

SPEED CLEANING

Clean your home in half the time or less! GUARANTEED!

"Week 1 took me just over 2 hours. Week 2 took about an hour and fifteen minutes. Week 3 took 55 minutes. Week 4 took 46 minutes. I'm sold!"

Michelle Fugie, Vermont

"I'm thrilled by your cleaning system. It's the answer to a prayer!"

No-Charles-Isakhetp, Georgia

"I read your Speed Cleaning book and thought it was terrific! I am tired of wasting my time cleaning the wrong way. My husband and I both work full time and have little time. I stand behind the Clean Team System 100%."

S. Brown, Illinois

"After almost 40 years of cleaning, your book is proving that you can teach an old dog new tricks"

Colleen M. Hartley, California

If you're still cleaning your home the old-fashioned way, you're costing yourself time. Precious time. Leisure time. Time you'd rather be spending at the movies, at the beach, at the game or with friends . . . anywhere else, in fact, but in cleaning your house or apartment.

Now, here's cleaning help for anyone who has better things to do than vacuum or dust or scrub a home for hour after hour. Here is SPEED CLEANING.

This book will give you back your weekends—No exceptions! No excuses! No kidding!

Enter the Clean Team, professionals who clean San Francisco homes 10,000 times a year. Let them show you how they can clean an average home in just 42 minutes—start to finish—and a one-bedroom apartment in about 21 minutes.

They've timed and tested every sequence, technique and product imaginable. They know what works (a step-saving apron like the pros wear, clear ammonia, not sudsy, and a feather duster—yes, a feather duster) and what doesn't ("bargain" mops and brushes that aren't, wasting time, money and effort by using too much cleanser or cleaning where it's already clean, and running back and forth to the trash). They don't work harder, just smarter and faster. And their waiting list has often been six months long.

Get through with housework—and out of the house—faster

Here are the professional trade secrets that have put their services in such great demand—at a fraction of the cost. Just follow their simple approach to streamlining housework as they take you through the whole house, step-by-step . . . room-by-room . . . from the horrors of kitchen and bathroom cleaning to pet hair and cookie crumbs on the living room couch.

The result will be a sparkling clean home in under half the time it used to take. Very clean. Very fast. Very easy.

Work smarter, not harder

You'll save hours every week. Hours that add up to days you'll spend not cleaning the house.

Here's just some of what this book shows you:

- ★ Tested systems that make every move count
- ★ How to clean the bathroom in 12 minutes
- ★ Places often overlooked by distracted dusters
- ★ The cleaning products that work best . . .
- ★ How using less cleanser can save you time and effort
- ★ A simple idea that may save you 20% or more vacuuming time
- ★ Methods that work for a single person or a whole household

So, if you have better things to do with your weekends than housework, you owe it to yourself to look into SPEED CLEANING.

"I am a senior citizen who has been cleaning house for many years. But after reading the first 20 pages of your book I realize I never learned how to get organized to start cleaning! I wish I had received this 40 years ago."

—Mrs. W.A. Ingle, Montclair, CA

"I read it 'just for laughs' and this morning I tried it, 'just for laughs', and now I've quit laughing!"

—Shirley Voris, Yusta, AZ

"Your book has made a terrific difference in my way of life. Thanks for getting me out of the rut of thinking cleaning took too long."

—Mary Lou Ehlers, Benson, AZ

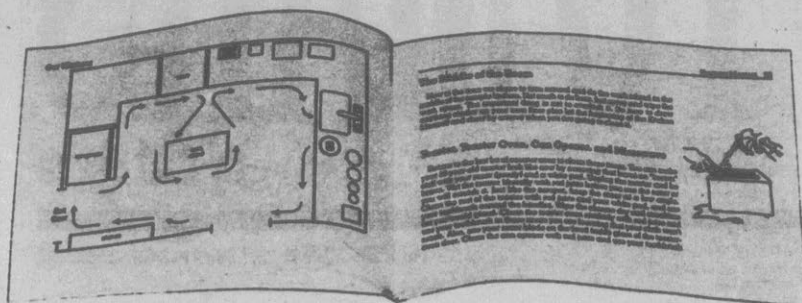

"I have been using your methods for 3 weeks now and they really do work! In fact my house seems to stay cleaner and uncluttered throughout the week!"

—Paulette Hummel, Linden, MI

What do Neil Armstrong, Jack Anderson, Johnny Carson, former President Jimmy Carter, former CIA director William Colby, Walter Cronkite, former NATO commander Gen. Andrew Goodpaster, Jim Henson, the Rev. Ted Hesburgh, Quincy Jones, Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, Sen. Spark Matsunaga, James Michener, Eleanor Holmes Norton, Joe Paterno, Gregory Peck, Sidney Poitier, Steven Spielberg, Lily Tomlin and Ted Turner have in common? They're all signers of the Planetary Society's Mars Declaration—with more than 130,000 others, comprising a transideological cross-section of Americans: liberals and conservatives; Republicans and Democrats; Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine general and flag officers; leaders of peace groups; astronauts and religious leaders; labor and industry executives; politicians and poets; dozens of Nobel laureates; ambassadors; university presidents; former Presidential science advisers; and five past administrators of NASA.

For the last five years, the Planetary Society, the largest space-interest group in the world, has advocated an international program to explore Mars—to revitalize the U.S. space program and to bring together the world's spacefaring nations (especially the U.S. and USSR) in a stirring and historic long-term program undertaken on behalf of the human species. Since the Society's advocacy began, Soviet President Gorbachev has called on the United States to go together to Mars. On July 20, President Bush announced a U.S. determination to send humans to Mars. Whether that includes international cooperation, robot precursors and the Moon as "stepping stone" (or dead end) all need to be worked out, along with cost and timescale. But the objectives of the Mars Declaration now seem within reach. Onward to Mars!

THE MARS DECLARATION Mars is the world next door, the nearest planet on which human explorers could safely land. Although it is sometimes as warm as a New England October, Mars is a chilly place, so cold that some of its thin carbon dioxide atmosphere freezes out at the winter pole. There are pink skies, fields of boulders, sand dunes, vast extinct volcanos that dwarf anything on Earth, a great canyon that would cross most of the United States, sandstorms that sometimes reach half the speed of sound, strange bright and dark markings on the surface, hundreds of ancient river valleys, mountains shaped like pyramids and many other mysteries.

Mars is a storehouse of scientific information—important in its own right but also for the light it may cast on the origins of life and on safeguarding the environment of the Earth. If Mars once had abundant liquid water, what happened to it? How did a once Earthlike world become so parched, frigid and comparatively airless? Is there something important on Mars that we need to know about our own fragile world?

The prospect of human exploration of Mars is ecumenical—remarkable for the diversity of supporting opinion it embraces. It is being advocated on many grounds:

- As a potential scientific bonanza—for example, on climatic change, on the search for present or past life, on the understanding of enigmatic Martian landforms, and on the application of new knowledge to understanding our own planet
- As a means, through robotic precursor and support missions to Mars, of reviving a stagnant U.S. planetary program
- As providing a coherent focus and sense of purpose to a dispirited NASA for many future research and development activities on an appropriate timescale and with affordable costs
- As giving a crisp and unambiguous purpose to the U.S. space station—needed for in-orbit assembly of the interplanetary transfer vehicle or vehicles, and for study of long-duration life support for space travelers
- As the next great human adventure, able to excite and inspire people of all ages the world over
- As an aperture to enhanced national prestige and technological development
- As a realistic and possibly unique opportunity for the U.S. and the USSR to work together in the spotlight of world public opinion, and with other nations, on behalf of the human species
- As a model and stimulant for mutually advantageous U.S./Soviet cooperation here on Earth

- As a means for economic reconversion of the aerospace industry if and when massive reductions in strategic weapons—long promised by the United States and the Soviet Union—are implemented
- As a worthy application of the traditional military virtues of organization and valor to great expeditions of discovery
- As a step toward the long-term objective of establishing humanity as a multi-planet species
- Or simply as the obvious response to a deeply felt perception of the future calling.

Advances in technology now make feasible a systematic process of exploration and discovery on the planet Mars—beginning with robot roving vehicles and sample return missions and culminating in the first footfall of human beings on another planet. The cost would be no greater than that of a single major strategic weapons system, and if shared among two or more nations, the cost to each nation would be still less. No major additional technological advances seem to be required, and the step from today to the first landing of humans on Mars appears to be technologically easier than the step from President John F. Kennedy's announcement of the Apollo program on May 25, 1961, to the first landing of humans on the Moon on July 20, 1969.

We represent a wide diversity of backgrounds in the fields of sciences, technology, religion, the arts, politics and government. Few of us adhere to every one of the arguments listed above, but we share a common vision of Mars as a historic, constructive objective for the technological ambitions of the human species over the new few decades.

We endorse the goal of human exploration of Mars and urge that initial steps toward its implementation be taken throughout the world.

The Planetary Society

Nirgal Vallis, 800 kilometers long, is an ancient Martian river valley—one of hundreds indicating a warmer, wetter epoch long ago. Did life arise on Mars? Can future explorers find evidence of it?

The Brat and the Con

Emily Lloyd is worth the price of admission in the comedy Coolie as a teenage brat who is straightened out—more or less—by her ex-con father, a guy determined to retire from the mob—after one last sting on his cheating partner. Warner.

• Gene Hackman plays a veteran army sergeant escorting a military prisoner from Europe to the U.S. Tommy Lee Jones is that prisoner—The Package—and he's involved in a horrifying international conspiracy. The "package" escapes and the chase is on. Orion.

Tough guy Falk and punk daughter Lloyd

TELEVISION

The Real Neil Simon

Neil Simon, the world's most successful playwright (22 produced plays and 17 movies in 28 years), often writes about his life: childhood—Brighton Beach Memoirs; newlywed days—Barefoot in the Park; remarriage after his wife's death—Chapter Two. So his TV bio, Neil Simon: Not Just for Laughs, is naturally illustrated with scenes from movies and plays. And Simon and others, like the actors Walter Matthau, Jack Lemmon and Simon's ex-wife Marsha Mason, are good talking about how he works. PBS.

All Eyes on Neptune

You can tell your grandchildren you saw it: This Saturday, Voyager 2, which has been traveling in space for 12 years, will arrive at Neptune—a planet three billion miles from the earth—and will send pictures back to be broadcast live all over the world. Astronomer Carl Sagan will analyze what we are seeing and explain its significance. CNN. Next Sunday, Dr. Sagan will do a historical retrospective of the Voyager 2 program and talk also about the message the spacecraft carries. On a golden disc designed to last one billion years, it gives greetings in 60 human languages and one whole language and tells about our life on earth—for whoever is out there. TBS.

RECORDS

BEAUTIFUL ALL-AMERICAN MUSIC

American vocal music sung by soprano Dawn Upshaw makes for an admirable compact disc from Electra/Nonesuch. Included are arias from Stravinsky's The Rake's Progress and Menotti's The Old Maid and the Thief, as well as the Mirabai Song Cycle by John Harbison. But what makes the record a standout is

Samuel Barber's Knoxville: Summer of 1915 a beautiful exercise in musical nostalgia. The accompaniments by the Orchestra of St. Luke's, led by David Zinman, are extraordinarily sensitive. Printed texts are included—a great help, since Upshaw's diction is not of the clearest. —Herbert Kupferberg

'The Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour'

By Robert Dimatteo

When veteran viewers talk television, one of the subjects that frequently comes up is how much the old variety show format is missed. That format, with its roots in vaudeville, allowed for an eclectic mix of material — music, comedy and novelty acts — in one show. It came to full flower in the 50's under the aegis of Milton Berle and that uniquely stiff impresario Ed Sullivan.

The variety show has fallen into disrepute in recent years, although there have been occasional failed efforts to revive it, most recently by Dolly Parton. It belongs to the infancy of the medium — and perhaps to a simpler time. No wonder some people are nostalgic for it.

"The Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour," which concludes its limited summer run on Wednesday, Aug. 23, is a revival of the hit variety series that became one of the most-talked-about shows on the air during its original 1967-69 run. It was abruptly canceled by CBS in 1969 — because the network found it too controversial — and although it returned briefly, as a summer replacement on ABC in 1970 and as a January entry on NBC in 1975, it never scored anywhere near as well in the ratings.

In its time, "The Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour" was like Ed Sullivan with topicality. Today, though, the series comes across as anachronistic and a little tired. The performers who seemed so tuned into the issues confronting our country 20 years ago now seem out of it, irrelevant.

It's unfortunate, because we could use an iconoclastic weekly hour in prime time like the one the Smothers gave us in the late '60s. Yet, if the variety format is to work on TV in 1989, it must be brought up to date, given fresh blood and impetus. And it probably won't be Tom and Dick Smothers who bring back variety. (They may find renewed success in a sitcom format, however: The brothers and CBS have announced a development deal for a half-hour comedy series.)

If you've been away from the variety show format for a while, you may be struck by how brief the segments are. This brevity is crucial to the format: If you don't like one act, count to 10 and another different one will follow. All levels of culture are tossed together, with results that are both cheerfully democratic and a little ludicrous.

The series closes on Wednesday with an hour titled "Dangerous Comic Liaison." Dr. Irwin Corey delivers one of his gobbledygook monologues that parodies academic thinking, Bill Dana plays Jose Jimenez as a bullfighter, and Jim Stafford sings the ditty "Flatnose, the Tree-Climbing Dog," while Flatnose indeed climbs a tree. Tom brings back one of his most popular bits, "The Yo-Yo Man," and Dick introduces his long-haired son Dick Jr., who appears shirtless with his band, Kamikaze, in an ineffably bizarre heavy-metal rendition of Cole Porter's "Let's Misbehave."

Except for Dick Jr., you've never seen such a long-in-the-tooth bunch of performers. If you came of age during the late '60s, the sight of all this sagging skin can be a little depressing. And the show's grasp of contemporary issues is virtually nonexistent. The only way you know this isn't a repeat of a '60s Smothers Brothers show is the reference to the recent movie "Dangerous Liaisons."

Dear Michele: I certainly miss Yul Brynner. Please tell me what you can about him — birthplace, movie credits, personal life? — KAREN SERMERSHEIN, HICKORY, N.C.

Brynner's origins appear to be intentionally cloaked in mystery. Born July 11, somewhere between the years of 1915-22, on Sakhalin Island (an island east of Siberia and north of Japan), he was of partial Gypsy ancestry, although this wasn't revealed until he became active on behalf of Gypsy rights in the '70s. Educated in Paris, he performed as a musician and circus acrobat and was nearly crippled from a fall from the high trapeze. In 1940, Brynner migrated to the United States. Since he was multi-lingual, he was recruited by "The Voice of America," but theater was his primary interest. He was heavily involved in early live television, both as an actor and director, and he made his film debut in 1949 in "Port of New York," while continuing his work in TV. Brynner's big break came in 1951, when he was cast as the King of Siam in Broadway's "The King and I." That role earned him a Tony Award for Best Actor in a Musical; the 1956 film version won him a Best Actor Oscar. Brynner kept the King's shaved head as his trademark and went on to star in numerous Hollywood and foreign films, including "The Magnificent Seven" (1960) and "Villa Rides" (1968). In 1977, he returned to the stage in a revival of "The King and I." He was in the midst of a third coast-to-coast revival in Sept. 1983, when he was diagnosed as having lung cancer, but he continued the tour and missed only a handful of performances. He concluded that run a few months before his death, on Oct. 10, 1985.

He was married four times. His first wife was actress Virginia Gilmore, to whom he was married from 1944-60. They had a son, Yul II (also known as Rocky). He married Doris Kleiner in 1960. They had a daughter, Victoria, born in 1962. He married Jacqueline de Croisset in 1971. They had two adopted daughters, Mia and Melody. His fourth and final marriage was to Kathy Lee in 1983.

Dear Michele: How tall is actress Maria Conchita Alonso? — STEVE WERNER, BROWNSVILLE, TEXAS

The lovely 32-year-old actress, who is noted for such films as "Moscow on the Hudson" (1984) and "The Running Man" (1978), is 5 feet, 6½ inches tall. Fleeing Castro's Cuba at age 5, Alonso was raised in Venezuela, where she won the 1971 title of Miss Teenager of the World. In 1975, she was selected Miss Venezuela.

Dear Michele: Whatever happened to the highly publicized film "The Last Temptation of Christ"? It never appeared in my area. — ROSE MOBLEY, GERMAN-TOWN, OHIO

Martin Scorsese's controversial film adaptation of Nikos Kazantzakis' powerful novel is now available on videocassette. Some video stores, however, have refused to carry it.

Dear Michele: Who was the actor that played the serial killer in the movie "Manhunter," starring William Peterson? — ANDREA GIBBS, MARLTON, N.J.

Actor Tom Noonan portrayed the gruesome serial killer Francis Dollarhyde in this 1986 film based on Thomas Harris' novel "Red Dragon."

Sister Kate

Stephanie Beacham will star as a hard-edged but offbeat nun placed in charge of a rowdy group of orphans in "Sister Kate," a comedy slated for NBC's fall schedule. A bit unorthodox in her method-sand compulsions, Sister Kate rises to the challenges posed by the unruly kids, who dub her "Sister Mary Rambo." Harley Cross, Jason Priestly, Erin Reed and Joel Robinson will also star.

It was a hot and steamy summer night. The mercury bubbled at 95. The air moved slower than a fat lady on a tricycle. There was no escaping the oppression.

So I poured myself a tall one, took off all my clothes, and went to the video store to rent a movie.

No one even noticed I was in my birthday suit. Because the video store I went to was the Cable Video Store. Where you can rent a movie simply by pressing a couple of buttons on your remote control switch. Check it out. Call your cable company for a listing of our latest movies and details on how to subscribe.

Soap Scoop

Baby loves: The most promising newcomers

By Connie Passalacqua

Alice Barrett

It happens every summer: Viewers are introduced to new - and usually young - actors and actresses who are taking their first steps toward genuine soap stardom. Here's the best of this year's encouraging crop.

• Morgan Englund (Dylan on "Guiding Light"): "GL" had a lot riding on the casting of this crucial role. Dylan is the never-before-seen ex-boyfriend of Harley Davidson Spaulding (Beth Ehlers), who fathered Harley's given-up-for-adoption-at-birth daughter and was sent to jail for robbing a gas station. While Dylan was in jail, wrong-side-of-the-tracks Harley found and married her rich prince, Alan-Michael Spaulding (Carl Evans). Ehlers and Evans have become one of daytime's best acting combos, so finding an effective actor to play Dylan was especially challenging. And they certainly hit the bull's eye with Englund, who, incidentally, is the son of actress-Cloris Leachman and George Englund.

• Bobbi Eakes (Macy Spectra on "The Bold and the Beautiful"): "B&B" has become a stylish fantasy where all the characters are either very, very good or very, very bad. Add to the bad list Macy Spectra, the newly arrived daughter of the incomparable Sally Spectra (Darlene Conley), knockoff fashion designer to the hoi polloi. Eakes' Macy is a snooty yet sleekly sexy busybody who has managed to get in good with photographer Mick Savage (Jeff Conaway), former lover of the married Kristin Garrison (Teri Ann Linn).

• Alice Barrett (Frankie Frame on "Another World"): OK, we hated her at first. That name (Frankie!), that hair (orange!), those bare-midriff fashions (that belly button!). Are we really supposed to believe that this is a private detective? Certainly! Fashion statement Frankie managed to solve a baffling murder, clearing the convicted heroine, Felicia Gallant (Linda Dano). "AW" needed a bit of mirth, and Alice Barrett fits the bill.

• Matt Servitto (Trask Bodine on "All My Children"): Haven't we seen that face before? Servitto bears an astonishing resemblance to Judd Nelson, and his Trask is a real Judd Nelson kind of role. Trask is the nutty fly in the ointment between those sweet young lovers Melanie Cortland and David Rampal (Paige Turco and Trent Bushy). Melanie feels sorry for the wayward Trask, and overprotective David has been ordering her to stay away from him.

My Shadow

When Pat Foster, a Park Avenue socialite, suddenly finds herself a widow, she finds a new, different kind of soul mate in "My Shadow," an ABC movie currently in production. Dollie Madison is the homeless woman from Central Park who befriends Pat, reveals bits and pieces of her own past and helps Pat to realize some things about herself, while Pat's family and friends strenuously urge her to cut the connection. "My Shadow" was written by Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright Marsha Norman.

Sports Roundup

SUNDAY, AUG. 20
PGA Golf (CBS)
 The International, final-round action, live from Castle Rock, Colo.
Boxing (ABC)
 Pernell Whitaker vs. Jose Luis Ramirez in a WBC/IBF lightweight title bout, scheduled for 12 rounds, live from Norfolk, Va. This should be an explosive grudge match. Whitaker's only loss as a professional came in a hotly disputed split decision against Ramirez in Paris last March. In that fight, Whitaker fought a cute, dancing-and-weaving bout, while Ramirez was the aggressor. Whitaker has torn apart his last two opponents, Greg Haugen and Louis Lomeli. And this time, they are fighting in Whitaker's hometown.
Auto Racing (NBC)
CART Pocono 500, from Pocono International Raceway, Long Pond,

Penn.
Auto Racing (ABC)
International Race of Champions, Race No. 4, from Watkins Glen, N.Y. The final race in this year's IROC series features Indy car masters A.J. Foyt, Rick Mears, Danny Sullivan and Al Unser Jr.; NASCAR stalwarts Rusty Wallace, Richard Petty, Dale Earnhardt, Terry Labonte and Bill Elliott; in addition to road-racing drivers Geoff Brabham, Hurley Harwood and Scott Pruett (now on the CART circuit).
Adventure (ABC)

Trans-Antarctica Expedition, Part II.
NFL Football (ESPN)
Philadelphia Eagles vs. New York Jets in a preseason game, live from Raleigh, N.C. The most controversial selection of the 1989 NFL draft was the Jets' choice of LB Jeff Lageman of Virginia.

TV Chatter

By Frank Sanello

Before Bill Kirchenbauer became a star as Coach Lubbock on "Just the Ten of Us," he paid his dues by selling videotape equipment and working as a stand-up comic. The toughest spot he remembers working at was in a Mexican restaurant in Oceanside, Calif.

"It was the worst week of my life," he recalls. "The clientele was 80 percent Marines. They used to come up on stage and chase me. Once a Marine climbed up on stage and said right in my face, 'You're not funny, (expletive)!' Without missing a beat, I said, 'And what do you do in the Marines?' I ended up interviewing him on stage. You can't fight with a guy like that."

Kirchenbauer cut such a pathetic figure that even his boss felt sorry for him. "The owner was a very nice Mexican gentleman. He said, 'When I see you up on stage my heart breaks for you. You don't have to do your show tonight.'"

The kind-hearted owner then handed Kirchenbauer his entire $250 salary for the week and sent him on his way.

As the ditzy leader of a therapy group for lonely divorcees on "Dear John," Jane Carr frequently asked the troubled members of the group, "Were there any sex-u-al problems?" Toward the end of the season, that line disappeared.

"It's hard when you're nine months pregnant to talk about sexual problems and make it sound funny," says Carr, who was expecting a baby — both on- and off-screen. "But I suspect it will come back now that I've had the baby."

On the show, Carr's character has had a baby out of wedlock. In real life, the father of her 5-month-old son, Dashiell, is her husband, actor Mark Arnott, whom she met in her agent's office. During our chat, Carr puffed on a cigarette, although she insisted she had quit for a year before the baby was born. So why did she resume such a nasty habit?

Shortly After Delivery, Most Direct Mail Will Have Already Reached It's Target

They promised your message would make it through the front door and they were absolutely right. Through the front door, down the hall and whammo, right smack into the old round file. Unopened, unread and unfortunately, totally ineffective.

Instead of being the exception, this scenario is more like the rule. According to a 1988 study by The Gordon S. Black Corporation, an independent Washington, D.C. media and opinion research firm, of the Greenville/Pitt County adults who report receiving some direct mail literature within a one-week period, 16% throw it away while less than one in five read it thoroughly.

It all comes down to how you define the term, "target customer." If it's a living, breathing, spending human being, then perhaps your advertising dollars should go into something that's more effective in reaching them. Namely, The Daily Reflector. With a paid circulation of 18,300 Monday through Friday and 20,800 on Sundays, let The Reflector work for you. The Daily Reflector reaches 74% of the Greenville/Pitt County market weekly.

Most importantly, it reaches them at their request!

That means you not only have a better chance of getting their attention, you have a better chance of holding it. Think about it - People paying to read your message at their convenience! Considering all the value you get with The Daily Reflector, don't risk trashing your advertising dollars. For answers to your advertising questions, call your Daily Reflector Advertising Account Executive at 752-6166.

• TIMBER LINE! This old poser always catches someone. Will it catch you? Give it a try, then spring it on a friend!

AND THE BAND PLAYS ON

A rubber band dangling from your first and second fingers (illus. A, above) may be transferred magically to your third and fourth fingers (and back again), step by step, as shown.
 (A) Pull band down across palm with finger of other hand.
 (B) Close four fingers into the loop.
 (C) Straighten fingers; band transfers.
 (D) Extend rubber band with thumb.
 (E) Close fingers into loop. Release thumb.
 (F) Straighten fingers; band returns to first two fingers.

A young maple tree in New England has 17 branches, each having 11 leaves in May. If each branch doubles its leaves in a month, how many leaves will it have in December?
 Probably none, since by winter the leaves will have fallen!

• WHAT HO! Twice EIGHT are ten of us. And TEN are only three. ELEVEN are six of us... Whatever can we be? Can you answer?
 Letters of the alphabet. Twice EIGHT (the letters) gives us 10 letters, etc.

CIRCUS CATCH! Here's a circus catch, for sure. Complete this dot picture by drawing lines dot to dot, 1 to 2, 3, etc.

HAY, HAY! Hay is for horses, nesting birds, etc. Apply crayons or colored pencils neatly. Code: 1—Red. 2—Lt. blue. 3—Yellow. 4—Lt. brown. 5—Flesh. 6—Lt. green. 7—Dk. brown. 8—Dk. green.

River Tragedy Leaves 27 Dead

By Ben Dobbin
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — Salvage crews today searched for bodies in the River Thames and in a pleasure boat that sank in a late-night collision with a barge. Police said at least 27 people were killed.

Eighty-four people survived the accident early Sunday under Southwark Bridge in the heart of London, but authorities were uncertain exactly how many were aboard the privately chartered Marchioness, setting for the 26th birthday party of businessman Antonio Vasconcellos. He is among the missing.

Police detained the captain and second mate of the Bowbelle sand-and-gravel dredger and released them overnight. Police said they would be questioned again today.

"We are looking at offenses such as possible unlawful killing and any related offenses," said a police spokeswoman on condition of anonymity. Unlawful killing is a British charge similar to manslaughter.

Authorities also examined taped radio messages to river navigators for clues into the cause of the accident.

The Independent, a London daily, reported an apparent disagreement between the captains of the 90-ton Marchioness and the 1,475-ton Bowbelle over which vessel should pass first under the bridge's central span.

The paper also quoted a veteran crewman as saying the Bowbelle rammed another Thames passenger boat five years ago and nearly sank it. The Thames is one of the world's busiest commercial rivers, used by more than 32,000 vessels each year.

Police still were unsure today how many people were on board when the pleasure boat was struck in the rear and run over by the Bowbelle while on a five-hour overnight cruise. Police said today that 25 launches were scouring the Thames for bodies.

Colombian Drug Raids Net 10,000

By Kevin Noblet
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOGOTA, Colombia — Military and police forces today raided properties of suspected cocaine traffickers in a sweep of the nation's powerful drug underworld that has already led to more than 10,000 arrests.

There were no reports, however, of any drug cartel bosses arrested in the emergency crackdown, which follows the assassinations of a leading presidential candidate, a national police colonel and a magistrate.

In renewed guerrilla attacks, eight policemen and two peasants were killed, police and news reports said today.

Sen. Luis Carlos Galan, the 46-year-old Liberal Party candidate, was buried Sunday after hundreds of thousands of people took to the streets in a public display of grief.

Meanwhile, thousands of judges and magistrates who walked off the job last week to protest inadequate security from hitmen hired by drug traffickers have called off the strike to join the fight, a spokesman said.

Forces Go On Alert

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TYRE, Lebanon — An unusual buildup of Israeli troops and allied militiamen in south Lebanon today prompted U.N. peacekeeping forces to go on alert, security sources said.

The reported buildup came a day after a bomb injured at least two militiamen in the Israeli-controlled buffer zone along the border with Israel. The pro-Iranian Hezbollah group today claimed responsibility for the attack.

In Jerusalem, the Israeli army spokesman said he had no information in connection with the report.

The Lebanese security sources said a joint convoy of 35 armored personnel carriers and trucks was spotted moving near the village of Taireh, 16 miles east of Tyre, in the central sector of the security zone.

In the eastern sector, a force of 50 Israeli troops with seven tanks, three personnel carriers, and four trucks entered the village of Kawkaba in the area of the U.N.'s Norwegian contingent, the security sources said.

There were no details on the mission of the forces.

"The U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon has been put on very high alert to cope with any eventuality," one source said on condition of anonymity.

He said the movements involved both the Israeli army and its proxy militia, the South Lebanon Army.

Sunday's explosion took place at Beit Yahoun, just north of Taireh, at the entrance to the zone.

In addition to the two South Lebanon Army militiamen, the bomb wounded two civilian passers-by, police said.

However, Israeli military sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the two were wounded when Hezbollah militiamen fired light weapons Sunday at Lebanese civilians waiting at the Beit Yahoun checkpoint.

The pro-Iranian Hezbollah, or Party of God, claimed responsibility for the explosion in a communique that claimed its guerrillas destroyed an Israeli intelligence base at Beit Yahoun. The communique said 15 soldiers were killed.

An Irish corporal with the U.N. forces said Sunday's bomb destroyed a three-story building used by Israeli troops and militiamen to search people entering the zone.

Paper Says Hostages Can Be Lever

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — An Iranian daily said today that holding Western hostages can be used as a way to prevent foreign intervention in Lebanon, according to Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency.

The report came a day after a pro-Iranian group holding Joseph Ciccipio and another American threatened to kill the hostages if the French navy intervenes in Lebanon.

"To prevent foreign intervention, a lever in the hands of Lebanon's Moslem combatants was the susceptibility of Western governments vis-a-vis the hostage issue," the Abrar newspaper said in an editorial.

The pro-government daily assured the Lebanese Moslems that their "struggle" would culminate in the establishment of a state based on "their will as the country's majority," according to IRNA, monitored in Nicosia.

