Little Has Changed In Most Communist-Led Lands

By Alison Smale
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

VIENNA, Austria — Despite momentous reforms in the Soviet Union, Poland, and Hungary, the march toward democracy and personal freedom has made little, if any progress elsewhere in the vast Communist world in the four years since President Mikhail Gorbachev took power in the Kremlin.

The Soviet reforms, however, and the increasingly obvious failures of state-controlled economies to match Western technology and consumer plenty have encouraged people under Communist rule to demand change.

The responses of their governments range from tinkering with the economy while leaving political reform alone to outright repression. Huge security networks still are deployed to crush or at least curb free speech as aging leaders from Havana to East Berlin, Prague, Sofia and Bucharest cling to power.

The most vivid display of old-style Communist determination to stay in power at any cost has come in China.

Before the eyes of a world, hundreds, perhaps thousands, of pro-democracy demonstrators were felled by military tanks and gunfire early in June.

Hundreds, perhaps thousands, more people have been arrested and dozens executed since.

Romania and Cuba are other examples where little has changed since Gorbachev emerged on the world scene. In fact, conditions may actually have deteriorated.

"While in other Socialist countries, they are taking steps toward a more open society, in Romania it's going exactly backwards," said Paula Tscherne, who monitors human rights for the Vienna-based International Helsinki Federation.

Food in shops is scarcer and rationing of bread and other staples more widespread the longer Nicolae Ceausescu presides over the land once known as the breadbasket of southeastern Europe.

Senior Communists and well-known writers demanding change face house arrest, jail or mental hospitals; less prominent dissenters disappear without a trace.

In Cuba, Fidel Castro, like Ceausescu, harangues Soviet-style reform as a return to capitalism.

In an unexplained move attributed by some analysts to internal power struggles, the nation's top general was recently executed after being convicted of drug trafficking; three dissidents face up to four years in jail after reportedly telling foreigners that confessions at the trial were extracted by torture.

In rigid East Germany, desperation over the lack of political and economic reform is driving hundreds of thousands to apply to emigrate West.

Thousands more who can't stand the years of waiting for legal permission to go are escaping in the biggest human flow westward since the Communists built the Berlin Wall in 1961.

"We're just second-class citizens here, or worse," one East German told Western reporters.

"My parents said, 'go, we'd go too if we were younger,'" said an East Berlin woman in her early 20s, one of hundreds fleeing across Hungary's

WARSAW, Poland — President Wojciech Jaruzelski on Saturday nominated Solidarity activist Tadeusz Mazowiecki as prime minister, paving the way for a historic break in the Communist monopoly on leadership in the East bloc.

A statement released by the official news agency said the president decided the new Solidarity-led coalition government was necessary to help solve Poland's crippling economic problems and end widespread public discontent.

"The president thinks that the formation of such a government will be conducive to expeditiously overcoming economic difficulties ... and satisfying the needs and aspirations of Polish society," the PAP news agency said.

Mazowiecki must be approved by the Sejm, or lower house of the National Assembly. The Sejm speaker will receive the nomination Monday, and the assembly will meet Wednesday. Approval is virtually assured because Solidarity and its coalition partners, two minor parties, have a

President Takes Dip On A Dare

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine — President Bush stripped to his trousers and dove into the chilly Atlantic on a family dare Saturday after presenting his speedboat for a Coast Guard safety inspection.

Bush, here for a 2½-week vacation, netted $11 for the plunge and minute-long swim — funds scraped together and presented to him by two grandchildren.

Later, the president's motorcade got stuck in bumper-to-bumper traffic on the way home from a golf match and Bush hopped out to kiss a bride in a horse-drawn carriage.

Drug Lords Vow To Keep Killing

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOGOTA, Colombia — Drug lords declared they would keep killing government officials following the assassination of leading presidential hopeful Luis Carlos Galan. Tens of thousands of mourners on Saturday flocked to Galan's coffin.

"Now the fight is with blood," said the Medellin Cartel in a brief communique broadcast by the RCN radio network and printed by the Bogota daily La Prensa.

The cartel, the world's largest cocaine ring, is believed responsible for 80 percent of the cocaine smuggled into the United States.

"We do want peace. We have screamed for it, but we will not beg for it," the statement said. It was signed "The Extraditables," a ref-

ECU Will Set New Record

ECU NEWS BUREAU

East Carolina University begins its 81st academic year this week, ready for a record enrollment of nearly 16,000 students on a freshly spruced and growing campus. Fall semester classes begin Wednesday.

Higher standards and greater selectivity in admissions will mean a lower rate of enrollment growth but still the enrollment will grow by 2.5 percent to 3 percent above last year's 15,579 students. And officials expect that average SAT scores for entering freshmen will be higher.

Dr. Richard Eakin, the university's chancellor, will address the traditional fall faculty convocation in Wright Auditorium Monday morning. Beginning his third year as ECU chancellor, Eakin will introduce newly appointed members of the university administration, including vice chancellors for academic affairs, business affairs and health sciences.

Critics Keep Eyes On Jones' Oil Stand

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

On past environmental issues not affecting them, constituents of Rep. Walter Jones ignored critics calling the congressman a good friend to the oil and gas industries, but they're closely watching his stance on an issue that hits close to home, a North Carolina newspaper reported Saturday.

Last September, Jones' constituents started caring about the oil industry after Mobil Oil announced plans to drill an exploratory well for natural gas off the coast of Hatteras Island. The company leased the mineral rights off the coast in 1981.

Mobil's toughest opponents say Jones hasn't fought hard enough to protect the Outer Banks. Even longtime supporters of Jones say he must watch his step to prevent his relationship with the industry from becoming a political liability.

For several years, Jones has accepted thousands of dollars in political contributions from the oil industry without a ripple of dissent among his constituents, the Winston-Salem Journal reported.

His financial disclosure forms from the past two elections show more than $33,000 in contributions from political action committees representing oil companies and the offshore-drilling industry.

Jones opposed giving states more power against offshore oil leases. He proposed liability limits on oil spills that would would wipe out some tough state sanctions against spillers. And he has sponsored bills to open the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge to oil drilling.

His stance on these issues has irked environmental groups, but meant little little to his constituents in the 1st District.

Jones, who celebrated his 76th birthday Saturday, has represented most of North Carolina's coast since Lyndon Johnson was president. His 12 consecutive wins are not astounding for a Democrat in a heavily Democratic district, yet they still testify to his ability to take care of the folks back home.

He is the only congressman from North Carolina who heads a congressional committee, presiding over the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee. It's a position he has used many times to advance the state's interests as well as some important environmental causes, such as limiting development on the fragile coastline.

On the Mobil issue, Jones used his influence to attach an amendment to a bill creating a new marine sanctuary in California. The amendment would have required the U.S. Department of the Interior to do a full environmental impact study before allowing Mobil to drill an exploratory well.

The Interior Department had never required a full-blown study in more than 6,000 previous applications for exploratory wells. But Mobil's opponents, particularly those in Dare and Hyde counties demanded the study, as did Gov. Jim Martin and Attorney General Lacy Thornburg.

Jones dropped his amendment after state officials, in private negotiations, agreed on a compromise environmental report from the Department of the Interior. Martin and Thornburg have said the report will produce far more valu-

Pitt Legislators Aren't Expecting Special Assembly Session This Fall

By Stuart Savage
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

There's always the chance a special session of the General Assembly will be called, but Pitt County's legislative delegation doesn't expect to be summoned back to Raleigh this fall.

The regular 1989 session — at 215 calendar days, the longest in history — ended early last Sunday morning.

But even before all the lawmakers could leave Raleigh, some leaders were suggesting a special session might be needed to deal with a regional compact for hazardous waste disposal. Others were saying that a special session might also be asked to deal with the question of veto power for the governor.

The question of a constitutional amendment for gubernatorial veto won passage in the Senate but fell short in the House. "I believe anytime we get 72 votes (the three-fifths vote needed to pass a constitutional amendment) for veto, we ought to bring it up, whether it's in a special session or the short session," House Speaker Joe Mavretic said.

But Rep. Ed Warren of Greenville said last week, "I hope there is not any state business urgent enough to call a special session.

"The session which just ended was too long and costly and I believe the governor will take this into consideration before calling a special session. I don't think the general pubic would approve of the General Assembly convening again this year."

Rep. Walter Jones Jr. of Farmville agreed. "At this point I don't see the need for it and I assume the governor would not call a special session unless he felt it was absolutely necessary."

In Sen. Tom Taft's view, "I think it's absurd for the governor to be talking about a special session less than 24 hours after the longest session in history. I think the suggestion was made out of frustration arising from his lack of success" in the session that just ended.

"It was one error after another on his part," Taft suggested, adding, "I hope we don't spend any more of the people's money on legislative sessions this year."

What about the 1990 "short session?"

Jones thinks that the question of a state lottery and — again — the veto issue will be taken up.

"We might have to deal with the abortion issue" as well and, as always, "the appropriations package," Jones said.

Taft said, "My main goals for the short session will be to procure capital funding for ECU's three projects (additions to East Carolina University's Joyner Library, the medical school's Life Sciences Building and the proposed conference center) and to continue to address educational issues, including salaries."

And Taft suggested that, "Another focus for me will be the outstanding resource water legislation which passed the Senate and is now before the House. It will help protect the important undeveloped estuaries."

erence to the traffickers likely to be extradited to the United States.

The statement did not specifically claim responsibility for Galan's death but said the group would keep killing officials. Police blamed the drug lords, who had offered a $500,000 reward for his death and had tried to kill him Aug. 5 in Medillin.

Galan was shot and killed Friday in Soache, 12 miles from Bogota, as he prepared to address 10,000 people at a campaign rally.

In the attack by at least seven gunmen, local councilman Julio Cesar Penalosa was killed and at least six others wounded. The gunmen escaped. Police said Saturday they had detained three suspects but did not name them.

Hours earlier, drug lords shot and killed a provincial police chief, Franklin Quintero.

Responding to the killings, President Virgilio Barco on Friday announced a harsh crackdown. He said in a nationwide television and radio address he would use his powers under the nation's state of siege to re-establish a treaty with the United States to extradite suspected traffickers.

The state of emergency was declared in 1984 because of drug trafficking and guerrilla activity.

The Supreme Court threw out the extradition treaty in April 1988 on a technicality.

President Bush said Saturday the United States is prepared to coordinate "as expeditiously as possible" the extradition of suspected Colombian drug dealers.

"We in the United States should not forget that others are paying very high costs for the unchecked rampage of the international criminals trafficking in cocaine and undermining the lives of law-abiding citizens," Bush said in a statement issued from Kennebunkport, Maine, where he is vacationing.

Barco consistently has refused to negotiate with the drug lords, who have never made their demands known.

In his speech, he cautioned Colombians they should be prepared "to experience more pain and sufferings" in what he called the "war against the nation" unleashed by drug rings.

The government sent an elite police command to the drug-bastion city of Medellin, and the army was placed under alert. This means the army can be called any time into action anywhere in the country.

Galan, 46, presidential candidate of the Liberal Party, was leading by wide margins in opinion polls for planned presidential elections in May 1990.

A journalist who later became a politician, Galan favored extraditing drug traffickers, saying it was instrumental to their defeat.

Aware of threats against him, Galan wore a bullet-proof vest while attending public meetings.The vest shielded him from three bullets but a fourth killed him, according to a forensic report.

As news of Galan's death spread through the country, crowds estimated at hundreds of thousands came out on the streets shouting "justice, justice," and demanding action against the drug cartels.

Galan's body was carried to the national capital building in Bogota accompanied by tens of thousands of mourners, many with tears in ther eyes. Barco and his top ministers appeared to pay their respects to the candidate's family.

"Galan lives in the hearts of 30 million Colombians," some shouted. "Death sentence for drug traffickers," others said.

of the university's strategic planning process which was launched last fall and on an on-going campus beautification program.

In addition to refurbishing of campus facilities, a new $4 million addition to the Mendenhall Student Center has been completed this summer and a new three-story, 82,000-square foot sports medicine-physical education facility is nearing completion.

Eakin will report on legislative actions affecting the university including appropriation of $7 million toward a top priority $25 million addition to the university's Joyner Library and planning money for a conference center.

Street paving projects on the main campus, scheduled for completion during the summer but interrupted by rainy weather, will be halted temporarily this week for the influx of students but will be resumed after Labor Day and completed in September.

The university has adopted a new visual identity system including an official logo, and the "new look" on campus extends even to new band uniforms for the Marching Pirates and new uniforms, as well as a new head coach, for the football team.

Bush

The president made the unexpected dive from his dock after his 28-foot speedboat, "Fidelity," underwent its annual safety check. After receiving a safety inspection sticker for the boat, Bush made a short public service announcement filmed by the Coast Guard.

"Life jackets save lives. It's best to know before you go," he said.

At that point, Bush's eldest son, George W. Bush, 42, dared his father to jump into the drink, a small cove off the Atlantic that laps against Bush's 11-acre compound at Walker's Point.

"How'd you like to be on prime time television?" Bush asked 8-year-old twins Jenna and Barbara, George W. Bush's daughters.

"Better make sure you get a life jacket," suggested one member of the nine-member Coast Guard Auxiliary team that inspected Bush's boat.

Bush pocketed $11 from Jenna and Barbara and then told reporters: "You can't report it unless you put something in the pot."

When a photographer offered $20 if he'd jump in again, Bush asked "seriously?" and began unzipping a jacket he had donned upon exiting the water.

However, he didn't repeat the stunt.

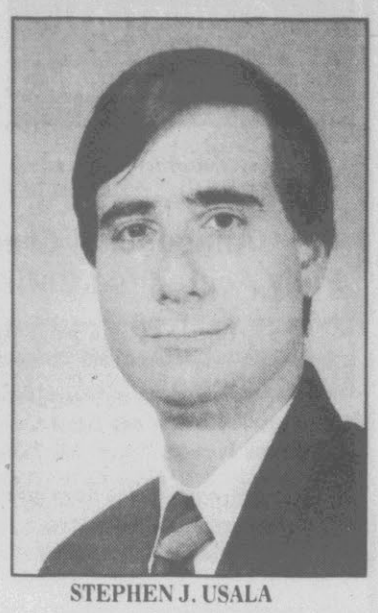
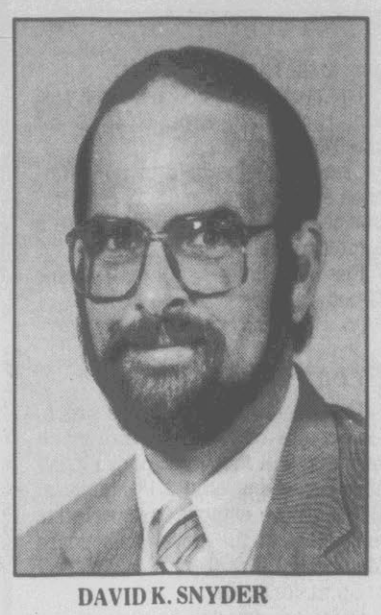
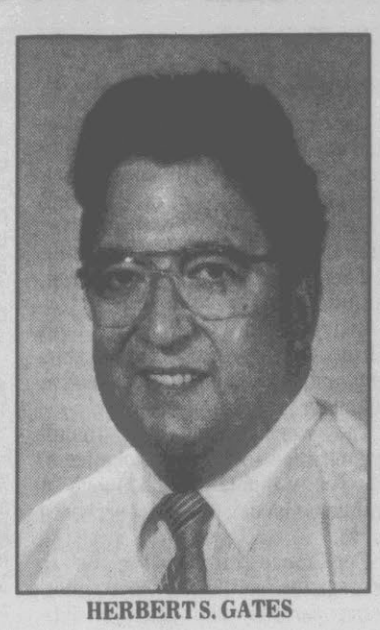
Three Doctors Join ECU Medical Staff



STEPHEN J. USALA



DAVID K. SNYDER



HERBERT S. GATES

Two endocrinologists, Drs. David K. Snyder and Stephen J. Usala, and an obstetrician-gynecologist, Dr. Herbert S. Gates Jr., have assumed posts as assistant professors of medicine at the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

Snyder and Usala are in the department of medicine, while Gates will be in the OB-GYN department.

Snyder recently completed a fellowship in endocrinology at the University of North Carolina School of Medicine and N.C. Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill, where he concentrated on clinical research in the sub-specialty. Before pursuing fellowship training, he was clinical instructor of medicine at Wright State University in Dayton, Ohio.

Snyder, a Dayton, Ohio, native, received his undergraduate education at Ohio University in Athens and completed his medical degree at the Medical College of Ohio in Toledo. After medical school, he finished an internal medicine residency at WSU. He is a former recipient of the American Federation for Clinical Research Burroughs Wellcome Co. Young Investigator Award and has written several articles reporting the effects of nutrition on growth hormone action.

Usala comes to ECU from the National Institute of Diabetes and Digestive and Kidney Diseases in Bethesda, Md., where he was senior staff fellow in the Molecular, Cellular and Nutritional Endocrinology Branch.

Prior to his appointment as senior fellow, he was a research associate and medical staff fellow.

Formerly of Lafayette, Ind., Usala received his bachelor's, medical and doctoral degrees from the University of Chicago and the Pritzker School of Medicine. He completed an internal medicine residency at Case Western Reserve University and University Hospitals in Cleveland, Ohio.

Preceding his ECU appointment, Gates was professor and chairman of the department of obstetrics and gynecology at Oral Roberts University School of Medicine in Tulsa, Okla.

He previously was associate professor of obstetrics and gynecology at the University of Maryland School of Medicine and vice chairman of the department of obstetrics and gynecology at Prince George's Medical Center in Cheverly, Md.

His academic career has included faculty appointments as assistant professor at Eastern Virginia Medical School in Norfolk, Va., and clinical instructor at George Washington University School of Medicine in Washington, D.C. He is also former chief and deputy service unit director for the U.S. Public Health Service Indian Hospital in Shiprock, N.M.

A Washington, D.C. native, Gates received his bachelor's degree at Duke University in Durham and his medical degree at George Washington University School of Medicine.

Police Investigate Seven Theft Reports

Investigators said seven thefts, including a stolen automobile, were reported to Greenville police Friday and Saturday.

Officer S.C. Locke said that at 4:03 p.m. Friday the larceny of an auto was reported from the parking lot at the Deli Kitchen on Dickinson Ave. In a 4:08 p.m. incident, Officer K.M. Lang rported that 12 pairs of jeans and four shirts valued at $524 were taken from Scott's Cleaners at 1401 W. Fifth St. following breaking and entering of the firm.

Officer K.L. Jones said a breaking, entering and larceny incident at 9:16 p.m. Friday resulted in the theft from an automobile at the Comfort Inn parking lot of a purse and a wallet valued at $35, 40 checks, credit cards and $170 in currency.

Officer M.J. Nobles said a microwave oven valued at $200 was taken from 1103-B N. Van Dyke St. in an incident reported at 10:39 p.m. Friday.

In a breaking, entering and larceny incident reported at 2:03 a.m. Saturday at 110 E. 12th Street, Officer Robert Jones said two VCRs, a cassette deck, a receiver and a radio were taken, together valued at $530. Damage of $75 was reported at the site.

Officer Christine Chandler said that at 11:39 a.m. Saturday, a larceny case at 1105 N. Washington St., Apt. B involved the theft of a boom box, a camera and cassette tapes, together valued at $225.

Officer R.C. Allsbrook said that in an incident at 2:24 p.m. Saturday, a wallet with $200 in cash, along with cards and keys, was taken from Apt. A, 614 W. 14th St.

Council To Meet

The Greenville City Council will meet Monday at 6 p.m. in the conference room to discuss the designation of the Tar River as a nutrient sensitive waterway.

Greenville has yet to take a position either supporting or opposing the designation proposed by the state. The Environmental Advisory Commission and Greenville Utilities Commission have logged comments on the proposal with the state.

The council will also consider a budget amendment ordinance from GUC to prohibit dumping in the city's drainage ditches and a contract with the state Department of Transportation for water and sewer replacement on Evans Street.

The board will also consider a resolution to allow animal control employees to remove dead domesticated animals. The recent discovery of dead pigs at the East Carolina Stockyard's holding pen along N.C. 11 prompted the discussion.

The council will also discuss a revision of the city's travel regulations concerning meal allowances, an employee computer purchase plan, an employee tuition assistance program and the city's AIDS policy.

Drugrunners Use Their Imagination In Efforts To Hide Their Products

By Kevin Boughal
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

When it comes to running drugs, a car is like a Thomas' English Muffin — full of nooks and cranies.

Fortunately for the police, however, most people are not very imaginative, said A. P. White, a narcotics investigator for the Greenville Police Department. "Most people want easy access to the drugs so if they do see us, they can get rid of the drugs fast.

"The most unusual place that I ever found drugs was in the air conditioning ducts of the car. They took the whole thing apart, put the drugs in, and put it back together again. But that is unusual."

White said police usually get a tip so they know that a car carrying drugs is coming. The police wait for the car to arrive and then they just keep looking until they find what they want.

The only exception is the highway interdiction unit which looks for drug runners by picking out cars on the highway that fit guidelines usually associated with drugrunners.

"Drugs can be hidden just about anywhere in the vehicle," said Sgt. Robert Coble of the state Highway Patrol. "The only limitation is in the mind of the drugrunners. They hide their stuff everywhere imaginable."

Coble said they have found drugs in speakers, false compartments, door panels and even false shaving cream cans.

But cars are not the only vehicles that transport drugs, said Coble. Tractor trailors have had false loads and partial loads.

"We have found stacks of plywood in trucks that have a hollowed out cavity in the middle full of drugs," said Sgt. Cable. "Drugrunners also like to fill the gas tanks of the tractor trailors with drugs."

Another popular location is in spare tires. People hollow out a spare tire and fill it with Styrofoam, said White.

Construction Funds Expected Later For Life Sciences Project

By Stuart Savage
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

East Carolina University's medical school received $364,000 in planning money from the General Assembly this year for an expansion of its Life Sciences Building and lawmakers said the estimated $6 million needed for construction of the addition should come in the next year or two.

"You get the planning money one year and usually look for construction money in subsequent years," Sen. Tom Taft of Greenville said earlier this week about the proposed vivarium expansion.

Medical school spokesman Dr. Dean Hayek said the present 15,000 square foot Life Sciences Building, completed in January 1980, is too small and needs to be expanded. The $364,000 in planning money, he said, "will take us ... up through the construction drawing phase."

The proposed 47,000 square foot addition, Hayek said, would give the medical school additional "holding facilities for animals, research laboratories and support facilities for the research labs," as well as upgrade the present facilities "to comply with new federal regulations."

Hayek suggested that if the medical school "gets the money to start construction" from the 1990 session of the General Assembly, "construction ought to be finished in 2½ to 3 years."

Rep. Walter Jones Jr. of Farmville said the planning money for the expansion was relatively easy to obtain because the project "was the No. 1 priority for the medical school (and) was also recommended for planning money by the UNC" Board of Governors.

Trashed Cash

TOKYO (AP) — Talk about disposable income. On Saturday, sanitation workers found yet another bundle of money in the garbage, the latest in a rash of trashed cash.

Workers sorting garbage at a trash-processing center in Nara prefecture in western Japan found $7,000 in a briefcase, a local police official said on condition of anonymity.

No identification was found on the briefcase, and police do not know how the money got into the garbage.

PUBLIC NOTICE
PITT COUNTY PUBLIC HEARING

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners will be holding a public hearing during the regular meeting on September 5, 1989 to consider an amendment to the Subdivision Ordinance. This proposed amendment will permit a lot size reduction in certain situations when sufficient evidence is presented prior to preliminary plat submittal. For more information, contact the Pitt County Planning Department at 830-6319. The meeting will be held in the Commissioner's Auditorium, 2nd Floor, Room 225, Pitt County Office Building, 1717 W. Fifth Street, Greenville, NC. Citizens are invited to comment on the Subdivision Ordinance amendment at this public hearing.

Concerned Citizens

State Rep. Howard Barnhill of Mecklenburg County, center, was the keynote speaker Saturday evening at the annual banquet of Pitt County Concerned Citizens for Justice held at the American Legion building. With Barnhill are winners of Community Progress Service Awards presented by the organization. They are, left to right, attorney Leslie Winner, the Rev. Alonzo Mills, Pitt County Commissioner Farney Moore and attorney Judith Kornegay.

Barnhill Asks Unit To Work For Everyone

State Rep. Kelly Barnhill of Mecklenburg County on Saturday night urged members of the Pitt County Concerned Citizens for Justice to work for "justice and progress for everyone."

Barnhill, a native of Pitt County, spoke to more than 160 people attending the organization's dinner at the American Legion building.

"We have to include others," Barnhill said in urging the group to work for the community as a whole. "We cannot make a decision for us without them being involved, and we have to include others."

Barnhill said the group's focus should be on the "total community," and not on individuals or groups of individuals.

But he urged the group to press its work for improvement, especially in seeking ways to curb drubs, promote employment and eliminate homelessness. "We have been holding our hands too long," Barnhill said.

The organization presented its Community Progress Service Awards to local attorneys Leslie Winner and Judith Kornegay and to the Rev. Alonzo Mills and Pitt County Commissioner Farney Moore.

The APES study is a five-year program by the state and the U.S Environmental Protection Agency, which is intended to effectively manage the valuable and productive resources of the major estuaries in northern and central North Carolina.

New Depression Forms In Ocean

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — A tropical depression that formed off the coast of Africa posed no danger to land Saturday as it pushed its way across the far eastern Atlantic Ocean, forecasters said.

At 6 p.m. EDT, the center of the disturbance was located near 18.7 degrees north latitude and 34 degrees west longitude, or about 500 miles northwest of the Cape Verde Islands off Africa.

New Book Says Bakker Doomed PTL With His Need For Stardom

By Dennis Patterson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — Jim Bakker created the celebrity-filled world he had always wanted at PTL, but lost it by surrounding himself only with advisers who fed his need to be the star of the show, says a new book on the ministry that will be released after Bakker's trial starts here Monday.

Bakker, who resigned from the now-defunct PTL ministry more than two years ago in the midst of a sex-and-money scandal, is now facing federal charges of conspiracy and fraud. Jury selection begins Monday, with opening arguments in the trial scheduled a week later.

The Rev. Jerry Falwell, another nationally known televangelist, took over the PTL ministry in March 1987 as a caretaker under an agreement with Bakker. But Falwell put the ministry under bankruptcy protection three months later after uncovering a spreading web of alleged financial irregularities and millions of dollars in unpaid bills.

"He (Bakker) had survived at PTL by creating a universe where right and wrong were relative; he wrote the rules, and if he needed to break one, he found reason to rewrite or ignore it," Charles Shepard, a Charlotte Observer reporter, writes in his new book. Shepard's coverage of PTL from 1984 to 1987 led to Bakker's resignation and a Pulitzer prize for the newspaper.

"Falwell brought to PTL a set of absolute standards — a crucible Bakker could not survive," Shephard writes in "Forgiven — The Rise and Fall of Jim Bakker and The PTL Ministry," due to be published by Atlantic Monthly Press in mid-September.

The 656-page book paints a picture of Bakker as a boyish charmer whose classmates in his hometown of Muskegon, Mich., believed destined for a career in show business.

He enrolled in Bible school in Minneapolis, but dropped out after less than two years when he married his wife, Tammy, and decided to become a traveling evangelist.

A chance opportunity to do a Christian children's show on television eventually led the Bakkers to Pat Robertson's fledgling Christian Broadcast Network and, eventually, to Charlotte in 1974.

As PTL grew, Bakker surrounded himself with aides who would tell him what he wanted to hear, ministry insiders told Shepard in the copyrighted book. Executives who worried about Bakker's spontaneous on-camera decisions to finance projects, or questioned the funding for giant building projects at Heritage USA suddenly found themselves out of favor, if not out of a job.

The contractors for the water park at Heritage USA, PTL's 2,300-acre theme park outside Charlotte, ran into the PTL philosophy when they asked why the ministry had not done a feasibility study on the park to determine what size it should be and what admission fees to charge.

"They were told not to press the subject; Bakker got his inspiration from God, and that was sufficient cause for PTL to move ahead," Shephard wrote in his book. "PTL seemed confident that the audience for Bakker's TV program, the stream of visitors to Heritage USA, and the lifetime partners would generate the necessary traffic."

But Bakker's partners and staff, who had given "their money, their sweat, and their trust," eventually saw that they had been used, the book said.

"The staff members whose allegiance he secured with high salaries, alluring perks, and a seat in the throne room provided talents that Bakker used to enhance his own image ... David Taggart, willing to work slavelike hours and to protect Bakker's darkest secrets, took home enormous sums of money," Shephard wrote.

Taggart and his brother, James, have since been convicted of evading taxes on $1.1 million in ministry funds that prosecutors said they diverted to their own uses, which included Cartier jewelry, designer clothes and a Manhattan apartment.

Richard M. Dortch, Bakker's top assistant at PTL, pleaded guilty earlier this month to four counts of conspiracy and fraud. He has agreed to testify against his former boss as part of a plea bargain.

"There's no question that he will testify if he is subpoenaed," said Bill Diehl, Dortch's attorney.

In addition, Ben Cotten, the attorney for the Taggarts, said his clients would consider testifying for the government in the Bakker trial.

David Taggart, who was Bakker's personal aide, and James Taggart, his former interior designer, are scheduled to be sentenced Friday — three days before the opening arguments in Bakker's trial. They each face a maximum of 25 years in prison and $1 million in fines.

Bakker's attorneys have renewed their motion, which was earlier denied, that the trial be moved out of Charlotte, the city where Bakker used his gift for fund-raising to turn a failing television station and a storefront studio into a satellite network and the sprawling theme park in nearby Fort Mill, S.C.

Bakker is charged with pocketing some of the $158 million that poured into PTL from 1984 to 1987 under various "lifetime partnership" programs.

In eight of the 11 programs, contributors were promised free lodging at Heritage USA in exchange for a one-time donation of $1,000 or more.

Instead of using all of the money to build hotels and other facilities at Heritage USA, the indictment said, the PTL executives spent more than $4 million on themselves and used some of it for operating expenses.

All the while, PTL was suffering from severe cash-flow problems as Jim and Tammy Bakker received nearly $3.5 million in bonuses from 1984 through 1987 and Dortch got $550,000 in bonuses. At the same time, they withheld informaton about PTL's worsening financial problems from its board of directors, the indictment charged.

Tammy Bakker was not charged.

Bakker resigned in March 1987 after being informed by The Charlotte Observer that the newspaper was ready to publish a story about PTL funds used to cover up a sexual liaison between former New York church secretary Jessica Hahn and Bakker in Florida in 1980.

Professors Rap NCSU Leadership

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Citing a "deterioration of academic and moral integrity" at North Carolina State University, a group of professors at the school has adopted a resolution criticizing the university's leadership in the wake of allegations of wrongdoing in the Wolfpack basketball program.

The N.C. State chapter of the American Association of University Professors also called for officials of the University of North Carolina system and the N.C. State Board of Trustees to "take immediate action to correct these abuses and restore North Carolina State University to its proper position in the community and the nation."

The chapter has between 30 and 40 members. Only 12 were present when the resolution was adopted and all voted for it.

In July, Hugh Fuller, director of N.C. State's academic tutoring program, said he had been trying for seven years to alert his superiors to abuses of the academic process by the athletic depratment.

Paul Tesar, vice president of the AAUP chapter and an associate professor of architecture in the School of Design, said his organization was upset by the university's responses to allegations made by Fuller and in the book "Personal Fouls."

N.C. State administrators could not be reached for comment on the resolution.

Meanwhile, several academic tutors who work for N.C. State's basketball program have written letters in support of head basketball coach Jim Valvano.

Durham television station WTVD said it had obtained three letters that tutors had written. Two letters were sent to the University of North Carolina General Administration and one was sent to Fuller.

Joe B. Brown Jr., who works in the athletics department and whose staff tutors N.C. State basketball players, said in a telephone interview that he had sent a letter supporting Valvano to the UNC General Administration. He declined to disclose the contents of the letter.

Brown said he was aware that members of his staff had written to support the university, but he said the letters were not part of an orchestrated campaign.

"No one told me to write anything," he said. "People operate of their own free will. I wrote to the General Administration supporting the university, the program that I am in charge of and also supporting Jim Valvano, the athletic director."

Cheryl Boswell, Brown's assistant in the basketball tutoring office, and Fran Haga, another staff member, wrote letters to the UNC General Administration. Bebe Henry, also of Brown's staff, wrote to Fuller. None of the three could be reached for comment Friday night.

The University of North Carolina Board of Governors is scheduled to receive an independent report into the allegations contained in "Personal Fouls" and related information on Friday.

Kent Carroll, the editor and publisher at Carroll & Graf, said Thursday that his publishing firm is considering issuing a revised edition of "Personal Fouls" after the university's report is released.

The book has sold out its original printing of 200,000 copies and is now on a second printing of 40,000 more copies.

Worker Killed As Wall Collapses

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — A construction worker was killed Friday when part of the dirt wall of a 12-foot-deep trench collapsed and buried him, Raleigh police said.

Blake Aubrey Bunn, 22, of Clayton, was covered by four feet of red clay dirt for approximately six to eight minutes while co-workers tried frantically to dig him out of the trench.

The accident occurred about 4 p.m. on the lot of a home under construction in a Raleigh subdivision.

Bunn was an employee of the Evans Plumbing Inc., in Raleigh, which was hired as a subcontractor by Stocksill Building Inc.

Authorities said construction workers were laying sewer pipes for a large, two-story home when the accident occurred.

State Housing Finance Chief Expected To Resign Next Month

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The chairman of the N.C. Housing Finance Agency will resign to avoid an appearance of a conflict of interest and enable one of his companies to accept a low-income housing tax credit worth more than $2 million, a newspaper reported.

John Crosland Jr., who has held the position since 1978 will resign Sept. 1, it was reported in a report published Saturday.

Under a new policy set by the committee that awards tax credits, none will be made to a firm if one of its stockholders or part owners is an employee or board members of the Housing Finance Agency or the Housing Partnership.

The state secretary of commerce, the state treasurer and the state budget director awarded the tax credit to The Crosland Group on July 6 on the recommendation of the staff of the Housing Finance Agency.

That three-member committee, called the North Carolina Federal Tax Reform Allocation Committee, made the award on condition that Crosland resign within 60 days.

Commerce Secretary James T. Broyhill, the chairman of the allocation committee, said Thursday that committee members were influenced by the scandal that has engulfed low-income housing programs administered by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

"Even though his board had no jurisdiction over this program, and there was no direct conflict ... we felt that there was an appearance of conflict and so we put that as a condition of his receiving the tax credit award," Broyhill said in a telephone interview.

Crosland, the chairman of the board and chief executive officer of The Crosland Group, said he considered resigning from the Housing Finance Agency earlier this year, before the staff of the Housing Finance Agency recommended that his firm be given a low-income housing tax credit worth $2,172,180.

The Housing Finance Agency is a public agency created by the General Assembly to assist in the production of affordable housing for people with low and moderate incomes. It does that though the issuances of tax exempt bonds, tax credits, management of federal housing programs and management of the state's housing trust fund.

A. Robert Kucab, executive director of the Housing Finance Agency, checked with the agency's attorney and said Crosland did not have to resign because there was no conflict of interest.

"At that time they asked me not to do it," Crosland said.

The Crosland Group's 60-unit project, called Fairmarket Square, still has some obstacles to clear, including approval by the Charlotte City Council.

"My feeling is, regardless of whether the project goes forward or not, the proper thing for me to do is resign, and the letter is in the mail," Crosland said in a telephone interview.

On July 6 the allocation committee also awarded a low income housing tax credit worth $710,600 to JAG Inc., a firm in which another member of the Housing Finance Agency has an interest. That member, William A. Jenkins of Raleigh, resigned from the board July 13.

The staff of the Housing Finance Agency recommended disapproval of another project in which Jenkins had a financial interest and disapproval of a project in which board member George E. Carr Jr. of Greensboro had a interest.

Airliner Diverted

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — An American Airlines jetliner carrying 90 passengers and crew on a flight from Providence, R.I. to Raleigh, N.C., was diverted Saturday to Logan International Airport after developing a problem with the landing gear hydraulic system.

The pilot on Flight 911, a Boeing 727 carrying 83 passengers and a crew of seven, had alerted passengers shortly after takeoff from T.F. Green Airport about the problem.

Pilot George Wells indicated that fluid in the landing gear hydraulic system had drained out when the landing gear was retracted after taking off from Providence.

"The plane was able to land without problem, and the plan apparently is to repair the plane and depart," said Alan Flippen, an Associated Press reporter who was a passenger on the flight, which was later cancelled because spare parts weren't available.

The flight was originally to have continued as Flight 911, but on a different plane, from Raleigh to Nashville, Tenn. "We are attempting to place passengers on other flights," said Mary O'Neill, a spokeswoman for American Airlines..

"He said right from the beginning that there was a problem with the hydraulics, but there should be no problem because there was a secondary system," Flippen said.

There was a systems hydraulic loss due to a valve malfunction, but the crew was able to switch to a backup system, which makes the flaps and the gears work, said Mary O'Neill, spokeswoman for American Airlines.

Helms' Fund-Raising Costs Cut Into His Cash On Hand

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — None of his 31 fellow senators who are up for re-election next year comes close in campaign income devoted to fund-raising, Sen. Jesse Helms' campaign spending reports show.

Of the 32 senators, Helms raised the eighth largest sum — $1,076,006 — in the first half of 1989. But because he spends so much on his mass mailings, he had the second-smallest amount of cash on hand as of June 30 — $158,556, records show.

"It's in the nature of direct mail that you spend a lot of money to raise a little bit more than a lot," said Norman Ornstein, a congressional scholar at the American Enterprise Institute. "You almost constantly plow considerable sums back in. But that mostly happens early in the election cycle."

Only Sen. Nancy Kassebaum had less campaign money on hand, $135,054. But the Kansas Republican decided only recently to seek a third term, and she raised a mere $10,864 in the first half of 1989, compared to Helms' total.

Meanwhile, senators who have matched Helms in fund-raising this year have much more money in their campaign treasuries. For example, Sen. Joseph Biden Jr., D-Del., raised $1,034,778 in the first half of the year, a fraction less than Helms. But he had $1,023,450 in the bank on June 30, six times what Helms had.

Helms' meager cash-on-hand amount, coupled with the $875,810 debt of his Raleigh-based political organization, the National Congressional Club, might suggest that he enters the 1990 campaign in financial trouble. But experts on political fund-raising say the Helms strategy is to invest heavily to develop the best mass-mail list possible, then harvest the income when it's time to buy campaign TV commercials.

Helms' traditional pattern, Ornstein told The News and Observer of Raleigh, is to devote substantially more money to campaign expenditures, rather than fund-raising, when the election gets hot.

Even when his next campaign is far away, Helms has a proven record of raising nearly $1 million a year. In the two-year cycle of 1987-88, for example, his campaign committee raised $1.7 million, nearly all from individual donors.

Federal Election Commission reports indicate that the committee raised $5.4 million in 1985-86. But nearly $4 million of that came in the form of transfers from affiliated groups, including the Congressional Club and special fund-raising projects such as the Jesse Helms Senatorial Club, which is now defunct.

Furthermore, the $5.4 million figure may be inaccurate because the commission's reporting procedures sometimes cause income to be counted twice, if it is shifted from one organization to another, said Carter Wrenn, director of the Congressional Club.

The actual total for transfers to the Helms campaign committee in 1985-86, said Wrenn, was closer to $2 million than $4 million.

He said he was pleased that the Congressional Club's debt has been cut from more than $1 million in 1988 to less than $900,000 today. Most of the money is owed to club-related companies that handle the Helms network's mass mailings.

But about $120,000 is still owed to the club's Washington law firm, Covington & Burling. "I hope we're going to be able to make some substantial payments against that in the next six months," Wrenn said.

The Congressional Club, which technically is separate from the Helms campaign committee but which also relies on direct-mail soliciting, reported raising $645,255 in the first half of this year and spending $651,622. It owed $875,810 on June 30, the end of the Federal Election Commission's latest reporting period.

The Helms campaign committee spent $978,431 in the first half of this year, or 91 percent of the amount it raised. While most went to direct mail, $35 was spent on a Confederate memorial wreath in northern Virginia.

Not all of Helms' campaign money comes from individuals. Sixty-one political action committees contributed $118,250 in the first half of 1989. Giving $5,000 each were political committees affiliated with RJR Nabisco Inc. and the American Bankers Association.

Political committees that gave $2,000 or more included those affiliated with the American Furniture Manufacturers Association, AT&T, the American Textile Manufacturers Institute, Associated General Contractors, Burlington Industries, Dairymen Inc. of North Carolina, Carolina Power & Light Co., the National Cotton Council, Northrop, the National Beer Wholesalers Association and the National Association of Life Underwriters.

Prisoners Released

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — The government began releasing more than 1,000 prisoners Saturday who had been held without charge since 1986 on suspicion of supporting rebel groups.

The minister for internal affairs, Ibrahim Mukiibi, announced the release Friday. He said the 1,086 political detainees would be transported to their home areas.

The prisoners were captured during fighting between government troops and the rebel Uganda People's Democratic Army in 1986.

They are the third group of prisoners to be released since the rebels signed a peace accord with the government in June 1988. In June 1988, 1,671 prisoners were released, and last October 950 more were freed.

The latest release would leave an estimated 1,730 political prisoners still in Uganda's prisons.

IN THE STATE

Recycling

RALEIGH (AP) — The Executive Mansion has begun recycling efforts, Gov. Jim Martin announced Friday.

"As a personal example we have just made a commitment that after any events at the Executive Mansion, used cans and bottles will be set aside for recycling, just as we already do for newspapers," Martin said in a news release. "By setting such an example, we can share the message and encourage other people to do the same thing."

Martin also called upon North Carolinians involved in the state transportation department's Adopt-A-Highway Program to sort through the trash collected along the state's highways and separate out aluminum and glass for recycling.

Celebration

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — The Eastern North Carolina School for the Deaf turns 25 years old this year and will celebrate with special events throughout the school year.

"The ceremony on (Aug.) 23 is the kick-off for a year-long celebration," said school spokesman Webber Paxton.

The theme for the anniversary will be "Celebrating a Distinguished History and a Promising Future."

The year-long celebration will conclude next May with an all day affair including entertainment, food and recognitions of the people who have contributed to the school's history.

Roof Collapses

DURHAM (AP) — A roof collapsed on a building under construction in Durham Saturday, toppling as many as 15 workers but seriously injuring only one, authorities said.

Five people were taken to the hospital after the 4 p.m. accident, which occurred as workers were trying to put the roof on the new warehouse.

Inmates Captured After Fleeing Prison In Hijacked Helicopter

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOLDREGE, Neb. — Two Colorado prison inmates and their wives, captured in a shootout after the women hijacked a helicopter for a daring breakout, will likely face charges in two states and federal courts, officials said Saturday.

