Liberty The Dog Sniffs Out Arsonists

By L.L. Grimmer
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Liberty the yellow Labrador is hot on the trail — of arson. The 2-year-old Labrador retriever helps the State Bureau of Investigation probe suspicious fires.

"Working with her isn't like working with some other police-trained dog," said SBI agent Phil Brinkley, Liberty's handler. "Outside of the work situation, she's just an easy-going, gentle dog."

But on the job, she's all business.

Based at the Greenville office of the SBI, Brinkley and Liberty have been to about 10 fires since they first went into business near the end of last month.

Liberty is trained to sniff out hydrocarbons — chemical residues left behind after a fire.

"She's trained to discriminate between naturally occurring hydrocarbons, and those that arise from an accelerant," he said.

Naturally occurring hydrocarbons include residues from synthetic fibers and plastics. Liberty will ignore those, but stops in her tracks when she comes up on something that's not supposed to be there, like "accelerants" such as gasoline or kerosene.

The program started three years ago with a black Lab named Matty, who works with the Connecticut State Police, Brinkley said. Last spring, there was an opportunity for North Carolina SBI agents to learn the procedures.

"I'm not a dog handler," Brinkley said. "I was just an agent assigned to the fire investigation unit. I volunteered to go up there because we saw the need, and we couldn't pass up the opportunity. And I like dogs."

So far, he said, it appears she can sniff out about 17 chemicals, like the dog in Connecticut.

It seems like the talented animal could use her miracle-sniffer to find drugs and hazardous chemicals. But Brinkley said that would destroy the purpose of the program.

"This program is designed to do arson work, and we can do things that are related," he said.

"But if she's stopping and alerting every chemical, there's no way we can know what to look for."

Working with the four-footed fire investigator has its rewards — not just for the SBI.

Liberty is given chunks of beef or dog food as a reward for doing her job.

Brinkley said she's making their jobs easier, too.

"A dog has a sensitivity of smell to such a degree, that it's more sensitive than whatever lab tests we can run," he said.

"She makes it easy to pinpoint where an accelerant could have come from. We get the hints from the dog, and then can confirm it with our tests. It's a good check-and-balance system."

Brinkley said before the dog's strong sense of smell was put to work, investigators would have to pull up huge sections of carpet or floorboards to get an accurate reading. Now, he says, Liberty can direct them to exactly the spot that needs testing.

Earlier this week, the pair was called in to investigate a fire at a Barium Springs furniture plant. They worked alongside chemists, explosives experts, photographers and crime-scene specialists.

"We usually start out with a general search to see what the dog will pick up on her own," Brinkley said. "After the initial walk-through, we'll go back and do a specific search."

"I'll tell her, 'Let's go to work.' She knows she's looking for an odor."

He said they'll usually start looking at the same areas as human investigators — cracks in the floor, anyplace where accelerants are expected to be found.

And then she'll sit down on the job — right where she smells a chemical.

"Her alert is to sit," Brinkley said. "Then she gets a food reward." He said they can get her to be more specific, and she'll

U.S. And Israel To Pool Efforts

By Christopher Connell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush, saying he doesn't want to miss any signal that might lead to freedom for American hostages, is again extending a hand to Iran while insisting he won't make any deals.

"I hope I'm open-minded enough to talk and to exercise every diplomatic channel I can to free these Americans," the president told reporters Wednesday.

However, Bush insisted he would do nothing "that would put some other American, perhaps in some other place, at some other time, at risk, and that means trading off or negotiating for hostages."

In developments abroad, Israel's Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir persuaded Bush in a 10-minute telephone call Wednesday night to coordinate efforts to release foreign hostages and Israeli prisoners held in Lebanon, a Shamir aide said today.

It was the first time the two leaders had talked since the hostage crisis flared following Israel's kidnapping of Moslem cleric Sheikh Abdel Karim Obeid from southern Lebanon on July 28, Israeli reports said.

Shamir assured Bush that Israel would include the eight American hostages in any deal to trade Obeid and other Shiite prisoners in Israel's hands for three Israeli soldiers held by the pro-Iranian Hezbollah movement in Lebanon, said Avi Pazner, a top aide to Shamir.

Also, the official Islamic Republic News Agency reported that the English-language Tehran Times said today that indirect talks between Iran and the United States on the hostage crisis will begin within days. The agency, monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus, quoted the Iranian newspaper as saying in an editorial the talks would be conducted through a third country, probably Pakistan.

Teachers Welcome Removal Of Freeze

By Kevin Boughal
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt County educators will be able to bank on an early thaw this year after the General Assembly lifted a freeze on teachers' wages that had been in effect since 1980.

Under a new 30-step salary plan settled on by House and Senate negotiators, teachers are expected to get pay raises ranging from zero to 15 percent, with most teachers falling in the 4 to 10 percent bracket. Most of the larger increases would go to experienced teachers.

"All in all, we are grateful for what we did get," said Connie Bright, a ninth-grade science teacher at North Pitt High School. "The North Carolina Association of Educators worked very hard to get the wages unfrozen and to get the teachers what they deserve."

The new salary schedules will be based on the number of years of experience. The schedules are divided into 30 levels (or 29 steps). There will be an average increase of 6 percent during the next two school years. When the program is fully implemented in 1991-92, there will be a 2 percent increase in between all the steps, except for the third and fourth steps which will have a 5 percent increase, according to the plan.

However, not all teachers will get the raise they want or expect, said

Rebel Spokesman Says Contras Are Fearful Of Return To Nicaragua

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A Contra rebel spokesman says fear of revenge by Sandinista supporters will keep most of the approximately 10,000 combatants from going back to their divided homeland in Nicaragua.

"They don't trust the Sandinistas," spokesman Bosco Matamoros said in an interview Wednesday. "These people have seen farmers, relatives, neighbors destroyed, killed by the state security."

The presidents of Honduras, Nicaragua, Guatemala, El Salvador and Costa Rica reached an agreement Monday that calls for disarming and disbanding the Contras based in Honduras by Dec. 5.

In return, Nicaragua promised to guarantee democracy and allow the Contras to return home.

However, Matamoros said, "We are not going to lay down our arms after 10 years of promises based on lies."

Most of the Contras live in squalor at jungle camps inside Honduras along the rugged mountains near the Nicaraguan border. Most of the troops trekked into the safe havens last year after Congress cut off military aid and barred the CIA from resupplying the rebels by air inside Nicaragua.

The United States has backed the rebels covertly or openly since 1981 in their fight to depose the leftist Sandinista government.

Congress in March approved a $49.8 million non-lethal Contra aid package that comes under review in November.

Former Assistant Secretary of State Elliot Abrams, a passionate Contra supporter, said Wednesday that congressional Democrats will try to use the review of the funds and the new Central American agreement to "try to starve the Contras into going back to Nicaragua" where they face an uncertain future because of the country's "communist government."

Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C., a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee who has made several trips to Nicaragua, said resettlement of the rebels would have to be decided on a case-by-case basis.

"Some certainly can't go home or (they) would see no future," Sanford said in a telephone interview. "Some would fear political retribution and some would think it hard to make a living there."

He said the United States was "obligated to relocate these people," but added, "Our policy has to be somewhat flexible."

Many of the rebels are illiterate peasants who know little other than the rural world of small farming.

"Thousands have suffered the loss of relatives, homes, to be free men," Matamoros said. "The idea is not to get a green card. But you do have an obligation. We are not a disposable good that the United States can disregard at will."

Some 50,000 people have been killed in the fighting, most of them civilians in the rural northern mountains and central plains. The years of battling have left deep scars in a nation where families often split their loyalties down the middle, with brothers literally fighting brothers.

Matamoros cited as an example the Galeano family. Thirty members fled Nicaragua to fight against the Sandinistas, who came to power in a 1979 revolutionary war that ousted the Anastasio Somoza dictatorship.

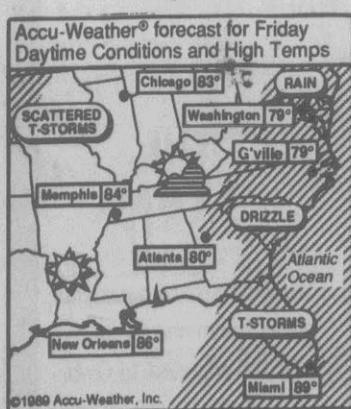

"They were small farmers who had nothing to do with Somoza," Matamoros said. "Their land was expropriated. They lost everything."

Family member Israel Galeano, who goes by the nom de guerre Comandante Franklin, has been a Contra troop commander for years.

"He could not go home," Matamoros said. "I think that every night he would have to prepare for an ambush. And there are hundreds such families."

"We are not guessing," he said. "We have seen 10 years of Sandinista rule."

Southern States Cut Infant Death Rates

By Spencer Rich
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Despite persistent poverty in their region, Southern states reduced infant mortality rates from 13 per 1,000 live births in 1983 to 12 in 1987, with all jurisdictions showing progress except the District of Columbia and Delaware, Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton said Wednesday.

In a report on a project begun five years ago by Southern governors and legislators to combat "tragically high infant mortality" in the Southern, Clinton called the progress satisfying and significant but noted that the 12 per 1,000 mortality rate for babies between birth and age one is still higher than the 10 per 1,000 nationally.

Clinton said that while there has been progress, particularly in the technology of keeping small babies alive, "the most important goal now is reducing the incidence of babies born at low birth weight through better prenatal care and the reduction of teenage pregnancies."

Babies with low birth weights are more likely to die or have costly medical problems, and Clinton said a report by the Institute of Medicine found that for every dollar spent on prenatal care for high-risk, low-income women, $3.38 is saved by avoiding the costs of intensive care and rehospitalization.

Four Southern states had infant mortality rates in 1987 that were below the national average. They were Texas with 9.1, Oklahoma with 9.6, Kentucky with 9.7 and West Virginia with 9.8. Virginia, Missouri, Arkansas and Florida were only slightly above 10.

The greatest gains were in South Carolina, where the infant death rate dropped from 15 per 1,000 in 1983 to 12.8 in 1987, and Texas, where it dropped from 11.1 to 9.1 per 1,000. Virginia, which fell from 11.9 to 10.1, also had one of the largest declines. Maryland dropped from 11.8 to 11.4.

Mississippi, at 13.7 deaths per 1,000 in 1987, had the highest mortality rate after D.C. and the Virgin Islands, but it also showed a drop of 1.4 deaths per 1,000 compared with 1983.

PCC Trustees Adopt Bond Resolution

By Amy Gavigan
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The board of trustees of Pitt Community College adopted a resolution Wednesday requesting the Pitt County Board of Commissioners to finance proposed building projects as required by the county's bond counsel.

The resolution, as drawn by the counsel, asks the county board to call a referendum on the question of issuing $10 million Community College bonds to provide funds for constructing, equipping and furnishing additional facilities and renovating and remodeling existing facilities for PCC. The funds would also provide for the acquisition of any necessary land.

"We have the capability to use money for land acquisition if any of the $10 million is left over," said PCC President Charles Russell. "Money used for buildings and/or land acquisition is included in the referendum."

There is flexibility in the resolution, according to PCC board member Joe Honeycutt.

"We did not want the resolution to be very restrictive," said Honeycutt. "The commissioners had instructed the bond counsel to set it up that way."

Pitt County voters would vote on Dec. 12 on $10 million in bonds for new facilities at PCC and on $25.7 million for public school construction if a series of steps suggested by the bond counsel are taken. The suggested steps include the passage of resolutions by PCC trustees and the Pitt County Board of Education.

Now that board members know a tentative date for the vote, preparations can be made to gather support for the referendum, according to Russell.

"We only get one shot at these things," he said. "We have to go with all the gusto."

Russell said he feels the board will have support from PCC staff members.

Other business on the board's called meeting agenda included the personnel committee's approval for the promotion of Charles E. Saunders from part-time instructor to a nine-month-with-benefits teaching position in social sciences, according to a report given by Joan Warren, chairman of the committee.

Saunders has taught approximately three years part time at PCC, she said. He has a master's degree in history from East Carolina University and taught freshman students special studies in social sciences at ECU while in graduate school.

The board set the next meeting for late September and will plan a fall retreat. The policy committee will review current bylaws and policies and will offer suggestions at the September meeting.

Council Meeting

The Greenville City Council will meet Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the council chambers of the municipal building.

The council will consider an ordinance prohibiting loitering for the purpose of engaging in drug-related activities.

The agenda also includes appointments to boards and commissions; a public hearing to amend the manual of standards; public hearings on two rezoning requests in the Bells Fork area, and a request from the city development department to zone lots fronting N.C. 43.

Laupus Is Named Dean Emeritus

ECU News Bureau

East Carolina University has conferred the title of dean emeritus of the School of Medicine upon Dr. William E. Laupus, retired vice chancellor for health sciences and first dean of the ECU School of Medicine.

Laupus served as dean of the medical school from its inception as a four-year, medical degree-granting school in 1975 until he relinquished the post in 1987. He retired as vice chancellor for health sciences — medicine, nursing and allied health sciences — earlier this year.

Dr. Richard Eakin, ECU chancellor, said it was a "distinct honor and privilege" to approve the recommendation of Dr. James A. Hallock, dean of the School of Medicine, to confer dean emeritus status upon Laupus.

"This title is in recognition of your splendid leadership of the School of Medicine since its inception," Eakin said. "Those of us in leadership capacities will do our best to build upon the wonderful base of accomplishment we have inherited as a legacy of your leadership."

Laupus is continuing in the School of Medicine as a professor and researcher in the department of preventive medicine.

New Appointment

Officials of the Greenville-Pitt County Convention and Visitors Bureau have announced the appointment of Dr. M.D. Heizer of Farmville to serve on the CVB's 11-member board.

Heizer, who has been a family practitioner in Farmville for 25 years, completed his undergraduate work at the University of Richmond and his medical studies at Virginia Commonwealth University. He completed his internship at Rose Memorial Hospital in Denver and his residency at Riverside Hospital in Newport News, Va.

He is a member of the Pitt County and the North Carolina Medical Societies and the North Carolina and American Academies of Family Physicians. He serves on the Farmville Foundation as chairman of the Farmville Dogwood Festival, the Farmville Chamber of Commerce board of directors, the Farmville Child Development Center board and the Farmville Planning Board. He is an elder in the Farmville Presbyterian Church.

He is married to Jessie McKeldon Carraway and has three children.

Procter & Gamble Challenges General Mills Reducing Item

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MINNEAPOLIS — General Mills Inc. says its new cereal is nothing more than a breakfast food that can reduce cholesterol, but Procter & Gamble Co. thinks it should be tested as a drug if it's going to make health claims.

P&G, which sells over-the-counter medicines, wants the U.S. Food and Drug Administration to order General Mills to pull the cereal, Benefit, off the market. It contends cereals should be subject to the same federal testing as drugs before health benefits such as reduced cholesterol can be advertised.

General Mills disagrees. "It's a cereal that's made from grain. It's consumed like a cereal. It's no different from any other cereal that's on the marketplace that contains soluble fiber and has the ability to lower cholesterol," General Mills spokesman Craig Shulstad said Wednesday.

The FDA is reviewing Procter & Gamble's June 8 request and is expected to respond soon, said Chris Lecos, press officer for the agency.

Benefit contains oat bran, rice and psyllium, a grain grown mainly in India. The outer husk of psyllium contains soluble fiber, which has been shown to reduce cholesterol.

Psyllium also is an ingredient in Cincinnati-based Procter & Gamble's Metamucil, a fiber laxative. P&G had asked the FDA to allow the company to make cholesterol-lowering claims for Metamucil, but the agency said more tests were needed, company spokesman Bill Dobson said.

According to General Mills, which is based in the Minneapolis suburb of Golden Valley, tests conducted in 1987 on men with average and above-average cholesterol levels found that Benefit reduced cholesterol levels an average of 9 percent when 2 ounces were eaten daily as part of a low-fat diet.

Benefit accounted for about two-thirds of the reduction, the company said.

The Benefit package touts the cereal's claims of reducing cholesterol, a fatty substance that can build up in inner artery walls. The deposits can narrow blood vessels, decrease the blood flow and may lead to a heart attack or stroke.

Kellogg Co. made a similar claim in 1984 when it linked consumption of All-Bran, a high-fiber cereal, with reduction of cancer risks.

The FDA could have declared the cereal a drug, forcing Kellogg to undergo lengthy procedures for drug approval. But FDA Commissioner Dr. Frank Young said such action, which could have entailed seizing All-Bran, would have been ridiculous.

Instead, the agency decided to come up with a regulation that would allow health claims on labels — a process that is still under way.

P&G — which also makes toiletries, soap, detergents and other household and food products — claims General Mills is playing by a different set of rules from drug manufacturers in being allowed to make health claims without FDA approval.

P&G's Dobson said the company recently submitted to the FDA the results of additional tests on the cholesterol-lowering effects of Metamucil, and more tests may be required. An earlier study found Metamucil reduced cholesterol about 15 percent, he said.

Dobson said it's unfair for P&G to have to substantiate its cholesterol-lowering claims for Metamucil, while General Mills can make the same claims for a food product without getting FDA approval.

General Mills, which also makes Cheerios and Wheaties cereals, began distributing Benefit in Minneapolis-St. Paul and Milwaukee in late April and early May.

The company has expanded distribution to 28 percent of the country, primarily in the Midwest, but has announced no plans on expanding marketing nationally, Shulstad said.

U.S. Blocks Fort Entrance After Panama Arrests GIs

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FORT AMADOR, Panama — U.S. forces blockaded the entrance to Fort Amador after Panamanian forces arrested two American soldiers, and the standoff ended three hours later when both sides exchanged arrested troops.

U.S. military officials blamed Wednesday's confrontation, the second in as many days, on the arrests of the American soldiers and strongly protested the action.

The Panamanian Defense Forces in turn condemned the blockade, during which Panamanian troops trained anti-aircraft weapons on U.S. helicopters circling overhead.

The Defense Forces under strongman Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega accused the United States of "trying to humiliate us in our own home" and said Panama would not respond to provocation.

Fort Amador is at the southern entrance to the Panama Canal and includes barracks for Panamanian troops, the Southern Command offices, a U.S. naval station and a golf course used by American personnel. Noriega, commander of the Defense Forces and Panama's de facto ruler, has offices at the fort.

Wednesday's confrontation was the latest of several between U.S. and Panamanian forces. American troops have held exercises that amounted to shows of force several times during the past few months, parking armored personnel carriers across the street from Noriega's office.

Sources said Noriega was not at Fort Amador on Wednesday when the confrontation occurred.

The incident began when a U.S. military policeman was arrested in the Panama City neighborhood of El Chorillo, near the general staff headquarters of the Panamanian Defense Forces, U.S. Army Col. Ronald Sconyers said.

That soldier was taken to a Panamanian installation at Fort Amador, where another U.S. military policeman was arrested when he tried to get his fellow soldier released.

Panamanian military sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, confirmed Sconyers' account but neither they nor Maj. Edgardo Lopez, a spokesman for the Defense Forces, gave a reason for the initial arrest.

U.S. troops then arrested two Panamanian military policemen at the gates to the fort and an Army detachment that included five armored personnel carriers blocked the entrance. Helicopters circled overhead, with Panamanian soldiers training anti-aircraft guns on them.

Civilians, including reporters, were allowed across the line during the blockade, but not Panamanian soldiers.

Finally, after three hours, reporters watched as U.S. and Panamanian officers met and exchanged prisoners, after which the U.S. troops withdrew.

"U.S. Southern Command officials strongly protested the actions of members of the Panamanian Defense Forces who arbitrarily arrested two U.S. military policemen," said a statement issued by the Command.

The arrests were seen as possible retaliation for the arrest of 29 Panamanians on Tuesday by U.S. troops. The Southern Command said the Panamanians, who were released after 75 minutes, had entered a military area without permission.

The Southern Command statement said it "reinforced" its forces at Fort Amador during the incident because U.S. forces are responsible for internal security there and to protect U.S. lives and installations in Panama.

Lopez said the Panamanian military "won't be trapped into provocation" despite the actions by the U.S. troops.

U.S. officials have said they plan to enforce full U.S. rights under the 1977 Panama Canal treaties and to use shows of force to underline Noriega's inability to prevent American troops from going where they wish.

The United States has been trying to oust Noriega since he was indicted on drug trafficking and money laundering charges in U.S. federal courts last year.

Noriega has denied the charges and said they were part of a U.S.

American soldiers spread barbed wire across entrance of Fort Amador after latest dispute plot to abrogate treaties that turn the canal over to Panama at the end of 1999.

He has fought off all U.S. efforts to force him to quit, including economic sanctions.

The government annulled elections last May that international observers said were won 3-1 by the opposition.

Government parties have been trying to arrange some accommodation by the time acting President Manuel Solis Palma's term ends Sept. 1, but the opposition has said Noriega must agree to step down.

The U.N. Security Council has scheduled debate for Friday on Panama's complaint that the United States is trying to undermine its government.

Last month Brig. Gen. Henry Cisneros, commander of U.S. Army South, told The Associated Press in an interview that he personally thought the United States should oust Noriega by force if that was the only way to remove him from power.

Conscientious Objector Leads Peace Institute

By Danica Kirka
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREENSBORO, Vt. — Peter Watson resisted war when it was neither chic nor acceptable. He thought World War II was a terrible mistake and became a conscientious objector.

Now, he's attacking war by financing peace.

The 64-year-old real estate investor has pledged $1 million to the University of Rochester in New York to establish a center to study peace.

"We have three good academies teaching people how to wage war," Watson said, referring to West Point, Annapolis and the Air Force Academy. "We need to have institutions of higher learning teaching people how to wage peace."

America was already at war when Watson entered Harvard University as a freshman. He saw many of his classmates and his two brothers go off to fight, but he simply believed war was meaningless and wrong.

So, after being drafted in 1942, he opted for alternative service. He eventually volunteered for the "guinea pig unit," a group of conscientious objectors who were used to test the body's tolerance to high altitude, extreme temperature and different proteins.

One of his duties was to test the limits of his body under desertlike conditions. He rode a stationary bicycle in a room heated to a sweltering 120 to 130 degrees for eight hours without water. The salt water solution he was given at the end of the day was "delicious."

Watson said his guinea pig years were fulfilling, so he thinks it only fitting to give the money to the Rochester, N.Y., university — the site of the experiments.

Dr. Carl Honig, a researcher at the University of Rochester, said the work in respiratory study saved the lives of soldiers stationed in the Aleutian Islands and North Africa, and thousands of others since then.

"Those studies have prolonged the life and added to comfort of patients with any type of respiratory disease, whether it's emphysema, or asthma or lung cancer," Honig said.

No one died during any of the Rochester experiments, but at least two men perished during "guinea pig" exercises elsewhere, Watson said.

"It's important for every generation to have some (people), however visionary and impractical at the time, stand for something, stand for the abolition of war," Honig said. "Those people did it at great risk."

Watson got a medical discharge after developing ulcers during nutritional experiments aimed at trying to avert starvation following the war. He went back to Harvard's medical school for two years before dropping out to volunteer for more research, and to conduct research himself.

