

Assembly May Be Called Back In Special Session

By Dennis Patterson

RALEIGH — Just when you thought it was over, there may be more.

The 1989 legislative session appears likely to add a few more days in several weeks when North Carolina lawmakers say they could be called back into session to consider a regional compact for hazardous waste disposal and veto power for the governor.

The adjournment Sunday morning wrapped up the General Assembly's longest session in history, a session that included a massive highway-building package, higher pay for teachers and state employees and the closest effort in 200 years to give the governor veto power.

Lawmakers maneuvered for 215 calendar days, surpassing the previous record for session length of 190 days set in the 1983 session. But despite leadership changes in both chambers and a revamped House committee system that sometimes slowed work, the General Assembly fell short of the most legislative work days. Legislators met on 138 days, in third place behind the record 160 days set in 1971 — a redistricting year.

Gov. Jim Martin's attempt to win passage of a constitutional amendment for gubernatorial veto fell short in the House after winning relatively easy passage in the Senate.

"We came awfully close, so close that it is still alive," Martin said Saturday. "It's available whenever we get the votes to pass it."

"I believe any time we get 72 votes (the three-fifths vote needed to pass a constitutional amendment) for veto, we ought to bring it up, whether it's in a special session or the short session," House Speaker Joe Mavretic said.

Mavretic released most of the members shortly after midnight, ratified the final bills and declared the session adjourned after a voice vote at 12:26 a.m. Sunday. The clocks in the Legislature had been ceremonially stopped at 4 p.m. Saturday, the time for adjournment officially set by a joint resolution of the House and Senate.

In the final hours, legislators waited for the printing of a lengthy bill setting out what issues will be studied between now and the short session next May. As their numbers dwindled, lawmakers also removed an amendment on bidding for a contract to distribute liquor to state ABC stores and engaged in heated debate over changes to the open meeting law.

An open meetings debate ended when the House, led by Republicans, failed to agree on a compromise that would have required Martin to open some of the budget deliberations in the executive branch to the public, as well as bring most legislative meetings under the state's Open Meetings Law.

Legislative leaders held a slim hope that the open meetings issue could be brought up in the short session next year.

Mavretic, who formed a coalition of Republicans and dissident Democrats to unseat four-term House Speaker Liston Ramsey on the session's opening day, said the length of the session had given merit to his proposal to limit legislative sessions.

"If we had been able to get our work done by the 30th of June (the adjournment date originally predicted by House and Senate leaders) then we could say there is no need to limit sessions," Mavretic said. "But the length of this session is the other side of the coin to a June 30 adjournment. I think it adds weight to the proposition that we need to limit sessions."

Mavretic also said he intended to make some adjustments in the process between now and next May's short session "to make us more efficient."

The session drew accolades, particularly for the $9.1 billion, 13.5-year highway program based on a 5.4-cents-per-gallon gasoline tax increase, which Martin called "the biggest boost for transportation in the history of the state."

Sen. Ted Kaplan, D-Forsyth, the Senate Majority Leader, called the package "probably the landmark legislation of this session."

Senate President Pro Tem Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, said the package will put more money into highways than all the bond issues approved since the state first took responsibility for road construction.

The session also marked a step forward in environmental legislation and in tax fairness, as lawmakers agreed to rewrite the state income tax laws for the first time in 50 years, removing 700,000 poor people from the tax rolls and reducing taxes for nearly two-thirds of North Carolinians.

Environmental legislation was topped by a renewed quest for a hazardous waste treatment facility, new laws and funding to clean up leaking underground petroleum tanks and a wide-ranging policy for handling solid waste that calls for at least a 25 percent recycling goal by 1993.

"It's been a great session," said Barnes. "The best one we've had in North Carolina since 1933."

Mavretic's Victory Creates New Look

By F. Alan Boyce

RALEIGH — Since Rep. Joe Mavretic ousted four-term House Speaker Liston Ramsey in an unprecedented coup by Republicans and disgruntled Democrats, the House has labored under sweeping changes that may be felt for many years.

The 65-54 vote put Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, atop a sometimes treacherous coalition whose hallmark — and sometimes its Achilles heel — was openness and participation by every House member, including Republicans once shut out of the process.

The House action also cast in shadow the Senate changes that included the election of the first Republican lieutenant governor this century. Lt. Gov. Jim Gardner saw his powers shifted by Democrats to President Pro Tem Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, and remained in the background most of the session.

Mavretic, meanwhile, instituted a committee system based on the one in Congress — a system that confused members who had grown used to the previous one. Mavretic declared war on "pork barrel," vowing to eliminate the discretionary funds Republicans had charged Democrats with manipulating for political ends.

Ramsey Democrats remained divisive, sometimes quietly grumbling and at others openly challenging the new system. They formed a "Kennel Club" named because they were in the legislative doghouse and, late in the session, circulated rumors they would try to overthrow Mavretic. No overthrow materialized.

The 54 Democrats argued against House rules that helped entrench Mavretic's power and debated at length adjournment rules that would make further inroads by letting Mavretic keep committees meeting between sessions.

The Kennel Club also tried to ally itself with the Senate during negotiations over a $9.1 billion highway funding package.

Mavretic agreed that most of the acrimony came from his election. But he said it wouldn't last.

"I suspect that after Labor Day, after members get home and things get settled down, they will take a look back at what's gone on here," he said. "And I suspect a significant number of the Kennel Club will look back and start thinking about what has been done and what will be best for them."

Mavretic said the turmoil has been worth it.

"I believe that openness is now beyond question in the House and that has had some ripple effect on the Senate," he said.

Gov. Jim Martin, who helped instigate the House changes through his campaigning against the old network, lauded the new openness, saying, "decision-making was spread more widely. ... There was more openness than we've seen in many years."

But the governor was uncertain how the coalition would pan out in the future, particularly in 1991, when the next speaker will be elected.

"It may be that then, certainly before too long after that, the House will return to a system where the majority party caucus decides what the leadership is going to be," he said.

"I think we will still be better off because the message will be indelible for a while, for several decades at least, that the speaker and the team associated with the speaker are going to have to be more open ...," he said. "I think the message will be firmly conveyed in the House that the leadership has to be more respectful of the members, including the minority members."

The Associated Press

Martin said it was unfortunate that the openness meant a sometimes ponderous process, particularly in putting together the state budget.

"My impression is that is doomed to take a long time until we find some way to get movement in it," he said.

And it's not just the open process, Martin added.

"Some members who are very skilled at procedure will try to hold off until the end just so they can get things they want in a crisis situation," he said.

Mavretic, however, vowed to keep working on the new system.

"I wouldn't want to change the committee structure," he said. "The lessons we learned from the long session will be used to make some changes in '91, but not as dramatic as '89."

Legislature Kills Road Aggregate Bill

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The General Assembly has killed an amendment that would have required American aggregate to be used in North Carolina's massive highway project — a program that already requires the use of American steel and concrete.

"No sooner did we pass this bill (the highway program), than people started grabbing at it, seeing what's in it for them," said Rep. Liston Ramsey, D-Madison. "I can't go along with it because it will cost the taxpayers hundreds of millions of dollars."

The Senate initially endorsed the American aggregate provision on a close vote, but reversed itself when the measure came back from the House.

Sen. Aaron Plyler, D-Union, asked that the rules be suspended so he could attach the aggregate provision to an unrelated bill, but the Senate only gave his proposal a 26-19 vote, short of the two-thirds needed to suspend the rules.

"We've all been lobbied about this, it's not a new fight," Sen. George Daniel, D-Caswell, said during the debate over the issue. "I would point out to you ... that if this is allowed to go on and is allowed to pass, we would be cheating the taxpayers of this state."

Gardner's First Session Sets Tone Of Bipartisan Quietness

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — North Carolina's first Republican lieutenant governor elected this century has won bipartisan praise for serving as an even-handed presiding officer in the state Senate.

And lawmakers even said some of the changes that have occurred this legislative session — more openness and less pork barrel — can be attributed in part to Jim Gardner's successful campaign last year.

"Of all the politicians in the state, he comes out smelling like a rose," said Sen. Jim Johnson, R-Cabarrus. "You can't criticize a man for not driving the truck if you take away from him the keys."

When the Senate's Democratic majority took away the lieutenant governor's traditional legislative powers in January, Gardner campaigned as a fighter against Democratic power brokers, but he avoided legislative battles.

Losing the power to appoint Senate committee chairmen and to assign bills to committees, Gardner — the first Republican to be elected lieutenant governor in this century — was relegated to his constitutional duty of presiding over the Senate.

Gardner pledged to be Gov. Jim Martin's legislative champion, but then waited months to back the governor's call for a higher sales tax.

Gardner not only acknowledges that he wasn't a legislative player, but says that if Senate Democrats had left him in charge, things would have gone better.

"If Jim Gardner had the powers that other lieutenant governors had, we would have been out of here long before now," he said in an interview published Sunday. "The Democrats did it. It's their game. They took me out of it. So they will have to take all the responsibility for it."

Democrats contend that, despite the lieutenant governor's reduced powers, Gardner could have had more influence if he had tried.

"No officeholder has any excuse to sit around like a potted plant and do nothing," said Senate President Pro Tem Henson Barnes, D-Wayne. "As far as getting the Senate to pass legislation, he did not make contact with any of us. ... He elected to not try and influence legislation, and he didn't."

Gardner met "occasionally" with the 13 Republican senators as they developed their legislative strategy, but rank-and-file Democrats say that he never courted them.

"To the best of my knowledge, he has not participated in the legislative process," said state Sen. Alex Sands, D-Rockingham. "If you get a call from the lieutenant governor's office, you go. I never was called."

One of Gardner's campaign pledges was to ensure that state business was "done out in the open for everyone to see." While he can take credit for making openness an issue, he hasn't been directly involved in efforts to limit broad legislative exemptions to the state's Open Meetings Act.

When that effort bogged down in the Senate, Gardner's response was to send a letter to Democratic senators rather than lobbying them personally. And when House and Senate members were trying to work out a last-minute compromise on the issue late Friday night, neither Gardner or any member of his staff was around.

Gardner pledged to hold regular news conferences as lieutenant governor. While he does make himself accessible to reporters who seek him out, he held only three news conferences on legislative topics during the seven-month session.

Keeping a lower profile made for better relations with Senate Democrats, he says.

Gardner, who spends much of his time outside the legislature heading up the N.C. Drug Cabinet, can claim some partial success in his "war on drugs."

On the campaign trail, he proposed a new 200-member State Bureau of Drug Enforcement, no parole for drug dealers, a mandatory 28-year prison sentence for those who sell drugs near schools, mandatory drug-education classes in public schools, and incentives for North Carolina businesses that have drug-education programs for their workers.

Just before legislative adjournment, one of Gardner's proposals — mandatory anti-drug classes for public schools — was enacted. Earlier in the session, the legislature approved a measure imposing the death penalty for deaths involving cocaine.

Armed Robbery

Greenville police on Sunday arrested one of three men reportedly involved in an armed robbery incident in the 200 block of Pine Street.

Officers R.E. Jones and N.B. Rice said Larry Neil, 18, of 1310 Myrtle Ave. was arrested on armed robbery charges at about 3:30 p.m. following a short foot chase on Burlington Road.

The officers said Neil was charged in connection with an incident reported to the department about 3 p.m. in which a Dependable Cab Co. driver reported three men took a quantity of cash and the keys to the cab from him at gun-point on Pine Street.

Jones said the driver told investigators that he picked up the three men at 1311 W. Third St. and first drove them to 1310B Myrtle Ave., then to the 200 block of Pine Street when the passengers produced a pistol and took his money and keys.

Rice said as a result of Neil's arrest, officers confiscated 40 vials of "crack" cocaine valued at $1,200, a .25 caliber pistol and other items from a guest room at the Best Value motel on Memorial Drive.

Man Released

A citizen of South Africa was released from the Pitt County jail Friday on a $50,000 secured bond following his arrest last week on charges of securities violations and three counts of writing worthless checks.

Okert Jacobus Venter, 44, of Grimesland was arrested Tuesday in Grimesland by the Pitt County Sheriff's Department and charged with the sale of an unregistered security and also the sale of a security by an unregistered dealer, said Gene Cella, chief enforcement attorney for the security division of the N.C. Secretary of State's Office.

Cella said each charge is a Class I felony and each carries a maximum five-year sentence. Cella said an investigation into the matter is continuing.

East Carolina University officials hope to have an architect for a $24 million addition to Joyner Library in place by mid-October and say construction on the project could begin sometime in 1990.

Jo Ann Bell, Joyner Library's acting director, said today that "we're already beginning to get in place a process through which to select an architect to plan the facility (and) we plan to move very rapidly on the process."

The General Assembly last week appropriated $7 million of the $24 million officials say is needed to expand the library. Sen. Ma Basnight, D-Dare, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, said $1 million of the money would be available to ECU immediately for planning and design, with the other $6 million placed in reserve.

ECU Chancellor Richard Eakin said this morning that "it's too early for us to know" exactly what the timetable for construction of the library will be.

But Eakin said "our hope is that by next May, we'll have the initial drawings completed for the library and that if all goes well, sometime during the 1990 calendar year, we can let contracts and actually begin construction" on the library edition the chancellor has called the school's "A-No. 1 project."

And Eakin said he hopes the process of selecting an architect for the project will be completed "some time between the end of September and mid-October."

"This is an ambitious schedule and one that will be difficult to meet, but one we seek to achieve," Eakin said.

"In terms of actual construction time, I think that will depend a great deal on what the architect determines during the course of his drawings."

Dr. Bell, director of ECU's Health Science Library and acting director of academic library services, suggested that "even with the funding, we're going to be in a difficult situation for the next few years until the new facility is built." She said that because of the lack of space, the library would not be able to accept new books or other library materials after this year.

WINSTON-SALEM — With the 200th anniversary of North Carolina three months away, the postal service is getting a jump on the bicentennial with the dedication of a new stamp to the Tar Heel State.

The 25-cent commemorative stamp designed by Lexington native Bob Timberlake features a branch of dogwood, the state flower, against a black background.

Fayetteville, the site of the second convention, gets the honor of being the first Tar Heel city to dedicate the statehood stamp Aug. 22.

Cities across the state will hold second-day dedication celebrations Aug. 23 that will feature saluting guns, playing bands and balloon releases.

The statehood stamp is the second of three new issues to be dedicated in North Carolina this year.

North Carolina has a longer statehood story than do most of the 13 original states. The state convention met in Hillsboro in July of 1788 to ratify the Constitution after the Articles of Confederation had been scrapped.

But the convention turned down the document because it contained no bill of rights and because the delegates feared that state governments would be sacrificed to the strong central government set up by the Constitution.

For more than a year, North Carolina existed as an independent state outside of the Union. But when the state convention met again on Nov. 21, 1789, in Fayetteville, the Constitution was approved.

Boat Sinks

KETCHIKAN, Alaska (AP) — A 166-foot fish processor sank in Ketchikan Harbor at the southeastern point of Alaska, leaving behind an oil slick, the U.S. Coast Guard said Sunday.

The Ocean Pacific began to list slightly Saturday evening and by about 9 p.m., all crew members were safely evacuated to another fishing vessel tied up nearby, said Coast Guard Petty Officer Greg Robinson.

Four of the 68 people aboard received minor injuries, were treated at a local hospital and released. The steel-hulled vessel was carrying between 15,000 and 18,000 gallons of fuel, Robinson said.

It was not immediately known why the ship sank or how much fuel had escaped. Divers were on the scene Sunday in the 24 fathoms of water, sealing fuel vents to prevent further seepage of oil, Robinson said.

Orioles Salvage Split; Angels Dodge Sweep

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Whether it's behind the wheel or on the mound, Baltimore rookie Dave Johnson is content.

