Knowles Says City Near Magical Count Of 50,000

By J. Ward Best
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The magic population count for Greenville — 50,000 — hangs just within reach, according to City Manager Greg Knowles. "We're close enough that we could go either way," Knowles said. With a population of 50,000 or more, Greenville stands to gain more money from the state and federal governments in community block grants. As an urban area with a 50,000 population, Greenville would no longer have to compete with other cities for grants from the government; the monies are guaranteed to entitlement cities.

"There's additional funding — lots of additional funding," Knowles said.

A larger population will also give the city greater respectability in the eyes of the business community.

According to Knowles, businesses such as the Red Lobster restaurant chain usually will not consider locating in cities with populations less than 50,000.

The upcoming population census, which begins in January, will officially determine the numbers within the city limits, and what benefits, if any, Greenville will receive.

"We're getting close," Knowles said.

Reaching 50,000 depends on the real growth of the population and the final count of students and minorities, the city manager said.

Knowles said the city did not plan any large annexations before the census begins, and the internal population growth will show the biggest increase.

Increases in the faculty and students at East Carolina University "is a good sign for the census," Knowles said.

He said he wasn't sure how the census would count students living on campus, but he said students living out in the city would be counted as part of the population.

"Obviously, it would be better if all the students claim Greenville as

Dean Strengthens To Hurricane Status

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — Tropical Storm Dean's 50 mph winds were expected to strengthen as it moved westward toward the Leeward Islands, the storm's first brush with land since it began its trek across the Atlantic, forecasters said.

"It's in an area that's somewhat favorable for continued strengthening," said forecaster Jere Gallup of the National Hurricane Center in suburban Coral Gables.

The latest reconnaissance and satellite tracking, at 10:30 p.m. EDT Tuesday, put Dean near latitude 16.8 north, longitude 55.0 west, or about 425 miles east of the Leeward Islands. The storm was moving west-northwest at about 18 mph and was expected to maintain its course and strengthen, forecasters said.

"It's in a warm weather environment and it's had a fairly prolonged over-the-water trajectory so far," Gallup added. Storms often weaken when they pass over land.

Forecasters said tropical storm warnings were likely to be issued for the Leeward Islands early today.

Like last year's Hurricane Gilbert, Dean is a Cape Verde storm, so called because it formed off the west coast of Africa.

"When we see a hurricane like that we realize that it has the potential to move all the way across the Atlantic and threaten the southeastern United States," said hurricane center forecaster Miles Lawrence.

While Dean is in a good position to strengthen, there are some factors working against its development, Gallup said.

Iran Reported Pressing For Life Of U.S. Hostage

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Iran is believed to have pressured pro-Iranian militants to put off killing American hostage Joseph Cicippio, and the chance his life will be spared has increased, Shiite Moslem sources said today.

The group holding Cicippio, the Revolutionary Justice Organization, said it would kill him Tuesday at 11 a.m. EDT unless Israel had freed Sheik Abdul Karim Obeid, a Shiite Moslem cleric kidnapped by Israeli commandos July 28. It then extended the deadline 48 hours.

Israel's defense minister, Yitzhak Rabin, today defended the abduction and said the Cabinet considered the dangers to hostages in Lebanon before approving it. He repeated Israel's offer to swap Obeid and Lebanese Shiite Moslem prisoners held in Israel for Israeli soldiers and foreigners held in Lebanon.

The pro-Iranian Hezbollah, of which Obeid is reported to be a leader, has rejected a swap.

President Bush, faced with his most serious foreign policy challenge, consulted world leaders, including Pope John Paul II, and met with his Cabinet twice in 24 hours.

The pope agreed to intervene to seek the return to the United States of the body of Marine Lt. Col. William R. Higgins, reportedly hanged Monday by a Shiite Moslem group.

West Germany said today it had contacted Iran and Syria on the United States' behalf. France also asked countries that might have influence over groups holding hostages to try to ensure the captives' safety.

Iran is the financial and spiritual backer of Hezbollah, or Party of God, the fundamentalist faction believed to be the umbrella for groups holding most of the 16 foreign hostages in Lebanon, including eight Americans.

Shiite sources in Lebanon, speaking on condition they not be further identified, said they believed Iran may have stepped in to save Cicippio after the international uproar over Higgins' reported execution by the Organization of the Oppressed on Earth.

Cicippio, 58, was acting controller of the American University of Beirut when he was kidnapped Sept. 12, 1986.

"The Iranians probably are bringing immense pressure on their Lebanese surrogates, seeking to defuse the crisis generated by Higgins' murder," one Shiite source in Lebanon said, speaking on condition he not be identified.

The source noted that Revolutionary Justice has used death threats in the past to back political demands but never has killed a hostage.

On March 12, 1987, the group said it would kill French hostage Jean-Louis Normandin unless France stopped sending arms to Iraq, which was fighting a war with Iran.

The group announced three postponements and finally canceled the death threat March 25. Normandin was freed Nov. 27, 1987.

In announcing the extension for Cicippio, the Revolutionary Justice Organization acknowledged a plea from Cicippio's Lebanese wife, Elham, and cited "friendly appeals and sincere behests."

Piedmont Jet Lands Safely

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREENSBORO — A Piedmont Airlines jet carrying 101 passengers made an emergency landing here today with its left wing and engine scraping the runway after pilots were unable to lower the left landing gear.

A shower of sparks erupted from the left side of Flight 1489 bound from Washington to Charlotte in a dramatic landing seen live on statewide television.

Passengers were evacuated on escape slides from the left side of the aircraft, said Piedmont spokesman David Shipley. There were no reports of serious injuries, Shipley said.

The plane was due to land at 9:30 a.m. at Charlotte but was diverted to Greensboro after a light on the jet's instrument panel showed the landing gear wasn't locked, Shipley said. The jet landed at Greensboro about 11 a.m.

The flight was diverted to Greensboro because Piedmont's maintenance hangar was located there, said Piedmont spokeswoman Susan Young.

Ms. Young said the new 737 was carrying 101 passengers and a crew of five or six.

Pitt Schools Projecting Yearly Growth

By Kevin Boughal
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Pitt County school system is one of the 36 systems in the state that will experience a growth in student population over the next five years, according to projections released recently by the N.C. Department of Public Instruction.

Although the report did not say exactly how much the Pitt schools are expected to grow, Barry Gaskins, public relations director for the school system, said Pitt expects a growth of about 200 new students each year in the system.

At the end of the 1988-89 school year, there were 16,755 students in the system, according to Gaskins.

The Department of Public Instruction uses the number of births and the amount of expected in-county migration, as well as the number of people expected to leave the area and the average retention rates for each grade, to decide whether a school system is growing or not.

The population projections are important to the school systems because they use the projections to decide what will be needed in the future relative to personnel and facilities.

"The population has a tremendous effect on the school system," said Gaskins. "We take the population projections and build everything around that. We have a ten-year long-range plan that will determine what we will need in the future and where to build."

After formulating the 10-year plan, the school board asked the Pitt County Board of Commissioners on July 24 for a $25.7 million bond referendum to help the school system keep up with the area growth.

According to the Department of Public Instruction, the school systems that will grow the most are located in the middle of the state and

House Leaves Pay In Confusing State

By John Bare
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The state House ran a $1.4 billion spending bill through a blender of amendments Tuesday night, and the action helped shred any understanding of what type of pay raise legislators approved for themselves.

After a session that ran past midnight, all reports agree that the House rejected proposed pay raises of 50 percent and 35 percent, with House Speaker Joe Mavretic, D-Edgemont, casting the tie-breaking vote to thwart the 35 percent pay hike. But the rest was unclear today.

Last week the General Assembly approved a 6 percent pay raise for teachers and state employees, and that bill also upped lawmakers' salaries 6 percent, to just over $12,000 a year.

Despite the many amendments offered Tuesday, several people said state lawmakers are now in line to receive the same 6 percent pay increase as other state employees, but the legislative pay raise will not take effect until 1991.

"They tried a couple of times, but they did not pass any increases (over the 6 percent)," said Rep. Ed Warren, D-Pitt. "I voted against those raises because I did not think we should do that. When I ran for election I knew what my salary was.

"To the best of my knowledge, today it will be just like it was with the rest of the state employees," he said.

Warren said there was still some lobbying among lawmakers, and the pay issue may not be dead.

"I voted against it, and I'll do it again," he said.

Rep. Gene Rogers, D-Pitt, said the final bill calls for 6 percent raises for lawmakers who take office in 1991. They will receive another 6 percent raise in 1992, he said.

However, Tim Kent, spokesman for Mavretic, said the pay raise will take effect this year and in 1990.

Denise Wilson, a House clerk, said she was unsure of the final House action.

"It was real confusing," she said.

Grace Collins, also a House clerk, said she believes the final bill reverted the pay raise proposal back to the 6 percent increase all state employees will receive. That also matches the raise proposed earlier in a Senate spending bill, she said.

"It just puts it back in the same order Senate Bill 44 was in when it came to us. I think that makes it $12,000 and something," she said.

House clerks worked into the early morning hours, she said, and there was still unfinished business.

"I feel like I'm still churning. We went on so long last night, and I haven't had a chance to sit down and analyze it (the bill). We're sort of groggy this morning."

Board Revokes Psychiatrist's License

The North Carolina Board of Medical Examiners has revoked the license of a Greenville psychiatrist for prescribing a "mind-altering chemical" for himself in violation of a previous board order.

The board found that Dr. Robert R. Ratcliffe III, 56, admitted he had prescribed the drug for himself. Ratcliffe is a 1965 graduate of the University of Virginia School of Medicine.

Ratcliffe was put on probation in 1985 after the board found that he had admitted to having a sexual relationship with two women who were former patients. One condition of the probation was that he abstain from using any mind-altering drugs unless they were prescribed by another doctor.

In an order signed June 19, the board revoked Ratcliffe's permanent license and issued him a temporary, one-year license on the condition that he agree to have his medical practice monitored by the board.

Ratcliffe must also complete 50 hours of continuing medical education and have records on 20 patients reviewed when he meets with the board in May.

In a separate matter, the board accepted the medical license surrendered by Dr. Harry H. McLean III, a 61-year-old Greenville practitioner. McLean surrendered his license voluntarily, and the board did not release information on the action.

McLean, who surrendered the license effective July 24, is a 1953 graduate of Washington University School of Medicine.

In other action, The Associated Press said the board revoked the license of a Pinehurst doctor who performed surgery on the wrong hip of an 89-year-old woman.

The board found that orthopedic surgeon Ronald H. Patterson, 46, had failed to consult the woman's medical chart or X-rays before doing surgery on her left hip. In a statement released Tuesday, the board revoked his license effective July 5.

According to the news service, the board found that Patterson had drilled a hole in the left hip and inserted a screw before a nurse discovered the mistake during surgery in 1987 on Sallie T. Hunt at Moore Regional Hospital in Pinehurst.

The doctor removed the screws and closed the hip wound before operating as intended on the right hip, the board found, but he did not fully inform the patient's daughter how far he had gone in the mistaken surgery and did not fully describe it in his medical notes.

Several days after the patient was discharged she returned to the emergency room with a fracture in the left hip, the board said.

In a hearing before the board June 23, Patterson said the fracture was probably caused by a fall, according to the AP. He said that drilling holes in the hip and then removing the screws would not necessarily weaken the hip enough to cause a break.

The board said Patterson's actions were not in accord with the standards of acceptable medicine in North Carolina.

Jaycee Awards

Farmville Board Agrees To Join Two Subdivisions

FARMVILLE — The Board of Commissioners agreed Tuesday to participate in the development and improvement of two local subdivisions.

The board approved a motion stipulating that work on improvements in Clairmont subdivision must begin within 15 months and be completed in three and a half years.

In addition, the board said 60 percent of the lots in Clairmont should be sold before participation in the second phase of improvements begins.

The board agreed to take part in the development of the Mayfield subdivision, in accordance with the residential development policy, in an amount up to $100,000 for street development.

Joe Joyner, an agent for the Tabitha M. DeVisconti Trust, requested at a July 19 workshop meeting that the town participate in Phase I of the subdivision which contains 19 lots.

Fire Chief John Baker discussed with the board at the July workshop the need for a new fire station. The board agreed Tuesday to utilize the East Group architectural company for building expansion plans involving the existing facility and will proceed as soon as possible.

The board voted to replace the curb and gutter along Grimmsburg Street for improvements to the drainage system and will have the work contracted.

Marriage Conference

A First Marriage Conference with the theme "A Healing of Marriages" is being conducted this week at Holy Mission United Holy Church, 1811 S. Pitt St.

Coordinated by Dr. Shirley Atkinson, the conference began Tuesday and will continue through Saturday with workshops at 10 a.m. each day. Evening lectures will be at 7 p.m. each day through Friday with a fellowship dinner schedule at 6 p.m. Saturday.

Speakers include: today, Leo Edwards and wife; Thursday, Dr. Patrick Welch and family, and Friday, Jim McManus and his wife, both of Ayden. Speakers at the Saturday dinner will be pastors Alonzo and Catherine St. Clair of Washington, N.C.

At the July 18 town planning board meeting, a motion was adopted to recommend a public hearing to adopt amendments to the subdivision regulations. The town board Tuesday set a public hearing on the matter for the September meeting.

The board approved an amendment to the Traffic Control and Parking Ordinance to include "no parking" on the east side of South Walnut Street for a distance of 60 feet, instead of 120 feet as requested by the police department.

In other business, the board approved: the relocation of power lines along N.C. 258 North; an amendment of Chapter 16, personnel, adding the Friday after Thanksgiving to the holiday schedule and to consider sick leave time as hours worked in computing payment of overtime, and the installation of speed bumps on Cameron Street in the vicinity of Bennett Park.

The board authorized the mayor to establish a committee to evaluate the current service by Alert Cable T.V.

Two items tabled for study by the board at a workshop session set for Sept. 20 included electrical rates and approval of fees for utilities, public works, library and recreation and parks departments.

The program, now in its ninth year, is designed to give local educators an introduction to the free enterprise system and to provide practical experience in the way the system works.

The program consists of a group of educators interviewed and selected by school administrators. It involves three days of classroom orientation with subjects being taught by local business men and women and actual work time at an industry/business site for three to five days.

Teachers who participate receive three renewal credits toward recertification. Classroom phases were held at Du Pont, Burroughs Wellcome, and Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Bush May Dangle Tax Incentives As Inducement For More Savings

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration is planning a fall offensive to call attention to the chronically low U.S. savings rate, with officials holding out the possibility that thrifty Americans will be rewarded with increased tax incentives.

Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady, aides said, will kick off the campaign with a series of speeches outlining the risks to America's global competitive position from low savings rates, which drive up the cost of capital for U.S. businesses.

The personal savings rate, savings as a percent of after-tax income, fell to a 40-year low of 3.2 percent in 1987 and increased only slightly to 4.2 percent last year.

By contrast, the savings rate in Japan was 16.5 percent in 1987.

The administration is looking at a variety of possible solutions to the problem, ranging from broadening the tax savings offered by Individual Retirement Accounts to eliminating the double taxation on corporate dividends.

The trouble is that such proposals to offer tax breaks to people who save would mean a tax loss of billions of dollars when the federal government is already straining to reduce huge budget deficits.

But officials said it was likely that the administration would offer some changes in U.S. tax law for Congress to consider.

Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan, testifying Tuesday before the Senate Banking Committee, called boosting the low U.S. savings rate "the crucial issue for the long-term economic outlook of the country."

Economists have long warned that the low personal savings rates, combined with the large federal budget deficits, were driving up interest rates in the United States and making it more expensive for U.S. businesses to borrow money needed to expand and modernize.

Greenspan, as he has done in the past, urged Congress to make reducing the federal budget deficit a top priority. But he said lawmakers should also consider ways to boost personal savings to expand the pool of available capital.

The Fed chairman noted that between the Civil War and World War I, America had the highest savings rate in the world, which helped supply the capital needed to transform the country into an industrial giant.

While the personal savings rate had rebounded somewhat to 5.5 percent during the first six months of this year, Greenspan said more must be done to push the rate higher.

Greenspan said officials at the Federal Reserve, the Treasury Department and the president's Council of Economic Advisers were studying a variety of legislative proposals to boost savings, including the possibility of making changes in financial markets that would favor savers.

Treasury Undersecretary Robert R. Glauber said in an interview that the administration had a task force reviewing the savings issue and that one option being considered was revamping IRA accounts, which were scaled back in the 1986 tax law.

Also being studied, Glauber said, are ways to eliminate the tax code inequity that makes it cheaper for corporations to borrow to finance expansions than to issue stock.

If a corporation raises capital by borrowing, it can deduct its interest payments. But if it sells stock and distributes dividends on its profits, both it and the shareholders are taxed on those profits.

Glauber said Brady would frame the issue in a series of speeches this fall as part of an overall need in America to focus more on long-term goals. He said the administration's push for a reduction in the capital gains rate would be included as one of the changes needed to lower the cost of capital to businesses.

Little School Issues Dare To Big Cousins

ROTHSAY, Minn. — This northwestern Minnesota town with 250 students is challenging larger districts in the state to top its attendance record and graduation rate.

Rothsay, in fact, is willing to give $500 in scholarship money to the first three districts that can top its accomplishments. The challenge is aimed at districts with more than 4,000 students.

"We've been listening to things like, 'Bigger is better,'" said Tom Fosse, a school board member and president of the Rothsay Community Development Corp., which is providing the money. "We're saying maybe that's not true."

Rothsay is issuing the challenge in response to a legislative auditor's report issued in December saying some of the state's smallest school districts are not providing students with a good education and should be phased out.

"When you read the report, it just sounds like we're doing such a terrible job with our young folks," said DuWayne Balken, chairman of the school board. "We believe that's not true at all. They're very well prepared."

School districts accepting the challenge must meet or exceed Rothsay's record in average daily attendance and graduation rates over the last three school years.

The challenge also includes the rate of extracurricular participation, the percentage of high school graduates who entered a post-secondary school and the percentage that earned degrees from a four-year institution, all during the last three years.

School officials are confident even though they haven't checked numbers to see how Rothsay has fared in those categories.

"We know they're high," Fosse said. "We're confident that we'll stack up well. We're waiting for a challenge."

Over & Over

House Bill Sneers At The East

The State House of Representatives version of the expansion budget package should demonstrate to easterners one thing — despite radical changes in leadership, nothing in Raleigh has improved for northeastern North Carolina.

At the beginning of the session, a revolt led by Rep. Joe Mavretic D-Edgecombe, caused the unseating of long time speaker Liston Ramsey. Installed in his place, through a coalition of rebelling Democrats and Republicans, was Mavretic himself.

After months of a sometimes tense, too-long session, out comes an expansion budget package. What is included for East Carolina University? Only $1.3 million in planning money for a $24 million addition to Joyner Library. Zero money for a proposed conference center.

How could this be in an expansion budget package under a House speaker who lives only 20 miles from the ECU campus? Doesn't he understand the pressing need for the library expansion ... and how about the benefits of a regional conference center to the East — including his own district?

The House bill has the effect of once again sneering at eastern aspirations and needs. The region is being told that while these things are perfectly acceptable elsewhere, they are too good for it. The difference is that this time it happened under an eastern speaker.

The already approved Senate version, while nothing to turn cartwheels about, does better. It includes $6.5 million for the library project and $2 million for the first part of the regional conference center.

The battle is not yet lost. The Senate and House bills have to go to conference and hopefully the Senate version will prevail on ECU expansion budget spending. Otherwise eastern taxpayers will continue to send their dollars to Raleigh only to see them converted into dazzling edifices of splendor — but far removed from eastern North Carolina.

Shadows

No Specifics On Bloch Incident

Spying is a mysterious, shadowy game which involves secret agents pursuing equally shadowy suspects.

At times however, spying investigations involve high public officials and the allegations become subjects of public discussions.

Such is the case of Felix S. Bloch, a United States diplomat of many years experience, who served as the No. 2 officer in the U.S. Austrian embassy for five years.

Bloch is so far a suspect who is reportedly under investigation by the FBI. The State Department has acknowledged that Bloch is on a paid leave and his diplomatic passport has been lifted. The Justice Department is saying nothing about the case, yet the question of spying brought statements of concerns from President Bush.

What's going on? No one is offering specifics. Bloch is not charged or indicted but sources say that is to be expected while the FBI and the Justice Department build a case. Other experts say if there is a breach of security it is a large one and it would have major effects on U.S. diplomatic secrets.

It's natural to feel that the Justice Department should move quickly to clear up the mystery and the public should know whether its security has been damaged.

Yet it is necessary to move with caution in this matter to properly build a case if an indictment is to be sought. Individual rights must be protected and it is also in the public interest that proper evidence be obtained to correctly prosecute a case.

It is a difficult and trying time for the administration and the country and the facts should be carefully unraveled. At the same time, no effort should be spared to determine how much national security has been breached. The security of the United States' diplomacy is paramount and the nation must do everything possible to protect it.

'How could this be in an expansion budget package under a House speaker who lives only 20 miles from the ECU campus?'

Public Forum

To the editor:

Well our good old buddy, Israel, has stuck it to us again. Seeing public opinion running against them for refusing to try to reach a peaceful settlement with Palestinians, they decided to stir up some more trouble.

Their little raid last Friday, which they bragged about all over the world, did the trick. Now all hell has broken loose, one hostage hanged and maybe more today.

Have you ever stopped to think why our people were taken hostage? It all started with Israel's invasion of Lebanon, with our full support and our dollars footing the bill. We lost 240 Marines, had our embassy blown up and have had hostages taken at will ever since.

Headlines today, "Israel Not Blamed For Higgins' Death." The propaganda mill is already at work. I didn't see any quotes from our Senator Helms as yet, but am sure we will, since he has become the lead dog in any Israeli cause since 1984.

The last thing Israel wants in the Middle East is peace. Since 1950 that area has been kept in turmoil by Israel. They have milked the Holocaust for every dime it's worth, so they have to keep stirring up trouble in order to justify the billions and billions we give them each year.

We have lost respect from the rest of the world who see us as Israel's puppet, jumping at their every command. Israel brags that they own our congress and it sure looks that way. Where Israel is concerned we've become known as Uncle Sucker!

To the editor:

On July 27, Ellen Goodman again defends a woman's choice to abort but she any mentions the life in the womb by implication, apparently hoping to avoid any serious discussion on the subject. When talking about unnamed pro-life leaders, she says "If their view - that a fertilized egg is a human life - becomes law, then RU-486, along with the IUD and certain other birth-control pills, would be illegal."

Her statement has two serious errors, the most notable is the implication that a fertilized human egg is not a human life. Any student of biology can tell her that (1) it is human, since all creatures reproduce their own kind, (2) it is a unique, new life because it's genetic makeup is distinctly different from either of its parents, and (3) it is alive because it is dividing cells and growing by its own impetus.

