CDC Says Diabetes May Affect 10.5 Million Americans

By Robert Byrd
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — Half of the sufferers of diabetes don't know they have it, and the disease may contribute to as many as a quarter-million American deaths each year, federal health officials say.

Diabetes was the underlying reported cause in 37,178 deaths in the United States in 1986, the latest year for which final statistics are available, the national Centers for Disease Control said Thursday.

Two reasons, the CDC said, lead researchers to believe that diabetes is behind many more deaths than that. The disease was listed as a contributory cause of death on four times as many death certificates, while half the death certificates for people with the non-insulin-dependent form of diabetes didn't mention the disease.

"Thus, diabetes may be associated with approximately eight times as many deaths" as indicated by the 37,178 reported — or about 297,000 deaths, the CDC said.

Besides being potentially fatal, diabetes — in which the body can't properly handle sugars and starches — also can cause kidney disease, blindness and other serious complications.

The CDC estimates that in 1986, 10.5 million Americans had diabetes. The Atlanta-based agency said nearly half — 4.9 million — were undiagnosed cases in people who didn't know they were diabetic. CDC researcher Dr. Robert Hahn said undiagnosed cases are projected from surveys involving blood tests.

The CDC said more than one in five diabetics have at least one of three other conditions that can seriously affect their health: smoking, high blood pressure and overweight.

Twenty-seven percent of diabetics smoke, 47 percent have high blood pressure and 22 percent are at least 30 percent overweight, the CDC said. Researchers project that among diabetics, 39,000 deaths each year are attributed to the additional problem of smoking, 30,000 are attributed to high blood pressure and 12,000 are attributed to obesity.

Hahn said the highest additional risk for diabetics comes from smoking. "Among diabetics who smoke, the risk of dying (in a given year) is 2.3 times higher than for diabetics who don't smoke," he said.

Meanwhile, Hahn said, death rates from diabetes have declined slowly during the 1980s, from 15.9 such deaths per 100,000 people in 1979 to 15.4 in 1986.

In the 37,178 reported diabetes fatalities in 1986, the highest rate was in Delaware, which reported 26.3 such deaths for every 100,000 population. The lowest was in Nevada, with a rate of 11.6 per 100,000.

But geographic region was not necessarily a clue to diabetes mortality rates: just north of Louisiana, second in the nation at 22.1, was Arkansas, 47th at 12.4.

The CDC also reported Thursday that diabetes accounts for a large number of "end-stage" kidney disease cases — serious cases which require dialysis or transplants in order for patients to live.

Of 33,393 end-stage kidney disease cases reported to Medicare officials in 1987, the CDC said, 28 percent were attributed to diabetes.

The agency noted that blacks, American Indians and Mexican-Americans have diabetes end-stage kidney disease rates between three and seven times higher than whites.

Falling Wholesale Prices Raise Hopes Inflation May Be Checked

By Martin Crutsinger
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Wholesale prices, driven down by declining costs for gasoline and new cars, fell 0.4 percent in July for their biggest decline in three years, the government reported today.

The drop last month in the Labor Department's Producer Price Index followed a 0.1 percent dip in June as the wholesale inflation gauge registered its first back-to-back monthly declines since early 1986.

The July improvement was even better than expected and bolstered the arguments of economists that inflation will be well behaved in the second half of the year, giving the Federal Reserve more room to lower interest rates in an effort to keep the economy out of a recession.

In more good economic news, the government reported today that retail sales, bolstered by an uptick in auto spending, shot up 0.9 percent in July, the biggest advance in three months, with revisions to May and June sales showing significantly more strength than believed earlier.

"We have the best of both worlds, no inflation and increasing consumer spending," said Dirk Van Dongen, president of the National Association of Wholesaler-Distributors. "Those are very good vital signs for the economy."

The news on inflation was particularly welcome because it came after a surge in prices earlier in the year had triggered fears that the country could be on the verge of another inflationary spiral.

Even with the back-to-back declines, wholesale inflation through the first half of 1989 rose at an annual rate of 5.7 percent, compared to last year's 4 percent rise.

But the acceleration in prices had been caused by higher energy and food costs. With both areas showing moderation now, economists are looking for inflation to slow substantially in the last half of the year.

The 0.4 percent July drop in wholesale prices reflected the second monthly drop in gasoline prices, which fell 7.2 percent after declining 4 percent in June.

Another favorable price development came from a 1.9 percent decline in new car prices. Labor Department analysts said this decrease reflected earlier-than-usual end-of-the-model-year discounting by automakers trying to clear out a large inventory of unsold cars.

Food costs, which had fallen a

Banker Says State Growth Slowing To Healthy Pace

By Kevin Boughal
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

More than 450 politicians and power people who surged into Greenville for Electricities of North Carolina's annual convention were greeted with some good news today about the state's economic status.

Kelly King, executive vice president of Branch Banking & Trust in Raleigh, told delegates from the state's electrical municipalities that while North Carolina's economy is not growing as fast as it had been, that is good because it had been growing too fast over the past few years.

"Most economists are very positive about the way the country is headed economically," said King. "But we still have to work hard to make North Carolina grow and develop. The triangle is slowing down, but that is good because it was growing too fast."

"I think that we should work toward making it possible for every child in North Carolina to be able to look forward to having adequate housing, enough food, a good education and a good job with decent pay," King said.

Thanks to the fact that Greenville was selected to host the convention, the city should enjoy both long and short term economic advantages, said Malcolm Green, the director of Greenville Utilities.

"In the short term, over 450 people will come to Greenville and shop in the stores and enjoy the city," said Green. "In the long term, many of the people here for the convention are politicians from the western part of North Carolina who had never been to Greenville before and I think that they will remember it in the future. It will give us an opportunity to show off the city and to show off our electrical system."

The annual meeting started this morning with welcomes from Bert Huffman, president of Electricities; Mayor Ed Carter, and Richard Eakin, chancellor of East Carolina University.

While at the convention, the participants were to attend workshops, see the city, tour the power plant, and get a look at Greenville's new weather system that includes

Public States Drilling Concern

By J. Ward Best
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

WASHINGTON, N.C. — The federal government and Mobil Oil are getting a chance to test the public waters before exploratory drilling off the Outer Banks, an activity that environmentalists view as "potentially devastating," receives final approval.

Nearly 50 residents, environmentalists and government officials gathered Thursday at Beaufort Community College for the fifth of six scoping meetings conducted by the U.S. Minerals Management Service.

The meetings, held in three locations along the coast and in Raleigh, will allow the MMS to hear public concerns about the drilling. The minerals and mining regulatory agency will translate those concerns into study questions for an environmental review.

Mobil officials say the company expects to find as much as 5 trillion cubic feet of natural gas in a buried reef along the Continental Shelf. Mobil hopes to sink an exploratory well into the continental shelf sometime next spring.

Citizens and environmentalists Thursday called for a thorough study of the drilling and secondary impacts to the coast from Mobil's activity.

"My feeling is we're opening a Pandora's Box here," said Tom Perlic, coastal conservation chairman of the Sierra Club. "We're looking at a change of life for coastal North Carolina."

Perlic said the development which would follow any natural gas find in the area could endanger the wetlands and beaches along the coast and the Outer Banks.

Greenpeace, an international environmental organization, also pre-

Council Passes Anti-Loiter Rule Without Discussion

By J. Ward Best
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

While the Greenville City Council passed a potentially controversial ordinance without any discussion, two zoning matters generated heated exchanges before a consensus could be reached.

Council members Thursday voted unanimously to adopt an ordinance outlawing loitering for the purposes of engaging in drug-related activities.

The ordinance would allow police officers to arrest persons in a known drug-use area or a known drug user or seller — a person who has been convicted for drug related offenses — for loitering in any public area and acting in a certain way as to indicate drug-related activities.

Following the misdemeanor arrest for loitering, a search that revealed drugs could lead to a felony charge.

The U.S. Supreme Court struck down as unconstitutional loitering laws more than 10 years ago. But City Attorney Mac McCarley said he believes the law is so narrowly defined and similar to other loitering laws which have stood that it will pass a court test.

Meanwhile, a request from Vance Parker Overton to rezone nearly 19 acres south of the Bells Fork intersection from residential-agricultural (RA-20) to shopping center (CS) won its test before the council by a large majority. Council member Inez Fridley stood alone in her vote against the request.

Residential-agricultural zoning permits single-family homes and agricultural uses. Shopping center zoning allows construction of retail stores ranging from banks to toy shops.

The Planning and Zoning Commission, by a narrow margin, recommended approval of the request during its last meeting, and comments at earlier meetings had indicated the City Council was also apparently split on the decision.

Collice Moore, a real estate appraiser, argued strongly for Overton's request, saying the going rental price for retail space proved a need for more commercial property in Greenville.

"Commercial property has gotten a bad name in the past four or five years and I don't know why," Moore said.

The city's development department originally recommended denying the request, citing an overabundance of commercial property in the city. Ms. Fridley also objected to the request on the same grounds.

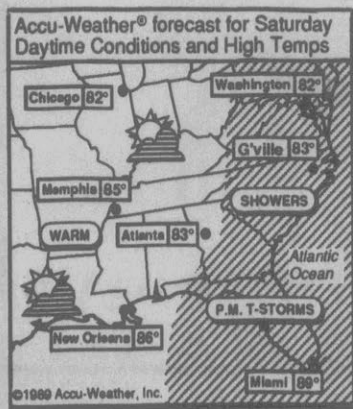

The Pitt County Historical Society and a group of area residents originally opposed the higher zoning density, but dropped their objections after meeting with Overton.

When the matter first came before P&Z, Overton indicated he would relocate his sporting goods business on the property. At later meetings Overton declined to state what he intended to do with the property.

"I can't see why there's such a resistance to commercial property when the community here says, 'It's OK with us,'" Moore said.

FAA Changes Won't Affect PGV Airport

By Kevin Boughal
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Federal Aviation Administration's scrapping of a $79 million contract to build microwave landing systems at U.S. airports should have no effect on the Pitt-Greenville Airport's plans to install a new system, according to the facility's manager.

Because of several problems that would have delayed the coming of the microwave landing system indefinitely, the Pitt-Greenville Airport chose to install an instrument landing system, said Jim Turcotte.

"Several years ago, the FAA put us on a waiting list to get the instrument landing system," said Turcotte. "As it came closer to the time when we were supposed to receive the system, the FAA came out with the microwave system and we went back down to the bottom of the list behind the big airports like John F. Kennedy (in New York) and O'Hare (in Chicago). So some years ago, we opted to put the instrument landing system in ourselves and we are right on the verge of offering it."

The microwave landing system uses bendable high-frequency microwaves to direct planes to landings. This system allows the airport to land more planes than the instrument landing system which operates in a similar way, but uses fixed beams to direct the planes in.

Because of the delays in the devel-

ECU Addition

Dr. Ephraim E. Nsien has assumed an assistant professor position in the department of medicine's section of gastroenterology at the East Carolina University School of Medicine. He is the fifth gastroenterologist at the medical school.

Nsien will concentrate on the use of flow cytometry in diagnosing pre-malignant conditions in the gastrointestinal tract.

Preceding his ECU appointment, Nsien was an instructor in the division of medicine at George Washington University, where he also completed an internal medicine residency and a two-year fellowship in gastroenterology.

Formerly of Nigeria, he received his bachelor's and medical degrees at Tufts University in Boston. His professional affiliations include membership in the American Medical Association, American College of Physicians and the American Gastroenterological Association.

Band Director To Lecture In Indonesia

ECU News Bureau

Dr. Thomas W. Goolsby, an assistant professor in the East Carolina University School of Music who has served for the past 10 years as director of the ECU Marching Pirates, has received a Fulbright-Hays Faculty Grant to lecture for eight months in Indonesia.

Goolsby will teach graduate courses in research methodology and the history of jazz at the University of Indonesia in Jakarta from October through June.

"Around ECU, I'm pretty much known as the marching band director," Goolsby said. "But outside ECU, I'm known for my research. I've written two books that will be published next fall."

He said "The Teaching of Instrumental Music" has been accepted for publication by Prentice

DR. THOMAS W. GOOLSBY

Hall and "A Guide to Research in Music Education" will be published by Scarecrow Press. Goolsby served as a co-author on both books, each of which has been rewritten for these editions.

In addition to his lecturing duties, Goolsby plans to conduct research on the music of Indonesia.

"The music there is pretty much different from any other place in the world," he said. "It is one of the few places where the music has been unchanged for at least 3,000 years."

The Marching Pirates will remain under Goolsby's direction through September. Ken Bodiford, a graduate assistant in the school of music, will take over in October with the help of Harold A. Jones, chairman of the ECU Department of Instrumental Music, who has directed the band in past years.

The Fulbright Scholar Program was established in 1947 and has provided grants for over 24,000 Americans to conduct research or lecture in countries around the world. The purpose of the program is to promote better mutual understanding among the people of the world through educational and cultural exchanges.

Goolsby's wife, Brenda, a graduate student at ECU, and son will accompany him to Indonesia.

State Law Is Praised

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A North Carolina law passed this week that regulates the use of genetically altered plants and animals is being hailed as a national model that can buffer the biotechnology industry from its critics.

The law sponsored by Rep. R. Eugene Rogers, D-Martin, and enacted by the state Legislature on Wednesday as part of budget legislation would establish a 10-member state board.

At a news conference Thursday in Washington, a coalition of biotechnology companies and environmentalists said the law strikes a balance between protecting the public and letting firms invest money in new types of organisms with the assurance that they'll have a reasonable chance to test them in the field.

They said the law will boost North Carolina's role in biotechnology, the search for better, hardier plants and animals.

"Citizens can be informed participants in the decision-making," said Rebecca Goldberg of the Environmental Defense Fund.

But Andrew Kimbrell, a lawyer for a group that supports a moratorium on the release of genetically engineered organisms, denounced the law, especially the provision that bans local injunctions against experiments.

"They're playing ecological roulette with communities," he said, because the full impact of new organisms is unknown.

Martin Proposes Refuge Compromise

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A joint state and federal wildlife refuge along the Roanoke River would be created under a compromise plan unveiled by Gov. Jim Martin.

The plan, unveiled Thursday, would remove three sites from Martin County that had been proposed for the national refuge, but would retain one site in the county known as Devil's Gut, east of Williamston.

Some Martin County residents have opposed the project because they feared it would hamper economic development.

The state Wildlife Resources Commission worked out the details of the compromise with the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service, which would own and manage most of the refuge. Under the plan, the state wildlife commission would own and manage two gamelands in Martin County and one in Halifax County.

"We feel like this is an innovative and somewhat novel approach," said Richard B. Hamilton, assistant director of the wildlife commission. "I know of no other state and federal refuge in this close proximity that would be jointly managed."

The U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service will not move ahead with the refuge until it receives the governor's approval, officials said, and the agency would not force any landowners to sell their land.

"Our plan, our approach is to buy from willing sellers," said James Pulliam, director of the Fish & Wildlife Service's regional office in Atlanta. "We have no plans at all to condemn land."

Thursday Thefts

Greenville police said eight thefts, including $1,100 in cash and other items from Greenville Turf and Tractor on Airport Road, were reported to the department on Thursday.

Officer R.C. Broadway said the cash — from the safe at Greenville Turf and Tractor — as well as a coffee-maker valued at $45 and a video cassette recorder valued at $350, were taken from the 211 Airport Road business in a break-in reported at 8:27 a.m.

Broadway also said a string grass trimmer, lawnmower and other tools were taken from a shed at 1011 Van Nortwick St. in an incident reported at 2:56 p.m., while Officer A.T. Parrish said a tire and wheel were taken from a car parked in a lot at the intersection of Fifth and Evans streets in an incident reported at 2:29 a.m.

Officer K.L. Hadnott said an air compressor, a roll of car headliner material and other items were taken from a storage shed at 2100 N. Village Drive in an incident reported at 1:24 p.m., while Officer A.G. Lloyd said a hubcap was taken from a car parked at Pitt County Memorial Hospital in an incident reported at 4:04 p.m. and $23 worth of clothes were taken from JC Penney at The Plaza mall by a juvenile in an incident reported at 5:33 p.m.

Officer C.G. Alphin said a string grass trimmer valued at $569 was taken from a truck parked at 1410 N. Overlook Drive in an incident reported at 6:45 p.m., while Officer C.A. Elks said a radio-tape player and equalizer valued at $800, as well as a set of golf clubs and bag valued at $750, were taken from a car parked at Carolina East Mall in an incident reported at 9:03 p.m.

Textile Workshop

A workshop on the textile industry will be conducted for teachers and counselors Monday and Tuesday at the Sheraton Hotel in Kinston.

The workshop will be presented by the Science and Mathematics Education Center at East Carolina University, Du Pont, the N.C. Textile Manufacturers Association and the school of textiles at N.C. State University.

The workshop, titled "TEXTILES: An Advancing Technology," will be attended by 28 area teachers and counselors representing kindergarten through 12th grade. It is designed to acquaint teachers and counselors with the textile industry as it is presently structured, some of the basic technologies and career opportunities at all levels of employment. Information, adaptable for classroom use, regarding the industry's contribution to the economy will also be discussed.

ECU Grants Tenure, Promotions To 30

ECU News Bureau

Academic tenure and promotions ranging from assistant professor to professor have been awarded to 30 faculty members in the division of health sciences at East Carolina University.

The ECU Health Sciences Division comprises the schools of allied health sciences, medicine and nursing and the Health Sciences Library.

Receiving tenure were Dr. James B. Robertson in the school of allied health sciences, Dr. Maryellen McSweeney in the school of nursing and Melissa M. Nasea of the Health Sciences Library.

Those awarded tenure in the basic sciences division of the school of medicine were Drs. Thomas M. Buttker, Abdel Abdel-Rahman, Carlo V. Bruschi, Andrew J. Gorman, Joseph Chalovich and Edward R. Seidel.

Those granted tenure in the clinical sciences division were Drs. Samuel M. Atkinson Jr., Donald E. DeWitt, Charles E. Nelson, Theodore R. Sunder, Ulrich K. Alsentzer, Erle H. Austin III, Nicholas H. Benson, Paul R.G. Cunningham, Ronald B. May, Nicholas A. Patrone, Mary J. Raab and D. Kirk Ways.