Investigators into Friday's escape from the the medium-security Arkansas Valley Correctional Facility near Ordway, Colo., said one of the women involved met her husband while working as a prison volunteer and married him by proxy.

The escapees, Freddie Gonzales, 21, and Ralph Brown, 30, and their wives, Patricia Gonzales, 41, and Rebecca Brown, 26, surrendered Friday evening after a nine-minute gun battle in this small south-central Nebraska town 400 miles from the prison.

"This will be the talk of the town for a few days, but then things'll get back to normal," said Ford Hubbard, night manager of the Dale Hotel.

"I couldn't believe it," said Hubbard, who watched the gunfight and capture from the roof of his six-story hotel. "It was like watching a TV movie. I know that other people were watching from their windows, too. We haven't had anything like this in town for years."

Colorado Department of Corrections chief Walter Kautzky said the foursome likely will face federal charges of air piracy, Nebraska charges, and then extradition proceedings for likely charges in Colorado.

Three of the four were being held in separate jails Saturday. Brown underwent surgery for a bullet wound to the finger and was being held at Good Samaritan Hospital in Kearney.

Authorities in Colorado say the women comandeered the helicopter after hiring it from Helicopter Airways Inc. of Denver. The FBI says the helicopter pilot, Tim Graves, is not a suspect in the escape.

After the escape, the four abandoned the 1969 Bell 206-A helicopter and transferred to the rented van. Graves was found near the helicopter, bound and gagged.

"They pulled out the guns after we were in the air for 10 minutes, and they said, 'You're going to land in that prison,'" Graves said later.

Graves said his biggest fear was that he would be shot by prison guards; prison officials said Friday that the guards held their fire during the escape in part because of fear for the pilot's safety.

Kautzky said Ms. Gonzales worked as a volunteer at the Arkansas Valley prison in Ordway and at the Fremont Correctional Facility in Canon City, where she met her husband, Freddie, before he was moved to Ordway. She was also working on a degree from Regis College in Denver, he said.

"Under Colorado law, you can get married by proxy and that's apparently what they did," he said.

He did not know when there were married, or what her duties as a volunteer were. But Gonzales' father, Fred, said his son married Patricia three months ago.

The elder Gonzales, of Fort Morgan, said Ms. Gonzales visited his son every Friday and Saturday at the Arkansas Valley prison.

"I hope they did catch him because I don't want him to get in any trouble. God, he's the only son I've got," the father said as he watched news of his son's capture on television Friday night.

Holdrege police officers and Phelps County sheriff's deputies fired on the van during the chase that covered roughly an eight-square block area of this town of 5,600.

The four were set to be arraigned Monday, although Phelps County Attorney Glenn Clark said Saturday he is still pondering charges. They federal and Colorado charges, he said, would come "only after were through with them" in Nebraska.

He added that he was strongly considering filing attempted murder charges for the shooting at police Sgt. Tom Rust, who had bullets lodged in the air cleaner and the dashboard of his car.

"That one in the dashboard was only inches from going all the way through, and it would have gone all the way through Rust," Clark said.

Rust used his police car to ram the van twice. That action is credited with slowing the vehicle moments before Police Chief Ken Jackson, positioned near his pickup truck, placed four shots through the windshield of the suspects' van.

"I think they were surprised to see me there," said Jackson, a veteran of the Lancaster County Sheriff's Department in Lincoln.

Jackson's nine-member force recently received approval for the purchase of two semi-automatic weapons. "We definitely could have ended this a lot sooner with one of those," Jackson said.

"But people criticized my background in Lincoln, a city of 200,000, and said we'd never need them in Holdrege," Jackson said. "You know the old saying ... never say never," he added with a grin.

Gonzales was serving a four-year sentence for robbery and would have been eligible for parole in September 1991. Brown was sentenced for sexual assault, theft and criminal impersonation in a bad check charge; his parole eligibility date was October 1996.

Candidate Takes Time To Help

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FORT WORTH, Texas — Republican congressional candidate Bob Lanier was late to a campaign luncheon because he stopped to help an accident victim.

But Lanier, a physician, was unable to revive the 28-year-old man whose motorcycle was dragged by an 18-wheel truck for more than 200 feet. Six others were injured in the crash that killed the motorcyclist Friday.

Lanier worked over the man until paramedics arrived. Then he left to attend a luncheon with General Dynamics workers.

"I don't want to politicize this thing," Lanier said. "I just did what anyone would do in the wake of this terrible, terrible tragedy."

Pentagon Making Effort To Cut Down On Papers

By Barton Reppert
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon is quietly moving ahead with a plan to wean bureaucrats, battleships and bombers from unwieldy stacks of printed paperwork and convert them to compact, cost-effective computer disks.

The effort comes in response to a weighty problem: a modern Navy warship carries 15 to 25 tons of operating, maintenance and repair manuals; the B-1B bomber has generated 1 million pages of how-to documentation.

The Pentagon says the campaign could reduce the lifetime cost of major weapons by up to 20 percent by converting masses of printed technical information into computerized databases.

The cost for technical data delivered with military hardware ranges from 10 percent to 30 percent of the total weapon system price tag. Add to that the millions of dollars that must be spent, year after year, to keep the manuals up to date.

To spearhead the conversion of printed data to electronic form, the Defense Department in September 1985 launched a program called Computer-Aided Acquisition and Logistics Support, or CALS.

Bruce Lepisto, deputy director of the Pentagon's CALS Policy Office, said each of the military services has selected particular weapons to lead the way in carrying out the computerization effort.

For the Air Force, he said, these lead systems are the Advanced Tactical Fighter and the B-2 Stealth bomber; for the Navy, the A-12 attack aircraft and SSN-21 Seawolf class attack submarine; and for the Army, the LHX helicopter and M1-A2 tank.

Lepisto acknowledged that there had been some problem weaning military personnel as well as defense contractors from reliance on traditional paper documents.

"We're talking about a major cultural change here," he said. "Some people are overly anxious and want to rush in. And some people feel that better is the enemy of good enough. What we're implementing is a new way of doing business. And certainly there are going to be people that want to go either faster or slower."

Paul N. Pechersky, co-chairman of the CALS Industry Steering Group, representing hundreds of defense contractors, said, "We're still in the very early stages. This is a massive undertaking. From my own personal perspective, I think we're doing very well."

"The first several years have been devoted to trying to get our act together — to decide what we want to do and how we want to do it. And more importantly, to try and get agreement on some of the early digital (information) exchange standards that have to be put in place," he said.

Pechersky, corporate director of management information systems for E-Systems Inc. in Dallas, said the program is "evolutionary, not revolutionary. We'll see various implementations of CALS well into the year 2000."

The CALS program involves development of standardized text and image formats so that electronic data can be readily exchanged between a wide variety of different computer systems within the military and at defense contractors.

The Seybold Report on Publishing Systems, a publishing industry newsletter based in Media, Pa., has forecast that CALS eventually will have a major impact spreading far beyond the defense industry.

Court Stays Andrews Execution

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SALT LAKE CITY — A federal appeals court Saturday stayed the execution of William Andrews just three days before he was to die by lethal injection for three 1974 torture-killings dubbed the "hi-fi murders."

A three-judge panel of the 10th U.S. Circuit Court issued the stay for Andrews, the nation's longest-standing death inmate, after failed appeals in federal and state courts and the state Board of Pardons' rejection of his plea for clemency on Friday.

Defense attorney Robert Anderson said Andrews had been informed shortly after the order was issued at about 10 a.m. MDT.

"He was very grateful and was very relieved. He still considers this matter very solemnly," Anderson said.

The three-judge panel, which had convened here for a hearing later Saturday, issued the stay based on Andrews' latest writ of habeas corpus despite a federal magistrate's Thursday recommendation that procedural rules barred the U.S. District Court from hearing it.

The document did not include a reason for the stay, but said a more detailed order would follow later. The order was signed by Judge Monroe McKay on behalf of fellow judges Stephen Anderson and Bobby Baldock.

Special state prosecutor Robert Wallace, who had gone to the federal courthouse to get the order, declined to discuss it except to say, "I have some thoughts, but I really don't want to make a comment at this time."

Andrews, 34, of Jonesboro, La., has been on death row for nearly 15 years for the slayings of two women and a man during a robbery of the Hi-Fi Shop in Ogden. Five people were forced to drink liquid drain cleaner and were then shot; two of them survived.

Dean, left, listens to questions put to her by a protester

Former HUD Aide Fields Questions From The Crowd

By Chris Spolar
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Deborah Gore Dean heard the angry chants float up from the sidewalk in front of her Georgetown home just about 10:30 a.m. Friday.

"What is this in regard to?" she called down to the crowd of about 20 protesters.

"We want to talk to you about HUD," someone yelled back.

"Thanks, but no thanks," said Ms. Dean, the former top official at the Department of Housing and Urban Development who is now one of the focal characters in an investigation of alleged influence-peddling. "I've had enough."

"So have we," the crowd rebutted.

"Unbelievable," said Ms. Dean as she walked down a flight of stairs with her dog, Buddy, to find her front door open and the protesters on her doorstep.

Within minutes, Ms. Dean began doing what Congress has wanted for months. She talked about the HUD scandals.

"If I've done something wrong, I'm completely willing to try to make it right ... I don't have a single personal friend who ever got something from HUD," said Ms. Dean, the former executive assistant to Sam Pierce, HUD secretary under the Reagan administration.

She, Pierce and other housing officials have been questioned by Congress on suspicion of steering millions of dollars' worth of federal housing contracts to developers and consultants who had strong Republican connections. So far, Ms. Dean has refused to testify.

But Friday, Ms. Dean, barefoot and obviously hurriedly dressed in jeans and a blue blouse that was turned inside out, tried to politely answer questions shouted up to her from the crowd. The protest was organized by the Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now (ACORN), a housing advocacy group, which alerted The Washington Post to its demonstration.

But as rain fell, Ms. Dean tried to appease.

"There are some good people at HUD," she said. "I liked Sam Pierce. He was a good person ... but I think there might have been people there who have done things they are trying to hide."

At one point, Ms. Dean opened her home to the group, but refused to invite in the lone reporter who was there. The crowd wouldn't settle for that. Instead, they pulled up umbrellas and kept questioning: "Are you hiding something?" "Are you a God-fearing person?"

"I'm a very, very God-fearing person," Ms. Dean said. "I know you want to make a point and I don't want to take that away from you, but if you want to keep shouting back and forth ...

"I tried to help out at HUD. I worked there six years, very long hours, trying to help ... ."

Morning strollers gawked at the scene. Some neighbors peered out behind curtains. One less timid hoisted a video camera and began recording the parade of people and placards that, in one instance, admonished "Debbie Dean, Come Clean."

Ms. Dean repeatedly denied any wrongdoing. Someone wanted to know what happened to money that should have been used to improve low-income housing. That money, known as moderate rehabilitation funds, came under scrutiny by the HUD inspector general who pointed out in April that something had gone wrong.

What did Ms. Dean know about where that money went? It "all went to low and moderate housing except for a couple cases," she said.

One preacher in the crowd, Elder Willie Jackson, took Ms. Dean to task for her ways. "If you're a God-fearing person, all you have to do is get down on your knees and He'll show you what to do," Jackson said.

"I know. I've been doing that," Ms. Dean said quickly.

Johnny Cash Puts Tiny Town On Map

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

REGAL, Minn. — A farm town that consists of two bars, a grain elevator, a church, baseball field and 70 people can now boast it's the smallest place Johnny Cash ever played.

Cash took the stage in the alfalfa field behind the County Line Bar on Friday night before nearly 5,000 people, all but six dozen from out of town.

"Twenty years ago, they had Woodstock. Welcome to Cornstalk," the singer kwown for such hits as "I Walk the Line" and "A Boy Named Sue" told the fans, many sitting in lawn chairs and sporting caps emblazoned with feed company logos.

Mike Kampsen, 33, organized the concert in part to please his father, Herman, a longtime Cash fan who sings with a local band called Country Cruisin'.

The elder Kampsen, a 65-year-old farmer, got to sing a couple of songs with the Man in Black.

"I've liked him since, it seems like when I was a kid," Herman Kampsen said. "I guess I like him because he was a poor man at one time. He sings songs about poor people. Like us."

Cash's wife, June Carter Cash, opened the show at 8 p.m., and Cash took the stage an hour later. Daughter Cindy Cash and Carter sisters Helen and Anita also performed.

Cash, a severe cold draining his voice, struggled through versions of "Folsom Prison Blues," "Ring of Fire," "Orange Blossom Special" and other old favorites, plus a series of gospel songs during his 75-minute performance.

"I've been getting fan mail from Europe from people asking 'Where's Regal? We can't find it on the map,'" Cash said. And he said he

Forbes Flies Celebrities To Morocco For Top Of The Line Birthday Party

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TANGIER, Morocco — Magazine publisher Malcolm Forbes celebrated his 70th birthday Saturday by throwing Tangier's party-of-the-century with nearly 1,000 guests, most flown in from the United States for the weekend.

Uniformed armed guards and plainclothes men were on duty early at the 15-acre garden of Forbes' Mendoub Chateau.

The chateau, purchased in 1971 from a former royal governor of Tangier, is on a cliff overlooking the Mediterranean and the Straits of Gibraltar. The midsummer haze on Saturday veiled the view of the European mainland.

Most of the guests, whose names constitute a list of the wealthy and famous in America, were flown here in three jet planes, including a supersonic Concorde, from New York on Friday.

The beaming birthday child took more than 100 American and European reporters and photographers around the garden Saturday for a last-minute view of the arrangements, including five elaborately furnished tents set up for tasty Moroccan specialties, belly-dancing and fireworks, and dancing until dawn.

While walking through the grounds, reporters asked Forbes how he defended giving a huge party, estimated to cost more than $3 million, amid the poverty of Morocco.

"You don't defend it," Forbes replied. "We probably all do things in our lives that are not essential. I don't feel guilty about it. I feel grateful we can do it."

His four sons and his daughter, Moira, posed for photographers with their father. Theoretically, the children were the hosts of the evening, but Forbes said, "You can't really describe it as a surprise party. My children are giving me the party, and I'm paying for it."

He said he had no clear idea how much it would all cost because "the bills are not all in." But he said the most costly item was the three jets to fly most of the guests to Morocco.

"The catering costs considerably less than it would in the West," he said. Catering manager Abdelkrim Timsamani said the total catering bill would come to less than $750,000.

A total of 100 sheep, 600 chickens and 1,500 eggs went into the dishes prepared for the guests.

"Everything will be Moroccan," Forbes said. "Only the whisky and gin will come from elsewhere."

With four exceptions, the guests had to draw lots to determine who sat in which tent. Forbes assigned himself the largest tent with the three exceptions who did not have to take part in the draw. They were the two sons of King Hassan II — representing their father who did not come — and Forbes's special friend, actress Elizabeth Taylor.

Miss Taylor appeared briefly with Forbes at the end of the press viewing. She has been a frequent companion since his 39-year marriage ended in divorce in 1985.

Her hair freshly done in a windswept coiffure, she smiled and waved at photographers and, in response to their request, kissed Forbes three times.

Reporters asked Forbes whether he planned to announce plans to marry Miss Taylor. "You'll have to ask her," he said. "She has had more practice than I have."

The guest list included such world figures as former President Jimmy Carter, former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, real estate magnate Donald Trump, publishers Rupert Murdoch, Robert Maxwell and Katherine Graham, television personalities Walter Cronkite and Barbara Walters, former kings Constantine of Greece and Simeon of Bulgaria, and a collection of captains of industry.

Guitarist Julio Iglesias and opera singer Beverly Sills were also on the list.

"They are all my friends," Forbes said, "and some of them proved it by the amount of money they put in my magazine."

Miss Taylor and Forbes spent much of Friday buying jewelry and colorful Moroccan kaftans. Forbes said his greatest birthday wish was "to live to be around to have many more of the things she gave me."

"The greatest of those is her passion for men," he added.

West Welcomes Polish Change

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — Historic change and daunting challenges in Poland were bannered in the Western press Saturday but given decidedly less coverage in the East bloc. A grinning Pope John Paul II called the developments "a step forward."

"All that has been done is very important," the pontiff, visiting Spain, said of the nomination of his friend, Solidarity activist Tadeusz Mazowiecki, as prime minister. "It's not easy."

Britain's Foreign Office also welcomed the nomination. "We trust that this development will help Poland's progress towards democracy and result in a government which reflects the wishes and hopes of the Polish people," a statement said.

Coverage in East Germany, Czechoslovakia and Bulgaria was restrained. In Romania, where the government has been hostile to liberalization in Poland, the events were not reported at all.

Many Soviet newspapers carried a report from the official Tass news agency quoting Polish Communist leaders as complaining about the "confrontational actions of the leaders of the opposition."

One of the few commentaries to appear in Soviet papers was in Moskovskaya Pravda, where East European specialist Mikhail Tretyakov stressed the dangers of letting Poland's government crisis drag on.

"The prolonging of the process of forming the government does not further social consolidation, the establishment of order and the removal of the country from its state of crisis," Tretyakov wrote.

Yugoslavia's Tanjug news agency took a more positive vein: "Government crisis enters calmer waters," it said. Reports in the Hungarian news media also were supportive.

China's official Xinhua News Agency carried factual reports but no commentary on the developments in Poland.

Poland was the lead story in most French papers Saturday, with the pointed exception of the Communist Party's L'Humanite, which put its report on page 10.

An editorial in the leftist Liberation newspaper said "the choice of a prime minister from Solidarity's ranks is beyond any possible contest one of the most important events since Yalta. But the road leading Poland to democracy remains long."

Le Figaro, in a front-page editorial, said a Solidarity-led government "will have only a short honeymoon."

Some Italian newspapers played up the role of the Catholic church. "Close Follower of the Pope Will be Premier in Warsaw," said the headline in the Communist Party daily L'Unita.

In a front-page commentary in Corriere Della Sera of Milan, Arrigo Levi said the "rules of behavior" under Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev were now more evident.

"But much remains unknown: do these rules really apply for all the countries of Eastern Europe. Not only for Hungary, but also for Czechoslovakia ... And for East Germany? In reality, we don't know," Levi said.

Britain's conservative Daily Telegraph said gradual change was "the only way peacefully to overcome the huge economic and political problems Poland faces."

The Scotsman newspaper of Edinburgh said: "Democratic the government might be ... but the Communist Party still provides the bureaucracy that oils the state as well as the local government machines.

In Egypt, the government-owned Al-Gomhouriya reported a "historic political coup in Poland," and the conservative, English-language Saudi Gazette hailed "a milestone of enormous significance."

majority in the body.

The new government will be the first in the Soviet bloc not led by Communists since Soviet dictator Josef Stalin consolidated communist control in the late 1940s.

"I am terrified," Mazowiecki said in an interview on Polish state television. But "I think ... we can do a lot, that we can release the forces in ourselves. I think that it will not be easy, but it is possible."

A jubilant Lech Walesa said: "It is an incredible success for our struggle. But now let us see it in practice. ... This is just the beginning."

Speaking in a telephone interview from his Gdansk home, Walesa, who has led Solidarity since it was founded in 1980, said he now feels free to leave the world of politics to others and to devote himself entirely to union affairs.

Once approved, Mazowiecki will have several weeks to form his Cabinet, which will include Solidarity, Communists and non-Comunists.

Mindful of the Soviet Union's strategic concerns, Solidarity has said it will let the Communist Party retain control of the ministries of defense and interior, which oversee the army and police. In addition, local governments and the court system will remain controlled by party members.

Solidarity also has promised that the change will not endanger Poland's participation in the Warsaw Pact military alliance.

The Soviet Union, while expressing concern last week, has said it considers the formation of a government an internal Polish affair.

Mazowiecki's nomination marks a once-inconceivable victory for the the East bloc's first free trade union, which was banned by Jaruzelski after the 1981 martial-law crackdown. Mazowiecki himself was imprisoned for one year.

Solidarity, whose success in June parliament elections pressured the government into the unprecedented action, immediately promised Mazowiecki its "full support."

"This should produce a major breakthrough in Polish public life by doing away with the present policy of 'nomenklatura,'" the system in which only party members are appointed to most senior jobs in government and the economy, the movement said in a statement.

However, some union leaders expressed apprehension about Solidarity assuming responsibility for governing so quickly after its April 17 legalization.

"I thought it would be healthier for us to have these things happening a little bit later, because in the meantime we would gain a certain experience," said union spokesman Janusz Onyszkiewicz. "I think it is very risky."

Saturday's government announcement came as the Communist Party met in Warsaw and Walesa met union members in Gdansk. Mazowiecki was said by associates to be resting outside of Warsaw.

Mazowiecki's appointment is a stunning triumph for Walesa, the Solidarity founder who put together the plan for a Solidarity-led coalition government with the help of minor parties once affiliated with the Communists.

The government statement called Mazowiecki a "longtime Catholic activist and former Sejm deputy" as well as "one of the leading activists" of Solidarity and editor of its weekly newspaper, Tygodnik Solidarnosc.

"In the present situation, the president sees a need to create a government enjoyin the necessary support of parliamentary floor groups and to build it on foundations of 'broad agreement between Poland's political and social forces," the statement said.

An earlier PAP communique announced Jaruzelski's acceptance of Communist Prime Minister Czeslaw Kiszczak's resignation. Kiszczak, approved as prime minister by the Sejm on Aug. 2, wanted to put together a "grand coalition" led by the communists but with participation of Solidarity.

East Germans Flee By Hundreds Through Gate Opened For Picnic

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

VIENNA, Austria — Hundreds of East Germans escaped into Austria from Hungary on Saturday by storming a border gate that had been opened for a picnic celebrating European unity, officials said.

The East Germans pushed through the gate as it was being opened and as Hungarian border guards were preparing to stamp the papers of participants in the event, the Austrian Press Agency.

Police said only that hundreds of East Germans who were not supposed to participate in the event pushed through the gate that is normally closed.

The Press Agency said up to 300 East Germans pushed through initially, and a total of 500 crossed into Austria during the day while the gate remained open.

In Budapest, the Hungarian Interior Ministry said the border guards could only have stopped the East Germans from crossing by using weapons, said the state news agency MTI. However, "they decided not to use weapons or force," MTI said in a brief dispatch.

The event called for participants to cross the border into Austria, return with Austrian guests, and then picnic in a formerly restricted Hungarian zone. The restrictions were lifted Aug. 1.

The event was sponsored by Hungary's foremost Communist reformer, Imre Pozsgay, and Otto von Hapsburg, a West German member of the European Parliament and one-time heir to the former Austro-Hungarian monarchy. He is a leader of the Austrian branch of the Pan-Europa movement, a private group promoting European unity.

Hungary, one of the most liberal countries in the East bloc, in May began dismantling the barbed wire fencing and electrical warning devices on its border with Austria.

At least 1,600 East Germans are estimated to have crossed illegally into Austria from Hungary since then. Once in Austria, they seek documents from the West German Embassy in Vienna for travel to West Germany.

According to West German law, all East Germans have a right to West German passports.

Some refugees say they are seeking political freedom, and others are fleeing poor economic conditions in their Communist homeland.

West German diplomats have been issuing West German passports to East Germans in Budapest, Hungary, and witnesses said many of the East Germans who fled Saturday already held West German passports.

About 300 East Germans have sought refuge at West German diplomatic missions in East Berlin; Budapest; and Prague, Czechoslovakia.

West Germany closed its embassy and consulate in Budapest on Monday, citing the inability of its diplomats to deal with the stream of East Germans wanting to flee to the West and seeking asylum on West German diplomatic property.

The West German mission in East Berlin was closed two weeks ago after 131 East Germans seeking guarantees that they can go to West Germany sought refuge there.

Another 500 East Germans are living in a tent city set up in Budapest, and opposition figures estimate that several hundred more have overstayed their visas and gone underground.

Bomb Kills 5 In Spain

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ALICANTE, Spain — A car bomb set by Basque separatists exploded in a supermarket parking lot near this southeastern port Saturday, killing five people and injuring at least 30, a paramilitary Civil Guard spokesman said.

Those killed by the explosion included a 5-year-old child, said the spokesman on condition of anonymity.

Spokesmen for the Basque group ETA, which seeks self-determination for three provinces in northern Spain, called two Alicante newspapers to claim responsibility for the blast.

The explosion sent shrapnel flying. At least 30 people were injured, the Civil Guard spokesman said. It was not known if any foreigners were among the casualties.

The store is located in San Juan, a suburb of Alicante. Alicante is a major Mediterranean summer holiday spot for foreigners.

Afghan Independence Day Blasted By Rocket Attack

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KABUL, Afghanistan — Fourteen rockets hit Kabul today, injuring 18 people on the 70th anniversary of the nation's independence from Britain.

Foreign Minister Mohammad Nabi Amani, who gave the casualty figure, said the 14 rockets struck mainly residential areas across the city.

Saturday is normally the first day of the working week in Moslem Afghanistan, with bazaars bustling and thousands of people on the streets of Kabul.

But because of the independence holiday and rumors that U.S.-backed guerrillas fighting to overthrow the Soviet-supported government were planning massive rocket attacks on the city, streets were almost empty.

The government did not mark the anniversary with a ceremony, despite reports that President Najib would appear at an official function.

Kabul has been hit almost daily by rocket attacks since late June and the guerrillas have claimed responsibility for some attacks.

No one claimed responsibility for Saturday's attack.

The rebels say they aim for military targets, but unofficial estimates say 98 percent of the rockets have hit non-military targets including schools, homes, crowded bus stops and bazaars.

One rocket today went through the roof of the home of a family in Karte Parwann, just blocks from the British High Commission, which was closed before the Feb. 15 withdrawal of Soviet troops from Afghanistan.

It went through two floors, landing in the living room and showering shrapnel on a woman who suffered injuries to the back and right arm.

Young boys and girls wailed hysterically and the brother of the injured woman said the United States was responsible for the deaths of innocent Afghans.

"They're killing us. Why are they killing us?" he asked, refusing to give his name.

U.N. sources say 335 people were killed and more than 900 injured in rocket attacks and a car bombing between June 25 and Aug. 12. Virtually all were civilians.

The Afghan government on Thursday accused the United States of supplying the rebels with new, more deadly rockets that explode in the air and shower small warheads over a wide area.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Mohammad Nabi Amani said the rockets, which he did not identify, had U.S. markings.

A promised trip Friday to see pieces of the new missiles was canceled. Deputy spokesman Naquib Sameer said the Kabul garrison commander had destroyed the pieces because they were too dangerous.

Police Break Up Protest At Beach

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAPE TOWN, South Africa — Police used whips and dogs to disperse hundreds of blacks, including Archbishop Desmond Tutu, during mass protests Saturday at two whites-only beaches.

Tutu was carried shoulder-high onto the first beach targeted by the demonstrators and later appealed to protesters at the other beach to leave when he saw them being beaten with whips by police.

"We have proved these are God's beaches," he said.

The Black Sash civil rights group said several protesters sustained open wounds from the whips. The group said its monitors at the second beach "watched with horror" as officers charged families eating picnic lunches and used a helicopter to blow sand on them.

About 15 journalists covering the first protest, at The Strand beach east of Cape Town, were detained for two hours.

Nearer to the city, a black constable was killed by a group of youths, police said.

According to reports that local newspapers received from a human rights lawyer, four black civilians also were injured and about 35 people arrested in clashes that broke out when protesters were stopped from boarding buses to the beach. Those reports could not be confirmed.

Learning that The Strand had been sealed off with roadblocks, several hundred blacks went to Bloubergstrand, a segregated beach just north of Cape Town.

Tutu, who had strolled along The Strand beach before he and fellow demonstrators were dispersed, arrived at Bloubergstrand to see police whipping protesters.

Tutu climbed onto the back of a pick-up truck and successfully persuaded the protesters to withdrew.

John Allen, Tutu's press aide, said some white onlookers yelled insults at the archbishop.

Police also arrested at least 25 anti-apartheid demonstrators in Durban and Johannesburg, and banned a major rally that had been called for Sunday in Johannesburg to declare that outlawed opposition groups were back in operation.

Police Commissioner Hennie de Witt warned organizers of the escalating nationwide campaign of defiance that "lawlessness and anarchy will not be tolerated."

Leaders of the campaign announced several days ago that blacks would have a picnic Saturday on the segregated white beach at The Strand.

Late Friday, police and soldiers cordoned off a three-mile stretch of whites-only beachfront and erected signs saying the beach was closed because of a police dog-training exercise. Roadblocks were erected, and some blacks arriving in buses to join the protest were turned back.

But Tutu and about 300 other protesters reached the beach area, and the archbishop was carried onto the sand on the shoulders of some of the crowd before they were dispersed by police equipped with whips and guard dogs.

Some of the group then went to a neighboring town, Gordon's Bay, where Tutu, leader of South Africa's Anglican Church, held an impromptu news conference.

"It is incredible that the government is prepared to use arms on people who wish to have a picnic," he said. "Instead of getting rid of beach apartheid, they protect it with policemen, dogs and guns."

The detained journalists, many of them representing U.S. and British news organizations, were allowed to go free after film and videotapes were confiscated. Police said the journalists had failed to obey an order to leave the area.

Thousands Mass To Protest Arrests

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — Tens of thousands of people demonstrated in Azerbaijan on Saturday to demand that Communist authorities free jailed members of an independent group and accept its political demands.

Nazim Ragimov, a journalist and interpreter, said 600,000 protesters jammed Lenin Square in Baku, the capital of Azerbaijan province. Aidin Amirbekov, a member of the group, the Azerbijani People's Front, said 200,000 attended.

There were no immediate reports on the rally in state-run media.

Ragimov, speaking by telephone from Baku, a city of 1.7 million on the Caspian Sea, said People's Front officials reported to the crowd on talks they held with Azerbaijan's Communist Party chief, Abdul-Rakhman Vezirov.

Ragimov quoted the group's leaders as saying Vezirov only accepted one of the People's Front demands during talks that ended Friday.

The journalist said the party chief agreed to back efforts to disband a special committee created by Moscow in February to administer Nagorno-Karabakh, a mostly Armenian region of Azerbaijan.

The dispute over Nagorno-Karabakh has inflamed relations between Armenia and Azerbaijan, which has controlled the district since 1923.

The People's Front claims that far from being neutral, Moscow-based authorities are pro-Armenian and that the committee they created has led to a loss of Azerbaijani sovereignty.

People's Front leaders said Vezirov rejected their other demands.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Shrewd Choice

More Arrows In Hunt's Quiver

Jim Hunt is an astute politician that would have sent sizzling, well-placed arrows in Jesse Helms' direction had he decided to seek Helms' seat in the 1990 U.S. Senate election. Any political observer knows the former governor's quiver is stocked with brilliance, ambition and clout.

But by passing on what would have been a spectacular rematch against a bitter rival, Hunt has shown he packs wisdom in his arsenal as well.

There was a mountain of speculation about whether Hunt, a moderate Democrat, would challenge Helms, a right-wing Republican, in 1990. A blood match between the two in 1984 left Hunt defeated and put Helms back in office as a wounded man. North Carolinians were treated to the dirtiest, most expensive run for office ever - $26 million and 20 months of mudslinging.

Hunt announced this week he would not challenge Helms for his seat. Citing personal reasons, he bowed out of the race. He did the right thing for his party, and if Helms is defeated, for his state and his nation.

It doesn't take a flaming liberal to see that North Carolina's senior senator was damaged goods after the 1984 election. He hasn't been productive and he's wavered on issues. The only thing he's done well is play the role of Jesse Helms, demagogue, pandering to emotional issues.

No one will ever know whether Hunt could have beat Helms. Polls can project; conventional wisdom amounts to pitching pennies. There's a possibility he could not have and that another candidate could. That's why Hunt was wise to pass on the contest. The name of the game in 1990 is "get Helms out of office."

Helms, backed by the powerful and wealthy Congressional Club, is famous for his dirty pool on the campaign trail. His strategy is to take an opponents' record and distort it as much as possible. His attacks are lightning quick and hard for an opponent to respond to without appearing both guilty and reactionary.

And while Hunt indisputably has the talent and savvy to take Helms' on, during his eight years as governor of North Carolina he amassed a considerable public record for Helms to misrepresent. By no means are the positions that record represents a liability. They chronicle a solid career. But someone with less time in the public eye would give Helms less ammunition. And someone who might view the campaign as less of a grudge match might have a more successful perspective.

By passing on a second bid for Helms' seat, Hunt has in no way ended his political career. He remains a viable candidate for higher office. Two defeats, however, would have sealed the lid on his aspirations.

It is unfortunate that a talented politician like Jim Hunt is reluctant to seek an important high office because negative campaigning has made a bid too expensive and unpleasant. But given the smutty race with Helms that would have unfolded, Hunt made the right choice.

That decision indicates he has yet another arrow in his quiver that Helms, his former foe, lacks — shrewd judgment.

A Non-Eclipse

Nature Giveth & Taketh Away

Lunar eclipses are not rare, but they are a phenomenon of nature which fascinates us all.

There was a total eclipse of the moon over Pitt County Wednesday night. The earth, moon and sun lined up precisely so that the sun's rays were blocked from the moon and a total eclipse was the result over eastern North Carolina.

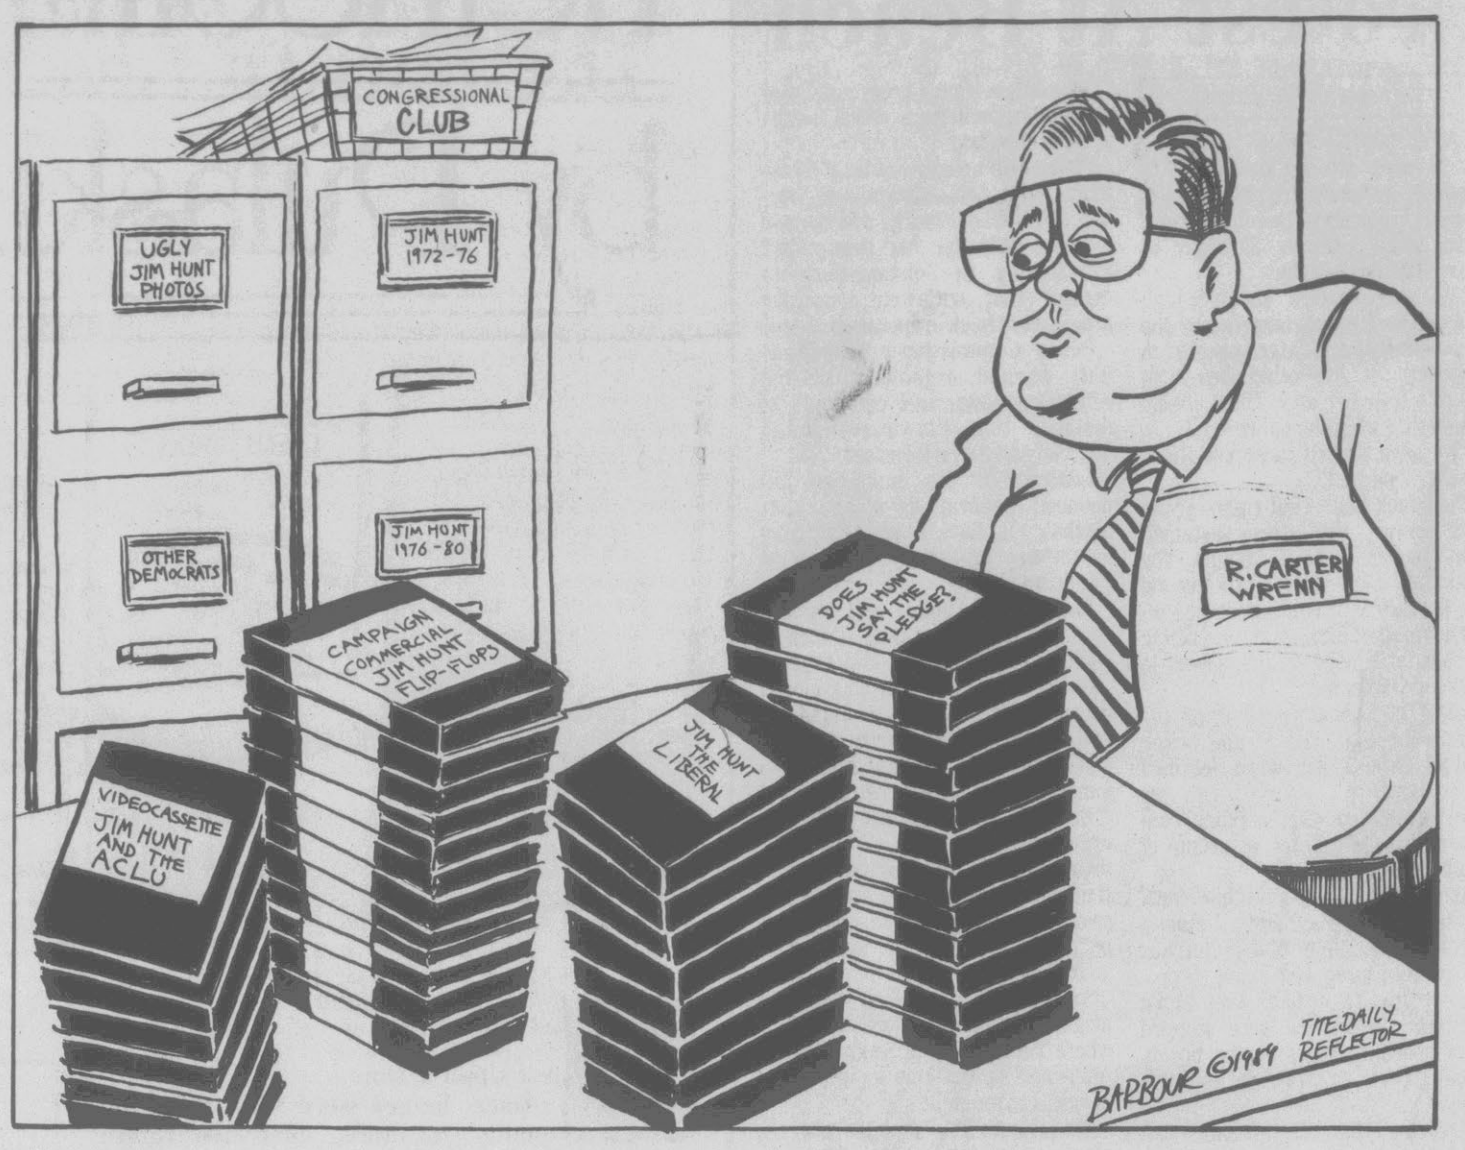
Unfortunately for most of Pitt County the moon eclipse was a washout. A band of thunderstorms moved over the area during the evening. Clouds hung heavy until after midnight and the spectacular heavenly show came and went without ever being seen in the Greenville area.

Amateur astronomers who had set up their telescopes and cameras were to be disappointed. Parents, who had granted their young ones permission to stay up late for the event, were forced to tell them it was not to be. Earthly clouds were blocking the celestial view.

It was not that way everywhere in eastern North Carolina. The thunderstorms followed a definite track and further east the skies were clear enough to afford a good view of the eclipse.

For this area, however, it was only a cloudy night.

Nature gave us the lunar show but nature also took it away, hidden by the clouds.



Pitching Against The Odds

Haynes Johnson

WASHINGTON — Pete Rose is lucky. Just when his bullying, loutish behavior was becoming too much even for Cincinnati Reds fans and when more damning evidence of his gambling compulsion continues to surface, along come two remarkable sports stories to drive Rose's problems out of mind.

The first involves Dave Dravecky of the San Francisco Giants.

Few events in years have had such impact on people across the country as Dravecky's personal battle to triumph over adversity through courage and determination. Thanks to television, virtually all of America was a participant in his gallant attempt to come back from a cancer operation last year in which a tumor was removed from his pitching arm. He would never pitch again, he was told.

Dravecky refused to accept that verdict. He went through months of excruciating rehabilitation on his arm. His perseverance paid off. He began to pitch again, first in the minor leagues, and finally returned to San Francisco's Candlestick Park last Thursday in a moment shared by millions. The "miracle" of his comeback, as it was called, had a classic happy ending. The lefthander pitched magnificently, taking a one-hit shutout into the eighth inning and winning amid resounding cheers.

Tuesday night, he pitched again in Montreal, but there was no happy ending. In a moment that horrified the nation, Dravecky threw a wild pitch as his arm broke with a heartrending sound heard throughout the ballpark and picked up on television elsewhere.

The sight of Dravecky lying crumpled in front of the pitching mound, writhing and screaming in pain, was one that millions will never forget. In only a few days, his triumph had turned to tragedy.

On the same night that Dravecky fell, Rose became embroiled in another ugly incident in which he was accused of pushing an umpire. Fortunately, Americans had a finer example of the human spirit to contemplate in Dravecky.

Then, on the next night came a second example of true class in the performance of another big-league pitcher, the soft-spoken and modest Nolan Ryan of the Texas Rangers.

Ryan was tired, he told reporters after his game. Didn't have the old stamina, he explained, nor the old power stuff either; he just had to stumble along with his curve and change of pace.

Nevertheless, approaching age 43 in his 23rd year as a major-league pitcher, Ryan struck out eight, gave up three hits and won his 14th game of the season.

Such statistics are impressive enough for anyone, let alone an athlete of Ryan's age, but the greater story is that he is close to an extraordinary achievement. He needs only six more strikeouts to become the first pitcher to strike out 5,000 batters.

To put that record in perspective, 20 years ago, Walter Johnson of the Washington Senators held the strikeout record of 3,508, achieved in a career that ended in 1927. Johnson's strikeout mark was said to be beyond reach by mere mortals.

Say Goodbye To Some Memories

Alvin Taylor

Sunday Morning Notes

Say so long to a couple of local landmarks.

One was the store building which was burned by the fire department last week at Ficklen Drive and Charles Street.

The building had stood vacant for a number of years. Its demise was a controlled burn by the fire fighters for practice and to clear the lot. The site will be developed into a park area to complement the athletic campus of the university and to offset the giant parking lot which has just been constructed across Ficklen Drive.

The old building was once well known as Wilson's Grocery at 1505 Charles Street.

Then, of course, it was on the edge of town just beyond the Norfolk and Southern overpass and on a two laned highway. There was very little beyond except open highway and farm houses. Certainly there was no Plaza Mall. In fact there was no Ficklen Stadium or Minges Coliseum and the area where the new parking lot is was overgrown wetland, which might well be protected today.

Anyway, Wilson's Store served as a neighborhood grocery and rural store. As the university and the city moved that way the building became a popular restaurant known as Huey's. Students and business people alike went there for what was known as home cooking.

Eventually the restaurant went and the building sat empty as apartments, athletic facilities and businesses built up past it. Then one day last week the memories that so many past students and other patrons had built up over the years went up in the smoke. The grocery store turned restaurant was no more. Returning alumni this year will find a park in its place.

