Israel Hints At Hostage Talks

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir today suggested Israel was conducting negotiations with pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem groups in Lebanon to obtain the release of Israeli prisoners and Western hostages.

Asked whether Israel was engaged in contacts with Shiite groups in Lebanon, Shamir told reporters "there are permanent contacts with various factors about the release of the hostages."

Israel radio said the contacts were related to Israel's offer Monday to trade all the Shiite prisoners it is holding for three Israeli soldiers and the foreign hostages held in Lebanon.

Also today, sources said there were sharp divisions in the government over its decision to abduct Obeid. The action also has drawn fire from officials in Washington.

The Israeli offer was made as Shiite extremists in Lebanon said they hanged U.S. Marine Lt. Col. William Higgins because Israel refused to release a Shiite Moslem cleric its commandos kidnapped Friday from his south Lebanon home.

The captors of another American later said they would kill him today unless Israel frees the cleric, Sheik Abdul Karim Obeid, who Israeli sources say was involved in Higgins' abduction.

Shamir's spokesman, Avi Pazner, suggested that the contacts with Shiite groups were indirect, through the International Red Cross and the U.S. government. He would not say if there had been any direct talks.

Foreign Ministry Spokesman Alon Liel, asked if Israel had received any positive results to its swap offer, said "no."

Israel is believed to be holding 50 to 60 Shiite Moslems in Israel as well as about 300 in south Lebanon, security sources in Lebanon said on condition of anonymity.

Shamir defended Israel's decision to kidnap Obeid and two of his aides.

"The only purpose of our operation was to free our captured soldiers. If, at the same time, we manage to set free other hostages, we will be happy. There is a common interest and a communal goal with the United States," Shamir told reporters outside an aluminum factory he visited in Jerusalem.

Gasoline Prices Go Up At Least 5 Cents A Gallon

By Carol Tyer
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

North Carolina's 5.2 cents-on-the-gallon tax increase on gasoline went into effect at 12:01 a.m. today and area sales were higher than usual Monday, presumably because of price jumps that gasoline suppliers were expected to pass on to consumers beginning today.

The gas tax increase received final approval from the General Assembly last week, as part of a $9.1 billion package for highways and pay raises.

The McThrift station at 14th and Charles Street sold between 800 and 1000 gallons more Monday than on a usual weekday, according Linda Gurkins, acting manager.

David Butler, owner of Butler's Exxon in Ayden, said his sales were about 33 percent higher than usual Monday. "But not today," he said, "It's dead today."

Butler, like other Exxon retailers, raised pump prices 5 cents before leaving the station Monday.

The Fast Fare convenience store on Cotanche Street in Greenville had about $960 in sales, when a usual day's gas sales are about $750, assistant manager Jerry Edwards said. He said most of Monday's gas — about $600 worth — was sold after 2 p.m.

However, Edwards, like Ms. Gurkins at the McThrift station, said sales were steady throughout the day and there were never any long lines of people gassing up.

Ken Lang, manager of Quality Oil's Greenville branch, said sales at stations supplied by Quality experienced "a Friday afternoon on Monday." He said sales were steady, but not overwhelming — "very much like a Friday afternoon."

Prices at Quality's stations went up six cents as of opening time this morning, Lang said. He would guess as to whether people will be driving less in view of the increased prices of fuel.

Walker Allen Jr., president of W.L. Allen Oil Co. in Greenville, said the stations his company supplies sold more gas Monday.

U.S. Awaits Fate Of Other Hostages

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Pro-Iranian extremists said they would kill another American hostage today, a day after kidnapers said they hanged a U.S. Marine, unless Israel frees a Shiite Moslem cleric it abducted.

Also today, a caller claiming to represent the group that kidnapped the Marine, Lt. Col. William R. Higgins, said a British hostage would be killed today unless the cleric was freed.

The deadline for an earlier telephoned threat against the British Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite, passed this afternoon with no immediate word from the kidnapers.

The reported hanging and the threat today against American hostage Joseph James Cicippio presented President Bush with his first major hostage crisis.

On Monday, the pro-Iranian Shiite group that abducted Higgins, the Organization of the Oppressed on Earth, released a videotape of a man they said was Higgins dangling from a gallows.

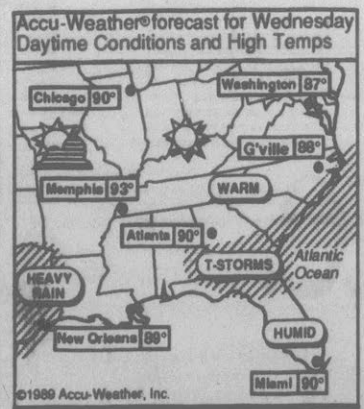

Higgins commanded a group of U.N. truce observers in south Lebanon when he was seized Feb. 17, 1988.

A second group of kidnapers later Monday said Cicippio would be killed if the Moslem cleric, Sheik Abdul Karim Obeid, was not freed by 6 p.m. today (11 a.m. EDT).

Israel has refused to release Obeid and two companions captured with him. Jerusalem has said it would swap him and other Shiite Moslem prisoners for three Israeli soldiers

Warehouse Official Says He Was Unaware Of Alleged Tobacco Plot

By John Bare
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The president of the New Greenville Tobacco Warehouse says he was unaware that four men allegedly conspired in 1986 to illegally sell nearly 100 tons of tobacco at his warehouse.

A federal grand jury has indicted four out-of-state men on charges of selling nearly 100 tons of stolen or illegally purchased flue-cured tobacco at the Greenville warehouse in August and September 1986.

The indictments are the result of a two-year federal probe involving tobacco warehouse owners charged with using illegally acquired marketing cards to falsely identify and market tobacco.

But Hugh Hardee Jr., president of New Greenville, said he knew nothing of the alleged activity until reading news reports today.

Neither he nor the warehouse was involved in any criminal activity, he said.

"We're not under no indictment or nothing," Hardee said.

Each person who comes to the warehouse to sell tobacco must have a plastic identification card, and warehouse officials are not able to determine whether the seller is using a phony card to sell stolen or illegally purchased leaf, he said. Federal law allows a grower to sell only a specific quota of tobacco each year.

"There's no way of knowing," Hardee said. "There's probably illegal tobacco sold all the time, and we have no way of knowing."

Overall, 18 men from five states were charged in federal indictments, according to a news release from the U.S. Attorney's office in Raleigh. Ten people were arrested Monday.

Four of the 18 were indicted on charges of illegally selling tobacco in Greenville.

They are: Glen Samuel Martin Jr., 41, owner of the Big Burley Warehouse of Johnson City, Tenn.;

Graham Cole, 53, tobacco dealer and owner of Planters Brick Tobacco Warehouse in Pelham, Ga., and Peachtree Tobacco Co., Moultrie, Ga.; Maxcy L. Brown, 49, of Mullins, S.C., and Ernest H. Copeland, 44, of Byrdstown, Tenn.

Margaret Person Currin, U.S. attorney for the Eastern District of North Carolina, brought 60 counts against Martin, Cole, Brown and Copeland. A federal grand jury in Wilmington indicted them July 18.

The charges allege that the four men conspired to falsely identify and sell 196,599 pounds of flue-cured tobacco at the New Greenville Warehouse.

Chantal Hits Texas Coast

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HIGH ISLAND, Texas — Chantal, the Atlantic season's first hurricane, lashed the Gulf Coast today with heavy rain and wind up to 80 mph, forcing thousands to flee inland and frustrating the search for 10 men from a capsized oil rig.

Many residents waited out the storm, which moved ashore about 8:15 a.m. with winds that just barely qualified it as a hurricane.

"We get worse thunderstorms than this," said Betty Barrow, a 28-year resident who remained on High Island. "People are always casual about these things here. The old-timers don't worry about these things; they just stay."

The storm was blamed for the death of an oil rig worker lost off the Louisiana coast. Ten other oil workers were missing off Louisiana after their rig capsized while heading inland Monday to escape the storm, and swells up to 25 feet forced the Coast Guard to call off the search.

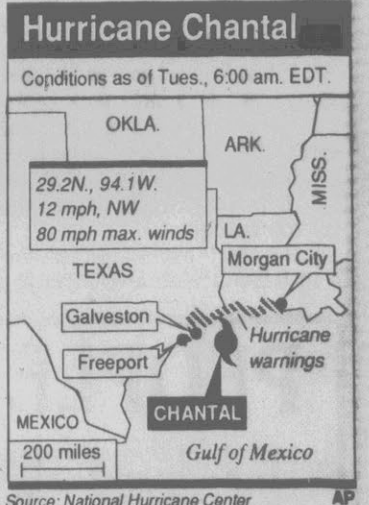

Coastal Louisiana and Texas received 5 inches or more of rain Monday and could receive 10 to 15 inches in the next two days, the National Weather Service said. Tornadoes were likely in Louisiana and eastern Texas.

Chantal hit land near High Island, midway between Galveston and Port Arthur, said the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables, Fla. Winds of at least 39 mph extended 150 miles to the north and 125 miles to the south of the storm center.

At Galveston, 1,000 people were evacuated from an area of the city unprotected by a seawall.

Credit Officials Say Farmers' Life Improving

By Lane Dunn
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Farmers have always been at the mercy of outside factors, so it takes a strong will and patience for them to make it.

But things have recently begun to look up for the growers.

They have seen a rise in profitability from their crops and legislation may have swayed the odds in their favor when it comes to finances.

Most people involved with farm credit institutions, especially the Farmers Home Administration, which is part of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, believe they bend over backward to give the farmers a break.

"You won't find these servicing options available on any kind of business loan," said Eddie Miller, special projects representative for the North Carolina office of FmHA.

But, said Bill Wilkin, survey statistician with the N.C. Department of Agriculture's Statistics Division, the source of farmers' new-found wealth is not solely the credit institutions.

"Farm income is starting to pull itself up by its own bootstraps," Wilkin said.

According to Wilkin, net income for North Carolina farmers in 1988 was about $1.72 billion, with a gross income of $5.11 billion. That represented an increase of nearly $200 million over 1987 and $600 million over 1986.

Austin Britt, vice president and agribusiness manager for Wachovia Bank and Trust Co. in Greenville, said, "The farmers bit the bullet two or three years ago in getting their house in order."

He said the farmers have handled the higher income well and are becoming good business managers in addition to growers.

Mike Doherty, area farm management agent for the Agriculture Extension Service, said that total farming income in Pitt County for 1988 was $116 million. Crop income accounted for $75 million with $38 million coming from livestock, he said.

According to Doherty, tobacco sales brought in $48 million of the crop income. That is $10 million dollars more than the previous year. Doherty said that $9 million of the increase was due to a rise in prices while the other million came from volume.

Doherty said that one reason for the increase is the foreign sale of tobacco. While domestic consumption of the crop has declined, he said other countries are buying more U.S. cigarettes, especially Japan.

He said that the Flue-Cured Cooperative Stabilization Corp., a farmer-funded organization, was instrumental in decreasing the surplus of tobacco stocks. The decrease drove the price up through normal supply and demand fluctuations.

Doherty said that tobacco income for the county may rise over $50 million this year and the total farm income could top $123 million.

Only 2.6 percent of Pitt County's agricultural income came from government payment, a figure far below the national average, according to Doherty.

Britt said that the drought in the Midwest did not hit North Carolina as bad but North Farmers reaped the benefits of higher prices caused by the drought.

Ronald Evans, a Pitt County farmer, said the credit situation in the area is "pretty good."

But he said, "I don't know what it's going to be like next year because the crops aren't doing very well. When that happens, of course the banks get a little tighter with their money."

Prime interest rates are currently at 10.50 percent. Frank Bordeaux, executive director of the N.C. Department of Agriculture Finance Department, said the best a farmer could do on a loan is probably about 1 percent over prime. He said real estate is currently bringing about 1.75 percent over prime.

FmHA has recently had its hands tied when it comes to the harshest penalty for farm debt.

Miller said that for two years, beginning in 1985, FmHA could not foreclose on farmers because of a court battle in North Dakota. Then, he said, Congress passed the Agriculture Act of 1987 to settle that dispute and give farmers more outlets from debt.

Besides allowing for different lease-purchase plans, the act requires FmHA to take aggressive steps toward farm debt. The agency must try to reschedule notes at existing rates for longer terms or defer payment for five years. If the farmer still can't settle his account, FmHA can "write down" the debt, or reduce it to a level the farmer can control. In that case, FmHA will recover some — or all — of its loss

Pitt County peanut growers now have the ability to place a phone call and obtain information that may help them save money by saving peanut leafspot sprays. The Peanut Leafspot Advisory program has been in operation in several North Carolina Counties over the past two years. It works by monitoring and recording temperatures and relative humidity.

The purpose of this program is to advise growers when disease favorable weather has occurred. In other words, when relative humidity is 95 percent or higher, and warm temperatures exist, the fungus causing leafspot can proliferate. By measuring the hours when relative humidity is above 95 percent and the lowest temperature of the previous 24 hours, the development of leafspot disease can be estimated. Therefore, fungicidal sprays can be appropriately timed when needed and withheld when weather conditions are not suitable for disease development.

With the advisory system it is possible in some years to spray only one or two times, and in other years six to eight sprays are necessary. To get the spray advisory system, dial 830-6371. A pre-recorded message is updated everyday and anyone needing further information can leave a message on the answering machine.

The decision to spray should be in the context of using all available information. Some consideration when using this program are as follows:

1. Spray as soon as possible after conditions become favorable, but not within 14 days of the last spray.
2. Try to spray preceding rain (if it has been 14 days or more since last spray).
3. Scout all fields at least once a week, revert to two-week schedule if any place in the field has over 20 percent leafspot (one leaflet out of five with a spot).
4. If your work schedule will prevent you from spraying within three days of the advisory then spray preventively (i.e. a 14-day schedule).
5. If late leafspot or web blotch is identified, you should revert to a 14-day spray schedule (with Bravo).
6. Growers should begin listening to the advisory of the 20th of June and spray when the first advisories are issued.
7. Bravo is the best fungicide to use on the leafspot advisory.
8. If possible, try to avoid the use of Bravo in fields with a history of sclerotinia blight.
9. It is best to use leafspot resistant varieties (i.e. NC6 or NC7).
10. It is best to rotate at least two years without peanuts.

Tobacco Private Agency Handling Chore Services For DSS

Copeland and Brown allegedly sold illegally obtained tobacco to Martin at a pig farm outside of Mullins, S.C., where it was loaded and transported in a tractor trailer to the Greenville warehouse, the news release said.

There, Martin allegedly caused the tobacco to be sold by using a tobacco dealer card issued to Peachtree Tobacco, which is owned by Cole.

"The indictment further charges that the defendants caused false, fictitious and fraudulent statements to be made on 14 separate 'Daily Warehouse Sales Summary' forms (because) Glen Martin concealed his ownership of the tobacco by selling it on the Peachtree Tobacco Company dealer card," according to the news release.

Martin allegedly received at least four checks from the Greenville warehouse totaling over $93,000 and deposited them in his own bank account, the release said.

In addition to the four indictments returned in Wilmington, a Knoxville, Tenn., grand jury has indicted eight tobacco producers, five warehouse employees and one person employed by a producer as participants in the scam.

One of the 14 men indicted in Tennessee is from North Carolina. Johnny Shelton, 42, of Mars Hill, is accused of committing tobacco violations in Tennessee. All the others are from Tennessee and Virginia.

In all, the 18 suspects were charged with 138 counts of conspiracy, making false statements, unauthorized disposition of tobacco that was mortgaged to Farmers Home Administration and false identification of tobacco, the release said.

If convicted, each man could face fines ranging from $10,000 to $250,000 and five years in prison on each charge.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture could levy more than $11 million in administrative penalties against Martin, the release said.

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Medical Personnel Pool, a medical administrative firm that provides employees and works under contract with various health care agencies, was scheduled to begin handling chore services for the Department of Social Services today.

The Pitt County Board of Social Services voted in June to contract the services to MPP, which has a regional office in Wilson and a satellite office in Greenville.

The chore service providers give in-home care to the elderly in order to keep them out of nursing homes. The providers, who were not considered employees of the Department of Social Services, became subject to the State Personnel Act on April 24.

The ruling by the state Office of Administrative Hearings meant that the DSS would have had to take the providers in as staff employees, place them in a pay grade and provide the benefits of regular employees. Instead the board elected to contract the services.

DDS Director Ed Garrison said at Monday's meeting of the board, "While this (contracting) approach cost us more than the previous approach, it is still somewhat less expensive than bringing them in. We feel confident that we are making the right move, given the situation in which we were placed."

Wilson County has also entered into an agreement with MPP, Garrison said, and Wayne and Halifax counties may soon follow.