Health Sciences Division faculty promoted to professor were Drs. Ulrich K. Alsentzer, Erle H. Austin III, Charles E. Boklage, John C. Moskop and Dennis R. Sinar, all of the school of medicine.

Promoted to professor in the school of nursing were Genevieve Bartol and Maryellen McSweeney and, in the school of allied health sciences, Stephen W. Thomas.

Named to associate professor in the school of medicine were Drs. Abdel Abdel-Rahman, Nicholas H. Benson, Carlo V. Bruschi, Joseph Chalovich, Paul R.G. Cunningham, Andrew J. Gorman, Ronald B. May, Nicholas A. Patrone, Mary J. Raab, Edward R. Seidel, Robert C. Turner, Samuel M. Atkinson Jr., Thomas M. Buttker, Donald E. DeWitt, Charles E. Nelson, Theodore R. Sunder and D. Kirk Ways.

Faculty members in the school of allied health sciences named to associate professor were Madge S. Chamness and James B. Robertson, and in the school of nursing, Georgene G. Eakes.

Those named to assistant professor were Dr. Franklin Hargett in the school of medicine and Melissa M. Nasea in the Health Sciences Library.

Nashville Reports Broken Pipeline

By J. Ward Best
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A broken pipeline interrupted the normal flow of operations for Nashville's sewer system, spilling domestic waste into a nearby stream.

The town reported a spill to the Division of Environmental Management Wednesday and began work to repair one of its feeder lines. The line carries domestic waste from a nursing home and the National Guard Armory along U.S. 64 bypass.

An investigator from DEM estimated that less than 1,000 gallons of sewage spilled from the pipe. Tim Donnelly, acting water quality supervisor for DEM in Raleigh, said the department's "inspector on the site observed no visible impact on the receiving stream."

Donnelly said the inspector did not indicate which stream, but he said it was probably a small tributary of the Tar River.

Tony Robertson, Nashville town manager, said the town finished repair of the pipe and cleanup of the area Thursday. Robertson also said the spill was minor.

"It wasn't actually what you would call pouring out of the manhole. It was trickling out," Robertson said.

Robertson said a break in the old line caused sewage to back up in the system and spill out of a manhole.

Dough Rader, senior scientist with the N.C. Environmental Defense Fund and author of a recent report on wastewater treatment plants in the Tar River basin, said the spill was indicative of a larger problem.

"It's probably one more symptom of an aging and flawed sewage system," Rader said.

Nashville and a number of other small towns in the area feed their sewage to the Tar River regional wastewater treatment plant in Rocky Mount.

"The problem is the whole sewage collection system in that region is very poor," Rader said.

Rocky Mount and other municipalities have been ordered by the state to repair or replace aging sewer lines in order to reduce the possibility of breaks and reduce the amount of inflow of storm water from old pipes. Officials at Rocky Mount have said inflow has caused them to exceed capacity at their treatment plant and release partially treated sewage into the Tar.

Oil Drilling Plan Draws Public Comment

sented its concerns to Mobil and MMS.

In a prepared statement, Greenpeace supported Perlic's assessment of environmental damage from drilling. "Seismic testing, the invasion of rigs, routine and accidental pollution from drilling, increased vessel and helicopter traffic, pipelines, refineries, toxic hydrogen sulfide treatment plants, increased burden on a limited fresh water supply, and the dredging of marshes will have a potentially devastating effect on an already stressed marine ecosystem."

According to officials with MMS, the Beaufort County meeting yielded many of the same concerns expressed by citizens in previous meetings.

Beaufort resident Paul Clark told the citizens and officials at the meeting they needed to work toward safer drilling, not just protest Mobil's plans.

"I believe everybody who came here today came in an automobile burning gas," Clark said. "If everybody with a negative attitude would get a positive attitude to do something we could get something done."

The scoping meetings were hastily arranged after the state signed an agreement with MMS requiring a specialized environmental study before allowing Mobil to drill an exploratory well nearly 45 miles northeast of Cape Hatteras.

Under the agreement, MMS must first hold the scoping meetings, then prepare an environmental report addressing concerns from the public meetings. Mobil must also present a draft plan for drilling and then a final plan to MMS for approval.

Work on the environmental report from MMS will begin in September and the draft will be available to the public by Nov. 1. The final environmental report is due to the state by Feb. 1, 1990.

The state retained the right of final approval of both the study from MMS and the drilling plan from Mobil.

Ralph V. Ainger, MMS regional supervisor, said the meetings have attracted several hundred people this week, and the agency has gathered information for its report which it would not normally cover in its environmental review and approval of the drilling company's plan.

Ainger said the agreement "gives us the latitude to do an analysis that we would not do under an EIS (environmental impact statement)."

The EIS required by the agency for all off-shore drilling does not address secondary impacts from drilling, such as effects from development near the drilling sight.

Ainger warned that the state's agreement with MMS would not protect the coast from all damages from the drilling.

"No document is going to protect the coast," Ainger said. "We think we protect the coast."

Ainger said MMS would develop an environmental plan tailored to the needs of the Outer Banks.

James C. Martin, environmental, regulatory and loss prevention manager with Mobil, said the company had sent representatives to each of the meetings to learn the same concerns MMS is hearing.

"We need to understand first what the citizens concerns are before we can communicate what Mobil proposes to do," Martin said.

Martin said the most obvious concern — oil contamination from an off-shore spill — decreases sharply with natural gas drilling off-shore. The gas would be piped to on-shore production sites, eliminating the need for tanker traffic in the area, he said.

"Producing gas through underground pipes," Martin said, "... is safe and historically pollution free."

Production of natural gas along the North Carolina coast would not begin for at least 10 years after an exploratory find because of the start-up involved.

If Mobil did strike gas off Cape Hatteras, Martin said the on-shore production facility would be located anywhere between Morehead City and Norfolk, Va. He said Mobil would not consider locating the production site in natural preserves, parks and wetlands along the coast.

"Right now we're not talking about building a pipeline," Martin said, "we're talking about drilling one well."

opment of the microwave landing system, the FAA this week ended a multimillion dollar contract with Hazeltine Corp., the company that had been contracted to build the new system.

An Associated Press story reported that a letter from the FAA to Hazeltine said the company had "failed to perform and deliver in accordance with the schedule of the subject contract."

The FAA is now looking to award a new contract in 1991.

In response, Hazeltine, through its parent company, Emerson Electric of St. Louis, is suing the FAA for breaking the contract, according to the news service.

But Turcotte said the recent most recent delays would have put the Pitt-Greenville Airport even further behind schedule if it had been waiting for the FAA to install the microwave system.

"Actually the recent problems enforce our position and make us look pretty good for deciding to go with the instrument landing system," said Turcotte. "The microwave system offers more frequencies to use, but none of the planes are equipped to handle the microwave system and the instrument landing system has been around long enough to get all the kinks out. The instrument landing system is a very good system."

According to the Associated Press story, the FAA said that it remains committed to putting the new microwave system at major airports by 1998 and at all airports around 2000.

However, the FAA had promised that the microwave system would be in place at the Pitt-Greenville Airport by 1986, said Turcotte.

Zoning Changes Stir Debate

Although she voted to approve the request, Council member Nancy Jenkins blasted Mayor Ed Carter for his appearance at the P&Z meeting and endorsing Overton's rezoning petition.

"My personal feeling to have our mayor go before Planning and Zoning as an emissary for Mr. Overton's request was inappropriate," Ms. Jenkins said, "... and has made this decision very difficult."

Carter defended himself, saying more council members should attend commission meetings to better understand the issues facing the board. "I have no apologies for what I did," Carter said.

Ms. Jenkins and Carter are facing each other in the November mayoral balloting.

The second zoning request before the board to hit a snag drew more heated debate from the audience than from the council members.

A petition from the development department to zone an area newly acquired into the extraterritorial jurisdiction as RA-20 roused residents of the area in opposition to becoming a part of Greenville.

Argument from residents of the area near Cherry Oaks and south of the city limits prompted the City Council to vote Thursday to reverse an earlier decision and delete the land from the ETJ.

The proposed zoning area involved 10 lots comprising approximately 24 acres and carried no zoning classification under the county jurisdiction.

Barbara Cannon, a resident of the area, said she moved out of the city two years ago to operate her painting and striping business, "and it's followed me like the plague."

She said including the area in the ETJ "would cause quite a few of us hardships."

Ms. Cannon and other area residents objected to being included in the city's outer planning boundaries because they had originally not received notice of moving the boundaries nearly a year ago.

Bobby Roberson, director of the development department, said his department sent second notices to the people who may have been overlooked. The council had agreed in March to include the area in the city's ETJ.

Council member Lorraine Shinn proposed dropping the area from the ETJ, but warned the residents the city would eventually take in the area.

By a four-member majority, the council decided to drop the area from the ETJ and the zoning request from the development department.

Without much discussion from the council or the public, the city board also agreed Thursday to grant a request from Ralph C. Tucker to rezone nearly 12.5 acres in the Bells Fork area from RA-20 to O&I.

The office and institutional zoning includes a mix of residential, business and professional uses.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Not Quite A Loaf

Still Teachers' Salaries Better Ahead

The pay increase for teachers, which will average 6 percent, may be looked upon as half a loaf.

In reality, however, it is more than that. It represents an overhaul of teachers' pay scales which will greatly benefit some long term teachers whose salaries have been virtually frozen.

Pay raises for some will be as much as 15 percent. That, of course, means that raises for some will be far less than 6 percent since there is only so much money available.

Education leaders have expressed approval of the revised pay scales, but they warn that some may be surprised when they receive their first checks which include the raises.

Teachers now will be in a 30 step pay plan and it could put some teachers with 29 years or more of service up to nearly $40,000. Some long term teachers who stay until 1991-92 could earn $45,000 to $50,000 when local supplements, merit-pay plans and summer school teaching are considered.

If it safe to say that the biennial budget will improve teachers pay and eliminate some inequities.

Nevertheless the leap won't be great overall. Education officials don't expect any improvement in North Carolina's standing among other states in average teachers salaries. While our state is improving so are the others. And even going into the 1990s there will be precious few $50,000 per year teachers in North Carolina.

So we made some progress on teachers' salaries this year but not nearly enough if we want quality people in the classrooms. It wasn't a half loaf year, but then it wasn't a full loaf either. Our state must plan now for competitive classroom salaries in the 1990s.

Buses Will Roll

Safe Year To Require Efforts Of All

Soon the school buses will be rolling in Pitt County, as well as throughout the state.

After a hectic start last year, Pitt will have a full role of bus drivers 18 years old and older. The county's bus fleet, along with buses all over the state, are steadily being updated with pre-1977 buses due for replacement in the next couple of years. Safety features have been added since 1977 in the way of improved design.

County school officials say that, while the driver situation will be adequate at the opening of school, there will be a need for substitute drivers as the school year proceeds. They have urged those who are interested in serving to apply. Without adequate substitutes it falls to school employees to fill in when a driver is absent.

Obviously the safe operation of school buses is the uppermost in everyone's minds as the big fleet of buses prepares to operate. They are carrying a most precious cargo — the county's young people.

The federal ruling which required that bus operators be 18 years old was designed to provide safer drivers. While most of the student drivers were responsible and carried out their duties without incident, North Carolina had no choice but to adopt the 18 years old minimum age.

Regardless of age the most important thing is that drivers be adequately trained and provided with safe equipment. They will be faced with the major responsibility of delivering a bus load of children twice a day to and from school.

It is remarkable that the system works so well. There are school bus accidents, of course, but mostly the buses travel their routes and children load and unload safely.

This can be the safest year ever. It will take the cooperation of drivers, supervisors, school officials, parents and perhaps most of all, the students to make it so. There can never be an effort worth so much.

Options For A No-Win Situation

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — The abortion issue puts politicians in a no-win position. Regardless of how they vote, they will anger a sizable portion of the population and expose themselves to the abuse which the most rabid on that side will vent upon them.

The issue is also a no-win for society. Now that the states may be given the authority to restrict access to abortions, or to outlaw them altogether, the legislature could be overwhelmed by activists on both sides. No matter which way the legislature decides, the losing side will continue to fight. This most bitter of debates could go on for years.

That's why Sen. Jim Johnson's idea to put the issue to a vote has so much merit. A public vote offers the opportunity to settle the issue, if not permanently, then at least for a period during which emotions might settle.

The Cabarrus County Republican suggests that the referendum be held in a year or two and that it have four options: No change in the current law with public funding of abortions for poor women; No change in current law with no public funding; Abortions only in cases of rape, incest or when the mother's health is endangered; A total ban.

If one of those four options won out, it would become law. If no one of the four won, the public's preferences might still become known. For example, if the vote for the first two options totaled a sizable majority, then it would be fairly obvious that the public supports abortion rights. If the third and fourth options totaled that majority, the opposite would be true. The legislature would then act, or not act, based on a clear message from the voters.

Public referenda on issues won't normally receive endorsement in this column. This writer strongly prefers representative government where legislators, after deliberations, make the tough decisions. But emotions on the abortion issue run so strongly that representative government may not be the best way to handle it.

If the issue is put before the legislature, it will get wrapped up in partisan politics, in legislative maneuvering and legislative cowardice. It is possible to see the losing side on a legislative vote holding demonstrations within the building far worse than the outbursts that followed defeat of the Equal Rights Amendment. The losers are likely to feel that they got cheated on some kind of procedural question or call. The public's opinion of the legislature, already pretty low, would be reduced even more.

If the voters decide, we'll learn the true majority preference, and we should all be willing to accept that a majority vote for any of the four options will be the way which the law will read.

A majority vote would not mean an end to either the pro-life or pro-choice causes. If pro-lifers lost, they could shift to education efforts that try to dissuade women from having abortions. They might also help establish adoptive homes for unwanted children. If pro-choice lost, they could continue to work, as many of them do, for better birth control and sex education courses to reduce the number of unwanted pregnancies.

As one legislator said, "Abortion may be the most divisive issue we've had since slavery."

This nation and this state can continue to fight the abortion issue with public demonstrations, intimidation and ugliness. Or, it can move to settle the issue in a far saner fashion. By relying on a vote abortion, and by abiding by majority rule, North Carolinians could decide this issue without tearing the fabric of our state apart.

Playing The Game For PR Advantage

Jodie T. Allen

WASHINGTON — "In our public policy — as, to some degree, in our private behavior — we consume today as if there were no tomorrow. We attend too little to the issues of investment necessary to make tomorrow brighter." So spoke Richard G. Darman to the National Press Club two weeks ago. Wise words. Too bad Darman doesn't hold a position of power in Washington. Like maybe director of the Office of Management and Budget.

Wait a minute. Darman is the director of the Office of Management and Budget.

A person could be forgiven for forgetting since Darman's counsels seem, so far, to have been so little heeded by the administration he serves. If the Bush presidency, as Darman now claims, really means to seek a "New Balance," one that involves "more complexity, less simplification; more consensus-building, less polarization," such a shift away from fixation on short-term political advantage will be as welcome as it is overdue.

So far, the new farsightedness (kinder, gentler — but unfunded — promises aside) is hardly in evidence in fiscal policy. The Bush administration got things off to an inauspicious start with its January budget that set new records for high-wire number juggling — creating, for example, a "black box" of programs from which Congress was, miraculously, to produce $12 billion in savings. Since Congress would have had to take all the heat from the public if it had wanted to be more honest, the predictable result was a budget agreement loaded with phony savings. Moreover, the administration is hoping to use more ploys — shifting $3 billion in military payments back across the fiscal deadline from October into September and underestimating defense spending.

The savings and loan bailout, notes House Budget Committee Chairman Leon Panetta, provides another example of the White House

"playing the game for PR advantage." True, the Bush administration, having no real choice, did face up to the need to prop up the dying system (but not before a year-end flurry of questionable multibillion-dollar deals kept the system afloat until after the inauguration). And true, the House wanted to exclude the costs of the bailout from the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction targets (which are, in any case, at best a pious wish and at worst an inducement for costly finagling). But the Bush administration went much further to demand that the bailout costs be put "off budget." This plan, which Congress accepted in part last week under threat of a Bush veto, will actually add to the true taxpayer cost by setting up a private agency that will have to borrow at despite the much lower rate, the Treasury would get a $6 billion windfall next year.

But at what future cost! Not only would the short-term savings likely come at the expense of ultimate revenue losses (the Joint Tax Committee projects a six-year cost of $24 billion), but they would reopen opportunities for tax sheltering that the 1986 tax reform supposedly closed.

If the administration is really interested in the long term, it will drop its plan in favor of one along the lines of the one that Ways and Means committee chairman Danny Rostenkowski, under pressure from both Republicans and dissident Democrats, has finally proposed. Such a plan would drop the short-term windfall gimmick and instead would have accrued to the top 1 percent of taxpayers. (Numbers showing a broader distribution of benefits are based on faulty income statistics that exclude much untaxed income received by top-bracket taxpayers.)

This further favoritism would be added to a tax system already heavily skewed toward payroll taxes that fall most heavily on average wage-earners. As The Wall Street Journal's Alan Murray recently pointed out, taxes, other than Social Security taxes, are almost 20 percent lower relative to GNP than they were 25 years ago. Meanwhile, Social Security tax surpluses are financing shortfalls in other parts of the budget. This regressive tax shift would not be so worrisome if it were not being imposed on a U.S. income distribution that, by any measure, has become substantially more unequal over the past decade.

To the extent that declining real wages for average workers are the product of foreign competition, there is not a whole lot that the government can profitably do to cushion the impact. But there is no excuse for further pursuing Reagan-era tax and spending policies that not only helped to enlarge the burgeoning ranks of the nation's super-rich, but arrested progress in combating deprivation among the more rapidly increasing super-poor. If the OMB director wants to be more successful than his hapless predecessor, David Stockman, in changing public attitudes about public and private spending, he had better hope that he can succeed where Stockman did not — namely, in convincing his boss that commitment to solving the nation's problems needs to reach beyond the next evening's news, and even beyond the next election.

'If the OMB director wants to be more successful than his hapless predecessor, David Stockman, in changing public attitudes about public and private spending, he had better hope that he can succeed where Stockman did not — namely, in convincing his boss that commitment to solving the nation's problems needs to reach beyond the next evening's news, and even beyond the next election.'

above-Treasury rates to finance bailout costs. Again, the administration, as Panetta observes, is "literally paying more to hide the issue."