On the other side of town a lot of other-teen aged memories went this year with the demolition of the Tice Drive-In. It was the best of the drive-in movies in the area when it was built and the perfect place for young lovers to park without being hasseled. Never mind what the movie was being shown on the big screen. The sound could easily be turned off at the speaker which was brought into the car.

The drive-in movie had not been operated for a number of years and, in fact, the drive-in movies are all gone in Pitt County. The Tice will be replaced by a convenience store. Young lovers gather who knows where these days and there is no need to keep up pretenses by purchasing a movie ticket.

The memories of the next century are now being created elsewhere. For many however, today's memories came from an old building, now burned, on Charles Boulevard, as well as a drive-in movie, now razed, on Memorial Drive.

No Choice For Grandparents

Art Buchwald

What happened on the cape this summer is that more and more grandmothers gave birth to grandchildren. From one end of the cape to the other, grandmothers started showing up by the thousands on the beaches carrying babies.

"Why the sudden influx of grandmothers?" I asked my friend Ruth, who was sitting on a blanket holding a 1-year-old on her lap and wrestling with a 2-year-old with her feet.

She said, "The reason is that the need for grandmothers has never been greater. When it comes to free help, daughters are depending on their mothers more than they ever have in the past. With the demand so high more and more of my friends are becoming grandmothers."

"Do you like being a grandmother?" I asked her.

"It's a living," she replied. "And it keeps me in touch with the family."

I asked her, "What is the most important thing a grandmother must know how to do?"

"Baby-sit," she said. "No grandmother can justify her existence if she doesn't know how to sit with kids."

"Do you do it for money?" I asked.

"Do you get bawled out a lot by your daughter?" I asked.

"Yes, I do. You don't know daughters or daughters-in-law. They're always finding an excuse to pick on us. Let me give you an example. The other day I sat with my grandchild for six hours and everything went beautifully. Ten minutes before my daughter came home my grandson walked into the leg of a table and was screaming his head off when she walked in. I was sure she was going to charge me with child abuse."

"I wonder why daughters and daughters-in-law are so tough on their mothers?"

"Because they know in their hearts the children love us more than they love them."

"It doesn't surprise me," I said.

"Don't repeat this," Ruth whispered, "but my daughter has no sense of humor."

"What mother does?" I said. "How does your daughter show her displeasure?"

"She's always criticizing me. I either give the baby too much apple juice or not enough. I let them have too much sun or I kept them covered up so they'd be white like a sheet of Kleenex. I just can't seem to do anything right. I don't know what happens to a daughter when she becomes the mother, but it's a serious role reversal."

"Is that because she doesn't think her mother knows anything about babies?"

"Why would the mother who bore her know anything about children? She talks to me like I'm the village idiot. I took the baby into town this morning and bought him a lollipop. You would have thought I purchased a sugar-flavored cyanide pill. My daughter screamed at me, 'I told you he wasn't supposed to eat anything between meals but a raw potato.'"

"Well, at least she cares what the baby eats," I said. I then asked her, "If you had to do it all over again, would you still be a grandmother?"

The Jews Of Auschwitz Hear Nothing

Richard Cohen

WASHINGTON — Once again, the Vatican has nothing to say. During World War II, it was publicly silent as an estimated six million Jews were killed — a stain on the church's moral integrity that barely fades with time. Now with the apparent refusal of Carmelite nuns to abandon their convent on the grounds of Auschwitz, the Vatican is silent once more. Why is it when it comes to Jews, the church cannot find its voice?

At the moment, Auschwitz is the center of a dispute. A Carmelite convent was established there in 1984 and a cross erected 23 feet high. To Jews this seemed an affront, yet another attempt to revise the wartime history of Poland, to make it seem that Poles were killed because they were Poles and not, as was most often the case, because they were Jews. To Jews, the convent seemed an attempt to turn Auschwitz into a Catholic shrine. Thoughtful Poles and Catholic officials agreed. The Church ordered the Carmelites to abandon their convent and rebuild it, along with an inter-faith center, off the grounds of Auschwitz.

The nuns have not done so and, indeed, there is some indication they may not. As a result, visiting groups of West European and American Jews have demonstrated at Auschwitz. One group was reportedly roughed up by Polish construction workers. And now, the bishop with jurisdiction over the area, Franciszek Cardinal Marcharski of Kracow, has hinted that the agreement to move the convent may not be honored. Jewish groups have appealed to the Pope, once a Polish bishop himself. From the normally loquacious Vatican has come silence.

If this were a dispute over one building in one corner of one too-many Nazi extermination camps, no one would care. But this quarrel is about history, which is to say truth.

All throughout Eastern Europe and, indeed, to a degree in Western Europe as well, the wartime murder of Jews has, in countless monuments and plaques, become the murder of Poles or Czechs or Russians or, even, Frenchmen. Of course, non-Jewish Poles or Czechs or Russians or Frenchmen were murdered by the Nazis and, in the case of Poland or Russia, the numbers are staggering. But no other European people, with the exception of the gypsies, were slated for extermination. Poland suffered terribly, but only for Jews was that period a holocaust.

It is a bit too late for any of these countries to retroactively assimilate their Jewish population. That is particularly the case with Poland. Even before the German occupation, Poland was an anti-Semitic state — both culturally and legally. Anti-Jewish laws (restrictions on university admissions, for instance) were passed in the 1930s. It is hardly an accident that most of the Nazi extermination camps were located in Poland. In the first place, three quarters of Europe's Jews lived there. And, second, the Nazis could rely on traditional Polish anti-Semitism to produce an indifference to the fate of the Jews. That significant elements of the Polish Catholic Church shared and abetted that anti-Semitism is a lamentable fact.

No one knows this history better than Pope John Paul. Once, upwards of three million Jews lived in Poland. Once, Jews comprised 10 percent of the Polish population. Now, some 3,000 Jews live there. Some Jews left the country during the government's anti-Semitic campaign of 1968. The bulk though, were murdered during the Holocaust and nowhere was the killing more efficient or the numbers more staggering than at Auschwitz and its sister camp, Birkenau. The convent, the looming cross, claims Auschwitz for the church. The claim may be an honest one, but the emphasis is all wrong.

So it is incumbent on the church, particularly a Polish-born Pope, to acknowledge what was done. The dispute over the Auschwitz convent should not become a fight over which people suffered most, Jews or Poles, since there was more than enough suffering to go around. It should, instead, be used as a device to acknowledge the truth about Auschwitz: This is a place where Jews by the millions were murdered — not because they were Poles, not because they were communists, not because they were dissidents, intellectuals or homosexuals, but because they were Jews. This is a place for Jews to honor the past and for Poles to acknowledge it.

The Pope may feel boxed in. The dispute may seem a fight between non-Polish Jews and Polish nuns and, moreover, an attempt by Jews to monopolize the memory of Poland's Nazi occupation. It is, however, a dispute about reconciliation and that entails facing what really happened and, as important, why it happened: a complex tale that includes the complicity of Poles and the silence of the church. It is inconceivable that once again the Jews of Auschwitz will hear nothing.

Don't Lock-'Em-Up

Ellen Goodman

CHICAGO — The poster on the hospital wall doesn't waste any words. Over the picture of a baby it says: "Some of the people who take cocaine during pregnancy never get over it."

This is more than a public-service warning to pregnant women. It's also the bottom line from the research done on the cocaine babies. Most never get over it.

On this summer morning, in the clinic at Northwestern University's medical school hospital, Dan Griffith is seeing some children brought in for long-term follow-up. It is one piece of a multi-part project on pregnant substance abusers and their babies under the umbrella of the National Association for Perinatal Research and Education headquartered in this city. Carefully, the burly and gentle psychologist places puzzles in front of two-year-old Stacy and watches as she uses blocks, as she crayons and walks along the string on the floor.

It takes a trained eye to identify the symptoms in Stacy. She is among the best of what Griffith calls "the best of the worst."

He knows well the syndrome of those born addicted. Newborns who go from sleeping to screaming, and cannot maintain the state of quiet alertness during which bonding and learning take place. Toddlers who can't tolerate stimulation. School children who are easily distracted and more easily frustrated.

How many such kids are there, cocaine babies, crack babies? Last year, the association found that a staggering 11 percent of babies born in 36 hospitals in 1988 had mothers who used illegal drugs while they were pregnant. That's some 375,000 mothers.

"The question I am asked most often," said Griffith, "is how do you work with mothers who have done that to their kids?" It's less a question than a judgment that springs up easily in an atmosphere of public frustration at drugs and anger at the irresponsibility of a pregnant woman.

Lately, that anger has turned to a passion for punishment. Not far from here, a Rockford woman named Melanie Green was put on trial last May before a grand jury for manslaughter in the death of her addicted newborn. This summer in Florida, Jennifer Johnson was convicted of delivering drugs to the recipient in her womb.

Other courts, seeking to protect the fetus before birth, have moved pregnant women to jail until delivery. In Washington, D.C., a judge sent Brenda Vaughan to jail for the last three months of her pregnancy after a drug test revealed cocaine use.

Those who hold a front-row seat at the devastation of these cocaine babies, who know that drug abuse is the primary cause of infant mortality, who literally see the damage, have the greatest right to judge these pregnant women. Yet they are more likely to view the argument over rights and the passion to lock-'em-up as a great diversion.

"If you jail one woman, the only lesson you teach women is to stay out of the prenatal health-care system," says Dr. Ira Chasnoff, head of the perinatal association, as we talk over lunch. The lesson he wants to deliver to these mothers is quite the opposite: Come in for health care. Now.

Dr. Chasnoff believes there is no shortcut for the kinds of prenatal identification and treatment that his group has been developing. So the Texan-born pediatrician calls the argument over rights a "smokescreen." It's hard to see through it.

As for jailing pregnant women, he runs through the real-life scenario. If we jail women until delivery in a mythical drug-free prison, do we then send them and their babies back to the same streets? Do we, on the other hand, take the children away from their mothers and put them into the beleaguered foster-care system? And will we jail those children again when they are 16, pregnant and strung-out?

The most popular proposal that drug czar William Bennett has made is for more jail space, but those who work in the fallout of the drug world shake their heads at this. Their impulse is not to lock-'em-up. When they talk about mothers and babies, the issue is not whose rights are violated but what works.

And, cn a summer city day, the irony doesn't escape their notice. How ironic to spend money jailing mothers while others who seek help are being turned away, because there is no room at the treatment center.

newly porous border with Austria. Pointing to other youths who did the same, she added, "We all work in professions where you actually make money in East Germany. But there's nothing to spend it on."

Other Communist governments that have rejected genuine reforms vacillate between concessions and repression.

Bulgaria and Czechoslovakia, whose Communists traditionally have paid much heed to Moscow, have lent strong verbal support to Gorbachev's perestroika, or restructuring, and claimed to be implementing their own versions.

In both countries, however, reform seems skin-deep, limited to some new freedom in the state-controlled arts and changes billed as improvements in running stagnating state economies.

"Certain surface, let's say, official improvements have been made," said Jana Starek of the International Helsinki Federation. "Unfortunately, nothing has changed as far as strictly political cases, cases of religious belief and independent civil organizations are concerned."

In Czechoslovakia, which has perhaps the strongest democratic traditions of any Soviet bloc nation, sporadic anti-government protests and petitions for reform have yielded nothing but more harassment and jail for dissidents and their supporters.

In Bulgaria, organized dissident groups have emerged for virtually the first time under Communist rule. But activists have quickly found the limits of glasnost, Bulgarian-style, suffering police harassment, imprisonment or forced emigration.

Bulgaria's ethnic Turks are fleeing by the hundreds of thousands to Turkey after at least nine people died in May protests against an assimilation campaign and authorities began deporting dozens of ethnic Turkish activists.

In Yugoslavia, still freer in spirit than the Soviet bloc with which it broke in 1948, ethnic tension is also mounting, fueled by economic chaos resulting from a decentralized political system and state mismanagement of agriculture and industry.

Hundreds of ethnic Albanians have been jailed since they protested last spring against constitutional changes they say curbed their autonomy in Yugoslavia.

While Europe's Communist nations are embroiled in upheaval, Vietnam, a nation ravaged by turmoil for decades, seems calmly to be implementing its version of perestroika, known as "doi moi."

According to a recent report in the authoritative British weekly The Economist, "doi moi" has not halted the flow of boat people risking their lives to escape Communist Vietnam. But it has raised economic production — and hopes — without yet firing political unrest.

In Europe, steeped in traditions of individual liberty, the lifting of the rigid clamp of totalitarianism seems fraught with more danger.

The restructuring of a vast, diverse country such as the Soviet Union seems unable to proceed without the upheaval seen in the Baltic republics, the Caucasus and in Siberian and Ukrainian miners' strikes.

Fear of such turbulence bolsters Communist governments that have so far rejected change. In Czechoslovakia, for example, living standards are still relatively high and workers living for four decades by the East bloc motto "we pretend to work, and they pretend to pay us" are afraid reform will send artificially low prices soaring and put them out of their cozy jobs.

Popular pressure for change could mount if Poland or Hungary proves that smaller, more developed and more ethnically homogenous nations than the Soviet Union can achieve democratic reform without major upheaval.

Younger Communists also may prove more willing to countenance change than the older leaders in power now: East Germany's Erich Honecker, 76; Czechoslovakia's Gustav Husak, 75; Bulgaria's Todor Zhivkov, 77; Ceausescu, 71; and Castro, younger at 62 but at the top since 1959.

able information about the impact of offshore oil and gas development than an environmental impact study, but Mobil's main opponents remain unconvinced.

Jan DeBlieu of Kili Devil Hills, one of the founders of the anti-Mobil group Legasea, said many people fear the environmental report will turn out to be a Trojan horse.

"We do not trust the way the deal was cut.... It seems like the entire reason the environmental-report compromise was worked out was to facilitate things so Mobil can get in the water next spring."

Jones could not be reached for comment. Floyd Lupton, his administrative assistant, said Jones saw no reason to take up the Senate's time with his amendment because the compromise seemed acceptable to all but the most adamant of Mobil's opponents.

"He was satisfied because everyone else seemed to feel like it was adequate," Lupton said.

Michael M. McOwen, the vice president of Legasea, said Jones suffered in the eyes of his constituents by not trying to include North Carolina in a proposed moratorium on oil leases. The moratorium applies mainly to future lease sales on the East Coast, but also halts exploration in parts of Alaska and Florida where the leases already had been sold.

According to several observers, North Carolina could have been included in the moratorium, but Jones did not ask for it. Lupton said Jones does not think it is right to interfere with leases for which a company already has paid.

Edmund Welch, Jones' top aide on the Merchant Marine committee, said no more leases are likely to go on sale off the coast of North Carolina in the next fiscal year, the only year affected by the proposed moratorium. Instead of asking for that favor, he said, Jones sought and won support for several big-budget parks projects.

Still, McOwen said, "There's a lot of people in this area who have a real question as to whether this whole EIS (environmental impact statement) focus was just a smokescreen to get us beyond the moratorium."

Jones urged them strongly to back the EIS instead of the moratorium, he said, and now they don't have either one.

"If somebody was in favor of oil, it couldn't have been planned any better," McOwen said.

Ben McDonald

O's, McDonald Finally Reach Agreement

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BALTIMORE — Ben McDonald, the Louisiana State pitcher who was the No. 1 pick in baseball's amateur draft, finally put his signature on a Baltimore Orioles contract Saturday, after 10 weeks of negotiations.

The contract runs through the 1991 season, and is estimated to be worth a minimum of $900,000 including a signing bonus. It reportedly contains incentive clauses which could take its worth to $1.1 million.

McDonald will begin his pro career with Frederick of the Class A Carolina League, reporting on Monday, but he will not be there for long, Orioles general manager Roland Hemond said.

"Later in the month, when he has built up his arm, we will get him up to Rochester," a class AAA league team, Hemond said.

"It will probably take three weeks before I can start and go seven or eight innings," said McDonald, a 6-foot-7 inch right-hander.

About joining the Orioles, he said, "It's going to be their decision, depending on how fast I progress. I'd like to be there (in September) and help, but if I'm not ready I don't deserve to be there."

McDonald, who left LSU after his junior year, pitched four innings this summer in the semi-pro Cape Cod League. Other than that, he has not pitched since the College World Series, where he was 0-2.

McDonald, who had kept the Orioles waiting since early June before agreeing to a contract, kept a Memorial Stadium news conference waiting 43 minutes before appearing.

"I was pretty positive about it the whole time," he said. "I always felt I'd be here."

Agreement on the contract was reached Friday. "Negotiations finally got to a stage where it would be fair to me," McDonald said. "Both parties moved. I didn't think it was going to be easy, I knew it would take some time. I just had to be patient."

At one point in the negotiations, it was reported that McDonald had received a $2 million offer from a proposed new league.

McDonald was both as a starter and reliever at LSU, where he was 14-4 with four saves and a 3.49 era last spring. In three years at LSU, he was 29-4 with six saves, and struck out 373 batters in 308.1 innings.

"If my arm is ready, I feel I can contribute," said McDonald. "I watch games on TV, and try to figure out how to pitch certain hitters. If I'm 100 I can exploit hitters weaknesses. I'm gonna work every day to try to get my arm in the best possible shape I can get it in."

Frederick manager Jerry Narron learned of McDonald's assignment to his club from reporters Saturday. The club is on the road this weekend, and returns home Monday for a seven-day homestand. McDonald is expected to pitch during that time, but Narron was not able to specify a date for his first appearance.

Kelly Searching For Depth

Freshmen Crop Could Shore Up Defensive Line

By Woody Peele

Tim Kelly

Tim Kelly's biggest concern as East Carolina's Pirates move into fall practice is to find some depth in the defensive line.

And while he has some doubt as to whether he'll find enough this year, he does believe that the future is in good shape.

The Pirates brought in several freshmen defensive linemen and Kelly likes their looks.

"I hope we don't have to play them (this year), but like Coach (Bill) Lewis says, we'll put the 11 best on the field," Kelly said. "I've coached at Clemson and Georgia and this group of freshmen is as good a group as I've worked with in the last five or six years. They came to play football and I'm proud of the effort they've put forth thus far."

Meanwhile, the Pirates will field one very experienced lineman, one with fairly good experience and one with some experience in the three spots on the line. But behind them is little experience.

"Mike Applewhite (6-2½, 255, Sr.) has played (tackle) the last couple of years and has the most experience," Kelly said. "We have some older kids (seniors), but they haven't played that much. This will be Joe Holmes' (6-4, 233, Sr.) first year starting, and we've moved him from defensive end last year.

"And Greg Gardill (6-3, 235, the nose guard) is a true sophomore."

Right now, Kelly feels that the Pirates have about six people who can play the three positions. "We have tremendous speed — that's our biggest asset — those guys can run. But it's not like it was at Clemson and Georgia, three and four deep," Kelly said.

Because of the lack of depth, Kelly says the players must stay healthy. "I'd like to play six, eight or nine kids a game. That will be our plan of attack, to keep fresh people in the game," he said.

Kelly's — and Lewis' — philosophy with the front defensive people is simple. "We want to be in pursuit with our first step. We want to do all we can to utilize our speed. Since that's our biggest asset we need to do the things we can to make the kids successful through that."

Size is not great — adequate is more the fitting word, Kelly says. "We'd like to have them bigger, and next year we will be bigger. We're not dumb enough to tell our kids to hit people straight ahead. We have to read technique, run around and chase the football."

Applewhite, according to Kelly, is the perfect Pirate. "He's the kind of kid you want people to think about at East Carolina. He's a get-after-you type who'll do all you ask and he's a solid citizen. He's got good speed and quickness and tremendous strength. We look for him to get some post-season honors."

Applewhite was the leading tackler from the line last year with 26 unassisted and 21 assists. He had six tackles for losses.

Holmes may be the quickest and fastest of the linemen. "You can hardly get a hat on him," Kelly said.

Mike Applewhite will anchor ECU defensive line

ECU Loses 5 Players For Season

Five East Carolina football players have been lost for the 1989 season, including two lost to academic ineligibility, coach Bill Lewis announced Friday.

Senior defensive end James Singletary must forgo his final year of eligibility since he has already redshirted a season. Sophomore defensive back Richard Wright also will lose one year of eligibility because he redshirted, but he could play next year as a junior. Both had academic problems.

"We have lost a couple of guys who could have made a positive contribution. I am disappointed any time you lose players who could make a contribution. We'll do everything we can to assist them in getting back to school," Lewis said.

The Pirates also lost senior offensive guard Carl Carney and sophomore offensive tackle Mark Weatherford to injuries. Carney has undergone shoulder surgery and will miss his final year of college football. Weatherford has been hampered by a chronic neck problem and has been told by doctors to give up football.

Both Carney and Weatherford will remain in the Pirate program, however. Carney will work with assistant coach Steve Shankweiler on the offensive line, while Weatherford will be a student manager.

Carr: Clemson Did Not Violate NCAA Rules

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Quarterback Michael Carr said Clemson did not violate NCAA rules while recruiting him and that he would welcome the chance to meet with investigators, a published report said Saturday.

Meanwhile, as Carr pondered a return to Clemson, NCAA investigators reportedly plan to visit his hometown in Louisiana again in hopes of interviewing the player and his high school coach about recruitment by the Tigers.

Carr, a red-shirt freshman, left Clemson on a train Thursday for Amite, La., as reports surfaced that he may be a focus of the NCAA probe.

He said he left not because of the investigation but because he was dropped from first team to third team after playing poorly Wednesday in Clemson's first preseason scrimmage.

The (New Orleans) Times-Picayune on Saturday quoted Carr as saying Clemson did not break NCAA rules while recruiting him.

"No, (Clemson) didn't do anything (illegal)," he told the newspaper. "They just gave me an opportunity to play ball." Carr refused to elaborate.

Carr said he has not been contacted by the NCAA but expects investigators to call him.

"I don't have anything to hide," he said. "I'll be glad to talk with them and tell them everything they want to know."

NCAA investigators were headed for Amite in hopes of interviewing Carr and his high school coach, Gary Hendry, sources close to the investigation told The Atlanta Journal-Constitution in a story published Saturday.

NCAA investigators visited Amite on Aug. 3 and talked to Earnestine Hannible, the mother of a former Amite player who was a close friend of Carr's.

Hendry said NCAA representatives had unsuccessfully tried to reach him by phone Friday.

"If they call me and want to talk to me, then I guess I have to," Hendry said. "Cheating bothers me. I don't deal with people who cheat."

Hendry has said Carr told him Clemson broke NCAA rules while recruiting him.

Ella Robinson told The Anderson Independent-Mail in a story published Saturday that accounts linking her brother to possible recruiting violations are "all lies."

Mrs. Robinson, a clerk in Amite's health unit, said, "The only true fact is he comes from 14 of us; they don't know what they're talking about."

Hendry told the Atlanta newspaper a Clemson coach whose name he could not remember contacted him Thursday after making public statements regarding Carr's recruitment.

"One coach called me but I can't

Chapter 17: Dent Replaces Green

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DETROIT — In the same summer as "A Nightmare on Elm Street 5" and "Friday the 13th Part VIII," there's a new sequel: "George the Ax Man, Chapter 17."

New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner changed managers again Friday, firing Dallas Green and promoting Bucky Dent from Class AAA Columbus.

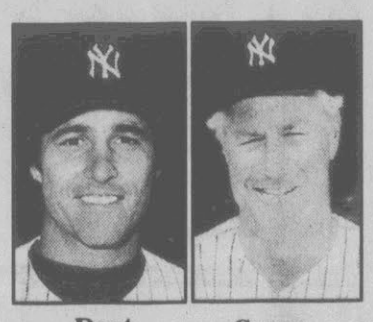
"Who knows how long it will last?" Dent said. "I'm going to be here as long as I can, but I know the track record here. He gave me no guarantees, none. I'm going to do the best job I can."

Green tried, too. He signed a two-year contract last October, but immediately there were doubts he would last that long. Since Steinbrenner bought the team in 1978, only two managers had lasted two full seasons.

"I don't know if any of us really understood the situation in New York until we got there," Green said Friday, "and from living there for the past five months ... it is not a good situation over there. This points out that baseball people who don't understand the game are going to hurt the game before it's all over with."

Green became the second major league manager fired this season. Jimy Williams was dismissed by the Toronto Blue Jays in May.

"I don't know what to say,"



Dent Green

pitcher Dave Righetti said. "I don't know why these things happen. But it goes with the territory here as manager. We've never had it any other way. To me, this is normal — and that's no joke."

Green met in the morning with Steinbrenner, who had complained repeatedly about the coaching staff. When Green backed his men, Steinbrenner dismissed Green and also fired coaches Pat Corrales, Lee Elia, Frank Howard, Charlie Fox.

In the new lineup, Mike Ferraro will coach first base, one-time Yankee manager Gene Michael will coach third and Champ Summers will be hitting coach.

"I made a change," Steinbrenner said in a terse statement. "I've got nothing critical at all to say about Dallas Green. Perhaps there were things I did that disappointed him and things he did that disappointed me. I'm sorry that Dallas and I aren't going to see this thing through this together."

Pitching coach Billy Connors survived the purge. Connors is a friend of Mark Langston, an ace pitcher becoming a free agent at the end of the season.

"You try to survive in this job," Connors said. "I'm loyal to Dallas, but he told me as a baseball man I have to stay. We've made adjustments all year. If you look at our pitching staff, it's as good as it's been all year."

At the time of the firings, the Yankees were last in the American League with a 4.54 earned run average.

In the Yankees' first game under Dent, with a revamped lineup, they lost 7-3 to Detroit. The Yankees fell to 56-66 and sixth in the AL East, 7½ games behind Baltimore.

"I told them before the game that they're not out of it by no means," said Dent, a former playoff and World Series hero for the Yankees. "And until they're mathematically eliminated they're still in it and just to go out and play hard."

Prior to the season, Steinbrenner said he was confident Green would last the season.

"I will tell you, he will be there at the end of the World Series when we win it. Dallas has no problems at all this year," Steinbrenner said on Feb. 26.

Steinbrenner's 17 changes have involved 11 different men, including five-time manager Billy Martin.

The Yankees, minus the power of Dave Winfield, Jack Clark and Claudell Washington, won their first game of the season but lost the next seven. They later acquired Jesse Barfield and Steve Balboni and traded away Rickey Henderson.

Recently, there were signs Steinbrenner might make a move. He had stepped up public criticism of Green in the last week but insisted, "I'm still supportive of my manager and have no plans to replace him."

Dent, manager of the Yankees' AAA farm team at Columbus, hit the dramatic three-run home run in the 1978 AL East playoff against the Boston Red Sox that helped the Yankees to a 5-4 victory, capping a 14½-game comeback.

He was the shortstop on the 1977-78 teams that were the last to win consecutive world championships and was the MVP in the Yankees' six-game victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1978.

Dent led Columbus to a 68-62 record despite a constant shuttling of players to the parent club. In his first game managing the Yankees, he moved Roberto Kelly, a .300 hitter, from ninth place to third in the lineup and shifted Don Mattingly to second.

Green managed Philadelphia to its only World Series championship in 1980. He was general manager when the Chicago Cubs won the National League East in 1984, but eventually left the team in a dispute with the owners.

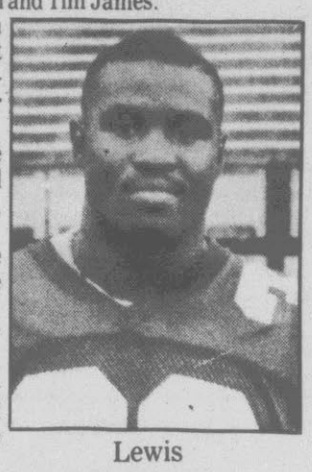
Sunday Notebook:

Willie Lewis is happy to be back where he started his college career, lined up about eight yards deep in the backfield waiting for the snap of the ball.

It's been a four-year wait for the fifth-year senior from Valdosta, Ga., but he's not complaining.

After coming to ECU four years ago hoping to make the tailback spot his own, Lewis instead found himself playing slot back in the run-and-shoot offense that emphasized the option running of quarterback Travis Hunter and the bruising fullback play of Anthony Simpson and Tim James.



Lewis

Not that Lewis was complaining. He's a team player. He played the slot and played it well. His blocking abilities belied his size (5-9, 175) and he saw a lot of playing time over the past three seasons.

Along the way, he even got to carry the ball, not often, mind you, but every now and then. He compiled 146 carries for 655 yards, a 4.5 yard-per-carry average.

But Bill Lewis replaced Art Baker as the Pirates' head coach last year and junked the run-and-shoot in favor of the I formation.

It was a change that brought a big toothy grin to Willie Lewis' face.

"That's a tailback's dream, to go to a major college and play the true I tailback," said Lewis, who will alternate as the number-one tailback with fellow-senior Denell Harper.

"In the previous years we had the run-and-shoot offense, where the tailback (i.e., slot back) might carry the ball two to three times a game," Lewis said. "We had four different tailbacks so we rotated a lot. With the one-(tailback) offense, the tailback is going to get the ball between 30-40 times a game. If they split that between Denell and I, we should figure into a pretty big part of the offense."

Willie Lewis came to ECU from traditional prep power Valdosta, where he was the starting tailback on a team USA Today declared the national prep champion. He rushed for over 1,200 yards his senior year and was named All-State by the Atlanta Journal-Constitution.

"At Valdosta, we had a two-back offense," Lewis said. "It was more of a fullback-oriented offense. I did a lot of the lead blocking for my fullback. In high school I maybe carried the ball nine or ten times a game."

When Lewis was recruited by ECU, the Pirates were still utilizing the freeze-option attack that had sent players like Tony Collins, Sam Harrell, Earnest Byner and Reggie Branch on to the professional ranks.

Lewis came to ECU with the idea of continuing that tradition and being the next great I-back.

"I looked at that when I first came in," he said. "I saw Earnest Byner, Reggie Branch, Tony Baker, Tony Collins."

As a freshman, he was redshirted as ECU was set at tailback with Baker, who went on to play for the Atlanta Falcons and the Cleveland Browns. Lewis spent the year as the scout-team tailback, impersonating the upcoming opponents' top running back.

"I was Bo Jackson when we we played Auburn. When we played Penn State, I was D.J. Dozier. When we played Louisiana State, I was Dalton Hilliard and Garry James," he said.

In the spring of his first year, things changed. Baker decided to to go the run-and-shoot attack that featured a one-back offense, which in ECU's case meant a fullback.

All the tailbacks became slot backs, which meant they would do a lot more blocking and receiving than actual ball-carrying. It was yeoman's work.

"It was a totally different style of offense for me," Lewis said. "Really the tailbacks were receivers. I had to get used to catching the ball. I didn't do much catching in high school.

"We're still going to be doing some catching out of the tailback position (in the new offense), but it's nothing like the run-and-shoot," Lewis said.

"With this offense the tailbacks are going to get the ball 30 times a game. That (could be) 100, 200 yards a game."

Still, Lewis had to become a tailback again after three years away from the position. Rust had begun to set in.

"I'll tell you, it was a lot to get used," Lewis said. "We were used to going out on routes and catching passes. It did take Denell and I time to get our tailback steps back down.

"It felt real good (later) in the spring. We played in a lot of scrimmages and the holes were there. We had the draws, the screens. It's going to be a wide-open offense."

Lewis is at the top of the depth chart as fall practice opens up. Harper missed the last part of spring practice with an ankle injury, but he is ready to go now, too.

Of the two, Lewis is the better blocker, while Harper is a better receiver coming out of the backfield.

"Going in, both Denell and I know we're going to split time," Lewis said. "It's not going to be any problem. It's going to make both of us better to try and keep each other up and working.

"Denell can do so many things. I'm trying to keep up with Denell. He's making me better. It's good to have Denell with me."

But most of all, it feels good to be back where he started, at the familiar I-back spot that he came here to fill four years ago.

Bodine Captures Champion 400 Pole

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BROOKLYN, Mich. → Geoff Bodine, overcoming scary reminders of his recent racing accident, set a track NASCAR record in winning the pole for Sunday's Champion Spark Plug 400 at Michigan International Speedway.

Bodine, who destroyed his Chevrolet Lumina in a road race last week at Watkins Glen, N.Y., forced himself back behind the wheel Saturday and pushed a new car around the MIS high-banked two-mile oval at 175.962 mph. That broke the record of 174.940 mph set a year ago by Bill Elliott's Ford Thunderbird.

"I feel good about being here and this pole just makes it a little bit better," Bodine said with a slight lisp, a reminder of a stitch in his lip from the wreck a week ago. "It wasn't a very pleasant thing.

"I thought about (the crash) all week. 'Can I climb in this car and go around the track without being afraid?' In the first turn, I thought about it again."

It was the third pole this season for Bodine, but his first in the 1990 Lumina. He drove a Monte Carlo before the new car was introduced on the Winston Cup circuit on May 7 at Talladega.

Bodine, who jumped out of the car quickly after the crash, said it was the worst wreck he has experienced. It left him with a sore chest and bad memories, he said.

"I thought about it all week. That's what you have to do in this business," Bodine said. "It's a lot like falling off a bike when you're a kid. You've got to see if you can get right back up and ride again.

"Every week out here there are a lot of bumps, pushes and spins you have to put out of your head. It's a scary thing, sometimes."

Four other drivers — Rusty Wallace, Alan Kulwicki, Mark Martin and Rick Wilson — also beat Elliott's 1988 qualifying time in qualifying for Sunday's 400 mile race.

Overcast skies, low humidity and moderate temperatures made conditions perfect for the high speeds.

The inside position has become increasingly important this season because of the Unocal 76 Challenge which pays bonus money to a driver who can win the pole and then win the race. Because the money rolls over from week to week if there is no winner, the bonus this week is worth $129,200.

The bonus, when added to the first place prize money already posted by the speedway, could earn Bodine close to $190,000, which would be the largest payoff for any race, in any type of car, ever held at MIS.

The highest MIS payoff was $129,375 won by Michael Andretti in the Marlboro 500 CART Indy car race earlier this month.

"Believe me, the money didn't motivate me to get in that car today," Bodine said. "I saw the amount on the sign, I knew it was there, but that wasn't a factor today."

Elliott, who has won six races at MIS, including the Miller 400 in June, was eighth in qualifying, turning a lap at 174.689 mph. Ken Schrader and Morgan Shepherd were just ahead of Elliott, Kyle Petty was ninth and Sterling Martin completed the top 10.

Winston Cup leader Dale Earnhardt qualified at 173.352 mph and will start in the No. 15 spot.

Earnhardt has 2,614 points, a 126-point edge over Martin as the Winston Cup championship begins its stretch run. This is the 19th race on NASCAR's 29-race schedule.

"There's no more sandbagging," Bodine said. 'A lot is at stake the rest of the way. You'd better be ready to drive out here."

Wyland, Scoggin Defend 10-Meter Platform Titles

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH (AP) — Wendy Wyland and Matt Scoggin successfully defended their U.S. 10-meter platform titles Saturday at the U.S. Outdoor Diving Championships, with both events decided on the final dive.

Wyland, a 1984 Olympic bronze medalist from Boca Raton, Fla., outscored Courtney Nelson of Concord, Calif., by 0.18 points to earn her seventh U.S. platform title. The score was 412.68 to 412.50.

Wyland led the women's event from the fourth round, but Nelson was within four points at the end of the seventh round.

In the final round, Nelson earned 7s and 7.5s on her back 1½ with 2½ twists for 61.32 points. Wyland scored 6.5s and 7s on her front 1½ dive with three twists for 57.42 points, just enough to hold the lead.

Wendy Lian Williams, the 1989 World Cup champion from Bridgeton, Mo., was third with 387.39.

Diagnosed with viral meningitis and hospitalized one months ago, Wyland had been training for only 2½ weeks before the championships.

"It's kind of scary getting up there and not knowing what your body is going to do," she said. "I just burned out in the end because my endurance is low.

Canadian Final Pits Lendl, McEnroe

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MONTREAL — Top-seeded Ivan Lendl and John McEnroe set up their 31st career meeting with semifinal victories Saturday at the $900,000 Player's International Canadian Open.

Lendl, the defending champion, downed third-seeded Andre Agassi 6-2, 3-6, 6-4 to run his career record to 5-0 against the 19-year-old from Las Vegas. McEnroe, the No. 2 seed, defeated sixth-seeded Jay Berger 4-6, 6-3, 6-4.

McEnroe beat Lendl in two sets in the 1984 Canadian final in Toronto, but the career series between the veterans is deadlocked at 15-15.

McEnroe and Lendl have split their first 30 meetings.

"I'm happy with the way the tournament has gone for me," said Lendl, a five-time champion. "I could have lost in the second or third round, so win or lose tomorrow, it's been great. Of course, I hope I win."

Lendl beat McEnroe at Toronto in the semifinals in 1982. Lendl has won the tournament five times, including the last two years, while McEnroe won it in 1984 and 1985.

Lendl, who has won 14 consecutive matches at the Canadian Open dating to a quarterfinal loss to Kevin Curren in 1986, returned to action this week after a six-week break and looked off-form until the third set of his 7-6, 4-6, 6-0 quarterfinal victory over Canadian Grant Connell on Friday.

McEnroe beat Berger in the final of the U.S. Hardcourt Championships at Indianapolis last Sunday, recovering from a 1-4 third-set deficit to win 6-4, 4-6, 6-4 — his third tournament victory this year.

This time, it was McEnroe who led 4-1 in the third and then lost his serve. But the 30-year-old recovered to win again.

Berger and Agassi each won $29,930 for making the semifinals. The top prize is $113,300.

Edberg Defeats Wilander

MASON, Ohio — Mats Wilander is still searching for answers as he prepares to defend his U.S. Open title.

Wilander wasted two set points in the second-set tiebreaker Saturday, giving fellow Swede Stefan Edberg the opening for a 7-6, 7-6 semifinal victory in the ATP Championship.

Edberg rallied from three deficits in the tiebreaker to knock Wilander, the defending ATP champion, out of the $602,500 tournament.

Edberg will play Sunday for the tournament championship against either top-seed Boris Becker or fifth-seeded Brad Gilbert, who had a semifinal match Saturday night.

Wilander, 24, hasn't won a title this year, sliding from No. 1 on the circuit after his U.S. Open victory last year to fourth. The difference in his game was evident Saturday as he failed to hold leads in the tiebreakers that Edberg won 7-3, 10-8.

Wilander won two tiebreakers to beat Edberg in the tournament final last year, giving him momentum for the Open.

"That's just how things have gone so far," Wilander said. "Last year I won the two tiebreakers, this year I lost two tiebreakers.

"I'm not that far away. I'm playing pretty well. I'm hitting the ball all right. You never know when the momentum is going to turn around, and suddenly those big points are mine instead of my opponent's."

Wilander holds a 10-7 lifetime advantage over his fellow Swede, but has lost his last two matches against him in straight sets.

McNeil Reaches Finals

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — Lori McNeil, the lone remaining seeded player, defeated Betsy Nagelsen 6-3, 7-6 Saturday to advance to the final of the Virginia Slims of Albuquerque tournament.

The fifth-seeded McNeil will meet South Africa's Elna Reinach in Sunday's championship match.

McNeil, who lost to Nagelsen in five of their previous six meetings, including three times this year, ended the losing string when she won the second set tiebreaker 7-3.

Reinach extended her string of victories over seeded opponents with a 6-2, 6-2 win over No. 6 Amy Frazier of Rochester Hills, Mich.

Mets Are Making A Move

Ojeda, Magadan Spark 10th Win In 12 Games

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bob Ojeda is pitching like he wants to save his job and Dave Magadan is hitting like he wants to earn one. Meanwhile, the New York Mets are playing like they want to win the National League East.

Ojeda won his fifth consecutive decision and Magadan went 3-for-3 with a two-run double Saturday as the Mets beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 4-1 for their 10th victory in 12 games.

"When the team is playing well in general and you're a starting pitcher, you go out there every five days and win and everybody thinks you're doing something different," Ojeda said. "But it's just not true."

The Mets began the day 3½ games behind first-place Chicago. They are 15-4 in August and 44-20 at Shea Stadium, the best home record in baseball.

Ojeda's job has been rumored to be in trouble. If Dwight Gooden does return from the disabled list — and no one is positively certain he will — one of the Mets' starters will have to go to the bullpen.

Ojeda, 10-9, has struggled with his control this season and averaged about four walks per game, twice his career rate. But he has stayed out of trouble, especially lately.

"It's like my golf game. People say I'm good at getting out of jams when I pitch. They say I'm good at getting out from under trees," he said. "It's because I'm always doing it."

In 11 of his last 13 starts, Ojeda has had more walks than strikeouts.

Don Aase took over in the eighth and an error and a single put two runners on base with two outs. Randy Myers relieved and pinch-hitter Lenny Harris sent a hard grounder up the middle that Myers stopped with his right foot, and made the play. Myers finished for his 21st save.

Cardinals 5, Reds 1

Joe Magrane pitched a five-hitter for his fifth straight victory as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Cincinnati Reds 5-1 Saturday night.

Magrane, 16-7, pitched his seventh complete game to win for the 11th time in his last 12 decisions. He is the Cardinals' first 16-game winner since 1985 when John Tudor and Joaquin Andujar each won 21.

Since coming off the disabled list on April 20, Magrane has won 15 of 20 decisions. The left-hander walked three and struck out four.

Braves 4, Pirates 3

John Smoltz snapped a five-game losing streak and John Russell broke a seventh-inning tie with a run-scoring double, leading the Atlanta Braves past the Pittsburgh Pirates 4-3 Saturday night.

Tommy Gregg opened the Braves' seventh with a double off Doug Drabek, 10-10, and scored on Jeff Blauser's one-out double to tie the score. Russell then drove in the go-ahead run.

The rally enabled Smoltz, 12-11, to win for the first time in eight starts since being the losing pitcher in the All-Star Game. Smoltz allowed six hits and struck out six in eight innings.

Phillies 1, Giants 0

Terry Mulholland pitched a two-hitter against his former San Francisco teammates and Ricky Jordan's bases-loaded single with one out in the ninth inning gave the Philadelphia Phillies a 1-0 victory over the Giants on Saturday night.

Mulholland, 3-5, allowed hits by Matt Williuams in the second inning and Jose Uribe in the sixth in pitching his third career complete game and second of the season. Mulholland struck out four and walked two.

In the ninth, Len Dykstra led off with a double and moved to third on Tom Herr's single. Craig Lefferts relieved and intentionally walked Von Hayes before getting John Kruk to force Dykstra on a grounder to first.

Jordan then hit an 0-2 pitch from Steve Bedrosian over the head of right fielder Candy Maldonado, who was playing in.

Kelly Downs, 2-4, got the loss despite pitching eight strong innings. Downs allowed five hits, struck out six and walked one.

Bedrosian was traded to the Giants by Philadelphia on June 18 for Mulholland, pitcher Dennis Cook and third baseman Charlie Hayes.

Downs, who has been hampered with a shoulder injury for most of the season, was making his second start since being activated on Aug. 13. His last victory was on April 11 when he defeated Los Angeles.

