TADEUSZ MAZOWIECKI

Solidarity Editor Chosen As Minister

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WARSAW, Poland — President Wojciech Jaruzelski has chosen Solidarity activist Tadeusz Mazowiecki to be the new prime minister and lead the East bloc's first non-communist government, a government source said today.

"I can expect such an offer. I am ready to accept it," Mazowiecki told reporters after meeting with Jaruzelski this morning.

A highly placed state official said that during the meeting, Jaruzelski chose Mazowiecki from three Solidarity-backed candidates and would offer him the prime minister's post. The Sejm, or parliament, where a Solidarity-backed alliance has a firm majority, must approve Jaruzelski's choice.

Mazowiecki is a journalist who spent time in jail for his anti-government activities. He refused to give details of his meeting with the president, saying only that it concerned "all important topics."

"There are huge troubles, huge problems. It won't be easy," Mazowiecki said of the prime minister's post. "I am afraid of many things, but if I were only afraid, I would be a total pessimist. Somebody has to try it."

The new government will be the first non-communist government in Poland in 45 years and inherits an economy wracked by inflation, shortages and a $39 billion foreign debt.

The government official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said a formal announcement on Jaruzelski's choice would be made Saturday. The Communist Party Central Committee also is scheduled to meet Saturday.

Mazowiecki is editor of the Solidarity weekly newspaper Tygodnik Solidarnosc. The other candidates recommended by Solidarity were Jacek Kuron, a Solidarity lawmaker, and Bronislaw Geremek, Solidarity's parliamentary leader.

The once inconceivable idea of a government without a Communist Party member at the helm became possible after Solidarity leader Lech Walesa persuaded two small parties that hold the balance of power in the Sejm to join Solidarity in a coalition.

That resulted in the communist al-

AZT Tests Offer Hope AIDS May Be Treatable

By Paul Recer
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Highly successful trials of the antiviral drug AZT suggest that AIDS may soon become "a treatable disease" instead of a hopeless infection, federal officials say.

The announcement is "a major turning point in the AIDS epidemic," said Jean McGuire, director of the AIDS Action Council, an advocacy group for AIDS patients.

Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan announced Thursday that trials of AZT, which is produced by Burroughs Wellcome in Greenville, N.C., on patients who are only mildly infected with AIDS proved that the drug can halt progression of the infection.

"We are indeed entering the period when AIDS may become a treatable disease," Sullivan said at a news conference where the AZT drug trial results were announced.

However, he cautioned: "AZT is not a cure and, indeed, even those who are under AZT treatment remain capable of transmitting the disease."

Findings of the drug trials on mildly infected patients who show no symptoms prompted federal officials to stop the trials so that all participants can receive AZT. The drug trial had required one-third of the 1,300 in the study to receive placebo, or sugar pill.

AZT, also known as zidovudine, is marketed by Burroughs Wellcome under the brand name Retrovir. It formally was known by the name azidothymidine, which was shortened in popular use to AZT.

Thursday's announcement marks the third time that formal trials of AZT have been modified after the drug demonstrated its effectiveness against AIDS in selected patient groups.

Two weeks ago, a trial was stopped among patients with a stage of the disease called AIDS-related complex, or ARC. Earlier, the government halted trials among profoundly infected AIDS patients. In both cases the trials were stopped so that those participants getting placebo could start receiving the drug.

An AZT trial continues among AIDS patients whose blood immune system is still healthy but who test positive for infection by the human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV, which causes AIDS. This group would be at an even earlier stage of the disease.

Sullivan said the new trial results, along with those from the two earlier trials, provide "real hope for the millions of people worldwide who are infected with HIV."

Ms. McGuire said in a prepared statement, "For the millions of Americans who have waited to be tested for HIV because there was no medical assistance available, today's announcement should be reason for people to rethink that decision."

The HHS secretary said he is ordering that Medicare patients

GUC OKs Waste Discharge

The Greenville Utilities Commission will allow The Daily Reflector to discharge a small quantity of waste chemicals used in printing the paper into the sanitary sewer system for treatment.

The waste, including some ink residue, has been escaping from the newspaper's press room through a drain beneath the press and staining the sidewalk and gutter on Reade Street. The discharge from the press room has occurred sporadically since the newspaper's office was renovated last fall.

When the stained sidewalk came to light through complaints to the Division of Environmental Management, the paper began to look for ways to end the discharge.

From its analysis the state concluded the discharge was not toxic, but recommended that the newspaper connect its discharge to the city sewer system.

Judge Orders Gray To Remove Waste

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A Superior Court judge ordered a Raleigh funeral home owner Thursday to clean up four Pitt County tobacco packhouses filled with medical waste and human body parts, including a partially burned skull.

The order was made at the request of state health officials who said the waste, stored in leaking, unrepaired structures, posed a threat to human health and the environment.

"It's a very hazardous situation," said Terry Dover, environmental supervisor for the Department of Environment, Health and Natural Resources, and "could contaminate the soils and groundwater."

Wake County Superior Court Judge Henry Barnette Jr. ordered John Gray, owner of Gray Funeral Homes and Crematoriums, to hire a contractor to examine the waste and develop a plan to safely remove the waste from the buildings near Pactolus and dispose of it.

Gray was barred from accepting or disposing of medical waste because he does not have state permits needed for that business.

When such a cleanup would begin, however, is uncertain. Gray was not in court Thursday, and the state has been unable to serve him with court papers at a variety of addresses in Raleigh and Pitt County.

"I think it's important he be located and this order served on him," Barnette told several state officials. "You've got to push it."

Gray could not be reached for comment. Bob Peterson, manager of Gray Funeral Homes, said Gray was on vacation for two weeks and could not be contacted. "The official position is we will confer with our attorneys and have some type of comment next week," he said.

In an hour-long hearing, the judge heard state officials testify that Gray had collected more than 15 tons of medical waste from Dorothea Dix Hospital since 1981.

Psychiatrist 'Confident' Charges Will Be Dropped

By Jerry Raynor
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Dr. Barry Allen Moore, 45, a Greenville psychiatrist, says he is "confident about the outcome" of a hearing Thursday at which he responded to charges of sexual and immoral misconduct with female patients.

Moore went before the State Board of Medical Examiners to answer allegations that he exercised misconduct with patients between 1984 and 1988.

Bryant Paris, the board's executive director, said today a decision on the case is expected in about two weeks.

"The bottom line in this situation is that lots of suits are filed against psychiatrists. This is to be expected, since we deal with people with emotional and sometimes mental problems," Moore said in an interview today.

"Several allegations were brought against me last fall, all which I feel the state examiners will find are false."

Moore said about 20 fellow professionals, doctors and nurses from Greenville, Wilson, Raleigh and one who flew in from Texas, appeared before the medical examining board as witnesses in his behalf.

"Despite the allegations," Moore said, "my practice has increased, not been curtailed. Over the past six months a Ph.D. a medical doctor and a psychologist in the master level have joined my practice, which I feel is a vote of confidence in my ability, both on the part of my increasing number of patients and in the willingness of professionals to join me in my practice."

PCC Gives Degrees To 150 Graduates

More than 150 students received degrees from Pitt Community College at the school's summer commencement ceremony Thursday at Mendenhall Student Center on the East Carolina University campus.

Jeffrey Cox of Ayden, a PCC graduate and now an industrial electrician at TRW Inc., was the keynote speaker.

"You must remember to keep your minds sharp," Cox said. "This means that along the road of life you must update and even further your knowledge."

Cox commended the college on its growth, instructors and advisory committees comprised of local citizens.

Nora Hix, a practical nurse education graduate, also spoke at the ceremony.

"We have acquired skills, but more importantly, we have been challenged to grow as individuals and expand our horizons," she said.

Katherine Whichard, chairman of the PCC Board of Trustees, presented the diplomas and degrees.

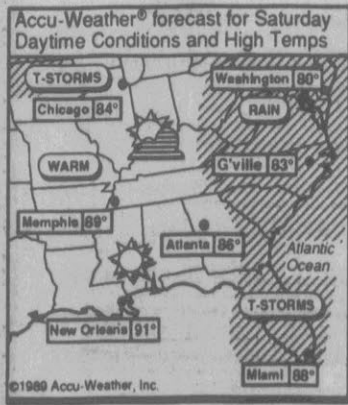

She was assisted by Dr. Ed Bright, dean of instruction, and Dr. Edgar Boyd, dean of students at PCC.

Thursday Thefts

Investigators said five thefts, including $1,000 in cash in an armed robbery incident, were reported to Greenville police Thursday.

Officer M.J. Nobles said Jimmy Evans of 406 Jay St. told officers that he was approached by a man at the intersection of Fifth and Hudson streets about 5:36 p.m. who first started fighting with him, then pulled a pistol and during the struggle shot Evans in the leg. Following the shooting, Evans told police the assailant took $1,000 in cash from him.

Officer C.J. Melvin said a microwave oven, video cassette recorder, radio-tape player and a video tape were taken from 1709B Spruce St. in a break-in reported at 12:06 a.m., while Officer A.G. Lloyd said $300 worth of clothes were taken from the laundry room at Plantation Apartments on Colony Court in an incident reported at 7:28 a.m.

Officer R.C. Allsbrook said $240 worth of clothing was taken from Carolina Imprints at 715 Albemarle Ave. in a break-in reported at 3:43 p.m., while Officer M.T. Scheid said a video cassette recorder and a stereo system were taken from a trailer at Tri-County Mobile Homes East on Greenville Boulevard in an incident reported at 4:09 p.m.

Drug Arrests

Greenville police arrested three people on drug law violation charges Thursday.

Officer S.D. Hilliard said Reggie Carl Sheppard, 21, of 806 W. Fourth St. was arrested about 6:30 p.m. in the 1700 block of Garland St. on charges of possession of cocaine after three vials of cocaine-based crack were found in his possession.

Officers B.D. Dobbs and W.R. McLawhorn said Sidney Lopez Miles, 24, of Winterville and Dexter Lamont Yelverton, 24, of Goldsboro were arrested on possession of marijuana and possession of drug paraphernalia charges in connection with a 9:35 p.m. incident at an apartment at 208 N. Oak St.

Retiree Honored

Columbus Tyson was honored recently at a retirement dinner. He completed 30 years of service at East Carolina University. His co-workers presented him a plaque.

Commissioners Meeting

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners will meet Monday at 9 a.m. at the county office building at 1717 W. Fifth St.

Agenda items include a resolution asking the state Department of Transportation to abandon Secondary Road 1420 and SR 1421 within property recently purchased by the Pitt-Greenville Airport Authority; consider the purchase of voting machines for the county, and bids for two roll-off trucks for solid waste hauling.

Permits Issued

The city of Greenville has issued several solicitation permits.

A permit has been issued to the Pitt County Shrine Club to solicit donations for hospitals for the crippled and burned. The Shriners intend to solicit money from merchants and individuals through Sept. 29.

A permit has been issued to East Carolina University Ambassadors, ECU's student alumni association, to solicit door prizes for the 1989 SAA/SF national convention to be held at the university Sept. 14-17. Volunteers for the group are permitted to solicit area merchants weekdays through Sept. 14.

Also issued was a permit to the East Carolina University Alumni Association for door prizes to give volunteers working the annual telefund. Two volunteers from the organization will solicit small items and certificates from area merchants weekdays through Sept. 25.

Gas Chases Inmates

Two inmate janitors at the Pitt County Jail who mistakenly mixed cleaning compounds to form a foul smelling gas were responsible for 16 inmates and three jailors being taken to the Pitt County Memorial Hospital on Wednesday night, Sheriff Ralph Tyson said today.

The inmates were on a floor-cleaning detail when they accidentally mixed Ajax, floor stripper and Clorox, the sheriff said.

"I went down (to the jail) later on in the evening and didn't smell anything," Tyson said. "Only one person complained of dizziness but we brought everybody down to the hospital just to make sure there was no problem. They are usually watched by guards but the guards went away to do something and the prisoners decided to make the floor really clean by adding the Clorox."

The combination of the cleansers created a cloud that made one of the janitors dizzy and burned the noses of the other prisoners and jailors in the cell, Tyson said. Deputies took them to the hospital in patrol cars around 11 p.m. and they were back at the jail in 30 minutes, the sheriff said.

Fans were used to remove the odor in the jail, Tyson said, and everything was back to normal by Thursday morning.

Grimesland Man's Activities Studied

A citizen of South Africa arrested in Pitt County on Aug. 8 on charges of securities violations is being investigated by the N.C. Secretary of State's office, an office spokesman said today.

Elliot W. Warnock, director of communications for the Secretary of State's office, said an investigation is being conducted into the activities of Okert Jacobus Venter, 43, of Grimesland.

Venter was arrested last Tuesday and charged with the sale of stock which had not been registered as a security with the N.C. Secretary of State's office and also the sale of a security without having registered as a securities dealer or salesman, as required by state securities law. He was released on a $50,000 secured bond on Aug. 11 pending trial.

Warnock said he could not release details into the investigation because the case is still continuing.

"This case is very sensitive in nature due to the amount of money and the number of people involved and the international ramifications," Warnock said.

Pitt County arrest warrants indicate the alleged sale of securities was for Interport Beverage Company Inc., based in Greenville.

The warrant said the alleged illegal stock sales to a Greenville man occurred on March 30. No transaction amounts were listed in the warrant.

The Associated Press reported today that investigators have said the case involves investments affecting 30 to 40 people and $400,000 to $500,000.

Correction Officials Hail Electronic House Arrest Program

By Kevin Boughal
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The new electronic house arrest program for Pitt County was unveiled by the North Carolina Department of Correction Thursday. "In 1983, the intensive supervision program was started in North Carolina as an alternative to incarceration," said James R. Fullwood, director of the state's intensive parole program. "Right now, about 1,600 people are in some form of intensive incarceration, including 274 people currently on electronic house arrest. We feel that the program has been a great success." The Correction Department has hailed the new program as a way to deal with the on-going problem of declining prison space. Because of the lack of space, many judges are giving probation to people who 10 years ago would have spent time in jail, department officials said. The more serious offenders are being supervised by probation officers whose caseloads average 128 clients. Under the system used before the electronic surveillance was available, the caseworker personally had to keep track of people on probation.

The new system uses a computer system to alert the caseworker if the person goes beyond 200 feet of his house. The system relies on four pieces of equipment. If a prisoner goes out of the 200-foot area around the house, a small transmitter the size of a matchbox, which is attached to the ankle of the person on probation, transmits a signal to a bigger transmitter about the size of a clock radio which is located in the house of the prisoner. The second transmitter sends a signal over the phone line to the main computer, which in Pitt County is located in the Minges Building across from the Pitt County Courthouse. The computer alerts the probation officer through an electronic pager that the prisoner has strayed out of the designated area. The main computer is programmed to know the working hours of the prisoner as well as any reason that the prisoner might need to leave the home, such as a doctor's appointment. If the prisoner leaves at any other time or fails to come home when he is supposed to, the computer is signaled. The computer will also be signaled if the prisoner tries to take off the leg transmitter. The caseworker will still check up on the prisoner by visiting him at home or contacting him at work. The electronic home arrest costs the taxpayer only $4.60 per prisoner per day as opposed to $6.54 per day for regular intensive surveillance and $36.54 per day for jail. The prisoners must pay for the phone and the electric charges themselves, as well as the equipment if it is damaged in any way. However, according to correctional officials, there are many other advantages to electronic home surveillance besides the cost. They said the prisoner is not exposed to the prison environment, which has been called a school for crime. It also provides the prisoner with a way to make restitutions for the victims of their crime. This program is not for everybody. In fact, offenders must meet several criteria. They must not be violent offenders, either on this charge or any previous ones, they must be non-vagrant, and they must have a telephone. They also must not have a sentence of more than six months. The ideal term for prisoners on electronic home arrest is four months.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Do It Now

Put Local Inconvenience Aside

There are some issues so far-reaching that local inconveniences must take a back seat.

For the city of Greenville, the Nutrient Sensitive Waters designation for the Tar-Pamlico River basin is such an issue. It is time for the city to officially embrace the program, put aside its discomfort with the proposal and — like a regional leader should — place its seal of approval on the program.

The Nutrient Sensitive Waters designation has been proposed by the state Department of Environmental Management as a means of protecting stressed water quality in the Tar-Pamlico river basin. Greenville, located on the banks of the Tar and dependent on that waterway for 80 percent of its drinking water, has a lion's share of interest in this issue.

"Nutrient" is another word for pollution — phosphorus and nitrogen that upset the balance of a healthy stream. This pollution comes from farms, municipal sewage and industrial discharges that find their way into rivers. The NSW program would cap the levels of these pollutants and monitor them. It is an important, if shaky, first step toward breathing new life into a dying resource.

But at a June public hearing on the issue, Greenville Utilities raised questions about the program, and, presumably speaking for the city, didn't endorse it. The city's environmental advisory commission later voted to send a letter of support for the NSW proposal.

The City Council, however, which should be the body to direct an official response for Greenville, has taken no position. The issue of NSW was discussed by that board briefly in executive session in June. It was then placed on the council's agenda for discussion on July 18 but postponed. The NSW proposal was then scheduled for to be heard at an Aug. 8 meeting but was removed from the agenda before the meeting. It is set for discussion at a council meeting Monday night.

Why the squeamishness about an issue with such a clear environmental advantage? Because limiting nutrient pollution in the Tar-Pamlico River will require municipal sewage plants to be more efficient, and consequently, more costly. The more nutrients that must be removed from municipal sewage, the more expensive that process becomes for Greenville Utilities. While GUC is operated independently, it is owned by the city. Hence Greenville's elected officials have a direct interest in the utility's financial matters — and consequently in the cost of sewage disposal.

Council members may, correctly, feel the health of the river is worth a little extra cost. They may already know that endorsing this NSW proposal is the least they can do to assist a waterway that has historically brought the town prosperity.

But they haven't said so publicly, and they should without further hesitation. The City Council of the municipality that likes to call itself the most progressive in the region should endorse this step forward. That board should take a broad view of the value of the Tar-Pamlico basin, put aside its discomfort over higher sewage costs and give its stamp of approval to the NSW designation. Monday night would be a good time to do that.

The questions raised by Greenville Utilities are valid ones that need answers. Malcolm Green, chairman of GUC, suggested at the June public hearing that it is neither ecologically helpful to the rivers nor fair to cities to require municipalities to clean up their sewage when agriculture and forestry interests aren't required to reduce their share of pollution. He's correct. Each source of damaging nutrients must do its part to improve water quality. It is not equitable to make one source immune from stricter regulations.

But that disparity does not relieve either Greenville or GUC of its responsibility to do its share. Right now, that means endorsing a program that can benefit an overburdened river. The NSW proposal is a tangible commitment to stewardship on a shared resource.

The Plight of the Pamlico

'That board should take a broad view of the value of the Tar-Pamlico basin, put aside its discomfort over higher sewage costs and give its stamp of approval to the NSW designation.'

Good Samaritan

Chivalry lives.

It was a recent Friday afternoon. The temperature was soaring to nearly 100. Despite the discomfort people were rushing here and there, tying up loose ends of a weeks work, in anticipation of the weekend ahead.

My car stalled at First Federal Bank on Memorial Drive, and I tried desperately to start it, but since my knowledge of locomotion is confined to getting from one point to another my attempts were futile, and I felt absolutely helpless. I just didn't know what to do next.

A complete stranger, an empathetic young businessman, Stan Armstrong, took the initiative, disregarding the oppressive heat and loss of invaluable time, and started my car.

These are the type of deeds that linger in a person's mind for a long time.

Thank you Stan.

Outstanding Family

Our salute goes to the Langley family of the Aspen Gone community near Fountain. They have been friends, neighbors and a pillar of this community for over fifty years.

Never have they been too busy to stop their work to go to the aid of a neighbor or others in a time of need, whether it was a death in the family, someone hurt in an accident or just to repair a piece of broken down machinery.

Not only have they given their time and their financial support but also their love and compassion to their fellow man.

Very few of us would take a family from a foreign country and make them a part of our family as they have done. There are friends, family, grandparents, aunts and uncles to the family living on their farm.

To this outstanding family, we say "God bless you, we love you and we salute you!"

The World Is Still A Dangerous Place

Jeffrey Record

Let us suppose the following: That Mikhail Gorbachev succeeds beyond even his own wildest dream in reforming the Soviet economy and society. That he introduces real political democracy. That he withdraws all Soviet troops from Eastern Europe, dissolves the Warsaw Pact alliance, cuts the Soviet armed forces by two-thirds, and completely transforms the remainder into a purely defensive force capable only of assuring the Soviet Union's territorial integrity.

Let us suppose, in short, that the Soviet Union by the end of this century comes to pose little more of a threat to the United States than did Czarist Russia in the last century. These are, to be sure, mind-boggling suppositions. No one (probably least of all the Soviet leader) knows where glasnost and perestroika are going to end up, and many Sovietologists believe that Gorbachev and his policies are doomed.

But even the remotest possibility of a politically and militarily benign Soviet Union raises some fascinating questions. What, for example, would be in store for the U.S. military, which for over four decades has dined sumptuously on a feast of genuine (and some not so genuine) Soviet and Soviet-sponsored threats to American security interests around the world? Could the Pentagon continue to justify spending $300 billion a year on defense, and maintaining 2.1 million Americans on active military duty? Would we still need a 600-ship Navy, an 18-division Army and a 79-tactical-fighter-squadron Air Force? And what of the strategic deterrent?