Garrison said he has spent July implementing MPP into the system. He said clients were notified and meetings were set up with MPP and the chore providers to work out the details and dispel any concerns.

He said all sides would benefit from the switch. In addition to the lower cost to Social Services, the chore providers will receive a pay raise, better benefits and an opportunity for advancement through MPP.

In other business Monday, the board voted to begin mailing food stamps to the elderly and disabled.

Under the current system, cards are mailed to food stamp recipients and they bring the cards in to Social Services to receive the stamps. The Pitt County Board of Commissioners recommended a change to the Board of Social Services.

The commissioners had expressed concern that elderly and disabled were having to pay someone to bring them into Greenville to get the stamps. Garrison said that many elderly people receive only about $10 worth of food stamps

He said a rough estimate places the number of recipients to receive their stamps through the mail at 500 to 750 people. He said he anticipates no new positions to cover the work and said the only extra cost should be postage.

Garrison also said that the state is currently trying to implement a statewide issuance program that would take the responsibility away from the county.

The only concern over mailing the food stamps was the number that may be lost or stolen, Garrison said. The state has set the tolerance level for missing stamps at $1,500 for a county the size of Pitt.

The board re-elected Randy Horton as chairman and elected Lillian Bradley vice chairwoman.

Pitt Joblessness Set At 3.1 Percent

Pitt County recorded an unemployment rate of 3.1 percent in June, according to statistics released recently by the Employment Security Commission of North Carolina.

The ESC said that from a labor force estimated at 56,760, Pitt County recorded employment of 55,000 persons while 1,760 were reported unemployed. Pitt County's unemployment rate ranked 25th in the state for the month.

Pitt recorded an unemployment rate of 3.5 percent in April and 2.6 percent in May, according to commission statistics.

Analysts with the Employment Security Commission regard 5 percent as a near full-employment situation.

The number of North Carolina counties with unemployment rates at or below 5.0 percent stood at 81 in June, the ESC said. Eastern counties with unemployment levels under 5 percent in June included Beaufort, 4.7; Bertie, 3.7; Craven, 3.8; Edgecombe, 4.9; Greene, 3.2; and Lenoir, 4.1.

Area counties recording unemployment rates above 5 percent in June included Wilson, with a rate of 6.9 percent, and Martin, at 6.6 percent.

Two North Carolina counties had rates above 10 percent — Graham at 15.1 percent and Tyrrell at 16.6 percent — compared to one county in June of 1988.

Dare County recorded the lowest unemployment rate in the state during June with a figure of 1.4 percent.

of the textile printing plant, a delivery pipe used to fill a holding tank apparently backed up and released the latex into a storm drain.

Driver Killed

RALEIGH (AP) — A Garner man was killed Monday when his car collided with a gasoline tanker truck on U.S. 70, causing at least 1,000 gallons of fuel to spill near a creek, authorities said.

Clinton Herbert Massey, 18, was driving his 1968 Chevrolet Camaro east on U.S. 70 about 5:50 a.m. when he collided with the truck, said Trooper Michael W. Hill of the state Highway Patrol. Massey was attempting to make a left turn, Hill said.

The truck, owned by Waccamaw Transport Inc., rammed broadside into Massey's car, killing him. The tanker then overturned and spilled about 1,000 gallons of gasoline into a storm drain in the road's median, Hill said.

Boater Missing

PITTSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Chatham County authorities searched Monday for a Lee County man who was thrown from a boat Sunday at Jordan Lake.

Rescue workers began dragging the lake for William Sherman Gwyn Jr., 39, of Sanford, on Sunday, authorities said.

Julian Alman, a state wildlife officer, said Gwyn and his brother-in-law, Timothy Ray Yaw, were traveling in a boat north across the lake from the Crosswinds Marina towards Ferrington Point when they were thrown out after the vessel hit a large wave, Alman said.

Yaw reached safety, but Gwyn disappeared, Alman said.

"It's one of those freak accidents," Glick said.

He said he did not know how long the latex had leaked, and the company did not know of the spill until Rocky Mount officials called Monday morning.

Glick estimated that nearly 200 to 300 gallons of the white latex escaped from the tank. The 3,000-gallon storage tank had been filled late last week, Glick said, but "we don't see much missing from the tank."

The white latex covered an area along Goose Creek and the river for approximately one mile.

The acrylic latex, MSDS-polybinder 359, gives permanence to printed fabrics.

Glick said Monday afternoon the company dammed the creek and intended to pump the spilled material.

Paul Blount, water resources director for Rocky Mount, said officials at the Division of Environmental Management notified the city after receiving a call about the spill. Blount said the city sent a response team to the area, but the company would be responsible for the cleanup.

"You can't put stuff like that into the river," Blount said. "They're going to have to clean it up."

Jim Sheppard, public information officer with DEM, said today a field inspector from the department had been to the site Monday, and issued a notice of violation to Thorpe Road Textile Printing.

The violation could be followed by a civil penalty against the company, depending on the circumstances of the spill, he said.

Sheppard said the company began cleaning efforts Monday, and rains Monday night and Tuesday morning helped flush the creek.

"We feel like it's contained and cleaned up," Sheppard said.

Sheppard and Glick said the spilled latex posed no threat to the environment or residents downstream other than discoloring the banks of the creek and the river.

"I guess if you sit down and drink a glass of it you wouldn't feel too good, but it's not toxic," Sheppard said.

Doug Rader, senior scientist with the N.C. Environmental Defense Fund, said the elastomers and polymers present in acrylic latex can "at high levels cause some amount of health risk."

The chemicals commonly present in acrylic latex, such as ethylene glycol and polyvinyl acetate, are listed by the state as non-carcinogenic to certain levels, but are environmental and potential human toxins at higher levels.

"There will probably be an aesthetic impact," Rader said, "but probably not a real significance of a long-standing environmental health problem."

Rader also said Monday's spill points to a larger problem along the coastal waters.

Citing the Weyerhaeuser spill and the potential for other industrial spills, Rader said the state needed to require a fail-safe system of all companies handling hazardous materials.

"It seems there is a pretty significant need for increased concern for handling of potentially toxic waste," Rader said.

Beaufort Bridge Denied

WASHINGTON, N.C. — State Department of Transportation officials said the highway agency will not appeal a decision denying a permit for a high-rise bridge across Blounts Creek in Beaufort County.

The DOT had proposed to build a high-rise bridge across Blounts Creek to replace an old wooden structure. But the N.C. Division of Coastal Management denied a permit for the new $2.8 million span early in July after a number of groups — among them the state Wildlife Resources Commission, the Division of Marine Fisheries and the Division of Environmental Management — voiced objections.

Gasoline Prices Up

But the biggest impact on his sales, Allen said, came from owners of large commercial accounts "filling up" to avoid the 5.2 cents tax increase. "Some of the farmers and firms with their own tanks saved hundreds of dollars," he said, "by buying yesterday instead of today."

Allen explained that every gasoline retail seller in the state was required to measure its gas at 12:01 a.m. today and send in forms to the state, thereby obligating to pay tax on whatever amount was left. "There's no way for anyone dealing in gasoline to escape this," Allen said.

Allen said he has some regret about the tax, that he feels it's regressive in that "the guy on Social Security is going to pay just as much per gallon as the rich fellow."

Allen also said that an increase in the cost of gasoline is going to increase the cost of virtually all consumer products, because there are few products that don't have transportation costs.

Lang took an opposite view, saying he believes that people overall don't mind this increase as much as one in which all the money is going to the oil companies.

"I think most people feel this tax really is going to result in better roads for us all," Lang said. "So it has a positive aspect and isn't as painful as a plain old increase. I think people like the idea of the ones who are using the roads being the ones who are paying the road bills."

Worth It

Gas Tax Hurts, But It's Needed

If you filled your car with gas today, your wallet probably yelped in pain.

At most stations, gasoline prices rose an estimated 6 cents Tuesday, reflecting the 5 1/4 cent tax hike approved by the N.C. General Assembly. For the unprepared motorist, that price increase was a shock.

But before protesting too loudly, consider the purpose. The 5 1/4 cent tax hike is the major component of the $9 billion Highway Bill. That legislation will provide North Carolina with a roadbuilding package that can drive its economy into the 21st century.

Granted, the gas tax hike is painful. For many taxpayers, it is more than just an inconvenience. For those whose livelihoods depend on mobility and cheap fuel, like farmers and transport companies, it will take a bite out of profits.

But the tax will, in time, provide the state with advantages that far outweigh the extra cost.

For eastern North Carolina, a region that has been bypassed by road construction time and time again, those advantages hold particular significance. One of the impediments to economic growth is the region's size and geographic isolation. Forty-one of the state's 100 counties are in the East.

Yet the region has never had a suitable network of roads either connecting the region's cities with each other or with larger metropolitan areas of the state. Without that necessity, industry and business have been reluctant to locate in the region. Jobs and dollars have gone elsewhere. The highway bill, funded primarily by the gas tax, will provide such a roads infrastructure. That program is designed to locate a four-lane highway within 10 miles of 90 percent of the state's residents. Ultimately, it will benefit every person who funds it at the pump.

For example, while drivers in Greenville are grumbling over the additional expense of gas, they will see construction of the U.S. 264 Farmville and northwest Greenville bypasses completed. They will see a U.S. 264 four-lane bypass of Wilson constructed. These are the last impediments to a four-lane connector to Raleigh, the state's capital.

In addition, Greenville will benefit from a four-lane U.S. 17 to Wilmington and a four-lane U.S. 13 to Virginia. These projects are all included in the program funded in part by the gas tax that went into effect today. All are improvements that will tangibly affect the community's economic future.

It always smarts when taxpayers have to dig deeper in their pockets, but when it's for a worthwhile cause, that eases the sting. That's the case with this new gas tax. The expense hurts, but the long-range result will heal.

Guilty

A True Tale Of Sickness, Sin

Money, sex, religion, power, corruption. All the ingredients for a successful television mini-series. But sadly, the story isn't harmless entertainment on celluloid. It is a true tale of two brothers who got it all by lying, cheating and stealing.

This story is as repelling as it is fascinating. And the last chapter unfolded last week in a North Carolina courtroom when David and James Taggart were found guilty of income tax evasion.

The two young Taggart brothers were good-looking nobodies from Detroit when they came to Charlotte in 1978 to play piano for Jim and Tammy Bakker. In a few incredibly short years they had insinuated their way into the center of the PTL televangelism empire and were living the decadent lives of spoiled jetsetters.

Sumptuous Manhattan condominiums, $75,000 bracelets, his-and-hers Jaguars. What goose laid these golden eggs? Piano players for an evangelist never had it so good.

Here's the fascinating part. The Taggerts attributed their good fortune to inherited wealth but they were proved liars in court. All the details of how they became so powerful so fast in the PTL organization weren't revealed during the trial, but it's a safe bet to say the two have something on Jim Bakker. Their knowledge of the Jessica Hahn affair couldn't have hurt.

Now, here's the truly repulsive part. All these games played at PTL, all these sick gyrations, were financed by the faithful viewers of PTL. They thought they were helping spread the word of Christ by sending their dimes and dollars to the ministry. Instead, they were subsidizing sin and sickness.

The Taggerts now await sentencing for evading more than a half-million dollars in taxes on their ill-gotten gains. That is of little comfort to their innocent victims, but it does at least end their abuses.

The Bible, Jim Bakker's favorite book, says a man reaps what he sows. Popular translation: what goes around comes around. The Taggerts' deeds have come around, full circle.

Will N.C. Love Literacy Tomorrow?

Paul O'Connor

ASHEVILLE — Pop singer and songwriter Carole King once penned the following lines: "Tonight you're mine completely... but will you love me, tomorrow?"

If ever a set of lyrics had two meanings, this is the set. Bob Scott, president of the community college system, said as much when he spoke to the N.C. Press Association at its summer meeting at the Grove Park Inn. While Ms. King wrote about romance, the lyrics pertain as well to public discourse.

Scott was discussing the current push to improve adult literacy. With Barbara Bush, the first lady, leading the charge, adult literacy programs are very much in vogue today. There are statewide and nationwide efforts to get illiterate adults back in school, to teach them to read and calculate, and then to push them into advanced skills or academic training.

Scott worries, however, that the public's interest will fade, that the politicians will move on to some "sexier" issue. He wonders if the public and politicians will love adult literacy programs for as long as will be needed to significantly reduce the tremendous number of illiterate adults.

Among North Carolina's population of 6.2 million people, some 1.5 million adults — about 40 percent of the adult population — do not have high school diplomas. Some 800,000 adults did not complete the eighth grade.

These figures are, above all else, an indictment of the state's public school system. Scott says that the Basic Education Plan, with its new resources for poor, rural schools and its new emphasis on counseling, should help significantly reduce illiteracy and dropouts. "But that is 20 years in the future," he says. The BEP is a long-term strategy for reducing illiteracy that must work its way through an entire generation of children.

North Carolina has an ambitious adult program up and running. Last year, more than 100,000 adults participated in adult basic education or adult high school classes.

Scott says that he's encouraged by that momentum. But anyone who has been in public life for 30 years — as had the former governor — knows that political momentum is fleeting. He asked the editors, "Are you going to be in the trenches for the long haul — next year, and the next year and the next year? Or will some new big issue replace adult literacy? ... We have a short attention span."

This year's legislative action bears out Scott's words. In the early 1980s, the legislature confronted the highway funding crisis by giving road maintenance first priority. Now the switch is back toward road building with $9.1 billion. After only four years of funding the 8-year BEP, the legislature shortchanged it this year by tens of millions of dollars.

To paraphrase Scott and Ms. King: Don't expect a legislator to love today's hot issue when it cools off tomorrow.

Living Equally Ever After

BOSTON — During the early 1970s, a radical notion arose that husbands should share the work at home. This idea, which set men hyperventilating all over America, was followed by the plague of lists.

"Up against the refrigerator door!" Mister Monday, Wednesday, Friday, he would cook. Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday, she would do the laundry. He would wash, she would dry; he would drive the kids to school, she would pick them up; they would live equally ever after.

Thus began power struggles over the vacuum, wrangles over the dryer, the diapers, and the children in them. She would insist, he would resist. Actively or passively. Progress was often followed by slippage. And articles about sharing housework were followed by articles about "The Women's Lib Divorcee."

Ah, how quaint it all seems now. So petty. Can you believe that we once argued over something so minor in the great scheme of the universe as changing the sheets, dear. That love was limited by the list?

Welcome to the late '80s. The lists have come down. So has the heat. There is an uneasy truce or maybe simmering hostility in two-worker households.

He is doing more than his father and feeling underappreciated. She is doing more than her husband and feeling undervalued. There is a friction between women whose lives have changed faster than the men they share them with. There is a stalemate over the household.

Now Arlie Hochschild, a Berkeley professor, has written a book on the subject that puts work at home back where it belongs: in the context of marital relationships. "The Second Shift," her study of two-career parents over eight years, describes what goes on in the hours before and after our "real jobs."

She begins with what we know. The wage gap in the outside world is mirrored by a leisure gap at home. Women are "working" on average one month a year more than their husbands. Some 20 percent of men in her study shared the second shift equally, 70 percent did more than a third and less than a half, and only 10 percent did less than a third.

Even in the most egalitarian households, Hochschild suggests, women did two-thirds of the daily jobs — cooking — while men did jobs without the same deadline — bills, repairs. When men shared, they were more likely to take over childcare, leaving women with the same amount of housework, a job they found much less satisfying.

Through her intimate portraits of families, we get to dissect the emotional meaning of the work disparity. "When couples struggle," she says, "it is seldom simply over who does what. Far more often it is over the giving and receiving of gratitude." What happens to gratitude when a wife wants help at home and a husband "gives her" the paycheck that comes from more time at the office. Neither gets what they want.

In the '80s, she says, "more couples wanted to share and imagined that they did." But the quest to keep reality in line with ideals sometimes stretched that imagination mightily. One of the couples devised an equal "division of labor" this way: He took care of the dog and garage; she took care of the child and house. They called it a deal.

In the basic deal of the '80s, most women whose husbands are not sharing have giving up trying to change the division of labor. They have their own strategies for working the second shift, "They were either supermoming, cutting back their hours at work or cutting back at home."

They stopped pushing their husbands to change, Hochschild believes, because "getting help at home was second on their wish list after 'want fewer tensions at home.'" This fear of divorce quieted many women's demands. But at the same time women whose husbands didn't share thought about divorce more often, and women who DID divorce listed "neglect of home and child" as their chief complaint.

I have always assumed that the argument about who works the second shift was less about labor relations than about personal relations. Not surprisingly, those men who "win" the argument about housework, whose wives work that extra month, lose a good deal to exhaustion and resentment.

