U.N. Envoy Sees Hope For Hostage Settlement

By Rarouk Nassar
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIRUT, Lebanon — A senior U.N. official said today after meeting with Moslem leaders in Lebanon that "circumstances might be more conducive" now to resolve the problem of Western hostages held there.

But U.N. Undersecretary-General Marrack Gouling said that could be brought about only "through a long process of quiet and patient diplomacy" in which many governments and organizations would have to take part.

Officials in Israel, which last week captured a Moslem cleric, Sheik Abdul Karim Obeid, reiterated today there would be no exchange of captives unless three Israeli servicemen were part of the swap.

"If we won't get the Israelis, there won't be a deal," said Israeli Foreign Ministry spokesman Alon Liel in Jerusalem. Right-wing legislators also called for retaliation if any Israelis were harmed.

Kidnappers holding U.S. hostage Joseph Cicippio on Sunday offered to release him immediately if Israel frees Obeid and 450 Arab prisoners and allows 55 Palestinian deportees to return home.

Gouling spoke after two meetings he held in west Beirut with acting Moslem Prime Minister Salim Hoss and Sheik Mohammed Hussein Fadlallah, spiritual guide of Hezbollah, or Party of God.

The Shiite Moslem fundamentalist party is believed to be the umbrella of pro-Iranian extremist factions holding most of the Western hostages in Lebanon.

Hezbollah leader Hussein Mousawi said an Israeli soldier his group holds could be killed if Obeid, kidnapped by Israeli commandos July 28, is not released.

Gouling, who heads U.N. peacekeeping operations, said he has completed his five-day mission in the Middle East to determine whether U.S. Marine Lt. Col. William R. Higgins has been killed by his pro-Iranian captors.

The U.N. envoy said he did not obtain any solid evidence that Higgins is dead or alive. Higgins' captors last Monday said they killed Higgins and released a videotape purportedly showing him hanging from a scaffold, but no body has been released.

Gouling said he would fly back to New York "fairly soon" to report to Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

"I would say without claiming to be optimistic, this is something that many people have said to me, that there are certain tendencies, certain trends in the international climate which suggest that circumstances may be

Plan Includes Funds For 2 ECU Projects

By J. Ward Best
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

In its final days, the state Senate and House of Representatives agreed to a compromise spending plan which would provide funding for two projects at East Carolina University.

Under the compromise plan, agreed to by the chairmen of the two appropriations committees, the university would receive $7 million for additions to Joyner Library. The two houses also agreed to fund $1 million for a visitor and convention center which will eventually include a sports arena.

The two houses also agreed to provide approximately $350,000 for an animal research center at the ECU medical school.

The two houses must grant final approval of the spending, but Sen. Tom Taft, D-Pitt, called the compromise "tantamount to acceptance."

"I'm delighted with the $7 million for the library," said ECU Chancellor Richard R. Eakin.

The final amount granted for the library exceeded the original projections from both the House and Senate. The House had originally proposed $1.3 million for the project, and the Senate $6.3 million.

Sen. Bob Martin, D-Pitt, said Saturday's compromise and its approval Sunday was a matter of "juggling" the state funds.

"From the amount of money we got," Martin said, "I think we got a real good deal."

Eakin estimated the total cost of the library project at $24 million, but said this first appropriation from the state government would help speed completion of the project.

"I would hope that we would have construction under way in calendar year 1990," the chancellor said.

Eakin also said he hoped the state would provide funding for the remainder of the project during its next session.

Taft said he felt certain the legislature would provide the remainder of the needed funds for the project.

Thumbs Up

Ryan Spruill, 16, of Belhaven gives thumbs up this morning at Pitt-Greenville Airport. He was preparing to board a helicopter piloted by members of Elizabeth City's U.S. Coast Guard Station and bound for the 1989 National Scout Jamboree at Fort A.P. Hill near Bowling Green, Va. An automobile accident in December left him paralyzed. Unconscious for three months, the teen's chances for recovery were slim. But doctors are pleased with his progress, according to his stepfather, Phil

Mason. Ryan is slowly recovering some use of his limbs and beginning to speak. Before the accident, Ryan, a member of the East Carolina Council, was slated to be on the jamboree staff, and he has been determined to reach the scouting celebration despite the odds. Lt. Cmdr. Dale War Jr. of the Ft. Macon Coast Guard station stepped in to arrange for the trip. The helicopter crew was to return him to North Carolina by tonight.

New Floods Kill Nine, Strand 100,000

By Farid Hossain

DHAKA, Bangladesh — About 400,000 people fled to rooftops and makeshift bamboo shelters today in northern Bangladesh as new floods killed nine people, Relief Ministry officials and news reports said.

The death toll for the past two weeks of flooding stood at 164, according to newspaper reports. The government's body count stood at 30, but officials usually are slow in releasing death figures because of lengthy bureaucratic procedures.

The worst affected area was Sylhet district, where tens of thousands of mud and straw houses were destroyed, according to the Relief Ministry officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

New floods hit 30 villages in the area on Sunday, killing six men and three children, and marooning 100,000 others. The annual deluge had already stranded about 300,000 people across a 400-square-mile area.

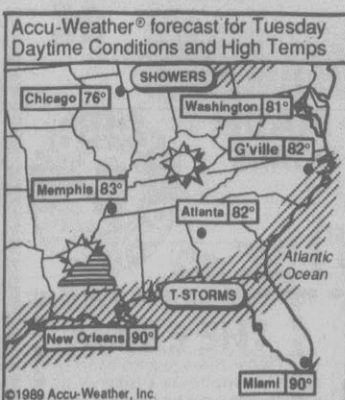

"Lack of transportation is hampering relief work," said one Relief Ministry official. Two helpads that had been built in the area for relief operations were under 2 feet of water, and roads and telecommunications were cut, he said.

Officials said the most severely hit region was the tea-growing Zakiganj area in Sylhet district, 120 miles northeast of Dhaka.

Groups Cite Problems With Treatment Plants

By J. Ward Best
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Two environmental groups said in a report released today that the waste water treatment facilities designed to protect the Tar and Pamlico rivers may cause as much harm as good.

The N.C. Environmental Defense Fund and the Pamlico-Tar River Foundation studied the 21 treatment facilities in the Tar-Pamlico river basin and found performance and monitoring problems with nearly all of the facilities.

"The Pamlico River is a national treasure at risk," according to the executive summary of the report. "A broad consensus has developed that the pollution causing this environmental catastrophe must be abated."

The report, "From Oxford to Aurora: Publicly-Owned Sewage Treatment Plants in the Tar-Pamlico River Basin," cited Greenville's waste water treatment plant for high phosphorous concentrations in what it discharges to the Tar and a lack of required monitoring of heavy metals.

Greenville's plant was also cited for failing or not reporting discharge toxicity.

The report found ecological damage downstream from the Greenville treatment plant.

The report also cited many of the other treatment plants for similar and greater problems.

The report included a list of recommendations for restricting pollution from treatment plants in the river basin. The recommendations included stronger enforcement actions against treatment plants violating discharge limits and greater monitoring by the state.

"The recommendations we outline below will be expensive to implement, but we believe that these costs are far outweighed by the long-term benefits, both environmental and economical, to our state," the report said.

Conferees Agree On New Budget Package

By F. Alan Boyce
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — House and Senate conferees met through the weekend to hammer out the last major spending bills blocking adjournment, with new openness keeping down controversy.

"You don't hear much screaming because it's been a process of compromise, and that's not been the case before," said Ward Purrington, Gov. Jim Martin's legislative liaison. "It used to be just fiat."

"It's slow and cumbersome, but this is the way a budget ought to be written," he said. "Everyone can see the difficulty they're facing."

State lawmakers used a slightly more optimistic projection of income expected from the RJR-Nabisco sale Sunday to find $12 million and help resolve spending packages worth nearly $1.8 billion over the next two years.

The agreement makes it mathematically possible for the General Assembly to adjourn late this week, with both chambers considering the bills Tuesday and at least four days needed to print and consider the measures.

Lawmakers also had to appropriate more than $1 million to accommodate what has become the longest session on record in calendar days.

Conferees raised the estimated state gain from the RJR-Nabisco sale — which will pour capital gains taxes into state coffers — from $146 million to $159 million, using the money to create reserve accounts for several capital projects affecting the University of North Carolina system.

Weekend Thefts

Investigators said five thefts were reported to Greenville police over the weekend.

Officer R.L. Forrest said a wallet containing $100 in cash was taken from an employee locker at Circus World at the Carolina East Mall in an incident reported at 10:10 p.m.

Saturday, while Officer C.L. Robertson said $1,200 worth of clothes were taken from Tom Togs on Dickinson Avenue in a break-in reported at 2:08 a.m. Sunday.

Officer A.J. Dennison said $50 in cash and two compact discs were taken from 707 E. Third St. in a break-in reported Sunday at 3:21 p.m., while Officer M.R. Benton said two bicycles were taken from Susie's Tree House on Fifth Street at the Cotanche Street intersection in an incident reported at 6:43 p.m.

According to other investigators, a 1968 Ford truck was taken from 208 Countryside Drive in an incident reported at 1:47 p.m. Sunday.

Telethon Results

A record $159,816 was raised Saturday during the annual 12-hour Cystic Fibrosis telethon aired on WCTI-TV, channel 12.

Carolyn Stevens, executive producer of the telethon, said this year's event raised nearly $10,000 over the $150,320 raised last year.

Co-sponsored by WCTI-TV and the New Bern Jaycees, the fund-raiser was hosted by the channel 12 news anchors and reporters and featured entertainment from across eastern North Carolina. Special guest host was Alan Dysert, an actor from the daytime television drama, "All My Children."

Members of the Greenville Jaycees accepted local donations from phone lines in Greenville.

Ms. Stevens said proceeds from the telethon will go toward the state Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, headquartered in Wilson.

Cystic Fibrosis is the nation's leading genetic killer of children.

The disease affects the lungs and digestive system.

Manager Named

Jesse H. Hawkins of Simpson has been named manager for the Pamlico District of the N.C. Division of Marine Fisheries (DMF) in Morehead City. Hawkins replaces Terry Sholar who resigned earlier this year.

As district manager, Hawkins is responsible for supervising the eight DMF law enforcement officers and eleven biologists in the Pamlico District. The district encompasses Pamlico, Beaufort, and Hyde counties and the Neuse River, Pamlico River, and Pamlico Sound.

Employed by the DMF since 1978, Hawkins earned his bachelor's degree in zoology in 1977 from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and his master's degree in biology in 1988 from East Carolina University.

Men Charged With Church Break-Ins

Greenville police took two men into custody before dawn today for breaking into two local churches.

Officers W.R. Stephenson and P.W. Worthington said Christopher Neil Smith of 2607 Dunn St. and Thomas Edgar Rouse of Route 1, Ayden, were arrested at about 1:45 a.m. in connection with a break-in at Hooker Memorial Christian Church at 1111 Greenville Blvd. where $2 worth of food was reported taken.

The officers said Rouse and Smith were also charged in connection with a break-in at Memorial Baptist Church at 1510 Greenville Blvd. which occurred earlier in the morning.

Supervisors said that Rouse and Smith would be charged before the end of the day with at least nine other church break-ins which have been reported to the department over the past two weeks.

People, Animals Seek Heat Relief

With the temperatures climbing into the high 90s over the weekend, Greenville residents turned to pools and air conditioners for solace.

John Conway, assistant manager of the Greenville's municipal pool, said crowds at the facility have increased from about 50 to 100 people as the hot, muggy days of August set in.

But area farmers are still looking for their relief, in the form of rain.

Phillip Rowan, Pitt County Agricultural Extension agent, said the crops are beginning to dry out but have not reached the "critical point."

Rowan said some examples of crucial stages in crop development are when the corn begins to tassel and the pods on soybeans and peanuts "fill out."

Corn is past that point and soybeans and peanuts have yet to reach it, Rowan said.

He said that other than late crops, most farmers aren't experiencing a lot of problems.

But Rowan said the heat is really taking its toll on livestock and poultry.

He said most poultry farmers have fogging systems to keep chickens cool but that doesn't completely solve the problem. Rowan said the heat causes the broilers to lose weight.

Pigs also lose weight and experience breeding problems, such as smaller litters, because of high temperatures and humidity, Rowan said.

Simpson Mayor Seeking Re-Election

SIMPSON — Simpson Mayor Virginia S. Lupton filed last week for re-election as mayor.

Mrs. Lupton, a Simpson resident since 1947, has held the position of Mrs. Lupton is married to the Rev. James G. Lupton, a retired Methodist minister, and they have one son and three daughters.

Children Neglected

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — Mecklenburg County social service workers knew for nine months that three children had been living in filthy squalor in a Charlotte house before they were taken from their mother, two witnesses say.

"I had talked to social services until I was blue in the face," Ann Hogshhead said. She and other members of Park Road Baptist Church have given the family food, money, clothes and other assistance since November.

Hogshhead and a day-care director said they reported conditions at the house to social workers, The Charlotte Observer reported. Two other church members also witnessed the conditions when they delivered Christmas presents to the family in December.

But the children weren't taken from their mother until an anonymous caller last week told police that the children were alone and crying.

Police found the children dehydrated and with feces caked to their faces and insect eggs in their ears. The house was littered with clothes, trash and half-eaten food. Officers had to keep moving to keep roaches from crawling up their legs.

Police called it the worst case of child neglect they had seen.

"My question is, why didn't somebody tell us about it sooner?" said Capt. Piper Charles, who heads the police department's youth bureau.

A county Department of Social Services spokesman confirmed Friday that the department had worked with the family for months but declined to discuss details because of confidentiality rules.

DSS community services consultant Diane Austin said removing children from a home is a last resort.

"In this county, we do everything reasonably possible to keep (families) together. When all else fails, that's when you remove the children," Ms. Austin said.

She said the children, ages 1, 2 and 4, are doing well in foster care. She would not say whether the two sisters and their brother are together.

The mother, Susanne Marie Duve, 23, and her roommate, Melanie Kae Shirkey, 27, are each charged with three counts of child neglect, a misdemeanor.

Two pests may be attacking azaleas now; azalea caterpillar eating the leaves and azalea lace bug extracting sap and "stripping" the foliage. Commonly available insecticides will control both pests. Direct sprays to the underside of the leaves for lacebug control. Hand-picking is a good control for azalea caterpillar.

Partially grown azalea caterpillars are about one-half inch long and reddish to brownish black with white and yellow stripes. They are gregarious; feeding in groups. All members raise head and tail in unison when disturbed. Fully grown caterpillars are about two inches long and black with eight, white, broken stripes running along their bodies. The head and legs are red.

Azalea caterpillars are well-camouflaged and often go undetected until much of the foliage has been consumed. Hand-picking at this point is the best control. They do not bite or sting.

Azalea lacebug adults and nymphs injure plants as they extract sap from the underside of the leaves.

The one-eighth-inch long adult with lacy wings and the brown and black markings and the wingless nymphs are visible on the leaves. Damage shows up as a spotted discoloration on the upper leaf surfaces. Heavily infested leaves may become almost white; many of them drying and dropping off. The undersides of the leaves are also disfigured by the excrement and cast skins of the insects.

Repeated applications of insecticide may be necessary to control lacebugs. Make an application of Sevin (carbaryl), Orthene (acephate), malathion or Cygon (dimethoate) as soon as nymphs are seen on the underside of the leaves. Follow this application with another seven to 10 days later. Thorough coverage on the back side of the leaves is essential.

Azalea caterpillar can be controlled with one of the aforementioned insecticides. Organic gardeners can use Dipel, Thuricide or Sok-Bt (Bacillus thuringiensis).

Other lace bugs attack pyracantha, rhododendron, mountain laurel, hawthorne, quince, cotoneaster, ash, sycamore and hickory. Control is similar to azalea lace bug.

Professors Say They Lose In Power Struggle

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — North Carolina State University professors, who have grumbled quietly over the years about abuses of academic standards linked with the men's basketball program, say they're not to blame for failing to press the issue with administrators.

Professors say the issue is one of power, of which they have little. The News and Observer of Raleigh reported Sunday.

"Why waste your time beating your head against the wall?" asked James Crisp, assistant head of NCSU's history department.

The school's faculty senate, which is the main voice of the 1,445 faculty members, serves as an adviser to the chancellor — as is true at most colleges.

But at some schools, the faculty is much stronger than at others.

At elite private schools presidents rarely make a move without faculty support. But at large public universities, the faculty's voice is more easily quashed.

"If faculty senate resolutions counted for something other than headlines, or the faculty senate truly represented the faculty in the sense of having some degree of power — then I think you might find more people willing to serve," Crisp said.

When it comes to athletics, NCSU's professors have nowhere near the clout of the basketball coach and athletics director, Jim Valvano, who runs a $10 million program, the newspaper said.

Some professors fear Chancellor Bruce Poulton, who has shown little tolerance for dissent, and many think they can't count on the chancellor to stand up for them in confrontations with the athletics department, according to the newspaper.

Like many of his colleagues, Crisp — an admirer of Hugh Fuller, the NCSU official who last week came forward with details of long-standing academic abuses — thinks it's unfair to blame professors for the current controversy.

"Before you start assigning blame to the faculty, you have to see what power we have," Crisp said. "And since as a university faculty we have almost zero, then I don't think we as a faculty deserve much blame."

Although roughly two-thirds of the university's full-time professors have tenure, which insulates them from firings, tangling with the administration could result in missing out on merit raises or a badly needed teaching assistant.

Faculty senate Chairman Raymond Long said the 39-member panel "probably should have done more" to insist on high academic standards. He said he long had been unaware of the basketball team's seven-year history of poor academic performance.

"My first knowledge of it was about four years ago, and I think Dr. Fuller was still laboring under the feeling that he could get something accomplished internally without having to provide anyone with that real hard data," said Long, a professor of crop science.

"Sometimes when it's evident that there is resistance to a particular point of view, you go on to something where you can have some positive and beneficial effect that is of importance to the university as well."

John Coster, whose term on the senate expired this summer, echoes that frustration.

"Any recommendation or resolution we make is made through the office of the provost to the chancellor," he said. "Whether or not we could have done more, I think, is just a moot point."

An examination of the minutes of the faculty senate's meetings over the past five years shows their efforts to bring more integrity to the sports program have been sporadic, the newspaper reported.

