PTL's Dortch Pleads Guilty

He May Testify Against Bakker

By Paul Nowell
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — Former PTL top aide Richard Dortch pleaded guilty as part of a plea arrangement that could force him to testify against ministry founder Jim Bakker later this month.

Dortch pleaded guilty Tuesday to mail fraud, wire fraud and conspiracy in the federal investigation of the television ministry. He agreed to testify against Bakker in his fraud and conspiracy trial.

"Richard Dortch will become the key witness against Jim Bakker," said Washington lawyer Ben Cotten, who represents convicted former PTL aides David and James Taggart.

Cotten called Dortch's plea agreement "catastrophic" for Bakker. "Having pleaded to conspiracy — with Jim Bakker being the alleged co-conspirator — it will be very difficult for Bakker to convince the jury that at least on the charge of conspiracy he's innocent."

Meanwhile, U.S. District Judge Robert Potter ruled Tuesday that he would not delay Bakker's trial, turning down complaints from defense attorneys about pretrial publicity.

"Whether this case is tried in Charlotte, North Carolina, or Ottumwa, Iowa, two years from now, there is going to be pretrial publicity. It is one of the prices that we all must pay for a free press," Potter said.

Bakker's trial is scheduled to begin Aug. 28.

George T. Davis, Bakker's attorney, said he was not surprised by Dortch's plea agreement and said Dortch's testimony has "got to have some effect."

"These kind of deals are somewhat suspect from the very nature of the animal because it is not uncommon for people to sell their souls if necessary to save their bodies," Davis said.

Dortch, former executive vice president of PTL, pleaded guilty to one count of mail fraud, one of wire fraud by telephone, one of wire fraud by television and one of conspiracy, according to one of his attorneys, Mark Calloway.

"Beyond that, we have no comment," Calloway said.

A plea agreement calls for Dortch to cooperate with the U.S. Attorney's office and the Department of Justice, in "whatever form" requested by those offices, including "sworn testimony in court and documentary materials."

Under the plea agreement, Dortch could face a maximum sentence of

Iran Asks Hezbollah Not To Deal

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Iran this week asked the Hezbollah terrorists holding American hostages in Lebanon to suspend negotiations on their release, saying that such a gesture now would be interpreted as justifying Israel's recent kidnapping of a Lebanese Shiite cleric, according to U.S. intelligence sources.

The sources cautioned that the information, while authoritative, has not yet been analyzed fully to determine its implications. One of the sources noted that Iran did not press for an outright rejection of such talks. He said that the preliminary interpretation of U.S. analysts is that Iran appears to be willing at some later date to sanction, or perhaps take part in, discussions to free the hostages.

Iran's message to the Hezbollah, an umbrella Shiite organization believed to hold some of the eight Americans in captivity in Lebanon, came after an offer Sunday by a group holding Joseph Cicippio to free Cicippio if Israel released the cleric, Sheik Abdul Karim Obeid, along with 450 Arab prisoners. Israel has said it would negotiate only if the package includes two of its infantrymen and an airman held captive in Lebanon.

It could not be learned what Hezbollah's response was. Algeria, which has good ties with both Iran and Hezbollah, has volunteered to negotiate the release of hostages. The United States has asked Syria, which has influence over some of the Hezbollah factions, for its assistance, and through intermediaries also has requested Iran to exercise its influence over Hezbollah. Japan, which has extensive commercial trade with Iran, also has volunteered to seek help from Iran.

Iran's request to the Hezbollah came from the foreign office through the Iranian embassy in Damascus, the sources said. The foreign office is believed to be controlled by Iran's president, Hashemi Rafsanjani.

A State Department official said Monday that Rafsanjani's declaration last week that solutions exist to the hostage crisis evoked considerable public resentment among the more hard-line Iranian officials. "It is a reasonable conclusion that the more Rafsanjani moderates his image and his politics, the harder it is for him to influence the hostage-holders," the official said. "They have no interest in becoming social democrats."

He said that Rafsanjani, who is trying to consolidate power, may feel compelled to back away from the moment from last week's offer to seek solutions. This would dampen

Mrs. Higgins Urges Bush To Save The Living

By James Rowley
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The wife of Marine Lt. Col. William R. Higgins said it was virtually certain that her husband was dead, and she offered her support to President Bush as he "tries to save the living and end the suffering."

Robin Higgins, a Marine Corps major, told reporters that the time had come to tell her husband "we love him and miss him."

"Rich went to Lebanon in the service of the United Nations because he believed he could be useful, that he could help, that he was needed," Mrs. Higgins said.

"He wrote in his high school yearbook that his goal was always to make my family proud of me," Mrs. Higgins said. "He succeeded."

Mrs. Higgins read her statement in the Pentagon briefing room a day after the FBI said it concluded "within a reasonable degree of medical certainty" that the person depicted in a videotape hanging from a makeshift gallows was Higgins.

The FBI had offered no information about the time or cause of death.

Mrs. Higgins, her hands shaking slightly as she read from her prepared text, said the Marine commandant, Gen. Alfred Gray, informed her personally of the "vir-

GUC Gives Design Work Go-Ahead

By Stuart Savage
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Greenville Utilities Commission board has given approval for design work to start a project that could provide sewer service to D.H. Conley High School and other developments in an area south of Greenville.

Malcolm Green, GUC's general manager, told the board Tuesday night that the possibility of receiving up to 55 percent of the cost of the $1.1 million project from a state grant exists. But, he said, in order to be eligible for any grant money, GUC must update its 201 Facilities Plan and present cost justification for extending the sewer to the high school on SR 1711.

Green said the 201 update would cost from $10,000 to $15,000, with completion of the facilities plan amendment, design, funding and construction taking anywhere from eight months to a year.

Green told the board that the Conley school septic system is in need of extensive repairs and the county school system might share in the cost of extending sewer service to the site.

The proposed sewer extension project, Green said, would also serve Wintergreen Elementary School on SR 1725, which has also experienced problems with its sewage disposal system.

Pat Birney, an associate of Scott Consulting Group, reviewed a natural gas opportunity survey and system expansion plan the firm recently completed for GUC.

Birney told the board that "the key to success" for the gas department is "marketing and gas supply ... having as many customers as possible and buying natural gas as cheap as possible."

Suggesting that the commission "develop a promotional campaign to stimulate the residential market" for natural gas, Birney said the report also recommends that GUC's gas service area be extended and the number of customers on the existing system be increased.

The consultant also suggested that consideration be given to extending natural gas service to Winterville area residents and said efforts should be made to secure natural gas pipeline service from Transco or some other vendor.

Greenville Utilities now purchases natural gas at wholesale from North Carolina Natural Gas.

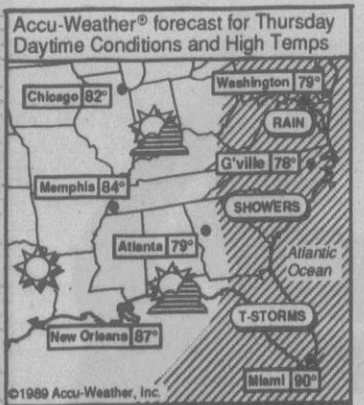

Birney said GUC would be in a better position if competition existed among natural gas suppliers.

Jim Anderson, director of GUC's gas department, told board members that when GUC purchases gas on the spot market, it costs 42 cents per 1,000 cubic feet to have it delivered to Charlotte by Transco. But he said the cost to have it transported from Charlotte to Greenville through NCNG's pipeline is $1.41 per 1,000 cubic feet because of NCNG's pricing structure.

In other business Tuesday, the board awarded a contract to Foremost Pipeline Construction Inc. of Lexington, S.C., for $279,862 to extend natural gas service to the Brook Valley, Camelot and Cherry Oaks areas and approved the purchase of a four-wheel drive plowing-trenching machine with backhoe from Ditch Witch of North Carolina for $46,130.

Other contracts approved included purchasing: 1,400 wooden distribution poles from Koopers Co. for $141,333; 25,000 feet of cable from Rigby Electric Supply Co. for $45,975; 25 distribution transformers from National Transformer Sales for $31,125; and two padmount transformers from Rigby Electric Supply for $54,300.

Opening Day Prices Above Those In 1988

By Stuart Savage
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Opening sales Tuesday on the Greenville Tobacco Market averaged about 17 cents a pound more than opening day figures a year ago, according to Kenneth Allen, the market's sales supervisor.

Allen said 825,614 pounds of tobacco were sold in Greenville on Tuesday for $1,292,525, an average of $156.55 a hundred pounds.

Opening day sales in 1988 averaged about $1.39 a pound in Greenville, Allen said.

The Market News Service said preliminary figures from the 10 Eastern Belt markets that opened Tuesday show that 6.82 million pounds of tobacco were sold for $41.01 million, an average of $161.43 per hundredweight, which put the belt average at $18.93 per hundred pounds higher than the 1988 opening.

Last week Allen predicted that Greenville's opening day average would be about $1.45 a pound. But as

More Fish, Crabs Dying Along Pamlico And Neuse

By J. Ward Best
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

WASHINGTON, N.C. — Fish and crabs along the Pamlico and Neuse rivers are again making their ritual "walks" up on the shores to escape suffocation in their natural environment.

The N.C. Division of Marine Fisheries and the Pamlico Environmental Response Team began receiving calls Friday about dead and dying fish in the rivers, some intentionally stranding themselves on the banks, a DMF official said.

Jess Hawkins, Marine Fisheries district manager in Washington, said the Division of Environmental Management responded to the first call and reported several hundred dead spot along the Neuse. Calls continued through the weekend and early part of this week, he said.

Hawkins said the majority of the fish had apparently died from low oxygen conditions in the water, a condition known as "dead water." When low oxygenated water from the bottom of rivers and creeks rises, fish try to escape in any direction, the spokesman said.

Locals call the fishes' escape a "flounder walk," because flounder and other fish will crawl out of the water in an effort to find air to breathe.

Tuesday, response teams from PERT, Marine Fisheries and DEM responded to calls along the Pamlico River as far north as Washington.

Investigation of a reported fish kill Monday along the Neuse between Minnesota Beach and Dolphin Creek turned up "hundreds to thousands" of fish and crabs, Hawkins said. The dead fish included eel, striped mullet, shad, perch, spot, croaker, menhaden and flounder.

Hawkins said tests of the water in the area revealed an extreme-

Tuesday Thefts

Investigators said eight thefts, including $500 worth of items from Tom Togs at 1900 Dickinson Ave., were reported to Greenville police on Tuesday.

Officer F.G. Pruitt said $500 worth of clothing was taken from the Dickinson Avenue business in a break-in reported at 2:05 a.m.

Officer J.G. Bridges said $2 in change and a radio were taken from the City Ice and Coal Co. at 506 Albemarle Ave. in a break-in reported at 6:56 a.m., while several items were taken from an apartment at 1012 Willow St. in an incident reported at 10:49 a.m.

Officer C.A. Curtis said a personalized West Virginia license plate, "YETIE," was taken from a car parked at Azalea Gardens Trailer Park in an incident reported at 7:59 a.m., while Officer Alexander Batts said $3 in change was taken from the city pool on Myrtle Avenue in a break-in reported at 8:40 a.m.

Officer L.T. Gray said a lawn mower was taken from 403 Millbrook St. in an incident reported at 10:51 a.m., while Officer A.G. Lloyd said a pair of tennis shoes was taken from 1012A W. 14th St. in a break-in reported at 4:43 p.m.

According to Officer E.L. Butts, a bicycle was taken from Bailey's Convenient Mart on Watauga Avenue in an incident reported at 8:25 p.m.

Man Turns Himself In

The Pitt County Sheriff's Department's search for Danny Charles Radford, 38, who walked out of court on Monday while waiting for his first appearance with the judge, ended Tuesday morning when he turned himself in.

Radford had been arrested on Sunday for felonious larceny, carrying a concealed weapon, possession of a firearm by a felon, ignoring a police car's flashing lights and driving while intoxicated.

While Radford was waiting to go to trial, Radford got up and walked out of the courtroom, according to Pitt Deputy Ammie Eason.

Since this would have been his first appearance in front of the judge, bail and bond had not yet been set, Eason said.

Meeting Planned

The Women's Aglow Fellowship will hold its monthly meeting Saturday in the Evangelistic Tabernacle, 264 West Bypass.

Breakfast will be served at 8:45 a.m. and the meeting will begin at 9:30 a.m. Mary Herring of Raleigh will be the guest speaker. A nursery will be available. Contact one of the following by Thursday for reservations: Laura Miles at 752-7310, Chris Wheeler at 756-5634 or Gwen Duncan at 758-6044.

Committee Meeting

The Comprehensive Plan Committee will meet today at 5:30 p.m. in the conference room of City Hall.

Scheduled to be discussed are goals and objectives of the plan, a timetable for the plan's completion, operating principles, a public participation program and the Focus 2007 project.

Recruiting Office

The U.S. Marine Corps recruiting office in Greenville has recently reopened at 115 Red Banks Road, Suite A, with Sgt. Tim Gulleddge as recruiter.

A native of High Point, Gulleddge now lives in Greenville with his family.

Office hours are from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Saturday.

Meeting Canceled

The Pitt County Sediment and Erosion Control Commission will not meet in August.

County Engineer Phil Dickerson, the county's erosion control officer, said the sediment and erosion control board will not meet because no plans have been received for review.

Three Arrested

Greenville police arrested three Farmville men Monday on charges stemming from the theft of a car from Oaktree Acura on Memorial Drive.

Officer B.W. Lewis said Chris Jones, 16 and Billy Ramon Dixon, 17, both of Farmville, were charged with larceny in connection with the theft that was reported on Monday.

Lewis said a third man, Alonza Willoughby, 18, of Farmville, was charged with possession of stolen property in connection with the case.

Saturday Workshop

A Back to School Extravaganza Workshop for students in kindergarten through the 12th grade and their parents will be held Saturday from 10 a.m. to 2:35 p.m. at Mount Calvary Free Will Baptist Church.

The workshop, sponsored by the Mount Calvary FWB Church Education Committee, is designed to reinforce the necessity of an education in today's society. Greenville Mayor Ed Carter is the scheduled keynote speaker.

Registration will begin in the church at 9:15 a.m. on Saturday. A free lunch will be served.

Intersection Is Ready

Work on a new intersection near Bells Fork on N.C. 43 South is nearly finished, with traffic control lights now operational, according to Rick Shirley, division engineer with the N.C. Department of Transportation. The new road will be designated 1725 and connects with the present 1725, turning to the left from the N.C. 43 southbound lane. The short corridor behind Harris' Supermarket that connects 1725 and 1729 will be numbered later, Shirley said, while the existing road running behind Cherry Oaks and ending at Bells Fork has been renumbered 1729. He said the stoplight at the Skats intersection (new 1729) will eventually be removed, but is now flashing.

Weather Radar Helps GUC Cut Charges

By Stuart Savage
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Greenville Utilities Commission's weather radar helped save $166,473 in wholesale power charges in July, according to Roger Jones, director of GUC's electric systems.

Jones, in a report to the GUC board Tuesday, said the savings resulted because the utility's load management program was in full operation on July 12 at the time of Carolina Power & Light Company's system peak.

But Jones said the load management program was in full operation because of GUC's weather radar.

"The development of significant shower activity along the North Carolina-Virginia border began to be observed on the weather radar system. By 1:42 p.m. (on July 12) the intensity of the activity was so severe as to be perceived as possibly having the potential of causing CP&L to peak earlier than anticipated," Jones said. The decision was made to begin full load management operations immediately, rather than wait until the normal peak period beginning at 3 p.m.

Praising the weather information system, Jones said, "This operation, combined with savings credited to the radar system for last June and July (1988) has enabled the commission to avoid an estimated $272,000 in wholesale power costs ... operations that have resulted in an 18-fold payback on our investment (in the weather radar system) in less than two years."

Since January 1985 the load management program has saved more than $7.72 million in wholesale power costs, according to Jones. Radio controlled Beat the Peak switches on water heaters and air conditioning units — which allow GUC to cycle the units off and on to reduce the demand for electricity — accounted for $76,893 in savings in July, while voltage adjustments saved an additional $82,085. The operation of generators at GUC's water treatment plant saved an additional $4,851 for the month, Jones said.

At the end of July, there were 18,841 Beat the Peak switches in service in GUC's service area, including 9,200 on water heaters, $8,963 on central air conditioning units and $678 on heat pump auxiliary heat strips.

In a related matter Tuesday, the GUC board adopted changes to the electric utility regulations which will give customers participating in the heat pump heat strip program a credit of $10 per month on their January, February and March electric bills.

The regulations already gave customers $5 a month credit on July, August, September and October bills for switch control of air conditioning units and another $5 a month credit for the same months for switches on water heaters.

Under the regulations, if a customer participated in all Beat the Peak programs, he could receive up to $70 a year credit on electric bills.

City Hosting Electricities Meeting

By Kevin Boughal
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Greenville-Pitt County Convention and Visitors Bureau estimates that 450 people from 66 electrical municipalities will attend the annual meeting of Electricities of North Carolina Inc. to be held in Greenville this weekend.

"We are delighted that Greenville was chosen as the site for the Electricities 1989 annual meeting," said Al Nichols, executive director of the local Convention and Visitors Bureau.

"Local members of Electricities at Greenville Utilities Commission lobbied hard for Greenville as their annual meeting site and brought the meeting home. We really appreciate their dedicated effort."

The annual meeting will begin at 8:45 a.m. on Friday and will open with remarks from Bert Huffman, president of Electricities, and Ed Carter, the mayor of Greenville. Chancellor Richard Eakin of East Carolina University will introduce the keynote speaker, Kelly King of Branch Banking and Trust in Wilson, who will discuss the economic outlook for North Carolina and offer projections.

Other speakers will include Charles Matthews, mayor of Benson; Stuart Savage, senior reporter at The Daily Reflector; Chris McDaniel, news director of WITN-TV 7; Roy Hardee, news director of WNCT-TV 9, and Bill Knowles, station manager and news director of WCTI-TV 12.

While in Greenville, the spouses and children of the members of Electricities will tour various places of interest in Greenville, including the downtown area, East Carolina University, the Village of Yesteryear, The Plaza mall and Arlington Village, among others.

Members of Electricities will begin arriving on Thursday, when early registration takes place, and will stay until Sunday morning. The meeting is jointly hosted by the Hilton and Ramada Inn in Greenville.

Spending Bills Generate Controversy

By F. Alan Boyce
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Faced with a yes or no vote on more than $1.8 billion in new spending over the next two years, the House gave overwhelming approval, but several members criticized some provisions they couldn't afford to change.

The two bills, crafted by House and Senate conferees over the weekend, include a 6 percent raise and a new salary schedule for teachers, a tuition increase for state universities and a trimmed back version of the Basic Education Program. Only seven people voted against each measure. The Senate is expected to enact the bills today.

Controversy stirred over an agreement that funding for some major building projects at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, N.C. State, East Carolina and UNC-Asheville would be held in reserve. The money would be made available provided a windfall from the RJR Nabisco sale is $12 million larger than originally projected.

Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, objected, saying the universities would be hindered because the funds would not be available until 1990-91.

"It will be available in 1990 but with the stroke of a pen it could be gone," Hackney said.

Rep. Dave Diamond, D-Surry, House Appropriations chairman, said the funds are just the first installments on larger projects.

"You can't build a building until you have the money," he said. "We feel confident that money is going to be there."

Rep. Art Pope, R-Wake, questioned why the reserves — $6 million for N.C. State's engineering center, $6.5 million for a UNC school of business, $4.1 million for a UNC social work building, $6 million for an East Carolina library and $4 million for a UNC-Asheville conference center — did not include the controversial $2 million for an N.C. State basketball arena.

Diamond replied that putting that in reserve instead of funding it directly would have jeopardized fundraising efforts.

There were other complaints during the two hours of debate.

The most vehement criticism came from Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, who later was the only Democrat to vote against the main spending bill, which was approved 79-7. He blasted House conferees for failing to stick up for a provision that would have required stricter public accountability from agencies receiving state funds — a provision sparked by disputes over the Microelectronics Center of North Carolina.

Instead of requiring that all documents of agencies receiving state funds be public records, the conferees agreed to open up only financial statements given to the state auditor by agencies receiving at least $25,000 a year in state funds.

"We had an opportunity here to tell the people of North Carolina where their tax dollars were being spent," Miller said. "I'm extremely disappointed in our conferees failing to maintain the House position on what I believe is one of the most important issues to come before us this session."

Some members also questioned the removal of a $100,000-a-year AIDS education provision — something that once commanded a $6 million price tag. Rep. Ann Duncan, R-Forsyth, said the final funding was removed when lawmakers learned that $294,000 in federal funds would be available for the project.

Rep. Anne Barnes, D-Orange, said she was disappointed the conferees did not pay to raise all state workers to at least the federal poverty line on salaries.

The construction bill was approved 84-7, with Reps. Michael Decker, R-Forsyth, and Skip Stam, R-Wake, joining Arnold, Craven, Etheridge, Ms. Howard and Pope in opposition.

As usual, education dominates the new spending. The Basic Education Program, an eight-year plan to equalize educational opportunity across the state, will receive $77.4 million in the first year of the biennium and $188.7 million in the second year. That represents a reduction of 250 new positions from the original budget request.

Ground Broken For Shell Building

Officials of the South Pitt Development Corp. broke ground today on a 19,000-square-foot industrial shell building, located on a 4.3-acre tract fronting N.C. 11 between Ayden and Grifton.

The planned structure will be a pre-engineered metal building expandable to approximately 60,000 square feet. Water, sewer and electric power are already on site.

"Nearly 85 percent of companies seeking sites for expansion or relocation require an existing facility," said Elliott Dixon, president and chief executive officer of the SPDC.

The corporation was formed in 1986 to develop an industrial shell in the southern part of Pitt County.

The organization was chartered and sufficient stock was subscribed that $55,000 became available for the project. Stockholders are primarily from Ayden, Grifton and the Greenville area, but some reside outside the county, Dixon said.

John Chaffee, executive director of the Pitt County Development Commission, said that between 1986 and 1988, new and expanding industries consumed more than 500,000 square feet of manufacturing and warehouse space in Pitt County.

"We reached the point that our inventory of good available industrial buildings has been depleted," he said.

Chaffee said it is expected that the new building will sell quickly.

"Anytime we've had a quality building on the market, it's drawn a lot of activity and leased within two years," he said.

For example, Chaffee said a 30,000-square-foot metal building in Ayden was sold to Unitec Plastics within six months after Blue Bell announced the closing of the plant in January 1987.

Wilson, Kinston and Jacksonville have all sold shell buildings within the last year, he said.

Chaffee said the size and characteristics of the building are the result of a market analysis of prospect inquiries locally and statewide by the Pitt County Development Commission.

The project is a joint venture of the SPDC, C.A. Lewis Inc., property owner Levi Worthington and the Pitt County Development Commission.

C.A. Lewis Inc. has completed its purchase of the land and has secured a construction loan from Barclay's Bank, Chaffee said. The company also has an option for additional land should a client require more acreage.

Charlotte Mother 'Not A Monster' Says Social Worker

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — The mother who has been charged with neglecting her three children is not a monster, said a family worker who befriended the woman a year ago.

When Charlotte police went to the home of Susanne Duve, 23, after receiving an anonymous phone call, they found her three children, hungry, caked with feces and with insect eggs in their ears.

Tuesday, Mrs. Duve and her roommate, Melanie Kae Shirkey, 27, remained in Mecklenburg County jail, charged with three counts each of child neglect.

The children, ages 1, 2 and 4, are in foster care.

"I think it would help the public to know this is not the worst human being who ever lived," the family worker told the Charlotte Observer. The worker asked not to be named because the case is confidential.

The social worker said Mrs. Duve told her she grew up in the same way she raised her children.

"She said her mother didn't pay any attention to her and sometimes didn't feed her," the worker said.

Several people who knew Mrs. Duve in Charlotte described her as an enigma — an intelligent woman from a middle-class background who wore dirty clothes and lived in filth.

The county Department of Social Services has been criticized for not acting soon enough to remove the children.

Ann Hogshead, a Park Road Baptist Church member who has been helping the family since November, said Mrs. Duve and her husband came to Charlotte about two years ago.

When the couple separated, Mrs. Duve sought help from the Charlotte Family Support Center. Last fall the agency helped her find housing at a shelter, where she also received counseling. She stayed at the shelter for about two months, then moved to the apartment where her children were found, alone.

Legislature Revives Veto Vote

By F. Alan Boyce
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Gov. Jim Martin's $6,000 airlift of veto supporters from a conference in Oklahoma has turned up no takers.

"The planes are coming back, but unfortunately, there's nobody on them," said David Prather, a spokesman in Martin's office. "I don't know what that says for the prospects of a veto bill."

Martin Tuesday sent two planes to Tulsa, Okla., in hopes of retrieving supporters attending a national legislative conference. Ward Purrington, Martin's legislative liaison, said the planes would be available to all 13 or 14 lawmakers there, regardless of how they voted last week, when the veto fell 12 votes short of the 72 votes needed to pass a constitutional amendment in the House.

Tim Pittman, Martin's press secretary, said the airlift would cost about $6,000.

House Speaker Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, said a House vote would occur as soon as 72 votes are certain. However, he admitted that parliamentary rules make it likely there will be a free vote on the issue this session because if it fails, the bill can be revived by a simple majority.

On Wednesday, one day after the House revived a proposed constitutional referendum on gubernatorial veto, Mavretic sent letters to House members calling for the addition of two more provisions — four-year terms for legislators and limits on the length of legislative sessions.

Mavretic said the governor approached him for a way to revive the issue. In response, Mavretic proposed a veto, four-year terms, limiting long sessions to 90 legislative days and cutting short sessions to 30 legislative days. The current session is in its 134th day in the House and 125th in the Senate.

"There are times when the speaker has to step into issues," Mavretic said.

Rep. Liston Ramsey, D-Madison, one of the key opponents in last week's veto vote, said he remained opposed to the package.

"The constitution is too important to amend it with this kind of horse trading," he said.

Mavretic admitted that limiting session length was one of his pet projects. He said sometimes it is impossible to predict what will hold things up or whether someone will deliberately delay adjournment.

"I'm convinced that the reason we didn't get out of here in June is Senator (Ken) Royall's lottery bill," he said.

The Durham Democrat, saying he didn't want to influence budget discussions, waited until last week to move a bill to let the public vote on a statewide lottery. That bill emerged from the Senate Monday night and Mavretic said the House won't consider it until next year.

A Good Opening

Tobacco Seems Up To Expectations

Eastern Belt tobacco markets opened yesterday and the opinion of opening day sales was — well, not bad.

Greenville and other Eastern markets were visited by Sen. Jesse Helms and Commissioner of Agriculture Jim Graham. Both felt tobacco was drawing good prices as they viewed sales yesterday morning.

Although first day sales seldom give a complete picture of how the season will be, there is reason for optimism.

Despite a wet growing season, this year's crop appears to be good. Rains threatened planting in the spring and harvesting during the summer. Dry weather came in time for farmers to get into the fields both times, however.

Commissioner Graham saw the North Carolina crop as doing better on the market than Georgia and Florida tobacco. Nevertheless the wet weather did cut the area tobacco crop some. Graham said he had hoped for a billion dollar crop but because of excessive moisture he does now think that will be reached.

Commissioner Graham does not expect a $897 million disaster relief bill to affect North Carolina farmers this year.

The outlook is that this will still be a good year for North Carolina tobacco. The reasons range from low tobacco surpluses to the fact that 46 percent of our tobacco is exported. A basic reason, however, is that growers are producing a quality product which has appeal throughout the world. They have done it this year even facing adverse weather conditions.

Higher Speeds

More Care Needed On The Interstates

A study by The Insurance Institute for Highway Safety concerning rural interstate speed limit tells us we need more stringent enforcement rather than changing the limits.

The Institute's shows increases in fatalities on interstate highways where the speed limit has been raised to 65 mph.

The study showed that 550 deaths were caused by the 65 mph speed limit. In all there were 2,485 deaths on rural interstates, which was 634 more than the average number of deaths on those highways for the previous five years. It was during that time that the 55 mph speed limit applied. An institute official told a House panel that deaths increased 34 percent in the 38 states which raised the speed limit to 65 mph. The study concluded that 30 percent, or 550, were due to the new speed limit.

The higher speed limits have been applied to some sections of interstate roads in North Carolina, as well as a number of other states.

It is known that higher speeds increase fuel usage, but that doesn't seem to be an issue at the moment. Increased deaths on the highways are certainly an issue, however. While the broad uninterrupted stretches of rural interstates are inviting for 65 mph speeds, we have to pay attention to studies which show increased deaths on roads with the new speed limit.