The bottom line of Hochschild's study is, after all, that difficult-to-quantify thing called happiness. What one thing did contribute to marital happiness? She reports unequivocally: "the husband's willingness to do the work at home." Put that on the refrigerator door. Right where they used to post the lists.

IN THE STATE

Motion Filed

GRAHAM, N.C. (AP) — Attorneys for accused arsenic killer Blanche Taylor Moore are asking that two indictments against their client be dismissed because a member of the grand jury that indicted her is the son of a possible victim.

Mitchell McEntire, one of Mrs. Moore's attorneys, said he has found no evidence of "actual bias" in the grand jury deliberations, but said the relative's service on the jury poses "a real and literal potential problem."

The motion was filed Monday in Alamance Superior Court.

Fred William Reiber, a member of the grand jury that indicted Mrs. Moore for murder in the arsenic poisoning death of her ex-husband, James N. Taylor, and attempted murder in the near fatal poisoning of her current husband, the Rev. Dwight Moore, is the son of John W. Reiber, who died Feb. 12, 1988.

The 56-year-old woman, being held without bond in the Alamance County jail, is also charged by Forsyth County authorities with murder in the arsenic poisoning of ex-boyfriend Raymond Reid. John Reiber's death is one of six other deaths — in addition to Reid's and Taylor's — authorities are probing for a possible link with Blanche Mrs. Moore.

Rest Home Fire

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — A 78-year-old man died but two other men in his room survived a Sunday morning fire at a New Bern rest home, officials said Monday.

Ira Davis, 78, a resident of the privately owned Mission Rest Home, was pronounced dead on arrival at Craven Regional Medical Center.

Fifteen people were sent to the hospital for treatment and nine were admitted, the hospital said. One resident was in guarded condition at the hospital. Seven other residents and a rest home employee were in stable condition Monday.

Dogwood Deaths

RALEIGH (AP) — Acid rain appears to be playing a major role in the spread of a fungus that is killing dogwood trees in the South, U.S. Forest Service researchers say.

The fungus spread South in the mid-1980s and is now present in 69 counties in seven states in the South. Trees in 18 counties in western North Carolina are infected with the fungus.

Under laboratory conditions, researchers exposed dogwood trees to simulated acid rain. They found that dogwoods exposed to the fungus alone suffered virtually no symptoms of the disease. But when exposed to the fungus and acid rain, the trees were severely infected.

Walkway Spat

KANNAPOLIS, N.C. (AP) — A Kannapolis man who blocked his neighbors from using the sidewalk in front of his house rented a backhoe and dump truck to destroy the 50-foot section of walkway.

It took J.W. Ridenhour about two hours Saturday to fulfill the promise he had made and tear out the sidewalk on his property. While he was taking out the sidewalk, a neighboring family tried and failed to get city officials to stop him.

Ridenhour, 64, said the reason he destroyed the sidewalk was that he owned the property and wanted to plant grass to the curb. He said he had grown tired of children riding their bicycles up and down in front of his home of 48 years.

Neighbors asked police to cite Ridenhour for blocking a public sidewalk but learned it wasn't public. City officials said most property owners own the sidewalks in front of their houses in downtown Kannapolis.

Hatcher Moves

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Twenty-three Robeson County Jail inmates filed motions in U.S. District Court on Monday asking that they be allowed to join a federal lawsuit alleging that unhealthy and overcrowded conditions exist at the facility.

The lawsuit was filed last week by inmate Christopher Dial and former inmate Eddie Hatcher, who was transferred Monday afternoon to Central Prison in Raleigh. Named as defendants in the action were Robeson County Sheriff Hubert Stone, District Attorney Richard Townsend, the county's Board of Commissioners and State Secretary of Human Resources David Flaherty.

The lawsuit seeks in excess of $1.5 million and alleges that as many as 140 to 180 inmates are often housed at the facility that was constructed to hold a maximum of 110 inmates.

Sanford Takes To Senate Floor To Oppose Amendment Over Flag

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Congress should not tinker with the Bill of Rights in an effort to protect the United States flag from acts of desecration, says Sen. Terry Sanford.

In a speech on the floor of the U.S. Senate, Sanford on Monday condemned President George Bush's call for a constitutional amendment that would make it illegal to desecrate the flag. Bush's call came in response to a U.S. Supreme Court ruling that flag-burning is a protected form of political expression.

"We defend our flag, we honor the flag, we salute the flag," Sanford, a Democrat, said. "It is not the president's to wrap himself in it. It is ours."

"No, Mr. President, you can come out from behind the stars and stripes. That is where the Bill of Rights belongs. The flag is flying high and proud because it represents the Bill of Rights. We can't protect the flag by diminishing the Bill of Rights. That would diminish the flag."

Sanford said that as a paratrooper during World War II, he "knew what the flag meant."

"We also knew why we were fighting. We did not need any slogans. We were fighting against tyranny, against dictatorships and for freedom of the world," he said.

Sanford pointed out that several nations have made it illegal to burn their flags — nations including China, Iran and Bulgaria.

Currently, 48 states make flag-burning illegal with laws which the Supreme Court's June ruling may negate. Only Alaska and Wyoming do not prohibit desecration of the flag.

"I will not vote — not ever — to alter the Bill of Rights," Sanford said. "There comes a time, perhaps a historic event, when a person is tugged by emotional anger on one side and emotional conviction on the other. Do we want to condone insults to our flag? No! Do we want to tinker with the Bill of Rights? No!"

"In this case, conviction must overpower anger."

Sanford said preservation of the original Bill of Rights — which since its ratification more than 200 years ago has never been changed — should take precedence over emotional objections to the destruction of the flag.

"Our reaction was quick anger," Sanford said of the decision. "Why isn't it against the law, we demanded."

The case went to the high court after a protester at the 1984 Republican National Convention in Dallas doused an American flag with kerosene and set it on fire while several dozen supporters chanted: "America, the red, white and blue, we spit on you."

The demonstrator was convicted of violating the Texas flag-desecration law. The conviction was overturned by the Texas state Court of Appeals. The state appealed to the Supreme Court, which voted 5-4 that freedom of speech guaranteed by the First Amendment protects political protesters who burn the flag.

Justice William J. Brennan Jr. in his majority opinion said: "We do not consecrate the flag by punishing its desecration, for in doing so we dilute the freedom that this cherished emblem represents."

Soon after the ruling, Bush initiated his proposal to alter the Bill of Rights to permit the punishment of flag-burners.

The proposal has drawn praise from both Republicans and Democrats. Opponents counter that the president is avoiding pressing political issues in an effort to boost his own popularity by manipulating an emotional topic.

Tax Bill Moves Up

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Supporters of a tax-simplification and tax-fairness bill fend off delaying tactics as the measure won tentative House approval 69-27 and drew within two votes of enactment.

The bill would remove some 700,000 low-income people from the tax rolls and tie the North Carolina returns to the federal system. But opponents had objections to both ideas.

Rep. Sharon Thompson, D-Durham, called the bill "history in the making," marking the first time in 50 years the income tax system has been revised.

Under the bill, gross income above that level would be subject to a 6 percent tax up to about $34,000, where a 7 percent tax would be levied.

Marriage

WASHINGTON (AP) — Susan Ford Vance, daughter of former President Ford, apparently doesn't believe in long engagements.

She became engaged last month to Tulsa, Okla., lawyer Vaden Bales and planned to wed before the end of the year. But the couple tied the knot July 25 while vacationing in Duck, N.C., The Washington Post reported in Tuesday's editions.

"We decided there was no point in waiting," she said.

Susan Ford married Chuck Vance, a former Secret Service agent who was assigned to protect her father after he left the White House, in 1979. The couple, who have two daughters, were divorced in December.

The only relatives attending last week's ceremony were the bride's two daughters and two of Bales' three sons.

The couple will live in Tulsa.

Congress Grows Critical Of Israeli Kidnapping

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — House Speaker Thomas S. Foley cautioned today against permitting the Middle East hostage crisis to strain U.S. relations with Israel, saying "no greater goal could be sought by some of the terrorists."

Foley's comment came as Israel's kidnapping of a Moslem cleric drew direct fire from Congress and indirect criticism from President Bush after the apparent execution of American hostage Lt. Col. William Higgins in retaliation.

"It was an action taken with an inappropriate bravado and public show which tended to exacerbate the situation," said Rep. Romano Mazzoli, D-Ky. "In the future ... I hope the Israelis act with the same restraint and concern for all likely consequences, including the effect upon the lives of all hostages, which is being exhibited today by President Bush."

In his daily news conference, Foley said Higgins had been killed by terrorists and added, "the United States and Israel have both been victimized by terrorist acts."

"No greater goal could be sought by some of the terrorists than to drive a wedge between the United States and Israel," he said.

Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Arens, speaking on ABC's "Good Morning America" program, said risks are inherent in battling terrorism, and "the United States knows that well."

"I understand the anguish and the feeling of frustration in the United States... But I think that it is important that we reserve our anger against those who are responsible for this situation, against the terrorists of the Hezbollah movement."

The White House distanced itself from the Israeli action by making clear to congressional leaders at a briefing late Monday that the United States was kept in the dark about Israel's plans to kidnap Abdul Karim Obeid on Friday from his home south of Beirut.

"There was no consultation between Israel and the United States," said one lawmaker who attended the White House briefing, speaking on condition of anonymity. "That was mentioned two or three times."

On Capitol Hill, the Senate voted 99-0 to condemn the apparent Higgins killing in a resolution that also took a swipe at Israel.

The resolution called on Bush to urgently consult Israel and other governments "concerning their policies and actions which might have relevance to the interests of the United States or increase the vulnerability of U.S. citizens to attacks by terrorists."

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said the resolution was a signal to terrorists and their sponsors in nations like Iran, but also was meant "to send a message to our friends."

The message: "This is a very serious matter and we believe that in any future efforts there should be some notification, some coordination, and maybe more responsibility assumed by our friends," he said.

Earlier, Dole sounded bitter as he noted on the Senate floor that Israel had to know before it undertook the kidnapping of Obeid that the action would place American hostages in further jeopardy.

Participants in the White House meeting said Dole made the same points directly to Bush, and also noted that he had been criticized by some lawmakers for his comments.

Former Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said on "CBS This Morning" that the Israeli action "was not helpful, and it's not a focused response." Higgins was a onetime military aide to Weinberger.

"I think that was a most unfortunate statement at that particular time," Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., said on the CBS program of Dole's remarks. "And I think that our alliance with Israel is very important at this point."

"To suggest that ... the execution of Colonel Higgins should fall in the lap of the Israelis is a complete overstatement and frankly plays into the hands of the terrorist organizations who would like to create deeper divisions ... between our own nation and that of Israel," Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., said on the same program.

Bush, in a statement Monday night, said, "On Friday, I said that the taking of any hostage was not helpful to the Middle East peace process. The brutal and tragic events of today have underscored the validity of that statement."

Israel supporters in Congress quickly defended the kidnapping. "Their operation is a logical act in the context of the chaos in which it was carried out," said Rep. Howard Berman, D-Calif.

Dole's criticism was "a contemptible slander, and it shows more than anything the gullibility of its utterer," he said. "It is precisely what the murderers want people to think. But ... there is only one party responsible for the murder of Colonel Higgins, and that is his Shiite Moslem captors."

Others in Congress issued calls for U.S. revenge and one, Rep. Gary Ackerman, D-N.Y., circulated a letter calling on colleagues to support an effort to extradite Obeid to stand trial for terrorism in the United States.

But others cautioned against moves that would worsen the situation.

Soviets Denounce Hanging

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Nations expressed horror, revulsion and skepticism today after a pro-Iranian group in Lebanon claimed it hanged Lt. Col. William R. Higgins because Israel refused to free a captured Shiite Moslem cleric.

The Soviet Union denounced the reported hanging and also faulted Israel for kidnapping Shiite Moslem cleric Sheikh Abdul Karim Obeid.

In Tunis, an adviser to PLO chief Yasser Arafat denounced the reported execution of Higgins but said Israel bore the responsibility.

"We condemn the abduction of innocents and the taking of hostages and those who are the authors and we condemn even more the State of Israel which practices state terrorism," Bassam Abu Sharif said.

Higgins' captors, who call themselves the Organization of the Oppressed on Earth, claimed they hanged Higgins on Monday because Israel refused to release Obeid.

Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Vadim Perfiliev read a brief statement saying, "We resolutely denounce this inhuman action."

The fact that the aggravation of the situation in Lebanon, caused specifically by the abduction of Shiite leader Sheikh Obeid by Israeli commandos, has led to an escalation of acts of violence and terror and evokes profound concern," the statement said.

Condemnation of the purported hanging was widespread.

"It's an absolutely barbaric act, consistent with the worst dimensions of terrorism," said Prime Minister Brian Mulroney of Canada said of the Higgins death claim.

Japan condemned the reported hanging as "extremely shameful and inhuman."

The U.N. Security Council unanimously adopted a resolution that and other foreigners held hostage in Lebanon.

Today, the pro-Iranian Hezbollah rejected the offer and said Israel and the United States were responsible for any retaliation against Western hostages taken by Islamic groups.

"The only acceptable thing to us is that Sheik Abdul Karim Obeid and his two colleagues be released," said a statement by Hezbollah, or Party of God.

The cleric is a spiritual leader of Hezbollah, the organization believed to be an umbrella group for the kidnapers of Higgins and the 16 other Westerners missing in Lebanon. Eight of the 16 are Americans.

Cicippio's wife, Ilham, tearfully pleaded with his captors today to spare his life.

"Please don't execute him, please," she said at a news conference at the press center in east Beirut's Jdeideh area five hours before the deadline.

She read out a message to her husband: "Joe, I know the difficulty of the situation in which we are but all I ask you is to keep your hopes high."

Cicippio, 58, of Norristown, Pa., was acting comptroller at the American University of Beirut when he was kidnapped on the campus on Sept. 12, 1986. Mrs. Cicippio, 34, works at the American Embassy in east Beirut and lives on the campus.

The Revolutionary Justice Organization issued its threat to kill Cicippio in a note, handwritten in Arabic and delivered to the newspaper An-Nahar with a photograph of Cicippio smiling.

The group did not mention Edward Austin Tracy, 58, of Burlington, Vt., another American hostage it claims to hold. Tracy disappeared in October 1986.

This morning, an anonymous caller claiming to speak for Oppressed on Earth said in a call to a Beirut radio station that "Waite would be killed by midnight (5 p.m. EDT) unless Israel frees Obeid."

There was no way to determine the authenticity of the threat, made to the Moslem-controlled Voice of the Nation.

In Nicosia, Cyprus, an anonymous caller claiming to speak for the group told The Associated Press on Monday that the group would kill Waite at 3 p.m. (8 a.m. EDT) today, but the deadline passed with no immediate word from the captors.

It could not be immediately verified if that caller was from the organization, which had not made previous calls to the AP office in Cyprus.

Waite, 50, disappeared Jan. 20,

1987, while seeking the release of foreign hostages after leaving his west Beirut hotel to negotiate with Islamic Jihad. He is believed held by Islamic Jihad, though no group has claimed responsibility.

Higgins' reported hanging was clouded by doubt because of previous reports he may have been killed months ago, and Lebanese police said they could not confirm the claimed Higgins killing on Monday. Nevertheless, the claim and the videotape that accompanied it met with revulsion worldwide.

Bush condemned the reported killing of the U.S. Marine and called on "all parties" holding hostages in the Middle East to release them. He cut short a two-day Western trip and met with top advisers in Washington, and an administration source said officials were considering how to respond.

The U.S. official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said military action has not been ruled out.

Bush briefed congressional leaders Monday night, and one of the lawmakers said the White House made clear the United States had been kept in the dark about Israel's plan to kidnap Obeid.

In Jerusalem, Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir today suggested Israel was conducting negotiations with Shiite groups.

Israel Hints Of Hostage Talks

Groups claiming to hold two other hostages, American Joseph Cicippio and Anglican envoy Terry Waite of Britain, have threatened to execute them unless Israel frees Obeid.

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin, who met with U.S. Ambassador William Brown, told the parliament's Foreign Affairs and Defense Committee today he believed the groups may be making threats against hostages who were already dead, defense sources said.

Foreign Minister Moshe Arens said on Israel Radio's Arabic service that Israel did not believe the death threats.

"We do not have much faith in the truthfulness of the announcements that come from these organizations. I think what you get here is not information but disinformation," said

Arens, adding he did not know if Waite was dead or alive.

The U.S. reaction has included strong criticism of Israel's failure to coordinate its operation or consider the possibility that American hostages could be harmed.