The clearest sign that the administration is really committed to a long-term focus could come in a compromise on capital gains taxation. Bush came into office proposing to drop the capital gains tax to 15 percent from the 28 percent rate now paid by the very wealthiest taxpayers (less affluent taxpayers can face a rate as high as 33 percent, but neither Congress nor the administration seems much concerned about that egregious inequity). The tax break was supposed to persuade so many investors to step up asset sales — never mind long-term investment considerations — that, adjust capital gains taxes to take account of inflation. To be fair in going about this — as well as to "unlock" long-held assets that might otherwise pass untaxed through inheritance — the adjustment would be applied, within limits, to investments made in the past as well as to those made in the future. An additional exclusion could be provided for assets held several years in the future — the long-term new investment Darman says he wants to encourage.

More fundamentally, Darman and his administration should ask themselves how their fiscal plans square with their professed commitment to leading the country to needed sacrifice. Almost 60 percent of the capital gains cut Bush propos-

Fighting The Battle With Politics, Rather Than Polemics

ST. PAUL, Minn. — Do not look here for lovers of lost causes. The women who convened at the National Women's Political Caucus — the officeholders and the wannabes — are not trying to find a way out of the two-party system, but a way in and up.

Two weeks ago, the National Organization for Women gathered its troops in Cincinnati in an atmosphere charged with frustration and anger over the recent Supreme Court decision limiting abortion rights. The NOW convention ended in a spontaneous combustion: a call to explore the founding of a third party of women's own making. Since then, the other groups have been trying to put out the fire that threatens to burn up their unity and energy.

But in St. Paul, feminists fueled by the same deep concerns looked to politics rather than polemics. They talked in phrases that were more practical than passionate.

"How do I feel about a third party for women?" responded Lena Guerrero, a state representative from Texas. "Oh about the same way I'd feel if Hispanics called for a third party. I think our energy should be focused on how you win an election."

It was a sentiment echoed by NWPC women as they attended workshops on fund-raising and media and strategy sessions — the nitty-gritty of elections. Indeed, Ron Brown, the chair of the Democratic Party was preaching to the converted when he told Caucus members, "I don't have time anymore for feel-good politics. That's the kind of politics where you say, I feel good but I lost. I'm interested in feeling good and winning."

Winning was on the minds of the NWPC, the political arm of the women's movement, as it celebrated its 18th birthday. The leaders devised a strategy targeted to recruit and support pro-choice women to defeat anti-abortion legislators in 10 key states. As outgoing Chair Irene Natividad said, "We're not going to get mad; we're going to get even. Younger women, absent from the women's movement have been galvanized by the threat to their right to decide. Indeed, Bella Abzug, a founding mother of the Caucus, said that, "Abortion is the Vietnam of this generation." It's an issue that has the power to create a new cohort of activists.

Older women, as well, many who drifted away from movement politics, have come back. Some carry with them a sense of frustration at having to re-fight old battles, but also determination.

Indeed, the buzzword of the convention was "revitalization." The NWPC, like other pro-choice groups, have received new infusions of money, energy, commitment. If the battlefield for legal abortion is the legislatures, then electoral politics is where the action is.

The new caucus chair, Sharon Rodine, a native of Iowa who has not only done political grunt work in Texas, but worked with teen-age pregnancy in Virginia, considers herself lucky to be taking the helm at this moment. The politics of abortion rights, she says, "gives us an issue that activate people. We already see it bring people out to meetings, saying 'I've never been involved before, what can I do?'"

But there are also dangers. Eleanor Holmes Norton warned in an eloquent speech, "Reproductive freedom must have our priority...but we must avoid the single issue monomaniacal approach of the anti-abortion crowd." This is no time, she said, to forget the other issues facing women and families, especially those in poverty.

There is danger as well of playing the single issue badly. Candidates at every level, male and female, will be called on to articulate their position on abortion rights. The pro-life troops have been at this for years. From the looks of at least one media workshop, pro-choice candidates are still learning how to make the issue work for them.

Unkind History

Theo Lippman Jr.

Fifteen years ago last Monday, Richard Nixon, after meeting with three Republican congressional leaders, called Secretary of State Henry Kissinger to the Oval Office and told him that the next day he would announce his resignation, to take effect the next.

Kissinger said, "History will treat you more kindly than your contemporaries have." Kissinger later wrote that after saying that, he thought he put his arm around Nixon, but "Nixon does not report it in his memoirs. So perhaps it did not happen."

And perhaps it did. Who knows whose memory is more trustworthy in times like those? Take that meeting with the congressional leaders. They came to talk about the possibility of impeachment votes. Their spokesman was Sen. Barry Goldwater. Nixon recalled it this way:

"I asked him how many would vote for me in the Senate. 'Half a dozen?' I ventured.

"Goldwater's answer was maybe sixteen or perhaps eighteen."

Senator Goldwater in his memoirs recalled it this way:

"I said, 'Things are bad.'"

"Nixon: 'Less than half a dozen votes?'"

"Ten at most," I said. "Maybe less."

Whatever happened in the White House Aug. 7, 1974, history definitely shows that, hugged or unhugged by Henry Kissinger, promised 16-18 Senate votes or fewer than 10 by Barry Goldwater, Nixon announced his resignation on the 8th and made his getaway on the 9th. He is the only president ever to quit the job.

Three different studies of the presidency in the 1980s have shown that Kissinger's prediction has not yet come true. Historians were not giving Nixon high marks. A survey of 41 history professors conducted by David L. Porter of William Penn College rated him in the "Failure" category, with James Buchanan and Warren Harding. A survey of 49 historians and political scientists rated him among the "10 Worst," ahead of only Harding.

Then a survey of 846 history professors by Penn State's Robert K. Murray and Tim H. Blessing rated him 34th out of 36, ahead of Grant and Harding.

But wait! A computer study of the professors which related their answers to their ages suggested that, as time passes, Nixon is going to move up and perhaps considerably so.

Nixon says he told Sen. Hugh Scott as that delegation was leaving the Oval Office Aug. 7, 1974, "Now that old Harry Truman is gone, I won't have anybody to pal around with." Truman had died a year and half before. Nixon would be the only living ex-president.

I don't know why he would want to pal around with Truman, who once said of him, "Richard Nixon is a no good, lying bastard. He can lie out of both sides of his mouth at the same time, and if he ever caught himself telling the truth, he'd lie just to keep his hand in."

I'll bet old Harry would take Kissinger's and Goldwater's versions of events over Nixon's.

Southern Democrats Divided On Reviving Super Tuesday

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLESTON, S.C. — Sixteen months after the Super Tuesday primary, Southern Democrats are still debating the impact and wondering whether to stage another in 1992.

Super Tuesday was the March 1988 series of primaries in 13 states designed to give the region a key role in the selection of the party's presidential nominee.

The event got mixed reviews Thursday from Democrats attending a meeting of the Southern Caucus of the Democratic National Committee. About 50 members of the committee from 13 states are attending the three-day meeting which concludes Saturday.

In Virginia, Super Tuesday meant a lower voter turnout than in previous gubernatorial primaries, but "it let us see Democratic candidates in the flesh more than ever before," said Larry Framme, the chairman of the state Democratic Party.

"We certainly got more recognition than we ever got before," agreed Lottie Shackelford, the first vice chairman of the Arkansas Democratic Party.

But she said voter turnout was low. "It helped in the sense of presidential recognition but how it affected our other candidates is something we'll have to weigh," she said.

Bob Slagle, the Texas party chairman, agreed Super Tuesday was a success in attracting candidates and spurring the largest Democratic primary turnout since 1972.

It also changed the nature of the campaign, he added.

In previous years, he said, candidates would campaign in more liberal Iowa and New Hampshire and "make statements that would appeal to those people that would absolutely burn you come general election time in the South."

Last year, the statements "were moderated a great deal and you didn't have as much baggage to carry for the ultimate ticket."

There have been a number of suggestions for changing the format, including proposals to include fewer states or staging two or three smaller primaries throughout the campaign season.

"A not quite so Super Tuesday," would give the South a voice throughout the nominating process, Framme said.

The Thursday meeting opened with a speech by Democratic National Chairman Ron Brown who told officials "we have to get serious about this political business."

"One thing we must have concluded after the last few presidential races is that we, as Democrats, cannot continue to try to beat professionals with amateurs," he said.

Brown added that after the 1980 Reagan landslide, some Democrats thought "the only way we can win elections is to try to out-Republican the Republicans. You can't do it. I believe one Republican Party in the country is enough, maybe one too many."

Tax Vote Reversed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The House, in a dramatic reversal, reconsidered its rejection of a bill that would give savings and loan institutions a $2 million break on income taxes.

House members, who voted 39-35 to reject the bill Wednesday, agreed to reconsider that decision and then voted 71-8 to tentatively approve it.

Rep. Mickey Michaux, D-Durham, who asked that the bill be reconsidered, said he had been called by a local savings and loan official who convinced him he should change his vote.

"Let me ask you who did you get your phone calls from," Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, asked. "You got them from those who want a special tax benefit. Let your conscience be your guide."

The bill would exempt from state income taxes the interest earned by savings and loans on deposits to the Federal Home Savings Bank.

That interest has not been taxed previously, but a ruling last year said that interest could be taxed.

Michaux and others argued that the tax, which would generate $2 million a year, would hurt small institutions the most.

RJR Will Lay Off 1,600 N.C. Workers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WINSTON-SALEM — R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. announced Thursday that 1,640 employees in North Carolina will be laid off in workforce adjustment based on declining sales.

James Johnston, company chairman and chief executive officer, said the layoffs were needed in response to a drop in cigarette sales.

"The U.S. tobacco industry has been experiencing a slow decline for several years," Johnston said. "In our case, consumer market share has been declining gradually and our cigarette production has exceeded consumer sales."

Of the layoffs, 825 are salaried and 700 are hourly, while another 115 are temporary and part-time positions. The workers represent about 13 percent of R.J. Tobacco Co.'s workforce.

After the layoffs, R.J. Reynolds Tobacco will have 12,500 employees, including just under 10,000 in Winston-Salem.

"We're adjusting our size and changing our structure to match today's level of business and become a stronger, more competitive company," said Johnston. "These have been difficult and painful decisions."

Regular and full-time employees will receive severance pay and continued benefits for at least eight months. Most salaried employees will be released immediately, Johnston said. Most hourly employees will be released from mid-August thru mid-October.

The cuts come in the wake of a $25 billion buyout of Reynolds parent company, R.J. Nabisco Inc. by the New York investment firm Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co. Company officials said the buyout was not a factor in the decision, but some workers doubted that.

Gov. Jim Martin said the state also would help find work for the people losing their jobs.

Senate Gives Final Approval To Pension Tax Exemptions

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The state House must now decide whether it will accept a lower tax exemption for retirees from private businesses than the exemption given to former government workers.

The state Senate Thursday voted 43-2 with no debate to approve a bill that would give government retirees a $4,000 tax exemption, while private retirees would get a $2,000 exemption. The House earlier this week approved a different formula.

Under the Senate plan, retirees from the federal, state or local governments would get a $4,000 tax exemption on their pensions. Current state workers also would get an increase in the retirement formula to help offset the state tax, which has never before been imposed on state or local pensions.

Private sector retirees, for the first time, would get a $2,000 tax exemption on their pensions.

The U.S. Supreme Court earlier this year ruled that the pensions of federal retirees and other government retirees had to be treated equally for state taxes. North Carolina, like some other states, had previously taxed federal pensions, but given state and local retirees tax-exempt pensions.

Making federal pensions tax-exempt would have cost the state an estimated $100 million a year, so legislators agreed to begin taxing state and local pensions. They also agreed to give private pensions an exemption for the first time.

The House plan would give a $4,000 exemption to government retirees immediately and phased in a $4,000 exemption for private retirees over the next five years.

But senators said the House plan would cost the state $46 million a year when private pensions were fully covered.

The Senate first proposed to give all retirees an immediate $3,000 exemption, which would not cost the state any revenues. But lobbyists argued that federal retirees already had been scheduled to get a $4,000 exemption this year. Lobbyists for state and local retirees argued that government employees had accepted lower salaries over the years with the promise that their pensions would be tax-exempt.

The compromise for $4,000 and $2,000 exemptions grew out of those arguments.

New Department

RALEIGH (A1/4) — The new Department of Environment, Health and Natural Resources was to open today with the swearing of Bill Cobey as its secretary.

The legislature abolished Cobey's former job — as secretary of the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development — when it approved a plan to consolidate the state's environmental and health agencies under one roof.

Before the new department was written into law last Friday, the state's environmental protection efforts were scattered among five state departments, 17 divisions and numerous commissions and boards.

Now, matters as diverse as hazardous and radioactive wastes, trash disposal, public water supplies, marine fisheries, forest and land resources and air emissions all will be handled under one umbrella.

Plane Crash

RALEIGH (AP) — Federal investigators were searching for the cause of the crash of a twin-engine plane near Raleigh that killed the pilot.

Investigators were "99.9 percent sure" the pilot was veteran Raleigh pilot Edward John Bowler, said Wake County Sheriff's Maj. David F. Waller. A final determination will be made today after an autopsy by the state's chief medical examiner in Chapel Hill.

Bowler, 64, a retired IBM employee, ran Fast Eddie's Flying Service, a small air taxi business at Raleigh-Durham International Airport.

The plane, a Beechcraft Baron, crashed only six minutes after taking off from RDU at 11:19 a.m., authorities said. Waller said Bowler was bound for Manteo, where he was to pick up a passenger and return to RDU.

Author Dies

SMITHFIELD, N.C. (AP) — Bernadette Hoyle, an author, journalist and publicist familiar in North Carolina literary circles, died at age 77.

Mrs. Hoyle died Wednesday morning at Johnston County Memorial Hospital.

Her first book, "Tar Heel Writers I Know," published in 1956, was an outgrowth of a series of newspaper interviews she illustrated with photographs she made herself.

The book was widely used in English classrooms throughout the state and she was urged repeatedly to update it or publish a successor. But her work as a state government public information director and with the "Tar Heel Writers Roundtable" workshop she directed annually from 1965 to 1984 in Raleigh prevented her from doing that.

She also was author of "It's Five O'Clock Somewhere," a book of drink recipes she collected from around the world.

A native of Henderson, Mrs. Hoyle was the 1973 chairman of the N.C. Writer Conference.

Fatal Robbery

ASHEVILLE (AP) — A 71-year-old Buncombe County man was robbed and beaten to death Thursday morning at his west Asheville furniture store, police said.

James Reeves Murray was found dead about 9:50 a.m. at M&M Furniture by his wife, who had been out on an errand. An autopsy showed that Murray was hit on the head with a blunt object.

Capt. Will Annarino of the Asheville Police Department said they have found no witnesses to the incident and he did not know what type of weapon was used.

Smoking Petition

GREENSBORO (AP) — A group that wants a Greensboro city ordinance banning smoking in retail areas and requiring no-smoking sections in restaurants will turn in petitions Monday calling for a citywide referendum on the ordinance.

David Hudgins, a member of Greensboro to Alleviate Smoking Pollution, said his group has gathered about 10,000 signatures and will turn the petitions in to the city at 10 a.m. Monday.

To force a referendum, petitioners must gather signatures equal to 25 percent of the number of people who voted in the most recent City Council election, or 7,247 signatures.

Helms' Stand On Funding Sexually Explicit Art Draws Mixed Reaction

By Tamara Henry
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Sen. Jesse Helms' effort to prevent federal funding of sexually explicit artwork is being compared to prohibitions against using tax dollars for racial or anti-Semitic activities.

Lawyer Bruce Fein found himself defending Helms and at odds with a panel of art experts Thursday night at the Smithsonian Institution's Hirshhorn Museum when he questioned the propriety of using public funds for controversial art.

He asked panel members how they would feel if the National Endowment for the Arts gave $100,000 to David Duke, the Louisiana lawmaker with ties to the Ku Klux Klan, and "he decided to make nice crosses" inscribed with the word "nigger."

Helms, who was not at the forum, was outraged by two NEA grants given to controversial artists whose work involves homosexual and anti-religious themes.

The North Carolina Republican is calling for a sweeping ban of federal funding of material that is "obscene or indecent" or "denigrates, debases, or reviles" beliefs or people on the basis of religion, race, creed, sex, handicap, age or national origin.

Yale art historian Susan Casteras criticized Helms on Thursday for wanting "sanitized art" while "sweeping certain themes under the carpet."

Fein argued that some may question the proper use of federal funds to a neo-Nazi group that plans artwork splattered with anti-Semitic symbols and slogans.

The Helms amendment "isn't an effort to censor, but to control the type of symbols people wish to give," Fein said, adding that the government must have input about how its money is used.

The artists on the panel — Casteras, former NEA member Richard Andrews, New York artist Leon Golub and photographer David Joselet — insisted the government has no right to decide what is erotic or immoral in the art world.

Golub said homosexuals are American citizens and taxpayers who have a right to have themselves expressed through art.

The Senate has approved Helms' amendment as part of the NEA budget and added a five-year ban on two art groups that sponsored grants to photographers Robert Mapplethorpe and Andres Serrano.

Mapplethorpe's photos have many lesbian and homosexual images, while Serrano has a photograph that shows a crucifix submerged in urine.

The House reprimanded the NEA last month by cutting from its proposed budget the exact amount of two grants that funded Map-plethorpe and Serrano.

A conference committee is scheduled to take up the $170 million NEA budget the first week in September, and Helms already has been lobbying members to keep his amendment in the final legislation.

"These are very complex issues we're talking about, the possibility of censorship ... artists rights," said Andrews, moderator of the forum.

"We need, all of us, whether politicians or individuals, to resist oversimplification. It's the oversimplification that gives us the most trouble in the long run.

"Seems to me in a way, good government is the ability to let the representatives take complex issues, reduce them to simple thought and make judicious judgment but never losing sight of the complexity of the overriding issues.

"Bad government to me is the ability to take complex issues, turn them into simple building blocks and build a rickety construction from that which has no basis in actual fact."

Polluters Identified

RALEIGH — Eleven North Carolina industries were named in the National Wildlife Federation's list of the 500 companies nationwide that release the largest amount of cancer-causing and health endangering pollutants into the environment.