The pro-Iranian kidnappers of 16 Western hostages held in Lebanon are Shiite Moslems — Lebanon's largest single sect — seeking to create an Iranian-style Islamic republic to replace the Christian-dominated system.

Iran has denied it has any direct control over the fate of the hostages.

Urging the West against involvement in Lebanon's politics, Abrar referred to the 1983 attacks by Shiite zealots against the French and American military units in Beirut, which killed nearly 300 troops and led to the withdrawal of the multinational peacekeeping force from Lebanon a few months later.

IRNA said the Iranian newspaper described the withdrawal of the peacekeepers from Lebanon as the "escape of the American and French forces."

On Sunday, the Revolutionary Justice Organization threatened to kill Ciccipio and Edward Austin

Tracy if there is intervention by France, which dispatched two warships to the eastern Mediterranean reportedly to evacuate 7,000 French nationals from war-battered Lebanon if the need arises.

"America, which is spurring France, should realize that any foolhardiness by the French fleet will expose the life of its hostages to danger," the Shiite Moslem group said in a statement.

The handwritten message in Arabic, delivered to the independent newspaper An-Nahar and a Western news agency in Beirut, was accompanied by a photocopy of a photograph of Tracy.

Bakker, Jurors Arrive

By Dennis Patterson
 THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE — A small federal courtroom became the stage today for the latest episode in the Jim Bakker story — his trial on charges he cheated his PTL ministry out of $4 million to finance a lavish lifestyle.

"Our faith is in God," Bakker proclaimed as he arrived at the courthouse accompanied by his daughter, Tammy Sue Chapman, and attorney George T. Davis. "I'm glad to have my daughter with me."

The television evangelist, ousted from his PTL empire two years ago by a sex-and-money scandal, entered the courthouse and said nothing more to reporters waiting outside. Shortly after Bakker entered, a crowd of about 70 prospective jurors was ushered into the courtroom for jury selection.

Bakker is charged with eight counts of mail fraud, 15 counts of wire fraud, and conspiracy to commit mail and wire fraud. If convicted on all counts, he could be sentenced to 120 years in prison and fined more than $5 million.

Wearing a dark, well-tailored suit, Bakker and his daughter arrived in a small, blue sedan — a contrast to the limousines he once used. His wife, Tammy Faye Bakker, stayed in Orlando, Fla., where Bakker transplanted his ministry.

Eakin Calls For A Rededication To Excellence

ECU NEWS BUREAU

Dr. Richard R. Eakin, beginning his third year as chancellor of East Carolina University, pledged today to make ECU "a more distinctive university" known for academic quality.

Addressing the fall faculty convocation, Eakin called for a rededication to excellence in undergraduate instruction and developing nationally recognized programs of graduate education and research. These, he said, are basic and related goals.

He called for graduate programs and research in those areas of study "most compatible with our mission, history and opportunities."

"If our quest for excellence in undergraduate instruction must be broad necessarily, as I think it must, our efforts in graduate education and research must be more carefully focused and selective, especially at the level of doctoral studies," Eakin said.

ECU has petitioned the General Administration of the University of North Carolina system for authorization to begin planning doctoral studies in coastal resources management, rhetoric and composition, biophysics, maritime history and educational leadership.

With nearly 16,000 students scheduled to begin classes Wednesday,

Eakin said ECU's 1989-90 enrollment would show a small gain over last year's 15,579 students.

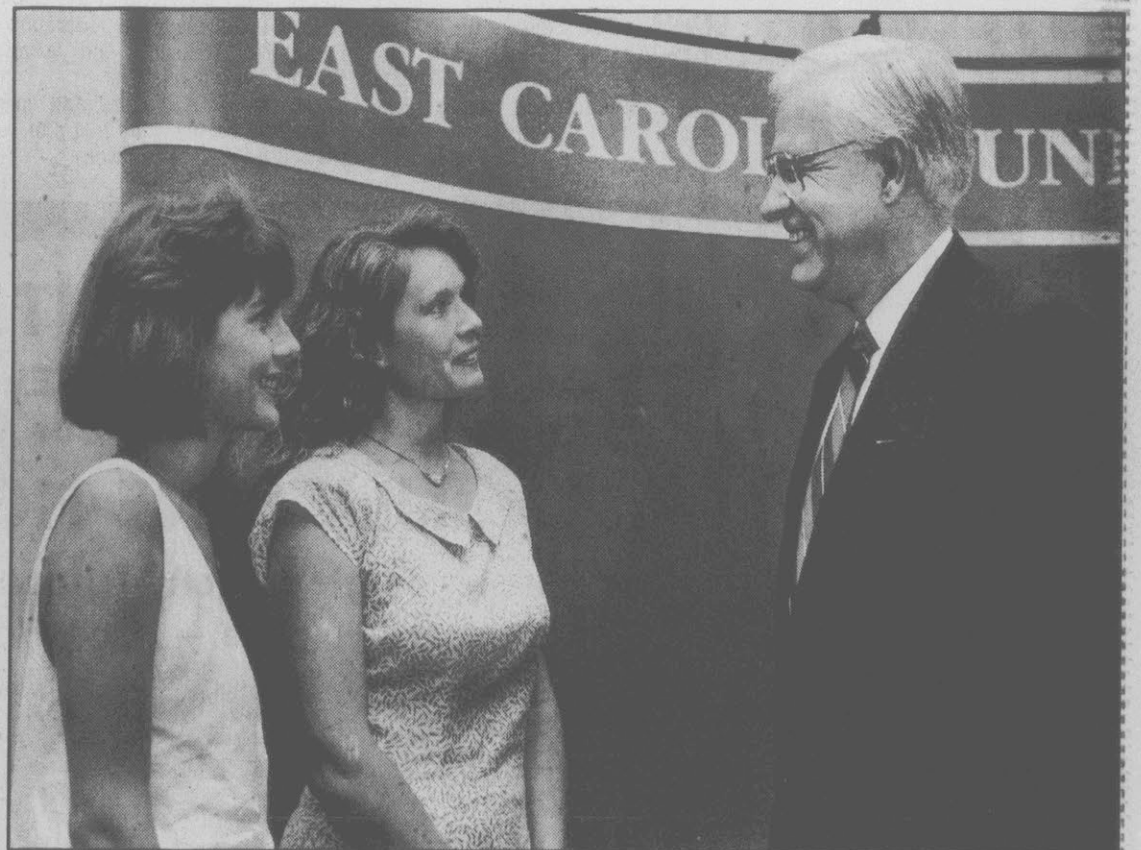

"We should also see a gain in the overall quality of the freshman class," he said. "With increased attention to student recruiting and continued improvement of our academic programs, this trend should continue. I pledge my personal efforts to that end."

Striving for excellence in undergraduate instruction should include effective advising, strengthening the general studies program and "continued progress in such areas as writing across the curriculum, international studies, cultural awareness, mathematics and science," Eakin said.

Noting that the university is involved in a strategic planning process, Eakin said a "real difficulty" is that "an institution such as this one cannot define itself in terms as simple as those available to other colleges and universities."

"Planning at East Carolina is not easy," he said. "There are, in fact, any number of things that we simply cannot do. We cannot dedicate ourselves to graduate education as extensively as can a North Carolina State or a Chapel Hill. We cannot forego our commitment to service. We cannot cut our ties with the peo-

ECU Receives $1.3 Million Gift From Rivers Estate

By Kevin Boughal
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The donation of $1.3 million to East Carolina University from the estate of the late Thomas W. Rivers will be used to support foreign exchange and promote international studies, said Dr. Richard R. Eakin, chancellor of ECU.

"This gift is the largest ever received by the East Carolina University Foundation," said Eakin. "The people will be forever indebted for Mr. Rivers' vision."

Rivers was the founder and former president of Thomas W. Rivers and Associates, a Greenville based engineering firm. He died in 1985.

Rivers gift will be used for two different programs, although both should advance international studies.

The first program uses $333,000 from the Rivers' $1.3 million donation as well as $167,000 from the University of North Carolina Board of Governors to establish a $500,000 endowment. Interest from the endowment will be used to support the Thomas W. Rivers distinguished Visiting Professor of International Studies.

Although ECU requires an international reputation for contributions to global and multicultural studies for one to hold the two-year chair, the recipient may be from any disciplinary background.

The second part of the contribution will complete funding of the Thomas W. Rivers' Foreign Exchange Endowment. The fund was created by Rivers before his death to promote and support international exchange among students and faculty, said Eakin. Because the money was given as an endowment, the school will only use the interest to fund students' overseas study, the principal will not be used, he added.

"Mr. Rivers was a Greenville businessman and developer, an alumnus of the university, and a cit-

PITT EXTENSION AGENT

"What in the world is a nematode?" asked the gardener as he cradled the stunted okra plant with galls and knots on the roots. His okra "just hadn't done much this year." It was short and yellow and generally looked like it was "lacking something."

This gardener had his first encounter with root-knot nematodes; microscopic worm-like animals that live in the soil and feed on plant roots. Those of you who have a vegetable garden, lawn or ornamental shrubs may have a close encounter with one of the many types of nematodes.

Hundreds of species of nematodes exist, but few are parasitic to plants. Root-knot affects vegetables such as beans, peas, okra, melons and tomatoes. They also attack roses, azaleas, gardenia, Japanese holly (e.g. Helleri, Compacta, Rotundifolia) and others. Stinging and stubby-root nematodes affect lawns. Stunt nematodes attack rhododendron, azalea and Japanese hollies.

Since nematodes attack the root system of plants, symptoms are often confused with other problems such as nutrient deficiency. Plants may lose their color, be stunted, produce poorly and show stress from drought long before unaffected plants. Root-knot nematode damage can be readily seen by examining the roots of the plants. Roots will be galled and swollen and have few of the small feeder roots that absorb water and nutrients. Other nematode damage is not as readily visible to the naked eye.

To positively identify a nematode problem, especially those other than root-knot, submit a one-quart soil sample from the root area of the plants suspected of having a nematode problem to the North Carolina Department of Agriculture Agronomic Division. There is a two-dollar charge for the sample. Your local extension office has the necessary boxes and information sheets and can give instructions on how to take the sample and get it submitted. Late summer is a good time to take nematode samples, since populations are at their highest.

Once a nematode problem has been identified, control measures include planting resistant varieties, crop rotation, soil treatment, nematicides and converting to nematode-tolerant plant species. In a vegetable garden always choose resistant varieties if they are available. Many tomato varieties have resistance. Look for the 'N' one the label tag. There are also southern peas, lima beans and snap beans with resistance. Rotate crops around within the garden as much as possible.

ECU Faculty Members Receive Teaching Awards

ECU NEWS BUREAU

Two East Carolina University faculty members — Gladys White, professor of music, and Gerhard Kalmus, associate professor of biology — received teaching excellence awards at ECU's annual fall convocation today.

They were presented $500 stipends as recipients of annual teaching awards sponsored by the ECU Alumni Association. Recipients are selected by a committee of ECU's Faculty Senate from among nominees presented by various academic units on campus.

Ms. White, a voice instructor in the ECU School of Music with 40 years of service, received the Robert and Lina Mays Award. Kalmus, a member of the ECU faculty since 1977, was given the Robert L. Jones Award. Presenting the awards was Burney R. Rivenbark of Fayetteville, Alumni Association president.

Ms. White retired as a full-time faculty member in May, but will continue to teach in the ECU School of Music on a part-time basis. She came to ECU in 1948 upon receiving the MA degree from New York University.

In two generations of voice instruction, Ms. White has seen many of her students achieve success as college and conservatory teachers and as professional performers.

Among her students are two recipients of outstanding alumni awards: Jane Murray Dillard, associate professor of voice at UNC-Charlotte, and Jeanne Smith Piland, noted mezzo-soprano with European and U.S. opera companies.

In addition to teaching, Ms. White has been a volunteer performer at numerous campus and community events and has assumed numerous responsibilities on campus, such as arranging student performances for Scholars Weekend and Alumni Day and assisting with recruiting and promotion for the School of Music.

She has also held office in several state and national music educators' organizations.

Ms. White is an alumna of West Chester (Pa.) State College which has honored her with one of its Outstanding Alumni awards. She is also cited in "Who's Who of American Women" and "Outstanding Educators of America."

A Pennsylvania native, Ms. White is married to James L. White, a retired member of the business education faculty who formerly headed ECU's Office of Sponsored Programs. They are the parents of two children: Larry, professor of percussion at the University of Texas at El Paso, and Mary Joanna, flutist and doctoral candidate at Boston University.

Kalmus joined the ECU faculty as an assistant professor just after receiving the Ph.D in Zoology from Rutgers University. In addition to teaching, his career at ECU has included service as assistant to the biology chair, director of undergraduate studies and director of graduate studies.

A specialist in developmental biology, Kalmus has particular interest in fetal alcohol syndrome. His research has been reported in 26 publications and numerous scientific presentations. Kalmus is currently secretary of the N.C. Academy of Sciences and editor of the state collegiate academy's journal.

While maintaining his research activities, Kalmus has focused on teaching and student advising. He has directed 22 master's theses and has seen dozens of his former students in the Department of Biology enter the medical profession.

Kalmus is a native of Germany who also lived in Brazil before his parents came to the U.S. and settled in Carolina. He served in the U. S.

Navy from 1960 to 1966 and graduated from the University of California-Berkeley with a BA degree in German. He received his master's degree in biology from Rutgers in 1974.

His wife, Karin C. Kalmus, is supervisor of the Clinical Virology-Pediatrics Laboratory in the ECU School of Medicine.

Pitt Getting New Judge

By Kevin Boughal
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Pitt County will get a Superior Court judge, but the jury is out on whether the county will receive the court clerks that are needed.

Thanks to the Omnibus Courts Bill that was passed during the final minutes of the recent legislative session, space was made for six new resident Superior Court judges around the state. Pitt County, which rated second behind District 29 near Asheville in its need for a new judge, was one of the counties approved for the new judge. An area's need depends on how many cases are filed by each judge in the district, said William Nicholls Jr., the trial court administrator for the third judicial district.

The new judge will be elected and not appointed, said Nicholls. Candidates who are interested in running for the judgeship will have to run for the party's nomination to be won in the spring of 1990. Then they will run in the general election in the second week of November. Once elected, the judge will start a two-year term in January of 1991. Then in 1992, they will begin running for an eight-year term, said Nicholls.

Under the rules of the state, in order to run for the position, the candidate does not need to be a judge presently. One just needs to be a licensed lawyer with residence in Pitt County. Although officially no names have been filed yet, several judges have said that they might be interested including District Court Judges Burt Aycock, Horton Roundtree and James Martin, said Nicholls.

Along with the judges, the Omnibus Courts Bill makes provisions for 36 court clerks to be assigned throughout the state. The Administrative Offices of Courts will decide which counties get the clerks, said Nicholls.

"How we disperse the clerks will be based on a formula which decides a district's needs based on its population and its judges' caseloads," said Dallas Cameron, assistant director for the Administrative Offices of the Court in Raleigh.

But as of yet, the administrative offices of the Court have not told the Pitt County courts how many, if any, of the clerks will be assigned to them.

"We need additional clerks," said Sandra Gaskins, the Superior Court clerk. "Our personnel have not increased in comparison to our caseload."

Another part of the Omnibus Courts Bill that will directly affect Pitt County is the continuation of funding for the arbitration program. This program allows lawyers, chosen by the court, to arbitrate in civil suits that involve less than $15,000. If an arbitrator's decision is disputed by either the plaintiff or the defendant, the case can be tried in a district court. However, so far only 12 percent of those are followed through, said Nicholls. The result is that instead of having one district jury trial a month, there are now eight per year. This saves the judges paperwork time that can be spent in other ways, said Nicholls.

ple, the institutions, or even the economy of eastern North Carolina.

"We cannot and must not stand apart from the diversity of cultures that America has become. We cannot turn aside from the progress that we have made in the past, nor can we ignore the real problems that face us," Eakin said.

He reported "remarkable growth" last year in sponsored programs of research and service projects, including a 25 percent increase in the dollar amount of grants and contracts.

He announced that the Council for Aid to Education (CAE) had released figures showing that ECU ranked second in the nation in total private giving among public comprehensive universities.

"Our most significant facilities project — a $24 million addition to Joyner Library — lies immediately ahead," Eakin said. The 1989 General Assembly appropriated an initial installment of $7 million toward the library project which Eakin said would permit employment of architects to begin design work for the library.

"We hope that we will be able to authorize bids for construction sometime next year," he said.

International understanding and world peace can only exist in an environment where people have first hand knowledge of other countries, their culture, their people and their languages.'"

Rivers retired from the navy as a captain after serving in both World War II and the Korean War. After his second retirement from his engineering firm, Thomas W. Rivers and Associates, he spent two years as a peace corps volunteer in Thailand, Belize, and Central America.

Rivers' daughter, Helen Rivers Anderson, and granddaughter, Cristi Anderson, were at the news conference to give the check to Chancellor Eakin.

Mrs. Anderson told reporters that she was very proud of her father's contribution.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Don't Forget

The Reason Is Education

A few more people have been bustling around downtown Greenville the past few days than the city has seen in some time. They're here looking for an education.

East Carolina University begins its 81st academic year this week. That means dormant dormitories are slowly filling with students and faculty members have returned from summer sabbaticals. With the enrollment of the university expected to near a record 16,000 students, it's simple fact the next few weeks will be ones of adjustment for both the campus and the year-round citizens of Greenville.

But whether you're an adjusting student or an adjusting citizen, however, keep the confusion in perspective with this reminder: education is the reason for this chaos, and that's a worthy cause.

For the newcomers to ECU, the freshman or transfer students, the next few days are a time of confusion. By now, these new arrivals have experienced the inevitable homesickness. Most likely, they've been lost, hungry and lonesome. They will be feeling their way around the campus and the town for the next few weeks, making friends and finding haunts. The nostalgia for mom and dad will soon be replaced with apprehension about classes as the frenetic pace of a first semester goes full tilt.

For the seasoned students, returning to campus with experience under their belts, the next few days will be a time of readjustment, renewal of old friendships and realigned routine. Gone is the trauma of leaving home for the first time but in its place is the certain knowledge of the hard work to come.

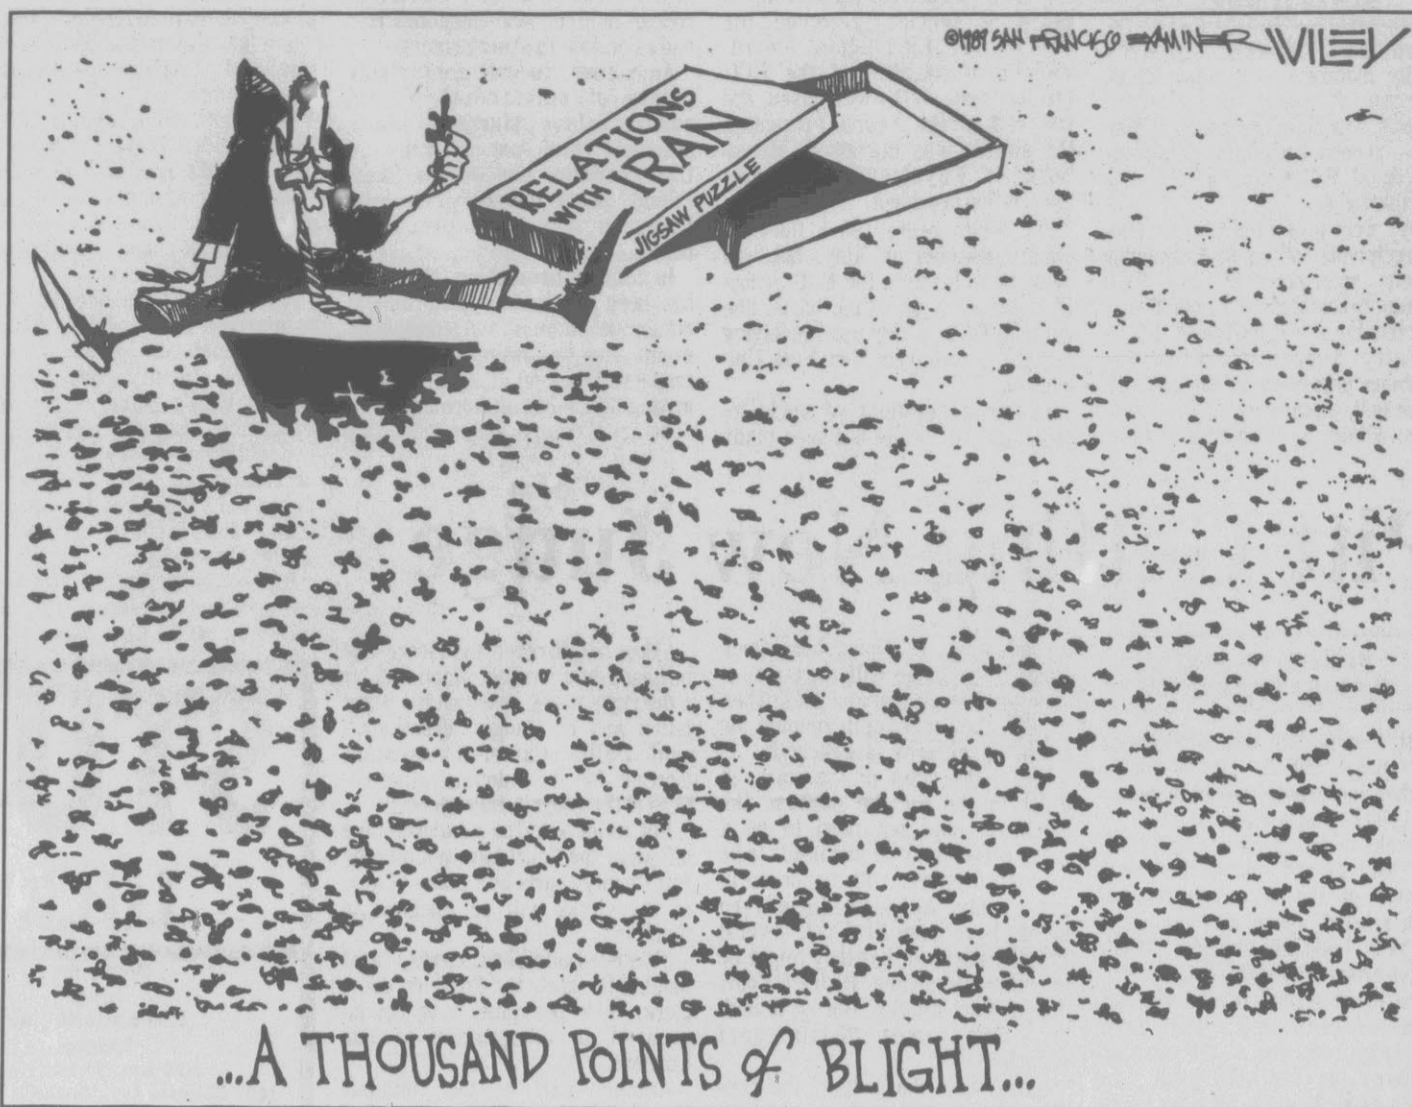

For the faculty and administration, who began the year today with the traditional fall faculty convocation, it is a time of renewed commitment to ECU's mission and a time to formalize goals. After a summer of study or of quiet teaching, fall semester can seem like a carnival ride.

For those Greenville citizens that live here all year, the opening of school means the pace of life will pick up considerably. Restaurants will be crowded, parking places will be at a premium, quiet streets will seem like interstate highways. For the city — a community whose fate is so inextricably entwined with the future of ECU — the beginning of fall semester is also an adjustment. The students bring vivacity and prosperity to Greenville, but they also bring a healthy share of problems.

Adjustments aside, classes begin Wednesday, and that's when both students and faculty get down to the business of education — after all, that's what all this confusion is about. The imparting of knowledge, the teaching of abilities and skills that will enable these students to live full, productive lives — that's why the discomfort. In the midst of leaving home and re-starting work after a restful summer, that purpose may become a bit obscured. But it is the reason each individual is on the campus of ECU and it should not be forgotten.

Homesickness, commitment, confusion, aggravation ... adjustment — the inevitable formula for beginning a new academic year. It is a painful, exciting process. But the point is education, and in the midst of this week's confusion, that end shouldn't be forgotten.

'The imparting of knowledge, the teaching of abilities and skills that will enable these students to live full, productive lives — that's why the discomfort.'

Needed: A Moral Response

Habib C. Malik

The images of the Lebanon war are by now so numbingly familiar to the West that people may be missing a fundamentally important change that has taken place in the war there. Since last March, this fragmented society has begun to unite in supporting the demand of Gen. Michel Aoun, the interim prime minister, for removal of the Syrian occupation army from Lebanon.

Yes, there's still factional fighting between Christians and Moslems. And yes, Lebanon's old Christian-dominated political system is outmoded and unfair. But for the first time in Lebanon's 15-year-old agony, the political situation has been simplified for anyone willing to see the obvious: It is no longer purely a civil war among rival Lebanese factions, much less a "religious war." It is a "war of national liberation" against Syria, which directly and through its proxies now controls 70 percent of Lebanese territory.

This characterization of the Lebanon war is so much at odds with the assumptions of most Americans — even high-ranking officials at the State Department — that I need to offer some evidence that Christians and Moslems are united in wanting the Syrians out. Consider that:

- Thirty percent of the Lebanese army troops fighting the Syrians are Moslem. They are commanded by Aoun, a Christian, but they share his determination to remove foreign forces from the country.

- Syria has failed in its efforts to push predominantly Moslem Lebanese army brigades into the fray against Aoun's forces. These units, based in West Beirut and other areas under Syrian control, have generally stayed in their barracks.

- Despite Syria's efforts to rouse Moslem protest against Aoun, there have not been mass street demonstrations in West Beirut denouncing the general or burning his effigy. Quite the contrary, there have been quiet expressions of support for Aoun. In late July, for example, residents of West Beirut awoke to find pictures of the general posted by his supporters around the Henri Chehab Barracks in the Moslem neighborhood of Mousaytibeh.

Prominent Sunni families who moved to East Beirut since last March have brought horror stories about the Syrian occupation — including tales of looting, drug-smuggling, political intimidation and wholesale confiscation of property. Suffice it to say that even among their political supporters in Lebanon, the Syrians are not well-liked. And there's a widespread suspicion in West Beirut that the Syrians were responsible for the death last spring of Sunni Mufti Sheikh Hassan Khaled, who at the time of his death was resisting Syrian pressure to denounce Aoun.

Syria, nevertheless, continues to claim that the war is one of civil strife among Lebanese. Syria's mouthpieces are mainly factional leaders like Nabih Berri and Walid Jumblatt. But their arguments shouldn't be taken at face value, for Berri and Jumblatt are not free men. The Syrians helped engineer Berri's sudden rise to Shiite prominence in 1980, while the price for Jumblatt's Druze victory in the Chouf in 1983 was subservience to Syrian policy in Lebanon.

An example of the Syrian effort to maintain the civil-war subterfuge came last weekend when a few hundred Druze and Hezbollah fighters charged ahead of Syrian tanks and heavy artillery in attacking Aoun's forces on several fronts.

Lebanon's Moslems are not fooled. The recent gathering in Damascus of supposed Moslem and "nationalist" leaders was more like a gallery of rogues and misfits — with Ahmed Jibril, the alleged mastermind of the Pan Am flight 103 bombing, thrown in for good measure. Iran's foreign minister was there too. It is these people who know exactly where the western hostages are — and who could free them instantly, were they not too busy plotting to devour what is left of Lebanon.

The Syrians play by what Thomas Friedman of the New York Times has called "Hama Rules." He's referring to the brutal campaign waged by Syrian President Hafez Assad to destroy Sunni Moslem resistance to his regime that led, in 1982, to the destruction of the Syrian city of Hama, where the resistance was based. Assad's message in Hama was that he was prepared to do anything necessary — no matter how brutal — to save his regime. And if Assad was willing to level a city in his own country, what would he do to Beirut?

Make no mistake about it: The bulk of Lebanon's Christians and Sunni Moslems, along with many Shiites and Druze, are today united in wanting the Syrians out of Lebanon. This is surely why Aoun remains popular throughout the country despite the awful destruction caused by his challenge to the Syrians. Damascus had apparently assumed that its continuous selling and blockade would turn the population against Aoun. They miscalculated. Aoun's courage in calling Syria's bluff and Assad's brutal response have only strengthened the Lebanese people's resolve to resist. They seem prepared to accept the terrible ruins of their beloved Beirut as a price for eventual liberation.

It's hard to describe what this war has been like for the Lebanese these last five months, but let me try. I was in East Beirut for most of this time, and like everyone else I had to endure the hardships of random daily shelling and a Syrian land and sea blockade. We spent hours each day in corridors or underground parking garages, listening to bombs crashing outside and radio bulletins a few moments later reporting where the shells had landed. Just going to the bathroom often required intricate planning and considerable nerve. We used brief lulls to go out in search of basic provisions, only to scurry back for cover when the shelling resumed.

Then came the gasoline crunch, which made everything more difficult. The Syrian blockade — meant to starve Aoun and the Christian areas into submission — cut fuel supplies to a trickle. The days and weeks wore on, and the medieval state of siege brought an eerie, creeping paral-

sis. Obtaining a few gallons of gas for the car or the electric generator — usually on the black market — became a major accomplishment. As electric-power outages became more frequent and prolonged, darkness and dejection began to set in.

What began to bother me most was the effect of the siege on my students at the American University of Beirut's off-campus program in East Beirut. Many of them were about to finish their studies; some had been accepted for graduate study at good universities in the United States and Britain. They spent their last semester before graduation hiding in bomb shelters.

The Lebanese have been living amid a drama of enormous proportions — in which heroic deeds and tragic consequences are the stuff of daily life — and the world is missing it, in part because reporting is so difficult. You might think, from afar, that the mood would be one of despair, but that hasn't been the case. On the contrary, I sensed that for the first time in 15 years people were clear about who the enemy was and what the war was all about.

The overriding concern was breaking the sea blockade and bringing in vital food and fuel supplies. An equally important consideration for Aoun was getting arms and ammunition to fight the Syrians. These arms, for the most part, were said to be coming from Iraq. Getting them past sophisticated Syrian maritime radars required skill and daring. Freelance ship captains, for an exorbitant price, would dodge Syrian coastal guns and steer their vessels into army-controlled harbors. Every time we heard that another ship had successfully run the blockade, we had the feeling a great victory had been scored.

Since the beginning of this month a difficult situation has become appallingly worse with the shelling escalating to unprecedented levels of ferocity on all sides. Chances for any sort of political dialogue seem so remote right now. And yet such a dialogue is the only eventual way out for all parties to this conflict.