After the claim of Higgins' death was made, Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas criticized the abduction of Obeid: "Perhaps a little more responsibility on the part of the Israelis one of these days would be refreshing."

White House officials avoided direct criticism of Israel, but press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said: "It is fair to say that many people do share the senator's concerns." He would not elaborate.

Shamir played down the criticism. "I understand the worry expressed by some in the United States such as Dole," said Shamir. "I can understand it, but I think the majority of public opinion understands that our purpose was to free hostages, to free people who are in the hands of terrorists."

Despite mounting pressure, however, Israeli officials said the government was unlikely to free Obeid unless the pro-Iranian Shiite groups agree to Israel's offer of a prisoner exchange.

"We have made a proposal," said Deputy Foreign Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said on Israel TV's mid-night news. "They can answer it, but they must understand that we will not give in to the dictates of their blackmail."

An official close to Shamir added that unless there was a swap: "I don't believe that we will release Obeid."

Governors Agree To Meet Bush On Education

By William M. Welch
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — The nation's governors entered their final day of a harmonious meeting in which they skirted abortion and other policy differences and agreed to meet again next month with President Bush.

Before heading home today, the governors were to vote on a series of policy statements, including a cautiously worded one urging the federal government to reduce the deficit without raising taxes "if possible," while protecting key domestic spending.

Other policy matters under consideration included allowing students and parents to select public schools of their choice "consistent with desegregation goals," and tougher steps against drug smuggling, including requiring cooperation in anti-drug efforts for countries to receive U.S. foreign aid.

Some of the governors headed home early, skipping the last session. One was Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus, who said he needed to deal with forest fires that have become "totally out of control."

Bush, whose appearance at the conference was overshadowed Monday by the reported hanging of Marine Lt. Col. William Higgins by pro-Iranian captors in Lebanon, invited the governors to meet with him in late September for a summit meeting on education. The meeting, at a site to be named later, was a campaign promise of Bush and was discussed by governors last spring.

Democratic Gov. Gerald Baliles of Virginia, who was being replaced as chairman of the governors' association by Republican Terry Branstad of Iowa, said "We're impressed with the accessibility and indications of a cooperative attitude" from Bush.

Democrat Bill Clinton of Arkansas said the summit will keep education and child-related issues on the public agenda.

But Ohio Gov. Richard Celeste, a Democrat, said Bush's remarks were too little considering Bush's campaign claim to be "the education president." He called the speech "uninspired and uninspiring."

"It lacked any real vision or any real voltage in terms of getting us moving now," said Celeste, in one of the few public criticisms of the administration voiced at the conference.

Celeste said the education meeting would discuss a dampening effect on state and local education initiatives created by the budget climate and Bush's flat opposition to new taxes.

"The president's posture last year in the election really chilled efforts at education reform and education finance in many parts of this country," Celeste said. "The president is in a unique position to sound the trumpet — and I didn't hear any brass this morning."

Governors of both parties met in private over breakfast before Bush's remarks, and several governors said bipartisan concern was voiced over federal Medicaid requirements that force states to spend more on health care without compensation from the federal government.

In a question-and-answer session with Bush, Celeste asked the president to consider a two-year moratorium on additional Medicaid requirements, which he later described as the fastest growing spending item in his state budget.

Bush did not commit himself to such a moratorium but said, "I'd like to consider it, and certainly we're trying to hold the line on spiraling costs."

Bush and his Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner suggested they were sympathetic with the governors' request that surplus federal transportation trust funds be released, but made no promises of money. The trust funds for highways and airport facilities contain up to $19 billion, according to governors, who contend much of that is being withheld from the states so it can count against the deficit in the federal budget.

"It is important that we begin to spend the balances of the trust fund as soon as possible on mass transit, highways and aviation infrastructure," Skinner said.

Scientist Carl Sagan urged the governors to support steps to counter the environmental threats of ozone depletion and global warming, including a ban on chlorofluorocarbons and increased use of alternative fuels. Chlorofluorocarbons are chemicals found in such products as coolants, cleaning solvents and plastic food containers.

"It is a problem that's extremely serious and will not be solved by business as usual," said Sagan.

Explorers Discover Bits Of Lost Planes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — A group of explorers returned from a journey to the polar icecap with two bits of metal from the wing of a World War II bomber — treasures retrieved from under 250 feet of ice.

Pat Epps and other members of the Greenland Expedition Society suffered hunger, cold and sunburn in the hunt for the "lost squadron," eight aircraft which crash landed in Greenland in 1942.

"This is the first time someone brought back tangible evidence of these aircraft," said Epps, owner of Epps Aviation at suburban DeKalb Peachtree Airport, where the expedition returned in a DC-3 Monday.

The group left Georgia on July 7 seeking proof to back up sonar scans made in 1988 that showed the aircraft buried under four decades of ice and snow.

The planes are a pair of B-17 bombers Epps said were worth $400,000 to $800,000 apiece if made worthy, and six P-38 Lightnings, two engine fighters Epps said were worth $600,000 to $1.2 million each.

They were flying to England in 1942 when they were forced down by bad weather. The crews later were rescued.

Epps' recovery team spent 17 days on the icecap. Storms grounded their plane for days and trapped the men in their tents.

"We were there six days unsupported," said society co-leader Richard Taylor, an Atlanta architect. "We ran low on fuel. We ate just one meal a day. We had very little food. We'd run the generator just enough to send radio messages. They were very brief."

"We'd play hearts for hours at a time," said Atlanta businessman Neil Estes.

The explorers used two steam drills to bore 250 feet through the glacier to a B-17 nicknamed "Big Stoop." Then they lined the three-inch hole with plastic pipe and lowered a hand-held coring drill to cut pieces of the plane's metal skin and what appeared to be a piece of an oil tank in the wing behind an engine.

"It's still got oil or hydraulic fluid on it," Taylor said.

Taylor said there was no evidence of the kind of shifting of different layers of ice in the glacier that could have destroyed the planes.

Critics Say Tax Cut Won't Help Revenue

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush's proposed cut in the capital-gains tax won't increase government revenue any more than did President Reagan's big tax reduction in 1981, says a coalition of liberal organizations.

"It's just like 1981 — Republicans and conservative Democrats proposing to cut taxes to balance the budget," said Robert McIntyre, executive director of the labor-financed Citizens for Tax Justice.

Rather than boost revenue, McIntyre told a news conference Monday, the proposed reduction in capital-gains taxes would cost the government more over the next decade than would the bailout of the savings and loan industry or the purchase of the B-2 stealth bomber.

McIntyre was joined at a news conference by Joan Claybrook, president of Ralph Nader's Public Citizen organization, and Robert Greenstein, executive director of the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities.

Bush contends that cutting the capital-gains tax would produce greater revenue by spurring investment, even though his Treasury Department forecasts a $20 billion revenue loss in 1994 through 1996. The experts who advise Congress say that after a one-year gain of $4 billion, a cut would result in permanent revenue losses reaching as high as $11.4 billion in 1996.

Meantime, two economists writing for the Institute for Research on the Economics of Taxation concluded that a capital-gains reduction would be good even if it did not boost revenues.

"A capital-gains tax cut is likely to help people in all income classes by spurring economic growth," wrote Michael Schuyler and Roy E. Cordato. "It would ease the income tax bias against saving and toward immediate consumption."

Those are the same arguments Bush made in asking Congress to tax capital gains at a lower rate than applies to wages. Democrats are fighting the plan on grounds 80 percent of the benefit would go to those with incomes over $100,000 a year.

Nevertheless, 13 Ways and Means Republicans and six Democrats — a majority for the panel — are supporting a substitute plan by Rep. Ed Jenkins, D-Ga., that would cut the 33 percent maximum capital gains rate to 19.6 percent for two years. It then would be raised to 28 percent and investors would be protected against taxation on gains caused solely by inflation.

House Democratic leaders, attempting to block passage of the Jenkins plan, are negotiating with Bush aides on the idea of writing the inflation protection into law without cutting the capital-gains rate.

McIntyre said such a change, known as indexing, still would amount to a tax reduction for holders of capital gains, and could easily be manipulated. With indexing, he said, "you just cash in the assets that indexing helps and hold on to those that aren't helped."

Greenstein called any capital-gains reduction an enormous wind-fall for the wealthy.

Ms. Claybrook said Bush's "claim that lower capital-gains (taxes) would stimulate new savings and venture capital is nonsense."

After cuts in 1978 and 1981, she said, savings plummeted to historic lows.

Comptroller Denies Pension To North

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Comptroller says former Marine officer Oliver North isn't eligible for his $23,000 a year pension.

"There is serious doubt that a retired regular officer convicted" of destroying government documents continues to be entitled to retired pay," lawyers in the General Accounting Office, headed by Comptroller General Charles Bowsher, said Monday.

"It has long been the government's practice" not to provide retirement pay to someone convicted of destroying government documents, GAO general counsel James Hinchman said in a letter.

"The denial of payment gives Col. North the right to sue for it," Hinchman noted.

North's lawyer, Brendan Sullivan, had no immediate comment on the ruling, a secretary said late Monday afternoon.

North was sentenced July 5 to 1,200 hours of community service and fined $150,000 for his conviction on charges of aiding and abetting an obstruction of Congress, accepting an illegal gratuity and altering or destroying classified documents.

The Navy said then that it was suspending the pension North earned during 20 years in the Marine Corps, but that it would recommend the pension be reinstated.

"We're aware of the (GAO) opinion," said Navy Lt. Cmdr. Craig Quigley. "We keep going back to our Navy Department recommendation that it should be continued."

Federal law says a custodian who destroys government documents forfeits his public office.

Fire reduced a three-bedroom home to debris in California's Cleveland National Forest

Army Mobilizes To Fight Fires In 4 Western States

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Thousands of soldiers and firefighters from Alaska to Florida were mobilizing today to help battle fires that had charred nearly 140,000 acres in four western states and showed no sign of letting up.

World War II-era bombers swooped to treetop level to drop fire retardant over Idaho's raging fires, and helicopters dumped huge buckets of water.

Nearly all of the West's forest firefighting crews were on front lines in Idaho, Oregon, California and Washington, prompting the call for help elsewhere, said strategists at the Boise Interagency Fire Center directing the fire fights.

Crews from 19 states had arrived in the region by early today, including 525 firefighters from Alaska, fire center officials said. They joined 9,800 firefighters from western crews.

About 2,500 soldiers from Fort Lewis, Wash., were preparing to move to eastern Oregon for on-the-job training before being thrown on to the front lines.

National Guardsmen also were called out for duty in Idaho and Oregon.

"We're in for a long haul," said Dave Olson of the Payette National Forest in Idaho, where more than 200 fires continued to burn. "It's getting serious, and it's getting tough to deal with these fires."

These fires were still no match to last year's, the most expensive ever in firefighting costs, but forecasters said a dry August with lightning strikes could rapidly escalate the damage. Fires have charred more than 1.3 million acres this year in the contiguous United States, compared with 2.1 million acres by this time last year.

Lightning last week set many of the blazes.

Bolts ignited a firestorm that charred 10,000 acres in central Idaho, including much of the small resort town of Lowman, about 70 miles northeast of Boise. Residents who returned Monday to what was left of their homes found that 25 structures were destroyed.

Gov. Cecil Andrus left the National Governors' Association conference in Chicago one day early to deal with the fires that he said were "totally out of control."

An estimated 136,000 acres were aflame in the four states, including 55,000 acres in Idaho, the fire center said.

About 120 miles due north of Lowman in the Payette National Forest, crews worked to save a second town from burning.

The mining town of Warren, population 25, was nearly surrounded by the 4,200-acre Steamboat Complex of three fires.

"There are engines in place. There are pumps, hoses, foam units in place," said Payette spokesman Olson.

In northeastern Oregon, at least five major fires and several smaller ones burned across 60,000 acres, forcing the evacuation of some rural homes and threatening the watershed for the city of La Grande, authorities said.

Last Wednesday's thunderstorms produced about 7,800 lightning strikes in the region.

About 2,900 firefighters were battling blazes in the Wallowa-Whitman and the Malheur national forests near the towns of Baker, Unity, Enterprise and John Day, said U.S.

Forest Service spokesman Mike Ferris.

The biggest blaze, the 18,240-acre Dooley Mountain fire, five miles south of Baker, kept residents out of about 15 homes from their houses.

In southern California, the "Powerhouse" fire in the central Sierra Nevada foothills threatened homes late Monday, and officials said they did not expect full containment until sometime today.

The fire, which last week had forced nearly 2,500 residents to flee, covered more than 11,700 acres and destroyed seven homes and about 15 sheds, barns and other outbuildings. Most evacuees returned home Sunday and Monday.

Many of the firefighters have left the site in Auberry, about 30 miles east of Fresno, to battle a fire 25 miles southeast at Balch Camp. That blaze has burned more than 2,000 acres of rugged terrain and was only 15 percent contained.

Both fires were believed to have been caused by arson.

In Washington state, near the Canadian border, firefighters hoped to contain the 850-acre Lodgepole fire by tonight, said Greg Thayer of the U.S. Forest Service. Trails were completed around 85 percent of the fire.

Washington state sent 30 firefighters and three helicopters to fires in Oregon and Idaho.

The fire center in Boise reported early today that firefighters also had arrived from 19 other states: Michigan, Wisconsin, North Dakota, South Dakota, Indiana, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee, Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana, Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and Alaska.

White House Wants Vote This Week On Lucas' Confirmation

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration says it wants a Senate floor vote this week on William Lucas' controversial nomination to become the nation's top civil rights enforcer.

"We hope to have him confirmed this week before the Senate adjourns," Justice Department spokesman David Runkel told reporters Monday, the eve of today's expected close Senate Judiciary Committee vote on the nomination.

A failure to get a favorable recommendation from the committee likely would prompt the administration to guide the nomination to the floor by an alternative route. But a rebuff would prove embarrassing.

Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., who remained uncommitted, emerged as the key vote. Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., was expected to back Lucas, while the six other Democrats on the Judiciary Committee were believed ready to oppose him.

All six Republicans on the committee were expected to vote in favor of Lucas.

Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., was the last Republican to fall into line, telling a news conference last week that "it's more important to have someone who understands Supreme Court decisions from personal experience, knows it so to speak in his gut, as opposed to someone who knows where to put all the commas and semicolons."

Despite Justice Department optimism, it appeared unlikely that Senate critics would stand aside for floor action before the start of the summer recess on Friday, no matter how the committee voted.

Civil rights groups have campaigned against Lucas, saying he lacks experience. Committee

Republicans contend that the 61-year-old black nominee will apply the lessons he learned in his rise from dishwasher to FBI agent to Wayne County, Mich., sheriff and county executive.

The panel had scheduled a vote for last Thursday, but delayed action after Heflin said he wanted more time to look into new allegations. The nature of those allegations remains unknown.

Sens. Paul Simon, D-Ill., and Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, had said they would oppose Lucas.

"For assistant attorney general for civil rights, I just think that we need a strong voice who will speak out for civil rights and I don't hear that coming from Bill Lucas," Simon said.

Lucas told the Judiciary Committee on July 19 that it was too early to evaluate recent Supreme Court decisions narrowing the scope of civil rights laws on job bias, minority set-asides and other issues.

Nuclear Weapons Cleanup May Cost U.S. $17 Billion

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Energy Department proposes to spend as much as $17.2 billion in the first five years of a major nuclear weapons plants cleanup, under a plan being announced by Energy Secretary James Watkins.

Watkins, who says the government must "chart a new course" to correct wrongs in the weapons program, planned to outline a broad blueprint for the first phase of the cleanup in a speech today before the National Press Club.

The five-year program, with details to be announced later this month, is the center of a long-term plan to restore confidence in the operation of the weapons production plants that have been marred by a history of environmental and safety neglect.

The department has said the overall cleanup bill for the 17 plants in a dozen states likely will exceed $90 billion, but it is not predicting how long the cleanup might take.

The department is preparing cleanup plans in five-year increments.

After Watkins became head of the department in March, he ordered a team of senior aides to develop a plan aimed at correcting safety mistakes and developing operational procedures that comply with environmental and safety requirements.

According to sources, the top-level internal department review concluded that about $2.4 billion will have to be spent during the first year, beginning in October, and as much as $3.7 billion annually in each of the subsequent four years. The sources spoke on the condition of anonymity.

A series of disclosures this year has revealed widespread neglect of safety and environmental safeguards at the weapons production plants, eroding public confidence in the program and prompting some members of Congress to seek to take some oversight authority away from the Energy Department.

An internal department audit earlier this year also included a blistering review of management failures at many of the plants and said some department employees may face criminal charges for violating environmental laws.