The highest-ranking North Carolina company on the list, Champion International Corp. in Canton, ranked 55th. It released more than 23.6 million pounds of toxic chemicals into the air and water during the reporting period, the federal said.

Federal Paper Board Co. in Columbus County was second in North Carolina, ranking 95th nationally and releasing 12.7 million pounds of toxics into the air and water and on to the land, the group said.

The third-ranking N.C. company was Texasgulf Phosphate Operations in Aurora, ranking 112th nationally and releasing 11.2 million pounds of toxics, the federation said.

Other N.C. companies on the list included Occidental Chemical, Castle Hayne; Aluminum Co. of America, Badin; Du Pont Cape Fear plant, Leland; R.J. Reynolds Tobacco, Winston-Salem; Meredith Burda Corp., Newton; Shuford Mills Inc.; Champion International Corp., Roanoke Rapids, and Cape Industries, Wilmington, 497, 2,641,909.

Blacks Say They Were Offered Deal To Support Veto Proposal

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Some black legislators say they considered an offer of $2.7 million for minority economic development spending in exchange for their support of a gubernatorial veto package, but that in the end the money was not enough.

House speaker Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, and Gov. Jim Martin worked in vain this week to round up 72 House votes in favor of a revived constitutional amendment that would give the veto to the governor, double the length of legislators' terms and limit legislative sessions.

Rep. Mickey Michaux, D-Durham, who is chairman of the Legislative Black Caucus, would not identify who made the offer, but he said he made a counteroffer — $40 million in assistance to minority-oriented programs.

Rep. Howard Hunter, D-Norhampton, said black legislators considered the $2.7 million "just too cheap."

Black legislators say that little in the $758.7 million state budget benefits minorities.

Rep. Herman Gist, a black Democrat from Greensboro, said he understood the $2.7 million offer came from Mavretic, who had discussed the veto with Michaux earlier this week.

Mavretic would not say whether or not he made the offer, saying, "I don't breach confidences." Martin's legislative aides deny making any offer to the 13 House members of the black caucus.

Martin tried to pick up potential votes Tuesday by sending two state planes to fetch legislators attending a conference in Oklahoma. Realizing he lacked the necessary votes, he ordered the planes back to Raleigh the next day — empty.

Martin and Mavretic had 68 of the 72 votes needed to pass the veto measure and winning some black votes could have given Martin the needed extra votes. But no black legislators supported the veto last week.

Hunter said Michaux discussed the offer with a handful of other black legislators who gathered around his seat at Monday night's session.

Michaux said he made a counteroffer to Jim Polk, formerly of Charlotte, who is Martin's minority affairs adviser.

Michaux said that offer called for $20 million in state money over two years for black colleges and various minority-oriented economic development programs.

The money, Michaux said, would come from accelerating collection of utility taxes — a proposal that would raise more than $50 million.

"The conditions were the (utilities) bill had to be passed accelerating the taxes," Michaux said. "And then we would consider the matter in caucus."

Gist said Michaux has "just grabbed the ($40 million figure) out of the air."

FAA Chief Says DC-10s Are Safe

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — There's no evidence to warrant grounding DC-10s despite two explosive engine failures within a month, the nation's top aviation official says.

"It's safe to fly. I would fly in the aircraft today," Federal Aviation Administrator James B. Busey said Thursday, less than 24 hours after a Northwest Airlines DC-10 made a safe emergency landing in Denver with holes blasted in the housing of its tail-mounted engine.

For the second time in his first six weeks on the job, Busey defended the McDonnell Douglas-built DC-10, a workhorse jumbo jet for about 50 airlines around the world.

Three weeks ago, another explosive engine failure caused a United Airlines DC-10 to crash-land in Sioux City, Iowa, killing 111 people.

"We know of no hard facts that would lead us to take action to ground the DC-10," Busey said when asked about its safety.

He declined to draw comparisons between the Sioux City and Denver incidents, saying any decision to ground a class of airliners would be made only after careful investigation and deliberation.

"To act speculatively or on the basis of incomplete information in my judgment would be irresponsible," he said.

The United plane carried General Electric engines, while the Northwest plane had Pratt and Whitney engines.

American, Continental, Delta, Eastern, Northwest, Pan American and United Airlines fly a total of 166 DC-10s, and about 300 more are flown by non-U.S. airlines.

After Busey's statements, the International Airline Passengers Association renewed its call for grounding the DC-10, saying it's the only way to protect the public while finding out what's wrong with the aircraft.

Busey said the FAA was prepared to take any action that might be indicated by facts uncovered in the National Transportation Safety Board investigation of the Denver incident and the Iowa crash.

Investigators said the United jetliner's rear engine apparently disintegrated in flight, knocking out critical hydraulic flight controls that meet in the plane's tail section. The Northwest plane's controls were not affected.

All DC-10s were grounded for a month in 1979 after an American Airlines plane lost a wing engine, severing hydraulic lines, as the plane was taking off from Chicago. Investigators later blamed the crash on faulty maintenance. A total of 273 people died, including all 271 on board the plane and two on the ground.

The NTSB dispatched a full team to Denver because of apparent similarities with the Sioux City crash. Ordinarily, non-fatal accidents are handled by NTSB field investigators.

Both mishaps involved an "uncontained engine failure," in which engine pieces fly out through the engine casing.

Meanwhile, a task force formed by Busey last month after the Sioux City crash to examine possible changes in the design of wide-body planes met for the first time Thursday.

A Trump Shuttle jet carrying 56 people creates sparks and smoke as it lands in Boston without its front landing gear

Trump 727 Makes Landing On Nose

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — After a Trump Shuttle jet made an emergency landing without its front gear, owner Donald Trump flew to Boston to thank the pilot and try to turn a near-disaster into a public relations triumph.

"I think the whole crew is made up of heroes," the New York real estate baron said, singling out Capt. Robert Smith as "a great talent."

There were no injuries among the 47 passengers and seven crew members on the Boeing 727, which came screeching into Logan International Airport on its belly Thursday morning and stopped in a shower of sparks.

Smith, 47, a former Navy pilot with 19 years of flying experience, realized the plane's nose gear failed to extend as he approached Logan from New York City at about 9:30 a.m.

He tried to free the landing gear by diving and pulling up suddenly, and then by making a rough touch-and-go landing — slamming the main landing gear on the runway and then taking off.

When both attempts failed, the jet circled for nearly an hour and dumped fuel over the ocean before finally making a gentle but ungainly landing, with its nose scraping the pavement.

Smith played down his efforts. "This was all in a day's work as far as I'm concerned," he said.

The emergency landing was the first major problem for Trump since he bought the shuttle from strike-torn Eastern Airlines on June 8. He quickly tried to turn any safety fears to his advantage.

"I think the public confidence might be greater right now, because of the talent of our crews," Trump said.

The landing resembled an Aug. 2 incident in which a Piedmont Airlines 737 scraped its wing and engine in an emergency landing at Greensboro, N.C., after its left main gear jammed. No one was injured.

Bruce Nobles, president of Trump Shuttle, said the jet had been in service since January 1970 and was scheduled for a major overhaul next month.

"Age has nothing to do with it," Nobles said.

The National Transportation Safety Board was investigating the incident.

Regulators Close 3 S&Ls

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Regulators are moving quickly to attack the savings and loan crisis, shutting down three small institutions the day after President Bush signed landmark bailout legislation.

The Resolution Trust Corp., a new agency created by the law, said Thursday that it had closed thrifts in Florida, Texas and Illinois. The action came just hours after the Treasury Department said it had raised the first $5 billion in bailout money.

In all three closings, regulators transferred the failed institutions' deposits, up to the insurance limit of $100,000 per account, to healthy banks or savings and loans. The closed thrifts' branches will reopen today under the names of the institutions acquiring the deposits.

They are: —Liberty Federal Savings and Loan Association, New Port Richey, Fla., acquired by Citizens and Southern National Bank of Florida,

Fort Lauderdale. Liberty had four offices with $56.5 million in assets and deposits of $90.1 million in 7,900 accounts. Citizens is paying $1.1 million to take over the deposits.

—Park Cities Savings Association, Dallas, acquired by Comerica Bank-Texas, Dallas. Park Cities had one office with $48.1 million in assets and $39.7 million in deposits in 1,400 accounts. Comerica is paying $20,000 to take control of the deposits.

—First Savings of America, Orland Park, Ill., acquired by St. Paul Federal Bank for Savings, Chicago. First Savings had three offices with $21.3 million in assets and $46.5 million in deposits in 8,900 accounts. St. Paul paid $1.2 million for the deposits.

The acquiring institutions all retain an option to purchase loans and other assets of the failed savings and loans. The government will have to sell what the institutions don't take.

Meanwhile, the RTC said Thursday it took control of three additional thrifts, keeping its list of problem S&Ls at 262 in 33 states.

Those three, which remain open under government management are: People's Heritage Federal Savings and Loan Association, Salina, Kan., with $2 billion in assets; Unifirst Bank for Savings, Jackson, Miss., with $835 million in assets; and Metropolitan Financial Savings and Loan Association, Dallas, with $853 million in assets.

The law signed by Bush authorizes the government to borrow $50 billion over the next 26 months for the savings and loan bailout.

The Treasury Department raised the first $5 billion in bailout money as part of its regular quarterly sale of debt. One-third of the $15 billion in 247-day cash management bills sold Thursday at a yield of 8.36 percent is earmarked for the RTC.

Money from the cash management bills won't be available until Tuesday. In the meantime, the Treasury Department has made $215 million available to the RTC to cover Thursday's transactions.

By the time it finishes its work, the RTC is expected to have dealt with about 500 ailing institutions.

Powell Tapped

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Gen. Colin Powell, tapped as the next chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, is widely viewed as an adroit politician and pragmatic commander capable of representing the U.S. military at a time of sweeping change both home and abroad.

Powell, 52, was nominated on Thursday by President Bush to become the nation's top military officer.

"I am ready to go to it and I look forward to the challenges ahead," Powell said.

He's expected to win easy Senate confirmation and make history as the first black and the youngest-ever officer to hold the post.

Powell, who served as national security adviser in the final year of President Ronald Reagan's administration, will succeed Adm. William Crowe Jr., who is retiring Sept. 30.

Bush praised Powell, a decorated veteran of two combat tours in Vietnam, as "a complete soldier" as well as a distinguished scholar.

"As we face the challenges of the '90s, it is most important that the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff be a person of breadth, judgment, experience and total integrity," Bush said. "Colin Powell has all those qualities and more."

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Service Committee, called Powell "an excellent nominee." Nunn said his panel will hold confirmation proceedings soon after Congress returns from recess in September.

Meteor Shower Expected Tonight

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — Earth will be treated to one of the the biggest cosmic shows of the year tonight when the Perseids meteor shower arrives, and late-night watchers should be able to spot about one shooting star a minute.

"The Perseids meteor shower traditionally is the biggest of the year," Jack Horkheimer, head of Miami's Space Transit Planetarium and also known as public television's "Star Hustler," said Thursday.

But he warned star-gazers not to expect a Fourth of July fireworks display.

"Even at their best, they're meteor sprinkles," he said. "Try to spot one extremely bright meteor during the night, then call it quits."

The Perseids shower, named because they appear to radiate from the constellation Perseus, are most visible after midnight each Aug. 12. The shower is made up of the remnants of a trail of dust left by the Swift-Tuttle comet, last sighted in 1862.

Each year the Earth runs through the comet's old trail, Horkheimer said.

"Meteors are comet litter," he said. "It's like driving behind a garbage truck on a bumpy road — the debris slams into your windshield."

The left-over dust hits the earth's atmosphere at an altitude of about 70 miles, and the heat ignites gases as the particles disintegrate in the air, creating the characteristic meteor trail.

Astronomers don't know whether Swift-Tuttle will some day return. If it doesn't, the show, which gradually grows dimmer each year, could eventually disappear, Horkheimer said.

The Perseids shower is not the only astronomical event upcoming. On Wednesday, the United States, especially the East Coast, will have a good view of the region's first Lunar eclipse in seven years.

Bush Names Lucas To Liaison Position

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — William C. Lucas, whose nomination to be the Justice Department's top civil rights enforcer was rebuffed by lawmakers, today was given another job by President Bush that does not require Senate confirmation.

The appointment of Lucas as director of the department's office of liaison services eliminates a potential confrontation between Bush and the Democratic-controlled Congress.

David Runkel, a spokesman for Attorney General Dick Thornburgh, said Lucas had been selected for the liaison post, which coordinates Justice Department activities with state and local governments and civil rights organizations.

A formal announcement was forthcoming.

Administration sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Bush would formally withdraw Lucas' nomination for assistant attorney general for civil rights later today. No replacement has been selected, they said.

In 7-7 tie votes Aug. 1, the Senate Judiciary Committee rejected motions to recommend Lucas' confirmation and to send his name to the full Senate without recommendation.

Bush had considered appointing Lucas to the civil rights post while Congress is in its current recess, a maneuver that would have permitted Lucas to serve through 1990 without requiring a Senate vote.

However, Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, warned Bush a week ago that such a move could harm the president's relations with Congress.

Bush then sought a quick floor vote on Lucas before senators left town, but Mitchell turned him down.

Lucas, who is black and served as a sheriff and county executive in the Detroit area, was widely criticized by civil rights groups for lacking the experience in discrimination cases required for the assistant attorney general post.

Lucas has recently been working in the Justice Department as a consultant.

At the White House, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Bush "values Mr. Lucas' friendship and advice, and will seek it and use it in the years ahead."

Fitzwater said the president continues to believe that the rejection by Lucas on Capitol Hill for the high-profile civil rights post was "a very unfair judgment by Congress based primarily on political considerations."

"The president thinks he was an excellent candidate who would do a great job for whoever he works for," Fitzwater said.

"He was a black leader in Michigan, who gave up the Democratic Party and joined the Republican Party. We felt his background and experience was sound, and he would have done a great job."

Rescuers Find No Trace Of Leland

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia — Rescue workers today found no trace of U.S. Rep. Mickey Leland's plane in areas where two distress signals were detected, and they resumed looking along its intended flight path, the U.S. Embassy said.

The Houston Democrat and 15 other people were aboard the twin-engine Twin Otter when it disappeared Monday on a flight from Addis Ababa to the Fugnido refugee camp, 480 miles to the southwest near the Sudanese border.

Leland, chairman of the House Select Committee on Hunger, was one of nine Americans aboard the flight.

U.S. officials have acknowledged Leland's plane could have crashed into one of the many mountains along its path.

Catholic Bishops Pushing For Anti-Abortion Drive

By George W. Cornell
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — A group of Roman Catholic bishops said the anti-abortion movement should seize the opportunity offered by a recent U.S. Supreme Court decision to lobby state legislatures for new limits on abortion.

While charging that abortion rights advocates are apparently trying to revive anti-Catholic sentiments, the Committee on Pro-Life Activities of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops said Thursday the court ruling "marks the beginning of a new debate, in which many voices must be raised in defense of life."

The 1,500-word statement, called "An Opportunity to Defend Life," suggests opponents of legalized abortion concentrate on such short-term goals at the state level as limiting government funding of abortion; requiring parental notification and consent on abortion for minors; restricting late-term abortions; and installing other safeguards to "prevent hasty or uninformed consent" to abortions.

The statement by the bishops' committee headed by Cardinal Joseph Bernardin of Chicago was a planning analysis following the high court's July 3 ruling upholding a Missouri law that banned abortions in public hospitals and stopped public employees from counseling women about abortions. The decision stopped short of overturning the 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision under which women have the right to seek abortions, but allowed states to impose new restrictions.

In their statement, the bishops made a special appeal for groups opposing abortion to work together. The groups have been battling over tactics such as whether to picket abortion clinics or to seek a total or partial ban on abortion.

"The movement in support of abortion on demand is united in its agenda; pro-life Americans must not give their adversaries an easy victory by launching attacks on each other over questions of political strategy," the bishops said.

The committee said the new legislative situation also raises a special problem involving hints of anti-Catholicism.

Abortion Rights Mobilization, a coalition of groups favoring the legal right to abortions, has sued the federal government to revoke the church's tax exemption status because of its lobbying against abortion.

IF THINGS GO WRONG, HAVE A TALK WITH YOUR PASTOR

You have just had a terrible week. First, you received bad news about something. Then, as if that weren't enough, you acted on impulse and made some foolish statements that let certain people down and almost cost you a friendship of long standing. Altogether, you couldn't feel more depressed and your self-esteem has never been lower. Of course, you try to make amends with those people whom you inadvertently injured by your unwise remarks. Actually, none of this may describe your problems; but whatever they are, go to church and talk to your pastor. He will give you his best advice, for he is there to help people like you who are in some kind of trouble. And remember to thank God for this guidance He has provided for you, just when you needed it most.

We invite you to visit us this Sunday!

Gilda Radner's Cassettes Have Double Impact

By Charles Champlin
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LOS ANGELES — Only six weeks before she died May 20, Gilda Radner spent several days in a recording studio here reading a condensed version of her book, It's Always Something (Simon & Schuster Audio, two cassettes).

Hearing the cassettes now carries a double impact: the material itself and the knowledge that the voice, intimate and resolutely positive, has gone silent.

The book, its title a catch phrase out of her past that had become all too appropriate, is a swiftly told autobiography of the Detroit girl who found early on that she was funny and by the '70s was an authentic star on "Saturday Night Live" and in films.

She had had a brief earlier marriage and then the meeting with Gene Wilder that makes the book, with all else, a very touching love story. They were married in a village in the South of France, and for a brief time you would have said that once in a while Hollywood lives can be as joyful as some Hollywood movies.

But her inability to have a child was an early, profound disappointment and then, in 1986, Radner was diagnosed as having ovarian cancer.

Much of the book is the chronicle of her fight with cancer. It is, inevitably, harrowing stuff: the surgeries, the radiation, the chemotherapies, the loss of hair and all the other demoralizing side effects.

But Radner fought back, with humor, reinforcing Norman Cousins' conviction that laughter is medicine. She devised songs and routines that tried to laugh at what was never a laughing matter. The despairs were dark and the setbacks, in the text and in her reading, fall like hammer blows.

Yet there were rounds in the fight when the scoring went Radner's way and she and Wilder could get back to France and she could think about picking up the threads of the career again.

In the worst times the strain on the marriage was severe — Radner is candid about that, accepting that she was in her darkest hours desperately demanding. But Wilder, as she says, was loving and supportive throughout.

