atlantic City, as administered by those arrested, has been up for sale."

State Attorney General Peter Perretti Jr. said none of the investigations involved the casino industry.

The mayor said nothing in court during a bail hearing. Usry and the other city officials were released on their own recognizance.

Attorneys from the state Division of Criminal Justice are expected to present a case to a state grand jury within several weeks. Usry and the others do not have to forfeit their public offices on the basis of a criminal complaint, Perretti said.

In a search of Usry's home on Thursday, police confiscated $6,000 in cash, alleged to be conspiracy money, Pagano said.

Usry is in his second term as mayor. He won his first term on May 13, 1984. His predecessor, Michael Matthews, was ousted in a recall election. Matthews was found guilty in an influence-peddling scheme involving casino-zoned land, and was sentenced to a 15-year prison term for extortion.

Usry was swept into office with help from disgruntled white voters and the city's large black population. He was considered an ally of Gov. Thomas H. Kean.

According to the attorney general, the arrests resulted from an investigation that began in November, prompted by a complaint by Atlantic City businessman Albert Black. Black said some city officials had demanded a bribe from him to get a business proposal approved by the zoning board.

The initial investigation involved bribery and influence peddling by some members of the City Council and zoning board, officials said. That probe led to investigations against the mayor and others on similar charges.

The others arrested Thursday included Walter Collette, 61, City Council president; Kaleem Shabazz, 52, chairman of the Atlantic City zoning board; Lillian Bryant, 45, an Atlantic County freeholder; Gene Dorn, 47, councilman; Arnold Orsatti Jr., 46, chairman of the Atlantic City council's transportation committee; and Sylvetta Pilgrim, 44, an administrative assistant with the city landlord-tenant affairs board.

Also charged were: W. Oscar Harris Jr., 46, former director of the Atlantic City Housing Authority; Harold Mosee, 47, former councilman and an aide to Collette; Robert McCurdy, 46, a former business partner of Harris; Jack Wolf, 57, a business consultant; Ernest English, 32, a local businessman; and Clarence Gillard, no age or occupation available.

The 14th person, Barbara Woodall, was out of the state Thursday. The 49-year-old candidate for Atlantic County freeholder faces charges of campaign contribution violations and conspiracy.

Soybean Crop Up

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A much larger soybean crop will mean lower prices for growers but some relief for users, according to a new Agriculture Department report.

The department's Economic Research Service said Thursday the assessment was based on the July 12 estimate of 61.3 million acres planted to soybeans this year and a projected harvest of 1.95 billion bushels, up 27 percent from 1988 output.

Analysts said the soybean crush in 1989-90 could climb to 1.115 billion bushels from 1.07 billion expected for 1988-89.

Soybeans are crushed by processors into high-protein meal for livestock feed and oil for cooking and other food use.

"Exports, too, should rise next year, but at a forecast 600 million bushels will lag the larger volumes of the early 1980s," the report said.

By the end of the next marketing year, Aug. 31, 1990, soybean inventories are expected to be about 265 million bushels, up from 125 million bushels at the beginning of the season, Sept. 1.

As a result of the larger crop this year, soybean market prices are expected to decline to an average of $4.75 to $6.25 per bushel in 1989-90 from an estimated $7.35 this season.

Pentagon Bill Ripped In House

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The White House is counting on the Senate to rescue President Bush's defense priorities torn asunder in House votes gutting or cutting back virtually every major strategic weapons program.

In two days of votes on a $295 billion defense authorization bill, the House ignored White House and Pentagon lobbying and turned Bush's defense priorities on their head.

It restored funds for conventional aircraft discarded by the Pentagon while suspending most production of the radar-evading stealth bomber. It cut money for the Star Wars missile defense system, stripped funds intended to make the MX missile a mobile weapon and eliminated all of the $100 million provided for the Midgetman missile.

Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., said the House had "shredded" Bush's defense priorities to produce "a Michael Dukakis defense bill."

The Senate, meanwhile, only narrowly turned aside a strong bid to freeze research and development of the Star Wars strategic defense initiative. It tabled the amendment offered by Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., 50-47.

But that action may result in the chamber retaining needed leverage to resist House cuts on that and other weapons systems.

The Senate will need all the leverage it can muster when representatives of the two bodies meet in conference to resolve the many differences between the two bills.

Senators are to continue their consideration of the measure next week.

"We are watching the strategic position of the administration unwind step by step on the floor of the House," said Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

"It is important that we not emasculate this program," Nunn said as the vote neared on an amendment to cut Star Wars by $558 million in addition to the $400 million trimmed earlier by the Senate panel.

"If the Senate does not come out with a reasonable budget on all strategic programs, then we are going to be going to conference in a hopeless situation," he said.

The House adopted its version of the bill, 261-162.

In the final minutes of debate, an unusual coalition of Republicans and liberals turned against the Midgetman.

Republicans were prompted by anger at an earlier vote cutting $502 million from the $1.1 billion the administration had asked for the rail lines needed to make the MX a mobile and less vulnerable weapon. Joining them were many liberal members.

Private escort accompanies Bloch, left, as he leaves his father's New York co-op

Newspaper Says Bloch Admits Soviets Paid Him For Years

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The U.S. diplomat suspected of spying for the Soviet Union told the FBI he worked with the Soviets for "many years" and was paid "a lot of money," The New York Times reported today.

Meanwhile, officials in Washington disclosed Thursday that Felix S. Bloch received State Department merit raises of more than $13,000 while he was the No. 2 officer in the American embassy in Vienna.

The raises are given to diplomats whose work is "well above average," said a U.S. official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The Times quoted an unnamed official as saying Bloch made the admission during his only interview with the FBI on June 22, the day he was placed on administrative leave from his State Department job. He has not been charged with any crime but remains under heavy FBI surveillance.

Bloch refused to discuss his motives or to give details on any spying activities, the Times said.

Three administration sources familiar with the Bloch case said in Washington Thursday night that they had not been told of such admissions.

But a congressional source told The Associated Press the FBI believes Bloch was recruited by the KGB, the Soviet intelligence service, while he was serving at the U.S. Embassy in East Berlin 14 years ago.

The Times said the FBI had received information that prompted major interest in a recent trip Bloch was making to Europe and planned a surveillance operation.

The agency notified foreign intelligence services and congressional committees, and somehow the information got out, the paper said. As previously reported, U.S. eavesdropping picked up a Soviet agent telling Bloch, "A bad virus is going around and we believe you are now infected."

The FBI interviewed Bloch, who told agents he had worked with the KGB for "many years" and that they "paid me a lot of money," the Times said. The FBI also got permission to search his home but found nothing incriminating, the paper said.

Government sources say Bloch was videotaped in Paris handing a briefcase to a Soviet agent earlier this year. The contents of the briefcase remain unknown.

In Moscow, Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady I. Gerasimov denied any Soviet connection with Bloch. Gerasimov said Thursday he made inquiries about Bloch's activities. "The name of Bloch was not familiar. We have no connection with him," he said.

Bloch's merit raises included an increase of $4,500 for fiscal 1983-84, $4,000 for 1984-85 and $4,800 for 1985-86, said an official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

But Bloch's raise was the lowest of three merit pay grades in the Senior Foreign Service, with the highest reaching about $9,000 a year, the official said.

The pay increases were given to Bloch while he was in Vienna, where he was posted from 1980 to 1987. Former U.S. ambassador to Austria Helene Von Damm, who has been publicly critical of Bloch, was among those who recommended the raises, said the official.

After 30 years with the State Department, Bloch reached one of the most senior gradings in the foreign service and makes about $80,000 annually, officials said.

Merit raises in the Senior Foreign Service are sometimes given to diplomats who are eligible for more senior postings but cannot get them because of a shortage of vacant slots.

Bloch continues to draw his paycheck and benefits, although his diplomatic passport and credentials have been revoked, the department says.

Bloch has been under tight FBI surveillance for several weeks. Agents followed him Thursday as he ended a three-night stay at his father's East Side co-op in New York City and returned by car to his daughter's house in Chappaqua, N.Y., north of the city.

NYC Athletic Club Will Accept Women

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The New York Athletic Club, which for 121 years was a bastion of male exclusivity, has agreed to accept women as members.

The 10,000-member club decided Thursday to end its holdout and join other previously men-only clubs that have agreed to admit women to comply with a 1984 city law upheld last year by the U.S. Supreme Court.

A letter dated Thursday to members from president Wallace L. Beneville said the club was dropping "with great regret" its challenge to the city law in view of the high court's unanimous June 20, 1988, decision.

Beneville wrote that the club's Board of Governors had reached agreement with the city Commission on Human Rights "that women, properly sponsored by other members, will be considered for membership on the same basis as male applicants."

"In that connection, however, the women applicants will be subject to the same waiting list as our male applicants," the letter said.

The Human Rights Commission, which has filed complaints against several men-only clubs in the past five years, would not comment.

The city law governs clubs that have more than 400 members, serve meals and rent facilities to non-members for business purposes. Such clubs cannot deny membership because of sex, race, creed, color or national origin.

The New York State Club Association, representing about 125 clubs, had challenged the law.

Teen Ate Cyanide-Laced Yogurt

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAMDEN, N.J. — The investigation of the poisoning of a teen-ager who died after eating cyanide-tainted yogurt has ended, but the youth's parents are still searching for answers.

Investigators ruled Thursday that Thomas Lee, 17, of Haddonfield committed suicide and had not been a victim of product tampering.

His parents, Frances and Hsin-Yi Lee, a professor at Rutgers University in Camden, angrily denounced the findings and said they did not believe their son committed suicide.

"Why would Tom commit suicide," Frances Lee said shortly after the couple, both immigrants from Taiwan, were informed of the conclusion. "Everyone who knows him said he was the last person who would commit suicide."

Lee slipped into a coma in January after eating several spoonfuls of cyanide-laced Breyer's black cherry yogurt on his way to school. He died on Feb. 7 at a hospital after he was removed from a respirator.

The resulting six-month investigation was to determine if the case should be treated as a homicide, suicide or tampering.

On Thursday, Camden County Prosecutor Samuel Asbell said "the hard facts indicate to us that it was suicide."

Lee, a high school junior, was described by classmates as a well-liked, artistic student. Investigators, however, said the youth left musical tapes and poetry indicating he had been depressed because of poor grades and thought about dying.

The poisoning prompted a tampering scare and led grocers in the mid-Atlantic region to temporarily remove yogurt from shelves. Breyer's said its investigation determined the cyanide did not originate at its plants.

Asbell said the potassium cyanide found in the yogurt matched cyanide found in professor Lee's laboratory at Rutgers. Lee is chairman of the biology department and is an award-winning researcher, recognized as an expert on early brain development.

Asbell said Thomas Lee had a key to the laboratory and had visited it last summer.

The Lees contend investigators bungled the probe, misplacing a vial of cyanide found in a trash can outside the Lee home.

Asbell said the vial was examined by U.S. Food and Drug Administration officials in Philadelphia. He said it was lost when it was flown to an FBI lab in Washington, but he said a seal recovered from the vial did not contain any identifiable fingerprints.

"There is something very wrong in this investigation," said Mrs. Lee, who has a master's degree in immunology. "I got the feeling they were trying to cover up."

A grand jury was convened to review the case. The 23-member panel adjourned in March without handing up an indictment.

Bukowski Suit

HAARLEM, Netherlands (AP) — American author Charles Bukowski has demanded that the former Bukowski Cafe compensate him for the unauthorized commercial use of his name and photograph, the writer's Dutch attorney said today.

The author of "Barfly" and "Tales of Ordinary Madness" brought a $2,200 lawsuit against the owners of a bar named for Bukowski in downtown Haarlem, 13 miles west of Amsterdam.

Bukowski, in whose books alcohol is a key theme, was initially "charmed" by the bar named in his honor, attorney Paul van de Kroft testified in court.

But bar owners Peter Massa and Wilhelmus Koops later made an unauthorized commercial use of a photograph of Bukowski, selling copies and using it to decorate two glass-paneled doors in the bar, Kroft said.

Amsterdam photographer Joan Levine, who took the photograph, is seeking a $6,800 compensatin for alleged copyright violation in the suit.

Consumer Spending Unchanged

WASHINGTON — Consumer spending was unchanged in June, turning in its weakest performance in nine months, while personal incomes rose a modest 0.3 percent, the government reported today.

Both figures provided further evidence of an economy that is beginning to slow significantly. Consumer spending, because it represents two-thirds of total economic activity, is closely followed by economists for warning signs of a possible recession.

Many economists are predicting, however, that consumer spending will rebound somewhat in the second half of the year because of a belief that recent moves by the Federal Reserve to lower interest rates will spur home sales and purchases of big-ticket items such as autos.

Consumer spending stayed at an annual level of $3.44 trillion in June after a modest increase of 0.2 percent in May. The June performance was the weakest since spending actually fell by 0.1 percent in September 1988.

These figures are calculated in current dollars. If inflation is factored out, spending was even weaker, edging down 0.1 percent in June after falling 0.2 percent in May. It was the first back-to-back declines in inflation-adjusted spending since September and October of 1987.

The rise in personal incomes of 0.3 percent followed an even smaller 0.2 percent increase in May. It left incomes at an annual level of $4.41 trillion in June.

The key category of wages and salaries rose by 0.5 percent in June after showing essentially no change in May.

On the spending side, purchases of durable goods, items expected to last three or more years, fell by $1.7 billion, following a $9.6 billion decrease in May. Much of this weakness reflected a slump in car sales.

Purchases of non-durable goods edged up $400 million following a much bigger $4.9 billion rise in May, an advance propelled in part by higher costs for gasoline and food.

Purchases of services were up $2.5 billion following a giant $12.7 billion jump in May. The May increase had been attributed to a sharp rise in electricity purchases for air conditioning because of hot weather.

Disposable, or after-tax incomes, climbed by 0.6 percent in June following a 0.8 percent May advance.

The personal savings rate — savings as a percent of disposable income — climbed to 5.9 percent in June, the highest level since March when it was at 6.2 percent. In April, the savings rate took a nosedive to 4.9 percent as Americans had to write checks to pay off their federal tax bill.

Cruse Gets Two Death Sentences

MELBOURNE, Fla. — Retired librarian William Bryan Cruse received two death sentences today for his shooting rampage at two shopping plazas that left six people dead and 10 wounded.

Circuit Judge John Antoon sentenced the 61-year-old Cruse to the electric chair in the shooting deaths of two police officers who tried to halt the massacre in nearby Palm Bay, a central Florida coastal city.

Antoon added four consecutive sentences of life in prison without possibility of parole for at least 25 years in the other shooting deaths and three years on 26 other counts, for a total of 103 years. Parole would be possible only if the death sentences were overturned. Cruse, dressed in a red jail outfit, expressed little reaction to the proceedings, except he appeared to wipe his eyes at one point when a shooting victim read a statement before the judge.

A Polk County jury convicted Cruse last April 5 on 32 counts of murder, attempted murder and kidnapping in the April 23, 1987 incident.

Besides the police officers, those killed were an engineer, two college students from Kuwait and a woman sitting in her car outside a store.

In addition to the 10 wounded, the jury found that Cruse tried to kill 14 other people and held two women hostage inside the supermarket, where he barricaded himself for more than seven hours following the shootout.

Cruse told investigators after he was captured that he "got into trouble" because everybody believed he was homosexual.

The trial jury rejected arguments from specialists and Cruse's public defenders that he was temporarily insane because of delusions brought on by mental illness.

Exxon Says It Will Pursue Beach Cleanup

WASHINGTON — The Exxon Corp. promised today to pursue the cleanup of oil-contaminated beaches in Alaska into 1990 if directed by the U.S. Coast Guard, saying it would go along with any "reasonable request."

W.D. Stevens, president of Exxon Co. USA, told a House subcommittee the oil company stands behind earlier pledges to return to the contaminated shoreline next spring "to respect the area to assure the job has been properly done, and if not, to put it right."

Stevens said "we intend to more than achieve" cleanup objectives by mid-September and the company intends to go ahead with plans to demobilize most of its operation then for the winter.

Coast Guard Vice Admiral Clyde Lusk said the contaminated areas would be surveyed in the spring and if additional work needs to be conducted Exxon would be told to resume cleanup efforts. But Lusk suggested if Exxon disagrees, the government's only option is to federalize the effort and assume responsibility.