Some 80 to 85 percent of today's defense dollar goes for conventional (i.e., non-nuclear) military forces. In terms of dollars, manpower and weaponry, more than anything else the prospect of a Soviet invasion of Western Europe has driven U.S. conventional force decisions.

Take, for example, the U.S. Army. Its size and structure are determined, more than those of any of the other services, by the NATO commitment. From the signing of the Declaration of Independence to the U.S. assumption of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization commitment in 1949, the Army's routine active-duty peacetime strength never exceeded 200,000 men and a handful of divisions. Since then it has never dipped below 750,000 men and 13 divisions. Today it stands at 770,000 men and 18 divisions. Ten of those 18 are deployed in Europe or earmarked for Europe's reinforcement. Moreover, the Army's ongoing investment in large numbers of costly, state-of-the-art main battle tanks could find no justification absent the menacing presence of the huge Soviet tank force on Western Europe's doorstep.

Though slightly less NATO-oriented, the Air Force, with its enormous weapons procurement budget, justifies virtually every new combat aircraft it seeks on the grounds of deterring or defeating the Soviet aerial threat, be it in Europe or elsewhere.

As for the Navy, the least NATO-sensitive service, it argues for the number and composition of even its aircraft carriers battle groups on the basis of an anti-Soviet maritime strategy.

All of that suggests that a complete and permanent recession of the Soviet threat just to Europe alone would yield an enormous "peace dividend" in the form of drastically smaller defense budgets and armed forces.

There is no question that a permanent disappearance of the Soviet threat would afford opportunities for significant cuts both in defense spending (as by canceling the B-2 Stealth bomber) and in force structure (as in U.S. forces now dedicated to Europe's defense and in the costly airlift and sealift capabilities that are maintained to ensure Europe's timely re-inforcement, for example). And it is equally clear that for the foreseeable future there is no other country, certainly none that is today regarded as hostile to the United States, that could supplant the magnitude and quality of the Soviet threat.

On the other hand, the likes of Panamanian leader Manuel Noriega, Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi, and the late Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini of Iran have continually reminded us that the Soviet Union has never posed the only threat to U.S. security interests in the post-World War II world, and such loony Third World states as Iraq, Iran and Libya are well-armed and are fast acquiring weapons of mass destruction and their long-range means of delivery. Indeed, the only major wars the United States has waged since 1945 (Korea and Vietnam) were fought in the Third World, and in the case of Vietnam the Pentagon entered that conflict with force levels substantially larger than it maintains today.

There is, too, the fact that the United States since 1945 has only maintained sufficient military power to cover a fraction of its myriad and demanding defense commitments overseas. For example, the U.S. Central Command, charged with defending U.S. interests in the Persian Gulf, relies heavily on Army divisions and Air Force fighter wings that also have NATO missions. That suggests that some portion of U.S. forces retired from Europe would be kept on active duty and assigned missions elsewhere. In other words, U.S. commitments elsewhere are so underserved that even a major reduction of American NATO commitments would not yield a commensurate reduction in military capabilities. Indeed, some would argue that dropping the NATO commitment would at last bring present U.S. force levels, if they were retained, into harmony with residual overseas military obligations.

As for strategic nuclear forces, they too could be cut, although a sizable and effective deterrent would be indispensable as long as the Soviet Union or any other country outside our alliance system possessed even a limited nuclear or chemical first-strike capability against us. There is no substitute for nuclear deterrence, especially while nuclear and other weapons of mass destruction are proliferating. It is more than coincidental that there has been no war of any kind, nuclear or conventional, between nuclear-armed states.

N.C. Citizens Group Opposes Burning Of Toxic Chemicals

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Calling the burning of toxic wastes dangerous, a citizens group called for Gov. Jim Martin to end negotiations with other Southeastern states on a waste management plan that it says relies on an increased use of incinerators. Martin should instead support efforts to reduce the amount of toxic garbage that is produced, said Erica Perlow, North Carolina director of the National Toxics Campaign.

"The issue here is whether or not North Carolina will try to force its communities to accept the siting of more hazardous waste facilities, especially incinerators, or will it move to a real solution by reducing toxic chemical usage and waste production," Ms. Perlow said in a prepared statement.

The North Carolina news conference came in conjunction with the release of a 50-page report compiled by a coalition of citizens groups who charge the waste facilities will poison the environment and violate federal laws.

The report estimates that new incinerators could generate up to 10 billion pounds of toxic ash and more than 400 million pounds of highly toxic air emissions nationwide by the year 2000.

The group also called for a moratorium on new dumps and incinerators.

"We want the governor and state legislators to ban all new dumps and incinerators for five years while adopting aggressive toxics reduction programs to cut industrial waste at their source," said Ms. Perlow. "It is time to stop the poisoning and embrace prevention."

Saying the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency considers burning toxic waste the "technology of choice," study author Sanford Lewis said incineration was "a failed technology that is plagued by toxic emissions, accidents and corrupt, incompetent operators. ... Our strategy to reduce waste and toxic chemicals can eliminate the rush to burn."

Ms. Perlow said the protest arose because the Superfund Amendments and Reauthorization Act requires that states prepare hazardous waste plans to specify waste management strategies for the next 20 years.

In addition to calling for a moratorium on burning and an emphasis on waste reduction, the letter to Martin suggested requiring toxics reduction audits for industry and discontinuing negotiations with other Southeastern states about hazardous waste facility siting.

The letter also requested a meeting with the governor by Sept. 17 to discuss the requests.

Prisoners Fuming Over No Smoking

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ASHEVILLE — Some inmates in the Buncombe County Jail are a little jumpy as they adjust to a smoking ban imposed by the county sheriff who says the building is a firetrap.

"I been smoking long as I can remember, and I ain't never been this jumpy," Paul Willingham, 32, serving time for being drunk and disruptive, said as he shifted nervously from one foot to the other.

Sheriff Buck Lyda on Aug. 1 ordered no more cigarettes be sold or brought into the jail. Cigarettes still around Sept. 1 — Willingham laughed at that idea — will be confiscated.

County officials for years have warned the jail — the top five floors of the Buncombe County Courthouse — would be a funeral pyre should the 62-year-old, steel-and-concrete structure catch fire. A stairwell on the backside of the building, guarded by a thick steel door on the 11th floor, provides the only emergency route out of the jail.

Some inmates don't like the ban. "You take people under a lot of tension already, and take away their cigarettes, that's going to create a lot more tension," federal prisoner Arminta Russell, 43, said from the pay phone on the women's floor.

"Eventually it's going to cause a lot of fights," David Knight, 28, said in Cellblock 14 Left Center.

Several of the inmates don't see the need for the ban.

"Man, what's going to catch fire?" 18-year-old probation violator Richard Neighbors said as his arm swept his gray, cement-veneer cellblock.

Jailers say inmates often set their mattresses on fire.

Guards aren't supposed to smoke, either, except in their office on the 15th floor. Neighbors said he saw a guard light up in his wing Wednesday — an allegation another deputy confirmed. The guard had forgotten momentarily and put the cigarette out immediately, the deputy said. He could have sold it, according to Knight. Packs that cost $1.25 in a vending machine are going for $15 each, and single cigarettes are up to $1. The ban has spawned a whole new jail economy, with shirts, books and food being offered by nicotine-starved inmates.

"People will trade anything worth a little bit of money," Knight said.

Those that have 'em share 'em, is the unwritten law among the men, Willingham said. It's five men to a cigarette now, "and right there you start worrying about all kinds of germs and diseases," said Kim Thomas.

Rain Brings High Water

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Heavy rains over parts of the Sandhills, northeast Piedmont and the Coastal Plains caused some minor flooding, the National Weather Service said.

Up to six inches of rain fell in Angier in northern Harnett County late Thursday afternoon and Thursday night. Other heavy rainfall totals included 4.6 inches in southern Wake County and four inches at Aberdeen, forecasters said.

Heavy rain was also reported in the southern Piedmont in Mecklenburg, Gaston and Iredell counties.

The storms prompted the weather service to issue small stream and urban flood warnings for Moore, Hoke and northern Harnett counties, where several roads were flooded. Many yards were reported under water in Raeford, the weather service said.

The turbulent weather was associated with a cold front moving into the state from the west, combined with a forming low pressure system forming on the front, the weather service said.

The weather system could bring more showers and thunderstorms tonight and tomorrow, forecasters said.

Madison Sheriff Finds Office Filled With Marijuana Plants

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MARSHALL, N.C. — Some might have said that by looking at its offices, the Madison County Sheriff's Department was going to pot.

That's because the department had ripped up so much marijuana in recent weeks that officers resorted to storing 2,500 plants in the sheriff's own office.

Business, Madison County Sheriff Dedrick Brown said, is almost too good.

"I can't get to my office," he said. Bushy stalks 12 feet high reach from floor to ceiling.

Auxiliary Deputy Roger Swann said officers have rounded up about $4 million worth of marijuana since May.

"We've been finding it just about every day," the sheriff said shortly before going back out Wednesday. "Found 185 plants yesterday, there on Highway (U.S.) 23 between Mars Hill and the Unicoi County (Tennessee) line."

Last year, the marijuana was kept in the office of Chief Deputy Dall Peek. But Peek said Thursday that new filing cabinets in his office meant the marijuana was moved to the sheriff's office.

There's nowhere to store the marijuana, Peek said. Officials hope to build an evidence room eventually, but until then, the plants have to be kept somewhere.

But while a lot of plants have been found, few arrests have been made.

Five people have been arrested so far this season. That figure would be a lot higher if the county hadn't received so much rain, he said. When it's dry, growers have to tend their crops more, and more arrests are made, Brown said.

The hot, rainy weather has been so good this summer that cannabis cultivators let nature do their work for them, he said. The quality looks extra good — so resinous with the active THC compound that it took five gallons of diesel fuel to get a truckload burning the other day.

The handful of county and state officers poking around the bushes has helped up above, Brown said. Spotters in a state Highway Patrol helicopter and State Bureau of Investigation plane are trained to identify the varying shades of green marijuana plants. Even at 200 feet, they're able to pick pot from parsley.

Brown doesn't go with them, however; he's strictly a landlubber.

"I told them I'm too heavy to ride in a helicopter," the 255-pound sheriff said. "I might pull them down."

The marijuana was burned Wednesday, Peek said. That was a relief to the sheriff.

"This stuff'll make you sick, you breathe too much of it," he said.

But Peek said officers expected to have restocked the sheriff's office with marijuana plants within two weeks.

It's impossible to tell how much of an impact marijuana wholesaling has on the economy in Madison of any other county, said David Barnes, who heads up SBI drug investigations in Western North Carolina.

"One way we used to gauge the impact of our work was to check with car dealerships and banks to see how many four-wheel-drive vehicles they repossessed," he said. "In the spring, if growers expect a good season and big sales, they buy these big trucks and other major purchases, expecting to pay them off with the proceeds."

But if agents have pulled a lot of plants and hurt the sales, "they just have to turn those big-ticket items back in," Barnes said.

Absence Of Major Democrat May Cause Problems For Both Parties

By Dennis Patterson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Politicians and political strategists are weighing the implications of former Gov. Jim Hunt's announcement that he will not run for the U.S. Senate next year, and some say the move will make it harder for Sen. Jesse Helms if he decides to run for re-election.

Harrison Hickman, a Democratic pollster, said the thing Helms has to fear the most is that the race will be about him, and not his opponent. Helms' past campaigns focused on his Democratic challengers, rather than Helms' record in the Senate, he said.

"Bless his heart, he's not even going to know who the devil will be until June. We'll see if he can run a race based on his own record," Hickman said.

But Carter Wrenn, a top strategist for Helms, scoffed at the notion that a lesser-known candidate would fare better than Hunt. "If that were true, why was Hunt their first choice to run?" he asked.

The absence of a Democratic front-runner does pose some problems for Helms that Helms cannot solve, Wrenn said. "You can't run a campaign comparing your stands to your opponent's if you don't know who your opponent is."

Some observers say Democrats need to act fast to find another candidate.

"It's getting late," said Samuel H. Poole Jr., the top political aide to Sen. Terry Sanford. "Jim Hunt could afford (to wait) because he had name identification. They (other candidates) need to be seriously thinking about days rather than weeks or months."

In anticipation of Hunt's decision, potential candidates had begun attempting to gauge what support they could generate.

D.G. Martin, a two-time congressional candidate and an official of the University of North Carolina system, has been to Washington to meet with officials of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee to discuss fund-raising. The News and Observer of Raleigh reported.

Other potential candidates, such as former state Democratic Chairman Betty R. McCain of Wilson and former UNC President William C. Friday, have talked with campaign committee officials or other national Democratic operatives. The campaign committee wants a strong candidate, because the Democratic Party is trying to retain its 55-45 control of the Senate.

Hunt said Wednesday he had decided to stay out of the Senate race next year to help take care of his parents. His mother, who has had a heart attack and stroke, is bedridden and his father has Parkinson's disease.

"I think it means we don't know exactly what will happen," said Thad Beyle, a University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill political science professor, when asked about the effect of Hunt's decision. "It means a lot of people who have been considering being candidates are going to have to fish or cut bait."

Over the last year, the names of dozens of legislators, congressmen and others in and out of office have been floated as possible Democratic candidates should Hunt decide not to run.

"Things will be going on now that we won't see," Beyle said. "The great 'mentioners' will start working. The money people will begin winnowing that field out."

"It's going to be interesting to see whether the Democratic machine opens up to new candidates and whether the fund-raising apparatus is going to be in place for those candidates, the fresh faces, that have not been out there before," said Michael Easley, 39, a district attorney from Southport who has never sought statewide office. "It is unconscionably expensive to mount a statewide campaign today, and I don't know how to get around that. I don't think anybody else does."

Former state Sen. "Bo" Thomas, a Henderson County produce

distributor, is the only person who has said he plans to run for the Democratic nomination. He said he hoped to avoid a primary battle if he could, and, in lieu of that, hoped to avoid an expensive, divisive fight that would leave the party weakened.

"I'm going to continue my attempted implementation of old-timey politics — if you would, 1950 politics rather than 1990 politics for the primary," said Thomas, who said he intends to formally announce his candidacy soon. "I hope to use a lot of personal contact, and use media — television — when necessary in the primary." Beyle, as well as Democratic politicians, said Helms may alter the political landscape again if he decides not to seek re-election.

"There's a possibility he might not find it as much fun if he doesn't have Hunt to run against again," Beyle said.

Helms on Wednesday stopped short of saying he will run for a third term, saying a final decision will come by the fall.

"We're just going to keep on doing what we're doing," Helms told the News and Observer. Helms, 67, said he felt physically fit despite two recent operations.

But he said he would wait until doctors can assess the health of his wife, Dorothy, who has received chemotherapy for cancer.

"We'll see in October. ... As soon as I hear about Miss Dorothy, we may go over the precipice," Helms said.

Compromise Set On Flag Protest

DURHAM (AP) — The two sides in a lawsuit over the wearing of Confederate flags reached a settlement and the Durham County school officials agreed that four students were denied their rights when they were suspended for wearing the banners.

The two sides in the lawsuit called the settlement, which has to be approved by a judge, a compromise.

"In terms it's definitely a compromise, but a positive solution to all concerned," said Alice Moseley, a lawyer for the Durham County Board of Education.

Sisters Nicole and Patricia Pruitt were suspended March 11, 1988 after they attempted to enter Chewning High School wearing the confederate flag. Display of the flag is considered by some to be tantamount to a racial slur.

The two students, filed suit asking for $10,000 in damages and a clean record for the girls. Their lawyers, Durham Attorneys Paul Green and Charns, cited First Amendment protection of freedom of speech.

A second suit was filed in October by Carla Guy and Lisa Rudd, who also wore Confederate flags to Chewning in March. The board agreed that its insurance carrier will pay the students $13,500 to defray their attorney's fees and litigation expenses.

Under the terms of the settlement, the board announced that social studies students at the school will study the United States Constitution and the Bill of Rights in conjunction with the 200th anniversary of the ratification of the constitution in the state.

Each grade level attending Chewning will also be required to attend a three 30- to 40-minute assemblies. The first will be held Sept. 21, on the topic of student's rights and responsibilities under the First Amendment.

Neither side in the lawsuit admits liability or defeat. Both agreed that a out-of-court settlement would be in the best interests of the school rather than confrontation in the courtroom.

Ms. Moseley, said the problem was one of trying to balance the free speech rights of the students against the responsibility of school officials.

Ms. Moseley said both sides agreed to find a "creative solution" to bring an end to the suit and to address the underlying problems in the case.

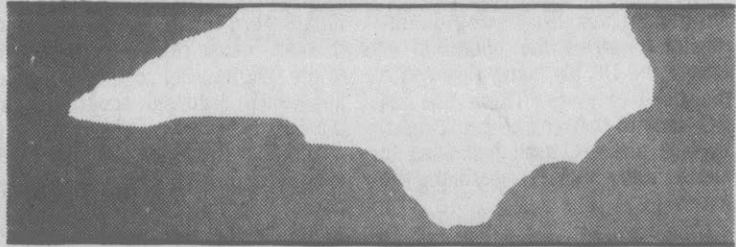

American Civil Liberties Union lawyers William Simpson and Alex Charns, also agreed that the compromise was in the best interests of the students and the school system.

Charns said monetary compensation was the least important thing that the girls were trying to accomplish.

"The point of the litigation was to indicate that their rights had been violated," he said.

While the board agreed to settle with the plaintiffs, it did not agree to lift the ban on the Confederate flag.

IN THE STATE

College Probe

CHARLOTTE (AP) — State auditors are investigating allegations of enrollment irregularities at Stanly Community College in addition to reports that the college has paid a recruiter for apparently doing no work, a newspaper reported.

Two investigators from the state auditor's fraud, waste and abuse section arrived at the Albemarle college Monday afternoon and have spent the week conducting interviews. State Auditor Ed Renfrow says at least four auditors are working on the case.

Renfrow said they're looking into "several areas," but he would not be specific. Sources, however, told The Charlotte Observer that one auditor is investigating allegations involving enrollment. N.C. community college funding is determined largely by enrollment.

Warfare Range

BAYBORO, N.C. (AP) — The Marine Corps has provided written assurances that no threat emitters, controversial war game devices, will be placed on federal land in Pamlico County as part of the proposed Mid-Atlantic Electronic Warfare Range.

In the recently released final environmental impact statement for the MAEWR, as well as in two letters, officials say threat emitters originally planned for Pamlico County have been dropped from the proposal.

Threat emitters would be used in the proposed electronic warfare range, which would cover 80 percent of Pamlico County airspace. The emitters, which give off electromagnetic radiation, mimic anti-aircraft weapons as well as score effectiveness of countermeasures taken by aircraft.

Sentenced

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Charlotte businessman Oscar "Ted" Polk was sentenced to 27½ years in prison and ordered to repay almost 200 people whom investigators said he bilked out of more than $2.8 million.

Polk, 36, was sentenced in U.S. District Wednesday by Judge Robert Potter. Fifty-one of Polk's victims had written Potter, complaining that they had been cheated and their lives devastated.

Most of the victims are old and retired. They lost most of their life savings. Some have been forced back to work. Others no longer have money to send their children to college or pay doctor bills.

Polk had spent the money on a lavish lifestyle that included beach condominiums, expensive clothes, jewelry for his wife and money for his mistress, according to court records.

Director

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. (AP) — Gary Johnson has been removed as director of the state's new supercomputing center, one week before a new $12.8-million supercomputer is to be delivered to the Microelectronics Center of North Carolina, officials said Thursday.

The center issued a statement citing "unresolved management issues" and said Johnson had been placed on an unspecified "special assignment."

Arsenic Probe May Involve More Bodies

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GRAHAM, N.C. — Authorities investigating accused arsenic killer Blanche Taylor Moore will meet and discuss Tuesday whether more bodies should be exhumed and tested for poisoning.

Alamance County District Attorney Steve Balog said he does not know if more exhumations will be necessary. He and other officials will meet with the state medical examiner.

"We've scheduled the meeting because we feel we're at a point in those investigations that we can sit down and review them to decide whether to seek any further exhumations," Balog said Thursday. Efforts to reach John Butts, the state's chief medical examiner in Chapel Hill, were unsuccessful.

To date, authorities have exhumed the remains of three men with close ties to Mrs. Moore. Autopsies show that two of those — James N. Taylor, Mrs. Moore's first husband, and Raymond C. Reid, her ex-boyfriend — died of arsenic poisoning.

Tests showed that the third — Mrs. Moore's father, Parker D. Kiser — had elevated levels of arsenic in his body, but did not die of arsenic poisoning.

Mrs. Moore is charged with murder in the deaths of Taylor and Reid. She is also charged with attempted murder in the near fatal poisoning of her current husband, the Rev. Dwight Moore. Moore is recovering at Moses Cone Memorial Hospital in Greensboro.

Mrs. Moore has not been charged in connection with Kiser's death.

Authorities believe Mrs. Moore may also have had a hand in the deaths of five other people. Butts has studied the medical records of those people to determine whether any had conditions that could have been caused by arsenic poisoning.

The five are Mabel J. Parker, who worked with Mrs. Moore at Kroger and who died of lung cancer in October 1988; Joseph E. Mitchell, a Kroger meat cutter who died of an apparent stroke in 1985; Ina P. Vinson, who shopped at the Burlington Kroger store where Mrs. Moore worked and who died of cancer in 1977; Isla Taylor, James N. Taylor's mother, who died of a cerebral hemorrhage in 1970, and John W. Reiber, a member of Rev. Moore's church who died of apparent liver failure in February 1988.