On Sunday, Johnson pitched his second straight complete game and Craig Worthington hit a two-run homer to help the Orioles beat Boston 6-1 for a split of their four-game series with the Red Sox.

Only 13 hours before the start of the game, the Red Sox won 10-8 in 13 innings with the Orioles using seven pitchers.

"I wanted to give them six or seven good innings. Going nine is a bonus," Johnson said.

Johnson, 2-1, allowed six hits, struck out three and walked two. He's the first Oriole to toss consecutive complete games since Jeff Ballard did it on Aug. 13 and 18 of last season.

Johnson, who spent eight seasons in the minor leagues, is the 10th starter the Orioles have used this season.

"Things really couldn't be any better than the way they're going right now," said Johnson, who was born in Baltimore and makes his home in a suburban trailer park. "My wife and I look at each other two or three times a day, and it's like we don't realize what's happening. Usually when I'm home I go out and drive a truck in the off-season. Now instead of going to work to drive a truck, I'm going to work at the ballpark."

The first-place Orioles lead Milwaukee, Toronto and the Red Sox by 2½ games in the American League East.

"It's all that fairy-tale stuff that everybody talks about, but I'm trying to keep it in perspective," Johnson, 29, said. "I'm a lot more confident. I wanted to be able to show I could throw strikes, to show that I'm not intimidated by being here."

Worthington homered following a walk to Randy Milligan in the second inning and Milligan hit a two-run double in the third to give the Orioles a 4-1 lead.

Angels 4, Athletics 3
Rookie Kent Anderson hit a two-run triple with two outs in the sixth inning and Claudell Washington followed with a single as California beat visiting Oakland to avert a sweep in the last meeting of the season between the AL West leaders.

The Angels snapped a three-game losing streak and pulled within one game of the AL West-leading Athletics.

Anderson, filling in for injured shortstop Dick Schofield, tripled down the right-field line to give the Angels a 3-1 lead against Dave Stewart, 16-7. Chili Davis singled to open the inning and Jack Howell drew a two-out walk.

Bert Blyleven, 12-2, allowed seven hits in seven innings for the victory and Bryan Harvey finished for his 17th save.

Dave Parker hit his 16th homer for the A's.

Brewers 5, Indians 4
Robin Yount's sacrifice fly in the 10th inning spoiled a Cleveland comeback and lifted visiting Milwaukee over the Indians.

Dan Plesac, 3-3, got the victory despite blowing a save for the first time since June 13.

Jim Gantner led off the 10th with a double off Doug Jones, 4-7, and moved to third on Glenn Braggs' sacrifice bunt. Braggs reached first when first baseman Dion James, moved in from the outfield because Pete O'Brien had left for a pinch-runner, dropped the throw from Jones. Yount hit a fly deep into the right-field corner.

Yankees 9, Twins 7
Jesse Barfield drove in four runs, including a two-run double to snap a ninth-inning tie, as New York rallied to beat Minnesota at the Metrodome.

Barfield also singled in two runs in a four-run eighth inning as the Yankees came back from a 7-3 deficit to remain 5½ games behind Baltimore.

Lee Guetterman, 4-5, pitched the final two innings for the victory.

Royals 8, Blue Jays 3

Bob Boone's bloop single scored two runs as Kansas City scored four times in the seventh inning and rookie Tom Gordon won his 14th game, leading the Royals past visiting Toronto.

Gordon, 14-4, struck out five and allowed seven hits in seven innings to become the AL's third 14-game winner. The loss went to John Cerutti, 9-6, who had won four in a row.

White Sox 6, Mariners 4

Carlton Fisk drove in four runs, three on Chicago's first home run of the month, and Ozzie Guillen's run-scoring single snapped an eighth-inning tie as the White Sox beat Seattle in the Kingdome.

Fisk hit a three-run homer in the fourth inning off starter Randy

Johnson. It was the first home run by the White Sox since July 28 when Greg Walker hit one out against California.

Reliever Bill Long, 5-5, allowed four hits and one run in five innings for the victory and Bobby Thigpen got the last three outs for his 25th save.

Tigers 4, Rangers 2

Lou Whitaker's two-out, bases-loaded single in the ninth inning lifted Detroit past Texas at Arlington.

The Tigers loaded the bases with two out, when Mike Brumley singled off reliever Kenny Rogers, 2-2. Brumley stole second, and Jeff Russell, the Rangers' bullpen ace, walked Gary Pettis and hit Dave Bergman with a pitch to load the bases.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Ten days later, Jim Clancy faced the Cincinnati Reds again. This time, it was a lot better, even though he lost again.

"I felt good today, unlike the last time," Clancy said Sunday after Cincinnati beat the Houston Astros 5-0.

On Aug. 3, he started against the Reds and Cincinnati started breaking records. Clancy allowed seven runs in the first inning without retiring a batter. The Reds finished the inning against Bob Forsch and wound up the first with 14 runs and 16 hits. Cincinnati won the game 18-2.

"They are an aggressive team and a good fastball-hitting team," said Browning, who struck out seven and walked five. "I don't give them the same pitch in the same spot twice. I move the ball in and out and make them hit my pitch."

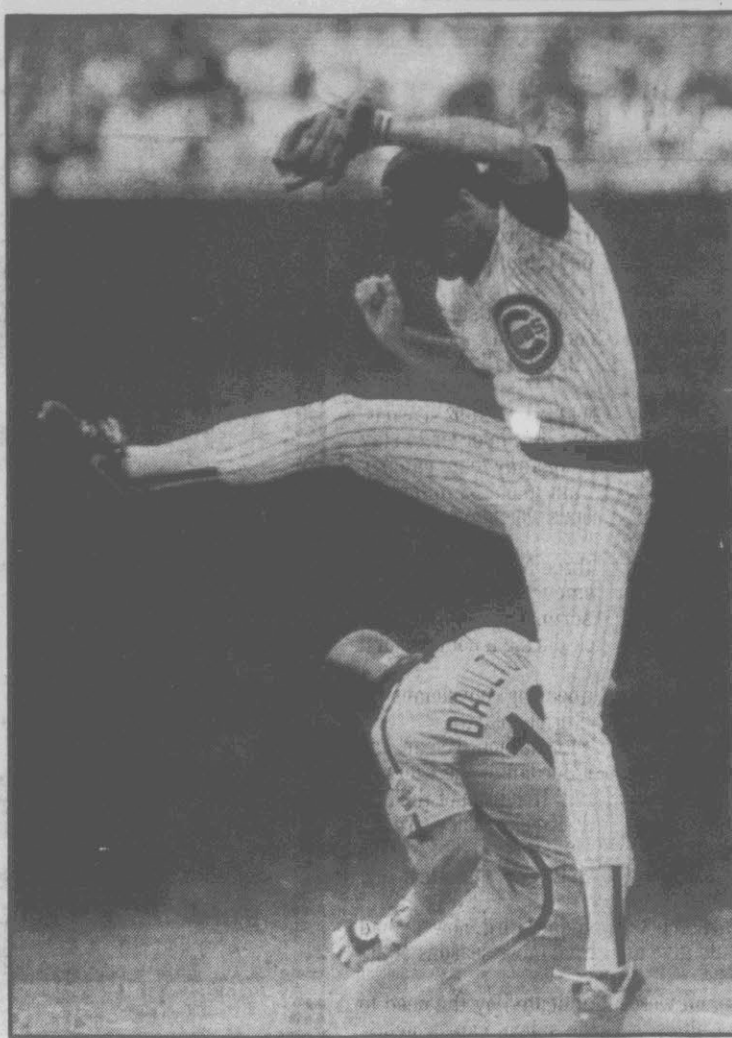

Clancy, 6-10, gave up three runs and four hits in four innings, losing for the sixth time in seven decisions. Houston lost for the fourth time in five games.

Mets 3, Cardinals 2

Bob Ojeda won his fourth consecutive decision as the Mets pulled to within 3½ games of first-place Chicago in the NL East.

New York has won 11 of 14 and, at 64-53, is 11 games over .500 for the first time this year. The visiting Cardinals remained 6½ games back.

Ryne Sandberg went 0-for-3, snapping his streak of five consecutive games with a home run. Jerome Walton's fifth-inning double extended his hitting streak to 24 games, longest in the major leagues this season.

Jeff Parrett, 10-4, won for the sixth time in seven decisions, pitching three innings of one-hit relief.

Pirates 6, Expos 4

Bob Walk, 10-7, scattered eight hits over 8½ innings at Olympic Stadium to become Pittsburgh's first 10-game winner. The Pirates snapped a three-game losing streak and Montreal remained 2½ games behind Chicago, a game ahead of New York.

Andy Van Slyke and Bobby Bonilla hit consecutive homers in the seventh inning as Pittsburgh won for the fourth time in 16 games.

Dodgers 3, Giants 2

Pinch-hitter Mike Sharperson hit a sacrifice fly with one out in the 12th inning off Don Robinson at Candlestick Park. Robinson, 11-8, came in to start the 10th following three consecutive complete-game victories.

Jay Howell, 3-3, pitched four shutout innings and Alejandro Pena got three outs for his third save.

Simms Inks Three-Year Contract

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Phil Simms stayed away from training camp for three weeks and got what he wanted — a lot more money.

Enough money, he says, to get him to suit up today.

The New York Giants on Sunday agreed to a three-year, $4.2 million contract extension for the 11th-year quarterback, sources close to the negotiations said.

After missing 20 days of camp, including Saturday night's 20-17 exhibition victory over the New England Patriots, Simms met his goal of extending and improving on a contract that would have paid him about $880,000 for this season. It was the final year of a five-year deal signed in 1985.

The deal will reportedly guarantee Simms $1.3 million for this season, with payments of $1.4 million in 1990 and $1.5 million in 1991, according to the sources, who asked not to be identified. That gives him about an average salary among NFL quarterbacks and puts him on par with such players as the Phoenix Cardinals' Neil Lomax and the New York Jets' Ken O'Brien.

"It feels great to be back," Simms said Sunday evening. "I regret that I had to hold out but I understand why this happens."

Coach Bill Parcells said he was looking forward to a practice with Simms at the Giants' training camp in Madison today. He said Simms would probably play in the Giants' next exhibition game against the Chiefs in Kansas City.

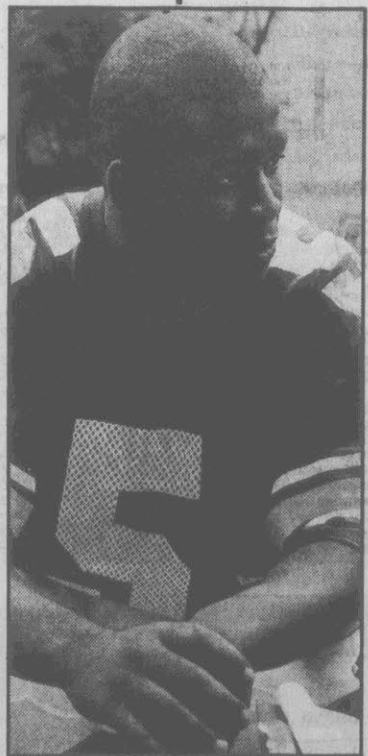

Despite the holdout, Parcells said he felt lucky to have Simms.

"People that say Travis Hunter — great runner, can't throw — I'm not worried about what they say. All I do is go out there and do the best I can. I know that I can throw the ball just as good as anybody we have out there."

threw for a team-high 828 yards with another 333 in rushing.

Still, try as he might, Hunter has never seemed to be able to garner the support of all the ECU faithful. At one point last year, he was booed loudly upon entering a game to replace Libretto.

"It's made me a little more wary of people," Hunter said. "You have to protect your feelings. You can't put yourself in a predicament where your feelings are going to get hurt too bad. People are going to be people."

"You can't worry about what they say. There are always going to be critics. I go out there believing I can adjust to the situation at hand. I just go out there and hope to have a lot of fun in my last year and win a lot of games."

Learning how to deal with fans and the pressure inherent in Division I college football has been a four-year learning experience for Hunter that began the first time he got on the field.

"My freshman year I learned the lesson," he said. "We had a long losing streak. You see a lot of things that catch your eye, make you turn your head. The fans, when you're leaving after you lost a game, they're yelling stuff at you and saying things that maybe they shouldn't say. It makes you get a hard exterior."

Those kind of things didn't happen much when he was a prep star earning the team's most valuable player award at West Orange during both his junior and senior seasons.

Four years later, Hunter has grown up quite a bit.

"I could say that, yes, I'm a lot less naive," he said.

Now, though Hunter has to hold on to his job during a month of pre-season workouts.

"His biggest challenge, in my opinion, and every one of those quarterbacks, is I want to see who is going to drop back there and hit their targets," Richt said. "I want some people to hit 65 percent of their throws. Now they've got to prove to me and coach Lewis that they are capable of hitting their targets on a consistent basis."

Hunter wants to address that question right away. He stayed in Greenville over the summer and gathered with the other quarterbacks and the wide receivers for informal workouts as often as possible.

"People that say Travis Hunter — great runner, can't throw — I'm not worried about what they say," Hunter said. "All I do is go out there and do the best I can. When they put this offense in, a lot of people probably thought, 'hey, he's going to be out of there.' But I know what I can do. I know that I can throw the ball just as good as anybody we have out there."

"The fact that I can run, that is an added dimension. But, you know, if I could just throw and not run they might consider me a better passer than I am. But I don't worry about what they say. They can keep talking and talking, but all I've got to say is that I'm trying to be the number one quarterback. They can keep talking from here to 10 years down the line."

There are three other guys hot after his job, though. Grier came on strong late in spring practice. Blake probably has the most potential of the group. Libretto is a veteran who has started in the past and knows what to do once he gets out there.

"I know there is a lot of competition and a lot of talent," Hunter said. "I'm not worried about that. I'm worried about myself. I think I'm tougher on myself than I need to be, but that's the way it has to be."

"My main objective is I want to be the starting quarterback. It would be crazy to go out there and settle for number two."

'Truth in Preference To Fiction'

Better Ways

Openness & Efficiency Both Essential

After nearly eight long and tedious months, North Carolina finally has a new projects budget. The Senate approved two spending bills previously OK'd by the House, and that move paved the way for an overdue adjournment of the 1989 N.C. General Assembly early Sunday morning.

The bills will allocate $1.8 billion over the next two years for new projects. There is great pride taken in the Legislature over the fact that the budget process was open. This candor, however, came at the expense of smooth, efficient operation. The cost of the openness was a budget process that was cumbersome and long.

The problem is the new spending packages really don't satisfy anybody. Teachers will receive an average 6 percent raise and a new salary schedule. State employees receive a similar amount. But the Basic Education program was slashed, and the raises came from the highways revenue package to be replaced with other funds in the future.

Construction projects were authorized for UNC-Chapel Hill, N.C. State, East Carolina and UNC-Asheville but the funds are in reserve until they materialize.

There is funding for capital improvements at Fayetteville State, Appalachian, for a performing arts center at Charlotte. There is also funding for the N.C. Zoo at Asheboro, for the state ports, a new revenue building, a new agronomy building for the Department of Agriculture, a new State Bureau of Investigation complex. And there is $14 million over two years for development of a low-level radioactive waste site.

The legislators are exhausted from so much negotiation and debate in the open process, but the money is divided fairly.

The concern is that the budget is based on too many "ifs" that involve finding funds to replace temporarily diverted funds. Under the plan, the money will eventually have to come from state revenue growth or new taxes. Whether that end can be accomplished remains to be seen.

The more immediate concern, however, is that the budget process simply took too long. Nothing developed during the months of July and August that wasn't there in June. A budget could have been wrapped up then. In addition to finding the funds to pay for the 1989 appropriations, legislative leaders also need to seek ways to speed up the process in the future.