In 1962, seeing an opportunity, he moved to Vermont and invested in real estate when land could be had for $1 an acre.

Cooperation

Could Mean Sewer Service For Schools

The possibility of Greenville Utilities extending sewer lines to two Pitt County schools is an example of how governmental agencies can cooperate to everyone's advantage.

The Greenville Utilities Commission is considering the extension of sewer lines along Fire Tower Road to serve D.H. Conley High School and Wintergreen school. Conley school has a septic tank problem and Wintergreen also has a sewage disposal problem.

The cost at Conley to solve the problem without the sewer line extension could be $186,000. But Greenville Utilities can apply to the Division of Environmental Management for a grant offer which would reduce local cost all around for service in the rural area.

Pitt Board of Education members and GUC representatives have met informally to discuss the solutions, and the GUC board approved proceeding Tuesday night.

The opportunities for cooperation are obvious. In building the sewer outfalls to serve the schools, GUC will also be providing for development along the way. Paramount, the schools could receive the service they need without an expensive investment in sewage treatment facilities, not to mention the cost of operating them.

It all serves to remind us that growth and development don't stop at municipal lines. We are all dependent upon one another in Pitt County and by working together we can provide a better way of life more efficiently than if we all go our own ways.

There are a number of steps to be taken before this plan can come to fruition. Clearly, however, it is worth pursuing.

A Brave Marine

Role Of Wife And Marine Is Fulfilled

Marines, above all, must be brave.

Even if it is a marine who is the wife of a marine who was senselessly murdered in Lebanon must she still stand tall.

That role fell to Marine Corps Major Robin Higgins who faces overwhelming evidence that her husband Marine Lt. Col. William R. Higgins is dead.

Robin Higgins faced the press after a horrifying week of seeing pictures of a body, believed to be her husband's, hanging in Lebanon. It is still not known whether the murder was recent, but analysis indicates that it is the body of Lt. Col. Higgins who was abducted in Lebanon and had been held along with other western hostages.

In her time of sorrow Robin Higgins gave her support to President Bush in his efforts to save the other hostages.

She said the time had come to tell her husband "we love him and miss him."

She indicated understanding of her husband's role as commander of a U.N. peacekeeping force in Lebanon. He was abducted in February, 1988.

She said this is not a time for anger and bitterness ... for recrimination and blame.

Major Robin Higgins is a brave Marine officer. Clearly she is also a compassionate person who has faced the worst that fate could throw at her and stood tall.

"SO, WHAT DID HE DO, GO TO WORK FOR HUD?!"

And Now It Is The Artists' Turn

Thomas Collins

The right wing has injected itself into yet another area of free expression, this time dabbling in the arts.

Most of the time it has concentrated on undermining the credibility of the press. Recently, it took on political expression (the flag-burning amendment); now it is the artists' turn. In the future, if Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., has his way, certain standards of decency would have to be met before anyone practicing the arts could receive federal grants. Helms and other art experts in Congress would doubtless have a say in which works met those standards.

It was Helms' fig-leaf amendment that passed the Senate by voice vote recently, forbidding federal funding "to promote, disseminate or produce obscene or indecent materials, including — but not limited to — depictions of sadomasochism, homoeroticism, the exploitation of children, or individuals engaged in sex acts; or material which denigrates the objects or beliefs of the adherents of a particular religion or non-religion."

That's a long-winded way of saying that art shouldn't be "dirty," and there is enough room for interpretation in the amendment to satisfy the most dirty-minded of legislators.

The offending works that triggered the right's wrath were a crucifix in a jar of urine and a series of homosexual photographs that most of us would be too embarrassed to hang over the living room couch. But whether they represent good or bad art is neither here nor there. Art often offends somebody, for one reason or another; its value is usually left to time, taste and the marketplace to decide.

It is possible, for example, that the art Helms has hanging in his home would strike many as being obscenely puerile, based on a recent description in The New York Times but not defined as such by the newspaper. But few would actively work to have puerility banned or condemned even though it may be more aesthetically threatening to society than obscenity.

Then there are others who believe that Helms' amendment is a legislative obscenity, yet they wouldn't think of trying to remove him from the government payroll.

Helms and the right wing are not so tolerant. Their argument — that taxpayer dollars ought not to be spent to fund offensive works — is specious and masks their distrust and suspicion of all free expression with which they disagree.

It also helps disguise their cynical politics. As with the flag issue, they immorally exploit a seemingly moral position, turning a deaf ear to the principle of free speech involved.

The Supreme Court has ruled, in effect, that while flag burning is offensive to the overwhelming majority, it is the toleration of such offensiveness that helps insure free expression and is the crucial test of a democracy.

Similarly, the federal funding of artists who may produce unappetizing works is the cost of encouraging artistic creativity — today's obscenity may be tomorrow's masterpiece. Many right-wingers sneer at such reasoning, however well-bred, well-educated and politically informed they appear to be.

Censorship, in some form or other, direct or indirect, subtle or obvious, is their secret vice, and like all vices, it reveals itself publicly from time to time. They crave it as some people crave chocolate. They would probably kill for it, and in some countries they have. Barring that, they would impose it on the press, if they could; on political expression, if they could, and now on the arts, if they can get away with it.

It is possible, of course, that Helms' amendment, which is aimed at the National Endowment for the Arts, may yet be stricken in a congressional conference. Many of those in the Senate apparently counted on that in giving it their anonymous "yea," in which case they were simply behaving like political cowards.

The reasoning behind the right wing's dirty little vice is not complicated: There's profit in censorship — political profit in terms of simplistic issues in which they can pose as patriots and moralists at the expense of the First Amendment, and cash profit from the illegal enterprises they engage in and which generally go undetected by an intimidated press.

As we have seen in the past eight years, many of these true-blue Americans and their friends have set new records to shoot at in the annals of those who lie and cheat and steal a lot — in the national interest, of course.

One Private Drama Of Fear And Pain

Jonathan Moses

BEIJING — I was snatched off a side street at 2:30 a.m., in the middle of the army assault on the student headquarters at Tiananmen Square. I had been interviewing a few students who had taken refuge in an alleyway near the square when I was arrested. A young Chinese male grabbed me from behind and began to drag me off the sidewalk. He said nothing. Four other men ran to join him. They carried me by my limbs across the street, where two uniformed guards opened a metal gate to a government compound.

Realizing I had been arrested, I went limp. My abductors dropped me to the ground and many others seemed to join them in kicking and frisking me. They took my notebooks, pens and money. One man in particular seemed to enjoy kicking me in the head.

I was lifted into the back seat of a jeep. Two older men climbed into the front seat. Two younger men sat on either side of me. Another man moved into the space behind and pulled my head back by the hair. As we started to speed through the streets of Beijing, I pleaded in Chinese, "Please, I'm sorry. Whatever I did was wrong." The driver shouted at me to keep quiet.

Beijing was completely chaotic. People ran toward the jeep. They wanted to stop any government vehicle that passed them. But we were moving too fast, and my captors made it clear they wouldn't stop when the two sitting on my right fired their automatic pistols through the open windows. As soon as I saw the pistols I decided they were going to kill me. The thought became stronger as the night continued.

As we neared another government compound, they blindfolded me. They draped the white, muddy towel I had been using as a tear gas mask over my head. It wasn't a very effective blindfold, and what I saw from underneath it wasn't encouraging. Bands of Chinese men stood near the entrance gate carrying sticks, pipes and chains.

Like my captors they wore white dress shirts — the garb of an undercover cop. The jeep stopped inside the compound. After waiting a half-hour, I was led into a brightly lit room. Several people frisked me again — taking my press identification and American Express card. Others unbuttoned my shirt and replaced the blindfold with a white hood. They forced me to sit down, pulled back my shirt, took off my shoes and belt and dropped my pants so that my boxer shorts were exposed.

A fan, turned on high, was placed in front of me. Up to this time nothing had been said other than "shut up." I asked politely in Chinese, "Please can we talk." The answer was once again, no. Someone told me to relax, to go to sleep. Instead I thought about the hood and the fact that white is the color of death in China.

My captors had placed only a tiny pinhole in the hood. I gasped for air. At one point someone tried to aid me by moving the pinhole nearer to my mouth. Many people entered and left the room throughout the night. They talked in hushed tones. I overheard something about a "mi mi tan pan," Chinese for secret meeting. At daybreak, perhaps four hours later, the guards took off my hood. I looked at these two men. They were not the ones who brought me. They held cattle prods. We were in a barber shop.

Five more men joined the guards. No one wore a uniform. One of the newcomers identified himself as Tommy. He spoke English and said he was a translator. The interrogation was simple and civil. One man even asked why my socks had holes in them. Another man later videotaped the questioning. They asked me to sign a transcript of what I told them. Tommy asked me in English, "Did the soldiers really shoot at the people?" I said yes. He didn't translate my answer. They blindfolded me again — this time they apologized — and placed me in the back seat of a car. We drove in what seemed like circles, probably to another part of the compound. My guards led me into a holding cell where they took off the blindfold. I was in a room of cement walls and floors. The cell, about 12 feet by eight feet, was clean but had only a short bench. I lay on the floor and slept.

The translator returned and suggested I write a confession. I had yet to be charged with a crime, so he dictated two sentences. With little modification I wrote these words in my own hand. "I have violated the rules and regulations of the People's Republic of China under martial law. For example, I talked with Chinese people when such interviews are strictly forbidden." Shortly after midday the only person who ever told me his rank arrived. He said he was the deputy minister in charge of foreign press. He and a policeman gave me a lecture about obeying Chinese law while in China.

I was told to report back to the police station the next day, when they would return my credit card. They decided to keep my notebook and press ID.

Not long after my lecture, I was blindfolded again, put in a van and driven, once again in circles, to another part of town. They took off the blindfold and let me out in a section of Beijing with which I was unfamiliar.

It turned out I was in Beihai, several miles north of Tiananmen. I walked about, dazed. A man claiming to be a private entrepreneur, stopped his green Saab at my overstretched thumb. He gave me a Marlboro, put country music on his car stereo and charged me an exorbitant fee to take me back to my office.

Since the crackdown at Tiananmen Square, more than 10,000 people have been arrested in China for alleged participation in the democracy movement. Most of them will never go to trial, and the government media have become silent about these private dramas of fear and pain going on in police stations, jails and even bomb-shelter tunnels throughout the country. As a foreigner, I was undoubtedly treated better than most of the Chinese being arrested now. That is a chilling thought.

Legislature Creates Surprises For Some Teachers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pay Checks May Not Be What They Expect

Education leaders say they are happy the General Assembly approved pay raises for teachers and to lift a freeze on teacher's pay scales. But they say some teachers may be surprised when they open their first paychecks this school year.

The Legislature enacted a spending measure that calls for an average 6 percent pay raise for teachers. Sarah H. Stewart, president of the N.C. Federation of Teachers, said she fears that many teachers do not realize that pay raises will vary.

"I'm a little worried that when the first paychecks come out there are going to be some unhappy, angry, disillusioned individuals," Ms. Stewart said.

The 30-step salary plan the Legislature settled on Wednesday provides salary increases ranging from zero to 15 percent, with most of the larger increases going to experienced teachers.

The new schedule "is an improvement, and we are pleased," said Julia P. Kron, president of the N.C. Association of Educators, the state's largest teachers group. "I think legislators heard the cries of teachers."

Some teachers will be getting more than they might expect.

Teachers with 29 years or more of experience will get $4,260 — or 15 percent — more this year than they did during the 1988-89 school year. They will make nearly $40,000 when the salary plan is fully in place by 1991-92.

Many teachers also will have a strong incentive to postpone retirement for three years, since doing so would give most of them close to a $10,000 — or 36 percent — salary boost. The size of teachers' retirement checks is based on earnings from their final four years of work.

Combined with local supplements, merit-pay plans and summer school, some experienced teachers could earn $45,000 to $50,000 by 1991-92 without leaving the classroom, said James O. Barber, assistant state superintendent for finance.

But teachers with less experience generally will see smaller pay raises. The starting salary for teachers will climb by about $2,200 over the next three years to $20,500.

Nearly three out of four of the state's teachers will get pay increases of between 4 percent and 10 percent next year, while about one out of 10 will receive raises of less than 4 percent. Because of demotions, transfers and other special circumstances, a handful of teachers will receive no pay raises, said Lou B. Thompson, director of business services for the state Department of Public Instruction.

However they fare under the new schedule, most teachers will be pleased to see it replace a confusing, unfair pay schedule created in 1980.

Under the 30-step plan, most teachers would move up one step after each year of experience. They previously endured a nine-step schedule that had become increasingly distorted as the legislature repeatedly enacted freezes to keep teachers from advancing. Starting teachers last year, for example, made the same as those with four years of experience.

Teachers with 10 years of experience made the same amount — $21,000 — as eight-year veterans. Under the new schedule, those with 10 years will earn $23,160 for the upcoming school year while those with eight years will earn $22,340.

The freeze was most noticeable at the upper end of the scale, where teachers with 20 years' experience or more were paid the same — $27,650. Under the new schedule, teachers with 20 years of experience will earn $28,740 next year compared to $31,910 for those with 29 years.

"At last we can say to the teachers of this state the freeze is finally over," said Bobby R. Etheridge, state superintendent of public instruction. "This was their first priority, a new schedule."

Education leaders said they were disappointed teachers did not get bigger salary increases, but pleased to see the salary schedule overhauled. Inequities in the previous plan drove 5,000 teachers to march in Raleigh in February.

Still, educators say they are uncertain whether the salary schedule will allow North Carolina teachers to hold their ranking in the nation.

North Carolina teachers will see their salaries slip farther behind the national average, just as they have for the past two years during which the state's national ranking dropped from 29th to 34th.

"We are not where we need to be," Etheridge said.

Conferees To Get Open Meetings Bill

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The sometimes partisan debate over the openness of government will go before a House-Senate conference committee considering whether the executive branch should be included in a bill to tighten the open meetings law for legislative committees.

The House voted Wednesday not to agree to Senate amendments including one to require that the governor's budget meetings and meetings with his cabinet be open to the public.

Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, the sponsor, said it was not necessarily his intention to cave in to Gov. Jim Martin's objections to the provision.

Miller reminded lawmakers that Martin gained re-election in large part by criticizing what he called a secretive legislative process.

"So the proponents of this measure would say, on the one hand, if the legislative office door is open, then the executive office door should be open," he said.

The bill would adopt the policy that meetings are open unless they must be closed for specified reasons. It would require adequate notice of public meetings and the keeping of minutes.

But Ward Purrington, Martin's legislative liaison, said the governor could not accept the Senate amendment.

"To be required to give 48 hours notice of each of those meetings would substantially impair the budget process," he said.

Purrington compared the governor's budget-writing process with any legislator's preparation of a bill — something that has traditionally been confidential in the General Assembly.

Miller admitted there should be time for exchanges of information outside the public arena, but he said that decision should be left to the conference committee.

Purrington suggested a compromise might come on cabinet meetings, not on the budget process.

"The governor's objection is not as strenuous to opening the cabinet meetings up and perhaps something could be worked out there," he said.

Dealing On Veto Leads Vote Short

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Gov. Jim Martin and House Speaker Joe Mavretic have called it quits on a short-lived liaison over a balance-of-powers package.

The two had worked briefly on a compromise package to keep the issue of gubernatorial veto alive by linking it with four-year legislative terms and limits on session lengths for the General Assembly. But Martin said Wednesday he could count no more than 68 of the 72 votes needed to approve a proposed constitutional amendment which would go before the voters.

"The combined strenuous efforts over the past two weeks to build the necessary coalition of 72 votes in the House for the veto amendment have produced only 68 commitments to be present and vote for the latest compromise," Martin said in a prepared statement. "That represents a gain above the 60 House votes that supported the veto last week as a single-issue referendum. However, it still leaves us well short of the magic number."

Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, agreed there is "no sense in running the bill until you have 72 confirmed votes." He said the chances would be better for the package in the 1990 short session.

"That will give people the time to think about the components of the balance of powers referendum," he said. "I think over time the members will see the merit in that proposal."

Martin had gone so far as to have two planes ready to ferry a dozen legislators back from a national conference in Tulsa, Okla., in case their votes were needed. But the planes came back empty when they were not needed.

"Since their votes would have brought us only to a total of 68, it was my decision not to ask for a vote and not to ask them to return," he said.

Spending Bill Sets Off Self-Praise In Senate

By F. Alan Boyce
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The enactment of new spending bills worth $1.8 billion over the next two years sparked little controversy in the Senate, but lawmakers took time to congratulate each other on the openness of the budget-writing process.

"I've served up here a long time and I've never had a more open meeting than we had on this budget," said Sen. Ken Royall, D-Durham, who led Senate conferees through a weekend of discussions on the bills. He lauded his House counterpart, Rep. Dave Diamond, D-Surry, for making compromises come easy.

"It was a great feeling to know that we do get along when we have to," he said.

In a departure from previous sessions, when Republicans often blasted what they called a closed, secretive budget process, Sen. Betsy Cochrane, R-Davie, praised the package.

"This was the most open budget process in my years in the legislature," she said, adding that there was less money for legislators' pet projects than ever.

Sens. Tom Taft, D-Pitt, and Marc Basnight, D-Dare, added their praise for the process, saying they had grown tired of criticism that the process was done in secret by a chosen few.

Royall explained the bills for just under an hour — about half the time spent by the House in passing the packages earlier this week — and they were approved unanimously.

The legislation includes a 6 percent raise and a new salary schedule for teachers, a similar raise for other state employees, a tuition increase for state universities and a trimmed back version of the Basic Education Program.

Education dominates the new spending. The Basic Education Program, an eight-year plan to equalize educational opportunity across the state, will receive $69.2 million in the first year of the biennium and $180.5 million in the second year. That represents a reduction of 250 new positions from the original budget request.

The UNC tuition increase will be 20 percent for in-state students and 15 percent for out-of-state students. While dollar figures vary, the change would increase the annual tuition at UNC-Chapel Hill from $504 to $604 for in-state students and from $4,458 to $5,127 for out-of-state students.

The teacher salary schedule, which contains the 6 percent raise, also calls for 30 salary steps with a 2 percent increase for each step except for the third and fourth stages, where a 5 percent increase would go to teachers with certification based on a master's degree track.

Some major building projects at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, N.C. State, East Carolina and UNC-Asheville had funding held in reserve. The money would be made available provided a windfall from the RJR-abisco sale is $12 million larger than originally projected.

The reserves would provide $6 million for N.C. State's engineering center, $6.5 million for a UNC school of business, $4.1 million for a UNC social work building, $6 million for an East Carolina library and $4 million for a UNC-shelville conference center.

Other major provisions in the construction budget include:

- $18.5 million for a new State Bureau of Investigation complex.
- $18 million a year for a new Revenue Building.
- $14 million over two years for low-level radioactive waste site development.

— $9.7 million over two years for an indoor health and physical education facility at Fayetteville State University.

— $7.1 million for a new agronomic building in the Department of Agriculture.

— $6 million for state ports.

— $4.25 million for the N.C. Zoo in Asheboro.

— $3 million for a student activities center at Appalachian State University.

— $2 million for a Charlotte performing arts center.

Toxic Air Cleanup May Cost More

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — New regulations requiring companies to reduce toxic air pollution may need a second look, industry officials said at a public hearing Wednesday.

Joe Harwood of N.C. Citizens for Business and Industry, which represents 1,300 N.C. industries, said a state commission projected the cost of complying would be $150 million. That, he said, was too low.

The N.C. Environmental Management Commission used data from a state-sponsored economic impact report to estimate the costs of the regulations.

"Clearly, this is a major program, with major compliance costs of $1 billion in the next decade," said Harwood, a Duke Power Co. official from Charlotte.

Other speakers at the hearing, however, supported the proposed regulations, which aim to reduce the amount of cancer-causing and other poisonous chemicals released. Those emissions now total 100 million pounds a year in North Carolina.

"There is an ongoing and unrelenting assault on our skies," said Ed Norman, staff scientist for the N.C. Environmental Defense Fund in Raleigh. "This madness must stop."

Patricia Link of Salisbury told an audience of about 90 people that the second-leading cause of death in North Carolina is cancer. "We want protection from the known," Link said.

Pension Bill Advances

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The Senate has given tentative approval to a bill that would, for the first time, give all retirees a tax exemption on their pensions and tax the pensions of state and local government retirees.

The measure tentatively approved Wednesday on a 44-3 vote would give government retirees a $4,000 exemption on their pensions and retirees from private businesses a $2,000 exemption.

North Carolina, like some other states, has previously made state and local government pensions tax-exempt, but the U.S. Supreme Court ruled this spring that federal pensions cannot be treated differently from other government retirement pay when it comes to taxes.

Making federal pensions tax-exempt would have cost the state an estimated $100 million a year.

UNC Investigators Reopen NCSU Athletics Probe

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A probe into N.C. State University's basketball program has apparently been reopened, with a member of a UNC system investigating panel questioning an N.C. State professor who has gone public with allegations that school officials twisted academic rules to keep basketball players eligible to play.

Hugh Fuller, director of N.C. State's academic tutoring program, met Wednesday with Raymond H. Dawson, the University of North Carolina system's senior vice president for academic affairs. Fuller said he discussed his assertions that high-level N.C. State administrators, including Chancellor Bruce R. Poulton, knew that the athletics department officials manipulated academic rules.

"I felt very good about the way the conversation went and I felt much more uplifted than I have in some time," Fuller said. "They were interested and sincere, and I'm really happy that I had a chance to talk to them."

The UNC investigating panel, which had spent six months on the probe, never asked Fuller for the seven years of internal memorandums that he had kept as documentation of the abuses. Those memos were obtained last week by The News and Observer of Raleigh, which published portions of them.

The investigating panel, appointed by UNC system President C.D. Spangler Jr. and headed by Samuel H. Poole, submitted a report July 17.

In a statement released Wednesday, UNC Board of Governors chairman Robert L. "Roddy" Jones called for "the public's understanding and patience" while UNC officials completed their report.

Jones said Spangler would deliver the report as planned at the Aug. 25 meeting of the UNC Board of Governors. Later that day the two will meet with the N.C. State Board of Trustees "to discuss the matter in detail," the statement said.

It concluded: "Time is important to the preparation of this report, and the public's understanding and patience is needed and appreciated. The University will have no further statement to make until August 25th."

Fuller described his hourlong meeting with Dawson and Arthur Padilla, associate vice president for academic affairs, as "a thorough and frank conversation about some of the concerns that I have expressed."

Dawson could not be reached for comment. Spangler is vacationing in the Canadian Rockies.

Fuller declined to elaborate on his conversation with Dawson. Apparently other N.C. State employees also were interviewed Wednesday.

Poole, vice chairman of the UNC Board of Governors, said he was not aware that Dawson had interviewed Fuller. Poole declined to comment when asked whether his panel had obtained the memos supporting Fuller's statements.

Poole said his panel would meet at least one more time with Spangler.

"It'll just be a general discussion. I would think, of matters related to the commission," he said.