The department's inspector general concluded that the $60 million "environmental survey program," intended to provide safeguards, was so flawed that it was useless.

Reactors at the Savannah River plant in South Carolina were shut down more than a year ago because of safety concerns.

More recently, production operation at a uranium processing plant in Fernald, Ohio, was halted after its manager said the plant could not be brought into compliance with health and safety regulations if its produc-

Agents of the FBI and the Environmental Protection Agency raided the Rocky Flats plutonium processing plant in Colorado and the Fernald uranium processing plant in Ohio this summer.

The federal government recently agreed to pay residents near the Fernald plant $73 million to settle a suit over claims they have been harmed by toxic releases.

Meanwhile, the department announced Monday that it had reached agreement with Westinghouse Electric Corp. in setting a schedule for restarting production reactors at Savannah River, the country's largest nuclear weapons plant.

Department officials declined comment on a report in The New York Times that Westinghouse, which operates the plant, had estimated the cost of repairing and restarting the three reactors at as much as $1.66 billion, or more than four times what had been previously estimated.

According to the Times, the higher cost estimates were provided June 26 in a confidential report from Westinghouse to the department. One department source said Watkins rejected the proposal because of its high cost estimate and proposed restart schedule.

Reader Sets Facts Straight

Dear Abby: I must reply to the letter in your column in which a Newark, N.J., writer stated: "A child of 2 months can be placed in an inch of water in the bathtub, and taught to turn itself over, put its hands under its chest, and get its face out of the water so it can make a noise." Abby, this is absolutely untrue, and impossible! I am an infant development specialist and have worked in the pediatric department of a university center for many years. The erroneous belief that infants can be taught to save their own lives in the bathtub or a pool is not true. A 2-month-old child face down in an inch of water for even a few seconds can lead to aspiration or even death!

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Everyone who works in and around a pediatric emergency room or intensive care unit dreads the coming of summer because of all the accidents that can befall a child. Drownings and near-drownings, which can leave a child severely brain-damaged, are the most preventable. Many of these accidents occur in backyard pools or at parties with many adults present, all of whom thought "someone else" was watching the child. Every child deserves supervision around any kind of water, and it is the adult's job to provide that supervision. — Carey E. Halsey, Loyola University Medical Center, Maywood, Ill.

Dear Carey Halsey: You are right, of course. I was too trusting and naive to have printed that letter without checking the facts as stated. Thanks for setting the record straight.

Dear Abby: Approximately 30 years ago, you printed a short poem by someone named Edward or Edmund, the gist of which was: "He drew a circle that left us out; we drew a circle that brought him in." My mother explained that this described my father perfectly. I clipped that piece and treasured it for many years, then passed it on to another who needed it more than I.

If you can possibly locate it, please print it again. I am sure there are others who will identify with it as I have done. Please do not use my name, as my father is still living. — A Reader

Dear Reader: That poem was written by Edwin Markham, an American poet (1852-1940), and here it is:

"He drew a circle that shut me out.
"Heretic, rebel, a thing to flout.
"But love and I had the wit to win;
"We drew a circle that took him in."

Molestation Is Difficult To Treat

By Mary Boone Heckrotte

It's easier not to talk about teenage sexual offenders. The problem, however, remains.

"They come from every socioeconomic group. And not all of them cause trouble, either," said Jonathan Ross during a training session for professionals held in Greenville. Ross is director of Forensic Mental Health Services of Connecticut, a program specializing in treating adolescent sexual offenders.

"On the outside most of these youngsters appear very normal."

According to Ross, the most common offense is molesting young children, primarily while babysitting. Molestation includes touching, fondling, oral sex, and intercourse. Most offenses are not violent, and it is rare for the adolescent to molest a child he does not know.

Other types of adolescent sexual offenses include sexually explicit phone calls, voyeurism ("peeping Tom"), exposing self, stealing female under clothes and exploitation of animals. The most serious — and difficult to treat — offense is molesting infants and helpless elderly or handicapped individuals. "The more vulnerable the victim, the more out of control the offender," Ross said.

Most people remember playing "doctor" or other sexual games during childhood. This is "exploration" and not "exploitation." Although it should not be allowed to continue, it is normal. But if the behavior is repetitive, therapy is recommended.

Children under age 10 sometimes expose themselves or push other children down and attempt to imitate behaviors they have seen or experienced. This is called "sexually reactive" behavior, and these children should receive professional counseling.

Once a youngster is 13 or older, this sort of sexual behavior is labeled as a "sexual offense," and the youngster is called an "adolescent sexual offender." While there are cases of female sexual offenders, the majority are male.

Adolescent sexual offenders are not just a case of "boys will be boys," Ross said. "These boys are likely to bribe, manipulate, threaten, and coerce the victim to keep the offense secret. Their primary motivation is control, not sexual gratification. They seek control as a means of counteracting their own feelings of helplessness."

Whether reported by a victim or discovered by a parent, teacher, or neighbor, it is important that corrective action be taken. "The worst thing," Ross said, "is to minimize the offense and think the adolescent has learned a lesson."

By law, suspected child sexual molestation must be reported to the Department of Social Services. An investigation will occur, and the alleged offender will be evaluated by a trained specialist.

Your Mental Health

Pitt County is fortunate to have one of four pilot programs in North Carolina specializing in treatment for adolescent sexual offenders. The most critical part of the evaluation, according to Randy Horton, who directs the pilot program for the Pitt County Mental Health, is the assessment of continuing risk to victims.

If repetition is likely, the court may confine the offender in a group home, juvenile training school, or even prison. If the teen-ager is honest, cooperative and has a family willing to be involved in treatment, the juvenile judge may order probation and counseling.

"Incest is more common and far more psychologically damaging to the victim than being molested by an outsider," Ross said. He also says that incest — a sexual relationship between family members — is more serious in terms of potential for successful treatment of the offender.

A younger sister is the usual incest victim for adolescent males. He often exercises considerable power over her and is likely to blame her for his behavior. He may say, for example, that she bumped into him in the hallway as she came out of the shower, or that she deliberately wore her bathing suit to stimulate him.

Some families resist treatment, preferring, instead, to hide the problem. But successful treatment involves the offender, victim and the parents. The offender should participate in group therapy for adolescent sexual offenders, and the victim should not have to face the offender until each have made significant progress. As treatment progresses, the family can be seen as a unit, and the offender can gradually be returned to his home.

The younger the offender, and the earlier treatment is provided, the more successful it will be. Left untreated, the adolescent sexual offender becomes an adult sexual offender. "The biggest stumbling block to treatment," Ross said, "is not accepting that the adolescent has a problem. The secret must be broken if sexual offenses are to stop and the psychological damage to the victim and the offender minimized."

A tough subject to discuss? Yes, but recognition and talking are the beginning of treatment.

Mary Boone Heckrotte is director of mental health education for the Eastern Area Health Education Center in Greenville.

Patience Needed To Grow Hair

When many women fantasize, it's usually about Dolly Parton's waist, Cher's cheekbones or Donna Mills' eyes. Not me. I have a Catherine Deneuve hair wish. I dream of hair long enough on the sides and the top to pull all the way back and secure in a bun. I see a hairstyle so classic, I wear glasses all day in a futile attempt to conceal my beauty. At night, when I remove one single hairpin, it cascades down my back and I turn into Jaclyn Smith.

Every time I see Crystal Gayle sitting on her hair, I say, "Why not me, God?" If I waited around for the answer, I'd know why. I have no patience. The moment my hair touches my ears or neckline, I begin to twist and play with it until it becomes a wild, zinging appendage with a mind of its own. At the end of a month or so, I have 157 lengths and look like my mother made a career cutting gum out of it. I rush to my hairdresser and say, "Forget what I told you about Audrey Hepburn. Cut!"

I never have understood why women can nip, tuck, rearrange, inflate, implant, reduce and replace nearly every part of their body right down to their fake fingernails, but instant hair has eluded us.

Our moment has finally come. I've just read about a new procedure called hair extension that does away with wigs and falls. A company named Pivot Point International is training salon owners on the technique of adding hair to existing manes.

Africans created the art thousands of years ago. (Do not try this in your home!) The hair is parted horizontally in the back, and either human or synthetic hair is placed across it and woven into a cornrow, very close to the scalp. The interlocking of hair is really tricky and uses twists and locks to secure it close to the scalp. It resembles a tiny doughnut when you're finished. The process is repeated until you get the fullness you want. Your own hair then comes down and covers the cornrow holding the extension.

The cost of the instant hair starts at about $200 and goes up depending on how much fat hair you want to have hanging down your back. It will last anywhere from six weeks to three months, which operators are quick to point out isn't so bad when you consider the money people spend on their hair anyway. (Some spend amounts approaching the national debt of most Third World countries.)

I envisioned myself with 30 pounds of hair swirling around my shoulders tucked under a black, broad-brimmed hat ... until I saw that the procedure could take up to 36 hours to braid. Forget it. If I had that kind of patience, I'd grow my own hair.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices were higher today after a brief downturn, and the market appeared unsettled after its recent sharp runup.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was up 8.91 points at 2,669.57 as of noon EDT.

Advancing issues outnumbered declining ones about 5 to 4 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 741 higher, 602 lower and 510 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 111.42 million shares as of noon on Wall Street, up from 73.15 million shares at the same time Monday.

The National Association of Purchasing Management said today its index of the economy slumped to 46 percent in July, its lowest reading since an identical one in January, 1983.

Also pointing toward slow growth was a Commerce Department report on a decline in construction spending.

Panel Blocks Lucas

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Democratic-controlled Senate Judiciary Committee, on a pair of 7-7 tie votes, today killed William Lucas' nomination to be the nation's top civil rights enforcer.

Attorney General Dick Thornburgh blamed the rejection on "raw politics," but administration officials said they would not seek to overturn the committee's decision on the floor of the Senate.

The committee first deadlocked 7-7 on a motion to approve the nomination, leaving Lucas one vote short of the majority he needed. On an identical vote, the panel then rejected a Republican move to send the nomination to the floor without recommendation.

Earlier story on A-8

All six committee Republicans and Democrat Dennis DeConcini of Arizona voted in favor of Lucas, a black Democrat-turned-Republican who served as Wayne County sheriff in Michigan. All the no votes were cast by Democrats.

The committee's action was a stinging defeat for President Bush, who said last week he supported Lucas "100 percent" and was convinced "that much — not all — that much of the criticism of him is pure American politics."

Farm Credit Crisis Reported Improving

when the farmer's land gains value and he is able to resume payments.

The agency's goal, Miller said, is to help the farmer without losing money itself.

FmHA has not foreclosed on any farms since its fiscal year began Oct. 1, Miller said. But commercial credit institutions are not as heavily regulated as FmHA so the figure may be higher for them.

"It (debt) would have to be totally to the point that there is just no possibility of exceeding the debt (before FmHA would foreclose)," Miller said.

But commercial institutions are also seeing the farmers fare better. Britt says his bank has not foreclosed on any farms and there have been no bankruptcies filed by farmers in the last 12 months.

Eddie Jones, president of East Carolina Farm Credit Service, said that in the second quarter of 1989, April 1 through June 30, his bank foreclosed on five farms out of 5,000 loans covering 22 counties. He said only one bankruptcy was filed in that period.

Miller said that being a government agency allows them to offer some better services because they have tax dollars to back them up. But he stressed that FmHA tries to be profitable, helping both the regular taxpayers and the farmers.

He said that FmHA will often refinance debt that a farmer cannot settle with a commercial credit institution.

"We are the lender of last resort, or, as I like to say, the lender of first opportunity," Miller said.

State Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham said the farmers' situation is looking up, but he said farmers have to take the initiative to receive the services available to them.

"Farm credit appears to be in pretty good shape in North Carolina. Farmers Home (Administration) has not foreclosed on anyone since October," Graham said.

"There is good cooperation between farmers and the financial institutions. But if a farmer is having trouble, he should be sure to contact his bank or Farmers Home Administration. There is no way to help if the farmers don't cooperate.

"After all, all of us involved with farmers want to keep them farming, not foreclosing," Graham said. "For the immediate future it looks as if farm funding will remain about the same level so loans should be available."

"I urge all in the institutions to be as generous and as fair as possible with farmers and I caution farmers not to borrow more than they need. That's basic to good management."

Bordeaux said that while things are looking up some farmers are in trouble because of past dealings.

"There are some farmers that still have some pretty serious debt-to-asset ratios and that gives them some difficulty with their current cash flow and being able to service their debts," he said.

He said that farmers buying land in the early 1980s when it was not ideal is part of the blame for that.

Storm Hits Texas

Chantal knocked out power on High Island shortly after 7 a.m., but the few businesses in town remained open, including a grocery where Ms. Barrow was on duty. She said the storm has been good for business as residents stock up on canned goods, bottled water and batteries.

Some residents who waited overnight expecting a later landfall were chased by wind and rising water from their homes on Bolivar Peninsula, which separates Galveston Bay from the Gulf. High Island is a town just north of the peninsula.

Dorothy Wells and her husband, Bubby, left about 5 a.m. and traveled inland to Winnie, where they had breakfast and were waiting for a room at a motel.

"We boarded up. My husband says we're not taking it down until September," Mrs. Wells said of their home, about 400 feet off the beach.

As Chantal churned across the Gulf, Tropical Storm Dean swirled to life over the Atlantic late Monday. Dean had top sustained winds of 50 mph and was centered about 775 miles east of the Lesser Antilles, moving west at about 17 mph.

Port Arthur Mayor Malcolm Grant asked the 800 residents of Sabine Pass to evacuate the coastal community just west of the Louisiana line, citing the likelihood of high water closing the only highway between the town and Port Arthur.

Evacuation centers were set up in schools in Port Arthur and in Beaumont.

Nearly 500 Houston-area Red Cross volunteers were on standby, and Houston Lighting & Power Co. crews tied down equipment at power plants and substations.

In Orange, just north of Port Arthur, government offices were closed and emergency centers set up. Crews handed out sandbags in low-lying areas.

Police said most Sabine Pass residents appeared to heed the evacuation request, although Jefferson County emergency management coordinator Dick Nugent said some usually choose to stay.

"They've been riding out storms for years and years," Nugent said.

Forecasters said the risk of flooding was high because the ground remained saturated from Tropical Storm Allison, which brought heavy rain in late June.

"If they tell us to get out, we get out," said Lutie Dyson, 62, who with her husband and about 65 others took shelter in a school in Lake Charles, La.

They were among about 8,500 Cameron Parish residents who evacuated low-lying areas by Monday night. And 2,500 residents left Grand Isle, 70 miles south of New Orleans, for fear the only road to the island community might flood.

More than 600 offshore oil workers were brought inland.

Earlier Monday, one oilfield worker drowned and 10 others were unaccounted for in rough seas along Louisiana's Gulf coast as oil companies evacuated offshore rigs.

The worker drowned while leaving a Chevron rig off Grand Isle. The missing were among 14 employees aboard another Chevron rig that capsized off Morgan City. The four others were rescued.

The Coast Guard suspended its search for the men Monday afternoon because of worsening conditions.

The Atlantic hurricane season runs from June through November.

Fire Sentence

DURHAM (AP) — A former employee of an East Durham chemical plant was sentenced Monday to 18 years in prison for starting a fire that gutted the building.

Durham Superior Court Judge Orlando F. Hudson sentenced James Bernard Bagley, 35, for setting fire to Carochem Inc., in August 1988.

ACC Kickoff Notebook:

Much of the talk at Monday's 13th annual Atlantic Coast Conference Football Kickoff at Foxfire Village near West End centered around a new rule change and what impact it will have during the upcoming season.

For those unaware, the block (kicking tee) has been eliminated from field-goal and extra-point attempts. Coaches sounded a unanimous voice in support of the rule, but they expect the change to ultimately determine the outcome of a handful of games.

Kickers have spent many hours during spring practice trying to make the adjustment — both technique-wise and psychological. Others, though, are also affected by the change.

Holders will have more pressure for a good spot and offensive lines will be required to provide better protection against the rush due to an expected lower trajectory of the ball. Also, an expected decrease in distance could prompt coaches to gamble on fourth down between the 30- to 35-yard line or even punt instead of attempting a field goal.

Field conditions now become a major factor. All ACC teams play on natural grass except for Virginia.

"I think you're going to have to think longer and harder about kicking long field goals," Virginia coach George Welsh said. "The percentages are going to be lower and you're going to have more blocked."

Maryland coach Joe Krivac: "I think it's going to have a tremendous effect on the game. You're not going to see that 50- or 52-yard field goal anymore."

"A lot of people are going to wait until they get inside the 25 or the 30. I think that the 35-yard line now is going to become a four-down zone."