The answer, however, may not be in reducing the speed limit. Rather it may be in educating the public that more care should be exercised in driving at that speed even on a carefully engineered interstate highway in a rural area. Law enforcement agencies should hold drivers on rural interstates strictly to the 65 mph speed limit. Drivers must also be made to understand that when they exit the interstates their speeds must drop to the 55 mph limit.

There are no surprises in the institute's fatality figures; yet we can't keep bouncing the speed limits up and down. The decision in North Carolina has been made to allow 65 mph on rural interstates. It is now up to the drivers who use the interstates to act responsibly and demonstrate that the higher speed limit can be maintained safely.

Big Transportation Effort Is Ahead

ST. JAMES, Mich. — The drive from Chicago to northern Michigan illustrates precisely the condition of America's road transportation system.

With the last legs of the interstate highway system complete, hours have been cut off the travel time. What was once a tedious trip has become a quick and pleasurable journey.

Except for the start, that is. Where I-80 and I-94 are being repaired and upgraded in the Chicago-Gary commuter corridor, traffic was snarled and tempers strained. Not just vacationers but scores of semi-trailers and smaller trucks and vans were mired in long lines, at who knows what cost to their companies and the overall economy.

The transport system — or infrastructure, as the current fashion calls it — had been a major topic at the National Governors' Association meeting in Chicago. In a report released there, outgoing NGA Chairman Gerald L. Baliles wrote, "How well this nation moves its commerce, how quickly, efficiently and effectively our system transports goods and conveys people, will dramatically influence America's future competitiveness as a trading nation. Unfortunately, when it comes to transportation, America is stuck in neutral."

That judgment by the Democratic governor of Virginia was directly challenged by Transportation Secretary Samuel K. Skinner. After almost 35 years and about $122 billion, Skinner told the governors, work is virtually complete on the 43,000-mile interstate system President Eisenhower envisaged as the centerpiece of transportation policy for his era. Plans for the next generation of investment, he said, will be laid out in the comprehensive national transportation-policy statement he has promised to deliver by next January.

Rhetoric aside, there is no substantive difference between Skinner and the governors on the scale of the problem or the needed investment. Repair of highway bridges will cost two-thirds as much as the original construction of the interstates, Skinner said. Billions more will be needed to modernize the air-transport system, after a 15-year hiatus between the completion of the last new airport in 1974 and the recent approval of a new terminal outside Denver.

Updating sea transport, railroads and mass transit will add massively to the bill. "The price to bring America's transportation infrastructure into reasonable condition within the next 20 years is estimated by a number of authoritative studies to range from $1 trillion to $3 trillion, requiring annual outlays in the range of $50 billion to $150 billion," said the governors' task force headed by Illinois Gov. James R. Thompson (R).

Even the lowest of those figures requires a substantial increase in present spending. And the top estimate would more than triple federal, state and local investment. If Skinner delivers an honest assessment of the nation's needs, as there is every reason to expect, the Bush administration will have to recommend annual spending on transportation as high as the overall cost of the savings-and-loan bailout.

Unlike the bailout, the transportation investment can pay real economic dividends, not just make up the cost of operators' greed and government laxity. The evidence is clear that there is a direct link between public-works investment and the productivity growth upon which America's prosperity and competitiveness depend. The single most striking graph in Thompson's task force report shows parallel shrinkage in public capital-investment and productivity growth from the high point of the 1960s to a level in this decade at least 50 percent below the earlier standard. Real as the rewards will be, you can still expect a major political debate starting next year on who will pay the cost of improved transport. In his speech, Skinner almost nonchalantly drew attention to the fact that he had lobbied personally in two states this year to help Thompson and California Gov. George Deukmejian (R) secure sharply higher gas taxes to finance ambitious transport programs.

In California, where traffic congestion has become a major political issue and a giant threat to future economic growth, Deukmejian is seeking voter approval of a 10-year, $18.5 billion program. Translate that to the national level and it would be a commitment half again as large as the 30-year cost of the interstates.

The spectacle of a federal Cabinet official lobbying state legislatures to raise state taxes did not go unnoticed. As New York Gov. Mario M. Cuomo (D) noted in an interview, actions like Skinner's send a clear message that the Bush administration acknowledges that needed national investments will require higher taxes. But it would prefer others to levy them.

The states are not ducking their responsibilities. But a national need will require national resources.

Old Lies Subvert Nixon Hold On History

Stanley I. Kutler

Fifteen years ago, on the evening of Aug. 8, Richard Nixon told the nation that he lacked "a strong enough political base in the Congress" to maintain himself in office. Nixon's contention that he had to resign the presidency merely because of partisan politics sounded the leitmotif for his last campaign — his struggle for the grace and favor of history.

That political base was Nixon's to lose, yet he implied that he been victimized by others. He mentioned the Watergate "matter" only once.

Nixon's apologia alarmed Rep. Wright Patman, D-Texas, who, the morning after Nixon's speech, wrote to Rep. Peter Rodino, D-N.J., urging the House Judiciary Committee to complete its investigation. Patman told Rodino that it was imperative to preserve and publish additional presidential documents and tapes. Patman said he suspected that "in the coming weeks and months, there will be some who will attempt to distort the record, misconstrue events and to cloud the real issues."

But Rodino, always a reluctant warrior, retreated to his familiar obscurity and shut down the impeachment inquiry. Nixon, meanwhile, was more than ready to go about the business of refurbishing his historical reputation.

What he said when he resigned and what he has said and done since have been part of a carefully choreographed campaign to capture the soul of history.

Historian Ronald Steel once wrote that Nixon was the Ancient Mariner, forever tugging at our sleeve, anxious to tell his story. More is to come, as the former president has announced he will publish yet another memoir next spring in which he will discuss his resignation. But shall we dismiss the long account of his final days in his 1978 memoir? Nixon compulsively must retell his tale, driven, it seems, to neutralize any account that might challenge his control of his history.

The desire for control best explains Nixon's decision not to destroy the Oval Office tapes. In his 1978 account, Nixon admitted "that the tapes were my best insurance against the unforeseeable future. I was prepared to believe that others, even people close to me, would turn against me ... and ... the tapes would give me at least some protection."

As we ponder Nixon as historian, and as we mark the anniversary of his resignation, we should remember why he resigned. "Let us begin by committing ourselves to the truth," Nixon told the Republican convention that nominated him in 1968.

But lies became the quicksand that engulfed him, estranged him from his natural political allies and eventually snapped the fragile bond of trust between leader and led that binds government and the people. Nixon's lies brought him to the dock and cost him his presidency.

Watergate weakened Nixon's support in Congress, but the president's lies, deceit, and "stonewalling" eventually destroyed it. The Saturday Night Massacre and his dismissal of the special prosecutor convinced many that Nixon had something to hide. The revelation of the taping system betrayed a sinister side to the White House. The 18½-minute tape gap, the incorrect transcripts and the president's shifting explanations chipped away at his credibility. The "smoking gun" tape transcript was the last straw for Nixon's hard-core loyalists in Congress, who noted that the truth "could not be unleashed without destroying his presidency."

Barry Goldwater thought that Nixon's lying "was the crux" of his failure. That deceit was intended to obscure the overwhelming evidence that he had abused power and obstructed justice. The actions of the president and his men were serious. More than 70 persons were convicted or offered guilty pleas, including several Cabinet officers and Oval Office aides. Revisionism, to be whole, must produce more than pardons at the bar of history; it must produce the necessary exculpatory evidence.

Nixon's deeds, as well as his own words, convicted him. "I brought myself down. I gave them a sword. And they stuck it in," he bitterly observed. But he reminded us of what he was: "And, I guess, if I'd been in their position, I'd have done the same thing." If he were to resign, he had said in 1973, it would mean he was guilty, and resignation would weaken the presidency he so cherished. For two years, he had resisted his accusers in the name of "preserving the presidency." But in the end, he willingly sacrificed the presidency in order to save the president.

When George Washington offered the nation a very different Farewell Address in 1796, he remarked that "virtue and morality" formed the "necessary spring of government." Washington and the cherry tree myth are deeply ingrained in American civil religion. Richard Nixon never understood. Nearly a decade after he resigned, he wrote, "virtue is not what lifts great leaders above others." But even those words of self-incrimination pale next to the most fateful ones he ever uttered: "Thereby resign."

New Day For Correspondents In The Soviet Union

David Remnick

KEMEROVO, U.S.S.R. — It was getting late in Siberia. The foreign desk of The Washington Post, which does not much enjoy surprises, had no idea what sort of story to expect on the miners' strikes in the Kuznetsk coalfields. Sitting in the office of the local strike committee, I had no way of sending a message.

Sensing unease in my expression, one of the members of the strike committee, a native Siberian whose knees had been wrecked in a mine accident, said, "By the way, would you like to send a telex to Washington?"

As if this weren't stunning enough, he added a clincher. "The Communist Party headquarters is across the street," he said. "You can send your message from there."

We walked across Kemerovo's Lenin Square, by this hour an abandoned rectangle of granite and gloom, and rapped on the glass door of the local party committee. A sleepy watchman waddled to the door. After a brief inspection he let us in.

Then, as if they owned the place — and they may, soon — the Siberians walked right into the party leader's office and went about helping me wire a message — "filing 40 from siberia. cheers." — from the Kuznetsk Basin of Western Siberia to downtown Washington.

If there is a better example of glasnost and the transformed lives of Western correspondents in the Soviet Union, I don't know what it is.

The Moscow bureau was not always journalistic nirvana. In the 1940 movie, "Comrade X," Clark Gable plays a dashing if rather seedy Moscow hack who cracks the immortal line, "Face the facts, baby. There ain't no news in Russia."

In that movie, bourbon-sodden men in rumpled fedoras talk a lot about the frustrations of covering a country that covers up. Stalinist censors, travel restrictions, harassment of all sorts made one of the more critical countries in the world seem somehow dull.

In those years, some of the most devastating events of the 20th century went largely unreported or were so badly distorted that no dispatches might have been better than many of those that were actually printed.

Malcolm Muggeridge, the Manchester Guardian's reporter, was one of the very few who managed to file unforgiving reports on the famines in the Ukraine and other brutalities.

Later, Muggeridge would write of reporters who were also Stalin's apologists that, "Their delight in all they saw and were told, and the expression they gave to this delight, constitute unquestionably one of the wonders of our age."

Since then, the Soviet world has cracked open. For us, the Western correspondents, glasnost has been a feast.

In the past few months alone I and my colleagues have been able to cover the miners' strikes, listen to the demands of the nascent independent movements in Estonia, Georgia and Lithuania, to write about Soviet society, its mafia, homosexuals, millionaires and motorcycle gangs.

Analysis

During recent sessions of the new Soviet legislature, reporters were able to "work" the Kremlin the way they might the corridors of the U.S. Congress, collaring the head of the KGB, the leading generals, poets, former political prisoners, Gorbachev, Raisa.

The situation in the halls of the Kremlin's Palace of Congresses was access-heaven, so much so that after a few minutes of leeching onto any Politburo member who proved anything less than scintillating, Western reporters found themselves trying politely to cut him short.

In one short stretch, I was able to discuss with Raisa Gorbachev how one of the delegates had compared her husband to a tyrannical Napoleon, and her to a scheming Josephine.

"It's the men that say that," she said, clutching my forearm. "Write that down. Write that down." Moments later, I was bugging her husband about so-and-so's speech about radical economic reform.

All this could have serious repercussions. Sooner or later I expect an editor will call from the foreign desk and ask me to call Gorbachev at home for comments on a breaking story. I dread the day.

The telephone is still not the instrument of reporting it is Washington, and even mid-level officials don't like to linger much on the telephone. They regard the phone with suspicion and are unwilling to develop, in the Washington style, "personal" relationships with reporters through a wire.

Travel is still a bother compared with working in the West. We still must follow a Byzantine set of regulations involving telexes to the foreign ministry and letters to the state agency that handles diplomats and journalists.

The wiles of one's secretary are often as important to the coverage of a big out-of-town story as are one's sources.

Huge areas of Siberia, the Far East and even the Moscow region are still closed to foreigners. But the country is opening up. Soon I expect to leave for Sakhalin Island, for decades a closed region just north of Japan.

When it comes to the bugbears of telephone taps and mysterious men following you down the street, there are times when the current atmosphere recalls Marx's old saw that history (and its personages) occur twice, the first time as tragedy, the second as farce.

Take the issue of surveillance, a dark and serious memory for any Moscow correspondent of the Brezhnev era. When my predecessors return to Moscow to see all that has changed, they still resort, as if by instinct, to hand signals, or they turn up the radio or ask to "take a walk in the courtyard" when the subject gets touchy. They developed those instincts mainly to protect their sources' safety, but now it is the sources themselves who are fearless.

Stephen Rosenfeld, who opened the Post's first Moscow bureau in the mid-60s, recently came back to Moscow for the first time. He told me that a typical "meeting" with Russian intellectuals in his day was when he confronted the writer Ilya Ehrenburg at a diplomatic reception.

"I'm Steve Rosenfeld of The Washington Post," he said by way of introduction. Ehrenburg simply turned around and walked away. And he was one of the "liberals."

At my apartment, 25 years later, Steve sat between the writer Tatyana Tolstaya and the sociologist Igor Kon and listened, jaw dropping, as the two of them argued about sex and the Soviet Union.

People at home still want to know if reporters are followed, but I'm afraid that on this matter I can only be disappointing, even slapstick.

The one time I felt sure I was followed was on a snowy night last year in the midst of the ethnic violence in Nagorno-Karabakh. After a day spent interviewing Armenians and Azerbaijanis who had returned from the region, both Gary Lee, the former bureau chief, and I were starved.

I discovered deliverance in the day's junk mail. We had been invited to a promotional meeting set up by some reps from Pizza Hut who were thinking of setting up shop in northern Moscow. The flyer offered "Free Pizza."

As we were sliding along Moscow's Garden Ring road in the blizzard, I noticed in the rear-view mirror a little yellow car following our every weave and slide. When we pulled up to the curb, the little yellow car pulled up, too.

Lee and I headed for the trough. Fifteen slices of pizza later, we came out, dome-bellied and happy. And there they were, our friends, shivering in their little yellow car. I can only imagine the entry on my file at headquarters.

This all sounds very jolly, sending telexes from Siberia and the almost routine access to the very same men who, since Clark Gable's day, had done their best to thwart the press.

David Remnick reports for The Washington Post from Moscow.

Phone Bill May Take Next Tax

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — Wonder how the General Assembly is going to make up a $300 million hole in the state budget next year? Part of the answer might be on your telephone bill.

Instate telephone calls, which until this year were considered to be beyond the reach of the state tax man, can now be taxed. States are rushing to add these calls to their list of taxable services, and North Carolina probably won't be far behind.

This spring, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that an Illinois law which taxed interstate telephone calls was constitutional. To that point, says Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, states had assumed that the court would consider such a tax as an infringement on interstate commerce, and therefore unconstitutional. So long as the tax is applied equitably, said Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, it will pass constitutional muster.

The ruling in the Illinois case led Hackney to propose a 6.5 percent tax on interstate calls, the same as for intrastate calls.

"I can sit in Raleigh and call Charlotte, and I pay a tax. But if I call Rock Hill, South Carolina, there is no state tax," Hackney said.

Had Hackney's bill become law on October 1, as he proposed, it would have raised $17 million this fiscal year. But next year, when the tax would be collected for a full year, it would raise $36 million. It would cover outgoing and incoming calls, but would apply only to calls billed to in-state addresses.

But Hackney's bill never gained momentum because of intense lobbying from the Department of Commerce and several major North Carolina employers.

Commerce Secretary Jim Broyhill wrote to legislators asking that they reject the tax. He noted that American Airlines had recently opened a telephone reservations center in Cary, and that it would be bad form to raise long distance telephone taxes on the company so soon after it had made a considerable investment here. Other companies, including Sears in Greensboro and Holiday Inn in Cary, also operate major telephone operations.

Speaking at a press conference, Gov. Jim Martin reported that he refused to consider the long distance tax in negotiations to fund expanded state spending this year.

American, in a letter to Hackney, estimated that the tax would raise its costs by $100,000 a year. Given the economic contribution the airline is already making to the Triangle, the tax would be unfair, the company said. Miller said that American officials were very upset by the tax proposal.

Hackney says, "I decided not to push it. I filed the bill and left it out there in case someone wanted to include it in a package at the end of the session."

Hackney said that several states have already followed the lead of Illinois and that "all states will have it in a few years."

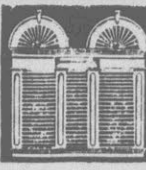

Hackney thinks that North Carolina will adopt the tax within a few years, although with some form of break for the large toll-free phone centers. "It might be that we would have a flat rate for 800 (toll-free) service, or a cap on the tax they'd pay."

"Our general philosophy is just that we didn't want to be one of the first to have it," Hackney said.

IN THE STATE

Seven Found Guilty

DURHAM (AP) — Seven people were found guilty in Durham County District Court Tuesday of trespassing at a clinic that performs abortions.

The seven, according to trial evidence, were part of a large but non-violent anti-abortion demonstration July 1 at the Medical Care Center in Westgate Plaza.

Judge Carolyn Johnson gave each of the seven a 30-day suspended sentence and a $100 fine. All gave notice of appeal to Superior Court.

Board Wants Dams

BREVARD (AP) — A major flood could cause $157 million in damages to Transylvania County, according to a study conducted by the U.S. Soil Conservation Service.

But Tuesday, officials took a step they hope will reduce the potential for flood devastation. They voted to construct six dams on the headwaters of the French Broad River in the Rosman and Balsam Grove area of the county.

The Transylvania County Board of Commissioners voted unanimously to jointly pursue the $18.4 million project with the Transylvania County Soil and Water Board.

A public hearing will be scheduled to receive citizens' input on the plan. The N.C. Soil and Water Board then will review the hearing results and vote at its November meeting on whether the plan is a viable project.

If the go-ahead is given, an application for federal funding must be sent by Dec. 1 to the U.S. Soil Conservation Service in Washington, D.C.

Angier Man Drowns

ANGIER (AP) — A 25-year-old Harnett County man drowned in Angier, authorities say.

David Lee Montgomery of Angier, drowned in the Angier Pond, authorities said. His body was recovered after a call for help was received by rescue workers shortly before 9 p.m. Monday.

Delay Criticized

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Charlotte-Mecklenburg Schools Superintendent Peter Relic says the N.C. legislature's delay in approving a final budget means area teachers won't know how much money they'll earn this year until mid-September.

And it will likely be October before teachers see the raises they are entitled to under the new state salary program, he told the school board Tuesday night.

"We have failed in North Carolina again," Relic said. "We could not get our act together."

Meanwhile, the superintendent announced Charlotte is in the running to be the southeastern site for President Bush's November national conference on schools-of-choice.

Bush endorses the new educational trend which allows parents to choose schools rather than assigning students to particular schools.

National educational officials are choosing five sites in different regions for the conference.

Proposal Rejected

WAYNESVILLE (AP) — Voters have rejected a proposal to bring mixed drinks to Waynesville by almost a 2 to 1 margin.

Only about 40 percent of the town's 4,057 registered voters went to the polls Tuesday. The measure was rejected by a 1,066 to 547 margin.

"The people have spoken and decided they do not want mixed beverage sales in the town of Waynesville," said Mayor Ronnie James. "I'm disappointed that no more people turned out regardless of how they voted. It appears the anti forces just out-hustled those in favor of the issue."

Search Narrowed

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Mecklenburg County commissioners have narrowed their search for a new health director, voting in closed session to give the job to a Minnesota health official.

Commissioner Jerry Blackmon said late Tuesday the panel needed to consider pay and other issues before offering the job to David Lurie.

"I haven't heard anything officially from the county," Lurie said Tuesday night.

Senate Panel OKs Tax Measure

By Dennis Patterson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A Senate panel has approved a compromise bill that, for the first time, would tax the pensions of state and local government retirees while giving a break to workers retired from private businesses.

The measure approved by the Senate Tuesday would give government retirees a $4,000 tax exemption on their pensions and grant private retirees a $2,000 exclusion.

The House Monday had approved a measure that would have given government retirees the $4,000 exemption this year and phased in a $4,000 exemption for private retirees over the next five years.

But Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, told the Senate Pensions and Retirement Committee that the House plan would cost the state $46 million in lost revenues when private pensions were fully covered.

"This is something that we have to deal with and get handled ... before we leave here," Winner told the panel.

Winner originally proposed allowing all retirees a $3,000 exemption beginning this year, a move he said would not cost the state any revenues.

But lobbyists for federal retirement groups said the compromise violated an agreement to raise the exemption for federal pensions from $3,000 to $4,000 this year.

Lobbyists for state and local government workers also complained that the proposal would give private retirees an exemption for the first time at the expense of government workers.

The state must change the way it taxes pensions in the wake of a U.S. Supreme Court decision that said state and federal pensions must be taxed alike. North Carolina, and some other states, have previously taxed federal pensions, but not the pensions of retired state and local government workers.

"I am not against private retirees getting an exclusion, but the court did not require that," said former state Rep. Al Adams, a lobbyist for state government retirees.

Adams and other lobbyists said the state for years had told state

The Associated Press

Rep. Dave Diamont, D-Surry, and Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, during Tuesday's session workers their salaries were not as high as private industry, but their retirement from the state would be tax free.

"I'm all in favor of taking care of private retirees if at all possible," said Sen. Jim Speed, D-Franklin. "But our first obligation is to the public employees with whom we have a contract."

Sen. Ken Royall, D-Durham, offered the amendment that would give all retired government workers the $4,000 exemption and all private retirees a $2,000 exemption. All the government retiree lobbyists supported the change.

The committee, which gave the compromise unanimous approval, later scheduled another meeting to look at the bill a second time, but that meeting was canceled.

The Senate is scheduled to vote on the measure Wednesday. If it is approved, the bill then would go back to the House.

In other Legislative action:

— Leaders of the House and Senate are negotiating on a resolution to adjourn the General Assembly, a move that could not come before Saturday, Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, said.

Winner had called a meeting of the Senate Rules Committee to consider the adjournment resolutions, but it was canceled after Winner said negotiations could keep the measure from going to a conference committee.

The resolution passed by the House would allow the House speaker or the Senate President pro tem to order committees to consider legislation between sessions. The provision was sought by House Speaker Joe Mavretic and differs from the traditional language that requires the leaders of the two chambers to mutually agree to any issues considered between sessions.

Winner told members of the Rules Committee that the legislature will not adjourn without approving changes in how pensions are taxed. He said that measure could not be approved before Saturday.

— The Senate has tentatively approved a bill that requires the state to implement a plan to protect the New River from development.

Sen. Sandy Sands, D-Rockingham, said the state years ago had developed a proposal to limit development along the banks of the river, which geologists say is the second oldest in the world.

But Sands said state officials had contended they did not have the authority to implement the plan.

— The Senate has voted not to concur in changes made by the House in the Education Reform Act of 1989.

Drop In Gas Prices Has Offset Hike Expected From State Tax

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Even though they are paying a higher state gasoline tax, many motorists have not seen a jump in the price they pay at the pumps.

The price of gasoline was on its way down when the state motor-fuels tax went up 5.25 cents per gallon last week, industry observers say.

"It just happened that about the time the tax came in, the cost was dropping at the same time," said David L. Weaver, vice president of Cary Oil Co. "In some areas they (retailers) went up a little, but went back down because of competition."

Several North Carolina wholesalers said they had boosted their prices to cover the increase in state tax. But in recent weeks, the price charged to them by producers dropped, allowing them to bring prices back down.

Two wholesalers said they also had absorbed some of the increase. And William J. Downie, vice president and general manager of the Raleigh office of Miller Oil Co. of Norfolk, Va., said his company had increased its prices by 5 cents when the tax was imposed, but it might be forced to roll back prices.

"Competition is starting to get tough now, so I don't know if we'll be able to maintain it all," he said.

Vacationers and other motorists have been driving less than expected this summer, and some retailers have been forced to trim their prices, said Dennis K. Winters, a senior economist who follows the oil industry for DRIMcGraw Hill in Lexington, Mass.

Also, fears have subsided that supplies might be squeezed after a spring oil spill in Alaska, he said. In the past month, crude oil prices have fallen about $2 per barrel, an average of almost 5 cents per gallon.

Winters also told The News and Observer of Raleigh that U.S. gasoline supplies are expected to remain ample through Labor Day. As a result, prices could fall again.

Gasoline prices in North Carolina — which shot up in the spring — decreased slowly between Memorial Day and July Fourth, according to a survey by the AAA Carolina Motor Club in Charlotte. During the July Fourth weekend, a gallon of unleaded gasoline cost an average of almost $1.08 per gallon, down about 0.6 cent.

A spokesman said any increases in pump prices caused by the tax might not show up in the club's next survey, during the Labor Day weekend.

"Shortly after Labor Day, it (the average price) could be to where it was when the tax increase went into effect," Quentin G. Anderson, the spokesman, said. "That's conceivable."

But one wholesaler cautioned that the downward trend in prices might not last.

"In this industry, any news in the Mideast can spur price increases or decreases pretty rapidly," Downie said.

Winters said the cost of a gallon of gasoline increases by about 35 cents to 40 cents from the time it arrives at the refinery in the form of crude oil to the time it is pumped into an automobile's tank.

Much of that increase comes in the form of taxes and other charges, and wholesalers' and retailers' profits are relatively small, he said. Those profit margins can be squeezed even tighter when supplies are ample.

He added that just one rule governs how much individual wholesalers and retailers are willing to cut prices to generate demand.

"It just depends how bad each one wants it," he said.

Executive Mansion Is Getting Facelift

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Refurbishing the Executive Mansion in Raleigh is no small task and calls for more than running down to the local mall.

"We can't exactly go out to Sears and buy things for this house," said David Winslow, a consultant working with the Executive Mansion Fine Arts Committee on the building's Second Century Campaign.

A pending budget bill would appropriate $1 million in matching funds to give the mansion a facelift in time for its 100th anniversary in 1991.

Boasting 18-foot ceilings and 34,000 square feet of space, the mansion each year hosts an estimated 50,000 people, many of them school children on tours.

"It belongs to the people of North Carolina," said Anne S. Peden, who serves on the Executive Mansion Fine Arts Committee. "It's just a state treasure. It's sort of a symbol of our state."

The plans include $500,000 for immediate needs, such as restoring 10 gold-leafed mirrors, replacing drapes on numerous windows, buying new carpet for the entrance hall and purchasing antique furniture.

Restoration of each mirror will cost about $1,000 and replacing the entrance hall carpet could cost as much as $50,000 if a replica of what is thought to be the original carpeting is commissioned, said Marie S. Ham, the interior designer for the state. The present maroon one is 15 years old.

New draperies will cost well over $10,000 per room, Mrs. Ham said. The dining room, gentleman's parlor and the ballroom, with its three double windows, are slated for new draperies, she said.

There are no plans to refurbish the mansion's private quarters, where the governor and his family live.

Scientists And Others Wonder Why Shuttle Launch Was 'Kept A Secret'

By Richard Cole
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — The Soviets were listening and journalists had reported for weeks on Columbia's payload, so why did military and NASA officials go to the trouble of keeping the launch time and other details secret?

"By being inexact about the launch time, it complicates their ability to track," Lt. Col. Ron Rand, Air Force spokesman, said of the Soviets. "They may or may not listen in, but we're going to do everything we can to keep the payload anonymous."

But scientists who attended Tuesday's launch of the Defense Department's fourth shuttle mission said the military shroud won't stop the Soviets from finding out all about the reconnaissance satellite Columbia and its five astronauts are believed to be launching.

"There's no reason I can think of for the secrecy," said John Pike, a space analyst with the Federation of American Scientists. "In principle, they could run this countdown like they run every countdown — maybe this way it's more fun for them."

The Soviets will shoot pictures of the satellite even before the device begins functioning, said Pike. Soviet cameras attached to a telescope can give a resolution as small as one foot.

"If they launch the satellite this morning, the Soviets will certainly know what it looks like by tonight," he said Tuesday.

NASA lifted its news blackout only briefly, announcing the launch time nine minutes before blastoff and reporting a trouble-free ascent into orbit shortly afterward.

Nevertheless, a Soviet trawler bristling with antennas monitored the launch from less than 50 miles off Cape Canaveral. Reporters — and probably the Soviets — listened in on National Aeronautics and Space Administration's internal communications channel to follow the countdown.