Fuller said last week that he had tried for seven years to alert his superiors to what he called repeated abuses of academic regulations, including pressure on professors and abuses of the student counseling system. Fuller has said the athletics department hired its own tutors and that he thought the tutors did course work for athletes.

Also Wednesday, James E. Smallwood, chairman of the N.C. State faculty senate during the 1986-87 academic year, which is the focus of the book "Personal Fools," said he had not been interviewed by anyone from Poole's commission. The News and Observer reported.

During Smallwood's tenure as chairman, the faculty senate tried through a series of proposals to emphasize academics for the university's athletes.

Spangler Faces Test Over Probe

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREENSBORO — The controversy involving allegations of academic rules violations at North Carolina State University by athletics officials has given University of North Carolina President C.D. Spangler his first big test.

Members of the UNC Board of Governors are watching to see how he handles it.

"I don't know that this is a crisis," one board member said. "But it is certainly a test of his mettle."

A small segment of the board has begun to express dissatisfaction with Spangler's 3½-year leadership of the 16-campus system, the Greensboro News & Record reported Wednesday. The 32-member board governs the state's 16 public universities.

"He's had a lot of little controversies and this is the first big one," said a member of the board, who asked not to be identified. "He's got a lot riding on the way he handles it."

Board members interviewed by the News & Record declined to let their names be used because they want to maintain a working relationship with Spangler.

As the N.C. State controversy unfolds, sources on and off the board say Spangler finds himself accountable to a board that has splintered into three groups over his administrative and decision-making style.

Those sources note that a majority of the board still supports Spangler.

"I pretty much like everything I've seen him do," board member J. Earl Danieley of Elon College said.

However, a small segment of the board — consisting of no more than five or so members — has become increasingly troubled over Spangler's performance.

"There is a group that is outspoken and disenchanted," said one board member, who asked not to be identified.

This group and others on the board are bothered by several of Spangler's actions, ranging from his proposal last year to buy out RJR Nabisco to his decision to spend $48,000 in university funds for a caterer for meals and special events at his residence to his handling of Chancellor Jane Milley's resignation at the N.C. School of the Arts.

Sandwiched between those two groups is what could be described as a swing group, a segment that might support Spangler on one issue, but not another.

Some members of this group, said to be larger than the segment which tends to oppose Spangler, have been among those expressing dismay at his handling of the athletic problems at N.C. State.

Their displeasure has focused on three areas:

— His original intention to make an oral report to the board on the findings of a commission he appointed to examine allegations against Coach Jim Valvano's program.

— Later, after legislators and board members started complaining, Spangler notified the board that he would provide them with a written report.

— The appearance that outside interests are vying for Spangler's attention at a time when a scandal has focused national attention on the UNC system's largest university.

Spangler is on a backpacking vacation this week, and efforts to reach him have been unsuccessful.

Some have said privately that Spangler should not be on vacation at a time like this.

Some also complain about Spangler's July 19 flight to New York to be elected to the board of directors' of The Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States.

Board members are divided over the wisdom of Spangler serving on outside boards, with some particularly questioning the timing of his trip to New York.

— His decision not to call a special meeting to give the board the findings from an investigative commission headed by Sam Poole.

Spangler received an oral report from the special commission on July 17, but the Board of Governors will not meet again until Aug. 25.

Boat Search

PORTSMOUTH (AP) — Search aircraft from as far away as Cape Cod and Miami have been called to help in a massive rescue effort for an 18-foot boat carrying two North Carolina men, a Coast Guard spokesman said.

Petty Officer Rick Woods, a spokesman at Coast Guard Fifth District headquarters in Portsmouth, said a Coast Guard plane on Wednesday spotted an overturned boat that partially matched the description of the vessel missing since last weekend.

Morris Triplett, 45, and Larry Johnson, 21, both of Carolina Beach, N.C., left Friday morning on a fishing trip, Woods said.

The search has covered 50,000 square miles of ocean from Wilmington, N.C., to a few miles off Cape Henry.

The boat, which matched the size but not the color of the missing craft, was spotted about 200 miles east of Cape Hatteras, N.C., Woods said.

Tax Amnesty

RALEIGH (AP) — If you haven't paid your state income taxes, the North Carolina Department of Revenue is giving you a chance to pay up without penalty or punishment.

"This is a one-time opportunity for the tax evaders in North Carolina," state Secretary of Revenue Helen Powers said Wednesday of the program, which runs between Sept. 1 and Dec. 1.

She said the department has more than 50,000 past-due accounts.

Tax amnesty applies to people who have paid too little, failed to file tax returns, or failed to pay taxes at all. It covers individual and corporate income and intangibles tax; gift tax, withholding, sales and use, motor fuels, and inspection tax; license tax; franchise tax; and inheritance tax.

During the 90-day amnesty period, people may file tax returns and pay whatever tax they owe, plus whatever amount of interest is due on that tax, without civil penalty or criminal prosecution.

Tax evasion after Dec. 1 will be considered a felony instead of a misdemeanor, with willful tax evasion resulting in a prison term of up to five years, a fine of as much as $25,000, or both.

Condos Approved

WILMINGTON (AP) — The state Division of Coastal Management has granted a construction permit for a pair of 15-story condominiums on West Onslow Beach, despite objections from environmentalists that the huge project could pollute the shellfish-rich waters of Stump Sound.

Construction should start within 60 days. Environmentalists who fought the project say there's nothing else they can do to stop it.

"This illustrates very clearly just how inadequate the state's regulations are," said Todd Miller, executive director of the N.C. Coastal Federation, which led the battle against the project, called Wyndham Towers.

John Starling, president of Century 21 by the Sea, is developing the two 16-story condominium buildings on 18 acres of oceanfront property on Topsail Island.

Firemen work over wreckage of C-130 Hercules that crashed during exercise at Fort Bragg

Crash Of C-130 Kills Crewman, Injures Six Others At Bragg

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FORT BRAGG, N.C. — Investigators were expected to begin probing today the crash of a military cargo plane that killed one crew member and injured six.

Seven people were aboard the C-130 Hercules when it crashed during an exercise Wednesday night, officials said. The plane belonged to the 463 Tactical Airlift Wing based at Dyess Air Force Base near Abilene, Texas.

"From what we know, it was a Dyess Air Force Base crew," said Fort Bragg spokesman Russell Kirk. Kirk said that as far as he knows, no one stationed at Fort Bragg was involved in the accident.

The crash occurred at the Sicily Drop Zone at the Fort Bragg Army base about 7 p.m. while crew members were attempting to drop a 36,000-pound armored reconnaissance vehicle rigged with a parachute. The Fayetteville Times reported.

The vehicle was still aboard the plane when it crashed, and began burning from a fuel fire.

"The plane came over, two parachutes came out and we were waiting for the equipment to drop and it wasn't dropping," a witness told the newspaper.

"The plane kept getting lower and lower. It appeared the two chutes were dragging the plane lower," the witness said. "The plane went over some trees and the dust came up from above the trees. There was no sound at all. It was surprising," said the witness, who asked not to be identified.

"After that, there was a tunnel of black smoke that came up. The chaplain came over and said the plane broke in half and burned," the witness said.

None of the crewmembers was identified. They were taken to Fort Bragg's Womack Army Community Hospital, said Capt. Brian Irving, chief of public affairs for Pope Air Force Base and 317th Tactical Airlift. Hospital officials declined to release information on the conditions of the injured.

All on board were Air Force personnel, officials said.

"The aircraft did break up and the fuel cells ruptured," Pope Air Force Base Fire Chief W.B. Bell Jr. said, adding that firefighters took one hour to extinguish the blaze.

"The nose of the aircraft struck the ground first, and its wreckage was flattened on the ground," Bell said.

"The mission was for it to perform a heavy equipment drop," Irving said. "But apparently there was some malfunction and they didn't do that."

One of the firefighters called to the scene said the crew had gotten out of the aircraft by the time fire crews from Cumberland and Harnett counties arrived.

The four-engine aircraft went down in a barren clay and sandy area surrounded by trees that is used by Fort Bragg and Pope Air Force Base primarily for parachute drops.

The aircraft was flying in support of the 82nd Airborne Division's 3rd Battalion, 73rd Armor Regiment, said Lt. Col. Ned Longworth, chief of public affairs for Fort Bragg and 18th Airborne Corps.

A board of Military Airlift Command officials will investigate the accident and was expected to arrive at Pope early today, officials said.

The airplane-crash fatality was the first at Fort Bragg since July 1, 1987, when five service members died as a C-130 crashed and burned before more than 4,000 spectators during a capabilities exercise.

Four Pope Air Force Base crew members and a Fort Bragg soldier on the ground died in the mishap, which occurred as the airplane was attempting to drop a tank.

State Is Going Ahead With Jetty

ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — North Carolina officials plan to go ahead with the construction of a stone barrier at Oregon Inlet designed to protect the only bridge to Hatteras Island, despite objections from environmentalists.

Officials say the 2,500-foot structure is needed to protect the Herbert C. Bonner Bridge, which is threatened by erosion. Bids have been taken on the $15 million project and construction crews could be on the site by the end of the month, officials say.

"We think we've jumped through all the right hoops," said Tommy Harrelson, deputy secretary of transportation. "We've got all the permits. We've made compromises in the design to make sure it is environmentally sound. And there's not a proven alternative to what we're doing."

He said "the bridge is OK but it's steadily losing sand to the sea."

Environmentalists have argued that the structure, a shortened rock jetty designed to buffer the bridge from direct ocean currents, probably would increase beach erosion to the south.

Democrats Urging Hunt To Run Again

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Former Gov. Jim Hunt says he hasn't decided on a possible rematch with Republican Sen. Jesse Helms in 1990, but some former governors now in the Senate are encouraging him to make the bid.

Hunt has received calls from Sen. Charles S. Robb of Virginia, Sen. Robert Graham of Florida and Sen. John D. "Jay" Rockefeller of West Virginia. These senators, all of them former governors and friends of Hunt, have asked him to enter the race. The News and Observer of Raleigh reported today.

In addition, Hunt has met separately in recent weeks with Senate Majority Leader George J. Mitchell of Maine; Sen. John B. Breaux of Louisiana, chairman of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee; and Sen. Bill Bradley of New Jersey, a potential Democratic presidential candidate in 1992.

Hunt said the meetings and telephone calls were initiated by the senators.

The pressure is mounting on Hunt, who has said that he would announce a decision around Labor Day on whether he will seek a rematch with Helms. In 1984, Helms won a fiercely contested race.

Hunt, 52, is widely regarded in national Democratic circles as the strongest possible challenger to Helms, the high-profile leader of the New Right whom the Democrats would dearly love to defeat.

He has declined to signal which way he is leaning. And Hunt, who lives in Wilson County but commutes to Raleigh to practice law, refuses to discuss publicly his thinking on the matter, except to say that personal considerations weigh heavily.

"I'm not going to talk about that," he said Wednesday when asked about the pros and cons of running. "I think it is a winnable race. There is no need to get into all of that. If I decide that my personal considerations permit me to run, then I will talk about that."

Hunt has given mixed signals to his key supporters, expressing an interest in the Senate seat, but also voicing reluctance to run because of the poor health of his parents.

"I don't think there is any question that he is giving it serious consideration," said a Hunt ally.

When pushed to guess what Hunt will decide, his associates tend to say they think he will choose not to run — but they say they make that prediction with little certainty.

Hunt said he was "encouraged" by the results of a recent statewide poll conducted by Washington pollster Peter Hart. The poll was commissioned and paid for by Raleigh businessman Cliff Benson, a longtime Hunt backer.

The poll, the results of which Benson shared with Hunt, showed the former governor leading Helms, 48 percent to 42 percent, according to Democratic insiders. It was conducted in July.

Those results are similar to other recent polls conducted for news organizations. A survey taken in July by Mason Dixon Opinion Research Inc. for the Greensboro News & Record showed Hunt leading 50 percent to 42 percent. A poll taken by The Charlotte Observer in June showed Hunt leading, 47-44.

Aid Policies At Colleges Investigated

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — For years, many elite colleges and universities have cooperated to figure out amounts of financial aid they should give to students, but now federal antitrust investigators are investigating the practice.

Justice Department officials Wednesday acknowledged an investigation was under way, but refused to disclose details.

"Antitrust division investigations are not a matter of public record," agency spokesman David Runkel said.

Financial aid for college students totaled some $26 billion last year, said Kathleen Brouder, head of College Scholarship Service information services in New York.

She noted that colleges began working together in the 1950s, when the Soviet-U.S. space race set off a flurry of scholarship, loan and grant-giving by governments and institutions seeking to beef up American education.

The schools' objective has been to avoid bidding wars for students, Ms. Brouder said.

"There was intense bidding, and people were concerned about the fact that aid might be going in amounts that didn't need to go to people, and they were very concerned about scarce institutional resources," Ms. Brouder said.

The Justice Department would not comment on what prompted the investigation.

On May 2, The Wall Street Journal reported the practice by 23 elite schools of meeting formally once a year to decide how much each applicant for aid could afford.

This is how it hypothetically works: Yale decides the Smiths can pay $3,000 toward daughter Joan's education. But Dartmouth's aid formula reckons the Smiths can only afford $2,000. The two schools then work out the difference until they agree on a figure, say $2,900. When Joan Smith receives acceptance letters from Yale and Dartmouth, they both say she can receive financial aid, short of $2,900.

This year more than 10,000 high school seniors and their families were subject to this arrangement, the Journal said.

Schools named in this practice: Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Brown, Columbia, Cornell, Dartmouth, Harvard, the University of Pennsylvania, Princeton, Yale, Amherst, Barnard, Bowdoin, Bryn Mawr, Colby, Mount Holyoke, Middlebury, Smith, Trinity, Tufts, Vassar, Wellesley, Wesleyan and Williams. Many schools on that list said Wednesday they were not the subject of an investigation. Others, including Harvard, the University of Chicago and Tufts University, declined to comment on how they figure financial aid.

But William Cotter, president of Colby College in Waterville, Maine, said the probe appears to revolve around the possible fixing of salaries, fees, tuition and financial-aid requirements.

He denied Colby was fixing costs with other schools. "There is absolutely no agreement on salary and tuition," Cotter said. "We compete vigorously with one another for students. We compete vigorously for faculty."

Like other officials at schools contacted, Amherst College spokeswoman Terry Allen said: "We believe we are in compliance with the law. But if it is determined that we are not, we will do everything to comply."

Tuition Going Up, But At A Slower Pace

By Lee Mitgang
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Tuition inflation is easing a bit at many colleges, especially public two-year institutions, but a year at the costliest private colleges will top $21,000, an annual survey shows.

The College Board, in its annual tuition survey released Wednesday, found average charges heading 5 to 9 percent higher come fall.

At two-year public colleges, the increase will average 5 percent to $842, slightly less than the 5.9 percent annualized rise in consumer prices during the first six months of 1989.

Average tuition and fees at four-year public institutions will increase 7 percent to $1,694, with an additional $3,039 in average room and board charges.

Some 80 percent of U.S. college students attend public institutions. Costs at those and other institutions of higher learning had been surging consistently faster than the overall inflation rate throughout the 1980s.

"It looks like the increases are moderating somewhat," said Richard Rosser, president of the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities. "The gap between the increases and the Consumer Price Index is narrowing."

"On the other hand, we're still feeling awful pressures on faculty salaries. They are still, below 1972 levels in terms of purchasing power."

Private four-year college rates, meanwhile, continue to soar. Average tuition and fees this fall will rise by 9 percent to $8,737. Room and board charges will add an average of $3,898.

Among the costliest, a year at Bennington College in Vermont will cost an estimated $21,775 including tuition, fees, room and board, books, supplies, transportation and other expenses. Harvard College in Boston, Brandeis University in Waltham, Mass., and Sarah Lawrence College in Bronxville, N.Y. are among other highly selective schools that will top the $21,000 mark.

"Students may not realize that more expensive colleges usually have more financial aid available and use more of their own funds for aid," said board President Donald M. Stewart.

He added that financial aid from public and private sources now totals a record $26 billion.

Nonetheless, U.S. Secretary of Education Lauro F. Cavazos said he was "increasingly concerned about the growing gap between the price of higher education and what students can afford."

"Every leader in higher education must make holding costs down a priority," he said.

In addition, freshmen at some top schools face a double dose of bad tuition news.

Duke University, the University of Chicago, Johns Hopkins University, Seton Hall University and George Washington University are among a few that have recently announced two-tiered tuition systems in which first-time students will be hit with double-digit increases roughly twice those imposed on upperclassmen.

The priciest four-year public colleges charge fees comparable to private institutions, at least for out-of-state students. At the University of Vermont, for example, non-resident undergraduates face total estimated costs of $17,084 — $8,000 more than Vermont residents.

At private two-year colleges, tuition fees will rise an average 7 percent to $4,713, while average room and board charges will add $3,258.

The College Board's 1989 averages were based on cost data from 1,892 of the nation's 3,200 colleges and universities.

The College Board is a private, non-profit organization whose members include over 2,600 colleges and other educational institutions.

Mother Gets Jail Sentence

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. — A woman who abandoned her newborn in a jetliner bathroom after giving birth on a flight from New Jersey to San Francisco was sentenced to six months in jail.

San Mateo County Superior Court Judge Margaret J. Kemp said that despite claims of remorse, 25-year-old Christina LoCasto "wished the baby was just going to go away; that the baby would not be found, not be found alive and not attributed to her—it is extremely fortunate that the child lived."

The red-eyed woman, six months pregnant with her fourth child, cringed behind a lectern at her attorney's side as the judge ruled "a jail sentence is appropriate in this case." She burst into tears after Kemp read the sentence.

The child, Alyssa, is in the custody of her paternal grandparents, John and Frances LoCasto of New York City's Staten Island, where the girl's mother also lives.

Richmond County authorities, encompassing Staten Island, had agreed to carry out the sentence of LoCasto, the judge said. LoCasto was expected to begin serving time in October.

The brown-haired, blue-eyed baby was discovered July 13, 1988, under the bathroom sink of a United Airlines jet.

Senior Kristin Baker meets reporters after being selected as cadet captain at West Point

First Woman Leads Cadet Corps

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WEST POINT, N.Y. — For the first time in West Point's 187-year history, the captain of the Corps of Cadets is a woman.

Kristin Baker, a self-proclaimed "Army brat" from Burke, Va., confidently marched onto the U.S. Military Academy grounds Wednesday afternoon after leading a regiment of new cadets on a 13-mile march from Lake Frederick, where they'd trained for six days.

The 5-foot-4-inch, 112-pound Baker told the panting plebes to get some chow and then waded into a horde of reporters and photographers.

"Now, my first objective is 'Ring Weekend,' then the first football game, then graduation on the 31st of May. Beyond that, I really don't know," she said.

Commanding a brigade of more than 4,400 cadets will be Baker's primary concern for the coming academic year, which starts today.

Women, admitted as cadets since 1976, make up 20 percent of the cadets at West Point.

"The first captaincy at West Point was one of the last hurdles, if you will, that women had to cross before they were fully accepted as members of the officer corps of the Army," said Col. James Hawthorne, director of academy relations.

One of Baker's fellow cadets said her appointment might open more doors in the Army for women.

"If she does well, then I think they'll be more likely to choose a female for higher positions," said junior Lisa Buskirk.

Baker, 21, is majoring in human factors psychology — the study of the interaction between man and machines. She said she has not decided what she wants to do once commissioned as a second lieutenant in the U.S. Army.

"This is just a small part of what I'm going to do in the future," Baker said. "As far as what I'm going to do, whether or not I'm going to make it a career, is still to be seen."

The daughter of an Army colonel who's also a U.S. Military Academy graduate, Baker said she never felt pressured by her father to follow in his footsteps.

"He supported me no matter where I went," Baker said. "I had teachers who pushed harder than my father did."

Bush May Tap Powell

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush is expected to nominate former White House national security adviser Gen. Colin L. Powell as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, administration sources say.

Powell, at 52, would become the youngest man, and the first black, to become the nation's top military officer.

The four-star Army general, who now heads the U.S. Army Forces Command at Fort McPherson, Ga., would take over the prestigious position from Adm. William J. Crowe Jr., who is due to retire Sept. 30.

A senior administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the White House was expected to make the announcement today.

The position requires Senate confirmation.

The selection of Powell would mean that the Army general would leap over numerous more senior, and more experienced, military officers. A leading candidate for the position has been Air Force Gen. Robert Herres, the vice chairman of the Joint Chiefs.

Powell distinguished himself in the highly visible White House roles of national security adviser and deputy national security adviser and was well-known to Bush during his tenure as vice president.

Powell was the first black to be named chief of the NSC when President Reagan tapped him for the post in November 1987.

NASA Keeps Lid On Shuttle Flight

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Columbia's crew worked through the third day of the shuttle's secret military space mission today as officials on the ground kept a tight lid on what the five astronauts were doing.

Their flight plan called for them to monitor a package of research experiments and to conduct tests to determine how effective astronauts can be as military observers in space, according to sources close to the project.

But no official word came from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration or the Defense Department on what was going on aboard Columbia.

NASA broke its silence briefly Wednesday to report that Columbia would return to Earth on Sunday, landing between 9 a.m. and noon EDT at Edwards Air Force Base in California.

The statement added that "the crew is doing well and the Columbia continues to perform satisfactorily."

The next planned announcement, if no problems occur, will come Saturday, giving the exact landing time.

No information was available on whether the astronauts achieved the main goal of the mission — deploying a 10-ton reconnaissance satellite to snap highly detailed photographs of military targets over a large area of the globe, including most of the Soviet Union.

There were indications, however, that the satellite was released on Tuesday, several hours after Columbia was launched from Cape Canaveral.

Columbia's cargo bay also reportedly holds a package of scientific instruments for military research, possibly for the "Star Wars" missile defense program.

The astronauts, sources said, also were to conduct several experiments aimed at defining the role of military observers in space. The tests were to be coordinated with undisclosed ground exercises that could include troop maneuvers, naval movements and missile launches.

Commanding Columbia's all-military crew is Air Force Col. Brewster Shaw, a veteran of two earlier shuttle missions. The pilot is Navy Cmdr. Richard Richards, and the mission specialists are Navy Cmdr. David Leestma, Army Lt. Col. James Adamson and Air Force Maj. Mark Brown.

The flight is the fourth dedicated solely to the Defense Department. It is the 30th shuttle flight overall and the eighth for Columbia, its first in 3½ years.

S.C. Convict Frees Two Hostages, Then Kills Self

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MCCORMICK, S.C. — Authorities today are trying to determine how a convicted murderer smuggled into prison an automatic pistol that he used to hold two hostages for 9½ hours and eventually turned on himself.

Thomas Walden, 42, serving a life sentence plus 24 years for murder and armed robbery at the McCormick Correctional Institution, fatally shot himself in the neck at 10:26 p.m. Wednesday after earlier releasing unharmed another inmate and a prison worker being held hostage, officials said.

Walden was unhappy Wednesday about conditions at the prison and his impending transfer to the Perry Correctional Institution in Greenville County, officials said. But they said he never asked to remain in McCormick and appeared to accept the move later in the evening.