It was Mulholland's first appearance against the Giants.

Expos 6, Padres 4

Rookie Larry Walker, playing for slumping right fielder Hubie Brooks, snapped a fifth-inning tie with a two-run single and Dennis Martinez won for the first time this month as the Montreal Expos beat the San Diego Padres 6-4 Saturday night.

Walker, the first Canadian-born player the Expos have developed this decade, has hit in each of the four games he has played in since being called up to replace Brooks, who is hitting .167 since the All-Star break.

Preliminaries Are Over

International Field Reduced To 24 For Final Round

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CASTLE ROCK, Colo. — Greg Norman scored an eagle on the 17th hole Saturday, made his way into the finals of the International and then summed up the situation in this peculiar golf tournament:

"Now it's on to the Super Bowl. The playoffs are over and we're going to the Super Bowl," Norman said.

"From this point on, it's a no-holds-barred-type of game," Tom Watson said. "Pull out all the stops and go for it."

There were some major casualties in the last set of preliminaries Saturday when a field of 72 was reduced to 24 players who will compete Sunday for the bulk of the $1 million purse, including $180,000 to the winner.

No scores are carried over. All start at zero under the modified Stableford scoring system in which an eagle is worth five points, a birdie scores two, bogeys cost one point and double bogeys and higher cost a player three points. Pars are worth nothing.

It took six points Saturday to make the final round. Bruce Lietzke, who had reached the finals in all three previous Internationals, had minus-4 and missed.

So did Ray Floyd, who will captain the U.S. Ryder Cup team against Europe's best next month in England. He had zero. Lee Trevino had three points. Craig Stadler, among the leading point-makers for the first two rounds, matched Floyd with zero points.

Jack Nicklaus made it to the finals on the strength of a four-foot putt on the final hole of the Castle Rock Golf Club course he designed.

Nicklaus went to 8 points with a two-putt birdie on the 17th hole. But he bunkered his approach on the 18th, came out long and ran a 30-foot par putt about 48 inches past the hole.

He needed that for a bogey, which would reduce his score to seven. If he missed, the double bogey would have knocked his score down to five and eliminated him.

"It looked like a very long putt," he said.

After backing away once, Nicklaus rolled it in, then covered his head with his arms as he walked off the green.

"I'm looking forward to finding out how the golf course plays on Sunday," said Nicklaus, who is making his first trip to the finals.

Tom Kite also was in danger of leaving early. He had only five points until he birdied two of the last three hole, to finish with nine points, tying him with Tom Watson.

Norman was at six points through 16 holes, then hit a 6-iron second shot eight feet from the cup and made the putt for eagle-3 on the 17th. He finished with 11 points, dropping his final putt moments before a thunderstorm caused a one-hour delay.

He was joined at that 11 points by Chip Beck and Ben Crenshaw.

Ted Schulz led all players 14 points after making seven birdies in a bogey-free round.

Andretti: Pocono 500 Winner Will Have To Earn It

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONG POND, Pa. — Mario Andretti says the driver who wins Sunday's Quaker State 500 at Pocono International Raceway will have earned it.

The 2½-mile tri-oval has been characterized by some drivers as "too rough" or "nearly undriveable." But Andretti looks at it differently.

"This is a real driver's course," the 1986 Pocono winner said. "You have braking here, and three very different corners to contend with. It's a lot more fun to drive here than any other superspeedway.

"You really sink your teeth into it. The bumps are there for everybody to deal with, so you deal with it. The team that comes up with the best setup to handle the bumps will win it."

Pole-winner Emerson Fittipaldi, the runaway series point leader, and Rick Mears, the man who trails Fittipaldi by 35 points, surprised everybody Friday by demolishing the previous track record of 205.724 mph set by Andretti's son, Michael.

Fittipaldi earned his fourth straight pole with a lap of 211.715, with Mears, a three-time Pocono winner, right behind at 211.119.

The elder Andretti, who still is looking for his first victory of the season, said the fast qualifying took place because "conditions just remained phenomenal."

The top two qualifiers were 4 mph faster than anybody else and 6 mph faster than Andretti, who qualified fifth at 205.339.

"When it comes to race time, things usually have a way of tightening up," he said. "You have to have consistency in a race, and the quality of the engines and the drivers we have is the same here as we've had all season."

Michael Andretti, the winner of the last two Indy-car races, said the rough track will dictate the pace of the race.

"The bumpy track will probably slow things down quite a bit," said the younger Andretti, who is third in the season points race heading into the 11th of 15 races. "I'd say the pace will be in the 194-195 range. If you can run that pace, you can probably win the race."

Michael has led every race this season except the one at Portland, but he did not get to victory circle until the ninth race of the season, at Toronto, suriving a bump with Fittipaldi two laps from the end.

At Michigan two weeks ago, he overcame two stop-and-go penalties and a spin in the pits to win the season's second 500-mile race. Fittipaldi won the other, the Indianapolis 500.

"We did go through a lot at Michigan. We were lucky we did it early in the race and had time to overcome it," Andretti said. "That will be a lot harder to do here, because passing is a lot harder here than at Michigan.

"You start wondering after a while what you have to do to get to the end. Really, though, all it took was faith in ourselves. We knew we would win. Now we just want to keep it rolling."

Neither Mears nor the younger Andretti is conceding the championship to Fittipaldi, a two-time Formula One champion from Brazil. But both concede it will not be easy to catch him.

"We can't do anything but keep working to win races," Mears said. "My main concern is to finish races. You want to be around to lead the last lap."

Michael said, "It's going to be tough to catch Emmo. He has the luxury of just having to finish the races. He doesn't have to win. We'll just try to keep winning and count up the points at the end of the season and see where we stand."

The race, which is scheduled to start at 12:10 p.m. EDT, will be televised by NBC on a tape delay beginning at 4 p.m.

Rain Washes Out Final Qualifying For Pocono 500

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONG POND, Pa. — Rain washed out most the scheduled activities Saturday at Pocono International Speedway, including the final session of qualifying for Sunday's Quaker State 500.

The Indy cars did get onto the 2½-mile tri-oval for a 30-minute practice session, with three-time Pocono winner Rick Mears turning the fast lap of 202.575 mph.

A misty rain than forced postponement of the rest of the day's activities.

Tony Bettenhausen and Dale Coyne, the only entries on hand who did not qualify on Friday, drew for the final starting positions. Bettenhausen drew the 26th spot and Coyne will start 27th.

The 25 cars that qualified on Friday averaged a Pocono record 201.007 mph.

The American Racing Series event, scheduled Saturday, was postponed until Sunday morning, as was the final 30-minute Indy-car practice.

The 500-mile race will follow at 12:10 p.m. EDT.

Jays Activate Key

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BALTIMORE — Jimmy Key was activated from the disabled list by the Toronto Blue Jays on Saturday, and was scheduled to start against the Baltimore Orioles.

Key had been placed on the 15-day disabled list on Aug. 8, retroactive to Aug. 4, because of an inflammation of the left rotator cuff. He had lost his last six starts prior to going on the disabled list, to fall to 7-13 for the season.

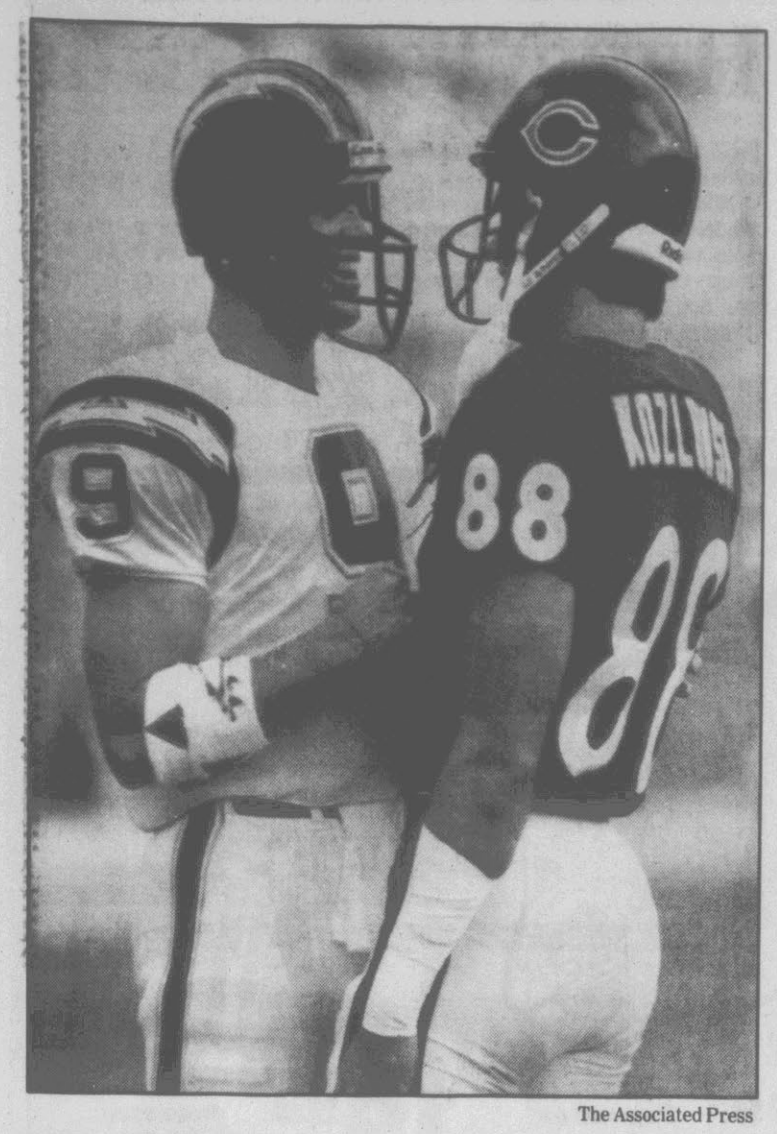
Chargers Roll Past Bears, 24-7



The Associated Press

Jim McMahon talks with former teammate Glen Kozlowski

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Rookie quarterback Billy Joe Tolliver threw two touchdown passes and rookie Elliot Smith returned an interception 49 yards for another touchdown Saturday night, leading the San Diego Chargers to a 24-7 victory over the Chicago Bears.

Quarterback Jim McMahon, traded to the Chargers by the Bears Friday, made a cameo appearance to start the second half, with San Diego ahead 3-0. McMahon was in for four plays and completed one of three passes for 10 yards before Tolliver took over.

Midway in the half, Smith intercepted a pass from Mike Tomczak that defelected off the hands of James Thornton. Smith grabbed the ball and went down the left sidelines for the touchdown and a 17-0 lead.

Late in the third period, the Bears were forced to punt and on the first play from scrimmage, Tolliver unloaded a 70-yard touchdown pass to Jamie Holland, who caught the ball at the 24 and went into the end zone untouched.

Tolliver, playing the entire second half except for McMahon's brief appearance, completed four of 10 passes for 125 yards and the two touchdowns.

David Archer played the first half for the Chargers and completed five of 10 passes for 74 yards. A 22-yard pass by Archer to Miller set up a 38-yard field goal by Steve DeLine for the only score in the first half.

Jim Harbaugh started for the Bears and nine of 13 passes for 84 yards but he was sacked three times and fumbled once.

Mike Tomczak started the second half for the Bears and was 2-for-9 for 32 yards. Rookie Brent Snyder also saw action for the Bears and directed a fourth quarter drive to the San Diego 1-yard line but the Bears failed to score when Jeff Jackson nailed Bryan Taylor on fourth down and goal.

Colts 24 Packers 23

George Wonsley ran three yards for a touchdown with 26 seconds remaining Saturday as the Indianapolis Colts drove 61 yards in less than a minute to beat the Green Bay Packers 24-23 in an NFL exhibition game.

The Packers, down 17-6 at the half, rallied for a 23-17 lead when Jeff Query took a low pass from quarterback Don Majkowski and ran 49 yards for a touchdown with 1:34 to go.

After an offside penalty against Green Bay on the kickoff, the Colts started their drive on their own 39 with 1:22 left.

The big play was a 31-yard pass from Jack Trudeau to Andre Rison that carried to the Packers' 12-yard line. A six-yard run by Albert Bentley and a facemask penalty against the Packers put the ball on the 3. Wonsley scored two plays later.

Bills 10, Saints 7

Charlie Baumann, replacing injured Pro Bowl kicker Scott Norwood, kicked a 32-yard field goal following an interception of a tipped pass as the Buffalo Bills took a 10-7 victory over the New Orleans Saints Saturday night in a preseason game.

The winning field goal by Baumann came late in the third quarter after linebacker Tom Doctor intercepted a pass from John Fourcade that was tipped at the line of scrimmage by Norwood Vann.

Doctor's interception and 6-yard return gave the Bills the ball on the New Orleans 35. Reserve quarterback Stan Gelbaugh moved Buffalo to the Saints 14 before Baumann kicked the decisive field goal with 50 seconds left in the quarter.

It was the first preseason victory for the Bills in three tries, while the Saint dropped to 0-2.

Bucs 27, Falcons 0

Rookie Kermit Kendrick returned an interception 22 yards for a touchdown, sparking a defense that allowed only 134 yards as the Tampa Bay Buccaneers shut out Atlanta 27-0 Saturday night for their second straight preseason win.

The Falcons (0-2) managed only 62 yards rushing and 72 passing.

The Falcons managed only one first down in the first quarter and none in the third quarter. Atlanta had possession of the ball for less than 20 minutes.

Blue Jays Inch Closer To Baltimore

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Jimmy Key returned from the disabled list and held Baltimore to four hits in seven innings Saturday night as the Toronto Blue Jays beat the faltering Orioles 5-1 and left the top three teams in the American League East separated by just one-half game.

Key, 8-13, who suffered from an inflammation of the left rotator cuff, had lost his last six starts and seven consecutive decisions prior to going on the disabled list Aug. 8. It was his first victory since June 21.

Toronto and Milwaukee, which lost to Boston 3-1, are one-half game behind Baltimore but the Blue Jays slipped past the Brewers into second place by .0001.

Loser Bob Milacki, 7-11, held Toronto to one hit over the first seven innings but that was Ernie's Whitt doubled which keyed a two-run fifth inning.

The first two batters Key faced produced a run when Phil Bradley led off with a double and scored on a single by Mike Devereaux.

Milacki, who retired the first 12 Toronto batters, walked Fred McGriff to start the fifth and he scored the tying run on Whitt's double. Whitt went to third on Tony Fernandez's grounder and scored the go-ahead run on Lee Mazzilli's sacrifice fly.

Athletics 5, Twins 4

Carney Lansford hit a run-scoring single with one out in the 10th inning as the Oakland Athletics rallied from a four-run deficit to beat the Minnesota Twins 5-4 on Saturday.

Walt Weiss reached second with one out in the 10th when right fielder Randy Bush dropped a shallow fly ball for an error. After Gary Wayne, 3-4, intentionally walked Rickey Henderson, Jeff Reardon relieved and Lansford followed with a single to center field to extend his hitting streak to 15 games. It was Lansford's 1,000th hit as a member of the A's.

Storm Davis, 14-5, won his fifth straight decision and seventh of his last eight. Davis allowed eight hits in 10 innings, his longest career outing. It was the first time he pitched nine innings since Aug. 14, 1986.

The A's fell behind 4-0 after four innings but Mark McGwire, Rickey Henderson and Dave Parker hit solo homers.

McGwire's 22nd homer was his first ever against Minnesota in 84 career at-bats. He has now homered against every AL team.

Red Sox 3, Brewers 1

Ellis Burks' two-run single with the bases loaded and one out in the 14th inning Saturday gave the Boston Red Sox a 3-1 victory over Milwaukee, snapping the Brewers' eight-game winning streak.

The Red Sox, who broke a six-game losing streak, loaded the bases against Mark Knudson, 4-4, on a walk to Luis Rivera, a single by Wade Boggs and a bunt single by Marty Barrett. Burks then lined a 1-2 pitch to center field to put the Red Sox ahead.

Reliever Greg Harris, 1-1, held the Brewers to one hit over four innings for the victory.

The Red Sox loaded the bases with none out in the 11th against Dan Plesac, but Rivera hit a shallow fly ball and Ed Romine hit into a double play.

Boston's Mike Boddicker carried a two-hitter and a 1-0 lead into the eighth inning when Greg Brock led off with his ninth home run.

Boddicker pitched 10 innings and allowed three hits. It was only the third time in Boddicker's career he has pitched into the 10th inning.

Boston's Mike Greenwell extended his hitting streak to 20 games with a double in the sixth. His streak is the longest in the American League this season.

Tigers 5, Yankees 4

Gary Pettis hit a two-run single off the glove of second baseman Steve Sax with two out in the eighth inning to give the Detroit Tigers a 5-4 victory over New York on Saturday night and hand Bucky Dent his second straight defeat as the Yankees' new manager.

Detroit's Jack Morris, 3-10, snapped a personal four-game losing streak and won for the first time since May 12, allowing eight hits in pitching his sixth complete game. Morris came off the disabled list July 26.

Meyer Challenge Draws Top Players

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PORTLAND, Ore. — Three of golf's biggest winners of 1989 are among the entrants in the Fred Meyer Challenge, a three-day golf extravaganza that begins with pro-am competition Sunday.

PGA champion Payne Stewart, U.S. Open winner Curtis Strange and British Open champ Mark Calcavecchia are among the 24 golfers in the field on the par-72, 6,612-yard Portland Golf Club course.

The top four money winners on the PGA Tour are in the event, led by Stewart, who has earned $755,292. Tom Kite is No. 2 on the money list, followed by Strange and Calcavecchia. In all, seven of 1989's top 10 money winners are entered.

The winners split $100,000. The last place team divides $50,000.

Bob Hope, Huey Lewis and Bruce Hornsby are among the celebrities scheduled to participate in the pro-am. The 36-hole tournament itself is set for Monday and Tuesday.

There is a noticeable change in the advertising for this year's event.

In the past, promoters had emphasized that charities were the big benefactors of the event, which has mushroomed in popularity since it first was held four years ago.

But alleged financial improprieties by Mike Stoll, who helped found the tournament and promoted it until last December, and reports that tournament host Peter Jacobsen stands to make a big profit from the event have altered the advertising plans this year.

Details of the tournament's finances were reported in lengthy investigative articles earlier this year in The Oregonian newspaper.

Observers are hard-pressed to find any mention of charities in promotions for this year's tournament, even though much of the proceeds still go to charitable causes.

"That was the stand that Peter and Ed (Ellis, the tournament's director) decided to take," said Bill Johnson, the tournament's director of communications. "After the stories in The Oregonian and after what Mike Stoll did, they decided 'Let's downplay the charity.'"

Jacobsen, the touring professional who has served as the Fred Meyer Challenge's host since the tournament began, purchased control of the event from Stoll last December, citing philosophical differences.

A short time later, The Oregonian reported — and tournament organizers later confirmed — that Stoll was responsible for financial irregularities, including questionable payments to him and his companies and underpayments to children's charities.

Fred Meyer, the Portland-based retail chain, agreed not to seek civil or criminal penalties against Stoll in return for his agreement to give up the tournament contract, deposit $500,000 in a trust account and place more than $1 million in escrow pending a final accounting of money owed.

Jacobsen, at a tearful news conference May 25, said he was sorry if people were misled to believe the tournament was not a money-making operation. He also promised he would not make more money from the event than would be distributed to charities.

Kelly...

"You don't find many athletes as good as him playing a down position. He was the co-most valuable player in the spring and plays defense the way you like it to be played — he gives you all he's got on every snap.

"I look to Joe and Mike to be our leaders in the line," Kelly added.

Gardill is listed as the starting nose guard, but will be pressured by Mark Washington (6-2, 239, So.). "Greg came out of spring at number one, but Mark, who moved from linebacker, is pushing him. Greg's biggest asset is his strength. He's an overachiever. Mark is a good athlete and one of the top three or four in strength on the team, but he's still a question mark."

Naturally, whichever one finishes up as the starter will be backed up by the other.

The first tackle off the bench should be Reeves Spainhour (6-4, 225, Jr.), who walked on and sat out a year after transferring from Western Carolina. "He's a very good pass rusher. He bulked up over the summer and is a good athlete," Kelly said.

Shane Hubble (6-4, 240, So.) is another backup tackle. "I think he started something like seven games (actually three) as a freshman. But he has a lot of experience and that should help us."

Freshmen who could wind up helping — if not redshirted — could be Ike Pullett (6-4, 230, moved from tight end), Ken Crawford (6-6, 240), Tommy Coleman (6-3, 260) and Chris Patterson (6-5, 240) at tackles and Derrick Taylor (6-1, 240) and Troy Sealy (6-0, 210) at nose guard.

"These are all blue-collar kids," Kelly said. "They come to work, punch the clock, do everything we ask of them. You can't love'em enough. They are a close-knit group among themselves and between coaches and players. I'm very proud of them.

"I just wish I had five more like'em. But that's coming. We had a good recruiting year this year, and we'll have another this year, too."

Clemson...

remember who it was," Hendry said. "It was not (head coach) Danny Ford. They just asked me what was going on down here. I just told them all this stuff had broken about Clemson and that people were calling me."

Hendry said his suspicions about possible recruiting irregularities heightened when Carr came home last Christmas driving a 1988 Toyota Supra, which listed new for more than $20,000.

Carr would not talk about the car or how it was paid for, the New Orleans newspaper reported, but said it was a 1986 Toyota Supra.

Hendry said Carr told him Friday that the automobile had been given to Carr by his brother, Chuck Carr Brown, a chemical engineer in Baton Rouge, La., according to the report.

"I asked him why he wasn't driving the car now," Hendry said. "He said Chuck got married and had to have the car back."

Athletic Director Bobby Robinson said Friday the school had not been contacted by the NCAA regarding the investigation. He said Clemson is "moving as quickly and diligently as possible" in its internal investigation.

Pirates...

Also, freshman offensive lineman Chris Patterson has decided to give up college football and return home to Marietta, Ga.

"We'll do everything we can as a football team to handle this form of adversity," Lewis added. "Our players will have to pull together but this will also provide other players with a great opportunity to see action."

Confidence Boost

Vikings, Chargers, Panthers Rule In Final Preseason Tests

FROM STAFF REPORTS

D.H. Conley, North Pitt and Ayden-Grifton all got a boost of confidence by ruling their final preseason scrimmages Friday night. The Vikings and Panthers came away with a two-touchdown edge while Ayden-Grifton manhandled Camp Lejeune.

Conley and Ayden-Grifton were in their second scrimmages. North Pitt only had one preseason tilt scheduled.

Conley-Northside

WINTERVILLE — A respectable turnout — most of which were Northside supporters — got a preview of Conley's quick-strike arsenal as the host Vikings came away with a 4-2 advantage in touchdowns in their final preseason scrimmage.

Conley scored on its first play from scrimmage after recovering a fumble and quarterback Scott Seymour directed three scoring drives with two culminating in touchdown passes.

Seymour connected on 7-of-11 tosses for 184 yards. He flipped eight yards to tight end Martin Patrick in the opening half and hooked up with fleet receiver Junior Farrow for 71-yard score in the second half.

Farrow was a weapon on both sides of the ball, hauling four passes for 150 yards and one touchdown. He also thwarted a Northside scoring threat with an interception at the goalline which he returned 73 yards.

Also on display were the Vikings' "flashbacks," a group of diminutive backs with slick, elusive moves. Sophomore Anthony Barrett (5-11, 165), junior Kenny Haddock (5-9, 150), junior Stuart Roach (5-8, 140), junior Wayne McCullough, (5-10, 160) and junior Mike Clark (5-7, 150) all saw time at tailback.

Powerful fullback Terry Williams rambled 40 yards for the Vikings' first touchdown. Seymour's two-yard sneak capped the scoring.

"We did some good things and we did some bad things," Conley coach Steve Craft said. "We've been working on our schemes for three weeks and it's new to a lot of them.

"Overall I'm pleased. We got a couple of guys banged up we've got to have by next week."

Center Al Andrews (bruised knee) and Barrett (bruised shoulder) were sidelined with minor injuries. The Vikings open with perennial 2-A power Clayton Friday night at home.

Northside, a new school formed by the consolidation of Bath and Belhaven, used a pair of big plays to come up with its scores. A 53-yard pass set up an eight-yard run early in the first half while a 62-yard yard bolt accounted for a second-half TD.

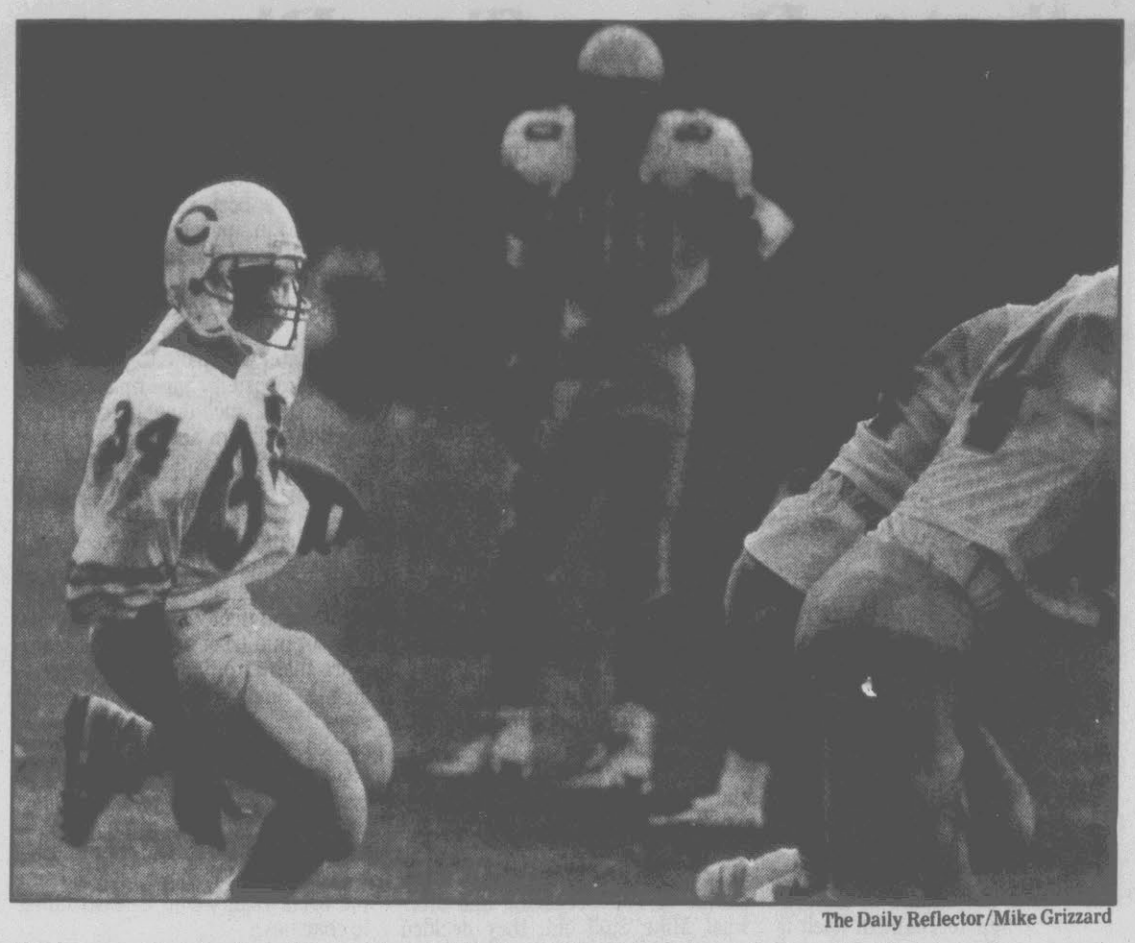
Conley forced five Northside turnovers — three fumbles and two interceptions. The Vikings lost one of two fumbles and had one pass picked off.

"I was pleased with our aggressiveness on defense," Craft said. "I was pleased with the way our little backs ran hard and I was definitely pleased with the throwing game.

"But we missed a lot of blocking assignments. We came here and were going to play straight-up and they starting stunting so we started stunting. It went hog-wild crazy and we had a good time."

Three missed opportunities inside the Northside 20 was one concern of Craft. The Vikings had a first down at the one but failed to score after a seven-yard loss; had a pass intercepted inside the 10 and fumbled on a blind-side hit inside the 15.

"We've got to get hungry when we get down there," Craft said. "We get down there and it seems like we relaxed. We had it three or four times down there and didn't score."



The Daily Reflector/Mike Grizzard

North Pitt-Plymouth

PLYMOUTH — Host Plymouth put North Pitt's secondary to the test and the Panthers responded with seven interceptions en route to a 4-2 edge in scoring.

Dante Short spearheaded the defense with three thefts, one of which he returned for a touchdown. Reggie Daniels came up with two interceptions while Marcus Purvis and Al Roberson turned in solid play.

"I thought we did a good job in the secondary," North Pitt coach Stuart Ennis. "They came out in a one-back set."

Ennis was not pleased, however with his team's tackling.

"We have to do a better job of tackling," Ennis said. "We missed a lot of tackles from a failure to wrap up. We had trouble finding the football and we over-pursued a lot.

"I like to think our defense is aggressive but there's a fine line there where you can be too aggressive."

The scrimmage was divided into two halves. Each team ran three series of 10 plays the first half and a game-situation format was used the second half.

Offensively, Ennis cited the running of Malcolm Wiggins and Daniels but pointed to the quarterback position as a concern.

"Malcolm Wiggins and Reggie Daniels ran the ball very hard," Ennis said. "We had some major mistakes at quarterback."

Overall, Ennis said the scrimmage was productive. Final preparations now begin for the season-opener Friday at West Craven.

Ayden-Grifton-Lejeune

AYDEN — Scott Cannon rambled 70 yards up the middle on Ayden-Grifton's first play from scrimmage and the Chargers went on for a 6-1 advantage over visiting Camp Lejeune.

Senior Jay Tripp, who is hampered by a sprained wrist, and freshman Carl Artis split time at quarterback. Artis ran for one touchdown and threw for another.

"I thought we had a good scrimmage," defensive coordinator and line coach Stancill Hines said. "We put together a couple of drives and moved the ball up and down the field. They were kind of weak."

Noseguard John Phillips keyed the defensive effort.

Hines said marked improvement was shown in the line — an area of great concern due to inexperience.

ECU Continues Two-A-Days

For the fifth time this preseas coach Bill Lewis sent his Ea Carolina University football tea through two-a-day practices Satu day.

The intensity and enthusias levels were turned up as the tea continued to work in pads.

"We finished five days and I hav seen some progress," Lewis sai "The condition of the players repo ting has allowed us to get on th schedule that we wanted to.

"We are in the prime phase o two-a-days and it is tough to main tain that enthusiasm but we have t keep doing it."

Lewis gave his troops Sunday morning off with an afternoon prac tice in pads scheduled for 3 p.m.

"We're just now scratching the surface of where we want to be," Lewis said. " We've got things going in the right direction but we have a tremendous way to go."

The Pirates open the 1989 season against Bowling Green Sept. 9 in Ficklen Stadium.

Carolinas Gets Taste Of NFL When Jets Meet Eagles Tonight

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Going into Sunday's exhibition game between the Philadelphia Eagles and the New York Jets, promoters say they have only a handful of unsold tickets — and they hope NFL owners and officials take notice.

The Jets and the Eagles meet before a national audience on ESPN, but Jerry Richardson will be pointing out the crowd inside Carter-Finley Stadium.

The Spartanburg, S.C., businessman is trying to convince the NFL to bring another professional sports franchise to the same area that has taken the NBA Charlotte Hornets to heart.

"One general manager told me he wants to get all the tickets sold for this game because the Carolinas are suddenly a real presence to those people on the club executive level," said Mike McCormack, the former general manager of the Seattle Seahawks and a consultant to a Richardson Sports Group. "'People are talking about what you guys are doing down there,' he told me."

Three weeks ago, hopes were on shaky ground. Officials said there were about 15,000 tickets left and they were stepping up their media campaign to draw hesitant fans.

The strategy apparently worked. Late Friday, a handful of tickets remained of the 45,000 permanent seats in the stadium that is home to North Carolina State. That raises speculation that the crowd could reach 50,000, which to Richardson is a magic figure.

"This is a powerful, untapped area for pro football," McCormack said.

"Jerry showed me a study that put the population figure at 10.1 million within a 150-mile radius of Charlotte. The success of the Charlotte Hornets gives credibility to those numbers."

Although the game is being played in Raleigh, the team that Richardson wants would be located somewhere in the Charlotte area. But it's expected that people from the Raleigh area would drive the other way to see the NFL in the regular season.

NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle is talking about the Carolinas, and the impact a big crowd would have on league owners.

"I think that would have a great impact on the thinking of the NFL owners," Rozelle said. "You talk about 9 million people within a couple hundred miles radius. That's a tremendous market to draw from for games and also for television."

Down on the field, North Carolina fans will get to see more of Eagles' quarterback Randall Cunningham than those in London.

Cunningham said he is scheduled to play the first half of the game Sunday night after playing the first quarter of a 17-13 victory over Cleveland in London two weeks earlier and a 23-17 home victory over Atlanta last Saturday.

"I'm looking forward to getting in a little extra work," Cunningham said. "The closer we get to the start of the season, the more playing time I can get is bound to help."

Cunningham, the MVP of the 1989 Pro Bowl after leading the Eagles to the NFC East title and their first playoff berth since 1981, completed both passes he threw against Atlanta, one for a 17-yard TD to tight end Keith Jackson.

Coach Buddy Ryan, experimenting with letting Cunningham call his own plays in preseason, also has been giving the bulk of the quarterback playing time to second-year player Don McPherson, who's thrown three touchdown passes in preseason.

One player they won't see is wide receiver Mike Quick, who played his college ball at N.C. State and is a North Carolina native. Despite efforts to settle his contract dispute, Quick and defensive end Reggie White remain unsigned.

The Best Have Bowed To Ryan

By Ben Walker
AP BASEBALL WRITER

"Skinny, right-handed junior. Has the best arm I've seen in my life. Could be a real power pitcher someday."

— Scout Red Murff's report on Nolan Ryan, 1964.

Boy, was Red right!

Nobody like Nolan. Not then, not now, not ever.

Still strong at age 42, still grunting on every pitch. Five no-hitters, 11 one-hitters, 287 wins.

And the strikeouts. Almost 5,000 in all and a victim's list that reads like a who's who of two generations.

Roger Maris. Bo Jackson. Felipe, Matty and Jesus Alou. Dick Schofield Sr. and Dick Schofield Jr.

Seventeen Hall of Famers. Forty-two Most Valuable Players. Ten sets of brothers. Six father-son pairs.

Thirteen guys named Davis and 10 Johnsons. Everyone from A-to-Z except an X — but there's been no major leaguer beginning with X.

A total of 1,061 different people.

The fastest there ever was. A radar gun once got him at 101.8 mph. That was in the seventh inning. Others swear his heat was more like 105.

Once, Norm Cash walked up to the plate carrying a leg from a big, wooden table. He told the umpire he had no chance with a bat.

•Hank Aaron struck out four times against Ryan: "You could hear his ball hiss. It didn't sound like anyone else's. Kind of like sssssssssst. I used to tell young hitters, 'You don't need to run up there and hit it. It will get there plenty quick and when it does, you better be ready to swing.'"

•Len Matuszek first faced Ryan in 1982. He had 12 career at-bats against Ryan and struck out seven: "I was a rookie and went up to the plate batting .000. He just stared at me and gave me one of those 'Get-in-there-and-stop-wasting-my-time' looks. I hit a long one that had a chance to be a home run, but it curved foul. I was feeling pretty good about that and then I looked at him. He was glaring at me, and I knew I was in trouble."

•Jim Watson, Ryan's high school coach in Alvin, Texas: "At the start of the games, I used to tell him to throw at batters. Heck, he was wild enough back then that I didn't need to tell him that, probably. By the second inning, he could lob the ball up there and strike out people. They were too busy running out of the batter's box."

•Reggie Jackson struck out 22 times against Ryan: "He was the only pitcher I was ever scared to face."

•Claudell Washington has struck out 36 times, making him Ryan's No. 1 victim. Washington is 13-for-86 (.151) lifetime Ryan: "That's all I have? I thought I had a lot more. I've always had great success against fastballers, guys like Gooden and Clemens. But Ryan's in a different category. All the at-bats I've had against him have been bad."

•Willie Mays was 0-for-3 versus Ryan, but hit the ball each time: "He never got me. I know that. He struck out a lot of people, but not me." A postscript: Ryan started against San Francisco on May 7, 1968, and Mays was hitless. Ryan made three more starts against the Giants in Mays' career, and Mays sat out all three games.

•When Ryan gets No. 5,000, he will have 22 percent more strikeouts than the second-place man, Steve Carlton. It wasn't always that way.

Ryan began the 1984 season trailing Carlton by 60 strikeouts. They spent the summer flip-flopping as baseball's all-time strikeout king, the lead changing on each start.

At the time, Ryan said he thought Carlton would wind up as No. 1 because of Carlton's better mechanics. But on Sept. 5, 1984, Ryan struck out eight against San Francisco and edged ahead of Carlton for good. Ryan finished the 1984 season leading by two (at 3,874) and had 209 in 1985 to Carlton's 48, ending the contest.

Carlton is finally retired and living near a golf course in Clearwater, Fla., his comebacks and fastballs finally exhausted. Ryan, who struck out Carlton eight times, will start Tuesday night for Texas at home against Oakland with 4,994 strikeouts.

•Pete Rose 13. Johnny Bench 7. Joe Morgan 6. Harmon Killebrew 11. Al Kaline 3. Carl Yastrzemski 7. Jim Rice 19. Mike Greenwell 2.

•Bob Feller set a single-season strikeout record of 348 in 1946. Ryan now holds the record of 383 in 1973: "I remember the day I lost my great fastball. I slipped on the mound in Philadelphia in 1947 and never had it again. I still had some more good seasons, but it wasn't the same. All of a sudden you're wondering how to pitch to hitters whose names you never had to know because you could always blow the ball by them. But that hasn't happened to Ryan yet. It will someday, but who knows when?"

in the last 20 years. Now, everybody's cutesy with the breaking stuff. He's never lost that velocity. I've seen a lot of great pitchers come and go, and they all lost their velocity. I have to admire him. He's the last of a vanishing breed."

•Steve Sax faced Ryan in both leagues and fanned on 12 occasions: "There have been times when an umpire called a strike and I told him that the ball sounded low. Really. You can see his fastball, but sometimes it's real hard. Especially in twilight. He isn't like Gooden. Dwight Gooden is tall and gets a lot of leverage and his ball rises. Ryan comes from right behind his ear and the ball just gets there."

•Bobby Bonds 10. Barry Bonds 3. Maury Wills 3. Bump Wills 12. Ken Griffey Sr. 10. Ken Griffey Jr. 2. Tito Francona 4. Terry Francona 2. Sandy Alomar 5. Sandy Alomar Jr. 2.

•From the time Ryan struck out his first batter, pitcher Pat Jarvis on Sept. 11, 1966, there has been a down side.

Too many walks, they said. Didn't win enough, they said. Sometimes, it was the stuff of legends.

In one game in 1974, Ryan threw 240 pitches. He struck out 19 and walked 10 in 13 innings, and got a no-decision. Four days later, he started again and won, pitching six shutout innings and giving up only three hits.

Ryan's 2,442 walks are the most in history. So are his 242 wild pitches. He hit 130 batters (Walter Johnson leads with 206) and has beaned a few.

His 287-260 record is good, not great. Only twice has he been five games above .500 in a season and the lone time he got into a World Series, it was because of the Mets' other pitchers in 1969.

When he was in his 20s, Ryan averaged 9.7 strikeouts and 5.49 walks per nine innings. In his 30s, it was 9.05 strikeouts and 4.49 walks. Now in his 40s, with a perfected curveball and a polished changeup, his numbers are his best ever: up to 10.64 strikeouts and down to 3.65 walks per game.

This season, he's averaging 11.24 strikeouts and 3.69 walks. Opponents are batting only .183 against him, best in the majors.

Plus, just imagine how many more batters Ryan would've struck out without facing designated hitters.

Still, he has never won a Cy Young Award. Maybe this year. And if not, maybe he should just get one as Pitcher Emeritus.

A few years ago, there used to be a big debate about whether Ryan was a Hall of Famer. These days, well, is there any doubt?

•Tony Gwynn 9. Chris Gwynn 1. Cal Ripken 2. Billy Ripken 3. George Brett 14. Ken Brett 1. Graig Nettles 22. Jim Nettles 7. Felipe Alou 1. Jesus Alou 1. Matty Alou 5.

•Jim Watson, the high school coach: "The first time I saw Nolan, he was 16 and trying out as a sophomore. I'd heard a lot about him from summer leagues so I wanted to be the first one to take batting practice against him. I told him to get out on the mound and show me his stuff. One of the first pitches he threw came right at my head. It was faster than anything I'd ever seen. I got my head out of the way, but it got me in the back. I used to have this rule on my team that if anyone got hit by a pitch, they weren't allowed to rub it because it looked like you were weak. I could tell everyone was watching to see what I'd do. I didn't rub it, but boy was that a dumb rule. I can still feel where it hit me."

•Hank Aaron: "I hit home runs in the first two games of the 1969 playoffs against the Mets and the third game started in twilight. I hit another home run and then they brought in Ryan to relieve. His first pitch almost hit me in the head. I know he threw at me. I was lying there on the ground and I couldn't believe it. I thought he was going to kill someone out there, and it wasn't going to be me."

•Jeff Torborg is now manager of the Chicago White Sox. He caught Ryan with the Angels: "On May 15 in 1973, I caught his no-hitter at Kansas City. Two months to the day, July 15, he pitched another no-hitter and I might have caught that one, too, but I had a broken finger and Art Kusyner caught it. Art hadn't worked with him so Nolan called all of his own pitches. Later in the year when I came back he was 14-16. So I told him 'Let's try something. You give me the signs.' He gave me the signs and I relayed them back to the infielders. He won his last seven games and finished at 21-16."

•Dale Murphy has struck out 23 times against Ryan: "I'm sure I've done my part to help him make 5,000. You can be in a good hitting groove, but when you know you've got to face Ryan, you can figure your string is over."

•Juan Marichal 1. Bob Gibson 1. Don Drysdale 1. Orel Hershiser 1. Jim Bunning 1. Jim Palmer 1. Vida Blue 1.

•In Alvin, Texas, there aren't any big banners or shiny signs that say a legend was born there. The high school field is named for Nolan Ryan, but that's about it.

Ryan likes it that way. In an age of overpaid and over-pampered athletes, he is the real thing. He has remained true to his lifelong fans and his humility is as amazing as his accomplishments. He speaks with a quiet confidence, never a boastful brag.

He does not consider himself a hometown hero. When he comes back in the off-season, there are no parades and nothing special.