The Soviet trawler and anyone else with a radar system could track Columbia as soon as it left the launch pad, but NASA refused to tell reporters where the solid rocket boosters fell, saying that could help determine the shuttle's trajectory.

The military clampdown on the mission wasn't airtight, though.

The shuttle crew, which always boards about 2½ hours before the scheduled launch time, was trucked out to the pad in the early morning illuminated by a spotlight and accompanied by a helicopter escort as well-wishers waved and camera crews filmed.

Inside the Kennedy Space Center media room, space experts generally agreed the 20,600-pound satellite would spy on the Soviet Union with highly sensitive camera lenses and infrared sensors from 300 miles up.

"If it's a high inclination (on take-off), it's going over Russia and it's going to do some kind of sensing," said Harry Kolcum of the magazine Aviation Week & Space Technology, which often gives details of secret satellites prior to launch.

Indeed, the shuttle took off on a north-northeast course that would take it over Poland, the Soviet Union, Mongolia, China and parts of the Middle East.

Search For Rep. Leland Continues

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia — Planes today scanned a remote region of southwestern Ethiopia and rescue workers set out on foot and in jeeps in search for Texas Rep. Mickey Leland and 13 others who disappeared two days ago en route to a refugee camp.

The twin-engine plane carrying Leland, 44, and the others vanished Monday on its way to the Fugnido refugee camp near the border with Sudan, 480 miles southwest of the capital.

The Houston Democrat is chairman of the House Select Committee on Hunger and has taken a keen interest in Africa's refugee problem.

The Twin Otter, a plane commonly used for bush flying in Africa, carried eight members of Leland's staff, embassy personnel and officers of the U.S. Agency for International Development. Five Ethiopians were on board, including three government officials, the pilot and co-pilot.

A half-dozen small planes were being used in the search, directed by Ethiopia's Civil Aviation Authority.

On Tuesday, heavy clouds and poor visibility hampered planes that crisscrossed the cold, windswept plateau in Ethiopia, said John Guerra, political officer at the U.S. Embassy in Addis Ababa. The weather was reported to have improved enough today to resume a full-scale search, authorities said.

Rescuers continue to focus on a region called Dembidola, about 75 miles north of Fugnido where Ethiopian authorities said a small plane reportedly was heard circling Monday, according to U.S. Embassy officials.

Earlier, embassy officials said they were told the plane actually had been sighted, but today acknowledged they had been misinformed.

Dembidola is in an accessible region of foothills between mountains that rise up to 12,000 feet and swampy plateaus stretching to the Sudanese border. Communications with Dembidola, as with most areas outside the capital, is bad to nonexistent.

On Tuesday, Robert Houdek, charge d'affaires at the U.S. Embassy in Addis Ababa, said the lack of radio or telecommunications "could provide a benign explanation for why we haven't heard anything."

President Bush telephoned Leland's wife, Alison, in Houston on Tuesday and promised his administration will do "all we can to learn" the fate of the plane.

"She's strong, has a lot of hope, and we all pray that he's safe," Bush told a meeting of the National Urban League in Washington, where delegates observed a moment of silent prayer for Leland's survival.

"I think it says a lot about Mickey that he was on his sixth humanitarian mission to help feed the hungry in that part of the world," Bush said.

In Washington, the Pentagon said late Tuesday that at the request of the White House it would send a medical evacuation aircraft to Addis Ababa "to assist, if necessary, in treating or evacuating Cong. Leland and any passengers traveling with him."

Leland's Twin Otter aircraft left Addis Ababa in heavy clouds and poor visibility at about 10:30 a.m. Monday after a two-hour delay caused by the bad weather, said embassy political officer Guerra.

The plane was last heard from 15 minutes after it took off.

Drug Abuse A National Dilemma, League Told

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Drug abuse is not merely a "black problem" but a national dilemma that will require major resources to solve, say leaders attending the national Urban League convention.

"We can't talk about the future we want to see for urban America without talking about the No. 1 threat in our inner cities today: illegal drugs," President Bush told the league Tuesday, as the drug issue received heavy attention from the largely black organization.

Urban League President John E. Jacob, in an interview Tuesday, said, "We believe the federal government ought to ... mobilize this nation to a realization that this is not a black problem but a national problem that will require national resources."

But Jacob and others attending the meeting called for efforts to protect the innocent during crackdowns in housing projects.

The league today concludes its four-day convention, which included a puppet show at a forum on drug abuse.

Lottie V. Jones, president of the National Council on Alcoholism and Other Dependencies, on Tuesday showed off the puppets her Detroit-based group uses to teach families the dangers of drug abuse.

Ronald Pogue, senior vice president of CompDrugs Inc. of Columbus, Ohio, told the drug forum: "What sells in this country right now is the notion that the drug problem is primarily a minority problem."

"It is much easier for this country to buy into the notion that it is a minority problem because then there is no compelling urge to do anything about it," Pogue said.

However, Jacob contended the drug issue has not been swept under the rug.

"I think that the whole issue of dealing with drugs is intimidating," he said. "It has required that our community become consciously more aggressive in attacking that problem, because it is not an easy one to become involved with."

"Now we are talking about our community developing relationships with the police and authorities that will ultimately lead to people getting locked up," Jacob said. "That is contrary to the gentle nature of African-Americans toward each other and is really inconsistent with the value system that we have had about the extended family concept."

Now, Jacob said, blacks are seeing that "the entire family must be more important than those persons who would violate the trust of the family."

Secretary of Housing and Urban Development Jack Kemp brought up the subject of fairness, telling delegates Tuesday, "We are going to be tough on drugs, but we are going to be tough for due process, too."

Jacob, asked if due process protections were a major concern for the black community, said, "I think it is a major concern that people do not get penalized because of someone in their families that might be using drugs that they had no control over."

"We don't want to create a climate in which people just run roughshod through the (housing) projects eliminating people because they just look like they use drugs," he said.

But Jacob, asked whether tight budgetary restrictions might harm the war against drugs, said: "I don't think it will be as tough for drugs as it will be for a lot of things. There are white Americans who are just as scared about what's happening with drugs as the black community."

FINANCIAL STRESS
Money may or may not be the "root of all evil," but financial distress can be the root of many marital problems. This is particularly true if one or both partners is a compulsive spender.

Two compulsive spenders in one marriage can pose financial disaster. The stress of being behind in bills and hounded by creditors is more than many marriages can take. Consultation with a financial advisor can help to work out a way for a couple to get out of the fiscal hole they've dug for themselves (several nonprofit agencies offer such services for free). But it may also take marriage counseling to help develop new patterns of relating beyond shopping trips and shared material goods.

One compulsive spender in a marriage is equally troublesome. The other partner finds himself or herself in the position of accountant/controller/nag, which neither finds tolerable. Getting the compulsive spending under control and re-starting new patterns of trust and communication in the marriage may also require the intervention of a trained marriage counselor.

Bush To Order Hundreds Of S&Ls To Close, Merge

By Dave Skidmore
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush, with landmark savings and loan legislation on his desk, is ordering his administration to gear up to close or merge hundreds of failed thrifts.

Bush planned to sign the measure, the biggest government bailout in the nation's history, at a White House ceremony today.

The bill authorizes $50 billion in borrowing over the next 26 months, imposes tough new financial standards on thrifts and triggers the most sweeping overhaul of the regulatory bureaucracy in 50 years. The plan received final congressional approval Saturday.

Immediately after the signing ceremony, Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady was to conduct the first meeting of the board overseeing the Resolution Trust Corp. The RTC was created to manage the sale of sour loans and repossessed real estate the government is inheriting from ailing savings and loans.

The RTC board, whose members include Brady, Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan and Housing and Urban Development Secretary Jack Kemp, will approve operating policies for the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., the agency charged with managing the bailout. It also will appoint top staff members to oversee the FDIC.

The FDIC already has taken over 262 failed thrifts, and the first deals to wipe out their losses and put them in the hands of new owners could come as early as this week.

Earlier, the Treasury Department announced plans to borrow the first $5 billion installment of the bailout Thursday and said it intends to raise an additional $15 billion within eight weeks.

Analysts say the bill, the first major legislative initiative of Bush's presidency, will touch the lives of anyone who pays taxes, deposits money in a bank or thrift or owns real estate, particularly in the Southwest.

The savings and loan industry will emerge leaner and more closely regulated, but perhaps no better able to earn a profit, analysts say.

By providing the money to close failed thrifts, which must pay high interest rates to attract deposits, the bill should allow remaining institutions, including banks, to lower their rates.

The massive sale of real estate by the government could endanger property values in already fragile markets in oil-producing states in such as Texas and Oklahoma.

Thrifts that can't measure up to tougher financial and accounting standards face takeover by government regulators or merger with bigger and stronger institutions — including commercial banks, which for the first time will be permitted to buy healthy savings and loans.

"In five years I expect there'll be less than a thousand thrifts," said Bert Ely, a financial institutions analyst in Alexandria, Va. Currently there are about 3,000 savings and loan institutions.

The prospects for thrifts that remain are mixed. Optimists point out that the bill, by lowering deposit rates, will make it easier for healthy institutions to earn a profit.

Also, it should restore public confidence in the government's guarantee of savers' accounts up to $100,000, helping stem a record outflow of deposits this year.

"The industry that is going to emerge from this is going to be fewer in number, but certainly stronger," said Barney R. Beekma, chairman of the U.S. League of Savings Institutions, the industry's largest trade group.

Pessimists, however, say the industry's contribution to the bailout will pinch thrift earnings. They also note that the bill will force savings and loans to concentrate more heavily on safer, but less lucrative, home mortgage lending just as the economy and real estate markets are entering a slow-growth period at best and a recession at worst.

"I think it's exactly the wrong thing to do," said economist Paul Getman of the WEFA Group, a Bala Cynwyd, Pa., forecasting company. "It's consigning the thrift industry to low profitability, at least over the next two or three years."

Investors Liken Stock Market Activity To That Before Crash

By Chet Currier
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The stock market's recent climb toward record highs is worrying some investors who wonder whether the elevation in stock prices will be followed by a plunge like the October 1987 crash.

Nearly a third of the paper value of stocks was wiped out in the crash and the weeks preceding it. With the market on a path remarkably similar to the one it followed the months before the crash, comparisons to 1987 are being drawn.

The Dow Jones industrial average of 30 industrials rose 4.18 to finish at 2,699.17 Tuesday, approaching the record 2,722.42 close of Aug. 25, 1987.

The current rally's apologists point to dissimilarities in market conditions between then and now that they contend should lead to a much happier outcome this time.

"The current financial environment bears little resemblance to the fall of 1987," said Michael Sherman, an analyst at the investment firm of Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc. "At that time, long-term bond interest rates exceeded 10 percent and were rising. Today those rates are down near 8 percent and have been falling.

"In the fall of 1987 the dollar was plunging to new lows. So far this year the dollar has been rising."

In addition, analysts say, improvements in corporate health in the past two years may make a sharp downturn less likely. Corporate profits, the traditional base on which stock prices rest, have increased by as much as 65 to 70 percent.

In other words, stock prices, in relation to the earnings of the companies they represent, appear nowhere near as overextended as they were in 1987.

The 30 stocks that make up the Dow Jones industrial average traded at about 20 times earnings in August 1987. Lately this price-earnings ratio has been about 12-1, a much more moderate level by historical standards.

Takeovers and buyouts of corporations, which gave investors a reason to put extra-high values on stocks before the crash, are as rampant as ever in the 1989 marketplace.

Bids for companies using borrowed money continue to put a burden of debt on the economy that worries skeptics, who argue that many of the apparent lessons of the crash have been forgotten or ignored.

Still, active investors who watch their holdings rise in value because of buyout news or rumors find it hard to see the takeover trend in a negative light.

"It seems there aren't as many stocks to go around as there used to be," observed Thomas Bailey, chairman of the Janus Group of mutual funds in Denver, in a recent report to shareholders. "What's left is worth more."

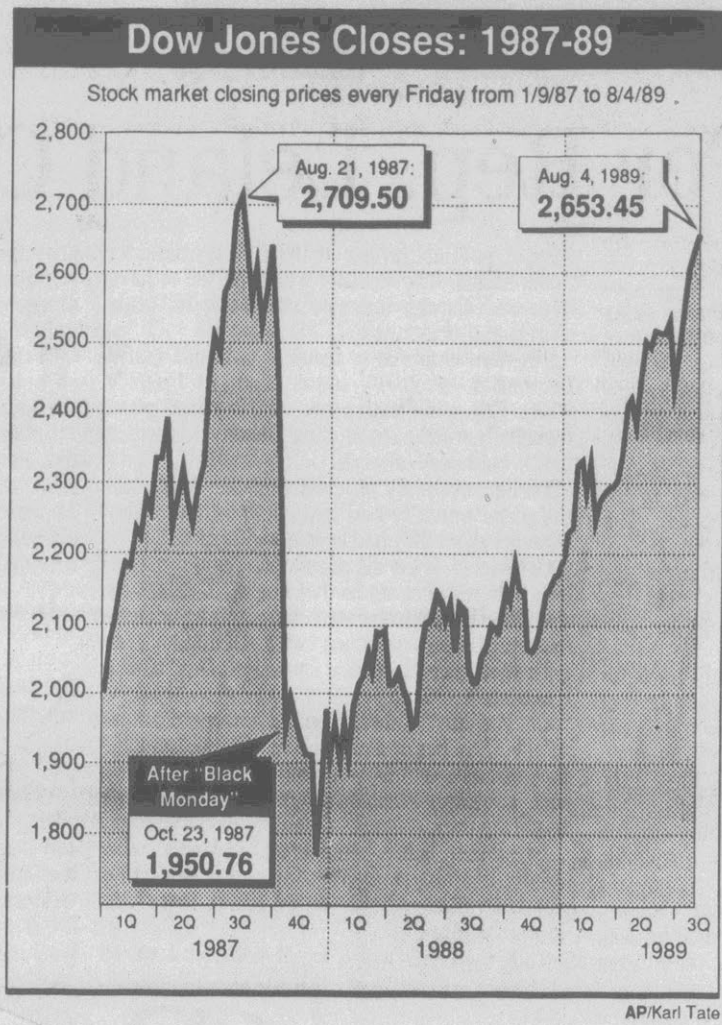

Professional traders engaged in large-scale computer trading strategies, often painted as primary villains during the crash, also still are very much in evidence.

As in the early stages of 1987, they lately have been credited on several occasions with helping to drive stock prices higher through their so-called index arbitrage activity. In a market downturn, their critics say, their presence could make things worse.

However, one computerized strategy known as portfolio insurance has not made much of a comeback since the market collapse, when it failed to deliver all its promised benefits as a hedging method.

"That's the one good thing we could say about the crash," declared Raymond F. DeVoe Jr., an analyst at Legg Mason Wood Walker Inc. "It helped get rid of the portfolio insurance people."

Should another overwhelming selloff hit the markets now, a series of measures known as "circuit breakers" has been adopted since the crash that would provide for automatic trading halts at predetermined points. It remains unknown how well these would work in practice — whether halts in trading would help restore order or perversely work to prolong the agony. Hardly anybody is especially eager to find out.

Demery's HUD Files Misplaced

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Department of Housing and Urban Development says it can't locate the files of a former housing official whose conduct is under scrutiny in the influence-peddling probe, but the former official says he doesn't have them.

"I don't even know where they are kept, much less take them with me," Thomas T. Demery said Tuesday, adding that he took no files when he left HUD last year. "I don't have them."

James Lafferty, deputy assistant secretary for public affairs at HUD, said, "He may have taken them with him — we don't have them here." However, he said the department has no evidence that Demery took the files.

"They could be someplace that we don't now know about but they are not in the typical places that you would look for them," Lafferty said.

HUD officials realized the files were missing after receiving a Freedom of Information Act request for access to them.

The files of two other former HUD officials — Secretary Samuel R. Pierce Jr. and his top aide Deborah Gore Dean — have provided dramatic insight into their activities at the agency.

Video Commercials Bother Consumers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAS VEGAS — Consumers have had it with commercials on the videocassettes they rent, even as more car and soft-drink spots are being spliced onto movie tapes.

Sixty-six percent of VCR owners said they fast-forward through commercials at the beginning of rented movies, according to a Nielsen Media Research study released Tuesday at the eighth annual Video Software Dealers Association convention.

The study further found that more than 60 percent of those surveyed said they zip through coming attractions.

Despite the renters' unhappiness, though, the commercials won't be going away anytime soon.

MCA Home Videos' upcoming release of "The Land Before Time" will carry a Pizza Hut pitch.

"Rain Man" features a Buick plug, "A Fish Called Wanda" hypes Schweppes and "Young Guns" hawks Nestle.

And a number of promoters have created a ruckus at this year's convention by offering to open prerecorded cassettes and attach commercials for local merchants.

Video Air Time of Midland, Texas, will put spots for florists, bowling alleys, attorneys and department stores on any cassette where there's room.

"We're offering the video store owner an additional source of revenue," said Terry Mathis, Video Air Time's vice president for franchising. "The video store owns the cassette. And if we don't make an unauthorized infringement of the copyrighted material, we have violated no law."

Video Air Time charges about $20 per commercial per cassette, of which the store owner receives about $1 a tape.

Paramount Pictures has filed a $1 million lawsuit against St. Louis-based Video Broadcasting Systems, alleging that the company has placed commercials on "Beverly Hills Cop II," "Raiders of the Lost Ark," and "Eddie Murphy Raw" in some markets.

Paramount argues that low-budget local commercials damage the studio's image. Paramount was the first studio to place a commercial on a major studio release, adding a Diet Pepsi pitch to "Top Gun" in 1986.

Like that slick spot, many commercials on major studio releases are well-produced, often superior to spots for the same product running on television.

The disapproval rate reflected in the new Nielsen study comes as a major reversal from a Nielsen study released in April. That survey showed that 95 percent of households renting the "A Fish Called Wanda" video watched the Schweppes commercial.

Some home video executives have predicted that more than half of all video releases will contain commercials in the near future.

Colleges In Antitrust Probe

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Several prestigious universities are being asked for documents as part of an antitrust investigation, the Justice Department says.

Daniel Steiner, general counsel at Harvard University, said the request was for documents dealing with "student financial aid, budgeting and other fees and salaries."

Justice Department spokesman David Runkel confirmed that document requests "have gone out to a number of colleges," but he declined to disclose the subjects of the request.

"Antitrust division investigations are not a matter of public record," he said.

"You can say this is in a preliminary stage," Runkel said, adding that the first requests were made "sometime earlier this summer, perhaps six weeks ago."

"Essentially, they've asked us to produce a lot of documents with regard to our budget, how we budget," Richard Mersereau, a spokesman for Brunswick, Maine's Bowdoin College, told The Associated Press. "It's an extensive amount of documentation, and we are complying."

Universities have shared financial information about students for years, even arranging to use copies of a single financial statement submitted by parents of applicants seeking scholarships and other aid.

There have been reports that major universities agree among themselves on the aid packages to be offered, generally mixtures of scholarships, loans and campus jobs. Such agreements, if they exist, would be of interest to the antitrust division, which enforces the legal ban against price-fixing by private commercial companies.

There are well-known aid agreements among universities, such as limits on athletic scholarships that members of the National Collegiate Athletic Association may offer. Members of the Ivy League have agreed not to offer athletic scholarships and to base offers of financial aid on student need.

Harvard's Steiner declined to say whether cooperating universities agree on aid packages to be offered to applicants.

The Washington Post said in today's editions the department's requests had gone to 20 institutions,

Quebec Woman Defies Court, Has An Abortion

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OTTAWA — A Quebec woman defied a court order obtained by her former boyfriend and had an abortion, but the Supreme Court voted unanimously to lift the restriction anyway.

The case of Chantal Daigle, 21, was the latest and most dramatic in a series this summer that brought attention to Canada's lack of a federal abortion law.

In ruling Tuesday, the Supreme Court said it would give its reasons later for lifting the injunction obtained July 7 by Ms. Daigle's ex-boyfriend, 25-year-old Jean-Guy Tremblay. Tremblay, a former nightclub bouncer, and Ms. Daigle briefly lived together in Montreal before breaking up.

The court's nine justices had returned from vacation for an emergency session in Ottawa Tuesday believing that Ms. Daigle was entering the 23rd week of pregnancy and could not wait much longer for the case to be resolved.

Her lawyer, Daniel Bedard, who evidently had been unaware that Ms. Daigle went ahead with the abortion, told the court about it in the middle of the session.

"The attorney general of Quebec informed me they suspected my client of having proceeded to have an abortion," Bedard said. "I have checked this and it is true."

Bedard did not say when or where his client had the abortion.

He apologized to the court but asked for the case to be heard because Ms. Daigle, a secretary, still could face contempt charges that carry a two-year prison term and $42,500 fine.

Tremblay also heard the news in court and told reporters: "She just killed my child. I don't know when — today or last week."

A spokesman for Quebec Justice Minister Gil Remillard said police called his office Tuesday with details of the abortion from an informer.

Remillard said there were "good reasons to believe that Madame Daigle had an abortion a week ago," but he declined to say where.

"I don't think it's opportune to talk about that," he said.

Most doctors in Quebec will not perform abortions after the 20th week. Abortions are performed in some parts of the United States until the 24th week and she hinted after an appeals court upheld the injunction on July 26 that she might cross the border for the procedure.

She said later, however, that she would abide by the Supreme Court's ruling.

In fighting the injunction, she said Tremblay had abused her, and one time threw her to the ground and told her he would "control and subdue" her.

One of her lawyers, Robert Decary, said the question of whether she still would be subject to contempt of court charges will not be answered until the Supreme Court gives its reasons for overturning the injunction.

About 350 anti-abortion demonstrators maintained a vigil outside the Supreme Court during the hearing.

"I am pretty appalled by the whole thing — that she went out and killed her baby," said Jim Hughes, president of the Campaign Life Coalition.

Judy Rebick, spokeswoman for the National Action Committee on the Status of Women, which supports the right to abortion, said: "Chantal has been through the most incredible pressure. She clearly wanted to obey the law."

"But I can't imagine what it must have been like to know that the clock was ticking in terms of the deadline on that abortion."

Clayton Ruby, a Toronto lawyer, said the ruling has likely put an end to the use of injunctions to prevent women from getting abortions in Quebec and perhaps other parts of Canada.

"No more injunctions in Quebec from vindictive boyfriends," said Ruby, represents the Canadian Abortion Rights Action League.

Canada has been without an abortion law since the Supreme Court ruled in January 1988 that the existing law's stringent requirements for approval of an abortion infringed on a woman's rights. The House of Commons failed to approve any of six proposed laws in July 1988.

The outcome was that abortion was left a matter between a woman and her doctor.

Last month, however, that premise was challenged by three provincial court cases, including Ms. Daigle's.

The Ontario Supreme Court threw out an injunction obtained by a man claiming a father's right, and the woman went ahead with the abortion. In Manitoba, a woman went ahead with the procedure after her former boyfriend failed to obtain an injunction.

Prime Minister Brian Mulroney has said Parliament will tackle the abortion issue this fall when it returns from its recess but will not be rushed into a decision.

The federal government argued before the Supreme Court that abortion is "within the exclusive legislative authority of the Parliament of Canada" and should not be a matter for provincial courts to decide.

The court ruling came in response to Quebec's Court of Appeal, which voted 3-2 to uphold an injunction issued by Quebec Superior Court.

The appeals court based its decision on the province's Charter of Human Rights. Justice Yves Bernier wrote in the majority position that "the child that has been conceived but not born is a reality that must be taken into account."

Teen Killed, Two Injured In Belfast Clash Tuesday

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — Young IRA supporters clashed with security forces on the anniversary of a defunct British policy of detaining people without trial, and a teen-ager was killed, police said. Two people were injured in related violence.

Police said more than 20 people were arrested during disturbances that occurred in Roman Catholic areas of west Belfast Tuesday night and continued early today.

British news reports said a 15-year-old boy died after being struck by a plastic bullet fired by security troops trying to control young IRA supporters throwing gasoline bombs and stones and burning British flags.

The Royal Ulster Constabulary, Northern Ireland's police force, would not comment on the incident.

"The death is being investigated," said a police spokesman, speaking anonymously in keeping with British custom.

Crowds threw stones and gasoline bombs at police, and lighted bonfires and burned British flags, police said. A number of vehicles, including buses and cars, were hijacked and set on fire.

On the northern outskirts of Belfast, gunmen burst into a home and injured a man and woman who had spotted them coming and barricaded themselves in a room, police said.

The gunmen tried to batter down the barricade but failed and then fired a number of shots through it, hitting both people. They were hospitalized and reported in "ill but stable" condition. No group claimed responsibility.

Rioting on the anniversary is an annual event although Britain abandoned the policy of detaining people without trial in 1975. The violence also occurred amid heightened tension over the 20th anniversary next week of the deployment of British troops in the province.

On Aug. 9, 1971, the British government introduced the policy for terrorist suspects in Northern Ireland. In pre-dawn raids that day, 342 people were arrested.

Britain abandoned the policy in December 1975 following worldwide condemnation. But Irish Republican Army supporters, who were the main targets, continue to mark the anniversary with violent anti-British rallies.

The mainly Catholic IRA is fighting British rule in Northern Ireland. It wants to unite the predominantly Protestant province with the Republic of Ireland, whose population is 95 percent Catholic.

Catholic civil rights demonstrations in 1968 created a violent Protestant reaction, leading to the arrival of British troops who soon found themselves fighting the IRA. In 1972, the government in London closed the local parliament and took over direct rule of the province.

Kaifu Declared Prime Minister

By Tetsou Jimbo
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TOKYO — Toshiki Kaifu was officially declared prime minister today despite the use of embarrassing delaying tactics by the new opposition upper house majority.

Kaifu, 58, became Japan's third prime minister in 10 weeks after sex and money scandals and a major loss in upper house elections forced his two predecessors to step down.

The lower house, where Kaifu's Liberal Democratic Party has a comfortable majority, selected Kaifu, while the upper house voted for Socialist Party Chairwoman Takako Doi.

Under the constitution, if representatives of the two houses cannot agree on a prime minister after discussions, the lower house decision prevails. This was the first time in 41 years that the two houses clashed over who should become head of government.

Hajime Tamura, speaker of the more powerful lower house, declared Kaifu prime minister in a brief announcement.

Kaifu had been elected Tuesday as the new president of the governing Liberal Democrats.

"I was watching the upper house session on television, and when the chairman called my name, the upper house winner in the prime minister's election, I was deeply moved and felt strong appreciation to the people who supported us to this day," Ms. Doi said after the balloting.

"Today, the door was only half opened, but I am determined to continue to work to fully open this door some day," she said. "Aug. 9 surely reflects the beginning of the end of the long rule by the LDP."

When Kaifu came to the Socialists' office on a courtesy call after being declared prime minister, Socialist Party General Secretary Tsuruo Yamaguchi gestured to Kaifu and

Ms. Doi and suggested "the prime minister of the upper house and the prime minister of the lower house shake hands" for photographers.

Yamaguchi said earlier Ms. Doi's upper house victory "proved we will be seeing a very unstable political situation" in coming months.

"For the first time in 41 years the wheels of history have shifted," he told The Associated Press. "Formally, the lower house choice prevails, but politically the upper house vote has proven that this administration is only half an administration, and Kaifu is only half a prime minister."

Kaifu termed the delay a "severe consequence of our election defeat."

Kaifu is succeeding Souseke Uno, who decided to step down after the Liberal Democrats for the first time in their 34-year history lost their majority in the upper house in elections July 23. The governing party still controls the lower house.

Earlier today, Uno's Cabinet resigned en masse, clearing the way for Kaifu to form a new government to try to win back the public approval that the Liberal Democrats have lost in a succession of scandals and unpopular policies.

Uno's government survived only 69 days after he replaced Noboru Takeshita, who resigned because of an influence-buying scandal that tainted most of the top figures in the conservative governing party.

Their ineligibility made it possible for Kaifu to vault into the party leadership even though he has little personal clout as a member of a minor party faction and has not served in top party or government offices that would have given him experience in foreign and financial matters.

"There are many difficulties awaiting the Liberal Democratic Party, and I will try to work hard and express my frank feelings to the people," Kaifu said today.

His wife, Sachiyo, said she was worried that Kaifu wouldn't find time to exercise in his new post. "I

The Associated Press

Toshiki Kaifu raises his hands in banzai cheers after election

really wish he could continue his morning jogging," she told reporters. "I think endurance is a very important aspect of leadership."

Kaifu brings a more youthful image to Japan's highest office and has credentials as a reformer. He was a member of the party's reform committee and an aide to the late Prime Minister Takeo Miki when Miki was trying to clean up Japanese politics in the 1970's.