Walden was armed with a .25 caliber, silver-plated automatic pistol, Department of Corrections spokesman Francis X. Archibald said.

"Somebody could smuggle a weapon into the institution," he said. "We have deliveries made everyday ... clothes, food, supplies."

Archibald said corrections officials plan an intense investigation of how Walden got the gun.

"You never want a person like this to die," said State Department of Corrections Commissioner Parker Evatt. "And we had never thought that (he would die) during the whole time."

Walden took the two hostages about 11:30 a.m. in the prison's furniture-manufacturing building, Archibald said. He had asked for his attorney, his prison file and to be allowed to make a phone call to his wife, the spokesman said.

Officials ultimately agreed to his first two demands, but said they were never able to reach his wife. Walden did speak to his brother and a former mother-in-law, officials said.

By 9 p.m. Wednesday, Walden had released the two hostages and had tried to telephone other members of his family, Archibald said.

After complaining of having trouble with a cargo door that had been opened earlier, Evatt said Walden moved to an office chair and shot himself in the neck.

Evatt said officials listened in on Walden's conversations and both his relatives were "very positive in their conversations with him."

Walden was able to speak to his attorney, who advised him to give up, Evatt said. "He admitted to his lawyer that he probably did something he shouldn't have done, that he was in it and needed to get out of it."

Department officials said Walden and another inmate were reportedly at odds and that in the routine procedure to separate such prisoners, Walden happened to be the inmate chosen for the move.

"He snapped when he was being moved ... He said that was enough," Evatt said.

The inmate hostage, 31-year-old William David Cooper, who was serving a life sentence for murder, was released unharmed about 4:25 p.m. Wednesday after prison officials typed a handwritten statement by Walden and assured him it would be mailed to his attorney, Gaston Fahey of Columbia.

The other hostage, Foster S. Robinson, 56, was released at 8:58 p.m. after Walden was allowed to talk to his former mother-in-law, Archibald said.

"We got them out with a little give and take," he said of the negotiations.

Evatt said Robinson was the brother-in-law of state Rep. Jennings McAbee, D-McCormick.

Archibald said Walden's statement expressed dissatisfaction with the South Carolina Department of Corrections. He said Walden was particularly incensed at what would have been his fourth prison transfer since entering the state system in November 1984.

No shots were fired and no other injuries were reported during the incident, Archibald said. While Walden had made no overt threats during the incident, officials remained cautious.

"The man is holding a gun and is holding two hostages. We consider that to be a threat," Archibald said.

A special team negotiated by telephone Wednesday night with the convict, he said.

"The first thing he has to do is throw down the gun and come out with his hands in the air," Archibald had told reporters gathered about 300 yards from the building around 7 p.m. Wednesday.

Archibald, who had characterized Walden as "calm," said solvents of an unknown type were poured on the floor of the building and about 100 guards, firemen and armed officers were outside the building.

The incident began about 11:30 a.m. when Walden — who had been in a holding cell while awaiting transfer — overpowered an unarmed corrections official after asking to go to the bathroom, Archibald said.

Treasury Begins Borrowing To Open S&L Bailout

By Matt Yancey
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Some savers can expect less interest on their deposits and families may soon find it a bit more expensive to buy a home, as the government today begins spending $50 billion to resolve the savings and loan crisis.

President Bush signed legislation Wednesday committing American taxpayers to an estimated $157 billion for every man, woman and child — over the next five years to solve the nation's biggest financial crisis since the Depression.

"We can and will preserve a safe, efficient and profitable financial system for ourselves and ... for our children," Bush said before signing a bill providing money to cover more than $100 billion in S&L losses over the past decade to speculative, and often fraudulent, lending.

The Treasury Department planned today to borrow the first $5 billion of a $20 billion downpayment to be made over the next seven weeks to reduce an estimated $20 billion in daily losses by insolvent but still operating S&Ls.

L. William Seidman, head of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. and in charge of the day-to-day cleanup, said three-fourths of the first $20 billion will be used to reduce interest rates being offered by some shaky thrifts to attract deposits. Those rates are expected to fall from 11 percent to 8 percent or 9 percent.

That step alone, affecting an estimated $50 billion in high-rate certificates of deposit held by savers, is expected to immediately cut the daily losses by $2 million or $3 million, say Seidman and private analysts.

Most of the $50 billion in high-rate CDs have short durations — 30, 60 or 90 days. As they expire, savers can either withdraw their deposits or roll them over at interest rates 2 to 3 percentage points lower.

Those trying to buy homes should benefit because the bill pushes S&Ls back into home mortgage lending and out of risky investments such as speculative commercial real estate projects and junk bonds.

Thrifts will be required to raise the level of housing and housing-related loans in their portfolios to 70 percent from 60 percent.

Unresolved is whether the Resolution Trust Corp., the agency created to close or merge 400 to 700 insolvent or marginally solvent S&Ls over the next 26 months, will unilaterally reduce interest rates on high-rate, long-term CDs with durations up to 30 months.

The trust corporation's predecessor, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, had honored those interest rates in taking over failed S&Ls. FDIC Director C.C. Hope Jr. said he expected a decision "in the next few days."

Whatever that decision, analysts said they expected the influx of government cash into the troubled institutions — about one-sixth of the industry — to ripple throughout the entire financial system.

"It will be a generational impact — because people over 50 have more cash and savings and people under 50 generally have more debt," said Alex Sheshunoff, a private analyst.

"As interest rates come down, it's going to benefit borrowers more than depositors," he said. "The last chance to catch the high-rate CD freight train was before 10:45 a.m. (Wednesday) when Bush signed the bill."

Immediately upon Bush's signature, the Resolution Trust Corp. authorized spending $215 million to liquidate or subsidize the merger of three of 262 ailing thrifts the government has taken over since February.

Another $600 million was authorized for liquidations and mergers over the next two weeks.

Officials anticipate it will take 26 months and the expenditure of all $50 billion provided in the legislation to stem the industry's losses, assuming interest rates don't rise.

Including interest on the money being borrowed to address the crisis, the bailout will cost $159 billion over the next 10 years and $285 billion — $157 billion of it from taxpayers — over 30 years, according to administration and congressional estimates.

S&L owners will be required to put up billions of dollars more of their own money as a buffer between risky loans and the government's deposit insurance funds "so these problems will never happen again," Bush said.

Conservationists Say 24 Plants Causing Most Waste Buildup

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Two dozen plants accounted for a third of all the highly hazardous industrial chemical releases reported in the United States in 1987, a national conservation group says in an analysis released today.

The National Wildlife Federation analysis released today showed that 24 plants in 44 states disposed about 1 billion pounds of toxic waste through burial or release into the air, water or public sewage system.

The two dozen plants in 13 states released 3.5 billion pounds of toxic waste in 1987, the report said. The material included chemicals and metals, some 39 of which are considered carcinogenic.

The emissions are legal, but legislation pending before Congress could curb many of the releases by setting tighter standards for toxic industrial waste.

Seven of the 12 biggest producers of toxic wastes use burial for disposal, while five inject wastes deep into the ground. Industry defends that method of disposal, but environmentalists disagree.

Increasingly, such disposal methods "threaten the nation's ground water which supplies drinking water for almost 50 percent of Americans," the federation said.

"Which community will see disease outbreaks from polluted surface and ground water? What species of fish or wildlife will be threatened by acute or chronic toxicity? No one knows," said federation president Jay Hair.

In a preface to the report, Hair said its purpose was "to emphasize the scope of toxic (release) problems."

"He cautioned that the figures themselves provide no accurate way to predict health or environmental effects, but he said they make clear we are dumping too many chemicals into our environment at too high a level."

No. 1 on the top 500 list was the ALCOA plant in Point Comfort, Texas, which reported 465 million pounds of toxic wastes in 1987, almost all of it buried at the facility.

A dozen facilities each reported more than 100 million pounds of wastes were released, while 118 plants reported disposing at least 10 million pounds, the study said. Each facility reported at least 2.6 million pounds of toxic releases.

The Environmental Protection Agency made the raw data available last month after receiving reports from more than 18,000 facilities.

The 480-page federation analysis said the 7.5 billion pounds of toxic material released by the 500 facilities was about 70 percent of the total 10.3 billion pounds reported in 1987, the latest year for which figures were available.

ALCOA had three other plants among the top 15 on the list of those releasing the largest amounts of toxic material, including its Rockdale, Texas, plant, which was No. 3 with 329 million pounds of wastes, most buried on plant grounds.

The National Steel Corp. Great Lakes Division plant at Ecorse, Mich., was the second biggest disposer of toxic wastes at 423 million pounds, almost all buried a few miles away.

The buried wastes at the two Texas ALCOA plants, as well as the National Steel Corp. plant in Michigan, consisted largely of aluminum oxide, a chemical that can damage the respiratory system and may contribute to brain damage.

According to the study, five companies each reported more than 30 million pounds of toxic emissions released into the air in 1987, part of the roughly 2.6 billion pounds of such wastes sent airborne by all companies reporting to the EPA.

Amax Magnesium, owned by Amax Inc. in Rowley, Utah, released the most material into the air — 68 million pounds of toxics, mostly chlorine.

Kennecott Utah Copper, the mining company owned by British Petroleum, accounts for the largest amount of toxic metal waste, most of it copper but also arsenic, chrome, barium and zinc compounds. Most of the 158 million pounds of wastes are buried on Kennecott property.

The three companies that released the largest amount of toxic chemicals into water are in Louisiana.

Two Agric Chemical Co. plants — in Uncle Sam and Donaldsonville, La. — were ranked No. 1 and No. 3, disposing 59 million pounds and 44 million pounds of chemicals respectively, mostly phosphoric acid.

The Arcadian Corp. of Geismar, La., ranked second with 54 million pounds of mostly phosphoric and sulfuric acid.

Britain Rejects Canadian Waste

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — A freighter carrying a container of toxic waste left Britain today after the country's largest port refused to accept the cargo and officials at a second port said they would not accept the shipment.

Authorities at Tilbury, at the mouth of the Thames River, Wednesday blocked the unloading of a container of polychlorinated biphenyls, or PCBs, from Canada carried aboard a Soviet freighter.

A port spokesman, John McNab, said the decision was made "out of consideration for the work force and the local community."

Members of the environmental group Greenpeace had met the ship Khudozhnik Saryan and placed poison warning labels on the hull as it entered the port.

Later Wednesday, authorities at Liverpool said they would reject 1,800 tons of PCB waste expected from Canada in the next few months.

The Khudozhnik Saryan discharged all of its cargo except the single container containing the PCBs.

Charity Begins With Uncle Sam

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is giving 389 groups, including a homosexual rights organization, the chance to benefit from federal payroll deductions that raise about $160 million a year for charity.

"Frankly, it is a thrilling prospect for us," Thomas Stoddard, executive director of the Lambda Legal Defense and Education Fund, said Wednesday. "Being listed helps fulfill our mission."

The fund, established in 1972 to defend homosexuals and homosexual rights in court, was one of 19 groups that received last-minute approval for inclusion. It is the first overtly homosexual organization to be included in the government list.

"I assume, frankly, that there was simply a desire to keep Lambda out of the circle by virtue of its mission," Stoddard said about the earlier rejection.

The drive, the Combined Federal Campaign, is the nation's largest single fundraising campaign.

Getting listed can bring large amounts to an organization at virtually no cost. But it also can bring nothing if federal employees don't specifically designate the charity.

Workers are allowed to choose up to five charities from a list that, including local charities, may number more than 1,000.

Other participants in this year's drive are anti-abortion and pro-abortion rights groups; Ralph Nader's Center for Auto Safety; Phyllis Schlafly's Eagle Forum Educational & Legal Defense Fund; the liberal People for the American Way and the American Civil Liberties Union Foundation.

Among those rejected were the Red River Valley Fighter Pilots Association, Trout Unlimited and Cultural Survival Inc.

Former President Reagan issued a 1983 executive order restricting the federal drive to traditional health and welfare charities.

U.S. Planes Join Hunt For Leland

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia — Two U.S. Air Force cargo planes joined the search today for Rep. Mickey Leland and 13 other people missing since Monday on a flight to a refugee camp in southwestern Ethiopia.

The giant C-130 Hercules aircraft arrived in Addis Ababa from West Germany shortly after dawn to help in the search for the Texas Democrat and his party, whose twin-engine plane was believed to have gone down in remote, rugged country near the Sudanese border.

"The Hercules give us more hover time," said James Haley, a U.S. Embassy spokesman in Ethiopia's capital, noting that C-130s can stay aloft longer than the dozen or more light planes being used in the search.

The United States sent the aircraft after Ethiopia requested help in the search.

A C-141 equipped for medical evacuation was expected to arrive from West Germany later in the day, Haley said, and four MH-60 helicopters were to be airlifted from U.S. bases in Europe on Friday.

The embassy also said a specialized airplane capable of taking clear pictures of wide areas from high altitudes was expected to join the search by midday Friday.

"We are still optimistic because we have heard rumors of aircraft flying low" in an area, about 50 miles from Leland's destination, said John Guerra, another embassy official in Addis Ababa.

Reports of a light plane circling two dirt landing strips in the remote, mountainous highlands of southwestern Ethiopia reached the capital shortly after Leland's plane was reported missing Monday evening.

The congressman from Houston and his party had set out that morning aboard a Twin Otter aircraft to visit the Fugnido refugee camp, about 480 miles southwest of the capital. Weather along their route was bad, with heavy clouds and low visibility.

The search area was expanded Wednesday to include parts of Sudan south of Fugnido and covered more than 24,000 square miles.

Ethiopia's Civil Aviation Authority coordinated the aerial search. Ground parties of police, state security officers and peasants also were scouring the cold, rugged highlands.

"They're putting more resources into the area around Mizan Teferi and Guraferda, southeast of Fugnido," said Guerra, a political and economics officer.

Guraferda is near an area in which a light plane reportedly was heard, but not seen, circling landing strips carved out of the bush to serve as drop zones for emergency food during a widespread famine in Ethiopia in 1984-85.

"We have to reiterate that these areas are so isolated they could have put down anywhere," Guerra said. He described the region as "without any communication, virtually no roads and sparsely populated."

He acknowledged the possibility that Leland's plane could have slammed into one of the many mountains along its path, some of which are higher than 12,000 feet.

"But the only reports we've had is of planes circling fields," Guerra added, suggesting that Leland's party got past the most rugged terrain along its flight path and into an area where an emergency landing would have been easier.

Rescue workers search for victims after passenger cars derailed near Los Mochis, Mexico, and plunged into a river

Mexican Train Crash Kills 99

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS MOCHIS, Mexico — A local train on a milk-run from Mazatlan to the California border plunged off a bridge into a river in northwestern Mexico, killing at least 99 people and injuring 107, officials said.

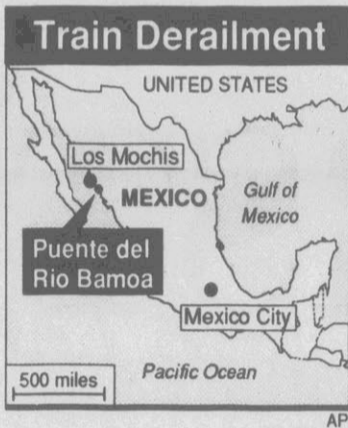

Jose Pena Galanza of the Pacific Railway told the government news agency Notimex that bodies had been pried from the wreckage of an engine and two passenger cars that fell early Wednesday into the San Rafael River, 59 miles southeast of Los Mochis. The site is 730 miles from Mexico City.

Torrential rains over the last week were blamed for the crash.

"The cause was quite clear. The heavy rains loosened the railbed and the rails just gave way," said Roberto Martinez Maestre, a spokesman for the state government based in Mexico City.

But it was not immediately clear if the bridge was swept away or weakened by floods before the train crossed or was knocked to bits when the train jumped the rails.

The search for bodies continued into the night, with rescue workers working knee-deep in mud and water along the river saying they the coastal resort of Mazatlan to Mexicali, across the border from Calexico, Calif.

News photographers who flew over the scene said they could see passenger cars lying jumbled, some of them on their side, in the river at the bottom of a deep ravine.

In Mexico City, President Carlos Salinas de Gortari expressed his condolences to relatives and said in a statement he had ordered National Railways — which includes the Pacific route — to pay compensation and burial costs.

Survivors were being put up in local hotels and would be given money for travel and new clothes, according to Luis Humberto Peimbert, director of social services in the nearby town of Guasave.

Most people on the train were apparently asleep when the accident occurred at about 4 a.m.

The majority of victims drowned, said Javier Lopez, the Red Cross duty officer in Los Mochis. "They fell into the water and died of asphyxiation," he said.

Abel Roldan, a rescue worker in the village of Bamoa, 11 miles from the accident site, said heavy rains finally stopped late Wednesday afternoon, "and this helped a lot."

Sinaloa state Gov. Francisco Labastida Ochoa rushed to the scene Wednesday, then went to Guamuchil for the night. The bodies and the injured were being brought to Guamuchil and nearby Guasave.

Lt. Gabriela Herrera, a duty officer with the Guasave police, said about 20 bodies were in the town's three funeral parlors and the rest at Guamuchil and Los Mochis, 410 miles south of Nogales, Ariz.

Janet Gaxiole Sandoval, a secretary at a social security clinic in Guasave, said at least 30 of the injured were in serious condition.

Accidents happen every couple of months on the rundown Mexican railway system, but this was by far the most serious train accident this year in Mexico.

At least 34 passengers were killed injured when an express train derailed in July 1982 near Tepic, capital of Nayarit state south of Sinaloa.

Another 62 passengers died and 99 were injured in February 1983 when a train stalled because of a malfunctioning air-brake near the Sinaloa city of Guaymas and a speeding freight convoy rammed it from behind.

Twenty more died and 30 were injured when a bus and a train collided at a grade crossing in January 1988, also in Nayarit.

On May 4, a passenger train derailed about 400 miles northwest of Mexico City, killing at least eight people and injuring 50.

On Feb. 25, 22 people died when a bus and train collided near Saltillo, and another 13 people died in a Jan. 31 bus-train accident in Ciudad Sahagun.

expected the death toll to surpass 99.

Derailed passenger cars were jumbled along the tracks like straws. Helicopters landed rescue workers nearby and casualties were taken out on railroad handcars.

Rail and rescue officials could provide no immediate breakdown on the nationality of the victims. Eleven bodies identified Wednesday night were all Mexican, and one official said the train was patronized almost entirely by poor Mexicans.

The train, popular known as "The Burro" because it stops at almost every station, was on its way from

Police Break Up Black Rally

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Several black demonstrators were hurt today when police swinging whips and batons broke up a rally by about 500 trade union members outside a courthouse, union officials said.

The union members, who were singing and dancing, marched about two miles from a train station to the Kempton Park courthouse outside Johannesburg before police chased them from the area, said the Congress of South African Trade Unions, the nation's largest labor federation.

Several people suffered injuries that required treatment at a hospital, officials of the labor organization said. They had no further details, and police authorized to comment on the incident were not immediately available.

The march was staged in support of 27 workers ordered to appear in court for allegedly singing freedom songs and dancing on public trains.

The Congress of South African Trade Unions says more than 400 of its members have been charged with disturbing the peace for singing on trains since June. Most of those who have appeared in court received fines.

Today's court proceedings were postponed when the men ordered to appear did not show up.

The union said its members will continue singing on trains that carry workers to and from their jobs in the cities and the outlying black townships.

The labor group is one of the leading members of the Mass Democratic Movement.

Small U.S. Towns Losing Hope

By Strat Douhat
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GUTHRIE, KY. — When Emma Alexander harks back to the days of her youth she sees this western Kentucky border community as it was then, a bustling little railroad town, a place of high hopes and promise.

If only today's young people could see what it was like back then, the 96-year-old woman says.

"Why, we had 22 Greyhound buses stopping here every day. And the trains, land sakes, they stopped here every hour, it seemed like. We had four department stores in Guthrie. The streets were always full of people."

Now, like thousands of other small towns across the country, Guthrie has been bypassed by the railroads, by the bus lines, by prosperity.

And the young people — looking at now, not then, and seeing no career jobs, no reason to stay on — flee as soon as they finish high school.

James Golden is one of those who fled.

"First, the movie theater closed, shortly after I finished school, 25 years ago. Then, we lost our high school to consolidation. The trains stopped coming after that. More recently, we lost our bus service. Then, last year, the elementary school was closed."

Hettie Louise Griffey, a retired teacher, said she "like to cried when they took away our little school. It's been one thing after another."

Such losses take a terrible toll on the quality of life in a small community. And unfortunately, says Golden, now the research director for the National Association of Counties in Washington, D.C., Guthrie has become a paradigm for what's happened to many country places in the United States.

"It's sad, what has befallen our rural communities," he said.

Guthrie was a transfer point on the Louisville & Nashville Railroad. It's the birthplace of Robert Penn Warren, the Pulitzer prize-winning writer.

"It used to be a proud little town but now there's almost no hope of bringing in new industry or reviving the spirit of the community," Golden said.

The plight of these troubled towns can't be traced to a single cause, but Golden cites two recent blows: the deregulation of the transportation industry in the early '80s and the end, in 1985, of federal revenue sharing, which provided millions for small-town projects.

"With deregulation, the airlines and bus lines pulled out and many communities became increasingly isolated as they lost their daily links to the wider world," he said.

A 1986 study by the Interstate Commerce Commission showed that no fewer than 4,514 points lost bus service between November 1982 and January 1986. By 1986, more than 10,000 of the nation's 18,000 named communities were totally without service.

"And the end of revenue sharing has meant a loss of many essential public works projects and a cutback in those social services so important in holding together a community," Golden said.

A National Association of Counties study earlier this year examining the impact of lost revenue sharing on 28 Kentucky counties found widespread cuts in senior citizens programs, parks and recreation spending, and fire, police and ambulance services.

"Our small towns are losing hope," said Golden. "We're trying to get a new initiative for rural development from Congress. Something needs to be done."

Guthrie Mayor John Coke couldn't be more in agreement.

"When they took away revenue sharing we lost 20 percent of our budget," Coke said. "And we're talking about the part that really hurt."

As a result, he said, the town's two police cars have well over 100,000 miles each on their odometers, with no funds to replace them. Other services are being maintained at marginal levels.

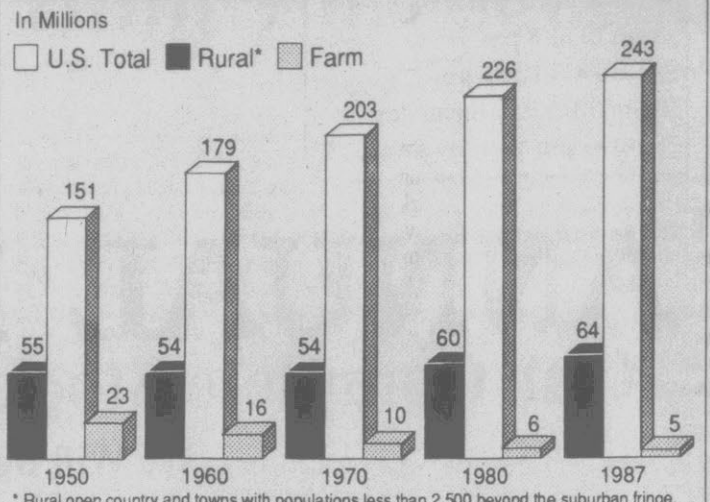

He shook his head sadly as he surveyed the town's main street, now dotted with sagging, empty storefronts and even emptier sidewalks.