An open budget process is an admirable goal that can be attained. It must, however, be reached in a more timely and efficient manner than occurred in 1989.

'89 General Assembly

Apartheid Prevails Despite Tea Parties

Charlene Smith

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — South Africa, it could be said, is being run by two governments. The first is the white-minority Nationalist government in Pretoria; the second is the unlawful, banned African National Congress in Lusaka, Zambia.

Neither recognizes the other — officially. But neither can advance without the other, and any setbacks either government suffers is a consequence of actions by the other. The majority of black South Africans are loyal to the exiled ANC and monitor instructions issued by the organization from Lusaka. Polls show that 41 percent of the white electorate support the National Party, in power for four decades and which will undoubtedly return to power in elections this September.

Although the National Party is trying to fight these elections using the bogey of "ANC terrorists," its rhetoric is undermined by the July tea party between outgoing President Pieter W. Botha and Nelson Mandela, the ANC leader incarcerated since 1964 after a sabotage conviction. The meeting went a long way toward "demonstrating" the ANC, one observer said.

In elections in 1987, the "Nats" successfully attacked the liberal opposition by saying that the liberals were "soft on the ANC" and had visited Lusaka for talks with the banned group. By stoking white paranoia, they paved the way for an extreme right-wing official opposition.

Now, however, not only has the president met with the premier symbol of the black liberation struggle, but late in July two key government economists took part in discussions with the ANC in Lausanne, Switzerland, about the economy in a post-apartheid South Africa.

In the same month a Nationalist Party member of Parliament visited the ANC in Lusaka with a group of white South Africans. There have been rumors of other top-level talks. It is clear that while it is not tactically convenient for either side to admit it, talks are taking place. Talks — but not negotiations.

Symbolic of the current climate, the initiative has not come from the government but from the people. Jay Naidoo, president of the powerful 1-million-strong Congress of South African Trade Unions, summed up the mood: "Irrespective of what the government says, we, the people of South Africa, will dismantle apartheid ourselves."

On Aug. 2, despite a heavy police presence, about 300 sick black South Africans made history by entering and receiving treatment at segregated whites-only hospitals. It was the first step in a nationwide non-violent Defiance Campaign against the racial segregation of public facilities. At the same time, black mine workers, the largest segment of the work force, announced that they would press for the desegregation of elevators, housing, toilet and change-room facilities and health care on South Africa's wealthy but racially ultraconservative mine properties.

The current Defiance Campaign is a reminder of the ANC-backed Defiance Campaign of the 1950s. That effort was the cutting point that changed the ANC's previously timid, bargaining role to that of a more assertive position and brought forth young leaders such as Mandela and Oliver Tambo — the ANC's leader in exile.

Today's campaign is different. The Mass Democratic Movement, which includes most internal anti-apartheid organizations, has a larger, more politically aware base than that enjoyed by the ANC in 1952. While that campaign was an acknowledgment that pressure for equal rights was being ignored, this one is an indication that the opposite is now true and is intended to emphasize that the government no longer controls the initiative.

The point is that while government postures now seem dramatic — peace in Namibia, tea with Mandela, handshakes with Mozambican President Joaquim Chissano — day-to-day apartheid in South Africa is little changed.

The Defiance Campaign, as an example, is illegal not only in terms of the four-year State of Emergency (a mandatory 10-year jail sentence or an $8,000 fine or both), but in terms of the Separate Amenities Act, the Group Areas Act and a wide range of petty apartheid and security laws.

The message from South Africa appears to be that the brutality of apartheid is not just the dramatic events of detentions, assassinations and restrictions directed against a few thousand, it is the daily stripping of dignity and personal abuse directed against millions of South Africans whose yellow star is dark skins.

Black South Africans, and those whites actively opposed to apartheid, have demonstrated that despite a harsh four-year State of Emergency, they have the will and the grass-roots support to continue fighting a state that bans, restricts, detains, harasses — and, some say, assassinates — those opposed to an apartheid future.

A sign of this new, but fragile, era is the openness with which public speakers and the media often express support for the African National Congress or quote its members and plans or activities. A mere year ago this seemed impossible.

Newspapers, churchmen, actors, authors, businessmen and housewives have beaten a now well-trod path to ANC headquarters in Lusaka in recent times. They openly, though carefully, quote its leaders and documents, all of whom or which are banned in perpetuity and the discussions of which carry heavy jail penalties.

Mike Olivier, a white businessman and chairperson of the Five Freedoms Forum, a white anti-apartheid group, said: "Although the ANC is de jure banned, it has de facto been unbanned by the people."

New legislation is also endangering the tenure of some 3 million black tenants on white farms, an example of laws that are tightening apartheid while pressure is increasing to eliminate it.

South African blacks are still not free to use the same public toilets as whites, attend the same schools, hospitals, swim in the same pools, drink together in the same bars or live together in the same areas. There are exceptions, but they are usually less government initiative than the pressure of black and white citizens forcing change or ignoring racist laws.

The total foreign debt has risen to about $25 billion, which is not helped by South Africa's worsened international credit rating or an unsteady currency. Its foreign reserves are now lower than its poor, smaller neighbor to the west, Botswana, according to Andre du Pisani, of the South Africa Institute of International Affairs. South African companies are also becoming increasingly monopolistic and shifting their interests — and funds — to foreign nations.

Nonetheless, most South Africans do not see meaningful negotiations taking place in less than five years and some believe it could take 20 years.

Veteran anti-apartheid campaigner Helen Joseph, now 84, said that she thought in 1955 that liberation was less than five years away; 34 years later she is more skeptical, and so are many South Africans.

The winds of change have too often turned into a gale of repression.

Short Session Will Still Face Thorny Financial Issues

Dennis Patterson

RALEIGH — The adjournment of the General Assembly early Sunday ended a session in which money was short and demands were long. And legislative leaders are not sure it will get any better by the short session next year.

Legislative fiscal analysts "are projecting a flat economy," House Speaker Joe Mavretic said Saturday. "And a flat economy does not bode well for the short session."

Short sessions, which historically are measured in weeks rather than months, are used primarily to make adjustments in the state's two-year budget.

The budget-making process this year was hampered by a slowing in revenue growth, making it difficult for legislators to find the money to finance pay raises for state employees, to build more prison space, pay for a $9.1 billion highway package and continue funding for education improvements.

Some spending issues, as well as other matters, were put off until next year in hopes the economy will improve and more money will be available.

But throughout the budget process, legislators warned that relying on overly optimistic revenue projections and allowing agencies to use excess receipts this year will mean fewer dollars available next year.

Agencies that take in more money than projected have been required to turn the extra collections to the General Fund at the end of the year, but in some cases this year, agencies were allowed to use those funds without returning them to the state.

"I would tell the members we're getting into a problem here," Rep. Liston Ramsey, D-Madison, said during deliberations of the House Appropriations Committee to allow excess receipts to be used this year. "This money you're allowing them to use is money that would be available next year when you come back. But if you use it now, you won't have it next year."

In addition to money issues, legislators also face other problem areas when they return to Raleigh next May, chief among them being veto power for the governor.

A "balance of powers" bill that would give the governor veto power and legislators four-year terms ended the session in the governor received veto power it should be balanced with four-year terms for legislators or some other provision to give legislators more power.

The veto power bill fluttered

'Some spending issues, as well as other matters, were put off until next year in hopes the economy will improve and more money will be available. But throughout the budget process, legislators warned that relying on overly optimistic revenue projections and allowing agencies to use excess receipts this year will mean fewer dollars available next year.'

House Rules Committee, where it will be held until next year's short session or a possible special session in a few weeks. The Senate early in the session approved veto power for the governor, but with no provisions to increase the power of the legislative branch. On the House side, legislators insisted that if near death for months while House members haggled over what other provisions to add. Finally, the House killed the bill when no compromise could be reached.

But the following day, the bill was resurrected after Martin agreed to support four-year terms for legislators as part of the package. Mavretic later said the package also should include limits on the legislative session and moving state elections to non-presidential years.

But the package never moved out of the Rules Committee because Martin and Mavretic could not find the 72 votes needed to pass it.

On the final day of the session, Senate members also agreed to consider next year a proposal by Rep. Anne Barnes, D-Orange, that full-time state workers be assured of making a salary of at least $1,000 a month.

She had included the proposal in two different bills, but it was rejected both times by the Senate on the grounds that there was no money available to increase the pay of the lowest-paid state workers.

Ms. Barnes said it was a "sad commentary" that the Legislature had done nothing to pull the lowest paid state workers up to the federal poverty level.

"When we have people who work full-time for the state and are below the federal poverty level, who have to work two jobs just to make ends meet — it's a disgrace," she said.

An open meetings law that would bring legislative committees and the governor's budget deliberations under closer scrutiny also was left in limbo after the House, led by Republicans, refused to agree to a compromise.

Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, said the measure was still alive for the short session, so Senate and House members did not try to salvage the bill in the waning hours of the session.

The House had approved the bill calling for more openness in the legislative process, but the Senate added provisions that would make the governor open up his deliberations on the state budget with executive branch members.

Republicans, who have lambasted legislators in election campaigns as too secretive about budget decisions, warily treaded around the issue Saturday, insisting they were voting to put the bill in limbo because of a technical problem with the compromise and not because they opposed open government.

Spangler's Role Limited In Athletics Probe

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — UNC System President C.D. Spangler must send a message that breaking the rules to keep athletes eligible will not be tolerated and that administrators who condoned such action aren't wanted on the N.C. State campus, observers say.

The University of North Carolina Board of Governors has delegated the responsibility for athletics to the chancellors and their boards, although some board members now question whether that was such a good idea.

"I think we may have gone too far," board member William Johnson said. "I think we need to take a look at that policy and give serious consideration to whether it ought to be modified."

High education sources, who asked not to be identified, say Spangler's options for resolving the athletic problems at N.C. State are limited, the Greensboro News & Record reported Sunday.

Spangler could give N.C. State Chancellor Bruce Poulton the option of resigning or being fired, the sources say.

Hugh Fuller, director of N.C. State's academic tutoring program, has told the Poole Commission that has reported on the problems in Coach Jim Valvano's basketball program, that high-level administrators at the school, including Poulton, knew that athletic department officials manipulated academic rules to keep basketball players eligible. Fuller said the administrators failed to stop the interference.

Samuel Poole, a member of the UNC Board of Governors, is chairman of the commission.

One person interviewed suggested that Poulton's culpability calls for no more than a reprimand from Spangler.

Poulton was on vacation last week and efforts to reach him were unsuccessful.

Second, Spangler could tell Poulton to fire Valvano or get his resignation, the paper said.

Among those interviewed, this option is subject to the most debate.

Some think Valvano can survive the crisis, provided he gives up his dual role as athletic director. Others disagree.

"I think he should get rid of everybody who was involved in this," said one member of the Board of Governors.

Third, sources say, Spangler could set up a system to closely monitor activities in the athletic department. N.C. State officials would be required to report to Spangler periodically on concerns ranging, for example, from outside income for coaches to class attendance records of basketball players.

Along this line, he could require the N.C. State trustees to take action on their own.

Spangler's fourth option could be to recommend policy changes that could affect the entire UNC system, sources said.

For example, he could recommend that no coach in the UNC system be allowed to hold the dual role of athletic director. And he could require each institution to supply the Board of Governors with more information on how the individual athletic programs operate.

Finally, Spangler could present his report to the board and in closed session say to them, "Now what do you want to do?"

That won't make Spangler's critics on the board happy.

"I'm sure (the problem) doesn't get very far from his mind," Poole said.

Spangler is scheduled to meet with the commission Tuesday.

Photo Exhibit

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — A traveling exhibit of photographs taken by Smithsonian Institution photographers of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington opened at the Fayetteville Museum of Art on Sunday.

The 70 black and white photos depict the often-emotional response veterans and relatives experience when viewing "The Wall," said museum interim director Tom Grubb.

The exhibit will be on display through Sept. 10 in Fayetteville, the only city in North Carolina to host the show.

Grubb called the exhibit very impressive, very dramatic. The majority of the photos show veterans looking at the 250-foot, black shiny wall inscribed with the more than 58,000 names of men and women who died in the Vietnam War.

Wedding Thief

DURHAM (AP) — A thief broke into a Durham Methodist church while a couple was taking their wedding vows, stealing some of the bride's money, police say.

About $200 cash, a check for $400, a watch and some blank checks were missing from several purses belonging to attendants in the wedding and a church member, Durham police said.

The break-in at Trinity United Methodist Church in downtown Durham occurred between 4 and 4:30 p.m. Saturday during the wedding of Jennifer Miller and Sami Amahmud.

Police Chase

RALEIGH (AP) — A driver led law officers on a 100-mph chase across Wilson County on Sunday, colliding twice with patrol cars before stopping at a locked metal gate, authorities say.

The driver later told officers that he led them on the chase because "he had always wondered what it would be like and he thoroughly enjoyed it," said N.C. Highway Patrol Trooper Cecil H. Mercer.

"He was an Evel Knievel-type driver," Mercer said. "He didn't give up for anything."

No injuries were reported during the 30-minute chase, but four law enforcement vehicles and the man's El Camino were damaged during the 50-mile chase.

The driver, Leonard Ray Lee, 21, of Rossville, Ga., was charged with driving while impaired, driving with a revoked license and evading arrest. The Wilson County Sheriff's Department also charged Lee with damaging county property.

Eight Die In Traffic

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Eight people died in North Carolina traffic wrecks over the weekend, including a Creedmoor man whose car went out of control and somersaulted three times, the state Highway Patrol said.

James Phoecean Terry, 45, was killed shortly before 6 p.m. Sunday when the vehicle he was driving went out of control and overturned off a rural road just west of Creedmoor in Granville County, troopers said.

Troopers said Terry was not wearing a seatbelt.

Earlier Sunday, Charles Colon Pearce, 30, of Franklinton was killed when a driver struck him on a rural road about 1.5 miles west of Franklinton, the patrol reported.

Shortly after 10 p.m. Saturday, Willard Jacobs, 38, of Florida City, Florida, was killed on N.C. 55 about 10 miles south of Benson in Johnston County. His vehicle went out of control and overturned, the patrol said.

An unidentified Mexican man, about 23, was killed as he rode a bicycle on N.C. 55 north of Erwin in Harnett County. He was struck from behind by a vehicle at 1:10 a.m. Saturday.

Also Saturday, Brenda Cain Beane, 40, of Asheboro, was killed at 2:45 p.m. when a car travelling north on U.S. 220 in Randolph County struck a car from behind, sending it across the median, where it struck Ms. Beane's car head on.

Douglas James Byrd, 22, of Raleigh, died at 10:50 a.m. Saturday in Johnston County, just west of Smithfield, when his car hit a mailbox and overturned.

William Patrick Gist, 19, of Linwood, was killed at 7:21 p.m. Saturday on a rural road west of Lexington in Davidson County. He was a passenger in a car that was traveling at a high rate of speed to elude arrest, hit a utility pole, went airborne and struck a tree, troopers said.

Jacob Andrew Winstead, 37, of Wilmington, was killed in Carolina Beach shortly after 10 p.m. Friday when a car he was riding was struck by another vehicle.

House Burglars Make Themselves At Home

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREENSBORO — When thieves broke into Meg and Patrick Mooney's Greensboro home, they had a snack and drank a 12-pack of beer before taking $10,000 worth of merchandise away in the Mooney's 1985 Oldsmobile Cutlass.

Before they left, they placed the dirty dishes in the sink.

"At least they left the dishes," Mrs. Mooney said. "They took everything else."

The Mooneys' house was one of 215 burglarized in Greensboro last month, a 36 percent increase over last July. Burglaries in Greensboro ordinarily increase by a rate of about 14 percent from June through August, when many homeowners are away on vacation.