Japanese newspapers gave mixed early notices to Kaifu's election. The liberal-leaning Asahi Shimbun said in an editorial that it hopes "he will not stumble badly" and it called on Kaifu "to work for genuine changes in his own party."

The conservative Yomiuri Shimbun's editorial applauded the debate that accompanied the election for party leader.

"After the Cabinet is formed, (Kaifu's) first task should be to carry out political reform to regain public trust. The very fact that Kaifu is not a faction leader demonstrates the acceptance of the need for reform," Yomiuri said.

Contras Will Close Honduran Bases

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras — Nicaraguan rebel leaders said Tuesday they will respect an accord by Central American presidents to close their bases in Honduras but may deploy at least half their guerrillas into Nicaragua rather than disarm.

The landmark agreement, signed Monday after a five-nation summit, was swallowed with bitter resignation by a Contra movement long dependent on U.S. assistance and Honduran sanctuary — and now on the verge of losing both by the end of the year.

But in separate interviews and public statements after the summit, seven Contra leaders said their armed struggle against the decade-old Sandinista revolution is not necessarily over.

"We are not going to oppose the will of the Honduran government if it no longer wants to be our host. But nobody can deny our right to exist as an armed nationalist movement trying to eradicate Marxism in Nicaragua," said Israel Galeano, the Contra army chief of staff known as Commander Franklin.

Some Contra commanders said they must pare down their idled army of about 11,000 fighters and learn to survive — as they did before U.S. aid began flowing in late 1981 — on weapons captured from the larger Sandinista army.

Contra foot soldiers returning to Nicaragua, they said, will join hundreds already inside the country in trying to avoid combat until after elections there Feb. 25, then will decide whether there is cause to resume offensive operations.

President Bush and rebel leaders had lobbied the leaders of Honduras, Guatemala, El Salvador and Costa Rica to keep the Contra army intact in its bases as a military threat that would ensure a fair election outcome.

But the U.S. allies accepted Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega's demand for a peace plan to "demobilize" the Honduran-based rebels by Dec. 5. They acted on the basis of a 40-point agreement on democratic guarantees achieved by the Sandinista leader in talks with civilian political opponents on the eve of the summit.

In Washington, the Bush administration contended that the December deadline is not binding and said it will resist any efforts to demobilize the Contras until the Sandinista government institutes democratic reforms. Nonetheless, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the United States is "generally supportive" of the Central American summit agreement.

Bosco Matamoros, the rebel spokesman in Washington, said the administration bungled the summit by "trying to impose a strategy within 24 hours." He added: "It was too late. The pressure backfired. Each country found reasons of short-term national interest to support this agreement."

Other Contra leaders said it is time to stop depending on their undependable allies in Washington.

"We now have a chance to prove that we are not an artificial creation of the United States," said Xavier Arguello, a political-military adviser to the rebel leadership.

Rebel commanders met Tuesday in Yamales, their main camp along the Nicaraguan border, to discuss the future.

Some urged holding off major troop infiltrations into Nicaragua until the arrival of an international verification team that will supervise talks between Contra and Sandinista leaders.

Some commanders want to use the talks to strengthen Ortega's commitments to the political parties as a basis for disarming. They said they might send an official mission to check political conditions in Nicaragua.

In a broadcast Tuesday on the rebels' Radio Liberacion, Enrique Bermudez, the Contra commander in chief, said: "We know that in Nicaragua no steps have been taken toward true democratization. We are going to demand that the Sandinistas comply with their promises."

Bomb On Bus Kills 12, Injures 35 In India

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHANDIGARH, India — A powerful bomb hidden in a plastic lunch box exploded today on a New Delhi-bound bus, killing 12 people and injuring 35 others, police said.

There were no immediate claims of responsibility for the bombing, which occurred in Haryana state near Karnal.

A Chandigarh police spokesman, Inspector Inder Mohan, said the dead included two children. Sixteen of the injured were in serious condition, he said.

The bomb exploded about 1 p.m. while the bus was passing the Karna Lake tourist resort outside Karnal, 75 miles north of New Delhi, Mohan said.

Karnal is midway between New Delhi and Chandigarh, capital of both Haryana and Punjab states.

The bus, operated by state-run Haryana Roadways, started its journey at the resort hill town of Kasauli in Himachal Pradesh state and stopped at Ambala, on the Punjab-Haryana border.

It was not immediately known how many people were on the bus, which normally carries at least 60 passengers.

In June 1988, Sikh extremists planted a bomb that killed 18 people on a bus near the Haryana town of Kurukshetra.

Sikh militants have waged a deadly campaign since 1982 for a separate state in Punjab and periodically launch attacks in neighboring states and New Delhi.

At least 1,116 people have been killed by Sikh radicals in Punjab so far this year, according to police reports.

Sikh gunmen killed six people

Jammu-Kashmir state, like Himachal Pradesh and Haryana, borders Punjab.

Sikhs, who make up 2 percent of India's 880 million people but have a slight majority in Punjab, say they have been discriminated against by the nation's 82 percent Hindu majority.

Soviet Union Moving Troops And Equipment From Eastern Europe

By Molly Moore
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union, in the midst of a promised unilateral reduction of military forces in Eastern Europe, is transferring some soldiers and equipment from disbanded divisions to other units in the region, Soviet military officials disclosed Tuesday.

Members of a U.S. congressional delegation visiting here said they were surprised by the information, which they said suggests that Soviet military capabilities may not drop as much as foreseen by U.S. intelligence analysts after Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev announced the reduction last December.

This interpretation was challenged by Marshal Sergei Akhromeyev, a military adviser to Gorbachev and former armed forces chief of staff, who said the shuffling of troops and equipment is part of a restructuring effort to make Soviet forces in the region more "defensive" rather than "offensive."

"This is not exactly what we thought was happening," said House Armed Services Committee Chairman Les Aspin, D-Wis., in a meeting Tuesday between members of the congressional panel and its rough Soviet equivalent, a new defense committee of the revamped Supreme Soviet. "What does it mean and why didn't everybody say this in the beginning?"

Sergei Rogov, deputy chairman of a Soviet citizens' panel established to monitor the troop withdrawals from Eastern Europe, said the group raised similar questions during a visit to Soviet units in East Germany.

U.S. delegates said they heard nothing that called into question Gorbachev's general pledge to pull a total of 240,000 Soviet troops out of Eastern Europe, as well as 10,000 tanks and 8,500 artillery, for demobilizing. But U.S. officials interpreted Gorbachev's announced withdrawals last year to mean that the entire tank divisions, with all their equipment and troops, would be demobilized.

Rogov told the delegation, which includes representatives of the Central Intelligence Agency, Joint Chiefs of Staff, and several Pentagon contractors, that several months into the withdrawal process — which is expected to be completed by the end of 1990 — the Soviet Union has pulled back 31,800 of the 500,000 troops scheduled for withdrawal.

About one-third of those reductions are troops that were based in East Germany, said Rogov, and about 2,000 of a planned 5,000 tanks have been removed from East Germany.

The Soviet news agency Tass quoted Akhromeyev as telling the senators that "if an understanding is reached on cutting conventional forces and weapons in Europe, and a Soviet-American treaty on reduction of strategic offensive weapons is signed, the U.S.S.R. intends to halve its military expenditures by 1995."

The Soviet statements came a day after the congressional delegator stood on a scorched training field at Wuensdorf, East Germany, watching camouflaged Soviet infantry troops fire a barrage of artillery at a horizon ablaze with demolished target tanks.

The delegation had assumed that the troops engaged in the demonstration were among those to be withdrawn with six tank divisions now in East Germany.

WASHINGTON — The recent turmoil and violent repression in Beijing have interrupted China's drive for economic reform and damaged its overseas economic ties and could dim its long-term economic prospects, the Central Intelligence Agency said in a report issued Tuesday.

The CIA's annual public report on the Chinese economy, released by the congressional Joint Economic Committee, took a notably pessimistic view of China's near-term prospects in the wake of the Tiananmen Square crackdown.

"The unrest has weakened Beijing's ability to solve the country's economic problems," said the report, which analyzed the situation there as of Aug. 1.

"The preoccupation of China's leaders with consolidating power, restoring ideological orthodoxy and maintaining social order will probably prevent them from formulating new solutions to the country's economic problems."

"Consequently, China's reform program is likely to be bogged down for the next few years. Indeed, key market reforms like price decontrol and bankruptcy — which Beijing put on hold in the fall of 1988 when it began implementing an austerity program — will be postponed indefinitely."

China's move to obtain overseas financing and technology may also be set back by the crackdown, the report said. The CIA estimated a loss of almost $1 billion in tourist revenues this year alone and said new foreign investment has slowed and export earnings have dropped after four years of rapid growth.

Moreover, billions of dollars of low-interest loans from the World Bank and other international financial institutions have been placed on hold, the report said.

While Beijing can weather temporary reverses in tourism and exports, according to the CIA, "the downturn in China's international economic relations may dim China's long-term economic prospects."

Sen. Jeff Bingaman, D-N.M., chairman of the subcommittee that released the report, said "the clock is turning backwards for the Chinese economy. A decade of economic reform may have effectively come to a standstill with the crackdown on Tiananmen Square."

The CIA report said that after a decade of declining influence, China's military leaders are likely to press for higher defense spending. In return for their support in the recent crackdown, the report said, military leaders "probably will play a larger role in politics and in the economy."

China has cut its armed forces by about 3 million men since 1978 and reduced defense spending to about 4 percent of gross national product last year from about 10 percent, the report said. The CIA compared this with U.S. military spending of about 6 percent of GNP and Soviet spending of 15 to 17 percent of GNP.

One of China's central problems is its rapid economic growth, which was hailed at the time of last year's CIA report as "impressive" and "almost without parallel in recent times" by then-Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., who was chairman of the subcommittee. China's GNP increase in 1987, adjusted for inflation, was reported to be 9.4 percent.

In 1988 Chinese economic growth was even stronger, with GNP increasing 11 percent, according to the CIA report, and a surge in industrial output of nearly 21 percent, nearly three times the target rate.

This rapid growth was not hailed, however, but described as contributing to an "overheated" economy that developed chronic shortages and pushed inflation to its highest level in nearly 40 years, 19 percent for China as a whole and almost 30 percent in urban areas.

Bodies Recovered

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (AP) — Search teams on Wednesday recovered six bodies from the wreckage of a sightseeing plane that crashed in the Southern Alps with nine American and Canadian tourists aboard, police reported.

They said there were no survivors. A New Zealander was piloting the twin-engine Britten Norman Islander that went down Tuesday near Mount Aspiring on South Island.

A police spokesman in Dunedin said the bodies had not been identified and he gave no indication when identities of the victims would be released.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market kept climbing today, extending its recent advance fueled by airline takeover news.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 6.07 to 2,705.24 in the first half hour of trading, nearing the record closing high of 2,722.42 set on Aug. 25, 1987.

Gainers slightly outnumbered losers in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 525 up, 428 down and 577 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 30.14 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

The boom in airline stocks sent the Dow Jones average of 20 transportation stocks surging ahead 35.91 points, or 2.65 percent, to 1,391.71.

UAL jumped 19 1/2 to 238 1/2 on reports that investor Marvin Davis was contemplating a price of $240 a share in his bid to acquire the company.

Intense takeover speculation continued in other airline issues. AMR gained 2 3/8 to 76 1/2, and Pan Am rose 1/2 to 4 3/8.

Otherwise, brokers said the Dow's rise through the 2,700 level heightened anticipation of an impending move by the average to new highs.

Most other, broader measures of stock price trends have already surpassed their 1987 peaks this summer.

Gtech Corp., traded in the over-the-counter market, rose 1 to 16 1/4. The company said it agreed to be bought out for $16.625 a share by an investor group included members of its management.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained .28 to 194.51. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .70 to 381.66.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 4.18 to 2,699.17.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 8 to 7 on the NYSE, with 826 up, 695 down and 477 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 200.34 million shares, against 169.75 million in the previous session.

Bankruptcy Filed

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Walsh Corp., Charlotte's leading apartment builder in the early 1980s, has sought protection from creditors under federal bankruptcy laws.

Developer Steve Walsh, one of four co-chairmen of Sen. Jesse Helms' state campaign committee, made it clear Tuesday that the bankruptcy petition was for his company and not himself.

"Because of delays in projects, immediate financial obligations and pending litigations, it is appropriate for the Walsh Corp. to file for relief under reorganizations proceedings," he said. "The provisions permit the corporation to renew its options and to plan in the context of present circumstances."

Dortch Pleads Guilty, May Testify Against Bakker

10 years in prison and a $500,000 fine. Prosecutors agreed to ask the presiding judge at sentencing to dismiss the remaining 20 charges against Dortch in the indictment.

The agreement also specifies that Dortch could be asked to make restitution.

Dortch pleaded guilty to Potter with family members present.

To each question Potter posed, Dortch nodded vigorously, saying in a low voice, "Yes, your honor" or "No, your honor." The Charlotte Observer reported.

Potter asked Dortch, "Are you in fact guilty of the crimes charged?"

Dortch replied: "In the last few years, I have had a lot of time for reflection, and I am not proud of myself. And I plead guilty."

His voice quavered. Potter: "You want this court to accept your plea of guilty?"

Dortch: "Yes, your honor."

Asked for a statement as he left the courtroom, Dortch seemed to bite his lips and shook his head.

The case stemmed from a 16-month federal grand jury investigation into the televangelism empire under Bakker's leadership.

prospects for a swift resolution, he said.

An administration official, who said he was unaware of Iran's message to Hezbollah, said it tends to support the White House's belief that there will be no quick results.

"We're talking weeks and weeks, and months and months, not tomorrow," he said.

Also in question is the degree of authority Rafsanjani has over the factions holding hostages. Last week, for example, his foreign office sought to dissuade the captors of Marine Lt. Col. William R. Higgins from executing him if Obeid was not returned by a deadline the group had set. They allegedly responded that they could not back off from the time table because they would "lose face."

tual certainty" of her husband's death. She also noted calls she had received from Bush in recent days.

"I am also mindful of the fact that our president has agonized in a very profound and personal manner over my husband's fate," she said. "He has my prayers and my support as he tries to save the living and end the suffering."

Higgins, commander of a U.N. peacekeeping force, was one of nine Americans held hostage in Lebanon. He had been abducted by Lebanese terrorists in February 1988.

"To those who would suggest that our concern for Rich should somehow be mitigated because he was in a dangerous business ... Rich himself would have the appropriate response," she said, adding: "Now is not the time for anger and bitterness, for recrimination and blame. ... Now is the time to tell Rich Higgins that we love him and we miss him."

Mrs. Higgins is on leave from her job as a public relations officer in the Pentagon.

A terrorist group that released the videotape said Higgins was hanged last Monday in retaliation for Israel's kidnapping of Sheik Abdul Karim Obeid, a Moslem cleric.

The FBI analysis suggested that Higgins was killed in some other manner before the videotape was made, according to an administration official who declined to be named publicly.

The FBI refused to comment on why it offered no information on the time and cause of death. But the source said the FBI experts could not fix a time of death by viewing the videotape.

The bureau's forensic experts used photographic enhancement, a technique frequently used to compare a suspect's mug shot with the grainy, blurry pictures taken during holdups by bank surveillance cameras.

By matching known physical characteristics with that depicted in a photograph, FBI experts can make an identification with some degree of certainty. Pathologists also can spot evidence of death.

But without fingerprints, the FBI cannot make a positive identification.

Higgins, who commanded the United Nations peacekeeping force, was kidnapped near Tyre in south Lebanon on Feb. 17, 1988.

Bush paid tribute to Higgins during a ceremony at nearby Ft. Myer, Va., to celebrate the 200th anniversary of the War Department, forrunner of the Department of Defense.

In an emotion-filled voice, Bush said, "We cannot leave here today without pausing to salute one who stands as the symbol of the courage that burns in the breast of every American in uniform, one Marine who has been very much in our thoughts, Lt. Col. Higgins, William Richard Higgins."

The videotape released last week in Beirut depicted a bound and gagged man hanging from a rope around his neck.

The terrorist group that released the tape said Higgins was hanged last Monday in retaliation for Israel's kidnapping of Sheik Abdul Karim Obeid, a Moslem cleric.

Israeli government officials have said their sources indicated Higgins had been killed some time ago. Higgins was the target of past death threats by the terrorists, who called him a spy.

Fitzwater, meanwhile, said the president was "cautiously optimistic" about diplomatic efforts to free eight other Americans being held in Lebanon as well as a half-dozen other Westerners.

He said the White House was "monitoring and watching" the situation and added that efforts will probably take "a longer period of time rather than shorter."

Youth Charged

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A 16-year-old Charlotte youth is being held without bond after being charged in two drug-related slayings, police say.

Alphonso L. Johnson is charged in the March 29 death of Payton Robinson, 20, and the April 29 death of Timothy Wright, 23.

Johnson was arrested in Maryland last month and returned to Charlotte to face the murder charges.

At the New Independent Warehouse, for example, Allen estimated that "65 percent" of the tobacco being sold Tuesday was from the 1988 crop. "Their average was $168.98 per hundred because there was a lot of old tobacco."

But Allen said at another facility

Allen said the new crop tobacco offered for sale on Tuesday seemed to be "good quality" and he said farmers seemed pleased with the prices they were receiving for their crop. "I didn't see a single pile being rejected yesterday," Allen said, adding that "none went to Stabiliza-

Norman Ready For PGA

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HAWTHORN WOODS, Ill. — Greg Norman carries a sense of accomplishment, rather than disappointment, into the 71st PGA National Championship.

"I'm very proud of what I did. In the last round of the British Open, I fought my way back into it," Norman said. "Not many guys can fight their way back after being seven shots behind like I did. I'm disappointed with the outcome, of course, but I'm proud of what I did."

Norman was seven shots off the lead going into the final round of the British Open, but birdied the first six holes on the way to a 64 that forced a playoff with eventual champion Mark Calcavecchia and Wayne Grady.

It is the memory of that 64 that Norman will take into the PGA, the last of the year's Big Four golf events.

"That's the last thing I did," said Norman, who hasn't played since the British Open.

"I've still got all those great things, all those things from the 64, in my system," Norman said Tuesday after a practice round for the event that begins Thursday on the Kemper Lakes Golf Club in the northern suburbs of Chicago.

Norman, who has an unfortunate habit of losing golf's major titles in dramatic fashion, said he was very optimistic about his chances in this one.

"I like the golf course. The golf course sets up well for me," he said. "I'm playing extremely well. I'm putting well. My confidence is good. I feel very relaxed. I'm looking forward to the week."

He said the disappointment of the British Open playoff loss did not compare with some of his earlier frustrations, such as a playoff loss to Fuzzy Zoeller in the 1984 U.S. Open.

Larry Mize's playoff pitch-in to win the 1987 Masters, Bob Tway's 72nd hole birdie-from-a-bunker in the 1986 PGA, Norman's last-hole bogey that ended his bid in the 1986 Masters.

"It's unfortunate that I haven't won a few more majors. But it's also fortunate that I have won one," the 1986 British Open champion said.

"The British Open this year doesn't compare with some of the others. Other things were going on in my life then.

"Now, I've got my life back on an even keel. I'm back on the right wavelength. I'm comfortable with

Cubs Showing Flashes Of 1984 Champion Club

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — There are, in some respects, similarities between these upstart Chicago Cubs of 1989 and the 1984 Cubs who won the National League East.

Both teams were horrendous in spring training and both came out of Arizona without proven players in left field and center field.

In 1984, then-General Manager Dallas Green swapped outfielder Mike Diaz and relief pitcher Bill Campbell to Philadelphia for outfielders Gary Matthews and Bob Dernier.

Dernier took over center and Matthews went to left and gave the Cubs an immediate spark.

So much so that when it appeared the Cubs had a chance to win in mid-June, Green traded future outfielders Joe Carter and Mel Hall to Cleveland for pitcher Rick Sutcliffe, who went on to win the National League Cy Young Award.

When the present Cubs went to spring training, they had already traded away left fielder Rafael Palmeiro to Texas to bolster a sad and weak bullpen. They acquired pitchers Mitch Williams, Steve Wilson and Paul Kilgus and infielder Curt Wilkerson.

"I had no idea who would play left or center," Manager Don Zimmer said. "I figured somebody would."

Zimmer gave the job in center to Jerome Walton, a rookie who had not played beyond AA ball. He gave the job in left to Dwight Smith, also a rookie without an inning in the big leagues.

To everyone's surprise, Walton made the grade but Smith was such a flop that he did not even come North with the team and was shipped to Iowa.

"I gave him every chance but he couldn't do anything," Zimmer said of Smith.

The Cubs opened with Mitch Webster in left in an outfield that also included Walton and Andre Dawson.

Within a five-day period in early May, Webster, Walton and Dawson all went on the disabled list with injuries.

The Cubs brought up Lloyd McClendon, Doug Dasencio and Smith from Iowa.

"One day I looked up and saw McClendon, Dasencio and Smith instead of Webster, Walton and Dawson. I said 'What happened?' What happened was one guy (McClendon) hit .340 and the other guy (Smith) hit .360."

The team caught fire. McClendon and Smith provided power and Dasencio played defense brilliantly.

Walton and Dawson are back and McClendon and Smith share left field, with Smith getting added playing time because of Dawson's need for periodic rest for his aching knees.

In 1984, second baseman Ryne Sandberg was the National League's Most Valuable Player, in addition to Sutcliffe winning the Cy Young.

"This team doesn't have individual stars," Zimmer said. "No Cy Youngs, no MVPs. Everybody has contributed."

Pinned down as to what single factor has led to the team's success, Zimmer said, "It's an unfair question but I'd have to say the trade with Texas. It built our bullpen. After that, I wouldn't know where to begin."

While there are no MVP candidates like Sandberg in 1984 or Dawson in 1987 when he hit 47 home runs and drove in 137 runs, and no Cy Young favorite, the Cubs figure to have a shot at the Rookie of the Year award.

"Yes, I would say we have a chance for that award," Zimmer said.

It could be Walton or Smith. Walton appears to have the edge because of his consistency and the fact he plays regularly. He has kept his average around .300.

Smith, having missed time while at Iowa and not playing as often, has batted well over .300 and has more home runs and runs batted in than Walton.

"He just keeps getting hits and doesn't show any signs of going into a slump," Zimmer said of Walton. "He's been as consistent as anyone on the team. Even Mark Grace has been up and down, but this kid just keeps going."

Zimmer refuses to rate his club player-for-player with the other contenders but said the Cubs match up with any team in the league up the middle with Damon Berryhill behind the plate, Shawon Dunston at short, Sandberg at second and Walton in center.

"I don't know how Dunston could play any better than he has the last five weeks," Zimmer said. "He has a flare. When he's going bad, people want to shoot him. When he's going good, they love him."

Gooden To Retire After 6 More Years

NEW YORK — Dwight Gooden of the New York Mets wants to pitch until he's 30 — six seasons from now — and retire from baseball, according to a published report.

"Right now, I plan on getting out by the time I'm 30," the New York Post quoted Gooden as saying in today's editions. "I'm serious. I've talked about this with my wife and my sister."

Gooden

The desire to spend more time with his family, prompted the 1985 National League Cy Young Award winner's thoughts of leaving.

"I started thinking about it over the winter," Gooden said. "I was spending time with my son, Dwight Jr. (3-years-old), down in Florida where he lives with his mother. One day, he looked up at me and asked, 'When are you going back to play ball?'"

"He knew it was about time to go back for spring training and that I wouldn't be there and it made me sad. Your whole life is baseball for eight months a year and you're away from your family. I don't want that to happen, turn around and see my kids grown up and think it's too late."

Gooden has been on the disabled list since July 2 with a slight muscle tear under his right shoulder, and realizes it might be the inactivity which has influenced his thoughts.

"Maybe that's why I feel this way right now, that I'll get out by the time I'm 30," he said. "When that time comes, it'll probably be tough to hang up the spikes. Maybe I'll say, 'Hey, I'll play one more year,' and then the next year do the same thing."

Gooden, 9-4 this season, has a 100-39 record since joining the Mets as a 19-year-old in 1984. He went 17-9 that year, striking out 276 batters, earning the nickname "Dr. K," and winning NL Rookie of the Year honors.

In 1985, Gooden went 24-4 with a 1.53 earned run average. In 1986, when the Mets won the World Series, he was 17-6.

Gooden said that upon retirement, he wants to customize cars as a profession, something he has done since he was a teenager in Tampa, Fla.

Atlanta Heats Up Pursuit Of Olympics

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA (AP) — Efforts to bring the 1996 Summer Olympics to Atlanta will intensify over the next few weeks as the competition among six international cities to land the Games enters its final year.

Members of the International Olympic Committee will visit Atlanta next month, giving city officials a chance to show off the town to the people who will choose the 1996 host. The IOC delegation also will get a look at a slick film produced by the Atlanta Organizing Committee to tout the city's ability to be host to the Games.

Also later this month, the AOC will be host to a 10-day international aquatic festival at Emory University in an effort to showcase amateur athletics in the city.

Officials of the AOC outlined their latest plans Tuesday during a meeting with reporters. Billy Payne, president of the Atlanta committee, acknowledged the city is an underdog, but he maintained the effort, now more than 2½ years old, is gaining momentum.

"We think over the last six months that Atlanta has had the greatest momentum of any of the candidate cities," Payne said. "In certain respects, that may be because we had the furthest to go."

The IOC will select the 1996 host city in September 1990. Athens, Greece, the site of the first modern Olympics in 1889, is considered the favorite.

Payne said efforts to sell Atlanta will not include attacks on Athens.

"Athens, based on their capability of staging the Games, will win or not win," he said. "We are not critical of Athens, ever. We are not disrespectful of the very important sentimental reasons associated with an Athens Olympics Games, yet we believe that we can do it better in Atlanta, Georgia."

Payne and other AOC members have said the greatest strengths of Atlanta's bid include the city's huge airport, rapid transit system, hotel space and telecommunications capabilities.

Mayor Andrew Young said Atlantans who doubt the city's ability may be taking such attributes for granted.

"We don't perceive ourselves as being as ready as we are," Young said.

Among the city's greatest needs are additional sports facilities, including a track and field stadium. The AOC has proposed about $400 million of new facilities to be built with funding to be available if Atlanta is selected host city.

Valvano Says No Extra Salary For AD Role

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — North Carolina State head basketball coach Jim Valvano says he does not get any extra pay for his work as athletic director at the school and he says he does not expect any.

"I have no contract as an athletic director. I never received salary as it, and I did because it was something I felt the department asked of me and one that I felt I would like to serve," Valvano said.

Valvano receives $100,035 as basketball coach.

"At no time did I ever think of this as getting another salary," Valvano said in an interview outside his offices on the N.C. State campus late Tuesday evening. "It really never came into discussion. I just assumed I would get the salary I was making and whatever raise was coming at the time, and that in fact is what happened."

In 1986, Valvano added the role of athletic director to his current basketball duties. In documents obtained by The Associated Press, it was stated that Valvano's salary as athletic director would be $85,000. A letter addressed to him from N.C. State Chancellor Bruce Poulton said he would serve as athletic director in addition to his duties as basketball coach.

His current contract lists him solely as basketball coach. Valvano's role as athletic director also calls for him to serve as director of Reynolds Coliseum, which is home for Wolfpack basketball.

Valvano said he thought the basketball salary three years ago might have been a little greater than the athletic director's position.

N.C. State counsel Becky French said in a telephone interview that Valvano has always received one salary.

"When he was appointed, that was the salary he will be paid for all three jobs," Mrs. French said.

Three factors determine what Valvano's salary will be — the recommendation of Poulton, the General Assembly and the UNC Board of Governors, according to Mrs. French.

"He will be eligible for an increase on July 1. Since the legislature is still in session, the raises will be retroactive to July 1," she said. "They may be as late as September since the legislature has not finalized what the raises will be."

The board of governors sets the pay standards for UNC employees.

"The board of governors gives us instructions on whether there will be a merit increase or it will be across the board," she said.

Any pay raise for Valvano would come at the suggestion of Poulton, then passed on to the provost and eventually to the N.C. State board of trustees for final approval, Mrs. French said.

Rose Lawyers Appeal For Return To Ohio State Court

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — Lawyers for Pete Rose have asked a federal appeals court to send his lawsuit against baseball Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti back into Ohio state court, where Rose has already won a favorable ruling.