"Back in our heyday the streets were always busy," said Coke. "Salesmen would come to Guthrie, park their cars and take the trains because the connections were so good. We had three active hotels then."

"Now, about all that's left of downtown is a drugstore, a funeral home, a hardware store, an auto parts store and a furniture store that's going out of business."

The town, he said, is full of

railroad retirees and their widows. He acknowledged there's little to hold the young people, except maybe the prospect of a job in the local sewing factory or wood treatment plant.

"And who wants that?" asked 18-year-old Sarah Harper of nearby Allensville. "I'm in college. I come home to work during the summer but I've got no intention of staying here; there's nothing here but farm work or a low-level factory job, nothing you'd want to spend your life doing." As a result, Guthrie's 1,800 residents, like those in other small, rural towns, tend to be older than the national median. And at a time in their lives when residents need ready access to medical services, Guthrie has only a part-time clinic staffed by two general practitioners who work out of a mobile home.

From 1980 to 1988, 208 rural hospitals closed, according to the American Hospital Association. Some 130 rural counties, with a total population of more than 500,000, have no active physicians, the American Medical Association said.

"We once had seven doctors here," recalled Emma Alexander, whose late husband ran a busy service station back in the 1930s, when Guthrie was on the main route between Chicago and Florida.

"They called us the crossroads of the world back then," she said. "You could go anywhere on a train. You could get a train to Nashville three or four times before noon, every day. Now, if I want to go to the doctor over in Clarksville, Tenn., I've got to pay somebody to take me."

"There's no taxi service here, but a local woman has a van and she'll take you the 18 miles down to Clarksville. Sometimes it costs me $25 to $30 to go see the doctor."

Coke points out that Todd County provides Guthrie's elderly and indigent with once-a-week bus service to Russellville, the county seat. But, he says most people would be stuck if they didn't have a car or a neighbor to drive them.

"The town started to decline after it was bypassed by the highway and train passenger service began to fall off," said Robert Penn Warren, who long ago left to settle in Connecticut. Now 84, the novelist and poet was born in the countryside near Guthrie and moved to town when he was very young.

"My father went there because of the opportunity," he said. "He was the president of a small bank. I went to school in Guthrie and I can still remember the excitement of the trains stopping at all hours of the day and night. I moved away but my late brother stayed and built a big grain elevator there."

When his brother was alive, Warren said, he used to return home frequently. Now, like everyone else, he has little reason to go to Guthrie, the onetime "crossroads of the world."

Towns Band Together For Survival

By Sharon Cohen
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

THORNTON, Iowa — When it comes to a football or basketball game, Rockwell is the enemy around here. But when it comes to a more critical issue — survival — old rivals are new allies.

These two communities have decided that united they stand, divided they fall into the bleak landscape of ghost towns littering America's heartland.

So Thornton, Rockwell and five other hamlets have formed a "cluster" called the Area Community Commonwealth, one of a growing number of such programs in Iowa that aim to keep small towns alive by sharing classrooms, workers or equipment and pooling resources to attract business.

"It's going to take a joint effort to save our schools and save our Main Streets," said Chris Nannenga, the commonwealth's founder. "We realized we've got to do something to stop our erosion. Basically our only solution is to work together."

About 17 Iowa "clusters" have been or are being formed — one along Interstate 80, others within counties — to offset the 1980s' rural economic decline that has seen farmers lose their land, merchants lose their stores and hard-working people lose their dreams.

"If you're sitting in a town of 500, and you start talking about economic and community development, your options are so limited," said Tim Borich, an Iowa State University rural development specialist working with some of the clusters.

"What we're really doing is redefining what community is ... and dispelling some of the fatalism. Maybe if we work together, we can keep the boat afloat yet."

The Area Community Commonwealth, the first cluster, formed in 1986. Besides Thornton and Rockwell, the group's towns are Sheffield, Dougherty, Swaledale, Chapin and Meservey.

For years, the communities were divided by athletic and economic rivalries, vying for trophies and business dollars. "There was not a sense of common good," Nannenga said. "It was all for you, none for me."

Most of the towns had struggled with shrinking school enrollments, the domino-like closings of hardware stores, factories and taverns and the shopping exodus to Mason City, which is large enough to support a K mart and Wal-Mart.

"Young people left," said Gene Persons, a grocer and the commonwealth treasurer. "Unemployment was high. People's attitudes were down."

It happened all across Iowa. Almost half the gas stations and nearly a third of the state's groceries closed from 1976 to '88, said Ken Stone, an Iowa State economist.

One big obstacle is most small towns don't have enough money to hire experts to lure industry, nor enough voters to wield much political influence.

The commonwealth towns' separate populations, for example, range from 128 to about 1,200. But as a group, 6,500 people "give us a little more leverage to be listened to in the Legislature," Persons said.

The group's biggest coup was last year's 60th birthday celebration for Mickey Mouse, organized with the Walt Disney Co. A much-publicized giant silhouette of Mickey's head, visible from the air, was created by meticulous surveying and planting in a 530-acre corn and oat field between Sheffield and Dougherty. Transcontinental airline pilots pointed it out to their surprised passengers.

Disney worked with the towns to hold a two-day party in August in Sheffield, which drew 45,000 people. The commonwealth netted about $48,000 — profits from T-shirts and hats and other concessions.

Other projects are much smaller, such as a grade sharing program in which two school districts exchange junior high, and high school students, filling classrooms and saving money.

Two towns share a police officer, and some small retail outlets have set up satellite stores so residents don't have to travel 20 miles to get film developed or buy vegetables or hardware.

There's no more Us vs. Them.

"We've turned a win-lose situation into a win-win situation," Nannenga said.

An industrial park also was established in Rockwell in 1988 and a small water bottling company has opened, receiving a $30,000 loan from a $50,000 state grant the commonwealth received. A company that makes equipment that picks up recyclable products is considering moving there.

"We can't handle the industries that are going to employ 150 to 200 people," Nannenga admitted. "We don't have the housing. We don't have the infrastructure. We may not be able to sell washing machines, but we can fix them."

Practicality is an important part of a cluster's success, said Kathy Beery, Iowa's rural development coordinator. "If you have some unrealistic goals it's going to be very frustrating. You don't want to come together just because you're desperate. Perhaps there's some natural resource they can build on ... or perhaps some existing business."

Five communities in a cluster north of Des Moines are doing that, developing a nature trail-biking corridor shared by three of the towns.

"We don't want to lose the spirit of competition ... yet we want to capitalize on cooperation," said Mayor Howard Hammond of Slater, one of the towns. "This is the only way we're going to survive."

Grandparents Rear Another Generation

By Catherine Dressler
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Albert and Mary Etta Johnson hoped after a lifetime of hard work to retire, relax and enjoy golf, traveling and doting on their two young grandchildren.

Instead, the Anaheim, Calif., couple are raising their grandchildren while their 28-year-old daughter battles addiction to alcohol, cocaine and heroin.

"We're not the grandparents of these children anymore. We're the parents," said Johnson, 67. "It's very miserable."

"We've already raised our family. The fact is we have very little time for ourselves."

The Johnsons aren't alone. Despite the stress of financial and health problems, many grandparents are raising grandchildren because addicted parents can't do the job, experts say.

"It's difficult for them to start over again. What they did with their own children years ago doesn't work now," said Sylvie de Toledo, a social worker at the Psychiatric Clinic for Youth in Long Beach, Calif., who formed a support group called Grandparents as Parents in August 1987.

About 50 grandmothers, from varied social and economic backgrounds, belong to the group. Some of the children's parents died, are ill or were injured, but many neglected or abandoned their kids while abusing drugs or alcohol.

The Johnsons' grandchildren, 6-year-old Mark and 7-year-old Nicole, must be driven to visit playmates since children are scarce in their neighborhood. The children's friends sometimes visit, but Mrs. Johnson, 66, said, "I've got my hands full with these two alone."

Despite the burdens, Johnson, who has suffered two heart attacks and twice has undergone open-heart surgery, says they have no choice but to give their grandchildren a good home until their daughter can care for them.

"They don't want to see the children split up or put in foster homes," Ms. De Toledo said. "They love these kids."

It's not known how many children are raised by grandparents, but social agencies say the number is increasing, especially in bigger cities plagued by drugs, said David Liederman, executive director of the Child Welfare League of America.

"It's not new that grandparents have stepped in to take care of grandchildren," he said. "I think it's increased at a more than normal rate because of the tremendous increase in drug-related problems."

Grandmothers sometimes get stuck raising children despite poor vision, arthritis or other health problems that prevent them from providing adequate care, said Calvin Walker, a supervisor at the New Opportunities For The Aging center in Pittsburgh's mostly poor Hill District neighborhood. The center sometimes helps in the worst situations by finding a babysitter.

Poverty fuels the cycle in which the grandmother raises up to three generations, Walker said. "The grandmother turns into the maternal parent. It's like, 'She was my mother's mother, now she's my mother and in some instances she's my baby's mother.'"

Ms. De Toledo said the grandmothers she counsels range in age from their early 40s to late 70s. Some resent their child-rearing responsibilities. "They don't have the energy, the patience, the stamina that they used to have."

"The majority have worked all their lives and now have used

whatever they had saved for retirement."

The situation can be hard on the children, too, she said. "Many of these kids come from traumatic childhoods and bring their own set of emotional problems to the grandmothers."

"Many of the kids are embarrassed that they live with grandparents, that they feel different from the other children at school. They wonder who's going to take care of them if something happens to grandma or grandpa."

Dick Bennett, a social worker who counsels families in Gary, Ind., said many of the children feel rejected by their parents. "There's this question of identity. Kids can see why they're left with a husband or a wife in a divorce easier than they can see why they're left with their grandparents. They feel, 'Both of my parents don't want me.'"

Ruby Miller, 62, of Las Vegas, and her husband have raised two teenage grandsons since 1987, when their divorced son died. Mrs. Miller meets once a week in her home with several other women raising grandchildren, and is setting up a thrift shop to raise money for shoes, clothing, food and medical care.

"They're neglecting their own needs and there isn't adequate money to buy clothing for the children," she said. "Sometimes, the grandmother will pay $40 to $50 for shoes for the grandchild and they will wear $3 shoes from the dime store."

Eating Disorder Starves Teen-Ager

Dear Abby: I am a 13-year-old girl. I am 5 feet tall and weigh 90 pounds. My parents are always telling me that I don't eat enough and a lot of people say I'm too skinny. Personally, I think I'm too fat.

I hardly ever eat, and I exercise all the time to lose weight. I am practically starving myself. Please help me, Abby. I don't know what to do. — Non-Eater In South Carolina

Dear Non-Eater: You are not alone. You have an eating disorder that is not uncommon in girls your age. It's called "anorexia nervosa."

In medical terms it is "a psychological and endocrine disorder primarily of young women in their teens — characterized by a pathological fear of gaining weight which leads to faulty eating patterns, malnutrition and excessive weight loss." In plain English, it's deliberately starving oneself to stay thin.

You can be helped, but you cannot cure yourself. Please take this letter to your parents or an understanding teacher, the school nurse or counselor — any adult you can talk to comfortably.

There are doctors and eating-disorder clinics near you. You have taken the first two steps: admitting you have a problem and asking for help. "Please take my advice, and write again to let me know how you are. I care."

Dear Abby: I know from reading your column that you disagree with me, but I believe that a friend should tell when someone is cheating, because that person needs to know what kind of person he or she is in a relationship with.

My husband is a minister, and he has counseled many couples. Often, one partner cheated even before the marriage, which usually carries over into the marriage at some later date.

However, there is one misconception in regards to cheating, and that is that the "wounded party" is always blameless. Abby, that just isn't so! Nine times out of 10, the "wounded" party drove the other party into an affair because of nagging, coldness, lack of understanding and withholding sex.

Dear Abby

There are always three to blame in every affair, and the wounded party must take responsibility for his or her part in provoking the affair, or the marriage can never be healed. — Janet G.

Dear Janet: I don't know where you found your "statistics," but your generalities and absolutes make your conclusions questionable.

It's not true that the wounded party always provokes the affair and drives the cheater to cheat. It's possible that the wounded party is entirely blameless, so the "excuses" you offer to justify cheating miss the mark by a mile.

Dear Abby: Here is something to share with your readers. Every year, I send a birthday card to my two favorite people. One happens to be my identical twin brother, and the other birthday card goes to our mother.

My twin and I have always honored each other on our special day, but we haven't forgotten that our mother was there, too. After all, it was her "birth" day, also. — Le Baron Stewart, Los Angeles

Dear Le Baron: To honor one's mother on one's own birthday is indeed a lovely gesture, but I must confess this is not the first time I have heard of it. My husband's sister, Paula, has been sending her mother (my mother-in-law) a dozen roses every year — on the day of her own birthday.

Statue Makes Rounds, Returns

The club for the Incredibly Stupid and Dumb Beyond Belief (ISDBB) was not founded by me. It was begun by a friend of mine in the East who thought there should be a tangible award for turning a simple situation into a disaster. You can't give a Heisman Trophy for something like that. So, a confession to such a deed is rewarded with a statue of a creature with a potbelly and a club in its hand. Someone had bought it at a garage sale. Like a torch, it is passed from one incompetent to another.

My friend got it for sitting up all night in a living room chair waiting for her teen-age son to come home, only to learn after a restless night and a sore back that he had come in through the kitchen door around 11.

She, in turn, passed it on to a friend who thought he left the lens cap to his new camera in a shop in Mexico. After hours of retracing his steps to all the stores he had visited, he discovered the lens was retractable and opened and closed with a flip of the finger.

The ugly ISDBB statue found its way west when my husband told them the story of how he left his passport on top of a hotel TV set in London and had to pay an empty cab $40 to pick it up and rush it to the airport.

I can't remember the reason he sent it back East, but the statue broke in transit and he got it right back for being dumb enough to send it in a shoe box wrapped only in tissue in the first place.

At Wits End

We have kept it ever since because we realized we had enough ISDBB candidates within our family to keep it moving briskly for the rest of our lives.

My mother paid $3,000 to buy a battery-driven chair for my father to tool around the house, only to discover it wouldn't fit through the door frames. We didn't give her the ISDBB trophy until she sold the car for $1,000.

Pouring boiling water from a spaghetti pot down my stomach didn't make me stupid enough for the award. Telling my mother about it did.

My daughter got it when she was sucking so hard on a Tootsie Roll with her tongue that it caused a blood blister to pop under her tongue.

A couple of days ago I was running barefoot through the house. I have made a million speeches to people who visit us in the desert about running around in bare feet. It is one of my more inspiring speeches. We have a lot of animals here who take a dim view of being stepped on. I stepped on a scorpion.

In bed, with my foot on fire, I waited for the ugly statue with the potbelly and the club in its hand to appear. Finally, the family gathered around and said I would have permanent possession of the award. I had just been named to the Stupid Hall of Fame. They all applauded.

You'll excuse me if I don't get up.

Stock And Market Reports

By The Associated Press
HOGS: The trend is steady at N.C. buying stations. Kinston, Spivey's Corner, Murfreesboro, Siler City and Robersonville, 46.00; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Pine Level, Chadbourne, Ayden, Laurinburg and Benson 45.00; Wilson 45.50. Sows: (500 pounds up) Fayetteville 33.00; Wallace 34.00; Spivey's Corner 34.00; Rowland 35.00.

BROILERS: The North Carolina fock dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 55.75 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. Too few percent of the loads offered have been confirmed for a preliminary weighted average. The market is steady and the live supply is fully adequate for a moderate demand. Average weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 2,202,000, compared to 2,157,000 last Thursday.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn 1-4 cents lower, mostly 2.58-2.71 in East and mostly 2.68-2.75 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans 6-7 cents higher at 6.16-6.40 1/2 in East and mostly 6.09-6.26 in the Piedmont; wheat mostly 3.50-3.62; new crop corn 2.10-2.68; new crop soybeans 5.30-5.61; P.I.K. certificates steady and ranged from 100 to 106 1/2 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices were mostly lower today in another session dominated by takeover news and rumors.

The 10 a.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrials stood at 2,686.03, unchanged from Wednesday's close.

Losers outnumbered gainers by about 3 to 2 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 383 up, 586 down and 541 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 28.28 million shares in the first half hour of trading.

Analysts said the market in general suffered a bit of a letdown following its inability to make a decisive move past the 2,700 level in the Dow Jones industrial average over the past few days.

But heavy activity persisted in stocks reported or rumored to be takeover targets.

UAL, which said it would explore a wide range of options in light of a takeover bid from investor Marvin Davis, climbed 12 1/8 to 256. The stock ended last week at 164 1/2.

Among other prominent airline issues, AMR gained 1 7/8 to 78 3/4 and Delta Air Lines was up 7/8 at 80 1/4.

Paramount Communications, widely discussed as a possible acquisition target, moved up 2 1/4 to 64 3/8.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks slipped .37 to 192.83. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .34 at 380.81.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 13.09 to 2,686.03.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by more than 4 to 3 on the NYSE, with 624 up, 878 down and 494 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 209.90 million shares, against 200.34 million in the previous session.

Band Reunited
NEW YORK (AP) — Chuck D., the leader of the rap group Public Enemy, says the band has reunited after firing one member for his anti-Semitic remarks and is ready to fight the power in an upcoming album.

"After having taken time out for reorganization, Public Enemy is back in action," Chuck D. said in a statement Wednesday. "The show must go on. Brace yourselves for 1990."

Suspect Charged
FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — A Fayetteville man has been charged with second-degree murder in the death of a 50-year-old man who was hit on the head, authorities say.

Luther Signal, 50, of Fayetteville, died at 11:58 p.m. Monday. He was found on a city street at about 2 p.m. on Aug. 2 by an ambulance crew and was admitted to Highsmith-Rainey Memorial Hospital, police Lt. William Simons said.

Narvelt Copeland Jr., 29, was arrested about 7 p.m. Tuesday, authorities said. He was placed in Cumberland County Jail on $30,000 bail.

Bush

As the president continued to press diplomatic efforts, including talks through third parties with Iran, he urged all American churches, synagogues and other places of worship to "say a special prayer this weekend" for the hostages, their families and for world peace.

Bush sought to dispel the notion that he had modified the U.S. policy against negotiating with terrorists, including those who claimed to have killed Marine Lt. Col. William R. Higgins and who are holding eight other Americans in Lebanon.

He reiterated the words he used in his inaugural address to extend an olive branch to Iran: "Goodwill will beget goodwill."

"If there ever was a clearer signal, in my view, that's it," said Bush. "So I repeat it."

"If there are changes taking place, and signals that are shifting, I don't want to miss a signal," the president said. "The life of every single one of these people is too precious for me to be sticking my head in the sand and miss some subtlety in this highly complicated corner of the world."

His comments came after reports indicating that Iran's new president, Hashemi Rafsanjani, would help obtain freedom for the hostages if the United States released the billions of dollars in Iranian assets impounded a decade ago after radicals in Iran seized 52 hostages in the U.S. embassy.

Asked about the possibility of unfreezing those assets, Bush said flatly: "My view is to do nothing that will be seen as quid pro quo for hostages."

Bush said the signals from Iran were "very mixed," but he remains hopeful of a breakthrough on the hostages.

Some countries that had been "ambivalent or silent" about the hostages' plight were "so infuriated or angered or repulsed by the brutality of the Higgins film" depicting the captive's hanging and threats against U.S. hostage Joseph Cicippio that now they are willing to help, he said.

"I feel good that we're on the right road now for the library and the conference center," said Rep. Walter B. Jones Jr., D-Pitt.

According to Sen. Bob Martin, D-Pitt, the money was set aside because of adjustments to the revenues expected from taxes collected on shares from the sale of R/R Nabisco. The original amount projected, $130 million, was revised downward to approximately $130 million.

"We work on an abundance of caution in the state assembly," Basnight said.

The Dare County legislator said the expansion to Joyner Library and construction of a conference center is essential to eastern North Carolina. And he said each project was assured of further funding from the state.

"East Carolina represents much more than Pitt County," Basnight said. "I see East Carolina as the center for educational opportunity in eastern North Carolina."

Dr. JoAnn Bell, acting director of academic library services at ECU, also said she was pleased with the appropriations from the state.

"We are in desperate need of an enlarged and expanded facility," Dr. Bell said.

She said Joyner Library presently has inadequate seating for the student body, and after this year would no longer be able to accept new books and library materials.

"Even with the funding, we're going to be in a difficult situation for the next few years until the new facility is built," Dr. Bell said.

She added, "We want to move ahead as rapidly as possible." Efforts this morning to reach Sen. Tom Taft, D-Pitt, and Rep. Ed Warren, D-Pitt, were unsuccessful.

Old Faithful May Lose Its Steam

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JACKSON, Wyo. — Old Faithful is losing steam, according to a Yellowstone National Park geologist who says the geyser may some day shut off.

The interval between eruptions has lengthened by about 14 minutes in recent years, said Rick Hutchinson.

The geologist said in an interview Tuesday with the Jackson Hole News that there was no way to predict when the geyser might stop erupting but that scientists can tell from its cone that Old Faithful has been dormant in the past.

"There could come a day in the far distant future, or not too distant future, when Old Faithful will become less faithful and may become a dormant geyser," agreed Yellowstone spokeswoman Joan Anzelmo.

Hutchinson, who has monitored geysers in the park for years, said that for the first 100 years since Old Faithful's discovery in 1870, the average interval between eruptions was 65 minutes. Last spring, it was 78.9 minutes.

Earthquakes, vandalism and a buildup of natural deposits called geyserite all can slow a geyser down.

After a 1959 earthquake measuring 7.5 on the Richter scale, the interval between Old Faithful eruptions lengthened by more than five minutes. A 1983 quake added seven minutes. A number of moderate earthquakes have struck this year.

Vandalism has turned off the steam at four geysers in the park. People have thrown things into geysers that do not get blown out, blocking the steam, Hutchinson said.

Video Awards

LAS VEGAS (AP) — "E.T. The Extra-Terrestrial" and "Fatal Attraction" took top honors in the favorite-video awards at the annual video convention.

"E.T." on Wednesday was voted video of the year and "Fatal Attraction" was selected most popular drama video. "Three Men and a Baby" was chosen as favorite comedy video, and "The Manchurian Candidate" was singled out for in the classic video category.

Among the other winners at the eighth annual Video Software Dealers Association convention were "Die Hard" (favorite action-adventure video), "They Live" (favorite science fiction video) and "Child's Play" (favorite horror video).

"Cinderella" was named favorite children's video and "My Life as a Dog" took the prize for most popular foreign video.