A detective has been assigned full-time to investigate the growing number of related cases there that have numbered 33 since June 1.

Police have noticed a pattern to the burglaries in the affluent northwest section of the city where the Mooneys live.

"Most of the things they take can sell or trade very easily at a drug house," said Sam Jones, the detective investigating the burglaries.

"They're taking a flashlight, going in the house at night and shopping as if they were at a mall."

Television sets, computers, phones, stereos, liquor and food are hot items. Eight cars were taken and apparently used to haul the stolen goods away before being left within a few miles of the thefts. The cars are the only stolen items that have been recovered.

In all 33 latest incidents, the burglars have entered through a back door or sliding glass window in the neighborhoods buffered by woods and darkened by scarce street lighting. Most burglaries are occur-ing at night while the homeowners are out of town.

John Schwarz returned from an out-of-town trip two weeks ago to find his home relieved of about $5,000 worth of merchandise.

"I walked into the door and the first thing I noticed is where's my TV?" Schwarz said. "I went to get my messages on the recorder and it wasn't there. I felt like a woman who was assaulted and didn't want to be. I got raped."

The burglars seem to be getting bolder.

Last week, Jerome Procton awoke and walked downstairs to find the screen door of his home had been cut during the night and that thieves had taken his wife's purse, a video cassette recorder, a portable phone, a compact disc player and other items that were hauled away in the couple's 1987 Mercedes. The car was recovered a few days later about a quarter of a mile from the couple's home.

The couple left their outer doors open and locked the screen doors last Monday night in order to let a breeze circulate through the house. The Proctons said they did not hear a thing.

Mick Jagger, centers, responds to the beat as the Rolling Stones perform in New Haven

Rolling Stones Open Tour With Surprise Gig In Club

By Larry McShane
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — They came to hear "Exile on Main Street." The wound up exiled on York Street.

The Rolling Stones were inside Toad's Place, opening their 1989 tour with an unannounced gig at the small Connecticut club. But the Saturday night show, a mere rumor at 6 p.m., was sold out in two hours; one solid block of York Street was jammed with hopefuls who never got inside.

Which didn't bother Andy Broughal, 21, who paid a $3 cover and did.

"Great. Exciting. Unbelievable. Phenomenal. The blues at its best," Broughal exulted. He was about 15 feet from the stage when Mick, Keith and the rest of the band played their first U.S. show in eight years.

"Thank you. Good, good, good. We've been playing for ourselves the last six weeks," Jagger told the screaming crowd — a reference to the band's stay at the Wykeham Rise School, a vacant girls' school in rural Washington, Conn.

While the Stones were the stars Saturday night, everybody inside the club was eager to grab their own bit of the spotlight with stories detailing assorted leaks about the "secret concert."

Broughal got a phone call at 6:50 p.m. Saturday from a buddy who heard the buzz near the club. A 50-ish woman came with her tuxedoed husband, who worked security at Wykeham, for their first-ever Stones show. Another guy spotted the club's owner at a local liquor store buying Rebel Yell, Keith Richards' whiskey of choice, and quickly called friends.

Jane Prins, 30, got her tip from a friend of a friend of the Stones' masseuse. On very short notice, she dropped her two kids off with her mother and headed out with a friend.

"I said, 'Mom, you have to do this.' My mother has no conception of music, but she knows the Rolling Stones," Prins said.

Once confirmed, the word spread quickly: the Stones really were coming. The crowd ignored the sign outside announcing, "Tonight, Rock Dance Party with the Cruiser. Admission $3.01." By 8 p.m., the doors were closed.

"It's happening, man. They're here," said one depressed fan wearing a Bill The Cat T-shirt. Another offered $20 to anyone on the guest list who could smuggle him in, but he found no takers. Still more looked for unattended doors behind the club, hoping to slip in.

Inside, the crowd was a curious mix of New York chic and Ivy League prep. Yalies in sweatshirts rubbed shoulders with black-clad Manhattanites, who appeared stunned by the ways of suburban club life.

"You've got to PAY for drinks?" asked one incredulous scene-maker, his eyes growing large behind tinted shades, after picking up his rum and coke.

Why New Haven? "It's like a thank you to their fans up here, I guess," explained harried Stones tour publicist Lynn Tanzman. The decision was also made at the last minute: Toad's co-owner Brian Phelps said he was called Friday about the Saturday show, setting off a whirlwind 24 hours.

The important stuff: set list. Eleven songs, 56 minutes. "Start Me Up," "Bitch," "Tumbling Dice," "Sad, Sad, Sad" (new album), "Miss You," "Little Red Rooster," "Honky Tonk Women," "Mixed Emotions" (new single), "It's Only Rock and Roll," "Brown Sugar," "Jumping Jack Flash."

While getting close enough to eyeball Mick's lips or choke on Keith's cigarette smoke thrilled most, not everyone enjoyed the show. New Haven Police Officer "I'm not authorized to speak" Bicki stood resolutely by, hand on walkie-talkie, as Keith and Woody cranked out "Start Me Up."

Once the show ended, things quickly reverted to normal. Bouncers asked for two forms of ID, not if you were on the guest list. The piped-in music was back on, Charlie Watts' drum kit taken down. The block-long line outside Toad's was gone.

'Coach' Will Return To ABC Lineup As Mid-Season Series

By Kathryn Baker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The college football season probably will be over by then, but ABC's "Coach" will be back on the gridiron sometime around the middle of the 1989-90 television season.

Creator and executive producer Barry Kemp blames himself for creating the impression that the show, which premiered midseason last season, had been canceled by ABC. He had been disappointed that it wasn't in ABC's starting lineup and took his time accepting the order for 13 new episodes, so when ABC announced its fall schedule, the fate of "Coach" was unknown.

"I wasn't real happy about being a back-up show last year," said Kemp during a visit to New York. "It's just hard to be a show about football in the fall and not be able to go on in the fall. . . . But now that they've put us on this summer behind 'Roseanne,' I think that shows a lot of faith in us."

Indeed, "Coach" has been exposed to a much wider audience behind the hit sitcom on Tuesday night this summer.

Kemp, who was executive script consultant on "Taxi" for three seasons and created and produced "Newhart," "Coming of Age" and the comedy miniseries "Fresno," said he had spent about two years developing "Coach."

Craig T. Nelson plays Hayden Fox, head coach of Minnesota State. His life is turned upside-down when his 19-year-old daughter, Kelly (Clare Carey), from his long-since-dissolved marriage, enrolls at the university. Jerry Van Dyke, in a role created for him, plays relentlessly negative Assistant Coach Luther Van Dam — who gets in trouble for accepting a steak he won by betting against his own team. Shelley Fabares is Christine Armstrong, a local newswoman who is Hayden's steady date. Bill Fagerbakke is perpetual student Dauber Dybinski, whose academic inertia might possibly stem from his insistence on taking only courses that are taught in proximity to his dorm.

But it was the charismatic character of a college football coach that drew him to the idea of the series, said Kemp, who describes himself as an avid football fan.

"I was real interested in the whole phenomenon that had happened in the last decade or so where the prominence of coaches had become such they were really more prominent than the players in many cases," he said.

He was also attracted to doing a show about "a guy who was 45 years old and was just starting to come to terms with the fact that he had basically devoted his life to achieving some kind of career goal, and had risked his marriage and his family life and his personal relationships in order to attain that, and was just starting to come to terms with the fact that it was not going to be all he hoped it would be, and had to start trying to mend the fences he had broken through the years. I thought that an interesting emotional dilemma for a man that age. And that really appealed to me."

Nelson, who is best known for his movie roles in such dramatic fare as "Poltergeist" would not immediately leap to most minds as the star of a sitcom, but Kemp said he was interested enough in the actor that he talked to him about the "Coach" concept even before the script was written.

"I think the reaction a lot of people had was I didn't think Craig Nelson could be funny," Kemp said. But he wanted more than a sitcom actor, and the imposing Nelson fit the bill.

"I wanted Hayden Fox to have an edge, I wanted a really good actor to play him," Kemp said, adding that Fox "walks that pretty fine moral line between what's considered right and what's considered wrong, and he's not always real clear about it. So he fights that dilemma within himself all the time, and that makes him interesting."

Kemp, who grew up in Iowa, set "Coach" at the fictitious Minnesota State mainly to be realistic. It's not a top 40 school, but maybe top 100. Sometimes the school sounds a little too realistic.

"One of the guys in the show was wearing the sweatshirt one day that had the logo on it," Kemp said, "and he was in a 7-Eleven, and the guy behind the counter said, 'Hey I went to that school.'"

Residents of the Carolina Care rest home were forced out of their rooms when fire damaged a section of the center

Rest Home Fire Chases Residents

By Carol Tyer and Kevin Boughal
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Disaster was averted by quick responses Sunday by staff personnel of the Carolina Care Long-Term Care Facility after a fire that started in a resident's room spread to the attic of the rest home's east wing.

An orderly evacuation of 114 occupants, reportedly completed within 2½ minutes, resulted in no injury to any of the residents. All were accounted for immediately.

Officials of the health care facility on N.C. 43 just inside Greenville's city limits reported the fire to the 911 emergency dispatch center at 4:54 p.m. Rest home personnel, led by co-administrator Norma Foss, handled the evacuation before firemen-rescuers arrived.

"We have at least one fire drill a month, usually more," the home's other co-administrator, Florence McDougald, said. "It paid off. Our staff knew just what to do. And our residents came out calmly, some not even aware until they were outside that it wasn't just a practice."

"Our preparedness was what saved us," Ms. Foss said. "I almost know we'd wouldn't have got out with no injuries without that plan."

Capt. Michael Branch of the Greenville Fire-Rescue Department and Detective Steve Pass of the Greenville Police Department were sitting through the rubble inside the resident's room where the fire started this morning to determine the fire's cause. No report was available on their findings.

Mrs. McDougald said she believed the cause was a cigarette lit inside the room, against the center's policy, and left unextinguished. She said the room's resident was out when the fire occurred and that flames inside the room were fanned by a breeze through an open window.

"If that window had not been open," she said, "I believe the fire would have been contained in that room. As it was, it spread up around the window boxing into the attic."

Fire walls which extend into the attic and a fire door between the east wing and the main lobby prevented the fire's spread into other sections of the building.

Mrs. McDougald said the door to the burning room was closed. That prevented the fire from spreading to the hall, but also prevented its being discovered quickly, she said.

According to Battalion Chief Tony Smart of the Greenville Fire-Rescue Department, there was heavy fire damage to the one room, heavy smoke damage to the entire east wing and moderate-to-heavy water damage. Holes made in the roof to extinguish the attic blaze were covered with plywood before firemen left.

By 9 p.m., all but the east wing residents went back to the nursing home. Smart was assisted by

White House Aid To Head SEC

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush has chosen Richard C. Breeden, the White House point man on landmark savings-and-loan legislation, to head the Securities and Exchange Commission, administration sources said today.

The formal nomination was expected later in the day, said the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity. The post requires Senate confirmation.

Breeden, 39, a lawyer and banking specialist, would succeed David S. Ruder, who announced in May that he intended to step down.

Breeden helped write President

Bush's plan for bailing out the nation's ailing savings and loan industry, and represented the White House in dealings with Congress as that legislation progressed through Congress.

The final plan, a major restructuring of federal banking laws and the largest single-industry government bailout in history, took effect with Bush's signature last week.

Breeden, whose current job as presidential assistant for issues analysis made him something of a White House troubleshooter, also helped fashion administration policy for dealing with the Alaska oil spill.

From 1982-85 Breeden was deputy counsel to then-Vice President Bush.

He came to the White House after four years in private practice as a banking specialist in the Washington office of a Houston law firm.

The SEC is a five-member board that oversees securities markets, regulates the sale of stocks, bonds and stock options and enforces securities laws.

Ruder, an appointee of former President Reagan, has been chairman of the regulatory body since Aug. 7, 1987, some 2½ months before the stock market crash.

He announced last May that he wanted to step down, and would stay on until a successor was selected. Ruder plans to return to Northwestern University Law School,

Mississippi Solon Dies

NEW AUGUSTA, Miss. (AP) — U.S. Rep. Larkin Smith was found dead today in the wreckage of a small plane that crashed in a forest, authorities said.

The twin-engine plane carrying the Mississippi Republican and his pilot disappeared from radar screens about 9:30 p.m. Sunday and was spotted early today from the air, authorities said.

The two bodies were taken from the wreckage, said acting Harrison County Sheriff Joe Price.

Searchers struggled through heavy woods to reach the site 20 miles south of Hattiesburg, said

C.B. Easterling, spokesman for the Perry County Sheriff's Department.

Smith, 45, a freshman legislator who succeeded Republican Trent Lott, now a U.S. senator, was returning home to Gulfport from Hattiesburg on Sunday with his pilot, Chuck Vierling, said Charles Busby, Smith's press secretary.

He had thrown out the first ball at a youth baseball game in Hattiesburg, said Walker, a spokesman for the congressman.

"He left Hattiesburg at 9:10 p.m. and went off radar at 9:25 p.m. (See SMITH, A-10)

Leland Found In Wreckage

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Recovery teams today began the difficult task of retrieving the bodies of Rep. Mickey Leland and 15 others who died when their plane slammed into the side of a jagged mountain in southwestern Ethiopia.

The bodies of 12 victims, including the Texas Democrat, were found Sunday in the wreckage of the twin-engine plane, which disappeared Aug. 7 on a flight to a refugee camp near the Sudanese border.

The others were presumed dead in the crash that one U.S. Air Force pilot described as "awesome, unsurvivable." Workers were searching for the missing bodies in a ravine below a jagged cliff at the crash site, about 250 miles west-southwest of the capital.

"The nose of the plane just ran into rocks," said Rep. Gary Ackerman, D-N.Y., who was in the helicopter that first spotted the wreckage of his colleague, who was chairman of the House Select Committee on Hunger.

"The wings sheared off and the engine and fuselage were burned," Ackerman said after returning to Washington late Sunday.

The cause of the crash was not known, but the weather was cloudy and

Schools Say Pay Thaw Will Help

By Kevin Boughal
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The unfreezing of teachers' wage steps by the General Assembly should be incentive to help keep the older, more experienced teachers in classrooms a few more years, Pitt school administrator Leck Keeter said today.

Keeter, assistant superintendent in charge of personnel for Pitt County schools, said a 29-step salary schedule approved by the Legislature "will give the teachers a substantial increase in their retirement benefits if they keep working for a few more years. If a teacher's salary increases by $3,000, the retirement benefits are increased by $1,200 to $1,500 a year."

A teacher's retirement pay is dependent upon the four years of highest pay, usually the last four years. So, if experienced teachers stay around for a few more years, they will make more during their retirement, Keeter said.

"Keeping the experienced teachers around will be very good for the system," said Keeter. "This new process will make North Carolina as a whole more competitive with other states. The new schedule will clear up a lot of questions for teachers coming in to the state from the outside, and it will also clear up many of the questions that people on the inside have."

Under the new salary schedule, the old teachers will not be the only ones to benefit. A new teacher last year was paid $18,033 and a new teacher this year will receive $19,014.

However, the general assembly only unfroze the steps for teachers. Other school officials and workers still have their annual increases frozen.

"The administrators will receive a 6 percent increase this year, and the classified personnel will receive a 4 percent salary increase with a possibility of an additional 2 percent increase that has not yet been approved by the state Board of Education," said Keeter.

The extra 2 percent salary increase for the classified personnel, who are the secretaries, clerks, teachers assistants and bookkeepers, would let the school personnel be paid the same as someone with the same type of job working for the state.

Legislators Say Session Worth The Wait

By J. Ward Best
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

It took a long time but, for the most part, area legislators say the results were worth the wait.

The General Assembly finished the longest session in state history early Sunday morning. But the state Senate and House of Representatives approved a host of projects to benefit eastern North Carolina.