"Obviously it's going to depend on the kind of kicker you've got and how quick he can get the ball up. And there's always going to be that psychological factor. There's no two ways about it — it's going to have an effect."

North Carolina coach Mack Brown: "I think the elimination of the tee is probably good if a young man has pro aspirations. I think the big problem is it will make a difference on some distance, but that's something that will be evaluated in practice."

"The other thing that concerns offensive coaches throughout the country is protection because the trajectory of the ball naturally will not be as high, as fast coming off the ground as it would if you kick with a tee."

Duke coach Steve Spurrier: "I really believe that rule may change a few ball games. It's a big rule change. I look for more extra points to be missed, and consequently, you'll have teams going for two points a lot more often."

"The thinking was, according to (Michigan coach) Bo Schembechler, is that he didn't like to see little guys trot out on the field and kick 50-yard field goals. He wanted to see a team drive down to the 20 or 30 before kicking a field goal. For them (the kickers) it's like hitting your driver off the ground rather than being able to tee it up."

Georgia Tech coach Bobby Ross: "I think it's a good rule. I think whenever you can get uniformity to the game it's better. I think you will see a big change this year, but it will come back to normal in another year."

"In the pros, the fact that there's not a tee doesn't bother the kicker at all. I think it will bother the kickers this year in college football — it already has."

"What we've talked to our kickers about is that there's still a damn football there and you've still got to hit it in a certain spot."

Area Players To Play Prominent Roles

Three products from area prep programs are expected to play prominent roles for ACC teams this season, including a pair for the youthful Tar Heels.

Eric Blount, a sophomore from Ayden-Grifton, is slated for starting duty at wide receiver and Dennis Tripp, a junior from Farmville Central, will be stationed at defensive tackle.

As a freshman, Blount, who has beefed up to 185 pounds, caught 17 passes and returned punts and kickoffs. Brown said he had toyed with the thought of shifting Blount to the backfield but hesitated since the adjustment to wide receiver had been made.

"He is another young guy we would consider, but he's just gotten comfortable at wide receiver after being a high school running back, so we've got to be careful at moving him to another position at this point."

Golenbock Responds
Author Wants Athletics Reformed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Peter Golenbock says he hopes his book, "Personal Fouls" helps shake up college athletics.

"Personal Fouls" alleges that members of North Carolina State's 1986-87 basketball team received cars, money and other gifts. It also alleges that some players falsified drug tests to avoid detection and portrays Jim Valvano as a self-centered coach who alienated many of his players.

Golenbock said Monday during a news conference that what he found at N.C. State wasn't unique.

"There are enough other programs similar to North Carolina State for legislators to look into the system," Golenbock said. "We need to take the hypocrisy out of the system, the way they did in amateur tennis."

"We've got to return colleges to academicians. Rhodes scholars, not ticket sales, should be the first priority."

"I hope this book will initiate a dialogue between those people in power so that they will at least talk about doing something to give athletes more of a say concerning their own future."

He also called for more checks and balances in college athletics and said Valvano's dual role as coach and athletic director put too much power into the hands of a single person at N.C. State.

"After doing the book, I discovered that the academicians, the educators, are not running the institution any more. The people in charge of running the academic side have handed over a lot of decisions, at least with respect to the athletes, to the athletic department."

"There's no check on the coach by the athletic director, as there is at most colleges, because the AD is also the coach. Apparently at North Carolina State, the chancellor has given the coach-athletic director carte blanche to do whatever he wants."

One thing Golenbock said he did not anticipate was legal problems with the book. Carroll & Graf published "Personal Fouls" after Simon & Schuster, the original publisher, backed out due to poten-

N.C. State Coming Under Fire

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A former chairman of the University of North Carolina Board of Governors, the body that governs the state's public colleges, is calling for immediate action to address allegations of wrongdoing in North Carolina State University's basketball program.

William A. Johnson of Lillington called the program "rotten" in the wake of allegations made in the book "Personal Fouls" and by university instructors.

"No matter what one may think of (Peter) Golenbock's book — and I have not read it nor even seen it — I think it is now apparent that there is more than sufficient credible information that makes it clear that the situation in the basketball program at N.C. State is, in a word, rotten," said Johnson.

Johnson was referring to allegations by Hugh Fuller, director of NCSU's academic tutoring program, that athletics department officials have repeatedly abused academic policies to keep members of the men's basketball team eligible to play ball.

"I think also that it is incumbent on the university's general administration and the Board of Governors to act forthrightly, and I would hope im-

New York Banking On Viola Trade

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The Mets beat the clock. Now, they hope Frank Viola can help them beat the National League East.

Viola became the first pitcher to be traded in the season after winning the Cy Young Award when Minnesota sent him home to New York on Monday — less than one hour before the midnight deadline.

Two rumored trades did not happen — George Bell from Toronto to Houston for a package including Gerald Young, and Pete Incaviglia from Texas to St. Louis for Tony Pena. For the rest of the season, players must clear waivers before they can be dealt, and that can be tricky when contending teams try to add quality players.

The Mets, trying to get back into a pennant race that is in danger of slipping away, finally got the ace they coveted. They traded pitchers Rick Aguilera and David West and three players to be named later for the New York-born Viola.

The teams met all day and completed the deal after Viola waived his right to demand a trade at the end of the year. The Mets, in return, agreed not to trade Viola until his contract ends after the 1991 season.

"I know we're giving up a lot for Viola, he's one of the premier pitchers in baseball," Mets manager Davey Johnson said. "Anytime we can get a player of this caliber, you have to make the trade."

The Mets are in fourth place in the NL East, seven games behind Montreal. They have lost seven straight games, their longest skid in five seasons.

New York wanted Mark Langston earlier this year, but Montreal got him from Seattle. Langston has gone 9-3 for the Expos.

The Mets needed to fill the void left by Dwight Gooden, who is recovering from a torn muscle under his right armpit and is not expected to return to the rotation until late August.

Viola, like the Mets and Twins, has been inconsistent. He went 24-7 with a 2.64 earned-run average last season, but has slumped to 8-12 with a 3.79 ERA this year.

Viola was a Mets fan as a kid and went on to star at St. John's University. Most of family and friends still live in the New York area.

"It's a shock for me. It's the first time it's ever happened. I have a lot of fond memories for Minnesota, the fans and the championship, but this is coming home," Viola said. "Now, I'll have a chance to play for a team I grew up with."

Viola was in New York when the trade was made. The Twins, 12 games behind in the American League West, played the Yankees today.

Instead, Viola was to go to St. Louis today and was expected to pitch Wednesday night against the Cardinals.

Rose Loses 1st
In Court Battle

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Pete Rose's first court loss was a big one.

A judge's decision on Monday to keep Rose's lawsuit against Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti in federal court was more than a matter of picking a courtroom. It changed the momentum of Rose's legal fight as baseball officials indicated they want to move against the manager for his gambling.

U.S. District Judge John D. Holschuh has decided that he will hear Rose's lawsuit, contrary to the wishes of the Cincinnati Reds' manager.

Rose wanted a court in his hometown of Cincinnati, and not Giamatti, to determine whether he bet on baseball games. He had won two decisions in state courts that effectively took the matter out of Giamatti's hands.

Holschuh's 47-page ruling on Monday gave baseball its first court victory since Rose sued Giamatti on June 19.

"I'm doing a little better today than I was yesterday and the day before that and the day before that," baseball lawyer Louis Hoynes Jr. said.

Giamatti welcomed his first dose of good news during the court fight with Rose.

"I am gratified by this decision and I look forward to the next steps," Giamatti said.

Baseball officials also took the offensive against Rose, saying Monday they would ask the court for permission to take action against the manager based on his recent reiteration that he has bet on sports other than baseball.

"These are admissions that, if it were any other person, would be subject to actions by baseball," deputy commissioner Francis Vincent Jr. said Monday.

Rose's protection against firing or suspension were extended until Aug. 14 by Holschuh's order Monday. Rose's lawyers are expected to ask the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati to overturn Holschuh's decision to keep the case in federal court.

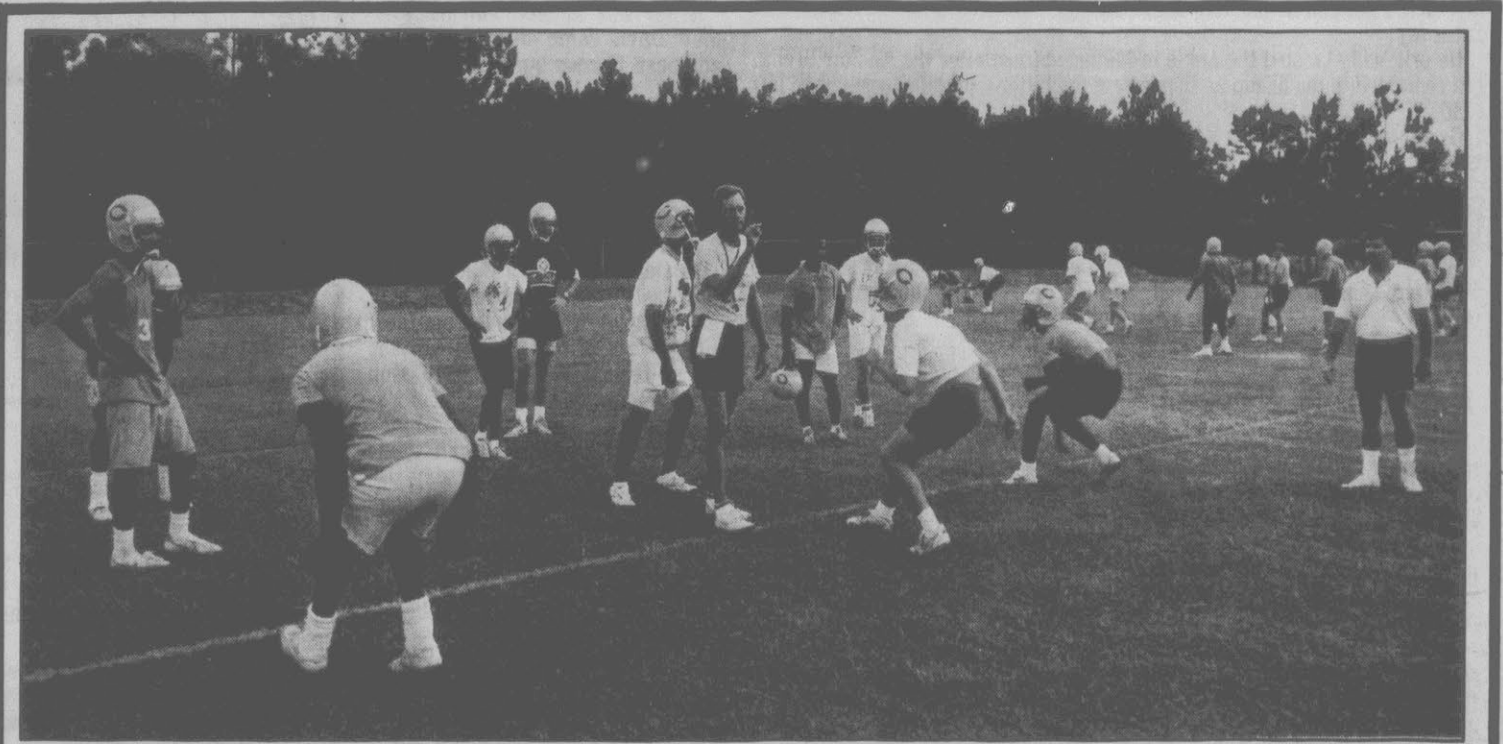

"We have not yet reviewed Judge Holschuh's extensive opinion," Rose's lawyers said in a statement. "We will do so in the next day or so, and will then decide on our course of action."

Rose has held the upper hand in court since he sued Giamatti. Hamilton County Common Pleas Judge Norbert A. Nadel granted Rose's request for a temporary restraining order June 25 that effectively took the case away from Giamatti.

The commissioner is barred from deciding whether Rose bet on his own team, an offense that carries a lifetime ban. The Reds and Giamatti also are barred from taking any action to remove Rose as manager.

During the hearing before Nadel on a temporary restraining order, Hoynes pointed out that Rose admitted to baseball investigators that he'd placed bets on sports other than baseball — an admission that by itself could bring a suspension. Rose has denied betting on baseball.

In a recent interview with The Washington Post, Rose was quoted as saying of his betting on football games: "Well, I'd guess I'd have to say it's illegal. You're not supposed to do it."

Preps Open Grid Work 1 Day Early

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A quirk in the calendar put North Carolina's high school football teams on the field a day early this year, starting July 31 instead of the traditional Aug. 1 date.

Because of the calendar and the early starting date allowed by the North Carolina High School Athletic Association (Aug. 25), in order to get in the necessary scrimmage games and practice days, the extra day was added this year. In addition, several other changes will come into effect this year.

Teams must practice 11 days prior to a scrimmage, and opening on Aug. 1 would have forced those with the Aug. 25 opening dates to scrimmage twice in one week, something coaches prefer not to do. Teams may also use blocking sleds and blocking dummies during the first six days of practice and full gear may be used starting the fourth day of practice instead of the seventh day. Coaches can also call team meetings and show films during the first six days of practice. Time spent exercising and during water breaks no longer counts toward the two-hour practice time limit.

A couple of other rules changes won't be noticed until the season begins. A six-foot deep box in front of the bench at the sidelines will be reserved for three coaches only, moving non-active players further back from the playing field. Also, if the second half does not start because the band is still on the field, the home team is penalized 15 yards.

Meanwhile, Pitt County coaches expressed varying feelings as they started practice.

"We have a void left at running back and we will have to work hard to fill that," Rose coach Chip Williams said. "Our line and receivers should be pretty good, but when you lose people like we lost, it's hard to replace them."

Shinn Moving Closer To Full Control

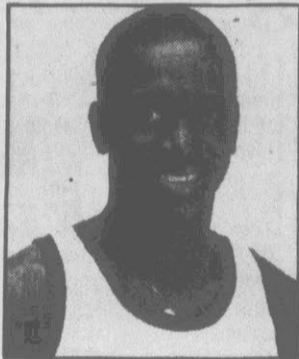

CHARLOTTE (AP) — George Shinn has moved a step closer to gaining full control of the Charlotte Hornets. A Mecklenburg County Superior Court judge on Monday ordered Cy Bahakel to release his interest in the team to Shinn. Judge Frank Snapp shook his head as Bahakel's attorney, Allen Bailey, argued that Shinn had coerced Bahakel into signing away his ownership rights. "I don't think there's anything in here that amounts to fraud," Snapp said. "This was two men who well know what they were doing. They had counsel. They were big businessmen." Two years ago, Shinn and Bahakel joined to raise most of the $32.5 million needed for an NBA franchise. Shinn paid $8.7 million up front, Bahakel $6 million and Charlotte businessmen Felix Sabates and Rick Hendrick $1.2 million each. At that time, Shinn owned 51 percent of the team, Bahakel owned 35 percent, and Sabates and Hendrick owned 7 percent each. The final deal gave Shinn a buy-out option. In April, at the end of the Hornets' first season, in which they led the NBA in attendance, Shinn exercised the option. Sabates and Hendrick sold their shares, but Bahakel balked. Then Shinn sued, for $6.9 million.

Moorman Back In Trouble Again

CORVALLIS, Ore. (AP) — Percy Moorman, a quarterback who left North Carolina State following legal troubles there, has been convicted of telephone harassment stemming from an incident at Oregon State, his latest school. Moorman, 23, of Danville, Va., received five years' probation and a 10-day suspended jail term at his sentencing Friday before Judge Henry Dickerson in Benton County District Court. Moorman also was fined $250 plus $37 in court costs for the July 5 conviction, and was ordered to perform 100 hours of community service by April 1, 1990. Prosecutors said Moorman, who was arrested April 2, called Sonya Burton, an Oregon State student he met while walking across campus, "all hours of the day and night for months." The woman reported the harassment when he left a message on her answering machine, threatening her and describing what he intended to do to her, authorities said. Moorman cannot leave the state of Oregon during his probation, but defense attorney Michael Barker said he will attempt to have Moorman's probation transferred to the state of Washington. Moorman has said he intends to transfer to Eastern Washington University and play football there this fall. Such a transfer may be difficult, said Barbara Hanson, court reporter for Benton County District Court. "The judge said he doesn't care about his football," she said. Moorman was an 18-year-old freshman at N.C. State when he was charged with second-degree rape, second-degree sexual offense and first-degree burglary for an incident in a dormitory at the Raleigh, N.C., school. Moorman was convicted in 1985 on all three counts and sentenced to 12 years in prison. But the North Carolina Court of Appeals threw out the rape charge in 1986, and he was granted a new trial on the sexual offense charge in 1987. But in January 1988, prosecutors dropped the rape and sexual offense charges because the alleged victim was unwilling to testify at a second trial. Moorman was released after serving 14 months of his sentence.