She found considerable comfort also in meeting with fellow sufferers in Harold Benjamin's Wellness Community in Los Angeles, to which a portion of the profits from the cassettes will go.

In a sense, It's Always Something is the story of a defeat, in which immense courage, a powerful will to live and the wonders of medicine could not at last overcome those malevolent cells. Yet that is not the message the listener carries away from Radner's valiant recording.

Out of her ordeal had come a deepened experience of love, for her husband most especially, but as well for her family and the friends new and old who were part of her life.

She found, too, a new savor for life — a life now carved out day by difficult day, devoid of any bland assurances that time stretched forward endlessly. She had had three hard-won years after the onset of illness, more than some, less than others in her circumstances and too pathetically few in any event.

Yet the resilient voice on the recording, surprisingly strong, offers not resignation or surrender, but courage, hope and the will to fight on. That, it is clear, was why she made it.

High-Wire Acrobats Of Utility World Electrify Country

By Charles Hillinger
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LAUGHLIN, Nev. — The tall metal towers look like giant legs striding across seemingly endless deserts, tramping up and over lofty mountains, marching through towns and cities.

And, if you look closely, sometimes you see in the distance tiny dots climbing or clinging to the glistening soaring steel, like spiders on enormous webs in the sky.

The animate specks are the linemen who erect, maintain and repair the 100- to 250-foot-high electrical transmission towers.

These high-wire acrobats of the utility world stroll nonchalantly across iron beams 100, 200, 250 feet in midair, hang sideways and upside down from their precarious perches securing huge bolts with giant wrenches.

By the time they are in their early 40s, most of these men are ready to climb off the towers to find less strenuous work on the ground.

"It's good money. Sure it's always a risk. The idea is not to get careless, not to get electrocuted, not to fall," said veteran towerman Richard Dominguez, 40, who says he will keep doing this job as long as he can.

He had scrambled down in no time from the peak of the 150-foot tower under construction in the desert near Laughlin. It was lunchtime, and he was hungry.

It was high noon on a 100-degree-plus day. Dominguez gulped a cold soft drink, wiped the sweat from his leathery face and continued talking about the job he swears he would not trade for any other.

"It's exciting to be in the air. You always have the feeling you are doing something not everyone can do. When the power goes out anywhere on the conductor lines on Southern California Edison Co. transmission towers, we're the guys who get it back on as fast as we can."

Edison has 24,000 huge transmission towers carrying 69,000 to 500,000-volt electrical conductor lines along a 12,000-mile path from Hoover Dam, from the Palo Verde nuclear plant near Phoenix, from generating plants, from dams on both the eastern and western slopes of the High Sierra.

The linemen who service the towers deal with it all — windstorms, snowstorms, salt storms, earthquakes, fires, floods, torrential rains, dense fog, subzero cold and 120- to 130-degree heat at all hours of the day and night. When there is an outage, they go.

Now and then a lineman is killed or seriously injured in a fall or is electrocuted. It does not happen often, but the danger is always there.

Mike Bratten, 42, shot and wounded at Tay Ninh in Vietnam with the 9th Infantry Division, has been an Edison Co. towerman for 23 years. "I took three shots of 13,800 volts several years ago. It burned the wedding ring off my finger, but I survived and came back after a few days to recuperate," Bratten recalled.

He told how his father advised him to apply for a job with a utility company "for security" after he got out of the Army. "I took the telephone, gas and Edison Co. test. Edison paid more. So I came here. I was asked if I was scared of heights. I said I didn't think so," Bratten said.

He worked on the towers until six years ago, when he became a tower construction foreman, and now works only on the ground. "That's a long ways up when you're in your 40s. By the time most men get to be Dominguez's age they get jobs on the ground."

"Working in the air is a wonderful job for young men. It pays $19.68 an hour for a journeyman (after serving a three-year apprenticeship) with lots of overtime and out-of-town subsistence money. You get in your late 30s and early 40s and you wear out."

"It's strenuous work. The older you get the tougher it gets. Leg and back operations are part of the job. I've had eight operations on my legs. The cartilage is gone on both legs. I loved every minute on the tower and miss it a lot."

There is plenty to be fearful about in this line of work — height, wind, electrocution.

"We're up there in 20- and 30-mile winds all the time," said Steve Berczik, 40. "Winds can blow towers over. Last year, a 100-mile wind leveled eight towers out by Blythe (Calif.)."

Stan "A-to-Z" Alachniewicz, 34, who became a towerman five years ago after losing his job when the Kaiser steel plant in Fontana, Calif., closed, had to conquer his qualms about working at great heights.

"I wasn't real fond of heights," he said. "Some guys sign on and have to quit because they can't stand heights. But I had to get a job to support my family. When you need to do it, you got to overcome that fear, but it still bothers me and everybody else at times."

Alex Garcia, 27, 3½ years on the job, served four years in the Marines and knew he could hack it because he was lowered 200 feet on ropes from helicopters. "The first climb of the day you still get a little nervous. You try to be extremely careful at all times and watch what you're doing. Edison drills the safety factor into our heads all the time."

Paul Racine, 41, a foreman who worked in the air for 18 years, and was also wounded in the Vietnam War while in the Army, told how new men on the job spend six months to a year as groundmen sending material and tools to the linemen on towers.

"We are as safety conscious as you can be but sometimes there are accidents and we do get hurt, no doubt about it," he said. "But that's understandable considering the heights the men work at and working around live wires with tremendous voltage. You hold on tight, strapped to steel with a web belt while working."

LAT-WP News Service

Working 100 feet of the ground is routine for these linemen

Racine was on a tower when a fellow worker was electrocuted and helped lower the man's body to the ground. Dwayne Ryssman, 29, who flies gliders in his spare time, said wives do not want to know about the job or think about what their husbands do from day to day.

The 10-man crew erected the tower near Laughlin in three days to bring more power from the Edison generating plant here to a nearby Nevada Power Co. facility providing additional electricity for the fast-growing gambling resort community on the Colorado River.

Putting a tower together is much like constructing a giant piece from an Erector Set with ground crews and a huge crane hoisting steel beams to linemen on the tower who set them in place and bolt them together. "It takes more than a screwdriver and a pair of pliers to put it together," Alachniewicz said.

If the towers are accessible, the linemen drive to the job, but more often the towers are in rugged inaccessible desert or mountainous terrain and the men have to be flown in by helicopter or walk from one to

Film About Human Body Takes The Viewers Inside

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — A climber dangles by his fingernails over a yawning Yosemite abyss; a viewer's fingernails dig into palms sweaty with vicarious tension. A champion skier rockets furiously downhill at Aspen; the viewer's knuckles whiten.

A Bolshoi ballerina uses as much muscle and power as either the climber or the skier as she seems to float across the Moscow stage; and the IMAX movie theater audience watching "To The Limit" regains a sense of bodily ease.

But with a difference, with a sense of wonder at the extraordinary workings of this human body. Which is the purpose of "To The Limit," the latest in the super-large-format IMAX film series being shown in eight cities on screens of from four to seven stories high.

To explain the inside story of that marvelous machine the body, the film pioneers techniques, rounding out the spectacular action scenes that audiences have come to expect from earlier films such as "To Fly," "Hail Columbia" and "The Grand Canyon: The Hidden Secrets."

In "To The Limit," by means of endoscopic cinematography, viewers wander into vast lung cavities, watch the thunderous pulse of heart valves and follow the flow of blood cells. A special high-speed camera allows the dancers' superbly controlled and practiced movements to be savored in slow motion.

Japanese Bachelors Turn To Marriage Academy

By Akiko Fukami
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

OSAKA, Japan — "My mother suggested that I come here," said Junya Iyori, giving a shy glance at the interviewer.

"Whenever I tried to speak with girls, I'd choke on words. I also had bad sense of fashion," said the 34-year-old bachelor, who works for a shipping company and has tried at least three times to find a bride through "omiai," or the Japanese arranged marriage.

Iyori is one of 50 bachelors who gets help from Marriage Man Academy, a finishing school for men that opened in April in Osaka, Japan's third largest city, west of Tokyo.

Unlike the typical Japanese finishing schools, where women are taught how to become good housewives, the academy teaches men how to communicate with women and assume a realistic relationship with them.

On the wall behind Iyori's seat in the class room is a poster with five principles of the "bridegroom school":

- Do not cringe to a woman.
- Do not underestimate a woman.
- Try to understand a woman.
- Be open to a woman.
- Have confidence in yourself.

Based on those principles, the academy's 22-step, six-month course gives bachelors like Iyori lessons such as how to make a good first impression, how to have a good sense of humor, how to understand women's feelings and what to do during the first meeting in an arranged marriage.

Daily seminars and counseling programs also allow a man who cannot afford to wait six months to learn some quick techniques to capture the heart of the "girl of his dreams."

"The first thing we teach our students is how to introduce themselves," said Satoshi Noguchi, founder and instructor of the Academy. "But it takes at least four weeks for them to speak out loud enough for us to hear."

In most of the lessons, students practice Noguchi's technique with female instructors. In the sense of humor class, they are told to give a popular stand-up comedy routine in front of the instructors. Unless they can make the audience laugh, the outlook for them may be very gloomy, said Noguchi.

The Academy also gives students professional advice on hairstyling and how to dress well. Though they are mostly salaried workers in their late 20s to early 30s, many still live with their parents, who often are just as desperate about their son's single status.

"We get calls from parents asking us what exactly we teach to their sons," Noguchi said.

In Japan, boys are urged to study efficiently, get into an important university and be hired by a respectable company. Studying hard often consumes so much time and attention that it is impossible for Japanese boys to go out with girls. When it becomes necessary for them to have relationships with women, they are completely at a loss.

Why are bachelors like Iyori so anxious to find a bride?

Men hold a strong desire to get married because otherwise they feel incomplete. They also need someone who will cook, clean and raise children, skills they were not taught.

In some companies, a man who remains single — thereby failing to show off the most basic ability the society demands — could forfeit his chances to be promoted.

In addition, the odds are against single men in Japan. According to the 1985 national census, the number of single men between the ages of 25 to 34 was 3.6 million — more than double the number of single women in the same age group.

"Men basically haven't realized the changes in women," said Keiko Higuchi, professor of women's studies at Tokyo Kasei University. "They're still looking for a wife who will do everything for them."

Ms. Higuchi plans to open a lecture course titled "Hanamuko Gakko," or "school for bridegrooms," next fall at a marriage-counseling center in Tokyo.

Mosquitoes Can't Spread AIDS

Dear Abby: I have a question to ask and don't know who to ask. If you don't know the answer, you can at least find someone who does. Please don't dismiss this as a dumb question:

We are told that AIDS is contracted through body fluids or through needles passed around by drug users. We live in an area where there are lots of mosquitoes. Is it possible for a mosquito to bite a person with AIDS, then infect another person by biting them? In other words, can mosquitoes spread AIDS? — Dumb Question From Arkansas

Dear Question: There is no such thing as a "dumb question." There are, however, stupid (not "dumb," please — dumb means mute) people who remain uninformed because they are too embarrassed to ask. The answer to your question is no, AIDS cannot be spread by mosquitoes.

Dear Abby: For shame! (And fie on you!) You told "Happily Married" (who wrote to pick a bone with you about not having disclosed a previous divorce): "There is nothing wrong with revealing the truth. Hiding it is deceitful, and, therefore, shameful."

Abby, what's happened to you? In the past, you have said that a person's past is not material for the "confession box" between partners. Now you are saying that no matter what the consequences, the truth

Dear Abby

should be revealed.

You goofed, but I love you anyway. — Carol B. In Bellevue, Wash.

Dear Carol: Whoa — back up. Please don't put words in my typewriter. Never did I say no matter what the consequences, the truth should be revealed.

In the case of "Happily Married," her father had forbidden her to even date a man in whose family there had been a divorce, so when she met the man she wanted to marry, she asked him not to disclose the fact that his favorite aunt had been divorced!

I was trying to make the following point: There was nothing wrong with revealing that particular truth. Divorce is not necessarily a dark and dirty secret. It's nothing to be ashamed of. Hiding it, in my opinion, was deceitful — and, therefore, shameful.

Dear Abby: I would like to address my comments to the couple who signed themselves "Married Without Children."

You wrote: "We are both career-minded, have never felt the need to have a child, and we like our life the way it is."

That's fine. But did you ever think what one of you will do after the death of your mate? You are alone, with no children to care for you, help you or turn to in time of need.

Children are a treasure to us who have them. Think about it! — A Friendly Reader

Dear Friendly Reader: I don't want to appear "unfriendly" or unduly critical, but having children because you want to be "cared for," or to be assured of someone to "turn to in time of need" is not, in my opinion, the reason to have children.

I would hope that couples have children because they want them, with no thought of "self."

Dear Abby: What would you think of a grown man who was an ardent football fan of a certain college — so much, in fact, that he brought a portable TV into the back of the church during his cousin's wedding ceremony and watched the game? — Upset In Pittsburgh

Dear Upset: The man was rude. Somebody should have kicked him in the end zone.

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69446, Los Angeles, CA. 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

HOGS: The trend is steady to 25 cents higher at N.C. buying stations. Kinston, Spivey's Corner, Murfreesboro, Siler City and Robersonville, 46.00; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Pine Level, Chadbourne, Ayden, Laurinburg and Benson 45.00; Wilson 45.75. Sows: (500 pounds up) Fayetteville 33.00; Wallace 34.00; Spivey's Corner 34.00; Rowland 35.00.

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 55.75 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. 62 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed for a preliminary weighted average of 53.75. The market is about steady and the live supply is fully adequate for a moderate demand. Average weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Friday was 2,779,000, compared to 2,314,000 last Friday.

HENS: Market steady. Supply adequate for a good demand. The undertone for next week's trading is weak. Prices paid per pound for hens over seven pounds at farm for Friday was 18 cents.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn steady to 2 cents higher, 2.58-2.71 in East and mostly 2.70-2.77 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans 4 to 5 cents higher at 6.20-6.45 in East and mostly 6.15-6.30 in the Piedmont; wheat mostly 3.50-3.56; new crop corn 2.10-2.61; new crop soybeans 5.35-5.65; P.I.K. certificates steady to 1/2 percent lower and ranged from 100 to 106 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market pushed ahead in active trading today, bidding to reach record highs with encouragement from unexpectedly favorable news on inflation.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 14.04 to 2,726.67 in the first half hour of trading, surpassing the closing peak of 2,722.42 it reached on Aug. 25, 1987.

Shamir Says He's Optimistic Israel Can Negotiate Hostage's Freedom

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir told visiting U.S. congressmen today he is optimistic Israel can negotiate the release of missing Israeli soldiers and American hostages in Lebanon.

Rep. John Hiler told reporters after the hour-long meeting that Shamir said "he was hopeful what was taking place would lead to the release" of the captives.

The Indiana Republican attended the session with Rep. Robert Clement, a Democrat from Tennessee, and Rep. William Emerson, a Republican from Missouri. They are touring Israel as guests of the Anti-Defamation League of the B'nai B'rith.

Hiler quoted Shamir as saying "there were ongoing negotiations," but he gave no specifics. Officials have said contacts with Shiite Moslems have been made but no negotiations were under way.

Most of the 16 foreign hostages and three Israelis held in south Lebanon are believed held by pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem groups.

On July 31, a pro-Iranian group claimed it killed one of the hostages, U.S. Marine Lt. Col. William R. Higgins, in retaliation for Israel's refusal to free Sheikh Abdul Karim Obeid, a Shiite Moslem cleric abducted two days earlier by Israel.

Obeid is reportedly the spiritual leader in south Lebanon for Hezbollah, the pro-Iranian organization believed to be the umbrella for factions holding hostages. Hezbollah also is believed to hold two of the Israeli soldiers.

Israel said it kidnapped Obeid to swap him for the Israeli soldiers and the Western hostages, who include eight Americans.

The independent Yediot Ahronot said today that any deal may come down to a swap of Obeid for Westerners because the Israeli captives may be dead.

In a story headlined "Fear Hezbollah has nothing to give to Israel," military correspondent Uzi Mahanaimi said Israeli officials have had no indication in the past 18 months that soldiers Yossi Fink and Rahamim Alsheikh are alive.

The two were captured in Israel's self-proclaimed "security zone" in southern Lebanon in February 1986.

The newspaper said there was more optimism over missing navigator Ron Arad, who was captured after his plane was downed in Lebanon in October 1986. Arad initially was held by the Shiite Amal militia, according to Israeli reports.

In Lebanon today, Hezbollah's spiritual guide, Sheikh Mohammed Hussein Fadlallah, praised a bombing attack carried out in retaliation for Obeid's abduction.

Five Israeli soldiers and an allied militiaman were injured Wednesday when a Shiite Moslem clergyman, Sheikh Asaad Birro, detonated a truck bomb as an Israeli military patrol passed in southern Lebanon. Birro was killed.

Dravecky Completes His Comeback

Giants' Pitcher Triumphs In Battle To Come Back From Cancer

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — Everyone was nervous except Dave Dravecky, who overslept on the morning of what was literally the game of his life.

Dravecky had already beaten cancer. All he had to conquer Thursday was the Cincinnati Reds.

The gutsy Giants left-hander accomplished that in magnificent fashion, taking a one-hit shutout into the eighth inning en route to an emotion-charged 4-3 victory at Candlestick Park.

Dravecky managed to keep his composure, not to mention his fastball, through at least eight standing ovations from the 34,810 fans on as dramatic a day as Giants manager Roger Craig said he had ever witnessed in baseball. It was exhilaration without fear for the 33-year-old pitcher.

"There was really no reason to fear anything, because getting to this point, in most people's eyes, was an impossibility," he said. "Anything after this is icing on the cake."

Any more pitching performances like this and the first-place Giants can start making travel plans for the National League playoffs. Dravecky, after all, has a history of midsummer heroics for the Giants, arriving in July two years ago from San Diego to help pitch the club to the NL West title.

But even if Houston overtakes San Francisco down the stretch, fans and players alike won't forget the dramatic performance by a man doctors said last fall would never pitch again.

Only 10 months ago, Dravecky lay on an operating table in Cleveland with more than half the deltoid muscle gone from his shriveled pitching arm. His life was not in danger with the removal of the cancerous chunk of muscle, but his career was as good as over.