"The highlight of the session was the highway trust fund," said Sen. Bob Martin, D-Pitt.

The two houses approved a compromise $9.1 billion highway package which would upgrade hundreds of miles of roads in eastern North Carolina. The approved package, slated for construction over 13½ years, would increase the gasoline tax by 5¼ cents a gallon and raise title transfer costs on automobiles.

Teachers and state employees also saw a 6 percent pay increase from the highway package.

"I would like to have seen more funds for teachers and state employees," said Rep. Ed Warren, D-Pitt, "because they're our greatest assets." Warren also called the plan to pave secondary roads and complete major highways through eastern North Carolina "a great step for all of us in this part of the state."

The General Assembly also approved monies for three projects at East Carolina University during its lengthy session.

The largest project, expansion of Joyner Library, received $7 million dollars from the state. The final cost of the project will total an estimated $24.5 million, and area legislators feel the state will appropriate the remainder of the funds during the next short session.

The conference center at the university also received $1 million for planning and design. And the medical school received $360,000 for a proposed animal research center.

In one of its final measures, the General Assembly also approved granting $200,000 to the Greenville Museum of Art.

"Naturally, I would like to have had more dollars for our area but I am grateful for the allocations which came forth," Warren said. "At least it assures a continuation of these funds for completion of needed programs for the eastern part of the state."

Martin and Rep. Gene Rogers agreed, saying this session's appropriations committed the state to complete funding of the projects.

"For the amount of money we had," Martin said, "We were real fortunate with East Carolina."

Both representatives agreed funds were tight during the session. But Rogers said, "I think the short session will be easier as far as money is concerned."

Rep. Walter B. Jones Jr. and Sen. Tom Taft could not be reached for comment this morning. Although the three agreed eastern

North Carolina and Greenville fared well, they also agreed the 215-day session was too much.

"We should have been out of there long ago," Rogers said.

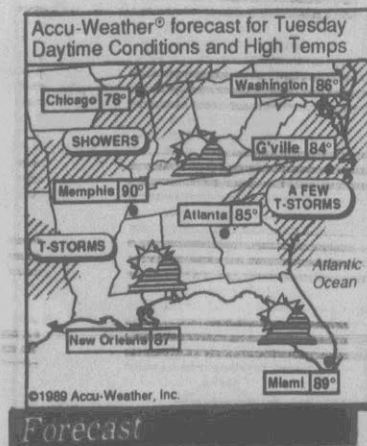

"It is my feeling that the session was too long and costly," Warren said. "The new committee system which was used in the House did not function as efficiently as the previous system. There were too many inexperienced freshmen placed in leading roles in the House, which contributed to some slowing of the process."

Martin agreed that the new leadership, headed by House Speaker Joe Maveritic, slowed some deliberations.

"I think it can be confined and pulled back," Martin said. "They say the state doesn't save money as long as we're in Raleigh."

Gasoline Prices Fall

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — The average price of gasoline fell nearly three cents a gallon at the pump in the past three weeks, a nationwide survey found.

The national average was 112.95 cents a gallon on Friday, 2.71 cents below the average on July 21, according to the Lundberg Survey. The average includes all grades, self- and full-service, and all taxes.

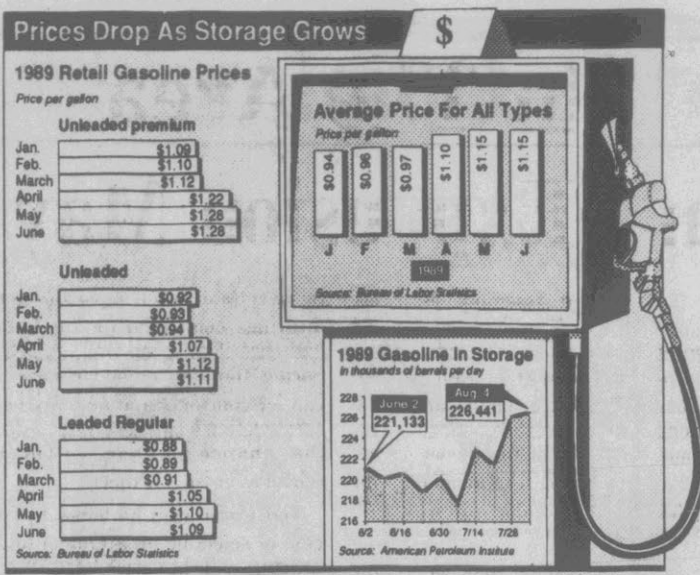

"A drop of this magnitude during such a short period is something that motorists have not seen since 1986," analyst Trilby Lundberg said Sunday.

The survey of 13,000 gasoline stations found that prices per gallon at self-serve pumps were: regular unleaded 102.29 cents; premium unleaded 118.32 cents; and regular leaded 102.64 cents.

Prices per gallon at full-service pumps were: regular unleaded 129.55 cents; premium unleaded 141.74 cents; and regular leaded 129.25 cents.

Ms. Lundberg said refiners and importers overcompensated to forestall any shortage because of tight refining capacity, and new vapor regulations on gasoline.

As a result, she said, "There is an abundance of supply and a cleaner product."

Engine Falls Apart On Continental 727

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DENVER — An airline official said there was no connection between the tail engine failure that forced a Continental Airlines 727 to abort a takeoff and recent tail engine problems in DC-10 jetliners.

An official at Boeing Co., the aircraft's maker, said Sunday's incident was "very unusual," and added that the company would want to investigate it.

Fan blades and other metal pieces of the Pratt & Whitney engine on the Boeing 727-200 were scattered over a runway at Stapleton International Airport after the plane's No. 2 engine disintegrated.

No one was injured.

The runway was closed for about 90 minutes and the 128 passengers on the plane bound for Portland were put on another flight. There also were seven crew members aboard when the engine failed.

Ron Holthouser, a retired American Airlines pilot from Oakridge, Ore., said he heard a loud mechanical scream and a pop from the rear engine during the acceleration for liftoff.

"Luckily, it happened on the ground but it was nip and tuck there," Holthouser said.

"He did the right thing," he said, referring to the pilot's decision to abort takeoff. "I give him all the credit in the world. It was a snap judgment and they didn't have much runway left."

Iran Makes New Offer To Help Free Hostages, But Slams U.S.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Iran's spiritual leader, Ayatollah Ali Khamenei, said today that Iran will never hold talks with the United States. Hours earlier, Iran renewed an offer to help free Western hostages in Lebanon.

The official Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Nicosia, reported in a commentary late Sunday that Tehran was "ready to use its maximum influence for the release of all hostages" if the United States freed Iranian assets worth billions of dollars it froze 10 years ago.

But Tehran Radio, also monitored in Cyprus, quoted Khamenei today as saying no Iranian leader will negotiate with the United States.

"Next to the usurper regime ruling over occupied Palestine, you are the most cursed government in the eyes of the Iranian people. No one in the Islamic republic will hold talks with you," the radio quoted Khamenei as telling U.S. leaders.

Khamenei has been seen as a so-called moderate in Iran, interested in restoring the country's ties with the West. His comments underlined the divisions in Tehran over whether Iran should help free the Western hostages in Lebanon.

"In Lebanon, America commits the greatest atrocities and encourages its puppet Israel in kidnapping and hostage-taking," Khamenei said, referring to Israel's abduction July 28 of Sheik Abdul Karim Obeid, a Shiite Moslem clergyman.

Khamenei did not specifically mention the Westerners held hostage. Most are held by pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem fundamentalists.

Khamenei was elected Iran's religious leader to succeed Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, who died June 3. At that time, he was clearly allied with Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani, the leader of Tehran's so-called pragmatists who favor rebuilding bridges with the West.

Rafsanjani, who was elected Iran's president, has made clear in recent days that dialogue with the United States on freeing the hostages is possible. He was behind the clandestine arms-for-hostages deal with the United States in 1985-86, during which three American hostages were freed.

But Rafsanjani's radical rivals in Tehran, led by Interior Minister Ali Akbar Mohtashemi, have said they oppose any dealings with the United States.

U.S. and Western intelligence officials have said Mohtashemi was closely linked with the formation of Hezbollah, the radical group believed to be the umbrella for factions holding foreign hostages.

The IRNA commentary Sunday said the United States must pressure Israel to free Obeid and secure the release of three Iranians missing in Lebanon since 1982 and all "Lebanese captives held by Israel."

The Israelis said they kidnapped Obeid to arrange a swap with three Israeli servicemen held in Lebanon. They later widened the offer to include the release of Western hostages.

Hezbollah has ruled out any exchange of the Israeli prisoners until Obeid is released.

The Sunday Times of London reported Sunday that Israeli investigators who have questioned Obeid believe two of the Israeli soldiers are dead.

Israel's chief army spokesman, Brig. Gen. Ephraim Lapid, said he refuses to accept that.

"My consideration is that they are alive and we must do our utmost to bring them home," Lapid told a news conference Sunday.

"We consider our prisoners of war ... as living until positive evidence proves the contrary," Lapid said.

The Sunday Times quoted unidentified senior Israeli government sources as saying Obeid's interrogators believe two Israeli infantrymen, Yousef Fink and Rahamim Alsheik, died of wounds within hours after their car was ambushed in south Lebanon in February 1986.

The hostages in Lebanon include eight Americans. The hostage held longest is Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press. He was kidnapped March 16, 1985.

The IRNA commentary Sunday said "the hostages are not held by Iran" but by "unknown and underground groups."

It said that "the influence Iran has on these groups is merely spiritual, which in certain cases in the past has proved effective."

Four Firms Will Recall Hair Dryers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Consumer Product Safety Commission announced today that four companies have agreed to recall approximately 250,000 hair dryers that the commission believes present a danger of electrocution.

In announcing the voluntary recall, the commission said it estimates that 17 Americans die each year of accidental electrocution by hair dryers, usually when they are dropped into bathtubs.

Anne Graham, acting chairman of the commission, said that from eight to 10 of the victims are usually children, often playing with the hair dryers as toys.

The firms and the hair dryers involved in the recall are MBR Industries Inc. of Miami, Fla, maker of Pomair Pro 2100 and 1900; Mustang Electronics Inc., of Hallandale, Fla., maker of Mustang MU 2100; Major International, Inc. of Orange, Calif., maker of Major Styling Dryer Model 1250; and China Bazaar of San Francisco, Minimate Hair Dryer and Iron DS-601.

The commission said all of the Minimate dryers had been stopped in inventory before being sold to consumers.

Consumers who purchased any of the other dryers can return them to the store where they bought them and receive a refund or replacement, Ms. Graham said.

"In addition to recalling the hair dryers, these firms have agreed to market only hair dryers which meet acceptable minimum safety levels," she said. "This means that they are contacting their foreign suppliers and demanding a safer product."

Ramstein Protest

RAMSTEIN, West Germany (AP) — Nearly 1,000 peace activists, politicians and relatives of victims of last year's Ramstein air disaster marched Sunday to protest exercises by low-flying NATO warplanes.

Hans Georg Wagner, an opposition Social Democrat from the Saarland state legislature, said the exercises over populated regions of West Germany amounted to acts of "terror," and he demanded an immediate end to the practice.

It was at the U.S. Air Base at Ramstein that three Italian aerobatic jets performing in an air show collided on Aug. 28, 1988, falling in ball of fire into the crowd of spectators. Seventy people were killed in the accident.

The Ramstein disaster led to widespread protests against low-flying exercises by national and NATO defense forces.

Public opposition intensified after a U.S. Air Force fighter plane crashed into a row of apartment houses in the city of Remscheid on Dec. 8. Six West Germans and the American pilot died in that accident.

Museums Open

ROME (AP) — Breaking a revered Italian custom, the culture minister has ordered state-run museums to remain open on Aug. 15, a national holiday.

In past years tourists have had to put up with almost everything in Italy being shut down on the national holiday, called "Ferragosto."

The new culture minister, Ferdinando Adornato, said the museums should stay open so foreign tourists and others could enjoy Italy's art.

However, one of Italy's most famous museums, the Uffizi Gallery in Florence, may be closed. Its employees have threatened to strike from Monday to Wednesday, saying the work order violates an agreement on opening hours on holidays.

Rest Home Burns

Rosanna Biehn, a Greenville resident who is the sister-in-law of Mrs. McDougald, in leading the dispatch of east wing residents with their records and medications to other facilities where they could be cared for. Volunteers from area nursing home staffs and staff of the Pitt County Department of Social Services assisted with the checking and rechecking of residents' records as they were assigned to various temporary homes.

Three residents who said they were experiencing chest pain or breathing difficulty were taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital. Two of them were back at the rest home this morning, while the third was kept in the hospital for observation.

Greenville Fire-Rescue personnel were assisted by the Pactolus Rescue Squad.

Per the rest home's evacuation plan and a previous agreement with nearby Cornerstone Baptist Church, 24 residents were taken to the church for temporary shelter until they could either go back to Carolina Care or be deployed to another facility, all of which was accomplished by 9 p.m.

According to records kept by Smart, 17 of the residents who could not re-enter the east wing went home with their families; 11 to Triad Health Care Center; five to Greenville Villa Nursing Home; six to the Regional Rehabilitation Unit of Pitt County Memorial Hospital, and 20 to Parkway Retirement Home in Cary. GREAT buses provided by the city took residents to other shelters.

The DSS set up a telephone for families of residents to make inquiry until midnight. According to Margaret Dixon, DSS supervisor of adult services, most calls came in after 11 p.m. newscasts on television. Calls today may be channeled through the DSS switchboard, 758-2167, she said.

Sunday night, Pitt County Memorial Hospital provided 140 meals for those at the fire scene, since no meals could be cooked. Cold cereal and fruit were served in the facility's dining room this morning, but lunch today was to be cooked in an already-thoroughly-cleaned kitchen, Mrs. McDougald said.

Pitt County Emergency Services Director Bobby Joyner's office assisted with the coordination of housing and transportation. Many other entities throughout the community, from local hotels to the Salvation Army, offered to help in any way they could, Mrs. McDougald said.

"I can't say enough," she said, "about how wonderfully everyone performed. I am so thankful for the way Norma and the staff responded initially and for the way everyone in the community was willing to do anything they could to help us."

Mrs. McDougald said shortly before 10 a.m. today that she had no idea what the cost of restoring the east wing and dealing with related damage done by the fire will be. Work will begin immediately, she said, adding that she hopes it will take no longer than two weeks.

"It's not business as usual here today, because there's a lot of cleaning up to do. But our residents are being cared for — here or elsewhere. Our nurses are even going to the nearby nursing homes to check on those that aren't here," she said. "And we feel blessed that we had no deaths nor injuries in such a potentially dangerous fire."

visibility was poor when Leland and his party left Addis Ababa. Bad weather had delayed their takeoff by two hours.

Flags were lowered to half-staff at the White House while President Bush and other leaders expressed sorrow at the death of Leland, who was en route to inspect conditions of 300,000 Sudanese civil war refugees at a camp in Fugnido, about 100 miles southwest of the crash site.

The Twin Otter aircraft, owned by Ethiopia's relief agency, crashed 4,300 feet up the side of a 5,500-foot mountain.

A U.S. C-130 Hercules cargo plane and two Blackhawk helicopters carrying 100 U.S. and Ethiopian recovery teams were sent from Ethiopia's capital this morning to retrieve the bodies, but the helicopters twice were forced back by bad weather.

John Guerra, a spokesman for the U.S. Embassy in the capital, said the weather cleared at midday and the helicopters set off again for the crash site.

The bodies were to be flown to nearby Dembidola then ferried by the C-130 to the capital.

Pentagon spokesman Navy Capt. Stan Bloyer said in Washington that the plane did not appear to be attempting an emergency landing and "basically disintegrated" after apparently hitting the side of the mountain at cruise speed.