On some points, such as their effort to raise admission standards for student-athletes, they had the strong backing of Poulton and succeeded.

But in most cases, such as a plan to prevent students on academic probation from participating in extracurricular activities, Poulton rebuffed their efforts and they failed.

In light of the disclosures made by Fuller, some professors, such as Eva R. Rubin of the political science department, suggested the senate "didn't probe deeply enough into the matter."

But Edward Stahel II, chairman of the special faculty panel, defended the efforts.

"There were many instances of individuals who gave us second-hand war stories or horror stories about abuses," Stahel said. "Basically, they did not violate policies and procedures. They violated the spirit of the situation. They violated the integrity of the individual carrying out the procedures. But these were things we did not feel could be proved."

Crisp said a university is not fulfilling its role if it harbors an atmosphere in which "people don't stick their necks out."

"If you find a climate of fear on a university in which people are afraid to speak out, then you have found a university that is not a university except in name. And I would have to say that my feeling about N.C. State is that," he said.

Small Plane Crashes

RALEIGH (AP) — A single-engine airplane crashed after becoming snared in power lines near a private airstrip near Benson on Sunday morning and two people aboard were slightly injured, authorities say.

Pilot Henry Patrick Lee, 50, was in stable condition at Johnston County Memorial Hospital. "He's doing very well," said hospital nursing supervisor Melva Chandler would not elaborate on the extent of his injuries.

A passenger, 39-year-old Gene Ryals, was treated for cuts and bruises and released. Both men are from the Benson area.

"The plane was taking off from a small airstrip and apparently struck some power lines, causing the plane to flip and crash," said Johnston County Deputy Sheriff K.M. Wood.

Wood said the Cessna plane took off about 10 a.m., but was not able to gain enough altitude to clear the power lines. He said the aircraft was upright and intact when authorities arrived.

Wood said a large amount of fuel leaked from the aircraft, but did not pose a threat of explosion.

Diver Believed Dead

SNEADS FERRY, N.C. (AP) — The Coast Guard had suspended a search for a diver who did not surface after he went under a boat to cut a tangled anchor line, officials said.

Steve Illes, 33, of Jacksonville, an active duty Marine at Camp Lejeune, was presumed dead Sunday, according to Petty Officer Mark Palmer of the Fort Macon Coast Guard station.

"We searched for eight hours," Palmer said Sunday night. "We knew exactly where he went down, and there's almost no possibility of survival after this amount of time."

Palmer said a distress call came a 1 p.m. Sunday from the Dilligaf, a 21-foot pleasure boat. Three people were aboard the boat, which was about 15 miles offshore in the Onslow Bay, he said.

Illes went down with a three-minute air bottle after the anchor became snagged about 63 feet from the surface.

A Coast Guard cutter, along with a Coast Guard aircraft and a Navy helicopter, searched for Illes on Sunday afternoon. Seven civilian boats with divers also joined the search, which was suspended around 9 p.m., Palmer said.

Ex-Marine Killed

WILMINGTON (AP) — An ex-Marine was stabbed and beaten to death after he tried to break up a barroom fight, and four men have been charged in connection with his death, police say.

William Ernst, 42, of Leland, was beaten with belt buckles, pool cues, a stool, and stabbed in the heart after he tried to break up a fight early Saturday night that started between two other men at the Cargo Bay bar in Wilmington, police reports say.

Tracy Ahern of Leland; Wiley Dildy, 29, of Walstonburg; Larry Caison, 23, of Leland; and Michael Edward Stone, 33, of Leland, were charged with voluntary manslaughter. They were being held without bond at the New Hanover County Jail.

Vest Did The Trick

RALEIGH (AP) — A Raleigh police detective was shot early Sunday while searching a house for drugs, but was saved by his bullet-proof vest, officials say.

Detective Bruce Emory, of the Raleigh Police Department, was shot once in the abdomen at 4:43 a.m. at a home in southeastern Wake County, said Wake County Sheriff's Capt. Bill McClain. The bullet did not break his skin, and he was treated for shock at Rex Hospital and released.

Jeffrey Lewis Eatmon, 35, of Raleigh, was shot as police returned fire, McClain said. He was in stable condition Sunday afternoon at Wake Medical Center, suffering from wounds to the shoulder and wrist, a hospital spokesman said.

Eatmon was expected to be taken to Central Prison when a doctor determined that he could be moved.

Eatmon was charged with one count of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, inflicting serious injury; one count of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill; one count of possession of cocaine; one count of possession with intent to sell and deliver cocaine; and one count of maintaining a dwelling for the selling of drugs, arrest warrants said.

Fourteen grams of cocaine, about half an ounce, were found inside the house, warrants say.

W-S Thinks Positive

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — The Greater Winston-Salem Chamber of Commerce is putting out information indicating that the city no longer lives and dies with the fortunes of R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., which has been a dominant influence for generations.

"We're telling people, 'Let's look at the total picture, let's put it in perspective,'" chamber president Fred Nordenholtz said last week. "Not to be a Pollyanna, life is wonderful, but to be realistic and say, 'Here's the balance sheet and here's all the positives.'"

In January 1987, when the word spread that RJR Nabisco would move its headquarters to Atlanta, the news hit Winston-Salem business leaders hard.

Charles Webb, a former executive with the chamber of commerce, called the move, "a shock which penetrates to the fabric of this community."

The shocks have continued almost non-stop since then:

- Steep cutbacks among factory workers at R.J. Reynolds Tobacco.
- Internal restructuring and leadership changes.
- The recent leveraged buyout, which took the food and tobacco giant private and saddled it with debt.

And another jolt is expected within weeks.

At the conclusion of a long-awaited organizational and staffing study, Reynolds officials are expected to announce staff reductions that could range from 1,000 to 2,400 jobs. Because thousands of factory jobs have been trimmed since 1987, the prevailing belief is that high-paying white collar jobs are at stake.

PROBING FOR GUM DISEASE

When you come in our office for a checkup, we will probe your gums to see if there is any evidence of gum disease. This is one of the most important parts of our examination, because gum disease is a major cause of tooth loss in adults. We use a periodontal probe, a small measuring instrument that we slip into the space between the gum lining and your teeth. This instrument is marked in millimeters. We note the depth of the space on each side of the tooth to determine how much damage bacteria may have done in separating the gum lining from any of your teeth. We also note

If there has been any loss in the tooth itself or the supporting bone. Use of a periodontal probe in assessing damage from gum disease is completely painless and essential in any dental checkup. We can't rely on dental x-rays alone in revealing the extent of the damage.

There are many ways to guard against tooth loss and to protect your teeth and gums from disease. One of the most important, however, is good home care and regular checkups. Call our office today for an appointment to get your teeth cleaned and gums evaluated. It is easier to treat gum disease in its earlier stages.

Note: We welcome new patients, both children and adults.

Prepared as a public service to promote better dental health. From the office of Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S., P.A., Evans St., Family and General Dentistry. Greenville 752-5126

Tobacco Sales Cash Will Finally Come For The Work

There won't be the fanfare of olden days, but long time farmers will still perk up when the big Eastern belt begins sales on Tuesday.

The Greenville market will open with hopes of selling about 40 million pounds for the year. The Farmville market also opens Tuesday with hopes of a higher average than last year.

Other eastern North Carolina markets will also be opening and tobacco growers will be anxiously watching the sales whether they have tobacco on the floors or not.

Opening day's sales don't always predict how sales will be later in the season. Particularly is that true now with tobacco carried over from the previous year. Nevertheless there is excitement in the air for those who produce tobacco when the acutoneer's chant begins.

This year farmers have faced unusual problems of a wet spring, which delayed plantings while the plants continued to grow in the tobacco beds, and wet weather during the harvesting period. Still, the area crop seems to have come through it all in good condition.

Now the first of the crop is moving to the warehouse floors and Tuesday the companies will begin buying for customers around the world. How tobacco sells affects farm family finances for the coming year. That, in turn, affects retailing and all other phases of eastern economy.

A good year can mean a farm family can buy new furniture, repaint the house, build a new barn, buy additional farm equipment and perhaps even purchase a new family car.

Tobacco sales Tuesday will have a great effect on many businesses in the east and it is no wonder that average prices will be watched closely. The time has come when the toil of raising and curing tobacco will finally be converted into cash.

Nixon Tapes Would Stop His Comeback

Arthur Brodsky

Richard Nixon has been in the news a lot the past couple of weeks. Approaching the 15th anniversary of his Aug. 9, 1974, resignation in disgrace from the presidency, Nixon is contemplating another trip to China, planning a new book, even talking baseball and foreign policy on television with Detroit Tigers manager Sparky Anderson.

That Nixon can claim any legitimacy these days is due, at least in part, to the fact that the tapes of his Watergate coverup will never be heard by most of the general public. Should those tapes, used as evidence in the trials of close Nixon associates, ever be broadcast, chances are Nixon's comeback would be stopped dead. Forever.

The words can be read, of course. But the real power of the tapes isn't in the words. It's in the voices. Listen to the Watergate tapes. Listen to Richard Nixon and his cohorts, and hear the voices of evil as a country is betrayed.

Evil isn't a partisan concept, an issue of Republican or Democrat. Evil is an absolute. Listen to Nixon as he talks with John Dean or H.R. Haldeman on tapes secretly recorded 16 and 17 years ago in the Oval Office, and the tapes will tell you more about corruption than any public congressional hearing or political show trial.

These are some of the lessons people could learn if they could hear the Nixon tapes. Unfortunately, that's not very convenient to do. As the result of a 5-to-4 decision by the U.S. Supreme Court in 1978 and some negotiations between the government and Nixon's lawyers, the ground rules were set: The public could listen to the tapes at the National Archives, but the tapes couldn't be copied or broadcast. When the tapes were first opened to the public in 1980, they were housed in a special listening room in the Archives, right on Pennsylvania Avenue.

In 1983, the trial tapes were shipped off to an Archives annex in a desolate region of suburban Alexandria, Va. The collection now open to the public is just 31 conversations, lasting altogether about 4½ hours, a small portion of the estimated 4,000 hours of conversations that were taped. Storing all the tapes together in a warehouse is fine for scholars, virtually useless for a curious, casual visitor.

Some people do make the trek, and an Archives shuttle van is available for the 20-minute trip. One archivist in Alexandria estimated that on average one person per day comes by to listen, with some school groups even coming out as well. But the sad fact is that thousands of people daily can pick up a listening device at any of our museums on the Mall and learn more about dinosaurs that ruled the world millions of years ago than a presidential administration that ruled this country two decades ago.

U.S. Policy Doesn't Deter Terrorists

Kenneth deGraffenreid

The gruesome pictures of Lt. Col. William Higgins's corpse that flashed around the world carried a message for all of us: America's anti-terrorism policy isn't working. The problem, in simple terms, is that it doesn't deter terrorists from killing Americans.

Deterrence is the key to a successful anti-terrorism policy. It is a strategic concept that Americans understand, and one that has wide support in Congress and among our allies. We have made deterrence the heart of our strategic doctrine against the Soviet Union for nearly 40 years. It may be a brutal approach — deterring aggression by the threat of global nuclear war — but it seems to have worked.

But we Americans have had difficulty applying a similar concept of deterrence to terrorism. The reason is fairly obvious. Deterrence of terrorists from taking American lives means, in practice, holding the leaders of terrorist organizations responsible and personally at risk for their actions. It means holding their political sponsors responsible as well.

Terrorists traffic in death to advance their political purposes. The stark truth is that they won't stop unless their fear of bodily harm outweighs the political advantage to be gained from their acts. As unpalatable as it may be for Americans to contemplate, that means threatening terrorists with the probability that, if they kill our people, they will be killed themselves. Sadly, in the Middle East the balance of terror is often a bullet.

We don't like to play the game of nations by those rules. More importantly, we don't like to enforce justice by these rules either. For us, terrorists are, despite their political claims, criminals. Unfortunately, we've let legalisms muddle our response when these criminals pick up weapons to hurt Americans.

Officially, we've come to equate the justifiable use of force against a terrorist (other than in a rescue attempt) with assassination. A presidential executive order that bans assassination has been used, inside and outside the government, to argue against the use of force against terrorist groups.

Assassination is the wrong word to describe the use of deadly force against terrorists. But as long as we focus on that word — and equate the use of deadly force against terrorists with assassination — we limit our ability to deter terrorists from taking American lives.

Curiously, we are not always reluctant to use deadly force against terrorists. In some terrorist crises, we have sent flotillas of warships toward Lebanon and squadrons of bombers toward Libya. Bombing and shelling almost certainly kill more people, especially innocent ones, but somehow these impersonal tactics are "military" and, therefore, morally acceptable. For America, it seems, retaliation is "moral" as long as we do not see the intended victim in the crosshairs of a gun-sight.

We need to recognize that whatever the moral advantages or dilemmas of our approach, it is not working. Indeed, nothing we have tried over the past decade in dealing with terrorism has worked very well — threats, bribes, arms deals, battleship barrages, aircraft bombing runs — all have failed to deter terrorism.

Too often it is said that there is nothing we can do. Despite the clear personal and political anguish shown by each of our recent presidents, we are now into our third administration of uncertainty, ineffective responses to the problem. Perhaps we ought to begin to ask why, and to explore whether it is possible to find an alternative to this cycle of failure.

One way to begin is by posing a question: What would it take to apply the concept of deterrence to terrorism? Are we prepared as a nation, morally and politically, for the steps that would be required to make such an approach work? If the answer is no, then we can at least stop our national breast-beating and admit that, for America at least, terrorism is a problem to be endured rather than solved.

But if we decide to deter terrorism, rather than endure it, we will need to make some changes. The experience of the last decade suggests that success in holding terrorist groups and their leaders personally at risk will depend on improved intelligence-collection, analysis, and special operations:

— Collection. Gathering intelligence on terrorist groups, particularly in the Middle East, is perhaps the most difficult of intelligence tasks. Consider that most terrorists in this region are related by blood or marriage and in many cases were raised together in very small villages. Putting an agent inside these groups is almost impossible. Even if penetration were possible, the terrorists could demand that our agent commit a terrorist act himself, which we could not permit.

Electronic and overhead surveillance don't help much either, since these groups make only limited use of electronic communications and are difficult to spot in a satellite photograph. As a result, "collection" cannot be a passive activity. Sitting back, listening or watching from space, may work in arms-control monitoring, but it is insufficient for identifying the vulnerabilities of terrorist groups so that we can neutralize them. As difficult as it may be, the use of human intelligence agents in dangerous situations is vital to acquiring this information.

The Reagan administration and many in Congress spent much of the past decade talking about the need for more emphasis on HUMINT, but we still don't have what we need. The substantial budget increases for intelligence in the first half of the Reagan years did not bring the required commitment to building this capability. Far too often, bureaucratic turf battles went unresolved while inertia sapped the energy from the most well-conceived plans. In some instances intelligence-community executives resisted directives to establish these capabilities, perhaps out of fear of the bureaucratic and personal consequences of failure.

If we are to fashion an effective deterrent policy, we must have intelligence that locates terrorists and exposes their vulnerabilities. This means an aggressive clandestine service that can mount operations clever enough to reveal the actions, thinking, and vulnerability of these tightly knit bands of terrorists. Such operations are risky and difficult, but they are not impossible. For example, the CIA could penetrate less-cohesive supporting groups (arms suppliers, friendly political leaders and others in close contact with terrorists).

Disruption could be combined with collection. The United States could mount provocations or psywar operations for the purpose of sowing dissension among terrorists and their supporters. We should be looking for opportunities to exploit family rivalries, or to undermine terrorists' political standing and demythologize their cultivated bravado.

Our activities, to be effective, must be genuinely covert (and if necessary deniable). Working under thin cover as an embassy diplomat simply will not do. A sizable force of "non-official" deep-cover intelligence operatives is expensive and bureaucratically untidy, but that should not stand in our way. And once we have this capability, we must keep it secret. This means offending many officials within the Executive Branch and the Congress. But our deep-cover force won't work if hundreds or even scores of people know about its activities.

— Analysis. Despite our current limitations, we do know a lot about terrorist groups. We are not so helpless as we may appear.

We often have the capability to find where hostages are: The hostage location task force has done it, and the gaps in our knowledge are nowhere as great as they once were. Instead of looking at terrorism as a sociological phenomenon, we now focus on the essential elements of intelligence on specific groups, their tactics and means of support.

If we've made progress in any area in the last decade, it has been in bringing together information on terrorists from all sources available to the U.S. government. In many cases, we have enough information to be able to design and, if necessary, execute counterterrorism operations, including hostage rescues. And there have been several successes in locating terrorists, "arresting" them abroad and returning them to U.S. jurisdiction for trial under powerful new anti-terrorism statutes.

Close Ranks On Terror

Abba Eban

Releasing Sheik Abdel Karim Obeid without any reciprocal liberation of Israeli and Western prisoners and hostages would be a formidable victory for terrorism. Those who advocate this course evoke understandable sympathy when they speak in the name of their personal kinship with hostages. But those who are charged with concern for international civility and public interest should look a few moves ahead, before suggesting action that would weaken the anti-terrorist cause.

International terrorism takes its victims and opponents into a world of difficult choices. There are no easy ways. The terrorist enemy has his hand on the throat of humane mankind and is not constrained by any of the compassions that cause tremors of uncertainty on the civilized side of the barricade.

There are only two solutions. One of them is to snatch the endangered victims from the clutches of their captors by physical force. There have been occasions on which this approach has succeeded, as it did in Entebbe. In other instances it has been tried with heavy price as at Maalot in 1974 (when many Israeli children were killed by terrorists during an attempt by Israeli forces to rescue them by military action). Sometimes there has been tragic failure, as in Munich in 1972 when German assault forces tried unsuccessfully to liberate the Israeli Olympic team.

On most occasions, hostages are inaccessible to military rescue. In such contingencies there are only two possible courses. One of them, practiced by the United States, is to stand fast and let matters take their course. This involves a rigorous subordination of individual interest to an overriding principle. Israel does not go as far as this. When there is no possibility of forcible extraction, we have not excluded negotiated exchanges.

But negotiation implies deterrence and incentive. Efforts by Israel and the Western powers to secure the release of prisoners and hostages from Shiite groups in Lebanon have been made fruitlessly over several years. The capture of Obeid, an active and enthusiastic terrorist, was designed to create an incentive for the Shiite movement to enter the bargaining context. There was certainly no such incentive before.