The medical experts, however, failed to take into account Dravecky's tenacity and his religious faith.

Old Images At PGA

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HAWTHORN WOODS, Ill. — Who was that out there? Arnold Palmer at Cherry Hills in 1960? Tom Watson at Pebble Beach in 1982?

It was as though Palmer and Watson jumped into time machines on Thursday to summon up their old magic, hoping to win a tournament that would make their careers complete.

Both the 59-year-old Palmer and the 39-year-old Watson need a PGA Championship to join Gene Sarazen, Ben Hogan, Jack Nicklaus and Gary Player as the only players in history to win career grand slams.

Watson lost in a playoff to John Mahaffey in the 1978 PGA.

Palmer was runnerup in 1964, 1968, and 1970.

Should Watson win the PGA, it would rival Nicklaus winning the 1986 Masters at the age of 46.

It might be bigger than Curtis Strange winning back-to-back U.S. Opens for the first time since Ben Hogan did it in 1950 and 1951.

A Palmer victory in the PGA at age 59 would go down (certainly subject to argument) as the greatest achievement in golf history since Bobby Jones won the British and U.S. Opens and the British and U.S. Amateur championships in 1930.

Julius Boros was the oldest player to ever win a major, the 1968 PGA at the age of 48, at Pecan Valley in San Antonio.

Sam Snead at 52 was the oldest to win a PGA Tour event, the 1965 Greater Greensboro Open.

What the gallery saw from Watson on Thursday were some imaginative trouble shots, the kind he made when he was winning majors.

Shots like the one on the 17th hole at Pebble Beach in 1982 to take the U.S. Open title away from Nicklaus. Watson holed a sand wedge from just off the green for a birdie-2, one of golf's most memorable shots.

Watson missed seven fairways on Thursday yet hit amazing recovery shots. Then he capped it off by sinking

Can Arnie Do It?

Veterans Come Through At PGA

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HAWTHORN WOODS, Ill. — Now comes the tough part. Can Arnie do it again?

"Can I do it? I can do it if I have three more days like this. I feel great. I haven't felt like this in a long time. If I play like this, yes, I can do it."

If Arnie can't, can Tom Watson do it? Or maybe Jack Nicklaus?

Thursday was Nostalgia Day in the PGA Championship, when three players who once dominated the game displayed their championship wares on the same afternoon. Palmer, who was shooting in the 80s in the British Open only a few weeks ago, put together a 4-under-par 68 round that, with a break or two, could have been much better.

Watson, who like Palmer has never won the PGA Championship, punctuated his opening round with one of those Watson wedges. He won the 1982 U.S. Open with a wedge-shot birdie on the 71st hole; he closed a 67 with a wedge from the fringe on Thursday. "The best I've hit my irons in a year," he said.

And Nicklaus, whose 18 titles in pro golf's four major tournaments is a record, had the putter singing as he posted a 68. "I made almost everything I looked at."

Mike Reid and Leonard Thompson paced first-round scoring with 66s. But this was a day for sentiment.

Tom Kite, whose 67 would have gotten lots of attention any other day, was just one of the fans on Thursday.

"Wasn't that great?" he said. "Yeah, Arnie, it was like we were back in the '60s."

"Ten years ago," Nicklaus said, "I'd be pulling for everybody to shoot 76, but now I'm happy to see all the older guys shooting 68."

"You bet I was pulling for Arnie," Thompson said. "I was hoping he'd birdie every hole."

He did birdie five in a row on the front side, each one eliciting a bigger roar than the last. By the time he finished the front nine at 5-under-par 31, "Arnie's Army" was on the march again behind their general.

"As the birdies started, the crowd got motivated and that motivated me," he said. "It was like old times. I wasn't thinking about the five straight birdies. I didn't realize I had them until after I made them."

"I don't recall the last time I made five birdies in a row. It might have been last year."

After 16 holes, Arnie was tied for the lead with Reid, one of the early finishers. Bogies on the two closing holes left Palmer with a 68, but he found solace even in those slips.

"They weren't bad shots. I just hit them too hard. The adrenaline was flowing. I just misjudged my own strength."

Watson's 67 over the 7,197-yard Kemper Lakes Golf Course seemed to confirm that his British Open performance was no fluke, that his long struggle may be over. Despite some putting trouble in the late going, Watson was only a shot out of the playoff for the British title.

"It's been four or five years since I've been excited about my game," Watson said. "I think for awhile I just accepted not winning. Then it got frustrating. Now, I feel I'm in more control of my destiny. I'm excited even when I'm practicing."

"Basically, the turnaround came from working hard to get it right and I'm getting it right," Watson said. "This just might be the second coming of Tom Watson at the age of 40." His birthday is Sept. 4.

Assistants Follow Same Rules

Brief Contracts, Wide Responsibilities For Aides

By Tom Morris

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The contracts for East Carolina's assistant coaches are brief documents, but the assistants are held up to many of the same rules and regulations as their head coaches.

While head coaches sign multipage documents that detail every possible aspect of their job and its responsibilities, assistants sign much shorter agreements that mainly state salary, beginning and ending dates of the contract and include a clause for termination in the wake of any violation of NCAA rules.

A number of other coaches' contracts at state schools included clauses for termination in regard to felonious convictions.

ECU's contracts reflect the same concern, but the wording is different. Pirate coaches can be fired for bringing any discredit to the university.

"That's very important, from an image standpoint, for obvious reasons," said Athletic Director Dave Hart. "In our policies and procedures manual we have conditions expected of athletic department employees because of the visible position of our employees."

Two ECU assistant coaches, basketball assistant Chris Benetti and football assistant Tim Kelly, were arrested and convicted of driving while impaired this past spring. Both situations were handled internally by ECU.

Hart said nothing has changed in the contracts of the school's assistant coaches in response to that situation.

"Those (future) cases would be dealt with individually," he said. "We have added nothing special in the contracts as it relates to the specifics of that."

Assistant coaches must follow many of the same guidelines as head coaches, according to Hart.

"All of our coaches are held accountable to the same regulations," Hart said. "That clause about the NCAA, we added that a year and a half ago."

In ECU head football coach Bill Lewis' contract, a stipulation calls for the coach to conduct his duties in accordance with rules of ECU, the ECU athletic department, the NCAA, the UNC Board of Governors and any applicable state or federal laws.

ECU's football coaches all have signed the standard one-year contract.

Wolfpack Must Fill Some Holes To Live Up To Early Forecasts

By Tom Foreman Jr.

RALEIGH — Coach Dick Sheridan has enough talent to earn North Carolina State some high recognition in the Atlantic Coast Conference preseason. He's also missing enough people to give him cause for a little worry.

"I don't think it really affects anything as far as how we play. It's the first time I've had a team that has lost half of its starters and was expected to be a better football team, so it's kind of unusual," Sheridan said during the Wolfpack's media day Thursday.

The Wolfpack was chosen second in the ACC summer poll, and there have been some publications that have placed them among the nation's top teams.

"If you're picked low, it motivates you. If you're picked high, then it challenges you," Sheridan said. "It can give our players a feeling of respect, but at the same time, all of our player know the games we won and lost in the conference were very close."

"We've got some big problems to solve before we feel like we can be in the upper echelon of the conference," he said.

Eleven starters and 10 more let-termen are missing from the 1988 team that went 8-3-1 including its victory over Iowa in the Peach Bowl. That team not only was potent offensively, but was stingy defensively as the nation's eighth best

Sentencing Closes Drug Case

USC Steroid Controversy Finally Comes To A Close

By Rick Scoppe

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBIA, S.C. — With the sentencing of three former coaches and a Maryland man, the steroid case involving the South Carolina athletic department is over.

But assistant U.S. Attorney John Barton hopes the highly publicized case has reduced the use of steroids while educating the public about the dangers of steroids.

"I think that people are now recognizing these are not just fun drugs, recreational drugs to pump yourself up," Barton said. "These are something that can cause some very serious and dangerous side effects."

The four men were sentenced Thursday to terms ranging from three months to six months in a halfway house for their convictions stemming from the use and distribution of steroids within the school's athletic department.

U.S. District Judge G. Ross Anderson sentenced each of the four men to one-year terms, but he suspended six months to nine months of each sentence. He also placed all four on three years of probation.

Ex-coach Tom Kurucz, who pleaded guilty June 1 to one misdemeanor count of dispensing steroids to players and a felony count of lying to a grand jury, received the harshest sentence — six months in a halfway house.

But it was the minimum term allowed under federal sentencing guidelines. Barton asked the judge to consider a lighter sentence because Kurucz told him a few weeks after he testified before the grand jury — and before he was indicted — that he had lied to the panel.

Kurucz faced a maximum of six years in prison and $350,000 in fines.

"I'm sorry and ashamed," Kurucz told Anderson before he was sentenced. "I now have a new job and I request you let me continue to make a living for my family."

Former coaches Jim Washburn and Keith Kephart, along with John L. Carter of Bethesda, Md., were each sentenced to three months in a halfway house.

"I had a sacred trust," Washburn told Anderson.

Three Teams Set For Scrimmages

Three area high school football teams will get their first taste of outside competition Saturday in controlled scrimmages. Rose will be involved in the first of its two scrimmages Saturday at 6 p.m. at New Bern. The Rampants will travel to Raleigh Broughton for their second scrimmage next Thursday night. Conley travels to Class 2-A Williamston Saturday at 5 p.m. The Vikings' second scrimmage will be next Friday at home vs. Northside. Farmville Central is home against 2-A Bunn Saturday at 7 p.m. The Jaguars are at James Kenan Thursday. Ayden-Grifton is scheduled to travel to Edenton Monday and hosts Lejeune Friday. North Pitt's lone scrimmage is at Plymouth next Friday. The North Carolina High School Athletic Association requires 11 days of practice before a player can participate in a scrimmage and limits teams to two preseason scrimmages. Practice began Monday, July 31.

ECU Freshmen Go Through 1st Drills

Under cloudy skies, brisk winds and cool temperatures, Coach Bill Lewis sent the East Carolina freshmen class through two hours of practice Thursday afternoon. The majority of the time was spent on techniques and learning the ECU system. "One of the things we are doing is working every player on both offense and defense," said Lewis. "It gives our coaches a chance to see every player in different position groups. Then, the coaching staff can see what position is best for the player." The weather, appreciated by the players, was not welcomed by the coaching staff. "Conditioning with the heat is important to the players," Lewis said. "Hopefully, we can get hotter temperatures here soon. It's incredible though. I hadn't seen weather like this in August since I was in Laramie, Wyoming." (Lewis once served as head coach at the University of Wyoming.) The freshmen were to begin two-a-day drills today before the varsity checks in on Saturday. Meet the Pirates Day will be held Sunday at 3 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium.

McGraw Signs Pact With Asheville Team

Jay McGraw, who played in more college games than any other player in East Carolina baseball history, signed a contract Thursday with the Asheville Tourists of the South Atlantic (Class A) League. Asheville is a farm team in the Houston Astros organization. McGraw, 23, played at ECU from 1985-88. He was not drafted in either the 1988 or 1989 Major League Baseball draft, and completed his degree requirements from ECU in May. An outfielder, he played 186 games as a four-year starter. His career batting average of .300 is the 10th best in Pirate history and his 31 career homers is second on the all-time ECU list. McGraw is the third Pirate to sign a pro contract this year. Earlier, David Ritchie and Jake Jacobs both joined the Kansas City Royals organization. ECU now has seven active players in the professional ranks.

Greenville Swim Club Gets 4th

The Greenville Swim Club finished fourth in the nine-team East Carolina Swim Club League championships, held at the Goldsboro Family YMCA and hosted by the Kinston Swim Club. Wilmington took first place in the meet with 806 points while Wilson was second with 791 1/2. Goldsboro was third with 584 followed by Greenville with 460. Tarboro was a distant fifth with 204 while Kinston was next with 167. Rocky Mount, with 133 1/2, Camp Lejeune with 58 and Roanoke Rapids with 38 rounded out the meet. John Carstarphen took four first places in the meet in the 18-18 boys' division. He won the 100-yard backstroke, the 100 freestyle, the 200 backstroke and the 200 freestyle. David Kelly added three firsts, winning the 100 freestyle, the 100 butterfly and the 100 breaststroke in the 13-14 age group. Kelly and Carstarphen both qualified for the age group meet to be held later this year in High Point. Earlier, the name of Bert Powell was omitted from a list of those swimmers who qualified for the Junior Olympics' meet held in High Point in July. Other place winners from the ECSL meet are as follows:

- 8 and under boys: Robert Bishop, Julius Stevenson, David Simo, David Phillips, 3rd in medley relay in 1:33.33; third in free relay in 1:19.59; Simo, 2nd in 25 free in 15.92, 6th in 25 back in 21.41, 3rd in 100 individual medley in 1:31.77, 3rd in 25 fly in 18.03 and 2nd in 25 breast in 20.14; Stevenson, 8th in 25 back in 22.27 and 8th in 25 breast in 24.80.

Tar Heels' Baldwin Will Not Play

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — Cornerback Skeet Baldwin has decided not to play his senior season for the North Carolina football team. Baldwin, who would have been fifth-year senior, was a starter in the Tar Heels defensive secondary for parts of the last three seasons and was listed as the second-team right cornerback after spring practice. Baldwin said he decided earlier this summer to quit football so he could concentrate on his studies and a church campus ministry program.

Team USA Belts Canada, 12-3

DURHAM (AP) — Marc Tsitoris hit two home runs and knocked in five runs on Thursday night to lead Team USA to a 12-3 victory over Canada in the Gold Medal Cup series. USA was down 2-0 after Canada scored in the third inning as the home team. The Americans scored four in the fourth and two in the sixth. They had single runs in the seventh and eighth and four-run ninth to extend the edge.

Toran Had Blood Alcohol Level Of .32

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles Raiders safety Stacey Toran had a blood-alcohol level more than three times the legal limit when he was killed in an automobile accident, the coroner's office said. The results of the toxicological examination gave Toran's blood alcohol level at .32 percent when he was killed last Saturday night, county coroner's spokesman Bob Dambacher said.

Gamecock's High Will Not Be Reinstated

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — South Carolina football Coach Sparky Woods said he has no plans to reinstate Tim High, even though a drug charge has been dropped against the former player. The drug charge was dropped Wednesday after a judge ruled a search warrant used by narcotics agents — who found hallucinogenic mushrooms and amphetamines in High's car — was too broad. "I'm not going to hunt Tim. If he hunts me and talks to me, I'll make a decision from there," said the first-year coach, who did not renew High's scholarship this summer.

Labonte Remembers Early Lesson

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. — Terry Labonte learned a valuable lesson the first time he ever drove in a road race. "My dad and I had a Camaro we'd been racing on the short tracks of Texas back around 1977," Labonte said. "I'd never driven a road course in my life, just the short ovals, but this guy who owned and sponsored the car wanted us to run it up at Texas World Speedway's road course. "It was a lot of fun shifting, getting through the corners, braking — a lot different than the ovals. And we were leading the race. "I kept checking the gauges," Labonte added. "And when I saw the temperature was reading 'Hot,' I slowed down but stayed in front until the needle wouldn't drop. So I went to the pits. "The next day at the shop, I went to unload the car and saw the gauge still registered as overheating, even after sitting on the trailer all night. A defective gauge had cost me the race, and that was the last time I ever pitted just because of a gauge. Now, if I don't smell something in the car, I keep running." Labonte, the 1984 Winston Cup champion, will be one of the favorites in Sunday's Budweiser at the Glen, one of only two road races on the 29-event NASCAR schedule. The other favorites are Ricky Rudd, who has won two straight road races — the 1988 race at Watkins Glen and the June event at Sears Point International — and Rusty Wallace, who had won three in a row before Rudd beat him here last August. Wallace has finished second to Rudd in each of the last two road races. Labonte, considered an excellent road racer, is one of the hottest drivers around right now, having won two of the last five Winston Cup events, including the race at Talladega, Ala., two weeks ago, and last Saturday's International Race of Champions event at Michigan International Speedway. Labonte has climbed from far back in the Winston Cup points race to sixth with 12 races remaining. "I still think we've got a chance to win the title," Labonte said. "I'd rather have a long shot than no shot." Labonte has a shot at some real big money this weekend, with $200,000 going to the winner of the IROC series which will be determined in Saturday's race here.

McEnroe Wants More Quick Starts

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — Impatient with his slow starts, John McEnroe says he longs for the days when he dispatched opponents without a second glance. "I used to pride myself on getting off to great starts," said McEnroe, who dropped a set before dismissing

No. 15 Michiel Schapers 4-6, 6-1, 6-2 Thursday in the U.S. Hardcourts. The second-seeded New Yorker faced No. 8 Todd Witsken for the first time ever in today's quarter-finals. Unlike McEnroe, top-seeded Stefan Edberg needed just an hour to beat David Pate 6-3, 6-1. He advanced to a match today against No.

10 Richard Matuszewski. Tim Mayotte also had an easy time against David Wheaton, who fell 6-3, 6-3 to the third seed. Mayotte, who lost in the second round here last year, played No. 5 Jay Berger today. In other third-round matches, Berger routed qualifier Barry Moir 6-1, 6-1; Witsken defeated Gary Muller of South Africa 7-5, 6-3, and Matuszewski got past Andrew Szneider of Canada 6-2, 3-6, 6-1. McEnroe said his failure to get a jump on opponents from the opening serve has become a bad habit he wants to break. "People try extra hard when they play against me. They have a lot to gain by beating someone like myself, so you have to be prepared," he said.

"But five years ago, I violated that. I'm very sorry. I've done all I can to rectify that." Carter also told Anderson he was sorry for what he had done. "I made a mistake," he said. "I'm willing to pay and do what I have to make amends." Carter faced a maximum of two years in prison and fines of $200,000. Washburn and Kephart could have been sentenced to a maximum one year in prison and a $1,000 fine. Kephart, Kurucz and Washburn declined comment following sentencing. Edward "Punky" Holler, who represented Kurucz and Washburn, said his clients "are glad it's over with." "They can get on with their careers," he said. "It's behind them now." Carter also declined comment, but one of his lawyers, Mitchell Rubenstein, said his client was disappointed with the sentence and felt he should not have to serve any time. "I believe that the people that had accused my client, Tommy Chaikin and others, stood accused of more serious offenses," Rubenstein said. "Each of them obtained immunity. My client, who dealt steroids on maybe three or four occasions, now has to serve three months in a halfway house." Holler also indicated he was not happy with the fact that several former Gamecock players were given immunity in return for their testimony before the grand jury.