Those who know him say Ryan is no different now than he was back then. Even when he went 21-2 as a high school senior — helped by a shift that always kept three players on the right side of the infield against right-handed hitters — he still woke up at 3 a.m. to help his dad roll up newspapers for morning delivery.

•Ruth LaBarbera is the aunt of Ryan's wife: "The first time I met him, he was dating my niece. They were high school sweethearts. He was a very skinny, very good kid. He was very shy and polite and didn't say much. He sure didn't look very athletic."

•Nyta Lutz was in Ryan's high school graduating class of 167. She had dinner with the Ryans last week, a few hours after Nolan lost his bid in the ninth inning for a sixth no-hitter: "He wasn't upset or anything. He was just glad the Rangers won the game. He is just a typical Alvin boy, really. When he's home, he spends a lot of time doing things for people in the area."

•Red Murff, the scout who signed Ryan after high school as the Mets' eighth-round draft pick in 1965: "A few years ago, a bunch of us were going to meet Nolan at the Astrodome to go dove hunting. Nolan likes to hunt and is good at it, but picks his shots carefully. Anyway, we meet Nolan after the game and we're all getting antsy to get going. We're in the parking lot away from the fans, and all the other Astro players are getting into their cars and driving off, with their windows rolled up. Nolan says, 'Hold on for a minute, I've got something to do.' He walks out and starts signing autographs for the kids. We wait there about 15 minutes, and then he tells us to go on. We know how much he wants to go hunting, but he didn't join us for another two hours."

•Roger Clemens grew up in Texas idolizing Ryan: "I met him in 1980 at the Astrodome. I was in high school and in awe of him. He looked me in the eye and made me feel real comfortable talking to him. I really didn't do much of the talking. I mostly listened. I remember thinking, 'Boy, he really is a nice guy.'"

All other team members were presented personalized trophies.

Koncak Signs Offer Sheet With Pistons

DETROIT (AP) — The Detroit Pistons signed Atlanta Hawks power forward Jon Koncak to an offer sheet on Friday that could quadruple his salary.

Because Koncak is a restricted free agent, the Hawks have 15 days to match the Pistons' offer, which published reports put at $2.5 million for one year. Detroit spokesman Matt Dobek refused to disclose terms of the offer sheet. Koncak made $675,000 last season.

The Pistons have been seeking a power forward since Minnesota took Rick Mahorn in the NBA expansion draft.

Hawks' president Stan Kasten said earlier that he has been negotiating with Koncak's agent, Steve Kauffman.

The 7-foot Koncak, drafted in 1985 out of SMU, originally signed a four-year deal worth $2.7 million.

Last season, he averaged 4.7 points, 6.1 rebounds and shot 52 percent from the field. But in the last 16 regular-season games, he shot 69 percent, registered double figures in rebounding seven times, blocked 36 shots, and was instrumental in the club's 13-3 finish.

Dykes Inks Four-Year Pact

SMITHFIELD, R.I. (AP) — Wide receiver Hart Lee Dykes, the first-round draft choice of the New England Patriots, agreed to a four-year contract Saturday.

Dykes, a college star at Oklahoma State, was the 16th player and first wide receiver taken in this year's draft.

Last year, Dykes was fourth in the nation with 74 reception and scored 14 touchdowns. He holds the Oklahoma State career records with 224 catches, 3,510 receiving yards and 31 touchdowns.

Dykes, a 6-foot 4-inch, 218-pounder, also holds career records for receptions and receiving yards in the Big Eight Conference. In 1986, as a sophomore, he had 60 catches and in 1987, as a junior he had 61.

Dykes' negotiations reportedly were slowed by disagreement over how a signing bonus would be paid. Dykes wanted the bonus paid this season while the Patriots wanted to spread it out over the life of the contract.

Topps Cashes In On Collection Fever

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — What would you swap for a 1953 Mickey Mantle original? The Marriott Corp. paid $110,000 for one Saturday as the Topps Company emptied its archives and put 35 years worth of rare cards, proofs and pictures on the auction block.

"Collection fever is at an all-time high. There was tremendous stuff in our files which had never been seen," said Topps spokesman Norman Liss, explaining the company's decision to conduct the auction.

The No. 1-priced lot involved No. 7 in Yankee pinstripes — an original 1953 painting of Mantle used to create his cards for that season. The Marriott Corp. had a winning bid of $110,000, Liss said.

The artwork for Willie Mays from that year went for $80,000, also to Marriott, while the Jackie Robinson painting brought $71,000 from an unidentified bidder.

"What we really wanted was Mantle and Mays together. Our must-buys were Mantle and Mays," said Roger Conner of Marriott. The hotel chain intends to tour the artwork around the country for a year, then resell them and donate the proceeds to charity, he said.

Paintings of Whitey Ford ($32,000), Bob Feller ($30,000) and Roy Campanella ($15,000) were sold to the Rarities Group of Marlboro, Mass., a diversified collectibles company. Liss said 1953 was the only year Topps used portraits instead of photos for its cards.

"I really wanted to buy them all, but we wound up as underbidder on a lot of them. It's tough to bid against Marriott," said John Rue, Rarities' sports memorabilia buyer.

He did take home a nice consolation price: an autographed Mickey Mantle jersey presented to the Yankees star when his number was retired. The price: $30,000.

The two-day sale marks the 51st anniversary of Topps, the Brooklyn company that helped make the bubble-gum card an American institution. The auction will clear about 75 percent of the company's archival holdings and collect an estimated $1 million.

Other unique lots include original artwork and pictures used to create the cards; uncut sheets of baseball cards containing 60 to 120 cards; and several collector's item cards with wrong team or player names.

Yankees owner George Steinbrenner is responsible for several of the collector's items. Unreleased Yankee team cards with managers Billy Martin (1980) and Dick Howser (1981) were up for bid; both managers were driven from the dugout by the Boss before the season started.

In addition, there is correspondence between Topps and recent Hall of Fame inductees Johnny Bench and Carl Yastrzemski about their cards as well as Topps card contracts signed by Willie Mays and Mantle.

"This is not an auction of baseball cards, but rather a landmark auction offering one-of-a-kind items," promised a release from Guernsey's, which handled the auction. "The Topps collection must rank as one of the most fascinating and unusual sales of all times."

The buyers agreed. Strips of 60 cards went for anywhere from $250 to $2,750 in bidding among an unusual auction crowd which opted for T-shirts and baseball caps rather than suits or ties. Several in the crowd munched hot dogs during the bidding, which was done in a Manhattan gym.

"This is my first one of these," said Dom Fallucci of Manhattan, a card collector who was stunned by the quickly escalating prices.

"I bid on one card, and then it went to $500, then $600. I put my hand back in my pocket," said Fallucci. He left the auction with "the donut hole — zero. I got a bagel and coffee down the street, that's it."

In addition to putting up one-of-a-kind items for bid, the auction will also benefit The Children's Museum of New York, the Special Olympics and the Baseball Alumni Team. Topps has agreed to donate a portion of its earnings to the three charities.

Hudson Injured In Wreck

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SOUTHFIELD, Mich. — Pitcher Charles Hudson of the Detroit Tigers was in serious but stable condition Saturday after breaking his leg and ankle in an auto accident.

Farmington Hills police Lt. Martin Bledsoe said cause of the accident was uncertain.

"Hudson was traveling on Northwestern Highway just north of Inkster Road shortly after 2 a.m. when he passed a car with several witnesses, lost control of his car and hit a telephone pole," Bledsoe said.

Bledsoe said Hudson was alone in his car.

The six-year veteran joined the Tigers in a March 15 trade with the New York Yankees. A relief and sometimes starting pitcher, Hudson has a record of 1-5 in 18 games with an ERA of 6.35.

Cowboys Looking Deal For Pelleur

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. — San Diego's acquisition of quarterback Jim McMahon from the Chicago Bears on Friday left the Dallas Cowboys still shopping holdout Steve Pelluer.

The Chargers were unwilling to meet the Cowboys' price of a high draft pick plus a starting defensive lineman for Pelluer, Dallas' starter last season, Cowboys officials said.

Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson said Friday that the Cowboys expect interest in Pelluer to rise as the exhibition season continues.

"We've had people in the league, people who we respect, advise us to wait," Johnson said. "We've said all along that our priority is a draft pick, which we would not get until next year anyway, so we can afford to wait.

"It's wide-open. Whoever wants to trade for him can come to us."

For Pelluer, the Cowboys want a second-round pick that would escalate to a No. 1 depending on Pelluer's contribution to his new team, plus defensive help.

"Maybe we're asking too much, but I don't think so," said Bob Ackles, Cowboys' director of player personnel. Ackles said he does not anticipate any trade talk over the weekend while teams are involved with exhibition games.

"It will be Monday at the earliest," Ackles said.

Richmond Co., Garner Among 4-A Favorites

By Dave Droschak
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The first realignment of North Carolina high schools in four years didn't bring about as many major changes as a prior adjustment of class populations, but several prep football teams with winning traditions will head to different classifications.

Kannapolis Brown, one of the state's 4-A powers, will now play in the 3-A South Piedmont Conference and should contend for this year's state championship with new coach Bruce Hardin, who led West Charlotte to the 4-A title game two of the past three seasons.

While Brown will be playing down a classification, Burlington Williams heads from 3-A to 4-A. The Bulldogs, winners of three 3-A crowns in the 1980s, should be competitive but not overpowering in the Metro Conference.

The 2-A classification will be losing two of its better teams and gaining one from the 3-A ranks. Lexington, which won titles in 1985 and 1986, will compete in 3-A this season, along with Hertford County, which lost 13-10 to Thomasville in last year's 2-A title contest. Meanwhile, Forest Hills has returned to the lower classification after losing in the 3-A title game in 1985.

The key change in 1-A won't happen until next season. That's when Murphy, winners of the state title in 1986 and 1987, will be ineligible to compete in the North Carolina High School Athletic Association playoffs, provided that they advance to postseason play this season. During realignment the Bulldogs were grouped with the 2-A schools, but opted to remain in 1-A because of their proximity to other schools in the mountains. Murphy will be eligible for the playoffs only if they did not qualify in the previous season.

Meanwhile, many prep experts across the state feel last year's title winners — Richmond County in 4-A, Burlington Cummings in 3-A, Thomasville in 2-A and Swain County in 1-A — all have potential as repeaters.

Richmond's Raiders Loaded Again

Richmond County, 15-0 last season, return some of the state's best athletes. Mike Thomas, The Associated Press all-state punter last season with a 43-yard average, is also one of the nation's top quarterback prospects. Thomas, a 6-foot-3, 210-pounder, completed 58 of 111 passes in his junior season for 1,507 yards and 13 touchdowns. As a rusher, Thomas had 737 yards and 13 touchdowns.

"He's so big physical ... he can take the punishment," said Richmond County coach Daryl Barnes. "He's as punishing physically as any fullback or tailback I've seen. And he has the best throwing arm I've ever coached. He has a cannon."

Thomas can look to 6-5, 220-pound tight end Oscar Sturgis as his top receiver. The football-basketball star caught 28 passes last season for 673 yards and is considered by scouts as one of the best tight ends along the East Coast.

"What we have with Oscar is a basketball-type player with a football body," Barnes said. "He's what you look for in a tight end."

However, the defending champions lost eight starters on defense.

"We have got some kids that can play (on defense) but they just haven't had the experience against the top dogs," Barnes said.

Garner, 11-1 last season after capturing the state 4-A title in 1987, appears ready to challenge for the crown again. Some experts are calling the Trojans' talent "awesome." The 1987 team rolled to a 15-0 mark with mostly sophomores, meaning this year's squad is a veteran group.

Chris Dorman and John Leach will lead Garner's backfield, while 6-4, 230-pound defensive lineman Chris Thompson is considered one of the state's best.

Charlotte has placed teams in the 4-A finals the past three years and at least four area teams appear ready to challenge for honors again. Those include Charlotte Independence, Charlotte Harding, South Mecklenburg and West Charlotte.

The best 4-A team in the western part of the state appears to be Asheville Reynolds, 12-1 last season. The Rockets are led by linebacker William Collins and running back Scott Melton. The senior rushed for 1,323 yards last season and 28 TDs. Melton also passed for 639 yards and 10 scores.

The competitive Mid-South Conference in Fayetteville will have five new head coaches. The best of the group appears to be Fayetteville 71st, a team that returns seven offensive starters, including 1,000-yard rusher Marc Bronson. The Falcons' defense will be keyed by all-state junior defensive back Clay Morning.

The conference also may have the state's top runner in Fayetteville Smith's Sebastian Small. The all-state tailback rushed for 1,998 yards and 27 TDs last season and is rated one of the nation's best at his position.

Other 4-A teams expected to field solid rosters include Elizabeth City Northeastern, Raleigh Millbrook, Northern Durham, Greensboro Page, Greensboro Smith, Wilmington Hoggard, Northern Nash, Greenville Rose, Jacksonville and Rocky Mount.

Shelby, Cummings Tops In 3-A

Defending 3-A champion Burlington Cummings, 15-0 last season, must replace AP player of the year Chuckie Burnette at quarterback and all-state wideout Ray Griffis. But Coach David Gutshall says he may have a better signal caller this year.

"I wouldn't trade my quarterback for anyone in the state," Gutshall said of Donnie Davis.

Cummings lost 16 starters off last year's team, but Gutshall says he's optimistic.

"We have a lot of holes but we also have a lot of tradition," he said. "You never know how much that will carry you."

Shelby, losers to Cummings last season after two straight 3-A crowns, has 13 starters back.

Others to watch in 3-A include Bertie, Burns, Brevard, Canton Pisgah, Hertford County, Kannapolis Brown, Lincolnton, Statesville, West Caldwell, Washington and Henderson.

Feaster Leads Thomasville

Thomasville's hopes of reaching the 2-A title game for the third year in a row are in the hands — or should we say legs — of running back Rashein Feaster. The junior speedster rushed for more than 1,100 yards during the regular season last year.

A trio from the Southern District 7 Conference should also field contenders. Newton-Conover appears to be the strongest, however, sporting a pair of 6-4, 290-pound linemen in brothers Heath and Scott Woods. Maiden and Bunker Hill made the conference one of the toughest 2-A leagues in the state.

Farmville Central may contend behind 6-6, 290-pound Kevin Wade and quarterback Morris Foreman.

Others 2-A teams to watch include Monroe, Wallace-Rose Hill, Forest Hills and Warren County.

Swain County Reloads

Swain County's Boyce Deitz likes to say his team never rebuilds, it just reloads. Well, the trigger appears full again for the defending 1-A champs.

Junior quarterback Heath Schuler leads the way. The 6-3, 190-pounder completed 86 of 164 passes for 1,784 yards and 20 TDs last season.

"I've never coached a kid that has as much potential," Deitz said.

Chris Hyatt, who had seven 100-yard games, should carry the load in the backfield.

Swain's schedule may be its toughest test. The Maroon Devils play three 3-A schools and one 2-A team.

"The only pressure is that 15 years in a row we've had a good football team," he said. "If we would fail to keep up that tradition, then we would fail."

Over the years the way to the state championship for Swain was through conference rival Murphy. But that may not be the case this season as the Bulldogs lost 14 starters and are young.

But the best test for Swain may still come from the mountains in the form of Hendersonville and Cherokee.

Currituck looks strong along the coast with five starters returning on each side of the ball from a 9-3 team. Dwayne Griffin, at 6-3, 306 pounds, anchors both sides of the line of scrimmage.

North Edgecombe will rely on quarterback Orlando Whitaker to make a charge, while Dwayne Gerald will try to fill the shoes of former all-star quarterback and brother Edward of St. Pauls.

Other contenders for the 1-A title should include Red Springs, East Montgomery, Bladenboro, Southwest Onslow, Richlands and East Montgomery.

Surry Central heads into the season with the state's longest losing streak at 29.

The 4-A and 3-A titles games are scheduled to be held at Kenan Stadium on the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill campus, while the 2-A and 1-A games are slated for N.C. State University.

Support Overflowing For Giants' Dravecky

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — Dave Dravecky has received a huge outpouring of public support as well as dozens of requests for network TV interviews and even a movie about his comeback from cancer.

Dravecky is recovering at his home in nearby Foster City after breaking his left arm in Montreal Tuesday night. It was the second game of his triumphant comeback following last October's removal of a cancerous tumor from the same arm. He won both games.

The 33-year-old pitcher had new X-rays taken on Friday and nothing showed up to contradict doctors' predictions he will be able to begin rehabilitation in six weeks, according to Jacinto. Dravecky will be fitted with a new fiberglass cast at the Palo Alto Medical Clinic next week.

Among those seeking interviews with Dravecky are "Nightline," "Good Morning America," the "Today" show, "2020," ABC's "Prime Time Live" with Diane Sawyer and Sam Donaldson, "The 700 Club," Joan Rivers, the CBS Morning News, People magazine, most major newspapers and the National Enquirer. Also, Ron Howard Productions wants to produce a movie about Dravecky.

Dravecky, however, has told the Giants he doesn't want to do any more interviews for at least a week while he rests at home with his family.

Jennings attributed the outpouring of support for Dravecky to a combination of factors.

"First," he said, "it's a very human story. It goes beyond the boundaries of sports and touches people who don't even care about baseball.

"Second, Dave is a very pleasant and articulate, sincere representative of the sport. I really feel baseball fans, especially, are responding to a good story in baseball. I think they've had enough of the scandals and courtroom stuff, and they're looking at this as confirmation of baseball as an all-American kind of thing."

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY Aug. 20

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Accept the fact that adjustments are part of living. Don't spend away your future trying to impress someone. Is love really there?

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): You can be quite dramatic when you want your own way. Try to remain optimistic about everything. Cooperate with others.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Evaluate a close relationship if there is confusion between love and friendship. Impulsive behavior can encourage accidents.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Don't be too generous trying to control young people who have expensive ideas. Peaceful co-existence will prevail!

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Clever and bright ideas can lead to success. If you settle for less, you get less. Show your ability to accept responsibility.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): The travel bug may have you out and about. Be realistic in determining your priorities. Don't exaggerate your feelings.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Communication is one of your assets. Today you may be better off not dealing with opposing views. Tend to responsibilities before playtime.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Someone's willingness to make adjustments may be an empty gesture. Keeping a cheerful attitude can brighten your evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): There is a tendency to exaggerate a situation. Surround yourself with friends and family. It is a good time to relax.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Get your ideas across without being pushy. There are many distractions until the later day. Prepare for a busy week ahead.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Personal and romantic problems arise. Think before you act. Avoid moves that can backfire. Try to strike a balance.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Exercise greater self-discipline when working on creative projects. A partner has strong opinions on what you should do with your time.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY Aug. 21

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Your signals may be going astray. Communicate when others need an explanation. Be honest about yourself.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): People value warmth and sensitivity to their feelings. A relaxed approach to love can refresh your ties.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): You feel less tense and pressured if you are doing what you like to do. Plan a career change that will enhance your talents.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): A recipe for your current emotional state—never pass up an invitation, entertain a lot, and by all means fall in love.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Emotional baggage from the past can make it difficult to make a fresh, clean, new beginning. You desire change. Go easy—plan!

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Expect a rebellion if you pinch the penny too hard. You can carry a protective attitude to extremes. Cater to others more.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Being stylish can be uplifting, but costly. Plan a wardrobe that fits your needs and pocketbook. Impulsive buying leads to waste.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): You will be happier if you meet more interesting and upscale types of people. Don't trust things to memory today—keep records.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Business/career objectives are brighter. Shop for yourself and a loved one. You should be sailing smoothly today.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): It is hard to maintain a social life if you play "hide and then go seek." Keep contacts alive during a time when you are socially inactive.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Avoid taking drastic steps if those around you are moody. Your body bulges are a concern—use it and you will lose it.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): A behind-the-scenes meeting can have a positive effect on your future. Attractiveness to the opposite sex is strong. Plan a weekend picnic.

Had Shakespeare been a bridge aficionado, he might have written about the ages of a player. At first the infant, trying to master the intricacies of the finesse. Then the lover, beaming from ear to ear as half of his tenace positions produces an extra trick. And then the expert, wriggling like an eel to try to avoid having to take a finesse. And so each one plays his part.

South had a classic jump shift—a self-sufficient suit of his own and some support for partner's suit into the bargain. When North raised, it took only Blackwood to determine that a dearth of kings precluded a grand slam.

West led the king of hearts and we know many declarers who would go down in a trice. They would win the ace, draw trumps and take the club finesse, an even-money proposition. Unfortunately, on this deal their luck would be out and the contract would fail by a trick.

The seasoned player has no problem with this type of hand. He knows the club finesse is an illusion—there is a line available which guarantees the slam.

After winning the the ace of hearts the veteran, too, draws trumps in two rounds. Next, he takes three rounds of diamonds, discarding a heart from dummy. With the goundwork laid, declarer exits with the jack of hearts.

When West wins the trick, there is a variety of losing actions available. A red-suit return allows declarer to ruff in dummy while discarding the jack of clubs from hand; a club is into South's tenace. Either way, declarer avoids losing a club trick.

Craftsmanship Brings Old Homes Back To Life

By Gary Dorsey
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

ASHAWAY, R.I. — The ghosts that dwell in Stephen Mack's old homes obey the proprieties of New England's 18th-century owners. The hinges rarely whine, the floorboards bear the weight of the world without groaning, the lights don't flicker and fuss.

There is a stately presence dawdling in every corner, lingering in the stairwells and hallways in a comfortable, world-worn way.

Mack's old homes have been nurtured back to life by a hopelessly romantic style of craftsmanship. Mack scours the region's fields and highways for decaying carcasses of 18th-century buildings and searches for a pulse beneath layers of paint, aluminum siding and detestable 20th-century floor coverings. Like an antiques collector, he buys those structures that he deems worthy and revives them.

He employs a team of local laborers to carefully strip away every trace of modernity, take down walls, windows, doors, stairways, fireplaces, stone walls and timbers. Every piece of the house is numbered, lettered, drawn to scale on blueprints and hauled by cranes and trucks to Mack's secluded farm here, near the Connecticut border. The pieces are stacked in wooden piles, stone gardens and brick heaps, covered by sturdy black tarpaulins until a buyer asks Mack to perform the rites of renewal.

It is a strange business. More than 50 old homes, corncribs, barns and taverns have rested in a village of black plastic on Mack's secluded fields over the past 14 years. Many were saved from the hands of developers, some seized at those moments when a new highway mauled an old neighborhood. One became his home, another his office. One has been moved and rebuilt as a family's home in Ohio. Pieces of others have been hammered into reconstructed 200-year-old houses.

Twenty-five still lie in the fields, where Mack's sheep graze; "The Black City," he calls it. They are more like crypts waiting to be opened so that the old bones can be revived. For a buyer, Mack's buildings offer an impression of a secure home and the comforting presence of a presumably wiser, more settled civilization. That is compelling architecture, informed by one man's romantic vision.

Mack stands at a weathered gray fence with his black dog, Dog (he'd strip everything to its elements if he could). His house is colonial red, sitting at the crest of a hill, overlooking broad fields at Chase Hill Farm. An assistant works in the far meadow in an office building that was once an Indian museum in Bristol, Conn. An old tobacco barn set in a valley contains shop equipment. A corncrib perched on stilts holds a hundred antique doors. His sheep find shade there.

His face is a bright moon, and his eyes shine with a blue intensity that lends him an uncommon youthfulness. His features would be a gift to any man in his early 40s who feels the pressures of midlife. He looks like a teen-ager with wire-frame glasses and curly blond hair, but he sounds like any one of his peers. "There's never enough time," he says, repeatedly. He is eager to build.

Although Mack lives here alone with Dog, there's no sense of loneliness about his Cape Cod-style home. Modern jazz plays on the stereo. Fresh flowers brighten dusted table tops. Collections of whalebone, sea chests, rope beckets, model ships, brass telescopes and compasses, sextants and old books crowd the rooms. He clams in the salt marshes, digs for oysters, sails, tours the back roads of Southern New England in an open 1931 Model A Ford or '37 Packard convertible. Whitewash flakes from the walls of the house. The textures of bare wood, unpainted stone, unadorned metal gather light and make a startlingly handsome fabric of the interiors. Rather than the quaint, slightly formal setting one might expect from 18th-century forebears, the place is embracing and warm, though annoyingly tidy.

In 1976 Mack moved here after years of traveling the world as an adventurer. He came to this overgrown thicket called Chase Hill Farm, and saw a sanctuary. The house was all but abandoned except for a tawny wild cat and birds who had made their nests in the doorways and arches. It was a mess, but the place had, as he would say, "vibes." Out of necessity, he and a girlfriend began to learn about architecture, housebuilding and design.

"I got an education in perhaps the most difficult way I could devise," he said. "I went to the woods and cut down oak trees to replace the floor joists. I did some research by reading about 18th-century homes, but mostly I learned by examining the house itself."

At the same time, he heard about another building nearby that was about to be destroyed. Mack rushed to save it. He bought the small 18th-century house, took it apart piece by piece, moved it to Chase Hill, found a buyer and rebuilt it on another plot of land.

He was in business.

Examples of his work have been featured in "House and Garden," The New York Times and other publications. But people have been equally attracted to Mack, who seems like such an American original that his genteel personality is often as much under scrutiny as his craftsmanship.

He speaks like an upper-class gentleman, but he says that he never graduated from college. His knowledge of history, antiques, marine life and art is impressive. And yet he is almost entirely self-taught. His parents are artists, but his aesthetic sensibility and interest in antiquity come from some unknown inner place. He says he was just always this way — collecting old bones and antique brass implements, all kinds of stuff from old sea chests and docks.

Many features of modern life, he said, represent only an erosion of values and valuable tenets. The 20th century does not satisfy his longings.

On The House
By ANDY LANG

When air contains all the moisture it can hold, it is said to be saturated. What is called the relative humidity is then at 100 percent.

Excessive moisture in your house causes all sorts of problems if it is not permitted to escape to the outside. The escape route can be one or more of several ways, but not through the outside walls. When that occurs, the most common result is the peeling of exterior paint.

Vapor barriers are used to prevent the moisture from reaching the paint film, but the condensation that takes place between the inside and outside walls can be avoided by the use of vents which allow the moist air to leave the house. Such vents should be covered with screening to keep out insects.

Condensation is the result of warm, moist air settling on a cool surface. That's why you get condensation on windows, cold water pipes, toilet tanks and even a glass of ice water. Either the excessive moisture in the house should be diminished or the surfaces on which it condenses should be made warmer.

To reduce the moisture in a house means controlling the sources that produce it. Water vapor enters the air from such things as bathing, showering, washing dishes, cooking and even by breathing.

The way to control its volume is by ventilation, either in the form of one or more exhaust fans or just a simple little thing like keeping a window open a little when engaging in any activity that produces moisture.

A dehumidifier can help by capturing some of the vapor before it does any damage. When condensation does occur, be sure some of the moisture isn't coming from your humidifier.

If your house has a crawl space under it, excessive moisture may be coming out of the ground and entering the structure. Be sure the space is vented, then cover the ground with polyethylene sheets or something similar. Use sand to hold down the sheets at overlapping seams. If the ground cover proves to be very effective, the vents around the crawl space sometimes can be closed during cold weather.

What may appear to be a leak in the area of the toilet tanks is usually condensation. Some people find a simple solution is a fabric covering around the tank and other parts of the fixture.

This covering prevents the moist air from coming into contact with the tank. Such covers are available in different sizes, colors and styles. Care must be exercised to see the covering does not interfere with the flushing mechanism and the toilet seat.

Another way to handle the situation is with a styrofoam kit that contains the necessary adhesive and instructions for cutting the material to fit the inside of the tank. To make this work, you will have to dry out the tank so the adhesive can adhere properly. The styrofoam prevents the outside of the tank from getting cold, since it serves as a barrier between the water and the inside of the tank.

A neighbor had his plumber install a mixing valve underneath the tank to keep the water in the tank slightly warm. In a discussion about the subject some time later, another neighbor reported little luck with this method. Should you decide to utilize it, ask your plumber if he has done it in the past and what the results were.

Cold water pipes that sweat and drip can be kept from getting the condensation that is causing the trouble by wrapping the pipes with a special tape. Some experts recommend using this kind of covering on the hot water pipes as well as the cold. It reduces the amount of energy needed to maintain water temperatures at the desired level.

If your house has a concrete floor slab, moisture on the edge of the slab usually means the slab edge and foundation are not properly insulated, which causes the slab to lose heat to the outside and get cold. Insulation then can be added to the slab edge outside the foundation.

Virus May Oust Gypsy Moths

By Earl Aronson
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Will Abby prove to be a potent new weapon against the gypsy moths that devastate trees in many parts of the country?

Abby is an improved biochemical virus strain that kills gypsy moth caterpillars but doesn't harm anything else, according to U.S. Department of Agriculture entomologist Martin Shapiro.

Abby is an NPV — nuclear polyhedrosis virus — that Shapiro named after the town of its origin, Abington, Mass. It has been studied for seven years among 19 different virus strains from all over the world. NPV strains produce a systemic infection in gypsy caterpillars. With Abby, reports Shapiro, "there's a higher kill early in the game."

Once applied, the new Abby could run its own moth-control program from year to year, often with no need to reapply, claims Shapiro. Abby could serve as an alternative to Bacillus thuringiensis bacteria or to Dimilin, a chemical that keeps gypsy moth caterpillars from reaching adulthood. The virus, unlike chemicals, is transmitted from generation to generation and is capable of self-perpetuation within the gypsy moth population, says Shapiro.

The Agricultural Research Service and Forest Service will conduct a joint dose-and-mortality field test with Abby. They will count the number of dead moth larvae and measure the amount of foliage protected by the virus. In field tests at the Beltsville, Md., lab, the new strain performed five times better than the lab's standard virus.

Gypsy moth populations have been exploding in recent years, and federal officials anticipate that this year and the next two years will be worse. All states east of Ohio and north of Virginia are infested with the moths, the officials reported. Pockets of infestation also have been found in California, Oregon, Wisconsin, Michigan, South Carolina and North Carolina.

The caterpillar eats the foliage of more than 500 species of trees, shrubs and ornamentals, but does most harm to American oaks and alders in forests and parks, along roadsides and in backyards.

The gypsy moth was brought to Massachusetts in 1869 by French biologist Louis Trouvellot as part of a silkworm-breeding experiment and escaped from the laboratory. The worst infestation was in 1982, when moth caterpillars defoliated about 8 million acres.

Work at the Beltsville Insect Reproduction Laboratory led to a way to rear moths to mass-produce the biochemical virus.

You can help fight gypsy moths by seeking out and destroying their eggs. Your Agricultural Extension Service office has educational information. Check for eggs on tree trunks, lawn furniture and stone walls, and under brush piles. Scrape egg masses into a can of kerosene, bleach or "tree wound" paint and destroy them.

Spray trees or shrubs with an insecticide, preferably a biological one that won't kill bees or other beneficial insects. Recommended is Bacillus thuringiensis, sold under various trade names such as Dipel, Thuricide and Bactospeme, or as "Organic Caterpillar Killer."

Biological Controls

Biological controls — beneficial bugs, bacteria, fungi and even viruses — give chemical-free control in food production or require the use of much less chemical pesticide.

"Even where chemicals may not be suspected of polluting water or leaving residues on foods, they simply may no longer control a pest," says the USDA Agricultural Research Service. "Biocontrol can be a large part of the solution to these problems."

ARS biocontrol efforts include: negotiating two five-year agreements on research and exploration with the Soviet Union; sending scientists, starting in May, to China to explore for biocontrols of range weeds and water weeds, such as hydrilla; the gypsy moth virus project; and aiding eggplant growers, "who have seen proof that tiny wasps control Colorado potato beetles better than 15 spray applications of insecticides."

Furniture Rentals Fill Void

By Barbara Mayer
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

When director Ron Howard needed housing for film editors who joined him in Greenwich, Conn., to work on the movie "Parenthood," he furnished two condominiums with rented furniture.

Howard Rothkerch of International Furniture Rentals says other celebrities who have rented from the Hawthorne, N.Y., company — just across the Connecticut line — include comedian Rodney Dangerfield, actor Robert Redford and wrestler Hulk Hogan.

Princess Hussah Khalid of Saudi Arabia spent $5,299 each of the three months she rented furniture while awaiting custom pieces ordered for her Greenwich mansion. A lot of money, indeed, but she got a lot of furniture, says Rothkerch, including 21 sectional pieces, 18 dining chairs and two dining tables.

The rich and famous account for only a small portion of Americans who spend more than $700 million a year to rent furniture. The Furniture Rental Association of America, an industry trade group, estimates that a half-million homes are furnished with rental pieces at any given time.

Reasons for renting have more to do with convenience than with style. Most renters fall into one of several groups, according to Rothkerch — corporate transfers in temporary quarters, victims of home disasters, the newly divorced, the mobile awaiting the moving van and people with furniture on order.

According to Sally Simon, rental director for Homebuyers Assistance Corp. of Westport, Conn., corporate executives on temporary assignment are most likely to rent furniture. It's inexpensive, convenient and fast. They can pick the minimum package for a one-bedroom apartment, pay about $100 a month and get delivery in 48 hours or less, says Simon, who handles executive relocations for about 250 companies.

Since companies usually will pay to move household goods only once for each corporate transfer, employees often will rent furniture and quarters until they find permanent homes.

"In my eight years I have never seen someone not rent because they didn't like the selection," Simon says. "They come because they have a desperate need. The furniture itself is secondary to the service."

Jen and Fred Niebuhr furnished a nine-room rented home in Westport, Conn., with rentals from Cost Plus of Stamford, Conn. Now they are thinking of buying the country French and Queen Anne style pieces they selected.

Patricia Pytte rented through Breuner's, a California furniture retail chain with a rental division.

"It took us about five minutes to decide what we wanted," she says.

They received the furniture for a two-bedroom apartment two days after signing a contract for $260 a month.

"And they were here at 8:30 a.m., just like they said."

School Attended

Attending were Bruce H. Bland Jr., Ronald Elks; Tom Howell; Mervis A Joyner; Ricky Langley; Barrett Lasater; Wayne Meads Sr. and Bobby Sutton.

The school was conducted by the N.C Waterworks Operators Association and the Division of Lifelong Education of North Carolina State University with assistance and sponsorship of the Department of Civil Engineering, NCSU; the N.C. Section of the American Water Works Association; the N.C. League of Municipalities, and the Division of Health Services of the N.C. Department of Human Resources.

The purpose of the school is to provide instruction on the fundamentals of water treatment as well as to present the latest developments in water treatment and water supply regulations.

At the completion of the school, a written examination was given for certification as a water treatment facility operator in accordance with state statutes.

Engineer Certified

Burroughs Wellcome Co. Senior Plant Engineer Gopi Menon has attained the status of certified plant engineer. The distinction was granted by the Certification Board of the American Institute of Plant Engineers (AIPE).

Menon is a member and vice president of AIPE's Eastern Carolina Chapter No. 173.

AIPE Certification was established in 1975, becoming a standard of excellence for the plant engineering profession. The initial process of certification requires either a combination of engineering education and experience or a passing grade on a comprehensive examination. More than 1,700 plant engineers in the U.S. and abroad have been certified.

AIPE, with more than 8,000 members across the U.S. and Canada, is America's only association dedicated exclusively to the plant engineering profession.

Sales Increase

The Procter & Gamble Co. recently announced sales and earning for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1989. Worldwide net sales were $21,398,000,000, an increase of 11 percent over net sales of $19,336,000,000 for the previous year.

Net earnings amounted to $1,206,000,000, an increase of 18 percent over net earnings of $1,020,000,000 for the preceding year. Earnings per common share were $7.12, which compares with $5.96 per share for the previous year.

Dividends of $3.00 per common share were paid during the year compared to $2.75 per year in the previous year. Effective with the February 1989 payment, the quarterly dividend was increased to an annual rate of $3.20 per share. This marked the 33rd consecutive fiscal year of increased dividend payments.

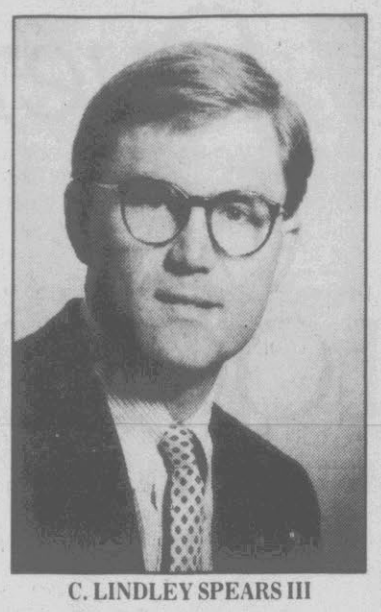
Company Sold

Cecil F. Satterwhite has announced his retirement and the sale of his company, Satterwhite Printing Company Inc. of Richmond, to Lee E. Schelley, a senior paperboard packaging industry executive of Williamsburg.

Schelley's most recent assignment was president and general manager of Rolph-Clark-Stone Packaging Corp., U.S. operations, where he was responsible for three paperboard packaging plants.

Satterwhite will continue as a consultant to the company during the transition period.

Satterwhite Printing Co. serves numerous corporation and advertising agencies in the Richmond, Tidewater and eastern North Carolina areas.



C. LINDLEY SPEARS III

relocated to Jacksonville as a residential field office manager. Currently, he serves as manager of Greenville's Mortgage Co.

He is a native of Concord and a 1978 graduate of North Carolina State University.

Consultant's Criticism Inspires Gym Operator

By Greg Laudick
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

When Greg Lassiter first entered the business of operating a gym, his facility consisted of little more than three weight benches and a stack of iron plates.

It was during those lean years in 1984 that a so-called health club consultant visited Lassiter's meager operation in Ayden and told him, "Greg, in six months, you'll be bankrupt — you just can't do it."

Now several years later, while sitting in his office at Champions, Greenville's newest entrant into the competitive local health-club market, Lassiter recalled the conversation and said, "She will never know how much motivation that was for me."

Despite the consultant's dire forecast, Lassiter forged ahead, saving money, investing and reinvesting in equipment and learning the ins and outs of small business operations while managing the now defunct Ayden club, Body and Health.

The persistent efforts of the former Pitt County school teacher recently culminated with the opening of Champions.

Located at 207 E. Fifth St., the health center occupies the former site of Sweet Willie's Surf Shop in the downtown business district. The building's front window, which previously displayed Fiberglas surfboards and T-shirts, now reveals a vast assortment of body-building paraphernalia.

Along with the standard assortment of barbells, bench presses and squat racks, Champions features an array of sophisticated equipment including cable crossover pulleys, a standing leg-curl apparatus and resistance equipment.

"I'm especially proud of the amount of lower-body equipment we have here on the floor," Lassiter commented.

Other amenities of Champions include a tanning bed and a locker area. Blue carpeting and ceiling fans add a finishing touch to the decor.

Lassiter concedes that the competition in Greenville for the health club dollar is tough; however, he said he believes he can survive by delivering a service beyond that of his competitors.

"From that very first day we opened, I knew that if I couldn't do anything else, I could give the members very good personalized service and keep a place clean," he said.

The 30-year-old physical fitness specialist said he believes a key to success is possessing a willingness to meet and speak with people about their health goals and concerns without talking over their heads.

"It's also important that you don't look at them just as a way to make some more money; that you're more concerned about their health than you are about who they're going to bring back in."

Continuing on that thought, he added, "I will not have an employee in here that is just calling people trying to make cold contacts for membership," he said. "I feel like my employees need to be out there on the floor helping the people that are already here."

Sharing ownership of Champions is another professional in a fitness-related Greenville business — Gerry Smith, owner of the Bicycle Post.

Ms. Smith entered into the business venture after Lassiter phoned the owner of the Cotanche Street store about the possibility of acquiring an affordable exercise bicycle.

Not only did Lassiter's call get him a stationary bike, it also resulted in acquiring a partner who had a tip about an available rental property in close proximity to East Carolina University and its 15,000 student population.

Firm Selected

First Citizens Bank has chosen Charlotte-based UVEST Brokerage Services as its new trading broker, said William J. Cathcart, First Citizens Bank general vice president and trust department manager.

Cathcart said the change from Investor Services to UVEST was made for better service and growth opportunities.

UVEST has been providing discount brokerage services to the customers of banks and savings and loan institutions since 1982. The company currently serves more than 50 financial institutions and approximately 25,000 brokerage customers in the Southeast, primarily North And South Carolina.

Record Sales

Hampton Industries Inc., reported that the company achieved record sales for the second quarter of 1989, said David Fuchs, chairman and chief executive officer of the company.

Sales volumes totaled $39,583,000 as compared to $34,154,000, a 16 percent increase over the prior year. Earnings for the quarter increased fivefold to $703,000 or $.18 per share versus $144,000, or $.04 per share in 1988.

Fuchs said the major factors contributing to the improved operating results were an increase in units shipped, higher average selling prices due to a change in product mix and a reduction in selling, general and administrative costs as a percentage of sales. Operating margins were the same in both period, he said.

Trimming The Fat Is Always Corporate Fact Of Life

By Cindy Skrzycki
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

Downsizing — the paring of people and divisions from the American corporation — once was thought a drastic step to be taken only when hard times hit or when all other cost-saving efforts were exhausted. Employees regarded the first waves of downsizing as they would any other tragedy: an accident waiting to happen to someone else.

Even companies not under dire financial or competitive pressures began to look to downsizing as a dramatic, one-time move that would jolt managers from their smug complacency and leave the company leaner, meaner and more fit to compete in the brave new economy.

Now, after a decade during which corporate employment rolls have been squeezed in and out like an accordion, both employees and companies have come to realize that downsizing is here to stay — a management prerogative that will be used not once but repeatedly, in both good times and bad.

"Downsizing has become an ongoing corporate activity without regard to a company's economic performance," said Eric Greenberg, editor of the American Management Association's research reports. "Just as many companies do it to get more productivity as for an economic downturn."

In fact, Greenberg said that a company that has downsized before is six times more likely to do it again as the process becomes one of constant refinement. He theorizes that companies develop a "bureaucracy with a stake in downsizing" — that is, a staff that plans downsizings and outplacement programs.

In the last year, 39 percent of 1,084 companies and nonprofit organizations surveyed by the AMA reduced their work forces, cutting an average of 162 employees. A year earlier, it was 35 percent, with an average of 150 workers out of a job. In general, hourly workers take about half the cuts, with the remainder divided among supervisory, middle management and other professionals.

The AMA survey also showed that mergers and acquisitions are driving downsizing. Corporate marriages were behind more than 10 percent of the downsizings that companies reported, and 20 percent of those in large corporations.

"I see a whole other wave of it happening post-leveraged buyout," said David A. Nadler, president of Delta Consulting Group, a management consulting firm in New York. "When somebody comes in and does an LBO, they have large levels of debt. They have less of a sense of obligation to employees."