Her second error is to fail to recognize other possible options besides making abortion "illegal." Our country made a serious mistake when we made alcohol illegal. We are repeating the same mistake now by making mood-altering drugs illegal. We don't have to make still another mistake by making abortions illegal.

What we do need is a truthful admittance that every abortion kills a young human being. We must then work together to find ways to eliminate the need for abortions. "Unwanted pregnancy" is a situation that need not exist. This is an area where we can all direct our passions toward the same goal.

To the editor:

Your editorial of July 18, "No Bargain," contained so many factual as well as perceptual errors that I must set the record straight.

First, North Carolina has not made any deals with anyone to allow drilling off our coast next spring. Rather, the state has entered into a precedent-setting Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) that specifies a series of steps and documents that the Minerals Management Service (MMS) and Mobil must meet.

If they are met satisfactorily, we have agreed to make a decision around April 15, 1989, on whether Mobil's exploration plan is consistent with our coastal management program.

If the steps and document are unsatisfactory, the state has retained the right to (1) sue for a traditional Environmental Impact Statement (2) sue to try to have the lease canceled on the grounds of serious harm to the environment, or (3) find the plan inconsistent pursuant to the Coastal Zone management Act.

We have secured a guaranteed environmental review process that calls for a careful look at what environmental impacts our coastal area might experience from exploratory drilling. No other avenue — either litigation or Congressman Walter Jones' amendment — guaranteed such a review.

If the goal is to stop Mobil completely from drilling, the law simply does not provide the state with the tools to accomplish that goal unless we have positive proof that drilling will seriously harm our resources. Even then it is extremely difficult. However, the attorney general and I have stated repeatedly that if evidence points to such harm, we will take all available steps to attempt to stop it.

If the goal is to try and learn as much about this activity and its impact as possible and exert as much control as possible, then the MOU provides the state with a superior process to maximize citizen comment and control the circumstances under which exploratory drilling might be allowed.

Submissions to the Public Forum should consist of no more than 300 words and should deal with public issues. The editor reserves the right to cut longer letters. Signatures, addresses and phone numbers should accompany all letters.

To the editor:

Your June 23 editorial mistakenly said Mobil and the Minerals Management Service (MMS) of the Interior Department insist drilling of Mobil's proposed exploratory will proceed without "any kind of environmental impact study." Your readers should be aware an EIS covering the exploratory phase of Outer Continental Shelf (OCS) projects is conducted prior to making leases available to industry on a sealed bid basis. This was done before OCS Sale 56 in 1981 and the state of North Carolina and general public had ample opportunity to participate in that process. Other EIS's were conducted in 1983 and 1985 and another is being prepared now for the proposed OCS Sale 121.

On July 14, the MMS signed a Memorandum of Understanding with the state that will lead to an extensive environmental report for the project. Surely those who are serious about their expressed concern for adequate environmental review of Mobil's exploration plan must be satisfied in receiving an additional unprecedented study.

You also implied offshore drilling poses a threat to fishing and tourism. Today about 65 nations have offshore operations that provide about one-fourth of worldwide oil production. I know of not one case where fishing or tourism has been negatively affected by those operations. The western and central gulf of Mexico, where our offshore industry is concentrated, is the most productive fishing region in the nation. It provides about 40 percent of the U.S. commercial fish catch.

If a large natural gas reservoir exists off the coast of North Carolina, it can be developed safely. This resource could be a boon to the state's economy and could help in reducing air pollution associated with other energy sources. North Carolinians should realize that for economic and environmental reasons, Mobil's search for natural gas in the Atlantic 40 miles offshore North Carolina is in everyone's best interest.

An Atlas, Not A Road Map

WASHINGTON — The contributors constitute a virtual Who's Who of social science and race relations, the editors have done an exceptional job and the commitment of the sponsor — the National Research Council — is unassailable.

But the book, "A Common Destiny: Blacks and American Society," seems destined to become a 600-page, $2.7-million dust collector — more likely to furnish support for whatever theories you already cherished than to lead you to productive new ways of thinking about America's special problems of race and caste.

I suppose I'm saying nothing more than that "A Common Destiny" isn't the book I had hoped to read. I had hoped for a road map out of our racial dilemma. What the NRC has produced is an atlas.

It is a good atlas: an accurate, well-organized "big picture" of the changing status of black Americans over the past 50 years. And, to be fair about it, the four dozen participants did what they had been asked to do: "Marshall descriptive data on the changing position of blacks in American society since 1940; draw from the wealth of existing research to describe the cultural context, including an increasingly "complex framework of laws, policies, and institutions within which the observed changes have occurred."

But despite the painstaking, memory-evoking detail of periods grown dim in our minds, "Destiny" mostly tells us what we already know: that "the great gulf that existed between black and white Americans in 1939 has only been narrowed, not closed," that the economic status of blacks has improved and declined as the American economy has prospered or stagnated, that blacks still suffer discrimination, that black women are progressing faster than black men and that "full assimilation of blacks in a 'color-blind' society is unlikely in the foreseeable future."

I don't think it unfair to expect more from some of the brightest minds in America — John Hope Franklin of Duke, Nathan Glazer of Harvard, Charles V. Hamilton of Columbia, Glenn Loury of Harvard, Eleanor Holmes Norton of Georgetown, Thomas Pettigrew of California, William Julius Wilson of Chicago and scores of other academics, practitioners and researchers.

What's wrong with this book, more than three years in the making, aside from the fact that it isn't the book I would have preferred?

Three faults stand out in my mind. The first is the decision, prompted by a shortage of time and resources, to abandon the original plan of examining the changing status of other ethnic groups in America. Such a comparative study might have led to some conclusions as to which are the most fruitful avenues of progress or at least some discussion of why approaches that work for other groups haven't worked for blacks.

The second is that by focusing on the average status of blacks, the book misses the chance to explore the reasons for significant advances among some blacks and the simultaneous growth of the black underclass.

It is a bit like studying the mean temperature of Washington, D.C., as a guide for choosing a wardrobe. The averages don't tell you under what circumstances you need heavier clothes, when you need lighter ones and when you need to get out of town.

The third, perhaps critical, fault is that the book has no point of view. That flaw may be unavoidable, given the decision to enlist dozens of experts from so many philosophies and disciplines. If you recruit the top 47 chefs of the world to collaborate on a single meal, you shouldn't be surprised if the result is a sophisticated but not particularly memorable repast.

My disappointment is that these dozens of extraordinary minds could have labored for three years and produced scarcely a single insight. It's all very well for them to tell us where we've been, but I, for one, would appreciate a few suggestions on where we should go and the best way of getting there.

Panel OKs Electoral College Changes

By Martha Waggoner
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — North Carolina would get more attention from national political parties if it changed the way its representatives in the Electoral College vote for president, some lawmakers say.

The House Judiciary Committee voted 15-9 on Tuesday, mostly along party lines, to support a bill that would allow 11 of North Carolina's 13 electors to vote for the presidential candidate supported in their congressional districts. The other two would vote for the candidate who won the majority of votes statewide Currently, all of North Carolina's 13 electors vote for the statewide presidential winner, as do 48 other states. North Carolina would become the second state to change the voting procedure, behind Maine.

Rep. Harry Payne, D-New Hanover, told the House Judiciary Committee he didn't like North Carolina's "all-or-nothing process." Whether a winner gets 51 percent of the vote or 90 percent of the vote, he gets all of the Electoral College votes, Payne said.

Payne said he believed the change would bring more attention to North Carolina from Lee Atwater and Ron Brown, chairmen of the Republican and Democratic parties. The bill would encourage political parties "not to write it (North Carolina) off entirely" or assume they've won the state, he said.

But Rep. Paul Stam, R-Wake, said he believed the bill would have the opposite effect. He said party officials would know how most of the districts would vote and would not spend time campaigning in the state for the remaining few votes.

"I think the result will be that the national party pays no attention to North Carolina," Stam said.

Rep. David Balmer, R-Mecklenburg, said he believed the bill would divide the state, causing political parties to campaign in individual districts. "I think it's a step in the wrong direction," he said.

But Payne said he believed other states that "share the point of view that the voice of the people be accurately heard" will follow the lead of Maine and North Carolina.

Rep. Mickey Michaux, D-Durham, said he has been elected twice and has not been able to vote either time. "I think it puts a lot of mystery in there and makes people work harder," he said. Political parties will put "more emphasis on North Carolina to be sure they get all 13 votes."

The committee voted to give the bill a favorable report.

Hound Dog Bill Goes To Conferees

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A House-approved amendment is beginning to look like the tail that wags the state dog.

A bill once intended to make the Plott hound North Carolina's official dog came back from the House in a mongrel form that also calls for making it a felony to steal a dog.

The Senate voted Tuesday not to concur in the amendment, leaving it up to House and Senate conferees to resolve the dispute.

Sen. Jim Ezzell, D-Nash, had the strongest objections when the Senate Judiciary I Committee considered the bill, saying he'd voted against both the state dog and the felony provision. He said both are better off dead.

"Legislators have a hard enough time keeping our images shined and polished without succumbing to these various state items like the bugs and the rocks," he said.

Sen. Jim Johnson, R-Cabarrus, noted the bill would amend a chapter of the law governing cattle, pigs and other livestock. He asked whether sheep and goats should also be included.

Sen. Frank Ballance, D-Warren, proposed deleting dogs from a section that calls for restitution in the event of a theft. But Sen. Dan Simpson, R-Burke, said he has invested thousands of dollars in a dog that retrieves ducks.

"There are not many cows in Burke County that's worth as much as that dog," he said.

Sen. Fountain Odom, D-Mecklenburg, volunteered that he owns "a couple of $2,500 cats."

"Will your cats retrieve ducks?" quipped Sen. George Daniel, D-Caswell.

Johnson noted that the original House bill included in the package had called for making it a felony to steal cats as well as dogs. He suggested they might be reinserted when the conference committee meets.

Trooper's Home Hit By Firebomb

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — A North Carolina Highway Patrol trooper and his family were not injured after someone threw a firebomb into their apartment, the patrol said.

Trooper Michael A. McDonald, 26, was downstairs in his Charlotte apartment early Tuesday when a bottle containing a flammable liquid was tossed through a window into an occupied bedroom on the second floor, said patrol 1st Sgt. R.L. Puckett.

McDonald ran upstairs when he heard glass breaking and found the room in flames.

He then roused his wife and 4-month-old child, who were in another room upstairs, and ran from the apartment, Puckett said.

Puckett said McDonald was not involved in any undercover operations and had received no threats prior to the incident.

The Charlotte Fire Department's arson task force and the State Bureau of Investigation are looking into the firebombing, Puckett said. McDonald and his family were moved to an undisclosed location for safekeeping, he said.

Embezzlement

HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Hendersonville man serving a federal prison term in Florida for commodities fraud will be returned to North Carolina this week to face charges of embezzlement, authorities say.

Daniel Nelson Dewey, 46, will arrive Thursday from a federal prison in Tallahassee, Fla. He may make a first appearance in Henderson County Superior Court this week, but his trial will not be held until September at the earliest, according to assistant District Attorney Roy Neill.

Dewey is serving two consecutive five-year prison sentences, one for his involvement in a bogus trading scheme at the Chicago Board of Trade and another for fraudulently using $200,000 of a client's money to secure a $100,000 personal loan from First Commercial Bank in Hendersonville. Dewey pleaded guilty to both charges.

House Approves Measure Simplifying Income Tax

By F. Alan Boyce
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A bill to simplify North Carolina's income-tax system and drop some 700,000 poor people from the tax rolls won final House approval and is likely to be enacted later this week.

Without debate, the House voted 64-16 Tuesday to approve the measure and send it to the Senate, which has approved a similar bill. If the Senate agrees to House amendments, the bill would become law.

Most of the debate over the bill has been over whether middle-income people should be saddled with higher taxes to offset removing the poor from tax rolls. But Rep. Sharon Thompson, D-Durham, pointed out North Carolina has the fifth lowest tax threshold in the nation and levies the second highest tax on people making $10,000 a year.

Ms. Thompson said North Carolina has strayed from the policy adopted in the 1920s that the most affluent 10 percent of taxpayers should pay 90 percent of the taxes. To accomplish that today, she said, taxes would be levied only on those earning more than $82,000 — a change that could never pass the legislature.

Another important change would be to allow married people to file joint returns. North Carolina is the only state that does not permit joint returns now.

The bill also calls for piggybacking state returns on federal forms, meaning most taxpayers won't have to make any added calculations once they are finished with the federal return.

The new system would increase the Revenue Department's ability to enforce the tax laws and reduce filing errors, Ms. Thompson said.

The bill would not change the amount of money coming into state coffers, the tax burden would be shifted more toward those earning $40,000 or more.

A married couple with two dependents filing jointly could earn up to $13,000 without paying taxes, she said.

Under the bill, gross income above that level would be subject to a 6 percent tax up to about $34,000, where a 7 percent tax would be levied.

The bill exempts Social Security income, leaving an additional $20 million to be picked up by other taxpayers.

The bill retains all but three North Carolina tax credits — for construction of cogeneration power plants, for construction of a peat facility and for individuals with low and moderate incomes.

The bill also would increase from 7 percent to 10 percent the child care or dependent care costs that may be claimed as a tax credit, with a cap of $2,400 for one dependent and $4,800 for two or more.

State Wins OK To Pump Sand

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — State and federal officials have given tentative approval to a plan that calls for pumping sand onto an Outer Banks beach in an effort to protect the only highway and bridge to Hatteras Island.

The agreement Tuesday came in the wake of the rejection by the Coastal Resources Commission last week of the state Department of Transportation's request to install a wall of sandbags along N.C. 12 on the island. The commission turned down the project because it would violate its rules prohibiting structures that "harden" beaches.

But officials said they hope sand recovered from dredging of the Oregon Inlet would protect the highway and the Herbert C. Bonner Bridge.

"Anything we can do to shore up that area will help," said Mary Joan Pugh, assistant secretary of the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development. "This will at least give us some temporary relief."

Erosion at the north end of Pea Island, which abuts Hatteras, threatens to undermine the bridge over Oregon Inlet as well as a stretch of N.C. 12 about one mile south of the bridge. The U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service manages a national wildlife refuge on Pea Island.

"It would help the wildlife refuge, it would help the highway, and indirectly it would help the bridge," Pugh said. Some of the sand would drift north along the beach, possibly helping prevent erosion at the bridge, she said.

The state Department of Transportation and the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service would split the cost of the project — as much as $500,000 — if the agreement becomes final, a state official said.

IN THE STATE

Chancellor Hunt

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — The committee searching for a chancellor for the North Carolina School of the Arts has begun wrestling with the question of whether the next chancellor should be an artist with administrative experience or an administrator with artistic vision.

Although committee members agreed Monday that both artistic experience and administrative skills are important, they reached no clear agreement about whether one should have priority over the other to find a new leader.

The school's former chancellor, Jane Milley, resigned June 30 after months of turmoil over her leadership. Her background was primarily in administration, and some people said she lacked artistic vision.

Her predecessor, Robert Suderburg, was primarily an artist and was regarded as a poor administrator.

Driver Injured

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — An 18-year-old man was charged Tuesday with injuring a truck driver by throwing a tire rim from an Interstate 95 overpass near Fayetteville last week, authorities said.

Randall Shane McLaurin was ordered held under a secured bond of $5,000 on a charge of secret assault.

The secret assault charge carries a maximum sentence of 20 years in prison, according to a spokesman for District Attorney Ed Grannis Jr. State law calls for a standard sentence of six years but allows a judge to impose a harsher or more lenient penalty.

Deputy H.A. Cullison of the Cumberland County Sheriff's Department said more charges are expected as an investigation into several objects being thrown from overpasses continues.

McLaurin is accused of throwing a car tire rim off an overpass northeast of Fayetteville, striking a North State Lines truck being driven by Cotton Melvin.

Smoker Blamed

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — Smoking in bed by an elderly resident of a New Bern rest home caused the fire that took his life and sent 15 people to the hospital Sunday morning, said Capt. Henry Watson, the city's chief fire inspector.

Eight of the victims of the fire at the Mission Rest Home are still in Craven Regional Medical Center for treatment.

One resident, Douglas Woods, 78, is in guarded but stable condition in the intensive care unit. He is being treated for burns and smoke inhalation, according to the hospital spokeswoman.

The man smoking in his room, Ira Davis, apparently died of smoke inhalation, but an autopsy is being performed to confirm the cause of death, Watson said.

Damage to the building was estimated at $75,000, he said.

Firefighters

RALEIGH (AP) — Fifteen more North Carolina Division of Forest Resources firefighters left for Oregon and Idaho on Monday to help officials battle blazes in those states.

The additional fire specialists bring the number of Division firefighters in Oregon and Idaho to 39. The 20-person crew and 19 fire specialists are battling blazes ranging in size from 1,000 to 17,000 acres.

Cocaine Mothers

DURHAM (AP) — An increasing number of pregnant women in the United States are using cocaine — and so are their unborn babies.

"We're realizing is a large part of the population thinks cocaine is a safe, non-addictive drug," said Jeannine Gingras, a neonatologist and assistant professor of pediatrics at Duke University Medical Center. "But cocaine is an extremely seductive, addictive drug, and it has the potential of damaging an unborn baby."

Ms. Gingras and her colleagues, Roderick F. Hume Jr., an associate in obstetrics and a perinatology fellow at Duke, and Karen O'Donnell, assistant professor and psychiatry at Duke, used routine ultrasound to study 51 mothers who admitted using cocaine during pregnancy. They found by observing the babies' behavior in the uterus and after birth, that the babies tend to be more irritable, less easy to console, difficult to rouse from sleep, slow growers and prime candidates for developmental problems.

School Sign

PEMBROKE, N.C. (AP) — The sign bearing the name Purnell Swett High School has taken a beating, just like the idea to change the school's name.

The large brick sign which sits in front of the rural Pembroke school was vandalized twice shortly after the former county school board voted in late June to change the school's name from West Robeson to Purnell Swett, officials said.

School principal Ray Oxendine said authorities have not charged anyone with the vandalism, and there have been no more problems at the school.

Dirt Contaminated

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — Spills from pipes leading to underground gasoline storage tanks have contaminated tons of dirt, but groundwater 15 to 17 feet away is considered safe, an environmentalist said Tuesday.

An environmental study discovered spills around several pipes leading to 4,000-gallon gasoline storage tanks, said Jim Husted, president of Jim Husted & Associates of High Point.

The extent of the damage is still undetermined. On-site sampling has proven contamination to soil surrounding four tanks, but so far, no groundwater has tested positive.

Results from samples sent to state laboratories for analysis are expected next week.

Waste Site Changes Win Panel Approval

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Congress has taken a step toward ratifying changes sought by North Carolina in the agreement that binds the state to hosting a regional radioactive-waste disposal facility beginning in 1993.

In a joint meeting Tuesday, two House subcommittees endorsed a bill from Rep. J. Alex McMillan, R-N.C., that would limit each state's right to withdraw from the Southeast compact. Under the bill, states could not pull out more than 30 days after North Carolina opens the disposal site.

The bill also would require the regional site to be open for no more than 20 years. After that, another state must take a turn accepting the Southeast's radioactive waste.

The bill would amend the federal law that ratified the Southeast Interstate Low-Level Radioactive-Waste-Management Compact, which eight Southeastern states created in 1983. The N.C. General Assembly demanded the amendments in 1987, under pressure from environmentalists who opposed the compact.

The seven other states in the compact already have incorporated the changes into their own laws. Unless Congress adopts the same language by the end of 1992, North Carolina will withdraw from the compact. The Winston-Salem Journal reported in their Wednesday editions.

McMillan told the subcommittees that the bill was not controversial, noting the support among the eight states' congressional delegations. All of North Carolina's congressmen support the bill, as do 61 of the 66 House members and all 14 of the senators from the seven states.

Several environmental groups in North Carolina, however, have urged congressmen not to support the bill.

William E. Holman, a lobbyist for the Sierra Club and the Conservation Council of North Carolina, said the environmental groups want a bill with some teeth.

"As I understand it, the only penalty for withdrawing from the compact is to be kicked out of the compact, which is like saying 'Please don't throw me into the briar patch,'" Holman said in a telephone interview Tuesday.

Eastern Resumes RDU Service

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MORRISVILLE, N.C. — Eastern Airlines, which has been idle at Raleigh-Durham International Airport since early March, resumed service at the airport on Tuesday.

But across the street, Robert S. Sherwin, an Eastern pilot for 23 years, marched with 14 other striking Eastern machinists and pilots on a picket line. The strikers carried signs and wore baseball hats emblazoned with the name Lorenzo — crossed by a red diagonal line.

Frank Lorenzo is the chairman of Texas Air Corp., parent company of Eastern.

"He (Lorenzo) can't make a go of it," said Sherwin, a Cary resident. "There has never been an airline that was down-sized and made a go of it. We're still waiting for something positive to happen as far as putting Eastern back in the air."

The DC-9 jetliner took off shortly after noon with 99 passengers bound for Atlanta. Passengers flew for $59 a ticket.

Before the strike, the airline had nine daily flights out of RDU. Eastern began offering two flights to Atlanta on Tuesday and will add another on Wednesday.

A fourth Atlanta flight will be offered from RDU effective Aug. 15.

Rain, Tornadoes Hit Central Texas As Storm Wanes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — The remnants of Hurricane Chantal carried heavy rains and tornadoes into central Texas today, while divers searched for 10 crewmen missing since their oil rig capsized in the Gulf of Mexico.

Chantal roared ashore early Tuesday morning at High Island on the eastern Texas coast, bringing with it driving rains and winds up to 80 mph. It lost strength within a few hours and was downgraded to a tropical storm, bringing heavy rain to much of the upper Texas coast throughout the day.

Tuesday night, the storm was downgraded to a tropical depression as it continued to move northwest into Texas. Winds had decreased to about 30 mph.

By early today, the storm's remains were spread over about 90 miles from College Station to Waco, triggering rains and some tornadoes. No damage was immediately reported in central Texas from the storm.

Forecasters said the Dallas-Fort Worth area could get as much as 5 inches of rain in gusty thunderstorms today.

At least two deaths were blamed on Chantal. A man drowned Monday when he fell from a Chevron oil platform in the Gulf of Mexico south of New Orleans and a Bryan teenager drowned when he was sucked into a flood-swollen ditch.

Divers today resumed their search for the missing oil rig crewman in the Gulf of Mexico, 20 miles off Morgan City, La. The self-propelled rig Avco 5, which could be floated when its 100-foot legs are retracted, capsized Monday while trying to outrun Chantal.

Four crewmen were rescued. Chevron hired divers, equipped with high-powered lights, to search the darkened rig for possible survivors. The divers reached the rig Tuesday night but could not search until this morning because of rough seas, the Coast Guard said.