Lusk said he had "no doubt" that during the spring survey there will be "disagreements on what should be done."

When pressed by Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., on what Exxon would do if the Coast Guard demanded additional cleanup actions, Stevens stopped short of committing the company to complying with any Coast Guard directive.

"We will follow through on any reasonable request that is made," said the Exxon executive. He said he could not make "an unequivocal commitment" and told the hearing he "would be naive to do that" in light of expected disagreements within the scientific community on what should constitute a clean shoreline.

Concern about Exxon's cleanup plans arose this week after disclosure of an internal company memorandum that implied Exxon will not commit itself to further cleanup efforts next spring.

The memo said current activity to clean oil from an estimated 700 miles of shoreline along southern Alaska resulting from the Exxon Valdez spill will stop Sept. 15 because of oncoming cold weather.

Stevens said the wording of the memo "was unfortunate" and under questioning from subcommittee chairman Miller, said it was not meant to suggest Exxon was pulling out of the cleanup effort after September.

Miller said the focus of the hearing before the House Interior subcommittee on water power and offshore energy resources was aimed at determining Exxon's future cleanup plans and what actions the U.S. Coast Guard intends to take should Exxon not pursue a cleanup.

The cleanup of the many miles of shoreline has become much more difficult than many had anticipated.

Greenpeace Boats Will Try To Halt Sub Missile Test

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Two Greenpeace U.S.A. ships sailed today toward an off-limits danger zone to try to halt the test launch of a Navy Trident 2 missile from a submerged submarine, protest leaders said.

A motorized inflatable raft carrying three members of the environmental group was within 100 yards of the surfaced submarine this morning, a Greenpeace spokesman said.

"The inflatable was warned over the radio it is in danger," spokesman Steve Shallhorn said by ship radio to Miami from the M.V. Greenpeace. That ship was several miles from the submarine USS Tennessee, he said.

"We can see the submarine being escorted by a destroyer," Shallhorn said, adding that the activists didn't plan to leave the area.

Greenpeace contends its vessels are free to enter the Navy-set danger zone because it is in international waters.

Earlier today, Lt. Jim Wood, a Navy spokesman at Port Canaveral, said the Navy was aware of Greenpeace's protest plans but would not say what action it would take. He also would not confirm the test launch. The Navy does not announce Trident launches in advance.

"We plan just to enter the security zone for a non-violent peaceful protest," Greenpeace member Joel Clement said Thursday. "We're not trying to begin any kind of a confrontation. We are campaigning for nuclear-free seas."

The security zone is a large area of the Atlantic more than 30 miles east of Cape Canaveral that is placed off-limits to non-essential ships during a submarine test-firing. The Navy would not disclose the exact size of the area. Ships in the zone could be hit by missile debris in the event of a misfiring. Normally, a countdown would be stopped if a ship wandered into the off-limits sector.

It would be the second underwater test firing of the Trident 2, the Navy's newest, most powerful nuclear-armed missile. The first test, in March, ended in an explosion when the $23.7 million weapon pin-wheeled out of control.

Jane Fonda's Affluent Spa Helps The Poor

By Nikki Finke
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — The familiar voice on the answering machine is surprisingly friendly.

"Hello, this is Jane Fonda. Thank you for calling the Laurel Springs Retreat. I'm sorry that no one is available to speak with you at the moment, but I'm very pleased you called."

Then why is it that, while passing through the rustic gate of her ranch, you feel like a trespasser? What if, like Rupert Pupkin in the movie "The King of Comedy," you've only imagined this personal invitation onto her property? When is someone going to scream, "Go away. Get lost. Scram!"?

But that won't happen. Not if you're one of the three to six people willing to pay $2,500 for the weeklong privilege of, not actually rubbing shoulders with the 51-year-old Goddess of Good Health, then eating her recipes, hiking her trails and following her fitness-for-life philosophy as a guest at what could be the most exclusive spa in the world — her 160-acre home here.

Sure, these days stars seem eager for entrepreneurship, owning as they do everything from restaurants (Tom Selleck) and clubs (Billy Idol) to even hairdressing salons (Mickey Rourke). And the undisputed queen of them all is Fonda, who with her best-selling workout videos, books and studio in Beverly Hills, Calif., has made a bundle from her businesses.

But nearly all celebrities would draw the line at any venture that interfered with their personal privacy. Why didn't Fonda?

"I didn't do the retreat because I wanted to get rich off it," she states firmly. "I knew that if people could receive information about exercise and nutrition in the personal way that I have, then their commitment to their health would be changed forever. And by taking people out of their environment and putting them in a very intense and private situation, which is also extremely peaceful and individualized, the experience is even more profound."

"So I thought, 'I have this house. I have this ranch. Why don't I try to make it available to other people?'"

And why not also fund some social causes and get a tax write-off in the process.

Fonda says that she and her estranged husband, Assemblyman Tom Hayden, D-Calif., purchased the ranch in 1977 to start Camp Laurel Springs, their non-profit summer facility for youngsters of different racial, ethnic and socioeconomic backgrounds that includes a program for inner city kids from the Los Angeles Unified School District.

But the camp has become "increasingly difficult to fund" in recent years, maintains Fonda, who came up with the idea of underwriting it with a non-profit enterprise in the form of a super-deluxe spa. It opened in November in the remote and remodeled redwood lodge known as the Hill House, which Fonda used to rent to singer Joe Cocker.

"Yes, the spa is expensive for most people," Fonda said. "But the money goes for things they can also feel proud of."

Fonda's projections, "depending how fast we can take off," show that within two years the spa's net proceeds, which go into the Temescal Foundation, will be enough not just to support the camp but also research in health, child development and education.

At first, the idea of spending the day at Fonda's Laurel Springs Retreat sounds more like a punishment than a reward. No doubt, the superathlete, whose "feel the burn" philosophy has toned up and tuckered out men and women of all sizes and ages, would be expected to organize a regimen more fitting to a medieval torture chamber than a Xanadu of rest and relaxation.

And when reveille — in the form of a gentle wake-up call — comes at 6:15 a.m., your worst fears are confirmed. The very idea of calling it a retreat seems like a cruel joke.

But the punch line is still to come — a voice explaining sweetly but insistently that the 3½-mile hike will start in a matter of minutes and you had better get downstairs pronto.

At any other resort, turning off the phone, jumping back into bed and catching a few more hours of sleep would hardly raise an eyebrow. And even if you did get up and go out, you could look forward after the hike to all those lovely beauty treatments like mud baths, manicures and makeup lessons that other spas offer. Not this one.

Instead, your reward consists of being led to a state-of-the-art gym, hooked up to a six-lead EKG machine and put on a treadmill by Dr. Daniel Kosich, the program director for Fonda's Workout empire. He conducts a rigorous evaluation to assess your cardiovascular fitness, body fat composition, flexibility and muscle balance.

And it's not even 10 a.m. yet!

"The point of the treadmill is you're going to learn how it feels to exercise at your optimum level," Kosich tells his guinea pig, Los Angeles screenwriter Susan Lindau. "It's so wonderful — when it stops hurting," she laughs after she finishes her Herculean effort and removes the electrodes. "But he said my fitness level was above average, and I've never been above average on anything in my life."

With that, she went on yet another hike.

In all honesty, life could be worse than to be coddled for a week in this Navajo and Nautilus Nirvana furnished cozily by Fonda with Los Angeles decorator Barbara Pohlman (they met through singer Linda Ronstadt) — sleeping on linens from the Ralph Lauren Home Collection, dining on Franciscan Desert Rose china, feeding on low-fat high-energy gourmet fare, exercising amid Rauschenberg lithographs and getting massaged before a panoramic view of the Pacific Ocean.

It is almost enough to forget all the hiking, biking, twisting and turning that your personal trainer puts you through every day.

Golden Years Dimmed By Abuse For Some Elderly

By Barbara Metzler
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Alice didn't dare wait for the elevator.

She ran down six flights of stairs, her 69 years weighing heavy — less for the age and a bad hip, more for her 52-year-old son who was waving a knife and threatening to kill her. Out on the street Alice headed for a neighbor's phone to tell the police her son had turned abusive again.

"You work and support a child all your life," she said from New York City, where she lives. "Then they act like they hate you."

Alice (not her real name) isn't alone. As many as 2 million elderly people may be abused, researchers say, often by children, grandchildren, even great-grandchildren — the very people they depend on for care in their old age.

"This happens with these blood relatives — sons, daughters, nieces, nephews," said Dorothy Brodie, a 75-year-old retired social worker who works with the Bronx Elder Abuse Support Project.

"They'll do things like keep telling the victim 'You're stupid. You're senile. You have Alzheimer's disease.' They'll do things like maybe even taking their dentures away from them so they're forced to eat soft food; or take eyeglasses away so they can't even read a newspaper."

One in 25 older adults is abused, according to an estimate in a 1985 report to Congress, "Elder Abuse: A National Disgrace." The abuse takes all forms: psychological torment, neglect and theft. But often, it is physical.

In New York City, an 18-year-old man punched and kicked his 87-year-old great-grandmother, explaining later to authorities: "She bugs me because she asks me to fix her something to eat."

A 54-year-old salesman on New York's Long Island was charged last year with brutalizing his elderly parents for three years, demanding they turn over their life savings. When police arrived, neighbors asked, "Did he kill them?"

"This is a terrifying social phenomenon," said Elizabeth Holtzman, District Attorney of the New York borough of Brooklyn, where elder abuse has risen 400 percent since 1986 to 370 cases last year. She attributes the increase to abusers' use of crack cocaine.

Last year, 140,000 cases of elder abuse were reported nationwide, an increase of 10 percent from 1987, said Toshio Tataru, director of the National Aging Resource Center on Elder Abuse in Washington, D.C. "People still find it incredible that we abuse our elders. They said the same thing about children 20 years ago. And we're doing it like a national pastime."

Tataru believes just one in 14 cases is likely to be reported.

The victim usually is 75 or older, a woman and generally dependent, the abuser a son or daughter, the congressional report found.

Lawmakers heard about a 68-year-old South Carolina woman whose daughter kept her in a room so cold the urine in a catheter froze; a 75-year-old retired nurse from Massachusetts whose 42-year-old son attacked her with a hatchet; a San Francisco woman whose $167,000 estate was whittled to $3,000 by a son-in-law.

"These cases are really difficult and scary even to experienced social workers," said Lucy Friedman, director of the Victim Services Agency in New York, which helped Alice seek a temporary restraining order against her son.

"I was really afraid of him," said Alice, who bears a scar on her neck where her son once sliced her. "Once he gets the wine, he goes crazy."

The abusers many times have their own problems: drug and alcohol abuse, unemployment, money, mental illness. Violence may be repayment for abuse a son or daughter received. A cramped house may spark it; middle-aged children free at last of their own children may resent the intrusion of a frail parent. In some cases, it's the stress of caring for an elderly parent.

Paramedics answering a call in the Los Angeles suburb of San Fernando found 77-year-old Virginia Grimes Jeter covered with excrement and maggots in a filthy bedroom. She died five hours later.

The woman's daughter, Cynthia Jeter Green, 39, had promised her mother not to put her in an old folks' home, said Prosecutor Lee Harris. A probation report found Ms. Green "was under a degree of emotional distress."

She pleaded no contest April 12 to elder abuse and was ordered to begin psychiatric counseling and perform 300 hours of community service. She did not return several calls requesting an interview.

"The idea that people for some reason or another do not want to put their loved ones in a nursing home or feel they have to be responsible for total care is fairly common in these cases," said Rosalie Wolf, associate director of the University Center on Aging at the University of Massachusetts Medical Center.

Part of the solution is getting seniors to take responsibility for stopping and even preventing abuse, said Lee Pearson, assistant manager of criminal justice services for the American Association of Retired Persons.

The elderly should keep regular appointments and stay in touch with old friends, especially if they move in with a relative, Pearson said. They should have someone stop by once a week to make sure all is well.

New York's Victim Services Agency offers a 24-hour hotline, individual and group counseling and help in court, getting locks changed, and finding shelter, transportation and clothing. In a Bronx group called Safe Place, the elderly hesitantly confide what has happened to them and try to make sense of it.

"People just believe and hope so much that this will be the last time, things will change, he won't do it again. But they do," said Diana Walcott, director of the Bronx Elder Abuse Support Project and leader of Safe Place.

In many cases, the parents blame themselves, Ms. Friedman said. "They say 'Well, how did I bring up this monster?'"

Forty-two states and the District of Columbia have statutes requiring reporting of elder abuse, but those involved with the cases say the nation has a long way to go toward recognizing the problem.

The states spend an average $22 per abused child, but just $2.90 for each abused older person, Congress found. Its report recommended emergency shelters, tax credits for families caring for older adults, amendments to Medicare and Medicaid eliminating limitations on benefits and services to elderly people cared for by family members at home, and mandatory reporting of abuse.

"It's so foreign to our thinking," said Ms. Holtzman. "Doctors won't even ask if abuse has taken place. It's possible the person, once cured, will be sent back to the same environment, possibly to be killed."

Grandchildren Should Be Tested For Disabilities

Dear Abby: Please help me. My daughter has taken her children out of public school to teach them herself. I called the Board of Education, and I was told it is legal to use a home-study course for children.

Abby, my daughter didn't graduate from high school herself. She was very headstrong and refused to attend classes, so when she was old enough to quit school, she quit.

Her children are 7, 8 and 12 years old, and they've all had difficulties with their studies. The 7-year-old is repeating first grade next year, the 8-year-old has just completed two years in the first grade, and the 12-year-old will have to repeat the fifth grade.

This home-study course requires only 4½ hours of schooling per day, and I doubt if these children will get the education they need in this little time. Also, my daughter is no teacher.

She says she wants her children to have a good Christian education, free from drugs and the bad influence of classmates whose upbringing she considers inferior to her children's.

I told her that I do not approve of isolating her children in this manner, but she insists that I don't know what I am talking about. Please give me your opinion for the sake of these children. — Worried

Dear Worried: Some home-study programs have worked very well; others have not. It depends upon the competence of the teacher. (It's usually the mother.)

In view of the problems your grandchildren have encountered thus far in school, I suggest that they be tested for reading (and learning) disabilities — regardless of whether they are taught at home or in a public school.

Dear Abby: Our daughter was born with a cleft palate (harelip). At 4 months of age, this birth defect was corrected beautifully with surgery. She's now 2½ years old and the thin scar under her nose is barely noticeable.

Before her surgery, I took pictures of her and was not ashamed of her defect. I thought she was just as beautiful as my other children. The other day we were looking through the family album, and my husband said he thought we should put away the pictures of our daughter before she had her surgery.

I don't see anything wrong with showing our daughter, and others, those pictures. What do you think, Abby?

Would parents who have had children with facial abnormalities that were later corrected please respond? Better yet, any readers who were children who saw their "before and after" pictures, please respond. — Commonsense Mom

Dear Mom: I would put those pictures away until your daughter is old enough to make that decision herself. You had the abnormality corrected because you didn't want her to be "different"; since it was corrected and no longer exists, I see no point in immortalizing it in a family album. Readers?

Dear Abby: I am a senior citizen. Several years ago, I made arrangements with my bank for a safe deposit box to be jointly shared with my son. All the paperwork completed, I never gave it a second thought. I have had an account with that bank for 43 years.

Yesterday when my son went to the bank to remove an item from our safe deposit box, he learned that he did not have access to it! The card with his signature on it was not on file. Fortunately he discovered this yesterday, phoned me immediately and it was straightened out. (Misfiling his card was an error on the part of the bank.)

Abby, I am writing this to suggest that everyone who has a safe deposit box pay a test visit to the bank to ensure that he or she has access to it.

Thanks for all the years of enjoyable and helpful reading. — Senior Citizen, Corona Del Mar

Applicants Denied

July 20, 2,639 freshmen had paid enrollment deposits.

This still will be a gain overall, because applicants were up, and will keep the rate of enrollment increase within the 2 percent per year growth mandated for all UNC system institutions, a figure which ECU exceeded last year.

In addition to between 2,600 and 2,800 incoming freshmen, ECU expects to admit approximately 700 transfer students - students who have completed at least one full year of academic study at another institution.