Mrs. Moore, who has maintained her innocence, is being held without bond in the Alamance County jail.

Father Kills His Wife, Self After Holding Kids Hostage

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

STOCKTON, Calif. — An armed man with a history of child abuse killed his wife and fatally wounded himself while holding her and eight children hostage, police said.

The children were safe after Thursday's 6½-hour standoff in which the gunman, Dang Cha Xiong, 35, apparently played Russian roulette with the hostages, said Lucian Neely, deputy chief of the Stockton Police Department.

Dang, a Laotian refugee, died about two hours later at a local hospital. His wife's identity was not immediately available.

Police Sgt. Dennis Sanford said Dang previously had been arrested and convicted for child abuse. He had been released from jail Thursday morning.

Officers said a court order had restrained him from visiting the family apartment in the Tyrolean Village district north of the downtown where many refugees from Southeast Asia live.

Lt. Andy Jackson said a ninth child, a 12-year-old boy and apparently a son of Dang's, had escaped and reported to police that Dang was playing Russian roulette with his hostages, sticking a bullet in the cylinder of his gun and pulling the trigger at random.

Police spoke with Dang for several hours and he sounded cooperative, Neely said. But after Dang said he would surrender and lay down his gun, police heard four shots.

Officers rushed the apartment and found the children in a front room and the two wounded parents in a rear bedroom.

Police fired no shots during the siege, Neely said.

He said Dang had been involved in a longstanding feud with his wife's parents.

Seven of the eight children were Dang's, police said. They were reported to be between 1 and 13 years old.

On Jan. 17, five children were killed and 30 other people wounded on a Stockton schoolyard by a man who then shot himself to death in this city 75 miles east of San Francisco.

Consumer Prices Rise Slightly

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Consumer inflation rose a modest 0.2 percent in July, held down by the sharpest drop in gasoline prices in nearly three years, the government said today.

The increase in the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index last month matched the gain in June. Together, the two reports showed the mildest two-month inflation picture since July-August 1986 and marked a sharp contrast to surging prices in the first five months of the year.

Even with the recent slowdown, prices for the first seven months of 1989 rose at a 5.5 percent annual rate, more than a full percentage point higher than the 4.4 percent increases in both 1988 and 1987.

The Labor Department said the most recent dampening of cost pressures reflected drops in prices of gasoline and apparel, particularly women's clothing, and a modest rise in food costs.

Gasoline prices, after shooting up

21.2 percent in the first five months of the year, fell 1.0 percent in June and dropped an additional 2.2 percent in July, the sharpest decline since October 1986.

However, fuel oil costs rose 1.5 percent last month, reversing June's decline of 1.2 percent, and natural gas was up 0.5 percent. Food and beverage costs rose a moderate 0.3 percent in July following a 0.2 percent June gain. That was a marked moderation from the first five months of the year, when the lingering effects of last year's drought sent food prices up at a 9.3 percent annual rate.

Cereal products, beverages and sweets all rose substantially, but they were offset by a 0.7 percent drop in the index for meats, poultry, fish and eggs.

Clothing costs were down 0.8 percent last month, following a 1.1 percent decline in June. Prices for women's and girls' apparel fell 2.0 percent and those for infants and toddlers dropped 4.8 percent.

The Labor Department attributed the declines to larger-than-usual end-of-the-season price discounts for women's clothing.

The price of goods and services other than food and energy rose 0.4 percent, driven up by a 2.0 percent gain for tobacco but dampened by a 0.4 percent decline for new cars.

The various changes in July left the overall Consumer Price Index at 124.4 percent of its 1982-84 base. That means a hypothetical selection of goods costing $100 during the base period would have cost $124.40 in July, up 30 cents from June.

The moderation in consumer prices had been expected by economists and was sure to be greeted as good news at the Federal Reserve Board, which had been raising interest rates in order to slow the economy and cool inflationary pressures.

In June, the central bank reversed course and began pushing interest rates down after spotting widespread evidence that the economy had softened.

Israelis Discussing Need For Coordination With U.S.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM — The government will consider coordinating its future military activities with the United States if Washington backs off on criticism of the Israel's kidnapping of a Lebanese cleric, Israeli sources said today.

The kidnapping of Sheik Abdul Karim Obeid from his south Lebanon home by Israeli commandos on July 31 set off a series of retaliatory threats against American hostages in Lebanon.

It also drew criticism in the United States. Some members of Congress denounced the abduction, and President Bush twice called for the release of all persons held against their will and did not exclude Obeid.

A group that says it was holding an American hostage, Marine Lt. Col. William Higgins, claimed it killed him in retaliation for Obeid's abduction, although previous reports indicated he may have been killed last year.

An Israeli source close to the government said that shortly after the kidnapping, "an understanding" was reached between Foreign Minister Moshe Arens and U.S. Secretary of State James Baker III that they would adopt a joint policy to get them through the hostage crisis.

"But there is an expressed Israeli commitment, when the crisis is over, to discuss with Americans coordination of future Israeli activities that may have bearing on American interests and citizens," said the source, who insisted on anonymity. He described this as "the price Israeli has paid for not being criticized now by the United States."

Dan Naveh, an adviser to Arens, confirmed that in the days following Obeid's abduction, Arens and Baker discussed future coordination.

"They agreed not to get into this issue during the days of the crisis, but in the future," Naveh said.

Naveh stressed that "the conclusion was to discuss the issue, not necessarily reach an agreement."

Naveh did not describe the agreement for talks as an exchange for a lowering of critical American rhetoric, but he acknowledged the shift.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's adviser, Avi Pazner, said:

"In the first days after we captured Obeid, there was some unhappiness in Washington about it. ... Since then we have straightened out these matters through constant dialogue, and there is no problem today."

The source close to the government said the Baker-Arens agreement has caused concern in Israel's military and intelligence establishment.

"Israel always prided itself on its autonomy in terms of strategy," the source said. "There's a feeling that in order to get off the hook for a few days, Israel has mortgaged Israel's freedom of maneuver in the future."

Safety Board Studying Cracks Found In United DC-10 Engine

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The investigation of the United Airlines DC-10 crash in Sioux City, Iowa, is looking into whether the engine breakup may have been triggered by cracks in its fan assembly, officials say.

However, no direct evidence of cracking has been found, officials said Thursday.

The National Transportation Safety Board disclosed that a routine inspection of a General Electric CF6-6 engine on another McDonnell Douglas DC-10 at United's maintenance facility in San Francisco recently uncovered a number of small cracks on a flange component of the fan assembly.

The safety board cited the discovery in a letter to the Federal Aviation Administration in which it urged the FAA to begin a special investigation to determine how much stress the GE engine can withstand before such components show signs of a problem, including cracking.

The board, however, made no recommendations that would immediately affect the operation of any of the DC-10s being flown with the CF6-6 engines. There are 124 DC-10s with that engine being flown by U.S. airlines, most belonging to United and American Airlines, the FAA said.

United Flight 232 crashed July 19 as it tried to make an emergency landing at the Sioux City, Iowa, airport, killing 111 of the 296 people on board.

The plane's No. 2 engine, located at the center tail section, broke apart during flight. The breakup, in which much of the fan rotor assembly separated, destroyed the jetliner's hydraulic control system.

The safety board emphasized that critical parts of the engine, including front portions of the fan assembly where the cracking was found in the engine in San Francisco, have not been found and are presumed scattered across the Iowa countryside.

Nevertheless, the board said it was concerned that cracks similar to those found in San Francisco may have developed in other CF6-6 engines. If such cracks were allowed to progress to the point that the fan flange were to fail, the agency said it could "cause catastrophic release of the (engine) fan section" such as apparently occurred aboard Flight 232.

Anthony Broderick, acting FAA executive director, said in a telephone interview that the FAA is aware of the cracks found in the United engine in San Francisco.

However, he disputed the theory that the cracks might be related to the Iowa crash.

"They were not cracks related to stress ... or strain on parts. ... They are completely unrelated to the events in Sioux City," he said, adding that the cracks appeared to have been caused by "a chemical corrosion process" rather than metal fatigue.

But Broderick said the FAA agreed with the NTSB recommendations and that a review of CF6-6 engine performance was under way.

Fire Set By Arsonist

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN DIEGO — A wildfire that charred more than 15,000 acres in San Diego and Riverside counties was started by an arsonist, not a target shooter's stray bullet as initially reported, the U.S. Forest Service said.

The blaze, which started July 29 near Vail Lake in southern Riverside County, burned out of control for 10 days and came dangerously close to the Mount Palomar Observatory before 2,800 firefighters encircled it.

Tommy LaNier, special agent in charge of the Cleveland National Forest, said Thursday that investigators recovered the remnants of an incendiary device "at the point of origin."

He only would not be specific about the device, and only said it started the fire.

LaNier said forestry officials knew arson was the cause five days after the fire started. But officials continued to cite the target-shooting theory because they didn't want to risk compromising their probe, LaNier said.

Authorities have questioned several people. No arrests have been made.

The cost of battling the blaze, which at one point threatened a 2,000-acre reserve for spotted owls and bald eagles, has been estimated at $8 million.

The fire destroyed a watershed in the Cleveland National Forest. In Riverside County, it destroyed a three-bedroom home, a mobile home, a trailer and several sheds.

The blaze was contained on Aug. 7, but about 200 firefighters remain on the scene mopping up.

Marshmallow-Eating Python Loses His Home At The Beach

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — It's off to the auction block for a 20-foot, 250-pound python known to gobble down raccoons "like they were marshmallows" within the glow of the glitzy Fort Lauderdale beach strip.

A veteran animal trapper who helped wrestle the snake from under a home Thursday said he hopes to get at least $500 from a zoo or nature preserve.

The snake, which slithered about the residential seaside neighborhood for years, was stuffed into a sleeping bag after it was displayed to curious onlookers and news cameras.

"He won't have to eat for about a week," said Todd Hardwick, owner of Pesky Critters Relocation in suburban Miami. "When it is time, I might feed him a rabbit."

"We saw the head at first and everyone said, 'Wow!'" said Bob Moxley, a park ranger at Hugh Taylor Birch State Recreation Area, where the snake searched for its prey. "When it all came out, everybody just screamed."

Hardwick believes the python was a pet released years ago in the park and probably rested under the house when not hunting for food.

"The homeowners had been calling people for a month, but no one wanted to go after it," said Hardwick, whose company traps nuisance animals in south Florida. "People say they've seen it eat 30-pound raccoons like they were marshmallows."

The reticulate python, a native of Southeast Asia and Indonesia, can grow to more than 30 feet. Though not venomous, the snake coils around prey to stop breathing and blood flow.

On Wednesday, Hardwick and a three-man crew began digging tunnels below the home. They found the snake about eight feet underground next to a concrete wall.

"I got close enough to snare it and then we just attacked," he said. "It showed no fear of us. It's a proud reptile. He could have broken our ribs in the flash of an eye."

Asteroid Will Make 'Close' Pass With Earth

By Lee Siegel
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — For the third time this year, scientists discovered an asteroid will fly relatively close to Earth, and while there is no threat of collision, experts say such a disaster is likely sometime in the future.

"While the new asteroid poses no immediate danger, in astronomical terms it will be making a very close pass" when it comes within 2½ million miles of Earth about 8 p.m. PDT next Thursday night, said planetary scientist Eleanor Helin, who discovered the mile-wide hunk of rock.

At 2½ million miles — about 10 times the distance between the Earth and the moon — the asteroid designated 1989 PB "will be one of the very closest larger objects to pass the Earth this century," said Helin, a planetary scientist at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena.

"It's not going to hit us. Certainly there's no danger," astronomer Brian Marsden said by telephone from Cambridge, Mass., where he directs the International Astronomical Union's Central Bureau for Astronomical Telegrams, an astronomy reporting agency.

"One doesn't want to worry people, but anything that's crossing the orbit of the Earth stands a chance of hitting the Earth, but it's much more likely to be later than sooner. I'm talking millions of years," Marsden said Thursday.

In March, asteroid 1989 FC — no more than a half-mile in diameter — passed within a half million miles of Earth, but wasn't discovered by astronomers until April. In June, a 2-mile-wide asteroid passed about 8 million miles from Earth.

Scientists have said that if 1989 FC had hit Earth, it would have done so with the power of about 40 billion tons of TNT, or about 40,000 hydrogen bombs, enough to wipe out entire cities. Asteroid 1989 PB is about twice as large.

Helin said the discovery of asteroids passing near Earth is ominous because "if we are finding two or three a year this close to the Earth ... there is strong evidence of a sizable population of these objects that can be devastating. It's the one we don't see that's going to kill us."

She discovered asteroid 1989 PB on Aug. 9 in film taken on the 18-inch Schmidt telescope at Palomar Observatory northeast of San Diego. Astronomers were quickly notified, but it wasn't until Thursday that word of the discovery was made public by the South Pasadena-based World Space Foundation, which helps finance searches for near-Earth asteroids.

"We feel comfortable with the very low probability of any serious impact during our lifetime, but there always remains that slight possibility," said Robert Staehle, foundation president.

Staehle said that in 30 to 50 years, humans may be able to land spacecraft on any asteroid heading toward Earth and "either put some sort of explosives on it or perhaps deflect it using a solar sail or some other propulsion technique."

Craters around the globe provide little doubt that asteroids smacked into Earth in prehistoric times. Scientists have blamed a comet exploding in Earth's atmosphere for a 1908 blast in Siberia that devastated miles of uninhabited terrain and was heard thousands of miles away.

In recent years, many scientists have become convinced that asteroids striking Earth caused some mass extinctions, including the demise of the dinosaurs 66 million years ago. Other scientists, however, blame extinctions on gradual climate change or massive volcanic eruptions.

Marsden said amateur astronomers may be able to see asteroid 1989 PB through telescopes by looking in the constellation Cassiopeia at the time of its closest approach to Earth.

The asteroid moves around the sun in an elliptical orbit that ranges from inside of Venus' orbit to a bit outside Mars' orbit, he said.

Treasury Makes It Official: Tuxes Can Depreciate

By Harris F. Rosenthal
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Benjamin Franklin said nothing is certain but death and taxes. To the Treasury Department nothing is as certain either as the death of tuxes.

The Department's Depreciation Analysis Division has issued what is probably the first federal tuxedo study.

It is contained in 54 pages, complete with tables, three appendices, graphs and a bibliography.

"There are two major types of tuxedos: basic black tuxedos and fashion tuxedos," the analysts inform us.

"Basic black tuxedos generally do not change in style, while fashion tuxedos generally change in style from year to year," says the Depreciation Analysis Division, a newcomer on the governmental scene.

"The basic black tuxedo ceases to rent either because it is worn out as a result of the multiple process of wearing and cleaning. ... Fashion tuxedos are also susceptible to sudden unreparable damage, but usually go out of style or become obsolete before they physically wear out."

The study was done to help determine the rate at which rental establishments should depreciate their tuxedos for tax purposes. To the tax man, depreciation is the process in which the owner of property is allowed to deduct the yearly decrease in the value of that property.

According to the report, no matter how long a tuxedo may hang on a rack in the back room, its economic life is only as long as customers want to rent it.

"The principal findings of this study are that the equivalent economic life of tuxedos held for rental is 1.9 years, while their useful life, which measures the period of which they provide service, is 3.7 years," the report says. "If Congress were to establish a separate asset class for tuxedos, Treasury would suggest that a 2.0 year life be assigned to such class."

The department chose August for its report, perhaps to prove that some government is around — what with the president in Maine, Congress scattered to the four winds and bureaucrats at the beach.

"The basic unit of input is the tuxedo jacket," says the section on characteristics of the formal wear industry.

"The average rental includes the jacket, pants, cummerbund, shirt, tie, and studs. ... Since pants usually wear out faster than jackets, approximately one and a third pairs of pants are purchased for each jacket."

The study notes that a set of tuxedos in a single style "typically contains tuxedos in a wide range of sizes, some of which may rent very frequently and others of which may rent hardly at all."

"The latter are nevertheless needed, because rentals are often made to entire wedding parties and it is necessary to fit the entire party in order to rent even a single tuxedo."

Under the heading "useful life of tuxedos," the report to Congress spells out the rental patterns reported for 199 styles of tuxes.

"Most styles, 182 out of 199, had a useful life of approximately three to five years," said the statisticians.

They found that formal wear rental companies infrequently sell used tuxedos.

"Industry representatives noted that before used tuxedos are discarded, they may be spray painted, shredded, or their sleeves may be cut off to prevent the tuxedos from being worn when their appearance would no longer suggest elegance," the report says. "There is thus little or no salvage value for retired tuxedos."

The tuxedo report is the first depreciation report issued by the Depreciation Analysis Division. There is no mention of what the second study might be.

Richardson Executed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATMORE, Ala. — An inmate who was married last week in a prison ceremony was executed early today in Alabama's electric chair for the 1977 pipe-bomb killing of an 11-year-old girl.

Herbert Lee Richardson, 43, was pronounced dead at 12:14 a.m., said state Department of Corrections spokeswoman Debbie Herbert.

He was convicted in the death of Rena Mae Callins of Dothan, whose body was blown apart on the porch of her home when she picked up a pipe bomb and it detonated.

The execution was carried out after the U.S. Supreme Court followed the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta and U.S. District Judge Robert Varner in Montgomery in refusing Richardson's request for a stay Thursday. Gov. Guy Hunt earlier refused to grant clemency.

Richardson was the sixth person executed in Alabama and the 116 in the nation since the U.S. Supreme Court allowed states to restore the death penalty in 1976.

Richardson, blindfolded, was strapped in the electric chair as Holman Prison Warden Charlie Jones read the death warrant.

"I have no ill feeling and hold nothing against anyone," Richardson said in a final statement.

Soon after, his body received a surge of 1,800 volts of electricity.

In a news conference after the execution, state Prison Commissioner Morris Thigpen said that Richardson had requested the blindfold from the time he left the holding cell adjacent to the execution room at 11:57 p.m.

"He never saw the execution chamber," Thigpen said.

Richardson was described by his defenders as an "all-around American boy" who was left emotionally disturbed by his Vietnam War experience. He claimed the pipe bomb was not meant to explode, only to scare the girl's family.

Checking Up On Physician Can Be Impossible Chore

By Leslie Dreyfous
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — Consumers looking for a reputable physician often turn to the Yellow Pages, but researchers say verifying the credentials advertised can be all but impossible.

Confirming a doctor's education, specialty training, certification and other background is frequently beyond the average citizen's grasp, according to an article published

Thursday in The New England Journal of Medicine.

"It's very difficult in most communities in this country for patients to get important facts about physicians they'd like to consult," said Dr. Arnold S. Relman, the journal's editor in chief.

The problem is that no straightforward directory is available to the public and those who consult professional listings often find them indecipherable.

"While trying to ascertain how physicians' credentials corresponded to those they listed ... we encountered a veritable obstacle course of inconsistent and illogical policies that effectively deny information to the consumer," wrote Drs. Julia M. Reade and Richard M. Ratan, who conducted the informal survey.

"In conclusion, obtaining access to complete, up-to-date, and verified information about physicians is all but impossible."

Like many consumers, Reade and Ratan started their research by thumbing through the Yellow Pages.

They found Southern New England Telephone Co.'s listings were not routinely corroborated and included a warning suggesting additional consultation with a local medical association.

The Hartford (Conn.) County Medical Association, which receives about 20,000 similar inquiries annually, answered many of the researchers' questions.

But the process is rarely that simple, they reported.

"Many medical associations are too small, or are unwilling, to commit the time and manpower needed to provide rigorous verification, and they accept at face value whatever information the physician supplies," according to the researchers.

Reade is a psychiatrist at Massachusetts General Hospital, Ratan an associate professor at the University of Connecticut School of Medicine.

Because physicians supply much of their own background information, Relman said, patients may face medical fraud. Doctors who need periodic re-certification in their specialties may skip the exams or, if they fail to pass, not report the results, he said.

To protect consumers "organized medicine must ... take the initiative and see that standardized directories about physicians be provided and readily accessible to the public," said Relman, who for more than a decade has pushed for an accessible consumer directory.

"If I were sick and needed an operation I would want to know a lot about the surgeon who was going to operate on me," Relman said. "But if you're a lay person and don't have access to professional sources of information it's rather difficult."

Tenacious consumers can track down the American Medical Association's directory, but the guide uses complicated numerical and letter codes in verifying information about a physician's year and state of licensure, medical school and specialty-board certification.

Beyond that, no information is provided on advanced training.

"Thus, there is no way to distinguish between the self-styled cardiologist with board certification in internal medicine alone and the cardiologist who has board certification in that sub-specialty," the doctors said.

The researchers studied several other compendiums, including how-to manuals spawned in the 1970s by the consumer movement, but found similar gaps and obstacles in each case.

State licensing boards agreed that the best way to remedy patients' confusion would be to establish a carefully verified directory, Reade and Ratan reported.

Trident Failure Studied

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The latest test failure of the Trident 2 missile isn't expected to affect plans to put the submarine-launched weapon to sea next year, the Navy says.

However, the admiral in charge of the Navy's newest and reportedly most deadly weapon says he'll delay deployment if he has to.

A Trident 2 missile exploded Tuesday, seconds after being launched from the nuclear submarine Tennessee about 200 miles off the coast of Florida. It was the second such failure in three undersea test firings.

The three-stage Trident 2 is a more lethal version of the Trident 1, the heart of the Navy's nuclear deterrent. The new version, built by the Lockheed Missiles & Space Co., is almost twice as heavy as its predecessor.