Even an expert in downsizing such as Robert M. Tomasko, a consultant with Arthur D. Little, is surprised that the pace has not abated. He sees enough fodder for a second book on the subject as the focus of cutbacks moves from heavy industry to financial services companies, telephone companies, defense contractors, health care providers, retailing and consumer goods manufacturers.

Even seemingly "safe" industries, such as electric utilities that attracted and retained workers because they offered job security, are downsizing.

Virginia Power, for example, the primary supplier of electricity to Northern Virginia, recently cut 824 positions out of its work force of 13,500, the first time the company resorted to an across-the-board staff reduction.

"We needed to separate what is necessary from what is nice," said William N. Curry, a spokesman for Virginia Power. The need to cut costs — and people — became apparent when the company lost a $95 million rate case and the industry became more open to competition.

There seems little doubt that careful, well-planned pruning can transform a company into a less encumbered, aggressive competitor — especially if the weight stays off. It is a rare American corporation that doesn't suffer from at least one unneeded layer of management, or that can't benefit from substituting a bit of technology or outside help for some employees.

Experience also has shown that, done badly, downsizing can spell disaster, presenting top management with new problems that undermine the goals of reducing costs and increasing productivity.

Awards Presented

Ms. Heath, who joined the company in 1977, received the Circle of Achievement award for reaching the $250,000-$550,000 level of unit retail production. She also was named to the Director Queen's Court of Personal Sales for earning a total of $16,000 or more in personal wholesale purchases during the contest period. In addition, she was named to the Queen's Court of Recruiting for having 24 or more qualified recruits in the contest year.

The multi-million dollar annual business management seminar is the culmination and celebration of all Mary Kay activities including consultant achievement, new product development and financial performance. In all, more than 25,000 consultants attended the seminar.

She is married to John Heath and they have a daughter, Heather, 15, and a son, John, 19.

New Associate

Mavis Butts, owner of Mavis Butts Realty, has announced that Margaret Hughes will be associated with her agency, specializing in residential real estate.

A native of Fayetteville, Mrs. Hughes is a graduate of Peace College and Duke University. She is married and resides in Greenville.

Officer Named

Josye E. Taylor has been named a banking officer at Barclays Bank of North Carolina, announced bank President Edward B. McConnell.

Ms. Taylor joined BBNC in 1984 and has 12 years of experience in banking. A native of Newton, she works at the bank's Washington Street branch.

Dividend Declared

The board of directors of First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Pitt County has declared a cash dividend of $.50 per share to stockholders of record Sept. 1, 1989, payable Sept. 15, 1989, according to Burney S. Warren, president.

The $.50 dividend represents a 43 percent increase from the previous year.

Program Extended

The Energy Division of the N.C. Department of Economic and Community Development is extending the "Great Lighting Cash Rebate" program until June 30, 1990, said Department Secretary James T. Broyhill.

The program, originally scheduled to end last Tuesday, allows for selected commercial and industrial facilities to receive a 10 or 20 percent cash rebate for switching to more energy efficient sources of lighting. The size of the rebate is dependent on the type of modification made.

The avergage payback period for facilities currently participating is 2.7 years, Broyhill said.

Recent Appointment

Hubert Garris, agency manager at the Pitt County Farm Bureau, has announced the appointment of Parrish S. Sasser of Greenville as an agent for North Carolina Farm Bureau Mutual Insurance Co. and the Southern Farm Bureau Life Insurance Co. in Pitt County.

He will also represent North Carolina Blue Cross and Blue Shield Inc. to the Farm Bureau members.

Parrish is a native of Lenoir County and is married to the former Sally Wilson of Denver. They have a daughter and expect their second child in August.

New Associate

Aldridge and Southerland Realtors announce the association of Frances Harris with the agency. She has over seven years experience working in real estate.

Mrs. Harris has lived in Greenville over 20 years and is married to Jimmy Harris.

Bank Promotion

Frank Thornton Jr. has been promoted to assistant vice president at First Citizens Bank. He is manager of the bank's Northwest branch in Greenville.

The Kinston native earned a bachelor's degree at East Carolina University.

Thornton is the current president of the Greenville Host Lions Club. He and his family attend St. Timothy's Episcopal Church.

Engineer Recognized

E. Lynn Hudson, PE, vice president of J.H. Hudson Construction Co. of Greenville, was recently named Young Engineer of the Year by the Professional Engineers of North Carolina, a member state society of the National Society of Professional Engineers.

The award recognizes engineers 34 years of age or younger who have a record of outstanding educational and collegiate achievements, professional and engineering achievements and who have made significant contributions to society.

He received the Eastern Carolina Chapter Young Enginer of the Year Award in 1988.

Hudson received his bachelor's degree in civil engineeering from North Carolina State University in 1976, chaired several annual activities as a member of the Greenville Jaycees from 1976 to 1984, has been president of the PTO organization and of the Carolina Croaker and Marlin Club and state director of the Atlantic Coast Conservation Association.

He and his wife, Vickie, and their three children reside in Greenville.

New Addition

Bob Boone, CCIM, has joined J.M. Kane & Co. as a real estate broker, announced company President John M. Kane.

As a member of the brokerage division, his responsibilities will include the marketing of shopping center outparcels as well as site selection for local, regional and national tenant clients.

Boone was previously vice president of Ashton Properties, Inc. of Raleigh. He is a graduate of North Carolina State University where he received a B.A. in economics.

J.M. Kane & Co. is a real estate development company which owns, manages and leases over 3 million square feet of property in North Carolina including The Plaza mall.

Manager Awarded

Run On Copper Futures Drops

By DAVID DISHNEAU
AP Business Writer

Profit-taking put an end to a seven-day runup in copper futures prices Friday on New York's Commodity Exchange but chart-watchers said technical signals pointed toward further gains.

"This might actually help," analyst Stephen Platt, of Dean Witter Reynolds Inc., said of the moderately steep decline. He said the market had fallen back to prices it had skipped over on its way up and cited a theory that markets must fill such gaps before resuming a trend.

On other futures markets Friday, precious metals retreated while futures prices for energy, grains, soybeans, livestock and meat were mixed.

Copper settled 1.50 cents to 2.35 cents lower with the contract for spot delivery at $1.2465 a pound and the more actively traded September contract at $1.2390.

Spot prices had climbed as high as $1.2680 on Thursday, which represented a gain of more than 15 percent since Aug. 8.

The rally had been linked to indications that production problems, including ongoing miner strikes in Canada and Peru, were beginning to make a dent in copper stockpiles.

Analysts said Friday's decline was largely a due to pre-weekend profit-taking after the nearly vertical runup.

Platt said prospects for a settlement of the 5-day-old Peruvian strike appeared to be improving. He said the miners must return to work to qualify for wage bonuses and some observers believe those bonuses are enough incentive to bring the strike to an end.

But both Platt and Peter Cardillo, commodities trading adviser with Josephthal & Co., said the market continued to look strong from a technical perspective.

Gold and silver futures prices fell slightly on the Comex in response to the Labor Department's report of a modest 0.2 percent rise in consumer prices last month.

Low inflation rates or falling prices tend to discourage investor buying of precious metals.

Gold settled 20 cents to 70 cents lower with August at $368.10 a troy ounce; silver was .08 cent to 1 cent lower with September at $5.255 a troy ounce.

Wheat and corn futures prices retreated on confirmation of large foreign purchases of those grains while soybean futures closed higher following a private forecast for a surprisingly small crop.

Company Gives A New Look, Without Surgery

Blemishes, Scars Hidden By New Coloring Technique

By Amy Gavigan
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

If you've recently thumbed through any fashion magazines or listened to the latest gossip, you've probably noticed that many are looking to cosmetic surgery to attain that "ideal" look. A little tuck here, a little lift there — whatever it takes to improve on what nature gave them.

But there are others who wish to change what nature, injury or disease has taken away.

Any sort of cosmetic defect, whether it be vitiligo, scarring or hair loss, can kill self confidence. Pamela Duncan, owner and operator of Permanent Cosmetics, Inc., offers a method to make the differences less noticable.

Ms. Duncan uses a process known as dermal pigmentation for several cosmetic applications. Lips can be re-shaped or colored, eyebrows can be highlighted, scars can be colored and blended into the surrounding skin.

For those injured so that scarring has the marred lip definition, permanent pigmentation to define the lip can mean a great deal.

Ms. Duncan says she often works with scars from face lifts.

"I'm putting in pigment to match skin tones so the scars won't be as obvious," she says. "It's not perfect, but it's much improved."

Those with alopecia, loss of hair, or vitiligo, the loss of pigment, benefit from the process, which adds color to the affected area, making it less noticable.

Using pigment she mixes herself to match the individual's skin tone, a two- to five-point probe and a vibration method similar to the tattoo process, pigment is implanted in the dermis, the second layer of skin. In most patients, the color will remain for seven to 10 years before fading.

But, by then, most patients are ready for a color change, according to Ms. Duncan. And, 10 years to someone with vitiligo can seem like forever.

"Vitiligo patients don't hold the pigment as well as when we do an eyebrow or lip liner," Ms. Duncan said. "We know they're not going to get ten years, especially with a fair-skinned patient.

"When somebody has that condition, making them as uncomfortable as they are — to say seven years to them is a piece of cake," she said. "I've had several say they don't care if they have to come back every year. If they go through a year and don't have feel like they're so different from everybody else, then that's great."

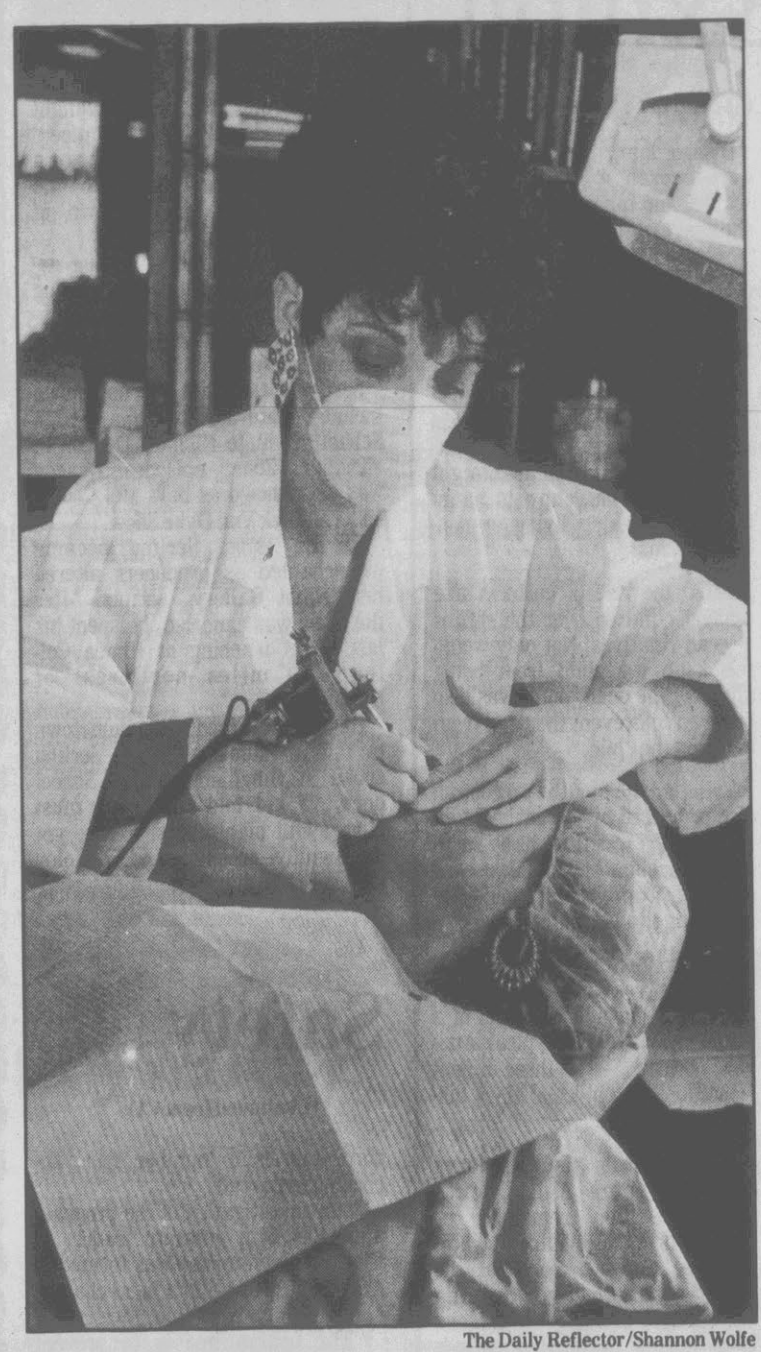
Vitiligo is simply loss of pigment and has no known cause. There is treatment that is used to make the areas of pigment loss sun sensitive to lessen the differences in color, but there is no known cure, according to Dr. John Hendrix, Eastern Dermatology PA.

A lip liner job will run the customer about $350 and filling in the eybrows, about $400. There is no set fee for patients with vitiligo or scar tissue; fees are set according to location and size of area affected.

Though the process is slowly picking up on the east coast, it is widely practiced in California, where Ms. Duncan trained under Sheila May, developer and marketer of the dermal pigmentation.

"We've been able to save people many a trip to California," Ms. Duncan said. "I've had more people come from out of town. It's amazed me how people from out of state have found out I'm here."

It seems that people in Pitt County are a little wary.



The Daily Reflector/Shannon Wolfe

"In Greenville, I think people have limited themselves somewhat," she said. "We have a very educated group of people here but they tend to hesitate to new ideas.

"They like to read about in magazines to see that other people have done it and seen it, but they're still very scared."

Ms. Duncan, who spent her childhood years in Greenville and returned in 1978, said she likes to do presentations to area groups such as garden clubs to help people understand the procedures available.

The state of North Carolina does not have any particular limitations on procedures used by Ms. Duncan, so she is not licensed in any way.

Some counties have local ordinances on procedures similar to dermal pigmentation, such as tattooing, but not in Pitt County, according to Dr. Tim Monroe of the Pitt County Health Department.

"The health department will go in and watch a procedure, watch sterilization, and use of needles, if it is requested, but there is no formal for system for doing that," Monroe said. "We will provide a technical assistant if wanted."

There is no real evidence of significant amount of disease associated with this sort of procedure, according to Monroe.

"This procedure sounds like tatooing, which is not regulated in this county," Monroe said.

Ms. Duncan also owns and operates Greenville Electrolysis and has been licensed in that field for nine years.

Look Before Diving, Local Group Warns

By Amy Gavigan
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Often times thoughts of fun do not include thoughts of safety, especially when you're young. But, there's a group of people in the area who want to change that.

The local chapter of "Feet First, First Time" is reaching out to young people through radio, television, T-shirts, signs and speakers in an effort to reduce spinal cord and head-related injuries. Program members encourage pool, river and beach house owners to post a sign with the Feet First, First Time logo. T-shirts and signs feature the name of the program and a small person with very big feet.

"The logo reminds people to walk in and check the depth of the water the first time in," said Jim Barrett, Feet First, First Time, committee chairman. "There could be tide changes or stumps."

The committee represents several aspects of community life, including the Independent Living Program, East Carolina University and several PCMH departments, such as hospital rehabilitation and those associated with trauma service. The committee hopes to expand to local businesses interested in injury prevention, said Barrett.

Representatives from the committee speak about diving safety to community groups and schools. This summer a series of programs was presented to Greenville Recreation and Parks day campers at the River Park North.

Wayne Dawson, an Independent Living counselor and Feet First, First Time committee member, spoke on August 10 to a group of campers ranging in age from seven to 13.

Dawson, who uses a wheelchair as a result of a diving related accident, encouraged the children to think of ways to make play activities seen in a video safer.

Words of young people who had head, neck or spinal cord injuries echoed through scenes of skateboarding, biking, swimming, driving and drinking combined with various activities.

"...I never thought it would happen to me...I was hardly speeding... No, I wasn't wearing my seat belt...I guess I was a risk taker, but not with my life...I didn't think about checking how deep the water was..."

Dawson told the campers he was hurt diving into shallow water and that it was OK to have fun, but safety must be considered.

"You can never trust the water to be the same depth," Dawson said later. "I had dove into that same water before, but for some reason it just wasn't the same that day."

Dawson's diving accident occurred in 1977 near Bogue's Sound when he was 17-years-old. Since then, he has attended East Carolina University obtaining the bachelor's degree in psychology, worked at the Caswell Center in Kinston, and is now with the Independent Living program, a division of Oak Rehabilitation.

Dawson said he did not want to discourage parents from allowing their children to participate in any activities.

"You can't isolate them," he said. "But, you can teach them the safe way to do things."

He has been involved with the Feet First, First Time program since its inception. The local chapter stems from a program of the same name developed in Pensacola, Fla.

A few years ago, members of the local chapter of Spinal Cord Injury Association of Eastern North Carolina met to discuss what they could do in the way of prevention of spinal cord and head-related injuries. Member Jim Barrett suggested the group take a look at a program out of Pensacola called "Feet First, First Time."

The program, designed to target young risk takers between the ages of 15 and 30, was created to reduce the number of diving-related accidents.

"Around 1980, there were four major reasons behind spinal cord injuries in the United States," said Jim Barrett, manager of therapeutic recreation at Pitt Memorial Hospital. "Automobile related accidents were number one; falls, number two; gunshot and stab wounds, number three, and number four was water related accidents.

"However, in Florida, diving-related accidents were at number two, so they created a campaign saying 'we know you're going to have fun, but have common sense."

The campaign in Florida has been successful, bringing diving accidents from the number two cause of spinal

'Twilight Zone' Devotees Are More Than Fans

New Yorkers Establish Rod Serling Foundation To Honor Writer's Work

By David Germain
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BINGHAMTON, N.Y. — Witness a transformation: A witty boy growing up in an idyllic New York town in the 1930s becomes the master of macabre in television's Golden Age.

He delivers packages for his father's butcher shop, captains the debating team, stars in plays, writes patriotic newspaper editorials.

Graduation, 1942. He joins the paratroopers, is wounded in the Philippines. After college, he trades in his smile for a tight-lipped, somber look and becomes the spokesman for a bizarre dimension beyond imagination.

Young Roddy Serling is about to become the creator of "The Twilight Zone."

Those who knew him growing up in Binghamton, 60 miles south of Syracuse, say their Rod Serling was not the sinister narrator who introduced such tales of hysteria as "The Monsters Are Due on Maple Street" or "Will the Real Martian Please Stand Up?"

"He was always gregarious and wasn't a bit Edgar Allan Poeish," says Helen Foley, Serling's junior high drama teacher. "He was very funny and witty and charming."

Fourteen years after Serling died following heart surgery in Rochester, a group of friends has formed the Rod Serling Foundation in Binghamton to keep his memory alive.

Serling was born Dec. 25, 1924, to Samuel and Esther Serling. The family later moved to Binghamton, the city Serling disguised in "The Twilight Zone" as the perfect towns of Homewood and Willoughby.

His friends in Binghamton remember Serling not as a star but as the grinning boy who always showed up at the center of every group picture.

"He'd always let me ride it to get me out of the way," Haley recalls.

The foundation has about 150 members nationwide, but it's not a fan club, members say.

"We don't want to be called fans," says Foley, who attended the ceremonies last October when Serling was given a star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame. "Fans sounds as though we're a bunch of clucks like those 'Star Trek' people."

Although he was seven years older than Rod, Serling's brother, Robert, remembers staging plays with the future TV whiz-kid in their backyard. They later collaborated on an early version of the script for Robert Serling's novel, "The President's Plane Is Missing."

Other anthology shows in television's infancy are long forgotten, but mention "The Twilight Zone" and everyone will rattle off their favorite episode, says Robert Serling in a telephone interview from his home in Tucson, Ariz. Figuring out why the show captivated viewers "would be like describing the color red," he says.

"Part of it was Rod's voice and appearance, the way he set the mood," his brother says. "Part of it was the O. Henry aspect, the unexpected twist, the surprise ending. And part of it was that Rod masqueraded a sermon in his scripts. He sent messages to people without them realizing they were being preached to."

The Associated Press

Memorabilia

Sybil Goldenburg, a former classmate of the late Rod Serling, poses with period photographs of the creator of 'The Twilight Zone' and reels of his movies and TV shows at her theatrical makeup store in Serling's hometown of Binghamton, N.Y.

That was part of Serling's appeal in television's early years, when good writing with a point behind it was rare.

"He was a great observer of humanity," says classmate Bill Behan.

"We often wonder what he'd be writing today," says another classmate, Robert Keller. "If he were alive I'm sure he'd have something in the running for the Oscars."

After a brief stint as a radio copywriter, Serling began writing TV scripts in 1951. He sold more than 70 scripts before his drama "Patterns" aired in 1955, winning him the first of six Emmys.

For the next four years, Serling could pick and choose what shows to write for. He did many scripts for "Playhouse 90," which aired Serling's second Emmy winner, "Requiem for a Heavyweight."

Then, in 1959, he surprised the industry with plans for a science-fiction anthology series.

"Rod always tried to do more than entertain," says his wife, Carolyn Serling, in a telephone interview from her home in Pacific Palisades, Calif. "He was a humanitarian and critic, and he found outer space and fantasy a good vehicle."

Serling wrote 92 of "The Twilight Zone's" 156 episodes, and became its host after the producers' first choice, Orson Welles, proved too expensive.

That brooding host wasn't the Rod Serling that his classmate Sybil Goldenburg knew.

"He enjoyed the pretense of that persona, but it wasn't him," she says. "If his talent overtook his behavior, it was an affectation."

Nerves caused Serling's hushed tones at first, his wife says. As he grew more comfortable before the cameras, he stuck with the menacing voice because it fit the show, she says.

Serling's Binghamton friends lament that his other writing accomplishments are largely forgotten: a 1960s Western series starring Lloyd Bridges, an early draft of the script for "Planet of the Apes," the 1970s series "Night Gallery."

The pilot for "Night Gallery" gave Steven Spielberg his first directing job in 1969 in a vignette starring Joan Crawford.

In 1985, when Spielberg and company premiered "Twilight Zone — The Movie" in Binghamton, Serling's old friends formed the founda-

S.C. Museum Features Black Funeral Exhibit

By Jill J. Lanford
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBIA, S.C. — By modern standards, the customs seem both curious and macabre: graves decorated with the belongings of the dead to help them on their journey to the afterlife; children handed across the coffins of their ancestors to keep spirits from harming them.

Both, however, are part of the history of black funeral and mourning customs detailed in a new exhibit at the South Carolina State Museum. Titled "The Last Miles of the Way: African-American Homegoing Traditions," the presentation traces practices of South Carolina blacks to their African roots in a temporary exhibit in the Palmetto Gallery.

Funded in part by the South Carolina Humanities Council and designed to complement a permanent museum display on burial customs, "Last Miles" doesn't contain the type of objects visitors may expect, said Elaine Nichols, guest curator of history.

There are no caskets or hearses, no early embalming tools or funerary garb. Instead, the story is told primarily through historical photographs and drawings, specially constructed models and videos.

"We've tried to be very sensitive in approaching the subject," says Ms. Nichols, who began her research more than a year and a half ago.

"The idea is not to show any one set of customs as the black experience in South Carolina, but rather to show the diversity that has been present — the many influences which have been seen."

Case in point is a video contained in the exhibit on a practice known as the Ring Shout, or Plantation Walkaround.

Born in the Congo-influenced areas of Africa, the Ring Shout was adapted by slaves for use in Christian burials and only recently disappeared from ceremonies in rural parts of the Lowcountry.

Combining dance, song and worship, the Circle Shout celebrated the life of the deceased and actively acknowledged his "going on to a better place."

Frequently performed in praise houses, small places of worship located on plantation grounds, the ritual tended to be both heady and mystical: Dancers moved in a counterclockwise circle, singing, shouting, clapping and sometimes becoming filled with the spirit as the event progressed.

"Ankles were never crossed or feet lifted from the floor," says Ms. Nichols, noting that early blacks considered these movements too worldly for a spiritual dance.

The result was a sort of rhythmic shuffle, an actual example of which is shown in a video filmed in 1942 on St. Helena Island near Beaufort.

Because the circle figured prominently in a number of African traditions, it plays an important part in the Columbia exhibit, as well.

"In Africa, the circle was viewed as symbolic of the movement of the sun from dawn to sunset," Ms. Nichols explains.

Dawn was viewed as birth, or the start of life, midday as the high point, and sunset as death. Midnight was the high point of afterlife — a world just as important and real to African cultures as that of the living.

For this reason, the exhibit itself is arranged in a giant circle that takes visitors from black burial practices in antebellum South Carolina to those still intact today.

The painstaking decoration of graves ranks as one of more notable early customs, and one that Ms. Nichols says still can be observed in some of the state's oldest and most obscure cemeteries.

The practice stemmed from those of the Bakongo, who frequently placed magical writings and objects on graves to both protect the living and aid the dead on their journeys home.

Among the most common items were things belonging to, or least used by, the deceased. White objects and things associated with liquids were particular favorites, since many believed the world of the dead to be white and watery.

Dishes, lamps, shells and pipes were broken to free the spirit within, and many were placed on the grave upside down.

"This satisfied the spirits, preventing them from returning to haunt or harm the living," Ms. Nichols explains.

The thinking was present in a number of traditions: Unless given a proper burial, "plat-eyes," or evil spirits, might wander or even return to haunt the living, taking living or non-living forms.

Thus, the rise of customs like passing children over the coffins of dead relatives. Not only would this keep the child from being afraid of the dead, but it was also believed to prevent the dead from harming the child.

Tying up the mouth — a custom also practiced by the early Egyptians — also was thought by some South Carolina blacks to prevent the soul from leaving the body and going to a bad place.

In addition to photographs of actual graves and ceremonies, the exhibit includes a model of a grave decorated in typical African fashion — a three-dimensional look at a piece of black history.

The exhibit also explores customs some older South Carolinians may remember — such European-inspired traditions as stopping clocks at the hour of death and draping photographs and mirrors in black cloth during designated periods of mourning.

The rise of black funeral homes in the 1920s and '30s also is detailed, including vintage photographs of the funerals of prominent blacks and information on burial societies, which offered sickness and death benefits to its members.

Ms. Nichols collected much of her information from interviews with early funeral directors and ministers, who shared memorabilia and contacts within their communities.

"Death has traditionally been something of a taboo subject. We're just taking away a little of the mystery," Ms. Nichols said.

tion to honor the writer.

Besides sponsoring annual Serling film festivals, the foundation last Christmas laid a bronze plaque in a bandstand in a Binghamton park where Serling set the "Twilight Zone" episode "Walking Distance." That episode starred Gig Young as a man transported back to his childhood in the idyllic town of Homewood.

The foundation has a Serling exhibit in a local theater, sells Serling buttons and postcards and is lobbying the U.S. Postal Service to issue a Serling stamp.

Serling's ties with his hometown included featuring Binghamton High School graduate Richard Deacon in "Twilight Zone" episodes. Deacon was best known as bald Mel Cooley on "The Dick Van Dyke Show."

In the 1970s, Serling became disenchanted as producers altered his "Night Gallery" scripts. After the show was canceled, he spent his last years teaching at Ithaca College, 30 miles northwest of Binghamton.

He often returned to his hometown to talk to students. When Serling spoke at Binghamton High School once, "a kid told him, 'You must have awful nightmares. You've got an awfully creepy mind,'" Foley says. "But he didn't."

cord injuries to number four, according to Barrett.

After investigation of the program and talks with program leaders in Florida, a committee was formed in April of 1988 to begin a local chapter of Feet First, First Time.

"The bottom line is to prevent spinal cord injuries by being safe in or out of the water," Barrett said.

The program is a non-profit organization is associated with the Spinal Cord Injury Association of Eastern N.C. and is sponsored by PCMH, Independent Living Rehabilitation Program and Eastern North arolina Spinal Cord Injury Association. It is supported by civic clubs, such as the Pitt County Medical Society Auxiliary, and accepts tax-deductible donations.

Hiring Help For The Home Creates A Nightmare With The Tax Office

CHANGING TIMES

Your job title: Parent. Your corporate headquarters: The kitchen.

Yet when you hire someone to care for your children or do other work in your home, you face a mountain of tax obligations originally designed for businesses. In fact, you may be obliged to fill out no fewer than seven forms, including the ubiquitous FICA and FUTA. Does this sound crazy to you? It gets worse.

Taxes will add 10 percent to 20 percent to the wages you pay. And you'll spend long hours figuring out the requirements and filling out forms.

You can head off most problems from the start by requesting from the IRS all the needed forms and publications discussed below. Call 800-424-3676, or pick them up at your local IRS office. You're supposed to get instructions with each form, but ask for them anyway, suggests Changing Times magazine. Publication 926, Employment Taxes for Household Employers, is probably the most comprehensive federal guide that's not too long or technical.

The basic forms include Social Security (FICA) and income tax form 942 and federal unemployment tax (FUTA) form 940. You should also get a form for state unemployment tax and information on state worker's compensation insurance.

You figure the federal and state taxes based on the total amount you pay a household employee. You'll owe Social Security (FICA) for any employee you pay more than $50 per quarter. Technically, that should include the teenager who does your yard work or baby-sits every Saturday. But the IRS is mostly concerned about collecting taxes for regular employees.

Each quarter, you send Form 942 to the IRS with a check for 15.02 percent (the FICA tax rate for 1989) of the wages you've paid. Half (7.51 percent) is your responsibility and half is deducted from your employee's wages.

You owe federal unemployment tax (FUTA) annually if you pay wages of more than $1,000 a quarter. The rate is 6.2 percent, but if you've paid your state unemployment tax (usually less than 3 percent), the federal rate is 0.8 percent. You'll owe state unemployment tax if you pay more than $1,000 per quarter — or if you pay $500 in New York, the District of Columbia or the Virgin Islands, or $225 in Hawaii. Rates are determined by the state, but the maximum is 5.4 percent. You'll probably pay quarterly.

Worker's compensation is insurance coverage that many states require for some or all household employers. It covers your liabilities if a worker is injured in your home. The annual cost typically ranges from $200 to $400.

You can purchase worker's compensation insurance as a rider to your homeowners policy in most states. However, in six states — Nevada, North Dakota, Ohio, Washington, West Virginia and Wyoming — you must purchase from the state, not a private carrier. To find the state office that handles worker's compensation, start by calling your state department of labor.

Your employee may ask you to withhold federal, state or local income taxes. You use Form 942. Many employees who don't have taxes withheld will have to file quarterly estimated taxes. Those who want federal income taxes withheld must fill out Form W-4. You may also be responsible for state and local income tax withholding; pay the jurisdiction where your employee lives. Where you pay state unemployment tax and meet requirements for worker's compensation is determined by the state where you live.

Your employee may ask you to pay his or her share of the FICA tax, too. If you agree, that amount is considered extra salary, so the employee owes income tax on it. And your employee may ask you to cover the income tax liability. Such payments are considered extra earnings subject to both FICA and income taxes. The best way to handle this, advises Changing Times magazine, is to set the pay high enough to cover taxes and still give the desired take-home pay.

The federal forms you'll need to file quarterly and annually are supposed to be sent to you automatically well before the due dates. Don't count on it. In fact, you probably won't get the standard tax package the IRS sends out each fall if you become an employer in October, November or December.

Make it clear you're a household employer when you fill out Form SS-4, Application for Employer Identification Number. Line 8 asks for the "type of entity." Be sure to check "other" and specify household employer. On line 13, write the number of your employees under "household."

'Oat People' Are Everywhere

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

We were taught in grade school that "a house divided against itself cannot stand." Yet we have volatile little groups of smokers who huddle in theater lobbies thinking bad thoughts about the non-smokers inside. There are pro-life vs. pro-choice factions marching in the streets, and gun control advocates lining up against the NRA.

But I have never seen such an aggressive campaign as the "oat people" vs. those of us who want a breakfast we can swallow.

They're everywhere. You can't turn on the television set without an oat disciple putting it to the guy who just wants to sit down and enjoy his sweet roll. (If I want guilt that early in the morning, I'll step on my bathroom scale.) I never trust a cereal that you can't drown. I hate anything that floats to the top of the milk and never gets soggy. That is very unnatural.

My husband will buy anything with oats in it, whether it be cereal, shampoo or a laxative. It doesn't matter; he figures it's good for you. I say if oats are so good for you, then how come we owned a horse once who wouldn't eat them unless they were coated with molasses?

Oat people are the same ones who, last year, worshiped at the shrine of Our Lady of Bran. Did you ever look at bran people in the supermarket? I mean, really look at them? They're not happy. They're not happy because they know what they're in for. They're committed to a box that never offers a toy inside or a coupon for an African violet or a neat recipe for a party mix. Every inch of the box is devoted to a list of nutrients that you can't pronounce, let alone translate.

The sugar people are trying to fight back the best way they can. Their commercials show adults whose faces are shadowed to conceal their identity sitting in a basement somewhere eating their children's cereal that is loaded with sugar. Since they are not kids, they are not allowed to eat it in the kitchen. What sponsors should be saying is that half of the sugar-coated flakes are eaten by adults. Why shouldn't we bounce off the walls with our children?

My husband and I have one of the few mixed marriages in this country to survive. Every morning we face each other across the breakfast table like adversaries — he with his oats and me with my sugared flakes. He reads me the percentage of niacin in his cereal, and I tell him I may win a Porsche. He crunches and I snap and crackle. It's a standoff.

I'm waiting for the day when he waves an empty box at me and delivers the line, "Did you eat all of my oats?"

Writer, Producer, Director Wants Perfection Every Time

LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LOS ANGELES — Resplendent and shirtless in a white silk suit, Shelly Garrett looked cool. But he wasn't.

It was near midnight at the Wilshire Ebell Theater in Los Angeles. Moments earlier, a capacity audience had rewarded Garrett's play, "Beauty Shop" with a standing ovation. Some in the fashionably attired, mostly black crowd, congratulated Garrett in the lobby, while others reached up to grab "Beauty Shop" balloons floating to the ceiling.

Although he appeared pleased, Garrett was visibly irritated as he plopped down later in a small office. He punched the air with an outstretched finger. "They're not cutting in on the laughs soon enough," Garrett said, criticizing his cast. "This show has too many laughs in it. It goes on long enough, and these performers have got to come in on their lines faster and cut the audience off. Otherwise, we'll be here all night."

When it comes to his comedy "Beauty Shop," Garrett isn't fooling around. He wrote, produced, directed and promoted the play, and he wants it to be perfect each night. Garrett, 43, who has struggled as a TV actor — with bit parts in everything from "Baretta" to "Police Woman" — and produced local beauty pageants to pay his bills, said he feels that "Beauty Shop" is pivotal to his goal of becoming one of the first successful black presenters of theatrical comedy productions.

Although "Beauty Shop" is only his second play, the all-black production, set in a middle-class salon, has consistently drawn sellout crowds in its scattered engagements at the 1,270-seat Wilshire Ebell during the past 1½ years. It's all the more remarkable because the play's success is not because of high-powered promotion. There are no major stars. Despite pleas to major newspapers, he could not get reviewers in to see his play until two weeks ago, and Garrett only did limited radio advertising.

What really distinguishes the play, which is a produced in a theater located in a predominantly white community, is the amount of humor specifically aimed at black audiences. Garrett said that some white audiences may not get the jokes. "I wrote this for black people because I don't feel there is enough quality black theater in Los Angeles," he said.

To get the word out, Garrett advertised exclusively on black music stations. Mike Mann, promotion director of KACE-FM in Los Angeles, said, "I've never seen this much attention over something with such little advertising. People go to this play expecting a good time, and that's what they get. Then they go and tell someone else, and they come back because they want to see the expression on their friends' faces." In marketing the play, Garrett said that he focused on attracting black women between the ages of 25 and 49. "Black men ... go to sporting events, but black women go to plays," he said. About 95 percent of the show's audiences have been black, he said, and 75 percent of that audience has been female.

Advice Changes Over The Years

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Dear Abby: The advice you gave "Arizona Mom" was the worst you have ever given since you started writing your column. Mom has this friendly, affectionate, little 2½-year-old boy who runs up to strangers and holds his arms up wanting to be held, and you advise her to forbid the child to show any signs of friendliness to a stranger!

You tell her to teach the boy that all strangers may look nice, but some people aren't as nice as they look — that some could even harm him, and he can't tell by looking at a stranger who is harmless and who is not.

And if that's not frightening enough for a child, you go on to say, "If your child defies you, punish him by depriving him of something he considers a treat — and make that punishment memorable!"

For heaven's sake, Abby, if Mom follows your advice, she will make a paranoid, anti-social misanthrope out of that friendly little boy before he's 5!

Please reconsider your answer. — Mother Of Five

Dear Mother: Many agreed with you. And I wouldn't have given that kind of advice 10 years ago, but times have changed. Read on:

Dear Abby: Please allow me to respond to "Arizona Mom," who was concerned about her 2½-year-old being overly affectionate and friendly to strangers — wanting to be picked up and hugged.

You advised Mom to forbid the toddler from talking to strangers. Well said, Abby!

I am now serving a 20-year sentence in a Texas prison for a crime I committed against a 7-year-old boy in Amarillo, where I was on parole after having served time in Colorado, New Mexico and Arizona for sex crimes committed on little boys from 2 years old to 12.

Please tell "Arizona Mom" that there are thousands of people like me (including women!) who look exactly like me — neat, clean and very friendly to children. We are so ordinary in appearance, nobody would suspect us of being child molesters.

Little boys who run to me with outstretched arms, desiring to be picked up, are sending a message: They are starved for fatherly affection. They are easily snatched up to become victims of child molesters such as myself. I can't count the number of little boys I have violated. I know I am sick and have begged to be locked up and put away so I couldn't repeat this despicable behavior. I have had treatment, and I thought I was cured, but the first chance I got, I did the same thing over again.

Please tell "Arizona Mom" never to let her little boy out of her sight. And teach him not to be too friendly to strangers. If she doesn't follow your advice, I promise you her little boy will be sexually molested many times before he reaches the age of 12.

I hate myself the way I am. I am hopeful I will one day be able to get the kind of help I need so I will be normal and free of this terrible curse.

I will never know if this gets printed because I don't have the money to subscribe to a newspaper. I came by your article in The Houston Post by accident when I found a discarded newspaper in the trash can. I don't have a stamped envelope for your reply, so do as you wish with this letter. Just let "Arizona Mom" know that an expert child molester with a string of prior arrests involving little boys between the ages of 2 and 12 knows what he's talking about. — Serving Time In Texas

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA. 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Couple Weds In Morning Ceremony

Peggy Lynn Spivey and Jack Dempsey Gargis Jr. were married at 11 a.m. Saturday. The Rev. Charles Eakin performed the double-ring ceremony at River Park North.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Bryant Spivey of Rehoboth, the bride was given in marriage by her parents. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Dempsey Gargis Sr. of Greenville.

Vocalists were Debra Secttor and J.N. Hill III, accompanied by Paul Ahearn.

The bride wore a full-length, silk shantung gown with a V-neckline and short pleated, puffed sleeves with pearl and sequin re-embroidered lace. The skirt, with a chapel-length train, featured a Victorian dropped waist with a double self-material bow. The gown was designed by Sandy Harber of Atlanta. The bride wore a halo of white, silk roses, baby's breath and seed pearls attached to a fingertip illusion veil. She carried a cascade bouquet of cymbidium orchids and stephanotis with springerii.

Deborah Spivey Hudson was matron of honor for her sister. Melissa Yvonne Gargis, daughter of the bridegroom, was bridesmaid. They wore tea-length cotton floral print dresses, matching garden hats and carried single pink lilies with baby's breath and springerii.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers included Michael Spivey and Christopher Spivey, brothers of the bride, David Gargis, brother of the bridegroom, and Jack Gargis III, son of the bridegroom.

The mother of the bride wore a green and white floral print dress, and the mother of the bridegroom wore a aqua tea-length dress. Both wore corsages of pink alstromeria lilies with stephanotis.

A reception was held after the ceremony, and the parents of the bridegroom gave an after-rehearsal dinner. A bridal shower was given for the couple before their marriage.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to the Pocono Mountains.

The bride is employed by Wachovia Bank and Trust Co., and the bridegroom is employed by the Greenville Fire Department.

Trooper-Father Works To Prevent Suicides

By Robin P. Teater
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — It was a Sunday night when Lee Ann Davis walked into her parents' bedroom where her highway patrolman-father kept his Smith & Wesson .357-Magnum service revolver by the headboard of his bed.

She hid it under her blouse and, as she passed her mother, she said she was going to iron some school clothes for the next day.

The 15-year-old girl stepped outside the house, pulled out the gun, put the muzzle to her head and pulled the trigger. She died immediately.

But her family's recovery since that night in March 1986 has been long and drawn out.

"On going through our own grief and searching for a way to cope with our grief I discovered there was very little for suicide survivors," her father, Trooper Fred Davis, said in a telephone interview from his Haywood County home in Clyde. "It was such a dark subject. There's a taboo and stigma attached to suicide. People feel shameful, guilty and can't talk about it."

The few programs that do exist in North Carolina are found among mental health departments. But Davis said most of the young people who kill themselves are not mentally ill, and those who contemplate suicide are reluctant to call mental health departments because of the stigma.

Yet the problem of youth suicide is on the rise. Between 1960 and 1980 youth suicides doubled from 5.2 per million to 12.3 per million statewide.

Davis, a state trooper for 23 years, decided to do something about it.

At his house in the North Carolina mountains, he had an extra telephone line installed and started Parents Against Teen Suicide, a non-profit support group now has 450 paying members and will be 2 years old next month.

Davis spends most of his off-duty hours working for PATS, receives up to 40 calls a day from troubled youths and parents, and logs hundreds of miles on his car to speak at churches and schools about youth suicide.

"Last year we were involved with 16 people that had the gun to their head or the knife in their hands, and we were able to intervene and stop it," Davis said, adding that 12 of them were youths.

PATS received a letter from a 13-year-old girl with a learning disability whose classmates were making fun of her. The girl's mother found her on the bathroom floor after an overdose of a pain-killer. Davis visited the girl the next day and has provided her with counseling.

In another case, a deputy sheriff called Davis one night about a young man who held a bayonet to his own throat. The deputy wanted to know what to do. After the incident ended, Davis arranged for counseling for the young man.

"There is no group like this in Eastern United States," Davis said. "This thing has grown so rapidly. My wife had to quit her job to become a full-time secretary (for PATS)."

A member of the American Association of Suicideology of Denver, Davis helped to develop a suicide intervention class that is being used mainly in western North Carolina high schools.

This week he presented a grant proposal to the state Department of Human Resources seeking funds for a suicide crisis center and hotline for western North Carolina. He hopes the idea will spread statewide.

Davis felt disappointment this week when the General Assembly adjourned its long session without enacting a measure dealing with youth suicide.

The legislation, drafted by the Youth Suicide Study Commission, would establish a permanent Youth Suicide Advisory Board to coordinate statewide efforts in youth suicide prevention. The board also would help educate the public about the problem and provide training in the schools.