The wreckage was in terrain so rugged that medical teams, including two doctors, had to be lowered to the site from helicopters, said Haley.

"At the very latest, we have 12 bodies confirmed," Haley said Sunday.

"It is fair to say the others are presumed dead."

The bodies of the nine Americans were to be flown home via Torrejon Air Base outside Madrid, Spain. Seven Ethiopians were also on board.

Leland's party consisted of two staff members; an aide to Rep. Ronald V. Dellums, D-Calif.; a friend of the congressman; three officers of the U.S. Agency for International Development; and the wife of one AID official. The Ethiopians included a U.S. Embassy employee, three government officials and a crew of three.

Refugees Flooding Embassy

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The government announced it will close the West German Embassy in Budapest today because it is overcrowded with East German refugees seeking to escape to the West.

A Foreign Ministry statement issued Sunday said, "The reception capacity for East German asylum seekers at the representation in Budapest is totally exhausted."

"The embassy must therefore be closed for the time being, beginning Monday, Aug. 14."

East Germans have been packing into the West German embassy in Budapest and its diplomatic missions in Prague and East Berlin in recent weeks hoping to escape from their communist homeland.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Claus Wunderlich would not say how many East Germans were inside the embassy in Budapest, the Hungarian capital, but news reports last week placed the figure at 300 and said others were arriving daily.

West Germany closed its East Berlin mission last Tuesday after 131 East Germans sought refuge there. Officials said the mission will not re-open until normal diplomatic operations can be resumed.

It is believed about 20 East Germans have sought refuge at the West German diplomatic mission in Prague, Czechoslovakia, but there were no indications the Bonn government had any immediate plans to close that facility.

West Germany as a standard practice grants asylum to East Germans.

The refugee crush in Hungary began after that Soviet-bloc nation began dismantling barriers along its western frontier with neutral Austria.

Emergency crews check out wreckage of balloon basket in which 13 people fell to their death

Balloon Victims Linked Arms

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ALICE SPRINGS, Australia — Most of the 13 people on a hot-air balloon that collided with another over the Australian outback locked arms before plummeting 2,000 feet to their death, authorities said.

An aviation expert called Sunday's accident the worst ballooning tragedy in the 206-year history of the sport.

The victims were 11 Australians, an Italian and a Dane, police said.

All balloon flights around Alice Springs, a central Outback town, were canceled while police and aviation authorities investigated the crash.

The accident occurred after the balloon, one of four on a sightseeing trip, rose quickly under a second, struck it, then started to shake, said Germany's Irene Fielder, who was on her first balloon ride when she witnessed the accident.

A hole the size of a bed sheet was torn in the cavernous red and black striped canopy, according to another report.

Authorities said three of the victims apparently tried to save themselves by jumping out at the moment of impact. The other 10 were found huddled, arms linked, in the woven basket attached to the canopy.

The balloon plunged to the ground in about 30 seconds, said Mike Crofts, who was in another balloon. "They didn't stand a chance," he said.

Anniversary Of British Action Spurs Riots

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — Police fired plastic bullets at rioting youths in mainly Roman Catholic west Belfast early today on the 20th anniversary of the arrival of British troops in Northern Ireland.

There were no reported injuries in disturbances that started about 6:15 a.m., said a spokesman for the Royal Ulster Constabulary, Northern Ireland's police force.

Two buses and a truck were hijacked and set on fire, said the spokesman, speaking anonymously in keeping with British custom. Bus service to the area was cut off for two hours to prevent more hijackings, he said.

Chief Constable Hugh Annesley appealed Sunday for calm across Northern Ireland during events today marking the day British troops entered Londonderry two decades ago to separate rebellious Catholics from charging police. Troops moved into Belfast a day later.

"I would like to see parents keep their children in," said Annesley. "I would like community leaders, church leaders, politicians of all persuasions, to encourage those in the community from one side to the other to please keep calm, to avoid being provoked and to let this very difficult time pass by."

Protestants marched Saturday in a parade in Londonderry to mark the 300th anniversary of a defeat over the Catholic King James II, and Catholics marched Sunday up the Falls Road in west Belfast.

Republicans plan to gather in Londonderry tonight to march through Waterloo Place where British soldiers first arrived at 5 p.m. on Aug. 14, 1969, after sectarian riots had engulfed the city for two days and nights.

Gerry Adams, president of Sinn Fein, the legal political wing of the outlawed Irish Republican Army, told Sunday's marchers:

"We have a lot to be proud of because we have come a long way in 20 years. Our opponents have failed to defeat us."

Adams praised the IRA as "the real freedom fighters."

Bernadette Devlin McAliskey, a leader in the Catholic civil rights marches of the 1960's, told the cheering crowd:

"The British army came in 19 and 69 not because we were being attacked, but because for the first time since the beginning of this state — this misbegotten tuppence ha'penny bastardized state — we were fighting back."

"The reasons they are still here 20 years after is because we are still fighting back," she said.

Looking back over 20 years, Mrs. McAliskey complained that Catholics still suffer more unemployment than Protestants, local government was powerless and the rights of criminal defendants, including the right to silence, have been eroded.

"Everything we got out of them we squeezed out of them," Mrs. McAliskey said. "Yet it was nothing, because every time we gained something they clawed it back."

Tax Collectors Hit By Car Firebomb

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RAMALLAH, Occupied West Bank — A firebomb set a car ablaze today and injured the four Israelis inside, the army said.

Witnesses in this town north of Jerusalem said the four were tax collectors riding in a car belonging to Israel's tax department when at least two firebombs were thrown at the vehicle.

An army spokesman said the injured were civilians but declined to say whether they worked with the tax department.

Ramallah and neighboring El Bireh, both about eight miles north of Jerusalem, have recently been the scenes of battles over non-payment of taxes as part of the 20-month Palestinian uprising in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Withholding taxes has been a major tactic of the uprising, and earlier this month merchants in the area staged a one-day general strike to protest the government's seizure of their identity papers to force payment of taxes.

Two of the victims suffered moderate to serious burns and two were slightly injured, according to a spokesman at Hadassah Hospital in the Jerusalem suburb of Ein Karem. Soldiers clamped a curfew on the area where the firebomb was thrown and began rounding up suspects.

An army spokesman, who is not identified under military regulations, would not say how many were arrested, but at least eight youths were seen in the custody of soldiers.

Soldiers also began welding shut at least 10 neighborhood shops, which the army commonly does as punishment when firebombs or stones cause injuries.

The army spokesman said two youths threw two or three firebombs at the car on Palestine Street, near the Kadoura refugee camp, in an area where stones and bottles have frequently been thrown at Israeli vehicles.

After the incident, soldiers also seized identity cards and videotapes from two Palestinians who work as part-time cameramen for television networks.

Also in the West Bank, masked youths set ablaze a bus carrying Arab workers to jobs in Israel, Israel radio said. No one was reported injured in the attack in Nablus, the West Bank's largest city.

At least 536 Palestinians have been killed in clashes with soldiers or Israeli civilians during the uprising. Thirty-eight Israelis also have been slain.

Syrians Shell Palace Of Christian Leader

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Syrian artillery today pounded the battered presidential palace of Christian leader Gen. Michel Aoun, the day after his forces repelled a ground attack on a mountain stronghold outside Beirut.

Souk el-Gharb, the stronghold 15 miles southeast of this beleaguered capital, was again hit by Syrian shellfire today.

Police said 25 Syrians, 20 Druse militiamen and 25 Palestinians were killed Sunday in the Souk el-Gharb fighting and in skirmishes along Beirut's dividing Green Line. The Lebanese Army said four of its men were killed and six wounded. They were no immediate reports of casualties today.

Aoun's aides said his forces were bracing for another assault.

"We're ready to take them on again," an Aoun aide said as mortar and tank fire hit the town, abandoned by civilians six years ago.

The mountaintop garrison, under siege by Syrian-backed Moslem forces since 1983, controls a network of roads that twist through Lebanon's central range into the Christian heartland.

If Souk el-Gharb fell it would leave the way open for a Syrian ground offensive into the beleaguered Christian sector, whose eastern flank is shielded by the mountains that make the roads vital for any infantry and tank assault.

Aoun said his U.S.-trained 8th Brigade, reinforced by the 10th commando brigade, repulsed a four-pronged attack on Souk el-Gharb Sunday by 2,100 Syrian regulars, Palestinian guerrillas of the radical Syrian-backed Fatah-Uprising faction and the Druse Progressive Socialist Party militia.

It was the first infantry assault in the confrontation between Aoun's estimated 20,000 troops and an alliance of about 40,000 Syrian regulars and Moslem militia allies that erupted March 8, the latest flare-up in Lebanon's 14-year-old civil war.

That raised fears the Syrians and their allies may be seeking to drive into Christian territory after five months of fierce artillery and rocket exchanges with Aoun's troops. They are backed by the 6,000-strong right-wing Lebanese Forces, the Christians' main militia.

Today's bombardment began sporadically around dawn and intensified by midday into sustained barrages on Christian east Beirut and north along the coast.

TOTAL LUNAR ECLIPSE

August 16, 1989

A lunar eclipse occurs when the moon passes through the shadow of the Earth. (A solar eclipse, on the other hand, happens when the Earth passes through the shadow of the moon.)

Total Lunar Eclipse To Occur Wednesday

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A total lunar eclipse visible from five continents occurs after sunset Wednesday when the full moon orbits into the shadow of the Earth and slowly turns from a bright silver into a copper or orange disk.

More than a billion people will have a chance to watch as the moon appears to be slowly nibbled away, changing from the normal bright reflected light of a full moon into the colorful glow of eclipse.

The celestial show starts at 8:23 p.m. EDT over the United States and will end about 5½ hours later. The eastern United States will get the best viewing and Alaska will miss the eclipse altogether.

Visible eclipse phases will vary for the central and western parts of the country because of the difference in sunset and moonrise. In Los Angeles, for instance, the eclipse will have started before the sun has set or the moon has risen. By the time the sky has darkened completely in California, the moon will already be in the deepest part of its eclipse. For Seattle, the moon will still be below the horizon at mid-eclipse, but will rise during the total phase.

Clouds, of course, could ruin the viewing at any location.

With clear skies, though, some phase of the celestial spectacle should be visible to observers in North and South America, western Europe and Africa, and the Antarctic. Sailors at sea in the Atlantic and in the eastern Pacific Ocean also will be able to see part of the eclipse, weather permitting.

A lunar eclipse occurs when the moon passes through the shadow created by the Earth blocking the sun's light. The moon, in its orbit of the Earth, usually passes above or below this shadowline, but every few years it follows a path that puts it completely in shade for a time. When the whole moon passes through the shadow, it is called a total eclipse.

The last total lunar eclipse visible over most of North America occurred in December 1982, and the next one is not until December 1992.

Astronomers are forecasting that Wednesday's eclipse may be a bright one.

The moon can appear during an eclipse to be a bright coppery red if there is clear, clean air between the lunar surface and the observer on Earth. If smoke or dust obscures the view, the moon will diminish to an orange color or perhaps even fade from view altogether.

Volcanic eruptions historically have dimmed eclipse viewing by dumping tons of dust into the atmosphere. But astronomers say enough time has passed since the last major volcanic eruption that most dust has settled.

The eclipse starts when the moon enters what is called the penumbra. This outer fringe of the Earth's shadow will show up on the moon as a grayish shading. After about half an hour, the moon will edge into the umbra, the dark, central part of the shadow. Total eclipse, when all of the moon is covered by the umbra, will begin at about 10:20 p.m. EDT and last for one hour, 36 minutes.

When the moon leaves the umbra, the events will occur in reverse order. The eclipse ends about 1:53 a.m. EDT when the moon edges out of the shadow altogether.

SPACE CENTER, Houston — Space shuttle Columbia's astronauts were tight-lipped after returning to Earth from a military mission believed to include the deployment of a spy satellite and tests of "Star Wars" equipment.

"We had a great time," Air Force Col. Mark Brown said after the Columbia glided to a pinpoint landing at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., early Sunday.

Neither he nor the four other astronauts had much else to say about the five-day, one-hour and 56-minute flight, the first for NASA's oldest shuttle in more than 3½ years.

The crew was resting today but will return to the Johnson Space Center on Tuesday for briefings about the flight.

The five astronauts and their wives returned home to Houston on Sunday afternoon. They were greeted at Ellington Field by their families and about 300 cheering friends and co-workers.

"It wasn't nice, it was fantastic," pilot Richard Richards, a Navy commander and one of three space rookies on the flight, told the crowd.

"Our mission went perfectly smooth," said Brown, a mission specialist and another first-timer in space. "The vehicle was flawless."

A news blackout ordered by the Department of Defense prevailed over the flight, and only a few brief announcements broke the silence. Even the landing was closed to the public.

The main goal of the mission was widely believed to be deployment of a powerful, 10-ton spy satellite that can snap highly detailed photographs of military installations, troop movements and other targets around the world. Such a satellite would help the United States verify Soviet compliance with arms treaties.

Air Force Secretary Donald Rice confirmed last week that the astronauts had deployed a satellite several hours after blastoff Tuesday from Cape Canaveral, Fla., but he would not elaborate about its purpose.

The astronauts also were believed to have conducted "Star Wars" experiments and to have performed tests aimed at determining the feasibility of monitoring military sites from space.

Columbia was commanded by Air Force Col. Brewster Shaw, a veteran of two previous shuttle flights. The crew also included mission specialists Navy Cmdr. David Leestma, who flew one previous flight, and Army Lt. Col. James Adamson.

Midwestern Telephone Workers Join Strike Against Baby Bells

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

More than 190,000 telephone employees were on strike nationwide today after workers in five Midwestern states joined the walkout. But two regional telephone companies reached settlements to keep 83,000 workers on the job.

About 35,000 members of the Communications Workers of America went on strike Sunday against Chicago-based Ameritech, which serves 12.3 million customers in the Midwest.

They joined more than 156,000 operators, installers and other employees at three other "Baby Bells" — NYNEX, Bell Atlantic, and Pacific Telesis — who entered the second week of their walkout today.

There were few signs of progress in resolving any of the disputes, which center on wages and company plans to cut back health benefits. Nevertheless, the CWA reached agreement Sunday with U.S. West, which serves 14 western states, and with Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., which has 11 million customers in Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas and Arkansas.

In both cases, the union accepted lower wage increases in exchange for company agreements to maintain health benefits more or less intact. Workers at U.S. West, based in the Denver area, settled for an immediate 5 percent increase, while St.

Louis-based Southwestern Bell agreed to a 5.25 percent hike.

The accords averted strikes by 42,000 U.S. West workers and 41,000 employees of Southwestern Bell.

Union officials reached agreement Aug. 5 with the seventh regional company, Atlanta-based BellSouth.

The seven Baby Bells were created by the 1984 breakup of American Telephone & Telegraph. Each has sought to get workers to pay a larger share of their health insurance costs, which have soared at twice the rate of inflation in recent years.

The regional companies already on strike have said that most direct-dial calls were going through normally on automated equipment.

President Bush's Letter Boosts Introduction To Government

By Joy Miller
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

VICKSBURG, Miss. — A good way for school kids to make friends outside their hometown is to find a pen pal. But, not everybody makes friends with the President of the United States.

Jett Elementary first-grader Michael Kavanaugh said he was really surprised when he recently received a personal letter and photograph from President Bush.

It all started when Kavanaugh's teacher, Judy Williams, decided to teach the class about politics and government as part of their history instruction. Williams stressed introducing kids to politics and government early.

"It's important that the kids know where they are and what role they have to play in society," she said. "Sometimes it's too late when we start Mississippi history and civics in the seventh or eighth grade" because the children may have lost interest by then.