There were conflicting reports about where the missing men were last seen — some in the water, some in the watertight crew's quarters now submerged in about 30 feet of water, said Petty Officer Glenn Lamont at the Coast Guard's 8th District headquarters in New Orleans.

"They're not sure where they're likely to be, exactly. It's going to take awhile. The divers are going to move real slow and real cautiously," he said.

Also today, forecasters at the National Hurricane Center in Florida were tracking Tropical Storm Dean, which carried top winds of 50 mph that were expected to strengthen as it moved westward toward the Leeward Islands.

Chantal, the first hurricane of the 1989 Atlantic season, apparently caused little serious damage, al-

The Associated Press

High waves lash fishing pier Tuesday at High Island, Texas, as Hurricane Chantal passes though there was some residential flooding and scattered power outages.

In sections of south Houston and its southern suburbs, hundreds of stalled cars and trucks lined flooded roads, and some stranded motorists sat atop their vehicles as they waited for the high water to recede.

Nena Neal, whose family lost nearly all of their possessions in a 1979 flood in Dickinson, south of Houston, tied ribbons around the bases of trees to watch the progress of the rising water in her yard.

"We just got through celebrating 10 years since that flood. We had water up to here in that one," Mrs. Neal said, using her hand to mark a spot more than 3 feet high. "We made it through that and the Lord gave us so much more. And we have flood insurance this time — that's the main thing."

The coastal city of Galveston escaped much of Chantal's wrath, but the 6.56 inches of rain in a 24-hour period there broke a 110-year-old record.

Most of the homes in the area directly hit by Chantal were built on stilts, limiting much of the damage to roof tiles, exterior walls and electric lines. "It wasn't too bad, but it sure shook that trailer," said Bill

Estis, who lives in a 27-foot travel trailer in Gilchrist, east of Galveston. "I was going to move it out this morning, but it came in too early so I just decided to wait it out."

Estis then did what few others along the Texas coast would have considered in winds topping 50 mph on the leading edge of a hurricane.

He went fishing. "Oh, I just figured I'd come down here and give it a try. I caught one while the eye was passing over, but I haven't had a bite since then," he said.

Wright Joins Speaking Tour

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — For Jim Wright, veteran speaker of the House, it was his tryout to be speaker — with a small "s."

Wright, who resigned from Congress two months ago under an ethics cloud, found himself sharing billing Tuesday night with a comic juggler, a magician, Jack Benny's daughter and a professional cat trainer.

Such are the perils for the Texas Democrat who, after a few weeks of rest from the trauma of his resignation, is setting out on the lecture trail.

Wright's first stop was the annual convention of the International Platform Association, an organization of program organizers and talent bookers who arrange speakers and entertainment for colleges, corporations and trade groups.

IPA officials describe their forum as similar to the National Basketball Association draft, where the best talent is shown off and shopped around.

Wright's message was a simple one: the honor of politics as a profession, and of Congress, where he served for 34 years, in particular.

Airlines Cut Weekend Rates

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

In what could be the start of a summer air fare war, Continental Airlines slashed its prices nationwide for the next five weekends and Northwest Airlines and Alaska Airlines quickly matched the cuts.

Continental reduced to $75 each way its weekend fares through Labor Day on most of its non-stop flights, and lowered its transcontinental fares to $100 each way.

Tickets for the lowered fares must be purchased on a round-trip basis and are non-refundable, both airlines said.

"Recent research shows that more and more Americans want to take several more short vacations, or long weekend trips," Continental spokesman Ned Walker said Tuesday from the airline's Houston headquarters. "So what we've done is develop this nationwide weekend fare program to meet this growing trend."

Senate Wants To Divert Funds For Drug War

By Lawrence L. Kautson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Senate, struggling toward passage of a $295 billion defense authorization bill, voted today to pay for the war on drugs with an infusion of unspent dollars from government agencies — including the Pentagon.

The 90-9 vote, taken as the Senate worked into the early morning hours, would authorize the transfer of $1.7 billion from all but a short list of exempted federal programs to pay the full cost of keeping the government's promise to fight "the epidemic of narcotics sweeping this country."

Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, said the action, if approved by the House and enacted into law, puts the problem of paying for the drug war squarely on President Bush's shoulders.

"This amendment authorizes the president to fund the drug package," Byrd said. "It says: 'Mr. President, when it passes into law, it's your baby. You fund the war on drugs. If you don't like it, find another way.'"

In other action before adjourning at 2:50 a.m. EDT, the Senate:

- Voted to give air police last-resort permission to shoot down aircraft flying narcotics into the United States.

- Adopted a series of "burden-sharing" amendments aimed at increasing the contributions to defense by U.S. allies in Europe and Asia.
- Bolstered Bush's bid to make the MX missile a moving rather than a stationary target by shelving, 62-38, an amendment slicing $502 million from the funds available to place the force of 50 missiles on railway cars.
- Turned aside an attempt to bring to an immediate vote an amendment restoring the military pension lost when former Marine Lt. Col. Oliver L. North was convicted on three felony counts in the Iran-Contra affair. As a compromise, it ordered the Senate Judiciary Committee to hold hearings and report on the contentious issue by Nov. 1.
- After a rancorous debate, the Senate declined to support an amendment to siphon $450 million from the authorization for the Star Wars strategic defense initiative for the war on drugs.
- Instead, it approved the compromise drafted by Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Forces Committee as a desperation move to guarantee the drug war will be fully funded.
- Nunn said his amendment would keep the promises of the drug bill passed last year by shifting unspent balances in federal programs left over at the end of the fiscal year ending Sept. 30.

The measure exempts entitlement programs, including Social Security, Medicare, and subsidized housing. But all other government programs and agencies would be compelled to contribute.

"This is not the best way to fund the drug bill and I hope another way will be found," Nunn said. "But this will do the job."

"This says, before you spend money on other things you've got to fund the drug bill."

Several senators complained that such popular programs as student aid and education for the handicapped would be "sharply and severely" cut by the amendment.

But Sen. Joseph R. Biden, D-Del. told the Senate: "I'm a realist. I know there is no way to get the money out of Star Wars. ... I have no hesitation of choosing money for the war on drugs over student aid, over any other thing in the entire budget."

Biden, rhetorically addressing Bush, complained the administration had not kept promises to fully fund the drug war.

"You've given us cardboard cops, you've given us cardboard prisons, you've given us nothing, Mr. President," Biden said, adding that while Bush has vowed not to increase taxes, the American people want the drug war paid for, no matter the cost.

Voting against the amendment were Sens. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., James M. Jeffords, R-Vt., Bennett Johnston, D-La., Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., John Kerry, D-Mass., Frank R. Lautenberg, D-N.J., and James McClure, R-Idaho. Sen. Jim Sasser, D-Tenn., did not vote because he had to leave for a family emergency.

In a flurry of early morning action, the Senate by voice vote adopted a series of amendments intended to press U.S. allies into accepting a greater share of the defense burden.

One issues a warning to NATO that the United States may reduce U.S. troop strength in Europe if the alliance unilaterally cuts its strength in the absence of negotiated troop reductions by the Soviet Union.

Another calls on Japan to boost defense and foreign-aid spending and requires the president to negotiate an agreement providing for Japan to completely offset the costs of maintaining U.S. forces to defend Japanese territory.

A third directs the president to prepare a five-year plan for the U.S. military presence in South Korea, including a discussion "of the feasibility and desirability of partial, gradual reductions in U.S. military personnel stationed there."

Lucas May Be Named To Civil Rights Post On Interim Basis

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department is weighing whether William Lucas could be named chief civil rights enforcer on an interim basis after his rejection by the Democrat-dominated Senate Judiciary Committee.

The idea was raised by Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., on Tuesday after Lucas' defeat in a pair of 7-7 votes that Attorney General Dick Thornburgh labeled "raw politics."

A spokesman said Thornburgh is studying whether Lucas could be given a recess appointment to the job after Congress' scheduled adjournment Friday.

However, one White House official said President Bush likely would not want to anger Congress so early in his term by defying the Senate over Lucas, who was criticized by opponents as being unqualified to become assistant attorney general for civil rights.

No new names for the position are under consideration while the legality of the recess appointment option is being explored, said Robert S. Ross Jr., Thornburgh's executive assistant.

Ross said Thornburgh and his top aides were surprised by the committee's action, saying they expected the nomination would be forwarded to the full Senate where they thought Lucas would win confirmation.

A recess appointment would let Lucas serve until the term of the current Congress expires — in 1990. The final decision on whether to go that route would be up to Bush.

Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., Judiciary Committee chairman, called the notion of a recess appointment a "bad idea."

Congressional and White House sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said a recess appointment would touch off a confrontation between Bush and Congress.

"In terms of where we go from here, we're now exploring our options," said presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, who expressed disappointment over the vote. Fitzwater said he did not know whether Dole discussed the idea of a recess appointment with the White House.

"No decisions have been made, however, about either Mr. Lucas' future or how we might approach the job at the Justice Department," he said.

Seven of the Judiciary Committee's eight Democratic members voted against Lucas, citing his lack of professional qualifications to head the Justice Department's civil rights division.

Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., joined the panel's six GOP members in voting for Lucas.

The committee also rejected, on an identical vote, a motion by Sen.

Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., to send Lucas' nomination to the full Senate without a committee recommendation.

Opponents argue that Lucas, 61, a black Detroit Republican who was sheriff and later chief executive of Wayne County, Mich., showed during his confirmation hearing that he was not familiar with civil rights law.

Lucas, who has never tried a court case, acknowledged during the hearing that he was "new to the law."

"He's lacking in experience and qualifications, his managerial accomplishments are debatable," said Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., who cast a crucial vote against confirmation.

But Republicans accused Democrats of racial hypocrisy by refusing to give Lucas a chance to gain experience in the job.

"By rejecting him we are preaching one civil rights philosophy and practicing another," said Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, noting that Lucas would bring to the job his experience as a victim of racial discrimination.

Western Fires Causing New Evacuation Orders

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Officials urged people to stay out of Idaho's fire-ravaged backcountry and evacuated vacationers near the scorched town of Lowman, while one fire jumped a river and temporarily closed a major highway.

Cooler weather helped firefighters in Oregon and Southern California and crews contained Washington's only major blaze. But officials feared lightning could trigger a new round of fires like the ones that have been burning since the middle of last week.

Waves of thunderheads caused an estimated 2,000 lightning strikes an hour early Tuesday in Idaho's Boise National Forest alone. The thunderstorms let up later and there was no immediate word of any new fires.

About 1,200 soldiers from Fort Lewis, Wash., were to begin heading to lines in southeastern Oregon today after getting a one-day crash course in cutting containment lines, fort spokesman George Polich said.

In addition, four 20-man crews and three helicopters were to head to Oregon and Idaho today after an 850-acre fire in northern Washington was contained.

The Boise Interagency Fire Center said about 20,000 firefighters were on lines in the West, primarily in Idaho, Oregon and California. Blazes have blackened more than 175,000 acres in those states and Washington.

Some of the firefighters came from as far away as Florida. Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus said the influx was obvious at Chicago's O'Hare Airport, where he waited Monday to return from the National Governors' Conference.

"I saw nothing but green pants, yellow shirts and the boots of firefighters headed West," he said.

More than 5,000 firefighters battled uncontained fires on more than 80,000 acres of Idaho range and timber. Andrus predicted the fight could rage for a month.

Payette National Forest officials evacuated 16 of the 36 residents of Warren, a small mining town 120 miles north of Boise, as flames from the 1,000-acre Whangdoodle Fire moved to within a mile of town.

"We're telling them we feel like they're in some danger and offering to help them evacuate," Payette spokesman George Bukenhofer said.

Crews carved a break line south of the town with bulldozers and used pumps to wet the area ahead of the fire, which was shooting embers two miles ahead of the flames.

About 100 miles to the southeast, fires that burned on 26,000 acres and destroyed more than $10 million in structures at Lowman last weekend turned back toward the town Tuesday evening. More than 1,100 firefighters armed with 60 water engines, tankers and two bulldozers worked to protect the town.

Boise National Forest officials evacuated about two dozen people from cabins just west of the town to a campground three miles away. They also evacuated two lodges outside the town, although Sourdough Lodge owner Bob Ahern said he would resist the efforts of sheriff's deputies to get him out.

"They keep coming to the door to get me, and I keep telling them I lost my keys," he said. "They can ask me to leave, but they can't force me."

About 40 miles north of Boise, a rejuvenated 5,000-acre fire jumped the South Fork of the Payette River near Banks, and billowing smoke closed Idaho Highway 55 temporarily, Bukenhofer said.

Helicopters crisscrossed the Hell's Canyon area near the Idaho-Oregon line, carrying rangers who brought maps to direct about 40 hikers to the safest routes out of the backcountry.

First Downtown Mall Celebrating 30th Year

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KALAMAZOO, Mich. — Thirty years ago, this quiet Midwestern city took a decidedly daring approach when faced with the decline of its downtown.

It banned cars from two traffic-clogged blocks and created the nation's first downtown shopping mall, a pedestrian plaza with trees, flowers, park benches and fountains.

"It was a difficult decision because it meant closing off a busy portion of downtown — and to merchants, that meant customers couldn't park in front of their stores anymore. Some people thought that meant certain death," said Ray Dykema, a retailer who led the effort.

But as shopping centers on the outskirts of the city began drawing more and more customers and Kalamazoo's tax base began to deteriorate, the mall "seemed like the only thing we could do if downtown was to survive," Dykema recalled Monday.

Residents of this southwest Michigan city are celebrating Kalamazoo Mall's anniversary this month with a rededication Aug. 18 and a concert the following day by the Jimmy Dorsey Orchestra, which performed at the opening ceremony in 1959.

Responding to the threat of suburban shopping centers that have sapped the life from central business districts of so many American cities, about 200 merchants formed the Downtown Kalamazoo Association and elected Dykema its first president.

The storeowners and the city approved a plan devised by architect Victor Gruen, an odd downtown savior. Gruen had designed the nation's first indoor shopping mall, the bane of downtown retailers nationwide, which opened three years earlier in a Minneapolis suburb.

His plan included ripping up two blocks of a five-lane thoroughfare, replacing it with brick-lined concrete sidewalks, lawns and trees, and rerouting traffic around the mall.

The $65,000 project, which was split between the city and the merchants, resulted in record-setting profits and soaring downtown investment. Soon, the city expanded the mall to four blocks.

Municipalities across the United States and in some foreign countries sent representatives to Kalamazoo, and about 200 cities eventually built downtown pedestrian malls in the 1960s, '70s and early '80s, said Elizabeth Stabler, vice president of the International Downtown Association in Washington, D.C.

Report Says HUD Paid Consultants $5.7 Million

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Twenty consultants earned more than $5.7 million by helping funnel much of the money in a federal housing program to developers in a handful of states that didn't need it, says a report to a Senate committee.

Most of the 20 consultants were former Housing and Urban Development employees or well-connected Republicans, said a report by HUD Inspector General Paul Adams. The consultants were paid by developers to help them get about one-fifth of the money from a HUD program to repair housing for the poor.

Meanwhile, the House Government Operations subcommittee on housing planned a vote today on whether to subpoena Lance Wilson, a former aide to former HUD Secretary Samuel Pierce Jr. Wilson had been scheduled to voluntarily testify last week, but did not appear, saying that he wasn't prepared with legal counsel.

Adams, who conducted the study at the request of Senate Banking Committee Chairman Donald Riegle Jr., D-Mich., said the well is starting to run dry for the outside consultants.

"During our survey, five developers informed us that because of all the recent media attention, some billings were not paid in full" to them, Adams wrote in his report.

One of those consultants was Fred Bush, ambassador-designate to Luxembourg, who has had $45,000 in payments withheld since April, the report said. Bush, who is no relation to the president but was the chief fund-raiser for his 1988 campaign, was paid $215,000 to help land HUD funds for developers.

Joseph Strauss, a former assistant to then-HUD Secretary Samuel Pierce Jr., made nearly $1.7 million — more than any other consultant found by Adams' inquiry.

Others included former Interior Secretary James Watt, who got $300,000; former HUD Secretary and now U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills, who received $138,445; and Paul Manafort, a lobbyist and Republican political strategist, who got $442,000.

Adams has reported before on the use of consultants in obtaining funds from HUD, but the new report is the first attempt to determine the extent and expense of the practice.

Under the HUD program, developers were eligible for tax credits and could get HUD to subsidize the rent of tenants who otherwise couldn't afford it.

"Developers often received windfall profits through tax credit syndication," Adams wrote. Excess payments for rent subsidies could cost the government more than $413 million by 1999, he said.

In all, 51 projects with a total of 7,268 apartments funded since October 1983 used consultants, Adams' report found. That accounts for about 20 percent of all HUD's work in this area during that time.

Of those projects involving consultants, 45 were put in states — notably, Colorado, Oklahoma, Nevada and Wyoming — that would not have qualified for the funds if HUD's formulas for determining eligibility had been used, the report said.

But the two largest states, California and New York, were shortchanged by about 27 percent each, the report said.

Meanwhile, a related study by the General Accounting Office said developers were willing to pay high fees to the consultants because the structure and oversight of the HUD programs made them virtually no-lose propositions.

"In this manner developers were able to realize substantial gains on their limited investments while undertaking very little risk," wrote John M. Ols Jr., who prepared the report.

INDEPENDENCE VS. REJECTION
Often when one spouse makes constructive changes in lifestyle, the other spouse may feel left out. Inadequate communication is often at the root of the problem.
When one person tackles individual problems and takes positive steps, such as going back to school, changing jobs, or developing new friends, he or she often expects a spouse's support and may be hurt and confused if the spouse becomes angry and demanding instead.
The other spouse may in fact be bemused by the changes, feeling left out and less relevant to the mate's new life. Upon review, a professional counselor often finds that the one partner discussed little of his or her plans with the other, fearing resistance, which becomes a self-fulfilling prophecy; the other, sensing change but not knowing its direction or extent, may take the constructive striving for independence as a rejection of the status quo.
Helping such a couple turn around a pattern of fear — leading to secretiveness, isolation, and anger — becomes the main focus of counseling. A couple can learn about the strong interdependency which true independence needs and upon which it thrives.

Mortgage Rates Spur Home Sales

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Sales of new homes, propelled by falling mortgage rates, rose 5.5 percent in June, the third consecutive monthly increase, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said sales of new single-family homes rose to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 670,000 units in June as the housing industry continued to rebound from a sluggish period earlier in the year when sales fell to their lowest level since the 1981-82 recession.

Mortgage rates fell further in July, causing many economists to look for a climb in home sales and construction in the months ahead. In fact, many economists believe that a significant rebound in housing is needed to keep the country out of a recession.

In a second report showing a slight rebound, the Commerce Department said orders for manufactured goods edged up 0.4 percent in June following a steep 2.6 percent drop in May.

Fixed mortgage rates dipped last week to 9.81 percent, their lowest point since April 1987. Fixed-rate mortgages peaked in March at 11.22 percent, the same month that housing starts fell to an annual rate of 555,000 units, their most sluggish pace since December 1982.

The 5.5 percent rise in new home sales in June followed a 4.3 percent May advance and a 9.7 percent rise in April. Altogether, the three months of increases have driven home sales 20.7 percent above their March low.

The increase in sales has come despite the fact that home prices are up sharply. The median price of a new home jumped 8.3 percent in June to $129,900. This designates the level where half the homes in the country sold for more and half sold for less.

The average price of a new home rose as well, climbing 8.4 percent to $159,100. Housing analysts have blamed the increase on the fact that much of the market is now composed of the move-up buyer, who can afford a more expensive home. First-time buyers have been frozen out so far by the jump in mortgage rates.

Bill Would Shield Public Figures

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — A lawmaker is proposing a bill that would allow drivers to prevent anyone from finding their home addresses through state motor vehicle records, the way a man apparently tracked slain actress Rebecca Schaeffer.

"We intend to prevent this type of tragedy from ever happening again," Assembly Speaker Pro-tem Mike Roos said Tuesday.

Robert John Bardo, 19, has been charged with shooting Miss Schaeffer to death on July 18 outside her apartment complex. He allegedly hired an Arizona detective agency to locate Miss Schaeffer. She was traced through Department of Motor Vehicles records.

Currently, the motor vehicle department will provide the address of any license holder to anyone who fills out a request form and pays a small fee. The form does ask the reason for the request.

Under a proposal Roos plans to introduce later this month, a person applying for a driver's license or to register a vehicle would be allowed to request their home address be kept confidential, he said. Applicants would have to provide a post office box or alternative address, or the address of an attorney or agent that could be given to anyone who files an address request, he said.

The bill "will provide a balance between the public's right to know and the right to privacy," Roos said at a news conference outside a DMV office in Hollywood.

About 16 million requests were filed in California last year, Roos said.

Anyone can obtain the home address "of their favorite anchor person, favorite movie star, favorite Los Angeles Dodger or favorite politician, if they have one," he said.

City Attorney James Hahn said numerous crime victims and trial witnesses have been harassed by people who located them through motor vehicle records.

"Right now we're all sitting ducks," Hahn said. "Home is the last refuge of your privacy, and if someone is intent on doing malicious harm they're going to see it through."

Factory Orders Climb Slightly

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Orders for manufactured goods edged up 0.4 percent in June, recovering slightly after a big drop in the previous month, the government said today.

The Commerce Department said orders for both durable and non-durable manufactured goods totaled a seasonally adjusted $234.6 billion in June. In May, factory orders had plunged 2.6 percent.

The tiny June increase, while failing to recapture all of the ground lost in May, provided some evidence that factory orders may be stabilizing.

Analysts said that if that happens and sales pick up in coming months, the economy should be able to skate through the rest of 1989 without a recession.

However, more pessimistic forecasters believe that manufacturing will fail to rebound in coming months. They predict that cutbacks in production caused by falling orders will trigger job layoffs and rising unemployment will topple the country into the first recession since the 1981-82 downturn.

Transplant Drug Reported Promising

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PITTSBURGH — An experimental drug that boosts rather than suppresses the immune system offers new hope in preventing rejection of transplanted human organs, a researcher said.

"If our initial hopes are proven, we are nearing a fundamental turning point in being able to keep transplant patients healthier and alive longer," said Dr. Randall Morris, director of the Laboratory for Transplantation Immunology at Stanford University.

Morris reported results of his early research on rodents to delegates at the triennial International Congress on Immunology in West Berlin today.

Morris is testing the use of lectins, proteins derived from plant tissue, to prevent rejection by stepping up the immune system rather than depressing it. He said lectins promote growth of certain white blood cells that help curtail rejection.

In experiments at Stanford, transplanted hearts in rats remained free of rejection for more than two years with no side effects after 50 days of lectin treatment, Morris said.