"There's a need to help classroom teachers and school personnel to be aware of the danger signs. Reducing class sizes would help the teacher to see here's a student that's in serious trouble," said Rep. Coy Privette, R-Cabarrus, a member of the commission.

Privette said the measure included a $10,000 appropriation to set up pilot projects, but the bill took a back seat during the long session because of the push for improved pay for teachers and state employees.

If the bill is enacted during the short session next spring, North Carolina will join five other states — Texas, California, Pennsylvania, Connecticut and Florida — with youth suicide prevention acts.

Davis said the public doesn't realize the magnitude of the problem.

Each year, between 1980 and 1987, an average of 130 youths — those between the ages of 15 and 24 — committed suicide in North Carolina, he said.

Nationally, more than 6,000 young people killed themselves last year — one every 90 minutes.

There are warning signs, but most people don't recognize them, Davis said.

"They become hopeless, helpless, hapless," he said. "They try getting involved in several things to take away their emotional pain. ... When these things fail then suicide becomes a solution to the problem. One of the things that young people do a lot of times is romanticize death, but they don't realize that it's final."

Broken homes and relationships, problems in school, drugs and the strain of adolescence are some of the factors that lead to youth suicide, experts say.

Davis' daughter, a tall, dark-haired, blue-eyed teen-ager was an academically gifted student at Tuscola Senior High School in Waynesville and was active in basketball and volleyball.

"She was always smiling," Davis said.

She didn't have a drug problem, but she had a turbulent relationship with her boyfriend, her father said. For more than a year, Lee Ann successfully masked her suicidal feelings.

"Now you can look back and see other symptoms — an irregular pattern in her eating and her sleeping," Davis said. "She wouldn't eat very much and she complained about stomachaches ... In her last few weeks she seemed to become overburdened."

He said victims of suicide often send out signals that are cries for help.

"Most suicidal people don't really want to die," he said. "They are torn between life and death."

This was among several poems Davis and his wife, Joyce, found after their daughter's death that revealed her anguish:

I'm an actress on the stage
Playing the role of a comedian.
Laughing, singing, acting dumb.
Now the show is over,
The room is clearing out.
The lights go off, yet I act on.
I can't let them see me hurt.
I can't show them the real me.
I'm in pain, but they can't know.
So I just have to keep acting.

Couple Marry Friday

GRIFTON — Evon Hudson Wilson and Charles Wayne Garris were married in a garden ceremony Friday at 7:30 p.m. The Rev. Mack Humbles conducted the double-ring ceremony at the home of the bridegroom's parents.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. William E. Hudson of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harrel Garris of Route 1, Grifton.

Kay B. Brady of Route 1, Grimesland, was maid of honor. Chris Garris of Greenville was best man for his father.

The bride was given in marriage by her sons, Robbie Wilson and Allen Wilson. She wore a tea-length gown in candlelight lace over an ivory underslip. The gown had short flutter sleeves, dropped waistline and flared skirt. She wore baby's breath in her hair and carried a bouquet of spring colored daisies, roses and carnations with baby's breath.

The maid of honor wore a tea-length gown of aqua floral silk and carried a long-stemmed mum.

MR. AND MRS. GARRIS

The parents of the bridal couple hosted a reception following the ceremony.

The couple will live near Ayden after a wedding trip to Cape Carteret.

The bride graduated from J.H. Rose High School and is a deputy sheriff with the Pitt County Sheriff's Department. The bridegroom graduated from Ayden-Grifton High School and is employed by Petrolane Gas Co. in Winterville.

Several showers and a dinner were given for the couple before their marriage.

Rand-Holly Vows Said In Florida

ORLANDO, Fla. — The wedding ceremony of Priscilla Blair Holly and Patrick Malone Rand took place at 4 p.m. Saturday. The Reformation Chapel, First Presbyterian Church, was the setting for the double-ring ceremony conducted by Dr. J. Howard Edington.

Parents of the bridal couple are Dr. and Mrs. James Fuller Holly of Orlando, and Dr. and Mrs. Cecil Holmes Rand Jr. of Greenville, N.C.

Ann Driskell Taylor of St. Petersburg, Fla., was maid of honor. Bridesmaids included Denise Marie Trad of Jacksonville, Fla., and Susan Hillary Slemons of Orlando. Melissa Sale of Panama City, Fla., was flower girl.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Ushers included Marshall Holmes Rand, brother of the bridegroom, and Hunter Huss Bost, both of Greenville; Robert Joseph Casey of University, Miss.; Lt. James Fuller Holly III of Hinesville, Ga., brother of the bride; Charles Kernanghan Tarbutton of Sandersville, Ga., and Charles Connors Snow of Macon, Ga.

Music was presented by organist John Bookhardt, trumpeter John Almeria and harpist Rosalind Beck.

The bride wore an original gown designed by Ron LaVece in ivory peau de soie and alencon lace. The fitted bodice had a sabrina neckline, butterfly sleeves of candlelight alencon lace and chapel-length train. A bow of peau de soie was attached to a train. A cluster of alencon lace roses held the chapel-length veil in place. She carried a cascade of white roses, gardenias, stephanotis, freesia and English ivy.

The attendants wore ivory silk tea-length gowns and carried lilies, alstromeria, freesia, roses, stephanotis and greenery. The flower girl wore a white batiste dress with French hand-sewing and lace collar.

MRS. RAND

A reception was held at the Country Club of Orlando.

The couple will live in Edgewater, N.J., after a wedding trip to St. Croix and New Orleans, La.

The bride and bridegroom are graduates of Emory University in Atlanta. She is attending Parsons School of Design in New York, and the bridegroom is employed by Whosesale Warehousing Industries in Fairlawn, N.J.

A pre-wedding brunch, rehearsal dinner given by the bridegroom's parents, several cocktail parties and showers were given for the couple prior to their marriage.

Vows Said On Friday

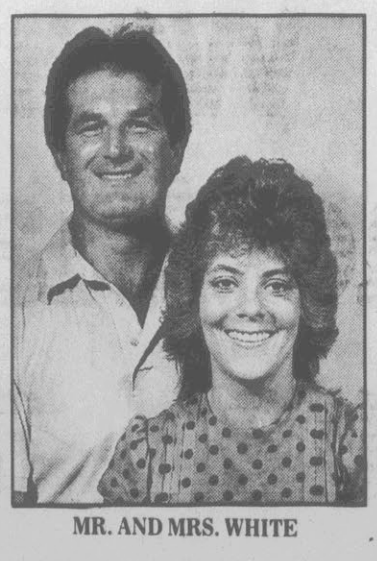
Cheryl Patrice Lawrence and Kelly David White were married at 8 p.m. Friday in an outdoor ceremony held at the home of the bride.

The Rev. Curtis Haislip conducted the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Arlie Lawrence of Greenville, and Mr. and Mrs. David White of Campbellsville, Ky.

The bride is employed with the Boys Club of Pitt County, and the bridegroom is self-employed with Eagle Eye Construction Co.

After a wedding trip to the Bahamas, the couple will live in Winterville.



MR. AND MRS. WHITE

Anniversary Celebrated

James W. and Dannelet A. Alley of Greenville celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary Saturday.

They were honored at a luncheon given by their daughter, Dannelet A. Teske, of Falls Church, Va., at the Ramada Inn in Greenville. Guests included friends and relatives.

The Alleys have lived in Greenville since 1964 and were married in Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 22, 1939.

Comedy Provides 'Good Time'

By Greg Braxton
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

LOS ANGELES — Resplendent and shirtless in a white silk suit, Shelly Garrett looked cool. But he wasn't.

It was near midnight at the Wilshire Ebell Theater in Los Angeles. Moments earlier, a capacity audience had rewarded Garrett's play, "Beauty Shop" with a standing ovation. Some in the fashionably attired, mostly black crowd, congratulated Garrett in the lobby, while others reached up to grab "Beauty Shop" balloons floating to the ceiling.

Although he appeared pleased, Garrett was visibly irritated as he plopped down later in a small office. He punched the air with an outstretched finger. "They're not cutting in on the laughs soon enough," Garrett said, criticizing his cast. "This show has too many laughs in it. It goes on long enough, and these performers have got to come in on their lines faster and cut the audience off. Otherwise, we'll be here all night."

When it comes to his comedy "Beauty Shop," Garrett isn't fooling around. He wrote, produced, directed and promoted the play, and he wants it to be perfect each night. Garrett, 43, who has struggled as a TV actor — with bit parts in everything from "Baretta" to "Police Woman" — and produced local beauty pageants to pay his bills, said he feels that "Beauty Shop" is pivotal to his goal of becoming one of the first successful black presenters of theatrical comedy productions.

Although "Beauty Shop" is only his second play, the all-black production, set in a middle-class salon, has consistently drawn sellout crowds in its scattered engagements at the 1,270-seat Wilshire Ebell during the past 1½ years. It's all the more remarkable because the play's success is not because of high-powered promotion. There are no major stars. Despite pleas to major newspapers, he could not get reviewers in to see his play until two weeks ago, and Garrett only did limited radio advertising.

What really distinguishes the play, which is a produced in a theater located in a predominantly white community, is the amount of humor specifically aimed at black audiences. Garrett said that some white audiences may not get the jokes. "I wrote this for black people because I don't feel there is enough quality black theater in Los Angeles," he said.

To get the word out, Garrett advertised exclusively on black music stations. Mike Mann, promotion director of KACE-FM in Los Angeles, said, "I've never seen this much attention over something with such little advertising. People go to this play expecting a good time, and that's what they get. Then they go and tell someone else, and they come back because they want to see the expression on their friends' faces." In marketing the play, Garrett said that he focused on attracting black women between the ages of 25 and 49. "Black men ... go to sporting events, but black women go to plays," he said. About 95 percent of the show's audiences have been black, he said, and 75 percent of that audience has been female.

Garrett said he knew that blacks would relate to the humor in "Beauty Shop." "White humor is more conservative, but black humor is more down-to-earth, to the point," he said. "Blacks don't want it conservative, they want it like it is. All the great ones — Richard Pryor, Redd Foxx, Moms Mabley — all did it like that."

To get the play produced, Garrett put up his own money, including the $1,200 a night it took to rent out the theater. Early on the cast worked without pay. It was hand-to-mouth until word-of-mouth caught on and the play became a hit. The play now has a 16-member crew. The cast wears costumes provided by Garrett instead of their own clothes. Cast members are also paid between $300 and $400 a week. Garrett said that the budget for this month's 20 shows totaled $50,000, which included rental of the theater. "We made that back the first week," he says.

When "Beauty Shop" completes its current 20-performance run Aug. 27, Garrett has booked the show in San Diego, Chicago and New Orleans. Then in September the play begins, what Garrett says, will be a national 50-city tour, starting in Detroit. Garrett said he hopes that by building momentum on the road the play, which will be retitled "Shelly Garrett's Beauty Shop," will end up on Broadway, though that is only in the idea stage.

Set during two days at the "Pamper Me" salon, "Beauty Shop," the play, revolves around the beauticians and the people who come into the shop: a bossy wife who berates her meek, ex-Marine husband, Herman; a married mailman who wants to date any of the beauticians; a huffy resident of a nearby housing project who wants to know who in the shop has been fooling around with her husband. The story also concerns preparations for a birthday party for Margaret (Adrian Y. Black), a lonely, overweight beautician who is continually ridiculed, often cruelly, about her weight. The show's other main character, Chris (Theo "T" Fitzgerald), is a sassy gay beautician who is not shy about insulting customers or his colleagues, especially when his lifestyle is criticized. Example: "I wasn't always gay," he snaps at at one belligerent patron. "I might be your daddy."

Spiced with melodrama and pathos, the main ingredient in Garrett's "soul food comedy" is insults — fat jokes, ugly jokes, gay jokes, "yo' mama" jokes.

He approached "Beauty Shop" not only as an playwright, he said, but as a businessman. Garrett thought the beauty shop setting would be a perfect vehicle for a comedy. The title came to him before he thought of the theme or plot. "I wanted to go after something that everyone could identify with," he says. "All women have been in a beauty shop, and some men have, too. Women know what goes on in there — the gossip about men, jealousy, loneliness. Men want to know what the women talk about."

The public acceptance of "Beauty Shop," Garrett said, makes up for the commercial failure of his first play, "Snuff and Miniskirts," a comedy that played at the Ebony Showcase Theater in Los Angeles for six weeks in 1985. The play was about an elderly female disc jockey who "tried to be hip and always had snuff in her mouth and wore miniskirts."

"Shelly has a very deep perception of black drama and black comedy," said Bernadette Stanis, who was in the TV series "Good Times" and is starring in "The Living Room," another all-black comedy-drama that Garrett is producing at the Coronet Theater in Beverly Hills, Calif. That play is about a married black couple who flirt with infidelity as their marriage deteriorates. Besides working on the "Beauty Shop" national tour, Garrett is finishing "Beauty Shop 2" which he hopes to premiere in February.

In addition, Garrett said that he plans to write another female-oriented comedy called "The Ladies Room." "I'm trying to figure out where the ladies room will be," he said, laughing. "I don't know whether it will be a nightclub or a restaurant. But it will be about what women talk about."

What black women talk about?

"No. There will be a mix," Garrett said. "There will be black women. But there will probably be a Mexican woman and an Oriental woman. I can get a lot of comedy out of that. There will be probably even be a white lady. There will be one of each. Like they do us. They will be tokens."

Emotional Readiness Essential For Kids Entering Kindergarten

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ITHACA, N.Y. — A child's emotional readiness for kindergarten is more important than his chronological age or his knowledge of letters and numbers.

The Cornell Cooperative Extension's Consumer News Service says kindergarten readiness is most apparent in children who:

— See themselves as capable and competent.

— Have an open, curious attitude toward new experiences, such as going to a friend's house to play, exploring a park or finding new books at the library.

— Enjoy being with children of their own age.

— Can leave home and establish a trusting relationship with an adult such as day care provider, neighbor or librarian.

— Are able to walk, run, hop, crawl and climb.

— Can take care of basic needs such as dressing, eating, using the toilet, blowing their nose.

— Have some experience with small toys such as building sets or puzzles and tools such as scissors, crayons and markers.

— Express themselves clearly in conversations with friends and familiar adults. Some schools suggest that children should know their names, addresses and telephone numbers before starting kindergarten.

— Understand that letters, numbers and shapes are used to provide useful information. This does not mean that a kindergarten child should be able to read.

— Love books, stories and songs and can sit still to listen to favorites.

Kindergarten Parents Should Share Anxieties

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ITHACA, N.Y. — Parents who are having trouble coping emotionally with a child going off to kindergarten should share their anxiety and take an active role in the school to become more familiar with the child's surroundings.

Jennifer Birckmayer, a Cornell University professor, says grieving parents faced with remarks that it must be a relief to have the child in school should offer a serious response such as "I'm finding it more difficult than I expected," or "I feel pretty sad about letting her go." Brief, honest statements like these may elicit sympathetic responses.

While your feelings should not be a burden to your child, it's probably better to share some of them than to have the child worry about you, says Birckmayer, of Cornell's department of human development and family studies. A short, simple statement will suffice: "I know you're going to have a great time at school, but I'll miss you," or "Just a little while ago you were a baby and now you're old enough for kindergarten — I have to work hard on reminding myself of how grown-up you are."

Parents can also volunteer to help in the classrooms or join committees. As they become more familiar with the school and the people in it the separation of parent and child may not seem so traumatic.

Students Susceptible To Attack Of Head Lice

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Chances are pretty good that sometime in your child's school years he or she will get head lice, but with diligence it is easy to eradicate.

The National Pediculosis Association — pediculosis capitis is the medical term for head lice — says most cases are unreported, but estimates are that about 6 million Americans are infested each year.

For reasons that are not entirely clear, school children aged 3 to 10 appear to be most susceptible, but anyone can be infested if he happens to come in contact with someone who has them.

The symptom is red and itchy scalp, and the best defense is knowing what to look for in the hair, getting proper medical treatment and notifying the school or other people in close contact with the child.

Contrary to popular belief, head lice cannot fly, hop or jump. But once on the scalp they can move quickly from hair to hair or scalp to scalp. Therefore it is believed that direct head-to-head contact is responsible for the majority of head lice transfer.

Head lice can live for 24 hours at temperatures of 70 to 80 degrees F. so they can be spread among children via shared combs, brushes, hats, scarves and other clothing.

The first step in treating head lice is using a pediculicide shampoo to kill the lice. The second step is removing the nits, or lice eggs, which are deposited on the shafts of hair close to the scalp with a glue-like bond.

There are several over-the-counter and prescription formulas available, including Ovide Lotion by GenDerm.

Besides treating the hair and scalp, there are other measures that should be taken to help eradicate lice:

— Machine wash in hot water and dry in a hot dryer all clothing, towels and bed linens that the infected child has used in the past three days. If this is not possible, have all of the items dry-cleaned.

— Pillows and stuffed animals that the child sleeps with should be put in a hot dryer for 20 minutes.

— All items that cannot be washed or dried should be sealed in a plastic bag for two to four weeks, allowing any surviving lice or nits to complete their life cycle.

Businesswomen Face Questions Of Competence

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — American women who own businesses find the most difficult hurdle to success is convincing the business community of their competence, according to a survey of successful women entrepreneurs.

The report is based on questionnaires completed by more than 450 applicants for Avon's Women of Enterprise Awards for the past three years. Respondents came from every geographic region in the country, according to New World Decisions of Kendall Park, N.J., which conducted the research.

Most of the women reported feeling like outsiders in a man's world. They were frustrated by not being accepted for their skills and abilities as entrepreneurs. One-third of those surveyed said the greatest obstacle was being a woman in a non-traditional field and-or not being taken seriously. Another impediment was difficulty in raising capital.

The women did not feel inadequate or deficient in business skills, the survey found, but they said they had to work hard to convince a skeptical business community of their expertise.

BETSY DRAKE LEWIS' DECORATING TIPS

WHAT HAPPENED TO RECLINERS?

Some years ago, reclining chairs were all right to sit in, but many of them weren't very nice to look at. Many were bulky, and not decorator oriented.

But then something happened. Recliners today are scaled and styled so that they are good looking and can be used in any room--adding to--and not detracting from the overall decorating scheme.

One reason for the change is that in the old days, recliners were made to conform to the reclining mechanisms, but now the chairs are designed to look right first, and then the mechanisms are made to fit the chair style, instead of the other way around.

And compared to the old days, the variety of reclining chairs today is amazing. There are both masculine and feminine looking recliners in all kinds of fabrics right up to dressy decorator chairs.

It's worth your while to see all that's new in recliners because they DO offer a great way to relax, and they can please your sense of beauty as well.

And to see a good selection of all kinds of furniture, this is a good place to browse.

Where Fantasy Meets Reality

By Hillel Italie
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Terence Davies has been to America a few times now, but the English director hasn't stopped looking for Gene Kelly to appear whenever the clouds roll in.

"The first film I saw was 'Singing in the Rain,'" explained the 44-year-old director. "What an introduction! I thought life was like that. When I'm in America, I still think that everybody goes to high school, everybody has a car, everybody's rich, everybody has wraparound teeth and everyone sings and dances so spontaneously."

Hollywood musicals provided Davies, a native of Liverpool, England, with the perfect escape from his own unhappy life. The youngest of 10 children, his father was a violent man who terrorized the family. He died when Terence was 7. Over the years, his older siblings filled in details of their father's behavior. Davies never forgot.

"When I was growing, I would get up and look at the house and go into the street and say, 'I must remember how it looks today.' I don't know why, but I've got a very accurate visual and aural memory. I can remember conversations verbatim," he said.

"Distant Voices, Still Lives," his new film, represents just a fraction of those memories. Davies recreates his childhood by showing the pain of a working class family in Liverpool in the 1940s and '50s — their hardship increased by a violent father.

But like "Singing in the Rain," or "Meet Me in St. Louis," another favorite of Davies, the characters of "Distant Lives" are sustained by music. At any time, someone is likely to break into song, maybe "Bye-Bye Blackbird" or "Roll Out the Barrel."

"Pastoral Symphony" and "Hymn to the Virgin" are heard in the film, too.

"The family would go to this pub and a few friends would be over and everyone would have a sing-song," Davies said: "They'd go back to the house and have another sing-song. Everyone did it.

"I remember my sister was going to buy '10 Cents a Dance' from 'Love Me or Leave Me' (starring Doris Day and James Cagney). I was agog for weeks on end. We were going to have Doris Day singing in our house!"

Davies new film shows how popular entertainment mixes with real life and how the lines get blurred. He recalled the bright smiles and lilting melodies of Hollywood musicals enhancing the dim environment of his own city.

"When you came out of the cinema into the slums, you didn't think, 'Oh how we're terribly deprived.' It transformed the way you looked at your life. You thought, 'Isn't it fabulous? Wasn't Doris Day fabulous in that number?' You were on a high for three or four weeks.

"My sisters went all the time. I was absolutely thrilled with 'Meet Me in St. Louis.' They lived on Kensington Avenue and we lived on Kensington Street. I was sure we were exactly alike. I was just sorry we didn't have Leon Ames as a father."

He first wanted to act, appearing in amateur productions of "Uncle Vanya," "The Cherry Orchard" and many other plays. In 1972, he went to Coventry Drama and stumbled upon a chance to direct.

"I had written a screenplay, 'Children,' which was the first part of the autobiographical trilogy that I made over a period of 10 years. No one would do it.

"But there was a series on televison called 'Cinema Now,' and it told how I could apply to the British Film Institute for money. I sent a script in and a year later was asked to go to London where I was told to direct."

Life and fantasy again blurred. Davies, a complete novice at directing, was terrified on the set and remembered bitterly the crew's disrespectful treatment. Still, he fell in love with filmmaking.

"I realized when I looked down the camera the first time that this is what I wanted to do, even if I do it badly. You've captured a moment and there was magic between the filming of it and it actually taking place. It's still terribly exciting."

By 1983, with the completion of "Madonna and Child" and "Death and Transfiguration," the second and third parts of his trilogy, Davies had learned his craft.

Truths Revealed In Palazzo Reale Art

By Terry Leonard
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MILAN, Italy — New truths hang within the old walls of Palazzo Reale. As the theory goes, they are such stuff as dreams are made on.

Inside the 18th-century royal palace are the works of 300 artists, poets and philosophers who sought a different truth beyond the boundaries of reason.

The show is "The Surrealists," and it is the biggest exhibition of the movement Andre Breton once described as an attempt "to resolve the previously contradictory conditions of dream and reality."

Breton was the French poet who helped guide and first define the movement in the early 1920s. He was a close friend of Arturo Schwarz, the curator and driving force of the Milan show that presents surrealism's history in almost 2,000 works of art, documents and publications.

"Without false modesty it is the most important exhibition ever presented since the beginning of surrealism," Schwarz said.

Inside the palace hang the hallucinations of artists such as Max Ernst, Yves Tanguy and Salvador Dali — fantastic perspectives in absurd and chaotic dreamscapes, seemingly incompatible objects painted together in a context alien to both of them with a fanciful but meticulous realism. As the French poet Comte de Lautreamont put it, "beautiful as the chance encounter of a sewing machine and an umbrella on an operating table."

This side of surrealism transforms isolated anatomical parts into grotesque creatures. It captures weird and wonderous objects on an ethereal plain.

"Surrealism rests upon belief in the higher reality of specific forms of associations, previously neglected, in the omnipotence of dreams and in the disinterested play of thought," wrote Breton.

Few of the original surrealists, who exchanged their revolutionary ideas and rage against the social order in Paris cafes in the '20s, are still alive.

Salvador Dali died Jan. 23. His images of watery timepieces, melting flesh and disfigured appendages became symbols of irrational expression and insolence for the group of writers, painters and philosophers who had set out to explode the social order. They included the artists Tanguy, Arp, Miro, Magritte and Ernst, filmmaker Luis Bunuel, and writers Breton and Paul Eluard.

Jean (Hans) Arp, Joan Miro and Andre Masson emphasize the abstract nature of surrealism, although their forms sometimes grow into animate, figurative and representational patterns.

With these strange and hypnotic images, Schwarz presents the poets, essayists and philosophers whose words complement the painters' baffling visions but also give the movement direction and perspective.

"In the show I wanted to dispel two common falsehoods. The first is that surrealism is a movement confined to painting. It started as a literary, political and philosophical movement," he said.

Surrealism was mainly a movement of poets and writers with a very strong political commitment, said Schwarz. It was one that increasingly became preoccupied with communism, although the Communist Party would have none of it.

"The other myth is that surrealism is associated with Dali and that's all. He was the least important of the surrealists," said Schwarz.

"No two surrealists are alike. Every single surrealist artist has his own voice. The only thing that unites them is the common endeavor to express the deepest impulses of one's pysche.

"Each artist expresses himself to the best of his ability, trying to put on canvas the phantoms, dreams and desires of his conscious and unconscious."

The idea for the show began when Deputy Mayor Luigi Corbani called Schwarz on Feb. 14 and asked him if he could put together a show on surrealism that would open June 7. A day later Schwarz agreed — on one condition.

This was, he said, "that I be given a blank check to do whatever I wanted."

Time was short and Schwarz wanted to exhibit all the main trends and the key surrealists. He wanted to bring together a collection never before achieved because of budgetary and geographical constraints.

"I worked from four in the morning until midnight every day for four months," said Schwarz.

The result is the show of 945 original works of art and 970 documents, first editions, letters and extremely rare periodicals. He also published a detailed 669-page catalog.

"The show is never the one that its curator would like it to be," complained Schwarz, lamenting his inability to acquire certain works. Still, he says the exhibit includes at least 30 to 40 masterpieces that are essential to a survey of surrealism.

Schwarz also presents the works of the precursors to surrealism, such as Hieronymus Bosch, who represent what he calls "the black romantic trend" that has always existed in art. He also includes works from "companions of the street" — Giorgio de Chirico, Marcel Duchamp and other artists.

Surrealism, says Schwarz, gave the artist the freedom to completely express himself, his inner self, his convictions.

"That is why so many painters were attracted to surrealism because it offered them a complete philosophy of life, not only a cooking recipe such as cubism or impressionism," said Schwarz.

Surrealism had a major influence on the movements that followed it, such as abstract expressionism.

Travels By A Quartet Of Local People

Photograph by David Duffus

Climbers make their way across the rock-strewn approach to 19,340 foot Mt. Kilimanjaro in Tanzania

A Three Country Filmmaking Trek

The recent travels of Kevin Duffus and Charles Moye were on a more extended scale than the trip to Tanzania taken during the same period by Kevin's brother, David and his son, Trey.

A man in Tanzania works on his Habitat for Humanity home

Kevin and Charles, both formerly lived in Greenville. Raleigh is their home now. Together they operate Video Marketing Group, a firm specializing in communications projects. The two mentioned they got their start in television communications in Greenville at WNCT.

"Not long ago, we signed a contract to produce two videos," Kevin explained. "One was for a documentary report for Habitat for Humanity, an international organization dedicated to providing better housing in countries worldwide."

The second contract, Charles said "was for a half-hour documentary tied in with these travels for a global village project to be produced for the Public Broadcasting System."

Kevin said the two, along with a third person, photographer Robert Newton of Shelby, were assigned to film and report on projects in Costa Rica, Tanzania and the Philippines.

The total trip involved 38,000 miles and the use of ten airlines with visits or stops in 11 countries.

For Kevin, a producer-writer, this was his third overseas assignment. For Charles, a communications engineer, it was an initial foreign work travel.

"We travel as lightly as possible," Kevin said, "yet we normally go, especially on this type of assignment, with two full sets of equipment as the land travel is frequently rigorous and tough on cameras and other gear."

Charles admitted that for him "there was the excitement of being in on this type of travel assignment for the first time. In Costa Rica we visited along the foothills on the Pacific side of the country. It's beautiful there, and is just a 45 minute drive from Nicaragua."

Kevin noted that "some of the housing there, being of an open sort, looked like places you might put livestock in. Sanitary conditions were poor and the new housing efforts are doing much to improve things. The work there was carried out with the help of an American team."

Before heading for the second assignment, in Tanzania, the team had to return to the U.S., where they flew from Raleigh to Paris, then from Paris to Tanzania.

Tanzanian Village

"After our arrival at an airport in Tanzania, our destination was Nyumbigwa, a village of about 6,000 people. We were flown there on two small planes piloted by young Americans of the Mission Air Fellowship. It was definitely a fly by the seat of your pants situation, landing on a small dirt airstrip."

Charles said "the flight took us over an ancient part of Africa, mostly rocks and scrub bush, no sign of life."

An American family at Nyumbigwa, from Cheyenne, Wy., lives there the year round. A group of 15 young members of Drive for Youth from England were on hand to assist in the project.

"At Tanzania as well as in Costa Rica and the Philippines, the Habitat for Humanity home-building effort is not a give away program," Kevin said. "People opting for one of the homes get a no interest loan. For something like $500 to $700 they can have a nice home, putting in their own work with the help of work teams.

"In Tanzania, people produced their own bricks. Rather primitive, but effective," Charles said.

Wild Adventures

The journey from Tanzania to the Philippines turned out to be one fraught with unexpected developments. The first leg took them to Uganda, then on to Addis Ababa, Ethiopia.

"At the Addis Ababa airport we saw a large jet just off the runway, its tail in the air. Our plane? We were told there would be a delay of nine hours," Kevin said. "At the airport we befriended a 12-year old Indian girl traveling from Uganda to India. She was frightened, wanted to call her folks about the delay. To do this, we had to call back to Raleigh, get someone there to call the travel agency in Uganda who promised to get word to her folks she'd be late getting to India."

Airport people instructed passengers to spend the day at a hotel. "They casually let us leave without going through airport security or checking any papers," Charles said. "Then, when we returned to the airport to get our flight, security people looked at our unstamped passports, said we were not there legally and therefore they couldn't let us leave."

"It was quite a hassle getting out of there, a real comic mixup," Kevin said.

"Then, at Dubai in the United Arab Emirates, we found out we'd missed our connection to Bombay. We had to wait two days for our baggage to come back. Finally, we

Father And Son Visited Tanzania

"One of the reasons I wanted to take Trey on a real adventure trip was the memory I had of many travels with my father," said David Duffus, Jr., a Greenville attorney. "I have so many fond recollections of going places when my father, Jack Duffus, served in the Air Force and took us to many fascinating places. I decided the time had come to let Trey discover the joys of travel, along with the hardships that are sometimes part of travel.

"It was Trey who suggested a trip to Mt. Kilimanjaro in Tanzania," he said. "This year is also the 100th anniversary of the first recorded climb of the mountain back in 1889."

Trey, a rising junior at Rose High School, said "Mt. Kilimanjaro is a place I have read much about and have always wanted to visit. Dad agreed it was primarily my trip so he agreed we'd go there.

"We left Raleigh and went to New York then to Tanzania by way of West Germany. Our plane landed at the town of Arusha, not too far from the base of Mt. Kilimanjaro. The scenery from the air was wonderful. We came in over the Olduvai Gorge. It was spectacular from the air.

"The scenery was just as spectacular on the ground," David said. "Our travel was with a group of 13 covering the first part of the journey by Land Rovers. The Land Rovers dropped us off on the mountainside at 8,000 feet, with the rest of the trek to be made on foot.

"We were well supported," Trey said. "Our contingent had two guides with 35 porters to take our tents and supplies. We slept in tents. They had to be put up each day after we had made a day's travel.

"We carried light types of food as recommended by experienced planners," David said, "and got our water supply out of streams along the way."

The two explained they were told that Trey might encounter problems as teenagers were normally more prone to altitude sickness than older people as trekkers got nearer to the cold heights of the mountain.

"But it didn't work out that way," David said. "Trey did fine. The only one of the group not to suffer altitude sickness. I was among those who had to drop out at 15,000 feet and turn back without finishing the climb."

"Before it was over, I was one of seven in the group who made it all the way to the top," Trey said. "Sometimes it wasn't easy, especially dealing with the cold. On the final night, after we had reached the summit, it was really cold, registering at five below zero. We slept that night on a glacier. Even though we slept in goosedown sleeping bags, it was still a cold night's sleep I'll never forget."

With his turn back at 15,000 feet, David returned to the town of Arusha.

"I was aware that my brother, Kevin and another former Greenville man, Charles Moye, were due to be coming through Tanzania on one of their stops in an assignment they had. But we were not sure our paths would cross in Tanzania," David said. "We had talked about trying to meet, but had no real idea how it might work out.

"Then one night in my hotel room, I was told 'there's somebody here who wants to speak to you. It was Kevin, of course. So we all had a fine time talking about our adventures. Crossing paths was not a complete surprise, but we had both considered the chances as being unlikely."

Although the principal focus of the trip by David and Trey was the climb of Mt. Kilimanjaro, that expedition took only eight days of the two and one-half weeks they were in Tanzania.

David talked about a visit he made to the town of Tanga while awaiting for Trey to complete the Kilimanjaro climbing expedition.

"Even though I could not speak any of the native language, I was everywhere greeted with warm smiles and with their native word for hello, which is jambo.

"Some of the people could speak a little English, so we managed a bit of conversation now and then.

"I ate native food, which though far different from what most Americans are accustomed to, was not at all bad."

After spending a couple of days in Tanga, which is located on the shores of the Indian Ocean north of the capital, Dar es Salaam, David returned to Arusha to wait for Trey to finish his climb of Mt. Kilimanjaro, and was thus at this town when his path crossed that of Kevin and Charles.

"We spent time going on safaris one week," David said. "On these trips, we visited three wild life parks in Tanzania.

"We were shocked by the lack of wildlife in these parks. The information we received was that with the increase in human population, the former large wildlife population is disappearing. At the present rate of increase, we were told that the human population is doubling throughout Africa every 15 years, and it is expected to be doubled in Tanzania within 20 years."

David said the last of the three parks they visited on safari "was unbelievably spectacular. That was the park that has an extinct volcano, the Ngorongoro Crater not far from the Olduvai Gorge. The whole countryside around the crater is a strange desolate stretch of land and rocks.

"The crater," he said, "is truly a big hole at an altitude of 2,000 feet. "One thing that was rather frightening is that we were shown a place where a Land Rover just a few days previously had dropped over the rough rim of the volcano. Luckily, we had no problems and were able to enjoy the trip."

David said he hopes to take Trey on another expedition in the future — but perhaps not a repeat to Tanzania.

Local Post Offices To Honor New North Carolina Stamp

Ceremonies at three of Pitt County's post office on Wednesday to commemorate the issuance of the North Carolina 200th anniversary stamp have been announced.

The ceremonies are part of second-day ceremonies following the first-day of issuance ceremony of the new 25 cents stamp being held on Tuesday in Fayetteville, site of the 1789 conventon which formally created North Carolina as the nation's 12th state.

The Pitt post offices that have announced Wednesday ceremonies are Greenville, Falkland and Grimesland.

Greenville postmaster Charles Caulk said "ceremonies will begin at 12 noon with Mayor Edward Carter cutting a ribbon to release helium filled North Carolina Statehood stamp balloons.

"Other activities planned," Caulk said, "will include a reception following the noon ceremony in the main post office lobby. We will also have exhibits relating to the design of the stamp."

A special postal cancellation will be available at the post office, along with other retail items featuring the stamp design.

Postmaster Gerald Tugwell in Falkland and postmaster Ann T. Hudson in Grimesland have both announced that ceremonies similar to those in Greenville will take place at their post offices.

At each, activities will begin at noon, followed by a reception. Special second-day cancellations will be available.

Spencer Shops To Mark Railway 125th Mail Service Anniversary

SPENCER — Historic Spencer Shops will honor the 125th anniversary of railway mail service on August 27 with a special postmark and one-day postal station aboard the museum's railway post office Car No. 49.

Visitors may have their mail cancelled aboard the car with a special postmark drawn by Betty Sedberry, a North Carolina artist. Envelopes and stamps may be purchased at the museum. The postal station will be open from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.

Railway mail service began on August 28, 1864, when the first trip was made from Chicago to Clinton, Iowa, to demonstrate the general distribution of mail en route in specially equipped rail cars. Its success resulted in a nationwide network of mobile distributing units, which formed the backbone of postal transportation for well over a century.

At the high point of the railway mail service, immediately following World War II, it employed more than 30,000 postal transportation clerks handling over 90 percent of all non-local mail and working aboard railway post offices and highway post offices on more than 1,500 routes. These postal clerks were known informally as the "Marine Corps" of the post office department and performed the vital job of sorting mail in transit, at terminals and at transfer offices.

New Stamps In The News

Sitting Bull, the fierce 19th-century Sioux Indian chief famous for his involvement in the defeat of Gen. George Custer at the Battle of the Little Bighorn, is honored on a new 28-cent U.S. stamp in the Great Americans Series.

Tatanka Yotanka — "The Sitting Bull" — was born around 1831 in present-day South Dakota. From the beginning, he advocated unyielding opposition to the white man's intrusion and to the loss of the Sioux homeland. When the first Sioux reservations were established in the 1860s, Sitting Bull resolved he would fight to hold what remained of the land.

Sitting Bull's refusal to move his camp to a reservation led to the Battle of the Little Bighorn, although he did not actually take an active part in the battle. He later surrendered to the U.S. Army and set up camp on the Standing Rock reservation. Sitting Bull joined Buffalo Bill Cody's Wild West Show — the most popular entertainment in America at the time — and caused a sensation wherever he went.

First-day cancellations of the Sitting Bull stamp are available in the two usual methods. The deadline is Oct. 14.

You may buy the stamp at a local post office and affix it to your own self-addressed envelope. The Postal Service encourages customers to use this method and gives these orders preferential treatment. Mail to: Customer-Affixed Envelopes, Sitting Bull Stamp, Postmaster, Rapid City, SD 57701-9991. No remittance is required.

If you prefer to have the Postal Service affix the stamp, send, for each cover desired, a self-addressed envelope and 28 cents payment in the form of a check of money order, to: Sitting Bull Stamp, Postmaster, Rapid City, SD 57701-9992.

Standing Order Service

Collectors who wish to order mint copies of new U.S. stamps as they are released might be interested in the Standing Order Service.

The program enables subscribers to establish a deposit account with the Postal Service and receive automatic quarterly shipments of the stamps and stationery items they desire.

All items are sold at face value, with no extra fees or handling charges. Subscribers receive a statement of their deposit account with each shipment, and the service offers an automatic credit card renewal option.

For more information on Standing Order Service, write to: Philatelic Sales Division, U.S. Postal Service, Washington DC 20265-9997.

The French Revolution

The West African nations of Ghana and The Gambia, and the English Channel island of Jersey are among the many countries paying tribute to the bicentennial of the French Revolution, and to PHILEXFRANCE, the world stamp show held in Paris as part of the celebration.

Ghana has issued a set of four stamps and a souvenir sheet. The themes illustrated are from the Revolutionary period and include a mounted field carriage cannon (on the 20-cedis), a French infantryman (60-cedis), a French handgun (80-cedis) and a musket (350-cedis).

The souvenir sheet (600-cedis) bears an artistic illustration of Paris in 1789 at the time the monarchy of Louis XVI was overthrown and replaced by the First Republic.

The Gambia has issued four overprinted stamps and a souvenir sheet. The issues depict various musical instruments and are overprinted with "PHILEXFRANCE 89."

Jersey has issued a set of six stamps. Capt. Phillippe D'Auvergne of Jersey meeting King Louis XVI is on the 13-pence, while the 17-pence depicts the storming of the Bastille. The 23-pence has a scene of women at the Revolution, and the 30-pence illustrates a naval mission led by D'Auvergne invading the French coast. The 32-pence and the 35-pence show two different scenes of D'Auvergne and his men landing on the French shore.

More issues commemorating the French Revolution will be featured in upcoming columns.

Civil War Volumes Issued

GREENSBORO — The third and concluding volume in a series of books covering the Civil War in North Carolina has been published by Piedmont Impressions Inc. of Greensboro.

"Ironclads and Columbiads," a 456-page book, recounts the critical battles and events that shook the coast of North Carolina during the republic's bloodiest war. The coastal region was of great strategic importance to the Confederacy throughout the Civil War, and the most important strategic objectives were within easy striking distance of the main Federal naval base at the mouth of the Chesapeake Bay. The resulting situation had a major impact on the course of the war for both sides.

Author William R. Trotter follows the bloody campaigns and the strategic manuvering. Volume I in the trilogy, "Silk Flags and Cold Steel," covers the Civil War in Piedmont North Carolina, while Volume II, "Bushwhackers!," explores the story of the war in the mountains of the state.

got a seat on an East German flight to Singapore."

"We flew over a cyclone in India, and it was rough," Charles said. "From Singapore we got a flight to Bangkok, Thailand, arriving 42 hours later than our planned arrival time."

In The Philippines

After spending a couple of days in Bangkok, the two departed for Manila. "We flew over Vietnam and came into Manila during a storm with the first attempt for a landing aborted," Kevin said. "At this point we were beginning to wonder if we'd ever make it to our destination."

The Habitat for Humanity project being filmed by the team was located in the town of Balugo in the province of Negros Oriental on the island of Negros.

"It was a far different situation from the countryside of Costa Rica and the small town in Tanzania," Kevin said. "Here were huge squatter settlements. Living conditions were unbelievable. Whole families lived in squalid eight by eight foot shacks with dirt floors. Often those living here were away from their main source of livelihood, having to learn, to adjust to a new way of living."

"Assistance given in the house building project at Balugo also differed from the previous places," Charles said. "Volunteers helping out represented a real international mixture of people — Japanese, Canadians, Americans, Australians and Malaysians. A most colorful congregation of people."

Practical Solutions

Kevin and Charles returned to the United States with 25 hours of video material and something like 700 photographs. They agreed that in their opinion the Habitat for Humanity project is viable, realistic. Providing better housing and sanitary conditions is realized through a combination of self-help and volunteer assistance, sensible financial obligations, and the use of building materials suitable to each geographical area.

Summing up the attitudes noted among people in these three widely scattered locations they traveled to, Kevin said: "Americans often perceive other people in a stereotype light of all foreigners being much the same. One thing is certain, people everywhere, no matter what their language and culture, will respond to being respected.

"We found too that in small ways people react differently to the presence of foreigners in their midst. In Costa Rica, the people had no fear of us and no hesitation in being filmed. In Tanzania, people were at first apprehensive, hid inside their houses until convinced of the reason for our being there, why we wanted to film them.

"And in the Philippines we were warmly welcomed into their homes, no matter how poor, although the people were ashamed, apologized for the conditions of their living places."

"All in all," Charles added, "we encountered real friendliness, a feeling that these people knew why we had come, that it was important, to them and to us."

Solomon Islands Native's Museum Recalls Memories Of World War

By Peter O'Loughlin
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GUADALCANAL, Solomon Islands — Fred Kona has been waiting 20 years for an invitation to Washington to present his shell money and war club to American veterans of the Battle of Guadalcanal 47 years ago in World War II.