Dabbs Decides To Enroll At Rutgers

PISCATAWAY, N.J. (AP) — Brent Dabbs, a 6-foot-9, 230-pound center who led the Virginia Cavaliers in rebounding last year, has enrolled at Rutgers, the Scarlet Knights announced Monday. Dabbs, of Peekskill, N.Y., will have a year of competition remaining when he becomes eligible to play in the 1990-91 season. He averaged 8.6 points and 7.3 rebounds last year for the Cavaliers, who went 22-11 and advanced to the quarterfinals of the NCAA tournament before losing to eventual champion Michigan. Dabbs, who had some of his best performances in the NCAA tourney, announced after the season that he was being treated for depression and that he felt it best for him to leave the Charlottesville, Va., school and continue his education closer to home.

Greenwell Placed On 15-Day DL

BOSTON (AP) — Cleanup hitter Mike Greenwell of the Boston Red Sox was placed on the 15-day disabled list Monday because of a severely sprained left ankle. The Red Sox, hoping to make a run at first place Baltimore in the AL East, are starting a four-game series with the Orioles. "It's the toughest loss yet," Boston manager Joe Morgan said. "He's the guy who gets the big RBIs when we need them. We'll just have to find a hot hand to replace him until he's back." Greenwell, runner-up to Oakland's Jose Canseco for the AL MVP award last year, re-injured his left ankle sliding into second in Cleveland last Saturday. He originally twisted the ankle in Minnesota just after the All-Star break, but remained in the lineup as the designated hitter until able to return to left field. Greenwell, the eighth Boston player to be disabled this season, is hitting .307 with 12 homers and 65 RBIs. Greenwell's spot on the 24-player roster was not filled immediately. However, Morgan said that Ellis Burks would be called from Pawtucket of the International League for Tuesday's day-night doubleheader with Baltimore. Other Boston players who have been on the disabled list this season are Jim Rice, Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, Wes Gardner, Carlos Quintana and Sam Horn.

Jackson Undergoes Surgery

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati left-hander Danny Jackson, who made a spectacular debut in the National League last year with a 23-8 record, underwent shoulder surgery Monday and is through for the season, the Reds announced. Dr. Warren Harding, the Reds' team physician, performed arthroscopic surgery on Jackson's pitching shoulder to trim frayed tissue. The rotator cuff appeared OK and the shoulder is otherwise stable, Harding said in a statement released by the Reds. Jackson, 27, had been placed on the disabled list July 25 because of shoulder problems. He had previously been on the disabled list from June 18-July 6 because of shoulder and wrist ailments, and was also troubled by a toe injury this season. Jackson rarely showed the overpowering form this season that made him one of the league's best pitchers in 1988 after the Reds obtained him in an off-season trade with Kansas City. He had a record this season of 6-11 with a 5.60 ERA.

Blue Jays Pick Up Mazzilli

NEW YORK (AP) — Lee Mazzilli, placed on waivers last week by the New York Mets, was claimed Monday by the Toronto Blue Jays and has five days to decide if he will report. Mazzilli, 34, was batting .183 with two homers and seven RBIs in 60 at-bats when the Mets released him to make room for catchers Gary Carter and Barry Lyons, who were coming off the disabled list.

Reuss Traded By Chicago To Brewers

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Jerry Reuss was traded from the Chicago White Sox to the Milwaukee Brewers on Monday night for minor-league pitcher Brian Drahman. The 40-year-old Reuss was 8-5 with a 5.06 earned-run average in 23 games with Chicago. Sox. In 19 starts, he had one complete game, beating Milwaukee 6-0 on May 1. He is 219-187 in his 21-year career. Drahman, 22, split the season between El Paso of the Class AA Texas League and Stockton of the Class A California League. He was 6-6 in the Brewers system with a 5.37 ERA and six saves in 31 appearances.

Bird Returns To The Court

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WALTHAM, Mass. — Larry Bird made a surprise, if stiff, return to the basketball court within 48 hours of fracturing a bone in his back and prompting forecasts that it would be four to six weeks before he could play again. "These are the kind of surprises I like," Coach Jimmy Rodgers said Monday after Bird's unexpected reappearance. It was a sentiment shared by K.C. Jones, coach of the Celtics from 1984 through 1988 and now the team's vice president of basketball operations. He said he was watching the scrimmage at Brandeis University when the 32-year-old Bird, the three-time NBA most valuable player, came walking down the court. "I did a double-take," Jones said after practice at the Celtics' summer camp. "I see Larry come up in a shirt and a shorts. I was very curious. Jimmy was surprised. He was out there, fooling around with the shooting and he mentioned he would like to try. He's got some pain on the bruise area." On Saturday night, Bird was under the basket when he fell hard in a freak collision with teammate Kelvin Upshaw that stunned teammates and spectators. He was just five minutes into the first workout for rookies, free agents and five veterans. The diagnosis was a fracture of a tiny bone in his lower back. The estimate then was that Bird wouldn't see action again for four to six weeks. But Jones said the decision whether to rest or play was Bird's along with the team trainer and coaching staff.

"If he wants to go, it's that simple," Jones said. "It's not like we're trying to put anything over on the press..." Bird wore a protective pad on his back while playing in all seven scrimmage games, seeing action for about half of each. "He moved rather gingerly," Jones said. "He shot below average, he's just testing. ... It's just something we have an eye on. He knows how he feels, and that's the coaching staff's approach. If he feels good enough to get out there, then he can go." While the fracture could take up to six weeks to heal, the swelling has lessened and muscle spasms subsided, trainer Ed Lacerte said. He said that the pain receded, however. "I'm sure you'd be able to get an opinion that would say he shouldn't be out there," Lacerte said. "But in my opinion, he is able to play. We evaluated the criteria and decided he was able to give it a try." Said general manager Jan Volk: "I'm just thrilled he feels good enough to play. Believe me, if there was any real danger here, we would have said, 'No Larry, go home or sit down and watch the drills.'" Bird underwent surgery on both heels last Nov. 19 and missed the rest of the NBA season. With Bird, the Celtics won the NBA title in 1986, reached the finals in 1987 and made it to the Eastern Conference finals in 1988. Without him, they clinched a playoff berth on the last day of last season, finished with their worst record in 10 years and were swept in three games by Detroit in the first round of the playoffs. The Celtics' regular season begins Nov. 3.

mediately, to correct it," Johnson told the News and Observer of Raleigh in an interview published Tuesday. UNC system President C.D. Spangler Jr. said Monday he would wait as planned until Aug. 25 to discuss the findings of a six-month investigation into the program and the steps he will recommend to deal with problems. That investigation was prompted by Golenbock's book, "Personal Fouls," which was published last week. "I'm going to make a report to the Board of Governors at their next meeting," Spangler said, "and those things which are significant in regard to the men's basketball program at N.C. State University will then be discussed." Fuller, who has been in charge of the tutoring program since 1983, said athletics department officials abused policies to enable students to withdraw for medical or psychological reasons. He also said academic tutors did course work for players who then turned in the work as their own, and that players were steered toward courses taught by sympathetic instructors. Robert L. "Roddy" Jones, chairman of the Board of Governors, was out of town Monday and did not return phone calls. Members of NCSU's Faculty Senate applauded Fuller on Monday for coming forward with his concerns. None disputed the events he recounted, and some said they were familiar with, and had been concerned about, such abuses. "I don't know that I could tell you it was common knowledge," said Raymond C. Long, the Faculty Senate chairman. "But there have been implications that a lot of people have had this feeling that these kinds of things were being done. I think Fuller is probably in a better position — almost the best position — to be aware of those than most people on campus." Long said he had called a special meeting of the senate's executive committee Monday afternoon to discuss Fuller's statements. The eight-member panel took no action. Speaking for the group, Long said: "Overall, we think we have an athletics program that we can be proud of — both for their academic accomplishments and their academic progress. "However, Fuller has identified publicly some problems that the Senate has been concerned about for some time." Faculty member Edward P. Stahel II, who was chairman of a panel that investigated allegations of improper grade changes last spring, said many of the abuses cited by Fuller had been highlighted in his group's report. While the committee concluded that no grades had been changed improperly, the group led by Stahel voiced concern over academic advisory practices that led to "short-term achievement of minimal standards of progress at the lowest academic levels." The panel also recommended that Jim Valvano not hold the dual jobs of head basketball coach and athletics director. NCSU Chancellor Bruce R. Poulton, who received the report in late April, has never commented on it. Asked what he would like to see happen, Stahel said: "I would expect the chancellor to take a role of leadership in this particular area. I think it is absolutely essential that he do so." Mary C. Williams, president of the state Conference of the American Association of University Professors, said the issues raised by Fuller were of concern to NCSU faculty members and to her organization, the primary national professional organization for university professors. "I, like everyone else, find this whole situation extremely painful," said Williams, an NCSU English professor. "But if there are abuses of academic standards that are going on, we want to see them cleared up. ... There is a role both for the faculty and the AAUP. The problem is that power in the end lies with the administration."

Youth Baseball North State Bows

HUDSON — A pair of booming homers and the strong pitching of Tyrone Young sparked Cherryville to a 10-3 triumph over Greenville North State Monday in the opening round of the 1989 North Carolina Little League state baseball tournament at the Hudson Optimist Park. Cherryville, the defending state champion, struck for six runs in the second inning and added four runs in the fourth. Heath Rittley belted a three-run homer in the second while Young connected for a grand slam in the fourth. Young went the distance, allowing six hits. He struck out 10. North State picked up its three runs on a three-run homer by Jamie Wilson in the sixth. Matthew Dellasega finished with two hits while Scott Briley, Adrian Jones and James Ebron had one hit each for North State. Briley was saddled with the loss. Matt Davis came on in the second and Sean Gordon hurled a scoreless sixth. In Monday's other games, South Caldwell (District 7) blanked Canton (District 5) 8-0 and East Rowan (District 2) defeated Fort Bragg (District 6) 5-1. Cherryville will battle Mint Hill (District 3) and South Caldwell battles East Rowan in winners' bracket games today while Canton and Fort Bragg tangle for survival in the seven-team, double-elimination tournament. North State awaits the loser of the South Caldwell-East Rowan game for a 1 p.m. game Wednesday. Either Jones or Wilson will get the call on the mound. A win there would advance North State into a 5 p.m. game Thursday. North State must win three games to reach the championship series and five games to capture the tournament title and a berth to the Southern Regionals in St. Petersburg, Fla.

tial legal problems with the North Carolina attorney general's office. "Our attorneys have spoken to the North Carolina attorney general's office and there's no indication of a suit," Golenbock said. Valvano's lawyer, Art Kaminsky, had been in touch "only through the papers," and also does not intend to sue, he said. Golenbock and Carroll & Graf said they and John Simonds, one of the few sources cited by name in the book, had received threats. Golenbock said he had received a threatening phone call. John Sawyer, a spokesman for Carroll & Graf, said "threats were made on the publishing house and some of the people in it." Sawyer said he felt the publisher had been threatened because "we're easier to get to." Simonds, a former N.C. State basketball manager and one of the few sources quoted by name in the book, also received a threat last week, Golenbock said. Golenbock said only two sources were paid, both at their own request. The $200 payments were made "for their time, not for their information." Though admitting there were factual mistakes in the book, Golenbock said they should not detract from its overall credibility. "The reader will be convinced of the truth that's in this book," he said. "The evidence is overwhelming."

Orioles Continue To Slide Down

Once High-Flying O's Have Dropped 11 Of Their Last 12 Games With 9-6 Defeat

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Right now, the American League East is a race in reverse for the Baltimore Orioles. And manager Frank Robinson still can't figure out what's going wrong after so much had gone right for most of the season.

"If there was an answer I'd be a millionaire," Robinson said of his team's slump, which has seen the Orioles lose 11 of the last 12 games. "I'd go to every team that's in a slump and sell it to them."

The Orioles' latest loss was a 9-6 defeat to the Boston Red Sox Monday night. That trimmed their lead to three games over Boston and Toronto in the ever-tightening AL East race.

With the season heading into August and the final two months, the first six teams in the AL East are separated by a mere 5½ games.

"There's only a two-game difference between second and fifth place," Cleveland outfielder Joe Carter said. "Whoever can get hot the first of August until the end of the season will win it. It's just that close."

Right now, Milwaukee's just as hot as anybody. The Brewers beat the Indians 6-1 for their ninth victory in 12 games and moved within four games of the slumping Orioles.

Elsewhere in the AL, it was Toronto 6, New York 5; Seattle 6, California 5, and Oakland 3, Chicago 2.

Dwight Evans ignited a six-run Boston uprising in the second inning with a leadoff homer. Veteran reliever Bob Stanley, 3-2, earned his first victory since May 19. Stanley bailed out starter Eric Hetzel as Baltimore closed to within 6-5 in the fourth, allowing one run on three hits in 3 2-3 innings for his 83rd relief victory, tying him with Bill Campbell for 28th place on the all-time list.

Stanley, who struck out three and walked one, gave way at the start of the eighth to Lee Smith, who gained his 14th save.

Stanley's victory came just 24 hours after he said he "hated" manager Joe Morgan and wanted his release.

"My only gripe is that I want to pitch, and tonight I got my chance," said Stanley, booed by the Fenway Park fans as he made his first appearance since July 17 and just his fourth since June 28.

Brewers 6, Indians 1

Robin Yount hit his 13th home run of the season and 200th of his career and doubled as the Brewers handed the Indians their third straight loss.

Milwaukee starter Teddy Higuera, 6-4, scattered five hits over six-plus innings, and Chuck Crim hurled two-hit ball over the final three innings for his fifth save.

Yount homered off Cleveland starter Scott Bailes, 4-6, in the second and the Brewers chased Bailes with a three-run sixth.

"Our intensity has picked up over the last three weeks but it's not because of the pennant race," Milwaukee outfielder Mike Felder said. "We've just been playing the way we're capable of. We're not even worried about Baltimore now. It's too early to start watching the scoreboard."

Blue Jays 6, Yankees 5

Tony Fernandez led off the game with a home run and Lloyd Moseby's two-run homer broke a fifth-inning tie and sent the Blue Jays over the Yankees.

Starters Mike Flanagan of Toronto and Andy Hawkins of the Yankees each pitched 4 1-3 ineffective innings. Flanagan gave up five runs on eight hits and Hawkins, 12-10, was tagged for six runs on eight hits.

David Wells, 5-4, got the victory with 3 2-3 innings of one-hit relief. Toronto, which has not been over .500 since Opening Day, moved to 52-53. Tom Henke pitched the ninth for his ninth save.

"It was nice to bounce back," Blue Jays manager Cito Gaston said. "We needed to win because this division is changing every day."

On Sunday, the Blue Jays blew a five-run lead in the seventh inning and lost to New York, 7-6.

Mariners 6, Angels 5

Pinch-hitter Jim Presley hit a two-run homer to cap a six-run rally in the eighth inning as the Mariners defeated the Angels.

Greg Minton entered in relief of starter Mike Witt with one on and none out in the eighth and allowed a walk and a single to load the bases. Mike Kingery hit a two-run single, and pinch-hitter Dave Cochrane followed one out later with a two-run double to bring the Mariners within 5-4.

Reliever Brian Harvey, 3-3, replaced Minton and was greeted by Presley's ninth home run.

Keith Comstock, 1-0, got the win with one inning of relief. Mike Schooler pitched the ninth for his 21st save.

The Angels had built a 5-0 lead with the help of three homers — two-run shots by Lance Parrish and Wally Joyner and a solo shot by Chili Davis.

Athletics 3, White Sox 2

Tony Phillips hit his first home run since May 17, a two-run shot off Chicago relief ace Bobby Thigpen in the ninth inning, to lift the Athletics over the White Sox.

Terry Steinbach walked on four pitches leading off the ninth. Then Phillips broke a 4-for-37 slump with the homer that scored pinch-runner Gene Nelson ahead of him.

Mike Moore, 14-5, won his sixth straight decision, extending an unbeaten string that began June 16. Thigpen, 1-4, blew his fifth save opportunity of the year and his first after seven straight save conversions.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Expos 4, Pirates 2

When Tim Wallach hits the ball to Bobby Bonilla, the play is never routine.

Once again, Bonilla misplayed a Wallach grounder on Monday night. Once again, it helped the Expos rally and beat Pittsburgh, this time by 4-2.

Bonilla, a converted outfielder, has 26 errors this season. Six have come on balls hit by Wallach.

"It's just one of those things in baseball you can't explain," Wallach said.