The Trident 2, each of which costs $26.5 million, is to be deployed in the 1990s aboard a new generation of submarines, providing the sea-based leg of America's land, sea and air nuclear forces.

Until the test failures, the missile had been one of the Defense Department's nuclear modernization programs to be mostly problem-free, with 16 of 19 successful land launchings.

In a statement released Thursday at the Pentagon, the Navy said that despite the latest test failure "no impact is presently foreseen on the planned deployment of the USS Tennessee in early 1990."

The Tennessee is to be the first of nine submarines equipped to carry 24 of the missiles.

The statement said that problems with water pressures on the missile appear to have caused electrical cables in the first-stage motor to sever, triggering the missile's self-destruct order.

Rear Adm. Kenneth C. Malley said in an interview published Thursday in the New York Times that he's confident problems with the missile will be resolved by the March 31 target date for deployment.

"If I have to slip the date again, I'll slip it again," said Malley, who earlier delayed the target date by three months.

Bell Atlantic Reaches Agreement On Contract

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Bell Atlantic and one of its unions agree on major issues of a new three-year contract that could end a 13-day strike by next week, union and company officials say.

A tentative agreement was worked out with the Communications Workers of America on Thursday after more than two months of bargaining and a strike that slowed services to Bell Atlantic customers in the mid-Atlantic states.

Regional issues were resolved while leaving local issues to be worked out in further talks.

Bell Atlantic subsidiaries were to resume talks today with the CWA on the local issues. Bargaining also was to continue with the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

Three other regional Bell companies also are being struck by the same two unions: NYNEX, which serves the Northeast; Ameritech, which serves five Midwestern states; and Pacific Telesis, which serves California and Nevada.

CWA spokesman Bill Bickers said the Bell Atlantic agreement will have no direct effect on the other strikes, but "hopefully this will give some impetus to those units to reach an agreement."

Union officials said the CWA workers will not return to work at Bell Atlantic until all local issues are resolved and the IBEW reaches agreement with the company. But both sides said a final accord could be reached within days.

"The major strike issues of wages and health benefits have been resolved," Bickers said at a news conference. "This does not mean that the strike is over. But the way has been paved to resolve local issues. We are prepared to negotiate around the clock over the next several days to settle the outstanding issues."

Company spokesman Christopher Clouser called the agreement "very fair" and one that balances the needs of employees, customers and shareholders.

"We're very confident and hopeful that it's both in our interest and the union's to have people back to work ... next week," Clouser said.

The local issues include disputes over job-title and work-rule changes at each of Bell Atlantic's subsidiaries in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia.

Wages and employee contributions to health-insurance plans have been major issues blocking settlement of the contracts with the four companies' nearly 200,000 employees in 20 states and the District of Columbia.

Talks between CWA and Pacific Telesis were held Wednesday and Thursday, but there were no reports of progress. No contract talks were scheduled at NYNEX or Ameritech.

The striking workers include operators, telephone installers and repairmen, factory workers and some sales and clerical personnel. All four companies have continued service using management personnel, but there have been delays for customers seeking some installation and operator services.

The tentative CWA-Bell Atlantic agreement calls for an immediate 3 percent pay raise for the 41,000 CWA workers. They would receive raises of 2 1/2 percent in both the second and final years of the contract. The CWA workers also would receive a cost-of-living adjustment in the latter two years of the contract and a profit-sharing payment in all three years.

Outside the headquarters of Bell Telephone Co. of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia, picket Mary Angela Kane said: "Seven and a half percent is not much, but it's better than nothing. It'll feed my two kids."

Bell Atlantic has subsidiaries serving 12.7 million customers. It has 52,000 workers on strike, including about 11,000 IBEW workers.

Bush Goes Boating

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine — President Bush took an ocean spin in his speed boat today as he interspersed relaxation with updates on political developments in Poland.

Under bright, sunny skies, the president went by car to nearby Biddeford where the power boat, Fidelity, was tied up in a yacht harbor. Accompanied by local fishing buddy Bob Boilard, sons George and Neil and the wife of his other son, Marvin, the president sped out to sea, trailed by Secret Service agents in other boats.

He cheerily waved off reporters' attempts to engage him in conversation. "Photo op," he said, referring to his rule about not answering questions at occasions where he wants to be photographed only.

Bush on Thursday vowed to play golf every day until returning to Washington on Sept. 4.

Officials said the president was monitoring the moves that could lead to a non-communist government in Poland but wasn't directly involved in phone conversations with Polish or other East bloc leaders.

Environmental Groups Sue Exxon

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Exxon Corp. is being sued by two environmental groups that say the company should pay the full cost of repairing environmental damage caused by the Valdez oil spill in Alaska's Prince William Sound.

The suit, filed Thursday in state Superior Court in Anchorage, charges that Exxon was negligent in failing to prevent the March 24 spill.

It also contends that Exxon and its six partners in the Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., which runs the trans-Alaska oil pipeline, fraudulently misrepresented their ability to prevent or control a major spill.

"This lawsuit simply seeks to force those who caused the unprecedented assault on the environment to pay to restore one of the world's last reservoirs of natural beauty to its original, unspoiled state," said the complaint by the National Wildlife Federation and the Natural Resources Defense Council.

Sharon Newsome, the wildlife federation's vice president for resources conservation, told a news conference the suit "complements and reinforces" one filed Tuesday by Alaska seeking to recover unspecified damages for losses from the spill.

The suit by the environmental groups says Exxon should be forced to finance a court-controlled fund to cover the cost of assessing and repairing environmental damage in areas affected by the spill. The money, which Ms. Newsome said would amount to "billions," also would be used to buy natural resources such as fish and wildlife to compensate for ecological damage that cannot be repaired.

Exxon spokeswoman Sarah Johnson said the company would not comment on the suit until it had seen it.

The suit says Exxon should pay for the establishment of an independent group of scientists appointed by the Alaska court to control and monitor the environmental restoration effort.

The suit names each member of the Alyeska pipeline consortium: Amerada Hess Pipeline Corp., Arco Pipe Line Co., BP Pipelines (Alaska) Inc., Exxon Pipeline Co. Inc., Mobil Alaska Pipeline Co. Inc., Phillips Alaska Pipeline Co. Inc. and Union Alaska Pipeline Co. Inc. The consortium was responsible for the initial response to the spill.

EVEN IN TODAY'S WORLD FAITH PROMOTES FAMILY LIFE

In today's hectic world, family life has taken some strange turns, and indeed, it is amazing that any of it still exists. Dad may have to travel occasionally. Weekends, he plays golf, goes fishing, or glues his "couch potato" eyes to any seasonal sport on the television. Mom either works or gets involved in some volunteer activity, undoubtedly worthwhile. The "latchkey" kids come home to an empty house, while the teenagers have their own activities. It's only on rare occasions that the entire family sits down to dinner, or goes anywhere together. The one place where they should go in union is to church, where with the help of God some semblance of family unity can be restored. Even today, if the family members work at it, being together can be as rewarding as it used to be.

AZT Trials Prove Successful

receiving AZT be reimbursed for the cost of the drug. AZT, which must be taken six times daily, costs $7,000 to $8,000 a year per patient.

Dr. Anthony Fauci, director of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, the lead federal clinical agency in fighting AIDS, said that with Thursday's announcement about 400,000 more patients may be prescribed AZT. Even though the drug is not approved by the Food and Drug Administration for use among mildly infected patients, it could be prescribed for such patients at doctors' discretion, he said.

The earlier trials opened use of the drug to about 200,000 patients, making a total of 600,000 who may now take AZT, Fauci said.

Sullivan said the FDA will consider the new drug trial results and may modify the approved uses of AZT to include those mildly infected. This action, however, could take months, he said.

In the study concluded Thursday, one-third of the patients received 1,500 milligrams daily of AZT, a third took 500 mg daily and a third got sugar pills. The study was conducted at 32 centers in 16 states and the District of Columbia.

Fauci said the results showed that among those taking the placebo, 38 patients developed symptoms of AIDS or of ARC. Among those on high doses of AZT, 19 developed the disease symptoms, and among those on the low doses, 17 developed symptoms.

"This is a very important step in the scientific certification of what we had been hoping for," Fauci said.

"We're not talking about a cure, but we're talking about a very important step in delaying the progression of the disease."

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome attacks the body's immune system and renders it incapable of protecting against infection. The disease is caused by the HIV virus and is spread most frequently through sexual contact, the sharing of needles and syringes, and from mother to newborn infant.

New figures released Thursday by the Centers for Disease Control show there have been 102,621 cases of AIDS diagnosed in the United States since 1981. A total of 59,391 U.S. patients have died.

There is no cure for AIDS and no one is known to have recovered completely from the viral infection.

AIDS Case Count Now Tops 100,000

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — AIDS has reached the 100,000-case milestone in the United States less than two years after the deadly disease hit 50,000.

The national Centers for Disease Control said that, through July, 102,621 cases of acquired immune deficiency syndrome have been reported in the United States. A total of 59,391, or 58 percent, of those patients have already died.

U.S. health officials estimate that between 1 million and 1.5 million Americans are infected with HIV, or human immunodeficiency virus, the virus which causes AIDS. A study among homosexual or bisexual males — the largest risk group for AIDS — suggests that up to 99 percent of those infected will eventually develop the disease.

As scientists have noted for years, since the disease was discovered in 1981, the case count is growing at a faster pace with the spread of the disease. Where the first 50,000 AIDS cases in the United States were reported between 1981 and late 1987, the next 50,000 were reported in less than two years — between December 1987 and July 1989.

AIDS continues to occur increasingly among abusers of injectable drugs. In the first six months of 1989, 23 percent of reported AIDS patients were female or heterosexual male users of intravenous drugs. The CDC said that compares with 18 percent among the cases reported before 1985.

Meanwhile, 56 percent of the cases reported in the first half of this year were among homosexual or bisexual males, compared with 63 percent before 1985.

Gay or bisexual men make up 60 percent of the 102,621 reported AIDS cases.

Four Children Die In Fire Lit By TV

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Fire apparently started by a faulty television set raced through a home this morning, killing four children, police and firefighters said.

Killed in the early-morning blaze on the city's north side were Mary Massey, 11, Paula Massey, 10, Rena Hines, 12, and Lena Ferguson, 6.

The 6-year-old was visiting the other three children, whose parents, James Massey and Patricia Hines, managed to escape, said Syracuse Police Investigator Rod Carr.

Carr said all four children were found dead by firefighters in a bedroom on the second floor of the home shortly after 5 a.m. The parents woke up when they smelled smoke but were unable to get upstairs to the children, authorities said.

There were no smoke detectors in the home, which was engulfed in flames when firefighters arrived. Fire investigators believe the fire started in a faulty television set, Carr said.

"I can't say it would have made a difference, but the parents woke up after they smelled smoke," said Deputy Fire Chief Richard Buck. "Smoke detectors might have given them a few more minutes."

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

This is a dramatized version of facts taken from the Book of Joshua, intending to show some of the customs of these ancient and traditional times.

OTHNIEL'S TRIUMPH

OTHNIEL AND HIS MEN HAVE CONQUERED THE LAST OF THE GIANTS IN THEIR CITY—NOW OTHNIEL IS FREE TO DEMAND THE REWARD CALEB HAS OFFERED...

AND LET CALEB REMEMBER HIS PROMISE—THE HAND OF ACHSAH TO THE VICTOR!

...AND CALEB KEEPS HIS PROMISE BY GIVING HIS DAUGHTER ACHSAH TO OTHNIEL AS HIS WIFE!

ACHSAH PROVES A GOOD WIFE TO OTHNIEL...

MY FATHER, THOU HAST GIVEN LANDS TO OTHNIEL WITHOUT WATER—THEREFORE NOW GIVE HIM ALSO LANDS WITH WATER!

IT SHALL BE DONE!

OTHNIEL HAS RECEIVED GREAT REWARDS—FINE LANDS AND A GOOD WIFE—BECAUSE HE DID NOT SHIRK HIS DUTY NOR DID HE ALLOW HIS FAITH TO GROW DIM IN THE FACE OF FIERCE ADVERSARIES, ALL OF WHICH HAS BEEN RECORDED IN THE BOOK OF JOSHUA: CHAP. 15: 13-19.

Evangelicals Say Jews 'Need' Jesus

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MANILA — Rejecting the thesis that Jews have their own valid covenant with God, th Lausanne II International Congress on World Evangelization said Jews need Jesus "as much as anyone else."

In a manifesto, the congress of about 4,000 evangelicals from around the globe declared:

It "would be a form of anti-Semitism, as well as being disloyal to Christ, to depart from the New Testament pattern of taking the Gospel to 'the Jew first.'"

The manifesto, approved near the close of the 10-day congress July 20, added, "We wish to be sensitive to those of other faiths, and we reject any approach that seeks to force conversion on them."

Repentance was expressed for past "attitudes of ignorance, arrogance, disrespect and even hostility" toward those of other faiths.

But the manifesto rejects "both the relativism that regards all religions and spiritualities as equally valid approaches to God and the syncretism that tries to mix faith in Christ with other faiths."

Asserting the "uniqueness of Christ," the manifesto says, "There is only one Gospel because there is only one Christ, who because of his death and resurrection is himself the only way to salvation."

Record Crowd

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Evangelist Billy Graham attracted a record crowd of 90,000 to Hungary's People's Stadium July 29, thousands sitting on the playing field. The stadium manager said it was the largest ever assembled at the 76,000-seat stadium.

More than 25,000 jammed the playing field to accept Christ. Commented Graham, "I have never seen anything like it before in all my years of ministry. . . . A new wind is blowing across your country. God is working mightily, opening doors."

Integrated Sound System

The Entertainer is the logical choice for anyone who needs a sound system that is reliable, compact and convenient. There's no longer a reason to settle for second best.

The Entertainer is unique in that it offers a true high performance, portable, all-in-one sound reinforcement system! The Entertainer is a 100 watt per channel stereo mixer with 10 inputs offering unparalleled convenience and flexibility to the user. The Entertainer is also a pair of high-performance, Constant-Directivity speakers offering superb sound reproduction in a package designed to fit virtually any application — from main PA to monitoring; from lounge to stage; from church to school.

The Entertainer weighs under 100 pounds total, and is designed for quick set-up, speedy tear-downs and hassle free operation. It's for the stage band that occasionally plays "one nighters". It's for the club musician who is pressed for space. It's for the gospel group or church that needs the convenience of an all-in-one system. It's for the school choral group singing in the auditorium or the shopping mall.

Diner Would Enjoy Company

Dear Abby: There are a lot of lonely people in the world. Maybe you can help us.

I am a widow with grown children and I eat out frequently — usually alone. When I look around and see other diners alone, I am tempted to ask one to join me, or ask if I may join them, but of course I never do for fear of being misunderstood.

When I traveled in Europe, I noticed that the person who seated the patrons in most restaurants asked solitary diners if they cared to share a table. No one seemed to object; in fact, they were delighted with the idea of having company.

I wonder why this isn't done in the United States. The lone diners would have companionship, and the restaurant would have more available space. The diner would have the privilege of declining if he or she preferred to eat alone.

Run this up the flagpole, Abby, and see if anybody salutes. — Party Of One In Tennessee

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Dear Party Of One: I ran it up the flagpole a year and a half ago, and a small army of readers saluted. Read on:

Dear Abby: Several years ago, I wandered into a small cafe in Santa Fe, N.M. I was asked if I was alone. I was. I was then asked if I wanted to sit at the "maverick table."

I didn't know what it was, so they explained. It was a large table where those who came in alone could sit, and perhaps visit with others who were also alone.

Abby, I sat there and met some of the nicest people — and I didn't have to eat alone.

I think this is such a wonderful idea, but I've never seen it done at any other restaurant. Since so many people are alone and lonely these days, perhaps if you printed this, some cafe owners would consider it. — M.E. Skipworth, Wichita, Kan.

Dear M.E.: Great idea! Of course some people prefer to eat alone, but with the "maverick table," at least they'll have a choice.

Dear Abby: Our son-in-law has made it a habit to bring a six-pack of beer along when he and our daughter come to our house for dinner, which is often.

Until last time, he has always gone out on the patio to drink his beer because we do not drink in the house. I have never said anything about his drinking although I do not approve of it.

When my wife called "dinner is ready," he started to bring his unfinished can of beer to the table, and I asked him not to.

My wife thinks I was wrong. Do you think I was? — A Recovering Alcoholic

Dear Recovering: You were not wrong. It's your home, and if you didn't want beer brought to the table, that's your privilege. However, there are many unanswered questions here: How did you ask him not to? Were you polite and non-judgmental? Or sharp and demanding?

Also, does your being a recovering alcoholic have anything to do with your objecting to having beer at your table? (Most recovering alcoholics are tolerant of others who drink socially.) Or is your son-in-law objectionable when he drinks?

Do you think he has a drinking problem? Anyone who brings a six-pack to someone else's home for dinner must "need" it.

Please try to improve your relationship with your son-in-law in order to help him. The signs are obvious. He needs help.

Generics Are As Safe As Label Products

By Jonathan Bor
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

While applauding the federal government's plans to collect more than 1,000 samples of the best-selling generic drugs for quality testing, top pharmacists and a leading consumer advocate said that they see little evidence that generics are less safe than the brand-name drugs they mimic.

Despite this, some pharmacists recommended that consumers lean toward generic drugs that are manufactured by large companies with established track records — rather than by smaller companies rushing to gain a foothold in the competitive industry.

These generally calm reactions came in the wake of an ever-widening federal probe into the generic drug industry, which has recently been rocked by revelations that several companies have bribed Food and Drug Administration agents to gain speedy approval for their drugs or have won approval by putting the brand-name drug into capsules and submitting those samples for government testing.

"This whole controversy has called into question the quality of generic drugs, even though there has been, so far, no demonstrated problem with the quality of (generic) drugs in the marketplace," said Dr. Ralph Shangraw, a professor at the University of Maryland's School of Pharmacy.

Dr. David Knapp, dean of UM's School of Pharmacy, offered a similar view. "I haven't seen anything so far that would have me change my opinion that as a rule generic drugs are safe. What the FDA is doing is more a response for the FDA to cover itself rather than anything major for consumers to worry about."

Generic drugs are low-priced versions of brand-name, prescription drugs whose patents have expired. Almost one-third of the prescription drugs made in the United States are generics, with sales reaching $3.4 billion in 1988.

Wednesday, the FDA announced that it would collect samples of the 30 best-selling generic drugs from warehouse and pharmacy shelves and test them to make sure that they are potent, get absorbed into the bloodstream properly and contain the proper chemical formulation.

The survey was prompted, in part, by the admissions of Vitarine Phar-maceuticals Inc. of Springfield Gardens, N.Y., that it defrauded the government by submitting false test data on generic anti-hypertension drugs that ultimately won FDA approval. The company said that the safety tests were actually performed on capsules containing the brand-name drug — rather than its own generic copy.

The FDA ordered the recall of Vitarine's Dyazide on June 1.

All told, the FDA has said that it is investigating 11 generic drug producers for the alleged bribery of federal officials in charge of drug approvals and the illegal rigging of tests to gain agency approval. As many as a dozen companies manufacture different versions of each of the 30 top-selling generics — and FDA officials say that they expect to test more than 1,000 products in a crash program that started Monday and could last several weeks. Faye Peterson, an FDA spokeswoman, said that the agency will disclose any suspicious test results as soon as they emerge.

"Personally, I think the quality of generic drugs is acceptable," Shangraw said. "I don't think there should be a blanket abandonment of a system that has worked amazingly well. When you think of all the products that have been approved in 20 years — and the lack of any demonstrated inequity (between generics and their brand-name counterparts) — the system has worked well."

Dr. Sidney Wolfe, director of the Public Citizen Health Research Group, a Washington-based consumer group, said he believes that generics are acceptable, low-cost alternatives to brand-name drugs — and that they are, as a whole, safer than newer pharmaceuticals that have fresh patents and have not stood the test of time.

"The corruption in generics is trying to have someone approve something in two weeks rather than two months, but there's no evidence that anyone suffered as a result of taking the drug," Wolfe said.

David Arrington, chief of the pharmacy at Baltimore's Johns Hopkins Hospital, suggested that consumers wishing to save money by purchasing a generic should ask the druggist if the product was manufactured by a large company with a varied product line.

Aviator Jackets, Denim Are Likely Fashion Hits

By Catherine Cook
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

BALTIMORE — It's a very subtle process. You're not going to discover what the most fashionable clothes are going to be in Eastern high schools and colleges this fall by simply studying the latest Seventeen magazine.

In the world of teen-age fashion trends, the process is more complex.

Patrick Bathras, a 19-year-old college student and member of the teen fashion panel at a Baltimore mall, describes it as a combination of several factors: "You see what the stores and magazines are stressing, as well as what your friends are wearing — you're always trying to dress like the people in the 'in crowd' dress. Usually what happens is that when you start back to school it's still warm and people are wearing their summer clothes, but then it gets cooler and somebody starts wearing winter clothes and then things start catching on."

The best advice to trend-conscious teen-agers might well be to put off their back-to-school shopping until they've had a couple of weeks back at school — the same advice that wardrobe consultants usually give people starting a new job.

But for those who worry that all the best stuff will disappear from the shelves before then, we offer below some suggestions from area experts on hot items for fall.

Kirsten Henel, a 16-year-old high school student, who also pursues an interest in fashion through participation in the same mall's teen panel fashion shows, predicts that clothes will be more pulled-together this fall.