However, people are prohibited from wandering off the boardwalks at Old Faithful, which keeps them about 100 feet from the spout.

While the number of eruptions may be declining, the volume of water spewing up and the height of the geyser have apparently not changed, Hutchinson said.

The geyser reaches about 130 feet and discharges between 3,700 and 8,400 gallons of 204-degree water each eruption.

minimal increase but we are not sure yet if anybody will get a zero percent increase. Unfortunately, there is no way to unfreeze with an across-the-board increase that is fair to everybody."

Under the old plan, teachers had a nine-step salary plan that kept the teachers' wages frozen until they hit certain points. Because the teachers could not get a raise until they reached these points, a teacher just out of college could be paid as much as someone with several years of experience. The teachers were paid according to the number of years seniority that they had before the freeze was implemented in 1980, Ms. Stewart said.

Espionage

BERN, Switzerland (AP) — Espionage for communist countries accounted for nearly three-fourths of the 91 cases uncovered by Swiss authorities in 1980-88, a government report said Wednesday.

The cases involved 141 spies, including 50 foreign diplomats. One hundred of the spies caught, or 71 percent, were from the East bloc and other communist countries, the report by the Swiss Federal Prosecutor's Office said.

However, it said the number of cases has fallen steadily after peaking at the start of the 1980s, when Warsaw Pact countries resorted to economic espionage to counter a U.S. ban on exports of high technology, imposed after the Soviet intervention of Afghanistan.

'The Shot' Carries Sluman

Defending Champ Remembers How He Won PGA

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HAWTHORN WOODS, Ill. — Jeff Sluman remembers "The Shot" like it happened a day ago.

Actually, it was a year ago and the sand wedge he holed for an eagle-3 on Oak Tree Golf Club's fifth hole inspired him to the PGA Championship.

Sluman opened defense of his title today over the long and testy, 7,197-yard, par-72 Kemper Lakes Course, hoping memories of "The Shot" will keep him going despite an injured right shoulder.

"I think about the shot a lot when I'm having a bad day and it gets me going," said Sluman, whose final-round 65 at Edmond, Okla., was one of the best in PGA history.

Sluman could become the first back-to-back PGA winner since Denny Shute in 1936-37 but a nagging shoulder injury and a recent appendectomy weigh against him doing so.

"If I was a gambling man I wouldn't put money on me," said Sluman, who has missed over a month of this season with health problems.

Sluman was paired with Larry Nelson and Arnold Palmer, who has never won the PGA in his illustrious career.

Masters champion Nick Faldo and Curtis Strange, who became the first to win consecutive U.S. Open titles since Ben Hogan in '51, and Australian Greg Norman, a heart-break loser in the British Open, were among the favorites in the PGA.

Mark Calcavecchia, who birdied the last playoff hole to win the British Open at Troon, withdrew because of the birth of a daughter.

Tom Watson, who finished fourth at Troon, is shooting for his first PGA title, which would enable him to join Hogan, Jack Nicklaus, Gary Player and Gene Sarazen as a winner of each of the game's Big Four tournaments during his career.

The tournament also is the last major before Jack Nicklaus and Lee Trevino become "Senior" category players as their 50th birthdays approach.

Spain's Seve Ballesteros has been in a protracted slump.

Another undercurrent to the tournament is the end of a two-year competition for the United States Ryder Cup team. Calcavecchia, Strange, Chip Beck, Tom Kite, Paul Azinger and Fred Couples have qualified for the team.

Payne Stewart, Ken Green, Mark O'Meara, Mark McCumber, Steve Pate, Joey Sindelar, Bruce Lietzke, Ben Crenshaw, Scott Hoch and Lanny Wadkins are in a struggle for the remaining spots.

Sluman is too far back in points to qualify. Ironically, the 1989 PGA champion does qualify for the Ryder Cup.

Kemper Lakes is only the third public course in PGA history to host the 71-year-old PGA Tournament. The others were Tanglewood Golf Club in North Carolina in 1974 and Pebble Beach in 1977.

It has drawn raves from the pros who are picky about where they play.

"It's tremendously long but it's in as fine a manicured condition as any course I've played all over the world," Ray Floyd said.

"The course is very good, the greens are nice," Faldo said.

"It's perfect," Norman said.

"Superb," Ballesteros said.

"You could play a touch football game on any one of the greens, they are so big," Strange said. "It's in beautiful shape."

Kite, the leading money winner on the PGA Tour, predicted scores will be high.

"It's one of the most difficult we'll ever play," Kite said. "There's no let-up holes as far as length goes. The greens are by far the biggest I've seen on tour."

The field of 150 will play for $2.1 million with a first place prize of $200,000.

Television coverage includes ESPN today and Friday, with ABC covering Saturday and Sunday.

Lawyers Doubt Prediction

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Pete Rose's prediction that he would be irreparably harmed if Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti were to hold a disciplinary hearing against him is not reason enough to block the session, baseball has told a federal judge.

"Rose assumes that the result of the hearing before the Commissioner will be adverse to him, and further speculates that this hypothetical result will substantially change the public's current perception of him," baseball lawyers said in a memo filed Wednesday in U.S. District Court.

"Courts routinely have declined to enjoin hearings where the claimed injury is predicated solely upon a prediction of the outcome of the hearing," the memo said.

Attorney John C. Elam of Columbus, representing Giamatti, asked the court to reject Rose's request for protection from disciplinary action pending an appeal of U.S. District Judge John D. Holschuh's earlier decision that the case belonged in federal, rather than state, court.

Elam said both baseball and Giamatti are suffering "substantial irreparable injury" that will continue if an Aug. 17 hearing by Giamatti into gambling allegations against Rose is blocked.

"If the Commissioner is not allowed to proceed with a hearing and resolve this matter, the cloud over the integrity of baseball will continue to linger," the memo said.

"If the Commissioner is prevented from holding his hearing and also deprived of the opportunity to respond to plaintiff's charge of prejudice, plaintiff's unsubstantiated allegation will damage the Commissioner and the game," it said.

Rose had asked Holschuh on Monday to issue an order preventing Giamatti from conducting the Aug. 17 hearing in New York. Giamatti wants to investigate Rose's admissions, reported in an interview with The Washington Post published July 30, that he has bet on football through illegal bookmakers.

Holschuh has issued an order that protects Rose through Aug. 14 from disciplinary action by Giamatti. Lawyers for Rose, who faces a possible lifetime ban from baseball if he is found to have bet on the Reds, want Holschuh to extend that order for the duration of the court appeal.

Elam said Wednesday that Rose had himself chosen to make public some of the allegations against him, and had publicly admitted certain improper conduct.

"Granting an injunction that prevents the Commissioner from holding his hearing is harmful to the interest of the Commissioner and baseball; granting such relief without allowing the Commissioner to present his side of the story would be even more harmful to the interest of baseball," Elam said.

He said the public interest would be served if Rose's request for an injunction was denied.

"(Requiring) baseball to continue under the cloud of gambling allegations casts doubt on the integrity of the individual contests and of the game generally. The strong public interest in baseball calls out for an expeditious resolution of these allegations," Elam said.

He said federal rules of civil procedure do not provide a basis for the injunction Rose seeks, and said Rose had not demonstrated that he would be irreparably harmed without such an order.

In a separate filing earlier Wednesday, baseball asked the judge to order Rose's legal team to answer questions about interviews and polygraph tests conducted on behalf of the Cincinnati Reds manager.

The motion filed by Giamatti seeks responses from Roger J. Makley, one of Rose's lawyers, to questions that were not answered during a July 3 deposition.

The motion also asks for an early hearing so depositions being requested could be taken in advance of the Aug. 17 hearing.

Elam said in the filing that information Makley may have helped test Rose's claim that he would not receive a fair hearing from Giamatti.

"Despite defendant's efforts informally to resolve this matter without the court's time, Rose's attorneys continue to thwart legitimate discovery by blanketing the basis of the complaint in unfounded claims of privilege, thus leaving defendant Giamatti with no alternative but to file this motion to compel," Elam said.

Female Athletes Make Better Grades

But Have Fewer Dates, NCAA Study Finds; Few Surprises In Report

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MISSION, Kan. — Female college basketball players have fewer dates but better grades than their male counterparts, according to an NCAA-commissioned study.

"It's not something an educator will be surprised about," said Dr. Ursula Walsh, NCAA director of research. "Generally, the words 'docile' and 'teachable' have always been applied more to women than to men."

Walsh said there were few surprises in the 61-page report, the fourth in a series by the American Institutes for Research. But one encouraging finding concerned women's health. Recent disclosures of widespread eating disorders among University of Texas women have worried many educators.

"We've been hearing a lot about eating disorders, but they didn't find any difference in health-related problems except that they were all pretty tired most of the time," Walsh said. "It seemed that tiredness was one of the things that bothered them."

Among other things, the report found that men and women basketball players spent 26 hours per week on their sport in season. But the men spent 16 hours per week on their sport in the offseason compared with 14 hours per week for women. The researchers found that women spend as much time on their sport as men do but manage to study more and get higher grades.

The women averaged a 2.64 grade-point average on a scale of 4, while men averaged a 2.46. Female scholarship athletes for all sports averaged 2.67, while females involved with extracurricular activities of all kinds averaged 2.83.

"There is a small and significant correlation to between the hours you spend on your sport and your ability to keep up with course work at the grades you're capable of," Robert Rossi, who directed the project, said.

The study found that women basketball players averaged 845 on the SAT compared with 841 for men. Women with athletic scholarships in all sports averaged 882, while women with extracurricular activities averaged 973.

Athletics apparently open social doors for men but close them for many women.

"The men said it was easier for them to get to know other people because they were athletes and women said the opposite," Walsh said. "In addition, 22 percent of women basketball players said it's harder or much harder for them to get dates as opposed to 2 percent of men basketball players."

Walsh said the findings are open to interpretation.

"I would imagine it would be because men are not comfortable with them because they're athletes and seen as somehow unfeminine," she said.

Rossi indicated women take away time from their social lives to keep up their grades and pursue sports.

"They study more, they spend more time going to class," he said in a telephone interview from his Palo Alto, Calif., office. "They take it out of relaxing and socializing, perhaps, and my conjecture is they did it in high school. For men, the opportunities for socializing, for being a star on campus, is greater."

The study also found that women basketball players are more academically ambitious, with 32 percent planning to attend graduate school compared with 15 percent of male basketball players.

Big East To Test Use Of Six Fouls

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — The Big East, a conference already known for its aggressive basketball style, added to that lore when the coaches voted to approve an experimental rule to allow players six fouls per game.

Boston College coach Jim O'Brien, said the rule — approved Wednesday along with another to use the 45-second clock to count down 10-second violations — will just make it harder for the underdogs to win.

"It's just another case of the rich getting richer," O'Brien said. "The lesser teams work hard trying to get the other team's big men out of the game and now this just increases the better team's chances."

Conference assistant commissioner Chris Plonsky said the coaches rejected a third experimental proposal, which would have given players three free throws instead of two if they are fouled while shooting a 3-point field goal.

The conference must still get permission from the NCAA to officially adopt the experimental rules, which were approved in May by the NCAA Rules Committee, but that is "usually a formality," according to Plonsky.

Tom Niland, head of the NCAA Rules Committee's research subcommittee, said approval would be automatic for regular-season conference games but special permission would be needed for the Big East's postseason tournament. He said the experimental rules could be used in non-conference games with the opposing coach's permission.

Certain conferences experimented with the 45-second shot clock and 3-point field goal for one or more seasons before those rules were officially adopted by the entire NCAA.

The Big East's final vote on the six-foul rule was not released. Several reports, however, said six schools had planned to vote for the rule change and three would oppose it.

Georgetown coach John Thompson said he voted for the six-foul and 45-second clock rules and against the proposal on three free throws.

Pirates Set For Hawaiian Trip

East Carolina University's 1989-90 basketball team will take a swing to Hawaii and through the west over the holiday season this winter and will entertain Mississippi State in Minges Coliseum, Coach Mike Steele has announced.

The Pirate head coach released the 1989-90 basketball schedule Wednesday afternoon.

The Pirates will face the Yugoslavian Nationals on Nov. 14 in an exhibition and will open the regular season on Nov. 25, hosting former Southern Conference foe Appalachian State.

"We're looking forward to renewing an in-state rivalry with Appalachian State," Steele said. The Mountaineers and Pirates have met 48 times in the past, with ECU holding a 29-19 advantage. It will be their first meeting in 12 years, however.

For the first time ever, the ECU team will travel to Honolulu, Hawaii, to participate in the Chaminade Christmas Classic, Dec. 22-24. Others in the field include the host team, Coppin State, Cornell, East Tennessee State, George Mason, Maryland; 27 at New Mexico; 30 at Texas Christian.

During that same trip, the Pirates will visit New Mexico on Dec. 27 and Texas Christian on Dec. 30.

Mississippi State will visit Minges Coliseum on Dec. 19.

"Getting top opponents into Minges Coliseum is something we have been working on," Steele said. "The preseason schedule is a great challenge to our team. I think it should prepare us for our conference schedule."

ECU will open the CAA slate on Jan. 6 in Minges, hosting Navy.

Other home dates include N.C. Wesleyan, Francis Marion and Campbell. ECU will also make non-conference stops at UNC-Greensboro, Liberty, Radford, Campbell and Duke.

This year's CAA tournament will be held March 3-5 at the Richmond Coliseum.

The complete schedule:

Nov. 14 Yugoslavian Nationals (exhibition); 25 Appalachian State; 27 N.C. Wesleyan; 29 at UNC-Greensboro.

Dec. 4 Francis Marion; 7 at Liberty; 10 at Radford; 14 Campbell; 19 Mississippi State; 22-24 at Chaminade Christmas Classic (Chaminade, Coppin State, Cornell, ECU, East Tennessee State, George Mason, Maryland); 27 at New Mexico; 30 at Texas Christian.

Jan. 6 Navy; 8 George Mason; 13 at American; 15 at James Madison; 20 William & Mary; 24 at Duke; 17 at UNC-Wilmington; 29 Maryland-Baltimore County.

Feb. 3 at Navy; 5 at George Mason; 8 at Campbell; 10 American; 12 James Madison; 14 at Duke; 17 at William & Mary; 21 Richmond; 24 at UNC-Wilmington.

March 3-5, CAA Tournament at Richmond.

Charlotte Zeroes In On Stadium Site

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Officials who want to lure a National Football League team to Charlotte have zeroed in on a site for a stadium that could cost upward of $100 million.

Charlotte Uptown Development Corp. officials are talking to owners of property south of Duke Power Co. and The Charlotte Observer building about the possibility of a 65,000-seat stadium.

In June, a five-member CUDC committee identified four possible stadium sites.

Committee chairman John Boatwright said the site being considered has parking nearby and access to nearby Interstate 277 and I-77. "It also does not have a lot of structures on the properties that would have to be removed," he said.

The CUDC is a nonprofit corporation the city created to spur uptown development.

Other potential sites are in Cabarrus and Gaston counties and York County, S.C.

The NFL could decide by the end of this year whether it will add two or more expansion teams in the early 1990s, though the decision may not come until next spring. NFL owners will meet in Cleveland in October and could name an expansion committee then.

The Charlotte area is considered a contender for an expansion franchise, along with Memphis, Baltimore, St. Louis, Oakland, Calif., and Jacksonville, Fla.

Businessman Jerry Richardson and his son, Mark, and Charlotte Hornets owner George Shinn head groups that would like to have the franchise. The Richardson group has proposed building the stadium with its own money, a path only two other NFL teams, the Miami Dolphins and the New England Patriots, have followed.

Shinn has already broken ground on an expandable and multipurpose stadium for the baseball Charlotte Knights in York County. He hopes to get a major-league baseball team and/or an NFL team as tenants for that stadium.

Lett Gets Good Reviews In Hornets' Camp

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Clifford Lett's work in the NBA Charlotte Hornets' training camp has received some positive reviews.

Team General Manager Carl Scheer says that of the nine free agents still left with the Hornets, Lett has the best chance of being reinvented to the Hornets' camp in the fall.

"We were very pleasantly surprised," said Scheer. "And (Florida coach) Norm Sloan raves about what a quality kid he is."

Lett, out of Florida, is a 6-foot-2 guard who can swing between the point and shooting positions. Scheer said he caught the coaches' eyes during summer-league games in Orlando, Fla., Miami and Los Angeles.

If the Hornets can sign Lett to an unguaranteed contract, he could serve as the third point guard the Hornets want to bring in to challenge Muggsy Bogues and Michael Holton in camp. Holton, an unrestricted free agent, is expected to sign with the Hornets later this month.

The Hornets originally expected to retain Sidney Lowe as a challenger at point guard, but the Minnesota Timberwolves signed Lowe to an offer sheet, and the Hornets did not match that offer.

Scheer also said Rex Chapman will be tried some at the point position in the fall. Chapman was originally scheduled to play on the Hornets' summer-league team in Los Angeles, but a scheduling conflict and a canceled flight made it impossible for Chapman to make more than two games. Scheer said the coaches decided two games wouldn't be worthwhile for Chapman.

Two other free agents who played for the Hornets in Los Angeles — 6-5 forward Walker Russell and 6-6 forward Gene Banks — might be possibilities for the Hornets' fall camp. Russell didn't shoot particularly well, going 37 from the field to average 7.4 points per game, but he led the summer Hornets in assists with 49. Hornets officials want Russell to lose 18 to 20 pounds before the fall.

Banks, from Duke, did not play particularly well in Florida, but he came on in Los Angeles to lead the summer Hornets in scoring at 13.6 points per game. Scheer wants to speak further with player personnel director Gene Liddle before deciding whether to invite Banks for this fall.

Among the incumbent Hornets who participated in the camp, center Dave Hoppen played particularly well. Scheer and coach Dick Harter said.

"What pleased me," said Harter, "is that he's obviously getting stronger."

Hoppen averaged 12.8 points and 5.3 rebounds in Los Angeles.

Navratilova Notches Second-Round Win

MANHATTAN BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Top-seeded Martina Navratilova beat Isabelle Demongeot of France 6-3, 6-2 in the second round of the Virginia Slims of Los Angeles tournament.

Other seeded winners were No. 4 Pam Shriver; No. 6 Helen Kelesi; No. 7 Hana Mandlikova; No. 12 Nathalie Tauziat; No. 14 Terry Phelps; and No. 15 Gretchen Magers.

Top-Seeded Chang Upset By Stoltenberg

LIVINGSTON, N.J. (AP) — French Open champion and top-seeded Michael Chang lost to Jason Stoltenberg 6-3, 7-6 (7-4) in the second round of the Swiss Army Knife Open. Other second round winners were Chris Bailey of Britain; and Americans Jim Grabb and Jim Courier.

Celtics' Shaw To Play In Italy

BOSTON (AP) — Brian Shaw, the Boston Celtics first-round draft choice last year who won a starting role towards the end of his rookie season, signed with the Italian basketball team Messaggero Roma and will play there this fall, one of his lawyer-agents said.

In a telephone interview from California, agent Michael Burnstein said Shaw signed a two-year deal and will leave for Rome Sunday night. The Italian team begins their season next month. Messaggero earlier signed Los Angeles Clippers' first round draft choice, Danny Ferry.

ND's Brooks Will Not Be Allowed To Enroll

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz announced junior tailback Tony Brooks would not be allowed to enroll for the first semester. Brooks was the leading rusher for the National Champion Irish with 667 yards.

Brooks left school in mid-semester last spring after he was charged in a hit-and-run accident that damaged another car. The university cited only personal reasons for the decision to leave. He returned for summer school and did well, said Holtz. But the administration, for reasons unexplained, refuses to allow him to enroll this fall, he said.

Notre Dame is already without All-America linebacker Michael Simebreaker, ruled ineligible for driving on campus with a suspended license; fullback Braxton Banks, out with a knee injury; and defense tackle George Williams, academically ineligible.

Team USA Wins, In Wilson This Weekend

DURHAM (AP) — Jeremy Burnitz went 5-for-5, including a pair of two-run home runs, to lead the touring Team USA to an 8-0 victory over the Korean National Team on Wednesday night at Durham Athletic Park.

Burnitz, a right fielder from Oklahoma State, singled in his first three hits at the plate. His home runs, which came off reliever Kyung-Huan Kim, included a drive to center field in the sixth inning and a blast to right-center field in the eighth inning.

Third baseman Bobby Magallanes, the younger brother of former Kinston Indians shortstop Ever Magallanes, snapped the scoreless tie when he hit a home run off starter Min-Tae Chung in the sixth inning. Three pitches later, catcher Dan Wilson added another home run.

Team USA, which consists of 19 of the top current college players in the country, will be in Wilson's Fleming Stadium this weekend along with South Korea, Canada and the North Carolina Collegiate All-Stars.

Canada and South Korea are scheduled to meet at 2 Friday afternoon with Team USA and the North Carolina Collegiate All-Stars slated to play at 7.

Team USA will play either Canada or South Korea, depending on which one has the best record in this summer's round-robin competition, at 7 Friday night.

Cavs Must Cool Kirby Down

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — Now that Virginia's Cavaliers have Terry Kirby in their fold, their next trick is to convince the highly regarded tailback that they don't expect him to win the Heisman Trophy four times.

"I think he'll learn that he doesn't have to be a miracle man, that he'll be surrounded by good people and he'll have a lot of help," Coach George Welsh said Wednesday.

In passing over traditional football powerhouses Alabama, Clemson, Georgia and Notre Dame, Kirby knew he would be subjecting himself to intense fan and media scrutiny by staying at home.

"Expectations are probably the toughest thing right now, but that comes with the territory, and I expected it would happen," Kirby told a large gathering of reporters at the Cavaliers' media day.

Marcus Wilson, Virginia's incumbent starter at tailback, said Kirby's acclaim likely will make the Tabb High School product a marked man for opponents wanting to give him their best shots.

But Kirby said that's a lesson he's already learned. He found out last month at a Virginia prep all-star game in Lynchburg how popular a target he could be.

"People were trying to kill me," he said, "and I was just up there for a good time."

Such is the treatment accorded to a player with the credentials of the speedy, 6-foot-3, 212-pound Kirby.

As a senior last fall at Tabb, Kirby rushed for 2,168 yards and 30 touchdowns. He was named Parade magazine's national prep player of the year, and USA Today labeled him the top offensive player in the country.

His prep career totals were 7,428 yards and 103 touchdowns, and Kirby once ran for 209 yards — in one quarter.

In addition, Kirby averaged 28 points this past season as a basketball guard and was named the state's Group AA player of the year.

When he trimmed his list of potential colleges, all five finalists were schools that agreed to let him play both football and basketball.

His arrival on the Virginia campus has not been that of a normal freshman. In addition to the attention from media, Kirby also got a special welcome from the Cavalier veterans, who jokingly bowed at his feet during a team meal Tuesday night.

Kirby, who already has been asked to do a weekly radio show for a station near his hometown, has been living with the attention for years. He had not yet reached high school before college recruiters began contacting him.

"My first phone call was from Lefty Driesell," Kirby said of the former Maryland basketball coach.