Rose's lawyers asked on Tuesday that the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reverse a July 31 decision by U.S. District Judge John Holschuh of Columbus, Ohio, who ruled that Rose's lawsuit should remain before Holschuh in federal court. Rose, the Cincinnati Reds manager, is challenging Giamatti's authority to conduct a hearing and discipline Rose on allegations that he gambled on baseball games, including those involving the Reds.

Under baseball's rules, Rose could be suspended for a year if he is found to have bet on baseball. He could be suspended for life if it is determined he bet on games involving the Reds.

Lawyers for Rose and Giamatti asked the appellate court on Tuesday to speed up its handling of Rose's appeal, rather than let it languish for weeks or months as with some other federal appeals cases. The court did not immediately act on the request.

Rose, in a separate issue, asked Holschuh on Monday to issue an order preventing Giamatti from conducting an Aug. 17 disciplinary hearing for Rose in New York City. Giamatti wants to investigate Rose's admissions, reported in an interview with The Washington Post published July 30, that he has bet on football with illegal bookmakers.

Holschuh has issued an order that protects Rose through Aug. 14 from disciplinary action by Giamatti. Rose's lawyers want Holschuh to extend that order for the duration of the court appeal. Holschuh has not ruled.

On June 25, Hamilton County

Common Pleas Judge Norbert Nadel in Cincinnati upheld Rose's argument that Giamatti had expressed bias in the case and appeared to have prejudged Rose. Giamatti had signed a letter to a federal judge asking leniency in sentencing for Ronald Peters, a former Franklin, Ohio, restaurateur who was a principal Rose accuser and said he had handled bets for Rose. Rose's lawyers argued that Giamatti's letter indicated the commissioner was biased against Rose, a claim the commissioner says is untrue.

Nadel granted Rose a temporary restraining order preventing Giamatti from conducting a hearing, or from disciplining Rose. Baseball's lawyers then got the case transferred into federal court over the objections of Rose's lawyers, who say it belongs in state court.

Federal courts have previously upheld the commissioner's governing powers in baseball against challenges by team owners Ted Turner and Charles Finley.

In the appeal filed Tuesday, Rose's lawyers argued it is critical that Rose be protected from possible punishment while judges decide whether his lawsuit belongs in federal or state court.

ECU Adds 22 Walkons For Practice

East Carolina football coach Bill Lewis welcomed 45 incoming freshmen and junior college transfers, including 22 walkons, to campus Tuesday. "This is a day that I think we (the coaching staff) have been waiting for a long time," Lewis, who is in his first year with the Pirates, said. "One of the things that coaches get excited for the most is on-the-field coaching, and that will be here in a few days."

The newcomers will undergo physical examinations today and have meetings tonight. The first practice session for the freshmen will be Thursday at 3:30 p.m.

Of the 23 players ECU signed to letters of intent in February, three will not play for the Pirates this year.

Rodney Jones, a tight end from Fayetteville did not meet the minimum NCAA academic requirements and will enroll at North Greenville (S.C.) Junior College.

Running back Tim Moore of Greenville Rose, signed a professional baseball contract with the Minnesota Twins in June and is playing with the Twins' Gulf Coast League affiliate in the Rookie League.

The third is linebacker Jeff Cooke of Sanford. Cooke injured his knee in the McDonald's East-West All-Star game in Greensboro two weeks ago and underwent surgery to repair the damage today.

Rose Volleyball Practice Opens Aug. 14

Carson-Newman Is Top Pick Again

CLINTON, S.C. (AP) — Carson-Newman, the defending NAIA national football champion, was overwhelmingly picked to win the South Atlantic Conference in media and coaches' polls released Tuesday.

The Eagles, who finished in a three-way tie for the conference title last year, were the first-place pick of 13 of 14 media representatives polled and all eight of the conference's head football coaches. Coach Ken Sparks' team went 12-2 in 1988.

Catawba, 8-4 and a first-round loser in the NAIA playoffs, was the second pick in both polls. Lenoir-Rhyne and Gardner-Webb both received 43 points in coaches' balloting, while the Bears were selected third and Gardner-Webb fourth in the media poll.

Duran Already Spending His Money

MIAMI (AP) — Roberto Duran already has spent almost one-fifth of the $8 million he is guaranteed for fighting Sugar Ray Leonard a third time. The money is going to the Internal Revenue Service to right an IRS error.

Duran has agreed to send a check for $1.5 million to the tax people three days after the scheduled Dec. 7 fight.

The World Boxing Council's middleweight champion, who has a house in the Miami area, reached the agreement with the IRS in a settlement signed Monday by U.S. District Judge Stanley Marcus.

Other provisions of the settlement prevent the Panamanian native with "hands of stone" from leaving the country without notice, bar him from selling assets or transferring funds, require him to pay the IRS half of all earnings before the fight and require an itemized statement on the source of all income.

Duran's tax debt was caused by a big IRS mixup.

Duran, 38, expected a $60,000 refund on his 1983-84 taxes, but the IRS sent him two checks for $1.6 million and has been trying to get the excess back ever since the agency realized its mistake.

But the boxer only had $1,000 in a bank account by that time — after paying off a $1 million mortgage in his native Panama, spending $23,000 on jewelry, paying his living expenses in Miami and supporting his wife, six children and seven brothers.

Leonard, 33, came to the financial rescue, arranging another match with Duran, this one in Las Vegas.

Golf Seeking An Olympic Return

LONDON (AP) — Golf, dropped from the Olympics after only one competitor showed up in 1908, will seek to return as a demonstration sport in the 1992 Summer Games in Barcelona, officials said Tuesday.

The World Golf Association, formed to allow the reintroduction of golf to the Olympics, said it would like golf to be a medal sport by 1996.

An application was made in February to include golf as a demonstration sport at the 1992 Summer Games in Barcelona, Spain, but Olympic rules stipulate a sport must have an international governing body.

Cribbs Retires After No Offers

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Joe Cribbs, who rushed for almost 8,000 yards in 10 professional seasons, announced his retirement after he was unable to work out a deal with any NFL team.

The 5-foot-11, 195-pound running back played for Buffalo, San Francisco, Indianapolis and Miami of the NFL and spent two years with Birmingham of the defunct United States Football League.

Cribbs, the third-leading ground-gainer in Auburn history, rushed 1,863 times in his pro career for 7,870 yards, a 4.2 average. He scored 63 touchdowns via either a run or pass.

Two Purdue Players Off The Team

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Purdue football coach Fred Akers says two players suspended after their weekend arrests will remain off the team until they clear their names of all charges.

Otis K. Robinson, 19, a recruit not yet enrolled at Purdue, was charged in Tippecanoe County Court with rape and criminal deviate conduct and ordered held on $25,000 bond.

Sophomore cornerback Tony M. Brown, arrested on suspicion of battery, theft and trespass, was free on $5,000 bond.

Schuler: Soviet Will Not Fail

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HENNIKER, N.H. — Golden State Warriors assistant Mike Schuler has been around the NBA enough to know talent when he sees it. And he says former Soviet star Sarunas Marciulionis is a can't-miss rookie.

"This kid will not fail," said Schuler, who coached the Portland Trail Blazers for three years. "I think he'll be a heck of a player."

Marciulionis, from Lithuania, is the most developed non-American player in the world, according to some scouts.

He was the first Soviet basketball player to sign with an NBA team when he agreed to a contract with Golden State in June and is expected to have an immediate impact on the team.

Marciulionis, 25, says he is excited about playing against the likes of Larry Bird, Michael Jordan, and Magic Johnson, but that the reality of his new career hasn't sunk in yet.

"It's still difficult for me to accept," Marciulionis said through an interpreter Tuesday.

A year ago, Marciulionis was on the Soviet national team preparing for the Olympics at Seoul, South Korea. Many Americans caught their first glimpse of him when he scored 19 points, including three 3-point shots, to lead the Soviets over the United States 82-78 in the Olympic semifinals.

Beating the United States and winning the gold medal was the highlight of his amateur career, he said.

But that was one year and thousands of miles ago. This week, he is in New Hampshire for the Warriors' summer camp at tiny New England College, where he is getting his first taste of pro ball.

He looks no different than any of the 15 or so free agents, rookies and roster players at the camp, and that may be his strongest suit, Schuler said. Marciulionis has fit in quickly and has picked up many nuances of the American game.

"He's had three excellent workouts," Schuler said. "He has a great ability to catch onto things."

Schuler said Marciulionis, who speaks little English, has "great ability to recognize and relate to things on the court without being told what to do."

Marciulionis has been compared to teammate Chris Mullin. Both have a soft left-handed shot, the ability to bring the ball up the floor and to score from inside and outside.

Although he's only had a couple of days of practice, Marciulionis has noticed the difference between the physical and fast-paced American game and the deliberate, finesse game he played in Europe. He likes the new game.

"That's how I play. I like the contact," he said. "I like it when there's lots of meat."

It was Marciulionis' toughness, along with a feathery shot, court sense and passing ability, that attracted NBA scouts.

"One of the best things he's got going for him is his aggressive nature," Schuler said. "There's no way he'll be intimidated."

Schuler said the 6-foot-5, 200-pounder has a terrific "professional body" and will contribute immediately to the team.

But besides learning the intricacies of the NBA, Marciulionis, who is married and has one child, must acclimate himself to a new country and language and deal with the media onslaught he has faced since signing in June. He might be finding in his media relations by the journalism degree he earned at Vilnius State University in Lithuania.

"I am trying to make an effort not to be conscious of the pressure," he said. "But I feel it."

Schuler said the Warriors will try to shelter him until he becomes more comfortable. "We can't let him put too much pressure on himself," he said.

Coach Don Nelson has said he expects to play Marciulionis about 30 minutes a game and will use the Soviet at both guard positions, as well as small forward.

Marciulionis said he hopes if he does well, it will encourage other players in Lithuania, the Soviet basketball mecca, to shoot for a career in the NBA.

Regional Bid Ends For Coastal Plain

MARIETTA, Ga. — Eastern North Carolina champion Coastal Plain bowed out of the Senior Babe Ruth Southeastern Regional baseball tournament with a 4-2 loss to Tennessee Tuesday in Marietta, Ga.

Coastal Plain posted a 2-2 mark in the 11-team, double-elimination tournament, picking up wins over Western North Carolina and South Carolina after dropping a one-run decision to Georgia in its opener. Georgia, Tennessee, Florida and defending national champion East Cobb County (Ga.) were left to battle for a berth in the Babe Ruth World Series in Owensboro, Ky.

"It was really fun and good for the kids," Coastal Plain head coach Ted Curtis said. "After we lost the first game of the (Eastern North Carolina) state tournament, nobody gave us much of a chance. When we got down there we were real apprehensive about if we would be competitive at the regional level because there are a whole lot of good ball players."

"We had Georgia beat in the first game but we let it get away. We just didn't execute in the field."

Tennessee scored three unearned runs en route to ousting Coastal Plain. Bronson Heslin went the distance for the winners, allowing eight hits while walking two and fanning four.

Tennessee picked up a run in the first on a hit batsman, a stolen base, an infield error and a RBI single by Brent Lawrence after a double steal failed.

Coastal Plain missed a scoring opportunity in the first when Craig Willoughby laced a leadoff single but was nailed at second on a misfired hit-and-run play. Franz Holscher then followed with a double.

In the second, however, Coastal Plain forged a 1-1 tie on a single by Randy House, a passed ball, a walk to Paul Powers, another passed ball and an infield grounder by Joe DeLoach.

Tennessee answered with three runs in the third with the aid of a costly Coastal Plain error. David Henry and Lawrence started the inning with back-to-back singles and Brandon Miller delivered a sacrifice fly. After a strikeout Brian Hancock drew a walk. A pick-off throw started a run-down between first and second but Miller broke from third and got hung up in a run-down.

However, an errant throw allowed him to score. Lou Warner then followed with a run-scoring single.

Coastal Plain brought the potential winning run to the plate in the seventh but Roosevelt Hines' hard shot to second was fielded. DeLoach reached on an error to start the inning and Jay Tripp followed with a double to left. A bouncer to the mound and a grounder to short produced one run before Holscher walked, putting runners at the corners with two outs for Hines.

Powers absorbed the loss despite allowing only one earned run on five hits in 5 1/2 innings. He walked three and struck out two. Derek Curtis hurled 1 2/3 scoreless innings, allowing one hit and striking out two.

Williams Will Manage In New Senior League

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ORLANDO, Fla. — Dick Williams, who managed Oakland to two World Series titles, will pilot one of eight teams in the Senior Professional Baseball Association, and three stars from his A's teams of the 1970s may play in the new league.

Vida Blue, Bert Campaneris and Rollie Fingers were among the 120 former major leaguers drafted Tuesday by the new league. The SPBA, for former major leaguers 35 and older, is scheduled to begin its inaugural 72-game season Nov. 1 with teams in Daytona Beach, Orlando, St. Petersburg, Winter Haven, Fort Myers, Miami, St. Lucie and West Palm Beach.

"We think this is something that if it gets off the ground could be very, very good," says Williams, 61, who will manage the West Palm Beach franchise.

"It's in the off-season, in a warm-weather area. The concept is very good," he said. "This is something like Seniors golf and Masters tennis."

Each club was allowed to reserve 15 former major leaguers from a list of 609 players. The teams, with a $550,000 salary cap, still must negotiate and try to sign selections, all of whom have expressed an interest in playing.

Also, USA Today reported today that talks "have already commenced" with representatives of Cuban players. With the exception of a few refugees, Cubans have not played in organized baseball since Fidel Castro rose to power three decades ago.

Among those who may be involved in ownership is New York real estate magnate Donald Trump. A spokesman for Trump, a driving force behind the defunct United States Football League, told the newspaper that the matter is under consideration but that no decision has been made.

Gervin Arrested

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN ANTONIO — Less than six months after saying he was trying to rid himself of drugs, former San Antonio Spurs star George Gervin was arrested Tuesday on charges of possession of marijuana and driving while intoxicated.

Gervin, 37, was stopped after he allegedly was seen speeding and weaving on Interstate 410 in north-central San Antonio about 2:30 a.m., said a Bexar County Sheriff's Department official who did not wish to be identified.

Gervin was released on personal recognizance bond shortly after 6 a.m., the official said.

Driving a black 1985 Porsche, Gervin was said to be traveling at 66 mph in a 55 mph zone, according to sheriff's department reports. A substance believed to be marijuana was found in his possession, officials said.

Gervin tested 0.03 percent for blood-alcohol content in a breath test at the San Antonio Police Department. The state's definition of intoxication is 0.10 percent. Gervin refused to submit to a blood test.

The maximum penalty for each of the misdemeanor charges against Gervin is six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Gervin's home telephone number in San Antonio is unlisted. But he said through a Spurs spokesman on Tuesday that he was not sure what charges had been filed against him.

Earlier this year, the former NBA All-Star was treated at a hospital for what police investigated as an apparent drug overdose. According to a police report in that February incident, Gervin said he had snorted what he thought was cocaine, but later said he did not know what the substance was.

In late April, Gervin told reporters he was attempting to rid himself of drugs.

Gervin played guard for the Spurs from 1974 to 1985, when he was traded to the Chicago Bulls. He scored 26,595 points in 14 professional seasons to rank seventh on the all-time list.

He recently toured Europe with a team of former NBA players, including Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

Sabitini, Garrison Win Easy

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MANHATTAN BEACH, Calif. — Second-seeded Gabriela Sabatini and third-seeded Zina Garrison easily won second-round matches in the Virginia Slims of Los Angeles tournament.

Sabatini of Argentina beat Australian Jenny Byrne, 6-0, 6-2. Garrison stopped Amanda Coetzer of South Africa, 6-3, 6-2.

Other seeded winners were No. 4 Pam Shriver; No. 5 Mary Joe Fernandez; No. 7 Hana Madlikova; No. 8 Catarina Lindqvist of Sweden; No. 12 Nathalie Tauziat of France; and No. 16 Amy Frazier. Two seeds fell: No. 9 Italian Raffaella Reggi was ousted by Monique Javer of Britain and No. 10 Patty Fendick lost to Claudia Porwick of West Germany.

Norman...

my life. I'm comfortable with my finances.

"I'm back to doing what I want to do. And that is play golf, try to win golf tournaments, as many tournaments as I can; try to be the best I can."

"About the British Open, well, you can't look back."

But doesn't it still rank as one that got away? Isn't it one he should have won? Didn't he say prior to the British Open playoff that fate owes him four majors?

Norman flashed that infectious grin and held up his right hand, the fingers spread wide.

"Now it's five," he said.

He'll face essentially the same top-of-the-line field that was assembled at Troon, Scotland, last month, with one major exception.

Calcavecchia pulled out of the 150-man field on Tuesday after wife, Sheryl, gave birth to their first child, a daughter, Britney Jo, in Mesa, Ariz.

Among the major contenders are Masters champ Nick Faldo of England, U.S. Open title-holder Curtis Strange, leading money-winner Tom Kite, Tom Watson, Payne Stewart, Paul Azinger, Seve Ballesteros of Spain, Tway and Steve Jones, the only three-time winner on the American tour this year.

ESPN will provide live television coverage of the first two rounds Thursday and Friday and ABC will cover the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

Sanders Files Criminal Complaint Says Richmond Fan Harassed His Girlfriend

ATLANTA — New York Yankees farmhand Deion Sanders, who said he didn't hit anyone, filed a counterclaim of assault against a fan he says was harassing his girlfriend during a minor league baseball game in Richmond, Va.

Sanders, who also is the Atlanta Falcons' first-round draft choice, was arrested Sunday on misdemeanor charges of assault for allegedly striking two fans. He denied hitting either man and said one of them "snatched a gold chain off my female's neck."

The incident occurred six days before Sanders was scheduled to go off probation in a battery and disorderly conduct case in Florida. His probation officer said he was considering whether to charge Sanders with violating the conditions of his probation.

Sanders, who plays outfield for the Yankees' Class AAA team at Columbus, Ohio, already has been fined an undisclosed amount by Columbus manager Bucky Dent for breaking a team rule by leaving the clubhouse before the game's conclusion.

Sanders said in an interview published in The Atlanta Journal and The Atlanta Constitution on Tuesday that the incident actually began while he was still playing in the Clippers' 16-4 loss to the Richmond Braves, because he could see from the field the fans harassing his girlfriend.

"I could see them. When she walked in, they were pointing at her. You could see them bothering her," he said.

When he was lifted for a pinch hitter in the ninth, Sanders dressed and went to meet his girlfriend, Carolyn Chambers.

"I went up to get her, and I approached her," Sanders said. "I asked him why he was saying these things to her and what did he have to say now. They were afraid. They had nothing to say to me, but then his friends jumped over him and pushed me. One got his shirt grabbed, so I wouldn't fall down.

"Next thing you know, he says, 'I'll sue you.' And I said, 'For what? I didn't lay a hand on anyone.'"

A witness to the incident, Richmond real-estate agent Horace Henshaw, father-in-law of Columbus pitcher Mike Christopher, said: "There was nothing to it. Deion and the one guy grabbed each other simultaneously. Then the concession stand people and ushers, about five of them, got between them and broke it up. The whole thing lasted about 15 seconds.

"One of the ushers did get slapped in the face when they broke it up," Henshaw said. "Deion did it, but it wasn't deliberate. It was in the course of breaking things up. Nobody closed their fists. There were no punches.

"Deion got about 15 to 20 feet away after they broke it up, and one guy started yelling at Deion, 'C'mon, I'll fight you, and I'll sue you for everything you got.' Deion just left and went back to the locker room," Henshaw added.

Sanders denied that he was reacting to taunts directed at him.

"I don't care whoever says what to me," Sanders said. "But they were pointing to my female, saying lewd things, and I decided to approach the guys. But I didn't hit anyone."

Sanders and Chambers have filed a cross-complaint of assault against Ken Ross, who they contend was the aggressor in the incident.

"He snatched a gold chain off my female's neck," Sanders said.

Ross, a Richmond resident, was arrested Monday on the simple assault charge and released on his own recognizance. No court date has been set.

Ross and another Richmond man, Chris Burke, filed the simple assault misdemeanor charges against Sanders on Sunday.

During a hearing for Sanders on Monday in Richmond General District Court, Judge Jose R. Davila Jr. told Sanders he was entitled to a lawyer and continued the case until Aug. 17.

Sanders was released on $5,000 bond. If convicted of assault, Sanders could face a sentence of up to 12 months in jail and a $1,000 fine on each charge.

Sanders' agent, Steve Zucker of Chicago, said Tuesday that Sanders would not talk publicly about the incident until after the matter has been resolved in court. He said Sanders' interview with the Atlanta newspapers would be the only interview granted before the case is resolved.

Sanders pleaded guilty in February to a pair of simple battery charges and one count of disorderly conduct stemming from an incident last Christmas at a Fort Myers, Fla., gift shop.

"It's kind of sad," said George Moore, Sanders' Lee County, Fla., probation officer, Monday. "His probation was scheduled to terminate Saturday at midnight."

Moore said he must determine whether Sanders' arrest actually broke the terms of the probation before deciding whether to press a charge of violating probation. If convicted of such a charge, Sanders could face up to two years in jail.

Sanders, a two-time All-America cornerback from Florida State, was the fifth player picked in this year's National Football League draft. He is negotiating a contract with the Falcons while playing baseball in the Yankees organization.

Sanders, who reportedly is seeking a six-year, $10 million deal, told the Atlanta newspapers that he was not close to signing a contract with the Falcons.

Sanders also said he didn't think his conduct would negatively affect potential endorsement deals.

Power Surge Keys Astros, Reds

Each Club Four Homers En Route To NL West Routs

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A power surge by the Houston Astros is putting a charge into the National League West race.

The Astros hit four homers, each with at least one runner on base, and beat the San Diego Padres 12-3 Tuesday night. The victory, combined with Cincinnati's 10-4 romp at San Francisco, cut the Giants' lead over Houston to one game.

"It's a nice sight, especially with men on base," Houston manager Art Howe said of the Astros' second four-homer game in 10 days. "We made the most of those tonight, that's for sure."

Davis had a two-run homer in the first and a three-run shot in the fourth, both off Padres starter Don Schulze, 2-1. Ken Caminiti added a three-run homer and Craig Biggio a two-run shot as Jim Clancy rebounded from last week's disaster against Cincinnati with a seven-hit performance.

Davis now has 27 homers, including three in two games, and his five RBIs matched a career high. He has hit four of his five homers against San Diego this season at Jack Murphy Stadium.

"I see the ball good here," Davis said. "I'm not doing anything differently. The ball travels well here. You don't have to hit it well to get it out."

Clancy, 6-9, snapped a personal five-game losing streak and pitched his first complete game since Aug. 29, 1988, a 6-1 win at Milwaukee while he was with Toronto.

"Things were working pretty well. I was hitting the corners," said Clancy, whose last previous victory was June 16. "And I was happy to see 12 runs. I needed to go out there and get people out."

In his last start Thursday at Cincinnati, Clancy gave up six hits and a walk while being charged with seven of the 14 runs the Reds scored in the first inning. Cincinnati went on to an 18-2 win.

The Padres scored all of their runs in fourth inning on Clark's RBI single. Chris James' run-scoring double and Mike Pagliarulo's groundout. James' double extended his hitting streak to a career-high 12 games.

Reds 10, Giants 4

Cincinnati matched Houston's four-homer total in halving first-place San Francisco's lead.

Scotti Madison, Eric Davis, Mariano Duncan and Luis Quinones homered in support of Reds starter Tom Browning, 10-10, who won his fourth consecutive decision and pitched his fifth complete game of the season. He allowed eight hits, struck out five and walked one.

Rookie left-hander Russ Swan, 0-2, making his second major-league start, allowed three home runs in 1 2/3 innings, including consecutive homers by Duncan and Quinones as Cincinnati built a 5-0 lead in the second inning.

Duncan led off the game with a double and scored on Davis' 22nd homer, giving Cincinnati a 2-0 lead.

The Giants made it 5-3 in the third on Will Clark's run-scoring single and Kevin Mitchell's two-run triple.

Cubs 4, Expos 2

Chicago kept sole possession of first place by handing Montreal its sixth consecutive loss and Dennis Martinez his first defeat in 12 decisions since April 21.

Mark Grace broke a 2-2 tie with a seventh-inning homer, giving the Cubs a two-game lead over the Expos in the East.

Martinez, 12-2, gave up only four hits, but three of them were homers. Grace hit his 10th of the season and seventh since the All-Star break, while Jerome Walton and Ryne Sandberg also homered for Chicago.

Martinez's stretch of 18 scoreless innings ended on his second pitch of the game when Walton hit his fifth homer into the bleachers in left-center. It extended Walton's hitting streak to 19 games, second-longest in the NL this year behind the 23-game streak by Jose Oquendo of St. Louis.

Mets 9, Phillies 0

New York blanked Philadelphia as David Cone pitched a six-hitter for his first shutout of the season and Darryl Strawberry capped a six-run seventh inning with a three-run homer.

Cone, 9-5, who won his sixth straight decision, struck out five and walked one in pitching his fifth complete game. It was his first shutout since Sept. 10, 1988 when he blanked Montreal 6-0.

New York turned the game into a rout in the seventh, capped by Strawberry's 24th homer.

Pirates 7, Cardinals 3

Bob Walk improved his record to 3-0 against St. Louis this season and helped Pittsburgh break out of a hitting slump with an RBI double and a triple.

Walk, 9-7, allowed seven hits in eight innings and went 2-for-3 at the plate, raising his average to .240.

He took a four-hitter into the eighth, but two singles and a three-run homer by Pedro Guerrero spoiled the shutout bid.

Dodgers 10, Braves 2

Los Angeles routed Atlanta with a grand slam by Mike Scioscia, a three-run homer by Franklin Stubbs, two RBI singles by Eddie Murray and Orel Hershiser's seven-hitter.

Hershiser, 14-8, struck out two and walked three in his seventh complete game, matching the NL totals of Mike Scott, Bruce Hurst and John Smiley. The right-hander lowered his earned-run average to 2.40, best in the league.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Rich Gossage has been released for less than a week and already his nickname has been claimed.

"The nickname helps," Mauro "Goose" Gozzo said Tuesday night after leading Toronto over Texas 7-0 in his big-league debut. "I never really know when they're booing me or calling out my name. I guess it's always helped the fans get on my side, wherever I've pitched."

Gozzo allowed three hits over eight innings as the Blue Jays climbed over .500 for the first time since Opening Day. He walked four and struck out three.

"We finally got some runs to work with," Blue Jays manager Cito Gaston said. "We've been getting outstanding starting pitching to keep us in a lot of games. It's nice to see the bats pick up some of the slack."

Nelson Liriano drove in a career-high four runs for the Blue Jays, 57-56, who had reached .500 eight times only to lose the following game.

Athletics 3, White Sox 2

Shortstop Ozzie Guillen's 10th-inning error allowed the go-ahead run to score at Comiskey Park.

Don Pall, 4-3, walked Stan Javier, Walt Weiss sacrificed and Mark McGwire hit an infield single to shortstop that snapped an 0-for-21 slump. Guillen's throw bounced into the first-base dugout as Javier scored.

Rick Honeycutt, 2-1, pitched 1 1/3 scoreless innings and Dennis Eckersley got two outs for his 22nd save.

Mariners 6, Angels 4

Jeffrey Leonard hit a three-run homer that tied the score 4-4 in the sixth inning at Anaheim Stadium and hit a go-ahead home run in the 10th.

Leonard hit his 18th home run of the season with one out in the 10th off Greg Minton, 1-3. Darnell Coles followed with his ninth home run of the year.

Jerry Reed, 4-6, pitched one hitless inning and Mike Schooler pitched the 10th for his 22nd save.

Orioles 6, Twins 1

Dave Johnson scattered eight hits at Memorial Stadium in his second major-league start. Mike Devereaux drove in three runs for the Orioles with an RBI double in the third and a two-run triple in the seventh.

Johnson, 1-1, struck out three and walked four. He is the 10th starter the Orioles have used.

Rick Aguilera lost his second start for the Twins since being acquired from the New York Mets last week in the Frank Viola trade. He gave up three runs, one earned, and five hits in six innings.

Indians 3, Yankees 1

Tom Candiotti, 11-6, allowed two hits in 7 1/3 innings to win his fourth consecutive decision and Cory

New York Mets' shortstop Kevin Elster relays to first

Snyder hit a two-run homer for the visiting Royals. Doug Jones finished the combined fourth-hitter for his league-leading 27th save.

Tigers 6, Brewers 3

Jeff Robinson, 2-2, won for the first time since April 13 and Mike Heath hit a three-run homer at Tiger Stadium. Robinson, disabled twice this season, was winless in seven starts since beating Minnesota.