"The college application process has become much more competitive as indicated by the increase in applications," Owens said. "This is expected to continue to rise for the next several years."

Jet Loses Wheel

In the past nine days, two DC-10s have crashed, one in Sioux City, Iowa, on July 19 and the other Thursday in Tripoli, Libya. The crashes have killed 200 people.

On Thursday night, a United Airlines DC-10 with 240 people on board experienced hydraulic problems but landed safely at Los Angeles International Airport, aviation officials said.

On Tuesday, a Continental Airlines DC-9 made a rough landing at Newark, N.J., also after experiencing hydraulic trouble.

Continental Flight 354 from Chicago to Newark was carrying 89 passengers when it made the emergency landing shortly after 8 p.m. The plane blew four of six tires and skidded about 7,500 feet before stopping. There were no injuries.

On Thursday night, another jet landed at Newark after developing hydraulic problems, but this time a backup hydraulic system made it a smooth landing, officials and passengers said.

The Piedmont Boeing 727 en route from Charlotte, N.C., to Newark landed without incident about 8:45 p.m., said Piedmont spokesman Dave Shipley. He said the plane lost its primary hydraulic system in North Carolina and switched to the backup system.

There were 138 passengers and seven crew members on board.

The International Airline Passengers Association said Thursday it wants the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration to order DC-10s out of use. The FAA and McDonnell Douglas Corp., which manufactures the jets, rejected the demand.

The Sioux City crash occurred when a tail engine blew apart and cut off the flow of hydraulic fluid needed to control the jet. The cause of the Tripoli crash has not been determined.

He said the ECU admissions staff has been available to more than 1,300 church, school and civic club organizations during the past year for presentations on admission requirements.

The admissions office at ECU "stands ready and willing" to provide counseling and guidance to students seeking admission, including those whose applications were denied, Owens said.

"We'll counsel and provide information at any stage, and follow up and do whatever is necessary to help them get prepared," he said.

Often, a prospective student can obtain the required academic units with 30 semester hours of study in the two-year community college system and be adequately qualified for subsequent admission to ECU, he said.

ther way, the state has not lost financially, he said.

"The state is not going to lose ground. It's the same dollars. It is a fiscally sound and conservative approach."

"Should the economy suffer a down turn, or federal mandates and prior legislative commitments to educational quality use some of that normal growth (revenue), the 1991 General Assembly would then be able to review the expenditure needs and decide on a new package of revenues and taxes to meet those needs."

"Our plan, at worst, will delay tax increases for two years. At best, we may never have to increase or add those additional taxes. The two-year transfer is not guaranteed to work, but it's worth the effort, and our taxpayers deserve no less," Taft said.

Eastern North Carolina is the big winner in the new highway construction plan, Taft said, and area lawmakers could not allow political feuding to prevent them from supporting the final bill.

"We can't let the Republicans' desire to have their way or no highway plan at all stand in the path of these new roads for our counties and regions so long left out," Taft said.

Rep. Gene Rogers, D-Martin, said he was reluctant to approve any broader taxes to fund pay raises, thus the compromise was acceptable. In light of the taxes for highway construction, it would have been difficult for taxpayers to shoulder an additional tax to fund pay raises, he said.

"I was opposed to an across-the-board increase in our taxes. I don't think the impact has really hit everybody yet. When it does, I think everybody will see it's all we could take. It think we've come out pretty good on the highway bill."

Rep. Ed Warren, D-Pitt, said he opposed the sales tax because the gasoline tax provided a better method of financing highway improvements. But he said he supported the final bill because it will accomplish several goals.

"This is the first time in my memory that we have had legislation passed which addresses the essential transportation needs for our area and which will begin to place our teachers on a pay schedule which they surely deserve and reinstate the merit pay schedule for state employees," Warren said in a prepared statement.

Vandalism

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) - One man was injured as at least four trucks were struck by tire rims and traffic signs thrown from two overpasses on Interstate 95 late Wednesday night and early Thursday.

Lt. Barney Goff of the Cumberland County sheriff's department said it was a "miracle" someone wasn't severely injured when the heavy iron rims were thrown or dropped from the overpasses.

A North State Lines driver was taken to Highsmith-Rainey Memorial Hospital Thursday, where he was treated for injuries to his chest and legs after a tire rim crashed through the windshield of his truck. Chris Dunn, 31, of Pinetops, was treated and released.

Mill Destroyed

ARCHDALE, N.C. (AP) - Miller's Mill in Randolph County was destroyed by fire Thursday after a lightning strike apparently set the building ablaze.

"When we arrived on the scene, the building was fully involved and it already had structural collapse," said firefighter Gilbert English of the Guil-Rand Fire Department.

The mill, which was built in 1884, was declared a loss, said Capt. Scott Spencer of the fire department.

Ex-HUD Official Fails To Appear

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON - A onetime top aide to former HUD Secretary Samuel Pierce failed to appear today before a congressional panel investigating abuses in housing programs, and the chairman said he will seek to subpoena the witness.

Lance Wilson, former executive assistant to Pierce, did not appear as scheduled today before the House Government Operations subcommittee on employment and housing.

Rep. Tom Lantos, D-Calif., chairman of the subcommittee, on Thursday turned down a request by Wilson for a postponement. Wilson, now a first vice president at Paine Webber brokerage in New York, said his attorney was in the hospital.

It was the third time Wilson had asked for an extension, Lantos said.

"There are certain questions that I want to ask Mr. Wilson with respect to his request for a postponement," Lantos said. "With 186 attorneys listed on the law firm's letterhead, could another attorney not be able to advise Mr. Wilson, who is himself an attorney, as to his constitutional rights?"

Lantos said the subcommittee will vote Wednesday on issuing a subpoena for Wilson to appear Sept. 27 and to produce "all relevant documents and records."

Lantos also read aloud a letter from HUD Inspector General Paul

Martin Takes Another Pole At DieHard 500

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TALLADEGA, Ala. — His day will come, Mark Martin said after earning his sixth pole-position start on the Winston Cup circuit in 1985, a year in which he is looking for his first victory.

Martin's Ford will lead the parade as the DieHard 500 NASCAR race gets under way at 12:15 p.m. CDT Sunday.

He won the No. 1 spot Thursday with a 194.800 mph lap of the Talladega Superspeedway. He edged Darrell Waltrip, whose Chevrolet reached 194.058 mph in qualifying to fill the first 20 spots for the 17th Winston Cup race of the year.

Martin, who finished third last Sunday at Pocono despite a flat tire, said, "I don't think we're going to have to run better than we have been to win. We're just going to have to keep running."

"Sooner or later, the wins will come to us."

Martin will get a $114,000 bonus if he wins Sunday. Unocal 76 posts $7,600 for each Winston Cup race as a bonus for any driver who wins from the pole. The money carries over and another $7,600 is added for each race, and that's why the total is so large now.

"If it's up to $114 million, this team couldn't try any harder than it's trying," Martin said. "They're the ones that turn the screws on that thing and they're turning them the right way."

Lining up third and fourth for the race around the 2.67-mile tri-oval are defending champion Ken Schrader, 193.881 mph in a Chevrolet, and Bill Elliott, 193.139 mph in a Ford.

Elliott set the race's qualifying record, 209.005 mph, in 1986 before NASCAR mandated the use of carburetor restrictor plates for the Talladega and Daytona tracks. That move to lower power, and thus speed, was prompted by Bobby Allison's mishap in the 1987 Winston 500 at Talladega, Ala., when his car became airborne and crashed into a restraining fence.

A second qualifying round was set for today to complete the 40-car field, with drivers such as Neil Bonnett, A.J. Foyt, Richard Petty and Dave Marcis unable to make the top 20 Thursday.

Davey Allison and Terry Labonte finished 1-2 in the Winston 500 on the Talladega track in May. This time they will start in the seventh and fifth spots. Martin won the pole for that race but finished third.

Only Dave Marcis in 1976 and Elliott in 1987 have won the DieHard 500 from the pole in the 20 previous runnings.

Waltrip, who has yet to qualify first after 17 attempts this year, said he was "tickled to death with our speed. What a good day for us!"

The DieHard 500 has been one of the most competitive races on the circuit this decade, with the margin of victory in the previous nine totaling only 3.08 seconds, ranging from one foot (too close to time) to 1.66 seconds.

Bob Studdard will start on the pole for Saturday's 500-kilometer Automobile Racing Club of America race.

His Chevrolet reached 194.603 mph, with Tracy Leslie taking the outside spot on the front row at 191.042 mph in a Pontiac.

"Wow, I didn't know I was going that fast," Studdard said.

AT THE EAST-WEST GAME: What Rule Changes?

GREENSBORO — This year's 41st Annual McDonald's East-West All-Star Football Game featured a couple of rules changes which were supposed to benefit the offenses.

Midway through Thursday's game, which was won the West 17-0, it was hard to see if the new regulations were having any effect.

The new rules prohibited blitzing, forced the linebackers to line up no closer to the line of scrimmage than the defensive lineman's back heel and required cornerbacks to line up five yards off the line of scrimmage.

In theory, the rules make sense. Any football coach worth his salt will tell you it's much easier to teach defense than offense.

So it stands to reason that in an All-Star game format like this one, it's hard to prepare an offense in a week. There's more terminology and more options.

Offense just has more nuances to it than defense.

"Even with our high school teams, it's easier to get a defense ready," West coach Rudy Abrams said. "As far as I'm concerned it's easier to teach defense."

The new rules limit what the defense can do and in many ways further define each player's responsibilities.

Offense, though, is more intricate. There are more alternatives, more things to think about.

"You can't be aggressive if you're confused," East coach Ted Perry said. "We (were) trying to keep it simple."

It's just a situation that is usually going to favor the defense.

"We were getting kind of mixed up, learning all the plays in a week," East offensive guard Raleigh Fuller said. "But you can't use that as an excuse."

Cooke Leaves Game Early

East team linebacker and Lee County product Jeff Cooke left the game early in the first quarter after twisting a knee.

Cooke, a defensive end in high school, started the game at inside linebacker, but got his knee twisted in a pileup. The future East Carolina player's injury wasn't expected to be serious.

Still, his departure effected East assistant coach Steve Craft's defensive plans.

"It hurt us bad," he said. "We had three linebackers we wanted to use. The other two didn't get any rest."

Crumpler Stands Out

Rose's Carlester Crumpler of the East still turned in a good performance despite his team's 17-0 loss.

Crumpler had six solo tackles from his defensive end spot, including a 17-yard tackle for loss of West quarterback Randy Woods.

Perry Bows Out

East coach Ted Perry closed out his coaching career with this game, ending a 17-year tenure as New Bern's head coach.

Perry had a smile on his face all week as he prepared the East team for his and their final games in the prep ranks.

"I'm just as proud of this group as I could be," he said. "They're all super kids."

"About the only way to go out better would be with a win," he added with a grin. Interestingly enough, Perry ended his coaching career with a unique father-to-son touch.

Starting at defensive end for the East was Carlester Crumpler Jr. Perry was an assistant coach at Wilson Fike in the late 1960s when the elder Carlester Crumpler was one of the top running backs in the state before going on to play for East Carolina and then in the professional ranks.

Holloway Finishes Strong

Maiden running back Robby Holloway rushed for 101 yards to lead the West running attack and take home Most Valuable Player honors.

The game closed out an amazing high school career for the future Gardner-Webb player.

During the past season, Holloway ran for 1,957 yards and scored 27 touchdowns.

His junior year, he had 1,864. For his career, he totaled an incredible 61 touchdowns.

Craft Set For Season

High school football practice opens Aug. 1, but D.H. Conley coach Steve Craft got an early start with his work as an assistant coach for the East team this past week.

"I've been practicing hard and wide open for a week," Craft said, getting his raspy voice in fine shape for pre-season practice. "Now we (really) start Monday. This week has really fired me up, though. It really has."

West Puts Clamp On East, 17-0 Holloway's 60-Yard Gallop Provides Offensive Spark

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

GREENSBORO — There weren't many offensive sparks in the 41st Annual East-West All-Star game, but the West had the corner on the limited market.

Sparked by 101 yards rushing by Most Valuable Player Robby Holloway of Maiden, who had a key 60-yard touchdown run that opened the second half, the West shut out the East, 17-0 Thursday before a crowd of 1,500 at a wet Jamieson Stadium.

The West generated just enough offense to build a 10-0 lead early in the second half, and then used that cushion to its advantage the rest of the way.

"We didn't want to do anything to beat ourselves," West coach Rudy Abrams said. "Once we got the 10-point lead, we just wanted to keep moving the ball and letting the clock run."

That allowed running backs like Holloway (6-2, 205), Ruben Wells (5-9, 180) of Kannapolis Brown and Frank Adams (5-9, 165) of Gastonia Ashbrook, who closed out the scoring with a 13-yard touchdown run with 2:29 left, to get their hands on the ball repeatedly.

Adams and Wells added 69 yards apiece.

The West's success on the ground also kept the East offense on the sidelines. When the East team did get its hands on the ball, it had trouble getting a running game going.

"Their front people were a little stronger," East coach Ted Perry said. "If we could have blocked the tackles and ends, we could have given our quarterback and running backs some time."

"We went in thinking that would be a problem. We couldn't run. We couldn't move anybody. In practice, our pass blocking was better than our run blocking."

And that spelled trouble for the East.

"We really didn't have any trouble moving them, although they were big," East offensive guard Raleigh Fuller of Rose said. "But when they came hard, it was kind of hard to stop because they had all the weight and momentum coming at you. We just couldn't get it together."

Perry had hoped to off-set any size advantage the West had by putting the ball in the air, but quarterbacks Ledell George and Todd Decker combined for only 99 yards passing.

With a wet field and a wet ball, sometimes running can be the safest and most productive plan of action. It was an option the East really didn't have.

The rainy conditions were in sharp contrast to the sunny, hot practice days that preceded the game.

"It was a surprise that it rained," East defensive end Carlester Crumpler of Rose said. "Footing was bad, but they had the same footing."

"They scored. We didn't." Holloway's score, though, changed the complexion of the game.

After a sloppy first half, the West had a 3-0 lead thanks to a 21-yard field goal kicker Jimmy Szikszai of Asheville A.C. Reynolds with 3:57 left in the second quarter.

The drive was kept alive thanks to a roughing the kicker call on fourth and five at the West 45 when Joe Montford of East Carteret ran into Randy Wells to give the East a first down and new life.

As the second half opened, the West took over first and 10 at its own 40.

Holloway, the I-back, took the pitch and headed straight upfield off left tackle for 10 yards, juiced a would-be tackler, cut right and raced past David Moore and Ronald Bess to the end zone. Szikszai added the point after to a 10-0 lead.

The East, though, came back and began to put a drive together.

Ledell George hit David Davis for nine yards on a third-and-five play to put the ball at the West 44. A few plays later, though, West lineman Mark Dixon broke through and sacked George for a loss of five yards on a third and three to kill the drive.

With 5:23 left in the third quarter, the East appeared to get on the scoreboard when Northern Durham kicker Paul Tivnan hit a 44-yard field goal. Illegal procedure was called on the East, though, and on the next play Tivnan was wide right from 48 yards.

Still, the game wasn't over yet. The East, thanks to a 14-yard punt return by George early in the final period, took over near midfield at the East 46.

Decker hit Herman Jones on first down for five yards and he pitched to Derrick Pasley for another six to put the ball at the West 43.

The East eventually moved all the way to the 24 before the drive bogged down. Tivnan came on and mishit a 43-yard field goal to the right with 8:40 remaining.

From there, it was play the clock for the West, with Adams, a South Carolina signee, putting the finishing touches on the win with a 13-yard scamper around right end with 2:29 remaining.

Several Records Established In U.S. Olympic Festival

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OKLAHOMA CITY — Mark Lenzi made history in the U.S. Olympic Festival in shaky fashion. Sean O'Neill did it cumulatively. Kathy Arendsen did it perfectly.

Records and barriers were broken in the festival on Thursday, starting with Lenzi, who became the first American diver to do a 4½ front tuck somersault in competition. Even with the momentous dive, Lenzi was just seventh in the 3-meter preliminaries won by Mark Bradshaw. His faltering performance on the dive had a great deal to do with that.