Since it was an election year,

Williams wanted to teach them about the nomination and election process for the presidency. The students learned that "you don't become a candidate just because you want to," Williams said.

So they held their own election and Kavanaugh was chosen class president.

Williams also wanted them to be able to recognize the president, governor and mayor.

The students began to keep up with election news and cut out pictures of national and local candidates. Then they wrote letters to the president, governor and mayor, requesting pictures that are now displayed above the chalkboard in the classroom.

Mayor Robert Walker spent more than an hour discussing politics and government with the class back in March, Williams said. The students were delighted and proud because they could recognize local, state and national leaders and because someone important took out the time to actually visit them, Williams added.

President Bush sent an official photograph to the class, though it was not autographed, as they had requested.

As class president and because his handwriting was so beautiful, Kavanaugh had the honor of thanking Bush for the picture, Williams said. He asked the president to visit Jett when he came to Mississippi to speak at Alcorn and Mississippi State Universities. Kavanaugh decided what to say in the letter himself and read it to all 24 of his classmates before mailing it.

He got an extra five points in history for his efforts.

That was almost two months ago and Kavanaugh and Williams didn't expect to hear from Bush again.

And they didn't, until a hand-addressed envelope arrived at the school with a White House postmark, directed to Michael Kavanaugh. "Mr. Tillotson, the principal, brought it to me when it came," he said.

Inside was a casual snapshot of the President, wearing a red sweater and a friendly smile for his new pen pal. In the letter, Bush praised Kavanaugh for his hard work at school and encouraged his continued progress.

Kavanaugh treasures the letter and photograph along with all the neat things his class learned and took part in this past year.

By the end of the year the students could look at a map and point out Mississippi and Vicksburg and name the neighboring states as well, Williams said. They learned the state song, "Go Mississippi," and got a warm round of applause when they performed it at the welcome center on Washington Street. The class didn't know that hospitality week was in progress when they walked to the center, but the tourists were glad they came, Williams said.

Explaining why she especially wanted the students to learn about Mississippi, Williams said, "As a whole, as educators we do a good job of teaching patriotism and love for our country; if we can teach students to be as proud of Mississippi as we are of other states, maybe we can keep some of these good students at home."

Williams has 15 years teaching experience.

Kavanaugh, whose favorite subject is history, wants to be president, like his pen pal, when he grows up.

Putting Together A Homemade Potpourri

By Lynn Williams
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

The best homemade potpourri comes from flowers that you pick yourself at the peak of their bloom. Those without extensive flower gardens, however, can often get what they need from garden centers or herb specialists.

Even potpourri-makers who grow their own often purchase the tiny pink rosebuds that make a particularly romantic-looking potpourri.

Spices are as close as the nearest supermarket, and essential oils and fixatives can be purchased from herb-products dealers, spice shops and some craft supply shops. Recipes are available in a number of books, including Barbara Milo Ohrbach's "The Scented Room" (Clarkson N. Potter), "Potpourris and Other Fragrant Delights," by Jacqueline Heriteau (Simon and Schuster) and the new "The Book of Potpourri" by Penny Black (Simon and Schuster).

Below, a list of some of the more popular ingredients for potpourri:

Aromatic flowers: rose, lavender, hibiscus, peony, carnation, scented geranium, iris, violet, jasmine, orange blossom.

Decorative flowers: strawflowers, heather, cornflowers, marigold, statice, larkspur.

Herbs: Roman chamomile, lemon verbena, rosemary, costmary, lemon balm, bee balm, mint, sage, woodruff, thyme, sweet annie, lemon or cinnamon basil.

Spices: cinnamon sticks, cloves, nutmeg, citrus peel, mace, allspice, lemongrass, cardamom, bay leaf, eucalyptus, coriander, anise, vanilla bean.
Fixatives: orrisroot, patchouli leaves, frankincense, oakmoss, benzoin, calamus root, gum arabic, kelp, myrrh.
Essential oils: rose, lavender, jasmine, lily of the valley, heliotrope, honeysuckle, lemon, rose geranium.

War Memorial Will Be People's Gift

Dear Abby: Orchids to you for calling public attention to the Korean War veterans.

In March, my wife, two sons and I visited Washington, D.C., for a sightseeing vacation that included a tour of Arlington National Cemetery. Our guide pointed out the Korean War "memorial," which was a cement park bench on which was engraved: "In Sacred Memory of Those Americans Who Gave Their Lives During the Korean War (1950-1953). 54,246 Died; 8,377 Missing in Action; 559 Unaccounted-For POWs."

Our sons were incensed after reading the casualty statistics. They had no idea the Korean War was so bloody and costly, and couldn't understand why those who fought in Vietnam had been honored with such an impressive memorial, while the

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Korean War veterans had only a cement park bench.

Matt, 13, felt compelled to do something about it, so for his Eagle Scout project he researched the Korean War and began a movement in our city to raise awareness, support and money for a proper memorial to honor those who served — including my own cousin who was killed in action.

I am proud of Matt's sensitivity. And God bless you, Abby, for caring so much. — Thankful In Fort Worth

P.S. Please tell us where we can send contributions for the Korean War Veterans Memorial.

Dear Thankful: Thank you for asking. Contributions (checks or money orders; no cash, please) should be made out to: Korean War Memorial, P.O. Box 2372, Washington, D.C. 20013-2372.

The proposed memorial will cost $6 million — funded by contributions from the public, and not one dime of government money. Let's get that well-deserved memorial built. A buck or two from you will do it!

Dear Abby: This problem may seem insignificant to you, but it's important to me. When I was in Byrd High School in Shreveport, La., in the '60s, I loved to dance the "twist." I spent every weekend at dances, and as soon as the music began, I couldn't control my feet. Toes tapping, fingers snapping — up and away onto the dance floor to twist the night away. My friends tolerated this compulsive behavior and nicknamed me "Louie the Twister." It was laughable when I was in high school, but what would they say now, knowing that I still can't stop twisting when the music starts?

My 25th high school reunion is coming up, and I want to go to the dance and see my old classmates. However, I'm embarrassed to say that I haven't changed my style of dancing; I still love to do the twist. Should I go and risk humiliation? Or stay in Pensacola in the safety of my home? — Louie The Twister

Dear Louie: People attend class reunions to relive the good old days, so go back, enjoy your reunion and twist to your heart's content. It's not only great fun, it's great for the waistline.

Bird To Get $6 Million For One Year

BOSTON — Boston Celtics forward Larry Bird has become the first athlete in any team sport to sign a contract worth more than $6 million for one year, sources have told The Associated Press.

Bird negotiated the contract last fall, before undergoing foot surgery that forced him to miss virtually all of the season. Terms of the contract were not disclosed until this weekend, when the National Basketball Association released its team salary cap.

The two-year contract extension, covering the 1990-91 and 1991-92 seasons, will bring Bird an average of about $4.2 million a year. But in order to stay under the salary cap — which limits the total amount that any team can pay its players in a single year — the Celtics will pay him about $2 million in 1990-91. Then they will give him a salary and huge bonus worth more than $6 million the following year.

The nine-time All-Star, who has led the Celtics to three NBA titles, played only six games last season because of surgery to remove bone spurs in his feet. He gave the team a shock when he returned to scrimmaging two weeks ago and promptly broke some small bones in his back during a collision and fall.

After determining that the bones were not weight-bearing, physicians indicated the 6-foot-9 forward would quickly be able to return to play.

Bird's previous five-year contract has paid him $1.8 million a year, far less than the salaries of such NBA stars as Michael Jordan of the Chicago Bulls, Magic Johnson of the Los Angeles Lakers, David Robinson of the San Antonio Spurs and Patrick Ewing of the New York Knicks. They are all reportedly earning more than $3 million a year.

Bird's agent and lawyer, Bob Woolf, confirmed Saturday that Bird had signed an extension through 1991-92.

Woolf said that when the contract agreement was made, Bird, now 32, had said he would retire in 1992, which would give him three more seasons of action.

The negotiations took three months and were complicated by the need to keep Bird's salary from pushing the Celtics over the salary cap, which is $9.8 million per NBA team this year and will rise with the league's receipts.

Other than the NBA's top stars, no other athletes in team sports are believed to have signed contracts for as much as $3 million, although several football and baseball players are paid in the $2.5 million range.

Woods Will Not Suspend Arrested Players

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Three South Carolina football players charged with shoplifting will be on the field — not the sidelines — when the Gamecocks begin two-a-day practices today under first-year Coach Sparky Woods.

The three players — Bobby Brown, Trent Simpson and Calvin Stephens — have applied for a pre-trial intervention program and will also be allowed to compete for starting spots beginning today, Woods said.

"We still feel like they embarrassed the University of South Carolina," Woods told reporters during the team's annual media day Saturday. But "we're going to retain them on the football team."

"They are required to stay within curfew every night, and we're going to remind them with some early-morning conditioning for a while."

Woods said he would decide later when the 9 p.m. curfew and the conditioning would end.

Solicitor Jim Anders said Saturday he did not think there would be a problem with his office accepting the players' application for the pre-trial intervention program.

First-time offenders can expunge their arrest records by successfully completing P.T.I., which includes community service work.

"If they made restitution and it's agreeable to (J.B.) White's, it would be agreeable provided they have no other criminal record," Anders said.

Stephens, a 6-2, 280-pound senior, is a two-year starter on the offensive line. Brown, a 6-foot-2, 252-pound sophomore, finished spring practice as the team's starting noseguard. Simpson, a 6-4, 260-pound senior, is expected to contend for the starting tight end job.

Ferebee Announces Retirement

SALISBURY (AP) — Joe Ferebee, who amassed more than 1,400 victories in more than 40 years of coaching high school, college and American Legion baseball, announced his retirement Saturday.

Ferebee, 70, coached Salisbury and Rowan County American Legion teams for 30 years.

He joined the Salisbury High School staff as coach in 1949, and posted a record of 77-32, and won one state championship. Ferebee began his American Legion coaching career in 1949 at Spencer, and coached Salisbury from 1950 to 1956.

Ferebee became baseball coach at Pfeiffer College in 1957 and led the Falcons for 31 years, compiling 667 victories and 330 losses. He also coached the Albemarle American Legion team in 1957, and was encouraged to return to Salisbury in 1967 to coach the Rowan team, where he remained for 23 years.

"It was just a one-year deal at start," Ferebee said. "But it lasted a long time."

Ferebee's teams won four North Carolina American Legion championships, finished second four times in the state playoffs, captured 20 league championships, 12 area titles, and one Southeastern Regional crown.

Ferebee had 10 20-victory seasons, eight 30-victory seasons and one 40-victory season. His teams won four state championships — in 1955, 1969, 1971 and 1984, and finished second four times.

He had only three losing seasons — in 1952, 1988 and 1989.

Ferebee said he had planned to retire after the 1984 season, but was encouraged to continue.

"I know I will miss coaching the young men," he said. "I put my soul and heart into it. I enjoyed working with the young players. If I had not enjoyed this association with the players, I would not have stayed in it this long."

Ferebee has been named to Halls of Fame for the North Carolina American Legion, the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics, and Catawba College.

Earnhardt Visits Leukemia Patient

RANLO (AP) — Randall Rabb had one wish when he found out he had leukemia — he wanted to meet his favorite race car driver.

With the help of a Ranlo business and Anheuser-Busch, the Bessemer City man got his wish.

NASCAR racer Dale Earnhardt met Rabb in a Seattle, Wash., hospital about two months ago. Since then, Earnhardt and manager Ned Jarrett have kept tabs on Rabb, and decided they could do something to help.

"Randall learned he had leukemia last year, and at that time the doctors just gave him a few months to live," said Tracy Lane, an employee at Standard Distributing in Ranlo. "Randall is a big race fan, and his last wish was to meet some race-car drivers."

After the meeting, Lane approached the stock-car driver and manager about holding a race to raise money to help pay Rabb's medical expenses. The two waved the checkered flag.

On Sept. 6, while Rabb continues to fight for his life, Earnhardt will be burning up the track at the Carolina Speedway.

Leukemia is a life-threatening cancer that attacks a person's bone marrow. Two weeks ago, doctors removed Rabb's marrow and replaced it with a healthy supply from his sister.

Insurance will pay most of the $150,000 needed for Rabb's treatment. But it won't pay the medical expenses of his sister, Carol Rabb. She hasn't been told how much her treatment will cost. Lane gives the credit for the race to Jarrett.

"People like him make things possible," Lane said.

Jarrett has agreed to line up some other drivers. Several have expressed an interest, he said, including Rusty Wallace.

In addition to the race, Hogs — the Gastonia chapter of the Harley Owners Group — is planning a Sept. 16 tri-county bike run. Last month the Gastonia Rangers amateur baseball team sponsored a series of events to raise money for Rabb.

Flurry Sends McEnroe Past Berger

John McEnroe lunges for backhand against Jay Berger

INDIANAPOLIS — Regaining the No. 1 ranking in the world isn't what motivates John McEnroe as he juggles his role as player, husband and father.

"I'm doing the juggling act better. There's no way you can prepare yourself for being a father and the responsibilities that go with that," said McEnroe, who is married to actress Tatum O'Neal and has two young sons.

"I feel like I'm handling it better now. There's no tougher job than that," said McEnroe, ranked No. 6 in the world. "It's also the most rewarding... It's an extra challenge that you have to try to do both, but it's certainly more satisfying when you succeed."

The 30-year-old McEnroe, who was No. 1 in the world from 1981-84, won the final 13 points Sunday to defeat 22-year-old Jay Berger 6-4, 4-6, 6-4 in the championship match of the U.S. Hardcourts tennis tournament.

"I have the desire to play the best that I can play. I feel if I really do that I could end up in that position," McEnroe said of the No. 1 ranking.

Sunday's victory was his 75th in a Grand Prix event, including four U.S. Open triumphs and three at Wimbledon.

"I don't have a burning desire to be No. 1. I didn't really feel like I enjoyed it much the years that I was there. I felt like it was a pressure that I could do without," said McEnroe, who will play in Montreal this week in his final tune-up before this year's Open.

"There were moments where I felt I played as well as I have all year here," said McEnroe, although he admitted he needs to work on his first serve before the Open.

"Hopefully I can improve on it a little bit while I play (in Montreal) and that week between the tournament and the U.S. Open. I need to bear down and really evaluate what's causing me to serve a lower percentage than I feel will win me the Open. I need to get up about 10 percent."

After drawing even after two sets, Berger ran into a McEnroe buzzsaw.

"The shots that he hit then were just great shots. There was just nothing I could do. If he plays that way, no one will ever beat him," said Berger, who was playing McEnroe for the first time ever. "Whoever was watching the match saw John McEnroe make 12 winners in a row... I don't think I played a bad game. The guy just made winners."

Berger gained an advantage in the final set when McEnroe double-faulted twice in the fifth game. The second double fault ended the 16-point game and gave Berger a 3-2 lead.

Berger then held service for a 4-2 lead, but won only two points in the final four games.

McEnroe, playing for the first time since losing in the Wimbledon semifinals, evened the match by breaking Berger at love. McEnroe had two aces, giving him 11 for the match, while serving for a 5-4 lead, and again broke Berger at love to close out the match.

McEnroe pocketed $51,000 with his victory.

Nunn, Barkley Battle Tonight For IBF Middleweight Crown

RENO, Nev. — Michael Nunn considers his title defense against Iran Barkley tonight to be a battle between the two best middleweights in the world.

Nunn, of course, says Barkley is No. 2.

That seems to be by far the nicest thing Nunn has said about the man who will challenge him for the International Boxing Federation championship in a scheduled 12-round bout at the Lawlor Events Center.

"He said I got an IQ of an onion," complained the 29-year-old Barkley, a former World Boxing Council 160-pound champion. "He said I was a robot man."

"It sounds amusing and funny, but a champion should know how to carry himself."