"I was in eighth grade," Kirby added. "I thought it was a joke at first. You know, I'm in eighth grade and I don't know what he's calling me for."

Welsh is attempting to make Kirby's first few weeks at Virginia as smooth as possible. The coach shot down the idea of a radio show, and as is his policy with all freshmen, Welsh plans to severely limit Kirby's contact with the media until at least the middle of the season.

If Kirby is bothered by the restrictions, he's not letting on.

"I didn't ask any questions," he said. "I don't want to know. I just do what he says."

"All the publicity, I don't want any of that. I can handle it, and I guess I got used to it. But I do get tired of it."

Kirby, who was a B student in high school and plans to study math at Virginia, said it's important for him to get acclimated to college academics as soon as possible, especially since he also plans to play basketball this fall.

Kirby also wants to get down to the business of preparing for the football team's Aug. 31 opener against national champion Notre Dame in the Kickoff Classic. Virginia will go into that contest with 18 of 22 starters back from last year's 7-4 team.

Because the Cavaliers open with Notre Dame and Penn State on consecutive weeks, Kirby feels the pressure to contribute immediately. Some of that pressure, he added, is self-initiated.

"The stuff I've done in high school is over with. This is a new step," he said. "That was high school. This is college. These are men here."

Janszen Feels He's Helped Rose

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Paul G. Janszen sees things differently from Pete Rose.

"I don't know if he'll ever understand it, but in a weird way, I feel I'm helping him," Janszen said Wednesday. "If I have one regret, that regret is that I was not man enough to walk up to Pete Rose ... to say to him: 'That's it. No more.'"

Janszen, his voice cracking at times and tears welling in his eyes during a news conference, said he had given federal investigators testimony directly linking the Cincinnati Reds manager to a conspiracy to evade income taxes.

For the first time, Janszen acknowledged providing FBI and Internal Revenue Service agents with information that could subject Rose to an indictment for allegedly conspiring to defraud the U.S. government.

Meanwhile, in Columbus, Ohio, legal maneuvering continued as baseball's lawyers asked a federal judge to compel Rose lawyer Roger J. Makley to answer questions regarding Rose's legal defense.

Janszen, who claims to have run Rose's bets to bookmakers, said:

- He saw documents indicating Rose bet on baseball throughout the 1988 season.
- He didn't prompt baseball's investigation, saying he was contacted by the commissioner's office after someone else gave information.
- That Rose never, to Janszen's knowledge, became involved in cocaine deals, despite allegedly asking how much he could make on such transactions.
- That Reds pitcher John Franco knew about Rose's debts with a Staten Island bookmaker nicknamed "Val."
- Other Reds players, who he would not identify, knew of Rose's alleged gambling before charges became public, and said he had spoken with Cincinnati coach Tommy Helms about Rose's alleged gambling.
- Rose lawyer Rueven J. Katz knew of the alleged gambling problems as early as March 1988.

Janszen served four months in a halfway house after pleading guilty to falsifying his 1985 federal income-tax return and failing to report income from the sale of steroids.

He said that each time he brought up the dangers of gambling on baseball to Rose, the Reds manager said: "They're not going to get me. They can't get me. I have good attorneys."

Rose has said that when he learned Janszen was involved in drug dealing, he stopped associating with him. Janszen denied that, saying: "Pete Rose knew that from the beginning."

Janszen, who met Rose at Gold's Gym in suburban Cincinnati, said Rose owned three quarters of a winning $47,646 Pick-Six ticket at Turfway Park in Florence, Ky., on Jan. 16, 1987. The ticket was cashed by Thomas P. Gioiosa, another former Rose associate.

Janszen claimed Rose told Gioiosa: "You need to cash this. You need to show some income. Something like that. 'You go cash this.' I remember Pete saying this: 'I've paid enough taxes.'"

Gioiosa was indicted on April 6 for falsely claiming the income from the ticket, but the indictment did not specify with whom he conspired. Janszen said he has not yet testified before the grand jury, which is said to be investigating Rose's tax returns.

Janszen, who began cooperating with the government in March 1988 and with baseball last February, claimed Rose's alleged gambling was well known in the Reds clubhouse.

"There's a lot of players who probably knew, and I knew of some that had direct knowledge of what was going on," he said. "It's kind of difficult for them to step forward, don't you think, to take Paul Janszen's side against the Reds?"

He also alleged that when Rose fell behind in his payments to "Val," a New York bookmaker identified in reports as Richard Troy, Franco conveyed a message to Janszen.

"What's going on with your buddy?" Janszen quoted Franco as saying. "He's kind of putting people in the middle. What's going on?"

Franco has denied knowing "Val" or having any involvement with gamblers.

Janszen also recounted the different codes Rose allegedly used on the telephone to place bets.

"He said 'Nolan Ryan,' which meant he wanted the Astros. Or he said, 'Bret Saberhagen's going to be tough tonight,' which meant he wanted Kansas City," Janszen said.

Big East...

"The game has become more of a whole-court game," he said. "More action within a 40-minute period enables a player to pick up more fouls rapidly. To offset this, we should go to six fouls."

Providence coach Rick Barnes voted for all three proposals and predicted the six-foul rule would help his team.

"We're aggressive. We play 94 feet. With our style of play, I obviously like that," Barnes said. "It can make the game more aggressive."

Barnes said he thought players who were fouled in the act of shooting a 3-pointer deserved three free throws, but said, "I just don't think many people foul out there. I think most coaches teach their players not to foul people taking jumpshots."

The Trans America Athletic Conference has also approved the six-foul and three free throw rules, and the Big Eight has approved the 45-second clock rule, Niland said.

Brad Davis, a spokesman for the Southeastern Conference, said the SEC plans to use the six-foul and three free throw rules but has not formally asked permission to do so.

The rules would not be used in the NCAA Tournament and some coaches had reportedly objected to the six-foul rule because they would have to prepare their teams one way during the season and another way for the tournament.

Survey Finds Alabama Fans Outnumber Those Of Auburn

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Alabamians yelling "Roll Tide" apparently outnumber those shouting "War Eagle," but a lot of them can't identify the Crimson Tide football coach, a survey found.

The survey, released Wednesday by Southern Opinion Research, showed far more people could correctly identify Auburn football coach Pat Dye than Alabama coach Bill Curry.

And even though Alabama had more fans overall, Auburn has a slight edge among affluent Alabamians.

About 37 percent of the Alabama residents surveyed said they root for the University of Alabama in college sports. About 21 percent are War Eagle fans, while 9 percent pull for both schools equally, 8 percent prefer another school, 23 percent are simply not interested in college sports, and 1 percent don't know.

Pat Cotter, one of the directors of the research firm, said he was not surprised by the results because of a survey that he and fellow director Jim Stovall did three years ago, in which they asked Alabama citizens who they wanted to win the Auburn-Alabama football game.

"More wanted Alabama than Auburn to win," he said. "This reflects again that there are more people rooting for Alabama than Auburn."

In the survey, people were asked to name the football coaches at Auburn and Alabama. Cotter said 65 percent could identify Dye, while only 43 percent could name Curry.

Cotter said that may be due, in part, to Dye having a longer tenure in the state than Curry. Also, he said, "It could be he has been better at getting in the headlines."

The survey did not ask if people attended either school, but it did divide them by income. Among those with families earning $40,000 or less annually, Alabama has twice as many fans as Auburn. But among those with families earning more than $40,000, Auburn jumped up to 33 percent, compared to 31 percent for Alabama.

It's enough to scare fund-raisers for Alabama, Cotter said, because "this suggests Auburn is in a better position."

Among people 40 and younger, Alabama had a strong lead over Auburn — 43 percent to 19 percent. But among those 61 and older, the support is very close — 31 percent for Alabama and 28 percent for Auburn.

The self-funded survey was conducted July 9-18 and involved interviews with 415 randomly selected adults.

Southern Opinion Research is based in Tuscaloosa, and Cotter and Stovall teach at Alabama. But Stovall said "Tuscaloosa" was never mentioned in the survey, and the people being interviewed "were not told where the calls originated."

Kinnebrew First Showed Bills Back In 1985 Game

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FREDONIA, N.Y. — On a rainy November Sunday in 1985, Larry Kinnebrew took his first steps toward making the Buffalo Bills this season.

Playing for the Cincinnati Bengals, Kinnebrew rumbled over and through would-be Buffalo tacklers to lead the Bengals to a 23-17 victory over the Bills. Remembered Kinnebrew, "We had come out in the first half trying to throw and we couldn't throw. We were getting pretty nice yardage on the ground and so the coaches decided we're going to run the ball."

More precisely, they decided Kinnebrew was going to run the ball. He carried the ball 30 times — often dragging Bills with him — for 128 yards and a touchdown.

"Once I get on a roll, that's typical of the way I run," Kinnebrew said. "Once I get in that groove, it's hard to stop me."

The Bills took notice of that and other similar performances by Kinnebrew and signed the free agent this year in an attempt to bolster their power running game.

Despite a year's layoff from football, Kinnebrew has proved the Bills' instincts correct with a number of head-knocking runs during training camp.

"We've been pleased with what Larry's done," Coach Marv Levy said. "He's worked real hard to condition himself."

Kinnebrew's physical condition was one of the reasons the Bengals didn't rush to re-sign him after his contract expired before last season, despite the fact he led Cincinnati in rushing in 1987 with 145 carries for 570 yards and eight touchdowns.

For his five-year career, Kinnebrew averaged 4.1 yards per carry, gathering 2,587 yards and 36 touchdowns.

But the thick, 6-foot-1 frame that allowed him to power over defenders had ballooned from about 250 pounds to the 270-pound range.

The Bengals, concerned about his effectiveness at the heavier weight, balked at negotiating a new contract. Stanley Wilson, and later rookie Ickey Woods, then took over the bulk of Cincinnati's running and did the job well enough to get the Bengals into the Super Bowl.

Kinnebrew is bitter about his treatment in Cincinnati, but said he's saving that story for a book he's writing with his wife, Vada.

"It's about Kinnebrew coming out of the backfield in Cincinnati," he said. "It's based on a lot of things."

The weight problem, he said, is behind him. After signing with Buffalo just before the AFC Championship game last season, Rusty Jones, the Bills strength and condition coach, put Kinnebrew on a diet that has helped him get his weight back down to about 250 pounds.

"I started eating three meals a day and I wasn't losing any weight, but my (percentage of) body fat was going down," he said. "My body fat kept dropping and I saw myself getting a little quicker."

His natural quickness for a man his size is what originally made Kinnebrew's high school coach switch him from the offensive line to the backfield.

Mitchell's Boomers Lift Giants

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kevin Mitchell, a sleeping Giant since the All-Star game, is showing signs of waking up.

Mitchell, with only three homers in a month, broke loose with a pair of two-run homers and drove in his 100th run earlier than any player in this decade as the San Francisco Giants routed the Cincinnati Reds 10-1 Wednesday.

Mitchell, who leads the majors with 36 home runs and 100 RBI, has knocked in six runs in the last two games.

"I wasn't hitting the ball hard," Mitchell said of his recent power slump. "It didn't seem like I was doing anything. I just wanted to go out and do better."

It was Mitchell's fifth two-homer game of the season and gave him 100 RBI quicker than any major leaguer since California's Don Baylor reached that plateau on Aug. 8, 1979. Baylor finished with 139 RBI that year.

"When I came back from our last road trip, I took home some film to see what I was doing wrong," Mitchell said. "I was getting jammed a lot and I wasn't hitting the ball hard."

Both of his homers Wednesday came on inside pitches.

Don Robinson, 11-7, also homered for the Giants and pitched a five-hitter for his third straight complete game and fourth of the season. No other San Francisco pitcher has more than one complete game this season.

Matt Williams hit the fourth homer of the game for the Giants, who snapped a three-game losing streak and moved two games ahead of Houston atop the NL West.

Mitchell homered off Rick Mahler, 9-11, in a four-run first inning that also included run-scoring singles by Will Clark and Terry Kennedy.

Mitchell's second homer, on a broken bat, was against Norm Charlton in a three-run sixth and was followed by Williams' fifth of the season.

season by 36 percent with his first four-hit game since Sept. 23, 1987.

Carter, who had 11 hits this season going into the game, doubled twice and singled twice to raise his average from .116 to .152. Darryl Strawberry homered for the second consecutive game, a two-run drive that capped a five-run fifth.

Ojeda, 8-9, won his third consecutive decision and New York won for the fifth time in six games, but remained five games behind the Cubs.

Cardinals 5, Pirates 2

St. Louis stayed five games behind Chicago as Joe Magrane held Pittsburgh to six hits and hit his third career homer.

Magrane, 14-7, joined Mike Scott, Orel Hershiser and Ed Whitson as the only NL pitchers with at least 14 victories by handing Pittsburgh its 10th loss in 13 games.

With the score tied 1-1, Jose Oquendo walked to start the second inning against Doug Drabek, 9-9, and moved to third on a single by Tom Brunansky, who had three hits for the Cardinals. After Tony Pena grounded into a double play, scoring Oquendo, Magrane hit Drabek's first pitch into the left field seats for his first homer of the season and a 3-1 Cardinals lead.

Braves 6, Dodgers 3

Dale Murphy drove in five runs with a pair of homers and Pete Smith recorded his first victory since June 17 as Atlanta beat Los Angeles.

strained quadricep muscle, opened the Oakland ninth with a pinch-hit double. Ron Hassey singled home pinch runner Stan Javier to tie it.

With one out in the 11th, singles by Scott Fletcher and Ivan Calderon put runners at second and third. On a 3-0 count, Fisk singled off Jim Corsi, 0-2. Tom McCarthy, 1-1, got the victory.

Mark McGwire hit his 20th home run, his first since July 16.

Twins 7, Orioles 0

Allan Anderson remained unbeaten in six career decisions against Baltimore, leading Minnesota at Memorial Stadium.

Anderson, 13-9, beat the Orioles for the third time this season and won his fourth decision overall. He scattered five singles in his first shutout since last Sept. 27.

The Twins finished 8-4 against Baltimore, the best record by any team against the AL East leaders. Minnesota won two of three this week at Memorial Stadium, the Orioles' first loss at home in the last eight series.

Kent Hrbek hit a three-run double in the first inning against Mark Thurmond, 2-4. Brian Harper homered and doubled for the Twins.

Rangers 4, Blue Jays 3

Harold Baines and Fred Manrique, each obtained in a recent trade with the White Sox, made contributions as Texas ended a four-game losing streak with a victory at Toronto.

Baines hit his 15th home run of the season and his second for the Rangers. Manrique had a pair of RBI singles.

Charlie Hough, 7-11, allowed three runs on five hits in six-plus innings. Jeff Russell worked the ninth for his 24th save.

Dave Stieb, making his first start since coming within one out of a perfect game against New York, fell to 11-7. He gave up four runs on

Red Sox 6, Royals 2

Mike Boddicker won his fifth straight decision at Royals Stadium as Boston averted its first three-game sweep at Kansas City in five years.

Danny Heep hit a two-run homer and Nick Esasky got three hits for the Red Sox. George Brett and Kurt Stillwell homered for Kansas City.

Boddicker, 10-8, won for the sixth time in seven decisions. He is 5-1 lifetime at Kansas City and has not lost at Royals Stadium since 1983. Luis Aquino, 6-6, took the loss.

Indians 7, Yankees 4

Brook Jacoby's two-run double put Cleveland ahead in the fifth inning and Joe Carter followed with his 22nd home run at Yankee Stadium.

The Indians moved to within 2½ games of Baltimore in the AL East, the closest they have been to first place this late in a non-strike season since Aug. 28, 1959. New York's 53-61 record is its worst at this point since 1967.

Rod Nichols, 3-1, won his third consecutive start. Steve Olin pitched two-hit relief for 3 1-3 innings and got his first major-league save.

Andy Hawkins, 13-11, gave up six runs and eight hits in 4 1-3 innings.

Brewers 6, Tigers 1

Mike Felder's first home run since 1987 broke an eighth-inning tie and Milwaukee won at Detroit.

Felder's homer off Jack Morris put the Brewers ahead 2-1 and they scored four times in the ninth. Morris, 2-9, is winless in six starts since May 12.

Dale Murphy

Murphy hit a three-run homer off John Wetteland, 3-4, in the first inning, the 34th of his career against Los Angeles, but his first in 45 at-bats against the Dodgers this season.

The second homer came off reliever Tim Crews in the eighth and gave the Braves a 6-2 lead.

Smith, 3-11, allowed two runs and five hits in five-plus innings, ending a drought in which he was winless in seven consecutive starts.

Jeff Hamilton hit two solo homers for the Dodgers.

American League

Angels 4, Mariners 1

The California Angels see a change in Kirk McCaskill and he saw it, too. So for now, they lead the see-saw American League West.

McCaskill pitched seven strong innings Wednesday night as the Angels beat the Seattle Mariners 4-1 for a one-game edge over Oakland.

McCaskill, slowed by injuries, won a total of two games after July in the 1987 and 1988 seasons. But he has already won twice this month, both against the Mariners.

"I'd gotten so frustrated by the whole process. It's pretty obvious when my arm feels good, and when it doesn't," McCaskill said. "I'm feeling pretty good now."

The Angels moved ahead of Oakland, which lost to Chicago 3-2 in 11 innings. The Athletics begin a three-game series at Anaheim on Friday night.

In other games, Minnesota trounced Baltimore 7-0, Texas got past Toronto 4-3, Cleveland beat New York 7-4, Boston defeated Kansas City 6-2 and Milwaukee downed Detroit 6-1.

McCaskill, 12-6, gave up six hits at home. Bob McClure pitched two scoreless innings and Bryan Harvey struck out the side in the ninth for his 16th save.

The Mariners have scored just two runs in 23 innings against McCaskill. He is 3-0 versus Seattle this season, but just 4-4 in his career.

"He is tough on us. He keeps us off balance and locates his pitches well," Seattle manager Jim Lefebvre said.

The Angels scored two runs with two outs in both the fifth and sixth innings against Brian Holman, 4-5.

Tony Armas hit a two-run double in the fifth. He is 11-for-24 with five doubles, a triple and two home runs against Seattle this season.

Devon White hit a two-run triple in the sixth. He leads the majors with 11 triples.

White Sox 3, Athletics 2

Carlton Fisk singled home the winning run in the bottom of the 11th inning and Chicago beat Oakland for its 14th victory in its last 16 home games.

The Athletics lost for the fourth time in seven games.

Jose Canseco, who did not start for the second straight day because of a

Will Clark

"What can you say about Mitch? He's back in the groove again," Clark said. "He's having an unbelievable season up to this point. On that last homer, he was jammed and broke his bat and he still hit it out. It just goes to show you how strong that man is."

Clark's run-scoring triple in the second inning made it 5-0 and gave him 83 RBI, second in the majors behind Mitchell.

The only Reds run came on a homer by Eric Davis in the fourth inning. It was his 23rd of the season and fourth in his last six games.

Cubs 3, Expos 0

Chicago completed a three-game sweep and handed Montreal its seventh consecutive loss. Rick Sutcliffe pitched a one-hitter for seven innings and Ryne Sandberg hit his third homer in three games.

The sweep gave the Cubs a three-game lead over the second-place Expos in the NL East.

Sutcliffe, 12-9, retired 10 straight batters after giving up an infield single to Andres Galarraga in the fourth. He was replaced by Mitch Williams after giving up a leadoff walk to Spike Owen in the eighth, and Williams went on to earn his 29th save, tying him for the major-league lead.

Sandberg's two-run homer in the third, his 19th of the season, came off loser Bryn Smith, 9-6, and made the score 3-0.

Padres 2, Astros 1

San Diego beat Houston with its first ninth-inning rally of the season, capped by Benito Santiago's sacrifice fly.

Mark Portugal shut out the Padres on six hits for eight innings before he was relieved at the start of the ninth by Juan Agosto, who gave up a leadoff single to Tony Gwynn.

Dave Smith, 1-3, who had blown only two of 24 previous save opportunities, then walked Jack Clark before Chris James sacrificed.

Mets 6, Phillies 0

New York shut out Philadelphia for the second straight day on Bob Ojeda's seven-hitter, while Gary Carter increased his hit total for the

Gozzo's Dream Is Coming True

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

There he was — Mauro "Goose" Gozzo — on the mound in the new Skydome. About 50,000 fans were in the stands. And Gozzo was pitching against the Texas Rangers.

Was it a dream, a fantasy? Only a couple of months ago, Gozzo was pitching in Class AA ball, and now, here he was, starting in a lineup of big league hitters.

"It's been like a dream," Gozzo said after throwing a three-hitter over eight innings in his major-league debut Tuesday night and leading Toronto over Texas 7-0.

"I don't think it's hit me yet," Gozzo said. "I was hoping for a September callup, but this is more than I could ever hope for."

Gozzo is a natural fan favorite. "The nickname helps. I never really know when they're booing me or calling out my name. I guess it's always helped the fans get on my side, wherever I've pitched."

Gozzo started the season in Knoxville (AA), going 7-0 before making the move to Syracuse (AAA), where he was 5-1.

Jimmy Key's shoulder problems made Gozzo's move to the big leagues come a bit ahead of schedule, but the 23-year-old is no stranger to adjustments.

"You're constantly making adjustments," he said. "The hitters improve from league to league and you always have to stay one step ahead of them if you're going to have success at any level."

"But more important, I've always tried to have fun wherever I pitch. I'm not the kind of person who lets everything get to him. The bottom line is, it's just a game and if you can't have fun playing it, you shouldn't be out there."

Baseball Notes

Rangers catcher Jim Sundberg has a different theory on why Gozzo was as successful as he was in his major-league debut.

"Any guy who comes in on his first night and has decent stuff, and he did have decent stuff. He generally has the advantage," Sundberg said.

Gozzo clearly knows about not cowering too loudly, at least not so that he upsets any team he might meet again.

As the praise was being heaped upon him, Gozzo said, "We'll see what happens next time they face me."

Tigers Put On Ritz

Detroit pitching coach Billy Muffett knew right away he was going to like right-hander Kevin Ritz.

Ritz had the basic tools: strong arm, live fastball, stuff like that. But it was Ritz's quiet demeanor that first caught Muffett's attention.

"Give me those big, quiet guys, the ones that do their talking between the lines."

Ritz has done that. Since being called up July 13 from the Tigers' Class AAA farm club at Toledo, the 24-year-old Ritz has compiled a 3-1 record with a 3.89 earned run average.

His win over the Milwaukee Brewers in the first game of a doubleheader Monday night was his third in a row — the Tigers' longest pitching streak during a dismal season.

The last Tiger pitcher to win three successive starts was Jack Morris who won his final three starts in 1988.

"He's a big strong kid that we have to watch," Manager Sparky Anderson said. "If he keeps his head on his shoulders, and he seems to, he's going to be quite a pitcher."

have to watch," Manager Sparky Anderson said. "If he keeps his head on his shoulders, and he seems to, he's going to be quite a pitcher."

The obvious temptation is to compare Ritz with a young Morris. When Morris came up for the first time, in 1977, he went 1-1 with a 3.74 ERA in seven games.