My late father, Charles Malik, was co-author (with Eleanor Roosevelt) of the 1948 Universal Declaration of Human Rights and later, president of the United Nations General Assembly. He spent a great deal of his life pondering the question of moral responsibility in international affairs, and the obligation of nations large and small to reckon with the judgment of history.

What has been happening in Lebanon is such a moral issue. The Pope said it most clearly last week when he described Syrian aggression in Lebanon as "genocide." How the West should respond to this tragedy is a complicated question. What isn't complicated is the need for a bold and imaginative — and yes, a moral — response.

Malik, assistant professor of history at the American University of Beirut, is a friend and informal adviser of Gen. Michel Aoun.

Believe It Or Not, There Were Successes In '89

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — Time to give the devils their due. The 1989 General Assembly had some success.

- Education. While legislators continued to call education their top priority, it was obvious that roads and prisons were more important to them this year. The Basic Education Program was shortchanged and other education improvements didn't even get serious consideration.

But education also took some steps forward, the BEP gets an additional $69 million this year, and legislators are promising (for whatever their promises are worth) to make up almost all of the unfunded items this year.

The state's teachers finally got back onto a rational salary schedule, one that rewards experience. This schedule is an essential first step to providing merit pay in almost any form. The average six percent raises provided for this year and next aren't tremendous, but they're not bad either.

Maybe more important for education is the expansion of legislative minds on how schools and classrooms operate. Late in the session, the assembly passed a bill that will give local school boards more autonomy and shift state thinking to evaluate schools on student performance. The assembly also enhanced the state's innovative lead teacher program.

The effects of these changes may be to lay the groundwork for the restructuring of public school education which is so often discussed by this nation's leading education thinkers.

- Tax Simplification and Fairness. By revising the state income tax laws, the assembly will take 700,000 low income people off of the tax rolls and make the filing of a state income tax return considerably easier for those who remain on the rolls.

- Medicaid Expansion. The assembly expanded Medicaid health coverage to thousands of expectant mothers and their small children. In effect, the state is giving these people their only opportunity for health care.

- State Parks. The assembly appropriated $8 million to improve the state park system. North Carolina, for some unexplainable reason, has one of the worst park systems in the country. Before this appropriation, its spending on the state parks was the worst among the states. This money provides a start towards rehabilitating these parks and adding needed facilities.

- Consolidation of Agencies. After three years of wrangling, the assembly finally reorganized the state's environmental and public health efforts. Now there is a Department of Environment, Health and Natural Resources.

- Change Second Primaries. The leading candidate in a primary now will receive the nomination with 40 percent of the vote rather than the previous 50 percent. That should provide minority candidates a better chance.

- Reducing Solid Wastes. The assembly didn't go as far as will be needed to solve the garbage problem. More recycling, controls on the dumping of newspaper and a beverage container deposit bill will probably be needed. But the assembly took a first step in this area, and many legislators began to understand the need for action.

Scary Gas Line Forecasts Fail To Materialize

By Robert Burns
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Dire forecasts of summer gas lines and higher prices aren't materializing, and analysts say prices at the pump may be headed even lower as the vacation season draws to a close.

Although consumers are paying about 15 cents a gallon more this summer than last, nearly all the increases came in the two months following the Exxon Valdez oil spill last March. Since June, retail prices in most areas have slipped slightly.

On June 13 the consumer group Buyers Up, a division of the Ralph Nader-founded Public Citizen organization, issued a report saying tight supplies and rising demand would lead to higher prices and possibly 1970s-style gas lines by early August.

Christopher Dyson, author of the report, said then that he expected prices to jump about 10 cents a gallon during the summer, mainly because of a supply squeeze.

In fact there have been no reported shortages of gasoline, even in remote areas with heavy tourist traffic, according to Joseph Koach, executive director of the Service Stations Dealers of America. He noted that many industry groups, as well as the Bush administration, had disputed Buyers Up's prediction.

"They've got to have egg on their faces," Koach said.

Dyson, in an interview last week, acknowledged his report was off the mark, but he said the nation still faced a precarious supply situation and that a refinery or pipeline accident could throw the retail gasoline market into crisis.

Some other analysts in June agreed with Dyson's view that a supply crunch was possible, but none went so far as to predict motorists would face backups at the gas pump.

Dyson said he had "totally underestimated" the refining industry's ability to sustain an exceptionally high rate of production throughout the season.

"That was the major reason our prediction didn't come out as it should have," Dyson said. He also did not expect the high rates of summer oil production by major foreign producers that pushed down prices for crude used to make gasoline.

U.S. refineries have run nearly full blast this summer, using an average 89.8 percent of available capacity in June and 90.3 percent in July. The July figure was the highest for any month in 11 years, according to the American Petroleum Institute.

The risk of shortages also was eased by a lack of growth in gasoline use. The Energy Department said demand in the first half of this year was unchanged from a year earlier, although it says growth will resume soon. Last spring it had predicted about a 1 percent increase for this year's first half.

Summer usually is the peak period for gasoline consumption, and demand normally tails off by September.

Jan Lundberg, a private energy forecaster based in Fredericksburg, Va., said the recent slump in gasoline prices "is clearly due to an unexpectedly weak summer driving season" that he said could mean the economy is entering a recession.

Lundberg and other analysts say prices are likely to continue dropping this fall, although the pace and depth of decline will be determined in part by the willingness of wholesalers and station dealers to pass on savings from lower crude prices.

The Energy Department says it expects the average price of imported crude oil by summer's end to be about $17 a barrel, or about 10 percent lower than last spring. Theoretically that would mean a decline of about a nickel a gallon at the pump, although many factors, including state taxes, could change that.

Couple OK After 66-Day Ordeal At Sea

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ALAMEDA, Calif. — A husband and wife said they survived 66 days at sea on raw fish and purified water after whales rammed and sank their pleasure boat off the Central American coast.

William Butler, 60, and his 52-year-old wife Simone were taken to a hospital in Golfito, Costa Rica, after being rescued by a Costa Rican Coast Guard crew Saturday afternoon, about 30 miles off that city's Pacific coast, said U.S. Coast Guard spokesman Egbert Vallecillo.

"They are weak but they are expected to recover," said Vallecillo, who said he spoke to Butler by phone from the U.S. Coast Guard's Pacific Command headquarters in Alameda, 10 miles east of San Francisco.

Butler told Coast Guard officials their 40-foot pleasure boat, the "Siboney," was attacked and sunk by "several" whales on June 15, about 1,200 miles southwest of Costa Rica.

"They were large, according to Mr. Butler; but he didn't know how many whales," Vallecillo said.

William Butler told Coast Guard officials he is an experienced sailor. Vallecillo said he has heard of boats running into marine mammals when there is poor visibility, but wasn't sure if there have been any recorded cases of whale aggression.

The couple's last radio contact was June 13, when they talked to their daughter, Susan Smith, in Miami.

As the boat was sinking, the couple grabbed fishing rods and a salt-water purifier and set off in a rubber lifeboat, Vallecillo said.

"This is an exceptional case, in that they were prepared with fishing equipment and the desalination unit," Vallecillo said.

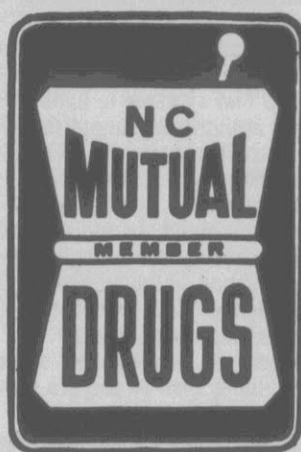

During the course of the two months the lifeboat drifted slowly eastward. The Butlers caught between 400 and 500 pounds of fish and survived multiple shark attacks by sealing punctures with a raft repair kit, Vallecillo said.

William Butler told U.S. Coast Guard officials that several times they spotted merchant ships but were unable to flag them down.

On Saturday, the Costa Rican ship spotted the raft and rescued the couple.

They were sailing from Coral Gables, Fla., near Miami, to Honolulu, Hawaii, where they planned to vacation, Vallecillo said.

The Coast Guard in Miami said it had no information about Butler's boat.

College Students Will Discover Changes On Campuses In N.C.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GREENSBORO — When college students return to their schools in coming weeks many of them will find changes at their schools, ranging from new buildings and courses to condoms in dormitory vending machines.

At Wake Forest University, the $4.2 million Olin Physical Laboratory will house physics classrooms and a laser lab that campus officials describe as one of the finest in the country.

Wake Forest's basketball team will have a new home this year — the $26 million Lawrence Joel Veterans Memorial Coliseum in Winston-Salem.

Wake Forest contributed $5 million to the 14,700-seat facility in return for scheduling priority and color and design considerations.

"That's a unique feature of the facility," said Charlie Patterson, associate athletic director. "A private university has made a $5 million contribution to a facility that the city owns. I don't know that that has been done anywhere around the country."

At the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, the School of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance Building has been completed at a cost of $15.7 million.

The 234,000-square-foot building is the largest on the UNC campus.

At Guilford College, officials plan to move into a greatly expanded Hege Memorial Library in October. The $3.5 million project will add 35,000 square feet to the facility.

At N.C. A&T State University, a new Hold Annex dorm will house honor students in business and engineering. It is the first of three private houses to be converted to honor dorms for students with at least a 3.5 grade point average.

At N.C. State University in Raleigh, the $11.7 million Natural Resources Research Center will house several departments, including marine, earth and atmospheric sciences. The six-story building contains 86,871 square feet.

N.C. State also has a 1,228-space parking deck that will open sometime during first semester. Serving the northwestern part of campus, the four-level facility cost $8.8 million.

Some changes on college campuses have attracted more attention than new buildings.

One of those is at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, where condom machines have been installed in the bathrooms of residence halls. The move has opened the university to some criticism, but campus officials said the AIDS epidemic was the motivating factor.

Chancellor Paul Hardin has said "under the circumstances, it is not a particularly difficult decision."

New faces will be evident at several campuses, particularly at the N.C. School of the Arts, where Philip F. Nelson will serve as interim chancellor while a replacement is found. The former music professor and Yale University dean replaces Jane E. Milley.

Chairman Says Spangler Handling Case Properly

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — As the University of North Carolina Board of Governors prepares to receive a report on allegations of wrongdoing in the athletic department at North Carolina State University, the head of the board says he is happy with the way system President C.D. Spangler is handling the situation.

"I really think he's doing a remarkable job of keeping the lid on something that has lot of hype to it," said Robert Jones, chairman of the board which governs the state's 16 public universities. "I think it is the president's style to just not roughshod something when patience can be a virtue."

On Friday, Spangler will appear before the board to disclose the results of an investigation by the Poole Commission into coach Jim Valvano's basketball program. Spangler in January appointed the four-member commission headed by board Vice Chairman Sam Poole probe allegations of misconduct.

Most board members have said they approve of Spangler's caution, but a few have said Spangler sometimes responds too slowly in major crises.

"There has never been a situation in which there is not more than one side to the issue," Jones said. "In this case, there are some sides to the issue that have not yet been made public. I think the prudent people will understand and wait and see...."

"I think that, on the timing, although some people have criticized it, quite a few more have not," Jones said. "I think that a lot of people believe that a waiting period can take the edge off some emotional reaction that might take place."

Last week, Spangler met for almost five hours with Valvano, N.C. State Chancellor Bruce Poulton and the school's attorney. He called the meeting because the results of the Poole investigation raised more questions, Spangler said Thursday.

Spangler declined to comment on what recommendations he will make to the board.

Spangler said he will not be pressured to make a decision until he is satisfied that he has all the facts.

"Those who would wish me to act more promptly, I can understand that, and I am in sympathy with those who hold that position," he said. "But I am doing the best I can."

A few members said they believe that athletic programs in the system's other schools may have problems similar to those at N.C. State and that Spangler should set up a system for closely examining all of the athletic programs.

"I do not believe there is a (NCAA division) 1A school that doesn't violate the regulations in one form or another. I don't think our schools are any exception," said board member Reginald McCoy.

For example, former Tar Heel linebacker Lawrence Taylor wrote a book in 1987 in which he said he had cheated on assignments at UNC and had been given special academic treatment because he had been an athlete.

During the past 35 years, N.C. State's athletes and athletics program have come under scrutiny several times by the National Collegiate Athletic Association and police investigators.

In the 1950s, the school twice was placed on probation for violating NCAA rules. A point-shaving scandal was uncovered in the 1960s. In the 1970s and 1980s, a number of Wolfpack players had run-ins with the law.

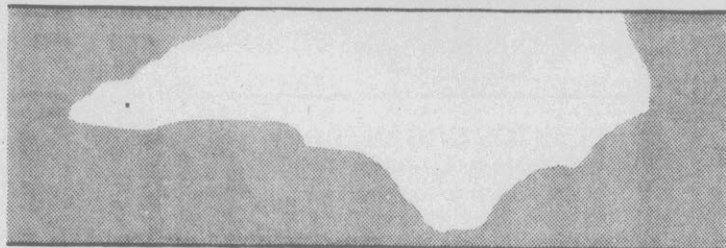

Perhaps the most devastating scandal in the state's collegiate sports history came to light in 1961, when authorities charged that three basketball players for N.C. State and one player at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill had been involved in point-shaving schemes from 1959 through 1961. The players had accepted money from gamblers to "fix" the outcome of the games, investigators said.

When the investigation ended in 1962, more than 50 players from 25 colleges nationwide stood accused of fixing 54 games from 1956 to 1961.

In May 1961, William Friday, president of the Consolidated University of North Carolina, ordered an immediate de-emphasis of basketball. He ended the Dixie Classic, a 12-year-old Christmas tournament held in N.C. State's Reynolds Coliseum. Friday also cut the number of basketball games to 14.

Five Die On Highways

RALEIGH (AP) — Five people, including two elderly women and a young man who died in Montgomery County, were killed on North Carolina roads during the weekend, the state Highway Patrol reported.

A car driven by Robert Mendoza Merida, 23, of Biscoe struck a car carrying three women. Merida and two of the women, Lilla Brewer McKeehan, 76, of Biscoe, and Sallie Webb Robertson, 81, of Candor, died in the accident about 5:12 p.m. Saturday, troopers said.

Merida was driving about 70 mph on U.S. 220-A when he lost control of the car he was driving, troopers said. The car went off the road then turned sideways into the path of the other car.

Also Saturday, Patsy Darnell George, 28, of Whiteville, died after the car she was driving collided head-on with another vehicle on U.S. 701 south of Clarkton.

Billy Ray Eddings, 28, of Rowland, was driving at high speed at 10:10 p.m. Friday when he lost control of his car and was killed seven miles north of Pembroke in Robeson County, troopers said.

Drowning Victim

HOPE MILLS, N.C. (AP) — The body of a 17-year-old Fayetteville youth who drowned in a boating accident on Thursday was recovered from a Cumberland County lake on Sunday morning, authorities say.

The body of Donald Lee Weber was found by divers about 10:30 a.m. floating on the eastern side of Lake Upchurch, said Craig Ferguson, an enforcement officer with the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission.

Weber disappeared Thursday afternoon after the jet ski he was riding hit a 16-foot motorboat, authorities said.

Thornburgh Backs Sending Troops To Colombia

By Robert Greene
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Attorney General Dick Thornburgh said the United States should consider offering military help to the Colombian government in its fight against drug terrorism, but the chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee opposed the use of troops.

"I think we have to look at any request that we get for either law enforcement or military assistance seriously," Thornburgh said Sunday on NBC-TV's "Meet The Press."

"You now see an aura of terrorism rather than simply narco-trafficking," he said. "The assassination of a presidential candidate, of the chief of police in Medellin, of other judges and top officials have really brought that country to its knees as far as enforcing its own laws" is concerned.

"I don't think we ought to respond, as some suggest, willy-nilly with a military response," Thornburgh said. "But I do think that's an option that we have to keep open."

Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., chairman of the Judiciary Committee, said today he would support sending some type of American police force to assist in Colombia, but he would draw the line at sending in U.S. troops.

"There should be absolutely no safe haven for these narco-terrorists, and we know where they are most of the time," Biden said on NBC's "Today" show.

"The idea of sending down Marines en masse to invade Colombia at the invitation of the Colombian government I cannot see," Biden said. "The idea of sending down, if you will, the international version of SWAT teams to help train and be part of operations to try to arrest, to spirit these people away and bring them back to the United States for trial, I can see."

The comments by Thornburgh and Biden followed a statement Saturday by President Bush that he was ready to meet with Colombian President Virgilio Barco "at the earliest convenient moment to consider a coordinated approach" to the drug problem. Barco said Friday he was using emergency powers to reinstate an extradition treaty with the United States so that Colombian drug traffickers may be tried on drug charges originating in this country.

Barco issued the order after Sen. Luis Carlos Galan, a leading presidential candidate, was killed in a shotgun attack that police blamed on drug lords. At least 10 other people were wounded in the attack.

The latest violence, which also included the killing of a provincial police chief Friday, also led to the arrest of nearly 10,000 suspected drug criminals Sunday in Colombia.

"The numbers of the major kingpins we're looking at (for extradition) are a dozen or so," Thornburgh said Sunday.

"If in Colombia they feel, hypothetically, that they may have reached the point where they can no longer operate under the rule of law and have to use the rule of force, then they're going to require all the help they need," Thornburgh said.

"We've begun discussions with the State Department and with the United States attorneys who are handling these particular cases so we will be in a position to act when any one or more, we hope, of these major cartel traffickers are taken into custody in Colombia," he said.

In another television interview today, Thornburgh said Bush's drug strategy, scheduled to be announced Sept. 5, "will be directed to making the user of drugs far more accountable than we have in the past."

"Every cocaine sniffer or crack smoker in this country bears some responsibility for the assassinations that took place in Colombia, just as they bear responsibility for the crossfire that occurs in our streets here in the United States," the attorney general said on "CBS This Morning."

"Without the demand for drugs here in the United States, there would be no drug traffickers, there would be no violence, there would be no concern that has now become worldwide."

Thornburgh also contended on "Meet the Press" that federal investigators have the right to examine the telephone records of reporters in an effort to find the source of leaked information from government sources.

Thornburgh said investigators would be "well within constitutional bounds" if they sought reporters' telephone records.

However, he added, "I'm not going to comment on any particulars of any investigation."

Thornburgh has ordered an investigation into leaks surrounding U.S. Rep. William Gray, D-Pa., shortly before he was elected House Democratic whip. Gray was interviewed by FBI agents on Memorial Day, triggering reports he was under investigation.

The Justice Department later said Gray was not the subject of an investigation.

Ethiopia Rocked By Earthquakes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia — Several strong earthquakes shook Ethiopia and caused some damage in neighboring Djibouti, officials said today.

There were no immediate reports of damage or casualties in Ethiopia. The first tremor registered 6.4 on the Richter scale and occurred at 2:17 p.m. Sunday about 320 miles northeast of Addis Ababa and 100 miles northwest of Djibouti.

Subsequent quakes, registering up to 6.5 on the open-ended scale, struck the same area today at 3:48 a.m., 4:09 a.m. and 4:50 a.m., said Dr. Gebre-Berhan Equba-Egzi of the University of Ethiopia's geology department.

The department is responsible for measuring seismic activity in Ethiopia, but Gebre-Berhan said the quakes were too strong and too near to be assessed by their equipment.

The U.S. Geological Survey in Golden, Colorado, said the second tremor this morning measured 6.5 on the Richter scale.

In Djibouti, the Geophysical Observatory reported that although the quake epicenter was in Ethiopia, minor property damage was reported in the town of Yoboki, about 62 miles west of the capital and close to the Ethiopian border. No injuries were reported.

Gebre-Berhan estimated the worst affected area in Ethiopia would be in the province of Wollo between Dubti and Serdo, where the government runs five large commercial farms. The area is sparsely populated and is flat, dry landscape is dotted with occasional mountains.

6 Killed As Jeep Attacked; Bodies Are Found In Kandy

By Dexter Cruz
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka — Sinhalese radicals detonated a landmine under a Sri Lankan army jeep in the center of this island nation, killing five soldiers and the civilian driver, military officials said today.

The bodies of six other people, five of them badly burned, were found in the Kandy hill district, the officials added.

All 12 deaths occurred in a 24-hour period ending at midday today.

In the same period, government troops rounded up 645 suspected Sinhalese radicals in a series of search operations in central and southern Sri Lanka, the officials said, speaking on condition of anonymity. Of these, 440 were arrested in Colombo and its suburbs.

The military officials blamed the latest killings on the People's Liberation Front, an ultranationalist Sinhalese group that has been attacking the Sinhalese-dominated government the past two years. The front accuses the government of making too many concessions to the Tamil minority and of weakening the nation's sovereignty by allowing Indian peacekeeping troops to remain on the island.

However, opposition politicians and front supporters have accused the government or government-tolerated vigilante squads of responsibility for the charred bodies that turn up virtually every day in the Sinhalese heartland. Senior government and military officials also have acknowledged privately that "excesses" have been committed in the government's fight against the Sinhalese radicals.

The attack on the army patrol occurred Sunday night in Mahawehera, about 85 miles northeast of Colombo.

The bodies of the six other unidentified people were found after daybreak today in two locations in the district around Kandy, about 55 miles northeast of Colombo.

At least 4,000 people have died in the Sinhalese violence that started in 1987, while 11,000 more have been killed in the Tamil insurrection that began in 1983 in northeastern Sri Lanka.

Sinhalese, who make up 75 percent of Sri Lanka's 16 million people, dominate the government and military. Tamils, who comprise 18 percent, say they are discriminated against by the ethnic majority in jobs, education and use of the Sinhala language.

India sent peacekeeping troops to Tamil areas two years ago in an attempt to enforce a peace accord designed to give Tamils some autonomy.

Conservationist Dies In Kenya

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NAIROBI, Kenya — Conservationist George Adamson was found dead at his home in a game reserve where he taught lions born in captivity to survive in the bush. Reports today said he was shot by animal poachers.

Adamson and his late wife, author Joy Adamson, helped popularize wildlife conservation. Joy, who wrote the celebrated book chronicling their work, "Born Free," was killed in 1980 in the Shaba Game Reserve by a young servant in a wage dispute.

Eric Callaghan of the British High Commission confirmed the 83-year-old Adamson, a Briton, was found dead at his camp in the Kora National Reserve on Sunday.

Members of Kenya's wildlife community and associates of Adamson, speaking on condition of anonymity, said they understood Adamson had been shot to death by Shifta, roaming bands of Somali tribesmen who are believed responsible for most of the animal poaching in Kenya.

Neither police nor Adamson's lawyer would comment on those reports. Police Commissioner Philip Kilonzo and Wildlife Director Richard Leakey flew to Adamson's camp in the northeastern reserve this morning to investigate.

It was due largely to activism by Adamson, who moved to Kora and leased the area from a county council in 1971, that the government made it a game reserve three years later.

As a result of encroachment by nomadic Somali tribesmen and their herds, Adamson pressured Kenya into calling in paramilitary anti-poaching troops to drive out the Somalis.

In an interview with The Associated Press in 1983, Adamson said he had been told of a plot by Somalis to murder him in the hope that with him gone, authorities would be under little pressure to police the reserve.

"I think that George always was aware that that was a risk and that he was treading on somebody's toes," said one of Adamson's close associates.

Adamson was game warden of Kenya's northern Frontier District in 1944 when he married Joy, an Austrian-born artist whose books would thrust him into fame.

She had moved to the game reserve in the late 1960s to work with leopards. In 1956, her husband brought home three motherless lion cubs. One, which they named Elsa, became the central character of "Born Free." Adamson served as technical director for a film adaptation.

That book and its sequels, "Living Free" and "Forever Free," described the Adamsons' unique and controversial practice of taking lions born in captivity and teaching them to survive on their own before freeing them.

The government stopped the practice in 1980 after a mauling incident in Kora in 1980.

Adamson, whose shoulder-length hair and goatee gave him a lion-like appearance, kept a modest camp in Kora and lived off a pension, interest from a trust fund set up by his wife, and donations from supporters.

He wrote two books of his own, "Bwana Game" and an autobiography "My Pride and Joy."

Adamson was born in India in 1906 and first visited Kenya in 1924. He later moved to the East African nation and joined its game department in 1938. He retired as game warden in 1963.

He had no children.

Western Role In Poland Discussed

By Deborah G. Seward
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GDANSK, Poland — Solidarity leader Lech Walesa today discussed the West's role in shoring up Poland's economy with four U.S. senators at national union headquarters in this Baltic port city.

"We who have been here will go back and see what we can do, because this is important for Poland and the world," said Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., after the meeting.

Walesa has repeatedly called on the West to help Poland reverse its economic decline, but today he stopped short of asking for a massive aid program, said Sen. Robert Graham, D-Fla.

During the meeting, Walesa asked for help in restructuring Poland's $39 billion foreign debt, setting up independent banks and bringing U.S. businesses into joint ventures, Graham said.

"He was not asking for a Marshall Plan for Poland," Graham said, referring to the huge U.S. aid plan that helped put Western Europe back on its feet after World War II.

Poland's Communist leadership, which earlier this year held its first contested elections since shortly after the war, has now nominated Tadeusz Mazowiecki, a Solidarity activist, as prime minister. He would be the first non-Communist to lead an East bloc government since the Communists consolidated control of Eastern Europe after World War II.

Asked before the meeting if he now expected major help from the West, Walesa replied. "No, it is not time yet for the West. First comes the formation of the government, then its first movements — wise movements — and then it will be the time," he said.

However, he added, "We ourselves did so much more than the West expected. So in that case, we can expect more from the West, too. That is obvious."

The group of Democratic senators, which also included Charles Robb of Virginia and Paul Sarbanes of Maryland, wound up its four-day visit to Poland in Gdansk. They then headed on to Budapest, Hungary, another center of East bloc reforms.

During their Polish visit, they also met with President Wojciech Jaruzelski, who nominated Mazowiecki as prime minister.

Radicals Reportedly Plotted Attacks

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAIRO, Egypt — Forty-one Egyptians suspected of belonging to a radical Shiite Moslem group that planned to attack U.S., Israeli and Arab embassies and airlines have been arrested, the attorney general said.

Gamal Shoeman, the attorney general, said Sunday that 11 others suspected of belonging to the group are being sought.

Shoeman's office issued a statement saying the organization also plotted to overthrow the Egyptian government and establish an Islamic regime styled on the fundamentalist government established in Iran by the late Shiite spiritual leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

"Investigations that the prosecution carried out show that the organization aimed at spreading Shiite thought with extremist leanings and aimed at carrying out aggressive actions against some American, Israeli, Saudi Arabian, Iraqi and Kuwaiti interests in Egypt like their embassies and airlines," the statement said.

It said the suspects include physicians, engineers and students.

The statement said four Saudi Arabians and one Iranian Shiite organized the group into cells and assigned members to military training and indoctrination sessions in Iran, Cyprus, India and Syria.

It said the five provided thousands of dollars for the organization that was created in 1985.

It did not say if members of the group had attempted any attacks, but said explosives, hand grenades and other arms were found in possession of the suspects.

Post Mark Collectors Find Base In Ohio

But Hobby Takes Them Nationwide

By Charles Hillinger
LAT-WP NEWS SERVICE

BELLEVUE, Ohio — It was a cold, blustery day with a chilling wind blowing off Lake Erie as Bernice Mittower unlocked the door of the 165-year-old, tiny, white, clapboard post office.

The post office is one of a dozen frame structures erected in the 1820s and 1830s that were part of Lyme, Ohio, a 19th-century town that never made it into the 20th century, preserved as a historic village on the outskirts of Bellevue.

Mittower, 72, is curator of the Old Lyme Post Office, now the headquarters, library, museum and only building ever owned by the national Post Mark Collectors Club.

The old post office houses the largest collection of postmarks anywhere in America, more than 4 million postmarks from every post office in the nation, from hundreds of post offices that no longer exist. The earliest postmark in the collection is a letter canceled and mailed from a ship in Boston Harbor, May 5, 1793.

Shelves in the club's library and museum are lined with large blue three-ring notebooks filled with postmarks on whole envelopes or portions of envelopes alphabetized by states, then broken down into cities and towns.

File cases are filled with postmarks. Shelves contain Postal Guides from 1789 to 1989, histories of the U.S. Postal Service, books with information on the derivation of names of cities and towns.

Collecting postmarks is the hobby of more than 800 members of the club who live in every state except Alaska and in nine foreign countries. California boasts the largest number of members, 78. Other leading states are Ohio with 52, Illinois, 51, and New York, 45.

"Our members are from various walks of life, including doctors, lawyers, merchants, ministers, teachers, teen-agers, retired people, a newspaper editor, the general manager of a Toronto radio station, an undertaker in Peoria, Ill., and a retired school custodian in Compton, Calif.," Mittower said.

Vic Steward, 42, the Peoria mortician, recalled when he was 15 and started collecting postmarks from Illinois. "Then I began sending away all over the country for postmarks from towns with peculiar names like Peculiar, Mo.

"One day I sent a stamped, self-addressed post card to the postmaster of Ninety Six, S.C., and when he sent me a postmark from his town he told me about the Post Mark Collectors Club. I never knew there was a national club for postmark collectors. I thought I was the only idiot in the world doing this," said Steward, who figures he has more than 150,000 postmarks.

Postmark collectors swap with other collectors. They mail stamped, self-addressed postcards to post offices. They collect current and old postmarks. They buy old post cards and old letter envelopes at antique shops, swap meets and flea markets. They have companies, friends and relatives give them canceled envelopes. They ask almost everybody they encounter if they have old letters or post cards stashed away in the attic or basements.

"I was in Hamilton, a little town in Utah, in a small antique shop and bought a shoe-box full of old post cards for $6," Steward recalled. "There were 1,200 post cards with postmarks including one canceled at Piopolix, Ill., in 1897, that had been mailed to someone in Munich, Germany, and somehow ended up in Hamilton, Utah."

J. Riley Groom, 77, of Compton, Calif., has one of the largest postmark collections on the West Coast, numbering nearly 200,000. His earliest postmarks go back to 1853.

The late Dr. Howard Thompson of New Hampshire had what is considered the finest private postmark collection in existence, numbering in excess of 1 million postmarks. That collection is now part of the club's archives.

Members pay $9 a year dues — $4 for 18 and younger — which entitles them on entry to an assortment of postmarks plus a yearly subscription to the 24-page monthly Post Mark Collectors Club bulletin. In existence since 1946, the club has annual conventions, the most recent held in Ridgecrest, Calif., last August.