"I was nervous, but I was more concerned with my takeoff," Lenzi, 21, of Fredericksburg, Va., said. "I had already made mistakes before I got on the end of the board. I wanted it to be nice. I wanted to do it perfectly the first time so everyone could see I could do it, but I guess I'll just have to try it again."

O'Neill didn't have to try again to break Greg Louganis' mark for festival gold medals. O'Neill won his 13th on his first try, taking the men's singles in table tennis. He has won five straight singles championships.

"It was really worth all the work, the six to eight hours a day for the last two weeks," O'Neill, 21, of McLean Va., said. "I have been looking forward to this night since North Carolina at the festival there (in 1987)."

Arendsen has been looking for a perfect game all year. She got it Thursday, the first by a woman's softball pitcher in a festival. And she did it on her grandmother's birthday.

"She's been to all my national championships," Arendsen, of Holland, Mich., said. "My grandfather and grandmother are two of my biggest fans."

Arendsen fanned 11, including the first six batters of the game, in beating the winless North 5-0. She didn't permit a ball out of the infield.

"This was my first perfect game this year," she said. "I've had a couple of no-hitters, but I always find a way to screw it up."

Peter Meredith of Elkhart, Ind., has had no problems in the festival and is 4-0 this week. He got the second festival perfect game in men's softball as the East defeated the North 10-0. Meredith struck out 11, giving him 39 in four games. He has not allowed a run in 23 innings.

The perfect game was the first since 1985, when Jimmy Moore defeated the South 1-0.

Lance Ringnald of Albuquerque won the men's all-around crown in gymnastics. Ringnald, who last year became the youngest member of the men's Olympic gymnastics team in 20 years, scored 9.85s on the parallel bars and high bar.

"Just being on teams, it was kind of like the Olympics," he said. "This is how I like to perform."

The East got a 47.65 score in the floor exercise from its six members to win the team gold.

The women's 3-meter springboard diving preliminaries were won by favorite Wendy Lucero of Aurora, Colo.

Olympian Bruce Bickford of Wellesley, Mass., and Judy Bogenschutz of Oldenburg, Ind.

Louise Ritter, the 1988 Olympic women's high jump winner, applied for permission to compete in track and field. But the eight head coaches at the festival voted 7-1 against Ritter. That came after a news release late Wednesday night said the addition of Ritter was "a tremendous boost" to the track and field competition.

"I think the coaches felt we weren't in a position to deviate from the normal selection process," the festival's track and field commissioner, Phil Henson, said. "There's always a danger that when you open a can of worms, how do you close it? This is not intended to be an all-comers meet."

Erika deLone of Lincoln, Mass., won two tennis gold medals. She teamed with Susan Somerville of Dearborn, Mich., for the women's doubles crown, then won the mixed doubles with Rick Witsken of Carmel, Ind.

Deirdre Herman of Lawrence, Kan., lost in both doubles matches but won the women's singles. The men's singles title went to Robbie Wendell of Sunnyvale, Calif. The men's doubles crown was won by Chuck Coleman of Lake Wylie, S.C., and Cary Lothringer of San Antonio.

Weightlifting gold went to Michael Jacques of Warner Robins, Ga. at 67.5 kilograms, Michael Listro of Montvale, N.J., at 75 kilos, and Jim Hewell of Royal Oak, Mich., at 82.5 kilos.

STILLWATER Okla. — James Johnson, a 1976 state wrestling champion from D.H. Conley, captured championship in Greco wrestling in the 220-pound division at the 1989 Olympic Sports Festival in Stillwater, Okla.

Johnson, representing the East squad, won a pair of best-of-three bouts to reach the finals where he defeated Steve Lawson of California. In the championship, each wrestler won a bout by disqualification then Johnson took the third and deciding bout by a 3-0 count.

In the quarterfinals Johnson bested Chris Tironi of New York 3-1 and 1-0. He defeated Phil Lanzatella of the U.S. Army team 10-7 and 5-3 in the semifinals.

By virtue of the title, Johnson lands a spot on the U.S. team that will compete in the world championships August 24-27 in Martini, Switzerland. The U.S. team will train at the University of Minnesota for two weeks then train one week at the French National Camp in Paris before departing for Switzerland.

Whiteville Tops Snow Hill, Leads Series

WHITEVILLE — Missed opportunities doomed Snow Hill Post 94 in its bid to forge ahead in the best-of-seven Eastern championship series at Whiteville Thursday night.

Snow Hill stranded 14 runners and never recovered from an early 4-2 deficit en route to an 8-5 loss. Whiteville now leads the series 2-1 and is home for game four tonight and game five Saturday.

Any other necessary games will be played at the Greene Central High School diamond.

Post 94 grabbed a 2-0 lead against Whiteville starter and winner Randy Best in the second inning on a single by Farmville Central product George Burnette, a wild pitch, a run-scoring single by Chris West, a single by Leslie Jackson and another wild pitch.

After loading the bases with no outs in the second, Whiteville picked up only one run but took the lead for keeps with three runs in the third.

A RBI single by Jackson after a single by Cedric Collins and an outfield error got Snow Hill within 4-3 in the fifth but Whiteville provided Best with some insurance with a run in the seventh and three in the eighth.

West, who was 3-for-5, led off the ninth with a solo homer. A double by Ed Stanley and a single by Prentice Uzzell capped the scoring.

Collins, Jackson and Stanley had two hits each for Snow Hill. Best, Grant Russell and Byron Ward had two hits each for Whiteville. Ward delivered a bases-loaded double in the eighth.

Todd Mewborn, Snow Hill's ace right-hander, was saddled with his first loss in nine decisions. He was relieved by Burnette after issuing a leadoff walk in the eighth.

Reggie Hill is expected to get the start for Snow Hill tonight.

Former Western Carolina Coach Charged

SYLVA (AP) — Former Western Carolina basketball coach Dave Possinger has been charged in Jackson County with communicating threats in an alleged incident involving his wife, Cyndi, according to court records.

A warrant on file in the Jackson County Clerk of Courts office lists the date of the offense as May 30. Possinger was scheduled to appear in Jackson County District Court July 17, but received a continuance until Aug. 14.

Records show that Possinger was released after posting a $500 unsecured bond and being ordered to stay away from and not communicate with Cyndi Possinger.

The warrant charges Possinger threatened physical injury to his wife.

Possinger, who coached Western Carolina this past season before resigning under pressure in March, earlier this month was named head coach of the Omaha, Neb., franchise in the Continental Basketball Association.

The Catamount basketball program remains under investigation by the NCAA for alleged violations that occurred during Possinger's tenure.

Possinger came to Western Carolina after building a successful NAIA program at St. Thomas Aquinas College in Sparkill, N.Y.

Auburn Preseason Choice in SEC

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Auburn was picked to edge out Louisiana State for the 1989 Southeastern Conference football title Thursday in a vote by members of the media.

The two teams tied for the 1988 crown.

Auburn, which placed five players on a preseason all-conference team, received 733 points and 46 first-place votes in balloting at the end of the three-day SEC preseason media event.

LSU had 711 points and 22 first-place votes.

Trailing the top two in order were Alabama 622 points, Georgia 459, Florida 429, Kentucky 423, Tennessee 402, Mississippi 199, Mississippi State 168 and Vanderbilt 144.

Alabama had seven votes to finish first, Georgia two and Kentucky one.

Auburn players named to the All-SEC team were offensive linemen Ed Fong and John Hudson, defensive tackle David Rocker and linebackers Quentin Riggins and Craig Ogletree.

Tommy Hodson of LSU was picked as the quarterback and Florida's Emmitt Smith and Georgia's Rodney Hampton as the running backs. Smith was the only unanimous selection on the team.

The receiving corps consisted of wide receivers Tony Moss of LSU and Thomas Woods of Tennessee and tight end Jesse Anderson of Mississippi State.

Rounding out the offense were linemen Mike Pfeifer of Kentucky, Eric Still of Tennessee and Curt Mull of Georgia and kicker David Browndyke of LSU.

Others on the defensive unit were tackle Oliver Barnett of Kentucky, nose guard Bill Goldberg of Georgia, linebackers Keith McCants of Alabama and Huey Richardson of Florida and backs Todd Sandroni of Mississippi, Lee Ozmint of Alabama, Ben Smith of Georgia and Richard Fain of Florida. Kent Elmore of Tennessee won the punting spot.

Coaching Controversy In Rutherfordton

RUTHERFORDTON (AP) — Ken Hines was named the new men's basketball coach at R-S Central this week as the Rutherford County school board overruled an earlier decision by the school's principal.

The move, a rare one by the board, leaves the coaching future of Bill Ellis — who had accepted the coaching job after a successful stint at McDowell High School — up in the air. Superintendent Buck Petty predicted the controversy over the head coaching position will lead to a change in the hiring of high-profile educators.

The reversal of R-S Central Principal Bob Keever's decision on the Hilltoppers' coaching position came after a six-hour meeting of school board members Tuesday night. Shortly after noon Wednesday, following a brief meeting between Petty and Keever, Hines was formally named head coach.

The controversy over the head coaching position began when Hines, a 11-year coaching veteran at Central, was passed over for the head coach position in favor of Ellis, who lives in Boiling Springs.

Ellis is a former assistant basketball coach at Gardner-Webb College and, last year, coached at McDowell High. He agreed to remain as a physical education teacher in Rutherford County schools.

Ellis, who is attending a coaches clinic in Greensboro, could not be reached for comment.

School board Chairman Bob England said the board's philosophy is that a current employee should have first priority in hiring if all applicants for an opening are equally qualified.

Thompson Holds Lead At Buick

GRAND BLANC, Mich. — Australian Wayne Grady had every right to think he'd used up a lifetime of bad luck last week in the British Open.

But there's just no end to the misery golf can dish out, both on and off the course, as Grady has learned in the days since his playoff loss to Mark Calcavecchia at Royal Troon.

Grady was tied with several golfers at 5-under-par 67, two strokes behind leader Leonard Thompson, heading into today's second round of the $1 million Buick Open. Mark O'Meara, Brad Fabel, Don Shirey Jr. and Richard Zokol were at 66.

The trip from Scotland to Michigan, which should take less than a day, took almost three. As a result, Grady didn't arrive at Warwick Hills, about 55 miles north of Detroit, until Wednesday afternoon, too late for a practice round.

When he showed up for the first round Thursday, he discovered the pro shop had sold out of yardage books. Grady, who finished second to Ken Green here in 1985, thought he had an old yardage book in his bag. Wrong again.

"We eyeballed it today," Grady said. "I was very lucky. I didn't hit the ball too well, but I putted the spots off of it."

"I've got to get my mind on golf and what's at hand."

After leading the British Open for almost two rounds, Grady finished two strokes behind Calcavecchia in the four-hole playoff. Greg Norman, also in the playoff, picked up on the final hole.

Leonard Thompson fired a 65 to lead Buick Open

Wednesday, said. "I still don't feel like I lost because I was never behind at any stage. I know I finished second, but I feel like I won it."

"I think I stood up well under the conditions and I feel very good about that."

Grady says the most important thing for him to do now is to put Troon out of his mind.

"We're playing for a million dollars here," Grady said. "That's worth concentrating on. I played well last week, but I've done a good job of keeping my mind off it. I think I've done a good job."

The key to Grady's first round in the Buick Open was a hot putter. He rolled in seven birdie putts — from 20, 20, 40, 25, 30, 25 and 40 feet.

Personal Fouls Says Washburn Played While Taking Cocaine

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — "Personal Fouls," the long-awaited book about North Carolina State's basketball program, alleges that Chris Washburn played under the influence of cocaine and that a "Sugar Daddy" provided team members with gifts and substances to mask drug abuse, according to The Charlotte Observer.

Author Peter Golenbock also quotes an unidentified player as saying Coach Jim Valvano knew Washburn was using cocaine, said the newspaper, which added that it obtained a copy of the book on Thursday.

Golenbock wrote of Washburn: "Wash would play games on coke," said a teammate. "The first half he'd play great, and then the coke would wear off, and in the second half he wouldn't do a thing."

Washburn, who left N.C. State

after his sophomore year, has been banned for life by the NBA for substance abuse during his professional career.

The book also says a "Sugar Daddy" supplied players with money, clothes, stereo equipment or substances to mask drugs in urine tests, according to the newspaper.

Valvano, N.C. State's basketball coach and athletic director, could not be reached for comment.

Cain Begins Quest For 2nd Straight Win

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEWPORT, R.I. — John Paul Cain, a rookie on the PGA Senior Tour who won his first tournament last week, knows about the struggles of breaking into the game. And he'd like to see it made a bit easier.

Fresh from winning the Greater Grand Rapids Open, Cain tees off today looking to make it two in a row in the Newport Cup Seniors Tournament.

"It's the most difficult, trying thing you can imagine," Cain said Thursday afternoon. "There are four spots for qualifiers. And with 20 to 40 players and four spots ... it's a 4½-hour test to see if you're going home or going to play the week. It's more difficult than playing."

He said players pay a $100 try-out fee for tournaments.

Cain said that since he has only been on the scene for nine months, the organization might have already addressed this situation.

"I'm a rookie. What I know about the inner workings about my organization is very limited," he said. "Everyone's done a marvelous job."

Cain said he's glad to have an opportunity to play at the historic Newport Country Club.

"I've never played in Newport before. It's a long way from Sweetwater, Texas," said Cain, who now resides in Houston.

Cain, 53, joined the senior circuit last year. The Texas Tech alumnus made a name for himself playing amateur golf in his home state, and is a member of the Texas Golf Hall of Fame.

Cain will be vying for a $41,250 winner's share against the likes of defending champion Walt Zembriski, who shot a 132 to take last year's rain-shortened tournament.

Miller Barber, the Senior Tour career money leader who won the first Newport Cup in 1987, will also be around. Barber has won two tournaments this year, the last one in February.

Tour newcomer Jim Dent, who became eligible for the tour in May, is another golfer to watch. He won the MONY Syracuse Senior Classic in June.

The three-day tournament will be without this year's leading money winner, Orville Moody, who pulled out at the last minute. This year's

Wallace, Blue Max At Odds

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — NASCAR driver Rusty Wallace has filed papers in a North Carolina Superior Court, asking that his contract with the Blue Max Racing team be declared void.

Court documents prepared by Wallace's attorneys say Blue Max breached the contract with repeated late payments of earnings due Wallace. They say Blue Max is now thwarting Wallace's efforts to change teams for 1990, even though "Blue Max has agreed privately and has admitted to Wallace and others that Wallace is under no obligation" to drive for his present team next season.

"I bear absolutely no ill will toward Raymond (Beadle) and our disagreement is strictly business-related," Wallace said in a statement issued through Don Miller, his business manager for 15 years.

Wallace, in Talladega, Ala., preparing for Sunday's Diehard 500, told The Charlotte Observer he "would have preferred that the court papers hadn't come to light until after the race."

Miller said he and Wallace had been asked by their attorneys not to comment beyond what was said in the statement.

Wallace signed a personal service agreement with Blue Max owner Raymond Beadle in December 1986. It covered the 1987 and 1988 seasons and gave Blue Max the option of renewing the contract for 1989 and 1990.

Beadle believes the contract is valid.

"I'm confident in our position and what my attorney (Bill Diehl of Charlotte) tells me," Beadle said.

"When I play poker, I like to think I know what I've got in my hand."

Pittsburgh completed its first three-game sweep at Shea Stadium since 1981, beating New York 10-8 Thursday.

SIDELINED

STATUS

Glenn Davis, who had not started for two days because of a bruised foot, was back in the lineup Thursday for Houston.

SCOUTING

SPEAKING

"I sent a bat boy over to ask Murphy to autograph a picture for me before the game. Now I don't want the darned thing." — San Francisco manager Roger Craig after Dale Murphy hit a pair of three-run homers during a 10-run sixth inning that led Atlanta over the Braves 10-1.

Reds Down Padres 6-1 To End 10-Game Skid

Braves' Murphy Homers Twice In One Inning

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Cincinnati Reds are finally in the black. But the team picked by many to win the National League West hardly has a Rosey future.