"All my friends are starting to dress better," she says. "It's not so much real, baggy, totally-falling off jeans anymore. Girls are wearing things that fit more and they're wearing jewelry. Everybody used to roll up their pants but I've noticed that if they roll them up at all now, it's just once."

Henel is planning a back-to-school wardrobe built around darker shades. "My winter clothes are fall shades — not brights," she says. "I like earth tones, tans and khakis and charcoal and olive."

Among her favorite resources are the Gap, Le Chateau, Britches and the Limited, but there is a drawback to the latter store, she says. "It's so popular that all your girlfriends go there too, so, like, five of your friends end up having the same thing."

For the first day back Henel thinks she will probably choose a pair of belted walking shorts to wear with a sleeveless shirt that buttons down the front. Her accessories will probably include a pair of dangling earrings in the popular new ethnic motif and perhaps a sterling silver bracelet with a turquoise stone. Her shoes will probably be tan leather flats for the early fall, with black suede shoes adorned with little gold chains for days when the weather gets cooler.

One item she'd love to have for fall is a suede bomber jacket, but she says she's never invested in one because "I've always been afraid it might get stolen at school."

Among the items she doesn't expect to be worn by the in-crowd this year are "those fly-away baggy paisley pants everyone wore last year, and I don't think there'll be a lot of neon, all that was more for summer."

The choice of a jean jacket is a bit of a dilemma this fall, she says. "Last year the jean jackets were cropped and before that they were oversized, so this year nobody really knows what to do."

Bathras also predicts that young men will be taking a dressier approach to school. "My age group is more dressed up now than when we were younger — you'll see more pleated pants with a cardigan or bulky sweater and slip-on shoes. And belts. Parents used to always say, 'Why aren't you wearing a belt?' but now people are wearing them again."

Name brands exercise great sway in the choice of fashions. The most sought-after, Bathras says, are Ralph Lauren and Guess? for denim products.

While a leather jacket is the item for young men, Bathras says a pull-on windbreaker in fluorescent colors by CB can be a less expensive alternative for the early days of autumn.

He says the most popular watches tend to have black or brown leather bands with brand names like Guess? or Gucci. Black shoes are making a comeback (along with black jeans) and for more casual moments, white sneakers by Reebok or Nike, perhaps embellished with a sprinkle of neon.

It doesn't seem possible that denim could get any more important in the life of a teen-ager, but its popularity continues to grow for fall. At the Limited in Owings Mills, Md., co-manager Valerie Powers says that "last year we had maybe a couple of different styles, but now we've got a section of the store that's just denim with lots of different styles."

According to a recent college survey conducted by Levi Strauss & Co., college students in the United States and abroad spend more than half their time in jeans.

To accompany their blue jeans, American students prefer graphic T-shirts, button-down shirts, leather jackets or coats, and athletic shoes, while foreign students liked to dress up more with polo shirts, blazers and penny loafers.

Next to blue jeans, the survey found that the second-most popular clothing items were black colored clothing and mini skirts.

According to Lucille Klein, fashion director for J. C. Penney, this fall's most stylish denim looks have a washed look with a soft hand, but unlike last year are not acid-dyed or tattered and torn. Some kind of waistline details will be popular, she says, such as decorative stitching, a wider band, the bunched "paper bag" waist, suspenders or lower belt loops.

Jeans are also a top selling category among teen-agers shopping at Hecht's department store chain. Nancy Chistolini, vice president of fashion merchandising, says denim with aviator details, big pockets and turned-down and paper bag waists are all selling well.

Another item doing well and especially new to this fall is the sheer skirt in black, floral prints or animal prints. "They have their own lining but they're also being worn over leggings, so you might just see two inches of the leggings," she says.

Despite the hot August weather, winter sweaters have already been selling well, in some cases replacing the knit or woven shirts that might have been chosen a year ago.

Chistolini says the most popular are Shaker knit styles with some kind of button detail, frequently 10 to 20 front buttons and worn either tunic length or short to the waist.

A similar trend to either a short or long sweater is echoed at Benetton.

National product director Claire Watson says cardigans are among the top sellers so far across the country. Benetton offers both the classic baggy V-neck and the shorter, close-fitting crew-neck cardigan that buttons to the neck with a '40s feeling.

The top new category for back-to-school, however, is suede. "The knee-length suede skirt is hot, hot," Watson says, "and they're teaming it up with cardigans in mohair."

The most popular colors for either item are black and a royal blue with a purple tinge.

Première Salons

MRS. BEAMAN

Couple Marries In Grifton

GRIFTON — Kimberly Marie Muzikar of Greenville and William Scott Beaman of Greenville were married Aug. 5 in the First Baptist Church.

The Rev. Sam Harvey conducted the double-ring ceremony. A program of wedding music was presented by organist Mike Pryor and soloist Beth Gurganus.

The bride is the daughter of Diantha Muzikar of Greenville and Steven Muzikar of Bricktown, N.J. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Donald Beaman of Greenville.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father. She wore a matte taffeta, formal gown with a scoop neck and re-embroidered lace bodice. The basque waistline featured bubble sleeves with silk flowers and pearl sprays. The ruffled overskirt had lace cut-outs and scalloped lace trim around the semi-cathedral train. She wore a fingertip veil of sheer illusion attached to silk flowers and pearl sprays.

Gay Sutton of Washington, N.C., was maid of honor and Stephanie Muzikar of Kitty Kawk was bridesmaid for her sister.

The father of the bridegroom was best man, and ushers were Robbie Nichols and Stacy Dail of Greenville, both cousins of the bridegroom.

A reception was held after the ceremony at the home of the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. M.K. Hurst of Grifton.

The bride is a graduate of Ayden-Grifton High School and is employed by Great Southern Finance. The bridegroom is a graduate of D.H. Conley High School and is associated with his father in business.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to Myrtle Beach, S.C.

Double-Ring Vows Said

WINSTON-SALEM — Elizabeth Carole Tilley and Kermit Allen Lyle Jr., both of Greenville, were married in a double ring ceremony Aug. 5.

Dr. J.L. Wilson conducted the double-ring ceremony in Ardmore Baptist Church. The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Barry Martin Tilley of Clemmons. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Kermit A. Lyle of Ahoskie.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her honor attendant was her brother, Andrew Tilley of Chapel Hill.

Bridesmaids included Cheri Nelson of Raleigh, Lynda Harris of Rural Hall, Cindy Rushing, Mary Margaret Banner, a cousin of the bride, and Gerri Bennett, all of Winston-Salem, and Susan Petty of Greenville.

Ushers were Paul Rogali of Staten Island, N.Y., Don Brinkley of New Bern, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Kevin Lyle of Elizabeth City, brother of the bridegroom, and Andrew Tilley, brother of the bride. The bridegroom's father was best man.

The bride wore a gown with a pearl-beaded alencon lace bodice, sweetheart neckline accented with sculptured petals at the shoulders and long, lace sleeves. The full skirt fell from a scalloped waistline. The hemline was trimmed with alencon lace as was the chapel-length train. She wore a waist-length, seeded-pearl veil attached to a satin band of silk flowers with alencon lace. She carried a Bible centered with white orchids, Lady Di and sonya roses.

A reception was held at the Barn, the Tanglewood Country Club.

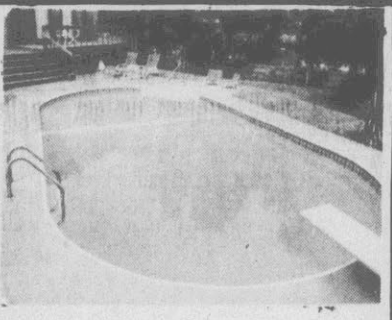

The couple are living in Greenville after a wedding trip to Bermuda.

The bride and bridegroom attended East Carolina University. She is a receptionist with White and Allen, P.A., and he is a vice-president with ECP, Inc.

Depression May Impair Patients

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Patients with depression are at least as impaired in their day-to-day activities — often more so — as patients with chronic medical conditions such as diabetes, according to a new study.

The new findings are published in three articles in Friday's issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association. The articles are the first reports from the "Medical Outcomes Study," an $11.5 million research project designed to find ways to improve the care of patients with chronic medical conditions. The study involves 22,462 patients cared for by 523 physicians in Los Angeles, Boston and Chicago.

Depressed patients in the study were more likely to have problems with work, housework or school or to spend days in bed than patients with diabetes, arthritis, back pain and gastrointestinal problems. They were more likely to report bodily pain than patients with diabetes, heart disease or lung problems. Current heart conditions were the only chronic illnesses likely to diminish overall functioning as much as depression.

The researchers at the New England Medical Center in Boston, the RAND Corp. in Santa Monica, Calif., and other institutions also found that patients with heart disease and gastrointestinal disorders had greater impairment of daily functioning than patients with other chronic medical conditions.

Patients with high blood pressure had the least impairment. Patients with several chronic conditions had more impairment than those with a single condition.

Dr. Sheldon Greenfield, a former RAND researcher who is now at the New England Medical Center, said the study has developed "a paradigm" for judging the quality of care provided by physicians in their offices. It includes measures of patient well-being as well as data obtained from medical and financial records.

The aim is to enable doctors to measure patient well-being as accurately as they measure blood pressure or white-cell count.

Whale Dies At Beaufort

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEAUFORT, N.C. — A female pygmy sperm whale that beached on Bogue Bank earlier this week died late Thursday night at a federal laboratory here, and marine biologists said they had no idea what caused the death.

"We had been saying all along that her prognosis was not good," Dr. David Engel of the National Marine Fisheries Service laboratory in Beaufort said today of the 9-foot, 800-pound mammal.

Her male calf, however, is "holding its own," Engel said. It is in a pen set up in Bogue Sound. The calf, he said, had not been as badly hurt in the surf on Bogue Bank as was the mother.

The calf, thought to be about 3 months old, has not yet been weaned, and officials at the lab were discussing today when and where it can be moved to a site where it can be raised.

It's not likely the calf would be released back into the ocean to fend for itself, even after it's weaned, Engel said.

The two whales were discovered on a beach at Pine Knoll Shores, west of Atlantic Beach, earlier this week, Engel said.

The adult whale had about a half-dozen wounds on her top side, indicating she was cut by a propeller or perhaps shot.

Engel said the cause of death of the mother whale, however, won't be known until officials from the Smithsonian Institution arrive at the lab to perform a necropsy.

"Whales don't beach themselves by accident," Engel said. "They generally do this for a reason, and the reason generally means that they are not in good shape."

Editor Chosen To Lead Poland

liance losing its majority in the Sejm.

On Thursday, the Communist prime minister, Gen. Czeslaw Kiszczak, resigned after trying two weeks to form a government.

The same day, Jaruzelski met with Walesa, reportedly agreed to the coalition idea and agreed to pick a member of the trade union he once outlawed to lead it.

Walesa, who in April realized his goal of reviving Solidarity after a seven-year ban, had said he did not want the job.

Even in a government led by Solidarity, Jaruzelski will remain president, controlling the army and foreign affairs; local governments will still be in the hands of the Communist Party; and party members will control the courts. In addition, tens of thousands of Poland's bureaucrats owe their jobs to the party, and 75 percent of management jobs — ranging from shop managers to factory heads — are held by party members.

The Bush administration hailed the "history-making" decision clearing the way for the new government, but State Department spokesman Richard Boucher issued a statement clearly designed to warn the Kremlin not to interfere.

"We emphasize that this continues to be a matter for the Polish people to decide," he said.

The Soviet Union has said it was concerned about recent developments in Poland but would not get involved in the country's internal affairs.

Mazowiecki, 62, was the least known of the candidates put forward by Walesa, but his relation to Solidarity dates to the first days of the August 1980 strikes in Gdansk that gave birth to the trade union.

He organized a petition of support among intellectuals for the strikers, than stayed on with the workers as an adviser.

Mazowiecki was at Walesa's side last year when a wave of strikes began and led to government-opposition talks on democratic reforms.

Those talks ended in Solidarity being legalized again and led to Poland's most democratic elections, which allowed Solidarity to enter government.

In the June vote, Solidarity-backed candidates swept all but one seat available to the opposition in the Sejm and newly formed Senate. The accord guaranteed the Communist Party a majority, but it lost the upper hand when its traditional allies, the Democratic and United Peasant parties, defected to Solidarity this week.

In an apparent effort to reassure Poland's Warsaw Pact allies, Walesa Thursday reiterated his view that Poland's membership in the Soviet-led alliance was not in jeopardy.

Under his proposal, the communists should retain control of the defense and interior ministries, which oversee the army and police.

"We are members of the Warsaw Pact and therefore have certain responsibilities," he told West German television.

Back in 1980, the creation of Soli-danity, the Soviet bloc's first independent trade union, unnerved the Soviet Union, then ruled by Communist Party leader Leonid Brezhnev.

The union was legal for 16 months and had swelled to 10 million members when martial law was declared Dec. 13, 1981. Thousands of union supporters were jailed, and Parliament banned Solidarity the next year.

Before Solidarity, Mazowiecki was active in independent Catholic circles helped found the Club of Catholic Intellectuals in Warsaw in 1957.

He was part of the ZNAK group, which managed under church protection to serve as a focal point for thinking independent of communist ideology in Poland in the 1960s and 1970s. The group was permitted a few seats in Parliament, and Mazowiecki held one from 1961 to 1971.

Mazowiecki was editor of the Catholic literary and political monthly Wiesz from 1958 until 1981 when he founded Tygodnik Solidarnosc. The weekly was banned after martial law but Mazowiecki resurrected it this year.

Clemson QB Disappears

Focus Of NCAA Investigation Whereabouts Unknown

By Rick Scoppe
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Quarterback Michael Carr, who may be the focus of an NCAA investigation into possible recruiting violations by Clemson, has disappeared, leaving school officials wondering where he is and why he has not contacted the school.

Carr missed practice Thursday morning and afternoon and has not been heard from, sports information director Tim Bourret said.

"He has not had contact with our coaches nor Danny Ford," Bourret said in a telephone interview late Thursday night with The Associated Press. "Ford is trying to make contact with Carr, but he has been unsuccessful."

Bourret said Clemson did not believe Carr's disappearance had anything to do with newspaper reports saying the NCAA may be focusing a reported investigation on his recruitment by Clemson.

Instead, Bourret said officials think Carr might have been upset by his play in a scrimmage Wednesday and worried he was going to be dropped to third string in his battle for the starting quarterback job. Carr played in the scrimmage despite a sprained ankle and missed all five of his passes, Bourret said.

Carr apparently left the campus about 5 a.m. Thursday and went to the train station to go home or to St. Louis, where he has some family, according to a Clemson source. It is believed another player or student trainer took Carr to the train, although Carr was not actually seen getting on the train, the source said.

Earlier Thursday, Carr's high school coach said his former star player told him the Tigers broke NCAA rules while recruiting him. Carr was one of Clemson's top recruits in 1988 but was red-shirted as a freshman after breaking his arm before the season started.

In a related matter, a former South Carolina coach said the NCAA questioned several players at the university 12-18 months ago concerning Clemson's recruiting tactics, strengthening reports that the NCAA had been investigating the football program for some time.

An Atlanta newspaper reported Wednesday that the NCAA was investigating the football program for what the paper called possible major recruiting violations in recent years.

Amite, La., High School coach Gary Hendry said Carr talked with him after last season and told him he was thinking about transferring from Clemson.

"I asked Michael on the telephone, I said: 'Just for my curiosity ... did they do anything more than maybe buy you a Coca-Cola during the recruiting?'" Hendry said in a telephone interview. "I said, 'Now you think about this before you answer. Did they do anything illegal, major things illegal?'"

"At that point, he said, 'Yes,'" Hendry said. "I said, 'Thank you,' and I asked him no more questions."

Hendry said Carr was still in high school when "I first thought there was something maybe wrong." Hendry said his interest was further heightened when Carr came home last Christmas driving a 1988 Toyota Supra, which lists for more than $20,000.

"That, I do not understand," Hendry said. "I'm going to be honest with you."

Hendry said he talked with the NCAA in February shortly after Carr signed with Clemson in what he said was a "routine" investigation by the NCAA of all highly recruited athletes.

Hendry said he had not talked to NCAA investigators since then. Carr is one of 14 children. His mother died when he was young, and he was raised by older sisters.

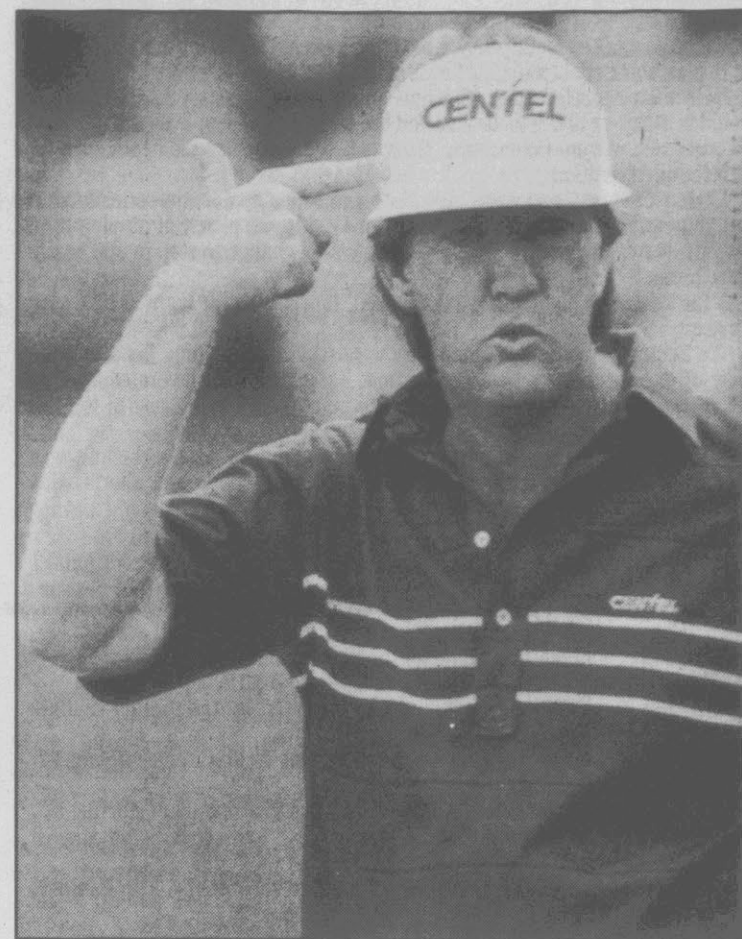

Carr's brother, Chuck Carr Brown, a chemical engineer in Baton Rouge, La., may have bought the car, according to one report. When contacted at his home Thursday, Brown said he would not "respond one way or the other."

Carr and all other players have been told by Clemson officials not to comment on the alleged NCAA probe.

Athletic Director Bobby Robinson said during a news conference Wednesday — and reiterated on Thursday through a spokesman — that he did not want Ford, his assistants or players talking to reporters because he felt it was best to have all comments coming from one person.

"I think quite frankly the time of the year has something to do with it, too," Bourret said. "Danny Ford still has to try to coach the football team

Bob Gilder 'shoots' after missing birdie putt on 18th hole

Tewell Schemes At International

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CASTLE ROCK, Colo. — Doug Tewell was scheming, but most of the other birdie-shooters in The International were too unfamiliar with the unusual format to risk any special strategies for the second round.

Thursday's first-round scores will be combined with today's second-round results to determine the 72 players who advance to Saturday. But those 72 will begin Saturday all even at zero, as will the 24 finalists on Sunday.

Today's scores, therefore, are important only in getting a player to the next round. After today, the 16 points scored by South African Wayne Westner will mean nothing. Nor will the 12 points recorded by Nick Price, Bob Gilder, Bill Britton and Brad Fabel.

Those so-called leaders might be inclined to "keep the momentum going," as Price put it. "When you're playing with confidence, you don't want to lose that good feeling."

Tewell, however, saw it differently. Saturday's pairings will be based on Friday's standings, with the best scorers going last. Desirous of getting an early tee time on Saturday when the wind should be calm and the greens without spike marks, Tewell said he would consider giving back strokes intentionally.

"If I need to slide to get an early tee time, it might be worth a couple of bogeys or double bogeys," he said. "For this kind of money ($180,000 goes to the winner), you've got to use a little strategy."

Tewell had 10 points under the modified Stableford scoring system used in this event, in which medal scores don't count. An eagle is worth five points, a birdie two, par zero, a bogey minus-1 and a double bogey or worse minus-3.

Other top point-getters included Steve Elkington, at 11; Corey Pavin, 10; Lee Trevino, Craig Stadler and defending champion Joey Sindelar, 9; Jack Nicklaus and Ray Floyd, 8; Tom Watson, 7, and Greg Norman, 5.

Gilder didn't agree with Tewell's strategy.

"I think you want to get as many points as you can," he said. "You never know what's going to happen out here. Some of these holes can jump up and grab you. I'm going to be aggressive (today). You make more mistakes being defensive."

Conditions were ideal Thursday, with no wind, and the scores reflected it.

Seventy-three players were at four points or better, suggesting that a player might need eight total points to make the cut today. That number is considerably higher than in previous years, when there were daily cuts.

No one seemed comfortable with what the cut figure might actually be.

"I feel like I have about a three-stroke cushion," Trevino said, "but I don't know what will make the cut-off. Plus-2?"

"Between five and nine might be the cut," Watson suggested. "I'm at plus-7. I don't think I can afford to coast."

"Averaging plus-3 a day probably will get you to Saturday," Tewell said.

Among those in danger of missing the cut was Mike Reid, whose late collapse cost him the PGA title last week. He was at minus-2. Bob Tway was at minus-3, and Andy Bean and Mark McCumber were at minus-4.