Some members collect postmarks from every state; some from every post office, and former post office in his or her state; some specialize collecting nearly every conceivable topic — male and female names, romantic, humorous or odd names like Chicken, Alaska, and Tomato, Ark.

The cover page on a recent copy of the Post Mark Collectors Club bulletin featured reproductions of postmarks with country names and postal state abbreviations, for example, England, AR; America, MN; Russia, OH; China, TX; Germany, KY; Italy, TX; and Japan, NC.

The bulletin is filled with information about members, about coming club meetings, stories about histories of post offices and other features, description of duplicate postmarks to be auctioned from the club's collection and ads from members.

Postmarks are generally auctioned in lots; for example, 400 postmarks from Texas. Prices are reasonable. The biggest auction of the year is at the Post Mark Collectors Club convention for the benefit of maintaining the headquarters building. Last year's convention auction had 125 different lots that brought a total of $3,400. One of the highest prices ever paid for a single postmark was $80 from a 19th-century post office by a member whose great-grandfather had been postmaster there.

One regular feature in the Post Mark Collectors Club bulletin is a short story submitted by members using postmarks such as Lazy Day (MT) by Ruth Caron. It began: "It was a Lazy Day (MT) — the Morning sun (L.A.) was hot. I jumped into my Auto (WV). I was in No Hurry (MD). I went to a Library (PA) to get a book (L.A.). First I read a Magazine (AR). I'm quite a Reader (AR)."

Other postmarks mentioned in Caron's story included Robin Hood (ME), Oliver (IL), Twist (AR), Old Glory (TX), Star (NB) Spangle (WA), Banner (AR), Goodnight (OK), Sweet (ID), Hart (TX).

Irene Green of Sand Point, Idaho, recently ran an ad in the Post Mark Collectors Club bulletin that read: "Selling my postmark collection. Am slowly going blind. Not much fun anymore. Mention states wanted, 25 for $1 plus postage."

Experts Recommend Moderate Workouts

LADIES' HOME JOURNAL

Putting less work into workouts? Welcome to the trendy track.

Ladies' Home Journal reports that the graying of America and the increasing demands on time are leading many people to adjust their fitness goals and moderate their exercise routines.

Sports medicine specialists, for example, are recommending more moderate standards.

"Fifteen years ago, the American College of Sports Medicine (ACSM) said you had to work out at least 70 to 90 percent of your maximum heart rate to improve cardiovascular fitness," says Steven Blair, director of epidemiology at the Institute of Aerobic Research in Dallas. "But their latest guidelines dropped that figure to 60 percent."

(To find the minimum heart rate to work at, subtract your age from 220; take 60 percent of that figure.)

In line with today's "less is more" fitness credo, experts are finding that too much of a good thing is bad. Excessive amounts of strenuous physical activity can lead to muscle soreness, fatigue and bone and joint injuries. Really overdoing it can cause hormonal imbalances, and some authorities say it may also depress the immune system, leaving the body open to infection.

A no-sweat approach may be more effective than before when it comes to losing weight. That's because short, intense activity is fueled mostly by carbohydrates; longer, lower-intensity exercise burns more fat.

The Journal recommends spending just 90 minutes a week on a variety of less taxing, low-impact activities. Such moderate exercise can strengthen the heart so it pumps efficiently, help reduce the risk of coronary heart disease, aid muscle function and help keep bones strong. This regime also shares the all-important benefits of stress reduction and improved moods that more strenuous exercises promise.

According to exercise specialists Molly Fox and Rebecca Thomas of the Molly Fox Studio in New York City, any fitness plan should contain all the elements needed for true fitness.

Remember to always check with a doctor before starting any exercise program.

Two Call It Quits After 44 Years

Editor's note: Abby is off on a two-week vacation, but she left behind some of her favorite letters taken from her best-selling book, "The Best of Dear Abby."

Dear Abby: I am absolutely beside myself with the news my parents gave me this morning. They drive over here and calmly announced that after 44 years of marriage they are getting a divorce! I honestly believe they have taken leave of their senses.

They have had their differences like all married couples, but they have never separated — not even for one day. I can't imagine what has come over them.

Dad says that since he is 70, if the good Lord gives him another five years he wants to live them in peace. Mother, who is 69, says she feels the same way.

I suggested a larger apartment with two bedrooms, frequent separate vacations, a trial separation — anything but divorce. But they insist they have thought it over and this is what they both want. Abby, they have children and grandchildren who love and respect them. How can parents disgrace their families that way? — Their Daughter

Dear Daughter: Your parents have a right to make their own decisions, for their own reasons, without loss of love or respect from their children and grandchildren. And if they terminate their marriage after 44 years, where is the "disgrace"? Perhaps they stayed together as long as they did out of consideration for you. They need compassion, not criticism.

Dear Abby

Dear Abby: My friend and I have a difference of opinion. He says Damon and Pythias were homosexuals. I say they were straight. Can you check this out and let us know? — C And B

Dear C And B: I wrote to 12 leading universities. Their responses included yeses, noes and maybes.

I think the chairman of the English Department at the University of Chicago summed it up very well:

"Dear Abby: You asked if Damon and Pythias were gay. In dealing with characters of such remote antiquity, who exist more in the realm of legend, it is sometimes difficult to find much evidence on the most intimate details of their private lives.

"Damon and Pythias were famous for their devotion to each other, and they were Greeks. Beyond that, I think whatever they did was pretty much their own business, and even if I knew, I wouldn't say.

"One less-than-eminant authority said to me, 'I think Damon was OK, but I'm not so sure about Pythias.' Sincerely, Stuart M. Tave"

Dear Abby: My husband is a fine man and an excellent provider, but he has some odd ideas. For example, when we go out for an evening, he orders a vodka martini with eight olives. Then one by one he puts the olives in his nose and sniffs out the juice. (He claims it clears his sinuses.)

I don't mind when he does this at home, but when he does it in public, I want to crawl into a hole. Do you think he should see a psychiatrist? — Radiologist's Wife

Dear Wife: Yes, but he should find one who drinks martinis with a twist of lemon so they won't fight over the olives.

Dear Abby: You recently published a letter from a bicycle rider thanking automobile drivers for their courtesy. I got the impression that she thought some of those drivers were not very courteous. Therefore, I would like to send a letter of thanks to bicycle riders who are also on "vehicles," and, therefore, are subject to the same laws as the drivers of motor vehicles.

Thank you for ignoring stop signs and running red lights.

Thank you for riding the wrong way on one-way streets.

Thank you for riding side by side at 10 miles an hour in a 45-mph zone, making it impossible to pass you.

Thank you for not using a light and for wearing dark clothes at night, making it almost impossible to see you.

Thank you for scaring the socks off me by barreling out of side streets in front of me, assuming (I assume) that I can stop in time.

My special thanks to those of you who, when I tap my horn to let you know I am approaching, give me the finger!

I must and do obey the law. I suggest that you do likewise. That way, we will all get along in better harmony and be a good deal safer. — George M. Gilkerson, Denton, Texas

Dear George: You make some good points. I hope you're not just spinning your wheels, and some bicycle riders will take heed.

If you would like to write to Abby, send your letter to Abigail Van Buren, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA. 90069. For a personal, non-published reply, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.

As the tide dropped today, the hull of the 85-foot Marchioness became fully visible, resting on a mudbank with its top deck sheared off and its dance floor exposed. Crews had pulled the boat there from the center of the river where it sank.

One launch brought families of some victims to the scene to drop flowers on the water.

Police said Sunday that the boat, which did not have a passenger roster, was licensed to carry 149 passengers and two crew. They said the death toll could be up to 60, which combined with the 84 known survivors would put the total number aboard as high as 144.

But today, police backed off any specific number, saying, "It's not known how many are still missing." Scotland Yard said it increased its count of survivors by six today after discovering three people had gone home from the accident without telling police and three others were hospitalized.

The Marchioness sank within minutes and carried underwater scores of revelers who were drinking and dancing below deck.

British journalist Nicholas Hastings, who was attending the party, survived the sinking.

"Suddenly there was a small jolt. Somebody screamed," he said. "The first thing that ran through my mind was that we had hit something in the river. But as I turned around I could see the enormous, looming hull of the dredger that had hit us. It was right on top of us."

Among the missing too was the riverboat captain. The party-goers, many in their teens and twenties, included friends of the Portuguese-born Vasconcellos and figures from the worlds of modeling, photography and finance.

Divers resumed searching at dawn for others either washed away by the strong current or buried in mud, and found a body near where the boat had gone down, increasing the toll to 27, Scotland Yard said.

Transport Secretary Cecil Parkinson cut short a Florida vacation and returned to London today to head the investigation.

The Independent, quoting unidentified river authority sources, said the last radio conversation between the captains "was a discussion as to which should pass through the central span of Southwark Bridge. ... It appears there may have been a disagreement."

Only vessels as big as the 260-foot Bowbelle, one of the largest registered on the Thames, have right of way through the central arches of the river's bridges, and pleasure craft should keep to the second or third arches near the bank, the newspaper said, quoting a Port of London Authority source.

Pleasure craft "are bloody awful on the river. They continually cut corners to save a few minutes," it quoted the unidentified source as saying.

It also quoted a former river boat engineer, Gerald Hastings, as saying he was on the Pride of Greenwich when the Bowbelle rammed it from behind under Charing Cross Bridge in 1984.

The collision left a 3-foot dent in the stern and an inquiry equally apportioned blame, the newspaper said.

"We got no message from the Bowbelle," Hastings was quoted as saying. "I believe that they did not have a lookout when they hit us."

In 1878, the paddle-steamer Princess Alice was sliced in two by a coal barge on the Thames in southeast London. It sank within five minutes, killing an estimated 700 people.

Mackey Leads Jets' Win Comes On When Ryan Is Injured In First Quarter

By Mike Grizzard
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

RALEIGH — Kyle Mackey knows the role of a backup quarterback is one of uncertainty. He may not play for several games then, suddenly, be called on in a crucial situation.

Mackey came into Sunday night's NFL preseason game expecting to play the final two quarters but an injury to starter Pat Ryan forced him into action in the first quarter. He struggled early but responded by engineering three second-half scores as the New York Jets rallied to beat the Philadelphia Eagles 19-10 in Carter-Finley Stadium.

Ryan, starting in place of Ken O'Brien, went down with a sprained left knee with 3:03 left in the first period when he was hit by a submarining Clyde Simmons on a second-down pass.

Mackey completed 2-of-5 passes through the remainder of the half but went on to hit on 12-of-22 attempts for 121 yards and one touchdown. Ryan completed 4-of-7 passes for 18 yards before exiting.

"You always have to be ready no matter if it's first-team, second-team or third-team," said Mackey, in his third season out of East Texas State. "You have to be ready to play at all times."

"I was prepared to play. I was going to play two quarters anyhow. When (Ryan) went down it just sped things up a little bit."

A 13-yard touchdown pass from Mackey to former Clemson tight end K.D. Dunn capped a seven-play, 60-yard drive that got the Jets within 10-9 with 4:35 left in the third period. The PAT kick was blocked by Jerome Brown.

A 16-play, 74-yard drive culminated in a 25-yard Pat Leahy field goal with 6:06 showing in the fourth quarter, giving New York the lead for good at 12-10.

A.B. Brown scored on a four-yard run and Leahy tacked on the PAT with 2:06 left to cap the scoring.

Jets' head coach Joe Walton noted the offense experienced a lull after Ryan was injured but credited Mackey with assuming the burden and guiding New York to its first win in three preseason tests.

"The offense flattened out after (the injury), there's no doubt about it," Walton said. "We had a little sag there. In the second half we did some good things."

"I thought Kyle played all right. Again he made some mistakes but he played hard and he's doing all right."

The game was marred by penalties (18) and turnovers (6). Both teams were held under 200 yards of total offense.

"Defense won the game for us, no doubt about it," Mackey said. "They played great. They shut down their offense most of the night."

Quarterback Randall Cunningham played just over three quarters for the Eagles, completing 5-of-11 passes for 55 yards. Don McPherson, a rookie from Syracuse, was accurate on 6-of-15 for 66 yards. Both were intercepted once.

The Eagles managed only 74 yards on the ground, led by Andrew Toney's 51 on 12 carries.

"I think probably the New York Jets are very proud of their first defense," Eagles' coach Buddy Ryan said. "I thought they did an excellent job. I thought our defense played real well, too."

The Jets took a 3-0 lead with 1:39 left in the first period on a 46-yard field goal by Leahy after Erik McMillan returned an interception 34 yards to the Eagles' 31-yard-line.

Philadelphia pushed 66 yards in 11 plays late in the half to take a 7-3 lead. Cunningham hooked up with tight end Keith Jackson for passes of 10 and 14 yards and converted a fourth-and-one with a dive over the top. Toney scooted in from one yard out for the score. Luis Zendejas added the PAT.

A 23-yard scramble by Mackey keyed the Jets' first scoring drive of the second half. Two Eagle penalties, a 28-yard toss to Tony Martin and an 11-yard completion to Darryl Pearson set up Leahy's 25-yard field goal.

Mackey hit 3-of-4 passes on the final drive.

Ex-Pirate Henry Williams returns a kick against Jets

Frizzell, Williams Happy To Be 'Home'

Ex-Rampant And Ex-Pirate Return To Carolinas For NFL Game

By Mike Grizzard
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

RALEIGH — William Frizzell and Henry "Gizmo" Williams rarely get the chance to return to North Carolina so Sunday night's NFL exhibition game in Carter-Finley Stadium pitting their Philadelphia Eagles against the New York Jets served as a homecoming of sorts.

Frizzell, a native of Greenville, and Williams, who starred at East Carolina University in the early 1980s, were among six Eagles with ties to the Tar Heel state. That didn't go unnoticed by an electric crowd of 52,855 which quickly made its presence known.

"I was pretty surprised by the crowd," said Frizzell, a former Rose High School and North Carolina Central player now in his sixth professional season. "We were like the home-team favorite here."

"It was a good feeling. I got a chance to come back home and play in a game."

Also returning to their home turf were former N.C. State standouts Izel Jenkins, a defensive back from Wilson; Reggie Singletary, an offensive tackle from near Whiteville; Raleigh native Donald Evans and Wilmington native Clyde Simmons.

Former Wolfpack wide receiver Mike Quick is in contract negotiations and did not suit up for the Eagles.

"It feels great coming back here," Williams said. "I always wanted to come back here and stay. This is football country. From South Carolina to North Carolina is football country."

Williams, who led the nation in kickoff returns in 1982 and 1983 at East Carolina, signed with the Eagles as a free agent this spring after one season with the Memphis Showboats of the now defunct USFL and three seasons with the Edmonton Eskimos of the Canadian Football League.

He has been utilized primarily on punt and kickoff returns throughout his career but has developed into one of the Eagles' top receiving threats in preseason.

Against the Jets, Williams came up with three receptions for a team-high 37 yards and also returned two kickoffs for 40 yards.

"I thought I did a pretty good job but I still think I made a couple of mistakes," Williams said. "I was hoping they were going to throw it to me all the time, as long as I was coming up with the ball. I just wanted to look the ball in and hope I could make the big play."

Eagle coach Buddy Ryan said he was pleased to see improvement in Williams' play.

"I think finally that 'Gizmo' has become a kick catcher — maybe," the always candid Ryan said. "I was beginning to doubt it earlier but he came on and caught a few and ran that last kickoff back up in there pretty good. That's a plus."

Frizzell, in his fourth year with the Eagles, has been a valuable yet unheralded special teams player and nickel back. He said the chance to play in North Carolina should make his name a more familiar one around the state.

"I think for a long time people didn't know who I was or where I was from," Frizzell said. "Being that this is my sixth year the more RALEIGH — The Carolinas sent a powerful message to the National Football League Sunday night assuring that when the league expands, they are ready for a franchise.

A festive sellout crowd of 52,855 turned out in Carter-Finley Stadium to witness the Philadelphia Eagles and New York Jets do battle in the debut of NFL football in North Carolina.

They came from all parts of North and South Carolina for the gala event headed by Spartanburg, S.C., businessman Jerry Richardson.

The smell of fried chicken and the flowing of spirits that are traditional at tailgating parties was in abundance but this was much, much more.

The parking lot could have been mistaken for a state fair, what with all the big-top tents, hot-air balloons and fireworks galore. There was music — from the Embers to the Triangle All-Star Band to the MacLeod Pipes and Drums to B.J. Thomas singing the National Anthem. And there was dancing — from the Apple Chill Cloggers to the Red Hughes Shaggers to the African-American Dance.

There were speeches from Governor Jim Martin of North Carolina and Governor Carroll Campbell of South Carolina and even a parachute four some delivering the U.S. flag, flags from North and South Carolina and the game ball.

And, yes, there was football. Well, sort of. The brand was not exactly that which we associate with the pros. Little offense. A lot of turnovers. Even more penalties.

The absence of holdouts Johnny Hector, Al Toon and Wesley Walker of the Jets and Reggie White and Mike Quick of the Eagles didn't help in that respect.

Still, they came to see NFL football. From the packed stands and the fans blanketing the grassy bank, it was hard to believe that only two weeks ago, some 15,000 tickets still remained unsold.

Higher profile teams such as the Washington Redskins, Dallas Cowboys, San Francisco 49ers, Chicago Bears, New York Giants or Miami Dolphins would have been a more attractive draw.

But this night was not about one game. Who was playing or who won was of little concern to many. In fact, fans started heading to the exits early in the fourth quarter with the outcome still hanging in the balance.

They were satisfied their statement had been made: the Carolinas desperately wants a team — a team to call their own.

Of course there were some, like Vince Wolfe of Fayetteville, who had true allegiances to one of the teams involved. Wolfe is a native of Northeastern Pennsylvania and an Eagles' fan since 1961.

Philadelphia was too far for him to go so he was more than happy to see the Eagles fly south.

"It's one of the best things that's happened around here since the Hornets coming here," Wolfe said.

SMU, Irish, Kicking Mustangs Are Back; Irish On Top; No Tee Brings Changes

By RICK WARNER
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SMU is back on the field, Notre Dame is back on top and the ball is back on the ground for extra points and field goals. But four of the most familiar figures in college football won't be back on the sidelines for the 1989 season.

After enduring an NCAA "death sentence" that killed its football program for two years, Southern Methodist University returns Sept. 2 against Rice with a scaled-down squad and upgraded standards.

"This is the most unique situation a university ever found itself in as far as football," athletic director Doug Single said. "We're on our last chance here. We've got to make it work, or it's over."

To prevent another scandal, the school has instituted a slew of safeguards and reforms. All athletes must now take an ethics course, boosters are banned from recruiting and there are tests on the NCAA rules that SMU has repeatedly broken over the years.

School president A. Kenneth Pye says no more nonsense will be tolerated: "I've made it quite clear that if I find out about (cheating) we will self-report and I will recommend to the board that we drop football. Period."

Coach Forrest Gregg, who left the Green Bay Packers to return to his alma mater, enters the season with only 42 scholarship players and just three with college game experience. One of them is wide receiver Michael Bowen, who played for SMU in 1986, then spent a year at Georgia before returning to Dallas.

"There's no pressure because we don't have anything to lose," Bowen said. "At Georgia, you have a lot to lose every game you play."

Scandal has rarely been a problem at Notre Dame, which prides itself on winning without cheating or bending the rules. The defending national champions demonstrated that again a few weeks ago by suspending All-American linebacker Michael Stonebreaker for the season and refusing to allow running back Tony Brooks back into school for disciplinary reasons.

Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz defended the actions by the university's Office of Student Affairs, which operates independently of the athletic department.

"I know they have a philosophy here in how they operate, and I trust that philosophy," said Holtz, who later learned that four other Notre Dame players won't be available this season because of injuries, academics or personal problems.

Despite the losses and a land mine schedule that includes Michigan, Southern Cal, Penn State and Miami, the Fighting Irish are talented enough to challenge for a second straight national title — a feat last accomplished by Alabama in 1979.

"We have a tradition," said Holtz, whose team opens against Virginia in the Aug. 31 Kickoff Classic. "Notre Dame has a way of rising to the occasion."

Notre Dame's first major test should come at Ann Arbor on Sept. 16. Almost all of Bo Schembechler's top guns return from a Rose Bowl team that came within six points of a perfect season.

As athletic director, Schembechler shared in Michigan's NCAA basketball title last season. As coach, though, he has never won a national championship.

This could be the year. "This is a difficult year for the football coach at a school predominantly known for basketball," Schembechler joked, "but we will try to live up to our basketball team."

That won't be a problem at Nebraska, Southern Cal and Penn State, schools where basketball is a game you play while waiting for the football season to begin.

Although Nebraska's Tom Osborne has the best winning percentage of any active coach in college football, the Cornhuskers have not won a national championship during his 16-year reign. That might change this year, thanks to another dynamite offense and a creampuff non-conference schedule that doesn't include a single team from last year's final Top Twenty poll.

Southern Cal must replace Heisman Trophy runner-up Rodney Peete, who went to the NFL after quarterbacking the Trojans to two Rose Bowls. But coach Larry Smith has a robust running attack and one of the nation's best defenses, with safeties Mark Carrier and Cleveland Colter and a line that has played together for three years.

Losing seasons occur at Penn State about as often as Halley's comet, so the Nittany Lions are expecting major improvement after last year's 5-6 mark. The biggest confidence booster is the return of tailback Blair Thomas, who sat out last season after undergoing major knee surgery. Thomas rushed for 1,414 yards in 1987, the third highest single-season total in Penn State history.

While Joe Paterno returns for his 24th season at Happy Valley, four other powerhouse programs have new coaches.

Jimmy Johnson went from Miami to the Dallas Cowboys. Oklahoma's Barry Switzer and Texas A&M's Jackie Sherrill left programs plagued by allegations of cheating, and Vince Dooley retired after 25 years at Georgia.

Switzer, Sherrill and Dooley were each replaced by an assistant — Gary Gibbs at Oklahoma, R.C. Slocum at

Heat Causes Problems For Pirates

The heat that coach Bill Lewis had been waiting for came in full force Sunday afternoon as the East Carolina football squad went through a two and a half hour practice session.

Ninety degree temperatures hit Greenville and put a halt to the progress that the Pirates were making on the practice field, according to Lewis. "The first time we got the heat, and the players didn't know how to handle it," Lewis said. "We've got to keep driving them. If they've got the kind of pride I think they have, they'll respond and they'll learn how to handle it."

The Pirates will work twice a day Monday and Tuesday before classes start on Wednesday. Lewis will send the Pirates through their first major scrimmage Wednesday night. "It'll be our first test, an exam time," said Lewis. "It's a test for the coaching staff to see where we are in our teaching and installation process. The first two things we look at are knowledge of assignments because how critical it is to play a football game without missed assignments, and the effort that the team gives."

Tom Allan Winner In Rowing Event

OAKLAND, Calif. — Tom Allan of Greenville, N.C., won gold and silver medals this weekend in the U.S. Masters National Rowing Regatta held in Oakland.

Allan won the gold medal with seven other crew members who rowed an eight-oared sweep boat to a first-place finish. The 1,000-meter event was for crews with an average age of 56-60 years old. Allan is 51.

Allan also won a silver medal for his second-place finish in a 1,000-meter single sculling event for rowers ages 50-54.

The regatta, a sanctioned race of the United States Rowing Association, was held Friday through Sunday.

Allan is a founding member of the Pamlico Rowing Club, based in Washington, N.C.

Henderson Returns To Duke

DURHAM (AP) — Duke basketball player Phil Henderson has apparently changed his mind about leaving the school, a school official said.

Henderson has indicated he will enroll at Duke rather than transfer to another university, but his status on the basketball team has not been determined.

Henderson, a rising junior, announced June 11 that he was leaving the school for personal reasons. But he returned to the Duke campus last week to meet with Athletic Director Tom Butters and Chris Kennedy, director of academic support.

Kennedy said Henderson indicated Friday afternoon he would re-enroll at Duke this fall.

"My feeling is that he realized what he did was a mistake and that he felt the best thing for Phil Henderson was to graduate from Duke," Kennedy told The Charlotte Observer. "What he realized after he left was what he had and what he gave up."

Butters said Henderson's future on the basketball team is "an entirely independent issue," which he said would be determined by Coach Mike Krzyzewski and Henderson.

Krzyzewski said he will seek input from the basketball team if Henderson wants to play next season. Krzyzewski said the decision would not be made until after classes begin Aug. 28.

"It's a two-tiered thing, and the first is school," Krzyzewski said. "The basketball decision will come at a later date, if at all."

Henderson was not available for comment.

Butters said Henderson would be placed on scholarship, an option that had been available to him all along.

"When he left in June, I told him — and then followed up with a letter — that my interest in him was as a student-athlete," Butters said. "It's very important to him and his family that he complete what he started. This isn't the first time this has ever been done. We should feel a sense of responsibility to each of our student athletes."

Henderson started all 36 games last season, and averaged 12.7 points per game.

Kempton Leaves Hornets For Spain

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Reserve center Tim Kempton is leaving the Charlotte Hornets to play for a Spanish professional team.

Kempton will break a contract binding him to Charlotte for the 1989-90 season in order to play for a team in Barcelona. His present contract would have guaranteed his salary for only part of the coming season.

"Sometimes this is a business," Kempton said. "They signed (center) Dave Hoppen to a three-year deal and (forward) Brian Rowsom to a two-year deal. They indicated I probably wouldn't make the team."

Hornets General Manager Carl Scheer said Saturday that he was unaware of Kempton's plans. He said he was recently approached by Kempton's agent, Eric Fleischer, concerning Kempton's chances of making the Hornets this fall.

Scheer said he told Fleischer that Kempton's chances were "marginal" following Kempton's play in the Los Angeles summer league, where he averaged 9.5 points and 5.6 rebounds.

Considering that assessment, Scheer said, he wasn't surprised that Fleischer would pursue a deal for Kempton with a European team.

Scheer said that if Kempton leaves for Spain against the Hornets' wishes, Kempton will be placed on a suspended list that would allow the Hornets to retain his NBA rights. He said he doubted the Hornets would sue to prevent Kempton from leaving.

Kempton averaged 6.1 points, 3.8 rebounds and 17 minutes for the Charlotte last season. He played in 79 games but started none.

Fitch Said New Nets' Cage Coach

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Bill Fitch appears to be the latest in a line of coaches given the job of turning around the New Jersey Nets.

The Nets scheduled a news conference today at which Fitch apparently would be named the team's coach, a club executive said Sunday.

Fitch, 55, has been a leading contender since Willis Reed stepped down nearly two weeks ago to take a job as vice president with the team.

"We really didn't have a clear idea at first," Nets president Bernie Mann said. "Our first choice obviously is Bill Fitch."

Mann was in Montreal over the weekend and said he has not been told who the final choice will be.

"I imagine it will be Bill Fitch," Mann said. "When I left, Bill Fitch was the front runner."

The job of selecting a replacement for Reed was being handled by general manager Harry Weltman. Weltman has said the Nets want a coach with previous NBA experience and one who has a proven record in developing young teams.

Fitch, with a 762-714 record in 18 NBA seasons, spent some of his best years helping a young Houston team mature. He was fired by the Rockets after the 1988 season, his fifth with the club.

Rusty Wallace

Wallace Captures Second Straight In Track Record

Winston Cup Driving Championship Is His Goal

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BROOKLYN, Mich. — By his own admission, Rusty Wallace is an impatient man.

Wallace thought he should have won the Winston Cup driving championship a year ago and it's been eating at him ever since.

"I just have this fire that will not quit burning," he said. "I will not be denied again."

Last year, Wallace mounted one of the strongest stretch runs in NASCAR history but finished second, 24 points short of Bill Elliott.

In the last 12 races of 1988, a string which began with a second on the Watkins Glen road course, Wallace won four times and posted 10 top-five finishes.

Last week, Wallace won at Watkins Glen and on Sunday he set a track record in winning the Champion 400 at Michigan International Speedway.

Wallace, winning his fifth race of the season, averaged 157.704 mph in pulling within 79 points of points leader Dale Earnhardt, who finished 17th.

"I don't think I'm lucking into anything," Wallace said. "I think I've earned it."

Wallace's speed bettered the previous record of 156.863 mph by Davey Allison in last year's race.

"I don't like to win a race sneaking up on a guy," Wallace said. "I like to out-drive him. I like to blow the doors off them."

The victory, before an estimated 80,000 fans, was worth $67,900 but still had a bittersweet tinge because Wallace is attempting to sever his relationship with car owner Raymond Beadle.

The owner claims Wallace has an option year remaining on his contract; Wallace claims the contract was breached because Beadle was late with a payment. The issue will be settled in the North Carolina courts.

"I've made a commitment to something I've wanted to do for a long, long time and the timing's right for me to do it," Wallace said. "I'm going to give this team 110 percent in the meantime and do all I can to help it win a championship and as many races as possible."

exposure I get and the longer I play the more people realize who I am. I'm glad I'm getting a lot of exposure — when I come back here the job market should be great."

Frizzell figured prominently in Sunday's game with a fumble recovery to stifle one New York drive and aiding what proved to be the winning march with a pair of costly penalties — a defensive holding and a personal foul.

Frizzell said the personal foul was in retaliation to a shot to the head he received from tight end K.D. Dunn.

"I was just trying to defend myself," Frizzell said.

On the next play, Frizzell had apparently stripped the ball from receiver Darryl Pearson but Pearson was ruled down before losing control of the ball. Three plays later, Pat Leahy booted a 25-yard field goal to put the Jets ahead 12-10.

The loss left the Eagles 2-1 but Frizzell said wins and losses weren't the primary concern in preseason.

"You don't want to go through preseason undefeated then lose every game during the (regular) season," Frizzell said. "It was a chance for us to measure the overall team and see how far we've got to go before that first game."

But would he have driven to Raleigh for a different NFL matchup?

"I would have considered it," he said. "I don't know how readily I would have."

Wolfe did say he would trek to Charlotte if North Carolina is granted a franchise, however.

"If North Carolina got a team I would probably consider changing my allegiance," Wolfe said.

Hornet Success Spurs Richardson

The drive to bring professional football to the Carolinas grew from the excitement generated by the Charlotte Hornets of the NBA. And with the sports-frenzied market of the Carolinas, Richardson feels an NFL franchise is only a matter of time.

"It's one of the biggest selling points we have, no doubt about it," Richardson said of the Hornets' success. "The fact that the Hornets are doing so well obviously is a credit to the fact that the NBA is doing well."

Richardson said after Charlotte landed an NBA franchise he began entertaining the thought of forming a group to bring the NFL to the Carolinas. He announced his intentions on Dec. 16, 1987, some nine months after the initial groundwork began.