Morris, in an earlier telephone interview, said lectins will require extensive further testing, but may someday supplement and reduce the need for large doses of cyclosporin, a potent drug now used to prevent transplant rejection by depressing the immune system.

"The central dogma has been that if you stimulate the immune system, that's bad," he said. "We're developing a new dogma that says it's possible to use the immune system as an ally."

Two other transplant experts — Dr. Thomas Starzl at the University of Pittsburgh and Dr. Robert Corry, chairman of surgery at the University of Iowa and president of the United Network for Organ Sharing — said the use of lectins is virtually untested elsewhere.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices were mixed today, marking time after Tuesday's volatile session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 4.56 to 2,645.68 in the first half hour of trading.

But losers outnumbered gainers by about 6 to 5 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 434 up, 521 down and 524 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 26.16 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

The market's unsettled showing Tuesday was attributed partly to concern that the slowing of the economy might lead to something worse than the "soft landing" many economists have been predicting.

But analysts said those worries might be eased by a series of economic reports over the remainder of the week.

The Commerce Department reported this morning that orders for manufactured goods rose 0.4 percent in June.

The department is due to report Thursday on the index of leading economic indicators for the same month. On Friday, monthly data are scheduled on the employment situation for July.

Among actively traded blue chips, American Telephone & Telegraph rose 1/4 to 40; Eastman Kodak gained 1/2 to 47 1/2; International Business Machines added 1/4 to 114 1/2, and Exxon was unchanged at 44 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .05 to 191.43. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .50 at 376.31.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 19.54 points to 2,641.12.

Declining issues slightly outnumbered advances on the NYSE, with 781 down, 727 up and 492 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 225.28 million shares, up from 166.65 million in Monday's session.

along the coast. Dare County, located on the eastern end of the state, will grow the fastest with a 42.8 percent increase over the next five years, the department said. During the 1987-88 school year, there were 3,074 students in the Dare County school system.

Other counties expecting a dramatic increase in student populations are Wake and Orange counties in the middle of the state and Brunswick, Onslow, Carteret, Perquimans and Currituck counties along the coast. All of these counties are expecting an 11 to 21 percent increase, according to the state office.

On the whole, most school systems in North Carolina are expected to stabilize and even decline over the next five years, particularly those counties in the southern and western parts of the state, the department reported.

their home, at least temporarily," Knowles said.

Knowles said the city was also working to ensure a more accurate accounting of minorities, a generally under-reported segment of the population.

Blacks and Hispanics generally fear "opening up their lives to the 'Big Brother' government," Knowles said. And they also fear losing government benefits because of the information they give, he said.

Elvis Jones, a census awareness specialist, works with minority organizations in 31 eastern North Carolina counties to reduce the risk of undercounting in the upcoming census.

"We are trying to get the word out that the information they give the census will be held in the strictest confidence," Jones said.

The thrust of his work since beginning in November, Jones said, has been convincing people that "it is safe and important to their communities."

"By keeping information from the census bureau you are keeping money out of your community," Jones said.

Greenville faces the same mistrust and fears of other areas in eastern North Carolina, Jones said, but the city has the advantage of many active minority organizations to help spread information about the census and its benefits.

Knowles said the city is working closely with the census bureau to ensure a proper count for Greenville. And hopefully reach the 50,000 mark.

"We want our citizens to get their fair share of getting all the federal money and taxes due to them," Knowles said.

No Arson

BURLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Investigators ruled out arson as the cause of a Sunday fire at a life insurance company.

Yarborough said the building was unoccupied when the fire began and had been burning for about an hour before firefighters were called Sunday night.

He said the loss was estimated at $300,000.

Governors' Chairman Calls For Concensus On Changes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — The new chairman of the National Governors' Association said he will press the states' chief executives to reach a "consensus for change" on education and the environment.

Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad outlined his goals at the end of a four-day meeting of the nation's governors Tuesday that produced few disagreements and a date to meet again late next month with President Bush for a domestic summit on education.

Reflecting the quiet harmony of the conference, the governors unanimously approved a resolution urging Congress and the president to impose a two-year moratorium on expansions in the Medicaid program that states would be required to finance.

It also asks Congress and the Bush administration to consider restructuring the entire health care system, "including federalization of Medicaid." States and the federal government currently share Medicaid costs, with the program administered by the individual states.

Branstad, a Republican who was named to a one-year term as chairman to replace Democrat Gerald Baliles of Virginia, said he would make the environment and education the focus of coming meetings of governors.

"We cannot accept a future of declines in education and degradation of the environment," Branstad said. "Governors can be the facilitators to bring about a consensus for change."

Branstad said South Carolina Gov. Carroll Campbell, a Republican, and Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, a Democrat, will head the governors' preparations for the education meeting with Bush. No site has been selected.

Several governors voiced support for expanding health care coverage to more poor Americans, but said federal requirements that states pay for it were consuming their budgets.

"We don't think it's fair for Congress to take credit for doing things and then submit the bill to the states and say, 'You raise taxes to do it,'" Branstad said. "We think the people that are going to be requiring things to happen also ought to show how it's going to be paid for. That's responsible."

Central to the governors' complaint is their argument that actions by Congress requiring expanded Medicaid coverage for more people and for wider types of health care have forced states to pay most or all of the costs.

The governors said that if current growth in Medicaid continues, spending by all states on the program will grow from $41 billion in 1986 to $104 billion by 1994. Medicaid, under these projections, will have grown from 6 percent of total state budgets to nearly 16 percent by that date.

"All these are worthwhile programs, but if we let this trend continue we're not going to have a budget to deal with," said Democratic Gov. James Blanchard of Michigan.

The governors approved a series of other policy statements, few generating debate. Among them was a cautiously worded one urging the federal government to reduce the deficit without raising taxes "if possible," while protecting key domestic spending and imposing a selective spending freeze — in line with Bush administration policy.

Meeting in private, the Democratic Governors' Association elected Ohio Gov. Richard Celeste as its new president, when Clinton's term ends in January.

The full governors conference elected Democrat Booth Gardner of Washington as vice chairman, putting him in line to follow Branstad as chairman next year.

MPs Return

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — About 130 Fort Bragg military policemen are returning to Fort Bragg this week from a five-month deployment to Honduras, post officials said.

Iran Interceding

"Even if it was a postponement for only one minute, it's better than nothing," said Elham Cicippio, who married Cicippio after he converted to Islam in 1985.

U.S. officials said they sent a strongly worded message to Iran on behalf of the hostages. "We expect those who have influence over the hostage takers to exert that influence," one official said on condition of anonymity.

One administration source said military action was "in the realm of the possible" but another official said neither a military attack nor hostage rescue operations were attractive options.

The Soviet news agency Tass said Iran's president-elect, Hashemi Rafsanjani, discussed the Obeid abduction and Higgins' purported death with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze in Tehran.

Tass said Rafsanjani voiced "deep regret over what has happened and confirmed that Iran does not have (any) relation to the tragedy..." It said both men favored "urgent measures" to prevent the situation from worsening.

But Iran's main opposition group, the Mujahadeen Khalq, claimed today that Rafsanjani directly controls the groups holding hostages and that he dispatched his brother to help oversee their activities, including the "execution" of Higgins.

The statement announcing Cicippio's reprieve was accompanied by a photograph of another American hostage, Edward Austin Tracy, 58, a self-styled wanderer and writer kidnapped Oct. 21, 1986. It was the first picture of him released since March 5.

There are four other Americans among the foreigners held in Lebanon. The hostage held longest is Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press. He was kidnapped March 16, 1985.

Higgins was abducted Feb. 17, 1988, while commanding a U.N. observer team in south Lebanon. Israeli officials have said Obeid was involved in the abduction. Obeid has denied it.

The Organization of the Oppressed on Earth accused Higgins of being a spy and said it would kill him at 8 a.m. EDT Monday if Obeid had not been freed. Shortly after the deadline, Israel offered to trade Obeid and Shiite Moslem prisoners for foreign hostages and Israeli POWs.

The group holding Higgins then released a videotape purportedly showing the hostage hanging. There was no indication when it was filmed.

Rabin said the kidnap of Obeid was approved two months ago, after "every grain of possibility for dialogue" had been exhausted on winning the release of three Israeli POWs captured in south Lebanon.

"We took into consideration all the possible reactions," he said. "We saw them all, including the actions that already took place, and ones even worse."

Energy Minister Moshe Shahal later told The Associated Press, however, that the decision to approve the kidnap did not rest on outside implications. "Consideration was only given to getting our soldiers back," he said.

Search For NFL Commissioner Resumes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MANKATO, Minn. — When the NFL finally gets around to choosing a new commissioner, it might want to locate the league office in Chicago. That's where all the action seems to be.

It resumes again today, somewhere in the Chicago area, when the new selection committee formed two weeks ago meets. But the material it goes over will not be new and neither will the candidates. The six committee members likely will be scrutinizing the same six finalists as the old committee, with New Orleans Saints president Jim Finks at the top of the list.

"I don't see that we're starting from scratch. It would be silly to do that," Mike Lynn, general manager of the Minnesota Vikings and one of the four new members of the committee, said Tuesday.

Lynn was one of the leaders of the so-called "Chicago 11," the 11 men who abstained and therefore left Finks three votes short of the 19 he needed to be elected as the replacement for the retiring Pete Rozelle.

Lynn and another so-called dissident, Seattle's Ken Behring, were subsequently added to the committee along with the Los Angeles Raiders' Al Davis and Washington's John Kent Cooke. Two original members, co-chairmen Wellington Mara of the New York Giants and Lamar Hunt of Kansas City, are also in the group.

Lynn said it was possible there might be "one outside name" added to the list of finalists, although he wasn't sure it was likely. David Stern, the NBA commissioner, reportedly was contacted by some of the dissidents but has said repeatedly that he wants to stay where he is.

Finks seems to be on the top of the list.

"I expect we'll put Jim or one or two or three more names out there and let them vote their conscience," Lynn said.

In fact, Rooney, Mara, Cooke and Davis voted for Finks during the first meeting and Lynn reiterated that he has no objection to the New Orleans general manager.

"I think Jim is fine," he said. "I think any of the candidates on the final list, had they been brought to the table, would have been good choices."

But Lynn said he believes the mandate from the owners is clear: provide two, three or four candidates to choose from, rather than just one.

That lack of a choice and the fact that the original search committee was made up entirely of "Old Guard" owners — they have a collective 200 years in the league — was what brought together the otherwise loose group of 11 that blocked Finks' selection.

Some dissidents have also said privately that they believe they should look at someone younger than the 62-year-old Finks, who has been a player, coach, scout and general manager in pro football over the past 40 years.

The other candidates include Paul Tagliabue, the NFL's Washington counsel; Robert Mulcahy, executive director of the New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority; former Democratic National chairman Paul Kirk; former Green Bay defensive end Willie Davis, now a successful businessman, and the chief executive officer of a major corporation who asked that his name not be made public.

Ferry Shuns NBA, Clippers Signs One-Year Deal With Italian Team

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Danny Ferry, the No. 2 pick overall in the NBA draft, has decided he'd rather be a globetrotter than a Clipper.

The top draft choice of the Los Angeles Clippers, Ferry said Tuesday he would forgo the NBA in favor of the Italian basketball league.

The 6-foot-11 All-America forward from Duke signed a one-year contract with Messagero Rome for a reported $1 million.

"It's a unique opportunity — living in Rome, traveling throughout Europe, learning a new language, experiencing different cultures, and representing one of the largest international conglomerates — all while playing the game I love," Ferry said in a statement issued Tuesday night through his management company, ProServ.

The signing was first announced by Ferruzzi, the Italian agribusiness giant and owner of Il Messaggero, the Rome daily newspaper which is the team's main sponsor.

Ferry, who led the Blue Devils to the Final Four three times without bringing home a championship, had seemed less than enthusiastic about playing for the Clippers, who have won just 50 games the last three seasons.

"Frankly, I was a little surprised the Clippers drafted me because they have a talented pool of young forwards," he said. "However, any concerns I had became academic once Il Messaggero made me this once-in-a-lifetime offer."

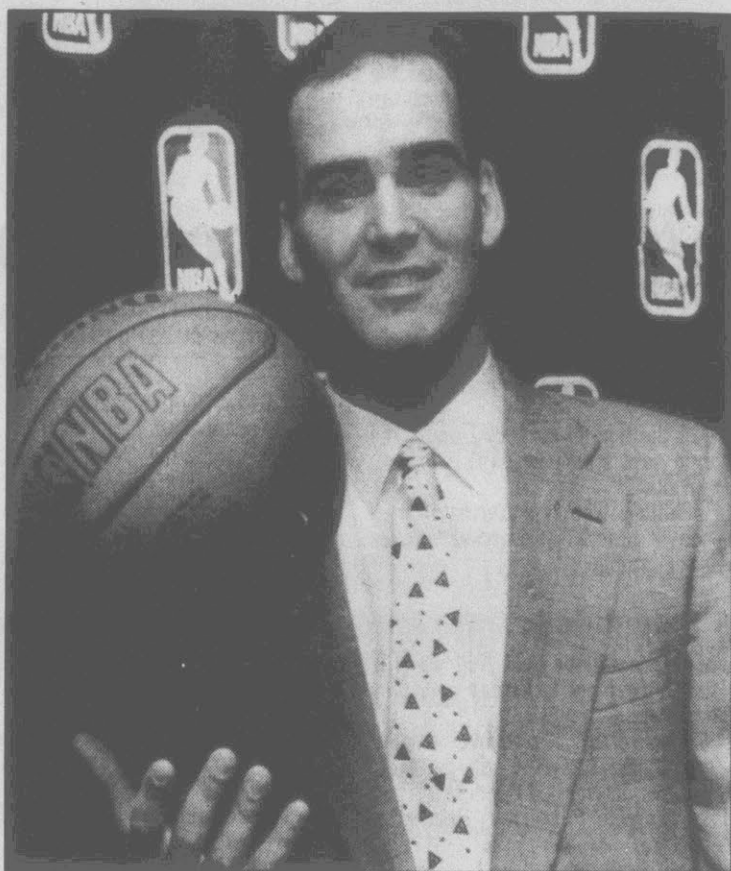

With Ferry's departure, the Clippers are without the use of two of their first-round draft picks. Last year's choice and the first player taken in 1988, Danny Manning, is recovering from a knee injury and may not be ready this season.

Clippers general manager Elgin Baylor said he had been aware Ferry was talking with officials of Italian teams. But all he can do now is try to sign Ferry after his European stint.

"Naturally we are disappointed that Danny Ferry chose to play his first pro season in Europe," Baylor said in a statement. "However, we look forward to having Danny in a Clippers' uniform should he decide to pursue a career in the NBA."

League rules allow the Clippers to retain rights to him for a year after he returns to the United States. Should Ferry not sign with the Clippers during the year after he returns, he would then go back into the draft. If not drafted at that time, Ferry would become a free agent.

The Clippers finished the 1988-89 season with a 21-61 record after going 12-70 in 1986-87 and 17-65 in 1987-88. The team hasn't qualified for the NBA playoffs since 1976 when it played as the Buffalo Braves.

Jones Hopes For 2nd Sack

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LATROBE, Pa. — He was Pittsburgh's No. 1 draft choice last year, but by the end of his rookie season Aaron Jones was known to Steelers' fans as Mr. 1½.

Drafted to give the Steelers the pass-rushing defensive end they've lacked since L.C. Greenwood, Jones reported to training camp last year pumped up by a $1.6 million contract and the kind of national attention he didn't attract at tiny Eastern Kentucky.

What he caught most of all was the attention of opposing offensive linemen, especially after saying his goal was to break the Steelers' team record with "18 or 20 sacks."

But by the end of the season, about the only thing that Jones sagged was his own confidence. Shuttled from position to position, criticized by his coaches for drawing too many unnecessary penalties, Jones cost the Steelers about $267,000 per sack for his 1½ sacks.

Jones was a major disappointment as the Steelers finished 5-11, their worst record in 20 years, and his lack of performance — especially after his unabashed preseason show of confidence — met with derisive laughter from other linemen.

Burt Grossman, the San Diego Chargers No. 1 draft choice, recently said he was happy former Pitt teammate Tom Ricketts signed a $1.7 million Steelers' contract because "at least he'll get more than Aaron Jones did."

"They should have paid Aaron Jones the minimum wage, maybe less," Grossman told the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette. "Maybe they should have paid him in food stamps."

Last year, Jones would taken out such criticism on an opposing player — and probably would have drawn a personal foul penalty in the process.

"He has a lot of natural talent, but it never came out (in 1988)," said Joe Greene, the Steelers' Hall of Fame lineman and defensive line coach. "Maybe there were too many distractions."

Distractions? Besides the many that Jones caused himself, he was distracted and disheartened by his almost weekly position shuffling. Desperately trying to find an avenue for his pass-rushing talents, the Steelers shuttled him from left defensive end to linebacker to right defensive end.

No matter whether he lined up on the left side or right side, it didn't seem to be the right position.

"Were the Steelers unfair to me last year? Don't try to get me into trouble by asking me that," Jones said. "I'll answer that by saying no comment."

Considering his last of pronouncing ability last season, one almost would expect Jones to issue a similar terse "no comment" when asked about his 1989 goals.

"I'm not going to change, I still want 18 to 20 sacks," Jones said. "Doesn't everybody want to reach their goals? Thirty or 40 sacks? That's out of reach. Eighteen to 20 sacks? That's not out of reach."

Besides more sacks, Jones wants fewer distractions — the Steelers don't plan on moving him from left defensive end — and fewer penalties.

"I regret a lot of things that happened last year, but I learned a lot from it and it's going to be better for me this year," Jones said. "I have a lot more confidence. If you had told me a few months ago I'd feel like this, I wouldn't have believed it, but I do. I know I'm going to be better."

He must be for the Steelers to make a dramatic improvement on defense. Their dismal 1988 record was no accident; their defense ranked 28th and last in the NFL.

"There were times last year when I'd let it all hang out, but this year I'm going to control it," Jones said. "I was a rookie and a lot of guys tried to get on me. But this year is going to be better. This year it's all going to be between the lines."

Future Of Many At NCSU May Be In Jeopardy

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREENSBORO — If reports of academic rules violations at North Carolina State University prove to be true, key administrators at the school could lose their jobs, several members of the University of North Carolina Board of Governors said.

The reactions came in the wake of allegations from Hugh Fuller, director of N.C. State's academic tutoring program, who has charged that officials in the N.C. State athletic department have abused the school's academic regulations to keep athletes eligible.

"I was appalled," said board member Asa T. Spaulding. He added that if the newspaper accounts are true, "it raises some serious questions as to the integrity and credibility of senior administrators at that university."

"This is an awfully devastating expose, and if it is proven to be factual then it would certainly seem to warrant rather strict disciplinary action," he told the Greensboro News & Record in an interview published today.

"Somebody has to take the heat," said a board member who asked not to be identified. "Things have gotten out of control."

Asked if head basketball coach Jim Valvano, who is also athletic director, or Chancellor Bruce R. Poulton might be fired or forced to resign, board members refused to speculate.

"There are enough problems for a lot of people to take the blame," one board member said.

Contacted at his office Tuesday evening, Valvano refused to comment on his future. "This is not the appropriate time," he said.

He also would not respond to questions about the allegations which have ensnared his program.

Efforts to reach Poulton, who is said to be on vacation, were unsuccessful.

Five board members contacted Monday and Tuesday say they are deeply troubled by the allegations from Fuller.

Members reacted to a copyright story in The News and Observer of Raleigh in which Fuller said, among other things, that tutors hired by the athletic department did course work for basketball players, who turned in the work as their own.

That revelation and others by Fuller prompted former Board of Governors Chairman William A.

Johnson to describe Valvano's basketball program as "rotten."

"I'm very disturbed," Johnson said Tuesday. "I think what has already been revealed ... establishes that the athletic program as it relates to basketball has not been properly managed."

"The known facts make it quite clear that actions have been taken that impugn the integrity of the university."

Johnson said he is not in a position to say whether Valvano's or Poulton's jobs are in jeopardy.

He did say that "these facts raise serious questions about the quality of the leadership."

"When you have got an individual who is in charge of the academic assistance program coming along and telling you that time and again that other people were preparing papers and doing the work and the athlete copies what they have prepared, I don't see how you can have a much worse situation."

UNC President C.D. Spangler Jr. has said he will report on the findings of a special commission he set up to investigate allegations against Valvano's basketball program at the board's next meeting on Aug. 25. The board governs the state's 16 public universities.

Several board members contacted Monday and Tuesday said they would not comment until they had heard the report and Spangler's recommendations.

But one said he hopes Spangler will be tough.

"If Spangler doesn't take some decisive action, you can bet we are going to raise questions about why not."

Hawks Sign Volkov

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — The Atlanta Hawks have signed Alexander Volkov to a three-year contract, the second Soviet player to commit to the NBA in recent weeks, and Hawks president Stan Kasten says it's only the start of a foreign migration into the league.

Volkov, 25, on Tuesday agreed to terms with the Hawks. Terms were not disclosed.

Volkov, a 6-foot-10½, 218-pound forward, was the most valuable player in the Soviet Union last season. He was drafted by the Hawks in the sixth round of the 1986 draft. Late in June, Sarunas Marciulionis became the first Soviet player to join the NBA when he signed with the Golden State Warriors.

"It has taken us three years to sign him," Kasten said. "We tried to sign him when we first drafted him after playing in the 1986 World Games in Madrid, but there were always complications."

"We still weren't sure up until about 10 days ago when he arrived in the United States," he said. "Once he got here, however, I was convinced it would happen. It's been a long road."

With that now accomplished, Kasten believes five or six foreign players will sign this year with NBA clubs "and I think there will be a couple every year from now on."

Alexander Volkov

"It's interesting now. This absolutely demonstrates that foreign players will now be available to the NBA. Before we were never sure," he said.

"I am a little nervous," Volkov said in English as he met with reporters at the Hawks' offices. With him were his wife, Alla, agent Mark Fleisher, and American interpreter Sally Evans.

"I will speak Russian because I am afraid it will not come out right if I answer in English," Volkov said in English as reporters started asking questions.

Through the interpreter, he said: "I am happy to be here. I plan to play in Atlanta and play well."

He also said he would probably make his home in Marietta, a suburb of Atlanta.

Kasten said Volkov would be in Los Angeles along with other Atlanta rookies and would play today when they open their summer league play.

Gambling For Rose Was A Matter Of Convenience

By Hal Bock

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

His use of sports bookies to place pro football bets was, Pete Rose tells us, nothing sinister. It was, in fact, nothing more than a matter of convenience.

Hey, a busy guy like Rose couldn't be expected to go running off to Las Vegas every time he got an urge to scratch the betting itch. So he simply reached out and touched an entrepreneur who could accommodate his needs nearby. This was just another example of a community leader supporting local merchants.