"It'll take a miracle to win the West," Manager Pete Rose said Thursday after the Reds ended their longest losing streak in 23 years. "I know that. ... You know that."

With what amounted to a concession speech out of the way after the Reds had beaten the San Diego Padres 6-1, Rose praised the effort of his players.

"You've got to give the guys around here credit," he said. "It's been awfully difficult the last week and a half. They're still playing hard."

The victory, only the 11th in 42 games as the Reds have plunged to fifth place in the NL West, did little to brighten the team's prospects. Cincinnati still has six players on the disabled list.

But Rose said he felt a burden lifted from his shoulders.

"It's rough to have to go home every night losing," he said. At Atlanta, Dale Murphy tied major-league records with two homers and six RBIs in an inning as the Braves routed the San Francisco Giants 10-1.

"Just getting up twice in one inning is unusual," Murphy said. "I don't remember doing that very often. As far as the homers, I'm thrilled but I don't know what else to say."

Tim Leary, 7-9, acquired last week from Los Angeles, allowed eight hits in eight innings for his first victory in two starts with Cincinnati. The only run he allowed came on a solo homer in the fifth inning by Luis Salazar.

"It was nice to get the six-run support," Leary said. "I don't have to worry about one guy or two guys getting on."

Rose was pleased with Leary's effort.

"I'm impressed with the two games he's pitched since he's been here," Rose said. "I know you can't go hog wild with two games. But he puts a lot into it. Obviously he knows how to pitch."

The Reds took a 1-0 lead in the second when rookie Rolando Roomes homered off Greg Harris, 3-6. Roomes also singled home a run as part of a three-run sixth.

Roomes hit his sixth homer after Rose told him to look for a curveball from Harris.

"He started the game off throwing six straight breaking balls," Rose said. "I told Rolando to go up there looking for a curve until you get two strikes. He threw it and got it up, and he hit it out of the park."

Leary helped himself with an RBI single in the second. He also drew a bases-loaded walk in the sixth from reliever Pat Clements.

Leary, a lifetime .278 hitter before this season, had just two hits and no RBIs entering the game.

Braves 10, Giants 1
Murphy's home runs equalled a record shared by 13 other players. The last to do it was Andre Dawson of the Montreal Expos on Sept. 24, 1985.

The six RBIs matched a record shared by nine other players, with Dawson's 1985 game the last time it was accomplished.

Murphy, who also hit a three-run homer in a 5-4 victory Wednesday night, has hit five homers and driven in 14 runs in his last nine games. He has 11 home runs and 54 RBIs for the season.

It was the 29th multiple-homer game in Murphy's 12 major league seasons. He is the second Brave, and the first in over a century, to hit two homers in one inning. The other was Robert Lowe of the Boston Braves in 1884.

With the Braves trailing 1-0 against Atlee Hammaker, 6-6, Jeff Blauser led off the sixth with an infield hit. Lonnie Smith walked and Giants manager Roger Craig brought in Jeff Brantley to pitch to Murphy with a 2-1 count. Murphy hit the next pitch over the left field wall.

Murphy's second homer of the inning was a three-run shot off Rich Gossage.

Tom Glavine, 9-6, allowed six hits through eight innings, struck out six and walked two.

Dodgers 7, Astros 5
Eddie Murray's pinch-hit, three-run homer with one out in the ninth marked only the second failure by Houston relief ace Dave Smith in 23 save opportunities.

Murray, batting for Dave Anderson, hit a 2-0 pitch over the right-field fence.

Mickey Hatcher and Jeff Hamilton singled off Larry Andersen, 2-3, to start the inning. After reliever Juan Agosto struck out pinch-hitter Mike Scioscia, Murray hit his 10th homer.

Mike Morgan, 7-11, pitched a scoreless eighth and Jay Howell worked the ninth for his 20th save in 22 tries.

The Astros led 5-1 after six innings, but the Dodgers scored twice in the seventh on singles by Mike Marshall, who had three hits, and Hatcher, a sacrifice fly by Hamilton and an RBI groundout by Rick Dempsey.

The streak of scoreless innings of Houston starter Jim Deshaies ended at 19 1-3 when the Dodgers scored a run in the first.

Billy Hatcher had two hits, scored two runs, drove in two and stole two bases for the Astros.

Pirates 10, Mets 8

Jay Bell, a .128 hitter, blooped a three-run, pinch-hit triple to cap a five-run seventh inning as Pittsburgh swept a three-game series in New York for the first time since 1981.

Bell's triple came off relief ace Randy Myers as the Pirates won their fifth straight game.

The Pirates took a 5-0 lead in the first off Sid Fernandez on Barry Bonds' two-run single and R.J. Reynolds' three-run homer. Reynolds also walked with the bases loaded in the decisive seventh.

The Mets got back in the game in the third with four runs to chase starter Jeff Robinson and took the lead at 6-5 against Neal Heaton in the fifth on Kevin Elster's two-run, broken-bat double.

With New York leading 8-5 in the seventh, a busted rundown play and two walks hurt the Mets. Jose Lind, who had singled and stolen second, avoided a tag by second baseman Gregg Jefferies after Bobby Bonilla hit a hard grounder.

After Myers walked pinch-hitter Glenn Wilson to make it 8-7, Bell hit his third triple in 389 career at-bats.

Bob Kipper, 3-3, got the victory despite giving up the last two Mets runs and Bill Landrum pitched two innings for his 15th save. Don Aase, 1-3, was the loser.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

The Baltimore Orioles are doing it again. They're getting close to another record for futility.

Baltimore lost its eighth straight game Thursday night, 10-6 to Minnesota. If the Orioles fall tonight in Kansas City, they will tie the American League record for consecutive losses by a first-place team.

"It's growing pains right now," Manager Frank Robinson said. "It's a little of everything. It's not just one thing."

The Orioles, who have relied on rookies more than any team in the majors, can match the mark of nine consecutive losses by the 1953 New York Yankees and the 1970 Twins. The major league record for losses by a first-place team is 10 by Pittsburgh in 1932.

Baltimore's lead in the AL East slipped to four games — its smallest since June 17 — over Toronto and Cleveland. The Yankees are sixth, just 6½ games behind.

"We've been unfortunate to lose eight in a row, but nobody has made any big gains on us. But we can't be concerned with what everybody is doing behind us," shortstop Cal Ripken said.

The Orioles have lost the first seven games of 14-game road trip. They were swept in four tries at Oakland and lost all three at the Metrodome.

Angels 8, White Sox 5
In California, Chili Davis and Jack Howell hit three-run homers in support of Jim Abbott and the Angels beat Chicago for their eighth victory in nine games.

The White Sox outthit California 13-5, but still lost for just the second time in 12 games.

Red Sox 7, Royals 2

In Boston, Kevin Romine homered and doubled as the Red Sox ended Tom Gordon's seven-game winning streak. Kansas City lost for the fourth time in five games.

Romine, who has been back-and-forth between the Red Sox and Triple-A Pawtucket five times in five years, hit his second major-league homer.

Gordon, 11-4, allowed five runs on eight hits and four walks in 5 1-3 innings. He lost for the first time since May 28 when he was a reliever.

John Dopson, 9-5, got his first victory since June 29 despite giving up three hits and seven walks in five-plus innings.

Brewers 11, Tigers 1
Rob Deer hit his fourth career grand slam, highlighting a six-run sixth inning that led Milwaukee over Detroit.

The Tigers lost for the seventh time on an eight-game road trip.

King, Lopez Set To Battle Again

GREENS are slow and that could be a problem for Betsy. Lopez said players with good putting strokes sometimes take longer to adjust to slower greens. King is one of those players with a good putting stroke, she said.

Peete Impressive In Camp

For a pretty low draft choice, Rodney Peete right now rates pretty high in the Detroit Lions' quarterback picture. "He has all the tools to be a pro quarterback," Lions coach Wayne Fontes said Thursday.

Bombing Begins

At USC, Peete led the Trojans to Pac-10 titles and Rose Bowl berths as a junior and senior. In his final season, he was Pac-10 offensive player of the year when he completed 61.5 percent of his passes for 2,654 yards and 18 touchdowns.

Estonian Strikers Pledged Probe, Go Back To Work

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TALLINN, U.S.S.R. — Ethnic Russians in the Soviet republic of Estonia returned to work today after officials promised to probe complaints that the Estonian majority seeks to deny them voting rights, Estonian news reports said.

But other reports said Russians were on strike today. Strike leaders at 30 factories and businesses in the Estonian capital met late Thursday with Estonian President Arnold Ryutel, who agreed to form a commission to investigate the complaints, said Hary Tiido, a correspondent for Estonian Radio.

But reports conflicted about the extent of the walkout. Mark R. Shlenduikhov, a strike committee spokesman, said in an interview, "The strike isn't over. It has started again."

Strike committee members were meeting today with the newly formed commission to discuss their grievances.

The workers went on strike to protest what they claim are discriminatory laws recently passed to preserve the Estonian language and limit voting rights of immigrants. Russian speakers make up a third of the Baltic republic's 1.6 million population.

The laws make Estonian the official language of the republic and require two years' residency to vote and at least five years residency to run for office.

The resolution of the week-old strike involving about 1,050 workers came as the national legislature in Moscow handed the Baltic republics of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania their biggest victory yet in a struggle for political and economic autonomy.

The Supreme Soviet on Thursday approved the first reading of two resolutions that would give the republics economic independence by Jan. 1 and free them to trade with other Soviet republics.

The Baltic republics have complained for years that Moscow ministries exploited the once-independent republics, taking away their natural resources and giving little back.

Commentator Sergei Medvedev said on state television after the vote that the decision was unprecedented. "There hasn't been anything like it in our whole history. It will serve to strengthen the politics and economy of both the republics and the entire union," he said.

The legislature debated two days before approving the two resolutions by what the Tass news agency said was an overwhelming majority of the 412 deputies present. It called on the Cabinet to draw up draft laws for ratification by the Supreme Soviet by Oct. 1.

The first resolution calls for Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia to convert to a profit and loss cost accounting system, which would allow them to trade independently with the other 12 Soviet republics.

The second approved a draft law on economic independence. Lithuania and Estonia have already declared themselves sovereign.

Vice President Anatoly I. Lukyanov made it clear the resolutions apply to all three republics, although Latvia's Supreme Soviet only approved economic independence plans Thursday and had no time to give its proposals to Moscow.

Critics of the resolutions said it was unfair to grant the Baltics economic freedom before such rights were offered to all the republics.

Under the legislation, Baltic trade relations between Moscow and other Soviet republics will be based on contracts rather than the present "command system" whereby ministers based in Moscow make economic decisions, said Tarmu Tammer, an editor at the Estonian newspaper Kodumaa.

"All of the economy of Estonia will be directly controlled by Estonian authorities," he said. Republican authorities, instead of officials in Moscow, will decide production matters and control how profits are spent.

Estonia, with Western-style shops and an atmosphere more like nearby Finland than the Soviet Union, has been a proving ground for many of President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's economic and political reforms.

The Soviet Union took over the Baltics in 1940 under a secret protocol of a Soviet pact with Nazi Germany signed the year before.

Jaruzelski Challenges Party To Decide Its Future Course

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WARSAW, Poland — President Wojciech Jaruzelski challenged his fellow Communists today to decide what their party stands for in a Poland that has thrown its allegiance to the Solidarity-led opposition.

Jaruzelski, the party chief, opened a crucial session of the Central Committee that is expected to result in a new leader for the first time in eight years and perhaps lead to fundamental changes in the party itself.

The scheduled two-day meeting comes a month after the opposition movement captured 260 out of 261 seats it contested in the parliamentary elections.

Jaruzelski, who opened the meeting by thanking the party for helping to elect him president July 19, was expected to resign during the plenum from the party leadership in order to devote himself to the new office.

He told the meeting that it would be "one of the most important" plenums since the last party congress in 1986, the state's PAP news service reported.

Jaruzelski challenged the plenum to decide: "What as a party do we stand for? What should we defend against? What do we fight for? And what tasks should we begin in pursuit of social support?"

The party also heard a report assessing the election results by Politburo member Janusz Reykowski and a report on the problems and future of the party by Politburo member Marian Orzechowski, according to state radio.

Reykowski, PAP reported, expressed hope that the elections will have a "curative effect on the party" and spur it to change its ways of functioning "as soon as possible."

"Most of society has had enough of the party as it has been. Secondly, a significant part of the party grass roots has had enough of the style and ways of functioning of the party leadership," Orzechowski said, according to PAP.

Going into today's meeting, some party members said the 230-member Central Committee may call for a party congress, the first in three years, to consider dissolving the 2 million-member party and forming new groupings on the left.

The party also was expected to be consulted on Jaruzelski's choice to succeed Prime Minister Mieczyslaw F. Rakowski, who has submitted his resignation as premier but is believed interested in succeeding Jaruzelski as first secretary.

Among the candidates mentioned for prime minister are Politburo member Wladyslaw Baka and Deputy Prime Minister Ireneusz Sekula, an economics expert.

On Thursday, one unidentified regional official quoted Thursday by state radio said the party congress, considered for later this year, "should be the last congress in the history of the (party). I think that new parties should be created where everyone would be able to find a place for himself."

After the party's June thrashing in the parliamentary elections — the freest in 40 years — a Central Committee official told reporters: "This Polish party cannot win elections. This Communist Party will not win elections." The official, speaking on condition of anonymity, suggested that radical reforms were necessary.

Splitting the party into a leftist or social democratic party and a more orthodox Communist Party appeared to be favored by reformists in the party close to Jaruzelski. But Rakowski has opposed such division.

Rakowski argues that a united Communist Party should protect living standards and win support by appealing to economic issues.

"The absolutely prime task," Politburo member Alfred Miodowicz told the party daily earlier this week, is securing "the material interests of millions of working people in cities and villages."

Miodowicz is head of the official trade union movement OPZZ, which has been struggling to outdo Solidarity in demand for wage increases. Workers are faced with 160 percent annual inflation.

Jaruzelski, 66, was appointed party first secretary in October 1981 and ordered martial law two months later to crush Solidarity. But this year, in an effort to pull the nation out of its economic crisis, he urged party leaders to legalize the trade union and ushered in Poland's first free elections in more than four decades.

He has promised Solidarity lawmakers that he would leave his party position if elected president, but he did not specify when.

On July 19, he was elected president by the National Assembly with the minimum majority, thanks to passive support from a handful of Solidarity legislators.

Interior Minister Czeslaw Kiszczak or party ideologist Marian Orzechowski also are considered in the running for party leader, assuming Jaruzelski does resign at the Central Committee meeting.

Jaruzelski had been urging that the next government be a "grand coalition" that would include Solidarity.

But Solidarity leader Lech Walesa rejected the offer Tuesday and said if the opposition would not be allowed to form the whole government, then it would stay entirely in the opposition.

Refund Checks

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Authorities say Michael McQueen tried to use dead Charlotteans to trick the Internal Revenue Service into sending him $7,134.11 in refund checks.

He didn't get any money. U.S. District Judge Robert Potter on Thursday sentenced the 36-year-old Charlotte restaurant cook to 10 months in prison. It was the maximum sentence under the federal sentencing guidelines.

McQueen was indicted in June and accused of trying to defraud the United States by filing false federal income tax returns for nine Charlotteans who died in late 1988.

He collected information from obituaries, the indictment alleges, and then wrote letters to 38 employers, asking them to send him W2 wage and tax statements for their dead workers.

Steger Expedition Starts Antarctic Trek 5 Days Early

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ST. PAUL, Minn. — Minnesota explorer Will Steger and his International Trans-Antarctica Expedition team have embarked five days ahead of schedule on their 4,000-mile, seven-month traverse of the continent.

Steger and his five foreign companions took advantage of a rare period of clear weather to leave Thursday from the northwestern tip of the Antarctic Peninsula.

Steger's $11 million quest to cross Antarctica is an attempt to alert the world to environmental dangers and to Antarctica's tradition of peace. It also could establish Steger as the contemporary expert on cold-weather survival, putting him on a par with turn-of-the-century heroes such as Robert Peary, Roald Amundsen and Robert Falcon Scott.

But in the process, Steger's band has been forced to sacrifice much of the solitude they came this far to seek.