Guillermo Hernandez, who came off the disabled list Monday, pitched two innings for his 13th save.

Don August, 9-11, loaded the bases on two walks and a single and Bill Krueger walked pinch-hitter Gary Ward to force in a run and give Detroit a 2-1 lead. Chet Lemon's RBI groundout made it 3-1 and Heath hit his ninth home run.

Royals 8, Red Sox 1

Tom Gordon allowed four hits in seven innings to increase his record to 13-4. He struck out five and walked three before Terry Leach finished with hitless relief.

Tom Bolton, 0-2, gave up four runs and six hits in four-plus innings and walked five for the visiting Red Sox.

Scott Is Doubtful Against San Diego

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Mike Scott, the winningest pitcher in the major leagues with a 17-6 record, is doubtful for Thursday's scheduled start for the Houston Astros against the San Diego Padres.

Scott reinjured his left hamstring warming up in the bullpen prior to Saturday's 7-0 loss at San Francisco. He lasted 4 1/3 innings and allowed six runs.

Scott threw on the sidelines prior to Tuesday night's game at San Diego, and did not complain about the injury, which also caused him to be scratched from the National League All-Star team.

"It will be a miracle if he pitches," Manager Art Howe said.

Green Still Expects To Be Fired
Dallas Green, criticized by the man he replaced as manager of the New York Yankees, says he expects to be fired.

"There's no question we're not going to be around long," Green was quoted as saying in Tuesday's editions of USA Today. "This guy is not going to let us be around long. But that's all right. We're prepared for that."

"This guy" is George Steinbrenner, owner of the American League team.

Steinbrenner, though, disputed any suggestion that he had been feuding with Green.

"No, not really," he said. "I'm still supportive of my manager. All I said was if we're to win this thing and be right in the middle of it at the end, the players are going to have to play with the same intensity they showed in two games I saw recently."

"Everybody is going to have to do better, and that includes the coaching staff. That's fact."

Gibson Surgery

The 1989 season has been as disastrous for Kirk Gibson and the Los Angeles Dodgers as the 1988 season was wonderful.

Gibson, who hit one of the most dramatic home runs in World Series history last October to climax a year in which he won National League Most Valuable Player honors, will undergo surgery next Tuesday and be lost for the remainder of the season.

Thus, the 32-year-old outfielder completes 1989 with a .213 batting average, nine home runs and 28 RBIs while playing in only 71 games.

The Dodgers aren't doing much better — they entered Tuesday night's game against Atlanta with a 53-60 record and trailed NL West-leading San Francisco by 1 1/2 games.

The Dodgers said that Dr. Frank Jobe, the club physician, will perform exploratory surgery on Gibson's left medial hamstring tendon. Jobe said he believes he has isolated an irregular part of the ligament where it joins the knee joint, something which didn't show up in a magnetic resonance imaging test.

Jobe said because the localized area is outside the knee joint, it will require traditional surgery and not the arthroscopic variety, which is why Gibson will be out for the rest of the season.

"There's no guarantee he will find anything, or that he can fix what he finds, or that it'll heal and won't scar again," Gibson said. "But the only thing left is to go in and look."

"To be honest, it worries me about my career. I wonder if this will bother me. It's an athletic injury and if I wasn't an athlete and didn't rely on speed, I probably wouldn't go through this. But that's not the case."

Tonight's Top Game

Texas at Toronto (7:35 p.m. EDT). Knuckleballer Charlie Hough (6-11) opposes Dave Stieb (11-6). Stieb lost a perfect game in the ninth inning Friday night when New York's Roberto Kelly doubled.

Stats and Streaks

Seattle pinch hitters have 10 hits in their last 16 at-bats with two homers and seven runs batted in. ... Jerome Walton's 19-game hitting streak is the longest ever for a Chicago Cubs rookie. ... Les Lancaster has pitched 30 2/3 scoreless innings, the longest for the Cubs in 22 years.

California outfielders made 48 errors last season. They have made just eight this year. ... Toronto is 57-56, the first time since opening day the Blue Jays have been over .500. ... Julio Franco's 80 RBIs are the most by an American League second baseman since Frank White got 84 in 1984.

Mark McGwire ended an 0-for-21 slump with an infield hit Tuesday night. ... Lee Mazzilli and Mookie Wilson, the former New York Mets acquired recently by Toronto, are hitless in their last 21 at-bats. ... Bert Blyleven is 7-0 with seven no-decisions since May 20. He was walked more than two batters in only two of 23 starts. ... Tom Candiotti is 4-0 and has allowed just two earned runs in 38 innings since coming off the disabled list July 17. ... Atlanta's Tom Glavine has pitched 32 consecutive scoreless innings against Los Angeles this season. He is 4-0 versus the Dodgers. Last year against Los Angeles, Glavine was 0-5.

Dental Implants Gain Acceptance

By Ken Kusmer
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — Pro basketball player Vern Fleming used to worry that when he was hit in the mouth his teeth would spill out onto the court. Years of neglect had left the Indiana Pacers guard's upper teeth decayed and loose.

Georgia Price never had real teeth, only soft tooth buds barely emerging from her gums where her baby teeth never came in. The Bloomington nurse, now 41, received her first dentures at age 3½ and a second set at 12.

Both have found relief with permanent implants, teeth anchored on metal rods supported by frameworks hidden underneath the gums.

"I always thought how wonderful it would be to feel like I have teeth," Price said. "I speak clearer now without my teeth flying across the room."

Dental implants have been around since the early Egyptians but remain largely unknown among the public. More frustrated denture wearers are receiving them, though, as implants gain wider acceptance among dentists.

A National Institutes of Health conference last year said in a statement that the number of dentists performing implants had grown tenfold in five years and that 300,000 Americans a year will be getting implanted teeth by 1992.

Implant dentistry was a $150 million industry last year, estimated Dr. Richard Guaccio of Lake County, president of the 2,000-member American Academy of Implant Dentistry.

Some dentists caution that implants aren't for everyone, particularly those with overriding health problems and those who won't give the devices the care and cleaning necessary to prevent infection and prosthetic failure.

Few people enjoy having to take dentures out at night, and some are embarrassed to let their spouses or others see them without their false teeth, said Dr. Craig Cooper of Indianapolis, who does 300-400 implants a year. "They eat better, but it's way beyond that from a psychological point of view."

Sixty percent of the respondents to a marketing survey last year had never heard of implants, said Cooper, who directs the faculty at the Midwest Implant Institute in Columbus, Ohio, which has trained 600 dentists in implantology since 1981.

Yet a survey three years ago by the National Institute of Dental Research suggests many people could use them. Forty-two percent of Americans over age 65 and 4 percent of those aged 35 to 64 have no teeth, it reported.

The growing older market, a wealthy segment of the population, provides implant dentistry with a tremendous opportunity for growth, and manufacturers have provided a variety of devices, Cooper said. "It's exponential growth. There are fewer and fewer patients we cannot treat."

The American Dental Association has reservations.

"In general the feeling is that implants can be used on a selected basis, depending on the patient and the patient's condition," said Dr. Wayne Wozniak, of ADA's Chicago laboratory on certification and product research. "It should only be done on people the dentist feels can properly maintain the implant. It requires meticulous oral hygiene after the device has been placed. So it requires a highly motivated individual."

Infection around the implant would erode the bone where many of the devices are implanted; lack of adequate bone would immediately eliminate some patients from being implant candidates. One implant, subperiosteal, is not based in bone and consists of a wiry framework fitted between the bone and the gum.

Depending on the type, implants can cost as little as $600 for a single tooth or as much as $10,000 for a full upper or lower arch, and some procedures are covered by Medicare. Most are performed as outpatient surgery.

The NIH statement said there was little information on long-term effectiveness of implants and called for a national registry to collect data. However, it's generally considered 80 percent to 90 percent of implants are successful for at least five to 10 years.

Cooper, who inserted the 28-year-old Fleming's subperiosteal implant, said it should last the rest of his life with proper care.

Implants can last 20 years and more, said Guaccio, estimating that after 18 years, "about 87 percent of the implants I've ever placed are still functioning in the mouth."

Genetically Altered Virus Field Test Set

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Scientists are hoping the microbes they tinkered with will vanish quickly after the nation's first open-air field test of a pesticide made of genetically engineered viruses.

Weather permitting, scientists from Cornell University's Boyce Thompson Institute for Plant Research intended to spray the virus today on a field of cabbage at the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station.

The test is designed to see if a genetically disabled virus will disappear from the environment quickly after attacking the insects it is aimed at destroying, rather than lingering in the field, said H. Alan Wood, the virologist who will direct the test.

"It's a hurdle in terms of the genetic engineering of viruses and quite a significant step if it's successful," Wood said. "It would be a big step for biological control."

The test could provide new ways to fight plant diseases and pests while lessening dependence on pesticides. About 3 billion pounds of pesticides are used in the United States each year.

Scientists are aiming their test at the cabbage looper, a pale green caterpillar that attacks more than a dozen kinds of vegetables, including cabbage, beets, broccoli and cauliflower.

The virus they are using is identical to naturally occurring strains known as baculoviruses, which can cause viral epidemics in many agricultural and forest insect pests. Researchers will remove a gene that provides a protective protein coat from the virus.

Scientists eventually hope to splice a new gene into the virus, one that would make it more deadly to pests, Wood said. The new, more virulent virus could be sprayed onto plants, where it would kill pests and then die quickly.

The field test will be conducted on a two-acre, doughnut-shaped plot containing 20,000 cabbage plants, of which 2,500 plants in the center will be sprayed with the virus.

The plot will be monitored through 1991.

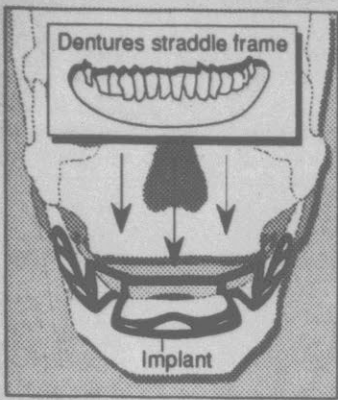

The Environmental Protection Agency approved the field test in July after determining it posed no environmental or human health hazards.

Few Areas Escape Coastal Pollution, Private Group Says

By H. Josef Hebert
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Beach-goers ready to frolic in U.S. coastal waters should be prepared to encounter contamination from toxic chemicals, sewage discharge and medical waste, a private environmental group said today.

"Few regions of the country have escaped the effects of coastal pollution," the Washington-based Natural Resources Defense Council said in a report released today.

The report, which examined a variety of ocean pollutants, suggested the trend toward growing coastal contamination can be reversed over the next decade, but only through strict pollution control measures and curbs in development along coastal areas.

"Each year our factories dump no less than 5 trillion gallons of wastewater into coastal waters," the report said.

"We flush another 2.3 trillion gallons of sewage into them. And every time it rains or snows, massive amounts of poisonous substances, including gasoline and pesticides, are carried into the sea as runoff from our city streets and farms."

Half of the nation's population lives within 50 miles of coastal waters, including the Great Lakes system, the report said, noting that the population in many coastal regions is expected to increase sharply over the next decade.

The report cited as examples of the coastal pollution problem:

—The Environmental Protection Agency's designation of three locations in Washington's Puget Sound as priority toxic cleanup sites under the federal Superfund law because of sediment contamination.

—The closing of parts of Maine's Casco Bay in recent years to clam and mussel digging because of bacterial pollution from inadequately treated sewage that was allowed into the waters. Sediments in the bay also were found to be contaminated with heavy metals, PCBs and an assortment of pesticides.

—Continued high levels of the toxic pesticide DDT in California's Santa Monica Bay 20 years after it was dumped into the water by industry. The pesticide was banned in 1972.

—The forced closing of at least 40 beaches in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut during the first three weeks of this summer because of sewage contamination.

—The oil industry's routine dumping into offshore waters of thousands of tons of waste material, including "drilling mud" that contains toxic chemicals.

Medical waste on beaches, which attracted widespread attention last summer, continues to be a problem, the report said. Such wastes have been reported on beaches in 17 states this summer.

"Even supposedly clean beaches are far from safe," said the report, entitled "Ebb Tide for Pollution."

About one-fourth of all sewage wastewater "is dumped directly into coastal waters" and much more is released into rivers that eventually reaches the ocean, the report said. Pollution from a variety of sources increasingly is showing up in fish and shellfish in many parts of the country, it said.

Even the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers contributes to the problem, the report said.

Of up to 700 million cubic yards of material dredged by the Corps from harbors and channels each year, as much as 35 million cubic yards are highly contaminated from pesticides, heavy metals, PCBs and oil, according to the study. Much of the dredged material is dumped in the ocean.

The environmental group called for tighter controls on toxic industrial pollutants as well as runoff pollutants from agriculture and other sources, a ban on all discharges of raw sewage into waters and more effective treatment programs and tighter land-use and zoning requirements to curb coastal development.

It also urged a halt of ocean dumping of medical wastes or the discharge of plastics from vessels, sewers or other sources, and a comprehensive program to protect coastal waters from oil spills including a tightening of restrictions on offshore drilling and tanker shipments.

Salmon Killed By Toxic Algae

BERGEN, Norway (AP) — Toxic algae killed thousands of salmon as it spread through two western fjords and engulfed six fish farms, officials said Tuesday.

The algae, which kills fish by destroying their gills, is not believed to be harmful to humans, said Nils Torsvik of the Fisheries Directorate.

The algae thrives in brackish waters and has killed more than 400 tons of fish, including 100,000 salmon worth $2.15 million, Torsvik said.

Statisticians Gather To Share Strange Numbers

By Mike Feinsilber
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — One of the quirkier statistics presented at a convention of statisticians here indicated that men should get married, have children and get divorced if they want to be promoted on a university faculty.

Another statistic concerned the sale of T-shirts, but it was less precise.

Among more than 1,000 scholarly papers being presented at the joint meetings of the American Statistical Association, the Biometrical Society and the Institution of Mathematical Statisticians was one by Lynne Billard of the University of Georgia, who studied promotion rates on college faculties.

Here's what she found about the path of advancement from assistant to associate professor:

—Among those who were married but childless, 51 percent of the men and 41 percent of the women were promoted.

—Among those who had spouses and children, 66 percent of the men and 51 percent of the women were promoted.

—Among those who were single, divorced or widowed and childless, 53 percent of the men and 37 percent of the women were promoted.

—Among those who were unmarried and had children, 80 percent of the men and 33 percent of the women were promoted.

Ms. Billard, in a paper reflecting the jargon of her industry ("the standardized regression coefficients in the prediction equations for men and women"), drew no conclusions although the moral was clear:

For male assistant professors, the way to get ahead is to get married, have children and get divorced. For women, that path leads to stagnation.

As for T-shirts, vendor Mary Cuzzucoli said statisticians seemed to snap them up.

A couple of hundred arrived at her table at 7:40 a.m. Tuesday and by 9 a.m. they were all sold, she said. They bore this legend: "I'm Statistically Significant."

Bumper stickers using a play on the statistical term "moment," moved more slowly. "Statisticians

May Be Dull ... But We Have Our Moments."

The annual August meeting filled two Washington hotels and brought together 4,215 statisticians to observe the 150th year of the ASA, which was founded in Boston and whose membership has included Florence Nightingale, Alexander Graham Bell, Andrew Carnegie and Martin Van Buren.

The meeting's youngest presenter of a paper was 16-year-old Nirmal D.C. Pugh, a junior at the Mahrisi School in Fairfield, Iowa. His topic was "Multivariate vs. Univariate Time Series Forecasts of Weather Variables."

He's an old hand at delivering papers, having previously done so before the International Neuroscience Conference.

Outgoing ASA President Janet Norwood, who heads the government's Bureau of Labor Statistics, noted in a speech that her bureau used to draw moral conclusions from the numbers it gathered.

For example, she said, in 1888, studying the conditions of women workers, the bureau found that those living in rooming houses had to receive guests in their rooms because there was no other place.

It concluded: "Such a condition tends either in the direction of crushing out social intercourse, especially between the sexes, or of carrying it beyond the limit of prudence."

CEO Eaters Corporate Negligence Plea

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
TACOMA, Wash. — A chemical company's top executive has agreed to a federal judge's demand that he personally enter guilty pleas for his corporation's pollution of a Tacoma waterway.

Environmentalists and legal experts have praised the move, saying today's scheduled appearance by Edwin E. Tuttle, chief executive and board chairman of Pennwalt Corp., could set a precedent for punishing corporate negligence.

U.S. District Judge Jack Tanner previously refused to accept pleas from attorneys or lower-ranking executives of the Philadelphia-based company.

Criminal negligence and civil charges against Pennwalt grew out of the spill of at least 75,000 gallons of a chemical bleach into Tacoma's Hylebos Waterway, which opens on Puget Sound, in 1985. The bleach, sodium dichromate, contains hexavalent chromium, a cancer-causing agent.

Prosecutors have said the case is the first in which the government based its investigation solely on corporate negligence.

It may also be the first instance in which a corporate executive has been ordered to plead the guilt of the corporation, said David Skover, professor of civil procedure and constitutional law at the University of Puget Sound Law School.

The company agreed to pay a $1.1 million fine and accept five misdemeanor counts in May after criminal charges against four company officials, including three executives, were dropped. Tuttle was not charged.

The agreement covered two counts of negligently failing to maintain adequate storage tanks, two counts of discharging pollutants, and one count of failing to promptly report the spill to the Coast Guard.

Witch Coven Wins Tax Break

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — Witchcraft is a legitimate religion and its churches, or covens, are entitled to the same tax breaks as those of more established religions, the state division of taxation has ruled.

"With this ruling, we witches will definitely be able to come out of the closet and take our place in society," said Joyce Siegrist, 45, high priestess of Rosegate Coven. She said the coven has a core group of 11 members and 30 to 40 initiates.

The ruling announced today by Tax Administrator R. Gary Clark overturned an earlier decision that said the coven did not meet criteria for being a church.

The coven, also known as Our Lady of the Roses Wiccan Church, will no longer have to pay state sales tax for supplies.

"This decision demonstrates that, with a properly presented case, even unusual or small religious groups can be treated equally with more mainstream religions by the state," said A. Gregory Frazier, an American Civil Liberties Union lawyer who announced the decision. He represented the witches in an administrative hearing in May.

Hearing officer Sandra J. Murphy, who recommended that Clark grant the exemption, ruled July 20 that the coven fulfilled most of the state Supreme Court's criteria for determining the legitimacy of a religion.

Gender Roles Can Trouble Relationships

By Malcolm Ritter
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Anna and Bob were bright, capable, well-meaning and working to keep a marriage. But there was a problem: She was a woman, and he was a man.

That means they had to contend with basic and often overlooked differences in the way women and men tend to think and behave. It drove them into therapy.

Researchers and therapists have been taking a closer look at what they say are common differences between the genders. Unless those disparities are heeded and accounted for, they say, the result can be trouble for a marriage.

"I think everybody has known that there are some basic gender differences in marriage," but scientific study began only recently, said marital researcher Howard Markman of the University of Denver.

"These are patterns that are very strong, that most people simply aren't aware of," said Froma Walsh, an associate professor of social work and psychiatry at the University of Chicago.

Common gender-related differences include how readily feelings are expressed, how intimacy is sought and how conflicts are negotiated, Markman and Walsh said. In a marriage, the patterns can make arguments erupt out of nowhere and sabotage attempts to resolve conflicts.

Take Anna and Bob. They often fought with unsatisfying results. Anna blamed Bob for trying to control her and blamed herself for consistently giving in. Bob considered Anna wishy-washy.

Walsh said that as she counseled them, it became clear that Bob argued to win. In contrast, Anna said, "I really go in wanting to please him and wanting his approval."

Walsh told the couple, "It looks like you have different rules." "As soon as they realized that, it got them out of blaming each other," Walsh said in an interview. "No wonder things always turn out his way."

The couple reflects a typical pattern in marriages, Walsh said. Men learn from society to be powerful in their arguments and to win as much as they can. Women learn to take more interest in gaining love and approval, which prods them toward accommodation in conflicts.

Markman said men commonly focus on the outcome of the discussion, while women often care more about the process, such as wanting to express feelings before moving to solutions.

Another pattern therapists and researchers see is that while wives are more likely than husbands to bring up domestic matters for discussion, men typically try to withdraw from conflict with their wives.

Men do not always realize they are withdrawing, Markman said. Sometimes they say they do not even hear their wives.

The question of why men tend to withdraw is controversial, Markman said.

Walsh attributes it to men's discomfort with intimate discussions and communication of feelings — a result of a working world that emphasizes competitiveness and hiding one's vulnerabilities.

Markman suggests another explanation: As boys, husbands may have learned to resolve conflicts through explicit rules and umpires in their sports, while their adult marriages typically offer little such structure.

Another factor several researchers have suggested is biology. The idea is that conflict between spouses may be physically harder on husbands because it pushes them into an uncomfortable state of physical arousal, including faster heart beat and a flow of adrenaline.

Once aroused, men may also take longer to return to normal, said marital researcher John Gottman of the University of Washington.

One study found that husbands showed higher skin conductance — a measure of physical arousal — when listening to their wives complain than women did as husbands complained.

Gottman cautioned that such differences may actually stem from cultural factors rather than biology.

Whatever the reason, the husband's withdrawal spurs the wife to press the issue, which triggers further withdrawal, further pressing, and so on, Walsh said.

Markman and colleague Shelley Kraft see a withdrawal-and-pursuit pattern behind "negative escalation cycles," which are essentially the way arguments grow out of small things and get hotter and hotter.

The cycles are characteristic of unhappy marriages, while couples in happy marriages generally know how to avoid them, Markman said.

A cycle may begin when a wife approaches her husband, who is reading a newspaper.

"We really need to talk," Judy says. Harry doesn't answer.

"Harry, I said we really need to talk," she says more emphatically.

"Oh," Harry says innocently, looking up. "Were you talking to me?"

"You never listen to me, you never want to talk."

"That is not true. I love to talk, but we never talk, we just fight."

"There you go again, changing the subject on me. I really can't stand this much longer."

Harry switches his glare back to the newspaper. Judy goes to tend the children in another room.

What happened here? In the researchers' view, Judy asking to talk was an attempt to establish some intimacy. Perhaps she sounded negative because she was tired, and anxious as she recalled Harry's rejections of intimate discussions.

Harry thought Judy had another gripe and, thinking that such discussions never go anywhere except to an emotional eruption, he decided to try to avoid her. When that didn't work, he played dumb.

His tactics made Judy more negative, and the cycle was off and running. His mistaken expectation that she wanted an argument became self-fulfilling.

The exchange also illustrates another gender difference Markman and Kraft see, in how each experiences intimacy. Women, the researchers suggest, place great stock in face-to-face talk about feelings — just the kind from which men may withdraw. Males may prefer to find intimacy in shared activities.

The result can be misunderstanding. Markman and Kraft cited the case of one man who said he felt close to his wife when they watched television together. The wife, however, complained that all he wanted to do was watch television, and that he didn't want to talk to her.

Recognizing and countering gender-based patterns may help ease the distress they provoke in marriages. Much of good couples therapy is helping the partners become more aware of hidden patterns, which lets them break such cycles and negotiate more satisfying rules, Walsh said.

To provide men with structure for handling conflict, Markman said, a "Premarital Relationship Enhancement Program" is available in many places around the country to teach ground rules for arguing. Couples who go through the training before marrying show happier marriages and only half the divorces that other couples do, he said.

"There's a bumpy road through marriage but it can be ridden," Markman said. "We've kind of mapped out scientifically at least the terrain of marital difficulties, and now we've provided some roadmaps."

Portrait Of A Prodigy Wang Yani, 14, Both A Child And An Artist

By Elizabeth Kastor
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Look to her fingers for clues, and there is only the hand of a child, this one tiny and unmarked, fiddling with a coffee stirrer, a Mickey Mouse watch around the wrist.

Her eyes, downcast, flash to the side with a sly look-the glance of a shy but playful 14-year-old. When she sees that her father's name tag has migrated from his chest to his thigh, Wang Yani doubles over in delighted giggles.

Yani is that baffling creature, a child prodigy. In person, in conversation, she offers no solution to the puzzle of her talent, no answer to the question of where the delightful and daring creations come from.

Since the age of 3, her ink paintings of cats and monkeys, flowers and mountains have shown a confidence and skill that have astonished Chinese and European artists and scholars.

With "Yani: The Brush of Innocence," organized by Kansas City's Nelson-Atkins Museum of Art and now appearing at the Arthur M. Sackler Gallery, the teen-ager from China's southern Guangxi province has become the youngest artist ever to have a solo Smithsonian show.

She is a lithe girl who favors floral appliques and sparkles on her clothes, bows and strands of silver tinsel for her hair. Ink-saturated brush in hand during a painting demonstration at the Sackler, she bends down toward a sheet of paper far larger than herself, and with a quick, forceful press-push-twist of her wrist shapes a black-green Chinese squash.

Holding a large brush above the paper, she allows the drips to fall, only later to return to transform the splotches of gray into tiny, cheery birds. Now she pauses and surveys the paper, studies it as if to find in it the shape of a monkey, of a flower. The expression on her face is of utter concentration, and as she leans forward into her work her taut legs move with the assurance of an athlete's.

She paints with such speed and intensity that the process resembles automatic writing, as if she is operating in some sort of trance, her skill using her rather than being used by her. But the finished pictures are lyrical and inventive and idiosyncratic, the creations of a very real, very specific young girl.

"I think painting is something very simple," she says through the screen of a translation. "You just paint what you think. You don't have to follow something. Anyone can paint."

She speaks with no trace of irony, and the adults around her laugh knowingly at her simplicity, as if the laughter begins to answer the questions she inspires.

She has a smile and a certain dip of the head that encourages people to forget the barrier of language. Even while the incomprehensible English is spilling out of strangers' mouths, she keeps smiling.

To the Chinese government, Wang Yani is doubtless the best nugget of PR to hit the Western world in months. To scholars she is an omen for continuing intellectual bonds and artistic exchanges with Chinese colleagues and friends.

To Sackler Director Milo Beach, Yani and her art are a bridge between the United States and a culture he and his colleagues love, no matter the actions of its government. "It does build up contacts between Americans and the people of China at a time when we are struggling to understand that country," he says.

And to Sackler curator Jan Stuart, she is an intellectual conundrum.

"She defies us," says Stuart. "We're always charting influences from the past," but with Yani, such influences seemingly do not exist.

Stuart and other scholars can and do make gallant efforts to identify traditional Chinese images in Yani's work. The crane below the pine tree is a familiar Chinese symbol of longevity, except to Yani, who called her bird and tree picture "Where Is That Little Monkey?" and was surprised to learn of the symbolism.

Stuart speculates that Yani saw the motif in pieces of popular art, perhaps a calendar. Painters whose "influence" can be found in her work were dead long before she was born in 1975, and their pictures are new to her, unschooled as she is in formal art technique and history.

Yani began painting at 2½, as her father Wang Shiqiang, who has traveled with her to celebrate the opening of the Sackler exhibit, tells the story. A professional painter himself, Wang Shiqiang remembers that he was working in a studio when Yani took a piece of charcoal and began drawing on the wall. She stepped back, imitating her father's stance and studying her work with eyes half-closed, one arm on her hip, a mini-artist.

Later, like any toddler, she put her charcoal to a piece of available paper — one of her father's paintings — and he spanked her. Only after his daughter cried "Daddy! I want to paint like you!" did Wang Shiqiang remember his own childhood and his parents' disapproval of his interest in art. He says he then began to support his daughter's scribbles.

"I realized she was extraordinarily interested in painting," says her father, a smiling man who appears delighted with everything around him. "She was very serious about what she drew, and it looked like she cherished them more than I cherished my paintings."

"I looked at these abstract paintings — I was interested. I couldn't tell what she was drawing, but I would ask her and she would tell me what they were about. In every picture there was a story. We made this into a routine, and gradually she developed her own path."

Soon the typical figures of a child's drawings disappeared—the people whose arms and legs sprout from their huge heads, what Lynn T. Goldsmith and David Henry Feldman, who have written a book on child prodigies and contributed an article to the Wang Yani catalog, call the "tadpole formula."

By age 3, Yani was capturing the self-possessed skepticism of a cat with a few sure strokes of her animal hair brush.

By 4, she had added acrobatic monkeys, posturing and playing, and drunken monkeys, the gray ink bleeding into the vegetable fiber paper to become fuzzy monkey fur.

For years monkeys remained her obsessively favorite subject, especially after she got one as a pet, but by the time she was 5, her blue pigment was also flowing into the shapes of peacocks, and other images followed.