This is America, the land of fast food, instant gratification, and, perhaps most importantly, convenience. And if there's one thing baseball players learn to love early on, it's convenience. Play this little kid's game well enough to get paid for it and everything is taken care of.

What do you need? Somebody to check you into your hotel room? No problem. Somebody to carry your bag? Done. Somebody to get you down on the Bengals plus 1½ points? You've got it.

Taking care of the bags and room are fine, nice little perks earned by big league status. Doing business with a bookie, however, is quite another matter.

For starters, patronizing those sidewalk swifities is an illegal activity, although that seems an entirely secondary consideration for the manager of the Cincinnati Reds.

Rose's rationale is that he's not the first guy — or the only one — who ever strolled down to the corner candy store and bet a bob or two on the outcome of a game. A guy's got to relax, doesn't he?

Maybe he should have tried crossword puzzles. In this land of Lotto, though, the fact of the matter is that betting is a popular pastime. This, of course, is a very good thing for the bookie business. Otherwise, how would they make a living? They make wagering easy. That's part of the service.

If the bookies sell convenience, so can others, like states.

With the national lust for action in mind, state officials in Oregon have expanded their Lotto game to pro football. Now when you drop in at the local supermarket in Portland, you can pick up a quart of milk, a loaf of bread and Houston minus-6.

Now how's that for convenience?

The NFL was quite naturally outraged at the idea that somebody would legalize betting on its games. It was as if the league had no idea this business of picking with the points was going on in the squeaky clean game of football.

Pete Rose must have been bent over in hysterics over that.

The legislators in Kentucky were so impressed with Oregon's ingenuity that they decided to go the same route. Put up your buck and you're in business. Service with a smile, on the spot. No need to look for those nasty fellows who always seem to be whispering and scribbling numbers down on scraps of paper.

The fact that neither state has a pro football team matters not one whit. The chances of either of them getting one after defying the league and going ahead with the betting game are all but nil.

Realistically, though, state-sponsored football lotteries would hardly satisfy heavy, hard-core bettors or have much impact on their bookies. The books are not nickel-and-dime, $1 bet operations. And that is just one more reason why Rose's matter-of-fact acknowledgment that he used them is troubling.

Rose's legal challenge of Commissioner Bart Giamatti's role in this messy matter will drag on through the summer because the courts move excruciatingly slowly. There are hearings, deliberations, decisions and appeals. Then the process is repeated, ad infinitum, it seems.

And every so often, Rose spices the cauldron with a throwaway line like, oh, sure, he used bookies. Doesn't everybody?

Well, uh, as a matter of fact, no.

Rose shrugs that off and goes about his business while the issue continues to hang like an albatross around baseball's neck, promising to overshadow everything else that makes the summer game so special.

That is the tragedy here, that and the high price of convenience.

Three USC Players Are Arrested

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Three South Carolina football players and a former player have been arrested during an incident in which one was videotaped in a department store selling $100 worth of merchandise to another for about $5, authorities said.

Victor E. McConnell, 22, allegedly sold $110 worth of clothes and merchandise at J.B. White's in Richland Fashion Mall to Bobby Brown, 20, for $5.25 Friday night, Forest Acres Police Capt. Gene Sealy said Tuesday.

McConnell, a wide receiver for the Gamecocks last year, was charged with breach of trust with fraudulent intent, Sealy said. Brown, expected to start at noseguard for the Gamecocks this season, was charged with shoplifting more than $50.

McConnell of Canton, Ga., and Brown of Titusville, Fla., were released Saturday on $1,500 personal recognizance bonds, the officer said.

Two other players turned themselves in Tuesday, Sealy said. Calvin Herbert Stephens, 21, of Kings Mountain, a junior offensive guard and returning starter, and Trent Maurice Simpson, 20, of Columbia, a senior tight end, were charged with shoplifting more than $50, Sealy said.

Each was released on $1,500 personal recognizance bonds Tuesday afternoon.

Under South Carolina law, shoplifting includes altering prices or doing anything that prevents a merchant from getting the full retail price for an item.

Sealy said he did not know whether Stephens and Simpson appeared on the videotape or whether one of the players arrested Friday night told authorities others were involved. He also didn't know why the players had been videotaped.

South Carolina head coach Sparky Woods said no action will be taken until he has talked with the current players and the investigation is completed.

"I didn't find out until today," Woods said Tuesday. "There was a lot of confusion about how many players were involved and who they were. We need to investigate what has happened and take appropriate action, see what we ought to do."

"I'll talk to the players as soon as I can," he said. "I've got the word out, and I'm waiting to hear from them."

Falcons' Cotton Returns To Practice

SUWANEE, Ga. (AP) — Atlanta Falcon linebacker Marcus Cotton, who has missed several practices with complications from spring knee surgery, returned to the Atlanta Falcons' workout.

Cotton had arthroscopic surgery on his right knee in October and May 31 to repair damaged cartilage. He injured the knee against Philadelphia Oct. 30.

"They said it would swell out because of the type of surgery I had," the second-year man from Southern California said after Tuesday's workout. "It's real iffy, real sore, and it's coming real slow."

Meanwhile, Atlanta quarterback Chris Miller, who is suffering from a pulled abdominal muscle, missed Tuesday's practice. Campbell said he hopes Miller will be healthy for Saturday's scrimmage.

Wilson Sent To Jays To Complete Trade

NEW YORK (AP) — The Toronto Blue Jays acquired veteran outfielder Mookie Wilson on Tuesday to complete a trade that sent pitcher Jeff Musselman to the New York Mets.

Wilson, 33, had spent his entire 10-year major league career with the Mets. But he saw limited duty after New York obtained Juan Samuel from the Philadelphia Phillies on June 18.

The Blue Jays acquired Musselman and minor-leaguer Mike Brady on Monday for a player to be named later. On Tuesday, the Mets and Blue Jays announced that the player was Wilson.

Wilson was expected to be in Toronto on Tuesday night for the Blue Jays-Royals game.

Toronto also announced that outfielder Lee Mazzilli had agreed to join the club. The Mets waived Mazzilli last week.

Meanwhile, the Mets recalled infielder Keith Miller from their Class AAA Tidewater affiliate and acquired Manny Hernandez from Toronto's Class AAA team in Portland. Hernandez was assigned to Tidewater.

The moves completed a flurry of activity by the Mets, who acquired Cy Young Award winner Frank Viola from the Minnesota Twins just before Monday's midnight trading deadline.

The Mets, a talented team floundering in fourth place in the National League East, sent pitchers Rick Aguilera, Tim Drummond, Kevin Tapani and David West to the Twins for Viola.

Wilson entered the season with a lifetime .281 average, but was hitting only .205 this season with three home runs and 18 runs batted in. He had been with the Mets longer than any current player, and was one of the most popular members of the team. He is the team's all-time leader in stolen bases with 274.

All Eyes On Bird's Back At Camp

WALTHAM, Mass. (AP) — The Boston Celtics' summer camp that was supposed to highlight Larry Bird's return from heel surgery has instead been a showcase for the All-Star forward's comeback from a back injury.

After the injury Saturday that was expected to sideline him for weeks, Bird made a surprise return to the court Monday and also played in scrimmages Tuesday night, the end of the camp for rookies, free agents and five veterans.

"It felt as well as it could be expected, but I felt I wanted to take some rest this afternoon," Bird said Tuesday. "It feels all right."

"Just seeing Larry out there playing as well as he did was something of a major accomplishment," Coach Jimmy Rodgers said.

Boston's Boyd Up And Throwing Again

BOSTON (AP) — Right-hander Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, disabled by a blood clotting problem in his right arm since May 2, began a comeback bid Tuesday at Fenway Park.

Boyd, 29, donned a Red Sox uniform and threw for about seven minutes in the bullpen before Boston's afternoon game with Baltimore.

"I want to pitch again and I want to pitch here," Boyd said. "Tell the manager I'll be back."

Boyd, who has missed most of the past three seasons because of the blood clotting problem, threw lightly.

"It's going to take a while," Boston general manager Lou Gorman said. "He's anxious to get going, but it will be two or three weeks before he can pitch in a simulated game. If everything is okay then, he'll go to Pawtucket (International League) on a rehabilitation program."

Dr. Arthur Pappas, the team physician, said that Boyd has been throwing lightly under strict supervision at University of Massachusetts Medical Center.

"He is taking a new medication and blood clotting shouldn't be a problem, but we won't know until he throws hard again," Pappas said.

Little League Games Postponed

HUDSON — Only one of three games scheduled in second-day action at the 1989 North Carolina Little League state baseball tournament in Hudson was completed due to rain Tuesday with defending state champion Cherryville advanced to the winners' bracket finals with a 5-3 win over Mint Hill.

Play will resume this afternoon with three games and continue through the remainder of the week.

Greenville North State, the District 4 champion which lost in the first round to Cherryville, will battle the loser of today's South Caldwell-East Rowan matchup Thursday afternoon at 1.

Mack Begins Workouts With Browns

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

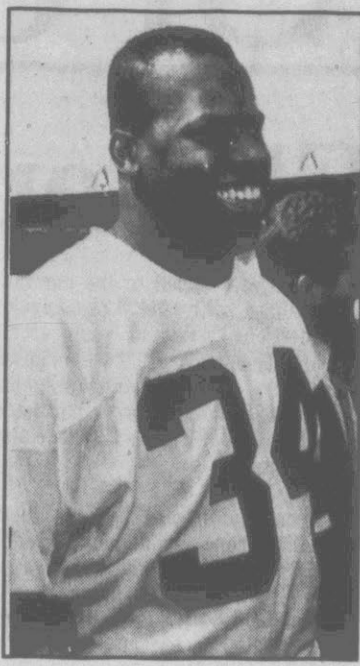

LONDON — Playing a game in England is an unusual way of getting the NFL exhibition season started and the presence of Kevin Mack is making it even more so this summer.

Mack began workouts with the Cleveland Browns on Tuesday for the fourth annual American Bowl, just days after leaving a cocaine-rehabilitation program and pleading innocent to charges of trafficking in the drug.

Browns coach Bud Carson has said he expects Mack, a standout fullback in each of his four seasons, to see little if any action against the Philadelphia Eagles at Wembley Stadium on Sunday.

Mack might therefore have been expected to stay home rather than come to the land of the tabloid, where any athlete with a bit of personal trouble is considered fair game for virtual inquisition in print. But Mack said skipping the exhibition opener never was a serious consideration.

"I didn't give it much thought, to tell you the truth," he said. "I might be going through this at home if I had stayed. So far, it hasn't been too bad."

Kevin Mack

Mack talked quietly with about a half-dozen of the some 100 reporters and photographers who swarmed over the practice field. On his lawyer's advice, he declined to comment on the drug-trafficking charges, but talked freely about his fight to beat cocaine use.

The rehabilitation, he said, had made him a better person.

"I'm better in the way I treat my friends and my family," Mack said. "Basically, I'm not afraid of things I should not have been afraid of. As long as it's not somebody with a knife or a gun in their hand, then I know they can't kill me...."

"I'm giving it my best effort, and if I can do that, I'm satisfied. It's kind of a weird feeling after so many years of striving to be perfect, but perfection isn't my goal anymore."

Dr. Gregory Collins, the Browns' team psychiatrist and head of their player counseling office, said Mack's rehabilitation from drug use was on schedule.

"He has a good attitude," Collins said. "He seems to want to help himself."

Mack will undergo individual and group counseling with the Browns and also probably be subject to the NFL's program of twice-weekly urine tests for known drug users, according to Collins.

The doctor said Mack's realization of his own imperfection was a hard burden for any athlete to bear, especially one in a game as physically demanding as pro football.

"These guys are used to putting their best foot forward," Collins said. "It's a big blow. It's hard to get back your self-confidence and keep going."

The Eagles and Browns will practice against each other this week in single-session workouts. With temperatures in the upper 60s and free time for sightseeing and receptions, it is quite a change from the normal grind of sweltering NFL training camps.

"This is great. We could be back in West Chester (Pa.) doing two-a-days," Eagles running back Keith Byars said.

Byars and Browns quarterback Bernie Kosar were showing signs of jet lag as they talked.

"About all I've seen is my hotel room, I've been so tired," Byars said.

Players from both clubs took a bus tour of London sights shortly after they arrived Monday.

"We went to where the queen lives," Eagles quarterback Randall Cunningham said. "I don't know the name of it but it was a big house, as big as this stadium. The guide said the queen was home, because the flag was up."

The Union Jack flies above Buckingham Palace when Queen Elizabeth II is in residence.

Ickey, Boomer On Bengals' Injured List

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Ickey Shuffle has been temporarily put on hold.

Ickey Woods, the Cincinnati running back who scored 15 touchdowns as a rookie last season and electrified crowds with his "Ickey Shuffle" end zone dance, sprained his ankle Tuesday and will probably miss several days of practice.

The 230-pound back, injured during training camp workouts at Wilmington College, was helped into a motorcade and driven off the field.

The Bengals are already without quarterback Boomer Esiason, who has tendinitis of the knee. Coach Sam Wyche said Esiason apparently triggered the condition during a weekend workout.

Bengals coaches are also keeping an eye on the progress of backup center Paul Jetton. Bruce Kozerski, the starting center, is absent from camp because of a contract dispute.

"Paul is doing well," Wyche said. "He looks real good. We feel good about the way he's playing. As far as assignments, he doesn't miss them. So far, most of the work has been in drills, but his execution looks awful good."

Atlanta Falcons

Atlanta linebacker Marcus Cotton, who has missed much of training camp with a swollen knee, attributed the problem to arthroscopic surgery he had in May.

Cotton, who had his right knee repaired last October, said he had undergone a second procedure on May 31 to repair damaged cartilage.

Chicago Bears defensive tackle William Perry ended his contract holdout in time to get into a fight.

Perry got into a scuffle with rookie fullback Bryan Bero during Chicago's "nutcracker" running and tackling drills. Bero apparently thought Perry hit him too hard and two other players had to break up their spirited confrontation.

No one was hurt, although the 235-pound Bero was outweighed in the matchup by about 100 pounds.

Denver Broncos Arkansas safety Steve Atwater signed for a reported $2 million, then arrived at training camp.

The first-round choice signed a series of four one-year contracts, and received a signing bonus of $500,000.

The 20th player selected in the 1989 draft, Atwater was the first strong safety to be selected after the Broncos gave up the 13th position in exchange for a second-round selection.

Green Bay Packers

Injuries kept several players from practice, including starting defensive end Robert Brown (lower back) and reserve linebacker Scott Stephen (ankle). But tight end Ed West (knee) returned to workouts.

Meanwhile, the agents for holdouts Ken Ruetters and Tim Harris say their clients are close to signing. Ruetters is reportedly close to signing a one-year deal and is $25,000 apart in negotiations.

Harris is close to signing a two-year contract for approximately $1.2 million. The linebacker led the team in sacks last season.

New Orleans Saints

A sore Achilles tendon is costing two-time Pro Bowl pick Rueben Mayes some ground in his fight to open the season as New Orleans' starting running back ahead of Dalton Hilliard.

In practice, Mayes experienced a tearing pain in his right Achilles tendon and has been unable to work with the team. He flew back to New Orleans Tuesday for a second opinion and was due back in camp Tuesday night.

Hilliard and Mayes each started nine of last year's 16 games. Hilliard had 204 carries for 823 yards, and Mayes had 170 carries for 628, least of his three-year career.

New York Giants

Center-guard Frank Winters was scheduled to undergo exploratory surgery on his left knee Tuesday night. The former Cleveland Brown, who signed as a free agent this year, hurt the knee in a workout on Saturday.

The Giants held only one practice Tuesday because of the funeral of John Dzielge, the team's head trainer emeritus. Dzielge died Saturday at age 79. His association with the Giants lasted more than 40 years.

Start Of World Football League May Be Delayed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — Officials are still deciding whether to go ahead with a new international football league next year or postpone the start until 1991, sources said today.

Tex Schramm, commissioner of the fledgling World League of American Football, and other officials are in London this week meeting with prospective owners and looking at possible playing sites for what is expected to be the league's European flagship franchise.

Schramm was unavailable for comment but the sources, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said reports in British newspapers that the starting date for the new league definitely would be postponed until 1991 were wrong.

"They are totally false, not worth the paper they were printed on," one source said. "No decision has been made on when the league will begin play."

London, Milan, Frankfurt and either Barcelona or Paris are scheduled to be the initial European franchises in the league, which also will have teams in the United States, Mexico and Canada.

Soccer's World Cup, the biggest international sports event outside the Olympics, is scheduled for Italy next summer, about the time the WLAFF would be finishing its first spring-summer season.

In an interview earlier this summer, Schramm said the World Cup — while posing possible schedule and stadium conflicts — might also enhance the new league by bringing top sports journalists to Europe.

Last month, the National Football League voted to go ahead with the international league, which will be stocked with players from NFL rosters. It withheld a decision on when to start play, however, with Schramm reported pressing for a 1990 start and others calling for a delay until 1991.

McReynolds' Cycle Helps Mets Shake 7-Game Skid

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

On the night after the New York Mets acquired Frank Viola, Kevin McReynolds and Sid Fernandez made some sweet music of their own.

McReynolds drove in six runs Tuesday night and became the first Met since 1976 to hit for the cycle in a nine-inning game as New York snapped a seven-game losing streak with an 11-0 victory over St. Louis.

McReynolds' slugging and Fernandez's four-hitter took the pressure of breaking a long losing streak off of Viola, acquired from Minnesota by the Mets just before midnight Monday in exchange for five players.

McReynolds declined to talk to the media about supplanting Mike Phillips as the last Met to hit a homer, single, double and triple in a nine-inning game. Phillips did it against the Chicago Cubs on June 25, 1976, while Keith Hernandez hit for a cycle for the Mets in a 19-inning game on July 4, 1985. Fernandez was excited about his first shutout since July 3, 1988 and the fact that he succeeded without his usual strikeouts. He walked two and struck out only one, 15 less than his career high against Atlanta less than three weeks ago.

"I didn't have a lot. I just had to pitch more than I ever have before," said Fernandez, whose outfielders accounted for 17 of the Mets' 27 putouts. "I guess the key when you don't have your best stuff is to get ahead of batters and not walk people."

Pitching coach Mel Stottlemyre said it was unusual for Fernandez, 9-3, to win the way he did against the Cardinals.

"Generally speaking, most of the time he pitches a power-type game and has his exceptional fastball," Stottlemyre said. "He just had a mediocre fastball, but he did an excellent job with it. He spotted his pitches real well and got ahead and got a lot of fly balls."

"He stayed ahead of the hitters and pitched very effectively," catcher Barry Lyons said. "He pitched very smart and made some really good pitches when he had to. It was really a good outing for him, something we really needed. It will pick us up, I hope."

Expos 5, Pirates 4

Montreal handed Pittsburgh its fifth straight loss as Nelson Santovenia hit a two-run double in the 11th inning, his second game-winning hit in as many nights.

Doug Bair, 0-2, retired the first two Expos in the 11th before Hubie Brooks doubled and was replaced by pinch-runner Otis Nixon. Pirates manager Jim Leyland ordered Tim Wallach intentionally walked before Santovenia doubled into the left field corner.

"I'm sure Leyland saw Wallach coming up there and he said, 'Let's pitch to the kid catcher,'" Montreal manager Buck Rodgers said.

Giants 5, Dodgers 2

San Francisco took advantage of Fernando Valenzuela's throwing error to score two unearned runs, and Scott Garrelts recorded his third straight victory before leaving with a stiff right shoulder.

Garrelts, 9-3, allowed four hits in 5 1-3 innings, including Kai Daniels' fourth homer of the season, before leaving. The ex-reliever, unbeaten in four starts since coming off the disabled list July 16, was not sure how serious the injury was.

Craig Lefferts pitched three innings of three-hit ball for his 19th save in 20 opportunities.

O's Nightmare Continues; Lead Dwindles To 1 Game

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Frank Robinson never thought he would have to go through the experience he had in April 1988. He was right. This may be worse.

Baltimore lost a day-night doubleheader to Boston 5-3 and 6-2 Tuesday. The Orioles, who lost their first 23 games in the 1988 season, have lost 13 of 14 in their current slump and their lead in the American League East has dwindled to one game over second-place Boston.

"We're not playing by instinct, we're overthinking," Robinson said. "We really need a couple of wins, then we'll start playing like we did before."

Ellis Burks snapped a seventh-inning tie with an RBI double to lead Boston in the day game. Nick Esasky's three-run homer paced the Red Sox in the night game.

"The key to our problems is missed scoring opportunities," Robinson said. "We're getting men on base but we're not driving them in. These things build up. It wouldn't do any good to lose my head and start hollering because everyone's trying."

Boston has gained eight games on the Orioles since July 19 despite going 8-6. By winning their fifth straight, the Red Sox improved their record to 52-51, their first time over .500 since July 15.

"We feel good, strong and aggressive," Esasky said. "It's been a long day but when you win two, it makes it all worthwhile."

Rob Murphy, 2-5, won the day game, striking out four in 1 2-3 innings. Wes Gardner, 3-6, allowed five hits over 7 2-3 innings to win the second game. Lee Smith saved both, increasing his season total to 16.

Pete Harnisch, 1-5, lost the first game and Dave Johnson the second, his first big-league start.

Athletics 2, White Sox 0
Curt Young won for the first time in seven starts as Oakland moved back into first place in the American League West for the first time since July 6.

Felix Jose doubled in a run in the second and Carney Lansford singled in a run in the eighth.

Young, 3-8, combined with three relievers for a six-hitter. Greg Hibbard, 2-3, gave up eight hits in 7 2-3 innings for the visiting White Sox. Mariners 8, Angels 1

Alvin Davis drove in four runs and took over the American League batting lead, going 3-for-4 to raise his average to .341.

Kirby Puckett of the Twins, who had been leading, went 0-for-4 to drop his average to .346.

Mike Dunne scattered eight hits for his first complete game since June 11, 1988, when he was with Pittsburgh. He struck out eight, matching his career high. Jim Abbott, 9-7, allowed six runs and eight hits in 3 1-3 innings for the visiting Angels.

Brewers 4, Indians 2
Robin Yount doubled in the tying and go-ahead runs in a three-run eighth at County Stadium and Jamie Navarro, 3-3, allowed two hits over eight innings.

Milwaukee, with 10 victories in its last 13 games, moved to within 2 1/2 games of first-place Baltimore. Dan Plesac pitched a perfect ninth for his 25th save.

With the Brewers trailing 2-1, Jim Gantner singled off Doug Jones, 4-6, to begin the eighth and Rob Deer doubled. Yount lined a double past the drawn-in infield. Royals 2, Blue Jays 1

Bret Saberhagen, 11-5, pitched a three-hitter in the SkyDome for his eighth victory in nine decisions. He had lost five consecutive decisions against Toronto since beating the Blue Jays on July 11, 1987.