"I'm still too busy to think about what all this means," the 44-year-old Steger said moments before his anxious dogs broke free of the sled brake and raced off. "I've got a lot riding on this, and it'll be good to be out on the ice so I can sort it all through my mind."

The trans-Antarctica team spent Wednesday night camped on the Larsen Ice Shelf, beneath a ridge of mountain peaks known as Seal Nunataks, on the northwestern tip of the Antarctic Peninsula. Temperatures fell to about 8 below zero, but the sky remained unseasonably clear and still.

TV and newspaper reporters flew to the peninsula from King George Island Thursday morning, capitalizing on a rare and expansive window of clear weather to chronicle the official launch. The ice shelf was slick with hard-packed snow and patches of blue ice. Daytime temperatures reached 10 above zero, with the sun blindingly bright.

Once on the ice, the mushers seemed little concerned with the deeper meaning of their journey and were focused on more immediate matters: weather, packing, teaming sled dogs to avoid fights.

"I can't think about seven months," said Keizo Funatsu of Japan. "I only think about one day and one day and one day."

The St. Paul-based expedition will be accompanied by film crews for the next week, and again in October in the Ellsworth Mountains where the peninsula widens into the endless interior ice cap, and at the South Pole about Thanksgiving. The mushers hope to reach the Soviet scientific base of Mirny, on the continent's eastern shore, by March 1.

Philippines Hail Arrest Of Communist Leader

By Robert H. Reid
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MANILA, Philippines — The arrest of a leading Communist figure has been hailed as a major blow to the rebels. But the insurgency that has persisted for two decades has weathered the capture of other key figures.

Satur Ocampo, 50, a member of the Communist Party's central committee, was arrested Thursday in a Manila suburb with his common-law wife, Carolina Malay.

"His arrest will hit the party quite hard because of his position in the movement," said military Chief of Staff Gen. Renato de Villa.

Maj. Gen. Ramon Montano, chief of the Philippine Constabulary, said the arrest was "the beginning of the end" of Southeast Asia's last major communist insurgency.

But in an editorial Friday, the independent Philippine Daily Globe said, "We have had days like this before. ...Despite all the hoopla, the insurgency simply moved on, renewing itself and becoming more resilient than ever."

A leftist human rights group also expressed concern that Ocampo's arrest diminished chances for resuming peace talks to end the 20-year insurgency.

"Most likely, the leadership will go deeper underground and might answer the military operations with counter-military actions," the Ecumenical Movement for Justice and Peace said. "Peace will be as elusive as ever."

Ocampo's arrest follows claims by the military that the rebels are in disarray because of leadership differences. The rebels gained strength during the authoritarian rule of ousted President Ferdinand Marcos but have not found a formula for promoting their cause under the more popular administration of President Corason Aquino.

About 10 members of the Central Committee have been arrested since 1987 although one of them, Romulo Kintanar, escaped. The military claims the party's armed wing, the New People's Army, has declined by about 8 percent to about 23,500 fighters, only half of whom are fully armed.

During a press conference shortly after his arrest, Ocampo insisted that his capture will make little difference.

"The organization is a big one," he said. "There is a long, wide bench with responsible comrades who would take over."

Such bravado was to be expected. But the rebellion has persisted despite past arrests of its leaders and despite improvements in the economy under Mrs. Aquino.

The party grew after its founder, Jose Maria Sison, and the New Peoples Army commander, Bernabe Buscayno, were arrested in 1976. They were released in 1986 after Mrs. Aquino took power.

Those arrested since Mrs. Aquino took office include Secretary-General Rafael Baylosis and Chairman Rodolfo Salas.

"We should not be lulled into complacency," said Senate President Jovito Salonga. "They seem to have replacements for captured leaders."

The party's base remains the impoverished rural areas, where 70 percent of the 58 million Filipinos live. The government admits that the poorest third of all Filipinos still control only 9 percent of the national income, virtually no change from the final years of Marcos' administration.

But Ocampo's capture was a propaganda coup because he was one of the few rebels widely known by the public. But it is unclear how much influence Ocampo wielded on rebel policy or in the New Peoples Army.

During a 60-day cease-fire, declared in December 1986, Ocampo and Malay appeared on numerous radio and television shows, urging the government to accept their demands to end the fighting.

After the cease-fire ended, Ocampo gave clandestine interviews and issued statements in the name of the party. He was believed in charge of recruiting among youth, teachers, clerics, farmers and other groups.

At the time of their arrest, Ocampo and Malay were living a block from the Makati police station.

The anonymous nature of the rebel leadership has been one of its strengths. Philippine politics revolves around personalities. But the Communists have no charismatic figures whose arrests would shatter the movement.

National Security Adviser Rafael Ileta admits the military is not even sure who runs the party. The military has variously named Sison, who lives in the Netherlands, Kintanar, and Benito Tiamzon as party chairman.

Unlike Communist rebellions in Thailand, Vietnam and elsewhere in the region, Filipino rebels are not openly supported by any foreign government. China and the Soviet Union have both assured Mrs. Aquino of their support for her.

But the party's ability to survive without foreign support also shows the resilience of the communist movement, which dates back to 1930.

Israeli Commandos Kidnap Shiite Leader Tied To Higgins Abduction

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Israeli commandos today kidnapped a Shiite Moslem leader who is considered Iran's closest ally and who sources say was linked to the abduction of U.S. Lt. Col. William R. Higgins.

Police said Sheik Abdul Karim Obeid, 33, was kidnapped from his second-floor apartment in the village of Jibchit, 21 miles north of the border with Israel. A curious neighbor was killed by the commandos, police said.

Obeid is reputed to be the spiritual guide of Hezbollah, or Party of God, in south Lebanon.

However, he has repeatedly denied links with the pro-Iranian group, which is affiliated with factions holding most of the 17 foreign hostages in Lebanon. Nine Americans are among the hostages.

A security source in Lebanon said there was speculation Obeid may have been kidnapped "as a possible swap" for Higgins, who was a U.N. observer when he was abducted, or for three missing Israeli soldiers.

Two of the missing soldiers, Yossi Fink and Rahamin Alsheikh, were captured Feb. 17, 1986, when guerrillas ambushed their patrol in Israel's "security zone" in southern Lebanon. The third, Israeli navigator Ron Arad, was captured by Shiite militiamen on Oct. 16, 1986, when his plane was shot down over southern Lebanon. The pilot was rescued.

Other security sources in south Lebanon, also speaking on condition of anonymity, said Higgins was briefly held at Obeid's apartment after his abduction in south Lebanon on Feb. 17, 1988.

One of these sources said the late leader of the mainstream Shiite Moslem Amal militia in south Lebanon, Daoud Daoud, sent "a group of his followers to obtain Higgins' release from Obeid's apartment, but the force was encircled by Hezbollah gunmen, stripped of its weapons and sent back."

The source said Higgins' kidnapers, the Organization of the Oppressed on Earth, later took the American marine out of Jibchit to another village in south Lebanon and then to the slums of south Beirut.

Daoud and Mahmoud Faqih, another Amal leader, were assassinated by unknown gunmen in south Beirut's seaside suburb of Ouzai on Sept. 22, 1988. Amal blamed the killings on Hezbollah.

The two had led a four-day crackdown by Amal on Hezbollah in south Lebanon in April 1988.

On Feb. 21, 1988, Obeid was quoted by Beirut radio stations as saying he believed the kidnapers had managed to smuggle Higgins out of the south. Obeid, speaking to worshippers at a mosque in Jibchit, also claimed that Higgins was in charge of the U.N. peacekeeping forces' "spying operations."

Higgins, 44, of Danville, Ky., a decorated Vietnam veteran, headed an observer group attached to the U.N. peacekeeping force in Lebanon at the time of his abduction. He was kidnapped near Daoud's base in the southern port of Tyre.

Obeid negotiated the safe withdrawal of Hezbollah gunmen and allied Iranian Revolutionary Guards from Jibchit, when the village of 18,000 residents was besieged by Amal after the kidnapers moved Higgins to another hideout.

Higgins' kidnapping was believed to be a major factor behind Amal's crackdown in the south, which left 62 dead and 150 wounded.

A police spokesman said an Israeli helicopter landed a commando force about two miles west of Jibchit at 1 a.m.

He said a force of about 12 commandos "walked into Jibchit, encircled Sheik Obeid's three-story building on the eastern edge of the village."

The spokesman, who cannot be named in line with police rules, said "someone with the Israelis spoke Arabic. They knocked on the door and someone from the Sheik's family opened."

"The Israelis quickly moved in pointing silencer-equipped pistols at the sheik, his cousin Ahmed Obeid and Majid Fahs, a friend who was staying with them," the spokesman said.

"Sheikh Obeid's 25-year-old wife, Mona, was locked in one of the rooms, her hands tied up and mouth plastered," the spokesman added.

As the Israeli force was leaving with the three men, a neighbor, Hussein Abu Zeid, "apparently heard some noise and opened his door to find out what was happening. They shot him in the head and he died instantly," the spokesman added.

He said the Israelis also "locked the room where Sheik Obeid's three sons and two daughters were sleeping. They didn't hurt the children."

Residents of Jibchit, reached by telephone, said Amal called a general mobilization of its militia in the area in an effort to confront the Israeli force and rescue Obeid, but that it was too late.

Sheik Obeid has been the imam, or local religious leader, of Jibchit since 1984. He succeeded Sheik Raged Hard who was shot dead near the village by unknown gunmen.

Beirut Subjected To 'Insane Terror'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Syrian and Christian gunners pounded Beirut today with an estimated 50,000 shells and rockets, killing at least 13 people in what police called "Beirut's night of terror and horror."

A police spokesman said 65 people were wounded in the eight-hour bombardment, which he called the heaviest shelling in the four-month standoff between Gen. Michel Aoun's mainly Christian troops and the Syrian army.

"We're being killed in our beds. ... Beirut is being massacred and no one in the Arab world or the outside world seems to care," said an announcer on the Christian Voice of Lebanon radio, his voice choking with emotion.

The Moslem-controlled Voice of the Nation described the ear-splitting artillery duel as "a night of insane terror."

One Grad rocket crashed into the top floor of the seven-story building that houses the offices of The Associated Press and the television networks CBS and NBC.

"The explosion blew me out of my bed. I found myself flat on the floor with glass shards showering me," said Associated Press correspondent Farouk Nassar, who lives on the sixth floor of the building.

The blast shattered windows and sent pieces of furniture tumbling into the street.

Screams for help echoed from nearby apartment buildings.

"His leg is chopped off!" one woman shouted as she guided civil defense rescuers to the second floor of another building struck by a rocket.

The victim was Jawhar al-Jawhari, a Druse janitor, who was rushed to the American University Hospital. Dozens of stretchers with screaming wounded crowded the hospital's emergency ward.

The U.N. headquarters in west Beirut and the Soviet Embassy compound also took direct hits. But no casualties were reported among their staff, police said.

Shells tore wide holes in scores of high-rise apartment buildings and hundreds of stores and boutiques had their iron shutters blown off.

The International Committee of the Red Cross in Beirut appealed "for an immediate cessation of (the) indiscriminate bombardment."

The casualties raised the overall toll to 494 killed dead and 2,014 injured since the latest round in the 14-year civil war fighting erupted March 8.

The police spokesman, speaking on condition of anonymity, said an estimated 50,000 shells and rockets were fired.

Communists Break Up Trade Firm In Anti-Corruption Push

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — Communist Party leaders today ordered the breakup of a major trade company linked to senior leader Deng Xiaoping's son and announced audits of other leading companies in its most serious attack yet on corruption.

A notice handed down by the party Politburo, a top decision-making body, also ordered an end to the banquets, bribes, foreign jaunts and luxury cars enjoyed by many high officials, and put limits on what their children can do for a living.

The notice, read on the national television news, said the Politburo acted "to inspire party spirit and the people's aspirations by starting first from the leaders in the party Central Committee and the State Council."

The State Council is China's cabinet. It called for a spirit of "hard work and plain living," one of the leadership's favorite slogans since it crushed student pro-democracy protests in June and purged party General Secretary Zhao Ziyang.

The protests showed public confidence in the leadership to be at an all-time low, as hundreds of thousands of people rallied to the students' slogan, "Oppose corruption."

Among other things, the students lampooned children of high officials who enjoy high posts in government and business, including Deng's son, Deng Pufang, whom they nicknamed "Prince Pufang."

The Politburo, ordering that corruption be investigated "no matter who" is involved, said a company linked to Deng Pufang will be disbanded.

The Kang Hua Development Corp. was formed under the auspices of the younger Deng's China Welfare Fund for the Handicapped, and it allegedly used the connection to evade taxes while developing into one of China's largest foreign trade companies.

The Politburo also ordered an audit of the China International Trade and Investment Corp., the country's leading company for attracting foreign investment.

It gave the spouses and children of "high officials" until Sept. 1 to resign from jobs in goods distribution companies but did not list any names. The Politburo notice also:

—Ordered a shake-up of state companies dealing in foreign trade, material supplies and finance.

—Banned party Politburo, Secretariat and State Council personnel from driving imported cars and exchanging banquets and gifts paid for with state funds.

—Said all trips abroad by "leading officials" should be for work only, not "inspection," an apparent euphemism for tourism.

—Ordered an end to the practice of providing special supplies of scarce food items to high officials and said they would have to buy all their food at the market price instead of at discount.

As early as the 1960s, the public image of China's Communist leaders had changed from that of spartan revolutionaries to a pampered elite.

Rafsanjani Is Forming Cabinet

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TEHRAN, Iran — Hashemi Rafsanjani, all but assured of victory in today's presidential election, has begun forming a Cabinet that includes economists and technocrats to help guide this troubled nation into the post-Khomeini era, sources say.

The official Islamic Republic News Agency said millions of Iranians were expected to vote at 26,000 polling stations. Polls are to close at 5 p.m. (9:30 a.m. EDT), but the Iranian news agency said voters may be able to cast ballots until midnight.

There was no word when results will be announced. The government did not say how many eligible voters there are, but the number was estimated at 25 million — about half the population — during parliamentary elections last year.

Iranian leaders and the state media for days have been exhorting Iranians to turn out to demonstrate unity following the death of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini on June 3.

"Each vote cast is a bullet fired at the heart of Iran's enemies," the radical Jomhuri Islami daily said this week.

Iran's three grand ayatollahs, or senior religious leaders, joined the chorus Thursday. Ayatollah Mohammad Ali Araki said voting is "a religious duty for every Iranian."

But one disgruntled merchant, who declined to be identified, said: "Why bother to vote? Rafsanjani has been part of the government for years and he's responsible with the other clerics for mess the economy's in."

Iranians who spoke to foreign reporters said that improving the economy to curb runaway inflation and high prices was their main priority.

Diplomatic sources, speaking on the condition they not be identified, say Rafsanjani already has selected a Cabinet that would include economists and technocrats, some of them dumped from earlier administrations because of ideological and policy differences.

Newspapers report unanimously that Rafsanjani, 55, is certain to become Iran's fourth president. Their polls predict he will win 86 percent of the vote.

The only challenger is former Agriculture Minister Abass Sheibani, 58, who is considered little more than a token candidate so that Rafsanjani is not elected unopposed.

The elections were moved up from Aug. 18 to accelerate the transition of power following the death of Khomeini, who founded the fundamentalist republic in 1979 that toppled the regime of the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

Also on the ballot is a national referendum on proposed constitutional amendments that would give the presidency new powers. Khomeini urged the changes to eliminate competing power centers that have paralyzed the government.

Incumbent President Ali Khamenei's second four-year term expires Oct. 5 and he cannot run for a third term.

Opening lead: King of ♣
 When this hand was dealt in a pair tournament, most declarers failed in their heart game. But some found a simple way to get home by disregarding the obvious.
 Note North's raise to two hearts over the takeout double. The modern practice when raising is to treat the double as if didn't exist, and to make a normal raise. With a good deal of the enemy strength marked by the bidding as being in clubs, South's jump to game was a reasonable shot.
 West made the normal lead of the top of her honor sequence, taken by declarer's ace. Most South's drew trumps and then tried the diamond finesse, losing to the queen. As long as East did not get active and return a spade, declarer later had to broach that suit and could not avoid losing three spade tricks—down one.
 We introduced this theme in the column a few days ago, in a different guise. The secret here is to ignore the finesse completely. Declarer must give up a possible trick in diamonds in favor of a sure trick in spades or a ruff-and-sluff.

By CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

Suppose that, after winning the ace of clubs, declarer were to cash a high trump, overtake the nine of trumps in dummy with the ten and then ruff a club high. After returning to dummy with a high diamond to ruff the last club high, declarer continues by cashing the remaining high diamond to see if the queen drops. When the lady does not appear, declarer simply exits with a diamond, and does not care which defender wins the trick.
 Whoever is on lead has a choice of losing spades. If the defenders breaks spades, they can take only two tricks in the suit. If they play any other suit, declarer gets to discard a spade from one hand while ruffing in the other. Either way, South loses only two spades and a diamond.

Redford Upstages President

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — After spending years in Ronald Reagan's shadow, George Bush is getting upstaged at the White House by another actor.

Robert Redford dropped by Thursday to discuss environmental issues, causing staffers accustomed to seeing high-powered people to crane their necks for a glimpse of the blond superstar.

Redford came to the Capitol on Wednesday to confer with House Speaker Thomas Foley about his efforts to obtain U.S. permission to go to Cuba to work on a movie. Rep. Robert Dornan, R-Calif., a one-time neighbor of the actor in Santa Monica, agreed to help.

Dornan, Redford in tow, burst into the room where Vice President Dan Quayle was meeting with some members of Congress. Some say Quayle resembles Redford.

When Quayle asked what Redford was doing there, the actor quipped, "I'm looking for a double."

President Bush saw Dornan at a dinner Wednesday night and asked why he hadn't brought the actor to the White House.

As a result, Bush and Redford spent 40 minutes together Thursday, discussing environmental matters, Dornan said. The actor has devoted much effort to a Utah institute he founded that works toward mediation of environmental disputes.

"Within a few minutes they were like old friends," although no specific projects were agreed to, Dornan said.

Ella Chosen For Induction

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — Singer Ella Fitzgerald is among the six musicians chosen as the first inductees to the new Jazz-Blues-Gospel Hall of Fame.

"Chicago has been the seat of gospel music for a long time," said Charles Colbert, the hall's president. "Blues — Muddy Waters, Willie Dixon and many others are from here."

"This is naturally the place where it should be," Colbert said at a ceremony Thursday honoring the hall.

Although similar memorials to each of the three kinds of music exist, the new Hall of Fame is the first single institution honoring all of them, he said.

The initial inductees for jazz are Ms. Fitzgerald and the late trumpeter Louis Armstrong; Waters, the late singer and slide guitarist, and bass player Dixon for blues; and composer Thomas Dorsey, called "the father of gospel music," and the late singer Mahalia Jackson for gospel.

They will be formally inducted at a ceremony later this year.

Doobie Brothers Doing Fine, But They Want To Do Better

By Milton Kent
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

The crowds scream, the people buy the records and yet, John Hartman thinks there is something missing. Hartman, drummer and vocalist for the re-formed Doobie Brothers says that although the Doobies have won both Grammys and fan acceptance over their 17-year history, they have not become rock legends and he can't figure out why.

"For all the talk of how big we are, the 'monster group,' we just don't see it. We don't see it. I don't think we ever have seen that response ... from the audience in general," said Hartman in a recent telephone interview.

"We play big shows and the band has been monster," he said. "But I never thought that we really got up to the same height as the Eagles, the Rolling Stones or Led Zeppelin."

"It could be the changes in personnel. The way people approach this band (is) as a good-time band or a party band. 'When all else fails, you have the Doobies because they're consistently good-time.' If you want moody music, go to Zeppelin, for example. If you want a statement, go to the Stones."

When he speaks of personnel changes and good times, Hartman may be on to something. The Doobies, after all, are named for a marijuana cigarette and even included a picture of a joint on the sleeve accompanying the "Minute by Minute" album.

As for personnel changes, the Doobies, who aren't brothers, have gone through almost as many personality switches as Sybil, starting off their career as a San Francisco-based guitar-driven band with slight rhythm and blues leanings, under the leadership of guitarist-vocalist Tom Johnston.

During Johnston's tenure, the Doobies thrived with such '70s album-oriented rock radio staples as "Listen to the Music," "China Grove," "Long Train Runnin'" and "Black Water."

But in 1976, Johnston left the group for a solo career and former Steely Dan session player Michael McDonald came to the group and eventually became lead singer.

McDonald, who has both a distinctive singing style and keyboard flair, brought a brooding, self-analytical tone to his work and the band followed his lead. The formula paid off to the tune of hit singles such as "Takin' It to the Streets," the Grammy-winning "What a Fool Believes," "Minute by Minute," and "Real Love."

But things did not remain quite so harmonious, as band members battled about the group's direction. Finally, in 1982, after a farewell tour and concert album, the Doobies parted company.

McDonald went on to a respectable, but not earth-shattering solo career. Singer-guitarist Patrick Simmons, who was the only remaining original Doobie, struck out on his own as well, but did not come close to matching McDonald's success.

For this tour, Hartman said, there will be little mention of McDonald.

"The songs that we're doing now, for the most part, weren't Michael's songs," Hartman said. "The songs that were really written by McDonald and sung by McDonald we're not doing because we felt that it wouldn't be fair to Michael to try to simulate a vocal, his vocal specifically."

Despite some sporadic activity during their breakup, Hartman said that the itch to get back out on the road on a full-scale tour together still burned among them.

And so, late last year, five of the Doobies who had teamed up back in 1972 — namely Johnston, Simmons, Hartman, Tiran Porter, Michael Hossack and Bobby LaKind, who joined later — reunited to record "Cycles," the group's first studio album in eight years and the first work from the original grouping since 1975.

'Prime Time Live' Could Be The 'Sam And Di' Show

By Kathryn Baker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — ABC's new "Prime Time Live" promises no gimmicks, no re-creations, no sensational stories, but it will have distinct differences from other prime-time news programs: Diane Sawyer, Sam Donaldson and a studio audience.

It's been a struggle for TV critics meeting here to get any kind of handle on the three networks' new newsmagazines. CBS didn't bring anyone in to discuss the revamping of "West 57th," and the three stars and producer of NBC's "Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow" spent most of their time fending off questions about their intended use of "re-creations."

And with all the competition, the news divisions don't want to reveal formats or planned stories for fear of someone stealing their brilliant ideas.

ABC News' "Prime Time Live" will premiere Aug. 3. In the meantime, co-hosts Sawyer and Donaldson described what sounds like part "Nightline," part "60 Minutes" and part "Donahue."

"We're not going to do just another program in which we have pieces that have been prepared for months, weeks, long-form, perfectly shot, perfectly scripted, put together right," said Donaldson, trying to explain what the show isn't. "We hope that you'll see some pieces like that on our broadcast. But in addition to that, you're going to see us do a live broadcast on the topic and on the subject, so that we are not just putting on another magazine show."

"And it's a little bit looser format," said Sawyer, trying to explain what it is. "I mean, apart from the technologies, we all know that in the end, after the cameras have gone on and the satellites work and don't work, and the people show up or don't show up, it has to rest on what you say and what kind of information you're bringing."

Sawyer said that test runs of the show included some on-location reporting, but also interviews in the studio, "and some of it did have some of the components that Ted Koppel (on 'Nightline') uses, done in a slightly different way on our broadcast."

"Or that (David) Brinkley uses," said Donaldson.

"Or that Brinkley uses," agreed Sawyer.

"Or that '60 Minutes' uses," said Donaldson. "That's right," confirmed Sawyer. "Or that '20-20' uses," Donaldson added.

This is not just another newsmagazine? No, it isn't.

One reason is the studio audience. Other news shows have had audiences, notably Koppel's on-the-road "Nightline." But this is the first time in recent memory there's been one for a prime-time news program.

Donaldson promised he would not become Sam Donahue. "I'm not going to run up and down the aisle of the studio audience (asking), 'Sex in the morning? Do you like it?' 'Yes.' 'Oh, how about you?'"

Donaldson said the audience that witnessed the run-throughs "added energy by its presence."

The real heart of the show, however, is the pairing of Sawyer and Donaldson, though Donaldson argued that is not the case. "If we don't have the interesting topics, and if we don't have the wit to do them in a way that will interest you, we're not going to make the program."

True, Donaldson was hired for the new broadcast before he left the White House beat earlier this year and no co-host had been selected. But when Sawyer was hired away from CBS' "60 Minutes," the new ABC newsmagazine became instantly known in the TV community as "The Sam and Diane Show."

Despite what Donaldson says, the program's success will rest on the chemistry between its two stars. They will engage in live banter on the subject of the evening, with Sawyer, once an aide to President Richard Nixon, on one side and Donaldson, thorn in the side of the Reagan White House for eight years, on the other.

Sawyer hinted, however, that those who ascribe assumed political positions to the two would be surprised to learn their true leanings. "If you're expecting us to square off in some color-coded political corners, it's really not going to happen that way."

Donaldson has been a fixture in round-table discussions on "This Week with David Brinkley" for years, usually squaring off with conservative columnist George Will.

"George Will and I do disagree at least half the time, and that's fine, two aging, white males slapping each other around verbally," said Donaldson. "But, I thought to myself, how will the audience react if I turn to Diane someday, we're talking about something, and I say, 'Diane, that's nonsense. I mean, that's ridiculous.' Here is this guy beating up on a very elegant, very classy woman. Well, I got into these tests with her, and I'm going to tell you something, I'm going to get the sympathy vote."

Tim Reid Returns In New CBS TV Show 'Snoops'

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Tim Reid is back with his wife, Daphne Maxwell Reid, in a new CBS television show that for the first time he can say is really his own.

He and his wife not only star in the stylish romantic mystery, "Snoops," but he helped create it. As co-executive producer, he also controls every aspect of the show.

"One thing he wanted was a racially mixed crew."

"Rarely in this town do people have an opportunity to work in an integrated environment," Reid says. "When I did 'Frank's Place,' 45 percent of the people behind the camera were black. This will probably be more than that."

"We have blacks at every level. We have black writers and black directors and I especially made it a point to find a black woman writer with experience. People keep telling me you can't find experienced blacks. I found them. My job is to find qualified people in areas of production closed to women and minorities."

Reid says it's necessary to find enthusiastic people to make a show a success.

"In the pilot I remember there was no way we could get one shot," he says. "But I saw people pull together and go the extra mile. In television, you have to give 150 percent to get a show on the air and keep it on the air. It has to have a special spark."

In "Snoops," Reid and his wife play Chance and Micki Dennis, an offbeat professional couple in Washington that always seems to stumble upon a murder. He's a criminology professor at Georgetown University. She's chief of police at the State Department.

The sophisticated, crime-solving couple and their clever repartee are in the mold of "The Thin Man," "Mr. and Mrs. North," "McMillan and Wife" and "Hart to Hart."

Reid, when he is asked about the comparison to "The Thin Man," says, "I hope so."

His wife and co-star adds, "We talked about that concept. We loved Nick and Nora Charles and the fact that these things happened within their lives. They didn't go out looking for things. We loved their repartee. It will be stylish. I think it's in tune with the times. Families and romance are back."

Daphne Reid, a former fashion model who was the first black woman on the cover of Glamour magazine, will be attired in the latest fashions for her job and for the many diplomatic parties they will attend. Reid's character is described as an "eccentric conservative" who will wear vests.

"Snoops" will be the first time a black woman has starred in a one-hour drama since Teresa Graves was in ABC's "Get Christie Love" in 1974-75. If the series goes past 22 episodes, it will be the first time a drama with a predominantly black cast has been renewed.

Reid was on several television shows in the 1970s, including the short-lived "Richard Pryor Show," but it was his role as disc jockey Venus Flytrap on "WKRP in Cincinnati" that made him famous. After that, he was detective Downtown Brown on "Simon & Simon," then in "Frank's Place."

"Frank's Place" was one of the best shows of the 1987-88 season, but it was moved frequently on the schedule by CBS and never caught on with the audience. In that show, Reid was a New England college professor who inherited his father's Creole restaurant in New Orleans. The show was called a "dramedy," a mixture of drama and comedy.

"Hugh Wilson, who created 'Frank's Place,' is doing a more commercial show this season with 'The Famous Teddy Z,'" Reid says. "I'm doing a more commercial show with 'Snoops.' It'll have more mass appeal and the stories will be light-hearted. You have to entertain. I think 'Frank's Place' forgot that."

Daphne Reid says, "We want to portray a black family because we are one. We want people to see a black family and have something for the community to root for. What the world knows of black families is what they see on television. We want them to see all aspects."

Reid will also be seen this fall in John Frankenheimer's "The Fourth War," which also stars Roy Scheider, Harry Dean Stanton and Jergen Prochnow. He had previously worked with director Frankenheimer in "Dead Bang," starring Don Johnson.

Reid says he will have a segment on each show featuring a Washington street kid. "I want him to do something positive," he says. "We had some difficulty finding one for the pilot because every kid we auditioned was middle class."

Lemmon Prefers London Stage

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — Actor Jack Lemmon said he's glad to be back on the London stage and would "much rather play here than on Broadway, frankly."

The Oscar-winning actor appeared Thursday at a news conference with Michael Gambon and Robert Fleming, his co-stars in Donald Freed's "Veterans Day," and extolled Britain's well-known theater culture.

"British audiences know how to listen. They know how to be there when the damn curtain's going to go up. They understand theater," said the 64-year-old Lemmon, sporting a crewcut from filming his role in the upcoming film "Dad."

"In America, we do not culturally, unfortunately, go to the theater often enough. It is an event and it shouldn't be."

"Veterans Day," directed by Kevin Bellinger, opens Aug. 22 at London's Theater Royal and runs through Dec. 9.

Inexperienced Doctors Find Angioplasty Lucrative

By Daniel Q. Haney and Fred Bayles
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — More than 200,000 Americans will have balloons thrust into their hearts this year, often by doctors who are inexperienced, poorly trained and motivated in part by the big fees they can earn.

Many attempt the delicate procedure known as angioplasty once a month or less. Colleagues say some are so unskilled that hospital technicians must lead them through the work step by step.

Many top heart specialists believe these low-volume doctors are often incompetent at angioplasty. Yet there is almost nothing to stop them. Typically, hospitals allow their cardiologists to perform the work alone after taking a three-day course or doing a few operations with a colleague.

"It has been wide open to anyone who can convince their patients to have it," said Dr. Stephen Oesterle, who performs 250 a year at Los Angeles' Good Samaritan Hospital.

Angioplasty is unquestionably an important medical advance, capable of relieving angina chest pain for many people with heart disease.

Last year, an estimated 235,000 patients underwent the procedure. Doctors fish wires through the plugged blood vessels of the heart, then inflate balloons that squeeze back fatty buildups that block the flow of blood. When all goes well, doctors remove the wires and balloons, and blood sails smoothly through the dilated arteries.

But many of the nation's leading cardiologists worry that angioplasty has spread too quickly into too many small hospitals where it is performed by too many doctors with too little experience.

For an hour or so of work, doctors typically charge about $2,000. In the view of many, those who attempt an occasional angioplasty are motivated more by what's good for them financially than what's good for their patients.

"It's dilate for dollars," said a worried Dr. Thomas Ryan of Boston University Medical Center.

Almost everyone agrees that in angioplasty, practice makes perfect.

"There is no such thing as a good low-frequency operator. You cannot do that kind of medicine on a casual

The Associated Press

Margolis points to a still frame view of a coronary angioplasty, showing the inflated balloon basis, because it requires technical skill that comes from doing it regularly," said Dr. Bernadine Healy of the Cleveland Clinic. She, like Ryan, is a former president of the American Heart Association.

Among small hospitals doing a low volume of angioplasty is 229-bed Garfield Medical Center in Monterey Park, just east of Los Angeles. The hospital's cardiac catheterization lab, where the procedure is performed, is headed by Dr. Eugene Margolis.

He has done 148 angioplasties in nine years, making him the hospital's most experienced angioplastor. Last year, he performed 52, while the four other doctors who work there did 17, 14, 10 and nine.

In his view, performing two procedures a month is sufficient to maintain proficiency. But he added, "I have people who work at our lab that, if I had the power to just say, 'You stop, I'd do it."