The capture itself is not eccentric, nor is it an Israeli copyright. The United States bombed Libya with British cooperation, forced down an Egyptian aircraft carrying the hijackers of the ship Achilles Lauro and intercepted the terrorist Fawaz Younis on the high seas in order to bring him to trial in the United States. The bombing of Libya had graver human effects in terms of American and other lives than the temporary removal of Obeid from his home, but there were no senatorial cries of anguish then or since.

The desire to avoid a unilateral capitulation to a terrorist leader is quite independent of any particular judgment on the original decision to capture him. The problem is how to emerge from the dilemma, not how to hold premature inquiries on how it arose.

Those of us who have known the anguish of participating in decisions on anti-terrorist resistance have learned that a "wise" decision is simply one that turned out well in the end. The judgments of historians depend on consequence, not on intention, and the media now take the historian's role. In these terms, a split second of reaction by Ugandan forces would have convicted the Entebbe decision of "rashness" and a little luck in Tehran would have crowned President Carter as a champion of anti-terrorist "efficiency."

Under these conditions of incalculability, there is only one rational course. It is for the defenders of civility in the free and rational world to close their ranks and maintain their solidarity, in all conditions and despite all vicissitudes, in success or in adversity. The lines are drawn between the perpetrators of terrorism and their opponents, not within the anti-terrorist family itself.

New Zealand Prime Minister Cites Health In Resigning

WELLINGTON, New Zealand — Prime Minister David Lange, whose opposition to nuclear weapons

Budget

Among them:

- $6 million for an engineering graduate research center at North Carolina State University, $1 million less than the amount sought by the House.
- $2 million for a new arena at N.C. State, down from the $6 million sought by the Senate.
- $7.5 million for a new school of business at UNC-Chapel Hill.
- $7 million for a library addition at East Carolina University and $1 million for an ECU Center for Regional Advancement.
- $9.7 million over two years for an indoor health and physical education facility at Fayetteville State University.
- $3 million for a student activities center at Appalachian State University.
- $4.4 million for a conference center at UNC-Asheville.

Conferees also agreed to keep in $2 million for a Charlotte performing arts center.

Rep. Dave Diamont, D-Surry, chairman of the House conferees, said he was fairly certain the increased money would materialize. But he added, "If the RJR money is not there, the money won't be there to be spent."

The House and Senate fought over several provisions, with the Senate holding out to keep $4.25 million for the North Carolina Zoo in Asheboro and to get $6 million for state ports — twice the amount the House sought.

Some other big-ticket items approved include $18 million a year for a new Revenue Building, $7.1 million for a new agronomic building in the Department of Agriculture, $5 million for grants to help local governments deal with solid waste, $18.5 million for a new State Bureau of Investigation complex, $8 million for repairs and renovations at state parks, $10 million for the clean water and sewer program, $14 million over two years for low-level radioactive waste site development and $3.5 million for industrial economic development.

resulted in the banning of U.S. warships from his country, today announced his resignation.

The surprise announcement came one day before a meeting of his left-leaning Labor Party, which last week elected his chief rival, former Finance Minister Roger Douglas, to the Cabinet.

Citing poor health, the 47-year-old prime minister said he will step down Tuesday. Lange, hospitalized last year for a heart condition, said he is looking forward to a healthy future.

"It will not, however, be as prime minister," Lange told the news conference in the capital of this former British colony in the South Pacific with a population of 3.3 million.

He said he had "stopped the juggernaut of the New Right," a barb at Douglas, who was dismissed by Lange last year following a public row over the direction of economic policy.

"It was good to walk out of there (the Cabinet) while they still clapped me," said Lange, who stepped into the limelight in 1984 by declaring nuclear warships unwelcome and stepped down when disputes over internal economic policies refused to go away.

Australian Prime Minister Bob Hawke said that despite some policy differences, "We cooperated very closely and effectively in bilateral and South Pacific issues."

Papua New Guinea's prime minister, Rabble Namaliu, said from Port Moresby that Lange "brought commonsense to Western politics insofar as it affected the Pacific region."

"Even though his tough stand on issues such as nuclear disarmament and the environment made him unpopular with most Western leaders, he pursued his policies in the interests of the Pacific region and its people," Namaliu said.

While political observers said Douglas' re-emergence was the true reason for Lange's resignation, the ex-finance minister sounded conciliatory in a statement today.

Douglas said Lange led New Zealand with "extraordinary distinction through the most difficult period of its post-war history" and that "no Labor government since World War II has accomplished more than this Labor government under his leadership."

Accidental Discovery May End Obesity

Supresses calorie absorption

SWEDEN—Medical researchers at the University of Kuopio, in Finland, have discovered (accidentally) a new weight-loss formula. The new discovery appears to enable an overweight individual to lose pounds and fatty tissue without conventional dieting or exercise.

Scientists made the discovery while searching for a formula to lower cholesterol. In a controlled study of a test group of people, cholesterol levels remained unchanged but the doctors were astounded to find that every patient who used the formula lost weight. The published report of this study stated, "A highly significant decrease in body weight was seen" in patients who received the formula.

The formula was then tested at another prestigious European university hospital. Again, all patients lost weight even though they did not change their eating habits. The report detailing this study, published in the British Journal of Nutrition, stated: "Body weight was significantly reduced even though the patients were specifically asked not to alter their dietary habits". One patient in this study lost more than 30 pounds.

According to one informed source, the active ingredient comes from a 100% natural botanical source and contains no drugs or stimulants. When taken before mealtime it bonds with the food you eat and "ties up" calories, especially those from fats, suppressing their absorption.

A significant portion of the calories ingested therefore pass through the digestive system unabsorbed. The body has to get energy to replace the lost calories, so it starts to burn stored fat, which can result in rapid body weight loss. Clinical testing has verified the safety of this formula for long-term use.

The formula is marketed in tablet form in the United States under the trade name Cal-Ban 3000. A firm located in Tampa, Florida, has exclusive North American distribution rights. A review of the customer files of this company revealed the names of hundreds of people who have lost as much as 20, 40 or 80 or more pounds overall with Cal-Ban 3000. This appears to be a golden opportunity for people who are plagued by fat and cellulite that they can't seem to lose by conventional methods.

Cal-Ban 3000 is reasonably priced at $19.95 for a 3-week supply and $38.95 for a 6-week supply. Postage and handling is $3. VISA, M/C, AMEX and COD orders are accepted. To order call TOLL-FREE 1-800-537-3723 or purchase locally at Farmco Drug Center, 609 E. Greenville Blvd., Greenville, NC or Farmville Discount Drug, 102 S. Main St., Farmville, NC.

Call today to begin the pleasant transformation from fat and flab to the slender firm body you want! If you fail to achieve a major weight loss you may return the empty bottle within 30 days for a 100% refund.

Joint Effort For Blacks Urged

By W. Dale Nelson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Secretary of Labor Elizabeth Dole urged civil rights leaders today to join in an effort to assure blacks of the education and skills needed to compete in the present-day world.

"I firmly believe that we will not totally eliminate discrimination from our society until we have stamped it out of our economy," Mrs. Dole said in a speech to the annual conference of the National Urban League.

"And we will not stamp it out of our economy until every black American has the chance to gain the education, the skills, and the training required to compete and succeed in today's complex global market."

Mrs. Dole spoke a day after John E. Jacob, president of the Urban League, accused the Supreme Court of "playing dice with the lives of America's minorities," and said the league will look to President Bush and Congress for progress in civil rights.

"We have disagreed with the new Bush administration on a number of important policy issues," Jacob said in his keynote address Sunday at the opening of the league's annual conference.

"But we welcome the fresh winds of openness it has brought to our government," Jacob said.

Mrs. Dole noted that on July 25 she announced 14 planning grants to 12 cities and two rural areas to be used to develop blueprints for getting "at-risk youth" into the economic mainstream.

"This is just the type of mobilization that you in the Urban League have been doing so well for so long," she said. "With all you have accomplished, however, today I ask you to do more."

"There is an Urban League affiliate in each of the 12 major cities that received a grant," Mrs. Dole said. "I am requesting that these affiliates contact civic leaders to become involved in the planning process."

The cities receiving the grants are Chicago, Washington, Baltimore, New York, Philadelphia, Atlanta, Miami, Columbus, Cleveland, Detroit, Los Angeles and San Diego.

Jacob implored Congress and the Bush administration to lessen the impact of recent high court rulings that he said were anti-civil rights.

Unless these decisions are rolled back, Jacob said, women and minorities "won't be allowed to play catch-up. They'll be stuck with the effects of past discrimination."

He cited recent court rulings: against contracts set aside for minority businesses, preventing women and minorities from challenging standing seniority systems, limiting the use of statistics in proving patterns of discrimination and putting greater burdens of proof on victims of discrimination.

"The court is playing dice with the lives of America's minorities, and it's loading the dice against them," Jacob said.

"We call on the president and the Congress to carefully review the court's anti-civil rights decisions and to frame corrective legislation," he said.

The Urban League president also called for a war against drugs, adding that "it doesn't mean a 'Just Say No' campaign, although we will teach our children to say no."

He said the league will press Congress for "real action to stop drugs from coming into the country" and for "resources for treatment centers so that anyone on drugs can get off them."

Trial Hinges On Frozen Embryos

By Tom Sharp
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — The judge who must settle an estranged couple's battle over the fate of seven fertilized human eggs says he is troubled by the lack of any precedent for deciding the case.

The divorce trial of Junior Lewis Davis and Mary Sue Davis, who are at odds over the disposition of the frozen eggs, was scheduled to begin this morning in Blount County Circuit Court.

Davis, 30, who sued for divorce in February, is seeking to prevent his wife from having any of the seven embryos implanted. Attorneys for both sides said the case is the first of its kind in the country.

Charles Clifford, Davis' attorney, argues that the embryos are joint property and can be disposed of like other assets in a divorce. Giving Mrs. Davis, 28, sole discretion over them would deprive Davis of the right to decide whether to sire offspring, the lawyer contends.

Jay Christenberry, attorney for Mrs. Davis, counters that it has never been within the man's power to cancel a pregnancy once an egg has been fertilized.

"I consider them life," Mrs. Davis said shortly after her husband filed for divorce. She has said that the eggs are the result of years of surgery, tests and self-administered injections and are her best chance at having a child.

"I would love to be a mother," she said.

She also said she would consider raising the child by herself and not asking for child support.

Davis countered at the time that it would be unsettling "to know that ... 10 years from now I could be walking down the street and bump into my child and not know it."

Mrs. Davis says she had five tubal pregnancies after the couple was married in 1979, one resulting in a ruptured fallopian tube. Surgery was done to tie the other tube before the Davises entered the in-vitro fertilization program administered by Dr. I. Ray King.

There were originally nine fertilized eggs; two were unsuccessfully implanted before the couple's marriage broke down.

The couple did not sign a contract saying what should be done with the embryos in the event of divorce or death of one or both partners. King says that was an oversight, but he added that any such agreement probably could be contested in court anyway.

Blaze In Rubbish Buckles Section Of N.J. Highway

NEWARK, N.J. — A fire in a huge

Hush-Hush Countdown

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The weather outlook improved greatly today as a blacked-out countdown advanced toward a Tuesday launch of space shuttle Columbia on a mission to put a spy satellite into orbit.

The mission will be Columbia's first flight in 3½ years, during which NASA's oldest shuttle was used for spare parts.

Forecasters said there was only a 5 percent chance of unfavorable weather interfering with the launch. That was down from Sunday's prediction of 20 percent to 40 percent, based on the possibility of clouds lingering in the area.

"It's looking very good," said Capt. Ken Warren, an Air Force spokesman.

The five astronauts received briefings on launch preparations as sources reported the countdown today entered a planned 17-hour hold, a period reserved for catching up on any lagging work. The sources reported there was little catchup to do.

Because the mission is classified, the Pentagon will permit NASA to say only that liftoff will occur between 7:30 a.m. and 11:30 a.m. Tuesday.

pile of rubbish caused an elevated section of Interstate 78 to buckle this morning, closing the highway indefinitely and hobbling commuter traffic into New York City.

No injuries were reported and apparently no cars were on the segment of highway when it dropped about 3 feet, said State Police Lt. Barry Roberson.

The fire burned out of control this morning, fueled by a 400-square-yard pile of construction debris at the Hub Recycling Co., said Larry Krieger, a Fire Department spokesman. Thick smoke drifted over the city and Newark International Airport, but airport operations were not affected, police said.

The road is "going to be shut down for a while," said Bob Micai, regional director of the state Department of Transportation. "The fire was so intense it caused steel beams to buckle."

John Hagerty, spokesman for the state Department of Environmental Protection, said the state had taken Hub to court in an attempt to make it clean up its property.

A man who came to the Hub Recycling gate refused to comment.

The closing of the road caused major traffic tie-ups. The highway carries commuter traffic from New Jersey bedroom communities to New York City.

The fire began at about 1:30 a.m. in a warehouse district. Krieger said firefighters were having difficulty reaching the blaze because of a lack of hydrants, poor roads and a web of railroad tracks in the area.

Anti-Nuke Protests Mark Bombing Anniversary

By Tom Buerkle
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Hundreds of anti-nuclear activists marched on the Tennessee plant where the atom bomb was born to mark the 44th anniversary of the Hiroshima bombing while thousands demonstrated at some of the nation's troubled nuclear weapons plants.

Recent disclosures about safety and environmental problems at many nuclear weapons facilities charged the atmosphere at many of Sunday's protests.

"I think it's great that people had the courage and conviction to come out to this contaminated site and say, 'No more,'" said Carter Ellison, a spokeswoman for Colorado Freeze Voters.

He was among about 4,500 people who gathered peacefully at Rocky Flats, the site 16 miles northwest of Denver where plutonium triggers for nuclear weapons are made. FBI and Environmental Protection Agency officials raided Rocky Flats on June 6 to investigate allegations of illegal dumping of hazardous materials, and a federal grand jury began probing the plant on Tuesday.

Organizers had hoped to circle the plant but they fell about 13,000 people short of the number needed to cover the 17-mile perimeter. John Hay, a teen-ager from Denver, released a large white balloon with a message warning that it may carry toxic plutonium particles from the plant as his older brother, Steve, played "Taps."

At the Nevada Test Site near Mercury, authorities arrested 52 demonstrators on trespass charges, said Department of Energy spokesman Darwin Morgan. Another 28 protesters were arrested for trespassing at the government's nuclear facility at Oak Ridge, Tenn.

Demonstrations also were held at the Colorado Capitol in Denver and at the Savannah River Site in Aiken, S.C.

In Livermore, Calif., home of a nuclear weapons research center, a petition drive to nuclear free was launched.

At the Ohio State Fair in Columbus, more than 150 arms control advocates demonstrated at the Peace Pavillion. Earlier, Gov. Richard Celeste and his wife, Dagmar, attended a Japanese tea ceremony there.

Meanwhile, Paul Tibbetts Jr., the man who flew that plane that dropped the bomb on Hiroshima, said he had no qualms about the mission that killed about 140,000 people.

"I thought then that if I am successful, I can bring this war to a quick end," said Tibbetts Jr., now 74, and living in Columbus.

And in Andersonville, Ga., nine American prisoners of war who died in the Aug. 6, 1945, attack were honored Saturday with a 21-gun salute, the playing of "Taps" and the unveiling of a bronze plaque.

Police estimated at least 300 protesters marched one mile to the Y-12 Nuclear Plant in Oak Ridge, where atom bomb technology was developed as part of the Manhattan Project.

"There was a good spirit," said Judith Hallock, one of the founders of the Oak Ridge Environmental Peace Alliance. "The crowd was celebrating life."

About 300 people demonstrated outside the Savannah River Site, the nation's sole source of tritium for nuclear weapons which has been shut for a year because of safety and environmental concerns.

Ed Arnold and 15 members from Physicians for Social Responsibility in Atlanta said they were most concerned about the lack of health information concerning the 600,000 people who work in the nation's nuclear plants.

Rita Fellers, with a group called the Savannah River Project, attacked the weapons themselves as "more dangerous than they are supportive to national security."

Elsewhere, about 50 people set off on a 60-mile march from Kansas City, Mo., to Whiteman Air Force Base to show their commitment to world peace. They plan to take four days to complete the walk, which symbolize the distance that would be needed to place side by side the bodies of those killed at Hiroshima and at Nagasaki, said Maril Crabtree, president of the Interfaith Peace Alliance.

"I just came out here to be here and to think peaceful things and look for a little serenity," said Bob Ellis, 48.

Sunday also saw about 20 conservatives rally in Greenville, S.C., to urge early deployment of the Strategic Defense Initiative, the envisioned Star Wars defensive shield. "Deploy SDI by '95; No American Hiroshimas," read some posters at the rally.

"We believe that development of the SDI research programs will help ensure peace and security for future generations," said Lilly Lenderman, state chairwoman for Concerned Women for America, a conservative activist group.

Overnight Shelling Leaves Five Dead

By Farouk Nassar
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Syrian and Christian forces fought nightlong duels with artillery and tank fire across the capital's dividing Green Line, and five people were killed, police said today.

Two of the overnight fatalities were in Christian east Beirut and three in the Moslem west side, said a police spokesman who cannot be named under standing rules. He said 16 people were wounded.

It was the 12th straight night of random bombardment that has forced more than one million of Beirut's 1.5 million inhabitants to flee to safer areas in Lebanon or abroad.

The latest casualties raised the overall total to 547 killed and 1,300 wounded since the latest round in Lebanon's 14-year-old civil war erupted March 8.

The captain of a Norwegian hovercraft that sails daily from Cyprus to Lebanon said Syrian gunners Sunday tried to sink his vessel by firing 40 rockets into the sea off the Christian port of Jounieh.

Two Lebanese sisters, aged 15 months and 2 years, drowned when a boat ferrying 16 passengers to the hovercraft capsized in waves churned up by the Syrian barrage.

Syrian gunners bombard the enclave's coastline daily in order to prevent supplies of weapons and fuel reaching the Christians.

The latest round in Lebanon's 14-year civil war erupted in March, when Christian army commander Gen. Michel Aoun blockaded illegal ports operated by Syrian-backed Moslem militias south of Beirut that deny the state treasury of around $100 million a year in lost customs dues.

The Syrians joined their militia allies in shelling the Christian enclave and also blocked its land exits.