"We have animals at home," she says, "and I think if you spend a lot of time with animals, gradually they become attached to you. And I think animals are very good friends. Animals can help human beings in some ways, like dogs can pick up something for you when you ask them to. In China there is a kind of monkey the size of a cup. They can help you grind the ink stone."

By the time she was 6, Yani had exhibited in Shanghai, Beijing and Hong Kong. Since early childhood, she has painted in front of crowds, including a crowd of thousands in a stadium. Unlike her father, who had painted in the realistic, Western-influenced style popular during China's Cultural Revolution, Yani worked with the ancient Chinese brush and ink.

Her work is characterized as xieyi — "idea writing" — a free, spontaneous Chinese style that relies on no advance plans or actual models, the images issuing from the artist's imagination at the moment she puts brush to paper.

Although her father says he has worked with her on concentration exercises, he says he is determined she will be shaped by no outside taste or style. There are no art books in the Wang home, and in 1983 he stopped his own painting, he says, so as not to influence his daughter.

"More and more, her paintings moved me, until she completely squeezed me out of my space," says Wang Shiqiang, who now works for the regional cultural bureau, arranging artistic exchanges. "Originally, on the walls of our house they were all pictures of mine. Eventually, we replaced them with hers."

"It was difficult to stop," says the onetime painter of abandoning his art. "I feel very emotional when I see exhibitions in the museums, but I had to do it because I wanted her to paint her own paintings."

Since Yani began, she has painted more than 10,000 pictures. She experimented with bright colors, then turned to the spectrum of grays that Chinese ink yields, and is now combining the two.

She attends school with others her age, is an excellent runner and jumper, and paints only in the time left by a busy school schedule. Her friends, she says, are busy themselves, and rarely see her pictures.

Plans for Yani's visit to Washington were off and on for weeks, with the Sackler's first hearing it was off (she had to travel through Beijing, and the spring demonstrations and subsequent violence made that impossible) and then, once the army had quashed the demonstrations, it was on.

Start Preparing For The Holiday Season In August

Can't wait for Christmas? August is great time to begin preparing for your favorite holiday by thinking of gift for your loved ones, decorations for your home or donations to charity bazaars. This Christmas cross stitch banner answers all of these needs.

"Joy" is proclaimed above a festive English hunting horn adorned with holly and ribbon. The design is worked from a graph chart on 11-count Aida cloth to be mounted on a dowel and hung by a satin ribbon. The finished size is 11 3/4 inches by 17 1/2 inches.

To obtain directions for making the Joy Cross Stitch Banner, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-080689 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. N-080689 by sending a check or money order for $16.95 to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions, needle, cloth and floss in traditional Christmas colors on off-white background.

Dear Pat: An aunt of mine did our family coat of arms in needlepoint and offered to give me the graph chart for it. Later a friend showed me how to do counted cross stitch, and realizing I would not have to do all the background filling that needlepoint requires, I immediately purchased materials and happily began stitching.

Pat's Pointers By PAT TREXLER

But no one told me to center the design and I began wily-nilly stitching near one corner. Many stitches later, I discovered I had left too large a margin on one edge and ran out of room to finish the design on the other edge.

I am a regular reader of your column but don't recall seeing anything on centering designs. You could save others a lot of time and grief if you would write about this. -- Nancy C., Evansville, Ind.

Dear Nancy: For those readers who have never worked from a graph chart, each symbol on the chart means that a stitch is to be taken at that point in the color represented by that symbol. For example, perhaps "x" is used for all red stitches and "o" for all green stitches. A list of symbols and the color each one represents should accompany every cross stitch chart.

With that said, let's talk about centering. Most well-done cross stitch graphs have an arrow at the top showing the vertical center of the chart. Following these arrows will show you the exact center, which you can mark with a pencil.

Next, fold the fabric in half vertically and make a row of long basting stitches along the fold. Then fold it in half horizontally and baste along this fold. The point where the basting stitches cross is the exact center of the fabric.

You could start in the center and work in all directions from that point, but it is far better to start at the top. Here's how to determine where the first stitch of the top row will be placed.

Let's say that your finished design will cover an area 8 inches wide by 10 inches long. Measure from the center to the top and place a pin 5 inches (half of the vertical measure of the design) above the center basting line. Next measure 4 inches to the left of the top pin and place another pin here. This denotes the top left corner of the entire design area.

marking, whichever is nearest.

If there are just a few squares, it's easiest to count the same number of fabric squares to find the place to take your first stitch. If there are many blank squares, this counting would be tedious, but there's an easier way. Say you are working on an 11-count fabric, so 11 squares equal 1 inch. With 44 blank squares, you could measure over 4 inches and take your first stitch at that point. If there are 46 blank squares, move 2 fabric squares past the 4-inch measurement and begin there.

Driving School Can Humble Student

By Tom Incantalupo
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

The BMW's tires seem ready to give up and become pontoons as the car races faster and faster around a large circle on the wet pavement. The student in the driver's seat, a reporter, has a death grip on the wheel. Next to him, instructor David Murry hangs on to an overhead handle with his right hand to keep from tumbling from the seat.

"Faster, faster," Murry urges. As the car nears 50 mph, Murry's left hand, unnoticed by the student, reaches for the hand brake. He pulls it up sharply, locking the car's rear wheels and sending it into a spin.

The student fights to regain control, turning the wheel frantically, hand over hand. Wrist collides in midair, windshield wipers are inadvertently turned on, the horn is blown and the scenery spins one way and the other. The car comes to rest where it wants to, its engine stalled.

Murry, a 32-year-old professional race driver from Atlanta, is too polite to laugh.

The induced spin and the attempt at recovery are an exercise for students taking a one-day course given by the BMW Skip Barber Advanced Driving School. The school is one of several nationwide that are attracting a growing number of people willing to spend hundreds of dollars for a day or more of driving instruction. For those who consider themselves better-than-average drivers, the lessons often are accompanied by a generous slice of humble pie.

This particular class and those on the following day are sponsored by New York area BMW dealers, who offer the training to some customers as a sales inducement and, sometimes, to business associates, such as local bankers, as a courtesy.

Instructors claim that the training improves a driver's control of a car, especially in emergency conditions, and experts in auto safety generally agree. But some voice concern that the training could encourage students to test their new skills on public roads.

"The concern about these schools is that you produce more skillful drivers but maybe also more aggressive drivers," says Brian O'Neill, president of the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety, a trade group. "If you're more confident of your ability to control a car in a range of circumstances, you might just drive it closer to the limit."

Peter Kuhn, a former race driver and Skip Barber instructor who recently opened his own school, contends, however, that the training can make drivers more cautious.

"When you're on the skid pad and you have a car out of control," Kuhn said, "you suddenly realize, 'Wow, this is a lot of energy here that I'm not in control of. This is something to be respected.'"

Connecticut insurance broker Bruce Rogers, who recently took a Skip Barber course, agreed. "The first time you go into a 360-degree spin, you're kind of disoriented as it is," he said. "You're not going to run out and do it for fun."

The courses vary, but schools usually teach techniques such as making the best use of a car's braking power and traction in an emergency stop, using the accelerator and brakes to transfer a car's weight forward and rearward for quicker, surer cornering and avoiding — or recovering from — skids. Courses typically include some classroom work. Students sometimes use their own cars and sometimes use vehicles provided by the schools.

Prices, which in some cases include lodging and meals, range from $325 for a one-day advanced highway driving course at the Bob Bondurant School of High Performance Driving at Sears Point International Raceway near Sonoma, Calif., to $1,375 for Bondurant's three-day high-performance driving course.

Most classes take place at race tracks, and students usually are taught in groups. The Barber school uses Lime Rock Park raceway in Connecticut and others in Florida, Wisconsin and California. It also operates a traveling school, whose sites include a vast parking lot at Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J., where it recently invited reporters to sample the training.

In addition to skid control and emergency stops, students are taught the quickest and safest way to negotiate turns. They practice the technique on a roughly rectangular course marked with pylons that has hairpin turns at each end.

Besides Barber and Roos, other schools offering advanced-driver training include the Porsche Precision Driving School, which is run at various tracks, including the Bridgehampton Race Circuit; Kuhn's school, Driving Incorporated U.S.A., which opened in March and also teaches at Giants Stadium; and Road Atlanta in Barselton, Ga., north of Atlanta.

Barber's marketing director, Bill Prout, says the school probably will teach 1,000 students this year at Lime Rock, more than double the number three years ago when it began offering the advanced-driving course. He said that another 800 people will take the course in Wisconsin and smaller numbers at the other locations.

"I loved it," said Rogers, the Connecticut broker. "I thought it was great. Rarely do you get a chance to take a car and drive it to the limit — push it — and learn how to control it once you lose it."

Congressional Workers Could Populate A Town

By W. Dale Nelson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — On New Year's Day, 1934, Alice Klopstad stepped off the train at Washington's Union Station, a 22-year-old shorthand whiz on her first trip away from her hometown of Spink, S.D.

The next day, she went to work as a secretary in Room 452 of the Senate Office Building, one of fewer than 600 employees on the staffs of the 96 senators and their committees.

How that 600 has grown. Today, about 4,000 people work for 100 senators; committees employ 1,700 more. The story in the House is similar. In 1934 there were 992 employees; in 1989, between members and committees, there are 9,683.

In all, more than 15,000 people work for Congress — enough for a medium-sized town.

One is Alice Klopstad Andersen, still deep in the congressional paper chase 55 years after she took her first dictation for South Dakota Democrat William J. Bulow. Since 1973, she has been the administrative assistant to Rep. Carlos J. Moorhead, R-Calif.

"Now, of course, it's so different," Mrs. Andersen says. "You think of a rural area and now it's a metropolis. It's that different."

It sure is. People worry about it. Political scientists write books about it.

Some say the staffs have grown too big, that all they do is help their bosses get re-elected.

Others disagree. Congress needs more staff, they say, because it has more work to do now.

As staffs have grown, so has their work space.

The office Alice Andersen unlocks each morning shortly after 8 a.m. is Room 2346 of the Rayburn House Office Building, one of three House office buildings — and two annexes — tourists encounter as they drive up the long slope of Independence Avenue to the south of the Capitol. On the northern, or Senate, side, are three Senate office buildings.

By mid-afternoon, Mrs. Andersen has papers spread all around her. Snatching some from a chair so a visitor can sit, she recalls that in 1934 she was one of four people on Bulow's Washington staff. He kept an office in South Dakota, to be sure, but it was in his home in Beresford.

Her current employer, Moorhead, has a staff of nine in Washington, plus two back home in Glendale and three more in Pasadena.

Such district staffs are typical. In 1959, roughly half the members of Congress had full-time, year-round offices in their states or districts.

Now all do, usually more than one. Sens. George Mitchell, D-Maine, and Albert Gore, D-Tenn., have eight home offices apiece. Sens. Donald Riegle and Carl Levin, both Michigan Democrats, each has seven. Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., has four district offices, staffed by 57 workers.

Many congressional staff members, both in Washington and at home, work on "constituent services" — dealing with complaints about their boss' stand on an issue, answering questions about legislation, helping voters penetrate the bureaucracies of the Social Security Administration or the Veterans Administration, for example.

Others assist their bosses in dealing with the welter of legislation before them.

One recent day, as the Senate debated the budget resolution, four senators were on the floor. Two aides flanked Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., thrusting papers in front of him. Across the aisle, Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., conferred with two aides. More than a dozen others sat on a red plush bench in the rear of the chamber.

Or consider the role of staffs in melding divergent House and Senate versions of legislation into one bill both houses can accept. For example:

In Room 2175 of the Rayburn Building, where House and Senate conferees are discussing the minimum wage bill, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., chairman of the Senate Labor Committee, leans through the conference agenda.

"It is my understanding," he says, "that there has been agreement at the staff level and we do have recommendations on items 2, 3, 8, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14 and 16. It is my understanding we can just go through those or just move to adopt them if there is no further discussion."

There is none. Items 4 to 7, on the other hand, deal with the sub-minimum training wage, a key point of dispute between congressional Democrats and the Bush administration.

"We have indicated they couldn't be part of a staff recommendation and would be decided by the members," Kennedy says. After brief discussion, the items are left in.

At that point, Kennedy and Sen. James Jeffords, R-Vt., the only senators present, must leave for a vote on the floor. Representing the Senate side is left to John V. Harvey Jr., 33, chief labor counsel of the committee, and a cluster of other staff members.

That brief meeting on May 2 was the culmination of weeks of staff work, beginning when the bill passed the Senate on April 12.

Democratic and Republican Senate aides met separately to formulate their positions. Then all the Senate aides got together. There were similar meetings in the House. Then there were four meetings of aides with the members of the conference committee, going through the agenda item by item, making objections, agreeing on changes.

After each preliminary meeting, says one aide, the staffs carried the changes to their bosses for approval. "The member is always involved in terms of final approval," he says.

When the conference committee met, says the aide, who commented on the condition he not be identified, "It was really easy. We didn't know until that moment that it was going to be easy."

Mrs. Andersen, reflecting on what staff members do, says, "There's a volume of work. I wouldn't think we needed all those people, but..." She lets the thought trail off.

Others are more blunt. "Basically, they will get as many staff members as they possibly can," says Mark Liedl, director of the Congressional Assessment Project of the conservative Heritage Foundation. "As their power grows, they are able to get into more and more mischief, and I think having the staff is just another resource that allows them to."

On the other hand, Christopher J. Deering, an associate professor of political science at George Washington University who specializes in the study of Congress, says the number of congressional staff members is "hardly outrageous when you compare it to the size of the operation and the responsibilities that they have. It's really quite an appropriate staff level, it seems to me."

Still, it is by far the largest staff of any legislative body in the world. The Canadian Parliament, which is second, has an administrative staff of 1,700 and an additional 1,500 employees who work for members.

The swelling of congressional staffs — from just over six per senator when Mrs. Andersen arrived in Washington to 40 or more today — was sharply criticized in a 1980 book by Michael J. Malbin, then a research fellow at the conservative-leaning American Enterprise Institute.

In "Unelected Representatives," Malbin wrote that the staggering growth in the number of aides "has reinforced a situation in which the deliberative aspect of representation gets short shrift on all but the broad outlines. ... The process no longer forces members to talk to each other to resolve the tough issues."

Deering says members of Congress range "all the way from a member who is pretty much staff-driven to members who don't deal with their staffs at all."

Rep. Norman D. Dicks, D-Wash., has seen the process from both sides. Before his election to the House in 1976, he served for three years as legislative assistant and later administrative assistant to the late Sen. Warren Magnuson.

In the House, Dicks finds, there is "more direct member involvement and interest" than in the Senate because the 435 representatives are not spread as thinly among the committees as the 100 senators are.

"You hear some grouching in the cloakroom about how we have to go to conferences and the senators sometimes don't show up and you've got to deal with the staff of the Senate," he says. He adds, however, that as a member of the House Appropriations Committee he has been "impressed with the level of knowledge that the Senate subcommittee chairmen have and you didn't feel that they were being led around by the staff."

"I think, frankly, that the American people get a good return on the investment in congressional staff," Dicks says.

So do the members of Congress, he adds.

Staff members "can make or break you. If they make mistakes and get you in trouble, it can hurt you. On the other hand, if they do a good job, it can do you an enormous amount of good. It's a big advantage for the incumbent."

Indeed it is, say critics, and that's the rub.

"If they are helping Congress solve national problems, then it's good," says the Heritage Foundation's Liedl. "If they are focusing more on doing activities that help their individual congressmen expand and keep power, as in helping them get re-elected, then it's disturbing."

Dicks is by no means alone as a member of Congress who graduated from being an aide to a lawmaker from his state.

House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., worked for the late Sen. Henry M. Jackson. Mitchell, the Senate majority leader, worked for Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine. Nancy Landon Kassebaum, R-Kan., worked for Sen. James Pearson.

Congressional aides also move on to other jobs in Washington. A check of 58 biographical sketches of key government officials in the Federal Staff Directory for 1988 showed that 10 of them had worked on Capitol Hill. They included an assistant attorney general, two assistant secretaries of state, the director of an independent agency and members of three full-time commissions. Like the senators and representatives they work for, the staff aides get lobbied.

"To be honest with you, most of our nuts-and-bolts work is done with the staff members," says Jim Magill, legislative director of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, who sometimes makes his point with staff members over lunch. He buys.

"Probably the most visible of our work is appearing before the various committees and subcommittees where we make our testimony, but that usually is the final stage in a very long and drawn-out process of working with the staff members and drafting legislation and also working with the staff members to get the member that they work for to offer amendments."

Added Guests Upset Bride

Dear Abby: I'm planning my wedding and have encountered a problem that seems to be common among recent brides.

My parents, who have limited funds, are paying for my wedding, so we sent invitations to those we wanted, and we included a response card.

To our surprise, many of the response cards came back with "and friend" written in — also, some of the couples had added "and children."

It was very awkward having to telephone these people to tell them we couldn't accommodate their "friend" or children. And can you believe that some people were angry?

I suppose because the response card leaves a blank for them to fill in the number of people, some folks feel they are entitled to invite whomever else they want.

Abby, please make this clear in your column. Brides everywhere will appreciate it. — One Of Them

Dear One: I am in favor of doing away with response cards with "blanks" to fill in to indicate how many will attend. Too many people believe the blank is an invitation to invite as many people as they wish.

The number of guests invited can be found on the envelope of the invitation: If it is addressed to Mr. and Mrs. John Jones, only those two will be expected. And an invitation addressed to Mary Smith means only Mary is expected.

Readers, please pay attention. A battalion of brides is getting nervous indigestion from response cards filled in with the names of friends and relatives.

Dear Abby: My 6-year-old niece (I'll call her Nancy) caused a scene in the grocery store. She hit her grandmother on the back as they stood in the checkout line. Grandma had bought Nancy a treat that she had wanted to be put into her own shopping bag, but Grandma put the treat in her own purse instead, so Nancy hit her and said, "I wanted it in my own bag, I said!"

She was marched out of the store and given a slight slap and a stern talking-to for her actions. My niece agreed that she would never do it again and was given her treat.

My question is: Should this scene be banished from conversation in front of other family members? The child's grandmother, who happens to be my mother, thinks that since

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Nancy doesn't want anyone to know (probably from embarrassment and guilt), no one should mention it.

I believe that since when one grows older, one's crimes are printed along with one's name in the newspaper, children should learn early in life that unacceptable behavior should not be hidden. I also believe that a little ostracism is very effective punishment. My mother disagrees and insisted that I ask for your opinion. — Name Withheld On Request

Dear Name Withheld: Your niece's "crime" was more an impulsive reaction than a serious offense. I agree with your mother. I see no reason to humiliate Nancy further by mentioning the incident to the family. The child was punished and seems to have learned her lesson, so it's best forgotten.

Bochco Plans Comedy-Drama

By Kathryn Baker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — The logo of Steven Bochco's new production company, making its debut in the fall, will be an animated 50-year-old picture of his violinist father.

Rudolph Bochco, who died in 1977, was in part the inspiration for the first series from Steven Bochco Productions, "Doogie Howser, M.D.," a half-hour comedy-drama about a 16-year-old doctor. The show will premiere this fall on ABC, the first production from Bochco's 10-series deal with the network.

"I've sort of always been interested in prodigies," Bochco told a meeting of the Television Critics Association. "My dad was a prodigy. And he was a violinist. It's just a fascinating kind of freak of nature. They don't really understand why it happens."

Prodigies were on Bochco's mind when he hit upon "the notion of a kid who by virtue of very specific circumstances had all of those prodigious abilities kind of laser-focused onto medicine. ...

"I think a show like this, assuming an audience accepts the fundamental premise, can be very entertaining for years to come. Whether other people find it as intrinsically interesting as I do — gee, I don't know. I hope they do."

Bochco said he approached a doctor friend and asked, would it be possible for a 16-year-old to practice medicine.

"He said, well, I don't know but let me look into this, and I'll get back to you. He got back to me a day or two later. There are absolutely no restrictions whatsoever on anybody of any age who has completed the required educational training to practice medicine.

"I said, you mean to tell me that a boy of 16, who can't go into a grocery store and buy a six-pack of beer can write a prescription for morphine?"

It might be technically feasible for a 16-year-old genius to work as a doctor, but it remains to be seen whether audiences will buy the premise, packaged as it is as a half-hour "dramedy." The form has failed to win high Nielsen ratings in the past. Bochco's own "Hooperman" lasted only two seasons, but that made it the longest-running of the batch of dramedies that showed up a couple of years ago. (Except for "The Days and Nights of Molly Dodd," but that show had to move to cable to stay in production.)

Bochco has not given up on the format.

"People have only been attempting these kinds of half-hours for a short time, and it's not unexpected that the majority of them, like the majority of everything else, will fail. I continue to believe it's an extremely viable form," he said. "... I mean, I think 'Wonder Years' is a real successful show, and I don't think it falls into a typical half-hour sitcom format."

In the pilot, Doogie, played by newcomer Neil Patrick Harris, kisses his first girl and suffers his first crisis as a physician, ending the episode on a distinctly bittersweet note. His parents are played by James B. Sicking ("Hill Street Blues") and Belinda Montgomery, who played Sonny Crockett's ex-wife in "Miami Vice."

Bochco said subsequent episodes will not be as heavy on the drama as the pilot, but he felt a serious approach was necessary at the outset to establish the "credibility" of the premise.

Filmmaking A Big Business In Louisiana

By Mary Foster
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW ORLEANS — Open with a shot of the sun setting on a steamy Mississippi River town. Cut to a smoke-filled room.

A ceiling fan turns slowly as corrupt cops, officials on the take and greedy politicians discuss shake-downs, kickbacks and under-the-table deals. As a B-grade movie it might play, but Louisiana officials say it isn't reality.

They believe they've cleaned up whatever image problems the state's film industry had as a result of last year's indictments of two New Orleans police officers, an employment office worker and the former director of the state film commission.

"Filmmaking is big business and it's a growing business in Louisiana, but there was no doubt that the state had an image problem for a while," said Tisa Lavolette, director of the Louisiana Film and Video Commission.

Those indicted were accused of funneling jobs to a favored few when movies, TV shows or commercials were made in Louisiana. When the stories hit the trade publications in Hollywood, they did not go unnoticed, said Ron Neter, unit manager for one major movie shot in New Orleans.

"Sure, people talked about it," he said. "It was the only incident of that kind I ever heard of. The situation was dealt with, though. I think the fact that the state brought the people to trial showed that they won't allow that sort of thing."

The indictments came after shooting the hit Dennis Quaid movie, "The Big Easy," which was ironically about police corruption in New Orleans. There were two acquittals and one conviction in 1988, and numerous cases were put on hold, with no trial dates likely to be set.

Since then, moviemaking moved ahead full steam in the state.

In the last year, Albert Finney and a horde of machine-gun carrying gangsters took over New Orleans streets in the prohibition-era "Millers Crossing." Paul Newman portrayed former Louisiana Gov. Earl Long and cavorted with a stripper in the movie "Blaze." And "The Blob" oozed its way through the little town of Abbeville for a remake.

Dale Pollock, the producer of "Blaze," admitted to being a bit leery of Louisiana's reputation before coming to the state.

"We had heard that some of the film commissioners had been indicted and the teamsters in Louisiana have always had a tough reputation," he said.

"I had some doubts about what we would be asked for or if people were going to want something slipped to them under the table. We haven't come across anything like that, however. The new film commission is working to make sure no one gets that impression of the state from now on."

"Miller's Crossing," "The Blob" and "Blaze" poured $128 million into the depressed Louisiana economy in 1988, Lavolette said.

"Out of that amount, I'd say there was $40 million in cold hard cash left behind in Louisiana. A very conservative estimate is that it has an economic impact of $120 million by the time it turns over in the community, and I think we could double that figure."

The slogan of the commission is "Shoot the other LA," and people are listening, she said. "In the last few years, filmmaking in Louisiana has really gone up. We normally averaged seven films a year shot here. In 1988 we did 14 and 1989 looks equally promising."

Even though 42 states have film offices and actively compete for business, California remains the film leader of the United States, with New York close at its heels.

Though not always cheaper, it's easier to make a movie outside California. One-stop, state-controlled film offices are preferred to California's patchwork approach, where local governments issue permits with fluctuating fees and have requirements that are 70 years old.

Celebrities Carve Out New Niches In Real Estate

By Ruth Ryon
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LOS ANGELES — New York blizzards and a Broadway part that he hated convinced actor Dick Derr, a leading man in the 1950s, to house-sit in California for a friend.

The first night Derr was in Hollywood, he met another actor who talked him into going to real estate school. "When I got there, I knew half the people in the room," Derr said, referring to show-business acquaintances.

He finished school, got his real estate license and began a 25-year career selling homes on the Westside of Los Angeles.

Derr is one of dozens of actors, athletes and other celebrities and quasi-celebs who have carved out new careers selling Southern California real estate.

They range from former University of California, Los Angeles, quarterback Gary Beban to Dodger pitcher Joe Moeller, from actress Phyllis Avery, who was a regular on TV in the 1950s and '60s, to veteran character actor Jack Ging, to a former Rockette and a Las Vegas showgirl.

They say they were drawn to real estate by its similarities to their lives in the limelight: flexible hours, a feeling of independence, working on a project basis, the opportunity to negotiate, an element of risk, people orientation and a need for self-discipline.

Beban, the 1967 Heisman Trophy winner from UCLA who is now president of Los Angeles-based Coldwell Banker Commercial Real Estate Services, said, "All the aspects of discipline and sacrifice that go into being a success in athletics can be used to be a success in business."

Like Beban, some former celebrities break entirely with their former professions, while others try to balance careers.

Talking about such co-starring roles as the one he played in the movie "When Worlds Collide" (1951, with Barbara Rush), Derr, who works with Mimi Styne Associates in Beverly Hills, Calif., said, "I'm no longer a name, but I still do some small parts."

Veteran character actor Ging works in the movies and TV as much as he does in real estate. He was in the TV miniseries "War and Remembrance" and its predecessor, "Winds of War." He appeared as a regular on TV's "Riptide" and "The A-Team" series, and is preparing to do a movie with Clint Eastwood.

At 57, Ging has been an actor for 30 years. He has been selling homes for the Fred Sands' office in Malibu, Calif., for 10 years.

"Being a character actor, I had a lot of time on my hands, so I started selling real estate. A woman broker I knew said I would be a natural because I knew everybody. ... I just did a show with Brian Keith and sold him a house."

Most brokers in the area know Ging by now, "but some clients ... have said, 'God, I know that face,' his wife said.

Most of the 42 people interviewed for this story said they used acquaintances from their previous professions to advance their real estate careers. Some of the 42 even profit, if only in terms of recognition, from their famous surnames or relatives.

Kraig Kristofferson, younger brother of actor-singer Kris, said, "In the old days, people didn't know how to spell the name (Kristofferson), but now it's pretty recognizable." Kraig Kristofferson has been selling commercial real estate with Coldwell Banker in San Diego for 16 years.

Barbara Robinson, wife of Baltimore Orioles Manager Frank Robinson, said that she has had more entertainers than athletes as clients during her 15 years as a sales agent but credits her marriage for helping her represent such stars as Eddie Murphy, the Jacksons and Julio Iglesias in buying homes. She works at Alvarez, Hyland & Young in Beverly Hills, Calif.

"Athletes and entertainers are very similar in temperament," she said. "They aren't business people. There are no facades. And, after being married to one of these types for 28 years, it's easy for me to understand them."

Avery is another person who got into real estate after acting.

From age 16, she performed in seven Broadway shows, starting with "Charley's Aunt," starring Jose Ferrer. In the '50s, she was Ray Milland's TV wife and George Gobel's second "Alice." In the '60s, she was a vice principal on the TV show "Mr. Novak," starring James Franciscus. But for the past 20 years, she has been selling homes.

"When I got into (real estate), I had hit the 40-year-old mark, and there wasn't much going on for actresses past the young, leading-lady stage," she said. She left show business to sell real estate on Los Angeles' Westside, where she has lived since she was a child.

Valerie Fitzgerald was an Eileen Ford career model for nine years, made 200 commercials and appeared on "Love Boat" and "Fantasy Island" before going into real estate, on the advice of a friend, in 1984.

"All the top models in New York were my good buddies," she said, "but few asked themselves, 'What happens when you're not the most beautiful and life is not your oyster?'"

Athletes face much the same problem.

Beban, who wound up his UCLA career in 1968 as an All-American and Heisman winner, called it quits in professional football after only two years.