Nunn had a reason for doing what he did.

"When I knocked out Frank Tate, he (Barkley) was shooting off his mouth," Nunn said. "He didn't respect me as a champion."

Nunn, 26, won the IBF title by stopping Tate in the ninth round on July 28, 1988. At the time, both Tate and Barkley were promoted by the Houston Boxing Association, but Barkley has since split with the HBA.

Many people in boxing consider

Nunn to be the world's premier middleweight, but he has had to take a backseat to Sugar Ray Leonard, Roberto Duran and Thomas Hearns in terms of public recognition.

Duran will appear on tonight's card in a four-round exhibition against Danny Morgan, while Leonard will be at ringside as a commentator for HBO, which will televise the title match at about 7:20 p.m. PDT.

The 38-year-old Duran and the 33-year-old Leonard, who split two welterweight title bouts in 1980, will fight again Dec. 7 at Las Vegas. The contract weight limit for that fight will be 162 pounds. Duran said he now weighs 182.

Nunn's opinion that Barkley is the second-best middleweight in the world certainly has not been taken seriously by the oddsmakers. Nunn was a 10-1 favorite.

In his last defense, Nunn scored a one-punch, 88-second knockout of Sumbu Kalambay, a former World Boxing Association champion. Barkley lost a 15-round unanimous decision to Kalambay in a bid for the WBA title on Oct. 23, 1987.

One of those who thinks Barkley can pull an upset is Duran, who on Feb. 24 won the WBC title from Barkley on a 12-round split decision. Barkley had won the title on a big upset, stopping Hearns in the third round on June 6, 1988.

"Michael Nunn doesn't know what Barkley has to offer," Duran said. "Barkley is a dangerous opponent. I think Michael Nunn is taking this fight lightly."

"I don't see nothing in Michael Nunn. He is still a green fighter," Nunn has heard that before.

"Everybody tells me I'm a green fighter, but why doesn't anybody want to fight me if I'm so green?" Nunn said.

Nunn, who has a 33-0 record with 23 knockouts, has often expressed an interest in fighting Leonard, Duran and Hearns. That interest has not been returned.

Barkley has a 25-5 record with 16 knockouts.

Barkley, whose purse is $400,000, could make about $250,000 for his trainer, Ahmed Bay, who reportedly bet $25,000 on him to win.

Nunn's purse is $1.25 million.

Reid Falters...

Reid fluffed the chip and it was about 14 feet short.

"I didn't follow through on the shot," he explained.

Still, a bogey would leave him tied with Stewart, who was now laughing with those in the scoring tent.

Reid putted two feet past the hole. He missed the one coming back as it hit the cup and rolled off to the left. He was not the leader for the first time in the tournament.

"I was too aggressive and then I hurried the next putt," he said of his only three-putt of the tournament.

Reid wasn't through toying with the emotions of the gallery and television audience.

His drive on the par-4, 433-yard 18th left him in good shape for a try at a birdie and a playoff.

He hit a 5-iron over the pond guarding the green to within four feet.

Reid had a chance to erase two lost majors — two three-putts and two balls that found water.

He missed.

"We're all human," Reid said. "We all want to play textbook golf, but it doesn't work that way."

Reid was obviously upset but still managed a high-five with Stewart as he walked to the tent to tally his final-round 74 and 277 total, 11 under par but one stroke behind the leader.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AQJ ♥954 ♦AQJ3 ♣876
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♣ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—You have the values for a forcing jump raise to three spades, and certainly no one can complain about the quality of your support. However, it is a sound principle that, if any other bid is available, you should never jump raise partner's suit unless you have four-card support. Make the temporizing response of two diamonds.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K9862 ♥65 ♦83 ♣9842
Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What action do you take?
A.—At no trump, you might not produce a single trick for partner. At spades, you surely will make a trick or two. Bid two spades (or transfer into spades, if that is your style, then pass). That tells partner you are weak and want to play there.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ93 ♥KJ7 ♦763 ♣AJ7
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♣ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
1 ♣ Pass 1 NT Pass
What action do you take?
A.—You and your partner have shown no great enthusiasm for each other's suits. Since you have a minimum opening bid and partner has made a bid you can pass, there is no reason why you should not bail out of the auction now. Pass.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

What do you bid now?
A.—You elected not to open the bidding on a borderline hand, but don't hang partner because he fired the opening salvo. Jump to two no trump. That gives him a bit of latitude should he have opened light in third seat.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K76 ♥8 ♦AKQ762 ♣Q32
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♣ Pass
2 ♦ Pass 3 ♣ Pass
What do you bid now?
A.—You have a good hand that is improved by the fact that you have useful cards in both of partner's suits. Jump to four spades. Since you didn't support partner originally, he'll know you don't have four spades.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A98 ♥10762 ♦83 ♣J652
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ Pass 2 ♥ Pass
3 ♣ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Partner's three-club game try asks you to consider only your holding in clubs for game purposes, and what you have is the worst. Beat a hasty retreat to three hearts. Switch your black-suit holdings, however, and we would bid four hearts despite the minimum nature of our raise.

Payne Stewart (left) celebrates PGA win while Mike Reid grimaces after missed putt

Stewart Captures PGA

Reid Sees Another Major Slip Away

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HAWTHORN WOODS, Ill. — Greg Norman has become known the last few years as the man who has major golf tournaments stolen from him. Mike Reid is getting a reputation as the man who gives them away. In April in the Masters, Reid led through 14 holes on the final day before three-putting and putting a ball in the water to lose the lead and watch Nick Faldo go on to victory. On Sunday in the PGA, Reid led through 16 holes on the final day before putting a ball in the water and three-putting to lose the lead as eventual champion Payne Stewart watched from the scoring tent. "The bright side is I led the Masters through 14 holes," Reid said. "This time I led through 16. Someday I'll get it right."

Things looked so right for the man the other pros call "Radar." He had a three-stroke lead when the rain-delayed third round was completed Sunday morning. Birdies by Reid at Nos. 10 and 11 seemed to make the challenge of U.S. Open champion Curtis Strange just another story for the final day of the year's final major golf tournament. But Reid's drive on the par-4, 469-yard 16th hole found water. The three-stroke lead over Strange still looked relatively safe and Stewart was yet another stroke back. "I had driven good on 16 throughout the tournament," Reid said. "It was a normal shot. I cut it a little more than I wanted." He dropped in the heavy rough and hit his third shot short of the water that cuts in front of the green.

He put a wedge to within 12 feet of the hole and made the putt. "He made a good bogey putt on 16," Stewart said. By that time, Stewart had started and ended a birdie binge that saw him make four over the last five holes. When he dropped a 12-foot birdie putt on 18, he had a back nine of 31, a round of 5-under-par 67 and with a final standing of 12-under, a chance for a spot in a playoff should Reid falter. Reid hit a 4-iron on the 172-yard, par-3 17th. It hit the green and rolled to the back fringe. "I was proud of the shot and I was calm," said Reid, who fought off tears in explaining his downfall to the media. "I told myself you can knock the second shot into the hole. I didn't lose my concentration." (See REID, B-2)

17th Costs Hoch, Reid Ryder Cup Spot

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HAWTHORN WOODS, Ill. — The 17th hole of the Kemper Lakes Golf Course cost both Mike Reid and Scott Hoch a place on the 12-man U.S. Ryder Cup team. Reid, who needed to win the PGA to qualify for the team, double-bogeyed the 172-yard, par-3 17th on Sunday and he eventually finished one stroke behind Payne Stewart. Hoch, who needed a sixth-place finish to make the team, finished eighth because of a bogey on the devilish hole with a peninsula green. "It just shows that there are a different set of pressures when you are trying to make the Ryder Cup team," team captain Raymond Floyd said. "Sometimes you try too hard to make this elite field." Because Stewart had already qualified by points, Floyd will get two at-large or "wild card" picks to fill out the American roster for the Sept. 22-24 matches against a European team. Floyd will announce those choices on Tuesday in Castle Rock, Colo. Tom Watson, Jack Nicklaus, and Lee Trevino, three veterans of Ryder Cup play, are expected to be at the top of Floyd's list. Mark Calcavecchia, the winner of the British Open who did not play here because of the birth of his daughter, leads the team with 867,500 points. U.S. Open champion Curtis Strange is next with 746,250 followed by Chip Beck, 643,000; Stewart, 635,000; Tom Kite, 597,500; Paul Azinger, 532,500; Fred Couples, 518,542; Ken Green, 465,000; Mark O'Meara, 437,500, and Mark McCumber, 419,167. Hoch was the first alternate with 398,333 points. Steve Pate was the second alternate with 391,667 followed by Joey Sindelar with 376,500, Bruce Lietzke with 372,500 and Ben Crenshaw with 370,500. "I couldn't be more happy with our team," Floyd said. "We have 10 world-class players. Even if I didn't pick two more players on Tuesday we might beat them with the 10 players we have in place." Floyd said because Beck, Azinger, Couples, Green and McCumber are Ryder Cup rookies, he wants to add some veterans.

East Carolina Media Day

Hunter Keeps Up Guard But Remains Confident

By Tom Morris
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Travis Hunter has long heard the whispers of doubt about his quarterbacking abilities, but he learned early on not to pay them much attention. For four years in a row, he has entered pre-season football camp at East Carolina as the starter. Along the way, he has quietly climbed up the Pirate record books and could end his career as the school's passing and total offense leader. He has been cheered and he has been booed. He has started and he has also watched from the sidelines. But most of all, he has survived. When new coach Bill Lewis switched from last year's option-oriented run-and-shoot scheme to the pro set I-formation attack, some figured that would be the end of Hunter's starting days. With only one year left, he could have easily been a victim of a youth movement. "Sometimes maybe you (can) get lost in the shuffle," Hunter said. "They (the coaches) came in and laid everything on the line. They said they were going to open up the offense. That's something you have to accept and adjust to. "I wasn't nervous about anything. Everybody probably counted me out, saying I can't do this or I can't do that. Everybody but Travis. Anybody can throw a football when there's no one out there. But when the linemen come rushing in, a quarterback has to be able to adjust to that and make the throws." And Hunter (5-9½, 180) says he can do just that. He proved it in spring practice, holding off challenges from Chad Grier, Jeff Blake and Charlie Libretto to earn the number-one spot heading into pre-season camp. "There was no doubt about it," ECU offensive coordinator and quarterback coach Mark Richt said. "People will see what a Florida State or a Miami has done offensively, and Travis might not be of the size and stature that you would go out and sell the farm under to recruit, but you can't deny the fact that he has been a very productive football player at this university. You can't throw that type of experience away." Hunter, a Winter Garden, Fla. native, came to ECU in 1985 and was redshirted. He came back that spring and earned MVP honors in the spring game to garner the number-one spot heading into the fall. He didn't start that opening game as Charlie Libretto got the nod, but ended up seeing a good deal of playing time during a 2-9 season. As a sophomore in 1987, he started all 11 games as ECU went 5-6, its best mark since 1983's 8-3 team. He had his best season that year, completing 49 percent of his passes for 1,107 yards while running for another 307. His numbers dropped somewhat last year as he again split time with Libretto. He started nine games and

Lewis Keeps Goals Simple: 'Be The Best We Can Be'

By Woody Peele
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

East Carolina's new football coach, Bill Lewis, likes to keep it simple, it would seem. He has only one goal for the 1989 Pirates. "Our goal is to be the very best that we can be," he told reporters at the annual Pirate Media Day activities Sunday. "We have no goals for winning or losing. If we can come off the field on Saturdays with no regrets with the way we've played and not say 'I wish I'd done (something) different,' then the scoreboard will take care of itself." "To be the best we can is to come together as a team and as a family," he continued. "This is extremely important to me. All parts of our team must have a special feeling for each other. And as long as I am here this will be our only goal." Lewis, who came to East Carolina from the University of Georgia, will send his first team onto the field at Ficklen Stadium for the first time on Sept. 9 when the Pirates host Bowling Green. Saturday, the veterans reported to join the incoming freshmen in camp. Actual practice for the whole team will begin on Tuesday. "This is the most exciting time of the year for me as a coach," Lewis said. "It's the opportunity to work on the field to get ready for the season." Lewis said he was impressed with the new freshmen — both with the condition they were in when they reported and the way they have worked in their brief practice thus far. And he added, "we have demanded a lot of them." And while the varsity has not gone through the majority of its pre-season testing as yet, Lewis said he was impressed with what he had seen thus far. "From the way they dressed and looked this morning at a team devotional, they appear to have great pride in themselves and a great feeling of being back." The team went through various physical testing on Sunday and will continue this today. All players must meet certain standards based on their positions. (See LEWIS, B-4)

Wallace Finds Peace In Second Win At Watkins Glen

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. — Rusty Wallace was at peace with the world for the first time in weeks. The controversy and bad luck that have dogged him through much of the season were set aside after he twice came from the back of the field on Sunday to win the Budweiser at the Glen NASCAR stock car race. But the problems weren't forgotten, even in the happy glow of his second career victory on the 2.48-mile, seven-turn road course at Watkins Glen International. "Today, I was kind of on a mission to win this thing," Wallace said after beating Mark Martin to the finish line by 1.06 seconds in the 90-lap, 214.58-mile event. The victory, Wallace's fourth of the season and 14th of his Winston Cup career, was also his first in 12 races, dating to April 9 at Bristol, Tenn. It was a soothing balm for Wallace, who has recently made headlines with a lawsuit against car-owner Raymond Beadle, claiming his contract has been breached. The details of the lawsuit and of his contract have been published in a number of newspapers, a fact that has caused the 32-year-old St. Louis, Mo., native some concern and embarrassment. "We've had so many problems this year," he said. "There's a lot of people who know a lot about my personal business, and I don't think they should. That's journalism and I know that, but it's been tough on me. "And we've had a good car all year, but we've just had so much bad luck, so many things go wrong," Wallace added. "This proves the Blue Max Team isn't dead just because we've got problems. Rusty Wallace did not sue the Blue Max Team; Rusty Wallace sued Raymond Beadle. "The team's got an understanding of what's going on and these guys are working their guts out." A year ago, Wallace used a late-season hot streak to challenge eventual champion Bill Elliott for the series title. Wallace, who now is fourth in the standings after 18 of 29 races, hopes Sunday's victory is the beginning of another stretch drive. "This is where we started doing well last year," said Wallace, who finished second to Ricky Rudd here in 1988 after winning the previous year. "We have 12 races left and I feel like we can win 'em all." His trademark last season was falling a lap or more off the pace and coming back to win. This time, Wallace didn't lose a lap to the leaders, but still had to overcome some major hurdles. "We started 14th, and got up to right on Ricky's bumper (in second)," Wallace said. "I was just getting ready to pass him when the caution flag came out just as we were finishing a lap. "It was too late for us to get in the pits, but a lot of the other guys behind us made it in and there we were stuck at the back of the field. "We've come from way back, millions and millions of times, so it didn't bother me. But then we got back up to the lead and cut down a tire, got way in the back and had to do it again. "Front to back, front to back. I knew we really needed a caution flag and, thankfully, we got it." The flat tire came on lap 66, with Wallace battling pole-starter Morgan Shepherd for the lead. He got his caution flag, one of six that course yellows in the race, on lap 69 when Rudd's engine blew. After the leaders pitted for tires and gas, Wallace was sixth. By the end of the next green-flag lap, the 73rd, he was third. After leader Michael Waltrip spun off the track on lap 76 after bumping with road racing specialist Tommy Kendall, a 22-year-old UCLA student making his NASCAR debut, Wallace charged around Kendall into the lead the next time around and kept his Pontiac Grand Prix there to the end. Martin, who now is second in the season points, was unable to challenge Wallace. A crowd estimated at about 100,000 was on hand for the fourth annual Winston Cup race at the Glen.