On April 16, the last time the teams met, Pittsburgh led 4-3 in the eighth when Bonilla booted an apparent inning-ending grounder by Wallach. Nelson Santovenia singled in the tying run and Montreal went on to win in the 11th.

It happened again Monday night. With the game tied 2-2 and two outs in the eighth, Wallach reached when Bonilla booted his grounder, Bonilla's third error of the game. Santovenia followed with his 26th home run, a drive off the foul-pole screen in left.

"It happens sometimes," Bonilla said, "but you can't let it get you down. You just try to keep on giving 120 percent."

In other games, St. Louis beat New York 3-2 and Chicago and Philadelphia split a doubleheader. The Cubs won the first game 10-2 and the Phillies won the second game 7-4.

Mark Langston, 9-3, won for the seventh time in eight starts. He allowed seven hits in eight-plus innings, struck out five and walked five. Tim Burke got the final three outs for his 22nd save in 29 opportunities.

"He struggled for the first four innings, then it was lights out," Expos manager Buck Rodgers said.

John Smiley, 9-6, gave up seven hits and all four runs in eight innings, striking out five and walking two. He led 2-1 until Andres Galaraga led off the eighth with his 16th home run of the season.

Cardinals 3, Mets 2

Jose DeLeon struck out eight to take over the NL lead with 135 as visiting New York lost its seventh straight, its longest losing streak since July 28-Aug. 2, 1984.

After the game, the Mets finally made their major trade, getting Cy Young Award winner Frank Viola from Minnesota for Rick Aguilera, David West and three players to be named later.

DeLeon, 11-9, allowed three hits and is 3-0 against the Mets this year after losing nine of his first 10 decisions against them. Ron Darling, 8-9, lost for the third time in his last four starts and had his four-game winning streak against St. Louis snapped.

After Dave Magadan doubled in two runs with two outs in the eighth, Ken Dayley relieved, walked Howard Johnson intentionally and got Darryl Strawberry on a flyout. Todd Worrell finished for his 15th save.

Cubs 10, Phillies 2

Phillies 7, Cubs 4

Rick Sutcliffe pitched a three-hitter, Ryne Sandberg homered twice and Dwight Smith hit a grand slam off Greg Harris in the first game at Veterans Stadium.

Don Carman won in his first start since April 12 and Steve Lake drove in three runs in the second game. It was only the second loss in the last 10 games for the Cubs, who made four errors.

Sutcliffe, 11-9, won for the first time since beating Los Angeles on July 7. He had lost five of his last six decisions. This time, he struck out six, walked three and doubled in a run in the fifth for a 2-1 lead.

Phillies starter Terry Mulholland, 1-5, gave up seven hits and six runs in 6 1-3 innings of the opener.

Carman, 3-11, gave up eight hits and four runs in 5 2-3 innings of the second game and Jeff Parrett pitched two hitless innings for his fourth save.

Paul Kilgus, 6-10, allowed five hits and five runs in two-plus innings, although two of the runs were unearned.

Mets Obtain Twins' Viola ...

"Frank started with me in Double-A down in Orlando, Fla.," Twins manager Tom Kelly said. "Any time a player starts with you in the minor leagues and comes up to the majors, he's always special to you."

Aguilera, 27, is 6-6 with seven saves and a 2.34 ERA. He had been ineffective recently as a reliever and wanted to return to a starting role.

West, 24, is a promising left-hander who was called up from the minors to take Gooden's spot in the rotation. He was hit hard in two starts and is 0-2 with a 7.40 ERA.

The three other players in the trade will be announced later. It is expected one of them will be pitcher Kevin Tapani, 25.

Viola, the Most Valuable Player of the 1987 World Series, signed a three-year, $7.9 million contract in the first week of the season. He is the highest-paid player in baseball, along with fellow Cy Young winner Orel Hershiser.

Viola is to be paid a $1.1 million bonus in December. The Mets and Twins presumably will split the payment.

Under the collective bargaining agreement, players traded during multiyear contracts may demand a trade in the 15 days after the end of the World Series and their teams must comply by the following March 15.

"We waived the right to demand a trade in exchange for the Mets agreeing not to trade him during the duration of his contract," said Viola's agent, Craig Fenech.

Earlier, the Mets got Musselman and minor-league pitcher Mike Brady from Toronto for a player to be named later — possibly Mark Carreon. Getting Musselman may have put the Mets in a position to make the trade for Viola.

Musselman, 26, was 0-1 with a 10.64 earned-run average for the Blue Jays this season and 5-2 with a 3.77 ERA in 10 starts with Class AAA Syracuse of the International League.

He was recalled from Syracuse on July 23 after completing a rehabilitation assignment for an admitted alcohol problem.

"They're in a pennant race, just like we are," Musselman said. "From what I saw of them on TV, I liked their attitude, all the high-fiving and stuff. If there's anything this team might have been missing, it was the exuberance."

During a spring-training game, Musselman hit the Mets' Darryl Strawberry with a pitch, triggering a bench-clearing brawl. Strawberry charged the mound, but Musselman fled toward third.

After the incident, Johnson said Musselman "ran like a scalded dog."

"Time has a way of healing things," Johnson joked after the trade. "Usually those things happen on the spur of the moment."

Said Strawberry: "It's all over with. When someone becomes your teammate, you don't worry about something that happened in spring training."

Reuss, 40, went from the White Sox to Milwaukee for minor-league pitcher Brian Drahman. The Brewers are four games behind Baltimore in the AL East, while Chicago is in last place in the AL West.

Reuss was 8-5 despite a 5.06 ERA for the White Sox. He is 219-187 lifetime in 21 seasons.

"We were looking to improve our overall pitching depth," Brewers general manager Harry Dalton said. "Reuss gives you six or seven good innings. He keeps you in the ball game."

ACC Kickoff ...

ics) the Heels are down to four tailbacks, two of whom are freshman. The wide receiver spot is also thin with three on scholarship, not including four incoming freshmen.

Tripp is up to 268 pounds and will be at defensive tackle. He started at noseguard last year until suffering an injury against Auburn.

At Clemson, Ford said Ashley Sheppard from North Pitt will be on the defensive line. Sheppard, a 6-5, 249-pound freshman, spent a year at Fork Union Military Prep School in Virginia after signing with the Tigers and has four years of eligibility remaining.

Intriguing Matchups Dot ACC Schedule

Several intriguing matchups involving ACC teams are listed on this year's schedule, beginning with Virginia taking on defending national champion Notre Dame in the annual Kickoff Classic in East Rutherford, N.J. on Aug. 31.

The game is a sellout.

The Cavaliers also travel to Penn State before opening conference play at Georgia Tech.

Maryland faces one of the more rugged starts of any team in the country, facing five successive teams that appeared in a bowl game last year and are preseason top-20 picks. The Terps open at N.C. State, then host West Virginia and Mid-American Conference champion Western Michigan before hitting the road for four straight games. That string begins with stops at ACC favorite Clemson and Big 10 favorite Michigan.

Maryland will also battle Penn State later in the season in Baltimore.

"We've got to jump in against the two preseason conference picks, N.C. State and Clemson, very early in our schedule, then you sprinkle in there a team that played for the national championship, West Virginia, then throw in the MAC conference champion Western Michigan and Michigan who some people are picking as one of the top four or five teams in the nation," Krivac said.

"It's the type of schedule that gives us a tremendous amount of opportunity because, if we're good enough, it will put us right back where we want to be. It certainly offers us a tremendous challenge."

Duke, which is not accustomed to large crowds even at home, will travel to Williams-Brice Stadium (72,430) to meet South Carolina and Neyland Stadium (91,110) to face Tennessee.

N.C. State opens with four consecutive conference tests, three of which are at Carter-Finley Stadium. In fact, five of the Wolfpack's first six games are at home.

The two smallest football-playing Division I schools will meet when Rice comes to Wake Forest on Sept. 30.

Williams said the number of candidates was pleasing with about 50 out for the varsity. "I'm not sure that we'll keep that many," he said. "Most showed up in pretty good shape."

For Craft, the early start didn't matter much. He worked as an assistant in the East-West All-Star game in Greensboro. "I've been working for a week and a half, so it didn't matter," he said.

 North-South's holdings in the two black suits are almost identical. But there is just enough difference between the two to make the choice of which to develop crucial. Choose the right one and you're a hero.

North-South were using the old 22-24 point range for their no trump opening bids. North trotted out the Stayman Convention to check for a possible 4-4 spade fit, then settled in three no trump when South denied a four-card major.

The queen of diamonds opening lead got the defense off to their best start because it attacked dummy's only entry. There were eight fast tricks, and either black suit could produce the ninth. The trouble was that, after the lead, declarer could not afford to pick the wrong suit to try to establish. The moment he surrendered a trick, the defenders would knock out the table's entry.

It might seem there is little to choose between the suits, but that is not so. A careful review of the spot cards reveals the club suit offers far better prospects than spades. Declarer can develop an extra spade trick if the suit breaks 3-3 or if East has a doubleton honor. The clubs offer an extra chance. In addition to an even split, you develop a third club trick when either defender holds a doubleton honor.

So declarer won the king of diamonds, cashed the A K of clubs and, when the jack dropped, the nine forced the queen and set up the ten as the game-going trick.

A&T Students Star In Film About Greensboro Sit-Ins

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREENSBORO — A son of a participant in 1960 sit-ins that helped spark the civil rights movement says white students don't understand what blacks went through under segregation and he hopes a film he is helping make will help inform them.

"Some white students don't really understand how blacks suffered through those years," said Jim West, a 12-year-old from Raleigh who is taking part in the making of a 15-minute film on the 1960 sit-ins at the downtown Woolworth counter.

"I think this will really be provocative and inform whites and blacks," said Jim, whose father, James West, attended N.C. A&T in 1960 and participated in the demonstrations.

The film about the sit-in on Feb. 1, 1960, staged by four N.C. A&T State University students, will be shown to North Carolina eighth-graders beginning in October.

The sit-in story is the second segment of a three-part film titled "We The People of North Carolina." The first vignette, a re-creation of the 1917 fight for women's suffrage, was filmed Saturday at the Old Capitol in Raleigh. The third, dealing with the state's conflict about seceding from the Union, is scheduled for filming at the Duke Homestead in Durham Tuesday.

The producer of the film said he hoped black and white students alike are inspired by what they see.

"I want students to realize this was about people like themselves," said Steven Channing, a Chapel Hill filmmaker and historian. "Those four freshmen from A&T who gave each other the courage to come in here that day really started something."

But Don Penven, who portrays the Woolworth manager, said students are not well-taught when it comes to state history. He said some students, when they were auditioning, could not even pronounce "segregation."

"That's a shame," Penven said.

After being told that only white people could eat hamburgers and drink milkshakes at the downtown Woolworth lunch counter in 1960, Katherine Rogers, a 12-year-old from Raleigh, was puzzled.

"You mean black people couldn't even come in here?" she asked.

"Sure they could, to wash the floors," Jim replied.

By 2:30 p.m., Jim had said his line about black people scrubbing floors nearly a dozen times. Yet he and the other students — all seventh- and eighth-graders from Greensboro, Winston-Salem and Raleigh — perked up each time they heard "ready on the set."

Katherine Rogers, a rising seventh-grader at Daniels Middle School, said the film is good and has made her think more about race relations.

Ima Edwards is a waitress in the film. But she doesn't need the film to think about race relations. She was working the bakery counter in 1960 when the students entered.

"You would have had to live through it to know what was taking place," she said in a between-takes interview. "This is not really like reliving it because this is nothing like what it really was."

Eight Performers Quit Chinese Opera

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — Eight performers who fled a Chinese opera company may seek political asylum in the United States, and some in the Chinese community predicted the episode would put a chill in U.S.-Chinese cultural exchanges.

The eight, including a Shanghai opera star, apparently were weighing other options besides asylum. The Bush Administration has offered one-year blanket visa extensions to all Chinese citizens who were in the country on or before June 5.

"I think at this moment they fear making a wrong move — whether they should seek political asylum or use other reasons to remain here," said Jeff Shia, president of the Kiangsu Chekiang Association, a non-profit group that helps new Chinese immigrants establish themselves in the city.

The performers left the 28-member Shanghai Opera while the company was in San Francisco en route to Shanghai last week after a series of performances in the United States.

Wang Shaohua, an official with China's consulate in San Francisco, said those who fled "were instigated by people with motives to bring damage to China."

Immigration officials in San Francisco said they had not been contacted by the performers and did not know whether the group planned to defect.

The San Francisco Chronicle reported today that it would be the biggest single defection of Chinese citizens since the 1950s.

Cable Series Looks At Child Growth During Early Years

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — The message of Dr. T. Berry Brazelton's new cable series on child development is: Let the child guide the parent.

For the Lifetime Network series, called "What Every Baby Knows: The First Three Years," cameras followed the development of 12 children for one year. The 39 half-hour shows will premiere on Lifetime on Saturday.

"I was very aware of how hungry parents were for answers to the issues that they expressed through worries about toilet training, thumb sucking, but underlying that are much more deep-seated need for support and understanding and a cultural commitment to what they're doing," Brazelton said in a telephone interview from his summer home on Cape Cod. The pediatrician has been helping mothers with their children in a show on Lifetime for six years.

"The thing I want to achieve is to have mothers watch their babies and learn what their babies are trying to tell them. If the parents watch they can learn."

Called this generation's Dr. Benjamin Spock, Brazelton is a clinical professor of pediatrics at Harvard Medical School, professor of pediatrics and child development at Boston University, and founder and chief of the Development Unit at Boston Children's Hospital Medical Center.

"Here's a pediatrician who's 70 years old, with one foot in the past and one foot in the future," said Chuck Bangert, who produces the series with Lou Gorfain and Hank O'Karma.

"Dr. Brazelton is very practical. His contention is that a baby basically will tell you what's wrong."

"The basic thrust of the show is to trust your own instincts," said Gorfain.

"We picked 12 families and mostly tell the story of their office visits to Dr. Brazelton," said Gorfain, noting that the cameras also show the children at home.

Four children are featured in each age group: newborn to age 1, a time of discovery; "the terrible twos" when they develop a sense of self; and the third year, a time of growing autonomy and socialization.

The families selected represent various ethnic and economic groups, as well as a couple on the verge of divorce, a single-parent family, a multi-generation family, working mothers and mothers at home.

"The way people are willing to share their anxieties, their concerns, their stresses, and let down their defenses in front of a camera is incredible to me," said Dr. Brazelton.

Bangert said Brazelton is a hero to many mothers. "Women in a Playboy magazine poll selected him as the man they'd most want to be shipwrecked with. Airline stewardesses always seat him in first class because they want to talk to him...."

"He believes in setting more limits for children than Spock. In fact, the most common question he gets is about setting limits. But he doesn't advocate spanking. He says if you spank a child, when he gets older he will strike someone who displeases him. He's also a great advocate of grandparents. He says children should have a safe place where they can occasionally escape some of the restrictions."

The producers passed on other advice from Dr. Brazelton: Don't worry if the child doesn't eat vegetables, as long as the child gets milk and multivitamins. Peer pressure will stop bed-wetting quicker than anything else.

Bangert and Gorfain, who have won six Emmys, have also produced "The Body Human" for CBS and "Trackdown," a special about the "Green River killer" in Washington state. Gorfain said two viewers have led authorities to a major suspect in the serial killings.

They're producing a show for ABC about hunting down parole violators, with Avery Brooks as the host; "Code I," an ABC pilot about emergency medical services with Pernel Roberts as host, and a CBS movie giving a fictionalized account of two producers doing a special about a serial killer.

The opera company performed at the Palace of Fine Arts, in San Francisco, on June 30 and July 1-2, said Kevin O'Brien, a spokesman for the theater.

The company then went New York for four performances. After the group returned to San Francisco last week, eight performers disappeared over two days. The opera company flew back to Shanghai without them Thursday.

The first group of four disappeared last Tuesday during a farewell party in Chinatown given by the Chinese community.

They apparently said they were going shopping.

"Nobody suspected anything until midnight when the rest of the group searched their rooms and found the suitcases were empty," said Shia, who was at the party and said he is friends with some of the opera singers.

Opera members called the Chinese consulate after discovering the performers were missing, and were told to go to the consulate to discuss the matter immediately, Shia said.

Three of the four opera members who went to the consulate went into hiding shortly thereafter and were joined by another member later Wednesday morning, according to Shia.

Included in the group who remained here was Hua Wen-Yi, a famous opera singer in Shanghai, said Leonard Lee, editor of the Chinese Times, a Chinese language daily newspaper in San Francisco.

"Everybody in Shanghai knows her," Lee said.