"As my professional career was winding down, I had a teammate from UCLA who had joined Coldwell Banker (Commercial Real Estate Services)," Beban said. His friend suggested that Beban do the same. "So I was fortunate because of a teammate."

He became an industrial property specialist in 1970 and is now president of the Los Angeles-based company.

Many ballplayers aren't as lucky as Beban and don't have the foresight to work during their off-seasons.

Ken Forsch, who retired in 1986 after pitching 10 years for the Houston Astros and five years for the California Angels, learned the mortgage brokerage business and got his real estate sales license during his off-seasons. When he retired, he joined the Anaheim, Calif., office of Grubb & Ellis Commercial Real Estate Services, where he works now.

Ex-pitcher Moeller, who signed with the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1960 while still in high school and played with them for 11 years, said that he knew his baseball career would end sometime, so he got a college degree while playing ball.

Not long after he retired from sports, he started selling houses, because he was interested in them from childhood, when his father built the family home in Manhattan Beach, Calif.

"Selling real estate is like going into the ninth inning, with the runners on bases and the game on the line," said Moeller, who works for RE-MAX Beach Cities. "So, baseball prepared me for real estate."

Former wide receiver George Farmer, who was drafted from UCLA by the Chicago Bears in 1969 and played for them for six years before spending two years with the Detroit Lions, used his off-seasons learning about real estate investment.

Elegant Chicken Is Easy, Quick

This hurry-up world leaves little time to spend in the kitchen but chicken can keep pace with busy cooks who still like to make mealtime special.

Quick and easy chicken dishes provide wholesome, satisfying meals that can be on the table in minutes with no sacrifice of pleasure or good nutrition.

The National Broiler Council developed two recipes which anyone can serve with speed and pride. Both require a minimum of ingredients, preparation and cooking time.

Tarragon Chicken, with leg-thigh combinations, is ideal for dark meat lovers but can also be made with other favorite chicken parts. It's a tasty blend of flavors that is both subtle and delicious.

Quick and Elegant Chicken looks and tastes as if it were hours in the making but can actually be on the table in half-an-hour, start to finish. Or, if guests are expected, it can be cooked slowly at 300° for an hour while the group gathers and the salad is tossed.

An added bonus for the health-conscious: both dishes are low in calories, sodium and cholesterol.

TARRAGON CHICKEN

4 broiler-fryer chicken leg-thigh combinations
 ¼ cup flour
 1 tsp. salt
 ½ tsp. tarragon
 ½ tsp. pepper
 4 tbsps. tarragon vinegar
 3 tbsps. olive oil

On a piece of wax paper, mix together flour, salt, tarragon and pepper. Place vinegar in a shallow dish. Roll each piece of chicken in vinegar, then dust lightly with flour mixture. In large non-stick frypan, place olive oil and heat over medium-high temperature. Add chicken and cook, turning, about 10 minutes or until brown on all sides. Pour any remaining vinegar over chicken. Reduce heat to medium low and continue to cook, turning until chicken is done (about 20 minutes) and fork

QUICK AND ELEGANT CHICKEN

4 boneless chicken breasts or 8 boneless thighs
 1 cup plain yogurt

1 tbsp. dried, chopped onion
 2 tps. dehydrated beef broth
 2 tbsps. sherry
 ½ tsp. salt
 ¼ tsp. pepper
 8 oz. fresh mushrooms, sliced

In small bowl, mix together yogurt, dried onion, dehydrated beef broth and sherry. Arrange chicken in 2-quart shallow baking dish; sprinkle with salt and pepper and cover with sliced mushrooms. Pour yogurt mixture over mushrooms and chicken; cover with foil. Bake in 375° oven for about 25 minutes or until fork can be inserted in chicken with ease. Serve over rice. Makes 4 servings.

McCall's Puts Best Recipes Into New Book

By Carol Deegan
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — For generations, readers have clipped the pages of McCall's magazine, saving menus, recipes and monthly cookbook sections.

Marianne Langan, McCall's food editor, has gathered the recipes from the magazine's 12 monthly issues for 1988 into one volume, McCall's Best Recipes 1989 ($19.95).

The magazine plans to make the cookbook an annual event, and is already working on next year's issue. Langan says the idea came from Oxmoor House in Birmingham, Ala., which publishes Southern Living magazine's annual cookbook.

More than 400 recipes are included in the 272-page cookbook. Ideas for garnishing and presentation are illustrated by 120 full-color photographs.

The cookbook has 12 sections, organized by month, with special cookbook sections and recipes appropriate to the seasons. For example, all of the recipes in the August chapter are winners from state-fair competitions and cookbooks. The December chapter includes a Christmas cookbook section, no-bake cookie houses and "gifts from the kitchen."

"Lite Eating" recipes, focusing on low-calorie recipes, "Quick & Easy" recipes, and microwave dishes can be found throughout the cookbook. Also featured: ways to perk up packaged foods, hurry-up entrees, 10-minute breakfasts, handy substitutions, and tips for storing, freezing and purchasing foods.

"Our staff is responsible for the development of every recipe on our pages," Langan said in an interview here. Each recipe is tested no less than five times and is then rechecked by someone on the staff who did not do the initial development.

Langan says today's cooks are interested in chicken recipes, outdoor cooking, desserts, casseroles, low-calorie and low-fat foods, and easy-to-prepare dishes.

She says McCall's readers are also interested in taste, flavor, presentation and ease of preparation.

"I have always believed we are a nation that eats with our eyes," Langan says, "and that even mistakes in flavoring or less-than-perfect cooking techniques will often be overlooked when the dish is beautifully presented."

Langan joined McCall's editorial staff as the food editor in 1986. She has worked for Campbell Soup Co. and for Nabisco Brands.

CUCUMBER CHICKEN

 1 chicken-flavored bouillon cube
 1 cup water
 ¼ tsp. garlic powder
 4 boneless chicken-breast halves, skinned (1¼ lbs.)
 1 cup plain low-fat yogurt
 1½ tps. lemon juice
 1 tsp. cornstarch
 ½ tsp. dried dillweed

With tip of vegetable parer, score cucumbers lengthwise all around. Cut in half lengthwise. Remove seeds, cut crosswise in ¼-inch slices; set aside.

In large skillet, dissolve bouillon in water; add garlic powder and bring to boiling. Add cucumbers and chicken; poach 5 minutes, until chicken is tender. Remove cucumbers and chicken; place on serving platter.

In bowl, combine yogurt, lemon juice, cornstarch and dillweed; blend into broth in skillet. Cook, stirring until thickened and smooth. Spoon over chicken and cucumbers. If desired, garnish with fresh dill and lemon. Makes 4 servings.

CHICKEN JAMBALAYA

2 tbsps. reduced-calorie margarine
 1 lb. boneless chicken breasts, skinned and cut into 2-inch pieces
 1 medium onion, chopped
 1 medium green pepper, cut into ½-inch pieces
 1 large clove garlic, crushed

White Chocolate Is Back

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PURCHASE, N.Y. — The confection Europeans call "white chocolate" has come full circle in the United States. At one time considered a rare delicacy, it can now be found in the candy aisles, baking shelves and ice cream sections of local supermarkets.

Marty Friedman, editor of New Product News, says white chocolate will be the "hot" chocolate of the 1990s. He lists white chocolate as one of the top 15 new food trends.

The world's first white chocolate, Nestle Galak, was launched in Switzerland over 65 years ago. It is now sold in 33 countries.

White chocolate was not manufactured and distributed in the United States until 1984. That year, Nestle introduced its Nestle Superior Quality Alpine White with Almonds bar. Alpine White is now second in company sales.

The basic ingredients in white chocolate are cocoa butter, milk, sugar and vanilla flavoring. Because there is no chocolate liquor in white chocolate, it is technically not considered chocolate in the United States. The Food and Drug Administration says that for a product to be called chocolate, it must contain at least 10 percent chocolate liquor.

The fibrous, non-fat portion of chocolate liquor (cocoa solids) gives dark or milk chocolate its color and particular taste. White chocolate does not contain this element. It is cocoa butter, which comes from the cocoa bean, that gives white chocolate its distinct chocolate flavor, texture and ivory color.

ALPINE WHITE FRUIT TART

Pastry for 9-inch pie shell
 ½ cup sugar
 ¼ cup flour
 1 cup milk
 3 egg yolks
 One 6-oz. package Nestle Premier White baking bars, chopped
 1 tsp. vanilla extract
 ¼ cup apricot jam
 2 kiwifruit, peeled and sliced
 1 cup raspberries

Preheat oven to 425°. Line a 9-inch tart pan with pastry, trim edges. With fork, prick pastry in several places to prevent pastry from puffing. Bake 10-12 minutes, until crust is lightly browned. Cool on wire rack.

In medium saucepan, combine sugar, flour and milk. Gradually stir in egg yolks. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until mixture boils. Reduce heat and cook, constantly whisking for 3 minutes, until mixture is thickened and smooth.

Remove from heat; add baking bars and vanilla; stir until smooth. Transfer to medium bowl, press plastic wrap directly on surface and refrigerate until chilled, about 30 minutes. Remove tart shell from pan.

In small saucepan heat apricot jam. Brush jam over bottom of tart shell; let stand 5 minutes. Spread baking bar mixture in tart shell. Arrange fruit on top. Refrigerate until ready to serve. Makes 6-8 servings.

'X-Rated' Pasta Sauce Tastes Great, Despite The Anchovies

By Charlyne Varkonyi
 LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

You have to be open-minded to enjoy this pasta sauce. No conservatives or blue noses need apply.

Even though there are anchovies in the sauce, they are made into a paste while cooking and they will not offend even die-hard anchovy-haters.

It is not the ingredients that spike this dish with controversy; it is the story that goes with the sauce.

The "G" rating name is quickie Neapolitan sauce, acceptable for consumption by anyone from your mother-in-law to members of the Sunday church group. But in the folklore of Naples, where this classic quick-cook recipe originated, the natives use the "X" rating name — spaghetti alla putanesca, also known as Neapolitan streetwalker's pasta or hooker's pasta.

One legend has it that the women of the evening would prepare this dish for their customers from items that were readily available in their kitchens. Another version says that the quick-cooking sauce could be put on the stove right before the cus-tomar arrived and would be finished in 30 minutes — about the time the customer was ready to leave.

Most of the adaptations of this famous sauce contain all the piquant ingredients — olives (usually black), capers, anchovies and hot pepper flakes. A little tomato paste is sometimes used as well. Our version uses both black and green olives for color and chopped tomatoes for texture. Any pasta can be used, but the use of tri-color pasta makes the presentation even more appetizing.

Items you should have in your pantry include: olive oil, garlic, capers, red crushed pepper and Parmesan cheese.

Your 10-item or fewer shopping list should include:

1 can anchovies (2 ounces)
 1 can sliced black olives (2¼ ounces)
 1 jar green olives
 Fresh basil
 1 can chopped tomatoes (28 ounces)
 12 ounces tri-color pasta
 Italian bread
 Fresh fruit from the salad bar or fresh figs
 Cheese

QUICKIE NEAPOLITAN SAUCE

2 tbsps. olive oil
 1 can anchovies (2 oz.)
 2 cloves garlic, chopped
 2 tbsps. capers
 1 can (2¼ oz.) sliced black olives
 16 stuffed green olives, sliced
 Fresh basil, about 6 big leaves
 1 can chopped tomatoes (28 oz.)
 ¾ cup water
 Pinch red crushed pepper
 12 oz. multi-colored pasta, see note
 Parmesan cheese

Put oil in saucepan and add anchovies. While cooking on medium high, mix with wooden spoon until broken up into paste. Add chopped garlic and cook until brown, about 2 minutes. Pour tomatoes into saucepan, add water and simmer about 5 minutes. Meanwhile, slice olives. Add olives and capers, basil and crushed pepper and simmer for about 15 minutes.

Cook pasta according to package directions, drain, rinse with warm water and serve with sauce and Parmesan cheese. Makes 4 servings.

Note: Look for pasta mixture of tomato, spinach and plain noodles.

Sorting Out The True Values In The Supermarket

Q: There are so many new food products at the store all the time. How can I tell which are the true values and which are gimmicks?

A: Jo Bartlett, an East Carolina University Food and Nutrition graduate, continues to work with us in Family Medicine. I ask her to spend some time in the grocery store from time to time and report to you about what she finds.

Our food market is indeed changing constantly, and even nutritionists at the Med Center have found it difficult to keep up with all the new products that show up. But, part of our work as nutritionists involves being aware of these products and advising our patients about them... so, trips to the supermarkets are a normal part of the schedule.

On a recent trip, I found several

Kathy Kolasa

Ph.D., ECU Dept. Family Medicine

products that were of interest, particularly to those of us watching the caloric and fat intakes in our diets. Salad dressings have slimmed down a lot lately. There are now several "oil-free" dressings offered which are both tasty; offer no fat and are very low in calories. Weight Watchers, Estee, Featherweight, and Kraft all offer several flavors. And, per tablespoon serving you get a mere 4-10 calories, depending on which flavor you choose. The prices were also very comparable. For those of you with a sweet tooth, but watching calories, there are now several new sweeteners available. I found "Sweet One," "Sweet Thing," and "Sprinkle Sweet" along with more familiar low calorie sweeteners like "Equal." Each of these sweeteners is very low in calories and some can even be used in cooking. Read your labels for ingredients and instructions prior to use to be sure the product meets with your specific dietary needs.

And... for something to help cool you off, there are lots of new flavors of low-sugar, low-calorie drinks and frozen desserts. Nestea Ice Teasers, Crystal Light and Kool-Aid all have a large variety of low-calorie beverages that can quench any thirst and won't add extra pounds around the midriff.

In the freezer section I found an abundance of goodies. Here's where you need to take caution though!! I found no single name brand product to be consistently low calorie and low fat. Check each label if you go exploring for new delights. Look at the calories per serving and then grams of fat per serving. A good rule of thumb is to get dessert products that have 30% or less of total calories from fat (less preferably). For example: a fudgsicle having 50 calories per serving should have no more than 1.5 grams of fat (or 14 calories from fat) per serving. Each gram of fat has a whopping nine calories (much higher than meats and grain products at four calories per gram)!

I also saw a lot of new "easy to prepare" packaged lunch foods. Be wary of the fat, calorie and salt content in some of these products. Again, read your labels since the produce varied tremendously in nutritional value. Some could easily be worked into a busy schedule and meal plan, but not all, so read those labels carefully.

If you have questions on specific products, please drop a line and we would be happy to try and find the information you are looking for. You can write directly to the manufacturer too and they will supply you with nutrition information.

Thanks, Jo. Many of our readers have been helped by Jo's surveillance of the stores. She gives much of this information to folks who take our weight control class. Winding Your Weigh Down. Jo, Linda Walker, and others teach in Family Medicine. Call for information about the next class.

Three Keys To Perfect Pancakes

By Joan Drake
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

There are three key principles to making good pancakes: consistency of the batter, proper heating of the griddle and recognizing when to turn the cakes.

Whether making pancake batter from scratch or a packaged mix, stir it just enough to moisten the dry ingredients. The batter should still be lumpy; overmixing makes the pancakes tough. For best results, cover the batter and refrigerate one to two hours so the flour expands and absorbs the moisture.

To cook the batter, preheat the griddle over medium heat. It is ready when a few drops of cold water sprinkled onto the surface "dance" and sizzle (Step 1). If the water just sits and boils, the griddle is not hot enough; if it evaporates instantly, reduce the heat.

Brush the griddle lightly with oil (Step 2) unless it has a non-stick surface or is very well seasoned. Other types of fat — shortening, butter or margarine — may be used if desired.

The easiest way to check the consistency of the batter is to cook a trial pancake. Typically, one-quarter cup batter forms a pancake about 5 inches in diameter. Pouring the batter close to the griddle surface (Step 3) helps to keep the pancake round and using a measuring cup assures uniform size.

Pancakes are ready to turn when bubbles form and begin to break on the upper surface and the edges look dry. Turn with a spatula wide enough to accommodate the size of the pancake. Normally, the first side needs to cook two to three minutes, but the second cooks in about half that time. Turn the pancakes only once.

The pancake should turn out golden brown, light and tender and be cooked through in the center. If the batter is too thick, adjust with a little water; if too thin, add a little flour.

Pancakes are best served at once, either in a stack with syrup, or stuffed, rolled or glazed with a sauce and run under the broiler. You can also vary the batter by stirring in one-half to three-quarters cup blueberries or one-third cup chopped nuts.

New Ice Cream Freezers Remind Many Of Joy Of Making Homemade Ice Cream

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Americans have rediscovered the joy of making homemade ice cream. It's an activity the entire family can enjoy, especially during hot summer months.

Thanks to a new array of inexpensive, uncomplicated and non-messy home ice cream freezers, ice cream lovers have begun making their favorite dessert in their own kitchens.

Ripened berries, peaches or melons can be transformed into vitamin-rich desserts. Recipes for Cantaloupe Cream and Frozen Banana Yogurt are provided by Donvier Ice Cream Maker.

If you've got a sweet tooth, try Hershey Cocoa's recipe for homemade Chocolate Ice Cream.

CANTALOUPE CREAM

- 3 1/2 cups cantaloupe chunks
- 1 cup half and half
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1/4 tsp. almond extract

In a blender or processor, puree cantaloupe with half and half. Stir in sugar and almond extract. Pour into ice cream freezer container. Process according to manufacturer's instructions. Makes 1 quart.

FROZEN BANANA YOGURT

- 2 cups chopped bananas
- One 16-oz. carton (2 cups) vanilla yogurt
- 1/2 cup milk
- 1/4 cup light corn syrup
- 1 tsp. vanilla extract

In a blender or processor, combine all ingredients. Puree. Pour into ice cream freezer container. Process according to manufacturer's instructions. Makes 1 quart.

EASY CHOCOLATE ICE CREAM

- One 14-oz. can sweetened condensed milk
- 1/2 cup cocoa
- 2 cups whipping cream
- 1 cup light cream
- 1 tsp. vanilla extract

In medium saucepan combine sweetened condensed milk and cocoa. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until mixture is smooth and slightly thickened, about 10 minutes. Remove from heat; cool slightly. Gradually add whipping cream, light cream and vanilla extract, beating with wire whisk until well blended; chill. Place in ice cream freezer container. Freeze according to manufacturer's instructions. Makes about 2 quarts.

Best Recipes Combined

- 1 cup uncooked rice
- One 16-oz. can whole tomatoes
- One 14-oz. can chicken broth
- 1/4 cup chopped parsley
- 1 tsp. dried basil leaves
- 1 tsp. hot red-pepper sauce
- 1/2 lb. large shrimp, shelled, tails intact
- 1 cup frozen peas

In large skillet, over medium heat, melt margarine. Add chicken, onion, pepper and garlic. Sauté 5 minutes. Add rice, cook 3 minutes, stirring often.

Add tomatoes and their liquid, the chicken broth, parsley, basil leaves and hot red pepper sauce. Bring to boiling. Simmer, covered, 15 minutes. Add shrimp and peas. Simmer, covered, 3 minutes, until shrimp are cooked and chicken is tender. Makes 6 servings.

POULTRY PRIMAVERA

- 1 medium spaghetti squash (about 3 pounds)
- 1/4 cup reduced-calorie margarine
- 1 lb. boneless chicken breasts, skinned and cut in 1/2-inch strips
- 1/2 lb. mushrooms
- 2 medium carrots, pared and thinly sliced
- 4 green onions, cut in 2-inch pieces
- 1/2 lb. snow pea pods
- 1/4 cup all-purpose flour
- 2 cups skim milk
- 1/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese

- 1/4 cup chopped pimiento
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- 1/8 tsp. pepper

Preheat oven to 350°. Cut squash in half lengthwise; discard seeds. Place halves, cut side down, in roasting pan. Add 1 inch water; cover with aluminum foil. Bake 45 minutes, or until tender.

In large skillet, over medium heat, melt margarine. Add chicken; sauté 3 minutes. Add mushrooms and carrots; sauté 3 minutes. Add green onions and snow peas; sauté 2 minutes. Stir in flour; gradually add milk. Cook, stirring constantly, until thickened and smooth. Stir in cheese, pimiento, salt and pepper.

With spoon, scrape squash lengthwise into strands. Arrange on platter; spoon primavera on top. Makes 4 servings.

Make Homemade Dyes For Children

NEW YORK (AP) — If you're out of those little vials of commercial food coloring and the kids are keen on coloring homemade clay dough, try these recipes:

- Yellow — Puree 1 carrot and 1/4 cup water in a blender.
- Red — Dice three beets and boil in 1 1/2 cups of water. Strain.
- Pink — Use frozen cranberry juice cocktail, thawed but not diluted.

Summer Fruits Are Terrific Sources Of Vitamins

By Toni Tipton
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Many of the summer's most prolific fruits, typically eaten out of hand or used to flavor and color recipes, also are superb sources of vitamins. This nutritional benefit makes them a wise choice to boost vitamin and mineral intake without having to resort to commercial vitamin supplements.

Apricots, peaches, cantaloupes and nectarines are packed with Vitamin A, Vitamin C, potassium, iron and fiber, while strawberries and oranges supply substantial amounts of Vitamin C. Honeydew and watermelon are noted primarily for their potassium content, which is modest: about 559 milligrams per 4-by-8-inch wedge of watermelon and 825 milligrams for a 1-10 slice of a five-pound honeydew.

On their own, cherries and plums have a marginal value too — 10 cherries or one plum provides only a fraction of the RDA for any vitamin or mineral. But combine them with other summer fruits or wholesome ingredients, such as Vitamin C-rich red peppers or high-iron spinach, and they make delicious summer salads.

Here are some nutritional values from the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Home and Garden Bulletin No. 72, "Nutritive Value of Foods," which may be helpful for those seeking to improve their vitamin intake without supplementation.

—One half cantaloupe provides about 1,000 international units more than the Recommended Dietary Allowance for Vitamin A and satisfies the RDA for ascorbic acid at the same time.

—One whole medium nectarine supplies about one-quarter of the day's requirement for Vitamin A.

—The entire day's need for Vitamin C can be met with just one cup of whole strawberries or one whole orange.

PLUM PASTA SALAD

8 oz. bow tie, wagon wheel or small shell pasta

- Boiling water
- 6 medium plums, sliced
- 1 small red pepper, cut into slivers
- 1/2 cup walnut or pecan halves
- 1/4 cup plain yogurt
- Basil Dressing

Drop pasta into large pot of water and cook over medium heat 8 minutes or until cooked as desired. Drain pasta. Cool. Combine pasta with plums, red pepper, walnuts and yogurt in large bowl. Add Basil Dressing and toss. Chill before serving. Makes 6 servings.

Basil Dressing

- 3/4 cup oil
- 1/3 cup white wine vinegar
- 2 tsps. minced garlic
- 1/4 cup chopped fresh basil leaves
- 1/2 tsp. salt

Combine oil, vinegar, garlic, basil and salt in jar with tight-fitting lid. Shake well to combine.

PLUM PASTA

- 1/3 cup white wine vinegar
- 1 tsp. minced garlic
- 1 tsp. sugar
- 1/2 tsp. salt, optional
- 1/2 tsp. crushed dried red pepper flakes
- 1/4 tsp. black pepper
- 1/3 cup olive oil

8 oz. bow tie pasta or other small macaroni-type pasta, cooked

9 medium plums, quartered vertically

- 1 cup thinly sliced green onions
- 1/2 cup toasted slivered almonds
- 4 oz. well-chilled feta cheese, crumbled

Combine vinegar, garlic, sugar, salt and peppers. Beat in oil. Toss with hot, cooked pasta. Cool to room temperature. Slice plum quarters 1/4-inch thick and fold into mixture along with green onions, almonds and cheese. Makes 10 servings.

CHERRY-MELON SALAD

- 1 cantaloupe, peeled
- Lettuce
- 2 cups cherries, pitted
- 1 small honeydew melon, cut into small chunks
- 2 peaches, peeled and sliced
- Grapes
- Celery Seed Dressing

Slice cantaloupe crosswise into 6 rings. Remove seeds. Place on lettuce-lined salad plates. Arrange cherries, honeydew, peaches and grapes in cantaloupe rings. Serve with Celery Seed Dressing. Makes 6 servings.

Celery Seed Dressing

- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1/4 cup vinegar
- 1 tsp. dry mustard
- 1 tsp. salt
- 1 cup oil
- 1 tbsp. celery seeds

Combine sugar, 2 tablespoons vinegar, mustard and salt in small bowl of electric mixer. Slowly beat in oil. Add remaining vinegar and continue beating until thick. Stir in celery seeds.

WARM APRICOT-PORK SALAD

- 3/4 cup coarsely chopped walnuts
- 1/2 cup red wine vinegar
- 1 tsp. sugar
- 1/2 tsp. dried tarragon

- 1/2 tsp. dried marjoram
- 1/2 tsp. dried thyme
- 1/2 cup olive oil
- 3/4 lb. boneless pork chops
- 4 cups torn assorted lettuce
- 3/4 lb. apricots

Place walnuts on baking sheet and toast in oven at 375 degrees until golden. Set aside.

Combine vinegar, sugar, tarragon, marjoram and thyme. Gradually beat in oil to emulsify. Set aside half of mixture. Pour remaining dressing over pork chops. Refrigerate, covered, 1 hour.

Broil or grill chops about 6 minutes per side, or until flesh turns white. Cut chops into 1/4-inch julienne pieces. Place lettuce in salad bowl. Cut apricots into sixths. Add to salad bowl along with walnuts and pork. Toss with dressing. Makes 2 to 4 servings.

SPINACH SALAD WITH FRUIT AND BEEF

- 1 lb. beef top round steak
- 2 tsps. white wine vinegar
- 1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
- 1 tsp. finely chopped onion
- 1 tsp. poppy seeds
- 1 tsp. sugar
- 1 clove garlic, chopped
- 1/2 tsp. chili powder
- 1/8 tsp. white pepper
- 3 tsps. oil
- 1 bunch fresh spinach leaves, stems removed

2 medium oranges, peeled and thinly sliced

2 cups sliced strawberries

Trim excess fat from steak. Broil 3 inches from heat, 6 to 7 minutes per side for rare or until desired doneness. Slice across grain into thick slices. Place in baking dish.

Combine vinegar, Worcestershire, onion, poppy seeds, sugar, garlic, chili powder and white pepper in blender container. Cover and mix until blended. With machine running, gradually add oil, blending until smooth. Pour over steak slices and cover. Refrigerate at least three hours, no longer than 24 hours.

Place spinach on serving plates. Arrange beef slices, orange and strawberry slices on spinach. Driz-

NECTARINE-RICE MADRAS

- 2 tsps. margarine
- 1/2 to 1 tsp. curry powder
- 1 cup uncooked long grain rice
- 2 cups chicken broth
- 1/2 cup seedless raisins
- 1/2 cup chopped green onions
- 1/2 cup finely chopped celery
- 2 tsps. chopped pimento
- 2 tsps. chopped chutney
- 1 tsp. pine nuts or toasted slivered almonds
- 1 tsp. red wine vinegar
- 1 tsp. brown sugar, packed
- 3 nectarines

Melt 1 tablespoon margarine and desired amount curry powder in skillet. Add rice and cook, stirring, over medium heat two minutes. Add chicken broth. Bring to boil, then reduce heat and simmer, covered, 15 to 20 minutes or until liquid is absorbed.

Meanwhile, melt remaining margarine in skillet. Add raisins, onions, celery, pimento, chutney and nuts and cook until vegetables are tender. Add vinegar and brown sugar.

Halve 1 nectarine. Dice one half. Add to chutney mixture, then cut remaining nectarine half into slices. Turn rice into shallow serving bowl. Slice remaining nectarines and use to surround bowl. Top rice with chutney. Makes 4 to 5 servings.

WHY BUY A JCPENNEY DIAMOND?

1. Cut, Color and Clarity of each stone must meet the exacting standards of JCPenney diamond inspectors.
2. Each diamond is marked for carat fineness, quality and weight.
3. An array of styles for every occasion is always available.
4. Hundreds of additional selections are available through our Special Order Book.
5. JCPenney offers a liberal Trade-in policy.

TRADE-IN CERTIFICATE

When you present this certificate, you can trade in your JCPenney diamond and get full credit for its purchase price when you trade up to a newer, more expensive diamond.

Sale prices effective through Sat., Aug. 19th. Jewelry photos may be enlarged to show detail. Diamond sale includes only that jewelry where diamonds constitute the greatest value. Percentage off represents savings on regular prices. Sale excludes those items designated as Smart Values. Bridal sets also sold separately. Jewelry available only at JCPenney stores with Fine Jewelry Departments. Selection may vary.