Tom Kite and Bruce Lietzke were borderline, in a group at plus-2.

Bears Trade McMahon To San Diego Chargers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAKE FOREST, Ill. — Quarterback Jim McMahon, who led the Chicago Bears to the 1986 Super Bowl championship, has been traded to the San Diego Chargers.

The Bears made the announcement this morning, on the eve of Saturday night's exhibition game between two teams.

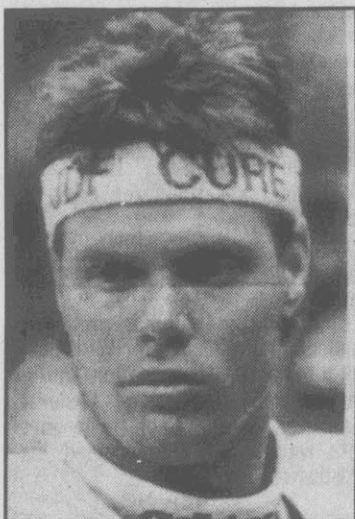

The Bears will receive draft choices in return for McMahon, depending on how well and often he plays for the Chargers.

McMahon, who will turn 30 on Monday, has had only two injury-free seasons — his first two following his selection in first round of the NFL draft out of Brigham Young in 1982.

In 1984, he sustained a serious kidney laceration in the 11th game and missed the rest of the season. Since then he has had a series of injuries every year, including shoulder, hamstrings and knees.

Nevertheless, he is a proven winner. The Bears have won 35 of his last 38 regular-season starts.

Last season, he started the first nine games, sustaining a sprained knee in the ninth against New England.

Jim McMahon

McMahon did not play again until the playoffs. He did not start, but played in a 20-12 victory over Philadelphia in a fog-shrouded NFC semifinal game.

He started the following week in the NFC championship game, a 28-3 loss to the eventual Super Bowl champion San Francisco 49ers.

"The Bears are going in a different direction," player personnel director Bill Tobin said. "Our quarterback situation is healthy."

The Bears now have Mike Tomczak, Jim Harbaugh and rookie Brent Snyder. Tomczak figures to be No. 1 with Harbaugh the backup.

Tobin said the Bears will receive a 1990 draft choice from the Chargers.

"We can get a number three or even a number one depending on the success of McMahon and the success of the Chargers," Tobin said. "Jim McMahon is healthy."

Tobin said the deal has been in the works for several months and was discussed during the draft last April.

"But what San Diego was offering at the time was embarrassing," Tobin said. "The fit was there. San Diego needed a starting quarterback and McMahon might not have been our starting quarterback."

Asked if McMahon might play against the Bears on Saturday night, Tobin said "That's up to Coach Dan Henning and the Chargers."

Memorial Held For Richmond

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CONCORD — Tim Richmond was remembered as a great stock car driver and a great friend at a memorial service at the Charlotte Motor Speedway.

"There's a hole burning in me right now because I didn't get to tell him 'good-bye,'" said Barry Dodson, who was Richmond's crew chief on the Raymond Beadle-owned Blue Max racing team in 1985. "There are a lot of people out there who wanted to tell him how much we loved him, and we didn't get to do it...."

The service was the only chance most people had to bid farewell to Richmond, 34. He died of an undisclosed illness Sunday in West Palm Beach, Fla., after six months of seclusion, in and out of hospitals. His family buried him in a private service Tuesday — the day his death became public.

About 200 people attended the service.

As the helmet Richmond wore during his racing career rested on the podium, friends and former teammates not only talked about the driver Richmond was, but the kind of person he was.

"I remember what he did for my

Farmville, Rose Hold Scrimmages

Both Williams, Sauls Are Pleased With Their Teams' Final Workouts

FROM STAFF REPORTS

Rose High School and Farmville Central both held their final scrimmages prior to the opening of the 1989 football season Thursday.

The Rampants took on Raleigh Broughton in a workout at the Rose practice field while Farmville traveled to James Kenan.

Rose

The Rampants' workout was interrupted by lighting at one point, but the two teams managed to get in the full scrimmage.

"I haven't seen the films yet," Rose coach Chip Williams said, "but I was fairly well pleased as far as our strength and our ability to do the things we wanted to do were concerned."

"But I was disappointed in the way we carried out our assignments, and in our endurance. We need to work on that."

The two teams each had two series of 10 plays in the first half, then went on to game situation plays in the second, each getting four or five series. Rose scored twice while Broughton put one touchdown on the board.

"Obviously, replacing Timmy (Moore) is a job we have to do," Williams said. "Maurice Hines and Andre Perkins showed some bright spots, but they need to work on consistency. They just need experience."

Hines played at fullback last year and Williams said he came on strong at the end of the year. "But there is a difference in fullback and tailback, and he hasn't rounded out to it yet."

Ty Fickling and Anthony Love both also played well at fullback, but Williams said their blocking must improve.

"Our breakaway also needs work. We had several opportunities for big plays and didn't get them," the coach said.

As to the passing game, Williams said he wasn't sure how much the Rampants did throw, noting that Broughton was quick on defense and Rose had trouble blocking them. "When we did pass, I thought our receivers did a good job. Joel Daughtry did a good job blocking and caught about a 40-yard pass. Felix Robinson scored on about a 70-yard pass."

Williams said the offensive line needs to work on technique, but that will come with experience.

At quarterback, Columbus Grice has stepped in following a freak injury to Hank Thompson, a senior who had been scheduled to start at quarterback. "Columbus is a talented athlete, but he hasn't had that varsity experience," Williams said.

On defense, Williams said he was pleased with the way the team controlled Broughton. "Broughton is expected to be one of the top teams in their conference this year. They went to Lee County for their first scrimmage and scored twice on them. Lee was one of the best defensive teams in the state last year and returns a lot of those people. Their only score (Thursday) came late in the scrimmage."

"I thought (tackle) Mike Williams had an outstanding game, along with (linebacker) Terrance Miles and Daughtry (in the secondary)."

Williams said that he believes the defense needs to improve its intensity and to work hard so that it will be strong in the third and fourth quarters once the season starts.

Rose will open the season next Friday, playing at home against Tarboro.

Farmville Central

Farmville Central has been limited to one scrimmage for a variety of reasons during the three years Dixon Sauls has been at the helm. The value of a second scrimmage became quite evident Thursday night.

"I think it was an advantage for us having the first scrimmage," said Sauls, whose Jaguars surfaced with a 4-2 advantage in touchdowns over host James Kenan. "This is the first time since I have been at Farmville Central that we have followed through with two scrimmages and it was good experience."

"You need something to motivate them. I wish we had two more scrimmages before we tee it up for real against North Edgecombe."

Farmville, which ruled a scrimmage with Bunn last Saturday, opens the regular-season next Friday night at the Class 1-A Warriors.

Against James Kenan, the Jaguar offense clicked for over 250 yards on the ground and converted 11-of-16 pass attempts. One scoring opportunity was missed when a fumble was lost near the goal line.

The Tigers, a member of the powerful East Central 2-A Conference, pieced together one scoring drive against the Jags' first-team defense and scored once against the second-line players.

"We were improved from our first scrimmage as far as our execution," Sauls said. "We moved the football well all night. Defensively, we did some good things but we were not as aggressive as I would like for us to be. I'm not disappointed at all, it's just an area we want to improve."

The scrimmage consisted of four 25-minute quarters of game-simulated play. Sauls indicated he shuffled in his full complement of players and all gained valuable experience.

"It was another growing experience for us," Sauls said. "We just need to keep refining and teaching."

Rose Says West Got Off Easy

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — Pete Rose says that when push comes to shove, umpires are getting off too easy.

Rose is exasperated that umpire Joe West wasn't given a suspension Thursday for shoving Cincinnati Reds' second baseman Ron Oester during a post-game argument Tuesday night. The Reds manager later got between Oester and West, pushing the umpire away from his player.

National League president Bill White didn't hand out any suspensions over the on-field incident, and instead imposed undisclosed fines. That didn't please Rose, who was suspended for 30 days last season and fined $10,000 for shoving umpire Dave Pallone.

"The man cannot get away with what he got away with — unless he got one of the biggest fines in the history of umpiring," Rose said. "What's good for the goose should be good for the gander."

Rose said Oester was fined for throwing his bat after striking out to end the game, an automatic $100 fine. No other sanctions were imposed on the team, according to the manager.

It's not known whether any action is being taken against West, who was suspended three days for a shoving incident with former Atlanta manager Joe Torre in 1983.

Although West declined comment at Riverfront Stadium on Thursday night, umpires' union head Richie Phillips said no disciplinary action had been taken against West at that point. He said none was merited.

"Why should Joe be fined?" Phillips said in Philadelphia. "Oester put his hands on him. West didn't touch Oester until Oester got into his way leaving the field. I don't think Joe pushed him as much as he blocked him."

That's far different from the Reds' version. Oester claims he had words with West, but did nothing to deserve two hard shoves from the umpire.

"He pushed him hard enough to make a hole for Herschel Walker to get through," Rose said. "I just don't understand that. It's unbelievable. What does an umpire have to do to warrant a suspension?"

One of the problems evidently was the lack of videotape of the shoves, which occurred on the field as the Chicago Cubs were congratulating each other on a 5-2, 12-inning victory

Pirates Set To Don Heavy Gear

The East Carolina University football team had its final preseason practice without pads Thursday and will dress out in full gear for the first time this fall today, head coach Bill Lewis said.

"We have worked on improving as a team every day so far and (today) we get to play some real football," Lewis said.

Lewis also reported that offensive lineman Carl Carney has undergone shoulder surgery and will be lost for the season. Carney, a 6-1/2, 254-pound red-shirt senior from Columbia, S.C., was listed second on the depth chart at the left guard position.

"Losing Carl was bad news. Any time you lose a senior, that's leadership that you cannot replace. We had plans for Carl to see plenty of playing time this fall. Now, however, it gives someone else a chance to step in and really prove himself," Lewis said.

As far as preseason drills are concerned, Lewis feels his team is ready for full gear.

"We accomplished many things in the past week, including installing the basic offense, defense and kicking game. We got all the players exposed to our system and now have a good base to start from for the rest of the fall drills," Lewis said.

The Pirates were to continue with their two-a-day practice schedule with the squad practicing in "shells" (helmet, shoulder pads and shorts) this morning, and in full gear this afternoon.

Local Schools To Scrimmage Tonight

D.H. Conley, Ayden-Grifton and North Pitt will hold football scrimmages tonight as they continue to prepare for the 1989 season.

D.H. Conley will play at home against Northside High School at 7 p.m. Northside is the new consolidated school formed by the merger of Bath and Belhaven high schools.

The Vikings are set to open the season next Friday, entertaining 2-A Clayton.

Ayden-Grifton will be at home against Lejeune in a match-up starting at 7 p.m. The Chargers will open their season next Friday at home against Richlands.

North Pitt travels to Plymouth for a 7:30 p.m. scrimmage. The Panthers will kick off the season next Friday at West Craven.

E.B. Aycock Physicals Cancelled

Physicals scheduled for 7 p.m. tonight at E.B. Aycock Junior High School have been cancelled due to a lack of interest.

Montgomery, Davenport Shine For 'Pack

RALEIGH (AP) — Front-running quarterbacks Shane Montgomery and Charles Davenport each put together scoring drives as North Carolina State worked through its initial scrimmage Thursday.

Montgomery led the "A" squad to scoring territory with Anthony Barbour carrying for a 9-yard touchdown. Montgomery later capped a 60-yard drive with a 6-yard touchdown pass to freshman Reggie Lawrence.

Davenport made the pitch that sprung sophomore Tyrone Jackson for a 57-yard touchdown run and threw an 18-yard touchdown pass to freshman Ray Griffis.

Coach Dick Sheridan said the Wolfpack was forced to limit contact because of injuries to six of his top 11 linemen.

Spurrier Pleased With Defense

DURHAM (AP) — Junior quarterback Billy Ray led two touchdown drives and completed nine of 13 passes for 147 yards in Duke's first full-scale scrimmage Thursday night.

Duke coach Steve Spurrier also was pleased with the play of freshman quarterback Todd Decker, who hit seven of 12 passes for 91 yards and threw a 10-yard touchdown pass to Tim Mank.

The defensive secondary grabbed five interceptions, including two by junior free safety Erwin Sampson. Sophomore Quinton McCracken ran one back for a 52-yard touchdown.

"I saw some good things on the defensive side tonight," Spurrier said. "They were making things happen, which is what we need from them."

Sophomore receiver Walter Jones had five catches for 88 yards while Mank grabbed four passes for 60 yards. Roger Boone led all rushers with 40 yards on six carries.

Hornets, Holton Agree To Terms

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Michael Holton, who appeared in 67 games last season for the Charlotte Hornets before missing the last 14 games because of injury, has agreed to terms of a multi-year contract, said Hornets Vice President and General Manager Carl Scheer.

The 6-4, 185-pound Holton started in 60 of the first 61 games at point guard last year, but missed the final 14 games because of a stress fracture of the right ankle.

The Hornets acquired Holton from the list of players left unprotected by the Portland Trail Blazers in the 1988 expansion draft. Holton had played the previous two seasons at Portland, appearing in 82 games in the 1987-88 season averaging 5.3 points and 2.6 assists. Last year for the Hornets, Holton averaged 8.3 points and 6.3 assists.

Holton led the Hornets in assists 27 times last season with double-figure assists in 10 games. He also dished out a career-high 424 assists and averaged a career-high 25.3 minutes per game.

Holton was the last remaining unsigned free agent.

Worley Signs Deal With Steelers

LATROBE, Pa. (AP) — Running back Tim Worley, the Pittsburgh Steelers' No. 1 draft pick, agreed to a contract and will arrive in Pittsburgh Saturday, his agent said.

Agent Harold "Doc" Daniels of Los Angeles said he concluded daylong telephone talks with Steelers negotiator Jim Boston Thursday night by agreeing to a five-year deal worth $3.5 million.

Daniels said Worley will receive a $1 million signing bonus, the largest ever given by the Steelers. None of the signing bonus is deferred.

"You've got yourself a player," Daniels said from an airport in Los Angeles. He said Worley will sign his contract and begin working out with the Steelers when they resume training camp at St. Vincent College on Monday.

Worley, the seventh player drafted overall this year, is the Steelers' highest draft pick since they made Hall of Fame quarterback Terry Bradshaw the first player taken overall in the 1970 draft.

Daniels said Worley is "flying high" over the contract agreement.

"He wants to get in," he said.

The Steelers had originally reportedly offered $1.6 million over four years while Daniels had demanded $9.2 million over five.

Petrovic Signs With Portland

Europe's Best Will Be Satisfied With Reserve Role

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PORTLAND, Ore. — In Europe, he is among basketball's biggest stars, a flamboyant guard who often scored 40 or 50 points in a game.

In America, though, Drazen Petrovic says he will be satisfied being an NBA substitute.

Petrovic, the 6-foot-3 Yugoslav considered by many to be the best basketball player in Europe, signed a contract late Wednesday with the Portland Trail Blazers.

"Terry Porter and (Clyde) Drexler are the stars of the team," Petrovic said at a news conference Thursday at Trail Blazer headquarters, "and for me it's no problem to go to the bench."

But Petrovic must win in court before he can take the court in the NBA.

In a lawsuit filed in Portland, Petrovic contends his contract with the Spanish team Real Madrid has a buyout clause. As evidence, he has submitted a contract signed in 1986 that provides for payment of $200,000 for each of the three years remaining on his Real Madrid contract.

Lawyers involved in the case say the amount may increase to $250,000 because of changes in currency rates since the agreement was signed.

However, the Spanish professional league has supplied the NBA with a 1988 document that includes no buyout clause. Petrovic's lawyer, Nicholas Goyak, says the Spanish league is deliberately misleading the NBA.

The NBA, citing its agreement with the Spanish league, had prohibited the Blazers from negotiating with Petrovic. But last week Circuit Judge Philip Abraham of Multnomah County granted a temporary restraining order allowing him to sign with Portland.

If Petrovic loses his lawsuit, he won't be allowed to play in the NBA, but will still receive compensation from Portland, Trail Blazer president Harry Glickman said. A hearing is scheduled next Thursday on Petrovic's request for a preliminary injunction.

Glickman and Petrovic's agent, Warren Legarie, say they think the court case will be won by the Yugoslav star, clearing the way for NBA approval of the contract.

"At this point, in our way of thinking, it's a foregone conclusion," Legarie said.

Details of the NBA contract weren't revealed, but Bucky Buckwalter, the Blazers' vice president for player personnel, said it was in line with the one signed by Soviet guard Sarunas Marciulionis with the Golden State Warriors. That contract pays Marciulionis about $1 million per year for three years.

Glickman would say only that the agreement is multiyear.

Petrovic's skill and dynamic playing style have been compared to those of the late Pete Maravich.

"He'll be one of the more charismatic players in the league, I think," Buckwalter said.

Is he the best player in Europe?

"I think most people who are familiar with the European scene would say yes," Buckwalter said. "People say he's a great shooter, which he is. I would say his greatest asset is his passing. Kevin Duckworth is going to be a very good friend of Drazen Petrovic."

Petrovic averaged 28 points per game last season, his only year with Real Madrid. He scored 63 points in his team's 117-113 over Snaidero of Italy in the final of the European Cup.

The Blazers drafted Petrovic in the third round in 1986, and Buckwalter said they now consider that move a steal.

"He's going to be one of the best third-round picks ever," Buckwalter said. "There's no question about that."

Petrovic, who played in the 1984 and 1988 Olympic Games, said he will work harder on defense in the NBA because he won't have to concentrate on scoring.

Buckwalter said European basketball players seem to work harder on outside shooting than their American counterparts.

Tiger Fans Shocked By Possible Probe

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CLEMSON, S.C. — Tiger fans and alumni are reacting with shock and disbelief over reports that the NCAA is investigating Clemson's football program.

"I pray to God that it's not true," said state Rep. Tim Rogers, D-Richland, a Clemson graduate and longtime season ticket-holder.

The Atlanta Journal-Constitution quoted unidentified sources Wednesday as saying the NCAA is asking questions about the school. The NCAA, as is its custom, declined comment.

The devotion of Clemson fans has been rewarded in the last 12 years with the Tigers' emergence as a perennial national power: national champions in 1981, and victors in bowl games the last two years over the likes of Penn State and Oklahoma.

But that prominence carried a price. In 1982, the NCAA slapped Clemson with two years of probation for 150 recruiting violations and banned the Tigers from TV appearances and bowl games.

Once a team receives such a sanction, it is subject to NCAA's "death penalty" if it is put on probation again within five years. Although that five-year period is past, a suspension of the football program is still possible if major violations are found.

It was that possibility that worries Clemson fans.

"Deep in my heart, I hope it's not true," said Nina Owens, a customer at a Greenville store that sells nothing but Clemson attire and memorabilia. "I thought we'd learned our lesson. I do believe that anytime there is a real successful program, people will think there's something wrong with it."

Mrs. Owens said her father and two brothers are Clemson graduates, her son is a Clemson sophomore and her daughter will attend Clemson next year.

"I almost ran off the road coming into work this morning," South Carolina Comptroller General Earle Morris, a former president of the Clemson Foundation, said, describing his reaction to radio news reports Wednesday.

"My heart's racing. ... The death penalty on Clemson would just be awful," said state Rep. Larry Martin, D-Pickens. Clemson is located in his district.

So the Tiger faithful were on the phone to one another all day Wednesday, trying to find out what was happening.

Even as they talked among themselves, many Clemson alumni circled the wagons when approached by outsiders.

"I have too much faith in our administration that this is happening again," said Robert Hope, executive director of the Rock Hill YMCA.

James Neal, principal of Andrew Jackson High School in Kershaw, said, "I believe myself that everything's fine, that they are innocent until proven guilty."

and try to get ready for the season."

Clemson announced Thursday that a special panel of faculty and administrators would look into the allegations.

It is the second time this decade the Tigers have been the focus of the NCAA. Clemson was put on two years probation beginning in 1982 for recruiting violations, one year after the Atlantic Coast Conference school won the national championship.

Robinson refused an interview request, but said through a spokesman that the school also was looking into the allegations concerning Carr.

But they did talk to Earnestine Hannible, the mother of an ex-Amite player who was a close friend of Carr. She told The (New Orleans) Times-Picayune the NCAA investigator asked her if she had seen any apparent upgrading of Carr's wardrobe, vehicle and lifestyle following his signing with Clemson.

Hannible said she told the investigator that she didn't know "anything about that." But she told the newspaper on Wednesday that she lied to protect Carr and that Carr had begun wearing new clothes and driving a new car shortly after signing with Clemson.

Telephone calls to her home Thursday by the AP went unanswered.

Rose Says...

over the Reds Tuesday night. Television cameras picked up the action when Rose intervened.

"Bill White has no idea what the guy did," Rose said. "He didn't see it. If he saw that on tape the way I saw it, I don't think Joe West could be umpiring last night or tonight."

White came to Cincinnati on Wednesday to interview West, Oester, Rose and others about the incident. He announced his decision in a brief statement Thursday, and declined to be interviewed.

"After reviewing all the reports and tapes from the game, I have taken the appropriate disciplinary action and the matter is now closed," White's statement said.

The videotape shows Rose putting his left forearm on West's chest during the argument. The manager said he wasn't shoving the umpire, but preventing him from going after Oester. White evidently saw it the same way, declining to give Rose any punishment.