"I'd rather not comment. I'll keep those (feelings) to myself," Holler said. "It didn't sit well with me, let's put it that way." But Barton defended his decision to give Chaikin and others immunity. "We often have to make deals with people we don't want to make deals with," Barton said. "I think it was handled appropriately as to who was immunized." Carter pleaded guilty June 19 to two misdemeanor counts of providing the muscle-building drug to Chaikin, who played at South Carolina from 1983 to 1987. It was Chaikin's story in Sports Illustrated on Oct. 24 that prompted the grand jury probe of alleged steroid use and distribution across the state and within the school's athletic department. The probe of the university is over, Barton said, but the statewide investigation continues. Chaikin said he and other players used steroids and about half the 1986 team used steroids, which are illegal except under a doctor's prescription. Kephart and Washburn each pleaded guilty on June 1 to one misdemeanor count of buying and importing anabolic steroids through the mail without prescriptions. Kephart, 44, was South Carolina's strength coach from 1982 to 1988, and Washburn, 39, was a Gamecock assistant from 1982 to 1988. Kurucz, 42, was at South Carolina from 1982 to 1986. Another former Gamecock coach, Tom Gadd, was found innocent by a federal jury July 21 of two misdemeanor charges stemming from the grand jury probe.

Part of that preparation involves boosting his first-serve percentage, which is critical to McEnroe's serve-and-volley game. "I'd like to get up to 55 percent to 60 percent. That's a realistic figure for me outdoors, but that's not going to win me major titles," he said. McEnroe improved his career mark over Schapers to 4-0 using service breaks at the start of the second and third sets. "It's dumb for me to get off to slow starts," McEnroe said. "When you play better and better guys, you get yourself in bigger and bigger holes." McEnroe broke Schapers at love in the second game of the second set for a 2-0 lead and coasted from there in his first tournament since injuring his shoulder at Wimbledon in July. Making his first-ever appearance in Indianapolis, Edberg hasn't dropped a set in two matches in his first tournament since losing to Boris Becker at Wimbledon in July. Against Pate, Edberg collected two service breaks en route to winning the first set 6-3. He hit 90 percent of his first serves compared to just 44 percent for Pate. "I had a good feel for the ball tonight," Edberg said.

defense. Seven times during the season, the Wolfpack defense did not surrender a touchdown. There were losses on the offensive line, but the backfield comes to camp with four competitors for the starting quarterback job. The top three rushing tailbacks return, but the two leading fullbacks who blocked for them last year have graduated. Whoever starts at quarterback — Charles Davenport, Preston Poag, Shane Montgomery or even freshman Terry Jordan — will have to rely on a new corps of receivers following the loss of the speedy combination of Nasrallah Worthen and Danny Peebles. All-ACC linebacker Fred Stone is gone on defense, as well as three-year starter Michael Brooks at free safety. Sheridan is relying on a combination of returning players and upperclassmen to try and fill the voids. "We have been affected by graduation in a balanced way. There's no position on our football team that hasn't been affected by graduation," Sheridan said. "Across the board, we have a lot of holes to fill." As is always the case with Sheridan, there are no guarantees as to who will start at any position when the Wolfpack opens the season on Sept. 2 against Maryland. "We're going to have to be ready in a hurry. I think it challenges our players to come in in good condition, to work extremely hard in August practice," Sheridan said. "We're going to have to reach a level of play that normally you want to have for your conference games on into the season. We have to reach that level much more quickly."

Dorsett Realizes Career May Be Over

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

In the twilight of his great football career, Tony Dorsett faces what might be considered a fourth-down situation with a long way to go.

"You name the injury, and I've had it, and I've always played with it," he said. "That's why this is so discouraging. I can't play with this injury."

The NFL's No. 2 all-time rusher made the remark Thursday at a news conference to discuss a career-threatening injury to his left knee.

Dorsett, who tore a ligament in the knee last week, acknowledged that "it's probably my last year, but I'm still trying to stay optimistic."

New Orleans Saints
Wayne Martin signed a four-year contract with the New Orleans Saints on Thursday, reducing the list of unsigned first-round NFL picks to 19.

Martin, a 6-4, 285-pound defensive end from Arkansas, said he was happy with the agreement, worth a reported $1.99 million.

San Francisco 49ers
The defending Super Bowl champions received a double jolt of bad news Thursday when linebacker Chris Washington broke his left leg and tight end Jamie Williams broke a finger on his left hand during a controlled scrimmage.

Washington's injury, diagnosed as a broken lower fibula and a sprained deltoid ligament, was considered far more serious.

Green Bay Packers
Offensive tackle Ken Ruettgers

NFL Notes

ended an 18-day holdout when he agreed to a one-year contract with the Packers.

Atlanta Falcons
Atlanta's efforts to sign Dallas quarterback Steve Pelluer are being hindered by compensation talks with the Cowboys. Pelluer's agent, Joe Courage, said the Falcons are "pretty close" with their contract offer.

Courage and Pelluer left the Falcons' complex in Suwanee, Ga., on Thursday after a negotiating session with Atlanta officials.

Buffalo Bills
Pro Bowl center Kent Hull ended his holdout and agreed to a contract, terms of which were not disclosed.

Hull, a fourth-year player from Mississippi State, went to the Pro Bowl last season after the Bills won the AFC East championship.

Los Angeles Rams
Two other Bills starters remain holdouts, linebacker Darryl Talley and cornerback Derrick Burroughs.

LeRoy Irvin, a two-time Pro Bowl cornerback entering his 10th NFL season, is enjoying his new role as dean of the Los Angeles Rams' secondary.

Irvin, who will be 32 next month and has one year left on a three-year contract, half believes it.

"My honest opinion is all I can do is look at this as my last year, especially with the Rams," he said. "I see all the young guys out there who have some great talent and all I see is them getting better."

"I'd love to finish my contract with the Rams, but I doubt I'll even be in their plans next year."

Miami Dolphins
The signing of first round draft choice Louis Oliver means a move back to strong safety for Dolphins defensive back Jarvis Williams.

Williams and Oliver started together in the University of Florida secondary in 1986-87. On Thursday, Oliver's first full day in training camp, they lined up side-by-side with the Dolphins' first team.

"I hope it's like that for years to come," Williams said. "I think it'd be great for the team, because we play well together. Once we get in the groove and get everything down pat, I think we can make a lot of things happen."

Williams, named the Dolphins' rookie of the year and outstanding defensive back last season, started all 16 games at free safety. But the faster Oliver will play there now.

Dravecky ...

"If it weren't for that (faith) in my life, I never would have been able to get through this," he said.

"Without Jesus Christ, there is no story. I think it's important that I say that because it's the most important thing in my life."

Standing alongside him in his moment of triumph were some of the people he's most inspired during his ordeal — his teary-eyed wife Jan, their daughter, a young leukemia patient named Alex wearing a Giants cap as Dravecky held him, and Craig.

"I've seen a lot in baseball," Craig said. "Five World Series, and I saw Don Larsen throw a perfect game. But I don't think I've ever seen any game that had as much drama as this game today."

Even Craig didn't expect his former — and, after Thursday, perhaps current — staff ace to breeze through the emotional game the way he did.

Dravecky struck out five and issued just one walk, throwing 58 strikes among his 92 pitches. From the moment he emerged from the clubhouse to a battery of cameras and a noisy ovation, he was in total command.

His pinpoint control and hard-hit cut fastballs, clocked as high as 88 mph, weakened in the eighth when Luis Quinones hit a hanging slider for a three-run homer. But finishing with five hits allowed in eight innings was a remarkable result for a pitcher who hadn't appeared since May 28, 1988.

"He had great command and great control," Craig marveled. "The composure he had today, going through the stuff he's had to go through in the last year, was just incredible."

Even the opposition was impressed. "I could have used the win more than him," said Reds starter and loser Scott Scudder, 2-5. "But just to watch him was encouraging to me, to watch that great comeback."

The comeback began slowly, with Dravecky needing help from a therapist to pick up his arm and move it in circles. By January he could toss a football, but getting out major-league hitters was still a dream.

But his persistence and hard training began paying dividends late this spring, and Dravecky was outstanding in three minor-league starts during his rehabilitation over the past month, throwing three complete games.

Fittingly, his battery mate was long-time friend and teammate Terry Kennedy, his catcher with the Padres.

"I was locked in today," he said. "It was Terry Kennedy and myself."

Kennedy, a 10-year veteran who recently has talked of retirement, was clearly elated. He even drove in the game's first run with a second-inning groundout after Pat Sheridan's triple.

"This was one of the highlights of my career," he said. "I haven't had that much fun playing in years."

Nor has Dravecky, who acknowledged two thunderous curtain calls with a smile and wave of his cap after Steve Bedrosian replaced him.

"It was extremely special," said the miracle worker. "It was a very special time for me."

"I'm not one to shed many tears, but this has been a tremendously emotional experience for me."

Overshadowed by Dravecky's comeback was the hitting of Giants third baseman Matt Williams, who drove in three runs with a double and a two-run homer, his sixth. Williams, sent down to Class AAA Phoenix in May after a miserable showing at the plate, is batting a respectable .254 since his recall on July 23.

Will Clark boosted his hitting streak to 13 games when he doubled and scored in the third.

Bedrosian struck out two hitters in the ninth for his 15th save, one he wanted badly for Dravecky.

"I'd have to say it was one of the biggest saves of my career," he said. "I really wanted it."

Ryan Loses No-Hit Bid In 9th

The Associated Press

Nolan Ryan flirted with a no-hitter once again

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Nolan Ryan, who once threw four no-hitters in a two-year span, now has five near-misses in two seasons.

For the fifth time in his career, Ryan lost a no-hit bid in the ninth inning when Dave Bergman singled with one out as the Texas Rangers beat the Detroit Tigers 4-1 Thursday night.

"Don't get me wrong. I was glad I got the hit," Bergman said. "I was doing the best I could, but I was almost feeling, 'What am I doing on the same field with Nolan Ryan?'"

Bergman, a .260 batter, lined an 0-1 pitch for an opposite-field single to left.

"Anytime you come that close you're disappointed, but I realize the last six outs are the toughest," Ryan said. "In that situation, you just hope if they hit the ball good, they hit it at somebody."

Three other times this season, the 42-year-old Ryan took a no-hitter into the eighth inning, and he also went 8½ innings with a no-hitter last season when he was still with the Houston Astros. But in each case he failed to pitch his sixth no-hitter and become the oldest to throw a no-hitter.

Cy Young was 41 when he did it in 1908. Ryan threw his record fifth no-hitter for Houston in 1981 after he pitched four in a two-year span for California from 1973-75.

Ryan, 13-7, struck out 13, giving him 4,986 for his career, and won his 286th game. He also passed the 200-strikeout mark for the 13th season and the 10-strikeout mark in a game for the 193rd time in his 21-year career.

After Bergman singled, Matt Nokes followed with a double. That finished Ryan, who threw 149 pitches on a 78-degree night, cool for Texas in August.

Jeff Russell relieved and got his 25th save, giving up Chet Lemon's RBI grounder.

Texas got a run in the first on Harold Baines' RBI double off Doyle Alexander, 5-13. Ruben Sierra's 19th home run in the sixth, Chad Kreuter's second homer in the seventh and Pete Incaviglia's 15th homer in the eighth made it 4-0.

Mariners 3, Angels 2
California fell into a virtual first-place tie with Oakland on the eve their three-game series as Jim Presley led off the 10th inning with his 11th homer for Seattle.

Presley, who also beat the Angels on July 31 with an eighth-inning homer, handed the loss to Chuck Finley, 13-8. Finley struck out 12 and held the Mariners to three hits through nine innings, including a two-run homer by Henry Cotto.

Mike Jackson, 4-5, worked out of a ninth-inning jam and Mike Schooler, on his 27th birthday, pitched the 10th for his 23rd save.

Seattle starter Scott Bankhead left the game after seven innings, his 15th consecutive start without a loss. He has won a club-record nine consecutive decisions in that span.

Athletics 4, White Sox 1
Oakland prepped for the California series as Storm Davis shut out Chicago for six innings and Dennis Eckersley earned his 23rd save in 25 opportunities.

Davis, 12-5, allowed six hits in six innings and won for the ninth time in his last 13 starts.

Gene Nelson pitched the seventh but was lifted after allowing a one-out double to Carlton Fisk in the eighth. Eckersley gave up an RBI groundout by Carlos Martinez, making the score 2-1. He retired the side in order in the ninth, reducing his earned-run average to 1.07 and earning his ninth save in his last 10 opportunities.

Rickey Henderson gave the Athletics some insurance with a two-run single in the top of the ninth.

Brewers 10, Indians 3
Milwaukee routed Cleveland as Joey Meyer drove in a career-high five runs, Robin Yount had four hits and Charlie O'Brien had three RBI singles.

Ted Higuera, 8-4, won his fifth straight start, allowing two runs on 10 hits in 5 2-3 innings before leaving because of a sore left ankle. He has an ERA of 2.02 in the five starts.

Meyer knocked in three runs with a two-out double in the first inning, then added sacrifice flies in the fifth and seventh innings.

The Brewers, who finished with 18 hits, added a run in the third on Yount's RBI single, and scored three more in the fifth on an RBI double by Yount, Meyer's first sacrifice fly and O'Brien's RBI infield single.

The Indians scored two in the fifth on Cory Snyder's 13th home run.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

The Mets, who have flirted with first place all season, looked like the real thing Thursday, sweeping a doubleheader from the St. Louis Cardinals, 5-1 and 6-4.

Kevin McReynolds homered in both games and the Mets, cheered on by a sellout crowd of 48,712, won for the seventh time in eight tries. New York pulled to within 3½ games of division-leading Chicago, while St. Louis fell 5½ behind.

McReynolds hit a solo homer and Keith Miller had a two-run double in the third inning of the opener. The Mets beat Jose DeLeon, 11-11, for the first time in four decisions this season.

Ron Darling, 10-9, gave up seven hits and an unearned run. He has pitched consecutive complete games for the first time in his career.

Giants 4, Reds 3
Dave Dravecky, pitching for the first time in the major leagues since cancer surgery last year, got the victory by holding Cincinnati to one hit for seven innings before tiring in the eighth.

Dravecky, 33, had a cancerous tumor removed from his left arm and doctors told him his career was finished. But he worked up through the minors and made a stunning comeback in front of a cheering home crowd of 34,810.

Luis Quinones hit a three-run homer in the eighth, pulling the Reds within 4-3. But Steve Bedrosian finished for his 15th save.

Matt Williams drove in three runs for San Francisco. Scott Scudder, 2-5, took the loss.

Reds manager Pete Rose was ejected in the seventh inning during an argument with home plate umpire Tom Hallion.

Phillies 16, Cubs 13
Philadelphia and Chicago, who have played the two highest-scoring games in major-league history, got into another wild one at Wrigley Field.

Ricky Jordan drove in four runs and helped the Phillies rally from an early 10-3 deficit. The Cubs outthrew Philadelphia 18-17 with two home runs by Ryne Sandberg, who has five homers in his last four games.

In 1922, Chicago beat the Phillies 26-23. In 1979, Philadelphia won 23-22. Both games were at Wrigley Field.

Padres 13, Astros 3
Tony Gwynn drove in four runs and had three of San Diego's 17 hits against visiting Houston.

The Padres are 58-57, the first time they've been over .500 since June 6. Garry Templeton, who homered, and Roberto Alomar each got three hits.

Ricky Harris, 5-6, gave up six hits in eight innings. He has seven major-league victories and is 4-0 against the Astros.

Baseball Notes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti has turned down a request to consider reinstating "Shoeless" Joe Jackson to major league baseball, saying he did not "wish to play God with history."

Jackson, who died in 1951 at the age of 63 in his native South Carolina, was one of eight Chicago White Sox players banned from baseball for their part in the infamous 1919 "Black Sox Scandal."

In a letter to South Carolina state Sen. Ernest Passailaigue, Giamatti said he and other commissioners have received letters urging them to review Jackson's case. Passailaigue made the letter public on Thursday.

"For good reason, there has not been a reconsideration," Giamatti wrote. "I share the view that a resurrection by me of the case today would not be appropriate."

In his July 31 letter to Passailaigue, Giamatti said the events around the 1919 World Series "and its aftermath cannot be recreated, in my opinion, in sufficient detail and depth to provide a firm enough basis to take an action today that would change Mr. Jackson's place in history."

Yankees Claims Gossage

Rich Gossage was claimed off waivers by the Yankees on Thursday, five years after the 38-year-old reliever ended a stormy tenure with New York by telling owner George Steinbrenner he would not be returning.

"Goose is very happy to be coming back to the Yankees," said agent Jerry Kapstein, reached by phone in San Diego.

The move comes despite comments made earlier this week by Yankees Manager Dallas Green, who wondered if Gossage would be of any use to his club. The reliever was released Friday by the San Francisco Giants.

"The Giants let him go and they're in a pennant race, that doesn't speak well for him," Green said Sunday.

Top Matchups

Boston at Baltimore, two-night doubleheader (5:05 p.m. EDT). The Orioles try to hold onto first place in the American League East as Bob Milacki, 6-9, and Pete Harnisch, 1-5, get starts. Roger Clemens, 11-8, and Mike Smithson, 6-9, pitch for the Red Sox.

Stats, Streaks & Swings

Henry Cotto's home run Thursday gave him three homers on the last three pitches thrown to him. ... Scott Bankhead has not lost in his last 16 starts. He has a nine-game winning streak. ... Jerome Walton extended his hitting streak to 21 games Thursday. ... Philadelphia scored 16 runs Thursday after being shut out in its previous two games. ... Ryne Sandberg has hit five home runs in four games.

Doyle Alexander has won just twice in his last 21 starts. ... Opposing runners have stolen 10 straight bases against Texas and 19 of the last 21. ... Chuck Finley has not allowed a home run in the first inning of his 57 major-league starts.

Cannell Changes TV Course With 'Top Of The Hill' Series

By Kathryn Baker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Stephen J. Cannell has created a couple dozen television series, among them at least two sure to be included in any history of television.