The Tigers were unimpressed. The following year, 1978, Morris started only seven of the 28 games in which he appeared. He went 3-5 with a 4.33 ERA and started 1979 back in the minors.

"I really don't want to compare Kevin with anyone," said Muffett, who had Morris in the minor leagues. "It's not fair to the young man, no matter who you compare him with, because people automatically expect him to perform as well as the guy you're comparing him with."

The Tigers felt they had something special in Ritz when then made him the fourth selection in the secondary phase of the June 1985 draft. The club brought him along slowly, letting him learn his craft.

There was a reason for that. Ritz had control problems all the way through the minors. He walked 71 batters in 1987 at Glens Falls and 70 there last year.

Muffett has worked hard to help Ritz correct that and other problems, but it remains a concern. In 34 2-3 innings with the Tigers, he has walked 20 and allowed 31 hits. On the plus side, he has struck out 24.

Simms' Price Goes Up; Mandarich's Is Down

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Quarterback Phil Simms, who led the New York Giants to a Super Bowl championship three years ago, has raised his contract demands to the neighborhood of $1.4 million a year.

Offensive lineman Tony Mandarich, who has never played a down of professional football, has lowered his demands to the same high-rent district.

The 315-pound tackle, the No. 1 draft choice of the Green Bay Packers and No. 2 overall, told the Milwaukee Journal he no longer insists on getting as much as quarterback Troy Aikman, the top pick, who signed an $11.037 million, six-year deal with the Dallas Cowboys.

"He should make more than me because he was one pick better, but it shouldn't be $5 million more," Mandarich said. "That's what blows my mind. If Green Bay would come in and give me, instead of about $2 million a year, $1.4 million or $1.5 million a year, we'd be a lot closer to signing."

"I definitely want to play football this year," Mandarich added. "It's difficult sitting at home watching the preseason games already."

Mandarich's agent, Vern Sharbaugh, said Tom Braatz, the Packers' vice president for football operations, has refused to move from his original offer of $4.1 million over five years. The NFL's top-paid offensive lineman, perennial All-Pro Anthony Munoz of Cincinnati, will make $600,000 this season.

"It's obviously no benefit for myself or Green Bay to sit out the whole season," Mandarich said. "From what I understand, Tom Braatz has said in the paper that if I don't sign with Green Bay for what they're offering, that he will make me sit the season."

"If he makes me sit the season, I'll sit the season. I'm stubborn just like he is. But it's the last thing I want to happen."

Two more signings Wednesday — defensive end Wayne Martin by New Orleans and safety Louis Oliver by Miami — left 19 of the 28 first-rounders unsigned, along with two of the three players picked in the first round of the supplemental draft.

"These kids want to play football," Sharbaugh said. "They want to play football and they're coming across as greedy, money-hungry kids. All they're trying to get is a fair deal compared to what NFL salary structure have been in the past."

Simms is holding out for an increase in this year's $800,000 salary to a reported $1.4 million, plus a two-year contract extension. The Giants reportedly have offered $1.2 million for 1989, the last year on Simms' current contract. Linebacker Lawrence Taylor is the highest-paid Giant at $1.1 million.

"Someone ought to remember that he (Simms) is under contract. He has a signed contract," General Manager George Young said.

Coach Bill Parcells said Simms needs more time than some quarterbacks to get ready for the season, which is a month away.

"How could you not be concerned? You've got your starting quarterback out of camp," Parcells said. "He's not one of those guys who can come in here and play in four days. If he tells you that, he's full of it. He knows it and I know it. His agent might not know it."

Oliver ended a three-week holdout when he signed a four-year contract with the Dolphins for an estimated $2.05 million. The 25th player selected in the April draft, Oliver reported to training camp in time to join the afternoon workout.

"I've just been going crazy wanting to be in camp," Oliver said. "I haven't been able to sleep, tossing and turning. It's really been a mental strain."

Martin, an All-American from Arkansas, was the last of the Saints' draft choices to come to terms. Still unsigned are veteran kicker Morten Andersen and starting outside linebacker Pat Swilling.

Coach Jim Mora was asked when Martin would run the 1½-mile conditioning checkup required of all players before they begin practicing with the team.

"We might run him at halftime Saturday night. That would be interesting," Mora said. "Might help to sell some tickets."

Meanwhile, players were almost begging to sign with the Phoenix Cardinals.

Veteran linebacker Reggie McKenzie signed a three-year, $950,000 contract with the Cardinals as an unrestricted free agent — the Los Angeles Raiders didn't protect him — although several teams were offering him up to $500,000.

"I liked the situation here," said McKenzie, a five-year pro. "Outside of the city and the money, it was a chance to play with a team that is building and getting better. I want to be one of the key guys on defense."

And two-time Pro Bowl offensive tackle Luis Sharpe, one of Phoenix's two remaining unsigned veterans, says he may sign a new contract by this weekend. Sharpe earned $415,000 last season and is seeking a multi-year contract with an annual salary of about $700,000.

"I think there's no question that is what it will take," Sharpe told the Arizona Republic. "And I think they realize that, and now it's a matter of putting those figures on paper."

"They've shown a willingness to get this thing resolved. It is encouraging. This is a good sign. If I could sign by the weekend, there's no doubt I could play in the (second) preseason game."

"I'm getting sick and tired of reading newspapers about people being in camp and here I am sitting. It's like I'm dying to get back to Phoenix."

Buffalo Bills

Starting free safety Mark Kelso could be out five weeks because of a hamstring injury. Kelso, who has led the Bills in interceptions the last two years, was injured in Tuesday's practice.

Kansas City Chiefs

Mike Elkins, the second-round draft choice, began practicing after agreeing to a four-year contract.

Three key veterans — wide receiver Stephone Paige, kicker Nick Lowery and defensive back Albert Lewis — have not reported. Neither has No. 1 draft choice Derrick Thomas.

Washington Redskins

Defensive end Dexter Manley returned to practice but defensive tackle Dean Hamel remained among the missing. Manley, who bruised a knee two days ago, dumped quarterback Stan Humphries during practice.

Hamel left camp Monday because he feared for his wife's health. She had previously battled thyroid cancer and last week developed symptoms of a relapse, the Washington Post reported.

Philadelphia Eagles

Reserve linebacker Ty Allert ended his holdout, reducing the team's count of unsigned players to just three veterans — defensive tackle Mike Pitts, offensive tackle Matt Darwin and wide receiver Mike Quick. In addition, defensive end Reggie White has not reported, contending the team is mistaken about an option year remaining on his contract.

Denver Broncos

Running back Gerald Willhite returned to practice just 15 days after a shoulder separation that had been expected to sideline him 4-6 weeks. Wide receivers Steve Watson and Mark Jackson also practiced after missing time with sprained ankles.

Dallas Cowboys

Linebacker Garry Cobb returned to Dallas to undergo arthroscopic surgery on his left knee but is expected to be back before the regular season starts. Cobb was diagnosed as having cartilage damage in his left knee after not being able to practice during a joint workout with the Los Angeles Raiders on Tuesday.

Houston Astros

Wide receiver Ernest Givins agreed to a new four-year pact. The Oilers did not disclose the terms of Givins' contract but he reportedly will earn about $2.4 million through the 1992 season.

Chicago Bears

Coach Mike Ditka gave his team good grades for their 2½-day practices against the Saints but said the Bears "have a long way to go" to be a winning football team.

Green Bay Packers

Don Majkowski will start at quarterback when the Packers open the preseason Saturday in Milwaukee against the Jets. Majkowski will play one quarter, Randy Wright will play the second and rookie Anthony Dilweg will play the entire second half, Coach Lindy Infante announced.

Cincinnati Bengals

The Bengals will give rookie free agent Kevin Simons some playing time at right tackle in Sunday night's preseason game against Buffalo. Simons, from the University of Tennessee, was not selected in this year's NFL draft but has impressed the coaches and is bidding for a starting spot on the offensive line.

Pittsburgh Steelers

Wide receiver Louis Lipps, still unsigned for 1989, is willing to negotiate but doesn't know if the Steelers are. Lipps would like to return to Pittsburgh this weekend to reopen contract talks. "I would hope that they would want to meet with us," he said.

Minnesota Vikings

A banged-up defensive line has caused some concern for Coach Jerry Burns heading into Saturday's exhibition opener against Kansas City. But Burns and defensive line coach Paul Wiggin said that with or without the injuries, youngsters such as Al Noga and Benji Roland will see plenty of playing time Saturday.

Seattle Seahawks

Kelly Stouffer will be the starting quarterback when the Seahawks open their exhibition season Friday against Phoenix. Stouffer will lead an offensive unit which will include only one regular, center Grant Feasel. Stouffer, a second-year pro from Colorado State who sat out a

Service Plans Cut Back For Young Americans

By Jill Lawrence
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — They wanted to stir up debate, play the provocateurs, take an idea to its limits. And they certainly did get people's attention.

But when Congress completes work on a national service bill, there is virtually no chance it will include the radical proposal advanced by Sen. Sam Nunn and Rep. Dave McCurdy to require military or community service in return for student financial aid.

Where the two Democrats envisioned a lofty new definition of citizenship, critics foresaw "indentured servitude" for low-income students.

Few question the value of public service; senators, in fact, have jumped onto the bandwagon with a host of alternatives that have turned out to be more appealing to members than the Nunn-McCurdy bill itself.

Objections to the Nunn-McCurdy plan have ranged from President Bush's stand against any incentives for voluntarism to Pentagon murmurings that the proposal could undermine the volunteer army. Perhaps the most widespread concern was expressed by Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos when he said the plan raises questions about equity.

Liberal Rep. William Ford, D-Mich., writing of the bill in The Chronicle of Higher Education, laid it on the line bluntly: "It holds the educational aspirations of the poor hostage to public service, while excusing the affluent."

And conservative Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., called it "incredibly unfair to penalize somebody because of an accident of birth. Frankly, I don't know what they were thinking of."

Nunn, D-Ga., introducing his bill last January, said it was time to "awaken a new spirit of citizenship and obligation in America." McCurdy, D-Okla., said the idea was to "appeal to the broad values of citizenship rather than the narrow views of self-interest."

So they proposed that young people spend one to two years in education, social, conservation or military service; public safety work; VISTA or the Peace Corps. In return participants would receive $10,000 to $12,000 a year to be used for college, job training or a down payment on a home. Service would be required to qualify for student aid.

The Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee is planning to complete work on a $200 million to $400 million national service bill before Congress breaks Aug. 4 for its summer recess.

Aides say it will have many components, including one linking public service to student aid that stems in part from the Nunn-McCurdy proposal. However, it will not make student financial aid contingent on service or in any way dismantle the existing system of grants and loans.

The section is expected to combine elements of Nunn-McCurdy with a part-time, National Guard-type service program proposed by Sens. Barbara Mikulski, D-Md., and Claiborne Pell, D-R.I.

The option of a part-time commitment would mean participants would not have to postpone college. In addition, the program would be purely voluntary since low-income students could get financial aid without participating.

In the House, the Education and Labor Committee is expected to draft a national service bill this fall, against a backdrop of heavy lobbying by labor unions concerned about volunteers usurping their turf and education groups opposed to linking service to student aid. A high-ranking committee aide said members have universally rejected the Nunn-McCurdy approach and may spurn any plan, even a purely voluntary one, that links the two.

Nunn and McCurdy profess to be satisfied at this point with the impact of their proposal on the Senate. "Our whole purpose was to challenge and to be somewhat provocative in our approach," McCurdy said in an interview. "Plus ours was the only one that dealt with the military."

Nunn's spokesman, Scott Williams, said Nunn never expected to win acceptance of his sweeping vision on the first try. "This is only the beginning of what we see as a long haul," he said.

It could be argued that Bush actually started the national service debate with his "thousand points of light" campaign theme and a campaign promise of a $100 million volunteer program.

Last month, with that in mind, Bush announced a Youth Engaged in Service Foundation, which would receive $25 million a year in federal money to spur Americans to volunteer for social service. However, he has not sent any legislation to Capitol Hill — frustrating the efforts of committee members in both chambers who would like to see the president's initiative included in the major national service bill.

"As soon as we get something in writing, we'll try to work it in," said a Senate aide who spoke on condition of anonymity.

But while lawmakers are generally receptive to Bush's ideas, the feeling is not mutual. "Service is its own reward," Bush told a group of 3,000 students last month. He has said he does not support programs that offer stipends or payment subsidies, or use student aid funds to pay for volunteer service.

Several components of the expected Senate bill could lead to a confrontation with the White House — among them the Pell-Mikulski section, expansions of VISTA and volunteer programs under the Older Americans Act, and a full-time youth service corps that would pay participants or give them education benefits.

What Will TV Viewers Be Looking At When Your Commercial Comes On?

There's nothing TV reps love more than telling you who's watching what show when. Unfortunately, the one audience they can't tell you anything about is the one watching your commercial. Because, many times, it's going to end up playing to an empty room. Recent studies bear it out. At the first sign of a commercial break, studies show that 50% of viewers either head for the kitchen, the bathroom, change the channel or just turn off the sound. Your commercial has been missed and that's bad - and expensive too! With newspaper, your message is there to be read at their convenience.

In a 1988 study by the Gordon S. Black Corporation, an independent Washington, D.C. media and opinion research firm, Greenville/Pitt County adults rely on The Daily Reflector 5 times more for their advertising information than television. Of the same group of respondents, only 1 out of 5 reported paying close attention to television commercials while more than a third pay little or no attention at all. Within the higher income groups (the most desirable audience) these figures climb even higher.

With a paid circulation of 18,300 Monday through Friday and 20,800 on Sundays, let The Daily Reflector work for you. The Daily Reflector reaches 74% of the Greenville/Pitt County market weekly.

Most importantly, it reaches them at their request!

That means you not only have a better chance of getting their attention, you have a better chance of holding it. Think about it - people paying to read your message at their convenience! Don't find your audience out to lunch! Call your Daily Reflector Advertising Account Executive at 752-6166 for answers to your advertising questions.

Scholars Marking Century Of Twain

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ELMIRA, N.Y. — One hundred years after Mark Twain published "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," the author's voice sounds as fresh as when Twain wrote the novel, a literary scholar says.

"He anticipated so much how we talk now that we're right at home," said Victor Fischer, associate editor of the Mark Twain Project at the University of California at Berkeley's Bancroft Library. "When you find the familiar things from his sayings and his expressions that have entered into the language, you realize how much he's pervaded the way we talk."

About 150 scholars and Twain experts from around the world meet today through Saturday at Elmira College to mark the centennial of the publication of "A Connecticut Yankee" and to celebrate one of America's most enduring writers.

Twain wrote some of "A Connecticut Yankee" in Elmira and is buried a little more than a mile away from the Elmira College campus.

"Mark Twain is our most definitively American writer," said Darryl Baskin, director of the Elmira College Center for Mark Twain Studies. "He wrote the way Americans spoke... and he was very much alive to the emergence of popular culture. He connected this with literature."

Marianne Curling, curator of the Mark Twain Memorial in Hartford, Conn., said that while "A Connecticut Yankee" is not Twain's most popular or successful work, it remains relevant today.

"It talks about the impact of technology in society," she said. "There were a lot of new and different things going on then, the scariest of which was electricity. People either thought electricity would cure the ills of society or destroy it. It's very much like people regard nuclear power today."

The book tells about a journey back in time of Hank Morgan, a Connecticut factory mechanic, to the 6th century England of King Arthur.

Twain, an avid reader of history, originally envisioned the book as a sort of burlesque about the customs of the time, such as the problem a knight in armor might have encountered when he had to scratch or blow his nose.

But as his writing progressed, it took on a much darker tone. Twain's Yankee used his knowledge of modern technology to seize control of the court and to begin imposing his own customs on the land. The novel ends with an Armageddonlike battle where an army of some 10,000 knights is slaughtered by electrocution, Gatling guns and drowning.

Dog Ban Upsets Bardot

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ST. TROPEZ, France — Brigitte Bardot, complaining that her dogs are banned from beaches infested with mediocre, dirty, ill-bred tourists, is threatening to quit the Riviera resort she helped make famous.

The former movie star, known as the "sex kitten" in the 1950s and '60s, said the ban on dogs on the beach was "an insult to my combat" in favor of animal rights.

"Shamelessness, exhibitionism, vice, cash, homosexuality have become the sad and degrading symbols of the village for which you are responsible," she wrote to Mayor Alain Spada in an open letter dated Aug. 3. "Each year, as summer arrives, I have to flee earlier and earlier the invasion of tourists who are more and more numerous, mediocre, dirty, ill-bred and without shame."

Spada said Tuesday he thought the actress "has completely lost her head." "Because we won't let her dogs relieve themselves on the beach, she calls us all kinds of names."

Actress-Producer Moves From Bo Peep To Horror

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Standing beside Mother Goose's house, talking to Little Bo Peep seems an odd way to learn about Showtime's new "Nightmare Classics."

The apparent contradiction illustrates how busy Shelley Duvall is these days.

During an interview, she's dressed as Bo Peep for her production of "Mother Goose Rock 'n' Rhyme" for the Disney Channel. She's also executive producer of the new horror series for the Showtime pay television network.

"Nightmare Classics" premieres Saturday with "Turn of the Screw," Henry James' Victorian suspense tale, starring Amy Irving, David Hemmings and Paul Balthazar Getty.

"We're doing the classic stories of psychological horror rather than the contemporary gore," said Ms. Duvall. "We're selecting the tales from Henry James, Edgar Allan Poe, Robert Louis Stevenson. We have a low budget, so part of the selection process is finding stories from the approximate same period so we could use the same sets. There's more than one way to skin a cat."

One show, "The Eyes of the Panther," based on two stories by Ambrose Bierce, required log cabins that they haven't figured out yet how to re-use.

Tribute Set For Singer

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DANBURY, Conn. — Metropolitan Opera star Jessye Norman and violinist Isaac Stern will pay homage this weekend to Marian Anderson, the black contralto who once was banned from performing in Washington.

Fifty years ago, the Daughters of the American Revolution refused to let Anderson sing at Washington's Constitution Hall and first lady Eleanor Roosevelt resigned from the organization in protest.

Within days, Anderson was invited to sing on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial and her concert attracted a racially mixed audience of 75,000.

Anderson went on to become the first black singer to perform in a leading role at the Metropolitan Opera. She sang at the inaugurations of Presidents Roosevelt and Kennedy and before kings and queens.

On Saturday, Anderson, 87, will be in the audience as Norman, Stern, conductor Julius Rudel and the Ives Symphony Orchestra perform for her.

Besides being a musical tribute, the evening will benefit the Marian Anderson Award, established to promote the careers of promising young singers.

Anderson lives in Danbury on a 100-acre farm that she and her late husband, architect Orpheus H. Fisher, bought more than 45 years ago.

Benefit Offer

DETROIT (AP) — Soul singer Aretha Franklin is offering to sing in a benefit in a last-ditch effort to restore music programs in Motown's public schools.

"They are already working on it," said Franklin's publicist Tuesday.

Superintendent John Porter said Franklin offered to do a benefit to help raise $1.25 million for Detroit's middle and elementary schools' instrumental music programs.

The classes were eliminated in June when the deficit-riddled school board approved $50 million in cuts to balance its budget. School officials earlier set a Monday deadline to raise the money but extended the date until Aug. 21.

Other episodes are "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" and "Carmilla."

Ms. Duvall was on the set of her musical fantasy about the abduction of Mother Goose. The house had a huge goose head on the roof and next to it was the house belonging to the Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe. Overhead, huge tufts of cotton clouds were suspended from the blue cloth sky.

As Bo Peep, she was dressed in a long red wig, a broad-brimmed hat, a frilly tutu, red-and-white striped stockings and platform wedgies. Her dog, Gizmo, a mixture of Pomeranian and cairn terrier with a recent short haircut, was at her feet.

The fairy tale musical also stars Garry Shandling and Teri Garr as Jack and Jill, Howie Mandell as Humpty Dumpty, Cyndi Lauper and Woody Harrelson as Mary and her lamb, Harry Anderson as Peter Piper, Little Richard as Ole King Cole, Art Garfunkel as the bartender at Georgie Porgie's Lounge and Deborah Harry as the Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe, Jean Stapleton as Mother Goose and Dan Gilroy as her son Gordon Goose.

"Dan's never had any experience, but he's a natural actor," she said. "Everybody wanted me to find someone more experienced, but I stuck to my guns. The only mistake I made was when I didn't go with my instincts. Bob Altman found me in Houston and I had no experience. He took a chance on me."

In all, Ms. Duvall has starred in seven Robert Altman movies, including a role as Olive Oyl in "Popeye." She's produced two other series for Showtime. Her first was "Faerie Tale Theatre" and the second was "Shelley Duvall's Tall Tales and Legends." Her longtime collaborator is Bridget Terry, who's producing "Dinner at Eight," starring Lauren Bacall, Marsha Mason and Charles Durning, for Turner Network Television.

Actually, the distance between fairy tales and horror stories is quite short.

"Fairy tales can be very scary," said Ms. Duvall. "The Grimm tales particularly can be grim. Many of them were thinly disguised political commentary. When I selected the stories for 'Faerie Tale Theatre' I had to be very careful."

Ms. Duvall produced 26 episodes of "Faerie Tale Theatre," which are now in syndication and are available on video cassette. She feels there is a much wider audience for the stories since only about six million people saw them on Showtime.

She has also stopped production of "Tall Tales," which is going into syndication and videos.

"When I pitched 'Nightmare Classics' I had the choice of doing that or continuing with 'Tall Tales,'" she said. "I chose to start the new series. I had a body of work with 'Tall Tales' that I could take and sell elsewhere."

Ms. Duvall said she enjoys running her own production company and wants to produce all forms of entertainment. She's much too busy now getting her company started, but said she'd like to try her hand at directing, too.

The bidding:

Opening lead: Two of ♣

There are times when you do nothing wrong yet have to pay a heavy price for an action that is right out of the book. East was the victim on this hand from a Swiss team match.

North figured his side was on the short side as the match wound down. So when this hand came along, he decided to take a gamble on making slam. Fortunately, South had the playing skill to justify North's optimism.

Declarer ruffed the opening spade lead and did not think too highly of his chances, since East was marked with most of the missing high cards for his vulnerable opening bid. However, if those assets included the queen of diamonds and the hearts broke favorably, there was a ray of hope.

After the opening spade lead was ruffed in dummy, declarer cashed the ace of hearts, ruffed a heart high, led a trump to the eight and ruffed another heart high. A trump to the king provided the entry for another heart ruff, setting up the jack. Declarer crossed to the table by ruffing a spade, discarded a diamond on the jack of hearts, then exited with a low diamond.

East won with the queen, but did not relish the prospect of having the lead. Whether she led a diamond or a spade, all declarer would have to do was to play her for the ace of that suit to reel in the slam. The ace of diamonds would set up the king as declarer ruffed; a low diamond would run to the king; the ace of spades would be ruffed on the table and the king would be high; and the king would be played if East exited with a low spade.