Police said the Syrian army on Saturday brought dozens of T-62 tanks and BM-21 multi-rocket launchers that can fire 40 rockets a minute into west Beirut and the hills overlooking the capital.

The reinforcements arrived amid rumors that Aoun's 20,000 troops might storm west Beirut to seize Lebanon's central bank, where most of the nation's hard currency and gold reserves are stored.

Around 40,000 Syrian troops have been stationed in Lebanon since 1976 under a peacekeeping mandate from the Arab League.

But Aoun charges the Syrians lost their credibility as peacekeepers by siding with the Moslems in their fight for an equal share of power with the traditionally dominant Christians.

The 54-year-old Maronite Catholic general has vowed a "war of liberation" to drive the Syrians out.

King Fahd of Saudi Arabia, King Hassan II of Morocco and Algerian President Chedli Bendjedid agreed at an Arab summit conference at Casablanca, Morocco in May to mediate for a settlement of the civil war.

Their foreign ministers shuttled between Beirut and Damascus for two months with a mandate to arrange a peace settlement by November, but announced two weeks ago that the peacemaking efforts had reached a "dead end."

China Execution

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — A man has been executed in southeastern China for murdering a member of the National Congress last June, an official newspaper reported Sunday.

The Beijing Daily said Yuan Zihu was executed Saturday in Yonggan city in Fujian province after a court found him guilty of killing 38-year-old Feng Yimiao on June 6. It did not give Yuan's age.

Yuan, who had earlier served a prison sentence for theft, climbed a drain pipe and went through a window to burglarize the government guesthouse where Ms. Feng was staying during a business trip, the report said.

It said Ms. Feng, a member of the national legislature and general manager of a department store, was killed when she screamed as Yuan entered her room.

The Beijing Daily report did not indicate any connection between Ms. Feng's political position and her murder.

Rockets Hit Kabul; Several Are Injured

By Edith M. Lederer
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KABUL, Afghanistan — A rocket barrage pounded the northwest part of the capital for the second day today, injuring several people and sending frightened residents and foreigners running for cover.

The extent of casualties was not immediately known but the Red Cross hospital reported several injuries.

Kabul's best hotel was damaged in the fighting. In half an hour more than 15 rockets struck within a mile of the hilltop Continental Hotel, frequented by Western journalists. One hit the hotel's fourth and fifth floors, starting a fire. Another landed near the swimming pool and windows were shattered for the second day.

More than 20 rockets struck within a mile of the 240-room hotel Sunday.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman said U.S.-backed guerrillas trying to oust the Soviet-supported government were apparently targeting the Continental because they thought Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze stayed there when he visited the Afghan capital Sunday.

Shevardnadze arrived Sunday morning and left that evening, the Soviet Embassy said. He met twice with President Najib but there was no immediate word on the outcome of the talks.

Bakhtar, the Afghan News Agency, said 38 rockets hit Kabul Sunday, killing nine people and injuring 38. Four major hospitals reported 52 injured.

The Continental, once owned by the Intercontinental chain, shook several times as the rockets, with their distinctive whistle and booms, struck in rapid succession. The lobby was filled with smoke and dozens of windows were shattered.

Several rockets also were apparently aimed at Kabul's main grain silo, where several hundred trucks were lined up waiting to be unloaded. One appeared to hit close to the silo's perimeter and another several blocks away in a residential area.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Mohammad Nabi Amani has accused the guerrillas of targeting the silo as an act of economic sabotage to try to starve the capital's 2.25 million residents.

Several other rockets fell in the Karte Parwan district, not far from the British High Commission, which was evacuated early this year.

The government has extended the summer holiday because of the intensified rocketing.

Six Sentenced To Death

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka — Six Sri Lankans convicted of participating in an attempted coup in the Maldives last year have been sentenced to death, a Maldivian official said today.

Mohammed Ahmed, a Maldivian Foreign Ministry official, said the sentences were ordered Sunday by the high court in Male, capital of the Maldives.

Sources in Male who spoke on condition of anonymity said Chief Justice Moosa Fathy read the sentences at a public hearing after nearly two months of trial. No dates were set for the executions, they said.

Ahmed said there was no higher court of appeal and that only President Maumoon Abdul Gayoom could commute the sentences.

The last death sentence carried out in the Maldives was in 1953, he said when contacted by telephone from New Delhi.

The Maldives, a string of coral islands in the Indian Ocean, are about 500 miles southwest of Sri Lanka and roughly the same distance south of India.

Eight other Sri Lankans were sentenced to jail terms, Ahmed said. He said he did not know the exact terms.

A total of 68 Sri Lankans and seven Maldivians were arrested after the Nov. 3 coup attempt, which was crushed by Indian paratroopers responding to a call for help from Gayoom. At least 17 people, mostly local residents, were killed in the fighting.

Namibia May Find Unity Elusive Ethnic Groups Search For Sense Of Nationhood

By Greg Myre
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WINDHOEK, Namibia — In the golden glow of the Kalahari Desert, the Bushmen live in nomadic simplicity virtually unchanged for thousands of years.

At the seaside resort of Swakopmund, descendants of German settlers converse in their mother tongue over wienerschnitzel and beer at sidewalk cafes.

In the dusty town of Rehoboth, virtually all 20,000 residents are of mixed-race and insist on being called "Bastards."

Namibia's vast, rugged landscape has only 1.3 million people, but they make up an anthropological laboratory of 11 ethnic groups who often put tribe before country and are linked not by culture nor tradition.

With independence from South Africa expected early next year, Namibians still are searching for a sense of nationhood to bond people who share little but common boundaries.

Witchcraft cases are tried under a Western legal system. Mercedes-Benzes and donkey-drawn carts kick up dust along the same rural roads. Black women with a week's worth of groceries perched on their heads shop alongside white women in fur coats in this modern capital.

At political rallies arranged by the South-West Africa People's Organization, the faction favored to win November's pre-independence elections, speeches are delivered in English, then translated into four African languages.

"Namibia is not a nation at this point," said Hans Diergaardt, leader of the Rehoboth Basters. "There are too many different groups that have been kept apart for too long."

Diergaardt and his fellow Basters, the Afrikaans-language word for "bastards," epitomize the stubborn independence that permeates Namibia's multi-tribal society.

The product of liaisons between whites and blacks in South Africa's Cape Province, the Basters left that region in search of farmland and independence in 1868 and settled the deserted missionary village of Rehoboth, about 60 miles south of Windhoek.

They identify with neither whites nor blacks and have steadfastly refused to recognize the authority of the German colonialists or their South African successors.

They now oppose Namibia's planned one-person, one-vote elections.

"A unitary state in Namibia is not going to work," said Diergaardt, a husky farmer whose weathered face speaks of years spent in the African sun.

Diergaardt has threatened to unilaterally declare Rehoboth an independent state if the Basters are dissatisfied with Namibia's elected government.

For the past several years the Basters have prepared for such a move by purchasing land that separates their territory from Atlantic port of Walvis Bay, about 180 miles away. They've bought 250,000 acres and need about $5 million to secure enough land for a corridor to the sea, Diergaardt said.

Like the Basters, the diminutive Bushmen have found little in common with other Namibians.

Entirely self-sufficient, the Bushmen thrive in the seemingly inhospitable Kalahari with extraordinary hunting and gathering skills.

They are among the most primitive people on earth, rarely building fixed settlements or making regular contact with other groups.

Most of Namibia's 30,000 Bushmen have begun to join the modern world, including hundreds employed by the South African-led security forces as trackers in the 23-year-old bush war against SWAPO guerrillas.

Equally untouched by Western culture are the Himbas of Namibia's barren northwest corner, who wear minimal clothing and smear their bodies with a rancid mixture of butter and ochre that gives them a distinctive orange tint.

The Himbas have repeatedly rejected Western missionaries, while their cousins, the Hereros, accepted them to such an extent that the women still dress in brightly colored 19th-century Victorian dresses that seem incongruous in Namibia's scorching climate.

Most of the original missionaries and settlers were Germans, whose influence remains strong.

The Atlantic town of Swakopmund features turn-of-the-century German architecture set against the alien terrain of the Namib Desert. Visitors are more likely to be greeted in German than the official languages of English and Afrikaans.

German descendants, who account for about 20,000 of Namibia's 75,000 whites, are prominent in business throughout the territory, but generally stay out of Namibia's tangled politics, which until recently included 47 parties.

Far from Swakopmund's European charm, the Kavango people of northeastern Namibia remain wedded to tribal customs.

In one case, a suspected Kavango arsonist received the traditional punishment from his tribal elders — he was ordered to dig his own grave then lie in it, where he was buried alive, according to court records.

Three tribal elders were convicted of the killing, but received only suspended sentences.

Suspected witches have been thrown into rivers with stones tied around their necks. If they drown, it is considered proof they were witches; if they survive, then they were falsely accused, according to tradition.

Namibia abandoned most of its segregation laws in the late 1970's and early 1980's, and the racial climate is more relaxed than in neighboring South Africa.

But under South Africa rule, Namibia's tribal differences were formalized with the creation of 11 separate ethnic governments that had considerable autonomy.

Namibia's first independent government will face the difficult task of establishing itself as a national authority that remains sensitive to local customs.

Britain, Argentina Eye Talks

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — Britain is to hold talks with Argentina within the next two weeks, raising the prospect of renewed diplomatic relations severed over the 1982 Falkland Islands war, a newspaper reported today.

The Times of London, without citing its sources, said Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher gave the go-ahead for talks in New York after Argentina's new president, Carlos Menem, agreed the discussions could begin without the issue of the islands' sovereignty.

After two months of negotiations between the nations, Britain's ambassador to the United Nations, Sir Crispin Tickell, will meet his Argentine counterpart, Marcelo Delpech, the Times said.

Crispin met Argentine Foreign Minister Dante Caputo in December in one of the few direct talks between the nations since the war. They primarily discussed U.N. matters but also touched on the Falklands issue, British aides said.

Britain fought a 74-day war to regain the South Atlantic archipelago from Argentine forces who occupied them in 1982, and London has pledged not to surrender sovereignty of the islands.

Argentina, however, has refused to move on normalization of relations unless there are talks about who ultimately owns the islands.

The Foreign Office said today that "any exchanges with the Argentines are confidential."

"When we have an announcement to make, we will make it," said a spokesman, speaking anonymously in keeping with British custom.

Yahoo Serious Releases His Own Brand Of Anarchy On Americans

By Stephen Hunter
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Is he serious? Indeed he is. In fact, he's not only serious but he's Serious, as well.

He is Yahoo Serious, maybe-movie star and self-created avatar of the New Comedy, Aussie-style. An unself-consciously original archipelago of bones and knees and elbows and innocence and guile, fresh (more or less) from the Antipodes, the 35-year-old ex-painter is perhaps about to become a household word in the United States, with the release of his much-ballyhooed "Young Einstein."

To see him once is to remember him forever. The face is as improbably smooth and lineless as a baby's rump, revealing at the top of fleshless cheekbones a pair of big, questing cow eyes. Setting off this angelic countenance, however, is the hair, and what hair. This is definitely serious Serious hair. Yahoo's hair is a penumbra of carrot-toned anarchy. It looks like a super fast shot of a nuclear explosion at the moment of detonation, as each of the several hundred thousand very long strands shoot off from the surface of the skull like fragments of busted atoms. This weirdness is perched atop a body that seems to have four elbows and four knees, a blur of flapping limbs and bending bones, all of it somehow scrawny, muscular and agitated at once.

Serious, who might be described as an Australian version of Steven Wright in that he hopes to bridge the gap between avant-garde and mainstream comedy, wrote, produced, directed and starred in "Young Einstein." The signs are good: In Australia it out-earned every film except the two "Crocodile Dundee" movies and "E.T." Clearly, Warner Bros., which had money in the project from the beginning, hopes to have another Mick Dundee on its hands.

And even more important than that: MTV, that ether-pure pipeline to the American teen-aged subconscious and pocketbook, gave Yahoo a week's worth of free air time!

The movie is an amiable, sight-gag-rich goof on the career of Albert Einstein (played by Serious) as an ever-inventive young genius bumbling through the Australia of 1905 and 1906, pausing now and then to invent the theory of relativity or the surf board, depending on which whim hits him hardest. The plot — though such a formal word hardly qualifies in the whimsical world of Yahoo Serious — comes eventually to focus on Young Einstein's breakthrough on a process that brings bubbles to heretofore flat beer; alas, a nasty competitor steals the secret and inadvertently creates the world's first thermonuclear device, which, as doomsday counts down, Young Einstein is able to defuse only by loud ministrations of rock 'n' roll, which he also invented, through use of the electric guitar, another Einstein original. Then he marries Marie Curie.

Well, a documentary it isn't, though Serious is quite serious about the film as a tribute to Einstein, a hero of his.

"I see it as a tribute to his life and work," he says fiercely. "He was a genius and a pacifist and he had a wonderful sense of humor. I wanted a character who was masculine but not sexist and didn't have to blow anybody's brains out to prove how tough he was."

The inspiration for "Young Einstein" came some years earlier when young Serious, then in his wanderlust mode, was roaming the world and found himself far up the Amazon River at a scroungy, swampy bar. He was stunned to discover that the native barman was wearing an Einstein T-shirt and that the portrait of Einstein captured the great genius at a particularly irreverent moment — he was sticking his tongue out and his face was knitted up in joy, as if to say, "Isn't this world a wondrously preposterous joke?"

"I wanted to get at the essence of genius," says Serious, and then goes on to define it. "The genius is the man who has the nerve to ask the simple questions. The answers may be complex, but the key questions are always simple."

When asked his real name, he turns suddenly coy.

"Oh, it's just a normal name. You can find it out if you want to."

All right: It's Greg Peard. He changed it at art school.

"I think of my name as a private work of art for me. It forces people to confront the me that I prefer them to confront. I began with the name Mr. Serious, which I thought was a very funny parody of the kind of pretentiousness you find in art school, where everybody takes things so seriously. Then I shopped a bit for a first name and finally took the 'Yahoo' from Swift's 'Gulliver's Travels.' I wanted something that said celebration or fun."

As for the hair, the film maker pretends to be stunned that anyone has noticed.

"Oh that," he says. "It's just an Australian surfer cut. You go to the beach and surf all day and never brush it out. And after a while, it just stays like that."

Heavy Petting Can Lead To Pregnancy

Dear Abby: A few years ago there was a letter in your column about a virgin who got pregnant through her jeans.

My friends say it's impossible, but I'm sure I read it correctly. Is there some way you could verify this or reprint the letter? This means a lot to me, as several of my teen-age friends are sexually active, and I want them to be safe. — Safe Sex In Rochester, N.Y.

Dear Safe Sex: The safest sex is abstinence — no sex at all. But here's the letter:

Dear Abby: I am a 19-year-old college student, and even though I've dated quite a bit, I'm rather naive about sex. I am still a virgin and hope to remain one until I marry.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Don't get me wrong, I'm no "Goody Two Shoes," but I don't want to risk an unwanted pregnancy.

I'm dating a guy right now who has been around. He knows how I feel about sex before marriage, so he's never pressured me to go all the way, but I've come closer with him than I have with any other guy. I'm ashamed to tell you how far we've gone, but I'm still a virgin (I think).

A long time ago you explained how a virgin could get pregnant. I'm sorry I didn't save it, but I never dreamed I'd need it.

Well, last night I was with this guy and things really got out of hand. Everything happened so fast. Please run that piece again about how a virgin can get pregnant. I'm worried. — B., St. Paul

Dear B.: The piece is from my booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." Many junior and senior high school teachers wrote to say that they had read it aloud to their students.

How To Get Pregnant

One of the questions I have been asked often by teens is: "How far can I go without getting pregnant?"

That is not a dumb question. It's a very intelligent one. A lot of kids get aroused by just lying close to each other while kissing. Then they just naturally proceed to the next step, which is petting.

Sometimes they remove some of their clothing because it's "in the way," or they burrow underneath it to explore each other's bodies with their hands. This is known as heavy petting, or "doing everything else but."

The technical (and legal) definition of sexual intercourse is "penetration." (The male's sex organ must penetrate the female's.) However, as impossible as it may sound, in the medical literature can be found cases where there has been no penetration — the girl remained a virgin, but after engaging in heavy petting, she found herself pregnant.

How can that be? Simple. The boy and girl were lying very close to each other (unclothed), doing "everything but," when a small amount of sperm leaked out ... near (not inside, but very close to) the girl's vagina. The sperm got into the moisture around the vagina and found its way up into it, and fertilized the egg!

Wainwright-Long Couple Married July 23 In Ayden

AYDEN — Sharon Annette Long and Gerald Lee Wainwright were united in marriage July 23 at 3 p.m. in the Ayden Pentecostal Holiness Church.

The Rev. Johnny Tyson officiated the double-ring ceremony. Wedding music was presented by Shirley McLawhorn. Brenda Tyson directed the wedding.

The bride is the daughter of Ethelene Long of Greenville and the late Wilbert Long. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Wainwright of Greenville.

Given in marriage by her mother and escorted by her uncle, Herbert Carter of Charlotte, the bride wore a formal gown of bridal satin and re-embroidered chantilly lace with a fitted bodice adorned with lace appliques, sweetheart neckline, puffed sleeves and basque waistline. The skirt extended into a cathedral train. She wore a band of silk flowers, lace and pearl sprays attached to double layers of illusion. She carried a cascade bouquet of daisies, lilies and miniature mums.

Deborah Redlinger of Raleigh, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers included Alan Wainwright, H.T. Wainwright and Johnny Wainwright, all brothers of the bridegroom of Greenville.

Melissa Wainwright, was flower girl and the ring bearer was Jason Wainwright. Both are the bridegroom's children.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall, and an after-rehearsal party was given by the family of the bridegroom.

MR. AND MRS. WAINWRIGHT

The couple are living in Greenville after a wedding trip.

Stock And Market Reports

By The Associated Press
HOGS: The trend is steady to 50 cents lower at N.C. buying stations. Kinston, Spivey's Corner, Murfreesboro, Siler City and Robersonville, 45.00; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Pine Level, Chadbourne, Ayden, Laurinburg and Benson 44.50; Wilson 45.00. Sows: (500 pounds up) Fayetteville 32.00; Wallace 33.00; Spivey's Corner 33.00; Rowland 34.00.