"When Charlotte was awarded the NBA franchise I was probably the most stunned guy in the world," Richardson said. "Within a week or two after that we started thinking about the possibility of the NFL for the Carolinas."

Expansion will not be before 1991 and several cities, including Memphis, St. Louis and Baltimore, are attempting to lure franchises.

Richardson said the Carolinas have an edge due to a booming market, plans for a state-of-the-art stadium and the reception of pro football Sunday night in Raleigh.

The site for a stadium has been narrowed down to Gaston County, northern Charlotte, Cabarrus County and one site in South Carolina.

A franchise fee would range between $50-100 million.

"We've got a larger market than Memphis, twice as large," Richardson said. "We obviously have strong corporate support here. We're going to build a single-purpose stadium — football only. Memphis has a stadium but it's not a state-of-the-art stadium."

"The Carolinas support sports. NASCAR does well here, ACC basketball does well here, Clemson, South Carolina football is incredible — it's just a sports market."

"There's no other way to do it. It would be a great way to sever the relationship."

Wallace's Pontiac Grand Prix took the lead with 17 laps to go, following his final pit stop, and beat Morgan Shepherd's Pontiac by 15.6 seconds.

Shepherd cruised past Harry Gant down the final stretch as Gant's Oldsmobile Cutlass ran out of gas and finished third.

"We took a car that was expected to finish 10th and placed it third, so it wasn't a total loss," Gant said. "We had been running great mileage all day long and I thought we could finish the race without making another stop."

Rookie Hut Stricklin was fourth in a Pontiac and Geoff Bodine, who started on the pole after setting a track qualifying record of 175.962 mph, finished fifth in a Chevrolet Lumina.

Because Bodine didn't win, there was no winner of the bonus set up to reward the pole-sitter who goes on to win the race. This week, a $136,800 bonus will be available at Bristol, Tenn. Wallace is the only driver to have claimed the bonus this year, picking up $15,200 at North Carolina Motor Speedway in Rockingham last March.

Wallace's victory made him the winningest driver on the Winston Cup circuit this season. The son of St. Louis short-track driver Russ Wallace now has won 15 Winston Cup races since taking 1984 rookie of the year honors.

Oakland Rolling Behind Pitching

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tony La Russa doesn't want to decide who his best pitcher is, and why should he?

"My biggest pet peeve right now would be for someone to ask me about who should win the Cy Young between Mike Moore and Dave Stewart," the Oakland manager said. "Any talk of that nature would be counterproductive. I know all they're thinking about is the team generating some wins."

Moore tied Stewart for the American League lead in victories at 16 in leading the Athletics past the Minnesota Twins 5-0 on Sunday. Moore allowed four hits in eight innings in winning for the eighth time in nine decisions.

"Cy Young? I'm not even thinking about it," Moore said.

But Stewart, who did not win the Cy Young in 1987 and 1988 despite 20-win seasons, is thinking about it. In fact, he's thinking about Moore winning it.

Angels 1, Indians 0

Kirk McCaskill, 13-7, pitched a four-hitter and struck out seven for his league-leading fourth shutout and Wally Joyner hit a sacrifice fly in the seventh inning.

Bud Black, 9-10, pitched a three-hitter for the visiting Indians but was hurt by third baseman Brook Jacoby's error in the seventh.

Kent Anderson's leadoff grounder went through Jacoby's legs and Anderson wound up on second. Johnny Ray sacrificed and Anderson beat Joe Carter's throw home after Joyner's fly to center.

Royals 5, Mariners 4

Bo Jackson homered and hit a two-run triple in the Kingdome as Kansas City won its sixth straight. Seattle has lost five straight for the first time since July 23-27, 1988.

Steve Crawford, 2-0, allowed one hit over five shutout innings and Jeff Montgomery got the last four outs for his 11th save.

Orioles 7, Blue Jays 2

Pete Harnisch, 3-6, won for the third time in nine starts since July 17 as Baltimore stayed in first place in the East. The Orioles, who lead the division by a half-game over Milwaukee, were in danger of falling out of first for the first time since May 26.

Harnisch, 3-6, gave up two runs and seven hits in 6 1-3 innings. Mark Thurmond finished with one-hit relief for his fourth save.

Dave Stieb, 12-8, dropped to 0-5 in 13 career starts at Baltimore. Mike Devereaux hit a two-run homer for the Orioles.

Brewers 6, Red Sox 3

Charlie O'Brien's three-run homer capped a four-run sixth-inning rally off Mike Smithson, 6-12, at County Stadium as Milwaukee won for the ninth time in 10 games.

Jaime Navarro, 4-5, gave up two hits in 1 1-3 innings and Tony Fossas finished with 2 2-3 innings of perfect relief for his first major-league save.

Milwaukee moves into Baltimore tonight for a three-game set against the first-place Orioles.

Tigers 7, Yankees 6

Fred Lynn homered off Eric Plunk, 4-3, to snap a seventh-inning tie as New York dropped to 0-3 since Bucky Dent replaced Dallas Green as manager.

The Yankees finished a 3-7 road trip while the Tigers won three straight for the first time since May 29-31.

Rangers 7, White Sox 1

Charlie Hough, who lost to Seattle last Tuesday despite throwing a one-hitter, pitched a five-hitter at Comiskey Park. Hough, 8-12, walked four and struck out five in his fourth complete game.

Ruben Sierra hit a two-run homer, his 21st, and Steve Buechele a solo homer, his 13th.

Steve Rosenberg, 3-9, lost his fourth straight decision since July 17, giving up five hits and five runs in 4 1-3 innings.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Dodgers 5, Mets 4

Willie Randolph made it a good day for the National League West. Ernest Riles and Kevin Bass made it grand.

Randolph started off the afternoon with a three-run homer with two outs in the top of the ninth inning Sunday, sending the Los Angeles Dodgers over the New York Mets 5-4.

A few minutes later, Riles hit a grand slam with two outs in the top of the ninth, rallying the division-leading Giants over Philadelphia 5-2.

And about an hour later, Bass hit his second home run of the game, a grand slam with two outs in the bottom of the ninth, as Houston beat Chicago 8-4.

"I don't have a chance for any chart-busting numbers, but I can be a lift for this team during the pennant race," said Bass, who missed most of the season with injuries and has only three homers.

The slams by Bass and Riles kept San Francisco two games ahead of Houston. The Astros won their fourth straight and handed Chicago its first three-game sweep since June 26-28 against Pittsburgh.

The Cubs, with rookie Jerome Walton hitting in his 30th straight game, stayed 2½ games in front of New York in the NL East.

Houston, trying to get Mike Scott his major league-leading 18th victory, took a 4-3 lead into the ninth at the Astrodome. With two outs, Ryne Sandberg hit his second home run of the game, off Danny Darwin, and it was tied.

Rafael Ramirez, who drew a rare walk Friday night that forced home the winning run in the ninth inning, this time got a leadoff walk in the ninth from Les Lancaster, 3-1. Mitch Williams relieved and walked pinch-hitter Craig Reynolds and hit Gerald Young with a pitch, loading the bases with no outs.

Bill Doran struck out on a 3-2 pitch but Bass followed with his third career slam.

Bass, who was on the disabled list from May 28 to Aug. 11 with a leg fracture, homered left-handed in the third inning and right-handed in the ninth. It was the third time Bass homered from the both sides in a game, tying Chili Davis' league record.

"It was fun, but the way I have been swinging right-handed, I didn't expect it," Bass said.

Darwin, 11-3, tied a team record for relief wins in a season. Sandberg has hit 24 home runs this year, including 11 in the last 22 games.

Giants 5, Phillies 2

Riles, who entered the game in the eighth as a pinch hitter, hit his first career grand slam and sixth homer of the season off Roger McDowell, 3-6. The Giants loaded the bases on a walk, a hit batter and an obstruction call.

Jeff Brantley, 7-1, got the victory. The Phillies took a 2-1 lead in the seventh on consecutive RBI doubles by Ricky Jordan and Charlie Hayes.

Dodgers 5, Mets 4

Randolph's first homer since last Aug. 29 rallied Los Angeles over New York, only the third time in 60 games the Dodgers have won when trailing after eight inning.

The Mets lost for the third time in 13 games.

Behind 3-1, pinch-hitter Lenny Harris singled with two outs and Alfredo Griffin followed with a bunt single. Randolph, who made the last out as the Dodgers lost the first two games of the series, homered off Don Aase, 1-4, and Jeff Hamilton added an RBI single for a 5-3 lead.

Mackey Sasser singled home a run in the Mets' ninth before Jay Howell got his team-record 25th save. Alejandro Pena, 3-2, was the winner.

Howard Johnson hit his 30th home run for the Mets. He joined Willie Mays and Bobby Bonds as the only major leaguers to hit 30 homers and steal 30 bases in the same season more than once.

Padres 5, Expos 2

Ed Whitson got his career-high 15th victory and Mark Davis tied for the major league lead with his 31st save as San Diego sent Montreal to its 17th loss in 22 games.

Whitson, 15-9, gave up four hits in 6 2-3 innings. Davis finished, matching Chicago's Mitch Williams for the save lead. Bryn Smith, 9-8, lost his fifth consecutive decision.

Jack Clark hit a three-run homer, his 17th, to put the visiting Padres ahead 5-1 in the eighth.

Cardinals 8, Reds 1

Todd Zeile and Tom Brunansky each homered during a six-run fourth inning that led St. Louis over Cincinnati.

Zeile, promoted to the majors on Friday, led off the fourth with his first home run. He later singled and went 4-for-9 in the weekend series at Riverfront Stadium.

Brunansky hit a two-run homer, his 17th. Terry Pendleton had a two-run single and Pedro Guerrero hit an RBI single in the fourth.

Jose DeLeon, 13-11, allowed six hits and no walks in eight innings. Tim Leary, 8-11, gave up nine hits in 3 2-3 innings.

Pirates 7, Braves 6

Billy Hatcher homered, Jay Bell hit a two-run triple and Pittsburgh scored three times on three Atlanta errors.

The Pirates went ahead 3-1 in the fourth inning on throwing errors by shortstop Andres Thomas, first baseman Darrell Evans and catcher John Russell.

Hatcher, acquired Friday from Houston for Glenn Wilson, hit a solo homer in the seventh for a 7-4 lead. Thomas hit a two-run homer in the bottom of the ninth to make it close.

Rick Reed, 1-3, got the victory and Bill Landrum got his 18th save. Pete Smith, 3-13, was the loser.

Norman's Style Wins A Tourney

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CASTLE ROCK, Colo. — Greg Norman has only one gear, an aggressive, shoot-for-the-pins style of golf that sometimes causes him heartbreak.

On Sunday, Norman found a tournament perfectly suited to his daring temperament, and he finally won the event everyone said he should.

Norman fired off seven birdies en route to a score of 13 points Sunday and captured the $180,000 top prize in The International.

In a tournament in which bold play is rewarded with two points for each birdie and five points for each eagle under a modified Stableford scoring format, Norman did his thing early with birdies on five holes on the front side.

That put him at plus-10. He got another birdie at No. 12 and, after losing a point with a bogey at 15, he birdied the par-5 17th hole to break a tie with Clarence Rose.

"I've had darts thrown at me for playing aggressively, but you can't change your style," Norman said. "Greg Norman is going to play that way for the rest of his life."

Norman, winning on the PGA Tour for only the second time in the past three years, knocked in birdie putts of 18 and nine feet on the first and second holes.

He added 10-foot birdie putts at Nos. 5 and 6, then got another by reaching the 535-yard, par-5 eighth hole in two and two-putting from 40 feet.

At that point, he had a six-point lead on the field and appeared uncatchable.

He cooled off somewhat on the back nine. He birdied the 12th hole, hitting an 8-iron just 18 inches from the cup, but he bogeyed No. 15 after missing the green and chipping poorly.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AKQ1075 ♥543 ♦A ♣AK6
 The bidding has proceeded:
 West North East South
 1 ♥ Pass Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—We would not fault you greatly if you elected to bid four spades. However, if partner has as little as three spades, a singleton heart and the queen of clubs you are virtually a laydown for a small slam. We would opt for a double followed by a jump to four spades to show our powerhouse and slam interest.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠763 ♥AKQ105 ♦AQ ♣A87
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♥ Pass 2 ♣ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—You have an awkward hand. A jump to three hearts overstates the quality of your suit, and four clubs on three-card support is unthinkable. Since North's two-over-one response promises a rebid, dampen your ardor for a moment and settle for a raise to three clubs. You can make a move toward slam later.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠63 ♥AQ1063 ♦72 ♣AQ98
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♥ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
 2 ♣ Pass 2 ♦ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Partner's bid is forcing, so don't even consider passing. The only two bids that come into consideration are two no trump and two hearts. Since a lead through your suits won't prove fatal, we prefer two hearts, leaving partner the option of bidding no trump if that's where the hand belongs.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠765 ♥Q5 ♦J762 ♣8763
 The bidding has proceeded:
 West North East South
 1 ♦ Dbl Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—The two things you can't do is pass—you need to add the K-Q to your diamond holding for that—or bid one no trump, which promises some 7-10 points. We know some players who would bid one spade, but partner has asked for our longest suit and we would duly respond with two clubs.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AK6 ♥K93 ♦AQ854 ♣83
 What is your opening bid?
 A.—There are those who believe you may not open one no trump with a low doubleton. However, that's contrary to modern practice. If you don't open one no trump, you present yourself with an insolvable rebid problem no matter what partner responds.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠AK83 ♥QJ8 ♦KJ4 ♣863
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♣ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
 1 NT Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Don't shilly-shally. Partner has a minimum, balanced opening bid and so do you. If you even considered anything other than three no trump, you see something in this hand that has escaped us.

Halicki checks a camera angle Sunday prior to fatal accident on movie set in Buffalo

Accident On Movie Set Kills Film Producer Toby Halicki

By John F. Bonfatti
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Film producer Toby Halicki was killed while shooting a movie Sunday night when a water tower he was planning to topple fell prematurely, police said.

Halicki, 48, died when a cable that was attached to the tower snapped and severed a telephone pole, which fell on Halicki, according to reports from the scene.

A spokeswoman at Kenmore Mercy Hospital, where Halicki was taken following the accident, said the producer was dead on arrival at the hospital at 6:35 p.m.

Halicki, a resident of Gardena, Calif., was wrapping up local shooting on "Gone in 60 Seconds II," a sequel to his 1974 movie, which became a cult hit among fans of car-crash movies.

The day's shooting had called for the 100-foot-tall water tower in an abandoned industrial park on the border between Buffalo and Tonawanda to be brought down.

In the scene, a tractor-trailer was to ram through a series of parked cars before colliding into the tower standard, which had been cut with a torch in two places earlier in the day to aid in the tower's collapse.

The tower was to be pulled down by trucks pulling cables, while another cable attached to the axle of the tractor-trailer pulled the tower through the base of the support.

But the piece of support between the two cuts, which measured about 10 feet, came free during one of the earlier shots, leaving the tower standing on three legs.

Workers had just made cuts through another of the legs, according to witnesses, when the tower began to creak. Workers scrambled out of the way, but Halicki apparently didn't make it, witnesses said.

Jennings Regrets Education Woes

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — ABC News' Peter Jennings, who earlier this year earned best television anchor accolades, dropped out of high school in the 10th grade and says that until recently he would avoid talking about his lack of a formal education.

In the September issue of Esquire magazine, Jennings says he read nothing but comic books as a child and that he was an impetuous, cocky boy used to getting his own way.

He said he regrets not having studied literature or economics. He said his spelling is poor and he's unfamiliar with grammar rules.

He says when pressed on the subject of his education, he would say he attended Carleton University in Ottawa. The truth is he attended Carleton's night school for all of a week.

When he sees his remarks quoted in newspapers and magazines, he said he tells himself, "There goes a product of no education."

Jennings was literally born into broadcasting. His father was the first radio news broadcaster in Canada and later became general supervisor of programming for the Canadian Broadcasting Company.

Vereen Goes Back To Streets Of Childhood To Fight Drugs

By Larry Neumeister
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Ben Vereen hit bottom in December 1987, when a car crash killed his 16-year-old daughter, Naja. He mixed drugs and alcohol, not caring "if I woke up or not." Another daughter brought him back from the edge.

"Naja wouldn't want you to do this to yourself," 18-year-old Malaika told him.

"That got through like a blade — zap!" recalled Vereen, 42. "I realized I was still here and I had children and they needed me and how selfish and arrogant of me to try to end my life. So I chose life."

But choosing life — quitting drugs — was just the beginning of an odyssey that took the entertainer back to his Brooklyn neighborhood and a chance encounter with his homeless, addicted sister, Lucinda Vereen Batts.

Lucinda was on the doorstep, pregnant and addicted to crack, when Vereen returned a year ago to the house his mother left him when she died in 1984.

"I thought at first she was angry at me for the years that we'd been apart and I looked closer and realized that she was shaking," he said. "I said, 'Come honey, it's time to come home.'

"It was like a message, like the Lord was just bringing all of us together. Then I said, 'That's it. We're going to duke now.' I rolled up my sleeves and got in the fight."

Now Lucinda, too, is recovering, and Vereen has pledged help to win back his childhood streets in Bedford-Stuyvesant from drug dealers who had moved into the house that went unattended after his mother died.

The plan drew opposition from neighbors who didn't want recovering addicts on their street, but Vereen wasn't deterred. He is determined to tear down the house and rebuild it for a drug program, although he is uncertain of specifics like how many people it could help or what services would be provided.

On a recent visit, he noted that Herkimer Street had changed much in a few decades. Drug dealers had stripped the three-story home of windows, aluminum siding, even its street numbers. Pigeons flew in and out.

"I am stunned," said Vereen, who had lived there from ages 11 to 18 with his two sisters, long before dreams of stardom became reality — a Tony award for his role in "Pippin," acclaim for the TV miniseries "Roots," and standing-room-only performances in Las Vegas.

He stood silently and stared for a long moment. "This is the before. You can get the after pictures in a year or two," he said finally.

"This hasn't discouraged me at all. As a matter of fact, it has encouraged me. When you see that people have to steal the aluminum off of a building to get drugs, you've got to really get angry and get involved."

Within 100 feet was an open lot with abandoned trucks, cars and garbage. Just as someone might point out daffodils or weeds in a lawn, Lucinda described the lot where she had spent the most tragic moments of her last four years.

"That's part of the lot where we'd stay when I was getting high. That's where I found my friend dead. He got crushed stealing parts from under a car. I happened to go through there and found his body up under the car, under the rim where the tires had set on his chest."

"All of us crack users used to come here in this lot. We'd sleep in these," she said, pointing to abandoned vehicles. "They had a lot of homeless out here in the lot. Some still stay out here, still sleep out here in the trucks."

Vereen said he feels blessed that work "kept me camouflaged" and off the streets during his addiction. He began experimenting in the 1960s, when "it was cool to do drugs or smoke marijuana, take acid or things like that."

"If you're going to run with the crowd then you're going to do what the crowd does," he said. "Then all of a sudden it becomes more than cool. It becomes dangerous. It got dangerous for me in June of '87. After I lost my daughter in December I lost it completely and I got really bad."

"I was so depressed I kept crying and I got real funky. I remember doing a film in Italy and I'd get up and put on my clothes and they would stink. I was sitting on the set and smelling this odor and I'd go, 'Man, that's not like me.' And I looked in the mirror and I couldn't recognize myself."

He often thought about killing himself and began mixing drugs and alcohol. "Why I didn't oust out of here the Lord only knows."

Now, Vereen and his sister look ahead.

Lucinda stays at the Vereen home in Englewood, N.J., along with Vereen's wife, Nancy, and their two daughters, Kabara, 14, and Karon, 13. Their other children are Malaika and Benji, 23.

Vereen, now a national spokesman for the campaign for "A Drug Free America," hopes to donate his childhood home to that cause. "You've got to dream big. I will get it done, some way, somehow."

"I've started this fight and I'm not going to walk away from it."

Manhattan developers Battle For Building Sites

By Barbara Rosen
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — In Manhattan, where even the air is for sale, developers are wheeling and dealing to keep building higher and denser on an island that isn't getting any bigger.

Donald Trump wants to use the rights he owns to land under the Hudson River to create the world's tallest building. Across town, the owner of the air space above Grand Central Terminal has been battling for more than 11 years to convert it to glass, steel, and cash on the ground.

"It's a logical extension of the cleverness of New York City developers' lawyers," says Steve Robinson, co-chairman of Westpride, a community organization fighting excessive development. "They push the limits, they invent new mechanisms, they try anything that may have a shot at working, because there are so many dollars at stake."

Dozens of office and apartment buildings are going up in New York's midtown area alone, especially around Times Square.

Developers long have managed to break through New York's zoning restrictions by acquiring extra development rights or offering things like public plazas and low-cost housing in exchange for the waiving of certain regulations. Such actions raise cries of foul from often powerless citizens.

"On street corners all over Manhattan ... you have disproportionately large buildings going up," said Sandor E. Katz of the Women's City Club of New York, a civic organization. "There needs to be some absolute limit on the amount of additional floor area that can be imposed on any one lot."

Civic groups are focusing on Trump City, the billionaire developer's massive West Side project. Katz calls it "the most dramatic single example of the kind of monstrous result you can get by the accumulation of development rights."

Westpride targeted it from early on.

"If we are able to have an impact on what Trump proposes, then other developers in the city would begin to get the signal," says Robinson.

On 76 acres of old railroad yards along the Hudson River between 59th and 72nd streets, the largest undeveloped land parcel in the city, Trump City would include a 150-story structure and 13 other buildings ranging from 13 to 60 floors. Besides offices, hotel space and apartments, there would be an 800,000-square-foot shopping mall.

Westpride says the 7,600 housing units would heavily overburden the neighborhood's schools and sewers, and that the tower, the world's tallest, would cast a shadow across the Hudson River and Central Park. Trump's people say there are plenty of sewers and schools, and that the shadow would not be that obtrusive in a city full of skyscrapers.

Trump wants to transfer to his shoreline property the development rights he owns to 19 acres under the Hudson River, a holdover from the days when waterfront industry extended onto the piers.

William Valletta, counsel to the Department of City Planning, said that the city's zoning law allows a lot's overall size — including underwater rights — to be the basis for determining the size limits of a building. Zoning reformers want to get rid of that provision.

Trump hopes to start building in mid-1990.

On the East Side, developers are hoping to convert the space above the Grand Central commuter train terminal, or the tunnels under its surrounding streets, into the city's fourth-largest skyscraper.

In 1978, the Supreme Court backed the city in blocking Grand Central's owner, the Penn Central Corp., from building a 53-story office tower atop the landmarked train station.

First Black Academy Graduate Is Honored

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HIGHLAND BEACH, Md. — Forty years ago, Wesley Brown became the first black man to throw his hat into the air at a U.S. Naval Academy graduation.

His breakthrough didn't go unnoticed. Some people sent him hate mail. But he also received 15 marriage proposals.

On Saturday, nearly 200 friends and family members honored Brown at Highland Beach, not far from where he won a personal and historic battle over racism. Letters of commendation, including one from an old classmate and former President, Jimmy Carter, were read aloud.

"The academy was 100 years old," Brown, now 62, said. "I thought it was time."

When Brown arrived at the academy in Annapolis in 1945, he was the sixth black to enroll. None of the others had made it past the first year, though.

The first year was "tough," he said. In his first semester, he received 140 demerits, 10 fewer than the limit before dismissal.

"I didn't know if I got demerits because I was black or because I was a plebe," said Brown, now a retired lieutenant commander with 20 years of naval service behind him. "There are some times I got demerits I thought I didn't deserve."

He said he was not always treated unfairly. Someone once took apart his bedding to try to get him in trouble, but the duty officer refused to punish him for it.

Still, Brown roomed alone all four years. When he sat down next to classmates, they often stood up and left. Some refused to speak to him.

"I didn't mind it so much," Brown said. "I had a goal. I liked the Navy. I liked the Naval Academy."

"I thought all the teachers and professors I had were certainly very fair," he said, "and for the most part I got along with my classmates."

Ensign Dondi Edwards, 22, one of about 20 blacks who graduated this year, said Brown was "a modern-day hero. Without him there would have been no beginning for blacks at the Naval Academy."

"Where he stood 40 years ago, now there are 237 (black) midshipmen," Edwards said. There are about 4,500 students overall at the academy.

Brown's wife, Crystal, who blazed a trail of her own as one of only two black undergraduates at the University of Vermont, said she never doubted her husband would succeed.

"These are things you did, you were expected at that time to achieve," she said. "We are all trailblazers. Today we are called minorities. I never thought I was a minority. I thought I was me. That's how he is."

A crew works Sunday to repair steam pipe in Manhattan

Toll Reaches Three In Steam Explosion

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Investigators seeking the cause of a steam explosion that killed three people began Sunday to reassemble the pipe that erupted under a Manhattan street in a 15-story geyser of 400-degree gas and mud.

A woman who was walking her dog was killed in the blast Saturday night in the upper-class neighborhood, as was a Consolidated Edison Co. worker on the scene. A second Con Ed worker burned in the explosion at 20th Street and Third Avenue died overnight, authorities said.

At least 18 others were injured and hundreds of people were evacuated from apartments after the 6:30 p.m. explosion.

"I actually saw the street rise," said Tom Ritchford, 27, who was with Denise Ozker, 29, in a sidewalk cafe when the street erupted a few feet away. "When it came up, I covered my face and stepped under the table and pulled Denise under the table with me."

"I thought, 'This is it — we're going to die,'" said Ritchford, who then fled with Ozker when the water raining on them became warmer and warmer.

A Con Ed spokesman, Marty Gitten, said four workers were reopening a valve on the 24-inch main when it exploded just three feet away. The steam is produced as a byproduct of power generation and sold to buildings as a source of heat. In some older buildings, it is even used to power elevators.

Con Ed had turned off the steam main on Saturday morning as the city repaired a water main leak on the same block.

"It will take some time to figure out the cause of the explosion," Gitten said. "We have to literally put the pieces of damaged pipe back together and re-create the scene."

One possible cause, Gitten said, was stress caused by cold water hitting the outside of the hot pipe. Pressure in the main was 150 pounds per square inch, and the steam was 400 degrees Fahrenheit, Gitten said.

The pedestrian, Helen Sauer, and Joseph Malfatti, a Con Ed worker, were pronounced dead at Bellevue Hospital on Saturday, said hospital spokesman Robert Frazier.

Con Ed worker Steven Walsh died Sunday morning in the burn center of New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center, said Mary Cialone, a hospital administrator. Two other workers remained hospitalized there, one in critical condition, she said.

Gov. Martin, left, moves along with auction line at Greenville warehouse Monday

Martin Picks Up Auctioneer's Chant, Praises '89 Leaf Sales

By J. Ward Best
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Gov. Jim Martin rolled up his sleeves and got his hands on some of Pitt County's finest tobacco Monday afternoon.

With the temperature inside Cannon's Warehouse on Dickinson Avenue hovering near 100 degrees, Martin sold a few piles of tobacco and praised the early sales as a good sign for the Eastern Belt.

"It's been a good hot day," Martin said, "not only for the weather, but for the market."

Martin said he had seen active bidding across the region during the third week of Eastern Belt sales. Along with his stop in Greenville, Martin also visited tobacco warehouses in Smithfield, Wilson, Goldsboro, Kinston and Rocky Mount on Monday.

W.H. Mills, a manager at Cannon's, said Monday's leaf average was holding at $1.60 per pound at the warehouse, and growers and sellers were hoping for a 5-cent increase in coming weeks.

The decrease in market assessments over the past few years from 25 cents to nearly 1 cent this year helped buoy tobacco prices and bolster North Carolina growers, Martin said.

He also said the state is working to build the reputation of North Carolina tobacco to sustain sales on national and international markets. By encouraging farmers to pick their crops at the peak of ripeness and avoiding using unauthorized chemicals on the plants, Martin said the state could maintain a reputation for the best quality leaf and keep up prices.

Rep. Ed Warren, D-Pitt, also put in an appearance Monday at Cannon's.

Warren, who has a personal stake in the local tobacco market with nearly 50 acres leased for growing, said the active bidding so far was good for area farmers and all of the Council Delays Position On River

By J. Ward Best
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

After more than a month of debate, the Greenville City Council has again refused to offer an official city position on the state's proposed protection plan for the Tar River.

The council Monday instead recommended delaying any decision until hearing from the state and Greenville Utilities Commission after a final decision on the proposed nutrient sensitive waters classification due out sometime next month.

The state Division of Environmental Management has proposed classifying the Tar-Pamlico River basin "nutrient sensitive waters" and limiting to present levels the amount of nitrogen and phosphorous pollution going into the waters. The N.C. Environmental Management Commission is scheduled to decide the fate of the proposal during its Sept. 14 meeting.

The nutrient sensitive classification was proposed to protect the river and the Pamlico Sound from pollutants which are suspected of contributing to the increasing number of fish kills and outbreaks of fish and crab diseases in the past few years.

At a June 15 public hearing on the proposal, the director of the Greenville Utilities Commission, Malcolm Green, said he supported the underlying purpose of the classification — to protect the river. But he called for less stringent restrictions

Poulton Gives Up Post

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Bruce Poulton has resigned as chancellor of North Carolina State University amid allegations that he had allowed abuses in the basketball program that subverted the school's academic standards.

Poulton's resignation will take effect at the end of September. He has asked for a leave of absence after that time to prepare himself to return to teaching and research.

Poulton said today that head basketball coach Jim Valvano probably will step down as athletic director but will remain in the coaching job. The chancellor said Valvano had offered his resignation as athletic director two months ago but it had been decided it would be best for him to remain until an NCAA investigation had run its course.

Disclosures about the basketball program began in January, after The News and Observer of Raleigh reported that promotional materials for the book "Personal Fouls" alleged misconduct within the basketball program. The accusations contained on a proof of the book's dust cover were dismissed by Poulton as fiction, and state Attorney General Lacy Thornburg threatened to sue its author and publisher.

The newspaper then began a series of detailed reports on irregularities in the basketball program. Among the disclosures were that players said they had sold complimentary tickets to games and that special contracts from the 1986-87 school year showed Poulton had readmitted basketball players who had been suspended for academic reasons.

Voting Devices Rejected

By Stuart Savage
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners, by a 6-3 vote Monday, rejected a proposal to purchase new voting machines before this year's municipal elections.

Board members, however, approved the purchase of 15.5 acres of land for a new school and began a series of official actions leading to a Dec. 12 vote on whether to issue $25.7 million in bonds for public school capital projects and another $10 million in bonds to build new facilities at Pitt Community College.