"Either they are too nervous, they don't have the experience or they don't do that good a job."

Two of his colleagues — whom he did not name — are particularly unsure of themselves, he said. "They sometimes literally have the technician almost have to do the case for them. The technicians know enough to walk the doctors through the case, if they have to."

Bruce Lopez, a registered nurse who is one of the lab's technicians, confirmed this.

"We are not physicians, but we have as much experience as they do," he said. "We don't like to be put in the position with inexperienced angioplastors of telling them what to do next."

Why do these people perform angioplasties at all? "Because it's lucrative, and everybody wants a piece of the pie," said Margolis.

The occasional angioplastors are allowed to continue at his hospital, because no patients have died, he said. "If they were killing people you could do something."

Margolis explained: "Unless something is really gross, it's hard to get doctors to stop doing what they're doing, to take away their privileges. We don't have anybody that bad."

Even in inexperienced hands, angioplasty is rarely fatal. However, less experienced doctors' complication rates can be higher, they are less likely to react appropriately in emergencies and they have less success with the basic goal of reopening clogged heart arteries.

In just over a decade, a heart procedure called angioplasty has grown from a high-tech experiment to a treatment widely available in community hospitals. Cardiologists have rushed to offer a service that clearly helps patients, but many are poorly trained and inexperienced.

At Garfield, for instance, Margolis said 75 percent of angioplasties are initially successful, and 4 percent to 5 percent of patients require emergency bypass operations when the procedure abruptly closes an artery instead of widening it.

A few miles away at Good Samaritan, where eight doctors do about 700 angioplasties a year, the figures are considerably better: 95 percent of angioplasties are initially successful, and 3 percent require emergency surgery.

Competition among doctors and hospitals to perform angioplasty is particularly intense in California. USCI Division of C.R. Bard Inc., which makes angioplasty equipment, estimates that 850 hospitals in the United States performed angioplasty last year, and 114 of them, or 13 percent, were in California.

However, experts say the motivation to perform a few procedures each year exists everywhere. Money is seen as a chief reason.

"This is an ethical issue, because if there was no monetary incentive, they would refer them to the experts and not do it themselves," said Dr. Augusto Pichard of Washington Hospital Center in the nation's capital.

Pichard said doctors also are motivated by the desire to hold onto patients. Some cardiologists worry that if they send angioplasty cases to competitors, they will never see those patients again.

Another reason is ego. Dr. H.J.C. Swan of Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in Los Angeles said many seem to tell themselves: "If I'm a cardiologist and I've had some training in angioplasty, by God I can do it. And by God I can do it just as well as the big shot at the big medical center who's doing 10 a day."

Finally, there is the prestige of being part of the most technologically advanced branch of heart medicine.

Exactly how many angioplastors are at the low end of the volume scale is unknown. But even an industry official, USCI's marketing vice president, Claudia Russell, called it "an unfortunately high number."

Ryan went further. "I think the unskilled angioplastors outnumber the skilled ones," he said.

Ryan is helping draw up voluntary angioplasty standards for the heart association, the American College of Cardiology and American College of Physicians. Sources said Ryan's committee is expected to recommend that doctors perform at least 75 angioplasties annually or stop doing them.

Several experts said 50 is a bare minimum necessary to maintain the competence to do simple angioplasties — and yet that may be only the average number done annually by each of the roughly 4,600 cardiologists who perform them.

"Not everybody who has a catheterization lab should have the privilege of being able to do angioplasty," said Dr. David Faxon, who does 200 a year at Boston University Medical Center. "I think it should be restricted."

Dr. Spencer King III of Emory University in Atlanta, who does 500 angioplasties annually, said the number of doctors doing the procedure is still growing, and money has to be a reason.

"The young cardiologists don't want to go into office practice," he said. "They don't want to run coronary care units. They don't even want to do nuclear cardiology. They want to do cardiac catheterization and angioplasty — and those are the highest ticket items. It's fun, but it ain't that much fun."

Researchers Say New Drug Is Major AIDS Treatment

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Early tests of a new AIDS drug are so promising that federal scientists are expressing hope it may become a powerful new weapon against the epidemic that now numbers 100,000 cases.

Scientists say they hope to start an expanded second phase of tests this fall and perhaps have the drug available for wide use next year.

Phase I trials, described in a report published today in the journal Science, showed that the drug, called DDI, controlled the growth of the AIDS virus and enabled patients to gain weight, feel better and develop some resistance to infection.

"This is not a cure for AIDS," said Dr. Robert Yarchoan, a National Cancer Institute researcher who helped direct the Phase I trials. "But it appears to control the disease."

The number of AIDS cases reached the 100,000 mark in recent weeks, the Centers for Disease Control said, and 58,014 AIDS patients had died as of June 30. No one is known to have recovered from the disease.

DDI, laboratory shorthand for 2',3'-dideoxyinosine, combats AIDS by blocking reproduction of the human immunodeficiency virus

(HIV) which causes the disease. This action is similar to AZT, or zidovudine, the only drug now approved to directly treat AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

"Like AZT, it (DDI) appears to reduce the replication of the virus and controls the disease," Yarchoan said in an interview. "It can keep the virus from replicating, but it can't rid the body of the virus."

Yarchoan said NCI researchers hope to receive Food and Drug Administration approval by September to start Phase II clinical trials involving some 1,000 patients and 20 centers around the country.

He said these trials could last six months to a year, and, if they go well, could lead to FDA approval for wide use of DDI.

The journal Science said that after the new clinical trials are underway, DDI manufacturer Bristol-Myers hopes to distribute the drug without charge to patients who are in critical need. No agreement for this distribution has been reached with the FDA, however, the magazine said.

Yarchoan said DDI's action of blocking reproduction of the AIDS virus enables patients to recover some ability to fight infection. This could prolong life since most AIDS patients die because immune systems weakened by the HIV virus cannot combat infection.

DDI, said Yarchoan, has important advantages over AZT: it is less toxic, better tolerated by patients, and needs to be taken only two or three times a day. AZT must be taken six times daily without fail, which requires patients to awaken during the night.

Yarchoan said the clinical trials of DDI started 47 weeks ago for 26 patients. Five patients, who earlier were taking a closely related compound called DDA, were added later.

"We started at very low doses and as the patients tolerated each dose we worked our way up," Yarchoan said. "After the first four doses, we found hints of activity, but nothing that was too substantial."

"But in our fifth dose, we found very consistent improvement in immunologic function and at the same time evidence that the amount of virus in the people was going down," he added.

Meanwhile, a coalition of activists on Thursday said government inaction regarding AIDS threatens to isolate people with the disease and overburden the nation's health-care system.

Large Number Of Elderly Stirs Europe Into Action

By Maggie Jackson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — Like the storybook awakening of Rip Van Winkle, who found he'd slept into old age, Western European nations are discovering what it means to lose their youth.

Parts of Europe already have the world's highest populations of elderly people, and governments are recognizing the change, especially in the faster-aging north, where retirees may comprise 40 percent of some populations by 2040. From West Germany to Greece, countries are studying how fewer young people will support strained pension and health care systems.

But gloomy visions of crowded old-age homes and broken economies are out of line, experts say. They worry about the poor and lonely, but say most will be comfortable, with money to spend — as advertisers have already noticed.

The challenge, experts say, will be to show society that age doesn't mean illness or empty lives. No American-style Gray Panthers have appeared to defend the cause, but a British seniors group is fighting age discrimination.

"Europe is in the position to be the first to enter a new social world, so what we decide to do is of great importance. Only now is anybody taking any notice of it," says Peter Laslett, a Cambridge University demographer and expert on aging.

"We can't look at it simply in terms of a burden," says Laslett, 73, who likes to lace demographic data with lines from Wordsworth on the joys of youth. "It's an enormous challenge for human beings for the first time to use their whole potential."

Demographers say that while the developing world will catch up quickly, Europe has more than twice the global proportion of elderly, or 12.4 percent, and northern Europe has 2.5 times the world average. Southern Europe, with its higher birthrates, is aging less rapidly. By the year 2000 every fourth person will be over 65 in Western Europe, by one estimate.

The main reasons are life-enhancing medicine and falling birthrates, and some say Europe has been slow to recognize the magnitude of the change.

"We're waking up to it late in the day," says Sally Greengross, secretary-general of EuroLink Age, a coalition promoting the cause of the 60 million over-60s in the European Economic Community.

France forbids forced retirement and job advertisements aren't allowed to set age limits. But other nations, says EuroLink Age, have yet to follow suit.

The 12-nation EEC plans a "Year of the Elderly," but red tape has postponed it to 1991. The EEC budget for elderly affairs more than doubled in 1988, but only to the equivalent of $738,000.

Pensions are of primary concern, prompted by fears of future workers paying hefty proportions of their salaries to support pensioners.

West Germany estimates 40 percent of its population will be over 65 by 2040, and its Employers Federation says employees would have to pay 36 percent of their salaries, or double today's rate, to sustain benefits.

The West German cabinet has proposed reforms, including hiking the retirement age for women from 60 to 65, the age at which men retire. Italy is considering similar action. Most EEC citizens can receive retirement benefits at 60 or 65. Danes work the latest, to 67, and Italian women leave at 55.

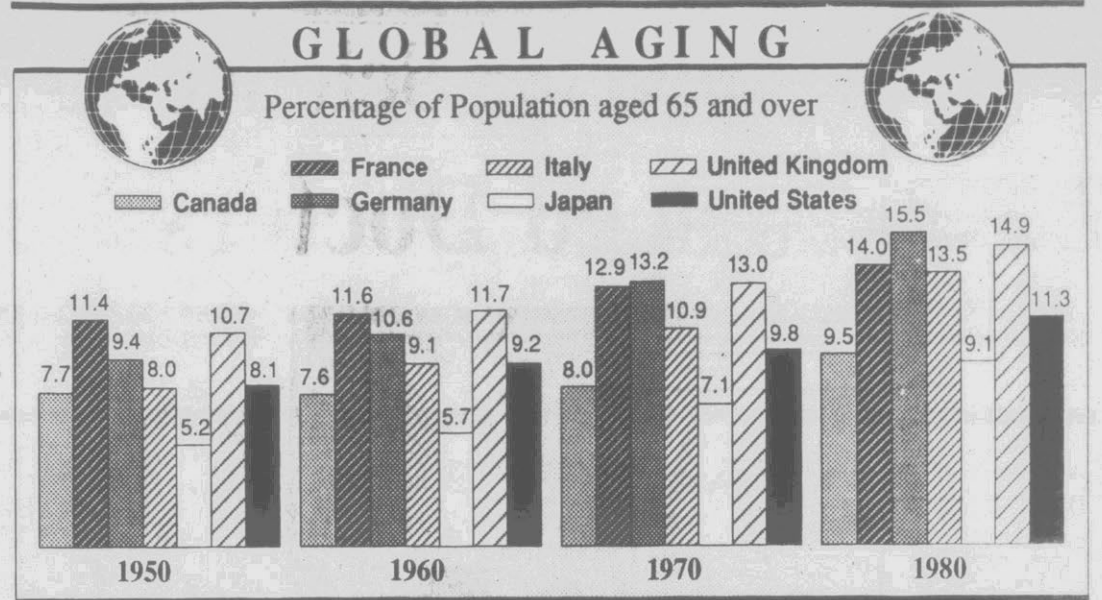

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government has acted to abolish a $130 weekly limit on what pensioners can earn before losing some benefits. At the same time, it has been criticized for cutting pensions as part of what the government calls "weaning Britons off the dependency culture."

The elderly increasingly contribute to the economy by filling in for the shrinking numbers of the young. Already, some are being wooed back by employers like Britain's Tesco supermarket chain, which hires 55- to 69-year-olds.

"They're very reliable, conscientious, and don't need so much training," says Barry Ball, the personnel manager who began Tesco's scheme a year ago.

"I'm not ready for retirement — work keeps me young," says Doris Broderick, 58, who started working in a Tesco market coffee shop six months ago after being laid off from serving coffee to Lloyd's shipping staff.

Banks Pay More Heed To Elders

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — When it comes to the nation's fastest growing population, several demographic truths apply: They are affluent, interested in getting the most for their buck and over 55 years old.

But don't call them senior citizens. "It's instant death," said Marion Williams, who developed Boston Five Cents Savings Bank's program for older customers.

"In the early going, some banks made the mistake of pitching accounts with names like Golden Years," said Marsha Blasco of Florida National Bank Inc.

Since the early 1980s, banks around the nation have been paying more attention to their older customers. Government figures project a 40 percent increase in the number of people over 50 during the next 10 years as the baby boom generation ages. This group earns $900 billion dollars a year and controls 75 percent to 80 percent of financial assets in the marketplace.

"Those are numbers that say this is an important segment," said Thomas Munsell of Shawmut National Corp. in Hartford, Conn. "There are more and more big dollars. But they're sophisticated and elusive."

Munsell, who did considerable research in developing the Shawmut 55 program, said the mature bank customer is anything but a easy sell. They are very well-read and, in some cases, have the time to look into and carefully compare what banks offer. "These people are astute," he said.

Retirement account managers agree the most important point in wooing the over-55 set is they regard themselves as anything but "older." "Most of these people consider themselves about 10 years younger than they are," said Blasco, an assistant vice president. "They don't feel their age and are much more active than prior generations."

When Barnett Banks of Jacksonville, Fla., in 1982 designed a package of financial and banking services for older customers it was an anomaly, said Denise Martin, retirement market manager. Now, the competition is fierce. "Everybody is finally realizing that it's a very important population."

And the scramble has just begun, said Michael P. Sullivan, a Charlotte, N.C., consultant and author of "Banking on the Mature Customer." "There's going to be some real warfare out there as more and more attractive programs are made available to the seniors. Up till now, most banks have targeted the young urban professional market. But suddenly they're realizing that 60 to 85 percent of their savings balance is held by people over the age of 50."

To appeal to that market, hundreds of banks have adopted programs like Barnett's Senior Partners program. Specialized services have become standard.

Customers over 55 can expect free checking, travelers and cashiers cheques. Special financial planning guides and accidental death insurance have become de rigueur. And any bank worth its salt is liable to have a newsletter addressed to "the mature banking customer," Martin said.

In addition to standard banking discounts, marketing directors said their older customers are interested in travel, entertainment and medical benefits.

"They're no longer acquiring and are instead in the appreciation stage of life," said Williams, an assistant marketing manager at Boston live.

Congress Studies Age Bias

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A little-noticed Supreme Court ruling making it easier for employers to limit older workers' fringe benefits has spurred members of Congress to seek age-discrimination barriers many thought had been in place for decades.

Lawmakers and advocates for the elderly are pushing legislation to nullify the June 23 ruling that bias in benefits such as health and retirement plans is not automatically banned under the 1967 "Age Discrimination in Employment Act."

In the wake of the ruling, "employers are probably going to start tightening up" on what fringes they offer to older workers, said Vicki Gottlich, an attorney with the National Senior Citizens Law Center. "Employers may start rethinking how they're going to provide benefits."

However, Doug McDowell, whose Washington law firm, McGuinness and Williams, represents management in employment cases, said companies aren't likely to make major cutbacks that would hurt worker morale.

"There's a labor shortage in a lot of areas. Instead of laying off people, they want to keep them. I'm not sure people would want to stay with an employer who said everyone over age 65 is going to lose benefits," McDowell said.

The government has long interpreted the age discrimination act as letting employers limit fringes for older workers only if it would cost more to offer them the same benefits given younger employees, for example life insurance.

But the Supreme Court, in an Ohio case, said the law bans biased benefit plans only in cases where the disparities are part of an intent to discriminate in "some non-fringe-benefit aspect," of employment, such as hiring or firing.

Justice Thurgood Marshall, in a strong dissent from the 7-2 majority decision, said the ruling "immunizes virtually all employee benefit programs from liability" under the age discrimination act.

"It is difficult to believe that Congress ... intended to immunize acts of unabashed discrimination against older workers," Marshall wrote.

Horace Deets, executive director of the American Association of Retired Persons, said that while the ruling got little attention amid the excitement over long-awaited court decisions on abortion and flag-burning, it was "an absolute shocker" to the aging community.