In 1974, Cannell's "The Rockford Files" premiered, starring James Garner as TV's first truly realistic private eye — one who ran credit checks on prospective clients and quit cases immediately upon suffering any kind of physical threat. The critics loved it and so did audiences.

A decade later, Cannell created another "different" series, featuring a rag-tag band of misfits who joined together to fight the bad guys. "The A-Team" made a cultural icon out of Mr. T. The show got huge ratings, but the critics hated it, labeling it cartoonish, violent junk TV.

Later, Cannell followed with "Hunter," a hit in ratings that was ignored or panned by the critics.

Cannell rebounded with the critics two seasons ago with the simmering, cerebral "Wiseguy," starring Ken Wahl as a federal agent deep undercover in various crime venues. It's up for five Emmy awards.

This coming season, Cannell takes another turn with "Top of the Hill," a thoughtful political drama starring William Katt ("Greatest American Hero") as an idealistic Californian who steps in to take over his ailing father's congressional seat.

The show will premiere next month on CBS.

Cannell told a meeting of television critics that the show, which has been in his mind for a few years, was based on the real-life activist congressman Leo J. Ryan, D-Calif., who was killed by followers of the Rev. Jim Jones when he went to Guyana to investigate Jones' religious cult.

Ryan, said Cannell, was an advocate for his constituency, not a delegate. "A delegate says, you elect me, I'll go to Washington, I'll be your delegate. In two years, I'll come back, put my record before you and you'll decide whether or not you want to return me to the House. The advocate says, I will be your advocate. I will go there, and if there is anything where you cannot get help, where you are unable to use the system correctly to benefit yourself in a situation where you've been wronged, then I will be your advocate."

Katt's Congressman Tom Bell is a Democrat, Cannell said, though Bell's leaning to the liberal or conservative side will vary depending on the issue with which he's presented. In the future, those issues will include child custody conflicts, the media feeding-frenzy over ethics violations, and the crumbling of inner-city schools.

Katt told the television critics he himself has not considered running for office, but he would vote for a man like Bell, "who listens to his own conscience."

Cannell will have five shows on the air when the new season opens. "Hunter" continues on NBC, "Top of the Hill" and "Wiseguy" are on CBS, and he has the continuing "21 Jump Street" and the new "Booker" on Fox. This is not a record for Cannell. He had five shows on the air in 1985, "The A-Team," "Riptide," "Hardcastle and McCormick," "Hunter" and "Stingray."

Cannell, who writes many of the episodes of his shows, said he prefers brainier stuff to the shoot-'em-ups like "A-Team."

"When I get to the part in a script where I have to do the old shoot-out or the car chase or whatever it is," he said, "that's when I have to keep hitting myself in the head, you know, because the fun part is to write the characters and the relationships and the cerebral drama."

Cannell thinks "the audience kind of got tired of car chases. ... I think Steve Bochco ('Hill Street Blues,' 'L.A. Law'), who's a dear friend of mine, went a long way toward showing networks that you could do different kinds of programming and still entertain."

"Top of the Hill," not unlike Bochco's shows, will not shy away from making political statements, but that's not its primary purpose, Cannell said. "I don't see my role here as inflicting my sense of politics on anybody else, but rather to entertain you through good dramas dealing with good relationships."

"I wouldn't know where I will eventually go with it," Cannell said. "But what I think I'm trying to say is that I think this country could use a political figure as a hero to look up to, and hopefully, Tom Bell can be that figure."

TV's Superboy Has New Star This Year

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ORLANDO, Fla. — Actor John Newton, who portrayed television's Superboy but had real-life problems with traffic cops, is hanging up his cape.

The Superboy syndicated television series begins its second year of production Monday with a new actor who will replace Newton, officials said.

Newton played a college student who becomes the boy of steel to assist the downtrodden, like his father, Superman. Executive Producer Ilya Salkind on Thursday introduced Gerard Christopher as the new Superboy.

Newton was not entirely truthful with the sheriff and a judge in Orlando when he convinced them to tear up a traffic ticket earlier this year. He told them he had no other traffic violations and that his Superboy image would be hurt if a careless-driving citation was allowed to stand.

Later, it turned out that Newton had at least four other traffic tickets and his driver's license had been suspended twice since 1982.

Heavy Metal Rock Concert Has Its Roots In Raleigh

By L.L. Grimmer
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Organizers of a rock concert to be held this weekend in Moscow hope the event can help convince teen-agers from using drugs, a habit one organizer attributes to a seminal rock event held two decades ago — Woodstock.

"Rock musicians ushered in an age of drugs by talking about it, making it fashionable," said Wade Smith, chairman of the board of the Raleigh-based Make A Difference Foundation. "If they ushered it in, perhaps they're the ones who can usher it out."

The foundation is putting on a concert in Moscow's Lenin Stadium, which will be broadcast Sunday night on pay-per-view cable television. The foundation was formed about a year ago when a U.S. District Court judge in Raleigh ordered rock group manager Doc McGhee to do public service as his punishment for a drug conviction.

"The main idea is to have a huge anti-drug rally," said Smith. "We asked ourselves what was the most amazing thing we could do, if we've got to limit it to planet Earth."

"If we want to have a world vision of getting the anti-drug message across, the logical place is Lenin Stadium."

American rock groups Bon Jovi, Motley Crue, Cinderella, Scorpions and Skid Row are being joined by the Soviet heavy metal band, Gorky Park.

As far as he knows right now, the concert is sold-out. "There's even a black market in tickets," he said. The tickets cost about 14 rubles, which is about $20 in U.S. currency.

Smith described the groups scheduled to play in the music fest as "rock bands," though by stricter definition, they're usually put into the heavy metal category, complete with long hair, skin-tight clothes, and suggestive lyrics.

But Smith said they're the perfect vehicle for reaching teens worldwide.

"I think there's a hunger in the world for a positive anti-drug message," Smith said. "There's something positive about having athletes and musicians talk about why not to do drugs."

"If I ... in a tie, dark pinstripe suit and short gray hair and granny glasses, if I were to go over there and try to talk about drug abuse, I would imagine I'd be hooted out of the place," Smith said.

"If Jon Bon Jovi says 'Don't do drugs,' everyone will listen," he said. "The audience that Jon Bon Jovi speaks to is the audience we need to reach. We need to raise up a generation of kids who don't even try drugs the first time."

Smith said the Soviets' reactions to the Americans and the whole idea has been incredible.

"I think they're more excited than we are," he said.

The foundation is a nonprofit agency run by volunteers, Smith said.

Make A Difference Foundation officials say they don't expect to make a profit from the venture.

"We're not doing it to make money," Smith said. "If the concert is a success and the message gets to young people everywhere, we'll be happy."

"We're doing it to make a difference."

The concert is being financed through MTV and other music businesses, he said.

Smith said that if the Moscow show goes well, plans could be made for a show in the Raleigh-Durham-Chapel Hill area.

Postal Workers Leery Of Office

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ESCONDIDO, Calif. — A mailman who went on a shooting spree at his postal office, killing two co-workers before shooting himself in the head, discussed a similar 1986 massacre in Oklahoma only two days earlier.

Mail delivery was scheduled to resume today for some 17,000 households served by the substation in Orange Glen, where John Merlin Taylor opened fire Thursday morning. Several of his co-workers say they're leery of returning.

"It's not going to be easy for anybody to go back in there, but we have to," said postal clerk William Karlson. "We just have to do it."

Three psychologists were brought in by the Postal Service to counsel distraught employees, who also will be asked if they want a memorial service.

Taylor was listed as brain dead at Palomar Memorial Hospital.

Police were checking leads that suggested family problems may have played a role in his shooting spree. The 52-year-old letter carrier shot his wife, Elizabeth, to death at their Escondido home before going to the substation in northern San Diego County.

"We have no indication he was looking for a specific person or a target," said police Lt. Earl Callander.

On Tuesday, Taylor and co-worker Johnny Sims discussed a 1986 incident in which part-time letter carrier Patrick Sherrill killed 14 people and himself in a post office in Edmond, Okla.

"We were talking about something and got around to saying, 'What if something happened to one of the employees that would have gotten him mad and to go berserk?' We were just joking around," said Sims, who wasn't at work when the shooting occurred. He said he was surprised by Taylor's violent spree.

"John was a happy-go-lucky guy always. You could never make him mad," he said.

Taylor, who received numerous model-employee awards during his 27 years with the Postal Service, entered the office armed for a long siege, police said.

"He fired well over a dozen rounds and there are expended cases all over the floor," said Lt. Earl Callander. "There is also a box of about 100 rounds that apparently was going to be used for reloading."

When he arrived at 7:30 a.m., Taylor shot co-workers Ron Williams, 56, and Richard Berni, 38, who were sitting on a bench near a side entrance to the building, police said. Both men died.

He then went inside and began firing randomly, wounding clerk 30-year-old Paul Derisi in the arm, they said.

Taylor reloaded and then walked past custodian Reginald Keith.

"I saw him after he reloaded the gun and he came about four or five feet from me," Keith said. "He was in a daze and had the gun pointed to the ground. I just turned around and walked out the back real quick."

Taylor fired the weapon several more times before shooting himself in the head, Callander said.

Taylor recently was considered for another employee honor, but he declined the nomination and asking that the award be given to someone else, said Bob Henley, the postal station manager.

"I've had communications with John Taylor and I told him, 'John, if all my employees were as good as you, I'd be the Postmaster General by now,'" Henley said.

Henley said Taylor pointed the gun at him and shot in his direction, but said, "I'm not going to shoot you."

After the shooting, authorities went to Taylor's home and found his 50-year-old wife in bed, dead from multiple gunshot wounds.

Derisi was treated at Palomar hospital and released. Phyllis Devito, 37, of Escondido was released after treatment for facial cuts, hospital spokeswoman Pat Rarus said.

Researchers Say Med Schools Failing To Meet Health Needs

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Medical schools and teaching hospitals have failed to respond to some of the most pressing public health problems facing the United States, a group of researchers charged Friday in one of the country's most widely read medical journals.

Those problems include skyrocketing medical costs, an infant mortality rate worse than that of Hong Kong, a glut of specialists, a dearth of generalists, doctor-caused illnesses and the spread of drug addiction, the group wrote in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

"I think the public trust is a very complicated and broad trust and that the performance of academic medicine has been uneven," said Dr. Stephen A. Schroeder, an author of the paper and chief of general internal medicine at the University of California, San Francisco, School of Medicine. "In some areas, it has done spectacularly; and in others, it hasn't paid much attention."

The article, among the first to emerge from a five-year project aimed at prodding academic medicine to broaden its approach to public health, urged medical leaders to reach beyond mere biomedical research — or risk losing public trust and funding.

Preventive medicine should receive greater priority, the researchers said: Public health could be improved dramatically by even small advances in understanding how to discourage smoking or encourage screening for diseases such as hypertension and cancer.

Medical school teaching must extend beyond the hospital to nursing homes and patients' homes, the researchers said, noting that medicine should be practiced in the future in those places in light of the aging population and changes in health care economics.

"Academic medicine ... has the opportunity to exert leadership to help our society come to grips with these (social and economic) problems," Schroeder said in a telephone interview. "... I think, on the whole, the leadership has been lacking."

Schroeder's critique, coming at a time of re-evaluation in many medical schools, was received coolly by some members of academic medicine. While some conceded a need for a broader focus, they said Schroeder placed unreasonable expectations on their institutions.

Dr. Robert Petersdorf, president of the Association of American Medical Colleges, wrote in an accompanying editorial in the journal that academic medicine could not be held accountable for such social ills as infant mortality, teen-age pregnancy and drug abuse.

 There's nothing wrong with being an aggressive bidder. However, you and your partner had better possess sound play technique if you still want to be solvent by year's end.

North's sequence showed a limit raise in spades (10-12 points) with only three trumps. However, because of the square hand, no intermediate cards and lack of a spade honor, we feel a raise to two spades would have been more than adequate. That would probably have been the final contract.

West led the queen of hearts and declarer, Dora Brechner of New York and Tel Aviv, was not thrilled with her contract. However, there were some chances. The queen of hearts was allowed to win the first trick, and the heart continuation was ruffed. Declarer ducked a club and West shifted to a diamond.

Declarer rose with dummy's ace and finessed the queen of trumps, breathing a sigh of relief when that held. After cashing the ace of trumps, she crossed to the king of clubs and ruffed another heart. To avoid having a winner ruffed should a defender be able to discard a diamond, declarer cashed the king of diamonds, then the ace of clubs. When West showed out but could not ruff, all was well. Declarer's last club was ruffed in dummy and the king of hearts was led from the table. Whether or not East was able to ruff this trick, declarer's last trump was destined to become the fulfilling trick. As the cards lay, East had to follow and declarer was able to score her trump by ruffing. On the last trick, the defenders had a field day—West's winning diamond was topped by East's master trump!

Survivors Reive Mexican Train Crash That Left 112 People Dead

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GUASAVE, Mexico — Dozens of survivors of a train wreck, many bandaged and bruised, told of how they fought for their lives when their passenger cars plunged into a river, killing 112 people.

Red Cross officials said 239 people were injured, 39 seriously, when the train bound from the beach resort of Mazatlan to Mexicali near the U.S. border fell into the San Rafael River 15 miles south of Guasave Wednesday.

"We had to push and pull as the cars filled with water," said Felipe Rodriguez who was riding in one of the coaches.

"I found one of the girls, but ..." he said almost sobbing in a television interview Thursday night. Rodriguez lost his wife and three daughters, ages 2 months and 7 and 12 years.

No Americans were reported among the dead, said Dan Sainz, the U.S. vice consul in Mazatlan. However, bodies were still being found, he said.

The second-class train, known as "The Burro" because it stops at every station, fell into the river in northern Mexico before dawn Wednesday when a bridge it was crossing collapsed.

A week of the heaviest rains in 50 years had flooded large areas of southern Sinaloa state on the Pacific coast and a few hours before the train passed a small dam three miles upstream broke.

Federal Highways police said in a preliminary report the rain had weakened the railbeds, causing the train to sway sharply. The flood-battered narrow bridge, about 30 yards long, couldn't stand the stress and caved in.

Carlos Orozco Sosa, director of Mexican National Railways, told reporters the bridge, made of steel and wood over concrete pylons, had been inspected a month before and was found safe.

He said 600 to 700 passengers were riding the 11-car Pacific Railways train on its regular 700-mile run from Mazatlan to Mexicali, across the border from Calexico, Calif. The line is part of the government-owned rail system.

Some victims were battered to death inside the cars by the plunge. Others drowned and some were swept away by the muddy churning waters of the river, which had over-run its banks.

Some passengers died or became very sick after swallowing diesel fuel that spilled into the river from the overturned engine. Several suffered chemical burns from the fuel.

Miriam Partida Santos, 17, whose 2-year-old daughter Cynthia Anabel drowned, said it was so crowded that people were sleeping on the floor.

As the car she was in fell into the river, "we hit the ceiling and she drowned," Mrs. Partida said. "I could hear her drowning and you could hear the other people around drowning. We were drowning and the windows were closed."

"I felt it hit once and didn't pay any attention. It hit again and it fell into the water. You could hear the cars falling," said Gaudencio Carino, 33, who suffered a broken foot. "I was not asleep and conscious of everything, that's why I was able to get out."

Many survivors stood on top of the cars in the middle of the river, waiting until sunrise for help.

Rescue was hampered by rain and flooding. By Thursday, however, the floodwaters had receded and the level of the river was steadily falling.

Gov. Francisco Labastida Ochoa said 71 of the bodies identified late Thursday were flown in two military Hercules transport planes to their home states in Nayarit, Jalisco, Oaxaca and Guanajuato. All bodies identified so far were those of Mexicans.

Relatives from many states crowded Guasave and Guamuchil, another small town nearby where survivors and victims were taken.

Labastida ordered free transportation for all relatives and survivors back to their hometowns.

The derailed cars were pulled out of the river by a crane and work crews expect to rebuild the bridge and the tracks by Sunday. But service will not resume before Wednesday, officials said.

Three foreigners were known to have survived. Teresita Rubio at Turismo Tagore here identified them only as two men and a woman from Manchester, England, who came to her travel agency for help, washed the mud off their clothes, got some food and headed for San Diego by bus.

European Satellite Effort Fails

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PARIS — Two efforts to boost the Hipparcos star-mapping satellite into its final orbit have failed, the European Space Agency said today.

The agency said more attempts were planned Saturday and Sunday. The satellite was launched Tuesday night by an Ariane rocket. It is in a safe orbit and all other systems are operating normally, the agency said.

But if not placed in a higher orbit soon, the satellite will be pulled back to earth.

The satellite, launched from the European Space Agency's center in Kourou, French Guiana, is on a mission to plot with unprecedented precision the position and motion of 120,000 stars.

Noriega Says He Won't Bow To U.S.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PANAMA CITY, Panama — Strongman Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega said his regime will not yield to U.S. pressure that he quit as Panama's Defense Forces chief.

"Panama will not bow to the law of force that those barbarians from the North, their lackeys and tame politicians are trying to impose on it," he said Thursday night, referring to his Panamanian opponents.

The comments were Noriega's first reaction to a weeklong series of confrontations between his Defense Forces and U.S. Southern Command troops that included arrests on both sides and the blocking of nearby Fort Amador by American soldiers.

U.S. troops have been conducting exercises to defend the Panama Canal under the 1977 treaties, and Panamanian troops in some instances have been shadowing them.

Addressing a group of about 20 retired military officers, Noriega reiterated earlier accusations the United States wants to replace him with a "docile" government to elude treaty obligations to turn the Panama Canal over to Panama.

"You," Noriega said pointing at the retired officers, "are front-row witnesses of the aggressive and arrogant policies of the United States towards Panama."

But he said Panama "will not bow, will not humiliate itself, will not give up its project of liberating itself (of American soldiers) in the face of injustice or arrogance."

The group of officers, believed to have been founded recently by Noriega, calls itself the executive committee of the Organization of Military Men for Democracy, Integration and the Liberation of Latin American and the Caribbean. The Bush administration and opposition politicians have been trying to force out Noriega since two federal grand juries in Florida indicted him on drug trafficking and money laundering charges last year.

U.S. efforts have included diplomatic pressure and trade and economic sanctions against Panama. But the steps have yet to budge Noriega.