The board has, for some time, been considering the question of whether to buy new voting machines for the county, at an estimated cost of more than $620,000.

The new machines would replace electronic voting machines that were — when purchased several years ago — considered state-of-the-art. But the Pitt Board of Elections has since recommended that the old machines be replaced.

Spurred by an Aug. 4 letter from the elections board, commissioners again brought the voting machine question to the floor Monday. But a motion to purchase new machines before the next elections was defeated, with Commissioners D.D. Garrett, Tom Johnson Sr. and Farney Moore voting in favor of the purchase, and Eugene James, Kenneth Dews, Wilton Duke, Charles Gaskins, Charles McLawhorn and

Tesmond, Black Officers Confer

By J. Ward Best
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A group of black police officers met with Greenville Police Chief Jerry Tesmond for nearly four hours Monday to discuss racial allegations brought against the department.

The Southern Christian Leadership Conference and Officer Lyn White originally brought the charges of discrimination and favoritism toward whites to Tesmond earlier this month. The Greenville City Council ordered the police department to conduct an internal investigation into the charges and asked for a full report of findings.

Monday's meeting was apparently the first interviews conducted with the black officers for the investigation. Tesmond and the officers would not say what specifically was discussed during the meeting.

Officials from the SCLC have called for Tesmond and two other high-level officers — Capt. Randy Nichols and Capt. Nelson Staton — to resign from the force.

King Gardner, SCLC field secretary, said following Monday's

City Gives Workers Higher Per Diem

By J. Ward Best
 THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Greenville City Council offered city employees a higher rate of return for their travel expenses — and at $26 per diem for meals, set possibly the highest level in the state.

And the council, meeting Monday, asked the city attorney and the Planning and Zoning Commission to look at the possibility of forcing a stockyard on N.C. 11 to move out of town.

Council members agreed that the city's present policy for travel-related meals — $17 with receipts to verify purchases — was not adequate. But members split on the amount of increase needed to equitably feed city employees on business trips.

"What we need is a workable policy where we can send our people away fairly," Mayor Ed Carter told the council.

City Manager Greg Knowles presented a recommendation of $26 for meals, which he said was based on the state's allowed expenses. He also recommended an additional $4 for miscellaneous expenses, which he said would cover telephone and parking expenses and "even a pack of Lifesavers as a late night snack."

School Board Adopts Bond Vote Conditions

By Kevin Boughal
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

The Pitt County Board of Education held a special session Monday night to cut through some more red tape on the $25.7 million bond referendum, including the approval of conditions called for by the Pitt Board of Commissioners.

The session was called because the commissioners approved the "scheduled" authorization of the bond referendum but needed the education board to approve the set of conditions. The Board of Education passed the motion quickly.

The county board called for the following eight conditions:

- The referendum must be held prior to March 31, 1989.
- The referendum designate $25.7 million for public school capital outlay.

- The bond will be retired in 15 years.

- All remaining public school building capital funds not presently budgeted and designated by the state for Pitt County be applied to retirement of school debt service.

- The remainder of the balance required for retirement of the school debt service be taken from the designated one-half cent school sales tax.

- The proceeds from the sale of Rose High School be deposited in a capital Reserve Fund for a period of five years. This money is to be shared with all schools for items such as activity buses, vehicles and furniture.

- County commissioners will appropriate no funds to the School Capital Outlay program for five years except for the $25.7 million from the sale of the bonds.

- The Board of Education agrees with all of the conditions in the motion.

In a workshop session after approving the motion, the board discussed bond referendum strategies and endorsed a series of public forums sponsored by the League of Women Voters.

"We hope to provide five forums in different parts of the county," said Carin Lapicki of the LWV. "Most likely the forums will be held during the final six weeks prior to the vote."

The board decided that all of their focus should be during the final six weeks before the vote because a study of successful forums in other counties showed this to be the most effective method.

Board members were also told that since the responsibility for moving a bond issue relies on county officials, school board members are not allowed to "promote" the bond officially but are allowed to "inform" the public.

"There is a fine line between informing (people about the bond) and selling the bond issue," cautioned board member Jack Collins.

Ayden Board Reviews Work On Center

By Kevin Boughal
THE DAILY REFLECTOR

AYDEN — Members of the Ayden Board of Commissioners and the Ayden Recreation Commission took a look Monday night at progress being made in the restoration of the town's recreation center at the old high school on South Lee Street.

The center is in the first stage of a two-phase restoration project, said Andy McLawhorn, technical assistant in charge of the project.

Phase one, McLawhorn said, includes weather proofing the roof and windows, cleaning and painting the halls and auditorium and fixing the bathrooms. Board members also talked about protecting the entrances with steel grating.

In phase two, which is expected to begin as soon as the initial work is completed, classrooms will be painted and cleaned and heaters will be repaired, McLawhorn said.

Members of both boards inspected rooms that had been partially renovated and rooms that were in bad need of repair.

"But right now we are inspecting which rooms can be renovated and which ones cannot," said Donald Russell, Ayden town manager.

Pitt Community College has been a big supporter of the renovation, said Russell. PCC already sponsors some continuing education classes at the center and is expected to hold more classes when the project is completed.

"Pitt Community College has donated several cans of paint and they have offered us technical advice and assistance," said McLawhorn.

McLawhorn said he would like to see much of the work done by volunteers.

"We are hoping that some of the high school shop classes will come in and renovate some of the rooms," he said. "It would teach the students something, give them a sense of pride as well as accomplish something for the community."

Some of the work, however, like painting the outside of the second-story windows, will have to be done by contractors, Russell said.

The project began about a year ago when the city sold bonds worth about $420,000, said Russell. From that money, the town hopes to fund three projects, including a water and sewer treatment project, street renovations and the recreation center work. The town has put aside $65,000 for the center renovations.

Although the town hopes to eventually renovate the entire center, at the moment only parts of the school itself, excluding the auditorium, can be renovated, said Russell.

"We have one of the biggest auditoriums in Pitt County at this facility," said Russell. "It can seat over 700 people. But the auditorium did not fall under the bond because it is technically a civic center. We want to use it for many things but right now we are trying to figure out a way to finance the auditorium renovation."

Eventually board members hope the auditorium can be used for lectures, concerts, conventions, trade fairs and the theater, said Russell. In September it will be used for the Ayden Collard Festival's beauty pageant.

Poulton Resigns Amid Charges Of Abuses In Sports Program

Also, a faculty senate report found that 10 of 12 team members were competing while on academic probation.

Pressure for Poulton's removal had mounted recently, after the publication last month of "Personal Fouls." Soon after that, Hugh Fuller, director of NCSU's academic tutoring program, said that academic rules were abused repeatedly to keep key players on the basketball court. He supported his allegations with seven years of internal memorandums, some of them to Poulton.

Fuller said the chancellor knew of the abuses and either was not able to, or did not want to, stop them. Critics said that had compromised the university's integrity.

Poulton's resignation Monday surprised and relieved some who were concerned that NCSU's reputation had been stained by allegations of abuses in the basketball program.

"I am pleased Chancellor Poulton has submitted his resignation," said William Johnson of Lillington, a member of the UNC Board of Governors. "He has taken action in the best interest of the university. I think he set a good example which I hope Coach Valvano will follow. It would be in the best interest of the university for those who had any responsibility for abuses of academics to sever their ties with the university."

Valvano could not be reached for comment.

Supporters credit Poulton, 62, with putting N.C. State on the road to becoming a world-class research institution in his seven-year term, while critics charge that the 6-foot-7, 200-pound chancellor operated the university through intimidation.

Early in his tenure, Poulton got himself in trouble for some of his off-the-cuff remarks, such as the time he criticized the engineering program at UNC-Charlotte. He later apologized.

Yet, he's been praised for his vision.

"I think Bruce has an agenda for the university that has far surpassed the things that have been written about him in the last few months," said Claude McKinney, a special assistant to the chancellor for the development of the Centennial Campus.

A 40-year project, the development of a 900-acre campus south of the existing one will extend the university's commitment to multidisciplinary research and university-industry cooperation.

Poulton's resignation came before University of North Carolina System President C.D. Spangler released the results of a six-month investigation into Wolfpack athletics to the UNC Board of Governors. That report will be made Friday to 32-member board, which will have to decide whether any action will be taken against Valvano.

Board

Linwood Mercer casting opposing votes.

Many of those voting not to purchase the new machines at the present time cited lack of competition in the voting machine market and lack of available cash as the reasons for their opposition.

According to information given to commissioners by the elections board, the 126 Shouptronic 1242 machine — which the elections board has requested — is presently the only voting machine of its type that is approved by the N.C. Board of Elections. However, commissioners and others have said that other manufacturers may try to have their machines approved for use in the state in the near future so competitive bids might become a reality.

The board did approve the purchase of 15.5 acres of land, adjacent to the former Stokes High School site in Stokes, for $60,000. The land, along with the old high school property, will be used as the site of a new elementary school to serve the Stokes area.

Commissioners also took the first "scheduled" action designed to let county residents vote on whether to issue bonds for public school and community college construction projects by adopting bond orders as recommended by the county's bond attorney. The orders declare that the money is needed and for the people to vote on the issue in a special Dec. 12 referendum.

In other business Monday, commissioners vote to: approve the purchase of two roll-off trucks, to be used to haul solid waste containers to and from the landfill, from Cavalier for a new price of $92,695; designate itself a redevelopment commission to handle matters involving the Hanrahan Community Development Block Grant project, and approve a new fee schedule for the health department's environmental health division — for such things as lot evaluations, septic tank inspections, swimming pool plans — to take effect Oct. 1.

The board also adopted a resolution asking the state to abandon 360 feet of Secondary Road 1420 and about 360 feet of SR 1421. The portions of the two dead-end roads lie totally within property owned by the Pitt-Greenville Airport and airport officials say vehicular traffic on the ends of the roads would interfere with the airport's new instrument landing system.

county. "In general, I think we're doing real well," Warren said.

Warren said the heavy rains this spring would probably result in a smaller crop this year, but the carry-over tobacco from last season is selling well at area warehouses.

Martin, sporting a maroon tie with gold tobacco leaves, also made a pitch for eastern North Carolina's largest agricultural crop on the international market during his stop in Greenville. He said sales of leaf tobacco for export have seen steady prices over the past few years and should help open the door for other North Carolina goods in foreign markets.

The sale of leaf tobacco should lead to more open markets for products such as North Carolina furniture and technology. "We also want to get them to open their markets to cigarette tobacco," Martin said.

"Trade ought to be two ways," the governor said.

He said the state has been focusing on trade negotiations with Japan, Korea and Taiwan.

Position Delayed

on treatment plants than recommended under the proposal.

The Greenville Environmental Advisory Commission later sent DEM a statement supporting the nutrient sensitive classification and the proposed management strategy.

"GUC can't speak for Greenville and neither can the environmental advisers," Mayor Ed Carter said after Monday's meeting. "The official position has to come from the City Council."

The council has wrestled with the issue of the nutrient sensitive classification and an official statement from the city both publicly and privately. But after the matter has been on the council's agenda on three separate occasions, the city has yet to issue a statement supporting or opposing the classification.

"I felt like this council did not want to take a position," Council member Lorraine Shinn told the board.

Carter said after the meeting he supported the proposal even if it would place an additional cost requirement on GUC. "I don't think there's any sacred cows as far as water quality is concerned," Carter said.

Ms. Shinn, the Washington, N.C., regional manager of the state Department of Environment, Health and Natural Resources, the controlling agency of DEM, originally brought the matter before the council in executive session. But she said the council decided not to take any action then.

The council twice delayed public discussion of the nutrient sensitive classification. The first delay came because of a lengthy agenda on July 17 when representatives from DEM were present to discuss the proposal. The second scheduled discussion on Aug. 7 was delayed because GUC and DEM were reportedly discussing the proposal.

Jim Mulligan, regional manager of DEM and chairman of the Environmental Advisory Commission, told the board Monday that DEM was not in a position to discuss the classification because the period for public comment ended July 17. And Mulligan said the department's recommendations were now headed for a decision on the proposal by the Environmental Management Commission.

"I did not think the town had an opinion that was important to the process now," Mulligan said earlier Monday.

"I do think we need to discuss this because the articles that appeared in the paper it seems we've taken a lackadaisical attitude," said Council member Inez Fridley.

She said the nutrient sensitive classification is important to Greenville both economically and environmentally, but the council "dealt with it totally as an issue past its time."

The mayor and council members Nancy Jenkins and Rufus Huggins said the delays were due to time constraints and outside events such as the negotiations between GUC and DEM.

"I think the record should reflect that the lack of action on the part of this council ... was due to circumstances," Carter said.

"I don't feel we've negated any responsibility," Ms. Jenkins said. "And, as the mayor suggested, we will have to look at this."

The council did not schedule a time for the discussion following the decision by the EMC.

"I can't see that anybody but a cold-hearted industrialist would not want the Tar River to be nutrient sensitive," Carter said.

Per Diem Raised

took exception to the amount of the food allowance and the extra $4. "I think if you want to eat Lifesavers at night the city doesn't need to pay for that," Ms. Shinn said.

She also said the $26 per diem was the highest reimbursement offered by the state for out-of-state travel. State employees on in-state travel only receive $21, she said.

Ms. Shinn also provided the council with a survey of travel expenses paid by other North Carolina cities. Most cities, such as Kinston and Rocky Mount, do not set a limit, but require receipts. Wilmington, the city offering the highest meal allowance, allows $25 per day with receipts and approval from the employee's department head.

Council member Nancy Jenkins joined with Ms. Shinn in questioning the amount proposed by Knowles, and eventually voted with her in opposition to the $26 meal allowance.

Council members Mildred Council, Inez Fridley and Rufus Huggins passed the proposed $26 allowance, but dropped the $4 miscellaneous cost.

The council also addressed the problem of pigs inside the city limits.

Carter visited the East Carolina Stockyard on N.C. 11 earlier this month after he received complaints from area residents. What he found — nearly 30 dead pigs and others dying from the heat — prompted him to ask the board to consider stronger city regulation of the operation and the possibility of forcing the pigs out of town.

The council passed an ordinance giving the animal control officer the authority to remove the dead animals. And the council asked P&Z and City Attorney Mac McCarley to study a necessary amortization period to outlaw the stockyard inside the city limits.

The council sent the matter to P&Z, and hopes to consider its proposal during one of the September meetings depending on the recommendation of the planning panel.

During Monday's meeting, the City Council also passed the city's first AIDS policy.

The ordinance, passed by unanimous consent, would allow city employees with acquired immune deficiency syndrome and other catastrophic illnesses to continue working as long as physically possible and as long as they posed no danger to other employees.

The council also asked for a study of other cities' policies regarding employee tuition assistance before making any decision on a proposal presented by the city manager.

And the council unanimously passed an ordinance outlawing dumping in city drainage ditches.

Cates Sold

RALEIGH (AP) — Charles F. Cates & Sons Inc., a privately held pickle processor in Faison, has been sold to Dean Foods Co., in Franklin Park, Ill., for about $29 million worth of stock.

William L. Hennessee, Cates' president, said the company would operate as an independent subsidiary of Dean Foods, the second-largest U.S. dairy company and that no changes in Cates management or operations were planned.

Cates employs about 500 people, roughly half of whom work in the company's Faison plant. Most of the remainder work at facilities in Crosswell, Mich., and Texarkana, Texas.

Response On Waste Not Timely

Medical wastes and human body parts do not belong in packhouses and tobacco barns. John Gray, the owner of Raleigh funeral home and crematorium should promptly obey the order of a North Carolina Superior Court judge and remove such waste from Pitt County barns where it has been stored for years.

In addition, if North Carolina doesn't have sufficient regulatory authority to prevent and rectify such a situation without court intervention, the state must work to tighten its system.

The discovery of used syringes, bones and human body parts — including a partially burned skull — in barns near Stokes in March, focused attention on Gray's crematorium and his waste disposal practices. He is barred from accepting or disposing of medical waste because he does not have state permits needed for that business.

Regulation, common decency and public health concerns make storing waste in such a manner unconscionable. Why Gray would ignore these dictates and place his waste in tobacco barns and packhouses is incomprehensible.

But why the state was powerless to take prompt action requiring Gray to clean up the sites is equally inscrutable. An environmental supervisor for the Department of Environment, Health and Natural Resources clearly stated the waste sites were hazardous and could contaminate the soils and water. The waste was discovered in March; the court ruling was made in August. Six months is far too long for a known health and environmental hazard to persist.

Gray, who did not appear in court and was on vacation when the ruling was made, has remained elusive throughout the period. The court order could not be served to him at a variety of addresses in Raleigh and Pitt County. A tentative cleanup agreement with state officials fell through in April. Since then he has made little effort to rectify an unacceptable situation. Even with the court ruling, it is unclear whether cleanup will be accomplished, given Gray's record.

Two issues contributed to this situation. First, the irresponsibility of one individual has created a troubling health dilemma. Second, the inefficacy of the state regulatory system has been apparent.

Gray should respond to the court order in a timely fashion by hiring a contractor and removing his mess. But why did it take six months and a court order to require him to remedy a health hazard? And if he doesn't do as he is directed, what course of action does the state have, besides cleaning the site up itself, with taxpayers bearing the cost?

There is another even more disturbing question raised by the issue. Can the state prevent this deplorable situation from happening again? If it can't, it's time to put more teeth into North Carolina's regulatory bite.

Opening Up

Paving The Way For Growth

The highway financing package approved by the just-concluded State Legislature calls for $9.1 billion in new road construction spending over 13 years.

By any standards it is massive spending and it raises visions of superhighways stretching east and west and north and south in North Carolina serving most of our cities.

The major projects in the bill were spelled out and if they had not been it is doubtful the total support could have been assembled to approve such a complex project.

Almost overlooked in it all, however, is the portion of the funding which will pave 10,000 miles of dirt roads by 1999. The rest of the state's secondary roads are to be paved by 2006. The state Board of Transportation has already allocated nearly $33 million for paving of dirt roads.

It brings back memories of the Gov. Kerr Scott era when a bond issue financed massive paving of rural roads. Most of those roads were paved unchanged on their rights-of-way resulting in 30-mile-per-hour curves that still exist today. More than anything, however, the Scott roads opened the way to the urban areas for rural residents.

There are still thousands of miles of dirt roads in North Carolina, and Pitt County has its share. More often than not today they serve residents who live there but work at urban jobs.

The new highway funding promises to bring hard surfaced secondary roads to virtually every resident of the state. They won't change the character of the rural roads but they will mean dependable roads for those who reside along them in most weather conditions.

It can mean a second revolution in rural-urban living for our state.

Praise For Things They Didn't Do

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — Sometimes my six-year-old son gets an "attaboy" for something he didn't do. For example, not chasing the ball into the street.

The 1989 General Assembly deserves the same - attaboys or attagirls for non-action. Here's a list of proposals rejected, thank goodness, by the 1989 assembly.

•Career Ladder. Despite heavy lobbying from Governor Jim Martin, the assembly refused to expand the program statewide.

There is growing sentiment in the legislature for some form of merit pay for teachers, but this probably is not the right program. It's unclear whether or not teachers like it, and the eventual cost could be enormous. The state is probably better served by higher base salaries for teachers and a smaller merit pay program for the best teachers.

At the same time, the assembly showed unusual sense - for the assembly - in not dismantling the Career Ladder programs already in operation. They might be needed later.

•Pork Barreling. The practice was dropped this year, and only a few local projects were funded.

•Judicial Appointments. There are more efficient forms of government than democracy, and some people want to try one when it comes to selecting judges. Proposals to replace judicial election with gubernatorial appointment of judges failed to pass. At least for the next 10 months, North Carolinians called before a judge will be facing someone who must occasionally face the voters.

•Gubernatorial Veto. The polls say that the public wants the veto. But it would put too much power in the hands of one person and legislators wisely refuse to endorse it. There may be merit to gubernatorial veto, but not without offsetting reductions in other gubernatorial powers.

The veto and judicial selection were just two of a half-dozen or so constitutional changes proposed without enough public discussion of their efforts upon each other. These ideas should be considered together, at one time.

•A State Lottery. It's a politically expedient way to raise money for important needs. But it encourages social ill, gambling, and it leads to irresponsible budgeting.

•Credit Card Deregulation. Who needed this? Nobody. The banks wanted it so they could make more money. But why should people elected to serve the public help only banks? The legislature let this one die in a rare instance of helping the public more than the banks.

'Higher Beer Taxes and a New Tax on Movie Tickets. A blatant personal interest for this reporter. But after a day if covering the legislature, if I can't afford the escapes offered by a beer and a movie, how am I supposed to stay sane?'

•Furniture Retailing. The more that legislators looked at the issue of furniture retailing, the more they wondered why they were involved. This was a private business matter which, it is hoped, will be resolved between manufacturers and retailers.

•Higher Beer Taxes and a New Tax on Movie Tickets. A blatant personal interest for this reporter. But after a day if covering the legislature, if I can't afford the escapes offered by a beer and a movie, how am I supposed to stay sane?

Therefore, here's a giant "attaboy - attagirl" for all 170 solons.

To The Victor, The Spoils

BOSTON — Every year, in preparation for August 26, the anniversary of the passage of women's suffrage, I gather together a list of those people who have done the most in the past 12 months to slow the progress of women. In deference to our foremothers, I then annually and with great fanfare dispense the Equal Rites Award.

This year, however, concern about the celebration ran high. What would happen without such perennial winners as Ronald Reagan and Ed Meese, who have retired to the ERA hall of fame?

Well, not to worry. The competition was every bit as keen as ever, the prizes as coveted as ever. And so without further ado, the envelopes please.

We begin with the ever-popular Raging Hormonal Imbalance Award. This testosterone special, a real crowd-pleaser, goes to none other than Mike Tyson for his many acts in and out of the ring and most especially for his boy-talk relayed by buddy-author Jose Torres, "I like to hurt women when I make love to them. I like to hear them scream with pain....It gives me pleasure." Mike's denial? "I don't have any problems dating anybody. Thank God." To Mike, we send a glass of warm milk, an estrogen tablet and a lonely Saturday night.

As for high-flyers, The Male-adjusted Mogul Prize goes with deep regrets to Al Neuharth, the retired founder of USA Today. After years sheltered in a corporate jet, Al is back to reality complaining that flight attendants are no longer young, single and nubile, but are "aging women who are tired of their jobs or flighty young men...." His solution? "Bring back the skygirls." Our prize? A second career for Neuharth: "Fly me, I'm Al."

While we are talking images, the hotly contested Ms-Guided Madison Avenue Award must go to the folks who penned the Camel campaign. They offered a set of instructions for Camel men out to pick up women: "Run into the water, grab someone and drag her back to the shore....The more she kicks and screams, the better." We send them a plaque: Warning: This ad may be dangerous for your product's health.

A special Entrepreneur with an Attitude Award goes to Harry E. Figgie, Jr, chairman of Figgie International who told Fortune magazine, "You don't build a company like this with lace on your underwear." To him we ship a special catalogue full of Victoria's Secrets for Success. Try it.

Now for the Blind Justice Award. This year there were so many contestants the award is being shared by two of the jurists who labored mightily for recognition. One goes to the New York judge who, in a flight of sensitivity gave Don Lu Chen five years probation after he killed his wife with a hammer. The man was Chinese, the wife was unfaithful, the judge explained: "He was a product of his culture." To him we send a misfortune cookie.

The other goes to an equally understanding judge in Michigan who lightened the sentence of a convicted rapist to three years probation and $200 compensation. The judge explained that he didn't want to prevent the rapist from achieving his goal: becoming a police officer. We give this judge a new phone number: 911.

Lest you think it's just the American legal system that has gone awry, a special mention goes winging its way to Korea where a woman was convicted and sentenced to six months in jail for biting off the tongue of a rapist. We send the judge a booklet entitled: The Korean Art of Self-Defense. The pages are blank.

On now to the Dubious Equality Award for the woman who fought the hardest for the most questionable achievement. This year it goes to Roseanne Barr for her effort to prove women too can dump on men: "You may marry the man of your dreams, ladies, but 15 years later you are married to a reclining chair that burps." We send her a liberated laugh-track. Silent.

The G-String for Gratuitous Sex was pulled out of the closet this year and will be sent posthaste to Life Magazine for its June cover story: "Hurrah for the Bra." This tit-illating anniversary issue offered 100 years of pulchritude disguised as history. To them, we send a shirt and a story idea: Hurrah for the Jock Strap.

Now on to the International Backlash Award which has gone in previous years to assorted Ayatollahs. This year it goes to Japan's prime minister Souseke Uno, the guy with the geisha and to his agricultural minister Hisao Horinouchi who said, "It is wrong for women to come to the forefront of politics." We send them no prize because they already got what they deserved: defeat at the polls.

Success at the cash register has brought the winner of the Sexism in Song Prize to our notice. This prize has shifted from various hard-rockers to the rap group N.W.A. which in lyrics too rank to repeat here has advocated a use 'em and throw 'em away approach to women. We give them a one-way ticket to the women's museum at Seneca Falls. This includes a trip over the falls in a barrel.

Finally, a prize is surely due to that marketing genius who has found a novel product to keep the male ego inflated. So the Macho in Merchandizing Award goes to David Mayer of Mayers Lab for creating Maxx (sic) a condom, that is 25 percent larger than the others. To Mr. Mayer we send the perfect accompaniment to Maxx: helium.

Jury Of Six Men, Six Women Seated For Bakker Trial

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — After eight hours of questioning about their religious beliefs, television habits and independence, six men and six women convinced prosecutors, a federal judge and defense lawyers they would be able to give PTL founder Jim Bakker a fair trial.

Opening arguments are scheduled to begin next Monday in Bakker's trial on fraud and conspiracy charges.

In selecting the jury and six alternates Monday, U.S. District Court Judge Robert Potter questioned 49 people about their religious affiliation, whether they had ever donated to television evangelists, how regularly they attended church and whether they had ever been "born again," had a deep religious experience or felt they had been called by God into a vocation.

The final jury included Baptists, Presbyterians and Catholics, most of whom said they attend church regularly and give to the church regularly, but do not donate to television ministers.

All the jurors and alternates said they did not watch PTL or other religious television programs, and said they would not be influenced by the opinions of their families and co-workers.

At least four jurors were excused when they said they could not put aside their opinions of the case to give Bakker a fair trial and another juror, after sitting nearly the entire eight hours, was excused by Potter when she said she did not believe she could go against the strong opinions held by her immediate family members. Potter did not let the woman say what those opinions were.

About half the jurors said they had incomes ranging from $20,000 to $50,000 a year. The other half said their incomes ranged from $50,000 to $100,000.

"Our faith is in God," Bakker proclaimed as he strode into the U.S. District Courthouse with his attorneys and daughter.

While Bakker hoped to find sympathetic souls on the jury, his wife, Tammy Faye Bakker, carried on their live television broadcast from Orlando, Fla., exhorting viewers to send money and pray for her husband.

Bakker is charged with eight counts of mail fraud, 15 counts of wire fraud, and conspiracy to commit mail and wire fraud. If convicted on all counts, he could be sentenced to 120 years in prison and ordered to pay more than $5 million in fines. He has pleaded innocent. Potter warned the jurors not to discuss the case with anyone before opening arguments begin next Monday.

"I left a week (for jury selection) because I didn't know how long it would take to get a jury," Potter said. "I didn't even know if we could get one at all. But I thought we might do it in a day or two."

Potter told the jurors he expected the case to last a month.

Guilty Pleas

RALEIGH (AP) — Two Johnston County brothers have pleaded guilty to misdemeanor charges stemming from the July killing of a young Chinese-American man that police have described as racially motivated.

One of the brothers, Robert C. Piche, was bound over to Wake County Superior Court on Monday to face a second-degree murder charge in the killing of Ming Hai Loo, 24, of Cary.

The action came after a 4½-hour probable-cause hearing during which nine witnesses testified to events that led to an attack on Loo outside the Cue-N-Spirits pool hall in Raleigh.

At the end of the hearing, Wake County District Court Judge L.W. Payne sentenced Lloyd R. Piche to six months in prison for disorderly conduct and simple assault.

Robert Piche received a two-year sentence for carrying a concealed weapon, assault with a deadly weapon, disorderly conduct and possession of drug paraphernalia.

Tobacco Sheets

WILMINGTON (AP) — Officials say a new tobacco program is helping to alleviate a shortage of burlap sheets used to hold the approximately 250-pound piles of leaf that move from farms to factories.

"The sheet program within the industry had gotten so bad that something had to be done this year," said Mac Dunkley, manager of the newly formed Flue-Cured Tobacco Container Corp. The new project didn't get started until March, he said. But, without it, "the shortage of sheets would have been worse than it is," Dunkley said.

The corporation collects, repairs and replaces the burlap sheets. Farmers, warehouse owners and buyers each pay a 25-cent user fee per sheet.

The corporation collected 1.1 million used sheets this year, 700,000 of which were usable, Dunkley said. The unusable sheets were destroyed.

Patrol Recognized

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — The state Highway Patrol was officially recognized Monday for its attire.

The patrol was presented a plaque recognizing it as the best-dressed police department in the country for 1989, and troopers modeled their uniforms at a news conference. Richard Bistrong, representing the National Association of Uniform Manufacturers and Distributors, also presented a $250 check to the patrol.

"We've always been proud of our uniform," said Lt. Col. W.D. Teem, executive officer of the North Carolina Highway Patrol, who noted the uniform has been basically unchanged in the patrol's 60-year history.

Rauch Will Tour The State

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH — Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, who's considering a campaign for governor in 1992, plans to travel around the state in an attempt to become better known.

Rauch, the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said he will travel "about a week a month" well into 1990 before starting to assemble an organization for the campaign.

"I'm going to be out, moving around, letting people in the state and letting the people of North Carolina know who I am and what I stand for," Rauch said. "If that goes well, I hope to be a candidate."

Rauch, 66, has made hints at statewide campaigns before, only to back away because of business and personal reasons.

Voyager Finds Turbulent Atmosphere On Neptune

By Paul Raeburn
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PASADENA, Calif. — The Voyager 2 spacecraft has discovered a churning, turbulent atmosphere on Neptune, with huge white clouds of frozen natural gas and a string of storms trailing behind an Earth-sized cyclone.

One small collection of clouds called the "scooter" is whirling around the planet's surface once every 16 hours, faster than anything else so far seen on Neptune, said Bradford Smith, head of the Voyager imaging team.

Photographs of the planet's biggest moon, Triton, show it is brighter, cooler and smaller than scientists had thought. Smith said the shots suggest Triton may be partly covered with snow and frozen water.

"It may snow there from time to time," he said Monday.