"I didn't do nothing," Rose said. "You don't get fined for being a peacemaker."

Phillips agreed Rose was innocent, saying, "Any pushing Rose did was inadvertent."

However, the ballclub protested the lack of suspension for West during a telephone conversation Thursday between White and General Manager Murray Cook, who met with reporters and expressed his frustration.

"If players are going to be suspended for actions such as that, then I think umpires should have to have the same standards," Cook said.

Reds' players agreed.

"If it had been a player, he would have been suspended already," reliever John Franco said. "It's a shame. They've got to do something about it."

"When an umpire shoves a player, they've got to be reprimanded," pitcher Rick Mahler said. "They can't say it's OK. I don't understand how that can work. 'What they're saying is umpires can do whatever they want to do.'"

The major league players' association isn't involved in the matter and hadn't been informed of White's decision Thursday night, according to spokesman Mark Belanger. He said the union doesn't have grounds to get involved unless a grievance is involved.

However, he agreed there should be identical punishments for shoving by umpires and players.

"Clearly, if the umpire does the same thing to the player, we would want the same kind of discipline," he said.

Cubs Rally In Ninth, Complete Sweep Of Reds

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

This was one of those games Chicago will remember if it goes on to win the National League East. The Cubs were trailing 2-1, with none on and two out in the ninth inning Thursday night. Then Cincinnati relief ace John Franco walked pinch-hitter Curtis Wilkerson. Shawon Dunston singled. Pinch-hitter Lloyd McClendon walked.

Jerome Walton then grounded the second pitch he saw from Franco into left field, driving in two runs for a 3-2 Cubs victory and their first sweep at Cincinnati since 1978.

"This is unbelievable," Chicago's Mark Grace said.

"What happened tonight is the difference between a first-place team and a fifth-place team," said Cincinnati's Eric Davis, who gave the Reds the lead with a two-run homer in the eighth.

First-place Chicago extended its lead in the National League East to 4½ games over the New York Mets.

"Two outs, nobody on ... these guys are awesome," said Mitch Williams, who finished for his 31st save.

"I thought we had it wrapped up," Reds manager Pete Rose said.

Walton, who extended his hitting streak to 27 games with a first-inning single, was happy to face Franco, 3-6, with the game on the line.

"I was real comfortable," he said. "I had no chills or nothing. I was real relaxed."

Rick Sutcliffe, 13-9, allowed five hits in eight innings.

Padres 6, Mets 2

Bruce Hurst, 12-4, pitched his National League-leading eighth complete game and visiting San Diego scored four runs in the first inning. New York lost for only the second time in 10 games.

Frank Viola, 1-2, gave up hits to the first four batters in the first. San Diego scored on run-scoring singles by Tony Gwynn and Luis Salazar, Chris James' RBI double and Carmelo Martinez's run-scoring groundout.

Hurst allowed nine hits, struck out three and walked two in beating Viola for the first time in four career meetings.

Giants 10, Expos 5

Will Clark and Kevin Mitchell hit consecutive homers in a five-run sixth inning at Olympic Stadium and Montreal lost for the 12th time in 15 games.

With the score tied 5-5, the Giants went ahead when Jose Uribe singled, took second on catcher Nelson Santovenia's throwing error, third on Brett Butler's sacrifice and scored on second baseman Tom Foley's fielding error.

One out later, Clark hit a three-run homer, his 19th, and Mitchell followed with his league-leading 39th homer.

Bob Knepfer, 5-11, pitched five innings of shutout relief. Joe Hesketh, 5-4, was the loser, allowing seven hits and five runs.

Dodgers 10, Phillies 4

Fernando Valenzuela, 8-11, won his third straight start and drove in two runs. Valenzuela, who has won seven straight decisions at Philadelphia, allowed nine hits in six innings before Alejandro Pena finished for his fourth save.

Ken Howell, 9-9, gave up six hits and three runs in five innings before leaving with a bruise on his pitching hand.

With the score tied 2-2 in the fifth, the Dodgers went ahead on consecutive singles by Mike Scioscia, Valenzuela and Alfredo Griffin. Los Angeles broke it open with five runs in the sixth.

Astros 5, Pirates 3

Jim Deshaies, 11-6, scattered seven hits to beat the Pittsburgh for the fourth straight time in the Astrodome, striking out six and walking none.

Jeff Robinson fell to 1-7 lifetime against Houston. Robinson, 5-11, gave up eight hits and four runs in five innings.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

The Baltimore Orioles expect Cal Ripken to be Mr. Reliable, but they never expected Stanley Jefferson to become Mr. Slugger.

Ripken moved into third place on the all-time list for consecutive games played Thursday night and marked the occasion with a two-run homer in Baltimore's 11-6 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Ripken connected in the fourth inning, when the Orioles scored eight runs.

Earlier in the fourth, Jefferson hit a three-run homer — the 13th of his career but his third in seven games with the Orioles. He later added a two-run single for a career-high five RBIs.

"All I'm doing now is getting my mechanics correct," Jefferson said. "I don't worry about where the ball is hit, and I don't worry about what the outcome is. All I worry about is quality at-bats."

Ripken's 1,208th consecutive game moved him into third place behind Lou Gehrig's 2,130 and Everett Scott's 1,307. Steve Garvey is now fourth with 1,207.

"It's always been a topic of conversation everywhere I go. They always ask me about the consecutive-game streak," Ripken said. "I know what the number is, but I'm not sure I know what the meaning is."

"I'm proud of it because there's nine people out there on the field, and each of them has a job and they're counting on the other guy to do his job," Ripken said. "I take pride in being counted on to be in the lineup every day."

Baltimore's big inning, which snapped a 1-1 tie, was helped along by two Toronto errors.

Orioles manager Frank Robinson was impressed with the way the Blue Jays kept fighting after that.

"It didn't kill them, they came right back," Robinson said. "Let me tell you something about those 'zillion' runs — they can end up being none. Our pitchers have got to take better care when we get them some runs."

Jeff Ballard, 12-6, allowed seven hits and four runs in six innings and was the winner for the first-place Orioles, who lead Milwaukee by 1½ games and Toronto by 2½ in the East.

"We were putting pressure on them, and in those situations funny things can happen," Ballard said of the two Toronto errors.

Jefferson's homer was the first the switch-hitting outfielder has gotten right-handed since 1987. Eleven of his 13 career homers have come left-handed.

Phil Bradley also homered for Baltimore, and George Bell hit his 12th for the Blue Jays.

Brewers 8, Red Sox 4

Milwaukee moved into second place as Greg Vaughn, playing in his seventh major league game, went 3-for-4 and hit his first homer, keying a four-run fourth inning against Boston.

The victory was the seventh straight for the Brewers, while the Red Sox lost for the fifth consecutive time, their longest losing streak under Manager Joe Morgan.

The Brewers scored twice in the first without a hit. In the fourth, B.J. Surhoff walked and scored on Robin Yount's triple, the Brewers' first hit.

Yount scored on Charlie O'Brien's squeeze bunt and Vaughn homered for a 5-0 lead. Billy Spiers finished the inning with an RBI single.

Chris Bosio, 14-7, retired the first 10 batters but gave up a three-run homer to Danny Heep in the sixth, one of nine hits he allowed in 7½ innings.

Athletics 1, Indians 0

First-place Oakland opened a one-game lead over idle California in the West as Bob Welch improved his lifetime record over Cleveland to 5-0 and Dave Henderson provided the only run with a homer in the fifth inning.

Welch, 13-7, allowed six hits, struck out six and walked one in eight innings. Dennis Eckersley, who has allowed only 20 hits this season, pitched a hitless ninth for his 25th save of the season.

Welch now has 21 consecutive scoreless innings and three victories over the Indians this season.

Losing pitcher John Farrell, 7-12, struck out a career-high 11 and gave up only three other hits besides Henderson's 10th homer.

Royals 4, Mariners 2

Kansas City survived a shaky ninth inning against Seattle after Mark Gubicza pitched a three-hitter for eight innings.

Gubicza, 11-10, was replaced in the ninth by Steve Farr and Seattle loaded the bases with none out. An error by third baseman Kevin Seitzer allowed two runs to score, but Jeff Montgomery retired the next three batters for his ninth save.

The Royals scored all their runs on homers, with Kurt Stillwell starting the game with a home run on a 3-1 pitch off Mike Dunne, 2-7.

With one out, George Brett walked and Bo Jackson followed with his 24th homer. It was the fifth time the Royals have hit two home runs in one inning this season.

White Sox 6, Rangers 1

Chicago beat Texas as rookie Greg Hibbard pitched a four-hitter for his first major league complete game and Ivan Calderon had three hits and two RBIs.

Harold Baines, in his first game against Chicago since he was traded to Texas three weeks ago, had three of the hits off Hibbard, but he was erased each time on double-play grounders by Pete Incauglia.

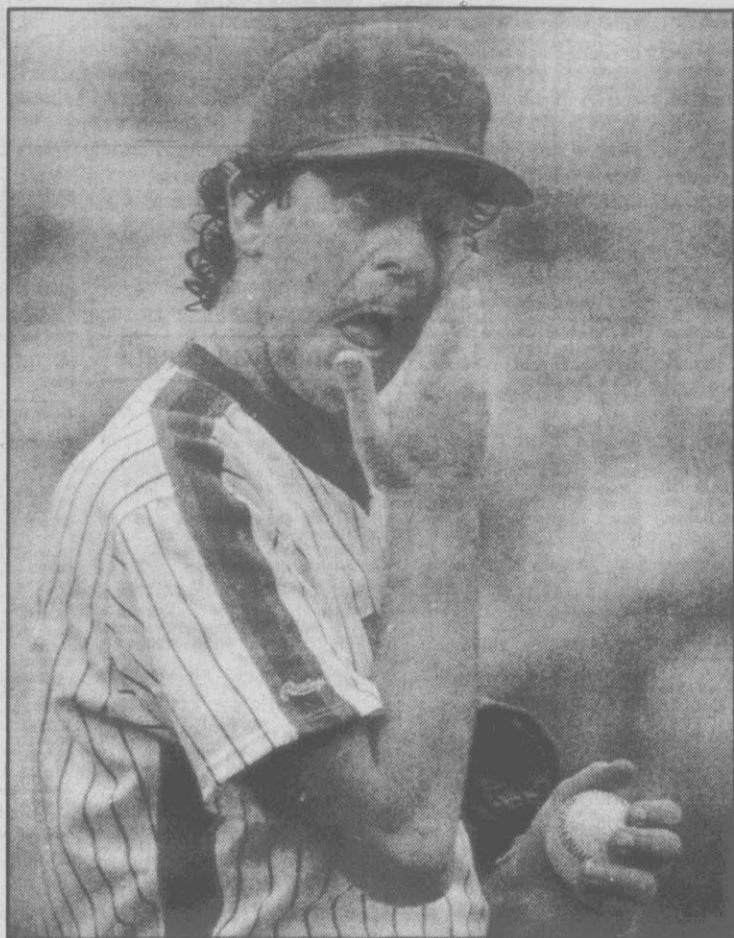

Carlton Fisk also drove in two runs and Carlos Martinez and Lance Johnson each had an RBI to make Hibbard, 3-4, a winner over Rangers rookie Kevin Brown, 11-7.

Yankees 2, Tigers 1

New York made Mel Hall's two-run single in the first inning stand up against Detroit.

Greg Cadaret, 4-3, who was acquired from Oakland in the Rickey Henderson deal on June 21, allowed five hits, struck out a career-high seven and walked two before being relieved with two on and none out in the eighth.

Dave Righetti gave up a two-out single to Gary Ward for Detroit's only run, but got the last five outs for his 20th save.

Michael Chang returns a shot in his ATP victory over Jim Courier

Wilander, Edberg Enjoy Edge On Fellow Swedes

MASON, Ohio — Mats Wilander says that he and countryman Stefan Edberg have an advantage when they play a fellow Swede.

"Maybe we're a little stronger mentally than the other guys," Wilander said. "I've lost to a lot of Swedes. But when it comes down to important matches, it always seems like Stefan beats the Swedes and I usually beat the Swedes. I think it's psychological."

Whatever it is, it worked again on Thursday as the third-seeded Wilander beat Sweden's Niclas Kron 6-3, 6-2 in the third round of the ATP Championship.

Edberg gets his chance today when he plays another Swede, fourth-seeded Jonas Svensson, in the fourth round at the Jack Nicklaus Sports Center.

Top-seeded Boris Becker, No. 4 Michael Chang and No. 5 Brad Gilbert won third-round matches on Thursday, while No. 6 Aaron Krickstein was eliminated by No. 12 Andre Gomez 3-6, 6-4, 7-5.

"I've got quite a big advantage because I'm more experienced and I've been around a little more," Wilander said of his match against Kron. "I think players like him from Sweden, I think they feel if they play me or Stefan, they have to overcome that."

Wilander meets Gomez, his doubles partner, in the fourth round.

Edberg struggled before beating India's Ramesh Krishnan 6-4, 3-6, 6-3.

"I just lost my concentration a little bit," said Edberg, ranked third in the world and a former Australian Open and Wimbledon champion. "I had a problem finding the timing today. Things haven't gone that smoothly so far here."

Svensson earned the matchup with Edberg by beating Gary Muller 6-4, 6-2.

As if he needed help, Becker had the advantage of youth in his third-round match.

Becker, a 21-year-old West German, needed just 53 minutes to eliminate 35-year-old Vijay Amritraj 6-1, 6-1.

"He's not 21 anymore," Becker said. "It's more difficult when you're 35 and I've played as many matches as he has. It's difficult to play a young guy like me who is a little bit quicker than the players he faced in his prime time."

At one point in the match, Becker served three aces in a row and then served a fourth underhanded. Becker had 10 aces to one for Amritraj.

"I've had tougher matches. He realized that I was just a little better today than he was ... (and) we both started to calm down a little bit and have a little more fun," Becker said.

Becker will meet eighth-seeded Jaime Yzaga in the fourth round. Yzaga beat Martin Davis, 6-4, 2-6, 7-6 (7-2).

Chang dispatched the 14th seed, Jim Courier, 6-3, 6-3. The loss came on Courier's 19th birthday.

Courier and Chang roomed together three years ago while on the Junior Davis Cup team.

After Thursday's loss, Courier was critical of Chang's behavior since moving up in the rankings on the heels of his French Open victory.

Ripken Takes Over Third On Iron-Man List

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BALTIMORE — Baltimore shortstop Cal Ripken has moved into third place on baseball's iron man list. It's still a long, long way to No. 1.

After playing in his 1,208th consecutive game Thursday night, Ripken said he doesn't like the idea of playing just to maintain a streak in pursuit of Lou Gehrig's mark of 2,130.

"That's difficult to answer, but I hope not," Ripken said. "It would border on doing something strictly for yourself. It wouldn't be something I'd be proud of."

"It wouldn't go along with what I've been saying all these years," he said. "It would be a contradiction, and something I might question for the rest of my life."

Ripken, of course, may never have to worry about Gehrig. After all, he'll have to continue the streak until 1995 just to have a shot at passing the fabled New York Yankees first baseman of the 1920s and 1930s. For now, Ripken can be happy with taking over third place from Steve Garvey, the former Los Angeles Dodgers and San Diego Padres first baseman.

For his part, Garvey feels Ripken only has a remote chance of passing Gehrig.

"After a while, the odds are against you," Garvey said. "It's a physically demanding sport played on a daily basis. You run into a bout of flu. You can catch a cleat on artificial turf. Things happen."

Things such as the broken wrist Garvey sustained in 1986 that stopped his run at 1,207 games.

Orioles manager Frank Robinson made it clear that it will take a similar occurrence to sideline Ripken.

"I'm not going to take him out of the lineup," Robinson said. "I don't concern myself with the streak, but I'm not going to take him out of the lineup."

Ripken, who turns 29 next week, would appear to have time on his side. He would be only 34 in 1995. Gehrig, incidentally, was 35 when he left the Yankees lineup in 1939. Before he begins worrying about Gehrig, Ripken must get by Everett Scott, who played in 1,307 consecutive games between 1916 and 1925. Ripken would get by Scott early next season.

The Ripken streak began on May 30, 1982 and was in danger of ending only once in the seven years since.

In the second game of the 1984 season, Ripken sprained an ankle and it appeared almost certain he would miss time.

"It was a Wednesday afternoon game. I can remember that very clearly. The next day was an off day and we were going to play the Naval Academy, and the next game wasn't until Friday night."

Ripken recovered and it wasn't until 1987 that he missed so much as one inning. He ran that streak to 8,243 consecutive innings until it was brought to an end, as much to stem the publicity as anything else. He's missed only 26 innings since.

When Ripken's streak started, there were three players still active who are now in the Hall of Fame — Carl Yastrzemski, Johnny Bench and Willie Stargell — and teammate Gregg Olson was in the ninth grade.

While less intense since the consecutive inning streak ended in 1987, there still is debate about whether the streak might be hurting Ripken's offensive production. The player dismisses the critics.

"I'm a pretty analytical person," he said, "and I read things like Rick Dempsey saying I'd be more productive if I took some time off. Maybe that would be, we don't know, but how does that translate to better, but would the team be any better?"

Cal Ripken Jr. has played in 1,208 consecutive games

Rose Strikes Out In Appeals Court

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — Pete Rose has struck out in federal appeals court, losing his chance to have a hometown court decide his fate.

A federal circuit court in Cincinnati decided Thursday that Rose's lawsuit against baseball commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti will be handled by a federal judge in Columbus, Ohio. The Cincinnati Reds manager had fought to have the case decided by a local court.

A three-judge panel of the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals declined on Thursday to intervene in the case, effectively denying Rose the home-court advantage that was one of the main goals of his lawsuit. The appellate decision also ends a six-week stalemate over which court will hear the case.

The court's four-page decision clears the way for a long-awaited preliminary injunction hearing that is expected to include testimony from Giamatti.

"I'm grateful for the expeditious handling of the appeal by the 6th Circuit," Giamatti said. "And I look forward to the resolution of this matter in district court so that I may then have my hearing."

Giamatti wants to conduct a hearing with Rose concerning allegations the Reds manager bet on baseball games.

Whether Giamatti gets to decide Rose's fate will be up to U.S. District Judge John D. Holschuh in Columbus, who gets to keep the case.

Rose's lawsuit against Giamatti was filed in Hamilton County Common Pleas Court in Cincinnati, where Judge Norbert A. Nadel granted Rose a temporary restraining order June 25 protecting the manager from any action by the commissioner while the case is heard.

Lawyers for Giamatti tried to get the case away from Nadel, and finally succeeded when Holschuh decided July 31 that the case properly belongs in the federal courts rather than the state court system.

Rose's lawyers asked the 6th Circuit in Cincinnati for permission to appeal Holschuh's decision, but the three-judge panel decided Thursday to let the case go forward before Holschuh.

The appeals court said there was no grounds for it to get involved at this point.

"All it means is the court chose not to rule on the interim appeal," Rose lawyer Roger J. Makley said.

It means Holschuh — not Nadel — will preside over the next step in the case: a hearing to decide whether Giamatti should be indefinitely prohibited from deciding Rose's fate.

Rose claims the commissioner has already judged him guilty before considering all the evidence, denying the manager a fair hearing. Nadel sided with Rose, deciding that the commissioner has "prejudged" the case.

Giamatti says he hasn't yet made up his mind in the matter.

Holschuh will decide whether the commissioner is free to go ahead and hold a final hearing with Rose on evidence the manager bet on the Reds — an offense that carries a lifetime ban. Two such hearings scheduled by Giamatti have been blocked by the courts while the case is argued, preventing the commissioner from making any determination.

children," said Dodson. "He always took time for them. ... We were always close. He was a caring human being that I really loved."

Richmond burst on the racing scene in 1980, when a ninth-place finish earned him the Indy 500 rookie of the year award. He was 14th in the race in 1981, but after that abandoned Indy-car racing for stock cars.

"As a driver, Tim had the most talent I've ever seen, and his record speaks for itself," Rick Hendrick, who owned the cars Richmond drove in 1986 and 1987, said in a prepared statement. "He was also a person who loved life and loved his friends. He had that spark and charisma that could inspire awe in his driving, and enjoyment among his friends."

Richmond, who won 13 races and $2,228,558 in his career, missed the first 11 races of the 1987 season because of illness after winning a season-high seven events the year before.

He won his first race back, setting off an emotional scene in the winner's circle at Pocono International Raceway.

Bob Hice, formerly a sports reporter for WBTV in Charlotte, was in Richmond's pit area when he won at Pocono.

"Tim seemed to be excited about the entire week," a visibly emotional Hice said during the service. "When Tim won that race, a human could not explain the elation that victory brought. The tears were flowing. He (Richmond) was happy and smiling ... he was on top once again."

He won the next week at Riverside, Calif., the last victory of Richmond's eight-year career.

After six more starts, he abruptly quit the Hendrick Motorsports team, citing his health. His last race was the Champion Spark Plug 400 at Michigan International Raceway in August 1987.

Richmond's career ended when NASCAR suspended him before the 1988 season-opening Daytona 500, saying he had failed a drug test. The test showed excessive amounts of two non-prescription drugs found in over-the-counter remedies for allergies and respiratory conditions, NASCAR officials said.

Richmond passed a subsequent test and was reinstated, but he failed to get a ride in stock-car racing's biggest event. He never drove again.

"Speaking for everyone in racing, I'd like to remember Tim as a fierce competitor who never gave up," said Robert "Cheech" Garde, a teammate of Richmond's in 1986. "Right now, he's in Victory Lane forever. ..."