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 56.25 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. 86 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed for a final weighted average of 53.27 cents. The market is steady and the live supply is adequate for a light demand. Average weights mostly desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Monday was 2,231,000, compared to 2,023,000 last Monday.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn 2-5 cents higher, 2.52-2.60 in East and mostly 2.65-2.75 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans 2-14 cents higher at 6.23-7.48 in East and mostly 6.28-6.32 in the Piedmont; wheat mostly 3.43-3.58; new crop corn 2.06-2.42; new crop soybeans 5.38-5.68; P.I.K. certificates steady and ranged from 100 to 105 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market gained ground today, recovering a good measure of Friday's losses.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 7.02 to 2,660.47 in the first half hour.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about 5 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 567 up, 339 down and 490 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 24.27 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Interest rates, which had been falling sharply and steadily, suddenly jumped on Friday after the Labor Department issued an unexpectedly strong report on employment for July.

But although the upswing in rates was a negative for stocks, analysts said traders also interpreted the employment data as a reprieve from recent recession worries.

Takeover speculation, meanwhile, was fueled anew by reports that UAL Corp. had attracted a bidder. UAL, whose stock was delayed in opening, confirmed that it had received what it called a highly conditional proposal from investor Marvin Davis of Los Angeles.

Among other airline issues, Delta Air Lines climbed 2 1/8 to 74 1/4; AMR gained 1 7/8 to 69 7/8, and Pan Am was up 1/4 at 37 3/8.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .39 to 182.03. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.13 at 377.23.

On Friday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 8.16 to 2,653.45, trimming its gain for the week to 18.21 points.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 4 to 3 on the NYSE, with 636 up, 849 down and 501 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 169.75 million shares, against 168.69 million in the previous session.

more conducive to a settlement to the hostages problem now than they have been sometime in the past," he said without elaborating.

Algerian Ambassador Khaled Hasnawi, who also has been trying to win the release of Western hostages, met with Hoss and later with Sheikh Sobhi Tofaili, a senior Hezbollah leader, but declined to say if any progress was made.

Cicippio's Lebanese wife, Elham Ghandour, a secretary at the U.S. embassy in Beirut, said she felt encouraged by Sunday's offer from her husband's kidnappers, the Revolutionary Justice Organization.

However, one of Cicippio's brothers, Thomas, said from Norristown, Pa., that he was not happy with the offer because it did not mention freedom for the other foreigners held hostage in Lebanon.

A poll released Sunday indicated that most Americans believe the United States should negotiate to free the hostages and should refrain from bombing terrorist hideouts in Lebanon.

Of the 500 people surveyed in the Time magazine-Cable News Network poll, 58 percent support negotiations, while 39 percent oppose such talks. Asked whether they support bombing terrorist hideouts if innocent people might be killed, 60 percent said no, and 33 percent said yes.

Indians Hoping Can Cleveland Win AL East Title?

By Richard Justice
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

The last time Cleveland's Indians finished first, Dwight Eisenhower was learning his way around the White House putting green (1954). Six administrations have come and gone since the Indians last finished even second (1959), and they've lost more than they've won in 16 of the last 20 seasons.

So obviously, tradition — baseball's Holy Grail — says the Indians won't win the American League East in 1989. But what does tradition know about 1989?

What effect can tradition possibly have on the American League East, a race that is four months old and still doesn't have a footprint in the sand? Ask the Yankees, who lost 10 of 13 and picked up 2½ games in the standings. They went from second place to sixth and got two games closer to first.

Ask the Red Sox, who lost three starting pitchers in 24 hours and still consider themselves contenders. Ask the Blue Jays, who've gotten to .500 eight times and have gone 0-8 and been outscored by 55-20 the following games.

It says here that tradition doesn't matter and the Indians will win the AL East in this asterisk season. It also says that on the evening of Oct. 3, Indians ace Greg Swindell will beat the Oakland Athletics in Game 1 of the American League Championship Series and that four days later, there'll be 75,000 fans at Cleveland Stadium for Game 3.

Bernard Finds Closed Market

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DURHAM — North Carolina Central basketball coach Michael Bernard has discovered since March just how great a distance really separates him from Division I programs like Duke.

N.C. Central, a predominantly black CIAA school, had a basketball budget last year of $40,000. Duke, an ACC school, had a budget of $1 million. N.C. Central earned $20,000 for winning the NCAA Division II national title. Duke's take for making the Final Four exceeded $1.1 million.

Bernard thought the Eagles' first national title would be the break he needed to become a Division I head coach.

Though he aggressively pursued numerous openings, he did not have a formal interview with any Division I school. He has decided to sign a one-year contract extension with N.C. Central.

"Let's face it," Bernard told The Charlotte Observer, "I was a relative unknown in the Division I circles, and they're two different worlds. You don't just move because you won. ... I think it's the result of the perception people have of Division II coaches in general and a political situation I didn't understand until now."

Bernard, 40, seems a worthy candidate. When he came to N.C. Central in 1985, the Eagles had had one winning season in 16 years and were coming off a 4-21 mark, their worst ever.

The perception is that while Division II coaches can prove their coaching abilities on the court, they have no outlet to display the off-court capabilities Division I demands. They have little contact with alumni and the national media, do not operate with sizable budgets and do not recruit on the same level and under the same pressures as Division I.

Because of the difference, Division I assistants often get hired in favor of Division II head coaches.

Expos Are Slumping At Wrong Time

Two-Week Hitting Dry Spell Causing Montreal To Lose Some Ground

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — About two weeks ago, the Montreal Expos stopped hitting. Not just one or two of them, but nearly all of them.

Just stopped. Period. This is bad business in the middle of a pennant race and Manager Buck Rodgers knows it. He watched his team squander opportunity after opportunity Sunday before finally losing 2-1 in 14 innings to the New York Mets.

The victory completed a sweep by the Mets and left Montreal in a first-place tie with Chicago, four games in front of St. Louis and New York. The Expos open a three-game series in Chicago tonight.

What can a manager do in a situation like this? Rodgers smiled thinly.

"He can keep the club from getting down, keep the players from panicking, keep the attitude up. But he can't pull a wand out of his hat."

At this stage, a bat in the hat would be more helpful for Montreal.

"We hope somewhere between here and Chicago our hitters find their strokes," Rodgers said.

"We're close to 70 percent scoring runners from third base with less than two out. We got one semi-jam sacrifice fly all day."

The Expos left 16 runners on base, half of them in extra innings. They left the bases loaded in the eighth and 10th innings and had runners in scoring position in four of the last five innings.

They threatened. They just didn't score.

"We played great defense, had excellent pitching, and stole a couple of bases," Rodgers said. "We just couldn't get the big hit at all."

Tim Wallach, who managed the sacrifice fly with the bases loaded in the fourth, was the chief culprit, leaving 12 runners on base during an 0-for-6 day.

The slump is lineup-wide, though. Leadoff man Otis Nixon had two singles Sunday, after striking out three times and popping up. He's in a 5-for-31 rut. Power man Andres Galarraga, batting behind Wallach, managed one single in six at-bats, giving him 7-for-39. Mike Fitzgerald is hitless in his last 14 at-bats.

This, Rodgers said, has been going on for some time.

"There's no way to prevent a slump, no matter how good a team is," he said. "We've been able to win some games despite it. We hit lousy in Pittsburgh and won three out of four. The fourth game was 0-0 in the 12th inning."

The Expos lost that game and then the next three to the Mets, their longest losing streak since May. The only encouraging thing in all of this is they still have a piece of first place, courtesy of the Cubs' 18-inning loss at Pittsburgh.

"If you get good pitching but you don't hit," Rodgers said, "you tie or lose. We lost."

Andretti Cruises In Marlboro 500

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BROOKLYN, Mich. — Michael Andretti says skill and a strong car can only carry a driver so far. The winner of the Marlboro 500 Indy-car race says luck is most often the determining factor — and it was on Sunday.

Andretti, who spun on pit lane and was also assessed two stop-and-go penalties, wound up cruising to his second straight victory after the suspension on leader Rick Mears' car snapped 11 laps from the end of the 250-lap event at Michigan International Speedway.

"I had some luck with Rick dropping out today and I had some luck at Toronto (two weeks ago)," Andretti said. "I'll take 'em any way I can. I've given some away that way, too."

It appeared early that Andretti, who has led in all but one of the 10 races this season but didn't win until the ninth event, was trying to give another one away.

As Andretti left his pit on lap 75, he tried to accelerate out of the path of a car speeding in. Andretti spun his tires and his Lola slid sideways and stopped.

He spun the tires again to turn it around and wound up momentarily driving the wrong way on pit road, a violation. That stop-and-go penalty, on lap 83, left him second behind his father, Mario Andretti, and just ahead of Mears.

Michael was assessed another stop-and-go on lap 121 for an alleged pit exit violation. That one, which his crew said should have been charged to his father, who drives an almost identical car, cost Michael the lead, with both Mears and Mario moving ahead.

"I wasn't too worried because it was so early in the race," Michael said. "But we played catch-up all day."

Mears, who had been swapping leads with the Andrettis in a duel at speeds near 220 mph for most of the last 200 laps, considered himself lucky, too.

"When the suspension broke, the car dropped down to the ground," said Mears, who was leading by less than one second at the time. "I had to jump out of it (the throttle) quick. I had no warning, but I thought it could be failing."

"I was lucky," he added. "I could have ended up with the car broken, no points and damage to my body."

Instead, Mears managed to get back to the pits for quick repairs and went on to finish seventh, five laps behind.

"I was just setting him (Mears) up to pass him," the 26-year-old Andretti said. "I think I would have passed him on the back straightaway. It would have been that kind of a race."

"Rick was running very strong. But we'll never know who would have won."

Andretti, who became the first two-time winner in the nine-year history of this event, was able to ease up the rest of the way as he earned the ninth victory of his career and a prize of $129,357. His Chevrolet-powered Lola beat the March-Porsche of second-place Teo Fabi of Italy to the finish by one lap plus 26.927 seconds.

Andretti averaged 160.210 mph despite eight caution periods for a total of 59 laps.

Phil Krueger, a 38-year-old driver from Indianapolis, was critically injured in the only serious accident of the race.

Krueger and John Jones of Canada tangled and hit the wall between turns one and two on lap 199. Jones escaped injury, but Krueger, who was trapped in the car for more than 15 minutes, had chest and rib injuries. He was transported by helicopter to an Ann Arbor hospital, where he was reported in critical condition.

Dr. David Crippen, a member of CART's medical staff, said moments after Krueger was placed in the helicopter. "He is in critical condition but at this time the injuries don't appear to be life threatening."

Mario Andretti wound up third, close behind Fabi, who gave Porsche its best finish in two years on the Indy-car circuit.

Al Unser Jr. was fourth, followed by Derek Daly of Ireland and Arie Luyendyk of The Netherlands.

Emerson Fittipaldi of Brazil, who won the pole here and went into the race with a 40-point lead over Mears in the CART-PPG driver standings, had a bad day after a strong start.

John Mahaffey watches a birdie putt on the 17th hole

Mahaffey Rolls To St. Jude Win

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — John Mahaffey was ready to look at 1989 as just another year of work on the PGA Tour. That was before he received some friendly advice from his wife.

"My wife told me there was still a lot of golf to play and to get off my butt," said Mahaffey, who came from three strokes back on Sunday to win the $1 million Federal Express St. Jude Classic by three shots.

"I hadn't won since the 1986 Tournament Players Classic and it's been a long road back," said Mahaffey, whose 6-under-par 65 closing round gave him a 72-hole score of 272, 12 under par. Bob Gilder, Bernhard Langer, Bob Tway and Hubert Green were each three shots back after four rounds over the 7,006-yard, par-71 Tournament Players Club course at Southwind.

Mahaffey said a two-week break during which he pondered his golfing future brought him to the conclusion that he had to become more aggressive. "I was getting complacent. I found myself just trying to make cuts. I was not aggressive. I didn't like playing that way. I really wanted to win," the 1978 PGA Championship winner said.

"I birdied the first hole today and I started thinking about winning. I said 'Let's be aggressive,'" Mahaffey said.

The title chase boiled down to a battle between Mahaffey and Gilder, who had shared the third-round lead with Langer at 9-under.

After slipping to 8-under early in his round, Gilder challenged for the lead until he took consecutive bogeys on the 17th and 18th holes while Mahaffey moved to 12-under with a 20-foot birdie putt at the par-4 17th.

"I got off to a slow start and I really wasn't making the putts," Gilder said. "I was just kind of dragging my tail the first nine holes."

"It was tough coming in, and it was the guy who stuffed it in like John did on 17 that was going to win," Gilder said. "He played well. He went out and won the tournament."

While Gilder and others struggled to find their game, Mahaffey stuck to his go-for-broke strategy.

Mahaffey, who made the turn at 4-under 32, didn't let bogeys at No. 11 and No. 14 slow him down. He came back with four birdies on the back side, including his decisive putt at the 17th.

"The 17th was a very good hole for me and I really didn't like it when I first saw it," Mahaffey said. "Today, I didn't hit a good drive, but I hit a good 2-iron into the the green and made the putt."

Area Preps Ready To Start Hitting

By Mike Grizzard
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

One of the true measures of a football player is his ability to hit. That's what makes the game fun for some.

It's also one of the criterion coaches use to evaluate personnel. With the rigors of the six-day conditioning phase, required by the North Carolina High School Athletic Association, now complete football practice on the prep scene moves in to the contact stage this week.

Of course, conditioning will not be neglected the remainder of preseason practice but players and coaches are anxious to get down to the meat and potatoes of the game — blocking and tackling.

"We will find out who the hitters are now," Farmville Central coach

Dixon Sauls said. "We should be able to get more of a feel for what we are doing."

"We get down to real football now," D.H. Conley coach Steve Craft said. "This gives us a little better look."

Rose, the only area team conducting two-a-day practices, began contact drills Saturday and continues with light workouts in the morning and heavy workouts in the afternoon.

Rose, Farmville and Conley have outside scrimmages slated for Saturday, although the Vikings' trip to Williamston was tentative as of this morning. The Jaguars are at home against Bunn at 7 p.m. while Rose is at New Bern Saturday morning at a time yet to be determined.

Ayden-Grifton gets its first taste of outside competition next Monday at Edenton. Farmville will conclude its scrimmage schedule at James Kenan and Rose will visit Raleigh Broughton Thursday, Aug. 17.

The remainder of the scrimmage schedule has Conley hosting Northside, Ayden-Grifton at home against Camp Lejeune and North Pitt traveling to Plymouth on Friday, Aug. 18.

Farmville Central With the luxury of a primarily veteran cast of players, Sauls has taken an organized and accelerated approach during the first week of practice at Farmville Central.

The Jaguars have covered their basic running plays and a handful of pass plays while touching on the fundamentals and the kicking game.

"Overall, it was a productive week," Sauls said. "We accomplished the majority of the goals we set."

Raiders' Toran Killed In Accident

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles Raiders defensive back Stacy Toran was killed when his car went off a curve near his home and overturned, police said Sunday.

Toran, 27, lost control of his 1984 BMW on Glencoe Avenue near Marina del Rey at 11:30 p.m. Saturday, said Officer Richard Wells. Toran lived in the marina area.

The car jumped a curb and struck a tree, flipping several times. Toran was ejected from the vehicle and struck his head on the pavement, Wells said. He was pronounced dead at the scene.

"This is a tragic loss," said Raiders managing general partner Al Davis. "Our hearts go out to the family. He wore the Raider uniform with dignity, pride and class, and we're deeply moved. He was our friend."

The Los Angeles County coroner's office notified Toran's family in Indianapolis of his death, Wells said.

An autopsy would not be performed until Monday at the earliest, said Lilie Shelton, day supervisor at the coroner's office.

Saturday was the Raiders' annual Family Day at Oxnard High School, where players go through drills and sign autographs for thousands of fans. Players were allowed to leave camp about 4 p.m. They were to return at 5 p.m. Sunday.

Toran worked out during a practice session at the Raiders' training camp in Oxnard, on the coast northwest of Los Angeles, and attended the Family Day event, a mandatory activity for players.

A sixth-round draft choice in 1984, the 6-3, 200-pound Toran was a starting strong safety who looked to be a major part of the Raiders' defense this season.

He started the first four games last year but suffered a sprained ankle and broken fibula that sidelined him for the remainder of the season. He was considered one of the team's best players the year before that.

Toran starred at Notre Dame as a cornerback and was defensive co-captain his senior year. He played in the Liberty Bowl as well as the Hula Bowl and Japan Bowl all-star games.

Labonte Gets Come-From-Behind Win

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — Terry Labonte went from the back row to the front in eight laps Sunday to win the 100-mile International Race of Champions.

The NASCAR stock car star won the 50-lap race, 47 seconds ahead of Dale Earnhardt. Rusty Wallace finished third, followed by Bill Elliott, Al Unser Jr., and Scott Pruett.

Labonte leads Wallace in the points standings after three events in the four-race IROC series, 55-51. The series concludes next Saturday at Watkins Glen, N.Y.

Southern Prop 48s Have Declined

ATLANTA (AP) — A new survey says freshmen in major Southern college football programs are doing better academically.

The survey by The Atlanta Journal-Constitution found that 42 percent fewer freshmen than last year failed to qualify under the NCAA's Proposition 48 academic rule, officially known as Bylaw 5-1-(j).

The survey of 22 major Southern college football programs found that only 30 of 505 football players signed failed to meet the rule, compared with 52 of 539 last year.

To play as a freshman under Proposition 48, a signee must have a high school grade point average of at least 2.0 in a core curriculum of 11 academic courses and score a minimum of 700 on the Scholastic Aptitude Test or 15 on the American College Test.

Daniel Snaps Loss Streak With Victory

POTOMAC, Md. (AP) — Beth Daniel snapped a four-year winless streak by making 18 pars for a four-stroke victory over Sherri Turner in the LPGA's Greater Washington Open on Sunday.

Daniel took a four-shot lead into the final round and finishing at 8-under-par 205 for 54 holes. Turner came out of the pack to finish second with birdies on three of the last four holes for a 65, the best round of the day.

Betsy King and Danielle Ammaccapane tied for third at 210.

Shaw's Clutch Putt Captures Sr. Win

JEREMY RANCH, Utah (AP) — Tom Shaw sank a 2½-foot par-saving putt on the 18th hole to capture the U.S. West Showdown Classic for his first victory on the PGA Senior Tour.