The pictures also show dark spots near Triton's equator and a pinkish cast that may be from discolored frozen natural gas, or methane. Researchers had speculated that Triton might have oceans of liquid nitrogen, but Smith said any such oceans would have to be frozen over.

"Triton is an especially intriguing object," Smith said. "It's in the wrong orbit. It's going backwards around Neptune. Something truly catastrophic must have happened some time in its past."

Scientists believe Triton could have been a comet that collided with one of Neptune's moons because it rotates in the opposite direction from the planet, unlike most moons in the solar system.

Edward Stone, the Voyager project scientist, said such a collision could have slowed Triton enough to allow it to become trapped in a long, oval orbit around Neptune. As that orbit gradually became more circular, tidal forces would have caused the moon to heat, perhaps turning Triton into a ball of molten rock and water for 1 billion years, he said.

If that were the case, more detailed photographs later this week should show that Triton has fewer meteorite craters than it otherwise would have.

"It's very difficult right now to say anything about what's going on on Triton," Smith said.

Budget Director Says Deficit May Force Cuts In Programs

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The nation's battles against drugs, AIDS, tax cheats and dangerous airways could be undermined unless Congress implements an agreement to cut the budget deficit, the Bush administration says.

Such spending programs may have to be arbitrarily cut — and $8.1 billion taken from the military budget — unless the 1990 deficit is reduced to the level allowed by law, says Richard G. Darman, director of the Office of Management and Budget.

However, in a report to President Bush and Congress on Monday, Darman said across-the-board spending cuts are avoidable.

"It remains my hope, and my cautiously optimistic expectation, that necessary legislation" cutting selected programs and raising revenues can be enacted when Congress returns Sept. 5, Darman said.

The government can avoid the across-the-board reductions if Congress will implement a budget-cutting agreement reached with Bush

NAACP Unit Hit By Gas Bomb

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA — The FBI has been called in to help investigate the mailing of a gas bomb to the southeastern regional headquarters of the NAACP in what is believed to have been a racially motivated attack.

Eight people, including a 4-month-old, were injured when the bomb went off Monday as workers at the NAACP office opened a package that arrived by mail earlier that morning.

Caustic gas, "similar to tear gas," spread from the office of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People through air-conditioning ducts into surrounding offices in a two-story brick building near downtown Atlanta, said Assistant Fire Chief Walter Campbell.

No one was seriously hurt, according to officials at Grady Memorial Hospital and Georgia Baptist Medical Center.

Officers from the Postal Service, the FBI, the Atlanta police and the Atlanta Fire Bureau arson squad were investigating the bombing, Campbell said.

"We'll be looking to see what jurisdiction, if any, we've got. Our interest is from the point of view of civil rights," said FBI Special Agent Diader Rosario.

"Anytime something like this would come to the NAACP office, you have to believe it's racially motivated," said Democratic Rep. John Lewis, a veteran of the civil rights movement who was speaking nearby to a community group when he heard about the bombing.

"This is just a terrible experience," said Murlene Murray, a staff secretary in the office. "We've never experienced anything like this before in the 20 years I've worked here."

The package arrived via Postal Service "Priority Mail," Shinhoster said. It was addressed to the NAACP and not to anyone in particular.

The return address proved to be a law office on Peachtree Street in downtown Atlanta. Police interviewed people at the firm, but said they suspect the address was listed as a hoax.

Navy Says It Can't Find Cause Of Battleship Blast

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Procedures aboard the USS Iowa are the focus of a Navy investigation into an explosion that killed 47 sailors, but a Defense Department official says the specific cause of the blast can't be determined.

Reports published in The Washington Post and The Daily Press of Newport News, Va., say the Navy report found that crew members failed to perform preventive maintenance and that sailors weren't properly certified for their jobs.

The Navy, which says the report on the April 19 explosion will be made public next month, refused to comment on either story.

"As far as we're concerned, it's all still under investigation," said Navy spokesman Cmdr. Mark Baker.

The Defense Department official, who spoke Monday on condition of anonymity, said the Navy report "does not point to the cause of the problem. The report cites a probability."

The Washington Post reported in today's editions that the investigation has found the crew failed to perform certain unspecified preventive maintenance procedures. However, the newspaper said it was not known whether the faulty maintenance caused the explosion.

The No. 2 turret's guns passed pre-firing checks before the explosion, the Post said.

The Daily Press reported Monday that the Navy failed to properly qualify the sailors who worked with explosives in the turret.

Navy regulations require that all sailors and civilian employees who work with explosives be certified at their posts by a Qualification Board.

Sailors who lack certification are permitted to handle weapons only in the presence of a supervisor.

Michael Drowns, one of 11 sailors who escaped turret No. 2 after the explosion, told the Daily Press that a Qualification Board was never convened during his three years on the Iowa. Drowns received an honorable discharge from the Navy Aug. 11.

Other Iowa sailors and a Navy officer familiar with the investigation confirmed Drowns' statements, but asked that they not be identified for fear of retribution by the Navy.

Adm. Richard Milligan, who headed the Navy's probe, said no records of a Qualification Board had been found on the Iowa, a source told the Daily Press. Milligan has declined to comment publicly.

Blacks Issue Appeal To Spare Prisoner

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SALT LAKE CITY — Black community leaders, citing racial factors in legal proceedings against the nation's longest-standing death row inmate, are urging that his life be spared.

William Andrews, on death row nearly 15 years, had faced execution today for his role in the torture-murders of three whites at an Ogden stereo shop. The victims and two survivors were forced to drink liquid drain cleaner before being shot in the head.

The 34-year-old former airman from Jonesboro, La., won a reprieve Saturday when a federal appellate court ordered a stay based on a writ of habeas corpus that claimed the court showed a racial bias in excluding a black man as a juror in Andrews' trial.

James Gillespie Sr., president of the Ogden chapter of the NAACP and father of the juror who was excluded, said the death sentence reflects prevailing attitudes in Utah, which he labeled a "racist state."

Then-prosecutor Robert Newey has acknowledged that race played a part in his decision to exclude James Gillespie Jr. as a juror.

Defense attorneys incorporated that statement into their appeal, but the state has countered that Andrews' trial attorney concurred in a motion to dismiss the younger Gillespie, because he was a state lawman at the time.

The younger Gillespie, now an administrator in the state prison system, has not disputed the logic behind his exclusion as a juror, but said race had played a part in the case.

In his writ that led to the stay by the 10th Circuit Court of Appeal, Andrews argued that a mistrial should have been declared during his trial when a juror found a note in a restaurant during a lunch break saying, "Hang the niggers." The juror gave the note to the judge; its origin was never determined.

The elder Gillespie noted that avowed white supremacist Joseph Paul Franklin had been sentenced to life imprisonment for gunning down two black men, Ted Fields and David Martin, at a Salt Lake City park in 1980.

"No one seemed upset when Mrs. Fields and Mrs. Martin's sons were killed," Gillespie said. "That was premeditated murder."

He said Andrews had gotten the death sentence because, "It's a black person that killed a white person."

Franklin, convicted of two counts of first-degree murder, was given concurrent life sentences when the jury could not agree on the death penalty. He also was convicted in federal court and is serving life terms for violating the victims' civil rights.

budget deficit, the Bush administration says.

Such spending programs may have to be arbitrarily cut — and $8.1 billion taken from the military budget — unless the 1990 deficit is reduced to the level allowed by law, says Richard G. Darman, director of the Office of Management and Budget.

However, in a report to President Bush and Congress on Monday, Darman said across-the-board spending cuts are avoidable.

"It remains my hope, and my cautiously optimistic expectation, that necessary legislation" cutting selected programs and raising revenues can be enacted when Congress returns Sept. 5, Darman said.

The government can avoid the across-the-board reductions if Congress will implement a budget-cutting agreement reached with Bush in April, Darman said. He noted that almost none of that agreement has been enacted into law.

The deficit is on a path that, in the absence of further congressional action, would lead to $116.2 billion of red ink during the 1990 budget year, which begins Oct. 1. That's down from about $170 billion this year.

The law limits the 1990 deficit to $100 billion.

As a result of the estimate, Darman told reporters, Bush will issue an order Friday to cut — "sequenter" in Washington jargon — $16.2 billion worth of spending, half from the military budget and half from most non-military programs. But that order will be only a warning; the real cuts would not be ordered until Oct. 15.

Accent Poverty Causes Family Distress

By Maria O'Neil McMahon

It is no coincidence that people facing financial bankruptcy experience mental stress leading to depression and suicide. There is a high correlation between poverty and mental illness. The actual cause of the illness has been debated down through the years through use of such terms as "nature vs. nurture" or "environment vs. endowment."

Opportunities, or lack of opportunities, available in the environment have a major impact on the development of one's self image and sense of well-being. A mentally healthy person has been described as one who is at home with oneself and one's environment.

The person who is feeling cold or hungry or who observes his or her children experiencing the same is usually one who is at odds and in distress within oneself and with one's surroundings.

Statistics from recent studies show an increase in poverty in rural states and particularly here in eastern North Carolina. Forty-four percent of the poor in North Carolina live in our 41 eastern counties.

The causes of poverty are multiple, relating directly to such areas as education, health, housing, transportation, employment and social services.

Poverty is defined as an income below $11,650 for a family of four. Statistics show that one in every five children in North Carolina lives in poverty. Most of these children live in homes where at least one parent is working.

We are a state of the working poor. The limited income, with little or no benefits, received by the poor in our state is not enough to move them out of poverty.

When people are motivated to improve themselves but cannot find the opportunities necessary to make a difference in their lives, they develop strong feelings of helplessness. With little control over their lives and little hope for change, they often turn their anger inward. That anger may result in self destruction or cause them to strike at those around them.

They may try to get relief from painful feelings of failure and helplessness by turning to a poor man's medicine, namely alcohol. There is a high correlation between alcohol consumption and domestic violence.

Public and private social service agencies offer some emergency, supportive financial funds and counseling services for the poor, but funds are minimal and temporary. Often, those living in poverty do not have access to these services because there is no public transportation or money for them to pay for visits to these agencies.

The recent "Poverty in the East" study showed that poverty has many causes and will take a concerted effort by multiple systems and individuals to overcome. Everyone needs to recognize shared ownership in the problem and in the solution. The inadequacies in our educational, health, housing, transportation and employment systems all contribute to the problem.

Poverty is no fun. Given the opportunity, individuals do choose a better way of life. The deeper or longer one sinks into poverty, the longer and more difficult it is to get out of it. Only through major efforts and persistent commitments from all of us, can all of our children find a way to grow healthy in mind and body.

Acquire Denture Marking Kit For Protection

Dear Abby: I am employed at a very large convalescent home. One of the elderly residents here lost her dentures, so with a pillow case in hand, she crept into the rooms of the other occupants while they were sleeping and picked up every pair of false teeth from the water glasses. She then returned to her room and tried each set until she found one that fit her. Then she sneakily returned the sets of teeth to any water glass.

The next morning, everyone was walking around the place with overbites and underslung jaws, complaining bitterly that their dentures didn't fit!

How do we straighten out this mess? Or must we buy new dentures for 100 residents? — Denture Dilemma

Dear Dilemma: Call in a dentist and ask him to examine the mouths of the patients and the dentures, in order to return them to their rightful owners. (P.S. Denture-marking kits are available. Get one and use it, before another teeth thief gums up the works again.)

Dear Abby

Dear Abby: Our 15-year-old, 6-foot, 200-pound son got a girl from a neighboring farm into trouble. She is also 15. We gave him strict orders to stay away from her, but it seems he didn't. Her people claim it's our fault.

I talked with a judge in the city, and he said there is a law that says if a man owns a bull, he is responsible for keeping the bull locked up. And if the bull gets loose and goes into a neighbor's pasture and breeds his dairy heifers, the owners of the heifers can't sue for damages because they should have kept their heifers locked up. My friend, the judge, says the same law applies to people. Do we have a case? — Ohio Farmer

Dear Farmer: A man's son is not a bull; neither is his neighbor's daughter a heifer. I can't practice law, but I think your friend, the judge, gave you a bum steer.

Dear Abby: I am 22 and Mike is 25. We've been married a little over a year, and I have a problem I can't ask anyone else about.

Mike has a big appetite for sex, but I'm not complaining. It's his timing that bothers me. He always wants to make love on Sunday morning before Mass. Abby, I know that married love is not a sin, but for some silly reason I just hate to go to Mass right after having sex. Lately I have been putting my husband off. But I feel guilty about that.

Do you think I should postpone the lovemaking until after Mass? Or keep telling myself I have no reason to feel guilty about it, and just try to get over that feeling? What's wrong with me? — Maggie In Manhattan

Dear Maggie: Your problem is rooted in the notion that sex is sinful. You grew up believing it, and even though you're married and there is nothing to feel guilty about, you're still programmed to equate sex with sin. Talk to a priest, or a psychiatrist. (Try a priest first, it's cheaper.)

Dear Abby: I've been going steady with this man for six years. We see each other every night. He says he loves me, and I know I love him, but he never mentions marriage. Do you think he's going out with me just for what he can get? — Gertie

Dear Gertie: I don't know. What's he getting?

Family Planning Needs Plan

There was a time when couples did a lot of talking about child planning. When was the best time to have a child in your life? When was the ideal moment to add a brother or a sister? How many children should you have to put you at the national average?

Some people choose to let nature take its course and not concern themselves with it. I met a couple the other day who did that. They have three kids in college at the same time. It is not cost-efficient to have three kids in college at the same time. It is not in the interest of mental health to have three children searching for some meaning to their lives at the same time. This is poor planning.

Maybe it's time we got back to thinking about how many kids to a family is feasible, and how far apart they should be spaced.

It goes without saying that you should never have more children than you have car windows. To violate this law is asking for it. You should never have a 16-year-old licensed driver overseeing a 15-year-old sibling with a learner's permit. Therapy cannot be rushed.

At Wits End

Having an odd number of children is not the brightest thing you can do. Have any number you like, but make sure it is divisible by two. Remember, there is a reason why there are only four seats to a restaurant booth, two cupcakes to a package, and bunk beds that accommodate two. Think about it. Did you ever see a family of five ride a ferris wheel or check into a motel? They are not happy people. One is always odd man out.

Never plan to have a child during the week of the Super Bowl or you will deliver alone. Never go to your high school reunion pregnant or they will think that is all you have done since you graduated. If at all possible, have at least one more child than your mother had or you'll never escape her, "I raised (fill in your own number) children and we never ate out of a cardboard bucket."

If at all possible, have the first and second children close together. If there is too big a gap between them, the older child will assume the younger child is his or hers and will raise the child accordingly. If you are going to have a child with an "only child" personality, save him or her until last. It's easier.

Never put a Gemini and a Taurus in the same room together, even if you have to add on to the house by refinancing it. Sometimes it's worth it to deliver a 10-month baby.

Texas Ranger pitcher Nolan Ryan talks about closing in on 5,000 strikeouts

Who Will Be No. 5,000? History Should Be Made Tonight

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ARLINGTON, Texas — Texas Rangers pitcher Nolan Ryan feels sorry for the player destined to be his 5,000th strikeout victim.

"I don't envy the person but somebody has to be it," Ryan said.

Ryan was expected to put himself into the history books, and a member of the Oakland A's into the trivia books, with his sixth strikeout in tonight's game.

He said he will react like he has for 4,994 of his victims who've had to face his gunslinger's glare and 95 mph fastball.

"I'll do nothing," Ryan said Monday. "My idea is we have a game to win and I don't want it to be a distraction. I'll just take the ball home and put it with the rest of 'em."

Ryan, who left Houston for the Rangers last December when the Astros tried to cut his salary, has kept all the baseballs from his five no-hitters and strikeouts in increments of 500.

"I just give them to Ruth (his wife) and she marks on them what happened," Ryan said. "I keep them in a case behind my kids' trophies."

None of Ryan's milestone baseballs is the sport's Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N.Y.

"I give them my hats, shoes and gloves but not my baseballs," Ryan said.

Ryan, 42, needs six strikeouts against the power-hitting A's to reach a career plateau that many, Ryan included, at one time believed unreachable.

"With modern technology like it is, we might just be seeing the start of 40-year-olds pitching in the majors," Ryan said. "When I got my 4,000th strikeout, somebody asked me about 5,000, and I said, 'Lord help me, there's no chance for 5,000.'"

What about 6,000? Ryan quipped: "Maybe by then they'll have a 35-year-old-and-older league I can pitch in."

Ryan admitted he would be a little nervous going into the game because many friends are coming 200 miles from his hometown of Alvin to watch.

"I feel a little uneasy about it with all my relatives coming to the game and a sellout crowd assured," he said. "The anticipation is like waiting for a playoff game to start. I just want to get it over with."

Ryan recently was clocked at 99 mph while pitching a one-hitter at Seattle.

Just who will be victim No. 5,000? Don't bet against it being a catcher, if the law of averages is any indication.

Look out, Ron Hassey.

The Truth's Manager Appeals For Rematch

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — A rematch should be held between Mike Tyson and Carl "The Truth" Williams because the bout was stopped prematurely, according to Williams' manager.

Tyson knocked out Williams 93 seconds into the scheduled 12-round fight July 21 at Atlantic City.

Williams got up at the count of seven after being knocked down by a left hook midway through the first round, but referee Randy Neumann stopped the fight.

Ira Leibowitz, Williams' manager, requested the bout be declared "no contest" and called for a rematch in a letter to boxing's three main sanctioning bodies and the New Jersey State Athletic Commission. In another letter last week, Leibowitz asked Tyson promoter Don King to give Williams a rematch with the heavyweight champion.

Leibowitz claims that Williams went down not from the hook, but from a head butt "that clearly changed Carl's direction and caused him to fall."

In his letter to the boxing organizations, Leibowitz also said Neumann did not follow proper procedures before stopping the bout.

"The referee made a determination that because Carl did not respond appropriately to a question he asked, he was in danger of further harm," Leibowitz wrote.

"He did not wipe Carl's gloves to give him a moment more to respond. He did not separate the fighters and allow them to come towards each other to see if Carl could defend himself. ... It was a bout being fought by experienced boxers for the heavyweight championship and should have proceeded."

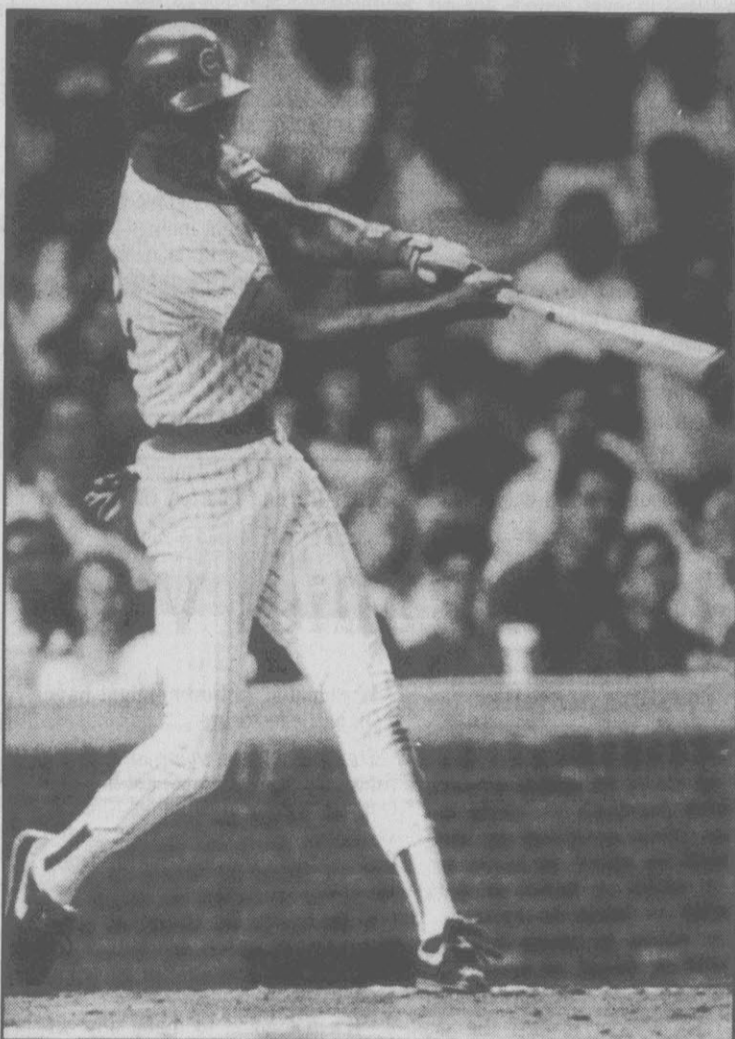

Leibowitz asked for a joint hearing before the heads of the three sanctioning bodies: the World Boxing Association, World Boxing Council and International Boxing Federation.

WBC president Jose Sulaiman said he was willing to hear the protest even though he felt the referee made the right decision.

"I was at ringside, and I believe Williams was hurt," Sulaiman said. "I think his health would have been in danger if the fight had continued. We've got to be concerned with safety in boxing, and not allow legal assassinations."

James Binns, attorney for the WBA, also backed the referee's decision.

"He did exactly what he should have done," Binns said.

Chicago's Jerome Walton strikes out to end hitting streak

Walton's Streak Comes To A Halt

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — Jerome Walton's 30-game hitting streak, the longest in the major leagues this year, is over. There's another streak that is of more concern to the Chicago Cubs.

The Cubs dropped a 6-5 decision in 10 innings to the Cincinnati Reds Monday night. It was their fourth straight loss and cut their National League East lead to 1½ games over the New York Mets, 4-1 winners over San Francisco.

"I'm glad it's over; now I can concentrate on playing baseball," Walton said of his streak. "I wanted to make that rookie record but I didn't get there."

Walton fell short of the rookie record of 34 set by San Diego's Benito Santiago in 1987. Walton can't say he didn't have his chances Monday night, getting a fifth at-bat when the game went into extra innings. But he ground out in the 10th to finish 0-for-4. He walked in his first at-bat leading off the first.

"There wasn't a lot of pressure, like someone would kill me if I didn't get a hit," Walton said, "but being in the streak was a big surprise."

Cincinnati manager Pete Rose set the modern National League record by hitting in 44 consecutive games in 1978, falling 12 short of the record of 56 set in 1941 by Joe DiMaggio of the New York Yankees.

"He didn't have to worry about the hitting streak that much," Rose said of Walton. "Maybe because he got close to the rookie record, but the team is in the pennant race and they've been winning."

Suddenly, however, the Cubs aren't winning. Worst of all, they blew a 5-1 lead Monday night. The Reds rallied for three runs in the seventh, tied it on Joel Youngblood's pinch homer in the eighth and won it in the 10th when Todd Benzinger doubled and scored on Doming Ramos' throwing error.

"It was a tough loss but we've had tough losses before this year," Manager Don Zimmer said. "We didn't get the job done. A lot of things can happen when you're in a bad streak."

"Ramos has been super all year and then he makes an error. That can happen to anybody," Zimmer said. "We're the ones that have to do it. We have to come out tomorrow and break this streak."

The Cubs had a final chance in the bottom of the 10th. Ryne Sandberg

Fitch Says Nets Are Willing To Pay The Price To Win

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Bill Fitch knew the New Jersey Nets wanted him. Fitch wasn't sure he wanted the Nets.

From the moment his picture appeared on television, on the day Willis Reed was kicked upstairs, Fitch knew the Nets wanted him as their next coach. The chase became official three days later when General Manager Harry Weltman called.

Fitch

But Fitch was worried about the Nets' organization — or, as reports had it, the lack of organization. Fitch said there were always stories about how no one seemed in charge at the top and how owners weren't willing to pay the price to win.

So Fitch set out to separate rumor from fact.

"To tell you the truth, I would not be here if the ownership was what I was told it was like," Fitch said Monday after agreeing to become the Nets' eighth coach of the 1980s. "These guys want to pay the price to win."

Neither the Nets nor Fitch would give details about the length and value of his contract.

Fitch was bold enough to say that the Nets, who won just 45 games the last two seasons, can turn things around this season with a young team.

"I'm certainly smart enough not to go into a situation where we don't have a chance to win," said Fitch, who has a 762-714 record in 18 years as an NBA coach. "I like the youth of this team. It's like a green apple getting red."

Fitch, 55, was just what the Nets wanted, a coach with NBA experience and a proven ability to develop young talent. The two-time NBA coach of the year did that with young teams at Cleveland and Houston.

The highlight of his career was winning the NBA title with the Boston Celtics in 1981. The low point came in 1987, when Fitch was fired by Houston following a disagreement with the front office on the direction the team should take. Fitch still had two years left on that contract and could have sat around collected paychecks.

"I spent the last year on the golf course," he said. "I spent a year in the desert, the water and the forest and I know God didn't mean for me to be a golfer."

In the spring, he began watching three NBA games a night on television and kept charts on every team. Reed was replaced on Aug. 14 and Weltman called Fitch three days later.

Fitch will coach a very young team, with seven players having three or fewer years of experience. Dennis Hopson, projected as a starting guard, has three years in the league and small forward Chris Morris is entering his second season. Top draft pick Mookie Blaylock could be the starting point guard, especially if free agent Lester Conner goes elsewhere.

The center position is unpredictable because Joe Barry Carroll and Sam Bowie are unpredictable. Bowie, acquired from Portland, has spent more time on the sidelines than on the court because of leg injuries, and Carroll is considered an underachiever who did not get along with Fitch at Houston.

"When I got him (Carroll), he was out of shape and I had to run his butt," Fitch said. "Joe Barry can put the ball in the hoop. If we can get the best season out of Joe, and each guy on this team has his best season, we can have a good year."

Fitch spent 12 seasons as a college coach before jumping to the pro ranks in 1970-71 with Cleveland. His first team won just 15 games, but by 1975-76 the Cavaliers won 49 games and a division title.

The Celtics lured Fitch to Boston in 1979-80 and he spent four years there, winning three division titles and the 1981 NBA title. Houston signed Fitch for the 1983-84 season and the Rockets won more than 40 games in four of his five years.

Yanks' Polonia Pleads No Contest Sentencing For Sex Offense To Be Held After Regular Season Ends

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MILWAUKEE — New York Yankees outfielder Luis Polonia will have to wait until the season is over to learn whether he will serve a jail term for having sex with a 15-year-old girl.

Polonia, 24, pleaded no contest on Monday to a misdemeanor charge that he had sex with the girl at a downtown hotel last Wednesday.

Milwaukee County Circuit Judge Thomas Doherty scheduled sentencing for Oct. 2, the day after baseball's regular season ends.

Polonia, whose only comments during the hearing were answers to the judge's questions, returned to New York later and was in the lineup against Boston Monday night.

"After the season I'm going to be nervous just like I was today," Polonia said of the pending sentence. "But it's something I'm going to have to deal with."

Polonia said he encountered some difficulties when he played at Tiger Stadium over the weekend.

"The fans in Detroit were really getting mean but that is going to happen wherever I go," he said.

Doherty said in an interview after the hearing that he delayed sentencing until Oct. 2 to provide ample time for completion of a pre-sentence report. "The baseball season was not a factor," he said.

Polonia's bail was continued at $5,000 and prosecutors said he would not have to return to Milwaukee until the next hearing.

Under Wisconsin law, an adult may not have intercourse with a child under the age of 16 even if the child consents. The charge carries a maximum penalty of nine months in jail and $10,000 in fines.

Assistant district attorney John DiMotto urged Doherty to sentence

Polonia immediately, citing the trauma inflicted on the girl's family.

"The state and the family would like the matter resolved today," DiMotto told the court.

DiMotto read a statement from the girl's family in which it was recommended that Polonia be sentenced immediately to 30 days in the Milwaukee County House of Correction and fined $5,000.

The family's statement said if sentencing was delayed until after the season, Polonia should be ordered to spend 90 days in jail and pay a $10,000 fine.

DiMotto said if the lesser sentence had been issued Monday, it would have been "as much a punishment, if not worse," than the harsher penalty because Polonia would have missed the rest of the season.

After the hearing, DiMotto said he was not surprised by the delay. He said he had talked with the girl's family and "they understand the judge's ruling and are not critical of it."

Polonia is a citizen of the Dominican Republic, but Ronald Swan, a U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service agent in Milwaukee, said the player could not be deported because of the conviction.

Polonia came to the Yankees last month in a trade that sent Ricky Henderson to the Oakland Athletics.

Polonia, in Milwaukee for a series between the Yankees and Brewers, was arrested last Wednesday at the Pfister Hotel by police investigating a report that the girl was missing.

Polonia spent several hours in the city jail before being released on bail. A plea agreement was reached before Polonia rejoined the Yankees in Detroit.

Polonia's lawyer, Dennis Coffey, issued a statement that the player accepted full responsibility for the incident and wanted to apologize to the girl, his team and professional baseball.

Rose Soccer Opens With 1-1 Tie

Rose High School's soccer team opened the 1989 season with a hard-fought 1-1 tie in overtime against New Bern.

Rose scored first in the match, as Thomas Leahy scored at the 35:30 mark of the first half. It remained that way the rest of the half.

New Bern battled back and finally scored with less than five minutes left in regulation, tying the score at 1-1. Jeff Ritchie headed a shot into the goal after a pass from Greg Petrovic.

Despite two overtimes which followed, neither team could score again. "We haven't had many scrimmage days," Rose coach Charlie Harvey said. "And we haven't had much of a chance to practice in the heat with all the cool days at the start of practice. Still for a first game, I feel like we did all right. We have a long way to go and this game taught us a good lesson."

Harvey cited the play of outside fullbacks Chris Turner and Cliff Ferrell. Rose had six shots on goal while the Bears had eight. The Rampants return to action on Thursday at home against Raleigh Broughton in a 5 p.m. start.

Lewis Sees Improvement In Pirates

East Carolina head football coach Bill Lewis continues to see improvement in his first Pirate team as two-a-day practices continue through tomorrow.

"I see some definite progress in our workouts," Lewis said. "We try to improve each day."

In the second practice of the day the Pirates spent time concentration on special situations. Lewis had his troops simulate first-and-ten passing plays and goal-line situations.

The Pirates will scrimmage Wednesday night in Ficklen Stadium. "Today we began working on certain situations," Lewis said. "We'll continue that tomorrow in preparation for Wednesday night's scrimmage."

East Carolina will open its season Sept. 9 against Bowling Green in Ficklen Stadium.

Two Teams Share Meyer Challenge Lead

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Bob Gilder had seven birdies as he and teammate Mark Calcavecchia tied Craig Stadler and Joey Sindelar for the first-round lead in the Fred Meyer Challenge golf tournament.