Todd Stottlemyre, 2-5, gave up eight hits and both runs in seven-plus innings. He struck out five and walked three.

Twins 5, Yankees 4
Randy Bush's two-run homer capped a three-run rally in the seventh inning at Yankee Stadium as Minnesota won its first game without 1988 Cy Young Award winner Frank Viola, who was traded to the New York Mets late Monday.

Shane Rawley, 5-8, remained undefeated in five career decisions against his former team and Jeff Reardon finished for his 18th save.

Walt Terrell, 0-1, gave up five runs on nine hits in 6 1-3 innings.

Rangers 4, Tigers 3
Harold Baines, acquired by Texas last Saturday from the Chicago White Sox, hit a two-run homer in the ninth off Paul Gibson, 2-6. Baines is 5-for-12 since joining the Rangers.

Kevin Brown, 10-6, gave up five hits in eight innings and struck out six at Tiger Stadium. Jeff Russell finished for his 22nd save.

Maryland's Perkins Cleared

ongoing probe by the State Ethics Commission. Delegate Howard P. Rawlings, D-Baltimore, alleges that sports boosters paid Perkins to push out Wade, the school's first black basketball coach. Rawlings points to the financing of a $90,000 second mortgage on Perkins' home by a sports booster club affiliated with the athletic department. Perkins has denied the charge. Kirwan said he is satisfied by the inquiry into the ethics allegations and is awaiting the State Ethics Commission report on the ninth charge. "According to Mr. Anderson, his investigation uncovered no evidence of any conduct on the part of Perkins that warrants action by this institution. I concur with that assessment," Kirwan said. In June, shortly after Wade's forced resignation May 12, the Legislative Black Caucus submitted to Kirwan a list of grievances against Perkins. Kirwan asked the state attorney general to investigate. Among the grievances were: - A basketball player's use of a telephone card to run up about $300 in unauthorized phone charges. Rawlings said they were later repaid but the source of the funds was not noted and the player testified against Wade. - The use of "spirit girls" to entertain prospective student athletes when they are visiting the campus. The university admits to the practice, common at many campuses. - Contacts between Perkins and university basketball coach Gary Williams that occurred before Wade resigned amid revelations about the black lawbreaker's alleged sexual relationship with Williams while Wade still held the job.

his comments about other players. "If you can write down on a piece of paper how I can act that I wouldn't get criticized, I'll do it," he said. "But something tells me no matter what I do, there would be someone that criticizes. So I've just got to be happy with what I'm doing." Agassi, the defending champion in this $602,500 tournament that offers $114,000 to the winner, next meets Marty Davis, a 7-6 (8-6), 6-2 winner over Danie Visser. No. 2 seed Michael Chang, 17, now ahead of Agassi at No. 6 in the world after his stunning victory in the French Open, advanced on Monday. No. 3 seed Brad Gilbert moved up Tuesday with a 6-2, 6-2 victory over Richard Schmidt, and No. 5 Amos Mansdorf advanced by beating Marty Barba 6-4, 6-1. "I feel like I'm playing well and my potential is not going to let me fall too far." Agassi, 19, said his main problems occurred during the first three months of the year, "and that was more off the court than on the court." "It's just tough when you work so hard to try to be the person everybody expects you to be and you seem to get criticized for every slip of the tongue," he said. He used as an example one story he said quoted him as saying the American Davis Cup team considered its two singles matches against West Germany's Carl-Uwe Steeb a cinch. He said his actual comment was, "I think we're all counting on those two points against Steeb." The story made him sound "like I'm some kind of egotistical maniac or something who has nothing to say but real arrogant things," he said. "Stuff like that," he said of his treatment by the media. "It was hard for me to get used to. It really made you question if all of it was really worth it." But a few players also have been critical of Agassi's joking and some of the with spectators and some of

S. African Hospitals Treat Blacks

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Scores of black and Indian patients, supported by throngs of protesters, were treated at segregated white hospitals today as the anti-apartheid movement launched a nationwide defiance campaign.

At major hospitals in Johannesburg and Durban, about 170 patients ranging from babies to grandmothers in wheelchairs were admitted for treatment. Hospital officials, trying to avoid confrontations, said they would not turn away anyone who appeared in genuine need of medical care.

Twelve white women supporting the protest were arrested in Johannesburg, but no violence was reported at any of the eight hospitals targeted by the Mass Democratic Movement, a coalition of anti-apartheid groups that planned the defiance campaign.

"As of today, the Mass Democratic Movement considers all health facilities in South Africa open (to all races)," said Aslam Dasoo, a doctor who helped organize the protest. "The government doesn't seem to be able to end apartheid, so we are going to end it for them."

In the port city of Durban, more than 1,000 protesters staged an illegal demonstration near Addington Hospital while 120 blacks and Indians, under the direction of senior anti-apartheid leaders, were admitted for out-patient treatment. "Apartheid Makes Us Sick," said one of the posters carried at the rally.

The first protester to enter Addington was Mariam Jagga, an elderly Indian woman in a wheelchair.

By midday, 48 blacks were admitted to Johannesburg General Hospital, according to a spokesman, and 100 supporters staged a rally at an adjoining medical school. Like Addington, Johannesburg General regularly admits some blacks for emergency care and specialized treatment, but it has a policy of transferring them to less well-equipped black hospitals as soon as feasible.

Dr. Reg L. Bekmann, superintendent of Johannesburg General, said about 11 percent of his 830 current patients were black.

Dasoo noted that the blacks were admitted within an hour at Johannesburg General, much quicker than the normal processing time at badly overcrowded Baragwanath Hospital in Soweto, the region's main facility for black patients.

The protests were smaller or non-existent at the six targeted hospitals outside Johannesburg and Durban. Activists said some would-be protesters were stopped at police roadblocks.

Nine blacks were admitted to H.F. Verwoerd Hospital in Pretoria and one black man, accompanied by three prominent anti-apartheid leaders, was treated at Paardekraal Hospital in the conservative mining town of Krugersdorp, where medical segregation has been enforced firmly.

"Without intervention such as this, these people wouldn't even get to see a doctor," said Audrey Coleman, a white activist who was at Paardekraal.

Kaifu Tops Candidates In Japan

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — A former education minister who served a reform-minded government in the 1970s today emerged as front-runner in the race to become Japan's next prime minister, governing party members said.

Toshiki Kaifu became the leading choice to replace Souseke Uno, who has been in power only two months, after 78-year-old Toshio Komoto said he would not run for president of the deeply troubled Liberal Democratic Party.

That cleared the way for Kaifu, Komoto's protégé, whose candidacy drew support from other factions in the conservative governing party.

"I'm overwhelmed by the honor and will do my best," Kaifu said at a news conference after Komoto's faction, with 30 members one of the smallest in the party, united behind him.

Kaifu, who earlier had said he supported Komoto for party leader, was the only declared candidate for the post. The Liberal Democrats' president is certain to be elected prime minister because of the long-governing party's commanding majority in the lower house of parliament.

Kaifu said it was too early to speak in detail about his policies, "but political reform is the biggest issue that has been raised by the people."

Polish Communists Name Prime Minister

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WARSAW, Poland — Parliament today elected Interior Minister Gen. Czeslaw Kiszczak prime minister in a victory for the long-ruling Communist Party, whose power has been eroding.

On Tuesday, the body had postponed a vote on giving the premiership to Kiszczak, the Communist nominee and handpicked candidate of President Wojciech Jaruzelski.

Some deputies in the communist-allied Peasant Party had sought a government dominated by Solidarity. But most, after urgent arm-twisting Tuesday night by their party leadership and Communist officials, ended up voting for Kiszczak.

"Looks like they were frightened," said Solidarity member Jan Litynski following the vote.

Solidarity leaders opposed the candidacy of Kiszczak, the nation's police commander who implemented the 1981 martial law crackdown that tried to crush the free trade union movement.

"He could well form a kind of government that promotes a free market but retains a strong police," said Jan Bielecki, a Solidarity deputy from Gdansk. "The kinds of economic policies he presented today are likely to lead to stagnation, but that may be enough for the party to retain power."

Before Kiszczak was elected, the Communists lost a key parliament vote for the first time in postwar Poland as Solidarity pushed through a resolution to investigate the outgoing government for economic misconduct.

Solidarity believes the outgoing government of Mieczyslaw Rakowski — now Communist Party chief — should be held accountable for the unraveling of the economy during its nine months.

Poland, convulsed by consumer shortages and triple-digit inflation, suffered further Tuesday when price controls were lifted on meat, sugar and other basic commodities. Prices rose 43 percent for most goods.

Parliament's lower house, the Sejm, today voted 237-173 with 10 abstentions for Kiszczak. The required majority was 211 votes.

The ruling communist coalition holds a 299-161 majority in the Sejm, but the Communists have just 173 seats and they had not been sure they could count on deputies of the allied Peasant and Democratic parties, which used to obediently follow the Communists.

According to several deputies, the Peasant caucus leader, Aleksander Bentkowski, had proposed that they and Solidarity jointly form a government with a Solidarity prime minister.

"We have a general as president. Now they want a general as president. And we know they want a Communist to be deputy premier," said one Peasant Party rebel on condition of anonymity. "What kind of new government is that supposed to be?"

Opposition lawmakers entered parliament after June elections, the country's freest in four decades, ended the Communists' monopoly of legislative power.

The Solidarity victory was so overwhelming — the movement won all but one of the seats they were allowed to contest — that it asked to be allowed to form the new government, but Jaruzelski rejected the prospect as unacceptable to East bloc allies.

Jaruzelski, who stepped down as Communist Party chief over the weekend in favor of his new, more powerful post, has promised to allow an eventual transition to complete democracy.

Before his election, Kiszczak took the Sejm floor and stressed that the country's economic problems are paramount.

"I want to create conditions for the best specialists in the economy in the country to develop activities. I come out in full favor of total openness of government actions," he said.

He once more invited the opposition to join in a Communist-led government, an offer Solidarity has repeatedly rebuffed.

Kiszczak represented the government in "round-table" talks with Solidarity leader Lech Walesa that led to Solidarity's legalization in April after a seven-year ban. Like many leading Communists, he failed to be elected a deputy in the June elections despite running uncontested.

Kiszczak later asked for two weeks to assemble a Cabinet, which also must be approved by the Sejm.

But he said he wanted Deputy Prime Minister Ireneusz Sekula, who handled economic policy under the outgoing government, to perform the same function in his Cabinet.

Before today's vote on Kiszczak, Communist floor leader Marian Orzechowski, charged in the Sejm that an investigation of the outgoing government would be unfair but the deputies voted 206-169 with 31 abstentions to undertake a probe.

It voted to form a commission that would decide if legal grounds exist to recommend prosecution. It was the first substantive vote the Communists have lost, although they have been on the losing side of some procedural matters.

Sekula on Tuesday defended the outgoing government, saying in nine months it lifted more than 3,000 regulations. "We acted in Poland's interest and in the interest of ... our society."

 Opening lead: King of ♣

ple effort? It was so easy that he took his eye off the ball. The same thing happens at the bridge table. The bidding was routine, although we would be the first to admit a rebid of three no trump by South has certain appeal. At rubber bridge, however, the possession of 100 honors would sway us to four hearts. On the opening lead of the king of clubs, East started an echo with the jack to show a four-card holding in the suit. West shifted to the jack of diamonds, and declarer wasted no time in going down. He won in hand, drew three rounds of trumps and then continued with a diamond to the king and another. When that suit split 4-2, the most likely distribution, declarer ended up losing two diamonds and a trick in each black suit—down one. Had declarer paused to count the available tricks off the top, he would have realized there were only nine—six trumps, a spade and two diamonds. The simplest way to produce a 10th was to ruff a diamond in dummy. Therefore, declarer could not afford to draw more than one round of trumps, and that with a high trump in hand. Next, South should cash the remaining high diamond and exit with a diamond. No matter what the defenders do, declarer can win any return, if necessary come to hand with a club ruff or a high trump, and then ruff a diamond with the king of trumps for the fulfilling trick.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A federal judge who was reprimanded for ruling on two General Electric Co. cases while owning GE stock said he will institute safeguards to prevent it from happening again.

A judicial panel determined that U.S. District Judge Thomas Curran violated the U.S. Judicial Code of Ethics by ruling in the cases, according to documents obtained Tuesday by The Associated Press.

The code requires judges to disqualify themselves from any case in which they have a personal or financial interest.

In a letter, William J. Bauer, chief judge of the U.S. 7th Circuit Court of Appeals, admonished Curran to "increase your diligence in searching out any future possible conflicts" but said no other action would be taken.

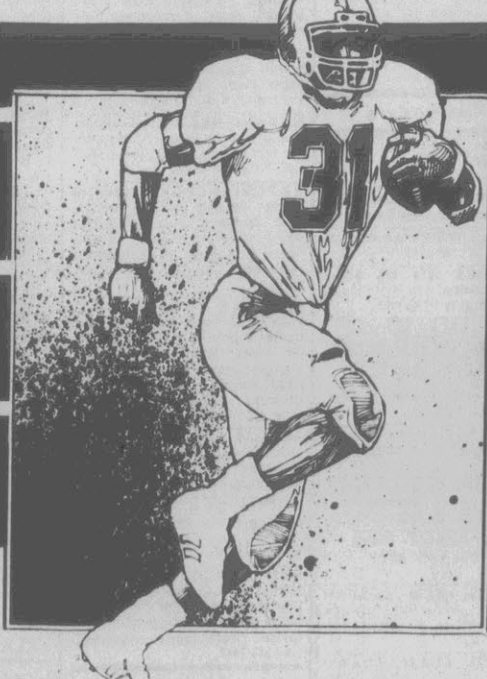

"Because the violation, unintended as it appears, gives an appearance of impropriety to the actions, we express our concern that they occurred," said Bauer, who oversees the Milwaukee district where Curran presides.

Curran could have faced suspension or a recommendation that he be impeached, but Bauer said those penalties would have been too harsh.

Curran's rulings in the cases where he had holdings were reported by the AP on May 30. That report triggered the 7th Circuit review.

The Judicial Council is made up of the 11 active appeals judges in the 7th Circuit and four district judges from the 7th Circuit, which covers Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin.

Upon being notified of the conflict, Curran publicly dismissed himself from the cases, an action that allows interested parties to reopen the cases.

Thatcher's Methods In Shuffling Cabinet Upset Longtime Supporters

By Maureen Johnson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has angered powerful political associates with a Cabinet shuffle that humiliated her longtime foreign secretary.

It was not so much what she did on July 24 — when 13 of the 22 Cabinet posts changed hands — that has upset the hierarchy of the usually well-disciplined Conservative Party.

It was her manner of doing it that left wounds and resentments which, some analysts believe, could mark the beginning of Thatcher's political end.

"Many of us found what went on nauseating," Tory legislator David Howell, chairman of the House of Commons foreign affairs committee, said in a television interview.

He spoke after news broke of how Mrs. Thatcher moved aside Sir Geoffrey Howe, Britain's longest-serving foreign secretary since World War II, and replaced him with a virtual unknown, John Major.

In the process, according to Howe's aides, Mrs. Thatcher offered Howe another senior, but less prestigious job as home secretary — without consulting the incumbent, Douglas Hurd.

Howe, 62, turned that post down as a demotion after six years as foreign secretary. He settled for what Mrs. Thatcher's office called the "courtesy title" of deputy prime minister and the job of government leader in the House of Commons.

Howe also accepted residence in a country mansion, Dorneywood, which currently is used as a weekend retreat by the third member of Mrs. Thatcher's top Cabinet trio, Chancellor of the Exchequer Nigel Lawson.

"This is how regimes behave when they have begun to take power for granted," commented London Sunday Times columnist Robert Harris.

Off the record, government ministers were quoted as complaining that Mrs. Thatcher, who has held office for 10 years, committed a major blunder by humiliating or affronting all three of her top Cabinet colleagues.

Some described the shakeup by Mrs. Thatcher — who has sole power to appoint Cabinet ministers from among her party's legislators — as a "shambles" and said it reflected her increasing lack of regard for the Cabinet.

Mrs. Thatcher's Downing Street office took the unusual step of announcing she supported Hurd and would have kept him in an unspecified top job had Howe taken the job of home secretary.

In the announcement, Mrs. Thatcher also said there will be no more Cabinet shakeups before the next general election, which must be held by mid-1992 but could come earlier.

Howe, who was cheered by sympathizers when he entered the Commons after the shuffle, hastily denied a newspaper report that he planned to run against Mrs. Thatcher for the party leadership.

Hurd announced that the Cabinet was united. Lawson, known to disagree with Mrs. Thatcher on aspects of economic policy, said nothing.

"The Thatcher Cabinet is now more divided than ever before... not on policy, but on personality. Either they are for Mrs. Thatcher or they are against Mrs. Thatcher," wrote columnist Alan Cochrane in the pro-conservative Mail on Sunday newspaper.

"She is lucky the long summer recess is now upon us... but the summer won't last forever. And the contenders for her job won't bide their time forever," he said.

A senior aide to Mrs. Thatcher hinted that Howe was removed because he and Lawson pressed the prime minister to be more conciliatory about European monetary union before June's meeting of European Economic Community leaders in Madrid.

At the summit, she agreed in principle to link the pound to other European currencies.

Report Says More Space Deaths Likely

WASHINGTON — The United States must be prepared to accept the likelihood that more astronauts will be killed if space missions become routine, according to a report submitted to Congress today.

"If such risks are perceived to be too high, the nation may decide to reduce its emphasis on placing humans in space," said the report by the congressional Office of Technology Assessment.

Space shuttle reliability to date, with one catastrophic failure in 29 launches — the 1986 explosion of Challenger — is 96.5 percent and a contractor estimated last year that a representative chance of mission success is 98 percent.

The price of increased space activity includes "the likelihood that loss of life will occur," the report said.

"If reliability is and remains 98 percent, there would be a 50 percent chance of losing an orbiter on the next 34 flights, a 72 percent chance of losing an orbiter before the first space station assembly flight and an 88 percent chance of losing an orbiter before space station assembly is completed 42 flights later," said OTA.

Current plans call for all hardware for the planned space station to be carried into orbit in shuttle cargo holds, along with astronauts who will do the assembly. Engineers have been talking, though, of reducing the number of shuttle missions by carrying parts into orbit on heavy-duty rockets.

After the loss of Challenger, NASA was left with a three-orbiter fleet: Columbia — the shuttle that is scheduled to fly next week on a military mission — Discovery and Atlantis. A replacement for Challenger, named the Endeavour, is expected to be ready for flight in 1992 and a year later NASA expects to reach a flight rate of 14 a year.

Six-Beat Shuffle Moves Beyond The Boardwalk

By J. Ward Best
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Nearly 50 years ago a casual new dance step emerged on the Carolina beaches — one well suited to the casual beach lifestyle and the pursuit of a good time.

They called it "shag". The foot shuffling, spins and twirls of the dance originated in the beach clubs, but missionaries with a good bit of sand in their shoes spread the shag to higher ground. It's not just for the beach anymore.

Shaggers have boosted attendance in night clubs from Greenville to Columbia, S.C. and Atlanta. They travel weekly, sometimes nightly to shag contests, and work long hours with their partners to ensure a top performance.

"It's a religious experience to me," says veteran shagger Steve Greer.

In Greenville, shagging is popular enough to support a local shag contest and three classes a week. The city's recreation and parks department offers the classes at the Teen Center each Tuesday night, where two teachers give shag instructions to more than 50 dancers every six weeks.

For the two instructors, teaching is more than three hours of showing the middle aged how to shuffle with style. Sue Hallow and Johnny Miller have shagged since the hey-day of the dance in the 1950s.

"It's addictive," Ms. Hallow says. "You want to learn more and more and more."

Learn she has. Since taking lessons from a black neighbor at 12, Ms. Hallow has shuffled her way into becoming a "Living Legend," an elite title reserved for the best.

She fondly remembers the days at Carolina Beach, the smell of doughnuts on the boardwalk, shagging at Duck's Burger Palace.

Would-be shaggers pay $35 per course to learn part of what Ms. Hallow knows.

Shag evolved from earlier dances, with a heavy dose of black influence from the Lindy Hop, a Harlem step. The surviving terms for shag steps, such as applejack, sugarfoot and boogey walk, reflect its origins in black nightclubs.

But the shag, Ms. Hallow says, is more casual than the Lindy Hop. In its early days, it was open to just about anything, as long as you kept your partner.

"Today's dance is a lot more intricate, more footwork, more turns, more spins, more perfection," she says. But it still recalls its roots. "... it is the very same count as a Lindy, a jitterbug or a swing."

The dance is based on one step which is like the most simple form of human motion — walking. Belly rolls, turns and mirrored steps are all added later.

Miller says he can teach his students the basics of the dance in one six-week session. But he warns against expecting to become a pro in the first lessons.

"If they think they're going to dance in six weeks, I'm sorry, I can't work miracles."

Miller, who owns his own sporting goods store in Williamston, also spins shaggers' favorites two nights a week at clubs in Goldsboro and Rocky Mount. And he collects what passes for beach music — anything with a strong six-count beat. He has more than 2,000 45s and about 100 albums.

"As long as there's that driving beat with that basic six count, you can dance to it," he says.

The rhythm and blues beat that gave birth to the shag has changed over the years, but shaggers have their standards and their favorites.

The better-known groups roll off Miller's tongue — The Temptations, The Four Tops, the Catalinas and The Drifters. And because of the renewed popularity, bands such as The Embers, Chairman of the Board and The Band of Oz feed off of the dance.

Long-time shaggers call the new bands "bubble gum" because of the greater pop influences in the music. But Miller says that's the most requested music in the clubs.