Shaw, a 50-year-old Senior Tour rookie, finished with a final-round 70 for a 54-hole score of 9-under-par 207 to earn the $52,500 first prize. Larry Mowry, who was tied with Shaw until he bogeyed the par-3 17th hole, finished second at 208.

Prep Practice ...

"With a lot of veteran players we have tried to teach from the whole-part theory. We're very enthusiastic about our team right now, but we still have a long ways to go."

Sauls said two or three 30-minute controlled scrimmages would be held this week. The Jaguars currently have 25 players on both the varsity and junior varsity squads.

Ayden-Grifton
With heavy losses to graduation, the number of players in practice has been a top concern for Ayden-Grifton coach B.T. Chappell.

Varsity candidates number 20 while 30 are working with the junior varsity squad. Chappell said several prospects had not reported and some may be elevated from the jayvee group.

"We had a big graduating class and it's hard to fill in that space," Chappell said. "As far as numbers, we started pretty low. Each night we've picked up a few more players. It seems like we've got more in tobacco this year — that could be a problem."

Although the numbers are not at the optimum level, Chappell said he has been pleased with the overall attitudes.

"They could have come in here with defeated attitudes but they didn't," Chappell said. "The kids have a good attitude this year. That makes it more fun for me."

North Pitt
North Pitt head coach Stuart Ennis reports a dramatic improvement since opening night when less than 20 candidates had the necessary paperwork completed and a thunderstorm cut practice short.

The Panthers currently have 38 prospects for both varsity and junior varsity. Two other key performers are in Georgia with the Coastal Plain Senior Babe Ruth team.

"Our kids have worked real hard, we're just low in numbers," Ennis said. "We were hoping for 50, that would be a good number for our program. To have 25 on varsity and 25 on jayvee would be just great."

"The first night we had only 18 that were ready to practice, had their physicals and all the paperwork done. Of those 18 I did not think we had a good practice. That may have been my fault. We may have rushed them. The rest of the week went real well."

Ennis said the focus of this week would be on installing the basic offense and defense in preparation for an intra-squad scrimmage Friday night.

D.H. Conley
Craft said work in all phases will be continued this week in practice but the offense would get extra attention. No intra-squad scrimmages are scheduled with all contact coming in one-on-one or dummy drills.

"We will try to touch on all phases and try to work in the offense," Craft said. "You do more offensively this time of year than you do defensively."

The Vikings have 34 candidates on the varsity and 32 on the junior varsity. No cut is planned, said Craft.

Rose
Rose coach Chip Williams has several positions with question marks and another one has been added to the list.

Senior quarterback Hank Thompson reinjured a stress fracture in his foot during practice and will be out for at least six weeks. Columbus Grice and Matthew Cagle are also working at quarterback.

"We've got a lot of places to fill," Williams said. "We're just trying to make sure we've got the right people in the right spots."

"I've been fairly pleased with the turnout, especially with the varsity. We've got a couple guys in that are heavy and we're working on that."

Monday morning's workout concentrated on the passing game with this afternoon's session focusing on the running game.

Defense is on the agenda for Tuesday and will alternate with offense on a day-to-day basis the remainder of the week.
The bulk of the special-team work was handled during the conditioning period.

Johnson, Brister Get New Deals

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Norm Johnson can't kick about his new deal with the Seattle Seahawks. Nor can Bubby Brister with the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Those two signed lucrative contracts with their respective teams on Sunday, each getting special incentives that could inflate their salaries even more.

"Norm has an opportunity to make even more money than he was looking for," said Bruce Singman, Johnson's agent. "The structure of the contract makes him happy because it gives him the opportunity to earn his money through his excellence on the field."

The Seahawks placekicker signed a two-year contract for a reported $750,000 or more, making him one of the best-paid kickers in the NFL.

In reports published Sunday, the Morning News Tribune of Tacoma estimated Johnson's salary at $750,000 to $775,000 for the two years, while The Seattle Times said his base pay would be roughly $400,000 a year.

Morten Anderson of New Orleans and Nick Lowery of Kansas City are believed to be asking $650,000 and $550,000 a year, respectively, the Times said.

Johnson signed the contract after an 11-day holdout.

Meanwhile, Brister went from the NFL's lowest-paid starting quarterback to one of the highest-paid players in the Steelers' history.

Brister was on the option year of a contract that would pay him $187,000 this year. His new contract is worth a reported $2.5 million, with incentives that could make the total value nearly $1 million a year.

The Steelers' highest-paid player had been cornerback Rod Woodson, who signed a $2 million deal as a rookie in 1987.

Brister's base salary reportedly will be $700,000 this season, $800,000 in 1990 and $900,000 in 1991, plus annual bonuses — such as for reporting to camp and making the team's opening-day roster — worth $125,000 a year. The average NFL starting quarterback's salary is about $800,000.

Brister, who reported to training camp despite his uncertain contract status, took part in the Steelers' 90-minute intrasquad scrimmage Saturday night after sitting out nearly two days of workouts with a tired throwing arm.

"I'm anxious to get going. We've been in camp long enough," Brister said.

In other NFL training camp news:

Detroit Lions
Rookie Rodney Peete and veterans Rusty Hilger and Bob Gagliano are waging a three-way battle to open the exhibition season as the Lions' starting quarterback.

Peete, Hilger and Gagliano have been the most impressive signal-callers in training camp, coaches say. The other quarterbacks in camp are veterans Eric Hipple and Chuck Long, the latter recovering from off-season elbow surgery.

Minnesota Vikings
Cornerback Reggie Rutland participated in his first workout with the Minnesota Vikings on Sunday after ending a six-day holdout.

The three-year veteran had reportedly agreed to terms with the Vikings as early as Wednesday, but he did not make it into the Vikings' training camp at Mankato State until late Saturday.

Washington Redskins
Redskins starting quarterback Doug Williams returned to training camp Sunday, but said he will do little more than be a spectator until his lower-back problems are completely healed.

Dallas Cowboys
Scott Secules, considered the Cowboys' brightest quarterback prospect last season, was traded to the Miami Dolphins on Sunday for a conditional 1990 mid-round draft pick.

Miami has been shopping for a young quarterback.

"With the Dolphins he will have an opportunity because they need a young guy," Johnson said. "We feel this is best for him." "We think Scott will be a very competent NFL quarterback," said Bob Ackles, Cowboys director of player personnel. "We think he's capable of starting in the NFL. But we felt we could get something for him now rather than waiting until the last minute."

Secules said he was surprised at the timing of the trade but figured his future in Dallas was limited after Walsh was drafted and signed.

"I think Walsh's arrival affected the staff's priority as to who would get the work," Secules said. "They made an investment in their future so I knew my future in football wasn't going to be in Dallas."

Denver Broncos
The Broncos announced the signing of veteran cornerback Jeremiah Castille. The 5-foot-10, 175-pound Castille was signed to a series of one-year contracts.

Youth Baseball North State Falls

HUDSON — Greenville North State's road in the North Carolina Little League state championship began and ended with defending state champion Cherryville.

Cherryville, representing District I, captured its second straight state crown and advanced to the Southern Regional in St. Petersburg, Fla. Sunday with a 3-1 win over District IV champion North State.

North State had reached the championship series of the seven-team, double-elimination tournament with three straight wins after falling to Cherryville 10-3 in the opening round. Cherryville posted a 4-0 mark in the tournament.

"We were real proud of the kids," North State assistant coach Chester Robbins said. "We were disappointed we couldn't hit those pitchers (Sunday). We kept hitting the ball at somebody."

North State managed only three hits — singles by Scott Briley, Scott Burrows and James Ebron — off a pair of Cherryville hurlers but had several scoring opportunities, leaving the bases loaded in each of the second and third innings.

Jason Harris entered with two outs and the bases full in the third to retire the side and went to notch the win.

Adrian Jones tossed a five-hit complete game in the loss. He fanned five, walked two and was backed by an errorless defense.

North State seized a 1-0 lead in the second on consecutive walks to Matt Davis walk and Daryl Cherry, a catcher's interference ruling allowing Chris Grover to reach and a two-out walk to Nabeel Barakat.

Cherryville forged a 1-1 tie in the fourth on a single by Harris, two wild pitches, a walk to Heath Rippey and a double steal. North State executed a cut-off play to try and nail Harris at the plate but Harris was called safe on a close play.

A two-run homer by Eric Bridges in the fifth after Brad Dalton reached on a fielder's choice proved the difference.

Coastal Plains Wins

MARIETTA, Ga. — On the brink of elimination from the Senior Babe Ruth Southeastern Regional Saturday night in Marietta, Ga., Coastal Plain came up with three runs in the top of the seventh inning then escaped a scare in the bottom of the inning to nip Western North Carolina 6-5.

The win gives Coastal Plain, the Eastern North Carolina champion, the unofficial state crown and a spot into today's 1 p.m. losers' bracket game against the winner of the South Carolina-Virginia game, scheduled for Sunday night.

Coastal Plain dropped a heart-breaking 8-7 decision to Georgia state champion Columbus Friday after building an early 4-0 lead.

"We were playing for the North Carolina state championship," Coastal Plain head coach Ted Curtis said of the game with Western North Carolina, which hails from the Charlotte area. "Before, we were being called the Eastern North Carolina champions and most of the teams here were champions of their state. Now, after beating Western North Carolina, we have claimed bragging rights for North Carolina."

Coastal Plain trailed 5-3 heading into the seventh inning against Western North Carolina but rallied with the aid of a pair of one-out walks to Joe DeLoach and pinch-hitter Brad Kearney, a double by Craig Willoughby and a sacrifice fly by Brian Tuten.

Willoughby had advanced to third when his drive to left was misplayed then scored on Tuten's fly ball.

Western North Carolina mounted a serious threat in the home half of the seventh but right-hander Derek Curtis, in relief of southpaw Paul Powers, was able to wriggle out of the jam.

Curtis entered after Powers issued a walk and got a grounder to second on a hit-and-run for the first out. A single to right by Cleve Jackson put runners at the corners. After Jackson swiped second, Mike Sharpentine popped to second. Curtis then fanned Scott Miller to end the game.

Western North Carolina had taken a 4-0 lead with two runs in the first and single runs in the second and third but Coastal Plain got within 4-3 with a three-run fourth on back-to-back doubles by Roosevelt Hines and Randy House, a RBI single by Jay Tripp, a throwing error on Scott Chauncey's hard grounder to short and a run-scoring safety bunt by DeLoach.

Western Carolina picked up a run in the bottom of the fourth for a 4-3 lead.

Ex-Pirate Williams Keys Eagles' Victory

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WEMBLEY, England — It didn't take long for Henry "Gizmo" Williams to make his presence felt with the Philadelphia Eagles. Bud Carson's debut with the Cleveland Browns wasn't nearly as auspicious.

Williams, a former East Carolina standout, made a fingertip reception of a 34-yard pass from Don McPherson to score what turned out to be the winning touchdown as the Eagles downed Cleveland 17-13 in an NFL preseason game in Wembley Stadium on Sunday.

McPherson completed 12 of 22 passes for 193 yards after relieving Randall Cunningham early in the second quarter.

Orioles Returning To Earlier Form

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Their two-week summer vacation is over and, like many people, the Baltimore Orioles are getting back into their regular routine.

"We're getting things back together to where we're going out and playing consistent baseball," Manager Frank Robinson said Sunday after the Orioles tied the game with a run in the bottom of the ninth inning and then beat the Texas Rangers 3-2 on Mike Devereaux's homer in the 10th.

The Orioles have won three of four games since a two-week stretch during which they lost 13 of 14 and saw their lead in the American League East shrink from 7 1/2 games to one game. It's back to 2 1/2, with the Boston Red Sox the closest pursuer following a 6-4 victory over Cleveland.

Baltimore trailed 2-1 against Texas rookie Kevin Brown when Cal Ripken got an infield hit with one out in the ninth and Keith Moreland doubled him to third. Relief ace Jeff Russell relieved but Randy Milligan's single tied the game and Devereaux's sixth home run of the season won it with one out in the 10th.

Winner Mark Williamson pitched 1 2/3 scoreless innings in relief of starter Pete Harnisch. Williamson worked out of first-and-third, one-out jams in the ninth and 10th. Steve Buechele homered for Texas.

Red Sox 6, Indians 4
Ellis Burks and Luis Rivera hit solo home runs in the eighth inning as Boston rallied after the loss of sore-armed Roger Clemens in the first inning.

Burks greeted reliever Jesse Orosco with his eighth home run of the season. Two outs later, Rivera hit his fourth homer. The two homers matched the total allowed by Orosco in his first 45 appearances. Winner Rob Murphy retired all five batters he faced, striking out the side in the ninth.

Clemens, who missed a scheduled start Wednesday because of a slight muscle tear in his right elbow, threw only 11 pitches, retiring one batter, allowing two singles and hitting a batter. The Red Sox said he was lifted because of "the tightening of a muscle in his right forearm."

Angels 6, Brewers 0
Jim Abbott became the first California rookie in four years to win at least 10 games by scattering four hits in seven innings and striking out a career-high nine.

Tony Armas' sacrifice fly and RBI singles by Chili Davis, Bill Schroeder and Dick Schofield gave the Angels a 4-0 lead in the sixth against rookie Jaime Navarro. Davis drove in the Angels' fifth run with an infield hit in the seventh and Johnny Ray singled home the final run in the eighth.

Athletics 2, Mariners 1
Oakland remained one-half game behind California in the AL West behind the seven-hit pitching of Storm Davis and two relievers. Davis, 11-5, went seven scoreless innings and won for the ninth time in his last 11 decisions.

Rick Honeycutt took over to start the eighth and pinch-hitter Henry Cotto homered on the first pitch. Dennis Eckersley pitched the ninth and allowed two singles before nailing down his 21st save.

Blue Jays 6, Yankees 5
Fred McGriff hit his league-leading 29th home run, a two-run blast that put Toronto ahead in the bottom of the seventh, and Manny Lee added a three-run shot to cap a five-run inning.

With one out, George Bell doubled off Walt Terrell and McGriff homered for a 3-2 lead. Ernie Whitt chased Terrell with a double and Lloyd Moseby drew a walk from Lee Guetterman. The runners advanced on Guetterman's throwing error on an attempted pickoff and pinch-hitter Nelson Liriano struck out before Lee hit his second home run of the season to make it 6-2.

Royals 3, Twins 2
Kevin Seitzer hit a tie-breaking, seventh-inning single after Brad Wellman and Gary Thurman drew one-out walks from Shane Rawley. Bret Saberhagen, 12-5, yielded both Minnesota runs and nine hits in seven innings.

The Royals are 18-5 in games started by Saberhagen, who has lost only twice since May 4. Steve Crawford pitched the eighth for the Royals and Jeff Montgomery worked the ninth for his seventh save.

Tigers 4, White Sox 3
Pinch-hitter Lou Whitaker's sacrifice fly capped a two-run eighth inning as Detroit snapped Chicago's 13-game home winning streak.

Gary Pettis and Alan Trammell singled off Chicago starter Greg Hibbard to open the eighth and Shawn Hillegas walked pinch-hitter Fred Lynn to load the bases.

Ken Patterson relieved and pinch-hitter Dave Bergman forced Lynn at second as Pettis scored the tying run. Trammell took third on the play and scored when Whitaker greeted Tom McCarthy, the fourth pitcher of the inning, with a sacrifice fly.

Frank Tanana scattered six hits to raise his career record to 196-183. He is 25-12 against the White Sox.

The New York Mets and Pittsburgh Pirates ended long days with long balls.

Jeff King led off the bottom of the 18th inning with a homer off reliever Scott Sanderson to give the Pirates a 5-4 victory over the Chicago Cubs on Sunday in the longest game ever at Three Rivers Stadium.

In New York, Kevin McReynolds opened the Mets' 14th with a homer that gave New York a 2-1 victory and a three-game sweep of Montreal.

The Pirates-Cubs game lasted 5 hours and 42 minutes, breaking the Three Rivers record of 5:32 set in Pittsburgh's 20-inning victory over Chicago in 1980.

Sanderson, 9-8, pitched eight scoreless innings before King hit his third major-league homer. King entered the game with a .163 average and was hitless in his first six at-bats.

The loss left the Cubs in a first-place tie with the Expos in the National League East. The teams begin a three-game series Monday in Chicago.

The Mets took 4 hours and 55 minutes to complete their victory over the Expos.

The Mets, who now trail the Expos and Cubs by just four games, play 14 of their next 17 games at home.

Pirates 5, Cubs 4
King said he was looking for a fastball on a 3-1 pitch from Sanderson. And that's what he got.

The Cubs, already short-staffed after Paul Kilgus left the team to be with his pregnant wife, almost ran out of pitchers. Manager Don Zimmer-Louis the victory.

Magrane is the Cardinals leading pitcher with 13 victories, but is only a career .158 hitter. He pinch hit for Todd Worrell only because the Carmer used six of them and was prepared to call on Mike Bielecki, Tuesday's scheduled starter, if the game went another inning.

Chicago, which lost for the first time in six games at Pittsburgh this season, took a 4-3 lead in the ninth on an RBI double by Domingo Ramos. The Pirates tied it in the bottom of the inning without a hit.

Leyland played the game under protest, claiming that Zimmer intentionally tried to pull off an illegal pitching change in the ninth.

Mets 2, Expos 1
McReynolds, who has 10 RBIs in his last five games, hit his game-winning homer off Steve Frey, 3-2.

Jeff Musselman, who escaped jams in the 13th and 14th innings, improved to 1-1 with his first victory as a Met.

Montreal had a chance to go ahead in the 14th when Otis Nixon singled, was sacrificed to second and stole third. But after Mike Aldrete walked, Tim Raines popped to second and Tim Wallach grounded into a fielder's choice to end the inning.

Reds 3, Braves 2
Eric Davis won the game with a two-run homer off Joe Boever in the ninth inning.

Davis hit his 21st homer after Luis Quinones led off the inning with a single. Boever, 4-5, gave up a game-winning homer to Mariano Duncan in the 10th inning on Friday.

Norm Charlton, 5-1, retired the Braves in order in the ninth for the victory.

Cardinals 5, Phillies 4
Jeff Parrett walked pinch-hitter

Joe Magrane with two outs and the bases load in the 10th inning, completing a four-run rally that gave St. Louis no one but pitchers left on the bench.