Gilder had four straight birdies starting on the 13th hole as he and Calcavecchia combined for a 10-under-par 62 on the par-72, 6,632-yard Portland Golf Club course.

Tom Kite, the No. 2 player on the 1989 earnings list at $748,000, teamed with Chip Beck and was one shot back at 9-under-par 63.

Bell Named AL Player Of The Week

NEW YORK (AP) — George Bell of the Toronto Blue Jays, who went 14-for-30 and drove in 12 runs, was named American League player of the week.

Bell, the 1987 AL Most Valuable Player, had an .867 slugging percentage and a .452 on-base percentage. He is the third Toronto player to win the award this season, joining Nelson Liriano and Junior Felix.

Bass Named NL Player Of The Week

NEW YORK (AP) — Kevin Bass of the Houston Astros, who batted .462 with five consecutive multiple-hit games, was named National League player of the week.

Bass was 12-for-26 with four doubles and two home runs. He drove in eight runs, scored six, had an .846 slugging percentage and a .500 on-base percentage.

Lemieux Signs Hefty Five-Year Deal

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Mario Lemieux has been one of the top two players in the NHL for the last two seasons. Now, he'll be paid like it.

Lemieux and the Pittsburgh Penguins agreed Monday to a five-year contract worth between $11 million and $12 million. The Associated Press learned. The agreement is to be announced at a news conference in Pittsburgh today.

Lemieux becomes the second player in the National Hockey League to earn more than $2 million per year. Wayne Gretzky last year agreed to an eight-year contract with the Los Angeles Kings worth $20 million.

However, Gretzky's contract includes deferred money that will be paid over four years after the contract runs out and is worth less than $20 million in present-day dollars. It also included money that paid for his move from Edmonton to Los Angeles.

Lemieux, who will be 24 in October, earned $1.6 million last year in a renegotiated contract. He had been making $670,000 before the contract was renegotiated.

He has won the NHL's scoring title the past two seasons and was named the league's Most Valuable Player in 1987-88. Gretzky recaptured the award last season.

Lemieux scored 85 goals last season and had 199 points, 16 short of Gretzky's NHL record. Gretzky was second in the league in scoring last season with 168 points.

The agreement was reached on Monday during negotiations between Lemieux's agent, Tom Reich, and Carmen Policy, who represented the Penguins. Reich began representing Lemieux 15 months ago.

Lemieux began his professional career in 1981 with Laval of the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League. He played three seasons at Laval and scored 96 points in 1981-82, 184 points the following season and a league-record 282 points in 1983-84, including 133 goals.

He was the first choice in the 1984 entry draft and won the Calder Trophy as NHL rookie of the year in 1984-85, scoring 43 goals and 100 points.

Blazers Closer To Signing Petrovic

NEW YORK (AP) — The Portland Trail Blazers moved a step closer to signing Drazen Petrovic by reaching a verbal agreement to pay Real Madrid $1.15 million for rights to the Yugoslav guard.

The 6-foot-3 Petrovic, considered one of the best players in Europe, agreed last Wednesday to a three-year contract with Portland worth a guaranteed $3.84 million. However, Petrovic's contract with Real Madrid has three years remaining, and all parties became involved in a lawsuit in an Oregon court.

In the agreement reached Monday, Portland will play two exhibitions in Spain, according to Jordi Bertomeu, general counsel for the Spanish Association of Basketball Clubs (ACB).

That part of the deal needs approval from the NBA, according to Bertomeu.

Under Petrovic's agreement with Portland, Real Madrid would have the first chance to sign the guard if he ever chooses to leave the NBA.

Switzer Would Consider Offer From Pros

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Former Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer says if an offer comes from the professional ranks, he would consider returning to coaching.

"I would be interested, no question about it," Switzer said Monday night on a cable sports talk show. "I've coached a lot of first-round draft choices."

"Obviously, you don't have the problems (in professional football) you have in the college game today. ... You don't have to recruit, you don't have to deal with alumni."

In the meantime, Switzer said he spoke last Friday with officials at ESPN about taking part in pre-game college football shows this season and said he is considering a run for public office.

Switzer, the winningest active coach in college football when he resigned in June after six months of turmoil surrounding the football program, made his comments on "Sportscene" hosted by Bill Bland and Dean Blevins.

The former coach said he believes he would find the transition to professional football an easy one despite his affinity for the wishbone offense, an offense shunned by the pros.

Orioles Keep Slim Hold On 1st Place

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

How important is the Milwaukee-Baltimore series? If you have the answer, managers Frank Robinson and Tom Trebelhorn would like to know.

"It's important, but no more important than any other series," Robinson said following the Orioles' 5-0 victory Monday night, the second straight game Baltimore had to win to remain in first place in the American League East. "We have to win ball games because if we win we don't have to rely on anybody else."

"I'm not going to sit here and say, 'God, it's important that we're still in first place.' We're still there, but I don't know how important it is."

The victory, keyed by Jeff Ballard's seven-hit pitching and home runs from Stan Jefferson and Cal Ripken, stretched Baltimore's lead to 1½ games over Milwaukee and two over the idle Toronto Blue Jays, whom the Orioles beat 7-2 on Sunday. The Brewers had won nine of their previous 10 games.

"It's important, it would be silly to say it's not," Trebelhorn said of the three-game series. "I'll be pleased if we win (Tuesday)."

Is it a must-win situation? "I don't know. You tell me what'll happen in the next month and I'll tell you then. Why don't you wait and see, like I'm going to do."

The Brewers had at least one runner on base in eight innings against Ballard, 13-6, but only two advanced beyond first base. Ballard did not issue a walk or strike out a batter, the first such shutout in Baltimore history.

Milwaukee starter Jerry Reuss faced only five batters before leaving with a sore left hamstring. Reuss strained the muscle Aug. 9 in Detroit and hadn't pitched since. He threw 22 pitches, issuing two walks and a two-out RBI single to Keith Moreland.

Jefferson, who started the game batting only .170, hit a solo home run in the fourth inning off Mark Knudson. It was his fourth homer and ninth RBI in 10 games with the Orioles although he has only 10 hits in 51 at-bats since joining the club from the minors on Aug. 9.

Ripken's 17th homer in the fifth followed a bloop single by Phil Bradley and an infield hit by Mike Devereaux. It was the 200th homer of Ripken's career, making him the fourth Oriole to reach that figure, behind Eddie Murray (333), Boog Powell (303) and Brooks Robinson (268).

Ripken has driven in 14 runs in the last 18 games despite getting only 13 hits in 70 at-bats in that span.

Athletics 6, Red Sox 1

Mark McGwire hit a two-run homer during Oakland's four-run first inning and the A's won for the eighth time in 11 games. Coupled with California's loss to Kansas City, the A's moved one game ahead of the Angels in the AL West.

The game was a makeup of a July 19 rainout and the crowd of 6,197 was the smallest at Tiger Stadium since 1983.

Winner Curt Young allowed a run and four hits in six innings. In 26 starts, loser Frank Tanana has allowed 27 first-inning runs.

Yankees 6, Red Sox 4

Jesse Barfield hit a tie-breaking, two-run double off Roger Clemens in the sixth inning and New York won for the first time in four games under Manager Bucky Dent. Clemens lost for the first time in six career decisions at Yankee Stadium while the Red Sox lost for the eighth time in their last nine games.

Royals 4, Angels 2

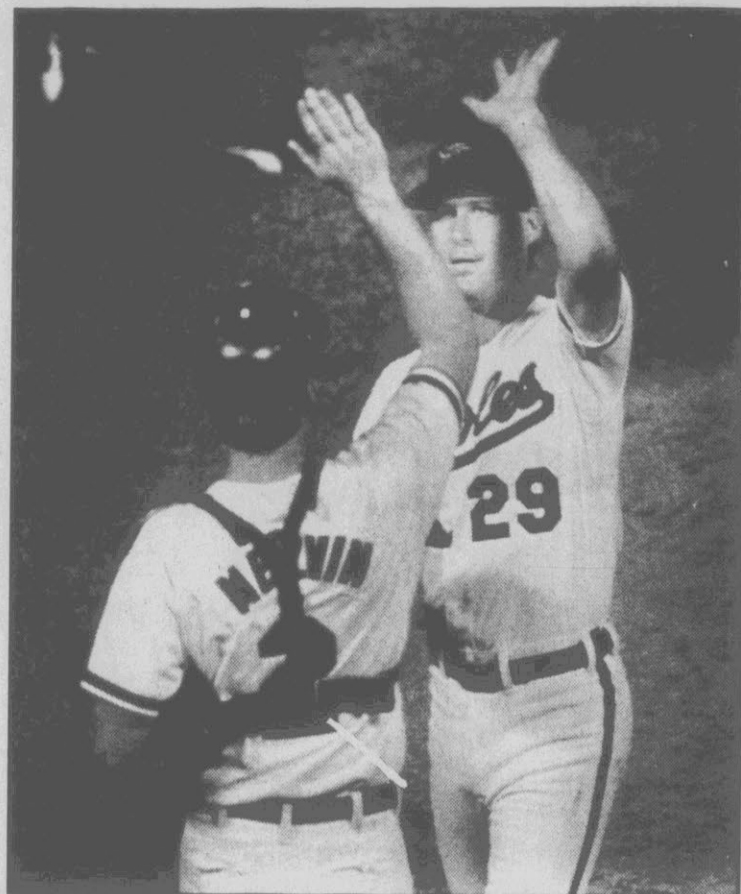

George Brett drove in two runs and Bret Saberhagen won his sixth straight decision as Kansas City won its seventh straight game and dropped the Angels out of first place in the AL West.

Saberhagen, 15-5, yielded two runs and six hits in eight innings and has won 12 of his last 13 decisions. Rick Luellen pitched the ninth for his first major-league save.

The Angels, who had won five straight, trail Oakland by one game.

Ron Darling boosted the Mets to their 11th victory in 14 games by striking out a season-high 10 batters for his fourth straight win. He pitched with the kind of wisdom that impressed San Francisco manager Roger Craig.

"Darling was pitching with his head," Craig said. "He had a purpose for every pitch and didn't beat himself. He had great command."

The loss reduced San Francisco's lead over idle Houston to 1½ games in the NL West.

Darling, who has struck out as many as 12 batters on two occasions, pitched 8 1-3 innings and allowed seven hits. Randy Myers retired the last two Giants for his 22nd save.

Darling, 12-9, has allowed only five earned runs in his last 33½ innings. Pat Sheridan accounted for the only San Francisco run when he homered in the eighth.

Gregg Jefferies had three hits for the Mets and Howard Johnson and Kevin Elster added two hits and an RBI each.

Dodgers 6, Expos 1
Tim Belcher, mired in a three-game losing streak, decided most of his problem was mental and did something about it.

"I was less high-strung, more relaxed than I have been recently," Belcher said after allowing five hits over eight innings. "It was a struggle but I'll take it."

Belcher, 9-12, walked five and struck out six. The only run he allowed was on a second-inning homer by Spike Owen.

Padres 8, Phillies 2
Control was the name of the game for Dennis Rasmussen, who walked none in pitching a six-hitter for his first complete game this season.

"He was out in front of the hitters most of the game," Padres manager Jack McKeon said.

"He kept us off balance all night, and he stayed ahead of the hitters," Philadelphia manager Nick Leyva said.

Hot-hitting Bip Roberts had a two-run homer for San Diego. Roberts is hitting .347 (42-for-121) in his last 36 games.

Gannon Rallies Vikes By 'Skins

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MINNEAPOLIS — OK, class, write this on the board 100 times: The Minnesota Vikings don't have a quarterback controversy. The Minnesota Vikings don't have a quarterback controversy. The Minnesota Vikings don't ...

Even after Wade Wilson's second straight subpar performance and Tommy Kramer's second straight good one, Wilson is still the undisputed No. 1 and Kramer is still No. 2.

"There's no quarterback controversy and there shouldn't be," Coach Jerry Burns said Monday night after third-stringer Rich Gannon rallied the Vikings to a 24-13 NFL exhibition victory over the Washington Redskins.

Washington, however, might have a QB battle festering.

Stan Humphries, vying for playing time with Mark Rypien, got his first pro start and completed only four of 12 passes for 52 yards. Rypien, the designated top gun with Doug Williams ailing, was 3-of-14 for 46.

Kramer, who outpassed Wilson 245 yards to 52, figures he'll still be the Vikings' Avis no matter how hard he tries.

"It's not going to make any difference," he said. "That's the bottom line."

Kramer, who passed for 165 yards and two touchdowns last week, threw two interceptions Monday, although one was clearly not his fault. Wilson also threw two, and he took responsibility for both.

"I had a chance to make some big plays and I didn't," said Wilson, who signed a $1 million-a-year contract after beating out Kramer. "I'm definitely not happy that I threw two interceptions and had Anthony Allen wide open down the middle for a touchdown and missed him."

The Redskins, 2-1, dominated early on offense with second-string runner Jamie Morris gaining 64 first-quarter yards and scoring on an 11-yard run.

Kramer, who completed 13 of 23 passes, led the Vikings to 10 second-quarter points, including a 27-yard touchdown pass to Hassan Jones.

But he did little thereafter, and when Chip Lohmiller, a Minnesota native and former University of Minnesota kicking star, made his second 24-yard field goal with 11:10 to play, Washington led 13-10.

Rams Clip Cardinals, 23-20

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Whatever was going on in the Los Angeles Rams' huddle worked for one night, at least.

Now it's up to Coach John Robinson to figure out his quarterback situation.

Rookie Jeff Carlson committed three turnovers, then threw a 45-yard touchdown pass to Willie Anderson with 20 seconds remaining to lift the Rams to a 23-20 exhibition victory over the Phoenix Cardinals Monday night.

Carlson was in the game because Rams' second-team quarterback Mark Herrmann broke a rib on his left side when he was sacked by safety Tim McDonald in the third quarter.

"It's great to see them do something at the end after what appeared to be a rather frustrating second half," Robinson said.

"But probably the biggest thing on our minds is that Mark Herrmann was injured. Obviously that's a major blow for us."

Carlson lessened it somewhat when he moved the Rams 60 yards on six plays with no timeouts.

The Rams got the ball on their 40 with 1:18 to go. Ken Harvey sacked Carlson for a 15-yard loss on second down, but the rookie completed a 13-yard pass to Anderson and a 17-yarder to Ron Brown before throwing an incompleteness to stop the clock. The fourth-round pick from Weber State hit Anderson behind the defense in the middle of the field for the score.

"I think Jeff Carlson is a prospect," Robinson said. "Half the guys in that huddle said they had never heard of some of those plays. I think he's a prospect. But there is a big gap between prospect and NFL quarterback."

Carlson completed 8 of 15 passes for 116 yards, with two interceptions. He also lost a fumble.

walked and tried to score from first on a double by Mitch Webster.

But rightfielder Rolando Roomes negotiated a bad hop, hit cutoff man Ron Oester who turned and made a perfect throw to nail Sandberg at home.

"The play was behind me but I was trying to score all the way," said Sandberg, who earlier had hit his 25th homer and 13th in the last 23 games.

Rose said the difference in the game was relief pitching. "Our relief pitchers did the job and theirs didn't."

Youngblood's homer was his third of the year and first as a pinch batter. It came off Steve Wilson, the third of five Cub pitchers.

"I've had seven pinch homers," Youngblood said. "I hit three two years ago."

Benzing had three hits, itcluding his 14th homer in the fifth inning and a key single in the three-run seventh. He is now 11-for-24 in his last six games.

"It's nothing to get excited about," Benzing said. "I've hit a few balls out but that last hit was the most important of the night."

With two out in the 10th, Benzing doubled to right. Joe Oliver followed with a bouncer to third, but Ramos' wild throw got by first baseman Mark Grace.

"I saw the play all the way," Benzing said. "When Grace got to the ball, he was on his knees and I knew he couldn't throw me out from that position."

Starter Ron Robinson gave up all five Cub runs. Rob Dibble pitched two hitless innings with five strikeouts, Norm Charlton, 6-1, gave up one hit and John Franco gave up one hit in getting his 26th save. Calvin Schiraldi, 3-6, was the loser.

 "In a recent column," writes a reader, "you mentioned an avoidance play. I didn't quite grasp the import. Could you enlighten me?"
 With pleasure. On a great many hands, one of the defenders poses a threat to the contract; the other does not. The fate of the contract then hinges on avoiding letting the danger hand gain the lead.

 Suppose you reach three no trump on this hand. While the South hand is, in theory, a point shy for that response, the high honor in partner's suit and the solid intermediates compensate for the shortfall.
 West leads the queen of hearts and, being the good technician that you are, you refuse to win. Now West shifts to a club. You need diamond tricks to make your contract, and you can take the finesse either way. What are you going to do?
 First, decide which hand is a menace to your contract. Here, it is East—if West gains the lead, he can do you no harm because your king of hearts stops the suit and is safe from attack; if East gains the lead, however, a heart through your king could prove ruinous.

Therefore, you must play the diamonds in such a way as to avoid having East on lead. Once you've crossed that Rubicon, the rest is easy. Enter dummy with the king of spades and run the eight of diamonds. You don't mind if that loses; you have nine tricks for sure. But if the cards lie as in the diagram, you will score five diamond tricks and at least 10 tricks in all.

Death To Hits 26 As Inquest Opens In Britain

LONDON (AP) — An inquest opened today into the sinking of a pleasure boat on the River Thames, and new safety regulations went into effect. Police raised the death toll to 26 after another body was discovered.

Thirty-seven others are missing and believed dead from the accident Sunday, in which the Marchioness was rammed by a sand-and-gravel dredger, the Bowbelle. Police said 87 people survived.

The Transport and General Workers Union said crewmen based at Westminster Pier, near the Houses of Parliament, decided at a mass meeting early today to cancel sailings until the wreckage is removed.

"The men feel very sad about what has happened and they feel they just can't operate while the Marchioness wreck is still lying there," said union spokesman Michael Cashman.

The latest body was found near Battersea, about 2 miles upstream from the wreck, police said.

The Marchioness was resting on a sandy bank at the riverside near the accident site, exposed to view at low tides.

A young crowd of guests from the worlds of fashion and banking were partying aboard the 90-ton pleasure boat, which sank in the fast-flowing tidal river within a few minutes.

At a London coroner's court, the inquest into the 16 bodies which have been identified opened briefly and was then adjourned by coroner Dr. Paul Knapman. It will resume after other inquiries are completed. Under British law, the inquest had to open before the victims could be buried.

Two new regulations for pleasure boats on the busy Thames went into effect today. They were announced Monday by Transport Secretary Cecil Parkinson.

One covers checks on passenger numbers. Captains are already required to count passengers to ensure the boats are not overloaded. Now they will have to leave a record of passenger totals at their headquarters before sailing.

Tidal Cruises, the company that owns the Marchioness, has denied the vessel was overcrowded.

The vessel, hired for the 26th birthday party of London financier Antonio Vasconcelos, went down shortly after leaving on a 1 a.m.-to-dawn trip.

The dredger struck the Marchioness from behind and then ran it over, shearing off the pleasure boat's top deck. The wreckage carried underwater scores of people who had been drinking and dancing below deck.

Vasconcelos and the captain, Stephen Faldo, were among those still missing.

Mazowiecki, Coalition Partners Hold Talks To Map Plans For Government

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WARSAW, Poland — Solidarity's Tadeusz Mazowiecki began a busy round of meetings with legislative leaders today, a day before parliament is set to approve him as Poland's first non-Communist government leader since World War II.

A war of words continued between the Communist Party and Lech Walesa, with the party daily criticizing the Solidarity chief's blunt words Monday in which he warned the Communists to abandon "threats and blackmail."

Although a coalition assembled by Walesa assures enough votes for Mazowiecki's election, even without Communist support, the premier-designate faces the delicate task of balancing competing interests in the new alliance.

Mazowiecki has so far given no details of his intentions, saying only that he wants the "broadest possible" coalition of pro-reform forces from every party.

The Communists already have been promised the ministries of defense and interior, which control the army and police, as part of Walesa's agreement with President Wojciech Jaruzelski.

But the party wants more. In a Central Committee resolution Sunday, it said it should have more posts and be treated as a full governing partner.

A meeting of the party's top body, the Politburo, was in progress Tuesday to consider its stance on the government.

The two minor parties that joined a coalition with Solidarity — the United Peasant Party and the Democratic Party — also are pressing for the maximum number of seats.

"Are there enough portfolios?" the opposition newspaper Gazeta Wyborcza asked in an ironic headline.

According to the newspaper, the United Peasant Party wants five ministries plus a deputy premiership, while the Democratic Party wants between two and four ministries plus a deputy premiership.

Currently, there are 19 government ministries or government level offices, but the number could be expanded or reduced. Solidarity has, for example, discussed creating a ministry for national minorities.

Mazowiecki met today with the parliamentary leader of the Democratic Party, Jan Janowski, and planned meetings with the head of the Communist caucus, Marian Orzechowski, Sejm Speaker Mikolaj Kozakiewicz and Senate Speaker Andrzej Stelmachowski.

There were emerging signs of anxiety about the future of a non-Communist government.

The opposition newspaper carried a front-page cartoon showing a wall with graffiti saying, "The summer is yours, the ZOMO (riot police) are ours."

The party daily responded to Walesa's statements of Monday, saying: "It is a pity there are only generalities (in Walesa's statement.) It would be worthwhile to point out the parts of the Central Committee stands which are 'threats and blackmail,'" the editorial said.

"These are sharp words which should not be used by either of the two main political forces in Poland," Solidarity or the Communists, the editorial said.

South Africa Arrests Nine White Activists

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Authorities arrested nine white anti-apartheid activists today and threatened legal action against participants in a growing mass defiance campaign.

Protest organizers announced plans to extend the civil disobedience to whites-only schools as the country heads toward segregated parliamentary elections scheduled for Sept. 6.

Police arrested the activists outside city hall in the port city of Durban while they were tying yellow ribbons around palm trees and handing out pamphlets calling for an end to mandatory military service for white males.

The activists belong to the End Conscription Campaign, which vowed Monday to operate openly though it is banned by the white-led government.

Police arrested five people Monday at a demonstration by the organization, which seeks a system of alternative national service for white men who don't want to serve in the military.

A number of leading anti-apartheid groups have unilaterally declared themselves "unbanned" as part of the defiance campaign, which began Aug. 2. The organizers say they are mounting non-violent protests to end segregation of hospitals, neighborhoods, schools, beaches and other facilities.

Police have responded by banning or breaking up several rallies and arresting or detaining without charge dozens of activists.

Hundreds of activists released from detention have been placed under restriction orders that limit their movements and political activities.

A spokesman for Minister of Law and Order Adriaan Vlok said today that people who violate those orders "will sooner or later have to appear in court to answer criminal charges."

By law and custom, apartheid establishes a racially segregated society in which the 28 million blacks have no vote in national affairs. The 5 million whites control the economy and maintain separate districts, schools and health services.

Actress Has TV Role As Vampire

By Jerry Buck
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Maryam d'Abo winged here in the dead of night to talk about her role as a vampire in a new movie for USA Network.

Her flight, during a break in filming a miniseries in England, was by jet.

In the movie, which debuts on Wednesday, she's hiding out from an amatory vampire named Vlad, played by Ben Cross.

"She's trying to escape not only from Vlad but from being a vampire," said d'Abo. "It's offbeat. Usually, vampires enjoy being vampires. She wants to get rid of it if she can."

"Nightlife" is strictly fang in cheek. Although it's not as broad as "Love at First Bite" it's closer to that than to "Dracula."

Angelique lives in a condo with a maid so ditsy she doesn't notice her boss sleeps in a coffin.

It opens with Angelique arising from a sleep of 100 years when her grave in Mexico City is dug up. She collapses and is rushed to the nearest blood bank for a pick-me-up.

The doctor in charge, played by Keith Szarabajka, believes she is suffering from a rare blood disorder. They fall in love and Vlad's wrath turns into a blood feud.

The movie looks at how modern medicine would view a vampire, which would be as a disease. And how an ancient vampire would look at modern medicine, which would be with contempt.

D'Abo took a week out from her leading role in the USA Network miniseries "Not a Penny More, Not a Penny Less" to come here to promote the comedy thriller. In 1987 she co-starred in "The Living Daylights" with Timothy Dalton, making his first film as James Bond.

While in Los Angeles, the British actress lives with her cousin, Olivia d'Abo of "The Wonder Years."

Maryam d'Abo portrays a vampire in 'Nightlife' on TV

Maryam was last seen here as an alien from another planet in the NBC miniseries "Something Is Out There" and its spinoff series of the same name. Joe Cortese also starred as an earthbound policeman.

"The problem was that the series just couldn't find its style," she said. "Joe and I were hoping it would follow the comedy style of the miniseries. But there's always a fear you're not entertaining the audience if you don't have a lot of action. It's a way of playing it safe. I believe in stories first. I know now the hardest writing is series writing. There's no time."

"Not a Penny More" is a two-part, four-hour miniseries based on the novel by Jeffrey Archer. A corrupt financier played by Ed Asner swindles four innocent investors, who devise a scheme to recover their money. D'Abo plays Asner's daughter, who disapproves of her father's financial dealings and is romantically involved with one of his victims. The filming will continue until October.

D'Abo was born in London to a British father and a Russian mother. The name is Finnish; her father's ancestors reached England more than 600 years ago, quite probably in a Viking longboat.

After her parents' divorce, she was brought up in Paris and Geneva, where her first language was French. Her mother was the head of UNICEF greeting cards in Europe.

"I started acting in amateur high school productions," she said. "I wanted to be an artist, however, and attended the London College of Printing. It was too technical and I switched to the Drama Centre in London. We called it the Trauma Centre."

Soon after getting her union card, which enabled her to work professionally, she left the school. Her first role was in the CBS miniseries "Master of the Game."

"Hopefully in 20 years, when I can consider myself a respected actress, I'll go back to being an artist," she said. "It's a very soothing hobby. In the meantime, I just do sketches and caricatures."

Falk Film Offers Chance To Return To Hometown

By Bob Thomas
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — When Peter Falk filmed scenes for his new movie "Cookie" at Sing Sing, it marked a sentimental return.

Not that he was ever a guest at the legendary slammer. He grew up in Ossining, N.Y.

"Yeah, I remember Sing Sing," he reflected. "As a kid, I used to go into the prison because the town's basketball team played the prisoners. A lot of the kids I went to school with, their fathers were guards there."

"Whenever you mentioned to people that you came from Ossining, they always had the same question: Do the lights go out when they electrocute somebody? Of course the lights never dimmed. You were not aware of the prison as an ominous thing."

"The major memory about Sing Sing had to do with the one big escape when I was in high school. Three guys broke out and went down to the river by the railroad station and got ahold of a boat. One local cop was shot on the way down, and one of the convicts was shot. They actually rowed across the Hudson, and they were picked up on the Palisades across the way. That was a big thing."

In the new Warner Bros. release, "Cookie," Falk is mobster Dino Capino who is about to be sprung after 13 years in Sing Sing. His teen-age daughter, played with amazing skill by English actress Emily Lloyd, comes to visit him. She is resentful, since he hasn't married her mother (Dianne Wiest). He already has a wife (Brenda Vaccaro). As you might guess, "Cookie" is not "The Godfather III."

After his long service as TV's slovenly gunshoe, Columbo, Falk is on the other side of the law. That's where he started in movies.

"It was nice being a mob guy again," he remarked. "It was nice looking good, too. Great suits they gave me. Did I look good? I thought I did." However, he would brook no criticism of his Columbo raincoat, which is still in action after 18 years.

"You know my first picture was 'Murder, Incorporated' in 1960? I made a little splash in that," he said. "I played Abie Reles, who was part of that Jewish mob that operated out of Brooklyn at that time. They were the first ones who hired themselves out to kill people. They were all quite crazy. Abie was probably the craziest.

"Those mob guys when they saw that picture, they went for it. They liked me. They came around, and I spent some time with them. I had a real interest in those guys — I think everybody does."

"I remember going around with some cops in New York. They were mostly involved in drug cases, but they also had some wire taps of mob guys. I wanna tell ya, if I had those tapes here and could play 'em for ya, you'd roll on the floor. There are no funnier conversations I ever heard in my life."

Peter Falk may sound like a street guy, but he has a bachelor's degree in political science from the New School of Social Research in New York. He was studying for his master's at Syracuse University when he dropped out to try acting.

"When I started out, I was 25-26 years old in off-Broadway in New York," he said. "Like most actors I knew at that time, we all wanted the same thing: to be in the Actors Studio. We thought that was heaven on Earth."

"I never thought about being in movies, I never thought about being in television. I just wanted to be a stage actor. I remember this agent — I've told the story before — the guy said to me, 'You know, you won't be able to do TV or movies.' I don't know why, but that didn't make any difference to me. Because I had never considered doing TV or movies."

Costner Gets Hunting Bid

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PIERRE, S.D. — Actor Kevin Costner and Jim Wilson, producer of a movie Costner is filming this summer in South Dakota, have been invited to take part in the annual governor's pheasant hunt in October.

"I suppose it will depend on when they wrap things up with the movie," Steve Nelson of the state Tourism Department said. "But they've been invited. They both like to hunt and fish."

Costner is starring in "Dances With Wolves," a movie about the frontier of the 1860s. Filming is talking place in the Pierre and Rapid City areas.

Nelson said he already has helped both men hunt — for scenery that fits in the movie. They visited the Badlands, the Bad River valley, the ranch of former Lt. Gov. Roy Houck and other locations.

New Mother
LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Entertainment Tonight" host-reporter Leeza Gibbons was watching the movie "Parenthood" when reality suddenly intruded. She started having her own contractions.

A short time later Sunday, Miss Gibbons checked into a hospital and gave birth to an 8-pound, 8-ounce girl.

"I asked what he was talking about, and he said, 'Your glass eye.'" Falk lost his eye when he was 3. He won an Academy nomination for his supporting performance in "Murder, Incorporated," and he has been working in films and television ever since.

Falk won three Emmy awards for his portrayal of Lt. Columbo during its 1971-1977 run on NBC. Last season, ABC installed "Columbo" as part of its "ABC Mystery Movie," much to Falk's delight. The show has been renewed for 1989-90, and he hopes to play the role for years to come.

"I'll play him as long as the people want to see him," he said. "I think it would be terrific to grow old as Columbo. If Columbo really can't hear (chuckling) ... and Columbo really can't see (more chuckles) ... and he gets to the point where it takes him an hour to get into the office. I think that would be hilarious."

"I'd like to see him saying, 'What's my name?' (laughing) 'Did you murder someone?' 'What case is this? I gotta call the office and find out.'"