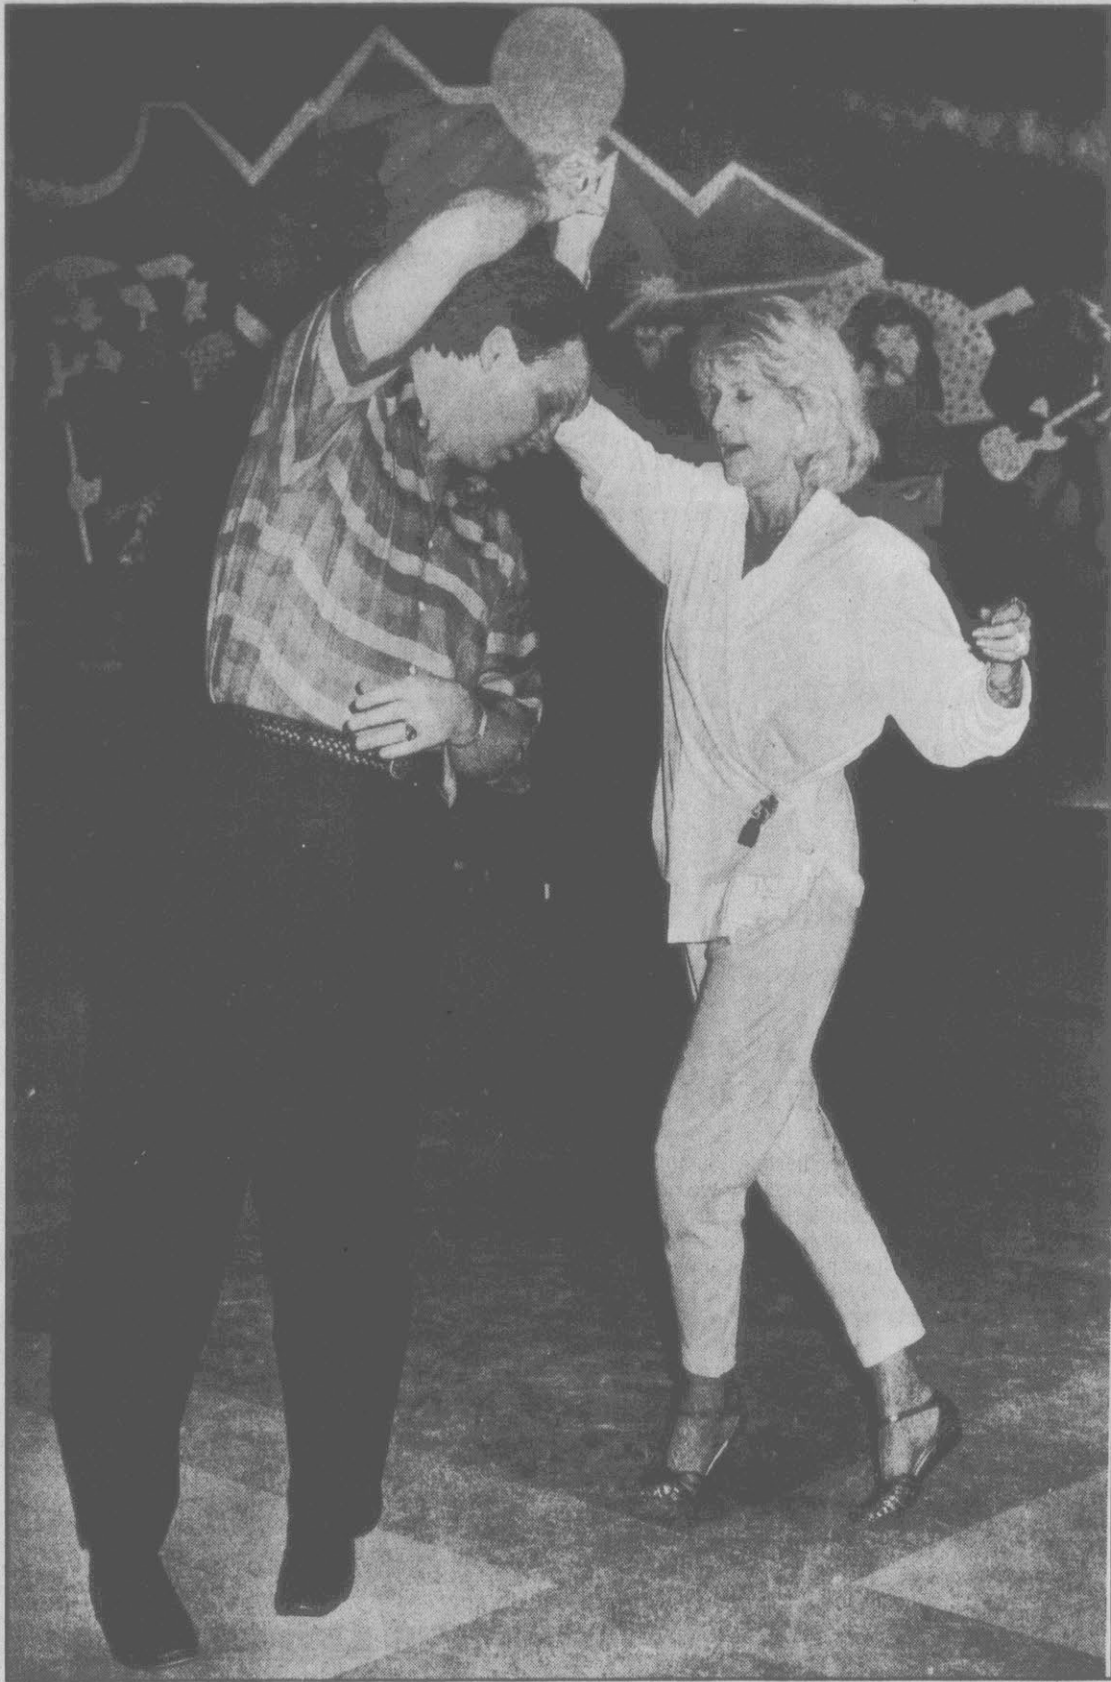

But not all of what passes for beach music comes from beach bands. O.C. Smith, Aretha Franklin and even Hank Williams Jr. have all taken a turn on the shag play list.

Miller, who uses his own collection at the clubs, says he has been playing to steadily increasing audiences.

"The interest has really picked up in the past year," Miller says.

Shaggers say it's a physical attraction — the quest for physical fitness and physical companionship.

Ms. Hallow says the benefits go beyond pure fun in a night club. "It's a good outlet after a divorce or any kind of traumatic experience. Exercise is the best thing in the world for stress, period."

The lessons she teaches also provide a support group for the students.

Ben Garrett, a repeat student in the beginner's class, says after his recent divorce and the death of his mother, shagging provides a great release. And as an added benefit, Garrett says, "it's a great way to meet people."

The former Virginian says he doesn't take lessons to become competitive, but he takes his dancing seriously. Last Tuesday, Garrett drove back from Virginia Beach early to make the class. And he has scheduled time off from work to attend a two-day beach music and shag festival later this week.

"I really look forward to Tuesday night," Garrett said.

H.B. Taylor and Gina Baird are in it for each other. Taylor says he and Ms. Baird decided to take the class to spend more time together and to dance a little closer when they go out.

Taylor says they're in it for pure fun. But his fun requires a long drive

Precision Is One Pleasure For Those Who See 'Shag'

A Review

By Stephen Hunter
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

It is easy enough to call "Shag" a "Mystic Pizza" with a Southern accent and let it go at that, but to let it go at that would be to let it go too soon. There's almost nothing new in this movie, but there is also almost nothing that doesn't work.

It follows four more or less proper Spartanburg, S.C., girls in the summer of what now seems to be widely regarded as the high year of the American golden age, 1963. With their lives perfectly planned and waiting for them, their inflexible fates graven in the stone of furiously conformist but fabulously comforting society, they decide to seize the weekend. They suspend the inevitable for three days and take off for Myrtle Beach, which is where the sand, sun and the boys are.

Over the long weekend, each meets that special something — the formula. That is, the proper engaged one (Phoebe Cates) meets a wild and sexy bohemian (Robert Rusler) who has modeled his behavior on Paul Newman in "The Hustler"; the cute one (Annabeth Gish) meets another cute one (Scott Coffey); the wild and beautiful one (Bridget Fonda) meets, first of all, an Elvis clone and then a rock star from Philly named Richie or Dickie or something (Jeff Yagher, actually playing somebody named "Jimmy"); and the plain one (Page Hannah, in harlequin glasses) meets nobody, which is the payoff for being plain in the movies.

There is even a dance contest at the end. (The word "Shag," by the way, refers to a kind of jitterbug variation that was big on the Southern beach scene in the early '60s.) If you yawn as you read this, bear in mind that I yawn as I write it, but also bear in mind that I didn't yawn as I watched it.

One great pleasure in "Shag" is precision. The PG-rated movie has been put together with consummate attention to details of place and time — it was the empire of madras, it was the kingdom of the sneaker and the culotte, it was the universe of the polo shirt, untucked. Moreover, the movie is exquisitely photographed; cinematographer Peter MacDonald really captures that flat, white, beach sunlight and also the kind of liquefied vividness of nights on a boardwalk where the music is hot, the beer plentiful and all the women have really nice tan lines. So simply as a document of recreation it seems well worth the time.

But it is the freshness of attitude that makes the movie click. It may be that this is essentially an English film on American materials that gives it its secret sense of freshness. Zelda Barron, the director, is English, as is the production company, Hemdale. It is as if the film makers are exploring what is to them an undiscovered country.

So many youth pics, American-style, are simply set at the generic beach in the generic now that they have no zing; this English production goes to extraordinary lengths to pretend as if there have been no "beach movies" or "wild weekend" movies before. The makers of "Shag" also have a respect for the South, which they see with affection rather than condescension. This is not the inevitable smug yahoo-

Page Hannah Is Proud Of Her Role In The Movie

By Lou Cedrone
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

BALTIMORE — "Shag" opened two years after it was finished, but Page Hannah, who appears in the film, does not mind the delay. Hannah, sister to Daryl Hannah, has appeared in five films that have never been released. Most of them have not even made it to cable.

Hannah talked about "Shag" during a recent visit to Baltimore. "I'm so proud of it," she said. "It's not the usual teen movie. It's not about sex, drugs and rock 'n' roll. It's really about friendship. It does have an 'Animal House' party scene in it, but it's not a degenerate movie. It has a good image for kids, and we need more positive images for them."

She said that she enjoys the less positive teen movies, but she says she is "scared for my nieces and nephews. I'm afraid of what (those films) will do to them."

"Shag" reminds film buffs of movies like "Where the Boys Are," the 1960 feature in which Paula Prentiss, Connie Francis, Dolores Hart and Yvette Mimieux were the four young ladies who spent their spring vacation at Fort Lauderdale. In "Shag," Hannah, Bridget Fonda, Annabeth Page and Phoebe Cates are the high-school graduates who want to live it up at Myrtle Beach, S.C. One girl goes "all the way" and lives to tell about it.

In "Where the Boys Are," the girl played by Mimieux paid for her frivolity by wandering dazed through traffic. Rescued, she was taken to the hospital.

"We looked at a lot of those beach films," said Hannah. "We looked at the movies done by Frankie Avalon and Annette Funicello."

Page Hannah is four years younger than her sister. She is 25 and has been working as an actress for the last several years. Born in Chicago, she began her career by doing television commercials, then she headed for New York where she landed a role in the daytime soap, "Search for Tomorrow." Later, she did "Fame," the television series. And then came those five unreleased films.

She and her sister are very close. Page is the third oldest in a family that has grown and grown. "Three of us are full siblings," she said.

Dear Pat: I need your help. I'm left-handed and all knitting books,

Pat's Pointers By PAT TREXLER

instructions, etc. are for right-handers. Are there any publications for us lefties, or can you give us any advice? Lillian B., Murrells Inlet, S.C.

Dear Lillian: I have seen a couple of articles written for left-handers, but I did not save them. One didn't have any information that was new to me, and the other, frankly, seemed a bit contrived and confusing. There may now be something better available, but I am not aware of it.

I have talked with a number of left-handed knitters over the years. Most agree that since knitting is a two-handed procedure, they had no difficulty knitting in the same method as right-handers.

Others say that knitting in the Continental manner, in which yarn is held in the left hand as one would do when crocheting, is easier. As a right-handed person, I have learned to knit in the Continental way as well as the more familiar English style in which the yarn is held in the right hand. Knitting Continental-style, however, involves "picking" the yarn through each stitch with the right-hand needle instead of wrapping the yarn to make a new stitch.

This seems to me to require even more right-hand dexterity, which could make it more difficult for a southpaw.

A few left-handers told me they learned to knit by sitting opposite a right-handed knitter and working in the opposite - or mirror image - manner. That is, they would be doing with the left hand what their teacher was doing with the right hand. One said she learned from a book by placing a mirror in front of the illustrations and following the image in the mirror.

This would, of course, involve changing all written and charted directions that make reference to the left or right, but this may not be too much of a problem if you are accustomed to mentally transposing instructions in other fields to accommodate your left-handedness.

I think this last method would be the best choice for crocheters, because the hand that holds the hook definitely needs to be the dominant one.

If any readers who are left-handed have other suggestions or sources of good instruction material for left-handers, let me know. In the meantime, I hope this discussion will be of some help to my left-handed readers.

It Seems Like Williams Has Been Everywhere

By Kasey Jones
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

BALTIMORE — Handsome? You bet. Even though he looks as if he just woke up, the movie-star quality is there.

But it's the voice — as smooth and soothing and seductive as an ice-cold glass of the beer he promotes might seem on this brutally hot and humid day — that embodies the sex appeal of Billy Dee Williams.

The voice — and the presence — that was paired with Diana Ross on the big screen, with Diahann Carroll on the small screen. It seems Billy Dee Williams has been everywhere. On Broadway (most recently in "Fences"); in comedies ("Bingo Long"); in sci-fi (two of the "Star Wars" sagas). He currently can be seen, if only briefly, in "Batman," as Gotham's new prosecutor.

And yes, that seductive voice also sells beer.

"You can't legislate morality," is Williams' less-than-original justification of his role as "spokesman" for Colt 45 Malt Liquor. "There's nothing wrong with drinking beer. People are not going to stop drinking. But there's a difference between being a responsible person and an irresponsible person. You don't drink to the point that you're out of control."

There is no defensiveness in his voice, subdued but clear in his suite at the Harbor Court Hotel. Williams is casually, coolly dressed in off-white, loose-fitting cotton slacks and shirt. The hair that millions of women long to run their fingers through is covered with a Special Olympics cap, his favorite charity.

Williams was in Baltimore over the weekend as part of a six-city tour sponsored by Colt 45 (the theme of the commercials, which feature him in a variety of high-tech music video-like scenes, is that the malt liquor "works every time"). Sunday, he made a donation from Colt 45 to the Maryland Special Olympics athletes and coaches at Francis X. Gallagher Center in Timonium, Md.

"These kids (in Special Olympics competitions) serve as an extreme example of what you can do with yourself if you want to meet a challenge," Williams says. "They prove there's no excuse to lay back and give up."

He is currently reading "A Brief History of Time," by Stephen Hawking, the world-renown physicist who suffers from amyotrophic lateral sclerosis. "He's another example of not giving up."

Touting beer is not the only controversy in Williams' career. In 1988, he supported Alexander Haig in his bid for president.

"I don't fall on the bandwagon for reasons of race. It's unfair for people to think that because you support a certain person, you're a turncoat. People should realize there are blacks more conservative than other blacks.

"I've followed (General Haig's) career for some time ... he's not extreme right-wing," Williams says.

"I felt a certain kind of discipline was necessary (to run the country). He was taught (during his military career) to deal with things in a very direct sense ... to tell people exactly what the problem is and how to deal with it. I thought he had the greatest qualifications of all the candidates."

On less political topics, Williams says his role in "Batman" is there to plant the seeds of a new villain in a sequel. The do-good prosecutor will become Two-Face, after a character created in the original Batman comics. "I always wanted to do an archvillain," he says. "I hope to do something really exciting with that character."

Hannah

lived together after they became actresses. Daryl made it first, but Page isn't sure her older sister was her inspiration. Their uncle is Haskell Wexler, the cinematographer.

"Daryl and I both lived with him in Los Angeles," said Page. "We both worked on his crews. Maybe that's where it all began."

When she first read the script for "Shag," she wanted the role of Pudge, the overweight girl played by Annabeth Gish. "They said I could play any character I wanted, but there was no way I could play Pudge, not at 98 pounds," she said. "I've gained 10 pounds since then, but at the time, I could never have played Pudge."

She still couldn't play the role, because Hannah is slim at 108 pounds. She doesn't look much like her sister. Her hair is reddish brown and long, and she is not quite so tall as Daryl.

She admits that having a sister in the business hasn't hurt. "I find that they are more willing to hear me read," she said. "At the same time, they think of me as Daryl Hannah's little sister, that I am a smaller version of her, and I am not."

Hannah says she is happy with the way her career has gone. She realizes, though, that if "Shag" is successful, she may be typed as the plain girl. "I'm not comfortable with glamour roles," she said. "I go for the others, and they tend to be more interesting. I wouldn't even mind being typed as a nerd."

Shag

to and from Beaufort, where he farms.

"I told her 'I'll drive to Greenville if you'll dance with me,'" Taylor said.

Like Ms. Hallow, Steve Greer remembers the early days of dancing at clubs in North and South Carolina.

"During the time that I was dancing at Morehead," Greer says, "we would get together and everybody would tell a pack of lies to parents and somebody would get the car. ... There would be about 15 heads in one sedan running 85 mph to get to the beach."

In the early days of the dance — when a friend's sister was the best and most often the only shag teacher around — shagging was relaxed and styling depended on where you learned.

Shaggers now support a hall of fame in Myrtle Beach, S.C. And dance contests are scored on a standardized set of criteria.

The Shaggers Preservation Association sets the standards of judging for five categories: togetherness, smoothness, repertoire, difficulty and execution.

Night clubs, including the Ramada on Greenville Boulevard, regularly hold shag contests for the faithful.

"Some people play for fun and some people want that competition," Ms. Hallow says. "I've got one girl in class, I think she would go to the end of the world and dance every time there was a contest if her husband would."

Although not required, shaggers also have their own uniform.

Ms. Hallow says the heat and sweat generated by shuffling dancers requires comfortable clothing.

The preppie look is usually the hallmark of a shagger. And the footwear for fancy dancers is even more specific.

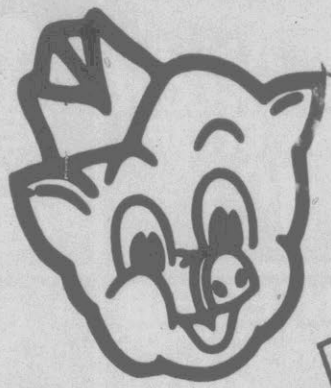

Tennis shoes and spike heels are out.

Women wear flats that will slide across the floor and still stay attached to their feet. For men, only a loafers will do, more specifically, Bass Weejuns.

"If I'm in a strange place and a guy asks me to dance," Ms. Hallow says, "I go right down to his feet. If he's got no socks on and Weejuns, you're pretty sure he can dance."

Clothing, competition and lesson aside, one thing has not changed since the dance began, Ms. Hallow says.

"The ultimate criterion is can you or can't you dance."

Violence Drips From Screen As Never Before

By Sheila Benson
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

HOLLYWOOD — Time magazine's recent cover story is devoted to the way 464 Americans were killed by guns in a single week, and some of the biggest box-office movies of the summer are bloodier than ever. The topics don't seem unrelated.

Films, still the most potent message-carriers around, seem to be fostering violence. They're murderous, they present new, bigger, more insidious methods of killing people, they do well at the box office and they come back having to top themselves.

Two of the summer sequels — "Licence to Kill," a "new" James Bond (the first not to have come from one of the books and the furthest in spirit from them), and "Lethal Weapon 2" — appear hell-bent on setting some new high-water mark in violent death and noisy destruction. "Batman," which gets to create its own precedents, adds a nasty twist to its brutality. And so the ante is upped everywhere along the line.

The point about "Batman's" Joker is destruction and mutilation for the sheer joy of it. He lets the floodgates loose on savagery, Jack Nicholson's spurring energy pushing the amps higher and higher. The random murderers are legion — cohorts, girlfriends, Gotham Cityites. When he goes on that slashing, paint-slashing rampage in a pretentiously named art museum, we're supposed to get the joke; smile indulgently because these are such frankly bogus copies of Old Masters, their very fakeness picked up by the museum's lighting.

But there are audiences who won't get the gag; all they will pick up on is the glee with which Nicholson and his henchmen prance through that high-toned place, turning it into a heap of torn canvas and spray-painted walls. Why aren't the people who have been wringing their hands and worrying about the potential effects of "Do the Right Thing" concerned about a scene as seductively conducive to imitation as this one?

The Bond film, which this time is a vendetta on Bond's part for the mutilation (there's that subject again) of his close friend, dangles men over shark pits, indeed has them half-eaten and survive, and blows up others in decompression tanks, spattering the porthole windows with their blood. I suppose it's the usual crunch and desperation of every Bond film, but the tone is more extreme, more sadistic, the blood-letting more torrential.

If these films weren't speaking to their audiences as viscerally as they are, they'd be laughable. "Lethal Weapon" is a joke of a story, a charade on the subject of apartheid held together by the enormous warmth and likability of Mel Gibson and Danny Glover, separately and especially together. But when the excesses of the action make audiences cheer instead of hoot, it's a thermometer reading, and that thermometer is going up as we sit here.

Most disturbing of all is "Lethal Weapon 2's" simplistic lesson in political science: White South Africans are the new Nazis. All of them.

And they are all sadists, with thick Boer accents, who sneer at "kaffir-lovers" the way Helmut Dantine or Kurt Kruger used to sneer when Hollywood had real Nazis to characterize. To be sure, we have one "good" South African, a very sweet, white-blond, completely dim young woman who works at the non-embassy but doesn't exactly agree with her country's policies. Useless to ask why she works for them.

It's getting harder and harder to find an all-purpose villain for movies these days, one whose constituencies won't be marching outside the theaters on opening day. It would seem that the atrocious and heart-rending practices of apartheid would make that government fair game. Unfortunately, life is not quite that simple. The people who have been ignored in "Lethal Weapon 2's" rush to fill us in politically are that core of white South Africans who have doggedly and at no slight personal risk been working for the rights of South Africans of color for years.

Don, Neneh Cherry Share Musical Spirit

By Hillel Italie
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Don Cherry is going back to his roots; Neneh Cherry is still developing hers.

He moves and speaks in the rhythms of cool jazz, spontaneous and refined; she is warm and down-to-earth, with just a hint of the passion and hot funk generated by her hit single, "Buffalo Stance."

His peers include jazz greats Ornette Coleman and Miles Davis; hers are such pop royalty as Prince and Madonna.

But listen closely, and a similar spirit can be heard — what Don Cherry might refer to as "world music," or what Neneh Cherry would call "positive energy."

Don is Neneh's stepfather, and they share a common outlook on life and music. They talked recently about their music and lives in an interview at Neneh's midtown Manhattan apartment.

"It's wonderful what's happening," said Don Cherry, the jazz trumpeter who has just released "Art Deco," his first studio album of straight jazz in over two decades.

"The whole planet has this connection of music and sound. Russia and Japan and Africa — everyone's trying to express themselves. In the past three years, there's been a lot of energy and acceptance of things fresh."

He includes Neneh's "Raw Like Sushi" album in that category.

"What Neneh's doing in music is what all people can relate to, the whole planet. There's a lot of things happening now that are a blessing. I hear Neneh's songs on the radio, that's a blessing. And all of us feel that way. It's a new generation."

The Cherrys trade compliments with ease and joy, celebrating their music and each other. Don sees Neneh's career as a continuation of her happy upbringing.