Japanese veterans of the battle took him to Japan in 1985 and he's hoping the Americans ask him to the United States. He gave the Japanese shell money, highly prized by Solomon Islanders and usually used to buy brides.

"But I got no money to go Washington," Kona said.

The 50-year-old Solomon Islander says he regards himself as a peace envoy.

He is well known to veterans of both sides who have returned to the site of one the Pacific war's greatest battles.

Among the coconut palms and jungle of his 214-acre plantation, he has assembled a collection of World War II memorabilia.

"Look, this Japanese gun was designed by British, this one by German," he said in pidgin English. "This plane is Grumman Wildcat. Fly very high to dive on Japanese ships."

His collection is virtually the only reminder of the great naval and land battle that began Aug. 7, 1942, and ended the following February. The Americans lost 1,600 men killed and 4,200 wounded in taking the island. Japanese casualties were estimated at 15,000 killed or missing.

Kona has the wreckage of a twin-tailed P-38 Lockheed Lightning that was shot down by the Japanese and salvaged from the sea.

He paid $400 for it.

When he first began collecting wrecked planes from the jungle in 1969, he cut them into pieces so he could carry them.

"I misunderstanding, so I cut them," he said, adding he learned later it would have been better to have kept the planes intact.

"There plenty of good planes all over until the 1960s, but people sold them for scrap."

Hauling fragments of wreckage from the jungles over the years, he built up a collection of planes, guns, shells and helmets that many Japanese and American veterans come to look at when they return to Guadalcanal each year, particularly in August. Many of them weep when they see them.

In recognition of his efforts, the U.S. government presented Kona with an American flag that had flown over the White House in Washington.

Australian veterans, to commerate the sinking of the flagship HMAS Canberra in a famous engagement alongside the USS Houston against the Japanese in the Battle of Savo Island, put up a plaque in his garden.

Next to it is a marble stone memorial from the "Guadalcanal Combined Veterans (USA)."

And it stands next to another simple stone memorial with this inscription in English:

"The Repose of Souls — Tens of thousands of young men who fell in battle sleep here. May the tragic events that occurred on this island in World War II (1942-43) be forever inscribed on our memories. War brings all sides nothing but grief and distress. It must never happen again. To the souls of these departed youth our only words of tribute are the renunciation of war.

"People of the world, let us take this pledge and may the blue sea, the great expanse of sky and this green island be a testimonial of eternal peace.

"Sleep peacefully, fallen friends. "This monument was erected in memory of deceased friends by a former Japanese soldier, August 1983."

North Carolina's Bear Island Is A Turtle Nursery

The Associated Press

Sam Bland, Hammocks Beach State Park superintendent

By Robin P. Teater
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEAR ISLAND, N.C. — When loggerhead turtles crawl ashore to lay eggs here, they find the perfect paradise — an almost deserted island.

The only human inhabitants are a limited number of visitors and a few state park service workers who live in the island barracks.

"It's a prime nesting area for the sea turtles," said Park Superintendent Sam Bland. "The only threat that is here to the turtles is the overnight campers, people walking the beaches at night with flashlights. We let them know they (the turtles) are here. They're real skittish of humans, especially light."

Bland, two park service rangers and two summer researchers are the only authorized people to find and examine loggerhead nests on the island, which was first owned by a wealthy New York brain surgeon and was later deeded to the state by the North Carolina Black School Teachers Association.

Located east of Swansboro in Onslow County, this 3½-mile-long and half-mile-wide island, also known as Hammock's Beach State Park, is accessible only by a free ferry that operates during the summer or by private boat year-round. The ferry transports about 30,000 passengers each year between May and September.

It is one of the few islands along the coast that remains in a natural, uncommercialized state where sea oats and driftwood dress the landscape instead of neon and concrete.

There are only a handful of structures here, including a nature center and boathouse-concession building. One single-lane paved road runs the width of the island and is traveled only by the park service's four-wheel-drive vehicles.

Visitors leave their cars at the park's entrance on the mainland and take a free, 20-minute ride on a pontoon ferry through the marsh-lined Intracoastal Waterway.

They arrive at a resort designed for loggerhead turtles — not people.

"Bear Island is the ideal habitat," said Ann Neville, the island's naturalist for the summer. "I don't know why the turtles don't nest here more."

In the last decade, the number of nests made by loggerheads on the island has declined 35 percent to 40 percent from the 1970s, she said.

"I think they're losing habitat quickly because of dredging that causes erosion," said Ms. Neville. "You're stuck between a rock and a hard place on that one."

She and Bland also said development along the coast elsewhere has robbed the turtles of habitat. And pollution is a big killer of the turtles on some beaches where the turtles die after swallowing plastic bags they mistake for jelly fish.

Assistant Park Ranger Tom Buchanan, a Western Carolina University senior parks and recreation major management major, patrols Bear Island regularly to keep it free of litter.

Not only are loggerheads discriminating about the location of their nests, they also are finicky about when and how they lay their eggs.

"They nest only at night," said Bland, who has seen just one turtle laying eggs in his three years on the island. "There's no real formula to say when they're going to come — it's just hit or miss."

She's out by 7 every morning, searching for turtle tracks, called a crawl, which look like "a big tractor tire that rolled out of the ocean, turned around and went back in," Bland said.

The loggerheads, which weigh up to 500 pounds, dig nests that are 8-10 inches in diameter and 8 inches deep at the base of the island's sand dunes, making sure the nest is above the high tide mark.

Sometimes they make a "false crawl," which means they may have been scared off by a human or decided they didn't like that spot, Bland said.

When they locate a nest, the park service employees mark it with an orange flag and cover it with wire mesh to prevent raccoons from eating the turtle eggs. Some turtles may lay six or seven nests in one season.

During nesting, the giant turtles use their hind flippers to scoop out the sand. Their hind ends heave and they contract, indicating they are filling the nest. Once that has happened, no amount of spectators will stop them.

"Once they're actually laying the eggs, there's not much that will disturb them," Bland said. "I don't think it's a trance-like state, but they're pretty much intent on finishing the job.

"One thing a lot of people don't understand," he said, "once the female drops the eggs, she goes back into the ocean — she doesn't sit on the eggs. It's actually the warmth in the sand that incubates the eggs."

The temperature of the sand determines the sex of the turtle — when the temperature is 31 degrees Celsius or higher the turtles are almost all female; when the temperature is 29.5 degrees Celsius or lower, they are almost all male.

A good nest will contain between 120 and 150 eggs, but the numbers of turtles who leave the nest are lower.

"It's really hard to say what the survival rate is, but it's not good," Bland said. "There's so many pressures on the sea turtle."

The turtles that do hatch alive after the 65- to 70-day incubation period must make it past hundreds of ghost crabs who like to dine on the tiny hatchlings.

"When I know they're going to hatch soon, every night I'll go around and stomp down all the ghost crab holes," Ms. Neville, 27, of Layton, Utah, said. "It's not going to stop them totally, but it might slow them down."

The nesting season mainly runs from June through August, and the number of nests varies. In one week in July, for example, there were 22 nests and six crawls.

"They have to have a lot for survival," Bland said. "They only hatch in darkness to increase their chances of making it to the ocean.

"They generally make a mad dash to the ocean," he said. "All of them will come out of the nest and bust out together and race to the ocean."

Bland said the habits of the loggerheads attract dozens of campers to the primitive island, but not all of them come in search of their nests.

"One night a camper pitched a tent on the beach and knew nothing about the sea turtles," Bland recalled. "And he woke up to find one looking right at him wide-eyed. The next day they found him on the dock scared to death, saying he saw a sea monster."

He also remembered the camper who scolded him after she found him tampering with a nest and obviously didn't realize he was the park superintendent.

"I thought that was pretty good," Bland said. "She told me I was disturbing a sea turtle nest and I couldn't do that."

Syracuse Art Exhibition In Atlanta

ATLANTA — The National Endowment for the Humanities has awarded Emory University Museum of Art and Archaeology, Atlanta, $133,087 to mount an unprecedented exhibit of the ancient art and architecture of the Sicilian city of Syracuse.

"Syracuse, the Fairest Greek City: Ancient Art From the Museo Archeologico Regionale Paolo Orsi," will present an artistic portrait of what was considered in antiquity the greatest of Greek cities, even greater in its time than Athens.

The exhibition will underscore the cultural achievements of Greeks in the West by focusing on the material remains of Syracuse within the framework of the life of the city.

The grant supports the catalogue, exhibition, international symposium and other educational programs.

On loan from the Museo Archeologico Regionale Paolo Orsi, "Syracuse, the Fairest Greek City," will be one of the first displays in the world to honor a Greek city's cultural achievements at the height of its power from the sixth through fourth centuries B.C.

This is the second venture in the Emory University Museum International Loan Project, initiated in 1988. The cultural arts exchange program allows the museum to serve annually as a host institution for works chosen from the great wealth of material stored in foreign museums. In exchange, Emory University Museum of Art and Archaeology will sponsor a research or restoration project at each institution.

The 54 objects chosen for the exhibition — including architectural elements and altars, painted pottery, alabaster vessels, figurines, coins and sculpture — were all discovered in archaeological contexts within the five districts of Syracuse. The in-context arrangement of the exhibition is significant: artifacts, no matter how beautiful, cannot tell a story unless they are properly excavated. When torn from their original site without documentation, their importance in the scheme of daily living is lost.

The seven-month exhibition follows both a thematic and chronological order, to emphasize the emergence of a distinctly western Greek artistic expression that responded to geographical conditions, and the economic, social and political climate.

The thematic areas are the role of commerce in the early development of Syracuse from colony to full-fledged city; the influence of the ethnic, cultural and commercial diversity of Greek Sicily in the development of a distinctly western form of hybrid architecture in Syracuse; the confrontation of the Olympian cults imported from the mother city of Corinth with the strong local cult of the goddess Demeter and her daughter Persephone introduced by the tyrant Gelon; the sources of comic theater in the Italian burlesque and mime centered in Syracuse; the marriage of art, politics and commerce in the creation of an exceptionally beautiful coinage and the importance of the tomb as our greatest source of information for the private life, ethnic and commercial connections and material aspirations of the Syracuse people.

New Art Show At ACC

WILSON — Paintings by Wilson artist Pete Rickard and works from the collection of Lisa and Dudley Anderson of Wilson, will be featured in the opening exhibition of Case Art Gallery for 1989-90 on Aug. 28 at Atlantic Christian College, Wilson.

Included in the Rickard exhibit will be works in pastels, acrylics and mixed media collage done over the past 20 years. She creates canvases by applying layers of fabric and lace and then applying gold and silver leaf. She then saturates the canvas with strokes of acrylic color.

Born in Wilson, Mrs. Rickard moved to Florida many years ago and returned to Wilson in 1982.

Works from the Anderson collection include sculptural glass, ceramics and paintings. A large amount of glass work is by North Carolina artists Richard Ritter and his wife, Jan Williams; Dale Chihuly; Carla Trinkley; Jon Kuhn and Harvey Littleton.

Paintings in the Anderson collection include water color, silkscreen, acrylics and mixed media. Artists represented include Mrs. Rickard and Norbert Irvine of Wilson, Ruth Ogle, Cecilia Flock, Polly Dove and Maude Gatewood.

The Rickard exhibition will continue through Dec. 7. The Anderson collection will be shown through Sept. 27. All exhibitions are open to the public free of charge. Gallery hours are: Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Underhill Named Director

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — Roy Underhill has been named director of interpretive development at Colonial Williamsburg. Underhill is the first person to serve as director of the new department in the Historic Area Programs and Operations Division.

Underhill joined the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation in 1979 as master housewright in the building trades. Projects he has completed for Colonial Williamsburg include the slave quarter, Wolstenholme Towne Fort and the tobacco barn at Carter's Grove and the James Anderson forge, the fire engine house, the papermaker's shop, a poultry house and the carpenter's yard in the Historic Area.

Since 1980, in addition to his work at Colonial Williamsburg, he has been the host and producer of "The Woodwright's Shop," produced by the University of North Carolina Center for Public Television and broadcast nationally on more than 200 public television stations.

He has published three books on traditional woodworking: "The Woodwright Shop," "The Woodwright's Companion" and "The Woodwright's Notebook." Underhill also serves as co-editor of a new Colonial Williamsburg Journal, "Historic Trades Annual."

Literary Meetings

RALEIGH — In early September the North Carolina Arts Council and the National Endowment for the Arts will host two open meetings for North Carolina's literary community.

The one for individual writers will be held Sept. 7 from 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m., and the one for organizations will be held Sept. 8 from 9 a.m. until noon.

The meetings will be held in the parlor of the Chapel of the Cross, 304 East Franklin St., adjacent to the Morehead Planetarium, in Chapel Hill.

For more details call 733-2111.

Writers To Meet Tuesday Evening

The second meeting in the month of August for members of the Greenville Writers Club will take place at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the home of Ida Wooten Tripp, on the Pactolus highway between Greenville and Pactolus.

The Tripp home is located 4 miles east of the intersection of Highway 264 and Greenville Boulevard.

Those planning to attend and who wish to share rides can meet at 7:30 p.m. at the Krispy Kreme doughnut shop on East 10th Street.

The twice monthly meetings of the Greenville Writers Club are held at 8 p.m. each second and fourth Tuesday at various home in Greenville and the local area. There are no membership requirements or fees involved, and the club is open to anyone seriously interested in any form of creative writing.

Book News
FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Mj. Daughtry
SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

It's almost time for school to begin and it's time for children and parents to prepare for the big day. It's time for buying clothes and school supplies. But don't forget the most important thing of all. It's also time to prepare your child's mind.

Take a trip to the public library and meet the librarians. Ask them to teach you how to use the Intelligent Catalog (our computerized catalog). And find out where you can find some good books to help you get your mind ready for school.

For the youngest child, going to school for the first time, there are dozens of stories that will introduce a typical school day to a child. All are geared to reducing a child's anxiety on entering an important, but strange new situation. Among the many others of this type, you might want to try these titles: "My First Days of School," by Jane Hamilton-Merritt; "We Laughed A Lot, My First Day of School," by Sylvia Root Tester; "School," by Emily Arnold McCully; "Starting School," by Janet and Allen Ahlberg, or "Will I Have A Friend?" by Miriam Cohen.

A storybook for parents is a good way to describe "A Child Goes To School," by Sara Bonnett Stein. As a reflection of a child's first year at school, this makes a wonderful shared experience for young and old alike.

For the older child, the long summer may mean a loss of some of the skills learned the previous year. Preparing for school may mean brushing up on some of these skills!

Adults may want to browse through the Parenting Corner at the Children's Library to learn what you can do at home to help your children learn better. Children can check out the regular collection for special help in reading, report writing, science, math, even library skills.

"Family Math," by Jean Kerr Stenmark, is a good example of a book showing how parents and children, working together, can learn to like mathematics by doing activities that make math fun. Topics included are: numbers, time, money, word problems, geometry and even probability. Other useful books about math and science are: "The I Hate Mathematics Book," by Marilyn Burns; "Math Thinking Motivators," by Bob Bernstein; "Preparing Young Children For Math: A Book of Games," by Claudia Zaslavsky; "Creative Math Experiences For The Young Child," by Imogene Forte, and "Science Experiences for the Early Childhood Years," by Jean Durgin Harlan.

Parents often feel confused when it comes time to help children with reading or language arts, especially book reports. Help is on the way. There are a number of books designed to help your child write a successful report. There are also books that will help the parent in the most difficult of chores: picking out a book that the child will be able to read and enjoy reading. Try some of these titles: "How to Grow A Young Reader," by John and Kay Lindskoog; "Reading Begins At Home," by Dorothy Butler; "Learning Time With Language Experiences For Young Children," by Louis Binder Scott; "Good Reading For Poor Readers," by George D. Spache; "Exploring Books With Gifted Children," by Nancy Polette; "How to Write Your Best Book Report," by Elizabeth James, or "Help Is on The Way For Book Reports," "Help Is on The Way For Written Reports," and "Help Is on The Way For Reading Skills" (all three by Marilyn Berry).

Remember to let the Sheppard Memorial Library help you on your way to better grades this school year. And good luck!

"Everybody told me 'no' at first, including my wife. I turned 'nos' into 'yeses' and disadvantages into advantages," says John H. Johnson, Ebony tycoon who rose from welfare rolls to a member of "Forbes 400," the 400 richest Americans.

Nov. 1, 1942, Johnson started Negro Digest at age 24 with $500 he borrowed using his mother's furniture as collateral. His long shot and perservence paid off. On November 1, 1945, he started Ebony; on Nov. 1, 1951, he started Jet. Today he owns "the biggest black-oriented corporation in America, and still believes that excellence knows no boundary and that the man or woman who builds a better mousetrap or sings a better song, or preaches a better sermon cannot be ignored or denied."

Living through the days of Jim Crow, Kennedy's Camelot and the Reagan and Bush administrations, Johnson has met many obstacles. One obstacle was his color which made it hard for him, because of racial discrimination, to obtain office space in the best part of each city; however, he would not be put off. It took calling a fellow Urban League advocate, Winthrop Rockefeller, in Arkansas (where Johnson was born and reared) to finally get office space in Rockefeller Center. Although he ran head-on into the same racial prejudices in Washington, D.C., and Los Angeles, he never gave up. He used every angle until he'd finally get office space on front streets.

He had the same tenacious spirit in advertising. He sent a salesman to Detroit every week for ten years before he finally obtained his first major account with Chrysler and subsequently with General Motors.

Another strategy Johnson uses is hiring competent workers. If the answer he gets from his top executives are confusing, he says, "I draw the line in the dust. If the executives don't solve the problem, I'm going to find new executives."

In Johnson's hectic life where every hour brings new challenges, the millionaire copes well. When at the last minute a hot story has broken in Atlanta and the magazine is locked up, ready to print, he calls the plant to tell them to hold the form for a new story and new head.

He takes his mother's advice and adds orange juice to the necessary caster oil. In one such case, that meant adding entertainment to Ebony to lure readers. "When you get their attention, you try to educate and uplift and grapple with the serious issues of the day." When things get too hectic, Johnson remembers something Mary McLeod Bethune once told him: "The darker the night, the brighter the stars," and he keeps moving.

A more recent move was to accept an invitation from President Reagan to a state dinner for General Secretary and Mrs. Mikhail Gorbachev; however, when he tells his secretary to make hotel reservations, he makes sure she doesn't book him at the Shoreham. He hasn't forgotten how, before he became rich, a clerk told him that the hotel didn't rent rooms to Negroes. "The Shoreham has changed since then, but I haven't — and I haven't forgotten," says Johnson. Neither has be forgotten the 40 or 50 times he's dined at the White House in the last 45 years.

One of the author's most satisfying moments was the time he took his mother, Mrs. Gertrude Johnson Williams, to the White House and introduced her to the president. This is the woman who left the familiar Arkansas City, to take her son to Chicago — the only place she knew he could get a high school education. Johnson's enjoyment comes from believing, as he introduces his mother to the president, that his mother "thought on that day that her sacrifices had not been entirely in vain."

Johnson also believes that if he knows enough about people (their interests, passions, hobbies and desires) and if he has enough time, he can sell anybody anything. He bases his presentation on 1) grabbing the client's attention in the first two or three seconds with a fact or an emotional statement that appeals to his business sense 2) finding the vulnerable spot (a dream or a hope or a commitment to a person or thing) 3) finding and emphasizing common ground. He admits that he, at times, has had to stoop to conquer but with integrity.

The greatest thing Johnson does with his how-to book is share not only secrets of success but also his vision. He says, "My story is not a black story or a white story. It is a GREEN story. This is how I made it, and how you can make it too!"

The book is available at Sheppard Memorial Library.

BOOK ART

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — "Artists of the Book: A Facet of Modernism" is a collection of 47 books that will be shown at the Toledo Museum of Art Sept. 20-Oct. 22.

According to the museum, the books, made between 1985 and 1988, "reveal current trends in the art of the book. While some books are traditional, others are innovative in format, typography, illustration and binding." Books published by Vincent FitzGerald, New York City, and Kaldeway Press, Poestenkill, N.Y., are featured.

Making Lye Soap, A Backyard Art

By La Rona Murray

Mae Etta Godley is perhaps one of the few individuals in Pitt County who knows and practices the art of making soap from simple ingredients. It was from years observing the soap making processes practiced by her mother, Mrs. Carrie Ann Powell, that Mrs. Godley learned how best to turn out a pot full of the strong soap.

Now 76-years-old and living at Midgett Field just off Stantonsburg Road, Mrs. Godley spoke of one of her earliest memories about soap making. "It was when I was a little girl that some prisoners had camped at Penny Hill to work on the roads. They used prisoners then to do that work," she said. "The cook for the group had accumulated some extra cooking grease so he asked my mother to make soap for them."

Explaining her method of making soap, Mrs. Godley said "First of all, I use one box of lye, four pounds of grease and a bucket of water. I cook it in the backyard in an iron pot that I once used for boiling clothes. After making the fire under the pot, I melt the grease and add the water and lye. When it gets boiling hot, I keep stirring it until it has the desired thickness, when it ropes from the stirring stick like candy. I know then it's cooked, ready to let cool."

The mixture remains overnight in the iron pot to cool and set. "In the morning when it has formed into a solid mass, I cut the soap into squares and place them on a board to dry."

When the strong soap has dried, it's ready for use, primarily for washing clothes.

One rule that Mrs. Godley follows in making soap is "I never make soap in the months that has the letter R. I don't know why, though. I've just always heard that it wasn't good to do that, so I don't."

Conservation about soap making led Mrs. Godley to talk about laundry in the days before the widespread use of washing machines.

"In those years, wash days were long," she said. "The first step was to scrub the clothes in a tub of hot water, rubbing them with a bar of homemade soap. Scrubbing was done on a washboard made of tin with ridges. Sometimes the washboard had wood or glass ridges."

After a certain number of items were scrubbed through the first water, they were placed in an iron pot that contained bits of soap and boiled. When they had boiled for awhile, they were lifted from the pot with a stick and put into a tub of clean water, scrubbed again and rinsed in another tub of water."

Now on washdays Mrs. Godley melts a little of the soap and pours it into her washing machine. "Sometimes I use homemade soap to wash dishes," she said.

She laughed when telling of the experience in using her first washing machine. "I was so used to boiling clothes that I continued to do that for a while before putting them into the machine, but I soon found it better."

Mrs. Godley, a widow and the mother of 12 children, avows that "through the years, my homemade soap has been important in keeping my family in clean clothes."

Today, sparkling clean clothes drying on the clothesline in her back yard are a testament to the cleaning power of her homemade soap.

Bruce Piephoff Is New Visiting Artist

By Jerry Raynor
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Greensboro native Bruce Piephoff, poet, folksinger/songwriter, is the 1989-1990 Visiting Artist at Pitt Community College, succeeding American Indian artist Ken Marsh.

Piephoff, who came here for the assignment on August 1, said he has had time to begin becoming acquainted with Greenville. "I really like what I've seen a lot. I feel that Greenville combines the best of a college town and a rural community. It's bigger than the two places I've lived in recently as a North Carolina visiting artist, and there's obviously a lot more to do. My first impression is that Greenville is a nice mix of several elements."

Now in his fourth year in the North Carolina Visiting Artist program, Piephoff previously served at Southeastern Community College in Whiteville for two years followed by one year at Brunswick Community College south of Wilmington.

Piephoff has a B.A. in English and a M.F.A. in creative writing from UNC-Greensboro.

"When I started school at Chapel Hill I intended to be a basketball player," said the six foot, four inch artist, "but since I was the shorty of those with aspirations to play, I didn't quite make it. It's perhaps just as well, the way things turned out, but I still enjoy playing basketball."

Primarily a guitar player, Piephoff also plays the harmonica. "Folk music is my great love," he said. "And it works splendidly for situations like being a visiting artist because of its simplicity. I can play and sing without the problems of lugging around equipment and accoustical support."

Piephoff's experience as a folk singer goes back 20 years to his student days at Carolina. "Soon I was so involved with entertainment that I left school to travel and perform, sometimes alone, sometimes with a trio I had formed."

Over a period of years, these performances took him throughout the United States, into Canada and overseas to Holland. He has performed at Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C. and at music festivals in North Carolina, as well as in concerts in numerous colleges, public schools and clubs.

Performance dates have also taken him to national folk venues like the Bitter End in New York City, the Exit/In in Nashville, Tenn., and McDibbs in Black Mountain. He has shared the stage in concert with the Greg Allman Band, Riders in the Sky, Big Boy Henry, Gene Simmons, Hot Tuna and others.

"I sing some traditional folk songs," Piephoff said, "but mostly I sing my own compositions, and I've written many, some of which have been recorded." (Records and cassettes of his work are available at the Record Bar, Carolina East Mall; at Tracks Records, Pitt Plaza, and at Flyin' Cloud Records).

"I also enjoy writing poetry. My songs, as well as my poems, deal mostly with people, with displaced farmers, hobos, derelicts, drifters, lovers, orphans, gamblers, winners and losers."

Poetry followed on the heels of songwriting. "Eventually, I decided the time had come to get back to my education," he said. "I enrolled at UNC-Greensboro and stayed on for a master's degree in creative writing. I had the good fortune to study with Fred Chappell and Robert Watson, both talented men and great teachers. Chappell encouraged me to try out for the visiting artist program and I'm grateful to him for his interest and assistance."

A member of both the North Carolina Writers Network and the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, Piephoff has headed workshops in creative writing with children in North Carolina and for the South Carolina Arts Commission.

He and his wife, Laura Dodd of New York City, have a four-year old son, David. "Laura shares my interest in outdoors activities like hiking, though she is most keenly interested in painting and the crafts.

"Between my work and my writing, I don't have a great deal of free time for other things, but I do take time whatever the circumstances to be with David, to take him places and to play with him. I've discovered that a child is a great joy."

In his last assignment at Brunswick Community College, Piephoff lived at Holden Beach. "I became very much intrigued in collecting seashells and hope to follow this hobby at other coastal locations while I'm living in Greenville," he said.

In keeping with the traditional role for visiting artists, Bruce Piephoff will be available for performances of his own works and for workshops in poetry composition and songwriting. Appearances are free and available to any civic, school, church or other non-profit organization throughout Pitt County.

To schedule a workshop or performance appearance by Piephoff, call the community colleage at 355-4260.

Steuben Glass Display

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Those whose eyes shine at the thought of fine crystal can stop by the Steuben store on Fifth Avenue where there are some landmark pieces on display through Sept. 2.

"The History of Steuben Design, 1903-1989" consists of about 90 works, including a selection of the richly colored and iridescent glass of Frederick Carder, who founded Steuben in 1903.

This glass of art nouveau influence was much treasured for about three decades. Carder called it Aurene. It was similar to Tiffany's Favrile, and evidently the two men invented their glass about the same time, using different chemical processes.

The penchant for colored glass gave way to a change in taste toward the simpler, colorless glass styles that are still current. The purity and brilliance of the latter contrast interestingly with the earlier glass in the retrospective.

Among the pieces on display is a pair of glass slippers, c. 1925, said to have been worn by Gloria Swanson in the movie, "A Kiss for Cinderella." The exhibits also include works designed by Henri Matisse, Isamu Noguchi and Georgia O'Keeffe.

The exhibition, organized by Suzanne Frantz, associate curator of 20th century glass at the Corning Museum in Corning, N.Y., contains works on loan from the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Corning Museum of Glass, Steuben and private collectors.

Havelock Concert

NEW BERN — "Virginia Rail" will perform the second concert in the "Sounds of Summer" concert series, presented by the Craven Arts Council and Gallery, from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. Aug. 27 in Havelock City Park.

The band is made up of Doug Austin, mandolin; Damian Miller, vocal and upright bass; Melanie Muller, vocal; Paul Muller, vocal and guitar; Malcolm Pulley, banjo, and Dean Shostak, fiddle.

The concert is free and open to the public. A lawn chair or blanket is suggested. In case of rain, the concert will be held at the Havelock Community Center.

Lumina Night Scheduled

WILMINGTON — Bathing beauties, silent films and the big band sounds will be joined with a classic 1950s sock hop Saturday from 8:30 p.m. until midnight for the fourth annual Lumina Night at the Blockade Runner Resort Hotel.

Tickets are $25 per person with the proceeds to be used for exhibits in the New Hanover County Museum of the Lower Cape Fear, Wilmington.

Lumina, the "Fun Spot of the South," operated at the southern end of Wrightsville Beach between 1905 and 1973. The fabled pleasure-palace hosted the best big bands of the era and presented silent movies projected on an outside screen located in the surf.

This year Lumina Night will feature the Joe Childers Band playing big band music in the Robert E. Lee Ballroom while a Rock-O-La juke box will fill the Nighthawk Room with classic hits from the 1950s. Other amenities include a swimsuits exhibit of Lumina bathing beauties and an hors d'oeuvre buffet.

Silent movies over the ocean will include favorites like "The Great Train Robbery," "The Bangville Police" and "Felix in Fairyland." The silent movies are free.

For more details and tickets call 341-4350.

Tamagawa Dancers To Perform

RALEIGH — From Thursday through Aug. 30, North Carolina State University will host the Tamagawa Dance and Drama Group of Tamagawa University, Tokyo.

This company of 38 students and eight faculty will perform a series of Japanese folk and classical dances and creative dance drama in Stewart Theatre located in the NCSU Student Center.

Established in 1929, Tamagawa University is committed to arts education particularly in the fields of drama, dance and music.

Since 1961, the Tamagawa Dance and Drama Group has toured Mexico, Germany, Denmark, Switzerland, Great Britain and North America for the purpose of building a greater understanding of Japanese culture.

The company has received numerous requests to perform and invitations to international festivals.

Performances take place in Stewart Theatre Aug. 26, 27, and 28, with an 8 p.m. curtain. Tickets for the general public are $4 with free admission for students. For additional information and ticket orders, call 737-3104.

The East Coast Riverias will perform at the Festival Friday

Watermelon Festival Opens In Winterville On Tuesday

WINTERVILLE — The fourth annual Winterville Watermelon Fesitval, sponsored by the Winterville Jaycees, is scheduled to run Tuesday through Saturday.

The festival opens Tuesday with the Miss Rind (womanless) Beauty Pageant. The pageant will be held at the A.G. Cox multipurpose room and starts at 8 p.m.

On Thursday six young ladies will compete for the crown of Winterville Watermelon Festival Queen. WRQR's John Moore will serve as master of ceremonies. The pageant will be held at the D.H. Conley High School auditorium beginning at 8 p.m.

On Friday at 6 p.m. the Winterville Ruritans will host games at the Winterville Community Building. Children's games and rides will take place downtown on Railroad Street. At 7:30 p.m., the Motown, top forty band, "Cream of Soul," will be on stage.

Saturday's events are all scheduled downtown, beginning at 8 a.m. with a flea market. At 9 a.m., the parade begins; over 50 entries will be featured. Grand marshall and festival guest is Wesley Whitehead, mayor of Winterville, Ga. Amusement rides, pony rides, games, contests, arts and crafts and concessions will be open all day for the public. At noon, the Watermelon Eating Contest will begin, followed by a variety of afternoon games and entertainment, including bands, cloggers, a musician, a karate demonstration and dog training.

Saturday night's entertainment features the top forty and beach band, "The East Coast Riverias," beginning at 7:30 p.m. at the downtown festival site.

"The festival gives the Jaycees an opportunity to promote the watermelon as a nutritious summertime treat, promote our town and local merchants," Avery said.

Dinah Shore Returns To TV

By Joe Edwards
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Dinah Shore, a television darling in the 1950s and '60s and '70s, has returned to the tube with her own cable-TV show.

On The Nashville Network's 30-minute show, "A Conversation With Dinah," she talks with such guests as former first lady Nancy Reagan, former President Ford, comedian Bob Hope and actor Jack Lemmon.

"I really am excited," Shore said in a telephone interview from her Los Angeles office a few hours after she had played a round of golf.

"At first I wondered, 'Why am I doing this?' How can you have a different kind of talk show? But this is not really a talk show. It's more of a conversation.

"The feeling is just right," she said. "We don't have a studio audience. We only have each other. We react and interact."

It's been five years since her daytime talk show, "Dinah and Friends," went off the air after beginning in 1979. From 1974-79 she was in "Dinah." From 1970-74 it was "Dinah's Place."

A much older generation remembers her from "The Dinah Shore Chevy Show," a variety program that aired from 1956-63. Even earlier, she was on "The Dinah Shore Show" which lasted from 1951-57.

At various times in her life, she's also been known as a singer, cookbook author, Burt Reynolds companion and golf tournament host.

When her current program airs in 1990, it will be her fifth decade on TV.

Reflecting on her enduring career that's sent her into millions of American living rooms, she said one key factor has been that she's not felt intimidated.

"I don't know how to be afraid of that old red eye," she said about the camera and its crimson beacon. "It's one person to me. I don't visualize large numbers of people out there. I'm comfortable with it."

She said people will always identify her with the long-running slogan from her variety show, "See the USA in Your Chevrolet," which she sang with gusto on every program as her right arm punched the air for emphasis.

"They all remember that and the commercials," Shore said. "They associate me with the variety show more than with anything else."

She recalled that the one moment she cherishes most on TV was when her daughter, Missy, brought a puppy onto the set in the early '60s. The playful dog wandered into camera range and wound its leash around the performer as she sang a romantic ballad live.

"I'll never forget that," she said. "It was precious. Jack Benny said it was the funniest moment he'd seen on television."

Her age is anywhere from 68 to 72, depending on which reference book you believe. One of her cookbooks lists her birth date as 1920. Other books list it as 1917 or 1921. These days, besides playing plenty of golf, she performs an average of one concert a month and watches television as much as she can.

"I'm a TV junkie," she said. "I watch all the time. I laugh out loud at 'Cheers.' It really is good. I stay up to see 'Saturday Night Live.' I love 'In the Heat of the Night.' How can Carroll O'Connor do anything wrong? And Angela Lansbury."

Some highlights of conversations on her new show:

— Reagan: "There's no rule that says just because your husband becomes president of the United States, you no longer have a right to express yourself or give your opinion. I was criticized for that, but I still believe I had the right to say what I thought."

— Ford, about pardoning former President Richard Nixon: "I was spending about 25 percent of my time with lawyers and counselors asking for my decision on Mr. Nixon's tapes and papers. I finally decided the only way to get that problem off my desk in the Oval Office was to sign the pardon so I could concentrate 100 percent on the problems of 230 million Americans."

"The conversations we have are revealing without being hurtful," Shore said. "I don't want people going away saying, 'I wish I hadn't said that.' We do no editing."

New Dance Studio To Open

By Jerry Raynor
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

An Elizabeth City dancer, Patricia Sawyer, has arrived in Greenville and is opening a new dance studio, Dance Carolina, at 412 Evans Street on the Downtown Mall.

A dancer since a young child, Ms. Sawyer has a background of professional dancing in concerts, on television and in the musical theater. She has had experience in teaching dance in Virginia and North Carolina.

Early dance training was with the Norfolk Civic Ballet under the direction of Gene Hammett. At 16, she received a full scholarship to study with the Joffrey Ballet as well as a scholarship to study at the Luigisk Jazz Center, both in New York City.

Ms. Sawyer's performances in dance have been with te Baltimore Chamber Ballet, the Richmond Ballet, Edward Stewart and Company, and the Dallas Jazz Factory. She has been a leading dancer with the Virginia Opera Association. Dance partners with whom she has danced include Gary Flannery (a partner for Shirley MacLaine), Glenn White of the Joffrey Ballet and Edward Myers of the Pennsylvania Ballet.

On television, she appeared as dancer/entertainer in Miss America pageants in North Carolina and Virginia. In musical theater, she has performed in touring company productions of "The Sound of Music," "Gypsy" and as Anita in "West Side Story."

Ms. Sawyer's dance teaching experiences have been on the faculty of the Tidewater Ballet in Norfolk; the Richmond Ballet, the Baltimore Chamber and in a gifted and talented program in the Hampton Roads, Va. public schools.

In North Carolina she has been director of the Elizabeth City Ballet and has taught dance in the public schools of both Currituck and Pasquotank Counties.

Ms. Sawyer says faculty at the Greenville studio will include guest artists from New York and California. Initial registration begins Monday and continues through Friday between the hours of 3:30 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. Persons interested in details on dance classes she will offer through Dance Carolina are to call 758-0684.

Chasing Butterflies

By Elliott Minor
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

VALDOSTA, Ga. — High school students will chase butterflies in south Georgia this fall to learn more about the mysterious movements of two colorful insects that flutter throughout the Southeast.

"Most people are fascinated about butterflies simply because they're pretty," said Jay Whitesell, an entomologist at Valdosta State College. "I don't particularly care that much about butterflies. I'm just interested in their migration."

Armed with an improved butterfly trap, the students will focus on two of the most common species in the Southeast — the cloudless sulphur and the Gulf fritillary.

The cloudless sulphur is an ordinary-looking yellow butterfly. The fritillary is reddish-brown with black spots atop its wings and iridescent aluminum-colored spots underneath.

"Here are butterflies that are so obvious and we don't know where they're going or how they get there," he said.

Whitesell, a professor of secondary education, said the butterflies are thought to migrate to the Florida peninsula in the fall and fly as far north as southern Illinois in the spring.

"I just want to know where they're going and how they get there," said Whitesell, who once conducted a study of crickets and katydids for the Navy. His research showed that insect sounds could be used in jungle warfare to signal the presence of enemy troops.

This fall he will be assisted by science teachers and their students at 23 high schools in such places as Hazlehurst, Ashburn, Tifton, Leesburg, Pelham and St. Marys.

With 10-by-10-foot nylon nets supported by steel tubing and wood, they will trap and mark butterflies to trace their speed and movement.

The schools will have stamps to print information on the butterflies' wings. One stamp has a school code and the date of capture. The other advises people who find or recapture the butterfly to mail it to the college.

Students also will mark the butterflies' wings with pink paint to make the insects more obvious.

"Hopefully, downrange another trap will pick them up," said Whitesell. "We hope to capture some marked butterflies so that we can prove the migratory route and learn more about the process of turning along the East Coast."

During their fall migration to Florida, the cloudless sulphurs fly toward the southeast, but seem to change direction about 50 miles from the Atlantic Coast, he said.

"The question is how do they know the coast is coming? What cues do they use?," asked Whitesell.

The fritillaries fly closer to the coast before changing directions, he added.

Clouds Hide Total Lunar Eclipse

If weather had permitted, Americans could have viewed a rare total lunar eclipse Wednesday evening. Lunar eclipses occur when the moon passes through a shadow created by the Earth, blocking the sun's light. The next eclipse will be in December 1992.

GREENVILLE FACILITY

When RPS developed its new small package delivery service-we also developed a great opportunity for you.

Here's what's available to you as an owner/operator of an RPS package van:

•Participation in the delivery business created by innovative, small package shipping system that has used state-of-the-art technology to expand into a 42-state service in just four years.

•The equipment and financing resources of an aggressive subsidiary of Roadway Services, Inc., one of the country's major transportation enterprises.

•The kind of income that matches your ambition and reflects how high you can climb when you put yourself in charge.

•Access to group health and life insurance.

If you're a delivery driver, courier or have small package pickup and delivery experience, you owe it to yourself to see how far ahead you could be as an owner/operator with our exciting company.

ENTRY LEVEL AND ASSOCIATE SALES REPRESENTATIVE

We're Looking for the inside story.

At Pitney Bowes, when we look for salespeople, we always look beneath the surface. Because we know that it's what's inside that makes a successful outside salesperson. So we look for drive, charisma, experience and ideas. For people whose view of the world is colored by success. And whose stated career plans place an accent on achievement. To this select few, we give some of the best training the industry has to offer. We back them with a line of popular electronic office systems-including copiers and automated mailing systems. And then we express our confidence by putting them on a salary and lucrative bonus structure, plus a terrific benefits package.
If you think you've got the inside story we're looking for, call Pam Marrs at 1-800-662-7495, Tuesday, August 22nd, between the hours of 8:30-4:30pm.

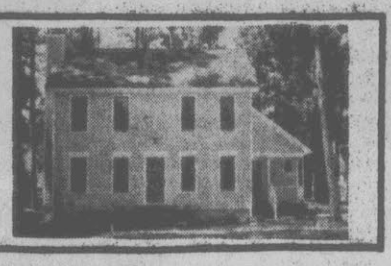
Bill Clark Has A Home That Is Perfect For You And Your Family

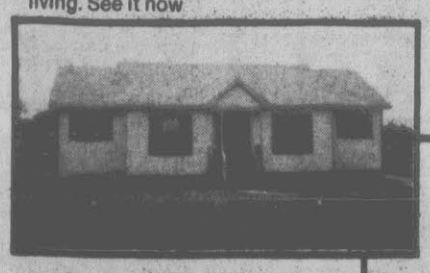
Pitt County's largest builder has developed and built in many neighborhoods in and around Greenville. Each has a different atmosphere and appeals to individual lifestyles, but two common elements are a top priority, quality and affordability.

Bill Clark's homes are designs that make the most of the floor space available, extras such as cathedral ceilings, custom windows, large kitchens and lots of closets make each home special. Before you invest take a look at what you could get from Bill Clark.



1. Sandlewood- Country charm and plenty of fresh air. This new neighborhood give you spacious lots - wooded or cleared - just minutes east of town with the quality of life you deserve starting in the mid $80's

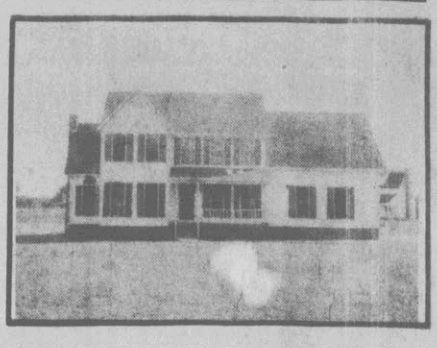
2. Quail Ridge- The best reputation for townhome living can only belong to Quail Ridge. Flats go fast, but floor plan selection is plentiful. Priced in the $60s and $70s affordability is a fact. Greenville's most convenient location off 14th St. A solid investment in contemporary living. See it now



3. Fox Chase- Growing fast with features you might expect in a more expensive area. These homes start in the Mid $60s and keep that colonial and contemporary alive. The plans can't be beat. For closet space and livability. Large lots too. Perfect first time buyer choice.

WINDSOR

4. Windsor- You just said it all for Greenville's fastest growing neighborhood. Extra, Extra, Extra is what you have on spacious wooded lots, many with double garage and playrooms. Starting in the low $100's come on up to country classic.



5. Cherry Oaks- Some neighborhood's never grow old and Cherry Oaks still offers the best buys in 2 story family homes with location and status. Only a proven subdivision can give. The pride in ownership shows — offered in the $130's.

6. Arbor Hills- And they said it couldn't be done! More square feet on a large lot, Wintergreen schools and priced in the $70's & $80's. Here's proof—new can cost you less in these well designed Bill Clark homes-East of Greenville across from Lake Glenwood. Come on out, you'll be surprised!