Vince Coleman started the winning rally with a one-out single and his 48th steal of the season. Ozzie Smith then walked, and Pedro Guerrero and Tom Brunansky followed with RBI singles.

Dodgers 4, Padres 2
Fernando Valenzuela won his first home game in seven weeks and Jay

Howell tied a Dodgers record with his 24th save.

Valenzuela, 6-11, gave up nine hits, struck out four and walked three in seven innings. The left-hander, who had lost six of his previous seven starts, won for the first time at Dodger Stadium since he beat the Atlanta Braves 5-3 on June 18.

Howell tied the club record for saves set by Jim Hughes in 1954 and equaled by Jim Brewer in 1970.

Mike Marshall doubled in the go-ahead runs in the seventh inning.

Astros 3, Giants 2
Rookie Eric Yelding's RBI single in the eighth inning gave Houston its first victory in six games at Candlestick Park this season.

The win pulled the Astros to within two games of the division-leading Giants.

Gerald Young walked with one out in the eighth off Craig Lefferts, 2-4, and went to second on a single by pinch-hitter Alex Trevino. Yelding then lined his game-winning hit to right.

Cleveland 1 Of AL East Hopefuls ...

If not the Indians, who? Don't say the Red Sox have pitching problems. So do the Yankees and Orioles. Don't say the Indians have trouble scoring runs. So do the Blue Jays and Brewers.

Yet, mediocre teams can still have interesting pennant races, and in 1989 six teams are still in contention after 100 games.

—Indians: Their season may hinge on how quickly Swindell returns from the disabled list and how sharp he is. They've been very hesitant to say exactly what's wrong with his left elbow, and the best guess is that he'll return by mid-August.

It's unlikely they'll win without him, although they still look solid in a lot of areas, including the rotation. They entered the weekend 13-9 since the all-star break, which was the best record in the East.

However, they're also inconsistent. Designated hitter Joey Belle came up from the minors and pepped up a sluggish offense by driving in 16 runs in 20 games. That helped them average 6.7 runs the first 14 games after the break, but last week they scored 15 in eight games.

Doug Jones blew three of five saves, and Doc Edwards left erratic Jesse Orosco in to save Wednesday's game.

The Indians aren't a great team, but it won't take a great one to win this division this season.

—Brewers: After trailing by 12 games on July 18, the Brewers quickly made up ground on the Orioles. General Manager Harry Dalton compares his pickup of Jerry Reuss this season to his acquisition of Don Sutton in 1982. Their rotation of Reuss, Teddy Higuera, Chris Bosio, Jaime Navarro and Tom Filer is the best in the division, and their lefty stopper, Dan Plesac, could be the best anywhere. Their fate probably rests on their run-producers, Greg Brock, Rob Deer and Glenn Braggs.

"I've said all year that nobody's going to win the American League East," Dalton said. "Six teams are going to lose it. I started out saying that in jest. Now, I just hope we're not one of the six."

—Blue Jays: GM Pat Gillick has slowly changed this team for the better. Mookie Wilson and DH Lee Mazzilli are solid citizens who've endured the pressures of a pennant race. Wilson should cover a lot of ground in the spacious SkyDome, and the Blue Jays have a surplus of left-handed pitching.

Their lineup can score runs in a hurry, but it's hard to believe in the Blue Jays when their ace, Jimmy Key, is winless since June 20.

—Red Sox: Despite the best everyday lineup, the Red Sox are long shots since four of their five starters are hurting. That's why they're trying to get Shane Rawley from the Twins and that's why they'll be watching Roger Clemens so closely this afternoon.

Last week Clemens finally admitted his right elbow hurts.

—Yankees: They'd lost 13 of 18 through Friday, and with Dave LaPoint back on the DL their rotation is Clay Parker, Andy Hawkins, Chuck Cary, Greg Cadaret and Walt Terrell. Those five won 26 times last season and have 19 this season. Still, it's impossible to eliminate the Yankees unless someone else gets hot. They went 1-8 on the road and picked up ground.

—Orioles: They haven't had a victory from a starter since July 18. Bob Milacki and Jeff Ballard have been decent, but everyone else has been getting hammered, thereby handing No. 1 draft pick Ben McDonald his best leverage. Their goal this season was to finish .500, and by September that may be all the challenge they can handle.

Twins Rebuild
The overhaul of the Twins began by trading Frank Viola to the Mets. The acquisition of David West, Kevin Tapani, Rick Aguilera and Tim Drummond gives them eight pitchers (all 28 or younger) to compete for five starting jobs next spring.

Now GM Andy MacPhail would like to trade third baseman Gary Gaetti to the Braves for three kids-infielder Jeff Blauser, pitcher Tom Glavine and a quality minor league pitcher.

Comings & Goings
The Baltimore Orioles top draft choice, pitcher Ben McDonald, has decided to sign instead with an as yet unformed new professional baseball league, The (Baltimore) Sun reported today.

The Sun said McDonald is expected to announce his decision in the near future, possibly as early as today.

"Ben has evaluated Baltimore's offer and declined it. Ben would like to be a part of what is going on in Baltimore, but with each day, that has dissipated," McDonald's agent Scott Boras said Sunday from his home in southern California.

The Sun quoted sources as saying the Orioles' final offer to the lanky Louisiana State product included a signing bonus close to $300,000, a guaranteed major league contract for 1990 and an option for 1991. The package was said to be worth about $600,000, although a good portion was in the 1991 option.

McDonald was the first pick overall in this spring's amateur draft. Last year's top pick, Andy Benes, received $240,000 from the San Diego Padres.

The proposed league has offered McDonald a two-year contract worth $2 million, apparently to play for a Washington franchise, The Sun reported.

Daniels, Hatcher To DL
The Los Angeles Dodgers placed outfielders Kal Daniels and Mickey Hatcher on the 15-day disabled list following Sunday's 4-2 victory over the San Diego Padres.

Their spots on the roster will be filled by outfielder Mike Huff and infielder Mike Sharperson, who were called up from Albuquerque of the Pacific Coast League.

Sanders Arrested
Columbus Clippers outfielder Deion Sanders was arrested on Sunday on charges he assaulted two fans during a game with the Richmond Braves, a Richmond city sheriff's deputy said.

Sanders was charged with two counts of simple assault and was freed after posting $5,000 bail, according to a sheriff's deputy who would not give her name. Sanders was scheduled to appear in court Monday, she said.

The incident allegedly occurred near the end of Sunday's game, which the Braves won 16-4.

After Sanders was removed from the game for a pinch-hitter in the ninth inning, he changed clothes and went to a concourse at The Diamond stadium to wait for fans who had heckled him, said George Taylor head of security at the stadium.

"Apparently there were punches thrown and an usher was hit," Taylor said.

A complaint against Sanders was filed by Chris Burke and Ken Ross, both of Richmond, police said.

Clippers manager Bucky Dent said Sanders would be fined over the incident.

"First of all, he's not supposed to leave the clubhouse until the game's over," Dent said. "That's an automatic fine right there. You just don't go up into the stands."

Dent said he discussed the incident with George Bradley, vice president in charge of player development for the Clippers' parent club, the New York Yankees.

Sanders was fifth overall selection in the NFL draft. Sanders, a cornerback from Florida State, was chosen by the Atlanta Falcons.

Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY Aug. 8

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): This day can be a turning point in personal affairs, when mutual fences are mended and rivalries once again have a friendly tone.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Changes, new plans and directions can be made easily. Travel may be part of the scenario. Psychic experiences may prevail.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Your restless and mentally active mind can keep you away from basic tasks. Procrastination today brings tomorrow's burdens!

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Rise above work-related tension. Concentrate on entertaining, self-expression, and creative projects. It is an easy day.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Romance could be part of this lovely day. Don't love him or her to death unless you are ready for a commitment. Use good sense.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): This is your day! A favorable influence in earth points to ease and success, along with fulfillment of long-awaited promises.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Someone who acts tough is actually a cream puff. It is better to try to understand the person than to get yourself riled up.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Try to be your children's best friend. Avoid giving nagging advice. Conflicts are normal in most human relationships. Stay calm.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Tactful persuasion weakens resistance to your ideas. A showdown is brewing at the workplace. Your best intentions succeed.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Fascinating people come into your life and may leave just as quickly. Associates will respond favorably to practical ideas.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Routine activities go well. A family problem can wind up being a balancing act when reason tugs one way, emotions another.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Tolerance towards confusing situations can help to make a favorable response. Extravagant urges can get out of hand.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQJ ♥AKQJ4 ♦93 ♣KQ2
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♥ Pass 4 ♥ Pass
? What action do you take?
A.—If you moved at all, there is a gap in your knowledge of basic bidding. North's jump to four hearts is a preemptive action, and as such it denies two aces. Even five hearts could be too high. Pass

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠J7632 ♥AKJ92 ♦K7 ♣6
Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?
A.—When you have two four-card suits, it is usually correct to bid the cheaper one first in response to partner's opening. With two five-card suits, however, always respond in the higher ranking regardless of the quality of the suits. Bid one spade.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AQJ72 ♥3 ♦AK3 ♣Q982
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♦ Pass
? What do you bid now?
A.—Your hand has improved vastly. Since there is a distinct possibility of slam, you should plan to show your strength and distribution. Start with the "high reverse" of three clubs, intending to support diamonds next.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AQJ72 ♥3 ♦AK3 ♣Q982
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♥ Pass
? What do you bid now?
A.—You still have a good hand, but your singleton in partner's suit suggests you take it easy until you know where you are headed. We prefer a rebid of two spades to the high reverse of three clubs.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ1072 ♥K6 ♦A108 ♣AJ3
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 3 NT Pass
? What action do you take?
A.—Partner's response shows a balanced hand of 16-18 points and a 4-3-3-3 distribution. Therefore, we would give up all thoughts of a grand slam and be satisfied with a value raise to six no trump.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠Q432 ♥6 ♦AQ1053 ♣J62
Partner opens the bidding with one heart what do you respond?
A.—Don't count your singleton heart as an asset in selecting your response; a singleton in partner's suit is a flaw until a fit has been located. Since you do not have the values for a two-over-one response, your only option is to bid one spade.

Role Change Means New Costumes For Beacham

By Kathryn Baker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — For Stephanie Beacham, changing jobs this coming season has meant a radical change of uniform.

Instead of the designer clothes she wore as wealthy Sable Colby on ABC's "Dynasty," she'll don a nun's habit for the title role in the new NBC sitcom "Sister Kate."

"That's very tiresome, having six costume fittings a week," she said. "It's going to be heaven just being in a little navy-blue skirt and white blouse, thank you very much. That's wardrobe now."

Beacham, meeting with television critics who had gathered to preview the new fall shows, said playing a nun is actually closer to her own upbringing than was the role as the rich and flighty Sable.

"Anybody who knows me knows it was more of a stretch for me to do Sable in some ways than it will be for me to do Kate," Beacham said.

"I'm a little girl guide: 'Good, better, best, never let it rest, till the good is better and the better, best.'"

Beacham's "Sister Kate" is no sappy Singing Nun, nor is she anything like the earnest, neophyte sister played by Sally Field in television days of yore. Kate is a no-nonsense house mother to a pack of often trying orphans.

Beacham said she met some activist nuns who help the homeless and she hopes to use them as role models. "I will be talking to them a lot, because they're very keen that nuns don't seem wimpy. I think they're sick and tired of singing nuns and soppy nuns. These women are dedicated to improving everybody's lives, and also to not being seen as straight and boring and tiresome. They want to help, and they want to have fun."

Beacham said she also draws from childhood experience for the characterization of tough Sister Kate, having been sent to a convent school when she was a young child in England. "My early education was my nuns," she said. "And I love them, I love the nuns that brought me up, and I was very frightened of them. And I look forward to the idea of being as frightening as Sister Mary Cyril was to me."

Beacham said her upbringing stuck with her and now forms a back story for Sister Kate, including deviations such as posing for photographs that turned up later in Playboy magazine. "I think those nuns getting at me at 4½ was very, very important," she said. "I think I owe them a hell of a lot. ... What is it? 'Give me a child until he is 6 and I will show you the man?' I'm sure that's true. When these kids that she's looking after now grow old and get married, they would always come back to visit this crusty nun. It's much deeper in my background than is some billionaire's wife."

Actress Says John Candy 'Sexy, In A Different Way'

By Bob Thomas
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — What more could a girl want?

Not much, according to actress Amy Madigan. "Two of the sexiest guys in the business. ... I get to kiss Kevin, I get to kiss John. I mean, yeah!"

Madigan was describing her two recent co-stars, Kevin Costner and John Candy. John Candy? Sexy?

"Seriously, John is every bit as sexy as Kevin," the actress insists. "It's just a little different waistline."

Madigan appeared as Costner's loyal and understanding wife in the year's surprise hit, "Field of Dreams." Now she is playing Candy's loyal and understanding girlfriend in "Uncle Buck." But she argues that the roles are not as stereotyped as they might sound.

"The character of Annie (in 'Field of Dreams') is definitely 'the wife,'" she said. "Sometimes 'the wife' in films is not a character who is fleshed out. Even in the book, 'Shoeless Joe,' Annie was much more of someone who was just in the background."

"Phil Robinson, who wrote the script and also directed it, really expanded her and made her a full-blown character. Then I got to kind of fill in the cracks. ..."

"In fact, if Annie didn't like what was going on and wasn't supportive of her husband, he probably wouldn't have done what he did (plowing up a cornfield for a baseball diamond) nor gone on his journeys. I look at them as partners in this fantasy escapade."

"Uncle Buck" is something else. She plays Chance Kobolowski, operator of a tire repair store — "being from the city of Chicago, I know these kinds of neighborhoods." "John and I are lovers," she related. "I'm kind of disgruntled with him. He's a great guy but he doesn't have a job. He likes to go to the track and just hang out. I don't want to change him, but I want him to get a little more responsible. It's definitely a comedy, and we have a lot of goofy stuff to do. But we also have some serious things. So it's a nice mixture."

"Uncle Buck" is the latest film from the prolific John Hughes. He wrote, directed and co-produced with Tom Jacobson. Like most of Hughes films, it was shot in his native land of Chicago.

Madigan expressed her admiration of Hughes: "He was a real architect and innovator in taking young people into films — really giving them intelligence, a sense of humor, a sexuality, using music in a very, very inventive way."

"I think he began making a transition in 'Planes, Trains and Automobiles' and 'She's Having a Baby' and also with 'Uncle Buck.' He still has the kid in him, but he's moving in a different way with adults now."

"Uncle Buck" could start a whole new comedy cycle for the protean actress. Her first big impression on the screen was in Walter Hill's "Streets of Fire."

"I had a blast," she recalled. "I played a mercenary soldier who had a tough mouth and a tough body and a tough gun. It was originally written for a guy. After I did that film, I got offered all the parts of girls with guns."

She managed to break that type-casting with "Twice in a Lifetime," which brought her an Academy nomination as the angry daughter of Gene Hackman. Then she was sought for dramatic roles such as "Places in the Heart" with Sally Field and "Alamo" with her husband, Ed Harris.

After graduating from Marquette University with a major in philosophy, Madigan moved into the rock world, playing keyboard, piano and organ, and singing with a group called Jelly. She tired of music after seven years of traveling and studied drama with Lee Strasberg.

Of the Oscar nomination she commented: "I'm not jaded to (getting a nomination). It was really an exciting and wonderful thing. As far as changing my life as Amy Madigan or giving me better jobs, it didn't do that. I think other actors have been honest and said that, too."

"Maybe more people in the business were aware of what I did in a film. But as elated as you are, it also keeps you humble. It's not something you get year after year. So it balances out."

Surgeons Hope To Give Children With Down's Syndrome Normal Look

By Yvette H. Blackman
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHAPPAQUA, N.Y. — Whenever Christopher Marten posed for a picture, his parents would say, "Close your mouth. Stick your tongue in."

For Christopher, Down's syndrome made that a struggle.

The genetic disorder meant saliva would trickle from his mouth, his teeth were unevenly spaced, and a large, protruding tongue threatened to dislodge his front teeth. A dentist and orthodontist suggested Tad and Karen Marten allow corrective plastic surgery to reduce the size of his tongue.

While plastic surgeons admit they can't cure Down's syndrome, they say a procedure known as craniofacial reconstruction may increase their patients' self-esteem by giving them more "normal" facial features.

"We are trying to simply change those characteristics that make the children look like they have Down," said Dr. Kenneth Salyer of Dallas. But he urges parents not to expect a change in their child's intelligence.

Therein lies a controversy. Some doctors and parents believe that when surgery is done on Down individuals for mainly cosmetic reasons, society will expect too much from mentally retarded children made to look "normal."

Most plastic surgeons who treat Down children believe improving their appearances lessens prejudice toward the one in 800 people born with it. They also say it helps raise society's low expectations of Down children and helps ease them into the social and educational mainstream.

Such surgery for Down children began in the mid-1970s in Europe. "So we're really just beginning to see studies about the effect. Not only the functional improvement for the children, but, more importantly, their psychological and intellectual capabilities when they're older," said plastic surgeon Michael Stalneckner at Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center in New York City.

The National Down Syndrome Congress doesn't advocate the surgery "but does encourage thoughtful investigation to find the most appropriate team to assist you in the investigation," said Diane Crutcher, executive director.

"That team would ideally include not only the plastic surgeon ... but also a psychologist and speech therapist."

Certain characteristics make Down children easily recognizable. Their intellectual abilities are stunted. They develop slanted eyes, flattened nose bridges, protruding tongues, small, sometimes rotated ears disproportionately low on their heads, generally chubby appearances and short, broad fingers.

As recently as the 1970s, they were institutionalized by doctors who felt nothing could be done and parents who couldn't cope with the idea of a less-than-perfect child. But the '80s have brought research showing early intervention helps Down children thrive outside institutions.

Down's hasn't kept Christopher, 20, from being a boy scout, swimmer, bowler, drummer, church acolyte and usher or member of the Chappaqua Drama Group and Volunteer Fire Department. He has also collected a Special Olympics Athlete of the Year award and holds a part-time job at a fast-food restaurant.

Christopher enjoys the lifestyle of most any normal young man, though he can't read or realize when he doesn't have enough money for something.

"We've always encouraged him to do what's possible," says Tad. "He is very self-confident and has a good self-image. He thinks he's hot stuff."