"Neneh's always been a person to be with people," he said. "She's always socialized. That's her karma. So many people are making records where they do everything, the drum parts and all. I don't think Neneh could be like that, she enjoys working with people."

Neneh was born in 1964 and grew up in Sweden and New York, leaving school at age 14. After appearing in a number of underground bands, she began working on "Raw Like Sushi" last year.

"Music has always been natural to me," she said, "but I didn't really make the decision to get involved with it until I was involved with working in a group."

"Music's always been there like a way of life, always. But I didn't start writing any material until I was out of two band situations. I took everything I had learned from the rest of my life and did something with it."

"Buffalo Stance" combines rock, jazz, funk and disco.

"The best blessing I've had in my life is feeling I don't have to define the various influences. Now we're going to do a reggae song, a jazz song." In "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof," Paul Newman's saying, "I need the click in my head, then I'll feel all right."

"At some point, a few years ago, I got that click. It's given me the freedom to make songs. We're in tune to where the raw energy is."

"The Next Generation" is a track off "Raw Sushi." Neneh, a mother of two, is already thinking of a world far removed from the dance floors where her music is heard.

"When you have a child, all of life and all children begin to matter in a different way," she said. "It opened me up. Children are not being given the right information and they need to learn."

"You become aware of education," Don added. "When Neneh was growing up, we started visiting schools ourselves; that's what education is. Not in material things, or this false love. The most important thing you can give kids is yourself."

Don Cherry, born in 1936, grew up in the Watts section of Los Angeles and was soon exposed to Billie Holiday, Charlie Parker and other jazz legends.

Get Hooked On Seafood

By Toni Tipton
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Whether it is viewed as a lean source of protein or a means of boosting intake of omega-3, Americans are hooked on seafood.

During the last five years, people in the United States have increased their intake of seafood by about 25 percent, eating an average of 15 pounds per person in 1988, according to the National Fisheries Institute.

That is good news for the health-education industry, which has been recommending three to four servings of fish per person each week. Here are some reasons why.

A four-ounce serving contains about 100 calories, so that even the fattiest fish compare favorably to lean cuts of red meat or poultry. Most fish contains a very small amount of saturated fat — the type implicated in raising blood cholesterol levels. And even those shellfish that contain cholesterol — crab, clams, lobster, oysters, scallops and shrimp — are better bargains, fat-wise, than similar portions of meat.

As a source of protein, seafood is complete. It provides all the essential amino acids. A single serving can provide as much as half the day's requirement for protein. Seafood also is an abundant source of minerals and other nutrients, including iodine, potassium, vitamins A and D and, in some types such as sardines and salmon, calcium.

But what has made seafood so attractive recently is its contribution of omega-3 to the diet. This fat is of the polyunsaturated type, which tends to lower blood cholesterol levels. Omega-3 is prevalent in fatter fish varieties, such as herring, lake trout, mackerel, salmon, sardines and white tuna (The effectiveness of omega-3 in reducing risk for heart disease is still being studied).

Lean fish include cod, flounder, haddock, rockfish, sea bass, whiting and pike.

After a brief introduction to the whys and hows of fish eating and health, readers of Anne M. Fletcher's Eat Fish, Live Better (Harper and Row; $18.95; hard cover; 378 pp.) will discover a wealth of seafood information (in addition to the above) about including fish in a low-fat but tasteful diet.

Besides facts and fallacies about the nutritional attributes of fish, the book contains a glossary of more than 50 of the various types of fishes. It describes forms found in the marketplace, preparation methods, eating qualities and nutritional value for each kind. Proper storage techniques also are discussed.

Fletcher, a registered dietician and former executive editor and chief writer of the Tufts University Diet and Nutrition Letter, provides helpful information on how to reduce calories and fat with low-fat substitutions in recipes. In this book, she includes tables that recommend ways to make low-fat dining a part of daily living and offers some dieting suggestions.

One of her recipes, Tuna Tacos, is given here, along with a number of other interesting fish recipes.

TUNA TACOS

- 1/4 cup packaged taco seasoning mix

The Humble English Muffin Is A Long Way From Drury Lane

By Diane Stoneback
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Americans have been waking up to English muffins for more than 100 years, but now there is eye-opening activity in this once-sleepy category.

For much of this century, there was nothing but the plain English muffin, predictable and ordinary with ample nooks and crannies to collect pools of butter and jelly. Yawn. Pass the coffee.

Now, however, bakers are cooking up new flavors practically as fast as the muffins can be toasted. For those who fancy a wilder beginning to their morning, the wake-up flavors are as diverse as apple-raisin-cinnamon, oat bran-apple-raisin (talk about capitalizing on an "in" food), wheat, Cheddar cheese, sourdough, blueberry and muesli.

Of course, the very reason bakers are introducing more flavors and recipes that have muffins as a base is to sell them to consumers as an all-day food rather than one reserved for daybreak.

To top off the promotional hype, the muffins are being touted as healthy fare with no cholesterol and very little fat (What consumers put on them runs up the calories!).

They have come a long way from their humble beginnings, described by George Bay, vice president for Bay's Muffins — a company making some inroads in the market that continues to be dominated by Thomas' English muffins.

"They go back in England to the time when people had staffs of servants working for them. The English muffin was a byproduct of scraps of dough left over in the kitchen from other baking. They probably combined a baking powder dough left over from scones and a yeast dough left over from bread or rolls. When the scraps were mixed, they may have added some mashed potatoes to stretch the dough.

"At first, just the servants ate them, but then everyone started liking them. With the advent of the industrial revolution, factories began making them and the muffin man had something to sell. With his box of muffins, supported by a rope or belt around his neck, and bell in his hand, he canvassed the villages," Bay said.

Good thing the nursery rhyme immortalized the muffin man of Drury Lane, however, because he and his muffins have vanished from Britain. Crumpets, though similar, just are not considered the same.

Bay said, "They apparently fell out of favor in Britain before World War I."

They have been far more enduring in the United States. No one disputes Thomas' claim that the company's founder is the one who introduced them here.

As the story and the television commercial go, Samuel Bath Thomas, a 20-year-old Englishman, arrived in America in 1875 with a secret recipe for a specialty bread that hadn't been seen before on this side of the Atlantic. Thomas first introduced the muffins on the streets of New York City in 1880.

Bay continued, "Twenty years ago, muffins were thought of as something to have on Sunday for a special breakfast or another special occasion."

According to Bay, whose company first made the muffins for Egg McMuffins, McDonald's is to be thanked for "mainstreaming" this specialty bread.

Today, the English muffin has a well-established place in the bread aisle, although Bay's company is working to win a place in the dairy case, instead.

Michael J. McDermott, writing for Food & Beverage Marketing, noted that Progressive Grocer's 1988 Product Usage Guide showed English muffins are on the shopping lists of 53.5 percent of female homemakers who do most of the shopping for their families. That gives English muffins the rank of No. 55 when it comes to frequency of usage among all the products in the supermarket.

Who is buying them? McDermott says that they are cosmopolitan city dwellers and suburbanites with household incomes over $40,000 who are college-educated. Single people and those aged 35-54 are particularly big on muffins. The most enthusiastic consumers live in the Northeast and on the West Coast, although Florida and Chicago also are hot on English muffins. The worst market in the country? Bay says that it is the Southeast, where biscuits beat out muffins every morning.

Thomas' dominates the market although there are plenty of competitors. While Thomas' flavored muffins sold for $1.61, their plain muffins were priced at six for $1.43 at a local grocery store. The same market was featuring six-packs of store-brand English muffins for 49 cents.

Bay's, when they can convince a store to give them space in the dairy case, are retailing for $1.29 per six-pack.

Wolferman's, an upscale Kansas-based mail-order company specializing in English muffins, markets them for $2.33 to $2.75 a four-pack and shipping is extra.

Much has been made of "fork-splitting" the muffins to keep or create those nooks and crannies or peaks and valleys or however else you want to describe the surface texture of the muffins. For that matter, Wolferman's even markets a special tool to do the job if you are not satisfied with a plain old fork.

There are recipes for making your own English muffins. However, when even the authoritative Mrs. Beeton, writing in her Book of Household Management (long before the days of convenience foods), said, "Muffins are not easily made, and are more generally purchased than manufactured at home," you might as well enjoy the convenience of the ready-made versions at mealtime.

Here are a few recipes for breakfast foods as well as some lunch and dinner dishes to enable

Herbs Flavor Vegetables

Q: I just can't eat my vegetables without seasoning. Do you have any suggestions? M.B., Greenville

A: As we all work to cut the fat in our diets, I frequently hear the complaint that vegetables don't taste good without "seasoning." Unfortunately in eastern North Carolina the term "seasoning" means fat of some type. But, there are many interesting spices that can be added. I asked Susan Childress, an East Carolina University Dietetic student, to compile some suggestions for you. Here are some suggestions from the McCormick Spice people and the American Institute for Cancer Research.

Season green beans with a butter substitute (Butter Buds or Molly McButter) and garlic powder or add toasted sesame seeds to the beans. Add a dash of nutmeg to cooking carrots. Use a season salt (and no butter) on corn-on-the-cob. Try a lemon and pepper seasoning to any vegetable. Put dill weed in new potatoes. Try some fennel in your cooked cabbage. Summer savory, I know adds a wonderful flavor to beans. Sorrel, some tell us, is great in greens.

In her book, The Pleasure of Herbs, Phyllis Saudys lists some herbs and spices that will enhance the flavor of your vegetables. Here are some of her suggestions. Paprika, parsley, and freshly ground pepper will complement any vegetable, except carrots. Nutmeg can also be added to most vegetables, although it is not recommended for seasoning vegetables in the cabbage family.

You can also try adding lemon juice, dry mustard, dill or nutmeg to your broccoli. Brussel sprouts can be given some zip by adding lemon juice or vinegar with dry mustard and dill. Lemon juice with parsley, onions, sage or savory will complement your lima beans. If you like the flavor of mint, try adding some spearmint to your peas. If not, add some marjoram or rosemary and thyme. Skip the syrups on your sweet potatoes and add some nutmeg or cinnamon for a real treat!

Saudys also suggests purchasing whole spices because they will retain their flavor longer. You can grind the spices as you need them and of course, freshly grown herbs and spices are best. Herbs and spices should be stored in air tight containers away from heat, light and moisture. (Not above your stove!)

If you are inexperienced cooking with herbs and spices, generally adding 1/4 tsp. to each four servings will be adequate. You can always add more! There are many folks starting their own herb gardens. If any of you have suggestions, let us know.

French Influence Is Strong In Canadian Cooking

By Linda Guica
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

While the French may toast their occasions with a glass of champagne and pate spread on a wedge of crusty baguette, French-Canadians look to the motherland for more North American specialties.

Sugar pie made with maple syrup, a pork-filled tourtiere, oven-baked beans and sweet-and-sour relishes are dishes typical of La Cuisine Quebecoise.

The French influence is strong in the province's cooking, but there are traces of English influences as well.

The methods used to prepare foods are more often French than English, writes Jehane Benoit, one of Canada's best-known cooks and author of several Canadian cookbooks (Benoit died earlier this year).

Benoit, who researched the origins of Quebec's specialties, credits the English with the use of beans, peas, salt pork, molasses, spices, puddings, cakes and pies.

However, the origins of hearty simmered entrees such as pot-au-feu — boiled meat, potatoes and vegetables — veal pot roast and the molded galantine du porc are obviously French.

Whether their background was French or English, settlers in the province of Quebec formed a distinctive cuisine using native ingredients: maple syrup, pork, ham and bacon and native produce such as berries and root vegetables.

Just as in France, progressive chefs in Canada have developed a "nouvelle cuisine" — new ways to prepare and serve these time-honored ingredients. Other chefs — definitely the minority — are trying to preserve the hearty cooking of the old days.

"We do traditional cooking, bourgeois cooking," says Suzanne Howard Demers, owner of L'Atre ("the hearth"), a restaurant in a restored 17th century farmhouse. "I don't like the nouvelle cuisine. I like more hearty cooking."

A specialty at the restaurant, located on the Ile d'Orleans, an island five miles down the St. Lawrence River from Quebec City, is the pork pie called tourtiere. Demers serves the pie year-round, although Canadian homemakers tend to reserve the recipe for the Christmas holiday.

Demers might serve a generous wedge of tourtiere with potatoes Anna and homemade fruit and vegetable relish. More pork — in the form of a coarse-textured pate called cretons — is served as an appetizer.

"It is wonderful food that we have," she says, "but it is a question of giving (the dishes) time and care."

L'ATRE'S TOURTIERE

2 medium onions, chopped and mashed
3 cloves garlic, mashed and finely chopped

Double crusts for two 9-inch pies
Place all ingredients except for crusts in a large pot, and add enough water to cover about three-quarters of the ingredients. Simmer, stirring frequently, about 30 minutes. Adjust seasonings to taste. Divide the mixture between two pastry-lined 9-inch pie plates. Cover top with pastry crust; make slits in top crust of each pie to allow steam to escape. Bake

L'ATRE'S CRETONS (Ground Pork Pate)

Computer Buying Tips

TEANECK, N.J. (AP) — Millions of Americans say they know nothing about personal computers but research indicates many want one.

Computers are in a fifth of all American households now, an 11 percent rise in the last five years, says Shep Altshuler, president of Software City.

If buying one, decide what you want the computer to do, now and in the future. Then order computer equipment with enough power and memory for your longtime needs. Don't be afraid to ask questions.

Apologize: It Is In The Bible

Dear Abby: A member of my family keeps telling me that it is written in the Bible that the Lord approves of giving a person intoxicating drink to drown his sorrow and lessen his pain.

This person is a very heavy drinker, and I think he just made it up as an excuse for his own drinking. If there is such a passage in the Holy Bible, please tell me and I will apologize, because I called him a liar to his face. Thank you. — Can't Believe It

Dear Can't: Apologize. From Proverbs 31:6-7: "Give strong drink unto him that is ready to perish, and wine unto those that be of heavy hearts. Let him drink, and forget his poverty, and remember his misery no more."

However, since the Bible was written, we have learned that not everyone can handle "strong drink," and for those who cannot, I recommend the National Council on Alcoholism. The toll-free number is 1-800-NCA-CALL. The people there will direct you to a facility in your area and send you some helpful literature about alcoholism. And it's all free!

Dear Abby: Today, when there are so many divorces and remarriages, Mother's Day and Father's Day have become a bit of a problem for me. Both my parents are divorced and remarried. Last Father's Day I invited my father out to a rather expensive brunch. I am not wealthy, but I saved up the money to splurge on him for this special day.

The problem here is that he brought his new wife, so I had to pay for her lunch, too. I didn't say anything; I simply paid the whole tab. I like the woman, but she is not my mother, and I didn't invite her — my father did. Am I responsible for paying her way whenever I invite my father out and he brings her along? And does the same apply to my mother if she brings her current husband when I invite her out? — Upset In Minnesota

Dear Upset: When you invite your father — or your mother — out for a special occasion, in the interest of family unity you should invite his or her spouse, and pay for both of them.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

If you want to spend "quality time" exclusively with either parent, you should say so when you extend the invitation.

In this case, even though you didn't invite his new wife, since he brought her anyway, he should have offered to pay for her. But since he didn't offer, it was proper for you to have picked up the tab for everyone.

Dear Abby: Once I read an item in your column called "The Last Will of Mr. Farmer." It was wonderful. I would like to send it to my wife. Please run it again. — Tim Moore, Severy, Kan.

Dear Tim: This is it:

Last Will Of Mr. Farmer

I leave:

To my wife, my overdraft at the bank — maybe she can explain it.

To my banker, my soul — he has the mortgage on it anyway.

To my neighbor, my clown suit — he'll need it if he continues to farm as he has in the past.

To the ASCS, my grain bin — I was planning to let them take it next year anyway.

To the county agent, 50 bushels of corn to see if he can hit the market — I never could.

To the junk man, all my machinery — he's had his eye on it for years.

To my undertaker, a special request — I want six implement and fertilizer dealers for my pallbearers. They are used to carrying me.

ery — he's had his eye on it for years.

To my undertaker, a special request — I want six implement and fertilizer dealers for my pallbearers. They are used to carrying me.

To the weatherman, rain and sleet and snow for the funeral, please — no sense in having good weather now.

To the grave digger — don't bother. The hole I'm in should be big enough.

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA. 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Top Spots At Box Office Won By The Odd Couples

By John Horn
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOLLYWOOD — Tales of two odd couples — "Turner and Hooch" and "Lethal Weapon 2" — topped the box-office charts, while "Batman" swooped past the $200 million mark.

The Disney comedy "Turner and Hooch," pairing Tom Hanks with a slobbering dog named Beasley, collected $12.2 million in its first weekend, according to figures released Monday by Exhibitor Relations Co.

Disney claimed three of the other Top 10 spots with "Honey, I Shrank the Kids," "Dead Poets Society" and "Peter Pan" for a total take of $21.8 million. It was among the best weekends in the studio's history and the first time this year that one company has had four films on the leader board, Disney officials said.

In second place was "Lethal Weapon 2," the action sequel starring Mel Gibson as the manic partner of straight-arrow cop Danny Glover. The film grossed $10.4 million and shows few signs of fading away.

The summer's most popular title, "Batman," had receipts of $9 million and now has made $202.9 million. As of this week, it is the ninth biggest hit in Hollywood history, and the first film to crack the all-time Top 10 since "Back to the Future" in 1985. "Batman" now seems likely to pass such other megahits as "Ghostbusters" ($220 million), "Beverly Hills Cop" ($234 million), and "Raiders of the Lost Ark" ($242 million).

In fourth place with $7.9 million was the romantic comedy "When Harry Met Sally..." featuring Billy Crystal and Meg Ryan as best friends who over a dozen years come to be lovers. It was followed by the return of ax-wielding Jason Voorhees in "Friday the 13th Part VIII," with $6.3 million.

In sixth was the family comedy "Honey, I Shrank the Kids," starring Rick Moranis, with ticket sales of $4.6 million. The latest James Bond film, "Licence to Kill," finished in seventh with $3.4 million.

Director Steven Spielberg's "Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade" continued to chug along in eighth place, collecting $2.8 million. Rounding out the weekly Top 10 were "Dead Poets Society" in ninth with $2.6 million and "Peter Pan" in 10th with $2.3 million.

Here are the top movies for the weekend as tallied by Exhibitor Relations, with distributor, weekend gross, number of theater screens, average per screen, total gross and number of weeks in release.

1. "Turner and Hooch,"

Disney, $12.2 million, 1,877 screens, $6,506 per screen, $12.2 million, one week.

2. "Lethal Weapon 2," Warner Bros., $10.4 million, 1,830 screens, $5,684 per screen, $88.8 million, four weeks.

3. "Batman," Warner Bros., $9 million, 2,201 screens, $4,068 per screen, $202.9 million, six weeks.

4. "When Harry Met Sally..." Columbia, $7.9 million, 872 screens, $9,013 per screen, $24.2 million, three weeks.

5. "Friday the 13th Part VIII: Jason Takes Manhattan," Paramount, $6.3 million, 1,683 screens, $3,714 per screen, $6.3 million, one week.

6. "Honey, I Shrank the Kids," Disney, $4.6 million, 1,481 screens, $3,091 per screen, $95.4 million, six weeks.

7. "Licence to Kill," MGM-UA, $3.4 million, 1,508 screens, $2,262 per screen, $24.3 million, three weeks.

8. "Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade," Paramount, $2.8 million, 1,203 screens, $2,339 per screen, $177 million, 10 weeks.

9. "Dead Poets Society," Disney, $2.6 million, 993 screens, $2,626 per screen, $74.7 million, nine weeks.

10. "Peter Pan," Disney, $2.3 million, 1,422 screens, $1,638 per screen, $19.4 million, three weeks.

Show To Be Revamped

By Kathryn Baker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Television critics meeting here to preview the new fall programs had already suffered the indignities of one stand-up comedian who didn't exhibit much reverence for the process, Jackie Mason.

Then it was Richard Lewis' turn. Lewis and the new co-executive producer of the ABC sitcom "Anything But Love," Peter Noah, were discussing changes in the show, which premiered midseason last season and got a pick-up for the fall.

One critic asked how many scripts were in hand. Half a dozen, Noah replied.

"So actually," countered the critic, "what you've been telling us up to this point is that you're going to go in a very vague sort of a different direction — but you have a definite direction in those scripts that do exist?"

"Well," Noah stammered, "I don't remember saying it was going to be vague."

"Like Watergate up here all of a sudden," Lewis chimed in. As Noah continued to try to answer the question, Lewis put his hand over the microphone and whispered in his ear.

"Well, I'm not trying to hide anything," Noah said. "I'd just rather not, if it's OK..."

"Bzzz, bzzz, bzzz," whispered Lewis.

"On advice of my counsel," said Noah, "I've been told that — No, I'd rather not."

Noah did reveal, however, many of the changes in the show, which did well in the ratings last season in a cushy spot behind the hit "Roseanne," but won little praise from these same television critics.

Lewis, whose angst-ridden stand-up routine was toned down for his role as magazine writer Marty Gold in "Anything But Love," appeared to be doing basically his own material in the show, which was, not surprisingly, very funny. But there were problems getting much comedy mileage out of the other main character, played by Jamie Lee Curtis.

In the upcoming season, Curtis' character, Hannah Miller, gets a change of scene that will hopefully lend itself to more laughs. She gets a promotion — from researcher to writer, moves out of her father's house and in with a female roommate, and she and Marty get a new boss.

The tough-talking throwback editor of last season will be replaced with a new, female editor.

ter on a kind of a character that's very prevalent in the New York publishing world," Noah said. "One of these kind of high-powered, young executive women."

New York performance artist Ann Magnuson has been cast in the role.

"We also thought there was something interesting in having a boss who was the same age as Jamie and even younger than Richard," Noah said.

Noah said the producers are also bringing in another new character, played by British actor Joe Maher — a television critic.

"We think there's a fair amount of humor possibly in that kind of character," Noah said.

The television critics thought it was pretty funny. With any luck, Noah will be just as cheerful when reviews of the revamped show come out.

Big Changes Lie Ahead For Fox Comedy 'Duet'

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — There are big changes ahead for the Fox Broadcasting Co. comedy, "Duet," originally intended as a love story between two single people (Mary Page Keller and Matthew Laurance). The show's supporting characters, a married couple played by Alison LaPlaca and Chris Lemmon, became more interesting, especially LaPlaca's materialistic, social-climbing Linda Phillips.

This fall, the series evolves into "Open House" and centers on Linda as she embarks on a career as a real estate agent. Philip Charles MacKenzie ("Brothers") joins the cast as Linda's archrival in the office. Keller stays as Linda's friend, Laura Kelly. But Laurance and Jodi Thelen, who played Keller's sister, are gone.