Secret Nazi-Soviet Accord Confirmed

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — Politburo member Alexander Yakovlev acknowledged the existence of a secret Soviet-Nazi pact and said in an interview published today that it should be "unequivocally condemned."

Yakovlev, who heads a parliamentary panel charged with finding the truth about the 1939 Molotov-Ribbentrop pact, told Pravda there was no doubt about the existence of the secret protocols on dividing Poland and the Baltic states.

"There was, without doubt, a collusion," he told the Communist Party daily.

Yakovlev is the first member of the ruling Politburo to reverse decades of Kremlin denials that the secret protocols existed. President Mikhail S. Gorbachev told the Congress of People's Deputies in June that it was difficult to form a conclusion on the protocols because no one had been able to locate the original documents.

The issue is at the heart of a drive by Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia to gain more independence from the Soviet Union by challenging the legitimacy of its control over the Baltic region.

Yakovlev, echoing an approach taken in the past few weeks among Soviet historians, denied that the secret pact had any bearing on the Baltic states' current legal status.

"It is necessary to admit that neither the treaty nor protocol determined the legal and political status of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia," he said. "It is even more far-fetched to seek some kind of interrelation between the present status of the three republics and the non-aggression treaty."

"I believe that we'll be acting responsibly and in a politically principled way by having unequivocally condemned the pre-war Soviet leadership's deviation from Leninist principles of foreign policy, no matter how it is explained," he added.

Soviet history books contend the Baltic republics voluntarily joined the Soviet Union. The United States subscribes to many Balts' claims that they were forced into the union by the occupying Red Army and does not recognize the Baltic annexation.

The republics plan a series of protests and other events to commemorate the anniversary of the pact Aug. 23, including a human chain stretching from Estonia to Lithuania.

Yakovlev's commission has not issued its formal conclusions, but members have said publicly the report will say the protocols existed and condemn them.

For decades, the Soviet Union denied the existence of the secret protocols to the non-aggression pact, which was signed by foreign ministers Joachim Von Ribbentrop and Vyacheslav Molotov one week before Germany invaded Poland.

South African Police Fire On Blacks During Factory Dispute, Injuring 15

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Police opened fire today on black employees outside a pie factory where they had been locked out by management. At least 15 workers were injured, police and union officials said.

Police also arrested an anti-apartheid activist and banned a Cape Town rally called for Sunday by outlawed rights organizations.

Mohammed Valli Moosa, an official of the banned United Democratic Front and a leader of a new campaign to defy apartheid restrictions, was arrested at his Johannesburg office today and held there as security police searched his files.

Police ordered journalists from the building after the reporters saw Valli Moosa in custody and were told he was under arrest.

There was no immediate indication what charges might be filed against Valli Moosa, one of three activists who escaped from detention last year and took sanctuary at the U.S. Consulate in Johannesburg.

The Food and Allied Workers Union said scores of workers assembled early today outside the Mama's Pies factory on Johannesburg's southeastern outskirts, a day after the company locked them out because of a 4-week-old wage dispute.

The union said police used whips and live ammunition to disperse the workers and made several arrests. The union said 15 workers were injured, some seriously.

Capt. Reg Crewe, a spokesman at police headquarters in Pretoria, said police acted only after workers began pulling on the locked factory gates and ignored an order to disperse. He said officers initially used whips, but fired shotguns when some fleeing workers threw stones. He said four people were slightly injured by the shotgun fire and 15 others suffered minor injuries while being dispersed. He said no one was arrested.

It was the second violent labor clash in two days.

On Thursday, police said at least 10 people were injured outside the British-owned Eveready plant in Port Elizabeth in clashes between striking workers and people recruited to fill their jobs.

Crewe, asked about the banned Cape Town rally, said he did not know if similar rallies planned for Sunday in other cities also would be banned.

The United Democratic Front, a nationwide coalition of activist organizations, and 16 other anti-apartheid groups last year were ordered to halt all activities. They intended to declare themselves legal on Sunday, the front's sixth anniversary.

The rallies were organized as part of a nationwide campaign of defiance. In other phases of the campaign, blacks have sought treatment at segregated white hospitals and dozens of activists have defied restrictions imposed on them following their recent release from imprisonment.

The Human Rights Commission, an independent monitoring group, said today that an activist still in detention, Obed Mpebe, has been on a hunger strike for 37 days to protest being held without charge.

In its daily unrest report, police headquarters said four blacks were killed in Inanda, a black township outside the port city of Durban, when unidentified men shot at a group of youths and set one of them on fire. No explanation for the attack was given.

Soviets Call For Decentralization Of Power

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

MOSCOW — Alarmed by an upsurge of nationalist unrest throughout the country, Soviet leaders called Thursday for a radical decentralization of political and economic power to protect the interests of the Soviet Union's more than 100 ethnic minorities.

In a long-awaited policy statement, the Communist Party's ruling Politburo proposed constitutional changes that could transform relations between Moscow and the Soviet Union's 15 constituent republics. The document denounces decades of overcentralization and calls for the introduction of a truly federal system of government.

The Politburo statement, which covered a page and a half in the Communist newspaper Pravda, will be discussed at a meeting of the party's policy-making Central Committee in the next few weeks. It provides the basis for one of the most important — and politically risky — plans in President Mikhail Gorbachev's perestroika reform program.

The Central Committee session has been repeatedly delayed because of ethnic clashes in many parts of the Soviet Union that have left nearly 200 people dead and tens of thousands homeless. Relationships among the country's nationalities have become so brittle and complex that it is virtually impossible for the Kremlin to satisfy one group without antagonizing another.

Publication of the document coincided with a new constitutional conflict between Moscow and the Baltic republic of Estonia over a controversial Estonian election law that prevents recent immigrants to Estonia — chiefly ethnic Russians — from taking part in local elections. The Kremlin Wednesday declared the law to be unconstitutional.

It is not yet clear whether the Estonian legislature will agree to revise the law in order to remove clauses that have provoked protests by the republic's Russian-speaking minority. The republic's leaders have said they will "reconsider" the legislation, but they are under strong pressure from the majority Estonian population to stand firm.

The Politburo declaration could pave the way for an experiment in regional economic autonomy — so far limited to the small Western-oriented Baltic republics of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania — to be extended to other parts of the Soviet Union. The document says that each republic should have the right to dispose of its own natural resources and introduce whatever form of economic management it considered most efficient.

But the Politburo also sought to set limits to the "sovereignty" of the republics by calling for a "strengthening" of central authority over such areas as defense, foreign affairs and internal security. It said Moscow would reserve the right to take decisions "necessary for ensuring the dynamic and stable development of the national economy."

Magazine Asks Fans To Pay Up

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — Thousands of Britons, for whom life without Private Eye is unthinkable, are digging into their pockets to rescue the magazine from being bankrupted by a massive libel bill.

The response to the $1 million award against Private Eye has triggered an extraordinary display of reader loyalty. Contributions totaled $80,000 by early August, according to editor Ian Hislop.

On May 24 a jury ordered Private Eye to pay the record sum to Sonia Sutcliffe, the estranged wife of mass murderer Peter Sutcliffe, the so-called "Yorkshire Ripper," for two articles alleging that she tried to sell her story to newspapers. The magazine also was ordered to pay court costs of $160,000.

The award caused outcry, partly because it far outweighed the damages paid by the state to families of Sutcliffe's 13 victims.

Editor Hislop, 29, said: "If this is justice then I'm a banana. ... I think this is very nearly the end of Private Eye. We cannot possibly pay that amount of damages."

He then launched an appeal, hoping to get $5 from each of the magazine's 210,000 readers.

Private Eye's reader loyalty may seem unusual. But then, so is Private Eye. Its semimonthly serving of news, gossip, opinion and satire has kept it afloat with barely a change of format since its birth in 1961, at the dawn of Swinging Sixties London.

With its carefully cultivated air of shabbiness, it still looks like something pasted together in a college basement — which keeps the street price low at 95 cents a copy. Its 32 pages carry little advertising and it shows no political bias, savaging hypocrisy, pomposity and wrongdoing wherever they appear.

"While other magazines poke fun at contemporary mores, Private Eye pokes fun at real people," said Tony Loynes, publisher and editor of the industry magazine U.K. Press Gazette.

"Their satire bites at the rich, the famous, the makers and the shakers. It's wickedly satirical, even dangerously satirical."

Some Private Eye euphemisms, designed to avoid libel problems, have entered the language, such as "tired and emotional" for drunk. Lately it has been prominent in investigating the controversial shooting deaths of three Irish terrorism suspects in Gibraltar last year, and the procedures that caused a British ferry to capsize off Belgium in 1987, with 193 lives lost.

"Street of Shame" reports dark secrets from London's newsrooms. "Heir of Sorrows" chronicles Prince Charles' marriage as a tawdry romantic serial.

What Will TV Viewers Be Looking At When Your Commercial Comes On?

There's nothing TV reps love more than telling you who's watching what show when. Unfortunately, the one audience they can't tell you anything about is the one watching your commercial. Because, many times, it's going to end up playing to an empty room. Recent studies bear it out. At the first sign of a commercial break, studies show that 50% of viewers either head for the kitchen, the bathroom, change the channel or just turn off the sound. Your commercial has been missed and that's bad - and expensive too! With newspaper, your message is there to be read at their convenience.

In a 1988 study by the Gordon S. Black Corporation, an independent Washington, D.C. media and opinion research firm, Greenville/Pitt County adults rely on The Daily Reflector 5 times more for their advertising information than television. Of the same group of respondents, only 1 out of 5 reported paying close attention to television commercials while more than a third pay little or no attention at all. Within the higher income groups (the most desirable audience) these figures climb even higher.

With a paid circulation of 18,300 Monday through Friday and 20,800 on Sundays, let The Daily Reflector work for you. The Daily Reflector reaches 74% of the Greenville/Pitt County market weekly.

Most importantly, it reaches them at their request!

That means you not only have a better chance of getting their attention, you have a better chance of holding it. Think about it - people paying to read your message at their convenience! Don't find your audience out to lunch! Call your Daily Reflector Advertising Account Executive at 752-6166 for answers to your advertising questions.

 There are some recurring situations which every bridge player should be able to manage automatically. This is one of the most common, yet it is a constant source of amazement how many get it wrong.

The bidding was routine. With no heart stopper, South could do nothing other than rebid his spades, and North had just enough to raise to game.

At the table we watched, declarer blew the hand in no time flat. West started with three rounds of hearts, then exited with a trump. After drawing the remaining trumps, declarer went after clubs. When that suit broke 4-2—the most likely distribution — there weren't enough entries to the table to establish and cash a long club, so declarer ended up down one.

Obviously, if clubs are 3-3, there's no problem. And if trumps are 4-1, declarer must hope for an even club split. The fate of the contract hinges on those hands where trumps are 3-2 and clubs 4-2.

After winning the trump shift in hand, declarer should continue with a second round of trumps to the jack. When they behave kindly, declarer can claim the contract if clubs are no worse than 4-2. Leaving the last trump outstanding for the moment, declarer cashes the queen and king of clubs, then ruffs a club in hand. Now South can get back to the table with the king of trumps to take discards—one on the ace of clubs and the other on the long card in the suit. That gives declarer 10 tricks: five trumps, four clubs and the ace of diamonds.

Cash In-Law Tops List For Awards

By Joe Edwards
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Singer-songwriter Rodney Crowell emerged from the shadow of his famous relatives when he was named a finalist for four Country Music Association awards.

Crowell, the husband of country star Rosanne Cash and son-in-law of entertainer Johnny Cash, joined Ricky Van Shelton and Hank Williams Jr. with the most nominations as voted by their peers in the music industry.

The late Keith Whitley was selected as a finalist Thursday for three awards, along with newcomer Clint Black, the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band, George Strait and the often-honored Randy Travis.

Crowell's song, "After All This Time" is a finalist for three awards and helped him earn a nomination as top male vocalist. The song itself is nominated as best music video, single of the year and song of the year.

The single of the year award goes to the performer and the song of the year honor is for the songwriter.

"My main motivating factor is do good work and cultivate an attitude so my work evolves to a better place," Crowell said by telephone from Los Angeles after learning of the nominations.

"I want to grow, not be stagnant. I take pleasure in this acknowledgement," he said.

Finalists for entertainer of the year, the top award, are Reba McEntire, Shelton, Strait, Travis and Williams.

Competing for male vocalist of the year will be Crowell, Shelton, Strait, Travis and Whitley.

Finalists for No. 1 female vocalist are Rosanne Cash, Patty Loveless, Kathy Mattea, McEntire and Tanya Tucker.

Winners of the 23rd annual awards will be announced Oct. 9 during a nationally televised show at the Grand Ole Opry House.

Some of the top names in country music failed to make the finalists, including Willie Nelson, Kenny Rogers, K.T. Oslin, the Oak Ridge Boys, Ricky Skaggs and Barbara Mandrell. Oslin was voted female vocalist of the year in 1988.

Williams, the son of a country music legend, completed his nominations in the category of music video of the year for "There's a Tear in My Beer" and two nominations in vocal event of the year, one with Johnny Cash and the other with his late father, Hank Williams Sr. The vocal event of the year is a collaboration by performers who are not normally partners.

"I'm excited about getting nominated with daddy," Williams said.

Through recording technology, the father and son were able to sing together on a new rendition of "There's a Tear in My Beer" when the older Williams' version was combined with an updated one by the son.

Shelton, a former Virginia pipe fitter, rounded out his nominations in the top album category for "Loving Proof" and in the single of the year category for "I'll Leave This World Loving You."

Whitley, who died of an accidental overdose of liquor May 9, also was voted a finalist for the Horizon Award for career development and single of the year for "I'm No Stranger to the Rain."

Completing the finalists for single of the year were "A Better Man" by Black and "Chiseled in Stone" by Vern Gosdin.

Other finalists for No. 1 album were "Beyond the Blue Neon" by Strait, "Old 8x10" by Travis, "Will the Circle Be Unbroken Vol. II" by the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band and "Willow in the Wind" by Mattea.

Former Beatle Ringo Starr also was chosen a finalist, joining veteran country star Buck Owens as a contender for vocal event of the year. They recently teamed up on the duet "Act Naturally."

The mother-daughter duo the Judds, voted either duo or group of the year for four straight years, were chosen a finalist for top duo again. But they were not voted a finalist for entertainer of the year, the top honor and an award they have never won.

Winners and finalists are chosen by the 5,469 voting members of the association.

Steve Martin Chosen For Doctoral Degree

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONG BEACH, Calif. — Comedian-actor Steve Martin will be the first recipient of an honorary doctoral degree given by California State University, Long Beach, the school announced.

The star of the movies "Parenthood," "All of Me" and "Roxanne," Martin will collect his degree Aug. 25 when the school celebrates its 40th anniversary, the university said Thursday.

Martin, a former philosophy student at the school, was singled out for "his sincere and profound interest in and contributions to the university, the world of entertainment and the expansion and elevation of the human spirit."

LOS ANGELES, (AP) Bill Cosby, who has had more than modest success with a series of books, as well as his television series, is set to pen another collection of wit and wisdom, this one on "Childhood," scheduled for publication in the fall of 1991.

Cosby's three previous books, "Fatherhood," "Time Flies" and the most recent "Love and Marriage," have all spent time on The New York Times best-seller list.

Cosby will change publishers this time, from Doubleday to Putnam Berkley Group. He'll also try the big screen next summer in "Ghost Dad," directed by Sidney Poitier.

'Breaking Point' Is Remake Of '64 Film

By Kathryn Baker
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — The TNT movie "Breaking Point" is a remake of the 1964 film "36 Hours," starring James Garner and Eva Marie Saint.

The question is, why? Granted, the premise of the World War II thriller is intriguing — the Nazis capture a U.S. intelligence officer and try to trick him into thinking he's in a hospital suffering from amnesia and the war is over, so he'll reveal when and where the Allied invasion of Europe is to take place.

But it is certainly dated. And no matter how interesting the premise, the story doesn't work if the viewers don't care what happens to the characters. As weakly written as they are, they aren't helped by a cast list that is an eerie vision of weeknight-on-the-dinner-theater-circuit.

"Breaking Point" premieres tonight and is repeated Saturday and Sunday.

Corbin Bernsen, who does an admirable job of playing a crass, shallow divorce lawyer on "L.A. Law," would have been more convincing as one of the Nazis. His Maj. Jefferson Pike comes off as a vacuous dilettante who looks like he'd be much more comfortable shopping for sweaters at Saks than plotting some nasty old invasion of Normandy.

The grinding wheels of the plot are set in motion when Pike goes to an unexplained meeting with a unsavory character at a Lisbon bar, drinks spiked espresso and is plucked off the sidewalk by the Nazis, allowing director Peter Markle to ignore the plodding script for a while and engage in some arty slo-mo and black-and-white photography.

After a wee bit of electro-shock torture, which causes Pike to grimace and perspire, he wakes up in a pleasant rest home surrounded by seeming Yanks. The date on the newspaper is convincing enough, but Pike is suspicious when everyone is vague on the identity of the mayor of Chicago and who won the World Series.

Joanna Pacula, who is making a career of TV World War II dramas ("Crossings," "Escape from Sobibor"), plays Anna, the German nurse enlisted to entice Pike into spilling the beans, because she looks exactly like the wife the Nazis have told him is dead. No wonder she and his wife look alike. She plays both of them. If not for this amazing circumstance, the rest of the story would have been tragically lost to posterity.

Pike, aided by the miracle of flashbacks, figures out the Nazi game. He confirms his suspicions by tripping Anna up with a bit of clever dialogue, something about a paper cut received recently in London — A-ha! We're supposed to be in occupied Germany! Understand, this is not exactly a battle of wits between two mental giants.

Only the stalwart John Glover ("David") inspires any interest, playing Gerber, the Nazi doctor who hatches the brainwashing plot.

As a potential footnote for the annals of bizarre casting, the preppy-looking David Marshall Grant ("thirtysomething") plays a Nazi commandant. His presence must satisfy some behind-the-scenes debt we aren't aware of. His only plot purpose seems to be to menace the proceedings by expressing whining doubts about the validity of Dr. Gerber's experiment. Not exactly the stuff of razor-edged suspense.

Unlike the 1964 film, "Breaking Point" ends with a cynical twist, which might have played on a work of contemporary fiction, but isn't particularly compelling as part of a historical drama. Most viewers do know we won the war, don't they?

Despite some wonderfully inane dialogue — eg., Dr. Gerber: "You won't have to sleep with Major Pike again." Nurse Anna, with straight face: "Thank you, sir." — the breaking point for most viewers will come about 10 minutes into the film.

Hope and Burns announce plans for joint performance

Burns, Hope Will Take Same Stage

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — George Burns and Bob Hope will team up for the first time in their combined 179 years for a Madison Square Garden performance this fall.

Burns, 93, and Hope, 86, have crossed paths for decades but never performed together. On Oct. 1, the two Hollywood legends whose talent has brought smiles to millions will take the same stage.

"It didn't take so long — we met last week," said Burns, trademark cigar in his fingers during Thursday's news conference.

The Madison Square Garden appearance will be performance in-the-round with a full orchestra and will include singer Dionne Warwick.

"We didn't have anything to do; somebody started mentioning money," Hope said when asked why they were going on the road.

IN THE GENERAL COURT OF JUSTICE
DISTRICT COURT DIVISION
SERVICE OF PROCESS
BY PUBLICATION
IN RE: DOE
A MINOR CHILD
To: BILL HAYDEN OR THE FATHER OF A MALE CHILD BORN ON OR ABOUT MARCH 4, 1989, IN CRAVEN COUNTY, NEW BERN, N.C.

TAKE NOTICE that a pleading seeking to terminate your parental rights has been filed in the above entitled action. The nature of the relief sought is the termination of any and all of your parental rights in and to the minor child described in the petition, said child having been born on or about March 4, 1989, in PITT COUNTY, North Carolina. You are required to answer the petition within forty (40) days after August 4, 1989, exclusive of such date, said date being the date of first publication of said notice, and upon your failure to answer the petition within the time prescribed, your parental rights to the said child will be terminated. You are hereby notified that you are entitled to be appointed counsel if you are indigent, provided you request counsel at or before the time of the hearing, and that you are entitled to attend any hearing affecting your parental rights.

Yippee!

The old mower, the mixer and Mike's mitt sold by three!

But now what will you do with the old black and white TV?

Whew!

The bowling ball, the blender and the books sold by two!

But what will you do with Dana's drums that are still nearly new?

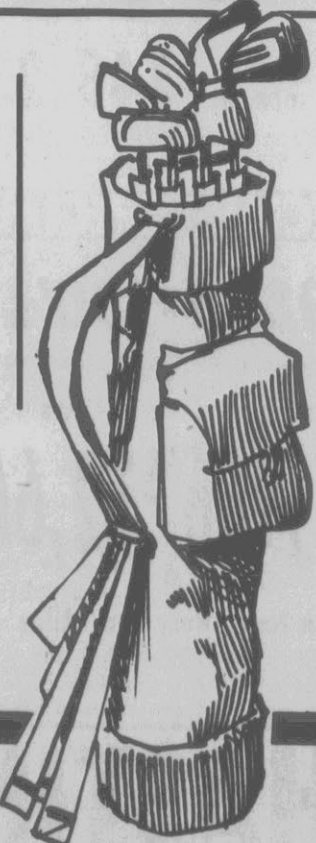

Good deal!

You sold the fencing and frames and Fred's old fishing reel!

But what will you do with the golf clubs that have lost their appeal?