Christopher's surgery was done in September 1984 at New York University Medical Center, one of the leading centers for craniofacial reconstruction, by Dr. Joseph McCarthy, a prominent plastic surgeon.

"We had no guarantees of the outcome but we knew that the tongue would be so swollen, it would be difficult for him to eat," Karen says, adding that Christopher was drinking milkshakes by the time he returned home.

A 1986 Israeli study found that reducing the size of the tongue improved speech, made eating easier and eliminated drooling, said Stalneckner, adding he believes that many parents seek to eliminate traits others find troubling.

In Christopher's case, however, it was "strictly to save his teeth," Karen says. There's "no dramatic change" in his speech, but people who have known him say they understand him better on the telephone.

Salyer, head of the International Craniofacial Institute in Dallas, was created more than three dozen children and says there is no evidence supporting parents' belief they can understand their children better after the surgery.

"It depends on what was done and how your particular child heals," says a guidebook for parents published by The Foundation for Craniofacial Deformities.

Only a relatively small percentage of Down individuals make acceptable candidates for the surgery, said Dr. Garry Brody, associate clinical professor of surgery at the University of Southern California.

"It should only be performed on children whose social interaction can be improved by the procedures," he noted in the Israeli study, "Rehabilitation of the Face in Patients with Down's Syndrome."

"Some Down's children have a relatively high IQ and function relatively well in society," he said. "These children are truly handicapped by the stigma of their appearance and do benefit from the surgery."

The cost can vary depending on where the surgery is done and the doctor doing it. There is debate over whether parents should bear the cost or health insurers, who now make the decision on a case-by-case basis.

"If we're doing it to correct a functional defect, then it should be covered; if it's for strictly cosmetic reasons ... it may not be covered," said attorney Austin Rinella, of the New York Insurance Department.

"If we start paying claims that are purely elective, not medically necessary, premiums will skyrocket," said Rinella. Elective surgery "will adversely affect everybody in the insurance pool."

Frances Cooke MacGregor, an anthropologist and authority on the psychological effects of deformity, believes even if there are few functional improvements to be gained, the other benefits are plentiful.

"They become more socially acceptable and if they have siblings, the siblings feel better too." Siblings "don't feel that this is rubbing off on them. They don't feel maybe ashamed or afraid or guilty or unhappy."

The best time to have the surgery done, Stalneckner said, is about age 5 when "children are just becoming aware of their differences in appearance."

Tad and Karen Marten's son, Christopher, had surgery in 1984 to reduce size of his tongue

Six Indicted In Chicago Medicaid Fraud Schemes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — Two men who posed as physicians may have treated as many as 45,000 patients before authorities indicted them along with four others in Medicaid fraud schemes.

Two doctors, two pharmacists and two other men who posed as physicians were involved in defrauding the state of more than $500,000, Attorney General Neil F. Hartigan said Sunday.

Four clinics and pharmacies in Chicago, Chicago Heights, Robbins and Midlothian were also implicated in the schemes.

The six men were indicted on felony charges of vendor fraud and theft by deception.

Two of the men also were charged with practicing medicine without a license. Oscar Hosenilla, 48, and Babu Rao Surapaneni, 47, performed examinations, prescribed medications and ordered lab tests and X-rays at health care clinics, Hartigan said.

Surapaneni practiced at two clinics in south suburban Robbins and Midlothian from January 1986 to December 1988 with Dr. Chowdary Adusumilli, 50, who also was indicted. They are charged with billing the state for more than $40,000 in fraudulent claims, Hartigan said.

Hosenilla worked for Dr. Henry Pimental, 52, at the Reymar Clinic and Englewood Clinical Laboratory in Chicago from July 1985 to April 1988. The clinic was contracted through the Chicago Health Maintenance Organization to provide care to HMO members. The two are charged with billing the state for more than $150,000 in false claims.

The indictments were returned by a Cook County grand jury late Friday, Hartigan's office said. "These defendants have not only put people's lives in danger, but robbed the state of vital funds to provide health services to people who are most needy," Hartigan said.

George Smith, head of the state's Medicaid Fraud Division, said the phony doctors treated an average of 30 patients a day over a two- and three-year period. He knew of no reported injuries or malpractice as a result of the fraudulent care.

"I consider this scandalous," Hartigan said. "People who sign up rely on (the HMO's) good faith to provide quality medical service." He said his office was investigating Chicago HMO to determine whether criminal negligence was involved and whether HMO officials should have known a phony doctor was practicing in a clinic sanctioned by them.

If found guilty, the defendants would have to return the money they billed the state, and could be sentenced to 14 years in prison and be fined $10,000 for each offense.

In another case, Dr. Nathan Potkin, 74, the pharmacist for the Rivera Nursing Home in suburban Chicago Heights, billed the state for high-priced medications which were never ordered by the patients' physicians and never given to patients, Hartigan said, adding that Potkin's fraudulent claims amounted to more than $250,000.

In addition, pharmacist Larry White, 54, submitted fraudulent vouchers for more than $61,000 for drugs that were never prescribed at the Lat Pharmacy in Chicago, the attorney general said.

Attempts Sunday night to reach those named in the indictments were unsuccessful. Messages left with answering services for Potkin and Pimental were not immediately returned.

Paz Zamora Sworn In As New Bolivian President

By Peter McFarren
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LA PAZ, BOLIVIA — A new generation of political leaders took over in Bolivia Sunday with Jaime Paz Zamora installed as president, even though he came in third in general elections in May.

President Victor Paz Estenssoro, 82, turned over the government to his nephew at a ceremony in Congress.

Paz Zamora, 50, was elected Saturday by Congress after he formed an alliance Wednesday with former military dictator Hugo Banzer Suarez.

None of the candidates received a majority of the vote in the May 7 election and under the constitution the Congress then elects the president from the top three vote getters.

Luis Ossio Sanjines, leader of the Christian Democratic Party and a Banzer ally, is the new vice president. He and Paz Zamora will serve four-year terms.

In his inaugural address, Paz Zamora said the pact with Banzer, his former adversary, "signals that new winds are blowing in Bolivia."

He said his government will maintain a free market economy with an emphasis on developing the agricultural sector and small and medium-sized industries. His administration also will continue the economic stabilization program by maintaining a floating exchange rate, pegging prices to supply and demand and attracting foreign investments, the president said.

Attending the inauguration were the presidents of Argentina, Brazil, Panama, Paraguay, Peru and Uruguay. Representing the United States were Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos and Prescott Bush, President Bush's brother.

Paz Zamora heads the Movement of the Revolutionary Left. His alliance with Banzer, leader of the conservative Nationalist Democratic Action Party, surprised many Bolivians and caused a brief run on banks last week.

Paz Estenssoro's Nationalist Revolutionary Movement has been the most influential political force in the last 40 years and he has served four times as president.

Paz Estenssoro told the new administration, "We are turning over the government with a healthy economy and in much better shape than it was four years ago."

When Paz Estenssoro took office in 1985 he fired 23,000 government-employed miners and imposed a ten-fold increase in the price of gasoline and a wage freeze. The measures lowered inflation from 24,000 percent in 1985 to a predicted 6 percent for 1989.

Paz Zamora is expected to bring into the government a new wave of political and economic leaders, including many educated in the United States and Europe.

In May's presidential election, Paz Zamora won 19 percent of the vote, Banzer 23 percent and Gonzalo Sanchez de Lozada of the Nationalist Revolutionary Movement 24 percent.

Banzer, a former army general, came to power following a coup in 1971. In 1974 Paz Zamora was accused of plotting to overthrow the government and was jailed for six months. Banzer stepped down in 1978 and became active in the democratic process.

Paz Zamora's Cabinet was sworn in Sunday night with nine members from his party and nine from Banzer's political organization.

Carlos Iturralde, a wealthy mining executive and ambassador to Washington during Banzer's rule, was named foreign minister. He said one of his top priorities will be to "wage a frontal battle against the cocaine trade."

Paz Zamora was a vice presidential candidate in the 1980 elections after his party formed a coalition with the Communist Party and the Leftist Revolutionary Nationalist Movement under the leadership of Hernan Siles Zuazo.

The coalition won a majority, but a military coup blocked Siles Zuazo and Paz Zamora from taking office. In 1982, the military stepped down.

Siles Zuazo and Paz Zamora resigned in 1985, a year before their term expired, because of social unrest and political pressure.

Sunday's inauguration marked the first time in 25 years that a government has completed its term and turned over power to a democratically elected administration.

Oaxaca Elections Suspended As Party Supporters Clash

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MEXICO CITY — Violence and allegations of voting irregularities marked the elections for a new state legislature and 570 mayors in the southern state of Oaxaca.

Clashes in six towns Sunday between opposition party supporters and members of the governing Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, injured at least 25 people and prompted officials to suspend the voting.

In Juchitan, a leftist stronghold on the Pacific coast, several parties filed a petition to annul the elections because of massive irregularities.

The president of the PRI-dominated state election commission acknowledged a few "little incidents" in the poor and rural southern state noted for the intensity of its political passions. But the official described the incidents as minor.

Polls were to open statewide at 8 a.m. but opened as late as midday in some areas, Notimex said. The results will not be released for a week.

Authorities in the capital said the voting was suspended because of irregularities and violent clashes in the towns of Huatulco, Puerto Escondido, Ocotlan, Suychilquitongo, Tamazulapan and Comitancillo. At least 25 people were reportedly injured.

Early returns indicated a low turnout among Oaxaca's 1.4 million registered voters.

Spokesmen for four opposition parties said the election-day problems made a mockery of Gov. Heladio Ramirez Lopez's promise of greater democracy.

The Oaxaca elections came just a month after state and local elections in Baja California and Michoacan that were seen as a test of the democratic promises of Mexico's new president, Carlos Salinas de Gortari.

The PRI accepted defeat in Baja California, which on Nov. 1 will become the first state in the governing party's 60-year history with an opposition governor.

The Michoacan elections, where the PRI says it won a majority of the legislative seats, are still clouded by allegations of fraud. Radio stations statewide simultaneously broadcast a statement Saturday calling for respect for the vote and reciting a string of allegations of fraud favoring the PRI.

In Oaxaca, opposition parties on Sunday reported incidents ranging from missing or altered voter registration lists to outright theft or burning of ballot boxes. They said the PRI had removed their supporters from voter registration lists or refused to let them vote.

The PRI ran candidates in all 570 municipalities. One small leftist party ran candidates in 71 of the towns; the largest leftist party, the Democratic Revolutionary Party, in 68, and three other opposition parties in even fewer towns.

The PRI issued a statement late Sunday saying the voting took place in "absolute social tranquility" except for a few isolated incidents when people without credentials tried to vote.

The government news agency Notimex said a member of the PRI in Juchitan took the electoral documents home instead of setting up a polling place. He finally agreed to set up a poll next to his front door after arguing with leftist representatives, Notimex said.

Culture Minister Said Out In China

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HONG KONG — Chinese Culture Minister Wang Meng, a popular novelist who advocated increased artistic freedom, has been removed as Communist Party head in his ministry, said a report appearing today.

The report by the Hong Kong China News Service did not explain the move, but loss of the party position would indicate that Wang may be dismissed soon as minister. The Culture Ministry in Beijing said today it could not comment immediately on the report.

There has been speculation that Wang has been in political trouble since the crackdown on dissent began.

He did not appear with other ministers to extend greetings to martial law troops after they shot their way into Beijing June 3-4 to put down pro-democracy demonstrations, and he has not been seen in public since.

Wang, 54, was hospitalized in early June and did not attend the Chinese Communist Party Central Committee meeting later that month in which moderate party head Zhao Ziyang was stripped of his post, the news agency said.

The minister was convalescing in the eastern province of Shandong, it added.

Wang, who has described himself as a "bridge" between writers and the party, has urged more freedom for artistic criticism and has said the government should gradually loosen direct controls over cultural activities.

His appointment as culture minister three years ago was praised as a sign of more liberal policies toward Chinese artists and writers.

Wang was persecuted in the 1950s for "rightist" writings and barred from publishing for two decades, during which he did hard labor in internal exile in far northwestern Xinjiang province. He was rehabilitated in 1979.

The news agency said the Culture Ministry's new party head was poet He Jingzhi, a deputy head of the party Propaganda Department. It said Wang's removal was announced by Vice Minister Gao Zhanxiang.

The Hong Kong China News Service is based in the British colony and covers events in China.

Essays Solicited

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — Under such titles as "Blood Was Shed Here" and "Young Woman, I Grieve For You," Beijing residents have been submitting pro-government accounts of the city's recent turmoil to an essay contest.

In "Blood Was Shed Here," Xu Dingjiang wrote that he watched soldiers "with tears in their hearts and guns in their hands" restrain themselves from firing on a crowd that torched their vehicles.

Niu Hui wrote about a neighbor who reported that soldiers turned Tiananmen Square, the center of seven weeks of pro-democracy protests, into a crematorium for protesters they killed.

"I think after she saw the television video and understood the true situation, she was very embarrassed," Niu wrote.

Niu, Xu and the other entrants, whose works began appearing in the tabloid Beijing Evening News last week, are competing for undisclosed prizes to be given in November.

Eight other papers or television stations are helping sponsor the contest.

The only requirements are that the stories "touch the soul" and be true.

What is true about the tumultuous events that led to the June 3-4 military crackdown remains a matter of controversy.

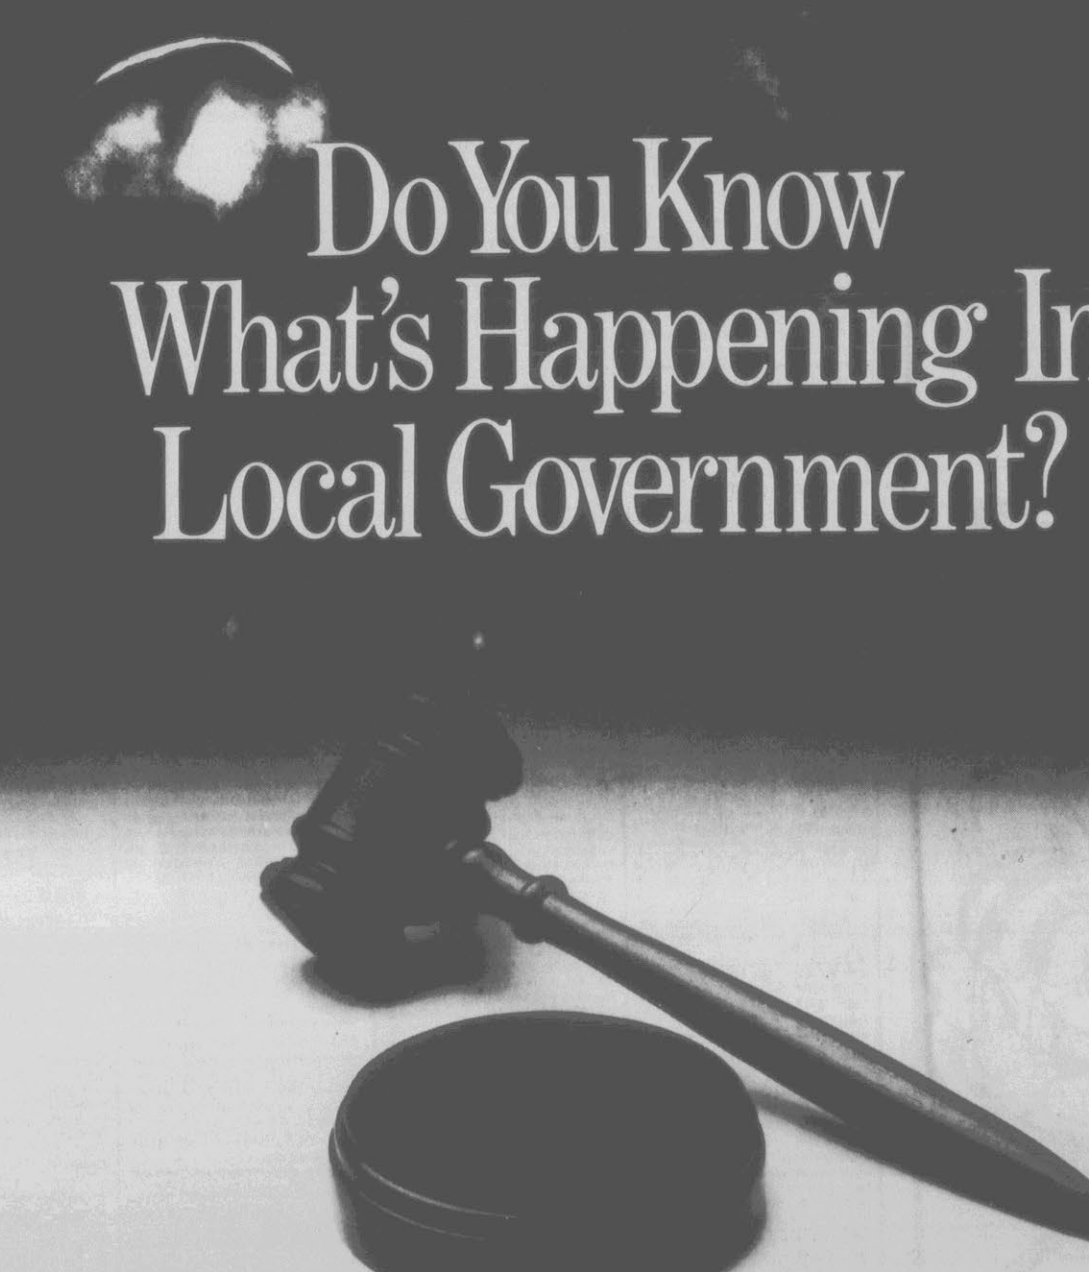

All entries published so far stick closely to the official version, which says soldiers acted with restraint and that only about 300 people died, including dozens of soldiers.

Western observers, including hundreds of journalists, said the army fired wildly at crowds and buildings and that the death toll may have been in the thousands.

The contest reflects the voracious appetite of the official media for commentaries, letters and essays on what it calls the "quelling of the counterrevolutionary rebellion."

The media, apparently convinced that previous crackdowns on dissent and liberal thought ended too quickly, are hanging on this time despite a notable slackening of public interest.

Many Beijing residents said they watched the first television documentary on the protests several weeks ago, a four-part series. But three more documentaries have been aired since, the latest Sunday night, and many people chose not to watch them.
